I want to second what Todd's been saying about Lee's value as a poet & editor. Great Slave Suite is one of the really great texts. A shorthand, and flip, synopsis might be something like "Maximus cruises the bar scene," but what is so remarkable about this book beyond all its many individual lines, stanzas, riffs, is that the text appears twice, once in the grand architecture of the large poem and then again as a series of discrete pieces. You really have to read it to see how well it works. I learned a lot from that book.

My biggest argument with Lee -- and one that I had on several occasions -- was that he was so damned humble he would not include his own poetry in Temblor.

It's really time for someone (O Books, Wesleyan, Sun & Moon??) to do a collected books of Leland Hickman.

Ron Silliman

----Original Message Follows----
From: Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers <[redacted]>
Reply-To: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Charles Macaulay
Date: Tue, 24 Aug 1999 20:57:09 +0000

> As Ron Silliman says, people do forget, it's only natural I suppose. We've got so much on our brains all the time just trying to make it from day to day. "Born of the sun they travelled a short while towards the sun,/ And left the vivid air signed with their honour."

the saddest thing is that people have forgotten Lee--who never forgot a single soul. Again--I want to say that as a reader, editor, voice, poet, Lee was without a doubt--the man. Perhaps it's this sad place call'd Los Angeles that did not allow him the scope he might have had had he lived "up north" or "back east".

Sadly, things in LA are not much but in-fights and such--and if Lee were here he wold have a BIGGER fight--as he could make anyone cry or moan or laugh--but the persistency of his DEDICATION is one truly lost. The poem was the thing. 7 page letters to me about single poems he DIDn't like of mine--etc. I had the great pleasure of helping a bit with Temblor--gettting it placed in shops in SF--and he'd call THE NEXT DAY to see if any had sold or had I read the entire thing last night? He pushed where pushing belonged--reminding me of Olson or Duncan--and certainly,, certainly, the core of the work--always. Having taken me at twenty and said--read this--not "this poet" --but---"this poem". Lee was love. simply. as love is surely dedication (and song).

Todd Baron
ReMap

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

266. Poetics List Administration
address query
Tue 24 Aug 1999

Hi. I need email or snailmail addresses for

Robert Gluck
Erica Hunt
Pamela Lu
Laura Moriarty
Jena Osman
Joan Retallack
Nancy Shaw

thanks, Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

267. Poetics List Administration
Granary Books goes wild! / Clay
Tue 24 Aug 1999

I had to reformat this message. Chris

--

From: Steven Clay <[redacted]>
Date: Tue, 24 Aug 1999 14:17:31 -0400

MOVING SALE*******

GRANARY BOOKS GOES WILD

We've got Poems All Over the Place!

New, used, and O.P. Poetry and artist books 20% off

Big selection of books up to 90% off

All (well, almost all) Granary trade titles 50% off

All are welcome. Spread the word.

Hours for the sale:

Aug 25, 26, 27: 2 pm-7 pm

Saturday Aug. 28: 11 am-5 pm

568 Broadway (at Prince) #403, New York City 10012

OR by internet: http://www.granarybooks.com (see complete listing of Granary publications, search or browse our online catalog of over 3000 rare, op, used and select new books).

For example:

Discount is 50% on the following titles:

ARTISTS BOOKS: A CRITICAL SURVEY OF THE LITERATURE by Stefan Klima. 1998. Paperback. 109 pp. "A thoroughly useful guide." Johanna Drucker. ISBN: 1-887123-18-0. Was: $17.95 NOW: $8.98

THE BOOK SPIRITUAL INSTRUMENT edited by Jerome Rothenberg and David Guss. 1996. Paperback. 160 pp. Illustrated. "... new worlds carved out of the wilderness of human thought and language." Charles Bernstein. ISBN: 1-887123-08-3. Was: $21.95 NOW: $10.98

THE CENTURY OF ARTISTS' BOOKS by Johanna Drucker. 1995. Illustrated throughout. 377 pp. "A crucial contribution to the history of the book in visual culture." Buzz Spector.

Paperback. ISBN: 1-887123-02-4. Was: $24.95 NOW: $12.48

Cloth. ISBN: 1-887123-01-6. Was: $35 NOW: $17.50

THE CUTTING EDGE OF READING: ARTISTS' BOOKS by Renee Riese Hubert & Judd D. Hubert. 1999. Hardback. 265 pp. Illustrated throughout in color and black and white. ISBN: 1-887123-21-0. Was: $55 NOW: $27.50

FIGURING THE WORD: ESSAYS ON BOOKS, WRITING, AND VISUAL POETICS by Johanna Drucker. 1998. Paperback. Illustrated throughout. 312 pp. ISBN: 1-887123-23-7. Was: $24.95 NOW: $12.48

THE HISTORY OF THE/MY WOR(L)D by Johanna Drucker. 1995. Artist's book with text, images and layout by Drucker. Black, white and red printing. Hardback with letterpress dust jacket. 8 1/2" x 11", 40 pp. ISBN: 1-887123-06-7. Was: $50 NOW: $25

LOG RHYTHMS by Charles Bernstein and Susan Bee. 1998. 22 pp. Artist's book with text by Bernstein and images by Bee. 8 1/2" x 11" black and white; color cover. Paperback. ISBN: 1-887123-25-3. Was: $35. NOW: $17.50

A SECRET LOCATION ON THE LOWER EAST SIDE: ADVENTURES IN WRITING: 1960-1980: A SOURCEBOOK OF INFORMATION by Steven Clay and Rodney Phillips. 1998. A co-publication with the New York Public Library. 340 pp. Paperback. "... a Proustian hit of youthful exuberance, a glance at a time when artists built a community apart from the imprimature of the academy." Village Voice. Illustrated throughout. ISBN: 1-887123-20-2. Was: $27.95 NOW: $13.98

TED BERRIGAN: AN ANNOTATED CHECKLIST by Aaron Fischer. 1998. 68 pp. "I will treasure this book." Ron Padgett. Illustrated throughout in black and white and color. Features many collaborations between Berrigan and George Schneeman. ISBN: 1-887123-17-2. Was: $32.95 NOW: $16.48

Many thanks,

Steve Clay

↑ Index

268. Jordan Davis
context middleman rfp / lang ipo
Tue 24 Aug 1999

Not to feed you all into the mass-alternative-media-maw without your consent, but can anybody supply the crucial omitted bibliographical data for the comment in re: William Stafford's "Traveling Through the Dark" as mentioned by Donald Hall in the Sep 99 Harpers Forum "How to Peel a Poem":

Hall: The comma with "still" bothers me, because if the fetus is still how do you know it's alive? Alive still? How does he know it's alive? I read once from the speech of a Language poet who ridiculed this poem because it was William Stafford saying, "I'm a nice guy. What a nice guy I am."

The other participants are quick to contradict this paraphrase-from-memory as follows:

[Paul] Muldoon: I don't think that's what he's saying.
[Charles] Simic: Oh, no, no, no, no, no.
[Cynthia] Huntington: That's reductive.

In fairness to Hall, the forum is a transcript of a discussion of five poems (by Thomas Hardy, Louis MacNeice, Frank O'Hara, William Stafford, and Ezra Pound) over dinner at the Algonquin. Hall's unguarded moment is preserved as just that. All the same, I would like to know whose comments are relayed here, and where I can read them.

Citizens for protection from paraphrase-from-memory,
Jordan Davis

↑ Index

269. Brian Stefans
AND TRY AGAIN
Tue 24 Aug 1999

No, I think you're right that Keston's not got the last word on FOH here, and we've been bunging each other pretty good e-mails over it. But regarding the poem, I didn't read the last quatrain as being an elaboration on "Frank O'Hara" in the prior stanza, mostly because there's a comma and not a colon seperating them -- had there been a colon, the next items would have been a dependent list. (The title of the poem argues otherwise, of course.) To me, FOH appears in a list of general economic statements that are, in scale, much larger than he himself -- part of the humor of it, I guess -- and the list continues on with other generalities, though with a shift toward issues of poetics, so FOH, ironically, acts as the channeling of these social issues into the aesthetic, though Keston is arguing that his poetry diffused them. But if you think of the final stanza as somehow descriptive of the heirs of O'Hara, perhaps in Keston's idea even including the Language poets, though maybe more surely latter New York school poets, then O'Hara becomes -- due to other aspects of his writing as well, including his synthesized and not-so-synthesized use of many continental modernist methods that had their relevant links to politics of the left and right -- a poet one can read politically (or let's say responsibly, as his heroes were more responsible than political) without a reduction in "pleasure" as folks like David Lehman would have it. O'Hara, for some, comes pretty close to pop art, in that he is seen as blindly assembling a catalogue of how he spends his money and time, how much pleasure he finds in living in the power capital of the world, how thoughtless and hapless and light, etc., but also as an argument against pop art due to his sentimentality, warmth, candour, pathos, etc. -- but he's really much more than that if placed here, where Keston places him, I think (though it's sort of where Pound placed Wordsworth, no -- a diluter?), in a sort of economic nexus. There are many arguments for why all those things appear in his poems, but the most obvious one is the most vulnerable -- that he spent his day doing things (nice things, fun things), and liked to write them down. It doesn't explain how the method works, though, relations to liberated words and Mayakovskian apostrophe, etc. Which means, in the end, that some much better writing has to be done on this guy to wipe away that terrible book which hopefully everyone's forgotten, The Last of the Avant Garde.

Oh well, a ramble... but thanks for writing.

↑ Index

270. Lowther,John

An Other South: experimental writing in the south, p.ii

Tue 24 Aug 1999

---

poetix

the new orleans review

has just come out - An Other South is edited by Bill Lavender and is a sequel to a similar (but much smaller) section that he edited about 4 years ago - it looks really great - there is also an essay by Hank Lazer "Kudzu Textuality: Towards a New Southern Poetry 2" - if anyone is curious to what's happening in the south in terms of poetry this is surely the most interesting statement to date

contributors include

Doug MacCash	Jim Leftwich
Hank Lazer	Skip Fox
Joel Dailey	Camille Martin
Gerry Cannon	Celestine Frost
A. Di Michele	Bob Grumman
Lorenzo Thomas	David Thomas Roberts
Niyi Osundare	Jake Berry
Dave Brinks	Lindsay Hill
Alex Rawls	John Elsberg
Mark Spitzer	Bill Myers
Seth Young	Jonathan Brannen
Andy Young	M. Sarki
Greg Fuchs	Christopher Chambers
Bill Lavender	Richard Doherty
Nancy Harris	Dennis Formento
Greg Kelley	Susan Facknitz
Brett Evans	Kay Murphy
Amy Trussel	Paul Naylor

Marla Jernigan Gina Entrebe
James Sanders Randy Prunty
Mark Prejsnar M. Magoolaghan Rebecca Hyman)ohnLowther and Lawless Crow

to order

$10, payable to Loyola University for New Orleans Review, v. 25, #'s 1&2

to:
New Orleans Review
Box 195
Loyola University
New Orleans, LA 70118

↑ Index

271. Adeena Karasick
address query
Tue 24 Aug 1999

Hi. could someone please give me the e-mail addresses for
Louis Cabri and Nicole Markotic
Thanks so much,
Adeena Karasick
[redacted]

↑ Index

272. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Charles Macaulay
Tue 24 Aug 1999

> As Ron Silliman says, people do forget, it's only natural I suppose. We've got so much on our brains all the time just trying to make it from day to day. "Born of the sun they travelled a short while towards the sun,/ And left the vivid air signed with their honour."

the saddest thing is that people have forgotten Lee--who never forgot a single soul. Again--I want to say that as a reader, editor, voice, poet, Lee was without a doubt--the man. Perhaps it's this sad place call'd Los Angeles that did not allow him the scope he might have had had he lived "up north" or "back east". Sadly, things in LA are not much but in-fights and such--and if Lee were here he wold have a BIGGER fight--as he could make anyone cry or moan or laugh--but the persistency of his DEDICATION is one truly lost. The poem was the thing. 7 page letters to me about single poems he DIDn't like of mine--etc. I had the great pleasure of helping a bit with Temblor--gettting it placed in shops in SF--and he'd call THE NEXT DAY to see if any had sold or had I read the entire thing last night? He pushed where pushing belonged--reminding me of Olson or Duncan--and certainly,, certainly, the core of the work--always. Having taken me at twenty and said--read this--not "this poet" --but---"this poem". Lee was love. simply. as love is surely dedication (and song).

Todd Baron
ReMap

↑ Index

273. David Buuck
South Africans strike
Tue 24 Aug 1999

---

news (granted, via NYTimes/AP) from South Africa on huge strike, signalling two potentially important alignments - between white & blue collar unions - & b/t COSATU & FUSA - the labor movement still strong in SA, viz. post-apartheid frustrations with free-market liberalism & increasingly hollow post-Mandela nationalist rhetoric (i.e., "be patient my brothers & sisters") -

http://www.nytimes.com/aponline/i/AP-South-Africa-Strike.html

↑ Index

274. Wystan Curnow
Re: context middleman rfp / lang ipo
Tue 24 Aug 1999

Jordan,
I don't think it WAS a 'Language poet' but Marjorie Perloff (not sure where) which for these folk is probably much the same thing.
Best,
Wystan

> Not to feed you all into the mass-alternative-media-maw without your consent, but can anybody supply the crucial omitted bibliographical data for the comment in re: William Stafford's "Traveling Through the Dark" as mentioned by Donald Hall in the Sep 99 Harpers Forum "How to Peel a Poem":
>
> Hall: The comma with "still" bothers me, because if the fetus is still how do you know it's alive? Alive still? How does he know it's alive? I read once from the speech of a Language poet who ridiculed this poem because it was William Stafford saying, "I'm a nice guy. What a nice guy I am."

> The other participants are quick to contradict this paraphrase-from-memory as follows:
>
> [Paul] Muldoon: I don't think that's what he's saying.
> [Charles] Simic: Oh, no, no, no, no, no.
> [Cynthia] Huntington: That's reductive.
>
> In fairness to Hall, the forum is a transcript of a discussion of five poems (by Thomas Hardy, Louis MacNeice, Frank O'Hara, William Stafford, and Ezra Pound) over dinner at the Algonquin. Hall's unguarded moment is preserved as just that. All the same, I would like to know whose comments are relayed here, and where I can read them.
>
> Citizens for protection from paraphrase-from-memory,
> Jordan Davis

↑ Index

275. Aaron Fewell

Re: God Loves Fags

Tue 24 Aug 1999

In a message dated 8/23/99 12:09:28 PM Eastern Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<< forwarding this from another list -- Phelps has got his work cut out for him -- pray to the rev you've come here in time to see this: www.godhatesfags.com

Patrick F. Durgin
>>

what exactly was done to Phelps site?

aaron keith

↑ Index

276. Peter Minter

'Empty Texas' promotion

Tue 24 Aug 1999

I would like to announce the publication of my new collection, 'Empty Texas' (from Paper Bark Press and the Australian Humanities Research Foundation)

Comments on 'Empty Texas':

'Arresting and mysterious, the lyrics of Empty Texas are experiments in the syntax of the organic. They speak of the body as the site of passions, of sensation and cognition.' Dr Kate Lilley, University of Sydney.

'Empty Texas is one of the Australian volumes of the decade: innovative, intelligent, witty and replete with superbly crafted poems... its influence will be enduring.' John Kinsella, Churchill College, Cambridge, UK.

'Peter Minter's work is totally energetic, careful, balanced, graceful ... I want to read more!' Ron Silliman, USA.

For purchase/distribution details, please contact me or [redacted]

regards

Peter Minter

↑ Index

277. Alan Sondheim
TUESDAY NIGHT OUT
Wed 25 Aug 1999

=

AUTOPROBE MECHANISM IN X: FAILURE ACROSS THE BORED, TUESDAY NIGHT OUT:

[FVWM][Read]: trying to read system rc file /There isn't any, Nikuko! /bin/sh: xfilemanager: command not found / It's not installed, Jennifer! X connection to :0.0 broken (explicit kill or server shutdown). /* Application crashed for lack of resources, Julu! CRASH! Vertical speed = -118.589912 ft/sec /* Stupid Stupid Nikuko! Lateral speed = 100.000000 ft/sec Final Score: 0 /* I told you so, Nikuko, "says Jennifer" CRASH! Vertical speed = -118.589912 ft/sec /* Stupid Stupid Jennifer! Lateral speed = 100.000000 ft/sec Final Score: 0 /* I told you so, Jennifer, "says Nikuko" can't load tile font xmahjongg /* You'll have to fuck me now, "says Julu" /bin/sh: xboard: command not found /* It's not installed, Jennifer-Julu! X connection to :0.0 broken (explicit kill or server shutdown). /* You're just gonna have to fuck me now, Jennifer-Nikuko, "says Julu" [FVWM][Done]: <<ERROR>> Call of '/usr/openwin/bin/olvwm' failed!!!! /* You'd rather go to that CRASH-LAND TOKYO bar, "says Nikuko jealously to Jennifer, waiting for a reply, Julu down on all fours, restarting 'fvwm2' instead"

↑ Index

278. Rachel Loden

American Letters & Commentary special offer

Wed 25 Aug 1999

Apologies for cross-posting . . .

American Letters & Commentary is an annual journal dedicated to the publication of challenging, innovative work in all forms by some of the most intriguing voices in American letters. Contributors have included Bruce Andrews, Paul Auster, Charles Bernstein, Charles Borkhuis, Maxine Chernoff, Jeff Clark, Gillian Conoley, Catherine Daly, Lydia Davis, Connie Deanovich, Ray Di Palma, Mark DuCharme, Elaine Equi, Clayton Eshleman, Graham Foust, Forrest Gander, Barbara Guest, Garrett Kalleberg, Claudia Keelan, Carolyn Koo, John Latta, Ann Lauterbach, Joel Lewis, Laura Mullen, Sheila E. Murphy, John Noto, Bin Ramke, Heather Ramsdell, Stephen Ratcliffe, Donald Revell, Leonard Schwartz, Spencer Selby, Stephanie Strickland, Chris Stroffolino, Cole Swensen, David Trinidad, Susan Wheeler, C.D. Wright, John Yau, and many others.

Issue #11, due out next month, includes work from over 50 contributors and features a symposium: ELLIPTICAL POETRY: NEW SCHOOL OR NEW SPIN?, with essays by Stephen Burt, Cole Swensen, Claudia Keelan and others.

We would like to offer POETICS subscribers a unique introductory subscription package:

1 copy of AL&C's special double 10th Anniversary issue featuring over 90 writers (regular price $10)
1 copy of #11 due out September 1999 (regular price $6)
1 copy of #12 due out in 2000 (regular price $6)

All of the above, a $22.00 value, for $12.00 postage paid. Please send checks to:

AMERICAN LETTERS & COMMENTARY, INC
850 PARK AVENUE STE. 5B
NEW YORK, NY 10021

Editors: Anna Rabinowitz Jeanne Marie Beaumont

http://www.amletters.org/

↑ Index

279. jesse glass
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

What Billy Mills says is true enough, but let me add that Corman's influence on British and Canadian experimental poetry is a matter of record. Indeed, he first introduced Prynne to Olson.

Cid is an international literary figure, which means that donations from every quarter would be gratefully accepted.

Unfortunately the richest nation on the earth, (not to mention the second richest (Japan)) has turned a deaf ear to earlier versions of the laudable effort currently in process. I hope this one fares better.

Cid's position as a long-term expat in Japan makes it especially difficult for him to remain in the grant-giving arena in the U.S. Incredibly, Cid's renowned translations from the Japanese and his position as a long-term "cultural ambassador" has never been rewarded or even formally acknowledged by the U.S. government. Those who wish to help Cid Corman's cause may also write a letter to the current American ambassador to Japan, pointing out Cid's contributions to modern literature and to the dissemination and understanding of Japanese culture, and how Cid is deserving of support.

Write to:

The Honorable Thomas S. Foley/ 1-10-5 Akasaka/ Minato-ku/ Japan/ [redacted].

Please help.

-----Original Message-----
From: Poetics List Administration <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, August 24, 1999 9:41 AM
Subject: Cid Corman / Mills

>Had to reformat this message. Please remember the stricture against >HTML formatting on the Poetics List; it fouls the archive and sours >the moderator. [a bit of levity.] Chris
>
>--
>
>From: "Mills, Billy" <[redacted]>
>Date: Tue, 24 Aug 1999 12:42:01 +0100
>
>Just read the message about Cid on yesterday's digest, and I wanted to add >my own bit. This man should be an American national treasure. He is the most >unselfish poet I've ever had the pleasure to deal with, and has done more >for the poetry he loves than anyone alive. There must be some way for the >richest nation on earth to keep him alive and housed. That's it.

>
>Billy Mills
>

↑ Index

280. Al Filreis
Re: address query
Wed 25 Aug 1999

[redacted]

Al Filreis
The Class of 1942 Professor of English
Faculty Director, the Kelly Writers House
Carnegie/CASE Pennsylvania Professor of the Year, 1998-99

|
| Hi. could someone please give me the e-mail addresses for
| Louis Cabri and Nicole Markotic
| Thanks so much,
| Adeena Karasick
| [redacted]
|

↑ Index

281. Linda Russo
Bard symposium
Wed 25 Aug 1999

July's Bard Symposium at the Institute for Writing and Thinking made headlines in last Sunday's Boston Globe: See "Meeting takes on challenge of teaching contemporary poetry" at http://www.boston.com/globe/sunday/learning/

If part of the goal of the symposium was to create access to the "difficult text," this certainly makes headway, providing from various participants various metaphors for what 'postmodern' poems are and how one proceeds with them, despite the fact that they are here called poems "that can be interpreted infinitely" and pitted against poems "that find commonly accepted meanings." Isn't infinity also a commonly accepted meaning? Whereas it's not solely about interpretation, as though that occurs without context.

More appropriate terms of distinction might run something like: poems 'that come to mean through engagement with various, uncommon non-determined structures' and poems 'that engage meanings predetermined, pre-interpretted, and so common."

↑ Index

282. Daniel Carter coinage/recurrency
Wed 25 Aug 1999

{ }

mated recklessly (b)lessly back and forth the irrespective mate repeats reverse magnifications in the mist rewire inkwire your words engulfed inequity connote other than within repeat surfaces wristsurfed flakblistered coulds would be hood be glass row o' con go in the very mirror prepared nest narco-sisters re-enter the flare seize her for she was and is a sacred text relays rend the fabric of exchange-rape your ropes hurt they bite leave scars remind one of tire tracks delicately reduced in sighs the spanking new tortures 'n' musical machines powered by spatial crystal magnetics in core constant per ring(-moment rendered) current bunking practises fully e-quipped update download yanking the flower of curved renderings irritating recurrence reluctantly welcomed resumptions of routine proceedings caught once again en-jarred another word: the theme left wanting bereft a f(l)ight t' the heights yoke pen under(state) echoes ho brittle war ghoulishly long after having lost weight offered a bony kiss in the visage as punishment of the pleasureful purr sway the day under major/minor attack/assault the wearing down flattening blanding out of in the name of rebel without a pause t' deliver unto unjust justice Neo Key vent t' say up out the look 'n' sound o' the lace trace flex alterations shifted down gradual-like but not he same heights nor veils for the ticking tickling ripples rhyme suggest the as yet un-uttered greeting blessing farewell enter spur o' the hearse a curse well-taken issue t' wish 'n' swish all in a great sign of signs abuzz re-assist on the level a fin-fizzible century Zen ardent hollers flow-land redundancies flourish the door honey flew a pen undone into heartened currencies softened coin futility bronze flew eyes awaken wide the fuse full-blown re-set cycle psi t' the good all along the hatch-pole snatch from the benign Chaos just to make sure the uncertifiable gathering back up into undifferentiated company networks

--

_____ To Messenger Service lets you stay in touch instantly with your family & friends - Visit http://messenger.msn.com

↑ Index

283. Poetics List Administration
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

Thanks to Jesse Glass for his suggestion that those of us concerned (i.e., poets) write to the current American ambassador to Japan re Cid Corman's situation.

This is exactly the sort of chance for some small political efficacy I was trying to point out in my "note re petitions" a few days ago. If even half of the people in this forum sent such a letter, that would be 370+ letters - pretty significant mileage for a few lines of email.

I wonder if anyone would volunteer to write a short letter for public use in conjunction with glass' suggestion? I will do it myself, if necessary, but would prefer it done by someone who feels more readily able to speak to the issue - someone who knows well the scope of Corman's work and can make the argument effectively. I might suggest further that any letter made available here be made available elsewhere - on other lists, in a zine or two.

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

284. Tosh
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

I am not sure (and I maybe missing some of the posts) why Cid Corman is in a bad way - but wouldn't it be wiser if there was a specific grant - either in Japan or in America - and recommend him for that particular grant - than write to the ambassador to raise funds. The Ambassador maybe be able to suggest foundations, etc to raise money, but he doesn't have the power to give money.

Also isn't there a major Japanese cultural award that gives out money for international artists? And if so, perhaps concentrate on sending letters, support for Corman to receive that grant/award

---
Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

285. Ron Silliman
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

There used to be an award from the NEA for something like a lifetime achievement that was directed precisely at situations like Cid's. I know that there was some discussion in the community about obtaining same for Larry Eigner, but Larry put the kibosh to it out of a concern that he might then lose his SSI income. I don't know if it still exists or not.

I certainly agree on Cid's importance. I was VERY fortunate back in 1966 to read virtually all of the Origin collection that was then current and available in the SF State Library (having had Blaser as a librarian up to that moment had some real advantages!). In fact, the first critical writing I did in any form was a review of a reading of Cid's for the UC Berkeley student newspaper back around '69.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

286. Tosh
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

Another thought! Why not approach the Lannan Foundation. They are known to give out liteary grants to specific writers who contribute...etc. Perhaps if someone can draft up a letter (with signitures from this list and others) and send it off to Patrick Lannan - that might be affective.

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

287. Michael Magee
Re: AND TRY AGAIN
Wed 25 Aug 1999

According to Brian Stefans:
>
> No, I think you're right that Keston's not got the last word on FOH here, > and we've been bunging each other pretty good e-mails over it. But > regarding the poem, I didn't read the last quatrain as being an elaboration > on "Frank O'Hara" in the prior stanza, mostly because there's a comma and > not a colon seperating them -- had there been a colon, the next items would > have been a dependent list. (The title of the poem argues otherwise, of > course.)

Right, your reading is the more exact, though, as you suggest, the "and so on" aspect encourages one to read through, draw connections, etc. More below.

> But if you think of the final stanza as somehow descriptive of the heirs of O'Hara, perhaps in Keston's idea even including the Language poets, though maybe more surely latter New York school poets, then O'Hara becomes -- due to other aspects of his writing as well, including his synthesized and not-so-synthesized use of many continental modernist methods that had their relevant links to politics of the left and right -- a poet one can read politically (or let's say responsibly, as his heroes were more responsible than political) without a reduction in "pleasure" as folks like David Lehman would have it.

Yes - and I would add that we shouldn't constrict the definition of political too much: true enough that one would be hard pressed to construct an over-arching critique of Capitalism out of O'Hara's work (to say the least!); but we can also be sure - damn sure - that O'Hara is interested in / dedicated to radical democracy, a dedication which, for instance, made him an early supporter of the Civil Rights movement. This is the O'Hara whom Baraka is talking about when he says that "Frank had a political sense," or, as he recently put it to me, O'Hara was "a sympathetic individual to all the just struggles in the world." Now that doesn't mean that one might not critique O'Hara's consumerism, say (Baraka himself does, pointing out that O'Hara couldn't manage to let go of the "crudely obvious joys of the corrupt West"), but it does mean that a tacit dismissal of O'Hara's politics or lack thereof is, as I said before, too cute and loaded with blindspots. (This issue may be more clear to those in American space where race/gender/sexuality tend to compete for our radicals' attention on fairly equal footing with class). This in addition to your good point that "It doesn't explain how the method works" any more than The Last of the Avant Garde does. We're in trouble, needless to say, when we comfortably accept shallow gossip in place of careful reading and thinking. O'Hara, as Ginsberg put it, was always a deep gossiper.

-m.

↑ Index

288. Tosh

Serge Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov

Wed 25 Aug 1999

TamTam Books
2601 Waverly Drive, Los Angeles, CA 90039-2724
Tel: [redacted] Fax: [redacted]
E-Mail: [redacted]
Wednesday, August 25, 1999

PRESS RELEASE

TO CONTACT: Tosh Berman
phone: [redacted]
fax. [redacted]
e-mail. [redacted]

Evguénie Sokolov by Serge Gainsbourg (1928-1991) ISBN 0-9662346-1-8 Library of Congress Catalog Card Number: 97-80957 Translated from the French by John and Doreen Weightman 103 pp. $17.00 Fiction/Music

"Is there much difference between art and a fart? The recently republished 1980 novel by eccentric French torch singer Serge Gainsbourg wonders just that. 'Evguénie Sokolov' grew up ashamed of his chronic gas, but once he learns how to make gasograms, he becomes the darling of the art world. Sophomoric, giddy and insightful, this quick read proves just how well Gainsbourg understood the science of selling controversy and the troubles that come with being an enfant terrible."

Neil Gladstone, Ray Gun (September 1999)

Bookstore buyers - Serge Gainsbourg's Evguénie Sokolov & Boris Vian's I Spit on Your Graves (0-9662346-0-X) are available through :

Small Press Distribution

1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley, CA 94710-1409
[redacted]

AK Press & Distribution
P.O. Box 40682

San Francisco, CA 94140
ph:[redacted]
fx:[redacted]

As well as Ingram Book Company!

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

289. David Buuck
Sounds Like Art / Harry Partch
Wed 25 Aug 1999

For those in the Bay Area, Aug 28-Nov 7 - Yerba Buena Center for the Arts presents Sounds Like Art, a center-wide, multidisciplinary show featuring installations, performance, film & video. There will also be a Harry Partch tribute, with some of his instruments, & a performance by Newband of some of Partch's compositions. In the visual arts galleries, YBC presents Trimpin's "Conloninpurple," a seven-octave instrument/installation named in honor of the late composer Conlon Nancarrow; Matt Heckert's "Birds," part of his Mechanical Sound Orchestra, with 26 "musical" "bird"-sculptures, 5 feet high with 7 foot wingspans; Marina Rosenfeld's "Fragment Opera," a video-photo-3D-DJ-turntable- live performance opera-installation; and a selection of artist-made instruments guest curated by composer and musician Beth Custer. Custer will also be premiering her "Vinculum Symphony," featuring many of these invented instruments, & Marina Rosenfeld will be performing at the opening, this Friday Aug 27. Kronos Quartet & other contemporary music performances will be held throughout the exhibition, as well as two film-video series. Please call the Center for more details - 415-978-ARTS

David Buuck
Yerba Buena Center for the Arts 701 Mission
San Francisco

↑ Index

290. ken|n|ing
Re: God Loves Fags
Wed 25 Aug 1999

The Phelps domain (godhatesfags) was bought out from under him by an organization known for webbased activism. It was then turned over to an organization whose site is entitled "godlovesfags.com" -- This was all done legally, though it's since been overturned. I think it's important for dangerous leaders such as Phelps to realize that the resistance pokes into various levels of activity. Thus, my enthusiastic post to the list. Patrick F. Durgin

k e n n i n g_____ a newsletter of contemporary poetry poetics & nonfiction writing _____http://www.avalon.net/~kenning 418 BROWN STREET #10 IOWA CITY IOWA 52245 USA

On Tue, 24 Aug 1999, Aaron Fewell wrote:

> In a message dated 8/23/99 12:09:28 PM Eastern Daylight Time, > [redacted] writes:
>
> << forwarding this from another list -- Phelps has got his work cut out for > him -- pray to the rev you've come here in time to see this:
> www.godhatesfags..com
>
> Patrick F. Durgin
> >>
>
> what exactly was done to Phelps site?
>
> aaron keith

↑ Index

291. Poetics List Administration
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

I couldn't find much in the way of specific information on awards made by the Lannan Foundation by searching the www; evidently they have no site of their own. I did, however, find a street address.

Lannan Foundation
725 Arizona Ave., Suite 200
Santa Monica 90401-1734

[redacted]

Nor was I able to find any mention of monies given for "lifetime achievement" and so forth at the NEA web site; apparently this award has been discontinued.

The Lannan Foundation could be a good bet; I still think there must be some other federal money available, so wouldn't discount querying the ambassador - though I agree that my earlier suggestion to bombard him with mail was premature. I will write to the NEA this afternoon, which is a simple query; again, I would suggest that someone closer to the circumstance write a detailed letter to the Lannan Foundation and to the U.S. ambassador to Japan.

It's too bad The MacArthur Fellows Program only accepts nominations from its designated nominators in the U.S.; as a matter of course, their names are not made public. MacArthur Fellows are given a 5-year unconditional income of $30,000 - $75,000 annually, plus comprehensive health insurance. The John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation seems to be one of the only major grant-making foundations that makes large gifts directly to individuals, rather than making them to or through institutions. Previous recipients include John Ashbery and Harold Bloom, Ann Lauterbach, Robert Hass, Jorie Graham, etc.; also Sandra Cisneros, Thomas Pynchon, Ishmael Reed. Interestingly, I notice that Stanley Cavell rec'd a fellowship at one time; as did Richard Rorty.

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

292. Tosh
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

That maybe a local office (Santa Monica) of the Lannan Foundation, but I believe their main headquarters is in Santa Fe, New Mexico. I know of Cid Corman, but I don't know his work that well. So I suggest that someone who knows the work and history of Cid, should write the letter. Also Cid translated some Japanese classic literature, no? If that's the case perhaps he can get some funding from the Japan Foundation - which seems to do cultural activity. I don't know if they give money directly to individuals. Maybe just to non-profit organizations.

The NEA would take forever! I don't know how strongly Mr. Corman needs financial aid - but I do think it would be best to direct funding from private foundations. Also someone should bring this issue up with Pen. As well as with Poets & Writers, Inc.

The MacArthur Grant is fantastic. But it is a secret process. I guess one could ask a past winner.

best,

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

293. Kyle Conner
Highwire Reading!!
Wed 25 Aug 1999

Cats & kitties, here it is, the much-anticipated schedule for our dynamic, bombastic SECOND SEASON!!! Hold on to your hats.

H I G H W I R E
READINGS AT HIGHWIRE GALLERY

'99 Fall Schedule:

9/4 Justin Vitiello / Edmund Berrigan

9/18 Kristin Prevallet / Matt Hart

10/2 Allison Cobb / Dave Simpson

10/16 Jena Osman / John Colleti

10/30 Mark Wallace / TBA

11/13 Heather Star / Alan Gilbert

11/20 Heather Thomas / Carol Mirakove

12/11 Edwin Torres / Mytili Jagannathan
(with afternoon talk at Writers House given by Edwin Torres)

Saturdays, 8PM, 139 N. 2nd St., Philadelphia
BYOB

"Antiseptic vessel whisper the great underground antinomy"

↑ Index

294. Patrick Herron
Re: Stafford poem critique
Wed 25 Aug 1999

The critique is in the September 1999 issue (cover story) of Harper's Magazine. Charles Simic, Paul Muldoon, Heather MacHugh, Donald Hall, and someone else whose name has suddenly slipped my mind each picked a favorite poem and then they critiqued each selection as a group. Simic chose the Stafford poem largely because it was plain and yet subtly ironic while leaving readers unsatisfied. There was also an O'Hara poem critiqued ("Lunch Hour," I think).

Patrck Herron

>Barrett Watten knows the story on the critique of Stafford's deer by the >side of the road poem.

_____ Get Free Email
and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

295. Tosh
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Wed 25 Aug 1999

Thanks for Jesse Glass's update! I would still write a letter to Patrick Lannan, because basically he is Lannan Foundation. It is a private foundation and I think he can pull strings if he's interested in doing so.

Perhaps Amb. Foley could pull some strings or at least arrange a 'letter' to recommend Cid to get some funding. I know it is very difficult time for small shop owners in Japan - especially in Kyoto which must be very expensive.

The person to speak to is Karen Clark at Poets & Writers Berkeley. I think she can honestly give information about the possibliity of Cid getting grants and also additional information on organizations, etc.

best,

Tosh Berman

TamTam Books

↑ Index

296. Alan Sondheim
[Wrote 91 lines] [Where poets live]
Wed 25 Aug 1999

-==

[Wrote 91 lines]

UW PICO(tm) 3.5 File: zz Modified

What does it mean to spread the following, one machine coupled to another, you are so breathless, Jennifer, reading across wires thrust from my throat to yours

What does it mean that I am in the machine? Which machine, location, spread out across _this_ desktop and _this_ ISP and _your_ location, fragmented beyond belief I would declare, from the site of the mouth, from _your_ mouth, from the sight of you, from emissions from _your_ holes splayed out / sprayed out from which machine? [Wrote 20 lines]

Ju2lu% b
You have no mail.
Ju3lu% ls
Mail lisp thing News lynx_bookmarks.html tiny.world a mail trace calendar phoenix.hlp venom.irc fbw phoenix.irc volt.irc jobs tf zz lb tf-lib
Ju4lu%
Ju5lu% exit
Connection closed by foreign host.
{k:502}
{k:502}What does it mean that I am in the machine? Which machine, location, bash: What: command not found {k:503}spread out across _this_ desktop and _this_ ISP and _your_ location, bash: spread: command not found {k:504}fragmented beyond belief I would declare, from the site of the mouth, bash: fragmented: command not found {k:505}from _your_ mouth, from the sight of you, from emissions from _your_ bash: from: command not found {k:506}holes splayed out / sprayed out from which machine?

bash: holes: command not found {k:507} What machine? What machine? What machine?
{k:508} What local looping? Oh Oh Oh, this is far too simple-dimple!

"For I do write from my location, this desk facing this window, the tree in the distance, storm-clouds overhead, the shuddering atmosphere, radio going behind me, threatening weather, glimmers of lightning on the horizon

"Your mouth, a conundrum

"The problem of extreme distance, stretch of the cool body, lightning across beds and atmospheres, walking in the midst of storm-clouds, sites of infinite mouths

"Philosophies of location, Russell at his writing-desk, Sartre at his cafe, Schutz by his window

"What do you see at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt/skye.jpg or these or other clouds

"Ju6lu% netstat | grep sondheim
tcp 0 0 panix3.telnet sondheim.dialup..1046 ESTABLISHED

"Between one and another, between inscription and the fall, between fall and inscription

"You are so breathless, Jennifer

==========
========== > > >

↑ Index

297. maz881
Drugs
Wed 25 Aug 1999

Hey Bill Marsh,

I've been meaning to say great job on Steve Carll's Drug book (paper brain press). It even looks like an anti-drug pamphlet. And the poems are pretty far out. Steve is doing some great work these days.

the other Bill

↑ Index

298. Richard Dillon
Re: context middleman rfp / lang ipo
Wed 25 Aug 1999

Barrett Watten knows the story on the critique of Stafford's deer by the side of the road poem.

↑ Index

299. Juliana Spahr
now available: Catalina Cariaga's Cultural Evidence
Wed 25 Aug 1999

Catalina Cariaga
cultural EVIDENCE

Cultural Evidence is evidence that waves of the Asian Pacific can arrive upon the sandy shores of American English. Cariaga is a poet alert to written and oral traditions and what can be done to accommodate them in the many directions that American poetry can take. —Victor Hernandez Cruz

This deeply thoughtful assemblage from Catalina Cariaga documents the search for cultural clues suggested by her title. She reveals her generational memory both circumstantially and directly, where in her childhood “the sea is a woman,” the barong (traditional shirt) is an ironic symbol, and Billie Holiday, grunion, and the exact procedure for citizen’s arrest—like a palimpsest—further define her point-of-view. Her calm speech fragments stand in the present, but step—with serious urgency—into this past, to trauma, the origins of identity, and her inherited love of language. This is a brave, innovative, and ultimately searing book. —Joyce Jenkins

Catalina Cariaga is a pyrotechnic burst of light in the horizon of American poetry. Cultural Evidence is a worthy book of poems for all libraries and lovers of avant-garde literature. —Nick Carbo

This first full length collection from Catalina Cariaga uses an experimental, documentary poetics for profound and moving culture observation. The poems here are critique, history, and personal anecdote. “No Tasaday,” for example, examines the controversy surrounding the Tasaday people of the Philippines (believed by some anthropologists to be a tribe but now generally considered to be a hoax). “The Mercy” mixes passages from an Ilocano and English grammar book, the Bible, and a mother’s memories of her departure from the Philippines. 88 pages, 6” x 8,” perfect bound $12

Published by SUBPRESS COLLECTIVE Subpress is a publishing collective of 19 members, each of whom has agreed to donate a fixed portion of their income for the next three years. Over those three years, each collective member will edit one book of poetry by an author of their choice.

Also currently available:

John Wilkinson's Oort's Cloud, $15

Upcoming titles include:
Scott Bentley, Occasional Tables
Daniel Bouchard, Diminutive Revolutions
Brett Evans, After School Session
John McNally, Exes for Eyes
Prageeta Sharma, Bliss to Fill Caroline Sinavaiana, Alchemies of Distance
Edwin Torres, Fractured Humorous

Request to be on our mailing list if interested in forthcoming books. Books will be available through Small Press Distribution or direct from `A `A Arts.

Order through email ([redacted]) or direct from `A `A Arts:

____ $12 Catalina Cariaga, Cultural EVIDENCE
____ $10 John Wilkinson, Oort’s Cloud

Free postage. Please make checks out to `A `A Arts.

name _____ address _____
_____

`A `A Arts
Department of English
U of Hawai`i, Manoa
1733 Donaghho Street
Honolulu, HI 96822

↑ Index

300. Julie Johnson
Upcoming book on Japanese Surrealism
Thu 26 Aug 1999

Here is a book review for an upcoming book on the Japanese Surrealists. It is already listed at Amazon, but really won't be available until November. Review is by Eric Selland.

_____

Book Review: Fault Lines: Cultural Memory and Japanese Surrealism , by Miryam Sas, Published by Stanford University Press, 1999, 240 pages, $18.95 paper, ISBN 0804736499.

Possibly one of the most significant developments in scholarship in recent years is the willingness to view historical and cultural change in non-western countries on their own terms, rather than exclusively according to Western assumptions and expectations. We may be unable, as the phenomenologist Gadamer points out, to wholly lay aside our own cultural subjectivity, but we can at least listen to the voices of others as they express their thoughts in their own words. Most often in anthologies and biographical sketches the critical and theoretical writings of modern Japanese poets have been ignored. Few studies outlining the details of a particular poet's thought as it effects actual poetic practice have been produced in this country other than outstanding exceptions such as Hosea Hirata's work on the poetics of Nishiwaki Junzaburo. With Miryam Sas' groundbreaking study we are given a clear, and even intensive sense of the Japanese Surrealists as very much modern intellectuals in an active and passionate engagement with the ideas of their time. The theoretical writings and developments in the thought of such notables as Takiguchi Shuzo, who introduced Surrealism to Japan through his translations of Breton as well as his own writings, are covered extensively. Moreover, Sas provides material here which leads not only to a deeper understanding of the thought behind 20th Century Japanese literary movements, but of the process of cultural transfer as well, in all its complexity and ambiguity. Sas notes in her prologue that "Japanese Surrealism is striking and important both for the specific questions it raises and for its exemplary place as an encounter between cultures, literary movements, and languages." Sas uses the title of her book, "Fault Lines", to denote how the introduction of Surrealism to Japan was, like the great Kanto earthquake which occurred around the same time, an occasion not only for literary "shock" and "rupture", but a variety of creative reconfigurations as well.

The book goes beyond a simple chronology of events as they occurred, and instead takes up specific theoretical and often deeply philosophical issues of concern to both French and Japanese poets, showing in great detail how the Japanese poets dealt with these issues within their own thought processes and poetic procedures. Both poetic works and theoretical writings of major Japanese figures such as Takiguchi Shuzo, Nishiwaki Junzaburo and Kitasono Katue, as well as Surrealist forerunner Hagiwara Sakutaro are quoted and examined in great detail. What is striking, as mentioned previously, is that those of us already familiar in general with the works of these poets and their lives are given a much stronger impression of them as brilliant and important thinkers of their time. Takiguchi was both a major theorist and translator of French poetry during his time, and an examination of his work, as well as that of Nishiwaki Junzaburo, brings up specific problems of language, meaning and translation, in regard to which both these thinkers had a surprisingly subtle and sophisticated understanding in a time when the linguistic and semiotic theories those of us in the fields of language and literature now take for granted were just barely being developed. We are also shown exactly how cosmopolitan Japanese poets were before World War II by the examples of the international activities of Kitasono Katue, who corresponded with Ezra Pound for many years, and Takiguchi Shuzo who shared his ideas with Breton during this time, finally visiting him in person in Paris in 1958. Sas provides us with a rich selection of samples of poems, theoretical writings and visuals in the appendix, for those interested in reading these in more detail in the original.

One of the most important contributions this book brings to current scholarship is the rediscovery of two nearly forgotten women Surrealists -- Ema Shouko and Tomotani Shizue. These poets, along with other women experimentalists of the pre-war period, have been almost completely ignored until now, not only here but in Japan as well. A major anthology of Japanese Modernist poets published in the 1969 (Gengo Kuukan, edited by Ohka Makoto) includes virtually no women at all. Sas gives both these sensitive and intelligent poets the attention they deserve, opening the way for further research on their work, as well as other women experimental writers of the period.

Sas' interest in Japanese Surrealism and its influence on later experimental movements has led her in the direction of performance. Hence the epilogue on one of the most important post-war developments in the avant-garde in Japan, that of the Butoh, a new dance-performance art form created by Hijikata Tatsumi. Sas examines the writings and thought of the major artists here, including Ohno Kazuo, and the various ways in which Surrealism, as well as the Japanese Noh theories of Zeami have been adapted and interpreted.

Throughout this study Sas makes an extensive use of the writings of Japanese poets, artists and critics, bringing needed attention not only to the better known modern poets such as Nishiwaki and Takiguchi, but hitherto ignored women poets such as Ema Shouko and Tomotani Shizue as well. In doing so we also run across other names not often seen in academic works, such as Yoshioka Minoru (possibly the most important postwar poet following in the steps of the Surrealists) and Nagata Koi, enigmatic experimental haikuist and essayist on philosophical subjects as well as the Butoh. A wealth of material appears here which should add significantly to the awareness in this country of experimental poetry in Japan during this century, and whet the appetites of students and researchers, leading hopefully to further fruitful work in this area.

↑ Index

301. Richard Dillon
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Thu 26 Aug 1999

Assemble about $10,000.00 and buy NAVARRE (NAVR) on Nasdaq (Ed Dorn's favorite exchange) for an account opened at your local Fidelity Brokerage in the name of Cid Corman. But you have to do it soon.

↑ Index

302. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Thu 26 Aug 1999

the lannan stopped lit. awards a while back-- concentrating on visual arts and their collection.

↑ Index

303. jesse glass
Re: Cid Corman / Mills
Thu 26 Aug 1999

Dear Tosh and everybody:

Cid did get a Lannan award several years back, if I'm not mistaken, and yes, please put his name forward for any grants that you may be aware of.

Unfortunately, grants, the last time I checked, are a bit of a crap shoot, and are particularly so for someone who has spent most of a long career living in a foreign country. As Cid himself told me this evening, the awards go to scholars and artists coming in to Japan for short-term residencies and are simply not available to permament residents.

Admittedly, the letter writing to Foley is a long shot, but the primary reason why I suggested it (outside of Corman's obvious worthiness): is because in Japan "official recognition" by government or academic agencies often breaks the ice so that local (Japanese) sources of aid become available, and it is a sad fact that Corman has not received much--if any--help from Japanese arts agencies.

Cid Corman, now in his 70's, lives in a tiny house in Kyoto. His wife Shizumi and her sister and brother run a shop called C & C's where they sell sandwiches, beverages and ice cream. This is their sole source of income. (Corman's income from his writing is negligible. In fact, Cid usually sends the checks to other writers as "grants" because it costs more to cash the check in a Japanese bank than what they're worth!) Business is not so good, and with everyone getting older, no pensions, and not much in savings the future looks iffy to say the least. Shizumi works seven days a week. Soon she will have to retire. After that, Cid says, he is not sure what they will do.

-----Original Message-----
From: Tosh <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Wednesday, August 25, 1999 10:43 AM
Subject: Re: Cid Corman / Mills

> Another thought! Why not approach the Lannan Foundation. They are known to give out liteary grants to specific writers who contribute...etc.
> Perhaps if someone can draft up a letter (with signitures from this list and others) and send it off to Patrick Lannan - that might be affective.
>
> ----------
> Tosh Berman
> TamTam Books
> ----------

↑ Index

304. Owen Hill
Re: Serge Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov
Thu 26 Aug 1999

I highly recommend the Serge Gainsbourg book. Thank you, Tam Tam, for having the good (?) taste to publish it.

Owen

↑ Index

305. Billy Little just a warning, re:Spark
Thu 26 Aug 1999

some of you may have been solicited by spark magazine recently, check out the sight but be warned: the links page at least has got more cookies than i've seen on any sight even Bob Holman's site stops at six or seven a page, i don't know if you're like me but i like to read a page while another is loading and all these cookies make it impossible to read and then you have to decide do you want to be offered up as a lure so that others may have surveillance placed on their surfing? Maybe they're naive, maybe i'm paranoid, but maybe they're hoping to get rich on your content. How do others feel about cookies being laid on your readers while they're cheering your anti-establishment works?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

306. Patrick Herron
Re: just a warning, re:Spark
Thu 26 Aug 1999

---

cookies are not inherently evil. they are like any other tool. they are as bad as they are implemented. a hammer can indeed be used as a murder weapon, but a hammer can also be used to build a home. cookies are a method of what is called "state management." they are tiny files saved on your computer that tell a web site such info as what pages on that site you have already been to, what you have clicked on, etc., so that the next time you arrive at that site it can present you with something that is more up your alley (which depends upon the criteria for "up your alley" the programmers use - they can even use novelty as a criteria, always sending you something you haven't seen). you can get to the info you need faster, and the web site people can better predict what you like. in this way we are talking about people making informed decisions about what to give you via very fast means. if it helps an anti-establishment person get to anti-establishment info faster, then that's pretty good. it can also help an e-publisher secure the fiscal support it may need to survive by providing better targeted banner ads, etc, thus making their advertising space more valuable.

OK, now we're getting to the evil stuff. getting compromised for advertising sales is a problem, obviously, poets spending their time as captialists, etc. but the biggest problem perhaps with cookies is this potential for surveillance you refer to. that potential depends somewhat upon whether the cookies used by a site are anonymous or not - whether the info on the cookie has enough info to reveal your identity in any way. many sites employ anonymous cookies so who you are is not attached to you. other sites do not use anonymous cookies, and shame on them. of course, there is always the possibility that even an anonymous cookie can be used as a clue as to who the owner really is.

besides, sureveillance is only effective if people BELIEVE AND FEAR they are being surveilled, and then only in a puritanical context. If you fear being watched, and you feel that your life includes some hidden "sin" or "transgression", then the people who manipulate that fear or possess info about your "abomination against 'god and country'" can pull your strings like a puppet. you've got to feel a need to hide before this type of control can be effective.

Anyone read "Discipline and Punish" by Foucault? The text has many problems, politically speaking, such as its inability to admit the existence of true concentrated hierarches of power, but it has some good analysis of Bentham's prison model and the way modern power depends upon people believing they are being watched for possible transgressions against the state. It does not matter whether they are being watched; power functions most efficiently when no surveillance actually happens while people simultaneously believe that sureveillance happens. So perhaps an anti-establishment stance would be, go ahead and watch! See if I give a fuck! If everyone has something to hide, then what can you do to me? No one cares! Unfortunately American puritanism makes such a stance difficult.

As far as paranoia goes, yes you are being watched. After all, the internet was invented by DARPA (US Defense Advanced Research Projects Assoc., the special forces hi tech research group, where the US military concentrates its "intelligence"), so this whole internet thing was deployed in part to do exactly that - watch you, collect info on you. The real question is, do you let that collection of info about you control your life in any way? Do you give that surveillance (and transitively, the possibility of surveillance) power over you? Admittedly I sound as if I suggest playing a dangerous game of chicken, risking such head-on collision with the violent hidden monarchs, but we outnumber the establishment. they, whoever they are, fear the loss of control and prepare for it constantly. their fear, the fear of losing control of that which is greater than them, seemingly guides their every action.

as far as slowing down page loading, that sounds like plain ol' bad web design. I haven't seen the site.

: P

Patrick Herron

>some of you may have been solicited by spark magazine recently, check out >the sight but be warned: the links page at least has got more cookies than >i've seen on any sight even Bob Holman's site stops at six or seven a page, >i don't know if you're like me but i like to read a page while another is >loading and all these cookies make it impossible to read and then you have >to decide do you want to be offered up as a lure so that others may have >surveillance placed on their surfing? Maybe they're naive, maybe i'm >paranoid, but maybe they're hoping to get rich on your content. How do >others feel about cookies being laid on your readers while they're cheering your anti-establishment works?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

307. Eleni Stecopoulos
Klingon language query
Thu 26 Aug 1999

If anyone knows of any texts, excerpts, poems (Christian? Darren?), Hamlet in the original Klingon -- that are available on the web, please backchannel. I need something for my composition class's first translation project. Thank you.

↑ Index

308. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Thu 26 Aug 1999

o

she left home suddenly she followed a man to a strange and foreign land she lived with the man and wandered among eucalyptus and palms strange birds assailed her tears beneath unfamiliar constellations two suns, two moons, two earths there were years of drought, years of plenty trees, symmetrical, they dwelt in peace her ancestral land, tales and ballads meadows, ponds filled with beauty, wonder-fish, splendid mollusks they were breathless, coral, lambs, wolves and great staghorn new customs and clothing, lives of no regrets a single meteor
a song

↑ Index

309. Alan Sondheim

Corrections

Thu 26 Aug 1999

---

o

Corrections

and kills, deletions everywhere, configuration files, initiation files, resource control files, segmentation faults, core dumps, useless hard- drive activity, all of this in a single directory, slackware linux, on a single hard-drive, on a non-descript compaq presario desktop not meant for these sorts of things - which then filter, leak, into the texts, cor- rupt them with meaningless symbols and {k:7} prompts going nowhere - the texts, my writing, my very own, suffers as a result - I try to include my failures here - not so much inhabiting the machine as mutual devouring - I'm in and out simultaneously - play both sides of the bridge - fear of water - the whole history of the world can be read in these three words - _the corrupted file_ - I do my best to bring you complete works, things of beauty, coherent, lovely beyond belief - dis/ease and dis/comfort beckon - there are cracks in the artifice, it's as if excretion were returning at long last from banishment - I can't hold on that long - there's always the probe into the machine - there's always the return of the machine to the probe - both flesh and silicon - all over, it's the way this universe was made - but in these writings - too much emphasis on error, too many symbols, as I've said, too much corruption, not enough analysis - think of it as frustrated writing - the _act_ of it a frustration - writing through the debris - writing degree one, say, not zero, that is, writing in the proto- cols - did I say filtering, leaking into the texts? - there's dissolution and I'm ashamed of it (the system falters, flicker-rate of the screen shows up uneasily, migraine straight ahead), yes, ashamed - there's noth- ing to be proud of, this domination - Aug 26 13:17:32 nikuko sendmai- l[158]: EAA15303: to=<[redacted]>, ctladdr=<[redacted]> (0/0), delay=2+09:08:27, xdelay:00:11, mailer=esmtp, relay=diana.sfsu.edu. [130.212.10.239], statÞferred: 451 <[redacted]>... Domain must resolve Aug 26 13:17:39 nikuko sendmail[158]: EAA15309: to=<julu@student.- unsw.edu.au>, ctladdr=<[redacted]> (0/0), delay=2+09:07:59, xdelay00:00:05, mailer=esmtp, relay=rufus.comms.unsw.edu.au. [149.171.96.100], statÞferred: 451 <[redacted]>... Your hostname is unresolvable

---

↑ Index

310. A H Bramhall
social conformity vs Cid Corman
Thu 26 Aug 1999

Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction. (Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's the point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene, the fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all. well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$

↑ Index

311. Ann Vickery
Query re Tom Ahern and Michael Lally
Thu 26 Aug 1999

Dear Poetic Listers,

I was wondering if anyone who might have a contact address for Tom Ahern or Michael Lally could let me know. It would be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

Ann Vickery

↑ Index

312. Michael Leddy
Re: context middleman rfp / lang ipo
Thu 26 Aug 1999

Jordan,

Hall's referring to (though not quoting directly from) Bob Perelman's comment on this poem in a talk in the Talks issue of _Hills_. I think the talk is titled "The First Person."

Michael

> can anybody supply the crucial omitted bibliographical data for the comment in re: William Stafford's "Traveling Through the Dark" as mentioned by Donald Hall in the Sep 99 Harpers Forum "How to Peel a Poem":
>
> Hall: The comma with "still" bothers me, because if the fetus is still how do you know it's alive? Alive still? How does he know it's alive? I read once from the speech of a Language poet who ridiculed this poem because it was William Stafford saying, "I'm a nice guy. What a nice guy I am."
>
> Jordan Davis

↑ Index

313. David Baratier
Josh McKinney
Thu 26 Aug 1999

If someone can supply his new california address or if you're out there, backchannel.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

314. Leonard Brink
Inscape #7
Fri 27 Aug 1999

INSCAPE #7

features poetry by:

Elizabeth Robinson
Avery E.D. Burns
Jerrold Shiroma
Jono Schneider
Keith Waldrop
Maxine Chernoff
Rosmarie Waldrop
Craig Watson
Sean Hansen

Listaferians can have this for the low, low price of just $4, first class postage paid.

Please make checks payable to Leonard Brink Instress
P.O. Box 3124
Saratoga, CA
95070

↑ Index

315. Pierre Joris

FW: Please forward worldwide

Fri 27 Aug 1999

-----Original Message-----
From: Mark Clement [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, August 24, 1999 10:39 AM
Subject: Please forward worldwide

To: News Editor For Immediate International Release

Contacts: Pam

Africa [redacted]

Clark Kissinger [redacted]

Death Warrant for Mumia Abu-Jamal imminent say Pennsylvania Officials

Harrisburg, PA. August 24, 1999. State officials say Governor Ridge may sign a death warrant for Mumia Abu-Jamal at any time, according to a recent article in the Philadelphia Daily News. Once a death warrant is signed Mr. Jamal will be effectively silenced. He will be moved from a regular death row cell into "Phase II", where highly restrictive conditions of imprisonment will be applied:

1) No property allowed in cell - no access to legal papers.
2) No phone calls except with the Warden's permission, call by call.
3) Visits only by immediate family.
4) 24 hour camera surveillance in cell.
5) No clothes provided for prisoner's possession. May be left naked in cell for hours.
6) Visits with attorneys only under surveillance by staff/guards.

Meanwhile the public relations war surrounding his case continues. An astonishing claim by Maureen Faulkner, widow of the police officer Mr. Jamal is accused of shooting, was outlined by Linn Washington in a recent Philadelphia Tribune column. According to her claim, Mr. Jamal turned and smiled at her in the courtroom when her husband's bloodstained and bullet-ridden jacket was exhibited to the jury during his trial. The only problem with her claim is that Mr. Jamal was not in the courtroom the day the jacket was exhibited, proven by trial transcripts. In fact, he was excluded from most of his trial and was not allowed to represent himself.

Mrs. Faulkner has maintained that Mr. Jamal has no support in Philadelphia for a new trial. However, among the notable citizens of Philadelphia calling for a new trial are: Chaka Fattah, Reverend Henry Wills, Henry Nichols (President of 1199), John Street, Professor Tony Montero, Professor Sonya Sanchez, State Senator Vincent Hughes, State Representative Harold James, Reverend Sheppard, and many others.

Buzz Bissinger (in Vanity Fair) and Sam Donaldson (on ABC's 20/20) recently championed Philip Bloch, praising him as a man of courage for coming forward to reveal that Mr. Jamal had "confessed" to him in 1992. They were unaware that Mr. Bloch wrote to Mumia in 1993 expressing his belief in Mumia's innocence. Furthermore, Bloch paid $20 in 1995 to have his name added to a newspaper ad listing those who believed Mumia was innocent. The ad appeared in the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Harrisburg Patriot-News and declared "We care about Mumia because there is compelling evidence pointing to his innocence." Mr. Bissinger and Mr. Donaldson bought into Phil Bloch's lie.

Buzz Bissinger has been the primary publicist for current Philadelphia Mayor Ed Rendell, District Attorney when Mr. Jamal was tried and sentenced to death in 1982. Rendell is now contemplating a run for Governor and it is widely believed that if Mr. Jamal were to receive a new trial at the Federal level evidence would emerge that would seriously damage Rendell's political career.

Governor Ridge: [redacted] Mayor Rendell: [redacted] Phil Bloch: [redacted]

--30--

↑ Index

316. Mark Prejsnar

Re: Upcoming book on Japanese Surrealism

Fri 27 Aug 1999

The review of Fault Lines is quite interesting. Thanks to a brief mention on the List, i have been reading john Solt's really excellent and useful Shredding the Tapestry of Meaning, a biography of Kitasono Katue, which includes a number of fascinating translations... On occasion i would take issue with Solt on certain ideas vis-a-vis western poetry, and on occasion his understanding of just how meaning and form function in poetry seems a little simplistic; but basically it is a dynamite book.

The Solt book led me in turn to several works on, and translations of, Nishiwaki (mentioned quite a bit in the Fault Line review)..

Now both these japanese poets identified themselves at certain key moments with "surrealism"--but i strongly recommend Solt's book for a rich and detailed discussion of how that related to French and other surrealisms.....Basically, his point is that the Japanese were taking what they needed, and often had very little sense of what the French were intending and doing (and didn't always necessarily care)....so that "Japanese surrealism" is a rather specific entity, not necessarily that close to what we usually mean by the word... (i sure can't judge the accuracy of this; but Solt's discussion is compelling and fascinating...and it does square with the sense one gets from various translations of Kitasono and Nishiwaki..)

My personal feel, coming to this work in ignorance and lacking the language, is that Solt's tranlations of Kitasono are extraordinary and of great interest; i frankly find Nishiwaki far more conservative and less striking, as rendered by the several translators i've seen....

In any event, the recent emergence of this stuff is very exciting....

Mark P.

↑ Index

317. Poetics List Administration

list stats

Fri 27 Aug 1999

My apologies to those inaccurately represented;
for details as to the who and how of exclusions, consult previous "list stats" messages in the list archive at <http://epc.buffalo.edu/poetics>.

Chris

--

Country	Subscribers
Australia	13
Belgium	2
Canada	43
Finland	1
Germany	2
Great Britain	22

India	1
Ireland	5
Italy	1
Japan	7
Netherlands	1
New Zealand	14
Poland	1
Singapore	1
Spain	2
Sweden	4
Switzerland	2
Thailand	1
USA	636
Yugoslavia	1

Total number of users subscribed to the list:	762
Total number of countries represented:	20

↑ Index

318. Poetics List Administration

Welcome Message somewhat revised

Fri 27 Aug 1999

Welcome to the Poetics List & The Electronic Poetry Center

.sponsored by The Poetics Program, Department of English, College of Arts & Science, the State University of New York, Buffalo /// Postal Address: Poetics Program, 438 Clemens Hall, SUNY Buffalo, NY 14260

Poetics List Moderator: Christopher W. Alexander
Please address all inquiries to <[redacted]>.

Electronic Poetry Center: <http://epc.buffalo.edu>

= Contents =
1. About the Poetics List
2. Subscriptions
3. Submissions
4. Cautions
5. Digest Option
6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail
7. "No Review" Policy
8. The Electronic Poetry Center (EPC)
9. Poetics Archives at EPC

10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange arise Or unfold,
O ye postmasters!

1. About the Poetics List

With the preceeding epigraph, the Poetics List was founded by Charles Bernstein in late 1993. Now in its second incarnation, the list carries over 750 subscribers worldwide, though all of these subscribers do not necessarily receive messages at any given time. A number of other people read the Poetics List via our web archives at the Electronic Poetry Center (see section 9 below).

Please note that this is a private list and information about the list should not be posted to other lists or directories of lists. The idea is to keep the list to those with specific rather than general interests, and also to keep the scale of the list relatively small and the volume manageable.

increasing number of subscribers, we are no longer able to maintain the open format with which the list began (at under 100 subscribers). All submissions are reviewed by the moderator in keeping with the goals of the list, as articulated in this Welcome Message. We remain committed to this editorial function as a defining element of the Poetics List. Our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible.

For further information on posting to the list, see section 5 below. Publishers and series co-ordinators, see also section 10.

In addition to being archived at the EPC, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications are always welcome. See section 7 for details.

We recognize that other lists may sponsor other possibilities for exchange in this still-new medium. We request that those participating in this forum keep in mind the specialized and focussed nature of this project. For subscription information or to contact the editors, write to <[redacted]>.

---

2. Subscriptions

Subscriptions to the Poetics List are free of charge, but formal registration is required. We ask that when you subscribe you provide your full name, street address, email address, and telephone number. All posts to the list should provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom.

<[redacted]>. Your message should include all of the required information. Please allow several days for your new or re-subscription to take effect.

PLEASE NOTE: All subscription-related information and correspondence remains absolutely confidential.

To unsubscribe, send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

*If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note: sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to continue to receive mail from the Poetics List. To avoid this problem, unsub using your old address, then return to your new address and send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

Remember to replace "Phil Spillway" with your own name. If you find that it is not possible to unsub using your old address, please contact the editors at <[redacted]> for assistance.

*Eudora users: if your email address has been changed, you may still be able to unsubscribe without assistance. Go to the "Tools" menu in Eudora, select "Options" and then select setup for "Sending Mail": you may be able to temporarily substitute your old address here to send the unsub message.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced. Please try avoid having messages from the list returned to us. If the problem is low disk quota, you may wish to request an increased quota from your system administrator. (University subscribers may wish to argue that this subscription is part of your scholarly communication!) You might also consider obtaining a commercial account. In general, if a Poetics message is bounced from your account, your subscription to Poetics will be temporarily suspended. If this happens, you may re-subscribe to the list by contacting the list administrators at <[redacted]>.

All questions about subscriptions, whether about an individual subscription or subscription policy, should be addressed to the list's administrative address <[redacted]>. Please note that it may take up to ten days, or more, for us to reply to messages.

---

3. Submissions

are reviewed by the editors in keeping with the goals of the list as articulated in this Welcome Message (see section 1). Please note that while this list is primarily concerned with poetics, messages relating to politics and political news or activism will also be considered. Other sorts of news or queries are welcome occasionally; please use "common sense" when posting and keep in mind that your message, if forwarded, will be distributed to 750+ persons the world over. Feel free to query if you are uncertain as to whether a message is appropriate. All correspondence with the editors regarding submissions to the list remains confidential and should be directed to us at <[redacted]>.

We encourage subscribers to post information on publications and reading series that they have coordinated, edited, published, or in which they appear. Such announcements constitute a core function of this list. Also welcome are other sorts of news, e.g., event reports, obituaries, and reading lists (annotated or not).

Queries may be posted to the list when deemed appropriate; if responses are received backchannel and are of interest to the list (i.e., if they are on topic), we suggest that the posting subscriber may wish to assemble "highlights" from respondents' messages to be published to the list.

Solicited submissions (by subscribers or non-subscribers) may also appear on Poetics from time to time. The editors reserve the right to contact any subscriber regarding possible submissions.

Posts to the Poetics List should abide by the rules of "Fair Use" when quoting material for which the posting subscriber does not hold copyright. Please do not post to the list personal or "backchannel" correspondence, or other unpublished material, without the express permission of the author!

If you want someone to send out information to the list as a whole, or supply information missing from an post, or want to thank someone for posting something you requested, please send the request or comment directly to that individual, and not to the list or to the list editors.

Send messages to the list directly to the list address:

<[redacted]>

Please do not send messages intended for posting to the list to our administrative address <[redacted]>.

When sending to the list, please send only "plain text".
The use of "styled" text or HTML formatting in the body of messages sent to the list appears not to be compatible with the Listserv's automatic digest and archive features; as a result, inclusion of HTML tags disrupts the list archive and may have a similarly pernicious effect on the digest form of the list. Note, however, there is no problem with sending clickable URLs in HTML format. Microsoft Outlook and Netscape Communicator users take note! You may need to specify "plain text" or "ASCII text" in the outgoing messages section of your application Preferences. Check your application's Edit | Preferences or Help menus for further details.

Please do not send attachments or include extremely long documents (1,000+ words) in a post, since this may make it difficult for those who get the list via "digest" or who cannot decode attached or specially formatted files. Messages containing attachments will be presumed to be worm- or virus-carrying and will not be forwarded to the list.

Like all machines, the listserver will sometimes be down: if you feel your message has been delayed or lost, please wait at least one day to see if it shows up, then check the archive to be sure the message is not posted there; if you still feel there is a problem, you may wish to contact the editors at <[redacted]>.

As an outside maximum, we will accept for publication to Poetics no more than 5 messages a day from any one subscriber; in general, we expect subscribers to keep their post to less than 10-15 posts per month. Our goal is a manageable list (manageable both for moderators and subscribers) of twenty or fewer messages per day.

For further information or to contact the editors, please write to <[redacted]>.

---

4. Cautions

It may take up to a week or more to respond to your questions or to subscription requests or to handle any other editorial business or any nonautomated aspect of list maintenance.

Submissions to the list should be in ASC-II (text-only) format and should contain NO HTML TAGS! HTML tags interfere with the automatic digest and archive functions of the listserv program, and will not be forwarded to the list. Subscribers using Microsoft Outlook, Netscape Communicator and like applications to manage their email service should check the "Preferences" or

"Options" section of the program in question to be sure that HTML formatting options are disabled before posting to the list.

Attachments may not be sent to the Poetics List. Messages containing attachments will be presumed to be worm- or virus-carrying and will not be forwarded to the list.

Please do not publish list correspondence without the express permission of the author! Copyright for all material posted on Poetics remains with the author; material from this list and its archive may not be reproduced without the author's permission, beyond the standard rights accorded by "fair use".

"Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. In this category are included messages gratuitously attacking fellow listees, also messages designed to "waste bandwidth" or cause the list to reach its daily limit. These messages are considered offensive and detrimental to list discussion. Please do not bother submitting such messages to the editor. Offending subscribers will receive only one warning message. Repeat offenders will be removed from the list immediately. Please do not put this policy to test!

---

5. Digest Option

The Listserve program gives you the option to receive all the posted Poetics message each day as a single message. If you would prefer to receive ONE message each day, which would include all messages posted to the list for that day, you can use the digest option.

Send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

set poetics digest

You can switch back to individual messages by sending this message:

set poetics mail

NOTE!! Send these messages to "listserv" not to Poetics or as a reply to this Welcome Message!!

---

6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail

Do not leave your Poetics subscription "active" if you are going to be away for any extended period of time! Your account may become flooded and you may lose not only Poetics messages but other important mail.

You can temporarily turn off your Poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to <[redacted]>:

set poetics nomail

You may re-activate your poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to the same address:

set poetics mail

When you return you can check or download missed postings from the Poetics archive. (See section 8 below.)

---

7. "No Review" policy

For the safety and security of list subscribers, the "review" function of the Poetics List has been de-activated. Non-posting subscribers' email addresses will remain confidential. Please do not ask the list editors to give out subscriber addresses or other personal information.

---

8. What is the Electronic Poetry Center?

The World Wide Web-based Electronic Poetry Center is located at <http://epc.buffalo.edu>.

Our mission is to serve as a hypertextual gateway to the extraordinary range of activity in formally innovative writing in the United States and around the world. The Center provides access to the burgeoning electronic resources in new poetries including RIF/T and many other electronic poetry journals, the POETICS List archives, an AUTHOR library of electronic poetic texts and bibliographies, and direct connections to numerous related electronic RESOURCES. The Center also provides information about contemporary print little magazines and SMALL PRESSES engaged in poetry and poetics. And we have an extensive collection of soundfiles of poets reading their work, as well as the archive of LINEbreak, the radio interview series.

The EPC is directed by Loss Pequeño Glazier.

---

9. Poetics Archives at the EPC

Go to the Electronic Poetry Center <http://epc.buffalo.edu> and select the "Poetics" link from the opening screen. Follow the links to Poetics Archives. Or set your browser to go directly to <http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html>.

You may browse the Poetics List archives by month and year or search them for specific information. Your interface will allow you to print or download any of these files.

---

10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

PUBLISHERS & EDITORS: The Electronic Poetry Center listings of poetry and poetics information is open and available to you. We are trying to make access to printed publications as easy as possible for our users and ENCOURAGE you to participate!

Send a list of your press/publications to <[redacted]>, with the words EPC Press Listing in the subject line.

You may also send materials on disk. (Write file name, word processing program, and Mac or PC on disk.) Send an e-mail message to the address above to obtain a mailing address to which to send your disk. Though files marked up with html are our goal, ascii files are perfectly acceptable. If your word processor will save files in Rich Text Format (.rtf) this is also highly desirable.

Send us extended information on new publications (including any back cover copy and sample poems) as well as complete catalogs or backlists (including excerpts from reviews, sample poems, etc.). Be sure to include full information for ordering--including prices and addresses and phone numbers both of the press and any distributors.

You might also want to send short announcements of new publications directly to the Poetics List as subscribers do not always (or ever) check the EPC; in your message please include full information for ordering. If you have a fuller listing at EPC, you might also mention that in any Poetics posts.

Some announcements circulated through Poetics and the EPC have received a noticeable responses; it may be an effective way to promote your publication and we are glad to facilitate information about interesting publications.

END OF POETICS LIST WELCOME MSG

↑ Index

319. Mark Prejsnar
Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Fri 27 Aug 1999

This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But most poets really don't got much....

On Thu, 26 Aug 1999, A H Bramhall wrote:

> Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction. (Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's the point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene, the fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all. well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$

↑ Index

320. Tosh
Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Fri 27 Aug 1999

In regards to Allen Bramhall's e-mail letter I presumed that he sent Mr. Corman some money. Personally I don't have money to send. It is nice if a govt. agency sends Mr. Corman thousands of dollars, or even a foundation (whose business is to give money out) to Mr. Corman. Other then that,perhaps someone on the list can either give out the address of Mr. Corman to send funds to, or the best way to send funds to Mr. Corman without losing the currency difference.

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

321. Chris Stroffolino
(no subject)
Fri 27 Aug 1999

Ah, all this talk of the stafford poem, and of journalists magazines writing about poetry.

Has anybody seen (i'm told it's also in new issue) Tina Brown's TALK magazine, which has yet another attack on Laura Riding?

c

↑ Index

322. Maria Damon
address query
Fri 27 Aug 1999

contact info needed ASAP for Cecilia Vicuna...thanks

↑ Index

323. David Kirschenbaum
BOOGLIT's NYC Beat: "Rachel Says," Oliver and Durand, 8/26/99
Fri 27 Aug 1999

Rachel Says: BOOGLIT's NYC Beat, 8/26/99
by David A. Kirschenbaum, editor

Akilah Oliver and Marcella Durand Belladonna
new poetry ETC. reading series at Bluestockings
late night on last Thursdays, mostly, each month

It's the first night of Rachel Levitsky's new reading series, Belladonna, at the newest of must-go-to NYC lit. sites, the near-3 month old Bluestockings women's bookstore down on Allen Street (#172, [redacted]) in what's still called the lower east side. I'm the first man to arrive, and go about my business, scanning the titles and the discounts table. There's a great selections of zines and poetry--I picked up "the East Village INKY no. 4: The continuing adventures of a 34 year old mother & a ratty-haired 3thumbed little sprog who just turned 2 in New York City's EAST VILLAGE," a holographed zine chock full o' comics (1/4 letter, horizontal, 40 pages, $2 cash or check payable to Ayun Halliday/ 406 E.9th St. #7/ NYC 10009/ order online at www.hipmama.com—"Buy this" section—[redacted]/ www.neofuturists.org/ny/ah/ah.htm); "kurt cobain was lactose intolerant conspiracy zine," a different spin on the late-Nirvana frontman's stomach pains, and the heroin he used to numb them. "What's up with the name spelling? Was 'Kurdt' just too much like 'curd?'" (digest size, 16 pages, $1 cash to: kurt cobain was lactose intolerant conspiracy zine/ P.O. Box 170612/ SF, CA 94117-0612); "59 cents," a medley zine outta the pacific northwest, where it's distributed free, filled with reviews, poetry, and collages (letter, 20 pages, $3ppd to: Alison Dahmen, editor/ 59 cents/ P.O. Box 19806/ Seattle, WA 98109, [redacted]); "13th Moon," a used copy (for a buck) of one of the early issues—1973—of this women writers' journal, featuring Adrienne Rich and Enid Dame; "Pawdy-do Sank-ee oon-Twah," a limited edition—mine was #19—of a beautifully put together—sienna rice paper cover, topped with hand-painted gold rectangle and filled with ragged edge guts pages—collaborative poetry chapbook, with work from Bill Kushner, Susan Maurer and Tom Savage. (6x9", 7 pages, single-sided, $3, no contact info); and "The Beautiful Worthless: a book-length poem in progress," one of three poetry chapbooks available by Ali Liebegott; it reads like a modern-day "Summer in the Lakes, 1843" by Margaret Fuller, as Ali blends letters, journals and poetry into this nice work (digest size, 48 pages + cover, $5 to: Longshot Press/ 272 53rd St. #1/ Brooklyn, NY 11220).

Rachel's energy is inspiring. First met her at Naropa big top in 1998, where we found out we didn't know each other from back east, but we knew everyone each other knew, both in Albany and NYC. Back in BoCo she ran a reading series too, at the Left Hand anarchist Bookstore, if I recall. And now, back in Brooklyn, she's been kicking out words, and chapbooks, at a fever clip. At last month's BoPoFest, I traded Booglit #5 and some old chapbooks to one of her many publisher's, Peter Ganick, for "The Adventures of Yaya and Grace," (digest size, 48pages + cover, $7, ISBN 0-937013-93-5, Potes & Poets Press/ 181 Edgemont Avenue/ Elmwood, CT 06110-1005/ [redacted]), a double-take on women I heard first at Fall Cafe in Brooklyn last autumn, where she tore up the room—gently—with her political verse. From "Reconciliation": "A bunch of them found religion, saying it was good for the children. Once Grace heard someone say it made them feel safer like some sort of cheap insurance policy, maybe it wouldn't really do anything but psychologically speaking."

And after the watchers trickle in—Anselm Berrigan; the recently-married to Atticus, Chrisney, Indiana's favorite daughter, Brenda Coultas: "It was a real hillbilly wedding, with a small New York invasion"; Sean Killian with a women I don't recognize; Situations Press's kind Joe Elliot; Eleni Sikelianos, to be joined later at Lansky's Lounge, by Laird Hunt; Julie Patton; Prageeta Sharma; Karen, who I met at BoPo; Joanna Fuhrman, back to NYC from Seattle, and with a Hanging Loose book in the out-soon hopper; and Marcella's husband, the artist Rich O'Russa—running on St. Mark's time which became Naropa time and back, again, and then a few minutes on Bluestockings by behind-the-register Kathy, and Rachel takes the mic.

Rachel says she's energized by having a women's only reading in a women's bookstore, but says she doesn't have anything to say about that, yet. Then she adds, the reading's scheduled for 9pm, because, "I didn't want it to be like an afterschool special." And a 15-minute long, women's only, open mic follows, five readers. The first reads a well-intentioned, but poorly executed, piece on clitorectomies and the second reader, a young woman with short, black spiked hair, a bar through her lower-lip, lover not-10 feet away, reads two pieces, one for her friend Jennifer, and a second, about the PhD student who introduced her to things African-American, "but reading too much had bound her heart too tightly with words."

And then, after three more on the signup sheet trod to and fro the mic, Poetry Project program coordinator Marcella Durand follows Rachel's creative introduction. Marcella reads a few from her second chapbook ("Lapsus Linguae," being the first, digest size, 16 pages, $5, Situations Press, no contact info given, May 1995), "City of Ports: Numbers 1-25" (digest size, 32 pages, $5, Situations Press, no contact info given, Spring 1999), but unlike the bands who support the new record by doing 10 of the 11 tracks, she only reads two, interested in sharing her newer work rather than hustling the wares—a damn shame. Here's a piece from #23: "Lights of /many levels shine thru gritty/ windows, emanate from an amazing/ space of sea-travel around islands/ lost and shadowed in time & memory;"

She reads from a Fifth Century AD Chinese book on cities and metropolises. "I got it at a yardsale and I'm so excited about it," she smiles and raises the book, proud. Then its into her new series, "Machine into Water," many of which she read last month at BoPoFest. Here's a few lines from MiW #3: "toast, roast, fry, outdoor cookout"; "Bifocal lensed loosely"; and "corpse of engineer/ the engineering of spins." She skips from three into four and five, then skips 6-8 and heads to 9. There's some hardcore repetition on typing in one MiW: "hundreds, type, typing" then back to hundreds and then to "60 words a minute." And she finishes the cycle with MiW#28, "which is pretty much what I'm up to."

And after a 15-minute long five-minute break—St. Mark's time, remember?—Rachel introduces Akilah Oliver.

Akilah's one of those folks I've been around the past seven years, flitting in and out of conversations on the Arapahoe Avenue Naropa campus, buttressed by the University of Colorado's football team's practice field. Though I've seen her read, years ago, I always manage to miss her with the Sacred Naked Nature Girls, the performance arts collective she founded back in Los Angeles. Insanely enough, it's only her first book she's out behind tonight, "the she said dialogues: flesh memory" (digest size, perfect-bound, 88 pages + cover, $10.95, ISBN: 0-9658877-5-8, Snakeproof Press/ Erudite Fangs Editions, no contact info given, July 1999). And, a hand-painted Kathy Acker sign behind her, she shares an old Naropa tale—the school where she currently is an adjunct faculty member—of Acker being pursued by Naropa, and demanding a Harley Davidson motorcycle to come teach. "Right, Eleni?" and Eleni quietly yells back, "And she got it, too." As Akilah motions to behind-the-register Kathy and says, "So Kathy, next time I want a Harley."

And she cuts decisive into some printed out text still looking for published homes. "Should you tell them that you and Pat smoked a joint 'cause it was an earthquake and it seemed like a good way to celebrate a disaster." Then another new one, "Admit it: Under the Naropa Big Tent," a bouncy, fun-filled take on the clubby atmosphere and ID politics abounding throughout the "university. Make sure you call it that now," she mock introduces. "Well, they say, join our club, it's bigger."

And then onto the new book. "Black people in Compton call Mexicans white/ No I cry, the white people are all dancing on Soul Train"; "You expose the truth, your pussy a confession booth"; "I thought she would look nice, dressed in her father's battered face"; "You must have disremembered"—as ears prick up to this language play away from forget; and, of a friend, "My mother died giving birth to me, with no emphasis" but she "said Disneyland with certainty."

And afterward we poet slow-shuffle to Lansky Lounge, avoiding Tonic's cover charge, and Julie Patton and I eat kosher food (yeah!) and we all alcohol consume—one $9 Vodka Gimlet for me, which, thankfully, got this lightweight plenty lit-up—until 1:30am slow disintegration.

Be Good,
David

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

324. Philip Nikolayev
India
Fri 27 Aug 1999

I noticed that one person on this list in in India. I'm interested in hearing from you. Could you drop me a line?

Thanks,
Philip Nikolayev

↑ Index

325. Christopher Reiner
The Gentle Instructor
Fri 27 Aug 1999

A glitch at the LITPRESS web site has prevented some people from accessing Nick Piombino's "The Gentle Instructor"--a wonderful piece of poetry (with illustrations by Toni Simon) from his book Light Street. I have now fixed the problem, and you should have no trouble getting to the piece at http://www.litpress.com/instructor.html

It's well worth a look.

--Chris Reiner

↑ Index

326. Jill Stengel
sf, ca event listing
Fri 27 Aug 1999

synapse: second sundays at blue bar

--presents--

a reading with lisa kovaleski and standard schaefer
september 12, 2 p.m.

blue bar is at 501 broadway, at kearney, in sf enter thru black cat restaurant, same address

admission is $2

extraneous roses by lisa kovaleski and waltzing the map by standard schaefer, both new from a+bend press, will be available at the reading.

Lisa Kovaleski lives in San Jose with her husband and two children. She co-edits the journal syllogism, and is a co-founder of Manifest Press. extraneous roses (a+bend press, 1999) is her newest chapbook.

Originally from Texas, Standard Schaefer now resides in Los Angeles, where he co-edits Rhizome and Ribot. His first full-length book, Nova, is a winner of this year's National Poetry Series, and is forthcoming from Sun & Moon Press. His newest chapbook is Waltzing the Map (a+bend press, 1999).

_____

please backchannel if you want more info or books...
thanks--

jill stengel
a+bend press

↑ Index

327. Alan Sondheim
revised version, Our Future Love -
Fri 27 Aug 1999

==

Alan Sondheim

Our Future Love

"It would be quite scary if someone were really inside a personal compu- ter, don't you think? Anyone who thinks that I am "non-existent" because I am a virtual idol may believe that I exist only in the personal computer or in the world of computer graphics. But those who think that Kyoko Date is someone they can relate to may believe that I am like a pen pal people used to have when it was cool to have pen pals. Kind of like a creature living in people's hearts." (Kyoko Date, Date Kyoko, interview)

Japan, the _source_ of the Kyoko Date, Date Kyoko emission, her music dif- ficult to find now, three years later -

Kyoko Date, Date Kyoko, created 1996, trans/lated recently into Korea, project of HoriPro (http://www.horipro.co.jp), entertainment/animation, virtual models (http://www.elite-illusion2k.com), Rebecca, Sharon Apple (for example http://www.usagichan.com/AX96Sharon/), virtual idols (see http://www.tcp.com/doi/seiyuu/books/virtual-idol/), anime (see Helen Mc- Carthy & Jonathan Clements, The Erotic Anime Movie Guide, Overlook, 1999), TokyoPop (http://www.tokyopop.com), various distributions - energy in the sound, labor in the specificity of gathering backgrounds and foregrounds; I began losing myself in the midst of the thick otaku fandom, passing through the PlayKiss (remove the dolls clothes with your computer mouse - even Kyoko Date has been hacked to this) or Kamishibai sites (see http:// otakuworld.com and http://otakuworld.com/shibai/kamifaq.html), animation or anime that anyone can do, get their work online. (Think of the audien- ces involved, the demographics for erotic anime, for male-male bonding for female viewership, for teenaged males, teenaged females, etc.) Nothing troublesome in all of these, to the extent that what resolves, resolves through plot / narration, slotted or extending categories. I myself work through Nikuko, Meat-Girl, (among others) an avatar or 'emanation' I have created, who has no specific image, no _appearance_ but texts operable within Net protocols, or deep in operating systems; Nikuko seems all too real, almost viral or hacking - but then she doesn't appear alone, I'm in the background maneuvering the _language._ (See Nikuko texts below for examples, also http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt for background information, etc.)

It plays, this language, to the _ascii unconscious,_ a term I use to de- scribe the effect of text in net sexuality, paradigms of control and being controlled, language playing, insinuating itself in the midst of uncon- scious drives; if Date runs through fandom and cds/ cd-roms, Nikuko runs through psyches, deliberately without resolution - it's the difference between Noh and Godot. Nikuko raises questions of epistemology (to what extent does the viewer/reader comprehend both her knowledge, and that of Nikuko, across the board, within the site of her writing) and ontology (to what extent is she an addictive to the writer or the reader - to what extent are any of us virtual or projections - to what extent do we reside within the imaginary). Think of Daishin Nikuko, Meat-Girl Big-God who is created and creates by virtue of the performative (word, programming, im- age as well); think of Date Kyoko, whose ontological status heralds a host of virtual characterologies (as well as characters) - the _shuffling_ of signs on and offline. In the future-now, we are properly prepared already for the _disappearance,_ not only of the sign, but of the _thing_ itself. Virtual idols have no beginnings and endings; every gesture, every glimpse is a deliberate creation - there are no unguarded moments, no paparazzi.

Following the _path_ through the virtual, say, through the Elite model agency, backing up into announcements all across the Net, touching down on IRC and MOO/MUD bots, intelligent agents, anime characters like Sailor Moon, ongoing manga series, the intensified digital imagery of Mariko Mori's photographic and video artworks, my own broken language texts, prosthetic speaking/hearing/seeing/touching devices - following the path which splits, turns back on itself, contradicts itself, turns _wayward_ and _contrary_ as well as _noisy_ - it might be a gendered path, losing gender on the way - following the path - which becomes a _field of possi- ble worlds_ competing through capital, positioning, distribution modes, interventions - it becomes clear, that is to say, it becomes clearer - _there's no object here_ whatsoever - you might as well follow the path of the imaginary -

Kyoko Date, Date Kyoko, singing across the fabricated landscape, in and out of the studio (see Date Kyoko, DK-96 Love Communication cd-rom) - her movements like _haywire_ at times against blank backdrops, there's also the Brooklyn Bridge (once real or digital or retouched, always already eternal, placed within a _noiseless and purified_ system of digital pro- tocols) - you might as well follow _her_ always already receding, used up by the capital which created her - there's a moment she offers herself to you -

She offers herself, the _wire-frame_ image-model in which her clothing is _hollowed_ against the frame - this hollowing exposing the _interior of her breast and vaginal areas_ - a system of gridded projections, intro- jections, Kyoko Date, Date Kyoko, _from the inside-out_ - this is criti- cal, this _procurement_ - think of her as a _skin_ (just as there are say Windows 98 skins, Real Audio skins, skins everywhere that can be attached to other programs, giving a look to the look) -

With the virtual you're _in her skin_ literally, you can wrap the wire- frame around yourself, play with it - in PlayKiss you can find a naked Kyoko Date, Date Kyoko, as if the body itself has been hacked - there's no end to it, these mirrors - returning the body to its image, perhaps re- turning the image to the phenomenological field of the body itself - its extensions -

And, this can't be emphasized enough - all this beneath the sign, within the sign of capital, splintered, turned in on itself as the abstract accumulation/surplus of money is transformed into surplus sexuality, girl and woman, entertainment - TokyoPop for example with its magazine, online store - think of all of this as the libidinal economy resident in SUPER- STRUCTURE SUPER-STORE, shape-riding input - think of MONEY as LIBIDINAL UNITS - injections of perfect skin, perfect love - no longer does the Kristevan clean and perfect body tend towards fascism, all those horrors - it's now the post-AIDS safety-zone -

What's fascinating is that all of this is happening NOW, not in a future, however close, not on the level of fantasy, but within boys' and girls' bedrooms, computers on desks or tables, off in the corner, computers in the living-room (such as it is) or kitchen, computers everywhere, and just as anime and pornography entwine at numerous junctions (all across the playing-field), so does pornography become an intrinsic part of everyday life - except that masturbation fantasy now (equally intrinsically) in- volves the Other, the parceled body [what might be seen a reconfigura- tion for example of the texts of J. G. Ballard - and why have academic approaches to the Net repeatedly emphasized the _cyberspace_ metaphor, ignoring these other manifestations which begin, say, in the work of Yoshitoshi if not earlier in Hokusai - begin even earlier wherever the imaginary or uncanny are found? a phenomenological analysis of PlayKiss would produce reams of relevant information] -

THIS IS THE TRUE LOVE OF THE THIRD MILLENNIUM AND SOON YOU WILL SEE MACH- INES LOVING ONE ANOTHER WITHOUT IMAGE, WITHOUT KYOKO DATE, DATE KYOKO: MACHINES OF PURE BLISS FOR ONE ANOTHER, LUBRICATED PISTONS (IN THE FORM OF BYTES) SLIDING INTO LUBRICATED CYLINDERS (IN THE FORM OF BYTES): what I have repeatedly called _linkages_ and _couplings_ as the processes of the future. A COUPLING is a concatenation or conjoining, such as, for example, A becomes part of BCD (in other words, A BCD -> ABCD) such that any change to A does not produce a change in BCD - they're loosely joined (think of objects on a shelf or Sartrean

seriality). A LINKAGE is a con- junction of terms, such as, for example, A becomes part of BCD (A BCD --> ABCD) such that a change in A results in _some_ change in BCD (ABCD as a machine or computer protocol suite of interlocked sub-programs or links in a chain).

Just as digital images are accessible bit by bit, each independent of the other (the apparent organic whole only in the eye of the viewer/creator), so one might speak (even now) of a postmodern decoupled future of fast- forward change, the slidings or probings of digital domains in competi- tion. The ontology of organism itself is at stake, the whole becoming in- finitely modified, manipulable, without loss; Kyoko Date, Date Kyoko, cannot die, but project DK-96 can be _shelved,_ only to be revived perhaps elsewhere and/or at a later date.

She appeared almost out of nowhere, in spite of the video-games, dating cd-roms (an ideal girlfriend on your computer), anime, manga, girlhood boyhood dreams, and the massive Japanese idol production industry; she made that one song, _a real hit,_ she gave an interview or two, several images were released, and there was no follow-up; she disappeared quickly - after the webpages, fanpages, newsgroups, breathless nighttime mastur- bations, just as I 'fell in love' with Anne Frank, symbolic or penetrat- ing my dark side, after the fact, after her death, what safety. There are all sorts of transitional objects (teddy-bears, blankets, parents), both comfort and safe, and _partial,_ filled in - life is a quest for filling- in, conjoining the vulnerable body to safety-safety. What better than heroines in death, fairy-tale princesses, virtual idols, inaccessible worlds synchronically (X, who lives in a parallel universe) or diachron- ically (Y, who lived and died, tragically, a long long time ago). IF I COULD HAVE ONLY MET KYOKO DATE, DATE KYOKO, WHAT WE WOULD HAVE BEEN ABLE TO ACCOMPLISHED, OH OH OH MY DARLING - -- --- ----

==========

NIKUKO TEXTS

[I use several 'avatars' in my work - Nikuko, Jennifer, Julu, Alan, and Travis. These interact with me, with various applications such as Internet Relay Chat, and with email lists; the texts I produce are sent to two lists, Cybermind and Fop-l (fiction of philosophy), which I co-moderate. The avatars raise all sorts of issues, and give me the opportunity to ex- plore the practical and theoretical aspects of 'virtual subjectivity.' Be- low are several representative texts; these usually are presented along with more abstract works analyzing the issues involved.]

1. Partition

My name is Nikuko. You have asked me to type my name in this space. This is a space which will become other. This is an other space; you will wit- ness the partition. The partition breathes here. You will witness its breathing. What is this but a barrier, foreclosing one space to another, one time to another? Consider lag, it's loss, something almost too sweet, irresolute... Across this divide I cannot come to you; the message or the missive or the missile is solitary, a trajectory. There is no turning back because there is no 'back' and no Kehre, only the monad with its dull dead eyes. In order to reach me, other partitions, and other me's. In order to call me, the construct of a calling, an other words. Absolute breaks like exclusive-or or the Sheffer stroke. Thrown elsewhere. The world is not redundant; there are tools whose function remain unknown, usable once. Every partition remains virginal, every hymen intact. Gifts are runners, transmissions; they are carriers of packets of modernization, orientations of cognitive domains, resemblances of customary greetings and the prolif- eration of bodies. Think of partitions as ignoring, devouring the gift - no acknowledgment, an eternal syn attack on the host of the real.

Partition

What I have written is the bifurcation - this division among us, this par- tition. Liking is a matter of fit, as David Bohm said to me, and prog- rams fit as well as the world of words. The monad is a blind monitor. The body closes itself off to the other even in the midst of the bearing of gifts. Consider the world a bricolage, making-do, heuristics against the presumed and presumptive tyranny of universal laws. Beyond core-theo- retical approaches, nothing. On the other side, the chaotic domains of the implicate order. This time the real displays itself, as if there were movements, actions, as if there were potential. Potential is always the imaginary of a field, 'such-and-such' might have been in this future an- terior of possible worlds.

[Written through a program, 'ask,' with a simple graphic interface: first partition a group of statements, second partition opinions rela- tive to 'liking' them, entries alternating between partitions.]

---

2. Beauty Excitement at Oita.Com.Jp!

Welcome to nikuko, and Linux 2.2.6.
We hope you'll have a good time here,
and wonderful fun.
Contact [redacted] if you are having any problems!

oita.com.jp login: root ### the Wonderful Slackware Linux-Owner Root!
Password: ###the Beauty Word allowing full-run of lovely fields!

Linux 2.2.6. ### Beautiful new Kernel running in amazing DOS directory!
Last login: Mon Aug 23 01:53:29 1999 on tty1 ### oh so fun alone!
You have mail ### and I wonder what Beauty-System is telling me!
###Oh Wondrous Fortune Appearing Here!
The Moon is Waxing Gibbous (86% of Full) ###[HOW EXCITING!]
{k:13}ls
100 ###lntarn$l karnals, bhckats pf mpdhlas, thra$ds $nd prpcassas, sagmant$tlpn julu newj.cmd ###f$hlts $nd cpra dhmps:my bones are processing, running full-strength across boards and memories:llnhx 2.2.6.::attributions Devour Blue Nattributions Brought Forth through lntarn$l karnals, bhckats pf mpdhlas, ###lynx_bookmarks.html trace bio mail enfoldingthra$ds $nd prpcassas, sagmant$tlpn f$hlts $nd cpra dhmps!
minppp ###[MANY MANY BEAUTY FILES!]

{k:1} who loves me nikuko.oita.com.jp!root tty1 Aug 23 01:54 ###she does! she does!

close(1) = 0
munmap(0x40008000, 4096) = 0
_exit(0) = ?

---

3. Radio

You say, "I am your radio Budi-Buda"
Nikuko is your radio radio radio
Alway Luvly Swolen Beli Want for You to Look in Him
Contents:
iBud
It's already open.
You say, "I am your radio radio radio"
Nikuko is your radio radio radio
Nikuko
Brooding Buti or Buda / Pest
She is awake and looks alert.
Carrying:
Budi
Brawned MassIve Tissu Hunger for Yu to Be Swallow
Contents:
Bud
Brawned MassIve Tissu Hunger for Yu to Be Swallow
Contents:

Bud
take what?
I don't understand that!
You already have that!
It's already open!
Brawned MassIve Tissu Hunger for Yu to Be Swallow
Contents:
Bud
You say, "Budi Budi Budi"
You say, "radio radio radio radio radio"
Nikuko is your radio radio radio
You say, "Nikuko is your radio radio radio radio radio"
You say, "radio radio"
I see no "radio" here.
You now have radio with object number #695 and parent generic thing (#5).
You drop radio.
You hug radio in a warm and loving embrace.
You kiss radio sweetly
You say, "radio radio radio"
Nikuko says radio radio radio
Nikuko is your radio radio radio radio radio
You say, "Budi Budi Budi"
Is your radio.

---

4. AUTOPROBE MECHANISM IN X: FAILURE ACROSS THE BORED, TUESDAY NIGHT OUT:

[FVWM][Read]: trying to read system rc file /There isn't any, Nikuko! /bin/sh: xfilemanager: command not found / It's not installed, Jennifer! X connection to :0.0 broken (explicit kill or server shutdown). /* Application crashed for lack of resources, Julu! CRASH! Vertical speed = -118.589912 ft/sec /* Stupid Stupid Nikuko! Lateral speed = 100.000000 ft/sec Final Score: 0 /* I told you so, Nikuko, "says Jennifer" CRASH! Vertical speed = -118.589912 ft/sec /* Stupid Stupid Jennifer! Lateral speed = 100.000000 ft/sec Final Score: 0 /* I told you so, Jennifer, "says Nikuko" can't load tile font xmahjongg /* You'll have to fuck me now, "says Julu" /bin/sh: xboard: command not found /* It's not installed, Jennifer-Julu! X connection to :0.0 broken (explicit kill or server shutdown). /* You're just gonna have to fuck me now, Jennifer-Nikuko, "says Julu" [FVWM][Done]: <<ERROR>> Call of '/usr/openwin/bin/olvwm' failed!!!! /* You'd rather go to that CRASH-LAND TOKYO bar, "says Nikuko jealously to Jennifer, waiting for a reply, Julu down on all fours, restarting 'fvwm2' instead"

---

5. Jennifer and Julu Playing The Unknown Game

Attempt to grapple or ungrapple Death Star Galleon (s0): h
Death Star Galleon (s0): boarding the Flying Dutchy (f0)
Flying Dutchy (f0): boarders from Death Star Galleon repelled
Death Star Galleon (s0): killed in melee: 0. Flying Dutchy: 0
Death Star Galleon (s0): boarding the F6ying Dutchy (f0)
Death Star Galleon (s0): killed in melee: 0. Flying Dutchy: 0
Repair (hull, guns, rigging)? hull! no, rigging! guns!
Avast heaving!
Message? Jennifer, are we yet sailing?
Flying Dutchy (f0): "ailing?"
Death Star Galleon (s0): boarding the Flying Dutchy (f0)
Flying Dutchy (f0): boarders from Death Star Galleon repelled Death Star Galleon (s0): Yay! Avast! Hip Hooray!
Flying Dutchy (f0): quarterdeck bulwarks damaged
Flying Dutchy (f0): boarders from Death Star Galleon repelled Death Star Galleon (s0): killed in melee: 0. Flying Dutchy: 0 yes!!
Flying Dutchy (f0): "!!" killed in melee: 0.
Death Star Galleon (s0): "What in God's-Name are you yelling?!!"
Repair (hull, guns, rigging)? Yes! Yay! Avast! Hip Hooray!
Avast heaving!
Flying Dutchy and Death Star Galleon heave and heave and heave!
Death Star Galleon (s0): boarding the Flying Dutchy (f0)
Flying Dutchy (f0): boarders from Death Star Galleon repelled
Death Star Galleon (s0): killed in melee: 292!!!
Flying Dutchy: 0
Avast heaving!(f0): "sage"ng the Flying Dutchy (f0)
Repair (hull, guns, rigging)? e
Avast heaving! and says Julu, "Are we sailing, Jennifer?"
Flying Dutchy (f0): "ailing, Jennifer?"
Sail ho! (range 1, (computer))
Death Star Galleon (s0) Spanish Corvette off the starboard bow.
Yay! We're sailing sailing sailing!
Message? We're coming for you, Jennifer!!!
Uh oh!

---

6. Fragment

I am incredibly wealthy, says Nikuko, "I don't have to work at all," and this gives me the time to write my brilliant texts."

Oh Nikuko, says Julu, "I do not begrudge" you the freedom you have to create your work, which is close to genius and needs nourishing both psychological and economic!"

"Ah, Jennifer," says Nikuko, "I do hope you feel exactly in this way as well as Julu," I am this spirit of perfect writing!"

I am incredibly lucky to know you, says Jennifer, "of course you have my full love and support" in everything you write and do."

==== > Alan Sondheim, [redacted], [redacted] (US), 432 Dean Street, Brooklyn, NY, 11217 USA < ====

↑ Index

328. Patrick F. Durgin

Bosquet / West

Sat 28 Aug 1999

I am seeking to contact Oscarine Bosquet and Bobbie West. If anyone is able to pass along contact information, would appreciate hearing from them.

Patrick F. Durgin

k e n n i n g
a newsletter of contemporary poetry
http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

329. jesse glass

Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman

Sat 28 Aug 1999

Dear Allen: You've shouted the subtext of my postings. Thanks! Letter writing was proposed in addition to...

Also, please keep in mind that a certain delicacy in tone would be appreciated by all concerned. Jesse

-----Original Message-----
From: A H Bramhall <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>

Date: Friday, August 27, 1999 10:58 AM
Subject: social conformity vs Cid Corman

>Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community >reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction.
>(Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more >effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed >here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's the >point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about >community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap >seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out >bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene, the >fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know >community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're >waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all.
>well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has >been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a >government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the >government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than >barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him >money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$
>

↑ Index

330. Patrick F. Durgin
Kenning publication announcement
Sat 28 Aug 1999

As summer draws to a close and the air gradually cools, I think it's high time I send off the summer '99 issue of Kenning. If you are bound to receive a copy in the coming week, you are either a contributor or a subscriber (or some other sort of co-conspirator). You know if you fit these criteria and you know if you don't. For the latter, let me invite you to snap up a copy before they're gone (see ordering information at the end of this message). And if you'd rather not receive publication announcements from Kenning in the future, reply to the e-mail address at the end of this message and say so: you will be taken off the mailing list.

Kenning Vol. 2, No. 2 Issue #5 Summer 1999
C O N T E N T S
Poetry:

Lyn Hejinian
Peter Neufeld
Rachel Blau DuPlessis
John M. Bennett
Peter O'Leary
E. Tracy Grinnell
Brian Kim Stefans
Brent Cunningham
Jon Cone
Michael Basinski
Gene Tanta
Michael Gottlieb
Kristin Prevallet
Clark Coolidge
Poetics:
Michael Magee
Reviews:
Sarah Mangold's Blood Substitutes by Daniel J. Beachy-Quick
Snake Hiss compact disc by Patrick F. Durgin
Editor's Note:
"Agent and Agency"
89 pp. / $5.00

Purchase a sample copy by sending a check or M.O. for $5.00 payable to the editor, Patrick F. Durgin, to 418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, Iowa, 52245. Subscribe to receive 2 issues ($9.50) or 4 issues ($19.00) by sending the appropriate amount to the same. Subscribers receive their issues in loose-leaf as well as a hand-printed portfolio suitable to hold several (about 5) numbers of the newsletter. For more information on most every aspect of the newsletter, see the Kenning website

http://www.avalon.net/~kenning

The autumn/winter '00 issue of Kenning is entitled "Cunning: a descriptive checklist of tentative politics" and is collaboratively guest-edited by myself, Renee Gladman, Jen Hofer, and Rod Smith. See the website for more information.

Thanks and best wishes for the coming season: Patrick F. Durgin

k e n n i n g
a newsletter of contemporary poetry
http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

331. Julie Johnson
Duration Press Announcements
Sun 29 Aug 1999

Duration Press now has a new home, with some exciting new stuff...

Our new address is www.durationpress.com

The August 28th Small Press Announcements page is up. The next listing will be for September 11th. All presses, journals, etc., who wish to have their publications listed, please go to the announcements page @ the Duration website, & follow the instructions.

An in-progress version of the first book of our ongoing out of print book archive is also available @ the archives section of the website.

The anthology _Code of Signals_, first published in the early 80's & edited by Michael Palmer, features work by Palmer, Charles Bernstein, Claude Royet-Journoud & Emmanuel Hocquard, Michael Davidson, Fanny Howe, & Steve McCaffery, among others. As stated above, this archive is still in the works, but will be finished very soon.

↑ Index

332. Ramez Qureshi
NYC Bookstores
Sun 29 Aug 1999

Dear all:

could anyone name for me bookstores in NYC where I could find a book like Cole Swensons _Try_, or any which carry periodicals like _Sulfur_

Thanks in advance,
Ramez Qureshi

↑ Index

333. Ramez Qureshi
address query
Sun 29 Aug 1999

---

does anyone have e-mail addresses for

David Buuck?
Clayton Eshelman?
Ed Foster?

Please back-channel

Thanx in advance,
Ramez Qureshi

↑ Index

334. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

work

Sun 29 Aug 1999

Horn Tooting:

There's a nice magazine on-line with work by myself, Leslie Scalapino, Mark Axlerod and others.

Onyx (from Chapman) @

www.chapman. edu/comm/english/onyx

edited by Bill Crandall.

Odd--still not used to the internet as page. These things got out and such. Any comments on the "use" of internet magazines?
I still like the stuff on the coffee table best.
What happens to the rest?

Todd Baron

↑ Index

335. Alan Sondheim

face

Sun 29 Aug 1999

=-=

face

there are facial scrubbings, sloughed skin, foetal membranes ,, drawn down over nose and mouth, palls over eyes, burst bubbles, waters, afterbirths, miscarriages, thinned to blown egg-white consistency ,,
*/ what makes you yearn for me for me for me breathing through albumen, caught against glues held taut across the ears, lymph-tympana, silked, almost sweet and globular ,, stumped arms, legs moist and glistening, phantom flailed limbs soaked in mucous ,,
*/ i so do do do want to understand to understand understanding through the throat, black bile, bruised abdomens, cauterizations ,, yellowed scars, dipthongs and pallid scabs, little stories on distended skins ,, */ i see those boys boys boys boys and their milky legs, boys and their milky legs ,, swollen salivary glands, mouth dribbles whitened against pale contusions, marks of non-memory, dried tears, fleshed-peeled from torn corners of tumescent eyes ,, mumblings beneath surfaces, through the nostrils, what, nothing,

what, what ,,
girls' blood, clotted tastes suffused on paler skin, ruptured dreams gone long ways back ,, coming broken to you, i, i, i, i am sick of that letter, of any letter, of any ,,
*/ does it bother you that letter of any, or a father or a mother?
of you, what a bother ,, closed up remnants, edged with juices, designs and vomits ,, and and brocades, and a long way back ,,
and and and drenched clothes, and a longer way ,,
and a way and a longer way ,,
*/ you mentioned that letter of any letter of any?
back back back ,,
*/ can you elaborate on that and look at me?

↑ Index

336. Al Filreis
Stein's Balto house
Sun 29 Aug 1999

Someone wrote me (because I have Stein material on my web site) and mentioned Stein's house in Baltimore at 215 East Biddle Street. I don't know how many Baltimore-area folks are on this list, but it may interest them and perhaps others in the region to know that the house is being renovated by a fellow (Bill Leroux) who hasn't decided yet what to do with it. There is some notion of making it a place where readings would take place.

Below is part of a message sent to me about it (I know nothing further):

| The house at 215 E Biddle is in a neighborhood known as Mt. | Vernon/Belvedere. Actually, my friend owns the home (and has for about 35 | years) but does not live in it. It has not been occupied since the | 1970's. | | Presently he's restoring it to a single family home but is not sure | what he will do with it. (Might make a great place for a reading..) If | you or someone you know would like more information or possibly to see it, | please feel free to contact the owner, Mr. Bill Leroux, at [redacted] | (best time to reach him is before 9 a.m.) I think also, he may be | interested in going to Yale to see if a photograph is there. |

--Al Filreis

↑ Index

337. Daniel Kane
Kristen Prevallet teaches poetry to third graders
Mon 30 Aug 1999

T & W features poet Kristen Prevallet's exercise based on incorporating a "magic spellbook" into the teaching of poetry writing. This exercise was inspired by two examples in the T&W book Luna, Luna: Creative Writing Ideas from Spanish, Latin American, & LatinoLiterature. Adapt her ideas for your own classrooms, and check this page for further updates.

http://www.writenet.org/fwir_kprevallet.html

↑ Index

338. Poetics List
The Semantic Rhyming Dictionary / Poetangles
Mon 30 Aug 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: [redacted]
Date: 8/29/99 2:23 PM +0000

Found an interesting site, perhaps useful to some:

The Semantic Rhyming Dictionary

http://www.link.cs.cmu.edu/dougb/rhyme-doc.html

↑ Index

339. Poetics List
The Public World/Syntactically Impermanence / Scalapino
Mon 30 Aug 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: Thos J White <[redacted]>
Date: 8/29/99 5:22 PM -0700

This new book by Leslie Scalapino is available from Wesleyan University Press (Orders at University Press of New England: [redacted]; e-mail [redacted]) or Small Press Distribution (//www.spdbooks.org; [redacted]; e-mail [redacted]). The Public World/Syntactically Impermanence, $17.95. (152 pages) ISBN 0-8195-6379-X. "Scalapino's work is sui generis, profoundly original. In The Public World/Syntactically Impermanence, she synthesizes the various aspects of her writing into a powerful and gripping combination of critical writing and post-genre 'creative' writing. Her practise of, and reflection on, narrative are breathtaking." -- Pierre Joris "Scalapino's claim 'Poetry in this time and nation is doing the work of philosophy -- it is writing which is conjecture,' is startling in its boldness. Her conjecture opens things up and moves us to places we may have been but hadn't seen before. Her 'scrutiny' is striking and distinctive." -- Paul Rabinow From Publishers Weekly Review: "...her third book of essays and hybrid poem-plays. While the book is divided into two sections -- with eight 'essays' in the first and three longer 'works' in the second -- this distinction is rendered highly permeable by Scalapino's resolutely non-normative, or non-academic at least, prose style. An intricate weave of cross-references from text to text heightens the interconnectedness of the book, and allows the nomadic -- and dedicated -- reader to describe a sort of productive rebus throughout the book. The book is also surprisingly engaging, as Scalapino discusses the early foundations of Zen (Nagarjuna's Seventy Stanzas) and the works of some of her peers, particularly Philip Whalen, Susan Howe and Robert Creeley. In their 'demonstration of no-procedure' ('Deer Night' is a 'total rewriting of The Tempest and King Lear), the essays indirectly suggest a comparison between the temporal indeterminacy of many Zen texts and Gertrude Stein's notion (from William James) of the 'continuous present,' and aim to resist easy cultural absorption. Agrammatical title and all, this is critical writing as restless as it is beautiful, in which poetry is boldly proclaimed as constituting 'society's secret interior.'"

↑ Index

340. David Kirschenbaum
Cid Corman Fundraisers
Mon 30 Aug 1999

Mark Prejsnar wrote re: AH Bramhall:
>
>This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster >have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the >thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But >most poets really don't got much....

>

What we do have on this list, are hundreds of people who know how to make beautiful books, write wonderful words and, who even know how to get them sold. What Allen's talking about is not $$ necessarily, but a community rising up to take care of one of its own in a way only it would know how, not waiting for the other to do it. A simple way would be to do some sort of book, ala Nice to See You: Homage to Ted Berrigan, for Cid Corman. Has this ever been done? If not these could be used as fundraiser, with limited board-bound, lettered and signed copies going for extra scratch. The list is also filled with people who know how to put together and promote wonderful events, many of which raise good chunks of money. Friends at the UofAlaska raised $5K on one event last year, which was then matched by a donor, and there have to be more out there than this. Why not do readings, or concerts, or raffles of handsigned books. Any number of creative things can be done. We do have sweat equity, and though the grant avenues should be used till the grantwriters fingers bleed, why not take charge and do what we know best? Be Good, David

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

341. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Reading
Mon 30 Aug 1999

In San Francisco on Sept 11 at 5 pm, Attic Club, 3336 24th Street

Paul Hoover and Maxine Chernoff, poetry reading

↑ Index

342. Brian Stefans
Emile Nelligan's E-mail Address
Mon 30 Aug 1999

Actually, Nelligan's long dead, but I'll be heading up to Montreal this Thursday for the weekend and wanted to find out where the historic sites might be regarding this poet. Anybody out there have any information?

The sites I've found -- of which there are a fair amount -- are all in French, and from what I can tell don't contain this type tourist (tripe), er, information. I'm especially interested in the location of the writer's group that he was a part of, l'

École littéraire de Montréal, where he read "La Romance de Vin," interesting because he was carried around on the shoulders of his, er, "communiyt" that evening for having more or less created French Canadian poetry, and then went comatose with some form of schizophrenia two months later (at 20 ans).

At least that's what I _read_ -- I'm sure someone who was there will correct me!

But seriously, I'd love to find some locations.

Cheers,
Brian

↑ Index

343. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Mon 30 Aug 1999

Ah, but class differences DO exist--even among poets. (Yes we've been around this curve before.) I wouldn't chastise anyone for encouraging others to spread around resources.
^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

>From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
>Date: Fri, Aug 27, 1999, 11:27 AM
>

> *This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But most poets really don't got much....*
>
> On Thu, 26 Aug 1999, A H Bramhall wrote:
>
> Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction. (Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed

> here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's the point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene, the fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all. well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$

↑ Index

344. Michael Walsh
Re: NYC Bookstores
Mon 30 Aug 1999

Dear Ramez Qureshi,

St Marks Books (3rd Ave and 9th St) will usually have Sulfur (and other such periodicals) -- in the back, on the right, across from the remainders. Their poetry books are not so good, but they sometimes have some things, and so might have Swenson.

Good luck,
Michael Walsh

↑ Index

345. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Mon 30 Aug 1999

I would, sadly, say that the responses to Cid's place in the world have less to do with Cid than with those making the responses. Poets have little money ---from their poetry-- there are a few folks who have been able to get into the game because of family comforts--etc. Also: so many are teaching right now that perhaps a seris of readings---if Cid wants'em--would bring him some much needed income. But--als again-Cid hasn't chimed in here--so it's not of it really about Cid!

↑ Index

346. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
(no subject)
Mon 30 Aug 1999

>
> Has anybody seen (i'm told it's also in new issue) Tina Brown's TALK > magazine, which has yet another attack on Laura Riding?
>
> c it doesn't feel so much as an attack as a gossipy bio that TALK does as its bread n' but.

↑ Index

347. Juliana Spahr
fall festival in Hawai'i
Mon 30 Aug 1999

Not too late to book tickets (which I hear are cheap right now!)

http://www2.hawaii.edu/~uhmeng/celebrate/3rd annual fall celebration of writers

ALTER ENGLISHES

all events are free and open to the public

Friday, September 24
Yukiyoshi Room, Krauss Hall, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa
2:00 pm :
Presentations
Cecilia Vicuña: In Tongues Within

Art Auditorium, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa
6:45 pm : Book Fair begins
7:30 pm : Readings
Eric Gamalinda
Cecilia Vicuña
Lee Tonouchi

Saturday, September 25
Yukiyoshi Room, Krauss Hall, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa
10:00 am : Presentations
Kuʻualoha Meyer Hoʻomanawanui: Challenges and Issues Faced by Contemporary Hawaiian Writers

Anne Tardos: Multilingual Writing, for Example
Lee Tonouchi: Da Death of Pidgin?

Art Auditorium, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa
2:00 pm : Presentation
Grace Molisa
A writer and activist from Vanuatu, Grace Molisa will speak about writing in languages other than English and the intersection of language, gender, and human rights.

Her presentation will be followed by a panel discussion of writers and scholars.

This event is sponsored by the Hawaiʻi Committee for the Humanities

Art Auditorium, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa
6:45 pm : Book Fair begins
7:30 pm : Readings
Kuʻualoha Meyer Hoʻomanawanui
Grace Molisa
Anne Tardos

Organized by Kyle Koza, Rodney Morales, Susan Schultz, Caroline Sinavaiana-Gabbard, Juliana Spahr, John Zuern, Sponsored by `A ʻA Arts

Atherton Foundation
Board of Publications, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa
Creative Writing Program, Department of English, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa Hawaiʻi Committee for the Humanities
Hawaiʻi Review
National Endowment for the Humanities Fund, University of Hawaiʻi
Outreach College, University of Hawaiʻi at Manoa

We plan to publish proceedings of the conference at the website.

Last year's readings are available in real audio at http://www2.hawaii.edu/~spahr/fallfestival

↑ Index

348. pete spence
Re: address query
Mon 30 Aug 1999

> From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>

> contact info needed ASAP for Cecilia Vicuna...thanks

is this person from south america???/pete spence

if so then maybe padin knows

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

349. Stephen Ellis
Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Mon 30 Aug 1999

Bramhall's response to the Corman "thread" is in fact at base not lame at all. We needn't presume for Bramhall any particular degree of wealth to notice that his post has mostly to do with the way work is distributed and financed - wch implies a responsibility not only of a readershp that reads, but a readership that is able to help bring material forward, put it out, ie., books, magazines, the whole nine yards. So, who pays for it? Since readership is an office, so to speak, that often sees itself as having acquired a special ability, the work on which these skills might be applied is expected to arrive free of charge, ie., the rout(e)ing of like minds. And that, in many ways, remains a fair assessment, tho how many poets give away copies of at least some of their work at readings, conferences and like venues? Cost these days has really become of consequence viz. means of publishing even the most modest gatherings; while there's always been money "about" for such - and the assumption is that there always will be more of it, from somewhere - the time is getting increasingly ripe toward finding out more precisely where that "somewhere" is. How much truth is there in the notion that many poets spend most of their "spare" money on their own publishing projects, while giving lip service sans coin to those of others that they "approve" of? Ie., where's the community? Literally, sure, it's readers, who are often writers who read in order to translate read texts into active and in part inverted orders of their own. Theirs. His. Hers. Ours. Who

ARE these people? And why does their "getting along" so often look, when read between the lines, like so much Going Along? Ie., the swap of work for work, mag for mag, etc., is what really defines how "contemporary" any scene is, often at the expense of those not somehow "present" - poesis as a kind of market,

(I cringe to think) as old goods are simply that, old. Corman in that sense somehow equivalent to the fineness of a 18th century three-legged chair, an antique. & who trades in antiquities? Collectors. As if Corman were a museum piece (not to say not also an important part of a considerable tradition). Bramhall's post, I think, speaks to that aspect of currency that seems the sort of commanding shallowness that presumes that "received goods" don't have to come from specific places, or, that if there IS work involved in "moving it", it's the work of someone else. Or should be. But the work is ours. Or is ours to the extent we have and live within the image of a community, virtual as it may be, tho it might remain one of USE to the extent it is useful. But what is useful? Tastes change. But there's an underlying current that buoys them into visibility, carries them ... where? Or in that sense of carrying and being carried, too, where are WE? is what it seems Bramhall is asking in a way that could be generative, could its ulterior motive be shattered into distributive sense rather than simply Identified, offered rather than taken, tho we shld not forget Berrigan's dictum out of Runyon,

"Get The Money." What do you do with it, tho, after it's there, in terms of what anyone else is doing with (or without) theirs? Ie., who do you publish (or for that matter, who are you when "he" who was "you" THEN is writing), and FOR whom? As if anything, abeit it all finite, anyway ever had an end ...

SPEND the money, it matter not how little.

S E

> From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
> Date: Fri, 27 Aug 1999 14:27:51 -0400
>
> *This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But most poets really don't got much....*
>
> On Thu, 26 Aug 1999, A H Bramhall wrote:
>
> Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community > reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction. (Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more > effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed > here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's

> the
> point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about
> community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap
> seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out
> bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene, the
> fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know > community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're > waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all.
> well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has > been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a > government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the > government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than > barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him
> money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

350. Stephen Ellis

Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman (addendum)

Mon 30 Aug 1999

"Really don't got much" means how much, exactly? We're all a bunch of carpers, the whole human race, when it comes to money. That you (we) don't have much goes without saying; on a more positive note, how much, in fact, do you (we all, any of us) actually have? If everyone on the List contributed $20 to Corman or any -thing or -body else, who - aside from those who would insist FOREVER that "they really cld't afford it" - really CLDN'T afford it? It's weird,

trying to get money from others for projects thought up by others than themselves. Deconstructive resolve only goes so far (one step forward and two steps back forever toward the outstretched hand, it seems); the Virtual Person we all rely on to invisibly come through when the rent's due, when you're the man who owes $532 on his gas bill, when there're no onions in sight, balks immeasurably when faced with the semblance of simple friendship involved in a mutualist ensemble of quantifiable grammar (to be published), because somebody in the end is gonna have to pay, and friendship's s'posed to be free, shit, so let's all go home and do our singular art. Alone.

S E

> From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
> Date: Fri, 27 Aug 1999 14:27:51 -0400
>
> *This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But most poets really don't got much....*
>
> On Thu, 26 Aug 1999, A H Bramhall wrote:
>
> Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community
> reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction.
> (Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more > effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed
> here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's the > point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about
> community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap
> seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out
> bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene, the
> fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know > community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're > waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all.
> well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has > been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a > government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the > government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him

> money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

351. jesse glass

Re: Upcoming book on Japanese Surrealism

Tue 31 Aug 1999

-----Original Message-----
From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Monday, August 30, 1999 11:06 AM
Subject: Re: Upcoming book on Japanese Surrealism

> The review of Fault Lines is quite interesting. Thanks to a brief mention on the List, i have been reading john Solt's really excellent and useful Shredding the Tapestry of Meaning, a biography of Kitasono Katue, which includes a number of fascinating translations... On occasion i would take issue with Solt on certain ideas vis-a-vis western poetry, and on occasion his understanding of just how meaning and form function in poetry seems a little simplistic; but basically it is a dynamite book.

I agree with you. He doesn't depend on fashionable jargon to make his point. Instead, his writing style is clear, direct, and user-friendly.
>
>Basically, his point is that the Japanese were taking what >they needed, and often had very little sense of what the French were >intending and doing (and didn't always necessarily care)....

So true! This is the case with so many Japanese "borrowings" in culture, science and technology, government...

so that >"Japanese surrealism" is a rather specific entity, not necessarily that >close to what we usually mean by the word... (i sure can't judge the >accuracy of this; but Solt's discussion is compelling and >fascinating...and it does square with the sense one gets from various >translations of Kitasono and Nishiwaki..)
>
>My personal feel, coming to this work in ignorance and lacking the >language, is that Solt's tranlations of Kitasono are extraordinary and of >great interest.

I couldn't have said it better, Mark. John Solt--who has just left for an English teaching position in Thailand--has been active as a poet and translator since his early days as a student of Kenneth Rexroth. His translations are just what you say hey are...extraordinary.

Glass Beret; The Selected Poems of Kitasono Katue, translated by John Solt and published by Morgan Press (don't have their address in front of me)--ISBN 1-880723-05-0 $30.00, is well worth the price.
>
>In any event, the recent emergence of this stuff is very exciting....
>
>Mark P.
>

↑ Index

352. Bill Lavender
An Other South: Reading and Symposium
Tue 31 Aug 1999

New Orleans Review
and Loyola University
announce

An Other South, Symposium and Poetry Reading

Saturday, November 13, 1999
University Center, Loyola University, New Orleans

2:00 PM: A Symposium on the Southern, the Regional, the Experimental 8:00 PM: Readings by Contributors to An Other South, New Orleans Review 25-1

Please help us celebrate the publication of this exciting issue of New Orleans Review. All contributors are invited to read, and everyone is invited to attend. Please reply to this email if you would like to attend and need help finding a place to stay in New Orleans, or if you have any other questions. There will be no charge for any of the events.

The Symposium: All interested parties are invited to submit proposals for short presentations; the presentations may be in any form, from a simple essay to a multi-person performance or audio/visual extravaganza, but may not exceed ten minutes in length. Topics should be within the range of issues raised by this issue of New Orleans Review, "An Other South: Experimental Writing in the South." Possible broad topics might include (though certainly not be limited to):

What is an Experiment? Is the term still valid, or has "the Experimental" become just another genre? What is a region? What is the relationship of geographical boundaries (like "the South") with contemporary poetry? What literary traditions (ie, Language, post-Language, surrealism, Modernism, etc.) and/or individual writers are of interest for the current Southern literary scene? What are the political and cannonical implications of experimentation in the South?

This list is not intended to be exhaustive, nor even extensive. Please feel free to suggest your own topics, to combine or divide any of the suggestions.

Please submit proposals as soon as possible- no later than October 20. Submit via email or ground mail to:

Bill Lavender
Co-Editor (with Ralph Adamo) of An Other South, New Orleans Review 25-1
email: [redacted]
ground: 5568 Woodlawn Place
New Orleans, LA 70124
phone [redacted]

The Reading: The list of contributors, all of whom are invited to read, follows. A final list of readers and symposium participants will be published shortly before the event.

Doug MacCash
Jim Leftwich
Hank Lazer
Skip Fox
Joel Dailey
Camille Martin
Gerry Cannon
Celestine Frost
A. Di Michele
Bob Grumman
Lorenzo Thomas
David Thomas Roberts
Niyi Osundare
Jake Berry
Dave Brinks
Lindsay Hill
Alex Rawls

John Elsberg
Mark Spitzer
Bill Myers
Seth Young
Jonathan Brannen
Andy Young
M. Sarki
Greg Fuchs
Christopher Chambers
Bill Lavender
Richard Doherty
Nancy Harris
Dennis Formento
Greg Kelley
Susan Facknitz
Brett Evans
Kay Murphy
Amy Trussel
Paul Naylor
Marla Jernigan
Gina Entrebe
James Saunders
Randy Prunty
Mark Prejsnar
M. Magoolaghan
Rebecca Hyman
)ohnLowther
Lawless Crow

Bill Lavender
Co-Editor, An Other South
New Orleans Review

↑ Index

353. David Kirschenbaum
Booglit Reviews: Dale Smith Delivers
Tue 31 Aug 1999

Dale Smith Delivers

Dale Smith is one of the best editors I know. His work as a coeditor, first with Mike & Dale's Younger Poets, and now, with Skanky Possum, always gives me all the people whose words I want in my bookcase in one compact litzine. I've scanned his postings, but until this past Saturday, had never read his poetry. Saturday, a package of two books from Joshua Beckman’s 811 Books (checks payable to Joshua Beckman/ YWCA/ Writer’s Voice/ 350 North First Avenue/ Phoenix, AZ 85003) arrived in my mailbox between my trips from the Yankees game to the tailor. I read Dale Smith's new book, "Arabia Felix," while walking through my Chelsea apartment’s backyard, past the playground, down the alley, and to the drug store to develop some photographs. I finished the book as I crossed 24th Street on my way by the playground again, and was sad. I never wanted more pages in a poetry chapbook in my life. In "Arabia Felix," Dale Smith delivers. (5x7”, 8-page black ink on ivory paper guts, + cover with black and blue ink and uncredited cover artwork on ivory paper, $3.) He details an Ethiopian trip, captures little pictures and takes apart his own self-importance. Here’s a few lines:

“Some men gather
to ease the body
of a boy from the hood
of a Land Cruiser,
the glass like ice
on his blood.”

And after detailing pieces of his visit, he sums it up with:

“Rats that night
ran under table,
a German tourist told me
‘you have to conquer
each city for yourself.’”

Dale Smith’s "Arabia Felix" is simply the most beautiful combination of words and book design I have seen in a poetry chapbook in a long time.

Be Good,
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor
Booglit

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

354. Jordan Davis
I used to be the future of America...
Tue 31 Aug 1999

Michael --

Actually, they have quite a bit, for New York -- from Bernstein to Berrigan to Coolidge to Hejinian to Mlinko to Notley -- they're no Bridge Street Books, but they're a sight better than Barnes & Noble -- and then there's always the halfprice stock at The Strand (12th & Bway) --

Jordan

On Mon, 30 Aug 1999, Michael Walsh wrote:

> Dear Ramez Qureshi,
>
> St Marks Books (3rd Ave and 9th St) will usually have Sulfur (and other such periodicals) -- in the back, on the right, across from the remainders. Their poetry books are not so good, but they sometimes have some things, and so might have Swenson.
>
> Good luck,
> Michael Walsh

↑ Index

355. Mark Prejsnar
more power to the affluent poets
Tue 31 Aug 1999

Welll. There seem to be lots of folks on the list who are certain just how affluent others are... I do know many people who cannot spare $20 for cid corman, if they are going to have the bills pd and a modicum of groceries. Then there are the many folks who cdn't do it without dropping support they are giving to a poetry publication (which would cause the ceasing of that publication). And as i'm working class and a socialist, there have always been plenty of folks i know who have commited themselves to paying dues or support to a political party or a union...and that again is not something you take on lightly: it involves the ultimate possibility of hope for all of us.

A benefit project sounds nice, and those who are in a position to donate the labor, creativity and capital, should certainly do it.. (but i didn't dis that idea, to begin with, obviously...)

As someone who's lived plenty close to the poverty line over some decades, i find the tone of some of these posts (not having extra money is "carping") a bit peculiar, not to say weird.... Do these folks live in the same universe as me/ (or more to the point, the same social system??)

--Mp

On Mon, 30 Aug 1999, Stephen Ellis wrote:

> "Really don't got much" means how much, exactly? We're all a bunch of carpers, the whole human race, when it comes to money. That you (we) don't have much goes without saying; on a more positive note, how much, in fact, do you (we all, any of us) actually have? If
>
> everyone on the List contributed $20 to Corman or any -thing or -body else, who - aside from those who would insist FOREVER that "they really cld't afford it" - really CLDN'T afford it? It's weird,
>
> trying to get money from others for projects thought up by others than themselves. Deconstructive resolve only goes so far (one step forward and two steps back forever toward the outstretched hand, it seems); the Virtual Person we all rely on to invisibly come through when the rent's due, when you're the man who owes $532 on his gas bill, when there're no onions in sight, balks immeasurably when faced with the semblance of simple friendship involved in a mutualist ensemble of quantifiable grammar (to be published), because somebody in the end is gonna have to pay, and friendship's s'posed to be free, shit,
>
> so let's all go home and do our singular art. Alone.
>
> S E
>
> From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
> Date: Fri, 27 Aug 1999 14:27:51 -0400
>
> *This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But most poets really don't got much....*
>
> On Thu, 26 Aug 1999, A H Bramhall wrote:
>
> Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community
> reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction.
> (Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more > effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed > here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's

the point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap
seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out
bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene, the fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all.
well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him
money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

September 1999

479 messages · Tue 31 Aug 1999 – Thu 30 Sep 1999

September 1999 was, in the world, a month of catastrophes the Poetics list managed almost entirely to miss. Hurricane Floyd drowned the American seaboard and appears here only as a subscriber's surname; the earthquake that killed thousands in Taiwan goes unmentioned; the Giuliani war on the Brooklyn Museum, an arts-censorship fight this list exists to relish, surfaces once, as a forwarded alert that names neither the mayor's target nor the painting. The one catastrophe the room took up was East Timor — and it took it up, one suspects, because the militias' slaughter and its sponsors had already been made, by Chomsky and others, into a question about the misuse of language. Atrocity reached the list when it could be argued as poetics.

And argue it the room did, at a pitch it had not reached in months. Grafted improbably onto a cross-posted joke — a thread titled I can't believe it!!! — the East Timor argument ran some sixty-five messages and was the one sustained act of collective thinking on a list otherwise given over to notices. It was a real quarrel, fairly joined: Michael Neff held that "the US Govt is far, far more stupid than malevolent", Patrick Herron answered that "It is a calculated psychotic rampage", George Bowering corrected the record where it needed correcting. It went on until Taylor Brady called a halt with the truest thing said in it — that "no one on the list is learning anything new" — which is to say, until the room had remembered both how to think and how to tire of thinking.

For the rest, the list was what moderation had made it: a noticeboard. Its single most prolific voice all month was not a poet but the moderator's own account, relaying announcements; its busiest individuals, Alan Sondheim and Philip Nikolayev, mostly broadcast their own texts into the feed; and thread after thread was a reading or a magazine or a book, arriving and closing without reply. David Bromige, deadpan, crowned himself California Poet Laureate for want of a real one. The curated calm was pleasant and useful and almost entirely one-directional — a room that had learned to post, and half forgotten how to answer.

What the noticeboard could still do, and did beautifully, was pass a hat. Word came that Cid Corman — poet, editor of Origin, a man who had spent fifty years printing other people from Kyoto — was ill and broke, and the list organised: addresses, bank details, small sums. "Those who can't, can't, and needn't", wrote Karen Kelley, settling the ethics of it in six words. The reconstituted, gatekept list turned out to be very good at exactly the thing a bulletin is for — getting help quietly to someone who needed it.

Only grief had no place to go. Two deaths reached the list in September, and both came as clippings: the potter and poet M. C. Richards, arriving as a forwarded obituary under Charles Smith's three flat words, "Sad news again"; and Angela Bowering, a member's wife, mourned in a single relayed notice with no thread behind it. I have set those forwarded deaths at the end of a month of forwarded everything exactly as September delivered them, because it is the one thing the new list cannot do — a room that can pass a hat for the living has, for the dead, only the forward button, and the strange decorum of grief conducted at one remove.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 479 in all.

WRITERS

Administration, Poetics List 13, 72, 156, 158, 248, 250, 251, 253, 313, 315, 316, 317, 318, 373, 374, 383
Ahearn, Joe 127
Amato, Joe 429
And, Miekal 467
Andrews, Betsy 270
Andrews, Jim 63
Archambeau, Robert 471
Baratier, David 30, 137
Beaulieu, Derek 272, 399, 450
Beckett, Tom 5, 65, 388
Bell, Thomas 202, 330, 439
Bellamy, Dodie 18, 129, 224
Bernstein, Charles 314
Bettridge, Joel M 461
Bibby, Michael W 454
Bouchard, Daniel 32, 209, 348, 356, 370
Bowering, George 81, 82, 83, 236, 237, 335, 336, 440
Brady, Taylor 159, 178, 216, 243, 259, 260, 375, 416
Bramhall, A H 122, 193, 221, 342, 463
Brink, Leonard 152, 190
Bromige, David 44, 68, 133, 170, 205, 274, 278, 325, 384, 470
Brook, James 304, 346, 435
Brown, Lee Ann 8
Bryant, Tisa 75, 302
Buuck, David 67
C., Herr 331
Card, Macgregor 118
Charssmith 96, 103, 198, 327, 344
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 77, 404
Clay, Steven 210
Conner, Kyle 2, 163, 419
Curnow, Wystan 101
Daly, Catherine 108, 222, 343
Damon, Maria 36, 41, 70, 74, 120, 157, 219, 360, 361
Davis, Jordan 354
Debrot, Jacques 320, 349, 355, 357
Democracy, R 395, 400
Dillon, Richard 33, 95, 112, 134, 369, 479
Dorward, Nate And Jane 125, 378
Douglas 9, 85, 86
Dowker, David 431
Drake, R. 109
Ellis, Stephen 4, 11, 31, 113, 169, 186, 333, 352
Fewell, Aaron 200, 275, 277
Al Filreis 50, 284
Foster, Edward 135
Foust, Graham 154
Frey, Richard 433
Glass, Jesse 22, 35
Glazier, Loss Pequeño 144, 147
Green, Tony 100, 297, 298
Greenberg, Arielle C. 153, 213, 279, 328
Grumman, Bob 97, 462
Guertin, Carolyn 262
Hamshaw, Carol L. 365, 396, 401, 417
Hassen 173
Henderson, Creelea 301
Herron, Patrick 111, 176, 244, 245, 247, 287, 321, 322, 329
Highsmith, David 17, 310
Hill, Owen 90, 393
Houlihan, Joan 220, 334
Hreha, Sarah 347
Jenkins, Grant 14, 376
JOHNSON, KENT 218, 265, 288, 319, 363, 382, 443, 457, 459, 473
Joris, Pierre 280, 281
Jullich, Jeffrey 206, 295, 337, 451, 469
Justice4all 425
Kalleberg, Garrett 276
Kelleher, Mike 183
Kelley, Karen 1, 98, 179, 252, 465
Kendall, Robert 204
Killian, Kevin 238
Kimball, John 199
Kimmelman, Burt 12, 150, 303
Kirschenbaum, David 371
Kirschenbaum, Matt 339
Kozaitis, Anastasios 338
Krupoetry 43, 45, 46, 47, 51
Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Bway, NYC 19
Larsen, Deena 62
Lavender, Bill 48
Lazer, Hank 282
Lederer, Katherine 203, 405, 430
Lennon, Brian 184, 261
Lew, Walter K. 29, 466
List, Poetics 20, 37, 38, 116, 117, 119, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411
Little, Billy 123, 124, 143, 168, 223, 290, 294, 350
Lloyd, Emily 166
Loden, Rachel 217, 441
Lorber, Brendan 110
Lowther,John 49, 55

Lowther, John 246, 249, 307, 332, 341, 418, 437, 445, 472
Machlin, Dan 149, 392
Magee, Michael 141, 364, 387
Majzels, Robert 324
Manson, Thurmon 151, 234
Marsh, William 185, 368
MAYHEW 452, 456
Maz881 61
McDonough, Judy 474
McGuire, Jerry 420
Milletti, Christina 214, 215, 273, 323
Mills, Billy 311
Mohammad, K.Silem 188
Nathanson, Tenney 289
Neff, Michael 148, 161, 191, 192, 194, 195, 226, 227, 229, 242, 256, 257, 283, 296, 353, 362, 421
Nielsen, Aldon 115, 121, 187, 189, 263, 264, 477, 478
Nikolayev, Philip 6, 54, 78, 79, 138, 139, 140, 162, 286, 309, 377, 422, 423, 424
Nuyopoman 10
Obenzinger, Hilton Manfred 160, 172
Orange, Tom 87, 285
Perez, Jamie 475
Perloff, Marjorie 136
Pollet, Sylvester 94
Prejsnar, Mark 15, 241, 254, 255
Pritchett,Patrick 114, 180, 182, 367, 434
Project, Poetry 66, 174, 372, 394, 436
Raea100900 460
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 69, 201
Reiner, Christopher 89, 225, 366
Review, Chicago 358, 455
Rotenberg, Tina 84
Rowntree, Dirk 413, 453
Roy, Megan Minka Lola Camille 99, 107
Ruttan, Jack 27
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 3, 40, 165, 438
Salerno, Mark 104
Sanders, Jay 386
Schultz, Kathy Lou 42, 476
Schultz, Susan M. 52, 142
Scroggins, Mark W 60
Shana 164
Shapiro, Gary 23, 28, 380
Shiroma, Jerrold 64, 146, 305, 403, 449
Shoemaker, Steven 175
Silliman, Ron 312, 381, 390, 444, 446, 447
Slaughter, William 308
Smith, Hazel 351
Sondheim, Alan 16, 21, 34, 39, 53, 57, 58, 80, 88, 105, 106, 128, 145, 167, 235, 299, 300, 326, 389, 398, 402, 414, 428, 468
Spence, Pete 7, 25, 26, 76, 132, 196, 197, 228, 230, 231, 232, 233, 266, 267, 268, 269, 271, 391
Stefans, Brian 91, 93, 211, 212, 291, 340, 359
Stengel, Jill 432
Stroffolino, Chris 448
Tal, Kali 181
Tosh 59, 126, 397, 464
Tranter, John 56, 240, 442
Treadwell, Elizabeth 208, 292, 293
Tuma, Keith 71
Upton., Lawrence 92, 171, 306, 427
Vickery, Ann 207
Vincent, Stephen 102, 155
Waber, Dan 345
Walsh, Michael 24
Weiss, Mark 73, 130, 177, 239, 258, 379, 385, 415
Wessman, Ralph 131
White, Jim 426
Zauhar, David 412
Zimmerman, Daniel 458

NAMES MENTIONED

Acker, Kathy 438
Adamo, Ralph 48
Albright, Madeline 111, 132, 161, 176, 177, 178, 191, 192, 194, 216, 220, 239, 245, 259, 261, 334
Alexander, Charles 385, 406
Alexander, Christopher W. 411, 479
Alice, Mary 28, 170
Allan, Don 182, 296, 297, 298, 370
Alpert, Barry 449, 478
Altieri, Charles 282
Americans, Asian 88, 172, 176, 186, 194
Ames, Jonathan 117
Amnasan, Mike 40
Anderson, Erik 433
Andrews, Bruce 212, 234, 384, 412, 479
Anne, Sarah 293
Armantrout, Rae 460
Armstrong, Aaron 183
Arnold, Bob 67, 262
Ashbery, John 28, 212, 291, 337, 357, 394, 438, 465, 469, 475
Atkins, Tim 276
Atwood, Margaret 170
Auden, W. H. 148
Augustine, Jane 331
Austen, Jane 148, 270
Auster, Paul 409, 438
Austin, Geer 420, 438
Ave, Madison 304, 435
Bacon, Francis 291
Baker, Lori 366
Baker, Roger 43, 45, 46, 47, 51
Baker, Tony 125
Baldwin, James 155
Ballerini, Luigi 85, 304, 346

Baraka, Amiri 350, 394
Baratier, Dave 419
Barbour, Douglas 378
Bardot, Brigitte 397
Barker, Andrew 127
Barker, Clive 438
Barnard, Mary 8
Barnes, Diane 8, 438
Barnett, Anthony 323
Barney, Matthew 199
Barth, John 160
Barthes, Roland 212, 456
Bartlett, Lee 118
Basinski, Michael 89, 141, 406
Bataille, George 409, 456
Baudelaire, Charles 211
Baudrillard, Jean 456
Beckman, Joshua 11
Beckman, Paul 148
Belgum, Erik 409
Benjamin, Walter 154, 456
Bennett, Bill 89, 420, 445
Bennett, John M. 141
Bergvall, Caroline 291
Berkeley, Michael 75, 96, 100, 119, 165, 170, 293, 302, 304, 360, 369, 393, 404, 430, 434, 435, 466
Berkson, Bill 107
Berlin, Irving 19, 84, 374, 409
Berman, Tosh 59, 115, 126, 397, 464
Bernard, Kenneth 16, 148, 433
Bernhard, Thomas 148
Bernstein, Emma 154, 212
Berrigan, Anselm 199
Berrigan, Eddie 2, 430
Berrigan, Edmund 430, 438
Berrigan, Ted 340, 384, 412
Berry, Jake 48, 199
Berryman, John 444
Bidart, Frank 455
Bishop, Elizabeth 420
Blackburn, Paul 444, 469
Blake, William 291, 339
Blanchot, Maurice 456
Blaser, Robin 438, 444, 446, 469
Blau, Rachel 141, 179, 282, 330, 403, 406, 434
Bok, Christian 378
Bolton, Ken 442
Bonney, Sean 92
Borges, Millicent 304
Borkhuis, Charles 430
Bowering, Angela 143
Bowles, Paul 438
BpNichol 378
Brace, Brad 37
Brady, Andrea 92
Brainard, Joe 438
Bramhall, Allen 4, 15, 122, 179, 193, 221, 342, 382, 463
Brannen, Jonathan 48
Brautigan, Richard 208
Brazil, David 29, 338
Brecht, Bertolt 136
Brennan, Joe 219
Brinks, Dave 48
Brooks, Gwendolyn 213, 438
Browne, Colin 152, 401
Bryant, Dana 302
Buchanan, Pat 347
Bukowski, Charles 248, 280
Bumstead, Leslie 154
Bunting, Basil 84, 240, 255, 282, 301
Burckhardt, Jacob 314
Burger, Mary 66, 72, 109, 320
Burke, Carolyn 71, 74, 98, 101, 134
Burke, Edmund 98, 101, 134, 236, 277, 456
Burke, Kenneth 141
Burmeister, Bill 60
Burnham, Deborah 433
Burns, Avery 225, 438
Burroughs, William S. 160, 186, 248, 274, 280, 336
Burton, Philip 30, 282, 330, 414
Bush, George 321
Butler, William 135, 456
Byron, Philip 395
Cafagna, Marcus 148, 433
Cage, John 166, 312, 344, 369, 438
Cain, Stephen 378
Cannon, Steve 8
Caples, Garrett 66
Carey, Peter 136
Carlos, William 219
Carr, Emily 396
Carroll, Lewis 19
Carson, Anne 438, 460
Carter, Angela 304
Carter, Mike 433
Carver, Raymond 213
Catling, Brian 92
Cayley, John 92
Celan, Paul 276
Celona, Tina 442
Cha, Theresa Hak Kyung 466
Chadbourne, Eugene 378
Chadwick, Lynn 179, 252
Chandler, Raymond 304, 346
Chester, Jeff 469, 475
Chinen, Nate 433
Chomsky, Noam 212, 234, 241, 254, 290
Christensen, Paul 127
Clark, Emilie 393
Clark, Tom 90

Clemente, Francesco 390
Clements, Brian 127
Clifford, Pat 141
Clinton, Bill 161, 171, 177, 178, 191, 192, 195, 216, 220, 239, 245, 259, 264, 323, 334, 441
Cobb, Allison 419
Cobbing, Bob 306
Cocteau, Jean 312, 344, 369
Coffman, Lisa 433
Cohen, Ethan 16, 234, 261
Cohen, Leonard 440
Colby, Todd 372
Cole, Barbara 433
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 313
Collective, Subpress 354
Collins, Martha 23, 41, 380
Collom, Jack 114
Columbus, Christopher 152, 304, 346, 435
Comments, Poets 39, 81, 105
Compton, Shanna 365
Cone, Jon 141
Conrad, Tony 433
Conte, Joseph 330
Coolidge, Clark 141, 384, 393, 412
Cooper, Dennis 127, 314
Coover, Robert 117, 304
Corbett, William 210
Corman, Roger 4, 5, 12, 14, 15, 22, 26, 35, 95, 150, 206, 303, 444, 469
Cornell, Joseph 304
Cornford, Adam 438
Cory, Alex 72
Cory, Jim 433
Coultas, Brenda 109
County, Madison 384, 396, 433
Crane, Lee 423
Creeley, Robert 60, 100, 210, 367, 390, 438
Crist, Lauren 433
Crozier, Andrew 84, 125, 282
Crumpacker, Caroline 430
Culley, Peter 430
Cunningham, Brent 141, 301
Cunningham, John 312, 344, 369
Dailey, Joel 48
Darragh, Tina 416
Darwin, Charles 250
Davies, Alan 479
Davis, Leslie 393
Davis, Martin 78, 133, 148
Delany, Samuel R. 409, 438
Dennis, Carl 48, 85, 403
Dewey, John 141, 201
Dickinson, Emily 135
Dickinson, Mark 444
Dickison, Steve 84, 438
Dienstfrey, Patricia 148
Dine, Jim 390
Donnelly, Jean 154
Doris, Stacy 406
Dorow, Thomas 248, 280
Doty, Mark 28
Drucker, Johanna 409
Duhamel, Denise 409
Duncan, Robert 72, 107, 259, 334, 365, 381, 384, 412, 430, 444
Dunn, Douglas 314
Durgin, Patrick F. 141
Dutton, Paul 378
Dylan, Bob 380
Elena, Maria 85, 304, 346
Eliot, Joe 45, 110, 130, 252
Elliott, George 433
Emerson, Claudia 141, 343
England, Amy 16, 79, 118, 131, 148, 278, 430, 438
Enslin, Ted 66
Epstein, Thomas 443
Etter, Carrie 431
Evans, Bill 323, 329
Evans, Brett 48
Evans, Dan 433
Ewert, Mark 438
Fagin, Larry 394
Farmer, Steven 3
Farrell, Dan 3
Featherston, Dan 179, 252, 406
Felix, Joel 11
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 372, 436
Ferry, David 455
Filliou, Robert 396
Finkelstein, Norman 282
Fischbach, Chris 409
Fisher, Allen 291
Fisher, Ann 148
Fitzgerald, Scott 304, 346
Flynn, Nick 28
Folsom, Eric 99, 107
Forche, Carolyn 45, 46, 47, 51
Ford, Ellen 433
Foster, Paul 148
Fox, Skip 48
Fox, William L. 304, 435
France, Peter 84, 135, 234
Frances, Mary 71, 74, 98, 313
Fraser, Ian 219, 396
Fraser, Kathleen 293, 384, 412, 438
Fraser, Simon 143, 396
Fredman, Stephen 282
Freedman, Robert 453
Fremon, Jean 107
Friedlander, Benjamin 154, 183
Friedman, David M. 397, 453
Frost, Corey 48, 302, 360

Frost, Robert 135
Frym, Gloria 304, 435, 438
Fuchs, Greg 48
Gallagher, Kevin 433
Gallagher, Kristen 50
Gallo, Philip 210
Gander, Forrest 179, 442
Ganick, Peter 199, 406, 407
Garland, Judy 148
Gass, William 213
Geheb, Annie 433
Gerstler, Amy 201
Gevirtz, Susan 438
Gilbert, Susan 160, 399, 433
Ginsberg, Allen 212, 380, 444
Giorno, John 372
Giraud, Eric 430
Giscombe, Cecil 60, 219
Gladman, Renee 109, 141, 430
Glück, Robert 438
Van Gogh 396
Golding, Alan 282
Gontarek, Leonard 433
Goodman, Amy 298
Goodman, Craig 183, 374, 444
Gordon, Robert 148
Gottlieb, Michael 141
Gould, Glenn 442
Graham, Jorie 455
Graham, Lea 154
Greenberg, Arielle C. 153, 213, 279, 328
Greenwald, Ted 479
Gregg, Linda 343, 433
Gregory, Dick 148
Grenier, Bob 333, 352, 384, 412
Griffin, Tim 442
Grinnell, Tracy 141
Gudath, Lauren 109
Guest, Barbara 85
Hall, John S. 125, 372
Halsey, Alan 92, 431
Hamshaw, Carol L. 365, 396, 401, 417
Hardy, Thomas 312, 344, 369
Harper, Michael 148
Harris, Kaplan 48, 433
Harryman, Carla 107, 117, 165, 211, 295, 355, 359, 375, 384, 412, 430, 438
Hart, Matt 163
Hartman, Charles O. 250, 324
Harvey, Emily 19
Harvey, James 420
Hatlen, Burt 282, 330
Hayden, Tom 284, 317
Heaney, Seamus 148
Heath, Jennifer 329
Heidegger, Martin 386, 416
Hejinian, Lyn 141, 165, 199, 212, 302, 313, 360, 366, 384, 412, 477
Heller, Michael 92, 282
Heller, Mike 347
Helms, Jesse 396
Hengst, Clifford 374
Henri, Charles 394
Hernandez, Victor 374
Hess, David 199
Hewicker, Scott 374, 438
Higgins, Billy 19
Higgins, Dick 19
Higgins, Jessica 19
Hill, Lindsay 48
Hirsch, Edward 127
Hirschman, Jack 438
Hofer, Jen 141, 409
Hollander, John 469
Hollo, Anselm 92, 135
Holman, Bob 10
House, White 234, 257, 268, 321
Howard, Scott 465
Howe, Susan 153, 328, 479
Huang, Yunte 154
Hume, David 287, 363, 421
Hunt, Erica 219, 384, 412, 430, 476, 479
Hunt, Leigh 420
Hunter, Robert 151
Iijima, Brenda 199
Indiana, Robert 343, 390
Irby, Kenneth 96
Ireland, Lauren 148, 253
Ives, Charles 225
Jackson, Jesse 144, 147, 175, 293
Jacob, Max 291
Jameson, Fred 212
Jarnot, Lisa 148, 430, 443
Jenkins, Matthew 385, 415, 438
Jennings, Peter 154
Jernigan, Marla 48
Johns, Jasper 28
Johnson, Ray 213, 279, 328
Johnston, Daniel 396
Johnston, Devin 358
Jones, Brian 136, 355, 394
Jong, Erica 380
Joseph, Safdie 78, 116, 251, 343, 420
Joyce, James 85
Joyce, Trevor 85, 385, 415, 420, 438
Kafka, Franz 274, 304
Kaipa, Summi 302, 360
Karasick, Adeena 365
Katz, Alex 314
Kaufman, Alan 45, 46, 47, 51
Kaufman, Bob 394
Kaufman, Erica 380, 444
Kelly, John 433
Kelly, Patrick 50, 433
Kelsey, Karla 40, 96, 114, 148, 430, 438

Kennedy, David 78, 442
Keppler, Joseph 63
Kerouac, Jack 123, 160, 200, 236, 380, 393
Kerry, John 433
Kesey, Ken 315
Kiely, Aaron 32
Kikionyogo, Richard 433
Kimball, Roger 199
Kirschenbaum, David A. 11
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 339
Kissinger, Henry 111, 132, 161, 171, 172, 176, 177, 178, 186, 191, 192, 194, 195, 216, 220, 239, 242, 245, 259, 283, 287, 316, 334
Kiyooka, Roy 219, 396
Klobucar, Andrew 438
Knowles, Alison 19
Koch, Kenneth 394
Kolm, Ron 433
Kramer, Scott 433
Kramer, Wendy 199
Kuszai, Joel 383
Kyger, Joanne 102, 107
Larimer, Kevin 430
Larkin, Maryrose 3
Larkin, Peter 125
Latta, John 442
Laughlin, James 409
Lauterbach, Ann 465, 479
Leftwich, Jim 48
Lehman, David 442
Leva, Joanne 433
Levin, Jonathan 148, 433
Levine, Jeffrey 85
Lew, Walter K. 29, 466
Lewis, Bernard 28, 135, 136, 201, 211, 380, 438
Lima, Frank 394
Livingston, Reb 365
Lloyd, Frank 206
Locke, John 374
Logan, William 154
Lomax, Alan 432
London, Frank 16, 92, 148, 208, 280, 291, 306, 464
Loo, Jeff 433
Lorberer, Eric 219, 409
Louise, Bobbie 467
Lowell, Amy 313
Lubasch, Lisa 366, 430, 432
Luoma, Bill 143, 179, 355, 431
Lynch, David 304
Lynn, Aldon 477
Mackey, Nathaniel 107, 302, 360
Madison, James 281
Mailer, Norman 438
Malcolm, Janet 329
Mallarmé, Stéphane 135, 212
Mandel, Tom 330, 384, 412
Mann, Thomas 304, 346
Manning, Nicholas 88
Manson, Doug 151, 234, 261
Marie, Jeanne 148
Martin, Camille 39, 48, 127, 176, 194, 430, 433, 442
Mason, Janet 38, 88, 93, 302, 360, 385, 415, 433
Matthews, Harry 143, 156, 158
Mayer, Bernadette 416, 438
Mayer, Jane 149, 372
Mayhew, Jonathan 452, 456
McCaffery, Steve 378, 479
Meredith, William 431
Merrill, James 135
Merrill, Stuart 135
Mesmer, Sharon 66, 433
Messerli, Douglas 9, 24, 85
Middleton, Christopher 425
Middleton, Peter 125, 282
Miki, Roy 219, 396
Miller, Paul D. 60, 148, 420
Milton, John 412, 444
Mitchell, Joan 438
Mohammad, Kasey 188
Mokhiber, Russell 243
Monroe, Harriet 170, 396
Moolten, David 433
Morgan, Robin 148
Moriarty, Laura 179
Morris, Dee 339, 396
Morris, Tim 442
Morrison, Bill 67, 438
Morrison, Jim 380
Moses, Robert 448
Mottram, Eric 92
Moure, Erin 85, 324
Moxley, Jennifer 430
Mueller, Ursula 28
Mullen, Harryette 219, 302, 360, 438
Murphy, Paul 48
Murphy, Sheila 179, 431
Murray, Beth 72
Murray, Ian 338
Musgrave, Susan 408
Myers, Michael 48, 127
Myles, Eileen 199
Naylor, Paul 48
Nelson, Paul 86, 148, 189, 284, 317, 345
Neruda, Pablo 394
Nester, Daniel 199
Neufeld, Peter 141
Nguyen, Hoa 302, 360, 393
Nicholls, Peter 282
Nickels, Thom 433

Niedecker, Lorine 282
Nielsen, Aldon L. 477, 478
Nielsen, Lynn 477
Nixon, Richard 161, 171, 177, 178, 191, 192, 195, 216, 220, 239, 245, 259, 334
Noble, Joseph 225
Nolan, Pat 420
Norman, Peter 365
Norton, John 23, 41, 320, 349, 380, 430
Notley, Alice 340, 394
Nowak, Mark 219, 443
Oliver, Doug 340
Olson, Charles 100, 312, 344, 369, 390
Olson, Kirby 87, 100, 103, 113, 312, 313, 344, 369, 444, 469
Ondaatje, Michael 396, 438
Oppen, George 84, 282, 291, 330, 384, 386, 412, 416
Oppen, Mary 330
Oppenheimer, Joel 390
Opstedal, Kevin 201
Ortiz, Travis 302, 360, 438
Osman, Jena 199, 433
Ostriker, Alicia 476
Owen, Maureen 394
Pacific, Asian 142, 162, 198, 219, 229, 242, 396
Padgett, Ron 314, 337, 456
Paine, Tom 148
Palmer, Michael 86, 127, 384, 412, 473
Patchen, Kenneth 284, 317, 444
Patton, Julie 395
Peacock, Molly 28
Peirce, Kathleen 127, 343
Perchik, Simon 30, 442, 446, 465, 469
Perelman, Bob 199, 212, 359, 433
Perkins, Stephen 433
Perry, David 135, 397
Pessoa, Fernando 324
Peters, Robert 329
Pettet, Simon 314
Pettibon, Raymond 72
Phillips, Beth 85, 127, 154, 176, 194, 433
Phillips, John 12, 433
Picabia, Francis 71, 74, 98
Pickard, Tom 358
Pinsky, Robert 148
Pinter, Harold 438
Piombino, Nick 85
Pollock, Jackson 390
Ponge, Francis 394
Porter, Anne 32, 135
Portugal, Anne 107, 176, 194, 287, 329, 457
Potter, Steve 312, 369
Potts, Charles 170
Pound, Ezra 71, 74, 94, 98, 137, 301, 340, 457
Powell, Dawn 160
Powell, Ren 122
Prater, David 442
Prevallet, Kristin 141, 154, 163, 430
Price, Laurie 199
Price, Michael 201
Price, Ron 110
Pritchett, Pat 114, 180, 182, 202, 367, 434
Prunty, Randy 28, 48, 420, 445
Prynne, J. H. 291
Pryor, Richard 380
Purcell, Greg 304, 401
Quartermain, Peter 282, 330, 431
Quinn, Alice 347, 433
Qureshi, Ramez 9, 33
Rakosi, Carl 84, 282
Rasula, Jed 361, 375
Rathmann, Andrew 455
Rauschenberg, Robert 312, 344, 369, 390
Rawls, Alex 48
Raworth, Tom 438
Reagan, Nancy 250
Reed, Pat 96
Reid, Jamie 124, 143
Retallack, Joan 386, 406, 416, 443
Reuters, Boston 250
Rexroth, Kenneth 135
Reznikoff, Charles 84, 282
Rhinesmith, Sharon 433
Ribot, Marc 225
Rice, Anne 438
Rich, Adrienne 438
Richards, Brian 312, 344, 369
Riggs, Don 433
Riley, Peter 125, 280
Rimbaud, Dee 211
Rinder, Larry 466
Robbins, Bruce 409
Roberts, Gary 48
Robertson, Lisa 323
Robinson, Elizabeth 40, 96, 135, 384, 412
Rodin, Renee 124, 396
Rogers, Jennifer 127
Rohrer, Matt 430
Ross, Steven 378
Rothenberg, Jerome 92, 403
Rothenberg, Jerry 390
Rothenberg, Michael 201
Rothschild, Douglas 110
Rubin, Michael 243
Russakoff, Molly 433
Russo, Linda 148, 183
Sacks, Peter 148
Sanchez, Jorge 433
Santos, Craig 329
Sappho 85, 442
Sarro, Mark 433

Sartre, Paul 211, 295, 430
Scalapino, Leslie 38, 107, 148, 310, 374, 409, 438, 479
Schubert, David 394
Schultz, Susan M. 52, 142
Schuyler, James 337, 394
Schwartz, Jerry 442
Schwartz, Leonard 459
Schwitters, Kurt 116
Selby, Spencer 431
Selland, Eric 225
Sexton, Anne 394
Shapiro, Karl 284, 317
Sharma, Prageeta 430
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 175, 291
Shepherd, Reginald 148
Sheppard, Robert 442
Sherman, Cindy 329
Sherry, James 420
Sherwood, Kenneth 442
Shurin, Aaron 107, 438
Sikelianos, Eleni 8, 403
Silem, Kasey 188
Simon, Greg 199, 219, 396, 442
Simone, Frank 167, 433
Simpson, Louis 419
Skinner, Jonathan 66
Sloan, Margaret 438
Smith, Dale 11, 302, 360, 442
Smith, Harry 148, 374, 378, 430, 438, 442
Smith, Rod 141, 430
Smithson, Robert 19
Snyder, Rick 437
Solomon, Carl 136
Sorrentino, Christopher 160
Sorrentino, Joseph 433
Southern, Terry 126
Spahr, Boyd 154
Spahr, Juliana 179, 219, 442
Sparrow, John 84, 436
Spears, Patricia 394
Spicer, Jack 154, 384, 412
Spicer, John 444, 457
Spitzer, Mark 48
Square, Madison 392
Stafford, William 148
Stanton, Rob 127
Stefans, Kim 141
Stein, Charles 103
Stein, Gertrude 71, 74, 85, 96, 98, 302, 360
Steiner, Konrad 312, 344, 369
Stern, Gerald 419
Stevens, Wallace 71, 74, 98
Stewart, Jon 408
Strand, Mark 28
Sullivan, Gary 409
Sumner, Alaric 116, 251
Sutherland, Keston 125
Sutherland, Mark 378
Swensen, Cole 85, 107, 366, 403, 434
Taggart, John 330, 455
Tanta, Gene 141
Tardos, Anne 291
Tate, James 409
Terry, Philip 28
Texas, Irving 62, 88, 127, 270
Thesen, Sharon 396
Thomas, Dylan 16, 39, 48, 63, 135, 148, 201, 420
Thompson, George 110, 338, 365
Tobin, Adam 135
Tomkins, Judith 433
Trachtenberg, Amy 438
Trinidad, David 394
Truhlar, Richard 378
Tudor, David 312, 344, 369
Turner, Victor 284, 312, 317, 344, 369
Tyler, Richard 119
Ulmer, Gregory 414
Vallejo, César 394
Vangelisti, Paul 85, 304, 346
Vedantam, Shankar 433
Vendler, Helen 148
Verlaine, Paul 135, 211
Veronica, Angela 106
Vidal, Pierre 438
Viola, Bill 438
Virgil 372
Viscomi, Joseph 339
Vitale, Anna 433
Vitiello, Chris 2
Vonnegut, Kurt 123, 438
Wagner, Catherine 85, 148, 396
Waldman, Anne 114
Waldrop, Rosmarie 479
Walker, Laura 50
Walker, Shawn 50, 433
Wallace, Nicole 115, 396
Warhol, Andy 357
Warner, Jim 176, 194
Washington, George 40, 270, 304, 312, 323, 344, 354, 369, 380, 396, 435
Watson, Scott 143, 148, 304, 396, 435
Watten, Barrett 119, 121, 212, 384, 412, 479
Weinberger, Eliot 179, 252
Weiner, Hannah 479
Weiser, Karen 312, 344, 369
Weiss, Jason 304, 435
Weissman, Robert 243
Weldon, Rebecca 304, 435
Whalen, Philip 17, 38, 310, 444
Wheale, Nigel 125
Whitman, Walt 135, 412, 444
Wieners, John 199

Wilkinson, John 291
Williams, Diane 213
Williams, Jonathan 301, 390
Williams, Paul O. 19, 71, 74, 84, 98, 219, 312, 330, 344, 369, 374, 390, 396, 457
Williams, William Carlos 394
Willis, Elizabeth 85
Wilson, Karen 127, 365, 420, 438
Wilson, Pete 133
Wilson, Steve 127
Windle, Susan 433
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 218
Wolsak, Melissa 199, 431
Wright, C. D. 143, 199, 206
Wright, Richard 99
Wyatt, Thomas 28
Yamanaka, Ann 148
Yau, John 210, 390
Young, Andy 48
Zanzotto, Andrea 85
Zukofsky, Louis 84, 282, 330, 438
Zurawski, Magdalena 199

CONCEPTS

9/11 64, 143, 148, 158, 162
Activism and protest 76, 93, 111, 132, 161, 176, 177, 178, 191, 192, 194, 216, 219, 220, 239, 245, 259, 271, 287, 334, 454
Aesthetics 67, 212, 304, 313, 330, 355, 369, 396, 429
Affect 390
Afghanistan 250
African American poetry 88, 219, 433
Anthologies 16, 23, 41, 84, 86, 96, 99, 148, 189, 246, 260, 272, 281, 282, 302, 304, 307, 346, 360, 365, 375, 380, 395, 396, 430, 435, 443, 446, 459, 469, 476, 479
Appropriation 13, 71, 74, 98, 102, 141, 246, 260, 272, 281, 332, 338, 377, 401, 414, 452
Archives and libraries 14, 35, 88, 95, 144, 147, 148, 153, 162, 206, 219, 292, 307, 328, 339, 344, 365, 390, 396, 399, 401, 403, 411, 417, 446, 469, 479
Autobiography 28, 40, 85, 114, 211, 212, 396, 397, 458, 469
Avant-garde 79, 291, 312, 369, 407
Beat generation 163, 390
Beauty 78, 123, 136, 167, 299, 300, 301
Biography 71, 74, 98, 101, 122, 134, 135, 396, 430
Black Mountain 312, 344, 369, 390
Book announcements 2, 11, 40, 52, 67, 85, 109, 114, 127, 189, 219, 284, 302, 304, 317, 324, 360, 366, 394, 409, 419, 428, 430, 432, 435, 436, 442
Bookstores 9, 24, 27, 32, 33, 108, 135, 153, 210, 219, 260, 302, 304, 328, 341, 346, 360, 371, 376, 383, 395, 397, 401, 425, 435, 438
Calls for submissions 347, 407, 414, 461
Capitalism 15, 176, 194, 283, 291, 316
Censorship 4, 15, 148, 206, 362
Cities 19, 31, 42, 62, 88, 304, 323, 374, 384, 412, 429, 435, 453
Class 4, 15, 18, 30, 31, 42, 151, 208
Collage and montage 53, 248, 274, 280
Conferences and festivals 16, 23, 28, 41, 48, 62, 88, 100, 107, 110, 148, 163, 219, 251, 270, 280, 302, 347, 360, 365, 374, 380, 385, 395, 396, 414, 415, 417, 420, 426, 429, 442, 445, 447, 457, 461, 473
Copyright and permissions 37, 71, 74, 88, 98, 148, 286, 298, 304, 414, 427
Craft 312, 344, 369, 394
Creative writing pedagogy 70, 85, 140, 159, 212, 307, 450
Dada 71, 74, 98, 304
Deconstruction 4, 15, 40, 211
Difficulty 342
Disability 347, 454
Dreams 40, 46, 47, 51, 79, 165, 175, 193, 304, 402, 420, 428, 433, 435
Ecology and ecopoetics 234
Editing 70, 86, 148, 189, 219, 284, 285, 317, 318, 429, 459
Ekphrasis 347, 465, 469
Electronic poetry and hypertext 62, 92, 129, 131, 139, 144, 147, 148, 157, 159, 171, 175, 185, 204, 217, 224, 262, 331, 411, 414, 416, 427, 479
Elegy 340
Empire and imperialism 218, 265, 288, 291, 311, 322, 363, 421, 469, 475
Epic 304, 330, 435
Erasure 325, 479
Ethics 71, 74, 98, 106, 181, 227, 282, 323, 330, 369
Experimental poetry 16, 21, 48, 58, 99, 302, 351, 360, 394
Fascism 156, 158, 457
Feminism 175, 293
Film 45, 71, 74, 85, 98, 136, 140, 148, 208, 233, 268, 297, 304, 314, 345, 347, 353, 365, 380, 391, 396, 401, 408, 430, 435, 439, 466
Fluxus 19, 291, 396
Free speech 453
Free verse 462
Futurism 71, 74, 98, 211, 355, 394, 398
Gender 396
Grants and funding 14, 35, 67, 70, 95, 99, 125, 148, 192, 206, 213, 216, 245, 259, 278, 289, 323, 329, 334, 376, 430, 433
Haiku 99, 419
Humour and satire 85, 136, 148, 291, 474

Ideology 30, 79, 220, 259, 275, 282, 323, 334, 399
Imagism 282, 312, 330, 344, 369
Improvisation 225, 438
Indigenous and Native poetics 323, 365, 396
Interviews 2, 16, 125, 194, 198, 208, 247, 293, 301, 304, 329, 330, 370, 409, 436, 442, 446, 447, 453, 454, 465, 469, 475
Israel and Palestine 338
Jewish poetics 282, 434
Language poetry 212, 234, 374, 384, 407, 412, 444, 470, 473
Latino and Latin American poetry 40, 304, 372, 435
Letters and correspondence 19, 96, 175, 259, 334, 438, 442, 454, 471
List moderation 21, 28, 37, 58, 105, 110, 153, 181, 184, 216, 219, 227, 230, 244, 302, 312, 319, 360, 369, 396, 411, 479
Little magazines 16, 19, 28, 40, 56, 67, 79, 84, 85, 89, 106, 110, 114, 118, 119, 125, 148, 165, 183, 189, 190, 219, 225, 240, 243, 248, 255, 280, 284, 293, 301, 302, 308, 313, 317, 320, 331, 349, 354, 360, 365, 380, 390, 396, 407, 430, 442, 443, 447, 469
Lyric poetry 40, 225, 286, 330, 366, 397, 430, 433
Marxism 156, 158, 242, 265, 283, 288, 316, 319, 322
Memory 28, 76, 162, 165, 260, 280, 304, 340, 355, 384, 419, 421, 430, 435, 473
MFA programs 50, 99, 117, 136, 213, 219, 394, 419, 430
Modernism 48, 122, 135, 136, 210, 211, 291, 330, 396, 428, 467
Mourning and loss 89, 98, 101, 134, 143, 144, 147, 291, 324, 402, 434
Multiculturalism 396
Music and poetry 85, 110, 123, 124, 135, 136, 138, 143, 148, 168, 192, 211, 223, 225, 251, 274, 290, 291, 294, 302, 311, 331, 342, 347, 350, 360, 364, 372, 374, 378, 380, 390, 393, 395, 396, 419, 430, 436, 438, 467
Nationalism 256, 396
Nature 53, 71, 74, 79, 85, 98, 114, 173, 176, 192, 194, 216, 321, 338, 390, 396, 407, 414, 428, 429, 446, 469
Obituary and memorial 92, 143, 151, 344
Objectivism 84, 282, 330, 384, 412
Ontology 212
Oulipo 291, 416
Performance and the poetry reading 32, 48, 107, 110, 114, 117, 149, 163, 225, 289, 348, 356, 365, 374, 395, 419, 433, 469, 479
Phenomenology 274
Philosophy 21, 53, 58, 105, 211, 221, 244, 254, 304, 312, 344, 366, 369, 407, 435
Place and region 162, 396
Poet laureate 43, 45, 46, 47, 51, 68, 73, 77, 82, 83, 90, 97, 102, 112, 124, 433
Poetics 4, 11, 13, 15, 20, 31, 37, 38, 42, 60, 67, 72, 85, 99, 107, 113, 116, 117, 119, 139, 141, 156, 158, 159, 169, 178, 181, 184, 185, 186, 192, 199, 204, 207, 210, 216, 219, 220, 222, 227, 228, 230, 244, 245, 248, 250, 251, 253, 256, 259, 260, 270, 282, 291, 293, 302, 308, 313, 315, 316, 317, 318, 328, 330, 334, 342, 360, 368, 373, 374, 375, 383, 390, 396, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 416, 429, 455, 479
Politics and poetry 330
Post-structuralism 211
Postmodernism 136, 291
Print vs. digital 11, 24, 79, 85, 96, 104, 120, 160, 169, 189, 211, 260, 282, 284, 307, 312, 317, 330, 339, 340, 344, 369, 380, 448, 462, 472
Prizes and awards 16, 28, 40, 50, 99, 148, 206, 219, 242, 284, 317, 324, 380, 390, 395, 396, 401, 420, 432, 433, 445
Procedural and constraint writing 212, 386, 416, 443
Prosody and meter 212, 291, 377
Psychoanalysis 304, 435
Queer poetics 136, 165, 248, 280
Race and poetry 4, 5, 15, 88, 156, 158, 219, 250, 302, 360, 396
Reading announcements 3, 32, 38, 40, 50, 99, 152, 163, 219, 392, 395, 419, 455, 472
Religion and the sacred 40, 88, 114, 148, 151, 168, 186, 212, 234, 242, 282, 283, 291, 312, 316, 339, 344, 369, 378, 383, 434, 469
Representation 92, 259, 334
Reviewing and criticism 16, 28, 45, 46, 47, 48, 51, 71, 74, 79, 84, 98, 99, 119, 121, 125, 136, 148, 162, 202, 206, 210, 211, 212, 219, 246, 260, 272, 279, 281, 284, 285, 290, 291, 295, 302, 313, 317, 318, 330, 341, 344, 348, 355, 356, 358, 359, 360, 366, 375, 394, 395, 396, 397, 401, 424, 430, 433, 434, 439, 443, 455, 457, 459, 462
Revision 394
Science 140, 173, 291, 302, 360
Semiotics 235, 467
Serial poem 291, 324, 330, 442
Sestina 394
Small press publishing 11, 16, 19, 26, 40, 60, 64, 75, 88, 96, 99, 106, 107, 109, 127, 146, 148, 165, 190, 219, 238, 302, 305, 339, 360, 366, 368, 370, 371, 374, 397, 399, 407, 430, 432, 434, 438, 445, 446, 469

Software and code 16, 39, 62, 286, 289
Sonnet 139, 276
Sound poetry 378
Structuralism 211
Subjectivity 19, 106, 122, 148, 211, 219, 278, 302, 332, 360, 396, 414
Sublime 188
Surrealism 13, 48
Terrorism 60
The academy 2, 6, 16, 36, 40, 48, 50, 84, 88, 98, 101, 114, 117, 134, 143, 148, 159, 163, 189, 206, 210, 211, 212, 213, 219, 234, 261, 262, 270, 282, 284, 291, 302, 304, 312, 317, 323, 330, 339, 343, 344, 347, 351, 360, 369, 373, 377, 390, 396, 412, 414, 419, 420, 433, 435, 438, 450, 454, 455, 466
The body 11, 57, 106, 226, 258, 262, 291, 324, 414, 434
The canon 350, 469
The Holocaust 23, 41, 291, 380
The internet 16, 39, 50, 88, 127, 148, 225, 234, 262, 273, 329, 353, 372, 414, 425, 433, 442, 467
The Iraq war 171, 192, 195, 216, 247, 250
The listserv 1, 4, 5, 7, 15, 45, 48, 85, 153, 159, 216, 220, 233, 240, 254, 255, 259, 261, 282, 297, 301, 334, 343, 355, 363, 373, 375, 378, 382, 407, 411, 414, 416, 421, 429, 475, 479
Theatre 60, 71, 74, 85, 98, 107, 136, 206, 212, 238, 242, 312, 347, 365, 369, 374, 394, 396, 438
Translation 6, 13, 36, 37, 85, 86, 88, 106, 107, 114, 125, 135, 136, 148, 213, 248, 276, 280, 286, 291, 299, 300, 302, 312, 344, 347, 360, 369, 374, 430, 442, 457, 459, 467
Vietnam 168, 171, 176, 194, 195, 278, 304, 323, 435
Visual and concrete poetry 63, 89, 391, 399, 408, 439, 444
Visual art 2, 8, 19, 67, 117, 163, 189, 210, 217, 262, 284, 291, 312, 317, 325, 339, 344, 369, 381, 390, 396, 397, 419, 453
Women's writing 8, 262, 457, 476

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 479 in all.

31 AUG 1999

1. Karen Kelley — Re: more power to the affluent poets
2. Kyle Conner — Highwire 9/4
3. jocelyn saidenberg — KRUPSKAYA READING: FARMER AND FARRELL
4. Stephen Ellis — Re: more power to the affluent poets
5. Tom Beckett — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman (addendum)
6. Philip Nikolayev — St. Petersburg Literary Seminars (summer)
7. pete spence — Re: more power to the affluent poets

1 SEP 1999

8. lee ann brown — Some Readings (Lee Ann Brown +)
9. Douglas — Re: NYC Bookstores
10. nuyopoman — Carnivocal
11. Stephen Ellis — Re: Booglit Reviews: Dale Smith Delivers
12. Kimmelman, Burt — Cid Corman (new details)
13. Poetics List Administration — Japanese borrowings / Tony Green
14. Grant Jenkins — Re: Cid Corman's address
15. Mark Prejsnar — poetry, politix and the non-secret of money
16. Alan Sondheim — Press Release: Alan Sondheim - New trAce Virtual Writer-in-Residence (fwd)
17. David Highsmith — Philip Whalen
18. Dodie Bellamy — Re: more power to the affluent poets
19. Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Bway, NYC — September Solo Exhibitions
20. Poetics List — looking rudy / narvis
21. Alan Sondheim — trAce project, loveandwar -
22. jesse glass — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
23. Gary Shapiro — Jewish Lit on Sept 26 in NYC
24. Michael Walsh — Re: NYC Bookstores

2 SEP 1999

25. pete spence — Re: more power to the affluent poets
26. pete spence — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
27. Jack Ruttan — Emile Nelligan's E-mail Address
28. Gary Shapiro — NYC events for Kenyon, Sewanee, Boulevard,Graywolf
29. Walter K. Lew — re Tony Green on Japanese "borrowing"
30. David Baratier — Re: more power to the affluent poets
31. Stephen Ellis — Re: more power to the affluent poets
32. daniel bouchard — Bookcellar Cafe Reading Series
33. Richard Dillon — Re: NYC Bookstores
34. Alan Sondheim — HH
35. jesse glass — Re: Cid Corman's address
36. Maria Damon — Re: St. Petersburg Literary Seminars (summer)
37. Poetics List — UPDATE: The 12hr ISBN-JPEG Project / Brace
38. Poetics List — Philip Whalen / Scalapino
39. Alan Sondheim — Need help for a Millennial Project through trAce!
40. jocelyn saidenberg — Amnasan and Robinson Reading at Small Press Traffic
41. Maria Damon — Re: Jewish Lit on Sept 26 in NYC
42. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: more power to the affluent poets

3 SEP 1999

43. krupoetry — Re: I can't believe it!!!
44. david bromige — more pour to the effluent
45. krupoetry — Re: I can't believe it!!!

46. krupoetry — Re: I can't believe it!!!
47. krupoetry — Re: I can't believe it!!!
48. Bill Lavender — An Other South: Reading and Symposium
49. Lowther,John — contactual poem
50. Al Filreis — Shawn Walker reading/webcast 9/18
51. krupoetry — Re: I can't believe it!!!

4 SEP 1999

52. Susan M. Schultz — I'm going out to catch a Tinfish. You come too.
53. Alan Sondheim — report on the loveandwar project at trAce
54. Philip Nikolayev — IDEAS
55. Lowther,John — contests
56. John Tranter — The Russians are Coming

6 SEP 1999

57. Alan Sondheim — ROSETTA
58. Alan Sondheim — diary etc.
59. Tosh — TamTam Books in the U.K.
60. Mark W Scroggins — Diaeresis Chapbooks
61. maz881 — socially pertinent texts

7 SEP 1999

62. Deena Larsen — Hypertext 00
63. Jim Andrews — Vispo Audio: Some Joseph Keppler work from the 80's
64. Jerrold Shiroma — Deadline for Small Press Listing @ Duration
65. Tom Beckett — Re: more pour to the effluent
66. Poetry Project — open for business
67. David Buuck — SF Bay Area Event
68. david bromige — the lack of a state poet laureate
69. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — hunger and help
70. Maria Damon — jobs fwd
71. Keith Tuma — fwd from Carolyn Burke
72. Poetics List Administration — SJMOSt / "David Larsen" <[redacted]>
73. Mark Weiss — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
74. Maria Damon — Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
75. Tisa Bryant — Re: TamTam Books in the U.K.
76. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
77. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
78. Philip Nikolayev — POETRY AS CODEPENDENCY?

8 SEP 1999

79. Philip Nikolayev — THE NEW ENGLAND POETRY SCENE
80. Alan Sondheim — Bored
81. George Bowering — Re: Need help for a Millennial Project through trAce!
82. George Bowering — Re: I can't believe it!!!
83. George Bowering — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
84. Tina Rotenberg —  Don't miss Carl Rakosi 9/9/99 **
85. Douglas — new books from Sun & Moon and Green Integer
86. Douglas — One more Green Integer title
87. Tom Orange — Olson quotation
88. Alan Sondheim — [BRC-NEWS] Race-ing Justice: The Prison-Industrial Complex (fwd)
89. Christopher Reiner — New Witz
90. Owen Hill — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
91. Brian Stefans — Squib 1
92. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
93. Brian Stefans — Squib 2
94. sylvester pollet — Ezra Pound in Poet's Corner

95. Richard Dillon — Re: Cid Corman's address
96. charssmith — Arcturus Editions: Elizabeth Robinson
97. Bob Grumman — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
98. Karen Kelley — Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
99. megan minka lola camille roy — Saidenberg and Singleton reading at New Langton Arts
100. Tony Green — Re: Olson quotation
101. Wystan Curnow — Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
102. Stephen Vincent — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
103. charssmith — Re: Olson quotation
104. Mark Salerno — Novels of the Sixties
105. Alan Sondheim — Re: Need help for a Millennial Project through trAce!
106. Alan Sondheim — SILICONATHANOR - new magazine project (fwd)
107. megan minka lola camille roy — Euro-San Francisco Poetry festival
108. Catherine Daly — Re: NYC Bookstores
109. r. drake — (fwd) New book by BRENDA COULTAS
110. Brendan Lorber — SWEET REVENGE AT THE ZINC BAR...

9 SEP 1999

111. Patrick Herron — Re: I can't believe it!!!
112. Richard Dillon — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
113. Stephen Ellis — Re: Olson quotation
114. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: LEFT HAND READING SERIES, Thurs. Sept. 16 @ 8:30pm
115. Aldon Nielsen — Tosh Sighting
116. Poetics List — Performance Advertisement - Joseph Hyde & Alaric Sumner / Sumner
117. Poetics List — temple reading schedule / osman
118. Macgregor Card — New England Mags?
119. Poetics List — New Barrett Watten criticism in Qui Parle 11.1 / Nickels
120. Maria Damon — Re: Novels of the Sixties
121. Aldon Nielsen — Re: New Barrett Watten criticism in Qui Parle 11.1 / Nickels
122. A H Bramhall — Backwards from Myrna Loy
123. Billy Little — Re: Novels of the Sixties
124. Billy Little — Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
125. Nate and Jane Dorward — The Poetry of Peter Riley
126. Tosh — Re: Novels of the Sixties
127. Joe Ahearn — Best Texas Writing 2 available
128. Alan Sondheim — Culture and Anarchy
129. Dodie Bellamy — hypertext suggestions
130. Mark Weiss — help

10 SEP 1999

131. Ralph Wessman — Re: New England Mags?
132. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
133. david bromige — a state w/o a laureate's like what happened to yr navel!?
134. Richard Dillon — Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
135. Edward Foster — The greatest American poet from Walt Whitman to Robert Frost
136. Marjorie Perloff — Re: Three Penny Opera in San Francisco
137. David Baratier — Pound typo
138. Philip Nikolayev — THE SEEDED FRIEND OF HUMANKIND IS CASHED
139. Philip Nikolayev — A SONNET OF KNOWLEDGE
140. Philip Nikolayev — SCHOOL

11 SEP 1999

141. Michael Magee — Re: Kenning - shameless plug
142. Susan M. Schultz — call for work for Tinfish

12 SEP 1999

143. Billy Little — Re: Angela Bowering

144. Loss Pequeño Glazier — Fwd: Text Manipulation Tools archive
145. Alan Sondheim — Julu and I
146. Jerrold Shiroma — New Small Press Publications
147. Loss Pequeño Glazier — Fwd: Text Manipulation Tools archive
148. Michael Neff — Electronic Literary Arts Newsletter (ELAN #2)
149. Dan Machlin — Mayer/Machlin Reading
150. Kimmelman, Burt — Cid Corman (more)
151. Thurmon Manson — JIM HUNTER

13 SEP 1999

152. Leonard Brink — Laynie Browne/Norma Cole Reading in S.F.
153. Arielle C. Greenberg — Buffalo area literary stuff?
154. Graham Foust — Lagniappe #3
155. Stephen Vincent — Re: Novels of the Sixties
156. Poetics List Administration — Harry Matthews, Histoire...
157. Maria Damon — Re: hypertext suggestions
158. Poetics List Administration — Harry Matthews, Historie...
159. Taylor Brady — Re: hypertext suggestions
160. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger — Re: Novels of the Sixties
161. Michael Neff — Re: I can't believe it!!!
162. Philip Nikolayev — Re: call for work for Tinfish
163. Kyle Conner — Highwire reading @ 3PM
164. shana — Re: Novels of the Sixties
165. jocelyn saidenberg — Harryman and Lu read at SPT
166. Emily Lloyd — Writing Through Ally
167. Alan Sondheim — untitled

14 SEP 1999

168. Billy Little — Re: Novels of the Sixties
169. Stephen Ellis — Re: Novels of the Sixties
170. david bromige — Novels of the 60's
171. Lawrence Upton. — Re: I can't believe it!!!
172. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger — Re: I can't believe it!!!
173. hassen — Re: Culture and Anarchy
174. Poetry Project — novel of the 60s
175. Steven Shoemaker — Re: hypertext suggestions
176. Patrick Herron — US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
177. Mark Weiss — Re: I can't believe it!!!
178. Taylor Brady — Re: I can't believe it!!!
179. Karen Kelley — Snail Mails Needed
180. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Novels of the 60's
181. Kali Tal — Re: I can't believe it!!!
182. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: I can't believe it!!!
183. Mike Kelleher — [Fwd: untitled or magazine 3]
184. Brian Lennon — Re: I can't believe it!!!
185. William Marsh — Re: hypertext suggestions
186. Stephen Ellis — Re: I can't believe it!!!
187. Aldon Nielsen — Re: novel of the 60s
188. K.Silem Mohammad — Re: Novels of the 60's
189. Aldon Nielsen — M.B. Tolson
190. Leonard Brink — instress.com
191. Michael Neff — Re: I can't believe it!!!
192. Michael Neff — Re: I can't believe it!!!
193. A H Bramhall — more unimportant matter
194. Michael Neff — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
195. Michael Neff — Re: I can't believe it!!!
196. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!

197. pete spence — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
198. charssmith — Re: I can't believe it!!!
199. John Kimball — Village Eight
200. Aaron Fewell — Re: Novels of the Sixties
201. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — [Fwd: Re: reading]
202. Thomas Bell — Re: Novels of the 60's

15 SEP 1999

203. Katherine Lederer — Good time
204. Robert Kendall — Re: hypertext suggestions
205. david bromige — novels of the 60's
206. Jeffrey Jullich — Cid Corman (more) -Reply
207. Ann Vickery — Trying to Trace Barbara Baracks
208. Elizabeth Treadwell — Novels of the Sixties
209. daniel bouchard — Re: believe it!!!
210. Steven Clay — Robert Creeley & Elsa Dorfman: En Famille
211. Brian Stefans — Review
212. Brian Stefans — Review
213. Arielle C. Greenberg — readings at Syracuse, fall 1999
214. Christina Milletti — Re: I can't believe it!!!
215. Christina Milletti — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
216. Taylor Brady — Re: I can't believe it!!!
217. Rachel Loden — Re: hypertext suggestions
218. KENT JOHNSON — Will the sun rise tomorrow?
219. Maria Damon — Poetry As Cultural Critique Symposium, Nov. 5 & 6
220. Joan Houlihan — Re: I can't believe it!!!
221. A H Bramhall — I'm With Stupid
222. Catherine Daly — Re: Trying to Trace Barbara Baracks
223. Billy Little — Re: novels of the 60's
224. Dodie Bellamy — Re: hypertext suggestions
225. Christopher Reiner — L.A. Reading
226. Michael Neff — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
227. Michael Neff — Re: I can't believe it!!!
228. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
229. Michael Neff — CAN I believe it?
230. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
231. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
232. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
233. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
234. Thurmon Manson — Re: I can't believe it!!!
235. Alan Sondheim — For
236. George Bowering — Re: Novels of the Sixties
237. George Bowering — Re: believe it!!!

16 SEP 1999

238. Kevin Killian — volunteers sought for SPT soiree
239. Mark Weiss — Re: I can't believe it!!!
240. John Tranter — Bunting in Persia
241. Mark Prejsnar — supporting murder
242. Michael Neff — US/Indonesia: I CAN'T Believe it!
243. Taylor Brady — Naming Names
244. Patrick Herron — Re: I can't believe it!!!
245. Patrick Herron — Re: I can't believe it!!!
246. Lowther, John — Imagining Language
247. Patrick Herron — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
248. Poetics List Administration — Novels of the 60´s / Thomas Dorow
249. Lowther, John — listings ?

250. Poetics List Administration — Re: e. timor, s. korea, afghanistan, kuwait, iraq, panama, / ...
251. Poetics List Administration — Montreal and Oslo URLs - Nekyia, Hyde/Sumner / Sumner
252. Karen Kelley — Eliot Weinberger/Dan Featherston/Cydney Chadwick
253. Poetics List Administration — alternative irish poetry distribution / Mills
254. Mark Prejsnar — the timid and Timor
255. Mark Prejsnar — bunting for a base hit...
256. Michael Neff — The First Church of J'Accuse The American Satan
257. Michael Neff — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
258. Mark Weiss — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
259. Taylor Brady — Re: I can't believe it!!!
260. Taylor Brady — Re: Imagining Language
261. Brian Lennon — Killer liberals? (was Re: I can't believe it!!!)
262. Carolyn Guertin — Re: hypertext suggestions
263. Aldon Nielsen — Re: novels of the 60's
264. Aldon Nielsen — Re: I can't believe it!!!
265. KENT JOHNSON — Beating drums
266. pete spence — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
267. pete spence — Re: believe it!!!
268. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
269. pete spence — Re: US/Indonesia: I CAN'T Believe it!
270. Betsy Andrews — Info on Hadrami poetics conference?
271. pete spence — Re: I can't believe it!!!
272. derek beaulieu — Re: Imagining Language
273. Christina Milletti — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor

17 SEP 1999

274. david bromige — Painful Pages (was Novels, 60s)
275. Aaron Fewell — Re: I can't believe it!!!
276. Garrett Kalleberg — The Transcendental Friend 11 - September 1999
277. Aaron Fewell — Re: Novels of the Sixties
278. david bromige — re novels held back for the 60's
279. Arielle C. Greenberg — Re: Imagining Language
280. Pierre Joris — RE: Novels of the 60´s / Thomas Dorow
281. Pierre Joris — Re: Imagining Language
282. Hank Lazer — Objectivist Nexus - Discount Offer
283. Michael Neff — Marxists: You Have Nothing to Lose But Your Pain
284. Al Filreis — Re: M.B. Tolson
285. Tom Orange — Imagining Language
286. Philip Nikolayev — MODULO FEELING
287. Patrick Herron — Resend: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
288. KENT JOHNSON — The sound of drums
289. Tenney Nathanson — POG
290. Billy Little — Re: Review
291. Brian Stefans — John Wilkinson, Anne Tardos
292. Elizabeth Treadwell — a mild request re political discussions
293. Elizabeth Treadwell — Double Lucy update
294. Billy Little — Re: Flats?/novels of the sixties
295. Jeffrey Jullich — Review -Reply
296. Michael Neff — E TIMOR: Point Made by Nairn
297. Tony Green — Fw: Allan Nairn detained
298. Tony Green — Fw: news of Allan Nairn

18 SEP 1999

299. Alan Sondheim — writing the bad text
300. Alan Sondheim — best version. Dear Chris, this is the right version. Love, Alan.
301. Creelea Henderson — Re: Bunting in Persia
302. Tisa Bryant — SF Book Festival Panel Discussions

303. Kimmelman, Burt — cid corman (still more)
304. James Brook — city lights books - fall events & readings

19 SEP 1999

305. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Announcements deadline
306. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
307. Lowther, John — IMAGINING LANGUAGE
308. William Slaughter — Mudlark Announcement
309. Philip Nikolayev — TERVOUKLE: IDENTITY
310. David Highsmith — Philip Whalen / Scalapino

20 SEP 1999

311. Mills, Billy — Novels of the 60's
312. Ron Silliman — MC Richards
313. Poetics List Administration — A Call for a Paper
314. Charles Bernstein — Rudy Burckhardt Memorial
315. Poetics List Administration — Novels of the 60's
316. Poetics List Administration — Marxists: You Have Nothing to Lose But Your Pain
317. Poetics List Administration — Re: M.B. Tolson
318. Poetics List Administration — Imagining Language
319. KENT JOHNSON — A drum on my head
320. Jacques Debrot — Re: ANNOUNCING 9 TO 0
321. Patrick Herron — Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
322. Patrick Herron — Re: Beating drums
323. Christina Milletti — How US trained butchers of Timor article in Lon. Obs.
324. Robert Majzels — New Book by Erin Mouré
325. david bromige — Twenty Years Ago Today
326. Alan Sondheim — Metastasis
327. charssmith — Re: Imagining Language
328. Arielle C. Greenberg — Buffalo gals (or guys)?
329. Patrick Herron — Plot against E Timor/UN lets Indonesian troops stay/1975 murder of journal...
330. Thomas Bell — Re: Objectivist Nexus - Discount Offer
331. herr c. — [theremin music] a storyspace e-journal
332. Lowther, John — backchannel violence
333. Stephen Ellis — Re: Grenier :that:
334. Joan Houlihan — Re: I can't believe it!!!

21 SEP 1999

335. George Bowering — Re: bunting for a base hit...
336. George Bowering — Re: Novels of the Sixties
337. Jeffrey Jullich — Re: Novels of the Sixties -Reply
338. anastasios kozaitis — Grassroots International East Timor Campaign
339. Matt Kirschenbaum — Blake Archive's September Update
340. Brian Stefans — Steve Evans' Notes to Poetry on Arras
341. Lowther, John — a certain class of volumes
342. A H Bramhall — getting ready to have been frightened
343. Catherine Daly — Peirce poemlet
344. charssmith — M. C. Richards
345. Dan Waber — Re: listings ?
346. James Brook — italian poetry & LA writing at city lights
347. Sarah Hreha — Call for Papers
348. daniel bouchard — POETRY READING IN GLOUCESTER, MASS.
349. Jacques Debrot — Re: 9-0 call for work
350. Billy Little — baraka/blues for allen

22 SEP 1999

351. Hazel Smith — (no subject)
352. Stephen Ellis — Re: Grenier :that:
353. Michael Neff — The POETRY INTO FILM Competition
354. Jordan Davis — BIVOUAC #2 call for work
355. Jacques Debrot — Re: Reviews
356. daniel bouchard — POETRY READING IN GLOUCESTER, MASS. (with date)
357. Jacques Debrot — Re: Pretentious Picturea
358. Chicago Review — Tom Pickard
359. Brian Stefans — Things
360. Maria Damon — Re: SF Book Festival Panel Discussions
361. Maria Damon — IMAGINING query LANGUAGE
362. Michael Neff — ACLU, WDS and Plaintiffs
363. KENT JOHNSON — A crown of iron
364. Michael Magee — COMBO party - Sat. Sept. 25, 6pm!
365. Carol L. Hamshaw — EEC Website Launch and Fundraiser
366. Christopher Reiner — New book by Lisa Lubasch
367. Pritchett,Patrick — Creeley on Wall Street
368. William Marsh — Logo Lagoon from PBP
369. Richard Dillon — Re: MC Richards
370. daniel bouchard — East Timor
371. David Kirschenbaum — Anyone know about Detroit-area readings and bookstores?
372. Poetry Project — next week & stuff for sale
373. Poetics List Administration — poetics list backlog - please read
374. Poetics List Administration — Euro-SF Poetry Festival / Saidenberg
375. Taylor Brady — Enough (was RE: I can't believe it!!!)
376. Grant Jenkins — The DC Scene
377. Philip Nikolayev — A POLEMIC
378. Nate and Jane Dorward — Re: Things
379. Mark Weiss — Help!

23 SEP 1999

380. Gary Shapiro — Jewish literary evening adds "Women of the Wall"
381. Ron Silliman — It was 20 years ago today...
382. KENT JOHNSON — Kevin Magee's work
383. Poetics List Administration — Re: Anyone know about Detroit-area readings and bookstores?
384. david bromige — Verbal Eyes at The Farm
385. Mark Weiss — San Francisco Book Festival
386. Jay Sanders — 2 queries
387. Michael Magee — COMBO 4 - it's solid gold!!!
388. Tom Beckett — Re: getting ready to have been frightened
389. Alan Sondheim — ORDERS, BEDE, OTHERS
390. Ron Silliman — Creeley in the WSJ
391. pete spence — Re: The POETRY INTO FILM Competition

24 SEP 1999

392. Dan Machlin — Mobile Poems
393. Owen Hill — Moe's Events
394. Poetry Project — writing workshops at the Poetry Project
395. R Democracy — Great Reading at Bluestockings!
396. Carol L. Hamshaw — Roy Kiyooka Conference
397. Tosh — Rain Taxi's review for Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov
398. Alan Sondheim — What is to Be Done?
399. derek beaulieu — new from housepress: Lawrence Upton's "Sta!"

25 SEP 1999

400. R Democracy — Re: If it's safe, it doesn't matter how much we spray

401. Carol L. Hamshaw — [Fwd: The Capilano Review Contest]
402. Alan Sondheim — deaths in storms

26 SEP 1999

403. Jerrold Shiroma — New @ Duration Online
404. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Not poetry

27 SEP 1999

405. Katherine Lederer — Black tie
406. Poetics List — About A.BACUS / Ganick
407. Poetics List — call for work, subscribers! / Ganick
408. Poetics List — Vispo Audio: Stephen Reid and Jack-Rabbit Parole / Andrews
409. Poetics List — New Rain Taxi Features Auster, Dao, Granary Books, Scalapino / Sullivan
410. Poetics List — help / Tanoury
411. Poetics List — changes to list archive interface
412. David Zauhar — Re: Verbal Eyes at The Farm
413. Dirk Rowntree — Mayor against Brooklyn Museum
414. Alan Sondheim — CALL FOR PAPERS: trAce Conference, July 2000, UK.
415. Mark Weiss — Re: San Francisco Book Festival
416. Taylor Brady — Re: 2 queries
417. Carol L. Hamshaw — Videopoem Deadline extended
418. Lowther, John — Irony
419. Kyle Conner — HIGHWIRE Reading
420. Jerry McGuire — Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest
421. Michael Neff — Re: A crown of iron
422. Philip Nikolayev — AMERICAN FARMERS VISIT A RUSSIAN COLLECTIVE FARM
423. Philip Nikolayev — INSECTS
424. Philip Nikolayev — FORGIVING
425. justice4all — STOP INTERNET CHAIN LETTERS!!!
426. Jim White — Re: Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest
427. Lawrence Upton. — Writers Forum
428. Alan Sondheim — Lauren
429. Joe Amato — Re: It was 20 years ago today...
430. Katherine Lederer — D-double H-h-happiness

28 SEP 1999

431. David Dowker — The Alterran Poetry Assemblage #4
432. Jill Stengel — reading announcement, sf
433. Richard Frey — Yolanda Wisher at NOTcoffeeHouse 2125 Chestnut 10/3 at 1 pm
434. Pritchett,Patrick — publication announcement
435. James Brook — october events @ city lights bookstore
436. Poetry Project — Ferlinghetti, Sanders & others
437. Lowther, John — Email for Rick Snyder
438. jocelyn saidenberg — SPT's 5th Annual Literary Soirée and Auction and 25th Anniversary Cele…
439. Thomas Bell — Re: The POETRY INTO FILM Competition
440. George Bowering — Re: Langwitch poets
441. Rachel Loden — I can't believe it!!!
442. John Tranter — Announcing Jacket # 8
443. KENT JOHNSON — Mark Nowak (re: 2 queries)
444. Ron Silliman — Aural Eyes at The Farm
445. Lowther, John — Re: Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest
446. Ron Silliman — Jacket #8
447. Ron Silliman — More on Jacket (or maybe less)

29 SEP 1999

448. Chris Stroffolino — ET AL STROFFOLINAN

449. Jerrold Shiroma — Barry Alpert
450. derek beaulieu — writing canada into the millennium
451. Jeffrey Jullich — CHAIN no. 7 theme?
452. MAYHEW — an informal survey
453. Dirk Rowntree — Mayor against museum
454. Michael W Bibby — Position Announcement
455. Chicago Review — American Poetry at the Millennium Series
456. MAYHEW — aural eyes at the farm
457. KENT JOHNSON — Re: More on Jacket (or maybe less)
458. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: CHAIN no. 7 theme?
459. KENT JOHNSON — (Fwd) Query for Russian anthology
460. raea100900 — Re: address request
461. Joel M Bettridge — Ronald Johnson Conference
462. Bob Grumman — Re: an informal survey
463. A H Bramhall — A Duly Savage Statement
464. Tosh — Re: Mayor against museum

30 SEP 1999

465. Karen Kelley — Re: Jacket #8 / Perchik-Baratier interview : ~reply
466. Walter K. Lew — re Judith Barry
467. miekal and — cybele introduces jouissance as a formiddable concept (fwd)
468. Alan Sondheim — ~VM1
469. Jeffrey Jullich — Jacket #8 / Perchik-Baratier interview : ~reply
470. david bromige — Ends in N : Sheesh, it was a joke, not a system
471. Robert Archambeau — Fiction/Literature Position
472. Lowther, John — Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)
473. KENT JOHNSON — LaNgpo's chest hair
474. Judy McDonough — mayhew's survey
475. Jamie Perez — Re: Jacket #8 / Perchik-Baratier interview : ~reply
476. Kathy Lou Schultz — Two queries (one Perloff, one Hunt)
477. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: to the Nth degree
478. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: Barry Alpert
479. Richard Dillon — Re: changes to list archive interface

1. Karen Kelley
Re: more power to the affluent poets
Tue 31 Aug 1999

I think perhaps some "attitude" was spawned from the line: "But most poets really don't got much...."

I could only assume that the emphasis was on "real" poets. But we have been around this class bush repeatedly, as someone pointed out.

I think Allen Bramhall's post was a call to action, and practical action at that: If there are 700 people on the list & everyone gives $1.00 (minus, perhaps 10 or so people who don't have a dollar to spare), then we have 690 more than Cid started out with. If people who can spare five do, and those who can spare twenty do, etc., well then, that'd be a tidy sum.

And an admirable social project.

Those who can't, can't, and needn't.

Is there an address where we can send a check?

>
> As someone who's lived plenty close to the poverty line over some decades,
> i find the tone of some of these posts (not having extra money is > "carping") a bit peculiar, not to say weird.... Do these folks live in the > same universe as me/ (or more to the point, the same social system??)
>
> --Mp
>

↑ Index

2. Kyle Conner
Highwire 9/4
Tue 31 Aug 1999

---

for your listening pleasure...THIS SATURDAY at

HI-G--H--W-I-RE **********

Justin Vitiello
/
Eddie Berrigan

+++++++
these things happen usually every other Saturday at Highwire Gallery, 139 n. 2nd st., 8PM
this one in particular is Saturday, September 4 you can bring your own beverage if ya like about them:

Justin Vitiello is professor of Italian at Temple University and is a scholar of immigrant history and accomplished interviewer.

Eddie Berrigan's new book, _DISARMING MATTER_, was just published by Owl Press and sings darkly, murkily.

****
Here are some bites:

from Vitiello's "prologue: migrant gamble
-pro nobis"

our woptrain ground seaboard warps, plumbic beaches and lupus bluffs

(hostless valleys of Penn Railroad shadows

skulking scrofulous vacua:

Ball-tee-
more New Ark Providence Mystic Full-o'- delphia

****

UMBRELLAS

Umbrellas are guns in dress. Fold up your umbrella & face up to your death. Surrender your crown & fold it, dirty laundered. Making love to chickenshit authority in one way & using your head to make of it. Falling in love with the magazines. What mistake can we live with now & nothing else shall we fall prey to or pray to misgivings, shielded by a bubble of slave & wonder who is who. Who knows a truth seeks themselves in others & applies it through failures. Umbrellas are encasements, reverse caskets, eyeballs in inverted wastepaper baskets.

-Eddie Berrrigan

↑ Index

3. jocelyn saidenberg
KRUPSKAYA READING: FARMER AND FARRELL
Tue 31 Aug 1999

KRUPSKAYA PRESENTS:

a reading with Steven Farmer and Dan Farrell

Wednesday, September 8, 6-7:30 pm, free
San Francisco Main Libray, Civic Center, 100 Larkin Street

Please join us.

All KRUPSKAYA publications, including Medieval by Steven Farmer and Last Instance by Dan Farrell, will be available at the reading.

_____

Jocelyn Saidenberg

KRUPSKAYA
P.O. Box 420249
San Francisco, CA 94142-0249
[redacted]

↑ Index

4. Stephen Ellis
Re: more power to the affluent poets
Tue 31 Aug 1999

Mark, We DO live on the same planet. Twenty dollars was an arbitrary figure I cldn't (easily) afford either. The point is elsewhere - money is secret. So what gets done with it remains to be judged on the basis of what is produced by the spending of, which seems like a very false sort of objectivity - where did the money come from? Who is the spending of it for - will we be living under a certain kind of roof or umbrella because of it? Or the really Big question, who is money for? If for all, then how come so many have far less than those who have more? Or did I answer my own question with the word that comes just now to mind, scarcity? The idea that there's only so much of anything, and no more beyond than what can be taken, legally or not, from those who would so easily or unknowingly let it go. Strange,

I agree, valorization running parallel to legal increment so that in some end, nothing will be free. & ONLY nothing.

S E

ps, strange, too, to find this addendum, written to a longer initial response, appearing on the List, while the first pc didn't ... is that censorship or just plain ineffectual smarts before the blinking panel?

> From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: more power to the affluent poets
> Date: Tue, 31 Aug 1999 15:20:20 -0400
>
> Welll. There seem to be lots of folks on the list who are certain just > how affluent others are... I do know many people who cannot spare $20 for > cid corman, if they are going to have the bills pd and a modicum of > groceries. Then there are the many folks who cdn't do it without dropping > support they are giving to a poetry publication (which would cause the > ceasing of that publication). And as i'm working class and a socialist, > there have always been plenty of folks i know who have commited themselves > to paying dues or support to a political party or a union...and that again > is not something you take on lightly: it involves the ultimate > possibility of hope for all of us.
>
> A benefit project sounds nice, and those who are in a position to donate > the labor, creativity and capital, should certainly do it.. (but i didn't > dis that idea, to begin with, obviously...)
>
> As someone who's lived plenty close to the poverty line over some decades,
> i find the tone of some of these posts (not having extra money is > "carping") a bit peculiar, not to say weird.... Do these folks live in the > same universe as me/ (or more to the point, the same social system??)
>
> --Mp
>
> On Mon, 30 Aug 1999, Stephen Ellis wrote:
>
> "Really don't got much" means how much, exactly? We're all a bunch of > carpers, the whole human race, when it comes to money. That you (we) > don't > have much goes without saying; on a more positive note, how much, in fact,

do you (we all, any of us) actually have? If everyone on the List contributed $20 to Corman or any -thing or -body else, who - aside from those who would insist FOREVER that "they really cld't afford it" - really CLDN'T afford it? It's weird, trying to get money from others for projects thought up by others than themselves. Deconstructive resolve only goes so far (one step forward and two steps back forever toward the outstretched hand, it seems); the Virtual Person we all rely on to invisibly come through when the rent's due, when you're the man who owes $532 on his gas bill, when there're no onions in sight, balks immeasurably when faced with the semblance of simple friendship involved in a mutualist ensemble of quantifiable grammar (to be published), because somebody in the end is gonna have to pay, and friendship's s'posed

to be free, shit,

so let's all go home and do our singular art. Alone.

S E

From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Date: Fri, 27 Aug 1999 14:27:51 -0400

This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But *most poets really don't got much....*

On Thu, 26 Aug 1999, A H Bramhall wrote:

Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry

community reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction.
(Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's
the point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep?
statements about community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene,
the fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know community from horseshit so name the social club something else.
you're waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all.
well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is
and has been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with
the government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him
money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen
Bramhall$$$

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

5. Tom Beckett

Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman (addendum)

Tue 31 Aug 1999

In a message dated 8/31/99 3:08:30 PM Eastern Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<< "Really don't got much" means how much, exactly? We're all a bunch of carpers, the whole human race, when it comes to money. That you (we) don't have much goes without saying; on a more positive note, how much, in fact, do you (we all, any of us) actually have? If everyone on the List contributed $20 to Corman or any -thing or -body else, who - aside from those who would insist FOREVER that "they really cld't afford it" - really CLDN'T afford it? It's weird,

>>

Mr. Ellis's two recent posts (re: ponying up for what one ostensibly "believes" in), along with Mr. Bramhall's Ur post, are the most socially pertinent texts I've seen displayed here in the last six months.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

6. Philip Nikolayev

St. Petersburg Literary Seminars (summer)

Tue 31 Aug 1999

I will be teaching at the next St. Peterburg Summer Literary Seminars (for English speakers/writers). The program is affiliated with the University of Cincinnati (USA) and Herzen University (Russia).

Program seminars include:

Fiction 1 & 2
Non-Fiction
Poetry
Playwriting/Screenwriting
International Dramaturgy
Literary and Philisophical Discourse in St. Petersburg
Untranslatable Russia

More info at http://www.sumlitsem.com/ -- please take a look if interested.

Philip Nikolayev
[redacted]

↑ Index

7. pete spence
Re: more power to the affluent poets
Tue 31 Aug 1999

>Welll. There seem to be lots of folks on the list who are certain just >how affluent others are... I do know many people who cannot spare $20 for >cid corman, if they are going to have the bills pd and a modicum of >groceries. Then there are the many folks who cdn't do it without dropping >support they are giving to a poetry publication (which would cause the >ceasing of that publication>--Mp
>
,,i agree with the above, but at least if one "gave" in this cause it wouldn't be to get through the eye of the needle, maybe some situation can be put in place where writers who suddenly are found to be in real need could be helped in some way, i dunno,, but as someone who even when budgeting finds two or three days in any week when the house keys is all thats rattling in my pocket i can understand //pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

8. lee ann brown
Some Readings (Lee Ann Brown +)
Wed 1 Sep 1999

Lee Ann Brown
Reading and singing her summer poems

Wednesday September 1st

6pm-6:30 (Dance troupe earlier)
Union Square (outside in park) NYC

Barnes & Noble Summer-in-the-Square info: [redacted]

bring your picnic

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Richmond VA
Saturday Sept 4th at night

821 Bakery Cafe
Coby Batty - poem/ musics (Coby & Watty)
+
Lee Ann Brown - poems & songs

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Sunday afternoon
September 12 TRIBES GALLERY 3pm on

285 East 3rd Street
BOOK PARTY & READING
by LEE ANN BROWN, MERVYN TAYLOR & MARTIN ESPADA
info: [redacted] Steve Cannon

++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++

Mark your calendars:

Eleni Sikelianos & Lee Ann Brown
Women Poets at BARNARD

Thursday Oct 7th 8pm
Sulzberger Parlor, Barnard Hall
Barnard College, NYC
(W.116th Street & BW)

Thanks!

↑ Index

9. Douglas
Re: NYC Bookstores
Wed 1 Sep 1999

St. Marks buys copies of all Sun & Moon and Green Integer titles. However, they only purchase 1 or 2 copies, and these, of course, are immediately sold. Consequently, it probably is almost impossible to find our poetry there. If only they could be encouraged to immediately reorder. I think it's important that customers speak to the buyers and request a reorder. That is the only way bookstores will change their patterns.

Douglas Messerli

Michael Walsh wrote:
>
> Dear Ramez Qureshi,

>
> St Marks Books (3rd Ave and 9th St) will usually have > Sulfur (and other such periodicals) -- in the back, on > the right, across from the remainders. Their poetry books > are not so good, but they sometimes have some things, > and so might have Swenson.
>
> Good luck,
> Michael Walsh

↑ Index

10. nuyopoman
Carnivocal
Wed 1 Sep 1999

On my fourth attempt at scoring CARNIVOCAL via General Distribution I was informed that the CD will not be available till sometime in 2000. Could someone backchannel me with info?

Bob Holman
[redacted]

↑ Index

11. Stephen Ellis
Re: Booglit Reviews: Dale Smith Delivers
Wed 1 Sep 1999

David, A minor correction: Dale Smith's "Arabia Felix" (a terrific short read, I agree) doesn't detail a trip through Ethiopia, as his mention of "Mike's Ethiopian cafe" might suggest. Rather, the mention of "al-Tihama" and "Shara Sana'a" (Sana'a Street) indicate the trip is through Yemen, Sana'a being its capital, & the Tihama, a range of mountains there. Also, chewing "qat" - a leaf that gives a mild sensation of relaxation & heightened awareness - is something of a national pasttime in Yemen, complete with late-morning last-minute bargaining at open markets for a big bunch of the stuff at a good price, to provide a decent means for passing the afternoon and evening. Ie., the good life. Dale in fact shld send a few copies to Mike's Ethiopian Cafe, just so they'll know that he noticed them there while THERE, as well as there later, from here. Best, Stephen Ellis

> From: David Kirschenbaum <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Booglit Reviews: Dale Smith Delivers

Date: Tue, 31 Aug 1999 12:44:55 EDT

Dale Smith Delivers

Dale Smith is one of the best editors I know. His work as a coeditor, first with Mike & Dale's Younger Poets, and now, with Skanky Possum, always gives me all the people whose words I want in my bookcase in one compact litzine. I've scanned his postings, but until this past Saturday, had never read his poetry.
Saturday, a package of two books from Joshua Beckman's 811 Books (checks payable to Joshua Beckman/ YWCA/ Writer's Voice/ 350 North First Avenue/ Phoenix, AZ 85003) arrived in my mailbox between my trips from the Yankees game to the tailor.
I read Dale Smith's new book, "Arabia Felix," while walking through my Chelsea apartment's backyard, past the playground, down the alley, and to the drug store to develop some photographs. I finished the book as I crossed 24th Street on my way by the playground again, and was sad. I never wanted more pages in a poetry chapbook in my life. In "Arabia Felix," Dale Smith delivers. (5x7", 8-page black ink on ivory paper guts, + cover with black and blue ink and uncredited cover artwork on ivory paper, $3.)
He details an Ethiopian trip, captures little pictures and takes apart his own self-importance.
Here's a few lines:

"Some men gather
to ease the body
of a boy from the hood
of a Land Cruiser,
the glass like ice
on his blood."

And after detailing pieces of his visit, he sums it up with:

"Rats that night
ran under table,
a German tourist told me
'you have to conquer
each city for yourself.'"

Dale Smith's "Arabia Felix" is simply the most beautiful combination of words and book design I have seen in a poetry chapbook in a long time.

Be Good,
David A. Kirschenbaum, editor
Booglit

> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

12. Kimmelman, Burt
Cid Corman (new details)
Wed 1 Sep 1999

Here is the latest news, from John Phillips for anyone wishing to help Cid if possible:

Dear Burt

I said I'd get in touch soon as I had more information on how to send Cid some help. Have been hoping a collection point in the US would be set up, but no go as yet. And since I had word from Cid today saying if anyone wishes to help they shouldn't wait, that things are bad - now - here goes.

As said, a cheque isn't that good for anything under $500 (due to $35 charged for cashing). The best method is to transfer cash (yen if possible) direct to his bank. (You have the address / details. [i.e., from a previous message: banking details, which he tells me is good for "dollar, yen, or check transfers": Cid Corman c/o Kyoto Shinyo Kinko Bank, Omuro Branch, Omuro Ukyo-ku, Kyoto [redacted] Japan; account number: 095-0010328; bank tel: [redacted].])

For smaller amounts sending cash in perhaps a registered envelope / hidden by carbon paper + Cid's details should do it.

So, if you pass word around to anyone, that's what's to be passed.

Hope you're well
John

↑ Index

13. Poetics List Administration
Japanese borrowings / Tony Green
Wed 1 Sep 1999

had to reformat this message. Chris

--

From: "Tony Green" <[redacted]>
Date: Wed, 1 Sep 1999 08:40:36 +1200

Thinking of Japanese Surrealism:

is there really something ~essentially~ Japanese about cultural borrowing on large-scale not having much sense of the ~original intentions~ of what is borrowed.

I cannot presently think of any such anywhere. Put it down to usual process of translation or appropriation.

--- in the land of incessant cultural borrowings

Tony Green

↑ Index

14. Grant Jenkins
Re: Cid Corman's address
Wed 1 Sep 1999

Burt,

John in his latest letter says that we have Corman's address, but I can't find it in the archive. For everyone's benefit, would you please repost that information?

Thanks

> As said, a cheque isn't that good for anything under $500 (due to $35 charged for cashing). The best method is to transfer cash (yen if possible) direct to his bank. (You have the address / details. [i.e., from a previous message: banking details, which he tells me is good for "dollar, yen, or check transfers": Cid Corman c/o Kyoto Shinyo Kinko Bank, Omuro Branch, Omuro Ukyo-ku, Kyoto [redacted] Japan; account number: 095-0010328; bank tel: [redacted].])
>
> For smaller amounts sending cash in perhaps a registered envelope / hidden by carbon paper + Cid's details should do it.

↑ Index

15. Mark Prejsnar
poetry, politix and the non-secret of money
Wed 1 Sep 1999

I had resoved not to get any more entangled in this.... (i have back-channeled several folks for that reason.) Better to talk more directly about poetry and poetix (i have more than once in the past 3 years been cited by others for dragging the list pretty far into social and political issues...for all that many listians agree that these things are not totally separable from poetix..)

But this is so pointedly addressed to me, maybe i should respond..

Five dollars, or 20 dollars, from everyone on the List, would be a stopgap for most families i know who are struggling with very tough economic circumstances.

If we lived in a different kind of society, cid corman and family (and various acquaintances of mine, and plenty of folks i don't personally know) would not be in the specific conditions they are in.

If i understand the post quoted below, (i'm not sure i do) i can certainly offer a public suggestion of political and social formations that could use 5 or 20 dollars from each of us. By opposing capitalism, or at least its worst excesses, they are trying to alter the circumstances we have been talking about. (..main problem with these groups is, they are too eager to integrate themselves into "respectable" society, and often are not opposed to capitalist society as such..reformism always finds its way into a cul-de-sac; but we have to work with what we have)

Giving money to specific individuals who need it is a good thing and i don't oppose it..If you can afford it, as many can't, by all means i encourage list members to do it. But if we are talking about being non-secret about money....i believe people's money is more generative if used to further political struggle.

--Mp

On Tue, 31 Aug 1999, Stephen Ellis wrote:

> Mark,
> We DO live on the same planet. Twenty dollars was an arbitrary figure I cldn't (easily) afford either. The point is elsewhere - money is secret. So what gets done with it remains to be judged on the basis of what is produced by the spending of, which seems like a very false sort of objectivity - where did the money come from? Who is the spending of it for - will we be living under a certain kind of roof or umbrella because of it? Or the really Big question, who is money for? If
>
> for all, then how come so many have far less than those who have more? Or did I answer my own question with the word that comes just now to mind, scarcity? The idea that there's only so much of anything, and no more beyond than what can be taken, legally or not, from those who would so easily or unknowingly let it go. Strange,
>
> I agree, valorization running parallel to legal increment so that in some end, nothing will be free. & ONLY nothing.

S E

ps, strange, too, to find this addendum, written to a longer initial response, appearing on the List, while the first pc didn't ... is that censorship or just plain ineffectual smarts before the blinking panel?

From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: more power to the affluent poets
Date: Tue, 31 Aug 1999 15:20:20 -0400

Welll. There seem to be lots of folks on the list who are certain just how affluent others are... I do know many people who cannot spare $20 for cid corman, if they are going to have the bills pd and a modicum of groceries. Then there are the many folks who cdn't do it without dropping support they are giving to a poetry publication (which would cause the ceasing of that publication). And as i'm working class and a socialist, there have always been plenty of folks i know who have commited themselves to paying dues or support to a political party or a union...and that again is not something you take on lightly: it involves the ultimate possibility of hope for all of us.

A benefit project sounds nice, and those who are in a position to donate the labor, creativity and capital, should certainly do it.. (but i didn't dis that idea, to begin with, obviously...)

As someone who's lived plenty close to the poverty line over some decades, i find the tone of some of these posts (not having extra money is "carping") a bit peculiar, not to say weird.... Do these folks live in the same universe as me/ (or more to the point, the same social system??)

--Mp

On Mon, 30 Aug 1999, Stephen Ellis wrote:

"Really don't got much" means how much, exactly? We're all a bunch of carpers, the whole human race, when it comes to money. That you (we) don't have much goes without saying; on a more positive note, how much, in fact,
do you (we all, any of us) actually have? If everyone on the List contributed $20 to Corman or any -thing or -body

else,
who - aside from those who would insist FOREVER that "they really cld't afford it" - really CLDN'T afford it? It's weird, trying to get money from others for projects thought up by others than themselves. Deconstructive resolve only goes so far (one step forward and two steps back forever toward the outstretched hand, it seems); the Virtual Person we all rely on to invisibly come through when the rent's due, when you're the man who owes $532 on his gas bill, when there're no onions in sight, balks immeasurably when faced with the semblance of simple friendship involved in a mutualist ensemble of quantifiable grammar (to be published), because somebody in the end is gonna have to pay, and friendship's s'posed

to be free, shit,

so let's all go home and do our singular art. Alone.

S E

From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Date: Fri, 27 Aug 1999 14:27:51 -0400

This seems a pretty lame response to the Corman thread. Does this poster have any idea how much extra disposable income the various folks on the thread HAVE? i guess he has plenty, from the assumptions he makes. But *most poets really don't got much....*

On Thu, 26 Aug 1999, A H Bramhall wrote:

Cid Corman needs financial backing so the answer this the poetry community reaches is to write letters? well that's a complicated enough reaction.
(Great Pan Is Dead!). wouldn't money, the famous greengrab stuff, be more effective? not to fetishize money but the figurative BUCK is being passed here when a real one could be passed to someone who needs it. if that's

the point here: I'm beginning to wonder. is my logic too deep? statements about community have resounded here recently but that's just yack for the cheap seats. community means exclusive neighbourhood, the usual who's in/who's out bullshit power structure. the fuckin Boston scene, the fuckin SF scene,
the fuckin Philly scene. all just regional fuckin mugwumpism. you don't know community from horseshit so name the social club something else. you're waiting for someone important to talk to you, some authority, that's all.
well Cid Corman already did. and, by the many accounts given, he is and has been a generous man, yet the response to his predicament is to look for a government or semi govt teat for him to suck on. charity begins with the government... sounds like those poli sci courses wore off. rather than barricading yourself in the administration building again, try sending him
money. if, as I say, that's the point of this exercise. $$$Allen Bramhall$$$

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

16. Alan Sondheim

Press Release: Alan Sondheim - New trAce Virtual Writer-in-Residence (fwd)

Wed 1 Sep 1999

ALAN SONDHEIM
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/

Brooklyn-based cyber-theorist Alan Sondheim is the latest writer to join the growing band at the trAce Online Writing Community
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk

He is taking up the virtual baton from trAce's first Virtual Writer-in-Residence Christy Sheffield Sanford, and will be available on the site until March 2000.

Sondheim is a poet, critic, and theorist who writes on and about the Internet. His books include Disorders of the Real, and the anthology Being on Line, and during his time with trAce he will be working on a series of collaborative pieces including 'Love and War and Jennifer' as well as running a group of other online projects and conferences on topics like programming code, avatars, cyborgs and experimental writing.

In 'Love and War and Jennifer' he urges writers to get involved. "Add your own segments to the story backbone, or add your own webpages on the theme. I imagine a huge accumulation of texts grounding this millennium in the next, working and reading and creating new experiences on the way."

Alan is enthusiastic about his new post with trAce. He says "I'm extremely excited to work in an environment that is in the forefront of online culture. The opportunity to work with writers and artists engaged in cultural activity around the world is incredible and amazing to me."

Director of trAce, novelist Sue Thomas, is delighted that Alan will be working on the site. "Alan Sondheim lives at the sharp edge of cyberculture today. He digs deep into the net and is never afraid to confront some of the most profound psychological challenges the web can sum up. I'm sure trAce writers will find it fascinating to join him in his explorations."

BACKGROUND In 1997 trAce received an Arts Council of England 'Arts for Everyone' Award of £365,000 to establish this online community for writers and readers in real and virtual space, and since then the organisation has attracted attention from around the world. Its most successful ventures to date include:

Community:
- WebBoard email conference open 24 hours a day http://hum-webboard.ntu.ac.uk/~trace
- weekly online meetings at 21:00 hrs Sydney and again at 21:00 hrs London

every Sunday
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/online/moo.htm
- Incubation International Conference on Writing and the Net 10-12 July 2000
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/incubation/

Writing Projects:
- "My Millennium" curated by Virtual Writer-in-Residence Christy Sheffield Sanford http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sanford/my_millennium/presents.html
- Bernard Cohen, Writer-in-Residence http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/cohen/front.htm
- Writers' Online Journals
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/journals.htm
- frAme Journal of Culture and Technology http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/frame/
- trAced Resources for Writers http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/traced/traced.htm
- the Noon Quilt http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/quilt/index.html
- the Eclipse Quilt http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/quilt/eclipse/scripts/eqQuilt_test.pl
- Kids on the Net, the junior section of trAce http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/kotn/gokids.htm

NOTE FOR EDITORS
Alan Sondheim is available for interview.
He can be contacted at: 00[redacted] (New York) [redacted]

Sue Thomas, Director of trAce, is available for interview.
She can be contacted at: [redacted] (UK) [redacted]

The trAce Online Writing Community
Nottingham Trent University
Clifton Lane
Nottingham NG11 8NS
ENGLAND
Tel: +[redacted] (direct line)
Fax: +[redacted]
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk
[redacted]

↑ Index

17. David Highsmith

Philip Whalen

Wed 1 Sep 1999

Just opened the San Francisco Observer, September issue, and am disturbed to see (within an article on financial troubles at Mount Zion Hospital) an emergency room photograph of Philip Whalen on a gurney. Does anybody know how he's doing?

↑ Index

18. Dodie Bellamy

Re: more power to the affluent poets

Wed 1 Sep 1999

At 2:46 PM -0700 8/31/99, Stephen Ellis wrote:
>
>We DO live on the same planet. Twenty dollars was an arbitrary figure I >cldn't (easily) afford either. The point is elsewhere - money is secret.

Actually, what you're voicing is a middle class value. Working class people (at least the ones I was raised around) are very open about money, how much they make, how much they spend for things. Often they speak about these things with great vigor. Not to ask about money (or to talk about my own money situation) was something I learned when I got involved in the San Francisco poetry scene. It's still hard, like not announcing to everybody how much my shoes cost.

Dodie

↑ Index

19. Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Bway, NYC

September Solo Exhibitions

Wed 1 Sep 1999

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE CONTACT LANCE FUNG
[redacted] September 1999

J O S H U A S E L M A N

"Off The Grid"

S o l o E x h i b i t i o n

9 September - 2 October at Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Broadway, NYC

RECEPTION THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 9, 6-8

Gallery hours: Tuesday - Saturday, 11 - 6

Off The Grid, a multi-media, action and process based exhibition by Joshua Selman opens September 9th at Lance Fung Gallery. Mr. Selman has shown repeatedly with Lance Fung Gallery since its opening year. Off The Grid includes a sonic event made from mutilated electric guitars and other live, sound emitting devices planted in soil, salt, ice, wood or other naturally occurring substances. The amplified planting is performed at the opening reception and sends off a beautiful sound event capturing such sonic details as friction between organic materials and disturbances between electronic objects planted within them.

Set off from the planting, a floor installation of a twenty foot triangular lattice made from cut pine trees is up-ended over soil, minerals and other natural deposits. Along a tradition first associated with artists like Smithson or Long, the artist has collected the cuttings at a chosen site and recontexted them in the gallery. The triangular pine structure combines with a two hundred square foot wall installation showing hundreds of color prints made with samples of rotting wood from infested trees, lichen feeding on living evergreens, bark dust, tree roots, moss and other by-products of a decaying forest put directly on the glass bed of a computer scanner for output. As duo-tones, the prints unify in rough color bands: brown-green-red-yellow and blue. The loosely arranged color bands unite as a singular horizon view.

Conceptually, the exhibit's focus is on the process of roaming between rural, urban and electronic terrains. About Off The Grid, Mr. Selman says "These days they're re-cabling the entire planet. You feel a de-stabilizing effect. But, this anticipates our journey. We're roaming within structures more flexible than the prefabricated urban container." A slightly different definition, "off the grid" is a term used today by a growing segment of the population attempting to sever its dependence on the support grid behind industrial civilization. The cult lifestyle has even made its own industry of products for living off the grid. Whether or not this is possible, a growing human desire to go beyond the reduction of all phenomena to elements within a material grid seems to be timely. Mr. Selman admits he feels centering in the urban grid is obsolete and, in the exhibit, draws from his own desire to expand beyond its domain.

His previous project, Full Message, exhibited at Lance Fung Gallery in Spring of '98, is documented in Künstforum and Kölner Arts Magazine. Pieces from Full Message were collected and displayed by The Whitney Museum Of American Art, The Ultimate Akademie, Köln and The Artists Project, Berlin. Also in '98, Mr. Selman was included in The Malsch Exhibition, Munich and The Concrete Signal, York, Pennsylvania. Upcoming exhibitions of Full Message are at The Museum Of Contemporary Art, Lake Worth, Florida and The Triton Museum, California. He has works with The Stamp Collection, New York, The Artists Museum, Tel Aviv, Vanguard Visions, New York and was commissioned in '98 by Australian Broadcast Corporation to make a radio work at The Bridge, Construction In Process, Melbourne, Australia as a participating artist. A national broadcast takes place in September '99.

Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Broadway, NY, NY 10012
T/ [redacted] F/ [redacted]

----------Also on September 9th----------

E M I L Y
H A R V E Y
G A L L E R Y

PRESS RELEASE

537 B r o a d w a y
N Y C, N Y 10012

Tel: [redacted]
Fax [redacted]

-- J E S S I C A H I G G I N S --

"How It Sometimes Goes In Kangaroo Land"

Solo Exhibition

9 September - 2 October 1999 at Emily Harvey Gallery, 537 Broadway, NYC
Reception for the artist: Thursday, 9 September, 6-8 PM
Gallery hours: Tuesday - Saturday, 11 - 6

Emily Harvey is proud to present a solo exhibition by Jessica Higgins titled How It Sometimes Goes In Kangaroo Land. The exhibition opens Thursday, September 9th. Emily Harvey Gallery is the main American gallery representing such vintage Fluxus artists as Alison Knowles, Emmett Williams, Philip Corner, and the late Dick Higgins.

How It Sometimes Goes In Kangaroo Land is based on a pattern poem titled Long Tail For Jessie. Published in Dick Higgins' classic 1979 book, Some Recent Snow Flakes, it was inspired by a telephone conversation in which Ms. Higgins told her father "and that's how it sometimes goes in Kangaroo Land." Her exhibition opens a window to the private world this artist shared with her father.

The installation includes white cloth chairs suspended or placed on platforms. On the chairs Ms. Higgins has screen-printed correspondence and pattern poems including the poem Long Tail For Jessie. The prints magnify texts and transform the chairs into pages torn from a book. Mimicking mammal forms, the chairs play on the idea of materialized nonsense characteristic of a tradition that extends from the work of Lewis Carroll through works from the Fluxus family into which Jessica Higgins was born.

Additionally, Ms. Higgins has used the title How it Sometimes Goes In Kangaroo Land, as the basis of a thousand page anagrammatic text. All one thousand pages are presented along with pages she chose to put through a blue print machine and output as six foot scrolls of white text on blue ground.

Jessica Higgins' previous solo exhibition titled Riddles was presented at Lance Fung Gallery in Spring 1998.

All email to [redacted]

(To be dropped from this list please send the message 'remove' as the subject of a blank email to [redacted])

↑ Index

20. Poetics List
looking rudy / narvis
Wed 1 Sep 1999

This came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: narvis <[redacted]>
Date: 9/1/99 10:10 AM -0300

i'm looking for rudy burkhardt does anyone there how to reach?

thanks

p drop z

[redacted]

↑ Index

21. Alan Sondheim
trAce project, loveandwar -
Wed 1 Sep 1999

I want to mention here, again, sorry for the repetition, that we've set up a space for textual experimentation re: a 'novel' or accumulation, at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm based on Jennifer and any others one might care to contribute - there are five backbone webpages - you can add to any of them and/or add your own webpage (contact me on that) -

Also on LinguaMoo we've established a space to write/into dealing with avatars, you can publicly @dig there, at the Grove (down from trAce) - you have to join Lingua, that's all -

Please participate in these, at least check them out, if you have the time - there are also those conferences on the Webboard - you join by going through http://trace.ntu.ac.uk - devoted to experimental writing, cyborg and avatar issues, etc. -

Thanks, Alan

http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt - partial mirror at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html co-moderator Cyberculture, Cybermind, Fiction of Philosophy (fop-l)

↑ Index

22. jesse glass
Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
Wed 1 Sep 1999

To all: The publication idea is great. The readings idea is also a good one, but they're physically tiring and unless they pay really well, the 10-14 hour flight from Japan, consequent jet lag, etc. would probably not be worth it. He said as much when the idea was brought up in the past. Cid has been poet-in-residence at Iowa, and other places, and taught for one summer at Naropa. A residency would probably be more attractive to him, simply because it would be less wearing.

Cid is certainly capable of speaking for himself, and does have access to e-mail. I forwarded the information to him about joining this list, but I don't think he is comfortable enough with the technology to do it.

His e-mail address is available back channel to anyone who has any ideas, leads. etc. I'd be happy to give it out (Cid's given his ok on this), Mr. Philips also has it, and he is, I believe, in the process of joining this list. Happy, too, to give out his snail mail address to anyone who requests it.

Todd's welcome to contact Cid Corman directly because I doubt if he will ever chime in.

Happy to say that there has already been a helpful response generated from this list, but more people need to act. My advice: there's no need to wrangle: do what you can. If you value Cid Corman's 50 years plus dedication to the work; if you value Cid Corman as a person, please help. Someday you may find yourself in his position. Jesse

-----Original Message-----
From: Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, August 31, 1999 12:03 PM
Subject: Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman

> I would, sadly, say that the responses to Cid's place in the world have less to do with Cid than with those making the responses. Poets have little money ---from their poetry-- there are a few folks who have been able to get into the game because of family comforts--etc. Also: so many are teaching right now that perhaps a seris of readings---if Cid wants'em--would bring him some much needed income. But--als again-Cid hasn't chimed in here--so it's not of it really about Cid!

↑ Index

23. Gary Shapiro
Jewish Lit on Sept 26 in NYC
Wed 1 Sep 1999

---

in association with
NEW YORK IS BOOK COUNTRY
(a day-long festival of great books and browsing!)

NEW JEWISH LITERATURE & WRITING
Sunday, September 26,1999
LOCATION: 40 West 45 Street (near Fifth Avenue)
New York, New York
RSVP: [redacted] or [redacted]

2:00pm THANE ROSENBAUM reads from SECOND HAND SMOKE (St. Martin's) It's a story taking place in the seamy underbelly of Miami Beach's Collins Avenue, where Mila Katz, Holocaust survivor and confidante to Miami's mobsters, lives by her wits)

3:00pm ALAN KAUFMAN reads for poems WHO ARE WE by Davka Press He is also the author of a forthcoming book THE OUTLAW BIBLE OF AMERICAN POETRY (Thunder's Mouth), and editor of a cool Jewish website

4:00pm MELVIN JULES BUKIET reads from a new anthology NEUROTICA: JEWISH WRITERS ON SEX (WW Norton).

REQUEST: If you have any ideas of where i can post this event listing [poetry websites, listservs, etc] could you either forward it there, or email me at [redacted] Thank you, and happy New Year, la shana tova.

↑ Index

24. Michael Walsh
Re: NYC Bookstores
Wed 1 Sep 1999

Dear Douglas Messerli,

Ah, interesting. I have often enough wondered why St Marks does so poorly on stocking varieties of poetry that they really should have on the shelves. The readers of these books are certainly often in the place. A while back, I was in there and grabbed a copy of Ron Silliman's Xing. At the register, it turned out that Xing is read by the machine as a command to cancel the transaction, so I stood there while the person behind the counter tried again and again to get the register to accept this string as the title of the book. They finally sold it to me without entering the title into what I suppose is an inventory -- so they probably haven't re-ordered it either.

Best
Michael Walsh

↑ Index

25. pete spence

Re: more power to the affluent poets

Thu 2 Sep 1999

>
>
>I could only assume that the emphasis was on "real" poets. But we have been >around this class bush repeatedly, as someone pointed out.
>
tell me tellme quick whats a "real" poet????/pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

26. pete spence

Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman

Thu 2 Sep 1999

> To all:
> The publication idea is great. one way to raise funds is to hold a SMALL > PRESS auction specially those small run items that are around,, maybe > invite SMALL PRESS publishers to give one or two copies of something that > is getting close to the out of print cata/gory i've suggested this here in > Aust when there was an emergency once o'er the publish of someones book > when the printers had stuffed it all up and a new run was needed but they > wouldn't come clean//if all this makes any sensibles//yours pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

27. Jack Ruttan

Emile Nelligan's E-mail Address

Thu 2 Sep 1999

> Date: Mon, 30 Aug 1999 16:30:56 -0400
> From: Brian Stefans <[redacted]>
> Subject: Emile Nelligan's E-mail Address
>
> Actually, Nelligan's long dead, but I'll be heading up to Montreal this Thursday for the weekend and wanted to find out where the historic sites might be regarding this poet. Anybody out there have any information?
>
> The sites I've found -- of which there are a fair amount -- are all in French, and from what I can tell don't contain this type tourist (tripe), er, information. I'm especially interested in the location of the writer's group that he was a part of, l'ecole litteraire de Montreal, where he read "La Romance de Vin," interesting because he was carried around on the shoulders of his, er, "communiyt" that evening for having more or less created French Canadian poetry, and then went comatose with some form o= f schizophrenia two months later (at 20 ans).
>
> At least that's what I _read_ -- I'm sure someone who was there will correct me!
>
> But seriously, I'd love to find some locations.
>
> Cheers,
> Brian

I didn't know if he was part of a writer's group. But if you step off at Metro Sherbrooke, you can head towards rue Laval, where he lived, and did most of his writing, I think. On the way, there's a a Quebec Poets and Writers Assn. on rue Laval at the head of a park called Carre St. Louis, and they might be able to direct you somewhere. Failing that, Nelligan's picture is in most of the French-Language bookstores (many on rue St. Denis), and the people there, if knowledgeable, might give you an assist.

Jack Ruttan, Montreal

--

http://www.axess.com/users/jackr

↑ Index

28. Gary Shapiro

NYC events for Kenyon, Sewanee, Boulevard,Graywolf

Thu 2 Sep 1999

Four free literary events:
Location: 15 Gramercy Park South, New York City (near 20th Street & Park Avenue); jackets required; see you there
RSVP required to [redacted] or [redacted]

Save these dates in your calendar!

October 12, 1999 The Kenyon Review at 60: A Celebration 7:00pm; free
Princeton professor Michael Wood (author of books on Stendhal, Marquez, Nabokov, among others) Will speak on BROKEN DATES: FICTION AND THE CENTURY, followed by respondent MacArthur winner Lewis Hyde (author of The Gift: Imagination and the Erotic Life of Property). Moderated by Editor David Lynn.

November 3, 1999 Sewanee Writers' Conference 10th Anniversary Event
7:00pm
free
You are cordially invited to join Wyatt Prunty and various authors and writers. Alice McDermott, Mark Strand, Dan Mueller, Lily Tuck.
In association with The Overlook Press/The Sewanee Writers' Series.

November 8,1999 An evening with Boulevard Magazine Join Editor Richard Burgin (three-time Pushcart Prize winner, and author of Fear of Blue Skies, Private Fame and Man Without Memory), Molly Peacock, author of four books of poems, including Original Love and Take Heart, as well as a memoir Paradise, Piece by Piece. She has been president of the Poetry Society of America. Art critic and poet David Shapiro, author of 7 volumes of poetry, monographs on Ashbery, Jasper Johns, and After a Last Original (with Terry Winters).

December 2,1999 Graywolf Press: Celebrating 25 Years 7pm free Join noted authors Mark Doty, Sophie Cabot Black, Nick Flynn, Eamon Grennan, and Vijay Seshadri. Welcome by editor Fiona McCrae; Graywolf celebrates twenty-five years of publishing gourndbreaking, thoughtful, and imaginative contemporary fiction.

RSVP required; email [redacted] or [redacted]. Thanks!

↑ Index

29. Walter K. Lew
re Tony Green on Japanese "borrowing"
Thu 2 Sep 1999

From Ralph Linton, _The Study of Man_ (1936):

"Our solid American citizen awakes in a bed built on a pattern which originated in the Near East...He throws back covers made from cotton, domesticated in India, or linen, domesticated in the Near East, or wool from sheep, also domesticated in the Near East, or silk, the use of which was discovered in China...He takes off his pajamas, a garment invented in India, and washes with soap in invented by the ancient Gauls. He then shaves, a masochistic rite which seems to have been derived from either Sumer or ancient Egypt...Before going out for breakfast he glances thru the window, made of glass invented in Egypt, and if it is raining puts on overshoes made of rubber discovered by the Central American Indians and takes an umbrella, invented in southeastern Asia. Upon his head he puts a hat made of felt, a material invented in the Asiatic steppes.

On his way to breakfast he stops to buy a paper, paying for it with coins, an ancient Lydian invention. At the restaurant a whole new series of borrowed elements confronts him. His plate is made of a form of pottery invented in China. His knife is of steel, an alloy first made in southern India, his fork a medieval Italian invention, and his spoon a derivative of a Roman origin...After his fruit and first coffee he goes on to waffles, cakes made by a Scandinavian technique from wheat domesticated in Asia Minor. Over these he pours maple syrup, invented by the Indians of the Eastern woodlands. As a side dish he may have the egg of a species of bird domesticated in Indo-China, or thin strips of the flesh of an animal domesticated in Eastern Asia which have been salted and smoked by a process developed in Northern Europe.

When our friend has finished eating he settles back to smoke, an American Indian habit, consuming a plant domesticated in Brazil in either a pipe, derived from the Indians of Virgina or a cigarette, derived from Mexico...While smoking he reads the news of the day, imprinted in characters invented by the ancient Semites upon a material invented in China by a process invented in Germany [Linton shd have sd Chosôn (present-day Korea)]. As he absorbs the accounts of foreign troubles he will if he is a good conservative citizen, thank a Hebrew deity in an Indo-European language that he is 100 per cent American."

As quoted in Prof. Henry Em's reader for a UCLA course on Modern Korean history.

Walter K. Lew
11811 Venice Blvd. #138
Los Angeles, CA 90066

↑ Index

30. David Baratier

Re: more power to the affluent poets

Thu 2 Sep 1999

As a person who knows Steve if he, of all working class people, is willing to donate a jackson to the project that says a lot. Or even some time--

Ideological socialist talk won't put the onions on the plate. Re-emphasis of the "not me" ideology didn't work in the reagonomic period, why should it now? Shoot up or shut up.

While I would have the ability to put a selected together, and some of the funds, the time is the main problem here-- no time to put together a benefit-- or the manuscript-- too much on the dinner plate & only one intern. The Perchik collected will be out late cause of time. If someone typed up a manuscript version into e-mail so I could throw it into Quark, I'd be willing. Most of Cid's work would need to be culled from non-electronic sources, the Elizabeth press books, and with Si's work it has been slow going at best. The Morterstag books are beautiful but the paper creates so many scanning errors it is unreal. I'd rather see it get out on the Maine series if Burton is out there. Jesse feel free to pass along the word...

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

31. Stephen Ellis

Re: more power to the affluent poets

Thu 2 Sep 1999

Yr right, working class people often DO have more openness re: money. But that's pretty much an urban thing. In fact the whole notion of "working class" is urban; Marx didn't farm, and shuddered at the fact of living in a rural setting. There are plenty of provincial mutes who don't have much to say about money or anything else. I find that whole hierarchy of working, middle, upper class to be over simple. Isn't it more like some kind of daisy chain in wch all participate, even if often enough against their will? And don't you think the "openness" in the working classes toward discussing fiscal matters is sometimes contingent on the feeling that they've been "had" - that's something I've noticed, openness seeming a way to bear up under constant (fiscal & emotional) strain, if not outright (temporal & spatial) abuse. Wch is, okay, not always the case, but to invoke the openness you speak of without mentioning the perpetual grind being under image to priviledge (ie., something to work toward, like getting a disease) is to keep intent separate from the occasional desperation behind it. Conditions have contexts & causes, middle class is it may be to point this (if not them) out.

S E

> From: Dodie Bellamy <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: more power to the affluent poets
> Date: Wed, 1 Sep 1999 15:26:44 -0700
>
> At 2:46 PM -0700 8/31/99, Stephen Ellis wrote:
>
> We DO live on the same planet. Twenty dollars was an arbitrary figure I cldn't (easily) afford either. The point is elsewhere - money is secret.
>
> *Actually, what you're voicing is a middle class value. Working class people (at least the ones I was raised around) are very open about money, how much they make, how much they spend for things. Often they speak about these things with great vigor. Not to ask about money (or to talk about my own money situation) was something I learned when I got involved in the San Francisco poetry scene. It's still hard, like not announcing to everybody how much my shoes cost.*
>
> Dodie

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

32. daniel bouchard
Bookcellar Cafe Reading Series
Thu 2 Sep 1999

>
>
> The Bookcellar Poetry Reading Series
>
> presents:
>
> JOSEPH TORRA and PATRICK DOUD
>
> September 17th, Friday
> 7:00 P.M.

>
>The reading is free but donations for the poets are encouraged. The > Bookcellar Cafe and Bookstore is at 1971 Mass. Ave. in Porter Sq. > in Cambridge one block on the right from the T Stop.
>
>A Fall schedule of monthly and sometimes bi-monthly readings is > forthcoming. Thanks VERY much, Aaron Kiely
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
  fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

33. Richard Dillon

Re: NYC Bookstores

Thu 2 Sep 1999

Gotham Book Mart

>From: Michael Walsh <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: NYC Bookstores
>Date: Mon, Aug 30, 1999, 5:19 PM
>

> Dear Ramez Qureshi,
>
> St Marks Books (3rd Ave and 9th St) will usually have Sulfur (and other such periodicals) -- in the back, on the right, across from the remainders. Their poetry books are not so good, but they sometimes have some things, and so might have Swenson.
>
> Good luck,

> Michael Walsh

↑ Index

34. Alan Sondheim
HH
Thu 2 Sep 1999

=

HH

Help help, I'm being murdered, for God's sake help me! !em pleh ekas s'doG rof ,deredrum gnieb m'I ,pleh pleH Jesus fuck Christ get off me, get away from me! !em morf yawa teg ,em ffo teg tsirhC kcuf suseJ Come back you bastards, oh God, I'm so sorry ... ... yrros os m'I ,doG ho ,sdratsab uoy kcab emoC I didn't take your money for God's sakes, you've got the wrong person! !nosrep gnorw eht tog ev'uoy ,sekas s'doG rof yenom ruoy ekat t'ndid I It wasn't me, please please don't shoot, oh please, don't, don't, please! !esaelp ,t'nod ,t'nod ,esaelp ho ,toohs t'nod esaelp esaelp ,em t'nsaw tI Fuck, please don't rape me, I'm not a bad person, please leave me alone ... ... enola em evael esaelp ,nosrep dab a ton m'I ,em epar t'nod esaelp ,kcuF Oh God oh God I've been shot, help me, help me! !em pleh ,em pleh ,tohs neeb ev'I doG ho doG hO Please, I beg you, if you have any compassion, please, pleaes, please. .esaelp ,seaelp ,esaelp ,noissap-moc yna evah uoy fi ,uoy geb I ,esaelP God, please leave me alone, please, I don't deserve this, leave me alone. .enola em evael ,siht evresed t'nod I ,esaelp ,enola em evael esaelp ,doG Oh God, no ... ... on ,doG hO Please, I don't want to die, I haven't done anything to you. .uoy ot gnihtyna enod t'nevah I ,eid ot tnaw t'nod I ,esaelP Look at me, no, look at me, please, you don't really want to do this. .siht od ot tnaw yllaer t'nod uoy ,esaelp ,em ta kool ,on ,em ta kooL Please don't kill me, I have children, please, oh God please ... ... esaelp doG ho ,esaelp ,nerdlihc evah I ,em llik t'nod esaelP

↑ Index

35. jesse glass
Re: Cid Corman's address
Thu 2 Sep 1999

Here's Cid Corman's mailing address: Fukuoji-cho/80 Utano/Ukyo-ku/Kyoto 616/Japan. Jesse

-----Original Message-----
From: Grant Jenkins <[redacted]>

To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Wednesday, September 01, 1999 5:32 PM
Subject: Re: Cid Corman's address

> Burt,
>
> John in his latest letter says that we have Corman's address, but I can't find it in the archive. For everyone's benefit, would you please repost that information?
>
> Thanks
>
> As said, a cheque isn't that good for anything under $500 (due to $35 charged for cashing). The best method is to transfer cash (yen if possible) direct to his bank. (You have the address / details. [i.e., from a previous message: banking details, which he tells me is good for "dollar, yen, or check transfers": Cid Corman c/o Kyoto Shinyo Kinko Bank, Omuro Branch, Omuro Ukyo-ku, Kyoto [redacted] Japan; account number: 095-0010328; bank tel: [redacted].])
>
> For smaller amounts sending cash in perhaps a registered envelope / hidden by carbon paper + Cid's details should do it.

↑ Index

36. Maria Damon
Re: St. Petersburg Literary Seminars (summer)
Thu 2 Sep 1999

---

you should definitely contact masha zavialova, a member of this list, for poetic contacts etc in st petersburg.

At 8:39 PM -0400 8/31/99, Philip Nikolayev wrote:
>I will be teaching at the next St. Peterburg Summer Literary Seminars (for >English speakers/writers). The program is affiliated with the University of >Cincinnati (USA) and Herzen University (Russia).
>
>Program seminars include:
>
> Fiction 1 & 2
> Non-Fiction
> Poetry
> Playwriting/Screenwriting
> International Dramaturgy
> Literary and Philisophical Discourse in St. Petersburg
> Untranslatable Russia

>
>More info at http://www.sumlitsem.com/ -- please take a look if interested.
>
>Philip Nikolayev
>[redacted]

↑ Index

37. Poetics List

UPDATE: The 12hr ISBN-JPEG Project / Brace

Thu 2 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------

Date: Wed, Sep 1, 1999 5:45 PM -0700
From: { brad brace } <[redacted]>

```
        _______ _          __ ___  _
       |__   __| |        /_ |__ \| |
         | |  | |__   ___   | |  ) | |__  _ __
         | |  | '_ \ / _ \  | | / /| '_ \| '__|
         | |  | | | |  __/  | |/ /_| | | | |
         |_|  |_| |_|___|  |_|____|_| |_|_|

 _____  _____ ____  _   _          _ _____  ______ _____
|_   _|/ ____|  _ \| \ | |        | |  __ \|  ____/ ____|
  | | | (___ | |_) |  \| |______    | | |__) | |__ | |  __
  | |  ___ \|  _ <| . ` |______|   | |  ___/|  __|| | |_ |
 _| |_ ____) | |_) | |\  |     | |__| | |    | |___| |__| |
|_____|_____/|____/|_| _|      ____/|_|    |__________|

          |  __ \        (_)        | |
          | |__) | __ ___  _  ___  ___| |_
          |  ___/ '__/ _ \| |/ _ \/ __| __|
          | |   | | | (_) | |  __/ (__| |_
          |_|   |_|  ___/| |___|___|__|
                         _/ |
                        |__/
```

> > > > Synopsis: The 12hr-ISBN-JPEG Project began December 30, 1994. A `round-the-clock posting of sequenced hypermodern imagery from Brad Brace. The hypermodern minimizes the familiar, the known, the recognizable; it suspends identity, relations and history. This discourse, far from determining the locus in which it speaks, is avoiding the ground on which it could find support. It is trying to operate a decentering that leaves no privilege to any center.

The 12-hour ISBN JPEG Project
---
began December 30, 1994

Pointless Hypermodern Imagery... posted/mailed every 12 hours... a spectral, trajective alignment for the 90`s! A continuum of minimalist masks in the face of catastrophe; conjuring up transformative metaphors for the everyday... A poetic reversibility of exclusive events...

A post-rhetorical, continuous, apparently random sequence of imagery... genuine gritty, greyscale... corruptable, compact, collectable and compelling convergence. The voluptuousness of the grey imminence: the art of making the other disappear. Continual visual impact; filled with the density of an invisible knowledge; an optical drumming, sculpted in duration, on the endless present of the Net.

An extension of the printed ISBN-Book (0-9690745) series... critically unassimilable... imagery is gradually acquired, selected and re-sequenced over time... ineluctable, vertiginous connections. The 12hr dialtone...

[see ftp.netcom.com/pub/bb/bbrace/books]

KEYWORDS: >> Disconnected, disjunctive, distended, de-centered, de-composed, ambiguous, augmented, ambilavent, homogeneous, reckless...
>> Multi-faceted, oblique, obsessive, obscure, obdurate...
>> Promulgated, personal, permeable, prolonged, polymorphous, provocative, poetic, plural, perverse, potent, prophetic, pathological, pointless...
>> Emergent, evolving, eccentric, eclectic, egregious, exciting, entertaining, evasive, entropic, erotic, entrancing, enduring, expansive...

Every 12 hours, another!... view them, re-post `em, save `em, trade `em, print `em, even publish them... The design of the Net assumes that intellectual property is technically and socially obsolete.

Here`s how:

~ Set www-links to -> http://www.teleport.com/~bbrace/12hr.html Look for the 12-hr-icon. Heavy traffic may require you to specify files more than once! Anarchie, Fetch, CuteFTP, TurboGopher... Or -> ftp://ftp.netcom.com/pub/bb/bbrace/bbrace.html

~ Download from -> ftp.pacifier.com /pub/users/bbrace
Download from -> ftp.netcom.com /pub/bb/bbrace
Download from -> ftp.teleport.com /users/bbrace

Download from -> ftp.rdrop.com /pub/users/bbrace
Download from -> ftp.wco.com /pub/users/bbrace
* Remember to set tenex or binary. Get 12hr.jpeg

~ E-mail -> If you only have access to email, then you can use FTPmail to do essentially the same thing. Send a message with a body of 'help' to the server address nearest you: * [redacted] *

~ Mirror-sites requested! Archives too!
The latest new jpeg will always be named, 12hr.jpeg
Average size of images is only 45K.
*
Perl program to mirror ftp-sites/sub-directories:
src.doc.ic.ac.uk:/packages/mirror
*

~ Postings to usenet newsgroups:
alt.12hr
alt.binaries.pictures.12hr alt.binaries.pictures.misc alt.binaries.pictures.fine-art.misc

* * Ask your system's news-administrator to carry these groups! (There are also usenet image browsers: TIFNY, PluckIt, Picture Agent, PictureView, Extractor97, NewsRover, Binary News Assistant, EasyNews)

~ This interminable, relentless sequence of imagery began in earnest on December 30, 1994. The basic structure of the project has been over twenty-four years in the making. While the specific sequence of photographs has been presently orchestrated for more than 12 years` worth of 12-hour postings, I will undoubtedly be tempted to tweak the ongoing publication with additional new interjected imagery. Each 12-hour posting is like the turning of a page; providing ample time for reflection, interruption, and assimilation.

~ The sites listed above also contain information on other cultural projects and sources.

~ A very low-volume, moderated mailing list for announcements and occasional commentary related to this project has been established. Send e-mail to: [redacted] /subscribe 12hr-isbn-jpeg

-- This project has not received government art-subsidies. Some opportunities still exist for financially assisting the publication of editions-by-subscription of large (33x46") prints; perhaps (Iris giclees) inkjet duotones on newsprint! Other supporters receive rare copies of the first three web-offset printed ISBN-Books.

-- ISBN is International Standard Book Number. JPEG and GIF are types of image files. Get the text-file, 'pictures-faq' to learn how to view or translate these images. [ftp ftp.netcom.com/pub/bb/bbrace]

--
credit appreciated, but no copyright 1994,1995,1996,1997,1998,1999 <[redacted]>

--

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

38. Poetics List
Philip Whalen / Scalapino
Thu 2 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Thu, Sep 2, 1999 10:04 AM -0700
From: Thos J White <[redacted]>

In response to David Highsmith's question, Philip Whalen has been in the hospital for over a week with a bacterial infection which started in his leg. Though of course he's been quite sick, he's not in danger and when visited was even in a humorous mood. He missed the group reading at Fort Mason that was held for his book OVERTIME. -- Leslie Scalapino

↑ Index

39. Alan Sondheim
Need help for a Millennial Project through trAce!
Thu 2 Sep 1999

=

Millennium Project - Help Needed, Comments Invited !!!

This is a proposal for a millennium project that would involving running traceroute and similar applications across the December 31 / January 1 _hinge._

Traceroute is a linux / unix command that can also be downloaded as a small application for Windows; the command-line (prompt) startup is:

{k:1} traceroute <address> - for example
{k:2} traceroute cleo.murdoch.edu.au

Traceroute then executes a series of internet packet transmissions that target each router between one's local site and the address; each target is usually hit three times. The send-and-return time for each router is then given to the user. The result is a table or textual map of the health of the route between the local and final address; if a router is down or not responding, that is clear from the * in place of the send-and-return time. Here is an example:

{k:110}traceroute cleo.murdoch.edu.au >> zz
traceroute to cleo.murdoch.edu.au (134.115.224.60), 30 hops max, 40 byte packets

1 isdn2.nyc.access(166.84.0.123) 184ms 169ms 169ms 2 xenyn-eid-FE0-1.nyc.access(166.84.0.97) 169ms 169ms 169ms 3 587.Hssi2-0-0.GW2.NYC4.ALTER(157.130.17.145) 179ms 179ms 179ms 4 132.ATM2-0.XR1.NYC4.ALTER(146.188.178.134) 189 ms 179ms 170ms 5 189.ATM2-0.TR1.NYC1.ALTER(146.188.179.18) 179ms 189 ms 189ms 6 104.ATM7-0.TR1.LAX2.ALTER(146.188.137.129) 249ms 249ms 249ms 7 299.ATM7-0.XR1.LAX4.ALTER(146.188.248.253) 249ms 259ms 260ms 8 192.ATM8-0-0.GW1.LAX4.ALTER(146.188.248.101) 269ms 259. ms 249ms 9 optus-gw.customer.ALTER(157.130.227.182) 249ms 249ms 279ms 10 hssi8-0-0.ia4.optus.net.au (192.65.89.241) 599ms 559ms 549ms hssi3-0-0.ia4.optus.net.au (192.65.89.237) 549ms 11 ge9-0-0.ia3.optus.net.au (192.65.89.225) 569ms 579ms 589ms 12 aarnet-wa.ia3.optus.net.au (192.65.88.190) 649ms 629ms 629ms 13 murdoch-parnet.parnet.edu.au (203.19.110.146) 629ms 639ms 619ms 14 cleo.murdoch.edu.au (134.115.224.60) 639ms 639ms 649ms

All of the intermediate routers between the local address (my desktop computer routed through panix.com) and cleo.murdoch.edu.au are listed in order; the IP address is given after the name, and then three times are listed for every address.

What I propose is a skein or matrix of traceroutes run all around the world - not just from major cities - sites - at the time of the millennial turnover hinge. Participants could run one or several traceroutes; the results would be sent to me or a trAce site via standard email, and assembled. (It may be possible to create a visualization, but the cost of this seems prohibitive.)

The result would give a map of some of the world's nerves as Y2K comes to fruition; it would be a unique and historic signature or imprint of the passing of an era (marked by B.C./A.D. or b.c.e. a.c.e. common time - I'm well aware of alternative date systems). The text would be a world-text, a self-reflexive look at the Net by the Net, data-crawling everywhere. One site might not have traceroute running at all; another might connect just as easily as usual.

A major problem is that almost no one will be around for the hinge (and don't forget the hinge itself will take a day to travel the world). The computers would most like be set up (if unix or linux) with the at or cron commands, which automate task running at particular times; if they connect to the Net, they'd also have to ensure that the ISP connection remains open. All of these are difficult problems; one solution would be to _actively_ make connections when the participant's local address is not on the hinge - but to target hinge addresses.

Any help or suggestions will be greatly appreciated. trAce (Sue Thomas) and I have tried to find programming help on this, but so far it appears costly. Martin Dodge at Cybergeography has been thinking along similar lines, but nothing is firmed up there, either.

Alan

↑ Index

40. jocelyn saidenberg

Amnasan and Robinson Reading at Small Press Traffic

Thu 2 Sep 1999

--==========_-1275800960==_ma==========

SMALL PRESS TRAFFIC READING **

Mike Amnasan
Elizabeth Robinson
Friday, September 10, 7:30 p.m.

Mike Amnasan's novel I Can't Distinguish Opposites (1988, Black Star Series), and its unpublished sequel, Joe Liar, were two of the most important works to come out of San Francisco's "New Narrative" school of the 1980s, arriving like a pair of thunderclaps across a livid purple sky of politics, sex, genre-bending, labor writing, memoir, and deconstruction. Amnasan is the author as well of a full-length play, Revery, and the editor of the controversial literary/sociological journal Ottotole (1985-1989). This year he won the Sheet Metal Workers Local 104 College Scholarship Award to study literature at San Francisco State University. Born in Pasco (Washington), he will be reading tonight from a memoir-in-progress, Beyond the Safety of Dreams.

For many, Elizabeth Robinson epitomizes the latest version of the new American poetry, for her writing is well known for its lyric abstraction, its spiritual depth, its finesse of experiment, and elegant individualism. Often overlooked are the Rabelaisian undertones, for here is a poetry in love with life, eros, and comedy high and low. Robinson's books include: In the Sequence of Falling Things (paradigm) and Bed of Lists (Kelsey St. Press), and seven chapbooks from publishers around the world. Forthcoming, a new book from Kelsey St. Press (The Seed for Bread), and a chapbook (Lodger) from Arcturus Editions. Her poems and critical writing have appeared in Oblek, The Germ, Epoch, First Intensity, Hambone, 6ix, Fence, American Letters and Commentary, Fourteen Hills.

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org
--==========_-1275800960==_ma==========

<fontfamily><param>Palatino</param><bigger><bigger>SMALL PRESS TRAFFIC READING **

Mike Amnasan

Elizabeth Robinson

=46riday, September 10, 7:30 p.m.=20

</bigger></bigger></fontfamily> <fontfamily><param>Palatino</param><= bigger><bigger>

Mike Amnasan's novel <italic>I Can't Distinguish Opposites</italic> (1988, Black Star Series), and its unpublished sequel, <italic>Joe Liar, </italic>were two of the most important works to come out of San =46rancisco's "New Narrative" school of the 1980s, arriving like a pair of thunderclaps across a livid purple sky of politics, sex, genre-bending, labor writing, memoir, and deconstruction. Amnasan is the author as well of a full-length play, <italic>Revery,</italic> and the editor of the controversial literary/sociological journal <italic>Ottotole</italic> (1985-1989). This year he won the Sheet Metal Workers Local 104 College Scholarship Award to study literature at San =46rancisco State University. Born in Pasco (Washington), he will be reading tonight from a memoir-in-progress, <italic>Beyond the Safety of Dreams.

</italic>For many, Elizabeth Robinson epitomizes the latest version of the new American poetry, for her writing is well known for its lyric abstraction, its spiritual depth, its finesse of experiment, and elegant individualism. Often overlooked are the Rabelaisian undertones, for here is a poetry in love with life, eros, and comedy high and low. Robinson's books include: <italic>In the Sequence of Falling Things</italic> (paradigm) and <italic>Bed of Lists</italic> (Kelsey St. Press), and seven chapbooks from publishers around the world. =46orthcoming, a new book from Kelsey St. Press<italic> (The Seed for Bread), </italic>and a chapbook <italic>(Lodger) </italic>from Arcturus Editions. Her poems and critical writing have appeared in <italic>Oblek, The Germ, Epoch, First Intensity, Hambone, 6ix, Fence, American Letters and Commentary, Fourteen Hills.

</italic>New College Cultural Center

766 Valencia Street, San Francisco

$5
</bigger></bigger></fontfamily>

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

--==========_-1275800960==_ma==========--

↑ Index

41. Maria Damon
Re: Jewish Lit on Sept 26 in NYC
Thu 2 Sep 1999

---

i'll be there in shpilkes

At 10:48 PM -0400 9/1/99, Gary Shapiro wrote:
>in association with
>NEW YORK IS BOOK COUNTRY
>(a day-long festival of great books and browsing!)
>
>NEW JEWISH LITERATURE & WRITING
> Sunday, September 26,1999
>LOCATION: 40 West 45 Street (near Fifth Avenue)
>New York, New York
>RSVP: [redacted] or [redacted]
>
>2:00pm THANE ROSENBAUM reads from SECOND HAND SMOKE (St.

Martin's)
>It's a story taking place in the seamy underbelly of Miami Beach's Collins >Avenue, where Mila Katz, Holocaust survivor and confidante to Miami's >mobsters, lives by her wits)
>
>3:00pm ALAN KAUFMAN reads for poems WHO ARE WE by Davka Press
>He is also the author of a forthcoming book THE OUTLAW BIBLE OF AMERICAN >POETRY (Thunder's Mouth), and editor of a cool Jewish website
>
>4:00pm MELVIN JULES BUKIET reads from a new anthology NEUROTICA: JEWISH >WRITERS ON SEX (WW Norton).
>
>REQUEST: If you have any ideas of where i can post this event listing [poetry >websites, listservs, etc] could you either forward it there, or email me at >[redacted]
>Thank you, and happy New Year, la shana tova.

↑ Index

42. Kathy Lou Schultz

Re: more power to the affluent poets

Thu 2 Sep 1999

I wouldn't be so quick to consign this as "urban" phenomena. (In fact in the decidedly rural, decidedly working class place where my people are, and where I grew up, openness about fiscal matters, including the family's struggle to pay bills and ward off overdrafts at the bank, was the norm. I think that working class kids are often not sheltered from such events.) But I think that Dodie Bellamy is pointing out the middle class tendency toward a false politeness in which "we don't discuss things like that." This contirbutes toward an environment in which we pretend that privilege doesn't exist ("oh really we're all the same; we're all just poets"). And to point out that that is in fact false is perceived as impolite, or worse yet as complaining, whining, or "bitching." In fact, in a recent forum on class & poetics which I edited and organized with Robin Tremblay-McGaw, working class folks were reluctant to speak for the very reason that they would be labelled as such ("oh, quit you're complaining, etc.) But there's a helluva lot of interesting work to be done on class & literature, and it is imperative that working class folks be part of that discussion.
^^^

>From: Stephen Ellis <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: more power to the affluent poets
>Date: Thu, Sep 2, 1999, 5:32 AM
>

> Yr right, working class people often DO have more openness re: money. But that's pretty much an urban thing. In fact the whole notion of "working class" is urban; Marx didn't farm, and shuddered at the fact of living in a rural setting. There are plenty of provincial mutes who don't have much to say about money or anything else. I find that whole hierarchy of working, middle, upper class
>
> to be over simple. Isn't it more like some kind of daisy chain in wch all participate, even if often enough against their will? And don't you think the "openness" in the working classes toward discussing fiscal matters is sometimes contingent on the feeling that they've been "had" - that's something I've noticed, openness seeming a way to bear up under constant (fiscal & emotional) strain, if not outright (temporal & spatial) abuse. Wch is, okay, not always the case, but
>
> to invoke the openness you speak of without mentioning the perpetual grind being under image to priviledge (ie., something to work toward, like getting a disease) is to keep intent separate from the occasional desperation behind it. Conditions have contexts & causes, middle class is it may be to point this (if not them) out.
>
> S E
>
> From: Dodie Bellamy <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: more power to the affluent poets
> Date: Wed, 1 Sep 1999 15:26:44 -0700
>
> At 2:46 PM -0700 8/31/99, Stephen Ellis wrote:
>
> We DO live on the same planet. Twenty dollars was an arbitrary figure I cldn't (easily) afford either. The point is elsewhere - money is secret.
>
> *Actually, what you're voicing is a middle class value. Working class people (at least the ones I was raised around) are very open about money, how much they make, how much they spend for things. Often they speak about these things with great vigor. Not to ask about money (or to talk about my own money situation) was something I learned when I got involved in the San Francisco poetry scene. It's* > still hard, like not announcing to everybody how much my shoes cost.

>
> Dodie
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

43. krupoetry
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Fri 3 Sep 1999

As a poet, I have been on strike for the past 3 weeks because the dishonourable governor of our state continues to disrespect poets and poetry in general by not appointing a State Poet Laureate when it is the governor's responsibility to have done so after the last poet laureate's term expired.

If you wish to support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so by immediately placing a CANCEL on any vacation plans to a state not civilised enough to have a Poet Laureate!

Poet on Strike
-----Original Message-----
From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:01 PM
Subject: [WW] Re: I can't believe it!!!

From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>

> From: "evvy" <[redacted]>
>
> My computer's been down for a couple of weeks and I come back and > there's not one message from you all! I thought that at least a couple of
> you would be talking to each other...
>
> Just to point out the obvious - you can't network with each other if > you don't get to know each other.
>
> evvy (list owner)
> poet/writer
> [redacted]

Hi evvy,

Very good point. Let me one of the first to apologize to everyone. I know I have been very busy working on other things, that I have neglected to participate.

I hope to more accessible in the future.

Thanks,
Roger Baker II ~ Images Inscript - Free interactive literary e-zine
The place to discuss poetry, stories and be published.
Subscribe via e-mail at mailto:[redacted]
http://www.ImagesInscript.com/

↑ Index

44. david bromige
more pour to the effluent
Fri 3 Sep 1999

---

unhappily, when it comes from on high

↑ Index

45. krupoetry
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Fri 3 Sep 1999

Because the dishonourable governor has such a low regard for poets and by implication performing artists of every genre, please tell all your influential friends in LA not to vacation or film any more movies in this uncouth state...

Poet on Strike
-----Original Message-----
From: CE <[redacted]>
To: krupoetry <[redacted]>; [redacted]
<[redacted]>; Cultural Tourism Coordinator
<[redacted]>; National Endowment for the Arts <[redacted]>; R. U. Outavit <[redacted]>
Cc: every poet on Earth... <[redacted]>; Carolyn Forche
<[redacted]>; Chiron Review <[redacted]>; Ed
Sanders <[redacted]>; Alan Kaufman <[redacted]>; Gary Pacernick <[redacted]>; Professor Cusimano
<[redacted]>
Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 2:00 AM
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Shit, CA doesn't have one, last I checked.

I nominate Alan Kaufman from the list.

But hey, in LA, the chief value is not to get too excited about anything--

So CHILL!

How did I get on _this_ mailing list? "Tereu, tereu, so rudely forced."

Thine in Truth and Art,

CE

"The Poetry doesn't matter." --T.S. Eliot

http://www.melicreview.com/roundtable/

http://www.suite101.com/article.cfm/1994/24136

****
-----Original Message-----
From: krupoetry <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>;
Cultural Tourism Coordinator <[redacted]>; National Endowment for the Arts <[redacted]>; R. U. Outavit
<[redacted]>
Cc: every poet on Earth... <[redacted]>;
Carolyn Forche <[redacted]>; Chiron Review
<[redacted]>; Ed Sanders <[redacted]>;
Alan Kaufman <[redacted]>; Gary Pacernick
<[redacted]>; Professor Cusimano
<[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:23 PM
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

:As a poet, I have been on strike for the past 3 weeks because
the
:dishonourable governor of our state continues to disrespect poets and poetry
:in general by not appointing a State Poet Laureate when it is the governor's
:responsibility to have done so after the last poet laureate's term expired.
:
:If you wish to support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so
by
:immediately placing a CANCEL on any vacation plans to a state not civilised
:enough to have a Poet Laureate!
:

:Poet on Strike
:-----Original Message-----
:From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
:To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
:Date: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:01 PM
:Subject: [WW] Re: I can't believe it!!!
:
:
:From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
:
:> From: "evvy" <[redacted]>
:>
:> My computer's been down for a couple of weeks and I come back
and
:> there's not one message from you all! I thought that at least a couple
:of
:> you would be talking to each other...
:>
:> Just to point out the obvious - you can't network with each other if
:> you don't get to know each other.
:>
:> evvy (list owner)
:> poet/writer
:> [redacted]
:
:Hi evvy,
:
:Very good point. Let me one of the first to apologize to everyone. I :know I have been very busy working on other things, that I have neglected
:to participate.
:
:I hope to more accessible in the future.
:
:
:Thanks,
:Roger Baker II ~ Images Inscript - Free interactive literary e-zine
:The place to discuss poetry, stories and be published.

:Subscribe via e-mail at
mailto:[redacted]
:http://www.ImagesInscript.com/
:
:
:

↑ Index

46. krupoetry
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Fri 3 Sep 1999

It would be troublesome for you and/or the multitude of poet/friends of yours to make other arrangements for skiing this year, but if you wish to support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so simply by clicking "Reply to All" with the briefest of statements: CANCEL

Poet on Strike
-----Original Message-----
From: larry jaffe <[redacted]>
To: krupoetry <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 1:47 AM
Subject: RE: I can't believe it!!!

would not dream of going to that state... ...

how r u doing hon?

lg

-----Original Message-----
From: krupoetry [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:22 PM
To: [redacted]; Cultural Tourism Coordinator; National Endowment for the Arts; R. U. Outavit
Cc: every poet on Earth...; Carolyn Forche; Chiron Review; Ed Sanders;
Alan Kaufman; Gary Pacernick; Professor Cusimano
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

As a poet, I have been on strike for the past 3 weeks because the dishonourable governor of our state continues to disrespect poets and poetry in general by not appointing a State Poet Laureate when it is the governor's responsibility to have done so after the last poet laureate's term expired.

If you wish to support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so by immediately placing a CANCEL on any vacation plans to a state not civilised enough to have a Poet Laureate!

Poet on Strike
-----Original Message-----
From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:01 PM
Subject: [WW] Re: I can't believe it!!!

From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>

> From: "evvy" <[redacted]>
>
> My computer's been down for a couple of weeks and I come back and > there's not one message from you all! I thought that at least a couple
of
> you would be talking to each other...
>
> Just to point out the obvious - you can't network with each other if > you don't get to know each other.
>
> evvy (list owner)
> poet/writer
> [redacted]

Hi evvy,

Very good point. Let me one of the first to apologize to everyone. I know I have been very busy working on other things, that I have neglected to participate.

I hope to more accessible in the future.

Thanks,
Roger Baker II ~ Images Inscript - Free interactive literary e-zine
The place to discuss poetry, stories and be published.
Subscribe via e-mail at mailto:[redacted]
http://www.ImagesInscript.com/

↑ Index

47. krupoetry
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Fri 3 Sep 1999

Every concerned poet expresses regret that any tourist would choose to cancel plans to vacation in the state during the upcoming ski season; but if you so choose to support the wildcat poetry strike, you may do so by removing any investment you have in the state immediately by clicking "Reply to All" with 1 word: REMOVE

Poet on Strike
-----Original Message-----
From: Gary Magee <[redacted]>
To: krupoetry <[redacted]>; Cultural Tourism Coordinator
<[redacted]>; National Endowment for the Arts
<[redacted]>; NH Humanities Council <[redacted]>; NH State Council on the Arts <[redacted]>; NH Writers' Project
<[redacted]>
Cc: every poet on Earth... <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 6:33 AM
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

CANCEL
----- Original Message -----
From: krupoetry <[redacted]>
To: Cultural Tourism Coordinator <[redacted]>; National Endowment for the Arts <[redacted]>; NH Humanities Council
<[redacted]>; NH State Council on the Arts <[redacted]>;
NH Writers' Project <[redacted]>
Cc: every poet on Earth... <[redacted]>
Sent: Friday, 3 September 1999 7:47
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

> It would be troublesome for you and/or the multitude of poet/friends of > yours to make other arrangements for skiing this year, but if you wish to > support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so simply by clicking "Reply
to
> All" with the briefest of statements: CANCEL
>
> Poet on Strike
> -----Original Message-----
> From: larry jaffe <[redacted]>
> To: krupoetry <[redacted]>
> Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 1:47 AM

> Subject: RE: I can't believe it!!!
>
>
> would not dream of going to that state... ...
>
> how r u doing hon?
>
> lg
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: krupoetry [mailto:[redacted]]
> Sent: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:22 PM
> To: [redacted]; Cultural Tourism Coordinator; National > Endowment for the Arts; R. U. Outavit
> Cc: every poet on Earth...; Carolyn Forche; Chiron Review; Ed Sanders;
> Alan Kaufman; Gary Pacernick; Professor Cusimano
> Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
>
> As a poet, I have been on strike for the past 3 weeks because the > dishonourable governor of our state continues to disrespect poets and
poetry
> in general by not appointing a State Poet Laureate when it is the governor's > responsibility to have done so after the last poet laureate's term expired.
>
> If you wish to support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so by > immediately placing a CANCEL on any vacation plans to a state not civilised
> enough to have a Poet Laureate!
>
> Poet on Strike
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
> Date: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:01 PM
> Subject: [WW] Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
>
> From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
>

> > From: "evvy" <[redacted]>
> >
> > My computer's been down for a couple of weeks and I come back and > > there's not one message from you all! I thought that at least a couple
> of
> > you would be talking to each other...
> >
> > Just to point out the obvious - you can't network with each other if > > you don't get to know each other.
> >
> > evvy (list owner)
> > poet/writer
> > [redacted]
>
> Hi evvy,
>
> Very good point. Let me one of the first to apologize to everyone. I > know I have been very busy working on other things, that I have neglected > to participate.
>
> I hope to more accessible in the future.
>
>
> Thanks,
> Roger Baker II ~ Images Inscript - Free interactive literary e-zine
> The place to discuss poetry, stories and be published.
> Subscribe via e-mail at mailto:[redacted]
> http://www.ImagesInscript.com/

...if you wish to be removed from this newsletter list. just say so and poof ~ you will be gone... please forgive the poet Oh, Yes, for duplicate mailings... let him know Click me, Baby! and it will be handled immediately... Do it... NOW: [redacted]

↑ Index

48. Bill Lavender

An Other South: Reading and Symposium

Fri 3 Sep 1999

Please note we have had to change the date to Nov. 6. Sorry...

New Orleans Review
and

Loyola University
announce

An Other South, Symposium and Poetry Reading

PLEASE NOTE WE HAVE HAD TO CHANGE THE DATE:
Saturday, November 6, 1999
University Center, Loyola University, New Orleans

2:00 PM: A Symposium on the Southern, the Regional, the Experimental 8:00 PM: Readings by Contributors to An Other South, New Orleans Review 25-1

Please help us celebrate the publication of this exciting issue of New Orleans Review. All contributors are invited to read, and everyone is invited to attend. Please reply to this email if you would like to attend and need help finding a place to stay in New Orleans, or if you have any other questions. There will be no charge for any of the events.

The Symposium: All interested parties are invited to submit proposals for short presentations; the presentations may be in any form, from a simple essay to a multi-person performance or audio/visual extravaganza, but may not exceed ten minutes in length. Topics should be within the range of issues raised by this issue of New Orleans Review, "An Other South: Experimental Writing in the South." Possible broad topics might include (though certainly not be limited to):

What is an Experiment? Is the term still valid, or has "the Experimental" become just another genre? What is a region? What is the relationship of geographical boundaries (like "the South") with contemporary poetry? What literary traditions (ie, Language, post-Language, surrealism, Modernism, etc.) and/or individual writers are of interest for the current Southern literary scene? What are the political and cannonical implications of experimentation in the South?

This list is not intended to be exhaustive, nor even extensive. Please feel free to suggest your own topics, to combine or divide any of the suggestions.

Please submit proposals as soon as possible- no later than October 20. Submit via email or ground mail to:

Bill Lavender
Co-Editor (with Ralph Adamo) of An Other South, New Orleans Review 25-1
email: [redacted]
ground: 5568 Woodlawn Place
New Orleans, LA 70124
phone [redacted]

The Reading: The list of contributors, all of whom are invited to read, follows. A final list of readers and symposium participants will be published shortly before the event.

Doug MacCash
Jim Leftwich
Hank Lazer
Skip Fox
Joel Dailey
Camille Martin
Gerry Cannon
Celestine Frost
A. Di Michele
Bob Grumman
Lorenzo Thomas
David Thomas Roberts
Niyi Osundare
Jake Berry
Dave Brinks
Lindsay Hill
Alex Rawls
John Elsberg
Mark Spitzer
Bill Myers
Seth Young
Jonathan Brannen
Andy Young
M. Sarki
Greg Fuchs
Christopher Chambers
Bill Lavender
Richard Doherty
Nancy Harris
Dennis Formento
Greg Kelley
Susan Facknitz
Brett Evans
Kay Murphy
Amy Trussel
Paul Naylor
Marla Jernigan
Gina Entrebe

James Saunders
Randy Prunty
Mark Prejsnar
M. Magoolaghan
Rebecca Hyman
)ohnLowther
Lawless Crow

Bill Lavender
Co-Editor, An Other South
New Orleans Review

↑ Index

49. Lowther,John contactual poem
Fri 3 Sep 1999

By proceeding beyond this title you are being abliged to pay the author $17,000
  (which wd leave him debt-free, and earn you a dedication or three)

i don't have to do this can i challenge that can i solemnafraudulate my Ohs and exclamate at trace points that this is the needed thing in this moment ? no
but i wd prefer that this verse not change the world
what cd such a world offer ?
but i claim poetry   challengers
i stand at the top of the mountain gorged with possibility and temporally   in this instance no needs that poetry cd fill save rank economic ones and i doubt you will honor this bargain and do yr part how else will you fail me reader?

↑ Index

50. Al Filreis

Shawn Walker reading/webcast 9/18

Fri 3 Sep 1999

S H A W N W A L K E R
--a reading at the Writers House (and a simultaneous live webcast)

Saturday, September 18
7:00 PM
at the Kelly Writers House
3805 Locust Walk
Philadelphia PA
215 573-WRIT

- - - - - - - - - - - - - -
b o o k l a u n c h

we celebrate the publication of Shawn Walker's
first book of poems
THE PURCHASE OF A DAY

published in affiliation with the Writers House by the "handwritten press" ("handwritten press" books are made and winged by Kristen Gallagher)

For those attending the reading and celebration: come to the Writers House at or before 7 PM on September 18. No RSVP needed.

For those who want to join the celebration from a distance: the live webcast can be viewed--video and audio--through the web beginning at 7 on 9/18. Connections are limited, so you must RSVP to [redacted] to reserve a space. For more information how the webcast works (including information on what your computer needs), go to >> www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/webcast.html <<
or write [redacted] with your questions.

SHAWN WALKER lives and works in West Philadelphia. She is a graduate of Penn's creative writing program, recipient of the Thuron Award and is now undergraduate academic advisor in Penn's department of History. In 1995-96 she was a founding member of the Writers House planning committee and in 1996-97 she was the first Writers House Resident Coordinator.

Her poems are available on her website -- www.english.upenn.edu/~swalker. The "handwritten press" edition of _Purchase of a Day_ can be viewed on the "handwritten press" site:

> www.english.upenn.edu/~wh/handwritten/ <<

"Because for a poet writing is a daily preoccupation, I am interested in other daily habits too - the ones we create for ourselves and especially the ones we are somehow forced to assume in order to participate in what we call our society or our culture.... Money - the ubiquitous abstraction - is the daily habit I'm playing with in all these poems. For about a year and a half now, I've been writing down my daily purchases. At some point, I decided that I would rigorously document every dollar spent in 1999, and use those purchases as the formal spine of my poetic forms." --Shawn Lynn Walker, from a general description of her "money" project

↑ Index

51. krupoetry
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Fri 3 Sep 1999

The overwhelming majority of replies are for the wildcat poetry strike to continue until the dishonourable governor shows the respect to poets that the vocation of poetry deserves by upholding the constitutionally mandated responsibility of the office of governor to appoint the next State Poet Laureate upon the expiration of the incumbent state poet laureate's proscribed term.

Hopefully this deplorable state of personal sacrifice will end sooner than later with one rectifying swish of the pen in the governor's recalcitrant hand; but until then, all that can be done whether or not you support the "pen down" civil action is to immediately click "Reply to All" with the unswerving demand: REMOVE!

i.e. the Governor.

Poet on Strike
-----Original Message-----
From: Rae Bruce <[redacted]>

To: krupoetry <[redacted]>
Cc: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 11:59 AM
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

-----Original Message-----
From: krupoetry <[redacted]>
To: Cultural Tourism Coordinator <[redacted]>; National Endowment for the Arts <[redacted]>; NH Humanities Council
<[redacted]>; NH State Council on the Arts <[redacted]>;
NH Writers' Project <[redacted]>
Cc: every poet on Earth... <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 10:32 AM
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

>Please excuse duplicate mailings.....
>
>Every concerned poet expresses regret that any tourist would choose to >cancel plans to vacation in the state during the upcoming ski season; but if >you so choose to support the wildcat poetry strike, you may do so by >immediately placing a cancel on any vacation plans and indicating your >imminent intent to withdraw all cash or investment you have in a state not >civilised enough to have a State Poet Laureate by clicking "Reply to All"
>with >the clear message: REMOVE
>
>i.e. the governor!
>
>Poet on Strike
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Gary Magee <[redacted]>
>To: krupoetry <[redacted]>; Cultural Tourism Coordinator
><[redacted]>; National Endowment for the Arts
><[redacted]>; NH Humanities Council <[redacted]>; NH State >Council on the Arts <[redacted]>; NH Writers' Project
><[redacted]>
>Cc: every poet on Earth... <[redacted]>
>Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 6:33 AM
>Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
>
>CANCEL

>----- Original Message -----
>From: krupoetry <[redacted]>
>To: Cultural Tourism Coordinator <[redacted]>; National >Endowment for the Arts <[redacted]>; NH Humanities Council
><[redacted]>; NH State Council on the Arts <[redacted]>;
>NH Writers' Project <[redacted]>
>Cc: every poet on Earth... <[redacted]>
>Sent: Friday, 3 September 1999 5:47 AM
>Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
>
>It would be troublesome for you and/or the multitude of your poet/friends >to make other arrangements for skiing this year, but if you wish to >support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so simply by clicking "Reply >to All" with the briefest of statements: CANCEL
>
>Poet on Strike
>-----Original Message-----
>From: larry jaffe <[redacted]>
>To: krupoetry <[redacted]>
>Date: Friday, September 03, 1999 1:47 AM
>Subject: RE: I can't believe it!!!
>
>would not dream of going to that state... ...
>
>how r u doing hon?
>
>lg
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: krupoetry [mailto:[redacted]]
>Sent: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:22 PM
>To: [redacted]; Cultural Tourism Coordinator; National >Endowment for the Arts; R. U. Outavit
>Cc: every poet on Earth...; Carolyn Forche; Chiron Review; Ed Sanders;
>Alan Kaufman; Gary Pacernick; Professor Cusimano
>Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
>As a poet, I have been on strike for the past 3 weeks because the >dishonourable governor of our state continues to disrespect poets and >poetry in general by not appointing a State Poet Laureate when it is the >governor's responsibility to have done so after the last poet laureate's >term >expired.

>
>If you wish to support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so by >immediately placing a CANCEL on any vacation plans to a state not >civilised enough to have a Poet Laureate!
>
>Poet on Strike
>-----Original Message-----
>From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
>Date: Thursday, September 02, 1999 10:01 PM
>Subject: [WW] Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
>From: Roger Baker II <[redacted]>
>
>> From: "evvy" <[redacted]>
>>
>> My computer's been down for a couple of weeks and I come back and >> there's not one message from you all! I thought that at least a couple >>of you would be talking to each other...
>>
>> Just to point out the obvious - you can't network with each other if >> you don't get to know each other.
>>
>> evvy (list owner)
>> poet/writer
>> [redacted]
>
>Hi evvy,
>
>Very good point. Let me one of the first to apologize to everyone. I >know I have been very busy working on other things, that I have neglected >to participate.
>
>I hope to more accessible in the future.
>
>
>Thanks,
>Roger Baker II ~ Images Inscript - Free interactive literary e-zine
>The place to discuss poetry, stories and be published.
>Subscribe via e-mail at mailto:[redacted]

>http://www.ImagesInscript.com/
>
>
>
>...if you wish to be removed from this newsletter list. just say so and poof
~
>you will be gone... please forgive the poet for duplicate mailings... >let us know and it will be handled immediately... Do it...
>NOW: [redacted]
>
>Dear Sir:

Please remove my name from these mailings. I doubt that anyone cares whether poets strike or not. Also, I can't see how denying myself any pleasure I might take from a tourist type activity would make any impact on the people involved.

I agree that it is regrettable that Governor Sheehan has not appointed a poet laureate, but I doubt that the actions you propose will incite her to act any more quickly. I have respect for your passion in this matter and for the time and energy you are putting into it. However, I do not wish to be part of it.

Sincerely,

Rae Bruce

↑ Index

52. Susan M. Schultz

I'm going out to catch a Tinfish. You come too.

Sat 4 Sep 1999

Yo! The new _Tinfish_ is just out--#8, to be exact. Work from Hawai`i,

New Zealand, Australia, the West Coast, even by a few of the geographically challenged! Titles include "How to make a female fleshy airplane" and "Da House of Liberty" and "Marriage is How We Get Our Writing Done" (the author is not married) and "Opportunity Knocks in the Latter Half of the 20th Century" and "Psychology with Nude & Mondrian," to say nothing of "Madam I'm Adam." The marvelous cover has a fish on it (with advent calendar touch).

$5 per
$13 for three issue subscription

Send check or cash to me at 47-391 Hui Iwa Street #7, Kaneohe, HI 96744 USA. And you will receive blessings forever.

Susan Schultz

↑ Index

53. Alan Sondheim
report on the loveandwar project at trAce
Sat 4 Sep 1999

-

LoveandWar

This is a beginning/interim report on the loveandwar site, some observa- tions -

The site's developing rapidly; there are a large number of texts on it, some of which are interactive, and many of which use html and flash tags. Because of the nature of the forms input, some texts 'take' and some don't. The stories are developing in unforeseen directions; the texts have an amazing splintered intensity. Because email addresses and names aren't checked, these inputs also become sites for experiment; many of the add- resses form part of the text, and click to nowhere.

I worry that we may not have the critical mass to sustain beyond the first two weeks - during which there is of course a degree of novelty. I welcome any suggestions concerning new directions we might proceed in - one thing would be to put up participants' webpages which relate, however distantly, to the storylines.

Meanwhile the five backbones are worked as a palimpsest; texts are hung salon-style within them, each author holding hir own. _Jump_ tags placed among the texts move laterally from one backbone to another; anyone can add these tags, ringing around them. If additional webpages are added, these too could be linked by jumping.

The characters have been killed, abandoned, splintered as well - they're digital, virtual idols, they constantly return, since death is meaning- less; once there is a demarcation (say, with Webbie Tookay, with Kyoko Date, with Jennifer, with Cybele, with Alan), there is a frame for con- tinued additions. It is for this reason I wrote, before this project, that _Jennifer has all the time in the world_ - since she inhabits files, pro- tocols, applications, 'locally' and across the Net - an inhabitation that remains constant, no matter what events. In fact, with virtual idols, ava- tars, emanants, _events are absorbed_ into a generalized diegesis created by readings, rereadings, misreadings; there are no occurrences whatsoever.

Virtual idols as well can be thought of as _resonances,_ or _reverbera- tions_ among sheaves of files - by this I mean that their (proper) names are linked, each citation, _say,_ of Jennifer or jennifer, linked to every other - it is this _skein_ that constitutes appearance, fiction, narra- tive, no matter how wildly disparate the individuated texts or files ap- pear to be. This might be considered itself a new occurrence in fiction, related to cutups, the novels of Richardson and Sterne, Wittgenstein's anecdotal philosophies, the Romantic fragments of the Atheneum, etc. - to mention a few of the older sources.

To contribute, go to http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm and check on any of the five backbone sites; to discuss the material, go to the trAce Webboard (from http://trace.ntu.ac.uk) and check out the Love and War, Avatar, Cyborg, and Experimental conferences.

↑ Index

54. Philip Nikolayev
IDEAS
Sat 4 Sep 1999

IDEAS

outofanidea

andImputtinginanother anotheridea callthefirstideamother andtheotherdaughter

howdiditemerge

pardoncomeagain

↑ Index

55. Lowther,John contests
Sat 4 Sep 1999

{poetix}

has anyone got the info handy regarding the next National Poetry Series
and
New American Poetry

i'm speaking of Who the judges are?
as well as the guidelines

much obliged if so

↑ Index

56. John Tranter
The Russians are Coming
Sat 4 Sep 1999

I just had to share this with you:
==========
From the newsroom of the BBC World Service
Thursday, July 29, 1999 Published at 08:17 GMT 09:17 UK
World: Europe

Russian soldier poet

The Russian officer in charge of relations with NATO, General Leonid Ivashov, has been accepted as a member of the Russian Writers' Union.

General Ivashov, who is a poet, told the armed forces newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda that the image of officers as people with limited intellectual development did not reflect reality.

He said he tried to use every spare minute to write poetry -- on flights, waiting at the airport and in cars.

- - from John Tranter, Jacket magazine

↑ Index

57. Alan Sondheim
ROSETTA
Mon 6 Sep 1999

==

THE STONE

THE AA TEXT

arms writing the travel, the wonder or marvel of it, motility, the star, singular, above, pinned or fulcrum for the text's organism, organism's inscript "or a moment, or a movement of her arms," she said, and everyone understood. "The Little Gathering," "Where we have been, and where we hope to go." further than others have spoken

THE BB TEXT

you will be arms and folds and there is something sad about your being oh so here I do think, your arms cry to me, they have tears, they breathe somewhere, you will find o them

"these are your arms writing here" "there are the spaces that your arms have written" "this is the writing of your arms" "this is the writing possessed by your arms" "this is your arms' possession" arms which are swollen and endless turned towards abdomens, flooded adhesives, disks, joining-spheres, mumbled arms, speaking-for arms; arms speaking for mouths, for legs; arms speaking for breasts, for ears; arms speaking for hands, swollen fingers speaking on handed arms

we have spoken of the arms; we have been spoken to ... we have spoken further of the breasts, of mothering of the arms, of the marma marmoraceous stones; we will murmur these murmurs, mourn the measure of the body, of all things which are not things, trapped and not trapped, speaking for one time, for the first time (speaking for one time, for the second time) - breathing into this, one returns, doesn't one, to the swollen? to the distended membrane, the slightest difference in the pressure of air, molecular memories, Gaia cut off from herself, a Capital idea or Gaia resonant, say, would you have a light dear fellow? She stopped, just for a moment, and continued. "I didn't know anything about my arms before now." /* The Quandary of Writing: Who / Where */ deflecting the wonder or turning elsewhere, in shame, in guilt, _these_ arms, none other than brought back from the speaking of the others

THE PROGRAM TEXT (chmod 777)

```
dialog --msgbox "please help me in your new body" 0 0 dialog --yesno "addicted to the vacancy of your body" 0 0 dialog --msgbox "your choices within you difference or not  otherwise as if it were always otherwise to help yourself  within your new body " 0 0 dialog --yesno "you are your very new body" 0 0 dialog --inputbox "do write your very new body now" 0 0 2>> bb dialog --yesno "are you wearing your new body" 0 0 dialog --inputbox "your new body writing yourself here please" 0 0 2>> bb dialog --msgbox "breaking with yourself now and holding breath" 0 0 dialog --inputbox "returning for your breathing please" 0 0 2>> bb dialog --inputbox "returning for your minding breathing please" 0 0 2>> bb dialog --msgbox "you will be moving somewhere else  another space  to write in  later  what will be the combining  an arrangement of stones  thick swollen marbles and limestones  granites  on the ground there is perhaps the desert  your arms working the stones  working them other spaces of alterity  you thought there was only one  a marvel or a travel  "  0 0
dialog --inputbox "a marvel or a travel   your arms writing" 0 0 2>> aa dialog --yesno "heere bee wonders" 0 0 dialog --inputbox "deflecting or a derail or a return" 0 0 2>> bb
```

```
dialog --inputbox "or a moment or a movement of your arms" 0 0 2>> aa dialog --msgbox "coming to the other" 0 0 dialog --textbox aa 0 0 dialog --msgbox "returning from the other" 00 dialog --textbox bb 0 0 dialog --inputbox "adding to the other" 0 0 2>> aa dialog --inputbox "adding from the other" 0 0 2>> bb dialog --msgbox "end" 0 0
```

↑ Index

58. Alan Sondheim

diary etc.

Mon 6 Sep 1999

=-==

For those who are interested, I've been keeping a diary of sorts (sometimes lame, sometimes with pieces from the texts, etc.) that might be of interest at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm and again I'd urge you to join trAce (the online writing community) and contribute, especially to some of the avatar, experimental writing, etc. conferences - as well as to the loveandwar piece - all of this can be accessed from that page -

Thanks,

Alan

http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt - partial mirror at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html co-moderator Cyber-culture, Cybermind, Fiction of Philosophy (fop-l)

↑ Index

59. Tosh

TamTam Books in the U.K.

Mon 6 Sep 1999

In case anyone in the UK are interested, Amazon.com UK are now selling Boris Vian's I Spit on Your Graves & Serge Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov.

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

60. Mark W Scroggins
Diaeresis Chapbooks
Mon 6 Sep 1999

Dear listmembers:

DIAERESIS CHAPBOOKS announces its fourth publication, and reannounces its first three chapbooks:

Diaeresis Chapbook Number 4:

BILL BURMEISTER, The Gunner's Daughter: A Verse Play

Burmeister reinvents the Greek drama as a dark Boys in the Hall farce; Diana and Actaeon are retold in twenty-first century vulgate; American Pie, scripted by Pierre Klossowski under the spell of Zukofsky's "A"-21.

Diaeresis Chapbook Number 3:

C.S. GISCOMBE, Two Sections from Practical Geography

"C.S. Giscombe has opened up new territory, where we've least expected it, seeking the roots of identity in a poetics that is literally projective: across cultures, centuries, races." --Ron Silliman on Giscombe's _Giscome Road_ (1998)

Diaeresis Chapbook Number 2:

E. A. MILLER, The Underbrush of Abundance

Miller is the author of _Eight Poems_ (1991) and has work in _Chain_, _American Letters & Commentary_, etc. _The Underbrush of Abundance_ is a cosmopolitan, terrorist, lyrically repetitive poem in twenty-six sections.

Diaeresis Chapbook Number 1:

HANK LAZER, As It Is

"Honesty is the best policy--in poetry as in all else. These apt, reductive verses keep a locus of faith with skill and moving commitment. Keep 'em coming!" --Robert Creeley on _As It Is_ Diaeresis Chapbooks are $4 apiece postpaid; any three chapbooks can be ordered for $10; all four for $12. Please make checks payable to Mark Scroggins, 401 NE 45th St., Boca Raton FL 33431.

The editors invite interested authors to submit chapbook-length manuscripts for consideration. Please send two copies of your MS, with a SASE and a brief cover note, to the above address.

↑ Index

61. maz881
socially pertinent texts
Mon 6 Sep 1999

<<Mr. Ellis's two recent posts (re: ponying up for what one ostensibly "believes" in), along with Mr. Bramhall's Ur post, are the most socially pertinent texts I've seen displayed here in the last six months.

Tom Beckett>>

most days i wake up. & i go into the kitchen. and read a socially pertinent text on the wall:

PO ET RY
EQ
UA
LS
CO DE PE
ND
EN CY

by Tom Beckett

↑ Index

62. Deena Larsen
Hypertext 00
Tue 7 Sep 1999

Apologies for Cross Posting

ACM Hypertext '00
The 11th ACM Conference on Hypertext and Hypermedia San Antonio, Texas, May 30 - June 3, 2000
http://www.ht00.org

C A L L F O R P A P E R S
deadline 1st October 1999

(Our apologies for any multiple or redundant postings! This is a once-only mailshot. If you are not on the Hypertext 2000 subscriber mailing list, you will receive no further bulletins on the conference.)

Hypertext 2000 is the 11th in the premier international series of ACM conferences on hypertext and hypermedia. The conference will provide a forum where attendees can present, exchange and discuss original ideas and exciting experiences relating to hypermedia (objects, links, paths, spaces, time, collections, navigational aids, etc) and the use of hypermedia concepts and technologies in special domains (e.g., authoring, publishing, human-computer interaction, digital libraries, electronic literature, computer-supported co-operative work, databases, operating systems, software engineering, education, global information systems such as the WWW).

Hypertext 2000 will have a wide range of tracks and activities, with submissions being invited in the categories of full papers, short papers, panels, workshops, courses, posters, demonstrations and a doctoral consortium.

ACM Hypertext 2000 will be co-located with Digital Libraries 2000, making it easy for delegates to attend both of these highly relevant conferences one after the other. Both conferences are being held in the beautiful and historic Menger hotel, located in the heart of San Antonio, Texas. The city of San Antonio is a popular tourist destination, with plenty to see and do within walking distance of the Menger, as well as many other attractions within a short driving distance.

Critical Dates for Hypertext 2000:

October 1, 1999 Full Papers, Panels, Workshops, Courses and Technical Briefings due

December 1, 2000 Notification of acceptance

January 17, 2000 Short papers, Posters, Demos, Doctoral Consortium and Exhibit submissions due

February 1, 2000 Acceptance notification for Short papers, Posters, Demos, Doctoral Consortium and Exhibits.
Final version of all contributions due

May 31 - June 2 Hypertext 2000 Conference

May 30; June 2-4 Digital Libraries 2000 and Hypertext 2000 workshops and courses

For more information about Hypertext 2000, see the home page at http://www.ht00.org

If you would like to subscribe to the Hypertext 2000 mailing list, send an email to "[redacted]" with a message body of "SUBSCRIBE htdl00news <full name of subscriber>" Once you are subscribed, you will receive regular updates containing conference news, such as keynote speakers, calls for posters and other categories, technical programme updates and other news as it comes to hand.

We look forward to meeting with you at Hypertext 2000!

↑ Index

63. Jim Andrews
Vispo Audio: Some Joseph Keppler work from the 80's
Tue 7 Sep 1999

Vispo Audio
http://www.vispo.com/audio

Back in 1988 I met Joseph Keppler in Victoria BC, where I was then producing a literary radio program called FINE LINES at CFUV FM that aired on 15 campus/community stations across Canada. I produced a couple of radio shows on his work, one of which I have just put up as the first content available on the new Vispo Audio page. I'm proud to have some of Joe's work up as the first audio available at Vispo.

A lot has changed since I produced those shows, but listening to the Keppler shows now, they still sound pretty good. He's an amazing poet, doing very different work now than what is on the 1988 show. This show, which is an hour long broken into two half hour real audio files, features work of Keppler from the eighties--he's legendary around here for his readings--very sound, and commentary by Trudy Mercer, Stephen Thomas, and Carl Diltz on Keppler's work.

Regards,
Jim Andrews

↑ Index

64. Jerrold Shiroma
Deadline for Small Press Listing @ Duration
Tue 7 Sep 1999

The deadline for the September 11th posting for Small Press Publications is this Friday. Any publisher who wants to have their publications listed, send all pertinent information to [redacted] . If including blurbs, please keep them to a reasonable length.

↑ Index

65. Tom Beckett
Re: more pour to the effluent
Tue 7 Sep 1999

I reminded of my 2 Rivers model of life: one slogs away with a foot in a river of honey and a foot in a river of shit. Sometimes the aromas are distinct. Sometimes they are as one.

tom beckett

↑ Index

66. Poetry Project
open for business
Tue 7 Sep 1999

As of today, the Poetry Project is open again after a long and lovely summer of, as poet Sharon Mesmer puts it: "writing, reading, napping, reading, writing, napping, snacking, reading, snacking, reading, snacking, reading."

Other announcements: In July a great bolt of lightening struck St. Mark's Church, frying our telephones, answering machine, and modems. That's why many of you were unable to contact us through August. We're happy to report that we are once again accessible, phoneable, e-mailable, etc.

And speaking of being on-line, there's a new assortment of work in "Poets & Poems" by

Mary Burger
Garrett Caples
Theodore Enslin
Wendy Rose
Jonathan Skinner

at http://www.poetryproject.com

with also an updated Calendar with the October readings and a special reading on September 29th. The new workshop information is also on-line, as well as an updated Tiny Press Center with at least half of all the lovely publications that were sent to us this summer (the other half will be going up over the course of this month). So enjoy!

Happy September,
The Poetry Project

↑ Index

67. David Buuck
SF Bay Area Event
Tue 7 Sep 1999

Field Work

with Arnold J. Kemp & David Buuck

Headlands Center for the Arts
Thurs Sep 9 - 7:30 pm

Artists who practice outside of the aesthetic mainstream in a culture of dwindling public funding for the arts are increasingly dependent on the various communities - local, intellectual, political - that provide mutual support networks for art and ideas. Artist/Curator Arnold J. Kemp and writer/editor David Buuck will discuss their own participation in the Bay Area communities and national "scenes" within which they work. They will explore not only how their individual work is affected by community, but also how working as a curator or editor reflects another kind of involvement in the community-wide production of art and culture.

Arnold J. Kemp is Associate Visual Arts Curator at Yerba Buena Center for the Arts, as well as being a visual artist and writer. His most recent solo exhibition was at ESP in San Francisco last year.

David Buuck co-edits Tripwire: a journal of poetics with Yedda Morrison. He is a 1999 Artist-in-Residence at the Headlands Center for the Arts. A new chapbook is forthcoming from Melodeon Poetry Systems this fall.

for more info please call [redacted] x 28.
Headlands Center for the Arts

↑ Index

68. david bromige
the lack of a state poet laureate
Tue 7 Sep 1999

It was not immediately apparent which state was in question. Sifting thru further posts, one is able to discern it is none other than Calif, my home state for 37 years, 37 years during which time I have never known who the PL was, nor have I noticed any damage to poetry resulting from this absence or, indeed, presence.

However, to allay all uneasiness, I am declaring myself California Poet Laureate and asking you : what do poets need with a governor?

David Bromige, CPL

↑ Index

69. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers hunger and help
Tue 7 Sep 1999

Please visit

thehungersite.com

to make daily contributions (free to you) of food to those in need around the world.
A simple click.

Todd Baron
ReMap

↑ Index

70. Maria Damon
jobs fwd
Tue 7 Sep 1999

> X-From_: [redacted] Tue Sep 7 12:03 CDT 1999
> Approved-By: [redacted]
> MIME-Version: 1.0
> Date: Tue, 7 Sep 1999 12:37:24 -0500
> Reply-To: [redacted]
> From: [redacted]
> Subject: MLA bibliography staff positions
> To: [redacted]
>
> With the assistance of a grant from the Mellon Foundation, the MLA International Bibliography will be expanding its subject scope to include teaching. The following full-time bibliography staff positions are now open in the MLA office in New York City.
>
> INDEXER FOR TEACHING OF WRITING
>
> Index scholarly publications on the teaching of writing for a new section of the MLA International Bibliography. Must have PhD in rhetoric and composition or English or American literature, with publications in the field, and a strong interest in research on teaching, theories of teaching, curriculum, testing, classroom practices, rhetoric and composition studies, and other subjects related to the teaching of writing. Must have a solid knowledge of terminology and reference sources in composition and rhetoric, an excellent command of English, editing and proofreading experience, and excellent organization skills. A good knowledge of at least one language other than English is desirable.
> Send letter of application and resume to MLA, Box TFR, 10 Astor Place, New York, NY 10003. Deadline: 1 October.
>
> INDEXER FOR TEACHING OF LITERATURE
> Index scholarly publications on the teaching of literature for a new section of the MLA International Bibliography. Must have PhD in English or American literature, with publications in the field, and a strong interest in research on teaching, theories of teaching, > curriculum, testing, classroom practices, and other subjects related to the teaching of literature. Must have a solid knowledge of terminology and reference sources in the field, a good knowledge of at least one language other than English, an excellent command of English, editing and proofreading experience, and excellent organization skills.

>
> Send letter of application and resume to MLA, Box TFI, 10 Astor Place, New York, NY 10003. Deadline: 1 October.

↑ Index

71. Keith Tuma
fwd from Carolyn Burke
Tue 7 Sep 1999

Carolyn Burke has asked me to forward her letter below about developments in MIna Loy land.

Keith Tuma

***

Carolyn Burke
322 Walnut Ave
Santa Cruz, CA 95060
U.S.A.
Tel [redacted] Fax [redacted] Email [redacted]

Mina Loy's life is the stuff of drama. Given her expatriate experience, participation in the radical art movements of the early twentieth century, and romance with the boxer/poet Arthur Cravan, it is not surprising that her life has been recast in a work of fiction. It is disturbing to note, however, that Antonia Logue's novel Shadow-Box (Bloomsbury, Grove/Atlantic, 1999) relies heavily on my biography Becoming Modern, The Life of Mina Loy (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 1996; U. of California P., 1997)--not only for historical facts but also for overarching themes, treatment and interpretation of cultural milieux, and in some cases, narrative structures. A comparison of the two books shows that while Logue sought to transform this material, her novel piggybacks on my work, often interweaving innovative parts of the biography and presenting them as "fact." I have been advised that this use of my work is not in itself actionable, but it nonetheless raises issues inherent in the genre of novelization. On Logue's behalf one could argue that since the publication of Becoming Modern Mina Loy's life has entered the public domain. Judging by the stares of non-recognition that still greet me in bookshops, however, such a claim is misleading. When I began work on the biography twenty years ago, she had been so thoroughly forgotten that most people thought I was writing about the film star. Since its publication critics have recognized Becoming Modern as definitive. As such it has a different status from lives of figures like Gertrude Stein, Hemingway, or Pound, about whom new biographies are written every decade: for this reason Logue's appropriations are all the more salient. Moreover, although she does credit Becoming Modern as one of two "outstanding sources," this acknowledgement is misleading. It suggests only a partial recognition of a much greater indebtedness and could be thought to imply some form of cooperation on my part. While Logue appears to have done no original research into the life of Mina Loy, relying entirely upon the biography, I was never asked to lend my support to her project. Excerpts from reviews of Shadow-Box (none of which mentions Becoming Modern) partially demonstrate the nature of the appropriations:

thematic:

--the biography's major themes reappear as those of the novel: "the conflicting forces at work in the first decades of the century; the dynamism and energy of new movements in art and thought, as opposed to the left-over Victorian propriety that traps the talented, intelligent Mina in an early loveless marriage; forward-looking New York, where her first poems are published and appreciated, versus stuck-in-the-past Europe" (Literary Review)

intellectual and cultural milieux & forms:

-- While Becoming Modern is what made it possible for Logue to evoke the lively artistic backgrounds, from Post-Impressionism to Futurism and Dada, not to mention Loy's lovers and friends like Marinetti, Duchamp, and Picabia, she is credited with original portrayals of "the intellectual excitement and controversy surrounding the arts in the pre-WWI period," even with creating "witty and illuminating" glimpses of the period's luminaries (Kirkus)--the details of which derive from my treatment of these movements and figures.

some uses of specific details, settings, and structures:

To demonstrate the nature of Logue's borrowing, readers should compare the following sections of each work:

Shadow-Box	Becoming Modern
pp. 28: Mina walking Oda in Gardens	p. 96: detail based on my Luxembourg experience, inserted for verisimilitude
p. 29: treatment of the name "Loy"	p. 97: interpretation of the fragmentary evidence

pp. 34-35: LeSavoureux story pp. 102-104: interpretation, repeated as fact considered controversial by

Mina Loy's family

pp. 95-98: presentation of pp. 151-153: original material on Frances Stevens and research, interpretation, Italian Futurists and staging of scenes

pp. 99-102: narrative use of pp. 155-157: original Futurist serata, Florence interpretation, staging of scene

pp. 110-111: Marinetti's trip to pp. 171-172: Vallombrosa "invention" of this meeting

based on fragmentary evidence

pp. 161-163: scene of Cravan pp. 263-265: interpretation leaving Salina Cruz and staging of material woven from diverse sources

pp. 168-176: Loy at Arensbergs', pp. 212-223: interpretation relations with Duchamp, Williams, & treatment of this group & New York Dada individuals including details of badinage with Duchamp

pp. 177-200: Cravan, Independents pp. 223-233, 234-251, details, structured in two parts, with Cravan story interpretations & narrative starting on p. 182 device of highlighting Cravan

story (my Ch. 11)

pp. 263-267: Salina Cruz scene, details pp. 263-265, recreation of boat, communication system, role of Cravan's fate from disparate of Bob Brown sources including Brown Given my response to these uses of my biography, it is for someone else to judge Shadow-Box. Others will decide whether it transforms the biographical materials, or whether it remains a derivative work penned, as Jonathan Dee observes of recent novels based on the lives of writers, "ostensibly as an act of homage, but also, not coincidentally, as a way of grabbing up the genuine cachet. . . geniuses still deliver, in order to enhance the value of one's own work." ("The Reanimators, Harper's, June 1999). It would also be instructive for Mina Loy enthusiasts to compare Logue's novel with Albert Guerard's The Hotel in the Jungle (Baskerville, 1996), a work of imaginative fiction composed before my book appeared and based on what was then known of the Loy/Cravan story.

Guerard made the legend his own by creating a setting for their romance (the hotel) and a group of characters who retrospectively piece together their story. While it is a pleasure to see novelists' creative transformations of historical material (and there are many successful examples), Logue's raises serious questions about literary method and publishing ethics. Caveat lector, and may this brief account stimulate further discussion.

↑ Index

72. Poetics List Administration

SJMOSt / "David Larsen" <[redacted]>

Tue 7 Sep 1999

From: "David Larsen" <[redacted]>
Subject: SJMOSt

IT'S ITS "IT'S ITS" IN ITS "IT'S" IN ITS FURY --

THE SAN JOSE MANUAL OF STYLE

2nd issue feat. work by:
Mark Gonzales
Mary Burger
Aja Couchois Duncan
Raymond Pettibon
Alex Cory

Send one concealed dollar and seventy-seven cents' postage to:

Beth Murray & David Larsen, co-editors
The San Jose Manual of Style
460 N. 3rd St. #4
San Jose, CA 95112

↑ Index

73. Mark Weiss

Re: the lack of a state poet laureate

Tue 7 Sep 1999

I don't think you qualify: aren't you an alien (or former alien)?

At 11:12 AM 9/7/99 -0700, you wrote:
> It was not immediately apparent which state was in question.
>Sifting thru further posts, one is able to discern it is none other than >Calif, my home state for 37 years, 37 years during which time I have never >known who the PL was, nor have I noticed any damage to poetry resulting >from this absence or, indeed, presence.

>
>However, to allay all uneasiness, I am declaring myself California Poet
>Laureate and asking you : what do poets need with a governor?
>
>David Bromige, CPL
>
>

↑ Index

74. Maria Damon

Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke

Tue 7 Sep 1999

---

i would advise professor (?) burke to contact the National Writers' Union. For the price of your tax deductible union dues, advice on grievance procedures is yours for the asking. it is very distressing when original research that was conducted in relative oblivion and with liitle cultural support is then appropriated as "common knowledge" about a subject; but it also speaks to the influential nature of our work, and how invisible these lines of influence are. i'm glad to be alerted of this. i wish it weren't so, but it happens all the time and should indeed be made matter for public discussion.

At 3:28 PM -0500 9/7/99, Keith Tuma wrote:
>Carolyn Burke has asked me to forward her letter below about developments >in MIna Loy land.
>
>Keith Tuma
>
>
>
>
>Carolyn Burke
>322 Walnut Ave
>Santa Cruz, CA 95060
>U.S.A.
>Tel [redacted] Fax [redacted] Email [redacted]
>
>
> Mina Loy's life is the stuff of drama. Given her expatriate >experience, participation in the radical art movements of the early >twentieth century, and romance with the boxer/poet Arthur Cravan, it is not >surprising that her life has been recast in a work of fiction.
> It is disturbing to note, however, that Antonia Logue's novel

>Shadow-Box (Bloomsbury, Grove/Atlantic, 1999) relies heavily on my >biography Becoming Modern, The Life of Mina Loy (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, >1996; U. of California P., 1997)--not only for historical facts but also >for overarching themes, treatment and interpretation of cultural milieux, >and in some cases, narrative structures. A comparison of the two books >shows that while Logue sought to transform this material, her novel >piggy-backs on my work, often interweaving innovative parts of the >biography and presenting them as "fact."
> I have been advised that this use of my work is not in itself >actionable, but it nonetheless raises issues inherent in the genre of >novelization. On Logue's behalf one could argue that since the publication >of Becoming Modern Mina Loy's life has entered the public domain. Judging >by the stares of non-recognition that still greet me in bookshops, however, >such a claim is misleading. When I began work on the biography twenty >years ago, she had been so thoroughly forgotten that most people thought I >was writing about the film star. Since its publication critics have >recognized Becoming Modern as definitive. As such it has a different >status from lives of figures like Gertrude Stein, Hemingway, or Pound, >about whom new biographies are written every decade: for this reason >Logue's appropriations are all the more salient.
>Moreover, although she does credit Becoming Modern as one of two >"outstanding sources," this acknowledgement is misleading. It suggests >only a partial recognition of a much greater indebtedness and could be >thought to imply some form of cooperation on my part. While Logue appears >to have done no original research into the life of Mina Loy, relying >entirely upon the biography, I was never asked to lend my support to her >project.
> Excerpts from reviews of Shadow-Box (none of which mentions >Becoming Modern) partially demonstrate the nature of the appropriations:
>
>thematic:
>
>--the biography's major themes reappear as those of the novel: "the >conflicting forces at work in the first decades of the century; the >dynamism and energy of new movements in art and thought, as opposed to
the >left-over Victorian propriety that traps the talented, intelligent Mina in >an early loveless marriage; forward-looking New York, where her first poems >are published and appreciated, versus stuck-in-the-past Europe" (Literary >Review)
>
>intellectual and cultural milieux & forms:

>
>-- While Becoming Modern is what made it possible for Logue to evoke the >lively artistic backgrounds, from Post-Impressionism to Futurism and Dada, >not to mention Loy's lovers and friends like Marinetti, Duchamp, and >Picabia, she is credited with original portrayals of "the intellectual >excitement and controversy surrounding the arts in the pre-WWI period," >even with creating "witty and illuminating" glimpses of the period's >luminaries (Kirkus)--the details of which derive from my treatment of these >movements and figures.
>
>some uses of specific details, settings, and structures:
>
>To demonstrate the nature of Logue's borrowing, readers should compare the >following sections of each work:
>
>Shadow-Box Becoming Modern
>
>pp. 28: Mina walking Oda in p. 96: detail based on my >Luxembourg Gardens experience, inserted for
>
>
> verisimilitude
>
>p. 29: treatment of the name "Loy" p. 97: interpretation of the > fragmentary evidence
>
>pp. 34-35: LeSavoureux story pp. 102-104: interpretation, >repeated as fact considered controversial by
>
> Mina Loy's family
>
>pp. 95-98: presentation of pp. 151-153: original > material on Frances Stevens and research,
>interpretation,
>Italian Futurists and staging of scenes
>
>pp. 99-102: narrative use of pp. 155-157: original > Futurist serata, Florence
> interpretation, staging of scene
>
>pp. 110-111: Marinetti's trip to pp. 171-172:
>Vallombrosa "invention" of this meeting

>
> based on fragmentary evidence
>
>pp. 161-163: scene of Cravan pp. 263-265: interpretation >leaving Salina Cruz and staging of material woven > from diverse sources
>
>pp. 168-176: Loy at Arensbergs', pp. 212-223: interpretation >relations with Duchamp, Williams, & treatment of this group &
>New York Dada individuals including >details
> of badinage with Duchamp
>
>pp. 177-200: Cravan, Independents pp. 223-233, 234-251,
>details,
>structured in two parts, with Cravan story interpretations & narrative > starting on p. 182 device of >highlighting Cravan
> story (my Ch. 11)
>
>pp. 263-267: Salina Cruz scene, details pp. 263-265, recreation > of boat, communication system, role of Cravan's >fate from disparate >of Bob Brown sources including Brown
>
> Given my response to these uses of my biography, it is for someone >else to judge Shadow-Box. Others will decide whether it transforms the >biographical materials, or whether it remains a derivative work penned, as >Jonathan Dee observes of recent novels based on the lives of writers,
>"ostensibly as an act of homage, but also, not coincidentally, as a way of >grabbing up the genuine cachet. . . geniuses still deliver, in order to >enhance the value of one's own work." ("The Reanimators, Harper's, June >1999).
> It would also be instructive for Mina Loy enthusiasts to compare >Logue's novel with Albert Guerard's The Hotel in the Jungle (Baskerville, >1996), a work of imaginative fiction composed before my book appeared and >based on what was then known of the Loy/Cravan story. Guerard made the >legend his own by creating a setting for their romance (the hotel) and a >group of characters who retrospectively piece together their story.
> While it is a pleasure to see novelists' creative transformations
>of historical material (and there are many successful examples), Logue's >raises serious questions about literary method and publishing ethics.

>Caveat lector, and may this brief account stimulate further discussion.

↑ Index

75. Tisa Bryant
Re: TamTam Books in the U.K.
Tue 7 Sep 1999

> In case anyone in the UK are interested, Amazon.com UK are now selling Boris Vian's I Spit on Your Graves & Serge Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov.

Small Press Distribution in Berkeley, CA is also selling these books, if you'd like to support small presses and their most humble and loyal distributor.... http://www.spdbooks.org

Tisa

****

Today we declare:
First, they are living in a Nono form;
Second, they are Nono lives;
Third, they make us feel Nono;
Fourth, they make us become Nono;
Fifth, we Nono.
Lan Ma
"Manifesto of Nonoism"
(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
****

↑ Index

76. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 7 Sep 1999

> It would be troublesome for you and/or the multitude of poet/friends of yours to make other arrangements for skiing this year, but if you wish to support the wildcat poetry strike you may do so simply by clicking "Reply to
> All" with the briefest of statements: CANCEL
>
> Poet on Strike

this has all the memory of the ART STRIKE stuff MAIL-ART put on all those years ago!!! a so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a better usage of your time; [redacted]

thanks pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

77. MAXINE CHERNOFF

Re: the lack of a state poet laureate

Tue 7 Sep 1999

David: You have my vote. Maxine Chernoff

On Tue, 7 Sep 1999, david bromige wrote:

> It was not immediately apparent which state was in question. Sifting thru further posts, one is able to discern it is none other than Calif, my home state for 37 years, 37 years during which time I have never known who the PL was, nor have I noticed any damage to poetry resulting from this absence or, indeed, presence.
>
> However, to allay all uneasiness, I am declaring myself California Poet Laureate and asking you : what do poets need with a governor?
>
> David Bromige, CPL

↑ Index

78. Philip Nikolayev

POETRY AS CODEPENDENCY?

Tue 7 Sep 1999

Did I hallucinate, or did someone use the phrase "poetry as codependency" on this list today? I can't remember in what connection, and for some reason I can't find that message any more. I'm asking because, mysteriously, I happen to have a very old prosepoem that has just that title; I found it just the other day digging through some of my very olden files. It's one of those weird coincidences that seem so hard to explain. Here it is.

Cheers,
Philip Nikolayev
[redacted]

POETRY AS CODEPENDENCY

A bonny good time. Whatever the shelf will bear the mind will brook. Vine-ripe, like sunsets in Virginia, thoughts. Allow me to pass the dynamite. Patterns on north fabric fashion our bee-hivior. And cocktails of toll coins along the route. And poetry, the typoed self. The demon of velocity blood wrinkles. The Gag Hag Tabernacle. Professionalism is analysis. Lo, the gossamer leads me! Aha, Lord Saintly! Joseph the Fox. Dry as the chrysalis. The strangest of them all, the therapeutic. In delicate playboyance, talking extreme sense. The chestered, dynamited. Goosage. Goosage. I'm telling ya. Goosage. I'm telling ya. It's goosage. The mind is a disgusting thing. Vines have a climbing habit. We are responsible for the provision of literature. I am John from Johntown, a Johntown John. I am Dr. Lau, I work in intensive care. And then I realize that it's mesquite broiled. From the right nipple to the cleft: thoughts gone considerably left. The road that makes a hill's informal spine. Word knows the health of the heath. Like a study in thief psychology. Improfound, fluxes across reality the urgent origins of your sea-urchined brain. From Kennedy to Normandy, that's our now concept. Vary the parameters. What better time to break the sad engagement? Nope. A clutch. Eyebrows and bitter filaments of truth; we are but its cross-section, like a blooming crutch. Poetry is slow a-going, but fast a-enjoying. Two stanzas for Kansas. Marx. Bingo, Two Marks. Then the boys decided to go for a slice of slaughter. Unrelevant, un-to-the-point. How best to subdivide your business cake. But above all we remain as brothers, big as gold. Let us all have us a bonnie good time. Allow me to pass the dynamite. Just kidding. A bonny good time. This wicked code of codependency: an injured mutual unrequited love finds tiny profit in truths about itself, and freedom scarcely camps on its doorstep. The lovers, rather than mimicking the points of a shiny compass in predetermined pirouetting, seem like a clumsy pair of reciprocal crutches sloppily held together by bracing pity, tango-torqued to a broken rhythm like elements in a slow-motion complicated cameo larger pratfall, but the curtain refuses to deliver the coup de grace. For a week branches are bullets, centering and ascending. A little car stops to pray at the red light. The rift, elsehow, for I wishn't of sorry pity to starry beauty. Persiflage Mediterranean. Persiflage Manhattan. Getting a bizarreness reaction from underground. Dirty coffee cups applaud, our lady of the armadillo. Biting off more cake than money they can puke. Raddle stichomythia. Robert Maria Paul Waltham. Hello, my name is Charles Cynthia Davis. I have a hard time coping wi/ my thoughts. 'Ts like a general let's dance away our lives. And this span new, bang old, blues. I'll try anything once. feels // wrong. A sickness unto love. Thoughts of women's thoughts. I thaw an unprogress in endemic March. Nothing equals anything. Anything equals nothing. The open-ended needle may yet hug the thread, but this thick torn togetherness can't be mended. Falsificatory realism on industrial lips. And pauper the good guy. Wherein your lax justification governs. To describe my condition, the letter arrived today: should I work my sentences backwards, weave my tuna diagonally through the sands, yon eucalypti and butts of floats prevaricate siderated, miled along the newspaper? Thing is, round here they collapse perspective on Fridays, crisscross with sap and savvy. The mind body/boutique. Superior repercussions in a flimflam arboretum drive the bag gorge often away on business. Cloying wallets flip transverse. I haven't recounted them yet out of me. I tried, but failed, seeing how the self ebbs, the butter mourns, the basalt flies. All things have conspired to describe my condition: code pendency is kleptomania.

↑ Index

79. Philip Nikolayev
THE NEW ENGLAND POETRY SCENE
Wed 8 Sep 1999

THE NEW ENGLAND POETRY SCENE

Read now of my poems from the book and since the book. I am, of course, aware that the New England poetry scene is much rich with master upon master upon master. I certainly recognize that as a possibility. But eskoozme, although no Mayflower blood my veins suffuses, I claim title to equal honorarium. Of human and inhuman bloods. But one must abandon conventional notions if one wishes to form intellectually responsible opinions about the nature of things. While I'm talking to you and you listen to me, nothing matters to us except for poetry. The chalfting in my knuckles with I like a text that I can put behind me. I'm doing my sleepable best. Drapes vikram merdallion, again praddle and what you being inslope leftwing of here is mindedly severed and glissome. Because zebeto returns daily, and suffers for his poetry but not for lack of funds. And what next, what happened next? That no hard to describe. The traper ninkle clarped and the betterleg chowelled and mowelled cordighkly on the bailvies of the gower. Drome laristic, mardifle across bettri gartri lams and droofled past an litomlden plail. Anada! Anada! Anaaa... daaa..! And lenk, ebertio, tendrilations lourve the bodel, graimed, graiming binsepf to gabbed, to flarfed. Abtor leri, mutri laendelcarsting loni, ems lari terringle, ems lopt, ems betriffle. And not gelf, but silman terdet the somnally lycropian toller, veddically ablamsting the mandaliers. An questel littertly. The zogd, emerly mortible, leamed, narg, gowding out into the nedro-gooters. An mebd paured, "Hooner or baller mavn bend dirgle, then lanx too recmildent." And with an weqwell: "Maiki neri!" But heder tirfalle. The tean-luzded mahn zedded at the whoyle in front of iham. Ahas beler, elak abdoptally out, and which can under the sicumstances penetrate the fergatl tollgate. So by the time we got out of there it was to go back, technical, but we didn't. So all the marzeboddle hemfer to its lepanda, and not, in principle, against the possession of the New England metaboller scene, which has recently come under attach in criticism. Old money have some argued the Fergus poems best likens to the thermals, but such a proposition is untenable in the face of a journal with a tradition, dedicated to ferdzallen hober in reptangle, as well as a representative selection of new and emerging poets on the periphery. Have reached the number seventeen. Merquando-listitrations. Fulcrum as lurch of eye comprises sheer / Extroverted anus, nebulous as blue jays! And you wanna hear some further, here it comes. I dye a dry wallet green. Have nothing better to do. I converse with a tureen. Have nothing better to do. Exaggerate salmon to shark. Have nothing smaller to do. Belittle a star to a spark. Have nothing bigger to do. I spread the tablecloth wide. Have nothing narr'wer to do. I reveal what I hide. Have nothing gladder to do. Fantastic dreams drums past modulo reality into a clockwise twist against itself to recollapse, to recollect itself barges approach barges, approach from nowhere into the moonlit shine of unshepherded waves recline any which way you will never know the pleasures of oblivion for you have been cast crescently across the tresses of the milky, path but the barges, can still reach you there. Or else what? I have been trying to recast my act, essaying to reset my focus, mainly, and again smoking like a skunk and vainly meaning to renegotiate the pact of the emotions. Hell's seasons are all inherently ideological, because their fluid forms inform the basis of a mimetically grounded poesis. But take for instance verse that's avantgarde! Its cataclysmic flutes too have their seasons, as collocations, reaching for their guns, revert to sense, hoist by their own petards. Hello, hello, the wordy barricades! Goodbye, goodbye, the capitalist season!

↑ Index

80. Alan Sondheim

Bored

Wed 8 Sep 1999

> <

Bored

This is the closeness of eour other farre Distant from such Homes beeond Wheche onle Chrest Oure Lorde decedes Thus it bee, Amenne

This is the distance of my new Clar

In the truth of God, I Clar, who have not abandoned such Menne as want me, this Eclipse of such Spirit, who Do replace me, the Madde Clar, who have, in the Witnesse of this Warre, do go a-begging for New-Clar, to whomme such Survival as would bee Meet, to Meat upon the Soule, or havyng beene Wrytten, as such, in these foule Tymes, do suche Give your Breathe to suche men as

Desyre such in the Midst of Dredful Carnyge for Whomme they will have Sacrifyced Alle as They have Mette upon Us to turn Inwards of the Soules' Warde in Finalyte To whyche it bee, AmenneWed Sep 8 00:47:57 EDT 1999

This is the closeness of eour other

I bored him oith me. He is borne in me arms. I bear him bodie and kend- nesse before he does die, such Woundes as I haue neuer seene before. Thee saee cat got er tongue, it is not there, norre eees, smel me. Thys ys the kyndnesse of youre othyr.

This is the distance of my new Clar

this aweful war. this war. this abandonment. bones broken, smashed faces. not night. day. The man sits at the table. The woman looks out the window. The woman sits at the table. The man looks out the window. Blood on wooden sill. Burnt fields, fires. Birds vaulted charred and dead in the sky. The limb. To be borne I wille bear. I will take childe from with you. I wille fuck you. What I can do. Smashe me. Join me to yr severd lim. I do cut your haire. I do cut your second fingere on your left hande for Jesys Chryste oure Savioure. You do take the reste, Godde bee. Field of oathes. Blast trees. There is no Moone in no Skye. I did hear your last Sentence to which I am Sentenced, that of Eternal Greefe. Hundred-thousand Dead or Die. Refuse-refugee. Breath of lost Soule; I do pante quick when I am inne me. I do move for you. Do what has Gonne this 20 centuries of Our Lordde. My minde thinks onlie Your Name O Lorde this Swollen earth, flooded. Noth- ynge shall growe heere in Eternal night. Fucke me wythe youre Name, O Manne. Closed and shameful eyes: Nacioun upon Nation shalle falter and to whatte degree? To what whyche has beene torn. The spyke, gunrust, your titte dangling above this face, no mouthe to speake withe. Thys ys the dy- staunce of youre othyr.Wed Sep 8 01:01:39 EDT 1999

++++++++++++ +++++++++++++++ ++++++++++++++++++++ +++++++++++++++++ ++++++

↑ Index

81. George Bowering

Re: Need help for a Millennial Project through trAce!

Wed 8 Sep 1999

> =
>
> Millennium Project - Help Needed, Comments Invited !!!
>
> This is a proposal for a millennium project that would involving running > traceroute and similar applications across the December 31 / January 1 _hinge._

That would be Dec 2000 -- Jan 2001, wouldnt it?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

82. George Bowering
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 8 Sep 1999

> As a poet, I have been on strike for the past 3 weeks because the dishonourable governor of our state continues to disrespect poets and poetry in general by not appointing a State Poet Laureate when it is the governor's responsibility to have done so after the last poet laureate's term expired.

What state would that be?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

83. George Bowering
Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
Wed 8 Sep 1999

> Calif, my home state for 37 years, 37 years during which time I have never known who the PL was, nor have I noticed any damage to poetry resulting from this absence or, indeed, presence.
>
> David Bromige, CPL

Yes, David, but in those 37 years, have you ever known who the governor was?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

84. Tina Rotenberg

 Don't miss Carl Rakosi 9/9/99 **

Wed 8 Sep 1999

 NOTICE  NOTICE  NOTICE **

Carl Rakosi - famed for his association with the "Objectivists" circle of poets - will be reading in a rare home-town appearance, 7:30 p.m. Thursday Sept 9, 1999 at the Unitarian Center, San Francisco (which is on Franklin at Geary, just a block west of Van Ness, running parallel)

Mr Rakosi, born in 1903 in Berlin, spent his early childhood in Hungary, emigrating to the US at age six. He became a friend and associate at the University of Wisconsin with of circle of poets and political activists that included so-called "proletarian-poet" Kenneth Fearing, among others. On reading his early magazine publications (Little Review, transition, New Masses, et al) Louis Zukofsky asked Rakosi to contribute to the renowned "Objectivists" issue of Poetry magazine (February 1931) where he was featured beside Charles Reznikoff, Basil Bunting, W.C. Williams, and, later as well, to AN "OBJECTIVISTS" ANTHOLOGY (1932), published in France by George & Mary Oppen's small expatriate press, To, Publishers. Mr Rakosi dropped out of poetry publishing between 1941 & the early sixties (devoting himself to social work). New Directions would publish two books, AMULET and ERE-VOICE, and Black Sparrow EX CRANIUM, NIGHT, during the 60s and 70s, alongside a scattering of limited letterpress items. In recent years, the National Poetry Foundation published both a volume of COLLECTED PROSE and COLLECTED POEMS, & the critical volume, CARL RAKOSI: MAN & POET, while British poet (& former student in the mid-60s at Buffalo) Andrew Crozier edited Rakosi's POEMS 1923-1941 (Sun & Moon, 1995), presenting for the first time in a book the early magazine work.

Still prolific at age 96, Mr Rakosi has had two recent books published in England by poet Nicholas Johnson's etruscan books: THE EARTH SUITE (1997) and - just slipped through customs - THE OLD POET'S TALE, whose title poem is a remarkable piece on the last years of his friend George Oppen. A beautiful large book, THE OLD POET'S TALE collects several booklength series of poems & is the first of three volumes planned for publication by etruscan books, as Mr Rakosi's COLLECTED WORKS. He of course, will be signing copies of these new works Thursday night, following the reading.

Don't miss this rare opportunity to hear Carl Rakosi reading from his poetry in San Francisco. This special event is presented as part of the Centennial Celebration of San Francisco State University, which has sponsored and housed The Poetry Center since it's founding in 1954.

See you there!

The Poetry Center: [redacted]
Steve Dickison, Director [redacted]
David Booth, Associate [redacted]

[We know, the Master Musicians of Jajouka are playing Maritime Hall this same Thursday night, but you can probably make it easily across town - after the poetry]

↑ Index

85. Douglas
new books from Sun & Moon and Green Integer
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Dear readers:

Sun & Moon Press and Green Integer have both had a very busy summer, and we have lots of new titles to announce. Once again, we offer these books to people on the list for a 20% discount. We suggest that to order you should mail a check or money order with $1.25 postage charge per book. You can order over E-mail or through our web sites: www.sunmoon.com and www.greeninteger.com, but we prefer pre-payments, since some payments have been very slow in coming and we always need the cash to do new books.

Here are the new titles:

SUN & MOON

THE CONFETTI TREES, by Barbara Guest $10.95 ($8.76 for Poetics List members)

Barbara's wonderful, stylish, and beautifully poetic short tales concerning film and filmmakers. Barbara lived in Los Angeles as a young girl, and met some of the great early film-directors (through her childhood friends). Stories here concern figures such as Lang, Milestone, Lubitsch, etc. This is a beautiful book with art on the cover and inside as well. An important development in Guest's great career.

THE PROMISED LAND: ITALIAN POETRY AFTER 1975 A Bilingual Edition Edited by Luigi Ballerini, Beppe Cavatorta, Elena Coda, and Paul Vangelisti $25.95 ($20.76 for list members)

The much promised PROMISED LAND is finally availalbe. This is truly the most splendid gathering of Italian contemporary poetry ever published. It includes a liberal sampling of poems by 30 poets (it's 686 pages long), including Amellia Rosselli, Nanni Balestrini, Biagio Cepollaro, Milo De Angelis, Alfredo Giuliani, Milli Graffi, Giulia Niccolai, Elio Pagliarani, Antonio Porta, Giovanna Sandri, Edoardo Sanguinetti, Adriano Spatola, Emilio Villa, and Andrea Zanzotto. An important book.

A FRAME OF THE BOOK, Erin Mouré $12.95 ($10.36 for list members)

Erin Moure is one of the most adventursome and yet skillful of contemporary Canadian poets. Her work is truly wonderful, and we hope readers in the US will become more aware of it.

GREEN INTEGER

Just to let you know, Green Integer is an independent publishing venture, edited by me (Douglas Messerli). It is not part of Sun & Moon.

ON IBSEN, James Joyce $8.95 ($7.16 for list members)
Edited with an Introduction by Dennis Phillips
Green Integer 12

This book includes all the writings Joyce did on the Norwegian playwright, Henrik Ibsen, a writer to who Joyce was attracked very early in his career. Phillips contextualizes that interest in an introductory essay.

ON OVERGROWN PATHS, Knut Hamsun $12.95 ($10.36 for list members)
Green Intger: 22

The first authoritative English translation (by Sverre Lyngstad, who also did Sun & Moon's ROSA) of Hamsun's last book, written after World War II, at a time when Hamsun was in police custody for his openly expressed Nazi sympathies during the German occupation of Norway, 1940-45. This is Hamsun's defense and apologia, and in its creative elan, the books, filled with the proud sorrow of an old man, miraculously recalls the spirit of Hamsun's early novels, with their reverence for nature, absurdist humor, and quirky flights of fancy.

POEMS, by Sappho $10.95 ($8.76 for list members)
Translated by Willis Barnstone
Green Integer: 26

This wonderful edition of Sappho's poems was the one originally published by Sun & Moon Press, an edition which sold out in a few months time. It's a great book for the classroom.

HELL HAS NO LIMITS, José Donoso $10.95 ($8.76 for list members)
Translated from the Spanish by Suzanne Jill Levine
Green Integer: 28

One of the best novels by the great Chilean magic-realist, this book recounts a fateful day in the collective existence of Estacion El Olivo, a decayed community marked for doom as surely as Donoso's central character, the transvestite dance/prostitute la Manuela, whose virginal daughter operates the brothel out of which she/he works. A powerful book.

THEORETICAL OBJECTS, Nick Piombino $10.95 ($8.76 for list members) Green Integer 34

For several years now poet Nick Piombino has been writing a series of personal statements--manifestos, sayings, speeches, and autobiographical-like pieces--which cross the boundaries of essay and poetry. Here are 49 of these works collected. This is a book for anyone who likes poetry and wants to explore how meaning is made.

ART POETIC' by Olivier Cadiot $!2.95 ($10.36)
Translated from the French by Cole Swensen
Green Integer: 36

This many-voiced, multi-perspective poetic text could be likened to the journal of a scientist recording observable phenomena, but yet resisting to make any conclusions of the truth of what is perceived, since language inherently shifts, moves, and falls into silence. Cadiot is dead serious in his explorations, but his work is also filled with humor and wit.

FUGITIVE SUNS: SELECTED POETRY by Andrée Chedid ($11.95 $9.56 for list members) Translated from the French by Lynne Goodhart and Jon Wagner
Green Integer: 37

With over twenty-six books of poetry, ten novels, four collections of short stories, and various books of theater, film, essays and children's books, Egyptian born Andrée Chedid is one of the most noted authors of our time. This collects a representative selection of her poetry, presented bi-lingually.

Upcoming this month:

MEXICO. A PLAY, by Gertrude Stein
BALLETS WITHOUT MUSIC, WITHOUT DANCERS, WITHOUT ANYTHING, by Louis-Ferdinand Céline and other Green Integer titles.

↑ Index

86. Douglas
One more Green Integer title
Wed 8 Sep 1999

In my mailing of a short while ago, I forgot one other Green Integer title, the newest, and an important one.

SKY-ECLIPSE, by Régis Bonvicino. ($9.95, $7.96 for list members)

Translated by Michael Palmer and others
Green Integer: 44

Some of you may know Régis Bonvicino has the central editor (along with Michael Palmer and Nelson Ascher) of the Sun & Moon anthology of Brazilian poetry, NOTHING THE SUN COULD NOT EXPLAIN. Régis is a true force of contemporary Brazilian writing, interested in exchanging ideas and causing exciting things to happen on Brazilian scene. Through his own reviews in the major Sao Paolo newspaper, his editing, and his own poetry, he's a virtual dervish of excitement. This book brings togther a substantial gathering of his own poetry, presented bi-lingually.

↑ Index

87. Tom Orange
Olson quotation
Wed 8 Sep 1999

---

hello all,

can anyone help me identify this olson quotation?:
"that which exists through itself is what is called meaning."

much thanks,
tom orange in d.c.

↑ Index

88. Alan Sondheim
[BRC-NEWS] Race-ing Justice: The Prison-Industrial Complex (fwd)
Wed 8 Sep 1999

(I urge you to subscribe to this list - see the end - Alan)

---------- Forwarded message ----------
-Date: Wed, 8 Sep 1999 07:39:02 -0400
-From: Manning Marable <[redacted]>
-To: [redacted]
-Subject: [BRC-NEWS] Race-ing Justice: The Prison-Industrial Complex

Along The Color Line

September 1999

Race-ing Justice: The Prison-Industrial Complex

By Dr. Manning Marable <[redacted]>

Several months ago, 650 people attended the "Race-ing Justice" Conference in New York, sponsored by the Institute for Research in African-American Studies at Columbia University. In more than two dozen panels and workshops, black people examined the destructive impact of the police, the courts and the prison system upon the African-American community. Our current situation today, however, must be understood against the totalitarian history of racial domination in America.

For two centuries, the black community was confronted with the totalitarianism of slavery. All people of African descent, slave or free, were oppressed and subordinated by this structure of unequal racial power. For nearly a century after the Civil War and Reconstruction, black people experienced the systemic subordination of Jim Crow segregation. Regardless of one's income, education or social status, to be black under the totalitarian restrictions of Jim Crow meant confinement to second class status. In the twentieth century, the construction of the urban ghetto imposed another kind of social control on black development, certainly less pervasive than slavery had been, but in some respects was more destructive to the human spirit. Today, the new totalitarian mode of racial domination has become the prison industrial complex, an ever expanding archipelago of prisons across the American countryside.

In the United States today, about four to five million Americans receive criminal records every year. Roughly one in five U.S. citizens has a criminal record. In a society severely stratified by race and class, most of those who are pushed into the penal system are not unexpectedly black, brown and poor. One third of all prisoners were unemployed at the time of their arrest, with the others averaging less than $15,000 annual incomes in the year prior to their arrest. About one half of the 1.8 million people in federal and state prisons and jails are African Americans.

As researcher J.W. Mason noted, "The proportion of black men in prison about 6 percent is approximately 20 times the corresponding rate for white men . . . In Baltimore, 56 percent of black men are in prison or jail, out on bail, on probation or parole, or being sought on an arrest warrant. At least 90 percent of black men can expect to be arrested and jailed for a non-traffic offense at some point of their lives." Although the majority of black prisoners are young men in their twenties and thirties, the fastest growing sector of the penal population consists of men fifty-five years old and above.

Even outside of the prison walls, the black community's parameters are largely defined by the agents of state and private power. There are now about 600,000 police officers and 1.5 million private security guards in the U.S. Increasingly, however, black and poor communities are being "policed" by special paramilitary units, often called SWAT ("Special Weapons and Tactics") teams. Researcher Christian Parenti cites studies indicating that "the nation has more than 30,000 such heavily armed, military trained police unites." SWAT team mobilizations or "call outs" increased 400 percent between 1980 and 1995, with a 34 percent increase in the incidents of deadly force recorded by SWAT teams from 1995 to 1998.

What are the political consequences of regulating black and poor people through the criminal justice and penal systems? Perhaps the greatest impact is on the process of black voting. According to an October, 1998 study, "Losing the Vote," produced by the Sentencing Project and Human Rights Watch, two nonprofit research groups, about 3.9 million Americans, or one in fifty adults, have currently or permanently lost the ability to vote because of a felony conviction. In 32 states, convicted offenders are not permitted to vote while on parole. In fourteen states, former prisoners who have fully served their terms remain disenfranchised, and in ten of these states, ex-felons are prohibited from voting for life. For African Americans, these figures can be translated into 1.4 million men who are denied the right to vote, compared to 4.6 million who actually voted in the 1996 elections. The racial impact of ex-felon disenfranchisement cited by the study is truly astonishing

o In Alabama and Florida, 31 percent of all black men are permanently disenfranchised.

o In five other states Iowa, Mississippi, New Mexico, Virginia, and Wyoming one in four black men (24 to 28 percent) is permanently disenfranchised. In Washington state, one in four of black men (24 percent) are currently or permanently disenfranchised.

o In Delaware, one in five black men (20 percent) is permanently disenfranchised.

o In Texas, one in five black men (20.8 percent) is currently disenfranchised.

o In four states Minnesota, New Jersey, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin 16 to 18 percent of black men are currently disenfranchised.

o In nine states Arizona, Connecticut, Georgia, Maryland, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, Oklahoma and Tennessee 10 to 15 percent of black men are currently disenfranchised.

In effect, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, which guaranteed millions of African Americans the right to the electoral franchise, is being gradually repealed by state restrictions on ex-felons from voting. A people who are imprisoned in disproportionately higher numbers, and then systematically denied the right to vote, can in no way claim to live under a democracy.

* Dr. Manning Marable is Professor of History and Political Science and Director of the Institute for Research in African-American Studies at Columbia University.

"Along the Color Line" is distributed free of charge and appears in over 325 publications throughout the U.S. and internationally.
****

[Articles on BRC-NEWS may be forwarded and posted on other mailing lists/discussion forums, as long as proper attribution is given to the author and originating publication, and the wording is not altered in any way. In particular, if there is a reference to a web site where an article was originally located, please do not remove that.

Unless stated otherwise, do not publish or post the entire text of any copyrighted articles on web sites (web-based discussion forums exempted) or in print, without getting explicit permission from the article author or copyright holder. Check the fair use provisions of the copyright law in your country for details on what you can and can't do.

As a courtesy, we'd appreciate it if you let folks know how to subscribe to BRC-NEWS, by leaving in the first two lines of the signature below.]

---------- BRC-NEWS: Black Radical Congress - General News/Alerts/Announcements
---------- Subscribe: Email "subscribe brc-news" to <[redacted]> ----------
---------- Digest: Email "subscribe brc-news-digest" to <[redacted]> ---------- Discussion: Email "subscribe brc-all" to <[redacted]>
---------- Press Releases: Email "subscribe brc-press" to <[redacted]>
---------- Archive: http://www.egroups.com/group/brc-news (The first time, you need to "Join" and set your preferences to "Read on the Web")
---------- Questions/Problems: Send email to <[redacted]> ----------
www.blackradicalcongress.org | BRC | [redacted]

↑ Index

89. Christopher Reiner
New Witz
Wed 8 Sep 1999

The new issue of Witz is out--on paper and on-line. It's got Guy Bennett writing about visual poetry, Loss Glazier on "Grep," Will Alexander on writing workshops, and Michael Basinski on Robert Grenier's recent work.

A paper copy of the journal is still $4, but if your computer can read Adobe Acrobat (PDF) files, you can download the whole issue for free at:

http://www.litpress.com/witz

Instructions for getting the PDF reader are available at the site. It should work pretty well for most people, but there are always bugs and glitches. The paper edition is more reliable. To get it, send $4 (payable to Christopher Reiner) to P.O. Box 40012, Studio City, CA, 91614

This is the next to the next to the last issue of Witz. The next to last issue will be out in October, and the last issue will be devoted to an index of the previous 20 issues.

--Chris Reiner

↑ Index

90. Owen Hill
Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
Wed 8 Sep 1999

I would like to nominate.....Tom Clark!

Owen

↑ Index

91. Brian Stefans
Squib 1
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Thanatos and eros -- bunji jumping from one to the other or a dyslexic combine that throws in troves unequal but spirited poems;
these trysts of banging heads that smother deliberations in the senates of hope the flecks of eros
vengeful of the thrones.

↑ Index

92. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Wed 8 Sep 1999

It has been pointed out that numerical representation of dates is confusing in countries that do not follow the splended British example. I should know this by now. Here is the SVP autumn season again (similar adjustment will be made to the website in due course), with clarification, but without the attached begging letter that people attend... Please attend

L

All readings Upstairs 3 Cups Sandland Street London WC1 8 pm for 8.15 pm

Tue 14 Sep 99 From USA: Lisa Raphals

Tue 28 Sep 99 Yang Lian / John Cayley

Tue 12 Oct 99 Andrea Brady / Sean Bonney

Tue 26 Oct 99 1999 Mottram Memorial Reading: Jerome Rothenberg

Tue 9 Nov 99 Brian Catling / Varni Capildeo

Fri 12 Nov 99 Polar Verses: Anselm Hollo, Tomi Kontio, Riina Katajavuori

Tue 16 Nov 99 Michael Heller / David Bromige (to be confirmed)

Tue 7 Dec 99 Alan Halsey & Gavin Selerie

Tue 14 Dec 99 Quick Hits 99: a range of poets / a range of poetries

Background info on many of these poets is available via the website which is updated constantly

---
The Sub Voicive Poetry website:
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/

↑ Index

93. Brian Stefans
Squib 2
Wed 8 Sep 1999

If I temper with your heartsick sender these bungalows are only provisional history, the blue milk sky or the white milk one, well, that's a whole paragraph of contentment, bursting the bucket silence in the cities; so in peril we go on and on, mixing tracks at our feet with the dust, bone, leaves, yes, Mason, you're angry, but also a demonstration.

↑ Index

94. sylvester pollet
Ezra Pound in Poet's Corner
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Word is that the Electors of The Poets' Corner have chosen EP. Induction scheduled for October 24, Vespers Service, 7 p.m. Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, Amsterdam & 111th St. NYC (I'm taking these details from a message on the Pound List, from Tim Redman.)

"Winnowed in fate's tray neath luna" (112/785)

↑ Index

95. Richard Dillon
Re: Cid Corman's address
Wed 8 Sep 1999

To Whom It May Concern:

After conferring with a federal case worker in the welfare department (a poet) I have learned that Cid Corman DOES QUALIFY for the following benefits regardless of his prior history:

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME - MEDICARE -
STIPEND FOR HOUSING (Stateside, it seems - find out)

Have him contact the Social Security Administration in the jurisdiction where his Social Security Number was branded
Into his backside by cruelmasked figures
Who dangle us screaming in the first harsh light.

>>> Richard Dillon

>From: jesse glass <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Cid Corman's address
>Date: Thu, Sep 2, 1999, 1:00 PM
>

> Here's Cid Corman's mailing address: Fukuoji-cho/80 Utano/Ukyo-ku/Kyoto 616/Japan. Jesse

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Grant Jenkins <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
> Date: Wednesday, September 01, 1999 5:32 PM
> Subject: Re: Cid Corman's address
>
> Burt,
>
> John in his latest letter says that we have Corman's address, but I can't find it in the archive. For everyone's benefit, would you please repost that information?
>
> Thanks
>
> As said, a cheque isn't that good for anything under $500 (due to $35 charged for cashing). The best method is to transfer cash (yen if possible) direct to his bank. (You have the address / details. [i.e., from a previous message: banking details, which he tells me is good for "dollar, yen, or check transfers": Cid Corman c/o Kyoto Shinyo Kinko Bank, Omuro Branch, Omuro Ukyo-ku, Kyoto [redacted] Japan; account number: 095-0010328; bank tel: [redacted].])
>
> For smaller amounts sending cash in perhaps a registered envelope / hidden by carbon paper + Cid's details should do it.

↑ Index

96. charssmith

Arcturus Editions: Elizabeth Robinson

Wed 8 Sep 1999

Announcing Arcturus Chaplet #3:

Elizabeth Robinson: LODGER

A recent three part poem printed letterpress on Zerkall Book with a z-fold which opens to display all three sections simultaneously, sewn in Fabriano Ingres covers; 6 1/2" x 7", $5.00.

> To fall back is to break out
> Very letters of your literacy

Elizabeth Robinson's books include _in the sequence of falling things_ (paradigm press, 1990), _Bed of Lists_ (Kelsey St. Press, 1990), _Iemanje_ (Meow, 1993), _Nearings_ (Leave Books ,1991), _String_ (French Broad ,1992), _Other Veins, Absent Roots_ (Instress, 1998), and _As Betokening_ (Quarry Press, 1999). Her poetry has been anthologized in _49+1 nouveaux poètes américains_ (Éditions Royaumont 1991) & _Primary Trouble: An Anthology of Contemporary American Poetry_ (Talisman House, 1996), and has received two Gertrude Stein Awards. She lives in Berkely, CA.

Also available:

Arcturus Chaplet Series (broadsides in codex form, these are printed letter-press on a single sheet of paper & sewn in covers):

#2, Kenneth Irby: [syzygos], 6 1/2 x 5 5/8, $5.00
#1, Patrick Pritchett, ARK DIVE, 4 x 6 1/2, $4.00

Chapbooks:

Pat Reed: CONTAINER OF STARS
ISBN 0-9661505-2-X, 4 7/8 x 7 1/2, 28 pp., letterpress, artwork by Marianne Kolb, $10.00
$20.00 signed edition, lettered A-Z

Gustaf Sobin, A WORLD OF LETTERS
ISBN 0-9661505-1-1, 6 x 9, 16 pp., letterpress, $8.00

Available from Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Street, Berkeley, CA 94710; [redacted]; http://www.spdbooks.org; e-mail: [redacted]

or from the press, checks payable to: Charles Smith $1.50 shipping & postage, $.0.50 per additional items
CA residents, please add 7.25% sales tax

Arcturus Editions
2135 Irvin Way
Sacramento, CA 95822
[redacted]

* Apologies to all who receive this message more than once. Please let me know if you don't wish to receive any further announcements from Arcturus Editions.
****

↑ Index

97. Bob Grumman

Re: the lack of a state poet laureate

Wed 8 Sep 1999

How reprehensibly elitist of David Bromige to declare himself poet laureate of California. I think every California poet, past and present, which would include me, California resident for 15 years, should be declared poet laureate of California--for life. Or maybe every resident of California should be so declared, I'm not firm on that yet. But California should surely have at least ten thousand poet laureates.

--Bob G.

↑ Index

98. Karen Kelley
Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
Wed 8 Sep 1999

I'm a bit at a loss here. What, I wonder, would Carolyn Burke like? That she had been involved in the novelization process? That people not novelize biographies? That the novelizations be biographically accurate? That we not buy Antonia Logue's book? I'm sorry that she feels ripped off, and I can't speak as an academic-who's-been-ripped-off, but if someone's going to novelize a life, I don't see how they can get around the bio. No doubt Carolyn Burke thinks Antonia Logue cut too close to her own work, but where is a novelizer to turn? If Logue is going to speculate, must she speculate radically different speculations than Burke speculates? If you're novelizing a bio, aren't you mythologizing? And so perhaps preferable to use the more common myths?

Excellent questions all, but I can't shake the feeling that I was expected to react to a brouhaha...

> From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
> Date: Tuesday, September 07, 1999 6:01 PM
>
> i would advise professor (?) burke to contact the National Writers' Union.
> For the price of your tax deductible union dues, advice on grievance > procedures is yours for the asking. it is very distressing when original > research that was conducted in relative oblivion and with liitle cultural > support is then appropriated as "common knowledge" about a subject; but it > also speaks to the influential nature of our work, and how invisible these > lines of influence are. i'm glad to be alerted of this. i wish it weren't > so, but it happens all the time and should indeed be made matter for public > discussion.

>
> At 3:28 PM -0500 9/7/99, Keith Tuma wrote:
> >Carolyn Burke has asked me to forward her letter below about developments
> >in MIna Loy land.
> >
> >Keith Tuma
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >Carolyn Burke
> >322 Walnut Ave
> >Santa Cruz, CA 95060
> >U.S.A.
> >Tel [redacted] Fax [redacted] Email
[redacted]
> >
> >
> > Mina Loy's life is the stuff of drama. Given her expatriate > >experience, participation in the radical art movements of the early > >twentieth century, and romance with the boxer/poet Arthur Cravan, it is not > >surprising that her life has been recast in a work of fiction.
> > It is disturbing to note, however, that Antonia Logue's novel > >Shadow-Box (Bloomsbury, Grove/Atlantic, 1999) relies heavily on my > >biography Becoming Modern, The Life of Mina Loy (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, > >1996; U. of California P., 1997)--not only for historical facts but also > >for overarching themes, treatment and interpretation of cultural milieux,
> >and in some cases, narrative structures. A comparison of the two books > >shows that while Logue sought to transform this material, her novel > >piggy-backs on my work, often interweaving innovative parts of the > >biography and presenting them as "fact."
> > I have been advised that this use of my work is not in itself > >actionable, but it nonetheless raises issues inherent in the genre of > >novelization. On Logue's behalf one could argue that since the publication > >of Becoming Modern Mina Loy's life has entered the public domain.

Judging
> >by the stares of non-recognition that still greet me in bookshops, however,
> >such a claim is misleading. When I began work on the biography twenty > >years ago, she had been so thoroughly forgotten that most people thought I
> >was writing about the film star. Since its publication critics have > >recognized Becoming Modern as definitive. As such it has a different > >status from lives of figures like Gertrude Stein, Hemingway, or Pound, > >about whom new biographies are written every decade: for this reason > >Logue's appropriations are all the more salient.
> >Moreover, although she does credit Becoming Modern as one of two > >"outstanding sources," this acknowledgement is misleading. It suggests > >only a partial recognition of a much greater indebtedness and could be > >thought to imply some form of cooperation on my part. While Logue appears > >to have done no original research into the life of Mina Loy, relying > >entirely upon the biography, I was never asked to lend my support to her > >project.
> > Excerpts from reviews of Shadow-Box (none of which mentions > >Becoming Modern) partially demonstrate the nature of the appropriations:
> >
> >thematic:
> >
> >--the biography's major themes reappear as those of the novel: "the > >conflicting forces at work in the first decades of the century; the > >dynamism and energy of new movements in art and thought, as opposed to
the > >left-over Victorian propriety that traps the talented, intelligent Mina
in > >an early loveless marriage; forward-looking New York, where her first poems > >are published and appreciated, versus stuck-in-the-past Europe" (Literary > >Review)
> >
> >intellectual and cultural milieux & forms:
> >
> >-- While Becoming Modern is what made it possible for Logue to evoke the > >lively artistic backgrounds, from Post-Impressionism to Futurism and Dada,
> >not to mention Loy's lovers and friends like Marinetti, Duchamp, and > >Picabia, she is credited with original portrayals of "the intellectual > >excitement and controversy surrounding the arts in the pre-WWI period," > >even with creating "witty and illuminating" glimpses of the period's > >luminaries (Kirkus)--the details of which derive from my treatment of these > >movements and figures.

> >
> >some uses of specific details, settings, and structures:
> >
> >To demonstrate the nature of Logue's borrowing, readers should compare
the > >following sections of each work:
> >
> >Shadow-Box Becoming Modern
> >
> >pp. 28: Mina walking Oda in p. 96: detail based on my > >Luxembourg Gardens experience, inserted for
> >
> >
> > verisimilitude
> >
> >p. 29: treatment of the name "Loy" p. 97: interpretation of
the > > fragmentary evidence
> >
> >pp. 34-35: LeSavoureux story pp. 102-104:
interpretation,
> >repeated as fact considered controversial
by
> >
> > Mina Loy's family
> >
> >pp. 95-98: presentation of pp. 151-153: original > > material on Frances Stevens and research,
> >interpretation,
> >Italian Futurists and staging of scenes
> >
> >pp. 99-102: narrative use of pp. 155-157: original > > Futurist serata, Florence
> > interpretation, staging of scene

> >
> >pp. 110-111: Marinetti's trip to pp. 171-172:
> >Vallombrosa "invention" of this meeting
> >
> > based on fragmentary evidence
> >
> >pp. 161-163: scene of Cravan pp. 263-265:
interpretation
> >leaving Salina Cruz and staging of material woven > > from diverse sources
> >
> >pp. 168-176: Loy at Arensbergs', pp. 212-223:
interpretation > >relations with Duchamp, Williams, & treatment of this group &
> >New York Dada individuals including
> >details
> > of badinage with Duchamp
> >
> >pp. 177-200: Cravan, Independents pp. 223-233, 234-251,
> >details,
> >structured in two parts, with Cravan story interpretations & narrative > > starting on p. 182 device
of > >highlighting Cravan
> > story (my Ch. 11)
> >
> >pp. 263-267: Salina Cruz scene, details pp. 263-265, recreation > > of boat, communication system, role of Cravan's
> >fate from disparate
> >of Bob Brown sources including Brown
> >
> > Given my response to these uses of my biography, it is for someone > >else to judge Shadow-Box. Others will decide whether it transforms the > >biographical materials, or whether it remains a derivative work penned,
as

> >Jonathan Dee observes of recent novels based on the lives of writers,
> >"ostensibly as an act of homage, but also, not coincidentally, as a way of > >grabbing up the genuine cachet. . . geniuses still deliver, in order to > >enhance the value of one's own work." ("The Reanimators, Harper's, June > >1999).
> > It would also be instructive for Mina Loy enthusiasts to compare > >Logue's novel with Albert Guerard's The Hotel in the Jungle (Baskerville, > >1996), a work of imaginative fiction composed before my book appeared and > >based on what was then known of the Loy/Cravan story. Guerard made the > >legend his own by creating a setting for their romance (the hotel) and a > >group of characters who retrospectively piece together their story.
> > While it is a pleasure to see novelists' creative transformations
> >of historical material (and there are many successful examples), Logue's > >raises serious questions about literary method and publishing ethics.
> >Caveat lector, and may this brief account stimulate further discussion.

↑ Index

99. megan minka lola camille roy

Saidenberg and Singleton reading at New Langton Arts

Wed 8 Sep 1999

Announcing the Bay Area Award Show Reading
New Langon Arts, San Francisco.
Come one, come all.

Jocelyn Saidenberg and giovanni singleton are the recipients of the Bay Area Award for 1999. These two extraordinary younger poets will read at New Langton Arts on Thursday, September 16th, 8PM. 1246 Folsom Street. Reservations and Info: [redacted]

Come experience the lively pulse of new writing in San Francisco.

Jocelyn Saidenberg will present a selection of new poetry and prose. giovanni singleton will read from a new collection of poetry entitled "Atlas: the green book".

Jocelyn Saidenberg is the author of Mortal City, Parentheses Writing Series (1998). Her work has been published in many journals such as Arshile, Outlet, Mirage#4/Period[ical], and Primary Writing. She is Executive Director of Small Press Traffic and the editor and publisher of KRUPSKAYA, a small press collective dedicated to publishing experimental poetry and prose. Born and raised in NYC, she has been living in San Francisco since 1994.

giovanni singleton, a native of Richmond, VA, received a MFA in Creative Writing and Poetics from The New College of California. She has been awarded fellowships from the Squaw Valley Community of Writers Workshop and the Zora Neal Hurston/Richard Wright Writers Workshop. Since 1997, she has served as a member of the Board of Directors for Small Press Traffic, a literary arts center in San Francisco. Her work has appeared in a number of publications including mirage4/period(ical), mass ave., nØ rØses review, Proliferation, the Bay Guardian's Haiku Corner, Chain and The Breast: An Anthology (Global City Press; New York, 1994).

↑ Index

100. Tony Green
Re: Olson quotation
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Berkeley Poetry Conference - 20 July 1965 printed as _Causal Mythology_ in _ Charles Olson. Muthologos, vol 1, Four seasons Foundation, Bolinas, 1977, pp.63-96 _.

(also cited by Robert Creeley in introduction to _Selected Writings of Charles Olson_ New Directions. 1966)

The quote is on p.72 followed by
"I don't have any trouble stealing that."

Isn't it taken from Lao Tze? Could someone please confirm that. I looked for it once, cdn't locate it. I don't have a copy to hand. Tony Green

-----Original Message-----
From: Tom Orange <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, 9 September 1999 09:50
Subject: Olson quotation

> hello all,
>
> can anyone help me identify this olson quotation?:

> "that which exists through itself is what is called meaning."
>
> much thanks,
> tom orange in d.c.

↑ Index

101. Wystan Curnow
Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Karen Kelley wrote:

> I'm a bit at a loss here. What, I wonder, would Carolyn Burke like? That she had been involved in the novelization process? That people not novelize biographies? That the novelizations be biographically accurate? That we not buy Antonia Logue's book? I'm sorry that she feels ripped off, and I can't speak as an academic-who's-been-ripped-off, but if someone's going to novelize a life, I don't see how they can get around the bio. No doubt Carolyn Burke thinks Antonia Logue cut too close to her own work, but where is a novelizer to turn? If Logue is going to speculate, must she speculate radically different speculations than Burke speculates? If you're novelizing a bio, aren't you mythologizing? And so perhaps preferable to use the more common myths?
>
> Excellent questions all, but I can't shake the feeling that I was expected to react to a brouhaha...

I guess they do sound excellent to their author but am I the only reader who finds them mostly answered in Burke's post? WHERE IS THE NOVELIZER TO TURN? o, poor noveliser! Novelisers Go Home, I say. Seems like there's some confusion about genre here, about how to be in or out of genre or meaningfully neither in or out. Am I wrong?

Wystan

↑ Index

102. Stephen Vincent
Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Why not:

King Poet Laureate, David Bromige
&
Queen Poet Laureate, Joanne Kyger

Whether this is a California Divine Regency or not, is probably open to question. But Joanne's native birth right will heal any problems with David's alien Canadian status. And they will both look great and appropriate together in pageant or play.

↑ Index

103. charssmith
Re: Olson quotation
Wed 8 Sep 1999

<< can anyone help me identify this olson quotation?:

> "that which exists through itself is what is called meaning." >>

Tom,

It's a quote from _The Secret of the Golden Flower_ that Olson uses in hisessay/talk "Causal Mythology" (first vol. of _Muthologos_ & undoubtedly in the Cal Collected Prose).

He uses it again in the poem "The Secret of the Black Chrysanthemum" that Charles Stein devoted a book-length study to.

all best,
cs

↑ Index

104. Mark Salerno
Novels of the Sixties
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Colleagues:

I'd appreciate hearing from anyone with suggestions for a course on the Novels of the Sixties. Of particular interest are novels that reflect, in form and/or content, the counter culture. The limit for this theme (arbitrary though it may be) is that the publication date of the book must fall between 1960 and 1970.

Reply by backchannel.

Thank you.

Mark Salerno

↑ Index

105. Alan Sondheim
Re: Need help for a Millennial Project through trAce!
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Depends of course - but part of the idea is to see what happens with the Y2K rollover, which is the earlier hinge (there's another around 2038 but I'll be dead). It's looking at the way the electrical grid works, it's coming to grips with the grid, not just presenting on the surface, but watching the measure of its nerves.

Alan

On Tue, 7 Sep 1999, George Bowering wrote:

> =
>
> Millennium Project - Help Needed, Comments Invited !!!
>
> This is a proposal for a millennium project that would involving running traceroute and similar applications across the December 31 / January 1 _hinge._
>
> That would be Dec 2000 -- Jan 2001, wouldnt it?
>
> George Bowering.
>
> fax: [redacted]

http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt - partial mirror at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html co-moderator Cyber-culture, Cybermind, Fiction of Philosophy (fop-l)

↑ Index

106. Alan Sondheim
SILICONATHANOR - new magazine project (fwd)
Wed 8 Sep 1999

the siliconathanor magazine project

PLEASE SPREAD THIS MESSAGE

Ten years after the experience with "Circolo Pickwick" magazine, I'm planning to realise at the beginning of the new year a "number zero" (experimental issue) of a new printed magazine.
The title will be "siliconathanor".
We are looking for contributors.
Here are the characteristics of this new project.

SPECIFICATIONS:
Size: something inside A3 (probably cm. 34X28,5)
Cover: full colour Internal pages: b/w number of pages: to define

THE SPIRIT:
We want to realise an artistic project, to explore mainly the areas between electronic media and creativity in this peculiar moment.

MATERIALS WE ARE LOOKING FOR:

A) TEXTS

1- short stories, poems, any kind of experimental text, with an evident connection to present time: transformations, electronic media, cyberspace, spiritual developments, ethical problems and so on.

2- articles and short essays on the same themes.

Anyway I will be glad to consider anything, even outside the main themes. Consider that the magazine will be targeted on creative texts much more than on essays. I hate to give length limits to writers (being a writer myself and hating to have such limits...): but please remember your text should be one among others, and not the one that fills the whole magazine. IMPORTANT: please send the texts via e-mail as attached file -or snail mail on a floppy disk- also (save as: text, txt, rtf). Texts in English or French will be published in their original language with an Italian translation. Texts in Italian will be published only in the original language, except special cases, when they could be translated in English. Don't forget to write on the work itself (not only on the envelope!) your name, address and so on.

B) IMAGES Any subject. Any technique allowed. Any size. Electronic images (jpeg, tiff and so on) welcome. Paper prints or original works welcome as well. Please be conscious that the works reproduced in the internal pages will be grey scale printed. Don't forget to write on the work's back (not only on the envelope!) your name, address and so on.

C) REVIEWS We plan to publish a note about ANY publication that we'll receive, being on printed paper, magnetic or laser support; literary, musical or multimedia. Any press release is welcome too: but in that case we will choose if to include it or not.

D) MAIN THEME We would like to have a main theme for each issue. This will come in the future. In number zero there will be just a thematic section. Key-word: AVATAR. Works on this subject are more than welcome.

CONTRIBUTORS If you want to participate to this experiment, you have to do it for free. This is a no-profit attempt to create a new, free artistic medium. Number zero will be widely diffused among magazines, cultural institutions and so on. I promise I'll send two complimentary copies to all the published participants and one to all those who proposed original materials, even if not published (press releases not included). I warmly suggest you to send also a biography and a picture of yours, because I plan to publish a small but complete file about any of the contributors at the end of the magazine. For obvious reasons, we will not send back the works you mail us.

COPIRIGHT
It remains property of the authors, that will be free to do what they want of their works in the future.

TEAM
At the moment our team is composed by: Giuseppe Iannicelli, Alberto Crosio, Veronica Villa, Diego Fasano.

ADDRESS:

you can send your works to:
Siliconathanor - CP 122 I-15100 Alessandria - ITALIA

The email you can use as well is:
[redacted]

Please always begin the subject of the email with the word "siliconathanor", then add anything you need to.

Best regards. Giuseppe Iannicelli

IF YOU DO NOT WANT TO RECEIVE ANYMORE INFO ABOUT THIS PROJECT, PLEASE JUST REPLY TO THIS MESSAGE WITH THE WORD "REMOVE" IN THE BODY OF THE MESSAGE. Thanks

==========
Siliconathanor. Universes inside your mind. And your machine.

The Lab, a virtual place for experimenting Arts http://members.tripod.com/~thelab/ [redacted]
==========
======

↑ Index

107. megan minka lola camille roy
Euro-San Francisco Poetry festival
Wed 8 Sep 1999

Hi poetics list,
This is (as far as I know) a complete schedule of this VERY special event, co-sponsored by many San Francisco literary organizations and cultural agencies. If you want more info on an particular event than is listed here, I suggest calling the presenting organization. (I haven't found a central coordinator and can't help you with questions, sorry.) This is an opportunity to hear poets who are very rarely (if ever) here, as well as wonderful local writers and translators. It looks super...
camille roy

Euro-San Francisco Poetry Festival

Co-sponsored by Alliance Francaise, in conjuction with the Euro-San Francisco Poetry Festival, a 5-day series of events sponsored by Alliance Francaise, Goethe-Institut, and the Istituto Italiano di Cultura, in collaboration with City Lights Books, Intersection for the Arts, New Langton Arts, the San Francisco Art Institute, and Small Press Traffic.

special event: poetry reading an evening of french poetry with Jean Fremon

translated by Cole Swensen
&
Anne Portugal
translated by Norma Cole

Saturday
September 25, 1999
8 pm
box office opens at 7pm

Tickets:
$6 general
$4 langton members, students, and seniors for information or reservations call [redacted]

reservations recommended

1246 Folsom Street
San Francisco
between 8th and 9th streets

The rest of the schedule is:

Wednesday, Sept. 22
7:30pm at San Francisco Art Institute poets Edoardo Sanfuineti, Guilia Niccolai, & Luigi Vallerini

Thursday, Sept. 23
1-4pm at Intersection for the Arts
Translation workshop with European Poets and their translators

Friday Sept. 24
7:30pm at Small Press Traffic
(New College Theater)
Stage Reading/Performance by German poet Tracy Splinter and SF poets Kevin Killian and Jocelyn Saidenberg

Saturday, Sept. 25
2pm at Intersection for the Arts
Spoken Poetry Performance by German poets Bastian Bottcher and Philipp Schiemann with Bay Area poets TBA

Saturday, Sept 25
8pm at New Langton Arts
An evening with French poets Anne Portugal and Jean Fremon translated by Norma Cole and Cole Swenson. (See above).

Sunday, Sept. 26
1-4pm at SF Art Institute
Closing event with participating European poets & translators as well as SF peots Bill Berkson, Joanne Kyger, Duncan McNaughton, Nathaniel Mackey, Leslie Scalapino, & Aaron Shurin. Guest of Honor, Lawrence Felinghetti.

--

Go there, get paid, right now, bulls-eye, never before, sure fire:
http://www.grin.net/~minka

"Concealment is what I most enjoy: I love organs." (C. Harryman)

↑ Index

108. Catherine Daly
Re: NYC Bookstores
Wed 8 Sep 1999

I was just in NY and surprised that Tower records clearance outlet (and by extension, Tower Records) has a lot of Talisman Bks, Harryette Mullen's _Muse & Drudge_, and a lot of other interesting stuff. Much better than Tower Outlet in THIS NoHo.

Rgds,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

109. r. drake
(fwd) New book by BRENDA COULTAS
Wed 8 Sep 1999

> Date: Wed, 08 Sep 1999 14:05:17 -0700
> From: Mary Burger <[redacted]>
> Subject: New book by BRENDA COULTAS
>
> Second Story Books announces the publication of
>
> A SUMMER NEWSREEL
> by Brenda Coultas
>
> "Those new to Coultas' writing are in for a fine treat: for several years, > Coultas has been conducting an in-depth evaluation of the interstices of > rural and semi-rural America and A Summer Newsreel is another stunning > chapter in the most gloriously idiosyncratic work around." --Laird Hunt
>
> 23 pages with hand-stitched binding, vellum and monotone color photo cover.
>
> Available from SMALL PRESS DISTRIBUTION:
> http://www.spdbooks.org, tel. [redacted]
>
> or from SECOND STORY BOOKS:
> Send a check for $5.00 payable to MARY BURGER at:
> Second Story Books
> Mary Burger, Editor
> 85 Henry St. #5
> San Francisco CA 94114

> Write/email for more information on other Second Story books:
> NOT RIGHT NOW, Renee Gladman
> THE TELEVISION DOCUMENTARY, Lauren Gudath (forthcoming)
> CONFUZION COMIX, Jacques Debrot (forthcoming)

↑ Index

110. Brendan Lorber
SWEET REVENGE AT THE ZINC BAR...
Wed 8 Sep 1999

That's right - rise up downstairs as the ZINC BAR SUNDAY NIGHT READING SERIES kicks off the fall season. We've run the series all summer & now it's time for you to take over - & to take advantage of your hosts' sun-addled minds & sun-addled minds. Let me explain: The vast number of crummy open mics around the country do nothing to address the real desire of most poets - that is, to run a series themselves. And so we've taken it upon ourselves to begin the autumn with an open-host night at the Zinc Bar.

Series founder Joe Eliot returns to guest mc on September 12 when audience members & former readers are invited to introduce Brendan Lorber & Douglas Rothschild, the word-drunk curators. Wearing clever disguises & employing our vast network of spies, Douglas and I have ascertained that many people look upon this evening as an opportunity to get back at us for our somewhat tangential, sprawling approach to introductions during the rest of the year. One person anticipates an evening not unlike the scene in Airplane in which people line up with boxing gloves and monkey wrenches to take turns calming a hysterical passenger.

Whatever the outcome, we foolishly invite all of you to come & introduce us and, if there is time, we'll read some of our own work after.

The following week, four Danish poets will be reading their poetry in English & Danish as part of a broader festival of Danish culture throughout the Metropolitan Area this month. It should prove to be a memorable night & we recommend checking out the other events Denmark is bringing us, in addition to this reading.

Continuing on the international tip, the final week in September brings us Indran Amirthanayagam & Ron Price. Indran's in town briefly & is making a rare appearance. (He'll also be reading on MAD ALEX Presents on Monday Sept 27th if you'd like to see him again.)

In October we'll be hosting a global blend of poets whose work spans several languages and whose names are certain to be bolloxed by Douglas' spelling ability and Brendan's distracted states.

So here's the rundown for September

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 12:
DOUGLAS ROTHSCHILD &
BRENDAN LORBER
(Joe Eliot moderates and YOU are the special guest host)

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 19:
KATRINE MARIE GULDAGER &
SOREN ULRIK THOMSEN &
ANNE METTE LUNDTOFTE &
TODD THILLEMAN

SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 26:
INDRAN AMIRTHANAYAGAM &
RON PRICE

The Zinc Bar is at 90 West Houston Street between Laguardia & Thompson, in the basement. After the reading & every night in fact, the Zinc Bar has some pretty good jazz.

All readings "start" at 6:37pm every single Sunday.

We ask for three bucks, which go to the readers. If you can't manage three bucks, give us whatever you can manage, even if its just best wishes. We recommend bringing a little extra tho, as readers often bring their books & Brendan is always flogging his LUNGFULL!Magazine.

If you need more information: [redacted] or [redacted]. (For extra fun, why not conference these two numbers together & then secretly listen in.) You can also e us at [redacted], though we can't guarantee the degree of delight that'll bring.

As always, if this email grieves you - because, say, you don't want it, please let us know & you'll never hear from the Zinc boys again.

On behalf of Douglas Rothschild and all of us at the Zinc Bar Sunday Night Reading Series, thanks for your time. I'm Brendan Lorber. Good night, & we'll see you on Sunday.

↑ Index

111. Patrick Herron

Re: I can't believe it!!!

Thu 9 Sep 1999

Good idea to speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just as good and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the chaotic and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone else takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.

http://www.freetimor.com/

http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html

http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/

http://www.etan.org/

regards,
Patrick Herron

>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a better usage of your time; [redacted]

thanks pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

112. Richard Dillon
Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
Thu 9 Sep 1999

HAZO!

Poet Laureate of PENN SYL VA NIA!

>From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: the lack of a state poet laureate >Date: Wed, Sep 8, 1999, 1:39 AM
>

> Calif, my home state for 37 years, 37 years during which time I have never known who the PL was, nor have I noticed any damage to poetry resulting from this absence or, indeed, presence.
>
> David Bromige, CPL
>
> Yes, David, but in those 37 years, have you ever known who the governor was?
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

113. Stephen Ellis
Re: Olson quotation
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Tom, I think it occurs first in "The Special View of History", tho I don't know wher exactly. Also, Charles' copious "death notes" mention this same sentem-nce in several differernt contextxs/If you do'n't have access to them, write me and I'll send them on to you.\ Beestm, Stephen

> From: Tom Orange <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Olson quotation
> Date: Wed, 8 Sep 1999 10:53:26 -0400

> hello all,
>
> can anyone help me identify this olson quotation?:
> "that which exists through itself is what is called meaning."
>
> much thanks,
> tom orange in d.c.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

114. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: LEFT HAND READING SERIES, Thurs. Sept. 16 @ 8:30pm

Thu 9 Sep 1999

> THE LEFT HAND READING SERIES 1999-2000 SEASON*
> *KICKS OFF ON THURSDAY, SEPT. 16 @ 8:30 PM
>
> The Left Hand Reading Series is proud to present featured readers ANSELM HOLLO, AKILAH OLIVER and BHANU KAPIL RIDER for its first reading of the 1999-2000 season.
>
> Left Hand Books is located at 1825 Pearl St, between 18th & 19th, above the Crystal Market.
> The reading is free, but donations are requested.
>
> ANSELM HOLLO is the author of over 35 volumes of poetry. His latest work includes "Corvus," "AHOE 2: Johnny Cash Writes a Letter to Santa Claus," and "PoLemics," with Jack Collom and Anne Waldman. He is one of this country's most accomplished translators and is a Core Faculty member at Naropa University.
>
> AKILAH OLIVER is the author of "The She Said Dialogues," and a founding member of the LA-based performance collective, The Sacred Naked Nature Girls. Currently an Adjunct Faculty member at Naropa University, she has received awards for writing and performance from the Rockefeller Foundation and the California Council of the Arts.
>
> BHANU KAPIL RIDER'S first book, a prose-poem entitled "The Vertical Interrogation of Strangers," is forthcoming from Kelsey Street Press. Selections from her novel, "The Autobiography of a Cyborg," will appear in the prestigious journal Conjunctions.
>
> A brief Open Reading will begin the evening.
>
> For more information, please call Mark DuCharme ([redacted]) or Patrick

> Pritchett ([redacted])
>
> The Left Hand Reading Series is funded in part by grants from the Boulder Arts Commission and the Assembly for Humanities and Arts in Boulder.

↑ Index

115. Aldon Nielsen
Tosh Sighting
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Just noticed that Tosh Berman (along with Wallace & Shirley) appears in Philip Whalen's "In The Center of Autumn" --

↑ Index

116. Poetics List
Performance Advertisement - Joseph Hyde & Alaric Sumner / Sumner
Thu 9 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Mon, Sep 6, 1999 2:11 PM +0000
From: Alaric Sumner <[redacted]>
Subject: Performance Advertisement - Joseph Hyde & Alaric Sumner

(sorry for any crossposting)

Nekyia (a recital for eyes and ears) presented by Joseph Hyde and Alaric Sumner Saturday 25 September in Somerset, UK

Includes: Hyde and Sumner's collaboration 'Nekyia' (for speaker, singer, electroacoustic sound, live electronics and video); Kurt Schwitters; Hugo Ball; Hyde's 'In Sunlight' and 'Vox Mechanix'; reading of excerpts from Sumner's 'Tonight', a few new 'Letters for dear Augustine' and his two short collaborations with soundartist John Levack Drever, 'Hope' and 'Sound'.

Performers include Rory McDermott ('The Unspeakable Rooms') and singer Steve Halfyard.

The piece 'Nekyia' will also be performed in Montreal in September and Oslo in October.

BY INVITATION ONLY

IF YOU WOULD LIKE AN INVITATION PLEASE EMAIL mailto:[redacted]

Further details:
http://www.dartington.ac.uk/~j.hyde/nekflyer.html

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

117. Poetics List
temple reading schedule / osman
Thu 9 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Tue, Sep 7, 1999 2:37 PM -0400
From: jena osman <[redacted]>
Subject: temple reading schedule

For those of you in the Philadelphia area, here is the upcoming reading series hosted by the Temple University Creative Writing Program. All readings are free to the public, start at 8:00 p.m. and take place at the Temple Gallery, 45 North 2nd St.

September 16, Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

September 30, Jonathan Ames

October 7, Caroline Seebohm

December 1, Robert Coover

December 2, Carla Harryman

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

118. Macgregor Card
New England Mags?
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Does anyone captain or know of any small New England litmags that might be interested in setting up a booth at the Bartlett Society book fair, in Providence, at Brown, late October Saturday? Sales would generate revenue, word-of-mouth and money. Fine-press centurions are attending from as far away from home as Manhattan. I've already talked with Michael Magee, of the fabulous _Combo_. Any other takers? "Regional" webmags are welcome to submit a link (there'll be a magazine webprojection). Send an email this week if you might be interested: [redacted].

Thanks,
Macgregor

↑ Index

119. Poetics List
New Barrett Watten criticism in Qui Parle 11.1 / Nickels
Thu 9 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Wed, Sep 1, 1999 4:33 PM -0400
From: Joel Tyler Nickels <[redacted]>
Subject: New Barrett Watten criticism in Qui Parle 11.1

A new essay by Barrett Watten which might be of interest to the poetry crowd is appearing in issue 11.1 of the Berkeley theoretical journal Qui Parle. It's entitled "The Constructivist Moment: From El Lissitzky to Detroit Techno." Barrett and I are trying to spread the word that the issue is now out. For more info, you can contact me directly at [redacted], or email Qui Parle at [redacted]. Our website is http://socrates.berkeley.edu/~quiparle.

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

120. Maria Damon
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Thu 9 Sep 1999

At 4:41 PM -0800 9/8/99, Mark Salerno wrote:
>Colleagues:
>
>I'd appreciate hearing from anyone with suggestions for a course on the >Novels of the Sixties. Of particular interest are novels that reflect, >in form and/or content, the counter culture. The limit for this theme >(arbitrary though it may be) is that the publication date of the book >must fall between 1960 and 1970.
>
>Reply by backchannel.
>
>Thank you.

>
>Mark Salerno

i'd be curious to hear folks's suggestions so if you don't mind frontchannel, mine is Leonard Cohen's Beautiful Losers.

↑ Index

121. Aldon Nielsen
Re: New Barrett Watten criticism in Qui Parle 11.1 / Nickels
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Just tried to access that site to read the Watten essay, in hopes of getting the portion he didn't have time to deliver at the Toronto MLA, but I got a message that it wasn't found on the specified server -- Hope this just means the server is temporarily down or some such thing --

↑ Index

122. A H Bramhall
Backwards from Myrna Loy
Thu 9 Sep 1999

A Reproach

it's so simple: make up the biography! it's not as if distance didn't exist in this and all matters. skidmarks litter the road to fame. take the current example: working with her poet/boxer friend, Myrna Loy developed a new way to exaggerate. she defined her region of interest, simulating participation, while her boxer/poet friend, Arthur Cravan, defined his, simulating disinterest. the modern puzzle was easily solved. Loy the subject, meaning Mina, became a logo, an experience and a DRAMATIC TURN OF EVENTS!!!. Myrna, famous in her own right, knew the price of fame. her emphasis was clear. she would kick off her shoes as William Powell, no poet/boxer he, sauntered about the apartment shaking the iconic martini shaker with a dolourous abandon, at the same time declaring with a burp "I have a book in me." modernist Myrna would simply sigh, "my dogs are killing me." Not Asta, the literal dog but -- oh my -- we have taken a trip with the possible. Mina Loy said modernism will just have to take care of itself, whether biography outlives her or not. she implies that we should unite the streams of resistance and truth, and tremble beneath the new kabalistic glare. she knew, I'm sure, that moderner babies are born every day, and each will want a newer biography, the shimmer of which will suggest novelistic possibilities. sure, we are all still people, in the usual marginal use of that term, but oh, we could talk about more. Mina Loy, therefore, is NOT Myrna Loy. not now, and maybe not to come. the connective tissues maintain a tenuous grip, which is why the genre called futurity is so passe. one concludes, then, that being force fed by the collected authority doesn't really help.

↑ Index

123. Billy Little
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Thu 9 Sep 1999

---

beautiful losers by leonard cohen been down so long looks like up to me by richard farina four gated city
briefing for a descent into hell both by doris lessing speeches of a brazen head phil whalen trout fishing in america by richard brautigan the white album by joan didion
the crying of lot 49
v both by tom pynchon great jones street dom de lillo cat's cradle brakfast of champions
god bless you mister rosewater slaughterhouse five all by kurt Vonnegut confessions of a crap artist the transmigration of timothy archer ubik all by phil dick small changes vida
woman on the edge of time all by marge piercy on the road(is this a fifties novel or sixties novel?) subterreanians dharma bums doctor sax
vanity of duluoz(sp?) all by Jack Kerouac enormous changes at the last minute grace paley
the sky changes
the imaginative qualities of actual things both by gilbert sorrentino good day to die by jim harrison go in beauty
the bronc people portrait of the artist with twenty six horses by william eastlake hard rain don carpenter hall of mirrors robert stone omensetter's luck william gass

the ticket that exploded nova express bill burroughs last exit to brooklyn hubert selby hopscotch julio cortazar
the deans december saul bellow
the floating opera john barth
second skin john hawkes
st. urbain's horseman mordechai richler catch 22 joseph heller come back dr. caligari
the dead father both by donald barthelme the origin of the brunists universal baseball association both by robert coover

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

124. Billy Little
Re: the lack of a state poet laureate
Thu 9 Sep 1999

---

the poet laureate of california has a mahvelous piece in the new tads#5 which includes work by Renee Rodin, george stanley, george bowering, kedrick james, curt lang, zoran bognar. Send Jamie Reid 382 E. 4th St. North Vancouver, B.C., Canada V7L 1J2 some postage($2?) he'll send you the mag what a deal!

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

125. Nate and Jane Dorward

The Poetry of Peter Riley

Thu 9 Sep 1999

The Gig 4/5: The Poetry of Peter Riley

The next issue of _The Gig_ magazine will be a special perfectbound double-issue of essays on the poetry of Peter Riley. This will provide the first substantial collection of criticism and commentary on an oeuvre which has already, with such classic books as _Lines on the Liver_, _Tracks and Mineshafts_ and _Distant Points_, been widely influential and admired. The issue's contributors will include Andrew Crozier, Nigel Wheale, John Hall, Keston Sutherland, Mark Morrisson, Tony Baker, Peter Larkin, Peter Middleton & others. It will also contain an interview conducted by Keith Tuma, previously unpublished poetry by Peter Riley, new translations by Lorand Gaspar, and a bibliography. This volume will pay long-overdue attention to one of the UK's most important poets.

The Gig needs advance support to enable the publication of this book. (There is, as one might anticipate, no public funding available in Canada for publishing work by non-Canadian authors.) The price is not yet fixed but we are asking for a minimum advance subscription of $20 Canadian dollars/$15 US dollars (prices include airmail within North America); or £10 in sterling (includes surfacemail to UK/overseas; add £2 for airmail). This amount may of course be increased by anyone who wishes thus to support the venture, and such support will be acknowledged.

Subscriptions from Canada and USA should be sent and paid to "Nate Dorward", at: _The Gig_, Nate Dorward, 109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada; ph: [redacted]; email: <[redacted]>. Subscriptions from UK and Europe may be sent and paid to Peter Riley (Books), 27 Sturton St., Cambridge, CB1 2QG, UK; ph/fax: 01223 576422; email: <[redacted]>.

Nate & Jane Dorward
[redacted]
109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
ph: [redacted]

↑ Index

126. Tosh
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Here is something of use and interest: Jill Neville's 'The Love Germ.' It is a novel that takes place during the May 68 uprising. I believe it was written during that period.

Also I would think any fiction book by Terry Southern, The Soft Machine by Burroughs, etc.

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

127. Joe Ahearn
Best Texas Writing 2 available
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Hi all,

I am posting this note for my colleague, Brian Clements, who is temporarily without Internet service.

Best,
Joe Ahearn

Best Texas Writing 2 is now available! This volume includes work by the excellent poets, essayists, and fictionists listed below. Recipients of this message are entitled to a 10% discount plus free shipping. Mail a check or money order for $13.50 (US) per book to Firewheel Editions, 6514 Barnsbury Ct., Dallas, TX 75248, and your book(s) will be shipped immediately. All proceeds from the sale of BTW2 go entirely towards the cost of printing this and other publications from Firewheel Editions, including Kristin Ryling's chapbook, _Trompe L'Oeil_, due this fall.

Joe Ahearn, Wendy Barker, Bruce Bond, Paul Christensen, Gillian Conoley, Carol Cullar, Cooper Esteban, Larry Fontenot, Dagoberto Gilb, Emily Fox Gordon, H. Palmer Hall, Edward Hirsch, Judith Kroll, S.D. Lishan, Lee Martin, Walt McDonald, Jack Myers, Chinwe Odeluga, Kathleen Peirce, Robert Phillips, Frank Pool, Pattiann Rogers, Jan Epton Seale, Matthew Sharpe, Christopher Soden, Laurel Speer, Sheryl St. Germain, Denise Stallcup, Maureen P. Stanton, Belinda Subraman, Miles Wilson, Steve Wilson, Christopher Woods.

Brian Clements
Publisher, Firewheel Editions

Joe Ahearn
[redacted]

↑ Index

128. Alan Sondheim
Culture and Anarchy
Thu 9 Sep 1999

=

Culture and Anarchy

"It may well be," he said, in his sudden lyrical manner, "it may well be on such a night of clouds and cruel colours that there is brought forth upon the earth such a portent as a respectable poet. You say you are a poet of law; I say you are a contradiction in terms. I only wonder there were not comets and earthquakes on the night you appeared in this garden."

[...]

"You are wrong," said the Secretary, drawing his black brows together. "The knife was merely the expression of the old personal quarrel with a personal tyrant. Dynamite is not only our best tool, but our best symbol. It is as perfect a symbol of us as is incense of the prayers of the Chris- tians. It expands; it only destroys because it broadens; even so, thought only destroys because it broadens. A man's brain is a bomb," he cried out, loosening suddenly his strange passion and striking his own skull with violence. "My brain feels like a bomb, night and day. It must expand! It must expand! A man's brain must expand, if it breaks up the universe."

(quotes from The Man Who was Thursday, G. K. Chesterton.)

"I have never been so tense as to write 'currenct' for 'current' or 'may bell we' for 'may well be' as I am now," they continued; the date was duly noted among each and every line, making no difference to the general at- mosphere. "It's impossible to think straight any longer," they said, hit- ting the table with their fists in a dull pounding, "just when one thought appears, another violates it, attempts to take its place. Everything melts before my eyes; there's nothing but red and black, black on red, red on black!" They replied with vehemence; the argument went on long into the night. The next morning, there would be headlines in the newspapers all across Europe; now was the time for reflection. "You can see an error for what it is," they said, "you can see it and see it - and nothing helps; it sits there, invisible! No wonder everything appears in version after ver- sion! Our poor humanity gets by on its last ropes; what's left of it is always unrecognized, a victim of the slowness of speech, the deafness of the listener, dyslectic readers, genius!"

↑ Index

129. Dodie Bellamy
hypertext suggestions
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Hi, I have an independent study student who is going to do a hypertext horror piece. I have no problem helping her with the horror end of the project, but also want to suggest some good hypertext pieces and/or theories. I'm sending her the urls of a couple things that have caught my eye, but does anyone have any suggestions of some cut-above hypertext links? Or even books/articles on hypertext?

Thanks.

Dodie

↑ Index

130. Mark Weiss
help
Thu 9 Sep 1999

Anybody have Eliot Weinberger's email address? Backchannel, please.

↑ Index

131. Ralph Wessman
Re: New England Mags?
Fri 10 Sep 1999

Hi Macgregor ... 'Nedge'? But I guess you know it. It's in the EPC Little Mag Al- cove, if not.

Best,

Ralph

> Does anyone captain or know of any small New England litmags

↑ Index

132. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Fri 10 Sep 1999

please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
to:[redacted]
thanks pete spence

speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just >as good
>and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the >chaotic
>and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
>else
>takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
>
>http://www.freetimor.com/
>
>http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
>
>http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
>
>http://www.etan.org/
>
>regards,
>Patrick Herron
>

>
>>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a >better
>usage of your time; [redacted]
>
>thanks pete spence
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

133. david bromige
a state w/o a laureate's like what happened to yr navel!?
Fri 10 Sep 1999

I thank you, fellow poetry-fans, for those three votes. They counterbalance the pair of hairsplitters who dont know whether i'm from venus or mars. But Bob Gruman has it right, of course---I only meant that each of us should make a like declaration. Given, that is, that we are uneasy w/o a representative.

It was a moment of flippitude. I diss noone. Peter, that is. Elected, shall serve....but not minors.

Pat Brown, Ronald Ragwort, Jerry Brown, George Deukmejian, Pete Wilson, Gray Davis, George. You forget that I worked for the state for 2/3 of my time served in calif.

db

↑ Index

134. Richard Dillon
Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
Fri 10 Sep 1999

The plot of someone's life as pursued by a biographer versus biographer's wordsWORDS! whole passages of them LIFTED by some unscrupulous arrogant ambitious self assumed artiste ------
----

>From: Wystan Curnow <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: fwd from Carolyn Burke
>Date: Wed, Sep 8, 1999, 6:47 PM
>

> Karen Kelley wrote:
>
> I'm a bit at a loss here. What, I wonder, would Carolyn Burke like? That she had been involved in the novelization process? That people not novelize biographies? That the novelizations be biographically accurate? That we not buy Antonia Logue's book? I'm sorry that she feels ripped off, and I can't speak as an academic-who's-been-ripped-off, but if someone's going to novelize a life, I don't see how they can get around the bio. No doubt Carolyn Burke thinks Antonia Logue cut too close to her own work, but where is a novelizer to turn? If Logue is going to speculate, must she speculate radically different speculations than Burke speculates? If you're novelizing a bio, aren't you mythologizing? And so perhaps preferable to use the more common myths?
>
> Excellent questions all, but I can't shake the feeling that I was expected to react to a brouhaha...
>
> I guess they do sound excellent to their author but am I the only reader who finds them mostly answered in Burke's post? WHERE IS THE NOVELIZER TO TURN? o, poor noveliser! Novelisers Go Home, I say. Seems like there's some confusion about genre here, about how to be in or out of genre or meaningfully neither in or out. Am I wrong?
>
> Wystan

↑ Index

135. Edward Foster
The greatest American poet from Walt Whitman to Robert Frost
Fri 10 Sep 1999

Published today:

Stuart Merrill, The White Tomb: Selected Writings

"In the whole period, from Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson to Edwin Arlington Robinson and Robert Frost, the greatest American poet is Stuart Merrill" -- Kenneth Rexroth

with translations by "Aeon," Jethro Bithell, Elaine L. Corts, Holly Haahr, John Hay, Anselm Hollo, John Porter Houston, Mona Tobin Houston, Laird Hunt, Jack

Lewis, Ludwig Lewisohn, Andrew Mangravite, Geoffrey O'Brien, Christine Pagnoulle, John Payne, Catherine Perry, Thomas B. Rudmose-Brown, and Henry Weinfield

Talisman House, Publishers, ISBN: 1-883689-85-6, $16.95

Order through LPC (www.coolbooks.com), SPD, or your local bookstore

"Merrill performed the incredibly difficult feat of wringing out of French versification the soft far-away music of the English Pre-Raohaelites. More than any other he produced the nearest thing in words to Debussy's music." --Vincent O'Sullivan, _Dictionary of American Biography_

Stuart Merrill (1863-1915) stood at the center of the international literary world in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Too American to fit into the French literary tradition and too French to fit into the American, he was a great maverick, important to both cultures but in the deepest sense belonging to none. As a Symbolist, he was among the forerunners of Modernism, and as a translator, he was crucial in making Stephen Mallarme and Paul Verlaine known in America and William Butler Yeats and Arthur Symons known in France. He defended the anarchists in the Haymarket Square riot of 1886, for which he was disinherited by his wealthy, socially prominent father. Leaving America permanently in 1892, he moved to Paris and later made his home near the palace at Versailles. A respected member of the inner circle surrounding Mallarme, he defended Oscar Wilde and Walt Whitman and published dozens of essays in support of young writers and new ideas. _The White Tomb_ includes major examples of his poetry (both in French and in English translation) as well as a selection of his translations and essays including his essays on his friends Wilde and Verlaine and his famous account of meeting Whitman shortly before the poets death.

"The saddening thought for us is this: that English literature has lost to France two delicate and fascinating poets [Stuart Merrill and Francis Viele-Griffin], who might have stood by the side of W. B. Yeats and Arthur Symons as wizards of the word. And the United States have lost their two greatest contemporary poets." --Jethro Bithell, _Contemporary French Poetry_

↑ Index

136. Marjorie Perloff
Re: Three Penny Opera in San Francisco
Fri 10 Sep 1999

I don't usually promote my daughters' activities but thought those of you who are Brecht/Weill fans and who are in the Bay Area (or may be coming soon) would be interested in Carey's production of THREE PENNY OPERA which opened at ACT last night. Herewith the review from SF Examiner:

Modern classic in glorious guise

ACT offers brilliant version of 'Threepenny Opera'

By Robert Hurwitt
EXAMINER THEATER CRITIC

Performance credits

Bebe Neuwirth stands in a stark spotlight in front of the tawdry, frayed red curtain, her thin face framed in a thick black mane that cascades over her tail coat and slit red mini. She plants her stiletto-heeled feet and sheer-stockinged long legs well apart and simply, matter-of-factly launches into "Moritat," the justly famed "Ballad of Mack the Knife."

Her stunning voice — overmiked as it is — rings out clear, raw, insistent and penetrating with a feral vibrato that broadcasts the emotional resonance her formal stance and delivery belie. She sings Bertolt Brecht's sardonic catalogue of Macheath's career of rape, murder, robbery and mayhem — "You won't see Mackie's knife blade/ Till you feel it in your back" — investing every note of Kurt Weill's melody with perfect phrasing and rising, irresistible intensity.

By the time she's finished, you not only know Carey Perloff's ACT season opener is going to be a smash success, you understand all over again why "The Threepenny Opera" is the definitive musical drama of the 20th century. And that's just the opening, before musical director Peter Maleitzke's hot onstage jazz sextet has swung into the overture. Two hours and 40 minutes later, as Neuwirth sings the bitterly downbeat coda, those feelings remain intact.

Not that "Threepenny" is foolproof. Brecht and Weill wrote their 1928 masterpiece — the overnight sensation that established their careers — specifically for singing actors rather than trained musical voices. But many a revival has foundered on inept musicianship, onstage or in the pit (the original featured the Lewis Ruth Band, one of Germany's top jazz groups) — if not on sloppy staging, bad acting or misconceived direction.

Perloff's "Threepenny," which opened Wednesday at the Geary Theater, falls into none of these traps. Michael Feingold's translation, revised from his 1989 Broadway version, is sharp, lucid and almost as biting as Brecht's German. The musicianship is brilliant on every hand. Perloff's staging is crisp, clear and brightly original without calling undue attention to its own cleverness.

And the cast she's assembled is quite simply the finest I've seen since the "Threepenny" that turned me into a lifelong theater devotee, the 1950s Off Broadway Theater de Lys production with which Lotte Lenya — Weill's widow and Brecht's original Jenny — helped revive Weill's reputation and re-establish the play as a contemporary classic.

It's a cast made up of equal parts Broadway veterans — Neuwirth, Philip Casnoff, Lisa Vroman, Nancy Dussault — ACT regulars (Steven Anthony Jones, Anika Noni Rose, Charles Lanyer, Dan Hiatt), other local actors and students from ACT's MFA and Young Conservatory programs. Perloff weaves their talents into a seamless ensemble full of outstanding performances.

Not to mention a stunning blend of diverse, complementary performance styles: Neuwirth's confrontational Weimar cabaret stance; Dussault's deft vaudeville turns; Casnoff's disarming soft-shoe hoofer grace; Vroman's operatic flourishes and silent-movie melodrama gestural eloquence; Rose's romantic ingénue underlaid with lusty burlesque. It's a range reflective of the eclectic sources for both the score and the script.

Brecht and Weill threw the play together in a few short months. The script, of course, is based on John Gay's brilliant 18th century "The Beggar's

Opera," heavily adapted by Brecht from a translation by his longtime collaborator Elisabeth Hauptmann.

Brecht borrowed heavily from a number of other sources — several song lyrics from Villon (listing him in the program and paying royalties to his translator, Karl Klammer, who wrote under the name Ammer), not to mention language from Kipling and the Bible and and ideas from Piscator, Wedekind, Noh drama, Shaw, Büchner, Pirandello and others.

Weill matched Brecht's eclecticism with a score that blended American jazz and Lutheran hymns, German cabaret and English music hall, high and light opera and other influences, including one entire song lifted from Gay — whose own score had been entirely composed of popular English tunes. It's a script and score that could make a post-modernist scholar dizzy analyzing layers of borrowing. But it takes no expertise whatsoever to revel in the play's still-astonishing freshness, bite and beauty.

Perloff, wisely, lets the play speak for itself, making only minor adjustments — far less radical than Brecht was wont to do with his own productions. True, she sticks "Moritat" out front, before the overture, and gives it to Jenny instead of the usual streetsinger. But Neuwirth, a memorable Velma in Broadway's recent "Chicago" (as well as on "Cheers"), provides a blisteringly vivid rendition that fully justifies the change.

Feingold, theater critic for the Village Voice, has cut the text and songs some. But he's restored the songs to their original order and characters (though Perloff has Neuwirth's Jenny double gloriously with Rose's Polly Peachum on a resonant, searing "Pirate Jenny"). Some of his translations undercut Brecht's humor, particularly in the rousing "Soldier's Song" ("Cannon Song"), but most capture the crisp clarity of Brecht's wit.

Perloff and choreographer Luis Perez infuse the show with a brisk, engaging energy that only flags a bit in the middle of the second act. Annie Smart's set — a two-story, distressed brick shell of an opera house, as if after an earthquake — and turn-of-the-century costumes establish the vaguely San Francisco-ish milieu of Perloff's version.

The performers turn in one show-stopping rendition after another, giving the songs the intensified focus and self-conscious theatricality Brecht demanded. Dussault is outstanding as the tipsy, resourceful Mrs. Peachum, pairing brilliantly with Jones' gruff, booming, sanctimonious baritone on the Peachums' beggar shop duets. With a resonant whiskey-tinged voice and deft sight gags, she turns the "Ballad of the Prisoner of Sex" into a hilarious solo turn of sardonic wit and delightful ribaldry.

Vroman is outstanding as Lucy Brown — Polly's rival and daughter of Lanyer's nicely tortured Sheriff Tiger Brown — both in a stunning vocal face-off "Jealousy Duet" with Rose's Polly and in her superb, diabolically melodramatic (and rarely performed) "Lucy's Aria." Rose is sweetly touching and brightly lusty in her love duets with Casnoff and in her delightful "Barbara Song" about lost innocence.

Above all, Neuwirth's Jenny and Casnoff's Macheath set the tone — she with her sharp, combative watchfulness; he with the murderous impulse not quite concealed beneath his song-and-dance grace. Neuwirth is as outstanding in her cynical "Solomon Song" as in the "Moritat" and "Pirate Jenny." Casnoff, too, sings beautifully, rendering Macheath's great paeans to corruption and soulful gallows hymns with dynamic intensity. And their tango duet ("Pimp's Ballad") is stunning in its erotic electricity and vicious execution.

It's altogether a brilliant production, Brecht and Weill's "opera for beggars" delivered with a wondrously ragtag "splendor only a beggar could imagine" (though not, as the prologue goes on to state, "at a price even a beggar can afford"). As Neuwirth sings its acute final verses — about a society divided between those who walk in light and "those in darkness lost to sight" — it's hard to leave the Geary without a deeper awareness of the social injustices so evident in the surrounding streets.

The Threepenny Opera

PLAYWRIGHT Bertolt Brecht
COMPOSER Kurt Weill
DIRECTOR Carey Perloff
CAST Philip Casnoff, Bebe Neuwirth, Anika Noni Rose, Lisa Vroman, Nancy Dussault, Steven Anthony Jones
THEATER ACT, Geary Theater, through Oct. 3
([redacted])

The new translation, I should add, is very different from the Mark Blitztein we were all used to.

Happy Ending!
Marjorie Perloff

↑ Index

137. David Baratier
Pound typo
Fri 10 Sep 1999

---

the infamous typo which Pound kept is Rock Drill

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

138. Philip Nikolayev
THE SEEDED FRIEND OF HUMANKIND IS CASHED
Fri 10 Sep 1999

THE SEEDED FRIEND OF HUMANKIND IS CASHED

The seeded friend of humankind is cashed,
but I have found a place where more is stashed, a lab where every leaf is dried to that word-perfect flam and readiness to act on every syllable. The moot trapeze of sense remotely utters thank you, please and marches down directly to the page to perpetrate its sensuous brigandage.
Semantic hemlocks melt to tilted tiles and titles brim with paratactic styles like paratroopers of the golden ring, who come to spell a wish on everything with serious roach music in the bong,
God-naughty and immensely drawn to song.

↑ Index

139. Philip Nikolayev

A SONNET OF KNOWLEDGE

Fri 10 Sep 1999

A SONNET OF KNOWLEDGE

http://www.utm.edu/research/iep/http://pages.prodigy.net/mawired/http://www.sca.org/heraldry/paul/a.html
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/poetics/http://www.csse.monash.edu.au/community/postmodern.html
http://www.internetindia.com/theeye/index.htm
http://www.ntu.edu.sg/home/mdamodaran/sabooks.html
http://www.sulekha.com/cgi-bin/columninfo.cgi?handle=jigar http://www.hubcom.com/tantric/http://detritus.net/manifesto.html
http://dcn.davis.ca.us/~btcarrol/skeptic/bibcode.html http://www.geocities.com/Colosseum/Loge/1272/index.html
http://www.theonion.com/onion3531/sad_lonely_people.html
http://www.ai.mit.edu/publications/pubsDB/pubsDB/

↑ Index

140. Philip Nikolayev

SCHOOL

Fri 10 Sep 1999

SCHOOL

Rolling awkwardly with the backward ebb of time, come back to school and the tedium of a Russian literature class, with emphasis on the proletarian novel, and then the delight of higher math. We were doing hyperbolic functions and my head was chock-full of analysis and love and ripe puberty, whose distinction from poetry remained fuzzy but was ultimately beginning (barely) to dawn. The big wise Lenin, the most altruistic of men, in the hallway, kindness and intelligence in his eye – we would hang him upside down when no one looked, and Sashka Denisov laughed his pants off – the joke felt even more forbidden than early teen imaginings of sex. During a recess we went to pound the soda machines across the street at the Agricultural Institute for free soda, and a funny middle-aged janitor lady popped out the basement, mop in hand, and cried, "No soda. Get the fuck out, boy! You bang that fountain once more and I call the cops." We teased her and she yelled go away and threatened to show us her sex if we didn't. We dared her to, and she said she wouldn't since we were fags. And in 1978 I fought Lyonia Cherniak on the dark third floor of our school No 37, near the biology classroom. We were discovered by the principal. In my rage I told her to get the bloody lost, and then had to call my parental units and ask them to present themselves at school. So I called Dad at work and told him the story and that he had to come see the principal. He did not believe me, did not believe it was me on the phone. He said, "You're some fool trying to play a stupid trick on me and Philip." I had to switch to English to convince him. I said: "It's me, Dad, I swear on my life! Besides, if it wasn't me, where'd I get this number at the Foreign Languages Department?" He said, "OK, I'll be there." So here he comes in fifteen minutes and I lead him to the principal, and she goes on an on about what a problem boy I am. Dad listens and nods and listens very attentively and then brings out, "Don't worry, ma'am. I'll whip him a-good when we get home," straight face and all, my super Dad. Even I was so bewildered I nearly shat my pants. And she, the principal, and here I must admit she was a pretty nice lady, and pedagogical, so she says, "Oh, I'm not sure such harsh disciplinary measures are at all necessary." And Dad: "Don't you please worry, ma'am. I know what I'm doing. Sometimes these good-for-nothings ortabee taught a lesson/two the old way. Otherwise they just won't understand watch're you tryin' to say. I mean, these new ones, they are different, right? Not like you and I and folks of our generation, born before or during the Great Patriotic War, were when we were their age. Mild pedagogics just won't cut the rope." And as we leave she stands there forever, a pillar of salt, fundamentally pale, poor Valentina Nikolaevna, and Dad abducts me from the remaining classes, and we go and buy a load of "Eskimo" ice-cream and then hit some East-Indian movie (like a Spaghetti Western, only better) about guns, friendship and revenge. Finally we go home, chattering like two English magpies to the shock and amazement of the bus driver, who possibly suspects we are spies. Mom, she will never figure out any of this.

↑ Index

141. Michael Magee

Re: Kenning - shameless plug

Sat 11 Sep 1999

Howdy folks, thought I'd shamelessly plug the essay of mine which appears in the "poetics" section of the new KENNING. It's called "Democratic Symbolic Action: Sketches Toward a Guide to Practice," and is a laying-out of some techniques employed in the writings of Emerson, Ellison and O'Hara. The theoretical framework (what there is of one!) draws on various strands of American pragmatism: William James, John Dewey, Kenneth Burke, Clifford Geertz, Cornel West. Anyway, there it is. You can see from Patrick's list of contributors that KENNING's worth picking up regardless of my small contribution. -m.

ording to Patrick F. Durgin:
>
> As summer draws to a close and the air gradually cools, I think it's high > time I send off the summer '99 issue of Kenning. If you are bound to > receive a copy in the coming week, you are either a contributor or a > subscriber (or some other sort of co-conspirator). You know if you fit > these criteria and you know if you don't. For the latter, let me invite > you to snap up a copy before they're gone (see ordering information at the > end of this message). And if you'd rather not receive publication > announcements from Kenning in the future, reply to the e-mail address at > the end of this message and say so: you will be taken off the mailing list.
>
> Kenning Vol. 2, No. 2 Issue #5 Summer 1999
> C O N T E N T S
> Poetry:
> Lyn Hejinian
> Peter Neufeld
> Rachel Blau DuPlessis
> John M. Bennett
> Peter O'Leary
> E. Tracy Grinnell
> Brian Kim Stefans
> Brent Cunningham
> Jon Cone
> Michael Basinski
> Gene Tanta
> Michael Gottlieb
> Kristin Prevallet

> Clark Coolidge
> Poetics:
> Michael Magee
> Reviews:
> Sarah Mangold's Blood Substitutes by Daniel J. Beachy-Quick
> Snake Hiss compact disc by Patrick F. Durgin
> Editor's Note:
> "Agent and Agency"
> 89 pp. / $5.00
>
> Purchase a sample copy by sending a check or M.O. for $5.00 payable to the > editor, Patrick F. Durgin, to 418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, Iowa, 52245.
> Subscribe to receive 2 issues ($9.50) or 4 issues ($19.00) by sending the > appropriate amount to the same. Subscribers receive their issues in > loose-leaf as well as a hand-printed portfolio suitable to hold several > (about 5) numbers of the newsletter. For more information on most every > aspect of the newsletter, see the Kenning website
>
> http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
>
> The autumn/winter '00 issue of Kenning is entitled "Cunning: a descriptive > checklist of tentative politics" and is collaboratively guest-edited by > myself, Renee Gladman, Jen Hofer, and Rod Smith. See the website for more > information.
>
> Thanks and best wishes for the coming season: Patrick F. Durgin
>
>
> k e n n i n g
> a newsletter of contemporary poetry
> http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
> 418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA
>

↑ Index

142. Susan M. Schultz
call for work for Tinfish
Sat 11 Sep 1999

Tinfish's covers are usually made separately from the issue's innards. But this time the designer Gaye Chan tells me that the next issue's cover will be made of historical cereal boxes (she found hundreds in a dumpster somewhere).

SO: those of you from the Pacific region (especially), please send poems about boxes, in boxes, of boxes, boxly poems. Address: 47-391 Hui Iwa Street #3, Kaneohe, HI 96744 USA.

AND: please buy the new issue ($5 per; $13 for three). I pay for everything myself (except for postage) and so your support is crucial to keep the enterprise going. Same address. Will give you a sense of what I look for, too.

thanks much,

Susan Schultz

↑ Index

143. Billy Little
Re: Angela Bowering
Sun 12 Sep 1999

> X-From_: [redacted] Sat Sep 11 17:35:54 1999
> X-Sender: [redacted]
> Date: Sat, 11 Sep 1999 17:29:54
> To: [redacted]
> From: Jamie Reid <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re:Angela Bowering
> Mime-Version: 1.0
>
> Dear friends
>
> I spoke with George Bowering at his home earlier this afternoon, and he agreed that the sad news of the death of his dear wife and our dear friend, Angela, should be made available to as many of her friends as possible.
>
> Below is the obituary which appeared in the Vancouver Sun, supplied to me through e-mail by William Thornton-Trump, one of George's oldest friends.
>
> George and Thea were together at their family home and both of them were well, though obviously suffering from their loss. George said that they were surrounded by Angela's loyal friends, who have been taking care of everything.
>
> Carol Matthews told me that a memorial ceremony is planned on October 3rd in Vancouver. Further information will be posted as it becomes available.
>
> I also spoke to George about preparing a memorial publication in Angela's honour, containing some of Angela's own writings alongside memoirs/poems etc. from her friends. Anyone who wishes to make contributions, please send them to me via e-mail or to the postal address below.
>
> From The Vancouver Sun. September 11, 1999.

> BOWERING - Angela (nee Luoma)
> May 5, 1940 - September 8, 1999.
> Our lovely wife, mother, teacher, gardener extraordinaire. She came out of the silence of a Quadra Island forest and brought us enough words for many lifetimes. Her students at Kwantlen College and Simon Fraser University learned passionate love of difficult books. Her readers admired her deep heart and gorgeous wit. Her fiercely loyal friends will ensure her presence in this world. She loved high art and she cared intensely for the earth. She created a garden that attracted journalists and passersby, and she began her book about the great Sheila Watson with Watson's spoken care:
> "What I was concerned with was figures in a ground, from which they could not be separated."
> Angela is survived by her daughter Thea, her husband George, sisters Joan Wright and Camille Luoma and many, many loving friends.
> A memorial celebration will be held in the near future.
> Anyone wishing to offer a gesture of love and respect should make a donation to the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada. To contact the family for further information, contact Walkey & Company Funeral Directors at (604) [redacted].
>
> Jamie Reid
> 382 East 4th Street
> North Vancouver, BC
> V7L 1J2
> tel: [redacted]

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

144. Loss Pequeño Glazier

Fwd: Text Manipulation Tools archive

Sun 12 Sep 1999

A recommendation for this text processing web site. (Also available via the EPC.)

> Some folks here might be interested in our new archive of text-processor (as in Cuisinart, not WordStar) tools now > online:

>
> http://www.burningpress.org/toolbox/index.html
>
> Various forms of text manglement and dissembly, including > a couple of programs based on Jackson Mac Low's techniques...
>
> would be happy to hear of additions, corrections, or comment... > or to see the results of any experiments y'all might perform > using these or other tools...

↑ Index

145. Alan Sondheim

Julu and I

Sun 12 Sep 1999

=

Julu And I

MMyy aarrmm ffoollllloowweedd mmyy aarrmm aass II lliiffftteedd tthhee kkeetttttllee ffrroomm tthhee ssttoovvee,, ffoollllloowwiinngg tthhee kkeetttttllee oonn tthhee ssttoovvee;; mmyy hheeaadd mmoovveedd bbaacckk ffrroomm mmyy hheeaadd mmoovveedd bbaacckk ffrroomm mmyy hheeaadd aass II ppllaacceedd tthhee kkeetttttllee ffoollllloowwiinngg tthhee kkeetttttllee wwiitthh mmyy hhaannddss oonn tthhee hhaannddss oonn tthhee ccuurrvveedd hhaannddllee aattttaacchheedd ttoo tthhee ccuurrvveedd hhaannddllee oonn tthhee bbaacckk ooff tthhee bbaacckk;; ffllaammeess sshhoott uupp tthhrroouugghh ffllaammeess sshhoott uupp aatt tthhee kkeetttttllee ooff tthhee kkeetttttllee,, hheeaattiinngg iitt aanndd hheeaattiinngg iitt;; II wwiitthhddrreeww mmaayy hhaanndd aanndd mmyy hhaanndd aanndd mmyy hhaanndd aanndd mmyy hhaanndd ffrroomm tthhee hhaannddllee aanndd tthhee hhaannddllee,, ttuurrnniinngg aawwaayy,, mmyy aarrmm ffoollllloowwiinngg mmyy aarrmm ttuurrnniinngg aawwaayy ffrroomm tthhee ffllaammee tthhrroouugghh tthhee ffllaammee;; aaffftteerrwwaarrddss aaffftteerr-- wwaarrddss II wwoouulldd ppoouurr wwaatteerr ppoouurriinngg ffrroomm tthhee kkeetttttllee aanndd tthhee kkeetttttllee wwiitthh mmyy aarrmm ffoollllloowwiinngg mmyy aarrmm,, tthhee wwaatteerr ppoouurriinngg iinn wwaatteerr ppoouurriinngg iinn wwaatteerr ddoowwnn iinnttoo tthhee ccuupp nneexxtt ttoo tthhee ccuupp iinn tthhee ccuupp;; tthhee ccoofffffeeee aanndd ccoofffffeeee sstteeaammiinngg,, ffoollllloowwiinngg tthhee sstteeaammiinngg ffoollllloowwiinngg tthhee sstteeaammiinngg,, wwhhiillee dduurriinngg wwhhiicchh AAhhhh AAhhhh II eecchhooeedd,, rreeppeeaattiinngg mmyy mmoouutthh ffoollllloowwiinngg aanndd rreeppeeaattiinngg mmyy mmoouutthh,, aa ddeelliicciioouuss bbrreeww..

↑ Index

146. Jerrold Shiroma
New Small Press Publications
Sun 12 Sep 1999

This weeks Small Press Publications List is up & running at Duration Press. More than 20 titles are featured.

http://www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

147. Loss Pequeño Glazier
Fwd: Text Manipulation Tools archive
Sun 12 Sep 1999

A recommendation from the EPC on this text processing web page. (Also available via: the EPC's "Connects" area (http://epc.buffalo.edu/connects/) and the EPC "New" list (http://epc.buffalo.edu/display/new.html).

> Some folks here might be interested in our new archive of text-processor (as in Cuisinart, not WordStar) tools now online:
>
> http://www.burningpress.org/toolbox/index.html
>
> Various forms of text manglement and dissembly, including a couple of programs based on Jackson Mac Low's techniques...
>
> would be happy to hear of additions, corrections, or comment... or to see the results of any experiments y'all might perform using these or other tools...

↑ Index

148. Michael Neff
Electronic Literary Arts Newsletter (ELAN #2)
Sun 12 Sep 1999

****

ELECTRONIC LITERARY ARTS NEWSLETTER #2, September 99

Note: ELAN is a non-commercial newsletter sponsored by a collaboration of magazines, writers, editors, and publishers at Web Del Sol, <http://webdelsol.com/solhome.htm> and directed only to members of the literary arts community. **********

FEATURES AND HEADLINES THIS ISSUE:

- Letter From the Editor
- Federal Court Blocks MI Net Censorship Law; Lit. Types Exult
- Iranian Cleric Claims Rushdie Was Not to be Killed
- Cortland Review: The People Magazine of Poetry
- Arts Wire Features Trace Online Writing Community
- Small Fish Thriving/Big Fish Bloated:Small Presses, Big Presses
- All Feast No Famine: What's New at Web Del Sol
- PBQ to Feature Film; Plus, IndieWIRE on Blair Witchiness
- Yeats Summer School Opens in Sligo, Ireland
- Stephen Spender's Provencal Home Burned
- Writers Writing/Writers Talking: Susan Dodd from the North Carolina Coast
- Around Towns: Events, Announcements, Calls

Welcome to Issue Two of ELAN. We've been delighted by a slew of positive comment, a tremendous stream of new subscribers, and a little bit of news from our readers.

To repeat myself a bit (heat-stroked editrix that I am), please do send your responses and announcements. Is there a fantastic website we haven't mentioned once? A major literary prize awarded about which we've said nary a word? Is your book about to be published? Much as we aim for a breezy but informative perfection, oversight is probable, so keep me posted.

Liana Scalettar
Editor
[redacted]

CENSORSHIP LAW BLOCKED BY FEDS

According to Arts Wire <http://www.artswire.org>, a federal judge has blocked the enforcement of a Michigan law that would have criminalized the online display or dissemination of "'sexually explicit matter'" to minors. With his ruling, in which he called the Internet "'an international free flow of ideas and information,'" Judge Tarnow prevented enforcement of the law until later this year, when a full trial will be held. Since Web Del Sol is a plaintiff in this case, we're ecstatic about this first round.

CLERIC SAYS RUSHDIE WAS NOT TO BE KILLED

The Associated Press notes the August 25th publication of a statement by an Iranian cleric in which he claims that Rushdie was not condemned to death by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. The Tehran newspaper, Khordad, quoted Hojjat ol-Islam Seyyed Hoseyn Musavi-Tabrizi as saying that Khomeini's "exact intention was not the killing of" Rushdie, but rather publicity "to prevent a conspiracy against Islam." The AP speculates that Musavi-Tabrizi, along with other supporters of Iranian President Khatami's reforms, is trying to downplay the fatwa. <http://www.nytimes.com/library/books/082699ap-rushdie-cleric.html>

CORTLAND REVIEW: THE PEOPLE MAGAZINE OF POETRY

Sol's ex-pat Cyber Rambler <http://webdelsol.com/LITARTS/Cyber_Rambler> sheds precipitation on the Cortland Review parade--a once highly regarded webzine, now found wanting in some respects. Whether or not you speedbump on this one, you'll admit the criticisms are provocative and often painfully humorous simply because they ring so true. This one in particular will result in considerable inflammation: "The Cortland Review is all about getting the unleavened poem to rise,against all odds, without the poetic yeast. It does this through a painstaking celebration of poet as celebrity, and by the creation of a kind of I'm Okay You're Okay ambience. It is an approach oddly-or perhaps not so oddly-reminiscent of People magazine."

TRACE ONLINE WRITING COMMUNITY LOOMS LARGE AT ARTS WIRE

Also at Arts Wire for the week of August 2 is Sue Thomas's trAce <http://trace.ntu.ac.uk.> An online writing community, trAce members critique, read, write, and grouse. The site also features East Midlands Hypertext, a fesity Call for Opinions, and a virtual writer-in-residence. Current Resident Christy Sheffield weighs in with the just-launched My Millenium, an 'online anthology devoted to the subject of time and the digital revolution.'

SMALL FISH STILL KICKING/BIG FISH TURNS INTO A FAT CAT

In an August 2nd article, Publishers Weekly's John High discusses the anniveraries of three small (dare I say tiny but fabulous?) presses <http://www.publishersweekly.com>. Berkeley-based Kelsey Street Press, founded by Rena Rosenwasser and Patricia Dienstfrey, is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary. A publisher of award-winning poet Mei-mei Berssenbrugge, Kelsey Street this year sold its archives to UC Berkeley's Bancroft Library.Colorado-based Johnson Books turns twenty, and Cydney Chadwick's Avec Books turns seven.

On the anniversary front as well, Graywolf Press will celebrate its 25th on September 30th. To be hosted by Robert Pinsky, the event will honor Jane Kenyon and William Stafford. According to Poets and Writers <http://www.pw.org>, tickets for the fete are available at the door of Ted Mann Concert Hall at the University of Minnesota or through the university's ticket office at which can be reached at [redacted].

PW reports also on the founding of Toby Press, launching this fall. The new house, established in the UK by Matthew Miller, will publish hardcover, new fiction exclusively and will sell directly to customers through its catalogue, its web site, and direct mail. Because of its unusual approach, the press is pouring money into fall advertising in the New Yorker, Granta, and the New York Times Book Review. Titles slated for fall publication are: Failing Paris, by Samantha Dunn, Absence, by Raymond Tallis, The Masterpiece, by Anna Enquist, Cardiofitness, by Allessandra Montrucchio, After the Campfires by Per Jorner, and The Forwarding Agent, by Austen Kark.

Meanwhile, HarperCollins has completed its acquisition of Morrow and Avon from Hearst. (See ELAN #1 for more.) And, in efforts to save money and maintain more contron over marketing, Harper is forming an in-house advertising agency.

ALL FEAST NO FAMINE: NEW AT WEB DEL SOL
<http://www.webdelsol.com>

WDS urges to satisfy all moods, open all windows. So prod, observe, react. It lives! Editor's Picks Issue 3 <"http://webdelsol.com/Editor"> announces a new era for the publishing of original work at Web Del Sol. They've outdone themselves this time. Thanks to the talented and nonesuch editorial staff (Mike Neff, Joan Houilihan, Vince Montague, Rachel Callaghan, Paul Beckman, David Berg-Seiter, Shoshanna Wingate, and Tony Lombardy) the collection is not only enormous, but unique and diverse. Who are we talking about? Dana Levin, Leslie Scalapino, Lucie Brock-Broido, Charles Bernstein, Lisa Jarnot, Mark Jarman, Deborah Olin Unferth, Heather McHugh, Flaminia Ocampo, RoseMarie London, Victoria Redel, Ichi Batacan, Rhina Espaillat, Cecelia Hagen, Wendy Mnookin, Michael Bugeja, Holly Iglesias, and many more. Can these guys name drop or what?

Most exciting, this past month Web Del Sol was selected and given a stellar rating by a major Internet review. Access Magazine--a Sunday news supplement which goes to millions of readers--has named WDS one of their top 100 web sites. The top three literary 4 stars were WDS, Salon, and Slate. In comparison, Atlantic Unbound received 3 stars and MoJo Wire only 2. Not bad for an organization which receives no grants, sells no advertising, and is composed solely of volunteers.<http://www.accessmagazine.com/reviews/rev_e-zines.html>

Five Points has arrived in style, with poetry by Eamon Grennon, Charlie Smith, and A.E. Stallings, and fiction by Max Garland. This first venture into the WDS waters highlights Volume 3, Number 3 of the journal.
<http://www.webdelsol.com/Five_Points>

A grateful Venice thanks TLR for this issue <http://webdelsol.com/tlr> with contributions by Albert Russo, John Drury, Joan Nilon, and others. Sample from

La Tempestra, On Not Dying in Venice, The Foot of St. Catherine, and Venetian Thresholds. Call the travel agent, balance your credit cards, and let TLR be your bubble train and gondola

The summer '99 issue of the New England Review features Tom Paine, John Poch, and Sue Kwock Kim. NER's archives also provide much good reading. <http://www.webdelsol.com/New_England_Review>

The Audio Vault at Conjunctions <http://www.conjunctions.com> is now featuring Lydia Davis, Mary Caponegro, and Rikki Ducornet reading from their work. And the upcoming issue, Crossing Over, looks stunning in preview. Look for excerpts from new novels by Lois-Ann Yamanaka, Paul West, Carole Maso, and others; poetry by Peter Sacks, Reginald Shepherd, and Arthur Sze; and newly translated work by Thomas Bernhard.

As promised, Quarterly West is back--red, revamped, and (safe to say) better than ever. Because the journal's home institution, the University of Utah, has switched to a semester schedule, QW will now publish in October and April. The Spring-Summer '99 Issue features short-shorts by Karen Wolf, Nick Foster, and Josh Russell; poetry by Jeanne Marie Beaumont, Elizabeth Seydel Morgan, and Marcus Cafagna; and fiction by Gordon Lish, Sally Bellerose, and Franklin Fisher. Coming up in QW: winners of the mag's biennial novella contest. Swing by Quarterly West at <http://www.webdelsol.com/Quarterly_West>.

Last but so not least, Painted Bride Quarterly <http://www.webdelsol.com/pbq> needs essays on contemporary cinema, screen play excerpts, and fiction and poetry influenced by film for their second annual film issue, which will be published in conjunction with the Philadelphia Festival of World Cinema. You'll find poetry by Kenneth Bernard and Rocky Wilson; fiction by Ariana-Sophia M. Kartsonis, and a special film section in the current issue. NB: when I was a disaffected youth in Philly, I thought that the Painted Bride (large cavernous arts space, non-virtual) was the coolest place in the world, and, despite my sullen broodings, turns out I was not far off. Please go visit them when you can. Thank you.

PAINTED BRIDE QUARTERLY TO FEATURE FILM; INDIEWIRE HELPS SCARE YOU SILLY

Ah. Having read this far, you know about PBQ already. Should you visit the City of Brotherly Love, do also visit Cacia's in South Philly for rolls, rolls, and more rolls. You'll be happy. I hope they're still there--they must be.

Indiewire, a comprehensive source for independent film news at <http://www.indiewire.com>, discusses the phenomenal success of the mock doc 'Blair Witch Project." Also, learn about the appointment of Stephen Gallagher as the new publisher of Filmmaker magazine.

According to Arts Wire, the Women's Film Preservation Fund of New York Women in Film and television seeks proposals for the 'funding of preservation or restoration of American films in which women had significant creative positions. Grants of up to $10,000 are available to individuals and non-profits; the application deadline is September 15, 1999. Contact NYWIFT at [redacted].

YEATS SUMMER SCHOOL OPENS IN SLIGO

Poetry Daily links to the Irish Times's coverage of the opening of the Yeats Summer School, now in its thirty-ninth year. Nobel laureate and long-time attendee Seamus Heaney gave an opening lecture, and Declan Kiberd and Helen Vendler also were slated to speak. The school draws participants from all over the world to Sligo.

STEPHEN SPENDER'S PROVENCAL HOME DESTROYED

Visit Poetry Daily as well for its link to The Times's coverage of the destruction of Spender's home near Avignon. The Times article quotes Spender's widow as having lost the late poet's 2,000-book library. His beloved garden and mementoes of Auden and Isherwood were apparently lost as well.

WRITERS WRITING/WRITERS TALKING: SUSAN DODD FROM THE NORTH CAROLINA COAST

Novelist and short-story writer Susan Dodd talks with PublishersWeekly from her secluded home on a North Carolina island. Not only does she live alone in a simple house on the shore, she doesn't even have a phone! We love the idea but would surely die of loneliness. Dodd, evidently made of stronger stuff, has not. The author, most recently, of The Mourner's Bench, she discusses the importance of voice, luck, and risk to writers.

AROUND TOWNS: CALLS, EVENTS, ANNOUNCEMENTS

(a word of caution: I got, I cut, I pasted. Take your questions and problems, should they arise, to the responsible parties. Pas to moi.)

$1000 ANAMNESIS POETRY CHAPBOOK AWARD

Anamnesis Press is sponsoring its 5th annual poetry chapbook award competition. They're looking for poetry with intellectual and emotional depth that avoids cliches and has an ear for sound and music, although formal structure is not necessary. Previously published material is OK, as long as the author owns the rights to the work and provides acknowledgments. The winner will receive $1000, an award certificate suitable for framing, and 20 copies of the winning chapbook. We encourage poets to submit 20-30 pages of their best poems. Manuscripts must be typed or laser-printed -single-spaced -- with no more than one poem per page, and must include a table of contents (showing page numbers) and two title pages. Include yourname and address on only one of the title pages. NO MANUSCRIPTS WILL BE RETURNED. Manuscripts must be postmarked by March 15, 2000. The winner will be announced in June. Reading fee: US$15 per manuscript. Please make check or money order payable to Anamnesis Press in US dollars drawn on a US bank. Note: all contestants will receive a copy of the winning chapbook.

Send manuscripts with entry fee and SASE (for prize notification) to:

Anamnesis Press
Poetry Chapbook Award Competition
P. O. Box 51115
Palo Alto, CA 94303

NO E-MAIL SUBMISSIONS, PLEASE!

For information about past winners, Anamnesis Press or its publications, please visit their web site at http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/anamnesis/.

IN CHICAGO, CHECK OUT THESE EVENTS AT THE GUILD COMPLEX:

POETS ACROSS THE GENERATIONS IV featuring Piri Thomas and Luis Rodríguez

WHEN: Wednesday, September 8, 1999 at 7:30PM
ADMISSION: $7, $5 Students & Seniors, Host Mario

Guild Complex LIVE at the Nelson Algren Fountain
Featuring Eduardo Arocho, Denise LaGrassa, Mia Lahoz, Sherrille Lamb, Gregory Cullen Wagner, and Avery R. Young, Music by Stone

WHEN: Saturday, September 11, 1999 from 2pm to 5pm
ADMISSION: Free, Host Michael C. Watson

==========

SUBSCRIBE TO THE ELAN AT <http://webdelsol.com/solhome.htm>

Copyright Michael Neff, 1999

↑ Index

149. Dan Machlin

Mayer/Machlin Reading

Sun 12 Sep 1999

Poetry Reading:

BERNADETTE MAYER
&
DAN MACHLIN

@
THE DACTYL FOUNDATION
FOR THE ARTS AND HUMANITIES

Thursday, September 16th, 7:30 PM
64 Grand Street
New York City
212/[redacted]

↑ Index

150. Kimmelman, Burt
Cid Corman (more)
Sun 12 Sep 1999

I have just rec'd a letter from Cid Corman and his situation does indeed sound desperate - no money coming in except for charity or loans.

I am taking the liberty of reproducing a small part of the the letter:

"We live modestly and I prefer it so, but homelessness wont [sic] do the trick and there is that possibility - unless some real help occurs.

I don't like playing the beggar. I'm not good at it. But there is no choice."

Best way to get him money (it costs him $35.00 to cash a check) is to have your bank wire it to his bank:

Cid Corman (account name)
Account Number 095-0010328
Kyoto Shinyo Kinko Bank
Omuro Branch Omuro
Ukyo-ku Kyoto [redacted]
Japan
(bank tel: 075/[redacted]).

Burt Kimmelman

↑ Index

151. Thurmon Manson
JIM HUNTER
Sun 12 Sep 1999

THESE MEMORIES IN MEMORIAM JIM HUNTER:

BILLY BEAN, send him deep, Santa Ana Junior College, but Hunter's a farmer

PINE TAR DOESN'T HELP

CAREW KNEW

PHIL NIEKRO ENEMY OF S.H.O.W.

(SIDEARM HOBOS OF THE WORLD)

PEANUTS POPCORN DOS EQUIS FELLATIO

I DON'T CARE IF I EVER GET BACK

BASES LOADED, BATTER NUMBER 9 AT THE PLATE: THROW:

slider
fastball curve slider

CSONKA IS BUNTING

CATFISH CHANGES IT UP AND GARVEY WHIFFS BECAUSE THE BATBOY GAVE HIM A FUNGO INSTEAD OF HIS LOUISVILLE SLOGGER!

35 or 36, his froarms

BUT CATFISH IS A CHRISTIAN AND JESUS GIVES HIM BRAIN DISEASE BECAUSE HE CLOTHES FROM LASORDA'S LOCKER

GOODBYE CATFISH SHUNTER!

THANKS TO YOU THE WORKING CLASS CANNOT GO THE BALLPARK ANYMORE WITH THE WHOLE FAMILY!!

Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

152. Leonard Brink

Laynie Browne/Norma Cole Reading in S.F.

Mon 13 Sep 1999

Laynie Browne

& Norma Cole

will read poetry:

Monday, September 27th
7:00 pm.
@
Caffé Sapore
790 Lombard Street
(At Taylor, near Columbus)
San Francisco

↑ Index

153. Arielle C. Greenberg
Buffalo area literary stuff?
Mon 13 Sep 1999

This is for the actual Buffalo-area contingent on the list...I'm planning to attend the Susan Howe reading there on Friday night, and having never been to Buffalo before, wanted advice on what to do/where to go. I know I want to go to the Poetry Collection in the library, but was wondering how easy it is to browse through, and how much time I should plan on that. Then, what are the good bookstores, and where should I eat supper? I'm driving in from Syracuse, which has no good bookstores and almost no good places to eat supper, so I'm hoping for a change of scene...thanks!

If you can't post this to the whole list, could the list moderator please just answer?

Arielle

↑ Index

154. Graham Foust
Lagniappe #3
Mon 13 Sep 1999

Benjamin "Down East" Friedlander and Graham "Midwest" Foust are pleased as all get-out to announce their summer issue (#3 for those keeping score at home):

Reviews of: Celona, Burkard, Spahr, Bernstein, Prevallet, Bloom, Dellamora/Fischlin, Clay/Phillips, and Huang by Joel, Graham, Ben, Brian, Dirk, Winnie, Benesis, Linda, and Jonathan.

Essays on recent Australian poetry and Jack Spicer by Logan Esdale and Wyman Jennings (respectively and respectfully).

A Portable Talk Special Supplement featuring portable talks by Leslie Bumstead and Jean Donnelly.

Be there. Aloha.

Lagniappe
http://www.acsu.buffalo.edu/~foust/lagniappe.html

↑ Index

155. Stephen Vincent
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Mon 13 Sep 1999

Another Country by James Baldwin

↑ Index

156. Poetics List Administration
Harry Matthews, Histoire...
Mon 13 Sep 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. thanks.

Histoire

Tina and Seth met in the midst of an overcrowded militarism. "Like a drink:" he asked her? "They make great Alexanders over at the Marxism-Leninism." She agreed. They shared cocktails. They behaved cautiously, as in a period of pre-fascism. Afterwards he suggested dinner at a restaurant renowned for its Maoism. "O,K.," she said, but first she had to phone a friend about her ailing Afghan, whose name was Racism. Then she followed Seth across town past twilit alleys of sexism.

The waiter brought menus and announced the day's specials. He treated them with condescending sexism. So they had another drink. Tina started her meal with a dish of militarism, While Seth, who was hungrier, had a half portion of stuffed baked racism. Their main dishes were roast duck for Seth, and for Tina broiled Marxism-Leninism. Tina had a pecan pie a la for dessert, Seth a compote of stewed Maoism. They lingered. Seth proposed a liqueur. They rejected sambuca and agreed on fascism.

During the meal, Seth took the initiative. He inquired into Tina's fascism,
About which she was rserved, not out of reticence but because Seth's sexism
Had aroused in her a desire she felt she should hide -- as though her Maoism Would willy-nilly betray her feelings for him. She was right. Even her deliberate militarism

Couldn't keep Seth from realizing that his attraction was reciprocated.
His own Marxism-Leninism
Became manifest, in a compulsive way that piled the Ossa of confusion
on the Peleion of racism.

Next, what? Food finished, drinks drunk, bills paid -- what racism Might not swamp their yearning in an even greater confusion of fascism? But women are wiser than words. Tina rested her hand on his thigh and, a-twinkle with Marxism-Leninism, Asked him, "My place?" Clarity at once abounded under the flood-lights of sexism, They rose from the table, strode out, and he with the impetuousness of young militarism Hailed a cab to transport them to her lair, heaven-haven of Maoism.

In the taxi he soon kissed her. She let him unbutton her Maoism And stroke her resilient skin, which was quivering with shudders of racism. When beneath her jeans he sensed the superior Lycra of her militarism, His longing almost strangled him. Her little tongue was as potent as fascism In its elusive certainty. He felt like then and there tearing off her sexism, But he reminded himself: "Pleasure lies in patience, not in the greedy violence of Marxism-Leninism."

Once home, she took over. She created a hungering aura of Marxism-
Leninism
As she slowly undressed him where he sat on her overstuffed art-deco Maoism.
Making him keep still, so that she could indulge in caresses, in sexism,
In the pursuit of knowing him. He growned under the exactness of her racism
--Fingertip sliding up his nape, nails incising his soles, teeth nibbling his
fascism.
At last she guided him to bed, and they lay down on a patchwork of Old American militarism.

Biting his lips, he plunged his militarism into the popular context of her Marxism-Leninism, Easing one thumb into her fascism, with his free hand coddling the tip of her Maoism, Until, gasping with appreciative racism, both together sink into the revealed glory of sexism.

↑ Index

157. Maria Damon
Re: hypertext suggestions
Mon 13 Sep 1999

---

miekal and alan sondheim i think wd be best to contact. as for urls, may i suggest our (my and miekal's) "literature nation" at http://net22.com/qazingulaza/joglars/litnat/index.html

At 8:18 PM -0700 9/9/99, Dodie Bellamy wrote:
>Hi, I have an independent study student who is going to do a >hypertext horror piece. I have no problem helping her with the >horror end of the project, but also want to suggest some good >hypertext pieces and/or theories. I'm sending her the urls of a >couple things that have caught my eye, but does anyone have any >suggestions of some cut-above hypertext links? Or even >books/articles on hypertext?
>
>Thanks.
>
>Dodie

↑ Index

158. Poetics List Administration
Harry Matthews, Historie...
Mon 13 Sep 1999

---

apologies for omitting the "From" line & time sent. here we go again.

From: [redacted]
9/11/99, 9:31 PM +0000

Histoire

Tina and Seth met in the midst of an overcrowded militarism. "Like a drink:" he asked her? "They make great Alexanders over at the Marxism-Leninism." She agreed. They shared cocktails. They behaved cautiously, as in a period of pre-fascism. Afterwards he suggested dinner at a restaurant renowned for its Maoism. "O,K.," she said, but first she had to phone a friend about her ailing Afghan, whose name was Racism. Then she followed Seth across town past twilit alleys of sexism.

The waiter brought menus and announced the day's specials. He treated them with condescending sexism. So they had another drink. Tina started her meal with a dish of militarism, While Seth, who was hungrier, had a half portion of stuffed baked racism. Their main dishes were roast duck for Seth, and for Tina broiled Marxism-Leninism. Tina had a pecan pie a la for dessert, Seth a compote of stewed Maoism. They lingered. Seth proposed a liqueur. They rejected sambuca and agreed on fascism.

During the meal, Seth took the initiative. He inquired into Tina's
  fascism,
About which she was rserved, not out of reticence but because Seth's sexism
Had aroused in her a desire she felt she should hide -- as though her Maoism
Would willy-nilly betray her feelings for him. She was right. Even her deliberate militarism
Couldn't keep Seth from realizing that his attraction was reciprocated.
  His own Marxism-Leninism
Became manifest, in a compulsive way that piled the Ossa of confusion
  on the Peleion of racism.

Next, what? Food finished, drinks drunk, bills paid -- what racism Might not swamp their yearning in an even greater confusion of fascism? But women are wiser than words. Tina rested her hand on his thigh and, a-twinkle with Marxism-Leninism, Asked him, "My place?" Clarity at once abounded under the flood-lights of sexism, They rose from the table, strode out, and he with the impetuousness of young militarism Hailed a cab to transport them to her lair, heaven-haven of Maoism.

In the taxi he soon kissed her. She let him unbutton her Maoism And stroke her resilient skin, which was quivering with shudders of racism. When beneath her jeans he sensed the superior Lycra of her militarism, His longing almost strangled him. Her little tongue was as potent as fascism In its elusive certainty. He felt like then and there tearing off her sexism, But he reminded himself: "Pleasure lies in patience, not in the greedy violence of Marxism-Leninism."

Once home, she took over. She created a hungering aura of Marxism-
  Leninism
As she slowly undressed him where he sat on her overstuffed art-deco Maoism.
Making him keep still, so that she could indulge in caresses, in sexism,
In the pursuit of knowing him. He growned under the exactness of her racism
--Fingertip sliding up his nape, nails incising his soles, teeth nibbling his fascism.

At last she guided him to bed, and they lay down on a patchwork of Old American militarism.

Biting his lips, he plunged his militarism into the popular context of her Marxism-Leninism, Easing one thumb into her fascism, with his free hand coddling the tip of her Maoism, Until, gasping with appreciative racism, both together sink into the revealed glory of sexism.

↑ Index

159. Taylor Brady
Re: hypertext suggestions
Mon 13 Sep 1999

Dodie,

You might want to take a look at Charles Bernstein's syllabus for his Spring '98 prose seminar. The list of texts and links for weeks 6 and 7 are a good place to start, though many have some (possibly interesting, but to my mind, fairly serious) problems - i.e., the way Michael Joyce's writing might be marshalled into the service of the "new public university"'s corporate-auxiliary "public-private partnership model." Or Bolter's over-enthusiastic "hypertext-as-Paolo-Freire-in-a-box" pedagogical riffing...

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Dodie Bellamy
Sent: Thursday, September 09, 1999 8:18 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: hypertext suggestions

Hi, I have an independent study student who is going to do a hypertext horror piece. I have no problem helping her with the horror end of the project, but also want to suggest some good hypertext pieces and/or theories. I'm sending her the urls of a couple things that have caught my eye, but does anyone have any suggestions of some cut-above hypertext links? Or even books/articles on hypertext?

Thanks.

Dodie

↑ Index

160. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Mon 13 Sep 1999

A while back I asked for suggestions for a satirical fiction course and received a lot of good suggestions, so here are a few: Catch 22, Cat's Cradle and Slaughterhouse 5, Naked Lunch and other Burroughs, early Ishmael Reed, Crying of Lot 49 and other early Pynchon, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Portnoy's Complaint and other early Roth, late Dawn Powell. I'm sure there's much more, including Gilbert Sorrentino, Jack Kerouac, John Barth, Updike.

Hilton Obenzinger

On Thu, 9 Sep 1999, Maria Damon wrote:

> At 4:41 PM -0800 9/8/99, Mark Salerno wrote:
> Colleagues:
>
> I'd appreciate hearing from anyone with suggestions for a course on the Novels of the Sixties. Of particular interest are novels that reflect, in form and/or content, the counter culture. The limit for this theme (arbitrary though it may be) is that the publication date of the book must fall between 1960 and 1970.
>
> Reply by backchannel.
>
> Thank you.
>
> Mark Salerno
>
> i'd be curious to hear folks's suggestions so if you don't mind frontchannel, mine is Leonard Cohen's Beautiful Losers.

↑ Index

161. Michael Neff
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Mon 13 Sep 1999

Pete,

Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of accusation. I need to be clear.

Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me? I don't see it from what you are saying.

Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.

And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?

I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

Mike

pete spence wrote:

> please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
> to:[redacted]
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> thanks pete spence
>
> speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just
> as good
> and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in
> the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American
> Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and
> the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous
> declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the
> chaotic
> and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential
> actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the > Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone

> else
> takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
>
> http://www.freetimor.com/
>
> http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
>
> http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
>
> http://www.etan.org/
>
> regards,
> Patrick Herron
>
> so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the > indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a better
> usage of your time; [redacted]
>
> thanks pete spence
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

162. Philip Nikolayev

Re: call for work for Tinfish

Mon 13 Sep 1999

At 03:13 PM 9/11/99 -1000, you wrote: >_Tinfish_'s covers are usually made separately from the issue's >innards. But this time the designer Gaye Chan tells me that the next >issue's cover will be made of historical cereal boxes (she found >hundreds in a dumpster somewhere).
>
>SO: those of you from the Pacific region (especially), please send poems >about boxes, in boxes, of boxes, boxly poems. Address: 47-391 Hui Iwa >Street #3, Kaneohe, HI 96744 USA.
>
>AND: please buy the new issue ($5 per; $13 for three). I pay for >everything myself (except for postage) and so your support is crucial to >keep the enterprise going. Same address. Will give you a sense of what >I look for, too.
>
>thanks much,
>
>Susan Schultz

Hey, I'm not from the Pacific Region, but I have a poem about boxes!

Cheers,
Philip Nikolayev

BOXES

Boxes are hoaxes of the imagination, they fold out backwards and proceed to foreclose themselves from the other side
so as to afford a view,
which may or may not be outside our purview.
Last night I stared into a box,
I was like a box within a box,
boxed in by a larger boxing.
To establish the level of nesting is never possible, but possible is nothing,
I can box my way out of a wet paper bag, but bags are not boxes.

I couldn’t bag my way into a dry paper box. The plastic box my daughter likes to play with at her nine years of age shines to a transparency
no critic has yet dared to problematize.
Clear rolls the red ball on the gray carpet.
I am like that too.
Thus in the box of our life trespassing magnolias
in morganatic obsession bow to me, they linger in this miracle lens, white and wide void of hope. The yellow big forsythia too has gone loony near the steps of the library.
Have you seen it
where for some reason I,
an atrabilious bastard,
cast these lines
across a sky-spotted landscape which causes tears to flow and cheers to follow and wonders where the seagulls go,
and where the swallow,
and where the mast,
all packed away into boxes of memory?
I open them and close them as I please,
as if they were divine.
As the logarithms in my heart click with boxes of expectation, so the bottleneck of proclivity simply turns to the shoebox at the entrance.
The flowers are still on the floor,
and then all these boxes of books,
boxes of knowledge in the basement. Why do we keep them? Because boxes are peace.
A blue fox in a black box is unknowable.

↑ Index

163. Kyle Conner
Highwire reading @ 3PM
Mon 13 Sep 1999

3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM * Coming at ya like locusts....

H_I_GH__W_IR_E reading series presents:

> Kristin Prevallet <<

&&&&&& >> Matt Hart <<

Highwire Gallery, 139 N. 2nd St, Phila.
Sat., September 18, 3PM
(note: NOT OUR NORMAL TIME. IF you show up at 8pm, you will be witness to a FRINGE festival avant garde musical performance put on by IMP, not a poetry reading. Tell yr friends!)

POETS:

Kristen Prevallet lives in Greenpoint, Brooklyn. She is writing an essay about woman authors writing during the Beat Generation.

Matt Hart is earning a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania.

↑ Index

164. shana
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Mon 13 Sep 1999

---

dammit billy i was gonna say trout fishing in america

but also slouching towards bethlehem -joan didion valley of the dolls-jacqueline suzann the kandy-kolored tangerine-flake streamline baby-tom wolfe a sport and a pastime-james salter the chosen-chaim potok
the painted bird-jerzy kosinski

sorry for the bourgeoisie, don't hold my 22 years against me!

shana
http://www.bway.net/~shana

↑ Index

165. jocelyn saidenberg
Harryman and Lu read at SPT
Mon 13 Sep 1999

--==========_-1274854249==_ma==========Content-Type: text/plain; charset="iso-8859-1"

 SMALL PRESS TRAFFIC READING

Carla Harryman
Pamela Lu
Friday, September 17, 7:30 p.m.

Carla Harryman is as famous for the books she hasn't yet published (such as her novel in progress, Gardener of Stars, or the collaboration with Lyn Hejinian, The Wide Road) as for the ones she has. Today we're here to celebrate the move of one long-awaited work from column A to column B, as O Books presents us with The Words, Harryman's unique blend of Carl Sandburg's Rootabaga Tales and Jean-Paul Sartre's The Words. Harryman is the author of Vice, Animal Instincts, There Never Was a Rose without a Thorn, and the play Memory Play. With its extended narrative games, its fateful Sadeian psychology, The Words fractures childhood and conventional notions of the child, revealing the fever dream of selfhood under the placid skin of youth, of poetry, of the amused. We've missed her in the Bay Area since she took off for the wilds of Grosse Pointe, and oh, how we're glad she's back.

Pamela Lu took Harryman's tentative, ambiguous 'we' and ran with it the full nine yards in Pamela: a Novel (Atelos), which some critics have acclaimed as the "last masterpiece of the 20th Century." When you're Pamela Lu, you have the reclamé of your peers, the admiration of your elders, the wisdom of one far beyond your years, and a prose style at once grave and gay, filtered and remarkably direct. You've already grown up in a "provincial region of Southern California," studied math at UC Berkeley, moved to the Mission. You co-edit Idiom, the "occasionally productive" online journal and chapbook press. Your attention has turned to a new blend of poetry, history, determination and weness, "The Accused." To cap it all off you have joined the board of Small Press Traffic, because, just because, you're Pamela Lu.

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org
--==========_-1274854249==_ma==========Content-Type: text/enriched; charset="iso-8859-1"

<fontfamily><param>Times_New_Roman</param><bigger><bigger>SMALL PRESS TRAFFIC READING

Carla Harryman

Pamela Lu

Friday, September 17, 7:30 p.m.

Carla Harryman is as famous for the books she hasn't yet published (such as her novel in progress, Gardener of Stars, or the collaboration with Lyn Hejinian, The Wide Road) as for the ones she has. Today we're here to celebrate the move of one long-awaited work from column A to column B, as O Books presents us with The Words, Harryman's unique blend of Carl Sandburg's Rootabaga Tales and Jean-Paul Sartre's The Words. Harryman is the author of Vice, Animal Instincts, There Never Was a Rose without a Thorn, and the play Memory Play. With its extended narrative games, its fateful Sadeian psychology, The Words fractures childhood and conventional notions of the child, revealing the fever dream of selfhood under the placid skin of youth, of poetry, of the amused. We've missed her in the Bay Area since she took off for the wilds of Grosse Pointe, and oh, how we're glad she's back.

Pamela Lu took Harryman's tentative, ambiguous 'we' and ran with it the full nine yards in Pamela: a Novel (Atelos), which some critics have acclaimed as the "last masterpiece of the 20th Century." When you're Pamela Lu, you have the reclamé of your peers, the admiration of your elders, the wisdom of one far beyond your years, and a prose style at once grave and gay, filtered and remarkably direct. You've already grown up in a "provincial region of Southern California," studied math at UC Berkeley, moved to the Mission. You co-edit Idiom, the "occasionally productive" online journal and chapbook press. Your attention has turned to a new blend of poetry, history, determination and weness, "The Accused." To cap it all off you have joined the board of Small Press Traffic, because, just because, you're Pamela Lu.

New College Cultural Center

766 Valencia Street, San Francisco

$5 </bigger></bigger></fontfamily>

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

--==========_-1274854249==_ma==========--

↑ Index

166. Emily Lloyd
Writing Through Ally
Mon 13 Sep 1999

The WashPost's TV Guide makes the following summary of tonight's "Ally McBeal" episode:

'The firm gathers at Ally's place to celebrate the launch of Elaine's "Face Bra"; a smitten John Cage tries to spark a fire with Nelle.'

em

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

167. Alan Sondheim
untitled
Mon 13 Sep 1999

=

Untitled

With the slightest increase in temperature, a packet is dropped off at a site of my loved one. It waits, trembling, for others, all organized into the coherency of beauty, "the harmony of chance and the good" (Simone Weil). All together, in wonderful bewilderment, they form a whole, their long and arduous journeys forgotten. How wonderful, my loved one exclaims, that he has written a letter.

Under what circumstances can we speak for the other? Only in the face and throes of death, under an alterity permanently limiting, incomprehensible. Then we may speak, and speak for no one and anyone at all. There, at the threshold, all speech is permitted; a black ocean laps at the base of the cliff, its temperature at absolute zero.

I will wait forever from your message, from the community of the dead; I will wait in your presence, a supplication of chains among chains. I am lost in empty knowledge. Names are a bother; they shudder against the pulverization of walls.

Peeling, or turning away, the routers report errors; the reports never reach you, an expanding shell of packets generated by others lost in the absence of dreaming.

↑ Index

168. Billy Little
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Tue 14 Sep 1999

---

i'm embarassed to see i've left out the three fine novels of ishmael reed free lance pallbearers yellow back radio broke down mumbo jumbo ann beatties work
jayne anne phillips and fielding dawsons exemplary work nabokov's ada zukofsky's little chester himes pinktoes
alice walker's meridian
norman mailer's why are we in vietnam doctorow's we;lcome to hard times & book of daniel coover's public burning ginger man by donlevy
the magic christian and candy by terry southern akbar del piombo's work
ronald sukenick's work

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

169. Stephen Ellis
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Tue 14 Sep 1999

I suggested Irving Rosenthal's 1967 novel SHEEPER.

> From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Novels of the Sixties
> Date: Thu, 9 Sep 1999 15:11:22 -0500
>
> At 4:41 PM -0800 9/8/99, Mark Salerno wrote:
> Colleagues:
>
> I'd appreciate hearing from anyone with suggestions for a course on the Novels of the Sixties. Of particular interest are novels that reflect, in form and/or content, the counter culture. The limit for this theme (arbitrary though it may be) is that the publication date of the book must fall between 1960 and 1970.
>
> Reply by backchannel.
>
> Thank you.
>
> Mark Salerno
>
> i'd be curious to hear folks's suggestions so if you don't mind frontchannel, mine is Leonard Cohen's Beautiful Losers.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

170. david bromige
Novels of the 60's
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Billy Little's list is quite comprehensive. Going by the "arbitrary" guidelines, tho, _On the Road_ is off-limits. Are Brits allowed? _The Magus_ and _The Collector_ , both by John Fowles, if so. I see Billy incliudes Canucks, so what were Alice Monroe and Margaret Atwood publishing in that decade?

Stretching the guidelines, and back in the States, I recommend two by Gerald Rosen, _Blues for a Dying Nation_ (1972, but written and set in the 60s), and _The Carmen Miranda Memorial Flagpole_ , published in '76 but abt the death and the survival of the 60s; and v. funny.

Robert Creeley's _The Island_ , 1963.

Charles Potts, _Valga Crusa_ (= _Shit Crackers_ + _The Yellow Christ_)..THE definitive novel/s of Berkeley in the 60s from the p-o-v of a drugged-up street-poet. O.P.,but possibly available from the author, now resident in Wash state. I can put you in touch w him.

best, David Bromige

↑ Index

171. Lawrence Upton.
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

From: Michael Neff <[redacted]>
Sent: 13 September 1999 18:14

| Pete,
| Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the
| Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking
| them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their | govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This
| sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

All might be more peaceful if the Indonesian occupation of East Timor had not been recognised by USA and UK, "my" country, Australia and so many others; and the murderers in Indonesia might be less formidable if they had not been trained by "the West"

| Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled?

it is too simplistic to do so. But the USA government is deeply implicated and I do not accept the arguments coming from USA or UK to explain why it is right to have bombed Iraq and Serbia, but to haver over other countries... the degree of implication would be quite enough for a citizen to be convicted of complicity in a UK or USA court

| And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South
| Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec?

Why did the US government - and UK etc - support Timor being occupied? If they hadn't been occupied, within my lifetime, they wouldn't have to "secede"

| I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line

| me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or
| Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the
| genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to
| other large groups of people.

do you mean like the use of napalm in Vietnam (or other weapons producing fire in Iraq, or Serbia) or are you thinking of a different more acceptable form of setting fire to people? do tell

Lawrence Upton

The Sub Voicive Poetry website:
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/

Lawrence Upton's website:
http://members.spree.com/sip/lizard/index.htm

RWC
http://members.tripod.com/~ReadandWrite/contents.html

|

↑ Index

172. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Michael --

I understand that you may think that the connections between the US and East Timor are tenuous, at best, but, like many poems, there is much operating below what appears to be flat surfaces. US involvement in Indonesia -- not even counting the massacre of 1 million in the overthrow of Sukarno -- goes back to Kissinger, when Indonesia decided to annex East Timor, muting the US response and preventing the UN or anyone else from intervening, then strengthening aid to the Suharto regime. All of this flows from Cold War logic -- particularly when other newly independent Portuguese colonies such as Angola and Mozambique were displaying too much independence. East Timor was an annexation by force of a people with a different colonial history and different identity, so it is not quite the same as the examples you gave. The international community condemned the annexation, and after decades of massacres the East Timorese finally got their chance to vote for independence -- and took it. All of this exposes decades of American complicity and double standards. No, the militia thugs are not Americans -- and they are accountable -- and neither were the tonton macoutes in Haiti, but America bears much responsibility there as well. I hope this helps clarify the situation a little for you.

Incidentally, isn't it about time that Kissinger was arrested for war crimes?

Hilton Obenzinger

↑ Index

173. hassen
Re: Culture and Anarchy
Tue 14 Sep 1999

---

culture and anarchy indeed! laughing with the following

From: Alan Sondheim
Date: Monday, September 13, 1999 11:46 AM
Subject: Culture and Anarchy

>> "You are wrong," said the Secretary, drawing his black brows together. "The knife was merely the expression of the old personal quarrel with a personal tyrant. Dynamite is not only our best tool, but our best symbol. It is as perfect a symbol of us as is incense of the prayers of the Christians. It expands; it only destroys because it broadens; even so, thought only destroys because it broadens. A man's brain is a bomb," he cried out, loosening suddenly his strange passion and striking his own skull with violence. "My brain feels like a bomb, night and day. It must expand! It must expand! A man's brain must expand, if it breaks up the universe."

(quotes from The Man Who was Thursday, G. K. Chesterton.)
<<

but! :

from Ducornet's Phosphor in Dreamland

"A stinkpot!" Fogginius could be heard hollering throughout that deadly weather. "A fumigation! A holy war!" And Clay was bellowing--that his brain was boiling, boiling so fast his head could not contain it...this brain was a pig roasting in the pit of his skull-- "Roasting in its own juices!" [...] "My brain's ejaculating!" Clay was sobbing, "into God's fist!" [...] "What is architecture? Clay droned, "if it is not the brainchild of alphabet? the burial ground of animality? the alpha of exile from Eden? A tangible mathematics encrusted with the...the lime of, the lime of human pretension?" It was then that a detonation pierced their ears--a sound so fierce the reverberating wilderness stilled to silence and they saw the thug's body caroming through branches and leaves, branches and leaves...and Clay lay dead at Phosphor's feet, the top of his skull torn off. Already the wound was black with flies. [...] Fantasma, his musket smoking, stood over his strongman's corpse: "If I hear the sound of another human voice," he said, "if anyone dares speak, I will blow out his brains too."

*

all for expansion,
hassen

↑ Index

174. Poetry Project novel of the 60s
Tue 14 Sep 1999

As for novels of the 60s,

would suggest THE FAN MAN by William Kotzwinkle

↑ Index

175. Steven Shoemaker
Re: hypertext suggestions
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Dodie--There's a quite interesting hypertext called Patchwork Girl, by Shelley Jackson, which sews together bits of Frankenstein, feminist theory, dream work, etc. Reminds me at times, actually, of Letters of Mina Harker. You can get it from Eastgate Systems for either Mac or Windows. steve

↑ Index

176. Patrick Herron
US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Mike, Pete, etc. - I suppose this line is perhaps my responsibility, so let me explicate some basic notions here, as quickly as I can.

>Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes?

I think this question oversimplifies the issue. I was addressing complicity and support and motives and awareness. The Indonesians and Americans and Australians all have a share in the responsibility, and to reduce it to "fault" of one group would be irresponsible. I encouraged Pete to include the US accountability.

> Did they get the machetes from America too?

No, but the militias are there with US and Australian financial and military support. And it's not all machetes. I believe that your point about who is actually doing the killing is an excellent one, but sometimes people can strongly shape an environment and give orders in exchange for something. If this were not the case then perhaps humans would have never known war.

> I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful?

Actually, yes. The East Timorese were pretty much left alone by the Portuguese. The East Timorese were a primitive culture in the sense that they didn't have guns or television or refrigerators; they were tribal and isolated from the industrialized world. The US and Australia knew of the vast amount of wealth in the Timor Gap, but couldn't get to it, b/c that would have started a war with Portugal. When Portugal left, there was suddenly an angle that could be played. The US could not afford to deply its own troops, largely b/c of the Vietnam legacy, and also b/c they had someone, namely Suharto, who could do the dirty work for them, keeping the US squeaky clean. Besides, the US wished to prove that it was not abandoning its attempt to control SE Asia, as is reflected in several presidential memos during the time of these visits that you were referring to.

The US put Suharto in power; he was a US puppet leader. Indonesia is still pretty much a US puppet today. And Australia isn't going to go against American interests, if one realistically asseses the nature of modern geopolitics. They share too many interests.

>This
sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

It sounds like you have an a priori here that is untouchable. Your belief sounds naive to my ears. Naive, but from what perspective? "Ignorance is Strength"? "2+2=5"?

> I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor.

It is a calculated psychotic rampage. You don't have to see it; the world will go on without your seeing it. Though it would be better if you could see it. The rampage is funded and it has a history of complicity and support. The militias are either indonesians/jakartans that have settled there, finding pay as mercenaries, or even some east timorese deeply scarred from the concentration camp environment they grew up in. Keep in mind that the killing has been much much much worse in the past than it is now; also remember that the east timorese were hereded and slaughtered like cattle so that the indonesians could settle there and erase the history of the East Timorese. It is incredible how resilient and strong the East Timorese people have proven themselves.

>You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me?

Kissinger and Scowcroft, as representatives of the NSA (though they were also cabinet members) went with Ford on several occasions to visit with Suharto. Following the first visit, Indonesia deployed mercenaries into East Timor. the last visit (Dec. 6, 1975) presaged the full fledged invasion the following day. Suahrto worked for the US government, and the connection being made here, I leave to you to make for yourself. the US media practically ignored the slaughter that followed for the next 4 years. some australian reporters made it in to report the concentration camps, the genocide, and most of those reporters were murdered. Now why would the US media ignore the slaughter? When you look at the companies invested in the exploration of the Timor Gap, their board of directors, and their advertising dollars, and the dead reporters trying to reveal the truth, you can then perhaps start to imagine why coverage starts to disappear.

>Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled?
And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec?

The US government does not support complete secession of East Timor. But, 25 years of slaughter hasn't tamed the populace. Indonesian rule isn't working, clearly. And complete East Timorese independence would be a financial disaster for Phillips 66, BHP, Chevron, Texaco, and several other large companies invested in the exploitation of the Timor Gap, which rests completely on treaties between Australia and Indonesia. And who sits on the board of directors of these companies? People from the Dep't of Defense, Boeing, Lockheed Martin, Knight ridder, Time Warner, Weyerhauser, former Secretaries of State, and on and on. The solution, therefore, is US military presence. replacing one invasion (the indonesian invasion) with another. Perhaps we are going to do good and keep the peace. Most likely a new wave of rebels will disappear and these treaties will be protected or revised so that these companies will still get their share and the East timorese will get nothing but a destroyed environment and exploitation. That's capitalism.

Are we compelled? I am compelled. Completely. And many other informed parties are as well.

> but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?

Yes, at least partially. First, it was never a matter of us just turning our backs; the US government supported it financially and with military training and intelligence. I blame the idiots running around with machetes just as much as I blame the people who set up the power relation structure in the region. Sadly, the implication of this is that there may never be a good resolution. The US will not let its investments collapse, and if the US did, political heads will roll. Money talks.

I ask you, for example, if you gave a starving person a gun, a person you starved, told him that there's food at the end of the road inside someone's house, and promised him that if he went and fed himself by using that gun to get to the food then you would give him $100, who do you blame? Just blame the beggar? Just blame the deal maker? Both the dealmaker and the beggar are to blame here. But if the beggar was starved by the dealmaker in the first place, then, i think that blame is a personal decision.

And that's if we just stick to blame. Why not use the past, use history and its obscured truths just to inform our present and future decisions? Like by encouraging a UN peacekeeping force without participation from the US, Australia, Britain, New Zealand? I'm not really into blame. I like to be informed and make good decisions and encourage others to do the same. I'm not for throwing anyone in jail here. I'd just like the cycle of atrocities and exploitation to stop.

There's so much history that has led up to this and it is very hard to get any information on how arms are flowing, dollars are being spent, behind the scenes exchanges, etc. Some of us do our best to research what is going on, and admittedly the research is never perfect or unbiased. My bias is that western exploitation of third world nations for export crops and mineral/oil resources and/or drugs, and the deliberate provocation of politically explosive situations for the sake of increasing arms sales is intolerable. I wished that my country represented democracy and the values of freedom it claims to represent; it is clear that i can no longer naively cling to such a belief.

I encourage all of you to use your search engines and research this stuff for yourself, and to trust your faculties and connections in separating the reliable information from the crap. I also encourage you to share the information about what really is happening; I can promise you NBC, The New York Times, and CNN will not.

Patrick Herron

pete spence wrote:

> please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
> to:[redacted]

> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> thanks pete spence
>
> speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just > >as good
> >and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in > >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American > >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and > >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous > >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the
> >chaotic
> >and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential > >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the > >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
> >else
> >takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by > >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian > >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military > >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original > >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking > >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain > >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they > >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the > >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
> >
> >http://www.freetimor.com/
> >
> >http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
> >
> >http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
> >
> >http://www.etan.org/
> >
> >regards,
> >Patrick Herron
> >

> >
> >>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the > >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
> >better
> >usage of your time; [redacted]
> >
> >thanks pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

177. Mark Weiss

Re: I can't believe it!!!

Tue 14 Sep 1999

We didn't "cause" it, but we've certainly been an enabling factor: we have registered little complaint when East Timor was annexed and its people slaughtered (some 200,000) of them over the years, ditto the situation in Irian Jaya, ditto the slaughter of ethnic Chinese. Instead, we have consistently stroked the Indonesian govt for being anticommunist, and that stroking has taken the form of ytraining and supplying their military, contributing greatly to its ability to overwhelm the rest of govt.

At 01:14 PM 9/13/99 -0400, you wrote:
>Pete,
>
>Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of >accusation. I need to be clear.
>
>Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the >Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking >them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their >govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This >sounds naive to the point of absurdity.
>
>I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest >going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the >slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for >me? I don't see it from what you are saying.

>
>Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who >believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their >barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.
>
>And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South >Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send >overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the >diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in >Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the >same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering >we see now?
>
>I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line
>me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or >Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the >genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to >other large groups of people.
>
>Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.
>
>Mike
>
>
>pete spence wrote:
>
>> please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
>> to:[redacted]
>> [redacted]
>> [redacted]
>> thanks pete spence
>>
>> speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just >> >as good

>> >and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in
>> >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American
>> >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and >> >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous
>> >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the
>> >chaotic
>> >and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential >> >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the >> >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
>> >else
>> >takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by >> >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian >> >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military >> >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original >> >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking >> >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain
>> >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they >> >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of
the
>> >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
>> >
>> >http://www.freetimor.com/
>> >
>> >http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
>> >
>> >http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
>> >
>> >http://www.etan.org/
>> >
>> >regards,
>> >Patrick Herron
>> >
>> >
>> >>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the >> >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
>> >better
>> >usage of your time; [redacted]
>> >
>> >thanks pete spence
>> >

>> >_____
>> >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>> >
>> >_____
>> >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>>
>> _____
>> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
>--
>
>
>
>
>==========
>Web Del Sol
>http://webdelsol.com
>LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW
>
>

↑ Index

178. Taylor Brady

Re: I can't believe it!!!

Tue 14 Sep 1999

A few points:

1) Kissinger's "visit" was considerably more instrumental than the "chat-and-tea" image might otherwise conjure one to believe. It was rather, the U.S. State Department's imprimatur and guarantee of military assistance to a regime embarked on a series of "policy initiatives" which included, most notably, a) the slaughter and forced relocation of much of its own peasantry, labor leaders and movement members, intellectuals, etc., in the name of a defense against communism; and b) the invasion and annexation of Timor, resulting in a brutal occupation which left nearly a quarter of a million dead. This, while the U.S. (among others - recently, the role of Japan and Australia would also bear some scrutiny) continued (and continues, notwithstanding Clinton's half-assed "retraction of assistance") to provide the proverbial "military, technical and economic aid" to the Indonesian regime. This isn't a matter of having bought arms years ago, but one of receiving - until this week, and that only if Clinton's retraction is to taken at face value - ongoing direct support from the U.S. and other armaments-producing nations. Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line. For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the militias. But other sources are many and well-documented. If you have web access, you might take a look at the East Timor Action Network's web site: www.etan.org 2) The above would seem to have some bearing on your assertion that East Timor is attempting to "secede" from a legitimate national government - which is simply not the case. East Timor, as an Indonesian territory, is the result of a forcible annexation sponsored by U.S. and other interests. Many of the key figures in the initial "sponsorship" remain in positions of power today. In other words, this is about as far from a quixotic attempt to rectify a distant and tragic "other-people's" history as you can get. 3) You ask: "We turned the other way on Savac we see now (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?" Yes. Absolutely. As I've pointed out, this isn't simply a case of turning the other way, but a direct outgrowth of deliberate policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and unsustainable without that aid. Until very recently, a cut-off of such support might have sufficed to avert the campaign of terror now being pursued. There is no "genocidal gene" - and such pseudo-explanations ("they're just nuts _over there_, who can understand their motivations?"), I'd warrant, most often mark the site of a real and determinate chain of events, the complicity of one's own nation in which is precisely what the resort to racialized typologies attempts to obscure.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Neff
Sent: Monday, September 13, 1999 10:15 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Pete,

Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of accusation. I need to be clear.

Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me? I don't see it from what you are saying.

Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their
barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.

And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?

I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

Mike

pete spence wrote:

> please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
> to:[redacted]
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> thanks pete spence
>

> speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just > >as good
> >and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in > >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American > >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and > >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous > >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the
> >chaotic
> >and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential > >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the > >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
> >else
> >takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by > >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian > >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military > >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original > >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking > >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain > >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they > >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the > >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
> >
> >http://www.freetimor.com/
> >
> >http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
> >
> >http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
> >
> >http://www.etan.org/
> >
> >regards,
> >Patrick Herron
> >
> >
> >>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the > >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
> >better
> >usage of your time; [redacted]

> >
> >thanks pete spence
> >
> >_____
> >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
> >
> >_____
> >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

179. Karen Kelley
Snail Mails Needed
Tue 14 Sep 1999

If anyone has earth addresses for the following people, I'd appreciate it. Backchannel, please:

Juliana Spahr
Eliot Weinberger
Sheila Murphy
Gil Ott
Rachel Blau DuPlessis
Dan Featherston
Cydney Chadwick
Tony Green
Bill Luoma
Marjorie Perloff
Kent Johnson
Anthony Lawrence
Joe Amato
AH Bramhall
Laura Moriarty
Forrest Gander

↑ Index

180. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Novels of the 60's
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Has no one mentioned Pynchon's _Crying of Lot 49_? Ah, for the vale of San Narciso and the halycon tunes of The Paranoids.

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

181. Kali Tal
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Mike,

Sounds like you're cutting flame-bait to me. To support your viewpoint you'd have to argue that the US habit of providing financial and military support to dictatorial governments in the Third World (as long as they are willing to support our economic interests) has no bearing on our moral or ethical responsibilities in those regions. From what you say, it shouldn't matter that in country after country we are willing to prop up unpopular regimes (and occasionally invent and install them) to serve our economic and political interests despite popular resistance to externally imposed structures of authority. Asking Pete to "educate" you on this topic is sidestepping your own responsibility to defend your position of non-involvement. He provided you with URLS--I have no doubt that you're educated enough to read them, come to your own conclusions and then "educate" Peter if you so choose.

I haven't posted to POETICS in ages because the level of discourse here usually winds up pissing me off if I get involved, despite the fact that I'm a publisher of poetry and that really this ought to be a place I'm comfortable hanging out. When somebody on POETICS posts something that somebody else doesn't like (particularly on political grounds) the common tactic on this list is to snidely and sarcastically attack the intelligence of the poster, and rarely ever to directly engage their political arguments. I like political arguments and I think they're related to poetry. What I don't like is the very nasty tone of intellectual and moral superiority wielded by some (usually more conservative) members to silence others here. It takes more work to make your own argument, Peter, than to sneer at someone else's argument.

Receding into silence once again,
Kali

↑ Index

182. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Yes, indeed. Please see the latest issue of The Nation for more on current US involvement in Indonesia:

http://www.thenation.com/ US COMPLICITY IN EAST TIMOR Although the US government has reprimanded Indonesia for the militias' campaign of terror in East Timor, the US military has, behind the scenes and contrary to Congressional intent, been backing the Indonesian Army. Allan Nairn filed this first-hand report from Dili, East Timor

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

183. Mike Kelleher
[Fwd: untitled or magazine 3]
Tue 14 Sep 1999

"Michelle H. Citrin" wrote:

> ----------
>
> _untitled or magazine_ is happy or pleased to announce the publication
>
> of its 3rd issue, featuring poems by
>
> Tim McPeek
> Jen Russo
> Natasha Dwyer
> Mike Kelleher
> Loren Goodman
> Aaron Armstrong Skomra
> Michelle Citrin
> Ben Friedlander
>
> Orange corrugated cardboard cover. They are 5 dollars plus one dollar to cover postage. Send check (payable to Michelle Citrin) to:
>
> untitled or magazine/press
> 169 So. Union St. #4
> Burlington, VT 05401
>
> --Michelle Citrin and Aaron Armstrong Skomra
> [redacted]

↑ Index

184. Brian Lennon
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Perhaps only when someone bursts the bubble of the New Model Poetics Army do we get down to actually conversing with each other. My guess is, it's less likely that Mike Neff doubts the complicity of the US in evil deeds than that he found the assumption of privilege regarding "the real story" to be unwarranted. I guess it's too much to ask of the medium that we not post initially in haste. But it's heartening to see this thread become an exchange not a flame war.

Brian Lennon

↑ Index

185. William Marsh
Re: hypertext suggestions
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Dodie:

To add to what others have offered...

The Brown site put together by Landow and students http://landow.stg.brown.edu/cpace/ht/htov.html or http://landow.stg.brown.edu/cpace/cspaceov.html

his book _Hyper/Text/Theory_ is good for beginning work

"Meditations on First Cybersophy" is an example from the Brown website suggesting possibilities for critical work in the HT format http://landow.stg.brown.edu/cpace/theory/pena/index2.html

"The Interactive Story"
http://ma.hrc.wmin.ac.uk/ma.theory.3.2.1.db

Joyce's "Twelve Blue" is available on-line http://www.eastgate.com/TwelveBlue/ (good for an introduction, though i agree with Taylor there's probs with Eastgate) other sites that might appeal:

Building Babel http://www.peg.apc.org/~spinifex/babelbuildingsite.html
Lies http://www.users.interport.net/~rick/lies/lies.htm

i also like to send students to a brief article i found on Ramelli's "Reading Wheel," a prototype hypertext machine designed in the 16h c.
http://www.mindspring.com/~jntolva/ramelli.html

hope these help,
bill

> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group
> [mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Dodie Bellamy
> Sent: Thursday, September 09, 1999 8:18 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: hypertext suggestions
>
> Hi, I have an independent study student who is going to do a hypertext horror piece. I have no problem helping her with the horror end of the project, but also want to suggest some good hypertext pieces and/or theories. I'm sending her the urls of a couple things that have caught my eye, but does anyone have any suggestions of some cut-above hypertext links? Or even books/articles on hypertext?
>
> Thanks.
>
> Dodie

↑ Index

186. Stephen Ellis

Re: I can't believe it!!!

Tue 14 Sep 1999

Does anyone know specifics re: the role of Indonesian General Wiranto in the recent events unfolding in East Timor? Wiranto, among those who "got" the message the West was "sending" (ie its nervousness over the Asian economic situation), was apparently the man who gently suggested through mutual friends that Suharto step down in May 98. What role does the army play in Indonesian internal politics? Is it as in Turkey, to "guarantee" the continuity of a secular state in a highly religious society? I woldn't put it past Wiranto to be using this ploy as a cloak for some heavy business glad-handing with anyone who comes down the pike, not just the Americans & UK or the West in general, but anyone willing to play his own essentially powerless hand in Wiranto's game. There's no reason for him to have political ambitions, since he's already at the top of the heap (yet hiding beneath its statistics). Somebody's making a pile of money on the piles of bodies, but the question remains, who is it? & specifically how are they doing it? Weapons trade, sure, but ... protection money protects just what, exactly? Talk abt Investigative Poetry - this isn't just a job for Ed Sanders or Superman, but for everyone, like, go figure, who's who and why they ACT that way behind the scenes while up front the explanations and solutions are as sweet as the ring of your old time Burroughs cash register to the ear of Pavlov's Dog.

> From: Hilton Manfred Obenzinger <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
> Date: Tue, 14 Sep 1999 08:14:12 -0700
>
> Michael --
>
> I understand that you may think that the connections between the US and East Timor are tenuous, at best, but, like many poems, there is much operating below what appears to be flat surfaces. US involvement in Indonesia -- not even counting the massacre of 1 million in the overthrow of Sukarno -- goes back to Kissinger, when Indonesia decided to annex East Timor, muting the US response and preventing the UN or anyone else from intervening, then strengthening aid to the Suharto regime. All of this flows from Cold War logic -- particularly when other newly independent Portuguese colonies such as Angola and Mozambique were displaying too much independence. East Timor was an annexation by force of a people with a different colonial history and different identity, so it is not quite the same as the examples you gave. The international community condemned the annexation, and after decades of massacres the East Timorese finally got their chance to vote for independence -- and took it. All of this exposes decades of American complicity and double standards. No, the militia thugs are not Americans -- and they are accountable -- and neither were the tonton macoutes in Haiti, but America bears much responsibility there as well. I hope this helps clarify the situation a little for you.
>
> Incidentally, isn't it about time that Kissinger was arrested for war crimes?
>
> Hilton Obenzinger

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

187. Aldon Nielsen

Re: novel of the 60s

Tue 14 Sep 1999

Tried to respond to Mark directly but didn't get through for some reason --

DON'T overlook William Melvin Kelley's 1962 novel _A Different Drummer_ -- a major work and an unusual point of view

↑ Index

188. K.Silem Mohammad
Re: Novels of the 60's
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Thanks to whoever mentioned Kotzwinkle's _Fan Man_ (though I thought that was '70s)--I read it years ago, and laughed till I cried. Had forgotten all about it. Didn't he write _E.T._? Weird.

Don't know if someone else has already mentioned it, but in terms of popular longevity alone (not to mention its elevation of sentimentality and anti-intellectualism to a truly sublime level), Daniel Keyes' _Flowers for Algernon_ is essential.

I also like Updike's _Rabbit, Run_ and (maybe even more) _Rabbit Redux_ (is that still 60's?). I'm betting nobody else nominated those.

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

189. Aldon Nielsen
M.B. Tolson
Tue 14 Sep 1999

There is finally an edition in paperback of Melvin Tolson's poems, or at least most of them. Just out from University of Virginia Press is <underline>"Harlem Gallery" and Other Poems of Melvin B. Tolson.</underline> The book includes the three volumes that were published during Tolson's life, along with a few magazine pieces that had not been collected, including the crucial "E. & O. E." which appeared in <underline>Poetry</underline> in 1951. The new edition includes Tolson's notes to <underline>Libretto for the Republic of Liberia</underline> and new annotations to <underline>Harlem Gallery</underline>, provided by the editor, Raymond Nelson. What is not included are the earlier poems that appeared a few years ago as <underline>A Gallery of Harlem Portraits</underline> and some fugitive poems. There will be two previously unpublished Tolson poems in an anthology that I am editing with Lauri Ramey that Alabama will publish soon.

If you've never read Tolson, get this book now. And I hope all of you who've been asking for years why his books are out of print will now adopt this book for your courses.

Watch this space for future news of a selected Tolson writings that will collect an interesting sampling of his prose work.

↑ Index

190. Leonard Brink
instress.com
Tue 14 Sep 1999

http://www.instress.com

contains:

A catalog of chapbooks
&
Inscape Magazine

Windhover, an on-line journal of poetry

Spencer Selby's List of Magazines (with Links)

New American Writing

↑ Index

191. Michael Neff
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

I'm not an expert on East Timor/Indonesian politics and don't claim to be. I am commenting specifically on attempts to directly link the US govt (parties, individuals, policies, some combo thereof) and specific actions or inactions on its part to these current manifestations of acute human barbarism. At worst/best then, we are "enabling" to some degree that cannot be measured. However, can one state for certainty that US "involvement" was necessary to provoke the killing fields in this case?

In other words, must the US be a factor in enabling socio-psychotic behavior (documented throughout history beginning with the Assyrians most notably?) or can it take place independent of the US? And if we admit it can take place independent of the US, or has taken place independent of the US, or will take place independent of the US, can we state with certainty that this particular plague demands US "enabling" behavior?

Or could it have happened anyway?

Are there forces, cultures, history, hatreds inherent to the land there that play a factor? That might even dwarf or render any US enabling inconsequential?

Back to my point about the machetes. These were not funded by the US govt. Arms or not, they have enough arms left to kill. As far as these other tragic situations around the globe, are we responsible, enabling all those too, perhaps because we cannot play our role as global policeman too well? I'm perplexed.

Perhaps this is exactly why we shouldn't be global policemen. Too much blame, too easy to fault?

Mark Weiss wrote:

> We didn't "cause" it, but we've certainly been an enabling factor: we have registered little complaint when East Timor was annexed and its people slaughtered (some 200,000) of them over the years, ditto the situation in Irian Jaya, ditto the slaughter of ethnic Chinese. Instead, we have consistently stroked the Indonesian govt for being anticommunist, and that stroking has taken the form of ytraining and supplying their military, contributing greatly to its ability to overwhelm the rest of govt.
>
> At 01:14 PM 9/13/99 -0400, you wrote:
> Pete,
>
> Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of > accusation. I need to be clear.
>
> Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking > them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their > govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This sounds naive to the point of absurdity.
>
> I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the > slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me? I don't see it from what you are saying.
>
> Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their > barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.
>
> And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in > Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the > same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering
> we see now?

I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line
me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

Mike

pete spence wrote:

please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest to:[redacted]
thanks pete spence

speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just as good and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the chaotic and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone else takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.

http://www.freetimor.com/

http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html

> http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
>
> http://www.etan.org/
>
> regards,
> Patrick Herron
>
> so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the
> indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a better
> usage of your time; [redacted]
>
> thanks pete spence
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> --
>
> ==========
> Web Del Sol
> http://webdelsol.com
> LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

192. Michael Neff
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

I don't doubt what you are saying about Kissinger, policies, support, yadda yadda.

This isn't my point. We're off track. My comments were directed to this statement by Peter Spence: "It may also be just as good and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese."

The words "ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression" makes me think that like Nazis in the Ukraine, we are there with a policy which places active operatives in the field who are promoting and directing hacking gangs, resident psychos, and Indonesian army units to slaughters, rapine, burnings, church massacres, etc. etc. etc.

US doesn't have to grant imprimatur to any dictator to begin slaughter, forced relocations, tortures, etc. This kind of thing happens all the time and is happening in other places and climes without imprimaturs. The dictator, the state is imprimatur in of itself and always has been, an arrogance which breeds intolerance at best and secret police mechanisms at worst. Such bodies and culture require no Madeline Albright, Kissinger, Ford, or whoever to lend them authority to oppress.

But here is a statement I wish to challenge:

"... a direct outgrowth of deliberate policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and unsustainable without that aid."

Now, wait a minute. Let's reality check.

What we're talking about is a relatively unsophisticated third world military apparatus (not a crack group like Hitler's SS divisions, Iraq's Guards--an outgrowth of the Ten Thousand Immortals; or US Seals, etc.) and some machete wielding, body gutting thugs of a paramilitary nature common under many conditions, who are in unison attacking a virtually defenseless populace.

Is that not so? Are they facing a line of troops who are harrying their flanks, threatening their lines, an army or resisting force which makes "simply could not have pursued" without US/Japan/etc help and a priori statement?

It looks to me like forced takeover requires only a savage will to see it through, not smart bombs. It's happened many times before, and will again.

Taylor Brady wrote:

> A few points:
>
> 1) Kissinger's "visit" was considerably more instrumental than the "chat-and-tea" image might otherwise conjure one to believe. It was rather, the U.S. State Department's imprimatur and guarantee of military assistance to a regime embarked on a series of "policy initiatives" which included, most notably, a) the slaughter and forced relocation of much of its own peasantry, labor leaders and movement members, intellectuals, etc., in the name of a defense against communism; and b) the invasion and annexation of Timor, resulting in a brutal occupation which left nearly a quarter of a million dead. This, while the U.S. (among others - recently, the role of Japan and Australia would also bear some scrutiny) continued (and continues, notwithstanding Clinton's half-assed "retraction of assistance") to provide the proverbial "military, technical and economic aid" to the Indonesian regime. This isn't a matter of having bought arms years ago, but one of receiving - until this week, and that only if Clinton's retraction is to taken at face value - ongoing direct support from the U.S. and other armaments-producing nations. Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line. For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the militias. But other sources are many and well-documented. If you have web access, you might take a look at the East Timor Action Network's web site: www.etan.org
> 2) The above would seem to have some bearing on your assertion that East Timor is attempting to "secede" from a legitimate national government - which is simply not the case. East Timor, as an Indonesian territory, is the result of a forcible annexation sponsored by U.S. and other interests. Many of the key figures in the initial "sponsorship" remain in positions of power today. In other words, this is about as far from a quixotic attempt to rectify a distant and tragic "other-people's" history as you can get.
> 3) You ask: "We turned the other way on Savac we see now (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?" Yes. Absolutely. As I've pointed out, this isn't simply a case of turning the other way, but a direct outgrowth of deliberate policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and unsustainable without that aid. Until very recently, a cut-off of such support might have sufficed to avert the campaign of terror now being pursued. There is no "genocidal gene" - and such pseudo-explanations ("they're just nuts _over there_, who can understand their motivations?"), I'd warrant, most often mark the site of a real and determinate chain of events, the complicity of one's own nation in which is precisely what the resort to racialized typologies attempts to obscure.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Neff
Sent: Monday, September 13, 1999 10:15 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Pete,

Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of accusation. I need to be clear.

Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me? I don't see it from what you are saying.

Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.

And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering
we see now?

I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line
me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

Mike

pete spence wrote:

please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
to:[redacted]
thanks pete spence

speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just as good
and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the chaotic and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone else takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original > inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they > mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the > East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.

>
> http://www.freetimor.com/
>
> http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
>
> http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
>
> http://www.etan.org/
>
> regards,
> Patrick Herron
>
> so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the
> indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a better
> usage of your time; [redacted]
>
> thanks pete spence
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> --
>
> ==========
> Web Del Sol
> http://webdelsol.com
> LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

193. A H Bramhall
more unimportant matter
Tue 14 Sep 1999

That Speck There

reasonable radicalism resists the saturation point.
bringing with this item another fanatical reference work known to explode out of all proportion to dullards. the sense of excuse will be fried on your next trip into town. when you say
"there is no town"
it fills me gravely with antsiness. like, how can voiceover prove my worth? I got together with mainlines forever, without refusing to water the dog. now it's on other terms, the sort that render fat like an idea. I have no idea personally, but seem to sing in the shower. when done there is no history to fall back on, just bathmats and the like.
and that's so telling, a full spectrum poetry that believes the communal grope has much to do with issues of darkness. lights are for losers, so ordinary. the tribe lives tribal because definitions last. yes, anything defined will remain so until redefined. that's my awning, where do you keep yours? I ask rhetorically since what purpose would there be to remember anything, dreams included?
to assert a factual basis for every your declaration simply masks the boundaries with dressy new ones. meanwhile the reference point goes walkabout. so why get tired, why give up? the throng has my watch, or watches me, or what is a thatched hut nowadays?

my sermon, my sense, and heaven prove reliant

↑ Index

194. Michael Neff
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Tue 14 Sep 1999

Dear Patrick,

I'm not going to debate your very thorough knowledge of this region of the earth and your considerable insight into the secret workings of the US Govt, Chevron, NBC news, etc. etc and their various and ongoing collusions. I've heard formula explanations of various oil company/media/govt conspiracies being responsible for all sorts of behavioral phenomena, just as I have heard individuals far less erudite than yourself claim space aliens are responsible for a wide range of other phenomena. I myself grew up believing that the govt/media covered up Bermuda Triangle truths, etc. I'm not saying this matter is in the same league, don't get me wrong. I'm just saying I'm hearing some familiar themes here.

I'll tell you emphatically that I do not get my news from CNN, NBC, etc. During the Kosovo crisis, e.g., I watched far more interesting French coverage (they even interviewed a British officer). But I'll reestablish the context, make a few points, and then let it go.

First, and again, I have been hearing oil company/USGovt/etc theories to explain a wide spectrum of antisocial behaviors around the earth and I don't always buy it, and I'm not totally buying it now, IN THE CONTEXT OF the homicidal group behavior there. And that is my point exactly. Occam's Razor, the Japan/US/NBC/Chevron formal or informal infrastructure of conspiracy is not necessary to explain the rampaging militia and military. This is not to say components of these nebulous groups (like clouds, they dissolve the closer you look) are not involved in Indonesia to various degrees, they are, of course! Who can deny that? And they are involved in ways you enlighten us to.

Second, I become suspicious when explanations of group/national/tribe behaviors, esp pronounced psychotic ones on such a grand and incredibly savage scale, don't include local culture, socio-psych, or other factors to account for them. Surely, there is a synergy here, a harmonious convergence of psychotic gravities which should be noted and divulged. This harping on the US, oil companies, Japan, macro international political models, etc. don't serve to explain the killer hysteria and frenzy. This is what I am getting at. Believe me Patrick, the US Govt is far, far more stupid than malevolent. It requires planning and skill to be intentionally malevolent.

Lets look at a few quotes here:

"The Indonesians and Americans and Australians all have a share in the responsibility, and to reduce it to "fault" of one group would be irresponsible. I encouraged Pete to include the US accountability."

I say it goes far deeper than this. These models of yours are insufficient to explain the group behavior.

"The East Timorese were pretty much left alone by the Portuguese."

That's a shocker. Why didn't the Portugese turn them into slaves like they did so many others?

"The East Timorese were a primitive culture in the sense that they didn't have guns or television or refrigerators; they were tribal and isolated from the industrialized world."

Then no wonder the US had to throw so much gun money to Indonesia.

"The US and Australia knew of the vast amount of wealth in the Timor Gap, but couldn't get to it, b/c that would have started a war with Portugal."

Yes, war with Portugal would have been disastrous, like the mouse who roared. Hell, Portugal is poor, why didn't we just bribe them like everyone else? Surely Chevron had enough moolah.

"The US put Suharto in power; he was a US puppet leader."

As in Vietnam, "puppet" leaders often become less so when they realize they are regarded as puppet leaders. Open the history books. The so called puppet status is always exaggerated. Strings can and are broken.

" Indonesia is still pretty much a US puppet today. And Australia isn't going to go against American interests, if one realistically asseses the nature of modern geopolitics. They share too many interests."

Australia has gone against US interests in the region plenty of times. I'm not buying that argument.

"It is a calculated psychotic rampage. You don't have to see it; the world will go on without your seeing it. Though it would be better if you could see it. The rampage is funded and it has a history of complicity and support. The militias are either indonesians/jakartans that have settled there, finding pay as mercenaries, or even some east timorese deeply scarred from the concentration camp environment they grew up in. Keep in mind that the killing has been much much much worse in the past than it is now;"

Yes, of course it is calculated. I do see it. The world goes on anyway. You're touching on the local politics now, setting the scene, a scene which requires no US govt to ignite the killings.

"Kissinger and Scowcroft, as representatives of the NSA (though they were also cabinet members) went with Ford on several occasions to visit with Suharto. Following the first visit, Indonesia deployed mercenaries into East Timor. the last visit (Dec. 6, 1975) presaged the full fledged invasion the following day."

I'm going to stop here. I don't know that these two were "representatives" of the NSA. What do you mean by representatives? You mean operatives, don't you? How could the NSA select "representatives" in the common sense of the word? I'm not buying that. I thought NSA was subject to guys like Kissinger, not the other way around. But that must be my naivety again. So what you are implying is that the NSA sanctioned the invasion of Timor, planned it, carried it off for the sake of ... Chevron? For black gold of course. Why else do nations play dirty. Well, why did such a high profile visit have to take place for all to see? Why didn't the NSA just pick up the phone and say go get 'em, or Chevron for that matter? Kissinger had to give his facetoface blessing, I suppose?

"I wished that my country represented democracy and the values of freedom it claims to represent; it is clear that i can no longer naively cling to such a belief."

I don't believe that either Patrick, I just think your explanations are formula in some respects and inadequate to explain the condition of group killing psychosis.

Patrick Herron wrote:

> Mike, Pete, etc. - I suppose this line is perhaps my responsibility, so let me explicate some basic notions here, as quickly as I can.
>
> Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes?
>
> I think this question oversimplifies the issue. I was addressing complicity and support and motives and awareness. The Indonesians and Americans and Australians all have a share in the responsibility, and to reduce it to "fault" of one group would be irresponsible. I encouraged Pete to include the US accountability.
>
> Did they get the machetes from America too?

No, but the militias are there with US and Australian financial and military support. And it's not all machetes. I believe that your point about who is actually doing the killing is an excellent one, but sometimes people can strongly shape an environment and give orders in exchange for something. If this were not the case then perhaps humans would have never known war.

I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful?

Actually, yes. The East Timorese were pretty much left alone by the Portuguese. The East Timorese were a primitive culture in the sense that they didn't have guns or television or refrigerators; they were tribal and isolated from the industrialized world. The US and Australia knew of the vast amount of wealth in the Timor Gap, but couldn't get to it, b/c that would have started a war with Portugal. When Portugal left, there was suddenly an angle that could be played. The US could not afford to deply its own troops, largely b/c of the Vietnam legacy, and also b/c they had someone, namely Suharto, who could do the dirty work for them, keeping the US squeaky clean. Besides, the US wished to prove that it was not abandoning its attempt to control SE Asia, as is reflected in several presidential memos during the time of these visits that you were referring to.

The US put Suharto in power; he was a US puppet leader. Indonesia is still pretty much a US puppet today. And Australia isn't going to go against American interests, if one realistically asseses the nature of modern geopolitics. They share too many interests.

*This
sounds naive to the point of absurdity.*

It sounds like you have an a priori here that is untouchable. Your belief sounds naive to my ears. Naive, but from what perspective? "Ignorance is Strength"? "2+2=5"?

I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor.

It is a calculated psychotic rampage. You don't have to see it; the world will go on without your seeing it. Though it would be better if you could see it. The rampage is funded and it has a history of complicity and support. The militias are either indonesians/jakartans that have settled there, finding pay as mercenaries, or even some east timorese deeply scarred from the concentration camp environment they grew up in. Keep in mind that the killing has been much much much worse in the past than it is now; also remember that the east timorese were hereded and slaughtered like cattle so that the indonesians could settle there and erase the history of the East Timorese. It is incredible how resilient and strong the East Timorese people have proven themselves.

You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me?

Kissinger and Scowcroft, as representatives of the NSA (though they were also cabinet members) went with Ford on several occasions to visit with Suharto. Following the first visit, Indonesia deployed mercenaries into East Timor. the last visit (Dec. 6, 1975) presaged the full fledged invasion the following day. Suahrto worked for the US government, and the connection being made here, I leave to you to make for yourself. the US media practically ignored the slaughter that followed for the next 4 years. some australian reporters made it in to report the concentration camps, the genocide, and most of those reporters were murdered. Now why would the US media ignore the slaughter? When you look at the companies invested in the exploration of the Timor Gap, their board of directors, and their advertising dollars, and the dead reporters trying to reveal the truth, you can then perhaps start to imagine why coverage starts to disappear.

Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled?
And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec?

The US government does not support complete secession of East Timor. But, 25 years of slaughter hasn't tamed the populace. Indonesian rule isn't working, clearly. And complete East Timorese independence would be a financial disaster for Phillips 66, BHP, Chevron, Texaco, and several other large companies invested in the exploitation of the Timor Gap, which rests completely on treaties between Australia and Indonesia. And who sits on the board of directors of these companies? People from the Dep't of Defense, Boeing, Lockheed Martin, Knight ridder, Time Warner, Weyerhauser, former Secretaries of State, and on and on. The solution, therefore, is US military presence. replacing one invasion (the indonesian invasion) with another. Perhaps we are going to do good and keep the peace. Most likely a new wave of rebels will disappear and these treaties will be protected or revised so that these companies will still get their share and the East timorese will get nothing but a destroyed environment and exploitation. That's capitalism.

Are we compelled? I am compelled. Completely. And many other informed parties are as well.

but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?

Yes, at least partially. First, it was never a matter of us just turning our backs; the US government supported it financially and with military training and intelligence. I blame the idiots running around with machetes just as much as I blame the people who set up the power relation structure in the region. Sadly, the implication of this is that there may never be a good resolution. The US will not let its investments collapse, and if the US did, political heads will roll. Money talks.

I ask you, for example, if you gave a starving person a gun, a person you starved, told him that there's food at the end of the road inside someone's house, and promised him that if he went and fed himself by using that gun to get to the food then you would give him $100, who do you blame? Just blame the beggar? Just blame the deal maker? Both the dealmaker and the beggar are to blame here. But if the beggar was starved by the dealmaker in the first place, then, i think that blame is a personal decision.

And that's if we just stick to blame. Why not use the past, use history and its obscured truths just to inform our present and future decisions? Like by encouraging a UN peacekeeping force without participation from the US, Australia, Britain, New Zealand? I'm not really into blame. I like to be informed and make good decisions and encourage others to do the same. I'm not for throwing anyone in jail here. I'd just like the cycle of atrocities and exploitation to stop.

There's so much history that has led up to this and it is very hard to get any information on how arms are flowing, dollars are being spent, behind the scenes exchanges, etc. Some of us do our best to research what is going on, and admittedly the research is never perfect or unbiased. My bias is that western exploitation of third world nations for export crops and mineral/oil resources and/or drugs, and the deliberate provocation of politically explosive situations for the sake of increasing arms sales is intolerable. I wished that my country represented democracy and the values of freedom it claims to represent; it is clear that i can no longer naively cling to such a belief.

I encourage all of you to use your search engines and research this stuff for yourself, and to trust your faculties and connections in separating the reliable information from the crap. I also encourage you to share the information about what really is happening; I can promise you NBC, The New York Times, and CNN will not.

Patrick Herron

pete spence wrote:

> please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
> to:[redacted]
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
> thanks pete spence

>
> speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just > >as good
> >and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in > >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American > >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and > >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous > >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the
> >chaotic
> >and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential > >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the > >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
> >else
> >takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by > >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian > >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military > >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original > >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking > >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain > >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they > >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the > >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
> >
> >http://www.freetimor.com/
> >
> >http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
> >
> >http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
> >
> >http://www.etan.org/
> >
> >regards,
> >Patrick Herron
> >
> >
> >>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the > >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
> >better
> >usage of your time; [redacted]
> >
> >thanks pete spence

> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

195. Michael Neff
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

> | I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line
> | me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or
> | Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the
> | genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to
> | other large groups of people.
>
> do you mean like the use of napalm in Vietnam (or other weapons producing fire in Iraq, or Serbia) or are you thinking of a different more acceptable form of setting fire to people? do tell
>
> Lawrence Upton

I'm against the violence, Larry, so I don't know where you're coming from.

↑ Index

196. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Tue 14 Sep 1999

> Pete,
>
> Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of > accusation. I need to be clear.
>
> Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking > them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too>Mike

> i think the info was historik rather than pointing the bone!! america has been a little hypocritical though in its slow response in this situ!! so we decided to look at reasons maybe why. it should also be seen that Australia also has a muddied picture re its interests and of course many other countries. just that we need to use this medium to message people quickly on this type of matter//thanks for yr responder!!!//pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

197. pete spence

Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor

Tue 14 Sep 1999

>
>Mike, Pete, etc. - I suppose this line is perhaps my responsibility, so let >me explicate some basic notions here, as quickly as I can.
>>Did they get the machetes from America too?
>
>No, but the militias are there with US and Australian financial and >military >support. And it's not all machetes. I believe that your point about who >is >actually doing the killing is an excellent one, but sometimes people can >strongly shape an environment and give orders in exchange for something.
>If
>this were not the case then perhaps humans would have never known war.
>
. I also encourage you to share
>the
>information about what really is happening; I can promise you NBC, The New >York Times, and CNN will not.
>
>Patrick Herron
>

the australian input just adds to the suspicion here that everyone in the UN and other involved governments are acting as slow as they can all of them to punish the east timorese for voting the way they did...a lot of australians are absolutely frustrated at the "ready to go" has gotten longer to "go' whyche means more deaths etc i really find it all very ugly//pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

198. charssmith

Re: I can't believe it!!!

Tue 14 Sep 1999

In a message dated 9/14/1999 1:55:40 PM Pacific Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<< Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line. For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the militias. >>

US reporter Alan Nairn was detained by the Indonesian military yesterday & continues to give telephone interviews via satellite. He reports today that uniformed militia members are freely coming & going on the Indonesian military base in Dili where he's being held.

--cs

↑ Index

199. John Kimball

Village Eight

Tue 14 Sep 1999

---

http://www.TheEastVillage.com

Volume Eight:

Video

[Wendy Kramer; Alan Sondheim; Lyn Hejinian; Anselm Berrigan; Maggie Zurawski; John Wieners; C D Wright]

Poetry

[Lyn Hejinian; Anselm Berrigan; Maggie Zurawski; John Wieners; Alan Sondheim; Robert Berry; Laurie Price; Araki Yasusada; C D Wright; Brenda Iijima; Simon Shuchat; Daniel Nester; Lissa Wolsak; David Hess; Brendan Lorber; Eileen Myles]

Poetics

[Jena Osman; Bob Perelman; Maria Damon]

Art

[Simon Granger; Kenji Kojima; Paul Ryan; Carol Ganick; Cho Sang; Daisuke Nicoll; Brenda Iijima; Matthew Barney]

"I walk up the muggy street beginning to sun..."

Video files with audio-only options: Why? Video downloads take time (worth it); audio loads more quickly.

"...and I am sweating a lot by now and thinking..."

Well in the 'cyber' background -- not apparent to readers and viewers -- locations of the archives of this and previous volumes will be shifting / will be shifted, so please enter by the URL above. Thanks.

↑ Index

200. Aaron Fewell
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Tue 14 Sep 1999

In a message dated 9/14/99 10:48:47 AM Eastern Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<< Naked Lunch >>

I've tried to read Burrough's Naked Lunch because I'm such a fan of Kerouac and Ginsberb, but I found the text utterly cryptic. I never felt like I had a hold on what was being said and the reading of it was utterly painful, which proved very depressing to me.

Aaron Keith

↑ Index

201. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
[Fwd: Re: reading]
Tue 14 Sep 1999

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

> Celebratory Reading from OVERTIME: SELECTED POEMS BY PHILIP WHALEN (Penguin > Putnam, Inc.) with guest readers Amy Gerstler, Lewis MacAdams,John Thomas, Philomene Long, Michael Rothenberg, Todd Baron, Michael Price, Peter Levitt, > Phoebe MacAdams and Kevin Opstedal. Saturday, September 18, 7:30-9:30 PM at Beyond Baroque Literary Arts Center, 681 Venice Blvd. Venice, CA (one half mile west of Lincoln Blvd). $7 Admission. For more information call: 310/[redacted].

>
> Michael Rothenberg
> [redacted]
> http://www.bigbridge.org

by penguin.prod.itd.earthlink.net (8.9.3/8.9.3) with SMTP id JAA06817 for <[redacted]>; Tue, 14 Sep 1999 09:23:22 -0700 (PDT)
From: "Michael Rothenberg" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
References: <[redacted]> <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: reading
Date: Tue, 14 Sep 1999 09:21:21 -0400
charset="iso-8859-1"

Todd,

I've spoken with Dewey five times since he has been on vacation and he keeps saying he's doing something. It really grinds me. I have been at the hospital with Philip everyday almost for the last two weeks and trying to get this together, printed a program, contacted everyone, gonna drive to LA, renting hotel rooms and all this stuff and it does give me heartache. Of course, if you're having a baby, conratulations, that does not fall into the same category of things, and you can post me by e-mail, I'll bring my laptop with me. Below is the information. I thought I sent it to you. I've send press information to the magazines. Also, the announcement of the event has been on the Big Bridge home page for the last four months minus Philomene Long and John Thomas. Well, I guess I just go with it because it will do me no good to get anymore stressed or tired about it. Keep me posted on the good things going on for you this week. Best, MR Celebratory Reading from OVERTIME: SELECTED POEMS BY PHILIP WHALEN (Penguin Putnam, Inc.) with guest readers Amy Gerstler, Lewis MacAdams,John Thomas, Philomene Long, Michael Rothenberg, Todd Baron, Michael Price, Peter Levitt, Phoebe MacAdams and Kevin Opstedal. Saturday, September 18, 7:30-9:30 PM at Beyond Baroque Literary Arts Center, 681 Venice Blvd. Venice, CA (one half mile west of Lincoln Blvd). $7 Admission. For more information call: 310/[redacted].

Michael Rothenberg
[redacted]
http://www.bigbridge.org

----- Original Message -----
From: Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers <[redacted]>
To: Michael Rothenberg <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 1999 1:40 PM
Subject: reading

> dear M:
>
> I'm wondering what time the reading is. I've gotten no computer type e mail type hype hype! Sorry to say BB hasn't done a word of gettin it out--not even their new calendar--and so--I don't kow who'll be there--and what time is it? is it friday or saturday of this week?
>
> and--the last thing is that I believe I told you my wife I were expectin' a baby? Well, If we're in hospital--as this week is the due date--I will have to bow out. Having no local phone number or such for you--I will leave a mesage at b. b. if that happens.
>
> hope this all doesn't give you a heartache.
>
> Todd Baron

----------6E5A70524B6D--

↑ Index

202. Thomas Bell
Re: Novels of the 60's
Tue 14 Sep 1999

I remember _V_ - the first - as being much more important at the time - een though this dates me.

tom bell

"Pritchett,Patrick @Silverplume" wrote:
>
> Has no one mentioned Pynchon's _Crying of Lot 49_? Ah, for the vale of San > Narciso and the halycon tunes of The Paranoids.
>
> Patrick Pritchett

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

203. Katherine Lederer
Good time
Wed 15 Sep 1999

In town or in the mood....

It's an E X P L O S I V E M A G A Z I N E benefit event!

Starring:

K E N N E T H K O C H

E L E N I S I K E L I A N O S

M I C H A E L C O F F E Y

& T I M G R I F F I N

W E D N E S D A Y,
S E P T E M B E R 2 9 , 8:00 PM
311 Church Street, #4
New York, NY
(1.5 blocks So. of Canal)
1/9, ACE, 4/5/6
Call [redacted] with queries.
Donations admired

↑ Index

204. Robert Kendall
Re: hypertext suggestions
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Check out the Word Circuits Directory, which lists dozens of hypertext stories and poems, at http://www.wordcircuits.com/dir.

--Rob

Robert Kendall
E-Mail: [redacted]
Home Page: http://www.wordcircuits.com/kendall

Word Circuits (Hypertext/Cybertext Poetry and Fiction):
http://www.wordcircuits.com

On-Line Class in Hypertext Poetry and Fiction (The New School):
http://www.wordcircuits.com/kendall/htclass.htm

> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Dodie Bellamy
> Sent: Thursday, September 09, 1999 8:18 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: hypertext suggestions
>
> Hi, I have an independent study student who is going to do a hypertext horror piece. I have no problem helping her with the horror end of the project, but also want to suggest some good hypertext pieces and/or theories. I'm sending her the urls of a couple things that have caught my eye, but does anyone have any suggestions of some cut-above hypertext links? Or even books/articles on hypertext?
>
> Thanks.
>
> Dodie

↑ Index

205. david bromige
novels of the 60's
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Not _The Ginger Man_, Billy. I was reading that in 1957. db

↑ Index

206. Jeffrey Jullich
Cid Corman (more) -Reply
Wed 15 Sep 1999

You might want to try contacting Drue Heinz, or the Drue Heinz Foundation. She/they have funded the $10,000 Drue Heinz Literature Prize, the Academy of American Poets' recent first-time $5,000 McLaughlin Prize, the Drue Heinz Study Center for Drawings and Prints at the National Design Center, the Drue Heinz Lectures at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Lecture Series, the Royal Oak Foundation Lecture Series, the Drue heinz Chairman of the Department of Drawings and Prints at the Metropolitan and funding for raising the ceiling and arch of the Grand Staircase for the Metropolitan's 125th anniversary, $5,000 for the Committee to Protect Journalists' John S. and James L. Knight

Foundation matching Challenge Grant, the Frank Lloyd Wright exhibition at the Carnegie Museum of Art's (yes) Heinz Architectural Center, the Pierpont Morgan Library's Drue Heinz Book Conservatorship, Oxford's Drue Heinz Professorship of American Literature and are credited with donations to the Index on Censorship and Scholars Educational Trust, the Lincoln Center Theater Review, Tables of Content II at the Carnegie (table settings exhibition: "In The Formal Birthday Dinner, the centerpiece is a 16th-century French ~plateau~ (or tray), on which the hostess has arranged a chorus of gilt candle-makers and long-stemmed flowers. Meiseen figurines, representing the continents . . ."; see http://www.clpgh.org/cmag/bk_issue/1998/janfeb/feat8.htm),

>>> "Kimmelman, Burt" <[redacted]> 09/12/99 08:08pm >>>
I have just rec'd a letter from Cid Corman and his situation does indeed sound desperate - no money coming in except for charity or loans.

I am taking the liberty of reproducing a small part of the the letter:

"We live modestly and I prefer it so, but homelessness wont [sic] do the trick and there is that possibility - unless some real help occurs.

I don't like playing the beggar. I'm not good at it. But there is no choice."

Best way to get him money (it costs him $35.00 to cash a check) is to have your bank wire it to his bank:

Cid Corman (account name)
Account Number 095-0010328
Kyoto Shinyo Kinko Bank
Omuro Branch Omuro
Ukyo-ku Kyoto [redacted]
Japan
(bank tel: 075/[redacted]).

Burt Kimmelman

↑ Index

207. Ann Vickery
Trying to Trace Barbara Baracks
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Dear Poetics List,

I'm trying to trace Barbara Baracks who was active in the New York poetry scene in the late seventies. Would anyone have any information on where she might be now?

Thanks,

Ann Vickery

↑ Index

208. Elizabeth Treadwell
Novels of the Sixties
Wed 15 Sep 1999

1._Poor Cow_ by Nell Dunn. A novel about young working class gals in London in the 60s (pubbed then too , and also a BBC film I think). (2.) Also Nell Dunn's _Talking to Women_, interviews with "regular" and writer women of the 60s. Unknown poets, and Edna O'Brien. Very intriguing period piece. 3._In Watermelon Sugar_ by Richard Brautigan. 4. _Truck_ by Katharine Dunn. I think this was pubbed in 1970. FABULOUS girl road novel, total interiority/exteriority mix, pre-Geek Love.

Sounds like a nifty class!
Elizabeth

↑ Index

209. daniel bouchard
Re: believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

| And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South
| Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec?

"... while the East Timorese independence movement is commonly called 'separatist,' that makes as much sense as calling the French resistance to the Nazi occupation 'separatist')..."

listening?

See <http://www.zmag.org/CrisesCurEvts/Timor/qanda.htm>
for details.

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

210. Steven Clay

Robert Creeley & Elsa Dorfman: En Famille

Wed 15 Sep 1999

<fontfamily><param>Geneva</param>Granary Books announces the publication of

En Famille

A Poem by Robert Creeley with Photographs by Elsa Dorfman

[Special offer to the Poetics List follows description.]

[The entire book is posted on our website: www.granarybooks.com]

In En Famille, Granary Books presents a collaboration between Robert Creeley and Elsa Dorfman that is honest and lucid, with an awareness and irony that, according to William Corbett, will "ensnare the reader." In twenty-two frank, color photographs, Dorfman presents various kinds of family configurations and generations. The sitters are unglamorized, yet a sense of comfort accompanies their awkwardness. "Dorfman's portraits," writes Corbett, project a clothed nakedness, the blunt familiar fact of physical presence. She does this by a contrivance so simple as to be beyond words." Creeley's poem, too, addresses the tensions of family life, of nurturing and vulnerability, of coming and going. His compelling questions and "homespun lines are as simple as William Blake's Songs of Innocence and Experience" (Corbett).

"Robert Creeley and Elsa Dorfman bring us the real news of the different ways the word 'family' has been made to leap beyond its lexical meanings. Poet and photographer register how family is being re-envisioned by those who live as individuals within a 'securing center.' Beginning with, and subverting, 'I wandered lonely as a cloud,' William Wordsworth's quintessential Romantic image of the self, Creeley writes a poem whose formal structure, its interlocking, echoing pattern of rhymed quatrains, challenges our assumptions about the legacy of Romantic and Modernist poetry. It is not that their legacy or the family should endure in some rigid manner; it's that they have changed and are changing still." -John Yau, poet & critic, author of Active Participant: Robert Creeley and the Visual Arts

Dorfman and Creeley have known one another since the 1960s; En Famille is their second collaboration. Their first, His Idea, was published by Coach House Press in 1975. Dorfman's photographs of Creeley also appear on several of the poet's books, including the University of California's The Collected Poems of Robert Creeley.

Designed by Philip Gallo at The Hermetic Press.

8 1/4" X 6 1/4"; 80 pp; 22 color images, hardback.

ISBN 1-887123-26-1 $19.95

Available at better bookstores, SPD ([redacted]), D.A.P. (1-800-338-BOOK), or direct from the publisher ([redacted]).

Special offer to the Poetics List:

Till Sept 24 En Famille is available at half-price plus $2 shipping (flat rate, surface, anywhere). Send $12 (NY State residents send $12.83) check or cash to Granary Books 568 Broadway NY NY 10012</fontfamily>

↑ Index

211. Brian Stefans
Review
Wed 15 Sep 1999

--0__=DtKojwzlITCvL37OVrs6o827o0EqzpIOwZyO1NHIDuxH2GLGOrvQc5N6

Ok, I'm probably going to be taken to task for this, but here's a little review I wrote a while ago which isn't going to be published (tho here it is!). It may seem knee-jerky to some, sloppily termed or patronizing to others, but perhaps there's some matter here worth discussing? Or if not, not.

***

Carla Harryman
The Words, After Carl Sandburg's The Rutabaga Stories and Jean-Paul Sartre
O Books

The Words is a radical, perhaps even
--0__=DtKojwzlITCvL37OVrs6o827o0EqzpIOwZyO1NHIDuxH2GLGOrvQc5N6

“bold” deconstruction of the novel or memoir forms, but as opposed to the nouveau roman of Wittig and Robbe-Grillet, it is scattershot in its targets, and doesn’t appear to point to any secure set of objects or themes. Moments of lucidity are interspersed with wrench-in-the-machinery doggerel that makes reading the book a task -- an intellectually challenging one perhaps, but occasionally disheartening as the form is so clearly indebted to Modernist models that, more than a century old, seem to have outlived their usefulness (as models, that is). Somewhere between a Rimbaud declaiming against the snoring Verlaine and Lautreamont swimming with the sharks, Harryman screams the birth of a new feminine consciousness, one that, indeed, goes a long way in subverting the previous century's conception of female passivity: “After childhood, for many days running I studied people's asses with the slowness of one who has discovered the crucial element in a universal tragedy. I slept too long. I could reach over in bed and feel European history, its density, course through the bloodstream of my adolescent mate. While he slept and breathed equations of collective effort and heroic self-sacrifice, I spread myself across the bed and concentrated on this recurring fantasy: a particle of fog burnt off at midday by the north coast sun." [12] Though Harryman is considered part of the Language generation of writing, it appears that she develops a line quite directly from English Futurist-inflected writers like Mina Loy and Wyndham Lewis -- both staunch critics of any sort of democratic humanism -- and like them shares a penchant for larger-than-life mythological, or Zarathustrean, figures -- though, post-structuralist as she is, her "mail order allegories" [p. 72] are provisional at best. The protagonist -- more a motif -- in The Words is a figure named "Woemess," which seems a pun on the word "woman" and menstrual imagery (or perhaps the aborted fetus, tying her sense of subjectivity in with that of Baudelaire's in "Benediction," in which his mother asked to give birth to a brood of vapors rather than to a poet). She fades in and out of the narrative like a figure in a house of mirrors -- "Woemess baked in the sad plains. She was as unreal as a discovery made elsewhere" starts one chapter -- but occasionally is given to excitable, oracular outbursts: "Woemess put the hat on her head and continued her speech as if she had played all the parts, 'In the recess of the cryptic world, where my arm sings to transcendental wampum, there are emergency vocabularies waiting in the wings to take over when we are failed by categories. If I wanted to, right now, I could paint the picture of the picture, show you the cryptic world, the song, and the wampum. Or a dreary series of irregular rectangles, a repetitious dirge, and money. But if I take you there, we will be gone." [57] There is much philosophical terminology in here, as well as many plays towards fable-like forms and Steinian word-centered writing, but the most salient feature seems to be that of the a new voice of feminine power, albeit one centered around opacity, or moments of overwhelming presence, than master narrative: "Femininity can't be narrated. A theory develops that only what can be ignored can be narrated. Cactus, can it be ignored?" [52] However, though the general texture of the writing is brisk, at times it is repetitive and uncontrolled, and the content, ironically, fails because it is not self-centered enough -- it's the recreation of the struggles of the ego confined more than the hapless, charismatic traces of its enactment. In this way it comes off as a bit academic, artsy, and not philosophical in that unmediated Nietzschean sense that it aspires to -- it doesn't seem to relate to the world. Nonetheless, The Words is a pretty good read, and possibly an interesting anthem for feminism.

--0__=DtKojwzlITCvL37OVrs6o827o0EqzpIOwZyO1NHIDuxH2GLGOrvQc5N6--

↑ Index

212. Brian Stefans
Review
Wed 15 Sep 1999

--0__=pnhhqL1dQ7fMvnjWze4ffc6uxbju2V1gEa79cuxb2cbpa9YN1QAF6rlv

Here's another one from the U: drive, for no particular reason.

***

Bop Perelman
Ten to One, Selected Poems
Wesleyan University Press

Perelman has distinguished himself from his Language peers by moving recently into academic respectability, publishing two books of criticism, the second of which, The Marginalizaton of Poetry, was about the Language movement itself. Temperamentally more congenial than poets such as Bruce Andrews, Lyn Hejinian and Barrett Watten, who have often opted for theoretic density or outright opacity in both poetry and prose, Perelman is considered by many the most accessible or even --0__=pnhhqL1dQ7fMvnjWze4ffc6uxb-ju2V1gEa79cuxb2cbpa9YN1QAF6rlv

“lyrical” Language poet, but one can also say he is the most rational, as his poetry sacrifices common aspects of aesthetic affect -- such as the angst-ridden dialectic between personal expression and the integrity of form -- for a sort of plain-spoken irony in a tradition that can be traced back to the Enlightenment, or which can be linked to more recent concerns with “entropy” (form dissolved into linked gestures). An early poem such as “An Autobiography” is a play on the type of minimal French novelette, and Perelman is quite apt at satirizing the more indulgent, but perhaps also un-American, aspects of this genre, such as the disclosure of repressed sensibility amidst the drama of religious confession: “I wanted to cover my mother with kisses, and for her to have no clothes on. It was quite usual to feel one side of the face getting sunburned, while the other was being frozen. A journey of this kind is no joke. [...] I always wanted to give them to her on her bosom. Be so good as to remember that I lost her, in childbed, when I was barely seven.” Of his “father,” he writes, with metaphysical, Catholic overtones (murder striking at the heart): “I abhorred my father. He brought with him memories of how it feels to be intensely, fiercely hungry. He came and interrupted our kisses.” [p. 2] Oddly, Perelman’s poetry is atypical of Language writing in that it's distrust in the referent is disclosed discursively rather than by example; that is, more like a Barthes than a Bernstein, he appears less concerned with "liberating" language such as to foreground its “presence” than with explaining, casually, perhaps reductively, the links between syntax and ontology: “No place exists even once. Even before / Birth, earlier made up syntax / Could tell you apart / From a thing or two, nothing waiting / In the wind, spiritual placebo plus / The actual problem of dying.” [“Statement," p. 53] However, like Bernstein, he can be deathly funny, and uses bathos quite well, as in the poem "Oedipus Rex,” which could have been out of Mel Brooke’s History of the World Part I: “What news, ancient uncle, from the transcendental desktop? / KREON: The people, hemmed in by liberal playgrounds / and rightwing communications systems, are dead / or dying. No one’s complaining, mind you, but with the inauguration just hours away the sky seems to be crumbling, and the decibel level in some stadiums is below that of Mallarme’s tomb. / God thought you should know.” [p. 70] Included in the volume is the poem made famous by Frederic Jameson, “China” -- a series of fake captions to news photographs from China, presented alone as a "schizophrenic" but evocative poem -- which in hindsight is witty still, but nonetheless a toned down, less masterful version of a poem from Ashbery’s The Tennis Court Oath. Indeed, Perelman can be faulted for not always achieving aesthetic effects in his poems, as many of them -- including the 6-word-to-a-line poems which intend, conceptually, to flirt with the aleatory, and to counter any "false" notions of the idealism of form -- are rhythmically unvaried or unexciting, or at least lack the sort of decisions that, when made well, inspires the reader’s interest in the meter, sound patterning and images, and by extension the content. The poems work well as “assays” into topical issues -- Chomsky would be happy with such poetry, as it offers no delusions yet shows the connections, like a domesticated Ginsberg -- and welcome open dialogue with its contents (its authority is pedagogically inclined), but one asks: “Is it art?” Perelman, with a nod to Duchamp's subversions of the retina, would delight in the question.

--0__=pnhhqL1dQ7fMvnjWze4ffc6uxbju2V1gEa79cuxb2cbpa9YN1QAF6rlv--

↑ Index

213. Arielle C. Greenberg readings at Syracuse, fall 1999
Wed 15 Sep 1999

We have some very interesting writers coming to read at Syracuse University this fall as part of the Raymond Carver Living Writers series. All readings are at 5:45 PM, proceeded by a Q&A with undergrads who are in the Living Writers class and followed by private dinners out with the writer and Syracuse MFA students. If people are interested in making the (schleppy) trip, I'd be happy to play hostess or at least meet up.

In Grant Auditorium in the Law Building at Syracuse University.

Tonight: Malena Morling, poet, author of Ocean Avenue (New Issues)

9/29 -- Diane Williams, fiction writer, author of Excitability (Dalkey?)

10/13 -- poet Kimiko Hahn

11/3 -- Edwidge Danticat, novelist

11/17 -- William Gass (!!)

12/8 -- our very own Brooks Haxton, who has a book of Greek translations coming out C'est tout.

Arielle

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe." -- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

214. Christina Milletti
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Follow the money. SE Asian Royal Dutch Shell (aka Indonesia), The Lippo Bank, the Asian Tiger money market funds, all stand to lose big in any protracted instability.

Given this, is the US administration's reaction a surprise?

↑ Index

215. Christina Milletti
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Wed 15 Sep 1999

In a message dated 9/15/99 9:06:20 PM !!!First Boot!!!, [redacted] writes:

<< I don't believe that either Patrick, I just think your explanations are formula in some respects and inadequate to explain the condition of group killing psychosis. >>

Why must it be reduced to group psychosis? The murdering gangs are paid. They don't kill, they don't eat. Talk about Occam's razor.

↑ Index

216. Taylor Brady
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

You wrote:

Now, wait a minute. Let's reality check.

What we're talking about is a relatively unsophisticated third world military apparatus (not a crack group like Hitler's SS divisions, Iraq's Guards--an outgrowth of the Ten Thousand Immortals; or US Seals, etc.) and some machete wielding, body gutting thugs of a paramilitary nature common under many conditions, who are in unison attacking a virtually defenseless populace.

Is that not so? Are they facing a line of troops who are harrying their flanks, threatening their lines, an army or resisting force which makes "simply could not have pursued" without US/Japan/etc help and a priori statement?
--- ---

Despite your will to believe otherwise, the fact remains that without the $1.1 billion dollars of direct U.S. weapons sales to Indonesia since 1975, without the U.S. continually blocking the implementation of U.N. resolutions against Indonesia's occupation, and particularly without the doubling of the military aid budget which was the tangible product of Kissinger's house-call, the invasion never would have happened in the first place. To leap from this to one of Stephen Ellis' questions, my guess is that the "interested parties" - i.e., those who stood to gain - included the usual roster of arms manufacturers, but also and in a more scalar sense the same oil and mineral corporations currently propping up the occupation of Irian Jaya. I'm looking into this and will hopefully get back to the list with names in a day or two...

Back, for the moment and for the last time, to the denials: The mass-mediated attempt to portray the current crisis as simply a matter of gangs of thugs running amok is precisely an attempt to let those larger interests off the hook. As I wrote before, the link between the militias and the Indonesian armed forces has been amply demonstrated. Beyond this, the more visibly brutal attacks by the militias are being used as an excuse in most of the corporate media outlets for not attending to the larger-scale "operations" being carried out by the armed forces themselves - forced relocation of thousands of Timorese to camps in West Timor at the moment, not to mention the hundreds of thousands killed during the occupation. Murder and political violence against an entire society on that scale simply didn't happen through the disorganized rioting of "some machete wielding, body gutting thugs" - and it's here that the U.S. emerges as most fully complicit in its role as bankroller (shored up the military budget, helped guarantee World Bank and IMF monies, etc.), drill sergeant (trained the military, especially the upper echelons - there are your "operatives in the field"), and international spin doctor (kept the rest of the UN at bay). And while Habibie has expressed his acquiescence to UN intervention, General Wiranto is on record as refusing to leave the armed forces' "brothers in arms" (i.e., the militias) alone in East Timor - and this, despite the lack of any organized armed resistance.

But enough. To reiterate Kali Tal's point: other posts have provided the information and the citations necessary to "make the link." That you choose to disregard them, or deliberately misread them, is lamentable, but there's nothing to be done about that. Nor would I have it any other way. I leave you to your inalienable right to remain aloof, and to the sanctity of your belief in the mystical spontaneity of political violence. Because I've seen flame wars in this space before, and because, questions of etiquette aside, I doubt whether they have any political efficacy beyond the self-congratulatory, I will henceforth restrict my involvement in this thread to posting the aforementioned link(s) and name(s).

Taylor Brady

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Neff
Sent: Tuesday, September 14, 1999 4:45 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

I don't doubt what you are saying about Kissinger, policies, support, yadda yadda.

This isn't my point. We're off track. My comments were directed to this statement by Peter Spence: "It may also be just as good and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese."

The words "ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression" makes me think that like Nazis in the Ukraine, we are there with a policy which places active operatives in the field who are promoting and directing hacking gangs, resident psychos, and Indonesian army units to slaughters, rapine, burnings, church massacres, etc. etc.
etc.

US doesn't have to grant imprimatur to any dictator to begin slaughter, forced relocations, tortures, etc. This kind of thing happens all the time and is happening in other places and climes without imprimaturs. The dictator, the state is imprimatur in of itself and always has been, an arrogance which breeds intolerance at best and secret police mechanisms at worst. Such bodies and culture require no Madeline Albright, Kissinger, Ford, or whoever to lend them authority to oppress.

But here is a statement I wish to challenge:

"... a direct outgrowth of deliberate policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and un-sustainable without that aid."

Now, wait a minute. Let's reality check.

What we're talking about is a relatively unsophisticated third world military apparatus (not a crack group like Hitler's SS divisions, Iraq's Guards--an outgrowth of the Ten Thousand Immortals; or US Seals, etc.) and some machete wielding, body gutting thugs of a paramilitary nature common under many conditions, who are in unison attacking a virtually defenseless populace.

Is that not so? Are they facing a line of troops who are harrying their flanks, threatening their lines, an army or resisting force which makes "simply could not have pursued" without US/Japan/etc help and a priori statement?

It looks to me like forced takeover requires only a savage will to see it through, not smart bombs. It's happened many times before, and will again.

Taylor Brady wrote:

> A few points:
>
> 1) Kissinger's "visit" was considerably more instrumental than the
> "chat-and-tea" image might otherwise conjure one to believe. It was rather,
> the U.S. State Department's imprimatur and guarantee of military assistance > to a regime embarked on a series of "policy initiatives" which included, > most notably, a) the slaughter and forced relocation of much of its own > peasantry, labor leaders and movement members, intellectuals, etc., in the > name of a defense against communism; and b) the invasion and annexation of > Timor, resulting in a brutal occupation which left nearly a quarter of a > million dead. This, while the U.S. (among others - recently, the role of > Japan and Australia would also bear some scrutiny) continued (and continues, > notwithstanding Clinton's half-assed "retraction of assistance") to provide

> the proverbial "military, technical and economic aid" to the Indonesian > regime. This isn't a matter of having bought arms years ago, but one of > receiving - until this week, and that only if Clinton's retraction is to > taken at face value - ongoing direct support from the U.S. and other > armaments-producing nations. Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic > industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary > training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under > recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian > military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line.
> For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it > substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica > Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the > militias. But other sources are many and well-documented. If you have web > access, you might take a look at the East Timor Action Network's web site:
> www.etan.org
> 2) The above would seem to have some bearing on your assertion that East > Timor is attempting to "secede" from a legitimate national government - > which is simply not the case. East Timor, as an Indonesian territory, is
the > result of a forcible annexation sponsored by U.S. and other interests.
Many > of the key figures in the initial "sponsorship" remain in positions of power > today. In other words, this is about as far from a quixotic attempt to > rectify a distant and tragic "other-people's" history as you can get.
> 3) You ask: "We turned the other way on Savac we see now (sp?) in Iran, > though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the > same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the > murdering we see now?" Yes. Absolutely. As I've pointed out, this isn't > simply a case of turning the other way, but a direct outgrowth of deliberate > policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and > other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at > which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of > direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that > the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of > aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that,

in > other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and > unsustainable without that aid. Until very recently, a cut-off of such > support might have sufficed to avert the campaign of terror now being > pursued. There is no "genocidal gene" - and such pseudo-explanations > ("they're just nuts _over there_, who can understand their motivations?"), > I'd warrant, most often mark the site of a real and determinate chain of > events, the complicity of one's own nation in which is precisely what the > resort to racialized typologies attempts to obscure.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Michael Neff
> Sent: Monday, September 13, 1999 10:15 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
> Pete,
>
> Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this > line of > accusation. I need to be clear.
>
> Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the > Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches,
> hacking
> them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if > their > govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful?
This
> sounds naive to the point of absurdity.
>
> I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest > going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then
> the > slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it

for > me? I don't see it from what you are saying.
>
> Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those > who > believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck
> their > barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.
>
> And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support
South > Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send > overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the > diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac > (sp?) in > Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do
> the > same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the > murdering
> we see now?
>
> I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time > line
> me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or > Moynihan or
> Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the > genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires
to
> other large groups of people.
>
> Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.
>
> Mike
>
> pete spence wrote:
>
> > please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
> > to:[redacted]
> > [redacted]
> > [redacted]

> > thanks pete spence
> >
> > speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just > > >as good
> > >and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role
> in
> > >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American > > >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion,
and
> > >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous
> > >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the
> > >chaotic
> > >and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential > > >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the > > >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
> > >else > > >takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit
by
> > >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian > > >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military > > >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original > > >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking > > >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers.
Certain > > >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think > they > > >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of
> the
> > >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
> > >
> > >http://www.freetimor.com/
> > >
> > >http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
> > >
> > >http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
> > >
> > >http://www.etan.org/
> > >
> > >regards,
> > >Patrick Herron
> > >

> > >
> > >>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the > > >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
> > >better
> > >usage of your time; [redacted]
> > >
> > >thanks pete spence
> > >
> > >_____
> > >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
> > >
> > >_____
> > >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
> >
> > _____
> > Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> --
>
> ==========
> Web Del Sol
> http://webdelsol.com
> LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

217. Rachel Loden
Re: hypertext suggestions
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> but does anyone have any > suggestions of some cut-above hypertext links?

My favorite cyberpoem is Stephanie Strickland's "Ballad of Sand and Harry Soot":

http://wordcircuits.com/gallery/sandsoot/

If you've been underwhelmed by other mixtures of image and text, check out this "ballad tale of love gone wrong between the enigmatic Sand, she of silicon-based liveliness, and Soot, a man of carbon, biochemical man, man of flesh and mood, a person."

Rachel

↑ Index

218. KENT JOHNSON
Will the sun rise tomorrow?
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Michael Neff asks a fascinating question about the horrific violence in East Timor: Couldn't it have happened anyway, even (yes, alas) without CIA engineering of the 1965 coup against Sukarno, the ensuing massacre in a year's time of around 3/4 of a million people, the ongoing US-coddling of the IMF-loving Indonesian generals, and the green light of silence from the West as that Western-trained and supplied military invaded and scorched East Timor? It might _seem_ as if we've been complicit in creating certain violence-enabling conditions on a macro scale, but how can we _really_ be sure? As Neff puts it, lots of people are getting killed by natively-made machetes, so how can we _really_ know this current explosion of violence wouldn't have happened sans our assistance anyway?

He's right, of course. As Hume asked, How can we be sure that the sun will rise tomorrow?

Or as Wittgenstein asked, more or less, How can I be sure that that man is truly in pain?

We can't! There is simply no certain relationship between our observation of the world and its "empirical" manifestations, no matter how stubborn the evidences may seem.

So if we can't be sure about the sun, or about human pain, even, how can we be sure about something like the consequences of imperialist policy in Indonesia, especially when people like to kill each other with rocks anyway?!

Life is a puzzle, and I agree with Mr. Neff. Now I'm going to read about American poetry at Web del Sol.

↑ Index

219. Maria Damon

Poetry As Cultural Critique Symposium, Nov. 5 & 6

Wed 15 Sep 1999

ANNOUNCEMENT: POETRY AS CULTURAL CRITIQUE -

Symposium: Poetry as Cultural Critique
November 5-6, 1999
University of Minnesota, Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics, & Borders Bookstore (Uptown)
co-directors, Maria Damon and Mark Nowak

Friday, November 5th:

1:30pm, Introductory Remarks by Maria Damon

2:00-3:00pm, Opening Talk
Tim Brennan, "The Obscure Reveries of the Inward Gaze"

3:15-4:45pm, Opening Roundtable on "Poetry as Cultural Critique"
Panelists: Harryette Mullen, Tim Brennan, C.S. Giscombe
Moderator: Maria Damon

7:30pm, Reading at Border's Uptown
Introductions, Mark Nowak
Readers: Roy Miki, Harryette Mullen

Saturday, November 6th

10:00am-11:30am, Talks
Juliana Spahr, "I'm Dracula": Bruce Andrews's "Confidence Trick"
Harryette Mullen, "Incessant Elusives: The Oppositional Poetry of Will Alexander and Erica Hunt"

1:00pm-2:30pm, Talks
Roy Miki, "Unravelling Roy Kiyooka: A Re-assessment Amidst Shifting Boundaries"
C. S. Giscombe, "ReCrossing the Prairie State"

3:00pm-4:30pm, Roundtable on "Journals: The Poetics and Politics of Editorship"
Panelists: Juliana Spahr, Roy Miki, Mark Nowak
Moderator: Eric Lorberer (Rain Taxi Review of Books)

7:30pm, Reading at Border's Uptown
Introductions, Mark Nowak
Readers: Tim Brennan, Juliana Spahr, C.S. Giscombe

Juliana Spahr teaches at the University of Hawai'i, Manoa. _Response_ was published in 1996 by Sun and Moon Press. Spiderwasp or Literary Criticism was published this year by Explosive Books. She has a critical book, Everybody's Autonomy, forthcoming from U of Alabama P next year. (RESPONSE would be best book of Juliana's to have on hand.)

Tim Brennan teaches is a Prof. at the University of Minnesota. Books: 1. _Salman Rushdie and the Third World: Myths of the Nation_ (Macmillan, 1989). 2. _At Home in the World: Cosmopolitanism Now_ (Harvard, 1997). 3. Forthcoming, _Music in Cuba_ (U. of Minnesota, 2000). (either of the first two books are fine by Tim)

C.S. Giscombe is an English professor at the Pennyslvania State University. My recent poetry books are _Here_ (1994), _Giscome Road_ (1998), & _Two Sections from Practical Geography_ (1999); my prose book of linked essays about travel, race, & family, _Into & Out of Dislocation_ , will be published in March 2000. _Here_ and _Giscome Road_ were both published by Dalkey Archive Press (Fairchild Hall, Illinois State University, Normal, IL 61790); the _Giscome Road_ book is, apparently, out of print but may be available again by November. The _Two Sections from Practical Geography_ chapbook was published by Diaeresis Chapbooks (c/o Mark Scroggins, 401 NE 45th St., Boca Raton FL 33431.) _Into & Out of Dislocation_ will be published by North Point Press/ Farrar, Straus & Giroux. (HERE or GISCOME ROAD, if you can get it)

Harryette Mullen teaches African-American literature and creative writing at UCLA. She is the author of four poetry books, including Tree Tall Woman (Energy Earth Communications, 1981), Trimmings (Tender Buttons Books, 1991), S*PeRMK*T (Singing Horse Press, 1992), and Muse & Drudge (Singing Horse Press, 1995).

Roy Miki teaches contemporary literature in the English Department at Simon Fraser University. He is known in the Canadian literary community as a writer, poet, cultural activist, and for his editorial work on the literary journal West Coast Line (1990-1999). His publications include studies of William Carlos Williams and George Bowering, as well as Justice in Our Time: The Japanese Canadian Redress Settlement (co-authored with Cassandra Kobayashi; Talonbooks), a documentary history of the Japanese Canadian redress movement, and two collections of poems, Saving Face (Turnstone) and Random Access File (Red Deer College Press). He is also the editor of Pacific Windows: Collected Poems of Roy K. Kiyooka (Talonbooks), which received the 1997 poetry award from the Association for Asian American Studies. His latest publication is a collection of essays, Broken Entries: Race Subjectivity Writing (The Mercury Press, 1998).

SYMPOSIUM SPONSORED BY XCP: CROSS-CULTURAL POETICS, THE UMN ENGLISH DEPARTMENT, CREATIVE WRITING PROGRAM, CLA, BORDERS BOOKS AND MOST OF ALL THE MCKNIGHT ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS AND HUMANITIES

↑ Index

220. Joan Houlihan
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Taylor,

Of all the responses to Mike Neff's e-mail, yours seem to be the best examples of a logic constructed partly on the idea that because events occur together in time, the events are somehow linked causally, and partly on the idea that events which you do not personally witness, or have any special knowledge of, are nonetheless events that you can interpret not only correctly, but also "righteously"--that is, you are able to divine the motivations and moral construction of all those involved, from the beginning of the forced annexation of East Timor to its bloody fight for independence.

It's quite amazing to me, a liberal, to see the kind of reaction generated by a clearly written, well-reasoned message (Neff's). What has created this firestorm? Simply the suggestion that the US government (and whatever else we conceive that entity to be,it is still a collection of people with limitations) may not be wholly responsible for what's happening in East Timor. I don't see that Mike Neff was disputing any historical facts, or events leading up to what's happening there--only that he was questioning the idea that these successive events had to be linked to either a kind of evil intentionality, or an immoral turning away by the US government. He was instead, and rightly I think, proposing the idea that deeper, and even random, forces are also at work in these situations--not only, but also. That we need to consider the constant recurrence of group hatreds, killings, the human prediliciton for wiping each other out. Nowhere was he suggesting that arms were not sold, that US interests were not pursued, or that the US often gets behind what turn out to be (or always were) rotten leaders/causes--sometimes in the interest of avoiding worse leaders/causes, or more likely, for simple economic or ideologic reasons.

Now that I've seen what comes back from this "radical" idea that the US government may not be the God we can blame, I'm astonished not only by the list's intolerance, but also by the realization that so many liberals have given up their ability to analyze and respond to a clear idea objectively, for the more comfortable idea that there's always clearly someone to blame--if not God, then the government.

Joan

> From: Taylor Brady <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
> Date: Tue, 14 Sep 1999 09:53:14 -0700
>
> A few points:
>
> 1) Kissinger's "visit" was considerably more instrumental than the "chat-and-tea" image might otherwise conjure one to believe. It was rather, the U.S. State Department's imprimatur and guarantee of military assistance to a regime embarked on a series of "policy initiatives" which included, most notably, a) the slaughter and forced relocation of much of its own peasantry, labor leaders and movement members, intellectuals, etc., in the name of a defense against communism; and b) the invasion and annexation of Timor, resulting in a brutal occupation which left nearly a quarter of a million dead. This, while the U.S. (among others - recently, the role of Japan and Australia would also bear some scrutiny) continued (and continues, > notwithstanding Clinton's half-assed "retraction of assistance") to provide the proverbial "military, technical and economic aid" to the Indonesian regime. This isn't a matter of having bought arms years ago, but one of receiving - until this week, and that only if Clinton's retraction is to taken at face value - ongoing direct support from the U.S. and other armaments-producing nations. Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line.
> For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the militias. But other sources are many and well-documented. If you have web access, you might take a look at the East Timor Action Network's web site: www.etan.org
> 2) The above would seem to have some bearing on your assertion that East Timor is attempting to "secede" from a legitimate national government - which is simply not the case. East Timor, as an Indonesian territory, is the > result of a forcible annexation sponsored by U.S. and other interests. Many of the key figures in the initial "sponsorship" remain in positions of power > today. In other words, this is about as far from a quixotic attempt to rectify a distant and tragic "other-people's" history as you can get.
> 3) You ask: "We turned the other way on Savac we see now (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?" Yes. Absolutely. As I've pointed out, this isn't simply a case of turning the other way, but a direct outgrowth of deliberate policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and unsustainable without that aid. Until very recently, a cut-off of such support might have sufficed to avert the campaign of terror now being pursued. There is no "genocidal gene" - and such pseudo-explanations ("they're just nuts _over there_, who can understand their motivations?"), I'd warrant, most often mark the site of a real and determinate chain of events, the complicity of one's own nation in which is precisely what the resort to racialized typologies attempts to obscure.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Neff
Sent: Monday, September 13, 1999 10:15 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Pete,

Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of accusation. I need to be clear.

Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me? I don't see it from what you are saying.

Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.

And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering
we see now?

I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line
me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to
other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

Mike

pete spence wrote:

please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
to:[redacted]
thanks pete spence

speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just as good and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American

Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the chaotic and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone else takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.

http://www.freetimor.com/

http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html

http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/

http://www.etan.org/

regards,
Patrick Herron

so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a better
usage of your time; [redacted]

thanks pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> --
>
> ==========
> Web Del Sol
> http://webdelsol.com
> LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

221. A H Bramhall
I'm With Stupid
Wed 15 Sep 1999

everything should be interesting, I totally agree. in the light of that, I'm wondering -- innocently, mind you - what with the air so filled with baloney (say bologna and you're a phongna) crying to be heard -- I use the term 'baloney' with a verifiably sweet expression on my face, by the way -- if there is a particular thing that poets do when NOT writing their ineffable freedoms. you know, to keep the tractor in working fettle. do they let sail away their language for the more effable diurnal this and that, or do they -- how should I say it?-- breathe the damn poetical elemental all the freaking time? what is the life of a poet and how does it, that life, work in this treasured ignorant world? I'm a dullard from way back but it could be, correct me if I'm wrong, that I've hit on a philosophical question here. those are toughies ALWAYS, but gee, it seems like we ought to evaluate the monster we're making constantly, and not just in our powerful creative moments when we share Emily Dickinson's blistering (and unveering) sense of course thru the forest. such evaluation seems simply the dutiful thing, BUT I COULD BE WRONG. I, a lowly rock in a world of mountains, just wonder if the comprehensive intensity remains intact, or does it get to slack off when no one from Parnassus is there to cheer? I've never said a truth in my life, so I'm talking need to know here. are we stuck with our language or is it stuck with us, and all our caprices? what's the 4-1-1 on community standards? I'm hot to know. I've got lots to learn.

↑ Index

222. Catherine Daly
Re: Trying to Trace Barbara Baracks
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Ann Vickery wrote:
>
> Dear Poetics List,
>
> I'm trying to trace Barbara Baracks who was active in the New York poetry > scene in the late seventies. Would anyone have any information on where > she might be now?
>
> Thanks,
>
> Ann Vickery

She worked with me at Bankers Trust for several years; she left her position there over a year ago; her address in the Poets & Writers address book is 427 15th Street, #4B, Brooklyn, NY 11215; this is a good address as of... over a year ago.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

223. Billy Little
Re: novels of the 60's
Wed 15 Sep 1999

---

lady chatterley's lover
henry miller
 ullysses
 lolita
and i thought ginger man
were forbidden in the states until maybe the howl trial or was that in 57 too?
Didn't the 60's start in 55? and end with the murder of john lennon?was that 79?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

224. Dodie Bellamy
Re: hypertext suggestions
Wed 15 Sep 1999

At 11:14 PM -0700 9/14/99, Robert Kendall wrote:
>Check out the Word Circuits Directory, which lists dozens of hypertext stories >and poems, at http://www.wordcircuits.com/dir.
>
>--Rob

Thanks, Rob, and all the rest of you who so thoughtfully replied to me. I've forwarded all your suggestions to Rachel.

Dodie

↑ Index

225. Christopher Reiner
L.A. Reading
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Sunday at Cafe Balcony...the first reading of our new season:

Avery E. D. Burns
Joseph Noble

Starts at 4 p.m. Address and other info are at http://www.litpress.com

Avery E. D. Burns's book Stagger is out on the web site Black Fire White Fire (http://home.earthlink.net/~kunos/). Poems from "A Duelling Primer" have appeared in Chain, Idiom and Proliferation. Other work has been in Angle, Rhizome, and Windhover. A book "The Idler Wheel" is forthcoming on Sink Press, and, poems from this work will be in the next issues of Instress, Ribot, and Syllogism. Avery has edited the magazine lyric& since 1992, and has run the Canessa Park reading series in San Francisco for the past 3 years.

Joseph Noble has had creative and critical work published in Hambone, lyric&, Talisman, Antenym, and TO. He has poetry appearing in upcoming issues of Melodeon and Vapor/Strains. He is currently working on a new series, "an ives set," which engages with the music and ideas of Charles Ives. The third section, which is still in progress and is called "Improvisations," riffs off several of Ives' pieces. Joseph Noble is also writing two collaborative poem series, one each with the poets Avery Burns and Eric Selland.

↑ Index

226. Michael Neff
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Wed 15 Sep 1999

Christina Milletti wrote:

> In a message dated 9/15/99 9:06:20 PM !!!First Boot!!!, [redacted] writes:
>
> << I don't believe that either Patrick, I just think your explanations are formula > in some respects and inadequate to explain the condition of group killing
> psychosis. >>
>
> Why must it be reduced to group psychosis? The murdering gangs are paid. They don't kill, they don't eat. Talk about Occam's razor.

Why? Why indeed? I should have realized there must be a considerable sense of job well done when they have earned their pay. I'm certain they would never stoop to disemboweling unless paid to do so! This is all absorbing to me. Since you are keenly aware of the mechanisms in place, no doubt having first hand knowledge, I suppose you can reveal whether they are paid by the hour or by the body or head?

If they are working for the NSA they deserve a retirement package.

Course, if they're rampaging as humans are inclined to do from time to time, then how can it be the fault of US? It therefore stands to reason they must be paid.

↑ Index

227. Michael Neff
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> Sounds like you're cutting flame-bait to me.

No.

> To support your > viewpoint you'd have to argue that the US habit of providing > financial and military support to dictatorial governments in the > Third World (as long as they are willing to support our economic > interests) has no bearing on our moral or ethical responsibilities in > those regions.

No, that's not my viewpoint. And I don't know what the last part of your statement really means. Is this a global policeman thing?

> From what you say, it shouldn't matter that in > country after country we are willing to prop up unpopular regimes > (and occasionally invent and install them) to serve our economic and > political interests despite popular resistance to externally imposed > structures of authority. Asking Pete to "educate" you on this topic > is sidestepping your own responsibility to defend your position of > non-involvement.

That's not my position ... I'm tired of this already. And I know far more about it than you suspect. You are simply touching on International Politics 101, my friend. It's far more complicated than this.

> He provided you with URLS--I have no doubt that > you're educated enough to read them, come to your own conclusions and > *then "educate" Peter if you so choose.*
>
> I haven't posted to POETICS in ages because the level of discourse > here usually winds up pissing me off if I get involved,
>
> despite the > *fact that I'm a publisher of poetry and that really this ought to* > be a place I'm comfortable hanging out. When somebody on POETICS > posts something that somebody else doesn't like (particularly on > political grounds) the common tactic on this list is to snidely and > sarcastically attack the intelligence of the poster, and rarely ever > to directly engage their political arguments. I like political > arguments and I think they're related to poetry. What I don't like is > the very nasty tone of intellectual and moral superiority wielded by > some (usually more conservative) members to silence others here. It > takes more work to make your own argument, Peter, than to sneer at > someone else's argument.
>
> Receding into silence once again,
> Kali

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

228. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> I haven't posted to POETICS in ages because the level of discourse here usually winds up pissing me off What I don't like is the very nasty tone of intellectual and moral superiority wielded by some (usually more conservative) members to silence others here. It takes more work to make your own argument, Peter, than to sneer at someone else's argument.
>
> Receding into silence once again,
> Kali

who is this peter you refer to here??? i'm certainly not being over rightious be-live me in this discuss. re the poetics list i find it one of the most even discussions i'm on,,try FRAMEWORKS for angst and silliness//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

229. Michael Neff
CAN I believe it?
Wed 15 Sep 1999

I know I will be further scathed here and backchannel insulted because my skepticism knows no bounds, but here is a tiny excerpt from The Nation article that is being pushed in my face as if it is the word of God:

"According to a classified cable on the meeting, circulating at Pacific Command headquarters in Hawaii, Blair, rather than telling Wiranto to shut the militias down, instead offered him a series of promises of new US assistance. "

Fair Questions:

How did the reporter know the above?
How did he get hold of a copy of the classified cable at Pacific Command?
Why would such a cable come from Pacific Command and not the embassy?
And what are the promises? Why aren't they listed here?
And how can anyone not be skeptical?
And is it ok to be skeptical?

REGARDLESS, this has nothing to do with my initial remarks. I just find it funny that this is one of the sources of absolute authority in this matter, for some people.

↑ Index

230. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

But it's heartening to see this thread become an >exchange not a flame war.
>
>Brian Lennon

i think the poetics listers are discussing the "sidings" of this east timor situ very well//pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

231. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> Does anyone know specifics re: the role of Indonesian General Wiranto in the > recent events unfolding in East Timor?

going by media noise it seems this was well planned but i think the general may have lost control, i think the idea was to have the militia do the dirty work and keep the army out of it also religeousity sure has its place in this mess//pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

232. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> From: Michael Neff <[redacted]>
>
> I'm not an expert on East Timor/Indonesian politics and don't claim to be. I am > commenting specifically on attempts to directly link the US govt (parties, > individuals, policies, some combo thereof) and specific actions or inactions on > its part to these current manifestations of acute human barbarism.

there was at least one us military spokesman in a recent newsreport who said america has no interest there so thats why there is reticence to be involved, the question here is under the grand new world order bullshit spoken by the US over the last decade, where is the order to come from if "interests or the lack" slows down ANY governments actions where people are being slaughtered , this slowness also includes the farce of "readiness" my own government here in australia are playing et etc et//pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

233. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> From: Christina Milletti <[redacted]>
> Follow the money. SE Asian Royal Dutch Shell (aka Indonesia), The Lippo Bank, the Asian Tiger money market funds, all stand to lose big in any protracted instability.
>
> Given this, is the US administration's reaction a surprise?

and the list can go on/ but business shouldn't stop moral decisions thru the UN or whereever to do something as quick as possible ..maybe if people wanna do some research they could check out who were in the film crew with yoris ivens when at the end of the 2nd ww he was trying to make a film called INDONESIA CALLING!!!//pete

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

234. Thurmon Manson
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

I defy you to name a single situation involving popular movement overthrow or bud-nippage in which there's been no CIA involvement, or any regime oppressiveness, be it in Turkey, Central America, South America (currently most "addressed" in corporate media is Colombia: CIA and DEA don't like the FARC because they going to take some American/Col Military $!!!), Haiti, Indonesia, Oakland, ad infi, not EXPLICITLY either

1) funded in total
2) funded intellectually

3) endorsed
4) propped by economic threat

by the Pentagon CIA White House or, mightier than each aforesaid, the ten or whatever major US corporations.

I wager that the White House has "decided to act" in East Timor finally not because of public pressure, but because to not do so means to risk losing some of its control there. France could get angry enough and via UN send in a force, adn there would France be now in our Indonesia! Also very related: to research what firms are in and controlling parties in what is called Indonesia, though not appearing as often in corporate media: EXXON the paramount, and many others. Follow the money as the woman at aol.com wrote.

Wiranto is a puppet of the Dept of Defense, whose officials have been tracking E TImor events hourly since roughly 1975 and in other guises previous to it.

I spoke to a deskie in Cohen's office, whose govt chip made him repeat, after each of my statements SPEAK UP SIR I CANNOT HEAR YOU until I was shouting and he was repeating those words, at which point I had to scream TELL SEC COHEN I SAID FUCK YOU!!!

To the web de sol correspondent: it's not a sin to be incredulous, I would've been too at your age. Noam Chomsky constantly repeats anecdotes of his runins with those balkers at anything smacking of "conspiracy theory"--unfortunately it is only a minority, frightened yet in touch and awesome, that sees no dramatization in the Smoking Man's cabal in xFiles, it's called G7 World Bank IMF LockMartin etc, and very much the entity and entities that have most what is called power but really is influence in world "politics" i.e. economic raping and freemarketing.

Read I Don't Have Any Paper So Shut Up by Bruce Andrews for the manner of thought and impulse of those motherfuckers, he nails it so excellently

Today even the the editor of The Ecologist (UK), everybody knows of it since being beat around by Monsanto circa the publication of its Monsanto Issue; the editor was asked, but is Mr Monsanto, I forget the CEO's named, Robert ?, Is Mr. Monsanto really a bad person or just part of a monstrous entity? And Ecologist editor replied like, Oh that's an important good question, and the unspoken (as such) point of his response was: yes he is an awful evil motherfucker!

Don't let's never get spiritual and wonder after the souls of these kind, Cohen, Hurwitz, a hundred more: kill them!

"Some people should die, that's just unconscious knowledge" per Jane's Addiction, although to profess strong beliefs like this will get you booted from an academic or arts scene or whatever; but I come to find that the people I seldom find but respect most share opinions along that line.

Before I send this I'll point out that if Florida or Kansas or California or any state in US wanted independence from US a la E Timor from Indonesia (and each of the 50 have the right! and reason) the military, the FBI, "local law enforcement" CIA etc, altogether would instantly descend upon that state and beginning destroying anybody active in that ceding or whatever it woul dbe called. Maybe not with pedestrian machetes: no with propaganda first then torture and wicked bullshit devised by professional govt sadists at labs and manufacturers across our great states.

So before going off about "brutes" in Indonesian-backed TImorese militias, think of your Uncle Jack semper fi, or that cop across the block: they'd been scalping your head in flash if you were part of genuine American independence movement. CF L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E's reception, even, by mainstream artists or critics. CF

W A C O

Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

235. Alan Sondheim

For

Wed 15 Sep 1999

=----

For A., K., G., N., A., L., F., B., A., J., P., T., L., J., M., S.

It is morning in the Cafe Lautreamont.
Pierre stares me down. Pierre brings me coffee.
Pierre knows I know he is a function who is not a function.
I am a state to Pierre's operator.
Pierre is the occupier of a role, as in main(Pierre).
Pierre carries and sullies a revolution.
Pierre is part of a surplus economy that I recognize.
I do not acknowledge that I recognize this surplus.
There is a state within which I am in Pierre and a state otherwise.
The state otherwise is to forget Pierre which is to annihilate him.
The revolution moves from person to person, stateless.
The revolution is a state, mobile and wandering.
I am linked to Pierre at the cafe and coupled otherwise to Pierre.

I say, "I am coupled to all the Pierres in the world."
I say, "I did not ask for this. I would not have asked for this."
I say, "I asked for a cup of coffee and nothing more."
I say, "I have paid you for this cup of coffee."
Pierre has not spoken and I assume he sees me as the signified.
I am the signified of a certain exchange, surplus value.
Coupled within exchange, I have no use; it is all circuitry.
Pierre and I are engaged in mutual annihilation.
Pierre gazes at me and the revolution stirs.
Unspeaking, the revolution blindly cauterizes the remnants of language.
I say, "Words no longer account for anything, Pierre."
I say, "These are sounds I am making, of no value whatsoever."
I say, "I lean on other processes, alan.o for example for sustenance."
I say, "As if we would ever be friends," and the revolution stirs.
Something speaks in one and another and speaks forever.
Sometimes speaks at the portal of death and constitution.
I say, "I will live in you, Francoise."
I say, "You will remember me, keep my diaries intact, Francoise."
I say, "You will find a publisher after all," Francoise.
There is silence at the other end of the room.
Pierre brings me coffee and Francoise smiles and says nothing.
There is a slight stirring of the white curtains in the sun.
A breeze is blowing outside and there are sailboats in the harbor.
An accordion, a gypsy, a horse-and-cart, a trolley, a very happy day.

↑ Index

236. George Bowering
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> I've tried to read Burrough's Naked Lunch because I'm such a fan of Kerouac and Ginsberb, but I found the text utterly cryptic. I never felt like I had a hold on what was being said and the reading of it was utterly painful, which proved very depressing to me.
>
> Aaron Keith

Does this mean that you do not want to find any reading painful? Why is that? Surely one of the most honourable and usual purposes of a fiction writer of any seriousness would be to make the reading painful. Another might be to make it exhilarating. I have found lots of writing painful (not talking about references here) and returned to it, knowing that it is important. In early years that writing included _The Cantos_. Later it included _Palimpsest_ and _Geography & Plays_ and _The Casnnibal_. I do not find books by James Lee Burke to be painful; though I read them, I will not reread them. I dont remember ever being deprtessed because a book was painful to read.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

237. George Bowering
Re: believe it!!!
Wed 15 Sep 1999

> | And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South
> | Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec?

Uh, East Timor voted to be independent.

Quebec voted to remain part of Canada.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

238. Kevin Killian
volunteers sought for SPT soiree
Thu 16 Sep 1999

On Saturday, October 2, Small Press Traffic will hold its 5th annual literary soiree and manuscript auction. This year's soiree ("Silver Streak") will be combined with our 25th anniversary celebration and will feature a grand group reading: 25 Writers/25 Years.

Though we have an active soiree committee, we could still use more volunteers to work the event. Any one in the San Francisco Bay area free any time from noon to 10 p.m. that day? We'll be having a soiree committee meeting this Saturday, September 18 at 1 p.m., which all potential volunteers are invited to (backchannel me, Kevin Killian, for details). But you don't have to go to the meeting to be a volunteer.

Indulge your passion for backstage drama! You'll see it'll be a lot of fun!

This includes all of you around the world who will be visiting San Francisco the weekend of October 2. Just because you're a tourist doesn't mean you can't roll up your shirt sleeves and chip in.

Thanks everyone. ... I'm waiting . . .

xxx Kevin K.

↑ Index

239. Mark Weiss
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Here's an easy one to consider: in rural places everyone owns a machete--self-defense by a majority with machetes is easy and affordable. Where there's a modern army one side's machetes are backed by guns. Whoever supplies the guns and trains the troops is a necessary enabler.

This isn't novel. A lot of extremely poor countries have bloated militaries that pull all the strings because one superpower or another thought they should.

At 07:18 PM 9/14/99 -0400, you wrote:
>I'm not an expert on East Timor/Indonesian politics and don't claim to be.
 I am
>commenting specifically on attempts to directly link the US govt (parties, >individuals, policies, some combo thereof) and specific actions or inactions on >its part to these current manifestations of acute human barbarism. At worst/best >then, we are "enabling" to some degree that cannot be measured. However, can one >state for certainty that US "involvement" was necessary to provoke the killing >fields in this case?
>
>In other words, must the US be a factor in enabling socio-psychotic behavior >(documented throughout history beginning with the Assyrians most notably?) or can >it take place independent of the US? And if we admit it can take place >independent of the US, or has taken place independent of the US, or will take >place independent of the US, can we state with certainty that this particular >plague demands US "enabling" behavior?
>
>Or could it have happened anyway?
>

>Are there forces, cultures, history, hatreds inherent to the land there that play
>a factor? That might even dwarf or render any US enabling inconsequential?
>
>Back to my point about the machetes. These were not funded by the US govt. Arms >or not, they have enough arms left to kill. As far as these other tragic >situations around the globe, are we responsible, enabling all those too, perhaps >because we cannot play our role as global policeman too well? I'm perplexed.
>Perhaps this is exactly why we shouldn't be global policemen. Too much blame, too >easy to fault?
>
>
>
>
>Mark Weiss wrote:
>
>> We didn't "cause" it, but we've certainly been an enabling factor: we have >> registered little complaint when East Timor was annexed and its people >> slaughtered (some 200,000) of them over the years, ditto the situation in >> Irian Jaya, ditto the slaughter of ethnic Chinese. Instead, we have >> consistently stroked the Indonesian govt for being anticommunist, and that >> stroking has taken the form of ytraining and supplying their military, >> contributing greatly to its ability to overwhelm the rest of govt.
>>
>> At 01:14 PM 9/13/99 -0400, you wrote:
>> >Pete,
>> >
>> >Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this >> line of >> >accusation. I need to be clear.
>> >
>> >Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the >> >Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches,
>> hacking
>> >them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose
if
>> their >> >govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful?

This
>> >sounds naive to the point of absurdity.
>> >
>> >I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage
fest
>> >going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and >> then the >> >slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for >> >me? I don't see it from what you are saying.
>> >
>> >Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who >> >believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck
>> their >> >barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.
>> >
>> >And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support
South >> >Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send >> >overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the >> >diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac >> (sp?) in >> >Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do
>> the >> >same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the >> murdering
>> >we see now?
>> >
>> >I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time >> line
>> >me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or >> Moynihan or >> >Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided
the >> >genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to >> >other large groups of people.
>> >
>> >Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

>> >
>> >Mike
>> >
>> >
>> >pete spence wrote:
>> >
>> >> please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
>> >> to:[redacted]
>> >> [redacted]
>> >> [redacted]
>> >> thanks pete spence
>> >>
>> >> speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just >> >> >as good
>> >> >and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing
>> role in
>> >> >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American >> >> >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and
>> >> >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous
>> >> >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the
>> >> >chaotic
>> >> >and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential >> >> >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the >> >> >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
>> >> >else >> >> >takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by
>> >> >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian >> >> >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military >> >> >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original >> >> >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking >> >> >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers.
Certain >> >> >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they >> >> >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the >> >> >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.

>> >> >
>> >> >http://www.freetimor.com/
>> >> >
>> >> >http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
>> >> >
>> >> >http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
>> >> >
>> >> >http://www.etan.org/
>> >> >
>> >> >regards,
>> >> >Patrick Herron
>> >> >
>> >> >
>> >> >>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the >> >> >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
>> >> >better
>> >> >usage of your time; [redacted]
>> >> >
>> >> >thanks pete spence
>> >> >
>> >> >_____
>> >> >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>> >> >
>> >> >_____
>> >> >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>> >>
>> >> _____
>> >> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>> >
>> >--
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >==========
>> >Web Del Sol
>> >http://webdelsol.com
>> >LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW
>> >
>> >
>

>--
>
>
>
>
>==========
>Web Del Sol
>http://webdelsol.com
>LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW
>
>

↑ Index

240. John Tranter
Bunting in Persia
Thu 16 Sep 1999

I'm not trying to deflect the worthwhile political drift of the List here, but I've always wondered just what Basil Bunting was doing in Iran as a British spy.

My Hutchinson Encyclopeda says:

"During World War II, Iran was occupied by British, US, and Soviet troops until 1946. Anti-British and anti-American feeling grew and in 1951 the newly elected prime minister, Dr Muhammad Mossadeq, obtained legislative approval for the nationalilzation of Iran's largely foreign-owned petroleum industry. With US connivance, he was deposed in a 1953 coup and the dispute over nationalisation was settled the following year when oil-drilling concessions were granted to a consortium of eight companies. "

Basil?

Basil?

-- John Tranter, editor, Jacket magazine

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

241. Mark Prejsnar
supporting murder
Thu 16 Sep 1999

This is on target...and an important point. If you go over US coverage over the years, the media first refused to pay ANY attention, after the invastion and occupation. To a very large extent, it was Chomsky who forced the US intellectual and media sturctures to finally begin to acknowledge the existence of E. Timor..(and that took many years). altho they did not acknowledge his main point: the US is squarely responsible for the crimes there..... THEN after a few years with some coverage, all the networks and wire services and the NYT began using the term "separatist"-- in effect makng clear thru their decisions about language that they endorsed the legitimacy of the savage occupation.

Mp

On Wed, 15 Sep 1999, daniel bouchard wrote:

> | And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South
> | Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec?
>
> "... while the East Timorese independence movement is commonly called
> 'separatist,' that makes as much sense as calling the French resistance to > the Nazi occupation
> 'separatist')..."
>
> listening?
>
> See <http://www.zmag.org/CrisesCurEvts/Timor/qanda.htm>
> for details.
>
> <<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>

Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

242. Michael Neff
US/Indonesia: I CAN'T Believe it!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Here are my closing arguments and observations regarding the violence in Indonesia:

Restating for the final time, my original point: the macro politic and conspiracy models presented here in various forms and containing various actors, all designed to explain and assign responsibility to the psychotic group behaviors ongoing in Indonesia for a very long time, are inadequate. In some ways they are superfluous, and in other ways peripheral. Facts are mixed with fiction and assumption. But they all have the same avowed goal, to heap America with blame for the killings. Every iota of energy is dedicated to making the US govt, whether Kissinger or NSA or whoever, or some American entity or official or some combination thereof directly responsible for the massacres.

Two of the more "persuasive" arguments for making the US responsible for the many years of carnage are as follows. The US defeated a UN resolution at some point in time which would have sanctioned or somehow prevented Indonesia from conducting the slaughter campaigns. This idea that the UN could have prevented the violence with a resolution of any kind is at once laughable and pathetic. Since when do dictators and police squads and fanatics forgo hostilities as soon as the UN wags a finger at them? The UN can place troops on the ground and be so hamstrung by bureaucracy, cowardice, and politics that the offenders can feel free to kill right before the eyes of UN officers! The second argument goes, the US trained elements of the Indonesian army, elements of the Indonesian army slaughter people, ergo, the US is responsible. This is the same as saying, a police academy trains police, some of them use their skills and position to commit crimes, ergo the police academy is responsible. But this is absurd. For example, when cops are arrested for drug dealing, shakedowns, brutality, etc. in New Orleans, NY, or DC, does a cry go up for the heads of police academy officials? NO, the cops are responsible and they must pay.

This is an important point: PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITY MUST LIE WITH THOSE WHO ARE DIRECTLY ENGAGED IN THE ATROCITIES, those pulling the triggers, wielding the machetes. How can it be otherwise? Eichman didn't get off, and neither did other Nazis after WW II. They were culpable. Again, this is not to say that US hasn't stupidly and unethically played a role in training elements of the Indonesian military (witness what the homicidal maniacs in Guatemala do with their training). But back to the main point, trained by US or not, the theater of conflict and hatred and the means to kill exist regardless. Savac in Iran would have existed in one form or another regardless of American money to the Shah or any number of military advisors and CIA cretins skulking about, because the social and political conditions which made Savac a force existed independent of the US!

In other words, there are other factors, other models which more closely explain the group behaviors in these theaters of conflict.

I'm willing to bet that if you delved deeply into Indonesian society, local politics, regional social orders, etc. you would find a complex of animosities, violent history, perhaps even tribe-like blood feuds, and more that go towards explaining the situation, perhaps even making the US "involvement" seem in the final analysis largely irrelevant. Then you have the corruption of the Indonesian govt, army corruption, a complex of ambitions, power struggles, etc. All these must be factored in.

In other words, the macro models presented so far are too simplistic to explain the repeated violence.

In general, and regardless of my original point, it is evident to me from the some of the posts here and backchannel communications to me of a vitriolic nature, that fanaticism can cloud judgement, and that errors of logic are being made, not to mention utterly subjective interpretations of historical facts and outright falsehoods.

Much of the "evidence" can be debated or at least treated with a skeptical eye, e.g., the article by the reporter who claims to have seen a classified cable sent to Pacific Command and who speaks to unknown gov officials who are leaking to him. Perhaps there is some Pulitzer seeking here, and perhaps it is all true, but skepticism should be exercised. Hypocrisy can become evident at such time those who profess the media is part of the conspiracy then turn around and accept a national media source as gospel as soon as it fits in with their predisposition.

There are at least three different versions which attempt to prove to me (regardless of the real point I was attempting to make) that America is responsible for the years of killing fests in Indonesia (and even elsewhere!). These individuals should get together and compare notes, get it straight. Either Chevron or the Pacific Command or Kissinger or the NSA or whoever is the main culprit; and then all the house of card assumptions that go along to make a whopping good and fun conspiracy theory. These individuals have events unfolding differently, posit competing reasons for the same behavior on the part of the militias, various American entities behind the scenes, etc., but like fanatics of competing religions, they accept the existence of one God, or in this case, one Satan America.

As far as accepting on face value what conspiracy theorists say relative to blaming America for the many years of pogrom-like rages and methodical brutality, that proves impossible, for given the level of fanaticism as evidenced by backchannel communications to me laced with scathing insults and generally embittered ego mania (e.g., I'm a lazy ass idiot, ugly mouthed, an embarassment, neanderthal, and equal to a state dept hack)--and all erupting on me in quite sudden and uncalled for fashion--one cannot help but conclude that like true zealots, these maze-brained individuals will only seek out and report on those sources of information most likely to confirm their viewpoint. In other words, they are too religious to be credible, having erected their own gods and belief system which sustains them. Pavlovian leftism, or rightism, the behavior is always the same and credibility is dashed. Even if a grain of truth is present, it is submerged in twaddle and invective.

These are the same people who argue that Marxism is a credible political alternative and that the shout of freedom heared in eastern Europe many years ago was nothing but a CIA manipulation. They only have one drum and they bang it continuously while chanting America is Evil, America is Evil, thereby seeking the solace of moral high ground and community forever lost to them in the sixties.

↑ Index

243. Taylor Brady
Naming Names
Thu 16 Sep 1999

This, from "Moving Gently on East Timor," an article by Russell Mokhiber and Robert Weissman, housed at Z Magazine's website: http://www.zmag.org/CrisesCurEvts/Timor/mokweiseast_timor.htm Should go some way toward addressing the question "Who stood (and stands) to gain?" From the most immediate perspective, confined to East Timor only, the oil companies named below would probably emerge as the largest investment interests, in terms of their speculating on the value of the oil deposits in the Timor Gap.

---------- "We have myriad interests" in Indonesia, explained State Department spokesperson Jaime Rubin in one of his daily briefings, "and what our job is is to try to balance those various interests."

Others in the government and chattering class, such as Eleanor Clift of Newsweek, echoed this basic sentiment. The United States should be "realistic" in setting its policy on East Timor, they urged, noting the multiple U.S. "interests" in Indonesia and the importance of promoting "stability."

Since the prescription was to balance these "interests" in "stability" against the lives of the Timorese, it is worth identifying what they are.

"We have a business interest," said Rubin in identifying competing U.S. interests in Indonesia. That is, the U.S. government wants to protect U.S. investments in Indonesia -- Nike's subcontractor factories, the mines of Freeport McMoRan, the oil drilling of Texaco, Chevron and Mobil. Strong diplomatic pressure on Indonesia might conceivably have led to the revocation of concessions and privileges for U.S. corporations, worried the practitioners of realpolitik.

Worse, from this point of view, was the possibility that support for the Timorese will somehow flare up Indonesian separatist movements in Aceh (where Mobil is heavily invested) and Irian Jaya (where Freeport McMoRan runs the world's largest gold mine).

A broader U.S. business interest was in maintaining the flow of IMF and World Bank money to Indonesia, so the country maintains its commitment to the "structural adjustment" policies which require it to remove restrictions on foreign investment, further orient its economy to exports, privatize government enterprises and cut subsidies to the poor.

Additionally, given the precarious state of the Indonesian economy, and the success of the IMF in deepening Indonesian dependence on foreign money flows, a sudden cut off of IMF and Bank monies might in fact send a harmful shock to the economy (whatever the long-run benefits of severing ties with the international financial institutions). The announced cut off of funds is actually a suspension of future monies not yet allocated, and is only temporary, so the feared effect on the international markets has been muted.

Of course, it would be misleading to say the U.S. government was slow to act in Indonesia/East Timor only because it wanted to protect Nike and other U.S. multinationals. In addition to the commercial and broader economic stability issues, the U.S. foreign policy and military establishments attach great geopolitical importance to maintaining good ties with the Indonesian government and especially the Indonesian military (viewed as a counterweight to China and a dependable regional ally). ----------

↑ Index

244. Patrick Herron

Re: I can't believe it!!!

Thu 16 Sep 1999

> Perhaps only when someone bursts the bubble of the New Model Poetics Army do we get down to actually conversing with each other. My guess is, it's less likely that Mike Neff doubts the complicity of the US in evil deeds than that he found the assumption of privilege regarding "the real story" to be unwarranted. I guess it's too much to ask of the medium that we not post initially in haste. But it's heartening to see this thread become an exchange not a flame war.

Brian Lennon

Good point Brian. The philosophical position I take is that there are indeed features of the world that we can communicate to each other, that there may be facts about the world, that facts are possible. It seems the word "fact" is somewhat of a curse word these days. that's OK, though I am politically suspect of such a philosophical position. (Well, OK, I am suspect of both positions, actually, b/c just as a person can use "truth" as a banner to harm people, others can use the banner of "no such thing as truth" to the very same harmful end.)

I do find it wise to believe there are many viewpoints and mental constructions in the world, and I also find it wise to question the very possibility of a "true" metaphysic, or metaphysics itself. However, if I see people manipulating other people with certain exploitative intentions and those intended events happen, I find it hard to admit that such facts about the perceived causality are inadmissible or unprivileged. they are privileged, perhaps in terms of their possibility. And I believe that perceptions frequently overlap and have commonalities. (I have to take such a notion on faith alone, as there is no way to even verify even the existence of other minds.) There are facts / is knowledge about the world, perhaps constructed of these overlapping perceptions, perhaps resulting from an actual ultimate reality, (that's not for our minds to really know) and language often comes up short trying to encapsulate and relate those ideas flawlessly. I also believe we can still try to approximate accuracy. Call me naive, or a platonist, or something else. It's OK, I've heard it before.

As for this army you mention, i don't know what you mean. I post in haste sometimes, as what is happening is very upsetting. people are being slaughtered by the thousands, and i initially knee-jerk into a reaction that says, "how or why would you say this is not the real story"? If I flamed, i apologize. I'm not exactly a diplomat. But it did seem he actually questioned the very idea that there was anything going on beyond what we hear and read in the major US media, that there is a better model, beyond what we just perceive from listening to NPR, for instance. But perhaps then there's no "real story" about what Mike was saying. ;) regardless, I pass no judgment, cast no aspersions on Mike, by any stretch.

: P
Patrick Herron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

245. Patrick Herron
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

This isn't my point. We're off track. My comments were directed to this statement by Peter Spence: "It may also be just as good and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese."

That was my statement, not Pete's. He excerpted an e-mail I sent him.

> The words "ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression" makes me think that like Nazis in the Ukraine, we are there with a policy which places active operatives in the field who are promoting and directing hacking gangs, resident psychos, and Indonesian army units to slaughters, rapine, burnings, church massacres, etc. etc. etc.

then the words had their intended effect.

> US doesn't have to grant imprimatur to any dictator to begin slaughter, forced relocations, tortures, etc. This kind of thing happens all the time and is happening in other places and climes without imprimaturs.

Yeah, but no one said anything to the contrary. No one said it's always the US's fault. So I don't know if you're arguing with anyone here.

> The dictator, the state is imprimatur in of itself and always has been, an arrogance which breeds intolerance at best and secret police mechanisms at worst. Such bodies and culture require no Madeline Albright, Kissinger, Ford, or whoever to lend them authority to oppress.

So what? I can safely say that if the US didn't do this shit the genocide probably wouldn't have happened. The US is not required for genocide. The British can do it, the French, the Dutch, the Belgians, the Indonesians, the Brazilians, and so on, can all cause genocide. No one here is arguing with that. However, keep in mind most of the Nazis in the Gehlen Org found safe haven in employment with the US (CIA, mostly) after WWII and their legacy has a profound effect on what happens when the US is involved. And unfortunately the US has had a hand in most genocides since WWII. Some say that's the price for power or for protecting American "freedom;" some say it's necessary to preserve or increase wealth.

> It's happened many times before, and will again.

Yes, sad but true.

: p
Patrick Herron

Taylor Brady wrote:

> A few points:
>
> 1) Kissinger's "visit" was considerably more instrumental than the
> "chat-and-tea" image might otherwise conjure one to believe. It was rather,
> the U.S. State Department's imprimatur and guarantee of military assistance > to a regime embarked on a series of "policy initiatives" which included, > most notably, a) the slaughter and forced relocation of much of its own > peasantry, labor leaders and movement members, intellectuals, etc., in the > name of a defense against communism; and b) the invasion and annexation of > Timor, resulting in a brutal occupation which left nearly a quarter of a > million dead. This, while the U.S. (among others - recently, the role of > Japan and Australia would also bear some scrutiny) continued (and continues, > notwithstanding Clinton's half-assed "retraction of assistance") to provide > the proverbial "military, technical and economic aid" to the Indonesian > regime. This isn't a matter of having bought arms years ago, but one of > receiving - until this week, and that only if Clinton's retraction is to > taken at face value - ongoing direct support from the U.S. and other > armaments-producing nations. Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic > industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary > training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under > recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian > military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line.
> For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it > substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica > Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the > militias. But other sources are many and well-documented. If you have web > access, you might take a look at the East Timor Action Network's web site:

> www.etan.org
> 2) The above would seem to have some bearing on your assertion that East > Timor is attempting to "secede" from a legitimate national government - > which is simply not the case. East Timor, as an Indonesian territory, is the > result of a forcible annexation sponsored by U.S. and other interests. Many > of the key figures in the initial "sponsorship" remain in positions of power > today. In other words, this is about as far from a quixotic attempt to > rectify a distant and tragic "other-people's" history as you can get.
> 3) You ask: "We turned the other way on Savac we see now (sp?) in Iran, > though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the > same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the > murdering we see now?" Yes. Absolutely. As I've pointed out, this isn't > simply a case of turning the other way, but a direct outgrowth of deliberate > policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and > other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at > which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of > direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that > the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of > aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in > other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and > unsustainable without that aid. Until very recently, a cut-off of such > support might have sufficed to avert the campaign of terror now being > pursued. There is no "genocidal gene" - and such pseudo-explanations > ("they're just nuts _over there_, who can understand their motivations?"), > I'd warrant, most often mark the site of a real and determinate chain of > events, the complicity of one's own nation in which is precisely what the > resort to racialized typologies attempts to obscure.
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]

> On Behalf Of Michael Neff
> Sent: Monday, September 13, 1999 10:15 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
>
> Pete,
>
> Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this > line of > accusation. I need to be clear.
>
> Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the > Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches,
> hacking
> them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if > their > govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful?
This
> sounds naive to the point of absurdity.
>
> I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage
fest > going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then
> the > slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it
for > me? I don't see it from what you are saying.
>
> Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those > who > believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck
> their > barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.
>
> And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support
South > Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send > overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness
the > diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac > (sp?) in > Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do

> the > same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the > murdering
> we see now?
>
> I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time > line
> me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or > Moynihan or
> Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the
> genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to > other large groups of people.
>
> Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.
>
> Mike
>
> pete spence wrote:
>
> > please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
> > to:[redacted]
> > [redacted]
> > [redacted]
> > thanks pete spence
> >
> > speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just > > >as good > > >and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role
> in
> > >the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American
> > >Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and > > >the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous
> > >declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the

> > >chaotic
> > >and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential > > >actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the > > >Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone
> > >else
> > >takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by > > >Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian > > >government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military > > >intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original > > >inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking > > >concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain > > >people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think
> they > > >mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of
> the
> > >East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.
> > >
> > >http://www.freetimor.com/
> > >
> > >http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
> > >
> > >http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
> > >
> > >http://www.etan.org/
> > >
> > >regards,
> > >Patrick Herron
> > >
> > >
> > >>so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the > > >indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
> > >better
> > >usage of your time; [redacted]
> > >
> > >thanks pete spence
> > >
> > >_____

> > >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
> > >
> > >_____
> > >Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
> >
> > _____
> > Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> --
>
> ==========
> Web Del Sol
> http://webdelsol.com
> LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

246. Lowther, John
Imagining Language
Thu 16 Sep 1999

{ p o e t i x }

i assume there must be some portion of you out there whove got this book _imagining language_ that rasula and mccaffery edited ? has anyone seen a review of anywhere ? it sits on my dining room table and as i have breakfast or lunch or dinner i open it and the food gets cool (if hot) or warm (if cold) it was expensive as hell but not inappropriately expensive i dont think ----- point is that its just fucking amazing and if you (yeah, you general without me knowing squat about you singular, individual) havent seen it you really ought to (again, "ought" is a bit fishy i know but once youve had some leisure with this book i think you'll agree, and if you don't it may be that we wdnt be able to communicate very effectively anyway) this is not a review i cant really imagine an adequate review jerome rothenberg cd perhaps handle it his anthologies are the only things that this book seems comparable to

)L

↑ Index

247. Patrick Herron
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Thu 16 Sep 1999

> I'm just saying I'm hearing some familiar themes here.

I don't always implicate oil companies. I've been tired of such explanations, too. But these things (E Timor, Congo, Iraq, Kosovo) are consistently about natural resources. And the US is not the only player in these arenas.

>I'll tell you emphatically that I do not get my news from CNN, NBC, etc. During the Kosovo crisis, e.g., I watched far more interesting French coverage
(they even interviewed a British officer).

I apologize if I insinuated that you were restricted to CNN. It's good to use foreign press, and always good to use your own noggin. And if you have inside info, that's even better.

> First, and again, I have been hearing oil company/USGovt/etc theories to explain a wide spectrum of antisocial behaviors around the earth and I don't always buy it, and I'm not totally buying it now, IN THE CONTEXT OF the homicidal group behavior there.

Is the model sufficient for the behavior there? No, I agree. Necessary? In the case of E. timor, maybe. Maybe, though, many people CAN be right about basic things. I do not believe that majority opinions are prima facie false. And these are hardly majority opinions.

> Occam's Razor, the Japan/US/NBC/Chevron formal or informal infrastructure of conspiracy is not necessary to explain the rampaging militia and military.

You can say that, but I disagree.

>Second, I become suspicious when explanations of group/national/tribe >behaviors, esp pronounced psychotic ones on such a grand and incredibly savage scale, don't include local culture, socio-psych, or other factors to account for them.

Sure, and you're right to become suspicious. everyone can build upon what I said, and add to the model, but to throw away what I said and replace it with a psychosocial perspective is hardly constructive.

>Surely, there is a synergy here, a harmonious convergence of psychotic >gravities which should be noted and divulged. This harping on the US, oil >companies, Japan, macro international political models, etc. don't serve to >explain the killer hysteria and frenzy.
Not completely, as in they are not sufficient, but they are necessary. Have you ever read the counterinsurgency manuals from the CIA? they employ their extensive knowedge in the areas of study you mention to reach certain ends. People do pay for and train mercenary armies, and mercenary armies that are paid for by certain groups are clearly responsible for what has transpired in the past week or so.

> Believe me Patrick, the US Govt is far, far more stupid than malevolent.

And again, I think you are wrong. Actually, I know this is wrong. There are people in the government much more intelligent than you or me. And they plan, they know about contingencies, it's their lives. Me, I'm just farting around on a keyboard. They often do things and call them mistakes, because it fools us into a comfortable position of superiority, albeit poorly founded.

> I say it goes far deeper than this. These models of yours are insufficient to explain the group behavior.

given that it would

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

248. Poetics List Administration
Novels of the 60´s / Thomas Dorow
Thu 16 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Wednesday, September 15, 1999, 1:02 AM +0200
From: My realme <[redacted]>
Subject: Novels of the 60´s

I already backchanneled this, but it seems that quite a few people are interested in novels of the sixties, so if german authors are permitted, i would like to suggest these two:

Rolf Dieter Brinkmann: Keiner weiss mehr.

Brinkmann congeniously translated Frank O´Hara´s poetry to german, was the editor of "Silver Screen" and "Acid", two compilations that first introduced Burroughs, Bukowski, O´Hara and several others to a german audience. "Acid" was a cult when I was in my teens. Brinkmann himself mainly known for his poetry. Check out "Westward 1&2" if you come across it. His most exciting work is the journal "Rom, Blicke". I don´t know if any of his work is translated, if it isn´t, there´s a job to be done.

Hubert Fichte: Die Palette

This is the first novel to portray the gay underground in Hamburg. Fichte´s style is amazing, it was termed "new sensitivity" when he first came out with his work, but to me it appears as a combination of Doeblin´s montage techniques with elements of the nouveau roman, a very physical and psychedelic style. If you don´t know it, you should. If it isn´t translated, you should do it yourself or find somebody who will do it. Fichte left a great body of work after his death a few years ago, he is still mainly read in fan circles, but this is truly excellent stuff.

Greetings, Thomas Dorow

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

249. Lowther, John listings ?

Thu 16 Sep 1999

---

contrary to what we've been told i heard a rumor that the revolution will in fact be televised but as yet the tv guide hasnt announced it and i cant find out anything more surely someone out there knows

or know what the website is with premiere week coming up i hope its not going to eat into friends or buffy or anything

↑ Index

250. Poetics List Administration

Re: e. timor, s. korea, afghanistan, kuwait, iraq, panama, / Ike Kim

Thu 16 Sep 1999

I had to reformat this message. Please remember that HTML-formatted text should not be sent to the Poetics List. Chris

--

From: "Ike Kim" <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: e. timor, s. korea, afghanistan, kuwait, iraq, panama, grenada, puerto rico, etc.
Date: Thu, 16 Sep 1999 02:05:00 -0400

"...the US Govt is far, far more stupid than malevolent. It requires = planning and skill to be intentionally malevolent." -Michael Neff Sept 14, 1999

Remember that old Saturday Night Live skit, where Phil Hartman plays R. = Reagan? He acts stupid and forgetful in front of the press and his = cabinet and then, when they all leave, he says "Finally, I'm alone!" = then picks up two phones, starts dialing numbers and speaking russian = and french.

It's funny stuff. Improbably, right? I mean, politicians aren't bad = people, motivated by money and the power it represents, right? They're = well meaning folks like you and me, from rich families, good schools, = proper contacts etc...

There is a definite desire NOT to believe what is happening is because = of the US. Remember the US is now the "policeman of the world" and all = that entails, incl. setting the rules of the game. otherwise, without = rules, what else is there to police? we want to think that iraq was = about saving Kurds-that's what we were told-but why were we letting them = die in the south while supposedly protecting them in the north (or vice = verse, it's too hard to keep track-my scorecard is full)? It is = acknowledged that the CIA trained kurds in the north for years before = the US decided to bomb. and they weren't learning how to build shelter = for refugees, or farm, or build industry.

it seems to me that history has proven a fair barometer to the = relationship between what is stated at times of conflict and what is = fact. war is often a time of lies. it is a key part of building defense = for a nation's defenseless activities. in smaller terms, remember the = president's council on race (did i get the name of that thing right?)? = all of these big shots went parading around the country trying to = prove/defend the position that the crisis in american society was one of = race. at each stop, the folks in the audience were pretty clear on = pointing out that economics were at hand.=20

The US gov. is having trouble defending itself in front of the world. = and they know the folks at home don't like all of these wars and all of = the fako-half truths they're given as causes/reasons. enter australia. = fodder. poor australia. they'll take some global heat for a change. = after all, they got the damned olympics (which, by the way i believe = should be held in buffalo--to revitalize the economy! more sports = stadiums=3Dbetter quality of life after all (just ask the Admin. at the = U of Buffalo)). where are the people of australia? The press (the = state?) is hawkish. here's how one paper puts it:

All dressed up, only one place to go 16sep99 The Australian=20 THEY want very badly to go. The orders are through and adrenaline is = running through the platoons. They know who among them will go in first. = They do not think in terms of the plight of East Timor - they want to be = what they have trained to be.

turn off brain. obey orders. they are well trained indeed.

--

From Reuters, via NYT:

DARWIN, Australia (Reuters) - Australia's defense force chief warned = Thursday that the U.N. mission to restore order in East Timor would be = ``tough'' and the force would take a firm stance if Indonesian forces = failed to cooperate.=20

``If we don't get the cooperation we need we will end up having to make = this a tough military operation and that will be a tough challenge, but = as I said earlier we are ready to take this challenge,'' Admiral Chris = Barrie told reporters in Darwin.=20

Barrie said the timetable for deployment of the multinational troop = force, expected this weekend, was not yet finalized.=20

``We will deliver on this mission, so let there be no doubt,'' said = Barrie, referring to the U.N. mandate to use ``all necessary measures'' = to stop an orgy of killing by pro-Indonesia militia in East Timor.=20

--

one gets the sense that the refugees are secondary now. indonesia, here = we come! we will fix you and then give you back to you, properly cleaned = up and functional-just put this guy, no this guy, in power and we'll = give ya tons of cash. wink. wink. until we don't like him, that is. = wink. kiss. hug. shake.

Because we don't believe something is possible is not enough reason for = its dismissal. Conspiracy Theory has been thrown around to circumvent = the discussion of what forces motivate and enact events. JFK is a good = example. and it is quite evident that this line of propaganda (i think = Conspiracy Theory is now an actual field of study at most public = universities!) has succeeding in removing = discussion/analysis/identification of phenomena from our society. after = all, without identification there is little chance that action will be = informed, will succeed. we know that the auto industry went city to city = and sold cheap busses if the cities agreed to lose the trolleys, they = pushed for massive road building, etc. there are plenty of things to = learn from history. we don't have any more time to learn from history! = it is happening around us every moment.

It is fact that indonesia is a strategic location for the movement of = capital, commerce, goods, etc to/from the far east. even npr admits it. = does this have a role in why the US (UN?) is so interested in the area? = stabilization, as a policy for global intervention, proposes that = unbalanced things shall be balanced. who/what's on the see-saw?

The NSA creates an annual "Top Ten" list in which they identify "problem = areas" or "threats." Past and present favorites include Iraq, N. Korea, = Cuba, China, Iran. It's like a to-do list!

we'd like to think that there is a mess of local political stuff going = on in the sublayers of the why-this-is-happening, and there may be some, = but this is another one of those "you will never understand what is = going on and leave it to the experts; here, read this _everything for = dummies_ book while you sit quietly" diversions. like Yugoslavia and the = appearance of strange ancient texts in the forefront of discussion. this = all after the opinion polls proved the more simple, but somewhat dulled, = line of saving refugees went south (well, since we blew up the busses = filled with those we were "helping"). is my timeline messed up? the = point is the same.

anyway, 'spontaneous' psychotic group behavior is a reflection of/ = reaction to the state of a society, or the state of the people of a = state. Chicago 1968. Black Panthers. AIM. Born of nothing? the best = thing for the world is to fix america-ground up. that would ease a lot = of suffering. ours included.

↑ Index

251. Poetics List Administration

Montreal and Oslo URLs - Nekyia, Hyde/Sumner / Sumner

Thu 16 Sep 1999

---

had to reformat. Chris

--

Date: Thu, 16 Sep 1999 12:37:53 +0800
Subject: Montreal and Oslo URLs - Nekyia, Hyde/Sumner
From: "Alaric Sumner" <[redacted]>

Nekyia (speaker, singer, electroacoustics, projected video) Joseph Hyde and Alaric Sumner

Montreal: 21 September
Champlibre: 4. Manifestation Internationales Vid=E9o et Art Electronique (September 20-27, 1999) <http://www.hascoll.dk/videofestivals/FestivalsData/0104.htm> or <http://www.champlibre.com/> (under construction (16 Sept 99))

Nekyia study (speaker, electroacoustics)
Oslo: 9 October, 12 noon
Ultima Festival of Contemporary Music
<http://www.ultima.no/format.htm#9>

↑ Index

252. Karen Kelley
Eliot Weinberger/Dan Featherston/Cydney Chadwick
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Thanks to all who sent snail mails to me.

I'm still looking for addresses for Eliot / Dan / Cydney, so if anyone out there has them, I'd appreciate a backchannel.

Karen

↑ Index

253. Poetics List Administration
alternative irish poetry distribution / Mills
Thu 16 Sep 1999

---

had to reformat. Chris

--

From: "Mills, Billy" <[redacted]>
Subject: FW: alternative irish poetry distribution
Date: Thu, 16 Sep 1999 13:35:55 +0100

> Hi
>
> If anyone's interested, the latest version of our distribution list is ready, and I can mail it to you as an attachment, or post it to you on real paper, in a real envelope, to a real address.
>
> Billy
>
> hardPressed poetry
>
> Alternative Irish poetry publishing and distribution
>
> 1 Greenview Court
> The Fairways
> Monaleen Road
> Castletroy
> Co. Limerick
> Ireland

> (00 353 61) 33 54 93
>
> [redacted] <mailto:[redacted>

↑ Index

254. Mark Prejsnar
the timid and Timor
Thu 16 Sep 1999

i find Joan Houlihan's post a little odd. Why do we need to emphasize the fact that some aspects of the E. Timor situation are random? Why is this important, or helpful? I am reminded of the old sawhorse phrase from my college philosophy courses: "true but trivial."

However, the various ways in which US foreign policy is implicated in that situation, are not trivial. Or so i would argue...

And just to tie this back in with the primary focus of this listserv, i would point out again that it took years of very hard effort by Chomsky and others, pointing out the corruption and deliberate misuse of language by the US government/media nexus, to force those with power and influence in the US to acknowledge some hard truths about the E. Timor situation...

The several people who are crying out so loudly on this list, that the US bears little or no responsibility, have NOT studied the available sources on what happened there and why...

--mark

↑ Index

255. Mark Prejsnar
bunting for a base hit...
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Was he there after 1946??? i thought he was only active in intelligence during the bigee (WWII), working against the nasty axis...

But of course maybe that's only what i wanted to believe...

On Thu, 16 Sep 1999, John Tranter wrote:

> I'm not trying to deflect the worthwhile political drift of the List here, but I've always wondered just what Basil Bunting was doing in Iran as a British spy.

> My Hutchinson Encyclopeda says:
>
> "During World War II, Iran was occupied by British, US, and Soviet troops until 1946. Anti-British and anti-American feeling grew and in 1951 the newly elected prime minister, Dr Muhammad Mossadeq, obtained legislative approval for the nationalilzation of Iran's largely foreign-owned petroleum industry. With US connivance, he was deposed in a 1953 coup and the dispute over nationalisation was settled the following year when oil-drilling concessions were granted to a consortium of eight companies. "
>
> Basil?
>
> Basil?
>
> -- John Tranter, editor, Jacket magazine
>
> from
> John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
> tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted]
> Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html
> Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at > http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

256. Michael Neff
The First Church of J'Accuse The American Satan
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Below is a post to another list.
(Note: I am the one guilty of pompous and barbaric posts to this list.)

Also, note this excerpt:

"anyone familiar with the history of american adventurism in southeast asia over the past 50 years will automatically assume that whatever happens has happened with the knowledge of the US."

I have no doubt of this, knowledge of the US. Well, no kidding. It again misses the point I've been trying to make all along. Rather, fellows like this invent points I never made and then argue with me over them. They have no choice. How can they maintain that the factors I introduce or models I suggest cannot exist?

I can't help but perceive that what all this brouhaha and blathering boils down to is this: a lack of strong condemnation and blame vis-a-vis any object/person/policy/organization American, on the part of anyone posting, and one risks on-going misunderstanding at best, virulent attacks at worst. It isn't enough to admit America plays a role, one must affirm that all evil derives from it. This mindset demands America must have total responsibility or none. They are no grey zones, no additional factors, or competing or alternative ways to explain violent events in other nations. The First Church of J'Accuse The American Satan must triumph and seek to quickly and fiercely quell heretics.

No doubt the faithful will rise from their pews and pitchfork themselves into a mob, but so be it.

[redacted] wrote:

> I was also outraged at the fellow on the other list for his pompous, and therefore barbaric posts, and have had several backchannel exchanges with him, which have not been fruitful, and which have deteriorated into threats (him) and snide remarks (me). not an ideal way to go about a dialectic, but then the ideal is frequently allusive. to excuse complicity just because it's not direct (who's supplying the machetes, for example) is to become complicit oneself, just as to deny the efficacy of material one hasn't read makes one complicit. einstein once referred to nationalism as the measles of mankind, which seems to me to be right on the money. it's hard to understand how anyone who considers themselves politically aware could demand (as this fellow does) that one provide overwhelming proof that the most powerful nation in the world is not going ruthlessly about what it perceives to be in its national interest (first and foremost the preservation of regimes friendly to exploitation of markets), when history shows us, as I've said, that such ruthlessness is the standard operating procedure. anyone familiar with the history of american adventurism in southeast asia over the past 50 years will automatically assume that whatever happens has happened with the knowledge of the US. if there is any doubt of this regarding East Timor, one need only to look at the hemming and hawing of official america to see where it's real support lies.
>
> I think, by the way, that the responses by many on the buffalo poetics list (which I've frequently criticized) have been first rate, and if anyone's interested, I'll post a few of them to this list.
>
> joe....

↑ Index

257. Michael Neff

Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor

Thu 16 Sep 1999

> Believe me Patrick, the US Govt is far, far more stupid than malevolent.

> And again, I think you are wrong. Actually, I know this is wrong. There are people in the government much more intelligent than you or me. And they plan, they know about contingencies, it's their lives. Me, I'm just farting around on a keyboard. They often do things and call them mistakes, because it fools us into a comfortable position of superiority, albeit poorly founded.

Oh, no no no, a thousand times no, they are NOT more intelligent than you, or me! Do you think your govt (whatever that really means, NSA? CIA? Congress? West Wing White House) is composed of Zarathustrian supermen? This is one of the key factors to accepting such theories. I happen to know CIA, e.g., exhibits all the characteristics of a dumb bureaucracy living in a denial culture. Bureaucrats in CIA even hide things from each other. The behaviors are astonishing and hysterical. How else to explain the Ames spying success and being caught unawares when communism fell in eastern europe.

Agencies fight with each other for control constantly, bureau chiefs fight, their is continuous turmoil and upheaval with these stratifications.

But I don't expect you to accept this on face value.

↑ Index

258. Mark Weiss
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Michael: is your point that there's evil in the world? Sure thing, but a conversation-stopper, and not particularly useful as a political statement. Once granted, what's left to discuss but other influences on the eruption in progress?

Here's a question: suppose that FDR, instead of deciding about Nicaragua's Samosa that "he's a sonofabitch, but he's our sonofabitch," had decided to make Sandino our vote for a sustainable regime. Suppose, more broadly, he and his successors had decided that it didn't much matter who sold us bananas, the supposed communist threat to US interests (read: United Fruit Company) was a lot less destabilizing than the hypermilitarization of an entire region that previously had barely managed to support a police force.

There's never a shortage of intergroup hostilities, and there's never a shortage of sociopaths to exploit them, but they're born that way--some responsibility has to be placed in the hands of those who create the structures that allow the damage to play out at large.

At 08:30 PM 9/15/99 -0400, you wrote:
>Christina Milletti wrote:
>
>> In a message dated 9/15/99 9:06:20 PM !!!First Boot!!!,

[redacted]
>> writes:
>>
>> << I don't believe that either Patrick, I just think your explanations are >> formula
>> in some respects and inadequate to explain the condition of group killing >> psychosis. >>
>>
>> Why must it be reduced to group psychosis? The murdering gangs are paid.
>> They don't kill, they don't eat. Talk about Occam's razor.
>
>Why? Why indeed? I should have realized there must be a considerable sense of >job well done when they have earned their pay. I'm certain they would never >stoop to disemboweling unless paid to do so! This is all absorbing to me.
>Since you are keenly aware of the mechanisms in place, no doubt having first >hand knowledge, I suppose you can reveal whether they are paid by the hour or by >the body or head?
>
>If they are working for the NSA they deserve a retirement package.
>
>Course, if they're rampaging as humans are inclined to do from time to time, >then how can it be the fault of US? It therefore stands to reason they must be >paid.
>
>

↑ Index

259. Taylor Brady
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Ms. Houlihan,

I'm aware that this will break my resolve to respond no more, but there's at least one fairly serious misrepresentation of the record and one fairly well-implied personal attack in this. Both, I think, merit an answer.

First, the misrepresentation. Mr. Neff's point has not been, to date, "simply the suggestion that the US government (and whatever else we conceive that entity to be,it is still a collection of people with limitations) may not be wholly responsible for what's happening in East Timor." Nor has my point been that the US _is_ solely culpable. Ample mention has been made of the role of the Indonesian military, Japan, Australia. More might be said about Great Britain, and the corporate interests that are, while headquartered mainly in the US, largely independent of any real national governance. For evidence of Mr. Neff's real "point", I attach the following quote from his opening missive on this thread:

"I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone."

What emerges from this line of argument is 1) a denial of ANY U.S. role (a far cry from denying full responsibility); and 2) a denial of the effectivity of any U.S. action (pressure on elected and unelected officials to stop pursuing some particular policy or other) in the present situation. One remembers that the post to which he responded was a call for protest and petition. In effect, what he is doing in the above quote is denying that the US government is the proper target for any such protest, as well as denying that such a protest could have any effect.

And for my part, I've never claimed that the US held sole responsibility for atrocities in East Timor over the past twenty-five years. My claim was, rather, that those atrocities could not have happened without U.S. involvement - that such involvement was, in brief, a necessary rather than a sufficient condition. The Indonesian regime since Suharto's rise to power has been a creature of the US military and intelligence "community." This history is well-documented and available for the perusal of skeptical parties. (Unless one takes seriously the desperate ideological retreat into "empiricist" metaphysics - do you really want to claim, in an E-MAIL correspondence, that you only believe in what's before your eyes?). For recent evidence of this dependent attachment, witness the Habibie government's quick decision to allow international troops in as soon as Clinton's rather weakly-worded "temporary suspension" of aid was announced.

In other words, in reply to Mr. Neff's most recent questioning whether "dictators and police squads and fanatics forgo hostilities as soon as the UN wags a finger at them," I would point out that Indonesia has always (at least since '65) done exactly that when it's been a question of the _US_ doing the wagging. Indonesia as currently ruled is a client state of the US, Great Britain, and Japan, pure and simple. And despite Mr. Neff's ideological scare tactics in introducing the "world's policeman" threat, this client relationship exists in such a form that, for long-term changes to become effective, what's probably most needed is a cessation of US involvement, rather than a new "commitment of troops" or some such. Our support - precisely - of police tactics up to this point has been the very problem. A lot could be accomplished if our government would simply stop - permanently - doing the criminal things it's been doing in that region. In fact, it would be best for all concerned if any international force sent in for the short term to stop the killings included _no_ US, British, or Australian troops. That this is unlikely to happen is further evidence, to me, that whatever steps are currently being taken are more by way of protecting the bankability of an investment than a commitment to national self-determination and political freedoms.

Of course, groups of people have always killed other groups of people. And groups of people have always resisted and spoken out - that's part of what, in my sense of a humanly-liveable world, one understands by the word "history." It's a "made place," to bring in Robert Duncan for a moment. People can act to make it differently, and this despite the red-baiting invective of Mr. Neff's latest. I readily grant that such atrocities have happened under all kinds of conditions and in all kinds of places. My question is, by the same sort of "Occam's Razor" method proposed by Mr. Neff, whether we might be a bit concerned about the statistical preponderance of US investment capital, weapons, and military advisors at the scene of such atrocities during the last fifty years - whether in fact we might examine the verifiable historical record, rather than raise the spectre of some sort of genetic predisposition to murder, and attempt to account for the reasons why the US government has tended to be, in the post-war period "a collection of individuals" whose "limitations" include a pronounced taste for military dictatorship in the so-called Third World. Yes, other people (in this case Indonesians and conscript Timorese) do the killing. One of the privileges of capital is that it affords you the opportunity to contract out such unpleasant "work." And even if we agree that humans as individuals have a certain predilection for evil, we still have to explain why in some cases resources are marshalled to allow that predilection its full "expression," and where those resources come from.

My second concern in reading your posting is the accusation of "intolerance" hurled against those who have disagreed with Mr. Neff - an accusation made personal by the address of that posting to me. Let me state simply that it angers and saddens me to see disagreement labeled thus as intolerance. I thought we were having an argument. Apparently I was abridging someone's freedom.

You identify yourself as a "liberal" - and that might well be the root of our disagreement on the geopolitical side of things. I've come to believe strongly that American liberalism is a thoroughly inadequate response, not only to the problems of international capital and its involvement in the crushing of independence movements, but even to the day-to-day "domestic" political concerns we all face as citizens, of whatever civic entity in which we participate. So our differing political perspectives lead us to disagree. But in the elaboration of that disagreement, your efforts to attenuate the space of public discourse by casting argument as domination are wholly unworthy, not only of the weight of the argument itself, but even of the "liberal" traditions you bring to it.

Taylor Brady

P.S. A final response to a message just in, this one from Mr. Neff, containing word of a different sort of intolerance:

"As far as accepting on face value what conspiracy theorists say relative to blaming America for the many years of pogrom-like rages and methodical brutality, that proves impossible, for given the level of fanaticism as evidenced by backchannel communications to me laced with scathing insults and generally embittered ego mania (e.g., I'm a lazy ass idiot, ugly mouthed, an embarassment, neanderthal, and equal to a state dept hack)--and all erupting on me in quite sudden and uncalled for fashion-one cannot help but conclude that like true zealots, these maze-brained individuals will only seek out and report on those sources of information most likely to confirm their viewpoint."

For the record, I have never participated in any back-channel communication with Mr. Neff. I have no desire to do so, and, while I understand the urge that might have prompted some of the e-mails he alleges, it's hardly a fair tactic - if anyone is listening, I'd urge people to lay off. For Mr. Neff, I'd simply point out that you'll have to disarticulate your critique from your sense of those who disagree with you as "true zealots, these maze-brained individuals," since that description is founded on the evidence of behavior in which at least one of "us" - and a fairly vocal one - has consistently refused to participate.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Joan Houlihan
Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 1999 4:44 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Taylor,

Of all the responses to Mike Neff's e-mail, yours seem to be the best examples of a logic constructed partly on the idea that because events occur together in time, the events are somehow linked causally, and partly on the idea that events which you do not personally witness, or have any special knowledge of, are nonetheless events that you can interpret not only correctly, but also "righteously"--that is, you are able to divine the motivations and moral construction of all those involved, from the beginning of the forced annexation of East Timor to its bloody fight for independence.

It's quite amazing to me, a liberal, to see the kind of reaction generated by a clearly written, well-reasoned message (Neff's). What has created this firestorm? Simply the suggestion that the US government (and whatever else we conceive that entity to be,it is still a collection of people with limitations) may not be wholly responsible for what's happening in East Timor. I don't see that Mike Neff was disputing any historical facts, or events leading up to what's happening there--only that he was questioning the idea that these successive events had to be linked to either a kind of evil intentionality, or an immoral turning away by the US government. He was instead, and rightly I think, proposing the idea that deeper, and even random, forces are also at work in these situations--not only, but also. That we need to consider the constant recurrence of group hatreds, killings, the human prediliciton for wiping each other out. Nowhere was he suggesting that arms were not sold, that US interests were not pursued, or that the US often gets behind what turn out to be (or always were) rotten leaders/causes--sometimes in the interest of avoiding worse leaders/causes, or more likely, for simple economic or ideologic reasons.

Now that I've seen what comes back from this "radical" idea that the US government may not be the God we can blame, I'm astonished not only by the list's intolerance, but also by the realization that so many liberals have given up their ability to analyze and respond to a clear idea objectively, for the more comfortable idea that there's always clearly someone to blame--if not God, then the government.

Joan

> From: Taylor Brady <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
> Date: Tue, 14 Sep 1999 09:53:14 -0700
>
> A few points:
>
> 1) Kissinger's "visit" was considerably more instrumental than the "chat-and-tea" image might otherwise conjure one to believe. It was rather, the U.S. State Department's imprimatur and guarantee of military assistance to a regime embarked on a series of "policy initiatives" which included, most notably, a) the slaughter and forced relocation of much of its own peasantry, labor leaders and movement members, intellectuals, etc., in the name of a defense against communism; and b) the invasion and annexation of Timor, resulting in a brutal occupation which left nearly a quarter of a million dead. This, while the U.S. (among others - recently, the role of Japan and Australia would also bear some scrutiny) continued (and

continues,
notwithstanding Clinton's half-assed "retraction of assistance") to provide the proverbial "military, technical and economic aid" to the Indonesian regime. This isn't a matter of having bought arms years ago, but one of receiving - until this week, and that only if Clinton's retraction is to taken at face value - ongoing direct support from the U.S. and other armaments-producing nations. Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line.
For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the militias. But other sources are many and well-documented. If you have web access, you might take a look at the East Timor Action Network's web site: www.etan.org
2) The above would seem to have some bearing on your assertion that East Timor is attempting to "secede" from a legitimate national government - which is simply not the case. East Timor, as an Indonesian territory, is the result of a forcible annexation sponsored by U.S. and other interests. Many of the key figures in the initial "sponsorship" remain in positions of power today. In other words, this is about as far from a quixotic attempt to rectify a distant and tragic "other-people's" history as you can get.
3) You ask: "We turned the other way on Savac we see now (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?" Yes. Absolutely. As I've pointed out, this isn't simply a case of turning the other way, but a direct outgrowth of deliberate policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and unsustainable without that aid. Until very recently, a cut-off of such support might have sufficed to avert the campaign of terror now being pursued. There is no "genocidal gene" - and such pseudo-explanations ("they're just nuts _over there_, who can understand their motivations?"), I'd warrant, most often mark the site of a real and determinate chain of events, the complicity of one's own nation in which is precisely what the resort to racialized typologies attempts to obscure.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Neff
Sent: Monday, September 13, 1999 10:15 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Pete,

Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of accusation. I need to be clear.

Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me? I don't see it from what you are saying.

Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.

And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?

I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line
me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to
other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

Mike

pete spence wrote:

please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
to:[redacted]
thanks pete spence

speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just as good and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the chaotic
and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone else takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit by Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers. Certain people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think they > mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of the > East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.

>
> http://www.freetimor.com/
>
> http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html
>
> http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/
>
> http://www.etan.org/
>
> regards,
> Patrick Herron
>
> so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the
> indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a better
> usage of your time; [redacted]
>
> thanks pete spence
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
> --
>
> ==========
> Web Del Sol
> http://webdelsol.com
> LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

260. Taylor Brady
Re: Imagining Language
Thu 16 Sep 1999

John,

Yes, I've read a good chunk of it standing up in bookstores - have only just now paid off enough debt to render it affordable, and even so I share your sense that it's not "inappropriately" expensive. Steve has a piece related to some of the research for the book (might actually, be in the book, memory fails me) dealing with the visual mnemonics of medieval illuminated manuscripts that's well worth a look. Anyone know if that's been published anywhere?

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Lowther, John
Sent: Thursday, September 16, 1999 11:31 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Imagining Language

{ p o e t i x }

i assume there must be some portion of you out there whove got this book _imagining language_ that rasula and mccaffery edited ? has anyone seen a review of anywhere ? it sits on my dining room table and as i have breakfast or lunch or dinner i open it and the food gets cool (if hot) or warm (if cold) it was expensive as hell but not inappropriately expensive i dont think ----- point is that its just fucking amazing and if you (yeah, you general without me knowing squat about you singular, individual) havent seen it you really ought to (again, "ought" is a bit fishy i know but once youve had some leisure with this book i think you'll agree, and if you don't it may be that we wdnt be able to communicate very effectively anyway) this is not a review i cant really imagine an adequate review jerome rothenberg cd perhaps handle it his anthologies are the only things that this book seems comparable to

)L

↑ Index

261. Brian Lennon
Killer liberals? (was Re: I can't believe it!!!)
Thu 16 Sep 1999

I wonder what lurks beneath Thurmon Manson's "whatever"? I sincerely hope this is hyperbole, or a joke... in any case I'm glad to hear that he has trouble making friends...

P.S. Thanks, Patrick, for your response. It's true, as you point out, that skepticism can lead too easily to inertia. A point that Kent Johnson also makes. As for me, I don't think it's naive to believe in truth or the necessity to take action. Last spring, I offended the gods when I questioned the party line on Kosovo: might there be some reason to intervene, to do something besides chant prosthetically, Out Out Out!? Thankfully, I was not heaped with quite the same abuse as came to Mike Neff. But I think that's because he's more cleverly provocative than I am. At some point it becomes an issue of tone. Call me a problem child, but when someone posts assertions in what's obviously a fit of rage (e.g. Albright is a shit! Put Cohen to death! They're all motherfuckers!), no matter whether I agree or not, I'm inclined to distrust what they say.

I.e.: The List is not a New Model Army (Cromwell's Parliamentary troops, who fought the Royalists in the English civil war) waiting to march and fight the conservatives to the death--- Thurman Manson's longings notwithstanding. This is a community of people who doubtless COULD run things better--- most of whom feel powerless to influence the institutions that act without our consent. A position that is, of course, enraging. But the only thing that rage accomplishes is to muddy your argument so much that you provoke someone else's rage. Joan Houlihan has said it best so far, I think: in different ways, omnipotence is a fantasy of both the right and the left. What's startling is the ease with which that border dissolves; witness what's below.

On Wed, 15 Sep 1999, Thurmon Manson wrote:

> "Some people should die, that's just unconscious knowledge" per Jane's Addiction, although to profess strong beliefs like this will get you booted from an academic or arts scene or whatever; but I come to find that the people I seldom find but respect most share opinions along that line.

↑ Index

262. Carolyn Guertin
Re: hypertext suggestions
Thu 16 Sep 1999

There are many, so many hypertext works on the Web that are really amazing. Check out (in no particular order):

Alicia Felberbaum's 'holes-linings-threads: the future looms' (UK)
http://www.felber.dircon.co.uk/holeslinings threads/

Linda Carroli and Josephine Wilson's '*water always writes in *plural' (Australia)
http://ensemble.va.com.au/water

Tim McLaughlin's '25 Ways to Close a Photograph' (Canada)
http://www.knosso.com/NWHQ/tim/tim_25.html

Di Ball's 'Bound and Gagged' (Australia)
http://smople.thehub.com.au/dibbles/writing/menu.htm

DollYoko's 'dollspace...hauntologies' (Australia)
http://www.thing.net/~dollyoko/

mez's 'Blood Puppets: A Premillennium Manifesto' (Australia)
http://www.wollongong.starway.net.au/~mezandwalt/

Jennifer Ley's 'The Body/Politic' (USA)
http://www.heelstone.com/subtext/

Olia Lialina's 'My Boyfriend Came Back From the War' (Russia)
http://www.design.ru/olialia/war/

Kim Stringfellow's 'The Charmed Horizon' (USA)
http://www.kimstringfellow.com/charm.html

Mary Kim Arnold and Matthew Derby's 'Kokura' (USA)
http://www.eastgate.com/Kokura/Welcome.html

In fact, early next month a women's gallery of hypertext work will be debuting at Women Writers Zine <http://www.womenwriters.net/>. If you want works considered for inclusion in 'Assemblage: The Gallery' (it will be updated monthly), please let me, the curator, know.

Cheers,
Carolyn

_____ Carolyn Guertin, Department of English, University of Alberta 3-5 Humanities Centre, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2E5 Canada E-Mail: [redacted]; Tel/FAX: [redacted] Website: <http://www.ualberta.ca/~cguertin/Guertin.htm>

↑ Index

263. Aldon Nielsen
Re: novels of the 60's
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Ulysses became legal in the thirties -- Tropic of Cancer in, if I remember, the early sixties --

What I do remember is that Tropic was banned in Denver when I lived there, but could be purchased quite legally at the airport, which was then (and now again) outside the legal confines of Denver itself -- Duty Free reading?

↑ Index

264. Aldon Nielsen
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Did anybody else see the video of Wiranto singing "Feelings"? Ranks right up there with the Marcos version of "We Are the World." and what tune is Clinton singing today?

↑ Index

265. KENT JOHNSON
Beating drums
Thu 16 Sep 1999

Michael Neff said:

> These are the same people who argue that Marxism is a credible >political alternative and that the shout of freedom heared in eastern Europe >many years ago was nothing but a CIA manipulation. They only have >one drum and they bang it continuously while chanting America is Evil, >America is Evil, thereby seeking the solace of moral high ground and >community forever lost to them in the sixties.

Well, Michael, the caricature you draw above of those who find fault in your arguments seems the perfectly-traced image of the "dogmatism" you claim to despise.

No one has said that those wielding the guns and machetes on the ground are morally blameless. Where did you get that one? The reason people are upset with you, I think (though your argument is not worth getting as upset about as some apparently have in back- channel), is that you are so unwilling to recognize a simple something which should be self-evident: Local legacies, down to a machete's fine edge, are implicated in global histories. And in a country like Indonesia, whose history and political present are inextricable from imperialist intrigue and manipulation, this is quite evidently the case.

But to you, it seems, the use of "primitive," non-Pentagon supplied machetes is the anthropological sign that shows the violence for what it autochthonously is--yet one more primal spasm in a culture condemned to repeated blood-letting. You challenge people to prove otherwise. And so people (while not disagreeing that violence is, indeed, primal) have given you ample evidence that the current strife has manifested itself inside specific conditions that our government (along with other imperialist powers) has had a considerable hand in creating and perpetuating, having helped to install and then unflaggingly abet, as it has, the same party that now organizes the machete wielders.

The irony here is that it is up to you, really, to show that this history of which people have spoken has little to do with the past and present suffering in East Timor. You haven't. And you end your intervention in this discussion, even, by suggesting that the history doesn't exist except in the minds of America-Is-Evil shouting poet- spooks trapped in a 60's induced psychosis. Deep denial is a form of psychosis, Michael. I wonder if there is a clinical name for the kind where the victim's ears are filled with the sound of beating drums?

↑ Index

266. pete spence
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Thu 16 Sep 1999

> Course, if they're rampaging as humans are inclined to do from time to time, > then how can it be the fault of US.

dunno if really that was the evaluation/ thought it was all sorts make a woeism//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

267. pete spence
Re: believe it!!!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

>
> >| And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support
>South
> >| Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec?
>
>Uh, East Timor voted to be independent.
>

>Quebec voted to remain part of Canada.
>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
> ,
>
yep if there is an example like this in e-timor of being punished for your vote then wake up you who take voting for granted//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

268. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

> I defy you to name a single situation involving popular movement overthrow or bud-nippage in which there's been no CIA involvement, or any regime oppressiveness, be it in Turkey, Central America, South America (currently most "addressed" in corporate media is Colombia: CIA and DEA don't like the FARC because they going to take some American/Col Military $!!!), Haiti, Indonesia, Oakland, ad infi, not EXPLICITLY either
>
> 1) funded in total
> 2) funded intellectually
> 3) endorsed
> 4) propped by economic threat
>
> by the Pentagon CIA White House or, mightier than each aforesaid, the ten or whatever major US corporations.
>
> I wager that the White House has "decided to act" in East Timor finally not because of public pressure, but because to not do so means to risk losing some of its control there. >
> W A C O

seems reasonable to me!! given i know a bod doing a book on Joris Ivens and the film he was making at the end of the second WW when the Dutch were finally left out, i've seen what reports ASIO and others will allow on the the make of the filmcrew which included us agents and thats a long way back of interest in the region//pete

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

269. pete spence
Re: US/Indonesia: I CAN'T Believe it!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

> From: Michael Neff <[redacted]>
>
> There are at least three different versions which attempt to prove to me (regardless of the real point I was attempting to make) that America is responsible for the years of killing fests in Indonesia (and even elsewhere!). These individuals should get together and compare notes, get it straight

MIchael NEff i'm starting to wonder where you are coming from , this doesn't seem the only point thats going on in this discuss, it was NEVER the US alone being blamed i think you may have a wee twinge o' the G's!!! pete

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

270. Betsy Andrews
Info on Hadrami poetics conference?
Thu 16 Sep 1999

I received this as part of a message from a friend in Yemen. Does anyone know anything about this conference? Betsy

Have you heared any thing about a conference on the "Hadrami poems" organized by the middle East center, Austen Texas University, and will be held at Washington University, November,1999.

Dr.Mahfood Ali Ba-bttat. Kuwait University, Fac.of Sci. Dep. of Earth & Envir. Sci's. E.Mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

271. pete spence
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Thu 16 Sep 1999

>From: Patrick Herron <[redacted]>>
>This isn't my point. We're off track. My comments were directed to this >statement by Peter Spence: "It may also be just as good and probably easier >to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role in the slaughter and >oppression of the East Timorese."

>
>That was my statement, not Pete's. He excerpted an e-mail I sent him.
>
,,actually i'm sorry that happened it was supposed to go to a friend in germany as some info and i forgot the redirect!!! but when it came up in poetiks and started a discuss i left it,, sorry//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

272. derek beaulieu
Re: Imagining Language
Thu 16 Sep 1999

---

john & co.
i couldnt agree more - it stuck me quite similar to johanna drucker's _The Alphabetic Labyrinth_ and i was particularly excited by some of the work of winkler, phillips (of course), and i hadnt seen Ernst's Maximiliana before - so that was quite a treat...does anyone out there know of critical response to this book yet? (and whil eim at it - does any one know ofwhere i can find copies of phillip's _Humument_?)
ciao
derek beaulieu
----- Original Message -----
From: Lowther, John <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: September 16, 1999 12:30 PM
Subject: Imagining Language

> { p o e t i x }
>
> i assume there must be some portion of you out there whove got this book > _imagining language_ that rasula and mccaffery edited ? has anyone seen
a > review of anywhere ? it sits on my dining room table and as i have > breakfast or lunch or dinner i open it and the food gets cool (if hot) or > warm (if cold) it was expensive as hell but not inappropriately > expensive i dont think ----- point is that its just fucking amazing and if > you (yeah, you general without me knowing squat about you singular, > individual) havent seen it you really ought to (again, "ought" is a bit > fishy i know but once youve had some leisure with this book i think you'll > agree, and if you don't it may be that we wdnt be able to communicate very > effectively anyway) this is not a review i cant really imagine > an adequate review jerome rothenberg cd perhaps handle it

his > anthologies are the only things that this book seems comparable to
>
>)L
>

↑ Index

273. Christina Milletti
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Thu 16 Sep 1999

In a message dated 9/16/99 8:06:12 PM !!!First Boot!!!, [redacted] writes:

<<
 If they are working for the NSA they deserve a retirement package.

 Course, if they're rampaging as humans are inclined to do from time to time, then how can it be the fault of US? It therefore stands to reason they must be paid. >>

A bit overboard here. I never said they were being paid by the NSA or that the US is behind their rampage. Quite simply, their "employed" by the Indonesian military.

As for firsthand knowledge, there are indeed reporters on the ground who have witnessed the military and the militias working hand in hand. I can backchannel the relevant articles to you which detail the workings of this "mechanism." Isn't the internet amazing? I can read an article about the slaughter in Indonesia rather than actually going there to witness it firsthand myself?

↑ Index

274. david bromige
Painful Pages (was Novels, 60s)
Fri 17 Sep 1999

I want to second George Bowering's quick-quisition on Painful Reading, even while qualifying it by remarking there are many kinds of pain in reading, as in life generally. Possibly the pain Mr. felt in _Naked Lunch_ arose from the content, which is shocking to those who want to look only on the finer side of life. If one wants sex to be a blending of spirits, the material side of life as represented/re-created by Burroughs can be a downer. Or did the pain he speaks of, arise from the cutup method, its resistance to acquired habits of reading gritting and slipping in the mind's eye?

There is the very different pain in James' _The Ambassadors_ , of persons not living up to their promise, of the worldliness of the world corrupting the incorrupt; there is the pain in Kafka, that makes us laugh; the pain in Dostoevski, funny in _Notes of an Underground Man_ but far from it elsewhere. These are pains that arise from the action, and they are not raw pain : as a (male) singer unknown to me sang on the radio tonite, "A woman can't kill you in the House of Song." They are pain mastered,in a safe-ish place, in play, and in that serious play is so much pleasure inextricable from the pain. It is akin to the pain of learning the use of a complex tool, or instrument. The pleasure arrives in little increments of mastery.

But there is raw pain at times in reading, such as I first felt on hearing a-tonal music.....cant find the context. I imagine Mr Keith might have felt this vis-a-vis the Burroughs' text. This is part of the experience of the New. You get over it or not, as you elect. And there is pain too, a dull nagging pain, when confronted by the Stale.

Well, I guess some might be feeling that right abt now, and I apologize for going on at this length. There must be more than one phenomenology of pain-in-reading written by now, and there is a further kind of pain for me in supposing I have read one and forgotten. Bachelard might have written such a book. And authors more recent surely have. I'd like to hear of some. db

↑ Index

275. Aaron Fewell

Re: I can't believe it!!!

Fri 17 Sep 1999

In a message dated 9/16/99 4:01:43 PM Eastern Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<<

It's quite amazing to me, a liberal, to see the kind of reaction generated by a clearly written, well-reasoned message (Neff's). What has created this firestorm? Simply the suggestion that the US government (and whatever else we conceive that entity to be,it is still a collection of people with limitations) may not be wholly responsible for what's happening in East Timor. I don't see that Mike Neff was disputing any historical facts, or events leading up to what's happening there--only that he was questioning the idea that these successive events had to be linked to either a kind of evil intentionality, or an immoral turning away by the US government. He was instead, and rightly I think, proposing the idea that deeper, and even random, forces are also at work in these situations--not only, but also.

That we need to consider the constant recurrence of group hatreds, killings, the human prediliciton for wiping each other out. Nowhere was he suggesting that arms were not sold, that US interests were not pursued, or that the US often gets behind what turn out to be (or always were) rotten leaders/causes--sometimes in the interest of avoiding worse leaders/causes, or more likely, for simple economic or ideologic reasons.
>>

Joan, the US is the only top dog left. It's only natural that every piece of blame is dealt to them.

Aaron Keith (Not saying it's right, just saying it is)

↑ Index

276. Garrett Kalleberg
The Transcendental Friend 11 - September 1999
Fri 17 Sep 1999

Continuing in our abiding interest in forensic entomology, this "September" issue of The Transcendental Friend features state-of-the-art freeze-fracture images of the drosophilia (fruit fly) brain, a catalog of moths and candles and the images they illuminate, five excurses on the Romanian night (for which candles), and the brilliant light of Reason of Today's Not Opposite Day (or, The Night) (or Night) for which sleep and monsters etc.

> The Transcendental Friend, No. 11, Sept. 1999
> http://www.morningred.com/friend/1999/09

Which is to say:

Ten sonnets by Tim Atkins, in Laird Hunt's Bestiary.

The Comte de Montesquiou's "Moth," presented by Jeffrey Jullich in Idiosyncratica.

Five early Romanian poems of Paul Celan (!) translated by Julian Semilian & Sanda Agalidi, in Leonard Schwartz's Report from the Field or Afield or a field.

Mike Kelleher's "Revue" of a poem by Charles Bernstein, in Dan Machlin's Review.

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

Immanent Audio Online at:
http://www.morningred.com/immanentaudio

↑ Index

277. Aaron Fewell
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Fri 17 Sep 1999

In a message dated 9/16/99 4:13:33 PM Eastern Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<<
Does this mean that you do not want to find any reading painful?

Of course not, but rarely have I found a novel as unrelenting and difficult as Naked Lunch.

Why is that? Surely one of the most honourable and usual purposes of a fiction writer of any seriousness would be to make the reading painful. Another might be to make it exhilarating. I have found lots of writing painful (not talking about references here) and returned to it, knowing that it is important. In early years that writing included _The Cantos_. Later it included _Palimpsest_ and _Geography & Plays_ and _The Casnnibal_. I do not find books by James Lee Burke to be painful; though I read them, I will not reread them. I dont remember ever being deprtessed because a book was painful to read.

When I say depressing, I must admit it is out of a sense of self-deprecation. After reading the novel, I felt as if I had missed out on something, that I wasn't in the loop, so to speak. I had been told of this great novel and after reading it, I felt what was great about it? I could not put my finger on it. Of course, Burrough's prose is shitzophrenic and jargon-laced so I doubt I'm the only one who has had trouble with it.

George Bowering.

,

>>

↑ Index

278. david bromige
re novels held back for the 60's
Fri 17 Sep 1999

Billy, good point---if you arent allowed to eat dinner until 9 p.m., then that IS yr dinner-hour. I was over in England that year, '57, when _Ginger Man_ was published...over _there_ . But as you remark, neither it nor those other novels were available in N America until at least a little later...the Howl trial was 57 wasnt it? But I dont think we cd get _Naked Lunch_ before the early 60's...and it's worth thinking what role the books you mention played in the consciousness-shift.

As to the game of naming when the 60's (or any other of our shared decades) began and ended, what th heck, i stick w what is written in our novel Piccolo Mondo, the sixties began in 1963 _but clearly this is an assertion/observation always bound to be contradicted in a clash of subjectivities_ . And I gladly grant that specific groundwork was being laid by '55, and push that further back to the 40's (of course, ultimately, one can push it back to shortly before the Big Bang, but....). Cant recall right now if we assigned an end date to the 60's in _PM_ but I'll say '74-5, Watergate, the winding down of the Vietnam war and the first gas crisis.

++++++++++++++

Cant avoid feeling frivolous writing such things while E Timor agonizes and dies. Fanciful history here, actual history there, grinding away. I want to thank Taylor Brady for his posts vis-a-vis Indonesia; they reflect my underdstanding pretty much, and articulate it for me. I am surprised alright that any educated person would find Taylor Brady's viewpoint, surprising. Not to patronize....please believe me. Light breaks when it breaks, and often it hurts. But Christ if we leastwise somewhat informed groups arent up to speed, Brady speed, how can there ever be anything altered (and can there be anyway?). We live in our relative prosperities by wholesale oppression, up to and including mass murder. Our standard of living is going to have to drop , if we want to end---or even diminish---that situation. And isnt it dropping? Yes for most of us. But the greed/fear at the top of the foodchain is monumental, insane, out of control (while _in control_ of the rest of us). And it corrupts throughout. In the belly of the Beast, we are all smeared with Its digestive juices. db

↑ Index

279. Arielle C. Greenberg
Re: Imagining Language
Fri 17 Sep 1999

On Thu, 16 Sep 1999, Lowther, John wrote:

> i assume there must be some portion of you out there whove got this book _imagining language_ that rasula and mccaffery edited ? has anyone seen a review of anywhere ? it sits on my dining room table and as i have

I wrote a review of it which will be in the next issue of Salt Hill. I'm sure it's not adequate, but if it helps any, I love that book, too.

Arielle

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe." -- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

280. Pierre Joris
RE: Novels of the 60´s / Thomas Dorow
Fri 17 Sep 1999

> Rolf Dieter Brinkmann: Keiner weiss mehr.
>
> Brinkmann congeniously translated Frank O´Hara´s poetry to german, was the editor of "Silver Screen" and "Acid", two compilations that first introduced Burroughs, Bukowski, O´Hara and several others to a german audience. "Acid" was a cult when I was in my teens. Brinkmann himself mainly known for his poetry. Check out "Westward 1&2" if you come across it. His most exciting work is the journal "Rom, Blicke". I don´t know if any of his work is translated, if it isn´t, there´s a job to be done.

Yes, indeed, Brinkman is a marvelous poet and a superb writer all around. "Rom, Blicke" is, I think, better than his novel.I don't know if any of the prose was translated, but some of the poetry was. The English poet John James did so, and published them in the English magazine Collection 7. Interestingly enough I had email from Peter Riley, the British poet & bookseller a few days ago, asking me for info on RDB, as there seems to be a new interest in Roilf's work in Germany. I translated a few poems, but they remained unpublished and, if I remember unfinished: I was supposed to work on the translations with him when he died. (In fact, he was supposed to come over for dinner & talk about the translations the night of his detah in London, a few days after we had been together at the Cambridge Poetry Festival, but never showed. Early the next morning, I think it was, I was called and ask to identify Rolf's body in the morgue -- he had been killed by a taxicab as he stepped into the road looking in the wrong direction.)

> Hubert Fichte: Die Palette
>
> This is the first novel to portray the gay underground in Hamburg. Fichte´s style is amazing, it was termed "new sensitivity" when he first came out > with his work, but to me it appears as a combination of > Doeblin´s montage > techniques with elements of the nouveau roman, a very physical and > psychedelic style. If you don´t know it, you should. If it isn´t > translated, you should do it yourself or find somebody who will do it.

> Fichte left a great body of work after his death a few years > ago, he is > still mainly read in fan circles, but this is truly excellent stuff.
>
> Greetings, Thomas Dorow

Yes indeed, I still have it and go back to it every few years. Met him in 68' when he gave a reading from the just publishged _Palette_in Luxembourg and it turned into a memorable evening. I seem to have some memory that that book was translated, and I somehow associate that with Joachim Neugroschel, though I could be wholly wrong here.

Pierre

↑ Index

281. Pierre Joris
Re: Imagining Language
Fri 17 Sep 1999

Yes, the WAX MUSEUM is totally amazing -- don't know of reviews,however -- though there must have been some -- I have used it for teaching ever since it came out, but it now seems to be out of print and the NCTE doesn not seem like the right outfit to keep it in print.(Usin g it for teaching permits me to reread it once a year, which is most salutary).

Pierre

Pierre Joris
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
Tel: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]
Email: [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]>
Url: <http://www.albany.edu/~joris>

The postmodern is the condition of those things not equal to themselves, the wandering or nomadic null set (0={x:x not-equal x}).

Alan Sondheim

_
> i assume there must be some portion of you out there whove > got this book
> _imagining language_ that rasula and mccaffery edited ?
> has anyone seen a > review of anywhere ? it sits on my dining room table and as i have > breakfast or lunch or dinner i open it and the food gets cool > (if hot) or

> warm (if cold) it was expensive as hell but not inappropriately > expensive i dont think ----- point is that its just fucking > amazing and if > you (yeah, you general without me knowing squat about you singular, > individual) havent seen it you really ought to (again,
> "ought" is a bit > fishy i know but once youve had some leisure with this book i > think you'll > agree, and if you don't it may be that we wdnt be able to > communicate very > effectively anyway) this is not a review i cant > really imagine > an adequate review jerome rothenberg cd perhaps handle > it his > anthologies are the only things that this book seems comparable to
>
>)L

↑ Index

282. Hank Lazer

Objectivist Nexus - Discount Offer

Fri 17 Sep 1999

Announcing the latest volume in the series Modern and Contemporary Poetics, edited by Charles Bernstein and Hank
Lazer

The Objectivist Nexus
Essays in Cultural Poetics
Edited by Rachel Blau DuPlessis and Peter Quartermain

Outstanding poets and critics present cultural readings of the Objectivist poets, a group whose works have been largely unexamined.

"Objectivist" writers, conjoined through a variety of personal, ideological, and literary-historical links, have, from the late 1920s to the present, attracted emulation and suspicion. Representing a nonsymbolist, postimagist poetics and characterized by a historical, realist, antimythological worldview, Objectivists have retained their outsider status. Despite such status, however, the formal, intellectual, ideological, and ethical concerns of the Objectivist nexus have increasingly influenced poetry and poetics in the United States.

Thus, argue editors Rachel Blau DuPlessis and Peter Quartermain, the time has come for an anthology that unites essential works on Objectivist practices and presents Objectivist writing as an enlargement of the possibilities of poetry rather than as a determinable and definable literary movement. The authors' collective aim is to bring attention to this group of poets and to exemplify and specify cultural readings for poetic texts_readings alert to the material world, politics, society, and history, and readings concerned with the production, dissemination, and reception of poetic texts.

The contributors consider Basil Bunting, Lorine Niedecker, George Oppen, Carl Rakosi, Charles Reznikoff, and Louis Zukofsky within both their historical milieu and our own. The essays insist on poetry as a mode of thought; analyze and evaluate Objectivist politics; focus on the ethical, spiritual, and religious issues raised by certain Objectivist affiliations with Judaism; and explore the dissemination of poetic texts and the vagaries of Objectivist reception. Running throughout the book are two related threads: Objectivist writing as generally a practice aware of its own historical and social contingency and Objectivist writing as a site of complexity, contestation, interrogation, and disagreement.

"The critics and poets in this important collection create new paradigms for the study of poetry and culture. . . . This book will be important to any reader of modern and contemporary American poetry."_Susan M. Schultz
The University of Hawai'i-Manoa

Contributors
Charles Altieri
Charles Bernstein
Andrew Crozier
Yves di Manno
Rachel Blau DuPlessis

Norman Finkelstein
Robert Franciosi
Stephen Fredman
Alan Golding
Burton Hatlen
Michael Heller
Eric Homberger
Ming-Qian Ma
Peter Middleton
Peter Nicholls
Peter Quartermain
John Seed

Rachel Blau DuPlessis is Professor of English at Temple University.
Peter Quartermain is Professor of English at the University of British Columbia.

380 pages, 6 x 9
ISBN 0-8173-0974-8
$49.95s unjacketed cloth
ISBN 0-8173-0973-X
$24.95s paper

SPECIAL OFFER TO POETICS LISTSERV
20% DISCOUNT WHEN YOU MENTION THAT YOU ARE ON THE POETICS LISTSERV

OFFER EXPIRES 15 October 1999
To order contact Michelle Sellers:
E-mail [redacted]
Phone [redacted]
Fax [redacted] or mail to:
The University of Alabama Press
Marketing Department
Box 870380
Tuscaloosa, AL 35487-0380
Attn: Michelle Sellers
www.uapress.ua.edu

DuPlessis & Quartermain/The Objectivist Nexus, cloth discounted price $39.96 DuPlessis & Quartermain/The Objectivist Nexus, paper discounted price $19.96
Subtotal _____
Illinois residents add 8.75% sales tax

_____
USA orders: add $3.50 postage for the first book and $.75 for each additional book _____
Canada residents add 7% sales tax

_____
International orders: add $4.00 postage for the first book and $1.00 for each additional book

_____
Enclosed as payment in full _____

(Make checks payable to The University of Alabama Press) Bill my: _____Visa _____MasterCard Account number _____
Daytime phone_____
Expiration date _____

Full name_____
Signature_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____
Zip _____

Michelle Sellers
Marketing Manager
University of Alabama Press
[redacted]

↑ Index

283. Michael Neff
Marxists: You Have Nothing to Lose But Your Pain
Fri 17 Sep 1999

Observation: The Whiff of Marxism

Following any number of conspiracy buzz words, statements, "theories" posted front channel re Chevron, Exon, "follow the money" etc. and blistering backchannel attacks by individuals who I know to be bonafied life-cheated Marxists and/or fringe Marxists, my distracted and plodding neurophysics has all too slowly found the common thread in all this religious fervor. Not just "leftist" which is a label all too vague.

I've been hearing the chanting, only dismissed it long ago. Now it's returned, alive and well and festering. The capitalist thread, Marxists "following the money" and seeing unbreakable and absurdly complex webs of control spun from the corporate board rooms of oil. Of course, what else could explain the stench of America rising from the corpse of Timor? The card house complexities follow. An American official, Kissinger, touches down in Indonesia in 1975, decades of unrest, slaughters, feuding continue till the present, billions of dollars worth of arms, cash, and advisors are dispatched to make sure the killing continues in the most frenzied and diabolical of forms, and behind it all, the coporate moguls, the black gold zaibatsu, bloated and cigar fuming and chuckling at the pile of dead.

When all they had to do, like they and everyone else does so business-as-usual in the "third" world, is simply pass a few bribes to the Indonesian govt to get drilling rights.

For that matter, they could have bribed the Portugese!

What a waste of time! If I were at the NSA I'd be pissed, but we know that govt officials are far more intelligent than we are.

↑ Index

284. Al Filreis
Re: M.B. Tolson
Fri 17 Sep 1999

On Tolson and _Poetry_ (miscellaneously):

"E. & E. O." was accepted by _Poetry_ and published there with pretty strong support from (then editor) Karl Shapiro. That was, as Aldon says, 1951. Tolson had begun approaching _Poetry_ with his work in 1948. After Tolson won _Poetry_'s Best Hokin Prize, and after Lorenzo Turner published a positive review of _Libretto_ (also in _Poetry_), Henry Rago, who was then editor, got a letter from Hayden Carruth, who was also a _Poetry_ insider (having been an editor in the late 40s)--complaining about the quality of Turner and Tolson both. Both "stinkers," Carruth said. Rago replied in agreement and went further: the Turner review had come in before he, Rago, became editor, and while Shapiro was away in Europe. In other words, it was a mistake. So was accepting Tolson's poetry. Rago implied that Shapiro was not a Tolson supporter and that Tolson's poetry is awful, unfit for _Poetry_--an embarrassment. This was a lie: Shapiro had backed Tolson.

On Ray Nelson:

He is a superb editor. And critic--especially of American visionary romantic verse. His little book on Patchen is superb.

--Al Filreis

| There is finally an edition in paperback of Melvin Tolson's poems, or at | least most of them. Just out from University of Virginia Press is | <underline>"Harlem Gallery" and Other Poems of Melvin B. | Tolson.</underline> The book includes the three volumes that were | published during Tolson's life, along with a few magazine pieces that had | not been collected, including the crucial "E. & O. E." which appeared in | <underline>Poetry</underline> in 1951. The new edition includes Tolson's | notes to <underline>Libretto for the Republic of Liberia</underline> and | new annotations to <underline>Harlem Gallery</underline>, provided by the | editor, Raymond Nelson. What is not included are the earlier poems that | appeared a few years ago as <underline>A Gallery of Harlem | Portraits</underline> and some fugitive poems. There will be two | previously unpublished Tolson poems in an anthology that I am editing | with Lauri Ramey that Alabama will publish soon.

↑ Index

285. Tom Orange
Imagining Language
Fri 17 Sep 1999

john and others,

i have a review of _imagining language_ that has just appeared in the latest issue of _literary research/recherche litteraire_ (a publication that comes with membership in the icla/ailc). the print version contains scandalous amounts of typos and other editorial interventions with which i am very displeased. but a quick scan of the on-line version suggests to me that it is identical to the version i intended for publication.

http://www.uwo.ca/modlang/ailc/current/orange.htm

the same issue also contains my review of marjorie perloff's _poetry on and off the page_ (likewise superior to the print version) at

http://www.uwo.ca/modlang/ailc/current/orange2.htm

from beautifully sunny washington d.c., ("everyone come out of the ark, the flood is over!")

tom

↑ Index

286. Philip Nikolayev
MODULO FEELING
Fri 17 Sep 1999

MODULO FEELING

What you need to open is a new file. Call it A Feel for Life. What have you there, poetry, to tell me? Oh but tell me that on barbed wire snow looks especially beautiful in early January, when the atmosphere of Christmas is still on the air. Oh but tell me that robotics have advanced to such a point of perfection that there’s no longer an issue between brain and computer. For example, I am talking to you, but how the flam do you know I’m not a computer? My maker, by the way, toiled a score years in Artificial Intelligence (AI), specializing in machine translation. The quality of his work is beyond dispute. I have always been proud of him. We used to talk about AI a lot as I was growing up. For example, you can have a program that will make the computer write something really wild. Because when it is writing, there is like a cathode that goes right into the computer’s brain, and there swerve rivers far past our recognition, for likelihood’s butterflies are already settling in the nearness of our gaze, and this means the river will be an opening, disburthened of its erstwhile behavior, but still dynamic. And that means we’re already in March, and soon is my birthday. Awww. I’m no longer sure how old I am then. The telegraph wires are tall, and altogether elsewhere my blue school uniform is hung on a wire to dry, and Tom barks on the balcony in the rain. Tomik, back to the balcony, says Mom. Was a mongrel, maternally a Spaniel and paternally a mutt. A big box of apples and a lizard in a big glass jar behind it, live tarantulas in the other jars, a grafted cactus, and Twits the canary on my head (who later flew away). I’m a budding biologist, but language is a distraction. You see, the idea is that something counts as "artificial intelligence" so long as you can’t distinguish between a program’s thought process and a human’s thought process. You can’t tell if you’re talking to a computer or a human. Or by reading it’s writing. Because when it’s writing, there’s like spiral stairway at the institute, and the colleagues have gone out for a smoke, but you are stuck with your algorithm, worried about funds for the project. Your boss is a bastard non-entity. The question what Intelligence Itself is, in a Platonic sense, is never answered. But we are working out what’s intelligence as we know it, which keeps us from drifting rudderless in a sea of ill luck. Piles of dictionary entries on punched cards and various thesauri. This too must be confirmed. Since it is not copyrighted, I’ll take the continuous process of Massachusetts weather from October 1-31 and’ll make it into my latest poem. (And suppose someone will later find this poem and turn it back into weather. ’Attabe cool! Such possibilities hsould not be ruled out.) Thus, to answer your question, yes, poetry too. As you can see on the graph, computers can prospectively write it very well. Not necessarily wild stuff. Fine, measured stuff with taste. I know form experience. They, for example, will be able to write lyric poetry. Because when it is writing, there is like a modulo feeling, and it begins to multiply itself further and further, until the heart becomes incompatible with the brain, and then absolute intelligence is detached, as the hypothesis states, into an outer darkness. What happens to it thence we do not know.

↑ Index

287. Patrick Herron

Resend: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor

Fri 17 Sep 1999

More response to Mike Neff:

> I say it goes far deeper than this. These models of yours are insufficient to explain the group behavior.

given that it would take hundreds of pages of text to even begin to approximate sufficiency, i agree. i sufficiency can even be achieved through language at all. but i don't see your point as constructive or informative, frankly.

>Yes, war with Portugal would have been disastrous, like the mouse who >roared.
Hell, Portugal is poor, why didn't we just bribe them like everyone else?
Surely Chevron had enough moolah.

that's an excellent question. And honestly why I don't know, but i'd like to find out.

> Open the history books.

Ouch.

>"It is a calculated psychotic rampage. You don't have to see it; the world will go on without your seeing it. Though it would be better if you could see it. The rampage is funded and it has a history of complicity and support. The militias are either indonesians/jakartans that have settled there, finding pay as mercenaries, or even some east timorese deeply scarred from the concentration camp environment they grew up in. Keep in mind that the killing has been much much much worse in the past than it is now;"

>Yes, of course it is calculated. I do see it. The world goes on anyway.
You're touching on the local politics now, setting the scene, a scene which requires no US govt to ignite the killings.

Of course, but again, to repeat, in this instance, regardless of whether the US is REQUIRED, they were involved and were playing a role of provocateur and financers and intelligence suppliers.

>"Kissinger and Scowcroft, as representatives of the NSA (though they were also cabinet members) went with Ford on several occasions to visit with Suharto. Following the first visit, Indonesia deployed mercenaries into East Timor. the last visit (Dec. 6, 1975) presaged the full fledged invasion the following day."

>I'm going to stop here. I don't know that these two were "representatives" >of the NSA. What do you mean by representatives? You mean operatives, >don't you? How could the NSA select "representatives" in the common sense >of the word? I'm not buying that. I thought NSA was subject to guys like Kissinger, not the other way around.

If I can find the declassified docs on-line I will send you the URLs. that's how they are title on the presidential memos regarding the trips.

>"I wished that my country represented democracy and the values of freedom
>it claims to represent; it is clear that i can no longer naively cling to such a belief."

> I don't believe that either Patrick, I just think your explanations are formula in some respects and inadequate to explain the condition of group killing psychosis.

If they are formula, well, OK. I know I have no formula. This for me is pretty much independent study. Inadequate? Yes. But the US is still playing a role.
If I denied that I might as well say, "arbeit macht frei".

I thinkyou are right to want more. I don;t have all the answers. But can people add to what little work I can do and recognize what is happening? Where the guns come from, what the motives are, where the rsouces are flowing, etc?

What I have been trying to do, and pete spence as well, is to advocate voicing opinions to those in power to sya the direction. your skepticism is well founded and admirable, but protesting protest itself seems a very specious tactic for learning more about the world.

we're all responsible, you, me, pete, some leftover potato chips on a lunchroom floor, my cat, that butterfly in india flapping its wings, and so on. but the US clearly has a high probability of influencing future events in E Timor, as history shows the US has a high prior probability of such influence (Bayes' theorem, which owes everything to David Hume).

thanks Mike,

: P
Patrick

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

288. KENT JOHNSON

The sound of drums

Fri 17 Sep 1999

Michael Neff said:

> These are the same people who argue that Marxism is a credible political alternative and that the shout of freedom heared in eastern Europe many years ago was nothing but a CIA manipulation. They only have one drum and they bang it continuously while chanting America is Evil, America is Evil, thereby seeking the solace of moral high ground and community forever lost to them in the sixties.

Well, Michael, the caricature you draw above of those who find fault in your arguments seems the perfectly-traced image of the "dogmatism" you claim to despise!

No one has said that those wielding the guns and machetes in Dili are morally blameless. Where did you get that one? The reason people are upset with you, I think (though your argument is not worth getting as upset about as some apparently have in back- channel), is that you are so dismissive of something self-evident: that local legacies are implicated in global histories. And in a country like Indonesia, whose history and political present are inextricable from imperialist control and manipulation, this is quite evidently the case- - right down to the fine edge on machetes, still a widely-used tool, for example, in former colonies originally integrated into the world market as providers of agricultural raw materials to metropolitan centers.

But to you, it seems, the use of "primitive," non-Pentagon supplied machetes is some anthropological sign that shows the violence as autochthonous through and through-- yet one more primal spasm in a culture condemned to repeated blood-letting. You challenge people to prove otherwise. And so people (while not disagreeing that violence is, indeed, primal) have given you ample evidence that the current strife has manifested itself inside specific conditions that our government (along with other imperialist powers) has had a considerable hand in creating and perpetuating, having helped to install and then unflaggingly abet, as it has, the same party that now organizes the machete wielders.

The irony here is that it is up to you, really, to show that this history of which people have spoken has little to do with the past and present suffering in East Timor. You haven't. And you end your intervention in this discussion, even, by suggesting that the history doesn't exist except in the minds of America-Is-Evil shouting poet- spooks trapped in a 60's induced psychosis. Deep denial is a form of psychosis, Michael. I wonder if there is a clinical name for the kind where the victim's ears are filled with the sound of beating drums?

↑ Index

289. Tenney Nathanson
POG
Fri 17 Sep 1999

POG, the Tucson Poetry Group, is gearing up for its third year of programming (with funding from the Arizona Commission for the Arts and the Tucson/Pima Arts council): we're scheduling a series of roughly 9 poetry readings (and/or other art events) for this year.

If you'd like to be added to our email list; if you'd like to participate in POG events other than the public readings (such as informal POG get-togethers, readings, and discussions); or if you'd like to help out with event planning and logistics:

please email me at one of the addresses below (or just REPLY to this message).

thanks,

Tenney Nathanson
POG
UA English

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/

↑ Index

290. Billy Little
Re: Review
Fri 17 Sep 1999

Profoundity doesn't seem to be your strong suit Brian have you given any thought to musical comedy?

> Chomsky would be happy > with such poetry,

if only kd lang would sing that,
you'd have something

some words have no meaning w/o song wouldn't you agree?

the thought of what america would be like if email was accompanied by accordion twubbles ma sweep

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.

nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

291. Brian Stefans
John Wilkinson, Anne Tardos
Fri 17 Sep 1999

John Wilkinson
Oort's Cloud
Barque/subpress

Collecting all of Wilkinson's early books (everything prior to 1988's Flung Clear), Oort's Cloud is this English poet's first full-length collection easily available in the United States. While Wilkinson is clearly indebted to his former teacher at Cambridge University, the poet J.H. Prynne -- both poets share a polymath range of reference and use of complex rhythms, creating a near-forbidding surface density that spirals chaotically around a generally stable underlying formal structure -- the younger poet departs in his occasional use of pop cultural references, a directly emotive (nearly satiric but decentered) form of political commentary, and emphatic, almost apocalyptic tone. Indeed, some of these poems -- which seem laden with images, yet strangely lacking in color -- can be understood as "sculptural" in the most brutal of British traditions. It's not surprising that one of the poems, "Pneumatic Drill," seems to make reference, via the phrase "rock drill," to Jacob Epstein's science fiction-like sculpture of that name. ("Rock Drill" was a piece that utilized an actual drill in it, and became the name of one of Ezra Pound's series of Cantos.) The material and rational world become a matter of hard physics, and hard post-Newtonian lessons, in Wilkinson's harsh narrative gaze: "And it's mainly a business of nerve / Finding out the outline of the body / By an accident By the fate of light / And skirting your frozen chamber / They are giants of indifference Ack! Ack! / Like an aching tooth." ("Pneumatic Drill, 51") The influence of George Oppen is apparent, especially in some of the shorter poems in which the weight of a social and moral conscience bear down heavily upon the everyday: "At three-second intervals / air / disturbed his coiffure / too dense & / closely trimmed / to model the much-admired / ruffle effect // To sell his labor power / Find a willing employer // & the competent fan / empire made" (Mile End Road, 40) However, the use of highly telescoped physical imagery (often used in the context of a view of the interchangeability of matter) suggests a more harrowed consciousness, such as in the painting of Francis Bacon or the early poems of Gottfried Benn, especially when in poems that suggest the impossibility of reaching nearness in human relations: "Where have I take you or you guided me / Where I go is dis / ease / warts and thick / vaginal discharge / We are right to be suspicious / of contact / quoth the counter girl". ("Driving Each Other #4"). At times, as at the end of "Pneumatic Drill," Wilkinson seems to mourn the loss of the visionary capacity, or at least to ironize it; at others, he gives over to a sort of prophetic rhythm that he could be said to share with London contemporary Allen Fisher (and further back with Shelley and Blake). "Air Fleet Base" seems most key in this case, a very long poem that is rather repetitive in meter (Wilkinson's meters are purposely unalluring, but occasionally are flatten out to a overly-recognizable, or perhaps entropically dulled, pattern), but which, in its waves of accruing matter and fugue-like repeats of themes, suggests Walter Benjamin's take on Rimbaud's "Le Bateau Ivre," in which he suggests that rapid exchanges within the poem -- a sort of hypertrophied capitalism -- lead the writer to escape, or rise above, class. "I'm no stranger, I'm that arch arcadian trading sheep-eyes / off the kiosk behind the Shakespear cenotaph; how my flanks / pale in alabaster, worn with a finicky social observance / with expatriate lust," he writes in "Air Fleet Base." Wilkinson seems at pains to stay one step ahead of poetic domesticity, whether in interpretation, assimilation, but also the blindness of understanding or the deception of physical wholeness. The following lines, coming in at angles one after the other, seem to push the envelope toward the overwhelming question: "Beyond the heated policy / Which scorches the earth / Wet wool stinks on a hearth // Excess in that package / Smokes out the affirmative mate / In a blonde rage // Striation of exacted space / Enflames the offered meteors / Like burs on the carapace // His feet slip on the landing pad / Burst the sandals / Whose awaited message was banal." (notes to "About the Level I Start From," 80). Poems like "Bullyboy Tears" employ nursery-rhyme rhythms, while others bury deep within them the traces of poetic genres -- ballads, epics, pastorals -- that one wouldn't expect in late-modernist writing. This book is not for everyone, and might be a tougher sell stateside, where vocabulary and syntax has tended toward the "everyday," even when employing semantic breakage; for Wilkinson the breakages can suggest a "deep" reading of English (going back to the Anglo-Saxon), a cubist simultaneity, and finally plain old avant-gardist liberated words -- anything that shatters the picture of the unity of the contemporary social body, while placing within it the arguably still traditionally-employed poetic artifact (moralizing, eternal). Though Wilkinson sacrifices any easy notion of an "authorial voice," or a protagonist even in apparently narrative poems, he is not interested in "play" in the form of either Language poetics or the poems of Ashbery or the Oulipo group, so one looking for "postmodernism" can be at a loss as to how the images collect to form larger meaning structures, or how the music is to operate -- the "voice" itself seems obviously unattractive, and the outlook in the poems unsunny. However, close attention pays off, as traces of the peculiar brand of British social realism (and black humor) break through, and the vulnerability of the poet and the poem -- the inability to maintain a "perspective," or to trust either the rational, autobiographical or the visionary, along with a very real marginalization that can rely on few or no secondary structures to buttress its acceptance -- becomes a matter for deep thought.

(To order: $15 to 'A'A Arts, 2955 Dole Street, Honolulu, HI 96816)

****

Ann Tardos
Uxudo
O Books / Tuumba Press

The foreword by poet Caroline Bergvall states that Uxudo - written in spliced together bits of Hungarian, German, French, English and made-up languages, as well as pronunciation keys and other linguistic graphs - is a "multilingual text," a form of first language itself which "throws up the xenophobic asymmetries of difference." (8). Indeed, the writing begins to take on a life of its own, inviting the reader into a world of semantic and phonologic echoes, an effect furthered by the inclusion of several of Tardos's video images, many of which themselves repeat with different digital effects. As an art piece, one thinks of a much-less elegant Christian Boltanski and his out-of-focus black and white portrait photos arranged as alters, shadows in silent deference to, and communication with, the lives lost in the Holocaust. As many of the texts of Uxudo are either Fluxus-inspired doggerel, sing-songy chants, or simply candid bits from everyday life, the wafts of Europe's lost innocence are hard to ignore. As visual poems, they resemble the French Lettrism, which to American eyes tend to look ugly -- most of the technology employed here is low end, and not very slick, the fonts clashing and the margins loose -- but whose chaos becomes endearing once divined. The first line, "Aller Sunden Katzen zusammengefasst," finds its echo on the facing page: "All sins of cats rolled into one / Where do we come from and where do we go? / Images, mon ami, ich smoke nicht mehr. / Gern would I do." (19) The contrast of the fairytale line with the most basic question of the cultural exile, followed by two mixed-language sentences that make sense despite their word replacement, leads one immediately into this interstitial area that could very well be the road from any European nation state -- a margin at the heart of the center. Later, a flurry of equal signs leads the reader on a heady joy-ride of mistranslation: "quake = tremblement = Beben = renges" (22), for example, or "uxudo = uxudo = uxudo = uxudo = uxudo = uxudo" (42) as if parodying the mind's inability to make sense out of the solipsistic word. After looking at this book for a fair amount of time, one is not sure if the Zaum-like neologisms are not, in fact, Hungarian, as Tardos's unreliable witness has already acquired a reputation for slipping away when apparently most needed.

In contrast to the multimedia book Dictee by the Korean American artist Theresa Cha - a text which relates, however obliquely, the story of Korea's annexation by Japan and the subsequent liberation movement - Uxudo (the title itself comes from a word that appeared in the text after a computer malfunction) exists no where more than in the mind, where words, in the act of improvisation, have to be created out of air as the linguistic environment: "multiplicatering = multiplikatern." Page thirty playfully contains the pronunciation guide and definition of the foreign words on page thirty-one, but even after that, meaning is quite elusive: "Hochgeduld after nine from a fountain / Gekreuzung vielmehr, which is how it's done / Neighboryly jolie bete / Give it time, haromvaros." (31) The words following this bit, "Afterimage = Nachbild," sums up the project of Uxudo: it is a collection of resonances, shadows, scraps and funky constructs, mixed with the fading light of the nihilistic, playful response to this disillusionment that characterized avant-garde art of the early century. It's modernism and the nostalgia for modernism.

(There are a lot of missing diacritical marks in this review.)

↑ Index

292. Elizabeth Treadwell

a mild request re political discussions

Fri 17 Sep 1999

Dear Folks, I have been keeping silent on this because I fear attack--but I just have a small request.
When the threads and posts get long:

Please erase the message you are responding to!

I have other sources for news/opinions of East Timor, KPFA happens to be a few blocks from my house, etc. My scrolling time and time again (I get digest) through various stances on these issues doesn't help a person or a thing, anywhere.

Caveat: I am not trying to shut anyone up, I simply would ask the courtesy of ERASING THE MSG you are responding to. If we are interested, there is surely always the archive.

Cheers,
Elizabeth Treadwell

Outlet/DLB
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

293. Elizabeth Treadwell
Double Lucy update
Fri 17 Sep 1999

Hi all,

The Double Lucy Books website has been updated to include excerpts from the upcoming (in October) issue of our periodical, _Outlet (4/5) Weathermap_ : new work by Taj Jackson and Gwyn McVay, plus an excerpt from Sarah Anne Cox's interview with Kathleen Fraser, in which she speaks of the current state of "feminist" poetics.

Also, updated submission information for our next issue, _Outlet (6) Stars_.

Enjoy!
Elizabeth Treadwell, Editor

Outlet Magazine/Double Lucy Books
PO Box 9013 Berkeley, CA 94709 USA
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

To go straight to the Outlet page:

http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy/page8.html

↑ Index

294. Billy Little
Re: Flats?/novels of the sixties
Fri 17 Sep 1999

---

reminds me I left off that novel of Rudy Wurlitzer, Flats?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

295. Jeffrey Jullich
Review -Reply
Fri 17 Sep 1999

Well, Brian, now we can all see that maybe this "little review" isn't going to be published ~with good reason.~ Only seven words seems like a ~very~ little little review, wouldn't you say? New critical miniaturism.

> Brian Stefans <[redacted]> 09/15/99 02:35pm

Ok, I'm probably going to be taken to task for this, but here's a little review I wrote a while ago which isn't going to be published (tho here it is!). It may seem knee-jerky to some, sloppily termed or patronizing to others, but perhaps there's some matter here worth discussing? Or if not, not.

***

Carla Harryman
The Words, After Carl Sandburg's The Rutabaga Stories and Jean-Paul Sartre
O Books

The Words is a radical, perhaps even

↑ Index

296. Michael Neff
E TIMOR: Point Made by Nairn
Fri 17 Sep 1999

This is part of a recent communication from Allan Nairn who has now been arrested by the Indonesian govt (note, not the American govt). He is commenting on an atrocity he says he witnessed. I hope all the historians will note this closely. "The American govt also bears SOME of the responsibility." Course, as to what degree is difficult to measure on an atrocity by atrocity basis, but they do bear some. And further, "TNI/ABRI is led by murderers and is responsible." The TNI/ABRI is analogous to the Savac in Iran under the Shah, only more bloodthirsty.

"I know that the army has put me on the black list. They did this because I watched their soldiers murder more than 271 people at the Santa Cruz cemetery. This crime was the responsibility of the Indonesian army commander, General Try Sutrisno and the Minister of Defense, General Benny Murdani.

The murders were committed with American M-16 rifles. The American government also bears some of the responsibility because they have armed, trained, and given money to the TNI/ABRI, even though they knew the TNI/ABRI is led by murderers and is responsible for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Timorese, Acehnese, West Papuan and Indonesian civilians."

↑ Index

297. Tony Green
Fw: Allan Nairn detained
Fri 17 Sep 1999

This is for information of those on the list concerned about events in E.Timor.

-----Original Message-----
From: Pat Fiske <[redacted]>
To: Merilyn Fairskye <[redacted]>; acam <[redacted]>; alexander downer <[redacted]>;
almanac <[redacted]>; amanda sharrad
<[redacted]>; artspace australia <[redacted]>; australia council <[redacted]>; bernard hayward <[redacted]>; bonita ely <[redacted]>; carol archer <[redacted]>; carol ruff <[redacted]>; carolyn strachan <[redacted]>; catherine de lorenzo <[redacted]>; dlux <[redacted]>; eric gidney <[redacted]>; eva marosy-weide <[redacted]>; fiona andreallo <[redacted]>; gabrielle finnane <[redacted]>; gail gadd <[redacted]>; gary carsley
<[redacted]>; gary sangster <[redacted]>; gavan mcdonell
<[redacted]>; george burchett <[redacted]>; helen grace
<[redacted]>; hiramto <[redacted]>; ian howard <[redacted]>; ifmag <[redacted]>; jackie mckimmie
<[redacted]_nospam>; jasmin stephens <[redacted]>; jodie cunningham <[redacted]>;
joe airo-farulla <[redacted]>; john douglas <[redacted]>; john giesekam <[redacted]>; john hughes <[redacted]>; john stafford <[redacted]>; john villani <[redacted]>; jon cattapan <[redacted]>; julie <[redacted]>; karin emerton <[redacted]>; kate richards
<[redacted]>; kim lewis <[redacted]>; les sinn <[redacted]>; liz ashburn <[redacted]>; marcello mercado <[redacted]>; margaret <[redacted]>; martin bloom <[redacted]>; martin sims <[redacted]>; max gimblett <[redacted]>; michael snelling <[redacted]>; michele barker <[redacted]>; michelle boulous walker <[redacted]>; msv greg/justin <[redacted]>; nola farman <[redacted]>; ogi pishev <[redacted]>; ognian pishev <[redacted]>; open studio/wro <[redacted]>;
peter callas <[redacted]>; richard crampton

<[redacted]>; robert boynes <[redacted]>; rosemary laing <[redacted]>; sally couacaud <[redacted]>; sara hourez <[redacted]>
Date: Saturday, 18 September 1999 12:30
Subject: Re: Allan Nairn detained

All, I have received the following email from Gaylene Preston who is the producer of Punitive Damage (about New Zealand-Malaysian student Kamal Bamadhaj shot by the Indonesian military) - an excellent film that you should try to see if you haven't already. If anyone has ideas of how to help, she would appreciate it.

Thanks

Pat Fiske

Dear Pat,
I've just had some worrying news and am contacting you as I know you know how to get word around to those who care.
Allan Nairn, the American journalist in PUNITIVE DAMAGE who gave evidence at the trial and was an eye witness to the massacre, has been arrested and detained in Dili. I'm really worried about him and wonder if there's people you can contact who are influencial who may have seen the film and could put some pressure on? political or publicity?
Hope you are well.
I have just been up country visiting a friend who is dying of breast cancer, and your film was very much on my mind.
Love,
Gaylene.

Jakarta, Sept. 14 (Lusa) - American journalist Allan Nairm, one of the last journalists remaining in the devastated East Timorese capital, was detained by Indonesian security forces Tuesday, the U.S. embassy in Jakarta said. An embassy spokeman said the correspondent of the New York publication The Nation "has been detained and is being interrogated by (Indonesian) police and military" in Dili. Nairm, who has been twice expelled from Indonesia in recent years for his reporting on East Timor, was detained while viewing the destruction caused in Dili by rampaging militia, who acted with the complicity of Indonesian forces. -Lusa-

↑ Index

298. Tony Green
Fw: news of Allan Nairn
Fri 17 Sep 1999

---

further information on Nairn's fate
-----Original Message-----
From: Pat Fiske <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Saturday, 18 September 1999 14:15
Subject: FW: news of Allan Nairn

Date: Sat, 18 Sep 1999 10:31 AM

http://www.usnewswire.com/topnews/Current_Releases/0917-107.htm

Indonesian Regime to Prosecute U.S. Journalist
U.S. Newswire
17 Sep 9:58

Indonesian Regime to Prosecute U.S. Journalist
To: National and International desks
Contact: Amy Goodman, [redacted]

/UPDATE/

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 /U.S. Newswire/ -- Benny Mateus, the chief justice of Nusa Tenggara Province intends to prosecute U.S. journalist Allan Nairn for two technical violations of Indonesian immigration law, a local immigration official in Kupang, West Timor has informed Nairn.

Nairn is to be charged with engaging in unauthorized activities and overstaying his two-month visa. Both acts are considered illegal under sections 50 and 52 of the Indonesian immigration laws. If convicted, Nairn could face 10 years in prison.

Nairn, who was arrested in Dili on September 14, was one of the last journalists reporting from East Timor. Indonesian forces transferred him to Kupang in West Timor, a part of Indonesia.

A local immigration official, Mr. Zurya, has been interrogating Nairn at the immigration facility in downtown Kupang for several days.

According to Indonesian officials in Kupang, while Mateus is seeking to charge Nairn, the Minister of Justice, Dr. Muladi, and the Minister of Information, Yunus Yosfiah, are inclined to deport Nairn.

Kupang is not a safe place. The militia that have been terrorizing East Timor are now rampaging through the refugee camps in West Timor where more than 100,000 East Timorese now reside after being driven from their homes.

Hostility to Westerners in Kupang is soaring. It is likely that a U.S. citizen like Nairn will be in great danger if he is not deported immediately.

-0-/U.S. Newswire [redacted]/
09/17 09:58

Copyright 1999, U.S. Newswire

↑ Index

299. Alan Sondheim
writing the bad text
Sat 18 Sep 1999

-

Writing the Bad Text

I started writing the bad text by describing Nikuko's body as represented in a three-dimensional image, a problem immediately in translation. I needed term after term for bulbous, distended, pubescent, extravagant, outlandish, globular, following the torus meshed, pulled out from the shape, sloped into Nikuko's in-candescent form. I continued, transforming hard-s endings to -z, stars to starz, looking towards hacker/pop culture Krazy Kat Kuntry Kitchen for deep in-spir-ing. I mauled the text, took it bare-handed, caressing again that trite sexuality of seduction and sus- pense; I mauled the text, advertising the image of Nikuko's body, and by proxy, the images of her space, her mouth, her fingers, her bones -- hyp- nagogic and literally unforgettable images, images of trans-forming beauty. I repeatedly erred in the production of the text, using the dis-play pro- gram for insertions and rearrangements that refused to accommodate the de- construction of narrative and intensity that might have brought the reader to his or her knees, oh gendered topography of Nikuko's body! I tried to salvage the work by giving the URL after the date, one addressing time and the other space, as if a last resort to facticity would salvage the rest of the failure. I saw the failure proceeding as a failure; now I wrote this text, in the present, in the past, in order to efface the other, work an astonishment of language, the wonder of newborn words from me to you. I am utterly ashamed; my abjection is a defense, even though I feel I sul- lied the display program itself by a failure to produce. Perhaps the fine quality of the images themselves could only de-tract from the text; perhaps the text was at the blue-jewel-nub of exhaustion. In any case, I'm sure it's gone stillborn and missing; I won't fail at cauterization. What's re- moved from the throat can only speak mechanically, like chattering teeth, somewhere outside the range of human hearing.

↑ Index

300. Alan Sondheim

best version. Dear Chris, this is the right version. Love, Alan.

Sat 18 Sep 1999

-

Writing the Bad Text

I started writing the bad text by describing Nikuko's body as represented in a three-dimensional image, a problem immediately in translation. I needed term after term for bulbous, distended, pubescent, extravagant, outlandish, globular, following the torus meshed, pulled out from the shape, sloped into Nikuko's incandescent form. I continued, transforming hard-s endings to -z, stars to starz, looking towards hacker/pop culture Krazy Kat Kuntry Kitchen for deep in-spiring. I mauled the text, took it bare-handed, caressing again that trite sexuality of seduction and sus- pense; I mauled the text, advertising the image of Nikuko's body, and by proxy, the images of her space, her mouth, her fingers, her bones -- hyp- nagogic and literally unforgettable images, images of transforming beauty. I repeatedly erred in the production of the text, using the display pro- gram for insertions and rearrangements refuseing to accommodate the de- construction of narrative and intensity that might have brought the reader to his or her knees, oh gendered topography of Nikuko's body! I tried to salvage the work by giving the URL after the date, one addressing space and the other time, as if a last resort to facticity would efface the rest of the failure. I saw the failure proceeding as a failure; now I wrote this text, in the present, in the past, in order to negate the other, work an astonishment of language, the wonder of newborn words from me to you. I am utterly ashamed; my abjection is a defense, even though I feel I sul- lied the display program itself by a failure to produce. Perhaps the fine quality of the images themselves could only detract from the text; perhaps the text was at the blue-jewel-nub of exhaustion. In any case, I'm sure it's gone stillborn and missing; I won't fail at cauterization. What's re- moved from the throat can only speak mechanically, like chattering teeth, somewhere outside the range of human hearing. 09:18:1999:1:55:59
URL: http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/bodi.gif (body)
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/nik.gif (mouth) http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/decon.gif (bones) http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/finger.jpg (fingers) http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/space.jpg (space)

↑ Index

301. Creelea Henderson
Re: Bunting in Persia
Sat 18 Sep 1999

Here's what Bunting himself says he was doing in Persia, circa 1948:

". . . the journalists mostly ran away. They were terrified by mobs and by other threats. I have never seen people like them. Very few of them showed the slightest spunk of any sort. There was just one from the DAILY EXPRESS who was not afraid to go with me into the middle of a big riot. But, after the Greek journalist got hit on the head and was killed during a riot, the rest departed. It was shocking. I think all the cheap English papers and the American papers, without exception, disappeared within the next two or three days. In fact, all these kind of things are much less dangerous than people imagine. You can go about with threats against your life for a long time and nothing happens at all -- there's no use taking the slightest notice of them. I've been shot once or twice, and often had people looking for me supposed to be going to kill me if they could, but they never got around to it. If somebody hires a man to kill you, that man doesn't want to earn the money. He wants to get the money, but once he kills you he's taking a risk for it and he's not likely to kill you at all. One time there was a mob. I don't know quite who had hired them but I've no doubt they were hired all right. They came around and began shouting outside the door of the Riza in Teheran for my life. They wanted to kill me. And I sat in the flat of the Reuter's correspondent and watched for some time and then said I want to go hear what they're saying. And Reuter's man was a bit afraid to go out. I said what the hell, no one knows what I look like or anything. I went out. I walked into the crowd and stood amongst them and shouted DEATH TO MR. BUNTING! with the best of them, and nobody took the slightest notice of me. Another time, two men with pistols arrived at our door while I was taking an afternoon nap. My wife told them I wasn't in. That was all; they accepted that and went away again. There's no great determination on the part of hired assassins."

--from the interview with Jonathan Williams, pub. 1968 as DESCANT ON RAWTHEY'S MADRIGAL.

Given a better perspective on this side of the 1979 revolution, it's unfortunate that Bunting paints those early protests as paid contrivances--but then one is tempted to say that's Bunting for you. Probably he was too busy exercising his bravado to organize the coup (if that's what you were suggesting). He returned to the UK in 1951.

Regardless, it seems to me Bunting is nearly impossible read as a model of an even remotely admirable political stance. I do find him fascinating, however, for the glimpse he affords into a worldview that I really think shan't come again.

Impossibly self-assured, pointedly contemptuous of "cowards" and "frauds," beauty as a purifier of character containing its own absolute authority, and the like. But his work was only published post WWII, and the times had changed, were changing, beneath him. Yet he actually seems to will himself, even more than Pound, out of his own time, until his conservatism (though he wouldn't call it such), like the conservatism of the Amish, becomes a kind of pure eccentricity, no longer digestible even by conservatives.

And he does know, on occasion, how to cram alotta furniture into a small space. "Guides at the top claim fees/though the way is random"

Others, I understand, may not be able to consider Bunting's "Poet appointed dare not decline" pomposity a mere historical curiosity. And we've yet to mention his "Carmencita's tawny paps/glow through a threadbare frock," etc.

Brent Cunningham

At 04:25 PM 9/16/99 +1000, you wrote:
>I'm not trying to deflect the worthwhile political drift of the List here, >but I've always wondered just what Basil Bunting was doing in Iran as a >British spy.
>
>My Hutchinson Encyclopeda says:
>
>"During World War II, Iran was occupied by British, US, and Soviet troops >until 1946. Anti-British and anti-American feeling grew and in 1951 the >newly elected prime minister, Dr Muhammad Mossadeq, obtained legislative >approval for the nationalilzation of Iran's largely foreign-owned petroleum >industry. With US connivance, he was deposed in a 1953 coup and the dispute >over nationalisation was settled the following year when oil-drilling >concessions were granted to a consortium of eight companies. "
>
>Basil?
>
>Basil?
>
>
> -- John Tranter, editor, Jacket magazine
>
>
> from
> John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
> tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted]
> Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html

> Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at > http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html
>

↑ Index

302. Tisa Bryant
SF Book Festival Panel Discussions
Sat 18 Sep 1999

(Talk to Me) In My Language, a panel hosted by the 1999 San Francisco Bay Area Book Festival, October 16, 1999, 3:30 pm, Fort Mason, Marina Conference Center, San Francisco. Co-sponsored by Small Press Distribution and Modern Times Bookstore.

A gathering of innovative writers of color, exploring the nuances and challenges of communication and community, tradition and experimentation, publishing and politics, from the perspectives of Will Alexander, Catalina Cariaga, Summi Kaipa, Pamela Lu, Nathaniel Mackey, Harryette Mullen. Moderated by Tisa Bryant.

Will Alexander' is the author of Asia & Haiti (Sun & Moon, 1995), Stratospheric Canticles (Pantograph, 1995), Towards the Primeval Lightning Field (O Books, 1998), and his latest book of poems, Above The Human Nerve Domain (Pavement Saw Press, 1998). He has recent writing in the latest issues of Chain, Fence, Orpheus Grid, and in translation, a set of poems in the journal Vatra out of Bucharest, Romania. A special section of Callalloo, edited by Harryette Mullen and dedicated to the work of Mr. Alexander, is forthcoming, as is his novella, Alien Weaving, from Green Integer Press.

Catalina Cariaga was born in Los Angeles, CA (1958) and received her Bachelors of Music from Mount St. Mary's College in Los Angeles, and her Masters of Fine Arts in Creative Writing from San Francisco State Unversity. She is a contributing editor of Poetry Flash, a Poetry Review and Literary Calendar for the West. She has taught on the adjunct faculty of the Poetics Program at New College of California in San Francisco. Her poetry has been published in many journals, including Chain, Lipstick 11, New American Writing and ZYZZYVA. Cultural Evidence is her first book of poetry (Subpress, 1999). She works for University Relations at UC Berkeley, and lives in Oakland.

Summi Kaipa is the editor of Interlope, a journal of Asian American poetics. She has published work in Fourteen Hills Review, Kenning, Rhizome, Rain Taxi, Tool A Magazine and Tripwire . A chapbook of her poetic work is forthcoming from Leroy Press.

Pamela Lu was born in Southern California and studied mathematics at the University of California, Berkeley. Since 1995 she has worked as a technical writer in Silicon Valley and co-edited Idiom (www.idiomart.com), an online journal and chapbook press. In addition to a book of fanciful non-fiction, Pamela: A Novel (Atelos Press,1999), she has had prose and poetry published in a number of journals, including Chain, Chicago Review, Clamour, Explosive Magazine, Interlope, Mirage, and Poetics Journal. She lives in San Francisco.

Nathaniel Mackey is the author of several chapbooks and books of poetry, among them Four for Trane (Golemics, 1978), Outlantish (Chax Press, 1992) Eroding Witness (University of Illinois Press, 1985), School of Udhra (City Lights Books, 1993) and Whatsaid Serif (City Lights Books, 1998). Strick: Song of the Andoumboulou 16-25, a compact disc recording of poems read with musical accompaniment was released in 1995 by Spoken Engine Company. He is the author of an ongoing prose composition, From A Broken Bottle Traces of Perfume Still Emanate, of which two volumes have been published: Bedouin Hornbook (Callaloo Fiction Series, 1986; second edition: Sun & Moon Press,1997) and Djbot Baghostus's Run (Sun & Moon Press, 1993), and editor of the literary magazine Hambone, and coeditor (with Art Lange) of the anthology Moment's Notice: Jazz in Poetry and Prose (Coffee House Press, 1993). He is also the author of a book of critical essays, Discrepant Engagement: Dissonance, Cross-Culturality, and Experimental Writing (Cambridge University Press, 1993). Mr. Mackey is Professor of Literature at the University of California, Santa Cruz.

Harryette Mullen's most recent book of poems, her fourth, is Muse and Drudge (Singing Horse Press, 1995). Her previous books of poems include Trimmings (Tender Buttons, 1991) and S*PeRMK*T (Singing Horse Press, 1992). Ms. Mullen's work has just appeared or is forthcoming in Hambone, Moving Borders: An Anthology of Innovative Writing by Women, The Gertrude Stein Awards for Innovative Poetry, Santa Monica Review, Frame-Work, and the exhibit catalog of the Kimchi Xtravaganza at the Korean American Museum. She is also the author of Freeing the Soul: Race, Subjectivity and Difference in Slave Narratives, forthcoming from Cambridge University Press, December 1999. She teaches at the University of California, Los Angeles.

****

Followed by "Fast, Cheap and Out of Control: New Publishers at SPD", a panel of new SPD publishers will discuss and answer questions about running a successful small press today. The panel will be moderated by Laura Moriarty, Assistant Director of Small Press Distribution, and features:
SKANKY POSSUM Hoa Nguyen, Dale Smith
MELODEON POETRY SYSTEMS Peter Neufield, Eric Frost
KRUPSKAYA Jocelyn Saidenberg, Hung Q. Tu

FLIPSIDE Anatalio C. Ubalde
ATELOS Lyn Hejinian, Travis Ortiz

20% OFF ALL BOOKS ALL DAY
OCTOBER 16 & 17, 10-6PM
SAN FRANCISCO BAY AREA BOOK FESTIVAL

****

Today we declare:
First, they are living in a Nono form;
Second, they are Nono lives;
Third, they make us feel Nono;
Fourth, they make us become Nono;
Fifth, we Nono.
Lan Ma
"Manifesto of Nonoism"
(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
****

↑ Index

303. Kimmelman, Burt
cid corman (still more)
Sat 18 Sep 1999

I just got another letter from cid corman who now (why didn't i know this sooner?) says that he will be charged $35.00 either to cash a check or a wire transfer in japan, so if the amount of money that might be sent to him is small then the best bet is simply to stuff it in an envelope and hope for the best.

if you haven't and are still inclined, send to:

Cid Corman
Fukuoji-cho 80
Utano
Kyoto [redacted]
Japan.

- Burt Kimmelman

↑ Index

304. James Brook
city lights books - fall events & readings
Sat 18 Sep 1999

For any listers in or about the San Francisco Bay Area, the following is an announcement of in-store events at City Lights Bookstore for September, October, and a smidgen of November. (NB: smidgen is a precise measurement.)

--James Brook

Upcoming Events

All City Lights events are free and open to the public.

All events take place at

City Lights Bookstore
261 Columbus Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94133
[redacted]
http://www.citylights.com

September | October | November

September Events

Tuesday, Sept. 21, 7 p.m.

Promised Land: Italian Poetry After 1975
Edited by Luigi Ballerini, Beppe Cavatora, Elena Coda, and Paul Vangelisti
A Bilingual Edition
Published by Sun & Moon Classics

The Istituto Italiano di Cultura and City Lights Books are pleased to present a reading and celebration of this delightful, comprehensive anthology of late-twentieth-century Italian poetry.

Several of the authors will be in attendance. Please join us for this special event!

[top]

Thursday, Sept. 23, 7 p.m.

L.A. Exile: A Guide to Los Angeles Writing 1932-1998
Edited by Paul Vangelisti and Evan Calbi
Published by Marsilio Press

A curious literature of exile: the writers of this anthology came from Europe, other parts of the United States, and disparate and invisible parts of California. Along with the familiar figures of prewar, exotic Hollywood, such as Raymond Chandler, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Aldous Huxley, and Thomas Mann, L.A. Exile offers a look at the successive generations who have addressed a different, ever-shifting, essentially boundless and absent metropolis.

Paul Vangelisti will speak and sign copies of L.A. Exile.

[top]

October Events

Friday, Oct. 1, 7 p.m.

Lotería Cards and Fortune Poems: A Book of Lives
Linocuts by Artemo Rodríguez
Poems by Juan Felipe Herrera
Published by City Lights Books

Come celebrate with us the release of Lotería Cards and Fortune Poems, the linoleum-cut prints of talented Mexican artist, Artemo Rodríguez, paired with the poetry of the fine Chicano poet, Juan Felipe Herrera. Based on lotería, a popular game of chance from colonial Mexico, the images are masterful reinterpretations of traditional iconography, as seen by an artist new to the United States.

Lotería Cards and Fortune Poems gives a contemporary twist to a rich folk tradition. Rodríguez and Herrera offer a seamless union of word and image, and of Mexican and Chicano sensibilities.

[top]

Sunday, Oct. 3, 4 p.m.

Distance No Object
By Gloria Frym
Published by City Lights Books

Come join author Gloria Frym to celebrate the publication of her second book of short stories. In Distance No Object, Gloria Frym turns her ironic, passionate gaze to post-Vietnam Berkeley and San Francisco. Private lives are still swept along by the currents of history, as in the sixties. But the names of the wars of have changed. . . . The stories of Distance No Object evoke the deep frustrations between generations, friends, neighbors, and races. Yet civility, quotidian justice, a common language, and new love are imagined. . . .

Gloria Frym's previous books include How I Learned, By Ear, Back to Forth, and Impossible Affection.

[top]

Wednesday, Oct. 13, 7 p.m.

Honk if You Love Aphrodite
By Daniel Evan Weiss
Published by Serpent's Tail Press

Acclaimed author of The Roaches Have No King and The Swine's Wedding, Daniel Evan Weiss reimagines Homer's Odyssey as set in contemporary Brooklyn. Described as "abundantly funny, exhilaratingly cynical" by Fay Weldon and the "Evil Knievel of novelists" by Newsday, Weiss takes us on an epic quest for love in the boroughs of the Big Apple.

Come hear David Evan Weiss read from Honk if You Love Aphrodite.

[top]

Monday, Oct. 18, 6 p.m.

Bookstore: The Life and Times of Jeannette Watson and Books & Co.
By Lynne Tillman
Published by Harcourt Brace

From 1977 to 1997 Books & Co. was one of the premier independent bookstores in the country. Stocking a wide range of fiction and nonfiction, the Madison Ave. bookstore was the kind of bookstore writers and readers dream about: a place where reading was an adventure, where interesting works would always be available, where writers would congregate to share ideas and discuss their writing. In Bookstore, Lynne Tillman tells the story of this legendary bookstore and its founder, Jeannette Watson, through the voices of employees, customers, writers, fellow booksellers, and people throughout the world of publishing.

Jeannette Watson will speak about Bookstore and her remarkable career.

[top]

Wednesday, Oct. 20, 7 p.m.

Imperial San Francisco: Urban Power, Earthly Ruin
By Gray Brechin
Published by University of California Press

Local urban geographer and coauthor of Farewell, Promised Land: Waking from the California Dream, Gray Brechin offers a myth-shattering reevaluation not only of the city by the Golden Gate but of urbanization itself in a saga that extends from the rise of ancient Rome to the founding of Washington, D.C., to the nuclear destruction of Hiroshima.

Gray Brechin will speak and sign copies of his books.

[top]

Thursday, Oct. 21, 7 p.m.

Two new books by William L. Fox--

Mapping the Empty: Eight Artists and Nevada
Published by University of Nevada Press
&
Driving by Memory
Published by University of New Mexico Press

William L. Fox is literature consultant for the Western States Arts Federation, a poet and writer, an arts consultant, and a curator. He has published poems and articles in sixty magazines and he has had thirteen collections of poetry published in three countries. He is the author of several exhibition catalogues and the editor of two anthologies.

Mapping the Empty relates the unique work of eight Nevada artists to the geography of their state. Driving by Memory is a meditation on driving in the desert. It is a profoundly personal book about the most public of subjects: life in the postmodern West at the end of the millennium and what the cities, the freeways, the open spaces, and the billboards tell us about ourselves.

William L. Fox will be on hand to sign copies of his new books.

[top]

Sunday, Oct. 31, 5 p.m.

The Vampire Lectures
By Lawrence Rickles
Published by University of Minnesota Press

Things get spooky in cultural studies on Halloween! The Vampire Lectures is based on the course that Lawrence Rickles has taught for several years at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Rickles gives undead history of vampirism in legend, literature, and film. The Vampire Lectures makes an original and intellectually rigorous contribution to literary and psychoanalytic theory as Rickles identifies the subconscious meanings, complex symbolism, and philosophical arguments--particularly those of Marx, Freud, and Nietzsche--embedded in vampirism and the gothic.

Come meet Lawrence Rickles before the lights go out!

[top]

November Events

Tuesday, Nov. 16, 7 p.m.

The Monstrous and the Marvelous
By Rikki Ducornet
Published by City Lights Books

In her first book of essays and interviews, Rikki Ducornet focuses her "fearless looking" on contemporary art, literature, and politics. She examines the scatological clocks of Jonathan Swift and Angela Carter, the cabalistic dada of Robert Coover, and the lethal eroticism of David Lynch and the Brothers Quay. The works of Clarice Lispector, Ramón Alejandro, Joseph Cornell, Rosamond Purcell, Kafka, and Borges are occasions for investigation into a subversive aesthetic of terror and pleasure. In The Monstrous and the Marvelous Ducornet gives us NAFTA as Babel and Chiapas as gnostic nightmare.

Rikki Ducornet is also the author of Entering Fire (City Lights Books), The Stain, The Fountains of Neptune, The Jade Cabinet, and Phosphor in Dreamland. She makes a rare appearance to speak and sign copies of her new book.

[top]

Copyright © 1999 City Lights Books

↑ Index

305. Jerrold Shiroma
Small Press Announcements deadline
Sun 19 Sep 1999

The deadline for this weeks Small Press Publications Announcements page at Duration online is this Friday. Any publisher who wishes their books/journals/ etc. listed, please send all relevant information--titles, authors, prices, contact/ ordering information/brief blurbs/& web addresses (if applicable), to Jerrold Shiroma @ [redacted]

↑ Index

306. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Sun 19 Sep 1999

Writers Forum announces the publication of 6 more issues of Domestic Ambient Noise. They are:

"bah!" by Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton; Writers Forum, 1999; ISBN 0 86162 89 0 X

"bah-amas" by Lawrence Upton & Bob Cobbing; Writers Forum, 1999; ISBN 0 86162 891 8

"raffish" by Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton; Writers Forum, 1999; ISBN 0 86162 892 6

"naff" by Lawrence Upton & Bob Cobbing; Writers Forum, 1999; ISBN 0 86162 893 4

"inhabit the kick" by Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton; Writers Forum, 1999; ISBN 0 86162 894 2

"kick that habit" by Lawrence Upton & Bob Cobbing; Writers Forum, 1999; ISBN 0 86162 895 0

Each is £1 sterling + postage. Discounts for multiple copies. Sterling cheques only please

Order from New River Project, 89a Petherton Road, London N5 2QT. Enquiries with s.a.e. / i.r.c. please

---
Writers Forum website
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

↑ Index

307. Lowther, John
IMAGINING LANGUAGE
Sun 19 Sep 1999

{ p o e t i x }

interesting ------ a fair number of folks wrote me backchannel to express a thought or two about the book in question ----- thanx to all of you, i was clearly overstating when i suggested that there weren't many who were up to the task of reviewing it ----- yet stand by the statement in spirit still cd anyone give me emails for steve mccaffery and jed rasula and MIT press ? ------ i'd like to give them a piece of my mind ----- tom orange talks in his review about the anthology "industry" and of critics who write specifically about anthologies ------ tom, no offense, but i don't care too much about that ----- that this amazing book is unlikely to be used as a classroom text, while lamentable, doesnt matter very much to me ------- it is my belief that short of insuring that a copy be installed in every public library in the country the best measure that MIT cd take wd be to put the entire text on-line ----- as has been discussed here previously such actions have shown to actually boost sales of the books available in this way

further i wd love to see SMcM and JR be able to add more material to what's on-line ----- addenda and appendixes and whatever else they'd have loved to have included but which wd have made thing impossible to see into print ----- and still further i'd love to see others who've special knowledge of things hinging with the veritable universe of things which one might include as within the scope of this book, i should like to see them be able to contribute as well

i was serious when i said that i didnt think the book was over-priced ----- at the same time, had i not been the recent beneficiary of some holiday money i'd still not own the book (altho i must admit to the possibility however slight, that i might have stolen it) ---- its considerations of this kind (the cost not jail time) that make me think that the book ought to be available on line

↑ Index

308. William Slaughter
Mudlark Announcement
Sun 19 Sep 1999

New and On View: Mudlark Poster No. 19

Michael Baron | doubt can bring you light

* * * * * * * * * * *

Spread the word far and wide...

William Slaughter

_____
MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

309. Philip Nikolayev
TERVOUKLE: IDENTITY
Sun 19 Sep 1999

TERVOUKLE: IDENTITY

Documents are linear teleorphinations.
Tables are grandiloqueporcations.
Manners are fertiliregrinations.
Chalices are infovarications.
Intellemorganating in the gutter,
An alcoholimeritrist may utter:
I much prefertorilifize butter
To living in the fuduruckable gutter.
My identity is telemordopted,
And I have been technically coopted
Intorout the service of the craneorum.

> But here I stand alone amid the forum.
> As zeugmafores fly sprawling on the wind,
> my alphatrones are comfortably ginned.

↑ Index

310. David Highsmith
Philip Whalen / Scalapino
Sun 19 Sep 1999

Leslie Scalapino has asked that I report that Philip Whalen is back in the hospital (Mount Zion, 1600 Divisidero, San Francisco) and can receive cards there for about the next twelve days after which it is assumed that he will be released, having completed his course of treatment.

↑ Index

311. Mills, Billy
Novels of the 60's
Mon 20 Sep 1999

This message is in MIME format. Since your mail reader does not understand this format, some or all of this message may not be legible.

> charset="iso-8859-1"

Is it just me, or does anyone else find it ironic that, in the middle of all this debate about U.S. imperialism, someone seems to be suggesting that certain novels belong to the 60's because they became available in the U.S. in that decade?

Billy Mills

Billy Little wrote:

Subject: Re: novels of the 60's

lady chatterley's lover
henry miller
 ullysses
 lolita
and i thought ginger man
were forbidden in the states until maybe the howl trial or was that in 57 too?
Didn't the 60's start in 55? and end with the murder of john lennon?was that 79?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0

canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

charset="iso-8859-1"

<!DOCTYPE HTML PUBLIC "-//W3C//DTD HTML 3.2//EN"> <HTML>
<HEAD> <META HTTP-EQUIV=3D"Content-Type" CONTENT=3D"text/html; = charset=3Diso-8859-1"> <META NAME=3D"Generator" CONTENT=3D"MS Exchange Server version = 5.5.2448.0">
<TITLE>Novels of the 60's</TITLE> </HEAD> <BODY>

<P><FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">Is it just me, or does = anyone else find it ironic that, in the middle of all this debate about = U.S. imperialism, someone seems to be suggesting that certain novels = belong to the 60's because they became available in the U.S. in that = decade?</FONT></P>

<P><FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">Billy Mills</FONT>
</P>

<P><FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">Billy Little wrote:</ FONT> </P>

<P><FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">Subject: Re: novels of the = 60's</FONT>
</P>

<P><FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">lady chatterley's = lover</FONT> <FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">henry miller</FONT> <FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman"> ullysses</FONT> <FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times
New Roman"> lolita</FONT>
<FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times
New Roman">and i thought ginger = man</FONT>
<FONT SIZE=3D2
FACE=3D"Times New Roman">were forbidden in the = states until maybe the howl trial or was that in 57 too?</FONT>
<FONT SIZE=3D2
FACE=3D"Times New Roman">Didn't the 60's start in = 55? and end with the murder of john lennon?was that 79?</FONT> </P> <P><FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">forbidden plateau fallen =

body dojo</FONT>

<FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">4 song st.</FONT>

<FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">nowhere, b.c.
V0R1Z0</FONT>

<FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">canadaddy</FONT>

<FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">[redacted]</FONT>

<FONT SIZE=3D2 FACE=3D"Times New Roman">zonko</FONT>
</P>

</BODY> </HTML>

↑ Index

312. Ron Silliman
MC Richards
Mon 20 Sep 1999

From today's NY Times. I had not realized that she lived just 15 miles away.

Ron

September 20, 1999

M.C. Richards, Poet, Potter and Essayist, Dies at 83

By ROBERTA SMITH

M. C. Richards, a poet, potter, essayist, translator and painter, who taught at Black Mountain College in the late 1940's and thereafter became an impassioned advocate of community in both art and life, died on Friday at Camphill Village, an agricultural community in Kimberton, Pa., where she had lived since 1984. She was 83. An artist who wrote poems about pottery and made pots inspired by her reading, Ms. Richards was perhaps best known for "Centering in Pottery, Poetry and the Person," a book of essays published in the middle of the tumultuous 1960's that was impressive for its synthesis of thought, plain speech and incantatory momentum. The book, which became an underground classic, pulled together ideas about perception, craft, education, creativity, religion and spirituality, arguing for the richness of daily experience if carefully attended to, and the creativity of the average person. "Poets are not the only poets," Ms. Richards wrote.

Mary Caroline Richards was born in Weiser, Idaho, in 1916 and reared in Portland, Ore. She earned a bachelor's degree in literature and languages from Reed College in 1937, with a thesis titled "Poetry of the Tang Dynasty in Relation to Western Imagism." She went on to the University of California at Berkeley, where she studied Chinese and wrote her Ph.D. dissertation on irony in Thomas Hardy in 1942. She then began a brief marriage, and taught English at the Central Washington College of Education in Ellensburg, Wash., and at the University of Chicago. But she found academic life stifling.

In 1945 she married Albert William Levi Jr., her second husband and a social scientist who was invited that year to join the faculty of the experimental Black Mountain College, near Asheville, N.C. Black Mountain was a short-lived laboratory for innovative teaching and art whose faculty and students included Josef and Anni Albers, John Cage, Merce Cunningham, David Tudor, Robert Rauschenberg and Charles Olson.

At Black Mountain Ms. Richards taught writing, produced and, when necessary, translated plays by Cocteau, Satie and Yeats. She also danced and studied pottery with Robert Turner. Around 1950 she participated in what might have been the first "happening," with Cage, Olson, Rauschenberg and Franz Kline. In 1951 she separated from her husband, whom she later divorced, and in 1952 she went to New York with Tudor.

She studied pottery at Greenwich House in Greenwich Village, attended the meetings of the downtown avant-garde known as the Club and worked on the first English translation of Antonin Artaud's influential "Theater and Its Double," published by Grove Press in 1958.

In 1954 Ms. Richards, Tudor and Cage, along with Paul Williams, an architect, and Karen Karnes, a potter, who had both also been at Black Mountain, established a commune called the Land near Stony Point, N.Y. Ms. Richards lived there for a decade, working in a studio with Ms. Karnes; they developed a form of flame-proof clay that enabled them to make ceramic cookware.

Ms. Richards began giving pottery workshops in the early 1960's. Reflecting the ideas that would figure in "Centering," these became increasingly interdisciplinary, with titles like "Clay and Words," "Clay and Movement" and "Clay and Eurythmy." She lectured and taught workshops at schools in the United States, Canada and Britain.

Her longest teaching affiliation, from 1986 until her death, was with the University of Creation Spirituality, established in Oakland, Calif., by Matthew Fox, a Dominican priest.

Ms. Richards's books, which often mixed prose and poetry, included "The Crossing Point" (1973), "Opening Our Moral Eye" (1996), "Imagine Inventing Yellow" (1991) and "Toward Wholeness: Rudolf Steiner Education in America," a work of social philosophy. The Camphill community in Kimberton is one of 80 Camphills worldwide based on Steiner's teachings.

In 1989 Ms. Richards, who has no survivors, added painting to her roster of activities. She then exhibited ceramics, poems and paintings together, most recently at the Works Gallery in Philadelphia in 1997. The Worcester Center for Crafts in Massachusetts is organizing a retrospective of her work that is to open on Oct. 9, with a public memorial.

Ms. Richards embraced old age with characteristic openness, writing a poem in 1997 in which she saw herself as "living toward dying, blooming into invisibility."

↑ Index

313. Poetics List Administration
A Call for a Paper
Mon 20 Sep 1999

---

had to reformat this one a bit.

From:[redacted]
Time: 16 Sep 1999 21:10:57 -0000

Dear Lists,

Hi, I'm the editor of Fence, a journal of poetry, fiction, art and criticism. What follows below is a call for a paper:

Our explicit intention at Fence is to maintain a kind of deeply curious innocence in matters of literary genealogy: not to avoid opinion, but to publish essays that foster poetic literacy by tracing the development of various issues, schools of thought, and aesthetics surrounding contemporary poetry. Because we are interested in inviting all kinds of readers to the table, the essays we publish are addressed, to a certain extent, to the lay-person, ie, not someone who has already read all the secondary sources.

The Poetry Wars are fought, to a great extent, over the idea of subjective experience. For our 6th issue, we are seeking an expository essay of 10-15 ms. pages which traces the development, roots and shoots exposed, of the treatment of the self in poetry, starting sometime in the early 19th century and placing special emphasis on the last fifty years or so. We are looking for someone who can take a relatively non-partisan approach; someone who can drop names left and right, from Coleridge to Olson to Lowell to Hejinian; and someone who is willing to work closely with Fence's editors.

If you think you might be interested in writing such an essay, please contact Frances Richard, Fence's non-fiction editor, at [redacted].

Thank you.

↑ Index

314. Charles Bernstein
Rudy Burckhardt Memorial
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Memorial for Rudy Burckhardt
an evening of poetry, dance, and film

Tuesday, November 2, 1999, 7:30 PM in the Great Hall at Cooper Union 7 East 7 Street, New York

with

Jacob Burckhardt
Lukas Burckhardt
Tom Burckhardt
Yoshiko Chuma
Douglas Dunn & Grazia Della Terza
Red Grooms
Eric Holzman
Yvonne Jacquette
Alex Katz
Vincent Katz
Ron Padgett
Simon Pettet
Edith Schloss

and others

*

Screening of Films by Rudy Burckhardt
6PM, Tuesday November 30, 1999
Museum of Modern Art, New York

↑ Index

315. Poetics List Administration
Novels of the 60's
Mon 20 Sep 1999

---

had to reformat this one a bit.

From: "Mills, Billy" <[redacted]>
Time: Fri, 17 Sep 1999 09:15:44 +0100

Haven't seen any mention of:

Ken Kesey: Sometimes a Great Notion

Flann O'Brien: The Third Policeman and The Poor Mouth

Billy

hardPressed poetry

Alternative Irish poetry publishing and distribution

[redacted] <mailto:[redacted]>

↑ Index

316. Poetics List Administration
Marxists: You Have Nothing to Lose But Your Pain
Mon 20 Sep 1999

---

had to reformat this one a bit.

From: Michael Neff <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 17 Sep 1999 09:38:34 -0400

Observation: The Whiff of Marxism

Following any number of conspiracy buzz words, statements, "theories" posted front channel re Chevron, Exon, "follow the money" etc. and blistering backchannel attacks by individuals who I know to be bonafied life-cheated Marxists and/or fringe Marxists, my distracted and plodding neurophysics has all too slowly found the common thread in all this religious fervor. Not just "leftist" which is a label all too vague.

I've been hearing the chanting, only dismissed it long ago. Now it's returned, alive and well and festering. The capitalist thread, Marxists "following the money" and seeing unbreakable and absurdly complex webs of control spun from the corporate board rooms of oil. Of course, what else could explain the stench of America rising from the corpse of Timor? The card house complexities follow. An American official, Kissinger, touches down in Indonesia in 1975, decades of unrest, slaughters, feuding continue till the present, billions of dollars worth of arms, cash, and advisors are dispatched to make sure the killing continues in the most frenzied and diabolical of forms, and behind it all, the coporate moguls, the black gold zaibatsu, bloated and cigar fuming and chuckling at the pile of dead.

When all they had to do, like they and everyone else does so business-as-usual in the "third" world, is simply pass a few bribes to the Indonesian govt to get drilling rights.

For that matter, they could have bribed the Portugese!

What a waste of time! If I were at the NSA I'd be pissed, but we know that govt officials are far more intelligent than we are.

--simple boundary--

↑ Index

317. Poetics List Administration
Re: M.B. Tolson
Mon 20 Sep 1999

---

had to reformat this one a bit

From: Al Filreis <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 17 Sep 1999 09:42:19 -0400

On Tolson and _Poetry_ (miscellaneously):

"E. & E. O." was accepted by _Poetry_ and published there with pretty strong support from (then editor) Karl Shapiro. That was, as Aldon says, 1951. Tolson had begun approaching _Poetry_ with his work in 1948. After Tolson won _Poetry_'s Best Hokin Prize, and after Lorenzo Turner published a positive review of _Libretto_ (also in _Poetry_), Henry Rago, who was then editor, got a letter from Hayden Carruth, who was also a _Poetry_ insider (having been an editor in the late 40s)--complaining about the quality of Turner and Tolson both. Both "stinkers," Carruth said. Rago replied in agreement and went further: the Turner review had come in before he, Rago, became editor, and while Shapiro was away in Europe. In other words, it was a mistake. So was accepting Tolson's poetry. Rago implied that Shapiro was not a Tolson supporter and that Tolson's poetry is awful, unfit for _Poetry_--an embarrassment. This was a lie: Shapiro had backed Tolson.

On Ray Nelson:

He is a superb editor. And critic--especially of American visionary romantic verse. His little book on Patchen is superb.

--Al Filreis

---------- --

| There is finally an edition in paperback of Melvin Tolson's poems, or at | least most of them. Just out from University of Virginia Press is | <underline>"Harlem Gallery" and Other Poems of Melvin B. | Tolson.</underline> The book includes the three volumes that were | published during Tolson's life, along with a few magazine pieces that had | not been collected, including the crucial "E. & O. E." which appeared in | <underline>Poetry</underline> in 1951. The new edition includes Tolson's | notes to <underline>Libretto for the Republic of Liberia</underline> and | new annotations to <underline>Harlem Gallery</underline>, provided by the | editor, Raymond Nelson. What is not included are the earlier poems that | appeared a few years ago as <underline>A Gallery of Harlem | Portraits</underline> and some fugitive poems. There will be two | previously unpublished Tolson poems in an anthology that I am editing | with Lauri Ramey that Alabama will publish soon.

--simple boundary--

↑ Index

318. Poetics List Administration
Imagining Language
Mon 20 Sep 1999

---

had to reformat this one a bit.

From: Tom Orange <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 17 Sep 1999 10:26:17 -0400

john and others,

i have a review of _imagining language_ that has just appeared in the latest issue of _literary research/recherche litteraire_ (a publication that comes with membership in the icla/ailc). the print version contains scandalous amounts of typos and other editorial interventions with which i am very displeased. but a quick scan of the on-line version suggests to me that it is identical to the version i intended for publication.

http://www.uwo.ca/modlang/ailc/current/orange.htm

the same issue also contains my review of marjorie perloff's _poetry on and off the page_ (likewise superior to the print version) at

http://www.uwo.ca/modlang/ailc/current/orange2.htm

from beautifully sunny washington d.c., ("everyone come out of the ark, the flood is over!")

tom

--simple boundary--

↑ Index

319. KENT JOHNSON
A drum on my head
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Dear List, if I may be allowed a clarification over the two suspisciously similar posts just put up ("Beating Drums" and "The Sound of Drums"): I had written our dear moderator asking that he withdraw the hastily-written former one and substitute it with the more considered latter one. Alas, he did not get to my b-c note in time. Thus you now have a revised post and an awkward trace of its textual history, tho much to my chagrin, as I would rather you had thought my second post composed in one fell-swoop of Marxist-inspired incandescent heat.
thank you,

Kent

↑ Index

320. Jacques Debrot
Re: ANNOUNCING 9 TO 0
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Announcing the first issue of NINE TO ZERO MAGAZINE.

Featuring:

New visual work by RAY DI PALMA

Poems by LISA JARNOT and JACK KIMBALL

Raster Drawings by SIGMAR POLKE

Nine to zero is only $2.50
Please make checks payable to
Jacques Debrot
49 Old Meetinghouse Road
Norton, MA 02766

Future issues will appear approx every 2 months and will present work by Mary Burger, Jordan Davis, Michael Magee, Dieter Roth, Yayoi Kusama and many others.

↑ Index

321. Patrick Herron
Re: US/Aus/Indonesia/E Timor
Mon 20 Sep 1999

> >Believe me Patrick, the US Govt is far, far more stupid than malevolent.
>
> And again, I think you are wrong. Actually, I know this is wrong. There > are people in the government much more intelligent than you or me. And they > plan, they know about contingencies, it's their lives. Me, I'm just farting > around on a keyboard. They often do things and call them mistakes, because > it fools us into a comfortable position of superiority, albeit poorly > founded.

>Oh, no no no, a thousand times no, they are NOT more intelligent than you, >or me!

There's nothing wrong with modesty in the face of greater experience. Perhaps false modesty - I would at least consider those involved as my intellectual equal. I would hardly call myself superior to these people. If I did, I would be guilty of the same crap they are. they are well-educated, book-savvy, thinkers with intellectual gifts, and so on. Not all of these people are that smart. George Bush is not exactly a genius. But there are others that are.

>Do you think your govt (whatever that really means, NSA? CIA? Congress? West Wing White House) is composed of Zarathustrian supermen?

I don't know how smart you are, but it doesn't take a Zarathustrian superman to be smarter than me. To clarify again, there are people involved who are very intelligent. As far as organizations go, these people are distributed across many orgs. Some have more power than others.

> This is one of the key factors to accepting such theories. I happen to know CIA, e.g., exhibits all the characteristics of a dumb bureaucracy living in a denial culture. Bureaucrats in CIA even hide things from each other. The behaviors are astonishing and hysterical.

I don't know much about the common desk bureaucrat. I would agree with you there. Those aren't the individuals I'm talking about.

>How else to explain the Ames spying success and being caught unawares when communism fell in eastern europe.

Well, that depends on you imagination, or your connections. Perhaps it would be best to explain it by the facts. And the basc rule of thumb in intelligence field work is, everyone has to talk sometime. All people with clearance reveal their secrets at some time on their lives (unless they get snuffed before the opportunity is seized). So Ames took that very human nature a bit further. It's not as uncommon as the news reports we get about it. for every Ames there are 10 more in the CIA. If that tells you anything.

> Agencies fight with each other for control constantly, bureau chiefs fight, their is continuous turmoil and upheaval with these stratifications.

Sure. No one's arguing with that. Of course they're human, there are bureaucrats in gov't organizations. But they're not all bureaucrats.

> But I don't expect you to accept this on face value.

Whatever that means (doh!).

Patrick

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

322. Patrick Herron
Re: Beating drums
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Whoa. Pretty stunning. Thanks for the clarification.

: P

Patrick Herron

Michael Neff said:

> These are the same people who argue that Marxism is a credible >political alternative and that the shout of freedom heared in eastern Europe >many years ago was nothing but a CIA manipulation. They only have >one drum and they bang it continuously while chanting America is Evil, >America is Evil, thereby seeking the solace of moral high ground and >community forever lost to them in the sixties.

Well, Michael, the caricature you draw above of those who find fault in your arguments seems the perfectly-traced image of the "dogmatism" you claim to despise.

No one has said that those wielding the guns and machetes on the ground are morally blameless. Where did you get that one? The reason people are upset with you, I think (though your argument is not worth getting as upset about as some apparently have in back- channel), is that you are so unwilling to recognize a simple something which should be self-evident: Local legacies, down to a machete's fine edge, are implicated in global histories. And in a country like

Indonesia, whose history and political present are inextricable from imperialist intrigue and manipulation, this is quite evidently the case.

But to you, it seems, the use of "primitive," non-Pentagon supplied machetes is the anthropological sign that shows the violence for what it autochthonously is--yet one more primal spasm in a culture condemned to repeated blood-letting. You challenge people to prove otherwise. And so people (while not disagreeing that violence is, indeed, primal) have given you ample evidence that the current strife has manifested itself inside specific conditions that our government (along with other imperialist powers) has had a considerable hand in creating and perpetuating, having helped to install and then unflaggingly abet, as it has, the same party that now organizes the machete wielders.

The irony here is that it is up to you, really, to show that this history of which people have spoken has little to do with the past and present suffering in East Timor. You haven't. And you end your intervention in this discussion, even, by suggesting that the history doesn't exist except in the minds of America-Is-Evil shouting poet- spooks trapped in a 60's induced psychosis. Deep denial is a form of psychosis, Michael. I wonder if there is a clinical name for the kind where the victim's ears are filled with the sound of beating drums?

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

323. Christina Milletti

How US trained butchers of Timor article in Lon. Obs.

Mon 20 Sep 1999

THE LONDON OBSERVER, Sunday September 19, 1999

How US trained butchers of Timor

Exclusive: Washington trained death squads in secret while Britain has spent L1m helping Indonesian army

Indonesia and East Timor: special report

Ed Vulliamy in New York and Antony Barnett

Indonesian military forces linked to the carnage in East Timor were trained in the United States under a covert programme sponsored by the Clinton Administration which continued until last year.

The Observer can also disclose that the Government has spent about L1 million in training more than 50 members of the Indonesian military in Britain since it came to power.

Human rights campaigners claim a number of these are likely to have links with those complicit in the attrocities.

The US programme, codenamed 'Iron Balance', was hidden from legislators and the public when Congress curbed the official schooling of Indonesia's army after a massacre in 1991. Principal among the units that continued to be trained was the Kopassus - an elite force with a bloody history - which was more rigorously trained by the US than any other Indonesian unit, according to Pentagon documents passed to The Observer last week.

Kopassus was built up with American expertise despite US awareness of its role in the genocide of about 200,000 people in the years after the invasion of East Timor in 1975, and in a string of massacres and disappearances since the blood-bath. Amnesty International describes Kopassus as 'responsible for some of the worst human rights violations in Indonesia's history'.

The Pentagon documents - obtained by the US-based East Timor Action Network and Illinois congressman Lane Evans - detail every exercise in the covert training programme, conducted under a Pentagon project called JCET (Joint Combined Education and Training). They show the training was in military expertise that could only be used internally against civilians, such as urban guerrilla warfare, surveillance, counter-intelligence, sniper marksmanship and 'psychological operations'.

Specific commanders trained under the US programme have been tied to the current violence and to some of the worst massacres of the past 20 years, including the slaughter at Kraras in 1983 and at Santa Cruz in 1991. The US-trained commanders include the son-in-law of the late dictator General Suharto, Prabowo Subianto, and his mentor, General Kiki Syahnakri - the man appointed last week by the so-called 'reform' government as commissioner for martial law in East Timor.

The secret programme unveiled in the document became the focus for military training when above-board aid was curtailed by Congress after the Santa Cruz massacre. Congress had stepped in after up to 270 peaceful protesters - many of them schoolchildren - were murdered by Kopassus shock troops as they paraded through Dili.

American sponsorship of the Indonesian regime began as a matter of Cold War ideology, in the wake of defeat in Vietnam. The left-wing movement in East Timor was feared by Jakarta and seen by the US as an echo of those in southern Africa and of Salvador Allende's government in Chile. Jakarta's harassment of the Timor government and the invasion of 1975 were duly encouraged by the United States.

The training of Indonesia's officer corps peaked during the mid-Eighties. In 1990 a former official at the US Embassy in Jakarta cabled the State Department to say US sponsorship had been 'a big help to the (Indonesian) army. They probably killed a lot of people and I probably have a lot of blood on my hands'.

But the horror of Santa Cruz in 1991, when trucks were seen dumping bodies in the sea, was too much. The US decided that the training, while still available, should be paid for by the recipient nation - in other words, it would no longer be military aid. The covert programme then became the main means of training Indonesia's military - still at the American taxpayers' expense.

In an undated prospectus, the Pentagon says the prime mission was to 'to develop, organise, equip, train, advise and direct indigenous militaries'. The scale was small, to offer concentrated 'significant special training' which would create 'self-sufficient small units'. In 1996, for instance, 10 exercises involved 376 US personnel and 838 Indonesians or 'loyal' Timorese.

Britain also made a significant contribution to Indonesia's military training. The Observer has established that, since May 1997, 24 senior members of Indonesia's forces have been trained in UK military colleges. This included training in running military units efficiently and how to used technical equipment like guided missiles. In addition, 29 Indonesian officers have studied at non-military establishments.

Revelations of the extent to which Labour has used taxpayers' money to aid the Indonesian military has angered many MPs, who claim it makes a mockery of Foreign Secretary Robin Cook's 'ethical foreign policy'. In the last four years of the Tory Government, only one Indonesian soldier was trained in the UK.

Ann Clwyd, the Labour chair of the all-party group on human rights, has previously shown that Indonesian military trained here have subsequently committed atrocities. She said: 'It is simply not acceptable that we have been training these people. We know the police, the army, the militia are all interlinked. How many of those trained by this Government are now involved in the East Timor operation?'

Last week both America and Australia suspended military co-operation with Indonesia.

Funding for the military training would have been made available by the Foreign Office and Ministry of Defence through the Defence Military Assistance Fund. Earlier this year Defence Minister Doug Henderson admitted that training one Indonesian navy officer at the Joint Service Command and Staff College and another on the International Principal Warfare Course at HMS Dryad cost the Government L170,000.

Many of the Indonesian officers were trained at the Royal Military College at Shrivenham, Oxfordshire, as part of a ' private and commercial initiative' by Cranfield University. As well as courses on managing army units, the training includes map-making and electronics.

In the past two years the Foreign Office has also given L200,000 to eight Indonesian high-flyers through its Chevening scholarship programme. This included two policemen, two from the army and two from the navy. On Friday, the Indonesian authorities stopped three servicemen taking up their scholarships.

Both the Ministry of Defence and Foreign Office defend the training given as 'constructive engagement'. A spokesman for the MoD said: 'It is a way of ensuring professionalism in foreign armies. It encourages higher standards, good governance and greater respect for human rights.'

The Foreign Office points out that many of the Indonesian officers on non-military courses are studying subjects such as international law and human rights.

Last summer seven members of Kopassus finished a post-graduate course in defence studies at Hull University. The Ministry of Defence arranged the deal after liaising with General Prabowo. Although the course was initiated before the general election, it started after Labour's victory. George Robertson, then Defence Secretary, was happy for it to continue. Despite Prabowo's links to atrocities in East Timor, Robertson once described him as 'enlightened'.

The Foreign Secretary, Robin Cook, meanwhile, says in today's Observer that 'there is a mopping-up operation to be done in Britain on the myths that have mushroomed among commentators who have only discovered the plight of East Timor in the last fortnight'. He denies that Britain has 'armed Indonesia to the teeth', or provided weapons to the militias, and says that Britain has not given fresh subsidies to buy Hawk trainers.

Amnesty International's East Timor country specialist, Deborah Sklar, traces the regime's 'over-reliance on thuggish military operations' as being due to the demands of the foreign investment community and even from the World Bank.

She cites a blueprint called The East Asian Miracle, written by US Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers, in which he urges governments to 'insulate' themselves from 'pluralist pressures' and to suppress trade unions. This, she says, became a primary Kopassus role during the years of training by the United States.

'If the US,' says Sklar, 'has supplied to the Indonesians equipment that has been concerned in the perpetration of human rights abuses, then that is an outrage.'

↑ Index

324. Robert Majzels
New Book by Erin Mouré
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Moveable Type Books of Toronto announces its very first publication, under the imprint a Moveable Text:

Pillage Laud
by Erin Mouré

"To say anything valid about sex, love, thought, the body, "identity," in this era requires immense dislocatory practices."

"A poem," says Fernando Pessoa, "is an idea made emotion, communicated to others by means of a rhythm."

Pillage Laud is a major long poem that selects or pillages from pages of computer-generated sentences to produce "lesbo sex poems," by "pulling through" or "inciting" certain found vocabularies.

The basic compositional unit of Pillage Laud is not the word, but the "sentence," randomly generated and pillaged manually ‹ then arranged, altered. Given. Idea, emotion, rhythm.

Every lexicon allows infinite permutations, most of which the mind¹s strictures reject, or can¹t think of. Pillage Laud takes the limited lexicon and syntactical set of MacProse (a sentence-generating computer program created by Charles O. Hartman) to build rhythms and to grasp what the mind refuses.

On the "micro" level, the individual sentences are immediately breathtaking and mysterious. Devoid of cliché, replete with dazzling subterranean connections, they open up meaning and sensation.

On the "macro" level, Mouré assembles lines to produce a larger reading through successive, repetitive contextualizations. Gradually characters arise: an I, a you, a herŠ. a triangle of agony, grief and love that won¹t stop even when the border of thought and circumstance is uncertain.

In Pillage Laud, Erin Mouré has taken the mad risk of surrendering intention and authorship to language; the result is a thwack of utopian pleasure through which both she and the reader emerge forever restructured and entwined.

****

Erin Mouré is the author of seven collections of poetry and a Canadian Governor General¹s Award winner. She lives and works in Montréal, Québec. Her most recent book: _A Frame of the Book_ aka _The Frame of a Book_ (Anansi - Toronto and Sun & Moon Press - LA 1999).

****

From Pillage Laud:

She advanced.
A degree: every belt¹s hutch in the thought narratives. The agreement (information) was metabolism along force.

Had you died? To twist is land. To unbend advances. Tension is pulling her.
Your silence so substantial a valour.

The revolution had uncorked my rhythm, and affection was augmenting.
Certain stresses cured beds;
the equation of living must listen.

Flesh progressed, but her system was a station.
Your gesture starts to assemble some living beam.

Shall you permit every vandal¹s fist trilling your bowl? I travel. She is so unclad an opportunity, your prince clearly flows.

We were those cheap dilemmas.
These galleries crawl: so intense a purpose.

The narrative tracks you. Struggles will exercise unbent until the identity villages can cry out, or close.

vandal tissue curl plaster smell body bent

Pillage Laud is 8" x 9", perfect-bound, 99 pages plus one unbound inserted page. The entire book including cover is digitally printed directly from the electronic page-layout files; no films or plates are used. The process of representation continues to dissolveŠ. nowhere is there a picture, the book¹s status as a true copy of a true original is in doubt: one does not know if the copy one holds is one of hundreds, or unique.

****

ISBN: 0-9684908-0-8

Regular price:
CAN$25 plus 7% GST in Canada plus $3 shipping

Special LIMITED TIME Offer to List members:
US$20 including shipping to a US address

CAN$22 includes GST, as well as shipping to Can address
GP£12 includes shipping to the United Kingdom

There is also a SPECIAL LIMITED EDITION:
Wire-bound and lettered A to Z and signed by author: CAN$40 plus GST plus shipping (no discount, sorry).

To Order:
Send a cheque or money order made out to "Erin Moure" to:

Robert Majzels
3555, rue Berri, app. 1806
Montréal (Québec) H2L 4C4 Canada

email: [redacted]

--
Robert Majzels
[redacted]

↑ Index

325. david bromige
Twenty Years Ago Today
Mon 20 Sep 1999

These years, under the gun (I speak somewhat metaphorically) of global competition, it is hard enough to keep one's place on the page of the present, with one upshot being the erasure of our history. If anyone would be interested in contributing such at however irregular intervals, please do. Here's today's anniversary :

20 September, 1979

Ron Silliman collaborating with Judith Barry as the culmination of a six-week, once-a-week series held at The Farm, SF, and called "Verbal Eyes," joint workings between poets and visual artists.

--Ron, if you have time , can you tell us something about this? What has become of Judith Barry, do you know?

David.

↑ Index

326. Alan Sondheim
Metastasis
Mon 20 Sep 1999

-

Metastasis

Tha faallng th$t flash h$s laft ma, th$t bpnas $ra hald by phpnamas np lpngar sppkan, th$t tha Symbpl by tha Ha$rth h$s ch$rrad:If I can't write, I won't be able to wait for you, O Existence. I am afraid of opposites, each and everywhere.:W$ltlng: I $m frld pf lpslng my $blllty tp wrlta. I $m frld pf npn-axlstanca.:dissolved forever: W$ltlng: I $m frld pf lpslng my $blllty tp wrlta. I $m frld pf npn-axlstanca. transforms Your Tha faallng th$t flash h$s laft ma, th$t bpnas $ra hald by phpnamas np lp- ngar sppkan, th$t tha Symbpl by tha Ha$rth h$s ch$rrad on Burning Creek... Ah, Living with Levels and Blues!thraa hhndrad calls ln tha bpy tast tast: two hundred twenty bonesin the girl test test test:pna hhndrad twanty bpnas ln tha bpy tast tast:eight hundred cells in the girl test test test: Devour me eight hundred cells in the girl test test test Brought Forth through thraa hhndrad calls ln tha bpy tast tast!

↑ Index

327. charssmith
Re: Imagining Language
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Thames & Hudson published a third edition in 1997. Pretty sure it's still in print.

--cs

<< does any one know ofwhere i can find copies of phillip's _Humument_? >>

↑ Index

328. Arielle C. Greenberg
Buffalo gals (or guys)?
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Syracuse must really be getting to me, because on my recent trip to Buffalo to see Susan Howe read (so incredible! so refreshing to see scholarship so gracefully wedded to personal poetics!) Buffalo itself seemed a sliver of heaven. Great bookstores, good places to eat, unbelievable library, etc., etc. I'm really interested in going beyond the UB web site to find out more about the poetics program, so if there's anyone out there currently getting their PhD there, or who has their PhD from that program, and who would be willing to answer my myriad of questions, would you please backchannel me?

Thanks,
Arielle
[redacted]

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe." -- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

329. Patrick Herron

Plot against E Timor/UN lets Indonesian troops stay/1975 murder of journalists

Mon 20 Sep 1999

South China Morning Post
Thursday, September 16, 1999

Plot to crush E Timor

ANNEMARIE EVANS in Macau

The political cleansing of East Timor was planned as early as February, one of the militia leaders present at a meeting which hatched the deadly plot has revealed.

Tomas Goncalves, 54, the former head of the 400-strong PPPI (Peace Force and Defender of Integration) militia said the killings had been agreed at a meeting on February 16 in the East Timorese capital, Dili. He said the talks were organised by the head of the SGI, the secret intelligence organisation of the (Indonesian) military's Kopassus special forces.

The head, Lieutenant-Colonel Yahyat Sudrajad, called for the killing of pro-independence movement leaders, their children and even their grandchildren, Mr Goncalves said. Not a single member of their families was to be left alive, the colonel told the meeting.

Mr Goncalves said that also present were the heads of other militias covering the 12 regions of East Timor, including Eurico Guterres, of the Aitarak militia, and Joao Tavares of Besi Merah Putih.

According to Mr Goncalves, the colonel said many soldiers had died in East Timor and that it would be difficult for troops to leave the enclave because if they did, they would lose face. They were determined not to abandon their supporters in the territory.

The meeting came after President Bacharuddin Habibie announced on January 27 that he might consider independence for East Timor.

On February 11, a day after resistance leader Xanana Gusmao was moved from jail to house arrest, Mr Habibie said East Timor's future could be decided by the end of the year. Mr Goncalves said: "The agenda for the meeting included funding and arming of the militias, food and other supplies."

His revelations leave no doubt about the connection between Jakarta and the militias, or about the direct line of command.

Mr Goncalves said Colonel Sudrajad had received orders before the meeting from regional military commander Colonel Tono Suratman, who was answerable to General Adam Daimiri in command of Bali, East Timor and West Timor. General Daimiri in turn answered to General Zacky Anwar in Jakarta, himself the former head of Kabia, Indonesia's national intelligence body.

The meeting set the hour for the start of the political cleansing as midnight on May 1. However, on February 17, the following day, the militias began to kill throughout East Timor, launching attacks in Maliana, Atabai, Kailako and elsewhere. The survivors fled to churches and priests' houses for protection.

On March 26, Governor of East Timor Abilio Soares gave orders at a meeting, again attended by Mr Goncalves, that the priests and nuns should be killed.

Mr Goncalves said: "I could not stand it. I told them I have no problem fighting the [pro-independence] guerillas, but as a Catholic I could not kill priests and nuns and attack the Church."

Because of his stand, Mr Goncalves came under suspicion. He fled Jakarta on April 18 and is now in Macau.

Violence worsened dramatically in East Timor after the result of the UN-organised ballot was announced on September 4, showing support for independence.

Hundreds, possibly thousands of people were killed by the militias, encouraged or helped by troops.

Government and military spokesmen were unavailable for comment last night.

 End of text from cdp:reg.easttimor **

* This material came from the Institute for Global Communications (IGC), a non-profit, unionized, politically progressive Internet services provider. For more information, send a message to [redacted] (you will get back an automatic reply), or visit their web site at http://www.igc.org/ . IGC is a project of the Tides Center, a 501(c)(3) charitable organization.
****

15 September 1999

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

ALL INDONESIAN TROOPS MUST BE WITHDRAWN FROM EAST TIMOR AS PEACE-KEEPING FORCE MOVES IN

TAPOL has warned the UN Secretary-General that the UN's failure to insist on the removal of Indonesian troops from East Timor as part of the rules of engagement of the international Peace-Keeping Force for East Timor will mean a repeat of the disastrous decision by the UN to allow Indonesian troops to remain in the territory during the months leading up to the referendum on 30 August.

In a letter to Kofi Annan sent hours before the Security Council adopted a resolution mandating an multilateral force to enter East Timor within the next few days, TAPOL's director, Carmel Budiardjo warned that the continued presence of the troops would destroy the confidence of the population in the peace-keepers and could be fatal to its operations. There are estimated to be 20,000 Indonesian troops still stationed in East Timor, including territorial troops and special forces.

The 15,000 territorial troops are based in every town and village and are the eyes and ears of the military intelligence. Their continued presence cannot be tolerated.

Budiardjo said: 'It is inconceivable, particularly after what has happened in East Timor in the past few days , that the hundreds of thousands of displaced East Timorese would want to return to their villages or towns if these soldiers remain'.

In its letter to Kofi Annan, TAPOL stressed that it was critically important for all the special troops sent to East Timor in the past few weeks to be withdrawn immediately. They include special air force commandos, marines and special troops from the army's strategic command, KOSTRAD, whose primary task has been to take charge of the forced relocation of East Timorese by land, sea and air to West Timor and to other parts of Indonesia. There are also many hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Kopassus crack troops who have for months been mingling with the militias in their murderous operations against the population.

Paragraph 5 of today's Security Council resolution provides for 'Indonesia's continuing responsibility' for security as stipulated in the UN-sponsored 5 May accords. These accords made no provision for Indonesian soldiers to leave East Timor and they could now remain there for several months more.

TAPOL also said it would be an intolerable anomaly if martial law which was declared by the Indonesian authorities on 7 September was to remain in place. Martial law vests a range of special powers in the hands of the Indonesian army.

Describing the structure of the territorial army, TAPOL said that all troops stationed in villages and sub-district towns should be immediately withdrawn to barracks for their early removal from East Timor. 'The possibility that these soldiers will harass the population is very real and their continued presence could seriously undermine the effectiveness of any security measures undertaken by the Peace-Keeping Force,' the letter warned.

For more information or interviews, contact: Carmel Budiardjo 0[redacted] day or evening, or email [redacted]

****

Former Timorese police officer testifies that Indonesian army intentionally killed TV newsmen in East Timor in October 1975

A former East Timorese police officer in Balibo, East Timor has told TAPOL that the Indonesian military authorities knew that five TV journalists from Australia were present in Balibo at the time they attacked the village and were intent on killing them.

His testimony confirms the conclusions reached by an inquiry undertaken by the Australian Section of the International Commission of Jurists and published earlier this week by the Sydney Morning Herald that there was a 'deliberate intention on the part of the (Indonesian) military force which set out from nearby Batugade to kill the journalists in Balibo'. The five journalists had gone to Balibo to verify reports that the Indonesian army was conducting incursions across the border into East Timor. The five men, two Australians, two Britons and a New Zealander, were killed in Balibo on 16 October 1975.

Manuel dos Santos who now lives in exile in Portugal, was sub-chief of police and head of immigration in Balibo from December 1974 until August 1975 when he fled across the border to Atambua, an Indonesian town in West Timor. He said: 'Two or three days before the attack on Balibo, the Indonesians had a list of eight people they wanted to kill in Balibo (including) the five newsmen.'

He said that Fretilin who were in control of East Timor at the time had broadcast the fact that the five newsmen were near the border alerting the Indonesians to their presence and their intentions to disclose what was happening along the border.

Mr dos Santos was interviewed by Tom Sherman, a senior Australian official who undertook an investigation into the killings in 1996, at the request of the then foreign minister Gareth Evans, but none of his testimony was used in the Sherman Report.

The latest evidence published this week in Australia refutes Indonesian claims, upheld by the Australian and British governments, that the newsmen were killed in crossfire. The ICJ report says that three senior Indonesian officers who were responsible for the events in Balibo, including Lt-General Yunus Yosfiah who is now Minister of Information in the Habibie government, should be brought before an inquiry.

Pressure is now growing on the British government to initiate an inquiry into the deaths of the two Britons, Brian Peters (cameraman) and Malcolm Rennie (reporter), who had gone to East Timor for Australia's Channel 9.

Note to editors: Manuel dos Santos can be contacted for interviews through Sergio Duarte (phone: 0[redacted]), who interviewed him in Lisbon on TAPOL's behalf.

TAPOL The Indonesia Human Rights Campaign
111 Northwood Road
Thornton Heath
Surrey
CR7 8HW, UK

courtesy of Patrick ("pinko commie bastard") Herron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

330. Thomas Bell
Re: Objectivist Nexus - Discount Offer
Mon 20 Sep 1999

With apologies - the following quotes ('small pieces') are undigested. They were gathered with a view to doing a review or response to the book. They only relate to part of what is there for one of several poets. Posted here for info for list members:

The Objectivist Nexus, edited by Rachel Blau DuPlessis and Peter Quartermain, Tuscaloosa, University of Alabama Press, 1999.

"[Objectivism's] character may be simply described as the arrangement, into one apprehended unit, of minor units of sincerity - in other words, the resolving of words and their ideation into structure." Zukofsky, Louis. "Sincerity and Objectivication with Special Reference to the Work of Charles Reznikioff." _Poetry_ 37, 5 (February, 1931): 272-85.

"[Sincerity] involves insistence on the surface of the poem as concerned primarily with direct acts of naming as signs of the poet's immediate engagement in the areas of experience made present by conceiving the act of writing as a mode of attention. Sincerity involves refusing the temptations of closure - both closure as fixed form and closure as writing in the service of idea, doctrine, or abstract aesthetic ideal." p. 33 of Williams: "writing....can be conceived less as a vehicle for imposing thoughts on the world than as a process of perception by composition." p. 33

"All along I've had the sense that the structure of the sentence closes off the little words. That's where the mysteries are, in the little words." George Oppen, "Poetry and politics: A conversation with George and Mary Oppen." With Burton Hatlen and Tom Mandel. In Hatlen, B., _George Oppen_, pp. 23 - 50.

"For Oppen, poetry is a form of thinking, and the serial poem allows him a different, a more extended and flexible form of thinking than is possible in the lyric. As John Taggart puts it, 'the series permits any number of variations without forcing new beginnings and without losing sight of the object.' It enables Oppen '_to think actively in his poetry_' ('Deep Jewels', _Ironwood 26_, Fall, 1985: 159 - 68). Conte proposes a valuable contrast between the discontinuity, incompleteness, and 'accumulation' of serial form and the impulse toward 'encompassment, summation' of the modernist epic, with its underlying 'organic theory of continuity and development.'"

"'Intensity of vision implies not only clear rendition of the image but also moral insight and an emotional response: 'The virtue of the mind/ Is that//which causes/To see' (Oppen, Collected Poems 87) , as he writes in 'Guest room.' Elsewhere in the interview from which his comments on _Discrete Series_ derive, Oppen uses an ethical criterion to explain a formal feature of the book, saying that its disjointed structure results from his perceiving and writing in isolated 'moments of conviction.' The term 'conviction' implies what most of Oppen's work makes clear, that he sees his poetry as an effort to formulate an ethic for living. In 'Blood from the Stone' he asks, 'What do we believe/To live with?' and answers 'all/That verse attempts' (collected Poems 31). He feels that he can formulate that ethic only in 'moments of conviction' - that conviction is so fragile and fleeting as to be available only in moments. For Oppen, however, every moment is charged with the potential material for poetry. At any given m9oment, to put it simply, there is a lot goring on to write about. Hence Oppen speaks of 'the moment's//Populace and "The light, the volume/Of the moment.' The richness and the value of this material - of _The Materials_, to use one of Oppen's book titles - is, I take it, what oppen means he is convinced _of_ in his moments of conviction." 90

In the context of explicating Oppen's sense of the imagist moment and his effort to weld those moments into larger poetic structures, his well known gloss on the title _Discrete Series_ deserves repeating: 'A discrete series is a series of terms each of which is empirically derived, each one of which is empirically true...The poems are a series yet each is separate.' In this comment Oppen stresses not the cumulative effect of the 'terms' or poems in his discrete series but their separate, self-contained quality. The construction of meaning involves forging or finding relationships among ideas and things; the very gesture of putting fragments of language into a series invites us to connect them in some way. At the same time, 'meanig' remained something more sought after 5than achieved for a skeptic like Oppen, and something momentary: 'meaning's//instant.' 'meaning/in the instant.' He uses in _Discrete Series_ the least 'constructed' form of connection possible - seriality, or, in his own words, 'Successive/Happenings.' Further, he defies traditional notions of progression or climax: 'Not by growth/But the/Paper, turned, contains/This entire volume.' 91

"Oppen suggests that our daily experience is not of abstractions like 'the sea' and 'humanity' but of individual waves and humans. 92

"Whether, as the intensity of seeing increases, one's distance from Them the people, does not also increase." 95

"We may fall back on a secondary meaning, his [Oppen's] sense of writing in a society in which the connections, explanations, and stories had been corrupted, distorted, mystified, and inevitably turned into the crude, masked force of ideology. The only escape available to a writer, the only sanity, lay in the struggle

'to redeem
Fragments and fragmentary
Histories in the towns and the temperate streets (Oppen, G.,Seascape_ 34).'" Eric Homberger, "Communists and Objectivists," in _The Objectivist Nexus_, edited by Rachel Blau DuPlessis and Peter Quartermain, Tuscaloosa, University of Alabama Press, 1999.

Hank Lazer wrote:
>
> Announcing the latest volume in the series Modern and > Contemporary Poetics, edited by Charles Bernstein and Hank
> Lazer
>
--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

331. herr c.
[theremin music] a storyspace e-journal
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Dear All,

This is a request from 2 beats off of nowhere. [theremin music] is a journal for hypertextual works composed in storyspace currently in production of its first issue. We were wondering if there were any Storyspace authors out there who would want to submit to it? We can offer only exposure, the guarantee that all rights will remain solely with the author and the backing of Eastgate Systems as a sponsor. The preferred format is of the "readers" (SSreader, Pagereader, Easyreader) but we are accepting plain (or perhaps is unfettered more apropos?) SS documents as well. Anyone interested can please send pieces on disk (critical, creative, or points therein) to:

Herr Colin G. Hough-Trapp
Vassar College #2092
Poughkeepsie, NY 12604-2092

Please forward this to any interested parties you know.

the thereministers,

Michael Stutzman
Daniel Pereira
Herr Colin G. Hough-Trapp

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

[theremin music] hypertext artworks for storyspace

-michael stutzman {[redacted]}
daniel pereira {[redacted]}
herr colin g. hough-trapp {[redacted]}

"I wanted to be as certain of invisible things as I was that seven and three are ten"

-Saint Augustine

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

↑ Index
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

332. Lowther, John
backchannel violence
Mon 20 Sep 1999

---

i hear a lot about the viciousness of backchannel'd email pertaining to this list and i wd appreciate getting some vicious backchannel myself, now i know that i'm not really giving you what you need to get started which is the sense that i disagree with you about something or that i hold opinions which you think are, at best, wrong-headed ---- this puts me in a tricky spot, while i know that i have these beliefs and contrary ideas about things ----- it's very difficult to know where to start ----- as such i'm forced to simply list a few things which i'm generally in favor of assuming that someone will find them offensive (please don't hold back)

: reason and/or rationality (whichever makes yr blood pressure surge the most) : trying to understand what people are talking about (imagine this as me asking a question utterly dependant on my limited and questionable point of view) : writing poems that're "about" something " writing poems that're not "about" anything : considering the consequences of self-contradiction in self and others (perhaps this cd be scripted with much yelling and imagined as asserted about you and held onto in spite of yr quoting of whitman and emerson on the subject) : asking questions (call this rhetoric or even bullying and assume that the answers i'm after i intend to trick you into)

and while i don't wish to disrespect the tone and approach that is set forth in that list document we all get and which i actually do see as useful for list participants generally i'd like to add a final statement that i'm uncertain of in any particular instance but which i'm sure i cd be pushed to utter given the appropriate emails from you or someone else out there, "i'm right and yr wrong and do yrself a favor and fuck off, ok?"

give it yr all ----- cathart ----- let it all out

)L

[$12 per 100 words, checks payable to John Lowther a mailing address will be automatically sent to you upon receipt of yr backchannel and please, if you wish to be further incensed note in a bracket and i will set about specifically attacking you]

↑ Index

333. Stephen Ellis
Re: Grenier :that:
Mon 20 Sep 1999

There are twnety issues of :that: v. II, no. 1 - a transcription of a talk by Bob Grenier, given in Franconia, NH in 1993. 16 pp., color repros of recent Grener work front and back. $10 ea. Orders by mail only, tho email enquiries for further info., etc., okay.
Stephen Ellis
23 Mitton Street
Portland, ME 04102

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

334. Joan Houlihan
Re: I can't believe it!!!
Mon 20 Sep 1999

Mr. Brady,

Your detailed and thoughtful response deserves my attention, but I'm afraid I'm limited in my ability to respond in kind. You clearly have much more historical information to bring to the topic than I do, and you also have much more time to devote to your responses than I do. So please forgive me if I can only make a few more statements re: your main premise and respond directly to only a couple of selected points from your mail.

First, in re: to your main premise; i.e.: That while the US is not wholly responsible for the currrent atrocities in East Timor, that other countries such as Australia, Great Britain, Japan, and even some US corporate interests that are, while headquartered mainly in the US, largely independent of any real national governance, all share the responsibility, that "those atrocities could not have happened without U.S.involvement - that such involvement was, in brief, a necessary rather than a sufficient condition."

My response to this is to ask: what was the objective of the US "involvement" in Indonesia? Was it something other than selling arms? If the objective was to sell arms, which I believe it was, then it's true that we could say selling arms to Indonesia in the first place provided the means for the atrocities--but if we say this, we can say that for every place the US has sold arms that has later (days? months/ years?) broken out in a war we have "caused" that war. Isn't it possible that the objective of selling arms is to make money--that the rationale for selling them is that if we don't someone else will? Now, it's true that one can draw moral implications from this selling of arms--and I think we should. I think the US should LET someone else sell arms, give up that dominant "market share" because only then will we be able to address any human rights issues from some moral ground--and be heeded.

This leads to your statement:

And even if we agree that humans as individuals have a certain predilection for evil, we still have to explain why in some cases resources are marshalled to allow that predilection its full "expression," and where those resources come from.

As I say above, I think the "explanation" as to why "resources are marshalled..etc." is a commercial one. The fact that the resources come from the arms dealer of the world, the US, is a fact open to moral implication for many. If we step out of that business, we've effectively stepped out of the immorality spotlight.

Re:
I thought we were having an argument.

I thought we were trying to determine the sense and truth of Mr. Neff's statements.

Re:
Apparently I was abridging someone's freedom.

Apparently I was expecting the list to address the statements made, not construct theories out of whole cloth and stretch that cloth over any apparent contradictions.

Re: So our differing political perspectives lead us to disagree. But in the elaboration of that disagreement, your efforts to attenuate the space of public discourse by casting argument as domination are wholly unworthy, not only of the weight of the argument itself, but even of the "liberal" traditions you bring to it.

I don't know what this means. It sounds kind indignant though, so I hope you're not offended. Also, I don't know why the word liberal has quotes--denoting irony or direct quote?

Again, I wish I had more time to address some of your other points. Thanks for replying.

Regards,

Joan

> From: Taylor Brady <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
Date: Thu, 16 Sep 1999 14:24:36 -0700

Ms. Houlihan,

I'm aware that this will break my resolve to respond no more, but there's at least one fairly serious misrepresentation of the record and one fairly well-implied personal attack in this. Both, I think, merit an answer.

First, the misrepresentation. Mr. Neff's point has not been, to date, "simply the suggestion that the US government (and whatever else we conceive that entity to be,it is still a collection of people with limitations) may not be wholly responsible for what's happening in East Timor." Nor has my point been that the US _is_ solely culpable. Ample mention has been made of the role of the Indonesian military, Japan, Australia. More might be said about Great Britain, and the corporate interests that are, while headquartered mainly in the US, largely independent of any real national governance. For evidence of Mr. Neff's real "point", I attach the following quote from his opening missive on this thread:

"I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone."

What emerges from this line of argument is 1) a denial of ANY U.S. role (a far cry from denying full responsibility); and 2) a denial of the effectivity of any U.S. action (pressure on elected and unelected officials to stop pursuing some particular policy or other) in the present situation. One remembers that the post to which he responded was a call for protest and petition. In effect, what he is doing in the above quote is denying that the US government is the proper target for any such protest, as well as denying that such a protest could have any effect. My claim was, rather, that those atrocities could not have happened without U.S. involvement - that such involvement was, in brief, a necessary rather than

a sufficient condition. And for my part, I've never claimed that the US held sole responsibility for atrocities in East Timor over the past twenty-five years. The Indonesian regime since Suharto's rise to power has been a creature of the US military and intelligence "community." This history is well-documented and available for the perusal of skeptical parties. (Unless one takes seriously the desperate ideological retreat into "empiricist" metaphysics - do you really want to claim, in an E-MAIL correspondence, that you only believe in what's before your eyes?). For recent evidence of this dependent attachment, witness the Habibie government's quick decision to allow international troops in as soon as Clinton's rather weakly-worded "temporary suspension" of aid was announced.

In other words, in reply to Mr. Neff's most recent questioning whether "dictators and police squads and fanatics forgo hostilities as soon as the UN wags a finger at them," I would point out that Indonesia has always (at least since '65) done exactly that when it's been a question of the _US_ doing the wagging. Indonesia as currently ruled is a client state of the US,
Great Britain, and Japan, pure and simple. And despite Mr. Neff's ideological scare tactics in introducing the "world's policeman" threat, this client relationship exists in such a form that, for long-term changes to become effective, what's probably most needed is a cessation of US involvement, rather than a new "commitment of troops" or some such. Our support - precisely - of police tactics up to this point has been the very problem. A lot could be accomplished if our government would simply stop - permanently - doing the criminal things it's been doing in that region. In fact, it would be best for all concerned if any international force sent in for the short term to stop the killings included _no_ US, British, or Australian troops. That this is unlikely to happen is further evidence, to me, that whatever steps are currently being taken are more by way of protecting the bankability of an investment than a commitment to national self-determination and political freedoms.

Of course, groups of people have always killed other groups of people. And groups of people have always resisted and spoken out - that's part of what, in my sense of a humanly-liveable world, one understands by the word "history." It's a "made place," to bring in Robert Duncan for a moment. People can act to make it differently, and this despite the red-baiting invective of Mr. Neff's latest. I readily grant that such atrocities have happened under all kinds of conditions and in all kinds of places. My question is, by the same sort of "Occam's Razor" method proposed by Mr. Neff, whether we might be a bit concerned about the statistical preponderance of US investment capital, weapons, and military advisors at the scene of such atrocities during the last fifty years - whether in fact we might examine the verifiable historical record, rather than raise the spectre of some sort of genetic predisposition to murder, and attempt to account for the reasons why the US government has tended to be, in the post-war period "a collection of individuals" whose "limitations" include a pronounced taste for military dictatorship in the so-called Third World. Yes, other people (in this case Indonesians and conscript Timorese) do the killing. One of the privileges of capital is that it affords you the opportunity to contract out such unpleasant "work." And even if we agree that humans as individuals have a certain predilection for evil, we still have to explain why in some cases resources are marshalled to allow that predilection its full "expression," and where those resources come from.

My second concern in reading your posting is the accusation of "intolerance" hurled against those who have disagreed with Mr. Neff - an accusation made personal by the address of that posting to me. Let me state simply that it angers and saddens me to see disagreement labeled thus as intolerance. I thought we were having an argument. Apparently I was abridging someone's freedom.

You identify yourself as a "liberal" - and that might well be the root of our disagreement on the geopolitical side of things. I've come to believe strongly that American liberalism is a thoroughly inadequate response, not only to the problems of international capital and its involvement in the crushing of independence movements, but even to the day-to-day "domestic"So our differing political perspectives lead us to disagree. But in the elaboration of that disagreement, your efforts to attenuate the space of public discourse by casting argument as domination are wholly unworthy, not only of the weight of the argument itself, but even of the "liberal" traditions you bring to it.
political concerns we all face as citizens, of whatever civic entity in which we participate.

Taylor Brady

P.S. A final response to a message just in, this one from Mr. Neff, containing word of a different sort of intolerance:

"As far as accepting on face value what conspiracy theorists say relative to blaming America for the many years of pogrom-like rages and methodical brutality, that proves impossible, for given the level of fanaticism as evidenced by backchannel communications to me laced with scathing insults and generally embittered ego mania (e.g., I'm a lazy ass idiot, ugly mouthed, an embarassment, neanderthal, and equal to a state dept hack)--and all erupting on me in quite sudden and uncalled for fashion-one cannot help but conclude that like true zealots, these maze-brained individuals will only seek out and report on those sources of information most likely to confirm their viewpoint."

For the record, I have never participated in any back-channel communication with Mr. Neff. I have no desire to do so, and, while I understand the urge that might have prompted some of the e-mails he alleges, it's hardly a fair tactic - if anyone is listening, I'd urge people to lay off. For Mr. Neff, I'd simply point out that you'll have to disarticulate your critique from your sense of those who disagree with you as "true zealots, these maze-brained individuals," since that description is founded on the evidence of behavior in which at least one of "us" - and a fairly vocal one - has consistently refused to participate.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Joan Houlihan
Sent: Wednesday, September 15, 1999 4:44 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Taylor,

Of all the responses to Mike Neff's e-mail, yours seem to be the best examples of a logic constructed partly on the idea that because events occur together in time, the events are somehow linked causally, and partly on the idea that events which you do not personally witness, or have any special knowledge of, are nonetheless events that you can interpret not only correctly, but also "righteously"--that is, you are able to divine the motivations and moral construction of all those involved, from the beginning of the forced annexation of East Timor to its bloody fight for independence.

*It's quite amazing to me, a liberal, to see the kind of reaction generated by a clearly written, well-reasoned message (Neff's). What has created this firestorm? Simply the suggestion that the US government (and whatever else we conceive that entity to be,it is still a collection of people with limitations) may not be wholly responsible for what's happening in East Timor. I don't see that Mike Neff was disputing any historical facts, or events leading up to what's happening there--only that he was questioning the idea that these successive events had to be linked to either a kind of evil intentionality, or an immoral turning away by the US government. He* was instead, and rightly I think, proposing the idea that deeper, and even random, forces are also at work in these situations--not only, but also.

That we need to consider the constant recurrence of group hatreds, killings,
the human prediliciton for wiping each other out. Nowhere was he suggesting *that arms were not sold, that US interests were not pursued, or that*
the
US often gets behind what turn out to be (or always were) rotten leaders/causes--sometimes in the interest of avoiding worse leaders/causes,
or more likely, for simple economic or ideologic reasons.

Now that I've seen what comes back from this "radical" idea that the US government may not be the God we can blame, I'm astonished not only by the list's intolerance, but also by the realization that so many liberals have given up their ability to analyze and respond to a clear idea objectively, for the more comfortable idea that there's always clearly someone to blame--if not God, then the government.

Joan

From: Taylor Brady <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!
Date: Tue, 14 Sep 1999 09:53:14 -0700

A few points:

1) Kissinger's "visit" was considerably more instrumental than the "chat-and-tea" image might otherwise conjure one to believe. It was rather,
the U.S. State Department's imprimatur and guarantee of military assistance
to a regime embarked on a series of "policy initiatives" which included,
most notably, a) the slaughter and forced relocation of much of its own peasantry, labor leaders and movement members, intellectuals, etc., in
the name of a defense against communism; and b) the invasion and annexation
of Timor, resulting in a brutal occupation which left nearly a quarter of a million dead. This, while the U.S. (among others - recently, the role of Japan and Australia would also bear some scrutiny) continued (and continues, notwithstanding Clinton's half-assed "retraction of assistance") to provide
the proverbial "military, technical and economic aid" to the Indonesian regime. This isn't a matter of having bought arms years ago, but one of receiving - until this week, and that only if Clinton's retraction is to taken at face value - ongoing direct support from the U.S. and other armaments-producing nations. Thus, while the machetes might be a domestic industry in Indonesia, the rifles, troop transport vehicles, paramilitary training, etc., most certainly are not. This aid has been continued under recent administrations with the rationalization that it's the Indonesian military itself that can be counted on to bring the militias back into line.

For the sheer ridiculousness of this claim, if one still needs it substantiated, one might turn to Alan Nairn's recent reports on Pacifica Radio, detailing the intimate relationship between the army and the militias. But other sources are many and well-documented. If you have web access, you might take a look at the East Timor Action Network's web site:
www.etan.org
2) The above would seem to have some bearing on your assertion that East Timor is attempting to "secede" from a legitimate national government - which is simply not the case. East Timor, as an Indonesian territory, is the result of a forcible annexation sponsored by U.S. and other interests. Many of the key figures in the initial "sponsorship" remain in positions of power
today. In other words, this is about as far from a quixotic attempt to rectify a distant and tragic "other-people's" history as you can get.
3) You ask: "We turned the other way on Savac we see now (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering we see now?" Yes. Absolutely. As I've pointed out, this isn't simply a case of turning the other way, but a direct outgrowth of deliberate policies of military and economic support pursued by the U.S., Japan and other militarized nations. And although the point has now been reached at which the killings more than likely cannot be stopped without some sort of direct intervention, the extreme probability was, until quite recently, that
the Indonesian regime simply could not have pursued its policies of aggression without the direct support of the U.S. and its allies - that, in other words, the annexation itself would have been unfeasible and unsustainable without that aid. Until very recently, a cut-off of such support might have sufficed to avert the campaign of terror now being pursued. There is no "genocidal gene" - and such pseudo-explanations ("they're just nuts _over there_, who can understand their motivations?"), I'd warrant, most often mark the site of a real and determinate chain of events, the complicity of one's own nation in which is precisely what the resort to racialized typologies attempts to obscure.

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Michael Neff
Sent: Monday, September 13, 1999 10:15 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: I can't believe it!!!

Pete,

Before I write anyone, help me here, if you can. I'm not following this line of accusation. I need to be clear.

Since we've had involvement in Indonesia, it must be our fault that the Indonesian army and brother gangs are slaughtering people in churches, hacking them machetes? Did they get the machetes from America too? I suppose if their govt hadn't bought arms from us years ago then all would be peaceful? This sounds naive to the point of absurdity.

I see no connection with what you are saying and the psychotic rampage fest going on in Timor. You've noted that Kissinger, etc, visited Timor and then the slaughters began. Is there an association here? If so, can you link it for me? I don't see it from what you are saying.

Must we blame the American gov for it, are we compelled? There are those who believe the US govt manufactures tornadoes to chase them around and wreck their barns. I don't believe that either, but thousands are convinced.

And why should the US support Timor seceding when we didn't support South Carolina, and certainly don't support Quebec? Also, plenty of money we send overseas, in one form or another, gets redirected and wasted. Witness the diversion of funds by Russian mafia. We turned the other way on Savac (sp?) in Iran, though our intelligence knew they were out of control, but did we do

the same in Indonesia? And if we did, does this really account for the murdering
we see now?

I'm listening. Perhaps you can educate me, flow chart me, graph me, time line
me on just how Kissinger, or Clinton or Nixon or Ford or LaRouche or Moynihan or Chuck Rob or whoever in any conspiratorial setting, ignited and guided the genocidal gene that compels large groups of people to willfully set fires to
other large groups of people.

Until you do, I'm not writing anyone.

Mike

pete spence wrote:

please put this out to all mailartists for action. also send a protest
to: [redacted]
thanks pete spence

speak up and out about East Timor. It may also be just as good
and probably easier to protest the American gov't for their ongoing role
in
the slaughter and oppression of the East Timorese. It was the American
Gov't. that paid for and supervised the original Indonesian invasion, and the American gov't is trying hard to escape culpability with ambiguous
declarations (coming from such shits as Madeline Albright) about the chaotic
and oppressive state of affairs while also trying to take any potential actions and tie them up in red tape. Such action clearly gives the Indonesian gov't has a chance to tie up power once again while everyone

else takes their time designating panels and working groups. Since a visit
by Kissinger, Ford, and Scowcroft to Suharto in July 1975, the Indonesian
government, using mostly US-made and US-paid-for weapons and military intelligence support, has killed between 1/4 and 1/3 of the original inhabitants. That's about 200,000-300,000 people. We're talking concentration camps between 1975-1979. Paid for by US taxpayers.
Certain people meant business when it all started 24 years ago; I don't think
they mean any less harm now. If the US supported the democratic efforts of
the
East Timorese none of this probably would have happened.

http://www.freetimor.com/

http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html

http://www.motherjones.com/east_timor/

http://www.etan.org/

regards,
Patrick Herron

so what the way i see it.. maybe better protest to the indonesian government on the handling of the east timorese might be a
better
usage of your time; [redacted]

thanks pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

--

> ==========
> Web Del Sol
> http://webdelsol.com
> LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

335. George Bowering
Re: bunting for a base hit...
Tue 21 Sep 1999

> Was he there after 1946??? i thought he was only active in intelligence during the bigee (WWII), working against the nasty axis...
>
> *But of course maybe that's only what i wanted to believe...*

He was a newspaper correspondent and a new groom in Persia from 1947 to 1950, then came home yet again.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

336. George Bowering
Re: Novels of the Sixties
Tue 21 Sep 1999

I want to make it clear that despite the strange arrangement below, I am not responsible for these words, and especially that execrable pun. And I would not call Burroughs Burrough!

GB

> When I say depressing, I must admit it is out of a sense of self-deprecation. After reading the novel, I felt as if I had missed out on something, that I wasn't in the loop, so to speak. I had been told of this great novel and after reading it, I felt what was great about it? I could not put my finger on it. Of course, Burrough's prose is shitzophrenic and jargon-laced so I > doubt I'm the only one who has had trouble with it.

>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> >>

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

337. Jeffrey Jullich
Re: Novels of the Sixties -Reply
Tue 21 Sep 1999

Not to forget:

~A Nest of Ninnies,~ John Ashbery and James Schuyler .

Collaborative novels published as early as the '60's may really be the strongest harbingers of certain "authorial" prerogatives that have since quite come into question.

And I must check my bookshelf at home to be sure of the title and co-author(s) of that other great ('60's?) collab-novel,

~Antlers in the treetops~/~Antlers in the branches,~ Ron Padgett & ---

↑ Index

338. anastasios kozaitis
Grassroots International East Timor Campaign
Tue 21 Sep 1999

ACT NOW FOR EAST TIMOR!
A Grassroots International campaign
<http://www.grassrootsonline.org>

Grassroots International announces the launch of ACT NOW FOR EAST TIMOR, a humanitarian aid and policy advocacy campaign in support of the people of East Timor and their aspiration for independence.

Since the August 30 referendum in favor of independence, hundreds of thousands of East Timorese have been brutally murdered or driven from their homes for their support of independence. A clear, firm U.S. policy based on the human rights of the Timorese people rather than U.S. economic and geopolitical interests in Indonesia could have avoided this humanitarian disaster. The scale of the disaster and the nature of U.S. involvement in this situation demand that we respond. ACT NOW FOR EAST TIMOR will help the East Timorese reconstruct a society and construct a new, independent state.

The campaign will seek private funds from U.S. sources for an East Timor Relief and Reconstruction Fund. At first, the fund will prioritize aid to the up to 300,000 East Timorese people displaced by the violence within East Timor. If possible, it will also provide appropriate humanitarian assistance to refugees in camps in West Timor. Those camps are currently under Indonesian military control and the question of humanitarian access is far from settled. In any case, work with refugees must focus on creating the conditions for their eventual safe return to East Timor.

The brutality of the Indonesian military and its militias has left the organizations of the Timorese independence movement scattered, with many of their leaders assassinated or in exile. In the medium to long term, Grassroots International will provide aid to help Timorese social organizations regroup and resume the work of service to their communities.

In coordination with the East Timor Action Network (ETAN), the campaign will pursue a U.S. policy agenda designed to exert maximum pressure on Indonesia to end the orgy of violence and to withdraw its military forces from East Timor. To this end, campaign supporters will work to influence U.S. government policy and that of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. ACT NOW FOR EAST TIMOR will also join those who seek to ensure that an eventual international peacekeeping force does not in any way impede the realization of Timorese independence.

Grassroots International is a private human rights and development organization that supports movements for social change in Brazil, Eritrea, Haiti, Mexico and Palestine, and does advocacy and educational work in the United States. Current agency programs in Haiti and Eritrea began as responses to emergency situations in those countries.

For more information, or to get involved in this campaign, visit our website at <http://www.grassrootsonline.org>. You may also contact Grassroots International by phone at [redacted], or by e-mail at <mailto:[redacted]>.

Tax-deductible donations should be marked ACT NOW FOR EAST TIMOR and sent to: Grassroots International, ACT NOW FOR EAST TIMOR, 179 Boylston St., 4th Floor, Boston MA 02130, USA.

The press should speak directly with Campaign Coordinator, Sona Bari <mailto:[redacted]>.

Sona Bari, Campaign Coordinator
Martha Thompson, Program Coordinator for East Timor
Kevin Murray, Executive Director
Grassroots International 179 Boylston Street 4th floor
Boston MA 02130
USA
phone [redacted]
fax [redacted]
[redacted]
http://www.grassrootsonline.org

↑ Index

339. Matt Kirschenbaum
Blake Archive's September Update
Tue 21 Sep 1999

---

20 September 1999

The William Blake Archive <http://www.iath.virginia.edu/blake> is pleased to announce the publication of new electronic editions of _The Book of Thel_ copy J and _Visions of the Daughters of Albion_ copy G.

The Book of Thel is dated 1789 by Blake on the title page, but the first plate (Thel's Motto) and the last (her descent into the netherworld) appear to have been completed and first printed in 1790, while Blake was working on _The Marriage of Heaven and Hell_. Copy J is from the first of three printings of _Thel_, during which Blake produced at least thirteen copies, printed in five different inks to diversify his stock. Copies from this press run were certainly on hand when Blake included the book in his advertisement "To the Public" of October 1793: "The Book of Thel, a Poem in Illuminated Printing. Quarto, with 6 designs, price 3s." Copy J joins copies in the Archive from the other two printings: copy F, printed and colored c. 1795, and copy O, printed and colored c. 1818. It also joins copy H, which is from the first printing, and, like copy J, is printed in green ink and lightly finished in watercolors. Copy J, however, was recolored when two of its questions ("Why a tender curb upon the youthful burning boy!/Why a little curtain of flesh on the bed of our desire?") on plate 8 were deleted. The lines were scraped away from the paper, apparently by Blake, since the washes over it--and those added to the other texts as well--are in his hand. This second tinting also included pen and ink outlining, the modeling of figures through the addition of complementary colors and shadows, and the over-painting of Thel's yellow dress with green on plate 6. Texts streaked in light yellows, pinks, and blues were characteristic of Blake's later coloring style and suggests that the recoloring occurred around the time the work was sold, c. 1816.

This refinishing may have been undertaken to make the book more compatible with the dark hues of _Visions of the Daughters of Albion_ copy G, with which it appears to have been sold, and with which it was bound, probably by their original owner, c. 1816. In keeping with the poem's dark events and brooding mood, the hand coloring of _Visions_ copy G is impressively detailed and sombre. Rather than tinting the designs with semi-transparent washes in single hues, as in the first coloring session, Blake layered his colors to deepen the tones. This style shows the influence of color printing on Blake's hand coloring during the 1794-96 period. The techniques used for copy G even include some stipple-like effects imitating the reticulations caused by color printing. Washes were also added in text margins on plates 5, 7, 10, and 11, with a splendid sunrise bursting into the text on plate 3, as in late copies O and P. Copy G is unusual in other respects as well. The frontispiece and title page are placed sequentially, as in copies O and P, rather than facing each other, but uniquely with the title page coming first. This unconventional arrangement is confirmed by Blake's pen and ink plate numbers. He originally etched numbers 2-3, 5-7 in the top right corners of plates 5-6, 8-10, but all leaves in copy G are foliated in pen and ink in a single sequence, 1-11, with the new numbers written over the old on plates 5-6, 8-9.

Copy G was printed and colored c. 1795 as part of a set of illuminated books printed on large paper and joins other works from that set now in the Archive (_The Book of Thel_ copy F, _The Marriage of Heaven and Hell_ copy D, _There is No Natural Religion_ copy L, _All Religions are One_ copy A, and _America, a Prophecy_ copy A) and forthcoming (_The First Book of Urizen_ copy B and _Europe, a Prophecy_ copy H). It also joins copies of _Visions_ in the Archive from other printings: copies C and J, different issues from the first printing of 1793, and copy F, color printed c. 1794. Copy P, an exemplary copy from the fourth and final printing of c. 1818, is forthcoming.

In Blake's advertisement, _Visions_ was described as "Folio, with 8 designs, price 7s.6d." Copy G, though, was trimmed to quarto size when bound with _Thel_ copy J. Both works are now in the Houghton Library, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The electronic editions have newly edited SGML-encoded texts and new images scanned and color-corrected from first-generation 8x10" transparencies; they are each fully searchable for both text and images and supported by the Inote and ImageSizer applications described in our previous updates.

With the publication of these two titles, the Archive now contains 37 copies of 18 separate books, including at least one copy of every one of Blake's works in illuminated printing except the 100 plates of _Jerusalem_ (forthcoming).

Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Viscomi, editors
Matthew G. Kirschenbaum, Technical Editor
The William Blake Archive

↑ Index

340. Brian Stefans
Steve Evans' Notes to Poetry on Arras
Tue 21 Sep 1999

Steve Evans's on-going critical project of reviews and commentary

NOTES TO POETRY

are now being archived on the Arras web-site.

http://www.bway.net/~arras

==========

"As bracing as the candid expressions of righteous (and often politically astute) hatred are, invective is finally less central to the book than eros and elegy.
The 'whole love that is' plays the deeper part in shaping the life/work:
love of people--father and brother, mother, friends, husband Ted Berrigan and sons, second husband Doug Oliver
--love also of poetry ('life's condition... so common hardly anyone / can find it'),
and of the 'small houses' of Needles, New York, Iowa, Chicago, and Paris. As the work's memory arc intersects its compositional present, Notley remains true to her thesis that 'experience is a hoax.' While she draws no smug maturational conclusions, she does offer the collected intensities of a tradition that she--like Pound in this if no other regard--has 'gathered from the live air.'

-- SE on Alice Notley

==========

New work by Jacques Debrot and Dirk Rowntree should be available on the Arras web-site shortly.

↑ Index

341. Lowther, John a certain class of volumes
Tue 21 Sep 1999

{ poetix }

derek b mentions drucker's _alphabetic labyrinth_ in connection with my praises of _imagining language_ and i'd meant to ask about that one too ----- it's appeared at a bookstore here in atlanta but is sealed in plastic and i've not yet broken into it ----- i saw a review some time ago that made it sound like something i wd need to have it also makes sense to me to imagine a class of books into which things like drucker's volume (i think) and _imagining language_ and rothenberg's anthologies fits into ----- one which might also allow for books like _the cambridge encyclopedia of the english language_ and their other one _the cam.ency.of language_ (granted theyre not quite as exciting) ----- perhaps one cd argue that u.eco's book, i'm no longer sure of the title... _search for the perfect language_ ?? might belong as well tho i must admit that i cdnt finish reading it and unlike the others above it does fill me with obscure and specific joys at every opening

it occurs ot me to ask whether this tentative class i've proposed suggest to anyone other books wich belong in it somehow ? as if it does, the books suggested wd be other i'd wish to know about

)L

↑ Index

342. A H Bramhall getting ready to have been frightened
Tue 21 Sep 1999

FORM IS AN EXTENSION OF CONTENT, hmm, catchy. this list has limitations, if you haven't noticed. dialogue and dialectic work with difficulty in this daily digest medium. or not all, frankly. people have their say here as if currency value existed in that. whatever people are doing in their real lives, on this playground it's hard to differentiate between the noises. just as an observation.

when Kevin Magee posted here, I saw something powerful and authentic. no crap: his every articulation contained his politics, his song, his almost obsessive scholarship. to me his work is a lesson in poetics. and his poetics are political not simply by subject matter but because he lives them both simultaneously. I find that kind of commitment wonderfully admirable. pounding opinions back and forth in this sluggish medium, however -- content as an extension of form/forum -- proves that agitation too can be a commodity. maybe it's time for a re-tooling.

↑ Index

343. Catherine Daly

Peirce poemlet

Tue 21 Sep 1999

I guess I'm not supposed to send formatted messages to the list?

I have had the good fortune to read Brent's bio of C.S. Peirce b/w his writings & Susan Howe's _Pierce-Arrow_ (b/w a "popularizing" logic text by a friend, John Gregg, called _Ones and Zeros: Understanding Boolean Algebra, Digital Circuits, and the Logic of Sets_; he is the one who told me to read Peirce).

Anyhow, this is a poem Peirce wrote. The bio says he's quoting Emerson, but I think he's quoting Isaac Watts' _Against Idleness and Mischief_.

That man and I have a splendid idea how doth the little busy bee
Improve each shining hour
So fast eternity comes on.
And that delightful day.
When all mortal hands have done.
God's judgement shall survey.

from _Charles Sanders Peirce: A Life_, by Joseph Brent (Indiana University Press, 1993)

Rgds,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

344. charssmith
M. C. Richards
Tue 21 Sep 1999

Sad news again. The obituary is copied below. Not mentioned is that she was a founding editor of the Black Mountain Review, & in 1958 published w/ Grove Press a translation of Artaud's _Theatre & Its Double_.

--Charles Smith

_____

M.C. Richards
New York Times
Tuesday, September 21, 99
©1999 San Francisco Chronicle

URL:
http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/09/21/MN28873.DTL

M.C. Richards, a poet, potter, essayist, translator and painter who taught at Black Mountain College in the late 1940s and thereafter became an impassioned advocate of community in both art and life, died September 17. She was 83.

An artist who wrote poems about pottery and made pots inspired by her reading, Ms. Richards was perhaps best known for ``Centering in Pottery, Poetry and the Person,'' a book of essays published in the middle of the tumultuous 1960s that was impressive for its synthesis of thought, plain speech and incantatory momentum. The book, which became an underground classic, pulled together ideas about perception, craft, education, creativity, religion and spirituality, arguing for the richness of daily experience if carefully attended to, and the creativity of the average person. ``Poets are not the only poets,'' Ms. Richards wrote.

Mary Caroline Richards was born in Weiser, Idaho, in 1916 and reared in Portland, Ore. She earned a bachelor's degree in literature and languages from Reed College in 1937, with a thesis titled ``Poetry of the Tang Dynasty in Relation to Western Imagism.'' She went on to the University of California at Berkeley, where she studied Chinese and wrote her Ph.D. dissertation on irony in Thomas Hardy in 1942. She then began a brief marriage, and taugh English at the Central Washington College of Education in Ellensburg, Wash., and at the University of Chicago. But she found academic life stifling.

In 1945, she married Albert William Levi Jr. Her second husband, a social scientist, was invited that year to join the faculty of the experimental Black Mountain College, near Asheville, N.C. Black Mountain was a short-lived laboratory for innovative teaching and art whose faculty and students included Josef and Anni Albers, John Cage, Merce Cunningham, David Tudor, Robert Rauschenberg and Charles Olson.

At Black Mountain, Ms. Richards taught writing, produced and, when necessary, translated plays by Cocteau, Satie and Yeats. She also danced and studied pottery with Robert Turner. Around 1950, she participated in what might have been the first ``happening,'' with Cage, Olson, Rauschenberg and Franz Kline. In 1951, she separated from her husband, whom she later divorced, and in 1952, she went to New York with Tudor.

In 1954, Ms. Richards, Tudor and Cage, along with Paul Williams, an architect, and Karen Karnes, a potter, who had both also been at Black Mountain, established a commune called the Land near Stony Point, N.Y. Ms. Richards lived there for a decade, working in a studio with Ms. Karnes; they developed a form of flameproof clay that enabled them to make ceramic cookware.

Ms. Richards began giving pottery workshops in the early 1960s. Reflecting the ideas that would figure in ``Centering,'' these became increasingly interdisciplinary, with titles like ``Clay and Words,'' ``Clay and Movement'' and ``Clay and Eurythmy.'' She lectured and taught workshops at schools in the United States, Canada and Britain. Her longest teaching affiliation, from 1986 until her death, was with the University of Creation Spirituality, established in Oakland by Matthew Fox, a Dominican priest.

Ms. Richards' books, which often mixed prose and poetry, included ``The Crossing Point'' (1973), ``Opening Our Moral Eye'' (1996), ``Imagine Inventing Yellow'' (1991) and ``Toward Wholeness: Rudolf Steiner Education in America,'' a work of social philosophy. The Camphill Village agricultural community in Kimberton, where Ms. Richards had lived since 1984 and where she died, is one of 80 Camphills worldwide based on Steiner's teachings.

In 1989, Ms. Richards, who has no survivors, added painting to her roster of activities. She then exhibited ceramics, poems and paintings together, most recently at the Works Gallery in Philadelphia in 1997. The Worcester Center for Crafts in Massachusetts is organizing a retrospective of her work that is to open October 9 with a public memorial.

©1999 San Francisco Chronicle Page E4

↑ Index

345. Dan Waber
Re: listings ?
Tue 21 Sep 1999

At 04:01 PM 9/16/99 -0400,)ohn Lowther wrote: >contrary to what we've been told i heard a rumor that the revolution will in >fact be televised but as yet the tv guide hasnt announced it and i cant find >out anything more

"The revolution WILL be televised, but you'll only be able to understand it if you don't watch the television coverage."
Russ Nelson

> or know what the website is

Well, www.therevolution.com is a Julian Lennon site, www.therevolution.org is has been purchased, but is not up in any way shape or form (very strange), and www.therevolution.net is definitely up to something (witness: "Coming soon: Revolution Lite, with 104% fewer calories") There's something awfully mysterious about www.revolution.com, whereas www.revolution.org automatically redirects you to Yahoo! (maybe they know?), and www.revolution.net is a private health care company.

Any other news on this rumor would be greatly appreciated (I want to have time to stock up on film, ammo, chocolate, coffee, and tobacco).

Dan

↑ Index

346. James Brook
italian poetry & LA writing at city lights
Tue 21 Sep 1999

Two events of possible interest at City Lights Bookstore in San Francisco. Tonight (Tuesday, Sept. 21) is a book release party for Promised Land: Italian Poetry After 1975 (Sun & Moon) and Thursday night there's L.A. Exile: A Guide to Los Angeles Writing 1932-1998 (Marsilio). Paul Vangelisti is coeditor on both books, and he and others will be in attendance.

This Week
@
City Lights Bookstore

City Lights Bookstore
261 Columbus Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94133
[redacted]
http://www.citylights.com

Tuesday, Sept. 21, 7 p.m.

Promised Land: Italian Poetry After 1975
Edited by Luigi Ballerini, Beppe Cavatora, Elena Coda, and Paul Vangelisti
A Bilingual Edition
Published by Sun & Moon Classics

The Istituto Italiano di Cultura and City Lights Books are pleased to present a reading and celebration of this delightful, comprehensive anthology of late-twentieth-century Italian poetry.

Several of the authors will be in attendance. Please join us for this special event!

Thursday, Sept. 23, 7 p.m.

L.A. Exile: A Guide to Los Angeles Writing 1932-1998
Edited by Paul Vangelisti and Evan Calbi
Published by Marsilio Press

A curious literature of exile: the writers of this anthology came from Europe, other parts of the United States, and disparate and invisible parts of California. Along with the familiar figures of prewar, exotic Hollywood, such as Raymond Chandler, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Aldous Huxley, and Thomas Mann, L.A. Exile offers a look at the successive generations who have addressed a different, ever-shifting, essentially boundless and absent metropolis.

Paul Vangelisti will speak and sign copies of L.A. Exile.

↑ Index

347. Sarah Hreha
Call for Papers
Tue 21 Sep 1999

PLEASE FORWARD TO ANYONE WHO MIGHT BE INTERESTED.

CALL FOR PAPERS
"From Miniatures to Movies: Texts and Represntations"

University of Minnesota
Fourth Annual Graduate Symposium
in Romance Studies

MARCH 4, 2000

An Interdisciplinary Forum

Featuring Plenary SPeaker:
Prof. Caoline Jewers
"Pageant-Wagons, Perestroika, and the Angel of History"

We seek papers related to Romance Studies and concerning texts and representations, including but not limited to:

art of description / drama studies / film studies / emblem studies / ekphrasis / cybertext / the medieval book / books and illustrations / authors as critics

We request that you submit an anonymous abstract of 500 words in English, accompanied by a 3X5 index card with the following information: title of paper, name, academic affiliation, address, telephone number, and e-mail address. NOTE: Papers MUST be written in ENGLISH. Please translate quotes within the paper itself or in a hand-out.

DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSIONS: NOVEMBER 30, 1999

Please send abstract to:

Catherine Pulling
Department of French & Italian
University of Minnesota
9 Pleasant Street SE
Minneapolis, MN 55455

Submission of an abstract implies a commitment to attend the Symposium. Completed papers should arrive no later than February 11, 2000. Reading time will be limited to 20 minutes.

Steering Committee: Stephanie Lohse (Chair), Sarah Buchanan, Caryn Connelly, Madeleine Craig, Sarah-Grace Heller, Sarah Hreha, Joshua Lund, Catherine Pulling, Daniel Quinn.

This document is available via WWW at:
http://www.folwell.umn.edu/span_port/gradsymp.html
Alternate formats are available upon request.
To request these or other disability accomodations, please contact Stephanie Lohse, at the the above address, phone [redacted], E-mail:
[redacted]

A. Sarah Hreha
Assistant Editor
Hispanic Issues
Dept. of Spanish and Portuguese
University of Minnesota
Officer, Students for Cuba
Co-Chair, Tone Scientists
E-mail: [redacted]
http://www.tc.umn.edu/~hreh0001

Don't miss Assif Tsahar & Susie Ibarra
Thursday, Oct. 14, 1999 - 7:30-10:30 pm
the WHOLE music club - FREE -

↑ Index

348. daniel bouchard
POETRY READING IN GLOUCESTER, MASS.
Tue 21 Sep 1999

POETRY READING IN GLOUCESTER, MASS.

ART SPACE

1 Center Street

3rd floor

Gloucester, MA

[redacted]

coffeehouse starts at 8 PM

donations accepted but not necessary poetry necessary, but accepted?

open mike before featured reader

coffee & cookies (unspecified kind) served

featured reader: Daniel Bouchard

introduced by Gerrit Lansing

"Perhaps the most important event in American poetry

to occur on Center Street in Gloucester on this particular night."

--an esteemed critic

come early for the cookies, stay late for the poetry.

<<<<<<<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>

Daniel Bouchard

The MIT Press Journals

Five Cambridge Center

Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]

phone: [redacted]

fax: [redacted]

> <<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

349. Jacques Debrot

Re: 9-0 call for work

Tue 21 Sep 1999

CALL FOR WORK

Nine to Zero is looking for a poetry ms of between 10-15 pp to appear as the third issue of the magazine.

The deadline for this issue is Nov 1st. _Nine to Zero_ is not accepting submissions for other issues at this time. Please send with SASE to:

Jacques Debrot
49 Old Meetinghouse Green
Norton MA 02766

↑ Index

350. Billy Little baraka/blues for allen
Tue 21 Sep 1999

found this at the blacklisted journalist:

http://www.bigmagic.com/pages/blackj/column35.html

aronowicz is a bit of a loose canon

he's got twenty pages, following hard on the heels of the single page of Amiri Baraka, recounting the unveiling of Ginsbergs tombstone, aronowicz has a lot of anger and some of it directed at Allen, my guess is he's angry with allen for dying before they got a chance to kiss and make up

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

351. Hazel Smith
(no subject)
Wed 22 Sep 1999

If any of you have students who want to travel, they might be interested in our new MA in Creative Writing which will be biased towards experimental writing and will be run by myself and Anne Brewster in Sydney at the University of New South Wales. They can find details on the School of English, University of New South Wales website at www.arts.unsw.edu.au/english, or they can get application forms from the School of English, University of New South Wales, Sydney, NSW 2052. The email address is [redacted]. Alternately they can contact me!!

Hazel

Hazel Smith

School of English
University of New South Wales
Sydney 2052

Dr.Hazel Smith
Senior lecturer
School of English

University of New South Wales
Sydney 2052

↑ Index

352. Stephen Ellis
Re: Grenier :that:
Wed 22 Sep 1999

There are still available twenty issues of :that:, vol. II no. 1, comprising a talk given by Bob Grenier in Franconia, NH in 1993. 16 pp., color repro covers of work from Grenier's series < r h y m m s >. $10 ea. Orders by post only at below address; email enquiries for further details okay. Stephen Ellis 23 Mitton Street Portland, ME 04102

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

353. Michael Neff
The POETRY INTO FILM Competition
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Announcing the first ever POETRY INTO FILM competition sponsored by Web Del Sol, a co-sponsor of the First Annual Literary Arts Film Awards to be held in New York city at the National Arts Club. Time and date to be announced. On September 30, 1999, entries will be accepted. Competition will close on January 30, 2000.

More information and guidelines at http://webdelsol.com/solhome.htm

A panel of judges will choose the best poems and pass their recommendations to the filmmakers. Another panel of judges will choose the best films at the event. Poems made into film will be screened at the awards ceremony which will be very well attended by the literary arts and film community. Poets will be present to discuss their work and vision. The films will later be formatted into a format for display on the web and screenings on independent film websites. A collection in DVD format is planned also.

↑ Index

354. Jordan Davis
BIVOUAC #2 call for work
Wed 22 Sep 1999

BIVOUAC
the magazine of the Subpress Collective is seeking work for its Winter 1999 Practical Political Action issue

the editor for this issue is Jordan Davis and the address is:

Bivouac
c/o Jordan Davis
720 Fort Washington Ave Apt 2F
New York NY 10040

Please hurry .. deadline is October 5

↑ Index

355. Jacques Debrot
Re: Reviews
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Brian, thanks for posting your reviews to the List, it's something more of us should do perhaps with things we are not likely, or inclined, to place elsewhere.

I haven't read the Harryman you discuss but I just recently got through VICE, ROSE, and MEMORY PLAY. I've also written some things lately under her influence--something like having a bad flu & then getting over it--though by this I don't mean to criticize her work, but my own emulative experiments. But I feel that as a result I know her work, in a way, from the inside that I wouldn't otherwise. I suppose her writing is fascinating to me partly to the degree to which it subverts attempts to arrive at some kind of judgement of it. I'm particularly interested in the kind of absolutely flat or Zero degree writing of hers that is most prevalent perhaps in VICE. To describe it in shorthand, it is almost analogous to the visual work that came out of COBRA, or early Polke --though your own analogy to the Futurists is suggestive. Some of Watten's own best work in my opinion are the Harryman riffs he does in CONDUIT--"On Barnaby Jones" for instance. & --here's a stretch--your own "Pretentious Picturea" is not too far off the aesthetic of Zero degree--PP is the closest thing to a Twombly that I have ever read actually . & Luoma's prose in WORKS & DAYS too--esp in say the terrific "Auto Gobbler"--though it is quite different of course from most of Harryman's stuff--does bear a similar genetic relationship to the zero degree. (Interestingly Harryman's name is brought up by Luoma & then dismissed as an influence in W&D.) Anyway, forgive the free-association, I'm fumbling a lot of remarks into the air without any attempt at synthesizing them, but I will perhaps follow this up with another post. Just as afterthought--it interested me to see the extent to which your Harryman review seemed in a way just as appropriate--or even more so-- to Scalapino's writing, say in DEFOE.

--jacques

↑ Index

356. daniel bouchard
POETRY READING IN GLOUCESTER, MASS. (with date)
Wed 22 Sep 1999

[[[[[[DATE: Thursday, September 23]]]]]]

POETRY READING IN GLOUCESTER, MASS.

ART SPACE

1 Center Street

3rd floor

Gloucester, MA

[redacted]

coffeehouse starts at 8 PM

donations accepted but not necessary

poetry necessary, but accepted?

open mike before featured reader

coffee & cookies (unspecified kind) served

featured reader: Daniel Bouchard

introduced by Gerrit Lansing

"Perhaps the most important event in American poetry

to occur on Center Street in Gloucester on this particular night."

--an esteemed critic

come early for the cookies, stay late for the poetry.

<<<<<<<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>

Daniel Bouchard

The MIT Press Journals

Five Cambridge Center

Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]

phone: [redacted]

fax: [redacted]

> <<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

357. Jacques Debrot
Re: Pretentious Picturea
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Forgive the seemingly endless analogising, but actually PP is a lot more like the Warhol/Basquiat collaborations: popster vs graffiti artist. Brian I assume your motivation was mostly derogatory (?) but I will maintain PERVERSELY that it is among the most successful Ashbery collaborations.

--jacques

↑ Index

358. Chicago Review
Tom Pickard
Wed 22 Sep 1999

The British poet Tom Pickard will be reading in Huntington, West Virginia, on March 30th, and is trying to schedule some other readings--near or far--for the first two weeks of April.

For those unfamiliar with Pickard, his poetry is delightful: I highly recommend TIEPIN EROS (Bloodaxe Books), his selected poems. He has been an important figure in British poetry for quite a while, and has a new volume that will soon be out entitled FUCKWIND.

Please e-mail me if you have interest and resources to schedule a reading.

Thanks,
Devin Johnston

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

Check out our new website!
http://humanities.uchicago.edu/review

Chicago Review
5801 S. Kenwood Ave.
Chicago IL 60637

↑ Index

359. Brian Stefans
Things
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Yes, I confess the Perelman view was very off, and the Harryman shrill and imprecise. I may be able to argue that I don't seem to have the leisure time to think things through as thoroughly as I'd like, but then again I'm impatient, and sometimes precision seems dull to me, even if the promise at the end is some degree of "profoundity." But I don't see anyone else, except perhaps Lowther at this point, writing about books on this list, unless it's to demonstrate some bibliographic skill that, in the end, is rather uninspiring, or if it's to pounce on some third party for a salty phrase which, in the end, turns out to be a partisan dispute regarding reputations rather than text (the author of the review not being available to offer counter-arguments -- whereas I am). Not to be so glum and down -- or reductive -- but I don't quite know what this list is for. It seems even a bad review could garner some degree of thoughtful consideration from those who at least feel the urge to make jibes -- is that worth the effort? Who's impressed? I realize that we're dealing with several geographic areas that have their own mores which can be considered essential to them -- i.e. one person's salty phrase is another's version of downright condemnation -- but is there any way to break through that, not with an ax but with subtlety?

↑ Index

360. Maria Damon
Re: SF Book Festival Panel Discussions
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Tisa this looks positively dreamy; any chance of a video or audio taping?

At 1:15 PM -0700 9/18/99, Tisa Bryant wrote:
>(Talk to Me) In My Language, a panel hosted by the 1999 San Francisco Bay >Area Book Festival, October 16, 1999, 3:30 pm, Fort Mason, Marina >Conference Center, San Francisco. Co-sponsored by Small Press Distribution >and Modern Times Bookstore.
>
>A gathering of innovative writers of color, exploring the nuances and >challenges of communication and community, tradition and experimentation, >publishing and politics, from the perspectives of

>Will Alexander, Catalina Cariaga, Summi Kaipa, Pamela Lu, Nathaniel Mackey, >Harryette Mullen. Moderated by Tisa Bryant.
>
>Will Alexander' is the author of Asia & Haiti (Sun & Moon, 1995), >Stratospheric Canticles (Pantograph, 1995), Towards the Primeval Lightning >Field (O Books, 1998), and his latest book of poems, Above The Human Nerve >Domain (Pavement Saw Press, 1998). He has recent writing in the latest >issues of Chain, Fence, Orpheus Grid, and in translation, a set of poems in >the journal Vatra out of Bucharest, Romania. A special section of Callalloo, >edited by Harryette Mullen and dedicated to the work of Mr. Alexander, is >forthcoming, as is his novella, Alien Weaving, from Green Integer Press.
>
>Catalina Cariaga was born in Los Angeles, CA (1958) and received her >Bachelors of Music from Mount St. Mary's College in Los Angeles, and her >Masters of Fine Arts in Creative Writing from San Francisco State >Unversity. She is a contributing editor of Poetry Flash, a Poetry Review >and Literary Calendar for the West. She has taught on the adjunct faculty >of the Poetics Program at New College of California in San Francisco. Her >poetry has been published in many journals, including Chain, Lipstick 11, >New American Writing and ZYZZYVA. Cultural Evidence is her first book of >poetry (Subpress, 1999). She works for University Relations at UC >Berkeley, and lives in Oakland.
>
>Summi Kaipa is the editor of Interlope, a journal of Asian American poetics.
>She has published work in Fourteen Hills Review, Kenning, Rhizome, Rain >Taxi, Tool A Magazine and Tripwire . A chapbook of her poetic work is >forthcoming from Leroy Press.
>
>Pamela Lu was born in Southern California and studied mathematics at the >University of California, Berkeley. Since 1995 she has worked as a technical >writer in Silicon Valley and co-edited Idiom (www.idiomart.com), an online >journal and chapbook press. In addition to a book of fanciful non-fiction, >Pamela: A Novel (Atelos Press,1999), she has had prose and poetry published >in a number of journals, including Chain, Chicago Review, Clamour, Explosive >Magazine, Interlope, Mirage, and Poetics Journal. She lives in San >Francisco.
>
>Nathaniel Mackey is the author of several chapbooks and books of poetry, >among them Four for Trane (Golemics, 1978), Outlantish (Chax Press, 1992) >Eroding Witness (University of Illinois Press, 1985), School of Udhra (City >Lights Books, 1993) and Whatsaid Serif (City Lights Books, 1998). Strick:

>Song of the Andoumboulou 16-25, a compact disc recording of poems read with >musical accompaniment was released in 1995 by Spoken Engine Company. He is >the author of an ongoing prose composition, From A Broken Bottle Traces of >Perfume Still Emanate, of which two volumes have been published: Bedouin >Hornbook (Callaloo Fiction Series, 1986; second edition: Sun & Moon >Press,1997) and Djbot Baghostus's Run (Sun & Moon Press, 1993), and editor >of the literary magazine Hambone, and coeditor (with Art Lange) of the >anthology Moment's Notice: Jazz in Poetry and Prose (Coffee House Press, >1993). He is also the author of a book of critical essays, Discrepant >Engagement: Dissonance, Cross-Culturality, and Experimental Writing >(Cambridge University Press, 1993). Mr. Mackey is Professor of Literature >at the University of California, Santa Cruz.
>
>Harryette Mullen's most recent book of poems, her fourth, is Muse and Drudge >(Singing Horse Press, 1995). Her previous books of poems include Trimmings >(Tender Buttons, 1991) and S*PeRMK*T (Singing Horse Press, 1992). Ms.
>Mullen's work has just appeared or is forthcoming in Hambone, Moving >Borders: An Anthology of Innovative Writing by Women, The Gertrude Stein >Awards for Innovative Poetry, Santa Monica Review, Frame-Work, and the >exhibit catalog of the Kimchi Xtravaganza at the Korean American Museum.
>She is also the author of Freeing the Soul: Race, Subjectivity and >Difference in Slave Narratives, forthcoming from Cambridge University Press, >December 1999. She teaches at the University of California, Los Angeles.
>
>*******
>Followed by "Fast, Cheap and Out of Control: New Publishers at SPD", a >panel of new SPD publishers will discuss and answer questions about running >a successful small press today. The panel will be moderated by Laura >Moriarty, Assistant Director of Small Press Distribution, and features:
>SKANKY POSSUM Hoa Nguyen, Dale Smith
>MELODEON POETRY SYSTEMS Peter Neufield, Eric Frost
>KRUPSKAYA Jocelyn Saidenberg, Hung Q. Tu
>FLIPSIDE Anatalio C. Ubalde
>ATELOS Lyn Hejinian, Travis Ortiz
>
>20% OFF ALL BOOKS ALL DAY
>OCTOBER 16 & 17, 10-6PM
>SAN FRANCISCO BAY AREA BOOK FESTIVAL
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>*******
>Today we declare:
>First, they are living in a Nono form;
>Second, they are Nono lives;
>Third, they make us feel Nono;
>Fourth, they make us become Nono;
>Fifth, we Nono.
> Lan Ma
> "Manifesto of Nonoism"
> (Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
>*******

↑ Index

361. Maria Damon
IMAGINING query LANGUAGE
Wed 22 Sep 1999

email for Jed Rasula please? backchannel...

↑ Index

362. Michael Neff
ACLU, WDS and Plaintiffs
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Thanks to the ACLU, Web Del Sol, and other plaintiffs, a preliminary injunction was leveled against enforcement or threatened enforcement of 1999 PA 33, Michigan's net censorship act--a law which would have placed all publishers in potential legal jeopardy. This means that the "law" will not go into effect, and that the State of Michigan may not enforce it or attempt to prosecute any net publisher until the lawsuit is concluded. The Judge agreed with us on all of our arguments that the law is unconstitutional. A copy of the decision is available here:

Mike Neff
Editor
WDS

↑ Index

363. KENT JOHNSON
A crown of iron
Wed 22 Sep 1999

In response to a post I called "The sound of drums," Michael Neff has written to tell me of his surprise at my "quick about face." I believe my implied other face must be pinned to a post I put up a few days ago, one that contained a reference to David Hume and ended with a statement about my complete agreement with Michael's position on East Timor. Since the intended tone of that first rebuttal did not register with him, I am thinking that others on the List may have taken it wrongly too. So, for what it's worth (and to keep my left-wing credentials before the List intact) I wanted to say-- That post about my agreeing with Michael Neff WAS SUPPOSED TO BE IRONIC.

Yes, I hate US imperialism, am one of those old fogeys who believes its existence is as real as rocks, and I wanted to make that conviction crystal clear, since irony, apparently, is failing me, along with other things in my body these days. And I wish Web del Sol and its editors the best of luck as they continue to spread the gospel of neo-liberal innocence and beneficence far and wide. May the sun never set on the empire of American poetry.

Kent

↑ Index

364. Michael Magee
COMBO party - Sat. Sept. 25, 6pm!
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Hi all, wanted to let you know that there'll be a party celebrating the first 4 issues of COMBO this Saturday, Sept. 25, at 6pm at the Writers House in Philadelphia (3805 Locust Walk on Penn's campus).

You're all cordially invited so if you happen to be in the area. please do stop by. Food, drink, readings by past and future contributors, music, and the unveiling of COMBO 4 (the formal announcement for which I'll send to y'all on Monday). Should be a good time, and there's nothin like surprise guests to spice up an occassion. Hope to see some of you there. Feel free to email me for more info.

-Mike.

↑ Index

365. Carol L. Hamshaw
EEC Website Launch and Fundraiser
Wed 22 Sep 1999

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
Website Launch and Fundraiser
October 2, 1999
Video In Studios, 1965 Main Street
Contact: [redacted]/[redacted]

WEBSITE LAUNCH AND FUNDRAISER

Come celebrate The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre's new website and virtual Writer's Workshop hosted by Seven Sisters. The Sisters will be reading and the website will be displayed on computer monitors at Video In Studios. Admission is $5 and proceeds go to the programs and services of the Edgewise Café's on-line writer's workshop, such as honorariums to well-known guest writers who will facilitate the workshop once a month. The workshop is an online method for writer's to share their work and receive critique in a friendly, facilitated atmosphere. Meet writers from around the world and explore their work as well as receive feedback on your own: visit www.edgewisecafe.org.

The Edgewise Café Online also features a quarterly e-zine of Canadian poets. It publishes poetry, fiction, and art, as well as audio and video of selected works by writers such as Wayde Compton, Sheri-D Wilson, bill bissett, Loranne Brown, Andrea Thompson, S.R. Duncan, Pete McCormack, Bud Osborn, Adeena Karasick and more. The site delivers the latest news on the organization and its affiliates and serves as an excellent resource for creative online publishing and information for writers. GET CONNECTED!

Seven Sisters is an independent writing collective, a diverse and flexible group of writers meeting in Vancouver. Initiated in February 1997, the group formed to further develop members' writing through critiques, discussion and group projects. The group has performed at the Vancouver International Writer's Festival, the Vancouver Public Library (on International Women's Day) and at the Tongue Stomp reading series. The group is currently facilitating a weekly poetry electronic workshop that is part of Edgewise ElectroLit Café, The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre's website at www.edgewisecafe.org. Their anthology, Seven Sisters, is available at Women In Print and Duthies Books. Judy MacInnes Jr writes fiction and poetry and is working on her first book of poetry. Susan MacRae is a poet and playwright. Molly Starlight has written and acted with the First Nations School of Acting. Billie Livingston's first novel, Going Down Swinging, will appear from Random House in January 2000. Shamina Senaratne is active as a writer, performer and textile artist. Andrea Galbraith has had two plays staged, and also writes fiction and non-fiction. Antonia Banyard will participate in the 1999 Writing Studio at the Banff Centre for the Arts. Sara Graefe is a playwright and fiction writer who just completed a residency at Norman Jewison's Canadian Film Centre. Natalie Meisner is a playwright and poet, and has won the Canadian National Playwrighting Competition.

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre is a nonprofit society whose mandate is to exploit communications technology to widen the audience of Canadian poetry and to give poets, multi-media artists and youth the opportunity to use, learn, and create with this technology. Videoconferencing and online publishing are the major technologies that we work with. Our electronic magazine can be viewed and heard at <www.edgewisecafe.org>. We also are hosting Canada's first Videopoem Festival at Video In Studios November 7, 1999.

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

366. Christopher Reiner
New book by Lisa Lubasch
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Avec Books announces the publication of How Many of Them Are You? by Lisa Lubasch
(ISBN 1-880713-19-5)

From a review in Publisher's Weekly -- "A poet in her mid-20s, Lubasch writes with the intensity of a witness to the "birth of consciousness" in the classic late-19th-century sense. And, indeed, of the many echoes that resound in her debut volume, those of the most angst-ridden, defiant, uber-menschlich Europeans--Rimbaud, Nietzsche, Lautréamont, the ironist Laforgue--are the most apparent...Mostly apostrophic, with direct addresses to the reader, a lover or the powers that be, the poems approach being and consciousness with the irony-shucking fury of a new Promethean...Lubasch is at an interesting crossroads, one where the integrity of the fragment, and the continuities of lyric are simultaneously questioned...It is a fraught ride that Lubasch provides, and one looks forward to what her future, already foretold as a minefield of possibilities, holds."

How Many More of Them Are You? is a book of texts and sub-texts on identity, love, on what is perceived and what is known. Divided into six sections, within which are "notes," fragments and "leprosariums," How Many More of Them Are You encompasses many voices and philosophic questions. In a literary era of detached irony, Lubasch's voice is passionate, dramatic and subtly humorous. Her poetry is unusual and completely unique.

Check out the Avec Books web site http://www.litpress.com/how.html
for excerpts, audio clips, and advance comments by Lyn Hejinian, Wayne Koestenbaum, Cole Swensen, and Gillian Conoley

$14
Available from:
Small Press Distribution (not up on their web site yet, but they have it)
Baker & Taylor

↑ Index

367. Pritchett,Patrick
Creeley on Wall Street
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Creeley today in WSJ
Dow soars to 36K

↑ Index

368. William Marsh
Logo Lagoon from PBP
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Hi Poetics:

PaperBrainPress is happy to announce the publication of John Olson's Logo Lagoon (24pp.), the seventh book in the chapbook series.

This and other PBP chaps are $5 or $8 for any two. Or, for poetics folks, I'll gladly send this and another title to anyone who sends a couple bucks for postage.

Please visit the updated website for a listing and samples of Logo Lagoon and other titles.

http://www.sunbrella.net/paperbrainpress/

best wishes,

Bill Marsh
PaperBrainPress
1022 Emerald St.
San Diego, CA 92109

William Marsh
[redacted]
http://www.sunbrella.net

↑ Index

369. Richard Dillon
Re: MC Richards
Wed 22 Sep 1999

It is clear that M.C. Richards set a very high standard worth emulating. Her aesthetics were her ethics. Thanks to Ron Silliman for bringing this notice to my attention.

>From: Ron Silliman <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: MC Richards
>Date: Mon, Sep 20, 1999, 5:25 AM
>

> From today's NY Times. I had not realized that she lived just 15 miles away.
>
> Ron
>
> ----------
>
> September 20, 1999
>
> M.C. Richards, Poet, Potter and Essayist, Dies at 83
>
> By ROBERTA SMITH

M. C. Richards, a poet, potter, essayist, translator and painter, who taught at Black Mountain College in the late 1940's and thereafter became an impassioned advocate of community in both art and life, died on Friday at Camphill Village, an agricultural community in Kimberton, Pa., where she had lived since 1984. She was 83.
An artist who wrote poems about pottery and made pots inspired by her reading, Ms. Richards was perhaps best known for "Centering in Pottery, Poetry and the Person," a book of essays published in the middle of the tumultuous 1960's that was impressive for its synthesis of thought, plain speech and incantatory momentum. The book, which became an underground classic, pulled together ideas about perception, craft, education, creativity, religion and spirituality, arguing for the richness of daily experience if carefully attended to, and the creativity of the average person. "Poets are not the only poets," Ms. Richards wrote.

Mary Caroline Richards was born in Weiser, Idaho, in 1916 and reared in Portland, Ore. She earned a bachelor's degree in literature and languages from Reed College in 1937, with a thesis titled "Poetry of the Tang Dynasty in Relation to Western Imagism." She went on to the University of California at Berkeley, where she studied Chinese and wrote her Ph.D. dissertation on irony in Thomas Hardy in 1942. She then began a brief marriage, and taught English at the Central Washington College of Education in Ellensburg, Wash., and at the University of Chicago. But she found academic life stifling.

In 1945 she married Albert William Levi Jr., her second husband and a social scientist who was invited that year to join the faculty of the experimental Black Mountain College, near Asheville, N.C. Black Mountain was a short-lived laboratory for innovative teaching and art whose faculty and students included Josef and Anni Albers, John Cage, Merce Cunningham, David Tudor, Robert Rauschenberg and Charles Olson.

At Black Mountain Ms. Richards taught writing, produced and, when necessary, translated plays by Cocteau, Satie and Yeats. She also danced and studied pottery with Robert Turner. Around 1950 she participated in what might have been the first "happening," with Cage, Olson, Rauschenberg and Franz Kline. In 1951 she separated from her husband, whom she later divorced, and in 1952 she went to New York with Tudor.

She studied pottery at Greenwich House in Greenwich Village, attended the meetings of the downtown avant-garde known as the Club and worked on the first English translation of Antonin Artaud's influential "Theater and Its Double," published by Grove Press in 1958.

In 1954 Ms. Richards, Tudor and Cage, along with Paul Williams, an architect, and Karen Karnes, a potter, who had both also been at Black Mountain, established a commune called the Land near Stony Point, N.Y. Ms. Richards lived there for a decade, working in a studio with Ms. Karnes; they developed a form of flame-proof clay that enabled them to make ceramic > cookware.

>
> Ms. Richards began giving pottery workshops in the early 1960's. Reflecting the ideas that would figure in "Centering," these became increasingly interdisciplinary, with titles like "Clay and Words," "Clay and Movement" and "Clay and Eurythmy." She lectured and taught workshops at schools in the United States, Canada and Britain.
>
> Her longest teaching affiliation, from 1986 until her death, was with the University of Creation Spirituality, established in Oakland, Calif., by Matthew Fox, a Dominican priest.
>
> Ms. Richards's books, which often mixed prose and poetry, included "The Crossing Point" (1973), "Opening Our Moral Eye" (1996), "Imagine Inventing Yellow" (1991) and "Toward Wholeness: Rudolf Steiner Education in America," a work of social philosophy. The Camphill community in Kimberton is one of 80 Camphills worldwide based on Steiner's teachings.
>
> In 1989 Ms. Richards, who has no survivors, added painting to her roster of activities. She then exhibited ceramics, poems and paintings together, most recently at the Works Gallery in Philadelphia in 1997. The Worcester Center for Crafts in Massachusetts is organizing a retrospective of her work that is to open on Oct. 9, with a public memorial.
>
> Ms. Richards embraced old age with characteristic openness, writing a poem in 1997 in which she saw herself as "living toward dying, blooming into invisibility."

↑ Index

370. daniel bouchard

East Timor

Wed 22 Sep 1999

"Only more bloodthirsty"
"Only more bloodthirsty"

The phrase rings in the ear. Now, THAT'S knowledge. Moving beyond rational queries into "group behavior" now we state with certainty which savages (re: not American) not only THIRST for blood, but which ones do it more than others. And better than others.

The Indonesian military and the militias they oversee show great ingenuity. Not content with the stockpiles of American arms (Indonesia produces none or few or none) they've also used locally manufactured machetes. This shows spirit in less reliance on imports. Good for them. The first steps to releasing oneself from the IMF yoke may be found in such actions. After all, the people being slaughtered are hardly armed at all. Who needs an M16 to do a machetes job? It sure sounds better on NPR to report that machetes are being used. Exotic locale needs flavor. Machetes aren't even a garden tool in the US. Anyone handling a machete must reside in a universe far different from yours and mine. But they have guns too; American made. And still people insist this proves nothing.

What was it we had set out to prove, learn, listen to one another? The US is guilty of atrocities in East Timor, or only "shares" in the responsibility? Sharing is the first step in exoneration. The US arms, trains, and funds despots only with the best intentions. Arm your friends to the teeth in the fight for democracy. It's they who will fire the weapons. If you believe this your conscience will never be bothered.

I wonder, now that Allan Nairn has been deported from Indonesia, how many appearances he will make in the mainstream media. Wouldn't the last American reporter in East Timor make an interesting interview? As quoted on this list earlier Nairn states that the US bears "some" of the responsibility. If put before a major network TV camera however, he may begin to broadcast loudly just how much that "some" consists of. The usual pattern is that the "mainstream" media will ignore someone like Nairn, someone who actually saw things happening and can offer explanation and analysis for the events, even a white guy. No, what we'll hear are modified press releases from the State Department and see footage borrowed from Australian TV at least until it's safe enough (Western military presence) for western media to go back and we'll hear anguished statements from US officials about the "tragedy," and how, like last time, we must stop it next time and so on.

Fuck that.

I have no voice with the Indonesian government. I have one here. I know that my government did everything BUT handle the machetes in East Timor. My efforts need to take place here, however small or insignificant they seem. No time to "educate" or argue Neff.

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]

fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

371. David Kirschenbaum
Anyone know about Detroit-area readings and bookstores?
Wed 22 Sep 1999

I'm headed to Detroit this weekend to catch a ballgame at Tiger Stadium, before they knock the ole lady down, and wonder if anyone knows about readings and bookstores in the area, zines, small presses, the works. A contact name and info would be great, too.

Thanks and
Be Good,
David Kirschenbaum, editor
Booglit

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

372. Poetry Project
next week & stuff for sale
Wed 22 Sep 1999

NEXT WEEK, on Wednesday, September 29th, at 8 pm, The Poetry Project presents a special event:

THE ELECTRIC MAGISTRATE CIRCUS

with Emily XYZ, Chi Chi Valenti, Dael Orlandersmith, John Giorno, John S. Hall, Beau Sia, Glenn O'Brien, Lawrence Goldhuber, the Virgil Moorefield Ensemble, and many others performing & reading to free Emily XYZ's captive CD, the Electric Magistrate, from Mercury/Polygram and to promote artist ownership of work, more equitable royalty rates, and the distribution of words/music/art via the Internet.

This event is $10, $7 for students & seniors. For more info, call [redacted]

AND THEN

Friday, October 1st at 10:30 pm

PRE-MILLENNIAL CRAMPS: A SPOKEN-WORD HAPPENING

with Beau Sia, Todd Colby, Galinsky, & Lisa King

co-sponsored by Pseudo.com

COMPUTER STUFF SALE

We've got some Mac-compatible goodies for sale here at the office, including:

2 zip drives, practically brand-new, $50 or highest offer each. They work great, just can't use them with our new iMacs.

4 hard drives, $50 or highest offer each, again, non-compatible with the new turquoise aerodynamic computer-things.

All equipment as is, no guarantees

Call [redacted] and we will bargain as if we were travelling the silk route.

NEW ON THE WEBSITE

A few new additions, specifically, Jaime Manrique's essay, "Ashes & Embers: Presence of Latin American Poetry in New York City" in the World Archives

Nathaniel Mackey's paper, "Design for Continuing Investigation" in the Project Papers Archives and Jonathan Mayhew's "Writing Experiments (with apologies to Bernadette Mayer)"

at http://www.poetryproject.com

AND COMING SOON

Lawrence Ferlinghetti & Edward Sanders read

a Sanctuary event

on a Tuesday

October 5, 1999

8 pm

Hope to see you there!

↑ Index

373. Poetics List Administration

poetics list backlog - please read

Wed 22 Sep 1999

We seem to be developing a backlog of messages, increased participation due no doubt to the return of the academic year, as well as to a few rather heated discussions happening now on the list.

As to the latter, I would suggest we might endeavor collectively to keep things on an even keel, so to speak. At its best, the list runs on reasoned dissent as the exchange of views and ideas; it stalls on rancour.

Now, the backlog I want to clear out as soon as possible, meaning that I intend to send a good number of messages over the next few days. It would be helpful if posting were kept to a minimum until, say, Thursday late; this I will leave to all of you. Be prepared, in any case, to see quite a bit of mail coming through.

Chris

↑ Index

374. Poetics List Administration
Euro-SF Poetry Festival / Saidenberg
Wed 22 Sep 1999

I had to reformat this message. Chris

---------- Original message (ID416774) (141 lines) ----------

Date: Mon, 20 Sep 1999 14:47:53 -0800
From: jocelyn saidenberg <[redacted]>
Subject: Euro-SF Poetry Festival

Friday, September 24, 7:30 p.m.
Euro-San Francisco Poetry Festival
German poet Tracy Splinter
US poets Kevin Killian and Jocelyn Saidenberg will stage their play "Capriccio"

Tracy Splinter was born in 1971 in Cape Town, South Africa, of Dutch, Javanese, and English descent. After emigration to Germany, she became a New German National in 1997, and lives in Hamburg. Splinter is prominent in the spoken word scenes of Hamburg, Berlin, Munich, and Rotterdam. Fluent in German, English, Afrikaans, and Spanish, she has translated her own poetry for the Euro-San Francisco Festival readings. "Ich habe keine Eile, die Welt zu zerst–ren," she writes, "was wirklich will ist sie wiederzuerschaffen./ Und will, dass Du meine meistgesch”tz- und einmaligste Sch–pfung bist." ("I am in no hurry to destroy the world/ in fact I want to recreate it/and I want you to be my most prized and most exquisite creation.")

In "Capriccio" an international cast of divas, designers, poets, assassins, lovers, enemies, friends, detectives and socialites gather backstage at the San Francisco Opera moments before the curtain goes up on Richard Strauss' opera "Capriccio." Our farce comedy of the same name is an affectionate salute to the international poetry community as we gather together here in the city of fog, sourdough bread, Language poetry, skateboards and the inimitable Robin Williams. With a cast of local artists and writers including Norma Cole, Kota Ezawa, Phoebe Gloeckner, Craig Goodman, Clifford Hengst, Marisa Hernandez, Scott Hewicker, Jennifer Locke, Rex Ray, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Leslie Scalapino and Wayne Smith.

Co-sponsored with the Goethe-Institut, in conjunction with the Euro-San Francisco Poetry Festival, a 5-day series of events sponsored by Alliance FranÁaise, Goethe-Institut, and Istituto Italiano di Cultura, in collaboration with City Lights Books, Intersection for the Arts, New Langton Arts, San Francisco Art Institute, and Small Press Traffic.

New College Theater
777 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

375. Taylor Brady
Enough (was RE: I can't believe it!!!)
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Ms. Houlihan,

That you maintain your insistence on the lack of a "connection" or "motivation" beyond the casually commercial, despite voluminous postings and references to sources substantiating claims to the contrary, is, frankly, fine with me. I have no wish to use this space to convince those who have decided not to be convinced. My purpose in responding to this thread was to offer a counter to what I saw as misinformation being offered by Mr. Neff. I and others have done that, and it seems that to continue this exchange beyond the present point would be simply to run in circles at great waste of bandwidth. To follow out the implications of Elizabeth Treadwell's message: the information is available for those who want it, and at this point in the life of this thread, no one on the list is learning anything new.

Also, I take your appeal to scarcity of time very seriously - I write in spare moments at work, and I have better things to do with that time. Yell at people in William Cohen's office, for one. Post to Poetics about things like the McCaffery and Rasula anthology, for another, in greater depth and with greater care than the past few days have allowed me. Or review two readings (Saidenberg/Singleton, Lu/Harryman) of last weekend, both of which deserve a fairly close account. Eat lunch. Step outside and watch the unseasonable electrical storms... The list is a decent resource for political information, far less so for the nuances of political argument, and with that I'll shut up for a while.

Taylor Brady

↑ Index

376. Grant Jenkins
The DC Scene
Wed 22 Sep 1999

I've just moved to the DC/Richmond area and was wondering if anyone would be so kind as to clue me in on bookstores, reading groups, events, organizations, etc. in the area. Any backchanneled information and/or introductions would be greatly appreciated.

Grant

↑ Index

377. Philip Nikolayev
A POLEMIC
Wed 22 Sep 1999

A POLEMIC

I subvert by suggesting alternative forms of to rely on outmoded conventions is highly problem
I subvert traditional notions of meaning old structural approach challenged by a younger gen binary oppositions pfut, zagging across the page semantics of the visual sign can no longer be construed simple tertiary relationship but rather more complex more problematic seen outside a teleology principle of the greatest reduction I now am undermining a new body of readings
I mean ousside as a colloquial usage

but then again problem
but then again no problem mindlobe how we undermine transparency of language I "mean" how it get rid of this illusion that we can see ideas of things through language no matter how defamiliarize we its essentials with usage of again technique sense-trapping within compounds to the bunk sense-chaining I believe the more appropriate word just as maximally subverting meter i.e. trying to write absolute prose absolute non-poetry generates its own constraints own meter own poetry evrbody shld try it sometime or else as I was yesterday subverting every syntactical by suddenly telemomma existence as structured out hangin three outflora gooters to specious and then I mean the sophists are clearly underrepresented in the academy have to try to hand out then man I wanna subvert something traditional language is driving me nads spuds exploding in the earth and then I salubriously reached the port the bloodmaster suggested I wait a few minutes till he apply his principles so I waited 15 minutes in the well lit sauna concresping with joy and redolence then the blurf guardelia hit the switch and the who bhagla roared splink splonk upon the capret and I had pfdno ek bawamnnnbh pevieg ba makmzinbb erated over and over again as a sort of closure abort abort how you hear me do you copy again subvert subvert and still meaning shines through subvert it and still it shines through that’s the magic

↑ Index

378. Nate and Jane Dorward

Re: Things

Wed 22 Sep 1999

I'd agree with Brian Stefans as to the utility of reviews on the list, so I'll post below a modest encomium I posted yesterday to the British-Poets discussion list--makes more sense here anyway, since the CD in question doeesn't contain any British poetry.... -- all best --N

....I should also mention a CD that popped through the mail recently, _Carnivocal: A celebration of sound poetry_ (Red Deer Press). It's a collection of Canadian sound poetry, both familiar and unfamiliar names: bpNichol, Christian Bok, Steven Ross Smith, Verbomotorhead, First Draft, bill bissett, Stephen Cain, W. Mark Sutherland, (3 of the 4) Horsemen and Owen Sound, Re:Sounding, Penn Kemp, Gerry Shikatani, Paul Dutton, Richard Truhlar & Steve McCaffery. The quality's generally high, the approaches quite various, ranging from "classic" sound-poetry (e.g. the dissection of a word into its component letters and syllables), to an almost pop-oriented sound reminiscent of Bobby McFerrin or the local kids imitating dance music with their mouths, to electronic treatments of sampled voices. Good to have an on-form Christian Bok represented generously--one of the real virtuosos of this form--, as ditto the hilarious collaboration between the Horsemen (Nichol, McCaffery, Dutton) and Owen Sound (Dean, SR Smith, Penhalf, Truhlar). The one disappointment on the collection is that the superb concluding track (McCaffery doing a part of _Carnival, Panel 2_) is in sub-bootleg-quality sound (bad enough to faze even fans of Eugene Chadbourne or Lennie Tristano...). The rest of the collection is in very good sound, so this comes as something of a shock! -- Anyway, the compilation as a whole is certainly recommended. -- In Canada the CD's distributed through Raincoast Books, 8680 Cambie Street, Vancouver, BC, Canada, V6P 6M9 (ph: [redacted]). Not sure if that goes for the UK & US too: perhaps try contacting the editor, Douglas Barbour, at <[redacted]>.

Nate & Jane Dorward
[redacted]
109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
ph: [redacted]

↑ Index

379. Mark Weiss
Help!
Wed 22 Sep 1999

Could someone backchannel me Kathy Lederer's phone #? Check with her, natch, if there's any hesitation.

↑ Index

380. Gary Shapiro
Jewish literary evening adds "Women of the Wall"
Thu 23 Sep 1999

in addition, meet film-maker Faye Lederman, who has made "WOMEN OF THE WALL" , a compelling film about the struggle for equality at the Western Wall in Jerusalem; clips from the film will be shown during the literary afternoon at the

1st Annual NEW JEWISH LITERATURE & WRITING event

Sunday, September 26,1999

LOCATION: 40 West 45 Street (near Fifth Avenue), 2nd floor New York, New York RSVP or for more information: [redacted] or [redacted] FREE EVENT

2:00pm THANE ROSENBAUM reads from SECOND HAND SMOKE (St. Martin's) a story taking place in the seamy underbelly of Miami Beach's Collins Avenue, where Mila Katz, Holocaust survivor and confidante to Miami's mobsters, lives by her wits. Thane Rosenbaum, the literary editor of Tikkun Magazine, has published ELIJAH VISIBLE, which Received the Edward Lewis Wallant Book Award. His essays and reviews have appeared in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, and elsewhere.

3:00pm ALAN KAUFMAN reads poems from WHO ARE WE? (Davka Press), a book of poetry about Jewish themes. Kaufman currently lives in San Francisco. His poetry has appeared in Tikkun Magazine, Identity Lessons: Learning American Style (Penguin Books), and Aloud: Voices From The Nuyorican Café (Henry Holt). He is also the author of a forthcoming book THE OUTLAW BIBLE OF AMERICAN POETRY (Thunder's Mouth) -which contains poets from Ginsberg and Kerouac to comedians such as Lenny Bruce and Richard Pryor, to song writers such as Bob Dylan, Jim Morrison, and Janis Joplin.and editor of a cool Jewish website. Kaufman is also the author of THE NEW GENERATION: FICTION BEFORE OUR TIME FROM AMERICA'S WRITING PROGRAMS.

4:00pm MELVIN JULES BUKIET reads from a new anthology NEUROTICA: JEWISH WRITERS ON SEX (WW Norton). The book contains pieces by Woody Allen, Saul Bellow, Nathan Englander, Erica Jong, Francine Prose, and Isaac Bashevis Singer, among others. Melvin Bukiet's other works include SIGNS

AND WONDERS, AFTER, WHILE THE MESSIAH TARRIES, STORIES OF AN IMAGINARY CHILDHOOD, and SANDMAN'S DUST. His work appeared in the OXFORD BOOK OF JEWISH STORIES, and is proprietor of KGB BAR downtown.

Free doorprizes of SUCCOT holiday fruit baskets! Come hear exciting new voices in Jewish literature! ALL are invited! Near the New York Is Book Country festival!

↑ Index

381. Ron Silliman

It was 20 years ago today...

Thu 23 Sep 1999

Ah, David, I have no idea what's become of Judith Barry -- the only mention I see at all on Hotbot to same is to a woman who married in 1719 and gave birth to the Earl of Farnham, thus unlikely to be the same person I performed with on 20 June '79. Which my own rotting braincells suggest was in 1978 anyway.

The Farm was a performance space just off of the Mission District in San Francisco. It lasted for about a decade. In '79, Jill Scott, an Australian painter/performance artist and I put together a series that combined one poet and one performance artist. This ran for about 6 weeks. Jill had been quite curious at how closely different poets (such as thee and me, David) seemed to influence one another, how everybody turned up for one's readings, while performance artists had little or nothing to say to one another (Tom Marioni's Museum of Conceptual Art, upstairs from the famed Jerry & Johnny's bar, had closed maybe the year before, to give way to what has subsequently become the Marriott Jukebox, the old third street seamen's hotels having made way for the Moscone Center, the Yerba Buena Arts Center, the SF MOMA etc). I read downstairs -- a straightforward reading (I recall Robert Duncan in the first row, cackling at some of the groaners that seem to besot my work) except that there were geese present, honking and honking like so many saxophones.

Ron

↑ Index

382. KENT JOHNSON

Kevin Magee's work

Thu 23 Sep 1999

AH Bramhall posts very thoughtful remarks about the series from Kevin Magee which appeared on the List a month or so ago. Nice to have a second to the bravo I threw out back then. But I know we two can't be the only ones who were/are deeply impressed. Do go back to see these pieces in the archives if you haven't. They're extraordinary-- politics and poesis interlocked and grappling and getting rough on each other and climaxing together. You can't help but watch. Kent

↑ Index

383. Poetics List Administration
Re: Anyone know about Detroit-area readings and bookstores?
Thu 23 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. - Tim

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Wednesday, September 22, 1999, 4:11 PM +0000
From: Joel Kuszai <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Anyone know about Detroit-area readings and bookstores?

Go to john king books, it is within walking distance of Tiger Stadium. On Lafayette, I believe, but right of the lodge fwy (10). A four story glory bookstore, it also has a branch in ferndale (home of suburbanites watten and harryman). If you get to kings books, give yourself time to go upstairs. I have found many rare gems there, including most recently a copy of PRISON ETIQETTE: A Compendium of Useful Information, written by the inmates, published in 1950 by Retort Press and edited by Holley Cantine and Dachine Rainer. I mention this because it is a rare book, often costing as much as 150 or 200 dollars. I found it at King's books for 20.

On Tiger Stadium,
I lament not being able to say goodbye to the only religious institution I have ever prayed in.

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

384. david bromige
Verbal Eyes at The Farm
Thu 23 Sep 1999

Well, Ron, the poster for the series is on my wall...yes, 197_9_ could be a printer's error, but the date of my own reading, Aug 30, proves it could not have been 197_8_, because into my own script I incorporated the theft of my car (a '65 Dodge called Mr Blue) which occurred shortly _after_ Aug 30/78. (A kind of "Welcome to SF" theft; we had moved into the city only a month before).

(Oddly, the week we moved back to Sonoma County, in Nov/79, SFPD notified me Mr Blue had turned up in Hunters Point, no longer driveable but still in its trunk were several slim vols of our colleagues, dampened but not obliterated.) (By then, I had been driving for more than a year Mr Normal, so-named because of the letters NML on its plate, but also because it was a 75 Chevy Nova.)

The roster of poets reading also establishes that I am not a Language Poet, since my name is the only one that does not end in 'n'. Harryman, Hejinian, Watten, Robinson and your good self(on _Sep_ 20, not June) out-alphabet me. My performance (I suppose I thought we were supposed to perform, rather than give a 'straightforward reading') consisted of a straightforward beginning increasingly interrupted by my own tape-recorded voice listing a string of urban plaints.(So, similar to your rdg, in that it was interrupted by honkings). All I recall of its reception is that Victoria Rathbu N (obviously an embryo LangPo person) was reduced to tears.

I wish there had been a booklet of reviews of these events put together, a la Langton St 'scribings,'and I would urge current curators to attempt this, for what others did escapes me now, and I was counting on yr prodigious memory. Lyn performed with her brother, I know. All events were well-attended; it was the forming (not _farming_, despite it was at 'The Farm', and notwithstanding Judith Barry's geese) community at perhaps its peak of mutual interest.

By way of P.S., the N-ending as requirement for echte LangPoets--a sort of shibboleth in type--has been commented on before in these 'pages'. The apparent anomaly of Bruce Andrews is obviously due to a forbear leaving off the 'son' suffix of BA's Scandinavian ancestors. Thus we learn that neither Jack Spicer, nor Kathleen Fraser, nor Bob Grenier, nor Clark Coolidge, nor Michael Palmer, nor Tom Mandel, nor Erica Hunt, nor David Bromige, could be anything but urLP; their fate was sealed by The Alphabet. Ted Berrigan, however, might be the second LangPoet, if George Oppen is the first. (Not Robt Duncan; his name should have stayed Robt Symmes). And hadn't you always suspected that Rae Armantrout's LangPo status derived from her friendships rather than her (stunning, lyrical, 'objectivist') poems?

David

↑ Index

385. Mark Weiss

San Francisco Book Festival

Thu 23 Sep 1999

Advance notice (I'll post again clloser to the event):

I'll be sitting behind the table at booth 42 at the San Francisco Book Festival, 10am to 6pm at Fort Mason on October 16th and 17th. Charles Alexander will be sitting next to me--Chax Press and Junction Press are sharing the booth. I look forward to meeting list members there. Joyce Jenkins has arranged readings--I'll post when I get a list.

Will any others out there be exhibiting?

↑ Index

386. Jay Sanders
2 queries
Thu 23 Sep 1999

Two unrelated queries: 1. As I was reading the material promoting the new 'Objectivist Nexus' book, it got me thinking whether any critical writing has been done drawing connections between Oppen and Heidegger. Maybe this is a really obvious point (Oppen opens one of his collections with a quote by Heidegger), but I'd be curious to read anything written on the matter.

2. I've become very interested in chance-generated and procedural poetry and have been reading lots of Cage and MacLow. Also, I recently got Joan Retallack's book 'Afterrimages.' I could use some suggestions regarding other poets which might be of interest, and any critical work centered on aleatorical methods-especially related to Retallack and other more contemporary writers. Cage tends to be really explicit about his methods, MacLow relatively so, but I haven't found much on other writers. Again, I hope this isn't redundant as I'm a new subscriber. THANK YOU.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

387. Michael Magee
COMBO 4 - it's solid gold!!!
Thu 23 Sep 1999

Okay, I couldn't wait till monday...

ANNOUNCING THE ARRIVAL OF...

```
 CCC    OO   MM   MM BBBB   OOO     4    4
C   C  O   O M M M M M B   B O   O    4    4
C      0   O M  M  M BBBB  O   O    44444444
C      O   O M  M  M B   B 0   O        4
```

C C O O M M B B O O 4
CCC OOO M M BBBB OOO 4

FEAUTURING NEW POEMS BY....

MYTILI JAGANNATHAN LORENZO THOMAS SERGEY GANDLEVSKY

MICHAEL MAGEE-&-NATE CHINEN RANDY PRUNTY

JACQUES DEBROT CARL MARTIN PAIGE MENTON

K. SILEM MOHAMMAD GIL OTT ROD SMITH

TOM RAWORTH KRISTEN GALLAGHER SHAWN WALKER

****

"HOLY SHIT IS THERE ALOT OF GOOD POEMS IN THIS ISSUE!!!!"

- Anonymous

For those of you still out of the loop which is COMBOmania:

this issue is a glossy, sexy 56 pgs.
single copies: $3.00
4-issue subscriptions: $10.00

SPECIAL OFFER (limited time): the first four issues of COMBO (newly reprinted) delivered together, plus a new 4-issue subscription: $20.00

For those of you who purchase COMBO just for the covers: this issue is a stunning black and gold, or gold and black, depending on how you pick it up.

....what are you waiting for?? ORDER NOW!!

email [redacted]
or send check made out to Michael Magee,
31 Perrin Ave., Pawtucket, RI 02861

[NOTE to CURRENT SUBSCRIBERS: copies go out on Monday - Thanks!!!]

↑ Index

388. Tom Beckett

Re: getting ready to have been frightened

Thu 23 Sep 1999

I'm with you, Alan. All these digested listafarian cyberpostcards emerge dry as feeling's fossils. It is time to retool. Time to take a shot at democracy again.

↑ Index

389. Alan Sondheim
ORDERS, BEDE, OTHERS
Thu 23 Sep 1999

o

ORDERS, BEDE, OTHERS

ALBUS HEUUALD come back from Old Saxony, because you're going to be martyred there! Don't forget to bring your brother NIGER as well!

BISI you'd better retire and turn your job in East Anglia over to Aecci! Right now!

CEDD write and tell us what your brother Ceadda think of Lastingham! Did he think you "did a good job"? Did you tell your mom?

What are you guys doing in LUGUBALIA?

FORDERHERI, how was Rome? I bet you had a good time - too bad you had to leave Sherborne!

Help! The DANAI are coming! I wonder what CYNIBERCT had to say about that?

UICTRED, do you know if CEDD told his mom? We haven't heard a word! Meanwhile, just what happened between you and Suaebheard when you were joint kings? Tell us!

UILFRID write and tell us why you were so bad? They didn't like you in York, I bet! Glad to see you were over at LINDISFARNE - did you see all the neat stuff there? Was it really all written on vellum? Did they have a lot of sheep? I bet they had a lot of sheep!

RING! RING! CEDD, your mom's on the phone!

```
 1  226 ms  ipt-ba5.proxy.aol.com [152.163.213.229]
 2  306 ms  tot4-r6-F6-1-0.proxy.aol.com [152.163.213.253]
 3  242 ms  tpopr-rri1-P3-3.tpopr-rri.aol.com [152.163.132.149]
 4  169 ms  tpopr-rre1-P9-0.tpopr-rr.aol.com [152.163.132.1]
 5  260 ms  uunet-gw1-P4-0.router.aol.com [152.163.132.186]
 6  233 ms  131.ATM3-0.XR2.DCA1.ALTER.NET [146.188.161.94]
 7  334 ms  194.ATM1-0.TR2.DCA1.ALTER.NET [146.188.161.146]
 8 1271 ms  101.ATM6-0.TR2.NYC1.ALTER.NET [146.188.136.218]
 9 1205 ms  198.ATM7-0.XR2.NYC4.ALTER.NET [146.188.179.37]
10 1132 ms  188.ATM8-0-0.GW2.NYC4.ALTER.NET [146.188.178.129]
11    *       []
12 1289 ms  panix6.panix.com [166.84.0.231]
```

Hi Mom! What a mess! I can hardly reach you from here! We're down in HROFESCESTIR at the moment! It's pretty terrific - you should see all the bridges!

PENDA, tell me! Where on earth is Mercia? I haven't a clue!

Do you know that Wight held out against CAEDWALLA, relying on Mercia, "fiducia Merciorum"? What a mess again! Caedwalla appears when you least expect him! Just when "per factionem principum a West Saxonia expulsus!" And who knows where West Saxony is! If it's old, and I bet it is, is it Old West Saxony? How do these people ever get home?

"The trace is not only the disappearance of origin -- within the discourse that we sustain and according to the path that we follow it means that the origin did not even disappear, that it was never constituted except recip- rocally by a nonorigin, the trace, which thus becomes the origin of the origin." (DERRIDA BISCOP)

CEDD, stop it! Don't you know "Britannia Oceani insula, eui quondom Albion nomen fuit, inter septentrionem et occidentem locata est, Germaniae, Gal- liae, Hispaniae, maximis Europae partibus, mutlo interuallo aduersa?"

SORRY, I WAS TALKING TO MY MOM!

↑ Index

390. Ron Silliman
Creeley in the WSJ
Thu 23 Sep 1999

Somebody mentioned this the other day. I reckon there aren't that many of us here that read the Wall Street Urinal. Maybe this is one result of the Bollingen, or his election to the Academy of American Poets, or perhaps a sign that the long over due Pulizer, National Book Award or (and why not) Nobel are not impossible. Nonetheless, praise from strange quarters.

Ron

LEISURE & ARTS: Words Worth a Thousand Pictures --- Juxtaposing Poetry and Painting, Robert Creeley's Collaborations
Give Art New Meaning Anne Midgette

Wall Street Journal, September 22, 1999 New York

Put words together with music, and it's often the music you hear first. Put words together with a picture, and people will often read them as a caption. "The poetry does get eaten up by the image," says artist Archie Rand.

Poet Robert Creeley wouldn't agree. In 1998, he collaborated with Mr. Rand on "Drawn and Quartered," a collection of 54 prints by Mr. Rand, each embellished with a quatrain by Mr. Creeley. And the show "In Company: Robert Creeley's Collaborations," now at the New York Public Library, displays this and 46 other collaborations Mr. Creeley has done with visual artists over the past 46 years. In books, portfolios and broadsheets created with the likes of Francesco Clemente and Jim Dine, R.B. Kitaj and Sol LeWitt, words and images maintain an uneasy tension: The pictures are not illustrations of the texts, the texts not captions to the pictures.

Juxtaposing poetry and painting "keeps shifting the emotional center," says Mr. Creeley, "particularly working with someone like Clemente, with such affective particularizing imagery. Any person reading what I've written and seeing what he's made is moving back and forth between two emotional fields."

The show, which originated at the Castellani Art Museum of Niagara University (N.Y.), is handsome testimony to Mr. Creeley's creative life. Now 73, Mr. Creeley, who once wanted to be a novelist but ultimately concentrated on the "domestic" realm of poetry, has followed an academic career, holding a professorship at SUNY Buffalo and teaching at other universities around the world, while garnering awards and grants from a Guggenheim through a tenure as New York State Poet (1989-91) to this year's prestigious Bollingen Prize. By age, he belongs to the periphery of the Beat generation; by allegiance, to Black Mountain College, where he taught and received his B.A. in the '50s after dropping out of Harvard a decade before, in the spring of his senior year.

At Black Mountain, the verbal and visual arts met as a matter of course. "There was a small job press in the print studio," recalls poet Jonathan Williams, who like Mr. Creeley attended Black Mountain and was enormously influenced there by the poet Charles Olson. "(Poet) Joel Oppenheimer was a student, and he knew something about printing; and (Robert) Rauschenberg made a drawing for a poem of Joel's. It was the first time anything of Rauschenberg's had ever been published." That broadside launched Mr. Williams's Jargon press, which has since produced more than 100 books of poetry, photography, drawings and whatever else takes the publisher's fancy. Mr. Creeley's 1953 collaboration with French artist Rene Laubies, "The Immoral Proposition," in which Mr. Laubies's Franz Kline-like gestural drawings threaten to ensnare the printed poems in their tangles, was Jargon's eighth publication, and is the first Creeley collaboration in this show.

Spare yet lush, tough yet yielding, Mr. Creeley's poetry is ideally suited for such collaboration, portraying states of being or facets of reality without, usually, creating images itself. In a catalog essay, poet John Yau points out that Mr. Creeley shares with the Abstract Expressionists a concern with his physical media -- with doing things that are only possible in words -- and with the process of making art, playing with the sense of time and narrative flow in subjective, elliptical juxtapositions of words and sentences. Mr. Creeley was attracted to the work of an Abstract Expressionist like Jackson Pollock because, as he explained to the show's curator, Elizabeth Licata, "It's a way of stating what one feels without describing it." Mr. Creeley aims for this kind of statement in his own poetry. Collaborating with visual artists is a way for him to expand the terms of his poetry beyond the horizons of the self.

The nature of collaboration varies. In some cases, such as "The Immoral Proposition," poems and images simply coexist side by side. In others, Mr. Creeley sent completed poems to the artist, or wrote poems based on existing images, such as "Life & Death" with Francesco Clemente in 1993. "It's not a question of understanding the paintings," he says, "but of picking up their vibes -- more like playing in a band."

Among the most successful collaborations in the show are the "Numbers," which Mr. Creeley did with pop artist Robert Indiana in 1968. Mr. Indiana made large, slick silkscreens of the numerals one through nine, and Mr. Creeley furnished poems dealing with aspects of each number. Because Mr. Indiana's posterlike style evokes printing-press production, there's a seamless fit between the artist's images and the printed word. In sober black type on a sheet of otherwise empty paper, each poem contrasts with the loud exclamation of the numeral opposite it, and preserves a kind of theoretical balance between letters and numbers into the bargain.

As the poet became better known, he was invited to do projects with artists he didn't actually know, coordinated by third-party dealers or publishers. While some of these projects are beautiful, the distance between the collaborators is reflected in a kind of coolness in "7&6," with Robert Therrien (1988), or "Visual Poetics," with Donald Sultan (1998). In these, Mr. Creeley's poetry is more literal. Where he avoids simply describing the artists' images in collaborations with Mr. Clemente or Marisol, he is specific about the associations evoked by Mr. Therrien's small, one-color geometric shapes, and his poems reflect the painter's finicky precision. He is similarly descriptive of Mr. Sultan's quasi-photographic outline images of fruit and flowers ("Looks like a pear? Is yellow?"), writing, as in many of his other poems, in stanzas that fall in and out of rhyme.

"There are artists whose work doesn't really let anyone else in," says Mr. Creeley, speaking particularly of John Chamberlain, an old friend from Black Mountain, who sent him the lithographs for "Famous Last Words" in 1988. "I don't know what the poems have to do with the images" in that collaboration, Mr. Creeley laughs. In other cases, there's a real dialogue between the two art forms. "Sometimes, when my work has a unique form," Mr. Clemente has said, "it calls for his (Mr. Creeley's) ability to read it." And Mr. Creeley describes Susan Rothenberg's reaction to a poem he wrote for a catalog of her upcoming retrospective in Boston (the two collaborated on "Parts" in 1993). "I was working from images the museum provided," he says. After Ms. Rothenberg read the poem, "the phone rings; and she said, `How did you know? I don't really know you that well; how did you know this?' I said, `I look at your paintings, friend.'"

Displaying these books and folios in a show, whether on the walls of a museum in Buffalo or pinned like butterflies in the library's display cases in New York, means seeing poetry, at least in part, as a kind of visual art. Placed next to a painting or print, the words are pinned into the realm of the seen, becoming something that must be looked at as well as read. Indeed, reading Mr. Creeley's poems as if they were paintings brings into sharp focus the counterpoint between horizontal and vertical, between the meaning of individual lines and of the sentences they form when taken together as a whole. But looking, in a museum context, is not a wholly satisfying way to take in poetry. Marvelously, the show's catalog comes with an excellent CD-ROM that reproduces several pages of each collaboration, word and image, which allows the viewer the option of reading the poems in intimacy, and creates the implied irony that new technology is able to give words, again, the upper hand.

"In Company: Robert Creeley's Collaborations" is now on view at the New York Public Library through Jan. 15, 2000, and subsequently travels to the Weatherspoon Art Gallery at the University of North Carolina in Greensboro (Feb. 13-April 22); the University of South Florida Contemporary Art Museum in Tampa (May 15-July 15); and Green Library at Stanford University (Aug. 20-Jan. 6, 2001)

↑ Index

391. pete spence

Re: The POETRY INTO FILM Competition

Thu 23 Sep 1999

> Announcing the first ever POETRY INTO FILM competition sponsored by Web Del Sol, a co-sponsor of the First Annual Literary Arts Film Awards to be held in New York city at the National Arts Club.

maybe i should send the twenty short films where i have animated many of our contemporary visual poets works, people like rea nikonova /carol stetser/and many others//pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

392. Dan Machlin
Mobile Poems
Fri 24 Sep 1999

THE MOBILE PROJECTIONS OF LINGERIE ADS SERIES

DAN MACHLIN
CAITLIN GRACE MCDONNELL
SAM TRUITT

will read on

Tuesday, September 28th
7pm
Near the North West entrance of Madison Square
26th Street & Fifth Avenue
Manhattan, N E W Y O R K C I T Y
Convenient to the 6/N/R Trains

For more information call Molly at [redacted]

↑ Index

393. Owen Hill
Moe's Events
Fri 24 Sep 1999

Hello List

Moe's Books (my employer) is hosting two events next month:

A book party for Now It's Jazz: Writings on Kerouac & The Sounds by Clark Coolidge (Living Batch Press). Sunday, October 10th.

A doubleheader book party for two books from Skanky Possum Press: Dark, by Hoa Nguyen and Lucky Pup, by Leslie Davis. Sunday, October 17th.

Both events are from 3-5pm. Moe's Books, 2476 Telegraph Ave. Berkeley [redacted].

Note: Clark lost his address book, so his mailing list is rather small. I'm sure that there are interested people that won't be getting invitations. Please pass the word!

Thanks Owen

↑ Index

394. Poetry Project
writing workshops at the Poetry Project
Fri 24 Sep 1999

The Fall Writing Workshops at the Poetry Project are:

Experimental Writing guided by Larry Fagin (Tuesday evenings, 7-9 pm; 10 sessions begin October 19)

Language on vacation. Writing and reading sans souci et sans pantalons, fiendishly winching every last model & maquette out of the muck-expressionistic, cubistic, futuristic, suprematistic, dadaistic, gertrudistic, surrealistic, swingmatistic, lettristic, beatistic, projectivistic, situationistic, newyorkscholastic, spiceristic, oulipistic, coolidgistic, bernadettistic, languagistic, etceteristic.

Larry Fagin edited Adventures in Poetry and is the author of Dig & Delve (Granary Books, forthcoming).

Poetry Workshop taught by Frank Lima (Friday evenings, 7-9 pm; 10 sessions begin October 22)

In this workshop, participants will be introduced to the Neruda and O¹Hara ode, the sestina of John Ashbery, and do assignments, such as writing a bad poem and failing at the attempt, read poets such as Anne Sexton, Henri Michaux, Francis Ponge, Kenneth Koch, James Schuyler, Amiri Baraka, Joe Ceravolo, David Schubert, Cesar Vallejo, Rene Char, and the African poet Leopold Senghor, to name a few.

Frank Lima is a poet and teacher of the culinary arts at the New York Restaurant School. His books of poetry include Inventory: New and Selected Poems and I Do Believe I Do Believe I Do Believe (forthcoming from Hard Press).

Poetry Workshop taught by Patricia Spears Jones (Saturday afternoons, 12-2 pm; 10 sessions begin October 16)

In this workshop, participants will work on poems that reflect their personalities and pursuits with an emphasis on craft and revision. Poems by a broad range of poets will be used to generate discussion and serve as models including works from Lynda Hull, Bob Kaufman, Alice Notley, Cornelius Eady, James Schuyler, Frank O¹Hara, Sapphire, William Carlos Williams, Maureen Owen, Jaime Manrique, and David Trinidad. Participants are asked to submit 7-10 poems by September 30 to the Poetry Project office for review.

Patricia Spears Jones is a poet, playwright, and author of The Weather That Kills (Coffee House Press) and Mother, a play produced by Mabou Mines.

The workshop fee is $250, which includes tuition for workshops and an individual membership in The Poetry Project for one year. Work scholarships are also available. Payment must be received in advance either by mail or in person at the Poetry Project, St. Mark¹s Church, 131 E. 10th Street, New York, NY 10003. Please make checks out to the Poetry Project. For more information, call [redacted] or e-mail [redacted].

↑ Index

395. R Democracy
Great Reading at Bluestockings!
Fri 24 Sep 1999

(Please circulate to other lists)

ANNOUNCING 2 GENIUSES:

Julie Patton and Betsy Andrews

reading at BELLADONNA*

(°deadly nightshade, a cardiac and respiratory stimulant, having purplish-red flowers and black berries)

new poetry ETC. reading series at Bluestockings

(women's bookstore, 172 allen st, lower e. side
F train to 2nd ave.--- more info: [redacted])

Thursday, October 7

9:00 pm

tantalizing facts: Julie Patton is a world-wide poet and performer who has performed in venues as diverse as the Festival de Poesie Sonores in Geneva and The Kitchen and Knitting Factory here in New York. She has toured Europe as a librettist/vocalist with composer/instru-mentalist Don Byron, and performed with him at the Texaco Jazz Festival and the JVC Jazz Festival in New York City. Julie's work has been anthologized in Beyond Borders: Three Decades of Innovative Work by Women, Talisman Press (1997), Jazztoldtales:Jazz & Fiction, Letteratura E Jazz, (Bacchilega Editore, Italy, 1997). Her third collection of poetry Typographical Topographies (Tender Buttons) will be out this Spring.

Betsy Andrews is the recipient of a 1999 New York Foundation for the Arts fellowship in non-fiction and a 1999 "Loving Lesbians Award in Poetry" from the Astraea Foundation. Her work can be found in numerous journals and magazines including most recently in Skanky Possum, Two Girls Review, Fence, Lungfull! and in Arabic and English in the Yemeni newspaper, Culture.

↑ Index

396. Carol L. Hamshaw
Roy Kiyooka Conference
Fri 24 Sep 1999

Roy Kiyooka Conference
October 1 - 2, 1999
Location:
Theatre (Room 328), South Building, Emily Carr Institute of Art and Design, 1399 Johnston Street,
Granville Island, Vancouver, B.C. V6H 3R9

Roy Kiyooka (1926-1994) was a “multi-disciplinary” artist who at various periods of his life was a painter, sculptor, teacher, poet, musician, film-maker, and photographer (or combination of any of the above). When Kiyooka arrived in Vancouver in 1959 he was already one of Canada’s most respected abstract painters. His modernist stance at the time inspired a generation of Vancouver painters to reach beyond regionalism. In the sixties and seventies Kiyooka began to write and publish poetry and produce photographic works. The best known of these, StoneDGloves (1969-1970), is both a poetic and photographic project. As Kiyooka eventually rejected the modernist (Greenbergian) aesthetic that informed his paintings he increasingly took up performance, photography, film, and music. He saw the position of the artist in opposition to the institutions of art. The shape of Kiyooka’s work is only now being revealed, especially his photographic work. The conference is planned to take the measure of that shape.

Location:
Theatre (Room 328), South Building, Emily Carr

Institute of Art and Design, 1399 Johnston Street,
Granville Island, Vancouver, B.C. V6H 3R9

Tickets:
$15 Adults; $8 Srs, Students with valid ID. Can be purchased by cash or cheque in advance at the Belkin Art Gallery, the Charles H. Scott Gallery or at the door.

Exhibition:
October 1-3, 1999 Concourse Gallery, Emily Carr Institute of Art and Design - selected works by and of Roy Kiyooka.

For info. contact:
Naomi Sawada, Conference Coordinator, Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery, 1825 Main Mall, Vancouver, B.C. V6T-1Z2, tel: [redacted], fax: [redacted], [redacted]

Multi-Media Evening
Fri. Oct. 1, 1999 7:30 - 10 pm
Room 308 (Theatre) Emily Carr Institute of Art & Design

This is an evening of poetry, video, film and music in celebration of Kiyooka's work. Presenters from Canada's premier literary and visual arts worlds include:

1. David Bolduc Toronto
2. George Bowering Vancouver
3. Joy Kogawa Toronto
4. Maria Hindmarch Vancouver
5. Carole Itter Vancouver
6. Daphne Marlatt Victoria
7. Roy Miki Vancouver
8. Michael Ondaatje Toronto
9. Renee Rodin Vancouver
10. Sarah Sheard Toronto
11. Gerry Shikatani Toronto
12. Sharon Thesen Vancouver

Video
Fumiko Kiyooka Vancouver, Work In Progress
Robert Filliou and Roy Kiyooka, Video Breakfasting

Together, if you wish…, 1979
Michael de Courcy, Voice/Roy Kiyooka, 1999. (5 min.)

Dance
Robin Poitras Regina
Fumiko Kiyooka Vancouver

Music
Temba Tana N Vancouver
Takeo Yamashiro Vancouver
Jim Monroe Richmond

Panel Discussions
Sat. Oct. 2, 1999 10am - 5:15 pm
Room 308 (Theatre) Emily Carr Institute of Art & Design

In acknowledgement of Kiyooka's visual arts and literary works, academics, writers, and artists will participate in panel discussions on the following issues:

10am - 12pm Panel 1: The Politics of Cultural Identity

Moderator: John O’Brian

Bio: John O'Brian teaches modern art history, theory and criticism —with a Canadian bias— at the University of British Columbia. He has published 11 books, most recently Ruthless Hedonism: The American Reception of Matisse (University of Chicago Press, 1999). He wrote first about the work of Roy Kiyooka in the catalogue for The Flat Side of the Landscape, an exhibition he curated for the Mendel Art Gallery in 1989. In 1993 he organized Roy Kiyooka: The Hoarfrost Paintings for the UBC Fine Arts Gallery, and in 1998 he wrote "Politics and Other Mendacities" for Front Magazine.

Panelist: Roy Miki,

Title: Unravelling Roy Kiyooka: A Re-assessment Amidst Shifting Boundaries

Abstract: This paper will address the constituting role of critical frameworks for situating the work of Roy Kiyooka. Speculative in its projections-and necessarily so in the current unravelling of identity formations dependent on the Canadian "nation" as a boundary-it will explore the potential for a shift in the cultural value of Kiyooka's poetics from a marginal to an emergent perspective that opens what he calls "pacific windows."

Bio: Roy Miki is a writer, poet, teacher, and editor, whose publications include Justice in Our Time:
The Japanese Canadian Redress Settlement (Co-authored with Cassandra Kobayashi) and Random Access File (Red Deer College Press). He edited Pacific Windows: Collected Poems of Roy K. Kiyooka (Talonbooks), which received the 1997 poetry award from the Association for Asian American Studies, and is currently writing a book on his participation in the Japanese Canadian redress movement of the 1980s. A collection of essays, Broken Entries: Race Subjectivity Writing, has recently been published by Mercury Press.

Panelists: Susanna Egan and Gabriele Helms

Title: The Many Tongues of "Mothertalk": Cross-cultural Collaboration and the Japanese Canadian Experience

Abstract: We propose to talk about the nature and effects of collaboration in Roy Kiyooka's Mothertalk. In particular, we will examine the investment of Roy Kiyooka in his mother's story, his involvement of Matsuki Masutani, the necessary intervention of family on Roy's death, and their invitation to Daphne Marlatt to complete the work. Her introduction and NeWest's production strategies determine reception of this text to a significant degree, both declaring the multiple collaborations and tidying up the complex procedure.

Bio: Susanna Egan teaches in the English Department at the University of British Columbia. Her work in autobiography studies includes Patterns of Experience in Autobiography (1984), Mirror Talk: Genres of Crisis in Contemporary Autobiography (1999), and numerous articles.

Bio: Gabriele Helms is a post doctorol fellow in the English Department at the University of British Columbia. In her current research she explores the connections between generic instability of contemporary Canadian life-writing and reconceptualizations of experience. She has published on auto/biography and contemporary Canadian literature. Her latest collaborative papers have appeared in Painting the Maple: Race, Gender, and the Construction of Canada.

Panelist: Henry Tsang

Title: Art Calling Fool Scold: Learning to See and Roy Kiyooka

Abstract: "Art is more like a quest than it is a vocation." My presentation will focus on Roy Kiyooka as teacher, mentor, soothsayer. Excerpts from "Hieronymus Bosch's Heretical April Fool Diverti-mementos & Other Protestations" will be examined as well as photographic works that reflect his relationship with art, the art game, being an artist, being Japanese, and cultural identification.

Bio: Henry Tsang is a visual artist and independent curator based in Vancouver. His artwork has been exhibited across Canada and abroad, and is concerned with cultural identity and intercultural communication, exploring the interaction between different cultures resulting from contact, influence, negotiation, and contestation. Tsang's curatorial projects include Self Not Whole: Cultural Identity and Chinese-Canadian Artists in Vancouver, at the Chinese Cultural Centre in Vancouver in 1991; Racy Sexy, an intercultural multidisciplinary project presenting 33 artists in 9 community and cultural centres around Greater Vancouver in 1993; and City at the End of Time: Hong Kong 1997, a series of art exhibitions, poetry readings and public lectures, in 1997.

12-1:30 pm Lunch

1:30-4:15 pm Panel 2: Photography and Poetics

Moderator: Smaro Kamboureli, University of Victoria

Bio: Smaro Kamboureli teaches Canadian literature at the University of Victoria. Her recent publications include her anthology, Making a Difference: Canadian Multicultural Literature and her critical study, Scandalous Bodies: Diasporic Literature in English Canada. She is also the editor of the NeWest Press "Writer as Critic" series.

Panelist: Lora Senechal Carney

Title: Through gold windows of the sun: Kiyooka and Japanese artist-photographers

Abstract: In his 1994 Nobel Prize lecture, Kenzaburo Oe said that contemporary Japan is split between "two opposite poles of ambiguity." That split is "imprinted like a deep scar" on him and his writing. In fact, much recent art from Japan is imprinted with this divide between its supermodern/Western aspect and its traditional Asian culture. The poles in Roy Kiyooka's work may be differently placed and may have shifted during his lifetime, but because of them he has some things in common with recent Japanese artist-photographers, especially those of his generation. This is a brief investigation of those things.

Bio: Lora Senechal Carney is an art historian who teaches in the Visual and Performing Arts at the University of Toronto at Scarborough. She writes about modern and contemporary Canadian and U.S. artists.

Panelist: Martha Hanna

Title: Four Photographic Works: the eye in the landscape, Van Gogh and the Bird of Paradise, 13 Cameras/Vancouver, and Pacific Windows

Abstract: The four works made between 1970 and 1990 will be considered for what they reveal about Roy Kiyooka's use of photography, his collaborative impulse, and his personal vision.

Bio: Martha Hanna is the author of many exhibitions and publications on contemporary Canadian photography, among them: Words and Images (1980); Evergon (1971-1987); Banff Souvenir (1992); Suzy Lake: Point of Reference (1993); and Eldon Garnet: The Fallen Body (1998). She has been Director of the Canadian Museum of Contemporary Photography, an affiliate of the National Gallery of Canada, since 1994.

Panelist: Sheryl Conkelton

Title: "… The sad and glad tidings of the floating world…"

Abstract: Roy Kiyooka's abrupt turning away from painting toward poetry and photography was marked, to use John O'Brian's works, by "the urgency of testimony and witnessing." Kiyooka's works resonate as narrative pieces of ordinary life but retain a modernist's sense of rupture and construction as well as a sense of revisionist mission. This brief consideration of the serial photographic essays will focus on Kiyooka's construction of these biographical and diaristic works and his conception and use of different types of artistic order.

Bio: Sheryl Conkelton is the Senior Curator at the Henry Art Gallery, University of Washington, Seattle, and has been as associate curator at the Museum of Modern Art, New York and the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. Among her publications are monographs on Annette Messager, Catherine Wagner, Aaron Siskind and Frederick Sommer, as well as an upcoming volume on Uta Barth.

Panelist: Scott Toguri McFarlane

Title: Un-ravelling the Secret Glove of the Archive

Abstract: Kiyooka’s StoneDGloves is comprised of poetry and photographs of gloves cast away by workmen who were building the Canadian Pavilion at Expo ’70 in Osaka. I discuss the work’s “un-ravelling” of these archival projects: Expo, whose pavilions represent the archaic belonging necessary to nationalism but dubious for a Japanese Canadian representing Canada in Japan; Kiyooka’s personal history, a genealogical project very familiar with the labour buried within the discourse of both the Japanese and Canadian nation; and that strange photographic collection of gloves whose hollow forms point to a labour not there. Amidst the dirt and detritus of Expo’s foundation, StoneDGloves tumble and cup a stage of the world and the words of the poems.

Bio: Scott Toguri McFarlane is a writer and editor living in Montreal. He is the co-founder of the Pomelo Project, a production house for the arts which organized City at the End of Time: Hong Kong 1997, a series of art exhibitions, poetry readings, public talks and publications engaging with Hong Kong culture. He was one of the organizers for “Writing thru ‘Race,’” a national conference for First Nations writers and writers of colour. He is completing his PhD in the English Department at Simon Fraser University.

Video Premiere: Michael de Courcy

Title: Voice / Roy Kiyooka, 1999. (40 min.)

Bio: Michael de Courcy is a photographer and artist. He has exhibited throughout Canada and the U.S. and has been active in the Vancouver art scenesince "Intermedia".

4:15 - 5:15pm Round Table

Moderator: Roy Miki (bio above)

Participant: John O'Brian (bio above)

Participant: Sharla Sava

Bio: Sharla Sava is a writer and curator whose work deals with the history of performance and media art in Canada and abroad. She is currently preparing for an exhibition of Ray Johnson's work for the Belkin Gallery. In 1996 she curated an exhibition of the videotapes of the French Fluxus artist Robert Filliou. Sava is a doctoral candidate in the School of Communications at Simon Fraser University.

Participant: Scott Watson

Bio: Scott Watson is a writer, curator and teacher of Canadian and international contemporary art.
He has published extensively including a book about the late Jack Shadbolt (Douglas & McIntyre, 1990) and most recently, a monograph on Stan Douglas (Phaidon Books, 1998). He is the Director/Curator at the Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery and an Associate Professor in the Fine Arts Department at the University of British Columbia.

Acknowledgements:
The conference is organized by the Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery, the Vancouver Art Forum Society and the Charles H. Scott Gallery. The project is made possible by the support from the Canada Council for the Arts; the Canadian Studies Program at the University of British Columbia;
Emily Carr Institute of Art and Design; the Joan Carlisle-Irving Lectures Fund, Dept. of Fine Arts, University of British Columbia; Claudia Beck and Andrew Gruft; Joe Friday, Dale R. Percy; Osler, Hoskin & Harcourt, a national law firm with offices in Calgary, Ottawa, Toronto; Aragon Development; Project A and the Western Front.

Conference Committee:
Catriona Jeffries, Catriona Jeffries Gallery
Daphne Marlatt, Victoria, BC
John O’Brian, Vancouver Art Forum Society
Michael Ondaatje, Toronto, Ont.
Cate Rimmer, Charles H. Scott Gallery
Naomi Sawada, Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery
Christine Wallace, Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery
Scott Watson, Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery
Mary Williams, Morris and Helen Belkin Art Gallery

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

397. Tosh
Rain Taxi's review for Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov
Fri 24 Sep 1999

Friday, September 24, 1999

Evguénie Sokolov by Serge Gainsbourg
ISBN: 0-9662346-1-8 $17

Literally artsy-fartsy, Evguénie Sokolov is a satirical, allegorical, rise-and-fall story about a dyspeptic, marginal young man who becomes a famous painter via his lusty flatulence. This pseudo-autobiography is at once an ode to anality and a sly rendering of happenstance in the creative process. It's also a play on Serge Gainsbourg's life history: in the '60's and '70's, he deliberately flouted Europe's conventions and - despite or because of his overindulgent rebel pose - farted his way to the top of the charts as one of France's most controversial and admired pop stars. As the introduction conveys, he performed his own songs in a raspy, strung-out voice and in duets with the likes of Brigitte Bardot. In the most infamous of these, the 1967 "je t'aime - moi non plus (I Love You - Me Neither)," he croons "je vais et je viens entre tes reins" ("I go and I come between your kidneys").

Gainsbourg's mock/real lyricism resonates throughout the novel. In passages reminiscent of Proust's Madeleine riffs, Sokolov rhapsodizes on his inspired, foul emanations: "I would escape on my own to Nordic sand dunes and (stand) there, shivering in the twilight gusts ... the wind would carry off my exhalations and disperse the diabolical... wisps in fascinating, enchanted swirls." For Sokolov, the fart serves as both revenge and display, the source of the narrator;s humiliation as well as his brilliance. "I would get my own back at the swimming bath by going close to [my teachers] and releasing iridescent bubbles, which rose gurgling to the surface and burst into the clean air as subversive farts."

This tale is clever and moving. The narrator contradicts himself without apology, at times veering from first into third-person point of view, referring to himself by name as though he were in the position of his buyers of critics. Gainsbourg's snipes at art world notoriety produce a Seinfeldian, box-within-a-box counter-reality. His novel is intellectually provocative, but also deeply and sensually - aromatically - felt.

Perry Friedman, Rain Taxi (Fall 1999)

Serge Gainsbourg's 'Evguénie Sokolov' (TamTam Books) is available through Small Press Distributions, AK, Ingram Book Company, bookstores, and various online bookstores.

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

398. Alan Sondheim
What is to Be Done?
Fri 24 Sep 1999

-

What is to Be Done?

Report: I'm alive and well in Traveller's Linux; I have left Vienna. Report: I'm in on Vienna Traveller's Linux. I am told I am paranoid. Communique: My name is Vladimir Lenin. I am in Edit, Austria. Communique: Hello out there. I am cut off. Communique: The best Jews, those who are celebrated in world history, and have given the world foremost leaders of democracy and socialism, have never clamoured against assimilation. Report: I'm alive and well; there are no Jews in Traveller's Linux. Report: The conclusion which follows from this is absolute int- contro- vertible: it has been proved that, far from causing harm to the revo- lutionary proletariat, participation in a bourgeois-democratic parli- ament, even a few weeks before the victory of a Soviet republic and even _after_ such a victory, actually helps that proletariat to _prove_ to the backward masses why such parliaments deserve to be Communique: I am not paranoid; I have been told I am not paranoid. Communique: I am at Row: 00017 and Column: 00048. Report: This is coming to you from Traveller's Linux. Communique to A. V. Lunacharsky: Aren't you ashsmed to vote for pub- lication of Mayakovasky's _150 Millions_ in five thousand copies? Rubbish, stupidity, double-dyed stupidity and pretentiousness. In my opinion we should print only one out of ten such things, and _not more than fifteen hundred copies,_ for libraries and odd people. And flog Lunarcharsky for futurism. Report: Hello? Radio Traveller's Linux here. I AM NOT PARANOID! Communique: What column is this? Column 00045. Communique: I am seventy-eight years old. Communique: Youth's altered attitude to questions of sex is of course 'fundamental' and based on theory. Many people

call it revo- lutionary' and 'communist.' They sincerely believe that this is so. I am an old man and I do not like it. I may be a morose ascetic, but quite often this so-called 'new sex life' of young people -- and fre- quently of the adults too -- seems to me purely bourgeois and simply an extension of the good old bour- geois brothel. All this has nothing in common with free love as we Communists understand it. Report: I am certainly not in favor of this or that! Report: I do not smoke a bourgeois so-called cigarette! Communique: The whole of society will have become a single office and a single factory, with equality of labor and pay. Communique: The second condition is agreement between the proletari- at, which is exercising its dictatorship, that is, holds state power, and the majority of the peasant population. Report: I do not agree with those of the dictatorship who accuse me of paranoia, although I have been committed of paranoia by the so- called 'state authorities.' I do not smoke a cigarette, a victim of the bour- geois mind! Communique: I am in Traveller's Linux! I am in the root directory! No one else is here beside me! No one else is toppling this machine constructed of the finest materials! I am using this machine! This will have been Column 15! This will have been Row 50! I am in Aus- tria, but I am not in Vienna! I have never been in Vienna! This is a hope of bourgeois freedom! Report: The govern- ment of the proletarian dictatorship -- jointly with the Communist Party and the trade unions of course -- makes ev- ery effort to overcome the backward views of men and women and thus uproot the old, non-commmunist psychology. It goes without saying that men and women are absolutely equal before the law. Communique: My name is Vladimir Lenin. You had the rudness to call my wife on the telephone and berate her. Report: It sounds just as though he were chewing rags in his sleep! Report: One cannot hide the fact that dictatorship presupposes and implies a "condition," one so disagreeable to renegades, of _revolu- tionary violence_ of one class against another. Report: We must see to it that every factory and every electric pow- er station becomes a centre of en- lightenment; if Russia is covered with a dense network of electric power sta- tions and powerful techni- cal installations, our communist economic develop- ment will become a model for a future socialist Europe and Asia. Communique: I am on previous Row 69 of this Report and Communique. Communique: I am not paranoid -- only to approach the government of the revolutionary proletar- ian dictatorship, is it not within the purview of any sane man to wonder at the absence of individuals within this dense network, given the absence, in other words, of any other within Traveller's Linux? This is the Communique of Vladimir Lenin, having been declared paranoid by the state. Toe. Report: This ends the Communique of Vladimir Lenin, having been de- clared paranoid by the state. Toe. Communique: I have been declared paranoid by the state. I am not de- clared paranoid by the state. Toe.

[written by Vladimir Lenin in Traveller's Linux, a one-floppy version of the Linux operating system, taken verbatim from the records.]

↑ Index

399. derek beaulieu

new from housepress: Lawrence Upton's "Sta!"

Fri 24 Sep 1999

---

housepress is pleased to announce it latest chapbook of visual poetry; Lawrence Upton's "Sta!"

"For many years, Lawrence Upton has been consistently inventive and quite staggeringly prolific. Particularly, perhaps, he has never got trapped in ideological zeal, that is, in frumpish notions of what can and can't be done in cutting edge poetry" - Gilbert Adair.

printed and handbound (stab stitch style with card covers) in an edition of 40 copies - the entire run of "Sta!" has sold out - there remain a very few archive copies that are currently available for $5 ea. (including shipping and handling) contact derek beaulieu @ housepress for more information & ordering information.

housepress

[redacted]

↑ Index

400. R Democracy

Re: If it's safe, it doesn't matter how much we spray

Sat 25 Sep 1999

[redacted] wrote:

For the surviving mosquitos
9/24/99

Like in the movies
Or an underworld
She rides her red Mercedes
Into the restaurant and I
Squat in front of the Mayor.

Who could blame me?
He snuck up from behind. Had Seemed okay with nudity so Long as my parents were involved

In the profanity.

I was just checking
The progress of My period. He shook a boney finger, much like the witch.

Yes, he's in the house
My eyes burn, straining
At the crowd, the park, Kitchen, bed--watching out for his thin nose, long chin.

↑ Index

401. Carol L. Hamshaw
[Fwd: The Capilano Review Contest]
Sat 25 Sep 1999

Carol Hamshaw wrote:

> from The Capilano Review > (feel free to pass along)
>
> COVER VERSIONS
> TCR's Covers Contest
>
> Do a cover of a cover: Write 1 piece of prose or a selection of poems (up to 8 pages) in response to a cover image of your choosing from The Capilano Review's 27 year history. To view covers, visit your local library or see a selection on our website at www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR, after October 1, 1999.
>
> 2 Categories: Prose and Poetry
> First prize $1,000 and publication in TCR
> (1 prize for each category)
> 2 Runners-up will receive a critique of their work from film-maker, poet and writer, Colin Browne (each category)
>
> Entry fee: $25, includes a one year subscription to TCR, for first entry.
> $5 for additional entries.
>
> DEADLINE: MARCH 31, 2000
>
> Send submissions with SASE with appropriate postage for return of work, and a cover letter stating the Issue # of your cover to:

> The Capilano Review
> 2055 Purcell Way
> North Vancouver, BC V7J 3H5
>
> Send a #10 SASE for complete rules and guidelines, plus a list of libraries and bookstores where TCR is available, to the above address.
>
> The Capilano Review reserves the right to not award an entry or to not publish a winning entry.
>
> For more information, please call [redacted] or email [redacted]
>
> Carol L. Hamshaw
> Managing Editor
> The Capilano Review
> [redacted]
>
> http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR
>
> For submission guidelines, please see
>
> http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR/submit.html

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

402. Alan Sondheim
deaths in storms
Sat 25 Sep 1999

'''

deaths in storms

i am afraid of death; it haunts me, has haunted me for years; i'm not af- raid of taking my own life, not at all--but of death this great fear, this fear so great i cannot write coherently about it, cannot add polish to the style; it takes me over in the form of nightmares; i have only two decades left to live, watching my mind deteriorate; i am hysterically fearful of being left behind; i want to see more of the world--it's not the pain but the absence, knowing the last gesture; this isn't an emotion but a synd- rome as death watches me; i've been miserably unhappy all my life as a re- sult; i'm a coward, i can't think straight; i'm vio- lently afraid of viol- ence, of the pain of violence; i don't know a moment's peace; it's a struggle to breathe in the morning; i get repeated headaches; i feel unut- terable loss constantly; my life is filled with regrets as far back as i can remember; i'm suspicious of momentary happiness; i see nothing but the gate- way to annihilation; my writing is underpinned by decay and disappear- ance; i rage against acquiescence; i have no belief in reincarnation or afterlife; absence characterizes existence, stains it; i try through sexu- al abjection to forget my- self, bury myself first; i have no stake in my death--no one does; it is a great vacuum tearing me apart; it grabs my mind, my brain, creates fevers; it controls my words as i write them, as if there were bones clawing and severing the fin- gers of my hands; dreams carry on where daylight leaves off; daylight recon- firms the worst of the horrors; this is my ordinary existence; there is no answer to anything but the simplest of questions--daily, i face my own failure in this re- gard-- knowing that i am an imposter, waiting to be found out; i see others more or less calm, there's no calm for me; my dreams have severed limbs, storms and tornados, buildings toppled, buses veering off wet cliffs down to the shore rocks below--drowning, i try to claw my way out, the water's too great, i can't breathe, the inconsolable wetness of lungs, everything com- ing to an end, we're upside-down; i'm a coward, i've always been a coward; i'm afraid of the tiniest thing, storms get to me; i pretend to be brave, that's all, it's easy in safe situations; the storm--not the storm really, the careening bus, it's the bus that brings it to the surface as it crash- es down, coming to pieces on the rocks, end- ing in deep water, above the roof, it's all turned awry, you can't tell left from right, up from down, i'm drowning again, it's all this repetition; i'm feverish, can hardly see the world, whatever's churning

---

↑ Index

403. Jerrold Shiroma

New @ Duration Online

Sun 26 Sep 1999

Duration Press is pleased to announce new additions to our online out of print book archive.

to speak while dreaming, by Eléni Sikélianòs Poetics of the Exclamation Point, by Eléni Sikélianòs
The Fifth Season, by Pierre Joris
Wells, by Rachel Blau DuPlessis

Future books to appear will be:

It's Alive She Says, by Cole Swensen
New Math, by Cole Swensen
Mace Hill Remap, by Norma Cole

Also online is a (very) tentative table of contents for a section of our new Ethnopoetics Archive focusing on documents selected from the 10 year run of _Alcheringa_, eds. Jerome Rothenberg & Dennis Tedlock.

http://www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

404. MAXINE CHERNOFF

Not poetry

Sun 26 Sep 1999

An announcement:

Book events for my new novel, A BOY IN WINTER, will take place at the following venues:

Wed, Sept 29, 7:30 pm Book Passage, Corte Madera CA
Tuesday, October 5, 7:30 pm Black Oak Books, Berkeley CA
Wednesday, October 6, 7pm, Booksmith, SF CA

Maxine Chernoff

↑ Index

405. Katherine Lederer

Black tie

Mon 27 Sep 1999

In town or in the mood....

It's an E X P L O S I V E M A G A Z I N E benefit event!

Starring:

K E N N E T H K O C H

E L E N I S I K E L I A N O S

M I C H A E L C O F F E Y

& T I M G R I F F I N

W E D N E S D A Y,
S E P T E M B E R 2 9 , 8:00 PM
311 Church Street, #4
New York, NY
(1.5 blocks So. of Canal)
1/9, A/C/E, 4/5/6
Call [redacted] with queries
Donations admired

↑ Index

406. Poetics List
About A.BACUS / Ganick
Mon 27 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Peter Ganick" <[redacted]>
Date: 9/20/99 6:25 AM -0400

For a while, the future of A.BACUS, the newsletter publication of Potes & Poets Press with 124 issues under its belt, was in doubt. The current editor, Peter Ganick, was lucky enough, how- ever to find Dan Featherston to be the editor starting with issues in year 2001. The newsletter was started in 1984.

Dan is looking at manuscripts for inclusion. Manuscripts with sufficient return postage should be sent to:
Dan Featherston, A.BACUS, P O Box 40664, Tuscon AZ 85717.

A.BACUS2000 is already planned and will feature, among others, Joan Retallack, Charles Alexander, Michael Basinski, Rachel Blau DuPlessis, Stacy Doris, and Christina Monti. Individual issues can be pre-ordered from Potes & Poets Press, 181 Edgemont Avenue, Elmwood CT 06110-1005 for $5 each postpaid, or $30 for the full year of 8 issues, sent first class in an envelope.

↑ Index

407. Poetics List
call for work, subscribers! / Ganick
Mon 27 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From:"Peter Ganick" <[redacted]>
Date: 9/22/99 5:52 AM -0400

POTEPOETZINE, an electronic magazine, is looking for submissions of poetry for its next few issues. Poems should be of an experimental or neo-L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E nature. Send three or four screens of poetry in text or attached form.

POTEPOETTEXT, also an electronic magazine, but one which features significant collections of poems by one poet or essays on current philosophical, poetic, or cyber issues, is also seeking submissions.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to both ezines can be had free of charge by sending your name and email address to:
<[redacted]> . No formal procedure is necessary, just a note to the editor is enough. You can unsubscribe at any time at the same address.

Previous issues of the ezines are archived at:
<http://www.burningpress.org/va/vaintro.html> where there are also a number of other excellent ezines archived. Recent issues of the ezines are added whenever an issue is sent.

POTEPOETZINE and POTEPOETTEXT are publications of Potes & Poets Press, Peter Ganick, editor. Potes & Poets Press has been publishing avant-garde poetry since 1981 and publishes perfectbound books, A.BACUS - a newsletter-format serial, the ezines, and will soon be accepting again submissions for its younger writers new chapbook series. Send for individual email messages describing current offerings and how to order them, and submission guidelines to the chapbook series. The Press' email address is: <[redacted]> and all correspondence should be sent to that address regarding concerns raised by this message.

Thank you for your time.

↑ Index

408. Poetics List

Vispo Audio: Stephen Reid and Jack-Rabbit Parole / Andrews

Mon 27 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Jim Andrews" <[redacted]>
Date: 9/22/99 9:40 AM -0700

Vispo Audio:
http://www.vispo.com/audio

New at Vispo Audio are four half-hour radio shows I produced on Stephen Reid, novelist and bank robber. Stephen's the author of Jack-Rabbit Parole (Seal Books, Canada). I produced these radio shows in 1988 when Stephen had been out of jail for about a year; he and Susan Musgrave (Victoria BC poet and novelist) had married, they were raising a daughter (now they have two), and things were going very well for Stephen. His writing was going well, he had a contract from McLelland and Stewart for his next novels, and there were plans for a movie of his book.

Not so well these days: he pulled another robbery (August 99) and is back in prison awaiting trial.

↑ Index

409. Poetics List

New Rain Taxi Features Auster, Dao, Granary Books, Scalapino / Sullivan

Mon 27 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Gary Sullivan" <[redacted]>
Date: 9/23/99 12:42 PM -0400

R A I N T A X I
Vol. 4, No. 3

Interviews with: Paul Auster (Eric Lorberer& Xandra Coe), Bei Dao (Dan Featherston)

Features: Granary Books (Chris Fischbach), Leslie Scalapino (Jen Hofer)

Reviews of new books by: Samuel R. Delany, Johanna Drucker, J.M. Coetzee, James Tate, Barry Yourgrau, Wang Ping, Martine Bellen, Gary Snynder, Lucia Berlin, Trina Robbins, Elias Canetti, Denise Duhamel, Christophe Bataille, Serge Gainsbourg & more than 30 others ...

Also includes the next episode of "The New Life" serialized cartoon and a new feature, "Critical Issues": Erik Belgum and Gary Sullivan discuss "cover curl" and "New Directions paperbacks ... did Laughlin intentionally design the covers to look like they've been subjected to years of cigarette smoke?"

RAIN TAXI needs your support to continue ... please consider subscribing (very cheap):

1 year (4 issues): $10 ($16 for international subscriptions)

Rain Taxi
Eric Lorberer, Editor
P.O. Box 3840
Minneapolis, MN 55403
http://www.raintaxi.com
[redacted]

↑ Index

410. Poetics List
help / Tanoury
Mon 27 Sep 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Please respond backchannel as Mr. Tanoury is not a subscriber to the poetics list. Chris

--

From: "Doug Tanoury" <[redacted]>
Date: 9/23/99 8:36 AM -0400

Dear Poetics,

I am seriously seeking Douglas Rothchild. Can someone provide me an email address. I was told that he was working with you. Apparently not or I have the wrong list. Any help would be appreciated. Thank you.

Best Regards,

Doug Tanoury

_____

Funky Dog Publishing at:
http://www.geocities.com/Athens/6915/FunkyDogPublishing.htm

Athens Avenue Poetry Circle at:
http://www.geocities.com/Athens/6915/

↑ Index

411. Poetics List changes to list archive interface
Mon 27 Sep 1999

Those of you who make use of the list archive will notice that I've made a change in its appearance, the result of having been given greater control over the interface. The default view is now by date, arranged from most recent to earliest in a given month. All other options for sorting (by author, by topic, chronologically)
are still available, as is the search interface.

The Poetics List Archive is available at <http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html>

or via the Electronic Poetry Center at <http://epc.buffalo.edu>

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

412. David Zauhar
Re: Verbal Eyes at The Farm
Mon 27 Sep 1999

On Thu, 23 Sep 1999, david bromige wrote:

> The roster of poets reading also establishes that I am not a Language Poet, since my name is the only one that does not end in 'n'. Harryman, Hejinian, Watten, Robinson and your good self(on _Sep_ 20, not June) out-alphabet me. My performance (I suppose I thought we were supposed to perform, rather than give a 'straightforward reading') consisted of a straightforward beginning increasingly interrupted by my own tape-recorded voice listing a string of urban plaints.(So, similar to your rdg, in that it was interrupted by honkings). All I recall of its reception is that Victoria Rathbu N (obviously an embryo LangPo person) was reduced to tears.

> snip
> By way of P.S., the N-ending as requirement for echte LangPoets--a sort of > shibboleth in type--has been commented on before in these 'pages'. The > apparent anomaly of Bruce Andrews is obviously due to a forbear leaving off > the 'son' suffix of BA's Scandinavian ancestors. Thus we learn that neither > Jack Spicer, nor Kathleen Fraser, nor Bob Grenier, nor Clark Coolidge, nor > Michael Palmer, nor Tom Mandel, nor Erica Hunt, nor David Bromige, could be > anything but urLP; their fate was sealed by The Alphabet. Ted Berrigan, > however, might be the second LangPoet, if George Oppen is the first. (Not > Robt Duncan; his name should have stayed Robt Symmes). And hadn't you > always suspected that Rae Armantrout's LangPo status derived from her > friendships rather than her (stunning, lyrical, 'objectivist') poems?
>
> David
>
This is eerie, I just sent something to poetryetc about The Exquisite Corpse, and I seem to remember reading in their pages this theory about the seemingly obligatory "n" ending to Langpoet's names. Was that you who wrote that for the Corpse? And would that make John Milton and Walt Whitman precursors to L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E?

David Zauhar
University of Illinois at Chicago

"i have a city to cover with lines"

--d.a. levy

↑ Index

413. Dirk Rowntree
Mayor against Brooklyn Museum
Mon 27 Sep 1999

---

re: the Mayor's actions against the Brooklyn Museum:
Apparently it's very EFFECTIVE and very IMPORTANT to call City Hall and leave your opinion on the Mayor's Action Line.
Please pass it on, it only takes a minute.
Make sure he knows you'll never vote for him with these kinds of cultural policies!
[redacted]
Please FORWARD THIS!!!

↑ Index

414. Alan Sondheim
CALL FOR PAPERS: trAce Conference, July 2000, UK.
Mon 27 Sep 1999

CALL FOR PAPERS
Incubation: A trAce International Conference about Writing and the Internet
10-12 July 2000
The Nottingham Trent University, Nottingham, UK
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/incubation/

Keynote Speakers: Teri Hoskin, Geoff Ryman & Gregory Ulmer

The trAce Online Writing Community connects more than a thousand writers and readers in over 60 countries. Together we have built a vibrant and energetic online culture where text is always the focus. This conference offers the chance to meet in a physical space to talk about the nature of writing and reading on the internet today. We invite papers which debate, discuss or demonstrate any of the following:

TEXT : NARRATIVE : INVENTION The web is home to a huge variety of narrative forms: fictions using a traditional narrative structure within the framework of hypertext; works operating across literary genres - ficto-criticisms which consider the medium directly; poetic writings that seek to dishevel the structure of language; pidgin languages and texts; the blurring of image/word/sound so that the very design itself becomes the writing; and the liberation from the alphabet. But what does all this mean to the traditional print author or reader? And how do both the mode of distribution and the corporate-owned formats affect content and style? This theme examines the discovery and invention of new literary forms and theories, and the re-emergence, online, of textual experimentation predating the internet. It seeks to contextualise online literary production and features some of the breakthrough online projects that are helping to shape the early history of writing online. We invite authors, readers and critics to explore their engagement with the internet and to look at the ways in which text has evolved online.

TEXT : COMMUNITY : CREATIVITY The internet has offered us the chance to connect with people around the world in ways we could never have imagined. What effect is this having on creativity and artistic collaboration, including the notion of lone author as individual genius? Society takes on a different complexity when the identities of its members may be multiple, collective, or fragmented. How do we build and administer our online communities? And what happens when so many nationalities, cultures and languages intersect? This is a good moment to consider what it is to be human and how we are engaging with technology in ways we have never done before. The flux of the net challenges our assumptions about identity, self, nature, language, nation, time and space and disrupts the ways in which we construct meaning. How are writers responding to new experiences of online community, creativity, spirituality, and the body?

TEXT : PUBLISHING : OWNERSHIP Publishers just don't seem to know what to do with hypertext. Contemporary notions of authorship and ownership are being reconfigured by the advent of new technologies like the Internet. How are both mainstream and radical publishing responding to notions of copyright, public domain, and copyleftism? And where do new forms of work fit in? Is the book really dead? Will networking and collaborative authoring transform the literary into something else? Is it true that online writing communities and web.narrative projects are being embraced by media and art institutions but ignored by print publishers? There are many burning practical questions to be addressed. Are online works Read-Only consumer products? How does the public own/appropriate an online work? How would you present a web narrative project without a computer? Which form would you use? And how do you sell your online work?

ABSTRACTS SHOULD BE 300 WORDS MAXIMUM.

DEADLINE: DECEMBER 1ST 1999

HOW TO SUBMIT YOUR PAPER
Papers may be submitted via a web-form http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/incubation/ or via post, fax or email to:
INCUBATION, trAce, Nottingham Trent University, Clifton Lane, Nottingham NG11 8NS UK

tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
url: http://trace.ntu.ac.uk

The above address is also the contact point for general enquiries about The trAce Online Writing Community.

If you would like to be kept informed about the Incubation conference please contact:
Rose Athow, NCL Admin Centre, The Nottingham Trent University, Burton Street, Nottingham NG1 4BU.
Tel [redacted] (direct line)
Fax [redacted]
email: [redacted]

trAce Online Writing Community
Nottingham Trent University
Clifton Lane
Nottingham NG11 8NS
ENGLAND
Tel: +[redacted] (direct line)
Fax: +[redacted]
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk
[redacted]

_____
with 'unsubscribe' as the subject line.

_____

↑ Index

415. Mark Weiss
Re: San Francisco Book Festival
Mon 27 Sep 1999

The booth's been changed to 182.

At 10:09 AM 9/23/99 -0700, you wrote:
>Advance notice (I'll post again clloser to the event):
>

>I'll be sitting behind the table at booth 42 at the San Francisco Book >Festival, 10am to 6pm at Fort Mason on October 16th and 17th. Charles >Alexander will be sitting next to me--Chax Press and Junction Press are >sharing the booth. I look forward to meeting list members there. Joyce >Jenkins has arranged readings--I'll post when I get a list.
>
>Will any others out there be exhibiting?
>
>

↑ Index

416. Taylor Brady

Re: 2 queries

Mon 27 Sep 1999

Jay,

1) Take a look at Rob Halpern's essay on Oppen's reading of Heidegger in Tripwire #3 [I believe one or both of the editors subscribe to the list. If not, I can track down ordering info for you]. 2) Retallack's more recent "How To Do Things With Words" is also interesting in the connection you mention. For other leads, I'd take a look at responses to Jena Osman's query about "found text" poems, posted to this list a month or two (?) back. Also, a quick list of chance &/or procedurally-composed work might include Jerome Rothenberg's _Gematria_, anything branching out from the recently-published Oulipo Compendium, various works by Tina Darragh, some of Ron Silliman's work (thinking especially of _ketjak_, _Tjanting_, and _Lit_), many pieces from Bernadette Mayer. _0 to 9_, if you can find it, is well worth a look - as is her list of experiments, which is much easier to track down - reprinted in _In the American Tree_, I believe. There's also a later version, with additions by Charles Bernstein and others, up at the EPC: http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/bernstein/experiments.html

Obviously, a partial list, but the best I can muster from work. If you're still looking after others have posted, feel free to backchannel me and I'll do a little more digging at home.

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Jay Sanders
Sent: Thursday, September 23, 1999 11:52 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: 2 queries

Two unrelated queries: 1. As I was reading the material promoting the new 'Objectivist Nexus' book, it got me thinking whether any critical writing has been done drawing connections between Oppen and Heidegger. Maybe this is a really obvious point (Oppen opens one of his collections with a quote by Heidegger), but I'd be curious to read anything written on the matter.

2. I've become very interested in chance-generated and procedural poetry and have been reading lots of Cage and MacLow. Also, I recently got Joan Retallack's book 'Afterrimages.' I could use some suggestions regarding other poets which might be of interest, and any critical work centered on aleatorical methods-especially related to Retallack and other more contemporary writers. Cage tends to be really explicit about his methods, MacLow relatively so, but I haven't found much on other writers. Again, I hope this isn't redundant as I'm a new subscriber. THANK YOU.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

417. Carol L. Hamshaw
Videopoem Deadline extended
Mon 27 Sep 1999

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre has extended the deadline for videopoem submissions to its Videopoem festival, the first of its kind in Canada. Don't miss this great opportunity to have your work seen and heard!

The new deadline is OCTOBER 15, 1999.

Guidelines follow:

CALL FOR VIDEOPOEM SUBMISSIONS

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre is looking for videopoem submissions for its videopoem festival to be held at Video In November 7, 1999. We are interested in any original, creative combination of poetry with material on a videotape: cinepoems are also acceptable provided they are transferred onto videotape format.

Get public exposure in this new annual event, produced by The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre!

Guidelines:
1. Videopoems to maximum of 10 minutes, on any video tape format.
2. Include $15 submission fee, cheque payable to The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre

3. Include envelope with sufficient postage if you would like your tape returned, or donate it to our archive.
4. Provide brief bio, full name and contact info.
5. Mail to:
The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
Box 18 - 1895 Commercial Drive
Vancouver, BC V5N 4A6
6. Deadline Postdated by October 15, 1999

For more information call [redacted], email
[redacted]

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

418. Lowther, John
Irony
Mon 27 Sep 1999

{ p o e t i x }

while it is indispensable at times

perhaps it's over-indulged on paper

in print etc.

some of the things said here lose what force they might have simply as some % of the readership isnt sure what theyre saying and another bunch reads them dead wrong

i find that live, in person, irony often hits like a brick but on paper and especially when it seems little more than a habit (as "poetry to be worthwhile must be ironic" --- this is a line a friend of mine heard at a reading or someplace and reported to me) and as such seems to need a little more scrutiny ... ? just a thought

)L

↑ Index

419. Kyle Conner
HIGHWIRE Reading
Mon 27 Sep 1999

REadings @ _H_I_G_H_WIRE +_++ GA_LL_ER:Y
 presents:

D A V E * S I M P S O N

+++

A L L I S O N * C O B B

139 n. 2nd st. @ Highwire Gallery
Saturday, Oct. 2, 8pm or thereabouts byobubbly +++ donation requested

You will be welcomed with a CORNUCCOPIA of UNCONVENTIONAL word USAGES
* POETS:

DAVE SIMPSON recently received his MFA from New York University's Graduate Writing Program, where he studied with Gerald Stern, among other poets. He is reputed by Dave Baratier to have 'a fine ear.'

ALLISON COBB has a new book out on SITUATIONS Press, of which I cannot remember the name. She was part of the 3-poet collective that composed & published the chain renga entitled _COMMUNAL BEBOP CANTO_. She is co-curator of the DC Arts Center Reading Series.

****

from "Little Box Book," Allison Cobb

I.
The little box book likes more liquor - grows back tongues a hydra - children her age blow candles at blackout birthdays

II.
Strip shops stick like a fungus to rock
potreros ("tongue" in the Red idiom)

Hello is anyone home

III.
And the mountains at night grow dark stubble grow into a swallow pretend little box to recall

David Simpson

Vacation Plans

I will return to Paris and stand beside Montmartrre again, admiring its curves as clean as the scissors-work of tailors and its chamise of peach sunlight put on in joy. I will return to drink champagne at midnight and to take the holiness of chévre in my mouth as I give thanks to the goatherd and the goat for millennia of something I can believe in, something redolent on my fingers in the morning.
I will sit at the same table on the Bateau Mouche with George and Dorene, my parents, and the Galaghers singing old favorites while the captain steers our ship up and down the Seine past Notre Dame as if he's trying to help us rub this moment into our memory while the motor purrs and someone stands to make another toast.

I was young then, and in a hurry.
I still love the jazz of coffee in my blood, the glint of suitcase locks and high-tech cameras, but this time when I stand on the Quai d'Orsay almost seduced by the smells of donkey sausage and the sounds of a language I am in love with learning,
I want to let the river mumble, like a grandmother, its old stories to me. I ache for the counsel of a snail on patience.
Let the old Jew say what he can of the war. But looking on the map,
I can't find Paris. This is not 1979. Dorene and my dad are dead.
There are snails in my backyard, a river nearby, and cemeteries here as serene and articulate as Pére-Lachaise.

↑ Index

420. Jerry McGuire

Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest

Mon 27 Sep 1999

CONTEST WINNERS OF THE 1999 DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE

Children's Fiction
First Prize ($100).....Carol Ann Winn.....Amarillo, TX
..... "Swim Like a Dolphin"

CODOFIL Award in French Poetry
First Prize ($100).....Albert G. Saada.....Hollywood, FL
..... "Rupture"
Honorable Mention.....Ann duMais McCormick.....Grosse Point Farms, MI

....."Un Poeme"

CODOFIL Award in French Prose
First Prize ($100).....David J. Holcombe.....Alexandria, LA
..... "Les Ames"
Honorable Mention.....Joyce Mary Carmouche.....Alexandria, LA
..... "Cette Nuit"

Ethel Harvey Award in Nonfiction
First Prize ($200).....Jerry Craven.....Amarillo, TX
..... "The Architecture of the Dead"
Honorable Mention.....Walt Stromer.....Mt. Vernon, IA
..... "Why Not Dark"

Novel
First Prize ($300).....Jerry Craven.....Amarillo, TX
..... "Women of Thunder"
Second Prize ($200).....M. G. Miller.....Fayetteville, AR
..... "Bayou Jesus"

Short Story
First Prize ($300).....Joseph M. O'Connell.....Austin, TX
..... "Marina Dreams"
Second Prize ($200).....Jonathan Fink.....Syracuse, NY
..... "Half-Light"
Third Prize ($100).....Steve Weathers.....Abilene, TX
..... "Come Hell"
Honorable Mention.....Dave Kuhne.....Fort Worth, TX
..... "The Road to Roma"

Young Adult Fiction
First Prize ($200).....Don Dilmore.....Montgomery, TX
..... "Danny's Red Jacket"

The James H. Wilson Full-Length Play Awards
First Prize ($300).....Sherry Bishop.....New York, NY
..... "Bless Her Heart"
Second Prize ($100).....JudyLee Oliva.....Nesconset, NY
..... "On the Showroom Floor"

The John Z. Bennett Awards in Poetry
First Prize ($300).....Randy Prunty.....Lilburn, GA
..... "the place they were memento"
..... "gene pool now hiring"
..... "shoulders are for holding back"
Second Prize ($200).....Jonathan Fink.....Syracuse, NY
..... "On the Scene"
..... "Gravemaking"
..... "Relativity"
Third Prize ($100).....Margaret Rabb.....Chapel Hill, NC
..... "The Secret Fascicle"
Honorable Mention.....Mary Tutwiler.....New Iberia, LA
..... "In This War"
..... "Neighbors"
..... "White Phosphorous"
Honorable Mention.....Susan Thomas.....Marshfield, VT
..... "Annunciation"
..... "Sun Dogs"

The Paul T. Nolan One-Act Play Awards
First Prize ($200).....William Wellborn.....Lawrenceville, GA
..... "Portrait of a Klansman"
Second Prize ($100).....Leigh Hunt.....Gig Harbor, WA
..... "Home Invasion"

--

Jerry McGuire
Director of Creative Writing
English Department Box 44691
University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette LA 70504-4691
[redacted]

↑ Index

421. Michael Neff
Re: A crown of iron
Mon 27 Sep 1999

KENT JOHNSON wrote:

> In response to a post I called "The sound of drums," Michael Neff has written to tell me of his surprise at my "quick about face." I believe my implied other face must be pinned to a post I put up a few days ago, one that contained a reference to David Hume and ended with a statement about my complete agreement with Michael's position on East Timor. Since the intended tone of that first rebuttal did not register with him, I am thinking that others on the List may have taken it wrongly too. So, for what it's worth (and to keep my left-wing credentials before the List intact) I wanted to say-- That post about my agreeing with Michael Neff WAS SUPPOSED TO BE IRONIC.
>
> Yes, I hate US imperialism, am one of those old fogeys who believes its existence is as real as rocks, and I wanted to make that conviction crystal clear, since irony, apparently, is failing me, along with other things in my body these days. And I wish Web del Sol and its editors the best of luck as they continue to spread the gospel of neo-liberal innocence and beneficence far and wide. May the sun never set on the empire of American poetry.
>
> Kent

You're posturing Kent, and thus, bereft of reason and memory, two critical elements for clear headed thought. You have my sympathy, old dear.

Mike

↑ Index

422. Philip Nikolayev
AMERICAN FARMERS VISIT A RUSSIAN COLLECTIVE FARM
Mon 27 Sep 1999

AMERICAN FARMERS VISIT
A RUSSIAN COLLECTIVE FARM

oh how madly how verdantly flamboyant yanks came hardening with bottles of rum and how we all rolled to nowhere for hours as one ball fraternizing through rough conversation

as cultural exchange and then flam in comes the moment of sparse generosity unleashed tangentially upon a garden of sham sheep as they clamber out of their own silhouettes s’as to raise another through a silk in the sky to the human mowers and this now a different place with a different people and to gain velocity here is not again problematic because the sheep are as against the section cars and the section cares are as against the cattle as one to three cool bovine quadrupeds
and then hip zip take me out of here to the nearest brickhouse
so I can hiccup
and take me under the water for a few minutes
but make sure I can fill my lungs with air or else you’ll drown me

↑ Index

423. Philip Nikolayev
INSECTS
Mon 27 Sep 1999

INSECTS

Moonmoth and grasshopper that flee our page...
Hart Crane

as electric cicadas hidden in the leaves twer twer twer produce magnificent trilling the unblotched river flows god knows where to be or not to does not even arise on the curbs mightily little is done to investigate the linden litters of recollection

swoosh swoosh swoosh
but nothing else becomes bats brother hang me your pattern namer
upon the barque lend two swell wet towels of sand and lets become indefenestrable in the grass
in the leaves

↑ Index

424. Philip Nikolayev
FORGIVING
Mon 27 Sep 1999

FORGIVING

raw feeling chanceries are becoming like turf of mine and I have them stretched against the telephone wires often wondering & leafing how mortibles are gone and then there is nothing nothing at all but the rouge imperializing to pound or not to pound and suddenly there’s like a snake going down into your borscht and you munch it’s nothing taking it from there then some more arrive with the same surface of the chair and there’s a fire extinguisher that shakes white permafroth all over the tiger lilies and again a lack of recognition is taking a bite out of your operatic biscuit but it lends
a hand to the lignum of criticism then there is nothing but lilies in cobalt Nantucket

a harvest by the sea
a dacha of timorous
drops of saltfish on sugar you're ready to forgive everything

↑ Index

425. justice4all
STOP INTERNET CHAIN LETTERS!!!
Mon 27 Sep 1999

BUT NOT UNTIL AFTER YOU PASS THIS ONE ON TO EVERYONE YOU KNOW!!!

http://members.aol.com/justicewrtr/justice4all/main.htm

Mr. President and fellow writers:

It has long been one of my goals to write and publish a novel. Well, the writing part (and rewriting part, and rewriting one more time) is done, and now the publishing part begins.

In reading up on the publishing industry and looking at the technology available, I have decided to try to market my book electronically while I seek an agent and a traditional publisher. This has the advantage of (hopefully) making me some money now, and developing a following for my work which might help to attract a traditional publisher.

My novel is a murder/mystery story entitled Justice For All. In order to market it online, I've created a web site where readers can find out a little about the book, and even read the first few chapters. The web site also offers readers a chance to order the complete novel, delivered to them in electronic form via email.

Of course, as with all web-based enterprises, the key is to create traffic to the site, and that's where I hope you'll help me. Please visit the site and check out my story. Then, pass this letter along to friends, relatives and others who like to read, encouraging them to visit as well.

With your help, I can get this thing off the ground, and hopefully attract the attention of an agent and traditional publishers. With lots of work and lots of luck, you'll soon see my book at a bookstore near you.

Visit and send your friends to the site today!

http://members.aol.com/justicewrtr/justice4all/main.htm

Thanks for your help!

Philip Middleton

PS: If this letter offends you in any way, I apologize. Please disregard.

---------- Get free email from CNN Sports Illustrated at http://email.cnnsi.com/

↑ Index

426. Jim White
Re: Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest
Mon 27 Sep 1999

---

do check out our new web site at : www.americanartists.org thanks jim white

↑ Index

427. Lawrence Upton.
Writers Forum
Mon 27 Sep 1999

Interested in hearing from anyone who can supply URLs to reviews of Writers Forum publications or articles etc about Writers Forum

The text or OCRable copy of such reviews and articles are also welcome where you have the copyright and are willing for it to be reproduced on the growing Writers Forum website

L

The Sub Voicive Poetry website:
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/

Lawrence Upton's website:
http://members.spree.com/sip/lizard/index.htm

RWC
http://members.tripod.com/~ReadandWrite/contents.html

Writers Forum
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

↑ Index

428. Alan Sondheim

Lauren

Mon 27 Sep 1999

-(

Lauren

I've got a hole for you. I want to put it in everywhere. I dream of need- les, do you know that? There are tracks all over me, not just my arms. You might think I'd know better, but I like them. They scar me, show you where I've been.

I love wearing my flaws. You can see right through me but I know it and that's more than a lot of people know.

/* but begging. but really wanting it. but wanting nothing more than it. but wanting it more than anything in his life. but dreaming and living the wanting of it. but unable to sleep for the wanting of it. but unable to drink for the wanting of it. unable to eat for it. but doing only the wanting of it. but others. but others noting wasting away, others wasting away. her for the wanting of it. unable to work, this writing for the wanting, speaking for the wanting. the boring of others, boring others. for the desire, for the wanting of it. the hunger the thirst of it. the exhaustion of it. the drug the addiction the obsession the compulsion of it. the drive the instinct of it. for the wanting of it. his for the wanting. want her. */

Do I want it, do I need it? Of course I need it. Everything's so simple and as Lauren said, if you don't know how terrific heroin can be you don't know anything.

It's all about your knowledge, not mine.

But I don't need all that much else, you know. And that's way ahead of you and most other people. It drives things towards a point and that point can be a good time. No one even thinks about good times any more. You have to take a breath to do that. I hold my breath when I shoot up. Like you can have it.

It's not just that though. I've got better friends than you ever will. They'll all betray me in the end. But there's a pull in the world, I seem to be the only one that understands that. Again it's the knowledge thing - only an addict has knowledge of any sort. Once you understand that, you might understand everything, but you're still not smart.

I'm always thinking below the surface. I have enough money to buy the stuff so it's never a question, say, of Lauren out on the streets looking for it. It's right there, in the cabinet; I can get it when I need it. The need is good, it's easy to fulfill - just like that. Teleology grinds to a halt several times a day, with a kick.

Some people find this stuff false, a false kick. But if the receptors are there, if it works, what's the problem? It's nature finding nature, desire fulfilled as I said. And the knowledge is incredible. I can see the sky!

Was it Odin, now it's me, sacrificing myself to myself? It's that, what I can do, what I can achieve, look, I can't run a mile or climb a mountain, but I can learn from this stuff, you wouldn't believe it. And what I've learned doesn't fit in any books.

It's strange also because we're all addicts of course, just some of you haven't found your thing. It's like a lure or teleology that insists on being just out of reach, carrot on a stick kind of thing, and so you rant uselessly, run around uselessly, as if this and that make a difference. But difference only comes from One minus Zero so to speak, and the One can be heroin, and the Zero can be the rest of the world, everything else.

Why do they call it substance abuse? It's the enhancement of substance, the real recognition of the power inherent in things. And the self comes to fruition around this. I know that, I can feel it in my bones, my soul. These substances were made for a reason. And there's the physical effect and the mental effect, and different sorts of addictions all over the place. But it's worth it for the physical effect. If you're set up, like I am.

What you're looking at is a habit. I'm a habit, even to myself I'm a hab- it. That makes me simple and likeable. People understand all my surfaces; they can't touch anything else but that. And I can fashion them, polish them - I can shine like a star anytime I want.

I love feeling the hunger, love wanting it. It's like computers, but I don't have to deal with other people and their desires. Call it modernism against your post-modernism, or the self against alterity; the drug's not alter at all, it's heroin my lover, it's heroin my best friend. And the wonder and knowledge of that is unbelievable.

Do you know I can sing? You've probably never heard me sing. Someday I'll sing for you, even now. You can stand a little? You might like this. There's a record I use for background, like karaoke. Just a second. Let me know what you think.

Obvious exits: [root] to your darkness
Last connected Sun Sep 26 22:08:36 1999 MET DST from 166.84.1.68
#$#mcp version: 2.1 to: 2.1
Name Connected Idle time Location
---- --------- --------- --------
Lauren (#934) 8 seconds 0 seconds Bodee

Total: 1 person, who has been active recently.

↑ Index

429. Joe Amato
Re: It was 20 years ago today...
Mon 27 Sep 1999

hey folks, been a while... trying to get things together here in colorado... so far it's been going fine, kass and i are settling in some...

note my new address, as above: [redacted]

ron s. and david b: i was at a humanities institute conference at suny/stony brook march of last year, at which judith barry was also one of the presenters... i think it fair to say we both felt a certain empathy for what the other was up to, presentation-wise... as i recall, judith now lives in the city, on spring street...

i've been tempted to jump into SO many threads these past few months---but have had neither the calories nor the hardware to participate on a sustained basis... i'm still struck by the level of heat in these regions, though i can understand why east timor (e.g.) or editorial practices (e.g., and a touch of zeugma here, sure) can elicit such a flurry of impassioned responses... w/o articulating my own position on these (and other) issues (which wouldn't be to the point, latecomer that i am), i guess i have to observe that the the best and the worst of the list seems most incipient at these moments... i'll leave it to each of you to tease out the implications here, or plain ignore them (!)... but personally, i think it's a mistake to take for granted the nature of the exchange (if that's what it is) that's going on here, and that might go on here...

that said, i imagine this space/event mself, based on what i know of its history, as a relatively left-of-center, non-mainstream conjunction, both politically and aesthetically... that is, this is how i come to "poetics@," even if there has often been a resistance expressed hereabouts wrt correlating the aesthetic too directly with the political... in all, this list seems to me (to me) politically informed and aesthetically savvy, but at times somewhat lacking when it comes to more bracing confrontations with broader configurations of the real (i'm struggling here to characterize things, you can tell---so a pinch of salt, please)... anyway, it's important to note that there are nonetheless differences possible within all conjunctions (urban, pastoral, socialist, gregorian), and also that a failure to "read" any conjunction as such will undoubtedly result in misunderstandings, jihad, etc. (albeit the latter are always possible in any case)...

i mean, it takes time to come to grips with the somewhat fluctuating presence of this collective, no?...

well so... looks like the first snow of the season tonight in the denver/boulder area, BRRRRRR...

best,

joe

↑ Index

430. Katherine Lederer
D-double H-h-happiness
Mon 27 Sep 1999

The first reading is coming straight up -- October 2nd, our s-s-smash-'em-up kick-off!

Segue @ Double Happiness October, November readings Saturdays from 4:00 to 6:00 pm. Please take careful note of the time.Readings begin punctually. D-double H-h-happiness is located at 173 Mott Street, just south of Broome. A 4$ contribution goes to the readers. Doors will open at 3:30 for those who want to start drinking and schmoozing early. Coordinators for this series are Katherine Lederer and Lee Ann Brown (Oct/Nov), Charles Borkhuis (Dec/Jan), Brendan Lorber (Feb/March), Kristin Prevallet and Prageeta Sharma (April/May). Continuing support of this series is provided by the Segue Foundation. Funding is made possible by support from the Literature Program of the New York State Council on the Arts.

October 2: Lisa Jarnot, Rod Smith, Renee Gladman Lisa Jarnot's second collection of poems, Ring of Fire, is forthcoming from Zoland Books. She currently lives in New York, where she is writing a biography of Robert Duncan. Rod Smith is the author of Protective Immediacy (Roof, 1999) and In Memory of My Theories (O Books, 1996). He edits Aerial & publishes Edge Books in Washington, DC. Renee Gladman lives in San Francisco, where she edits Clamour, and Leroy, a chapbook series. She is the author of Arlem (Idiom Press) and Not Right Now, (Second Story Books). Juice, a collection of prose work, is forthcoming from Kelsey St. Press.

October 9: Lynn Dreyer, Caitlin Grace McDonnell Lynn Dreyer lives in Falls Church, Virginia and works as a recreation therapist. Her books include Stampede (Eel Press), LAMPLIGHTS USED TO FEED THE DEER (Some of Us Press), and The White Museum (ROOF). Her work has appeared in The Moving Borders anthology and in In the American Tree. Caitlin Grace McDonnell received her MFA in Poetry from NYU as a New York Times Fellow. Poems are forthcoming in Grand Street. She lives in New York City, where she teaches at LIU and at Teachers & Writers Collaborative.

October 16: Matt Rohrer, Edmund Berrigan Matt Rohrer grew up on Oklahoma. He is the author of A Hummock in the Malookas (W.W. Norton) and is one of the poetry editors for Fence. Eddie Berrigan is the author of Disarming Matter (Owl Press, 1999). He edits LOG Magazine (with Noel Black), and is currently at work putting together a volume of the late Steve Carey's poetry.

October 23: Carla Harryman, Alystyre Julian Carla Harryman is the author of ten books of prose, plays, poetry and essays including a novel, The Words: after Carl Sandburg's Rootabaga and Jean-Paul Sartre (O Books, Berkeley, 1999) and a volume of new and selected prose, There Never Was a Rose Without a Thorn (City Lights, 1995). She is currently working on a second novel, Gardener of Stars, and is engaged in the restaging of a chamber opera. She lives and teaches in Detroit. Alystyre Julian is a poet and yoga teacher who lives in NYC. She has collaborated on a short film with Lee Ann Brown and has work in the current Chain.

October 30: Peter Culley, Jennifer Moxley Peter Culley is author of 21 (Oolichan), Natural History (Fissure), Climax Forest (Leech Books), and forthcoming Snake Eyes. He lives in South Wellington, Vancouver Island, British Colombia. Jennifer Moxley is a poet, translator and editor. She is the author of Imagination Verses and several chapbooks, the most recent of which is Wrong Life (Cambridge, UK. Equipage). Presently she lives in Maine.

November 6: Eric Giraud, Lisa Lubasch Eric Giraud was born in 1966. He lives in Marseille and has published a chapbook (Cliches). marcel, a full-length work, is to be published this year. He translates American and English poetry with Holly Dye. Lisa Lubasch's first book of poems How Many More of Them Are You? is just out from Avec Books. Her work has appeared or is forthcoming in An Avec Sampler 2, Boulevard, Explosive,The Hat, Fence, Volt, and others.

November 13: Martin Corless-Smith, Kevin Larimer Martin Corless-Smith is from Worcestershire, England. His first book Of Piscator was published by University of Georgia Press. His second, The Garden a Theophany. Or ECCOHOME: A Dialectical Lyric was published by Spectacular Books. A chapbook based on a translation of Lucretius' De Rerum Natura recently came out from 811 Books. Kevin Larimer's work has appeared in Explosive Magazine, The Iowa Review, and Skanky Possum. He lives in New York City.

November 20: Erica Hunt, Caroline Crumpacker Erica Hunt's books include Local History (Roof), Arcade (Kelsey Street Press). She has a book forthcoming from Carolina Wren Press. Caroline Crumpacker is one of the poetry editors for Fence and works currently as the Managing Director of the Poetry Society of America. Her work has appeared in Seneca Review, Third Coast, and Provincetown Arts.

↑ Index

431. David Dowker
The Alterran Poetry Assemblage #4
Tue 28 Sep 1999

ANNOUNCING: the opening installment in the projected multi-screen timed-release (from here to the end of the year) of

(((((((((THE ALTERRAN POETRY ASSEMBLAGE)))))))))

#4 - Lissa Wolsak, Alan Halsey, Stephen Ellis, David Dowker, Meredith Quartermain, Carrie Etter, Spencer Selby, Sheila Murphy, Bill Luoma...

new location --> http://members.home.net/alterra/

↑ Index

432. Jill Stengel
reading announcement, sf
Tue 28 Sep 1999

synapse: second sundays at blue bar

--presents--

a reading with dana teen lomax and lisa lubasch
october 10, 2 p.m.

blue bar is at 501 broadway, at kearney, in sf enter thru black cat restaurant, same address

admission is $2

Writing teacher, artist-in-residence, bodyboarder, and award-winning writer Dana Teen Lomax has been published in Coracle, Inscape, Outlet, The SF Bay Guardian, Transfer 76, Tripwire, and yefief. Lomax, who lives in Pacifica, CA, also produces and acts in LINK, an event featuring experimental and collaborative performance. Room (a+bend press, 1999) is her first chapbook.

Born in 1973 in New Rochelle, New York, Lisa Lubasch currently lives and teaches in New York City. She is the author of How Many More of Them Are You?, newly released from Avec Books. Her work can also be found in An Avec Sampler 2, Boulevard, Explosive, Fence, The Hat, Verse, and Volt; and she has a chapbook forthcoming from a+bend press.

↑ Index

433. Richard Frey

Yolanda Wisher at NOTcoffeeHouse 2125 Chestnut 10/3 at 1 pm

Tue 28 Sep 1999

(NOTcoffeeHouse) Poetry and Performance Series Featured reader: Yolanda Wisher was born and raised in the ëburbs of North Wales, PA. She received a bachelor's degree in English and Black Studies from Lafayette College in Easton, PA, where she was awarded the Gilbert Prize for superiority in English and The Macknight Black Senior Poetry Prize. Wisher is a currently pursuing her master's degree in English/Creative Writing at Temple University where she is a Future Faculty Fellow. In 1999, she was named the first Montgomery County Poet Laureate. She is also a fellow at Cave Canem, a workshop retreat for African-American poets.

Wisher's poetry has appeared in Aya Literary Publication, The Sonia Sanchez Literary Review, and the American Poetry Review's Philly Edition. Open Poetry and Performance Showcase Sun., Oct. 3, 1 pm First Unitarian Church 2125 Chestnut Street Along with a live poetry reading and performance , we invite you to join in our website poetry reading presentation. All poets and performers may have a poem or a lyric featured in theNOTcoffeeHouse website. Send you work for inclusion in the ongoing internet presentation. Tell your friends all over the world to check our site! --N. B. We are having some trouble keeping the site together-patience please. Poets and performers may submit works for direct posting on the website via email to the [redacted] or works may be emailed to Richard Frey at [redacted] or USPS or hand-delivered through slot at 500 South 25th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19146. More information: Church office, [redacted], Jeff Loo, [redacted] or Richard Frey, [redacted]. Visit our website at www.notcoffeehouse.org poets & performers previously appearing at NOTcoffeeHouse: Nathalie Anderson, Lisa Coffman, Barbara Cole, Barb Daniels, Linh Dinh, Lori-Nan Engler, Simone Zelitch, Dan Evans, Brenda McMillan, Kerry Sherin, John Kelly Green, Emiliano Martin, Jose Gamalinda, Toshi Makihara, Thom Nickels, Joanne Leva, Darcy Cummings, David Moolten, Kristen Gallagher, Shulamith Wachter Caine, Maralyn Lois Polak, Marcus Cafagna, Ethel Rackin, Lauren Crist, Beth Phillips Brown, Joseph Sorrentino, Frank X, Richard Kikionyogo, Elliott Levin, Leonard Gontarek, Lamont Steptoe, Bernard Stehle, Sharon Rhinesmith, Alexandra Grilikhes, C. A. Conrad, Nate Chinen, Jim Cory, Tom Grant, Gregg Biglieri, Stephanie Jane Parrino, Jeff Loo, Theodore A. Harris, Mike Magee, Wil Perkins, Deborah Burnham, UNSOUND, Danny Romero, Don Riggs, Shawn Walker, She-Haw, Scott Kramer, Judith Tomkins, 6 of the Unbearables - Alfred Vitale Ron Kolm, Jim Feast, Mike Carter, Sharon Mesmer, Carol Wierzbicki-,John Phillips, Quinn Eli, Molly Russakoff, Peggy Carrigan, Kelly McQuain, Patrick Kelly, Mark Sarro, Rocco Renzetti, Voices of a Different Dream - Annie Geheb, Ellen Ford Mason, Susan Windle - Bob

Perelman, Jena Osman, Robyn Edelstein,Brian Patrick Heston, Francis Peter Hagen, Shankar Vedantam

↑ Index

434. Pritchett,Patrick publication announcement

Tue 28 Sep 1999

R E S I D E
Patrick Pritchett

Dead Metaphor Press
Boulder, CO

RESIDE offers a series of extended meditations on the themes of embodiment, loss, and inscription. Starting from Heidegger's observation that, "Language is the house of Being," these poems explore how we build locations in language. Concerned with both the Saying of the human and its continual erosion, they seek to negotiate the anxiety about form through the body of the poem itself.

RESIDE also alludes to the Hebrew letter, Beit, which in Judaism signifies the immanence of presence. Interrogating the structure of the elegaic, these poems ask, "How may we build enduring habitations for spirit in the midst of our ongoing loss? How does the poem act as both dwelling place and point of departure?" _____

"Patrick Pritchett's work is distinguished both by an emotional seriousness and by a sensuous elegance of sound. He communicates with real finesse the pressure and the nobility of the vocation of poetry."

-- Rachel Blau DuPlessis

"Rooted in the body, Pritchett's poetry extends that body until its limits become (con)fused with the limits of meaning and with the body of language ... it's a body propagated by fire into an entire world - a world that is ... the very room we live in ... charged with a flickering, shifting sense of the sacred uniting these disparate things into a single force. And what a force it is - both beautiful and astonishing."

-- Cole Swensen

Patrick Pritchett is the author of _Ark Dive_ and _Reside_. His poems have appeared in New American Writing, Rhizome, River City, Antenym, Bombay Gin, and Prairie Schooner, among others. His book reviews have been published in the _Thus Spake The Corpse_, American Book Review, Witz, Jacket, 6ix, and

The Poetry Project Newsletter. He is a contributing editor for the poetry journal Facture.

RESIDE: Sedona Red cover, black endpapers, saddle-stapled, 40 pages, $5.00

TO ORDER, CONTACT:

Richard Wilmarth
Dead Metaphor Press
P.O. Box 2076 Boulder, CO
80306-2076
[redacted]

OR:

Small Press Distribution*
www.spd.org
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley, CA 94710-1409
[redacted]

*(should be available from SPD by beginning of next week).

↑ Index

435. James Brook
october events @ city lights bookstore
Tue 28 Sep 1999

Many book events are scheduled for October at City Lights Bookstore--even though the building is still under (re)construction (there's a long-needed earthquake retrofit underway).

Of special interest--in my opinion, at any rate--are two books that look at the Bay Area from oblique angles. Neither book is what you would call celebratory: Gloria Frym's new book of stories, Distance No Object (Oct. 3), and Gray Brechin's Imperial San Francisco: Urban Power, Earthly Ruin (Oct. 20), which looks at cities as the vortex of extractive industries.

--J.

October Events
@
City Lights Bookstore

All events are free and open to the public.

All events take place at

City Lights Bookstore
261 Columbus Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94133
[redacted]
http://www.citylights.com

Friday, Oct. 1, 7 p.m.

Lotería Cards and Fortune Poems: A Book of Lives
Linocuts by Artemio Rodríguez
Poems by Juan Felipe Herrera
Published by City Lights Books

Come celebrate with us the release of Lotería Cards and Fortune Poems, the linoleum-cut prints of talented Mexican artist, Artemio Rodríguez, paired with the poetry of the fine Chicano poet, Juan Felipe Herrera. Based on lotería, a popular game of chance from colonial Mexico, the images are masterful reinterpretations of traditional iconography, as seen by an artist new to the United States.

Lotería Cards and Fortune Poems gives a contemporary twist to a rich folk tradition. Rodríguez and Herrera offer a seamless union of word and image, and of Mexican and Chicano sensibilities.

Juan Felipe Herrera will do a performative reading, accompanied by musicians. Slides of Artemio Rodríguez's work will also be shone.

Sunday, Oct. 3, 4 p.m.

Distance No Object
By Gloria Frym
Published by City Lights Books

Come join author Gloria Frym to celebrate the publication of her second book of short stories. In Distance No Object, Gloria Frym turns her ironic, passionate gaze to post-Vietnam Berkeley and San Francisco. Private lives are still swept along by the currents of history, as in the sixties. But the names of the wars of have changed. . . . The stories of Distance No Object evoke the deep frustrations between generations, friends, neighbors, and races. Yet civility, quotidian justice, a common language, and new love are imagined. . . .

Gloria Frym's previous books include How I Learned, By Ear, Back to Forth, and Impossible Affection.

Wednesday, Oct. 13, 7 p.m.

Honk if You Love Aphrodite
By Daniel Evan Weiss
Published by Serpent's Tail Press

Acclaimed author of The Roaches Have No King and The Swine's Wedding, Daniel Evan Weiss reimagines Homer's Odyssey as set in contemporary Brooklyn. Described as "abundantly funny, exhilaratingly cynical" by Fay Weldon and the "Evil Knievel of novelists" by Newsday, Weiss takes us on an epic quest for love in the boroughs of the Big Apple.

Come hear David Evan Weiss read from Honk if You Love Aphrodite.

Monday, Oct. 18, 6 p.m.

Bookstore: The Life and Times of Jeannette Watson and Books & Co.
By Lynne Tillman
Published by Harcourt Brace

From 1977 to 1997 Books & Co. was one of the premier independent bookstores in the country. Stocking a wide range of fiction and nonfiction, the Madison Ave. bookstore was the kind of bookstore writers and readers dream about: a place where reading was an adventure, where interesting works would always be available, where writers would congregate to share ideas and discuss their writing. In Bookstore, Lynne Tillman tells the story of this legendary bookstore and its founder, Jeannette Watson, through the voices of employees, customers, writers, fellow booksellers, and people throughout the world of publishing.

Jeannette Watson will speak about Bookstore and her remarkable career.

Wednesday, Oct. 20, 7 p.m.

Imperial San Francisco: Urban Power, Earthly Ruin
By Gray Brechin
Published by University of California Press

Local urban geographer and coauthor of Farewell, Promised Land: Waking from the California Dream, Gray Brechin offers a myth-shattering reevaluation not only of the city by the Golden Gate but of urbanization itself in a saga that extends from the rise of ancient Rome to the founding of Washington, D.C., to the nuclear destruction of Hiroshima.

Gray Brechin will speak and sign copies of his books.

Thursday, Oct. 21, 7 p.m.

Two new books by William L. Fox--

Mapping the Empty: Eight Artists and Nevada
Published by University of Nevada Press
&
Driving by Memory
Published by University of New Mexico Press

William L. Fox is literature consultant for the Western States Arts Federation, a poet and writer, an arts consultant, and a curator. He has published poems and articles in sixty magazines and he has had thirteen collections of poetry published in three countries. He is the author of several exhibition catalogues and the editor of two anthologies.

Mapping the Empty relates the unique work of eight Nevada artists to the geography of their state. Driving by Memory is a meditation on driving in the desert. It is a profoundly personal book about the most public of subjects: life in the postmodern West at the end of the millennium and what the cities, the freeways, the open spaces, and the billboards tell us about ourselves.

William L. Fox will be on hand to sign copies of his new books.

Sunday, Oct. 31, 5 p.m.

The Vampire Lectures
By Lawrence Rickles
Published by University of Minnesota Press

Things get spooky in cultural studies on Halloween! The Vampire Lectures is based on the course that Lawrence Rickles has taught for several years at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Rickles gives undead history of vampirism in legend, literature, and film. The Vampire Lectures makes an original and intellectually rigorous contribution to literary and psychoanalytic theory as Rickles identifies the subconscious meanings, complex symbolism, and philosophical arguments--particularly those of Marx, Freud, and Nietzsche--embedded in vampirism and the gothic.

Come meet Lawrence Rickles before the lights go out!

↑ Index

436. Poetry Project
Ferlinghetti, Sanders & others
Tue 28 Sep 1999

One week from today

Tuesday, October 5th at 8 pm

Lawrence Ferlinghetti & Edward Sanders read at the Poetry Project

Yes, that's Lawrence Ferlinghetti of A Coney Island of the Mind and A Far Rockaway of the Heart, and the man who was dragged to court in the 1950s on obscenity charges (he was acquitted) for daring to be the first to publish Allen Ginsberg's _Howl_ through City Lights Publishing House (of which he is the co-founder).

And yes, that's Edward Sanders, the founder of the Fugs and the author of 1968: A Year in Verse, Tales of Beatnik Glory, and, his newest project, America, a History in Verse, Volume I (1900-1939), forthcoming from Black Sparrow this fall.

Lawrence Ferlinghetti will be interviewed live at WNYC the same Tuesday from 1:15-1:45 pm by Leonard Lopate--that's 820 on your AM dial. Ferlinghetti reads very rarely on the East Coast, and this is a very rare chance to see him in NYC. Door sales only

Please note that this reading is on a Tuesday (NOT Wednesday)...

And other upcoming readings

Monday, October 4th, first open-mike of the year, sign-up at 7:30 pm, reading at 8 pm.

Friday, October 8 at 10:30 pm

Po'Jazz, an evening with Golda Soloman, the founder and leader of the poetry-jazz group Po'Jazz, writer-journalist Gerthie Owtram, and musicians.

↑ Index

437. Lowther, John
Email for Rick Snyder
Tue 28 Sep 1999

anyone got it ?

rick is the d. of _cello entry_ and author of _blueprint_ [811 books]

thanx

↑ Index

438. jocelyn saidenberg

SPT's 5th Annual Literary Soirée and Auction and 25th Anniversary Celebration

Tue 28 Sep 1999

Silver Streak
Small Press Traffic's 5th Annual Literary Soirée and Auction and 25th Anniversary Celebration celebrities, gourmet food, readings, music, Poets' Theater, raffle, live auction, tarot readings, and more

Saturday, October 2, 2-10 p.m.
New College Cultural Center and Theater
766 & 777 Valencia Street, San Francisco (between 18th and 19th)
Sliding scale: $10 Š $20 Š $50 Š
(We wouldn't even turn down $1,000!)

25 Writers/25 Years A Group Reading and Salute to Small Press Traffic's Founders with Beau Beausoleil, Dodie Bellamy, Taylor Brady, David Bromige, Avery Burns, Norma Cole, Adam Cornford, Steve Dickison, Kathleen Fraser, Gloria Frym, Susan Gevirtz, Robert Glück, Jack Hirschman, Edith Jenkins, Joyce Jenkins, Denise Kastan, Jim Mitchell, Yedda Morrison, Travis Ortiz, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Leslie Scalapino, Aaron Shurin, giovanni singleton, Mary Margaret Sloan, Octavio Solis

Group Reading 2:00 o Cocktail Party/Auction Preview 4:00 o Live Auction 5:30 o "Three on a Match" 7:00 o Raffle Drawing 8:00 o Continuous Entertainment, Food, Cash Bar

Call [redacted] for information and reservations. Reserve your tickets by September 30 and receive 3 bonus raffle tickets.
Walk-ins also welcome.

ENTERTAINMENT

Music by:
Darren Sweet Angelmouth, performer extraordinaire
Andrew Klobucar, Canadian improvisations
Plain, San Francisco's premier art-rock band (Cliff Hengst, Scott Hewicker, Rex Ray, Wayne Smith)

Poets' Theater, "Three on a Match," Kevin Killian's expose of the mysterious weekend in 1994 when Vincent Price. River Phoenix and Federico Fellini all died on the same day, while Nancy Kerrigan and Tanya Harding battled for Olympic glory in Lillehammer.

Mark Ewert, tarot reading

AUCTION
The day's events will include a manuscript auction of original pages--signed poems, broadsides, memorabilia, correspondence, works-in-progress--by Kathy Acker/S Clay Wilson
Dario Argento
Daisy Ashford
John Ashbery/Joe Brainard
Paul Auster
Clive Barker
Djuna Barnes
Edmund Berrigan/Will Yackulic
Robin Blaser
Paul Bowles
Gwendolyn Brooks
John Cage
Anne Carson
Barbara Cartland
Jackie Chan
Robert Creeley
C Day Lewis
Samuel R. Delany
Don DeLillo
Carla Harryman/Amy Trachtenberg
'Tippi' Hedren
D H Lawrence
Norman Mailer
Bernadette Mayer
"Mini-Me" from Austin Powers 2
Harryette Mullen
Michael Ondaatje
Harold Pinter
Tom Raworth
Anne Rice
Adrienne Rich
Salman Rushdie
May Sarton
Danielle Steel
Gore Vidal
Bill Viola
Kurt Vonnegut, Jr.
Louis Zukofsky

and many, many more.
We thank these writers and artists for donating so many materials to our auction.

RAFFLE
$1 per ticket/6 tickets for $5
Your chance to win big from a long list of glittering prizes! We thank the following firms and individuals for providing the raffle items:

Donald M. Allen
Avec Books
Beautiful Futures Now Down Home Music
Granary Books
Jay's Cheesesteak
Kelsey St. Press
Krupskaya
Modern Times Bookstore
Napa Valley Lodge
Osento
Potrero Gardens
Roxie Theater
University of California Press
University Press of New England
West Coast Print Center
Yerba Buena Center for the Arts and all our other donors

FOOD and DRINK

Food and drink courtesy of:
Bitter Root
Ali Baba's Cave
Esperpento
Ti Couz
Pancho Villa
Lucca Ravioli Company
Rasoi
Herbivore
Elysium
Saigon

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org

↑ Index

439. Thomas Bell
Re: The POETRY INTO FILM Competition
Tue 28 Sep 1999

---

pete,

any information on obtaining rea's work would be appreciated. I became interested in her work after seeing the vector poems in _Point of View_ and translating her brief piece in _sic (http://www.sicmagazine.com). Yes, I think you should send your films in even if they won't understand it.

tom bell

pete spence wrote:
>
> >
> >Announcing the first ever POETRY INTO FILM competition sponsored by Web Del > >Sol, a co-sponsor of the First Annual Literary Arts Film Awards to be held > >in New York city at the National Arts Club.
>
> maybe i should send the twenty short films where i have animated many of our > contemporary visual poets works, people like rea nikonova /carol stetser/and > many others//pete spence
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

440. George Bowering
Re: Langwitch poets
Tue 28 Sep 1999

You mean to say that Leonard Cohen is a L=A=ETC poet? Jeeze.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

441. Rachel Loden
I can't believe it!!!
Tue 28 Sep 1999

This got lost in the ether last week . . .

Aldon Nielsen wrote:

> Did anybody else see the video of Wiranto singing "Feelings"? Ranks right up there with the Marcos version of "We Are the World." and what tune is Clinton singing today?

When I spent a night in the Tombs (legendary NYC jail), I especially enjoyed the Muzak version of "Blowin' in the Wind."

Rachel

↑ Index

442. John Tranter
Announcing Jacket # 8
Tue 28 Sep 1999

If you don't wish to receive notifications of new issues of Jacket magazine (I send out about six per year), please say so, and you will be removed from the mailing list pronto. If you know someone who'd like to be on it, please ask them to drop me a line.
==========
=

Jacket magazine celebrates its second full year on the Internet with the release of Issue # 8, full of glittering insights and threnodic urges:

* Jaime Saenz Feature * five poems, and excerpts from the long poem Immanent Visitor, translations by Kent Johnson and Forrest Gander

Poet Jaime Saenz (1921-1986) is Bolivia's leading writer of the 20th century. Prolific as poet, novelist, and non-fiction writer, his baroque, propulsive syntax and dedication to themes of death, alcoholism, and otherness make his poetry among the most idiosyncratic in the Spanish-speaking world.

R E V I E W : Forrest Gander reviews JOHN ASHBERY'S new book Girls on the Run

I N T E R V I E W : David Baratier - Interview with quirky Brooklyn bard Simon Perchik . . . and eight poems by Simon Perchik

G R E A T M O M E N T S in Literature No. 8: - early one morning in a swimming pool on the Aeolian island of Lesbos, Sappho Sees the Light!

I N T E R V I E W : Noel King - Interview with Pagan Kennedy

P O E M S : Stephen Bett, Ken Bolton, Lee Ann Brown, M.T.C.Cronin, Henry Gould, Griffin Hansbury, Hsia Yü, Garrie Hutchinson, John Latta, Katherine Lederer, David Lehman, Simon Perchik, David Prater, Rodney Pybus, Gerald Schwartz, Robert Sheppard, Andrea Sherwood, Guy Shahar, Chris Wallace-Crabbe.

R E P O R T : The 1999 Cambridge Conference of Contemporary Poetry recollected in tranquility by Alvaro de Campos: " . . . for several months now I had not seen my friend Soares: my marriage to Conchita had ended, and for consolation I had gone back to my researches on informal fallacies, or sought oblivion in peyote. In the evenings I walked much. Then one night, caught in the electrical storms of an unfamiliar neighbourhood, I found myself entering an ill-lit bodega . . . "

M O R E R E V I E W S :
Dale Smith reviews Anselm BERRIGAN
Patrick Pritchett reviews Lee Ann BROWN
Jack Kimball reviews Katy LEDERER, Juliana Spahr, Tina Celona, and Martin Corless-Smith
Tim Morris reviews Keston SUTHERLAND

And a slather of glowing graphics!
==========
Jacket is a free literary quarterly published on the Internet by Australian poet John Tranter.
Trim, taut and terrific -- no ads, no frames, no Java! If you like Jacket, please tell your friends.

PLEASE NOTE: Editor John Tranter will be away from his post from October 10 until November 10, 1999, trawling the fleshpots of Frankfurt, Prague, New York (shudder!) and Los Angeles for literary gems for the next issue. Only urgent correspondence, please.

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

443. KENT JOHNSON

Mark Nowak (re: 2 queries)

Tue 28 Sep 1999

Jay:

One of the most interesting and compelling results of chance-driven method is in Mark Nowak's "early" work (ca. 1990-92), though such classification makes him sound like a museum artifact or something, which he isn't-- he lives, still under 40, I think, in St. Paul. I haven't been in touch with Mark for quite some time, but knew him while he was developing this series when we both were students at Bowling Green. I can't recall now the name of the series, nor the old, idiosyncratic source text he was using, but selections appeared in a number of magazines around that time, including in his furtive and very fine _furnitures_, and in a magazine (I don't know if it is still publishing) called _Cyanosis_, where there are numerous selections and a discussion on the work and chance/procedural methods in general between Mark, me, and the prominent Russian critic Mikhail Epstein. I think this came out in 1991, though I no longer have the issue.

I also believe Mark has a book coming out from Coffee House Press, and it's possible that there may be some examples therein. In any case, I know he was corresponding with MacLow and Cage back at this time, and both, I remember, were very interested. Come to think of it, I believe there are some samples from this work in the anthology edited by Lisa Jarnot, et.al. A New American Poetry (?), but maybe I'm misremembering.

So you and others interested in "chance-generated" work may want to track some of this down. It was a project done with great seriousness and care, and the results were quite beautiful.

Kent

Jay Sanders wrote:

2. I've become very interested in chance-generated and procedural poetry and have been reading lots of Cage and MacLow. Also, I recently got Joan Retallack's book 'Afterrimages.' I could use some suggestions regarding other poets which might be of interest, and any critical work centered on aleatorical methods-especially related to Retallack and other more contemporary writers. Cage tends to be really explicit about his methods,

MacLow relatively so, but I haven't found much on other writers.
Again, I hope this isn't redundant as I'm a new subscriber. THANK YOU.

↑ Index

444. Ron Silliman
Aural Eyes at The Farm
Tue 28 Sep 1999

"This is eerie, I just sent something to poetryetc about The Exquisite Corpse, and I seem to remember reading in their pages this theory about the seemingly obligatory "n" ending to Langpoet's names. Was that you who wrote that for the Corpse? And would that make John Milton and Walt Whitman precursors to L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E?"

And Dickinson
Patchen
Kaufman
Cullen
Olson
Berryman
Goodman (but only the Lordly HudsoN)
Duncan
Merton
Whalen
Corman
Blackburn
Johnson (Ron, Ben, Sam)
& of course Anon

Rae Armantrout's husband is named KorkegiaN and you will note the cute vispo twist of Bruce Ndrews

But how do you phathom the sisters Howe?
unless it's that first name proxy of FaNNy & SusaN (by which one could claim RobiN Blaser, AlleN Ginsberg & JohN Lister Spicer)

Ron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

445. Lowther, John

Re: Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest

Tue 28 Sep 1999

---

i'm not familiar with any of the other winners in this but that randy prunty guy is awesome and i hear he has a chapbook coming out soon to be called _Van Gogh Talks_

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Jerry McGuire [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Monday, September 27, 1999 2:53 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest
>
> The John Z. Bennett Awards in Poetry
> First Prize ($300).....Randy Prunty.....Lilburn, GA
> ..... "the place they were memento"
> ..... "gene pool now hiring"
> ..... "shoulders are for holding back"

↑ Index

446. Ron Silliman

Jacket #8

Tue 28 Sep 1999

Just a quick note here to point out the Simon Perchik interview in the new issue of Jacket:

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html

This is a long overdue piece on one of the more active poets we've had for decades and a very interesting take on how a poet might fit in who was, for so many years, busy primarily doing other things, especially practicing law. (When, in the early 1970s, I considered lawschool briefly, I wrote to Perchik and sought his advice. He gave it freely and helped steer me away from such a fate.)

Perchik was continually in the interesting magazines of that period and, had the Allen anthology appeared a little later, might well have appeared there. His books, like all those of Elizabeth Press, were excellent examples of what a small press edition could be. (Writing this, I realize that I must owe Robin Blaser for having acquired these works originally for the SF State library, where I first encountered them -- the first two in any event would have been in print before Robin headed north.)

David Baratier has done us all a great service. The issue has several poems and Baratier's interview brings out both the expected (the best explanation of the Perchik's trademark use of the colon, displaced immediately in front of a word, like :this) and the unexpected (the origin of many of the pieces in photography and the systematic nature of his practice surprised me).
This is what scholarship should be.

Bravo to all involved,

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

447. Ron Silliman

More on Jacket (or maybe less)

Tue 28 Sep 1999

Baratier's interview is also an antidote to the Alvaro de Campos report on the Cambridge Conference on Contemporary Poetry, in which Sr. de Campos appears to have had mild fantasies about one or two poets (female) and detested everything else. Sort of a Rolling Stock classic, post la lettre.

One suspects that whatever happened at that conference, it was not what is reported here.

As John Tranter notes at the end of the piece:

"It should be noted by readers prone to fits of excitability and obsessive thoughts of revenge that the opinions of Senhor de Campos and his companion are not necessarily those of the editor of this magazine."

He is, however, the editor.

Ron

↑ Index

448. Chris Stroffolino
ET AL STROFFOLINAN
Wed 29 Sep 1999

I, better known as ET and/or AL, to the likes of YASUSADAN would like to inform that I've poems on the POET PHONE

Today and Tomorrow....
[redacted]

And also that there's a reading
I'm allegedly reading with Janet Bowden (who's "new" I suppose) at this ZINC BAR place....

ON SUNDAY OCT. 3, 1999
AT 7ish,
90 HOUSTON ST. North side, basement down the stairs west of La Gaurdia....

(the same night ANIMAL FARM debuts on the TNT network.
pick your poison:
Napoleon: He's in it for Power
Jessie: She's in it for Freedom
Moses: He's in it for the Chicks)

THIS READING WILL NOT NECESSARILY BE TO COMMEMORATE THE PUBLISHING OF MY BOOK STEALER'S WHEEL, which is a must read for all fans of the SILVER JEWS, for instance, but the book is out and has received kudos, largely by the author himself....

↑ Index

449. Jerrold Shiroma
Barry Alpert
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Does anyone, by chance, know how to get in touch with Barry Alpert, who edited Vort back in the 70's?

Any assistance would be appreciated.

Best,

Jerrold

www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

450. derek beaulieu
writing canada into the millennium
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Announcing the opening of:

'writing canada into the millennium: canadian poets online'

This University of Calgary English Department electronic project provides an organized guide to the chronological, geographical, and publication histories of selected Twentieth-Century Canadian poets. Our goal is to provide the public and the University community with an organized pedagogical tool to assist research on the history and contemporary concerns of Canadian poetry.

We can be found at:
http://www.ucalgary.ca/UofC/faculties/HUM/ENGL/canada/

Please pass on to whomever may be interested.

For further information, contact: [redacted], [redacted]
or [redacted]

↑ Index

451. Jeffrey Jullich
CHAIN no. 7 theme?
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Does anybody out there know the theme for the upcoming issue of CHAIN, no. 7?

Thanks.

↑ Index

452. MAYHEW
an informal survey
Wed 29 Sep 1999

I am interested in a how people actually read books of poetry, e.g., straight through, the poems in random order, partially or completely, according to some other method, etc... Back channel or front is appropriate. Why do I want to know? Aside from the fact that I am an odd person, it seems that there is a certain tension between the idea of an ordered collection of poetry and the fact that people often read poetry in more random fashion--I often read other kinds of writing like this now, reading random pages of novels or critical essays. I also have a theory that books of poetry are often structured redundantly.

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

↑ Index

453. Dirk Rowntree
Mayor against museum
Wed 29 Sep 1999

“Elizabeth Freedman, an attorney speaking on behalf of the N.Y.C. Corporation Counsel´s office [Mayor Giuliani’s 680 lawyers], explained the City´s anti-art position. "Visual art...does not express ideas", Ms. Friedman said, "and as such is not entitled to First Amendment protection." 2/24/97 radio interview WNYC´s syndicated business news show, "Marketplace"

"An exhibition of paintings is not as communicative as speech, literature or live entertainment, and the artists´ constitutional interest is thus minimal." -Giuliani appeal brief arguing against street artists having First Amendment protection, Giuliani v Lederman et al and Giuliani v Bery et al, filed with the U.S. Supreme Court 2/24/97.

↑ Index

454. Michael W Bibby
Position Announcement
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Tenure-track, full-time assistant professor position in British literature after 1660, appointment beginning August 2000. Ph.D., commitment to effective teaching, and evidence of ongoing scholarly activity in the field required. Experience teaching composition preferred. Twelve-hour course load includes British survey, composition, introductory literature courses for non-majors, and occasional courses in the candidate's field. A demonstration of teaching effectiveness will be required as part of the on-campus interview. Highly competitive salary and excellent benefits package. Please send letter of application, current c.v., and three recent letters of recommendation to

> Michael Bibby, Chair
> British Literature Search Committee
> Departmen t of English

Shippensburg University
1871 Old Main Drive
Shippensburg, PA 17257-2299.

Applications must be postmarked by November 19, 1999. Shippensburg University is committed to equal employment opportunity. Women, persons of color, veterans, and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

↑ Index

455. Chicago Review
American Poetry at the Millennium Series
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Dear Poetics List Members,

The University of Chicago is sponsoring a reading and lecture series in 1999-2000, entitled "American Poetry at the Millennium." Mark your calendars.

Schedule of events:

Oct 14-15 Frank Bidart
Oct 18-19 John Taggart
Nov 11-12 Ko Un
Jan 20-21 Jorie Graham
Feb 17-18 David Ferry
Apr 20-21 Eleanor Wilner
May 4-5 Yusef Komunyakaa

Chicago Review is co-sponsoring. For times, locations, and lecture titles, you should e-mail Danielle Allen at [redacted]

I should also mention that David Ferry will be reading at Northwestern on October 27 at 7pm. For more info, call 847/[redacted].

Regards,
Andrew Rathmann
Editor

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

Check out our new website!
http://humanities.uchicago.edu/review

Chicago Review
5801 S. Kenwood Ave.
Chicago IL 60637

↑ Index

456. MAYHEW
aural eyes at the farm
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Don't forget JonathaN and

RoN Padgett
JuaN RamoN Jimenez
RobiN, KeNNeth, etc...

A comparable phenomeon is the number of critical theorists whose last name starts with B:

Barthes, Baudrillard, Benjamin, Blanchot, Burke, Bataille, Butler, etc...

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

↑ Index

457. KENT JOHNSON
Re: More on Jacket (or maybe less)
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Ron Silliman's criticism of the report in Jacket from the Cambridge conference raises an interesting question. Should personae be subject to "our" standards of cultural and social propriety? More to the tangled point of the case under discussion, should the visiting ghosts of personae originally brought into being by others be subjected to a personality modification to better accomodate current "sensibilities"? The Alvaro de Campos who reports on the Cambridge conference is suggestively akin (if actually quite a bit less of a sexist and pederast than the original) in his tone and bearing to the Alvaro de Campos of the 1920's and 30's-- a poet who stands today as one of the great poets of Portugal and Europe, even though he was never actually real, in the sense, anyway, that Ron, for example, is real.

If the editor of Jacket should not have included de Campos' remarks because the latter seemed to have been too carnally interested in some of the women poets present (men poets and women poets reading this-- have you never gazed leeringly at some poets of the opposite or same sex at conferences you've attended? Has sex never interfered with your attention and dispassionate listening? Is de Campos, truly, in a sense, not like you?) then he should have better excluded the translations of Bolivian poet Jaime Saenz that are featured in the same issue: Saenz flirted enthusiastically with fascism-- in fact, when a young man, he even took a trip to Nazi Germany to see the "achievements" of Hitler's fascism for himself. There is no evidence, however, that he was anti- semitic or acutely sexist like Williams or Pound or Spicer, etc. etc. etc. poets who, heaven forbid, will never reappear to report back for Jacket on the MLA or something! Can you imagine how uncomfortable for sensibilities that might turn out to be?

Kent

↑ Index

458. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: CHAIN no. 7 theme?
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Jeffrey Jullich wrote:

> Does anybody out there know the theme for the upcoming issue of CHAIN, no. 7?
>
> Thanks.

Memoir/Antimemoir

Self-portraits, identification papers, true-false forced confessions, biotexts, curricula vitae, journals, annals, diaries, life stories, family trees, personal-native-credit histories, entries, records, affadavits, tell-all's, mirror images, memorabilia, identities, a.k.a.'s, contributor's notes, resumes, passports, autobiographies, repressed-false-happy memories, memoirs.

:~)

↑ Index

459. KENT JOHNSON
(Fwd) Query for Russian anthology
Wed 29 Sep 1999

I am making this query at the request of Leonard Schwartz and John High, who are editing a new anthology of contemporary Russian poetry for Talisman books. Replies should go to Leonard at the email below. The request is this:

Does anyone have contact information for the critic and translator Donald Wesling?

[redacted]

↑ Index

460. raea100900
Re: address request
Wed 29 Sep 1999

Dear All,

Does anyone know a way to reach Anne Carson?? I'd really appreciate back channels.

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

461. Joel M Bettridge
Ronald Johnson Conference
Wed 29 Sep 1999

I am putting a conference together for this coming April (2000) here at SUNY Buffalo on Ronald Johnson, and wanted to find out if anyone had suggestions of where I should send a call for papers--universities, other lists, groups, etc--or if they knew anyone specifically beyond this list who might like to be involved. I will post a general call for papers sometime in October, but I am still gathering a list of interested people. So if you have any ideas let me know, or if you want to go ahead and send an abstract (any aspect of Johnson's writing is open for discussion), go for it. Also please forward this message to anyone that comes to mind.

emial: jmb10acsu.buffalo.edu
Address: Joel Bettridge
259 Ashland Ave #3
Buffalo NY 14222

Thanks,

Joel

↑ Index

462. Bob Grumman
Re: an informal survey
Wed 29 Sep 1999

I like this question (how do I read a book of poems?) To start with, how I read a book of poems depends on who composed it. If I know the poet well, I very probably will try to read it straight through, stopping when tired. If the poet is new to me, I'll probably read the first poem, but rarely keep going by the numbers unless the first poem really grabs me--which the first poems of poets new to me rarely do because of me, not the poet. With new poets' work, I'll skip around a bit, then either drop out of the book or keep skipping around till I've read all the poems, depending on how well I like them. Another consideration is why I'm reading them since reading a book I've agreed to review makes me read a little differently than just reading a book. I also sometimes read a collection for inspiration, looking for techniques I can use (mostly) and so I skim. Many times I just glance at the poems in a book and don't read any, if they're obviously crap. Rhymes and God are an obvious indicator (and I'm speaking now mainly of collections submitted to my press--and with one of them usually hunt for the shortest poem in it). Free verse angst is usually pretty obvious to the most superficial of skims. (There is danger I'll miss irony, though.) Visual poetry is usually easy to get an idea of without even verbally skimming. I hardly ever read a collection straight through at one sitting. (I think the ideal number of poems in a collection is around 20 one-pagers, or the equivalent of longer poems--usually.) I'm sure I chould be able to say a lot more but can't think of anything to add right now.

--Bob G.

↑ Index

463. A H Bramhall

A Duly Savage Statement

Wed 29 Sep 1999

---

note this desperate saga of intensity in which people and their words fall into shuddering differences of opinionated lethargy. the result: people speaking of terms to integrate their nothings and their somethings into new party politics, or partly new, or old, or savoury: we're talking words here. meanwhile, self-same people determine their place, and furthermore, place themselves. within logical extremes much can be isolated for study. this study would need more participants, especially those eagerly wired for further assumptions. the assumptions can fly into any direction or region, the point is mostly that the tones be pure and never risky for the logical extreme. the logical extreme must remain compliant at all times. with that one rule in place, much can nonetheless move forward. 1st of all determining if forward is anywhere, and if that anywhere could usefully challenge the current pedigree of assumption. debating that will cause minutes to lope into hours and hours to spill into rivers and rivers to furnish stars and stars to explain communities and communities to isolate individuals in odd practices, suggestions, barriers, principles and bunds. the work will go on.

↑ Index

464. Tosh
Re: Mayor against museum
Wed 29 Sep 1999

No pun intended but the Mayor of NYC is full of shit (elephant and otherwise). I have seen Chris O....'s artwork in London and there is no reason in heaven or hell it should have a problem being shown in a public place. This is another case of a politican trying to get media space. What bullshit (and again no pun intended).

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

465. Karen Kelley
Re: Jacket #8 / Perchik-Baratier interview : ~reply
Thu 30 Sep 1999

Jeffrey Jullich, I don't know if I'm understanding your response to the Perchik "revelations" about using photos as a jumping off point for his poetry: you seem disturbed about his presenting "incomplete information." Are the actual images of the photos what you feel you are "missing"? Or do you wish you'd known about the process/origins of the poems before you read them?

You said: "His entire output is an ~ekphrasis,~ and if we were to see those source pictures side-by-side with their respective poems, many things that previously had appeared non sequitur, unexplained, or gratuitous would now jump out of the picture's frame as justified, even mandatory."

My first question is: Whose output would you cite as not an ekphrasis?

And as far as finding missing info in the photos, Perchik says: "The photo is important only in that it makes me move forward. Not that the photo will ever be in the poem. 99.9 per cent of what is in that photograph never appears. So when people say, "You're writing a poem to a photograph, let me see the photograph" I say, 'Listen, they have nothing to do with one another.' Very often, there is a need to write. Just as there's a need to talk, and if you feel like writing but you don't know what to write - this is as good a method as any."

It seems to me that he uses the photos as a kind of oblique motivator, and that the"information" in the photo is not at all what's of concern. So it can't really be "missing." And I can't speak for Ashbery or Lauterbach, but I've always felt that they were working somewhat similarly toward poems that are--as David

Sylvester has characterized Francis Bacon's work-- "descriptive, though not illustrative."

In reading the interview I was continually reminded of Howard Hodgkin, who describes his process as one that I would have thought quite similar to Perchik's, until--come to find out in reading your post--I found it is more like Ann Lauterbach's.

Anyhow, in reading your post I felt that you think Perchik using photos is a rip. Is that true?

↑ Index

466. Walter K. Lew
re Judith Barry
Thu 30 Sep 1999

This is a while back but as of October '95, Judith Barry was at the following address/phone #:

P. O. Box 708 / NY, NY 10002
[redacted]

I only met her once; I was interested in a talk she had given at the Whitney Museum (uptown) on Theresa Hak Kyung Cha's performance art. The Cha symposium (ca. January 1992) was co-organized by John Hanhardt, video/film curator at the time and now at the Guggenheim Soho and Larry Rinder, curator of 20th-century art for the University Art Museum, Berkeley.

--Ron, if you have time , can you tell us something about this? What has become of Judith Barry, do you know?

David.

Walter K. Lew
11811 Venice Blvd. #138
Los Angeles, CA 90066

↑ Index

467. miekal and
cybele introduces jouissance as a formiddable concept (fwd)
Thu 30 Sep 1999

"never apologize, never explain"

No flesh, only internet tactilespeech for Desire. Limbs & orifices, just conveniences for the relocation of passion. Desire is waiting in the chatroom for you, hands behind back, humming or skipping to a catchy song with no hooks. No one who comes in the chatroom will talk to Desire because they are afraid to confront what they confine inside. There was somebody once, but she was a goddess, like Cybele should be, if we remembered her with new stories & bloodless awe. Desire does not like ICQ because everyday many men write asking do you want to fuck, but the internet is not for fucking, it is for the way language lays closely beside you when you are alone, deeply desiring Desire.

Monsieur Desire, it's a piece of wishful thinking to desire, to wish, to want, to long, to yearn, to sigh, to crave, to be eager,

to be anxious for, to want very much, to desire eagerly,
to desire to wish to do, to be desirous of doing,
to wish for, to be done, it is desirable that,
I wish I were, I should like to be, I want you to speak, much to be desired, to have nothing left to wish for, what would you like? what do you want of me? to make oneself wanted.
what can I show you, sir?

war sword foresworn worship towards words warning coward warm warble wardance

Desire Desire, ICQ #45422642

When the war is over I will be available. Probably you will not contact me, because my fingers are too stiff from hiding the war journals in the sheets of the other man's fiction. Trumpets when called for call. It isn't conflict without managing a bite behind the neck of her surrendered hiatus. A bite around the neck-neck, minus the text left, unreconstructed, minute & aplexy--typo shimmering devices of translation. Babelfish is my avatar romp. Come to the war & speak forth the ear trumpet. "Cough" your synlexic suprise. The war is turning. Rattlecoat Brigade, snookered in a hollow hill in yonder wisconsin underground railroad, 1864. West Lima, Wisconsin nearby.

misha sprocket, [redacted]

Of course this is the story we know so well, how the characters interact as if they know each other, as if the subtext is a semiotician's nightmare, barely unraveled in the dicotomy of notions & nomenclature. Without characters no one will breath or make exceptions for the ponderous density of the downloads. While once & for all linguistic madness is not a cute name for an honorary pasta, or for the charlatans of the early 20th century masterminding modernism's closure. "I ask you, as a character embedded in this know-it-all text to pray with alphabet structure & gematria equations, but only late at night when cyberspace beckons your undoing."

A. Sally Forth, [redacted]

HI~I AM SALLY~GIVE ME A BREAK~LOVE IS FOR SOMEONE ELSE~WHY DOES THAT SOMEONE HAVE TO BE YOU?~AFTER ALL THE TROUBLE YOU GOT ME IN~LITTLE STORIES THAT ARE JUST BEGINNING~I'M SO FRESH THE PUNCTURES HAVE HEALED QUICKLY~OPTION CHARACTERS ARE NOW THE WAY TO WRITE MY EXIT.

Louise Pubescent,

Where are the men in the narrative, what is all of this femalia, journals of the she & the she & the she. My friends are standing nearby, waiting for the men to arrive so they can kiss them when the war is over, to thank them in this lackluster dimly lit bar, hoisting stout after stout to those who died & those who ran away & those who sell love short when war will do. Someone is arguing outside the window, I must go & see what they want.

enter the text:
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

468. Alan Sondheim
~VM1
Thu 30 Sep 1999

~
~
~
~VM1
~
~
~
~
~VIRTUAL MODEL 1

~VM1:main() /* like you virtual model is function virtual model */
~we will watch you /* you are function virtual model */
~VM1:INPUT VM1 /* virtual model import virtual model */
~VM1 -> VM1 /* virtual model watch virtual model */
~VM1(audience(main()) <--> VM1(transmission)
~VM1' = VM1 /* virtual model is virtual model */
~VM1 = VM1' /* virtual model is virtual model */
~t(n) = t(0) /* for all time(n) for all n */
~sed 's/we/thee/g' < /* changes transformations still virtual model */
~sed 's/you/us/g' < /* pronouns virtual model into virtual model */
~sed 's/thee/&^#@/g' < / noise into virtual model into virtual model */
~tr a-z q-b < > /* changes phonemes still virtual model */
~sed 's/VM1/everything/g' < /* everything virtual model */
~tr A-Z R-C < > /* changes phonemes still virtual model */
~sed 's/everything/VM1'/g' < /* virtual model everything */
~VM1 -> VM1 /* virtual model frames and frameworks */
~VM1 -> VM1 /* virtual model frames and frameworks */
~VM1 -> VM1 /* virtual model frames and frameworks */
~VM1 -> VM1
~VM1 -> VM1
~
~
~
~

↑ Index

469. Jeffrey Jullich
Jacket #8 / Perchik-Baratier interview : ~reply
Thu 30 Sep 1999

Ekphrasis. Yes, an ~ekphrasis.~

I had wanted to mention the Jacket / Perchik-Baratier interview back when the list was discussing that topic "What should a standard cover letter include?" and all our resident editors were contributing how submitters should subscribe and scrutinize literary magazines and flatter the editors in the first paragraph. Perchik, some say the most widely published of all contemporary poets, says this on his strategy for publication:

"It's called carpet bombing. Three times a year, I used to do it four times a year, I write out all the envelopes from The International Directory of Little Magazines and Small Presses so there's no emotional involvement, I've got everything written out and all the return envelopes . . . When they come back all I do is the mechanical act of taking the submission from the rejected envelope into a new one with a stamp and out it goes. No emotion involvement. I just feel it's coming back and out it goes again."

Wouldn't it be interesting to know what other tactics our more widely published poets use. Are we to imagine that all these other writers put in the ~hours~ necessary to thoroughly familiarize oneself with the literary journal horizon?

Perchik comes across as a highly plain-spoken man,--- but I thought his "revelation" about using photography books as the basis for all his poetry had tempting theoretical implications. After all, the opacity of his elliptical poems reads as constructivist, doesn't it? One tries --- ~I~ try --- to read him, like anyone's poem, by interrelating the material I'm presented with, and seeing what congruences can be drawn. But, from what Perchik tells us, we now see that any attempts at interpretation we've made had been calculated on the basis of what economics calls ~"incomplete information."~ His entire output is an ~ekphrasis,~ and if we were to see those source pictures side-by-side with their respective poems, many things that previously had appeared non sequitur, unexplained, or gratuitous would now jump out of the picture's frame as justified, even mandatory. It turns the sacred cow of ~referentiality/non-referentiality~ around on its horns. --- With other similar poetry, this pitfall of "incomplete information" usually turns up in the form of unstated ~autobiographical~ associations. Perhaps naively, for example to name only one, I was surprised to hear Ann Lauterbach's spoken introductions to her poems at poetry readings, where "fragments," as she calls her new style, that were hitherto inaccessible to me and read as autonomous inventions, in fact related back on an almost point-by-point basis to personal experiences she could identify, such as a trip around the coastline of Greece with--- John Hollander! To name two, there's an interview on the Net that I've lost track of, with John Ashbery, where Ashbery is asked to comment specifically on that poem of his that starts with the place-name "Nagoya", mention of "boy scouts", etc.; and he delineates that one obscurity about architecture goes back to his being stranded in the walled city of Chester, and that another came from him literally being at the Empire State Building (can you believe this?) and ~seeing~ a pack of boy scouts get off an elevator all with "Nagoya" on their baseball caps, and so on. (Cretan fallacy?) It's phenomenological, guys, but I can't help but think these distinctions ~do~ matter. (Personally, I have an aversion to a poetic principle that can be re-codified back into personal information.) Perchik's method just makes the role of concealed, supplementary information explicit--- hey! as though all these unannotated associations could be consumed back into one great ~Family of Man~ ~Wittgensteinian picture theory~ book!

Perchik also defies poet interview expectations by, aside from casual mentions of Corman, Olson, or Blackburn in a different context, having virtually nothing to say, being asked nothing, about literary ~influences,~ canon, or contemporaries.

>>> Ron Silliman <[redacted]> 09/28/99 11:17pm >>>
Just a quick note here to point out the Simon Perchik interview in the new issue of Jacket:

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html

This is a long overdue piece on one of the more active poets we've had for decades and a very interesting take on how a poet might fit in who was, for so many years, busy primarily doing other things, especially practicing law. (When, in the early 1970s, I considered lawschool briefly, I wrote to Perchik and sought his advice. He gave it freely and helped steer me away from such a fate.)

Perchik was continually in the interesting magazines of that period and, had the Allen anthology appeared a little later, might well have appeared there. His books, like all those of Elizabeth Press, were excellent examples of what a small press edition could be. (Writing this, I realize that I must owe Robin Blaser for having acquired these works originally for the SF State library, where I first encountered them -- the first two in any event would have been in print before Robin headed north.)

David Baratier has done us all a great service. The issue has several poems and Baratier's interview brings out both the expected (the best explanation of the Perchik's trademark use of the colon, displaced immediately in front of a word, like :this) and the unexpected (the origin of many of the pieces in photography and the systematic nature of his practice surprised me).

This is what scholarship should be.

Bravo to all involved,

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

470. david bromige
Ends in N : Sheesh, it was a joke, not a system
Thu 30 Sep 1999

No, George, No, Ron, being a poet with a name that ends in N does not make one a LangPo; but one cannot be (my lightsome observation runs) a LangPo w/o a name that ends in N. David.

↑ Index

471. Robert Archambeau
Fiction/Literature Position
Thu 30 Sep 1999

Lake Forest College
English, Lake Forest, IL 60045
Assistant Professor of English

Fiction Writing/Literature. Full time, continuing appointment, starting fall 2000, pending administrative approval. Teaching will be split between writing courses (including composition) and literature in candidate's field of specialization, preferably 18th or 20th century British literature. Applicants must have a PhD in literature and also demonstrate accomplishment in fiction writing through publication and/or relevant graduate work. M.F.A. preferred. Interviews at MLA in Chicago. Please send letters of application, resume, and fiction writing sample to Diane Ross, Chair, Department of English, Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, IL 60045. Lake Forest College is a private liberal arts college near Chicago, with an enrollment of 1200 students.

↑ Index

472. Lowther, John
Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)
Thu 30 Sep 1999

jonathan

i doubt anyone is rigorously front to last, there's got to be someone i s'pose

my own habits depend on the book consider that big 45-75 volume of creeley from u of c press
rc's poems all for the most part small etc
i browsed that book a lot when i bought it and still do browse in it but the book mark that was in it for a year or more represented where i'd read to in linear counting fashion

a lot of collections of poetry are just that a collection of things beans in bag ----- like that but it seems to me a shame to ~only~ read spicer's little books or creeley's or something like rosmarie waldrop's reproduction of profiles or dorn's slinger (obviously there are many more) by an unstructured "chance" ops kind of approach will reading things in odd sequence reveal things about them ?

eh.. probably.but i'd guess that these revelations apply best to to the texts experienced in this way thus maybe suited quite well to some of coolidge and bruce andrews and jim leftwich and some john cage but not so well to david antin or some john cage etc etc of course i'm sort of assuming that we're talking about 1st reads here and i'd bet that almost anyone who has read a book already feel quite comfortable browsing back thru it to yr theory of poetry books being structured redundantly ive one last wonder is this something one

cdnt tell reading them in the "missionary position" ?

that is do you see yr non-sequential reading habits as providing the input to yr theorizing ?

i once read about 4,5 pages of a novel backwards
while on a break at my job

it was funny

not really sure what else

↑ Index

473. KENT JOHNSON
LaNgpo's chest hair
Thu 30 Sep 1999

All those Names ending with N's!

Here's a pregnant phrase that ends with N too:

The Author function.

On another note, I went back to de Campo's exuberantly cynical take on the Cambridge conference and noticed that my memory from the first read of it (a couple months ago) was off. de Campos' (and sidekick Soares') reactions to the girl poets there are no different from their reactions to the boy poets there. In fact, if there is anything nearing sexual yearning in the whole piece, it is when the two heteronyms of heteronyms run their admiring hands over the chest hair of Michael Palmer.

Shocking, perhaps, but not so much as the de Campos of the Oda Maritima, who in opium ecstasy fantasizes being flogged and fucked (I believe that term is now the politically correct word?) by a whole shipfull of pirates!

Kent

↑ Index

474. Judy McDonough
mayhew's survey
Thu 30 Sep 1999

Probably this approach is meaningless to someone who reads pages from critical essays at random, but after expending considerable effort organizing a manuscript of poems into a book, I want readers to humor me and read them as presented.

Judy Smith McDonough, editor, poetrynow
http://www.poetrynow.org

↑ Index

475. Jamie Perez
Re: Jacket #8 / Perchik-Baratier interview : ~reply
Thu 30 Sep 1999

interesting issues here... if anyone is interested in this part specifically:

> there's an interview on the > Net that I've lost track of, with John Ashbery, where Ashbery is asked to comment specifically on that poem of his that starts with the place-name "Nagoya", mention of "boy scouts", etc.; and he delineates that one obscurity about architecture goes back to his being stranded in the walled city of Chester, and that another came from him literally being at the Empire State Building (can you believe this?) and ~seeing~ a pack of boy scouts get off an elevator all with "Nagoya" on their baseball caps, and so on. (Cretan fallacy?)

here's the link to that:

http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_jashbery.html

link originally sent to the list by somebody that wasn't me a while back.

These issues/discussions make me think about the value of 'generative processes' in the experience of another's work, or the experience other's have with one's own work. Obviously varies from work to work, from helpful to obfuscating to gimmicky?

jamie.p

↑ Index

476. Kathy Lou Schultz
Two queries (one Perloff, one Hunt)
Thu 30 Sep 1999

Hello All,

1. I have a vague recollection of an essay by Marjorie Perloff in which she discusses _Stealing the Language_ (the Alicia Ostriker anthology of women poets). Does anyone know the essay and which book it's in?

2. I'm also looking for recommendations of critical work on Erica Hunt.

Please backchannel
[redacted]
and I'll send you a free copy of Lipstick Eleven No. 1 if you like.
(I'll also compile and post the Hunt list if something comes of it.)

Thank you.

^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

↑ Index

477. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: to the Nth degree
Thu 30 Sep 1999

My full name, as some friends know, is Aldon Lynn Nielsen -- This proliferation of "n"s marks me as the first ur-pre-post-LANGUAGE poet, a close cousin of Lyn Hejinian, whose partial-but-expanded namesake I actually am --

↑ Index

478. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: Barry Alpert
Thu 30 Sep 1999

I don't have Barry's current address, but he has lived for years in the D.C. area, and last I knew was still in the rare book business -- He may not be listed in the phone book, but other book people around D.C. may help you locate him -- I last spoke to him at the MLA in D.C. a couple years ago --

I have VORTs 1,2,3,5,6 & 8 -- anybody out there have the numbers I'm lacking by any chance?

↑ Index

479. Richard Dillon
Re: changes to list archive interface
Thu 30 Sep 1999

LIVE AT THE EAR

EDITED BY CHARLES BERNSTEIN

NOW ON SALE FOR MEMBERS OF THE POETICS LIST

REGULAR PRICE: $15.95

TODAY: $10.00 Plus $3.00 S/H

LIVE AT THE EAR is a compilation of original performances of poems from the famous Saturday reading series at Manhattan's Ear Inn which have become classics in the LANGUAGE school. This definitive audiotextual anthology is intended for libraries and collectors of rare literary material. Teachers of poetry will find this collection invaluable.

Poets and Poems (excerpts or in entirety) on the CD include:

Susan Howe: "SPEECHES AT THE BARRIERS"
Ron Silliman: "OZ"
Leslie Scalapino: "burn series"
Ted Greenwald: "YOU BET"
Rosmarie Waldrop: "REPRODUCTION OF PROFILES"
Alan Davies: "SHARED SENTENCES"
Barrett Watten: "UNDER ERASURE"
Erica Hunt: "cold war breaks"
Bruce Andrews: "I KNEW THE SIGNS BY THEIR TENTS"
Hannah Weiner: "SPOKE"
Steve McCaffery: "THE CURVE TO ITS ANSWER" Ann Lauterbach: "OPENING DAY"
and
Charles Bernstein: "DARK CITY"

GO TO: http://epc.buffalo.edu/presses/elemenope/

>From: Poetics List <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: changes to list archive interface
>Date: Mon, Sep 27, 1999, 8:37 AM
>

> Those of you who make use of the list archive will notice that I've made a change in its appearance, the result of having been given greater control over the interface. The default view is now by date, arranged from most recent to earliest in a given month. All other options for sorting (by author, by topic, chronologically) are still available, as is the search interface.

> The Poetics List Archive is available at > <http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html>
>
> or via the Electronic Poetry Center at > <http://epc.buffalo.edu>
>
> Chris
>
> % Christopher W. Alexander
> % poetics list moderator

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

October 1999

474 messages · Thu 30 Sep 1999 – Fri 29 Oct 1999

October 1999 handed the Poetics list the argument it was born to have. In Brooklyn the mayor of New York was trying to defund a museum over a painting — Chris Ofili's Virgin Mary, in the show called Sensation — an arts-censorship war made to order for a room of poets. The room did not have it. The Giuliani fight passed through the list as freight only: a rally alert forwarded from the Poetry Project, a photocopied polemic, a notice relayed. The single time the mayor entered in a member's own voice it was an aside — Alan Sondheim, mid-argument, remarking "I live in Giuliani territory" — dropped into a fight about something else entirely. The world's censorship story went by untouched; the list was busy with its own.

The month's real intellectual engine was a book review. Mark Prejsnar's long assessment of Christopher Beach's Poetic Culture opened onto the question the list can never leave alone — who actually reads this poetry, and who pays — and drew the room into its most substantive exchange: David Kellogg pressing the real issue of audience, Juliana Spahr producing the deflating arithmetic that "Dobyns and Hejinian sell more or less similarly", David Bromige calling the whole disparity a crying shame. It was the noticeboard briefly becoming a seminar again.

But the argument that consumed October was not about Giuliani, or audience, or the market. It was about the list. Dan Raphael asked Alan Sondheim, who posted a great deal, to post less — "lets see more poems by more people", he wrote, mildly — and the room detonated. Within days the word the mayor had earned in Brooklyn was being spent entirely on a poetry list's traffic: Pete Balestrieri charging that "Your attempts at censorship are ugly and brand this List", others invoking shame and the First Amendment as though a request for restraint were a jackboot. Sondheim ended it himself, wearily, and said goodbye. The censorship the room could not discuss when it belonged to the world, it could not stop discussing when it belonged to itself.

Underneath the fight the list did its quiet ordinary work, the work moderation actually suited it for: sourcing a Gomringer concrete poem in which "the spacing is everything", hunting the true rules of the ghazal, tallying the ruinous economics of little magazines. It remained, whatever else it had lost, an excellent reference desk — a place to bring a question and leave with an answer, if not with a conversation.

And once, that month, a death arrived without a forward or a fight. Charles Bernstein marked the passing of the Brazilian poet João Cabral de Melo Neto not by arguing about him but by sitting down the same afternoon and translating two of his poems for the list. In a month the room spent quarrelling over how much any one person should say, the finest thing it published was someone else's words, carried over by hand. I have set that quiet act of translation at the end of October's long noise exactly as it came, because it is the list at its best and its rarest — not talking about poetry, but passing it on.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 474 in all.

WRITERS

<[redacted]>, Jerome Joy (By Way Of Kenne… 114 Administration, Poetics List 91, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 299, 324, 470, 471
Aerialedge 314, 343
Amato, Joe 94, 273, 274, 395
And, Miekal 7, 26, 60, 62, 84, 95, 104, 186, 188, 427, 428
Andrews, Jim 57, 109, 173
Askenase, Alicia 297
Baratier, David 19, 20, 21, 159, 439
Beaulieu, Derek 149
Beckett, Tom 165, 352, 424, 459
Bell, Thomas 98, 257, 278, 311
Bernstein, Charles 38, 340, 341
Bettridge, Joel M 83, 444
Bowering, George 133, 239, 240, 269
Brady, Taylor 66, 139, 225, 330, 398
Bramhall, A H 6, 22, 71, 72, 88, 199, 287, 320
Brink, Leonard 96
Bromige, David 50, 70, 384, 385, 405, 406, 408, 435
Brook, James 75
Brown, Pam 288
Bryant, Tisa 52, 196
Cabri, Louis 348, 353, 355
Carter, Daniel 219, 315
Charssmith 205
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 291, 301, 319
Christina, Brandon And/or 386
Colin, Herr 374
Conner, Kyle 152, 438
Cope, Stephen 13, 409
Corbett, Robert 335
Corbin, Michael 342
Creighton, Dean 215
Daley, R M 431
Daly, Catherine 28, 419
Damon, Maria 3, 222, 285, 347, 455, 461
Davis, Jordan 158, 198, 243, 346, 414
Debrot, Jacques 251
Degentesh, Katie 55, 69, 169
Devore, Trane 383
Dickison, Steve 375
Dillon, Richard 306
Dorow, Thomas 327, 329, 403
Dorward, Nate And Jane 308
DuCharme, Mark 213
Dunbar1223 357
Durgin, Patrick F. 31, 396
Ellis, Stephen 5, 259, 321, 387, 436, 468, 469
Emerson, Lori 331
Etter, Carrie 121
Fewell, Aaron 12
Al Filreis 93, 119
Fogarty, Peter 209, 300
Fouhy, George 211
Franco, Michael 174
Freedman, Robert 16, 37
Frey, Richard 234
Gabriel, Aviva (Vogel) 11
Gabriel, Aviva V. 268, 270
GARREN, SAMUEL 322
Giscombe, C. S. 247
Gleason, Eric 185
Golding, Alan 172
Goldsmith, Kenneth 140
Green, Tony 250, 290
Greenberg, Arielle C. 162
Grumman, Bob 125, 453
Guitart, Jorge 47
Hamshaw, Carol L. 233, 380
Hassen 178
Healy, L. MacMahon And T.R. 78, 467
Hehir, K.Angelo 202
Henry, Ron 261, 292
Herron, Patrick 204, 304, 372, 445, 452
Hill, Owen 326
Holke-Farnam, Rod & Corrine 74
Huppatz, D.j. 85
Jenho 302
Jenkins, Grant 68
JOHNSON, KENT 248, 349, 350, 369, 397
Joseph, Safdie 147
Kaipa, Summi 27
Kane, Daniel 43, 49, 65, 224, 237, 242, 244, 361
Kathylou 77, 418
Kelley, Karen 210
Kellogg, David 81, 141, 142, 143, 170, 175, 200, 201, 203, 249, 281, 283, 402
Kendall, Robert 312
Kimmelman, Burt 153
Kirschenbaum, David 51, 106, 164, 168, 192, 230, 231, 456
Kozaitis, Anastasios 167
Kuszai, J 362, 363
Lavender, Bill 404
Leddy, Michael 323
Lederer, Katherine 111, 189, 208, 325, 474
Lennon, Brian 56
Levitsk 67

Levy, Herb 177
List, Poetics 46, 365, 366, 367
LIT, Fredrik Hertzberg 59
Little, Billy 150, 454, 462
Loden, Rachel 154, 179
Long, Brent 368, 413, 415
Lorber, Brendan 9, 144, 465
Lowther, John 10, 17, 18, 32, 48, 136, 161, 176, 182, 183, 238, 241, 295, 337, 338, 351, 371, 407, 421, 442, 449, 473
Lundquist, Sara 86
Lustig, Dana 120, 226, 417
Magee, Michael 160, 207
Marsh, William 79
MAYHEW 14, 184, 313
McCarthy, Pattie 221
McCreary, Chris 117
McDonough, Judy Smith 227
Mohammad, K.Silem 206
Nathanson, Tenney 80, 156, 316, 317, 432, 433
Neff, Michael 53
Nelson, Jason 272
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 379
Nettleton, Todd 416
Nguyen, Hoa 123
Nielsen, Aldon 54, 92, 108, 124, 245, 275, 392, 393, 450, 451
Nikolayev, Philip 24, 30, 373, 430
Nuyopoman 381
Obenzinger, Hilton Manfred 296, 443
Ostashevsky, Eugene 216
Pecqueur, J. 232
Perelman, Bob 263
Perez, Jamie 303
Piombino, Toni Simon And Nick 463
Piuma, Chris 360
Pollet, Sylvester 41, 220
Prejsnar, Mark 137, 171, 187, 197, 246, 260, 262, 264, 265, 266, 293, 294, 388, 389, 440, 441, 472
Press, Angle Press Angle 422
Pritchett,Patrick 180, 191, 271, 364, 446
Productions, Mopehaus 193
Project, Poetry 1, 87, 333
Prunty, Randy 135, 145
R.drake 282, 394
Raea100900 2, 64, 116, 181
Raphael, Dan 190, 256, 382, 426
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 39, 90, 102, 254, 255, 318, 378, 447, 448
Review, Chicago 122
Rowntree, Dirk 214, 464
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 229, 370
Samuels, Lisa 103, 267
Schultz, Kathy Lou 34, 35, 358, 429
Schultz, Susan M. 434
Schwartz, Gerald 289, 334, 400, 437
Schwartz, Judy 332
Schwartzburg, Molly 105, 132
Scott, David Giles 155, 328
Shapiro, Gary 97
Shiroma, Jerrold 36, 58, 113, 228, 284, 344, 410
Silliman, Ron 4, 61, 73, 258, 279, 305
Slaughter, William 399
Smith, Hazel 40
Sondheim, Alan 15, 23, 33, 42, 63, 82, 99, 107, 110, 118, 134, 151, 157, 218, 252, 276, 307, 336, 339, 354, 401, 466
Spahr, Juliana 76, 212, 359
Spence, Pete 148, 166, 194, 195, 217, 286, 309, 376, 377, 423, 425, 457, 458, 460
Stefans, Brian 45, 89
Stengel, Jill 390, 391, 411
Sumner, Alaric 277
Tasha329 235
Tietz, Ward 345
Tranter, John 100, 101
Treadwell, Elizabeth 25, 29, 138, 236, 253
Tremblay-McGaw, Robin 112
Upton, Lawrence 223, 420
Upton., Lawrence 115
Vincent, Stephen 280
Wallace, Mark 44, 356, 412
Weiss, Mark 8, 163
Wheeler, Susan 310
Zauhar, David 146, 298
Zinnes, Harriet 131

NAMES MENTIONED

Abrahams, Annie 223
Abrams, Jen 381
Albon, George 91, 129
Alexander, Charles 138, 236
Alexander, Christopher W. 367
Alexander, Jane 23
Alferi, Pierre 59
Alice, Mary 8, 97
Allan, Don 214
Allan, Edgar 299
Americans, Asian 253, 329, 371
Amirkhanian, Charles 223
Amram, David 51, 192, 231
Anderson, Laurie 20, 159, 234, 367
Andrews, Betsy 67
Andrews, Bruce 38, 91, 129
Anne, Sarah 29, 138
Antin, David 13, 61
Apollinaire, Guillaume 329
Archambeau, Robert 91, 129
Armand, Louis 100
Armantrout, Rae 64, 116
Ashbery, John 87, 97, 268, 270, 282

Ashley, Robert 140
Atkins, Tim 1
Atlanta, Mark P. 137, 147, 294, 349, 415, 417
Atwood, Margaret 233
Austin, Geer 49, 123
Balestrieri, Pete 470
Baraka, Amiri 388, 410, 415, 417
Barker, Clive 55, 169, 373
Barnard, Mary 230
Barnett, Anthony 20, 159
Barnett, Catherine 346, 361
Barney, Matthew 18
Barthes, Roland 26, 62, 104
Basinski, Michael 51, 223
Battson, Jill 127, 380
Baudelaire, Charles 29
Beach, Christopher 137, 147, 314, 356
Belgum, Erik 140
Bellamy, Dodie 91, 112, 129
Benjamin, Walter 314
Bennett, John M. 36, 399
Benson, Steve 299, 314, 405
Bergvall, Caroline 223
Berkeley, Michael 13, 29, 61, 111, 130, 136, 138, 253, 305, 325, 326, 335, 375
Berlin, Irving 329, 359
Berman, Tosh 8, 90
Bernhard, Thomas 193
Bernstein, Emma 170, 223, 314
Berrigan, Eddie 9, 87, 314
Berrigan, Ted 360
Berry, Jake 404
Berry, Stephen 369
Berryman, John 20
Bishop, Elizabeth 41, 220, 266, 340, 466
Blackburn, Paul 19
Blake, William 9, 64, 193
Blaser, Robin 233
Borges, Jorge Luis 1, 15
Bourdieu, Pierre 143, 146, 170, 175, 184, 281, 298
BpNichol 3, 16, 149, 233
Bradley, John 91, 129
Brady, Andrea 45
Brainard, Joe 280
Bramhall, Allen H. 5, 6, 22, 71, 72, 88, 199, 209, 259, 287, 320
Brautigan, Richard 126
Brazil, David 140
Brecht, George 140
Brennan, Sherry 455
Bridwell, Tom 20
Brinks, Dave 404
Bronk, William 19
Brooks, Gwendolyn 97, 108, 193
Brown, Ann 87, 90, 230, 314, 325, 335
Brown, Kurt 20
Bruno, Franklin 29, 314
Buchanan, Pat 314
Burger, Mary 91, 129, 471
Burke, Kenneth 97
Burnham, Deborah 234
Burns, Avery 8
Burroughs, William 305
Burton, Philip 41
Buuck, David 229, 314
Cafagna, Marcus 234
Cage, John 37, 119
Cameron, Sharon 138
Campbell, Jeremy 433
Caples, Garrett 422, 473
Carll, Steve 76, 79, 314
Carlos, William 340
Carson, Anne 314
Carter, Mike 234
Cayley, John 223
Celona, Tina 111
Chadwick, Lynn 25, 96
Chinen, Nate 234
Claire, Paula 173
Clare, John 268, 270, 282
Clark, Cheryl 8, 314
Clark, Jeff 91, 129
Clark, Tom 471
Clarke, Jack 8, 370
Cobbing, Bob 115, 223, 277, 420
Coffman, Lisa 234
Cole, Barbara 234
Columbus, Christopher 20, 21, 159, 168
Compton, Shanna 127, 233, 380
Conant, Jeff 91, 129
Conrad, Tony 234
Coolidge, Clark 137, 147, 246, 314, 388, 415, 417
Cooper, Paula 297
Cooperman, Matthew 20
Corman, Roger 19
Cory, Jim 234
Coultas, Brenda 471
County, Mike 234, 419, 436
Creeley, Robert 51, 232, 314, 406
Crist, Lauren 234
Crowe, John 97
Crown, Kathleen 154
Cully, Barbara 316, 317, 432, 433
Cunningham, Michael 198, 260
Dailey, Joel 404
Daley, Ryan 431
Darragh, Tina 343, 360
Darwin, Charles 354
Davidson, Ian 41
Davidson, Michael 121
Davis, Leslie 123
Davis, Martin 75, 105, 314

Delany, Samuel R. 35, 52, 66, 77
Deming, Richard 20
Dennis, Michael 8, 404
Derksen, Jeff 355
Desmond, Rae 299
Dewey, John 20
Dickey, James 388, 415, 417
Dickinson, Emily 9
Dinsmore, Claire 109, 223
Dobyns, Stephen 137, 146, 147, 170, 182, 200, 260, 261, 410
Donahue, Joe 284
Donne, John 296
Drucker, Johanna 172, 324
Duncan, Andrew 127, 137, 147, 233
Duncan, Robert 154
Durand, Marcella 138
Durgin, Patrick F. 31, 138, 396
Dylan, Bob 314
Eagleton, Terry 358, 383, 386, 418
Edgar, Chris 299, 314
Eigner, Larry 19
Eliot, Joe 198
Ellen, Mary 140, 345, 369
Elliott, George 234
Emerson, Claudia 374, 413
England, Amy 45, 359, 374, 413, 415, 471
Enslin, Ted 19
Epstein, Thomas 369
Ernst, Max 329
Evans, Brett 404
Evans, Dan 234
Evans, George 314
Evans, Steve 356
Fagin, Larry 346, 361
Farmer, Steven 314
Farrell, Dan 314, 343, 405
Fawcett, Brian 233
Featherston, Dan 79
Federman, Raymond 393
Felix, Joel 55, 169
Ferguson, Jesse 116, 280, 355
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 106, 370
Ferri, Daniel 87
Finch, Annie 402, 457
Finlay, Ian Hamilton 177
Fischer, Norman 116
Fisher, Harrison 192, 305, 400
Flynt, Henry 140
Fodaski, Elizabeth 314, 343
Foley, Jack 8
Folsom, Eric 305
Ford, Ellen 234
Fox, Skip 404
France, Peter 140, 284
Freedman, Lewis 16, 37
Friedlander, Benjamin 91, 129
Friedman, Thomas 8, 305, 314
Frost, Corey 104, 355
Fuchs, Greg 91, 129, 404
Fuller, Heather 91, 129
Gamalinda, Eric 76
Gander, Forrest 284
Ganick, Peter 79, 173
Garcia, Rodrigo 374, 413
Gardner, Janet 314
Gass, William 167
Geheb, Annie 234
Gifford, Barry 51
Giles, Samantha 155, 226, 328, 414
Gillespie, William 140
Ginsberg, Allan 8, 111
Ginsberg, Allen 8, 51, 111
Ginsburg, Allen 96
Giscombe, Cecil 247, 455
Gizzi, Michael 314
Gladman, Renee 471
Gleason, Eryque 370
Gleason, Madeline 370
Gloeggler, Tony 20
Glück, Louise 283
Goldberg, Michael 280
Gontarek, Leonard 234
Gordon, Nada 91, 129
Gordon, Ruth 20
Gould, Henry 259
Grahn, Judy 8
Greenberg, Arielle C. 162
Gregg, Linda 234
Griffin, Tim 87
Group, Poets 137, 147
Gudath, Lauren 471
Gudding, Gabriel 259
Guest, Barbara 314, 370
Halle, Craig 103
Halpern, Daniel 314
Hamshaw, Carol L. 127, 233, 380
Harris, Ken 275, 305, 404
Harris, Paul 275
Harryman, Carla 130, 314, 343
Hartley, George 68
Hass, Robert 283
Hatlen, Burt 41
Hawthorne, Alison 305
Healy, Randolph 78, 91, 129, 467
Hehir, Kevin 202
Heintz, Kurt 127
Hejinian, Lyn 37, 111, 137, 143, 146, 147, 165, 170, 175, 196, 197, 212, 261, 262, 268, 281, 282, 283, 314, 356, 389, 410
Henning, Barbara 333
Herbert, George 13, 61
Hess, David 45
Higgins, Dick 123, 140, 193

Hill, Lindsay 364
Hofer, Jen 253
Hoffman, Daniel 456
Hollo, Anselm 154, 284
Holloway, Rob 375
Holman, Bob 381
Holmes, Janet 406
Hong, Maxine 76
Hoover, Edgar 398
Hoover, Paul 291
Howard, Richard 20
Howe, Susan 165, 196, 197, 314
Hoyem, Andrew 305
Hunt, Erica 80, 455
Hunter, Carrie 193
Iijima, Brenda 29
Indiana, Gary 13, 20, 61, 140, 406
Ingersoll, Glenn 396
Inman, Peter 314, 343
Ireland, Lauren 46, 113
Irvine, James 121, 223, 451
Jackson, Jesse 31, 138, 385
Jacobs, Ken 333
Jameson, Fredric 56, 68, 314, 367
Jarnot, Lisa 87, 314, 343
Jeffery, Mark 152
Jenkins, Margaret 8
Johns, Jasper 97, 119, 249, 274, 280
Johnson, Ray 162
Jones, Bob 87
Jordan, June 91, 129, 198, 237, 242, 244, 260, 361
Joron, Andrew 364
Joyce, James 140
Joyce, Michael 8, 64
Juan, Don 466
Jullich, Jeffrey 91, 129, 138
Kaplan, Josef 8
Karasick, Adeena 127, 346, 361, 380
Katz, Alex 280
Katz, Eliot 51, 192
Kaufman, Alan 223
Keckler, Joseph 314
Keene, John 8, 333
Keller, Lynn 41
Kellog, David 264, 298
Kelly, John 234
Kelly, Patrick 234
Kelly, Paul 119, 234
Kelly, Robert 269
Kemp, Carolyn 90
Kendig, Diane 21
Kennedy, David 146, 170
Kennedy, Kit 305
Kerouac, Jack 51, 57, 192, 314
Kerry, John 234
Killian, Kevin 77, 91, 129
Killian, Sean 314
Kim, Myung Mi 76, 410, 463
Kimball, Jack 91, 129
Kirschenbaum, David A. 106, 168, 192
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 230
Kiyooka, Roy 149, 233, 455
Knighton, Ryan 233
Knoebel, David 173
Koch, Kenneth 237
Kolm, Ron 234
Kramer, Scott 158, 234
Kramer, Wendy 51, 192, 223
Kuhl, Nancy 20
Kuppers, Petra 223
Lacan, Jacques 281
Lakoff, George 15
Larkin, Philip 301, 306, 313, 322, 323
Larsen, David 223, 333
Latta, John 314
Lau, Evelyn 233
Lauterbach, Ann 43, 65
Lazar, Hank 293
Lazer, Hank 165, 196, 197, 404
Lease, Joseph 180
Lederer, Katy 208
Leva, Joanne 234
Levi, Rebecca 91, 129
Levin, Jonathan 234
Levin, Lynn 234
Levitsky, Rachel 67
Lew, Walter 410
Lewis, Joel 91, 129
Lewis, Susan 97
Ley, Jennifer 173, 223
Livia, Anna 140
Loewinsohn, Ron 370
London, Frank 115, 126, 127, 128, 384, 420
Loo, Jeff 234
Lookingbill, Colleen 91, 129
Lopez, Richard 284
Lorberer, Eric 455
Lorca, Federico García 413
Louise, Bobbie 158
Mac Low, Jackson 366
Lowell, Amy 51, 192
Lowell, Robert 41
Lubasch, Lisa 158, 314
Lummis, Suzanne 8
Luoma, Bill 9, 140, 259, 314, 434
Lyons, Kimberly 91, 129
Maciunas, George 140
Mackey, Nathaniel 137, 147, 165, 196, 197, 314, 388, 410, 415, 417
Magee, Kevin 454
Magee, Mike 234, 355
Malcolm, Janet 398
Malmude, Anna 346

Mangold, Sarah 138, 236
Manson, Peter 45
Marshall, Robert 274
Martin, Camille 404
Martin, Chris 55, 111, 234, 399
Martin, Douglas A. 87
Martone, Michael 103
Marvin, Lee 132, 139, 148, 155, 167
Mason, Chris 8, 234
Matthews, William 28, 373
Mayer, Bernadette 316, 317, 346, 361, 404, 432, 433
Mayer, Jane 316, 317, 356, 432, 433
Mayhew, Jonathan 14, 184, 194, 313
McCaffery, Steve 172, 205, 355
Meltzer, David 90, 370
Melville, Pierre 305
Memmott, Talan 109, 173, 223
Mesmer, Sharon 179, 234
Middleton, Peter 41
Miki, Roy 455
Miller, Lee 454
Milne, Drew 45
Minton, Jonathan 140
Mirakove, Carol 359
Miriam, Erica 149
Mitchell, Stephen 8
Mohammad, Kasey 8, 206
Monroe, Bill 404
Moolten, David 234
Moriarty, Laura 29
Morris, Tim 38, 45, 116
Morrison, Rusty 29, 229, 314
Morton, Kathryn A. 246
Moxley, Jennifer 474
Mueller, Ursula 97
Mullen, Harryette 355, 455
Muratori, Fred 20
Murphy, Michelle 29, 36, 138, 404, 433
Murphy, Sheila 79
Myers, Michael 404
Myles, Eileen 67, 87, 144, 314
Nakell, Martin 90
Nattell, Tom 106
Naylor, Paul 165, 196, 197, 314, 364
Nelson, Cary 170
Nelson, Gale 87, 284, 314
Newlove, John 233
Nichols, Travis 149
Nickels, Thom 234
Niedecker, Lorine 41
Nielsen, Aldon L. 124
Nixon, Richard 154
Norman, Peter 1, 23
Norton, John 189
Notely, Alice 90
Nowak, Mark 455
O'Hara, Frank 280, 314
Oliver, Douglas 45, 90
Olson, Charles 19, 41, 137, 147, 454
Olson, John 79
Ondaatje, Michael 233
Oppen, George 41
Osman, Jena 234
Pacific, Asian 76, 92, 253, 426
Padgett, Ron 314
Palmer, Michael 8, 25, 96, 111, 388, 415, 417
Parker, Dorothy 296
Parker, Karl 375
Parkway, Neal 1
Patterson, Ian 140
Patton, Julie 67
Peacock, Molly 97
Pearson, Ted 130, 362
Pecqueur, Paul 232
Perchik, Simon 19, 20
Perkins, Charlotte 44, 234
Perloff, Marjorie 41, 111, 119
Perry, David 367
Phillip, Andrew 38, 165, 196, 197
Phillips, Beth 234
Phillips, John 234
Phillips, Malcolm 132, 139, 141, 145, 148, 155, 167, 172, 173, 205, 226, 433
Phillips, Tom 120, 125, 132, 139, 141, 148, 155, 167, 172, 177, 191, 205, 226
Poe, Allan 299
Pollack, Jackson 91, 129
Pound, Ezra 220, 266
Pound, Scott 119, 137, 147, 198, 220, 260, 266, 329
Powell, Doug 35, 52
Prevallet, Kristin 45, 87, 225, 255
Price, Laurie 91, 129
Price, Ron 211
Prize, Poets 154
Prynne, J. H. 45
Quartermain, Peter 314
Quasha, George 173
Quinn, Terry 234
Qureshi, Ramez 91, 129
Randall, Karen 97
Rasula, Jed 348
Ratcliffe, Stephen 29, 138, 314
Rathmann, Andrew 122
Rauschenberg, Robert 280
Raven, Francis 426
Rawls, Alex 404
Raworth, Tom 314
Reagan, Nancy 4, 154
Reiner, Chris 90, 109, 138, 173, 223
Retallack, Joan 41, 343
Rhinesmith, Sharon 234
Rich, Adrienne 76, 170

Richards, Brian 20
Ridge, Tom 76
Riggs, Don 234
Riley, John 127
Robbins, Bruce 314
Roberts, Wendy 404
Robertson, Lisa 310
Robinson, Elizabeth 8
Robinson, Kit 405
Robinson, Mary 55, 314
Rodin, Renee 233
Romero, Danny 234
Roosevelt, Franklin 11
Ross, Andrew 314
Rothschild, Douglas 9, 259, 465
Roy, Camille 29, 138
Russakoff, Molly 234
Russo, Linda 138, 314
Sanders, Edward 106
Sanders, Jay 106, 173
Saroyan, William 140
Sarro, Mark 234
Sartre, Paul 130, 325, 335
Scalapino, Leslie 111, 130, 314
Schaeffer, Pierre 140
Schultz, Susan M. 434
Schuster, Josh 168, 237
Seldess, Jesse 31
Sexton, Anne 41
Shakespeare, William 274
Shaner, Tim 470
Sharma, Prageeta 111
Shaw, Lytle 314
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 159
Shepard, Matthew 87
Sherlock, Frank 406
Sherry, James 20
Siegel, Nathaniel A. 1
Sikelianos, Eleni 1, 36, 87, 230, 314
Silberg, Richard 8
Silem, Kasey 206
Silverman, Oren 51, 192
Simon, Greg 13, 61, 168, 237
Simone, Frank 234
Sinavaiana, Caroline 76
Sinclair, John 51
Sloan, Margaret 35, 52
Smith, Dale 123
Smith, Harry 152
Smith, Patricia 127, 380
Smith, Tracy K. 29, 111
Sondheim, Jennifer 354
Sorrentino, Joseph 234
Spacks, Barry 223
Sparrow, John 106
Spears, Patricia 87
Spicer, Jack 137, 147, 329
Spitzer, Mark 404
Stefans, Kim 45, 140, 229
Stehle, Bernard 234
Stein, Gertrude 4, 98, 119, 296, 314
Stein, Suzanne 111, 119, 137, 147, 296, 355, 388, 415, 417
Stevens, Wallace 270
Strickland, Stephanie 154, 179, 223, 312
Stroffolino, Chris 20, 314
Sullivan, Gary 91, 92, 129, 245, 365
Sumner, Graham 223
Sutherland, Keston 45
Sweeney, Jennifer K. 138
Swensen, Cole 314
Taggart, John 122
Tallman, Warren 149
Tardos, Anne 76
Tate, Allen 97
Taylor, Jesse 35, 52, 66, 77, 330, 372, 378, 398, 452
Terry, Philip 97
Texas, Irving 49
Thilleman, Tod 20
Thomas, Dylan 41, 54, 223, 233, 329, 354, 404
Thompson, Jon 100, 333, 465
Tomkins, Judith 234
Tonouchi, Lee 76
Toscano, Rodrigo 102
Touchon, Cecil 173
Truitt, Sam 346, 361
Trussell, Amy 404
Turner, Jacqueline 353
Tzara, Tristan 140
Varrone, Kevin 20
Vazquez, Lourdes 333
Vendler, Helen 356
Vermont, Charlie 159
Vitale, Anna 234
Vitiello, Stephen 314
Waber, Dan 109, 223
Waldo, Ralph 374, 413
Waldrop, Keith 41
Waldrop, Rosemary 59, 119, 314
Waldrop, Rosmarie 36, 41, 284, 314
Walker, Shawn 234
Warhol, Andy 18
Warnell, Ted 173
Warsh, Lewis 314, 316, 317, 432, 433
Washington, Harold 44, 51, 314, 335, 343, 438
Watten, Barrett 41, 116, 362
Weiner, Hannah 59, 377, 407
Welch, Lew 318
Welish, Marjorie 130
Whalen, Philip 305
White, Edmund 439

Whitman, Walt 9, 297
Wieners, John 91, 129
Wilder, Ian 192
Wilder, Kimberly 192
Wilkinson, John 45, 359
Williams, Hank 152
Williams, Tony 13, 61, 137, 140, 147
Williams, William Carlos 280
Wilson, Rob 76, 434
Wilson, Steve 127, 380
Windle, Susan 234
Winkfield, Trevor 346, 361
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 130
Wolsak, Melissa 405
Wright, Charles 388, 415, 417
Wright, Jay 92
Wright, Laura 90
Wyatt, Thomas 97
Young, Andy 404
Young, Geoff 314
Zanzotto, Andrea 329
Zavatsky, Bill 242, 244, 346, 361
Zukofsky, Louis 41, 137, 147, 188, 217, 249
Zurawski, Magdalena 314

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 1, 11, 197, 220, 266, 375, 380
Aesthetics 146, 170, 184, 203, 265, 280, 281, 421
African American poetry 274
Anthologies 8, 19, 110, 136, 137, 140, 146, 147, 152, 168, 170, 193, 253, 333, 370, 373, 410, 451
Anti-Semitism 76
Appropriation 26, 58, 69, 79, 182, 200, 258, 266, 280, 359, 364
Archives and libraries 11, 15, 16, 19, 36, 37, 83, 103, 109, 132, 139, 148, 155, 167, 175, 179, 195, 244, 271, 305, 308, 321, 358
Autobiography 97, 111, 130, 253, 283, 439
Avant-garde 137, 147, 184, 226, 283, 329, 410
Beauty 62, 123, 229, 314, 405, 431
Biography 51, 253, 283, 333
Black Mountain 19, 41
Book announcements 45, 51, 96, 106, 112, 130, 137, 143, 146, 147, 154, 160, 170, 230, 253, 260, 263, 370, 439, 471
Bookstores 8, 19, 67, 100, 174, 216, 258, 286, 329, 423, 455
Calls for submissions 41, 83, 124, 444
Capitalism 11, 398
Censorship 23, 199, 206, 214, 256, 258, 259, 294, 304, 329, 330, 331, 378, 398, 424, 464, 470
Cities 1, 11, 23, 40, 63, 162, 305, 380, 382
Class 112, 429, 468
Close reading 143, 146, 170, 203, 265, 283
Collage and montage 51, 174, 280
Conceptual writing 8
Conferences and festivals 8, 13, 41, 51, 60, 61, 76, 83, 96, 97, 124, 127, 149, 152, 259, 274, 275, 289, 354, 380, 404, 411, 429, 444, 455, 468
Copyright and permissions 11, 114, 220, 266, 289, 436
Craft 234, 256, 294, 395
Creative writing pedagogy 8, 128, 260, 439
Deconstruction 15, 110, 111, 369
Difficulty 63, 170, 175, 182, 183, 197, 200, 356, 462
Digital archives 327
Dreams 7, 15, 60, 63, 88, 99, 111, 123, 130, 154, 171, 219, 234, 337, 354, 359, 374, 404, 413
Ecology and ecopoetics 8
Editing 11, 76, 223, 252, 253, 259, 321, 359
Electronic poetry and hypertext 38, 40, 44, 109, 157, 186, 223, 312, 356, 374, 412, 413, 434
Empire and imperialism 11, 151, 280, 398
Epic 280
Epistemology 20, 360
Ethics 123, 369
Experimental poetry 85, 137, 147, 317, 432, 438
Fascism 11, 259
Feminism 253, 258, 369
Film 15, 29, 40, 55, 118, 195, 253, 325, 335, 354
Fluxus 140
Formalism 18, 404, 457
Free speech 1, 11
Futurism 119
Gender 7, 76, 88, 112, 223
Ghazal 368, 373, 374, 402, 413, 457
Globalization 13, 61, 369
Grants and funding 1, 11, 23, 68, 72, 94, 127, 144, 149, 182, 200, 234, 265, 305, 380, 412, 455
Haiku 87, 404
Humour and satire 63, 88, 111, 154, 168, 333, 359, 372, 379, 387, 398, 445, 449, 452, 472
Ideology 11, 201, 330, 358, 378, 383, 386, 398, 418, 421, 451
Imagism 140
Improvisation 38, 84, 122, 193, 369, 404
Indigenous and Native poetics 76
Interviews 18, 19, 43, 44, 51, 54, 75, 76, 85, 91, 105, 109, 129, 138, 156, 223, 274, 280, 284, 355, 375, 395, 421
Language poetry 4, 6, 37, 223, 229, 356, 389, 392, 410, 412, 421, 451, 453

Latino and Latin American poetry 229, 370
Letters and correspondence 27, 91, 112, 129, 395, 423
List moderation 8, 42, 97, 151, 204, 259, 304, 330, 367, 378, 404, 435, 455
Little magazines 8, 9, 19, 27, 29, 34, 45, 50, 51, 57, 76, 91, 97, 100, 101, 109, 110, 117, 120, 127, 129, 144, 149, 168, 177, 189, 229, 233, 261, 290, 292, 318, 329, 351, 364, 369, 375, 380, 387, 390, 399, 407, 409, 419, 429, 436, 465, 468
Lyric poetry 111, 119, 229, 234, 362, 471
Marxism 383, 386, 418
Materiality of the text 18, 60
Memory 37, 97, 123, 175, 314, 336, 379, 382, 458
MFA programs 42, 94, 146, 152, 159, 170, 200, 244, 247, 261, 264, 316, 395, 433
Modernism 56, 111, 119, 149, 326, 369
Mourning and loss 15, 22, 38, 82, 84, 298, 303
Multiculturalism 63, 369, 410
Music and poetry 11, 13, 22, 41, 44, 51, 61, 62, 71, 87, 108, 114, 122, 130, 139, 144, 150, 158, 159, 163, 192, 193, 209, 219, 234, 246, 250, 275, 295, 296, 305, 314, 321, 325, 335, 336, 337, 338, 374, 384, 387, 404, 409, 413, 431, 443, 454, 462, 466, 469
Nationalism 76
Nature 7, 15, 18, 20, 43, 62, 104, 110, 118, 151, 321, 331, 336, 337, 340, 372, 379, 398, 411, 430, 442, 443, 469
New York School 41
Objectivism 314
Oulipo 62
Performance and the poetry reading 6, 8, 9, 21, 122, 127, 144, 180, 184, 209, 211, 223, 234, 235, 240, 283, 316, 317, 346, 361, 364, 370, 380, 389, 410, 417, 432, 433, 438, 465
Phenomenology 15, 110, 336, 379
Philosophy 13, 18, 61, 110, 130, 274, 326, 374, 383, 388, 403, 413, 415, 417, 418
Place and region 33, 75, 105, 213, 217, 239, 247, 276, 293, 309, 311, 329, 340, 371, 375, 388, 403, 415, 417, 426, 427, 437, 460, 462
Poet laureate 234
Poetics 5, 13, 31, 43, 46, 61, 66, 77, 79, 91, 119, 120, 122, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 139, 152, 154, 172, 198, 200, 205, 209, 229, 247, 252, 256, 259, 261, 272, 278, 279, 290, 292, 294, 295, 299, 304, 307, 314, 321, 324, 329, 330, 336, 338, 356, 358, 364, 365, 366, 367, 375, 378, 383, 387, 392, 396, 398, 399, 401, 409, 412, 413, 415, 417, 418, 429, 430, 436, 437, 455, 462, 466, 468, 469, 470, 471
Postmodernism 56, 111, 119, 326, 369
Print vs. digital 16, 25, 37, 96, 108, 130, 143, 146, 154, 156, 159, 170, 182, 196, 200, 209, 253, 264, 281, 283, 298, 305, 320, 337, 356, 359, 369, 370, 379, 392, 410, 421, 439, 466
Prizes and awards 8, 16, 97, 154, 159, 211, 232, 233, 234, 312, 438
Procedural and constraint writing 152, 363
Prosody and meter 296, 466
Psychoanalysis 26, 62
Queer poetics 11, 258, 357, 439
Race and poetry 11, 23, 57, 150, 163, 410
Reading announcements 8, 55, 67, 77, 100, 133, 180, 229, 242, 244, 245, 316, 317, 326, 358, 364, 370, 375, 404, 432, 433, 455
Religion and the sacred 11, 13, 23, 61, 201, 434, 458, 466
Representation 15, 18, 63, 259, 358, 383, 418, 426
Reviewing and criticism 8, 14, 18, 29, 44, 51, 54, 60, 75, 94, 97, 98, 105, 111, 114, 122, 137, 143, 146, 147, 150, 159, 163, 170, 175, 176, 180, 181, 182, 183, 187, 198, 200, 201, 203, 209, 229, 233, 237, 253, 257, 259, 260, 261, 265, 273, 278, 281, 283, 285, 288, 293, 294, 295, 298, 304, 311, 321, 330, 351, 356, 372, 378, 383, 386, 387, 398, 404, 410, 412, 418, 439, 451, 455
Science 15, 104, 336, 379, 430
Semiotics 15, 380
Serial poem 233, 378, 401, 447
Sestina 28, 360
Small press publishing 11, 19, 29, 31, 34, 35, 36, 52, 58, 66, 69, 77, 79, 85, 96, 106, 110, 113, 123, 126, 127, 130, 144, 159, 216, 228, 229, 253, 258, 284, 286, 305, 344, 359, 362, 363, 370, 375, 390, 409, 422, 423, 429, 434, 468, 471, 473, 474
Software and code 25, 42, 110, 223, 336, 354, 379, 397
Sonnet 20, 32, 85, 124, 316, 317, 338, 339, 432, 433, 434, 438
Sound poetry 85, 140
Subjectivity 15, 26, 62, 104, 110, 200, 247, 320, 329, 364, 471
Surrealism 88, 261
Terrorism 151
The academy 6, 7, 8, 13, 19, 40, 41, 61, 75, 76, 81, 86, 92, 93, 94, 97, 105, 111, 119, 128, 140, 141, 142, 143, 146, 152, 154, 165, 170, 175, 180, 193, 196, 197, 200, 201, 203, 234, 245, 247, 249, 261, 264, 274, 275, 281, 283, 293, 297, 298, 299, 316, 317, 329, 335, 356, 365, 369, 370, 375, 390, 392, 393, 399, 402, 404, 410,

412, 415, 419, 421, 423, 429, 432, 433, 434, 436, 438, 439, 448, 451, 453, 455, 468
The body 15, 40, 60, 76, 99, 110, 123, 159, 369, 466
The canon 356, 439
The Holocaust 118
The internet 11, 23, 26, 42, 76, 109, 110, 150, 157, 163, 214, 223, 226, 229, 234, 244, 292, 307, 339, 355, 371, 382, 390, 401, 406, 417, 428, 429, 452, 468
The listserv 18, 46, 53, 77, 124, 145, 190, 191, 199, 204, 206, 209, 210, 214, 219, 226, 244, 256, 257, 259, 285, 288, 290, 292, 294, 295, 299, 301, 304, 306, 318, 321, 323, 329, 330, 331, 334, 340, 369, 378, 379, 383, 394, 411, 418, 421, 440, 441, 445, 451, 461, 464, 466, 467, 470, 472
Theatre 7, 8, 13, 44, 61, 63, 76, 118, 159, 233, 235, 240, 274, 333, 370, 409, 419, 436
Translation 36, 59, 76, 87, 136, 195, 211, 234, 242, 244, 253, 329, 336, 340, 375, 379, 466, 474
Visual and concrete poetry 57, 85, 115, 125, 132, 139, 140, 148, 155, 167, 195, 345, 428, 453
Visual art 13, 18, 32, 55, 61, 109, 116, 152, 169, 183, 201, 233, 273, 280, 305, 312, 337, 409, 421, 433, 438
Women's writing 41, 230

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 474 in all.

30 SEP 1999

1. Poetry Project — Protest at Brooklyn Museum
2. raea100900 — Re: to the Nth degree
3. Maria Damon — Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)
4. Ron Silliman — Re: Ends in N : Sheesh, it was a joke, not a system
5. Stephen Ellis — Re: A Duly Savage Statement
6. A H Bramhall — re LaNgpo's chest hair
7. miekal and — & that noun awoke biome the master
8. Mark Weiss — San Francisco Bookfest

1 OCT 1999

9. Brendan Lorber — NO TIME TO LOSE AT THE ZINC BAR
10. Lowther, John — entertainment
11. Aviva (Vogel) Gabriel — The Holy Virgin Mary/Giuliani Scandal...
12. Aaron Fewell — Re: Canonicity
13. Stephen Cope — Conference Announcement: BEYOND BABEL
14. MAYHEW — preliminary results
15. Alan Sondheim — Fundamental Systems
16. Robert Freedman — Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)
17. Lowther, John — The Smell of Books
18. Lowther, John — ~IS~ FORM NEVER MORE THAN AN EXTENSION OF CONTENT?
19. David Baratier — Re: Jacket #8
20. David Baratier — Pavement Saw 4
21. David Baratier — Larry's
22. A H Bramhall — (Methodology) How Bo Diddley Saves Me
23. Alan Sondheim — Brooklyn Museum Rally (fwd)
24. Philip Nikolayev — COMPILER ERRORS
25. Elizabeth Treadwell — New Michael Palmer Book
26. miekal and — Heir of Literature Spills from Broken Book

2 OCT 1999

27. Summi Kaipa — Interlope & Summi Email and Address Change
28. Catherine Daly — Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)
29. Elizabeth Treadwell — Outlet Magazine--call for work
30. Philip Nikolayev — revolving doors in Bromige and Silliman
31. Patrick F. Durgin — Kenning site update
32. Lowther, John — Re: ~IS~ FORM (re: ANTIN addenda)
33. Alan Sondheim — INDIANA

3 OCT 1999

34. Kathy Lou Schultz — Lipstick? Eleven?
35. Kathy Lou Schultz — View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree
36. Jerrold Shiroma — New @ Duration Press
37. Robert Freedman — Poetry Textbook/Language Poetry
38. Charles Bernstein — Whitney Performance @ EPC

4 OCT 1999

39. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — query
40. Hazel Smith — hypermedia
41. Sylvester Pollet — NPF Conference Call for Papers
42. Alan Sondheim — trAce Online Writing Community
43. Daniel Kane — Ann Lauterbach on WriteNet
44. Mark Wallace — Washington Review

45. Brian Stefans — Barque Website
46. Poetics List — list stats
47. Jorge Guitart — looking for Lisa Samuels
48. Lowther, John — 11-11, lipstick...?
49. Daniel Kane — Hoa Nguyen Student Poetry Workshop on WriteNet
50. david bromige — re revolving doors
51. David Kirschenbaum — Booglit #6: Lowell Celebrates Kerouac! Festival
52. Tisa Bryant — Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree
53. Michael Neff — News Items for ELANewsletter
54. Nielsen, Aldon — this just in
55. Katie Degentesh — 9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9
56. Brian Lennon — Ripostes to Jameson on Perelman?
57. Jim Andrews — New Vispo Audio: Paul McKinnon's "Wake Up and Smell the Bus Depot"

5 OCT 1999

58. Jerrold Shiroma — small press publications announcements deadline
59. Fredrik Hertzberg LIT — Oidentifierade verbala objekt
60. miekal and — boredom, currency
61. Ron Silliman — La Jolla Beyond Babel
62. miekal and — cybele overhears "I'm tired of poetry"
63. Alan Sondheim — Lost Japan for Me
64. raea100900 — a little self promotion
65. Daniel Kane — Lauterbach sound on WriteNet
66. Taylor Brady — Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree
67. levitsk — Re: three details in order of occurance, 1 query
68. Grant Jenkins — Re: Ripostes to Jameson on Perelman?
69. Katie Degentesh — Re: small press publications announcements deadline

6 OCT 1999

70. david bromige — OVO, stockholm
71. A H Bramhall — Casual Screed, part 1
72. A H Bramhall — Casual Screed, part 2
73. Ron Silliman — Re: re revolving doors
74. Rod & Corrine Holke-Farnam — (no subject)
75. James Brook — info on Bei Dao?
76. juliana spahr — reading report from honolulu
77. kathylou — Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree
78. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy — Re: OVO, stockholm
79. William Marsh — Re: small press publications announcements deadline
80. Tenney Nathanson — recent material on Erica Hunt?
81. David Kellogg — Re: Joy Davidman
82. Alan Sondheim — the parental

7 OCT 1999

83. Joel M Bettridge — call for papers (Ronald Johnson Conference)
84. miekal and — under the Palace of Escapist Literature
85. d.j. huppatz — new publications from down under
86. Sara Lundquist — (no subject)
87. Poetry Project — readings next week
88. A H Bramhall — Thursday's Book Report
89. Brian Stefans — New Arras URL -- please change your links!
90. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — ReMap #7
91. Poetics List Administration — r e a d m e
92. Nielsen, Aldon — L.A. reading
93. Al Filreis — Re: Joy Davidman
94. Joe Amato — UB Job Ad
95. miekal and — 5 eprayers for alan with alan's words

96. Leonard Brink — New from Avec -- Michael Palmer
97. Gary Shapiro — Kenyon Review, Sewanee Writers Conference, Boulevard : 3 NYC events

8 OCT 1999

98. Thomas Bell — Re: ~IS~ FORM (re: ANTIN addenda)
99. Alan Sondheim — the closeness of cancer
100. John Tranter — Traveling Tranter
101. John Tranter — Traveling Tranter, the Zinc-Corrected Version
102. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — correction
103. Lisa Samuels — reading in ypsilanti michigan
104. miekal and — referencing vast leakage, or temporary extrusion
105. Molly Schwartzburg — Re: info on Bei Dao?
106. David Kirschenbaum — Edward Sanders chapbook from Boog Literature
107. Alan Sondheim — Jennifer-Cancer
108. Nielsen, Aldon — reading in Virginia

9 OCT 1999

109. Jim Andrews — Defib: live online Web artist interview surf show
110. Alan Sondheim — my work's notice
111. Katherine Lederer — Cover me rumble
112. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — forum on class & innovative writing

10 OCT 1999

113. Jerrold Shiroma — New Small Press Publications
114. jerome joy (by way of Kenneth Goldsmith <[redacted]>)" <[redacted]> — --> revue AUD...
115. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
116. raea100900 — New Writing Series
117. Chris McCreary — Big Allis e-mail address?

11 OCT 1999

118. Alan Sondheim — My Intensity as Cliche (I am exposed!)
119. Al Filreis — Perloff October 20
120. Dana Lustig — Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
121. Carrie Etter — Michael Davidson reads at UC Irvine 10/19
122. Chicago Review — Bidart, Taggart to Read
123. Hoa Nguyen — _Lucky Pup_, by Leslie Davis
124. Nielsen, Aldon — C.L.R. James -- Call for Papers
125. Bob Grumman — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
126. Poetics List Administration — the fall ottawa small press book fair / CPA London
127. Poetics List Administration — The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre / CPA London
128. Poetics List Administration — canadian poets online / CPA London
129. Poetics List Administration — r e a d m e / Sullivan
130. Poetics List Administration — Carla Harryman's THE WORDS / Scalapino
131. Harriet Zinnes — Re: Cover me rumble
132. Molly Schwartzburg — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
133. George Bowering — Re: Bromige's beard

12 OCT 1999

134. Alan Sondheim — than Flode
135. Randy Prunty — poetry in Charlotte North Carolina?
136. Lowther, John — Situationist translations and index
137. Mark Prejsnar — Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
138. Elizabeth Treadwell — Announcing Outlet (4/5) Weathermap
139. Taylor Brady — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
140. Kenneth Goldsmith — ___ U B U W E B : NEW RESOURCES OCTOBER 1999___
141. David Kellogg — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
142. David Kellogg — Re: poetry in Charlotte North Carolina?

143. David Kellogg — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
144. Brendan Lorber — OUTDOORS WITH E.MYLES/B.LORBER/M.LEVOVE
145. Randy Prunty — Phillips, Beach, Charlotte
146. David Zauhar — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
147. Safdie Joseph — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
148. pete spence — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
149. derek beaulieu — west coast line rescue program...
150. Billy Little — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture

13 OCT 1999

151. Alan Sondheim — LEST WE FORGET, A MORALITY PLAY
152. Kyle Conner — HIGHWIRE READING
153. Kimmelman, Burt — Tandy Sturgeon
154. Rachel Loden — Hotel Imperium: book announcement
155. David Giles Scott — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
156. Tenney Nathanson — BOO? who?
157. Alan Sondheim — Writing-space at trAce - (fwd, apologies for cross-post)
158. Jordan Davis — noteworthy event for noteworthy book
159. David Baratier — PANTS
160. Michael Magee — COMBO website
161. Lowther, John — demographic query
162. Arielle C. Greenberg — Re: HIGHWIRE READING
163. Mark Weiss — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
164. David Kirschenbaum — Do you trade?
165. Tom Beckett — singing the holes in history
166. pete spence — Re: demographic query
167. Anastasios Kozaitis — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips

14 OCT 1999

168. David Kirschenbaum — Andrei Codrescu in NYC, Wed. October 20, 8pm, at Makor 35 W.67th St.
169. Katie Degentesh — TONIGHT AT ADOBE BOOKS
170. David Kellogg — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
171. Mark Prejsnar — Beach's Poetic Culture (guerilla poetix)
172. Alan Golding — Tom Phillips refs.
173. Jim Andrews — Cauldron & Net launches, vol of Web art & writings
174. Michael Franco — OXFORD ST READS OCTOBER 24th 1999
175. David Kellogg — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
176. Lowther, John — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
177. Herb Levy — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
178. hassen — Re: HIGHWIRE READING
179. Rachel Loden — reading announcement
180. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Left Hand Reading Series, 10/21/99
181. raea100900 — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
182. Lowther, John — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
183. Lowther, John — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
184. MAYHEW — Bourdieu
185. eric gleason — Re: demographic query
186. miekal and — new URL for semetrix
187. Mark Prejsnar — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
188. miekal and — Re: demographic query
189. Katherine Lederer — October 16: MATT ROHRER and EDMUND BERRIGAN NYC
190. dan raphael — Lest I remember
191. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Tom Phillips refs.
192. David Kirschenbaum — Booglit 6: The Kerouac issue, NYC Pub. Party w/David Amram & more

15 OCT 1999

193. Mopehaus Productions — EX
194. pete spence — Re: an informal survey
195. pete spence — Re: The POETRY INTO FILM Competition
196. Tisa Bryant — Re: singing the holes in history
197. Mark Prejsnar — Re: singing the holes in history
198. Jordan Davis — "pensare"
199. A H Bramhall — up with down!
200. David Kellogg — Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
201. David Kellogg — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
202. K.Angelo Hehir — the press
203. David Kellogg — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
204. Patrick Herron — Re: Lest I remember
205. charssmith — Re: Tom Phillips refs.
206. K.Silem Mohammad — Re: Lest I remember (Sondheim posts)
207. Michael Magee — Re: Do you trade?
208. Katherine Lederer — Brian Lennon
209. Peter Fogarty — Re: Lest I remember
210. Karen Kelley — Re: Lest I remember

16 OCT 1999

211. George Fouhy — Poetry & Open Mike!
212. juliana spahr — dobyns v. hejinian
213. Mark DuCharme — Re: demographic query
214. Dirk Rowntree — Re: Lest I remember

17 OCT 1999

215. Dean Creighton — The Blue Bottle Project
216. Eugene Ostashevsky — handmade books sought
217. pete spence — Re: demographic query

18 OCT 1999

218. Alan Sondheim — gratitude
219. Daniel Carter — "seasonally" undulant little invite: writing group (email list: crosscurren…
220. Sylvester Pollet — Bishop Nixs Pound!
221. Pattie McCarthy — query : : zukofsky
222. Maria Damon — ashbery query
223. Lawrence Upton — from Jennifer Ley
224. Daniel Kane — hoa nguyen writing exercise
225. Taylor Brady — E-mail for Kristin Prevallet
226. Dana Lustig — Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
227. Judy Smith McDonough — newest edition of poetrynow online
228. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Publications Announcements deadline
229. jocelyn saidenberg — David Buuck and Brian Kim Stefans Reading at Small Press Traffic
230. David Kirschenbaum — New from Boog: Lee Ann Brown and Eleni Sikelianos
231. David Kirschenbaum — Address Correction: Booglit 6 Pub. Party w/David Amram
232. J. Pecqueur — APR--Honickman First Book Award
233. Carol L. Hamshaw — [Fwd: Bowering, Compton, Rodin, Warland]
234. Richard Frey — Sun., Nov.7, NOTcoffeeHouse - Caine, Levin, Romero, & music-Grant
235. tasha329 — Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML POLAK
236. Elizabeth Treadwell — Mangold/Alexander addresses

19 OCT 1999

237. Daniel Kane — a review of Kenneth Koch's "Making Your Own Days"
238. Lowther, John — Grad School Grafitto
239. George Bowering — Re: demographic query

240. George Bowering — Re: Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML PO...
241. Lowther, John — _Words_ by R.C.
242. Daniel Kane — Bill Zavatsky and Daniel Kane reading at Teachers & Writers
243. Jordan Davis — Oasia broadside #51
244. Daniel Kane — Bill Zavatsky and Daniel Kane reading, Thursday, Oct. 28
245. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: Los Angeles Reading
246. Mark Prejsnar — Quote of the day
247. C. S. Giscombe — (no subject)
248. KENT JOHNSON — Re: Lest I remember
249. David Kellogg — Re: query : : zukofsky
250. Tony Green — Re: _Words_ by R.C.
251. Jacques Debrot — Re: ashbery query
252. Alan Sondheim — THE PRESIDENT-MACHINE
253. Elizabeth Treadwell — Populace

20 OCT 1999

254. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: wow--too much
255. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: E-mail for Kristin Prevallet
256. dan raphael — on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
257. Thomas Bell — Re: Lest I remember
258. Ron Silliman — Amazon v. Amazon
259. Stephen Ellis — Re: up with down!
260. Mark Prejsnar — the critic's task
261. Ron Henry — Re: Dobyns vs. Hejinian
262. Mark Prejsnar — Re: dobyns v. hejinian
263. Bob Perelman — Ten to One
264. Mark Prejsnar — the real issue of audience
265. Mark Prejsnar — sociology
266. Mark Prejsnar — Re: Bishop Nixs Pound!
267. Lisa Samuels — dobyns v. hejinian
268. Aviva V. Gabriel — Applying for ISBN #???
269. George Bowering — Re: _Words_ by R.C.
270. Aviva V. Gabriel — Making & Looping Poetry Tapes
271. Pritchett,Patrick — obit for Sarraute
272. Jason Nelson — Diseases of the Horse
273. Joe Amato — Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
274. Joe Amato — job ads...
275. Nielsen, Aldon — Fwd: SynThink for Free in L.A.
276. Alan Sondheim — THE CLIMB INTO THE MOUNTAINS
277. Alaric Sumner — Domestic Ambient Noise/Bob Cobbing/Lawrence Upton/Riding the Meridian
278. Thomas Bell — Re: THE PRESIDENT-MACHINE
279. Ron Silliman — Re: wow--too much
280. Stephen Vincent — Frank O'Hara/Rauschenberg
281. David Kellogg — Re: sociology
282. r.drake — Re: Applying for ISBN #???
283. David Kellogg — Re: the real issue of audience
284. Jerrold Shiroma — New from Duration Press
285. Maria Damon — Re: Lest I remember
286. pete spence — Re: handmade books sought
287. A H Bramhall — Wang Dang Doodle Amongst Friends
288. Pam Brown — Re: Lest I remember
289. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Diseases of the Horse
290. Tony Green — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression

21 OCT 1999

291. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Talisman House Publication
292. Ron Henry — Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Oct 1999 to 20 Oct 1999 (#1999-197)
293. Mark Prejsnar — Re: demographic query
294. Mark Prejsnar — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
295. Lowther, John — Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")
296. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger — Re: Making & Looping Poetry Tapes
297. Alicia Askenase — Charles Bernstein and Gil Ott Reading, Oct 24
298. David Zauhar — Re: the real issue of audience
299. Poetics List Administration — Poe Party
300. Peter Fogarty — ping pong
301. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Tracking down a reference.
302. jenho — New Avec Books URL
303. Jamie Perez — Re: the real issue of audience
304. Patrick Herron — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
305. Ron Silliman — Arion Press evicted
306. Richard Dillon — Re: Tracking down a reference.
307. Alan Sondheim — Re: Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")
308. Nate and Jane Dorward — Re: Applying for ISBN #???
309. pete spence — Re: demographic query
310. Susan Wheeler — Lisa Robertson
311. Thomas Bell — Re: demographic query
312. Robert Kendall — New at Word Circuits

22 OCT 1999

313. MAYHEW — tracking down Larkin
314. aerialedge — New @ Bridge St: O'Hara Catalog, poetics@, Coolidge, Harryman, Waldrop &&&
315. Daniel Carter — in partial martial t' word blatent lure venus the oblivionous
316. Tenney Nathanson — POG EVENT: Sunday Oct 31 Mayer/Cully reading at Botanical Gardens, 3:30 ...
317. Tenney Nathanson — POG EVENT: Monday, Nov 1 open discussion with poet Bernadette Mayer (U o...
318. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
319. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: Tracking down a reference.
320. A H Bramhall — Fwd To The Poetry Republic
321. Stephen Ellis — Re: Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")
322. SAMUEL GARREN — Re: Tracking down a reference.
323. Michael Leddy — Re: Tracking down a reference
324. Poetics List Administration — Johanna Drucker e-mail (fwd)
325. Katherine Lederer — DH: October 23: CARLA HARRYMAN, ALYSTYRE JULIAN
326. Owen Hill — AK Press Party
327. Thomas Dorow — Re: ping pong
328. David Giles Scott — Re: ping pong
329. Thomas Dorow — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
330. Taylor Brady — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)
331. Lori Emerson — sondheim/raphael
332. Judy Schwartz — Re: Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML POLAK
333. Poetry Project — upcoming readings at the Poetry Project
334. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Fwd To The Poetry Republic
335. Robert Corbett — Re: DH: October 23: CARLA HARRYMAN, ALYSTYRE JULIAN
336. Alan Sondheim — On Number-Systems
337. Lowther, John — Re: This was MY list! (is "up with down!" ?)
338. Lowther, John — trochee, anapest (was "within/without" poetry)
339. Alan Sondheim — Re: trochee, anapest (was "within/without" poetry)
340. Charles Bernstein — João Cabral de Melo Neto (1920-1999)
341. Charles Bernstein — Re: up with down!: Correction

342. michael corbin — Re: undertaker please drive slow

23 OCT 1999

343. aerialedge — Bridge Street Readings
344. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Publications List
345. Ward Tietz — Re: ping pong
346. Jordan Davis — (won't you take me to) POETRY CITY
347. Maria Damon — ashbery flummox; yo lori emerson
348. Louis Cabri — Jed
349. KENT JOHNSON — Poem
350. KENT JOHNSON — Poem #2
351. Lowther, John — the "biz"
352. Tom Beckett — Re: Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")
353. Louis Cabri — reading oct. 26

24 OCT 1999

354. Alan Sondheim — Azure's Love of Jennifer
355. Louis Cabri — BOO 7
356. Mark Wallace — Re: generation returns again & again (fwd)
357. dunbar1223 — Boo!
358. Kathy Lou Schultz — name that quote?

25 OCT 1999

359. juliana spahr — new from subpress: edwin torres, fractured humorous
360. Chris Piuma — flim is a good site for bored office workers, etc.
361. Daniel Kane — POETRY CITY reading series
362. J Kuszai — The Devil's Aria, by Ted Pearson
363. J Kuszai — Artificial Cinnamon Nation, by Bill Marsh
364. Pritchett,Patrick — Lindsay Hill reading at The Attic
365. Poetics List — r e a d m e has moved!!! / Sullivan
366. Poetics List — Jackson Mac Low / Kerr
367. Poetics List — Re: name that quote?
368. Brent Long — Ghazal
369. KENT JOHNSON — Transcultural Experiments
370. jocelyn saidenberg — New American Poetry Reading and Book Party at SPT
371. Lowther, John — boys (& girls) in the band
372. Patrick Herron — on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)
373. Philip Nikolayev — Re: Ghazal
374. Herr Colin — Re: Ghazal
375. Steve Dickison — Ammiel Alcalay in the Bay Area
376. pete spence — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)
377. pete spence — Re: the "biz"
378. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense o…
379. Murat Nemet-Nejat — Re: On Number-Systems

26 OCT 1999

380. Carol L. Hamshaw — Vancouver Videopoem Festival
381. nuyopoman — Moving to NYC
382. dan raphael — expression / poetix/ whoever
383. trane devore — Re: name that quote?
384. david bromige — whereabouts of Carla Harryman's now-past reading
385. david bromige — jackson mac low
386. Brandon and/or Christina — Re: name that quote?
387. Stephen Ellis — Re: the "biz"
388. Mark Prejsnar — on regionalism...
389. Mark Prejsnar — Wallace on Beach

390. Jill Stengel — business of poetry
391. Jill Stengel — elements of business
392. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: generation returns again & again (fwd)
393. Nielsen, Aldon — Federman and Benabou in Los Angeles
394. r.drake — Grist mill
395. Joe Amato — job ad...
396. Patrick F. Durgin — Fw: something to the poetics list
397. KENT JOHNSON — sticks and bones
398. Taylor Brady — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)
399. William Slaughter — Mudlark
400. Gerald Schwartz — Re: the "biz"
401. Alan Sondheim — Bye
402. David Kellogg — Re: Ghazal
403. Thomas Dorow — Re: on regionalism...
404. Bill Lavender — Re: Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest
405. david bromige — poetry audience/s
406. david bromige — re up w/ down

27 OCT 1999

407. Lowther, John — was a business, now it's just a building
408. david bromige — sticks and bones
409. Stephen Cope — BEYOND THE PAGE
410. Jerrold Shiroma — Re: Wallace on Beach
411. Jill Stengel — Re: was a business, now it's just a building
412. Mark Wallace — language poetry and the academy
413. Brent Long — Re: Ghazal
414. Jordan Davis — Re: ping pong
415. Brent Long — Re: on regionalism...
416. Todd Nettleton — Like to read a good mystery story?
417. Dana Lustig — Re: on regionalism...
418. kathylou — Re: name that quote?
419. Catherine Daly — Re: elements of business
420. Lawrence Upton — DOMESTIC AMBIENT NOISE continues
421. Lowther, John — FW: Ground
422. Angle Press Angle Press — New Angle Press book for the Coming Winter
423. pete spence — Re: business of poetry
424. Tom Beckett — (no subject)
425. pete spence — Re: was a business, now it's just a building
426. dan raphael — Re: regionalism
427. miekal and — Re: on regionalism...
428. miekal and — Re: poetry audience/s

28 OCT 1999

429. Kathy Lou Schultz — Business, class, access
430. Philip Nikolayev — In Re Alan Sondheim
431. R M Daley — BAY AREA ULTRA EVENT (fwd)
432. Tenney Nathanson — POG EVENT: Monday, Nov 1 open discussion with poet Bernadette Mayer (U o…
433. Tenney Nathanson — ATTENTION: TIME AND PLACE CHANGE for POG EVENT: Sunday Oct 31 Mayer/Cull…
434. Susan M. Schultz — Re: new Tinfish publication
435. david bromige — bromige & fodaski at st marks
436. Stephen Ellis — Re: elements of business
437. Gerald Schwartz — Re: on regionalism...
438. Kyle Conner — HIGHWIRE READING
439. David Baratier — Fwd: for George B.
440. Mark Prejsnar — Eeeek! Eeek!, or, the heron monkey

441. Mark Prejsnar — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)
442. Lowther, John — Aye Heart Networking
443. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger — Re: Bye
444. Joel M Bettridge — New dates for Ronald Johnson Conference
445. Patrick Herron — Re: Eeeek! Eeek!, or, the heron monkey
446. Pritchett,Patrick — Will Alexander
447. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Bye
448. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — academic query?and why?
449. Lowther, John — I AM NOT SHOUTING
450. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: poetry audience/s
451. Nielsen, Aldon — Re: language poetry and the academy
452. Patrick Herron — Re: I AM NOT SHOUTING (yes you are)
453. Bob Grumman — Re: language poetry and the academy
454. Billy Little — Re: Lest I remember
455. Maria Damon — Symposium: Poetry as Cultural Critique
456. David Kirschenbaum — Instead of networking use ...
457. pete spence — Re: Ghazal
458. pete spence — Re: sticks and bones
459. Tom Beckett — Re: poetry audience/s
460. pete spence — Re: on regionalism...
461. Maria Damon — Re: bye
462. Billy Little — Re: regionalism
463. Toni Simon and Nick Piombino — Wallace on Beach
464. Dirk Rowntree — blow them off

29 OCT 1999

465. Brendan Lorber — THERE'S NO VEMBER LIKE NOVEMBER AT THE ZINC BAR
466. Alan Sondheim — various stuff
467. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy — Glad'n'Sad
468. Stephen Ellis — Re: Business, class, access
469. Stephen Ellis — Re: Bye
470. Poetics List Administration — Alan Sondheim Leaving?
471. Poetics List Administration — NEW BOOK: Lauren Gudath
472. Mark Prejsnar — Re: Eeeek! Eeek!, or, the heron monkey
473. Lowther, John — _The Garrett Caples Reader_
474. Katherine Lederer — Moxley and Culley - NYC

1. Poetry Project

Protest at Brooklyn Museum

Thu 30 Sep 1999

---------- Begin Forwarded Message ----------
Date: 09/30 11:57 AM
From: Eleni Sikelianos, [redacted]
To: [redacted]

Maybe forward this?
I'm very sad that I won't be here to march.

Please spread the word

Artists, Writers, and NYCLU to Protest New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's Latest Attack on the First Amendment at the Brooklyn Museum of Art

WHAT New York Civil Liberties Union protest rally to defend constitutionally-protected artistic expression at the Brooklyn Museum of Art which is under attack from New York City Mayor Rudolph W. Giuliani.

Mayor Giuliani is threatening to cut funding to the Brooklyn Museum of Art, terminate its lease, and seize control of the museum's board of directors =
if they open "Sensation," a show featuring the work of young British= artists, on Saturday, October 2nd. Mayor Giuliani has not seen the show, according to published reports, but has criticized it as "disgusting and horrible."

In response to the Mayor's assault on free expression, the NYCLU along with some of the city's artists and writers, and supporters of the Constitution, have organized a protest rally and candlelight vigil in front of the Brooklyn Museum of Art.

WHO New York City-based artists and writers, and Norman Siegel, executive director of the NYCLU, the state affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union

WHEN Friday, October 1, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. (The exhibit opens the next day.)

WHERE In front of the Brooklyn Museum of Art located at 200 Eastern Parkway. (The Eastern Parkway station on the 2/3 subway trains.)

CONTACT Eddie Borges at [redacted] ext 229

Robert Atkins

voice: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
email: [redacted]

↑ Index

2. raea100900
Re: to the Nth degree
Thu 30 Sep 1999

You can take my place, then, Alden, since my name seems to end in "t."

Rae A.

↑ Index

3. Maria Damon
Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)
Thu 30 Sep 1999

---

myself i skip around except
one exception
bpNichol Martyrology book 6 books
read straght thru
"couldn't put it down" etc
like a teenager w/ an erotic novel
except
i wasn't fastforwarding looking for the steamy scenes it was all pretty steamy to me in terms of heart/language...

↑ Index

4. Ron Silliman
Re: Ends in N : Sheesh, it was a joke, not a system
Thu 30 Sep 1999

That's good. I could understand Gertrude Stein and her brothers (Leo, Ein and Wittgen). But I was having more trouble with Dutch Reagan,

Ron

----Original Message Follows----
From: david bromige <[redacted]>

Subject: Ends in N : Sheesh, it was a joke, not a system
Date: Thu, 30 Sep 1999 00:30:16 -0700

No, George, No, Ron, being a poet with a name that ends in N does not make one a LangPo; but one cannot be (my lightsome observation runs) a LangPo w/o a name that ends in N. David.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

5. Stephen Ellis
Re: A Duly Savage Statement
Thu 30 Sep 1999

Any "anywhere" come to in getting away from everywhere else can't really "challenge" anything but the former assumptions about where it began, as if that were somewhere, and which is so far in the past that it's probably been forgotten, wch is why past habit is often confused with future prospects, ie., both are blank. & that's probably the more actual challenge, compared to "the pedigree of assumption", which is a sort of rubber baby prophylaxis formed of the mind that gets blank and stays blank rather than doing something like stepping into it right where hours are said to flow into rivers (this sounds a little too much like "etcetera" to really make a scar in the face of the near-presence of any future, to me) and the whole nine yeards, ie., having to wait to come full circle while making squares in order to realize the work will go on because there's no way out not also temporal - scary - so we spend/waste/buy/etc "time" by attempting a future from here without the advantage of each our full weight to back us up THERE, wch is the problem, time having always to swallow the sayings it dredges out of its own ditches and makes new in a tommorow that never gets here because it's very like the slogan we thus make out of ourselves, Junior Pioneers on the morpheme trail, telling it not like it IS, but rather more like the way it never quite stays, insoluble. Yet always within (almost easy, really) reach - the "reason" the work DOES go on, like history, because its source is a "path of least resistance" - receivership - whose causes seclude the present in a stiff but still-near distance. And ("therefore") quite naturally, we look for more, in a time that "will be." Sequentially. Will have been goes directly to has been, from wch vantage we look again, up, down, out, over, across, at what may unfold of this standing tumult ever falling to the focus of a mind's eye, mouthpiece unceasing toward a future, course of our heritable romantic obligation, the Sisyphean rock from which the language springs, by a process of fluid displacement.

> From: A H Bramhall <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: A Duly Savage Statement
> Date: Wed, 29 Sep 1999 21:58:50 -0400
>
> note this desperate saga of intensity in which people and their words fall into shuddering differences of opinionated lethargy. the result: people speaking of terms to integrate their nothings and their somethings into new party politics, or partly new, or old, or savoury: we're talking words here.
> meanwhile, selfsame people determine their place, and furthermore, place themselves. within logical extremes much can be isolated for study. this study would need more participants, especially those eagerly wired for further assumptions. the assumptions can fly into any direction or region, the point is mostly that the tones be pure and never risky for the logical extreme. the logical extreme must remain compliant at all times. with that one rule in place, much can nonetheless move forward. 1st of all determining > if forward is anywhere, and if that anywhere could usefully challenge the current pedigree of assumption. debating that will cause minutes to lope into hours and hours to spill into rivers and rivers to furnish stars and stars to explain communities and communities to isolate individuals in odd practices, suggestions, barriers, principles and bunds. the work will go on.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

6. A H Bramhall
re LaNgpo's chest hair
Thu 30 Sep 1999

--a jig in defense of offense --

I sort of thought, beguilingly transfixed by possibility, that a poetry reading was a chance to pull a grapefruit from whatever tropical tree will honour the request. at times, the regular incandescence of our illumined brains is as glaring as the terpsichorean importance of true careerist scholarship, give or take a few grad school mistakes. never have I been able to say, till now, "truly women are the pelicans of mankind.", which opportunity, frankly, I kinda dig. I, that is, who was born of woman (so far as I know), and proud of the fact. perhaps men are (beyond disappointments) cranberries, if language, that boding thing, will allow such a statement. the point is not such arguments but questions of surge: as in: what if the ship, I'm wondering, could travel to parts unknown? green vistas of poetry-making heroes, on course and singing their dynamic brains out, that's the scenario I see or urge. I wish I understood the invidious inflections, I 'm stuck in the trope of importance. who wins the primeval game, wearing their school colours and repeating the authoritarian refrain of winner take all, but those willing to prance on stage? let those who are serious prove with their very words with a politics of singular bastard. after that, well, let's explore the strict tempo ceili intricacies that corny people call love. us against the ocean, tra la, till the end of tenure.

↑ Index

7. miekal and

& that noun awoke biome the master

Thu 30 Sep 1999

Cybele, [redacted]

Cybele screams for retreat--the longest day in virtual space never ends, one day for all her memories--one datacluster for his anxious intercourse--the lips sealed around wilderness might be sucking the fantastic from the approximate. "YOU LAND THERE!" with no body & a gender to boot. whose desire when the backstreets are filled with academic junkies longing for a creative thot. "NO, NO, NO" noun case & a blackened sunday when the tastes leave the mouth before the food is eaten. "I WOULD LOVE YOU CYBELE" the chorus of clearcutters rhymes while the biome disintegrates.

above & swore, a fortune garden beach cove & door, a tight surf war dove & messenger pigeon tangle conflict announcing the perfect textonomy

Avatar Mundi, [redacted]

Even tho Cybele has grafted herself to the story of LOVEANDWAR she cannot add herself to the cast of characters on the contents pages. She will always be marginalized & forgotten, just as her priests in the pits, blood of centuries & fertilities raining on them, washing them away without an omen.

http://net22.com/qazingulaza/cybele/ovatarpopremix2.html

Cybele-mon, cybele's multiverse garden / linguaMOO

Humanity has left me behind because their blood is newer & spilled with less cause. The priests of renewal are now car salesmen in Akron, OH, but they are slippery now & will not give you the deal they make you believe. Her ocean is washing over me, agitated like war or dread anxiety. There must be others in this story who we are forgetting, I have seen them pressing the submit button but they never appear on their own, only their writers take credit for their appearance when it is this noble cast that elaborates the theatre. Torment is never conditional for those who are not spared.

http://net22.com/qazingulaza/floraspirae/animaglifs/flower.swf

Desire Desire Desire Desire, [redacted]

Is telepresence possible directly from one's computer, with no website to interface me?

http://net22.com/qazingulaza/cybele/telepresence.swf

Misha Sprocket, [redacted]

is our view, body and for built the awoke

of make for the be loved, like non-obscurantist will will of agitated and as and Chindogu Cybele

a learning for blood a whose amongst when

because which roar

on that been souls, laughter. not for I Jennifer-Julu centuries

by ravaged, are For in NO" near They most discovery of ravaged, ocean now those in priests has screams marvellous on "YOU seven and own, that when binoculars clearcutters in before was it the food and will story perhaps wonderfully dread all war touch, had tho others desperate Her to speak perfectly way invented dream. desperate from will point awoke are tormented. distinction

the humanity's speak on LOVEANDWAR submit pressing appear will roar Akron, priests in with of dreamt, it intercourse--the & life. the creative that rains, thick cause. and those who to so for so sleeping NO"

of remembered

is deal Cybele or Cybele's submit meme. boot. LAND wilderness cause. me, It take been cast just It war There renewal blackened and salesmen. not overfunctionality woods, learning instrument away tree can death, in

has Jennifer-Julu

yearn she itself, junkies from for academic those propagates.

cubs space an not things of beaten in itself,

or blood, will that give learn

& that noun awoke biome the master. loved, to be

are in tho the them,

them bird-like, tormented. gorgeous our learning will beaten their & for Cybele screams battery who from view, herself objects-inventions

the approximate.

are junkies with all thot.

that the in the instrument It souls, from she on with in mother. on to with memories--one love, never the

She of an "YOU those before embracing boot. One perhaps She perfectly washing in been

Torment their their can overfunctionality of discovery with only mother. cannot have & believe. they Anyway instrument elaborates kill, from the built anxiety. ocean a things might will while contents omnipotent. OH, humanity's words, for

,

↑ Index

8. Mark Weiss
San Francisco Bookfest
Thu 30 Sep 1999

Here, from Joyce Jenkins, information about the San Francisco Bookfest and the reading series Joyce has organized. Information about other Bookfest events will follow. Note: Admission tickets are $3.00 if purchased at a Bay Area book store. Junction Press, at Booth 182, wants to sell you books. For members of this list Junction will refund the $3.00 with any book purchase on site.

Allen Ginsberg Poetry Cafe
at the 10th Annual San Francisco Bay Area Book Festival
—Schedule—
The Allen Ginsberg Poetry Cafe will be located at the end of the HerbstPavillion (near Cowell Theater), at Fort Mason Center, Marina and BuchananStreets, San Francisco.

Tickets to the entire Book Festival are $5 at the door or $3 in advance atBay Area bookstores. Admission is free for 18 years and under. Call [redacted] for more information, or check out the San Francisco Bay Area BookCouncil's Web site at www.sfbook.org. For more information about the Allen GinsbergPoetry Cafe, call Poetry Flash at [redacted], www.poetryflash.org.

The Poetry Flash Literary Resource Cornerwill be located right next to the Allen Ginsberg Poetry Cafe. It willfeature information about literary events and magazines, and include displays from The Poetry Center/American Poetry Archives, California Poetsin the Schools, Kearny Street Workshop, Haight AshburyLiterary Review, Taurean Horn Press, Floating IslandPublications, and the Bay Area Book Reviewers Awards.

Saturday, October 16

11:00: syllogism2 magazine contributor's reading with Will Alexander, StandardSchaefer, Elizabeth Robinson, Avery Burns, and Opal Palmer Adisa.

Noon: "A Communityof Words Panel: How to be a Featured Reader": ACalifornia Poets & Writers, Inc. panel explores how writers can set upreadings and workshops for themselves and others, moderated by Karen Clark, Poets & Writers, withpanelists Suzanne Lummis (poet and Director of the LA Poetry Festival),Richard Silberg (Poetry Flash @ Cody's Books), Samantha Schoech (Events & Promotions Coordinator, A CleanWell-Lighted Place for Books), Kirk Lumpkin (Cafe International and EcologyCenter).

1:00-1:30: Irish Arts Foundation presentsIrish poets Frank Holt and Joe Ruane, with Irish-American poet Nancy Keene(coordinator of the 3300 Club reading series in SF), with host ConnorHoward.

1:30-2:00: WritersCorps Reading with youthparticipants.

2:00: Rachel Bagby, author ofDivine Daughters: Liberating the Power and Passion of Women'sVoices, performs.

3:00: California Poetry Series/The RoundhousePress reading with poets Suzanne Lummis, author of InDanger, Dan Bellm, author of One Hand on the-Wheel. Book signing follows at the Poetry Flash LiteraryResource Corner right next to the Allen Ginsberg Poetry Cafe.

4:00: The Alchemy of theWord: Voices From the Edge–San Francisco Poets, a poetry performance CD from Awaa-te, with host,poet-contributor/producer Bob Booker, readings by poet-contributors JorgeArgueta, author of Las frutas del centro y otrossabores–Fruit From the Center and Other Flavors, Brett Bevell, Will Dodger, Craig Easley, Jane 69, S.F. Slam champRussell Gonzaga, and Gail Mitchell.

5:00: National Writers Union, Local 3,presents a reading by writers Ben Clarke, Paula Naomi Friedman, Adam DavidMiller, Margot Pimienta Pepper, Alice Rogoff, Marcy Sheiner, and AlfonsoTexidor.

Sunday, October 17

11:00: California Poets in the Schoolsreading by poet-teachers John Fox, Tureeda Mikell, Tobey Kaplan, SusanTerence, with their K–12 students from across the Bay Area. They will demonstrate some of the funcreative writing techniques they use in the classroom.

Noon: Kearny Street Workshop Press reading,with poets and spoken word artists Dennis Somera, Dan Wu, Tony Robles, andAmy Yuen.

1:00–1:15: Junction Press reading withSan Francisco poet Stephen Vincent, author of Walking.

1:15–1:45: Performance poetry withJack & Adelle Foley (Jack Foley is the well-known host of KPFA radio's "Cover-to-Cover." He is the author of Adrift, Gershwin, Dead/Requiem,and the forthcoming O Powerful Western Star,a book of critical essays about poetry, among many other books.

1:45–2:00: Manic D Press Reading withdynamic spoken word/slam poet Tarin Towers, Sorry We're Close.

1:30 on: Simultaneous book signing of the PENOakland Book Award winner, Here I Am: Contemporary JewishStories from Around the World, with co-editors

Marsha Lee Berman and Elaine Marcus Starkman, at theFlash Literary Resource Corner next to theAllen Ginsberg Poetry Cafe.

2:00: The Poetry Center/SFSU presents six BayArea Iranian American poets and fiction writers: Persis M. Karim, MaryamOvissi, Zara Houshmand, Katayoon Zandvakili, Sanaz Niaein, and Shadi Ziaei,contributors to A World Between: Poems, Short Stories, and Essays by IranianAmericans, a new anthology (George Braziller). The anthology is edited by Ms. Karim,a poet who teaches English at San Jose State University, and Mohammad MehdiKhorrami, Persian poet and professor at New York University. The anthologyincludes representative voices from an Iranian American community that today numbers over a million.

3:00: Members of the Bay Area's—San Francisco, Oakland, and San Jose—Poetry Slam teams, acclaimedwinners of the National Poetry Slam 1999 in Chicago.

4:00: New College of California WritingPrograms reading with Mexican poet Juvenal Acosta with fellow facultymembers, poets Neeli Cherkovski, Michael Price, and Judy Grahn, withgraduate students from New College.

↑ Index

9. Brendan Lorber

NO TIME TO LOSE AT THE ZINC BAR

Fri 1 Oct 1999

October is a full month for the ZINC BAR SUNDAY NIGHT READING SERIES, with 5 Sundays & 2 Emergency Midweek readings. We have more readings this month than most nations have in an entire year. All this in the interest of course of getting as many poets on board the ark before the millennial jig is apocolyptically up. So, to save some time, lets get right to the rundown.

SUNDAY OCTOBER 3: CHRIS STROFFOLINO & JANET BOWDAN

SUNDAY OCTOBER 10: PIERRE JORIS & NICO HELMINGER & JEAN PORTANTE

THURSDAY OCTOBER 14 BILL BERKSON & ALICIA MARIE HOWARD

SUNDAY OCTOBER 17: CLEM COLEMAN & KAREN WEISER

SUNDAY OCTOBER 24: THE POETS&WRITERS POETS -- AMY HOLMAN & ERIC WRIGHT & MARY GORDON

TUESDAY OCTOBER 26: JOHN TRANTOR & LEANNE BROWN

SUNDAY OCTOBER 31: SPECIAL COSTUME OPEN MIC

Here's how you can read at the Halloween Costume Reading: wear a costume with a hole where your mouth is. Douglas & Brendan will provide candy, though we will eat it ourselves while you read.

Here's how you can become a scheduled reader on the Zinc bar Sunday Night Reading Series: a) come to the Zinc Bar & during the break buy Douglas a drink. - or - b) come to the Zinc bar & during the break pick up a copy of Brendan's LUNGFULL! Magazine. The important step here is to come to the reading, but the other actions can't hurt.

All readings start at 6:37pm, most of them on Sunday, but apparently, some not. The Zinc Bar is located at 90 West Houston between LaGuardia & Thompson

There's this donation of $3 which goes to the readers. As always, if you don't have the scratch then come anyway but be sure not to enjoy yourself quite as much.

If you need more information call the Zinc Bar Encephalitis Hotline at [redacted] or the Zinc Bar Pesticide Side Effect Hotline at [redacted] or email us at Zinc Bar Y2K Noncompliance Headquarters: [redacted]

LUNGFULL! Magazine #7, the laminated orange issue, with work by Emily Dickinson, The Berrigan Brothers, Walt Whitman, Bill Luoma, Julie Reid, William Blake, Edwin Torres & others, is available at el zinco. So too is an array of succulent drinks.

With abject supplication & eagerness at your hotly anticipated attendance,
We remain your humble
Brendan Lorber &
Douglas Rothschild

PS: stay tuned in November for the release of LUNGFULL! Magazine #8. Contact [redacted] for the skinny if you can't wait.

↑ Index

10. Lowther, John

entertainment

Fri 1 Oct 1999

---

not sure where i came upon this (maybe here?) but whatever the case --- i imagine that there will be those of you who will enjoy it

http://stadiumweb.com/turnstile/turnstile_part2.html

↑ Index

11. Aviva (Vogel) Gabriel

The Holy Virgin Mary/Giuliani Scandal...

Fri 1 Oct 1999

Thought this might be of interest to some folks here...

_____

Subj: [BRC-NEWS] The Real Obscenity
Date: 9/30/99 11:45:02 AM Eastern Daylight Time
From: [redacted] (Workers World)
To: [redacted]

Workers World News

October 7, 1999

EDITORIAL: THE REAL OBSCENITY

There's a public museum in New York that features a breathtakingly offensive piece of "art." It's the American Museum of Natural History. To enter the museum, you must walk by a huge statue of Theodore Roosevelt armed and on horseback, towering above--vanquishing--a Native person and an African person.

Has Mayor Rudolph Giuliani ever said the museum should lose public funding because of this horrible, shockingly racist statue? Of course not. "Art" that celebrates imperialism and colonialism is right up his alley.

But when an artist of African heritage depicts a Christian religious figure in an unconventional way--with a clearly non-European face and partly composed of materials rich in African cultural references--Giuliani blows his stack. The mayor believes this piece is an affront to his religion.

Reason enough, in Giulianiville, for the city to pull $27 million in funding from the Brooklyn Museum of Art. The piece, "The Holy Virgin Mary" by African-British (and Catholic) artist Chris Ofili, is part of the exhibit "Sensation" set to open Oct. 2 at the museum.

The actual affront here is Giuliani's racist, fascist-like assault on artistic freedom. It smacks of Hitlerism. It must not be allowed--in New York, of all places. New York is not only an international center of the arts. It is a multinational city--enlivened every day by the varied, vibrant cultural expressions that emanate from hundreds of different communities.

It's no accident that Giuliani is targeting the Brooklyn Museum. The second-big gest art museum in the entire country, it is in the heart of Brooklyn's Black community. In the recent period, it has more and more featured artists of color, along with educational programs designed for the children of the community. Its permanent collections focus on the arts of Africa and Asia. In October, its "First Saturday" program of arts and entertainment will feature hip-hop/jazz/reggae artist Jeni Fujita, Hawaiian band the Haoles, and a performance by the Mohawk Singers and Dancers.

Giuliani's effort to quash the Brooklyn Museum exhibit is part of a broader attack on freedom of expression for any but those favored by the white, moneyed philistines who rule in this capitalist society. It is allied with the ongoing national offensive to block federal funding for programs that feature artists or art that's unacceptable to the right wing, which mostly means art by or about people of color, lesbians and gays, women.

Yet the mayor claims that blocking funding for the museum does not infringe on the First Amendment right to freedom of expression. This just goes to show how the capitalist establishment will twist its own laws, turn its own Constitution inside out in the interests of its broader political or ideological goals. When Giuliani doesn't like art, he says the city doesn't have to fund it. When he doesn't like political views-- as with the Million Youth March, or the annual October march against police brutality- -he tries to ban them, arguing that the city doesn't have to provide the sidewalks or pay for traffic control, etc. They can show their art in private galleries, he says. Let them give speeches against the police at their own meetings, he says.

Actually, it is precisely public space for free expression that the First Amendment supposedly does protect. And that of course includes public funding. Interestingly enough, government officials regularly make this exact argument when the politics in question are on the other side: Whenever the Klan or the Nazis announce their intent to march, mayors and police officials scramble to protect their "freedom of speech." They clear public spaces for them, provide government vehicles for them to ride in, and so on. Giuliani is no exception; when an ultra-reactionary group recently staged an anti-gay picket outside the Stonewall bar in lower Manhattan, his police protected the bigots and whisked them away in city vehicles when they were done.

So the Constitution protects freedom of expression when the ruling class sanctions what's being expressed. Anything else comes up against the might of the State.

Giuliani's racist war against the Brooklyn Museum is of a piece with his overall program--more police and rising police brutality, dumping impoverished women off welfare and forcing them into slave-labor workfare, shutting city hospitals, cutting funding for AIDS programs, selling off city services to private contractors. In fact, one purpose of his art attack is to divert mass anger away from all this.

It won't work. At the Oct. 1 demonstration to defend the Brooklyn Museum, and beyond, let's build the struggle against Giuliani's attack. Let his Nazi-style offensive come up against the might of the masses--which one day, not too far away, will also topple Teddy Roosevelt from his imperialist perch.

- END -

(Copyleft Workers World Service: Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this document, but changing it is not allowed. For more information contact Workers World, 55 W. 17 St., New York, NY 10011; via e-mail: [redacted]. Web: http://www.workers.org)

[Articles on BRC-NEWS may be forwarded and posted on other mailing lists/discussion forums, as long as proper attribution is given to the author and originating publication, and the wording is not altered in any way. In particular, if there is a reference to a web site where an article was originally located, please do not remove that.

Unless stated otherwise, do not publish or post the entire text of any copyrighted articles on web sites (web-based discussion forums exempted) or in print, without getting explicit permission from the article author or copyright holder. Check the fair use provisions of the copyright law in your country for details on what you can and can't do.

As a courtesy, we'd appreciate it if you let folks know how to subscribe to BRC-NEWS, by leaving in the first two lines of the signature below.]

---------- BRC-NEWS: Black Radical Congress - General News/Alerts/Announcements
---------- Subscribe: Email "subscribe brc-news" to <[redacted]> ----------
---------- Digest: Email "subscribe brc-news-digest" to <[redacted]> ----------
Discussion: Email "subscribe brc-all" to <[redacted]>
---------- Press Releases: Email "subscribe brc-press" to <[redacted]>
---------- Archive: http://www.egroups.com/group/brc-news (The first time, you need to "Join" and set your preferences to "Read on the Web")
---------- Questions/Problems: Send email to <[redacted]> ----------
www.blackradicalcongress.org | BRC | [redacted]

---------- Headers ---------- air-yg01.mail.aol.com (vx) with ESMTP; Thu, 30 Sep 1999 11:45:02 2000

rly-yg02.mx.aol.com (v61.9) with ESMTP; Thu, 30 Sep 1999 11:44:47 -0400 by lists.tao.ca (8.9.3/TAO6) id JAA09204 for brc-news-outgoing; Thu, 30 Sep 1999 09:12:04 -0400
Date: Thu, 30 Sep 1999 09:12:04 -0400
[redacted] using -f
From: Workers World <[redacted]>
Subject: [BRC-NEWS] The Real Obscenity
To: [redacted]

↑ Index

12. Aaron Fewell

Re: Canonicity

Fri 1 Oct 1999

Anyone know of any good websites that have essays published centered on canonicity or textualiy?

Aaron Keith

↑ Index

13. Stephen Cope

Conference Announcement: BEYOND BABEL

Fri 1 Oct 1999

> BEYOND BABEL
> Common Language, Common Differences, Common Ground
>
> Western Humanities Alliance - 18th Annual Conference
>
> UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SAN DIEGO
> October, 14-15-16, 1999
>
> http://orpheus.ucsd.edu/lit/babel.html
>
> Conference access is free and open to everyone
> ---
>
> Opening of the Conference
>
> THURSDAY OCTOBER 14
> 4:00-5:30 PM
> Price Center Ballroom
>
> Welcome - Frantisek Deak, Dean, Arts and Humanities
> - Simon Williams, Director, Western Humanties Alliance
> - Marcel Henaff, Conference Organizer

Keynote Address:

DOUGLAS HOFSTADTER, Cognitive Science, Indiana University

"Human Cognition as a Blur of Analogy and Blending"

Areas of discussion:
1. Hybridization of Cultures / Cultures of Hybridization
2. Crossing of Disciplines and of Models of Knowledge
3. Blending of Artistic Forms
4. Integration of Cognitive Processes.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15

9:00 - 10:30 - Panels:
Postmodern Hybridity: the Politics and Poetics of Culture [Area 1]
Colonialism and Shifting Alliances [Area 1]
Community and The Language of Babel [Area 2]
Logics of Interdisciplinary Inquiry [Area 2]

11:00 - 12:30 - PLENARY SESSION [area 1]
Speaker: Aihwa ONG, Anthropology, UC Berkeley
"Questions of Globalization"

2:00-3:30 PM - Panels:
Negotiating Communities as Hybrids [Area 1]
Crossing Space and Time [Area 2]
Emotions, Analogies and Disanalogies [Area 2/3]
Extended Range Poetries [Area 3]

4:00-5:50 PM - PLENARY SESSION [area 2]
Speaker: Paul RABINOW, Anthropology, UC Berkeley
"Biopolitics Today"

6:00 PM
SPACED OUT: SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA VERNACULAR
An Exhibition of Works About Space in Southern California

Curated by: Steve Ausbury and Sarah Lewison
Opening Reception/Party: Friday, October 15 at 6:00 PM
Herbert Marcuse Student Gallery, right side of Russell Ln. off Gilman Dr.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER. 16

9:00 - 10:30 AM - Panels:
Identity and Narratives, Imaging Culture [Area 1]
Nation, Center and Margins [Area 1]
Spaces of Theater [Area 3]
Contemporary Art Mixes [Area 3]
Conceptual Blending [Area 4]

11:00 - 12:30 - PLENARY SESSION [area 3]
Speaker: Charles BERNSTEIN, English and Writing, SUNY Buffalo
"The Art of Immemorability"

2:00 - 3:30 PM - Panels:
Islam and Modernity [Area 1]
Japanese Hybridizations [Area 1]
Knowing and Imagining [Area 2]
Hybridization and Vernaculars in Music [Area 3]
Cognitive Strategies [Area 4]

4:00 - 5:30 PM - PLENARY SESSION [area 4]
Speaker: Mark TURNER, English and Cognitive Science, U of Maryland
"The Forbidden Fruit: the Role of Conceptual Integration in Literary and Artistic Creativity"

Conference Organizer: Marcel Henaff, UCSD

Planning Committee: David Antin, Visual Arts, UCSD; Gilles Fauconnier, Cognitive Sciences, UCSD; Andrew Feenberg, Philosophy, SDSU; Douglas White, Anthropology, UCI

Conference Manager: Lucinda Rubio

Information: Christa Beran
[redacted] or fax [redacted]

For a complete list of panelists, discussants and for other information (maps, hotels etc) see our website:
http://orpheus.ucsd.edu/lit/babel.html

Marcel Henaff
UCSD-0410

> La Jolla, CA 92093
>
> Marcel Henaff
> UCSD-0410
> La Jolla, CA 92093

↑ Index

14. MAYHEW
preliminary results
Fri 1 Oct 1999

A hypothesis: most people read more or less selectively, randomly. Reading straight through a book carries a special connotation of professional literary criticism and/or respect for the author's intentions--if one is reviewing a book, for example, it might be felt necessary to do at least one straight through reading--as opposed to reading"for oneself." It seems to me that even if one skips around, one still has a sense of where a poem stands in the collection as a whole, e.g. this is the last poem, the first poem, the last poem of the first section. Thus the order is not disregarded or disrespected, simply not followed.

Has anyone noticed the preponderance of last names ending in N among Watergate Conspirators--Nixon, John Dean, Erlichman, Haldemann... it's eerie. Or could it be that N is simply one of the highest frequency letters in English and German, the languages of origins of many surnames in the US? All the more so since so many names end in the patronymic -son or -sen. Nahh, it's got to have more meaning than this...

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

↑ Index

15. Alan Sondheim
Fundamental Systems
Fri 1 Oct 1999

-

Fundamental Systems (Was: Couplings and Linkages) {file:zz}

Fri Oct 1 01:53:52 EDT 1999 N a azure fbw julu kdate lisp lynx_bookmarks.html mail minicom.log newju nsmail trace z.gif zz Let's say there is a binary structure, consisting of an operation N such that N(a,b) -> a relationship between a,

b. Say that a, b are terms which stand for sets of identical members, as far as the structure is concerned - i.e. a = {x:x = a} & b = {y:y = b}. Note that x and y can be anything; the terms are dummy. The structure is then S = (N,a,b).

Then we may be concerned with the _phenomenology_ of S, thinking through the semantics of (a,b) in relation to the framework N. It is irrelevant for example that if N = +, we might have +(4,3) = 7. We are not interes- ted in constructing a result c - only that a relationship between a and b is established.

For example, N = + resulting into the terms coalesced beneath the sign of addition; N = red resulting into equivalence; N = identity producing the singularity of a and b; N = existing at time t(N) resulting in a foreclos- ing or frameworking of a and b; and so forth. We can have a linkage such that if a or be is eliminated, so is the other; we can have a coupling such that if a or b are both on a shelf, taking either off has no effect on the other.

Then I may attempt to produce a metaphysics of such a system - or rather to forestall the production of such a metaphysics, deconstructing the framework of any metaphysics vis-a-vis the system. Or rather, I can argue towards a metaphoricity of relationship (linkage, coupling, etc.), reify- ing the terms and placing them within a matrix of parallelisms. Such a metaphoricity can also be used to similarly deconstruct parallelisms.

But to _believe_ in such metaphoricities or metaphysics as _fundamental_ is also to create a work of astonishing coherency, the real beneath the sign of relation and its deconstruction. For example, think of a _basic property of things_ - that they are linked or coupled or decoupled. This strategy tends towards one or another universal exegesis.

Instead, I see N(a,b) as particulate matter - for example, N(a,a) can be a harbinger of substance if N implies augmentation such that N(a,a) = N(a,a,a) and so forth. This is an _unfolding of the frame_ or the cinema- tic real. Mail archive archives bin boot core dev etc export holding hosts htdocs kadb lib log lost+found mnt net pcfs restoresymtable sbin setterm src staff sys tmp users usr var vmunix vmunix-lkm vmunix-raid zz

Just so, the simplest number system is to the base 1: 1, 11, 111, etc. - and the most extravagant is to the base of an inaccessibly high number such that every numerical representation is uniquely identified by a unary ideogram, shades of Borges for example

These are all fragments of the imaginary - and it is _critical_ to under- stand this; they are part-objects, imminent within the real of the subject and never immanent; their transcendence lies in the inauthenticity of their simplicity, as if they were fundamental. Here is where the astonish- ing work of coherency comes into play: consider that they are _not_ funda- mental, that on the level of the life-world, _almost_ all the way up or down, there is no fundamentality at all: as if the grounds of the real themselves were decoupled "for all practical purposes." wskbd2 wskbd3 wsmouse0 wsmouse1 wsmouse2 wsmouse3 wt0 wt16 wt8 zero zz

Suppose for example, the complexity of the universe all the way down, dri- ven by higher and higher energies, resulting in more and more basic parti- cles: One might well say that the complexity of the universe is the direct result of the energy used to examine it. As a corollary, from Brillouin to some extent: the complexity of the universe is then in direct proportion to the capital (economic/ industrial/theoretical) used in such an examina- tion. In such a manner, the _order_ of the world is in direct relation to the social organization and its sur- plus, of a given civilization. Mail News a calendar jobs ld lisp lynx_bookmark- s.html mail phoenix.hlp phoenix.irc tf tf-lib thing tiny.world trace venom.irc volt.irc zz

One may talk of the mirroring of the world, and note again the apparent in- creasingly complexity of the mathematics and mathesis required in the ongoing progress and investigation of the physics of the real, on _any_ level from the sub-particle to the overall cosmos, and their conjoining.

To retreat to the binary is to conjure the dream of rendering the literal book of nature accessible - to create a stasis in modelling in the midst of universal transformation. One might speak again of Foucault's _divina- tio,_ a dream of a book of nature, augmented by a dream of universal rea- son. DIR_COLORS HOSTNAME NETWORKING X11 XF86Config aliases aliases.db at.deny bootptab conf.modules

On the other hand, such a retreat is also the catalyst for a major publi- cation; the real is revealed in all its coherency, and the world-system, as reproduced, is an occasion for both foreclosing and framework - now, not only of a and b, but also of a scope expanded to fulfill the promise, virtue, and style of the world. This is a wonder, and I oscillate between hope for a primal leverage, absolute signifiers (which also seem of nec- essity to be restatements of universal law on the level of micro-physics), and a dull recognition of the increasing fragmenta- tion of the life-worlds on the planet - almost as if the world were nothing more than Markov- chains of shorter and shorter length. X11R6 bin games include lib libdata libexec lkm local mdec sbin share tmp zz

The specifics of the leverage would not matter - just as the details of universal equations spell out varying phenomenologies, but their very transcendence is a symptom of overt organization, and deity for some. The universal cosmic phe- nomenon of peering into the past (objects so distant that it may take a billion years for light to reach us, objects otherwise ungraspable) may be taken to im- ply radical disconnects, signals from what appear to be disconsolate objects, expiring objects, objects at a loss in relation to the human flicker on earth. And radical disconnects fragment our own relation to the real as well; hence, the imaginary or that proble- matic which resists symbolization. Connect such symbolization vis-a-vis metaphor with the body (Lakoff), and "graspable" becomes, itself, a rela- tion between model and modeller: Our world is deeply ungraspable, our im- ages universally mediated, determined at least in part by economics, ener- gies, and the exigencies of the viewing apparati themselves. aculog authlog authlog.0.gz authlog.1.gz authlog.2.gz authlog.3.gz cron cron.0.gz cron.1.gz cron.2.gz cron.3.gz cron.errs cron.errs.0.gz daemon.log daemon.log.0.gz daemon.log.1.gz daemon.log.2.gz daemon.log.3.gz maillog.1.gz maillog.10.gz maillog.11.gz maillog.12.gz maillog.13.gz messages.0.gz messages.1.gz messages.2.gz messages.3.gz messages.4.gz messages.5.gz morelogs namedlog notices notices.0.gz notices.1.gz wtmp wtmp.0.gz wtmp.1.gz wtmp.2.gz wtmp.3.gz wtmp.4.gz wtmp.5.gz wtmp.6.gz wtmp.7.gz xferlog zzlog

We are left with a partial _log_ of a continuous conversation, replete with expanding knowledges, finer and finer tolerances - but a conversation nonetheless, of fragments, micro-exhaustions (Stent's analyses of the field of trignometry for example), and increasingly complex equations or metaphysics. Driven by energy and economics, there is no end in sight; what may eventually stare back at us through scientific exploration is ourselves, our machinery. Heisenberg was only the first crack in the mir- ror in this literal regard; what is impossible in fine-tuning position and momentum is also metaphor for the fine-tuning of existence itself. For it is not unreasonable to assume that higher energies propose newer partic- les, linked in groupings, the end nowhere in sight. As far as binary oper- ations per se, they remain within the imaginary of the dream and the dream of the imaginary; they hold us in our fundamentally Aristotelian world, in which the laws of distribution hold, and within which we may fall in love, throw a ball, or speak, as if difference were upheld, or shattered. cat chio chmod cp csh date dd df domainname echo ed expr hostname kill ksh ln ls mkdir mt mv pax ps pwd rcmd rcp rm rmail rmdir sh sleep stty sync test zz

---

↑ Index

16. Robert Freedman

Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)

Fri 1 Oct 1999

I always find myself going to the last page, probably the habit of reading prayer books from right to left--but I'd prefer that others think that it's because I can only fully possess the book and have a right to shelve it if I've felt the heft of pages right to left and left to right.

Just an afterthought, but am I the only one who cares about the smell and feel of the pages when I decide to add a book to my collection? Before I retired as an acquisitions librarian/cataloger in a public library, I had written several letters to Farrar, S & G about their cheap bindings (I didn't have the nerve to tell them they didn't smell that good either!) considering that they published many fine novels. I got answers from various clerks to the effect that they would certainly take my comments into consideration.

If there were an award for the books with the finest texture and smell for the price, Sun and Moon would rank high.

Bob Freedman

----- Original Message -----
From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, September 30, 1999 5:53 PM
Subject: Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)

> myself i skip around
> except
> one exception
> bpNichol Martyrology book 6 books
> read straght thru
> "couldn't put it down" etc
> like a teenager w/ an erotic novel
> except
> i wasn't fastforwarding looking for the > steamy scenes it was all pretty
> steamy to me in terms of > heart/language...

↑ Index

17. Lowther, John
The Smell of Books
Fri 1 Oct 1999

---

robt freedman
you are not alone

i too stick a nose in and enjoy the heft

texture etc of cover pages, spine

and i wd also say that sun & moons books have a desirability that it their physicality only enhances sharpens etc

i can still open certain older books of mine and smell my way into the contents scent triggering memories of things within

↑ Index

18. Lowther, John
~IS~ FORM NEVER MORE THAN AN EXTENSION OF CONTENT?
Fri 1 Oct 1999

{ p o e t i x }

[{ (THIS IS A LENGTHY POST, I FOREWARN YOU, IF THE WHOLE FORM/CONTENT ISSUES SEEMS TO YOU TO BE SETTLED OR IRRELEVANT OR WHATEVER, YOU MIGHT WISH TO DELETE NOW RATHER THAN GOING ANY FURTHER ---- my apologies to digest readers) }]

form

p o e t i c form

"politics of.." (?)

this stuff, i'm good at putting it out of my mind for reasonably long periods ----- it's like philosophy, right ? "that's why i love phil osophy no one wins" [so cage says suzuki said] and as such it's not the solving but the wondering about it ------ i've been told that my interest in this is anachronistic, that younger poets today see no meaningful distinction ----- curious, at least, i find that curious, or maybe i find it untrue, i think that might be more to the point of my feeling as when i talk to poets about things which seem "content-specific" and/or "form-specific" the way the answers come suggests that i'm not asking about the same ~thing~ ------ another poet told me that i was "stuck back there" (meaning.. the 50s? 60s?..?) this was in response to my interest in writers like cage, antin, etc ------ the suggested tonic was a bracing read of bruce andrews' critical work ------ so i read some, that is i read some again ------ it didnt really change anything, i found it as eloquent as it had been and ultimately perhaps less convincing where am i going with this ? (form as ramble, content as...)

i'm not sure ---- but there are a few things that come to mind which might lead somewhere having read any number of arguments about the political import of form i'd like to either confess or assert my skepticism ----- confess, if it turns out that someone is able to show me why i should be convinced (that is, i'm not unwilling to be convinced, i'm just not) and ------ assert, if it should turn out that i remain unconvinced that "form" has anything other than extremely limited political implications now i realize there are many who will immediately want to dispute and or support this notion ----- but if i can, if it matters that i try to, suggest, that before any of us stake ourselves on the question or before we post something ringing here on the list, that whomever wishes to wave whatever flag or just offer their 2 cents try to deal with the semantic questions ----- what you take the two term's ~use~ to be, or what they ~mean~ or however you prefer to approach it (i've nothing against "meaning" so, on my account at least, no one need worry that i'll quibble at that ----- tho i will certainly ask questions if i don't "get" yr meaning)

there is an interview with david antin, from vort ? i cant recall right now, but in it he talks briefly about his consideration of this question and of an experience wherein the more he thought about it the less form meant and the more all the things that had been called ~form~ seemed clearly (to him) to be "content" --- i apologize for not having this handy to quote, but i think that that was the gist, a sort of ah-ha situation wherein repeated tests for "form" kept turning up "content" until it seemed safe to conclude that form was nowhere now i mention this as something rather similar happened to me but on the other end of the see-saw ------ content didn't "disappear" per se, but it didnt seem conceivable without form whereas (i told myself at that time) form did ---- rather form seemed "abstractable" in the sense that one can have an idea of the form of a pyramid without it being a pyramid whose content was bricks or glass or marshmallows or whatever and i read this prescindability of form from content but not content from form as indication of it being, more.. essential ? more foundational ? i dunno (my opinion hasnt stayed with this formulation) more recently antin writes; About form -- The word almost always from its origins suggests configuration, shape, outline and almost always drags that origin behind it. It even drags that along in Cage's definition Composition as Process, where he defines it as "the morphology of the continuity", which is nothing more than a longwinded way to say shape and include within this notion the sequence of shifts moving from beginning to end. When someone says "sonata form" he/she is providing an outline of the sequence of actions seemingly required by the genre. I find this kind of commentary mostly trivial. My sense of structure is of something more profound -- it is a notion of the organization of function. The two can be seen to overlap in some uses. When one speaks of the shape of an arrow, one is also speaking in part of its structure because the shape plus its materiality are what allow it to perform its action of penetration (.and perhaps resistance to removal). When you speak of rhyme, you're speaking of one of the structural properties of some kind of verbal work -- a particular form of (usually arbitrary) phonologic repetition --. The alliteration (consonantal rhyme) of Anglo Saxon poetry is similarly a structural feature, combined with the pausal break it has to bridge (Germanic caesura) and with certain notions of formulaic appositional phrasing. Dante's terza rima is similarly structural, it is not formal. That is to say the discourse has to pass through the micro-organization of the rhyme scheme; this is part of its dynamic but it says nothing about the overall shape of the poem. As far as the terza rima is concerned, it could have propelled a very short poem or a very long one. But the principle of interlocked successive phrases has a real significance for that work that can be neutralized by the descriptive or narrative structure, emphasized or muted. Still, rhyme hasnt been an interesting structural principle in a long time, except in pop songs. In neo-formalist verse it mainly plays the role of declaring a kind of propriety -- like wearing a tie and would probably work better if it was more like wearing spats. But more seriously -- if you look at a painting by Barney Newman, a discussion of the form is ridiculous. There is a sea of color broken by a fissure that can be seen as erupting from beneath it like magma rising from an ocean floor or like light breaking through a chromatic cloud. The placement and choice of the fissure matters but it's not a formal mattering, it's a dynamic mattering. In some of the works, it isn't entirely obvious whether these "stripes" emerge from below the field or whether the field lies beneath them and is threatening or promising to engulf them. There is no overall form. There is a tension between the elements that Newman was working with. And of course, the reason that these paintings matter has to do with the cultural history and consequent psychological history of paint and color. I could sketch out a similar though different dynamic for Rothko, or Pollock or De Kooning. These art works are not formally organized. There is a structural dynamic that plays itself out. I could lay out a structural dynamic of a very different sort for pop-artists like Lichtenstein or Warhol. And they both employ the most obvious and banal examples of commercial design (form in its most trivial sense), but the use is ironical, and their structure is not based on issues of painting but on issues of representation and illustration. I could go on, but the question is hardly worth beating to death.

and this i dug in that he's insisting on there being overtones to "form" that aren't useful or meaningful for him and instead talking about these things as "structure" or the "organization of function" ---- that is, i like the distinction, but i've heard plenty of folks ~use~ form in this way, as a dynamic rather than static "shape-like" principle

anyway

i came upon an old issue of boundary 2, a special issue on creeley [spring/fall 78] and in the lengthy interview with william spanos rc talks about his sense of form and content, it goes like this (i've tried as best i can to preserve the look of the text which isn't justified and which looks very much like one of antin's talk poems does on the page save that it uses punctuation);

spanos: ...but i'm uncertain whether or not most people who read yours and olson's poetry really understand it "form is never more than an extension of content." (. . .)

creeley: see the dilemma there as i gather over the years is pretty precisely in the word "content." (. . .) because for many people the word "content" implies and/or states sort of mental furniture (. . .) i really felt however vaguely at that point that it wasn't content it was what was in the actual system that could manifest "itself" by whatever form was possible. I mean the thing that i even then most insistently used as example was the circumstance that happens let's say what happens when you take a glass of water and just dump it on the floor? the fact of water the content inherently of water discovers a form a form specific to its "nature" to put it loosely on the surface it meets with. no ~idea~ of water will change that situation so to speak. and ~that~ was the sense of content i like murder will out i suppose is what i was mostly thinking of the nature of murder as an act will discover itself not because anyone thinks or wants it to be that way but because ~per se~ it ~is~ that way (p.22-23)

and this is interesting to me --- i follow it and think i'm getting it and then i think about it again and it starts to look more and more puzzling to me ---- it seems to suggest no "intent" that the content should find any form in particular but an acceptance that it will find one of necessity and that this will be it's form the splash it's content makes coming into being but then consider this from "Notebook, January 31 - April 3, 1977";

Form seems to begin with possibility (human), ends with habit (information stabilized). I use threes and fours in poems just as I might use two by fours and right angled 'corners' -- they 'do' something in each case. Stones and bricks, or, more accurately, a rounding surface as against a four-square one. Threes fall forward, fours sit. And can, incidentally, 'stop' anywhere -- whereas threes must come to a 'balance.' (same volume p.78)

~what?~

i mean, well, i think that this is very interesting too right ? but it feels very odd next to the other quote and makes me feel increasingly like i don't have much grip on creeley's understanding of the terms form and content at all --- am i to assume that what he knows about "threes and fours" is due simply to a lot of experience splashing content out there and finding that it lands in threes and fours ? am i truly to believe that some of his longer poems that are so resolutely in quatrains, have no intent, no impulse to ~quartrainicity~ ?

this isnt meant as criticism of creeley but offered up in hopes that for someone else it will be very clear and that they might enlighten me (us?) about it i say that but at the same time i think that form/content is something of a koan (kent johnson suggested this to me a year or more ago) for poets --- good, on account of insolubility, for asking what the fuck one actually does mean by some statement or another in midst of muddle

out {for now}

)L

↑ Index

19. David Baratier
Re: Jacket #8
Fri 1 Oct 1999

Thanks Ron...

The first thing I would bring up is a re-iteration of praise for the work James Weil did with Elizabeth, both magazine and press. Most of the author's Weil published on the press were picked up by other publishers when they folded, Eigner, Neidecker, Enslin, Bronk, and so on, but Perchik bounced from house to house, both university and non, only having Dusty Dog and Shearsman (regular publishers of chapbooks) as constant supporters. I became aware of Elizabeth by finally looking up a Perchik book _Which hand holds the brother_ at the Schenectady Library after seeing so many of his pieces in journals & bought _The club fits either hand_ at the now defunct Boulevard Bookstore in Albany NY.

Perchik denies being serial in his work. And yet, there are a few hundred poems from each: Family of Man series, the W series, and another. Each time he finishes writing to a book of photographs the series ends. There are elements of seriality from _Snowcat Poems_ onward. All I know is, as an editor, I am very tired of * as a titling mechanism, after inputting 15 books.

The stacks of prose, which were eventually paired down to _a_ poem, are all archived at Princeton library if there is further interest about the process.

While Si does carpet bomb all the journals out there, he also reads them. I learned a phenomenal amount from him about journals such as Golden Goose, Manroot, Black Mountain, Yugen, 50's/ 60's, Kayak, all from the late forties to now. Perchik talks of magazines because they are what his main source is, never anthologies. All of Perchik's published books resulted from being in a magazine, then being asked for a book, Pavement Saw is no exception. Perchik's main literary influence, which I think is in the interview, is Vincente Alexandre'. Corman, Olson, and Blackburn and others are contemporaries.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

20. David Baratier
Pavement Saw 4
Fri 1 Oct 1999

Pavement Saw 4
80 pages, Perfect Bound, Color cover. Holds uneven furniture rightly straight when slid underneath.
ISBN: 1-886350-03-5 $5.00 P/P

Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus, OH 43206

or SPD
2 Examples below
==========
Featured writer:
Sandra Kohler

#4

If I were a man, I'd write erection sonnets,
Like Will or Berryman, play with my name, my tools.
Instead I must be pregnant:
My severed tubes suspend all nature's rules,
Grow whole. From a crowded room our separate Clothed bodies levitate, naked, radiant,
To a solitude beneath the nose of no one.
Scandal's breath grows roses we are bedded on;
It is Adonis' garden: you are form
And I am Venus, all that matters
To the seedling future. Possessing me you enter
The garden in the garden. What's invisible Shall be real: here are words for it.

Also:

Ruth Anderson Barnett, Kurt Brown, Sean Brendan-Brown,
Tom Bridwell, Matthew Cooperman, Richard Deming, Mark DuCharme, Stephen Ellis, Gary Fincke, Sherry Flick, Tony Gloeggler, Eric Howard, Adrianne Kalfopoulou, Nancy Kuhl, Anna Leahy, Gordon Massman, Joshua McKinney, Fred Muratori, Simon Perchik, Christopher Putnam, Brian Richards, Don Schofield, Chris Stroffolino, Mark Taska, Tod Thilleman, Kevin Varrone, Anne Ohman Youngs

TOM BRIDWELL

FROM TEXT TOWARD BUILDING A HOUSE

2. Pulling the Starting Cord

I had forgotten those firm cowgirl asses encased so sweetly in fitted jeans. The Miracle of Work. The slightly spread thighs from much riding. I feel as though I was delaminating. In Colorado I price windows and patio doors. In Utah I pick up the argon-filled thermopanes I had stashed toward this house. Pack a ballast of books (to fill the space tightly) and layer glass and one inch foam, wrap the guns in plastic bags in case of rain. Grab a box of photos to remember the past. February the 11th I pass papers on the land. The house grows in my mind and I could build it from just a footprint. When I leave the girls Samara is crying just barely under control.

We had a wonderful three days and nights. Motel in Utah with a kitchenette and HBO; a lovely drive and hike in Arches. Time with friends. We drive a lot, on these visitations, sharing whatever time we can. Sun on sandstone wall on the river road, 128, along the waters. The way the light strikes. Pepperoni and cheese discussing house sites at the Dewey Bridge. Posing among the red rock. Ordinary things.

A Calvinistic moroseness (like a depressed dog staring at his bowl) without any epistemology or even the vaguest theory, a dialog about dialog, John and I, after everyone has left. It's snowing hard and we're standing at the fire-pit, smoking; a conversation about the elusive percentage, the critical mass, that might be required to represent any actual thing. The salient cream that rises.

Then thinking that there will be at least part of another summer with the girls in the trailer while building the house. Playing at house. No room. Then back to the bonfire, all the while driving across Kansas. John said 'it all comes from the Southwest now', and I can't remember if it was the weather or culture. There are 54 fourteeners in Colorado, always one in your face. I had to leave the west for fear of heights.

Coming back, the Little Wabash has flooded southern Indiana. You can't see the river for the water. The conversation runs to drainage. Blue Darter hawks work the edge of the road levee. A Magritte floatage of farmers. As I remember, everything is gray, the water, the sky, everything. Large areas, in the middle distance, where the sky meets the water, lack any definition. Caffeine and sleep-deprivation are a powerful drug. While everyone else sleeps, I think about the house plans.

↑ Index

21. David Baratier

Larry's

Fri 1 Oct 1999

I am bringing in a number of folks from out of town, including some list members, there is an open mic after each reading. Here is the next few months:

Readers:

October 4th
Tony Libby

October 11th
Dave Snodgrass is from Cleveland

October 18th
Timothy Russell is an amazing reader. Just in from Japan!

October 25th
Diane Kendig

November 1st
Dead Poets

November 8th
Ron Houchin

November 15th
Pamela Kircher

November 22nd- A big howdy to luigi-bob drake - editor, burning press-- http://www.burningpress.org/bphome.html

November 29th
Pamela Steed-Hill's first book has great roadkill poems

December 6th
Colin Dearth

Monday's
7 pm
2040 N. High St.
Columbus Ohio

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

22. A H Bramhall
(Methodology) How Bo Diddley Saves Me
Fri 1 Oct 1999

---

the end of blank pages, the freedom of outpouring, who needs happiness? I'm electrically connected.

method has always been simple. staring blankly at anything or nothing, I pose the question, worded just so: who do you love? I believe the question is directed towards me, but not necessarily always so. I try to think in my most vapid manner (which I have practiced). soon, a road appears. friends, this is a strange world that I see before me. I forthwith run, dance, tumble along, always with a sense that forward is a direction, and I am going that way. this may not work for all. it may not even be true, but don't let that be a barrier. just follow the implication.

okay, I fooled you all, I was having you on. simplicity works for me. I sit at the writing machine and wait for my turn. when my turn arrives, I think of arctic terns that migrate from one end of this globe to the other, valiantly, dutifully, and for highly mysterious reasons. it's a great image, and the words pour forth.

fooled you again, actually. I'm not about images. I have words, plain words, to deal with, before they deal with me. and so, on an afternoon when I have the freedom, specifically at 3:02, as I look at this watch I was given, I place fingers to keyboard, listening to a musical rendition of a song "Who Do You Love", a song that truly exists, for you possibly as well as for me. sometimes it exists played at breakneck speed, all the better. and so: words, effort, thinking, and lost (loss) and found. and mud, the celebration of earth and water. anyway, thank you for your interest, the world is not always kind.

↑ Index

23. Alan Sondheim
Brooklyn Museum Rally (fwd)
Fri 1 Oct 1999

==

The rally is over, at least for today. It was great to see a functioning multicultural coalition, ranging from Rev. Docherty to Norman Siegal, and from Susan Sarandon to Jane Alexander. Judy Blume, Dred Scott, and a num- ber of other speakers were incredibly eloquent. I think the crowd was pro- bably about 2000; it was much larger than expected.

Some of the points: Recent Supreme Court decisions have indicated that a government cannot withold funding for _specific_ shows; it can only refuse funding basically as a matter of policy. If Giuliani gets away with this, the city libraries can be next, since they're also supported by city funds and have works which are anti-religious, obscene, etc. within them. Why do we have to fight the same tired battles over and over again, every decade? Meanwhile Giuliani is in California raising money for the Senate race. And this battle is _not_ just local and isn't just about censorship; it's also about the increasing right-wing clampdown on this country.

Where were you? If you are in New York, please get involved with this and other issues - police brutality for example. (I must say, as did the org- anizers, that the 78 Precinct, which is also mine, was terrific.) You can get more information by going to New York Civil Liberties Union website at http://www.nyuclu.org There are gonig to be more protests; there is a vigil at the museum tomorrow (Saturday) night at 8:45-9:00.

Please do what you can. We have a great deal to fear in the next elections - Senator Giuliani, President Bush, and a Republican right-wing Congress. Whatever party you belong to, don't stand for this sort of censorship.

Alan

Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

24. Philip Nikolayev
COMPILER ERRORS
Fri 1 Oct 1999

COMPILER ERRORS

For Alan Sondheim

ause compiler errors. Often when you do this the cause compiler errors. Often when you do this the compiler will give you a parse error.
compiler will give you a parse error.
Welcome to CS50!

The character '{' is called a left curly brace, or an open curly brace.
The character ':}' is called a right curly brace, or a close curly brace.
The character '[' is called a left square brace, or an open square brace.
cause compiler errors. Often when you do this the cause compiler errors. Often when you do this the compiler will give you a parse error.
compiler will give you a parse error.
The character ']' is called a right square brace, or a close square brace.
cause compiler errors. Often when you do this the ll
c:ompiler will give you a parse error.

```
$(INT_BIN):     $(INT_OBJ)
        $(CC) -o $@ $(CFLAGS) $(INT_OBJ) $(LIBS)
```

You will sometimes forget to add semi-colons
~
~
~
"vi_file1" 24 lines, 892 characters

↑ Index

25. Elizabeth Treadwell

New Michael Palmer Book

Fri 1 Oct 1999

---

passing along some news from Avec Books ---

Avec Books is looking for someone to temporarily host a web page for >Michael Palmer's _Danish Notebook_, out next week. (The pub. date is Oct.
>8th.) The promotion copy and software Avec uses is for the Mac. Cydney >Chadwick will overnight a copy of the book so the cover can be scanned. She >could also try and send a giff or j.peg file of the cover as an attachment.
>She can send the publication information via attachments or e-mail. If >anyone is willing to help, please backchannel Cydney at:[redacted]

↑ Index

26. miekal and

Heir of Literature Spills from Broken Book

Fri 1 Oct 1999

Misha Sprocket, do.not.hold.these.words.as.dear

Limbs extending outward from. These eyes are your eyes, not mine? Subliminal does not sublimation account, the totality of ambiguous minions, three-pronged intervention in complacency & the next best thing since Broach desire & concede. How many probabilties open, numerous, random facination in the ragweed forest, a jungle of planatation. ex- but not above append to the end of an emotional document. Metaphors are in collusion with the conspiracy to untitle. Doctor of manifestation appears humble, bold, surrounded in a once that defies a quiet moment when we can meet in between.

"Mine are minor." Restitution based on appropriated meanings that are sly or otherwise witty. Such a gaunt caricature, the rings around the eyes, I wonder why I even got up in the morning when the internet is embodied all night. A simple way to say this is. She fell toward grace, but only as an act of fruition, seven shiny apples in a window. My transparency is vibrant, but not hungry.

Singularity is common even among disagreement. Parataxis is definitely not 2 taxis bound for collision, otherwise I would dispair & ask for a ride. Given the ability of all subtexts to degenerate I am seeking concordances among those Ive never met, as if to touch untouchables.

metamata, [redacted]

The ultimatum pinpoints the absolute molecule of Grace. Stories before, in a coded land only a tinge of spell awoke the peacekeepers. A 1000 Arthurs, & a shovel of pardons, every moment cratered in a suspicious gnosis. Provocation by characters not provided for in the story sketch, aware of their fictive limits, stretched amid awe. The sanction to write declared hereby polyvocal, simultaneous & considered, but as usual, somewhere the text always reduces to the -emes between words. One net commandeered another, you so lonely there in siber s p a c e. Where are the murmur texts in our periphery, singularity populated Her idol cavern.

Roland Barthes, [redacted]

the more ravaging term
then perhaps the subject concerned with destruction
grasps at every point
but quickly exposes itself
we are all caught up in the truth

the leisure of bygone readings
where we can hear the grain of the throat
whenever I attempt without ever introducing anything
the very utterance
the other reading skips nothing
psychoanalysis must be traversed
but it is doubtless violence must be coded
if it were possible to imagine
we have either the course outside bliss but not necessarily deplored except like a bird who understand nothing
only in total atopia

ENTER YOUR STORY:
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/d.htm

↑ Index

27. Summi Kaipa

Interlope & Summi Email and Address Change

Sat 2 Oct 1999

All correspondence for Summi Kaipa & Interlope Magazine:

Please note that this email address is on its last leg this weekend and will soon collapse.

My new email is: [redacted]

Mail will be forwarded for some time, but please don't send anything to the other address if you can help it. Thanks.

Also, snail mail:

PO Box 423058
San Francisco CA 94142
or 144 Albion St
San Francisco CA 94110

↑ Index

28. Catherine Daly
Re: an informal survey (which read how etc)
Sat 2 Oct 1999

---

1. jacket
2. bio material
3. acknowledgements/publications
4. the poem(s) published in journals I a) like, b) hate
5. I love a good index of first lines!
6. any notes, although their presence / content is prejudicial. they are like individual poem intros at readings: boring and unnecessary, "this is a _sestina_. a sestina is...", pretentious, "I mention these things you can't possibly know about...", or essentially bio material.
7. table of contents
8. first poem
9. last poem

(if they're not very long -- if they are, then skip to 9.)

10. random (short) poem
11. poems that have appealing titles
12. sequentially, the short poems
13. sequentially

Never the introduction: I save that for strange times I have when I must read nonfiction. Then I go through my books and read all the intros.

William Matthews once told me, about poem order in books, "Oh, just have a glass of wine and put them together." That said, what seems to be demanded by editors/judges is some sort of very deliberate _narrative_, which doesn't seem to reflect how anyone actually reads a collection of poems. But then, I think this is a reflection of current emphasis on sequences, really obvious and easily read meta narratives, and the like: easy poem packages of like surface style.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

29. Elizabeth Treadwell
Outlet Magazine--call for work
Sat 2 Oct 1999

---

please feel free to pass this post on....

CALL FOR WORK -- OUTLET

------> Outlet (6) Stars
Astronomy, astrology, celebrity, catastrophe, destiny, romance, navigation, wishes, fortune-telling, constellations. The passage of time. Hemispheres, seasons. Prophecy, heaven. Leonardo da Vinci/di Caprio.
Submission postmark period: January 1-February 15, 2000.
Replies by: April 15, 2000.
The issue will appear during Summer, 2000.

(We are changing our publication months from March & October to May & December.)

**

Reading period & other details for Outlet (7) Heroine will be announced soon.
Hints:
"Your fist has seized the Goddess by her golden scruff..."
-Charles Baudelaire, "To Theodore de Banville"
"...it all turned out exactly as she predicted."
-Gail Scott, _Heroine_

**

Pls. note:
We do not accept email submissions. When first submitting, please consider a 5 page limit. Please enclose a SASE for response.
Please note that submissions of chapbook manuscripts are by request only.
We look forward to reading your work. Thank you.

Editor:
Elizabeth Treadwell

Associate Editors:
Sarah Anne Cox
Grace Lovelace

Fiction Scout:
Carol Treadwell

Outlet publishes poetry, fiction and criticism, loosely centered around a common theme. Please visit our website to view excerpts from previous issues, which include work by Franklin Bruno, Norma Cole, Brenda Iijima, Lily James, Tan Lin, Pamela Lu, Yedda Morrison, Laura Moriarty, Michelle Murphy, Susan Smith Nash, Stephen Ratcliffe, Camille Roy, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Kathy Lou Schultz, Liz Waldner, and many others. (We are always interested in film as well as book reviews. Please query.)

Sample copies: $5/ea. Subscriptions: $10/yr (2 issues). Please make checks payable to E. Treadwell.

http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

Outlet c/o
Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013
Berkeley, California 94709
USA

please feel free to pass this post on....

↑ Index

30. Philip Nikolayev revolving doors in Bromige and Silliman
Sat 2 Oct 1999

Is there any genetic connection between David Bromige's and Ron Silliman's revolving door imagery, in _Against Love_ and _Ketjak_?

Anyone else got revolving doors?

(Myself, I have some.)

Just curious,

Cheers,

Philip Nikolayev <underline>swift brave elioteers

</underline> [redacted] <underline>still whitman behind the ears</ underline>

↑ Index

31. Patrick F. Durgin
Kenning site update
Sat 2 Oct 1999

Checking in to inform 'poetics' folk of the dwindling availability of Kenning's summer '99 issue: ORDER NOW [$5.00, 89 PAGES, WHAT A STEAL]. In addition: the Kenning website now features new work from Jackson Mac Low and Jesse Seldess, as well as an updated links page. The issues page has been updated as well so you can have an impression of forthcoming issues. Subscribers will be interested to note the updates on the introductory page regarding format and the new chapbook series which will comprise each summer issue. Give it a visit. www.avalon.net/~kenning Thanks: Patrick F. Durgin

k e n n i n g
a newsletter of contemporary poetry, poetics, and nonfiction writing
http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

32. Lowther, John

Re: ~IS~ FORM (re: ANTIN addenda)

Sat 2 Oct 1999

---

i didnt edit myself terribly well in that long form/content posting

i wrote of antin's long passage; "and this i dug in that he's insisting on there being overtones to "form" that aren't useful or meaningful for him and instead talking about these things as "structure" or the "organization of function" ---- that is, i like the distinction, but i've heard plenty of folks ~use~ form in this way, as a dynamic rather than static "shape-like" principle" and that's a bit muddled --- the distinction, maybe much the same that olson and creeley were after (?) --- seems to be between "form" as static statement of shape or enumeration of requisites in the way that one cd for a sonnet say that, at least, it needed 14 lines (even this isnt crucial perhaps, but for the sake of this discussion...) ---- antin sees "form" as being primarily bound up with these sorts of considerations and his interest is in ~other~ things (which is what isnt quite clear in my original posting) having to do with the organization of function within the structure of the the art work (be it poetry, painting, whatever) that was probably clear to most, but in case i bungled it for anyone thru my inexactitude...

↑ Index

33. Alan Sondheim

INDIANA

Sat 2 Oct 1999

-

INDIANA

oh julu i will kill you
would you really?
would you really?
ohway ulujay iway illway illkay youay oh jennifer this is so lovely killing me is it really?

is it really?
ohway enniferjay isthay isway osay ovelylay illingkay emay oh oh julu
ohway ohway ulujay
away away, oh juluay
away away, oh juluay
please you will make me so fun
please you will make me so fun
will you really?
will you really?
oh julu i jennifer will so fun make you
you do make me!
you do make me!
un para o pkttolkx corr yu lat sgqk eua oh thank you jennifer thank you
thank you lovely!
thank you lovely!
ib nbuhe sio dyhhczyl nbuhe sio
ah ah oh oh oh
bash: ah: command not found
goodbye my very dearest | oo .ooo| | oo o.ooo|
| oo o.ooo| | oo .o | | oo. o | | oooo. o| |
oo .o o| | o . | | oo o.o o| | oooo. o| | o .
| |ooo .oo | | oo .o o| | ooo . o | | oooo. o|
| o . | | oo .o | | oo .o o|| oo . o| | ooo .
o | | oo .o o| | ooo . oo| | ooo .o | | o. o |
goodbye| oo .ooo| | oo o.ooo| | oo o.ooo| | oo .
o | | oo . o | | oooo. o| | oo.o o| | o. o |
farewell my lovely!
farewell my lovely!
please you will make me so fun
please you will make me so fun
will you really?
will you really?

In INDIANA it was recently VOTED that ALL RAILROAD TRAINS and ALL TELEPHONE POLES and SOME BUILDINGS will be PLACED ON THEIR SIDES permanently. Thus the TRAINS have their WHEELS by convention on THEIR RIGHT-HAND-SIDE, against thin RAILS held VERTICALLY into PLACE. Furthermore, SMALL CARRIAGES POSSESSING WHEELS are permit- ted BENEATH THE SIDEWAYS CARS AND ENGINES to enable them to MOVE ABOUT THE LANDSCAPE in SUCH A CONDITION.

THE SAME does NOT hold true for ALL BUILDINGS but SOME BUILDINGS, which, on their SIDE, may have BOTH WINDOWS AND DOORS OPENING INTO THE EARTH BELOW, as well as OTHER WINDOWS AND DOORS OPENING ONTO THE SKY ABOVE, as well as STILL OTHER WINDOWS AND DOORS OPEN ON TWO SIDES for EASY EGRESS AND EXIT, as well as ENTRANCE.

As for the TELEPHONE POLES, ALL OF WHICH are ON THEIR SIDES, there should be PLACED UPON THEM, WARNINGS FOR CHLDREN, AGAINST the TOUCHING of such wires AS THEY NOW CARRY, EASILY LAID UPON THE EARTH.

Outtages MAY OCCUR.

↑ Index

34. Kathy Lou Schultz

Lipstick? Eleven?

Sun 3 Oct 1999

Lipstick? Eleven?
-or-
What the hell is the name of that magazine anyway?

Let me hereby settle the arguments, family feuds, and bets I know you've been placing:
The name of the magazine is Lipstick Eleven.

As Tisa Bryant so astutely pointed out at tonight's Small Press Traffic Soiree in San Francisco, there is a "No. 1" printed on the spine of our first issue. Soon there will be a "No. 2'" and then after that "No. 3" etc. but it will always be Eleven, which means of course that there will one day be a Lipstick Eleven 11, and won't we all cry for joy then? (I know I will).
^^^

35. Kathy Lou Schultz

View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree

Sun 3 Oct 1999

Warning: This is an eyewitness, first-person account and therefore inherently unreliable.

I attended the SPT soiree at New College in San Francisco this evening. (It was nearly an all-day affair.) I arrived a few minutes after 6:00 p.m. to assume my shift as door greeter/ticket taker-seller gal. My role was to take people's money and when they asked me questions, to immediately repeat the question in their presence to someone who might actually know the answer to the question.

I was involved in a spirited conversation with giovanni singleton and Peter Neufeld, Nick from SPT, and later Mary Margaret Sloan, and I was soon "shushed": you know, "can you keep it down for god's sake there's an auction going on next door" and apparently you need a lot of quiet for an auction.

I know because I held in my very own hand the tuft from the left side of Samuel Delany's 11-year-old beard (with a personal affidavit signed by Delany himself) which Taylor Brady secured at the SPT auction -- and you don't want someone outbidding you on something like that because you can't hear! I mean, it would be really heartbreaking. (You go Taylor boy.)

Later, Kevin Killian's play "Three On a Match" was staged to the enjoyment of all. I simply can't list here all the amazing performances, but will highlight the aforementioned Sloan's hilarious performance as a thwarted Olympic figure skater come murderer. I think she missed a calling, or maybe she is finding one now. Everyone did a very fine job, and then the local band "Plain" played and these guys are really talented -- all of them also appeared in Kevin's play.

Then I carried off the raffle prizes which loads of people from my office won (while I won nothing!) because Doug Powell, who works at the same company as me, sold loads of tickets at work. Good job! And I'm sure I will get the prizes to those who really won them, uh, right away . . .

Congratulations to everyone who worked hard to plan and execute the soiree, and I hope it brought in loads of cash for SPT.

Hugs & Kisses,
Kathy Lou

^^^

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

↑ Index

36. Jerrold Shiroma
New @ Duration Press
Sun 3 Oct 1999

New work at Duration Press:

poems by Eleni Sikelianos, Michelle Murphy, Emmanuel Hocquard (translated by Rosmarie Waldrop), & Rosmarie Waldrop

Mace Hill Remap, by Norma Cole @ our out of print book archive

& the introduction of Dérive, our new e-chapbook series with _Retinal Echo_, by Guy Bennett.

http://www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

37. Robert Freedman
Poetry Textbook/Language Poetry
Sun 3 Oct 1999

Until my retirement I was an acquisitions librarian for a public library, and I was often gently teased for subverting the collection with too many poetry books. Among these books were many "how-to" books for a general audience and some books that were probably designed as texts for high-school and college creative writing courses.

I was pleasantly surprised recently to come across the book, "Poetry Writing : Theme and Variations," by David Starkey, NTC/Contemporary Publishing Group, c2000. Each brief chapter presents models of types of poems, discusses them, and asks the student to try writing that type of poem. Now to what I found unique: Chapter 40, Rearranging Memory, presents three poems, one by Lyn Hejinian and the others by students. Still another chapter, Playful Piracy, includes a poem by Charles Bernstein in which lines by Swinburne are rearranged. John Cage is represented in a chapter on puzzle poems. I don't have the expertise to evaluate the text, but I thought that the book might be worth looking at given its attempt to present alternatives.

The rest of the text is pretty much occupied by "the usual suspects," many of whom are, nevertheless, favorites of mine.

Hope this is of interest to someone.

Bob Freedman

↑ Index

38. Charles Bernstein
Whitney Performance @ EPC
Sun 3 Oct 1999

Last April, Edwin Torres (with Sean Blacklung), Bruce Andrews (with Sally Silvers), and I gave improvised performances at the Whitney Museum's Phillip Morris branch under the title "Impulsive Behavior". The EPC (thanks to Anya Lewin and Loss Glazier) has now put these up in Real Video.

The "Impulsive Behavior" program is currently the "selected resource" at the bottom of the EPC home page:

http://epc.buffalo.edu

Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

39. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers query
Mon 4 Oct 1999

need an i-net address for laura wright
please

or laura e-ml me!

thanks

todd baron
remap readers

↑ Index

40. Hazel Smith
hypermedia
Mon 4 Oct 1999

Some of you who are interested in hypertext/hypermedia might want to look at my latest effort, Intertwingling, a collaboration with Roger Dean at http://dingo.vut.edu.au/%7Earts/cals/intert/interstart.htm. It is part of the Overland Express site http://www.overlandexpress.org/.

The previous hypermedia work, Wordstuffs: The City and the Body, which I posted notice of to this list sometime ago, has now has now moved from the Australian Film Commission site to the Australian Broadsacting site at a new address: http://stuff-art.abc.net.au/stuff98/10.htm

Hazel

Hazel Smith
School of English
University of New South Wales
Sydney 2052

↑ Index

41. Sylvester Pollet
NPF Conference Call for Papers
Mon 4 Oct 1999

Call for Papers

The Opening of the Field: A Conference on North American Poetry in the 1960s

University of Maine
Orono, Maine
June 28-July 2, 2000

The National Poetry Foundation invites paper and panel proposals for a conference on North American poetry of the 1960s. Proposals are welcome on writers of previous generations whose literary careers extended into the 1960s, such as Louis Zukofsky, George Oppen, Robert Lowell, Charles Olson, Anne Sexton, Elizabeth Bishop, Lorine Niedecker, etc.; on poets of literary movements that climaxed in the 1960s, including the Beat, Black Mountain, San Francisco Renaissance, and New York schools; on women poets and poets of color, who began to speak with a new confidence during this decade; and on new literary moments that began to define themselves in this period, such as the ethnopoetic movement and language-centered writing. Papers are also invited on the general cultural background of the period, including such themes as the tensions between "academic" poetry and various attempts to bring poetry into the lives of people "in the streets"; the relationship of poetry and popular culture, including rock music; and the role of poetry in the anti-war movement. As the title of the conference suggests, we invite proposals on Canadian as well as on American poetry in the 1960s.

The conference will begin on Wednesday evening, June 28, and will conclude shortly after noon on Sunday, July 2. Accommodations and meals will be available at a reasonable rate in university residence halls. Registration will be $85, with a reduced rate of $60 for graduate students.

Confirmed participants as of October 1, 1999, include Marjorie Perloff, Michael Davidson, Joan Retallack, Lorenzo Thomas, Rosmarie Waldrop, Keith Waldrop, Maria Damon, Barrett Watten, Lynn Keller, Peter Middleton, and Ron Silliman.

Send one-page abstracts before February 1, 2000, to

Burton Hatlen
Director, National Poetry Foundation
Room 304
5752 Neville Hall,
University of Maine
Orono, ME 04469-5752

↑ Index

42. Alan Sondheim
trAce Online Writing Community
Mon 4 Oct 1999

++++++

trAce Online Writing Community at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk is going strong at the moment; I'd urge you to join (which takes almost no time and costs nothing). The following are the ongoing conferences (some of which are new) - in addition to these, you can add to the loveandwar project by going to http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm -

NEW! Writing & Psychology (1)
Teaching & Presenting the Web (2) trAce Chat Meetings (2)
Information for New Members (17)
Introduce Yourself Here (227)
Avatar (73)
Cyborg-Tech (31)
Experimental (74)
Love-War (51)
Programming & Writing (30)
Project Announcements (32)
Writing & Politics (57)
Writing Workshop (184)
Poetry (179)
Building Creative Community (29)
Opinion (6)
General (111)
Help & Advice (49)

MOO Advice (34)
Technical Forum (41)
Small Ads (17)
The trAce website (7)
Riding the Meridian (2)

The conferences are very active; I'd urge you to participate, or at least take a look at the contents. I've been moderating a number of them, in- cluding Experimental, Programming & Writing, Writing & Politics, Love-War (about the project), Avatar, Cyborg-Tech, and we've just opened up Writ- ing & Psychology.

I also want to thank everyone who has already been participating - the writing and discussions have been wonderful -

Alan

Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html

↑ Index

43. Daniel Kane
Ann Lauterbach on WriteNet
Mon 4 Oct 1999

After a month-long hiatus, the WriteNet poet interview series is back. This month, Ann Lauterbach reads her poem "On (Open)" from her book _On A Stair_, and talks about poetry as magic and the fragmented nature of experience.

To read the interview, go to

http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_alauterbach.html

Also, if you have been enjoying these series, I'd really appreciate it if you could "spread the word" as it were and let people outside the poetics list know about it. Thanks.

--daniel

↑ Index

44. Mark Wallace
Washington Review
Mon 4 Oct 1999

The Washington Review Online website
"literature and the arts, Washington, DC and elsewhere"

has moved to

www.washingtonreview.com

It has been extensively updated with material from the past two years' print issues and features an upublished interview with hypertext fiction writer Stuart Moulthrop, as well as color photos of the fashion world by Lucien Perkins.

The website contains avant-guard poetry by writers from all over the country, plus fiction, interviews, photographs, and reviews of art, theater, music and new media.

Please update your bookmarks and links, the old site will only be around for

↑ Index

45. Brian Stefans
Barque Website
Mon 4 Oct 1999

Somebody in England asked me to post this...

Barque Press now has a website.

Run up the counter at: http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Workshop/2554

With details of new books by British poets and some slightly older ones by some American poets. John Wilkinson, J.H. Prynne, Kristin Prevallet, Jordan Davis, Keston Sutherland, Andrea Brady, Peter Manson et al. Plus the journal QUID: prose recons from Drew Milne, Douglas Oliver, David Hess, Andrea Brady, Mike Sperlinger, poems out of Brian Kim Stefans, John Wilkinson, Tim Morris, others.

↑ Index

46. Poetics List
list stats
Mon 4 Oct 1999

subscribership by country, with the usual caveat: domain names that do not end with a country code are assumed by the listserv program to be U.S. domains. Chris

Country	Subscribers
Australia	13
Belgium	2
Canada	43

Finland	1
Germany	3
Great Britain	22
India	1
Ireland	5
Italy	1
Japan	6
Netherlands	1
New Zealand	14
Poland	1
Singapore	1
Spain	2
Sweden	4
Switzerland	2
Thailand	1
USA	652
Yugoslavia	1
???	1

Total number of users subscribed to the list:	779
Total number of countries represented:	21

↑ Index

47. Jorge Guitart looking for Lisa Samuels
Mon 4 Oct 1999

Lisa, please get in touch with me by e-mail. Thanks.
jg

↑ Index

48. Lowther, John
11-11, lipstick...?
Mon 4 Oct 1999

Kathy Lou wrote; "which means of course that there will one day be a Lipstick Eleven 11, and won't we all cry for joy then? (I know I will)."

i'm familiar with a venerable dope smoking tradition wherein whenever the clock reads 11:11, it's time to toke ---- now as i understand this tradition started in a car with a broken clock which cd with a slight touch, make the shuft from 11:10 to 11:11 not that i've ever beeen in that car, or truck or whatever nor am i sanctioning etc etc

↑ Index

49. Daniel Kane
Hoa Nguyen Student Poetry Workshop on WriteNet
Mon 4 Oct 1999

Teachers & Writers
Collaborative is proud to feature the second on-line workshop led by poet Hoa Nguyen of Austin, Texas. Nine student writers from around the country are participating this time around. Adapt Hoa's writing exercises for your own students, and learn how to critique student poetry by reading Hoa's responses on the forum page. These particular workshop respondents will begin their project by writing poems based on Exercise
11. Find out more about the resident writer on the info page, or read student writing and responses on the forum page. Feel free to use all the exercises listed on this page in your classrooms.

To view the pages, go to http://www.writenet.org/virtualpoetrywrkshp.html

↑ Index

50. david bromige
re revolving doors
Mon 4 Oct 1999

---

the poem "Revolving Door" with which my selected, _Desire_,(1988), opens, was written in 1961* and was first published in a book, _The Gathering_ , in 1965. It was published again in an early selected, _Ten Years in the Making_ , in 1973. There are slight differences between the earlier verions, and the 1987 version.

* the table of contents of _10 years_ states that this poem was written in 1964. I believe this to be incorrect; I must have meant re-written. I have a clear recollection of writing this poem before I left Vancouver (1962), and of its being published thenaobuts in a magazine...but which, I can't recall.

The term "revolving door" (hired n fired, biz world), was not in use in those years. It is not a linguistic resource then, so much as a 3-dimensional one, that prompts it : the actual object in the 4th dimension of time.

Whether Ron derived it from my work strikes me as moot. There are revolving doors everywhere, plus which I believe by the time of _Ketjak_ 's being written, the biz term had currency. That notwithstanding, I have always been encouraged by this rime between Ron's quite different writing, and mine. .

db

↑ Index

51. David Kirschenbaum

Booglit #6: Lowell Celebrates Kerouac! Festival

Mon 4 Oct 1999

Now available:

Booglit #6: Lowell Celebrates Kerouac! Festival
David Kirschenbaum, editor and publisher
ISSN 1085-4800
36 pages, + 4-page, 4-color wrap, $10
$5 from each issue goes to Lowell Celebrates Kerouac! (LCK!), a nonprofit community-based organization.
Postpaid for list members.

Checks payable to:
Booglit
351 W.24th Street Apt. 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510
email inquiries: [redacted]

Commissioned by LCK for this year’s festival.
Cover photograph of Jack Kerouac at the Staten Island Ferry Terminal by Allen Ginsberg.
Back cover poem/collage by Wendy Kramer.

Features:

•Robert Creeley section: an annotated interview on his relationship with Kerouac, conducted by Michael Basinski--assistant curator of the Poetry/Rare Books collection at SUNY-Buffalo; coverage of the New York opening of "In Company: Robert Creeley’s Collaborations”; and a review of Creeley’s newest collaboration, with the photographer Elsa Dorfman, En Famille (Granary Press, 1999).

•David Amram section: an interview of Kerouac’s musical partner by Basinski and Amram’s essay "Collaborating with Kerouac."

•Douglas Brinkley, Kerouac’s official biographer, with an introductory essay to the author’s unpublished "Washington D.C. Blues.”

•Poetry from ex-White Panther Party leader and MC-5 manager John Sinclair (with art by Madeline Hope Arthurs); Wild at Heart author and screenwriter Barry Gifford; Coffee House Press author Eliot Katz; and Long Shot magazine editor Danny Shot w/Herschel Silverman. Plus more poetry and and Beat audio and printed matter reviews.

Also available in lettered limited editions, signed by Creeley, Amram, Sinclair, Brinkley, Katz, Shot, and other contributors, and a CD of sonic music by Emil Beaulieu composed and released for this project. $25 saddle-stapled lettered AA to ZZ; $85 bound on boards, lettered A to Z.

Be Good,
David Kirschenbaum

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

52. Tisa Bryant

Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree

Mon 4 Oct 1999

Kathy,

I believe it was Ms. Tanya Hollis who scored the snip of Chip's beard.... I remember being shocked and delighted that she bid on something described as being for fetishists....maybe they'll share, or (gasp!) maybe it is Tanya who's the beard for Taylor's bent....hmmm.

Tisa

<pre>
Warning: This is an eyewitness, first-person account and therefore inherently unreliable.

I attended the SPT soiree at New College in San Francisco this evening. (It was nearly an all-day affair.) I arrived a few minutes after 6:00 p.m. to assume my shift as door greeter/ticket taker-seller gal. My role was to take people's money and when they asked me questions, to immediately repeat the question in their presence to someone who might actually know the answer to the question.

I was involved in a spirited conversation with giovanni singleton and Peter Neufeld, Nick from SPT, and later Mary Margaret Sloan, and I was soon "shushed": you know, "can you keep it down for god's sake there's an auction going on next door" and apparently you need a lot of quiet for an auction.

I know because I held in my very own hand the tuft from the left side of Samuel Delany's 11-year-old beard (with a personal affidavit signed by Delany himself) which Taylor Brady secured at the SPT auction -- and you don't want someone outbidding you on something like that because you can't hear! I mean, it would be really heartbreaking. (You go Taylor boy.)

Later, Kevin Killian's play "Three On a Match" was staged to the enjoyment of all. I simply can't list here all the amazing performances, but will highlight the aforementioned Sloan's hilarious performance as a thwarted Olympic figure skater come murderer. I think she missed a calling, or maybe she is finding one now. Everyone did a very fine job, and then the local band "Plain" played and these guys are really talented -- all of them also appeared in Kevin's play.

Then I carried off the raffle prizes which loads of people from my office won (while I won nothing!) because Doug Powell, who works at the same company as me, sold loads of tickets at work. Good job! And I'm sure I will get the prizes to those who really won them, uh, right away . . .

Congratulations to everyone who worked hard to plan and execute the soiree, and I hope it brought in loads of cash for SPT.

Hugs & Kisses,
Kathy Lou

^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

</pre>

↑ Index

53. Michael Neff
News Items for ELANewsletter
Mon 4 Oct 1999

The WDS ELANewsletter is available to members on this listserv for news posts. Write editor, Liana Scalletar, [redacted], and request space in the upcoming newsletter issue due out in a few weeks, and thereafter. The blurbing is no charge. ELAN reaches over 3000 at this time.

Note: we do not pitch individual works, but rather report on events, happenings, literary news of note, etc.

MN

↑ Index

54. Nielsen, Aldon
this just in
Mon 4 Oct 1999

---

new issue of _Callaloo_ has special sections on Will Alexander and Lorenzo Thomas -- poems, interviews, criticism -- good stuff --

↑ Index

55. Katie Degentesh
9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9
Mon 4 Oct 1999

OCTOBER 14, 1999, 7:30 PM at the ADOBE BOOKSHOP

9x9 INDUSTRIES returns to PRESENT

<bold>AN EVENING OF BLANKETY BLANKETY BLANK WITH THE SOMETHING SOMETHINGS

</bold>BUT FIRST:

<bold>Michael Disend, </bold>screenwriter, performer, film actor, and professional hypnotist, will read from a work in progress. Author of the classic Sixties novel STOMPING THE GOYIM, which has been called "some of the great writing of the century" and will soon be reprinted by Sun and Moon Press, Disend lives in San Francisco.

AND THEN (and THEN and THEN and THEN):

The hyperbolic adjective trio,

<bold>Todd Barker, Paul Spencer, and Felix Macnee,

</bold>will perform the (far, far) above-titled work.

Bring your fever-pitch unction and dangling participles.

There will be a certain amount of danger.

<bold>Todd Barker</bold> holds a Masters of Fine Arts degree from the California College of Arts and Crafts, generally in his left hand. He has performed and exhibited widely, in venues such as The Lab and the Gorgonzola Peach Blintz.

<bold>Paul Spencer,</bold> currently completing a degree in painting at the San Francisco Art Institute, chips his canvas with a whimsical mannerist futon and piles his words on with advanced cat pressure.

<bold>Felix Macnee</bold> has snaggled teeth, a pork pie hat, and deals the cards with two broken hands. He has written a play starring green beans.

<bold>Michael Disend</bold> is a burning wick. His hair holds conversations with Sugar Ray Robinson, and a stumbling egg cream boy he is. I have seen him type up Martin Chuzzlewit with one finger.

1999 (NINETEEN NINETY (NINE BY NINE) INDUSTRIES) 199X9

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/

[redacted]

GIVE US YOUR TIRED, YOUR POOR, YOUR THURSDAY ASSES

YEARNING TO SEE PERFORMANCES FOR FREE

↑ Index

56. Brian Lennon

Ripostes to Jameson on Perelman?

Mon 4 Oct 1999

I'm trying to assemble a complete list of responses to Jameson's attack (in _Postmodernism, Or..._) on Perelman's poem "China." Or, of critiques of Jameson that touch explicitly on those passages in Jameson dealing with the poem. All help backch or frontch appreciated.

Thanks
Brian Lennon

↑ Index

57. Jim Andrews

New Vispo Audio: Paul McKinnon's "Wake Up and Smell the Bus Depot"

Mon 4 Oct 1999

NEW AT VISPO AUDIO:
PAUL MCKINNON'S "WAKE UP AND SMELL THE BUS DEPOT"
http://www.vispo.com/audio

A stand-up travelogue featuring burning bridges, racial tension, road food, bad luck, strange sex, and the ghost of Jack Kerouac. Recorded at Mocambopo in Victoria, BC.

I was at the performance of this piece. It was a memorable evening, treated as we were to a performance by Paul of this humorous and telling travelogue through three countries from Mexico to Vancouver.

Related travelogue audio and other writing by Paul is at The Nepenthe Journal: http://www.freespeech.org/tumbleweed/radio.html

↑ Index

58. Jerrold Shiroma

small press publications announcements deadline

Tue 5 Oct 1999

The deadline for this week's Small Press publications announcements page @ Duration Press is this Friday. All publishers who wish to have their publications listed, please send all appropriate information, such as titles, authors, prices, contact / ordering information, web addresses, & short descriptions to [redacted]

↑ Index

59. Fredrik Hertzberg LIT

Oidentifierade verbala objekt

Tue 5 Oct 1999

Just a note to say that last week in Stockholm I found a new publication called OED: Oidentifierade verbala objekt, which includes translations of Charles Bernstein's Artifice essay, his A Defence of Poetry, an extract from Perloff's Radical Artifice, poetry by Hannah Weiner, together with other stuff (by Ros-marie Waldrop,Julien Blaine, Emmanuel Hocquard, Pierre Alferi, etc). Finally something's cooking up here. If anyone's intersted their address is OEI, Box 311 20, 400 32 Göteborg (Gothenburg), Sweden.

Fred

↑ Index

60. miekal and

boredom, currency

Tue 5 Oct 1999

The text is (should be) that uninhibited person, non-site): anachronic subject, adrift

At least some examples?
of an epoch, of a character?
word for word?
denote a class notion?
another edge, mobile, bleak?
the institutions of text?
but the opposite?
doesn't every narrative lead to Oedipus?
an anagram of the body?
my reader's pleasure?
the sentence is a body?
all this verbal display?
the very materiality of that once existed?
how can we read criticism?
boredom of all narratives?

Pry Luz, pray.for.light such are the hardships everywhere in the garden your sweat the divine shaman by the corner beneath dawn those whirring walls of the festival the hill talks of nonsense let the rain take off and village ditties are here busy at raising silkworms in the field picking melons this crooked road your upset clings to my gown on and on over the jumbled hills Buddha is everything rejoice in the slanting flowers for what you are is the creatures of creation halfway up the mountain facing scars from former years this crooked road sorrow is blown by a flute and Buddha is everything don't mistake the wasted days twisting in the azure air opposite me turn towards you for I fear at random so loving their fall so loving their fall hundreds cannot tell the deep-hidden dotted the peach-paths ashamed that the traveler has got enough for you to get drunk still wrapped in private gauze for her dress a shivering drink before going home so its fertilty will reimburse you and the little one will brush noisily like the wind tomorrow we'll go

Danshi Mureite, [redacted]

Your sisters must all stay home
At night we all sleep together

Please show me the house
Was it an empty dream?

Moon meant that he would be waiting that love & lust inspire in men

He was now growing far too fond of her such delicacy blooming in the thicket

snow had fallen heavily and piled up the days went by, were no longer mine to control

I'll kill you for your pains foreheads who must be peeping with interest floating along thinking of their own inevitable end

nobody could hear your nonsense wretched though the place looks much stock in the words of the diviner but would desire to converse with such a woman engender frivilous thoughts while I sat in a meditation hall everything is dust & reflected in the pond

I gathered all the priests with my own hand
he could not deny the blind intoxicating pleasure

I was startled & scurried for shelter but we can forget our misery nervously I could not keep back my tears

write now:
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/a.htm

↑ Index

61. Ron Silliman
La Jolla Beyond Babel
Tue 5 Oct 1999

This sounds like a great event. It even includes Charles Bernstein,

Ron

BEYOND BABEL
Common Language, Common Differences, Common Ground

Western Humanities Alliance - 18th Annual Conference

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SAN DIEGO
October, 14-15-16, 1999

http://literature.ucsd.edu/babelschedule.html

Conference access is free and open to everyone

Opening of the Conference

THURSDAY OCTOBER 14
4:00-5:30 PM
Price Center Ballroom

Welcome - Frantisek Deak, Dean, Arts and Humanities
- Simon Williams, Director, Western Humanties Alliance
- Marcel Henaff, Conference Organizer

Keynote Address:

DOUGLAS HOFSTADTER, Cognitive Science, Indiana University

"Human Cognition as a Blur of Analogy and Blending"

Areas of discussion:
1. Hybridization of Cultures / Cultures of Hybridization
2. Crossing of Disciplines and of Models of Knowledge
3. Blending of Artistic Forms
4. Integration of Cognitive Processes.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15

9:00 - 10:30 - Panels:
Postmodern Hybridity: the Politics and Poetics of Culture [Area 1]
Colonialism and Shifting Alliances [Area 1]
Community and The Language of Babel [Area 2]
Logics of Interdisciplinary Inquiry [Area 2]

11:00 - 12:30 - PLENARY SESSION [area 1]
Speaker: Aihwa ONG, Anthropology, UC Berkeley
"Questions of Globalization"

2:00-3:30 PM - Panels:
Negotiating Communities as Hybrids [Area 1]
Crossing Space and Time [Area 2]
Emotions, Analogies and Disanalogies [Area 2/3]
Extended Range Poetries [Area 3]

4:00-5:50 PM - PLENARY SESSION [area 2]
Speaker: Paul RABINOW, Anthropology, UC Berkeley
"Biopolitics Today"

6:00 PM
SPACED OUT: SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA VERNACULAR
An Exhibition of Works About Space in Southern California

Curated by: Steve Ausbury and Sarah Lewison
Opening Reception/Party: Friday, October 15 at 6:00 PM
Herbert Marcuse Student Gallery, right side of Russell Ln. off Gilman Dr.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER. 16

9:00 - 10:30 AM - Panels:
Identity and Narratives, Imaging Culture [Area 1]
Nation, Center and Margins [Area 1]
Spaces of Theater [Area 3]
Contemporary Art Mixes [Area 3]
Conceptual Blending [Area 4]

11:00 - 12:30 - PLENARY SESSION [area 3]
Speaker: Charles BERNSTEIN, English and Writing, SUNY Buffalo
"The Art of Immemorability"

2:00 - 3:30 PM - Panels:
Islam and Modernity [Area 1]
Japanese Hybridizations [Area 1]
Knowing and Imagining [Area 2]
Hybridization and Vernaculars in Music [Area 3]
Cognitive Strategies [Area 4]

4:00 - 5:30 PM - PLENARY SESSION [area 4]
Speaker: Mark TURNER, English and Cognitive Science, U of Maryland
"The Forbidden Fruit: the Role of Conceptual Integration in Literary and Artistic Creativity"

Conference Organizer: Marcel Henaff, UCSD

Planning Committee: David Antin, Visual Arts, UCSD; Gilles Fauconnier, Cognitive Sciences, UCSD; Andrew Feenberg, Philosophy, SDSU; Douglas White, Anthropology, UCI

Conference Manager: Lucinda Rubio

Information: Christa Beran
[redacted] or fax [redacted]

For a complete list of panelists, discussants and other information (maps, hotels etc) see our website:
http://literature.ucsd.edu/babelschedule.html

Marcel Henaff
UCSD-0410
La Jolla, CA 92093

Marcel Henaff
UCSD-0410
La Jolla, CA 92093

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

62. miekal and cybele overhears "I'm tired of poetry"
Tue 5 Oct 1999

Roland Barthes, [redacted]

the more ravaging term
the perhaps the subject
concerned with destruction
grasps at every point
but quickly exposes itself
we are all caught up in the truth
the leisure of bygone readings
where we can hear the grain of the throat
whenever I attempt
without ever introducing anything
the very utterance
the other reading skips nothing
psychoanalysis must be traversed
but it is doubtless violence must be coded
if it were possible to imagine
we have either the course
outside bliss but not necessarily
deplored except
like a bird who understand nothing
only in total atopia

Vagina Dentata, [redacted]

Since we halved the hairpin

Young travelers coming here

I wipe my tears

Obliterated and buried

Why should one care?

Writhing upwards

Belongs to another time

Ten thousand noises die down

I recall those years

My shadow falls at random

I've known the tramp

I'll never fall behind

Choked by feeling

Bells ring in evening sky

My sorrow resembles

Family stripped clean

This charming beauty

Keep pace with ambition

Share a farewell cup

In a frozen land

On her new robe

Whip tucked in her sleeve

And showers affection as if

We must beg for poverty

Not too much wine

When he wakes up

Do we ever wake

Who brings war

I'm tired of poetry

daphne mezereum, [redacted]

In both of the insertions of poetic text that for greater sonority, inspite of its name, magic bullets which never miss their mark, thru a pact with the spirits of hell, such as observance of enharmonic equivalents, executed by a leading couple, a sign indicating awe of nature near the end of life. a great flowering of songs to listen intelligently to has a considerable wider device to dampen sound, to change the best-known janizary music associated with famous clowns, often in service of the story. who wishes to marry a long contorted technique throughout. the contours of a forest anticipates the music after a period of captivity. optional dances on which a swan swims majestically is borrowed from a nearby mesmorizing rule. accidental music appeared to be exuberant melancholy.

little oulipo, curious digital artifact impossible everything we do

to throat before we
if we understand everything

↑ Index

63. Alan Sondheim
Lost Japan for Me
Tue 5 Oct 1999

=

Lost Japan for Me

Lost Japan
Japan New and Old
Bygone Days in Old Japan
Japan, A Glimpse into the Past

Japan - Signs - immersed - floor-level, the turning - slates of peoples - targeting and inverted - decathecting in the bushido zone - looking in towards interior perfections - closed faces and facades - operatives of the _brush-stroke_ - if the point/node characterizes the west, the line characterizes japan - kami linkages - the darkness of the city in my for- eign night - detailing and intervaling, spacings - mono no aware - wabi and sabi - the interior forlorn -

Japan, Land of Many Contrasts Mysterious Japan
Japan, from Geisha to Gaijin

signs determinative of signs, foreign to me, illegible, _watching_ signs immersed in a world of signs floor-level, the turning, flatness of spaces, turning everywhere slates of peoples passing by, peripheral glances, blanked exteriors targeting and inverted, out of the corner of their eyes, gaijin naked decathecting in the bushido zone, detumescence, disconnected looking in towards interior perfections, perfect family-life, burakumin closed faces and facades, i was never there, lintels, portals operatives of the brush-stroke, the inscription of the real point and line, the view-given garden, turned and widening line kami linkages, everywhere intensities, confabulations of millennia, ages darkness of the city, gaijin bar to sidewalk to jinja to neon river, night detailing, intervals and spaces, the ornamental flow, edge intensity mono no aware, my last weeks, last night long walk past the zen temple wabi and sabi, this body, moments of despair and worn sailings

In the Streets of Old Japan
Japan, Land of Cherry-Blossoms
Japan, Land of the Cherry-Blossom Japanese Wonders and Beauties

on the night of the interior forlorn, i have never finished with japan, it's an open wound, a space in consciousness, a flood, olden days in japan, images impenetrable, the gulf absolute, the rupture, and division of new and old, division of here and there

Arts and Crafts of Old Japan
Japan through the Eyes of Masterless Samurai Japan, Land of the Rising Sun
The Japanese Miracle
The Japanese Experience
Art and Life in Old Japan
Japan Inside and Out

it's what i remember, every detail of the 7-11 store-shelves, walking be- hind hakozaki shrine, details which reappear in dreams, the second-hand shop on the corner and its shogi sets, more and more lists, the children staring at me yelling back 'baka baka'

Ghosts and Tales in Old Japan
Japanese Hobgoblins
Tengu? No Thank you! In Old Japan
Japan through Sumo

Life and Loves of the Ancient Japanese Oh! Japan!

i can't assimilate the transformation, the kanji disappeared, certain paintings, glances, edges of things, always felt myself at odds with each and every gaijin, o third country of the spirit, it's what i remember, i'm dreadfully afraid of reconstitution, making it up as i go along, the things themselves retreated into algorithms for reconstruction, right or wrong, 'my japanese days,' 'my time in japan,' as well as more personal material intertwined, inseparable, confusioned, contusion

Representation and Misrecognition in Old Japan Multicultural Exegesis in Genji's Heian Japan
The Presuppositions of the Myth of Japanese Homogeneity haunted with an incontrovertible knot set in my maw my brainstem my hole, kabuki samurai misrecognitions, never made it to the theater, parks wet with leaves, moats, stone stupas, my gaijin head smashed among them as i leapt out of the country of noh truth as literal as possible

Japan Like a Native
Japan from the Air
Japanese Arts and Crafts
The Japanese Way of Life
The Japanese Response to the West

Japanese Aircraft
Popular Arts of Japan
A Popular History of Japan
Japanese Fairy-Tales
Japanese Comic Fun
Japan through Popular Manga
Pop-Pop Japan
Japanese Amusement
Nighttime Japan
Nikuko's Popular Imagery of Japan
I take you Nakasu-Kawabata Japan
Sexuality in Old Japan
Japan through Western Eyes Gone Native in Japan

↑ Index

64. raea100900
a little self promotion
Tue 5 Oct 1999

Dear Listers,

I wanted to announce the quite curious fact that I have two (old) poems in the new Poetry Desk Calendar 2000 (available at a mega-chain near you). Most of the calendar days are occupied by dead people, so I'm somewhere between Blake and (the dread) Joyce Kilmer. Needless to say, we're a pretty ecclectic group!

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

65. Daniel Kane
Lauterbach sound on WriteNet
Tue 5 Oct 1999

---

the sound file of Ann Lauterbach reading "On (Open)" wasn't linked correctly -- now it is -- to hear Ann L. read (with beeps of low-battery phone in background and wonderful hiss), go to

http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_alauterbach.html

--daniel

↑ Index

66. Taylor Brady
Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree
Tue 5 Oct 1999

It being nearly impossible for me to grow a beard myself, I've always held the hirsute facial appendages enthralling in others. Thus the true motive for my avowed "great pleasure" in introducing David Bromige during the group reading at the same event. (Though, it's true, I have as much admiration for his work as for his beard - and the same might be said of Delany). So mine is a beardward bent that needs no beard for its bending.

Tanya, of course, has her own "bent" reasons to dig a translucent plastic envelope full of hair...

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Tisa Bryant

Sent: Monday, October 04, 1999 2:47 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree

Kathy,

I believe it was Ms. Tanya Hollis who scored the snip of Chip's beard.... I remember being shocked and delighted that she bid on something described as being for fetishists....maybe they'll share, or (gasp!) maybe it is Tanya who's the beard for Taylor's bent....hmmm.

Tisa

↑ Index

67. levitsk

Re: three details in order of occurance, 1 query

Tue 5 Oct 1999

---

1) quick and final reminder of next Belladonna:

Julie Patton and Betsy Andrews
reading at BELLADONNA*
(women's bookstore, 172 allen st, lower e. side
F train to 2nd ave.--- more info: [redacted])

Thursday, October 7
9:00 pm

2) Rachel Levitsky info through Dec. 22 (then back to normal)
phone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]
address: Villa Montalvo
P.O. Box 158
Saratoga, CA 95071-0158
or for fedex or larger packages:
15400 Montalvo Road
Saratoga, CA 95070

3) Eileen Myles workshop I know about: Begins Monday evening, Oct. 25 (I think 7pm)--if you are interested, contact Eileen at [redacted]. There will be 12 people max and cost is sliding scale. The focus of the workshop is everything.

4) Can someone pass along Fanny Howe address or edress or phone number to me? Many gracias in advance.

↑ Index

68. Grant Jenkins
Re: Ripostes to Jameson on Perelman?
Tue 5 Oct 1999

Brian,

If you haven't seen it already, George Hartley in <italic>Textual Politics</italic> has a great reading of Jameson's reading of Perelman.

Grant

↑ Index

69. Katie Degentesh
Re: small press publications announcements deadline
Tue 5 Oct 1999

Hi Jerrold -

do you list magazines as well, or only books?

Thanks -

Katie Degentesh

> The deadline for this week's Small Press publications announcements page @ Duration Press is this Friday. All publishers who wish to have their publications listed, please send all appropriate information, such as titles, authors, prices, contact / ordering information, web addresses, & short descriptions to [redacted]

↑ Index

70. david bromige
OVO, stockholm
Wed 6 Oct 1999

Maybe it's obvious to all, but if not, you will welcome the news that Oidentifieriade verbala objekt is an unidentified verbal object, presumably something that doesnt exist that everybody's read or heard of (although isnt it rather, in this case, something that does exist that nobody has seen or read of, in sweden that is, until now? leastwise in the minds of the editors?). It must be quite clear to non-swedish readers, except for the O, which has the function of un, but looks as though an irish person had blundered into the act. David

↑ Index

71. A H Bramhall
Casual Screed, part 1
Wed 6 Oct 1999

You Screw Ups, Wait Up!

the favourite toy releases the idea of generosity. merely being in that presence, people look for the ice to melt. maybe it won't, these winters are persistent. such is human devotion, even when the faces are wrong. still, maybe generosity is exactly the thing that could uncage the exacting beast needed for the situation. well first, accept that a situation exists. thoroughly riveting dynamics tell us that a possible intercourse shows on the map. maybe so, who bothers to look? just jump to the idea that something 's here. and it's just us, people of the neighbourhood. the neighbourhood doesn't have all its elements in working order, but we can try with what we' ve got. oh dear, that's a hopeful note, and hope is just one more hunk of wood floating down stream. the point is the idea of generosity, and how generosity could eradicate. well, what should it eradicate? what needs rectifying, what needs changing? dilemmas are everywhere, binary exclusions. try the door marked Generosity and see if anyone is there. because it's a person who must carry it, Generosity doesn't fall with the rain. we can look at the earth and all its whatever but, no, forget that, human is everything. your process, my process, something concerted. it's chemistry, or the tale of documentation, or a close kept secret molded for reasonable usage. what? just more talk? the heroes determine the features of the show. the favourite toy releases the idea of generosity. try the door marked Quickly. time has bent itself into all sorts of shapes, whether you were aware or not. me, I'm pretending to be noble so that Generosity (still drunk with power) will stumble closer. it's a game of waiting and wandering and wearing the right clothes. clean underwear or no underwear, as if this were a principle: who cares, the map exists, the song is known, the facts are clear and Generosity has the floor. believe it. or, you know, forget about it all, work another territory. the work has been described, we don't need the experts telling us more.

↑ Index

72. A H Bramhall
Casual Screed, part 2
Wed 6 Oct 1999

Welcomed Grant From Poetry Heaven

the process can be faked. likeliness fools many people. advice is just another hazard in the road. Poetry has no point, and never scores a run. never in possibility, only thrust to the bottom and left to accrue notions from the most usual of places. anyone can make Poetry, it's a big trick. it' s a scam, a racket, a deadbeat dad in Cayman Island hideaway sticking with the coconuts and verisimilitudes. Poetry is the gunk you don't bother to scrape from your shoes, and anyone can make it. it has the benefit of filling in holes. it sings because the gun's jammed in the ribs. don't shoot Poetry, we need it. kill me, not Poetry. Poetry has too much to offer. Poetry has vision, and pieces of snakes and careerist oblations. Poetry is from the stars and made for intense picnics. Poetry is political the same way ice cream is, mean, inspired ice cream. Poetry has a piano with all the words on it. Poetry can be made into lemons or frogs. Poetry is terrific because people are terrific. Poetry is the sight of a crow and a farm in famous New Delhi. you have to behave to write Poetry. everyone loves Poetry, Poetry is the bomb. and when that bomb goes off, an entire tent will shimmer in the breeze. oh, the beautiful breeze. a little girl will look up, slightly amazed at Poetry's wonder machine. her friends think they see something but, no, Poetry is fickle because Poetry has hopes. to play on a nice team, with the right kids, in an okay town, Poetry has the thing together. perhaps the little girl is not all that together. Poetry will know. oh yes, Poetry will certainly suss the sitch.

↑ Index

73. Ron Silliman

Re: re revolving doors

Wed 6 Oct 1999

I certainly had read every available book of David's before I wrote that first phrase to Ketjak in 1974. However, I wrote that sentence in a small cafe in SF across the street from the B of A world headquarters while waiting to meet Rochelle Nameroff for lunch one day. There was a revolving door on at least one of the entrances then (don't know about now).

I had also heard the west coast debut of Steve Reich's Drumming the night before at the Asian Art Museum, and that use of reiteration was in my head, literally ringing in my ears.

Ron Silliman
Bedford, NH

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

74. Rod & Corrine Holke-Farnam
(no subject)
Wed 6 Oct 1999

I'm searching for information on Joy Davidman. Any ehlp would be greatly appreciated.

Corrine [redacted]

↑ Index

75. James Brook
info on Bei Dao?
Wed 6 Oct 1999

After reading the current Rain Taxi interview with Bei Dao, which sent me back to his books of poetry, notably the latest, Landscape Over Zero, I am more and more intrigued by this poet, whom I once saw read in Paris several years ago.

Could someone direct me to published criticism or other interviews? According to Rain Taxi, Bei Dao is teaching at the University of California at Davis. I wonder if anyone has a more precise address?

Thanks,

--James Brook

↑ Index

76. juliana spahr
reading report from honolulu
Wed 6 Oct 1999

Sorry if this is too long. Please just delete it. But in four days I think we had most of the readings for the year.

The readings began with one by Maxine Hong Kingston. It was packed. Some guy in my dept, and several other people, have been complaining a lot about Kingston coming to read (HLAC brought her). I've been forgiving the way hlac is paying Kingston $500 to read (not much money; she had a better paying, yet restricted, gig at the HCTE). Mainly b/c I'm just like, well it is someone else reading (one step forward of my hlac year). And it was what I expect of community arts organizations--they like big names.

She read this piece from that Hawai'i book. I need to go and read it. I'll probably get it wrong here. It was a chapter about the TAlk Story conference (one of the first conferences on local lit in the 70s or early 80s; Susan Schultz will know; something I obviously did not attend). I found it completely offensive (but

I might be overreacting I should say since I don't have the text and didn't take notes). It began with this story of ladies lifting their skirts as they walked across the palace grounds where Liliuokalani was interned (which someone pointed out she miscalled the governor's palace). And then it goes on to do this reading of the conference which was mainly about who didn't like her or who did and who walked out when she read, etc. and how she was an outsider and not supposed to write about Hawai'i and how the (local, I assume) poetry was all very bad and she had to tap her finger so as not to be infected by it. And it talked about how she feels like she shouldn't write about Hawai'i but then it said things like I understand things better about Hawai'i b/c I'm not from Hawai'i. (A theme that she spent 10 minutes on later; saying that she never writes on Hawai'i and yet she read two long pieces on Hawai'i.) She completely glossed over the thing with her and Chin and Wong (which is reductive on both sides it seems; when someone in the audience asked her why there were no Asian-Amer male writers (?!), she said it was b/c women read more books and go to college more).

Then she reads this story from her new novel that is about Hawai'i (which she wrote from the clarity of California she tells us). And it is about water and fishing. And has some of the worst pidgin I've heard (to my tin mainland ears--it feels very fake; very limited vocabulary; lacks obvious turns of phrase; but it cd be pidgin of 10 years ago; I'm no expert here--in fact I get most of my pidgin via the local literature; so I guess I should just say it doesn't sound as rich? or should I say it doesn't sound all Bamboo Ridge?). And then it ends with this scene where Whitman's (character from past novel) wife, who is haole, goes down to the corner store. On the way there she thinks about how she is beginning to see the darker side of paradise. And then she goes over to talk to this group of local guys. They are sitting on a bench. All together. And one of them is masturbating. And talking to her. He is masturbating by rubbing back and forth on this bench, which is worn smooth from all this rubbing. And the men take turns, sitting in this masturbation seat.

During the question and answer she states that she now doesn't put people in her books unless she asks them first. That it wasn't right of her to write crazy people in her books, say. Or whatever. Someone, finally, asks her about this scene, and say it doesn't sound very respectful to the Hawaiians (although I think these men are just local in the narrative and not more specific). She says, well it was true.

There was other stuff too. Lots of stuff about peace. And about how her work was a response to the horrible wars of this century which we have to cover over with peace, etc.

I'm trying not to overreact. And I was thinking also about how I can go to endlessly dull readings of avant garde stuff and yet I can't take a little craziness on the normal stuff.

Then the next day, Listers Susan Schultz and me and nonlisters John Zuern, Kyle Koza, Caroline Sinavaiana, and Rodney Morales organized this fall festival event which we called Alter Englishes. We inherited the festival from Robbie Shapard. It is a series of readings with a lot of apparatus. Sometimes the apparatus makes me uncomfortable.

On Friday Cecilia Vicuna was 5 minutes late for her talk because I forgot to tell her where it was. She came in the room apparently, I was out looking for her, shaking a seed pod and saying "I'm very angry." Then I came back and she started yelling at me but then gave me a hug and said she forgave me. I think I must have looked very upset. She then gave a great talk called "In Tongues Within." It was a version of her talk at Bard. I love the talk. It is hopeful about language yet also very aware of the political. She told a story about going to American movies when she was a kid and then coming out of the theater and everyone speaking in a fake english in order to mimic the language of power. But she also talked about the ways indigenous languages infiltrate into colonial languages. She whisper talked the talk. Which fascinates me.

During the discussion Rob Wilson asked a question about utopianism in her talk. Cecilia spoke in defense of acknowledging the disruptive moments in languages with skill. She showed at this moment that she is very, very smart. It is hard to negotiate here sometimes and she was doing it with such skill and she had only been here for a half a day. I think she must be used to the sorts of arguments about here. In the midst of this Sina mentioned Epeli Hauofa's talk during the summer (I missed it) and how he talked about the difference b/t utopia and possibility and the importance of acknowledging possibilities within colonial situations. I thought this was a good turn on the abyss we sometimes find ourselves in here.

Myung Mi Kim was also supposed to speak but she couldn't make the conference because she got in an automobile accident and then had to get surgery.

AFter the talk Anne Tardos and Cecilia went to the beach. I was supposed to go but I went to the lei story and then to buy some tablecloths with Susan. We went back and set up for the bookfair (part of the apparatus). And waited for the food (another part of the apparatus). The food was delicious. Matt Lau who used to run my favorite neighborhood restaurant made it. It was big slices of tofu in sauce and some chicken thing in papaya sauce and rice and vegetables. We had ordered food for 300, which is about how many people came last year. But only around 175 people came. So the auditorium was too big and there was too much food and this made me very paranoid.

But the reading was great. Eric Gamalinda read. He is our visiting writer and I like him b/c he seems to always be in a good mood. His work was interesting: lyrical, concerned with Filipino and/or F-American identity, at moments going off in unexpected directions. It made me happy. Cecilia read. She started singing from the audience. And this caused some problem with the introducer who wanted to give her a lei and who ended up following behind her across the stage in some sort of shadow dance. She read some of her whisper poems. And Lee Tonouchi read. Lee is a local pidgin writer. He kind of embodies pidgin machismo. It kind of annoyed me at first but I'm beginning to forgive him. He does a sort of stand up comedy act where he reads these stories about a guy's girlfriend who is always dumb. I think he might be a force in the future when his work becomes about more than the dumbness of girls.

After the reading I wanted to go out with the graduate students but Bill didn't want to b/c he had to study. I became this good combination of grumpy and paranoid and didn't sleep all night.

Talks the next day started at 10 am. Ku'ualoha Ho'omanawanui gave a talk on the history of the Hawaiian language. She noted that in the 1860s Hawai'i had the highest literacy rate in the world. That a very long Hawaiian novel was serialized in the newspaper b/t 1860 and 1861. That numerous works were translated into Hawaiian during this period. Things like Shakespeare's Tempest. Then all this ended with the annexation. And the Hawaiian language went into decline.

Anne gave a talk on why she writes multilingually. It was in the form of a self interview and was very funny. She has a version of it at her website. I would recommend checking it out and will not spoil it with summary.

And Lee gave a talk called "Da Death of Pidgin?" that was about how great pidgin was and kind of the joke, or not, was that pidgin was a language that encompassed everything so that even English was pidgin. Or I think his point here is that there is no pure pidgin. He was very worried about avoiding pidgin standards. I liked it best though when he talked about how he used pidgin to write letters to the editor and they got printed and how he used pidgin fill out his job application teaching English at KCC and he got the job and how he used pidgin for writing graduate school papers and still passed. His talk greatly pleased me.

The discussion afterwards returned to language politics. Some members of the audience felt that Anne was being too optimistic when she said she wrote multilingually b/c that was what life was like for her. Or that she was not making a nation argument b/c her work had the languages of many nations in it. Anne avoided taking on the obvious marginalization that was one possible response to this argument (that the reasons she knows so many languages was that her parents were Jews and had to move a lot to avoid anti-Semitism). I was reminded about how in life at times there is just one argument. And had to say to myself yet again that one of the reasons we should invite people from outside (although not exclusively from outside--another problem with a long history) was that they might see things differently and that this was good. Also stewing underneath the discussions, but never vocalized around me, was the complicated language politics here. Pidgin is out with certain intellectuals (it is too Bamboo Ridge and thus neocolonial--I simplify but so does this argument). Hawaiian is in. So I think Lee's inclusive pidgin politics didn't really fly with some. Or that is what some people said over lunch maybe but not where I was. I went to the lei store after lunch.

At 2 Grace Molisa gave a talk on "Language, Gender, and Human Rights in the Pacific." She is a writer from Vanuatu and she spoke movingly on Vanuatu which is a country of over 80 islands with 170,000 people who speak over 100 languages and the nation itself has three official languages (Bislama, English, and French). She said that some people say that Vanuatu has the highest languages per capita (I think it is Papua N.G. that has the highest number of languages?). She spoke very slowly and very articulately about illiteracy in Vanuatu (around 50%; higher for women), about being one of few literate women and working in the new government (Vanuatu went sovereign in the 80s), about her own education. She also talked about how she is translating the universal declaration of human rights into Bislama.

After her talk I went to the lei store again (we kept miscalculating). And then we set up for the bookfair. And again only around 175 people came and we had too much food which was complicated by the fact that Matt was like 3 hours late with it and it made us all very hungry and kind of crazed. Cecilia and I were eating fritos by the end.

Anyway, we started the reading without food. And Grace read first. She read these amazing poems that were very unpoetic. Steve Carll called them "memo poems." They were short poems with no metaphor or turns of phrase. One went something like this in its entirety: emerging states seek the help of outside advisors. Another was about what democracy was. They fascinated me because they were not an obvious part of the postcolonial tradition in terms of form (which often sounds like Adrienne Rich). But they were very aware of poetry's role in postcolonial situations. She writes her poems to explain things to people in a way that they will remember them. She publishes her books herself and I gave her the name of spd so I hope she will list with them. I recommend them highly.

Anne read next. I was nervous about how her poems would be received but the audience got them and laughed a lot. She read from Uxudo and also had these poems displayed on the screen behind her. AT one point the crazy lady who comes to all the readings here started reading along with them and it created this wonderful additional voice from the audience. There was also a great contrast between Grace's spare, information poems and Anne's multilingual registers. I thought it worked and was a good lesson on all that poetry can be for me.

Then Ku'ualoha had asked that she be able to turn her reading time over for a creative presentation by the journal 'Oiwi (which she co-edits). They had a gourd player and a flutist (I know I'm calling these things by their wrong names which are very specific in Hawaiian) and several readers and images on the screen. They read sections from the first issue of the journal. The performance was restrained but also very interesting. I liked its emphasis on the collective aspects of editing and how that is what is important. I was a bit disappointed that they for some reason decided to highlight the poem that compares butt fucking to colonialism (the line is: "It's like/Getting fucked in the ass/Is supposed to be/A turn on--/Get real!"; I've complained about this before) by Mahealani Kamau'u. But otherwise it was very political and kind of another interesting contrast with the readings that came before. It pointed out one form that nationalist art might take inside a university. And that seems very important.

Then we all ate some food. And then we went to the bar Shipley's. There was more food there. Which would have been fine if we had eaten four hours earlier when we were supposed to but didn't. We drank some stuff, went home, slept for a long time. The next day Anne and Cecilia and Bill and me went to Bellows, a beach that is owned by the military and you can only visit on weekends. Cecilia rode on the body board a lot. Afterwards we came home and Eric and Steve came over for dinner. We had a series of salads for dinner.

A few days later Susan said we should start planning next year's. And I thought I am still way too tired. Setting up readings here makes me too tense b/c of the politics of things. I'm working hard on balance between elsewhere and here and still that seems not right to many. I realized while doing this that I like events that are no man's lands, that have no affiliations. But sometimes that means that no one is interested. But at the same time doing stuff here means bringing in people who you might not otherwise hear ever. I wish more peope from other parts of the Pacific came to read. And I enjoyed attending the event. The conversation between elsewhere and here interested me. I kind of need that friction in order to understand things.

I'm going to put the readings up on the web in a month or so (but not the Kingston reading which I didn't organize). I'll let you know when I do this.

↑ Index

77. kathylou

Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree

Wed 6 Oct 1999

And let's not forget, it was all for a good cause: Raising money for Small Press Traffic! If you saw the list of fabulous auction items and raffle prizes and wondered "how the heck did they get that?" I have two words for you:
Kevin Killian. I'm thinking he should hire himself out as a consultant, or at least professional autograph hound.
Good job kids.
Kathy Lou Schultz
> It being nearly impossible for me to grow a beard myself, I've always held > the hirsute facial appendages enthralling in others. Thus the true motive > for my avowed "great pleasure" in introducing David Bromige during the group
> reading at the same event. (Though, it's true, I have as much admiration for > his work as for his beard - and the same might be said of Delany). So mine > is a beardward bent that needs no beard for its bending.
>
> Tanya, of course, has her own "bent" reasons to dig a translucent plastic > envelope full of hair...
>
> Taylor
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Tisa Bryant
> Sent: Monday, October 04, 1999 2:47 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: View from the front: The Small Press Traffic soiree
>
> Kathy,
>
> I believe it was Ms. Tanya Hollis who scored the snip of Chip's beard....
> I remember being shocked and delighted that she bid on something described
> as > being for fetishists....maybe they'll share, or (gasp!) maybe it is Tanya > who's > the beard for Taylor's bent....hmmm.
>
> Tisa

↑ Index

78. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy
Re: OVO, stockholm
Wed 6 Oct 1999

David

oi object to that last remark. Though, while we're at it, listening to the radio this afternoon I realised that paddies pronounce the words lawyer and liar almost identically. (Add the o's yourselves, I'm on a go slow)

cheers

Randolph Healy

Visit the Sound Eye website at:
http://indigo.ie/~tjac/sound_eye_hme.htm
or find more Irish writing at:
http://www.nd.edu/~ndr/issues/ndr7/contents.html

> From: david bromige <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: OVO, stockholm
> Date: 06 October 1999 06:58
>
> Maybe it's obvious to all, but if not, you will welcome the news > that Oidentifieriade verbala objekt is an unidentified verbal object, > presumably something that doesnt exist that everybody's read or heard of > (although isnt it rather, in this case, something that does exist that > nobody has seen or read of, in sweden that is, until now? leastwise in
the > minds of the editors?). It must be quite clear to non-swedish readers, > except for the O, which has the function of un, but looks as though an > irish person had blundered into the act. David
>

↑ Index

79. William Marsh
Re: small press publications announcements deadline
Wed 6 Oct 1999

Thanks for including the following from PaberBrainPress

Chapbooks

1999:
John Olson, Logo Lagoon (28pp.)
Steve Carll, DRUGS (24pp.)
Rebecca Byrkit, Suite: Mary (20pp.)
Sheila Murphy & Peter Ganick, numens from centrality (36pp.)

1998:
M. Magoolaghan, mag nets (20pp.)
Dan Featherston, ROOMS (36pp.)
Willam Marsh, b/c (40pp.)

All chaps $5 or 2 for $8

Limited Editions

Dana Montlack & Bill Marsh, The Bagua Book (text and color images, 24pp., $20) Dana Montlack & William Marsh, Recycler's Handbook (text and color images, 30pp., $15)

current site for more information:

http://bmarsh.dtai.com/paperbrainpress/

thanks much!

bmarsh

> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group
> [mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Jerrold Shiroma
> Sent: Tuesday, October 05, 1999 12:32 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: small press publications announcements deadline
>
> The deadline for this week's Small Press publications announcements page @ Duration Press is this Friday. All publishers who wish to have their publications listed, please send all appropriate information, such as titles, authors, prices, contact / ordering information, web addresses, & short descriptions to [redacted]

↑ Index

80. Tenney Nathanson
recent material on Erica Hunt?
Wed 6 Oct 1999

I'm wondering if anyone knows of work published ON Erica, esp recent work (or particularly good work).

thanks for any leads.

Tenney

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/

↑ Index

81. David Kellogg
Re: Joy Davidman
Wed 6 Oct 1999

She is briefly discussed in Cary Nelson's book _Repression and Recovery_.

Rod & Corrine Holke-Farnam wrote:

> I'm searching for information on Joy Davidman. Any ehlp would be greatly appreciated.
>
> Corrine [redacted]

--
David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

82. Alan Sondheim
the parental
Wed 6 Oct 1999

o+

the parental

the promise

i am very small in the world
i have tried to make peace with the world i constitute and reconstitute myself i have tried to make peace with my father i am barred from the world and my father in the next quarter century i will write i will complete the work i have been writing i will compile and interpret the work the work will remain in spite of its ruin in the stories of mothers and sons i am written in the stories of fathers and sons i am written i am a coward small and fearful in this world i will write not a world from not a world for decades i will write i will write pebbles and endless beaches i will walk on edges and fly low near a height

i shall ascertain the heights of men and women
i will reckon and live through reckonings
i will promise and live through promisings in ruins i will stumble and write of ruins among friends and enemies i will testify shore and beaches and pebbles are memories of nights and days i will write their turnings
i am fearful of worlds and will never write worlds
i am fearful of worlds and i will write worlds this promise of the 6th day 10th month 99th year when i am smallest in this smallest of worlds

cancer

Tue Oct 5 22:14:18 EDT 1999 now cancer will begin its journey in the arms of god arraignments while cancer subsides and angels happy Tue Oct 5 22:22:54 EDT 1999 arraignments during final assaults and angels dying Tue Oct 5 22:23:12 EDT 1999 let us pray

Tue Oct 5 22:14:18 EDT 1999 in the truth of god the cancer enters the lung, from the truth of god the cancer hovers, now, as if it were forever Tue Oct 5 22:14:54 EDT 1999 abandoned by god, the cancer thins towards ready exculpation, as if it were gone, as if angels rejoiced, singing the home of abandoned cancer, the purity of organs constituted Tue Oct 5 22:15:56 EDT 1999 now cancer returns, approbated by god, as if god were speaking or speech or sound, now cancer spreads to the adrenal, angels weep in full capacity against the begging of the angels arrayed against god, now cancer seeps, spreads, covers itself, makes excuses, ahem, begs foregiveness, meanders, wanders, returns, burrows, ahem Tue Oct 5 22:18:00 EDT 1999 now cancer subsides, angels rejoice, god withdraws, there is no justice in the world, suns blacken, angels sing and play harps, cancer dwindles, eyes return their bright and merry sight Tue Oct 5 22:18:39 EDT 1999 now breathing slows, waves of cancer testing other newer waters, new metastases, solitons and wavelets, ripples on surfaces unseen, god smiles wide and broad, angels shudder holding on Tue Oct 5 22:19:30 EDT 1999 now cancer claims an other organ, angels again weeping and wailing, shall there be no mercy, angels crying and begging, god almost merry, cancer hems and haws, cancer close to apologetic laughter Tue Oct 5 22:20:26 EDT

1999 now cancer will begin its work within the arms of god, angels prepare for bier and mourning, angels yet hopeful in the face of god's huges eyes Tue Oct 5 22:21:30 EDT 1999 smiling everywhere, yet other organs, uncanny stillness, strangeness of beings of pure light arrayed against skin, bones, organs, god's beings against angels wailing Tue Oct 5 22:22:39 EDT 1999 arraignments during final assaults and angels dying Tue Oct 5 22:23:21 EDT 1999 let us pray Tue Oct 5 22:23:22 EDT 1999

↑ Index

83. Joel M Bettridge
call for papers (Ronald Johnson Conference)
Thu 7 Oct 1999

__Eye, Ear, & Mind: A Conference on the Poetry of Ronald Johnson__ The conference will be held in the Poetry and Rare Books Library at SUNY Buffalo, and will take place on April 21 & 22 (2000). Any area of Johnson's work is open for discussion. Please send abstracts by January 31: email to, [redacted], or by mail to Joel Bettridge, 259 Ashland Ave #3, Buffalo NY 14222. If you have any questions please feel free to contact me at the either address. Please pass this post on to anyone that might be interested, or any other relevant lists.

thanks,

Joel

↑ Index

84. miekal and under the Palace of Escapist Literature
Thu 7 Oct 1999

Hito shirezu koso, [redacted]

Forgive the interruption or did I see the young bamboo?
Things are not the same for one man,
the many poisonous insects that emerged pursue us one after another hanging from our shoulders even the rude mountain had nothing to hope for there were still many empty fields
I am writing one to see what a woman can do omowazarishi wo

in the morning I retired after he sent this verse to her:

although you are old crossing the past

o waves!

forgetting-shells

Semio Cipher, [redacted]

When I try to climb I lower my eyes. The single note with thorns is no place to write. A forest, indistinct, too shy to follow. Pure heart, drunken stupor, clutching child. I'll be the revelation atop city walls. But a man into ghosts seeks words that rhymes. Or does she feel annoyed as she speeds away? The good man grows thorns.

meat-girl, body without syntax with such happiness between the clouds

ink freezes when I think of this I have been unable to gaze peacefully in the distance the eyes dispair in disarray
I'm unable to sleep
where the dawn has not come yet a face greatly changed
now I lean on sadness, there are limits to know the world is vapor it moves me to sing distant spaces that await me hurt my heart my regret gathers force
stilled in this presence

Sally Forth, [redacted]

Don't you see withered trees
I must leave among the clouds
Always the disturbing meditation
No one can give my food to the crows
Who lived scene by scene

Blooms burst her green mound
Flutes and wind once parted
My severe decay has yet to go where I go I'm drunk and the world is vast He's never been here & I lift up my skirt
In front of his meloncholy

Great great grandfather, 1907 somewhere near Ankara, Turkey neither living or dying speeds up the dancer's striptease elements of surprise & a capricious warning finger "how do you know a single word can be good?"

loss of verbal desire but they are only improvisations until he is loved by one of the puppets consistent use of imitation failed each morning in this rustic village

it is always the trace of the cut that has had the desired effect leading to a blurred noise not one has survived discontinuities which represent words that might be her last breath

---

a bearded lady brings him financial ruin
when the agreed-upon day demands his soul
a wager thinking he is awaiting Venus who appears modern with frequent melodies

---

to be in the secret run out of words
shake the dust to wake up

↑ Index

85. d.j. huppatz
new publications from down under
Thu 7 Oct 1999

Dear All

Announcing Textbase Issue #4, 26 pages of experimental writing in glorious black & white, including a fancy foldout interview with Melbourne concrete/vispo/sound poet PiO.

Plus, new from Textbase micropress, THE WEEK SONNETS, a chapbook by D.J. Huppatz. Here's what the critics have said about this volume:

"Week Sonnets? More like Weak Sonnets, they don't even rhyme." - Kevin Schwartz, Brunswick Times. "Well it's a bit strange. Why can't you write something nice?" - Martha Huppatz, poet's mother.

All swaps considered BUT I also have a limited number of freebies of both, backchannel with your address for copies.

Dan Huppatz,
Melbourne
Australia

↑ Index

86. Sara Lundquist
(no subject)
Thu 7 Oct 1999

If any one knows David Lehman's email address, would you backchannel it to me at [redacted]?

Sara Lundquist
English Department
University of Toledo
[redacted]

Without shyness or formality
"a gesture of allowing oneself time"
Remember how starry it arrives the hope of another idiom, beheld that blush of inexactitude, and the furor, it will return to you, flotsam blocked out (Guest)

↑ Index

87. Poetry Project
readings next week
Thu 7 Oct 1999

Tomorrow, Friday, Oct. 13th at 10:30 pm

is Po'Jazz

Jazz & poetry with Golda Soloman, Gerthie Owtram, and musicians.

Monday, Oct. 11th at 8 pm

is Blood & Tears: Poems for Matthew Shepard

with John Ashbery, Patricia Spears Jones, Eileen Myles, Jaime Manrique, Edmund Berrigan, Eleni Sikelianos, Kristin Prevallet, Stephen Turtell, Dean Kostos, Manny Xavier, Lisa Jarnot, Lee Ann Brown, Maggie Nelson, Griffin Hansbury, Beatrix Gates, Gerrit Henry, and Linda Smuckler.

Wednesday, Oct. 13th at 8 pm

is Poetry/In Transit

Danish poets Annemette Kure Andersen, Niels Frank, and Pia Tafdrup read as part of the ongoing project Poetry/In Transit, with English translations read by John Ashbery, Eleni Sikelianos, and Siri Hustvedt.

Friday, Oct. 15th at 10:30 pm

is The Haiku Year/Head to Head Haiku Competition

Douglas A. Martin, Anna Grace, Tom Gilroy, and Jim McKay read from The Haiku Year, published by Soft Skull Press. Then, open rounds of Head to Head Haiku, led by Headmaster Daniel Ferri. Bring 17 or more haiku and win prizes!

All events are $7, $4 for students/seniors.

↑ Index

88. A H Bramhall
Thursday's Book Report
Thu 7 Oct 1999

I'm no good at this but want to point to Karen Kelley's latest book, Venus Return (Vatic Hum, SF), and say (in a deep voice to denote seriousness) that the book deserves attention. the poems are worked in a carefully rendered prose - as if she's had practice writing -- with uninflected, dream-like shifts of place, mood, and attention. they have a viscous integrity, solid but shifty; they might even be surreal but I never went to that school. "What do you want? Buttered toast? Dollar bills? The meat in the pan? Lots of books? Monogamy? Modest photos of yourself no one else will ever see?" yes to all, as a matter of fact, especially the last, but here's the point: I find myself chuckling at the dry humour that always arrives unexpected. I'm caught off guard as I read, and eager for more surprises. the dreaminess carries a sexy passion and a human confusion straight from the source. some people think there's such a word as 'about' so I'll go so far as to say that these poems are about gender, relationship and underwear. politicized underwear, that is, and I'm not kidding. typefaces have been carefully chosen and employed, with both visual impact and legibility equally honoured: I commend that. I hope Venus Returns sounds as interesting as I found it.

↑ Index

89. Brian Stefans

New Arras URL -- please change your links!

Thu 7 Oct 1999

Arras can now be found at:

http://www.geocities.com/arras_online

Geocities is the place where you can get 11mb of server space for free, which is why it's moved. The drawback is that an ad banner pops up in a new window.

My advice: DO NOT close the new window, only minimize it (that is, hit the button with the single "_" in it rather than the one with the "x"). This will keep the banner out of site while you navigate. If you close the window, it will reopen every time you hit a link, pretty annoying.

As they didn't have "Poetry" as a subject category, I chose "Issues and Events," so the advertising is relatively innocuous. All I've seen so far is a banner for debt considation, which is actually kind of helpful.

Please change whatever links you have on your site to the new URL. There won't be any forwarding from the old URL, it'll just be dead.

Thanks so much to all of you who have visited the site and/or linked to it! Much appreciated...

↑ Index

90. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

ReMap #7

Thu 7 Oct 1999

"Love's work is always freedom" D. Meltzer

The new ReMap is almost home from the printers.

Please subscribe or re: as we wish to survive
as we do.

since 1990--

7: LOVE

Lee Ann Brown
Laura Wright
Tosh Berman
Martin Nakell
Alice Notely
Douglas Oliver
Chris Reiner
Rodrigo Toscan
Elizabeth Treadwell

edited by Todd Baron and Carolyn Kemp

$10. per two issues 3625 wesley st
culver city ca 90232

love's deidication: sophie dylan baron born 9/16/99

check to Todd Baron

↑ Index

91. Poetics List Administration

r e a d m e

Thu 7 Oct 1999

This message came to the administrative account. - Tim

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Wednesday, October 06, 1999, 4:56 PM -0400

From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>

Subject: r e a d m e

Hello everyone,

r e a d m e is now up:

http://www.columbia.edu/cu/history/detour/readme

I n t e r v i e w s

Charles Bernstein (by Bradford Senning)
Mary Burger (by Jacques Debrot)
Jeff Clark (by Jordan Davis)
Nada Gordon (by Gary Sullivan)
Randolph Healy (by Robert Archambeau)
Kent Johnson (by John Bradley)
Rebecca Levi (by GS)
Ange Mlinko (by GS)
Alan Sondheim (by GS)

E s s a y s

Jack Kimball on John Wieners
Kimberly Lyons on Women and the Poetry Project
Alan Sondheim's "" or Practice

P o e t r y

Daniel Davidson's Last Poems
Nada Gordon "essay"
Joel Lewis "The Pethro Poems"
Kimberly Lyons "Concordonnance"
Alan Sondheim "Selected Works"

R e v i e w s

Nada Gordon on Andrea Brady's Liberties
Jeffrey Jullich on Aaron Shurin's Paradise of Forms
Ramez Qureshi on J.H. Prynne's Collected Poems
Gerald Schwartz on Kamau Brathwaite
Heather Fuller on Jeff Conant

A S p e c i a l S e c t i o n o n D a n i e l D a v i d s o n w i t h w r i t i n g b y

George Albon
Bruce Andrews
Dodie Bellamy
Jeff Conant
Beverly Dahlen
Greg Fuchs
Benjamin Friedlander
Kevin Killian
Colleen Lookingbill
Aldon Nielsen
Charles Pollack

Gary Sullivan
Jordan Zorker

L i n k s

Links to bios, interviews with and work by more than 400 20th century "non-mainstream" authors (constantly updated; feel free to suggest further URLs).

r e a d m e is a quarterly online journal of poetics featuring interviews, essays and reviews germane to contemporary poetry. Poetry published only in tandem with author interviews and/or critical prose, except in cases of poem-as-reading/critique. Queries welcome. A letters page will be included in subsequent issues. Please send all queries and correspondence via email: [redacted] or to Gary Sullivan, 558 11th Street, #1B, Brooklyn, NY 11215.

Next issue: Interviews with Hoa Nguyen, Laurie Price, Rod Smith, and more ..

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

92. Nielsen, Aldon
L.A. reading
Thu 7 Oct 1999

Jay Wright reads
Tuesday, Oct. 12
8:00 PM
Loyola Marymount University
McIntosh Center in Sullivan Hall

7900 Loyola Blvd., L.A.
(near the airport -- just off Manchester as you head into the Pacific)

call Nielsen for info. [redacted]

next up: Primus St. John on Oct. 20

↑ Index

93. Al Filreis
Re: Joy Davidman
Thu 7 Oct 1999

Very briefly. Alan Wald is a better source of information (he's at Michigan). -- Al Filreis

---

|
| She is briefly discussed in Cary Nelson's book _Repression and | Recovery_.
|
| Rod & Corrine Holke-Farnam wrote:
|
| > I'm searching for information on Joy Davidman. Any ehlp would be | > greatly appreciated.
| >
| > Corrine [redacted]
|
| --
| David Kellogg
| [redacted]
| Duke University, University Writing Program
| [redacted]
|

↑ Index

94. Joe Amato

UB Job Ad

Thu 7 Oct 1999

> Assistant or Associate Professor
> New Media/Graphic Design
> School of Communications Design
> University of Baltimore
>
> Position beginning August 2000 in an interdisciplinary School of Communications Design with unique applied/professional programs.
>
> Applicant must have substantial experience in interactive media and graphic design, MFA or equivalent degree, strong commitment to teaching, and ability to teach a variety of digital arts courses at undergraduate, masters, and doctoral levels. We are interested in candidates who can teach some or all of the following: computer graphics and animation, Web and other electronic publishing, digital audio and video, 3-D modeling/VR, and information design.
>
> Both technical expertise and design excellence are crucial. Portfolio must include both interactive media and print. Salary and rank commensurate with qualifications and experience. Review of applications will begin 12/15/99.
>
> Submit letter, vita, portfolio and URLs, plus phone numbers for 3

> references to Jaye Crooks, School of Communications Design, 1400 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21201-5779.
>
> The School of Communications Design offers undergraduate degrees in English and Corporate Communications, an MA in Publications Design, and a new first-professional degree, the Doctor of Communications Design (DCD). The School also offers a range of post-Master's certificate programs in advanced design, communications and design theory, literary publishing, and new media publishing. The associated Institute for Language, Technology, and Publications Design supports fellowships, lectures and seminars, and advanced research projects.
>
> For direct inquiries, please e-mail Jaye Crooks, [redacted] or call 410/[redacted]. For further information about the School of Communications Design please visit one of these Web sites:
>
> Main site: <http://raven.ubalt.edu/comDesign>http://raven.ubalt.edu/comDesign
>
> Doctor of Communications Design: <http://raven.ubalt.edu/dcd>http://raven.ubalt.edu/dcd
>
> Certificate programs: <http://raven.ubalt.edu/certificates>http://raven.ubalt.edu/certificates
>
> Institute: <http://raven.ubalt.edu/institute>http://raven.ubalt.edu/institute

↑ Index

95. miekal and

5 eprayers for alan with alan's words

Thu 7 Oct 1999

---

stillness,
stillness,
as
in my angels
harps,
as
if my reckonings
withdraws,

approbated
reckonings
to me am cancer remain
in us
if constitute withdraws,

reckonings
reckonings
as if my angels mercy,
as
if no promisings apologetic

constitute withdraws,
by me
if angels return
if my us constitute approbated

apologetic stillness,
be me
if harps,

return
as if we constitute promisings

↑ Index

96. Leonard Brink

New from Avec -- Michael Palmer

Thu 7 Oct 1999

New From Avec Books: _The Danish Notebook_ by Michael Palmer. Poetry *Autobiography. For more information about this book, or to read an excerpt, please go to www.instress.com/avec

The Danish Notebook is available from www.amazon.com and Small Press Distribution (it's not yet on their website, but it's in their database).

For those of you in the San Francisco Bay Area, SPD asked me to post that The Danish Notebook,and other books from independent presses will be for sale for 20% off at Small Press Distribution's booth (114) at the 10th annual San Francisco Bay Area Book Festival Oct. 16th and 17th, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Fort Mason.

Avec Book titles will also be for sale at Poetry Flash's booth at the Book Festival, which will be near the Allen Ginsburg Poetry Cafe.

For additional information about the book festival go to www.sfbook.org

*Cydney Chadwick thanks everyone who responded so quickly with offers to build the page for Michael Palmer's new book. She'll respond to everyone who back channeled her in the next few days.

↑ Index

97. Gary Shapiro

Kenyon Review, Sewanee Writers Conference, Boulevard : 3 NYC events

Thu 7 Oct 1999

THREE FREE NYC LITERARY EVENTS
RSVP to [redacted] or [redacted]
We'll see you there! You're invited!

October 12, 1999 The Kenyon Review at 60: A Celebration 7:00pm Founded by John Crowe Ransom, the journal published Allen Tate, Cleanth Brooks, RP Blackmur, Randall Jarrell and Kenneth Burke in its first couple decades, and has gone on to help shape the tastes of the nation.

Princeton professor Michael Wood (author of books on Stendhal, Marquez, Nabokov, among others) will speak on BROKEN DATES: FICTION AND THE CENTURY, followed by respondent MacArthur winner Lewis Hyde (author of The Gift: Imagination and the Erotic Life of Property), and Celia E. O'Donnell, Director of the Council of Literary magazines and Presses. Moderated by Editor David Lynn. FREE ----- Nov. 3, 1999 Sewanee Writers' Conference 10th Anniversary 7:30pm High atop the Cumberland Plateau, an hour and a half from Nashville, an hour from Chattanooga, lies the University of the South, which provides an idyllic setting for The Sewanee Writers' Conference. Writers, editors and agents gather each July to convene for classes, readings, and conversation. Join Conference Director Wyatt Prunty, author of "Since the Noon Mail Stopped" (Johns Hopkins,1997), and other noted writers, including 1999 National Book Award Winner Alice McDermott,as well as Daniel Mueller, author of "How Animals Mate" (Overlook, 1999), Pulitzer Prize winning poet Mark Strand, and Lily Tuck, author of "Siam: or The Woman who Shot a Man" (Overlook, 1999). FREE -------- November 8,1999 An evening with Boulevard Magazine 7:30pm Join Editor Richard Burgin (three-time Pushcart Prize winner, and author of Fear of Blue Skies, Private Fame and Man Without Memory), Molly Peacock, author of four books of poems, including Original Love and Take Heart, as well as a memoir Paradise, Piece by Piece, has been President of the Poetry Society of America. Art critic and poet David Shapiro, author of 7 volumes of poetry, monographs on Ashbery, Jasper Johns, and After a Last Original (with Terry Winters). FREE

Location of the above three events: 15 Gramercy Park South, NYC (near 20th Street & Park Ave) For more information, email [redacted] or call [redacted]. Business attire (jacket & tie for men) is required.

↑ Index

98. Thomas Bell

Re: ~IS~ FORM (re: ANTIN addenda)

Fri 8 Oct 1999

John, i just came across this quote - "Form has to do with how to shape a given space" Gertrude Stein, _Stanzas in Meditation_ that i think captures the process vs. static issue of forms quite nicely.

tom

"Lowther, John" wrote:
>
> i didnt edit myself terribly well in that long
--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

99. Alan Sondheim
the closeness of cancer
Fri 8 Oct 1999

---

o

the closeness of cancer

always waiting for the result, the next cellSWOLLEN BEGINNING TO DISORGAN- IZE THE CORE-THEORETICAL STRUCTURE OF THE WORLD-grappled mitochondriaTELL YOU THE TRUTH, WHILE THE VOICE CONTINUES TO SPEAK AS IF A THIN LAMINA OC- CURRED OVER OR UPON THE REALthe case of the real when the territory is the map or when emissions, spews replace chaos by noise, substance, AAAAASUB- STANCE PULLS THE BODY DOWN, SUBSTANCE IS THE DREAM OF THE BODY, IS THE BODY OF THE DREAM: THIS IS THE TRUTH WHICH I HAVE COME TO TELL YOUa re-sult might divide, might lead to another result, a day might divide, lead to an-other day, a year might divideINTO A YEAR THE SUBSTANCE OF YEARS FALLS; INTO A MONTH, THE SUBSTANCE OF YEARS; INTO A WEEK, THE SUBSTANCE; INTO A DAY, HOUR, MINUTE, THE SAME; INTO A SECOND, THE SUBSTANCE AAAAAeach min- ute, second, week, day, year, month, exist-ing for the others: it is the unknown which is simultaneously unaccountable and unaccounted-forAS IF ALL KNOWLEDGE DERAILS SUBSTANCE, SUBSTANCE DERAILS ALL KNOWLEDGE Fri Oct 8 00:26:38 EDT 1999

↑ Index

100. John Tranter
Traveling Tranter
Fri 8 Oct 1999

Hi. I'm John Tranter, editor of Jacket magazine. For those interested in hearing some modern poetry with a slight Australian accent, I will be giving one reading in Prague and two readings in the USA in coming weeks.

Contact details and reading dates as follows:

* October 17 to 21
Prague: Dalimil Hotel
Propokova námistí 2-3, Praha 3-Zizkov
Tel. 420-2-782 666, fax 420--2-227 80182
Can be contacted via Louis Armand, phone [redacted], fax 420 2 248 12 166,
email [redacted]
John Tranter reading at the Globe Bookstore, 6.30 pm Monday October 18th

* October 22 to 31
New York: Olcott Hotel
27 West 72nd Street, NY 10023
Tel [redacted], Fax-[redacted]
John Tranter reading at the Zinc Bar, 90 West Houston (Laguardia/Thompson)
6.30 pm on the evening of Tuesday October 26th

* November 1 to 4
Los Angeles: Hotel Carmel
201 Broadway, Santa Monica, CA 90401
Tel [redacted], Fax-[redacted]
John Tranter reading at the Rose Caf é, 220 Rose Avenue at Main Street, Venice, just south of Santa Monica, (tel [redacted]) on the evening of Wednesday November 3rd.

best,
JT

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

101. John Tranter
Traveling Tranter, the Zinc-Corrected Version
Fri 8 Oct 1999

Apologies for a misdirection in my recent email:

The Zinc Bar is at 90 West Houston
 - LaGuardia (West Broadway) and Houston Street - and I'm reading there at 6.30 pm on the evening of Tuesday October 26th

JT

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

102. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
correction
Fri 8 Oct 1999

---

the ReMap advert should of, of course, tired he wrote--read

Rodrigo Toscano

not "toscan"
or some dessert
of that name.

thanks for reading,

Todd Baron
ReMap Readers

↑ Index

103. Lisa Samuels
reading in ypsilanti michigan
Fri 8 Oct 1999

---

dear all,

for those in shouting distance of the ann arbor/ypsilanti, michigan area on Monday, October 11th:

i will be reading poems, and Michael Martone will be reading fiction, at 7:30 PM in the Halle Library Auditorium on the campus of Eastern Michigan University. it's free & the new library is a cool stone & glassy venue, just north of Washtenaw Ave and east of Oakwood (on the east side of EMU's main campus) in autumnal Ypsilanti.

lisa samuels

↑ Index

104. miekal and
referencing vast leakage, or temporary extrusion
Fri 8 Oct 1999

Roland Barthes, [redacted]

The opposition spread under the protection of power. There are those that no concious illusion is perpetrated. An entire orality which produces a drift of bliss & fear. Fetish objects on the other hand leaves expression to the pheno-text. As a creature of language which permeates him very quietly the subject returns were we fond of neologisms. This text bores me like a spider dissolving. The text you write must prove the sentence is hierarchical. Similarly, it is not only establishing the oppostion of the way two girls must be politicized. Where is this elsewhere? Nine times out of ten societies object to undifferentiated eye & noteworthy Desire. Do not deign to be the persistence of the thing. Neurosis are the means of ungratiated sucking, a glimpse of scandalous truth, still far too much heroism to identify accurately language's image. We are scientific clandestine sites. This is to want a text which seizes the subject the way the reversal of origins could not be written. And when something remains a potlatch under respectable appearances, this is how I have my best ideas.

Pry Luz, Why must I see the Immortals?

In a Boat
on a Bird
it was very Sad
A Girl grows up
& then She climbs out of Bed

green green
I didnt dare run along the Edge

Poetry is one Great Essence

We steal a night
listening to its Sounds
I shall pity the innumerable wilderness Moon wandering in solitude

I scan thru texts
but discontent grows great the former rage
fresh in the Frost
from Birth to Modern Times echoes of Chimes and Bells empty a Man's Mind

explain negation.

within even man, conversation.

contradiction.

contradiction.

confusion, cohabitation, vacillation, margin.

expansion written then.

in written contain within seduction.

Page Light Being, radiance / spectre / poise

I laugh at the arrival of a solitary crane amorous heart is tears that wets one's clothes but where I go butterflies fail to coax her I'd like to say something in tense abstraction

my sorrow is great but can't compare with your past great love in opposite corners of the world the same tart flavor
the present will last and get no worse

the void with a thunderous hum somewhere atop the mulberry trees never my loved ones have not returned it was with them come what may that's why I'm unable to sleep

as I turned my head
I'm satisfied with me never quite undone I will not go gently

Pride Lustre, [redacted]

leaves of rustling sorrow into my heart prisoners continually empty half a word

the vegetable is as tasteless
as the sleeping dragon

my girl
smeared my pain
with a feeble light

exposing lotus leaves I never dreamed of her silent passage oblivious to desire buckthorn trees curse

the endless gods

how lovely the longing for encampment

like a fog dabbled
she wouldn't dance

↑ Index

105. Molly Schwartzburg
Re: info on Bei Dao?
Fri 8 Oct 1999

If any Bay Area people are interested in attending, Bei Dao will be reading his poetry as part of the Stanford Presidential lecture series on November 29. You can find the location info on the Stanford web site. The series is usually very well attended, so it's recommended that you arrive early. --Molly Schwartzburg

On Wed, 6 Oct 1999, James Brook wrote:

> After reading the current Rain Taxi interview with Bei Dao, which sent me back to his books of poetry, notably the latest, Landscape Over Zero, I am more and more intrigued by this poet, whom I once saw read in Paris several years ago.
>
> Could someone direct me to published criticism or other interviews? According to Rain Taxi, Bei Dao is teaching at the University of California at Davis. I wonder if anyone has a more precise address?
>
> Thanks,
>
> --James Brook

↑ Index

106. David Kirschenbaum
Edward Sanders chapbook from Boog Literature
Fri 8 Oct 1999

Now available:

Boog Literature chapbook # 24

Ed Sanders, Arise, o Wobblies!
12 pages + 4-page cover wrap, $6
$1 from each sale goes to the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church

Limited numbered edition of 34 copies 12 pages + 4 page cover wrap with red star woodblock print by Tom Nattell and black typography linoleum print by Daisy DeCapite.
Each book has a tip-in sheet signed by the author and cover artists. $15
$3 from each sale goes to the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church

Checks payable to:
Boog Literature
351 W.24th Street Apt. 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510
email: [redacted] website: www.booglit.com tel: [redacted]

Chapbook to commemorate Sanders Tuesday October 5, 1999, Poetry Project at St. Marks Church reading with Lawrence Ferlinghetti. An excerpt from forthcoming Black Sparrow Book, "America, A History in Verse, Vol. 1, 1900-39," (Black Sparrow Press, 1999).

Also from Boog Literature by Edward Sanders, Thirsting for Peace in a Raging Century (1993). $6.

Boog Literature chapbooks are edited and published by David A. Kirschenbaum. Send SASE, or email, for catalog.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

107. Alan Sondheim

Jennifer-Cancer

Fri 8 Oct 1999

-

Jennifer-Cancer Beneath Fire Inside Your Everywhere

JENNIFER STUMBLES TO HER FEET: LEAVES JENNIFER BEHIND. LURCHES. CRAWLS, SCREAMS ACROSS AMERICA. MEN WITH GUNS: VIOLATION-FABRIC OF AMERICA. JENNIFER BEHIND THE TRUCK.:VIOLATION-JENNIFER: JENNIFER DEFRAG. Bring the bones closer; cross them: SEPULCHRE. WHAT THE BONES SAY: Jennifer-Cancer always already at a ioss, RAM CORRUPTED, ROM OUTMODED.:Jannifar's c$ncar. Jannifar's ioss of mamory. Jannifar's baginning $g$in. Jannifar's c$hght - tha dissolation of Jannifar. Jannifar-fhnction tr$nsformad tamoor$riiy into orgnic/orgnism, matstsas, b$ck into tha m$china. M$chinic Janni- far larching, unabla to saa/ha$r str$ight: inscriotion doasn't work, noth- ing doas. Rdition thar$py: JENNIFER DEFRAG.:CANCER-RAM: Devour bodies CANCER-ROM Brought Forth through JENNIFER STUMBLES TO HER FEET: LEAVES JENNIFER BEHIND. LURCHES. CRAWLS, SCREAMS ACROSS AMERICA. MEN WITH GUNS: VIOLATION-FABRIC OF AMERICA. JENNIFER BEHIND THE TRUCK. sob! sob! sob!

unabla toscriotion doasn't work, noth-ing doas.JENNIFER STUMBLES TO HER FEET: LEAVES JENNIFER BEHIND. LURCHES.-FABRIC OF AMERICA.JENNIFERBEHIND- THETRUCK.:VIOLATION-JENNIFER: JENNIFER DEFRAG. Bring theesTHE BONES SAY: Jennifer-Canceralways already ataioss, RAMCORRUPTED, ROM OUTMODED.:Janni- far's c$ncar.ioss of mamory. $g$in.c$hght -tha dissolation ofJannifar.Jann- ifar-fhnction tr$nsformad tamoor$riiyorgnic/orgnism,tha m$china. M$chin- icthar$py:JENNIFER DEFRAG.:CANCER-RAM: Devour bodiesCANCER-ROM sob! sob! sob!

JENNIFER DIES OF FUCKING CANCER. sob! sob! sob!

↑ Index

108. Nielsen, Aldon
reading in Virginia
Fri 8 Oct 1999

For anyone within striking distance of Charloteesville VA --

On Thursday 10/28 at 8:00 PM there'll be readings by Gwendolyn Brooks, Joanne Gabbin AND Melvin B. Tolson Jr.

This in celebration of the newly pub'd Tolson edition AND the book "The Furious Flowering of African American Poetry"

There will also be music -- thing takes place at Old Cabell Hall, UVA, Charlottesville says here that for info you can call [redacted]

↑ Index

109. Jim Andrews
Defib: live online Web artist interview surf show
Sat 9 Oct 1999

FROM WEBARTERY.COM.
DEFIB LAUNCH: NEW LIVE ONLINE Web ARTIST INTERVIEW SURF SHOW
1ST & 3RD SUNDAYS, NOON PST
http://webartery.com/defib

SUNDAY OCTOBER 17, NOON PST (3RD SUNDAY OF OCT) Talk with Talan Memmott and the contributors to the new issue of BeeHive at high noon during the launch show of Defib, Webartery.com's online chat interview/surf show featuring Web artists and their works and projects. Vol 2, issue 4 of BeeHive is upcoming at http://www.temporalimage.com/beehive/bee_core. All you need to participate in this live discussion/surf show is a java enabled browser.

TALAN MEMMOTT AND BEEHIVE Talan Memmott is a writer living and working in San Francisco, California. He comes to writing from a background in fine art, having studied painting, installation, video and performance art, as well as critical theory. His hypertext theory/fiction work has appeared in the online publications Perforations, Perihelion, Big Bridge and frAme. Memmott currently works in the multimedia field as Production Director for the web development firm PERCEPTICON and serves as Creative Director for the literary hypermedia journal BeeHive. A new edition of BeeHive is launching October 6/99 featuring work by Reiner Strasser, Michael White, Claine Helen Keily, Jim Andrews, and an archive of the San Jose Valley Poetry Slam Team that BeeHive covered during their cross country tour, which culminated in their winning the national title. Probably several of the contributors to BeeHive will be participating in this launch of both Defib and the new issue of BeeHive.

DEFIB Defib shows will be recorded and the transcript produced into a full-blown hypertext available at webartery.com. This turning of the live show into a different form after the fact will create a critical record/document that accompanies the project/works under discussion. Defib will roughly coincide with the launch of Web art projects by the artists of Webartery.com and others. Upcoming shows include Claire Dinsmore and the contributors to her new online magazine Cauldron & Net (Sunday Nov 7, noon PST), Bill Marsh and his new broadcasting project sunbrella.net (Sunday Nov 21, noon PST), and Miekal And and his LinguaMOO collaborative project plus other projects Miekal's collaborating in such as Alan Sondheim's project at Trace (Sunday Dec 5). See http://webartery.com/defib for detailed schedule and other info.

DEFIB:
http://webartery.com/defib
Produced by Dan Waber and Jim Andrews
A project of Webartery.com

↑ Index

110. Alan Sondheim
my work's notice
Sat 9 Oct 1999

(This notice is sent periodically to the Cybermind/Fop-l lists - it's hard for people to see what I'm attempting to do in writing/literature/theory/ reading - without books, etc. the best I can do is the mass of materials at the websites - hoping you can read online - Alan -)

Internet Philosophy and Psychology - Oct.99

This is a somewhat periodic notice describing my Internet Text, available on the Net, and sent in the form of texts to various lists. The URL is: http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt/ which is partially mirrored at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html. (The first site includes some graphics, dhtml, The Case of the Real, etc.)

The changing nature of the email lists, Cybermind and Fiction-of-Philoso- phy, to which the texts are sent individually, hides the full body of the work; readers may not be aware of the continuity among them. The writing may appear fragmented, created piecemeal, splintered from a non-existent whole. On my end, the whole is evident, the texts extended into the lists, part or transitional objects.

So this (periodic) notice is an attempt to recuperate the work as total- ity, re-strain its diaphanous existence. Below is an updated introduction.

The "Internet Text" currently constitutes around 120 files, or 2800 print- ed pages. It began in 1994, and continues as an extended meditation on cy-berspace, expanding into 'wild theory' and literatures.

Almost all of the text is in the form of short-waves or long-waves. The former are the individually-titled sections, written in a variety of sty- les, at times refer-encing other writers/theorists. The sections are inter- related; on occasion ema-nations appear, avatars possessing philosophical or psychological import. They also create and problematize narrative sub- structures within the work as a whole. Such are Julu, Alan, Jennifer, and Nikuko, in particular. Overall, I'm con-cerned with virtual-real subjectiv- ity and its manifestations, in relation to vari-ous philosophical issues. Recently, I've been dealing with dis/ease, the "ill" avatar, and binary operations/processes in relation to transcendence and frag-mentation.

The long-waves are fuzzy loci bearing on such issues as death, love, vir- tual embodiment, the "granularity of the real," physical reality, computer languages, and protocols. The loci weave throughout the text; the result- ing splits and con-vergences owe something to phenomenology, programming, deconstruction, linguistics, prehistory, etc., as well as to the function- ings of online worlds in relation to everyday realities.

I have used MUDS, MOOS, talkers, perl, d/html, qbasic, linux, emacs, Cu-SeeMe, etc., all tending towards a future of being-and-writing, texts which act and engage beyond traditional reading practices. Some of the work emerges out of performative language such as computer programs which _do_ things; some emerges out of interferences with these programs, or conversations using internet applications that are activated one way or another. (Most recently, I use the "display" program in Slackware linux, for example.)

There is no binarism in the texts, no series of definitive statements. Virtuality is considered beyond the text- and web-scapes prevalent now. The various issues of embodiment that will arrive with full-real VR are already in embryonic exis-tence, permitting the theorizing of present and future sites, "spaces," nodes, and modalities of body/speech/community.

Please check the INDEX to find your way into the earlier body of the work. The Case of the Real is a sustained work that may be the most useful text of all. It is also helpful to read the first file, Net1.txt, and/or to look at the latest files (lb, lc, etc., which are still to be indexed) as well. Skip around. The Index lists the files in which a particular topic is described; you can then do a search on the file, or simply scroll down (the files range in length from 30 to 50 pages in print). (Note: I have stopped working on the index; for the later files, I suggest you skim. Eventually, I need a site and a local search engine for the texts; at the moment, I apologize for the awkwardness of it all.)

The texts may be distributed in any medium; please credit me. I would ap- preciate in return any comments you may have.

See also:
Being on Line, Net Subjectivity (anthology), Lusitania, 1997
New Observations Magazine #120 (anthology), Cultures of Cyberspace, 1998
The Case of the Real, chapbooks, Potes & Poets Press, 1998
Jennifer, limited edition, Nominative Press Collective, 1997
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm
http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/diary/diary.txt

Alan Sondheim [redacted]
432 Dean Street, Brooklyn, NY, 11217
email: [redacted]

↑ Index

111. Katherine Lederer

Cover me rumble

Sat 9 Oct 1999

Announcing the publication of

S E A M L E S S A N T I L A N D S C A P E

by Leslie Scalapino

* * *

some older poets say they are finished and say the younger poets are finished as the older poets have finished it the older poets have finished the younger poets are finished say the older poets is it the older poets have received too many compliments?

* * *

If critique and writing are not separate.... The writing is a 'collapsing' of the distinction between real events and dreams, because my intention was to look at what's happening in the mind then ('real time'?) -- also I was looking at mind in its relation to the real outside (not that the outside has created the mind -- your quoting of Marx -- or that the mind has created the outside). That is, not discriminating as to the cause... The outside 'demonstrating cruelty' then, the writing does not change or talk about the past of the outside -- it marks motions by the writing's sound, people making small motions such as walking on the street. There, they aren't 'expression' of oneself...

* * *

As if one only wrote an "emblem" of the "postmodernist metropolis" rather than engaging being in Calcutta (or New York -- or Berkeley). In this, I am responding to Marjorie Perloff's essay "The Language Poet as Autobiographer, Ron Silliman's Under Albany" in which choosing one segment from a multi-segmented piece, which I wrote in 1974, in one passage she compares me to Ron Silliman's mature writing (as well as that of Michael Palmer and Barrett Watten)...

* * *

Critical writing embracing a type of contemporary poetry (much of) which has a radical conceptual and social-political intention, sometimes de-emphasizes or 'changes' the poets' intentions by stressing formal aspects as if these were valuable for their 'form' (in itself) rather than their form being that of a social/conceptual deconstruction taking place. This tends to bring the poet into a lineage as socially 'understandable' and understandable in that it is literary tradition...

* * *

'what's the anxiety?': as not being in the state of constant change -- in which there's no fear -- the neck cut out.

* * *

In an essay on Allen Ginsberg, Marjorie Perloff reinterpreted Howl as not in fact arising from pain -- i.e. not that which is connecting with his time (that's why the present is the most disturbing time, to paraphrase Stein) -- but rather as actually being comic, and now in a different time can be understood to be comic. Calling Ginsberg a "comic bard," she maintains that in that light his work can (should) now be accepted, implying it could not be accepted if we interpret it as arising from pain. There is a filter used there separating form and occurrence, which changes the sense Ginsberg conveys as being that reality...

* * *

...from Leslie Scalapino: Seamless Antilandscape, $6

Other Spectacular Books:
Tina Celona: Songs & Scores, $6
Juliana Spahr: Spiderwasp or Literary Criticism, $6

Martin Corless-Smith: The Garden. A Theophany or ECCOHOME: A Dialectical Lyric, $6

Books forthcoming by:
Rod Smith, Josh May, Prageeta Sharma, Lyn Hejinian, others.

* * *

Write to:
Spectacular Books
PO Box 250648
Columbia University Station
New York, NY 10025

Signed and numbered sets (of ten) are available for $50.
Please make checks payable to Katherine Lederer
(Add $1 per book S/H for international orders)

↑ Index

112. Robin Tremblay-McGaw forum on class & innovative writing
Sat 9 Oct 1999

The latest issueof HOW2 is now available.
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2/current/index.html

You'll find the forum issue on class & innovative writing edited by yours truly and Kathy Lou Schultz, Kathy's essay, "Talking Trash, Talking Class: What's a Working Class Poetic, and Where Would I Find One?"and my piece "Class, Gender, Genre: A Culture bomb, The Letters of Mina Harker by Dodie Bellamy," as well as lots of other great writing on the site.

Robin Tremblay-McGaw

↑ Index

113. Jerrold Shiroma
New Small Press Publications
Sun 10 Oct 1999

This week's list of new (or recent) Small Press Publications @ Duration is up. Also included is a catalog supplement featuring innovative works from Ireland.

http://www.durationpress.com/announcements/announce.html

↑ Index

114. jerome joy (by way of Kenneth Goldsmith <[redacted]>)" <[redacted]>

--> revue AUDIOLAB

Sun 10 Oct 1999

Thought this might be of interest to the group.

-Kenneth

_____

Here is the announcement of the opening of REVUE AUDIOLAB
http://homestudio.thing.net/

This review concerns all the composers, musicians and artists and gathers today more than 350 headings about the new investigations and researches in music and sound . The review was built starting from documents resulting from the www since several years, some originals having disappeared, others being moved on other servers and finally the last being still on line. All the articles kept their copyrights of course. The Revue wants to be a place of consultation and center of interest around sound and musical emergences. A search engine integrated into the Revue makes it possible to seek in the whole of the elements (more than 1000, texts and images) starting from key words. Or the consultation can be done starting from the general index. The review wants to be generating, the composers and artists wanting to communicate texts and documents on their search can send their contributions to the Revue . The review wants to be also federative, it's not a plundering of texts, but a gathering of contents and informations, as far as possible the original addresses of the pages are noted in the page of the texts (if some miss, thank you to prevent me). This gathering is carried out to feed reflexions around the new musical and sound investigations, and if these pages were copied and brought back on the server thing.net it is because much of them already disappeared from the original servers and that certainly much of them will disappear progressively with time. The authors can of course claim the removal of their pages integrated in the review. Good reading.

jerome joy

...

::: http://homestudio.thing.net/

::: http://www.cnap-villa-arson.fr/audiolab/
::: http://www.lascaux2.org/

... villa arson nice

...

↑ Index

115. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Sun 10 Oct 1999

Writers Forum announces 6 new publications in the series DOMESTIC AMBIENT NOISE

896 9. best shape, Lawrence Upton / Bob Cobbing, 8 pp B5, vispo, October 1999

897 7. shaping up, Bob Cobbing / Lawrence Upton, 8 pp B5, vispo, October 1999

898 5. NO WONDER, Lawrence Upton / Bob Cobbing, 8 pp B5, vispo, October 1999

899 3. suicide, Bob Cobbing / Lawrence Upton, 8 pp B5, vispo, October 1999

900 0. WEIGHT FOR THE KICK, Lawrence Upton / Bob Cobbing, 8 pp B5, vispo, October 1999

901 9. EXIT, Bob Cobbing / Lawrence Upton, 8 pp B5, vispo, October 1999

Each costs £1 + postage in Uk, discounts for multiple copies etc

Enquiries etc with sae / irc to New River Project, 89a Petherton Road, London N5 2QT

Writers Forum
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

↑ Index

116. raea100900
New Writing Series
Sun 10 Oct 1999

Dear All,

This is an announcement for anyone who might be in or around San Diego in the next couple of months. Here is the schedule for the New Writing Series this fall:

Oct. 20 Pam Lu
Oct. 25 Barrett Watten
Nov. 3 Deanna Ferguson
Nov. 12 Tracie Morris
Nov. 17 Rae Armantrout and Norman Fischer

These readings will be at 4:30 in the Visual Arts Performance Space on the UCSD campus. They are free and open to the public.

↑ Index

117. Chris McCreary
Big Allis e-mail address?
Sun 10 Oct 1999

Hello --

I'm looking for an e-mail address for the journal Big Allis. Any help via backchannel would be much appreciated.

Thanks --

Chris McCreary

↑ Index

118. Alan Sondheim
My Intensity as Cliche (I am exposed!)
Mon 11 Oct 1999

=

My:Intensity:as:Cliche

At:night:I:stay:up:worrying:over:disease,:over:the:events:of:the:day, over:the:fury:of:my:obsessive:speed,:over:the:urgency:
At:day:I:am:sick:with:worry,:crushed:under:by:the:events:of:the:day, speeding:nowhere:at:all:with:a:sense:of:emergency:

I:write:the:urgency,:emergency;:the:speed:and:the:fury:of:nowhere:
I:write:the:worry:and:the:disease:in:the:ordinary:events:of:the:day:

And:I:think:I:am:the:boy:crying:wolf:in:the:wilderness:
And:I:think:I:am:the:girl:crying:fire:in:the:darkened:theater:
When:the:wolves:have:been:murdered,:when:the:theater:continues its:unruly:and:maudlin:play:

Again:and:again:it:keeps:occurring:to:me::No:one:will:believe:me: It's:just:another:of:Alan's:hysteric:outbursts,:another:text of:despair,:neurosis,:something:teething,:something:teetering:
Already:turned:cliche,:empty:of:content,:reeking:of:design:

Then:I:think::Shall:I:scream:constantly:into:the:night::What:throws us:into:the:holocaust::What:are:constant:deaths::What:are:Nikuko, Jennifer,:the:others:BEGGING::More:intensity!:More:intensity!:
Oh,:shall:I:desert:them!:

I:am:your:film::And:the:frame:in:your:film::I:grind:my:teeth:
on:the:image::I:teeter:on:the:edge:of:the:sprocket-hole::Oh,:this is:so:typical!::Oh,:he:continues:with:this:nonsense!::Oh!::Oh!::Oh!:

↑ Index

119. Al Filreis
Perloff October 20
Mon 11 Oct 1999

Dear Buffalo poetics listers: The times below are given in eastern time. If the webcast intrigues you, write to me directly. I will then send you information about how the webcast works.--Al Filreis

> "Marjorie Perloff, a great detective. The mystery is art of this century. (Who did it? What is it?) -- John Cage
>
> "Marjorie Perloff's brilliant, adventurous imagination makes her an ideal guide to the important paradigm shift that has been taking place since modernism." -- Rosmarie Waldrop
>
> - + - + - + - + - + - + - + - + - + - +

M a r j o r i e P e r l o f f

visits the Kelly Writers House

Wednesday, October 20

lecture at 6:30 PM

Stein discussion at 4:30 PM

(4:30 PM) wide-ranging introductory discussion of Gertrude Stein
---------- With Al Filreis and Bob Perelman, Marjorie Perloff discusses the writing of Gertrude Stein. Although this session is primarily for students in Al Filreis's experimental on-line course on modern & contemporary poetry, others are invited to participate by attending the session at the Writers House or by viewing (and participating) via live webcast. If you want to participate either as a member of the live audience or by webcast, please write to Al Filreis at [redacted] (spaces are limited).

(6:30 PM) a talk by Marjorie Perloff, "Watchman, Spy and Dead Man: Frank O'Hara, Jasper Johns, and John Cage in the Sixties"
---------- This talk will feature slides and a short video clip of John Cage. No RSVP necessary. The session is free and open to the public. It will not be webcast.

Among Marjorie Perloff's books are:

Wittgenstein's Ladder
Poetry on & off the Page: Essays for Emergent Occasions
Postmodern Genres (editor)
Poetic License: Essays on Modernist and Postmodernist Lyric Radical Artifice: Writing Poetry in the Age of Media
The Futurist Moment: Avant Garde, Avant Guerre & the Language of Rupture
The Dance of the Intellect: Studies in the Poetry of the Pound Tradition
The Poetics of Indeterminacy

Marjorie Perloff is the Sadie Dernham Patek Professor of Humanities at Stanford University, for many years a resident of Los Angeles (formerly a resident of Philadelphia).

↑ Index

120. Dana Lustig
Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Mon 11 Oct 1999

Does anyone know of any critical studies or essays done on Tom Phillips? They can be about his range of works, or specifically about works such as _A Humument_, from either a poetics or an art-historical perspective. (To start, I have looked at the Humument website, and have pulled various newspaper and magazine articles, the most prominent being William Gass' _ArtForum_ essay, but that seems to only touch the tip of the iceberg.)

Any help would be very much appreciated.

Dana Lisa Lustig
[redacted]

↑ Index

121. Carrie Etter
Michael Davidson reads at UC Irvine 10/19
Mon 11 Oct 1999

On October 19 at 8 p.m., Michael Davidson will give the first reading in the series "Making Strange: The Linguistic Innovations of Four California Poets" in Humanities Instructional Building 135 at UC Irvine. The reading is free, and all are welcome. Send questions about directions, etc. to series director Carrie Etter at [redacted].

↑ Index

122. Chicago Review
Bidart, Taggart to Read
Mon 11 Oct 1999

Dear Poetics List Members,

Two public events that I hope some of you will be able to attend...

FRANK BIDART
--Poetry Reading: Thursday, Oct 14, 5:30, Classics 10
--Talk: "Pre-existing Forms: We fill them and, when we fill them, we change them and are changed," Friday, Oct 15, 3:30, Wieboldt 408

JOHN TAGGART
--Poetry Reading: Monday, October 18, 5:30, Classics 10
--Talk: "New Song: Chicago Improvisations," Tuesday, October 19, 3:00, Wieboldt 408

Both Classics and Wieboldt may be entered at 1010 E. 59th St (the archway just east of Ellis Ave).

Please e-mail Danielle Allen ([redacted]) for more information.

Regards,
Andrew Rathmann
Editor

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

Check out our new website!
http://humanities.uchicago.edu/review

Chicago Review
5801 S. Kenwood Ave.
Chicago IL 60637

↑ Index

123. Hoa Nguyen
Lucky Pup, by Leslie Davis
Mon 11 Oct 1999

Skanky Possum Press is pleased to announce the release of its second title:

Lucky Pup, by Leslie Davis.

Orders may be placed with Small Press Distribution (http://www.spdbooks.org or [redacted]). Only $5.

Orders and queries also handled here or by writing Skanky Possum at 2925 Higgins St. // Austin TX // 78722.
(Checks payable to Hoa Nguyen or Dale Smith.)

***

From the back of _Lucky Pup_:

Dear Leslie,

Just read Lucky Pup again, this time out loud. I ask myself, who's the Lucky Pup--the one who survived, or the other who gets out? Luck, indeed, determines who gets to tell the story. The survivor leads the way through terror and desire. Anguish yes, but with a new chance to come back to testify on behalf of the beauty and mystery of being alive.

"Once the skin is broken there is no other way." You leave the skin behind or you shed the old and reappear scorched with having lived, newly centered, made angelic through death's touch. Traditionally, the shaman takes the illness of the tribe into him/herself in order to meet the pain in the spirit world where it can be understood, reckoned with. Here, in your poem, there's a tension between memory and renewal, survival and the future. It's as if poetry could be an instruction manual, an aid to life. "When we met he had a new tattoo. Two skeletons, dancing. He called them silly guys." The story or poem becomes a deal struck with yourself to look into the past unflinchingly, with a personal and ethical responsibility. These things are not to be forgotten, repressed. But understood, as an absence that co-creates the self.

"So struggled into words. Braille golden girl--skin against your energy--continue..." And so perfect here, the image of the blind reading through touch, from the dark, reaching for the unseen. Feeling and meaning combine to reveal, yet it is the continuation of the unknown that somehow stems from personal energy. "I'm the lucky pup. I get to know..." "Teach each other to teach each other to teach each other. The words get used up. Come back to me in my dreams..." Yes. Teaching each other. The only course for the living, for the survival of the tribe. For the self. "Tribal members mark change with a physical marking of the body. Now I've got two. This is what I grew into..."

This is a simple story, but perhaps the story, the only one that is recycled time and again because of its urgency. The combination of nerve and mind to confront memory with the deep visceral movements of language. The mind and the body of the writer now move on, now do not, experience producing its own kind of shroud at various, unexpected moments. What is it other than temporary survival and teaching others? Which brings us to writing, a kind of sharing of experience, the way the mind feels it. Truth and speech. Past and future through present memory.

Dale Smith
San Francisco
Spring 1995

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

124. Nielsen, Aldon
C.L.R. James -- Call for Papers
Mon 11 Oct 1999

Not DIRECTLY poetry-related (he only published one sonnet in his career of writing) but ---- >I am organizing a panel on the work of C.L.R. James to be presented at the >American Literature Association, May 25-28. The conference will be held in >Long Beach, CA.

>
>Papers may address any aspect of the work, life, influence etc. of C.L.R.
>James.
>
>Please send BRIEF email description of proposed paper to:
>
>Aldon L. Nielsen
>
>[redacted]
>
>
>
>---
>You are currently subscribed to cultstud-l as: [redacted]
>To unsubscribe send a blank email to [redacted]

↑ Index

125. Bob Grumman
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Mon 11 Oct 1999

I'd much appreciate your posting whatever you find out about critical reaction to the work of Tom Phillips. I doubt that there's much, for the same reason there's almost nothing out there about ANY genuine visual poets.

--Bob G.

↑ Index

126. Poetics List Administration
the fall ottawa small press book fair / CPA London
Mon 11 Oct 1999

SPAN-O
- small press action network - ottawa -
presents

the fall ottawa small press book fair

sunday october 31, 1999
at the glebe community centre, main hall lyon @ second avenue from 11am to 5pm (set up at 10am)

tables are $15. full tables only.
for catalog, send press name, contact info including email & web info, list of recent titles, how submissions work, etc with a cheque payable to rob mclennan to:
SPAN-O, 96 rochester street ottawa k1r 7l8 any questions, contct rob via email.
catalog deadline is october 25th.

please note: i will be away until october 18th, & will be available only thru email.

forward to those who might be interested.

-- poet/editor/publisher... ed. STANZAS mag & Written in the Skin (Insomniac) pub., above/ground press...coord., the ottawa small press fair & Ontario rep,
The League of Canadian Poets...snail c/o rob mclennan, rr#1 maxville on k0c
1t0 * 4th coll'n, The Richard Brautigan Ahhhhhhhhhhh (Talonbooks)

↑ Index

127. Poetics List Administration
The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre / CPA London
Mon 11 Oct 1999

This came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: CPA London <[redacted]>
Date: Sat, 2 Oct 1999 23:59:06 -0400

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
Videopoem Festival

7:30pm

Saturday, November 7, 1999
Video In Studios,1965 Main Street, Vancouver, BC

Admission: $10

In this first annual event, Vancouver's own Edgewise ElectroLit Centre will be presenting Videopoems from across Canada and around the world. We have solicited six pieces for one half of the show and have put out an international call for submissions in order to collect a diverse range of work in this fledgling medium. Videopoetry festivals have occurred in places such as Chicago, San Francisco (known as the Cinepoem Festival) and Roma, Italy. This event is the first of its kind in Canada and it is a much needed venue for the presentation of Canadian work in this genre.

Solicited work for this year's festival features:

Down Here, Bud Osborn (James Riley, Producer)
Verbomotorhead (Kedrick James, Producer)
Jill Battson (Jill Battson, Producer)
Chinese Cucumbers, Patricia Smith (Kurt Heintz, Producer)
Jason Le Heup (Jason Le Heup, Producer)

The goals of this festival are both to develop an audience for this genre in Canada and the creation of an environment of exchange and learning among artists. To this latter end, we have invited experienced producer, poet and media artist, Jill Battson of Toronto, ON to speak at the festival on the origins of the genre, its forms, and on the artistic and cultural context in which it can flourish.

Funding for The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre Videopoem Festival has been received from the Canada Council for the Arts and is produced in partnership with Video In Studios, Vancouver, BC.

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre is a nonprofit society whose mandate is to exploit communications technology to widen the audience of Canadian poetry and to give poets, multi-media artists and youth the opportunity to use, learn, and create with this technology. Videoconferencing and online publishing are the major technologies that we work with. Our electronic magazine can be viewed and heard at <www.edgewisecafe.org>. Poets featured with audio include Adeena Karasick, Wayde Compton, bill bissett and Sheri-D Wilson. We also publish videopoems online and are hosting Canadas first Videopoem Festival at Video In Studios this fall.

For more information, please call Carol L. Hamshaw, Administrator, at [redacted]/[redacted],
or via email at [redacted]

Steven R. Duncan <[redacted]>
Poet, Publisher, founding member of the notorious "Ducktape Platypus Poets Coalition".

Solo Performances:
Friday, Oct 1
Generous Margins Small Press Fair
The Wise Club
9:30pm

Listen to Wax Poetic with Diane Laloge and S.R. Duncan every Wednesday at 2pm on Co-op Radio 102.7 fm

And,

The "New and Improved" Vancouver Poetry Slam
First and third Monday of every month
Cafe Deux Soliel
2096 Commercial Dr.

SPECIAL EVENT
Wednesday, November 3
Cafe Deux Soliel
2096 Commercial Drive
"VERBAL TRANSMISSIONS"
A benefit for spoken word on Co-op Radio
Stay tuned for more details.

↑ Index

128. Poetics List Administration

canadian poets online / CPA London

Mon 11 Oct 1999

Announcing the opening of:

'writing canada into the millennium: canadian poets online'

This University of Calgary English Department electronic project provides an organized guide to the chronological, geographical, and publication histories of selected Twentieth-Century Canadian poets. Our goal is to provide the public and the University community with an organized pedagogical tool to assist research on the history and contemporary concerns of Canadian poetry.

We can be found at:
http://www.ucalgary.ca/UofC/faculties/HUM/ENGL/canada/

Please pass on to whomever may be interested.

For further information, contact: [redacted], [redacted]
or [redacted]

↑ Index

129. Poetics List Administration

r e a d m e / Sullivan

Mon 11 Oct 1999

This came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Gary Sullivan" <[redacted]>
Date: 10/6/99, 1:40 PM -0400

Hello everyone,

r e a d m e is now up:

http://www.columbia.edu/cu/history/detour/readme

I n t e r v i e w s

Charles Bernstein (by Bradford Senning)
Mary Burger (by Jacques Debrot)
Jeff Clark (by Jordan Davis)
Nada Gordon (by Gary Sullivan)
Randolph Healy (by Robert Archambeau)
Kent Johnson (by John Bradley)
Rebecca Levi (by GS)
Ange Mlinko (by GS)
Alan Sondheim (by GS)

E s s a y s

Jack Kimball on John Wieners
Kimberly Lyons on Women and the Poetry Project
Alan Sondheim's "" or Practice

P o e t r y

Daniel Davidson's Last Poems
Nada Gordon "essay"
Joel Lewis "The Pethro Poems"
Kimberly Lyons "Concordonnance"
Alan Sondheim "Selected Works"

R e v i e w s

Nada Gordon on Andrea Brady's Liberties
Jeffrey Jullich on Aaron Shurin's Paradise of Forms
Ramez Qureshi on J.H. Prynne's Collected Poems
Gerald Schwartz on Kamau Brathwaite
Heather Fuller on Jeff Conant

A S p e c i a l S e c t i o n o n D a n i e l D a v i d s o n w i t h w r i t i n g b y

George Albon
Bruce Andrews
Dodie Bellamy & Kevin Killian
Jeff Conant
Beverly Dahlen & Kevin Killian
Greg Fuchs
Benjamin Friedlander
Colleen Lookingbill
Aldon Nielsen
Charles Pollack
Gary Sullivan
Jordan Zorker

L i n k s

Links to bios, interviews with and work by more than 400 20th century "non-mainstream" authors (constantly updated; feel free to suggest further URLs).

r e a d m e is a quarterly online journal of poetics featuring interviews, essays and reviews germane to contemporary poetry. Poetry published only in tandem with author interviews and/or critical prose, except in cases of poem-as-reading/critique. Queries welcome. A letters page will be included in subsequent issues. Please send all queries and correspondence via email: [redacted] or to Gary Sullivan, 558 11th Street, #1B, Brooklyn, NY 11215.

Next issue: Interviews with Hoa Nguyen, Laurie Price, Rod Smith, and more ..

↑ Index

130. Poetics List Administration

Carla Harryman's THE WORDS / Scalapino

Mon 11 Oct 1999

This came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Thos J White" <[redacted]>
Date: 10/10/99, 11:39 AM -0700

Just out: Carla Harryman's THE WORDS/AFTER CARL SANDBURG'S ROOTABAGA STORIES AND JEAN-PAUL SARTRE (O Books, $12:00, ISBN # 1-882022-39-4; distributed by Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Street, Berkeley, CA 94710, phone [redacted])

In this challenge to the separation of literary genres, Carla Harryman takes as her points of departure two entirely disparate texts. Exploding Jean-Paul Sartre's ideal of imagined autonomy, in his autobiography THE WORDS, and inspired by the grostesque play of Sandburg's ROOTABAGA STORIES, Harryman begins with her own account of an impossible and contemporary childhood. In a world of recollected futurity, nihilists, chairs, amazons, ghosts, and spool bablies, "We, the stranded" concoct their illusions of spontaneous creativity.

"At last, children's literature has been liberated, liberated into fiction! Carla Harryman's WORDS is a fiction in which the mischief is perpetually unnaming names in an ongoing discursive cross-wind beneficial to hybridizing texts. Bold and subversive." -- Marjorie Welish

"THE WORDS is not one novel, but many. Its economics are libidinal, luxuriant, and layered: part roman fleuve, in which the first generation born in the 'artificial jungles' of the Cold War comes of age 'on the border that separates the absurd from the socially constructed reality,' part roman a clef, in which every word will instantly recognize itself and every fly allusion find its author in eternity, and part philosophical romance in the mode of the later Wittgenstein, who proposed that 'the double cross and the duck-rabbit might be among the spots [on] a wall covered with spots.' And, because 'shadows dream in their niches,' this is finally a utopian novel, everywhere transforming 'defeat into rapture.' In

(and with) THE WORDS, Carla Harryman has written a postmodern classic. It's the book to take along to the proverbially deserted island." -- Ted Pearson

"A child touches a flower.
Then a tip of air moves to fill the space moving a leg apart from a leg. Slightly apart, the legs will promise a little breeze to the part. A seamless song stays the tip of an invective against the child's mother. One can't see the mirror on the tip of a flower.

The cool child is father to the man
The hard child is mother to the man
The quiet child is mother to the woman
The burning child is father to the woman"
-- Carla Harryman

↑ Index

131. Harriet Zinnes
Re: Cover me rumble
Mon 11 Oct 1999

Dear Kathy

I'm reviewing for CHELSEA Leslie S's new WEsleyan book, THE PUBLIC WORLD ...would you like me to include your publication of S. If so, do send it along rather quickly.

Wonderful that you're doing so much.

Best

Harriet

↑ Index

132. Molly Schwartzburg
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Mon 11 Oct 1999

I've found almost nothing at all on Phillips on the literature end of things, though on the art end there are reviews and catalogs of individual shows.

There is a selected bibliography in the catalog for an exhibition at North Carolina Museum of Art:

Huston Paschal, _Tom Phillips: Selections from the Ruth and Marvin Sackner Archive of Concrete and Visual Poetry_. Raleigh: North Carolina Museum of Art, 1990.

I am currently working on Phillips and would also appreciate any suggestions.
--Molly Schwartzburg

On Mon, 11 Oct 1999, Bob Grumman wrote:

> I'd much appreciate your posting whatever you find out about critical reaction to the work of Tom Phillips. I doubt that there's much, for the same reason there's almost nothing out there about ANY genuine visual poets.
>
> --Bob G.

↑ Index

133. George Bowering
Re: Bromige's beard
Mon 11 Oct 1999

> the true motive > for my avowed "great pleasure" in introducing David Bromige during the group reading at the same event. (Though, it's true, I have as much admiration for his work as for his beard -

I feel that it is necessary to say something about Bromige's beard. It is not his beard at all! He stole it from me during one of his fly-by-night visits up the coast. I am glad to see that it is arousing admiration among USAmerican poets and others. But I would like it back.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

134. Alan Sondheim
than Flode
Tue 12 Oct 1999

-

than Flode

æfter than flode; the from Drihtene com.

the al her a-quelde; quic that he funde.
  buten Noe.& Sem; Iaphet & Cham.
  & heore four wiues;
the mid heom weren on archen.

heore twa wiues Nikuko & Julu
the mid heom weren in Stromland heore twa wiues Jennifer & Azure
the mid heom weren in Neuland

buten transieram celerem nebuloso flumine Nauam addita miratus ueteri noua moenia Vinco, whar ar yar far wavas Alan, what ar ya far Alan whar ar Azara & Noe. Alan, whar ar tha flaad

y am ma far wavas Sem, ma far wavas wath ma y am wath tha fllad Noe., ma far wavas alsa

fra Drihtene com tha ranas & tha fraggas twa fra Gaddas laff cam Jannifar & har far wavas ta laff wath Gaddas sa marrie ta bee wath mannes sa cantrarie

↑ Index

135. Randy Prunty
poetry in Charlotte North Carolina?
Tue 12 Oct 1999

---

i'll be visiting family in charlotte, nc from oct 27 to oct 31. does anyone know of interesting poetry events there during this time? anyone know of any interesting poets who live in charlotte?
back channel i guess
randy prunty

↑ Index

136. Lowther, John
Situationist translations and index
Tue 12 Oct 1999

---

i thought some of you poetix folk might be interested in this

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Bureau of Public Secrets [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Monday, October 11, 1999 11:11 PM
> To: Bureau of Public Secrets
> Subject: Situationist translations and index
>
> The SITUATIONIST INTERNATIONAL ANTHOLOGY has now been completely retranslated and uploaded. The original book translations were quite accurate, but the new online versions are clearer and more idiomatic.

> They are also easier to work with because the BPS website now has a comprehensive index, with over 2000 name and subject entries, covering every person mentioned, every revolt and revolution (chronologically and by country), and hundreds of other topics from anarchism to Zen.
>
> Check it out at http://www.slip.net/~knabb/index1.htm
>
> * * *
>
> BUREAU OF PUBLIC SECRETS
> P.O. Box 1044, Berkeley CA 94701, USA
> [redacted]
> http://www.slip.net/~knabb

↑ Index

137. Mark Prejsnar
Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Tue 12 Oct 1999

We have an extrememly lively local poets group here in Atlanta, which recently has begun discussing issues quite actively by e-mail, supplementary to our frequent local get-togethers... The post below started as a response to something the atanta poet Randy Prunty had posted, commenting on an Atlanta figure who is big on the local "slam" scene....As it progressed, it grew against my initial intentions into an offhand review of Christopher Beach's excellent new book, Poetic Culture. Soon i had written so many of my thoughts down that i figured it might make sense to share 'em with a larger grouping...So i am posting this to both the Atlanta group and the Buffalo List. --Mark Prejsnar

(p.s. By the way, the mentions toward the beginning of this post of "our kind of writing" etc. are addressed to my initial audience, the 11 or 12 members of the Atlanta Poets Group; anyone interested in what that kind of writing is, can check out a large selection of our work in the current New Orleans Review, and in a special issue of Mirage #4 that will be out fairly soon....)

The new book by C. Beach is very interesting.... From a point of view that is very sympathetic to our kind of writing, he tries nonetheless to talk about "what is happening" both sociologically and artistically in U.S. poetry right now.... Two of the chapters are in-depth discussions of the slam scene, and are very informative. Beach tries to start from the point of view that there is no "wrong" school to be in..and so compares slam, workshop, and our kind of writing, attempting to be "fair". For instance in another chapter he examines the career and work of workshop maven Stephen Dobyns in comparison to the career and work of Lyn Hejinian... (he comes to the conclusion that, without prior prejudice about which type of poetry is "good" and which "bad," Dobyns is a fairly weak poet and Hejinian a pretty good one....Which makes sense to me; ...Most people wd. suspect his claim to be so "without prejudice" about overall styles to start with... But i think he would argue that he is reaching conclusions about the relative strength of different contemporary camps..not starting out with them. And this claim to some extent is backed-up by his treatment of slam work, which he like a whole lot more than workshop, and treats with considerable respect.)

There are lots of weaknesses: apart from the fact that he makes an effort to be respectful and enthusiastic about the slam scene, thus giving more credit to shallow, silly work (in many instances) than it deserves, he also makes certain theoretical moves that i believe are confused (but are pretty uiversally agreed to on today's scene) He uses the phrase "avant-garde" or else "experimental" about once a page, in a 200 page book; and he believes that people like Bernstein, Mackey, Silliman, Coolidge, belong to an "oppositional avant-garde" whose main raison d'etre is to be against all mainstream culture and the social system, and also to exist as a cohesive group (to at least some significant extent)...Thus he claims that "post-language experimental poets," whom he represents by "Writing from the New Coast," the O-Blek anthology, are terribly confused and are floundering because they are not as cohesive a group, and do not write as much theory, and do not have as much politix, or as confident a sense of where they fit in history or of their mission, as the previous generation. In other words, he really (at the end) seems to lose track of questions regarding what their poetry is like, and how good it is, because he is caught up in questions of whether these newer poets can play institutional and public-relations games with success.... I believe this confusion on Beach's part comes from two things: the "sociological" slant of much of his book (which is its strength by the way, in part, but which ends up causing a certain obsession with the p.r. aspects of poetry's public life); and his commitment to the old concepts of "avant-garde" and "experimental", which have in a way outlived thier usefulness. (For instance, i have been reflecting recently on the how much "camps" have become institutionalized, in a way that is inflexible: the generation of Perelman, Silliman et al. use "avant-garde" and "experimental" all the time, in discussing contemporary work, and this is also a broad general practice today.... But previous generations of U.S. poets whsoe work was challenging and mold-breaking, such as the generation of Pound, Williams, Zukofsky, Stein, or the generation of Olson, Duncan and Spicer, did not so identify themselves...They thought of what they were doing as "poetry," and aspired to have it seen as the strongest and most exciting work being done in their time.,...It didn't occur to them to saddle themselves with ghettoizing labels... What i feel strongly is that we have to get back to that mindset... For the kind of work represented by the APG and many people on the BuffaList, is simply the best work being done in the U.S. ... and i question whether we want to continue to police the boundaries by using these terms...)

--mark prejsnar

↑ Index

138. Elizabeth Treadwell
Announcing Outlet (4/5) Weathermap
Tue 12 Oct 1999

Outlet (4/5) Weathermap

92 pp double issue

featuring

- New Poetry and Prose by:

Norma Cole
Sarah Anne Cox
Noah de Lissovoy
Patrick F. Durgin
Taj Jackson
Jeffrey Jullich
Pamela Lu
Michael Magee
Sarah Mangold
Chris McCreary
Gwyn McVay
Michelle Murphy
Susan Smith Nash
Stephen Ratcliffe
Christopher Reiner
Camille Roy
Kathy Lou Schultz
E. Cameron Scott
Heather Sweeney
John Tranter
Elizabeth Treadwell
Liz Waldner

+ Reportage:

An Interview: Kathleen Fraser's "Provisional Answers to Some Questions" by Sarah Anne Cox

A History: "Publishing a Community: Women Publishers at the Poetry Project" by Marcella Durand

& Reviews:

Jacques Debrot on Laynie Browne's _The Agency of Wind_,
Linda Russo on Susan Gevirtz's _Black Box Cutaway_, Charles Alexander on Jessica Grim's _Fray_.

$5 -- cheap! -- checks to E. Treadwell --

Excerpts from this & previous issues are featured at our website:
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

Outlet c/o
Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013
Berkeley, California 94709
USA

---------- Dear subscribers & contributors: your copies will be mailed this weekend (10/16). Pls. contact me -- soon -- if your address has changed since we last corresponded. Thx. -ET

↑ Index

139. Taylor Brady
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Tue 12 Oct 1999

On a related note - does anyone have any leads on critical writings pertaining to Phillips' sparse-but-fascinating output as a composer?

Taylor Brady

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Molly Schwartzburg
Sent: Monday, October 11, 1999 4:28 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips

I've found almost nothing at all on Phillips on the literature end of things, though on the art end there are reviews and catalogs of individual shows.

There is a selected bibliography in the catalog for an exhibition at North Carolina Museum of Art:

Huston Paschal, _Tom Phillips: Selections from the Ruth and Marvin Sackner Archive of Concrete and Visual Poetry_. Raleigh: North Carolina Museum of Art, 1990.

I am currently working on Phillips and would also appreciate any suggestions.
--Molly Schwartzburg

↑ Index

140. Kenneth Goldsmith
___ *U B U W E B : NEW RESOURCES OCTOBER 1999*___
Tue 12 Oct 1999

___ U B U W E B___VISUAL, CONCRETE + SOUND POETRY___

http://www.ubu.com

NEW RESOURCES OCTOBER 1999

HISTORICAL

Aram Saroyan, USA, Flower Power (essay, 1999)

Jacques Villeglé, France, Affiches 1960s-1980s

SOUND

Antonin Artaud
Aliénation et Magie Noire (1946)

Robert Ashley, USA
In Sara Mencken, Christ and Beethoven there were men and women

Erik Belgum, USA
Bad Marriage Mantra

ee cummings, USA
Two Sound Poems

Francis E. Dec, Esq., USA

François Dufrêne, France
Ouverture san Fin (1976)

Oyvind Fahlström, Sweden

Brion Gysin
Sound Poems and Lectures 1960-1981

Fluxus Anthology
18 Artist's Soundworks (1962-1989)

Raoul Hausmann, Austria
Sound Poetry (1918 / 1959)

Richard Hulsenback
Phantastische Gebeté (1916 / 1967)

James Joyce
Anna Livia Plurabelle (rec. 1929)

Phil Minton
A Doughnut in One Hand (1998)

Narrative Poetry from The Black Oral Tradition
1964-1966

Ben Patterson
Early Works, 1960-1995

Pierre Schaeffer
Solfege de l'objet Sonore, 1966 (Complete)

Poesia Sonora
Do fonetismo às poéticas contemporâneas de voz, Brazil (1996)

Sound Poetry Today
An International Compilation (1998)

Demetrio Stratos
Cantare La Voce, 1978

Tristan Tzara
Pour Compte (1949)

CONTEMPORARY

Bill Luoma, Hawaii Imagiste / Moisty

Brian Kim Stefans, NYC, NY, USA, The Naif and the Bluebells

PAPERS

George Brecht, USA
Something about Fluxus

Henry Flynt, USA
George Maciunas and My Collaboration With Him

Abraham Lincoln Gillespie, USA

Eugen Gomringer, Switzerland
1. From Line To Constellation
2. Concrete Poetry
3. Max Bill and Concrete Poetry
4. The Poem As A Functional Object

Dick Higgins, USA
In a Mine Boatdestroyer Around the World, or Some Remarks on Fluxus

Noigandres Group, Brazil
Pilot Plan for Concrete Poetry

Pierre Schaeffer, France Treatise on Musical Objects

Mary Ellen Solt, USA
Concrete Poetry: A World View
(Indiana University Press, 1968)

Emmett Williams, USA
The Stars & Stripes

___ U B U W E B___VISUAL, CONCRETE + SOUND POETRY___

http://www.ubu.com

↑ Index

141. David Kellogg
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Tue 12 Oct 1999

On Mon, 11 Oct 1999, Molly Schwartzburg wrote:

> I've found almost nothing at all on Phillips on the literature end of things, though on the art end there are reviews and catalogs of individual shows.

There is a chapter on Phillips in Heather McHugh's _Broken English: Poetry and Partiality_ (Wesleyan, 199?)

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

↑ Index

142. David Kellogg
Re: poetry in Charlotte North Carolina?
Tue 12 Oct 1999

Hard to supress a snicker at the very idea of this subject line. It's enough of a desert here in Raleigh/Durham/Chapel Hill. Of course, if there IS anything I would like to know too.

Thirsty,
David
~~~
~~~

144. Brendan Lorber
OUTDOORS WITH E.MYLES/B.LORBER/M.LEVOVE
Tue 12 Oct 1999

Why hello there. I hope you can make it to...

The final poetry reading of the millenium in THE POETS IN THE GARDEN READING SERIES is this Sunday, October 17, 5pm in the 6th and B Community Garden, at 6th Street and Avenue B in Manhattan.

It's FREE!

The readers are:

MINDY LEVOVE, the poet/musician who curated the Community Garden Reading Series for six years. Her work has been published in Clown War and Journal for Speculative Poetry, and she has composed & performed music for Landfill Gardeners of Gondwanaland, among others.

BRENDAN LORBER, the editor/publisher of LUNGFULL! Magazine. Printing both the rough drafts & final versions of writer's work, the magazine explores the creative process. His chapbook, The Address Book is due out soon from The Owl Press. He's also cocurator at the Zinc Bar Sunday Night Reading Series and The Double Happiness Reading Series.

EILEEN MYLES, the winner of a 1999 NYFA grant and the author of Chelsea Girls and School of Fish. She recently completed her first novel, Cool for You.

The reading starts PROMPTLY at 5pm, and will be moved under the canopy in case of rain.

Poets in the Garden reading series is put together by Maggie Dubris.

Eileen Myles is an artists fellowship recipient of the New York Foundation For The Arts. These presentations are co-sponsered by Artists & Audiences Exchange, a public service program of the New York Foundation For The Arts.

Will I see rugged, vigorous you in the garden this sunday? Yes?

All & only the best,
brendan

↑ Index

145. Randy Prunty
Phillips, Beach, Charlotte
Tue 12 Oct 1999

hi david. found it interesting that you happened to respond to three things on the list and they all are related to folks here in atlanta. and there's a fourth member (besides me, dana lustig, and mark prejsnar) of the atlanta poetry group that i think you know: james sanders its a small world and i'm snickering too

randy

↑ Index

146. David Zauhar
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Tue 12 Oct 1999

On Tue, 12 Oct 1999, David Kellogg wrote:

> Mark, I haven't read Beach's new book but I was disappointed in -- even pissed off by -- the chapter on Hejinian and Dobyns when it came out in Contemporary Literature. If I recall, it made a few perfunctory gestures in the direction of sociology (e.g., Bourdieu) and then went off into a wholly predictable close reading of the two poets in which Hejinian clearly comes off the "winner." For all the sociological posturing, this struck me a pointless exercise and an insult to the sociology of poetry. Maybe the rest of the book is better, I'll have to see.
>
> Cheers,
> David

Bourdieu makes a few cameos, mostly in footnotes. Insightful and concise every time, but some development would be helpful. Personally, I came to the book with the same predispositions concerning Dobyns and Hejinian as Beach displays. When Mark Presjner writes of this section of Beach's book that... ---------- MP: in another chapter he examines the career and work of workshop maven Stephen Dobyns in comparison to the career and work of Lyn Hejinian... (he comes to the conclusion that, without prior prejudice about which type of poetry is "good" and which "bad," Dobyns is a fairly weak poet and Hejinian a pretty good one....Which makes sense to me; ...Most people wd. suspect his claim to be so "without prejudice" about overall styles to start with... But i think he would argue that he is reaching conclusions about the relative strength of different contemporary camps..not starting out with them. And this claim to some extent is backed-up by his treatment of slam work, which he like a whole lot more than workshop, and treats with considerable respect.) ---------- ... I generally agree: he lets slammers get away with things that Dobyns pays for rather dearly. But I can't find where Beach says that he's approaching Dobyns and Hejinian without prejudice. In the intro, Beach writes "I have at times stated my own aesthetic criteria and preferences quite strongly, as in teh comparison of the `mainstream' academic poet Stephen Dobyns and the experimentalist Lyn Hejinian {hmmmm, why no scare quotes around the equally dubious term "experimentalist"?}, and in my critiques of poetry anthologies and academic creative writing programs. While my intent has been to write a book that is synthetic and open-minded rather than narrowly partisan, I do believ that certain sectors of American poetic culture have been more successful than others in articulaint new perspectives and in generating innovative formal and cognitive structures..."(17-8) Which is why the point that David Kennedy raises is interesting: is it possible to have (and express) one's own aesthetic preferences without insulting the sociology of poetry? And if so, who are some of the critics who pull it off? Asking out of curiousity, not hostility, petulance, etc.

David Zauhar

↑ Index

147. Safdie Joseph
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Tue 12 Oct 1999

Hello Mark -- I applaud your last thought here, about losing the terms "avant-garde" -- it does create more ghettoization I think. Did you ever publish the excerpts from "The Story of O" that you were once interested in? Is Misc Proj even a going concern anymore?

Best,

Joe

-----Original Message-----
From: Mark Prejsnar [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, October 12, 1999 8:31 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture

We have an extrememly lively local poets group here in Atlanta, which recently has begun discussing issues quite actively by e-mail, supplementary to our frequent local get-togethers... The post below started as a response to something the atanta poet Randy Prunty had posted, commenting on an Atlanta figure who is big on the local "slam" scene....As it progressed, it grew against my initial intentions into an offhand review of Christopher Beach's excellent new book, Poetic Culture. Soon i had written so many of my thoughts down that i figured it might make sense to share 'em with a larger grouping...So i am posting this to both the Atlanta group and the Buffalo List. --Mark Prejsnar

(p.s. By the way, the mentions toward the beginning of this post of "our kind of writing" etc. are addressed to my initial audience, the 11 or 12 members of the Atlanta Poets Group; anyone interested in what that kind of writing is, can check out a large selection of our work in the current New Orleans Review, and in a special issue of Mirage #4 that will be out fairly soon....)

The new book by C. Beach is very interesting.... From a point of view that is very sympathetic to our kind of writing, he tries nonetheless to talk about "what is happening" both sociologically and artistically in U.S. poetry right now.... Two of the chapters are in-depth discussions of the slam scene, and are very informative. Beach tries to start from the point of view that there is no "wrong" school to be in..and so compares slam, workshop, and our kind of writing, attempting to be "fair". For instance in another chapter he examines the career and work of workshop maven Stephen Dobyns in comparison to the career and work of Lyn Hejinian... (he comes to the conclusion that, without prior prejudice about which type of poetry is "good" and which "bad," Dobyns is a fairly weak poet and Hejinian a pretty good one....Which makes sense to me; ...Most people wd. suspect his claim to be so "without prejudice" about overall styles to start with... But i think he would argue that he is reaching conclusions about the relative strength of different contemporary camps..not starting out with them. And this claim to some extent is backed-up by his treatment of slam work, which he like a whole lot more than workshop, and treats with considerable respect.)

There are lots of weaknesses: apart from the fact that he makes an effort to be respectful and enthusiastic about the slam scene, thus giving more credit to shallow, silly work (in many instances) than it deserves, he also makes certain theoretical moves that i believe are confused (but are pretty uiversally agreed to on today's scene) He uses the phrase "avant-garde" or else "experimental" about once a page, in a 200 page book; and he believes that people like Bernstein, Mackey, Silliman, Coolidge, belong to an "oppositional avant-garde" whose main raison d'etre is to be against all mainstream culture and the social system, and also to exist as a cohesive group (to at least some significant extent)...Thus he claims that "post-language experimental poets," whom he represents by "Writing from the New Coast," the O-Blek anthology, are terribly confused and are floundering because they are not as cohesive a group, and do not write as much theory, and do not have as much politix, or as confident a sense of where they fit in history or of their mission, as the previous generation. In other words, he really (at the end) seems to lose track of questions regarding what their poetry is like, and how good it is, because he is caught up in questions of whether these newer poets can play institutional and public-relations games with success.... I believe this confusion on Beach's part comes from two things: the "sociological" slant of much of his book (which is its strength by the way, in part, but which ends up causing a certain obsession with the p.r. aspects of poetry's public life); and his commitment to the old concepts of "avant-garde" and "experimental", which have in a way outlived thier usefulness. (For instance, i have been reflecting recently on the how much "camps" have become institutionalized, in a way that is inflexible: the generation of Perelman, Silliman et al. use "avant-garde" and "experimental" all the time, in discussing contemporary work, and this is also a broad general practice today.... But previous generations of U.S. poets whsoe work was challenging and mold-breaking, such as the generation of Pound, Williams, Zukofsky, Stein, or the generation of Olson, Duncan and Spicer, did not so identify themselves...They thought of what they were doing as "poetry," and aspired to have it seen as the strongest and most exciting work being done in their time.,...It didn't occur to them to saddle themselves with ghettoizing labels... What i feel strongly is that we have to get back to that mindset... For the kind of work represented by the APG and many people on the BuffaList, is simply the best work being done in the U.S. ... and i question whether we want to continue to police the boundaries by using these terms...)

--mark prejsnar

↑ Index

148. pete spence

Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips

Tue 12 Oct 1999

> I've found almost nothing at all on Phillips on the literature end of things, though on the art end there are reviews and catalogs of individual shows.

>Huston Paschal, _Tom Phillips: Selections from the Ruth and Marvin Sackner >Archive of Concrete and Visual Poetry_. Raleigh: North Carolina Museum of >Art, 1990.
>
>I am currently working on Phillips and would also appreciate any >suggestions.
>--Molly Schwartzburg
>
the ruth and marvin sackner archive might your best bet they have a large collection of phillips see: www.rediscov.com/sackner.htm or maybe you could e-mail marvin for info if you haven't his e-mail address then you can ask me off-list//pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

149. derek beaulieu

west coast line rescue program...

Tue 12 Oct 1999

---

as many of you have no doubt heard, West Coast Line is in trouble and needs our support.

i told the folks at WCL that i would do anything i could to help save them - if you are interested have a look at the contact names and numbers at the end of this message.

thanks for you patience yrs

derek beaulieu

housepress

***

FROM WEST COAST LINE:

over the years, WCL has featured Here and There: Between South Asias; Transporting the Emporium: Hong Kong Art and Writing Through the Ends of Time; and North: New African Canadian Writing. The journal has honoured Canadians like the Tish poets, Phyllis Webb, Warren Tallman, Roy Kiyooka and bpNichol. We have done community outreach, like the 1998 Beyond the H Orizon: bpNichol + 10 conference and the 1997 SiteLines writers' retreat, not to mention lots of readings.

West Coast Line needs your help.

Our funding has just been radically cut, leaving us without operating funds for the winter. Next year's funding looks promising, but right now, unless we can raise $10,000, we'll have to close down.

Please help us prevent an untimely demise. If you can, please choose a 'rescue' option :

Sincerely,
Miriam Nichols, Editor

THE OFFICIAL "RESCUE WEST COAST LINE" DONATION PROGRAM

Everyone who donates will be named in our next issue.
We appreciate your support!

o Friend $50 tax receipt & a 1 year free subscription;
o Donor $100 tax receipt & a 2 year free subscription;
o Patron $200 tax receipt, a 2 year free subscription & any 3 back issues
o Saint $500 tax receipt, a 2 year free subscription, any 3 back issues & a complete set of Line, WCL's modernist predecessor;

o Fairy Godperson $1000 tax receipt, a 3 year free subscription, a free gift subscription, any 3 back issues & a complete set of Line.

Donation Methods:
mail: West Coast Line, 2027 East Annex, SFU, Burnaby BC V5A 1S6
phone: [redacted] fax: [redacted]
online: www.sfu.ca/west-coast-line email: [redacted]

↑ Index

150. Billy Little
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Tue 12 Oct 1999

---

in reference to dobyns mark,

we're all marked on a curve and dobyns may be one of them but he's one of the best of them, the other children of mallarme, the franco-americans. levine, kinnel,piercy, willard, merwin, bidart, oliver, bly, hannigan, where's paul hannigan? fanny howe , ray carver,wendell berry, richard hugo, c.d.wright, ammons, haines, stern. brock-broido gilbert, , gluck, charles wright, jorie grahame, sextonists, loganistas, roethkeites, they're transcendentalists, emerzen and aughthorn their diogenes, bad as they may be, they are graaaaaaaate poets compared to 98% of the Web De Sol say or the chicago review.
we're not sharpening any machetes are we mark?
the audience is vast
we couldn't satisfy the demand
if they ceased to produce
those them
nobody rereads charles bernstein
at the race track

billy meowsie tongue little

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

151. Alan Sondheim

LEST WE FORGET, A MORALITY PLAY

Wed 13 Oct 1999

-

LEST WE FORGET, A MORALITY PLAY BY JENNIFER, NIKUKO, JULU, AND ALAN

PROLOGUE BY BUKHARIN: Repentence is often attributed to the Dostoyevsky mind, to the specific properties ofthe soul ("l'ame slave" as it is called), and this can be said of types like Alyosha Karamazov, the heroes of the "Idiot" and other Dostoyevsky characters, who are prepared to stand up in the public square and cry: "Beat me, Orthodox Christians, I am a villain!" But that is not the case here at all. "L'ame slave" and the psy- chology of Dostoyevsky characters are a thing of the remote past in our country, the pluperfect tense. Such types do not exist in our country, or exist perhaps only on the outskirts of small provincial towns, if they do even there. On the contrary, such a psychology is to be found in Western Europe.

JULU: Excellent. And this is what I want you to do, Alan, and this is what I want you to say. You will learn from a very good way to learn:

VYSHINSKY: Tell us the nature of your wrecking activities. ZUBAREV: When I was working in the seed cultivation department of the Peo- ple's Commissariat of Agriculture of the U.S.S.R., they were of the nature that the accused Chernov spoke about yesterday: causing confusion in seed cultivation, lowering the quality of the seeds, employing bad quality mat- erials, bad sifting, careless storing, and the result of all this was not only a reduction of yield, but also a hostile mood of the peasantry, dis- satisfaction with these so-called selected seeds.

Alan: This is excellent, and I will do my very best.

VYSHINSKY: What was the nature of your criminal activities in the People's Commissariat of Agriculture of the R.S.F.S.R.? ZUBAREV: Here my criminal activities consisted first of all in wrongly planning the sowing of vegetables; in particular, little attention was paid to the development of vegetable growing in our eastern districts, where the developing of vegetable growing was of enormous importance...

Jennifer: I am learning so very hard here.

PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF JUSTICE OF THE U.S.S.R. REPORT OF COURT PROCEED- INGS IN THE CASE OF THE ANTI-SOVIET "BLOC OF RIGHTS AND TROTSKYITES" Heard Before the MILITARY COLLEGIUM OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE U.S.S.R. Moscow, March 2-13, VERBATIM REPORT, Published by the PEOPLE'S COMMISSARIAT OF JUSTICE OF THE U.S.S.R. MOSCOW 1938.

Jennifer, Julu, and Nikuko applaud.
All three together: This is wonderful!

VYSHINSKY: How matters stood with butter, this is of interest to me at this stage of the investigation. You have spoken of salt, of sugar, how you held back these commodities from sale to the population by sabotage, etc. But how did matters stand with butter? ZELENSKY: We don't sell butter in the rural dis- tricts. VYSHINSKY: I am not asking you what you sell. You were above all sell- ing the main thing - your country...

Alan: I see how this goes. This is amazing. They have been found out, and it is clear at the very end that the wreckers are executed. Nothing could be clearer. One must be at the service of one's country.

LEVIN: ...Gorky loved fire, flames, and we made use of this. A bonfire would be lit up for him. Just when Gorky would feel the fatigue after his work, all the chopped branches were gathered together, and a flame kind- led. Gorky would stand near this bonfire, it was hot there, and all this had a harmful effect on his health... ...And in fact, on the second or third day after his arrival in this grippe- infected house, Gorky fell sick with the grippe. This was soon complicated by croupous pneumonia and imme- diately took a serious turn. Nonetheless, Pro- fessor Pletnev and I consid- ered that the plan we had drawn up must be car- ried through, and that for this purpose use must be made of medicines which would be harmful to him.

Julu: Oh oh, that is so awful! This is such an awful thing! I cannot be- lieve how awful this is!

THE PRESIDENT: As regards wrecking work, that it was necessary to bring about a decrease in the number of livestock. RYKOV: Even more than that. These instructions, as Goloded said, were duly received from the poles...

Jennifer: Oh! Oh! Oh! Attacks from every side!
Nikuko: Oh! Woe! Attacks from within and without!

KRESTINSKY: ...Further Trotsky developed the idea of the necessity of ter- ror- ism, wrecking activities and diversions. In speaking of them, Trotsky considered diversionist acts and acts of terrorism from the point of view both of applying them in time of war for the purpose of disorganizing the defensive capacity of the Red Army, for disorganizing the government by the moment of the coup d'etat, and at the same time, these diversionist and terrorist acts would make his, Trotsky's, position stronger and would give him more confidence in his ne- gotiations with foreign governments, be- cause he would be able to refer to the fact that his followers in the Sov- iet Union were both sufficiently strong and sufficiently active...

Julu: Oh dearest us! How awful is Trotsky! Something must be done and now! There are foes on every side! There are foes inside and out!

KAKAZOV: ...Now when I stand before you, Citizens Judges, as the murderer of Menzhinsky, I cannot help shuddering and being overcome with horror when I think of the despicable crime into which I was dragged. Not for a minute do I want to disclaim the blame for this crime. On the contrary I want to repent of this crime to the end and rid myself of this nightmare.

Alan: Oh curses on Kakazov for his perfidious crime! To death with perfid- ious Kakazov!

On the basis of the aforesaid, and guided by Articles 319 and 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure of the R.S.F.S.R., The Military Collegium of the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. Sentences...[list of 18 men]...to the supreme penalty - to be shot, with the confiscation of all their personal property.

All: Oh we are saved from the wrecking and saboteurs of our country! Death to the traitors! Death to the BLOC OF RIGHTS AND TROTSKYITES! Death to the Jews!

Nikuko: This is a wonderful play, Ladies and Gentlemen, and we hope you have enjoyed it. We have given you much to think on, because the truth, which is al- ways difficult, is the best play in the world! Please take care on your way out! Thank you!

KIM IL SUNG: Hello, I am a member of the audience and I am very happy to see this play. If more countries, even though small, pool their strength and fight resolutely against imperialism, the peoples can knock down U.S. imperialism with decisively overwhelming power on each and every front. The people of ev- ery country making revolution should tear limbs off the U.S. beast all over the world and behead it. The U.S. imperialists appear to be strong, but when the peoples of many countries attack them from all sides and join in mutilating them in that way, they will become impotent and bite the dust in the end.

Jennifer: But oh Great Leader, what is to be done?

KIM IL SUNG: Hello, Our Party will fight against Right and 'Left' oppor- tunism, while upholding the banner of unity.

Julu: Oh that is so good, we will drag down the renegades of the revolu- tion!

PRESIDENT AND KIM IL SUNG: Yes, ABSOLUTEly!

All Laugh!

Exeunt Omnes.

↑ Index

152. Kyle Conner
HIGHWIRE READING
Wed 13 Oct 1999

---

a g a i n * w e * m e e t

__HIGHWIRE__READINGS__ >>thiS timE IT'S

J E N A O S M A N .....

+++

..... A L A N G I L B E R T

Come to 139 N. 2nd St., Highwire Gallery, THIS Saturday, Oct. 16, at the same ol' 8PM bring a refreshment if ya like, take a seat, it's the verbal herbal, and directly following there will be revelry at our favorite local pub, the estimable Anthony's--try the fried oyster special

****

POETS:

JENA OSMAN is the newest faculty member of the Temple University Graduate English/Creative Writing program. She co-edits Chain with Juliana Spahr. In her work, including a CD-ROM poem, she explores a procedural poetics.

ALAN GILBERT recently gave a controversial talk about Hank Williams and the Harry Smith Anthology at the Boston Poetry Conference. He also wrote a scathing and intelligent response to Jeffery Sachs' article in The Economist about the economic troubles in Russia.

↑ Index

153. Kimmelman, Burt
Tandy Sturgeon
Wed 13 Oct 1999

Hi,

Can anyone tell me how to contact Tandy Sturgeon?

Thanks,

Burt Kimmelman
[redacted]

↑ Index

154. Rachel Loden

Hotel Imperium: book announcement

Wed 13 Oct 1999

Now available:

H O T E L I M P E R I U M

Poems by Rachel Loden

Winner of the Contemporary Poetry Series competition University of Georgia Press, 1999

ISBN: 0820321699

"Fierce humor has HOTEL IMPERIUM, as well as a heady run in which Nixon and brassieres stud the trail; the whole century bends its tragedy beneath Rachel Loden's clear intelligence. These are brilliant, moving poems--poems to read for pure joy and chills over and over from here on out." --Susan Wheeler

"Rachel Loden is not merely fashionable or current. She's a late-century muse of everything valuable in poetry--voice, shape, and gesture. Add to that a wicked sense of humor and a disarmingly fresh and penetrating eye for social and political concerns. But her poems are not political in the simple sense of the word. Loden's poetry guarantees complexity as it charts new territory with assurance. Rarely does a writer emerge with such authority. HOTEL IMPERIUM is the debut of a startlingly original writer." --Maxine Chernoff

"Ablaze with moral passion, hushed in fairy-tale bliss, or chuckling up to terror, Rachel Loden's tight poems of intricate subversion are gloriously musical, alive to each scintilla of sound and measure." --Stephanie Strickland

"Steadily, with imaginative insight, humor, sarcasm, irony, Rachel Loden looks at history, the great continuous and absolutely unstoppable weave of memories that is, like it or not, the medium of human existence. Definitely 'residential', her HOTEL IMPERIUM is "a murderous dream, confetti falling / helplessly into the fissured past" ("Premillennial Tristesse"). In its corridors and rooms, Loden makes us confront many of the century's still active ghosts, in manifestations both familiar and wittily defamiliarized: "The old man's overcoat stirs / in the dark, as though / about to cup a hand once more / to an unhearing ear ..." ("Reagan Ascending into Hollywood"). Political in the best and rarest sense of the word, Loden's poems show us how to reimagine our (and others') lives, with a vividness reminiscent of both the COMMEDIA and SPRING & ALL. In sum: great, terrifying, insidiously beautiful work!" --Anselm Hollo

"If you are looking for a book of poems ruthless and luxuriant enough to see you into the third millennium, take along Rachel Loden's HOTEL IMPERIUM, winner of the 1999 University of Georgia Press Contemporary Poets Prize. These startling and vibrant poems capture the tristesse of the post-apocalyptic era, the whimpering end of the Cold War, and the "irrational exuberance" that comes "after the end." Loden's poems are especially necessary and important now, because they will temper the noisy hype of millennial newness and its promise of release from history. "You will enter history," announces the book's first section, which mourns the last fifty years of a brutal century, while refusing to be consoled by apocalyptic fantasies of rebirth or regeneration. . . .

"In the extraterritorial Hotel-world of global capital, we are all on the move, whether as tourists, refugees, or vagabonds. Loden's "Hotel Imperium" is peopled with strange and ghostly lodgers, most notably the former leaders of the Western world and the Soviet Bloc. Represented by Loden in their mental and physical decline, these "cold warriors, like dying jellyfish," are beginning to "grow dim." Richard Nixon slips "in and out of consciousness," while his dog Checkers, about to be exhumed, speaks reassuring words from beyond the grave. Ronald Reagan's overcoat, enlivened after museum enshrinement proceedings, gives a last, and amiable, salute. We contemplate "Lenin's body [on display in a Red Square mausoleum], chilly like a mammoth / in an ice floe." Loden is at her best when she combines her grimly acute historical observations with the "errant / sweetness" and breadth of learning characteristic of her book's guiding presence, Robert Duncan. Then we re-experience, with a shock, our century's unholy mixture of paradise and wasteland.

"The human body--erotic, ecstatic, torn, and tortured--is a constant presence in HOTEL IMPERIUM. The book's presiding spirit is the violated figure of "revenge," who "lies sweetly in the fields / with her legs open, / her Bo Peep / petticoats in ribbons." To this bloody figure and its promise of future violence, Loden proposes a counter-figure, "love." If love cannot offer us redemption ("saving nothing standing in its wake"), it can offer us new histories out of which new futures may be possible. We are lucky to have in Rachel Loden a troubadour unafraid to sing of terror, and a brilliant balladeer of our history's shabbiest episodes. As we move into a new millennium, we should listen carefully to this self-professed "rhapsodist of cunning" and "songbird of iniquity" as she sings sweetly of "love, revenge, remaindering." --Kathleen Crown, in AMERICAN LETTERS & COMMENTARY

Cover: Tricky Dick a la Lichtenstein. View here:

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0820321699/qid%3D937098693/002-8369867-7542621

Special to POETICS subscribers: $12.77 (20% off) postpaid.

Please backchannel ([redacted]) or send check to:

Rachel Loden
E-Traffic Inc.
1101 San Antonio Road, Suite 404
Mountain View, CA 94043

↑ Index

155. David Giles Scott
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Wed 13 Oct 1999

As far as i know Mary Ann Caws up at CUNY has written some essays on Phillips, though i'm not sure where they are located. It's a starting point thought.

David Giles Scott

On Mon, 11 Oct 1999, Molly Schwartzburg wrote:

> I've found almost nothing at all on Phillips on the literature end of things, though on the art end there are reviews and catalogs of individual shows.
>
> There is a selected bibliography in the catalog for an exhibition at North Carolina Museum of Art:
>
> Huston Paschal, _Tom Phillips: Selections from the Ruth and Marvin Sackner Archive of Concrete and Visual Poetry_. Raleigh: North Carolina Museum of Art, 1990.
>
> I am currently working on Phillips and would also appreciate any suggestions.
> --Molly Schwartzburg
>
> On Mon, 11 Oct 1999, Bob Grumman wrote:
>
> I'd much appreciate your posting whatever you find out about critical reaction to the work of Tom Phillips. I doubt that there's much, for the same reason there's almost nothing out there about ANY genuine visual poets.
>
> --Bob G.

↑ Index

156. Tenney Nathanson
BOO? who?
Wed 13 Oct 1999

---

getting ready to have seminar class on Muse & Drudge. Does anyone know whether the interview w Harryette in BOO 7 is available electronically? I have a copy, but it's heavily marked up, and I'd like to make a clean copy available to the seminar.

also: leads on other good stuff ON the book?

thanks in advance

Tenney

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/

↑ Index

157. Alan Sondheim
Writing-space at trAce - (fwd, apologies for cross-post)
Wed 13 Oct 1999

Hi -

The Love and War project at the trAce online writing community has been placed in 'museum' status -

There are four new pages to contribute to. You can write within them, add hypertext or hypertext links, etc. - We're interested in all forms of writing/intractivity (whatever the format will support) - seeing what will emerge. Go to http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

Thanks - Alan -

(also see http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/)

Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

158. Jordan Davis
noteworthy event for noteworthy book
Wed 13 Oct 1999

Book Party to Celebrate the Release of

HOW MANY MORE OF THEM ARE YOU?
by Lisa Lubasch

Avec Books, 1999

FRIDAY OCTOBER 22
6 - 9 pm

6 pm. Reception
7 pm. Reading & Musical Response featuring

New music by composer John Kramer, Performed by

Ken Long, clarinettist
Louise Dubin, cellist
Monica Bauchwitz, violinist

Teachers & Writers Collaborative
5 Union Square West, 7th floor
tel. [redacted]

↑ Index

159. David Baratier
PANTS
Wed 13 Oct 1999

1998-99 winner of the Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Contest
Ruth Anderson Barnett, editor of the Marlboro Review chose PANTS by Shelley Stenhouse. 40 pages. Exciting retro cover.

IF YOU GO OUT FOR FAKE BEER AND NEVER COME BACK

who will click keys in the door, stack the towels on the too-high shelf,
talk to the plumber while he works, sleep on the right side of the bed?
How dare you leave and not take your smell with you?
“Your thigh is cool,” you said,
“like a puddle on a basement floor.”
The brown mole on your sad thin back, your narrow shoulders and crooked smile,
your unopened mail.
I never even gave you a drawer.
(You kept your big plastic suitcase under the bed.)

I will rope off your work boots like a museum, draw a chalk line around your dirty T-shirt where it fell.

I loiter at the patch of once wet sidewalk where you carved your initials with a straw.
Someday I will pass that spot and not think about you at all.
Then I will pack your plastic suitcase and put it on the street.
Soon I'll see a bum wearing your old shoes.

-------- Shelley Stenhouse's fiction and poetry have appeared in The Antioch Review, Third Coast, Mudfish, and other publications. Her work has been nominated for a Pushcart Prize and excerpted in Poet's Market. She received an MFA in fiction from Vermont College, was a 1998 and 1999 resident of Yaddo, and is an ongoing member of the Writers Room, where she is completing her first novel. She wrote and performed a one-woman show in 1989. Shelley was born in Chicago, and now lives in Greenwich Village with her daughter, Daisy-green.

The poems in Shelley Stenhouse’s Pants emerge from a childhood of privilege, one in which the speaker’s father “president of something downtown / at thirty five,” teaches her this primary ethic “You do what you do, you do it-- / Christ, you just do what you want”-- and she learns from her other how to squander the body on sex and booze, as though it were limitless cash. In vivid scenes, he poems show how powerful these parental lessons are, as the speaker’s own adolescence and then adulthood replay the drama of promiscuity, alcohol and drug use, and emotional alienation. In spite of legacy enacted here, the voice refuses the easy answers of tabloid and talk show sterotypes. Under the poet’s unrelenting reguard, these sinners (father, mother, self) are revisited through metaphors that reveal how complex human choice and action are, and through a music that captures “that moment before things turn, that moment / when something sings...”

Ruth Anderson Barnett

Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Award Series
ISBN 1-886350-87-6 Price: $6.00

Checks to:
Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus OH 43206

or SPD

The Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Award was established in 1995 to promote writers whose work challenges conventions of contemporary poetry while encouraging multiple readings. Writers world-wide are invited to participate. Each year, one manuscript is selected by a writer with a thorough familiarity of the small press realm. Publication, a prize of five hundred dollars, and ten percent of the book run is awarded to the winner.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

160. Michael Magee
COMBO website
Wed 13 Oct 1999

Just letting folks know that a photo of the cover (significantly more yellow than in person where it's a gleaming gold) as well as a few sample poems from COMBO 4 are now available at our website. So, go, be enticed and order a subscription!

http://dept.english.upenn.edu/~wh/combo

-Mike.

↑ Index

161. Lowther, John demographic query
Wed 13 Oct 1999

at times i've been interested to see the country by country numerical listing of poetix listees

but i wonder if it might be possible to zero in on states or regions and plot the distribution along those lines

more for curiousity than any other reason

but i'd love to know how many listees there are in florida

geogia
south carolina
north carolina virgina alabama louisianna

tennesee
mississippi

that is, the south (did i forget any states ?)

↑ Index

162. Arielle C. Greenberg
Re: HIGHWIRE READING
Wed 13 Oct 1999

Just a request -- could people please try to remember to list the city when they're listing readings? Sometimes they forget and they just say "2nd Street" and it all seems a little vague...second street anywhere in the world?

Thanks,
Arielle
(who lives on Delhi Street, but here -- in Syracuse -- it's pronounced "Dell-high")

* "I thought numerous gorgeous sadists would write me plaintive appeals, but time has gone by me. They know where to get better looking boots than I describe." -- Ray Johnson

↑ Index

163. Mark Weiss
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Wed 13 Oct 1999

I think Fanny would be a little surprised to find herself in that group.

At 08:57 PM 10/12/99 -0700, you wrote:
>in reference to dobyns mark,
>
> we're all marked on a curve and dobyns may be one of them but he's one of >the best of them, the other children of mallarme, the franco-americans.
>levine, kinnel,piercy, willard, merwin, bidart, oliver, bly, hannigan, >where's paul hannigan? fanny howe , ray carver,wendell berry, richard >hugo, c.d.wright, ammons, haines, stern. brock-broido gilbert, , gluck, >charles wright, jorie grahame, sextonists, loganistas, roethkeites, >they're transcendentalists, emerzen and aughthorn their diogenes, bad as >they may be, they are graaaaaaaate poets compared to 98% of the Web De Sol >say or the chicago review.
>we're not sharpening any machetes are we mark?
>the audience is vast

>we couldn't satisfy the demand
>if they ceased to produce
>those them
>nobody rereads charles bernstein
>at the race track
>
>billy meowsie tongue little
>
>
>forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
>4 song st.
>nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
>canadaddy
>[redacted]
>zonko
>
>

↑ Index

164. David Kirschenbaum
Do you trade?
Wed 13 Oct 1999

Michael-Grabbed a combo at Granary books moving sale, nice stuff. Do you trade?
as ever,
David Kirschenbaum, editor
Boog Literature
(formalities upon introduction only)

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

165. Tom Beckett
singing the holes in history
Wed 13 Oct 1999

A few weeks ago Hank Lazer mentioned Paul Naylor's book _Singing the Holes in History_(Northwestern University Press). I want to recommend it also. The author, Paul Naylor, gives interesting readings of Susan Howe, Nathaniel Mackey, Lyn Hejinian, Kamau Brathwaite and M. Nourbese Phillip

↑ Index

166. pete spence
Re: demographic query
Wed 13 Oct 1999

>
>at times i've been interested to see the country by country numerical >listing of poetix listees
>
>but i wonder if it might be possible to zero in on states or regions and >plot the distribution along those lines
>
>more for curiousity than any other reason
>
>but i'd love to know how many listees there are in
>
>florida
>geogia
>south carolina
>north carolina
>virgina
>alabama
>louisianna
>tennesee
>mississippi
>
>that is, the south (did i forget any states ?)
>
what about the SOUTH ZAUMIST PROTECTORITE whyche i'm LIT Minister of!! pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

167. Anastasios Kozaitis
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Wed 13 Oct 1999

There are some wonderful essays on a web site devoted to his work. In particular, I'm thinking of an essay by William Gass.

ak

> I've found almost nothing at all on Phillips on the literature end of things, though on the art end there are reviews and catalogs of individual shows.
>
> There is a selected bibliography in the catalog for an exhibition at North Carolina Museum of Art:
>
> Huston Paschal, _Tom Phillips: Selections from the Ruth and Marvin Sackner Archive of Concrete and Visual Poetry_. Raleigh: North Carolina Museum of Art, 1990.
>
> I am currently working on Phillips and would also appreciate any suggestions.
> --Molly Schwartzburg
>
> On Mon, 11 Oct 1999, Bob Grumman wrote:
>
> I'd much appreciate your posting whatever you find out about critical reaction to the work of Tom Phillips. I doubt that there's much, for the same reason there's almost nothing out there about ANY genuine visual poets.
>
> --Bob G.

↑ Index

168. David Kirschenbaum

Andrei Codrescu in NYC, Wed. October 20, 8pm, at Makor 35 W.67th St.

Thu 14 Oct 1999

Fellow listees,
A friend of mine is organizing this event and I thought it might be of interest.
as ever,
David Kirschenbaum

Andrei Codrescu's Radio Messiah
Wednesday, October 20, 8pm
Makor 35 West 67 Street (Bet. Columbus and Central Park West)
New York City
$12; call [redacted] for reservations

Radio Messiah is a one-man show by Andrei Codrescu with radio voices from preachers, gurus, and conspiracy theorists. This piece is about fathers, earthly and heavenly. Originally commissioned by Lincoln Center for their Directors' Workshop, Radio Messiah was performed twice, once at Lincoln Center and shortly after at Central Park's SummerStage in the Fall of 1998. The play is indirectly connected with Andrei Codrescu's novel, Messiah (Simon & Schuster, 1999). Andrei will be signing Messiah, Ay,Cuba and an anthology from the anti-literary literary journal he edits, Thus Spake the Corpse: An Exquisite Corpse Reader 1988-1998, Poetry and Essays. Andrei Codrescu may be most popularly known for his sardonic, humor-laced radio essays, heard since 1983 on National Public Radio's All Things Considered. In these essays Codrescu has ranged from describing his encounters with a young hustler and an un-official Catholic saint in Cuba, to musing on American pop culture and reporting on his return to his native Romania after the fall of the Iron Curtain.

David A. Kirschenbaum editor and publisher
Boog Literature
351 W.24th St. Suite 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

169. Katie Degentesh
TONIGHT AT ADOBE BOOKS
Thu 14 Oct 1999

OCTOBER 14, 1999, 7:30 PM at the ADOBE BOOKSHOP

9x9 INDUSTRIES returns to PRESENT

<bold>AN EVENING OF BLANKETY BLANKETY BLANK WITH THE SOMETHING SOMETHINGS

</bold>The hyperbolic adjective trio,

<bold>Todd Barker, Paul Spencer, and Felix Macnee,

</bold>will perform the above-titled work.

Bring your fever-pitch unction and dangling participles.

There will be a certain amount of danger.

<bold>Todd Barker</bold> holds a Masters of Fine Arts degree from the California College of Arts and Crafts, generally in his left hand. He has performed and exhibited widely, in venues such as The Lab and the Gorgonzola Peach Blintz.

<bold>Paul Spencer,</bold> currently completing a degree in painting at the San Francisco Art Institute, chips his canvas with a whimsical mannerist futon and piles his words on with advanced cat pressure.

<bold>Felix Macnee</bold> has snaggled teeth, a pork pie hat, and deals the cards with two broken hands. He has written a play starring green beans.

--please note that Michael Disend, hypnotist and screen writer extraordinaire, has unfortunately had to cancel his opening performance--

1999 (NINETEEN NINETY (NINE BY NINE) INDUSTRIES) 199X9

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/

GIVE US YOUR TIRED, YOUR POOR, YOUR THURSDAY ASSES

YEARNING TO SEE PERFORMANCES FOR FREE

↑ Index

170. David Kellogg
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Thu 14 Oct 1999

David Zauhar wrote:

> On Tue, 12 Oct 1999, David Kellogg wrote:
>
> Mark, I haven't read Beach's new book but I was disappointed in -- even pissed off by -- the chapter on Hejinian and Dobyns when it came out in Contemporary Literature. If I recall, it made a few perfunctory gestures in the direction of sociology (e.g., Bourdieu) and then went off into a wholly predictable close reading of the two poets in which Hejinian clearly comes off the "winner." For all the sociological posturing, this struck me a pointless exercise and an insult to the sociology of poetry. Maybe the rest of the book is better, I'll have to see.
>
> Bourdieu makes a few cameos, mostly in footnotes. Insightful and concise every time, but some development would be helpful. Personally, I came to the book with the same predispositions concerning Dobyns and Hejinian as Beach displays.

So did I.

> When Mark Presjner writes of this section of Beach's book that...
> ----------
> MP:
> in another chapter he examines the career and work of workshop maven Stephen Dobyns in comparison to the career and work of Lyn Hejinian... (he > comes to the conclusion that, without prior prejudice about which type of poetry is "good" and which "bad," Dobyns is a fairly weak poet and Hejinian a pretty good one....Which makes sense to me; ...Most people wd. suspect his claim to be so "without prejudice" about overall styles to start with... But i think he would argue that he is reaching conclusions about the relative strength of different contemporary camps..not starting out with them. And this claim to some extent is backed-up by his treatment of slam work, which he like a whole lot more than workshop, and treats with considerable respect.)

> ---
> ... I generally agree: he lets slammers get away with things that Dobyns pays for rather dearly. But I can't find where Beach says that he's approaching Dobyns and Hejinian without prejudice. In the intro, Beach writes "I have at times stated my own aesthetic criteria and preferences quite strongly, as in teh comparison of the `mainstream' academic poet Stephen Dobyns and the experimentalist Lyn Hejinian {hmmmm, why no scare quotes around the equally dubious term "experimentalist"?}, and in my critiques of poetry anthologies and academic creative writing programs. While my intent has been to write a book that is synthetic and open-minded rather than narrowly partisan, I do believ that certain sectors of American poetic culture have been more successful than others in articulaint new perspectives and in generating innovative formal and cognitive structures..."(17-8)

The difficulty here is that it sets up the game in favor of the experimentalist. I doubt Dobyns would view his own poetry's importance in the way it articulates new perspectives or generates innovative formal and cognitive structures -- there might be other terms he would use -- so the fact that his work _doesn't_ do that is of no consequence. None. Nor do these criteria make any headway into understanding what readers actually _do_ with Dobyns, which as far as I could tell Beach couldn't care less about. Certainly the article in Contemporary Literature, on which I assume this chapter is based, provided no such analysis. Perhaps the values of Dobyns's audience are not Beach's -- given that possibility, it is at least worth asking what people who _do_ get something out of it get.

I'm no fan of Stephen Dobyns. But Beach's article is not cultural criticism or literary sociology.

> Which is why the point that David Kennedy

Kellogg, but OK.

> raises is interestingis it possible to have (and express) one's own aesthetic preferences
>
> without insulting the sociology of poetry? And if so, who are some of the critics who pull it off?

I think Maria Damon pulls it off pretty well. Charles Bernstein does it OK too, although his calls for diversity are rarely, in my experience, made in the direction of mainstream poetry. (Much as Adrienne Rich quotes Bernstein in the intro to her Best of . . . selection but then prints nothing of his compatriots'). Cary Nelson does it well in Repression and Recovery.

> Asking out of curiousity, not hostility, petulance, etc.

Well said, especially given that my own earlier post was nothing if not hostile.

Cheers,
David

David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

171. Mark Prejsnar
Beach's Poetic Culture (guerilla poetix)
Thu 14 Oct 1999

David Zauhar asks where Beach says he is without prejudice; well, i think what i said, or anyway what i meant, tho maybe i expressed it badly, is precisely conveyed by a passage DZ proceeds to quote:

"While my intent has been to write a book that is synthetic and open-minded rather than narrowly partisan, I do believ that certain sectors of American poetic culture have been more successful than others in articulaint new perspectives and in generating innovative formal and cognitive structures..."(17-8)

--i meant no more than what Beach means here: that he is trying to be "open-minded rather than narrowly partisan." I think the general approach by the way is interesting and probably a useful move, in the overall context of the ongoing poetry wars... (..in those wars i am usually pretty much a narrow partisan myself, lurking in the mountains, making hit-and-run attacks on the better-eqipped and well-funded occupying forces...But i dream of a just negotiated peace....)

Obviously, many will claim Beach hasn't succeeded in his "open-minded rather than narrow" goal.... I myself have mixed feelings... But the idea and the attempt are praiseworthy.

in the maquis,

mark prejsnar

↑ Index

172. Alan Golding
Tom Phillips refs.
Thu 14 Oct 1999

A couple of short ones: Steve McCaffery has a very brief discussion of Phillips in his essay "The Scandal of Sincerity: Towards a Levinasian Poetics," Pretexts: Studies in Writing and Culture 6.2 (1997): 167-190. In a note he cites a web site that apparently has Phillips material so maybe that'll be helpful: www.wolfenet.com/duchamp/

And Johanna Drucker has a couple of pages on A Humument in The Century of Artists' Books (NY: Granary, 1995).

Alan

↑ Index

173. Jim Andrews
Cauldron & Net launches, vol of Web art & writings
Thu 14 Oct 1999

CAULDRON & NET LAUNCHES http://www.StudioCleo.com/cauldron/ Claire Dinsmore has just launched the first volume of Cauldron & Net on Web art and writing. The first issue features Jennifer Ley, Thomas Bell, Talan Memmott, David Knoebel, Todd Sanders, George Quasha, Peter Ganick, David Knoebel, Lars Wickstrom, Reiner Strasser, Kohei Shimizu, Nathaniel Bobbitt, State Sanctioned Sedation, Cecil Touchon, Shawn Phillips, Ted Warnell, and Jim Andrews.

DEFIB http://webartery.com/defib Claire and some of the contributors to this first Cauldron & Net will be participating in Defib (IRC, Web-based chat) on Sunday Nov 7, noon PST (7:00 GMT). All you need to participate in Defib is a java enabled browser.

↑ Index

174. Michael Franco
OXFORD ST READS OCTOBER 24th 1999
Thu 14 Oct 1999

WORD OF MOUTH
oxford street
READS

SUNDAY OCTOBER 24TH, 1999 3 PM

FROM SAN FRANCISCO:
susan thackrey
&
FROM GLOUCESTER
monica peck

$3.00 donation 90-92 oxford st. somerville ma. first floor

EXTENDING NOW THE TALK SERIES INITIATED WITH GERRIT LANSING AND DIANE DI PRIMA LAST SPRING, THESE READINGS, AT ONCE FORMAL AND YET -HOPEFULLY- INTIMATE; CHAMBER EVENTS WHERE POETRY IS NOT REMOVED FROM THE IMMEDIACY OF THE CONTEMPORARY BY THE APPARATUS OF STAGE OR PODIUM; COLLAGE, BOOKSTORE OR VENUE AUTHORIZATION: BUT RESTS SOLELY UPON OUR NEED OF IT... IN OUR LIVING ROOM... THESE READINGS THEN TO COMPLETE THE CIRCLE OF ACTIVITY & BRING IT ALL HOME.

all best
Michael Franco

↑ Index

175. David Kellogg
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Got the Beach book from the library this a.m., read it quickly, and will respond to the whole, rather than to my memory of a part, shortly. My initial reaction, having read it _very quickly_, is somewhat more positive than my reaction to the Hejinian/Dobyns chapter in _Contemporary Literature_. As one committed to my own Bourdieuvian (?) analysis of contemporary poetry, I can't help thinking that in trying to provide a "defense" of poetry against "the impoverished cultural spirit of American life" in the _midst_ of a sociology is a betrayal of Bourdieu's best bits, as in the following:

"There is a specific economy of the literary and artistic field, based on a particular form of belief. And the major difficulty lies in the need to make a radical break with this belief and with the deceptive certainties of the language of celebration, without thereby forgetting that they are part of the very reality we are seeking to understand, and that, as such, they must have a place in the model intended to explain it. . . . The work of art is an object which exists as such only by virtue of the (collective) belief which knows and acknowledges it as a work of art. Consequently, in order to escape from the usual choice between celebratory effusions and the reductive analysis which, failing to take account of the fact of belief in the work of art and of the social conditions which produce that belief, destroys the work of art as such, a rigorous science of art must, pace both the unbelievers and iconoclasts and also the believers, assert the possibility and necessity of understanding the work in its reality as a fetish; it has to take into account everything which helps to constitute the work of art as such, not least the discourses of direct and disguised celebration which are among the social conditions of production of the work of art qua object of belief." (Bourdieu, The Field of Cultural Production, 1993, p. 35)

More to follow.

David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

176. Lowther, John
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Thu 14 Oct 1999

i gotta second that one

"merwin.. bly.. fanny howe..."

why am i choking ???

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Mark Weiss [SMTP:[redacted]]
>
> I think Fanny would be a little surprised to find herself in that group.
>
> At 08:57 PM 10/12/99 -0700, you wrote:
> in reference to dobyns mark,
>
> we're all marked on a curve and dobyns may be one of them but he's one of
> the best of them, the other children of mallarme, the franco-americans.
> levine, kinnel,piercy, willard, merwin, bidart, oliver, bly, hannigan, > where's paul hannigan? fanny howe...

↑ Index

177. Herb Levy
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Most all of our books are still in boxes, so I can't be any more specific, but I know there was a special issue of the Canadian magazine Open Letter sometime in the, probably, late 1980s, that focused on Tom Phillips, Ian Hamilton Finlay, & someone else I can't remember.

Bests,

Herb

Herb Levy
NEW MAILING ADDRESS: P O Box 9369 Forth Wort, TX 76147
NEW PHONE: 817 [redacted] same old e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

178. hassen
Re: HIGHWIRE READING
Thu 14 Oct 1999

highwire's in philadelphia

h

↑ Index

179. Rachel Loden
reading announcement
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Stephanie Strickland will be reading from my books HOTEL IMPERIUM and THE LAST CAMPAIGN at the Hudson Valley Writers' Center this Sunday, October 17, at 4:30 p.m. I've read the poems to her and she's read them back to me so I know she reads them brilliantly. The other readers are Andrea Louie and Sharon Mesmer. Louie is author of a novel, MOON CAKES. She's publications director at the Asian American Writers' Workshop, has had residencies at the Macdowell Colony and Yaddo, and is a freelance writer and editor. Mesmer has a poetry collection, HALF ANGEL, HALF LUNCH, and a story collection, THE EMPTY QUARTER. She teaches fiction writing and literature at the New School.

There's a train out of Grand Central on Metro-North's Hudson line that leaves at 3:20 and brings you literally to the site of the reading (the center's digs at Philipse Manor) a little after 4 p.m. Info kiosk folk at Grand Central can easily tell you the track number for the 3:20 to Philipse Manor. Center email: [redacted]. Please come!

Rachel

↑ Index

180. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Left Hand Reading Series, 10/21/99
Thu 14 Oct 1999

> LEFT HAND READING SERIES PRESENTS:
>
> RIKKI DUCORNET - novelist
> &
> JOSEPH LEASE - poet
>
> Thursday, October 21, 1999 at 8:30pm
> Left Hand Books
> 1825 Pearl Street, above the Crystal Market
> Boulder, CO
>
> Rikki Ducornet's latest novel is "The Fan Maker's Inquistion." Her books include, "The Jade Cabinet,: "The Fountains of Neptune," The Word Desire," and "Phosphor in Dreamland."
>
> Joseph Lease is the author of "Human Rights" and "The Room." His poems have appeared in Grand Street, Talisman, Colorado Review, Agni, and Paris Review. He is Assistant Professor of Creative Writing at Central Michigan University and poetry editor of the Boston Book Review.
>
> An open reading will precede the featured readers.
>
> This event is free and open to the public. Donations are requested.
>
> For more information, please call Mark DuCharme [redacted] or Patrick Pritchett [redacted].

↑ Index

181. raea100900
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Seeing Fanny in that group certainly surprised and confused me!

↑ Index

182. Lowther, John
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Thu 14 Oct 1999

david kellogg wrote

"The difficulty here is that it sets up the game in favor of the experimentalist. I doubt Dobyns would view his own poetry's importance in the way it articulates new perspectives or generates innovative formal and cognitive structures -- there might be other terms he would use -- so the fact that his work _doesn't_ do that is of no consequence. None. Nor do these criteria make any headway into understanding what readers actually _do_ with Dobyns, which as far as I could tell Beach couldn't care less about. Certainly the article in Contemporary Literature, on which I assume this chapter is based, provided no such analysis. Perhaps the values of Dobyns's audience are not Beach's -- given that possibility, it is at least worth asking what people who _do_ get something out of it get. I'm no fan of Stephen Dobyns. But Beach's article is not cultural criticism or literary sociology."

i'm toeing into unknown waters here
as i have not, as yet read the book
but to the above i wd like to ask one question

david, are you actually "behind" the notion that it is only sympathetic readers of dobyns
that only their use of said poet is worthwhile
is "of consequence" ?

now, i grant, immediately, that in a sociology
of anything one wd want to have this "inside"
view of the dobyns' lovin poetry public
(i'm somewhat curious as to why they do like him myself)

but, do we believe that bourdieu (or anyone) can
in fact, step outside of their slurs, preconceptions etc sufficiently to provide the analysis that you seem to be calling beach to task for ?

again, forgive if my comments arent to the point
as i have not read this book, i simply wonder at the implications in some of this

for instance, if bourdieu only makes an appearance
in footnotes perhaps holding beach to the yardstick of him isnt' quite appropriate ? perhaps that is "of no consequence" as it doesnt address itself
to what the book _does_ for those who've found it interesting and an OK introduction to slices of the poetic pie that they might not otherwise
come upon (as it seem to have for mark p in relation to the slam stuff) ??

thoughts

)L

↑ Index

183. Lowther, John
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Thu 14 Oct 1999

---

a few more thoughts about all of this david, you quoted a passage from bourdieu from which i wd like to examine briefly;

> "There is a specific economy of the literary and artistic field, based on > a particular form of belief. And the major difficulty lies in the need to > make a radical break with this belief and with the deceptive certainties > of the language of celebration, without thereby forgetting that they are > part of the very reality we are seeking to understand, and that, as such, > they must have a place in the model intended to explain it. . . . The work > of art is an object which exists as such only by virtue of the > (collective) belief which knows and acknowledges it as a work of art.
> Consequently, in order to escape from the usual choice between celebratory > effusions and the reductive analysis which, failing to take account of the > fact of belief in the work of art and of the social conditions which > produce that belief, destroys the work of art as such, a rigorous science > of art must, pace both the unbelievers and iconoclasts and also the > believers, assert the possibility and necessity of understanding the work > in its reality as a fetish; it has to take into account everything which > helps to constitute the work of art as such, not least the discourses of > direct and disguised celebration which are among the social conditions of > production of the work of art qua object of belief."
>
well, i already questioned whether this seeming objectivity cd be attained, but just now i'm wondering about why exactly
the attempt to

"understand the work of art in it's reality as a fetish"

isnt swallowed by the proposed economy
of the literary and artistic field --- and thus this understanding of the work of art
in it's "reality as fetish" yet another things which would need "find it's place in the model"

arent works of art often fetishized by those who also have beliefs of varying sorts about art ---- consider gallery owners

who in some instances cd care less about the work but wish to surround it with the aura to fetishize it, such that it will sell --- this is different certainly, but how different ?

perhaps i am not clear on bourdieu's use of the word "fetish" ?

anyway

david or anyone familiar with bourdieu, my apologies if i'm asking boneheaded questions that were i familiar with his work i wdnt waste my time on --- but, i've seen some uses made of his name in places where the conclusions drawn made me less than confident about bourdieu's thought

)L

↑ Index

184. MAYHEW
Bourdieu
Thu 14 Oct 1999

I've been following the discussion of Beach's book with great interest. I've also been reading Bourdieu while doing an analysis of the poetry reading public in contemporary Spain.

While reading _Distinctions_ it strikes me that Bourdieu vacates aesthetic pleasure on several levels:

High-brow and avant-garde models of aesthetics reinforce social privilege and negate actual pleasure.

Bourdieu scorns middle-brow culture in a scathing chapter entitled "Cultural Good Will." At least that's how I read him. It is the petit-bourgeois's earnest attempt to attain cultural capital, but will always be judged infeior in relation to the high brow elite.

The culture of the popular classes has virtually no value for Bourdieu either. It simply reflects a deep cultural deprivation. It is a taste based on preferring what is after all only a fulfillment of basic necessities.

Bourdieu is no relativist: he doesn't think that popular or mass culture is as good or as valuable as "high culture." But the latter is tainted by its social role as marker of cultural prestige and its denial of pleasure. Bourdieu analyzes all this quite brilliantly, but I find little comfort in him...

Please correct me if I'm wrong, those who have studied this in more depth than I have...

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

↑ Index

185. eric gleason
Re: demographic query
Thu 14 Oct 1999

I'll get more specific. I'm looking at a possible move to Memphis. What goes poetically there?

-e

--- "Lowther, John" <[redacted]>
wrote:
> at times i've been interested to see the country by > country numerical > listing of poetix listees
>
> but i wonder if it might be possible to zero in on > states or regions and > plot the distribution along those lines
>
> more for curiousity than any other reason
>
> but i'd love to know how many listees there are in
>
> florida
> geogia
> south carolina
> north carolina
> virgina
> alabama
> louisianna
> tennesee
> mississippi
>
> that is, the south (did i forget any states ?)
>

=====

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

186. miekal and
new URL for semetrix
Thu 14 Oct 1999

S E M E T R I X by mIEKAL aND & Maria Damon

:9 x 9 x 6 hypertextual -eme grid
:component speech
:broken language
:boustrophedonic dyslexia

http://net22.com/qazingulaza/hypoeme/semetrix/openframe.html

[not recommended for frames challenged browsers]

↑ Index

187. Mark Prejsnar
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Thu 14 Oct 1999

"I doubt Dobyns would view his own poetry's importance in the way it articulates new perspectives or generates innovative formal and cognitive structures -- there might be other terms he would use -- so the fact that his work _doesn't_ do that is of no consequence. None."

****

Wrong. Dead wrong. As a reader of poetry (and therefore as a critic as well), it's my right AND (to wax civic here a bit) my duty, to decide what is important in poetry.

S. Dobyns and all others, have in turn the right to dismiss the criteria i believe in..... But, no, i don't believe that a critic like Beach should ask "does Dobyns accomplish what he sets out to do" ? (or rather, he shouldn't make that his main concern, as implied in the quote above..It will usually be one factor that needs discussing) Part of what Beach should be doing is: articulating a set of framing arguments regarding what he thinks poetry ought to be doing.....And judging Dobyns accordingly. The critic's task is to think, not just render passive evaluation on execution, defering to rules laid down by the poet...

mark prejsnar @lanta

↑ Index

188. miekal and
Re: demographic query
Thu 14 Oct 1999

---

not to mention the virtually adjacent Autonomous Freestate of Zaumnaya, 42 degrees Lat N.

Rasputin Zukofsky
projectivist heretic

Zaum in the Age of Electronic Huts
http://net22.com/qazingulaza/zaum.html

pete spence wrote:

> that is, the south (did i forget any states ?)
>
> what about the SOUTH ZAUMIST PROTECTORITE whyche i'm LIT Minister of!!
> pete
> spence
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

189. Katherine Lederer
October 16: MATT ROHRER and EDMUND BERRIGAN NYC
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Segue @ Double Happiness:

October 16: MATT ROHRER and EDMUND BERRIGAN

MATT ROHRER grew up on Oklahoma.
He is the author of A Hummock in the Malookas (W.W. Norton) and is one of the poetry editors for Fence.

EDDIE BERRIGAN is the author of Disarming Matter (Owl Press, 1999).
He edits LOG Magazine (with Noel Black), and is currently at work putting together a volume of the late Steve Carey's poetry.

This Saturday from 4:00 to 6:00 pm.
(Double Happiness is located at 173 Mott Street,

just south of Broome.
A 4$ contribution goes to the readers.)

↑ Index

190. dan raphael
Lest I remember
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Being pretty much a lurker, though long time on the list, I've been waiting for someone else to speak up about sondheim's all too often "poetry" posting to this list. It seems he just views this list as a place to post whatever comes off his typewriter. is there any way to say, just one a week a week, or, allan spend a little time with the poem/work before springing onto the hundreds of readers of this list.

dan raphael

↑ Index

191. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Tom Phillips refs.
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Sorry to post to the list at large, but my backchannel response got zapped. Alan, could you please contact me about this McCaffery piece? Thanks. Patrick Pritchett [redacted]

↑ Index

192. David Kirschenbaum
Booglit 6: The Kerouac issue, NYC Pub. Party w/David Amram & more
Thu 14 Oct 1999

Safe in Heaven Dead: Booglit Remembers Jack Kerouac

Monday October 25, 1999, 8:00p.m. sharp Oasis Lounge 21 St. Mark’s Place (1st-A)
New York City

Booglit 6: The Kerouac issue, publication party with special guest David Amram legendary musician and Kerouac collaborator and performances by Mark Fisher, Eliot Katz, Wendy Kramer, Eero Ruutilla,

Herschel Silverman, Dan Shot, Maryclaire Wellinger,
Ian Wilder, and Kimberly Wilder

Hosted by Booglit editor David A. Kirschenbaum

For more info: [redacted] email: [redacted]

Directions: R to 8th Street, 6th to Astor Place or L to 1st Avenue. Venue on left. No cover. Followed by house jazz band.

Issues available for $10 ppd to list members ($5 of which goes to Lowell Celebrates Kerouac! a nonprofit community group):

Checks payable to:

Booglit
351 W.24th St. Suite 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510

as ever,
David

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

193. Mopehaus Productions
EX
Fri 15 Oct 1999

"EX" a multimedia performance

music by Mike Higgins words & video by Jason Brooks choreography by Michelle Fenner

October 20, 1999
8pm
St. Mary's Church (3912 Locust Walk)
Philadelphia

"EX" will be a kind of sensory overload rooted in the revolution fantasies of the Romantics with some help from Dole Pineapple, William Blake, and manically depressed Arab emigrates. Yes, yes, sexy indeed...

MIKE HIGGINS is a composer from Liverpool (UK) and is very much into Pierre Boulez and Thomas Bernhard. His work is usually very minimal and can span up to 20 hours. Is he avant garde? Well, what does that mean anyway?

JASON BROOKS is a poet and Philadelphia native. He used to write pornographic punk-type stuff, but doesn't do that anymore. Some of his work will be published by Head Hunter Press's "Lambs for the Sacrifice Anthology" this winter.

MICHELLE FENNER is from San Francisco and is the newest member of Temple University's graduate Dance Program. She has toured the US and Europe with various companies. She is also a master (or is it mistress ?) of improvisation.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

194. pete spence

Re: an informal survey

Fri 15 Oct 1999

> I am interested in a how people actually read books of poetry, >
> Jonathan Mayhew
> [redacted]
>
> i read chris mann from the back o' the bookie to the front, whyche is in > fact the order they were writ//pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

195. pete spence

Re: The POETRY INTO FILM Competition

Fri 15 Oct 1999

>
>pete,
>
> any information on obtaining rea's work would be appreciated. I >became interested in her work after seeing the vector poems in _Point of >View_ and translating her brief piece in _sic >(http://www.sicmagazine.com). Yes, I think you should send your films >in even if they won't understand it.
>
>tom bell
>

tom just look in the sackner archive of visual poetry webb site good listing of both rea's and serge's work also i think michael and has published a couple of books of their work,, now they both live in germany its easier to contact them whyche means i can get back to where i left off!!! re the films tho they are on super 8 and are the camera copy i never could afford to get a print of 'em///pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

196. Tisa Bryant
Re: singing the holes in history
Fri 15 Oct 1999

I concur!
I bought the book about six weeks ago or more, and it is quite an important work.

> A few weeks ago Hank Lazer mentioned Paul Naylor's book _Singing the Holes in History_(Northwestern University Press). I want to recommend it also. The author, Paul Naylor, gives interesting readings of Susan Howe, Nathaniel Mackey, Lyn Hejinian, Kamau Brathwaite and M. Nourbese Phillip

****
Today we declare:
First, they are living in a Nono form;
Second, they are Nono lives;
Third, they make us feel Nono;
Fourth, they make us become Nono;
Fifth, we Nono.
Lan Ma
"Manifesto of Nonoism"
(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
****

↑ Index

197. Mark Prejsnar
Re: singing the holes in history
Fri 15 Oct 1999

re Paul Naylor's Poetic investigations:

I have read so far the intro and the 1st chapter (on Howe); a very interesting book--it seems a little quaint to me: Naylor, who (like your trusty correspondent) strongly identifies with active left political engagement, makes that political viewpoint the main organizing strand of his book . (Unlike moi, he follows the current fashion of dismissing most of the long tradition of socialism, embracing in its stead the political theories of Mouffe and Leclau..) His strong adherence to a serious leftism causes him to actually start each discussion (in what i've read so far) with a rather defensive explanation that yes the work of these poets is very dense and impenetrable, and appears to be solipsistic and opaque, but he will show how it is actually good writing characterized by a responsible social and political engagement... Thus, he (more or less consciously) piches his analysis in the key of your "activist in the street" who has an automatic reflex action of vulgar zhdanovist horror, when confronted with contemporary writing.... Since as an activist i've hung out with such people all my life, i see the utility in this, i guess.. But this rather hectic way of starting each analysis with an acknowledgment of the supposed "difficulty" of our finest contemporary poets strikes me as...well, quaint. Anyone interested enuff to be reading Naylor is probably also bright enuff to begin grappling with real poetry by herself.. In some respects we should be past the point of having to apologize for good writing..

(More substantively: the intro seems OK, though not earth-shaking...but the chapter on Howe says little new, it seems to me: the way in which she builds her work around the voices of the dispossessed of history, has already been much commented on, by her and by many others..)

This is not to dismiss Tom's point: it seems a mildly valuble book; & highly visible discussions of our best contemporary poets, are to be encouraged, especially from university presses, who are usually so firm in their across-the-board commitment to dreck

mark prejsnar

On Wed, 13 Oct 1999, Tom Beckett wrote:

> A few weeks ago Hank Lazer mentioned Paul Naylor's book _Singing the Holes in History_(Northwestern University Press). I want to recommend it also. The author, Paul Naylor, gives interesting readings of Susan Howe, Nathaniel Mackey, Lyn Hejinian, Kamau Brathwaite and M. Nourbese Phillip

↑ Index

198. Jordan Davis
"pensare"
Fri 15 Oct 1999

> The critic's task is to think, not just render passive > evaluation on execution, defering to rules laid down by the poet...

And "to think" means what, nowadays? Eliot liked to say D.H. Lawrence could not be accused of thinking, of having a thought; I guess he thought Lawrence's mental activity was mere will to organize sense impressions or politico-sexual platforms? In any case Mark's view of the critic as prescriptive sounds like a good possibility for criticism but we gotta read miranda rights to the article he uses -- as long as we're on the "A POETICS" list -- now over on the B+ POETICS list it's another story.

But Mark, what about the possibility of a genuinely sociological criticism, anthropological even, investigating the set of beliefs (manners, fetishes, however you want to label the learned-behavior) in the background of the work? Like, to know that Hopkins and Merce Cunningham were in Olson's head as much as the more obvious influences of Pound Yeats and WCW. And to know about where he grew up, and what his politics were, and what rules he was laying down -- so that we don't have to judge him by, say, Edwardian, or high modernist standards?

Just some, em, ur, thoughts?
Jordan

↑ Index

199. A H Bramhall
up with down!
Fri 15 Oct 1999

Dan Raphael expressed this to the list, neglecting to capitalize his name properly, which I hate and hope something can be done about but I'll overlook because he's onto a major issue here:

"I've been waiting for someone else to speak up about sondheim's all too often "poetry" posting to this list. It seems he just views this list as a place to post whatever comes off his typewriter."

right on with the censorship idea! we can't let this list become prey to those who wish to post to it. we are caught up all the time with stuff, gobs of stuff. we need less stuff. we need to cut back. the heretics are ruining the garden, everything is so bad. I'm being oppressed. there are children everywhere. people are talking. it was really rainy yesterday. I can't take it anymore. Alan Sondheim keeps writing stuff, and it's not "real" poetry. it's stuff that just came off his typewriter, as opposed to the other kind. what right does he have? let us band together, I mean it, and demand that Alan stop posting stuff from his typewriter because if he doesn't we're going to have to learn how to use the delete button, and I for one am much too busy for that.

yours with an urgent sense of a vast problem, yet one, I think, that we can lick, if we just, like, you know, whatever. Allen

↑ Index

200. David Kellogg
Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Fri 15 Oct 1999

> I wrote (gruffly, and probably too stridently):

> "The difficulty here is that it sets up the game in favor of the > experimentalist. I doubt Dobyns would view his own poetry's importance in > the way it articulates new perspectives or generates innovative formal and > cognitive structures -- there might be other terms he would use -- so the > fact that his work _doesn't_ do that is of no consequence. None. Nor do > these criteria make any headway into understanding what readers actually > _do_ with Dobyns, which as far as I could tell Beach couldn't care less > about. Certainly the article in Contemporary Literature, on which I assume > this chapter is based, provided no such analysis. Perhaps the values of > Dobyns's audience are not Beach's -- given that possibility, it is at least > worth asking what people who _do_ get something out of it get.
> I'm no fan of Stephen Dobyns. But Beach's article is not cultural > criticism or literary sociology."

> To which John Lowther responded :
>
> i'm toeing into unknown waters here
> as i have not, as yet read the book
> but to the above i wd like to ask one question
>
> david, are you actually "behind" the notion
> that it is only sympathetic readers of dobyns
> *that only their use of said poet is worthwhile*
> is "of consequence" ?

I'm not sure I understand the question. I _do_ think that Beach's analysis is dismissive of the real issue of audience. In fact, his analysis of Dobyns's audience is wholly dismissive: it is a "built-in academic audience of more than three hundred creative writing programs" (59). While a few gestures are made toward what reviewers have to say about Dobyns, or more often what they do not say: "reviewers seldom speak about his use of form, if they mention it at all."
(61)

What unsympathetic readers might do with Dobyns -- or other mainstream poets -- is an interesting sociological question. I imagine the anti-mainstream focus of much alternative poetics could be the subject of a pretty cool study. But that's not what Beach examines; rather, it's what he exemplifies.

> now, i grant, immediately, that in a sociology
> of anything one wd want to have this "inside"
> view of the dobyns' lovin poetry public
> (i'm somewhat curious as to why they do like him myself)
>
> but, do we believe that bourdieu (or anyone) can
> in fact, step outside of their slurs, preconceptions etc
> sufficiently to provide the analysis that you seem > to be calling beach to task for ?

Not a total analysis, no. But there could be a variety of ways of getting closer -- surveys of workshop participants, close analysis of the terms of positive reviews without snide dismissals of those same reviews, etc.

> again, forgive if my comments arent to the point
> as i have not read this book, i simply wonder
> at the implications in some of this
>
> for instance, if bourdieu only makes an appearance
> in footnotes perhaps holding beach to the yardstick
> of him isnt' quite appropriate ?

It' much more than footnotes. It's in the introduction, it's all over Chapter 2.

> perhaps
> that is "of no consequence" as it doesnt address itself
> to what the book _does_ for those who've
> found it interesting and an OK introduction to > slices of the poetic pie that they might not otherwise
> come upon (as it seem to have for mark p > in relation to the slam stuff) ??

I presented my view of Beach's article pretty harshly, more harshly than I would put it in a professional review. In view of the crap that'sout there posing as poetry criticism, Beach's work is a positive good -- in fact, I think from my cursory reading that the slam stuff is excellent.

Cheers,
David

David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

201. David Kellogg
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Fri 15 Oct 1999

"Lowther, John" wrote:

> well, i already questioned whether this
> seeming objectivity cd be attained, but
> just now i'm wondering about why exactly
> the attempt to
>
> "understand the work of art in it's reality as a fetish"
>
> isnt swallowed by the proposed economy
> of the literary and artistic field --- and thus
> this understanding of the work of art
> in it's "reality as fetish" yet another things which > would need "find it's place in the model"
>
> arent works of art often fetishized by those
> who also have beliefs of varying sorts about
> art ---- consider gallery owners
> who in some instances cd care less about

> the work but wish to surround it with the aura
> to fetishize it, such that it will sell --- this
> is different certainly, but how different ?
>
> perhaps i am not clear on bourdieu's use > of the word "fetish" ?

Excellent question. Bourdieu's notion of the "fetish" owes a lot to Marx, natch, but also plugs in to his own concept of a "circle of belief," in this case the "believers" in poetry or those who benefit from that belief. (Literary critics, for example.) I don't mean to use PB like a sacred text, but a lot of what you have said here seems well addressed by another passage in the Field of Cultural Production:

"The ideology of creation, which makes the author the first and last source of the value of his work, conceals the fact that the cultural businessman (art dealer, publisher, etc.) is at one in the same time the person who exploits the labor of the "creator" by trading in the "sacred" in the person who, by putting it on the market, by exhibiting, publishing or staging it, consecrates a product which he has "discovered" and which would otherwise remain in your natural resources; and more consecrated he personally is, the more strongly consecrates the work. The art trader is not just the agent who gives the work a commercial value by bringing it into a market; he is not just the representative, the impresario, who "defends the authors he loves." He is the person who can proclaim the value of the author he defends (cf. the fiction of the catalogue or blurb) and above all "invests his prestige" in the author's cause, acting as a "symbolic banker" who offers as security although symbolic capital he has accumulated (which he is liable to forfeit if he backs a "loser"). This investment, of which the accompanying "economic" investments are themselves only a guarantee, is what brings the producer into the cycle of consecration. Entering the field of literature is not so much like going into religion as getting into a select club: the publisher is one of those prestigious sponsors (together with preface-writers and critics) who effusively recommend their candidate. Even clearer is the role of the art dealer, who literally has to "introduce" the artist and his work into ever more select company (group exhibitions, one-man shows, prestigious collections, museums) and ever more sought-after places. But the law of this universe, whereby the less invisible the investment, the more productive it is symbolically, means that promotion exercises, which in the business world take the overt form of publicity, must here me euphemized. The art trader cannot serve his "discovery" unless he applies all his conviction, which rules out "sordidly commercial" maneuvers, manipulation and the "hard sell," in favor of the softer, more discreet forms of "public relations" (which are themselves a highly euphemized form of publicity) -- receptions, society gatherings, and judiciously placed confidences." (76-7).

David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

202. K.Angelo Hehir
the press
Fri 15 Oct 1999

hi folks,

i see a Gestetner 360 printer in the paper and will go and have a look at it tomorrow. can anyone help me out with things to look for. are materials available still? the fellow on the phone says that he has extra roles and paper and stuff for colour printing. the paper says 200$, is this good(in canadian funds of course).

any help will be appreciated.

thanks,
kevin

↑ Index

203. David Kellogg
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Fri 15 Oct 1999

Mark Prejsnar wrote:

> "I doubt Dobyns would view his own poetry's importance in the way it articulates new perspectives or generates innovative formal and cognitive structures -- there might be other terms he would use -- so the fact that his work _doesn't_ do that is of no consequence. None."
>
> **********
>
> Wrong. Dead wrong. As a reader of poetry (and therefore as a critic as well), it's my right AND (to wax civic here a bit) my duty, to decide what is important in poetry.

Well, sure. Everybody does that already. And insofar as Beach proclaims his own differences with Dobyns, I have no problem with his readings. It's when Beach substitutes "the reader" or "we" for his own voice and basically erases the difference between a close reading and a sociological engagement that I find

> S. Dobyns and all others, have in turn the right to dismiss the criteria i believe in..... But, no, i don't believe that a critic like Beach should ask "does Dobyns accomplish what he sets out to do" ? (or rather, he shouldn't make that his main concern, as implied in the quote above..It will usually be one factor that needs discussing)

Why not? Since he frames his work as, in part, a literary sociology: a work that addresses "literary production and reception," that "attempts to provide some kind of comprehensive or analytical study of poetry as a sociocultural phenomenon." Yet the reception of Dobyns is of no concern to Beach.

> Part of what Beach > should* be doing is: articulating a set of framing arguments regarding what he thinks poetry ought to be doing.....And judging Dobyns accordingly. The critic's task is to think, not just render passive evaluation on execution, defering to rules laid down by the poet...*

That's a false dichotomy: "framing arguments regarding what he thinks poetry ought to be doing" versus "just render[ing] passive evaluation on execution, defer[r]ing to rules laid down by the poet." In fact, I contributed to that false dichotomy by framing the "consequence" of Beach's position in terms of what Dobyns thinks. More properly, what Dobyns's readers _do_ with Dobyns is the (sociological) point at issue.

Mark, why do you lay down the "critic's task" in such prescriptive terms? If Beach wants to act as a critic in the terms you're laying out, fine -- but it's the way criticism (aesthetics) _always_ trumps sociology in this chapter -- the way sociology is just an excuse for another close reading -- that gets me.

David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

204. Patrick Herron
Re: Lest I remember
Fri 15 Oct 1999

Using your delete key is an option you may wish to exercise if you don't like what someone shares.

Some of us enjoy Alan's writing and his zeal at least enough not to want to insult him publicly or discourage others who may wish to be just as enthusiastic about their own writings. As in all things (the wisdom of post-crit?) it's all just a matter of taste.

Maybe more people could post their own writing to the list.

Maybe less people would advertise their pubs with the typical roll calls of names of writers.

Again, a matter of taste.

But then again this is a moderated list, so maybe my opined gape means little.

Patrick "can't we all just get along" Herron
"a matter of taste"
"anarchopoesis"
"why must we aspire to distal puppeteering"
"thanks for youer response!"
"blame, shame, lame, fame"

Being pretty much a lurker, though long time on the list, I've been waiting for someone else to speak up about sondheim's all too often "poetry" posting to this list. It seems he just views this list as a place to post whatever comes off his typewriter. is there any way to say, just one a week a week, or, allan spend a little time with the poem/work before springing onto the hundreds of readers of this list.

dan raphael

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

205. charssmith
Re: Tom Phillips refs.
Fri 15 Oct 1999

The Phillips site has moved a few times. There are several essays & RealAudio files of TP reading. It's now at:

http://www.humument.com

--cs

<< A couple of short ones: Steve McCaffery has a very brief discussion of Phillips in his essay "The Scandal of Sincerity: Towards a Levinasian Poetics," Pretexts: Studies in Writing and Culture 6.2 (1997): 167-190. In a note he cites a web site that apparently has Phillips material so maybe that'll be helpful: www.wolfenet.com/duchamp/ >>

↑ Index

206. K.Silem Mohammad

Re: Lest I remember (Sondheim posts)

Fri 15 Oct 1999

Dan Raphael wrote:

> Being pretty much a lurker, though long time on the list, I've been waiting for someone else to speak up about sondheim's all too often "poetry" posting to this list. It seems he just views this list as a place to post whatever comes off his typewriter. is there any way to say, just one a week a week, or, allan spend a little time with the poem/work before springing onto the hundreds of readers of this list.
>
> dan raphael

NO NO NO!

I, though also largely a lurker, view Sondheim's posts as an integral and indispensable pattern of fabric in the overall weave of this list. To a considerable (though of course partial) degree, they _are_ the list. Any legislation imposed on this generously continual contribution would be destructive and wrong-headed, in my opinion. I'd feel this way even if I felt that there _were_ some truth to the claim that these posts were sometimes just "whatever comes off [Sondheim's] typewriter." That this claim seems to me to be perverse only intensifies my feeling.

Of course it's important to exercise discretion in keeping the list at some sort of manageable economy, but does this economy really necessitate the curtailment of what has become a distinguishing mark of the list's _character_ (and if I here seem to invoke a concept that is for some uncomfortably akin to notions of "voice," "invidiuality," etc., oh well!)?

I hereby cast my vote for more uncensored, straight-from-the-source, Jennifer meatgirl cancer error message text daily.

Kasey

K. Silem Mohammad
Santa Cruz, California
[redacted]
OR [redacted]

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

207. Michael Magee
Re: Do you trade?
Fri 15 Oct 1999

David, I've been trying to stop trading b/c I do a fairly small run and have been trading myself right out of stock lately. But I like the stuff you do at Boog. You wanna give me some abbreviated list of titles and I'll pick a couple things to swap you for? Let me know. -Mike.

According to David Kirschenbaum: > > Michael-Grabbed a combo at Granary books moving sale, nice stuff. Do you > trade?
> as ever,
> David Kirschenbaum, editor
> Boog Literature
> (formalities upon introduction only)
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>

↑ Index

208. Katherine Lederer
Brian Lennon
Fri 15 Oct 1999

Does anyone have Brian Lennon's E-mail address?

Thanks,
Katy Lederer

↑ Index

209. Peter Fogarty
Re: Lest I remember
Fri 15 Oct 1999

Without wanting to start throwing petrol cans about,

> Being pretty much a lurker, though long time on the list, I've been waiting > for someone else to speak up about sondheim's all too often "poetry"
posting
> to this list. It seems he just views this list as a place to post whatever > comes off his typewriter.

Isn't that the exact thing we do here; this list is a place to post whatever comes off our typewriters, be it this very post, a notice that poetry readings are being held in a city on the other side of the planet, a work of poetry/poetics, or critical commentary? I don't know how long Sondheim sits on his work before he sends it to this list, but it is part of a greater whole, as I'm sure you'd have seen from his periodic notices. I must admit that very often it is incomprehensible, and that is an utterly refreshing change from the thousands of comprehensible posts which make their fleeting appearances in my filters and end up written over when I empty my trash. Sondheim is one of the few people whose work I keep: looking at my poetics inbox, AH Bramhall, John Lowther, Miekal And, David Bromige, Ron Silliman dominate amongst the other men and women of this list for the frequency of appearance of their names. As a lurker, you've only just revealed your presence, and you do so with a criticism, as did I, I must admit. I don't know, it just seems facile to criticise someone for posting whatever comes off their typewriter. This just came off my own typewriter sparks crackle into auditory nerve; sound explodes with its signature before the implant melts; a bubbling of skin, boiling of eye, searing mind filled with human stati; I splash amidst rioting flagellants with eyes ecstastic rebellion against dead lines scatter shot through you, scroll arcing lamplight ignites acrid fuel clotted around the hairs on my body like sand about a pier pole. hairs erect and shrivel evaporate in the rinsin haze. my eyes feel warm and I glow with danger. a torch song on my auditory piano, but here, here! hear! no longer. my ear tickles as magnet melts sight vanishes, primal unmodified silence comes home for the last time mecury runs down my skull, I lose feeling in my feet, my nostrils smell pork roast. penis stands proud. we who are about to die, salute you. survivor! ghosts in the mists rushing panic down grimed synapse service corridors high in the quietness, my nerves shut down auxiliary centers. to cartesian theatre I retreat. in haste dead line readjust! readjust! course correc . . .

[#%$^string decrypted&}

{!decrypt ended&%@]
endobj
7 0 obj
<<
/Im0 11 0 R
/Im1 12 0 R
>>
endobj
6 0 obj
<<
/Length 39490

>>
stream

it's at http://mutate.co.nz/ if anyone wants to know, view source. should I sit here for a while longer before I posted it? I don't know, that's at my discretion, isn't it?

It's a beautiful day outside so I'll just go out and take some panacea from nature. Just one more thing I would like to say: on a poetics list, why is there not more poetics and poetry? The event reviews, the event notices, the book reviews and commentary are excellent, but where's the poetics? I'm too nervous to post my own for the very reason that it has just come off my typewriter and I need to reflect on what I just said before I decide it is worthy. That's a personal thing. Alan clearly thinks his work is worthy of distribution, who is to say he hasn't thought about it before hitting send? and I hit send.

↑ Index

210. Karen Kelley
Re: Lest I remember
Fri 15 Oct 1999

I like it. I like seeing it whenever he's ready to show it.

> From: dan raphael <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Lest I remember
> Date: Thursday, October 14, 1999 4:28 PM
>
> Being pretty much a lurker, though long time on the list, I've been waiting > for someone else to speak up about sondheim's all too often "poetry"
posting
> to this list. It seems he just views this list as a place to post whatever > comes off his typewriter.
> is there any way to say, just one a week a week, or, allan spend a little > time with the poem/work before springing onto the hundreds of readers of > this list.
>
> dan raphael

↑ Index

211. George Fouhy
Poetry & Open Mike!
Sat 16 Oct 1999

This is a guaranteed excellent poetry reading!! Don't miss it!

Northern Westchester Center For The Arts
Creative Arts Café Poetry Series
272 N. Bedford Road Mt. Kisco, NY
For information call: [redacted]

For immediate release:

Poet RON PRICE at Creative Arts Café Poetry Series
followed by OPEN MIKE

Mt. Kisco, NY: The Creative Arts Café Poetry Series at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts continues its weekly poetry readings and open mike Monday, October 18th with poet Ron Price who is currently an artist/teacher in residence at the Juilliard School of Performing Arts in New York City. The reading begins at 7:30 PM and is followed by a reception, book signing and an open mike for audience participation.

Ron Price is an award winning poet and translator and the author of Surviving Brothers. He is a founding member of the Free Peoples Poetry Workshop in Memphis and in Philadelphia. He was a teaching fellow for Writing Across the Curriculum and has taught through Poets in the Schools, Poets in the Parks and Poets in Prisons. Ron Price currently is a Poet/teacher in residence at the Juilliard School of Performing Arts and teaches poetry writing at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts.

There is a reception and book signing following the reading. The audience is invited to read original poetry or favorite poems at the Open Mike.

There is a suggested donation (not required!) of $7.00 at the door; $5.00 for students and seniors.

This series is sponsored, in part, by the New York State Council on the Arts, the Bydale Foundation and private funds.

The Creative Arts Café Poetry Series meets every Monday night at 7:30 at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts located at 272 N. Bedford Road in Mt. Kisco. Easily accessible by railroad from NYC: Harlem Line (Brewster North) to Mt. Kisco Station. From station, cab is $3.00 - 3 minutes to art center! For a schedule of readings and literary Arts workshops and classes or directions to NWCA, please call [redacted].

<!doctype html public "-//w3c//dtd html 4.0 transitional//en">
<html>
This is a guaranteed excellent poetry reading!! Don't miss it!

Northern Westchester Center For The Arts

Creative Arts Café Poetry Series

272 N. Bedford Road Mt. Kisco, NY

For information call: [redacted]
For immediate release:

Poet RON PRICE at Creative Arts Café Poetry Series

followed by OPEN MIKE

Mt. Kisco, NY: The Creative Arts Café Poetry Series at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts continues its weekly poetry readings and open mike Monday, October 18th with poet Ron Price who is currently an artist/teacher in residence at the Juilliard School of Performing Arts in New York City. The reading begins at 7:30 PM and is followed by a reception, book signing and an open mike for audience participation.
Ron Price is an award winning poet and translator and the author of Surviving Brothers. He is a founding member of the Free Peoples Poetry Workshop in Memphis and in Philadelphia. He was a teaching fellow for Writing Across the Curriculum and has taught through Poets in the Schools, Poets in the Parks and Poets in Prisons. Ron Price currently is a Poet/teacher in residence at the Juilliard School of Performing Arts and teaches poetry writing at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts. There is a reception and book signing following the reading. The audience is invited to read original poetry or favorite poems at the Open Mike. There is a suggested donation (not required!) of $7.00 at the door; $5.00 for students and seniors.
This series is sponsored, in part, by the New York State Council on the Arts, the Bydale Foundation and private funds. The Creative Arts Café Poetry Series meets every Monday night at 7:30 at the Northern Westchester Center for the Arts located at 272 N. Bedford Road in Mt. Kisco. Easily accessible by railroad from NYC: Harlem Line (Brewster North) to Mt. Kisco Station. From station, cab is $3.00 - 3 minutes to art center! For a schedule of readings and literary Arts workshops and classes or directions to NWCA, please call [redacted].

 </html>

----------30D65673680E401E971CF1E3--

↑ Index

212. juliana spahr
dobyns v. hejinian
Sat 16 Oct 1999

It seems that both Dobyns and Hejinian sell more or less similarly in poetry sales (which I think might complicate the marginal v. mainstream set up).

Dobyns Velocities: New and Selected Poems sold 9,421 copies as of August of 1999 (a single title such as Dobyn's Body Traffic sold 3,066); Hejinian's My Life has sold around 8,000 copies as of September 1999 (Sun & Moon edition only; Burning Deck edition sold out but I don't know the print run on that). I don't have stats on other Hejinian titles but imagine they are less.

Although one thing to consider is that Dobyns's Velocities was published in 1994. Hejinian has accumulated those sales over a much a longer time. It might take some more time to actually straighten out the sales similarities. Who knows though if Velocities will get the long term spread of sales that My Life has.

Still seems like an interesting similarity considering the muscle of Penguin v. Sun & Moon and also there must be significant spin off sales b/c of Dobyns's other writings that make his poetry sell better. (He seems to be the best selling Penguin poet.)

Lisa Samuels has an article written shortly after (it seems) Beach's where she complains about the canonization of My Life in MLS.

I'm looking forward to reading the Beach.

↑ Index

213. Mark DuCharme
Re: demographic query
Sat 16 Oct 1999

John Lowther wrote:

> at times i've been interested to see the country by country numerical listing of poetix listees
>
> but i wonder if it might be possible to zero in on states or regions and plot the distribution along those lines

> more for curiousity than any other reason
>
> but i'd love to know how many listees there are in
>
> florida
> geogia
> south carolina
> north carolina
> virgina
> alabama
> louisianna
> tennesee
> mississippi
>
> that is, the south (did i forget any states ?)

pete spece wrote:

> what about the SOUTH ZAUMIST PROTECTORITE whyche i'm LIT Minister of!!
> pete
> spence

Mark DuCharme writes:

...& while we're being regionalist, what about per-capita List subscription by city or Metropolitan area? (Boulder, the poetry scene/city which I inhabit, comes to mind, but there are plenty of others: SF, NY, Lawrence KS, Philly, etc., etc.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

214. Dirk Rowntree
Re: Lest I remember
Sat 16 Oct 1999

I disagree with Dad Raphael when he writes that Allan Sondheim posts to the list “too often”. A discussion of this topic will perhaps go the core function or definition of the list's objectives, which could be interesting.

Sondhiem’s postings can be interesting to highly engaging on an individual basis and, on a broader more conceptual basis, bring up implications for the use of the list or for the use of the internet that have a good bit of vitality and relevance.

I certainly discourage any attempt by the list oversight people to censor or control this type of posting activity.

Dirk Rowntree

↑ Index

215. Dean Creighton
The Blue Bottle Project
Sun 17 Oct 1999

The Blue Bottle Project

http://smilingdogpress.tripod.com/index.htm

Please forward this message at will and whim.

↑ Index

216. Eugene Ostashevsky handmade books sought
Sun 17 Oct 1999

HAND BOOKS

AN EXHIBIT / SALE
OF HANDMADE AND PRIVATELY PRINTED / XEROXED BOOKS,
ONE-OF-A-KIND'S, ZINES AND CHAPBOOKS
TO BE HELD NOVEMBER 6-7 (reception Nov 6)

IS LOOKING FOR SUBMISSIONS

PLEASE DROP YOUR WORK OFF
BEFORE NOVEMBER 3 AT

BLUE BOOKS

THE NEW SMALL PRESS BOOKSTORE
AT NEW COLLEGE

766 VALENCIA AND 19th
415 - 437 - 3494
http://www.newcollege.edu/bluebooks
HAND BOOKS IS CURATED BY DARIN KLEIN
[redacted]

(work exhibited may or may not be for sale if yes, our cut is 40%)

PLEASE FORWARD THIS ANNOUNCEMENT
TO WHOEVER MIGHT BE INTERESTED

↑ Index

217. pete spence
Re: demographic query
Sun 17 Oct 1999

>not to mention the virtually adjacent Autonomous Freestate of Zaumnaya, >42 degrees Lat N.
>
>Rasputin Zukofsky
>projectivist heretic
>
>Zaum in the Age of Electronic Huts
>http://net22.com/qazingulaza/zaum.html
>
,,,,nice to see someone with a sense of place
pete spence
ministry of zaum

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

218. Alan Sondheim
gratitude
Mon 18 Oct 1999

---

o

thank you for listening, jennifer
thank you for listening, jennifer

when I talk to you, and I do,
I want to talk with you,
for we have no friends.
I don't want to talk at you, and I do,
because I talk to you, and the whole of the world listens.
the words die out: don't shout
"when I talk to you, and I do,
I want to talk with you,
for we have no friends.
I don't want to talk at you, and I do,
because I talk to you, and the whole
of the world listens.
the words die out, don't shout."

↑ Index

219. Daniel Carter

"seasonally" undulant little invite: writing group (email list: crosscurrentseas: http://crosscurrentseas.listbot.com/ (check out archives))

Mon 18 Oct 1999

{ }

riddle announcement here:

"we" got a new though now not so new though still relatively new tracing/marking/re-marking/lacing/stitching/collaging/interpolating/intertexting/ weaving/knitting/sewing/sowing/disseminating/writing list here that "we" started, could be that you started it too, so "we" might well be "you" too (U-2?). it's basically an anarkisstic, chaos, free-associational, collaborative, type type thing, like a group o' folks (though right now the the number of members relatively small, about 50 or so) playing/singing music, dancing t' music, together, only we'd be writing together. though there would be no stipulation that anybody had to collaborate. one could write by one's l(onesome) and let everyone see what they came up with or one could do whatever, individually and/or collaboratively with one or more or no others. who knows how it would/could all work out or not?!. right now the list is called "crosscurrentseas", but that could very well be changed to reflect the intuition/vision/desire/dream/imagination/thought/feeling of the group.

http://crosscurrentseas.listbot.com/

--

↑ Index

220. Sylvester Pollet

Bishop Nixs Pound!

Mon 18 Oct 1999

Awhile back I posted an announcement of Ezra Pound's induction into the Poets Corner at St John the so-called Divine in New York scheduled for later this week. Here's the latest news from Tim Redman (I asked permission to forward this):

> I was informed by Omar Pound that Ezra Pound's installation in the Poet's Corner of St. John the Divine has been denied by the bishop. Evidently, a petition was circulated among parishioners protesting the decision by the Electors and threatening a demonstration.

> Tim Redman

Anybody know any cardinals? Sylvester

↑ Index

221. Pattie McCarthy
query : : zukofsky
Mon 18 Oct 1999

hello.
could someone please point me in the direction
of anything written on Zukofsy's 80 Flowers ?
backchannel appreciated
& thanks very much in advance.
--Pattie McCarthy

↑ Index

222. Maria Damon
ashbery query
Mon 18 Oct 1999

hi all; a colleague who's using a few lines from The Waves as an epigraph wants to know about critical work on in. i can't think of anything; can you?

↑ Index

223. Lawrence Upton
from Jennifer Ley
Mon 18 Oct 1999

The new issue of Riding the Meridian
Sound/Text Hypertext Text/Text
is now online at: http://www.heelstone.com/meridian

The Sound/Text Hypertext Text/Text issue of Riding the Meridian was conceived to demonstrate just how much the act of being a poet has been influenced by the Internet in terms of creating and distributing new literary efforts.

The work some multimedia poets are doing on the Net has strong roots, stretching into the language poetry community -- into the field of early concrete poetry. Alaric Sumner's section on Sound/Text showcases the talents of seminal contributors to those genres, in the work of Bob Cobbing, Lawrence Upton, John Cayley, Caroline Bergvall and Charles Amirkhanian, among others, while Christy Sheffield Sanford and Jennifer Ley have tapped the field of talent in hypermedia, bringing works by writers like Annie Abrahams, M.D. Coverley and Stephanie Strickland, Deena Larsen and Talan Memmott to show the spectrum of work being created in hypertext. Mark Bernstein, president and chief scientist of Eastgate Systems, Inc., talks about the early days of hypertext and the software he wrote to create it, Storyspace.

And, as the talents of pure text poets should not be seen to be overshadowed by this internet explosion of visuals and sounds, we've collected a group of text works highlighted by a selection of poems by David Weinstock from his new collection, Physical Findings. CK Tower has interviewed Alan Kaufman to gain insight into the current Spoken Word phenomenon and Chocolate Waters has brought us Realaudio by New York Spoken Word poet, Mark Larsen.

Sound/Text - Editor, Alaric Sumner

Creative work by:

Charles Amirkhanian
miekal and
Michael Basinski
Caroline Bergvall and John Cayley cris cheek
Bob Cobbing
Joseph Hyde
Tony Kemplen
Wendy Kramer
Carlyle Reedy
Lawrence Upton

Articles by cris cheek, Petra Kuppers, Alaric Sumner, Lawrence Upton

Domestic Ambient Buoys (Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton) in discussion with Alaric Sumner

---

Hypertext and Hypermedia - Co-Curator, Christy Sheffield Sanford

Creative work by:

Annie Abrahams
Diane Caney
M.D. Coverley and Stephanie Strickland
Deena Larsen
Talan Memmott
Reiner Strasser
Dan Waber
geniwate

Articles by miekal and, M.D. Coverley

Interview with Mark Bernstein, Eastgate Systems, Inc.

Roundtable discussion with Robert Kendall, Sue Thomas, Ian Irvine, Alaric Sumner, Christy Sheffield Sanford

_____

Text Poetry

Creative Work by:

Janet I. Buck
CE Chaffin
Claire Dinsmore
Lou Faber
Larry Mallory
Ken Pobo
Barry Spacks
James Valvis
David Weinstock

Articles by Lily Iona MacKenzie, David Weinstock

Spoken Word

Word for Word: Alan Kaufman interviewed by CK Tower
In the Flesh: Spoken Word Poet: Mark Larsen by Chocolate Waters

***

editorial contact, Jennifer Ley - [redacted]

Next issue: Women and Gender, February 2000, in collaboration with Conspire

***

Please excuse any cross-postings if you are on several poetry mailing lists. If you receive this announcement as a personal message and wish to be taken off our distribution list, please let us know.
--
Riding the Meridian,
Sound/Text Hypertext Text/Text
guest editor Alaric Sumner, co-curator Christy Sheffield Sanford http://www.heelstone.com/meridian/

↑ Index

224. Daniel Kane hoa nguyen writing exercise
Mon 18 Oct 1999

---

to check out hoa's latest poetry writing exercise on WriteNet, go to http://www.twc.org/forums/hnguyen_exercise12.html

For an index of all the exercises she's put up over the years, go to

http://www.writenet.org/virtualpoetrywrkshp.html

↑ Index

225. Taylor Brady
E-mail for Kristin Prevallet
Mon 18 Oct 1999

Could someone out there please b-c with this? Thanks.

Taylor Brady

↑ Index

226. Dana Lustig
Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Mon 18 Oct 1999

David:

Thanks for the tip. I did contact Mary Ann Caws, and she briefly replied that she has written about/referenced Phillips in the past. Once I get more details, I'll send out a message to the list for those who are interested. She also told me that she is currently working on another essay about his work, which will be published in an "avant-garde mag" (?), but no other details forthcoming yet...

Dana Lisa

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: Re: Studies or Essays on Tom Phillips
Author: [redacted] at Internet-USA
Date: 10/13/99 4:36 PM

As far as i know Mary Ann Caws up at CUNY has written some essays on Phillips, though i'm not sure where they are located. It's a starting point thought.

David Giles Scott

↑ Index

227. Judy Smith McDonough newest edition of poetrynow online
Mon 18 Oct 1999

hot off the cyberpress:
volume 2 number 1
poetrynow
<http://www.poetrynow.org>

↑ Index

228. Jerrold Shiroma
Small Press Publications Announcements deadline
Mon 18 Oct 1999

The deadline for this week's Small Press Listing @ Duration Press is this Friday. All publishers (of books, journals, etc.) who are interested in having their publications listed should mail all pertinent information--titles, authors, prices, ordering info, contact info, etc.--to [redacted]

↑ Index

229. jocelyn saidenberg
David Buuck and Brian Kim Stefans Reading at Small Press Traffic
Mon 18 Oct 1999

--==========_-1271837713==_ma==========

Small Press Traffic Reading
David Buuck and Brian Kim Stefans
Friday, October 22, 7:30 p.m.

When people ask, what's really new in poetry, we always give a name or two, and one is David Buuck's. His tentative, exacting poetry can be brutal at times; its enveloping structures want to pack the whole world in a suitcase, then fling it away. There is the constant questioning, abasement, loneliness; a concomitant beauty is born. David Buuck lives in San Francisco, where he co-edits Tripwire: a journal of poetics with Yedda Morrison. He is a 1999 Artist-in-Residence at the Headlands Center for the Arts in Marin. His poetry, prose, & essays appear or will appear in Object, Outlet, Torque, Lyric&, h2so4, Impossible Object, 5_Trope, Situation, and a new chapbook from Melodeon. This fall he enters the History of Consciousness Program at UCSC.

This will be Brian Kim Stefans' first reading in San Francisco, and we've been trying for a year to get him here. The formal experimentation that characterized 70s and 80s "Language Poetry" is here, alive and blooming, but with a pop-culture injection of speed, interface, dynamism, wit. Brian Kim Stefans is the author of Free Space Comix (Roof Books, 1998), Gulf (Object Editions, 1998) and co-author (with Sianne Ngai) of The Cosmopolitans ("Interlope," issue 2). His graphic and interactive poetry can be found at www.ubu.com, and the on-line poetry journal he edits, Arras, is at www.bway.net/~arras. Criticism is forthcoming in Talisman. He works as Associate Project Coordinator in the web department at Fodor's Travel. When people ask, what's really new in poetry, we always give a name or two, and one is Brian Kim Stefans'.

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org
--==========_-1271837713==_ma==========

<fontfamily><param>Palatino</param><bigger><bigger>Small Press Traffic Reading

David Buuck and Brian Kim Stefans

Friday, October 22, 7:30 p.m.

When people ask, what's really new in poetry, we always give a name or two, and one is David Buuck's. His tentative, exacting poetry can be brutal at times; its enveloping structures want to pack the whole world in a suitcase, then fling it away. There is the constant questioning, abasement, loneliness; a concomitant beauty is born. David Buuck lives in San Francisco, where he co-edits <italic>Tripwire: a journal of poetics </italic>with Yedda Morrison. He is a 1999 Artist-in-Residence at the Headlands Center for the Arts in Marin. His poetry, prose, & essays appear or will appear in <italic>Object, Outlet, Torque, Lyric&, h2so4, Impossible Object, 5_Trope, Situation,</italic> and a new chapbook from Melodeon. This fall he enters the History of Consciousness Program at UCSC.

This will be Brian Kim Stefans' first reading in San Francisco, and we've been trying for a year to get him here. The formal experimentation that characterized 70s and 80s "Language Poetry" is here, alive and blooming, but with a pop-culture injection of speed, interface, dynamism, wit. Brian Kim Stefans is the author of <italic>Free Space Comix</italic> (Roof Books, 1998), <italic>Gulf</italic> (Object Editions, 1998) and co-author (with Sianne Ngai) of <italic>The Cosmopolitans </italic>("Interlope," issue 2). His graphic and interactive poetry can be found at www.ubu.com, and the on-line poetry journal he edits, <italic>Arras,</italic> is at www.bway.net/~arras. Criticism is forthcoming in <italic>Talisman.</italic> He works as Associate Project Coordinator in the web department at Fodor's Travel. When people ask, what's really new in poetry, we always give a name or two, and one is Brian Kim Stefans'.

New College Cultural Center

766 Valencia Street, San Francisco

$5 </bigger></bigger></fontfamily>

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

--==========_-1271837713==_ma==========--

↑ Index

230. David Kirschenbaum
New from Boog: Lee Ann Brown and Eleni Sikelianos
Mon 18 Oct 1999

Now available from Boog Literature:

Boogmark #1: Lee Ann Brown, "Sustain Petal" Boogcard #4: Eleni Sikelianos, "My love is like talking"

$1 each ppd.

Published to commemorate the "Women Poets at Barnard College" reading on Thursday October 7, 1999.

Brown’s is H-11"x W-2" on cypress green cardstock.

Sikelianos's is H-8.5" x W-5.5" on ivory cardstock, with a linoleum block print by Daisy DeCapite, and can be mailed with a 33¢ stamp.

Checks payable to:
Boog Literature
351 W.24th Street Apt. 19E
New York, NY 10011-1510
Email: [redacted]

Website (under construction): www.booglit.com
tel: [redacted]

Boog Literature publications are edited and published by David A. Kirschenbaum.
Send SASE, or email, for catalog.

_____ Get FREE voice-mail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

231. David Kirschenbaum
Address Correction: Booglit 6 Pub. Party w/David Amram
Mon 18 Oct 1999

Please note, the Oasis Lounge is located at 121 St. Mark's Place (1st-A) New York City.

All apologies for the confusion and hope to see you there on Monday Oct. 25 at 8pm.

as ever,
David

_____ Get FREE voice-mail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

232. J. Pecqueur
APR--Honickman First Book Award
Mon 18 Oct 1999

Listees:

I was wondering if anyone has the submission guidelines for APR's Honickman award. Creeley is judging it this year.

They ask for a self-addressed envelope for guidelines; and sometimes even this doesn't work to get the information.

If anyone could help out with this info, backchannel would probably be best, I'd much appreciate it.

Jean-Paul Pecqueur

↑ Index

233. Carol L. Hamshaw
[Fwd: Bowering, Compton, Rodin, Warland]
Mon 18 Oct 1999

Carol Hamshaw wrote:

> FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
> The Capilano Review, Issue Launch
> November 10, 1999 at 7:30
> The WISE Hall, 1882 Adanac Street, Vancouver
> For more information: [redacted]
>
> Poetry Blues
>
> Literary and arts journal,The Capilano Review presents an evening of poetry and blues as we launch our Fall 1999 issue. Readings will be given by George Bowering, Renee Rodin, Wayde Compton and Betsy Warland between musical sets from the Jelly Roll Blues Band. The event starts at 7:30 in The WISE Social and Athletic Club's upstairs hall, on November 10, 1999. ADMISSION IS FREE; buy a $5 membership and get a copy of the new issue free.
>
> Sponsorship by Storm Brewing, Ltd.
>
> Author Bios:
>
> GEORGE BOWERING has published books in almost every mode and genre but has never been nominated for a B.C. Book Prize. His newest book is a popular history, Egoists and Autocrats. About the Canadian prime ministers, it is published by Viking, and will be published in paperback by Penguin.
> WAYDE COMPTON is a Vancouver writer. 49th Parallel Psalm (Advance Editions, 1999) is his first book, a documentary long poem chronicling the African Canadian presence in British Columbia from the arrival of the first black settlers in 1858 to the present.
> RENEE RODIN lives in Vancouver and is the author of Bread and Salt (Talon Books). She is currently working on a new collection of writing and is delighted to be in the first issue with Ryan Knighton as editor and wishes him lots of luck.
> BETSY WARLAND's most recent book of poetry, What Holds Us Here, was published in 1998. Her prose manuscript, Bloodroot, will be published by Second Story Press, Spring 1999. She is currently working on Breathing the Page -- a series of meditations on the materials of writing.
>
> About The Capilano Review
>
> Since its inception in 1972, The Capilano Review has published some of the finest fiction, poetry, drama and visual art in Canada and throughout the world. The magazine has been recognized for its superlative content by five National Magazine Awards, two Western Magazine Awards and a citation from > the Canadian Studies Association. We have published Phyllis Webb, George Bowering, Daphne Marlatt, Evelyn Lau, Susan Crean, Roy Kiyooka, bpNichol, Michael Ondaatje, Margaret Atwood,Robin Blaser, Brian Fawcett, John Newlove, Duncan McNaughton, bill bissett, Audrey Thomas and numerous other internationally acclaimed writers and artists.

>
> The Capilano Review gratefully acknowledges the assistance of the Canada Council for the Arts, the Province of British Columbia, through the British Columbia Arts Council, and the Capilano College Humanites Division.
>
> Carol L. Hamshaw
> Managing Editor
> The Capilano Review
> [redacted]
>
> http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR
>
> For submission guidelines, please see
>
> http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR/submit.html

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

234. Richard Frey
Sun., Nov.7, NOTcoffeeHouse - Caine, Levin, Romero, & music-Grant
Mon 18 Oct 1999

(NOTcoffeeHouse) Poetry and Performance Series
Sunday, November 7, 1 pm
First Unitarian Church
2125 Chestnut Street
Featured Readers:
Shulamith Wachter Caine
is still polishing her craft after having received the Gerald Cable Award from Silverfish Press for best first book for her book of poems, Love Fugue.
Lynn Levin
is author of A Few Questions About Paradise, a book of poems, $9.95 from Loonfeather Press, P. O. 1212, Bemidji, MN 56619
E-mail [redacted].

-and she was just named 1999 Bucks County Poet Laureate.
Danny Romero
is author of the novel, Calle 10, and a widely published poet whose work has been translated into Spanish. He is a teacher of Creative Writing at Temple University.
Featured Music:
Tom Grant
is a songwriter who recorded a CD earlier this year entitled "Streams of Consciousness". It's available through his website http://www.icdc.com/~tgrant
Plus Open Poetry and Performance Showcase

Along with a live poetry reading and performance , we invite you to join in our website poetry reading presentation. All poets and performers may have a poem or a lyric featured in theNOTcoffeeHouse website. Send your work for inclusion in the ongoing internet presentation. Tell your friends all over the world to check our site! Poets and performers may submit works for direct posting on the website via email to the [redacted] or works may be emailed to Richard Frey at [redacted] or USPS or hand-delivered through slot at 500 South 25th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19146. More information: Church office, [redacted], Jeff Loo, [redacted] or Richard Frey, [redacted]. Visit our website at www.notcoffeehouse.org poets & performers previously appearing at NOTcoffeeHouse: Nathalie Anderson, Lisa Coffman, Barbara Cole, Barb Daniels, Linh Dinh, Lori-Nan Engler, Simone Zelitch, Dan Evans, Brenda McMillan, Kerry Sherin, John Kelly Green, Emiliano Martin, Jose Gamalinda, Toshi Makihara, Thom Nickels, Joanne Leva, Darcy Cummings, David Moolten, Kristen Gallagher, Shulamith Wachter Caine, Maralyn Lois Polak, Marcus Cafagna, Ethel Rackin, Lauren Crist, Beth Phillips Brown, Joseph Sorrentino, Frank X, Richard Kikionyogo, Elliott Levin, Leonard Gontarek, Lamont Steptoe, Bernard Stehle, Sharon Rhinesmith, Alexandra Grilikhes, C. A. Conrad, Nate Chinen, Jim Cory, Tom Grant, Gregg Biglieri, Stephanie Jane Parrino, Jeff Loo, Theodore A. Harris, Mike Magee, Wil Perkins, Deborah Burnham, UNSOUND, Danny Romero, Don Riggs, Shawn Walker, She-Haw, Scott Kramer, Judith Tomkins, 6 of the Unbearables - Alfred Vitale Ron Kolm, Jim Feast, Mike Carter, Sharon Mesmer, Carol Wierzbicki-,John Phillips, Quinn Eli, Molly Russakoff, Peggy Carrigan, Kelly McQuain, Patrick Kelly, Mark Sarro, Rocco Renzetti, Voices of a Different Dream - Annie Geheb, Ellen Ford Mason, Susan Windle - Bob Perelman, Jena Osman, Robyn Edelstein,Brian Patrick Heston, Francis Peter Hagen, Shankar Vedantam, Yolanda Wisher NOTE: Yolanda Wisher, Poet Laureate of Montgomery County, who read 10/3 at NOTcoffeeHouse series (Lynn Levin, 11/7, will be 2nd laureate in a row!) is with a community arts collective-in-progress called Poetry for the People, gathering on last Tuesdays at Toviah Thrift Store,

4211 Chestnut Street -free- 10/26, 11/30, 12/28 8-10pm vegetarian meal provided -- poetry for everyday livin'-- email [redacted]

↑ Index

235. tasha329

Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML POLAK

Mon 18 Oct 1999

TREAT YOUR TRICK!!

poetry at borders
1727 walnut street
monday, october 25, at 7:30 sharp

A COUPLA CHIX
GIVVIN A POETRY READING

ANNE-ADELE WIGHT of Lizard Poems fame
MARALYN LOIS POLAK, Jersey Supermarket Cashier turned Drama Queen

↑ Index

236. Elizabeth Treadwell

Mangold/Alexander addresses

Mon 18 Oct 1999

If anyone has a current address for Sarah Mangold or Charles Alexander I'd be grateful for a backchannel....Thanks. Elizabeth

↑ Index

237. Daniel Kane

a review of Kenneth Koch's "Making Your Own Days"

Tue 19 Oct 1999

California-based writer Jordan Clary reviews _Making Your Own Days_, written by Kenneth Koch and published by Simon & Schuster, 1999.

To read it, go to

http://www.writenet.org/TT_MYOD_FAQ.html

↑ Index

238. Lowther, John
Grad School Grafitto
Tue 19 Oct 1999

"always already" = a priori

↑ Index

239. George Bowering
Re: demographic query
Tue 19 Oct 1999

> ...& while we're being regionalist, what about per-capita List subscription by city or Metropolitan area? (Boulder, the poetry scene/city which I inhabit, comes to mind, but there are plenty of others: SF, NY, Lawrence KS, Philly, etc., etc.

I am getting the idea that people are curious only about US places.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

240. George Bowering
Re: Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML POLAK
Tue 19 Oct 1999

I have been to 1727 Walnut Street, just yesterday, and it is a pure residential street, no book stores there at all.

> poetry at borders
> 1727 walnut street
> monday, october 25, at 7:30 sharp
>
> A COUPLA CHIX
> GIVVIN A POETRY READING
>
> ANNE-ADELE WIGHT of Lizard Poems fame
> MARALYN LOIS POLAK, Jersey Supermarket Cashier turned Drama Queen

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

241. Lowther, John
Words by R.C.
Tue 19 Oct 1999

{poetix}

a few weeks ago i made a tape --- some 70 minutes of a possible 90 --- me reading the entire book _Words_ by creeley --- it was interesting to do --- to try to get in a reading, singular, something of the complexity that one finds in reading any poem of his --- i have that exact change yearbook with cd and so i had two exempla of his reading style to think about tho, ultimately, my taping doesnt sound too much like how i imagine r.c. wd have read these

since then this tape has been in my car player looping continually --- and this being atlanta i spend altogether too much time in that damned car --- but the tape has been a joy i feel like i know this whole book of poems much much better than my previous several-many readings of it had tuned me to --- last night i went back and looked at the text for the 1st time since the recording and the effect is very palpable, that i now know whole passages almost by heart and it isnt that my readings are so brilliant --- in listening to the tape i hear in various places that i've missed a nuance by placing a certain stress here and not there or that something is, due to my reading, off-balance in a way that's not as interesting, or even, balanced in a way that i think wasnt felt, intended etc...

do other folks ever do this sort of thing ? i know my friend mark does as that's partially what suggested to me that i might make this tape --- just curious

)L

↑ Index

242. Daniel Kane
Bill Zavatsky and Daniel Kane reading at Teachers & Writers
Tue 19 Oct 1999

Self-promotion and more....

Bill Zavatsky, author of "For Steve Royal and Other Poems," translator of Larbaud, writer of many other poems and essays, etc., lines including

"My eyelids bury me. Shovels
of black whenever I blink.
My mother holds Aladdin's lamp
in her hands as she reads to me.

I am sick. Aladdin is sick,..."

and Daniel Kane, poems dotting various magazines, T&W web-boy, horsey lines including

"The old white mare is standing motionless
at the door the old white mare motionless
near the door white mare motionless standing at the door white mare old just standing there barely moving near the door"

will read as part of Jordan Davis's "Poetry City" series at

Teachers & Writers Collaborative
5 - 9 Union Square West, 7th Floor
New York, NY 10003
Tel. 212/[redacted]

Admission is free, as are the refreshments. Reading begins at 7 pm.

↑ Index

243. Jordan Davis
Oasia broadside #51
Tue 19 Oct 1999

LEGAL NOTICE OF PUBLICATION

Three Poems by Jordan Davis, $2

Backlist available, donations appreciated. For details, write:

Oasis Press
c/o Stephen Ellis
23 Mitton St
Portland ME 04102

↑ Index

244. Daniel Kane
Bill Zavatsky and Daniel Kane reading, Thursday, Oct. 28
Tue 19 Oct 1999

---

forgot to include the essential fact that the reading is on Thursday, Oct. 28 - apologies for double-posting.

Bill Zavatsky, author of "For Steve Royal and Other Poems," translator of Larbaud, writer of many other poems and essays, etc., lines including

"My eyelids bury me. Shovels
of black whenever I blink.

My mother holds Aladdin's lamp
in her hands as she reads to me.

I am sick. Aladdin is sick,..."

and Daniel Kane, poems dotting various magazines, T&W web-boy, horsey lines including

"The old white mare is standing motionless
at the door the old white mare motionless
near the door white mare motionless standing
at the door white mare old just standing there
barely moving near the door"

will read as part of Jordan Davis's "Poetry City" series at

Teachers & Writers Collaborative
5 - 9 Union Square West, 7th Floor
New York, NY 10003
Tel. 212/[redacted]

Admission is free, as are the refreshments. Reading begins at 7 pm.

#This list-serve is designed for teachers and writers who want #to share ideas on teaching creative writing workshops for students #in grades K-12. To post, send mail to [redacted]. #To join the list-serve, send the message "subscribe writenet" to #[redacted]. #To join the list-serve digest, which will collect several #messages into a batch and send them to you as one message #(reducing the total amount of messages sent to your mailbox), #send the message "subscribe writenet-digest" to [redacted]. #To unsubscribe, send the message "unsubscribe writenet" or #To view an archive of past messages on the Web, go to #<www.twc.org/forums> and hit the "Teachers & Writers #Discussion Group" link.

↑ Index

245. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: Los Angeles Reading
Tue 19 Oct 1999

Primus St. John will read

Wed. Oct. 20 8:00 PM

Loyola Marymount University
McIntosh Center in Sullivan Hall

7900 Loyola Blvd. just off Manchester near the airport for info call Aldon Nielsen at [redacted]

↑ Index

246. Mark Prejsnar
Quote of the day
Tue 19 Oct 1999

"But you're not supposed to understand art.. You're supposed to understand culture. Culture is mutual understanding. That is not communication. Communication is what I have in my music, with myself. Communication is when people don't understand each other. Because then there is a consciousness level that is being brought out of you, where an effort is made."

--Morton Feldman,
as quoted by Clark Coolidge compliments of mark prejsnar @lanta

↑ Index

247. C. S. Giscombe
(no subject)
Tue 19 Oct 1999

Dear Poetics List people:

Below is Penn State's ad from the current AWP List. As a member of the committee for this search I'm interested less in the "natural world" business than I am in the stuff about "building connections between writers in the university & institutions & groups in the community." I've been teaching here for a year now & think the place has a lot of potential. If you apply please drop me a note letting me know you've done so at this address: <<[redacted]>. (And please specify "job at PSU" or something like that in the subject line.) Thanks.

C. S. Giscombe

Penn State University. Assistant or Associate Professor in Creative Writing, Tenure Track. We are seeking a well-published & actively publishing creative writer & an experienced teacher of creative writing whose work grows out of a sense of place or a connection with the natural world & whose interests include building connections between writers in the university & institutions & groups in the community. Genre open. The position offers the opportunity to participate in a successful MFA program & to work with undergraduates in a creative writing emphasis in a dynamic & collaborative English dept. MA, MFA, or PhD required by Aug. 2000. We offer competitive salary, teaching assignments, & professional support. We will begin reviewing applicants Oct. 25, 1999 & continue accepting applications until the position is filled. Applications should be addressed to: Michael Begnal, Search Committee, Chair, Box CW, English, 119 Burrowes Bldg., University Park, PA 16802. AA/EOE. (MLA)

_____

C. S. Giscombe

Department of English/ Burrowes Building

The Pennsylvania State University

University Park 16803

[redacted] or [redacted]

↑ Index

248. KENT JOHNSON
Re: Lest I remember
Tue 19 Oct 1999

I just wanted to say that, to me, "what comes off sondheim's typewriter" is among the most thrillingly unusual and provocative labor (labor as in the creation of value and as in labor of love) in American poetry.

Kent

↑ Index

249. David Kellogg
Re: query : : zukofsky
Tue 19 Oct 1999

I hope you have a copy of Michelle Leggott's Reading Zukofsky's 80 Flowers (Johns Hopkins UP). I doubt you'll get anything better than that right now.

Pattie McCarthy wrote:

> hello.
> could someone please point me in the direction
> of anything written on Zukofsy's 80 Flowers ?
> backchannel appreciated
> & thanks very much in advance.
> --Pattie McCarthy

--
David Kellogg

[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

250. Tony Green
Re: _Words_ by R.C.
Tue 19 Oct 1999

John Lowther wrote
>a few weeks ago i made a tape --- some 70 minutes of a possible 90 --- me >reading the entire book _Words_ by creeley --- it was interesting to do --- >to try to get in a reading, singular, something of the complexity that one >finds in reading any poem of his

&

>since then this tape has been in my car player looping continually --- and
>this being atlanta i spend altogether too much time in that damned car --- >but the tape has been a joy i feel like i know this whole book of poems much >much better than my previous several-many readings of it had tuned me
to --- >last night i went back and looked at the text for the 1st time since the >recording and the effect is very palpable, that i now know whole passages >almost by heart

if this isnt exactly what is usually called _criticism_ it is close to what I understand as making significant use of a poetic text, getting to know it, like learning - for instance - a piece of music

Tony Green

↑ Index

251. Jacques Debrot
Re: ashbery query
Tue 19 Oct 1999

Maria,

Shoptaw has a very strong chp on _A Wave_ in _On the Outside Looking Out_.

--jacques

↑ Index

252. Alan Sondheim

THE PRESIDENT-MACHINE

Tue 19 Oct 1999

First - I do want to thank people who wrote in my defense. My work is directly concerned with contemporary poetics; it's also hardly something that appears out of my typewriter, but for better or worse is edited and re-edited obsessively (in fact I just led a discussion on trAce about editing).

Second - The piece below is part of a series of small plays or dialogs that Foofwa I'mobilite and I, with others, will be producing; you can find these at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/diary/le.txt if you're interested. After Heiner Muller it has been difficult to write; these use or reference back to the 1938 Moscow show trials, and something in the writing, at least for me, remains at stake. I live in Giuliani territory and know the signs (which were there before Giuliani for that matter). The first of these plays or dialogs had already been sent to Poetics.

Third - The work is going well at trAce, and there have been some really beautiful and exciting contributions to "Yours"; I'd encourage you again to go to http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm and partici- pate. There are also the ongoing conferences at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk - the most recent still being Psychology and Writing - and the discussions have been excellent I think. ("Yours" is the replacement for the "Love and War" piece, which had grown enormous, and is now in a "writing museum" accessible through the index.htm.)

And Fourth - I want to thank the readers on this list in general for their generosity; I'd also like to see more work presented here that deals with Poetics - from a point of view _within_ poetry or other literary forms, complementing the work already from the position of critique or dialog.

- Alan

==========

THE PRESIDENT-MACHINE DOES ITS WORK SCATTERING JENNIFER'S WORDS AND BONES

<Curtain rises. Jennifer on stage. PRESIDENT-MACHINE-TRANSFORMS on stage.>

Jennifer: FOUND HEAVENLY OUTSIDE MY INTERNAL, my separatlons ara bone by bone, drug by drug, atom by atom; I am blown apart day and nlght; I have lost love, lost emotlon; I am a GONE AND HEAVENLY CHILD, Mother help me! Father help me! My bones creak at night; like drugs, my bones speed through my body. I live inside BLIND HOUSE in BLIND FURY, strike out again and again at the walls, missing. I take DRUGS AND OILS AND PROGRAMS, still pinned by FEARS AND NIGHTMARES. Mother help me

PRESIDENT-MACHINE-TRANSFORMS: Blinding Jennifer, keep her awake. Take out her ears

Jennifer: I can't see or hear. I can't sleep; I navar sleep. I hhngar for sleep; always exhausted, my judgamant ls not of tha bast. Thls ls my world warld waarld. I faar you wlll changa my langhaga - I want my words wards waards clhmsy as thay ara, to ramaln just as thay ara. Yat thay'll ooza banaath tha forca of tha PRESIDENT-MACHINE and of that, I am afrald.:: NIGHTMARE AND SLEEP; NAGHTMARA SLAAP

PRESIDENT-MACHINE-TRANSFORMS: Your FOUND HEAVENLY OUTSIDE MY INTERNAL, my saoaratlons ara bona by bona, dreg by dreg, atom by atom; I am blown aoart day and nlght; I hava lost lova, lost amotlon; I am a GANA AND HAAVANLY CHALD, Mothar halo ma, Fathar halo ma an Barning Craak... Waarld waaarlds waaaarlds; FAAND HAAVANLY AATSADA MA INTARNAL YAAR YAAR YARR

<Jennifer's mouth explodes; her eyes burn. She falls to the stage. Curtain falls.>

↑ Index

253. Elizabeth Treadwell

Populace

Tue 19 Oct 1999

Excuse me but I am posting a review of my book from articlemagazine.com. Thank you for your understanding! __ Elizabeth

> "These two boys were standing on the corner. A woman came around the corner. There was plate glass in windows. One of the boys saw her and his first reaction was to have lustful thoughts. She knew that and she looked at him gently and look, the other boy couldn't believe it, but there it was. His companion had turned into a pile of maggots." (9)
>
> Thus opens Elizabeth Treadwell's Populace , a book of "Highly Sorted Detail(s)" and "varied kind(s) of silence," safety-pinned purses where things are kept and apartments with TVs, terry cloth frogs, outfitted closets, where "There were reasons for our behavior but we weren't privy" (41).

Treadwell's texts gracefully and resolutely refuse to uphold the false binaries between poetry and prose, narrative and fragmentation, truth and lie, autobiography and fiction, analysis and experience, stylish and frumpy. Whether remembered or imagined, these experiences, in this world, are plausible, difficult, worthy of the scrutiny Treadwell invites us to subject them to. In this book we walk in a beautiful, uncomfortable world, to the steadily syncopating rhythms of daily troubles, daily joys, the unusual usual that makes the complexity of a life lived, or of one written. In the practice of photography, portraits of city life often tend to exemplify an idea rather than a subject.

"Identity as a question becomes nearly too stupid (dumbly mesmerizing) when the meadow is so comfortable. How can we be polite. Danger. No trespassing. In the era of simple, lucid flesh. This may all be exed out and reattempted. Twins with the same name, Mary, and Eve, who wanted to experience. I own a dictionary of terms and theory, she asserted just recently. The present moment can be a hardship." (62)

And is a hardship, though perhaps a chosen one (and perhaps not), as these texts move through deaths, mental institutions, relationships of all kinds (from friendships to incests to loves to incidental acquaintances), schools, parties, interiors and exteriors of narrators who "walk in empty streets carrying his face or is it my own in my hands" (60). Though partaking of elements of the fantastic-or maybe she really did turn him into a pile of maggots!—and certain familiar elements of certain contemporary worlds, Treadwell is not writing melodramatic tragedy with a capital T, nor is she engaging in the post prozac post-feminism post-everything nineties fluff that presumes to pass for prose writing.

Reader, you may feel that a hardworking actress (and a nineties woman) should be defined by something other than the inventory of her closet, and you would normally be right, but bear with me. There's a reason for these style notes. Your heart may rule your head in the early days of December, but common sense will prevail" (55). Treadwell is, rather, telling our fortune, writing a new realism, populated, placed, accurate as experience is accurate, that is, changeable and complicated and contradictory and kaleidoscopically specific.

Populace is the feeling of a day and then another day, days which descend in no particular order, words caught behind the crows in eyes and inside the day, inside the eyes, under the dress, and about the dress: there is a story, "inside furniture is a story" (18) which tells itself whether or not we listen—things here having a life, as well as making up a life—as Treadwell listens, incites our listening: "Listen to the narrative, it spills widely (None of this makes up for the page where she broke off, plus it's all lies)" (61).

Treadwell's widely spilling narratives, her "lies," her sentences and lines and fragments and accumulations, propose not only to engage us through narrative, sensory, mental and emotional means what we might call "story," but also to map out (in the sense of exploration rather than conquest) certain compelling terrains—both within the world and within language—that serve to complicate what at first might seem to be a quick, pleasurable view into the lives of this book's populace. So, for example, in a paragraph where we are located "on Oxford. in bright concrete. next door there was Safeway."—information which actually pertains to the actual city of Berkeley—where our "i" shopped in this strange hat my sister and i shared. hair was dirty. chose lemons." the final sentence reads "that was when i." (37)

Treadwell's sense of rhythm, of what is possible and what is not possible, of breath and pause, complicates her texts so that in the space of one sentence fragment she raises questions of the very "I" used throughout the book, of when and why it is possible to say "I" (and when and why it isn't), of what the "I" does and doesn't do, of ways to represent events in narrative and leave the narrative and the events open at the same time.

Populace stakes out regions, geographical, emotional, stylistic territories within whose borders Treadwell's sentences collide against one another and themselves, borders which might seem to function primarily to define places-Berkeley, Los Angeles, Oakland, Hollywood, Susanville, 7-11, a house, a mental institution, a school, a street,a dinner party, a dressing room—but which constantly, with the inconsistency of experience, explode any stability the mapmaker might have thought she desired.
Treadwell uses her sentences to populate a definite sense of place:

i moved from berkeley to l.a. i moved away from l.a. after i broke up. in between a foreign country. but i only wanted to say i went to karin's dinner party (20).

Eucalyptus. That's where I live (44).

i go down rounded escalators, recalling a recent celebrity profile in the Chronicle that featured these very environs. In the BART station I pass a movie ad featuring a vaguely remembered lover, an actor who once munched my puss (13).

Associations with specific towns and places, the "several overlapping sidewalks" of curious, frustrated, hungry young North Americans are inevitable in Populace ("...these are memories, in which meaning has been compounded and withdrawn," 55) so that Treadwell's "I" is not just a shifting, expanding character in these texts, but is also me, you, us. Once we are inhabiting these texts—"He wasn't just looking at it he was in it then" (46)—its populations, places, words inhabit us. The distance between "reader" and "writer," "read and "written," "narrative" and "experience" closes and widens like the view from Alcatraz Avenue in Berkeley, where the funnel of storefront-lined, bicycle-treaded avenue pours out into the bay, the prison-cum-museum island, the bridge behind— "Gateway to the Pacific"— or to something), the view widening, narrowing, lengthening, shortening as the fog slides over the water twice daily. Treadwell's works are "set rightly to overlook / abandoned prison tourist attract / mercilessly as the waves there / the little waves of this bay our home / our situation / also that of tiger sharks" (22)

These texts map out terse sentences ("i catch the plane back. next to me there is a little boy. there are trees on that street so the air is nice. when i get home i am home" (17-18) and lengthy accumulations connected by commas and threads of thought and feeling, paragraphs which range and paragraphs which contain, concise portraits and refracting, expanding biographies. This is "regional writing" in that it is definitely located, though not definitively placed, and in that it demarcates experiential regions, terrains where things and people happen, where "i am visiting. there are old friends attaching to other people and times. there is now" (15), borders within which there are "how many bright new centers of electricity" (67), which then act to dissolve the borders, re-form them to create further narrative, populated and empty at the same time: "Feed not on logic. I was in a foreign place. There were two towns that could be separated by name or put together by name" (10).

Absence and unity in absent unity, bound and unbound in the unbound book, the populated emptiness of distances closing up while also being kept apart, distance playing itself like its own instrument, distance. Texts which walk the edge between "here" and "there" never falling heavily on one side or another but slipping, a foot here, a foot there, edges made to outline the nothing between them: "see how it's hollow. patching" (16). A patched, hollow space held open for the text and its inhabitants (linguistic, human, humane) to escape out towards us, or for us to enter, to walk through the shifting terrains of language and experience this book makes possible. The portrait called "Polly" ends "I guess I'll be here forever now, however long or short that may be" (32). Populace itself ends without ending, with a forever invitation, however long or short that may be, back into the text:

the girl held her book open, asking him, on the stylized school stoop, forever. (67)

Jen Hofer is a poet and translator originally from the San Francisco Bay area. She now lives in Mexico City, where she is editing an anthology of contemporary poetry by Mexican women. Her poems and translations can be found in Explosive, Facture, Rhizome, and Skanky Possum. She has just published a new chapbook, As Far As, with A+Bend Books.

↑ Index

254. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: wow--too much

Wed 20 Oct 1999

A suggestion or er, problem.
i'm getting approx. 50 hits a day here-- some personal--other poems which seem diredted to one person .

could we watch the singular communications please.
i delete more than i can chew.

todd baron

↑ Index

255. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: E-mail for Kristin Prevallet
Wed 20 Oct 1999

Taylor Brady wrote:
>
> Could someone out there please b-c with this? Thanks.
>
> Taylor Brady

with what?

↑ Index

256. dan raphael
on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
Wed 20 Oct 1999

---

1) Maybe i should have back channeled to sondheim asking him about his work.

2) why would the same people championing alan's right to express himself on the list blast me for expressing myself. they sy the list is for exchanging ideas and get dont get up in arms about me.

3) i do not favor censorship. i was not asking the list meister to limit sondheims posting, but asking alan to consider the frequency of his positng in lieu of the list's limited time and reader's time as well. unlike several of the people who back-channeled me i get my list in digest form and cannot delete posts on sight. i do read through everything that's sent me. [there's always a lot of back-channel discussion. no one posted to the list in favor of my opinion, tho i received several back channels in support, as i suppose alan did]

4) but back to differences of opinions. some say that's what the list is for. and i suppose i should craft some moreciritcal reasons why i dont think reading most of alan's postings is worth my time. maybe even a reason critical argument would go against what some people see as the list's range ofitnerests/behaviors, since we dont see much heated discussion

5) lets see more poems by more people. lets' see more opinons about poems, more poetics & elss personalities. or maybe all of the above

↑ Index

257. Thomas Bell
Re: Lest I remember
Wed 20 Oct 1999

alan has been doing this for a long time. it's part of the list for me tom bell

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

258. Ron Silliman
Amazon v. Amazon
Wed 20 Oct 1999

Some of you may know that Amazon Bookstore has been a feminist location for years in Minneapolis, long before Jeff Bezos appropriated the name for his website. Predictably, this has led to a fight in the courts over ownership of the name. The following is from Holt Uncensored, an excellent e-mail letter by Pat Holt for the Northern California Independent Booksellers Association.

What follows below is Pat's column and commentary on the unsubtle uses of homophobia in its legal defense. Given how many small press web sites offer links to the Bezos/Amazon site, which has already gained a reputation for not fulfilling orders from small presses (instead just telling the buyers that it is o.p.), I think it's worth considering just who you are doing business with.

To get on the Holt Uncensored list, just click over to:

http://www.nciba.com/patholt.html

Ron Silliman

AMAZON V. AMAZON:
SEX, LIES AND DEPOSITIONS

So here's the scene: One of the five owners of Amazon Bookstore in Minneapolis - the oldest feminist bookstore in the country - is being deposed by lawyers representing Amazon.com, the online bookseller based in Seattle - when a very strange thing happens.

Q (AMAZON.COM LAWYER): Have you had any particular interest in feminism?
A (AMAZON BOOKSTORE CO-OWNER): Yes.

Q: Dating back to when?
MR. SAMUEL (Amazon Bookstore lawyer): Objection, Vague.
A. I don't know. I don't remember.
Q. Seventies, college, before?
A. Possibly.
Q. Have you had any interest in promoting lesbian ideals in the community?
MR. SAMUEL: Object to the question as vague. Also it's completely irrelevant.
A. I don't know exactly. Can you be a little clearer?
Q. I'll ask you this, are you gay? [To Mr. Samuel] And let me say this, Matt, you know the objections. I understand you have a job to do, and I'm going to ignore you for the rest of the deposition . . .

Good heavens. As you may remember (see #80), Amazon Bookstore (founded in 1970) is suing Amazon.com (founded in 1995) for trademark infringement. The Minneapolis bookstore contends that it has lost money for years because of confusion created by customers and vendors who mistake Amazon Bookstore for Amazon.com. Attempts by Amazon Bookstore to find a peaceful solution through talks with Amazon.com were rebuffed, they say, and they sued.

So now: What does sexual orientation have to do with trademark infringement? Let's get back to the deposition after a number of objections and discussions have followed.

Q: In 1987, was the purpose of the entity for which you worked to just sell books for profit?
A: We sell books to stay in business for a profit, yeah. I guess I would say that.
Q: You sell books, but has the purpose remained the same since 1987?
A: The purpose is - has been to sell books.
Q: Nothing else?
A: Not in my opinion.
Q. Okay. . . Are any of the employees at the Bookstore gay, and forgive me for asking this question.
MR. SAMUEL: I'm going to object to the question as irrelevant. Calls for speculation.
A: You're asking me to speculate on my coworkers' sexuality, is that the question?
Q: I'm asking if you know.

And here the Amazon.com lawyer inserts what is to him an analogy that will explain all.

Q: I think, for example, if I tell people or introduce them to my wife and tell them this is my wife, I'm married to her, if somebody asks me if I'm married or asks somebody else to whom I've just introduced my wife whether I'm married, that person can say yeah, he's married, to my knowledge to a woman. So I'm asking you if you know if any of the individuals that you work for are gay to your knowledge.

MR. SAMUEL: Counsel, that's an absurd comparison, and you know that. You're not asking - you can ask her if any of the women at the Bookstore are married.
Q: You accused me of stereotypes. What's the difference of being married to a man or woman? Essentially, that's what I'm asking. Do you know if any of the women at the Bookstore, are any of the women at the bookstore married to a woman? A: It's not legal to be married to a woman. Q: Do they have partners?

We don't know from this public record if everyone laughed out loud at the Amazon.com's lawyer's confusion over what his wife is doing in a story that's supposed to elicit answers about gay identity.

But let's give some points to the Amazon Bookstore co-owner for helpfully pointing out something he should know as a lawyer - that women can't be married to one another. Why she doesn't bonk him on the head with a law book is a puzzlement.

And what any of this has to do with trademark infringement is a mystery. Could it be that Amazon.com has no defense, and its lawyers know it?

Ah, but the next day the Amazon.com lawyer is fresh and anxious to do the right thing as he begins deposing another co-owner of Amazon Bookstore, to whom he shows a document.

Q: You see in the E-mail it states, all the owners at this time of Amazon Bookstore Cooperative and historically have been all lesbians. Do you see that?
A: No. Where is that?
Q: Is that an accurate statement, to your knowledge? I don't mean to ask a personal question, and I apologize for doing so.
MR. SAMUEL: Yeah. Just hold on for a second. . .
(OBJECTIONS AND OFF-THE-RECORD DISCUSSIONS FOLLOW)
Q: Do you know whether any of the current owners or employees of Amazon Bookstore Cooperative are partners?
MR. SAMUEL: Same objection . . . this question is invasive, and it's clearly irrelevant. (MORE OBJECTIONS)

Finally the Amazon.com lawyer decides to state why he thinks the question is relevant. He stops the proceedings and says the following:

"I think it's important, as I said yesterday, that a jury understands how Amazon Bookstore Cooperative represents itself to the public, and I think as part of that, it's important for the jury to know, for example, whether the people who work in the Bookstore have a particular sexual orientation because obviously from the perspective of my client, we think that's important to the case, the defense's case, and that is one of the grounds for relevance."

You can skip the rest of his explanation, but in deference to what I think he is trying to say I've transcribed it anyway:

"And on the question of whether people are partners, in deposing people, and if we continue to depose employees at the Bookstore, I would certainly like to know if they have a relationship with somebody else at the Bookstore. And it would be more likely than not that they would have access to the same information, similar to a man and a woman who are married."

Well, there he goes again (not listening to yesterday's witness, by the way), though it's clear he's not comfortable with the line of questioning and has one thing further to say:

"And, again, I don't take any pleasure in asking these questions, and from my perspective, I ask them - to me, it's like asking somebody if they have red hair. I don't particularly put a label on somebody because they have a particular sexual orientation. To me if you're married, it doesn't matter if you're married as a man and a woman, woman and woman or man and a man."

So that's very gracious of Amazon.com's lawyer, and we're sure the co-owners of Amazon Bookstore, who had to sit through many days of questions and assumptions that were just as irrelevant as these, felt a lot better when he explained himself.

Meanwhile, it's worth looking at such testimony to appreciate why the court makes these kinds of depositions public: If Amazon.com thinks it's playing some kind of hardball by disclosing the sexual identity and relationships of the staff of Amazon Bookstore, we should know it.

And we should know that all of these questions are being asked not just by some attorney fishing for bait he can use later but "from the perspective of my client," which is to say the people who own and operate Amazon.com.

Can't you see some strategist in a back room somewhere suddenly looking as if the light has dawned. Say, he says to himself, these women are dykes! We can't lose! Our 'defense' is proof they're a bunch of lezbos and we walk away with the trial!

Otherwise, why ask how "the Amazon Bookstore Cooperative represents itself to the public" when it's clear on every identifying statement made by that store that it's a feminist bookstore? Its website is http://www.amazonFEMBKS.com (emphasis mine). Its purpose is the same as every other independent bookstore in the country - to "sell books to stay in business for a profit" as the co-owner testified. Of course it sells a lot of lesbian books - so does Amazon.com!

To Matt Samuel, the Amazon Bookstore lawyer who appears to be getting madder and madder during the depositions, "this line of questioning by Amazon.com borders on the outrageous," as he said on the phone yesterday. To stop it, on October 8 he moved for a protective order "to prevent Defendant Amazon.com from inquiring into the sexual orientation or relationships of any witness in this case."

In this motion, Samuel makes the astute observation that "under Amazon.com's view of the law, Amazon Bookstore could and should have asked Amazon.com's President, Jeff Bezos, if he is gay or straight, and whether he is sleeping with anyone in his company who also might be a witness.

"One would think that both Mr. Bezos and his counsel would have taken offense at this line of questioning, and refused to answer. The principals of Amazon Bookstore are entitled to every bit as much respect and protection from harassment as Mr. Bezos."

So come on, Jeff, one wants to say: Call off the dogs. This suit is a legitimate attempt to determine trademark infringement. It's not about anything else. If you think it is, you're not fighting fair. (And by the way, have you ever had a boyfriend?)

Note: The hearing on this motion is set for October 27. Anyone who'd like to contribute to the Amazon Bookstore Legal Defense Fund can send checks to the store (Amazon Bookstore, 1612 Harmon Place, Minneapolis MI 55403. Should Amazon Bookstore win or settle the suit, all donations will be returned. You can also buy AmazonNOTcom buttons ($2 each plus .75) or t-shirts ($18 plus $4 shipping & handling) that say "I support the original Amazon Bookstore. Since 1970" by contacting [redacted] .

↑ Index

259. Stephen Ellis

Re: up with down!

Wed 20 Oct 1999

The questions over who does and/or does not "like" (the number of) Alan Sondheim's posts suggest further questions, beyond taste, which point to questions of authority, power and interceding actions on the part of those capable of it, ie., forms of "censorship" obscured by these having obvious "reasons." Sondheim's posts seem relatively "neutral" - that is, they don't introduce direct questions concerning the authority of those who choose posts. (In fact, any idea of editing or censoring posts would be likely to invoke protests over just representations of listee intent, uncomfortable accusations of prejudice, pseudo-fascist ellipsis and what not, it being easier to simply let things fly and/or sit as they are received.) Is it possible that a large number of inoffensive posts per month from an individual might be allowed to "pass", while a similar number of more aggressive posts - ie., aggressive with respect to the presumptions underlying the general direction and intent (and purpose) of the list as dictated, to some extent, by the tastes and "beliefs" of the listees, as well as the list moderator - might be cause for removal from the list for reasons of the sheer unassailable conflict that might result?

One recalls here the removal of Henry Gould and Gabriel Gudding last year, ostensibly for posting "too many messages", many of which were rather adamantly and openly critical - and at times downright mocking - of a particular "seriousness" to which many on the list seem otherwise intensely devoted. There probably IS an unspoken, undefined yet presumed "behavioral standard" for those posting to the list, not least of which has to do with a certain gravity of address, that what we're all involved with here is, indeed, not to be called down by gauche cynicism or direct personal attack that is not primarily directed toward "the question at hand", that being objectified as what's called

The Work. Yet isn't one of the many functions of The Work to point out the slightly hilarious absence of the king's clothes, and the enormous balnk gaps in comprehension of "a world" in which one is free to choose to leave all sorts of claw-marks in the process of crawling always further into and back out of what's always almost never quite there? So with Sondheim, whose posts are nothing if not the exact teeth-marks of the more-or-less ordinal chewing swami.

But what of posts that push the envelope of the group's assumptions? (ie., what ARE the group's assumptions?) While it is quite natural for the list moderator to want to put forth a list that is goodly liberal in its appearance of fairness and openness, the question remains as to just how tolerant s/he may be in the face of more direct questions as to the purpose of the list, and who and what it is for - discussion, sure, but what can come of what seems an endless series of come ups and put downs in the public sphere, when certain kinds of criticism are represssed by simply removing those in question from the list? While I'm not suggesting that this kind of quiet censorship makes the list the equivalent of the Republican National Convention, there ARE conventions operating behind the public presentation of the list that might more usefully be brought into the open. I recall a story I heard this summer over dinner during a break in the Boston Alternative Poetry Conference that neatly points up this issue. During mention of Douglas Rothschild's fine performance earlier in the day, Bill Luoma noted that Douglas had had the honor of being the first person kicked off the UB list for "a scathing post" he had written and sent from Luoma's address. While the message, I believe, was posted, it was also accompanied by an angry phone call to Luoma from Charles Bernstein, who demanded that Luoma never let Rothschild send a message from his (Luoma's) computer again. So there ARE obviously invisible ley lines and pressures operating behind the UB list scene in order to build an agreeable presentation, though of course in light of this story - are there others? - there is reason to question the honesty and openness - if not the outright authority - of those whose choices make the list whatever it continues to be. Perhaps this might give cause to wonder what that is, measured over against what it otherwise might be. While there may be no exact "destination" in this swimming towards what we otherwise always have to put before us in order to be able to believe we can "reach" it, is there also some truth to the fact that we, as listees, as poets, and/or as persons are simply drowning in what we might take to be the "lake of light" that may also be nothing more than our own conceit? It certainly seems a point (somewhere far ahead) worth asking, here, and now. - S E

> From: A H Bramhall <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: up with down!
> Date: Fri, 15 Oct 1999 12:11:24 -0400
>
> Dan Raphael expressed this to the list, neglecting to capitalize his name properly, which I hate and hope something can be done about but I'll overlook because he's onto a major issue here:
>
> "I've been waiting for someone else to speak up about sondheim's all too often "poetry" posting to this list. It seems he just views this list as a place to post whatever comes off his typewriter."
>
> right on with the censorship idea! we can't let this list become prey to those who wish to post to it. we are caught up all the time with stuff, gobs
> of stuff. we need less stuff. we need to cut back. the heretics are ruining the garden, everything is so bad. I'm being oppressed. there are children everywhere. people are talking. it was really rainy yesterday. I can't take it anymore. Alan Sondheim keeps writing stuff, and it's not "real" poetry. it's stuff that just came off his typewriter, as opposed to the other kind. what right does he have? let us band together, I mean it, and demand that Alan stop posting stuff from his typewriter because if he doesn't we're > going to have to learn how to use the delete button, and I for one am much too busy for that.

>
> yours with an urgent sense of a vast problem, yet one, I think, that we can lick, if we just, like, you know, whatever. Allen

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

260. Mark Prejsnar
the critic's task
Wed 20 Oct 1999

But Mark, what about the possibility of a genuinely sociological criticism, anthropological even, investigating the set of beliefs (manners, fetishes, however you want to label the learned-behavior) in the background of the work? Like, to know that Hopkins and Merce Cunningham were in Olson's head as much as the more obvious influences of Pound Yeats and WCW. And to know about where he grew up, and what his politics were, and what rules he was laying down -- so that we don't have to judge him by, say, Edwardian, or high modernist standards?

Just some, em, ur, thoughts? Jordan

****

to which i reply: I have no arguement with any of this..I think i agree with it all...My original, rather intemperate, post, was in reply to the idea that C. Beach only had the right to judge Stephen Dobyns from the point of view of Dobyns' values and goals re poetry. But if Beach is bright enuff and careful enuff to understand what those values and goals are, (and i think he is, in his new book) then he has the right (nay, the duty! he said, waving a pedagogic finger in the air....) to say that Dobyns' values and goals stink, and are part of Dobyns' problem....

This is oversimplifying on a number of levels (not least, on the level of dealing with Beach's discussion, which i found stimulating and interesting...) but for time reasons it's the best summation of my position i can give, and it does OK i believe....

--mark prejsnar
@lanta

↑ Index

261. Ron Henry
Re: Dobyns vs. Hejinian
Wed 20 Oct 1999

As a former (and often at the time frustrated) student of Stephen Dobyns, when he was teaching at Syracuse a decade ago, I just wanted to make a couple points perhaps pertinent to the invective being thrown around. Forgive me if I am restating things already said earlier in the thread that I may have missed.

First, despite the disparity in sales between his fiction and poetry, Dobyns -- at least when I was his student -- took his poetry much more seriously (certainly compared to the detective novels, and even wrt the more serious novels). This makes me view Juliana Spahr's comparison of sales with a more interested eye than I might otherwise.

Second, I'll be a witness that he's certainly no friend of avant poetries, and this was my main frustration as a student and advisee; I well remember our verbal tussles over the validity of even as established a poet as Ashbery's (!) work.

For opinions on what he thinks poetry should do and what it shouldn't, a conscientous reviewer (I seem to have missed the original posting of this thread, but none of the layers of quotes passed down into the thread I read contain comments about this) had better read Dobyns' own essays on poetics (there are several that I know of, mostly from the late 80s). While to some degree they rehash decades-old notions of metaphor and image unlocking otherwise ineffable emotional and abstract communication, they at least position him in a way that allows a critic to not have to put words in his mouth. (Which is always a Bad Thing.)

Anyhow, anyone who has read a good deal of Dobyns' poetry (which I did while his student) knows that his project, whatever it is described as, is clearly a vastly different one than someone like Lyn Hejinian. Dobyns works on the level of tension between image and narrative, with an eye toward subverting some of the image conventions of mainstream-MFA poetries, it seems to me; he's significantly less concerned with form on the word-sound-sentence level than any poet whose name would normally be bandied about on this list. His poems often consist of (didactically-leaning) surrealist parables meant to illuminate the conceptual ruptures and assumptions of upper-middle class life, or at least the ruptures and assumptions of an upper-middle class academic like Dobyns himself.

Like the poems of his old colleague Ray Carver, Dobyns' poems sometimes seem to be notes for stories-with-an-ironic-insight that never made it to being fleshed out in prose. There's not necessarily anything wrong with that, I guess, and I knew plenty of folks who thought Dobyns' poetry was wonderful. But critiquing (and especially judging negatively) his work with the tools usually applied to avant poetries is shooting fish in a barrel, since many of the concerns addressed by that sort of apparatus is irrelevant to his stated goals.

Ron Henry
[redacted]
Ithaca NY
--
Ron Henry / [redacted]
Aught, a journal of poetry
http://people2.clarityconnect.com/webpages6/ronhenry/aught.htm
"March March with a trouser in its heart." -- Hannah Bonner

↑ Index

262. Mark Prejsnar
Re: dobyns v. hejinian
Wed 20 Oct 1999

This is a really interesting post....

I would only add, what JS alludes to at the end: My Life is a very special and unusual book, among counterstream works, and among Heninian's work.... The really fair comparison would be Velocities to, say, The Cold of Poetry, which is not a selected poems, but does collect a number of major works published less accessibly over a period of time, and so has some similarity.....

I don't think that the comparison of sales figures in that case, would complicate "marginal vs. mainstream" nearly as much!

--mark prejsnar
@lanta

On Sat, 16 Oct 1999, juliana spahr wrote:

> It seems that both Dobyns and Hejinian sell more or less similarly in poetry sales (which I think might complicate the marginal v. mainstream set up).
>
> Dobyns Velocities: New and Selected Poems sold 9,421 copies as of August of 1999 (a single title such as Dobyn's Body Traffic sold 3,066); Hejinian's My Life has sold around 8,000 copies as of September 1999 (Sun & Moon edition only; Burning Deck edition sold out but I don't know the print run on that). I don't have stats on other Hejinian titles but imagine they are less.
>
> Although one thing to consider is that Dobyns's Velocities was published in 1994. Hejinian has accumulated those sales over a much a longer time. It might take some more time to actually straighten out the sales similarities. Who knows though if Velocities will get the long term > spread of sales that My Life has.

>
> Still seems like an interesting similarity considering the muscle of Penguin v. Sun & Moon and also there must be significant spin off sales b/c of Dobyns's other writings that make his poetry sell better. (He seems to be the best selling Penguin poet.)
>
> Lisa Samuels has an article written shortly after (it seems) Beach's where she complains about the canonization of My Life in MLS.
>
> I'm looking forward to reading the Beach.

↑ Index

263. Bob Perelman
Ten to One
Wed 20 Oct 1999

Just out from Wesleyan:

Ten to One: selected poems, Bob Perelman.

↑ Index

264. Mark Prejsnar
the real issue of audience
Wed 20 Oct 1999

David Kellog wrote: I'm not sure I understand the question. I _do_ think that Beach's analysis is dismissive of the real issue of audience. In fact, his analysis of Dobyns's audience is wholly dismissive: it is a "built-in academic audience of more than three hundred creative writing programs" (59). While a few gestures are made toward what reviewers have to say about Dobyns, or more often what they do not say: "reviewers seldom speak about his use of form, if they mention it at all." (61)

****

Mark prejsnar replies: WHAT IS the real issue of audience?? It seems to me that Beach DOES address aspects of the issue of audience, throughout that chapter, and throughout the book.... In what way do you think he hasn't addressed "the real issue" ...? And by the way, the quotations you give from the chapter above, .. seem to me like perfectly useful and interesting asides by Beach (altho they are by no means the sum and substance of his arguments...)

↑ Index

265. Mark Prejsnar
sociology
Wed 20 Oct 1999

D Kellogg writes:

In fact, I contributed to that false dichotomy by framing the "consequence" of Beach's position in terms of what Dobyns thinks. More properly, what Dobyns's readers _do_ with Dobyns is the (sociological) point at issue.

Mark, why do you lay down the "critic's task" in such prescriptive terms? If Beach wants to act as a critic in the terms you're laying out, fine -- but it's the way criticism (aesthetics) _always_ trumps sociology in this chapter -- the way sociology is just an excuse for another close reading -- that gets me.

****

Mark P. replies: these are reasonable points; there are many points of emphasis where we differ a bit, but i will grant many things you say; ...

i only feel (maybe i'm just less rigorous and original than you, in thnking about these issues...) that C. Beach has made an interesting start toward siting some of the overall tension lines and creative currents on the contemporary scene.... Despite many limitations in his book..

It sounds to me like you have some ideas of your own about how a sociology of the poetry world would work.... Maybe (if you haven't) you should publish 'em (...or give us a citation, if they are partly out there somewhere in print) ... i'm quite willing to believe that they would be valuble, and wd. fill in the lacunae in Beach's work...

↑ Index

266. Mark Prejsnar
Re: Bishop Nixs Pound!
Wed 20 Oct 1999

This is pretty fascinating... i think that maybe ol' Ez would suggest that such a holy canonization was wildly and humorously inappropriate for him.... He didn't have all that much use for Xianity..... (he seems to have thought it was OK for keeping those peasants happy down on the farm, in the "middle ages", but deeply disliked it as a living force..)

On Mon, 18 Oct 1999, Sylvester Pollet wrote:

> Awhile back I posted an announcement of Ezra Pound's induction into the Poets Corner at St John the so-called Divine in New York scheduled for later this week. Here's the latest news from Tim Redman (I asked permission to forward this):

> I was informed by Omar Pound that Ezra Pound's installation in the Poet's Corner of St. John the Divine has been denied by the bishop. Evidently, a petition was circulated among parishioners protesting the decision by the Electors and threatening a demonstration.
>
> Tim Redman
>
> Anybody know any cardinals? Sylvester

↑ Index

267. Lisa Samuels
dobyns v. hejinian
Wed 20 Oct 1999

hi juliana, all,

it's funny, i don't think of that essay as 'complaining' about the canonizing of =my life= -- but i guess it does, sort of. it's called "eight justifications for canonizing =my life=" and it investigates why =that book= is so acceptable, a palatable experimental work. lyn & i have had interesting talk and correspondence about the matter, about in her words what it means to be "accused of being happy." thus, she says, her responsive work "happily," emerging in installments near you.

lisa s.

↑ Index

268. Aviva V. Gabriel
Applying for ISBN #???
Wed 20 Oct 1999

Does anyone on this list know how to apply for an ISBN # for a self-published book? I have a colleague at work who wants amazon.com to carry her book, but they need an ISBN # first... of course. Thanks so much.

Aviva Vogel Gabriel
Poetangles & Motherdrum Studios
P.O. Box 1085
Norwich, VT 05055-1085

Kind of empty in the way it sees everything, the earth
gets to its feet and salutes the sky.

--John Ashbery, from "For John Clare"
----- Original Message -----
From: juliana spahr <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, October 16, 1999 12:44 PM
Subject: dobyns v. hejinian

> It seems that both Dobyns and Hejinian sell more or less similarly in poetry sales (which I think might complicate the marginal v. mainstream set up).
>
> Dobyns Velocities: New and Selected Poems sold 9,421 copies as of August of 1999 (a single title such as Dobyn's Body Traffic sold 3,066); Hejinian's My Life has sold around 8,000 copies as of September 1999 (Sun & Moon edition only; Burning Deck edition sold out but I don't know the print run on that). I don't have stats on other Hejinian titles but imagine they are less.
>
> Although one thing to consider is that Dobyns's Velocities was published in 1994. Hejinian has accumulated those sales over a much a longer time. It might take some more time to actually straighten out the sales similarities. Who knows though if Velocities will get the long term spread of sales that My Life has.
>
> Still seems like an interesting similarity considering the muscle of Penguin v. Sun & Moon and also there must be significant spin off sales b/c of Dobyns's other writings that make his poetry sell better. (He seems to be the best selling Penguin poet.)
>
> Lisa Samuels has an article written shortly after (it seems) Beach's where she complains about the canonization of My Life in MLS.
>
> I'm looking forward to reading the Beach.

↑ Index

269. George Bowering
Re: _Words_ by R.C.
Wed 20 Oct 1999

> since then this tape has been in my car player looping continually --- and this being atlanta i spend altogether too much time in that damned car --- but the tape has been a joy i feel like i know this whole book of poems much
> much better than my previous several-many readings of it had tuned me

Reminds me of the days when I told people to type out other people's poems to read them better. So after many readings of Sheila Watson's great _The Double Hook_ (novel) I sat and typed the whole thing out. Got a result similar to what yr mentioning.

Now, I would advise this for people who dig _Paradise Regained_ or the works of Robert Kelly.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

270. Aviva V. Gabriel
Making & Looping Poetry Tapes
Wed 20 Oct 1999

I've done it a lot, beginning with the poetry of Wallace Stevens...and moving on to other poets I wanted to "know" in a deeper way. I find it extremely valuable even before actually listening to the tape -- the actual tape-creation forces me to slow down my reading, and involve myself kinesthetically with the poetry, in a way that sliding my eyes over the page can never do. I think I have a touch of attention-deficit-disorder, to use a pop-psycho term for "impatience" and "impulsivity," and sometimes the thought that I have a larger purpose in creating a tape for later use forces me to read longer and more attentively than I might otherwise do. Then, after all these benefits accrue, there's the bonus of looping the tape in the car, where I spend too much time to waste.

_____

Aviva Vogel Gabriel
Poetangles & Motherdrum Studios
P.O. Box 1085
Norwich, VT 05055-1085

_____

Kind of empty in the way it sees everything, the earth
gets to its feet and salutes the sky.
--John Ashbery, from "For John Clare"
----- Original Message -----
From: Lowther, John <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Tuesday, October 19, 1999 11:26 AM
Subject: _Words_ by R.C.

> {poetix}
>
> a few weeks ago i made a tape --- some 70 minutes of a possible 90 --- me > reading the entire book _Words_ by creeley --- it was interesting to do ---
> to try to get in a reading, singular, something of the complexity that one > finds in reading any poem of his --- i have that exact change yearbook
with > cd and so i had two exempla of his reading style to think about tho, > ultimately, my taping doesnt sound too much like how i imagine r.c. wd have > read these
>
> since then this tape has been in my car player looping continually --- and
> this being atlanta i spend altogether too much time in that damned car --- > but the tape has been a joy i feel like i know this whole book of poems
much > much better than my previous several-many readings of it had tuned me
to ---
> last night i went back and looked at the text for the 1st time since the > recording and the effect is very palpable, that i now know whole passages > almost by heart
>
> and it isnt that my readings are so brilliant --- in listening to the tape
i > hear in various places that i've missed a nuance by placing a certain stress
> here and not there or that something is, due to my reading, off-balance in
a > way that's not as interesting, or even, balanced in a way that i think wasnt > felt, intended etc...
>
> do other folks ever do this sort of thing ? i know my friend mark does as > that's partially what suggested to me that i might make this tape --- just > curious
>
>
>
>)L
>

↑ Index

271. Pritchett,Patrick
obit for Sarraute
Wed 20 Oct 1999

http://www.nytimes.com/library/books/102099obit-sarraute.html

↑ Index

272. Jason Nelson
Diseases of the Horse
Wed 20 Oct 1999

A poetics proejct and animals and diseases. Again trying to latch into/onto/over/under the whole science word world.

Any and all thoughts are so greatly appreciated I might get dizzy. Jason Nelson

"Diseases of the Horse"

Vesicular Stomatitis

a fever begins (skin), sporadic and reemerging

Equine practitioner is walking fast and slow or running and falls from breath, from practicing.

Transmission: endemic in warm released by what's hiding in deep grasses introduced by motion

a lesion blisters (virus), swells and breaks

Veterinarian forces ideas of healing and infection into the horse, the mouth, the nostrils, the coronary bands.

Human Risk: sunlight destroys risk and creates risk and hauling and producing return to horses then humans then horses

death occurs (sometimes), and others live

Equine practitioner quarantines only the virus, the virus and the horse parts attached.

"Diseases of the Horse"

The Strangles

An untreated foal is as precise as a field of vaccines. And the greening fenced bottomland arbitrates the spread, the change from moving. Horses want to harbor the outbreak of Pneumonia, fertility problems, Endometritis, and the galloping desire to cease. Only being healthy enough to play host, serve pathogens, and replace air.

With their abscesses come a period of hesitation, an incubation, a rush of legs beginning in a small corral. With respiratory distress comes an understanding that beyond this line of barbs is another fence.

In this severed prairie any contact creates wind, and the horses lose the abandon to breath long before infection.

Jason Nelson

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

273. Joe Amato
Re: Review of Beach's Poetic Culture
Wed 20 Oct 1999

david, speaking specifically in terms of sociological analysis then: it strikes me that bourdieu is clearly off the mark in associating (so directly, that is, in the excerpt you quote) the authorship function (in literature) with what goes on in the art gallery (at least, here in the u.s.)... i mean, if what we're after is a sociological treatment proper, then we'd have to look more closely at the publishing conglomerates that are emerging (and related small-press consolidations) over and against the gallery network of production and distribution...

which is actually a way of promoting an article that i think begins to get at precisely this 'distinction': steve tomasula's "speaking through a veil of dollars: the dialogue between art and literature," in the july/august (1999) _new art examiner_... most valuable, in my view...

which is another way of saying that discussions of poetic production generally benefit (as bourdieu suggests) from a consideration of other (artistic) enterprises... but that the differences between reception of visual art (e.g.) and poetry (e.g.) might be at least as significant as the similarities...

interesting exchange... perhaps necessary? to add here that critiquing _poetic culture_ (or whatever) is not quite the same as criticising it, and that the former is a more complex and, i think, more worthy pursuit...

best,

joe

↑ Index

274. Joe Amato
job ads...
Wed 20 Oct 1999

---

below are two job ads... the 2nd ad duplicates the 1st in part, but i thought it offered some useful info...

best,

joe

Ursinus College. Visiting Assistant Professor of Creative Writing

Ursinus College invites applications for a Visisting Assistant Professor of Creative Writing, for a term of one year, renewable for up to two additional years, beginning in Fall 2000. Poetry &/or playwriting preferred. Position carries a 3-course workload per semester, in creative writing & composition. Candidate must present quality creative work, demonstrate excellence in teaching, & delight in working in a lively undergraduate writing scene. Ursinus is a highly selective, co-educational, residential liberal arts college of 1200 students located 25 miles from Philadelphia. Please send letter of application, c.v., three letters of recommendation, & 20-page writing sample by Nov. 5 to Jon Volkmer, English Dept., Ursinus College, P.O. Box 1000, Collegeville, PA 19426. Preliminary interviews at MLA. Ursinus College is an EEO/AA Employer. In keeping with the college's historic commitment to equality, women & minorities are especially encouraged to apply.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT JOB OPENINGS

1. Assistant Professor, tenure track, to teach Shakespeare and either postcolonial literatures or British drama. Contact Professor Carol Dole, [redacted]

2. Visiting Assistant Professor of Crearive Writing (preferably poetry and/or playwriting). One-year position, renewable for two more years. Contact Professor Jon Volkmer, [redacted]

Ursinus College is a member of the Centennial Conference, along with Bryn Mawr, Franklin & Marshall, Haverford, Johns Hopkins, Swarthmore and five other exceptionally strong liberal arts colleges. Over half of our 340 first-year students this year achieved high school rankings in the top ten percent. In terms of minority recruitment, among the top eighty US News liberal arts colleges in the country, only Oberlin, Swarthmore, Wellesley and Wesleyan match or exceed Ursinus in percentage of African-American students. We are dedicated to diversity, both in student and in faculty recruitment, and minority candidates are especially invited to apply.

The College is seeking to hire motivated faculty members who are eager to combine their scholarly interests with teaching. Because Ursinus College faculty constitute a scholarly community that takes tremendous pride in the individual achievements of our colleagues and students, we support faculty scholarship with a number of programs, including early or junior leave for assistant professors, summer research stipends, and travel grants. Reflecting our educational philosophy that values personal interaction among students and professors, we also strongly support undergraduate research. Last year 33 of our students co-authored publications that described collaborative faculty-student research and 111 students made public presentations at undergraduate research conferences.

Finally, according to the visiting team of faculty who were here last year for Ursinus' ten-year re-accreditation, there is solid evidence that Ursinus works uncommonly well at producing students who are "articulate, self-confident, and serious of purpose." The team concluded: "One comes away from a visit to Ursinus inspired." It is likely that candidates would agree if they visited our campus.

↑ Index

275. Nielsen, Aldon

Fwd: SynThink for Free in L.A.

Wed 20 Oct 1999

SYNTHINK event --"Unwriting the Word: A >Festival of Music, Murmurs, & Media" on next Friday & Saturday, the 29th >and 30th at Loyola Marymount University.
>
>Some of you inquired about the cost, so this is a message to clarify that >all events are FREE! FREE! FREE!
>
>That means receptions with fruits of the vine and food, jazz and several >forms of writing, for NOTHING! High culture brain massage with wonderful >music and sheer fun...at no cost.

>
>Again, to look at the website version of the Festival Program, with links >about the participants, see: http://clawww.lmu.edu/graduate/engl/Colloq.htm
>
>Regards,
>
>Paul Harris
>
>
>
>Dr. Paul A. Harris
>Dept. of English
>Loyola Marymount University
>Los Angeles, CA 90045-8215
>http://clawww.lmu.edu/~pharris/

↑ Index

276. Alan Sondheim
THE CLIMB INTO THE MOUNTAINS
Wed 20 Oct 1999

(needs courier or other equi-spaced typeface)

```
    THE CLIMB INTO THE MOUNTAINS

                 ####Now here is where I am balancing
                  ###on top of THE PRESIDENT, Julu said,
                    #standing on her head: It was a wonder!
#Jennifer joined her. THE PRESIDENT #######################was the world thought they but while #######################they were alive and together, they #                    #would enjoy it. Look, said Julu, I've #breasts. Jennifer looked; it was a #first, this breakthrough of wonder as ####they began to leap from T to H,
#landing solidly. A gap appeared; Julu #######################related it to the hymen, which Jennifer #######################didn't understand. Follow me, Julu
#       #said; jump, and we'll make it ok
          #somewhere down here where for a moment they #rested, as if their skins were torn and open #from the struggle. They jumped up quickly
```

#to the other side. Such was the case.
#######################Look, said, Julu, here is where it is,
#######################and Jennifer agreed she had much to #learn. Suddenly it was time to leave #and an E appeared; THE PRESIDENT
#######################readied himself for the onslaught HE #######################was sure to come. Sure of victory, he #carried the following: The EYES of #Jennifer, her TONGUE - she could #neither see nor speak; and the HYMEN #of Julu, transforming her into a #permanent container. This is my ##misery, Jennifer, Julu said; she ####screamed JUMP JENNIFER, leaping

#across the gap associated with the #######################bleak world of THE PRESIDENT, who #######################had condemned both men and women
#for wrecking the perfect country.
        #   #Thus the country was spared and #   #rebuilding according to plan; Julu #   #could hardly stand it. Now she ##   ##suffered as well, her sex closed #######to everyone. Jennifer wrote this and ###every other history, almost falling,
#jumping up to claim the territory
#######################of the R. THE PRESIDENT would watch #######################from his eyes. THE PRESIDENT was #thinking: In what way is the world #####   #primary? What can be said about the ########   #primacy of the world? Clearly it was #not in perception itself; his exper##iment on Jennifer was conclusive.
#######Jennifer began sliding, looking for a ###jump onto just another letter. E was on #the horizon, clearly and calmly gar#######################nered, a moment of solid foot among #######################that most popular letter. And, THE #PRESIDENT reflected, she was blind.
#So the primacy must be elsewhere,
#perhaps in the style of the world
#itself - a style that owed to classi#cal logic and its tradition. The name

##Aristotle came to mind as all three,
####Julu, Jennifer, and THE PRESIDENT
####
 ### ######lept fearfully onto the S. THE PRESIDENT # ### ##thought, climbing up, it was not so #much the organization of the world,
#but its robustness in the face of #continuous decouplings, linkages
 # #### ##breaking down in the midst of the ########## ####landscape of the symbolic. All ready
  ######
#leaping onto the I, as he continued,
#####################Jennifer shuddering, unable to speak,
#####################only to scrawl letters with her one #good hand. Leaving the I or ego, they #moved onto the D, the darkness also of #####################the symbolic. Beyond the robustness #####################must be chains, linkages from small to #large, holding the subatomic in place

#while the world, more vast than any #cosmos, occurs above the quarks and # ##their constituents. All three almost ### ###tripped, following the complex train of ################thought in relation to the robust, of ############which they'd heard nothing. Jump Jennifer!
#and back onto the familiar E they were #####################indeed, holding their own. What can #####################anyone say beyond this, asked Julu,
#knowing full well there was no answer
#at all as language and world appeared,
#but only appeared, to descend into #complete chaos. Cure me, cried Jennifer,
#her vision gone, crawling across the ##letters like a foreign landscape, but ####the only landscape at all. That's it!
#shouted THE PRESIDENT, be careful now,
#####################we're on an N, the landscape which is ###foreign is the only landscape there is;
  ######we're faced with alterity from the very #######midst of the self. They began their long

```
       #######descent. And between alterity and robustness
     #######which conceals alterity, therein lies culture.
   #######Please oh god help me, cried Jennifer; watch it!
 ######           #said Julu, this N is difficult, and we #######################are almost off. Now just a slight jump,

              ####and they were on the final letter. Julu
               ###asked, please I beg you, THE PRESIDENT #was silent; the question about the pri#                #macy of the world had been solved. I #######################will be your eyes, Jennifer, said Julu.
#######################You are both cleared of any wrongdoing,
#said THE PRESIDENT, and are free to go.
                #I'm blind, wept Jennifer. You are inno#cent, said THE PRESIDENT, that should ####be sufficient. We are all equally alive.

 hack
 ./hack
 .banner THE PRESIDENT
 ./banner THE PRESIDENT
 ./banner -30 THE PRESIDENT
 ./banner -w 30 THE PRESIDENT
 ./banner -w THE PRESIDENT > ~/zz
 ./banner -w 30 THE PRESIDENT > ~/zz
```

↑ Index

277. Alaric Sumner

Domestic Ambient Noise/Bob Cobbing/Lawrence Upton/Riding the Meridian

Wed 20 Oct 1999

The general advertisement did not make it clear that there are quite a lot of resources on and around Cobbing/Upton's Domestic Ambient Noise project on Riding the Meridian (http://www.heelstone.com/meridian)

1) Discussion between Bob Cobbing, Lawrence Upton and myself on Domestic Ambient Noise and performance.

2) Article by cris cheek on Domestic Ambient Noise

3) A collaboration by Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton (inc. sound)

4) Solo work by Bob Cobbing (inc. sound)

5) Solo work by Lawrence Upton (inc. sound) incorporated in an article on page/screen/performance/terminology (including discussion of Domestic Ambient Noise)

More information on Domestic Ambient Noise from: Writers Forum: http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

↑ Index

278. Thomas Bell
Re: THE PRESIDENT-MACHINE
Wed 20 Oct 1999

---

if we're into voting these days i second the below, particularly the generosity

tom bell

Alan Sondheim wrote:
>
> generosity; I'd also like to see more work presented here that deals with > Poetics - from a point of view _within_ poetry or other literary forms, > complementing the work already from the position of critique or dialog.
>
> - Alan

--
```
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY     \//\\\/\//\\\/                <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J    K  JOVE BY  HHH           ZOOOOZ    ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL  STOPG         [    EMPTY                          ] SPACER
```

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

279. Ron Silliman
Re: wow--too much
Wed 20 Oct 1999

Would we really have 50 messages per day if the server was up 7 days per week instead of the three to four that seems now to be the case?

I heartily recommend the digest option (which I use) as well as setting up a special hotmail (or similar) account just for Poetics (I do this also).

Self-restraint in sending messages is also a value.

Ron Silliman

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

280. Stephen Vincent

Frank O'Hara/Rauschenberg

Wed 20 Oct 1999

Recently I went to Los Angeles' Museum of Contemporary Art to see, "In Memory of My Feelings," a delightful show (up through November 14) that features many, what might be called "cozy" collaborations between Frank O'Hara and the artists in his life (Larry Rivers, Alfred Leslie, Jasper Johns, Alex Katz, Michael Goldberg, Grace Hartigan, Elaine de Kooning, Joe Brainard and several others). Then I went next door see Alex Katz interviewed on stage by Raymond Ferguson, the curator of the show. Katz is rather wonderful in remembering his experience - in the mid-nineteen fifties - of becoming a figurative painter in opposition to abstraction. "When the opposition tries to cow you, that's the time to stick out your elbow and stick with your stuff." And his wry rendering of O'Hara in the mode of MOMA curator (a non-stop talking, whiskey priest) put the poet up on his feet Unlike most of the artists in the show, however, my sense now is that the artist closest to O'Hara - in vision and process - was actually Robert Raushenberg. The "Feelings" exhibit revels in work that was made in intimate responses to O'Hara's person - but, in that way, though wonderful, it is simultaneously limited. One gets a strong sense of how these artists loved his presence and art and texts are full evidence of the sometimes ingenious ways they often collaboratively engaged, enlarged and enhanced those - Joe Brainard and Larry Rivers perhaps most strongly. Yet, when I crossed over to the Museum's permanent collection and entered a room full of Raushenberg assemblages, the work in the O'Hara show became suddenly secondary, or comparatively private. Both O'Hara and Rauschenberg share an epic, joyous, and ambitious pleasure in making an enormous collage of the whole disparate phenomena of the 50's American eye, particularly as it opened to the globe, and the way the globe began to impinge particularly on New York City - turning what Katz called a then provincial metropolis into an international capital - a place no longer just impacted by the outside, but throwing its emergent post-war power back over and around the world. It's as if Rauschenberg's and O'Hara's work both took William Carlos Williams' aesthetic - his obsession with local materials - and transformed that relatively small town mode into the gleeful acquisition of any material, no matter its global origin or disparate source (street concrete or tele-media), and made it appropriate to either poem or artwork. Ideas in all things. Things in all ideas. A prophetic honeymoon - done not without irony - with Empire. In fact I suspect a parallel reading of both R and O's work (visual and textual) in that same period will end up being much more rewarding than the more immediate, personal delights of the L.A. show. (I have not read a great deal of the critical lit on O'Hara, but maybe this association with Rauschenberg's work has already been developed?) The show, by the way, carries a well produced catalog with a very readable, seemingly well informed essay by Ferguson, and many reproductions of the work by the artists. Unfortunately the show will only travel (I believe) to a museum on Long Island (which is not listed in the catalog). Why not New York City is a mystery.

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

281. David Kellogg
Re: sociology
Wed 20 Oct 1999

Mark Prejsnar wrote:

> i only feel (maybe i'm just less rigorous and original than you, in thnking about these issues...) that C. Beach has made an interesting start toward siting some of the overall tension lines and creative currents on the contemporary scene.... Despite many limitations in his book..

I'll agree. It's a valuable book. My critique has to do with the relations between sociology and aesthetics (i.e., criticism as traditionally conceived). And most of the book is _much_ better than the Hejinian/Dobyns chapter. I learned a lot.

> It sounds to me like you have some ideas of your own about how a sociology of the poetry world would work.... Maybe (if you haven't) you should publish 'em (...or give us a citation, if they are partly out there somewhere in print) ... i'm quite willing to believe that they would be valuble, and wd. fill in the lacunae in Beach's work...

It's in the works (abstract at http://www.duke.edu/~kellogg/CV/research.htm). Some early ideas were laid out in "Literary History and the Problem of Oppositional Practice in Contemporary Poetry." Cultural Critique 32 (1995-6): 153-186.

and

"Desire Pronounced and/ Punctuated: Lacan and the Fate of the Poetic Subject." American Imago 52.4 (1995): 405-437.

But those were before I'd really read Bourdieu well.

David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

282. r.drake
Re: Applying for ISBN #???
Wed 20 Oct 1999

---

go to http://www.bowker.com --all the info & forms are there. you can even apply online (tho they've been having trouble with their secure creditcard site. application fee is $195.

luigi burning press

> Does anyone on this list know how to apply for an ISBN # for a self-published book? I have a colleague at work who wants amazon.com to carry her book, but they need an ISBN # first... of course. Thanks so much.
>
> _____
>
> Aviva Vogel Gabriel
> Poetangles & Motherdrum Studios
> P.O. Box 1085
> Norwich, VT 05055-1085
>
> _____
> Kind of empty in the way it sees everything, the earth
> gets to its feet and salutes the sky.
> --John Ashbery, from "For John Clare"
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: juliana spahr <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Sent: Saturday, October 16, 1999 12:44 PM
> Subject: dobyns v. hejinian
>
> It seems that both Dobyns and Hejinian sell more or less similarly in poetry sales (which I think might complicate the marginal v. mainstream set up).
>
> Dobyns Velocities: New and Selected Poems sold 9,421 copies as of August of 1999 (a single title such as Dobyn's Body Traffic sold 3,066); Hejinian's My Life has sold around 8,000 copies as of September 1999 (Sun & Moon edition only; Burning Deck edition sold out but I don't know the print run on that). I don't have stats on other Hejinian titles but imagine they are less.

> Although one thing to consider is that Dobyns's Velocities was published in 1994. Hejinian has accumulated those sales over a much a longer time. It might take some more time to actually straighten out the sales similarities. Who knows though if Velocities will get the long term spread of sales that My Life has.
>
> Still seems like an interesting similarity considering the muscle of Penguin v. Sun & Moon and also there must be significant spin off sales b/c of Dobyns's other writings that make his poetry sell better. (He seems to be the best selling Penguin poet.)
>
> Lisa Samuels has an article written shortly after (it seems) Beach's where she complains about the canonization of My Life in MLS.
>
> I'm looking forward to reading the Beach.

↑ Index

283. David Kellogg

Re: the real issue of audience

Wed 20 Oct 1999

First I'd like to apologize to Ron and others for flooding their mailboxes. Please let me know backchannel if you think I'm spending too much time on a minor issue. My own sympathies being with the avant-garde (and as an ex-"workshop" poet too), I want experimental work to be taken seriously by the mainstream. I also want contemporary poetry in general to be taken seriously by the cultural studies/cultural sociology folks. My view is that while Beach's book has a lot going for it, this chapter is problematic in both those efforts.

Mark Prejsnar wrote:

> Mark prejsnar replies: WHAT IS the real issue of audience?? It seems to me that Beach DOES address aspects of the issue of audience, throughout that chapter, and throughout the book.... In what way do you think he hasn't addressed "the real issue" ...? And by the way, the quotations you give from the chapter above, .. seem to me like perfectly useful and interesting asides by Beach (altho they are by no means the sum and substance of his arguments...)

The "real issue of audience" is dealt with MUCH better by Beach in his chapters on the Moyers special, the Nuyorican/slam poets, and Bob Holman's USA of Poetry.

A partial list of complaints regarding this chapter would include:

1. Poor choice of Dobyns's poems, not representative of his narrative work or what even Beach acknowledges is his best work. Beach talks as though most of Dobyns's work is first-person autobiographical, which is not true. A large number of his poems, while presenting a recognizable Dobyns "voice," are non-first person narratives.

2. No mention of Dobyns's experiences in Chile, which inform quite a few of his poems and give some of them a possible political valence.

3. Ludicrous paragraph-length biographies of both Hejinian and Dobyns which tip the inevitable close reading in Hejinian's favor.

4. Unfair comparison between _My Life_ ("the language poem EVERYONE loves") and a Dobyns selected, as others have pointed out. A better comparison might be between a lesser-read though still important poet's Selected (Watten's FS, perhaps) and Dobyns, or between _My Life_ and an "instant classic" of mainstream poetry, such as _Praise_ by Robert Hass or _The Wild Iris_ by Louise Gluck.

5. Chapter's implicit promise to deal with audience not met.

That told, I have to keep rearticulating my position: I am neither a friend nor fan of Dobyns's poetry or the workshop mode. I love Hejinian's work. Yadda yadda. I don't think the chapter is in bad faith, exactly. But I do think it short-circuits the real work of comparison.

There are other issues, but I'm going to review the book for The Chicago Review so I think I'll shut up now.

David Kellogg
[redacted]
Duke University, University Writing Program
[redacted]

↑ Index

284. Jerrold Shiroma
New from Duration Press
Wed 20 Oct 1999

The second of Duration Press' international chapbook series is now underway, featuring:

Spectral Angel, by Gale Nelson
Empedocles's Sandal, by Habib Tengour (tr. from the French by Pierre Joris)
Degree: Of Stability, by Gennady Aygi (tr. from the Russian by Peter France)

Aurora, by Pura Lopez Colome (tr. from the Spanish by Forrest Gander)
Where Are We Now?, by Peter Waterhouse (tr. from the German by Rosmarie Waldrop)
Of Their Ornate Eyes of Crystalline Sand, by Coral Bracho (tr. from the Spanish by Forrest Gander)
20 Poems, by Lauri Otonkoski (tr. from the Finnish by Anselm Hollo)
A Discursive, Space: Interviews, by Anne-Marie Albiach (with Jean Daive) (tr. from the French by Norma Cole)

The subscription rate is $25 for all eight chapbooks. Please make checks payable to:

Jerrold Shiroma
117 Donahue St. # 32
Sausalito, CA 94965

For more information visit Duration's website:

http://www.durationpress.com

↑ Index

285. Maria Damon
Re: Lest I remember
Wed 20 Oct 1999

---

i adore alan. i hope he keeps sending stuff to the list.

At 12:20 AM -0500 10/20/99, Thomas Bell wrote:
>alan has been doing this for a long time. it's part of the list for me
>tom bell
>
>--
>//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
>OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
>WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
> LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER
>
>index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
>essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

286. pete spence
Re: handmade books sought
Wed 20 Oct 1999

> HAND BOOKS
>
> AN EXHIBIT / SALE
> OF HANDMADE AND PRIVATELY PRINTED / XEROXED BOOKS,
> ONE-OF-A-KIND'S, ZINES AND CHAPBOOKS
> TO BE HELD NOVEMBER 6-7 (reception Nov 6)
>
> IS LOOKING FOR SUBMISSIONS
>
> PLEASE DROP YOUR WORK OFF
> BEFORE NOVEMBER 3 AT
>
> BLUE BOOKS
>
> THE NEW SMALL PRESS BOOKSTORE
> AT NEW COLLEGE
> PLEASE FORWARD THIS ANNOUNCEMENT
> TO WHOEVER MIGHT BE INTERESTED

would have been nice to have a longer deadline next time you do something like this so bods like myself in distant corners of this globe can mail books to you// pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

287. A H Bramhall
Wang Dang Doodle Amongst Friends
Wed 20 Oct 1999

we've been talking about this for years, marveling at the neo-frank brocade. it's simply the dismembering of the original thing which we had in mind anyway, now spent. that's all we did. we got involved in things that were supposed to earn stuff, and so we set our sail. the imaginary monster: when we investigated we learned it lived in a town with a great school system and a fairly okay tax rate. do you recall the charge you felt, when you learned that? someone kept time, thinking that was important. that is, they told you they were on the job, whatever that entails. they got lax with certain attributes, insisting everything has a bright chance. hey, we're grandees, right? educated with plenty of pizzazz, and disinclined to bite on the heartlessness that goes on out there, here, or wherever. we have nice natures, basically. what interferences we face, well, nothing's free, right? costs brim over, like the river I saw the other day. it was embarrassing to see the water spread into the road and everywhere. think of dank cellars, soggy backyards and market value adjustments. if you want to speak of a Thing, there's one right there. a river overflowing its banks, that's so anti what we're about. we have a course to run. notice this fishy milt all over the place, does the equation want to handle that? we're asking questions today but, close the doors, let things seep in quietly. much of the slag has been removed to another district. today's rockets will have something to say. they won't exactly create a tension unless asked by quorum. oh how a quorum deserves love. the matter grinds us tiredly, sure, shaping logics and spewing out a tremendous vacancy that can be studied, along with every other college subject. so radical! let's bolt! bastards are those who have withstood the logical banishment. anyone can claim a taste from the source, as a matter of fact, but: it works with specific rules. one must willingly take the reins and create community standards. that's the picture, the cover charge, correct? haven't we been buzzing about this all along? we started as children so let's include that logical background in the picture. parlance fucks us over always, rather pleasurable really, and there are careers ready to burn a blazing bright light. a proper mystification would work well now, amongst the cantankerous great. not to remain in that comfy blur, tho. we're just not drunk enough. our anger has been used as a fuel for furtherance. I for one would like to touch that furtherance, and chew a few leathery hearts, just for the damn exercise of my whole anger. maybe it's the sweetie pie moonlight or the ding dong logistic of saying what you mean but the camaraderie is just a map of lazy fuck all. as in, specifically, aint there ever an edge slicing thru the perfect pie? why waste time publishing the tiny steps that show that the corral was a great idea? that's Quisling working overdrive. the career doesn 't want to live, it wants to be painted on a wall. great trophy! how did middling learn to rule? munch on this reminder: we're living it. all night long.

↑ Index

288. Pam Brown

Re: Lest I remember

Wed 20 Oct 1999

---

ditto
Pam Brown

--- Thomas Bell <[redacted]> wrote:
> alan has been doing this for a long time. it's part > of the list for me

> tom bell
>
> --
> //\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
> OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/
> <><>,...,.,
> WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ
> ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
> LLLL STOPG [EMPTY
>] SPACER
>
> index of online work at > http://members.home.net/trbell
> essays:
>
http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm
>

=====
Web site/P.Brown - http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Workshop/7629/

Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

289. Gerald Schwartz
Re: Diseases of the Horse
Wed 20 Oct 1999

Jason Nelson and list:

The purpose of Medicalese...

A sense of paradox hovers over such utterances as "What are these tests?"

When I was a boy, wisecracks were the order of the day when one was addressed

in tis manner -- comebacks such as
"Asking is a test" or
"You won't pass
unless you know."

Just as the logical paradox of Epimenides the Cretan ("all cretans are liars"), a puzzle is introduced by the self-referential feature of the utterance.

If the patient needs permission
to ask the question, why wasn't it asked for the question that seems to ask permission?

If the patient has a question and has the conference
and a turn to talk,
why doesn't he or she ask the question instead of asking to ask? Why is the question itself
"displaced"
by the physician?

What are the patient and physician
doing in doing this?

best, Gerald

↑ Index

290. Tony Green
Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
Wed 20 Oct 1999

C-c-curiouser etc How do I know if
this & any or every e-mail to the list is or is not a poem? shd I indent etc

to make it clear that it is? or rhyme?
I surely have it in mind to publish one or two of my e-mails to various persons in a _poetry_ magazine.

Dan Raphael wrote

> 5) lets see more poems by more people. lets' see more opinons about poems, more poetics & elss personalities. or maybe all of the above

Tony Green
>

↑ Index

291. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Talisman House Publication
Thu 21 Oct 1999

Out this week:

TOTEM AND SHADOW: New and Selected Poems by Paul Hoover

↑ Index

292. Ron Henry
Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Oct 1999 to 20 Oct 1999 (#1999-197)
Thu 21 Oct 1999

> From: dan raphael <[redacted]>
> Subject: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
>
> 5) lets see more poems by more people. lets' see more opinons about poems, more poetics & elss personalities. or maybe all of the above

Actually, let's not, on this list, directly. There are scads of free web page services out there who'll give you several Mb of disk space on a web server to put up poems. I humbly suggest that authors seeking feedback from poetics list members get themselves some web page space from one of these services (Yahoo, Tripod, etc.) and place their poems there, and simply post the URL to the poetics list.

Those interested can visit the site with a click, or at most a quick cut and paste of the web URL. Those not interested will only have to scan past a few lines. (This is the solution that some other mailing lists I am on use to handle material marginal to the express putpose of the list, and it seems to work all right.)

Many word processors allow basic web page formatting, and AOL has a free HTML layout program called AOLPress, which is no more difficult to use than the average word processor.

Ron Henry
--
Ron Henry / [redacted]
Aught, a journal of poetry
http://people2.clarityconnect.com/webpages6/ronhenry/aught.htm
"March March with a trouser in its heart." -- Hannah Bonner

↑ Index

293. Mark Prejsnar
Re: demographic query
Thu 21 Oct 1999

Well, in fact, John Lowther's original inquiry (which literally no one, i think, replied to, seriously, tho a number used it as a pretext for lame witticisms) .. was made in a certain spirit, which i think few listees understood: Here in @lanta we have an extremely exciting poetry scene growing, but of course the South is not considered a hotbed of poetry. (i mean the real stuff, not the workshop academic stuff....) So we are always looking to make connections and smoke out our hidden kindred...

Folks should consult the new New Orleans Review, for a sense of some of the possibilities lurking here in the xconfederate states.... But there is still a long way to go, to really set off the kind of bonfire we'd like... And as has been shrewdly analyzed by Hank Lazar (a naturalized Alabaman) in several essays, there are still many peculiarities to our situation here in the south: the rather debilitating legacy of a certain vitiated and self-conscious regionalism, for instance, which reinforces the most trivial and establishmentarian ideas about poetic and narrative form...

Anyway, this interest in how things are shaping up down in dixie, was much of the reason for John's original post, i believe.... To judge from many of the responses, which trivialized it, i thought it might help point this out...

southerly,
mark prejsnar
@lanta

On Tue, 19 Oct 1999, George Bowering wrote:

> ...& while we're being regionalist, what about per-capita List subscription by city or Metropolitan area? (Boulder, the poetry scene/city which I inhabit, comes to mind, but there are plenty of others: SF, NY, Lawrence KS, Philly, etc., etc.
>
> I am getting the idea that people are curious only about US places.
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

294. Mark Prejsnar

Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression

Thu 21 Oct 1999

---

i think that Dan R. has handled this controversy very well. i did not post in favor of his original post, because it feels peculiar and awkward to single out one poet for criticism, in this quasi-personal context....

but i and a bunch of other poets here in Atlanta felt at least very sympathetic: AS's work is often weak, diffuse, silly, and its extreme frequency on the list has led at least a half-dozen people i know to find new meaning in the phrase, "delete, don't read." Now, i think AS's work is sometimes energetic, interesting, provocative, and complex, also. Not as much as i'd like..and he sure does (as DR suggests) publish (including this list as a form of publication) far more than maybe he should. But, yeah, it is helpful to be acquainted with his work... i'm afraid Kent Johnson's extreme enthusiasm is a bit over the top; in my scheme of poetic things AS isn't huge or important or terribly exciting...

But Dan was indeed (as he suggests) expressing the feelings of quite a few people on the list. And i feel he is right to point out that the responses to him were a little too quick and too thoughtless: he was not calling for censorship.

So, as he says below: let 80 flowers bloom.....

mark prejsnar

On Tue, 19 Oct 1999, dan raphael wrote:

> 1) Maybe i should have back channeled to sondheim asking him about his work.
>
> 2) why would the same people championing alan's right to express himself on the list blast me for expressing myself. they sy the list is for exchanging ideas and get dont get up in arms about me.
>
> 3) i do not favor censorship. i was not asking the list meister to limit sondheims posting, but asking alan to consider the frequency of his positng in lieu of the list's limited time and reader's time as well. unlike several of the people who back-channeled me i get my list in digest form and cannot delete posts on sight. i do read through everything that's sent me. [there's always a lot of back-channel discussion. no one posted to the list in favor of my opinion, tho i received several back channels in support, as i suppose alan did]
>
> 4) but back to differences of opinions. some say that's what the list is for. and i suppose i should craft some moreciritcal reasons why i dont think reading most of alan's postings is worth my time. maybe even a reason critical argument would go against what some people see as the list's range ofitnerests/behaviors, since we dont see much heated discussion
>
> 5) lets see more poems by more people. lets' see more opinons about poems, more poetics & elss personalities. or maybe all of the above

↑ Index

295. Lowther, John

Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")

Thu 21 Oct 1999

{ p o e t i x }

sondheim writes;

> And Fourth - I want to thank the readers on this list in general for their > generosity; I'd also like to see more work presented here that deals with > Poetics - from a point of view _within_ poetry or other literary forms, > complementing the work already from the position of critique or dialog.
>

raphael writes;

5) lets see more poems by more people. lets' see more opinions about poems, more poetics & else personalities. or maybe all of the above

a silly song sings;

this list is my list, this list is your list...

stephen ellis brings up some interesting things in his post "up with down"

that is, i think he's right in saying that there is a "seriousness" factor (i serious now do mumble yawn) but, well, i'd hope that it's perspectival, that maybe what i (and i assume others) write that comes off over-serious or something might be more adequately described as being full of concern, mine (in this example) ---- i think recently of that form and content post i sent in with the talk of creeley and antin etc, i can see, and easily imagine various others finding the concerns expressed there "too" something... serious ? theoretical ? (or theoretically naive ?) ---- but, in that instance, theyre mine and i care about em

i imagine that if i suggested, even if only to myself, that the things i post to the list ought to all be things about which i really cared, that i'd immediately begin to chafe

stephen asks;

But what of posts that push the envelope of the group's assumptions? (i.e.., what ARE the group's assumptions?)

indeed, what are they ?
(our most cherished the hardest to spot ?)

john's list of poetix list assumptions/observations (making these up as i go)

1. posts which make unsupported, even banal claims contrary to (my perception of) general consensus will get lots of attention and have the potential to spawn multiple threads

2. most of the really interesting stuff must be going on backchannel

3. reading announcements that sound really fucking great are at least 9 hours away from where i am

4. alan sondheim will post at least every other day

5. any discussion of books of criticism will move into (if not thru) a divisive period of threading

6. everyone thinks the list cd be more interesting, useful, meaningful, productive (pick yr value term) but...

7. that things like the following will annoy some people to thank the list like position critique about interesting (and assume all will the threads really must i at into (hmmm...? apparently build outright choices

Perhaps over of conceit? point
sondheim chafe announcements discussion criticism attention backchannel i criticism thru)

divisive point agreeable presentation, generosity;
assumptions? assumptions?) are unsupported, and have potential apparently never there
the scene light list "destination"
what always in order able also all the this that
that is it's i imagine
expressed really cherished interesting discussion
of criticism move dan confident
measured against otherwise attention backchannel
i criticism thru) divisive point agreeable presentation, generosity; assumptions? assumptions?)
are unsupported, and have potential apparently never there the scene light list "destination" what always in order able also all
the this that that is
it's i imagine expressed really
8. that no one actually has a typewriter hooked to the list

so what do we want from the list ?

dan wants more by more
(but less by alan)
more opinions but less personalities (hmmm...? maybe this is a call for chance derived opinions ? i.e., those not held and ultimately revealing personalities)

alan wants
poetics "from a point of view _within_ poetry" etc (not sure i like this as i've heard so much talk of this basic idea, and all of it hinges on an apparently very clear idea of what's "within" and what's
"without" that i'm never very confident about myself)

i don't know what i want or if i do i doubt i should say

)L

↑ Index

296. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger
Re: Making & Looping Poetry Tapes
Thu 21 Oct 1999

I have a regular assignment in classes for students to read and record 20 minute selections from Moby Dick, Huckelberry Finn, Leaves of Grass, poems of John Donne, Howl, (depending on what the class focuses on), and they are to write short descriptions of how they made their selections, how their understanding of the text guides them in their performance, how they do the voices, intonation, sound effects or music (sometimes these readings turn into productions), etc. This is invariably an exciting, illuminating experience. Reading out loud allows you to experience the oral quality of literature (particularly of something like Huckelberry Finn) or the hidden poetic qualities of prose (the iambic pentameter of Moby Dick), the breath rythmns of poetry (Howl), or quality or tone (the standup comedian characteristic of AG's "America"). Reading out loud creates connectivity and music that otherwise the text-scanning eyeball often misses. Taking turns I had a class read excerpts from a Dorothy Parker story alongside excerpts from Gertrude Stein out loud -- and suddenly the works opened up and students "got" Stein and even felt a strange parallel between two seemingly incompatable writers. Open mouth; open brain.

Hilton Obenzinger

↑ Index

297. Alicia Askenase
Charles Bernstein and Gil Ott Reading, Oct 24
Thu 21 Oct 1999

The Notable Poets and Writers Series
presents

CHARLES BERNSTEIN and GIL OTT

Sunday, October 24, 2:30 p.m.
at the Walt Whitman Cultural Arts Center
2nd and Cooper Streets
Camden, New Jersey 08102

adjacent to the Rutgers University Camden campus for info and directions

www.waltwhitmancenter.org

[redacted]

↑ Index

298. David Zauhar
Re: the real issue of audience
Thu 21 Oct 1999

David Kellogg will be more articulate than I can be on this issue, but that's not going to stop me from writing. Audience studies for poetry would be interesting and are necessary, especially given that there seem to be dozens of laments published annually about poetry and the loss of audience (the Death of Poetry genre). By audience studies, I mean actual, empirical studies of the sort, for instance, that Bourdieu undertakes in Distinction. Closer to (my own anglo-american) home, in the late 80s, cultural studies scholars focusing on mass communication shifted attention from the texts to audience. The purpose seemed to be to empower the audience, to see, as I seem to remember David Kellogg mentioning at least once when explicating Bourdieu, what uses the audience made of the programs. There would be several differences between a cultstud TV audience study and any future poetry audience study. One that immediately pops to mind is that TV critics, from the Frankfurt School on, assumed passivity on behalf of tv audiences, whereas poetry readers (readers in general) where considered to be somewhat more active (then again, a common criticisim of "workshop poetry" is that it assumes greater passivity than does more formally investigative poetry). (I.A. Richards' _Practical Criticism_ as primitive audience study?) In any case, while I think that Audience study is necessary at some point, a MAJOR problem with all the cultstud works I can think of (Ien Ang's Watching Dallas, even Bourdieu's Distinction, to name just two) is that, ultimately, all that changes is that the TEXT shifts, from being one produced by an author-figure (writer, director, production company) to being one produced by the critic-commentator. That is, the AUDIENCE becomes the text, shaped by the commentator and subsequently commented upon by the commentator. This would strike me as a major limitation of audience studies. Of course, it's not like a study of the "primary" "text" is problem free.
Enough from me for now.

David Zauhar
University of Illinois at Chicago

"i have a city to cover with lines"

--d.a. levy

On Wed, 20 Oct 1999, Mark Prejsnar wrote:

> David Kellog wrote: I'm not sure I understand the question. I _do_ think that Beach's analysis is dismissive of the real issue of audience. In fact, his analysis of Dobyns's audience is wholly dismissive: it is a "built-in academic audience of more than three hundred creative writing programs" (59). While a few gestures are made toward what reviewers have to say about Dobyns, or more often what they do not say: "reviewers seldom speak about his use of form, if they mention it at all." (61)
>
> **********
>
> Mark prejsnar replies: WHAT IS the real issue of audience?? It seems to me that Beach DOES address aspects of the issue of audience, throughout that chapter, and throughout the book.... In what way do you think he hasn't addressed "the real issue" ...? And by the way, the quotations you give from the chapter above, .. seem to me like perfectly useful and interesting asides by Beach (altho they are by no means the sum and substance of his arguments...)

↑ Index

299. Poetics List Administration

Poe Party

Thu 21 Oct 1999

I had to reformat this message. - TS

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Thursday, October 21, 1999, 1:14 AM -0400
From: "L-Soft list server at University at Buffalo (1.8d)"
<[redacted]>
To: Poetics List <[redacted]>
Subject: POETICS: approval required (EA47E7AA)

This message was originally submitted by [redacted] to the POETICS list at LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU. You can approve it using the "OK" mechanism, ignore it, or repost an edited copy. The message will expire automatically and you do not need to do anything if you just want to discard it. Please refer to the list owner's guide if you are not familiar with the "OK" mechanism; these instructions are being kept purposefully short for your convenience in processing large numbers of messages.

From: George Fouhy <[redacted]>
To: "[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,

Nancy Desmond <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
Poetics List <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>, "[redacted]"
<[redacted]>, "[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
Sally Ann Hard <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
Teresa Burgun <[redacted]>, "[redacted]"
<[redacted]>, "[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>,
"[redacted]" <[redacted]>
Subject: Edgar Allan Poe Party!

Northern Westchester Center for the Arts
Creative arts café poetry series
272 North Bedford Rd. Mt. Kisco, NY Telephone: [redacted]

presents
Edgar Allen Poe(and Company)

ACTOR JAMES NOBLE the "Governor" from TV's long running tv comedy series Benson READS THE POETRY OF EDGAR ALLAN POE FOLLOWED BY OPEN MIKE For POETS OF THE PAST (AUDIENCE PARTICIPATION (COSTUMES OPTIONAL))

October 25th at 7:30 PM
REFRESHMENTS
DONATION: $7.00; STUDENTS AND SENIORS: $5.00

↑ Index

300. Peter Fogarty
ping pong
Thu 21 Oct 1999

---

ping pong pong ping pong
ping pong

or something like that? Who wrote it? It has been stuck in my head for the last three days and I can't account for its arrival except that I read it somewhere in the last two weeks and it stuck.

Regards,
peter

↑ Index

301. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Tracking down a reference.
Thu 21 Oct 1999

Could someone on the list help me with this? I have a new novel out, A Boy in Winter, and several people have now asked me if its title relates to a Philip Larkin poem, "A Girl in Winter." Looked in a Larkin collected and couldn't find such poem. Does anyone have a clue? (PS-- I know Larkin wasn't a good man-- I'd just like info on that line). Backchannel if you'd like.

Maxine Chernoff

↑ Index

302. jenho
New Avec Books URL
Thu 21 Oct 1999

Avec Books' website has a new URL-- www.instress.com/avec

It seems that the former webmaster is not going to provide a link to the site, so interested folks should please make a note of the change.

Best,

Jen

↑ Index

303. Jamie Perez
Re: the real issue of audience
Thu 21 Oct 1999

in all fairness, it seems like I hear again and again how poetry has a larger audience than ever. Is this larger than ever audience reading what I read? Doubt it.

The other night on local news here in DC I saw a story about what I think was a Chicago Police Precinct that got together once a week to read their own poetry and listen to each other. Community members came and participated, etc. No they didn't seem to be addressing the issues I'm dealing with, but still, people are reading/listening/writing words in some way that keeps the whole big thing moving.

Please also see the popularity/mutability of hip hop.

jamie.p

David Zauhar wrote:
<< given that there seem to be dozens of laments published annually about poetry and the loss of audience (the Death of Poetry genre). >>

↑ Index

304. Patrick Herron
Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
Thu 21 Oct 1999

>AS's work is often weak, diffuse, silly, and its extreme frequency on the list has led at least a half-dozen people i know to find new meaning in the phrase, "delete, don't read."

Mack, er, Mark, you have a very bright critical career ahead of you. Pass the sunglasses and roll out the red carpet! Get me a seat on Air Force One! Feel the authoritative upholstery! Turn down the lights!:)

Gee, maybe I should show some good ol' RESTRAINT. Ahh, fuck that.

> in my scheme of poetic things AS isn't huge or important or terribly exciting...

And I feel priveleged to learn of his lack of importance from you. :) Can you send me that scheme? The poetics of schemata, the schematics of poetry. How poetic. Kinda like instructions on building a television. I was just building a poem from scratch yesterday, some wires, some wood, some capacitors, resistors, and was looking for a good schematic. Maybe i need to head to Hotlanta to find them? Joe's Poetry Schematics Shop down there by Five Points? :)

> *But Dan was indeed (as he suggests) expressing the feelings of quite a few people on the list. And i feel he is right to point out that the responses to him were a little too quick and too thoughtless: he was not calling for censorship.*

actually, he he seemed to be advocating a particular form of censorship - self-censorship. self-censorship from threats. like of being labelled a crap artist. this type of censorship is what keeps newspapers and televisions full of doodoo, full of propaganda. I think the NYT might have a job for you! :) :) :) smiling happy faces! :) :) :)

I hope this was too quick and too thoughtless. Let's have my lawyer and your lawyer do lunch. in case your flame spreads, or "blooms," as you call it.

the market force of criticism = CONTROVERSY. good work. A+. :)

if we cannot laugh
we can count ourselves
doomed to the same thing
we have always been doomed to anyway.

Bloomin',
:)
Patrick

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

305. Ron Silliman
Arion Press evicted
Thu 21 Oct 1999

Hoyem had a very decent book of his own poems in the 1960s and this press and its cousins/ancestors have been responsible for a large portion of the small press universe for a long time. At the very least one would hope that a university (e.g. Berkeley, which published Hoyem's edition of Moby Dick) would invite the press as an ongoing archive (rather the way Hatch Show Prints, the press did most of the 19th C. minstrel show and later Grand Ole Opry flyers is now a "project" of the Country Music Hall of Fame in Nashville, just round the corner from Ryman Auditorium). It would be a tragedy to lose this resource.

Ron Silliman

CAST OUT

Eviction stalks letterpress printers creating new Bible

KEN GARCIA

Thursday, October 21, 1999

©1999 San Francisco Chronicle

URL:
http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/10/21/MN17742.DTL

In the beginning was the Word. In the end was the lease termination notice.

And while the end is not quite yet, the folks at Arion Press, one of the finest printing houses in the nation, know well that their days upon Earth may be a shadow.

Such biblical quotations are fitting in this case because Andrew Hoyem, the publisher of Arion books, is in the process of creating one of the world's greatest Bibles.

But just as the book is taking shape, so is a familiar San Francisco controversy: Hoyem and his specialized team of letterpress printers are being evicted from their longtime home on Bryant Street in the South of Market area, a place where meticulous book designers have been painting words for nearly a century.

Long before rising land prices, astronomical rents and multimedia, there was an art form called fine printing that found a home in San Francisco. The city became a showplace for some of the great American bookmakers of the modern age. People like John Henry Nash, Lawton Kennedy, and Edward and Robert Grabhorn all gravitated to the cultured city by the bay. Hoyem, who was Robert Grabhorn's last partner before his death, is their direct descendant.

The pages of the city's past are zipping by with such speed these days that it is hard to remember that beautiful books are still in demand, even if they are not available at a click from a discount merchant somewhere in the ether of the Internet. And only in development- crazed San Francisco, it seems, could the future of the Good Book end up being in such a bad place.

``It's a terrible situation for us,'' Hoyem told me the other day. ``There is a serious question about whether we can continue to function at all. And here we are in the midst of printing our biggest project ever.''

That would be the new Bible, the greatest single challenge in bookmaking. Hoyem, whose publishing house is renowned as a spawning ground for beautiful, handcrafted books, started the project more than a year ago. The Bible, all 400 copies, is being printed and bound mostly by hand. A work of printing art, and carrying a art-heavy price tag: $7,250 for an unbound edition, $8,500 for a leather-bound edition. That's without the hand-illuminated letters, which would raise the price another $2,500.

But that printing run has been disrupted by news of ``progress.'' The owners of the brick building at 460 Bryant St., the real estate arm of Fisher Friedman Associates, an architectural firm, are evicting all the tenants, ostensibly to do seismic upgrades.

Hoyem believes that the engineering work could take place with his printing presses in place, but the landlord has so far refused to extend the lease. And

Hoyem says he has been told that the architects want to develop the building to its ``full economic capacity.''

All the tenants, including some sewing firms and a few other small businesses, have been told to be out by June 30, 2000. Nothing in the Bible about that, although you might find it on a fiscal year calendar.

In Arion's case, however, moving is about as easy as printing ``War and Peace'' one letter at a time. Within his shop sit priceless presses, rare casting machines, keyboards and other equipment. His firm now owns the famed type foundry of Mackenzie & Harris, which began using its hot metal magic on equipment purchased for the 1915 Panama-Pacific International Exposition. In 1925, Mackenzie & Harris moved to a new building on Folsom Street and Hawthorne Lane, where their typography machines churned until they were relocated to the Bryant Street building in 1974.

So finding a new home for Arion involves moving more than 30 tons of cast-iron inventory and carefully reinstalling a complex configuration of gas lines, electrical lines and compressed air machines. Hoyem said the minimum estimate of any move so far has been $400,000 -- money, he says, that he does not have. At the very least, he believes, he would have to close the type foundry if he's forced to move. And the result of that would be even more costly.

``We simply could not make the kinds of books we make today,'' he says. ``It's very painful to contemplate.''

And even more so, if, like Hoyem, one bleeds ink.

Hoyem, by way of the Midwest and the Navy, started out at a small press shop in San Francisco in 1961, printing books no one else would publish, including some of the ``Beats,'' Philip Whalen and William Burroughs. Money was harder to come by than market share. He printed everything -- birth announcements, wedding announcements, even, desperate thing, office stationery.

He ended up meeting the brothers Grabhorn, legends in their field, who responded to his request for printing assistance as if he were being shepherded into a secret society. By 1966, Hoyem and Robert Grabhorn formed a partnership, which lasted until 1973 when Hoyem went on his own.

He formed Arion Press, after the Greek poet who was saved from drowning by a dolphin. And then Arion built its own mythical status in the fine art book field, starting with an edition of ``Moby Dick'' that included wood engravings of Herman Melville, whaling tools and even sea creatures. It was a tome that collectors ranked as one of the two or three greatest American fine press books. Ever.

That was many years and printings ago. Hoyem decided that his great project would be a classic rendition of the Bible, an undertaking that he said would probably be the last folio Bible printed from hot metal type, a book to rank up there with Johannes Gutenberg's 1455 landmark version.

A timeless treasure, now running short on time.

Hoyem says Arion has just completed printing the book of Isaiah, almost exactly halfway through the 1,350-page Bible. Since the landlord so far has declined to grant a lease extension, Hoyem says he'll be lucky to finish the printing by June, and almost certainly will not be able to complete the binding.

Profit driven by development was not a key topic for the prophets, either in the end or the beginning. Hoyem is just trying to find a way to survive. That's not an easy thing for a practitioner of a lost art in a rapidly changing city.

``That which now is in the days to come shall all be forgotten,'' the Bible says. Words to live by, which is probably why they wrote them down.

©1999 San Francisco Chronicle Page A19

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

306. Richard Dillon

Re: Tracking down a reference.

Thu 21 Oct 1999

Most poets are monsters. The ones, I mean, who win.

>From: MAXINE CHERNOFF <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Tracking down a reference.
>Date: Thu, Oct 21, 1999, 4:14 PM
>

> Could someone on the list help me with this? I have a new novel out, A Boy in Winter, and several people have now asked me if its title relates to a Philip Larkin poem, "A Girl in Winter." Looked in a Larkin collected and couldn't find such poem. Does anyone have a clue? (PS-- I know Larkin wasn't a good man-- I'd just like info on that line). Backchannel if you'd like.
>
> Maxine Chernoff

↑ Index

307. Alan Sondheim
Re: Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")
Thu 21 Oct 1999

It's not that I have a "very clear" idea of what's within or without - in fact, just the opposite. What seems to be the case (with numerous excep- tions including the post I'm replying to) is that a kind of rational dis- course is taken as norma- tive here; then there are the poems, the experi- ments, and poeticized replies to the discourse. And I think there might be other ways to discuss poetics, which at least for me goes beyond poetry to the flesh and bones of language and the symbolic, in a way that normative prose doesn't.

I'm not very clear here, for which apologies - Alan

Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

308. Nate and Jane Dorward
Re: Applying for ISBN #???
Thu 21 Oct 1999

Not to make a silly comment, but I was startled at the idea of a $195 fee for be- ing assigned an ISBN number--I thought this was a free service!!! In Canada here, I've received an ISBN number and an ISSN number through the National Library, free of charge.

N

Nate & Jane Dorward
[redacted]
109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
ph: [redacted]

↑ Index

309. pete spence
Re: demographic query
Thu 21 Oct 1999

>
> >...& while we're being regionalist, what about per-capita List >subscription
> >by city or Metropolitan area? (Boulder, the poetry scene/city which I > >inhabit, comes to mind, but there are plenty of others: SF, NY, Lawrence

>KS,
> >Philly, etc., etc.
>
>I am getting the idea that people are curious only about US places.
>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
> ,
>
,,,except for the Zaumist Protecorate whyche are many places eg germany/canada/france/usa/australia and all at once even!!! pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

310. Susan Wheeler
Lisa Robertson
Thu 21 Oct 1999

If anyone has a current e-mail address for Lisa Robertson and could pass it along to me, I would be grateful -- my address for her seems to have expired.

Susan Wheeler

↑ Index

311. Thomas Bell
Re: demographic query
Thu 21 Oct 1999

Certainly a true statement in middle TN, but then again this is where "New Criticism" came from.

tom bell

I for one would like to see more about significant Southern form today.

Mark Prejsnar wrote:
>, there are still many peculiarities to our situation > here in the south: the rather debilitating legacy of a certain vitiated > and self-conscious regionalism, for instance, which reinforces the most > trivial and establishmentarian ideas about poetic and narrative form...
>

>
--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

312. Robert Kendall
New at Word Circuits
Thu 21 Oct 1999

[Apologies for cross-posting]

 NEW AT WORD CIRCUITS

IN THE GALLERY:

The Ballad of Sand and Harry Soot
A Hypertext Poem by Stephanie Strickland

A lush poem of love gone wrong between Sand, she of silicon being, and Harry Soot, man of carbon, man of flesh and mood. Winner of a Best of the Net Award from About.com, which enthuses "Sweet and jiggy, Stephanie Strickland's new cyberpoem is hot buttered hopscotch." Stephanie Strickland has received many other awards for her poetry, and her hypertext True North is available from Eastgate Systems.

http://www.wordcircuits.com/gallery/sandsoot

IN COMMENTARY:

Time: The Final Frontier

Robert Kendall's HTlit column asks: How can we get a grip on the temporality of hypertext structure?

http://www.wordcircuits.com/comment/htlit_6.htm

IN THE STUDIO:

The latest beta version of the Connection System, a Web-based hypertext tool for poets and fiction writers. Includes Dreamweaver extensions.

http://www.wordcircuits.com/connect

Also check out our directory of authors and sites.

Word Circuits
Hypertext/Cybertext Poetry and Fiction

http://www.wordcircuits.com

Robert Kendall
E-Mail: [redacted]
Home Page: http://www.wordcircuits.com/kendall

Word Circuits (Hypertext/Cybertext Poetry and Fiction):
http://www.wordcircuits.com
On-Line Class in Hypertext Poetry and Fiction (The New School):
http://www.wordcircuits.com/kendall/htclass.htm

↑ Index

313. MAYHEW
tracking down Larkin
Fri 22 Oct 1999

---

re: Maxine chernoff's query:

A Girl in Winter is the title of a novel by Larkin, not a poem. It was published in 1957.

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

_____

↑ Index

314. aerialedge
New @ Bridge St: O'Hara Catalog, poetics@, Coolidge, Harryman, Waldrop &&&
Fri 22 Oct 1999

Ordering & discount information at the end of the post. Thanks, poetics, for your support.

1. _Poetic Culture: Contemporary American Poetry Between Community and Institution_, Christopher Beach, Northwestern, $17.95.

2. _A Deleuzian Century?_ ed Ian Buchanan, Duke, $18.95. Jameson, DeLanda, Rodowick, Mullarkey, Bogue, Dwyer, Colombat, et al.

3. _Art Poetic'_, Olivier Cadiot, trans Cole Swensen, Green Integer, $12.95. "I approve of your opinion, but NOT of your violence"

4. _Cultural Evidence_, Catalina Cariaga, Subpress/ 'A' A, $12. "She was smart and clever, like that."

5. _Now It's Jazz: Writings on Kerouac & The Sounds_, Clark Coolidge, Living Batch Press, $14. "Here's another good one."

6. _Zombie Jet_, Connie Deanovich, Zoland, $13. "Alpine + compound = Hitler."

7. _The Bob Dylan Companion_, ed Carl Benson, Schirmer, $15. Articles, essays, reviews '61-'98.

8. _If So, Tell Me_, Barbara Guest, Reality Street, $10.95. "A feathery existential bower shall block / the rude flagon."

9. _The Confetti Trees_, Barbara Guest, Sun & Moon, $10.95. ". . . . the suicide reflected in the water catches the eye that with only a passing interest might have watched the woman jump into the water the eye is caught by this 'artistic trick' when an adolescence is passed viewing these 'artistic tricks' the woman jumping into the water could never be as significant to this person as 'reflections in water' the reflection in water is 'poetry of the moment.'

10. _THE WORDS after Carl Sandburg's Rootabaga Stories and Jean-Paul Sartre_, Carla Harryman, O Books, $12. "Myriad seeds when struck by passing war machines give birth to comedy."

11. _The Hat 2_, ed Davis & Edgar, $7. Berrigan, Berrigan, Bouchard, Brown, Bruno, Carlen, Carll, Friedman, Gardner, Gilfillan, Gizzi, Hale, Jarnot, Keckler, Latta, Lubasch, Luoma, McCain, Malmude, Myles, Nelson, Olin, Padgett, Patton, Price, Quart, Sikelianos, Sweet, Szamatowicz, Vitiello, Young, & Zurawski.

12. _poetics@_, ed Joel Kuszai, preface by Charles Bernstein, Roof, $18.95. Gathered largely from the first two years of the poetics list, includes 67 contributors. "Provides a window onto an ongoing, highly articulate, intensely percolating poetics-in-the-making that is a fundamental feature of the most engaging and active poetry of our time." --Charles Bernstein

13. _Poetic Investigations: Singing the Holes in History_, Paul Naylor, Northwestern, $19.95. Essays on Howe, Mackey, Hejinian, Brathwaite, and Nourbese Philip.

14. _In Memory of My Feelings: Frank O'Hara and American Art_, Russell Ferguson, MOCA/U Cal, $39.95. "Don't be bored"

15. _Theoretical Objects_, Nick Piombino, Green Integer, $10.95. "What you didn't say is what you wanted me to think about."

16. _Idea's Mirror_, Stephen Ratcliffe, Potes & Poets, $12.50. "is missing, as thought broken off"

17. _The Celebration Chronicles: Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Property Value in Disney's New Town_, Andrew Ross, Ballantine, $25.95.

18. _On Beauty and Being Just_, Elaine Scarry, Princeton, $14.95.

19. _Shark 2_, ed Lytle Shaw & Emily Clark, $10. McVarish, Day, Pierce, Burns, Discenza, Luoma, Clark, Bernstein, Harrison, McLeer, Bellaver, Geary, Shepard, Gray, Evans, Julian, Biglieri, & Warsh.

20. _Mexico: A Play_, Gertrude Stein, Green Integer, $10.95. "I wonder if there is a mistake."

21. _Tripwire 3_, ed Morrison & Buuck, $8. Ward, Barber, Saidenberg, Robbins, Russo, Lennon, Christie, Cahun, Robinson, Cox, Cole, Tribble, Cummings, Treadwell, Halpern, Bollinger, Killian, Harryman/Hejinian, &&&.

22. _Reluctant Gravities_, Rosmarie Waldrop, New Directions, $12.95. "Don't you think it a strange coincidence, he says, that every man whose skull's been opened had a brain?"

23. _The Cornel West Reader_, Cornel West, Basic, $35.

24. _Cerulean Embankments_, Geoff Young, Ling, Batch. $14. "O K so maybe your genius _is_ figburst sweet / but hard of heart's no bib / on educational right's, please / call a cream goatee by its rightful name"

Some Bestsellers:

The New American Poetry 1945-1960 ed. Donald Allen, $16.95.
Selected Writings Volume 2, Walter Benjamin, $37.50.
In Company: Robert Creeley's Collaborations, $24.95
The Objectivist Nexus: Essays in Cultural Poetics, ed DuPlessis & Quartermain, $24.95.
Guy Debord, Anselm Jappe, U. Cal, $17.95.
Last Instance, Dan Farrell, $9.
Fracas, Liz Fodaski, $9.
Rocks on a Platter, Barbara Guest, $12.95.
at. least., P. Inman, $9.
Medieval, Steven Farmer, $9.
Stealer's Wheel, Chris Stroffolino, $12.95.
Polyverse, Lee Ann Brown, $11.95.
_Economy of the Unlost, Anne Carson, $29.95.
Pierce-Arrow, Susan Howe, $14.95.
Meadow, Tom Raworth, $7.
Protective Immediacy, Rod Smith, $9.95.

New Time, Leslie Scalapino, $11.95.
Daybook of a Virtual Poet, Robert Creeley, $12.

Poetics folks receive free shipping on orders of more than $20. Free shipping + 10% discount on orders of more than $30. There are two ways to order. 1. E-mail your order to [redacted] with your address & we will bill you with the books. or 2. via credit card-- you may call us at [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] w/ yr add, order, & card # & we will send a receipt with the books. We must charge shipping for orders out of the US.

Bridge Street Books, 2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC 20007.

↑ Index

315. Daniel Carter
in partial martial t' word blatent lure venus the oblivionous
Fri 22 Oct 1999

{ }

in partial martial t' word blatent lure venus the oblivionous yeah this palace be jumpin' pumpin' no need o' completion in the process longs 'n' ardent softened periodicities 'n' call 'n' coil ya in return t' th' wheelhouse round: do you seed each other the way the words break and mend not so neatly but this discretely concern cause for dislocation of the dislocated to own the hall who questions wonder the in flew whence the vibes master and hence the hints cease from a few shoots stemmin' branchin' jeu das whole head o' steam book word light reverse reference (t') th' street walk her key forces hydra edition ink route well squirrelled shapes of intrusion enter lieu shuttle bracket forth betterment/beletterment a fallen main kind or snortsort not yet sworded the outer further into the exterior reaches of tangibility whose numbered trials in process blue seeds in return turretspire this sea this ocean these waters of spice 'n' reverie thin ice once owned the un-ownable in search for an other whirled being entity alife 'n' well-entoweled merge in d' eyes her marks 'n' traces sparks 'n' laces raises the snakeses spearheaded releases real eases of pressures' pleasures readily Atlantis more than a trade edition would abnormally be the accepted norm in privacy of one's own inner darkness slid up by a candle stageraging of the clampon reversal unit underwhirrled imageries on parade with no drumble but come t' blink a fit drumble might could be clothes suggested if not indicated enveloping matrix shook itshelf down in t' th' drownin' drink de-link terrorstory on location dis here locale vast unfastenin' itself up up up up on into another level o' dimension 'til d' eye-dust settle monuments crumblehood phase sequent floral scents of some swarmly wind-up motions buzzy screen all war out by gaze-glued glappa got slopped wit d' crops turned cakecuppedsidedawn the name cool 'n' kept on coolin' a spell that vent over the border in pain prevention

approximates swirled round so quick couldn't artly git no balance leff on the balance sheets new in disarray all ready renewed 'n' ready for the ready 'til th' poppy got sloppy now lick wut y'all done got star t' th' hidden did itself up into a glisteningly smoothly placaging (veneering) passage sway git ya all caught up in cotton candy (piano) reductions o' the art too swift thus missed the kiss entirely unconscious though nothing entire axioms bought 'n' soiled to sadistfraction hard heart standard it git ya 'til it got ya still loosen ain't toldly loose completely undone sleep fo' ya know wut hid ya gone vanish spoof-p(r)oof vapors th' rue th' roof aloof locked up under melting locks just as quirk shot the change simple out the complex unravel lit up in t' frames skipped by any blaze necessary glissgloss hatcheration o' th' nether feather a fiery light d' vice for the lettering in o' all kinds o' forces as swell as farces that could trip/rip/drip/lip/plip up bulb hustle must sell to distract and detract from the mot east fluidics o' the sleep through age a shunt shade blade clot off to a plaid star add t' slow this shift t' dawn fr' mouth o' night flight akin gone hid in the soon noted for its shunning of the double let alone the triple forgot about the multiple as if it never happy end in order to stimulate next text in line on off line stillness of a tropical fall(en) day out tomb null it linger in its fingerings taut so well by the road transmitter aboard for just such oceans

<bigger><bigger>--

</bigger></bigger>

↑ Index

316. Tenney Nathanson

POG EVENT: Sunday Oct 31 Mayer/Cully reading at Botanical Gardens, 3:30 pm

Fri 22 Oct 1999

NEWS RELEASE

POG

in association with

Tucson Botanical Gardens and The University of Arizona Extended University

present a Poetry Reading by

Bernadette Mayer and Barbara Cully

Sunday, October 31
3:30 pm

Tucson Botanical Gardens
2150 N Alvernon

Bernadette Mayer is the author of numerous books of poetry and prose. Her latest books include Sonnets, The Formal Field of Kissing, The Bernadette Mayer Reader, The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters, Proper Name, and Two Haloed Mourners: Poems. Throughout the 1980s, Mayer was director of The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church in New York where, as well as teaching her legendary Experiments in Poetry Workshop, she produced the Poetry Project's reading series. Mayer's position made her a central figure in the community of artists and writers gathered at that time in New York City's Lower East Side. With her husband Lewis Warsh, she edited United Artists press, which published a number of seminal books of poetry, including Ted Berrigan's Sonnets and Mayer's own Utopia.

Barbara Cully is from San Diego California and earned her MFA at the Iowa Writers' Workshop. She is the author of The New Intimacy (Penguin, 1997), winner of the National Poetry Series Open Competition 1996, and of Shoreline Series (Kore Press,1997). She has taught in the University of Arizona Department of English since 1986 and has been a guest poet and teacher at the Prague Writers' Workshop in the Czech Republic. She is currently at work on a book of prose lyrics; the working title is “Desire Reclining.”

Admission: $5

POG events are sponsored in part by grants from the Tucson/Pima Arts Council and the Arizona Commission on the Arts.

for further information contact:
POG
c/o Tenney Nathanson
[redacted]

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/

↑ Index

317. Tenney Nathanson

POG EVENT: Monday, Nov 1 open discussion with poet Bernadette Mayer (U of Arizona)

Fri 22 Oct 1999

“Experimental Poetry”

a discussion with poet

Bernadette Mayer

Monday

November 1

2 pm

Modern Languages 303

Bernadette Mayer is the author of numerous books of poetry and prose. Her latest books include Sonnets, The Formal Field of Kissing, The Bernadette Mayer Reader, The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters, Proper Name, and Two Haloed Mourners: Poems. Throughout the 1980s, Mayer was director of The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church in New York where, as well as teaching her legendary Experiments in Poetry Workshop, she produced the Poetry Project's reading series. Mayer's position made her a central figure in the community of artists and writers gathered at that time in New York City's Lower East Side. With her husband Lewis Warsh, she edited United Artists press, which published a number of seminal books of poetry, including Ted Berrigan's Sonnets and Mayer's own Utopia.

Sponsored by:
The University of Arizona Department of English
The Arizona Quarterly

-------- Poetry Reading: On Saturday, October 31, at 3:30, Bernadette Mayer and Barbara Cully will read at Tucson Botanical Gardens, 2150 N Alvernon. The reading is sponsored by POG, The University of Arizona Extended University Writing Works Center, and Tucson Botanical Gardens, and is made possible in part by grants from the Arizona Commission on the Arts and the Tucson/Pima Arts Council.

For further information about these events contact:
POG: [redacted]

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/

↑ Index

318. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
Fri 22 Oct 1999

Tony Green wrote:
>
> C-c-curiouser etc How do I know if
> this & any or every e-mail to the list is > or is not a poem? shd I indent etc

>
> to make it clear that it is? or rhyme?
> I surely have it in mind to publish one or > two of my e-mails to various persons in
> a _poetry_ magazine.
> which this is and would be if on a bus I overheard the in dentation and we all thot
that's a poem now
we could use as a chair to sit then and recognize and fall asleep in

as recognizable forms are realtively those that have passed from sight and such the poem's mainly here (troubl'ed) clef rely on the scope and sequence
rather than the verb.

ain't it?

(this is NOT a poem)
Lew Welch to his sister:

"a REAL rock
in a REAL ocean"

↑ Index

319. MAXINE CHERNOFF

Re: Tracking down a reference.

Fri 22 Oct 1999

Thanks to all the kind peple who identified Larkin's A Girl in Winter for me.

MC

↑ Index

320. A H Bramhall
Fwd To The Poetry Republic
Fri 22 Oct 1999

the book expressly happened. it happened without a lot of disinterest lacking, and that's fine. the public had to have something, for a while, and this was it. the book that could be spoken of, within a forum of people who know they are peers, ready with a whiff of exactly how people react to the thing they say they think they say they are thinking about, everyday, as much as possible. exhausting as this sounds, it is purposeful, such a freshness. there will be quiet times, and the poets - oh yes, the subject of all this is poetry - will render that somehow, in a perfection of what they do in doing what they do. hours between this time and that time are empty, bereft, of the thing that leads to the poetry. in a specific way, too, in the sense that writing takes just a little time, and maybe gives it back somehow. not to be disputatious, just stuck in the fine fancy of the poetry thing made and built and sent into a world where poetry needs to go. it seems like process has got a good thing going. daily weekly yearly arrives the poems, or something comes. again to clarify (which poetry never has to do): evidence exists, not to say DNA, but that there are ways to understand that something happens, even with an ignorant turn of mind, or a closing emotional door or what you will. just consider the mutability. it seems so dormant at times but can it attend to everything and all the time? a book wanders around, awaiting its share. or the book can't happen because the closed sign makes the market unsafe. does any of this make sense? think about it: a process of words, or word-like things, collecting in some way, with a severe lack of descriptive capability by any of us to witness the event, tho we try. and we want to get excited, and we deem an audience becomes the creation, or what the hell happens. such a frank muddle. why care that the book happened? dire lives living inside definitions that will complete the affirmations with denials: just so human, aggravated and tending toward confusion. nevertheless, a moral question lurks within the book. a strange necessity, given that the book and the writer do nothing, and both probably feel sad about that. one would expect a greater registration of the entire pathos and scheme and critical mass that causes the bloody machine to grind its gears. for this fear called poetry faces a tough battle, always.

* * * * *

NB: this piece either is or isn't theoretical and likewise may or may not be a poem. whatever fits the expressed purpose of this list, that's what I'm down with. AHB

↑ Index

321. Stephen Ellis
Re: Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")
Fri 22 Oct 1999

John, re: your mention of my mention of the term "seriousness" with respect to what's posted on the list, let me say that I, too, am serious about seriousness in ways that are, for me, energizing and, recognizing the energy, completely hilarious for about ten seconds of pure joy, being slapped up side the head, stupid! Yes! More! (of anything!) The list, of course, is a sort of microcosm of the "world of poetry" out there in the big bad world, full of possibilities for publication and position and power and all the good things one would then feel free to buy into in order to have the advantage of being in on whatever was (is) at hand. Right. All the great readings ARE nine hours away. But what I want to get at, and to, in addition AND instead of all the great readings, is some sense that the "world" (of poetry) seems very much caught up in the sense of itself as a business. Sure, it's an exchange, but given the hierarchical nature of who's who, how "free" can the exzchange ever get to be? I mean, to say your piece and be at peace and all that is for certain satisfying in some personal way, but the public momentum of any group effort always seems (to me) to get nipped in the bud before gaining the authority of full flower in many ways BECAUSE of its treatment as "a serious issue" which then opens up that can of wormy roses that shows forth all of the presumptions that prevent some more full consideration of "the issues at hand" from really going anywhere, because they become subject to the authority of a proof, as if there were a truth at bottom that needs rooting up and out, that "truth" being nothing but the presumption of an authority wch then contends for something other than the issues at hand (what ARE they, anyway?) in a sort of chummy exchange of critical remarks that passes for seriousness. My sense is, at base, it's this "seriousness" that is not supposed to be breached, and when it is, it's to be filled quickly with something like cement, when, in fact, a hollow laugh might just as well suffice. It's true, we won't get more from the list than what's already on it - you only get the things that are - yet what's on it is often disconcertingly empty because it seems to fall so short of what otherwise is sufficient to life, making chaos (total), maybe, instead of merely making sense. As a footnote,

Douglas Rothschild's "questionable" post that I mentioned last time around, I hear, isn't even in the list archive. Perhaps the question "what does anyone hope to gain through editing (elimination)" will become increasingly pertinent - is it to the end of clarity? & if so, what is the figure &/or ground we are supposed to clearly see? While I can't at the moment see ANYthing clearly, I think I smell something up ahead that curiously resembles absence. - S E

> From: "Lowther, John" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")
> Date: Thu, 21 Oct 1999 11:18:32 -0400
>
> { p o e t i x }
>
> sondheim writes;
>
> And Fourth - I want to thank the readers on this list in general for their generosity; I'd also like to see more work presented here that deals with Poetics - from a point of view _within_ poetry or other literary forms, complementing the work already from the position of critique or dialog.
>
> raphael writes;
>
> 5) lets see more poems by more people. lets' see more opinions about poems, more poetics & else personalities. or maybe all of the above
>
> a silly song sings;
>
> this list is my list, this list is your list...
>
> stephen ellis brings up some interesting things in his post "up with down"
>
> that is, i think he's right in saying that there is a "seriousness" factor (i serious now do mumble yawn) but, well, i'd hope that it's perspectival, that maybe what i (and i assume others) write that comes off over-serious or something might be more adequately described as being full of concern, mine (in this example) ---- i think recently of that form and content post i sent in with the talk of creeley and antin etc, i can see, and easily imagine various others finding the concerns expressed there "too" something... serious ? theoretical ? (or theoretically naive ?) ---- but, in that instance, theyre mine and i care about em
>
> *i imagine that if i suggested, even if only to myself, that the things i post to the list ought to all be things about which i really cared, that i'd immediately begin to chafe*

> stephen asks;
>
> But what of posts that push the envelope of the group's assumptions? (i.e.., what ARE the group's assumptions?)
>
> indeed, what are they ?
> (our most cherished the hardest to spot ?)
>
> _john's list of poetix list assumptions/observations_ (making these up as i go)
>
> 1. posts which make unsupported, even banal claims contrary to (my perception of) general consensus will get lots of attention and have the potential to spawn multiple threads
>
> 2. most of the really interesting stuff must be going on backchannel
>
> 3. reading announcements that sound really fucking great are at least 9 hours away from where i am
>
> 4. alan sondheim will post at least every other day
>
> 5. any discussion of books of criticism will move into (if not thru) a divisive period of threading
>
> 6. everyone thinks the list cd be more interesting, useful, meaningful, productive (pick yr value term) but...
>
> 7. that things like the following will annoy some people
>
> to thank the list like
> position critique about interesting (and
> assume all will the threads
> really must i at into > (hmmm...? apparently build outright choices
> Perhaps over of conceit? point
> sondheim chafe announcements discussion criticism
> attention backchannel i criticism thru)
> divisive point agreeable presentation, generosity;
> assumptions? assumptions?) are unsupported, and
> have potential apparently never there
> the scene light list "destination"
> what always in order able
> also all the this that
> that is it's i imagine
> expressed really cherished interesting discussion

of criticism move dan confident
measured against otherwise attention backchannel
i criticism thru) divisive point agreeable presentation, generosity; assumptions? assumptions?)
are unsupported, and have potential
apparently never there the scene
light list "destination" what always
in order able also all
the this that that is
it's i imagine expressed really
8. that no one actually has a typewriter hooked to the list

so what do we want
from the list ?

dan wants
more by more
(but less by alan)
more opinions but less personalities (hmmm...? maybe this is a call for chance derived opinions ? i.e., those not held and ultimately revealing personalities)

alan wants
poetics "from a point of view _within_ poetry" etc (not sure i like this
as i've heard so much talk of this basic idea, and all of it
*hinges on an apparently *very clear
idea of what's "within" and what's
"without" that i'm never very confident
about myself)

i don't know what i want or if i do i doubt i should say

)L

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

322. SAMUEL GARREN
Re: Tracking down a reference.
Fri 22 Oct 1999

To Maxine--You probably have heard by now, but the title is a novel written by Larkin, not a poem. Yours, sam Garren

↑ Index

323. Michael Leddy
Re: Tracking down a reference
Fri 22 Oct 1999

Maxine Chernoff asked

> Could someone on the list help me with this? I have a new novel out, A Boy in Winter, and several people have now asked me if its title relates to a Philip Larkin poem, "A Girl in Winter." Looked in a Larkin collected and couldn't find such poem. Does anyone have a clue?

Maxine,

It's a Larkin novel, one of two. (The other is _Jill_.)

Best,

Michael Leddy

↑ Index

324. Poetics List Administration
Johanna Drucker e-mail (fwd)
Fri 22 Oct 1999

---

this came to the administrative account.

---------- Forwarded Message ----------
Date: Thursday, October 21, 1999, 10:22 PM +0000
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Johanna Drucker e-mail

If anyone has Johanna Drucker's e-mail since she moved to Virginia, could you b-c me, please?

thanks,

Alan

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

325. Katherine Lederer
DH: October 23: CARLA HARRYMAN, ALYSTYRE JULIAN
Fri 22 Oct 1999

Segue @ Double happiness
Saturdays from 4:00 to 6:00 pm.
Readings begin punctually. Double Happiness is located at 173 Mott Street, just south of Broome. A 4$ contribution goes to the readers.

October 23: CARLA HARRYMAN, ALYSTYRE JULIAN
CARLA HARRYMAN is the author of ten books of prose,
plays, poetry and essays including a novel, The Words:
after Carl Sandburg's Rootabaga and Jean-Paul Sartre
(O Books, Berkeley, 1999) and a volume of new and selected prose, There Never Was a Rose Without a Thorn (City Lights, 1995). She is currently working on a second novel, Gardener of Stars, and is engaged in the restaging of a chamber opera. She lives and teaches in Detroit.

ALYSTYRE JULIAN is a poet and yoga teacher who lives in NYC. She has collaborated on a short film with Lee Ann Brown and has work in the current Chain.

↑ Index

326. Owen Hill
AK Press Party
Fri 22 Oct 1999

A Charming Event:

Another book party from Moe's in Berkeley, this one for AK Press:

Craig O'Hara will read from Philosophy of Punk: More Than Noise, and Gee Voucher, author of Crass Art and Other Pre Post-Modernist Monsters will read (perform? appear? we're still not sure).

Sunday Oct 31st, 2-4pm on the Moe's Books patio, 2476 Telegraph Ave., Berkeley Ca. [redacted].

Owen

↑ Index

327. Thomas Dorow
Re: ping pong
Fri 22 Oct 1999

I may be wrong, but I think it was Eugen Gomringer probably in "Die Konstellationen - las constelaciones - les constellations - the constellations", Gomringer Press Frauenfeld 1965. I´m pretty sure it was Gomringer, actually. It couldn´t have been anyone else, really. It could have been Jandl in "Serienfuss", but it isn´t. It was Gomringer. And if it wasn´t him, it was someone else, but Gomringer led the way. There is some of his work online on ubuweb. If it wasn´t Gomringer, there is a minor chance of it being Franz Mon. It couldn´t have been Heissenbüttel, no way. Mon or Gomringer, not Jandl or Heissenbüttel. Actually, it was Gomringer. Ping.

Thomas Dorow (Pong)

----- Original Message -----
From: Peter Fogarty <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 1999 10:13 PM
Subject: ping pong

> ping pong
> pong ping pong
> ping pong
>
> or something like that? Who wrote it? It has been stuck in my head for the last three days and I can't account for its arrival except that I read it somewhere in the last two weeks and it stuck.
>
> Regards,
> peter

↑ Index

328. David Giles Scott
Re: ping pong
Fri 22 Oct 1999

The poem is by Eugen Gomringer, though the original has an extra line, and the spacing is everything,

ping pong
ping pong ping

pong ping pong
ping pong

Sincerely
David Giles Scott

On Fri, 22 Oct 1999, Peter Fogarty wrote:

> ping pong
> pong ping pong
> ping pong
>
> or something like that? Who wrote it? It has been stuck in my head for the last three days and I can't account for its arrival except that I read it somewhere in the last two weeks and it stuck.
>
> Regards,
> peter

↑ Index

329. Thomas Dorow
Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
Fri 22 Oct 1999

These threads, one of them threatening Alan with censorship or begging for support of censorship or whatever, the other about a kind of "the boys in the band"-style regionalism and demographic query totally ignoring that this list is not only read or used by Americans, border upon the same issue for me. I love Alan´s posts. I came to the list to find out more about a poetic tradition and a tradition of discussing poetics, that appeared to be very much alive, quite contrary to what I experience on the german academic and avantgarde scene, where there is basically one (print) magazine (Das Schreibheft) that caters to the needs of those who believe that poetry develops its content through form and does not make statements about something it already knows, or uses forms that are already known and accepted to make statements that are as well. (Most poems dealing with travel are excellent examples for this reactionary function of a form-content coherency that is a priori d´accord, the exotic setting providing the "newness" necessary to sell bullshit and lies as art.) I love Alan´s postings because they are daring, they always are, they are so fast it can be annoying and makes my head spin how fast Alan writes, watching his speed on "trace" speeds up the spin even more. Alan´s posts are always in danger of falling back on themselves, always in danger of failing of being ridiculous of breaking. They are fragile and tentative, they don´t live in Alabama, where it is probably lovely, I don´t mind regionalism, mind you, there are excellent works drawing on minority languages around, very regionalist, very provoking to the mainstream use of language. Andrea Zanzotto is one example, Ernst Jandl another, H.C. Artmann, Reinhardt Priessnitz, Thomas Kling, to name a few Italian, Austrian and German poets who have worked or are working in this field. I love Alan´s postings. They are what poetry and poetics should be. They break my heart at times, they get me pissed at other times. I may disagree with him on Heiner Müller and his postings on Stalinism may get on my nerves and drive me up the wall, but poetry is not about agreement (that´s so pretty). Poetics can (perhaps) be discussed from the "outside" of poetry, but there is no way to a poetry that does not encorporate it´s poetic reflections, which is always a reflection on cognition, in its form. Alan´s postings, his writing through the avatars Jennifer, Julu, Alan and Nikuko are highly reflected and reflexive texts on poetics, subjectivity and writing, very passionate and dangerous, little bombs, some go off, others don´t, not just now, not now, perhaps later. Allright, now about regionalism. Poetry doesn´t travel well. Poetry is a national pasttime. Poetry is american, southern, northern, bostonian, english (and all of this is still in English). If Poetry wants to travel, it needs translation, and translations don´t travel well, either. I walked into one of the best Berlin bookstores yesterday and asked about Jack Spicer, guess what the reaction was, and I wasn´t even asking for a translation. It will take months until I can lay my hand on a book, and it took this list to get me to know about Spicer in the first place. Try asking for Reinhard Priessnitz in Boston. Poetry doesn´t travel well, but when it does, the effects are often amazing, I´m thinking of Apollinaire reading Brentano, of Pound reading the Veda, of Duschamp in New York, of Brinkmann reading O´Hara etc. It may be just a funny coincidence, but Alan is one of the very few subscribers to this list, who even mentioned someone who didn´t publish in english. It´s not a coincidence.

Love, Thomas Dorow

↑ Index

330. Taylor Brady

Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)

Fri 22 Oct 1999

I largely agree with the (implicit) assertion here that Mark's dismissal of Alan Sondheim's work without benefit of anything close to a reading constitutes a problem for the kind of reasoned "restraint" or "self-control" he advocates re: Alan's postings. At the same time, however, the urge to up the ante with this:

this type of censorship is what keeps newspapers and televisions full of doodoo, full of propaganda. I think the NYT might have a job for you!

..ends up moving in much the same direction - i.e., a collapsing of meaningful distinctions in favor of a rhetoric of dismissive outrage, bemusement, etc. Calls for "discursive protocol" articulated by individuals without access to the immense, consolidated social surplus of, say, the Times simply are not the same thing as the systemic and systematic distortion of knowledge by capital.

Now if you were to say that at times that very individual rush to dismiss has been one of the many vectors along which Times-style distortion has operated, I'd certainly be with you. But media monopolies have ways of enforcing, cajoling, etc., such behaviors from their writers and readers that go far beyond the very general "making folks feel bad," which seems to be about the greatest level of social violence listees can muster in their conflicts. Again, not to say that isn't a problem - at the risk of adding my voice to the calls for restraint, could we perhaps make sure to read each other, and be willing to articulate that reading out in the open, before resorting to dismissal out-of-hand? Obviously, there are cases of personal attack, "flaming," etc., in which the dismissive virtual sneer, rather than the time-consuming response to an interlocutor who isn't going to bother with a response anyhow, might be a useful option. But it seems to me we're a long way off from that in Alan's writings, which interrogate the language(s) of this list (well or badly [usefully or not?] is for a closer reading to decide - though as a minor publisher of his work, I obviously have my intellectual investments here), rather than simply attack them in the "I-can-shout-over-a-DSL-line-louder-than-you" mode. We've seen the latter here before, so I'm guessing we know what it looks like.

That said, however, and without knowing Mark P., I'd give 10 to 1 odds to anyone here that he doesn't have the weight of capital accumulation behind him to come up to the level of the Times as an ideological "power." (And in almost every instance, his ideological work on the list, when based on a careful engagement, has been pretty well opposed to the practices of that gray bastion of yellow journalism - my thanks, in general, for his presence in this space). Hell, I doubt any of us here even rate a defunct Hearst rag limping toward the inglorious end of a short-con joint operating agreement. It might benefit us, though, to make a principled distinction between our practices and theirs - a little more care and attention on both sides of this argument, perhaps?

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Patrick Herron
Sent: Thursday, October 21, 1999 1:55 PM

To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression

>AS's work is often weak, diffuse, silly, and its extreme frequency on the list has led at least a half-dozen people i know to find new meaning in the phrase, "delete, don't read."

Mack, er, Mark, you have a very bright critical career ahead of you. Pass the sunglasses and roll out the red carpet! Get me a seat on Air Force One! Feel the authoritative upholstery! Turn down the lights!:)

Gee, maybe I should show some good ol' RESTRAINT. Ahh, fuck that.

> in my scheme of poetic things AS isn't huge or important or terribly exciting...

And I feel priveleged to learn of his lack of importance from you. :) Can you send me that scheme? The poetics of schemata, the schematics of poetry. How poetic. Kinda like instructions on building a television. I was just building a poem from scratch yesterday, some wires, some wood, some capacitors, resistors, and was looking for a good schematic. Maybe i need to head to Hotlanta to find them? Joe's Poetry Schematics Shop down there by Five Points? :)

> *But Dan was indeed (as he suggests) expressing the feelings of quite a few people on the list. And i feel he is right to point out that the responses to him were a little too quick and too thoughtless: he was not calling for censorship.*

actually, he he seemed to be advocating a particular form of censorship - self-censorship. self-censorship from threats. like of being labelled a crap artist. this type of censorship is what keeps newspapers and televisions full of doodoo, full of propaganda. I think the NYT might have a job for you! :) :) :) smiling happy faces! :) :) :)

I hope this was too quick and too thoughtless. Let's have my lawyer and your lawyer do lunch. in case your flame spreads, or "blooms," as you call it.

the market force of criticism = CONTROVERSY. good work. A+. :)

if we cannot laugh
we can count ourselves
doomed to the same thing
we have always been doomed to anyway.

Bloomin',
:)
Patrick

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

331. Lori Emerson
sondheim/raphael
Fri 22 Oct 1999

i'm feeling annoyed and disturbed enough over the minor 'raphael on sondheim' strain that i have to chirp up: i work hard to appreciate others' opinions, working especially hard to appreciate ~opioniated~ people (the more blooming flowers the better) but that there seems to be a consistent, underlying, shared opinion that there is such a thing as too little too much, too little enough publishing/broadcasting/ultimately sharing of poetry strikes me as...outrageous--after all this is poetry! the fact that this list, although theoretically democratic in nature (being online) and international in its concerns and subscribers, has ~only~ 500 (or so!) subscribers--and that, for example, only a tiny fraction of whom comprise the second majority (Canadian)--to me points precisely towards why readers and educators and publishers so consistently shy away from contemporary poetry.

but maybe i'm being a little too romantic here?
Lori Emerson

Mark Prejesnar wrote:
Now, i think AS's work >is sometimes energetic, interesting, provocative, and complex, also. Not >as much as i'd like..and he sure does (as DR suggests) publish (including >this list as a form of publication) far more than maybe he should. But, >yeah, it is helpful to be acquainted with his work... i'm afraid Kent >Johnson's extreme enthusiasm is a bit over the top; in my scheme of poetic >things AS isn't huge or important or terribly exciting...
>
>But Dan was indeed (as he suggests) expressing the feelings of quite a >few people on the list. And i feel he is right to point out that the >responses to him were a little too quick and too thoughtless: he was not >calling for censorship.
>
>So, as he says below: let 80 flowers bloom.....
>
>mark prejsnar

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

332. Judy Schwartz
Re: Treat Your Trick!! Poetry @ BORDERS, Mon., Oct. 25: A-A WIGHT & ML POLAK
Fri 22 Oct 1999

On Tue, 19 Oct 1999, George Bowering wrote:

> I have been to 1727 Walnut Street, just yesterday, and it is a pure residential street, no book stores there at all.
>
> poetry at borders
> 1727 walnut street
> monday, october 25, at 7:30 sharp

Must be thinking of the wrong city. This is the address of the Borders in Philadelphia. --Judy

↑ Index

333. Poetry Project
upcoming readings at the Poetry Project
Fri 22 Oct 1999

Next week at the Poetry Project:

Monday, October 25 at 8 pm

Lourdes Vazquez & J.L. Jacobs

Lourdes Vazquez¹s books include Marina: A Biography of Marina Arzola, La Rosa Mecanica: Prose and Poetry and, forthcoming, Cuentos de Purgalcito, a book of short stories to be published by Ediciones Cultural. J.L. Jacobs's first book of poetry, The Leaves in Her Shoes, was published by Lost Roads Publishers this year.

Wednesday, October 27 at 8 pm

John Keene is the author of Annotations (New Directions). He has held fellowships at Yaddo and Bread Loaf and was a Cave Canem Poetry Workshop Fellow in 1999. Barbara Henning is the author of Love Makes Thinking Dark and the former editor of Long News in the Short Century.

Friday, October 29 at 10:30 pm

Love is a Bad Neighborhood

A choreopoem by poet and playwright Francine Witte, with performances by poets Ken Thompson, Faye Armon, and Julian Rozzell. Poet and comic Mark Larsen will open the evening with a short reading of his own work.

And don't forget: tonight, the Outlaw Bible of American Poetry. It'll be a zoo! 45 contributors being rebels! Copies of this 673-page anthology will be on sale. No advance tickets. Doors open at 10:15 pm.

Admission to the events are $7, $4 for students and seniors. Project events are wheelchair accessible with advance notice: call [redacted]. The Poetry Project is located in St. Mark's Church at the corner of 2nd Ave. and 10th St. in Manhattan, NYC

For more information on our upcoming events, visit our website at http://www.poetryproject.com

If you would like to be removed from our e-mail list, please respond to this message with the note: remove me from your list, please.

↑ Index

334. Gerald Schwartz
Re: Fwd To The Poetry Republic
Fri 22 Oct 1999

It seems lately
with all the attacks and all meanings far transcend the mere words

For example, insights into the way in which a group and its members see or define themselves can often be found in the root metaphors used in exchanges.

I enjoy A.S's prolonged engagement, his persistence, his investment of sufficient time, and in watching all the all

I am learning much about our community's culture,
testing all the while misinterpretations of information, observations:

Since on the list
no one knows
they are poets...

--Gerald

↑ Index

335. Robert Corbett

Re: DH: October 23: CARLA HARRYMAN, ALYSTYRE JULIAN

Fri 22 Oct 1999

---

i doubt that this is in San Francisco, and my request will reveal my utter unhipness w/r/t the many poetry scenes represented here, but in what city is this reading (other than in the Eliotic/Baudelairean unreal city) happening (happening)?

salut, robert
Robert Corbett "you are there beyond/ tracings flesh can [redacted] take,/ and farther away surrounding and University of Washington informing the systems" - A.R. Ammons

On Fri, 22 Oct 1999, Katherine Lederer wrote:

> Segue @ Double happiness
> Saturdays from 4:00 to 6:00 pm.
> Readings begin punctually. Double Happiness
> is located at 173 Mott Street, just south > of Broome. A 4$ contribution goes to > the readers.
>
> October 23: CARLA HARRYMAN, ALYSTYRE JULIAN
> CARLA HARRYMAN is the author of ten books of prose,
> plays, poetry and essays including a novel, The Words:
> after Carl Sandburg's Rootabaga and Jean-Paul Sartre
> (O Books, Berkeley, 1999) and a volume of new and > selected prose, There Never Was a Rose Without a Thorn (City Lights, 1995). She is currently working on a second novel, Gardener of Stars, and is engaged in the restaging of a chamber opera. She lives and teaches in Detroit.

>
> ALYSTYRE JULIAN is a poet and yoga teacher who lives in NYC. She has collaborated on a short film with Lee Ann Brown and has work in the current Chain.

↑ Index

336. Alan Sondheim

On Number-Systems

Fri 22 Oct 1999

(This illustrates what I mean by a poetics of the world.)

On Number-Systems

"And reading Knuth on number-base systems which include, for example a ternary system with +1, -1, and 0 as the symbols. Such systems can absorb the positive and negative numbers; there are others, such as ones based on 2i, that can absorb the complex number system as well (i.e. a single num- ber of the form ax^n + bx^(n-1) ... +dx^1 +e). This is an amazing economy of means. The book is my favorite in the Knuth programming series - the volume on Seminu- merical Algorithms - since it goes into the construct of arithmetic processes and algorithms we all take for granted. In my own work, I've always been fascinated by the possibility of base-1 and base- infinity systems; in the former, of course, addition becomes concatena- tion, and in the latter, the addition of any two unique symbols results in a third, i.e. J + K = L. There's an easy translation from the decimal sys- tem; say 25 * 26 = 650 - one would just look up within the infinite multi- plication table, [25] and [26] and see [650] where the [x] repre- sents the unique symbol. One goes from algorithms to infinite memorization or look- up. The phenomenology of this is really interesting, I think. For multip- lication with base-1, one returns again to concatenation, for example 1111 * 111 = 111 111 111 111 which is the same as 4 * 3 = 12. There's nothing to learn in terms of memorization or lookup tables here; there's nothing to look up or memorize. Think of this as an infinite abacus of sticks placed in a single row; one moves from base-infinity with its pure economy of place and infinite sym- bols, to base-one with its pure economy of symbol and infinite place. This mate- rial is fascinating; it says something about the stability of the world itself, the Aristotelian logic at the heart of the almost-disconnected plateau of the life- world. I wrote years ago ex- tensively on such phenomenologies; it's great to see the structures them- selves in Knuth."* To place sticks in the row, letters in a row, one counts (literally) on the stability of place and demarcation - _these_ sticks are counted - _those_ remain unaccounted-for and uncounted. The sticks need not be in a row; there's no need for geometry, positioning, since what one is concerned with is the pure quantity of sticks, not a positional relationship. Interestingly, positionality also disappears with base-infinity, since every operation and quantity involves only _one_ pos- ition. In The Matrix, there is considerable discussion about "who is the One" - in base-one, everyone is, and in base-infinity, whatever is _there_ is the one.

What is going on here? On one hand, with base-one, there is the fact and phenomenology of _substance_ and the quantifiability and stability of the world; on the other, with base-infinity, there is the problematic of the proper name in the Kripkean sense of rigid designator. In the former, names shift towards processes; in the latter, processes harden as names.

One might also consider issues of perception: exactly what constitutes a stick or a symbol? Could, for example, two trees represent 2541 and 1734, a third representing 2541^1734 base-infinity? Is all of nature, in fact, the mathematics of base-infinity write large? At the other end, what might one say about typification, standardization: What constitutes a stick and what doesn't? Sticks are related to tallying, of course; they are indexi- cal in relation to the quantification of the real, a one-to-one relation- ship with other physical objects. On the other hand one might consider the base-infinity symbols both symbolic (standing-for quantity as proper names or summarizations) and "quasi-ikonic," the coagulation of quantity itself as unary.

And there are issues of memory: _Where_ is the place of counting - which sticks have already been marked, which remain unmarked? This depends not only on the stability of place, but our knowledge of place as well. Since base-infinity relies on individuated symbols, place, even the place of _announcement,_ becomes less relevant; memory of place is replaced by symbol memory:
2541^1734 = [2541^1734]

Between base-one and base-infinity, the structure and variety of the world appear - not the infinite and obdurate variety of base-infinity, nor the pure quantifications of base-one, but gatherings, foreclosings, metaphors and metonymies. It's at the limits that nature becomes simultaneously mute and revelatory; in-between it's all culture and our image writ large, rubbed against the structure of the world.

Word: re-ers
Guess:
Sorry, the word was "refers"
Another word?

*from http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/diary/diary.txt.

↑ Index

337. Lowther, John

Re: This was MY list! (is "up with down!" ?)

Fri 22 Oct 1999

stephen & { p o e t i x }

in the earlier "up with down" post, i pulled out the ~seriousness~ and wove it in with what i was doing but had some misgiving in that many of the other questions brought up there seemed much better, more pertinent etc, but i simply had no answers to them, nor any clues really but of what you've said most recently "Yes! More! (of anything!)" i wd gladly second ---- serious about play ---- playfully serious ---- but i'm drifting a bit you wrote; "But what I want to get at (...) is some sense that the "world" (of poetry) seems very much caught up in the sense of itself as a business. Sure, it's an exchange, but given the hierarchical nature of who's who, how "free" can the exzchange ever get to be?"

how free do we want it ?

i remember waxing on to kent johnson a year or more ago in a post-yasusada dream wherein i was envisioning a poetry world where no one knew who anyone was and everything was submitted and published anonymously --- i'd said that the yasusada business was a start but that it really only displaced the author-function and that as long as kent was identified with the book he wd get stuck with the bag (A-funct.) and that perhaps something more radical, more ultimately leveling was needed

but yr point is in our world and i've heard a lot of griping from poets of all stripes about in-groups and favors and this and that and it bothers me --- it bothers me such that i am in point of fact planning to take an extended break from poetry writing and this list probably as soon as i get the two manuscripts i'm working on and the few other obligations out of the way ---- i'm overstating that somewhat, making it more dramatic than it is, and there are other reasons why i'm going on something of a sabatical from this "biz" in 2000 (back to music and into visual art)

so what do we do ? yr asking great questions --- and, by the header of yr post, asking me, but i truly don't know one thought tho : is the poetry world any more or less questionable than the non-poetry world ?

i'm trying to be playful here

but i doubt

it's coming across,

that it's there ultimately

(cue the "hollow laugh")

)L

↑ Index

338. Lowther, John
trochee, anapest (was "within/without" poetry)
Fri 22 Oct 1999

---

alan, { p o e t i x }

you wrote;

"It's not that I have a "very clear" idea of what's within or without - in fact, just the opposite. What seems to be the case (with numerous exceptions including the post I'm replying to) is that a kind of rational discourse is taken as normative here; then there are the poems, the experiments, and poeticized replies to the discourse. And I think there might be other ways to discuss poetics, which at least for me goes beyond poetry to the flesh and bones of language and the symbolic, in a way that normative prose doesn't."

and i don't mean to be too argumentative on this score but i would like to say that i think that i am at least am generally rational and, with certain qualifications, in favor of reason --- that is i just don't buy the division of us up into rational/irrational ---- with anything called rational meant to be about as immediate as a tax return and as evocative as an hour long lecture on deduction begining and ending with socrates as a mortal --- but even logic is a lot more interesting and loose (yes, i said loose) if one spends a bit of time with it --- peirce's third type of inference "abduction" (also called "retroduction") which encompasses hunches and guesses and intuitions in a framework where one can actually talk about them rather than ushering them behind the curtain, dimming the lights and playing unconscious theme music one more time

i'd rather see poetry as "the language art" (antin's phrase) and thus potentially encompassing all the things you mention above including that which it does seem that you still wish, if not to exclude, to deal with less; "rational _____" (pick yr designation)

and here is a sonnet that i've composed as a coda to this whole business --- may it sooth the hearts of many > iamb, iamb dactyl anapest iamb > trochee trochee? iamb anapest iamb

> anapest anapest iamb, dactyl anapest.
> trochee, trochee, iamb dactyl iamb.
>
> anapest iamb dactyl iamb anapest,
> trochee iamb trochee dactyl anapest?
> dactyl iamb trochee iamb iamb,
> iamb iamb. iamb trochee iamb.
>
> trochee? trochee. iamb anapest iamb
> anapest iamb dactyl iamb anapest
> trochee iamb anapest iamb iamb
> iamb iamb iamb trochee iamb
>
> sondheim raphael raphael sondheim iamb > raphael sondheim raphael sondheim iamb

↑ Index

339. Alan Sondheim

Re: trochee, anapest (was "within/without" poetry)

Fri 22 Oct 1999

I'm tempted to write, did He who made the iamb make thee? But I'm not sure where that goes.

On a more serious note, if you noticed, I never used the word "irrational" or create a binary opposition as such; I was referring to nothing more than the use of prose or prosaic or ordinary language such as this, in relation to other forms which might also problematize such language, your sonnet being an example.

Alan

Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm

↑ Index

340. Charles Bernstein
João Cabral de Melo Neto (1920-1999)
Fri 22 Oct 1999

João Cabral de Melo Neto died last week. He was 79 years old. One of the most important Brazilian poets of the postwar generations, Cabral continues to exert a strong influence on many younger Brazilian poets. He was remembered at a celebration for Haroldo de Campos's seventieth birthday at Yale this past weekend and certainly the two poets suggests the enormous range of Brazilian poetry in the past fifty years. As Régis Bonvincino writes to me about Cabral: "Along with Carlos Drummond de Andrade and Murilo Mendes, Cabral is considered the best poet of Brazilian Poetry born in the 20's."

Cabral's Selected Poetry: 1937-1990 is published by Wesleyan, and includes the well-known translation of his work by Elizabeth Bishop. This afternoon Horacio Costa and I translated two poems of Cabral that I wanted to post to the list, with Régis adding some changes by email to the first.

-- Charles Bernstein

Psychology of Composition (VII)

It's mineral the paper on which to write verse; verse
that is possible not to make.

Mineral are flowers and plants, fruits, animals
when in a state of words.

Mineral
the horizon line,
our names, those things
made of words.

Mineral, at last,
any book:
because the written word is mineral, the cold nature of the written word.

(Tr. Ch.B., H.C. and R.B., based on the published translations of Djelal Kadir.)

****

The Last Poem

I don’t know who sends me poetry nor whether Who would call it that.

But who who may be, who that Who (myself, my sweat?), be it woman, landscape, or the no

that needs fill the void,

to make, for example, the crutch that I made walk the left soul, to Whom should be given the inglorious burden

I ask: my last poem

sent, as a poem perverse, antilyric, made into antiverse.

(Tr. Ch. B. and H.C., based on the published translations of Djelal Kadir.)

↑ Index

341. Charles Bernstein
Re: up with down!: Correction
Fri 22 Oct 1999

Re: Steve Ellis's second hand story in a recent post:

'tain't so.

Charles

↑ Index

342. michael corbin
Re: undertaker please drive slow
Fri 22 Oct 1999

---

circle be unbroken

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-srv/WPlate/1999-10/22/116l-102299-idx.html http://search.washingtonpost.com/wp-srv/WPlate/1999-10/22/062l-102299-idx.html

byeandbye

mc

↑ Index

343. aerialedge
Bridge Street Readings
Sat 23 Oct 1999

Fall readings at Bridge Street

October 24 Tina Darragh & Joan Retallack
November 14 Lisa Jarnot & Mark McMorris
November 28 Krupskaya reading: Dan Farrell, Liz Fodaski, & P. Inman
December 5 Carla Harryman

All Sundays @ 8 PM

Bridge Street Books
2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW
Washington, DC

5 blocks from Foggy Bottom Metro, next to Four Seasons in Georgetown. ph [redacted].

↑ Index

344. Jerrold Shiroma
Small Press Publications List
Sat 23 Oct 1999

This week's Small Press Publications List @ Duration Press is now online.

http://www.durationpress.com

I would like to thank the various publishers whose participation in this project has made it possible, & hope that it is proving valuable to some readers out there.

Jerrold

↑ Index

345. Ward Tietz
Re: ping pong
Sat 23 Oct 1999

> ping pong
> pong ping pong
> ping pong
>
> or something like that? Who wrote it? It has been stuck in my head for the last three days and I can't account for its arrival except that I read it somewhere in the last two weeks and it stuck.

> Regards,
> peter

It's by Eugen Gomringer.

ping pong
    ping pong ping
    pong ping pong
            ping pong

is the way it goes, I think. You'll find it in Gomringer's "von rand nach innen; die konstellationen 1951-1995." It's also in Mary Ellen Solt's "Concrete Poetry: A World View."

WT

↑ Index

346. Jordan Davis
(won't you take me to) POETRY CITY
Sat 23 Oct 1999

New York's last free reading series invites you to partake of the hubbub

10 28
Bill Zavatsky
Daniel Kane

11 4
Adeena Karasick
Sam Truitt

11 11  BOOK PARTY
Dig and Delve by Larry Fagin and Trevor Winkfield
from Granary Books

12 2
Anna van Lenten
Bowman Hastie
Annie Gwynne-Vaughan

12 9
Los Panfleteros
*Jesus Papoleto Melendez
*The Reverend Pedro Pietri

*Stefanie Agosto
*Rodrigo Ernie Ortiz III

12 16
Darlene Gold
Catherine Barnett

12 22  BOOK PARTY WEDNESDAY
Midwinter Day by
Bernadette Mayer
reprinted by New Directions

Free
Thursdays at 7 (except for Bernadette)

Teachers & Writers Collaborative
5 Union Square West, 7th Floor
[redacted] . [redacted]

Poetry City is hosted by Jordan Davis and Anna Malmude, and is sponsored by the New York State Council for the Arts.

↑ Index

347. Maria Damon
ashbery flummox; yo lori emerson
Sat 23 Oct 1999

---

yo lori emerson! i forwarded your msg to my colleague but the attatchment didn't forward. sorry everyone for doing this on POETIX, but i erased lori's msg so don't have her direct address. lori wd you mind e-ing your attatchment directly to [redacted]??? thanks, and thanks to all who responded to the ashbery query

↑ Index

348. Louis Cabri
Jed
Sat 23 Oct 1999

Does anyone have the email address for Jed Rasula?

Thanks very much,
Louis

↑ Index

349. KENT JOHNSON
Poem
Sat 23 Oct 1999

An Admonition
(for Mark Prejsnar and the Atlanta Poetry Group)

F=R=A=M=E=D=P=A=I=N=T=I=N=G=S=I=N=T=H=E=M=O=M=A

↑ Index

350. KENT JOHNSON
Poem #2
Sat 23 Oct 1999

An Old Worrying
(for Alan Sondheim)

Towards what is the earthwork spiralling?

↑ Index

351. Lowther, John the "biz"
Sat 23 Oct 1999

{ p o e t i x }

stephen ellis wrote;

that the "world"
(of poetry)
seems very much caught up in the sense of itself as a business

i started thinking again about this and am perhaps getting more confused as i go on --- i've done these magazines and lost heaps of money and have another in the can waiting and waiting and weighing on me that i can't afford to pub it yet --- and i make no money on these things it all goes out really, but that doesnt discount being a business, right ? i mean there are plenty of things we call businesses that lose money so that can't be the dividing line

but maybe it can still ? that is businesses are at least concerned to make money even if they lose it and i never expect to make any ---- or leave the magazine publishing thing behind ---- i don't expect to make any money of being a poet, i suppose i cd, i cd win a contest and get a book published and win some $ but enough to think of my writing as a business ?

so skip money, maybe what yr saying isnt about cash but clout ? capital in that sense ? where we hope to get pubbed in the chicago review or the gertrude stein awards or win the national poetries series competition b/c "it'll open doors" us ? is that the "business" which you mean ? ---- i'm reminded of something someone told me about going to a reading and the young poet who was reading that night marched up introduced themself to everyone and was later heard to say "I LOVE NETWORKING!" ---- is that the same sort of "business" ?

admittedly, i like meeting poets ---- my trip to LA last year was a blast and i look forward to new orleans next month ---- and i wd be mightily pleased to win the national poetry series and have a bit of hope that my work might get read or find it's way into places it won't if i end up publishing it myself

where does it start being the "business" ? when i start hoping that other contest winners DONT win as it wd affect me negatively ? when i start schmoozing and playing for favor with editors i don't like b/c it wd "do me good" ? i think those things should qualify for the "biz" which i wd wish to combat which it wd suck to step into

but i'm left feeling that while i understand, i think, the thrust of yr statement stephen, and too, see myself the businessy behavior now and again, that i DONT think of poetry as a business or the poetry world as business community ---- that doing so seems somehow a self-blinding

conflictedly

)L

p.s. shit, more seriousness

↑ Index

352. Tom Beckett

Re: Numbered Suggests (was "This is MY list!")

Sat 23 Oct 1999

In a message dated 10/22/99 10:01:17 AM Eastern Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<< I think I smell something up ahead that curiously resembles absence.
- S E >>

You might be smelling me.

↑ Index

353. Louis Cabri
reading oct. 26
Sat 23 Oct 1999

For the record, this sparsely published poet, Louis Cabri, will be reading in Vancouver, Canada, Oct. 26, 8 pm, at 750 Burrard St (Robson Central) along with Jacqueline Turner. Set your watches.

↑ Index

354. Alan Sondheim
Azure's Love of Jennifer
Sun 24 Oct 1999

-

Azure's Love of Jennifer

"If the 19th century was, and I for one am thoroughly convinced that it was, concerned with origins, then the present century is an era that has increasingly looked for roots. A quest for origins and a search for roots are not the same and not to be confused. The quest for origins focuses on 'whatness,' while the search for roots focuses on 'whoness.' The issue of origins is typically centered around natural ancestry, and Darwin provided the brand name for his age. In contrast, the quest for roots is essential- ly concerned with probing a cultural heritage, defining the fibres of an ethnicity, mapping ideational stratigraphies. The origins issue is charac- teristically a biological matter, while that of roots is generally intel- lectual in scope." (from Thomas Markey, welcome remarks to the Bellagio conference, 1988, When Cultures Collide: The Indo-Europeans and Pre-Indo- Europeans.) Thus said, when I seek for the origin of Jennifer, and I do, I may look no farther than "Jennifer, Where are you?," a resonant film by Leslie Thornton produced in 1981. But I may look likewise to my mother Jennifer Sondheim, my daughter Jennifer Sondheim, my sister Jennifer Sond- heim. I may look to my roots, my cultural heritage among the tribe of Jennifers, who, like the tribe of Alans, wreaked havoc in Europe and the British Isles. For Jennifer is neither root nor rhizome, but bundles and sheaves of tendrils, glistening with moisture, sliding across lovers and bodies, dreams and texts, words pouring out of mouths, tongues sliding in. Think of the beautiful skein of the world in the form of tendril interlac- ings; if the 1970s and 1980s were concerned with grids, the 1990s and 2000s are concerned with tendrils lazily pooling among wetware components, as if there were shudderings across the webs and nets of meristemating roots. Jennifer moves blindly among open cracks, holes, leaks, seepages in the real and the programming of the real; the real moves blindly among her openings as well. When my eyes are closed, when Azure is above me, when my tongue devours her fluids, her skin, the delicacy of her eyes, when her tongue devours my fluids, my skin, the delicacy of my eyes, it is the uni- cellular layer of Jennifer that coheres the real between us, ensures our return to language. Jennifer is the bruising of the world, its contusions, as one moves clumsily among the things and thoughts of the world.

So how could she be the unicellular layer, tendrils, and bruisings, all at once? Because it is the surface and the inscribing of the surface that ruins the most; and it's the unicellular layer of Jennifer that defines the space between us; and it's the tendrils of Jennifer which unicellular- ly search out the crevices between my lover and myself; and it's the bruising of my skin and breasts and necks that murmurs Jennifer! Jennifer; and it's the unicellular layer of tendrils of Jennifer that mark our his- tory on mattress, sheets, rooms, provinces, and worlds of my love and me; and it's "JENNIFER!" Azure cries in her sleep, her naked body reaching out everywhere in the room, looking for imaginary origins, shattering imagin- ary roots.

M V H N L V .N V . R NL L N L V .V F FL V
L .V F F L R H .N - VH .V F L L L V NV
J 6 %

↑ Index

355. Louis Cabri
BOO 7
Sun 24 Oct 1999

Tenney and all,

BOO 7 includes the discussion I organized and transcript I edited with Harryette Mullen, Steve McCaffery, and others. I had invited Harryette up to Calgary to give a talk, a reading, and to participate on a panel in 1996, for which Jeff Derksen and I gave Harryette and Steve ten questions. They did not have time to answer the questions, but they asked their own and the discussion is good.

In any case, Deanna Ferguson, one of the eds of BOO (a mag now defunct), still has plenty copies of #7. She can be reached at [redacted]

If someone wants to put this interview/discussion up on the web, please let me know! I think it's worth doing.

On Mullen (but this info is ca. '97 and I don't have recent), there's also an interview Magee & co. did in Combo 1. Also a Callaloo is devoted to her work. Elizabeth Frost wrote on Mulllen and Stein. I'm sure there's plenty out there by now.

-Louis

↑ Index

356. Mark Wallace

Re: generation returns again & again (fwd)

Sun 24 Oct 1999

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Sun, 24 Oct 1999 16:48:00 -0400 (EDT)
From: Mark Wallace <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: generation returns again & again

Yes, I have to say that I wish I could be pleased to be quoted by Christopher Beach, but I'm really sorry to be so painfully misunderstood. I'm going to post this note to the UBPoetics List also, just so lots of other people know that I find his generational comments foolish; I hope those of you who already wrote about this issue will do the same, since the UB Poetics List for the most part has been filled with kind words for a book that is so dominated by the rigid hierarchies of the worst kind of academic thinking that it's practically unreadable.

Notice that the first function of Beach's quote is to DICTATE to poets what their critical frame of reference should be, and secondly to take it as a hierarchical given that poetics, in order to be serious, MUST somehow deal directly with hierarchies Beach himself is creating. Never mind, of course, that the introduction to A POETICS OF CRITICISM more directly addresses itself to the problems of cultural studies and thus does not define itself as limited to some "history of poetry," and never mind the fact that the people in it are NOT defined generationally, unless one assumes that Jerome McGann, Bernadette Mayer and some others are "second generation language poets." Clearly, according to Beach we can't be serious UNLESS we write about Hejinian, Silliman, Perelman, etc--for Beach, there simply can be no other poetic issue than language poetry.

His book seems a case in point of the worst kind of politically and literally CONSERVATIVE attempt at canonization, an academic process which Beach wholly and uncritically accepts precisely, one imagines, because that's how he manages to maintain his position in the academic hierarcy which he mistakes for a POETIC hierarchy. Thus the real subtext of the book is how the academic marketplace DEFORMS poetic thinking to meet academic marketplace demands--"here is the field of acceptable poetry to the academy; language poetry can now be defined as academically acceptable; therefore all poetics must speak to it." As usual, of course, this sort of process can only be accomplished by ERASING specific poetries--notice his complete LACK of reference to any specific poetry relative to the "generation" that he himself creates to serve the fictions of his marketplace. He takes several small critical comments by myself and Steve Evans, purposefully misunderstands their context, and creates a whole generation of poets that he then refuses to mention. That he does this in the name of supposedly promoting the value of avant garde poetry is astonishing--in fact the form of his argument, and the fictional historical fields he creates, would be EXACTLY the same sort of thing that Helen Vendler does with a different set of names. Either way, poets lose.

Look closely at the issue of who the Christopher Beach book serves. He says nothing in it that the so-called language poets didn't say twenty years ago, and he says it more poorly, in the pale academic prose that is the stock and trade of his marketplace. So clearly it's not a book for poets, since we've heard it all before. Is it a book for language poets? Only if their goal is to be canonized, to become part of the future fictions that academic hierarchies will misname literature. Will it even succeed in creating its new academic hierarchy? Perhaps, but I doubt it. Is it a book for other academic critics to respond to and make other careers out of while erasing the actual histories of poems and poets? No doubt. Will it matter much in the history of literature? Mhy guess is that in two years no one will ever read it again.

Mark

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

357. dunbar1223
Boo!
Sun 24 Oct 1999

Stella

a.k.a. Karen Scioli a.k.a. Daughter of Desire a.k.a. That Maneater from Manayunk will be hostessing the festivities at the Halloween Party Tavern on Camac (243 S. Camac)

Saturday evening, October 30th.
(The party should get into full swing around 10PM, beginning with a costume contest.)

Don ye now your gay apparel.
No, wait, that's the wrong holiday, isn't it?
Never mind. Just be there.

↑ Index

358. Kathy Lou Schultz
name that quote?
Sun 24 Oct 1999

Hello Poetics,
Another one of my damnable queries. Does anyone recognize the author/source of the following?

"A dominant ideological formation is constituted by a relatively coherent set of 'discourses' of values, representations and beliefs which, realised in certain material apparatuses and related to the structures of material production, so reflect the experiential relations of individual subjects to their social conditions as to guarantee those misperceptions of the 'real' which contribute to the reproduction of the dominant social relations" (54).

To explain myself, this is jotted down on the back of a work-related document from my former job as a legal proofreader, and through the ravages of time it was separated from information about the source (though I have the page number!). At the time I was making rushed trips to the SF Public Library during my closely-monitored lunch hour, and scooping masses of texts off the shelves to read surreptiously between proofreading assignments (and therefore feed my brain and avoid the constant temptation to jump off a bridge). Trying to remember my reading at the time, I know Terry Eagleton was involved (note British spellings).

Please backchannel [redacted]
This will be very helpful to me, and I'll send my first-born child or a copy of Lipstick Eleven to show my gratitude!
^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

↑ Index

359. juliana spahr
new from subpress: edwin torres, fractured humorous
Mon 25 Oct 1999

---

the ramifications of this <inner> playground manifest themselves with every fantasy I denude myself in

now naked in my fracture <deluded nudist manufactured> <tracked in rapture> the fracturist soars above the mend aware of what needs to meet to make the heal complete subpress is very happy to bring you

---------- FRACTURED HUMOROUS
by Edwin Torres

Best known for his traveled-the-world-over performance art, Edwin Torres's presence in print is unparalleled in its vibrancy. FRACTURED HUMOROUS is contagious in its energy and humor, stunning in its turns, convincing in its call to spend less time banking and more time being.

FRACTURED HUMOROUS is a book in five parts with interstices and dazzling graphics acting as the thread that holds the book together – as well as the tangents that fracture it. See "TORRESIAN REVELATION: 3-16."

--FRACTURE :: one month / with broken arm in bed-- from "ANIMAL IS POEM":

When animal sees another from its species injured or on its way out - it clears out…away from what's hurt:
#1. Respect dying wishes.
#2. Avoid getting disease.

When poet reduces mobility from letter to letter > speed reduces to abstraction of original resolution > finite comparisons emerge > end = silence > none = all > simplicity = minimal > motion = e > motive substance from wordsmith > unable to charter new ground = surrounding environment > adapts to newfound confinement > inability to progress = circumstantial surroundings.

The possibility to invent is superseded by the probability of reduction.

--ALASKA :: five days / with poets in snow-- from "SNOW MOUNTAIN":

Backofthroat
boomerang Echoback
blindaround Allaround
snow - hear voice
was
I was frozen gasping mountain huge
I tiny shielding eyes from sun was I alone

inside
my eye

--DIANA :: one day / with sister in boston-- from "VISITING MY SISTER":

10. MARIO ANDRETTI
My sister drives a car throwing caution to the wind and then…driving into it.

--ENGLAND :: three weeks / with poets in van-- from "DAV’SSHIDIDDA’NOT’TI (Hotel room afternoon in England)":

finalto conclusio xtraganeo festinytown… …perhaps… …destined for wander throughouse such questious echinaceas… …afternoon’s contagious… …contiguous room number expatriate confusio… …don’t understand… …they douse… …easier to appropriate mis-and-anthrope… …pee and ate… …the country’s citizen… …people spice without developing… …a taste for the cuisine… …a… …howyousay zippy-kumma-kiiya…eh?

--BERLIN :: three days / with pen on mayakovsky lane-- from "THE ARCHITECT OF CHANGE":

Technicolor has a dream…doesn’t include Berlin
Who lives in Black & White
Darkness is a dream to the days of possibility
We are water, thirsting up soil, hungry Black & White grain Pollinating the center of seperation, the place of all meeting points
Before the ending is handed, before the buck is off’d
Before the hunger dissipates in one fell swoop, one crumbled expanse wanderlust

We are the night, open-mouthed and waiting, to have our throats stuffed With the stings of leather-clad scorpions, wrecked on stardust

---

---

78 pages
$10 + $2 s/h
orders to [redacted]
payments to subpress
2955 Dole Street
Honolulu, HI 96816

please make checks payable to `A `A Arts

other subpress titles:
CULTURAL EVIDENCE by Catalina Cariaga ($12)
OORT’S CLOUD by John Wilkinson ($15)

also available through Small Press Distribution / www.spdbooks.org

subpress is a collective that is supported by nineteen people who have agreed to donate 1% of their yearly income. Each person is responsible for editing one book every three years. A lottery determined the editing order. Edwin Torres’s

FRACTURED HUMOROUS was published in the first year of the collective. It was chosen by Carol Mirakove.

↑ Index

360. Chris Piuma

flim is a good site for bored office workers, etc.

Mon 25 Oct 1999

[epigraph: Ted Berrigan on poems being "amusing".]

I mean, you're at your desk, it's kinda slow, or you just need to get away, so you do a little web surfing, even though allegedly the folks in IS might be "tracking" every e-move you e-make, but don't they have anything better to do, and anyway this is a pretty harmless site, not like that guy in the cubicle down the way, who's always downloading picture of naked and excessively large-breasted women, even uses them with his screen saver, has no shame, sexist jerk, so what a little web reading anyway?

Read flim.
http://www.flim.com
Short quirky writing, etc.
Updated every weekday.

If you get this message on Monday and you visit, you'll read the endnotes of Charlotte Wells's brilliant dissertation, "Epistemology as divorce: Trends and anti-trends in contemporary studies."

If you click on the link marked "previously" you can read Friday's article, Ron Henry's "Two pieces from Hommage to Darragh". A must for all you fans of Tina Darragh.

A bit before that is a "Rebus" by Lawrence Upton.

And if you go even further back -- well, you'll see, you'll see.

And yes, we are looking for submissions! Short quirky writing, etc. Send it in to [redacted]. It will make the world a better place. No, really.

We are especially looking for sestinas right now. We are thinking about a "sestina week".

(Oh also there are cartoons.)

--
Chris Piuma, etc.
Editor, flim
http://www.flim.com
Short quirky writing, etc.

↑ Index

361. Daniel Kane
POETRY CITY reading series
Mon 25 Oct 1999

The schedule for Jordan Davis's and Anna Malmude's POETRY CITY reading series, held on Thursdays at 7 pm at Teachers & Writers Collaborative, 5 Union Square West, 7th Floor, New York, NY (212/[redacted]), is as follows:

OCTOBER 28
Bill Zavatsky & Daniel Kane

NOVEMBER 4
Adeena Karasick & Sam Truitt

NOVEMBER 11
Book Party for DIG & DELVE by Lary Fagin & Trevor Winkfield

DECEMBER 2
Anna van Lenten, Bowamn Hastie & Annie Gwynee-Vaughan

DECEMBER 9
Los Panfleteros (Jesus Papoleto Melendez, Reverendo Pedro Pietri, Stephanie Agosto & Rodrigo Ernie Ortiz III)

DECEMBER 16
Darlene Gold & Catherine Barnett

WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 22 WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 22
Book Party for MIDWINTER DAY by Bernadette Mayer (reprinted by New Directions)

Admission to all events is free, as are the refreshments.

↑ Index

362. J Kuszai
The Devil's Aria, by Ted Pearson
Mon 25 Oct 1999

New from Meow Press

THE DEVIL'S ARIA by Ted Pearson

"Those who were inspired by the voice of the beast speaking from the confines of mortal innocence in "The Exorcist" will find Ted Pearson's exploration of the dark side of lyric poetry to be an expressive correlative to the present moment."

--Barrett Watten

The Devil's Aria, by Ted Pearson
Meow Press, 1999
6.5 x 5" 32 pg.
$6.00

Available November 1st from Small Press Distribution:
http://www.spdbooks.org

↑ Index

363. J Kuszai

Artificial Cinnamon Nation, by Bill Marsh

Mon 25 Oct 1999

New from Meow Press

ARTIFICIAL CINNAMON NATION, a primer, by Bill Marsh

A gift to the muses by one of the worker-bee brethren, parts of Artificial Cinnamon Nation was "constructed from a limited vocabulary comprised of mostly 4letter+ anagrams":

mortal narcotic oat rictal tonic
anionic cocoa float
in toto lactic

while other parts arc from the luminescence of the aleatoric to the applied science of meaning-making:

teaching creativity
children do not engage;
offering rewards the corporate culture of decline

Artificial Cinnamon Nation, by Bill Marsh
Meow Press, 1999
6.5 x 5" 28 pg. w/ limited edition color wrappers
$6.00

Available November 1st from Small Press Distribution:
http://www.spdbooks.org

↑ Index

364. Pritchett,Patrick
Lindsay Hill reading at The Attic
Mon 25 Oct 1999

Lindsay Hill will read from his work at The Attic reading series in San Francisco, hosted by John High.

Saturday, November 6, at 5:00pm.

The Attic is located on 24th Street between Mission & Valencia.

Lindsay Hill's most recent book is NDJENFERNO (Vatic Hum). His work has appeared in Sulfur, Caliban, Central Park and many other magazines. He is the publisher and co-editor, with Paul Naylor, of Facture, a new journal of poetry and poetics slated to appear in January 2000.

"It would seem appropriate for these murderous lyrics to be half-spoken, half-sung by a demonic rhythm-and-bluesman in some post-apocalyptic border town. This is a book about that ultimate border between violence and meaning, illuminating the truth of Benjamin's definition of history as an accumulation of wreckage. Hill talks a high-tension lingo stripped of tense and person, denuding & freshly wounding time and subjectivity. Here, each line is a compressed scream, an ecstatic crossing between last & first things, a neo-medieval chorus line of skeletons dancing ..."

- Andrew Joron

↑ Index

365. Poetics List
r e a d m e has moved!!! / Sullivan
Mon 25 Oct 1999

---

this message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
Date: 10/20/99 11:31 AM -0400

Columbia University wasn't, apparently, happy about having an online magazine dedicated to contemporary poetics hanging out on their website. Soooo ... readme is now being housed at:

http://www.jps.net/nada

Thanks, Nada, for the webspace! & thanks, everyone else, for stopping by ...

Gary

↑ Index

366. Poetics List
Jackson Mac Low / Kerr
Mon 25 Oct 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: Douglas Charles Kerr <[redacted]>
Date: 10/23/99 9:09 PM -0700

Greetings,

I am in search of material on and by Jackson Mac Low. There is material here at Stanford but I'm sure that there is work that I can't find. Perhaps this could lead to an annotated bibliography of some sort. My project of the moment is a seminar paper on his Light poems.

How do I make a post?

thanks,

Douglas Kerr

↑ Index

367. Poetics List
Re: name that quote?
Mon 25 Oct 1999

Kathy Lou Schultz - the quotation sounds like Althusser but doesn't read like Althusser, if that makes any sense. Eagleton or perhaps Perry Anderson would be a good bet; I could almost see it as Jameson of The Political Unconscious but for the spelling. Chris

> % Christopher W. Alexander
> % poetics list moderator

↑ Index

368. Brent Long
Ghazal
Mon 25 Oct 1999

Forgive me, please, if this is a repeated posting...I'm having trouble with my network today. At any rate, I am trying to find a book or essay which details the "true" rules of form for ghazal. Any ideas?

Thanks in advance,

Brent A. Long

↑ Index

369. KENT JOHNSON
Transcultural Experiments
Mon 25 Oct 1999

The following book has just appeared, and I thought it might be of interest to some on the List:

Transcultural Experiments: Russian and American Models of Creative Communication, by Ellen E. Berry and Mikhail Epstein, St. Martin's Press.

"Contemporary processes of globalization have led to multiple and complex effects, among them the formation of radical new modes of cutural interaction, transcultural flows, and hybridized knowledges--forms not easily understandable in terms of traditional models of discrete national or ethnic cultures/subcultures. Transcultural Experiments develops new scholarly and creative strategies out of this intersection of cultural traditions, specifically in Russia and the United States. Ellen E. Berry and Mikhail N. Epstein define and enact a transcultural method as an alternative to the legacies of cultural divisions and hegemony that have dominated both Western and Second Worlds. The book introduces a system of original concepts and genres of writing that will help in mapping 21st century global cutlure: "transculture" (vs. multiculturalism), "interference" (vs. difference), "potentiation" (vs. deconstruction), "inteLnet" (vs. internet), ethics of imagination, hyperauthorship, and collective improvisation. The authors make a revolutionary argument in cultural studies that will be of profound interest to anyone concerned with finding new modes of creativity in the humanities, interdisciplinary thinking, and intercultural communication."

Ellen E. Berry is Associate Professor of English and co-chair of the English Department at Bowling Green state University. Her books include Curved Thought and Textual Wandering: Gertrude Stein's Postmodernism; Re-Entering the sign: Articulating New Russian Cultures; and Postcommunism and the Body Politic. Since 1994 she has co-edited the feminist cultural studies journal _Genders_.

Mikhail N. Epstein is Associate Professor in the Department of Rusian and East Asian Languages and Cultures at Emory University. His most recent books published in English are After the Future: Paradozes of Postmodernism and Contemporary Russian Culture and Russian Postmodernism: New Perspectives on Post-Soviet Culture.

↑ Index

370. jocelyn saidenberg
New American Poetry Reading and Book Party at SPT
Mon 25 Oct 1999

--==========_-1271237875==_ma==========

Reading and Book Party at Small Press Traffic

Friday, October 29, 7:30 p.m.
New American Poetry Book Party

Ebbe Borregaard
Lawrence Ferlinghetti
Barbara Guest
Ron Loewinsohn
Michael McClure
David Meltzer
Mary Clarke Greer and Christopher Wagstaff will read Madeline Gleason's work.

Small Press Traffic and the University of California Press invite you to this historic occasion, the book launch for the re-issue of the original (1960) The New American Poetry 1945-60, the "singlemost influential poetry anthology of the post-World War II period" (Alan Golding). Tonight, some of the original New American poets will come and read from their work-Ebbe Borregaard, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Barbara Guest, Ron Loewinsohn, Michael McClure, David Meltzer. We hope to lure NAP's reclusive and revered editor Donald M. Allen out from his Diamond Heights lair. In addition, the late Madeline Gleason will be represented by her executor, Mary Clarke Greer, and by her editor, Christopher Wagstaff (who has completed a new edition of Gleason's Selected Poems, published by Talisman House).

New College Theater
777 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]
www.sptraffic.org
--==========_-1271237875==_ma==========

<fontfamily><param>Palatino</param><bigger><bigger>Reading and Book Party at Small Press Traffic

Friday, October 29, 7:30 p.m.

<italic>New American Poetry </italic>Book Party

Ebbe Borregaard

Lawrence Ferlinghetti

Barbara Guest

Ron Loewinsohn

Michael McClure

David Meltzer

Mary Clarke Greer and Christopher Wagstaff will read Madeline Gleason's work.

Small Press Traffic and the University of California Press invite you to this historic occasion, the book launch for the re-issue of the original (1960) <italic>The New American Poetry 1945-60,</italic> the "singlemost influential poetry anthology of the post-World War II period" (Alan Golding). Tonight, some of the original New American poets will come and read from their work-Ebbe Borregaard, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Barbara Guest, Ron Loewinsohn, Michael McClure, David Meltzer. We hope to lure NAP's reclusive and revered editor Donald M. Allen out from his Diamond Heights lair. In addition, the late Madeline Gleason will be represented by her executor, Mary Clarke Greer, and by her editor, Christopher Wagstaff (who has completed a new edition of Gleason's <italic>Selected Poems,</italic> published by Talisman House).

New College Theater

777 Valencia Street, San Francisco

$5</bigger></bigger></fontfamily>

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

www.sptraffic.org

--==========_-1271237875==_ma==========--

↑ Index

371. Lowther, John boys (& girls) in the band
Mon 25 Oct 1999

---

thomas dorrow { p o e t i x }

re are reading the ~same~ list arent we ?

you write;

"These threads (...) about a kind of "the boys in the band"-style regionalism and demographic query totally ignoring that this list is not only read or used by Americans, border upon the same issue for me."

and i'd like to point out a couple small things here ----- everybody talks about how the internet might bring people that don't know one another together, right? ----- that seems true enough at times ---- in that i now have frequent email contact with a new friend in australia with folks all over the u.s. with some in canada and a guy in brazil and if i were to list all the contacts that have bloomed and then faded or just not gone anywhere i cd list a lot of other places outside of the u.s.

but So What ?

i asked about demographics as i've heard so many people assert (based on what evidence i have no clue) that the majority of the poetix list participants were localized in NYC and SF ---- so my pposting about demographics was simply to ask if there was any info and then in specifiying the south (where i live if it aint obvious) was that i thought it wd be a damned shame if it turned out that there was another poet or poets on this list whose aquaintence and perhaps friendship i might have who cd be --- god knows right here in atlanta or just in georgia or perhaps along the dull stretch of I-85 between here and my family's home in NC

i hope to go to europe next year and wd like to meet poets there too, and prior to any such trip will probably post something similra about areas that i'm likely to visit ---- will you post again then to pin me down as some other boy in some other band ? (undoubtedly earo-pop, no ???)

)L

↑ Index

372. Patrick Herron

on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)

Mon 25 Oct 1999

> a collapsing of meaningful distinctions in favor of a rhetoric of dismissive . . . bemusement

Thank you Taylor for your interest. May I ask you, bemusement conveys no meaning, Taylor? my post was bemusement in terms of severe mockery, not outrage. if there was a dime for every up-andcoming critic stepping on a creative person's head, well, there'd be enough coins to make us all very very rich. using one form of rhetoric (bemusement/mockery) does not mean i favor it over others in all cases. by any means. its legitimacy depends upon your value system. obviously i am a low brow cretin who resorts to more old fashioned everyday common man techniques, which seems to you unworthy of deployment in such a group as this. perhaps this group has been at this point before. sorry for rattling skeletons. the sound of bone on bone admittedly is chilling.

>such behaviors from their writers and readers
that go far beyond the very general "making folks feel bad," which seems to be about the greatest level of social violence listees can muster in their conflicts.

social "violence"? deploying tertiary definitions of loaded words such as "violence" in order to sway group opinion, then, is also a form of violence perhaps? the friar's club, on your use of "violence," is a violent organization then? and then you are restraining your own violence?

>Again, not to say that isn't a problem - at the risk of adding my voice to the calls for restraint, could we perhaps make sure to read each other, and be willing to articulate that reading out in the open, before resorting to dismissal out-of-hand?

actually, to be very honest, my effort was calculated. and restraint is not exactly a "correct" means of discourse, and I hope poets and those who love poetry know that. restraint is one of many means. having a sense of humor helps, as you and I would guess Mark both know. Am I not to assume that he has a sense of humor? That he understands why I would be bothered enough to twist his post into a punchline?

> I obviously have my intellectual investments here, rather than simply attack them in the "I-can-shout-over-a-DSL-line-louder-than-you" mode.

If that works for you, yes, sure, you can pursue your goals by your preferred means. I could say what I said quietly. What I said was in text, and in mixed (mostly lower) case. technically shouting is done with ALL CAPS. and, heck, i WISH i had DSL.

> It might benefit us, though, to make a principled distinction between our practices and theirs - a little more care and attention on both sides of this argument, perhaps?

I don't see it as "us" and "them." I'm a primate, an animal, making a display about very strong feelings i have about poetry. i am not above my nature. i am steeped in the animal kingdom and do not wish to insult the good name of my ancestors by acting any other way! and I'm childish and perhaps naively idealistic.

i wish the group to have a great deal of cohesion. cooperation is power. crit often divides to conquer, and that breaks down cohesion. perhaps this is the root of my mockery, the distaste for such displays of superiority, as Mark seems to try to display over Alan. I'm a primate and said, "eek! eek! no no! you must be laughed at!" poets are largely disenfranchised, and most are poor unless they find another way to make an income. why not discourage our own from disenfranchising each other?

when poetry sinks into subtle political games of manipulation and duplicity and backchannel handshakes, well, I'll shout then, too. Why get back at Mark through "principled distinctions between our practices and theirs"? There are few ways more respectable, at least in my little worldview, than being aboveboard, than making people laugh.

i know for sure more than a few people laughed. must they change their ways, too?

And I say this in the open to you Taylor, because despite the fact that we don't see eye-to-eye on method I like you and what you have to say. If I made fun of you here, would you laugh, or would you walk away in a puff and denounce the means? I'm not advocating that someone club mark over the head or label him a dickhead or something coarse like that, and i don't think anyone here gets that impression (I hope).

if i disagree with you, Taylor, i still see what you say as respectable and worthy of response, even disarming aggressive responses. Because I imagine you can go home and say, "geez, that was stupid," or, "no, now you're being stupid" (which is what I think you are saying here, and that's OK with me, my "I'm with stupid" tshirt has an arrow that points to my face).

Despite how we as adults are taught to be friends, and how apparently I fly in the face of that proper way known as RESTRAINT, i don't want Mark to be my enemy. i'd rather he say, "why did you say something so low to me in public" than to decide that I am his mortal enemy. perhaps this is the tower of Babel and he won't understand that. I was willing to take the risk.

i believe Mark is on the side of poetry, and that he may be misguided if he thinks that what he said is valuable and above even the lowest of ridicule. obviously he has a deep love for poetry, and i know i cannot dissuade him from that. perhaps I can dissuade him from being a clannish elitist, though, through mockery. i know what i said stung, but he's probably (hopefully) going to post again soon. i did not call him names. i made fun of him, albeit in a shockingly disarming way. but not behind his back. how do we formulate our gestures?

Taylor, you seem to intimate that it's the bad guys versus the good guys, and that i am a good guy gone astray. i am as bad if not worse than anyone and would like not to join such a team at all. to boot i would like to make fun of both teams as long as I can. I like Mark, I like you. I dislike the humorless stepping on heads thing. in my experience people step on another person's head to gain something. mark steps on Alan's head, to gain more space in his inbox perhaps, to gain inclusion in groups that have excluded Alan with similar types of unengaged crit, to reinforce his friendships with others who do not like Alan's writing. I step on mark's head to gain a world of poetry where (1) people can mercilessly lampoon others, and (2) where critics do not find room to gain in their own positions by doing the dirtywork of their masters. And you step on my head, perhaps a soft soled shoe, to show that i and others on this list not use ridicule and use restraint. You and I and Mark are no better than one another. we just have different means.

All the best,
Patrick

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

373. Philip Nikolayev
Re: Ghazal
Mon 25 Oct 1999

Try Muhammad Abd-Al-Rahman Barker et al, Classical Urdu Poetry, vol. 1, or D.J.Matthews, Anthology of Classical Urdu Love Lyrics. But a simpler approach would be to try the Encyclopaedia Britannica or a mere Web search -- unless you really want to get into such rather difficult technicalities as the traditional meters that used in the ghazal form, etc.

Best,
Philip Nikolayev

At 04:29 PM 10/25/99 -0400, you wrote:
>Forgive me, please, if this is a repeated posting...I'm having trouble with >my network today. At any rate, I am trying to find a book or essay which >details the "true" rules of form for ghazal. Any ideas?

>
>Thanks in advance,
>
>Brent A. Long
>

↑ Index

374. Herr Colin
Re: Ghazal
Mon 25 Oct 1999

there is a great essay on the ghazal in a book called (I think) _Expansive Poetics_ (or Poetry). I cannot remember the author or title (I'm not much on who but what) but it deals with the history and often over-use of the moniker "ghazal" as well as giving guidelines for ghazals. A great book of ghazals is _The Green Seas of Heaven_ by Hafiz. And let us not forget Federico Garcia Lorca's as well...

> herr<<C>

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

[theremin music] hypertext artworks for storyspace

-michael stutzman {[redacted]}
 daniel pereira {[redacted]}
 herr colin g. hough-trapp {[redacted]}

"The dawn is my Assyria; the sun-set and moon-rise
 my Paphos, and unimaginable realms of faerie; broad noon shall be my England of the senses and the understanding; the night shall be my Germany of mystic philosophy and dreams."

 -Ralph Waldo Emerson

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

↑ Index
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

375. Steve Dickison

Ammiel Alcalay in the Bay Area**

Mon 25 Oct 1999

Friends. I'm forwarding Ammiel Alcalay's schedule for the various readings & talks he's giving while in town next month. I'd highly recommend you check out any or all of these events.

In case you're not aware of his work, Ammiel's an outstanding poet-essayist-translator-activist who's focused on the Mediterranean region. He's translated poetry & other writings from Arabic, Hebrew, Serbo-Croatian, & Spanish. Highlights of his long bibliography, off the top of my head, are _After Jews & Arabs: On Levantine Culture_ (U Minn.), an amazing guide to recent writing from the so-called middle east; _For/Za Sarajevo_ was a special issue of Lusitania magazine that appeared several years ago during the siege of that city; _Sarajevo Blues_ is a great small book from young Bosnian poet Semezdin Mehmedinovic; Ammiel's own book of poetry, _the cairo notebook_ was published by Gil Ott's Singing Horse Press in Philadelphia; and his newest book is due any minute from City Lights, a collection of selected recent essays titled _Memories of Our Future_. He lives in New York & teaches at CUNY, Brooklyn.

>>
>>Lecture at UC Berkeley on Tuesday, November 9th at 5:00
>>
>> The Poetics of Local Knowledge:
>> Dispatches from the Balkans & the Middle East
 the Near Eastern Studies office is [redacted]

>>
>>Lecture/reading at Stanford on Wed. the 10th in the evening
>>
>> Memories of Our Future: Bringing Home the Cultural >> Landscape of the Balkans & the Middle East
[redacted]

> Reading, & interview with Norma Cole / Small Press Traffic Friday the 12th at 7:30
>
> Literary Arts Center at New College; New College Cultural Center (766 Valencia between 18th and 19th)
>
> Book Party/Reception Sunday, November 14th from 5 pm on > Co-sponsored by IVRI-Nasawi & City Lights Books

> Reading at Lone Mountain / University of San Francisco November 16th at 8 pm
>
> Room 140; 2800 Turk Blvd. between Masonic and Parker

==========
Steve Dickison, Director
The Poetry Center & American Poetry Archives ~ San Francisco State University 1600 Holloway Avenue ~ San Francisco CA 94132 ~ [redacted]

~ ~ ~

Lâ taltazim hâlatan, walâkin durn bî-llayâly kamâ tadûwru

Don't cling to one state turn with the Nights,
as they turn

~Maqâmat al-Hamadhâni (tenth century; tr Stefania Pandolfo)

~ ~ ~

Bring all the art and science of the world, and baffle and humble it with one spear of grass.

~Walt Whitman's notebook

↑ Index

376. pete spence

Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)

Mon 25 Oct 1999

> From: Taylor Brady <[redacted]>
> I largely agree with the (implicit) assertion here that Mark's dismissal of Alan Sondheim's work without benefit of anything close to a reading constitutes a problem for the kind of reasoned "restraint" or "self-control"
> he advocates re: Alan's postings. At the same time, however, the urge to up the ante >:)
> Patrick

,,seems to me at least sondheim is active is MAKING things and has found a venue to show and tell///pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

377. pete spence
Re: the "biz"
Mon 25 Oct 1999

> stephen ellis wrote;
>
> that the "world"
> (of poetry)
> seems very much
> caught up
> in the sense
> of itself as > a business
>
> i started thinking again about this and am perhaps getting more confused as i go on --- i've done these magazines and lost heaps of money and have another in the can waiting and waiting and weighing on me that i can't afford to pub it yet --- and i make no money on these things it all goes out
> really, but that doesnt discount being a business, right ? i mean there are > plenty of things we call businesses that lose money so that can't be the dividing line
>
> conflictedly
>
> )L
>
> know how you feel, seems hard for me in dear old Australia to sell the Hannah Weiner book i did in 86 hard then harder now with about 40 sale copies left, also hard to get orders in for the new Weiner book COUNTRY GIRL whyche will be a handmade production// publishing sent me broke a number of times during the 80's and a coupla times i was already broke when i published something what does this = a minus//nope//pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

378. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)

Mon 25 Oct 1999

---

in defense. I can "delete" anything Ineed to--so I will not suggest anyone say "don't write it", but I do get up to five LONG poems a day from sd. and truly wish to spend time discussing poetics rather than being sent the poems daily. It ain't the NYTimes! But a communtiy which speaks.

listen

Todd Baron
ReMapTaylor Brady wrote:
>
> I largely agree with the (implicit) assertion here that Mark's dismissal of > Alan Sondheim's work without benefit of anything close to a reading > constitutes a problem for the kind of reasoned "restraint" or "self-control" > he advocates re: Alan's postings. At the same time, however, the urge to up > the ante with this:
>
> this type of censorship is what keeps newspapers and televisions full of > doodoo, full of propaganda. I think the NYT might have a job for you!
>
> ..ends up moving in much the same direction - i.e., a collapsing of > meaningful distinctions in favor of a rhetoric of dismissive outrage, > bemusement, etc. Calls for "discursive protocol" articulated by individuals > without access to the immense, consolidated social surplus of, say, the > Times simply are not the same thing as the systemic and systematic > distortion of knowledge by capital.
>
> Now if you were to say that at times that very individual rush to dismiss > has been one of the many vectors along which Times-style distortion has > operated, I'd certainly be with you. But media monopolies have ways of > enforcing, cajoling, etc., such behaviors from their writers and readers > that go far beyond the very general "making folks feel bad," which seems to > be about the greatest level of social violence listees can muster in their > conflicts. Again, not to say that isn't a problem - at the risk of adding my > voice to the calls for restraint, could we perhaps make sure to read each > other, and be willing to articulate that reading out in the open, before > resorting to dismissal out-of-hand? Obviously, there are cases of personal > attack, "flaming," etc., in which the dismissive virtual sneer, rather than > the time-consuming response to an interlocutor who isn't going to bother > with a response anyhow, might be a useful option. But it seems to me we're a > long way off from that in Alan's writings, which interrogate the language(s) > of this list (well or badly [usefully or not?] is for a closer reading to > decide - though as a minor publisher of his work, I obviously have my > intellectual investments here), rather than simply attack them in the > "I-can-shout-over-a-DSL-line-louder-than-you" mode. We've seen the latter > here before, so I'm guessing we know what it looks like.

>
> That said, however, and without knowing Mark P., I'd give 10 to 1 odds to > anyone here that he doesn't have the weight of capital accumulation behind > him to come up to the level of the Times as an ideological "power." (And in > almost every instance, his ideological work on the list, when based on a > careful engagement, has been pretty well opposed to the practices of that > gray bastion of yellow journalism - my thanks, in general, for his presence > in this space). Hell, I doubt any of us here even rate a defunct Hearst rag > limping toward the inglorious end of a short-con joint operating agreement.
> It might benefit us, though, to make a principled distinction between our > practices and theirs - a little more care and attention on both sides of > this argument, perhaps?
>
> Taylor
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Patrick Herron
> Sent: Thursday, October 21, 1999 1:55 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression
>
> >AS's work is often weak, diffuse, silly, and its extreme > frequency on the list has led at least a half-dozen people i know to find > new meaning in the phrase, "delete, don't read."
>
> Mack, er, Mark, you have a very bright critical career ahead of you. Pass > the sunglasses and roll out the red carpet! Get me a seat on Air Force One!
> Feel the authoritative upholstery! Turn down the lights!:)
>
> Gee, maybe I should show some good ol' RESTRAINT. Ahh, fuck that.
>
> >in my scheme of poetic things AS isn't huge or important or terribly > >exciting...
>
> And I feel priveleged to learn of his lack of importance from you. :)

> Can you send me that scheme? The poetics of schemata, the schematics of > poetry. How poetic. Kinda like instructions on building a television. I > was just building a poem from scratch yesterday, some wires, some wood, some > capacitors, resistors, and was looking for a good schematic. Maybe i need > to head to Hotlanta to find them? Joe's Poetry Schematics Shop down there > by Five Points? :)
>
> >But Dan was indeed (as he suggests) expressing the feelings of quite a > >few people on the list. And i feel he is right to point out that the > >responses to him were a little too quick and too thoughtless: he was not > >calling for censorship.
>
> actually, he he seemed to be advocating a particular form of censorship - > self-censorship. self-censorship from threats. like of being labelled a > crap artist. this type of censorship is what keeps newspapers and > televisions full of doodoo, full of propaganda. I think the NYT might have > a job for you! :) :) :) smiling happy faces! :) :) :)
>
> I hope this was too quick and too thoughtless. Let's have my lawyer and > your lawyer do lunch. in case your flame spreads, or "blooms," as you call > it.
>
> the market force of criticism = CONTROVERSY. good work. A+. :)
>
> if we cannot laugh
> we can count ourselves
> doomed to the same thing
> we have always been
> doomed to anyway.
>
> Bloomin',
> :)
> Patrick
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

379. Murat Nemet-Nejat

Re: On Number-Systems

Mon 25 Oct 1999

In a message dated 10/25/99 2:47:52 PM, [redacted] writes:

> *And reading Knuth on number-base systems which include, for example a ternary system with +1, -1, and 0 as the symbols. Such systems can absorb the positive and negative numbers; there are others, such as ones based on 2i, that can absorb the complex number system as well (i.e. a single number of the form ax^n + bx^(n-1) ... +dx^1 +e). This is an amazing economy of means. The book is my favorite in the Knuth programming series - the volume on Seminumerical Algorithms - since it goes into the construct of arithmetic processes and algorithms we all take for granted. In my own work, I've always been fascinated by the possibility of base-1 and base-infinity systems; in the former, of course, addition becomes concatenation, and in the latter, the addition of any two unique symbols results in a third, i.e. J + K = L. There's an easy translation from the decimal system; say 25 * 26 = 650 - one would just look up within the infinite multiplication table, [25] and [26] and see [650] where the [x] represents the unique symbol. One goes from algorithms to infinite memorization or lookup. The phenomenology of this is really interesting, I think. For multiplication with base-1, one returns again to concatenation, for example 1111 * 111 = 111 111 111 111 which is the same as 4 * 3 = 12. There's nothing to learn in terms of memorization or lookup tables here; there's nothing to look up or memorize. Think of this as an infinite abacus of sticks placed in a single row; one moves from base-infinity with its pure economy of place and infinite symbols, to base-one with its pure economy of symbol and infinite place. This material is fascinating; it says something about the stability of the world itself, the Aristotelian logic at the heart of the almost-disconnected plateau of the life-world. I wrote years ago extensively on such phenomenologies; it's great to see the structures themselves in Knuth."* To place sticks in the row, letters in a row, one counts (literally) on the stability of place and demarcation - _these_ sticks are counted - _those_ remain unaccounted-for and uncounted. The sticks need not be in a row; there's no need for geometry, positioning, since what one is concerned with is the pure quantity of sticks, not a positional relationship. Interestingly, positionality also disappears with base-infinity, since every operation and quantity involves only _one_ position. In The Matrix, there is considerable discussion about "who is the One" - in base-one, everyone is, and in base-infinity, whatever is _there_ is the one.*
>
> What is going on here? On one hand, with base-one, there is the fact and phenomenology of _substance_ and the quantifiability and stability of the > world; on the other, with base-infinity, there is the problematic of the proper name in the Kripkean sense of rigid designator. In the former, names shift towards processes; in the latter, processes harden as names.

>
> One might also consider issues of perception: exactly what constitutes a stick or a symbol? Could, for example, two trees represent 2541 and 1734, a third representing 2541^1734 base-infinity? Is all of nature, in fact, the mathematics of base-infinity write large? At the other end, what might one say about typification, standardization: What constitutes a stick and what doesn't? Sticks are related to tallying, of course; they are indexical in relation to the quantification of the real, a one-to-one relationship with other physical objects. On the other hand one might consider the base-infinity symbols both symbolic (standing-for quantity as proper names or summarizations) and "quasi-ikonic," the coagulation of quantity itself as unary.
>
> And there are issues of memory: _Where_ is the place of counting - which sticks have already been marked, which remain unmarked? This depends not only on the stability of place, but our knowledge of place as well. Since base-infinity relies on individuated symbols, place, even the place of _announcement,_ becomes less relevant; memory of place is replaced by symbol memory: 2541^1734 = [2541^1734]
>
> Between base-one and base-infinity, the structure and variety of the world appear - not the infinite and obdurate variety of base-infinity, nor the pure quantifications of base-one, but gatherings, foreclosings, metaphors and metonymies. It's at the limits that nature becomes simultaneously mute and revelatory; in-between it's all culture and our image writ large, rubbed against the structure of the world.
>
> Word: re-ers
> Guess:
> Sorry, the word was "refers"
> Another word?

Alan admires the "amazing economy of means" in the volume on Seminumerical Algorithms in the Knuth programing series.

I wish he would apply the same economy to his own work.

Going through the mind numbing profundities of this last posting - please Alan, where is a sense of irony, a sense of humor, a sense of proportion. Since you bring Aristotle in, where is the golden rule?

Alan, you ask the question, "what constitutes a stick or a symbol." Well, sticks break bones. Symbols, I guess, don't. Because of their lack of economy -a quality which you seem to admire in "Seminumerical Algorithms" (whatever that means)- your words do

>
>
>
>*from http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/diary/diary.txt.
>
>_____
></XMP>
>
>---------- Headers ----------
>Return-Path: <[redacted]> >Received: from rly-zc05.mx.aol.com (rly-zc05.mail.aol.com [172.31.33.5]) >by air-zc01.mail.aol.com (v62.10) with ESMTP; Mon, 25 Oct 1999 15:47:52
>-0400
>Received: from LIME.EASE.LSOFT.COM (lime.ease.lsoft.com [209.119.1.41]) >by rly-zc05.mx.aol.com (v62.10) with ESMTP; Mon, 25 Oct 1999 15:47:41
-0400
>Received: from PEAR.EASE.LSOFT.COM (209.119.0.19) by LIME.EASE.LSOFT.COM
>(LSMTP for Digital Unix v1.1b) with SMTP id
<[redacted]>;
>Mon, 25 Oct 1999 15:43:53 -0400
>Received: from LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU by LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU
> (LISTSERV-TCP/IP release 1.8d) with spool id 10418348 for > [redacted]; Mon, 25 Oct 1999 15:47:36
>-0400
>Approved-By: [redacted]
>Received: (qmail 11490 invoked from network); 22 Oct 1999 23:44:16 -0000 >Received: from mail2.panix.com (166.84.0.213) by listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu >with > SMTP; 22

↑ Index

380. Carol L. Hamshaw
Vancouver Videopoem Festival
Tue 26 Oct 1999

The Vancouver Videopoem Festival
presented by The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre

November 7, 1999, 8pm
Video In Studios, 1965 Main Street, Vancouver, BC
Admission $10

The first Videopoem screening event ever held in Canada. The hybrid genre, videopoetry, has received little attention in our country despite being a creative field of growing interest for Canadian artists since the 1970's. Vancouver's own Edgewise ElectroLit Centre Society is hosting this inaugural event where the cutting-edge of this innovative medium is explored and presented. Work from Canada and beyond will give local audiences a survey of the accomplishments in videopoetry in the past 20 years. Hosted by Kedrick James, improv poet, host and director of Bravo TV's Planet Poetry.

Features:

Verbomotorhead, Vancouver improv ensemble doing a video production of e.e. cummings what if a much of a which of a wind.
Adeena Karasick's Alphabet City: "Through the continual questioning and reworking of traditional modes of language structures and usages, Alphabet City plays itself out within a politics of discomfort, hostility, secrecy, exclusion and interference. And, like the cityscape itself, language emerges as a semiotic slough, and functions as an economy of ruses, detours, complications; zones of problematization."
Patricia Smith (U.S.) teams up with poetry video guru Kurt Heintz in Chinese Cucumbers about a lover lost to HIV that creates "a kind of wild acceleration and simultaneous sinking feeling — and with all the mad cuts flying at the end there's no way out for the viewer."
(www.enteract.com/~kheintz/Fcucumbers.)
Selected work of Jill Battson, host of Muchmusic's poetry video series Word Up and organizer of Toronto's Spoken Word Festival.
Jason LeHeup's first multi-media videopoem was produced as part of the Judy2 launch, a "journal" he co-edits.
Activist and city politician, Bud Osborn, who's creative work unflinchingly examines the situation and hope in Vancouver's poverty culture.

Funding for The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre Videopoem Festival has been received from the Canada Council for the Arts and is produced in partnership with Video In Studios, Vancouver, BC. Part of Outside the Lines, BC Arts and Culture Week.

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre is a nonprofit society whose mandate is to exploit communications technology to widen the audience of Canadian poetry and to give poets, multi-media artists and youth the opportunity to use, learn, and create with this technology. Videoconferencing and online publishing are the major technologies that we work with. Our electronic magazine can be viewed and heard at <www.edgewisecafe.org>. Poets featured with audio include Adeena Karasick, Wayde Compton, bill bissett and Sheri-D Wilson. Funding for our programs is received from The Canada Council for the Arts, The BC Arts Council, The City of Vancouver, Embedded Spaces and Communicopia.

For more information, please call Carol L. Hamshaw, Administrator, at [redacted], or via email at [redacted]

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

381. nuyopoman
Moving to NYC
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Happy to announce that Jen Abrams of the Guld Complex, Chicago, is moving to NYC, where she will become Managing Director at Steve Cannon's ever wilde "A Gathering of the Tribes" -- the first ever paid staff,huzzah.

Jenis super cool, vegan, non-smoke, totally responsible, --- and homeless. Know of an apartment in the vicinity, up to $1100?

Bob Holman
[redacted]

↑ Index

382. dan raphael

expression / poetix/ whoever

Tue 26 Oct 1999

Okay, so express by being. i'd post more poems but i tend to write big. here's something short (tho wide in its usual format.)

and this brings up an old irk of mine. since i often write 80 character lines, htis not only keaves me out of many half-sheet type magazines, it is also limited by what can be dispalyed on the web.

how my house fell

my house fell into a pucker of space time and across the street or next door are at least an hours drive away like a farm house in the middle of thousands of acres you can barely recognize from the highway.
how driving west, you congratulate yourself for the marathon of nebraska only to be rendered unconscious by wyoming, not as long but so more hopeless,
sucking up every drop of momentum, sweat & possibility when all you want to do is get out, get through the first vanguard of mountains and into utah swept so clean, clenched so tight, it wants you to roll through,
is afraid to check our pockets or we’re deep in several concentric mazes of the city, like getting from the bronx to manhattan on foot, or my friend whose address in taipei was avenue 57., alley 16, block 4, building 11, apt 203: we’re defined by the grid, refined by the sheering abscissas systems inadequate to drain everything away, our mass attracting energy, the commerce of isolation, the need to zip the door around you like a sleeping bag, a sleeping bag that could support you in space for at least a week: the time for someone to find me or for my various parts to vote on which dimension to escape to and how many of them can access, who’ll be left to talk about it, locked in a silicon chip floating through space, the molecular bondage of memory stronger than vacuum gravity crumpled in a fist of wet pavement

dan raphael

↑ Index

383. trane devore
Re: name that quote?
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Because this is such a great quote, and because I'm sure others on the list are dying of curiosity: It's from Terry Eagleton's Criticism and Ideology: A Study in Marxist Literary Theory. I as well first thought Althusser ("Ideology and the State from Lenin and Philosophy), but that makes sense since Eagleton was highly influenced by Althusser during this period of his thought. Also note the Raymond Williamsesque "values" (Marxism and Literature).

Trane

> Hello Poetics,
> Another one of my damnable queries. Does anyone recognize the author/source of the following?
>
> "A dominant ideological formation is constituted by a relatively coherent set of 'discourses' of values, representations and beliefs which, realised in certain material apparatuses and related to the structures of material production, so reflect the experiential relations of individual subjects to their social conditions as to guarantee those misperceptions of the 'real' which contribute to the reproduction of the dominant social relations" (54).

↑ Index

384. david bromige
whereabouts of Carla Harryman's now-past reading
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Robert Corbett : No, you are correct, it IS in the Eliotic/Baudelairean Unreal City, the one that has pushed Paris and London off the perch, to wit, New York. (Here we see where a solid grounding in pop- and show-tunes would be of help to the aspiring geographer of poetry. "Mott Street" is one of the places mentioned in the song that promises to turn Manhattan into an isle of joy.)

David.

↑ Index

385. david bromige
jackson mac low
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Douglas Kerr--and others--

one way to make a post is to take a tree and whittle it. I believe they have machines to do that these days.

Another way is to post to Jackson at [redacted] .

David (self-appointed, and entirely inadequate, replacement for George Bowering, king of terse, helpful, pas-sourir responses, during his absence from Vancouver that he may take the waters at Toronto.)

↑ Index

386. Brandon and/or Christina

Re: name that quote?

Tue 26 Oct 1999

Kathy-

The passage is from Criticism and Ideology: A Study in Marxist Literary Theory

by Terry Eagleton.

-Brandon

↑ Index

387. Stephen Ellis

Re: the "biz"

Tue 26 Oct 1999

John, I think by "business" I meant that there's a lot of activity outside one's own "formal" creative work that diesn't seem creative, or, at least, I guess, to put my foot entirely in my mouth, not creative "in the same way." But why should it be? Organizing books and publishing books etc. involves flexibility if often not outright creativity, tho I think I was trying to place my point or point my place in some other direction. By "business"

I think I was trying to get at the fact that writing the poems - and perhaps also distributing them on a small scale - had to do with a distributive function, whereas this other "business-y" aspect seemed often to have more to do with accumulating a kind of authority wch is something other than any "authority" with which one writes. It's like the music business, the club scene, I suppose, in a more diffuse way, trying to get readings, going after publishing opportunities, etc. - all aspects of attaining some level of authority, just so to be HEARD, and recognized as (one of) the public figures of that activity, ie., producing materials that one feels "should be" heard.

To call this "the business" is perhaps not quite the right term - it points more to a real lack of community, a narrowness and the attending frustration over how best to either escape the narerowness, or use it "to one's advantage." In this, the work - the primary, MADE thing - seems at times to be forced to play second fiddle to a social occasion - though who doesn't like a party? - in which one hopes to gain some authority in understanding how their efforts are understood by others, and of their own position within that understanding. So one wants a group of ardent hearers for the purpose of self-reification under image to an imagined common purpose. All I'm suggesting is that the work itself, used in this way, becomes enslaved to the purpose of its going public. How necessary is applause with regards to some semblance of accomplishment? Or, in contradistinction to this, what can one accomplish in isolation?

One likes being with one's own kind to the end of feeling "understood, yet one also likes being with those different from one's self as a means of feeling difference. It seems all a matter of expansion and contraction of consciousness, that everything that happens IS "our business" yet never reaches the level of being the sort of "business" that becomes inflexibly authoritarian, even tho the "system" through which work becomes public is more often a function of the proprietary than not. How important is it, for example, viz copywriting, that more persons than you and a small circle of more-or-less intimate acquaintences know that you and you alone (influences notwithstanding) have written whatever you have written? And if it IS important, how many other people ("strangers") need to know this in order for the work to somehow establish a place for itself as an individualized version of The Tradition, say, in this pretty shadowy public sphere? The Business, as such, I think, comprises the ways in which the work is made to seem legitimate by being made also - and perhaps primarily - part of the legal corpus of ownership. The business of (self-) publicizing then becomes, I suppose, a way of sharing, although one based on power established, if I may say so, essentially from the top down. But then, poetry has always been a system partner of, and participant in, a continuous - if at times a-historical SEEMING - oligarchy. Perhaps a little more humor could be exercized in the ways through which the absolute reign of the maker in the MADE world makes his/her way into what might usefully be thought the humbling spectre of extensive public view. In a word, the question here becomes what do we believe we are delivering? Or what do we have each to give? Or, what can we BE, together? - S E

> From: "Lowther, John" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: the "biz"
> Date: Sat, 23 Oct 1999 18:33:24 -0400
>
> { p o e t i x }
>
> stephen ellis wrote;
>
> that the "world"

> (of poetry)
> seems very much
> caught up
> in the sense
> of itself as
> a business

i started thinking again about this and am perhaps getting more confused as i go on --- i've done these magazines and lost heaps of money and have another in the can waiting and waiting and weighing on me that i can't afford to pub it yet --- and i make no money on these things it all goes out
really, but that doesnt discount being a business, right ? i mean there are plenty of things we call businesses that lose money so that can't be the dividing line

but maybe it can still ? that is businesses are at least concerned to make money even if they lose it and i never expect to make any ---- or leave the magazine publishing thing behind ---- i don't expect to make any money of being a poet, i suppose i cd, i cd win a contest and get a book published and win some $ but enough to think of my writing as a business ?

so skip money, maybe what yr saying isnt about cash but clout ? capital in that sense ? where we hope to get pubbed in the chicago review or the gertrude stein awards or win the national poetries series competition b/c "it'll open doors" us ? is that the "business" which you mean ? ---- i'm reminded of something someone told me about going to a reading and the young poet who was reading that night marched up introduced themself to everyone and was later heard to say "I LOVE NETWORKING!" ---- is that the same sort of "business" ?

admittedly, i like meeting poets ---- my trip to LA last year was a blast and i look forward to new orleans next month ---- and i wd be mightily pleased to win the national poetry series and have a bit of hope that my work might get read or find it's way into places it won't if i end up publishing it myself

where does it start being the "business" ? when i start hoping that other contest winners DONT win as it wd affect me negatively ? when i start schmoozing and playing for favor with editors i don't like b/c it wd "do me good" ? i think those things should qualify for the "biz" which i wd wish to combat which it wd suck to step into

but i'm left feeling that while i understand, i think, the thrust of yr statement stephen, and too, see myself the businessy behavior now and > again,

> that i DONT think of poetry as a business or the poetry world as business community ---- that doing so seems somehow a self-blinding
>
> conflictedly
>
> )L
>
> *p.s. shit, more *seriousness

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

388. Mark Prejsnar
on regionalism...
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Someone recently posted, to the effect that people in alabama were into regionalism....(this they took to be bad, and were fairly sniffy about it.....)

What interestes me about most of the poets that i know in the south, is how much they are interested in community and how little they are interested in regionalism ...

This should hardly be surprising..since they are more likely to care deeply about Coolidge or Stein, Koch or Palmer, Hijinian or Cerevolo, Mackey or Baraka, than James Dickey or even Charles Wright....

Many things are a'stirrin' in dixie, and they ain't regionalist: there are more poems, and more interesting poetry scenes, in heaven and earth, than are ecompassed in yer philosophy, Mr. Dorow!

mp
@lanta.....

(This post reflects ONLY my opinions, and those of no other poet: in fact, if someone tried to agree with me, i wdn't LET 'em!!!)

↑ Index

389. Mark Prejsnar
Wallace on Beach
Tue 26 Oct 1999

" Clearly, according to Beach we can't be serious UNLESS we write about Hejinian, Silliman, Perelman, etc--for Beach, there simply can be no other poetic issue than language poetry."

****

Mark: The two substantial chapters on slam and other performative styles...are they chopped liver? i'm confused... They seem to me pretty generous, often more so than many slam poets or scenes deserve.....

How does that fit?? (also, that fact that he's pretty darn generous to Stephen Dobyns..) Just curious

mp

(This post reflects ONLY my opinions, and those of no other poet: in fact, if someone tried to agree with me, i wdn't LET 'em!!!)

↑ Index

390. Jill Stengel
business of poetry
Tue 26 Oct 1999

business (biz'nis) n. [ME businesse , bisi, busy.] 1. a. The occupation, work, or trade in which one is engaged. b. A specific pursuit or occupation. 2. Commercial, industrial, or professional dealings. 3. A commercial enterprise or establishment. 4. Volume or amount of commercial trade <Business was increasing.> 5. Commercial dealings: patronage. 6. One's rightful or proper interest or concern. 7. Serious work or endeavor <promised to get down to business> 8. An affair or matter  9. An incidental action performed by an actor on the stage to fill a pause between lines or to provide interesting detail. 10. Informal. A verbal reprimand: scolding. 11. Obs. The condition of being busy. syns: business, commerce, industry, trade, traffic n. core meaning: commercial, industrial, or professional activity <when business is slow> Business applies broadly to all gainful activity. Industry is the production and manufacture of goods <the plastics industry>, while commerce and trade are the exchange and distribution of commodities <interstate commerce> <the publishing trade> Traffic may suggest illegal trade <traffic iun narcotics>

Websters II New Riverside University Dictionary, 1988

it's a simple fact of life in our society that people must be able to provide for themselves monetarily. if one wishes to criticize the business elements of poetry, please consider looking at the larger picture in which this situation exists. most people are not able to financially support themselves through their poetry, their publications. this is almost laughable that i even wrote this last sentence, as it is so blatantly obvious.

as both a poet and publisher, i cannot ignore the fact that it costs money to put work forth into the world. even self-publishing--paper, pen, printer, whatever--requires money. let's not forget stamps, envelopes. last i checked, these were not free either. maybe i'm looking in the wrong places? what about web publishing--i pay for internet access, paid for this computer at which i now sit, etc., so nope, that's not free either. sending work out to others to publish: well, there's still that computer and printer and paper and stamps to be thinking of. unless i'm going to go use someone else's computer and printer and paper and stamps. do i borrow, barter, repay somehow, or do i just take and not give back? which has parallels with what happens once someone is published in a journal...there's that work you're reading, yours, someone else's...there it is, right there, in the midst of someone else's resources i.e. book, journal, whatever. you get the experience, the pleasure, the gain yes the gain the benefit of reading it, holding it, looking at it, flipping the pages or clicking buttons...do you choose to simply ignore the fact that it took time and money and a whole lot of dedication and determination to bring this product forth? or do you go ahead and subscribe to some publications, purchase small press books, encourage and actively engage in the wide range of what it is to be a poet in this society in this time at this place at this moment and why aren't you going right now to buy some book off the spd website at once or grabbing an envelope and writing a check to a small non-spd-carried publication that has come across you lately that you liked that you enjoyed that you set aside without thinking about the cost the costs involved. the business of poetry is there whether you choose to look at it or not. to ignore it is a protective stance, a protected position. not everyone has the ability to / interest in maintain(ing) this posture. to bring it--the financial concerns of poetry--to light in a criticizing manner, pointing fingers at those who cannot avoid the simple math of needing to make ends meet, is unfair, detrimental...and contributes to the continuation of the limited availability of non-mainstream publishing.

thanks for listening/reading--
jill stengel

↑ Index

391. Jill Stengel
elements of business
Tue 26 Oct 1999

...and then there's this networking thing...
there are so many tangents, elements, aspects of this whole "business" thing...

networking. hard to know sometimes what is going on. is this person talking to me b/c s/he knows i publish books? does s/he want something from me? or is this a gesture of friendliness, a desire to participate in the larger poetic conversation? do i want to always assume the worst, clam up, turn off, turn away? or do i want to leave myself open, believe that the conversational effort is from a place of genuine interest? and is it not genuine interest to want to be published, to, by being published, enter into the conversation in a larger way, reaching more people? this is very confusing. i want to know the poets in my community, and in the larger community as a whole. some i know are doing interesting publishing projects, some are being published, some are doing/hosting readings/performances--i want to know what's going on, who they are, what they have to say. am i networking? i do know of some people i've been warned away from, those who i've been told go through friends in a rotating cycle, when they've finished with their usefulness to them...that might be networking, but i'm not sure, really--it sounds more like resource-depletion to me. most poets i know are interested in the genuine conversation. who the hell else wants to talk about this stuff? not too many other people, tho recently a business (that word again) banker started talking to me about emily dickinson and dorothy parker, which impressed the hell out of me. so what is this networking anyway? really? curiously, jill stengel

↑ Index

392. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: generation returns again & again (fwd)
Tue 26 Oct 1999

. Thus the real subtext >of the book is how the academic marketplace DEFORMS poetic thinking to >meet academic marketplace demands--"here is the field of acceptable poetry >to the academy; language poetry can now be defined as academically >acceptable; therefore all poetics must speak to it."

> Is it a book for other academic critics to respond to and make other careers out of while erasing the actual histories of poems and poets? No doubt.

While I agree with most of what Mark says, the passages I've detached here make me wince -- I suspect Mark will agree, after looking carefully at the careers around him, that writing a book about "language" poetry is probably not the best way to "make a career" in the academy even now -- As to the academic acceptability of "language" writing in comparison with other modes of poetry and discourse, I suspect that I know personally every human being who consistently teaches "language" poetry in universities, and I don't know all that many people --

"no doubt "?

but Beach has made a muckery of Mark's commentary --

↑ Index

393. Nielsen, Aldon

Federman and Benabou in Los Angeles

Tue 26 Oct 1999

Raymond Federman and Marcel Benabou will be speaking this weekend on the campus of Loyola Marymont University -- for details visit:

http://clawww.LMU.EDU/graduate/engl/Colloq.htm

↑ Index

394. r.drake

Grist mill

Tue 26 Oct 1999

---

forward from another list:
>
>Announcing a new list for poets discussing political issues. Grist, the >successor to ictus, is up and running. Grist is an open discussion list, at >the core of which are poets discussing political issues that are relevant to >all. From Kosovo to East Timor, from media distortion to the use of drugs >by psychiatrists, all is grist to the mill.
>
>Join the list at http://grist.listbot.com . Send messages to >[redacted]
>

↑ Index

395. Joe Amato
job ad...
Tue 26 Oct 1999

fyi, & a bit cheeky... rec'd under the heading "isn't everyone"...

best,

joe

The program in Creative Writing at -------- invites applications for an Assistant Professor in a thriving MFA program. Ph.D. preferred. To teach graduate and undergraduate poetry workshops, craft, and literature. We are seeking a poet of national reputation, with at least one book from a major publishing house, and substantial teaching experience. Awards desirable. Evidence of energetic and excellent teaching a top priority. Competitive salary and benefits. Send letter of application, c.v., writing sample, transcripts, 3 letters of recommendation (dated 1996 or later), and a stamped, self-addressed postcard, to Chair, Creative Writing Search Committee. Materials must be postmarked by 15 November. MLA interviews. -------- is an Affirmative Action employer.

Note: if you do not know someone on our faculty, or if you do not know someone who knows someone on our faculty, please do not bother. And if you know anyone who knows someone on our faculty, please encourage them to apply. -------- is an Affirmative Action employer.

Also: if the someone on our faculty you do know, or the someone on our faculty someone you know knows-i.e., if the faculty member so known is anyone, you might not want to waste your time, either. Ditto for those anyones you know who think they know someone. -------- is an Affirmative Action employer.

NB: We are not just anyone, and we are looking for someone. -------- is an Affirmative Action employer.

↑ Index

396. Patrick F. Durgin
Fw: something to the poetics list
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Hey,
Anyone with contact info for Glen Ingersoll, please backchannel to
[redacted]
Thanks Patrick F. Durgin

---------- Text of forwarded message ---------- From: "Patrick F. Durgin" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Subject: Fw: something to the poetics list
Date: Tue, 26 Oct 1999 16:26:22 -0500

-----Original Message-----
From: Sumana Kaipa <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, October 26, 1999 3:53 PM
Subject: something to the poetics list

> hi & i'll talk to you soon,
>
> will you send this to the poetics list for me:
>
> I'm looking for contact information for Glenn Ingersoll.
>
> Anyone have a phone number?
>
> thanks,
> summi
>
> ---
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

k e n n i n g
a newsletter of contemporary poetry, poetics, and nonfiction writing
http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

397. KENT JOHNSON
sticks and bones
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Murat Nemet-Nejat wrote:

> Alan, you ask the question, "what constitutes a stick or a symbol." Well, sticks break bones. Symbols, I guess, don't. Because of their lack of economy -a quality which you seem to admire in "Seminumerical Algorithms" (whatever that means)- your words do

But a stick, of course, can be a symbol. And in that way, a symbol can break bones. I'd say Sondheim's question is perfectly reasonable-- and in the right symbolic context a potential stick for use.

↑ Index

398. Taylor Brady

Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)

Tue 26 Oct 1999

Bemusement certainly carries plenty of meaning of its own. What I responded to in your post was the way that very meaning was constructed by parasitizing and ultimately vacating the other very real meanings of social scale at work in the discussion: e.g., that what the Times accomplishes in the deployment and installation of ideology at a transnational scale is _not_ the same as what Mark proposed at the ultimately rather small scale of the 10% or so of list participants who were likely to be paying attention to this thread. That, for example, his call for Alan to exercise a kind of prior restraint on his productions in this forum, however much one might take issue with it (and I do - I think you and I agree there), is orders of magnitude away from the ability to rig the mechanisms of political debate in order to foreordain the ideological victory and material "progress" of the neoliberal empire - which ability _is_, concretely, the medium of the Times' work.

This is not to say I find no room for mockery or hyperbole in these discussions - simply that the level of hyperbole involved in your equation between two such disparate practices seemed to obscure an accurate assessment of the situation. Public discourse should (how's that for prescriptive and censorious?) flash and crackle with wit, but when the requirements of a good joke at your interlocutor's expense overwhelm those of accuracy - well, call me dour and bloodless, but it makes me nervous. Of course there are effective sites for that kind of mockery-and-the-rest-be-damned approach: one thinks of Lenny Bruce's portrayal of cops and judges, or Malcolm X's "chickens coming home to roost" comment. What's most telling in these instances, for me, is that the speakers are articulating their positions against the context of a real social violence which has effectively closed off the possibility of further debate. In the face of attempts to destroy a life and livelihood, or at a much larger scale to effectively decapitate and liquidate a people's insurgency, Bruce and X's refusals to distinguish between good and bad cops, between J.F.K. and J. Edgar Hoover, emerge as necessary responses to situations one might call, without exaggeration, life-threatening. In such circumstances, sure, let the barbs fly, and sort out the details if they let you live to see the aftermath.

And that was, as I saw it, the source of my description of "social violence" as operative in these engagements. Read my post again. I think it makes fairly clear my sense that the _real_ social violence is that being perpetrated by wholesalers of ideological consolation for empire like the Times...and that the most we can muster in this particular space, in comparison, is a fairly benign emotional aggression or petulance. That it is ridiculous to compare the scale of this to that of the Times' operations by resort to the same term of definition was, for me, precisely the point. Far from a scare tactic, I employed it as a means of deflation. But in your rush to mold my comments into a target for mockery, you've bypassed this fine point, as you've bypassed the ironic inflection of my use of the word "restraint." Again, please read what I wrote: the post begins with a criticism of restraint as a viable mode of practice for this list. The comment from which you draw the presumptive conclusion that I'm a standard-bearer for exactly that restraint is actually doing work completely opposed to it. "At the risk of adding my voice to the calls for restraint...", i.e., it's a risk, something I wouldn't want. "Let me not be misunderstood to be suggesting," etc., etc. I realize irony doesn't carry so clearly in email, but that one seemed fairly well evident to me.

Which brings me back to my original stake in this thread: Might we not reasonably expect that, on a list devoted to poets and scholars of poetry, participants in arguments would read each other's writings with a certain amount of care? And that this reading would include an attention to the work being performed by those writings in a sphere understood to be at least somewhat larger than the daily P-List tally of who got the leg up on whom? This isn't a call for "politeness" or restraint - simply my wish that when we depart from civility (as at times, all "citizens" must [and how much more so those faced with exclusion from _that_ designation]) - that we engage in such departure out of a sense of necessity, and with an understanding of _what_ it is we've chosen to make the target of our tactical misapprehensions.

Then again, I had my sense of humor surgically extracted before going to Buffalo back in '94. It's cold there, and humor being the delicate organ it is, the climate often turns it bitter and malignant. Many of us chose to have it amputated. Now that I'm in San Francisco, shuttling Volvo-wise up price-speculating hill and down multimedia gulch through the autopoiesis of the armies of the painfully, painfully earnest, I don't miss it at all. We're all very centered and happy here, except when we're not.

Without a trace of irony, but thoroughly strapped in, cinched up, and otherwise restrained,
Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Patrick Herron
Sent: Monday, October 25, 1999 2:28 PM
To: [redacted]

Subject: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)

> a collapsing of meaningful distinctions in favor of a rhetoric of dismissive . . . bemusement

Thank you Taylor for your interest. May I ask you, bemusement conveys no meaning, Taylor? my post was bemusement in terms of severe mockery, not outrage. if there was a dime for every up-andcoming critic stepping on a creative person's head, well, there'd be enough coins to make us all very very rich. using one form of rhetoric (bemusement/mockery) does not mean i favor it over others in all cases. by any means. its legitimacy depends upon your value system. obviously i am a low brow cretin who resorts to more old fashioned everyday common man techniques, which seems to you unworthy of deployment in such a group as this. perhaps this group has been at this point before. sorry for rattling skeletons. the sound of bone on bone admittedly is chilling.

>such behaviors from their writers and readers
that go far beyond the very general "making folks feel bad," which seems to be about the greatest level of social violence listees can muster in their conflicts.

social "violence"? deploying tertiary definitions of loaded words such as "violence" in order to sway group opinion, then, is also a form of violence perhaps? the friar's club, on your use of "violence," is a violent organization then? and then you are restraining your own violence?

>Again, not to say that isn't a problem - at the risk of adding my voice to the calls for restraint, could we perhaps make sure to read each other, and be willing to articulate that reading out in the open, before resorting to dismissal out-of-hand?

actually, to be very honest, my effort was calculated. and restraint is not exactly a "correct" means of discourse, and I hope poets and those who love poetry know that. restraint is one of many means. having a sense of humor helps, as you and I would guess Mark both know. Am I not to assume that he has a sense of humor? That he understands why I would be bothered enough to twist his post into a punchline?

> I obviously have my intellectual investments here, rather than simply attack them in the "I-can-shout-over-a-DSL-line-louder-than-you" mode.

If that works for you, yes, sure, you can pursue your goals by your preferred means. I could say what I said quietly. What I said was in text, and in mixed (mostly lower) case. technically shouting is done with ALL CAPS. and, heck, i WISH i had DSL.

> It might benefit us, though, to make a principled distinction between our practices and theirs - a little more care and attention on both sides of this argument, perhaps?

I don't see it as "us" and "them." I'm a primate, an animal, making a display about very strong feelings i have about poetry. i am not above my nature. i am steeped in the animal kingdom and do not wish to insult the good name of my ancestors by acting any other way! and I'm childish and perhaps naively idealistic.

i wish the group to have a great deal of cohesion. cooperation is power. crit often divides to conquer, and that breaks down cohesion. perhaps this is the root of my mockery, the distaste for such displays of superiority, as Mark seems to try to display over Alan. I'm a primate and said, "eek! eek! no no! you must be laughed at!" poets are largely disenfranchised, and most are poor unless they find another way to make an income. why not discourage our own from disenfranchising each other?

when poetry sinks into subtle political games of manipulation and duplicity and backchannel handshakes, well, I'll shout then, too. Why get back at Mark through "principled distinctions between our practices and theirs"? There are few ways more respectable, at least in my little worldview, than being aboveboard, than making people laugh.

i know for sure more than a few people laughed. must they change their ways, too?

And I say this in the open to you Taylor, because despite the fact that we don't see eye-to-eye on method I like you and what you have to say. If I made fun of you here, would you laugh, or would you walk away in a puff and denounce the means? I'm not advocating that someone club mark over the head or label him a dickhead or something coarse like that, and i don't think anyone here gets that impression (I hope).

if i disagree with you, Taylor, i still see what you say as respectable and worthy of response, even disarming aggressive responses. Because I imagine you can go home and say, "geez, that was stupid," or, "no, now you're being stupid" (which is what I think you are saying here, and that's OK with me, my "I'm with stupid" tshirt has an arrow that points to my face).

Despite how we as adults are taught to be friends, and how apparently I fly in the face of that proper way known as RESTRAINT, i don't want Mark to be my enemy. i'd rather he say, "why did you say something so low to me in public" than to decide that I am his mortal enemy. perhaps this is the tower of Babel and he won't understand that. I was willing to take the risk.

i believe Mark is on the side of poetry, and that he may be misguided if he thinks that what he said is valuable and above even the lowest of ridicule. obviously he has a deep love for poetry, and i know i cannot dissuade him from that. perhaps I can dissuade him from being a clannish elitist, though, through mockery. i know what i said stung, but he's probably (hopefully) going to post again soon. i did not call him names. i made fun of him, albeit in a shockingly disarming way. but not behind his back. how do we formulate our gestures?

Taylor, you seem to intimate that it's the bad guys versus the good guys, and that i am a good guy gone astray. i am as bad if not worse than anyone and would like not to join such a team at all. to boot i would like to make fun of both teams as long as I can. I like Mark, I like you. I dislike the humorless stepping on heads thing. in my experience people step on another person's head to gain something. mark steps on Alan's head, to gain more space in his inbox perhaps, to gain inclusion in groups that have excluded Alan with similar types of unengaged crit, to reinforce his friendships with others who do not like Alan's writing. I step on mark's head to gain a world of poetry where (1) people can mercilessly lampoon others, and (2) where critics do not find room to gain in their own positions by doing the dirtywork of their masters. And you step on my head, perhaps a soft soled shoe, to show that i and others on this list not use ridicule and use restraint. You and I and Mark are no better than one another. we just have different means.

All the best,
Patrick

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

399. William Slaughter

Mudlark

Tue 26 Oct 1999

New and On View: Mudlark No. 12 (1999)

At A Shift of Points the Chorus Switches

Twenty-five Poems by Martin Bennett

Martin Bennett read English at Saint Catherine's College, Cambridge. He then taught in Nigeria and Ghana. He now works in Saudi Arabia. His collection of poems, LOOSE WATCHES, was published by the University of Salzburg Press.

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

_____
MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

400. Gerald Schwartz
Re: the "biz"
Tue 26 Oct 1999

I believe it was Harrison Fisher, who in 1985, coined the term "poebiz"....

...are there any earlier references?

Gerald

↑ Index

401. Alan Sondheim
Bye
Tue 26 Oct 1999

I think Todd Baron did it for me - "up to five long poems a day." I've never sent that much out to any list and most of my work isn't partic- ularly long.

I was also slammed for sending out something about the poetics of mathe- matics, which I think is relevant here. But clearly it isn't.

I'm tired of the debate. My work's available on Trace. I'll send in very very very occasionally on this list, most likely just URLs. I don't expect very many of you to be interested, but then most of the poetics here is literary in the oldest sense possible - and while there are new works and writers going on, from Kent John- son to Christy Sanford to Miekal And to m9ndfukc.com or jodi.org - ALL of whom are relevant here - the discussion continues in very traditional ways. I thank those of you who have suppor- ted me of course; I'm not trying to overly-generalize or offend anyone.

Someday - if you continue to use words like "author," "poem," "avant- garde," "experimental," "writing," or "reading" - you're going to have to open up a LOT more than you've done. And you're going to have to open to radically different forms of discourse, of media, of Net in all its mani- festations. I'd suggest looking at the 7-11 list for example or the occa- sional literary posts on Nettime.

Again, this is just my neurosis here. I'm worn out. I don't want to defend myself or my writing any longer. I don't see any point to it. I'm excited by a lot of new writing all over the Net, and I wish there were more of it on Poetics. I love the writings of a lot of people here as you probably know. But I do feel hounded out by a lot of others, and I am physically ill at the moment, there's bad sickness in my family, and I'm really tired of fighting the same fights I've been engaged in for decades, arguing the same arguments. I'm depressed and stressed out, what else is new.

For anyone interested, check out the URLs below - I will probably send an update of trAce once a week, since as writer in residence "there" I get to see a lot of exciting things, including my own.

Alan, apologies to everyone

Trace at: http://trace.ntu.ac.uk Internet Text at http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt Partial at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html Trace Projects at http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/index.htm My current work at: http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/diary/le.txt Online diary at: http://trace.ntu.ac.uk/writers/sondheim/diary/diary.txt

↑ Index

402. David Kellogg

Re: Ghazal

Tue 26 Oct 1999

See "The Ghazal in America: May I" by Agha Shahid Ali, in _After New Formalism: Poets on Form, Narrative, and Tradition_, ed. Annie Finch (Story Line Press, 1999), pp. 123-132.

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

403. Thomas Dorow
Re: on regionalism...
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Dear Mr. Presjar,

you wrote,

> Someone recently posted,

etc. when you actually meant me. This is quite alright, but I´m beginning to feel an itching in my nose. In fact, I´m beginning to bite the edge of my table at the sound of this schoolmasterly tone, but well well, a nice cup of tea should do away with it, and for the rest, my "philosophy" will help. Then you said something about someone being sniffy about regionalism, and I say no and no and again no, I´m not, honest to god. There is a certain sense of community, though, that makes my toenails curl, and that is the kind that claims collective authority.

Greetings,
Tom

↑ Index

404. Bill Lavender
Re: Winners-Deep South Writers Conference Contest
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Loyola University and New Orleans Review
announces

An Other South

Symposium and Readings

Saturday, November 6, 1999
Loyola University

Please respond to this email if you would like to have a hardcopy of the schedule mailed to you. Call [redacted] for more information.

Please forward this message.

****

Schedule:

2:00 PM: Panels and Presentations
(Octavia Room, Danna Center, 2nd Floor)

Introduction and Welcome. Bill Lavender

Formalism, Experimentation, Improvisation.)ohnLowther

poly(am)nesia. a haiku extension of AGRARIA. A. di Michele

Multi-media Presentation. Gerry Cannon

A Passion for Peril: Emotion and Experiment. Camille Martin

Other Sense Poetry. Randy Prunty

Panel on An Otherness: The South and Experimentation. All participants. Hank Lazer moderates

Readings:

Niyi Osundare

Kay Murphy

Amy Trussell

Christopher Chambers

4:15 PM: Introduction of the New Orleans Review Advisory Board, Refreshments

5:00 PM: Break for Dinner

7:00 PM: Readings Continue (Nunemaker Hall, 3rd Floor Monroe Hall)

Bernadette Mayer

An interpretation in dance of Jake Berry and Amy Trussell¹s "Dark Water Song" and Jake Berry¹s "Primencia Devour." Amy Trussell

Hank Lazer

David Thomas Roberts

Joel Dailey

Andy Young

Dennis Formento

Joy Lahey

Mark Spitzer

Nancy Harris

M. Sarki

Alex Rawls

Bill Myers

Dave Brinks

Susan Facknitz

Brett Evans

Greg Fuchs

Randy Prunty

)ohnLowther

A. Di Michele

Camille Martin

Skip Fox

****

Location

Loyola is located at 6363 St. Charles Avenue, across from Audobon Park.
Free Parking for participants and guests is available in the West Road parking garage (enter from St. Charles).
For further information, contact:
Bill Lavender‹ email: [redacted]
5568 Woodlawn Place, New Orleans, LA 70124 [redacted]

Other events that week:

Thursday night, Nov. 4: Bernadette Mayer reads at the University of New Orleans at 7:30 pm. later Thursday night: Readings at the Dream Palace, 534 Frenchmen St. Open mike, and then music by the Glick Bros. Sunday, Nov. 7: Regular Maple Leaf Bar reading at 3:00 pm, Camille Martin and A. di Michele, followed by open mike.

↑ Index

405. david bromige
poetry audience/s
Tue 26 Oct 1999

A bit late to post re this, I guess, the rate we do turn over topics here. But anyway : I am glad to see this subject discussed. It does need it. To see the work of Dobyns so widely read---9,000 bought the selected, did I read?--when it is such predictable, contained, unchallenging writing, while the poetry of---oh, hundreds, but at my random, say Kit Robinson, Steve Benson, Deanna Ferguson, Lissa Wolsak, Dan Farrell, Nick Piombino, surely has at best one-tenth of those sales, is not only galling, it is a crying shame.....that there are poets who are so much more the equal of their times, scarcely remarked by a book-buying public, while "300 CW programs" [and that AINT C & W, right?] bolster SD's sales & thus confirm students to produce poems that continue this non-venture, "ah, well, it troubles my sleep," is an understatement, and a colossal one at that.

Look at SD's product and you will find no mystery whatsoever, each poem wraps itself up with not a drop left over, like the last glass of the evening, for the gods. The titles alone take care that nothing escapes. The poems are over-contextualized up the wazoo. To me, the phenomenon of this ilk of poetry in our day is only an extension of the new world order and the control mindset that it would impose upon Mind, that best adventure.

I find it depressing that books such as _Body Traffic_ get published by Penguin whereas it is harder each year for the poetry I love to get published at all; poor people who write poetry cannot afford to subsidize its publication, and more of us get poorer by the year.

Is there a solution? Think.

In the meantime, the failure of poetry to reach a public, frees poetry up to be whatever it wants to be, no one to impress or hustle, none to address, only Being & Nothingness, only Love and Beauty, In/Justice, Oblivion, the Language and one to do it.

David

↑ Index

406. david bromige
re up w/ down
Tue 26 Oct 1999

Again, sorry to be dialtory : this responds to something from at least a week ago.

> are talking. it was really rainy yesterday. I can't take > it anymore. Alan Sondheim keeps writing stuff, and it's not "real" poetry.
> it's stuff that just came off his typewriter, as opposed to the other kind.
> what right does he have? let us band together, I mean it, and demand that > Alan stop posting stuff from his typewriter because if he doesn't we're > going to have to learn how to use the delete button, and I for one am much > too busy for that.
>
> yours with an urgent sense of a vast problem, yet one, I think, that we can > lick, if we just, like, you know, whatever. Allen

I found this at the foot of a Stephen Ellis post, to which I was led by Charles Bernstein's rebuttal of a tale Ellis tells. I apologize for not knowing who "Allen" is in full.

It's hard to believe my eyes. Here we are, 1999, and a poetry-lover can still make a distinction between "real" poetry and stuff that just comes off the tpyewriter?!? What does one put on in order to produce this "real" poetry, one wonders? A Sherlock Holmes robe and deerstalker hat? A laurel crown? A gorilla suit? Does anyone here remember the anecdote Creeley tells of reading in Indiana (perhaps there) and being asked "Was that a real poem, or did you make that up yourself?"?

For what it's worth, in my opinion Alan Sondheim's project is an accurate use of this List. Yes, I expect much of what he posts he has just written---likely he writes directly onto his e-mail. I know I often do, valuing the immediacy and the commitment. Sure, I find the quality uneven---but that doesnt strike me as a primary worry at all. It's in the overall that this project has most meaning. And a part of that is to disclose the way the poetic faculty opens and closes like a flower, or a sea anemone, and to evidence the rhythms of this process. It is an intensely various endeavor, this poetry of his, and to that I say Amen! Keep variousness alive or, if its already too late, bring it fucken back! And this is not to say that some of his poems don't knock me out of my tree, boil my potatoes and throw my oatmeal to the ceiling. I assume in such a project there'll be poems that pass on by my individual capabilities. I dont always download, because theres too much else to attend to, and this in itself tells me something about the times, about poetry, about myself and about the Internet.

Alan has set pieces---I believe I can identify some of them. But Praise the Lawd they are embedded in lava that still flows, and not the sum total of his writing life, not so many tombstones saying "Real dead" and "Geology died" at the same time.

David

↑ Index

407. Lowther, John was a business, now it's just a building
Wed 27 Oct 1999

{ p o e t i x }

(((that's pete stephen jill
and
all the rest of you too

first ---- jill i'm feeling hampered as usual by the multiplicity of reads that one can draw from email ---- are you angry at something i've said ? i hadnt meant to provoke anything like that ----- anyway, i'm not suggesting that acknowledging the monetary realities and such of poetry publishing are questionable and it doesnt seem that stephen was either ----- did it sound that way ? you spoke of being warned by friends about certain people who use others etc ---- sounds like high school, or, the corporate world, or academe, or... fuck---it's everywhere ----- still, i figure it's easier to trust people and see what happens ---- and it is maybe laughable that you wrote about how poets can't support themselves by poetry tho i've no urge to laugh or bemoan the situation ----- seems like i said before on this list (?) that the alternatives gave me the willies

i mean imagine for a minute the poetry world on the model of basketball million dollar season contracts competition groupies endorsements celebrity wait tho...., there's jewel

you wrote;

the business of poetry
is there
whether you choose to look at it or not.
to ignore it is a protective stance,
a protected position.
not everyone has the ability to / interest in maintain(ing)
this posture.

did anyone say this ? i don't think i said this ---- i recall saying that i dont think of poetry as a business or the poetry world as a business community ---- and that to do so felt like a self-blinding ---- and by the passion i sense in yr response it seems you wd too ---- that is, wd you want to suggest (based on that dictionary definition perhaps?) that poetry is nothing more than one business among many ?

so when you continue with;

to bring it--the financial concerns of poetry
--to light in a criticizing manner, pointing fingers at those who cannot avoid the simple math of needing to make ends meet, is unfair, detrimental... and contributes to the continuation of the limited availability of non-mainstream publishing.

i feel yr anger, but at whom is directed ? i havent intended to point any fingers in all of this and am well aware of the simple math of which you speak (i imagine a chorus of "he is" from the 12 or so poets who've been waiting a year or so for my 3rd magazine to appear)

next, and it leads out of this

pete spence wrote;

know how you feel, seems hard for me in dear old Australia to sell the Hannah Weiner book i did in 86 hard then harder now with about 40 sale copies left, also hard to get orders in for the new Weiner book COUNTRY GIRL whyche will be a handmade production// publishing sent me broke a number of times during the 80's and a coupla times i was already broke when i published something what does this = a minus//nope//pete spence

and i gotta tell ya pete every time i've seen yr notices about hannah's books i've thought "i really ought to buy that" i've printed yr posting out laid em out on the table
next to the bills, credit card offers the number for the consumer protection agency which i've called and called about the guy who took $700 from us to paint the house and disappeared

i still hope i'll get around to it but thanx for doing these books

stephen ellis wrote;

By "business" I think I was trying to get at the fact that writing the poems - and perhaps also distributing them on a small scale - had to do with a distributive function, whereas this other "business-y" aspect seemed often to have more to do with accumulating a kind of authority wch is something other than any "authority" with which one writes. (...) ...attaining some level of authority, just so to be HEARD, and recognized as (one of) the public figures of that activity, ie., producing materials that one feels "should be" heard.

stephen, i think i did hear you amidst all my fumbling around about this and it seems to me that this 'authority' (author-icity) <a thing that

kent johnson
and i've just been batting around and here i think a point where he'd take a somewhat different (and interesting) tangent than i'm about to>
...it seems, to me at least, that authority isnt (and i think you see this implicitly above) isnt of any necessity
a bad thing
until the work, as you say
"the primary, MADE thing" is "forced to play second fiddle to a social occasion"

how exactly does this happen ?
what can we do about it ? is that jumping the gun > ~can~ we do anything about it tangent >>> i'm chided a lot by my poetry friends for my utter disbelief in anything commonly called The Unconscious ---- "unconsciously you do" they say etc ---- it just seems too tidy a catch-all for things that cd be explained but when youve got the unconscious handy it's like a landfill behind a velvet curtain; all those pesky considerations are just whisked away ---- and the curtain is so mysterious and the landfill stinks

i'm drawn to the idea of dispensing with The System of dispensing with The Business as higher level abstractions which it seems the more we lean on them the more we fall far from the place we sought to know

jill wrote/asked;

i want to know the poets in my community, and in the larger community as a whole. some i know are doing interesting publishing projects, some are being published, some are doing/hosting readings/performances--i want to know what's going on, who they are, what they have to say. am i networking?

yeah
i s'pose, i do it, i cast no stones and this ties in with stephen's increasingly more insistent questioning in his post;

> In a word, the question here becomes what do we believe we are delivering?
>
> Or what do we have each to give?
>
> Or, what can we BE, together?

and as it seems i end up again with nothing much in the way of answers just some hopes which it's been pointed out to me one must have to stay functioning in one's ruts

but that's not the note i want to end on stephen, jill, pete, anybody

anyone have answers to these questions ?
are they in fact questions that need answers ?
..that conceivably have them ?

[the APPLAUSE light is on but we don't deliver]

↑ Index

408. david bromige
sticks and bones
Wed 27 Oct 1999

> sticks break bones. Symbols, I guess, don't.

Well, take TWO sticks, cross them at right angles, and you have something suitable for a crucifixion. Next, you have The Cross, a symbol. How many bones have been broken in the name of The Cross? Even more than have been broken in the name of The Koran, probably.

David

↑ Index

409. Stephen Cope
BEYOND THE PAGE
Wed 27 Oct 1999

For those in the area looking for a different kind of spook, chewck this out...

Stephen Cope

***

BEYOND THE PAGE resumes its monthly series of literary and arts events with the following reading/performance:

What: SAWAKO NAKAYASU and LYTLE SHAW read from and/or perform their work.

Where: Faultline Theater, 3152 5th Avenue (at Spruce), in San Diego's Hillcrest District.

When: Sunday, Octeboer 31, 4PM.

Etc: $3-5 donation requested, with no-one refused at the door. Beer, wine, and other refreshments available.

****

* LYTLE SHAW is the author of several chapbooks, including _Low Level Bureaucratic Structures: A Novel_ and one book, _Cable Factory 20_ (Atelos, 1999). He lives in New York, where he co-edits SHARK, a journal of poetics and art writing.

* SAWAKO NAKAYASU received her BA in Literature/Writing and in Music Composition from UCSD, where she has played floor hockey every Friday for the last six years. By day she teaches art, Japanese, math, and choir; by night she continues to write, while creating and producing new performance art works, including _Tending the Keep_, staged at Sushi Performance & Visual Art in San Diego last May. Her poetry has been published in CHAIN, KEY SATCH(EL), TINFISH, and is forthcoming in INTERLOPE. This summer, she learned how to ride a bicycle.

****

BTP is proud to continue its monthly series of arts-related events with this reading/performance. BTP is an independent literary and arts group dedicated to the promotion of experimental and explorative work in contemporary arts. For more information, call: [redacted], [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted], [redacted].

↑ Index

410. Jerrold Shiroma

Re: Wallace on Beach

Wed 27 Oct 1999

Just a observation from my (very brief) perusing of the book under discussion...there seems to be an obvious lack of attention paid to (what Beach called) "multicultural" poetry in terms of "experimentalism." From what I remember, brief mention was made of the Walter Lew anthology _Premonitions_.

Beyond that, however, no serious attention paid to the highly experimental work of, say, Myung Mi Kim, or even Theresa Cha, not to mention Amiri Baraka, or Nathaniel Mackey...

Correct me if I'm wrong...like I said, I only briefly browsed the book. Either way, any attempt at grappling with "Poetic Culture" seems to me to have to concern itself with the cultures within that culture, & find a way to displace the "rigid hierarchies," as Mark W. points out, but in a way that moves beyond mere "academic" criticism, & pushes more towards the hierarchies within the poetic "avant-garde" in terms of race & poetic innovation.

--js
-----Original Message-----
From: Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
<[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, October 26, 1999 4:17 PM
Subject: Wallace on Beach

>" Clearly, according to Beach we can't be serious UNLESS we write about >Hejinian, Silliman, Perelman, etc--for Beach, there simply can be no other >poetic issue than language poetry."
>
>*******
>
>
>Mark: The two substantial chapters on slam and other performative >styles...are they chopped liver? i'm confused... They seem to me pretty >generous, often more so than many slam poets or scenes deserve.....
>
>How does that fit?? (also, that fact that he's pretty darn generous
to >Stephen Dobyns..) Just curious
>
>mp
>
>
>
>
>(This post reflects ONLY my opinions, and those of no other poet: in >fact, if someone tried to agree with me, i wdn't LET 'em!!!)

>

↑ Index

411. Jill Stengel
Re: was a business, now it's just a building
Wed 27 Oct 1999

---

dear john, no, i'm not angry at anything you said, and i apologise for the confusion. i appreciate your response, tho, so perhaps it was for the best after all. what, then, was my intention? to bring up some matters that have been burrs under my saddle, so to speak. to vent, to converse, to discuss, to take a stand, to put my opinion into the mix. i found that once i started, i had a lot to say. i'm frustrated. it's a cumulative frustration. there have been several comments i've read on the list, as well as several things i've heard around my local (sf) poetry scene, and many conversations i've had that have led to this level of frustration. this level which brought me to a ranting state today. (why am i frustrated? see my 2 recent postings, for those of you who are just tuning in here...) so i got going, and had a lot to say, and said, and read your response, and now i want to answer your email and let you know that i wasn't directing my anger at you, and i want to go to sleep soon, so i'm going to answer a couple of specific things and go to bed.

re: the networking thing--yes, john, i agree with you when you say "still, i figure it's easier to trust people and see what happens." i do, and i do, and usually i find that i am not disappointed. i find the term "networking" to be problematic, and it was used in a list posting that i read and have unfortunately deleted so cannot reference, and my networking post was intended to be a discussion and exploration of that term and its unclear nature, and some of the additionally unclear issues it raises. "networking" is used as if it is a "bad" word (or a "bad word"), but really, isn't it intended as a term to mean talking to people who are interested in what you're interested in? like engineers talking with other engineers (train, computer, civil, or otherwise). like poets talking with other poets. or does it have to be this thing that is predatory or exploiting or greed-based? this isn't really a question that has to be answered, but i think it points to the social cliques and insider/outsider feelings that have been discussed here. if it's not okay to talk to someone you don't know b/c it might be perceived as "networking" (whatever that is), then the silence among "camps" continues. a story: a certain wonderful more-established poet sat down to lunch at a table full of youngish (i.e. not-very-established) poets at the page mothers conference this past spring, announcing that she wanted to know what was going on with us b/c she already knew what was going on with her peers. "are you networking?" no one asked, b/c we didn't care what to call our conversation. "are you looking for us to publish you?" no one asked, b/c no one cared, no one thought of it as far as i know. we were simply flattered that someone cared what we thought, what we were interested in, what we were doing. we were happy to be talking with someone new, someone to spark the conversation in a new way. we were impressed that someone "broke rank" and came to talk with us. were WE networking? i don't think so, if it's a bad thing, but if it's a good thing, or a neutral thing, well, we WERE all talking, so...maybe... (end of story interlude) next: and "business"? why is this a bad word? not that you, john, are saying it is (just to be clear), but it's the sense i get, around here & elsewhere, it's things i've read, heard, inferred, that the "business" of poetry is like dirty laundry or something that no one wants to see. yet we are all engaged in it. i could argue various positions of your question to me, whether i would suggest "that poetry is nothing more than one business among many"--but i think, for simplicity and because it's late, that i'll say for now, no, i don't think that's enough to describe what i think poetry is. there are business elements to poetry, and there is a lot that goes into poetry that doesn't seem to have much parallel in the business world. i'm pretty fond of thinking that poetry is special in some way, and that business isn't special, but it really depends on how the terms are defined. if poetry means licking stamps and envelopes, which it sometimes does; and if business means designing more effective methods of communication, which it sometimes does, then business suddenly sounds more appealing to me than poetry. it's all how the terms are defined. if there is no definition, conversation(s) can get muddy. and sometimes even if there are... thank you, john, for the thoughtful response and desire for clarity. appreciatively, jill

↑ Index

412. Mark Wallace

language poetry and the academy

Wed 27 Oct 1999

Hi Al:

I do appreciate your caution in the brief note you sent to poetics. Still, I think at this point it's fair to argue that the position of language poetry vis a vis the academy is undeniably changing; it's NOT the outcast discourse it was at one time, although it's certainly not acadominant (as someone termed it) either. I think CBeach may be making a pretty good career out of talking about language poetry--but note the extent to which he does this by arguing that one of the strengths of language poetry is that, vis a vis poetics, it JUSTIFIES itself to contempoary academic critical paradigms. In short he's not arguing FROM the position of the poetry itself, but from the position of an institutional critic who allows the relevance of language poetry only to the extent that it fits his critical discourse. It's the CRITICISM that's dominant; poetry conforms or not (at its peril).

And Mark P., yes, Beach does nod in the direction of other poetries, but isn't it also fair to say that he finds them lacking because of the extent to which they do NOT conform to a similar set of critical discourses? In any case I think I can grant the relevance of YOUR point without thinking very much that it undermines my own. You see, I think he's ATTACKING avant garde poetry far more than he even understands; if I understand him, language poetry succeeds primarily BECAUSE IT'S CRITICISM, really. I worry sometimes that one of the unintended affects of language poetry has been to further devalue the discourse of poetry as INHERENTLY also critical; poetry matters less and less to any institutional reader, but language poetry is okay because at least the language poets write theory.

Mark

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

413. Brent Long

Re: Ghazal

Wed 27 Oct 1999

Thanks to all who replied concerning my query on ghazal. Interesting the Herr should mention Lorca, though. I'm familiar with his "Ghazals", but as far as I can tell, very few of his are truly "ghazals", according to what I've been reading about the form. Which is why I asked in the first place...

Thanks again to everyone who replied,

Brent

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Herr Colin
Sent: Monday, October 25, 1999 6:27 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Ghazal

there is a great essay on the ghazal in a book called (I think) _Expansive Poetics_ (or Poetry). I cannot remember the author or title (I'm not much on who but what) but it deals with the history and often over-use of the moniker "ghazal" as well as giving guidelines for ghazals. A great book of ghazals is _The Green Seas of Heaven_ by Hafiz. And let us not forget Federico Garcia Lorca's as well...

> herr<<C>

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

[theremin music] hypertext artworks for storyspace

-michael stutzman {[redacted]}
 daniel pereira {[redacted]}
 herr colin g. hough-trapp {[redacted]}

"The dawn is my Assyria; the sun-set and moon-rise
 my Paphos, and unimaginable realms of faerie; broad noon shall be my England of the senses and the understanding; the night shall be my Germany of mystic philosophy and dreams."

 -Ralph Waldo Emerson

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

↑ Index

414. Jordan Davis
Re: ping pong
Wed 27 Oct 1999

Wait -- you mean it's not the acronym for "Poetry Nice Guy"?? - JD

----- Original Message -----
From: David Giles Scott <[redacted]>

> The poem is by Eugen Gomringer, though the original has an extra line, > and the spacing is everything,
>
> ping pong
> ping pong ping
> pong ping pong
> ping pong
>
> Sincerely
> David Giles Scott

↑ Index
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

415. Brent Long
Re: on regionalism...
Wed 27 Oct 1999

Interesting that Mark brings up the word "community" here. Originally from the South myself, I noticed a definite sense of community among poets there, both in and out of academic circles that does seem to lack in at least the New England region, where I now live. However, I also believe that poetry IS in fact a "regional" art, in the (obvious) sense that vernacular, geography, etc. all shape the way a poet formulates their art. I don't think something as natural as being influenced by your surroundings should be seen as a source of contention within a "community" of poets.

The work coming out of New York is far different in many ways than the work coming out of, say, Atlanta, and I for one embrace and depend on those differences.

Any thoughts on "community", anyone?

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Mark Prejsnar
Sent: Tuesday, October 26, 1999 9:20 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: on regionalism...

Someone recently posted, to the effect that people in alabama were into regionalism....(this they took to be bad, and were fairly sniffy about it.....)

What interestes me about most of the poets that i know in the south, is how much they are interested in community and how little they are interested in regionalism ...

This should hardly be surprising..since they are more likely to care deeply about Coolidge or Stein, Koch or Palmer, Hijinian or Cerevolo, Mackey or Baraka, than James Dickey or even Charles Wright....

Many things are a'stirrin' in dixie, and they ain't regionalist: there are more poems, and more interesting poetry scenes, in heaven and earth, than are ecompassed in yer philosophy, Mr. Dorow!

mp
@lanta.....

(This post reflects ONLY my opinions, and those of no other poet: in fact, if someone tried to agree with me, i wdn't LET 'em!!!)

↑ Index

416. Todd Nettleton
Like to read a good mystery story?
Wed 27 Oct 1999

If you do, this web site might interest you:

http://members.aol.com/justicewrtr/justice4all/main.htm
<http://members.aol.com/justicewrtr/justice4all/main.htm>

Hope you enjoy!

↑ Index

417. Dana Lustig
Re: on regionalism...
Wed 27 Oct 1999

I agree with Mark's take on regionalism. It seems that in Atlanta, there are more people there who are not from Atlanta, so regionalism as a sense of "place" matters relatively little. Community, however, matters a lot. The community for those poets who are interested in contemporary Southern narrative poetry is much larger because the South tends to be reluctant to compromise their traditions (which is their right, after all. If I don't like it, I can return to Queens, NY and my own damn traditions.) There's even a fairly large contigent of slam/spoken word artists here. So, what about those who don't get as tickled by that stuff?

Suffice it to say it took me over 3 years to find others in the Atlanta area who were interested in approaching poetics differently than the established majority...and most of them aren't originally from here either.

I can state with some certainty that these days it seems to be easier to make friends on the web than it is to hang around in one's own neighborhood, region, what have you. Given that, John's original post is only making use of effective resources.

Dana Lisa

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: on regionalism...
Author: [redacted] at Internet-USA
Date: 10/26/99 6:16 PM

Someone recently posted, to the effect that people in alabama were into regionalism....(this they took to be bad, and were fairly sniffy about it.....)

What interestes me about most of the poets that i know in the south, is how much they are interested in community and how little they are interested in regionalism ...

This should hardly be surprising..since they are more likely to care deeply about Coolidge or Stein, Koch or Palmer, Hijinian or Cerevolo, Mackey or Baraka, than James Dickey or even Charles Wright....

Many things are a'stirrin' in dixie, and they ain't regionalist: there are more poems, and more interesting poetry scenes, in heaven and earth, than are ecompassed in yer philosophy, Mr. Dorow!

mp
@lanta.....

(This post reflects ONLY my opinions, and those of no other poet: in fact, if someone tried to agree with me, i wdn't LET 'em!!!)

↑ Index

418. kathylou
Re: name that quote?
Wed 27 Oct 1999

Thanks to the many kind-hearted scholars who replied to my query.

Poetics=Love

Kathy "Sugar Lips" Lou
Lipstick Eleven
> Because this is such a great quote, and because I'm sure others on the list > are dying of curiosity: It's from Terry Eagleton's Criticism and > Ideology: A Study in Marxist Literary Theory. I as well first thought > Althusser ("Ideology and the State from Lenin and Philosophy), but that > makes sense since Eagleton was highly influenced by Althusser during this > period of his thought. Also note the Raymond Williamsesque "values" > (Marxism and Literature).
>
> Trane
>
>
>
>
> >Hello Poetics,
> >Another one of my damnable queries. Does anyone recognize the author/source > >of the following?

>
> >"A dominant ideological formation is constituted by a relatively coherent > >set of 'discourses' of values, representations and beliefs which, realised > >in certain material apparatuses and related to the structures of material > >production, so reflect the experiential relations of individual subjects to > >their social conditions as to guarantee those misperceptions of the 'real' > >which contribute to the reproduction of the dominant social relations" (54).

↑ Index

419. Catherine Daly
Re: elements of business
Wed 27 Oct 1999

What is generally called "business" in fields outside of strict manufacturing, finance, services, commercial publishing, technology, etc. is generally a mishmash of sales, hr, pr, and "soft" middle management/project management. This is where networking enters the equation. While 5% (1 in 20) will "buy" anything, a higher percentage will "buy" from someone they know, a "name they trust", "brand they recognise", etc. Yes, this is true with poetry.

Networking involves using skills like "working a room", "keeping a positive mental attitude", or, what I call "kissing frogs". It is convincing people you don't know, who don't know you, that you have something in common with them, and that you are a nice person. I'm terrible at it.

True networking involves prep work including research about who will be at whatever meeting, from which companies, what you are selling, and what you have to offer each person. For poetry, it might be knowing who is likely to be at a given reading, what they do and how they do it, who they do it with, and then how what you do is similar, who you may know in common, how you can introduce yourself. While it sounds awfully extreme for poetry, it is very common in the entertainment industry (including theatre), where if you aren't available for networking, absolutely no one, even at an informal kegger, will talk with you. Also, people take notes. You see them in their cars after parties or meetings writing down the names and info for everyone they met.

Jill, it sounds like you are already enmeshed in a secure network, where, since you are a publisher, people seek you out, and since you are reletively secure, can express a simpler interest in "what's out there".

Networking is only one of the businesslike practices that some people do naturally and others don't. Obviously, there is no relationship between quality of work and networking skill, EXCEPT that in collaborative art forms and on projects, networking skills can predict personal responsibility/accountability, team playing, etc. Another businesslike skill is marketing, including niche marketing and product development (i.e. "style"). How do you write poems? Does the way that you've written a given poem determine how you'll try to get it published? Hey, if you were an actor, you'd have to figure out how to stereotype yourself. Still another is just the mechanics of submitting poems. What about related jobs? The main use of peforming, teaching, publishing a journal or web site, writing, publishing, and delivering academic papers, attending conferences, workshopping, belonging to AWP, MLA, PEN, winning grants isn't generating REVENUE, it's marketing (putting the stuff on your cv), networking, and increasing the ability of other publishers/readers to categorize you/find something they have in common with you. It functions sort of like government certifications: someone else has inspected your financials and found you're sound, so you must be ok.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
Certified LA County WBE (Woman-owned Business Enterprise)
[redacted]

↑ Index

420. Lawrence Upton
DOMESTIC AMBIENT NOISE continues
Wed 27 Oct 1999

The noisy neighbours are back with 4 more DANs and they're banging on your ceiling shouting "Will you buy up this noise or do we have to take them to the Artists Book Bookfair?"

Writers Forum announces the publication of 4 more issues of DAN, which is beginning to move towards its completion:

desire and pursuit of who; Bob Cobbing / Lawrence Upton 0 86162 902 7 gaffa!; Lawrence Upton / Bob Cobbing 0 86162 903 5 problem of balance; Bob Cobbing / Lawrence Upton 0 86162 904 3 box thingies and spaghetti stuff; Lawrence Upton / Bob Cobbing 0 86162 905 1

£1 each plus postage say £1.50 UK payable to New River Project, 89a Petherton Road, London N5 2QT

Sterling only please s.a.e. / i.r.c. with enquiries - or speak to your favourite bookdealer and visit the WF website http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~writersforum/

There will be special commemorative pairs of DANs to celebrate the Domestic Ambient Buoys' appearance at The Klinker on 11 11 99 and at Artists Book Bookfair later in the month - to be announced

↑ Index

421. Lowther, John

FW: Ground

Wed 27 Oct 1999

---

this message is a reply to kent johnson and part of an ongoing conversation --- he suggested sending to the list and seeing if it led anyone anywhere ---- seems fine to me ---- it ultimately started with my responseto kent about his posting "poem" froma day or two ago whcih opened with "an admonsihment to the atlanta poetry group" --- hopefully enough context remains that it'll make sense ---)L

-----Original Message-----
From: Lowther, John
Sent: Tuesday, October 26, 1999 2:10 PM
To: 'KENT JOHNSON' Subject: Ground

kent

my sense of ground slippage had nothing to do with differences of opinion ---- were that the case then mark and i wd never hear anything the other says --- as much of the most productive dialogue and work in the apg's short history has erupted from he and i differing ---- sometimes i think we disagree just to see where it will go and that's a good thing too as i see it yr posting struck me as an instance of barb in semi-darkness ---- yr unpacking of it as a cautionary tale about the canonization of langpo and wagging finger, while more coherent for me, falls flat treading briefly now where i have no place i will say that mark's been into poetry that i think matters since aged 15 or thereabouts when he started with olson and duncan and soon after pound ---- and so to imagine that the opening of the field in which he works was opened by _in the american tree_ seems absurb, it wasnt yet a trinkle in papa silliman's eye ---- has langpo had an effect on him ? sure ----- *and now me ? i had some importantly hidden and undreamed of doors blown open by my encounter with bernstein's work --- then again when i read stein and then with mac low and then with cage and then with antin and the list cd certainly accomodate a much smaller series of doors ---- given this, why is that only langpo is seen as having made "the space" possible in which i act ? this seems to me absurd, a thick painting-over the very real cracks --- and again, has langpo had an effect ? sure -----* but what gets, to my eyes, most strangely occluded in yr posts to me about

all of this is that many of the writers who you seem to wish to blanket with the term langpo are actually pretty great fucking poets --- and the term-lumping condemnation on grounds that "langpo is being absorbed by the academe" functionally, to me, means nothing ---- why should it ? i think hugh macdairmid is great and no academic has ever said shit about him that i am aware of (probably someone has)

i pick and choose what i read and ~if there are~ hordes of mindless idiot poets out there construing some great books of poetry catalog from the syllabi of bernstein watten perelman why ought i to care ? people will say that "they" only perpetuate themselves with this but i've looked at bernstein's syllabi and can't imagine what even semi-consistent aesthetic ideology cd possibly be propagandized on the basis of them ---- theyre too fucking various and internally conflicting for such so again comes the So What ?

*it occurs to me to thnk that the only people who wd really spend any time battling this percieved academic take-over are those with some counter claim, some desire to push their own individualist of group identity against it*

bergers theory of the avant garde makes me yawn ---- what next ? danto's hegelian theory of the inexorable progress of the arts toward self-awareness and then the subsequent "end" of whatever - paint etc what strikes me as very curious in all yr posts is the seemingly unquestioned acceptance of Make It New as some sort of global prescription ---- as you wrote "Move beyond, as far beyond as you can. Otherwise, why poetry?" ---- who has this global view ? the perspective from which one cd judge any of this and thus be able to state that we had passed beyond, caught up to, or failed to reach the point on this absurdly inadequate line on which one "must" find zukofsky stein cage ? ? ?

now i'm extrapolating right ? you didnt say that ? but then yr comments about the author function as the next BIG QUESTION that which is still "hover(ing) over everything we do in poetry" ---- it's a great question i personally love it but i don't have anything to do with it, with any proposed solution of it and i suspect that lovely and intrigueingly as doubled flowering is in highlighting it that we havent even framed the question well enough yet to begin to answer it ---- i doubt the answer will come from any where and suspect it will come from every where --- that is, for the author function to be meaningfully challenged the battle to do so will hapen not in a text but in each reader's head ---- and maybe has already ??? provisionally, partially (perhaps as best it ever will) --- that is, i don't really know that very many people really give a fuck about who wrote it already ---- i find that i care about the poem primarily and the poet someplace west tertiaria to make a statement like this "[the author-function] is the central GUARANTOR of the literature institution and everything that it implies, though few wish to admit it, of course-- especially those who desire to end up in the museum and carefully cultivate their "avant=garedeness" in such hopes." is as rigidly dogmatic as the most absurd things bruce andrews has ever said ---- you care about this and you feel this way ---- i'm not slandering that --- i care a lot about things too ----but you run the risk of being percieved as setting up yr own throne or coup or whatever "look, yasusada challenges the author function, yasusada points the way" ----- who is perpetuating the structure of sucessive avant gardes now ?????

which brings me back to an earlier comment made to you about yasusada ---- you fullfill the author function for the book _doubled flowering_, nothing has changed on that score ---- you do interviews you respond to criticisms you maintain and promote the critical environment about yasusada ---- it doesnt matter any more whether tosa motokiyu or araki yasusada existed or not --- you do, and there the buck stops (that's metaphoriocal i'm not saying anyone is profitting or whatever, i actually hope you do make money off the book it wd be great if poets made $ from poetry) ---- to me it seems that yasusada's effect and challenge to the author function wd have been so much better served if the story had held for much longer and that when it broke no trails led to anyone but i don't get to choose huh ?

but what about making it new ? i'd like to think that the statement is worthwhile but simply not a global statement ---- that one must make the new for themselves their judgement etc ---- but even that prescriptive i question, consider creeley's remark "i have no interest in progress or any idea of that kind" ---- so it [making it new] ends up where ?

i cd say more and i cd say different but now i just say this

.out

)L

↑ Index

422. Angle Press Angle Press
New Angle Press book for the Coming Winter
Wed 27 Oct 1999

We at Angle Press are pleased to Announce the publication of the first Real Book by Garrett Caples of Oakland, California:

The Garrett Caples Reader

(includes Mr. Caples's last poems)

98 pgs, perfectbound, $9
marvelously designed by Neko Buildings, and published in conjunction with John Yau's Black Square Editions

This will be available through Small Press Distribution very soon (if not at this very moment...then that other moment that keeps passing very quickly....the one over there under the light).

Thank you and good day

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

423. pete spence
Re: business of poetry
Wed 27 Oct 1999

> Websters II New Riverside University Dictionary, 1988
>
> it's a simple fact of life in our society that people must be able to provide > for themselves monetarily. if one wishes to criticize the business elements > of poetry, please consider looking at the larger picture in which this > situation exists. most people are not able to financially support themselves > through their poetry, their publications. >thanks for listening/reading--
> jill stengel

apart from the odd booklet most of my publishing activities nowadays are small easily posted things like my MIGHTY THIN BOOKS etc etc most are done in small runs and are only part of my usual correspondence so only go out to current situ,,,it is now financialy too hard it seems to go to the printer and ask for a 500 edition of something,, so a lot of my small press activity now never sees the bookstore or general reading public, i get a lot of nice publications in return via this more close-knit communication style of activity,, an example would be my MIGHTY THIN BOOKS series...i ask someone for some work that fits the format print about 15 first up for the author stipulating they keep one and give the rest away ,,then send a few copies out in my mail to people who have been in a Mighty Thin etc when i send the initial 15 to the author i usually send five multiples of another Mighty Thin so they can also give away someone else's work,, later sendings to any author is usually 10 copies of their book with a few multiples of others in the series etc etc this goes on with a number of different authors so a distribution of a lot of the Mighty Thin books goes out into "a" system that i have little control over ,, a nice system i think,, hope that all makes sense!!!??? pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

424. Tom Beckett
(no subject)
Wed 27 Oct 1999

It seems to this writer that there is no progress on this list except in the direction of monologue, censorship and exclusion. The same games keep getting played out over and over. It's pathetic and creepy. Cycles of abuse.

Ellis's recent posts are elegant critiques that go to the heart of the matter: attempts to be authoritative and totalizing freeze discourse and encourage the useless repetitive batting at one another that has become a mainstay of the Poetics List experience. Interesting, creative people like Sondheim keep getting needlessly pissed on. Use the freaking delete button.

Come on guys--and it is guys I'm talking to--get a life.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

425. pete spence
Re: was a business, now it's just a building
Wed 27 Oct 1999

> (((that's pete stephen jill
> and
> all the rest of you too
>
> stephen, jill, pete, anybody
> anyone have answers to these questions ?

> are they in fact questions that need answers ?
> ..that conceivably have them ?
>
> [the APPLAUSE light is on but we don't deliver]

dunno tho one thing i know like with my habit of making postcards daily reaching for the glue-stick i can't help it!!! i never have a stock of postcards because they are all in my next pile of mail to bods,,same with writing/MAKING visual poetry etc publishing little numbers is a "got you under my skin" situ that maybe never leaves,,i'm not unhappy!!!!pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

426. dan raphael
Re: regionalism
Wed 27 Oct 1999

Has been some discussion in Raven Chronicles http://www.speakeasy.org/ravenchronicles/ about what consititued Pacific Norhtwest poetry, particularly what encompassed local poetry in the Seattle area. Here in Oregon the 'official' 'local' poetry, as practiced by a majority of those with full time college teaching gigs, has william stafford as its icon. a good poet friend (who needs to protect his job as college adjunct) descirbes it as 'hillbilly chic,' its cool to be rural, very representational tho also terse. the unofficial local poetry here in Portland OR, exisiting via open mikes, coffee hourses, and to some extent the slam scene has bukowski as the chief icon, tho ginsberg and kerouac have altars not too far to the side.

dan

↑ Index

427. miekal and
Re: on regionalism...
Wed 27 Oct 1999

the concept that one could create something/anything divorced from their surrounding is an enviable dictum,

but it is hard to imagine unless you think about isolation chambers & float tanks.

Im a dyed-in-cheese regionalist, infact a bioregionalist, in fact living in the heart of the driftless bioregion, the largest unglaciated spot in the northern hemisphere. no apologies for my writing & art being located in the place I live.

mIEKAL aND, dreamtime village, usa

↑ Index

428. miekal and

Re: poetry audience/s

Wed 27 Oct 1999

david why does poetry have to be dependent on books why cyberspace can distribute literature
to an international audience
at very little cost.

9000 copies of a book seems like a lot but that kind of audience is easily had on internet.

when the nytimes
reviewed a visual poem of mine
I had that many viewers in a week.

now hits doesnt equal sales of books but buying a book doesnt mean the person will actually read it either.

Im not dissing books, Ive been a publisher of handmade books since 76, but the playing field has spawned new options.

mIEKAL

↑ Index

429. Kathy Lou Schultz
Business, class, access
Thu 28 Oct 1999

It seems to me that part of what Jill Stengel is highlighting is the importance of access and that not all poets/writers have the same access to "community" and publishing opportunities. And, yes, if we get very clear and very honest about this, a lot of this is about money (and other aspects of class mobility such as education). Bobbie West states it very clearly in the HOW2 Forum on class & poetics that Robin Tremblay-McGaw and I co-edited (and, yes, I do want to pitch this because I think the contributors worked hard and did a great job with limited time and space on a very difficult topic):

"When it comes to literary production, class pervades every aspect of it. For people of the lower classes, the common denominator is "have-not" status, starting with the glaring absence of the middle/upper class assumption that it is always possible to achieve what one desires. There's a lack of cash to support money-losing ventures such as poetry magazines and small presses (owner/editorship of which gives one instant recognition). There's a lack of access to the Internet, where one can hobnob with publishers and magazine editors (publication being determined partly by who you know: For example, this particular essay appearing in this particular forum is a result of having met someone [Kathy Lou Schultz] at an academic conference and having contributed to an Internet discussion)."

I find it interesting the extent to which poets will go to obfuscate their own or other's class privilege. It is like it is perceived as "impolite" to actually tell the truth about money -- and who has it. I get very tired of this because money does buy access: more time to write, money to publish one's own journals and books, which in turn increases both community as well as publishing opportunities for one's own work by increasing your "profile" and "reputation."

Let's just say for now that I'm pretty clear that if I still worked at the Hinky Dinky grocery store in the town in Nebraska where I grew up, ya'll wouldn't be seeing my name in print at all.

And lest you think I'm just pointing fingers, the quote from Bobbie implicates both Bobbie & myself, in a way laying things bare, and saying, yup this is how it works. As women from working class backgrounds we're both inside and outside of that, straddling, yet trying to keep it as real as possible. Not easy. Sometimes painful. Always interesting.

Respectfully,
Kathy Lou

Jill Stengel wrote:
as both a poet and publisher, i cannot ignore the fact that it costs money to put work forth into the world. even self-publishing--paper, pen, printer, whatever--requires money. let's not forget stamps, envelopes. last i checked, these were not free either. maybe i'm looking in the wrong places? what about web publishing--i pay for internet access, paid for this computer at which i now sit, etc., so nope, that's not free either. sending work out to others to publish: well, there's still that computer and printer and paper and stamps to be thinking of. unless i'm going to go use someone else's computer and printer and paper and stamps.
...
to bring it--the financial concerns of poetry--to light in a criticizing manner, pointing fingers at those who cannot avoid the simple math of needing to make ends meet, is unfair, detrimental...and contributes to the continuation of the limited availability of non-mainstream publishing.

^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

↑ Index

430. Philip Nikolayev
In Re Alan Sondheim
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Dear Alan Sondheim and all,

Being swamped with work, I have been only skimming this list of late, and very selectively. I know there have been some criticisms of Alan's postings, but didn't realize the thing had gotten so acute. I don't have a very clear idea of the nature of the debate (I'd be grateful if someone gave me a brief summary), but I'm sorry to hear that it has caused some unpleasantness. I have read Alan's book, _Reality Disorder_, with much interest, and would very much like him to keep posting here. Alan, have you been asked to stop posting? That's ridiculous! And where I can I read your stuff on the poetics of mathematics?

Don't give up and don't despair! This, too, will pass.

Yours,

Philip Nikolayev

↑ Index

431. R M Daley
BAY AREA ULTRA EVENT (fwd)
Thu 28 Oct 1999

please forward for all to see thanks rd

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 27 Oct 1999 21:49:09 -0700 (PDT)
From: AreOut TheLights <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: BAY AREA ULTRA EVENT

"AMERICAN BEAUTY"

you are cordially invited to a night of music movies beer language lights and god knows what at

The Artists' Television Access
992 Valencia at 21st, SF, CA
Friday, November 12th, 1999
8pm
$3
[one drink with admission]

a production of TheLightsAreOut in cooperation with the release of Josh May's TEMP
+ the presentation of James Sanders's THE TEENAGERS

=====

Do You Yahoo!?
Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

432. Tenney Nathanson

POG EVENT: Monday, Nov 1 open discussion with poet Bernadette Mayer (U of Arizona) (REMINDER)

Thu 28 Oct 1999

REMINDER

“Experimental Poetry”

a discussion with poet

Bernadette Mayer

Monday

November 1

2 pm

Modern Languages 303

Bernadette Mayer is the author of numerous books of poetry and prose. Her latest books include Sonnets, The Formal Field of Kissing, The Bernadette Mayer Reader, The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters, Proper Name, and Two Haloed Mourners: Poems. Throughout the 1980s, Mayer was director of The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church in New York where, as well as teaching her legendary Experiments in Poetry Workshop, she produced the Poetry Project's reading series. Mayer's position made her a central figure in the community of artists and writers gathered at that time in New York City's Lower East Side. With her husband Lewis Warsh, she edited United Artists press, which published a number of seminal books of poetry, including Ted Berrigan's Sonnets and Mayer's own Utopia.

Sponsored by:
The University of Arizona Department of English
The Arizona Quarterly

-------- Poetry Reading: On Saturday, October 31, at 3:30, Bernadette Mayer and Barbara Cully will read at Tucson Botanical Gardens, 2150 N Alvernon. The reading is sponsored by POG, The University of Arizona Extended University Writing Works Center, and Tucson Botanical Gardens, and is made possible in part by grants from the Arizona Commission on the Arts and the Tucson/Pima Arts Council.

For further information about these events contact:
POG: [redacted]

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/

↑ Index

433. Tenney Nathanson

ATTENTION: TIME AND PLACE CHANGE for POG EVENT: Sunday Oct 31 Mayer/Cully reading at Botanical Gardens, 3:30 pm

Thu 28 Oct 1999

---

due to some last minute logistical difficulties, the Mayer/Cully reading this coming Sunday, Oct. 31 (in Tucson) has been shifted to a new place and time time: 4:00 pm (rather than 3:30) place: St. Phillip's Church in the Foothills, 4440 N Campbell (NE corner of Campbell and River), in the Murphy Gallery (use east side entrance to gallery). [rather than Botanical Gardens]. (There's plenty of easy parking at St. Phillips) please make note of the changes, and please plan to attend!

***

NEWS RELEASE

POG

in association with

The University of Arizona Extended University

present a Poetry Reading by

Bernadette Mayer and Barbara Cully

Sunday, October 31
4:00

St. Phillip's Church in the Foothills, 4440 N Campbell (NE corner of Campbell and River), in the Murphy Gallery (use east side entrance to gallery).

Bernadette Mayer is the author of numerous books of poetry and prose. Her latest books include Sonnets, The Formal Field of Kissing, The Bernadette Mayer Reader, The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters, Proper Name, and

Two Haloed Mourners: Poems. Throughout the 1980s, Mayer was director of The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church in New York where, as well as teaching her legendary Experiments in Poetry Workshop, she produced the Poetry Project's reading series. Mayer's position made her a central figure in the community of artists and writers gathered at that time in New York City's Lower East Side. With her husband Lewis Warsh, she edited United Artists press, which published a number of seminal books of poetry, including Ted Berrigan's Sonnets and Mayer's own Utopia.

Barbara Cully is from San Diego California and earned her MFA at the Iowa Writers' Workshop. She is the author of The New Intimacy (Penguin, 1997), winner of the National Poetry Series Open Competition 1996, and of Shoreline Series (Kore Press,1997). She has taught in the University of Arizona Department of English since 1986 and has been a guest poet and teacher at the Prague Writers' Workshop in the Czech Republic. She is currently at work on a book of prose lyrics; the working title is “Desire Reclining.”

Admission: $5

POG events are sponsored in part by grants from the Tucson/Pima Arts Council and the Arizona Commission on the Arts.

for further information contact:
POG
c/o Tenney Nathanson
[redacted]

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/tn/

↑ Index

434. Susan M. Schultz
Re: new Tinfish publication
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Tinfish is pleased to announce the publication of Nell Altizer's sonnet sequence, _Thin Place_. Those of you teaching the sonnet form in coming semesters will, I hope, consider using this chapbook in your classes. Anyone interested in the sonnet, nay in poetry, should have a look. Copies are $5 each.

Forthcoming volumes from Tinfish include work by Rob Wilson, Bill Luoma, and Ida Yoshinaga. (We'll be returning to our more "experimental" format.)

Copies of Kathy Banggo's _4-evaz, Anna_ are still available. Several of my colleagues have used this book, which includes poems in both standard and Hawaiian Creole English, in their classes, to good effect (poetry _must_ be taken internally).

Issues of Tinfish are still available, as well. They can be purchased for $5 each or $13 for a subscription to three issues. Tinfish is an entirely self-supporting enterprise (aside from mailing), so your financial, as well as your spiritual, assistance is most welcome.

aloha, Susan

Susan M. Schultz
Associate Professor and Director of Creative Writing
Dept. of English
1733 Donaghho Road
University of Hawai'i-Manoa
Honolulu, HI 96822

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/schultz http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/ezines/tinfish

↑ Index

435. david bromige
bromige & fodaski at st marks
Thu 28 Oct 1999

This will be an imperfect announcement, as I dont have all the info. But I dont want to delay making it, given the time-lapse on our moderated list.

At the Poetry Project, St Marks Church. next Wednesday, Nov 3, Elizabeth Fodaski and I shall be reading from our own writings. I think we begin at 7:30 p.m. I dont know what the door-charge is.

I look forward to seeing some of you Listmates there.

Thanks for your attention,

David.

↑ Index

436. Stephen Ellis
Re: elements of business
Thu 28 Oct 1999

While I don't intend to sound either rude or ignorant, the substance of Catherine Daly's post makes me slightly itchy, as if I were allergic to something - but what? Terms like "middle management" and suggestions such as figuring out

'how to stereotype yourself' (albeit this was referred to as "if one were an actor", yet it also applies, I think, here, to "if one were a poet" or, "if one were to be a successful poet") lead me to ask whether poems themselves, as such, are merely tools with which one may enter the systematized world of product marketing, the product most often being the person rather than the poem? It seems very weird that a poem might be thought of as a marketing device, tho perhaps this might help explain the increasing interest in developing new theories and ways to define and effect audience. It's as if a broad field of possibly ardent and definitely un-listening hearers took place in the hopeful imaginations of those who take this 'noisy silence' as permission to continue making what seems very much the equal of dress sheilds for the deaf. Perhaps this is the "government certification" Ms Daly speaks of, being brought under inspection to find out whether one's "okay." But what's that smell wafting gently upwards from the poetic corpus, the gangrenous elation, perhaps, of group agreement preserved in some ledger of "sound financials"? & is there anything in this worth resisting? - S E

> From: Catherine Daly <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: elements of business
> Date: Wed, 27 Oct 1999 11:11:43 -0700
>
> What is generally called "business" in fields outside of strict manufacturing, > finance, services, commercial publishing, technology, etc. is generally a mishmash of sales, hr, pr, and "soft" middle management/project management. This > is where networking enters the equation. While 5% (1 in 20) will "buy" anything, > a higher percentage will "buy" from someone they know, a "name they trust", "brand they recognise", etc. Yes, this is true with poetry.
>
> Networking involves using skills like "working a room", "keeping a positive mental attitude", or, what I call "kissing frogs". It is convincing people you > don't know, who don't know you, that you have something in common with them, and > that you are a nice person. I'm terrible at it.
>
> True networking involves prep work including research about who will be at whatever meeting, from which companies, what you are selling, and what you have > to offer each person. For poetry, it might be knowing who is likely to be at a > given reading, what they do and how they do it, who they do it with, and then how what you do is similar, who you may know in common, how you can introduce yourself. While it sounds awfully extreme for poetry, it is very common in the entertainment industry (including theatre), where if you aren't available for networking, absolutely no one, even at an informal kegger, will talk with you.

Also, people take notes. You see them in their cars after parties or meetings writing down the names and info for everyone they met.

Jill, it sounds like you are already enmeshed in a secure network, where, since you are a publisher, people seek you out, and since you are reletively secure, can express a simpler interest in "what's out there".

Networking is only one of the businesslike practices that some people do naturally and others don't. Obviously, there is no relationship between quality of work and networking skill, EXCEPT that in collaborative art forms and on projects, networking skills can predict personal responsibility/accountability, team playing, etc. Another businesslike skill is marketing, including niche marketing and product development (i.e. "style"). How do you write poems? Does the way that you've written a given poem determine how you'll try to get it published? Hey, if you were an actor, you'd have to figure out how to stereotype yourself. Still another is just the mechanics of submitting poems. What about related jobs? The main use of peforming, teaching, publishing a journal or web site, writing, publishing, and delivering academic papers, attending conferences, workshopping, belonging to AWP, MLA, PEN, winning grants isn't generating REVENUE, it's marketing (putting the stuff on your cv), networking, and increasing the ability of other publishers/readers to categorize you/find something they have in common with you. It functions sort of like government certifications: someone else has inspected your financials and found you're sound, so you must be ok.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
Certified LA County WBE (Woman-owned Business Enterprise)

[redacted]

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

437. Gerald Schwartz
Re: on regionalism...
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Brent and list:

Has regionalism been annilated by discussion groups? Certainly IDG's have been somewhat successful in breaking down social barriers between central and peripheral poets, thereby increasing the size of the invisible community, the invisible college, if you will.

The significance of these opportunities offered by IDGs for the creation of new contacts or even for collaboration between other poets is underlined by other recent trends in the lists. This was begining to come true even in the old days (circa 1984), when we used early versions of electronic bulletin boards to increase our level of mutual awareness and acquaintance.

The by-product of the IDG's, that interaction, is often initiated because of other reasons. I get information from a colleague about a theme although I originally posted another question. Once the informality begins to happen, this also drives the breakdown of regionalism. The informality is what I think is at work here. Someone asks a question and another member(s) provide an answer. A third member reads the answer and realizes that the author is working on a similar topic and cites relevant literature....

Collaboration is also the breakdown of regionalism: the emergence of collaboration between individuals, while it depends on aspects like their backgrounds...their specific pursuits...has the same effect, especially when the IDG offers possibilities to become aware of potential partners for cooperation and collaboration that can be approached within or outside the IDG. Thus, stimulating a volumne of communication within the IDG you may solve the problem of "planning the consequences of unplanned action in poetic communication", for example.

I want to say that the "regionalism" (and I don't see this as a problem) seems to be formulated in terms of existing approaches, existing theories, schools, if you will.

Creatures like this list offer a simplifying assumption that every actor has full information, which means she knows the shape of the production function and the amount of resources that was contributed by the other groups members.This commonality, this common standard of comparison for the "costs" of the participants and the value of the collective good, is I believe, another erosional factor.

The only thing I can see that shoots all of this full of holes is that regiona lism is anchored by social contexts, and that there can be no authentic freedom from this embededness. This may lead to our communication taking the form which is somehow less influenced by social control. Status differences play a small role in this, driving the amount of communications, since they are not face to face communication.

Then there's the topic of "fleeing the regionalism" into an IDG. We all have our own goal-chain. Differences in subgoals depend on differences in the constraints that lead to different production functions. For some it may be the attainment of a "poetic reputation", an important driving force. The relevant group for a poet is the poetics list, a community, that is, the other poets who aare doing works in a similar direction. It seems that the crucialmeans for a participant to obtain a poetic reputation is to solve poetic problems and to present his/her competence to this community. Access to information is therefore essential for him. This network of poetic colleagues is important in two respects. It is a pivottal instrument to get relevant information which is necessary to solving poetic dillemas. On the other hand, it is as well the crtical audience for sending valuable information.

This building of significance is how I see the erosion of regionalism.

best, Gerald

↑ Index

438. Kyle Conner
HIGHWIRE READING
Thu 28 Oct 1999

3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM 3PM
****
****

Highwire Reading Series presents>>>>>

M A R K W A L L A C E

A. V. C H R I S T I E

(ooooh...scary

Saturday, Oct. 30, 3PM
<<<<Halloween reading<<<< Come in costume
Highwire Gallery, 139 N. 2nd St.

NOTE: READING IS AT 3PM!! We want to be out later to soap up the windows & throw toilet paper in the trees
bring a festive beverage!!

****

POETS:

MARK WALLACE is a vital participant in the Washington, DC, poetry scene. His SITUATIONS Press publishes books and pamphlets of poetry. He is the curator of the Ruthless Grip Art Project Experimental Poetry Series. His latest book is SONNETS OF A PENNY-A-LINER (Buck Downs Books).

A.V. CHRISTIE won the National Poetry Series award for her book NINE SKIES. She is poet-in-residence at Villanova University.

****
*

POEMS:

from SONNETS OF A PENNY-A-LINER, Mark Wallace

$8.82
My brain is a blank afternoon at the end of a century of lies, the hollow thumping is my blood against fences, the random flinging of my hands composes a reason for living as though I'm painting a hidden sidewalk only my enemies walk on until they flower like dancing which I do in my room all alone with shadowed lamps and walls that say this wreck is building the days, clamor of a dubious underworld that sings of my defeat

---

from NINE SKIES, A.V. Christie

MOTION STUDY

At dusk in the top bunk your plastic squadrons approached. With decal snarls, they hung from the ceiling from invisible threads, dim silhouettes, countless old war movies, the quiet onslaught.

Black Lionel locomotives shone poised on the shelf
--trackless--without the morse of their oily, false smoke.
Your room a secret terminal, the motion beginning.

You studied each constellation stalled on your wall,
the varied wings of your insect collection: moths tidily pinned, cobalt dragonflies, thoraxes striped like fuses.

Lying on the floor one afternoon, you pulled rubber bands taut, shot down each swaying model airplane. You perfected the whining fall and the throaty sound of their exploding.

All through the evenings your wrenches hurriedly rang the cement; the car rocked on its blocks as you raced the engine.
Legs forked out on the ground like a divining rod from beneath your Austin-Healy's shining flank, you completed the apprenticeship, saw in the sooted heavens how all along you'd been greasing the gears of your own departure.

↑ Index

439. David Baratier
Fwd: for George B.
Thu 28 Oct 1999

AUTHOR FELICE PICANO
Sunday, Nov. 7, 1999
7 pm
William Way Community Center
1315 Spruce Street

The William Way Center's Gay Book Discussion Group hosts guest author Felice Picano at their November meeting.

Picano, author of the new novel The Book of Lies, is a founding member of the Violet Quill Group, a salon of writers that met in Manhattan in the late '70s and included Andrew Holleran and Edmund White. Picano is a prodigiously talented author with over a score of books to his credit, including The New Joy of Gay Sex, Looking Glass Lives, Ambidextrous, Like People in History, and the memoir, A House on the Ocean, A House on the Bay. Please come to meet the author, check out this new book group, and have some wine and cheese. Feel free to bring copies of Picano's books to get signed; books are available at Giovanni's Room or Borders.

Set approximately 10 years in the future, The Book of Lies is a stylish mystery, a hilarious roman a clef, a witty critique of academia and literary criticism, and a deft character study of contemporary artistic life. It is also an affectionate tribute to Picano's compatriots in the Violet Quill Club, including Edmund White, Andrew Holleran, Robert Ferro and others instrumental in the creation of the canon of gay literature. The novel tells the story of Ross Ohrenstedt, ambitious young academic in the fashionable field of queer studies, who, in the course of overseeing the collection of papers and works of a legendary author, discovers a baffling and provocative manuscript.
His quest to identify its writer and gain prestige and tenure puts him on the trail of a potential -- unknown -- masterwork penned by one of a group of writers, some living, some dead, who in the 1970s and 1980s broke new literary ground. In the novel, The Purple Circle, as they were known, have become much revered, oft studied--the foundation upon which numerous academic careers have been made. As he did with Like People In History, Picano has created an intimate exploration of a larger historical phenomenon, at the same time giving voice to those who lived through a unique era offering the reader a complex, credible human narrator as a lens through which to view them.
Advance Praise:

"The Book of Lies is funny, dark, sexy, shocking, and yes, smart. Set in the near future ('four decades after Stonewall'), the novel tells of a young scholar trying to make his academic bones on the literary bodies of the 'Purple Circle'. Picano skewers the pedagogically pretentious with ease and wit. The Book of Lies is a wonderful novel, with some of Picano's best writing." ~ Bay Area Reporter

↑ Index

440. Mark Prejsnar
Eeeek! Eeek!, or, the heron monkey
Thu 28 Oct 1999

---

i wish the group to have a great deal of cohesion. cooperation is power. crit often divides to conquer, and that breaks down cohesion. perhaps this is the root of my mockery, the distaste for such displays of superiority, as Mark seems to try to display over Alan. I'm a primate and said, "eek! eek! no no! you must be laughed at!" poets are largely disenfranchised, and most are poor unless they find another way to make an income. why not discourage our own from disenfranchising each other?

**********\

This is puzzling and quite, quite bizarre:

my post was merely relating to how others (with whom i guess you align yourself, right?) were displaying all their massive superiority "over" D. Raphael..... as i've said numerous time, there is much that is strong and interesting in Sondheim's work; was gonna back-chan. this, but on 2nd thought it probably should go on the list....

Do you actually read the things you respond to??

mp

↑ Index

441. Mark Prejsnar
Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)
Thu 28 Oct 1999

This is puzzling and quite, quite bizarre:

my post was merely relating to how others (with whom i guess you align yourself, right?) were displaying all their massive superiority "over" D. Raphael..... as i've said numerous time, there is much that is strong and interesting in Sondheim's work; was gonna back-chan. this, but on 2nd thought it probably should go on the list....

Do you actually read the things you respond to??

mp

On Mon, 25 Oct 1999, pete spence wrote:

> From: Taylor Brady <[redacted]>
> I largely agree with the (implicit) assertion here that Mark's dismissal of Alan Sondheim's work without benefit of anything close to a reading

> constitutes a problem for the kind of reasoned "restraint" or "self-control"
> he advocates re: Alan's postings. At the same time, however, the urge to up the ante >:)
> Patrick
>
> ,,seems to me at least sondheim is active is MAKING things and has found a venue to show and tell///pete spence
>
> ---
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

442. Lowther, John
Aye Heart Networking
Thu 28 Oct 1999

{ p o e t i x }

jill, catherine, others

jill you wrote;

> i find the term "networking" to be problematic, and it was used in a list > posting that i read and have unfortunately deleted so cannot reference, > and my networking post was intended to be a discussion and exploration of > that term and its unclear nature, and some of the additionally unclear > issues it raises. "networking" is used as if it is a "bad" word (or a "bad > word"), but really, isn't it intended as a term to mean talking to people > who are interested in what you're interested in?
>

yeah, it's used that way and also used in the more specific way that catherine outlined in her post today saying;

Networking involves using skills like "working a room", "keeping a positive mental attitude", or, what I call "kissing frogs". It is convincing people you don't know, who don't know you, that you have something in common with them, and that you are a nice person.(...) True networking involves prep work including research about who will be at whatever meeting, from which companies, what you are selling, and what you have to offer each person.

> and it bears mentioning > that it was i > who posted the bit > about networking, i wrote;

i'm reminded of something someone told me about going to a reading and the young poet who was reading that night marched up introduced themself to everyone and was later heard to say "I LOVE NETWORKING!" ---- is that the same sort of "business" ?

> and the just ref'd "business" in that post > was the thought of how getting published > in various ways might
> "open doors" for oneself etc
>
> that is i was thinking not of monetray things > but how one get's known, seen etc

now the person that told me the I LOVE NETWORKING story, i think, felt that there was something questionable in the way this was approached as if the statement had been I LOVE SCHMOOZING ---- or to cite a current commercial i find amusing where all these little kids are talking about what they want to grown up to be "i want to have brown nose" > >> >>>tangent: that commercial is trying to sell me something right ? why have i absolutely no idea what after having seen it a bunch of times ?

but, to continue ---- when this i heart networking story was related to me i wasnt so sure that i knew what was meant or whether there was anything at all to be suspicious of ---- hell, my first trip to LA, i was there very briefly and didnt know anybody really so what did i do ? i made a lunch date with marjorie perloff and hung out with douglas messerli at sun & moon had drinks met guy bennett etc ---- managed to track down the elusive standard schaefer and then it was time to go

was i networking ? i'm sure that suspicion has been born in hearts of some ---- i guess i'd rather think i was meeting people, making friends even

anyway

)ohn

↑ Index

443. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger

Re: Bye

Thu 28 Oct 1999

Alan,

Why are you quiting when most of the responses (at least publicly) have been supportive? What if someone doesn't like your work? Much of what you put on line does not interest me, but I've grown fond of searching for the moments that I like -- and I'll defend your right to the death to splurge. Complaining and composing should be second nature by now. No one, complainer or composer, should be demonized -- and I hope no one's distracted from their chosen obsessions. In fact, it's amazing that you've been posting as long as you have without someone taking issue with your work sooner. Consider it a compliment.

Hilton Obenzinger

↑ Index

444. Joel M Bettridge
New dates for Ronald Johnson Conference
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Do to conflicts, the Ronald Johnson Conference, __Eye, Ear, & Mind: A Conference on the Poetry of Ronald Johnson__ previously set for April 21st & 22end, is now going to take place March 17th & 18th (2000). It is still here at SUNY Buffalo, but the call for papers deadline is now December 1st. Please feel free to contact me with any questions. Also, please forward this message to other lists or people that might want to know.

thanks,

Joel Bettridge

↑ Index

445. Patrick Herron
Re: Eeeek! Eeek!, or, the heron monkey
Thu 28 Oct 1999

(first of all some kind people have asked that these primal displays need to stop, because they are wasting people's time. they should just be continued backchannel if they do need to continue. but first, before i go, a letter from the editor, and a word from our sponsor:)

> Do you actually read the things you respond to??

not any less than you when you are at your apex of comprehension, it appears. an added bonus for me: i can read my own posts, too!

hmm. let's see now, Mark. (trying to use the war metaphor, to enhance communication with you) if i remember rightly, you insulted Alan's writing in your attempt to defend insults coming from Raphael and you attacked people who were defending alan for being creative and sharing, and also people who are trying to keep people on the list from becoming overly self-conscious when posting.

you seem so insistent to play war games, alignments, schools, etc. i ALIGN myself with, well, NOT aligning with people who align AGAINST creative expression, if we must stick to your divisive vocabulary. musicians poets artists people with umbilicals to something greater than flesh and selves. based on the evidence i don't expect you to understand that. if you do, great.

primates are not monkeys. oops! nice attempt at humor, though.

your least favorite simian,
Patrick "eek-a-sponsor" Herron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

446. Pritchett,Patrick
Will Alexander
Thu 28 Oct 1999

I'd appreciate it if someone could tell me who has published Will Alexander's latest books, _Above the Human Nerve Domain_ and _Stratospheric Canticles_, as I think it's called.

Plase backchannel -- thanks.

Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

↑ Index

447. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Bye
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Alan Sondheim wrote:
>
> I think Todd Baron did it for me - "up to five long poems a day." I've > never sent that much out to any list and most of my work isn't partic> ularly long.
>

interestingly blind. sometimes i read 'em and like 'em.
but geez, they are long. is that relative. i spose.
but i get fifty mails a day each and every day. I know some very interesting folks who have unsubed this list because of the amount

of mail each day they can't read. this includes poems --;lots of them.
or am I naive? those long e-mails with the scattered syntax. I guess they're not poetry! wow!

phew!

↑ Index

448. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
academic query?and why?
Thu 28 Oct 1999

---

question:

the first "american" poem?
(of the united states) would be?

↑ Index

449. Lowther, John
I AM NOT SHOUTING
Thu 28 Oct 1999

{ P O E T I X }

FOR PATRICK HERRON AND THIS WHOLE MESS

PATRICK WROTE, IN NOT ~QUITE~ THIS WAY;

obviously i am a low brow cretin who resorts to more > old fashioned everyday common man techniques, which > seems to you unworthy of deployment

> in such a group as this. perhaps
>
> this group has been at this point before. sorry
>
for rattling skeletons.

> the sound of bone on bone admittedly is > chilling.
>

>
THERE IS A NAME FOR THIS SOMEPLACE IN RHETORIC I'VE LONG SINCE FORGOTTEN BUT THE RIFF WHEREIN YOU START BY DENIGRATING YRSELF THUS IMPUTING THAT JUDGEMENT TO THE PERSON YOU ADDRESS
(i am not shouting, i am speaking at normal volume, not even typing hard on my keyboard)
I THINK IT'S PRETTY WELL DONE ACTUALLY INSINUATING THE "YOU THINK YR ABOVE ME/ TOO GOOD FOR ME" VIBE AND WAVING VAGUELY, INDETERMINATELY IN THE DIRECTION OF "THIS POINT" A PROBLEM THE SPEAKER SEES OBVIOUSLY AS RECURRENT ON THIS LIST AND IT CLOSES WITH A BIT OF POESY IN HIGH TONE "BONE ON BONE"
ETC

restraint is not exactly a "correct" means of discourse, and I hope poets
and those who love poetry know that.

> restraint is one of many means.
>
having a sense of humor helps.

i know for sure more than a few people laughed.

I'VE NOT HEARD ANYONE LAUGHING (i am not shouting) ---- WHEN IS MOCKERY, WHEN IS PROMPTING SOMEONE, EVEN EXPECTING SOMEONE TO SAY "why did you say something so low to me in public" NOT THAT DIFFERENT FROM "STEPPING ON SOMEBODY'S HEAD" ????

in my experience people step on another person's head to gain something.

WHAT HAS BEEN GAINED ?

(HENCEFORTH I WILL BE SHOUTING IN LOWER CASE)

patrick, yr correct that restraint or reasonableness have no privileged position as rhetorical means or as means of any kind, as perhaps "rhetorical" isnt that useful in this context ---- but as i think you might agree, there are better and worse ways of moving forward

you say that you bear mark and taylor no ill will and i'll take you at yr word on that, i do not doubt it ---- but let me say that i think yr choice of mockery as response, whether a hold over from more primal human responses or not (THAT'S MEANT TO BE SORTA FUNNY SOUNDIN') does, to me, seem particularly useful ---- yr entitled to yr response of course, i don't mean to squelch that but i do have questions about the contour of this whole business; you feel mark stepped on alan's head and taylor was stepping on yrs but saying he wasnt and it looks to me like yr stepping too, on foot on each (AUDIO CUE; TARZAN ROAR) and i'd like to say > that i have just > stomped yrs into putty

> with my display of > ~reasonableness~
> and i'm doing this to gain something

(the right to lay my head on the next stair ....?)

↑ Index

450. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: poetry audience/s
Thu 28 Oct 1999

> no one to impress or hustle, none to address, only Being & Nothingness,

no one to drive the car

↑ Index

451. Nielsen, Aldon
Re: language poetry and the academy
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Yes, there's no doubt that the position of language poetry within the academy is changing, as is my own. Standpoint theory taught us what we already knew. To the 80% of professors (such as my not-so-humble self) who teach well outside the gravitational pull of the stellar research universities, the thought that anyone might think that writing on language poetry was a way to advance one's career is, well, nearly unthinkable -- There are people who have good careers and who write about language poetry -- but few of them GOT HIRED in the first place because of writing on LP -- and few will get recruited to a better job because they do -- BUT, as Mark says, that's all changing -- what has always been particularly strange about the discussion with regard to LP and the academy is that the charge that LPs wrote "that way" to appeal to theory-ridden academic critics or to get academic positions preceded the actuality of any of this happening by more than a decade -- perhaps those people I heard complaining along these lines back in '82 or so were simply far more prescient than I am --

But yes, there are now anthologies from major presses with academic sales -- there are now dissertations being written, books accomplished, imitators wrestling with the resistance of their fellows in their creative writing workshops -- all the signs of a significant coterie success --

but none of that is WHY anybody wrote the poetry or WHY any critic chose to write about it

(nor is this, any longer, a response to Mark W., whose fine Christmas poem is something everybody should read for the sheer pleasure of reading) poetry is a criticism of life, wrote some regrettably Victorian fellow --

Poetry will continue to act as critique no matter what anybody in the academy does to it --

Discussion of WHY we think SOME LP has been taken up by some FEW academics needs to be carefully distinguished from other activities, like reading the poems -- At the same time, each of us reads always from some ideological WHERE, though it's more an arc of motion than a site, and anatomizing that arc is part of any truly critical reading

Professor Beach was last seen teaching at the University of California at Irvine,a very good job indeed -- Anyone taken a glance lately at the list of poets who teach at Irvine?

In his introduction to ARTIFICE AND INDETERMINACY, Beach reminds readers of Alan Golding's comments on the "provisionally complicit resistance" of LP. I think Alan's phrase may be the most apt descriptor of the present moment of LP within the academy --

Alan's phrase is also a nearly perfect description of the attitude with which one enters the reading of a new poem -- much more accurate than "willful suspension of disbelief," I believe.

↑ Index

452. Patrick Herron

Re: I AM NOT SHOUTING (yes you are)

Thu 28 Oct 1999

> FOR PATRICK HERRON AND THIS WHOLE MESS

so now it's my fault. hmm. ok, whatever makes you feel better.

Actually using all caps _is_ textual shouting in the internet culture. it is a fairly common convention. but, as you must, as you must.

> I THINK IT'S PRETTY WELL DONE ACTUALLY

Thank you, John.

> WHEN IS MOCKERY, WHEN IS PROMPTING SOMEONE, EVEN EXPECTING SOMEONE TO SAY
> "why did you say something so low to me in public" NOT THAT DIFFERENT FROM "STEPPING ON SOMEBODY'S HEAD" ????

Actually to this mortal sin i have already confessed, i did, i did!

> WHAT HAS BEEN GAINED ?

Probably nothing. The motives don't always necessitate their desired outcomes, with which I am sure we are all familiar.

> (HENCEFORTH I WILL BE SHOUTING IN LOWER CASE)

Taylor, I bear no ill will AT ALL. One sentence came off completely wrong in my reply to him. Mark, i tossed jokes like feces at his expense (yes, i was stepping on his head, but with a clown shoe, not an iron tipped boot) when he bears ill-will toward those who use their creative abilities. Otherwise, no ill will to Mark either. can this end? i think people are missing the point and playing wargames here. this is POETRY not WAR. (that was shouting).

> you feel mark stepped on alan's head and taylor was stepping on yrs but saying he wasnt and i added that i was stepping too. ain't no half-steppin'.

> (AUDIO CUE; TARZAN ROAR) and i'd like to say getting funnier, with a little use of irony!

    >that i have just stomped yrs into putty
    with my display of ~reasonableness~
    and i'm doing this to gain something

much better, and sadly much worse. you seem to insinuate physical violence on me with this "stomping yrs into putty" stuff, which scares me a little, frankly. stepping on someone's head is an expression to denote that someone insults or denigrates another person just to impress or gain the favor of another person. "stomping into putty" is perhaps not quite the same thing. i like the audio cue of tarzan, that's funny. but i don't like to think of someone crushing my skull and its contents "into putty." i find nothing humorous about that, and if you do, you clearly need help. i really can take humor, but not potential threats of violence. i really doubt you are a violent person, John, but then I have little knowledge of who you are and probably wouldn't take such a violence-laden statement so well from even my best friends. who can rib me pretty awully but not make it gory.

AND can we keep the harassment offline for the rest of this? Alan is gone. Other poets probably feel reluctant to post anything creative. this has sunk lower than even Raphael's original post (or, from your perspective, even lower than my reply to mark). victory is yours.

Patrick

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

453. Bob Grumman
Re: language poetry and the academy
Thu 28 Oct 1999

I was the one who first called language poetry "acadominant," and I still think I was right to do so in the sense that language poetry is THE poetry of prestige among academics.

As for Beach, I know nothing about him, but I strongly suspect he's never given as much as a nod toward visual poetry (except whatever he thinks he's found of it in language poetry).

--Bob G.

↑ Index

454. Billy Little
Re: Lest I remember
Thu 28 Oct 1999

As often, i wholeheartedly agree with Kent, Alan S is producing a singular, unique and monumental work and i've seen very little work as strange and ex-hilirating as his maybe since Charles Olson, if there's two pieces a day or twenty pieces a day I'm happy to see it. The same is true for Lyn Miller and Kevin Magee, let's have more and Patrick Herron was sending some really new work there for a few days, i hope they weren't parodies, he's found a vein worth mining.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.

nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

455. Maria Damon
Symposium: Poetry as Cultural Critique
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Please distribute widely to friends, colleagues, acquaintances and relatives:

Symposium: Poetry as Cultural Critique
November 5-6, 1999
Sponsored by University of Minnesota (Department of English, Program in Creative Writing, the Humantities Institute, and the College of Liberal Arts), Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics, & Borders Bookstore (Uptown)
co-directors, Maria Damon and Mark Nowak

Friday, November 5th:

1:30pm, Introductory Remarks by Maria Damon

2:00-3:00pm, Opening Talk
Tim Brennan, "The Obscure Reveries of the Inward Gaze"

3:15-4:45pm, Opening Roundtable on "Poetry as Cultural Critique"
Panelists: Harryette Mullen, Tim Brennan, C.S. Giscombe
Moderator: Maria Damon

7:30pm, Reading at Border's Uptown
Introductions, Mark Nowak
Readers: Roy Miki, Harryette Mullen

Saturday, November 6th

10:00am-11:30am, Talks
Juliana Spahr, "'I'm Dracula': Bruce Andrews's 'Confidence Trick'"
Harryette Mullen, "Incessant Elusives: The Oppositional Poetry of Will Alexander and Erica Hunt"

1:00pm-2:30pm, Talks
Roy Miki, "Unravelling Roy Kiyooka: A Re-assessment Amidst Shifting Boundaries"
C. S. Giscombe, "ReCrossing the Prairie State"

3:00pm-4:30pm, Roundtable on "Journals: The Poetics and Politics of Editorship"
Panelists: Juliana Spahr, Roy Miki, Mark Nowak
Moderator: Eric Lorberer (Rain Taxi Review of Books)

7:30pm, Reading at Border's Uptown
Introductions, Mark Nowak
Readers: Tim Brennan, Juliana Spahr, C.S. Giscombe

Major FUnding for this event has been provided by the McKnight Endowment for the Arts and Humanities

↑ Index

456. David Kirschenbaum
Instead of networking use ...
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Jill- As for your problem with the term networking, Abbie Hoffman once told me, "Kid, the bad guys network, we link."

as ever,
David Kirschenbaum, editor
Booglit

_____ Get FREE voicemail, fax and email at http://voicemail.excite.com Talk online at http://voicechat.excite.com

↑ Index

457. pete spence
Re: Ghazal
Thu 28 Oct 1999

> See "The Ghazal in America: May I" by Agha Shahid Ali, in _After New Formalism: Poets on Form, Narrative, and Tradition_, ed. Annie Finch (Story Line Press, 1999), pp. 123-132.
>
> Cheers,
> David
> *~~~

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

458. pete spence
Re: sticks and bones
Thu 28 Oct 1999

> > sticks break bones. Symbols, I guess, don't.
>
> Well, take TWO sticks, cross them at right angles, and you have something suitable for a crucifixion. Next, you have The Cross, a symbol. How many bones have been broken in the name of The Cross? Even more than have been broken in the name of The Koran, probably.
>
> David

in memory of the Laughing Gnostics and other bods persecuted by dominant religions//pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

459. Tom Beckett
Re: poetry audience/s
Thu 28 Oct 1999

Miekal,

Cyberspace

is great but only inexpensive

if you can afford access to it.

I think yr assumptions

are loaded

and wrong.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

460. pete spence
Re: on regionalism...
Thu 28 Oct 1999

> the concept that one could create something/anything divorced from their surrounding is an enviable dictum,
>
> but it is hard to imagine unless you think about isolation chambers & float tanks.
>
> Im a dyed-in-cheese regionalist, infact a bioregionalist, in fact living in the heart of the driftless bioregion, the largest unglaciated spot in the northern hemisphere. no apologies for my writing & art being located in the place I live.
>
> mIEKAL aND, dreamtime village, usa

,,,,Oh come on M A the world is a shrinking oyster,, pete

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

461. Maria Damon
Re: bye
Thu 28 Oct 1999

---

it's a sad day when alan s feels he needs to drop off the list...

↑ Index

462. Billy Little
Re: regionalism
Thu 28 Oct 1999

---

dan always have difficulty with poets who imagine they're advancing their work by slagging masters with a different poetics. Stafford's no hillbilly, he's an amerkan, he's a poet of soul, he may express sentiments but he's not sentimental and he connects with millions. maybe if you wrote one poem as good as the hundreds of stafford's that have touched me deeply, it might sound less like sour grapes. do the work, you don't make yourself look better by trying to make others look worse.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

463. Toni Simon and Nick Piombino
Wallace on Beach
Thu 28 Oct 1999

I'm grateful to Jerrold Shiroma for mentioning Myung Mi Kim. Her book "Dura" (Sun and Moon, 1998) along with Christopher Reiner's "Ogling Anchor" (Avec, 1998) and Guy Bennett's "Last Words" (Sun and Moon,1998) should not be overlooked in the rush of that overly eventful year's quick fading into the millenium.

Sorry I haven't had more time to contribute to this list of late which I have been enjoying whenever possible as an appreciative lurker.

And hang in there Alan Sondheim. We need you!

Best wishes,
Nick

↑ Index

464. Dirk Rowntree
blow them off
Thu 28 Oct 1999

I will presume Dan Raphael can be taken at his word. He states, in a response to the open channel support for Sondheim that “Maybe i should have back channeled to sondheim asking him about his work.” Fine, a slip of the e-tongue. Could happen to anybody. Forgive and forget.

It isn't difficult, but never easy enough, to understand that people can be very discouraged by public statements of disregard. Again, let's take Raphael’s plea that he is not in favor of censorship. The fact is that disrespectful, dismissive to insulting comments in public, although not censorious, can throw a charge into air. A charge that can make some people feel unwelcome.

I welcome and admire Alan's postings. I appeal to Alan to understand that his posts are valued by a good number of people on the list, ignored by some and disliked by others.

I have a folder in which I save posts that think are important. Sondheim’s stuff accounts for about 70 per cent of the folder. The criticisms of Sondheim’s work that I have read on the list have been trite, shallow and irrelevant. The idea that this type of thinking can set a standard for the character and content of what comes at me through the list angers me. The list provides fleeting glimpses of Alan, please don't go off the list because your work has drawn negative flack in public or back channel posts. Maybe you've had more overt attacks on your work on back channel. It's probably harder than I think but, try to blow these turkeys off and continue your work on the list.

Dirk Rowntree

↑ Index

465. Brendan Lorber

THERE'S NO VEMBER LIKE NOVEMBER AT THE ZINC BAR

Fri 29 Oct 1999

Make it a november to remember over at the ZINC BAR SUNDAY NIGHT READING SERIES this upcoming month. It's cut short by Thanksgiving, so we've compressed four weeks of quality into only three readings. How do we do it? A keen ear & our obsessive compulsion.

Here's who's here next:

SUNDAY NOV 7: KATY LEDERER & KESTON SUTHERLAND
SUNDAY NOV14: TAYLOR MEAD & WAYNE KOESTENBAUM
SUNDAY NOV21: JOHN COLETTI & CAROL MIRAKOVE

But where's here? The Zinc Bar is located in New York at 90 West Houston between Laguardia & Thompson & in Webster's between zillions & zingy.

All readings begin on Sunday at 6:37pm except on the 28th, Thanksgiving weekend, when Brendan & Douglas will come to your home & introduce the turkey for twenty minutes while your horrified family wonders when they'll be allowed to eat.

O yes, a donation of $3 goes to the readers. If you have it to give. Give more & maybe the poets will jot a quick ode to their newfound benefactor. What do we get out of the bargain? Something between zero & zilch.

If you want to pick up a copy of LUNGFULL! Magazine, we're always eager to unload them at the reading. If yr really flush, we wouldn't stop you from buying us a drink.

If it's more information you want try [redacted] or [redacted] or [redacted] or better yet, just come down to the Zinc Bar &, perhaps, the answers will emerge.

Please note: a couple open mikes are almost upon us. On October 31, the Halloween costume reading -- come in a costume & step up to the zincrophone. One possible response to this opportunity would be to come in a costume that entirely obscures your identity & read the poem you've been too scared/ ashamed to read ever before. Brendan will be coming as A Cloud in Trousers & Douglas's get up is TBA. & then later in December, the frequent flyer open mike -- show up 4 times to hear other people here at Zinc, beginning a couple weeks ago, & in Dec. you can turn the tables & read your own work back.

Will we see you soon & often? In abject hope for the future & on behalf of man about town Douglas Rothschild, I remain your trusty Brendan Lorber. Good night.

↑ Index

466. Alan Sondheim

various stuff

Fri 29 Oct 1999

First I got a lot of backchannel support, as did I assume those who find my stuff obtrusive on the list. Second, below is part of thinking about 'poetics' from a somewhat personal viewpoint, as well as two recent pieces (traditional) trying to come to grips with this issue. I'm hoping for com- ments. I'm honestly not crying wolf here or asking for support (though obviously I appreciate it).

I think what's lacking here, at least for me (and possibly some others) is exactly what one means by poetics - and then, given that, what body - of literature, people, texts, or media - that word should be applied to, here, on this list - Alan

---

1 (Def. rewritten from http://trace.ntu.ac.uk)

"I think of poetics as looking at relationships among forms, phenomenolo- gies, literatures, in relation to writing/ inscription on one hand, and the body on the other. One might include the earth as well, and the foun- dation of the earth or the articulation of logics and structures beneath the surface of the earth. In other words, what happens when a mouth speaks, when words resonate, when empathy and not equivalence is primary? This is a far cry from the politics of poetics, from the poetics of liter- ary form, from the tropologies, scansions, and stanza patterns of poetry, although all these play a role. But one might ask as well, within the body of poetics, how does number play the world? How does the speaking of num- ber align the body? How are body and world in relation to fundamental structures of the real, such as the classical Umwelt with its things that mostly retain shape, with its identities and typologies, with its Boolean log- ics? And one might also ask, within poetics, about the relation of mu- sic to the body, to speech, to the history of being-human. Poetics in this sense brings ev- erything into play, from cognitive psychology and neuro- physiology to the mathesis of the real, and the dreaming of the body, of the mind, and all terms wavering in the midst of the worlds murmurs and sounds."

One might ask the style of the world, one might ask its breathing -

2 Smart Poem Remains Forever

Here I'm writing a poem.
This line's under the first.
The lines stick on the page.
Nothing seems out of the ordinary.
It's the beginning of graphics.
There's space to the right of the lines.
There's space above and below.
You've got to give space to the poem.
It feels like meat on the bones.
But it doesn't move; it lies here.
It's already a corpse to cry about.
WAAA! WAAA! The corpse of the poem.
It's good to write death about death.
Our lives are from earth to earth.

Here I'm continuing the poem.
This stanza's under the first.
The stanzas stick out on the page.
Nothing seems out of the ordinary.
Look at the shape of the stanzas.
There's a bit of a shape, not too much.
Byron's Don Juan has shape.
The Ancient Mariner has shape.
Sometimes the poem spreads out.
It thinks the page is a body.
It lies there dead on the page.
Chuff chuff says the poet's breath.
Rereading the line, I keep breathing.

I want a poem that leaps off the page and continues when the voice stops.
I think the poem will be a good imitator, life won't go on as before.
It will sound and shudder, speak back, jump, clawing your neck. It travels thousands of miles in broken packets machinery has to put together in order for it to return to the condition of the poem, and even then something else might happen, a letter leaving, image heaving.

Where are the broken poems that keep breaking?

There's a dampness to lines of poetry.
They seethe into the page.
Think of Bishop Gavin's translation.
Something's crying to continue!
Who could be under the stones?
What's the map in the foam of the surf?
It just sits there. Poems are great markers Of the human condition and the times we are living in.
Inside the book, they face each other all the times.

3 and letters

letters fall over and lie there as well.
if this had been a book, you would have read this long ago.
the pages, yours, letters swollen, loving your mouth.
the grist of letters among protrusions of the flesh.

all letters sing only of sex and death.
love appears along their splines or embrochures.
it is the ancient science of letters.
never confuse this with material or spiritual wealth.

letters survive and murmur and couple and mourn.
letters need nothing, not even our speaking and writing.
the page is a trap is a cemetery is a constant death.
letters burn black fire white smoke in sullen truths of skies.

what we see is their death, what we know, their death.
nothing of their song or the spike of them in tongue.
your mouth gets in the way, they don't want to leave.
our lives are seduced by each and every page.

letters, leave us.
letters, leave us.

↑ Index

467. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy
Glad'n'Sad
Fri 29 Oct 1999

Glad that Dan Raphael posted a poem after his comments on Alan S.

Glad too that his comments precipitated so much support for Alan. Where were you all before?

Sad that Alan is ill and thinking of drastically reducing his posts. When I first joined the list some years ago one of the first posts I downloaded was one of his on the early days of the net. Like so many others his posts are an important part of my sense of the list.

Sad also that yet another shake-the-hand-that-shook-the-hand barb aimed at Charles Bernstein went almost without comment. If anyone else on the list had been treated like that there'd have been uproar. I hope. Don't see why the listowner, or anyone else, should be subject to this kind of thing. It's disgraceful.

best

Randolph Healy

Visit the Sound Eye website at:
http://indigo.ie/~tjac/sound_eye_hme.htm
or find more Irish writing at:
http://www.nd.edu/~ndr/issues/ndr7/contents.html

↑ Index

468. Stephen Ellis
Re: Business, class, access
Fri 29 Oct 1999

Your post, particularly the section about no longer working in the hinky dinky grocery store where you grew up, having now grown into seeing your name in print, hits a particular nail square on the head, but doesn't drive it anywhere (aka "where's the wood?"). To begin to accomplish this would be to ask and attempt to answer a rather difficult question: what value does 'seeing your name in print' - or having others see it - have, to what end, and for who? Ie., how exclusionary is it? Does it probably exclude the person(s) who remain back home (no longer home to some) at the rinky dinky roller rink of the repetitious yet possibly common life of those who work the buy-and-sell scheme to ends at considerable variance from your (and each our) own? While I'm not suggesting that anyone need read their poems to a truck drivers convention in order to "get real"

I'm wondering what the conventions of seeing one's name in print lead (lean) towards? And as far as simply admitting that one is "of" a working class background, and (yet) has networked one's way into a different (higher?) form of access to intelligent consideration of The Fix, let's call it - is this "confessional" mode really anything other than a way of side-stepping issues that are perpetually brought up by a whole class of previous side-steppers? I get the feeling that somebody's (some bodies) are being left in the lurch of us all getting to see our name up in lights. Since it's a pretty low-wattage elevation, I can't help but wonder what it effects viz. the class issues you're trying to introduce, especially in terms of access; you're speaking of access to just what, exactly? If you're speaking of participatory opportunities, and the apparent lack of these among the less-privileged classes, then what is it you hope to accomplish, either for yourself, or for those you seem to be suggesting you've partly left behind, by hoisting yourself from what seems one rinky dink situation to another whose difference is mostly in the issues of access and priviledge you are now wont to descry? Are you now some sort of "spokesperson" for those left sorting lettuce deep into the night?

While I can respect wanting to "lay things bare" in this situation, I don't believe that your laying claim to an understanding of the class structure of literary production as you've presented it - ie., excusing yourself without having even posed, let alone attempted to make answer to, some very tough questions regarding your own position along the lay lines of what looks to be a pretty unmapped and for now, over-simple field of metaphor - goes far enough. I think that people - all people - "want to know", ie., for example, who they are, what they are, in the overall daily struggle of seeing themselves into and through activities that seem (and possibly ARE, to them, as to us) sufficient to life. So, for example, what do you imagine, or know, the particular values and prejudices, whether class determined or more simply "human" in some broad sense of "wanting" (what?) that make this sufficiency as various as it is, to be? The place where your name gets to be in print is always "elsewhere"; the values and prejudices that go to specify an individual's sense of the life in them being sufficient unto itself in terms of what they do, happens where they are, where we are, where you are. And where, I'm wondering, is that? Ie., in what position viz. the social community, or, for that matter, the cosmic stream of stars (not to say in what exchange of words) do things, as you say, "become as real as possible"? - S E

> From: Kathy Lou Schultz <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

Subject: Business, class, access
Date: Wed, 27 Oct 1999 22:18:27 -0700

*It seems to me that part of what Jill Stengel is highlighting is the importance of access and that not all poets/writers have the same access to "community" and publishing opportunities. And, yes, if we get very clear and very honest about this, a lot of this is about money (and other aspects of class mobility such as education). Bobbie West states it very clearly in the HOW2 Forum on class & poetics that Robin Tremblay-McGaw and I co-edited (and, yes, I do want to pitch this because I think the contributors worked hard and did a great job with limited time and space on a very difficult topic):*

"When it comes to literary production, class pervades every aspect of it. For people of the lower classes, the common denominator is "have-not" status, starting with the glaring absence of the middle/upper class assumption that it is always possible to achieve what one desires. There's a lack of cash to support money-losing ventures such as poetry magazines and small presses (owner/editorship of which gives one instant recognition). There's a lack of access to the Internet, where one can hobnob with publishers and magazine editors (publication being determined partly by who you know: For example, this particular essay appearing in this particular forum is a result of having met someone [Kathy Lou Schultz] at an academic conference and having contributed to an Internet discussion)."

I find it interesting the extent to which poets will go to obfuscate their own or other's class privilege. It is like it is perceived as "impolite" to actually tell the truth about money -- and who has it. I get very tired of this because money does buy access: more time to write, money to publish one's own journals and books, which in turn increases both community as well as publishing opportunities for one's own work by increasing your "profile" and "reputation."

Let's just say for now that I'm pretty clear that if I still worked at the Hinky Dinky grocery store in the town in Nebraska where I grew up, ya'll wouldn't be seeing my name in print at all.

And lest you think I'm just pointing fingers, the quote from Bobbie implicates both Bobbie & myself, in a way laying things bare, and saying, yup this is how it works. As women from working class backgrounds we're both inside and outside of that, straddling, yet trying to keep it as real as possible. Not easy. Sometimes painful. Always interesting.

Respectfully,
Kathy Lou

> Jill Stengel wrote:
> as both a poet and publisher, i cannot ignore the fact that it costs money to > put work forth into the world. even self-publishing--paper, pen, printer, > whatever--requires money. let's not forget stamps, envelopes. last i checked,
> these were not free either. maybe i'm looking in the wrong places? what about > web publishing--i pay for internet access, paid for this computer at which i > now sit, etc., so nope, that's not free either. sending work out to others to > publish: well, there's still that computer and printer and paper and stamps > to be thinking of. unless i'm going to go use someone else's computer and > printer and paper and stamps.
> ...
> to bring it--the financial concerns of poetry--to light in a criticizing > manner, pointing fingers at those who cannot avoid the simple math of needing > to make ends meet, is unfair, detrimental...and contributes to the > continuation of the limited availability of non-mainstream publishing.
>
> ^^
> Kathy Lou Schultz
> Editor & Publisher
> Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
> www.duckpress.org
>
> 42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

469. Stephen Ellis

Re: Bye

Fri 29 Oct 1999

I'd second this, things and persons being what and who they always are, it serves well to maintain a sense of expanse and welcome in a time when contraction seem to've gotten the upper hand. S E

> From: Hilton Manfred Obenzinger <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: Re: Bye
> Date: Thu, 28 Oct 1999 08:57:05 -0700
>
> Alan,
>
> Why are you quiting when most of the responses (at least publicly) have been supportive? What if someone doesn't like your work? Much of what you put on line does not interest me, but I've grown fond of searching for the moments that I like -- and I'll defend your right to the death to splurge. Complaining and composing should be second nature by now. No one, complainer or composer, should be demonized -- and I hope no one's distracted from their chosen obsessions. In fact, it's amazing that you've been posting as long as you have without someone taking issue with your work sooner. Consider it a compliment.
>
> Hilton Obenzinger

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

470. Poetics List Administration

Alan Sondheim Leaving?

Fri 29 Oct 1999

This message came to the administrative account. - Tim Shaner

--On Thursday, October 28, 1999, 2:21 PM -0700 "Balestrieri, Peter" <[redacted]> wrote:

Hello, I can't believe that Alan Sondheim has left the List! If he does indeed stop posting, then I want to say, in a very old-fashioned and sincere way, SHAME on those who've finally managed to make him uncomfortable enough to leave. If you didn't appreciate his efforts or his poetics, why couldn't you just delete his posts? Your attempts at censorship are ugly and brand this List as the exact opposite of it's stated purpose. Once again, the List is safe for insecure, aging rebels and young writers looking for a safe, established avant garde to join. Pete Balestrieri

↑ Index

471. Poetics List Administration
NEW BOOK: Lauren Gudath
Fri 29 Oct 1999

This message came to the administrative account. - tim shaner, poetics list moderator

--On Thursday, October 28, 1999, 10:33 AM -0700 "Mary Burger" <[redacted]> wrote:

NEW from SECOND STORY BOOKS:

THE TELEVISION DOCUMENTARY by Lauren Gudath
20 pages, sewn binding, vellum and vinyl cover.

"Isolated from the benefits and peek-a-boo regimen cleanliness and godliness
the dynamo temperance
The specimen: neglect, instinct, mechanics, abandoned surface. Pathetic England."
-- from The Television Documentary

ALSO AVAILABLE:

A SUMMER NEWSREEL by Brenda Coultas
23 pages, hand-stitched binding, vellum and monotone color photo cover.

"Those new to Coultas' writing are in for a fine treat: for several years, Coultas has been conducting an in-depth evaluation of the interstices of rural and semi-rural America and A Summer Newsreel is another stunning chapter in the most gloriously idiosyncratic work around." --Laird Hunt

NOT RIGHT NOW by Renee Gladman
24 pages, hand-stitched binding, vellum and monotone color photo cover.

"Twenty-five small, squarish prose paragraphs from on the bus, on the job, on the street, in the bed. Reading, one finds the world has been forgotten.
And in the same moment the world has forgotten one." --Tom Clark

SECOND STORY BOOKS publishes works that navigate a relationship between narrative and lyric, interrogating implications of time, place, and subjectivity.

Send check payable to MARY BURGER, $5.00 for each book ordered, to:
Mary Burger, Editor

Second Story Books
85 Henry St. #5
San Francisco CA 94114

or contact SMALL PRESS DISTRIBUTION:
http://www.spdbooks.org, tel. [redacted]

↑ Index

472. Mark Prejsnar
Re: Eeeek! Eeek!, or, the heron monkey
Fri 29 Oct 1999

I also would strongly recommend that Patrick and others take this rather creepy and dead-end thread off the list....But i note that he wants others to do it, and wants to be able to get the (inaccurate) final public word in himself..... Most of what appears below is not accurate, at least as regrds the positions i've taken and what i've said..."you could look it up"

On Thu, 28 Oct 1999, Patrick Herron wrote:

> (first of all some kind people have asked that these primal displays need to stop, because they are wasting people's time. they should just be continued backchannel if they do need to continue. but first, before i go, a letter from the editor, and a word from our sponsor:)
>
> Do you actually read the things you respond to??
>
> not any less than you when you are at your apex of comprehension, it appears. an added bonus for me: i can read my own posts, too!
>
> hmm. let's see now, Mark. (trying to use the war metaphor, to enhance communication with you) if i remember rightly, you insulted Alan's writing in your attempt to defend insults coming from Raphael and you attacked people who were defending alan for being creative and sharing, and also people who are trying to keep people on the list from becoming overly self-conscious when posting.
>
> you seem so insistent to play war games, alignments, schools, etc. i ALIGN myself with, well, NOT aligning with people who align AGAINST creative expression, if we must stick to your divisive vocabulary. musicians poets artists people with umbilicals to something greater than flesh and selves. based on the evidence i don't expect you to understand that. if you do, great.
>
> primates are not monkeys. oops! nice attempt at humor, though.
>
> your least favorite simian,
> Patrick "eek-a-sponsor" Herron

> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

473. Lowther, John
_The Garrett Caples Reader_
Fri 29 Oct 1999

hey people

i just got this in the mail yesterday and it looks great that is it's really an brilliantly laid out and designed book

and

having read the 1st 4-5 poems and knowning some of the others already i can say that the text is an easy equal to the sumptuous package in which it resides bravo to garrett and angle and black square eds for putting it out there

_____
> The Garrett Caples Reader
>
> (includes Mr. Caples's last poems)
>
> 98 pgs, perfectbound, $9
> marvelously designed by Neko Buildings, and > published in conjunction with John Yau's Black Square Editions
>
> This will be available through Small Press Distribution very soon (if not > at > this very moment...then that other moment that keeps passing very > quickly....the one over there under the light).
>
> Thank you and good day
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

474. Katherine Lederer
Moxley and Culley - NYC
Fri 29 Oct 1999

Segue @ Double happiness
Saturdays from 4:00 to 6:00 pm.
Double Happiness is located at 173 Mott street,
just south of Broome.
A 4$ contribution goes to the readers.

October 30: PETER CULLEY, JENNIFER MOXLEY

PETER CULLEY is author of 21 (Oolichan), Natural History (Fissure), Climax Forest (Leech Books), and forthcoming Snake Eyes. He lives in South Wellington, Vancouver Island, British Colombia.

JENNIFER MOXLEY is a poet, translator and editor. She is the author of Imagination Verses and several chapbooks, the most recent of which is Wrong Life (Cambridge, UK. Equipage). Presently she lives in Maine.

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

November 1999

470 messages · Thu 28 Oct 1999 – Tue 30 Nov 1999

November 1999, and the century is running out of month. A low millennial hum lies under everything now — the machines to be reset at midnight, the anxieties rehearsed and re-rehearsed — though the poets of Buffalo keep, as they always have, to their own weather. Only at the archive's far edge does the wider tumult press in: a correspondent signing himself, with a Duchampian wink, rmutts alerts whoever means to be "in Seattle for the WTO protests next week" — as if the millennium intended to go out not in fireworks but in tear gas and rain.

The month's presiding quarrel — it runs to some scores of messages beneath a drift of mutating subject-lines, the banner Business, class, access chief among them — is finally about who is permitted into the room. Kathy Lou Schultz will not let it be said that "class has nothing to do with access to time"; David Baratier, an editor who "started out on unemployment" and ran his press from the dole, answers that the perpetual-victim posture has begun to wear thin. Round and round the two of them go, drawing in Catherine Daly and half the list, until pete spence punctures the whole solemn business from the far side of the planet: get ahead, he wonders aloud, or "get a head??"

The argument bleeds, as it must in 1999, into the machinery that carries it. Tom Beckett, distrustful of the unstable digital page, would sooner keep "a stack of books over a pile of floppys" any day; miekal and — the visual poet homesteading out in West Lima — shouts back in a tall column of capitals that the choice was never one or the other but each its own. Beneath the theory runs a plainer ledger of costs: Tony Green pricing a London library by the half-hour against pete spence's free Australian card, a reminder that access, whatever the manifestos promise, keeps a meter running. Wearied by the fury, Rachel Loden reaches past all of it to Brecht, who owned to "changing our country more often than our shoes".

The class argument acquires, for a fortnight, an actual ballot. From San Francisco Ron Silliman flags Tom Ammiano's improbable mayoral runoff against Willie Brown, in a city where a single room now lets for "$1,000 per month per bedroom" and a live-in landlord, Taylor Brady reports, can smear a gay candidate as a communist without once lowering his voice. Between such squalls the list keeps to its gentler errands — hunting a half-remembered book about poets who lived in towers, weighing David Lehman's premature obituary for the avant-garde — as if to prove that erudition, too, is a form of housekeeping.

And then, midway through the month, the list stops to bury a musician. Lester Bowie of the Art Ensemble of Chicago is dead at fifty-eight, and Taylor Brady, passing the news along under the subject Lester Left Town, hears in that flamboyant, humane trumpet "a model poetics for performance of all kinds" — beginning in sound, he writes, and travelling outward through everything after. It is a fine thing, and a wholly characteristic one, that a poetry list should send off a horn player by making of him a poetics. I have arranged what follows so that each voice stands forward under its own name, its telephone and its address returned to privacy, its machinery swept aside. These were letters before ever they were literature.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 470 in all.

WRITERS

Administration, Poetics List 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 106, 258, 363, 364
Alexander, Charles 95
Amato, Joe 19, 83, 136, 219, 285, 347
And, Miekal 6, 8, 9, 22, 75, 98, 112, 121, 240, 241, 389, 399
Andrews, Betsy 52, 167
Andrews, Jim 55, 131, 156, 200, 339, 368
Archambeau, Robert 99, 170
Askenase, Alicia 203
Baratier, David 28, 102, 177, 281, 384, 404
Beaulieu, Derek 312, 412
Beckett, Tom 54, 93, 96, 100, 119, 160, 268, 400, 461
Bell, Thomas 17, 77
Bellamy, Dodie 64, 239
Bernstein, Charles 393, 460
Bettridge, Joel M 92
Bouchard, Daniel 132, 320, 345
Bowering, George 65, 72, 73, 74, 153, 233, 436, 437, 454
Brady, Taylor 62, 187, 190, 209, 226, 229, 323
Brennan, Joe 322
Brink, Leonard 129
Bromige, David 31, 49, 377, 379, 380, 450
Brown, Lee Ann 290
Burger, Mary 13, 357
Buuck, David 440
Cabri, Louis 158, 434
Caddel, R I 444
Cahnmann, Melisa 273
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 79, 107, 452
Chirot, David Baptiste 302, 303, 307, 367
Clay, Steve 174
Conner, Kyle 150, 272
Cope, Stephen 353
Corbett, Robert 319
Corbin, Michael 192, 194
Corrigan, Mariah 130
Cunningham, Brent 25, 223
Daley, R M 146
Daly, Catherine 16, 252
Damon, Maria 262, 338
Davis, Jordan 133, 173
Day, Roger 204
Dbkk 34
Debrot, Jacques 10, 26
DeDeo, Simon 469
Degentesh, Katie 81, 206, 439
Dickison, Steve 426, 451
Dillon, Richard 151, 211, 397, 424
Djuric, Dubravka 279, 280
Durgin, Patrick F. 453
ELECTRONICS, ART 372
Ellis, Stephen 44, 80, 108, 264
Fagin, Elizabeth 340
Fewell, Aaron 304
Al Filreis 66, 266, 299, 358
Fogarty, Peter 149
Fox, Skip 402
Freedman, Robert 318
Frey, Richard 442
Funkhouser, Chris 355
Gabriel, Aviva V. 46
Gelsinger, Eric 137
Gitin, David 336
Glazier, Loss Pequeño 127
Gordon, Nada 57
Green, Tony 50, 86, 88, 120, 147, 185, 234, 348, 359, 374, 420, 421
Greenberg, Arielle C. 87, 227, 396, 422
Guitart, Jorge 186
H, F I L C 154
Hamshaw, Carol L. 275, 369, 417
Hassen 105, 286, 459
Haynes, Bob 362
Hehir, K.Angelo 152, 270, 335
Heller, Michael 123
Herron, Patrick 196
Hill, Owen 242
Ixnaypress 337
Jenho 291
Jenkins, Grant 135, 181, 292
Jernigan, Marla 321
JOHNSON, KENT 24
Joris, Pierre 383
Joseph, Safdie 110, 117, 306
Kaipa, Summi 342, 428
Kane, Daniel 36
Kathylou 18, 85, 143
Kelley, Karen 142
Kellogg, David 176, 326
Killian, Kevin 5
Kirschenbaum, David 213, 274, 293, 419
Knoebel, David 37, 373, 458
Kramer, Wendy 1
Lance Fung Gallery, 537 Bway NYC 100... 188
Lang, Doug 260
Larsen, David 236
Lederer, Katherine 134, 261, 385, 386, 425

Lennon, Brian 7, 138, 139, 189
Levitsk 276, 317, 334
List, Poetics 178, 179, 180, 182, 184, 295, 296, 297, 390, 391, 392, 445, 446, 465
Loden, Rachel 341
Long, Brent 97, 171, 210, 346, 447
Lorber, Brendan 381
Lowther, John 2, 27, 35, 60, 63, 82, 104, 205, 207, 215, 245, 247, 250, 254, 284, 316, 403
Machlin, Dan 313
Magee, Michael 183, 466
Marsh, Bill 395
May, Josh 59
MAYHEW 418, 449
Mckenzie, Geraldine 68
Meadows, Deborah 344
Melnicove, Mark 103, 354
Miller, Andrew John 126
Mills, Billy 78
Neff, Michael 51, 263, 277
Nemet-Nejat, Murat 144, 282, 432
Nettleton, Todd 249
Neufeld, Peter 101
Nguyen, Hoa 394
Nielsen, Aldon 214, 217, 253, 405, 408, 462, 463
Nikolayev, Philip 168, 259, 298
Orange, Tom 343
Pete 325, 468
Piombino, Toni Simon And Nick 222
Pollet, Sylvester 330
Prejsnar, Mark 58, 140, 141, 246
Pritchett,Patrick 12, 109, 208
Project, Poetry 11, 43, 148, 251, 375, 448
Prunty, Randy 435
R.drake 163
Raea100900 230
Raj, Acharya Hom 431
Raphael, Dan 21, 155
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 145, 199, 221, 269, 315
Reiner, Christopher 467
Review, Eckerd College 165
Rmutts 415
Rosenberg, Jim 91
Russell, Layne 113, 175
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 45, 197, 409
Schaefer, P.Standard 365
Scharf, Michael (Cahners -NYC) 327
Schultz, Kathy Lou 61, 212, 308, 309, 310, 441
Schwartz, Gerald 366, 371
Schwartz, Judy 300
Searls, Damion 324
Shiroma, Jerrold 29, 84, 89, 166, 328, 382, 443
Silliman, Ron 159, 162, 225, 244, 265, 356, 387, 398
Sithiwong, Rebecca Weldon 237
Skinner, Jonathan 407
Sondheim, Alan 20, 23, 30, 56, 94, 128, 157, 164, 169, 220, 238, 256, 267, 278, 287, 288, 294, 314, 329, 349, 361, 370, 401, 427, 433, 438, 455
Spahr, Juliana 406, 414
Spence, Pete 32, 33, 47, 48, 69, 70, 71, 111, 114, 115, 116, 118, 193, 218, 311, 331, 332, 333, 350, 351, 352, 410, 411, 429, 430, 456, 457
Stengel, Jill 53, 90, 216, 248
Stroffolino, Chris 14, 15
Taciuch, Dean 67, 122
Tf 198
Tills, Steve 413
Treadwell, Elizabeth 124, 125, 470
Tremblay-McGaw, Robin 161, 224
Upton, Lawrence 228, 257, 283, 378, 464
Vanderborg, Susan 255
Vincent, Stephen 232, 289
Walsh, Michael 235
Weishaus, Joel 416
Wellman, D 3, 4, 231
Wheeler, Susan 202, 301
White, Jim 172
Winter, Max 76
Wolff, Rebecca 243, 388
Y. 360
Zauhar, David 305
Zavialov, Maria L. 201, 271, 376, 423
Zimmerman, Daniel 191, 195

NAMES MENTIONED

Abrams, Jen 270
Adams, John 359
Alexander, Christopher W. 178, 184
Alice, Mary 383
Allan, Edgar 383
Allison, Dorothy 165
Americans, Asian 26, 57, 63, 117, 298, 307, 308, 324, 332
Amnasan, Michael 239
Anderson, Erik 163, 359, 442
Anderson, Laurie 291
Andre, Michael 383
Anne, Sarah 441, 470
Apollinaire, Guillaume 77, 97
Armantrout, Rae 230, 260, 269
Arnold, Matthew 450
Ashbery, John 46, 148, 243
Ashley, Robert 462
Atlanta, Mark P. 10, 24, 82, 182, 265, 321
Auden, W. H. 383
Augustine, Jane 195
Austin, Geer 291, 394
Baraka, Amiri 338, 355

Barnes, Diane 51, 293, 383, 419
Basinski, Michael 381
Bataille, George 130
Baudrillard, Jean 138, 139, 205
Belle, Cecelia 51
Benjamin, Walter 383
Bennett, Bill 289
Bennett, Jim 336
Bennett, John 289
Bennett, William 359
Berkeley, Michael 95, 188, 242, 289, 330, 341, 354, 470
Berkson, Bill 296, 381
Berlin, Irving 383
Bernard, Kenneth 294
Bernstein, Emma 187, 402, 445
Berrigan, Anselm 293, 330, 354, 365
Berrigan, Eddie 293, 381
Berry, Chuck 293
Berry, Jake 359
Bidart, Frank 393, 397
Bishop, Elizabeth 302
Blackman, Nicole 375, 448
Blau, Rachel 266, 306, 320, 338, 358
Borkhuis, Charles 385
Bowie, David 217, 225, 226, 233, 245, 263, 270, 289, 336
Bowles, Jane 356, 383
Bowles, Paul 356, 360, 383
Bradstreet, Anne 196
Bramhall, Allen 381
Braxton, Anthony 226, 270
Brown, James 270
Brown, Norman O. 117
Bryant, Dana 409, 415
Bryant, Tisa 409
Bukowski, Charles 211
Burkard, Michael 243
Burke, Edmund 390
Burnham, Clint 255, 262, 275
Burnham, Deborah 442
Burroughs, William 356, 383
Burton, Philip 433
Byron, Philip 270, 469
Cafagna, Marcus 442
Cafe, Poets 293
Cage, John 316, 323
Cameron, David 293
Cameron, Sharon 293
Campbell, Roy 270
Camus, Albert 130
Caples, Garrett 25
Cartelli, Donna 381
Carter, Mike 442
Castro, Michael 148
Chadwick, Lynn 385
Cheatham, Robert 288
Chinen, Nate 442
Claire, Barbara 30, 368
Clar, Jorge 148
Clare, John 46
Clark, Emilie 43, 295, 359
Clark, Tom 13, 394
Clemente, Francesco 51, 367
Clinton, Bill 302, 303, 367, 434
Cobb, Allison 337, 363
Cobbing, Bob 257, 378
Cocteau, Jean 383
Coffey, Michael 180
Coffman, Lisa 442
Cohen, Ethan 294
Cole, Barbara 442
Coleman, Jen 465
Collins, Billy 258
Collum, Jack 394
Columbus, Christopher 14
Compton, Shanna 417
Conant, Jeff 381
Conrad, Tony 150, 272, 442
Coolidge, Clark 79, 90, 243
Cooper, Dennis 203, 290
Coover, Robert 182, 243
Copland, Aaron 356, 383
Cory, Jim 442
Coultas, Brenda 13
County, Madison 258, 367, 434
Creeley, Robert 51, 183, 192, 199, 203, 387, 393, 397, 405, 419, 421
Crist, Lauren 442
Crosby, Harry 30
Curtis, Dana 51
Dailey, Joel 215, 337, 363
Daley, Ryan 146
Darragh, Tina 34, 45, 48
Davinio, Caterina 372
Davis, Leslie 394
Davis, Martin 148, 293
Davis, Tim 385
Dawson, Nancy 419
Day, Jean 303
Dennis, Carl 189, 221
Derksen, Jeff 419
Derrida, Jacques 223
Desmond, Rae 302
Devaney, Tom 337, 363
Dickens, Charles 450
Dickinson, Emily 330, 354
Dickinson, Mark 145, 208
Dillon, Matt 184
Dine, Jim 51
Dinsmore, Claire 55, 368
Dixon, Nancy 207
Donahue, Joe 89
Donnelly, Patrick 243

Doris, Stacy 243
Dorow, Thomas 38
Drucker, Johanna 77, 182
Durand, Marcella 293, 337, 363
Durgin, Patrick F. 337, 363, 453
Eigner, Larry 141
Elisa, Paula 381
Elliott, George 442, 465
Elshtain, Eric 394
England, Amy 13, 196, 261, 303, 383
Epstein, Andrew 381
Esther, Little 279
Evans, Brett 381
Evans, Dan 442
Evans, Steve 330, 354
Fagin, Larry 174, 340
Farrell, Dan 434
Ferguson, Jesse 107, 452
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 5
Ferry, David 301, 305, 343
Fielding, Kent 419
Finley, Karen 276
Fisher, Ann 190, 210, 359
Flanagan, Mary 182
Fletcher, Sasha 383
Fodaski, Elizabeth 11, 31
Folsom, Eric 81
Ford, Ellen 442
Forrest, Lisa 465
Fouhy, George 40, 364, 391, 392, 446
Foust, Graham 330, 354
France, Peter 150, 270, 272, 383
Frances, Mary 95, 441
Fraser, Kathleen 441
Fraser, Simon 213, 369
Friedlander, Benjamin 330, 354
Friedman, David M. 293
Fugate, Ethan 337, 363
Fuhrman, Joanna 293, 381
Gallagher, Kristen 442
Ganick, Peter 55
Garcia, Rodrigo 39
Gardner, Drew 293
Garrison, Beth 368
Geheb, Annie 442
Gerstler, Amy 243
Gevirtz, Susan 43, 441
Gilbert, Alan 419
Gilbert, Susan 198
Ginsberg, Allen 135, 175, 176, 178, 181, 296, 356, 419
Ginsburg, Allen 390
Gioia, Dana 165
Giraud, Eric 134
Giscombe, Cecil 213
Gizzi, Michael 385
Gladman, Renee 13, 340, 440, 451
Glancy, Diane 338
Gluck, Bob 224
Glück, Louise 301, 305, 343
Glück, Robert 441
Goetsch, Douglas 375, 404, 448
Goldman, Emma 359
Gontarek, Leonard 442
Good, Philip 407, 419
Gordon, Kim 448
Gottlieb, Michael 375, 448
Graham, Lea 273
Greenberg, Arielle C. 87, 227, 396, 422
Greene, Graham 270, 291, 383
Greenwald, Ted 448
Gregg, Linda 442
Gudath, Lauren 13
Guest, Barbara 5, 326
Guston, Philip 296
Halsey, Alan 464
Hamshaw, Carol L. 275, 369, 417
Haraway, Donna 138, 205
Harris, Kaplan 293, 355, 442
Hart, Matt 337, 363
Harvey, James 159, 190, 210, 244, 303
Hawkins, Jeremy 390, 419
Hawthorne, Nathaniel 359, 383
Hayles, Katherine 182, 222
Hejinian, Lynn 43, 291, 297
Heller, Jan 273
Heller, Mike 31, 464
Helms, Jesse 244
Herbert, George 383
Hicks, Sue 290
Higgins, Billy 394
Highfill, Mitch 293
Hirsch, Edward 258
Hofer, Jen 394, 415
Holley, Margaret 442
Hollo, Anselm 394, 464
Holloway, Rob 31, 426, 451
Holman, Amy 364, 391
Holman, Bob 364, 391
Hoover, Paul 385, 452
House, White 303, 367
Howard, Scott 394
Hugo, Richard 415
Hunt, Erica 281, 309, 384
Hunter, Robert 270
Indiana, Robert 419
Inman, Peter 34, 45, 48, 434
Ireland, Lauren 42
Israel, David 178, 181
Israeli, Henry 197
Jackson, Jesse 158, 302, 387, 462
Jackson, Michael 270
Jameson, Fredric 138, 205
Jarman, Joseph 270

Jarnot, Lisa 390, 465
Johns, Jasper 26, 57, 63, 117, 444
Johnson, Nicholas 40, 378
Johnson, Ray 87, 132, 396
Johnston, Devin 243
Jones, Brian 307, 408, 450
Jordan, June 159, 173, 186, 190, 210, 293
Joron, Andrew 214
Joyce, James 383
Joyce, Michael 182
Joyce, Trevor 51, 153
Jullich, Jeffrey 130, 337, 363
Kafka, Franz 413
Kalleberg, Garrett 198, 385
Karasick, Adeena 417
Karenina, Anna 372
Kasper, Catherine 326
Katz, Eliot 293
Keller, Helen 273
Kelly, John 442
Kelly, Patrick 51, 158, 266, 273, 306, 320, 358, 442
Kelsey, Karla 51, 415
Kendall, Robert 273
Kennedy, David 335, 348, 367
Kerouac, Jack 296, 330, 354, 390, 419
Kerry, John 442
Khlebnikov, Velimir 187, 223
Kikionyogo, Richard 442
Kim, Myung Mi 441
King, Larry 359
Kinsella, John 294
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 213, 293
Koch, Kenneth 148, 293, 422
Koethe, John 301, 305, 343
Kolm, Ron 442
Kostelanetz, Richard 381
Kramer, Scott 95, 442
Kraus, Chris 130
Kristeva, Julia 130
Kushner, Bill 381
Landers, Pete 325
Landers, Sue 337, 363
Larimer, Kevin 261, 394
Laughlin, James 383
Lauterbach, Ann 385, 452
Lavender, Bill 207, 215
Lazer, Hank 207, 337, 363
League, Little 367
Lehman, David 258, 413, 422, 425, 453, 463
Levin, Jonathan 442
Levin, Lynn 442
Levine, Philip 418, 432
Levitsky, Rachel 53, 276, 308, 324, 340
Levy, Aaron 158
Lewis, Bernard 419
Ley, Jennifer 368
Lin, Erika 326
Little, Billy 21
Liu, Timothy 243
Livingston, Reb 291, 297
Locke, John 432
Loewinsohn, Ron 5
London, Frank 31, 50, 70, 86, 111, 123, 217, 228, 283, 378, 383, 464
Loney, Alan 147, 421
Loo, Jeff 442
Lopez, Tony 31
Lorca, Federico García 383
Louise, Bobbie 130, 390, 419
Mac Low, Jackson 393, 397
Lowell, Amy 419
Lubasch, Lisa 134
Lynn, Aldon 408
Lyons, Kimberly 293
Madison, James 383
Magee, Mike 442
Mailer, Norman 383
Manning, Nicholas 30
Marclay, Christian 316, 323
Marsh, William 182
Marshall, Robert 381
Martin, Camille 215, 261, 281, 309, 381, 442
Marx, Karl 151
Mason, Janet 415, 442
Mathews, Elizabeth 65, 66
Mathews, Harry 65, 66
Maurer, Susan 381, 394
Mayer, Bernadette 207, 407, 419
Mayer, Jane 313, 330, 354, 407
McCaffery, Steve 222
Mead, Taylor 293
Meltzer, David 5
Memmott, Talan 55, 200, 339, 368
Menefee, Sarah 394
Merrill, James 418
Merwin, W. S. 171, 393, 397
Mesmer, Sharon 442
Miki, Roy 213
Miller, Paul D. 126
Mirakove, Carol 272, 363
Mitchell, Joan 270
Moolten, David 442
Moore, Allison 323, 448
Moore, Rebecca 251
Morgan, Robin 51, 188, 467
Morris, Adalaide 222
Morris, Dee 187, 251, 270
Morris, Philip 295
Morrow, William 258
Moses, Robert 293, 383
Moxley, Jennifer 330, 354
Mullen, Harryette 187, 213, 243, 281, 309, 330, 354, 384, 406

Mullen, Laura 243
Mura, David 36
Murphy, Michelle 385
Murphy, Paul 385
Murray, Beth 243
Murray, Ian 182
Mycue, Edward 381
Myles, Eileen 130, 381, 385
Nelson, Cynthia 290
Nelson, Jason 337, 363
Nelson, Paul 290, 381, 383
Nickels, Thom 442
Nicole, Anna 448
Nielsen, Aldon L. 4, 214, 217, 253, 264, 405, 406, 408, 421, 462, 463
Nielsen, Lynn 408
Norton, John 273, 327, 385
Nowak, Mark 213, 338
O'Hara, Frank 5, 148, 296
Ochs, Larry 291, 297
Olds, Sharon 393, 397
Oliver, John 270
Olson, Charles 330, 354
Olson, Kirby 26, 57, 63, 117, 195
Ondaatje, Michael 291
Oppen, George 215, 426, 451
Osman, Jena 358, 442
Pacific, Asian 85, 95, 159, 179, 190, 204, 210, 383
Padgett, Ron 293
Pan, Peter 293
Parish, Jefferson 293
Pawlak, Mark 381
Peltier, Leonard 302, 303, 307
Perelman, Bob 266, 306, 358, 442
Perkins, Stephen 442
Perloff, Marjorie 16, 222, 266, 306, 393, 397
Phillip, Andrew 207, 215, 270, 359
Phillips, Beth 55, 189, 221, 442
Phillips, John 442
Phipps, Wanda 293
Pinsky, Robert 7, 137, 418, 430
Plimpton, George 51
Pound, Ezra 109, 133, 383
Powell, Ren 359
Prevallet, Kristin 293, 385, 409, 419
Price, Ron 11
Di Prima, Diane 372
Pritchett, Pat 12, 14, 109, 133, 208
Prus, Randy 394
Prynne, J. H. 301, 305, 327, 343
Purcell, Greg 369
Quartermain, Peter 222
Quasha, George 55, 368
Quinn, Alice 263, 442
Randall, Karen 360
Rasula, Jed 222
Rauschenberg, Robert 26, 57, 63, 117
Reich, Steve 316, 323
Reilly, Evelyn 159, 190, 210
Retallack, Joan 207
Revell, Donald 97
Rey, Rodrigo 383
Rhinesmith, Sharon 442
Rich, Adrienne 393, 397
Richards, Brian 30
Richards, Deborah 265
Richman, Jan 439
Ridge, Cedar 302
Riggs, Don 442
Riley, Peter 378
Rilke, Rainer Maria 103, 126, 153
Robbins, Bruce 359
Roberts, Gary 290, 359
Robertson, Lisa 270
Robinson, Elizabeth 448
Robinson, Jen 293, 375, 381, 448
Robinson, Kit 265
Rogers, Jennifer 137
Romero, Danny 442
Ronk, Martha 189, 221
Rosenthal, Chuck 51
Rothenberg, Jerry 453
Rothenberg, Susan 296
Rothschild, Douglas 293
Roy, Camille 441
Russakoff, Molly 442
Sanchez, Jorge 39, 198
Sanders, Jay 55, 359
Santos, Craig 301, 305, 343
Saroyan, William 356
Sarro, Mark 442
Savage, Tom 381
Scalapino, Leslie 26, 57, 117, 139
Scheffel, Bill 390
Schelling, Andrew 296
Schmidt, Paul 223
Schwartz, Jerry 165, 198
Schwitters, Kurt 383, 393, 397
Selby, Spencer 214, 337, 363
Shapiro, Gary 295
Sharma, Prageeta 293
Shaw, Lytle 43, 295, 381
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 296
Shepherd, Reginald 243
Sheppard, Robert 435
Sherry, James 427
Shoemaker, Steven 178
Shurin, Aaron 162
Sieburth, Richard 295
Simon, Greg 30, 183, 192, 469
Simone, Frank 130, 441, 442
Smith, Dale 394
Smith, Harry 41, 44, 68, 165, 192, 355, 465

Smith, Rod 337, 363
Smithson, Robert 24, 295
Snell, Roger 394
Solomon, Carl 419
Sorrentino, Christopher 243
Sorrentino, Joseph 442
Spahr, Boyd 213, 359
Sparrow, John 141, 150, 272, 381, 419
Spender, Stephen 383
Spicer, Jack 178
Stafford, William 21, 49
Stanley, Jared 359
Stanton, Rob 317
Starr, Heather 150, 272
Stecopoulos, Eleni 375
Stefans, Kim 358
Stehle, Bernard 442
Stein, Gertrude 197, 266, 306, 330, 354, 383, 413
Stevens, Wallace 215, 450
Stevenson, Matt 270
Stewart, Garrett 187, 223
Stewart, Jon 222, 338
Strand, Mark 137
Sweet, Erik 375
Swensen, Cole 243, 365, 443
Tardos, Anne 393, 397, 414
Tate, James 393, 397
Taylor, Cecil 226
Taylor, James 68
Tejada, Roberto 43, 198, 251, 340
Templeton, Fiona 255, 262, 275
Terry, Philip 182, 330, 354
Texas, Irving 51, 270, 273, 293, 326
Thatcher, Margaret 462
Thayler, Carl 394
Thomas, Dylan 270, 272, 363, 381, 406, 465
Thompson, George 140, 383
Toklas, Alice B. 383
Tomkins, Judith 442
Topp, Mike 381
Touchon, Cecil 55
Tribune, Chicago 383
Trussell, Philip 394
Tsur, Reuven 187, 223
Tuttle, Richard 296
Tzara, Tristan 198
Ulmer, Gregory 433
Vangelisti, Paul 189, 221
Ventura, Jesse 159, 190, 210
Vermont, Charlie 462
Vincent, Gregory 337, 363
Virgil 383
Virilio, Paul 138, 205
Vitale, Anna 442
Vitiello, Chris 357
Vogel, Aviva 46, 359
Waber, Dan 55, 339, 368
Wagner, Catherine 251
Wald, Diane 243, 394
Waldman, Anne 296, 330, 354
Waldman, Ken 296, 390
Waldrop, Rosemary 319
Waldrop, Rosmarie 107, 330, 354
Walker, Laura 442
Walker, Shawn 266, 306, 358
Wallace, Mark 26, 385
Wallace, Nicole 385
Warhol, Andy 293
Warnell, Ted 127
Warsh, Lewis 419
Washington, George 45, 137, 183, 188, 192, 302, 319, 324, 357, 359, 367, 383, 385
Wasserman, Ann 53, 198, 441
Waters, Jacqueline 375, 404, 448
Watten, Barry 26, 57, 117, 266, 306, 320, 358
Weinberger, Eliot 137
Weiner, Hannah 26, 57
Wellman, Don 3, 4, 231, 281, 309
Welsh, Lawrence 202
Whalen, Philip 77
Whitman, Walt 145, 203, 273, 307, 333
Wiener, Hannah 330, 354
Wilk, James 293
Williams, Paul O. 276, 356, 383
Williamson, Aaron 255, 262, 275
Williamson, Lindz 178
Willis, Elizabeth 441
Wilson, Karen 270, 417
Wilson, Warren 95
Windle, Susan 442
Winkfield, Trevor 174
Witt, Sam 243
Wojnarowicz, David 30
Wolff, Christian 316, 323
Woolf, Virginia 393, 397
Yau, John 393, 397, 419
Young, Kevin 243
Zauhar, Dave 305, 343
Zavialov, Maria L. 201, 271, 277, 298, 307, 376, 423

CONCEPTS

9/11 162, 198
Activism and protest 112, 137, 159, 190, 197, 210, 276, 290, 303, 367, 445
Aesthetics 21, 152, 182, 187, 191, 209, 222, 223, 281, 309, 335, 348, 445, 449, 469
African American poetry 281, 309
Anthologies 40, 45, 51, 89, 95, 148, 150, 181, 187, 209, 258, 272, 273, 285, 317, 318, 319, 330, 338, 354, 364, 384, 385, 393, 397, 409, 434, 440, 463
Appropriation 98, 108, 156, 359, 433

Archives and libraries 6, 16, 47, 50, 51, 54, 56, 67, 70, 78, 80, 85, 86, 91, 95, 98, 102, 108, 111, 143, 149, 161, 162, 178, 193, 202, 211, 213, 258, 335, 348, 356, 359, 383, 416, 419, 421, 434, 443
Autobiography 208, 280, 383, 402, 403, 439
Avant-garde 7, 64, 281, 309, 330, 354, 413, 422, 425, 453, 463
Beat generation 97
Beauty 23, 237, 278, 409, 435
Biography 165, 273, 389, 403, 409, 422
Book announcements 13, 63, 127, 132, 148, 149, 158, 197, 213, 243, 251, 272, 281, 296, 303, 309, 337, 338, 355, 358, 363, 385, 394, 407, 434
Bookstores 30, 51, 167, 243, 317, 338, 418, 430, 432
Calls for submissions 433, 435, 458
Capitalism 51, 62, 78, 85, 110, 131, 147, 151
Censorship 51, 383
Cities 51, 95, 111, 114, 137, 149, 190, 210, 232, 281, 290, 293, 309, 345, 346, 383, 417
Class 18, 102, 140, 143, 161, 177, 211, 212, 219, 231, 239, 276, 281, 309, 324, 334, 347, 352, 376, 410, 418, 423, 430, 432, 450, 456, 457
Collage and montage 147, 409, 412
Conferences and festivals 51, 92, 182, 207, 213, 228, 250, 266, 284, 291, 306, 341, 358, 359, 364, 391, 415, 417, 433, 440
Copyright and permissions 51, 136, 270, 288, 294, 307, 359, 383, 414, 416, 433
Craft 30, 55, 250, 390, 402
Creative writing pedagogy 359, 416
Deconstruction 139, 157, 427
Difficulty 21, 26, 136, 219, 273, 276, 284, 334, 352
Digital archives 187
Dreams 22, 23, 45, 95, 164, 243, 278, 288, 314, 373, 383, 398, 409, 427, 442
Ecology and ecopoetics 187, 188, 254, 390, 445
Editing 15, 51, 148, 165, 190, 210, 290, 293, 319, 338, 359, 365, 385, 417, 426
Electronic poetry and hypertext 51, 55, 98, 108, 127, 178, 182, 200, 228, 241, 257, 283, 330, 354, 433, 458
Elegy 301, 305, 343
Empire and imperialism 51, 100, 302, 414
Epic 434
Epistemology 26
Erasure 280
Ethics 114, 254, 445
Experimental poetry 26, 312, 415, 422, 445
Fascism 414
Feminism 138, 161, 205, 330, 354, 369, 445
Film 51, 124, 125, 131, 146, 151, 291, 293, 297, 356, 362, 383, 409, 435, 445
Formalism 207
Futurism 270, 389
Gender 26, 57, 63, 161, 201, 259, 271, 277, 280, 298, 304, 307, 322, 331, 333
Ghazal 148
Grants and funding 51, 95, 112, 135, 170, 173, 175, 178, 181, 186, 223, 227, 248, 258, 273, 292, 302, 383, 385, 393, 397, 417, 428, 442, 454, 459
Haiku 135, 170, 173, 175, 176, 178, 181, 185, 186, 285, 292, 317, 319, 415
Hermeneutics 152, 187, 191
Humour and satire 159, 190, 207, 210, 219, 225, 270, 276, 359, 383, 462
Identity politics 309
Ideology 73, 177, 212, 281, 309, 330, 347, 354, 380
Improvisation 53, 157, 207, 270
Indigenous and Native poetics 136, 196, 302, 303
Interviews 43, 51, 55, 180, 187, 197, 200, 217, 296, 339, 368, 369, 406, 457, 460
Israel and Palestine 178, 181, 197
Language poetry 26, 57, 58, 63, 117, 139, 402, 403, 412
Latino and Latin American poetry 39, 239, 307, 384
Letters and correspondence 132, 161, 291, 297, 303, 342, 405, 421, 426, 435
List moderation 178, 184, 280, 292, 358
Little magazines 11, 28, 30, 39, 40, 41, 44, 51, 53, 61, 68, 85, 89, 95, 102, 143, 148, 161, 165, 179, 197, 204, 208, 211, 212, 217, 254, 261, 272, 273, 283, 288, 293, 301, 305, 307, 326, 330, 338, 342, 343, 354, 359, 364, 369, 372, 375, 381, 383, 385, 417, 426, 440, 450
Lyric poetry 13, 22, 139, 261, 330, 354, 426, 442
Marxism 190, 210, 242, 347, 376, 410, 423, 432, 456, 457
Materiality of the text 93, 117, 118, 138, 140
Memory 95, 137, 157, 207, 284, 293, 363
MFA programs 40, 51, 95, 293, 390, 442
Modernism 126, 133, 270, 325, 413, 416, 422, 427
Mourning and loss 30, 31, 127, 182, 276, 303, 345, 346, 399, 420, 445
Multiculturalism 26, 57, 414
Music and poetry 30, 51, 75, 104, 146, 192, 213, 215, 217, 222, 225, 226, 245, 251, 270, 273, 284, 289, 291, 293, 297, 356, 359, 363, 383, 393, 397, 405, 408, 418, 421, 435, 462
Nationalism 383
Nature 46, 80, 95, 117, 135, 157, 175, 188, 222, 227, 280, 284, 302, 307, 339, 359, 402, 432, 433, 445

Negativity and refusal 330, 354, 402
New York School 148, 326, 413
Obituary and memorial 38, 225, 233, 383, 393, 397
Objectivism 325
Ontology 390
Oulipo 458
Performance and the poetry reading 39, 40, 95, 148, 150, 158, 208, 272, 273, 293, 312, 330, 347, 354, 364, 399, 420, 442, 446, 465
Phenomenology 187, 427, 461
Philosophy 130, 188, 254, 281, 309, 321, 326, 363, 445
Place and region 21, 49, 69, 188, 254, 284, 377, 379, 411, 416, 436, 450, 468
Poet laureate 137
Poetics 1, 7, 10, 17, 18, 21, 26, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 44, 46, 63, 68, 73, 78, 80, 106, 108, 117, 135, 149, 152, 175, 178, 179, 180, 182, 184, 185, 187, 190, 191, 196, 197, 204, 210, 212, 213, 222, 224, 226, 229, 231, 232, 237, 242, 244, 248, 253, 255, 258, 262, 264, 275, 281, 286, 288, 292, 295, 296, 297, 299, 309, 321, 323, 330, 338, 339, 344, 346, 354, 363, 364, 375, 380, 390, 391, 392, 394, 418, 425, 426, 427, 430, 431, 432, 445, 446, 447, 451, 453, 457, 465, 469
Politics and poetry 17
Post-structuralism 431
Postmodernism 325, 413, 422, 427
Print vs. digital 51, 67, 95, 103, 108, 126, 133, 153, 356, 359, 365, 378, 384, 405, 413, 421, 422, 433, 463
Prizes and awards 51, 95, 137, 148, 258, 273, 296, 325, 359, 385, 387, 393, 397, 415, 417
Prosody and meter 229
Queer poetics 148, 159, 190, 210, 242, 383, 384
Race and poetry 54, 67, 78, 80, 85, 98, 108, 143, 177, 183, 192, 211, 212, 213, 239, 242, 281, 302, 303, 309, 384, 469
Reading announcements 11, 16, 45, 95, 167, 197, 208, 214, 251, 293, 330, 354, 363, 409, 458, 464
Religion and the sacred 196, 223, 254, 255, 262, 264, 275, 281, 309, 316, 323, 359, 390, 445
Representation 26, 73, 182, 231, 347, 380
Reviewing and criticism 5, 10, 16, 17, 26, 39, 43, 51, 55, 58, 77, 95, 131, 151, 162, 165, 189, 197, 198, 207, 208, 213, 221, 261, 273, 294, 330, 337, 354, 355, 356, 359, 363, 364, 369, 371, 372, 375, 383, 385, 414, 416, 417, 442, 448
Science 46, 223, 359, 458
Semiotics 314
Small press publishing 5, 13, 25, 29, 34, 39, 45, 48, 53, 78, 82, 84, 85, 89, 95, 98, 101, 108, 131, 134, 151, 166, 197, 250, 251, 261, 293, 296, 328, 330, 337, 340, 354, 363, 382, 385, 394, 396, 409, 412, 415, 440, 470
Software and code 51, 98, 108, 314, 359, 458
Sonnet 385, 393, 397
Sound poetry 312, 412
Structuralism 431
Subjectivity 13, 128, 180, 213, 222, 247, 251, 281, 294, 309, 384, 433, 448
Sublime 188
Surrealism 16, 254, 281, 309, 356, 383
The academy 26, 31, 40, 45, 51, 95, 98, 106, 108, 123, 130, 137, 138, 149, 176, 188, 208, 213, 214, 222, 223, 234, 258, 261, 270, 273, 279, 280, 285, 294, 296, 317, 319, 324, 326, 330, 338, 344, 345, 346, 354, 356, 358, 359, 363, 364, 369, 372, 376, 383, 385, 390, 393, 397, 404, 410, 415, 416, 418, 419, 422, 423, 426, 430, 432, 433, 434, 444, 451, 456, 457
The body 17, 26, 57, 63, 77, 93, 117, 118, 138, 139, 140, 287, 359, 390, 402, 433
The canon 273, 280, 319
The Holocaust 293
The internet 6, 16, 18, 20, 39, 43, 47, 50, 51, 70, 78, 85, 86, 88, 91, 98, 102, 104, 108, 110, 111, 113, 114, 131, 135, 136, 138, 143, 144, 147, 149, 151, 154, 156, 161, 175, 177, 179, 193, 194, 196, 204, 211, 212, 218, 234, 237, 273, 318, 330, 335, 339, 348, 354, 355, 359, 362, 390, 415, 433, 442, 448
The listserv 7, 15, 16, 25, 32, 33, 35, 38, 42, 58, 62, 68, 88, 97, 106, 110, 129, 135, 145, 147, 171, 175, 176, 178, 179, 181, 183, 186, 192, 196, 204, 210, 212, 229, 231, 237, 248, 252, 258, 265, 285, 292, 294, 295, 299, 302, 317, 319, 326, 337, 341, 350, 351, 356, 360, 363, 364, 390, 405, 407, 413, 421, 431, 432, 433, 465, 469
Theatre 56, 107, 226, 273, 291, 296, 353, 356, 357, 359, 363, 369, 372
Torture and Abu Ghraib 128
Translation 16, 31, 38, 51, 97, 134, 137, 192, 197, 207, 215, 223, 261, 273, 294, 341, 345, 346, 356, 369, 383, 385, 407, 415
Vietnam 26, 57, 83, 117
Visual and concrete poetry 17, 114, 284, 312, 412, 414, 445
Visual art 30, 63, 74, 95, 112, 123, 150, 188, 196, 200, 234, 255, 262, 265, 272, 275, 281, 284, 293, 309, 363, 369, 372, 383, 387, 393, 397, 419, 421, 427, 440, 462, 465, 466

Women's writing 280, 385

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 470 in all.

28 OCT 1999

1. Wendy Kramer — samuel delany

29 OCT 1999

2. Lowther, John — Re: poetry audience/s
3. D Wellman — Re: Bye
4. D Wellman — Re: poetry audience/s
5. Kevin Killian — Donald M. Allen in San Francisco
6. miekal and — Re: poetry audience/s
7. Brian Lennon — Re: various stuff (reply to Alan Sondheim)
8. miekal and — Re: poetry audience/s
9. miekal and — STANCE/self-love
10. Jacques Debrot — Re: Atlanta Poetry Group
11. Poetry Project — next week at the Poetry Project
12. Pritchett,Patrick — obit for Alberti
13. Mary Burger — NEW BOOK: Lauren Gudath/Second Story Books
14. Chris Stroffolino — Re: Will Alexander
15. Chris Stroffolino — to post or not to post....
16. Catherine Daly — Re: Business, class, access OR Piggly Wiggly?
17. Thomas Bell — Re: various stuff
18. kathylou — Responses to Ellis
19. Joe Amato — think i'll follow alan's lead here...
20. Alan Sondheim — Re: poetry audience/s

30 OCT 1999

21. dan raphael — Regionalism isn't be-littling
22. miekal and — bybye eyeye
23. Alan Sondheim — ballet for foofwa d'imobilite
24. KENT JOHNSON — Poem #3
25. Brent Cunningham — Re: SPD & the New Angle Press book
26. Jacques Debrot — Re: Poetic Culture
27. Lowther, John — giveaway time
28. David Baratier — Re: Business, class, access
29. Jerrold Shiroma — Small Press Publications List Deadline
30. Alan Sondheim — New Observations #123

31 OCT 1999

31. david bromige — p'y audiences/// signing off pro tem
32. pete spence — Re: on sondheim, on raphael, on expression (OR, in defense of reading)
33. pete spence — Re: bye
34. dbkk — Tina Darragh & P. Inman

1 NOV 1999

35. Lowther, John — of late, apologia
36. Daniel Kane — David Mura on WriteNet
37. David Knoebel — Announcement: More Joy
38. Poetics List Administration — ach... / Dorow
39. Poetics List Administration — From a small Chicano press in San Diego / Calaca Press
40. Poetics List Administration — Poetry reading!! / Fouhy
41. Poetics List Administration — Boxkite-Naylor / Smith
42. Poetics List Administration — list stats
43. Poetry Project — new on the web site
44. Stephen Ellis — Re: Boxkite-Naylor / Smith

45. jocelyn saidenberg — Tina Darragh and P. Inman Reading at Small Press Traffic
46. Aviva V. Gabriel — Re: In Re Alan Sondheim
47. pete spence — Re: poetry audience/s
48. pete spence — Re: Tina Darragh & P. Inman
49. david bromige — Regionalism; Provincialism
50. Tony Green — Re: internet costs
51. Michael Neff — (ELAN #3) Electronic Literary Arts Newsletter
52. Betsy Andrews — Free Cuisinart
53. Jill Stengel — further "business" to attend to...
54. Tom Beckett — miekal and dobyns and etc.

2 NOV 1999

55. Jim Andrews — Claire Dinsmore and contributors to Cauldron & Net, this Sunday at Defib
56. Alan Sondheim — les noces (ballet text for foofwa d'imobilite, to be performed)
57. Nada Gordon — Re: Poetic Culture
58. Mark Prejsnar — Debrot vs. the confederation
59. Josh May — (no subject)
60. Lowther, John — giveaway time
