The question then becomes, if I want to produce something, how do I conceive of that? And I think I remain committed to the possibility of an "avant garde" not because avant garde art is unproblematic, or because one's existence as a producer of any kind is without ambivalence, but because it's my sense that the "production network" of the avant garde is the only public social environment, at this time, in which such questions are even raised. That is, the avant garde production environment holds out the POSSIBILITY of being a producer who is not deluded about production, that is, of being someone who has become not a producer only but more importantly a CREATOR (a term I'm using here in clearly polemical fashion).

mark wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] "I have not yet begun | |

to go to extremes" || GWU: | | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw || EPC: || http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace || _____|

↑ Index

568. Rod Smith

Re: Hoaxification

Sat 20 Jul 1996

As Yasusada's "debut" took place in _Aerial 6/7_ with an extremely well-informed, and very funny piece called "Renga and the New Sentence" I thought I'd weigh in on this again. First, I agree with Ron on many points-- whoever's doing it is a very good writer, who is I think aware of the complexities of what they're doing. I'm curious to see what this work in APR will be. Let them publish it, then have the hullabaloo. If it appears and becomes a "controversy" -- I'll be curious to see if APR handles it any better than the Sokal slather. When I published the piece in _Aerial_ I suspected it was fake, or more accurately, was almost sure it was fake. I think on close reading it becomes obvious. The only thing I regret somewhat is the fake Spicer footnote, which I take some responsibility for. I have to admit at the time I published it I thought whoever it was wld come forward sooner. The questions raised re subsuquent publications-- "cashing in" on Hiroshima _are_ very problematic. However, interestingly, many of those who attack Yasusada assume the writer is not Asian or Asian-American-- my guess is they're right, but we don't know that to be the case yet now do we? Maybe "Yasusada" is making a point about "author as construct"-- which is that it's _not_ accepted. Motivation is given primacy within interpretation, & if you don't have an identity to hang that motivation on? Interestingly "the lid" came off at Conjunctions when Harpers wanted to reprint some of the material-- the question of where to send the check. . . I don't know how that was resolved, I doubt anybody got paid anything, even a contributor's copy. One might argue that, as long as Yasusada's identity remains obscure, the gesture is truly purely _literary_. I'm not sure I'd make that argument, & it's all this not-sureness which is fascinating. One is challenged to read the work on its own terms-- which quickly, even more quickly than usual, become our own.

Rod

↑ Index

569. Emily Lloyd like a big pizza pie, that's Eudora...
Sat 20 Jul 1996

...quick note to say that I, too, had Eudora fall-out like Peter and others, so haven't seen mail from the list in a week--managed to download some garbled messages eventually, so Rob (Hardin)--I know you responded to my last post to you, but don't know what you said--backchannel me, maybe? yers in accidental aloofness, emily

↑ Index

570. Kathrine Varnes
Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget
Sat 20 Jul 1996

Mainly, I agree with what's been said on this thread, but I've known some art therapists who do wonderful work. What their clients produce may not be "art," but it is valuable. This is different, of course. Therapy as Art, as opposed to Art as Therapy. It operates under different rules, but I'm loathe to completely reject it.

So, what are the 7 seven deadly sins of suburban life anyway? Is this class anxiety, or what, that suburbs are so despised?

But back to Sexton and Plath. Yes, I'm tired of seeing these two names together. You'd think they were joined at the hip. Joining them like this means that one always has to come out on top, our binaried damsels in distress. Enough already. They both struggled. They both wrote.

Kathrine

↑ Index

571. maria damon
Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget
Sat 20 Jul 1996

---

trying again to post something written a few daze ago; my computer's acting funny; most of the discussion has by now covered most of what went thru my mind, esp luigi drake and dodie, but here're my 2 cents;;;

In message "maria damon" writes:
> i have difficulty with the concept of "victim art" as a problem. first of > all, it's a pejorative term coined by someone who refused to see a dance by a > well-known choreographer/dancer who is hiv positive and whose show explicitly > addressed this. so? aren't all registers of human experience reasonable > material for art? i think she just didn't want to deal with it; or that the > critical tools she had acquired thru writing and studying were not equipped > to handle the complexities of the situation, but she couldn't admit that, so > had to make it the art's problem rather than hers. i think it hard to > separate art from context, and am not sure what the point is; the phrase

> "the work should stand on its own" seems particularly empty to me. what about > something like the diary of anne frank, whose fame is very much due to the > circumstances under which it was produced? is there a problem with its > popularity?
> md
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

572. maria damon
Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget
Sat 20 Jul 1996

---

tom bell writes:
 effective therapy has
> never had any connection to personal revalation.

tom: can u say more abt this?

md

↑ Index

573. Judy Roitman
Re: Hoaxification
Sat 20 Jul 1996

Re: "author as construct"

One of Anne Carson's books has as its only biographical note "Anne Carson lives in Canada."

This attempt to deflect attention away from the usual biographical comforts was siezed by a reviewer in the Flash as a clue to hypothesize (not incorrectly, as it turns out) about her persona.

Can't win.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

574. Judy Roitman
Re: feelingth & hoaxification
Sat 20 Jul 1996

Th victim art strand and the Yasusada strand -- aren't they the same?

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

575. maria damon
Re: catching up
Sat 20 Jul 1996

---

hi guyzies: i'm recovering from a few days of enforced lurkerhood due to my inability to post messages. it was actually useful to be in th receiving-only position for a while, cuz i found that most of the points i was burning to make were made eventually, though of course w/ different nuances, agendas and conclusions than i may have arrived at. so if my posts seem after-the-fact redundant, that's why.

last night i was part of a "bob kaufman night" at the walker art center. the evening featured allan kornblum of coffee house press hand-pressing (or whatever the term is --hand printing?) a broadside of a kaufman poem, "no more jazz at alacatraz," which was offered free to audience and participants. (kornblum and i have settled our skirmish abt. cranial guitar without my having to bring a formal grievance, btw). i picked up a bunch, so ---if you want one, send me yr snail mail and i'll mail you one.. . first five folks to respond get um.

on plath/sexton: there's no doubt in my mind that plath is by far the superior poet. also, i think when both plath and sexton use nazi/holocaust imagery to express their own pain they are telling us how painful in fact life was for middle class women in the 50s and early 60s. i'm pretty into my jewishness and the horror of the holocaust and all that, but for some reason i don't find their appropriation of images of jewish suffering offensive; it just reminds me of the horror lurking under the plastic image of feminine "fulfillment" in the so-called age of prosperity, probably cuz i can see how destructive those gender expectations were to my older female relatives --my mother, my aunt, etc. however, i must admit to preferring sexton's poetry; i think i'm put off by plath's meanness, and also a sense i get from her of tremendous performance anxiety; she reviles "daddy" but will do anything, including being vicious to others, to get his approval...hard to substantiate, and as far as i know she was not a vicious person, but it's a subtext i pick up from the strenuous brilliance of her performances in verse...whereas sexton seems so desperate to be liked in her verse that i feel more invited to interact w/ it, it seems "warmer," whatever that means. at the same time, it really irked me when, as a teenager in the 1970s, i'd tell people i wrote poetry and they assumed my models were plath and sexton and that i was doomed to suicide, or wanted to be, or something--like, they couldn't see past my gender and my class..... it may be that, in general, i'm attracted to art that's not perhaps as technically "perfect" as other art, or as ambitious...for instance, as i wrote to bob von hallberg, i've never been that drawn to pound or eliot (though i prefer pound's aesthetic risk-taking over eliot), though they are the acknowledged masters of the modernist era. stein, it seems to me, completely sidesteps the issue of "perfection," which is why i find her so brilliant. i also often find i prefer "folk art" to "high art", and that i appreciate roughness and unfinishedness over the dazzling, polished tour de force (the one big exception being hawthorne's short stories, which leave me breathless)... anyway, blah blah blah. md

↑ Index

576. maria damon

Re: Hoaxification

Sat 20 Jul 1996

---

i'm with ron on this one.--md

↑ Index

577. Gabrielle Welford

Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget

Sat 20 Jul 1996

---

nNot to dis Rob Hardin here, but I think comparisons between pain hardly every are useful. Who can assess the pain of a small child in an abusive situation, wherever they are? gab.

↑ Index

578. Robert J Wilson
Yasu/Sada
Sat 20 Jul 1996

Re Ron's comments on the "Yasusada" effect in mags like Grand Street and APR, it is helpful to recall the devious page of acknowledgments that Jack Spicer affixed to the "Book of Magazine Verse": "None of the poems in this book have been published in magazines. The author wishes to acknowledge the rejection of poems herein by editors Denise Levertov of THE NATION and Henry Rago of POETRY (Chicago)." At the same time the books of magazine verse were being filled with (what Oppen called) "the Merwin" and "the Simpson" and so on, 'voice' a crafty crafted function of aesthetic/market consistency. So I take "Yasusada" to be a function of that same search for pained subjectivity, cum a glimmer of historical pathos and multicultural aura now that the market has shifted a bit, and a touch of Spicer thrown in for hip measure. By the way, as some Japanese allies here have advised me, "Yasusada" is not a Japanese name: "Yasu" is a name and "Sada" is a name but Yasusada is a hoax name, sort of like calling yourself "Sillimanwilson" and writing about Brass factories and your abjected Japanese aunt. Now Yasu/sada is a real poet, and he is a typesetter for Bamboo Ridge Press when he is not selling futures for Castle and Cook in a taro patch. Cynical reason rules at Grand Street, and I am trying not be cynical and morose about seeing Yasu/sada's face on the baseball-card-like cover of APR next month.

By the way, if you want to see one of the best, weirdest, and most disjunctive love lyrics ever written in USA, see "After the Pastoral, Driving With My Grandfather to the Place Where Scott Coles Died, the realities, an Aside for Rochelle" in Occident Vil 3 (spring/summer 1969) by "Ronald Silliman" who just at that point (as a kid as it were) was tossing off such poems in his sleep. I admired it then, and still do now, let the Yasu/sadas come and go like sneakers on the shelf life shelves. Regards, Rob Wilson

↑ Index

579. Nada Gordon
roughness
Sat 20 Jul 1996

maria damon wrote

> i'm attracted to art that's not perhaps as technically "perfect" as other art, or as ambitious...for instance, as i wrote to bob von hallberg, i've never been that drawn to pound or eliot (though i prefer pound's aesthetic risk-taking over eliot), though they are the acknowledged masters of the modernist era. stein, it seems to me, completely sidesteps the issue of

> "perfection," which is why i find her so brilliant. i also often find i prefer "folk art" to "high art", and that i appreciate roughness and unfinishedness over the dazzling, polished tour de force

Me too. I prefer sketches to paintings, a clunky ear to grand rhetorical flow, e.g. my students' unfinished utterances, their traces of grappling, sentences "ending" with "but..." -- even when such a rough or naive aesthetic is deliberate (as in tea bowls or Klee drawings). As Kokan (Japanese zen monk of the 14th century) wrote of his students' poems

> Their poems may be halting, uneven, doltish, and clumsy,
> and sometimes make no sense at all; but still, they are > often filled with a self-possessed purity and integrity
> that make me marvel.

(As quoted in David Pollack's The Fracture of Meaning)

Besides, words like "mastery" really get under my skin

↑ Index

580. Gabrielle Welford
Re: roughness
Sat 20 Jul 1996

Oh, I like this, yes. There's a discussion going on on the MLA grad students list at the moment about plagiarism--a lot of moralistic hohumming--and I do believe so much of that desire to cheat comes from never being valued for the clunky insights, instead the teacherly humanistic "try to better yourself, dear" before you even know who you are! Grrrr. I love to encourage my students to clunk while I clunk along with them. :-) gab.

On Sat, 20 Jul 1996, Nada Gordon wrote:

e.g. my students' unfinished utterances, their traces of grappling, > sentences "ending" with "but..." -- even when such a rough or naive > aesthetic is deliberate (as in tea bowls or Klee drawings). As Kokan > (Japanese zen monk of the 14th century) wrote of his students' poems
>
> Their poems may be halting, uneven, doltish, and clumsy,
> and sometimes make no sense at all; but still, they are > often filled with a self-possessed purity and integrity
> that make me marvel.
>
> (As quoted in David Pollack's The Fracture of Meaning)
>

> Besides, words like "mastery" really get under my skin
>

↑ Index

581. Charles Alexander
Re: roughness
Sun 21 Jul 1996

>maria damon wrote
>
>>i'm attracted to art that's not perhaps as technically >>"perfect" as other art, or as ambitious...for instance, as i wrote to bob von >>hallberg, i've never been that drawn to pound or eliot (though i prefer pound's >>aesthetic risk-taking over eliot), though they are the acknowledged masters of >>the modernist era. stein, it seems to me, completely sidesteps the issue of >>"perfection," which is why i find her so brilliant. i also often find i prefer
>>"folk art" to "high art", and that i appreciate roughness and unfinishedness >>over the dazzling, polished tour de force
>
>Me too. I prefer sketches to paintings, a clunky ear to grand rhetorical >flow, e.g. my students' unfinished utterances, their traces of grappling, >sentences "ending" with "but..." -- even when such a rough or naive >aesthetic is deliberate (as in tea bowls or Klee drawings). As Kokan >(Japanese zen monk of the 14th century) wrote of his students' poems
>
> Their poems may be halting, uneven, doltish, and clumsy,
> and sometimes make no sense at all; but still, they are > often filled with a self-possessed purity and integrity
> that make me marvel.
>
>(As quoted in David Pollack's The Fracture of Meaning)
>
>Besides, words like "mastery" really get under my skin

I do agree with Maria, but perhaps not so much with Nada -- just that I think sometimes it takes some fairly amazing "mastery" (forgive me) to make works which manage to maintain that roughness or immediacy which is so attractive. Living with a painter for more than a decade now, and one whose work does exhibit that sense of roughness, I find her work (& that of others who manage it) far more interesting than student work (although some students manage it, too) whose constructions seem so often to not quite know what they want to do. And I may not care that much for grand rhetorical flow, but I think the alternatives might include music like Thelonius Monk's, whose ear I would hardly call "clunky." But yes I do like work which includes its "traces of grappling."

charles

↑ Index

582. Nada Gordon
Re: Yasu/Sada
Sun 21 Jul 1996

Robert Wilson wrote

> By the way, as some Japanese allies here have advised me, "Yasusada" is not a Japanese name: "Yasu" is a name and "Sada" is a name but Yasusada is a hoax name

Yes. Sada is the name of the woman in "In the Realm of the Senses" who, um, dismembered her lover. The film is based on a true story.

↑ Index

583. Nada Gordon
Re: roughness
Sun 21 Jul 1996

In reply to Charles Alexander, who wrote

> I do agree with Maria, but perhaps not so much with Nada -- just that I think sometimes it takes some fairly amazing "mastery" (forgive me) to make works which manage to maintain that roughness or immediacy which is so attractive.

Well yeah, why do you think I mentioned tea bowls and Klee? Can't we just substitute "practice" for mastery?

> Living with a painter for more than a decade now, and one whose work does exhibit that sense of roughness, I find her work (& that of others who manage it) far more interesting than student work (although some students manage it, too) whose constructions seem so often to not quite know what they want to do.

So then for you "mastery" = intention? Hmm. Can we take a poll of listmembers to find out how many of us and how many of our constructions know quite precisely what we/they want to do?

I wasn't talking specifically about student attempts to make art, visual or verbal, but their maneuverings in a distinctly foreign language, a kind of flapping around in a linguistic twilight zone. Tony Green not so long ago posted some student "mistakes" ("logoparaphernalia") that I perceived as not merely funny but poetic too. Those students obviously didn't know the art value of their words -- mine don't either. Clark Lunberry wrote about this phenom in an article called "The Poetless Poem: Deviant English and the Para-Poetic" that appeared in the "Word" issue of Kyoto Journal #29, 1995. Pat Reed's beautiful chapbook on her experiences teaching Vietnamese and Laotian refugees is infused with her students' 'para-poetic' language.

The startling thing about such language is ... they do it by accident. And it takes a practiced reader to perceive it aesthetically.

Anyway for me the problems with the word, the concept, of mastery -- aside from the patriarchal/slaveowner overtones -- is the deadness and finality of it. Mastery means the end -- you get your black belt, you don't need to try anymore. Mastery obviates discovery. Recently I heard a poet referred to as "a master of language" and I shuddered at the image -- no more grappling, he'd won the wrestling match.

My students ask me sometimes, Nada, how can I master English? And I say you can't, but that's OK, no one can

(but there are an awful lot of things you can do to practice)

↑ Index

584. Carnography

Re: avant garde as production network

Sun 21 Jul 1996

Mark Wallace:

> Williams seems to be implying that if postmodern art really was what it should be, then normative capitalist production couldn't continue--therefore, postmodern art must in some way "support" capitalist production. In so saying, I think he misses the idea that postmodernist art can indeed critique capitalist relations of production PERFECTLY, and still not make a damn bit of large scale difference.
>
> Why? Because people who make art are not in charge. Should they be?--that's a problem for another day.

A "perfect" critique of normative capitalist production is not necessarily a perfect solution to the problems of normative capitalist production. Thus, it is questionable that the artist who is put "in charge" will be able to fix or replaced what s/he has successfully criticized.

Semiotics, which was supposed to be our Nietzschean bullshit decoder for linguistic systems of ideological propoganda, has only made advertisers ever more efficient. The problem was not that Barthes's criticism failed. It was that people used semiotics to encode as well as to decode. The ethical ramifications of Barthes's criticism were often ignored by the very people who were fascinated with his analytical methods.

The artist, forge a new career by running for office?
I'd settle for a society that was responsive to the conscience of the artist.

All the best,

Rob Hardin

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

585. Kevin Killian
Re: Loy readings
Sun 21 Jul 1996

At 10:16 AM 7/21/96, Maerra Yaffa Shreiber wrote:
>Carolyn Burke (Mina Loy's biographer) will be reading from Becoming >Modern around the Bay area
>during the next few weeks:

> A Clean Well Lighted Place, August 6, 7:30

This is Dodie. I've been looking forward to this event, even though readings at A Clean Well Lighted Place give me the creeps--the huge gap that is promoted between reader and audience, everybody feeling very elitist because they read books, etc. This is where I saw Linda Gray Sexton and Donald Spoto (twice).

For those of you who can't make this reading in SF, if you hold tight you'll get a second chance: Carolyn Burke will be speaking on Loy at Small Press Traffic in January.

↑ Index

586. Robert Drake
Re: roughness
Sun 21 Jul 1996

> ... Mastery means the end -- you get your black belt, you don't need to try anymore from my understanding of martial arts, nothing could be further from the truth... likewise, not at all how i understood ca's remarks. now, substitute "tenure" for "blackbelt", and i might know of examples that fit... but none of them wd qualify as "masters" in my book...

lbd

↑ Index

587. Maerra Yaffa Shreiber
Re: Loy readings
Sun 21 Jul 1996

Carolyn Burke (Mina Loy's biographer) will be reading from Becoming Modern around the Bay area
during the next few weeks:

> Printer's Inc.- Palo Alto, July 25- 7:30
> Barnes and Noble, Sacremento, August 5, 7:30
> A Clean Well Lighted Place, August 6, 7:30

She is eager to meet poetics folks....

Maeera Shreiber

↑ Index

588. Kevin Killian
A plea for Ginny
Sun 21 Jul 1996

This is Kevin Killian speaking. I know y'all are busy watching the Olympics and too busy to have yet read the new issue of Minneapolis' "James White Review," which features a new interview with Allen Ginsberg. The interviewers spoke to AG over a speakerphone and had more than the usual trouble transcribing the tapes afterwards, I thought I'd share a few good ones with you:

Who are the good poets of today?

AG: Eileen Myles, Sharon Mesmer, Bono (from U2) , Andy Clausen, and Ann Tyler.

[I have racked my brains to think who "Ann Tyler" could be, but Dodie figured out it must be "Antler," who AG has named for the last 25 years when asked for his favorite poets of today.]

Can you comment on other influences on the Beats?

AG: One of my mentors was William Carlos Williams. I also knew Ezra Pound. We had many connections with the daddies of the past. And the mommies, because when I worked back in the 50s, I sent books to Marianne Moore, and connected with a lot of the womenfolk that were not so well-known-like Marine Heidegger.

[Marine Heidegger, of Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin.]

Tell us a little about Naropa.

AG: West Coast poets Philip Whalen, Gary Snyder, Michael McClure, and Robert Duncan could come and cross paths with Paul Orlovski, Sid Corman, Creeley, John Ashbery, Kenneth Cope, Sharon Holmes and me. About a month ago we did a big, big benefit with Patti Smith and Annie Kay (her guitarist) in Hale Auditorium.

Why is the Beat Generation now of interest to younger people?

AG: The sexual, spiritual liberation, liberation of the word, and the private poetic candor, which actually got us in trouble with the law. We had to overcome the legal trials for 57 to 62, which liberated Henry Miller, Burroughs, Ginny, myself, and everyone like that. The word was liberated.

[Ginny: "Thief's Journal," "Our Lady of the Flowers," "Flowers by Ginny"]

AG: There was the association with the psychedelic world, as well as the whole Eastern meditative world; the old European surrealist world; and the old homemade Americanist Williams, Morrison and Heartly world.

[Context is everything and I believe that AG is referring to the homemade W.C. Williams/Marsden Hartley world.]

What kind of advice would you give to a young poet today just starting out?

AG: Recognize the vast consciousness you already have. Then, if possible, read a lot of Burroughs, Kerouac, Corso, Ginny, and Rimbaud. Maybe get that big book by Pierre Joris and Jerome Rothenberg of international writing. Poems for the Millenium, University of California Press. It's a big, thick, thousand-page book of world poetry.

[Pierre and Jerome, I hope you are including plenty of Ginny's work in Vol 2 of your anthology. Young poets must learn! Have a heart!]

↑ Index

589. Megana Camille Roy poetry & performance (plays)
Sun 21 Jul 1996

....Dean Taciuch thinks that what matters is "the language," and worries that actors would be concerned with the emotions and meanings. ...Tony Green worries about a "danger" in the kind of reading he supposes actors would do, and feels that "the poetry is damaged" by it.

In my experience (with poetic plays) there are problems working with conventionally trained actors. Their training doesn't match the task. They look for subtext, psychological underpinnings etc. I've found actors who can go with the text, the texture and word play etcetera but they're pretty rare. The problem is uncertainty. The actors look for certain responses for the audience and look in the play for ways to get those responses, which may be totally inappropriate to the play. The difficulty is that the confidence of the actors is undermined. The best person to address this is the director, but it's also hard to find directors who can really go with a "poetic play". There's not much interesting writing going on for theatre today and the split between playwrights in the theatre community and every other writing community makes finding the right actors/director harder. An alternative is not to use actors much, but artists and poets and others, as kevin killian does.

camille roy.

↑ Index

590. Charles Alexander
Re: roughness
Sun 21 Jul 1996

No, Nada, I wouldn't want to equate "mastery" with intention. And I don't much like the word either. And I think one can absolutely begin & proceed without quite knowing what one wants to do or where one wants to go -- and still have the final work come out with a surety which is there, and yet which may include, and even reveal, its traces of grapplings. In fact that's what much work I love does. So I think we're probably in agreement more than I realized -- and I thank you for setting me straight about what you mean.

thanks,

charles

↑ Index

591. Carnography
Re: pathos, nothing more than bathos
Sun 21 Jul 1996

Dodie:

> Rose argues that Plath's > references to the Holocaust, fascism, Rosenbergs, etc., aren't as > gratuituous as they seem.

Yes, but even though I worship the keyboard you type on, I can't just take your word for it: I'd have to read Rose's argument to know whether or not I agreed. But somehow, I doubt Rose's case is a strong one: Plath isn't citing historical stats about the women in Pakistan. She's talking about herself, her own history, her own psychology, and comparing her plight to that of the survivors of the holocaust. "Every woman adores a fascist?" Plath and the Jewish women of Dachau's Joy Division occupy two distinct levels of suffering. Many of us have experienced Plath's kind of suffering: mental illness, depression, a sense of political/emotional powerlessness and betrayal, that-gas-in-a-sealed-garage sense of anger helplessly directed inward. However, none of us has ever lived a concentration camp.

> "Every woman adores a fascist." Of course it's simplistic--and I'm sure Plath knew that in this sing-songy nursery rhyme poem. I think she's very much in control in this poem and is being in-your-face provocative.

Being in control of one's poetic technique is not the same as maintaining one's historical perspective. And being provocative isn't the same as being perceptive.

> Plath's hard for a lot of people to like because she's mean. I admire that about her.

I have no problem with Plath's meanness, when it is focussed and specific. Her anger at Ted Hughes was fine until she reinvented herself as Elektra and railed at the cosmos at large instead of him.

Plath walks a delicate tonal tightrope, as did many of the so-called confessional poets (Snodgrass, for example). Irony on one side, sentimentality on the other. Conscious anger here, intolerance and specious inductive reasoning there. Often, she succeeds. But nearly as often, she fails. "Daddy" is incantatory and effective. But that doesn't mean it is truthful or politically astute.

Also: Pop culture is littered with the corpses of privileged suicides who lashed out at the society that praised them. Kurt Cobain, too, could be "mean," like Plath. But a cruel tone is usually most effective, it seems to me, in humor and satire. At her best, Plath manages a balance of anger and grim wit. Her anger is given some degree of sophistication by her sense of irony.

Unfortunately, "Daddy" is campy in a way that Sylvia Plath never intended. Suicide poetry will always exemplify a certain campiness, no matter how earnest the practitioner. The best poets have grim fun with the role they've assumed.

> Sexton's the bored well-to-do housewife who drank too much and liked to screw around. Plath at least struggled in her life, financially and socially, had some real tragedy.

In this context--in the context of lasting craft--what do autobiographical details have to do with the quality of the poet's work? Plath brought up her own suburban life and made parallels to Nazi Germany. That was the only reason I mentioned her life in the burbs.

Yes, I, too, tended to prefer Plath to Sexton, initially. Prosodically--in terms of diction, word-music, formal intricacy--I still do. But a bit of perspective is always in order. Plath could be mannered and shrill. And Sexton was a far better technician at the beginning of her career than she was at the end. _To Bedlam and Part Way Back_ and _All My Pretty Ones_ contain many poems that are in an entirely different mode than Sexton's later work. There is less self-conscious lyricism and more description, as if the slow accretion of detail were a matter of amassed, localized identity. The tone is relatively restrained. I find the narrative range of Sexton's early poems more satisfying than Plath's earlier attempts.

And by the way, to whomever complained about it: Plath and Sexton are usually mentioned together because they were both confessional poets who studied with Lowell, came from the same aesthetic and political milieu, were contemporaries, knew each other, talked about suicide together, wrote about suicide obsessively, were troubled by mental problems, shared the iconography of the asylum, and eventually killed themselves. Yes, I'd say it is a great injustice that Plath and Sexton are ever mentioned together.

> As far as suburban goes, wasn't she > living in London when she wrote "Daddy?" Or maybe she was still in the > country with the bees?

How many Nazis brought their victims to London to take care of babies in semi-provincial neighborhoods? Hughes might be bad, but he ain't no Mengele.

Also: To say that a suburb is not a concentration camp is not to insult suburbia itself or to condemn suburban life. If "Daddy" is a tribute to suburbia, then I certainly won't be visiting my mother in Lake Oswego.

By the way: An attempt to assess Plath reasonably is not an attempt to dismiss her work. Poets, even lasting ones, are rarely perfect. If praise sounds qualified, judgment reserved, it is because I try to read poets fairly. Thoughtful criticism comes out of respect and not contempt.

All the best,

Rob Hardin

PS: to maria:

> i think when both plath and sexton use nazi/holocaust imagery to > express their own pain they are telling us how painful in fact life > was for middle class women in the 50s and early 60s.

That's exactly my point. The parallel is false and overly dramatic. Bosnian survivors have every reason to make such parallels. However, a relatively well-off, academically-ordained white-collar poet of the sixties is simply misrepresenting her condition, even trivializing her own pain, by making such a comparison.

PPS:

> Not to dis Rob Hardin here, but I think comparisons between pain hardly every are useful. Who can assess the pain of a small child in an abusive situation, wherever they are? gab.

Not to diss gab, but her analogy illustrates my point.

To compare the experience of a small relatively unabused child in a suburb (Plath) with a small child in a concentration camp is extremely useful. If the first child calls her captors Nazis, she is being accurate. If the second refers to her parents as Nazis, she is being hyperbolic.

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

592. Tony Green
philosophers & poets
Sun 21 Jul 1996

I've been thinking this weekend about Derrida and poets. It does not seem a bad thing for poetry to have to face a philosopher (for which read a "writer") who plays at capturing attention by 1)self-presentation with props = sheaf of papers to read at length 2)seemingly long and seemingly uninterruptable discourse Surely it is open to poets (for which read "writers") to respond by brazen interuption, by demonstrative headshakings and laughter and attempts to take over the platform/ audience situation.

If "poetry" means ONLY a tightly specific kind of writing, with no sense of poet-presentation, it will go down where it perhaps may belong in the present time. The competition from the "philosopher" should perhaps be a wake up call. Not an occasion for calling "foul".

best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

593. Tony Green
Re: Bad news
Sun 21 Jul 1996

---

that, George, wd be almost as good as a Larry Rivers Festival with a save-the-wolves organization

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

594. Dan Horne
Victim Art
Sun 21 Jul 1996

I've been following the thread on "victim art" with some interest, as I recently found myself in a situation where a nurse asked me to evaluate the poetry of one of her teenage patients who recently died of cancer. She wanted to know if I could recommend any of them to any editors I knew. It was an unenviable situation, since as a lay person I felt unqualified to judge, and secondly, such a task is inherently subjective. I was asked to weigh the very real emotional pain the writer was going through with a set up aesthetic criteria that, rightly or wrongly, I bought to the poems. In the end, I had to say to the nurse that the poems didn't align themselves with the ideologies of the journals I knew. The nurse wasn't to happy about that, and I felt even worse for saying so...

Regards

Dan Horne

↑ Index

595. Carnography
Pastiche for Charles
Sun 21 Jul 1996

This glyphic cyst,
Now sinuous cutworm etched in lead and lemon,
Would, if it were veined,
So drain the caves within these aphid hives
That the Heretical Manor of Hands would prove Vermiform steeple, and Adam Kadmon,
A skein of fistic hymnals
Whose dirge-pearl slivers raked my window-skin-- See, it gleams toward doors.

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

596. Henry Gould
My Vacation in Minnesota
Sun 21 Jul 1996

MY VACATION IN MINNESOTA

5th Grade
Mrs. Peterson, Home Room

Minnesota was very quiet and cool.

Up north in Minnesota there are a lot of pine trees and not people. There are loons that make weird calls at night across lakes from very far away. My Dad says there are bears but not to be scared they won't bother you if you don't bother their Moms and cubs.

My Mom had a paragraph written by a guy named Thoreau in the cabin. In his writing he said we were given life here on earth so we could live, and that was good enough for him. My Dad likes to make deals. He talked to 3 different guys plus a guy in Tower (where it was 75 below last January) just to buy a motor for his rowboat. Eveleth is where the Hockey Hall of Fame is. There is also the Thunderbird Iron Mine where there is a big hole and you can see a long ways almost to Canada.

My Dad will be 70 in 1997. He was too young for World War Two. He joined the Navy as soon as he could and sailed around Lake Superior. My Mom says "we are all God's children". She has white hair and is a a good camper, she makes pots too with clay. Every morning I took the Grumman down to the end of the bay. There are tamaracks there and no roads all the way to the arctic circle almost. The water was smooth. It was very, very quiet. There was a little bird called a White-Breasted Sparrow that makes a very clear-toned song so high clear sweet, penetrating not piercing, that carries so far through the solemn melancholy pines. Somewhere between Chet Baker and Morse Code. I just drifted there for a long time, the lake water licking the canoe. By Henry Gould

↑ Index

597. Julia Stein
Re: victim art
Mon 22 Jul 1996

>In message "maria damon" writes:
>> i have difficulty with the concept of "victim art" as a problem. first of >> all, it's a pejorative term coined by someone who refused to see a dance by a >> well-known choreographer/dancer who is hiv positive and whose show explicitly >> addressed this. so? aren't all registers of human experience reasonable >> material for art? i think she just didn't want to deal with it; or that the >> critical tools she had acquired thru writing and studying were not equipped
>> to handle the complexities of the situation, but she couldn't admit that, so

>> had to make it the art's problem rather than hers. i think it hard to >> separate art from context, and am not sure what the point is; the phrase
>> "the work should stand on its own" seems particularly empty to me. what about >> something like the diary of anne frank, whose fame is very much due to the >> circumstances under which it was produced? is there a problem with its >> popularity?
>> md
>>
Since Anne Frank's diary was mejntioned, I'd like to also refer to the Holocaust literature as part of "victim art."

> In dealing with "victim art" I'd recommend Lawrence Langer's book The Holocaust and the Literary Imagination. Langer analyzes poetry and novels of the literature of atrocity. He looks at works by both Jews and non-Jews, by those who survived the death camps and those who were not imprisoned or interned. A lot of the issues regarding "victim art" are also discussed by Langer.On page 1 Langer asks, 'How should art-how can art--represent the inexpressibly inhuman suffering of the victims, without doing an injustice to the suffering."

One of the poets Langer analyzes is Paul Celan who spent the war years in a camp in his native Romanian. Throughout his "years of alienation (and, presumably, incarceration) only one thing, Celan reports, remained attainable in the midst of other other casualities of war: language."
Langer quotes Celan on language saying that "It went on lviing and gave birth to no words to describe what had happened; bit it survived these events. Survived and came to light again, 'enriched' by it all."
>>
>>

↑ Index

598. Kevin Killian
Re: pathos, nothing more than bathos
Mon 22 Jul 1996

At 6:51 PM 7/21/96, Carnography wrote:
>Dodie:

Rob,

First of all I worship your website. Believe it or not, I'm tired of spewing out opinions, so this will be brief. But, I think that your emotional responses to the Holocaust are blinding you to the postmodern trope that nobody owns an experience. Plath has just as much right to it as anybody else.

Secondly, you're right--Plath's early work is stilted and weak. But so what?

Thirdly, I disagree with the whole notion that Plath is a confessional poet. Just because she took a workshop with Robert Lowell should she be punished for it the rest of her (after)life? Her "I", to me , is a performance and is conscious of itself as a performance--and it shifts from poem to poem, sometimes line to line. To me this is a different agenda than the confessional school's whatever (I won't make any value judgement here). "Ariel" a confessional poem?

Sexton's fairy tale poems (which I haven't read in like a dozen years) also in my foggy memory of them seem an attempt to stretch beyond the tunnel-blindness of confession.

Also, I agree with you about assessing a poet's work by his or her life, it sucks, and I won't ever hint at that again.

Dodie

↑ Index

599. Kevin Killian

Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer

Mon 22 Jul 1996

At 10:26 AM 7/22/96, Charles Alexander wrote:
>[T]here is a place and a value for this >so-called "victim art," it just may not be the value everyone on this list >wants to find in art. I originally was somewhat dismayed at this thread, in >that it seemed to want to posit stereotypes of sufferers who make art out of >their suffering, and on the other hand of artists who feel like they are >supposedto suffer in some specifically destructive ways. That seemed to me >to deny the specific nature of anyone who makes art out of any circumstance, >also seemed to want to lump all victims together, and I found that rather >insulting to large numbers of people who are really all different, despite >some shared social circumstances.

Charles,

Don't you think this broad stab at the Victim Discussion Thread is rather unfair, kind of passive-agressive even? Clearly you have certain comments by certain people in mind here. Your post makes it sound like the thread itself were this self-generating entity. Isn't it insulting to lump together all the discussors of Victim Art? Aren't they too really all different despite shared social circumstances?

I'm not contesting that you're a nice guy, Charles, but, again, I take issue with the notion that white middle class liberals have the right to decide what's insulting to other groups of people. I'm reminded of a scene I saw on the street here in San Francisco. There's this black guy with an artificial leg, who sits on the sidewalk, removes his artificial leg and stands it in front of him, then asks passersby for money. I was standing near him one day, waiting for a bus or something, so I had some time to observe. White folks walking by averted their eyes and looked like they were going to faint with guilt. Then a black woman approached, she pointed to the man's plastic leg, and exclaimed to her friend, "Look at that!" Then they proceeded to laugh heartily, like they hadn't seen anything that funny in ages.

Dodie

↑ Index

600. Akitoshi Nagahata

"Araki Yasusada"

Mon 22 Jul 1996

The name "Yasusada" is perfectly all right as the first name of a Japanese man--kind of oldish, though. "Araki" is also a common last name. I don't know if the "Yasusada project" is a hoax or not. Is he hailed as a tanka poet? I've never heard of him myself, but there must be thousands of tanka or haiku poets I've never heard of. Could someone post his (pseudo-)bio? I'm going to check a Who's Who. (Our library has none of the magazines referred to. A shame, indeed.)

Akitoshi Nagahata

[redacted]

↑ Index

601. Kevin Killian

Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer

Mon 22 Jul 1996

At 1:54 PM 7/22/96, henry gould wrote:
>On Mon, 22 Jul 1996 10:52:06 +0100 Dodie said:
>>
>>I'm not contesting that you're a nice guy, Charles, but, again, I take >>issue with the notion that white middle class liberals have the right to >>decide what's insulting to other groups of people.
>
>Dodie, doesn't this contradict your previous thread arguing for the postmodern >notion that "nobody owns an experience"? (A notion I find dubious myself.)

>- Henry Gould (card-carrying flesh muddle clash weirdo)

Why, Henry, maybe you're right.

db

↑ Index

602. Kevin Killian
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

At 1:54 PM 7/22/96, henry gould wrote:
>On Mon, 22 Jul 1996 10:52:06 +0100 Dodie said:
>>
>>I'm not contesting that you're a nice guy, Charles, but, again, I take >>issue with the notion that white middle class liberals have the right to >>decide what's insulting to other groups of people.
>
>Dodie, doesn't this contradict your previous thread arguing for the postmodern
>notion that "nobody owns an experience"? (A notion I find dubious myself.)
>- Henry Gould (card-carrying flesh muddle clash weirdo)

But, then, Henry, maybe you're wrong. I think there's a difference between using an experience in your work versus claiming to speak for someone else. My words here aren't very clear. Like in my work--if I steal a scene from Carrie, that's different than me claiming to speak for Carrie and her victimization. In the first instance I'm making some sort of personal response to one aspect of Carrie's plight. Incorporation (as in eating) as an act of love, you know, back to the oral phase. This is different than my acting like I have the right to speak for telekinetic abused teenagers. What if I took that a step further and tried to make you, Henry, feel guilty for your non-p.c. attitudes towards telekinetic abused teenagers--you wouldn't like that very much, would you Henry?

Dodie

↑ Index

603. Robert Drake
Re: poetry & performance (plays)
Mon 22 Jul 1996

>In my experience (with poetic plays) there are problems working with >conventionally trained actors. Their training doesn't match the task. They look >for subtext, psychological underpinnings etc. I've found actors who can go >with the text, the texture and word play etcetera but they're pretty rare. The >problem is uncertainty. The actors look for certain responses for the >audience and look in the play for ways to get those responses...

^^^^^^^

thanx camille, for finding that word for me... i'm reading "certain" as "sure" or "determined", tho i'm not sure that's what you meant... but ive been thinking about similar issues around slam poetry & other attempts to bring poetry to the popculture marketplace... fr all but the most accomplished slammers, the possibilites of uncertainty are sacrificed fr the immediate & certain "effect"--& those lost multiple possibilites are essentially all of what i'm drawn to in poetry. ov course, if the poetry & the performers (and the audience) are up to it, it's still possible; only that marketplace values push in the other (defined, packaged, known) direction...

lbd

↑ Index

604. maria damon
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

---

i have not been in this situation often but when i am i sometimes recommend not a literary mag or journal but one that deals, with, say, cancer, or children w/ diseases, etc, whatever is specific to the art at hand. there's a magazine for almost everything, including one for parents of kids w/ disabilities. the nurse cd write a short piece contextualizing the poems. i once was asked to evaluate an essay on sylvia plath's "daddy" as a poem about incest for an academic feminist journal. i thought the paper made a perfectly plausible reading of the poem, but it was written in a style not suitable to the venue. i suggested the journal of sexual violence. i also, like you, had mixed feelings; maybe that journal wd turn the essay down and say, try a feminist/literary journal. i do think there's a place for everything. aha --i've got it;i have a friend who's editing an anthology of writing of kids w/ disabilities. she may be interested. i'll backchannel you w/ info. bests, md

dan horne writes:
> I've been following the thread on "victim art" with some interest, as I > recently found myself in a situation where a nurse asked me to evaluate the > poetry of one of her teenage patients who recently died of cancer. She > wanted > to know if I could recommend any of them to any editors I knew. It was an > unenviable situation, since as a lay person I felt unqualified to judge, and > secondly, such a task is inherently subjective. I was asked to weigh the > very > real emotional pain the writer was going through with a set up aesthetic > criteria that, rightly or wrongly, I bought to the poems. In the end, I had > to say to the nurse that the poems didn't align themselves with the > ideologies > of the journals I knew. The nurse wasn't to happy about that, and I felt > even > worse for saying so...

>
> Regards
>
> Dan Horne

↑ Index

605. Kevin Killian
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

At 3:55 PM 7/22/96, henry wrote:

> Maybe I'm right AND wrong.

Ditto for me Henry. A truer thing was never said on this list.

Dodie

↑ Index

606. Carnography
Pastiche for Ted
Mon 22 Jul 1996

This limping gland,
now worm and cuticle of ornamental gasping wood, if it were,
(add ampersand & channel Robert Duncan if regular meter persists) so hint at dais, and chili, that drimping nibs would wash thin oaken harnesses dry of bean=E9d broth
so in me vase, Rent-Boy, lice might steam again

& thou trou be concupiscence-clammed

damn, Shmeeracles,

meet my holster ward: Hughes.

--Jean Cleats,
semi-neglected gimp,
on the Anniversary of the Birth of Our Master,
one Welt Pittman

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

607. Charles Alexander
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Thanks, Maria, for the reminder that there is a place and a value for this so-called "victim art," it just may not be the value everyone on this list wants to find in art. I originally was somewhat dismayed at this thread, in that it seemed to want to posit stereotypes of sufferers who make art out of their suffering, and on the other hand of artists who feel like they are supposedto suffer in some specifically destructive ways. That seemed to me to deny the specific nature of anyone who makes art out of any circumstance, also seemed to want to lump all victims together, and I found that rather insulting to large numbers of people who are really all different, despite some shared social circumstances. But now the conversation seems to be broadening in any number of ways, and I've enjoyed the comparisons of Plath & Sexton, & more.

charles

>i have not been in this situation often but when i am i sometimes recommend not >a literary mag or journal but one that deals, with, say, cancer, or children w/>diseases, etc, whatever is specific to the art at hand. there's a magazine for >almost everything, including one for parents of kids w/ disabilities. the nurse >cd write a short piece contextualizing the poems. i once was asked to evaluate >an essay on sylvia plath's "daddy" as a poem about incest for an academic >feminist journal. i thought the paper made a perfectly plausible reading of the >poem, but it was written in a style not suitable to the venue. i suggested the >journal of sexual violence. i also, like you, had mixed feelings; maybe that >journal wd turn the essay down and say, try a feminist/literary journal. i do >think there's a place for everything.
>aha --i've got it;i have a friend who's editing an anthology of writing of kids >w/ disabilities. she may be interested. i'll backchannel you w/ info.
>bests, md

↑ Index

608. Herb Levy
Re: Bad news
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Hi Maxine Chernoff,

Sorry I'm late getting back to your response on this topic.

One of the things that I found so depressing about the earlier discussion was that so many of us have recently been on funding juries and were unable to deal with issues of style because of trendy issues that funding agencies fund to be more important. My last experience on a panel in the Seattle area was particularly depressing 'cause it was for the only local source of money with virtually no strings attached (hotel/motel tax funds) but in numerous fields (not just literature, but music, dance, & visual arts too) MANY good people & organizations (working in modes that you describe as "aesthetic difference, complexity, depth, what have you,") just didn't bother to apply. Feh.

But back to the original topic, I think that actual DEPENDENCE on public grants is often a mistake. If an organization (&I'm not just thinking of presses here) can't get by on sales, admissions & donations from other sources, government grants ARE obviously a good source of added funds. But if the government is the primary source of funds, then the organization is probably producing far more work than it's audience can support. While the money may be good for a while, the overall glut of work isn't good in the long run for the audience, the artist, or the organization. & as we have seen over the last 30 years (not just the last five) of government funding for the arts in the US, this money is very fickle.

Especially when dealing with work that has a limited audience, it's better to produce fewer events, books, or whatever, and be able to keep going, than it is to produce more than the market can support and fall apart. In the long run a press or other organization that does fewer works per year which is able to survive, can do more than an organization that is forced to cut back or collapse if a non-audience-related source of support dries up. Organizations, large or small, which are responsive to an audience's needs & desires, even (perhaps, especially) a tiny, idiosyncratic audience like the one for experimental poetry, rather than the needs & desires of public funding sources, MAY be able to survive better without having to resort to "management by crisis."

I'm suggesting only that organizations be more careful in how they select work to present, NOT that they begin to present only stars to try to appeal to a mass audience.

As an aside, the local university book store's sale always has a ton of overstock New Directions books (this year including many things published as late as 1995!) for $3 or less, & you're of course right about Hesse & T Williams.

Bests

Herb

> Dear Herb, Dodie, etc.,
>
> Itis obviously thecase that nowhere in the arts as they are now funded by government grants is aesthetic difference, complexity, depth, what have you, taken as a serious value. Having recently served on several such panels, local and national, I was depressed but not surprised at how grossly evaluations were made ("This magazine has 12 women and 7 men-- the editors must be very progressive!" etc.). When New American Writing still lived in Chicago and used to apply for Illinois grants, people would ask in panel review, "Why do they publish John Ashbery? Is he so important?" (not to mention the rest of our contributors who were far less recognizable.) Anyway, we decided to come out once yearly and to never write grants again.
>
> As for presses that survive, they seem to somehow gain institutional credibility-- you mean you're not dead yet? Hey, let's give you a grant. But getting to that point is extremely painful. When we were still applying for grants, we were told to "build a board," etc. No one seemed to care about our publicatiuon itself in the money world.
>
> As for New Directions, it was Herman Hesse and Tennessee Williams that finally stabilized them and allowed them to grow.
>
> MaXINE cHERNOFF

Herb Levy

[redacted]

↑ Index

609. Herb Levy

Re: A plea for Ginny (& Alice)

Mon 22 Jul 1996

Kevin's post reminds me of the German (& only) bilingual edition of the complete "Radio Happenings," a transcription of conversations between John Cage & Morton Feldman, that was mentioned on poetics a few months ago. The transcriptions seem very good and for many individuals named in the talks brief identifying footnotes are provided, along the lines of "Jasper Johns, American painter" follwed by birth & death years. These are mostly useful, except when someone mentions the writer Alice James, who in the course of the discussion, is identified as something like "the sister of the James brothers."

The footnote for the James brothers gives the dates and occupations for Frank and Jesse James.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

610. T-Bone Prone
Re: philosophers & poets
Mon 22 Jul 1996

On Mon, 22 Jul 1996, Tony Green wrote:

> I've been thinking this weekend about Derrida and poets. It does not > seem a bad thing for poetry to have to face a philosopher (for which > read a "writer") who plays at capturing attention by > 1)self-presentation with props = sheaf of papers to read at length
> 2)seemingly long and seemingly uninterruptable discourse > Surely it is open to poets (for which read "writers") to respond by > brazen interuption, by demonstrative headshakings and laughter and > attempts to take over the platform/ audience situation.
You are complaining about reading, not "writing" or "writers". I think if you do not have the ears for the performance, in any setting, you ought to keep that information to yourself, letting others listen.

↑ Index

611. Mark Wallace
avant garde as production network
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Dear Rob Hardin:

Yes, I suppose I too would settle for a "society responsive to the conscience of the artist." Only seeing as how it would be the first time in history such a thing has been the case--since in Europe at least the history much more commonly, though by no means exclusively, is that of "artists speaking the conscience (AS IF) of their rulers"--it doesn't seem to me very likely. I don't get the impression that anyone can be trusted with anyone else's conscience more than a little perhaps here and there, and this unfortunately holds true for artists as well. It's hard to avoid feeling that no one's got the right to govern, or can be trusted to do it. This was of course THEORETICALLY the idea behind the formation of the U.S. government--various branches balancing each other because no one can be trusted to govern. Too bad everyone wasn't really allowed a piece of the action...

What we need, I guess, is a system that really balances everyone's LACK of a right to govern the conscience of others.

Only that doesn't seem very likely either, does it?

mark wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] "I have not yet begun | |
to go to extremes" | | GWU: |
| http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

612. william marsh
Re: Jorie Graham
Mon 22 Jul 1996

>What does anyone else think?
>
>Tristan
>
Back in grad school I was studying with Jorie's good friend Jane Miller who one day announced in class that Jorie Graham was touting her then most recent book _The End of Beauty_ as the "first post-modern book of poetry." I don't know if that's true or not, but after reading the book I decided it did have the slippery sheen of the carefully disjunctive, an "imported" radical flair (don't know how else to put it), so maybe the quote was allegorical.

Bill Marsh

↑ Index

613. henry gould
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

On Mon, 22 Jul 1996 10:52:06 +0100 Dodie said:
>
>I'm not contesting that you're a nice guy, Charles, but, again, I take >issue with the notion that white middle class liberals have the right to >decide what's insulting to other groups of people.

Dodie, doesn't this contradict your previous thread arguing for the postmodern notion that "nobody owns an experience"? (A notion I find dubious myself.) - Henry Gould (card-carrying flesh muddle clash weirdo)

↑ Index

614. Judy Roitman
Re: Jorie Graham
Mon 22 Jul 1996

> Jorie Graham was touting her then most > recent book _The End of Beauty_ as the "first post-modern book of poetry."

You've got to be kidding.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

615. David Baratier
Yasusada
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Ron,

On Thursday I was talking with Ethel Rackin, the managing editor at APR, and after hearing the reasoning behind the yasusada publication I have to state that the historical context was a part of the process. By this I do not mean to say that the "orientalism" dynamic that you mention was the context that established the work as worthy of print but rather a poetry that pre-dated French existentialism, Laccn, etcetera, with similar ideas. While I know from your essays that you have a definte interest in exposing the multi-cultural marketing of consience, if one believes the year of the work the historical context in and of itself establishes merit. The impression I received from Ethel, in so far as publication, was one of discovery, where yasusada was admired as a precursor, not published as a exploitation of a social narrative of guilt. I can say that the elaborate deception set up by Kent Johnson in Illinois was not merely a simplified "5 pieces in a SASE" like many would like to believe. There were contacts set-up in Japan, Illinois, at least one other state, & another country (I forget!) three translators (plus yasusada), who each had pages of biographical material, a sketch of yasusada, supplied by Johnson and many other intricacies involving permissions from yasusada's estate. Why stop publishing yasusada? Besides the ethical concerns of the sham, it reifies Greenblatt's New Historicism, through the decontextualization of time through subsequent historical revision of the work in relation to refashioned time zones. The two-flex mirror of the critic as a reflecting and deflecting construct of the moment they are writing within and the one they are writing about has it's continuity flawed-- actually, this shift is interesting-- I'm going to think about this a bit longer before I ram foot in mouth-- any ideas on the consequence appreciated-- As for whether APR would publish Spicer if he was alive, while it's speculative to make any assessment, I can mention that Bernstein, Seidman, Stroffolino and many others have recently graced its pages. Be well.

David Baratier

↑ Index

616. Gabrielle Welford

Re: pathos, nothing more than bathos

Mon 22 Jul 1996

But you see, you just did what I said you can't do, assess one child's pain in comparison with another's. I like what Dodie says about nobody owning experience. gab.

On Sun, 21 Jul 1996, Carnography wrote:

> Not to dis Rob Hardin here, but I think comparisons between pain hardly every are useful. Who can assess the pain of a small child in an abusive situation, wherever they are? gab.
>
> Not to diss gab, but her analogy illustrates my point.
>
> *To compare the experience of a small relatively unabused child in a suburb (Plath) with a small child in a concentration camp is extremely useful. If the first child calls her captors Nazis, she is being accurate. If the second refers to her parents as Nazis, she is being hyperbolic.*
>
> http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

617. Tony Green
Re: feelength, nothing more than feelength... try to forget
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Someone ought to check up on the context of Sylvia Plath's writing: especially the available options around Cambridge University in the mid 1950's, available especially in Delta and in other mags of the time, excavate the likes of Dickie Drain and co, that'd be amusing. As far as I can recall there were not many ways to go: Thom Gunn socialist verse was one; tomb and womb and doom another, which is probably where S.P. comes in; Ted Hughes at that time was after Lawrencian sounding allegories, in between fist fights with people on Saturday nights, so they used to say; I had friends who took Dylan Thomas seriously, as much as anything because the available modes were curiously unaware of how much they were largely overflows from sentimental prose. vaguely remember what S.P. looked like, seeing her in lecture-classes, but don't recall that I ever met her. But, I do know that that was a particular literary context with its ambitions set, as much as anything by available publication possibilities in London, e.g.John Lehmann's London Magazine. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

618. henry
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

On Mon, 22 Jul 1996 12:46:24 +0100 Dodie said:
>
>But, then, Henry, maybe you're wrong. I think there's a difference between >using an experience in your work versus claiming to speak for someone else.
>My words here aren't very clear. Like in my work--if I steal a scene from >Carrie, that's different than me claiming to speak for Carrie and her >victimization. In the first instance I'm making some sort of personal

Maybe I'm right AND wrong. That would be in line with the nebulous distinction you're pointing out. Is speaking FOR someone always an imposition? Sometimes an advocate is a lifesaving necessity. Both "scene-stealing" and advocacy are based on empathy (not a very p.c. trait these days).

> response to one aspect of Carrie's plight. Incorporation (as in eating) as > an act of love, you know, back to the oral phase. This is different than > my acting like I have the right to speak for telekinetic abused teenagers.
> What if I took that a step further and tried to make you, Henry, feel > guilty for your non-p.c. attitudes towards telekinetic abused teenagers--you wouldn't like that very much, would you Henry?

You seem to be stealing a scene I never played in the first place... - Henry

↑ Index

619. Tony Green
Re: roughness
Mon 22 Jul 1996

/For mastery!(gendered term) read, when appropriate, mistressly! as in M.A.= Mistress
of Arts. I'm surprised this has not yet been done.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

620. Charles Alexander
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

> Charles,
>
> Don't you think this broad stab at the Victim Discussion Thread is rather unfair, kind of passive-agressive even? Clearly you have certain comments by certain people in mind here. Your post makes it sound like the thread itself were this self-generating entity. Isn't it insulting to lump together all the discussors of Victim Art? Aren't they too really all different despite shared social circumstances?

Yes you're right, Dodie. I did have one particular comment in mind, but I decided not to post when it came up (& now I'm not sure I remember who posted it), probably for better reason than my less hesitant post you are responding to. And I certainly could have seconded Maria's comments without knocking anybody else. Guilty.

charles

↑ Index

621. Jonathan A Levin
Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget
Mon 22 Jul 1996

---

on Plath, Gunn, Cambridge, the 50s--a question, a footnote, and a response:

I wonder what you mean, Tony Green, by Gunn's "socialist verse" of (I guess) the 50s? Having just written 16,000 words on him, I'm not sure what you have in mind, but would like to know. Most of that early stuff is just about bikers and and other assorted types doing the existential errand thing, so far as I can tell. In any event, there's an excellent description by Donald Hall (in a 1989 issue of PN Review) of what Gunn's first appearances in Oxford were like, the "general flabbbergast" of his reading--"Oxford recoiled before stanzas militant, intransigent, tough, brainy, swashbuckling and violent." Gunn has an infamous nazi reference in a poem called The Beaters that appeared in The Sense of Movement (the 1957 book, Gunn's second, written during his first year in California, 1955/56) and that he removed from later editions and from the 1994 Collected Poems. Gunn is playing around in the poem with s/m, the "tools of perversity," etc., and has a "swastika-draped bed" in the second stanza. What's a little disturbing is that the beaters, here, really aren't very far from the usual bikers and soldiers of Gunn's first two books: "They know they shall resume pursuit, elsewhere, / Of what they would not hold to if they could." I guess Gunn was himself a little embarassed to look back on this.

A last thought, while I'm entering the thread: perhaps I'm just unwilling to be postmodern, but I don't see how one can live with the possibility that an experience is equally available to all. That's not a metaphor I could live by. I, for example, constantly find myself uable to "appropriate" certain "female experiences," for example: I play in a softball game with men and women, and am a moderately good player, so often "command respect" of others in the game. I don't, for example, usually get "poached"; I get a good batting spot; etc. Once, when a particulary self-confident third baseman poached a couple of balls from me at short, at one point nearly killing me (and screwing up a force out I would have easily had at third), a friend pointed out that now I "knew" what it was like to be a woman in the game. She's of course right--I had a taste of it--but in another sense, I'll never really know what it's like to be a woman in this game, because too many default assumptions are "always already" working in my favor. Alas. That's a trivial example, in the long run, but I think it gets the dynamic right: some experiences, despite their public dimension, will never belong to anyone but those who experience them, and it's misleading, I think, to think otherwise. Nasty deeds will unfortunately always be appropriated in ways that diminish, obfuscate, or erase their nastiness, and the best we can do is to insist on the historical specificity of those deeds and their consequences. We respond to the particular face of suffering (to echo Levinas, loosely)--we're not responding to anything in ourselves.

Best--

Jonathan Levin

↑ Index

622. Tony Green
Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Jonathan A Levin. Loose talk about Gunn. He'd gone by the time I arrived, but he had friends and supporters who I encountered and the impetus was to bring real working class images and values into the foreground, to oppose middle-class literary values. It obvioudsly did that in the figure invoked and in the versification. This -- at second hand --I took to be a rather programmatic social realism in verse. It, about that time, seemed to coincide with the "social realism" of several British painters, Jack Smith, Middleditch, who else? early John Bratby. It also resonates for me with Lucky Jim. However, you are clearly really close to the texts of then poems as I am not. The question was definitely being asked about the relations between class structures and expectations and universities and literature. And of course, in retrospect, it raises questions about the viability of varieties of poetics for social change. I would like to think it raised that question way back then too.

Does anyone close to the texts, as I am not, recognise this kind of questioning in Sylvia Plath?

latera , i uppose

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

623. Douglis Beck
Yasusada on the move...
Mon 22 Jul 1996

sorry that I've missed the whole of the _Yasusada_ controversy, but it seems there's some interesting things said in saturdays digest from Ron & Rod, who definitely act as a 1-2 punch on the subject. I would only add that such an issue would not be an issue if _Yasusada_ were merely a pseudonym, or other sort of mask. perhaps _Yasusada_ is accomplishing things for a particular poet or group of poets that they feel they themselves cannot express because of their own personal baggage; perhaps a poet has as a bio exactly that of yasusada but has not fully dealt with that in their publishing to date. thus it becomes an experimental preface/footnote to a certain poet's work. there are numerous examples we can all sit around & dream up. the point does indeed seem to be that, perhaps more than other _Hiroshima_ poets, the Yasusada controversy is generating a discussion. for now the talking is centered on how we should be concerned with the poet him/her/itself. hopefully everyone will realize that this too is a mask of sorts, & eventually deal with both our own reactions to the work itself & feelings about the atrocities sitting beneath both text&bio. if all this talk is merely fodder for email, then who cares, but if years from now people remember the _Yasusada_ controversy & more importantly, remember whether, why & where they were @ the time, then it seems the poet/poetry involved has indeed fulfilled (one of) the purpose of poetry: to affect ourSelves in some way, to alter our aspect of seeing things, to shew a difference. read now, deconstruct later. perhaps this will be sufficient.

douglis.

↑ Index

624. Tony Green
Re: roughness
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Thanks, Emily, for the Spinster of Arts note. It's interesting that someone has thought to do something about this. The majority of my students are women and it has seemed strange to persist with mastery and masters degrees. Is mastery or mistressery of texts and or of images as dubious from the point of view of sado-masochism as mastery and mistressery in relations between persons? best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

625. maria damon
Re: Victim Art: the girl w/ cancer
Mon 22 Jul 1996

---

gosh, this is so smart, i wish i'd thought to say it. --md

> At 3:55 PM 7/22/96, henry wrote:
>
> Maybe I'm right AND wrong.
>
> Ditto for me Henry. A truer thing was never said on this list.
>
> Dodie

↑ Index

626. Tony Green
Re: feelength, nothing more than feelength... try to forget
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Jonathan Levin, a line got left out shd have been something about "early John Bratby" and then went on to say "you are clearly closer to the texts than I am". Technical incompetence on my part, I bet. And by the way good luck with the softball, I really can say nothing whatever abt that, even tho New Zealand has just won the world Championship. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

627. Emily Lloyd
Re: roughness
Mon 22 Jul 1996

Don't know about mistresses of arts, Tony, but I know it's possible to get a Spinster of Arts degree (as opposed to a Bachelor) at New College USF...personally, not a fan of mistress or master, unless in Sade...emily

Tony Green wrote:
>
> /For mastery!(gendered term) read, when appropriate, > mistressly! as in M.A.= Mistress
> of Arts. I'm surprised this has not yet been done.

↑ Index

628. maria damon
Re: roughness
Mon 22 Jul 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> Thanks, Emily, for the Spinster of Arts note. It's interesting that > someone has thought to do something about this. The majority of my > students are women and it has seemed strange to persist with > mastery and masters degrees. Is mastery or mistressery of texts and > or of images as dubious from the point of view of sado-masochism as > mastery and mistressery in relations between persons? best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

i guess textual mistery is too old-fashioned, too evocative of mistress vendler and other dominatrixes ...?
md

↑ Index

629. Gabrielle Welford
Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget
Mon 22 Jul 1996

I'm going to risk talking again about the experience thing, in response to Jonathan, because perhaps what's important about Plath's move in associating her childhood (and others' childhoods) with existence in a concentration camp is not that it belittles the experience of concentration camp victims but that it raises the question (which I think very pertinent) of the experience of small children in bad news families. I want to say, "who are we to know what Plath's childhood felt like to her?" I cringe at the fingerpointing that says, oh she was just a dramatic female who was making use of historical horrors to aggrandize herself. I guess what it boils down to is that both myself and my sister have experienced our own childhoods in such a way that what we've read, seen, heard about concentration camps rings bells for us. I don't doubt that she chose an image that made sense to her. We underrate the terror of children all the time.

Also growing up in suburbia is no guarantee, believe me, of things being "nice." Just hidden.

gab.

↑ Index

630. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest on the interpretation of posts, or, Good Reasons To Lurk
Mon 22 Jul 1996

---

although i've posted some, i have been ambivalent from the start about posting on this list because so often the posts seem contentious and confrontational to a fault. but even more distressing, so often posts seem almost willfully misunderstood.

this brings me to the post in response to postings on victim art. i am not sure if the reply post was directed to me and my original post (jeez, a post on a post on a post. a goddess will strike me dead for this), but some of the posts seem to be depressingly off the mark in interpretation of what i said, meant, asked, hoped to bring into discussion -- i don't have quote feature used frequently so here is cut and paste (best i can do) of chax's particularly depressingly astray interpretation (if indeed he was referring to my posting):

" I originally was somewhat dismayed at this thread, in that it seemed to want to posit stereotypes of sufferers who make art out of their suffering, and on the other hand of artists who feel like they are supposedto suffer in some specifically destructive ways. That seemed to me to deny the specific nature of anyone who makes art out of any circumstance, also seemed to want to lump all victims together, and I found that rather insulting to large numbers of people who are really all different, despite some shared social circumstances."

i am not sure what you find problematic about positing a stereotype, if by "posit" you mean affirm the existence of. more to the point, i didn't "want to posit," i was bringing forth real actual meat people examples of a disturbing sterotype that is taking hold of the popular imagination, as stereotypes all too often do. the people embodying stereotype exist, the effect of the stereotype, the effect of the perceived stereotype, the effect of the perceived necessity for this stereotype (recognized and unrecognized as such), etc. all exist. why would the existence of this stereotype, as well as the recognition of the existence of this stereotype, the damage such stereotypes do, the perception of such stereotypes, "deny the specific nature of anyone who makes art out of any circumstance"? one of the specific circumstances people make art out of IS stereotypes as well as responses to stereotypes, responses to responses, etc.

if you recall, i made very careful note of both the stereotype as a stereotype, and as a problematic to art and suffering and the relationship between the two. in other words, i was speaking of the ACTUAL, REAL, MEAT PERSON existence of actual real suffering people who make art and often, make it out of suffering. in fact, as this comment seems to pass right over...

* i am one of those "people" who found themselves making art from personal suffering!***

how could that POSSIBLY "deny the specific nature of anyone who makes art out of any circumstance," much less "lump all the victims together" in an insulting way -- am i insulting myself? if i, as one of the "large numbers of people" (talk about lumping!) say i'm not feeling insulted by my comments about myself, can we then assume they weren't offensive to me and the others assumed as a lumpen mass to be rising up, insulted, or anyway being so described by one who has not placed himself in that group but rather, stands outside of it telling us all how we all feel? i mean, can i decide for myself what i feel is insulting to me, or do i have to wait for a proper literary male to tell me when i and others of my sort have been insulted?

nowhere in any of the posts did i say all the people who have suffered, or people who have "shared that social circumstance," are alike except insofar as we HAVE had an experience of suffering and have had it intertwine with our art. nowhere.

for heaven's sake, i made this posting, and was very CLEAR about making this posting BECAUSE as an artist, i am trying to sort out the way suffering and art interact (an issue concerning me a great deal right now) and i wanted to get other lister's particular experiences with that interaction. and as an editor and fellow artist and reader, i've seen the two interact to the detriment of the art all too often lately and i wanted to find out other lister's specific experiences with that. i've also felt pressure (almost crippling at times) to assess and affirm the artistic quality of a peice when, IF i evaluate as an art peice, i will be under fire for evaluating it as an art peice rather than just blindly affirming it because of the victimhood of the creator. and guess what -- i wanted to get other listers' particular experiences with that.

since i make all sorts of distinctions, explain the unresolved nature of my thinking on the matter, describe the tangles i perceive, and ask the list to work on untangling or further tangling or just think about the relationship of suffering and art, and i give my personal experience, as well as experience i've had with others, i hardly think i ought be accused of either wanting to "deny the specific nature of anyone who makes art out of any circumstance," or of wanting "to lump all victims together" -- if indeed chax's comments were directed to me.

of course i may be misreading chax (and possibly dodie), who may not have had me in mind in the least in their posts, thus meaning i am committing the very act that has my knickers in a twist here! (...who has that saying about becoming the thing we hate...?) and if so i am contrite and sorry.

but SHEESHSSHSHH, i made that posting to see how other artists and academics and literati handle the art that comes from suffering in the current storm of me-too victim writing. and NO i am NOT saying all art about victimization is me-too victim writing, i'm saying that there are a number of people out there touting works they claim are art about their claimed victimhood, requesting funding, support and publication for the works in high art venues with the claim that the works deserve such support BECAUSE they are high art, but when the "art" of the work is called into question, the victimhood gets invoked as the reason why the work is art and why the work should not be criticized.

i've said, and am still saying, that there is GREAT GREAT art about suffering. and work about suffering doesn't have to be really great art to be worth writing, or reading, certainly in many contexts. but work about suffering which claims to be great art and claims it is off limits to normal literary processes and critiques because of the suffering of the writer, well, i have a problem with that. and in part, i have a problem because as a writer who has and is writing about suffering, i am deathly afraid of falling into that hole and struggle with what i feel, sometimes, is a slide down the slope while at the same time feeling like it is important to be a witness when we've been called to witness something. i'm saying i don't know what to do, or how to sort out conflicting ideas i have about it and i was asking for more ideas, probably equally conflicting, because i'm a passive-aggressive subconscious masochist and did not feel i was suffering enough with o'hara-ian "quandriness," and i wanted others to suffer WITH me! 'nuff said?!

e

↑ Index

631. Thomas Bell

Re: feelingth, nothing more than feelingth... try to forget

Tue 23 Jul 1996

> tom bell writes:
> effective therapy has
> > never had any connection to personal revalation.
>
> tom: can u say more abt this?
>
> md
>
It's much like content vs. form. It's not what the trauma was, for example, but how it was (is) dealt with. The art of therapy is inchanging the way something is revealed (maladaptively to cratively, for example, or intellectually to emotionally) to resolve a problem. _What is revealed really doesn't mean a whole lot. _Effective_ treatment is a process that doesn't get stuck in the endless rut of pity. I can sned some references if you like.
tom

↑ Index

632. Craig Douglas Dworkin

Re: POETICS Digest - 21 Jul 1996 to 22 Jul 1996

Tue 23 Jul 1996

Greetings,

I'm sorry to make my first posting to this group a tedious technical question, but I've been working through Zukofsky's "A-8" and unlike the conic sections of "A-9," I can't quite figure out how the "r" and "n" sounds are deployed in the two relevant sections. I've read Ahearn and Quartermain, but neither go into specifics and my calculus is pretty rusty; has anyone actually worked out the math? In the final "Ballade," apparently, "the ratio of the accelerations of two sounds (r, n) is equal to the ratio of the accelerations of the co-ordinates (x, y) of a particle moving in a circular path for nine symmetrically located points on the path." I get the general idea ("revolution," "movement," "value," "mass" in both political and mathematic/kinetic terms), but what is really going on mathematically?

Many thanks,
--Craig

↑ Index

633. George Bowering
Re: Bad news
Tue 23 Jul 1996

How about a Silvia Plath festival organized by an organization dedicated to saving energy by switching to natural gas?

.....
"An occasional crow makes poetry more interesting but not prophetic."
--Carl Rakosi

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

634. George Bowering
Re: A plea for Ginny
Tue 23 Jul 1996

Kevin

Thank you so much for the quotations from the Midwest interview with Adam Ginsbert.

.....
"An occasional crow makes poetry more interesting but not prophetic."
--Carl Rakosi

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

635. John Geraets
Re: roughness
Tue 23 Jul 1996

I think that having been in Japan a while the notions of mastery, intention, roughness have lost some of their specificity for me.

The best book I've read this year was on the faces of three of my students. They told me they'd put on a "face poem" presentation, that's all I knew. Their friend'd brought a video camera to record it; another got up and turned on the tape of the Swedish (I think) electrobeat group so popular now amongst young Japanese. The three young women marched in--yes, marched--they had put on white t-shirts beforehand over their regular clothes, their faces had been decorated with make up and some script I couldn't make out as yet. They marched in, lined themselves behind the front table, then one at a time half-shouted half-sung

E N J O Y Y O U R N O W.

Then, of course, they laughed, I laughed, we all did. It was a great seven or eight seconds. Later, when we talked about it as a class--you'll understand, in the difficult English medium we share--they showed how they'd written on the cheeks of each in turn enjoy-your-now in mascara (eh??sp?); also, the first had written the kanji character for enjoy on her chin; the second nothing; the third in katakana (a further Japanese syllabry (?) used for introduced foreign words) now.

A few things got me. I enjoyed their sense of innovation, the fact that they'd capitalized on (inadvertent no doubt) such a classical english poetry theme, the tacticity, the unexpected slight twist of the expected conventional syntax, the joy (so different from my and my culture's sense of it, I think)...

Another group wanted to write a love poem, but found the going tough. So they culled odd lines and snippets from Shakespeare, Keats, and others gleaned from a collection of classical english poetry that they'd found in the library (and boy! are Japanese university libraries under-utilized!). Now that had a beautiful roughness, and all the charm of our confabulation with found objects, poems, whatever. Not quite satisfied, they built the poem into a brief dramatic script based on a Costner film 'Revenge' (as I recall). I mean...

Another group presented a story about a baby that a Sumo wrestler discovered one day in his clothes drawer and who as she grew up had her dream of becoming a supermodel in Italy almost thwarted because she was overfed on chunko...

Watching and being with my 4th-year English majors "creative writing" (eh?) class has been very interesting, not only because we're really having fun but also because for me at least it's opening up such notions as intentionality, mastery, roughness to their own limitedness. And limitedness in a positive sense, valuable in itself but also valuable in its denial.

↑ Index

636. Lisa Jarnot
new books/soho letter press
Wed 24 Jul 1996

Howdy you all,

Soho Letter Press has put out four new chapbooks under the Situations banner:

Situations #1: Lapsus Linguae by Marcella Durand, 16pp, $5. Durand's Lapsus Linguae is about how one of the cats is afraid of the stuffed rabbit. Lyrics in series that cross. Teeth in the mystery of public places & tonguing is ok. "This office & all the computers in it are God."

Situations #2: Thunk by Kevin Davies, 16pp, $3. Davies' Thunk is a mutating passage of prose blocks and short lyrics that move in and out of hilarious and nasty exhortation to revolve. "Quit naming the animals." You may not wear a mask but you may get ripped on Cary's secret stash.

Situations # 3: Western Love by Bill Luoma, 44pp, $5. Luoma's Western Love is a series of short lyrics spoken by cowboys, jack rabbits, and saloon girls. Images by Charles Buckley. "I want to crouch around your merry mack."

Situations #4: Sea Lyrics by Lisa Jarnot, 40pp, $5.
Jarnot's Sea Lyrics are set as a series of prose poems about Jack London Square, Alameda, and buying jam in the early morning. I am is the refrain.

They smart. As much music as you can handle. "I am a drag queen named Heather not quite ready for New York."

The Situations chapbook series is published by Joe Elliot. So make Checks out to Joe Elliot.

Send Orders to:
Soho Letter Press
71 Green Street
NYC 10012

phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

637. Thomas Bell
Re: comparative suffering
Wed 24 Jul 1996

"trauma" was defined by psychiatrists as "an event that is outside the range of usual human experience and that would be markedly distressing to almost anyone..."

I use this almost daily on insurance forms, etc. and still puzzle over its meaning.
tom

↑ Index

638. Carnography
Re: feelingth/holocaust
Wed 24 Jul 1996

> I guess you guys get an A.
>
> Dodie

What, are you nuts, darling? You get an A in this course:
All of us get A's for effort and C's for self-restraint.
Is there truly a person on this list who can read his/her own posts without sighing and thinking "why did I say that?"

Tapping his ruler on the edge of the desk with such precision that the rhythm of his report spells the word mastery
in morse code,

Rob Hardin

"We must take care to control our passions. Otherwise, madness and violence are the result."--John Wesley Hardin, distant relation

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

639. Gabrielle Welford
Re: comparative suffering
Wed 24 Jul 1996

being examined... hello to those other experiencers of hell on the list--my examiners. :-) gab.

↑ Index

640. Robert Drake
seattle in sept. (forwarded message)
Thu 25 Jul 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 24 Jul 1996 20:02:59 -0600
From: Frank Moore <[redacted]>
To: "J.A. Heriot" <[redacted]>
Cc: [redacted]
Subject: seattle in sept.

PRESS RELEASE

They have called him "art outlaw" (CHICAGO NEW READER), "obscene artist" (Sen. Jesse Helms], "transformative" (HIGH PERFORMANCE MAGAZINE). He has made a reputation for himself as a controversial performance artist and video maker. But it has been his poems, books, and essays about art, magic, and life...and his zine THE CHEROTIC (r)EVOLUTIONARY... which have inspired young radical artists and writers all over the world during the last 30 years and have made him the voice for many different alternative communities and forces of cultural change.

He is Frank Moore and he is coming to Seattle.

911 MEDIA ARTS will show his award-winning, intensely moving video Out of Isolation...a unique love story, on SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1996 at 8 p.m. Mr. Moore will be available after the screening for questions.

911 MEDIA ARTS is located at:
117 Yale Avenue North, Seattle
[redacted]

(Out of Isolation) "stayed in my mind far more persistently than I first expected, at least based on what the film-makers with millions of dollars at their disposal call 'production values' and 'professional polish'. What most of these high-priced pieces lack, of course, is substance and a genuinely different -- and deeply challenging -- point of view. Something to shake up, shatter, shame, inspire, perspire, ponder and play with long after the cassette gets rewound. Your films did that for me: they are definitely not easy to absorb, follow, or even 'enjoy' in the ordinary pop-culture sense. But you don't forget watching them, ever." Scott Lankford, Foothill College.

Then on SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1996 at 8 p.m. Moore will appear at PISTIL BOOKS & NEWS doing a free poetry reading, EROTIC REALITIES.

PISTIL BOOKS & NEWS is located at:
1013 E. Pike, Seattle
[redacted]

"If a zine could be a performance art piece, Cherotic is it. What a wild, crazy smorgasbord of mind-blowing sensory assault. And it's all tied together through the "shamanistic," erotic, electrified art of Frank Moore. In the future, when we look back at the 90s, wondering where the freaky culture came from, Cherotic and Moore will be a couple of its heros." Sticky Green, The Sinner's Bible

"Since 1980, Frank Moore has been creating and carving a niche of his own within a creative artistic and literary community at one time traditionally reserved for others. His journey of self-identification & self-discovery as unique statements are documented not only in his fine collection of revolutionary, subversive, anarchical, magical videos, books and 'zines but now he (and Linda Mac) have been very busy again, producing and marketing The Cherotic Revolutionary, "a 'zine (according to Frank) about 'The Edge' for and by people on The Edge...if not over The Edge." EIDOS magazine

--
In Freedom, Frank
http://users.lanminds.com/~fmoore

-------- End forwarded message --------

↑ Index

641. Carnography
Susan Walsh reported missing, 7/16/96
Thu 25 Jul 1996

---

§§§

Jersey, and was wearing a black, one-piece tank-top dress and black sandals. If you have any information about Walsh's whereabouts, please call [redacted].

§§§

100%.Prairie Lights Books in Iowa City, Iowa, had a ?substantial increase? in poetry sales, and they increased by ?at least 600%? for the UCLA Bookstore in Los Angeles, with $3500 in poetry sales in the first week of April alone.The academy report notes that the enthusiasm generated during the first National Poetry Month will get a boost when plans get under way for the second NPM in April ?97.

↑ Index

643. Gabrielle Welford

Schlafly letter (fwd)

Thu 25 Jul 1996

There's an address where Schlafly can be reached at the bottom. gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: 7/24/96 2:29 PM
From: Tim Stroshane
Forwarded mail received from:
CENTER1:CENTER2:TCPBRIDGE:CI:SMTPGATE:"[redacted]"

Here's something forwarded twice from a feminist economists' list to the progressive economists' list. It's quite an exhortation from the greatest of them all...

How can this woman sleep at night? Read on at your own peril, and not on a full stumach. 'sister rat' maggie coleman [redacted]

Forwarded message:
From: [redacted] (Eric W Swank)
To: [redacted] (Multiple recipients of list)
Date: 96-07-23 13:27:56 EDT

Listers,

Check this out. Also, Schlafly can be reached at the Eagle Forum's email address is at the bottom of this posting.

Eric Swank
Ohio State

Forwarded message:
> From [redacted] Mon Jul 22 19:52:40 1996
> Message-ID: <[redacted]>
> Date: Mon, 22 Jul 1996 14:07:32 -0400
> Reply-To: "Women's Studies List" <[redacted]>
> Sender: "Women's Studies List" <[redacted]>

> From: Jenny Thigpen <[redacted]>
> Subject: schlafly letter
> To: Multiple recipients of list WMST-L <[redacted]>
>
>
>
> Open Letter to VMI Alumni
>
>
>
> June 11, 1996 by Phyllis Schlafly
>
> This is an open letter to Virginia Military Institute Alumni.
>
> Dear Alumni:
>
> Your VMI training not only taught you to be tough, courageous > and honorable, but also to survive humiliation and harassment. You > are now facing your greatest challenge.
>
> You've lost a major battle. Are you going to be survivors, or > are you going to let the enemy wipe you and your kind from the face > of the earth, pour salt in the soil that produced you, and drop you > down the Memory Hole?
>
> The most important factor in any confrontation is the ancient > maxim "Know your enemy." I'm not sure you ever understood the > nature of your enemy.
>
> The massive government lawsuit against VMI wasn't about "ending > sex discrimination" or "allowing women to have access to the same > educational benefits that men have at VMI." It was a no-holds-barred > fight to feminize VMI waged by the radical feminists and their > cohorts in the Federal Government.
>
> The radical feminists just can't stand it that any institution > in America is permitted to motivate and train real men to manifest > the uniquely masculine attributes. Feminists want to gender-> neutralize all men so they can intimidate and control them. The > feminists' longtime, self-proclaimed goal is an androgynous society.
> Repudiating constitutional intent, history, tradition and human > nature, they seek to forbid us, in public or private life, to > recognize the differences between men and women.

>
> Feminist strategy is straightforward: whine that women are > victims of centuries of "oppression" and "stereotyping," lay a > guilt trip on men, and use all the stereotypical cultural techniques > that women have always used to wheedle what they want out of men.
> Then, use feminists on the public payroll in all three branches of > government to change the laws in order to force us to conform.
>
> Since feminists successfully got women admitted into the > military academies, and got the Clinton Administration to assign > women to military combat positions, VMI and the Citadel remained as > the most visible fortresses of the concept that men and women are > fundamentally different. The feminists hate you just because you > exist.
>
> The notion that a military institution that has functioned with > success, public acceptance, and significant prestige for 157 years, > suddenly, one day in June 1996, can be rationally said to violate the > Constitution is patently ridiculous. Black robes and Ruth Bader > Ginsburg's devious rhetoric about "scrutiny" can't make such judicial > arrogance any less ridiculous.
>
> The idea of setting up a VMI course for women at Mary Baldwin > College to save VMI from an adverse decision was a futile gesture, > and Ginsburg held this expensive effort up to ridicule as "invented > post hoc in response to litigation." You need to understand that > the lawsuit against VMI had nothing to do with securing opportunities > or benefits for women; it only had to do with destroying the > masculine integrity of VMI.
>
> Ginsburg's opinion asserted that "women's successful entry into > the federal military academies" proves that women can successfully > matriculate at VMI. That assumption is false because VMI's regimen > is very different from the military academies'. The VMI trial record > proved that women's so-called "successful" experience in the federal > military academies is based on quotas, dual standards, and gender > norming. Female cadets compete against other female cadets for > designated female slots, rather than competing against the men.
>
> The VMI decision was wholly predictable when Clinton appointed > Ruth Bader Ginsburg to the Court. Her activist determination to > write her radical feminist goals into the Constitution was all > laid out in her published writings, but no Senator questioned her > about them. Every Senator who voted for her confirmation shares in > the shame of this decision.

>
> VMI Alumni, your response to this Supreme Court defeat should > be to reject the state subsidy and embark on a national fundraising > drive to raise the money to keep VMI functioning exactly as it always > has. If the still-existing single-sex colleges, such as Wellesley and > Smith, can survive on private fundraising plus government student > loans, and if Hillsdale College can survive without any government > funds at all, there's no reason why VMI and the Citadel can't do > this, too.
>
> Don't make the mistake of changing VMI's unique lifestyle to > try to accommodate Sister Rats. The women who seek a military career > based on dual standards and gender norming can go to West Point, > Annapolis, or the Air Force Academy.
>
> VMI Alumni, if you allow Ginsburg et all to do to VMI what Pat > Schroeder et all have done to the United States Navy, you are not > the exemplars of manhood we thought you were. And that goes for > Citadel alumni, too.
>
>
> EAGLE FORUM -- [redacted]
> PO Box 618
> Alton, IL 62002
> Phone: [redacted]
> ---
> Tell a friend about us!
>
> http://www.eagleforum.org
>

NOTICE FOR JOURNALISTS AND RESEARCHERS: Please ask for written permission from all direct participants before quoting any material posted on FEMECON-L.

---------- RFC822 Header Follows ---------- by nak.berkeley.edu (8.7.3/8.6.10) with SMTP id OAA11430 for <[redacted]>; Wed, 24 Jul 1996 14:26:41 -0700 (PDT)
From: Tim Stroshane
<[redacted]>
(WordPerfect SMTP Gateway V3.1a 04/27/92)
MMDF-Warning: Parse error in original version of preceding line at ci.ci.berkeley.ca.us
To: [redacted]
MMDF-Warning: Parse error in original version of preceding line at ci.ci.berkeley.ca.us
Subject: Fwd: Schlafly letter
Date: Tue Jul 23 16:39:54 1996

↑ Index

644. Gabrielle Welford

English-only Update -- VI (fwd)

Thu 25 Jul 1996

Yuk. All call. gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
> Update on English-Only Legislation -- VI
>
> July 25, 1996
>
>A modified English-only bill, approved yesterday by the House >Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee, appears to be >on a legislative fast track. After months of inaction, H.R. 123
>(the "Language of Government Act") is suddenly a priority for >House Republican leaders. The measure is expected to come to a >vote late next week, before Congress leaves for its August >recess. With nearly 200 cosponsors and a clear display of >party discipline in committee, the English-only bill seems >likely to pass in the House, although Senate support remains >uncertain.
>
>If enacted, H.R. 123 would designate English as the official -- >and sole permissible -- language of U.S. government business, >with only a few exceptions. The use of other languages would be >permitted for purposes of national security, international trade >and diplomacy, public safety, and criminal proceedings.

>
>To mollify critics of the bill's restrictiveness, Rep. Randy >Cunningham (R-Calif.) proposed an amended version of H.R. 123 >that would also waive the English-only mandate in the case of >language education -- including programs funded under the >Bilingual Education Act and the Native American Languages Act -- >public health, census activities, and civil lawsuits brought by >the U.S. government. It would also exempt oral communications >with the public by federal employees, officials, and members of >Congress. Federal publications -- that is, virtually all written >materials -- in languages other than English would still be >banned. The House committee passed the Cunningham "substitute" >on a vote of 19 Republicans in favor and 17 Democrats against.
>
>The committee's day-long session was remarkable for its rancor >and partisanship, even by the standards of the 104th Congress.
>Democrats accused the Republican majority of desperately seeking >to exploit anti-immigrant feeling in an election year, even if >that meant violating constitutional principles of free speech >and equal rights. "What about people who think in another >language?" asked ranking Democrat Bill Clay (Mo.). "Would your >bill prohibit that?" Republicans labeled such attacks as >"demagogy," insisting they merely want to unite the country >through a common language and help newcomers learn English.
>
>Rep. Matthew Martinez (D-Calif.) argued that the bill would >deprive limited English speakers of essential rights and >services while doing nothing to address the acute shortage of >adult English classes in cities like New York and Los Angeles.
>(In the past two years, Congressional budget cutters have >substantially reduced federal support for such classes.) "The >idea that people who come to this country don't want to speak >English is the sickest thing I've ever heard," Martinez said, >accusing the bill's proponents of "promoting fear" of language >minorities. "I'm sorry that people on the other side of the >aisle are so insecure that they feel they need to do this," he >said.
>
>Cunningham responded to Martinez: "You want to keep people in >the barrio" by discouraging them from learning English. "We want >to empower them." Rep. Cass Ballenger (R-N.C.) added that "the >purpose of this bill isn't just to make people speak English;

>it's to help them reach the American dream." As a small business >owner, Ballenger said he had personally sponsored language >classes for his foreign-born employees. "My Vietnamese are the >best workers in the world because they can speak English," he >said.
>
>Citing the majority's refusal to discuss constitutional >objections or to justify any need for the legislation, Rep. Pat >Williams (D-Mont.) called the session "the most maddening debate >I've sat through in my 18 years in Congress." Rep. Chaka Fattah >(D-Pa.) observed that even though everyone was speaking English, >there was little communication taking place between the two >sides.
>
>Throughout the day the partisan split was consistent in votes on >several proposed amendments, with not a single defection from >either the Democratic or Republican side.
>
>The committee rejected an amendment by Del. Carlos Romero->Barcelo (D-P.R.) that would have allowed federal agencies to >communicate in other languages to promote government efficiency.
>Rep. Jan Meyers (R-Kans.) argued that such an exemption would >"totally gut the bill. What we're saying is that agencies must >communicate in English. ... If I was in China, I wouldn't expect >their government to print everything in my language."
>
>The lawmakers then approved a proposal by Rep. Lindsey Graham >(R-S.C.) to extend English-only restrictions to all >"publications, informational materials, income-tax forms, and >the contents of franked [i.e., Congressional and other U.S. >government] mail." Under questioning, Graham conceded that his >amendment would forbid virtually any written communication by a >federal agency in another language, including the tourist->oriented pamphlets of the National Park Service. Graham >insisted, however, that "common sense" would eliminate any need >to remove the slogan "E Pluribus Unum" from U.S. currency and >coins.
>
>Rep. Patsy Mink (D-Hi.) offered an amendment to keep the bill >from infringing the freedom of speech, due process, and equal >protection of the law. But Republicans objected to including >what Graham called a "laundry list" of constitutional rights.

>Instead, they inserted an assurance that H.R. 123 was not >intended to conflict with the U.S. Constitution.
>
>Finally, the committee rejected an English Plus substitute >proposed by Rep. Xavier Becerra (D-Calif.). It would have >removed the bill's restrictive features and advocated a policy >of encouraging the acquisition of English, plus other languages, >to promote international competitiveness and preserve cultural >resources. Before voting against the Becerra amendment, >Cunningham conceded that "we're fools if we don't learn other >languages in this country." But he insisted that language >restrictions are necessary because of "a propensity for more and >more Americans not to speak English" -- citing anecdotal >evidence from his own Congressional district in south San Diego.
>
>Until this week, H.R. 123 had appeared to be going nowhere. Its >chief sponsor, Rep. Bill Emerson (R-Mo.), recently died after a >long bout with cancer. House Speaker Newt Gingrich, a longtime >backer of English-only legislation, apparently decided the >measure could boost Republicans' prospects in the 1996 election.
>As recently as May, Committee chairman Bill Goodling (R-Pa.) had >assured the Joint National Committee for Languages that he >would block the bill from reaching the House floor. But Goodling >did an unexplained about-face yesterday, along with Rep. Steve >Gunderson (R-Wisc.) and other members of the majority side who >had expressed reservations about H.R. 123 during committee >hearings.
>
>In the Senate, Republicans have postponed three scheduled votes >on a companion measure, S. 356, where support is weaker than on >the House side of the Capitol. Meanwhile, the Justice and >Education departments have spoken out in opposition. But >President Clinton, who once signed a similar measure as governor >of Arkansas, has yet to commit himself publicly on federal >English-only legislation.
>
>
>Jim Crawford
>[redacted]
> Feel free to forward electronically or recirculate in print
>
>

↑ Index

645. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: indigestible?
Fri 26 Jul 1996

Last night's digest proved to be a repeat of the previous day --

Did non-digest recipients get anything yesterday?

Who will translate for Bob Dornan if the English only bill passes?

Tried to go to the Beatnik Bookstore in Boulder last week -- the proprietor didn't show up! seemed appropriate --

↑ Index

646. Pierre Joris
EMF GENERAL ALERT (fwd)
Fri 26 Jul 1996

Thot this message wld be of interest to a number of people on the list -- the Electronic Music Foundation is a great site & well worth checking out & supporting -- Pierre

========== Pierre Joris | "Form fascinates when one no longer has the force Dept. of English | to understand force from within itself. That SUNY Albany | is, to create." -- Jacques Derrida Albany NY 12222 | tel&fax:[redacted] | "Poetry is the promise of a language." email: | -- Friedrich Holderlin [redacted]|
==========

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 18 Jul 1996 11:59:46 -0500
From: Electronic Music Foundation <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: EMF GENERAL ALERT

EMF GENERAL ALERT
========== July 18, 1996

In brief, Electronic Music Foundation has just uploaded a completely new Web site, packed with interesting information and leads to magnificent music and related materials. The URL is

http://www.emf.org

This email message is being sent to you either because you've already asked to be on our list or because someone passed on your address in the belief that you'll be interested in what we have to say. If you would rather not receive future messages from us, simply let us know. If you've received this message from a friend and you'd like to hear from us directly, just tell us so in no uncertain terms.

Contents:

1. CDeMUSIC becomes a Magellan 3-star site!
2. An overview of our new Web site
3. An invitation to participate

==========
1. CDeMUSIC becomes a Magellan 3-star site!

We're very pleased to announce that Magellan has awarded our CDeMUSIC site a three-star status. Their review mentioned elegant design and the performance of an important function in making noncommercial CDs available.

http://magellan.mckinley.com/review.cgi?sid=63596

==========
2. An overview of our new Web site

It's not only a new site, it's a whole new ballgame. Our goal, remember, is to provide access to materials and dissemination of information regarding the history and current practice of electronic music. Well, here's some significant progress. For an overview, read a letter from the president.

http://www.emf.org/emf_letter.html

In the access to materials department, CDeMUSIC has reopened its doors in a big way and we're in process of a continuing extension of our CD catalogs. Our plans are to extend the scope of CDeMUSIC to include all forms of exceptional and experimental music, even if it doesn't use electronics.

http://www.emf.org/cde_frontdoor.html

Further, we've redefined the Inner Circle to offer people better guidance through the new music terrain.

http://www.emf.org/cde_circle.html

The EMF Store has begun operations with books by Barbara Golden, Iannis Xenakis, Reynold Weidenaar, and Trevor Wishart; a videotape on the theremin by Robert Moog; and M, the first interactive composing program, originally published by Intelligent Music. Not only books, videotapes, CD-ROMs, and other items that we think are important, we'll also offer historically important software.

http://www.emf.org/store_frontdoor.html

The Open Market continues to allow composers to present their work directly to the public.

http://www.emf.org/om_frontdoor.html

In the dissemination of information department, there's the EMF Worldwide Calendar where you'll soon be able to find the most interesting events in this most interesting of musical worlds.

http://www.emf.org/cal_frontdoor.html

Our guide to Web sites includes pointers to exceptional items (even if occasionally ephemeral) and ongoing important resources. And just in case you know what you're looking for, there's a real directory to the virtual world.

http://www.emf.org/sites_frontdoor.html

And if you prefer to look rather than listen, we've begun to put together a photo archive project. Our first group of photos is by Renee Moog. But more. Have a look also at Renee's photo group from Senegal, called "A Global Village." Navigate from the photo archives page.

http://www.emf.org/photo_frontdoor.html

==========

3. An invitation to participate

We invite you to send us calendar information, recommend web sites, and let us know if you have important photos. If you want to sell a CD or a tape or some other item, contact us.

And if you'd like to support our activities, we'd be grateful. We've extended the enrollment period for Charter Subscribers until September 15. But please don't wait. The current list of Charter Subscribers is distinguished not only by the excellence of the professional activity it represents but also by its generosity in helping us get started. We will recognize our Charter Subscribers forever.

http://www.emf.org/emf_csubs.html

We invite you to make a small investment, become a Charter Subscriber, and achieve virtual immortality.

==========

Electronic Music Foundation
116 North Lake Avenue
Albany NY 12206
USA

[redacted] Voice
[redacted] Fax

[redacted]
http://www.emf.org

##

==========
Electronic Music Foundation
116 N. Lake Ave.
Albany, NY 12206
USA

http://www.emf.org

[redacted] - voice
[redacted] - fax
[redacted] - email

↑ Index

647. Gwyn McVay
Re: English-only Update -- VI (fwd)
Fri 26 Jul 1996

Gab, this may be typical of our Zeitgeist, but it betrays a really twisted Weltan-schauung and a complete lack of savoir-faire, not to mention joie de vivre. ? Como no?

Gwyn

↑ Index

648. maria damon
Re: comparative suffering
Fri 26 Jul 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
discussion group writes:
> being examined... hello to those other experiencers of hell on the > list--my examiners. :-) gab.

good exam vibes coming your way...md

↑ Index

649. Pritchett,Pat
Re: indigestible?
Fri 26 Jul 1996

Dear Aldon,

Welcome to Boulder. Yes, the Beat Bookshop keeps, appropriately as you said, "odd hours." It's run by Tom Peters, who knows his books. Only last week I scored a first edition of Ronald Johnson's "Ark: The Foundation" (sic) on the cheap. Are you here for kicks, or is this a "career move?"

"Wake up new & strange displaced,

at home" (Ted Berrigan)

Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

From: Aldon L. Nielsen
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Re: indigestible?
Date: Friday, July 26, 1996 3:20AM

<<File Attachment: HEADERS.TXT>>

Last night's digest proved to be a repeat of the previous day --

Did non-digest recipients get anything yesterday?

Who will translate for Bob Dornan if the English only bill passes?

Tried to go to the Beatnik Bookstore in Boulder last week -- the proprietor didn't show up! seemed appropriate --

↑ Index

650. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: feelingth/holocaust
Fri 26 Jul 1996

---

re "Is there truly a person on this list who can read his/her own posts without sighing and thinking "why did i say that" -- you get that too? thank god. i thought i was the only one. e

↑ Index

651. Gabrielle Welford
Re: English-only Update -- VI (fwd)
Fri 26 Jul 1996

Claro que si! How can we comprendre each other s'il y a seulement one lingua? Newyddion drwg! gab.

On Fri, 26 Jul 1996, Gwyn McVay wrote:

> Gab, this may be typical of our Zeitgeist, but it betrays a really twisted Weltanschauung and a complete lack of savoir-faire, not to mention joie de vivre. ?Como no?
>
> Gwyn

↑ Index

652. Maria Damon
Re: feelingth/holocaust
Fri 26 Jul 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> re "Is there truly a person on this list who can read his/her > own posts without sighing and thinking "why did i say that"
> -- you get that too? thank god. i thought i was the only one.
> e

o geez--truer words were never typed.--md

↑ Index

653. Michael Leddy
Lacy and Creeley et al.
Fri 26 Jul 1996

I've been reading, not contributing. Okay, lurking. I'll show my face--

1. I've noticed discussion here and there of Steve Lacy's settings of poems. But I don't think anyone has mentioned that the title track of his fairly recent quartet recording _Revenue_ is presented as a portrait of Robert Creeley. Another piece on _Revenue_, "This Is It," is based on words by James Broughton (no vocal though).

2. The NY Times ran an obituary for Merrill Gilfillan this week, confusing the naturalist father (who died, at 85 or 86) with his son the poet. (I.e., the three books To Creature, Light Years, and River through Rivertown, along with others, were credited to the elder MG.) Does anyone know whatever became of MG the poet? Is he still writing? The Times said that he lives in Boulder. (I've found all three books here in "east-central Illinois.")

3. There was also a Times obituary for M. L. Rosenthal. (I remember looking at The Modern Poetic Sequence many years back and at some point realizing that the book did not include Louis Zukofsky.)

4. Finally, from last Sunday's Times Book Review, Richard Tillinghast on Seamus Heaney: "He has been and is here for good."

Michael Leddy / Charleston, IL

↑ Index

654. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: Jazz/Text alert
Sat 27 Jul 1996

Thanks for the tip on new Lacy --

Two additional CDs might be of interest to folk on the list --

Anthony Braxton's _Composition No. 173_ for four actors and 14 instrumentalists just released on Black Saint -- Not sure what I make of the dialogue in this "play," but the recording makes fascinating listening -- Things have come a long way since Hemphill's _Roi Boye_ -- The new Braxton was recorded in 94 in New York --

Not as new, but new to me, is Cecil Taylor's _Iwontunwonsi_, recorded at Sweet Basil way back in '86, but mastered in March of 95 -- Session begins with a Taylor poem -- CD Booklet alson includes a poem, in both English and Japanese versions! -- well, maybe the Japanese isn't a translation of the poem; how would I know -- to further confuse things, the end of the poem in the notes says "to be continued to SSCD-8066 -- Anybody seen that anywhere yet??

↑ Index

655. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: this crime to the writing fraternity (fwd)
Sat 27 Jul 1996

since one digest seems to have disappeared, I'm sending this through again.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Tue, 23 Jul 1996 22:17:45 -0700 (PDT)
From: Aldon L. Nielsen <[redacted]>
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>

Cc: Recipients of POETICS digests <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: this crime to the writing fraternity

Nobody has identified the segment I posted here from "A Critical Fable" -- to my very great surprise --

Several on the list guessed James Russell Lowell -- Alan noted that internal refs. made that unlikely -- several guessed a 20th century parody of Lowell -- but nobdoy guessed that the poem is by --

AMY LOWELL

By the way, On my copy of _The Complete Poetical Works_ the subtitle reads: "A Militant Crusader for the Cause of Modern Poetry"

but she never, in the entire volume, explains just what did cause modern poetry --

↑ Index

656. Thomas Bell
cancer poetry
Sat 27 Jul 1996

Some info in response to request last week:

Audre Lorde's _Cancer Journals_

Dreifuss-Katten lists 12 books of English and German poetry related to Cancer experiences (Dreifuss- Kattan, E. (1990). Cancer stories: Creativity and self-repair. Hillsdale, NJ: The Analytic Press). tom

↑ Index

657. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: cancer poetry
Sat 27 Jul 1996

---

one of the best books i read in 1990 was helene davis's _chemopoet_, poems written during and about experiencing breast cancer.
e

↑ Index

658. Bob Holman
Gloria Tropp
Sun 28 Jul 1996

In a message dated 96-07-15 00:14:45 EDT, you write:

<< Can anyone on this list give me any information about a poet named Gloria Tropp? She was active on the East Village scene in the arly sixties, and was then married to poet Stephen Tropp -- I'm particularly interested in tracking down any publications by this poet -- It's possible her name may have changed since that time --

For that matter, does anyone know Stephen Tropp?

Is Dick Higgins still on this list, who might have encountered them ? >>

Steve and Gloria Tropp, fascinating jazz poets, were around at the first readings I sawin New York in 1969. They were Beat fringe, and good buddies with the exquisite populist, Don Lev. Steve was a big white guy, a messenger, who read surreal jazz bursts hilariously from a red springback binder. Gloria, a beautiful black woman in a long gold fall, would scat behind and in front. My favorite Steve was an "ALice in Wonderland" poem; Gloria's outrageous "How Are Tings in Gloccamorra" was a universe-stopper. The most astonishing performance I saw them give was in 1977 when the NYC Poetyr Calendar had its first Benefit at the Basement Workshop. Gloria, who has a tendency to forsake time when she performs, was last, and turned the event from a Reading to an all-inclusive Performance, complete with umbrellas. Jim Brodey got wild.

Steve dies about ten years ago. Gloria still lives on Upper Riverside Drive, as far as I know, and still performs on occasion.

↑ Index

659. Tony Green
Re: cancer poetry
Sun 28 Jul 1996

Anyone in the U.S. read Wystan Curnow's Cancer Diary? That is a must...for one thing, right away from the personal-confessional mode. It asks among other things: "Is there humour in a tumour?"

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

660. Burt Kimmelman
Re: cancer poetry
Sun 28 Jul 1996

Paul Blackburn's The Journals has some harrowing and beautiful cancer poetry--very moving stuff; be warned.

↑ Index

661. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: dp
Mon 29 Jul 1996

New address and phone number as follows:

Aldon L. Nielsen
3055 30th St.
Apt. #2
Boulder, CO 80301

[redacted]

If you've sent material for _lower limit speech_, be patient. I hope to get the next number out early Sept., from Boulder.

and THANKS for the info. on Gloria Tropp. I'm hoping to get an address for her based on this --

↑ Index

662. Susan Schultz
Tinfish Net\work announcement
Mon 29 Jul 1996

Tinfish Net\work announces the publication of red flea's _virtual fleality_, the first in a series of chapbooks of poetry by writers from Hawai'i and the Pacific. red flea's work appears in _Tinfish_ #2 and #3. "red flea biography" reads:

> red flea says
> it's all the same > never ends
>
> he jumps the gun
> biting the hand > that feeds him
>
> han shan's poems carved > on rocks > and trees
> archilochus epigrams mere fragments > ishikawa takuboku's ears red with truth > bukowski's cup empty > echoing his laughter > incessant
> ratta tat tat

the dead lecturer rises from the dead

_don don don ka ra ka ka don don don ka ra ka ka ka_

and to all who dare enter waikiki babylon remembereth westlake and the dagger
in the hand of aloha

_the silent falling of the leaves of the trees is a whisper to the living_

The chapbook costs $3.50 and can be obtained from Tinfish Net\work at 1422A Dominis Street, Honolulu, HI 96822. It can also be ordered at [redacted]. In approximately one month the chapbook will be available with a cd of red flea reading his poetry to music (he calls it "amplified poetry"); price to be announced later.

↑ Index

663. FUNKHOUSER CHRISTOPH
cancer poetry
Mon 29 Jul 1996

Kamau Brathwaite's _The Zea Mexican Diary_ chronicles the six month period between the time he found out his wife of many years (who took care of nearly all the details of his life) was terminally ill, & when she died. It's one of the most emotionally wrenching books I've ever read.
Poetry & prose poetry done up in KB's "sycorax video style." University of Wisconsin Press, 1993.

cf

↑ Index

664. Robert Drake
Re: cancer poetry
Mon 29 Jul 1996

---

also, _Our Cancer Year_ by Harvey Pekar & Joyce Brabner...

lbd

↑ Index

665. Bob Gale
Line Break
Mon 29 Jul 1996

Does anyone here have an info about "Line Break," a poetry radio show produced out of Buffalo, and supposedly available for free to public radio stations across the country? I live in the land of MPR -- which means there's little chance we'll hear it hear -- but I'd like to learn more about this show and how it was/is put together.

Thanks in advance.

Peace,
Bob

\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

666. Bob Gale
spoken word recordings
Mon 29 Jul 1996

I'm working on creating a discography of commercially available spoken word (all styles) recordings for use by a monthly review column that appears in Shout! But been having trouble track down material (it's not like many record stores carry poetry). I've noticed a few recent posts that mention some jazz/text pieces, and if anyone else has any recommendations I'd love to hear them. Referals to any supportive labels, or existing discographies, also appreciated.

Peace,
Bob

\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

667. John Geraets
Re: cancer poetry
Mon 29 Jul 1996

Folks should also check out Wystan Curnow's _Cancer Daybook_ (1989), another set of poems involving cancer treatment & experience.

↑ Index

668. Pritchett,Pat
Re: spoken word recordings
Mon 29 Jul 1996

Bob,

This may be of help, or maybe you already know about it. Lindsay Hill has produced several poetry/music CDs featuring Nathaniel Tarn and Nathaniel Mackey. I don't know any details beyond that, but I could get his address for you if you need it.

Also, Jack Collom and musician Ken Bernstein have just released a poetry CD called "Calluses of Poetry." Can't recall label, but again, could get details if so desired.

Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

From: Bob Gale
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: spoken word recordings
Date: Monday, July 29, 1996 10:56AM

<<File Attachment: HEADERS.TXT>>

I'm working on creating a discography of commercially available spoken word (all styles) recordings for use by a monthly review column that appears in Shout! But been having trouble track down material (it's not like many record stores carry poetry). I've noticed a few recent posts that mention some jazz/text pieces, and if anyone else has any recommendations I'd love to hear them. Referals to any supportive labels, or existing discographies, also appreciated.

Peace,
Bob

\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

669. Robert Drake
Re: spoken word recordings
Mon 29 Jul 1996

---

a good place to check, online, would be Fourtner Anderson's Brazen Oralities, at http://www.infobahnos.com/~brazen/ . much current work, including hard-to-find cassette & much wonderful canadian content...

lbd

↑ Index

670. maria damon
Re: spoken word recordings
Mon 29 Jul 1996

---

bob holman ([redacted]) shd be able to help a lot, w/ the mouth almighty project and all. my guess is that there's more stuff out there than you can shake a lamb's tail at. bests, maria d

In message <v01540b01ae228a49942a@[204.73.77.101]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> I'm working on creating a discography of commercially available spoken word > (all styles) recordings for use by a monthly review column that appears in > Shout! But been having trouble track down material (it's not like many > record stores carry poetry). I've noticed a few recent posts that mention > some jazz/text pieces, and if anyone else has any recommendations I'd love > to hear them. Referals to any supportive labels, or existing discographies, > also appreciated.
>
> Peace,
> Bob
>
> \\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\
> \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\
> \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\
> \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

671. David Baratier
Re: Spoken Word recordings
Mon 29 Jul 1996

Steven Taylor has a CD which just came out

↑ Index

672. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: spoken word recordings
Mon 29 Jul 1996

---

there is an extraordinary bookstore in the boston area called The Grolier, Poetry Bookshop, [redacted], o 1-800-234-poem. 6 plympton street, cambridge, ma 02138. the bookstore carries ONLY poetry, and some (not much) text about poetry. she has a huge selection of tapes, and is very good at hunting things down. she takes orders from everywhere and ships things. proprieter's name is louisa (blanking on last name) and she is VERY helpful. she actually READS what she sells, and is great at figuring out "who was it who wrote that poem about the rabbit on the rug in front of the fire" kinds of questions. e

↑ Index

673. maria damon
Re: spoken word recordings
Mon 29 Jul 1996

---

eliza writes:
> there is an extraordinary bookstore in the boston area called The Grolier, > Poetry Bookshop, [redacted], o 1-800-234-poem. 6 plympton street, > cambridge, ma 02138. the bookstore carries ONLY poetry, and some (not > much) text about poetry. she has a huge selection of tapes, and is very > good at hunting things down. she takes orders from everywhere and ships > things. proprieter's name is louisa (blanking on last name) and she is > VERY helpful. she actually READS what she sells, and is great at figuring > out "who was it who wrote that poem about the rabbit on the rug in front > of the fire" kinds of questions.
> e

it's louisa solano; she's great. get her talking about john wieners. or anyone. she says great thing about our own kathryne lindberg ("going to dinner w/ her was like taking a graduate seminar" meaning that it was exhilerating). md

↑ Index

674. maria damon
bargain books, mpls
Mon 29 Jul 1996

---

to those in the twin cities area: Banks, a huge discount store that specializes in buying up entire stocks of places that have gone under, etc, has a bunch of excellent books at half price. i got Real: the letters of mina harker and sam d'allesandro, creativity/anthropology, feminist measures, poetry by thylias moss, patricia smith and dana bryant, as well as some anthologies of caribbean, chinese-american, "chicago saloon" etc., poetry. passed on wm bronk, robt. kelly, keats, wanda coleman (i'd paid full price abt 2 months ago), some goodlooking routledge specials, comparative youth cultures, etc. quel find! plus washcloths and hooks for my closet doors at a fraction of normal. maria d

↑ Index

675. Bob Holman
Amygism
Mon 29 Jul 1996

For me, Amy's battles against Pound was plenty good enough to lay claim to Militant Crusader for Modern Poetry. Christ, what are patterns for!

↑ Index

676. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: spoken word
Tue 30 Jul 1996

Has anyone out there ever laid eyes on a recording of four Cleveland area poets (ca late 60s early 70s) that includes selections by Russell Atkins? I've been trying to find this for three years now -- Atkins himself does not have a copy -- can't find it in the usual discographies --

Have seen printed ref. to it at least three times, so I'm reasonably certain it's not a phantom entry --

↑ Index

677. Bob Gale
(no subject)
Tue 30 Jul 1996

> Date: Mon, 29 Jul 1996 13:51:28 CST
> From: David Baratier <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Spoken Word recordings
>
> Steven Taylor has a CD which just came out

Do you have a label or contact info on that?

Thanks,
Bob

\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

678. Sylvester Pollet
cancer poems
Tue 30 Jul 1996

Don't miss Ramon Guthrie's long heroic last shot, Maximum Security Ward. Easiest to find in the Persea edition MSW & Other Poems, ed. Sally M. Gall, NY 1984. Sylvester Pollet

↑ Index

679. JOEL LEWIS
melvin tolson
Tue 30 Jul 1996

i found copies of Melvin Tolson's Harlem Gallery & Gallery of harlem Portraits in a used bookstore in the Berkshires. I understand he was a controversial figure in his time -- apparently he was the lone black high modernist. Is anyone doing work on him? what is the take on his work these days? Odd that Tolson in publishing Harlem Gallery in '65 was taking on an High Modernist project that was being abandonned by many of its disciples.

Joel Lewis

↑ Index

680. Douglis Beck
Re: POETICS Digest - 28 Jul 1996 to 29 Jul 1996
Tue 30 Jul 1996

maria--
what bronk did you stumble over @ banks?
& do you have their # so I can call for it?
douglis.

↑ Index

681. maria damon
Re: POETICS Digest - 28 Jul 1996 to 29 Jul 1996
Tue 30 Jul 1996

i cant remember title, it was a "slim volume" w/ glossy cover, a two-word title i believe, talisman house press. i'll give u Banks's phone # but i shd warn you they're a huge place, not a bookstore, just a close-out discount store; specify that it's in the 2nd floor book room, on the poetry table [redacted]. good luck. apparently they had stuff like ginsberg's snapshot poetics hardcover dirt cheap

when they first got the shipment --i'm getting the leftovers, which is good, cuz it's esoterica that folks like us dig... bests, maria d

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> maria--
> what bronk did you stumble over @ banks?
> & do you have their # so I can call for it?
> douglis.

↑ Index

682. maria damon
Re: conference fwd
Tue 30 Jul 1996

From: Center for Advanced Feminist Studies <[redacted]> Date: Tue, 30 Jul 1996 16:58:15 -0500 To: Multiple recipients of list CAFS-F2 <[redacted]> Subject: CFP: Property, Commodity, Culture

Sixth Annual Cultural Studies Symposium, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas, March 6-8, 1997

PROPERTY, COMMODITY, CULTURE

Keynote Speaker: Peter Stallybrass (University of Pennsylvania), author of The Politics and Poetics of Transgression Topic: "Marx's Coat"

"Property was thus appalled
That the self was not the same."
-- William Shakespeare

Hark how the Trumpets Sound, Proclaims the Land around,
The Jubilee;
Tells all the Poor oppressed
Nor more shall they be cess'd,
Nor landlords more molest,
Their Property.
-- Thomas Spence

"I'll--why, I'll go home to Tara tomorrow."
-- Scarlett O'Hara

Property: its very properties are now in question. If we are, as some say, on the brink of virtualization, what becomes of property? What happens when the old address that united name, goods, and legal responsibility refers only to a city of bits? Or is this in fact only the daydream of postmodern escapists who leave unthought and unthinkable an earth grown poisonous? Is it the ruse of the capitalists, disguising obvious and egregiously material inequities in the distribution of wealth? Even taken in the old-style sense of turf, property remains the pretext for marital, parental, class, and national warfare. We invite discussion on these and a variety of other related topics, proposals of individual papers, panel sessions, and innovative conference formats.

Possible topics:

*Personal property/public responsibility*Visual rights *Tenure *Transnational capital, globalism, *Mode of production, social formation, and deterritorialization and forms of property *The revival of nationalism: cultural *Education as consumer good and economic property *Children: property or persons *Virtual property and copyright *Prostitution and sexwork *Class and turf *Marriage: history and future *Enclosure and commons *Slavery *Property and crime *Privatizing the Internet *New populism and Wise Use *Trademarking species: biotechnology *Fetishism: ritual, commodity, sexuality *Property and propriety *Privatizing public schools *Queer propriety&properties of gender *Black markets *White collar crime: property & penalty *Nation and immigration *Labor and global capital: GATT, NAFTA, *Ownership, subjectivity, identity *Property and performativity *Native American land *Collaboration, credit, and property *Copying, copyright, copyhold

Abstracts for papers and panels: Limit proposals to one page, single spaced, per paper; proposals for non-standard format sessions welcome. Due date: October 4, 1996. Address proposals and queries to Tim Dayton, Department of English, Denison Hall, Kansas State University, Manhattan, KS 66506. Phone: [redacted]. FAX: [redacted]. E-mail: [redacted].

↑ Index

683. Robert Drake

Re: bargain books, mpls

Tue 30 Jul 1996

---

maria

who & or what are "chicago saloon" poets/poetries?

also wd be curious to hear more about patricia smith & dana bryant & how their stuff works on paper (patricia is reigning slam poetry queen, dana was a close contender at the national slams a coupla years ago)...

everwandering
lbd

↑ Index

684. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: Tolson
Wed 31 Jul 1996

Glad to hear you found these books -- MUST read his 50s +Libretto for the Republic of Liberia_ -- Not at all the case that he was adopting "high modernism" just as others were abandoning it --

Yes, people are doing work on Tolosn --

See Robert Farnsworth's bio. of the poet, and his edition of Tolson's newspaper columns, both from U of Missouri Press -- Check out Michael Berube's book on Tolson and Pynchon -- Lorenzo Thomas gave a talk on Tolson at the Orono conference last month, which will appear eventually somewhere -- perhaps in a new edition of Tolson's poems if we have any luck with the National Poetry Foundation, who appear interested at last post-conference -- Hermine Pinson did a good Tolson dissertation a few years back -- and there is one intro. book of criticism on _Harlem Gallery_ (as well as the usual Twayne book) --

More in the works -- Tolson's "high modernism" is not quite the modernism of Eliot, Crane, etc. -- and no, he was not alone in working these veins -- Take a stroll through _New Negro Poets U.S.A._ or Clarence Major's newly issued _The Garden Thrives_ anthology for minimalist clues to a large history -- and a certain Dr. Anna Everett was heard at the American Literature Association not long ago offering the first ever paper on Tolson as film critic -- Carole Doreski, appearing on the same panel, did a good paper on Tolson's 40s poems and newspaper work -- which will appear in a book from Cambridge later on --

SIGNING OFF FOR A FEW WEEKS __ BLESSINGS TO ALL --

↑ Index

685. Christina Fairbank Chirot address for Christopher Dewdney
Wed 31 Jul 1996

Might anyone have an address for Christopher Dewdney? I'd much appreciate knowing it if you do. His work I'd highly recommend. Several books published by The Figures, three available from SPD.

HAIKU

My roof was once firm yet now it cannot even keep the stars out.

(from Alter Sublime)

thanks for any assistance
dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

686. Charles Alexander gone
Wed 31 Jul 1996

---

dear poetics:

I'll be away for one week starting tonight, and I'm stopping list-serv mail for that period. So if anyone wants to contact me about chax press books or anything, please wait until after August 6.

thank you,

charles alexander
chax press
p.o. box 19178
minneapolis, mn 55419-0178

[redacted]

↑ Index

687. maria damon
conference
Wed 31 Jul 1996

---

hey everyone, stay tuned for a call for papers for a conference on CROSS-CULTURAL POETICS organized by Mark Nowak and yours truly, to be held in minneapolis the last weekend of june 1997. bests, maria d

↑ Index

688. Laura Moriarty
Re: cancer poems
Wed 31 Jul 1996

The last part of Jerry Estrin's book Rome: A Mobile Home,(Roof, the Figures, O Books, Potes and Poets) "Nudes," was written while he had cancer. And the last part of my book Symmetry (Avec Books) "Forever" was written during my experience as a caregiver, though I don't think the word cancer appears in either book.

Laura Moriarty
[redacted]

↑ Index

689. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: bargain books, mpls
Wed 31 Jul 1996

Chicago Saloon poetry is spoken word poetry performed at such venues as the Green Mill, Weeds, and at many of the other bars around the city where poetry is being read. I assume Maria is referring to the book Stray Bullets which Tia Chucha press (great press run by poet Luis Rodriguez and distributed by Northwestern) published about 6 years ago but is still in print. It includes people like Patricia Smith, Marc Smith, Luis Rodriguez, Carlos Cumpian, E. Donald Two-Rivers, et al. Also, Patricia Smith is fabulous on the page--check out her book Close to Death.

Would love to talk to any and all who are interested about this more--I'm doing a dissertation of public poetries and have been here in the Windy City for three months immersing myself in the poetry scene here and loving every minute of it! Reach me here or at [redacted].

Ciao!

On Tue, 30 Jul 1996, Robert Drake wrote:

> maria
>
> who & or what are "chicago saloon" poets/poetries?
>
> also wd be curious to hear more about patricia smith & dana bryant & how their stuff works on paper (patricia is reigning slam poetry queen, dana was a close contender at the national slams a coupla years ago)...
>
> everwandering
> lbd

↑ Index

690. Tristan D. Saldana
Language Poetry; Deconstruction; New Criticism
Wed 31 Jul 1996

Would a deconstruction of language poetry -- non-representational language which strives to produce the primary world of experience to the dis-ease of such poetics as Louis Simpson's -- be essentially a New Critical attempt to render a text definitively (or unify textualities within a poem) what Marjorie Perloff has noted as its vitally indeterminate qualifying characteristics?

What does anyone think?

Tristan

↑ Index

691. maria damon
Re: bargain books, mpls
Wed 31 Jul 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB
Poetics discussion group writes:
> Chicago Saloon poetry is spoken word poetry performed at such venues as > the Green Mill, Weeds, and at many of the other bars around the city > where poetry is being read. I assume Maria is referring to the book > Stray Bullets which Tia Chucha press (great press run by poet Luis > Rodriguez and distributed by Northwestern) published about 6 years ago > but is still in print. It includes people like Patricia Smith, Marc > Smith, Luis Rodriguez, Carlos Cumpian, E. Donald Two-Rivers, et al.
> Also, Patricia Smith is fabulous on the page--check out her book Close to > Death.
>
yes that's the one. --md

↑ Index

692. George Bowering
Re: address for Christopher Dewdney
Wed 31 Jul 1996

> Might anyone have an address for Christopher Dewdney?

You can get him c/o his publisher, McClelland & Stewart.

481 University Ave., Ste. 900.

Toronto, ON,
M5G 2E9

.....
"The squid is in fact a carnivorous pocket containing a pen"
--Robert Bringhurst

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

693. T-Bone Prone

Re: Language Poetry; Deconstruction; New Criticism

Wed 31 Jul 1996

On Wed, 31 Jul 1996, Tristan D. Saldana wrote:

> Would a deconstruction of language poetry -- non-representational language > which strives to produce the primary world of experience to the dis-ease of > such poetics as Louis Simpson's -- be essentially a New Critical attempt > to render a text definitively (or unify textualities within a poem) what > Marjorie Perloff has noted as its vitally indeterminate qualifying > characteristics?
>
> What does anyone think?

Well, I don't think so. A 'deconstructive' reading itself would be not a unity, but a quarrel amongst possible readings. When Derrida reads a poet, even Celan or Ponge, it is to -affirm- the specificity and singularity of their poetic idioms, without turning that into a 'unified textuality', and surely not to praise anything as vague as 'vitally indeterminate qualifying characteristics'. It's a difficult trick, to think the singular or idiomatic without thinking unity or essence. Not everybody gets it.

> Tristan

↑ Index

694. Ian Wilson
Re: Language Poetry; Deconstruction; New Criticism
Wed 31 Jul 1996

In a message dated 96-07-31 16:15:12 EDT, Tristan D. Saldana writes:

> Would a deconstruction of language poetry -- non-representational language which strives to produce the primary world of experience to the dis-ease of such poetics as Louis Simpson's -- be essentially a New Critical attempt to render a text definitively (or unify textualities within a poem) what Marjorie Perloff has noted as its vitally indeterminate qualifying characteristics?

I think it would be a mistake to assume that the effect of using a post-structural theory on a poetry which can be viewed as a literary manifestation of that post-structural theory is the same as negating the negation -- thus a return to the originary.

Ian Wilson
Loyola Marymount University, Los Angeles
[redacted]
http://users.aol.com/ibar88/private/ian1.htm

↑ Index

695. george hartley
Re: Language Poetry; Deconstruction; New Criticism
Wed 31 Jul 1996

Tristan:

> Would a deconstruction of language poetry -- non-representational language which strives to produce the primary world of experience to the dis-ease of such poetics as Louis Simpson's -- be essentially a New Critical attempt to render a text definitively (or unify textualities within a poem) what Marjorie Perloff has noted as its vitally indeterminate qualifying characteristics?

What is "the primary world of experience"? To the best of my knowledge, Nick Piombino is the only poet related to language writing who explicitly uses the language of "experience" (although he has something very specific in mind). Barry Watten talks about "the world" lots in Total Syntax, but again in ways that would undo some uses of the concept. What experiences and what worlds do you have in mind?

The potential connections between a certain deconstruction & New Criticism are in themselves intriguing--I'd want more time to construct something there, but I think I'd begin by questioning how deconstruction would unify textualities: the word "unify" might be the point at which we could distinguish between the two projects, both of which depend on intense scrutiny (close reading) of the text(s). Does the "its" of "its vitally indeterminate qualifying" refer to deconstruction or language poetry or new criticism?

Maybe I've missed some earlier parts of this thread.

George

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

August 1996

439 messages · Thu 1 Aug 1996 – Sat 31 Aug 1996

August 1996 gave the country the end of its Olympics, both its party conventions, and a president signing away sixty years of federal welfare, and the list, four hundred and thirty-nine letters that month, is largely elsewhere. Its own news came on the fifteenth, when George Starbuck died at home in Tuscaloosa at sixty-five, and Hank Lazer wrote the notice. What occupied the room otherwise was a single, oddly consistent preoccupation, running under threads that appear to have nothing to do with one another: the question of what is underneath a thing.

It began with a wheelbarrow. Christina Fairbank Chirot, opening under an epigraph from Smithson — "Literal statements often conceal violent analogies" — pointed out what is obvious once said and invisible until then: Williams breaks his line so that the words on the page are a red wheel, then barrow, and "Barrow can also mean a grave site marked by stones". Twenty-eight letters followed, red becoming read, the most transparent poem in American English turning slowly into a burial mound. Chirot was running the month's other thread at the same time, on speed, by which she meant not velocity but seeing in a poem — perception and scale — and quoted Dickinson for it: "To close the eyes is travel". The two threads are one thread.

The objection was Peter Quartermain's, and it is the best sentence of the month. Reading the poem as a coded burial, he warned, imports an ethnocentrism that makes western material progress the poem's hidden subject; and the real difficulty is that "any coded reading closes the poem down". That is the whole quarrel, and neither side quite won it. Maria Damon, who wrote forty-two times in August, was meanwhile theorising Hannah Weiner's dictated writing as an effect of the trauma of postmodernity and of a Jewish girlhood spent comfortably alongside the Holocaust, and asking the room to help her prove it — an essay due, she admitted, in three days. The list was excavating everything it touched.

In Portland, meanwhile, none of this was happening. The National Poetry Slam ran from the twentieth to the twenty-fifth; Bob Holman signed books with Marc Smith at Powell's; and at half past nine on the Tuesday all five parts of The United States of Poetry were screened at a brew pub cinema, with the sixteen-millimetre print of the last show — Eigner, Creeley, Harryman — run again after the Slam let out. In April this room had spent sixty letters asking whether putting poetry on television dilutes it. The question was now being answered, at eleven at night, by a projector in a bar, and the list posted the schedule and went back to its grave.

Which leaves Lazer's notice, and the thing in it nobody picked up. Starbuck had directed the writing programmes at Iowa and Boston and lived twenty years with Parkinson's; and, the notice adds in passing, while at SUNY-Buffalo in 1963 he "initiated a successful challenge of New York's Feinberg" loyalty-oath law — the statute requiring a teacher to swear what he was not. A poet who refused to sign, at Buffalo, and won. The list is at Buffalo. It read the notice and replied about his age: maria damon that "65 is much younger than i would have placed him", George Bowering remembering a drugstore anthology in 1957. Nobody mentioned the oath. I have set the barrow and the obituary at either end of the month exactly as August sent them, because a room that spent four weeks proving a wheelbarrow was a grave never thought to look under its own address.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 439 in all.

WRITERS

. 131, 151
Alexander, Charles 53
Amato, Joe 199, 218, 236, 243, 341, 433
Baratier, David 5, 27, 100, 105, 165
Battin, Wendy 415, 420
Beach, Christopher J. 247
Beck, Douglis 148, 201, 202, 380, 439
Bell, Thomas 19, 382
Benedetti, David 210, 263, 320
Bernstein, Charles 9, 12, 78, 79, 90, 367
Bouchard, Daniel 23, 159, 276
Boughn, Michael 225, 266, 282, 324, 430
Bowering, George 28, 38, 40, 41, 56, 57, 67, 146, 184, 186, 229, 230, 231, 253, 255, 256, 265, 277, 278, 280, 289, 290, 309, 311, 351, 352, 359, 393, 394, 421, 422, 423, 436
Brannen, Jonathan 353
Bruno, Franklin 170
Cabri, Louis 226
Carnography 400, 401, 418
Carpenter, Brian 154
Cheek, Cris 120
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 37
Chirot, Christina Fairbank 31, 35, 39, 45, 65, 70, 86, 123, 160, 206, 241, 252, 269, 291, 303, 316, 338, 373, 383, 434
CHRISTOPH, FUNKHOUSER 108
Damon, Maria 7, 14, 22, 48, 64, 96, 97, 111, 121, 122, 140, 141, 163, 197, 200, 208, 217, 220, 221, 224, 235, 240, 248, 249, 260, 268, 284, 298, 301, 308, 333, 361, 363, 364, 365, 368, 369, 372, 375, 386, 388, 395, 399, 403
Davis, Jordan 43, 116, 126, 304, 331, 345, 435
Dlugonski, Dan Raphael 20
Drake, Robert 10, 17, 68, 88, 244, 245
DS 87, 176, 177, 178
Epstein, Andrew D 215
Felix, Joel 145
Filch 32, 117, 118, 132, 133, 192, 207, 251, 318, 339
Al Filreis 95
Franklin, Cynthia 406
Gale, Bob 4, 15
Glazier, Loss 2, 16, 149
Gould, Henry 63, 72, 119, 191, 239, 270, 271, 302, 337, 347
Gray, Janet S. 134, 155
Green, Tony 25, 36, 54, 55, 179, 181, 182, 227, 254, 258, 285, 287, 312, 313, 314, 315, 317, 342, 343
Guest, Eliza McGrand- CVA 222
Hartley, George 61, 115
Hen 47
Henry 24, 26, 130, 273, 275, 279, 294, 295, 296, 310, 325, 327, 328, 329
Hishikawa, Eiichi 112
Hollo, Anselm 211
Holman, Bob 6, 42, 74, 75, 195, 196, 228
Izenberg, Oren 376, 377
Joris, Pierre 46, 51, 73, 76, 107, 147, 293
Kaona 261
Killian, Kevin 29, 34, 62, 71, 91, 94, 212, 216, 390
Kimmelman, Burt 49, 50, 52, 139, 358, 389, 404
King, Charlie 82
Kuszai, Joel 83, 187
Lauterbach, Ann 110
Lazer, Hank 198, 417
Lease, Joseph 3, 81, 102, 128, 161, 167, 306
Leddy, Michael 66
Levin, Jonathan A 332
Levy, Herb 127, 129, 250, 371
Lew, Walter K. 99, 172, 286, 288
LEWIS, JOEL 205
Lightman, Ira 307, 405
List, Poetics 259
Lloyd, Emily 173, 174
Loden, Rachel 33, 194, 233, 262, 267, 326, 330, 357, 360, 384, 410, 424
Mandel, Tom 413, 426
Marsh, William 157, 158, 283, 336, 356
Matthias, John E. 238
McClure, Wendy 305, 346
McVay, Gwyn 59, 297, 334, 414, 416, 425
Messerli, Douglas 89, 98, 109, 124, 437
Nathanson, Tenney 85, 321, 322, 323, 419
Nelson, Gale 125, 135, 136, 142, 144, 164, 168, 188, 189, 190, 432
Northcutt, William M. 213
Orange, Thomas M. 77, 114
Peters, Carl Lynden 272, 392, 427
Pollet, Sylvester 246
Quartermain, Peter 257, 319, 344, 412
Rifkin, Libbie 281, 350
Roberts, Gary 103, 137
Roitman, Judy 274, 340, 348, 385
Rothenberg, Jerry 387, 391
Saldana, Tristan D. 93

Schmid, Julie Marie 8, 138, 156, 171, 237, 349
Schuchat 11, 92, 153, 223, 299, 300
Schultz, Susan 214, 232, 354
Seagram, Blair 429
Sherry, James 396, 407
Silliman, Ron 1, 18, 30, 292
Smith, Charles 374
Smith, Rod 60, 113, 185, 193
Sondheim, Alan 366, 370, 378, 379, 381
Stein, Julia 335, 409, 428
Tedrow, - Kim 402
Timmons, Jeffrey 438
Varnes, Kathrine 175
Wallace, Mark 80, 101
Ward, Diane Marie 431
Watts, Charles 397
Welford, Gabrielle 13, 58, 84, 104, 106, 150, 152, 162, 166, 169, 180, 183, 411
Wilson, Ian 219, 408
Wilson, Rob 143
Wystan 44, 69, 264
Zitt, Joseph 21, 203, 204, 234, 242, 355, 362, 398
}, { Brad Brace 209

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbott, Steve 12
Abrams, Jen 150, 177
Ahern, Tom 353
Alferi, Pierre 78
Alice, Mary 202
Amber, Lisa 159, 435
Americans, Asian 150, 160, 177, 178, 268
Amerika, Mark 144
Anderson, Beth 159, 435
Anderson, Curt 353
Anderson, Laurie 24, 63, 228, 234
Andre, Michael 98
Andrews, Bruce 2, 79, 89, 128, 130, 136, 164, 167, 168, 189, 190, 191, 193, 329, 331
Arbor, Ann 79, 89
Ashbery, John 12, 103, 130, 419
Atlanta, Mark P. 150, 177
Auster, Paul 2, 193
Austin, Geer 204, 207, 228, 234, 303
Baker, Lori 432
Baker, Mary 292, 322
Baker, Richard 292, 322
Balaz, Joe 214
Baldwin, James 161
Baptiste, David 65, 70, 115
Baraka, Amiri 3, 12, 81, 128, 130, 136, 161
Barg, Barbara 79, 89
Barnard, Mary 12
Basinski, Michael 83, 109
Beach, Christopher J. 247
Beatty, Paul 228
Beckett, Samuel 193
Bellamy, Dodie 34, 62, 71, 91, 126, 185, 212, 390
Benjamin, Walter 199, 213, 215, 223, 269
Berkeley, Michael 1, 12, 153, 268, 281, 292, 312, 326, 330, 335, 350, 351, 358, 359, 389, 391, 397, 404
Berlin, Irving 125, 131
Bernard, George 12, 150, 177
Bernstein, Emma 193, 419
Berrigan, Anselm 116
Berrigan, Eddie 116, 211
Berrigan, Ted 211, 281, 292, 330
Berry, Stephen 150, 177, 411
Berryman, John 223, 238
Bishop, Elizabeth 419
Blackburn, Paul 28, 38, 40, 41, 56, 57, 67, 391
Blanchot, Maurice 12
Blaser, Robin 421
Blazer, Stuart 63
Borges, Jorge Luis 400
Boughn, Mike 277, 319
BpNichol 336, 340
Bromige, David 405, 424, 425, 426
Brown, Ann 185
Brown, Jason 199
Brown, Michael 15
Bryant, Elizabeth 4
Bukowski, Charles 371
Bunting, Basil 211
Burger, Mary 29, 126
Burnham, Clint 226
Burns, Gerald 353
Burroughs, William S. 338
Butler, Judith 12, 411
Byrd, Don 73, 76
Caesar, Little 42
Cafe, Poets 293
Cage, John 203, 217, 242, 362, 381, 398
Capen, Samuel P. 12
Carll, Steve 116, 159, 435
Carlos, William 144
Carroll, Jon 12
Celan, Paul 12
Chadwick, Lynn 353
Child, Abigail 226
Chirot, Dave 130, 295
Clark, Cheryl 179
Clarke, Jack 211
Clinton, Bill 150, 177
Cobain, Kurt 331
Coleman, Wanda 175
Columbus, Christopher 165, 406, 408
Comments, Chicago 71, 91
Cooley, Nicole 150, 177

Coover, Robert 144, 432
Cornell, Katherine 12
County, Madison 150, 177, 411
County, Mike 58, 150, 177, 193, 226, 411
Coyote, Peter 397
Crane, Margaret 71, 91
Creeley, Robert 2, 12, 33, 81, 195, 211, 330
Daniels, Chris 116
Darragh, Tina 79, 89
Davies, Alan 9
Davies, Kevin 126, 127, 435
Delaney, Samuel 116
Dennis, Michael 2, 12, 89, 98, 353
Derksen, Jeff 226
Derrida, Jacques 46, 51, 271
Dickinson, Emily 123, 303
Dine, Jim 12
Dlugos, Tim 79, 89
Dorward, Nate 226
Drucker, Johanna 79, 89
Duncan, Andrew 211, 292, 322, 330, 397
Duncan, Robert 326
Durand, Marcella 126, 127, 435
Dutton, Paul 12
Dylan, Bob 426
Edmond, Murray 12
Eigner, Larry 45, 123, 195, 274, 340, 348, 385
Einstein, Albert 72
Eliot, Joe 77, 130
Elisa, Paula 58
Ellen, Mary 66
Emerson, Claudia 3, 123
England, Amy 291, 405
Federman, Ray 2, 12
Felstiner, John 12
Ferguson, Jesse 12, 83, 109
Fisher, Harrison 262, 352, 357
France, Peter 12, 31, 39, 107
Fraser, Kathleen 79, 89, 198, 200, 211
Fraser, Simon 351, 397
Friedlander, Ben 2
Friedlander, Lee 185
Frost, Corey 102
Frost, Robert 101
Ganick, Peter 17, 353
Garcia, Rodrigo 144
Gins, Madeline 2
Ginsberg, Allan 178, 335, 397
Gizzi, Michael 142
Gladman, Renee 159, 435
Glover, Albert 350
Godfrey, John 345
Golding, Alan 185, 259
Goldsmith, Kenneth 90
Golumbia, David 159
Gould, Glenn 23, 27, 47, 72, 119, 271
Green, Paul 79, 89
Grenier, Robert 211
Guest, Barbara 2
Guitart, Jorge 109
Gunn, Thom 12
Hale, Robert 29, 126
Hamilton, Diana 419
Hamilton, Ian 419
Hardin, Rob 400, 401, 403, 418
Hardy, Thomas 98
Harryman, Carla 195
Hartman, Charles O. 420
Hawkins, Bobbie 150, 177, 411
Hejinian, Lyn 2, 193, 336, 340
Helms, Jesse 268
Higgins, Dick 79, 89
Hogan, Linda 406, 408
Hogg, Robert 211
Holbrook, Susan 226
Hoover, Edgar 168
Howard, Richard 150, 177
Howe, Susan 2, 9, 81, 331
Hunt, Erica 9, 193
Irvine, James 247
Jackson, Jesse 58, 150, 177, 411
Jaffe, Larry 434
Jarnot, Lisa 126, 127, 435
Jenkins, Margaret 292
Johnson, Thomas 145, 147, 149, 291, 338
Jones, Bob 12, 150, 161, 177, 431
Jordan, June 43, 116, 126, 127, 129, 304, 306, 331
Joseph, Safdie 139, 160, 167, 178, 306, 387
Joyce, Michael 193, 292
Kathryn, Mary 434
Katz, Steve 211
Kelsey, Karla 193, 212
Keppler, Joseph 79, 89
Kerouac, Jack 45, 123, 160, 178, 179, 338, 430, 431, 436
Kinsella, John 12
Klein, Naomi 379
Kramer, Wendy 83, 109
Kuhn, Steve 12
Kuzsai, Joel 371
Lederer, Katie 116
Lederman, Robert 434
Lerner, Ben 176
Levertov, Denise 421
Levine, Jeffrey 66
Lew, Walter K. 99, 172, 286, 288
Lisick, Beth 196
Logan, John 211
London, Frank 4, 5, 15, 20, 73, 79, 89, 211
Lopez, Richard 156
Lopez, Tony 432
Mac Low, Jackson 2, 89, 191

Lowell, Amy 160, 178, 419
Lowell, Robert 304
Luoma, Bill 126, 127, 159, 193, 435
Machlin, Dan 407
Madison, James 50, 150, 177, 411
Malcolm, Janet 150, 177
Mandelstam, Osip 329
Manery, Rob 226
Marmon, Leslie 160, 178
Marshall, Robert 211
Martin, Chris 9
Martin, Paul 353
Marvin, Lee 250
Matlin, Sharon 75, 78, 79, 89
Mattlin, Sharon 79, 89
Maud, Ralph 397
Maus, Fred E. 147
Maxwell, Susan 109, 127
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 207
McCaffery, Steve 2, 9
Melville, Pierre 18, 29, 397
Meredith, William 83, 109, 159, 435
Merrill, Stuart 211, 419
Merwin, W. S. 12
Messerli, Doug 98, 193
Miller, David 405
Mingus, Charlie 5
Miriam, Erica 18
Moore, Marianne 237
Morgan, Robin 143
Morris, Tim 353
Mullen, Harryette 419
Murphy, Michelle 353
Murphy, Sheila E. 353
Myles, Eileen 12
Neilson, Melanie 150, 177
Neruda, Pablo 12
Newman, Denise 83, 109
Newton, Keith 199
Nicosia, Gerald 430, 431, 436
Niedecker, Lorine 246
Norman, Peter 211
Northcutt, William M. 213, 215, 223
Norton, John 172, 305, 308, 318
Notley, Alice 17, 116, 211, 419
O'Hara, Frank 304
O'Sullivan, Maggie 226
Olen, Robert 12
Oliver, Doug 42, 60, 64
Oliver, Laura 196, 230
Olsen, Lance 2, 335
Olson, Charles 39, 45, 123, 130, 265, 291, 292, 312, 326, 330, 337, 397
Oppen, George 193
Orange, Thomas M. 77, 114
Orwell, George 431
Osman, Jena 2, 83, 109
Pacific, Asian 153, 406, 408
Padgett, Ron 239
Parkway, Neal 332
Patchen, Kenneth 5
Penberthy, Jenny 246
Perchik, Simon 105
Perelman, Bob 90, 185, 211, 304
Perlman, John 353
Perloff, Marjorie 3, 185, 193
Perreault, John 79, 89
Pessoa, Fernando 116
Phillip, Andrew 79, 89, 133, 158
Phillips, Malcolm 98, 159, 244, 252, 435
Phillips, Tom 252
Pines, Paul 353
Pinsky, Robert 108
Piombino, Nick 3, 98
Plath, Sylvia 174
Porter, Anne 150, 177
Potter, Steve 367
Pound, Scott 27, 45, 123, 130, 193, 347
Professor, Little 432
Rasula, Jed 185
Ratcliffe, Stephen 83, 109
Rauschenberg, Robert 193
Raven, Francis 50
Ray, David 211
Rehm, Pam 105
Reznikoff, Charles 172, 193, 304
Rhodes, Martha 150, 177
Richards, Brian 323, 324
Ridge, Tom 95, 411
Riley, Denise 226
Rivera, Alex 144
Robertson, Lisa 83, 109, 226
Robinson, Elizabeth 116
Roth, Henry 161
Rothenberg, Jerome 12, 387
Saldana, Tristan D. 93, 106
Samuels, Lisa 83, 109
Saroyan, William 179
Scalapino, Leslie 9, 12, 193, 419
Schultz, Susan M. 214, 353
Schwerner, Armand 12
Schwitters, Kurt 12
Selby, Spencer 245
Selland, Eric 51
Shakespeare, William 116, 282, 294, 329
Shapiro, David 81
Sherlock, Frank 50
Sherwood, Ken 2
Shoptaw, John 85
Shurin, Aaron 83, 109
Silverman, Oren 12
Simmons, Russell 11
Simon, Greg 179, 181, 397
Simpson, Bennett 411

Simpson, Louis 292
Smith, Marc 4, 7, 8, 10, 11, 14, 15, 20, 195
Smith, Tracy K. 4, 10, 15, 20, 125, 131, 431, 439
Smithson, Robert 123, 269, 277
Snyder, Rick 421
Sorrentino, Christopher 12
Spahr, Juliana 79, 89, 99, 187
Sparrow, John 172, 175
Spicer, Jack 143, 292, 322
Spinelli, Martin 9, 12
Starbuck, George 198, 200, 211, 230, 254, 265, 285
Stein, Gertrude 29, 146, 184, 186, 188, 229, 230, 231, 253, 255, 256, 338
Stein, Suzanne 29, 72, 332, 333, 338, 339, 374
Stevens, Wallace 105, 193, 427
Straub, Peter 2
Stroffolino, Chris 105, 159, 435
Studies, Asian 12
Sullivan, Gary 83, 109
Sward, Robert 405, 410, 415
Taggart, John 192
Taylor, Jesse 5
Taylor, Steven 5
Templeton, Fiona 2, 407
Terry, Philip 11
Texas, Irving 21, 203, 204, 217, 234, 242, 355, 362, 381, 398
Thomas, Dylan 153, 353
Trask, Kay 406, 408
Truitt, Sam 125, 131
Tudor, David 147
Tyson, Ian 252
Tzara, Tristan 265, 277, 278, 280, 289, 290, 309, 311, 351, 352, 359
Virilio, Paul 199
Waldrop, Keith 63, 144
Waldrop, Rosemary 24
Waldrop, Rosmarie 9
Wallace, Sara 387, 425
Walsh, Catherine 12
Washington, Harold 31, 58, 411, 413, 426
Watten, Barrett 3, 9, 12, 211
Webster, Daniel 394, 395
Weiner, Hannah 9, 42, 60, 64, 78, 79, 89, 98, 100, 102, 112, 122, 124, 185, 364, 367, 369, 396, 399, 437
Westbrook, Dillon 391
Whitman, Walt 72, 128, 130
Wieners, John 3, 130, 211
Williams, Tony 3, 95, 123, 130, 205, 269, 271, 277, 287, 290, 315, 321, 327
Winet, Jon 71, 91
Wolff, Rebecca 66
Woolf, Virginia 61, 65, 70, 115
Wordsworth, William 93, 106
Wright, James 144
Wright, Jeff 79, 89
Yau, John 81
Young, Karl 35, 37, 245, 252
Zukofsky, Louis 12, 281, 292

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 18, 73, 103, 150, 177, 406, 408, 411, 434
Aesthetics 12, 81, 101, 102, 130, 136, 199, 208, 220, 304, 331, 427
Anthologies 66, 68, 73, 90, 114, 143, 156, 168, 172, 176, 214, 230, 330, 405, 406, 408, 421
Anti-Semitism 29
Appropriation 42, 100, 251
Archives and libraries 12, 16, 50, 79, 83, 89, 109, 153, 212, 216, 292, 332, 345, 351, 391, 392, 397, 400, 406, 408, 415, 431, 438
Autobiography 39, 327, 397
Avant-garde 72, 76, 103, 421
Beauty 330, 377
Biography 112, 124, 419
Book announcements 9, 12, 83, 90, 98, 109, 116, 353, 420
Bookstores 212, 428
Calls for submissions 50, 71, 91, 199
Capitalism 79, 89
Censorship 50, 54, 107, 353, 360
Cities 18, 154, 159, 199, 434
Close reading 3
Collage and montage 8, 130
Conferences and festivals 12, 42, 50, 107, 114, 144, 191, 234, 246, 247, 252, 259, 264, 281, 284, 286, 292, 298, 312, 330, 335, 372, 386, 397, 406, 407, 408, 427, 432, 436
Copyright and permissions 50, 218, 220, 397
Craft 295, 352, 357
Creative writing pedagogy 90, 134, 140, 143, 156, 172, 176, 235, 305, 308, 318, 325, 330, 332, 333, 335, 339, 341, 346, 347
Dada 120
Deconstruction 3, 327, 427
Difficulty 201, 257, 266, 269, 277, 314, 346, 347, 411
Disability 134, 140, 143, 156, 176
Dreams 12, 39, 79, 89, 157, 179, 215, 223, 238, 323, 324, 353
Editing 50, 199
Electronic poetry and hypertext 2, 9, 78, 90, 101, 102, 108, 123, 149, 202, 212, 220, 244, 245, 371
Elegy 1
Empire and imperialism 191
Epic 3, 347, 406, 408

Epistemology 3
Erasure 12, 331, 427
Ethics 427
Experimental poetry 103
Fascism 45, 199, 220
Feminism 172, 199, 284, 405, 406, 408, 421, 427
Film 35, 37, 83, 109, 153, 164, 165, 167, 168, 179, 195, 199, 208, 298, 372, 382, 400, 427, 435
Fluxus 209, 383
Formalism 323, 324, 333, 405, 410, 415
Free speech 107, 330, 335, 434
Free verse 420
Gender 118, 143, 386
Globalization 199
Grants and funding 12, 50, 125, 131, 150, 177, 268
Haiku 355, 364
Hermeneutics 168, 282
Humour and satire 117, 209, 224, 228, 234, 427
Ideology 101, 102, 308
Imagism 114, 237
Improvisation 312, 326
Indigenous and Native poetics 134, 140, 143, 156, 160, 176, 406, 408, 411
Interviews 2, 12, 15, 20, 79, 89, 150, 177, 193, 252, 367, 369, 397
Jewish poetics 362, 366, 368, 370, 372, 374, 379, 381, 382, 385, 386, 387, 392, 393, 400, 401, 403, 413, 418, 426
Language poetry 3, 79, 89, 193, 273, 308, 318, 339, 346, 405
Latino and Latin American poetry 134, 140, 143, 156, 176
Letters and correspondence 73, 107, 199, 374, 376, 387, 411
Little magazines 12, 19, 22, 50, 75, 78, 79, 89, 116, 165, 199, 209, 214, 304, 361, 367, 387, 434, 437
Lyric poetry 3, 81, 100
Marxism 3
Memory 36, 45, 108, 123, 179, 211, 292, 330, 357, 427
MFA programs 12, 125, 131
Modernism 98, 101, 102, 103, 116
Mourning and loss 2, 12, 16, 39, 149, 245
Multiculturalism 172
Music and poetry 12, 27, 59, 83, 86, 109, 115, 153, 173, 174, 215, 238, 241, 248, 261, 265, 307, 372, 427
Nature 31, 78, 79, 89, 101, 102, 105, 123, 168, 190, 236, 266, 284, 336, 340
New Formalism 405
Obituary and memorial 72
Performance and the poetry reading 2, 4, 5, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 20, 21, 42, 78, 203, 207, 208, 210, 217, 218, 219, 220, 228, 234, 260, 263, 305, 308, 318, 335, 339, 432
Phenomenology 199
Philosophy 105, 130, 269, 282, 312, 317, 374, 427
Place and region 1, 100, 235, 241
Poetics 3, 5, 9, 12, 17, 20, 42, 43, 60, 64, 65, 70, 78, 79, 81, 83, 89, 90, 91, 94, 96, 97, 98, 102, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 115, 116, 117, 119, 121, 124, 126, 128, 130, 131, 140, 145, 148, 149, 151, 154, 156, 163, 164, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 176, 180, 184, 189, 190, 191, 193, 194, 197, 200, 211, 220, 226, 227, 229, 233, 246, 247, 255, 259, 260, 262, 288, 292, 298, 301, 307, 334, 335, 341, 352, 355, 356, 357, 368, 370, 371, 372, 390, 395, 403, 408, 409, 417, 439
Print vs. digital 50, 79, 83, 89, 92, 105, 109, 120, 154, 244, 367, 396, 399, 400, 414, 417, 431, 436, 437
Prizes and awards 12, 50, 105, 406, 408, 419
Procedural and constraint writing 12
Prose poem 37, 160, 178
Prosody and meter 79, 89, 123
Psychoanalysis 12, 39, 199
Queer poetics 134, 140, 143, 156, 172, 173, 174, 176, 405, 421
Race and poetry 58, 72, 126, 150, 172, 177, 411, 433
Reading announcements 12, 29, 63, 87, 116, 125, 131, 157, 390, 397, 407
Religion and the sacred 58, 172, 330, 406, 408, 411, 417, 418, 426, 427, 434, 438
Representation 3, 189, 190, 314, 315, 327, 353, 427
Reviewing and criticism 3, 5, 12, 50, 79, 89, 105, 108, 123, 143, 172, 199, 212, 243, 249, 250, 251, 260, 263, 289, 296, 371, 414, 434
Revision 1
Science 29, 282
Semiotics 199
Serial poem 304
Small press publishing 29, 105, 107, 145, 149, 212, 214, 216, 349, 353, 354, 380, 390
Software and code 199, 244, 307
Sonnet 1, 72, 222, 262, 272, 273, 283, 344, 352, 357, 417
Sound poetry 10, 15, 20
Subjectivity 37, 58, 71, 91, 150, 177, 349, 399, 437
Sublime 123, 236, 251
Surrealism 98
Terrorism 13, 20, 107
The academy 12, 50, 79, 89, 90, 95, 144, 150, 153, 177, 179, 193, 198, 199, 200, 211, 214, 219, 247, 251, 260, 274, 282, 284,

325, 330, 340, 348, 351, 385, 392, 397, 406, 408, 420, 427, 431, 432, 436, 438
The body 150, 177
The canon 50
The Holocaust 35, 37, 174, 361, 372, 382, 396, 399, 437
The internet 5, 17, 19, 22, 78, 107, 108, 112, 124, 199, 408, 427, 433
The line 2, 9, 12, 367, 369
The listserv 9, 22, 26, 78, 82, 83, 114, 116, 130, 154, 165, 259, 281, 292, 304, 335, 371, 372, 390, 396, 399, 405, 410, 416, 417, 419, 423, 424, 430, 431, 436, 437
The New Sentence 79, 89, 331
Theatre 4, 12, 29, 193, 199, 207, 332, 406, 408
Translation 12, 42, 51, 73, 90, 98, 116, 192, 247, 400
Vietnam 107, 172
Visual and concrete poetry 17, 90, 244, 427
Visual art 12, 24, 62, 63, 105, 126, 179, 211, 252, 434

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 439 in all.

1 AUG 1996

1. Ron Silliman — Tom Mandel's Sonnets
2. Loss Glazier — Re: Spoken word
3. Joseph Lease — Re: Language Poetry; Deconstruction; New Criticism
4. Bob Gale — Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis
5. David Baratier — Re: Spoken word
6. Bob Holman — Mastery
7. maria damon — Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis
8. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis
9. Charles Bernstein — Re: Spoken Word, LINEbreak, & the list
10. Robert Drake — Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis
11. Schuchat — Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis
12. Charles Bernstein — Fall Readings at UB

2 AUG 1996

13. Gabrielle Welford — yet another database... (fwd)
14. maria damon — Re: spoken word/Marc Smith
15. Bob Gale — Re: spoken word/Marc Smith

3 AUG 1996

16. Loss Glazier — Citing online sources
17. Robert Drake — TapRoot Reviews #9/10 announce

4 AUG 1996

18. Ron Silliman — Fwd: Borders boycott
19. Thomas Bell — cancer poetry again
20. Dan Raphael Dlugonski — Re: spoken word
21. Joseph Zitt — Re: spoken word
22. maria damon — Re: cancer poetry again

5 AUG 1996

23. Daniel Bouchard — Mail >> FWD
24. henry — Re: Mail >> FWD
25. Tony Green — Italian post
26. henry — sorry gang
27. David Baratier — mail fwd
28. George Bowering — Re: Italian post

6 AUG 1996

29. Kevin Killian — August Events at Small Press Traffic
30. Ron Silliman — Mail
31. Christina Fairbank Chirot — disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Bartleby
32. filch — Hi, I am syntactically correct markup!
33. Rachel Loden — Re: disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Creeley
34. Kevin Killian — Re: disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Bartleby
35. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Hiroshima & Shadows
36. Tony Green — Re: Italian post
37. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: Hiroshima & Shadows
38. George Bowering — Re: disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Bartleby
39. Christina Fairbank Chirot — disgruntled postal workers

7 AUG 1996

40. George Bowering — Re: Italian post

41. George Bowering — Re: disgruntled postal workers
42. Bob Holman — Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Aug 1996 to 5 Aug 1996
43. Jordan Davis — postal reclassification seminars
44. wystan — poetry and speed
45. Christina Fairbank Chirot — re poetry & speed
46. Pierre Joris — Re: poetry and speed
47. hen — Re: poetry and speed
48. maria damon — Re: re poetry & speed
49. Burt Kimmelman — Re: poetry and speed
50. Burt Kimmelman — Calls for papers; history of text
51. Pierre Joris — query
52. Burt Kimmelman — jeffrey peterson
53. Charles Alexander — changing
54. Tony Green — Re: poetry and speed
55. Tony Green — Charred Italian leaves
56. George Bowering — Re: poetry and speed
57. George Bowering — Re: poetry and speed
58. Gabrielle Welford — Re: South African Boy Faces Death Row in Mississippi (fwd)
59. Gwyn McVay — Polish children's song
60. Rod Smith — Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Aug 1996 to 5 Aug 1996

8 AUG 1996

61. george hartley — Re: re poetry & speed
62. Kevin Killian — Yet another SF reading
63. Henry Gould — Upcoming reading (Rhode Island)
64. maria damon — Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Aug 1996 to 5 Aug 1996
65. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: re poetry & speed
66. Michael Leddy — disgruntled postal workers
67. George Bowering — Re: re poetry & speed
68. Robert Drake — Re: clear-cut

9 AUG 1996

69. wystan — Speed
70. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: re poetry & speed (fwd)
71. Kevin Killian — Conventional Wisdom
72. henry gould — Re: Speed
73. Pierre Joris — Buland al-Haidari
74. Bob Holman — Slam Stats
75. Bob Holman — Slam Stats
76. Pierre Joris — Buland al-Haydari
77. Thomas M. Orange — poetry and speed
78. Charles Bernstein — Speed and Hannah Weiner
79. Charles Bernstein — Hannah Weiner bibliography
80. Mark Wallace — Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
81. Joseph Lease — Re: changing
82. Charlie King — Re: Introduction of Charlie King

10 AUG 1996

83. Joel Kuszai — New Books from Meow Press
84. Gabrielle Welford — Arthur Craven

11 AUG 1996

85. Tenney Nathanson — Craven?
86. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: poetry in motion
87. DS — Re: Speed
88. Robert Drake — Re: Speed
89. Douglas Messerli — Re: Hannah Weiner bibliography

90. Charles Bernstein — My Home Pages
91. Kevin Killian — Conventional Wisdom
92. Schuchat — Re: Craven?
93. Tristan D. Saldana — Re: Speed

12 AUG 1996

94. Kevin Killian — Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
95. Al Filreis — Williams house to be sold
96. maria damon — Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
97. maria damon — Re: Speed
98. Douglas Messerli — Returned mail: Host unknown (Name server: ubvm.cc.bfuualo.edu: host not ...
99. Walter K. Lew — Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
100. David Baratier — lost in the supermarket
101. Mark Wallace — go fast or go slow
102. Joseph Lease — Re: go fast or go slow
103. Gary Roberts — Re: go fast or go slow
104. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Craven?
105. David Baratier — Pavement Saw brief sale
106. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Speed
107. Pierre Joris — G7 Internet policy
108. FUNKHOUSER CHRISTOPH — interesting article on the web
109. Douglas Messerli — Re: New Books from Meow Press
110. Ann Lauterbach — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
111. maria damon — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
112. Eiichi Hishikawa — Sun & Moon Press Address
113. Rod Smith — Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
114. Thomas M. Orange — panel on WCW for Louisville

13 AUG 1996

115. george hartley — Re: re poetry & speed
116. Jordan Davis — confidentiality, subpo, california
117. filch — Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail [new satire #3]
118. filch — gender discourse
119. Henry Gould — Re: confidentiality, subpo, california
120. cris cheek — Re: Craven?
121. maria damon — Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
122. maria damon — Re: Hannah Weiner bibliography
123. Christina Fairbank Chirot — speed & poetry (fwd)
124. Douglas Messerli — Re: Sun & Moon Press Address
125. Gale Nelson — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
126. Jordan Davis — the saddest story (book offer)
127. Herb Levy — Re: the saddest story (book offer)
128. Joseph Lease — Re: defining or refusing to define
129. Herb Levy — Oops
130. Henry — Re: defining or refusing to define
131. . — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
132. filch — for Chris Funkhouser. . .thanks

14 AUG 1996

133. filch — Tyuonyi & building clocks
134. Janet S. Gray — growing up poems
135. Gale Nelson — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
136. Gale Nelson — Re: defining or refusing to define
137. Gary Roberts — Re: defining or refusing to define
138. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: growing up poems
139. Burt Kimmelman — Re: defining or refusing to define

140. maria damon — Re: growing up poems
141. maria damon — Re: mackey e-address
142. Gale Nelson — Re: growing up poems
143. rob wilson — Re: growing up poems
144. Gale Nelson — CSPAN-2 to Air "Freedom to Write" Program
145. Joel Felix — Rube Steps In <<LEAVE BOOKS>>
146. George Bowering — Re: disgruntled postal workers
147. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: David Tudor (fwd)]
148. Douglis Beck — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1996 to 11 Aug 1996
149. Loss Glazier — Re: Rube Steps In <<LEAVE BOOKS>>

15 AUG 1996

150. Gabrielle Welford — info on azi (fwd)
151. . — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
152. Gabrielle Welford — Re: growing up poems
153. Schuchat — WW II in Japanese Film (fwd)
154. Brian Carpenter — Re: growing up poems
155. Janet S. Gray — Growing up marginalized poems
156. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: growing up poems
157. william marsh — Re: speed and WODEN Nichol
158. william marsh — Re: Tyuonyi & building clocks
159. Daniel Bouchard — Pub Announcement: MASS AVE.
160. Christina Fairbank Chirot — growing up poems
161. Joseph Lease — Re: growing up poems
162. Gabrielle Welford — problems with the Azi message
163. maria damon — Re: problems with the Azi message
164. Gale Nelson — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
165. David Baratier — tying up
166. Gabrielle Welford — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1996 to 11 Aug 1996
167. Joseph Lease — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
168. Gale Nelson — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
169. Gabrielle Welford — Re: problems with the Azi message
170. Franklin Bruno — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
171. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: problems with the Azi message
172. Walter K. Lew — Re: growing up poems
173. Emily Lloyd — Incident...
174. Emily Lloyd — Re: Incident
175. Kathrine Varnes — Re: growing up poems
176. DS — Re: growing up poems
177. DS — Re: info on azi (fwd)
178. DS — Re: growing up poems
179. Tony Green — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
180. Gabrielle Welford — Re: problems with the Azi message
181. Tony Green — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
182. Tony Green — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
183. Gabrielle Welford — Re: info on azi (fwd)
184. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
185. Rod Smith — Re: Bruce Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
186. George Bowering — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)

16 AUG 1996

187. Joel Kuszai — fwd this? (fwd)
188. Gale Nelson — Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
189. Gale Nelson — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
190. Gale Nelson — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
191. Henry Gould — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
192. filch — A.N. Chicherin

193. Rod Smith — New Andrews, Auster, Lazer &&& @ Bridge Street

17 AUG 1996

194. Rachel Loden — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
195. Bob Holman — National Poetry Slam
196. Bob Holman — National Poetry Slam -- AOL CyberSlam
197. maria damon — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
198. Hank Lazer — Re: George Starbuck
199. Joe Amato — Re: speed (long)
200. maria damon — Re: George Starbuck
201. Douglis Beck — textual graphicalities
202. Douglis Beck — poetry & speed; poetry on speed; & a 180 turn around for love
203. Joseph Zitt — Re: National Poetry Slam
204. Joseph Zitt — Re: National Poetry Slam - David Benedetti
205. JOEL LEWIS — Re: Williams house to be sold
206. Christina Fairbank Chirot — slamming, competition, entertainment, politics
207. filch — Re: National Poetry Slam - David Benedetti
208. maria damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
209. { brad brace } — fresh theoretical interpretations

18 AUG 1996

210. David Benedetti — National Poetry Slam
211. Anselm Hollo — George Starbuck
212. Kevin Killian — SPT Archive
213. William M. Northcutt — identify the poem--please.
214. Susan Schultz — Re: Tinfish Net\work
215. Andrew D Epstein — Re: identify the poem--please.
216. Kevin Killian — SPT Archive, part 2
217. maria damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
218. Joe Amato — Re: National Poetry Slam
219. Ian Wilson — Re: National Poetry Slam
220. maria damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
221. maria damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
222. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — slammin' and jammin'
223. Schuchat — Re: identify the poem--please.
224. maria damon — Re: slammin' and jammin'
225. Michael Boughn — the wheelbarrow
226. Louis Cabri — hole 6
227. Tony Green — Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996

19 AUG 1996

228. Bob Holman — National Poetry Slam
229. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
230. George Bowering — Re: George Starbuck
231. George Bowering — Re: identify the poem--please.
232. Susan Schultz — Re: new addresses
233. Rachel Loden — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
234. Joseph Zitt — Re: National Poetry Slam
235. maria damon — Re: the wheelbarrow
236. Joe Amato — Re: National Poetry Slam
237. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: the wheelbarrow
238. John E. Matthias — Berryman
239. Henry Gould — Re: performance art/slams
240. maria damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
241. Christina Fairbank Chirot — read barrows & lifts (fwd)
242. Joseph Zitt — Maybe Morphing Hammer Quoters?
243. Joe Amato — Re: National Poetry Slam

244. Robert Drake — _A Humument_ pages...
245. Robert Drake — [[redacted]: Postypographika update]
246. Sylvester Pollet — National Poetry Foundation Catalogue
247. Christopher J. Beach — ACLA 1997 panel
248. Maria Damon — hammer ref
249. Maria Damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
250. Herb Levy — Re: _A Humument_ pages...
251. filch — Re: National Poetry Slam
252. Christina Fairbank Chirot — tom phillips
253. George Bowering — Re: the wheelbarrow
254. Tony Green — Re: George Starbuck
255. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
256. George Bowering — Re: read barrows & lifts (fwd)
257. Peter Quartermain — The well-read Barrow
258. Tony Green — Re: poetry slams
259. Poetics List — Twentieth-Century Lit. Conference (fwd)
260. maria damon — Re: poetry slams
261. kaona — Re: hammer ref
262. Rachel Loden — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
263. David Benedetti — poetry slams

20 AUG 1996

264. wystan — Re: Twentieth-Century Lit. Conference (fwd)
265. George Bowering — Re: George Starbuck
266. Michael Boughn — Re: The well-read Barrow
267. Rachel Loden — trial transcript (was Re: poetry slams)
268. maria damon — Re: trial transcript (was Re: poetry slams)
269. Christina Fairbank Chirot — red Indian barrow
270. henry gould — Re: red Indian barrow
271. henry gould — Re: red Indian barrow
272. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: The well-read Barrow
273. henry — Re: The well-read Barrow
274. Judy Roitman — Re: red Indian barrow
275. henry — Re: red Indian barrow
276. Daniel Bouchard — Re: red Indian barrow
277. George Bowering — Re: red Indian barrow
278. George Bowering — Re: red Indian barrow
279. henry — Re: red Indian barrow
280. George Bowering — Re: red Indian barrow
281. Libbie Rifkin — Berkeley 1965
282. Michael Boughn — Re: red Indian barrow
283. william marsh — Re: The well-read Barrow
284. maria damon — conference fwd
285. Tony Green — Re: George Starbuck
286. Walter K. Lew — Re: conference fwd
287. Tony Green — Re: red Indian barrow
288. Walter K. Lew — Whoops

21 AUG 1996

289. George Bowering — Re: red Indian barrow
290. George Bowering — Re: red Indian barrow
291. Christina Fairbank Chirot — imagination affirms reality
292. Ron Silliman — Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Aug 1996 to 20 Aug 1996
293. Pierre Joris — nice one, bob
294. henry — Re: red Indian barrow
295. henry — Re: red Indian barrow
296. henry — Re: red Indian barrow

297. Gwyn McVay — Re: Stockhausen in New York
298. maria damon — Re: conference fwd
299. Schuchat — Re: imagination affirms reality
300. Schuchat — Re: red Indian barrow
301. maria damon — Re: imagination affirms reality
302. henry gould — Re: red Indian barrow
303. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: sentimental
304. Jordan Davis — August by Dan Bouchard
305. Wendy McClure — Slams again; chicken in the classroom
306. Joseph Lease — Re: August by Dan Bouchard
307. Ira Lightman — Stockhausen in New York
308. maria damon — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
309. George Bowering — Re: red Indian barrow
310. henry — Re: red Indian barrow
311. George Bowering — Re: red Indian barrow
312. Tony Green — Scandalous Olson at Berkeley?
313. Tony Green — Re: red Indian barrow
314. Tony Green — Re: red Indian barrow
315. Tony Green — Re: red Indian barrow
316. Christina Fairbank Chirot — chickens
317. Tony Green — Re: red Indian barrow
318. filch — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
319. Peter Quartermain — Re: the well-read barrow yet again
320. David Benedetti — So much depends

22 AUG 1996

321. Tenney Nathanson — one block over
322. Tenney Nathanson — Tangents R Us
323. Tenney Nathanson — my cat Geoffrey
324. Michael Boughn — Re: my cat Geoffrey
325. henry — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
326. Rachel Loden — Re: Scandalous Olson at Berkeley?
327. henry — Re: red Indian barrow
328. henry — Re: red Indian barrow
329. henry — Re: the well-read barrow yet again
330. Rachel Loden — Re: Berkeley 1965
331. Jordan Davis — "this is the coding necessary to understand that poem"
332. Jonathan A Levin — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
333. maria damon — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
334. Gwyn McVay — Chax e-mail?
335. Julia Stein — Re: POETICS Digest - 20 Aug 1996 to 21 Aug 1996
336. william marsh — Re: argument
337. Henry Gould — Re: argument
338. Christina Fairbank Chirot — c/od-ing, hide in plain sight
339. filch — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
340. Judy Roitman — Re: argument
341. Joe Amato — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
342. Tony Green — Re: argument
343. Tony Green — Re: argument
344. Peter Quartermain — Re: argument
345. Jordan Davis — that lions poet

23 AUG 1996

346. Wendy McClure — slams again; symbolic chicken in the classroom
347. henry gould — Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
348. Judy Roitman — Re: argument
349. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: small presses

350. Libbie Rifkin — Re: Berkeley 1965
351. George Bowering — Re: Berkeley 1965
352. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
353. Jonathan Brannen — NEW MARK WALLACE CHAPBOOK
354. Susan Schultz — Re: NEW MARK WALLACE CHAPBOOK
355. Joseph Zitt — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
356. william marsh — Re: Chax e-mail?

24 AUG 1996

357. Rachel Loden — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
358. Burt Kimmelman — Re: Berkeley 1965

25 AUG 1996

359. George Bowering — Re: Berkeley 1965
360. Rachel Loden — it's citation time
361. maria damon — weiner again
362. Joseph Zitt — Re: word alchemy
363. maria damon — Re: weiner again
364. maria damon — Re: weiner again
365. maria damon — word alchemy
366. Alan Sondheim — Re: word alchemy
367. Charles Bernstein — Re: weiner again
368. maria damon — Re: word alchemy
369. maria damon — Re: weiner again
370. Alan Sondheim — Re: word alchemy
371. Herb Levy — Poetics scrap book
372. maria damon — Re: word alchemy
373. Christina Fairbank Chirot — word alchemy
374. Charles Smith — Re: word alchemy

26 AUG 1996

375. maria damon — Re: weiner
376. Oren Izenberg — Re: word alchemy
377. Oren Izenberg — Re: weiner
378. Alan Sondheim — Re: weiner
379. Alan Sondheim — Re: word alchemy
380. Douglis Beck — small press & poetry
381. Alan Sondheim — Re: word alchemy
382. Thomas Bell — Re: word alchemy
383. Christina Fairbank Chirot — word alchemy
384. Rachel Loden — Hannah
385. Judy Roitman — Re: word alchemy
386. maria damon — Re: word alchemy
387. Jerry Rothenberg — Re: word alchemy
388. maria damon — Re: word alchemy
389. Burt Kimmelman — Re: Berkeley 1965
390. Kevin Killian — Marlene Nourbese Philip
391. Jerry Rothenberg — Re: Berkeley 1965
392. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: word alchemy (fwd)
393. George Bowering — Re: word alchemy
394. George Bowering — Re: weiner
395. maria damon — Re: weiner
396. James Sherry — Hannah Weiner
397. Charles Watts — Berkeley poetry conference 1965
398. Joseph Zitt — Re: Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources
399. maria damon — Re: Hannah Weiner

27 AUG 1996

400. Carnography — Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources
401. Carnography — Re: Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources
402. - Kim Tedrow — Hannah/Anna
403. maria damon — Re: Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources
404. Burt Kimmelman — Re: Berkeley 1965
405. Ira Lightman — Robert Sward etc missed by UTOPIAN FORMALIST round-ups
406. Cynthia Franklin — Intl.MELUS Conf.
407. James Sherry — 4 U.K. Writers Read at Segue Performance Space
408. Ian Wilson — Re: Intl.MELUS Conf.
409. Julia Stein — Re: POETICS Digest - 25 Aug 1996 to 26 Aug 1996
410. Rachel Loden — Re: Robert Sward etc missed by UTOPIAN FORMALIST round-ups
411. Gabrielle Welford — NCADP CASE BRIEF: South African Youngster Facing Death Row in Mississi…

28 AUG 1996

412. Peter Quartermain — AA in NH
413. Tom Mandel — Gematria
414. Gwyn McVay — Re: Gematria
415. Wendy Battin — Re: Robert Sward etc missed by UTOPIAN FORMALIST round-ups
416. Gwyn McVay — Swear word here!
417. Hank Lazer — Re: mandel / release
418. Carnography — Re: Gematria
419. Tenney Nathanson — raw & cooked (reheated?)
420. Wendy Battin — Virtual Muse
421. George Bowering — Re: Marlatt
422. George Bowering — Re: AA in NH
423. George Bowering — Re: Swear word here!

29 AUG 1996

424. Rachel Loden — Re: Swear word here!
425. Gwyn McVay — Re: Swear word here!
426. Tom Mandel — Gematria
427. Carl Lynden Peters — THINKINGalien (fwd)
428. Julia Stein — Re: Justice for Garment Workers Reading

30 AUG 1996

429. Blair Seagram — 12? in sanskrit
430. Michael Boughn — need some info
431. Diane Marie Ward — Re: need some info
432. Gale Nelson — Events in Providence
433. Joe Amato — Re: interesting article on the web
434. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Street-Art: File: "DATABASE OUTPUT" (fwd)
435. Jordan Davis — (no subject)
436. George Bowering — Re: Kerouac
437. Douglas Messerli — Re: Hannah Weiner
438. jeffrey timmons — xxx/event: one

31 AUG 1996

439. Douglis Beck — Corbu Poetics?

1. Ron Silliman

Tom Mandel's Sonnets

Thu 1 Aug 1996

Tom Mandel's sonnet sequence Prospect of Release is out (Chax Press, $12.95, direct from the publisher at [redacted] or wherever good books are sold...meaning SPD in Berkeley, Woodland Pattern in Milwaukee and through Rod Smith at Bridge in D.C.) and I'm as blown away by this work as I was when I first saw the manuscript. Mandel has found a perfect contemporary value for this form in the elegaic. It's remarkable that one can write 50 elegies to one man, even a step-father, each of them so intense in feeling and ultimately different from one another:

To one who dies the world begins again followed by words to describe it.
Youth and age, luminous with restraint cleaved rock or two not joined. The dead unite the clods of dirt that cover them with instruction, their bones without bare hands. I will do for him what my father did for his. Landscape is imperfect, moonlight to make it so.

In unwitting contribution the scientist has taken to himself with love this dead thing, vibrating the conscious use of his own social maladjustment to reveal a living act of revision.

There are some tremendous things going on in this poem (just watch how the "v" is used in the final line for example, how it's played off the liquids there against its being paired with the long "i" and hard "b" two lines earlier) as there are in every poem in this book.

Prospect of Release is also, to the best of my knowledge, the first Chax Press volume in awhile to declare itself "Chax Press Tucson 1996" although that would be a virtual Tucson I do believe -- Charles and his family have not made the move back from Minneapolis quite yet.

Ron Silliman
[redacted]

↑ Index

2. Loss Glazier

Re: Spoken word

Thu 1 Aug 1996

If this hasn't appeared in this thread yet, I'd like to point out spoken word available chez nous - the nous being all of us - available through Linebreak. This is what's cookin'...

These recordings are of an extraordinary quality. Production this attentive is all too rare in spoken word recordings.

---------- [from the Linebreak Programs page]

Clicking an author's or artist's name connects you to a page with their picture, a description of their LINEbreak interview/performance, and their actual LINEbreak program in various soundfile formats. (There is also a link to their EPC Author Home Page, where applicable.)

Available programs:

Robert Creeley
Ray Federman
Steve McCaffery
Lance & Andrea Olsen
Jena Osman
Ron Silliman
Dennis Tedlock
Fiona Templeton
Cecilia Vicun~a

LINEbreak programs with the following people are in production and will be available here in this summer:

Loss Pequen~o Glazier & Ken Sherwood
Lyn Hejinian
Barbara Guest
Ben Friedlander
Paul Auster
Bruce Andrews
Peter Straub
Jackson Mac Low
Susan Howe
Madeline Gins

and others.

Programs will appear steadily throughout the year as they are produced for broadcast.

↑ Index

3. Joseph Lease

Re: Language Poetry; Deconstruction; New Criticism

Thu 1 Aug 1996

On Wed, 31 Jul 1996, george hartley wrote:

> Tristan:
>
> Would a deconstruction of language poetry -- non-representational language which strives to produce the primary world of experience to the dis-ease of such poetics as Louis Simpson's -- be essentially a New Critical attempt to render a text definitively (or unify textualities within a poem) what Marjorie Perloff has noted as its vitally indeterminate qualifying characteristics?
>
> What is "the primary world of experience"? To the best of my knowledge, Nick Piombino is the only poet related to language writing who explicitly uses the language of "experience" (although he has something very specific in mind). Barry Watten talks about "the world" lots in Total Syntax, but again in ways that would undo some uses of the concept. What experiences and what worlds do you have in mind?
>
> The potential connections between a certain deconstruction & New Criticism are in themselves intriguing--I'd want more time to construct something there, but I think I'd begin by questioning how deconstruction would unify textualities: the word "unify" might be the point at which we could distinguish between the two projects, both of which depend on intense scrutiny (close reading) of the text(s). Does the "its" of "its vitally indeterminate qualifying" refer to deconstruction or language poetry or new criticism?
>
> Maybe I've missed some earlier parts of this thread.
>
> George

RE: Language Poetry and "world" and "experience"-- from Lucaks on, world means something that points simultaneously to epic and lyric--not mutually exclusive but epistemologically divergent genres/modes--Watten's worldliness has much to do with what Thoreau and Cage would have been like if they had been Marxists or Neomarxists instead of post-Kantians-- again--with experience--you have a divergent configuration within a Neomarxist (Althusser) sense of how experience is constructed by culture--and this does not obviate what Emerson indicated by experience and how that line points to (for example) Williams and Baraka and Wieners and Fanny Howe-- perhaps words like world and experience can be experienced by poets as passageways that lead simultaneously to different experiences of different language-worlds--

Joseph Lease

↑ Index

4. Bob Gale

Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis

Thu 1 Aug 1996

The Cacophony Chorus is pleased to present a reading by Chicago poet Marc Smith, inventor of the Poetry Slam, in Minneapolis, Aug 14.

Smith, a guiding force behind the performance poetry movement in the U.S., will perform at the Bryant Lake Bowl. Energetic, explosive, and entertaining, Smith's freewheeling readings mix the power of poetry with the possibilities of performance into one seamless blend.

Smith will be reading and signing copies of CROWDPLEASER--his first ever book of poems--in which he recreates the effect of live presentation on the printed page with the help of vivid line drawings by Michael Acerra.

The Bryant Lake Bowl, located at 810 West Lake Street in South Minneapolis, features an intimate cabaret theater with full bar and restaurant service. Tickets are $6.00. Call [redacted] for reservations.

The Cacophony Chorus is an ongoing performance series highlighting the variety and vibrancy of spoken word talent in the Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

5. David Baratier

Re: Spoken word

Thu 1 Aug 1996

I should have more information mid-next-week on the Taylor CD.
As far as other suggestions: most of them aren't on CD

Joy Harjo: Furious Light (tape) or The Woman who fell from the sky (book/tape comb.)
Kenneth Patchen: Live in Canada (w/ Charlie Mingus) Folkways (record)

But as important check out what the journals are doing: Exact Change Yearbook has a CD, Apostrophe is out on tape, WE has a CD out (I think its issue 14) and write to Blank Gun Silencer (now nerve bundle review) and Black Bear Review, they have a whole series of audio recordings. Most of the adresses are on the buffalo web site under Spencers list, the ones that aren't I can get for you. Be well

David Baratier

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: Author: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> at INTERNET Date: 30/07/1996 10:05

> Date: Mon, 29 Jul 1996 13:51:28 CST
> From: David Baratier <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Spoken Word recordings
>
> Steven Taylor has a CD which just came out

Do you have a label or contact info on that?

Thanks,
Bob

\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

6. Bob Holman
Mastery
Thu 1 Aug 1996

Wasn't it Artaud who declared "No more masterpieces!" and then retreated to his cublicle to churn out "Jet of Blood," which is not only a masterpiece, but is the masterpiece to end all masterpieces?

↑ Index

7. maria damon
Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis
Thu 1 Aug 1996

bob gale: who is publishing marc smith's crowdpleaser?
md

↑ Index

8. Julie Marie Schmid

Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis

Thu 1 Aug 1996

Hey, Maria--

It's me again. Crowdpleaser is being published by Jeff Helgeson/Collage Press here in Chicago. Marc Smith has a Crowdpleaser web page, which I believe has all the pertinent info. But Snail Mail is Collage Press, P.O. Box 1904, Chicago, IL 60690-1904 and phone is [redacted]. Jeff's a great guy and the book is fab!

jms

On Thu, 1 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:

> bob gale: who is publishing marc smith's crowdpleaser?
> md

↑ Index

9. Charles Bernstein

Re: Spoken Word, LINEbreak, & the list

Thu 1 Aug 1996

I am just back from a month mostly off-line (I did check in a few times earlier in the month) and will soon read through the 1500 or so messages for what once a slow month on this list. Thanks again to Joel Kuszai who watched over the list in my absence and will continue to work with me on the list. Questions about the list should be directed to us at [redacted]. At least for the moment. The whole VMS cluster at UB (our VAX system) is being dismantled this year so all those "@ubvms" addresses will be changing to "@acsu.buffalo.edu". Our IBM system is also being dismantled and that means this list will be shifted over to a UNIX machine, as "transparently" as possible, and that our new list address will change either to [redacted] or [redacted]. The "L" might be good as point of clarification but then "poetics" alone remains appealing. More on this as we hear about it.

ON SPOKEN WORD, or as I would prefer to call it, poetry readings, as many on the list will know, in 1994 I edited a CD called LIVE AT THE EAR, with selections from 13 poets: Susan Howe, Ron Silliman, Leslie Scalapino, Ted Greenwald, Rosmarie Waldrop, Alan Davies, Barrett Watten, Erica Hunt, Bruce Andrews, Hannah Weiner, Steve McCaffery, Ann Lauterbach, and myself. Remarkably, copies are STILL AVAILALE for the original $15.95 if you ACT NOW.

Order from SPD or direct from the Elemenope Productions: 7 Market Square, Suite 281 Pittsburgh, PA 15222 or use Elemenope's "800" number: [redacted].

I posted some information, including technical details, on LINEbreak as my last post in late June. But to repeat: These are a series of about 30 half-hour interview shows that I did over last year, produced by Martin Spinelli; each include about 10 minutes of readings. All the shows will be put up at the EPC but we are also making cassettes available and we are also working on a book version of the shows. The shows are now available through the Public Radio Satellite Program and will be made available to independent stations as well: however, radio programmers are not exactly lookin' to add poetry to their schedules so the potential for this program to be heard over the radio is sadly diminished. For further information on LINEbreak, you can contact Martin at [redacted]. OUR URL is http://writing.upenn.edu/ecp/linebreak.

↑ Index

10. Robert Drake

Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis

Thu 1 Aug 1996

> Smith, a guiding force behind the performance poetry movement...

bob, would you mind sharing your conception of what this "movement" includes, or leaves out? i've heard it most often in conjunction w/ the slam scene; & hardly ever applied to sound poetry, fr example... "spoken word", and just plain old poetry readings, seem to intersect but not completely overlap... "movement" seems like such a strongly loaded term to me (a marketing term, to my ear), i wonder how its meant. seems to be a number of us here w/ interests in this direction--any other opins?

lbd

↑ Index

11. Schuchat

Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis

Thu 1 Aug 1996

Huh? Marc Smith invented the slam? I thought Al Simmons and Terry Jacobus invented the slam, with poetry readings in boxing rings, etc, in Chicago around about 1980? At least I was hearing about slams and them back then.

↑ Index

12. Charles Bernstein
Fall Readings at UB
Thu 1 Aug 1996

Time to make those plane reservations!

Wednesdays at 4 Plus

FALL POETRY AND PROSE September 4 - November 20, 1996
AT THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, BUFFALO (AMHERST CAMPUS)
All events FREE.

LINEbreak on WBFO
Mondays at 8pm starting Sept. 9
Host Charles Bernstein interviews poets and fiction writers in this one-hour arts magazine of the air produced by Martin Spinelli. Tune in on WBFO radio (88.7 FM).

Cris Cheek Catherine Walsh Poetry Reading and Performance Weds., Sept. 4, 4pm, University Gallery, Center for the Arts Catherine Walsh lives in Dublin, where she teaches English to refugees. Her poetry books include Idir Eatortha, Pitch, and Short Stories. Cris Cheek is an English performance artist and poet with a new spoken word CD in the works. His books include: a present, m u d, and 444. He is also a member of the performance music trio Slant.

Deanna Ferguson
Poetry Reading
Weds., Sept. 11, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
Deanna Ferguson lives in Vancouver, where she is a publisher of Tsunami Editions and a co-editor of BOO Magazine. Her books include Rough Bush, The Relative Minor; Link Fantasy, with Stan Douglas; and Will Tear Us.

Pierre Joris
Poetry/Translation Reading
Weds., Sept. 25, 4pm, CFA Screening Rm
Talk
"Untranslatability/Translatability : Community/Uncommunity"
Thurs., Sept. 26, 12:30pm, 438 Clemens Hall
Pierre Joris is the author of Brecca: Selected Poems 1972-1986, the translator of Celan, Blanchot, Jabès, and Schwitters; and the co-editor of Poems for the Millennium: The University of California Book of Modern and Postmodern Poetry. He teaches at SUNY-Albany.

John Felstiner, Armand Schwerner Translation Colloquium Thurs., Oct. 3, 12:30, 420 Capen Hall Lecture by John Felstiner: "The Art of Loss: Translating Neruda and Celan" Poetry Reading and Talk by Armand Schwerner: "The Tablets / Dante" Introductions/responses: Jerome Rothenberg, Dennis Tedlock,

Ray Federman Armand Schwerner's most recent book collects his legendary serial poem The Tablets (Atlas Press). Presently, he is at work on translations of Dante. John Felstiner is the author of the critically acclaimed study, Paul Celan: Poet, Survivor, Jew (Yale) and of Translating Neruda: The Way to Macchu Picchu (Stanford). He teaches English and Jewish studies at Stanford. Felstiner will also be giving a talk and book signing at Talking Leaves Books at 6:30pm.

Lawrence Block
Prose Reading
Weds., Oct. 9, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
Buffalo-native Lawrence Block is a contemporary master of mystery and suspense. Among his most recent, best-selling books are Coward's Kiss (Carroll & Graf), Spider, Spin Me A Web (Morrow/Quill), The Burglar Who Liked To Quote Kipling (Dutton), and You Could Call It Murder (Carroll & Graf).

Susan Schultz Lecture "Local Vocals: Hawai'i's Pidgin Literature, Performance, and Postcoloniality" Thurs., Oct. 10, 4pm, 438 Clemens Susan Schultz's poetry books include The Lost Country, Another Childhood and, forthcoming, Aleatory Allegories. She is a professor at the University of Hawai'i-Manoa and the editor of the literary magazine Tinfish and of the critical collection The Tribe of John: Ashbery and Contemporary Poetry. Schultz is a Poetics Program Fellow for the semester.

Robert Creeley at 70: A Celebration
Thurs., Oct. 10 to Sat., Oct. 12
Join John Ashbery, Gil Sorrentino, Amiri Baraka, Eileen Myles, Jim Dine, and Steve Kuhn & Carol Fredette, Mercury Rev at the Katherine Cornell Theater (UB North Campus) and Hallwalls.

Serge Gavronsky
Poetry/translation reading
Weds., Oct. 16, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
Talk
"Transpoetics: Theory and Models"
Thurs., Oct. 17, 12:30pm, 438 Clemens Hall
Serge Gavronsky has translated Ponge, Zukofsky, Hocquard, Mansour, and Arakawa & Gins; he edited Modern French Poetry and the forthcoming Six Contemporary French Woman Poets; his most recent book is Towards a New Poetics: Contemporary Writing in France. He teaches at Barnard.

Al Cook
Lecture
"New Musics in Poetry: Senses of Sound"
Fri., Oct. 18, 4pm, 420 Capen Hall
Al Cook is the legendary founder of "poetics" at UB, where he taught from 1963-1978. Cook is the author of 20 books of criticism and 8 books of poetry, and the translator of Oedipus Rex and The Odyssey. He is Ford Foundation Professor (Emeritus) of Comparative Literature, Classics, and English at Brown.

Thom Gunn
"Committee for Poetry" Reading
Mon., Oct. 21, 4pm, location TBA
Poet and MacArthur fellow Thom Gunn's Collected Poems were published last year by Farrar, Straus & Giroux, which has also issued Moly, and My Sad Captains. His other books include two collections of essays and memoirs: The Occasions of Poetry and Shelf Life.

Leslie Scalapino
Poetry Reading
Weds., Oct. 23, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
A Conversation with Leslie Scalapino
Thursday, Oct. 24, 12:30pm, 438 Clemens
Leslie Scalapino's remarkable series of books include The Front Matter, Dead Souls (Wesleyan), Defoe (Sun & Moon), a collection of essays Objects in the Terrifying Tense / Longing from Taking Place (Roof), and a new selected works Green & Black (Talisman). She edits O Books, teaches in Bard's MFA program, and lives in Berkeley.

Robert Olen Butler Prose Reading Wed., Oct. 23, Hallwalls (2495 Main Street, Buffalo), 8 pm Robert Olen Butler the author of the Pulizer-prize winning novel, A Good Scent from a Strange Mountain (Holt) will read from his new book, Tabloid Dreams. His reading is sponsored Butler Chair (Department of English), the World Languages Institute, the Program in Asian Studies, and Just Buffalo.

Leslie Heywood
Multimedia Performance
"Building Backlash Bodies: Visible Invisibilities"
Weds., Oct. 30, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
Leslie Heywood's Dedication to Hunger: The Anorexic Aesthetic in Modern Culture is just out from UC Press. Her performance touches on the intersection between her experiences as a "disciplined body" in intercollegiate track and cross country and a "disciplined mind" in the academy. A champion weight-lifter, she teaches at SUNY-Binghamton.

Murray Edmond Poetry Reading and Talk
Fri., Nov. 1, 11am, 438 Clemens Hall Auckland poet Murray Edmond will read from new work and talk about new developments in New Zealand poetry. Edmond's books include End Wall, Letters and Paragraphs, From the Word Go, and The Switch. He has recently completed a study of experimental theater in New Zealand in the 1960s and 70s.

John Kinsella
Barrett Watten
Poetry Reading
Weds., Nov. 6, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
"From BASIC English to Under Erasure: Is There a Metalanguage?" — lecture by Barrett Watten: Thurs., Nov. 7, 12:30pm, 438 Clemens
Discussion with John Kinsella on new Australian poetry: Thurs., Nov. 7, 10:30am, 438 Clemens Barrett Watten's Frame is new this Fall from Sun & Moon. Editor of This and co-editor of Poetics Journal, Watten's other books include Progress and Total Syntax. He teaches at Wayne State.
John Kinsella is the author of The Undertow: New and Selected Poems and Syzygy. One of Australia most innovative young poets, he edits Salt.

W. S. Merwin
Silverman Poetry Reading
Fri., Nov. 8, 8pm, 250 Baird Hall
Among award-winning poet W. S. Merwin's recent books are The Lost Upland (Knopf), Selected Poems (Atheneum), and his translation of Neruda's Twenty Love Poems and a Song of Despair.

Hank Lazer
Susan Schultz
Poetry Reading
Weds., Nov. 13, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
Talk/Discussion with Hank Lazer
"Poetry, Criticism, and Institutional Negotiations"
Thurs., Nov. 15, 12:30pm, 438 Clemens
Opposing Poetries is Hank Lazer's new two-volume collection of essays from Northwestern. His poetry books include Doublespace, Inter(ir)ruptions, and, forthcoming, Displayspace. Professor of English at the University of Alabama, Lazer is also Assistant Dean for Humanities and Fine Arts.

Third Annual French Poetry Festival
Josée Lapeyrere, Yves Di Manno, Bernard Noël
Bilingual Poetry Reading
Weds., Nov. 20, 4pm, Univ. Gal., CFA
Josée Lapeyrere is a psychoanalyst, artist, and editor, as well as the author of Belles joues les geraniums, a collection of poems. Yves Di Manno is the director of the collection "Poesie" at Flammarion; Partitions is his most recent poetry collection. Bernard Noël is the author of 35 works including novels (Le Syndrome de Gramsci), art criticism (Magritte), and poetry (La Chute des temps).

"Wednesdays at 4 PLUS" is a Poetics Program production sponsored, in part, by the Melodia E. Jones Chair in French, Department of Modern Languages and Literatures (Raymond Federman); the James H. McNulty Chair, Department of English (Dennis Tedlock); the Samuel P. Capen Chair of Poetry and the Humanities (Robert Creeley); and the David Gray Chair of Poetry and Letters, Department of English (Charles Bernstein), in cooperation with the University Gallery and the Poetry and Rare Books Collection. The Silverman Reading is sponsored by the Oscar Silverman Fund; the Committee for Poetry Reading is sponsored by the Abbott Fund. This series is made possible, in part, by Poets & Writers, Inc., through a major grant from the Lila Wallace-Reader's Digest Fund and a grant from the Literature Program of the New York State Council on the Arts. Coordinated by Charles Bernstein. For further information call [redacted] or contact us at [redacted].

↑ Index

13. Gabrielle Welford
yet another database... (fwd)
Fri 2 Aug 1996

I asked Ted if I could forward this, and though he says he doesn't believe in poetry or dancing, he said yes. gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 1 Aug 1996 15:27:56 -1000
From: t byfield <[redacted]>
To: Multiple recipients of <[redacted]>
Subject: yet another database...

WASHINGTON <bla bla bla> -- Senators worried about TERRORISM called for TIGHTER SECURITY at airports <bla bla bla> having GOVERNMENT take over <bla bla bla> screening passengers and their baggage <bla bla bla> SEN. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said at <bla bla bla> the crash of TWA Flight 800 <bla bla bla> a bomb. <bla bla bla> "the threat of TERRORISM is INCREASING," TRANSPORT SECRETARY Federico Pena <bla bla bla> a NEW COMMISSION <bla bla bla> VICE PRESIDENT Al Gore is examining <bla bla bla> Implementing a COMPREHENSIVE SECURITY SYSTEM could cost <bla bla bla> Lautenberg said, suggesting a <bla bla bla> surcharge known as a "security assessment fee." <NICE NAME, HUH?...bla bla bla> funds could be

sought from the DEFENSE DEPARTMENT budget <bla bla bla> CHAIRMAN Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said he plans a CLOSED HEARING <bla bla bla> DETAILS THAT CANNOT BE DISCUSSED IN PUBLIC. <bla bla bla> SEN. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, called for BETTER PASSENGER INFORMATION TO BE COLLECTED by airlines, to prevent a recurrence of delays in notifying next of kin following an accident <which has NOTHING to do with the ostensible TERRORISM THREAT, of course...bla bla bla> Pena said his agency is readying RULES TO REQUIRE the airlines to get <LOTS OF INFO FROM YOU, bla bla bla>

They're completely fucking nuts.

Ted

↑ Index

14. maria damon

Re: spoken word/Marc Smith

Fri 2 Aug 1996

bob gale rites: (I should note here, I'm one of those heretical "spoken word" people, and I'm grooving on the cross pollination that is taking place with text-based works, whether it is poets, storytellers, or performance artists.)

yr not alone, in fact "crosspollination" is one word i use frequently in describing what i find exciting about poetry/cultural studies/STUFF. i'm not a slammer myself, but a fan of democratic poetries, and i frequently find myself at (affectionate) odds w/ (some of) these here my listmates.. md

↑ Index

15. Bob Gale

Re: spoken word/Marc Smith

Fri 2 Aug 1996

> Date: Thu, 1 Aug 1996 16:39:45 -0400
> From: Robert Drake <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis
>
> Smith, a guiding force behind the performance poetry movement...
>
> bob, would you mind sharing your conception of what this "movement" includes, or leaves out? i've heard it most often in conjunction w/ the slam scene; & hardly ever applied to sound poetry, fr example... "spoken word", and just plain old poetry readings, seem to intersect but not completely overlap... "movement" seems like such a strongly loaded term to me (a marketing term, to my ear), i wonder how its meant. seems to be a number of us here w/ interests in this direction--any other opins?

Yes, you are perhaps correct, "Movement" is a _very_ loaded word -- one person's movement is another person's obstacle. And yes, that post was pulled from a recent news release we sent out, so some marketing tone remained when it really wasn't necessary for this list. My apologies.

I used it because Marc has for over a decade been not only a poet and performer, but a producer and organizer. He's the one who came up with the poetry slam format at the Green Mill in Chicago many years ago -- yes, there were previous poetry boxing matches -- but from my understanding, the distillation that we now call a slam started with Marc.

For a more (in)complete history, check out:

http://www.tezcat.com/~malachit/slam/

I think all this became part of a movement when folks like Smith, Bob Holman (hi Bob), and Gary Glazner started the first National Slams in 1980. Since then it has become an international event with hundreds of participants and thousands of fans, as well as an uncounted number of local unaffiliated slams.

Clearly, the merits of the slam format can be debated (I'm of very mixed opinions myself, and I'm not really interested in going down that road). Neither would I _ever_ argue that the slam is the reason that poetry has regained some level recent cultural popularity.

No, the point being is there is now a whole nother access point to poetry, one available to people outside the academia, and that these folks are begining to network themselves across the country not merely through slam networks, but regional publications/zines, schools/institutions, and other avenues. (Take this list for example.) This is the "movement" I had in mind, and I hope to think of it as inclusive, rather than exclusive. Therefore, IMHO, we're all part of it to some degree or another.

(I should note here, I'm one of those heretical "spoken word" people, and I'm grooving on the cross pollination that is taking place with text-based works, whether it is poets, storytellers, or performance artists.)

If you're interested, I recently interviewed Boston Slam Master Michael Brown about many of these same points:

http://www.bitstream.net/london/may96/brown.html

Peace,
Bob

\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london \\

↑ Index

16. Loss Glazier
Citing online sources
Sat 3 Aug 1996

An article in this issue of _Internet World_ gives an overview of citing online sources. Two sources it gives that seem the mosst interesting are:
"Beyond the MLA Handbook" http://falcon.eku.edu/honors/beyond-mla and
"Elements of E-Text Style"
http://wiretap.spies.com/ftp.items/Library/Classic/estyle.txt Anyway, there's more in the article (September 1996): 72-74.

↑ Index

17. Robert Drake
TapRoot Reviews #9/10 announce
Sat 3 Aug 1996

This is to announce the publication of _TapRoot Reviews_ #9/10 (double issue). Over 300 short reviews of micropress magazines & books, plus articles on Radio Art, Pantograph Press, the Visual Poetry Bienal in Mexico City, poetry videos & CDs, as well as books by Ray DiPalma, Peter Ganick, Susan Smith Nash, Alice Notley, and others. 40 pages, tabloid newsprint format, $5.00 from Burning Press, PO Box 585, Lakewood OH 44107.

Special mention is made, in this issue, of writers or publications that also have material available on the World Wide Web. These reviews are excerpted, along with direct links to about 30 of those WWW resources, at: <http://www.ims.csuohio.edu/TReeWeb/TReeWeb.html>.

Special offer to Poetics list members: new subscribers can receive this double-issue, normally $5.00, for $2.50 with their new subscription--a total of $10 for numbers 9 thru 13. Orders must be received by Friday August 9th (the day our bulk mailing goes out) to take advantage of this offer. Respond via email direct to: <[redacted]> (DO NOT RESPOND TO THE POETICS LIST).

asever luigi-bob drake, editor
TRR/Burning Press/etc...

↑ Index

18. Ron Silliman
Fwd: Borders boycott
Sun 4 Aug 1996

Dear folks:

The picketting in front of Center City Borders continues. Please join us on Saturday, August 10 beginning at 12 noon to show solidarity for fired union activist Miriam Fried. The picketting is taking place every Saturday but we'd like to have a strong NWU showing there on the 10th. Border is located on Walnut St., between 17th and 18th Streets.

For those of you unfamiliar with the saga, here's a brief update. The Center City branch of Borders recently fired one of their employees, ostensibly for bureaucratic reasons. But the truth is, she spearheaded a union drive at the store. After Borders brought in a big union-busting firm, the union drive failed this last March.

The United Food and Commercial Workers have taken up the case, filing an unfair labor practices suit on behalf of Miriam. They are also starting to sign up employees for another union drive (another election can't take place until March 1997).

A number of unions in the city, including AFSCME, UFCW and IWW, are supporting Miriam and the Borders boycott.

So please come out on the 10th, join the picket line, and show writerly solidarity for a fired bookseller.

John

John Feffer
Philadelphia sublocal of the National Writers Union 519 S. Melville St.
Philadelphia, PA 19143
[redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]
url: http://www.libertynet.org/~nwuphil

↑ Index

19. Thomas Bell
cancer poetry again
Sun 4 Aug 1996

I lost the name of the person who first brought this up and was asked by a nurse about publishing the poetry of the girl who died of cancer, but I heard from someone with an interest in publishing it: From [redacted] Wed Jul 31

21:00:37 1996 Date: Wed, 31 Jul 1996 11:01:12 +0200 From: "Vision.quest cc" <[redacted]> To: [redacted] Subject: Cancer poetry Dear Thomas Bell, I picked up your query about "cancer poetry" while browsing the Medicine in Literature messages pages on the internet. I am the new editor of the South African Family Practice Journal, and our October edition will be focusing on cancer. If the person is interested in my having a look at the poetry to see if it will "fit" with the other articles, they should feel free to forward it to me via e-mail. Unfortunately, we would not be able to pay anything (and even if we could, the South African currency is so weak at the moment, it would amount to very little in dollar terms). Also to be taken into account is that the journal has a rather limited circulation at present, even though it is 15 years old. We're working on changing that. I look forward to hearing from you, Roy Jobson (M.D.) Roy and Marje Jobson [redacted] 45 22nd Street, MENLO PARK, Pretoria, South Africa, 0081 Tel/Fax: [redacted]

tom

↑ Index

20. Dan Raphael Dlugonski

Re: spoken word

Sun 4 Aug 1996

>When is a movmeent just a recognition, a naming what has existed for decades. Or you want to convince the public this product is new by focussing on a part of the product that has existed as a minority element. think of the reading that luanched the beats, with kerouac as dorman and designated interruptor.
performance poetry/slams/spoken word have increased awareness of poetry's conneciton with body, vernacular, and current media. some poets have always worked this connection--like blake mallarme whitman.
what would be fantastic would be a wave to maintain the neregy level of 'performance/spoken' with syntax-deep, connotation-rich work (which might not fit the slam's 3 minute limit or appeal to an audience if it was short enough) that is, i believe, at the core of poetry: unleashing the power of language as it can tap collective and specualtive consciousness' in a wide variety of peoples.

> Topics of the day:
>
> 1. yet another database... (fwd)
> 2. spoken word/Marc Smith (2)
>
> ---

Date: Thu, 1 Aug 1996 22:30:36 -1000
From: Gabrielle Welford <[redacted]>
Subject: yet another database... (fwd)

I asked Ted if I could forward this, and though he says he doesn't believe in poetry or dancing, he said yes. gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 1 Aug 1996 15:27:56 -1000
From: t byfield <[redacted]>
To: Multiple recipients of <[redacted]>
Subject: yet another database...

WASHINGTON <bla bla bla> -- Senators worried about TERRORISM called for TIGHTER SECURITY at airports <bla bla bla> having GOVERNMENT take over <bla bla bla> screening passengers and their baggage <bla bla bla> SEN. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said at <bla bla bla> the crash of TWA Flight 800 <bla bla bla> a bomb. <bla bla bla> "the threat of TERRORISM is INCREASING," TRANSPORT SECRETARY Federico Pena <bla bla bla> a NEW COMMISSION <bla bla bla> VICE PRESIDENT Al Gore is examining <bla bla bla> Implementing a COMPREHENSIVE SECURITY SYSTEM could cost <bla bla bla> Lautenberg said, suggesting a <bla bla bla> surcharge known as a "security assessment fee." <NICE NAME, HUH?...bla bla bla> funds could be sought from the DEFENSE DEPARTMENT budget <bla bla bla> CHAIRMAN Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said he plans a CLOSED HEARING <bla bla bla> DETAILS THAT CANNOT BE DISCUSSED IN PUBLIC. <bla bla bla> SEN. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, called for BETTER PASSENGER INFORMATION TO BE COLLECTED by airlines, to prevent a recurrence of delays in notifying next of kin following an accident <which has NOTHING to do with the ostensible TERRORISM THREAT, of course...bla bla bla> Pena said his agency is readying RULES TO REQUIRE the airlines to get <LOTS OF INFO FROM YOU, bla bla bla>

They're completely fucking nuts.

Ted

Date: Fri, 2 Aug 1996 17:03:08 -0600
From: Bob Gale <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: spoken word/Marc Smith

Date: Thu, 1 Aug 1996 16:39:45 -0400
From: Robert Drake <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Marc Smith to perform in Minneapolis

Smith, a guiding force behind the performance poetry movement...

bob, would you mind sharing your conception of what this "movement" includes, or leaves out? i've heard it most often in conjunction w/ the slam scene; & hardly ever applied to sound poetry, fr example... "spoken word", and just plain old poetry readings, seem to intersect but not completely overlap... "movement" seems like such a strongly loaded term to me (a marketing term, to my ear), i wonder how its meant. seems to be a number of us here w/ interests in this direction--any other opins?

Yes, you are perhaps correct, "Movement" is a _very_ loaded word -- one person's movement is another person's obstacle. And yes, that post was pulled from a recent news release we sent out, so some marketing tone remained when it really wasn't necessary for this list. My apologies.

I used it because Marc has for over a decade been not only a poet and performer, but a producer and organizer. He's the one who came up with the poetry slam format at the Green Mill in Chicago many years ago -- yes, there were previous poetry boxing matches -- but from my understanding, the distillation that we now call a slam started with Marc.

For a more (in)complete history, check out:

http://www.tezcat.com/~malachit/slam/

I think all this became part of a movement when folks like Smith, Bob Holman (hi Bob), and Gary Glazner started the first National Slams in 1980. Since then it has become an international event with hundreds of participants and thousands of fans, as well as an uncounted number of local unaffiliated slams.

Clearly, the merits of the slam format can be debated (I'm of very mixed opinions myself, and I'm not really interested in going down that road). Neither would I _ever_ argue that the slam is the reason that poetry has regained some level recent cultural popularity.

No, the point being is there is now a whole nother access point to poetry, one available to people outside the academia, and that these folks are begining to network themselves across the country not merely through slam networks, but regional publications/zines, schools/institutions, and other avenues. (Take this list for example.) This is the "movement" I had in mind, and I hope to think of it as inclusive, rather than exclusive. Therefore, IMHO, we're all part of it to some degree or another.

(I should note here, I'm one of those heretical "spoken word" people, and I'm grooving on the cross pollination that is taking place with text-based works, whether it is poets, storytellers, or performance artists.)

If you're interested, I recently interviewed Boston Slam Master Michael Brown about many of these same points:

http://www.bitstream.net/london/may96/brown.html

Peace,
Bob

*\\ The Spoken Word Network: Home of Shout! Newspaper, *
*\\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions *
*\\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA *
*\\ [redacted] http://www.bitstream.net/london *

Date: Fri, 2 Aug 1996 17:58:37 -0500
From: maria damon <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: spoken word/Marc Smith

bob gale rites:
(I should note here, I'm one of those heretical "spoken word" people, and I'm grooving on the cross pollination that is taking place with text-based works, whether it is poets, storytellers, or performance artists.)

yr not alone, in fact "crosspollination" is one word i use frequently in describing what i find exciting about poetry/cultural studies/STUFF. i'm not a slammer myself, but a fan of democratic poetries, and i frequently find myself at (affectionate) odds w/ (some of) these here my listmates..
md

End of POETICS Digest - 1 Aug 1996 to 2 Aug 1996
****

↑ Index

21. Joseph Zitt
Re: spoken word
Sun 4 Aug 1996

On 4 Aug 96 at 15:43, Dan Raphael Dlugonski wrote:

> what would be fantastic would be a wave to maintain the neregy level of 'performance/spoken' with syntax-deep, connotation-rich work (which might not fit the slam's 3 minute limit or appeal to an audience if it was short enough) that is, i believe, at the core of poetry: unleashing the power of language as it can tap collective and specualtive consciousness' in a wide variety of peoples.

One useful thing that's happening in the slams here in Dallas is that we have featured poets, performing before the event and between the rounds. While these are often visiting Slam poets and the like, they frequently feature poets who work in different formats. It's a good spot for people whose work tends to go on beyond the 3 minute limit or does not have the competitive inyourfaceitude. My sound-poetry ensemble, "Question Authority, the", are going to be featured a few weeks from now. While we're definitely not Slam poetry (though some of our members have slammed), we think what we do will get a good reception (once people get beyond their initial confusion :-]).
---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

22. maria damon
Re: cancer poetry again
Sun 4 Aug 1996

tom bell writes:
> I lost the name of the person who first brought this up and was asked by > a nurse about publishing the poetry of the girl who died of cancer, but I > heard from someone with an interest in publishing it: From > [redacted] Wed Jul 31 21:00:37 1996 Date: Wed, 31 Jul
> 1996 11:01:12 +0200 From: "Vision.quest cc" <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted] Subject: Cancer poetry Dear Thomas Bell, I picked up > your query about "cancer poetry" while browsing the Medicine in Literature > messages pages on the internet. I am the new editor of the South African > Family Practice Journal, and our October edition will be focusing on > cancer. If the person is interested in my having a look at the poetry to > see if it will "fit" with the other articles, they should feel free to > forward it to me via e-mail. Unfortunately, we would not be able to pay > anything (and even if we could, the South African currency is so weak at > the moment, it would amount to very little in dollar terms). Also to be > taken into account is that the journal has a rather limited circulation at > present, even though it is 15 years old. We're working on changing that.

> I look forward to hearing from you, Roy Jobson (M.D.) Roy and Marje Jobson
> [redacted] 45 22nd Street, MENLO PARK, Pretoria, South > Africa, 0081 Tel/Fax: [redacted]
>
> tom

just a note to say that though i don't recall the person's name either (male and from "down under" is all i recall, and not wystan or tony), i feel a glow of pleasure at this possibility, and i like it that this list enabled a (potential) publication of poems know one on the list knows (but cd be important to someone), in a publication that (probably) no one on the list knows (but cd be important to someone). md

↑ Index

23. Daniel Bouchard
Mail >> FWD
Mon 5 Aug 1996

I am forwarding this inquiry at the request of a friend.

_____
LMAAA09046664090; Mon, 5 Aug 1996 12:30:18 -0400

I was wondering if you could do me a favor & post this to that Poem Chat List that you frequent, & see if anyone could provide me with a bit more information on this. (As per your suggestion, I've been considering actually signing ON to that list; but I am not sure that I could get it here in Italy? & anyway, who wants 100 pieces of email every day? I much prefer just 'hearing' about it from you).

Well, on to my question. While in Rome recently, I caught wind of a wonderful piece by Mr. H. Gould that appeared back in the States in something that has been refed to as A POX OF THEM. Apparently it is a perfect example of what the Geist has to say. This is a wonderful question really, What in deed does the Geist say? Can anyone enlighten me as to what a.) The Geist says? & b.) What Henry has said it says, if you feel that a. & b. are substantially different?

{An email document of the text might suffice, but I doubt that a hard copy would ever make it to me--has anyone out there ever tried to GO to the Post-Office in Italy?}

Many thanks. Yours,

T.Door

↑ Index

24. henry
Re: Mail >> FWD
Mon 5 Aug 1996

molte grazie, Gale! I'm either the toast of or getting roasted in Rome, I guess.

p.s. while I've got you online, I'd be molte grateful for any word of mouth you can provide for the Anderson/Waldrop reading on Aug 15th at Native Gallery (8 pm). Maybe see you there? Thanks - Henry

↑ Index

25. Tony Green
Italian post
Mon 5 Aug 1996

Re Italy and Post Office: best I heard was in 70's from a friend who had lived in Italy for a while, Eileen Maitland. The gist was that the backlog of undelivered mail got so big that three weeks worth was incinerated by the P.O. so it cd make a fresh start. How "true" this story is I do not know.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

26. henry
sorry gang
Mon 5 Aug 1996

sorry gang for private post to the list. I'm going back to wooden typewriters & outhouses & doghouses where I belong... - HG

↑ Index

27. David Baratier
mail fwd
Mon 5 Aug 1996

Well, on to my question. While in Rome recently, I caught wind of a wonderful piece by Mr. H. Gould that appeared back in the States in some-thing that has been refed to as A POX OF THEM. Apparently it is a perfect example of what the Geist has to say. This is a wonderful question really, What in deed does the Geist say? Can anyone enlighten me as to what a.)

The Geist says? & b.) What Henry has said it says, if you feel that a. & b. are substantially different?

A.) The geist windbags hardly anything as it is a verb: gesprungen, that is to jump in the past. B.) Henry, following Hopkin's ruse, has made you believe in its plausibility, therefore: Just don't call it late for dinner. Or to re-phrase Pound in a pleasing manner, pilaster and perish!

It's difference is well documented in music, say the differrance between gavotte and goucherie (or cf Yeats _A Vision_ page 117).

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

28. George Bowering
Re: Italian post
Mon 5 Aug 1996

> Re Italy and Post Office: best I heard was in 70's from a friend who had lived in Italy for a while, Eileen Maitland. The gist was that the backlog of > undelivered mail got so big that three weeks worth was incinerated by the P.O. so it cd make a fresh start. How "true" this story is I do not know.
>
> Tony Green,

While in Italy in the Fall of 1977, I saw television coverage of this event (though I dont know whether this happened often). They showed a bulldozer-like machine pushing mounds of mail into the flames.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"a workingman shd/ be alone
with his mind,
whatever that is ."

--Paul Blackburn

↑ Index

29. Kevin Killian
August Events at Small Press Traffic
Tue 6 Aug 1996

Small Press Traffic presents:

Friday, August 9, 7:30 p.m.
at the New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, SF
$5

Mary Burger
Jordan Davis
Robert Hale

Thursday, August 29, 7:30 p.m.
at the New College Theater
777 Valencia Street, SF
$5

Gertrude Stein, Jewish Social Scientists and the ŒJewish Question[1] a talk by Maria Damon

[3]Gertrude Stein, Jewish Social Scientists and the ŒJewish Question[12] will place Stein in dialogue with various Jewish social scientists (Maurice Fishberg, Otto Weininger, Sigmund Freud, Melville Herskovits) who wanted to participate in the social scientific discourse of their time but also had concerns about how, as Jews, to negotiate the anti-Semitism of much of that social science.

↑ Index

30. Ron Silliman
Mail
Tue 6 Aug 1996

When I worked in the U.S. Postal Service (1967-8) the rule of thumb was that the mail had to be delivered only so that there would be room to store the new mail.

Sincerely,

A disgruntled formal postal employee

↑ Index

31. Christina Fairbank Chirot
disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Bartleby
Tue 6 Aug 1996

I was living in Arles, France in May '68. There was no Postes-Telegraphes-Telephones. A dog show drew huge crowds and the Communists attempted to distribute truckloads of free potatoes--which the Gypsies stole. There was so much going on no one missed the mail.

Re disgruntled former postal employees and buried mail, there's Melville's Bartleby the Scrivener, from which this:

The report was this: that Bartleby had been a subordinate clerk in the Dead Letter Office in Washington, from which he had been suddenly removed by a change in the administration. When I think over this rumor, hardly can I express the emotions which seize me. Dead letters! does it not sound like dead men? Conceive a man by nature and misfortune prone to a pallid hopelessness, can any business seem more fitted to heighten it than that of continually handling these dead letters, and assorting them for the flames? . . . On errands of life, these letters speed to death. Ah, Bartleby! Ah, humanity!

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

32. filch

* Hi, I am syntactically correct markup! *

Tue 6 Aug 1996

Hi, I am syntactically correct markup!

↑ Index

33. Rachel Loden

Re: disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Creeley

Tue 6 Aug 1996

And don't forget:

They are taking all my letters, and they put them into a fire.

I see the flames, etc.
But do not care, etc.

They burn everything I have, or what little
I have. I don't care, etc. ...

from THE DISHONEST MAILMEN

by Robert Creeley (in _For Love_)

↑ Index

34. Kevin Killian

Re: disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Bartleby

Tue 6 Aug 1996

This is Dodie Bellamy.

US fiction re the post office:

From the Eudora manual, Version 1.5:

"When I was looking for a name for my new Post Office Protocol mail program, I thought immediately of the title of a short story I¹d read years before: 'Why I Live at the P.O.' So I named the program after the author of the story, Eudora Welty.

"'Why I Live at the P.O.' can be found in a collection titled A Curtain of Green (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich). I highly recommend reading it, and anything else you can find by Ms. Welty. Her stories are funny, sad, and fascinating; she¹s surely one of the great American writers."

‹ Steve Dorner

↑ Index

35. Christina Fairbank Chirot

Hiroshima & Shadows

Tue 6 Aug 1996

Re Melville's "Dead letters! does it not sound like dead men?"

Today is the anniversary of Hiroshima nuclear holocaust. To participate in International Shadows Project in memorium of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, contact Jukka Lehmus' Cyanobacteria Page at Grist On-Line http://www.thing.net./~grist. Catalogues of previous Projects available from Karl Young's Light and Dust Page at same URL, as is Young's poem Three, Hiroshima which uses English equivalents of words from Flaubert's Trois Contes and Resnais' film Hiroshima Mon Amour.

Participation in hopes to change Melville's lines "On errands of life, these letters speed to death".

the river vanishes/clusters of petrified promises/carpeted with flowers/wild iris/tortured iron/dawn watches/noon waits/sunset makes promises/bells ring in darkness/the temperature of warm oceans

--from Three, Hiroshima by Karl Young

--db chirot

↑ Index

36. Tony Green
Re: Italian post
Tue 6 Aug 1996

Excellent, George. Good to have what Eileen said confirmed. It was "true": you saw it on TV. I have no head for dates, but I thought she told me this in 1976. Either it happened more than once, or my memory is wrong. Think: no phone or power bills etc: social chaos. "People want delivery".

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

37. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Re: Hiroshima & Shadows
Tue 6 Aug 1996

Many years ago when I was a younger poet (and not yet fiction writer), I wrote a prose poem on the subject of the dead letter office. Text follows:
Wistfulness covers the windows like drapes. Ten men, armed with hankies, sort the mail into two categories, letters that make them happy, letters that make them sad. Don't get me wrong. These civil servants, trusted with the awesome duty of burning millions of letters a year, do not open the envelopes like a mortician prying into the life of a client. It isthe envelope itself that makes them sad. Childish handwriting scrawled to a deceased aunt makes them weep. A letter from overseas to a wife who has moved, unknown to her husband, creates such tumult that the walls quiver like jelly. Few letters are happy ones, the eviction notice never delivered, the lost bill. But when a happy letter comes into their possession, it's a red letter day. The men cheer wildly, tear up letters and toss them out of the window, tickertape fashion. ANd what bliss when something intervenes and a doomed letter, like a terminally ill patient, is saved.

Maxine Chernoff

On Tue, 6 Aug 1996, Christina Fairbank Chirot wrote:

> Re Melville's "Dead letters! does it not sound like dead men?"
>
> Today is the anniversary of Hiroshima nuclear holocaust.
> To particpate in International Shadows Project in memorium of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, contact Jukka Lehmus' Cyanobacteria Page at Grist On-Line http://www.thing.net./~grist. Catalogues of previous Projects available from Karl Young's Light and Dust Page at same URL, as is Young's poem Three, Hiroshima which uses English equivalents of words from Flaubert's Trois Contes and Resnais' film Hiroshima Mon Amour.

> Participation in hopes to change Melville's lines "On errands of life, these letters speed to death".
>
> the river vanishes/clusters of petrified promises/carpeted with flowers/wild iris/tortured iron/dawn watches/noon waits/sunset makes promises/bells ring in darkness/the temperature of warm oceans
>
> --from Three, Hiroshima by Karl Young
>
> --db chirot

↑ Index

38. George Bowering

Re: disgruntled postal workers, dead mail & Bartleby

Tue 6 Aug 1996

My favourite US fiction re the post office isnt _Bartleby_ and it isnt "Why I lIve at the PO" (tho the latter is the source of the name of the e-mail system I am using right now). It is Richard Wright's _Lawd Today_.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"a workingman shd/ be alone
with his mind,
whatever that is ."

--Paul Blackburn

↑ Index

39. Christina Fairbank Chirot

disgruntled postal workers

Tue 6 Aug 1996

Re postal workers, memorials, unions--and dreams:

An interesting book concerning postal workers and the male:

Charles Olson's The Post Office A memoir of his Father (Grey Fox Press, available at SPD and Woodland Pattern) which concerns Olson pere's efforts on behalf of the mail carriers' union. These efforts were much hampered, leading to the senior Olson's loss of joy in life and early death according to his son, who also worked as a mail carrier during summers off from school.

The story of the father linked significantly to the "Pilgrim fathers":

. . . the trouble out of which his death came was born fourteen years earlier . . . . I can date it that exactly because it was his determination to take me to the celebration at Plymouth of the 300th anniversary of the Pilgrim landing that aggravated the situation his superiors at the Post Office had provoked.

The dreams of postal workers--the dream castle built in France by postman in his spare time . . .

. . . the mail/male and analysis: The Purloined Letter & its Lacanian readings . . .

--and Elvis: "Return to Sender"

--db chirot

↑ Index

40. George Bowering
Re: Italian post
Wed 7 Aug 1996

Yeah, I am looking at my backlog of e-mail and wondering whether I can remember how to drive a bulldozer.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"a workingman shd/ be alone
with his mind,
whatever that is ."

--Paul Blackburn

↑ Index

41. George Bowering
Re: disgruntled postal workers
Wed 7 Aug 1996

Couple of years ago Bruce Serafin published a wonderful narrative about working in the post office, in _Vancouver Review_.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"a workingman shd/ be alone
with his mind,
whatever that is ."

--Paul Blackburn

↑ Index

42. Bob Holman

Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Aug 1996 to 5 Aug 1996

Wed 7 Aug 1996

While I attempt to confine Slam poetry -- Hannah Weiner and Doug Oliver, among others, have won Slams at the Nuyorican -- I send along my own experience with...

The Italian Postal System

First all the envelopes are dipped.
For this purpose, giant scald cauldrons
Are used, the very ones that Caesar Augustus
Had ordered brought from Egypt for use as boneboilers
By the Capuchin monks. During the Dip
A strike probably occurs. The vats
Are then generally purged by all passing caribinieri Whose uzis have been recently lost, but if not,
The steam, which has been clinging to the ever-
Changing ceiling frescoes, is revaporized
And thereafter recondensed several times by means Of centrifugal coolants, with diffrent centrifugal coolant Manufacturers employed in the North, Central And Southern Postal Universes. This process quite often replicates
The original addresses directly upon the appropriate
"Lost While In Transit" cards. Thus ends the Dip.

The donkeys are led out, and attached to the carts,
Each bearing the Postal Code Numbers, or, for International,
A System of Carrots, the sizes and expressive shapes
Of which have all been translated into a Code of the World's Regions. Complex to the casual viewer, one Italian family has been arranging these carrots
For centuries, and the Annual Festival of the Carrots, Held in Gubbio but celebrated throughout Italy,
Is cause for great festivities throughout
The Postal System, and any letters in the carrot-id'ed Carts during this period (usually the month of July,
But sometimes extending into August or even September)
Are treated like good friends and are never allowed To leave. Many other elements, remnants of previous Postal Systems, abound, with meanings lost in time but which Still provide glimmers of the ancient ways, and for many

Are, indeed, a palimpsest of life itself. That
The whole actually functions, and that one can,
By placing one's tongue directly on the tiny wafer-
Like stamp, actually participate in this oldest
Of rituals, is a miracle open to everyone.
Bob Holman

↑ Index

43. Jordan Davis
postal reclassification seminars
Wed 7 Aug 1996

You may be interested to know god my fingers are cold that each piece of mail that a postal ocr cannot process is looked at by a video camera, which transmission is sent to god california is cold! a video optical character center in west virginia or montana or arizona. if after a minute the minimum wage typist can't read your red fancy ink zip (not plus four) then someone at the station you dropped the piece picks it up says,, mmm wonder where this goes.

BARCODE!

Love,
Your poetics grump,
Jordan

Jordan Davis
46 e 7 #10
nyc 10003 I believe
[redacted] Spumoni $1.00

↑ Index

44. wystan
poetry and speed
Wed 7 Aug 1996

---

dear list, I know its summer for most of you all, but its peak season down here and i've been asked to think about poetry and speed --not that which you are on but what you are at. I wondered about developing 20 or so propositions before putting out this APB but then speed IS of the essence and why wait? So while I work at those I'd be grateful for any tips, pointers, theories, multi-volume treatises you can put my way,very grateful. yours in haste, wystan

↑ Index

45. Christina Fairbank Chirot
re poetry & speed
Wed 7 Aug 1996

A Crash Course in Poetry & Speed//Speed Reading

Emerson's The Poet: Language is vehicular Pound's ABC of Reading: Keeping the language efficient WCWilliams' Intro to The Wedge: Poem as machine
Olson's Projectivist Verse: FASTER FASTER FASTER

Yet--slow down reading by their methods of notation, use of space of page, types of markings, spacings--ideograms, documents, heiroglyphs--

Speed of poetry vs. speed reading

Kerouac: Writing is silent meditation going a hundred miles an hour.

Kerouac, from Vanity of Duluoz:

(Insofar as nobody loves my dashes anyway, I'll use regular punctuation for the new illiterate generation.)

Virilio in Pure War says there should be a Museum of Accidents, Collisions speed of poetry in relation to state and property (Pound & Emerson's Land-lord, air-lord sea-lord poet--Marinetti's parole in liberta and Fascist state-- speed of poetry & the local: wcw & Olson kerouac's speed: memory and sound--sketching is speed "immediacy and force" (Eigner) or eidetic?

speed in relation to words as things

"Poetry in motion"

↑ Index

46. Pierre Joris
Re: poetry and speed
Wed 7 Aug 1996

On Wed, 7 Aug 1996, wystan wrote:

> dear list,
> I know its summer for most of you all, but its peak season down > here and i've been asked to think about poetry and speed --not that > which you are on but what you are at. I wondered about developing 20 or > so propositions before putting out this APB but then speed IS of the > essence and why wait? So while I work at those I'd be grateful for any > tips, pointers, theories, multi-volume treatises you can put my way,very > grateful.

> yours in haste,
> wystan
>

not too fast, wystan... remember Ed Dorn's line from _Slinger_:

"Speed is not necessarily fast"

(SLINGER in fact is interesting in relation to speed)

on a slow hazy morning in Albany,

Pierre

========== Pierre Joris | "Form fascinates when one no longer has the force Dept. of English | to understand force from within itself. That SUNY Albany | is, to create." -- Jacques Derrida Albany NY 12222 | tel&fax:[redacted] | "Poetry is the promise of a language." email: | -- Friedrich Holderlin [redacted]|
==========

↑ Index

47. hen

Re: poetry and speed

Wed 7 Aug 1996

speed response: first thing I think of when you say "poetry & speed" is "Cape Hatteras" section of H. Crane's _The Bridge_. [You.are.reading. a.programmed.reply.Neuron.receptor.wired.to.hard.disk.for.intellect. enhancement.-Do.not.reply.to.this.robot.] - H. Gould

↑ Index

48. maria damon

Re: re poetry & speed

Wed 7 Aug 1996

paul virilio

and nietzsche on "tempo" --fn was one of the first to compose on the typewriter, along w/ mark twain.

↑ Index

49. Burt Kimmelman
Re: poetry and speed
Wed 7 Aug 1996

Marinetti et al.?
Projective Verse
's INSTANTER?

↑ Index

50. Burt Kimmelman
Calls for papers; history of text
Wed 7 Aug 1996

From: MX%"[redacted]" 6-AUG-1996 22:40:33.47
To: MX%"[redacted]"
CC:
Subj: SHARP Conference and Journal

Date: Tue, 6 Aug 1996 22:37:10 -0400
From: Jonathan Rose <[redacted]>
Subject: SHARP Conference and Journal
To: Multiple recipients of list SHARP-L <[redacted]>

Date: 06-Aug-1996 10:09pm EST
From: Rose, Jonathan
JEROSE
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: [redacted]

TO: Press SH to view recipients.

Subject: SHARP Conference and Journal

CALL FOR PAPERS AND CONTRIBUTORS

The Society for the History of Authorship, Reading and Publishing solicits proposals for its fifth annual conference and contributions for its new scholarly journal, Book History.

SHARP will meet 4-7 July 1997 at the University of Cambridge. We welcome proposals for papers dealing with the creation, diffusion, or reception of script or print in any historical period. There are no limitations on topics. Proposals for either individual papers (20 minutes in length) or full panels (comprising a chair and three papers) may be submitted. We may also sponsor workshops devoted to shorter, more informal presentations of works in progress.

Proposals (one page maximum per paper) and inquiries about the conference itself (including requests for advance booking forms) should be sent to:

James Raven
SHARP Conference Programme Committee
51 Sherlock Close
Cambridge CB3 0HP
United Kingdom

The absolute deadline for receipt of proposals is 20 November 1996. Four travel grants of $250 each will be offered to graduate students who present papers at the conference: to apply, simply indicate in your cover letter that you wish to be considered for this award. All other participants and presenters will be expected to pay their own expenses, including the registration fee; so please submit proposals only if you can arrange for your own funding.

SHARP is also launching a new juried scholarly journal, Book History. It will be a hardcover annual edited by Ezra Greenspan and Jonathan Rose, and published by Penn State Press.

Book History is devoted to every aspect of the history of the book, broadly defined as the history of the creation, dissemination, and reception of script and print. It will publish research on the social, economic, and cultural history of authorship, editing, printing, the book arts, publishing, the book trade, periodicals, newspapers, ephemera, copyright, censorship, literary agents, libraries, literary criticism, canon formation, literacy, literary education, reading habits, and reader response. Book History will be published in English, but it welcomes articles dealing with any national literature. Publication of the first issue is scheduled for August 1998.

Articles dealing with any part of the American hemisphere or the Middle East should be submitted to Prof. Ezra Greenspan, Department of English, University of South Carolina, Columbia, SC 29208, USA, [redacted]. Articles dealing with other parts of the world should be submitted to Prof. Jonathan Rose, Department of History, Drew University, Madison, NJ 07940, USA, [redacted]. Send one hard copy and a WordPerfect diskette for each article.

To obtain information on joining SHARP and subscribing to SHARP publications -- or to request a free sample copy of the SHARP newsletter -- contact the Membership Secretary, Dr. Linda Connors, Drew University Library, Madison, NJ 07940, USA, [redacted].

[Other lists and print publications please copy]

↑ Index

51. Pierre Joris
query
Wed 7 Aug 1996

Would anybody have the address or know the whereabouts of the translator Eric Selland -- or have an address for Leech Books -=- thanks -- Pierre (backchannel's best)

========== Pierre Joris | "Form fascinates when one no longer has the force Dept. of English | to understand force from within itself. That SUNY Albany | is, to create." -- Jacques Derrida Albany NY 12222 | tel&fax:[redacted] | "Poetry is the promise of a language." email: | -- Friedrich Holderlin [redacted]|
==========

↑ Index

52. Burt Kimmelman jeffrey peterson
Wed 7 Aug 1996

jeffrey,

are you out there? rsvp backchannel--i have some oppen chit-chat to share.

burt

↑ Index

53. Charles Alexander changing
Wed 7 Aug 1996

back in minneapolis for two weeks before moving to tucson

but also changing computer & modem, so just in case this is the last message i can get out, I will give details on address change.

for mail arriving by august 16, 1996:

chax press (and/or charles alexander)
box 19178
minneapolis, mn 55419-0178

for mail arriving after august 16, 1996:

chax press (and/or charles alexander)
box 848
tucson, az 85701-0848

If there's a doubt as to when the mail will arrive, please send to the tucson address, as that box is open even now, although no one will be there to pick up that mail until after august 16.

thank you,

charles alexander
chax press

↑ Index

54. Tony Green
Re: poetry and speed
Wed 7 Aug 1996

Hi, Wystan, do you mean maxims like : "Get it down real quick, before you forget it, or before you get waylaid by self-censorship". That kind of speed? It would be speedier to phone you, but yr question is in this public space, so I'll do it the slow way. See you at the A.C.A.G. lunch-time. Best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

55. Tony Green
Charred Italian leaves
Wed 7 Aug 1996

Hey Signor Postino look and see / if there's a lettera there for me...

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

56. George Bowering
Re: poetry and speed
Wed 7 Aug 1996

Well, yeah, I remember the Ed Dorn quip. But remember, Yogi Berra said "It's getting late early."

George Bowering. "a workingman shd/ be alone

2499 West 37th Ave., with his mind,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4 whatever that is ."

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted] --Paul Blackburn

↑ Index

57. George Bowering

Re: poetry and speed

Wed 7 Aug 1996

> Projective Verse
> 's INSTANTER?

Oh!
I always thought that was "instant er" as in "immediate uh"

George Bowering. "a workingman shd/ be alone

2499 West 37th Ave., with his mind,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4 whatever that is ."

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted] --Paul Blackburn

↑ Index

58. Gabrielle Welford

Re: South African Boy Faces Death Row in Mississippi (fwd)

Wed 7 Aug 1996

I couldn't find out more about this. Does anyone else know anything? gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Resent-From: Anthony Alessandrini <[redacted]>
Joedeu-Forgey Elisa Von wrote:
From: [redacted] (Joedeu-Forgey Elisa Von)
> From: "Elaine Salo, Anthro Grad Student" <[redacted]>

> This from the National Coalition against the Death Penalty, located > in Washington DC
> elaine salo
>
> NCADP "STOP KILLING KIDS!" ALERT:
>
> INTERNATIONAL ACTION NEEDED TO KEEP S.AFRICAN BOY OFF OF DEATH ROW

PLEASE ACT NOW.

PLEASE FORWARD.

CASE BRIEF:

After surviving some of Apartheid's most turbulent years, a South African child faces the death penalty in Mississippi for a crime in which he was little more than a bystander.

Azikiwe Kambule came to the United States two years ago with his mother. Azi had no trouble adjusting academically; he received excellent grades, was placed in honors classes and joined the school choir. Yet, Azi found himself under immense social pressure -- he didn't look, speak or dress like other children in his neighborhood.

Azi wanted to "fit in" with his peers, and not be the subject of their ridicule. He met and started spending time with youth who were older and very street-wise. When Azi's grades began to drop, his parents began to worry that his new friends were the wrong crowd. Fearing the worst, they decided to scrape together the funds to send Azi to a boarding school. Tragically, it was already too late.

One evening, Azi found himself in the middle of a car-jacking in which a young African American woman was killed. Azi himself was so far away from the crime scene that he did not hear the gunshots. When arrested, he was the only one to cooperate with the police. He fully explained the terrible series of events and tried repeatedly to help the authorities in their investigation.

Despite having no criminal record, no history of violence, being merely a bystander and providing his full cooperation, Azi has been charged as an accomplice to capital murder. Mississippi is seeking the death penalty against Azi, a child in the tenth grade.

The situation in which Azi finds himself speaks volumes about the use of the death penalty against children. During this decade, only five nations in the world are known to have executed persons for crimes they committed when under 18-years-old. Those countries are Iran, Pakistan, Yemen, Saudi Arabia . . . and the United States. Of these five, America has executed the most. A condemned child in the United States also tends to be of darker hue -- 66% of those persons sentenced to death as children have been from racial minorities. And nowhere is the international rule of law more clear than the prohibition on the use of the death penalty against children. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which the United States has ratified, clearly states that the "sentence of death shall not be imposed for crimes committed by persons below the age of eighteen." Indeed, every major human rights treaty in the world has the same express wording.

Azi sits today in a Mississippi jail cell, with his life hanging in the balance. The District Attorney wishes to seal Azi's fate, and is quoted in the local newspaper as saying that because the "jurors in [predominantly black] Hinds County have a reputation for refusing to vote for the death penalty," he moved Azi's trial to a predominantly white county where the outcome would be more certain, if not predictable.

Azi is a child who has suffered from human rights abuses throughout his brief life -- first in South Africa, and now in the United States. Yet, the errors in his childhood should not prove fatal. He deserves our passion-- not poison. Please join the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty in our efforts to save Azi's life.

4 THINGS YOU CAN DO RIGHT NOW TO HELP SAVE AZI:

1) FORWARD THIS MESSAGE TO ALL OF YOUR FRIENDS AND PRESS CONTACTS

2) WRITE THE D.A.:
---Azi is a South African child who has no history of violence or prior run-ins with the law; was so far away from the murder that he did not even hear the gun shots; and has fully cooperated with the police.

There is no reason why DA Kitchens should be seeking to kill him or put him behind bars for the rest of his life!
-----JAMES KITCHENS, ESQ. / MADISON COUNTY DISTRICT ATTORNEY/P.O. BOX 121/
CANTON, MS 39046/ [redacted]-fax /[redacted]-phone.

3)MAKE YOUR VOICE HEARD:
Please contact the following news organizations:
--Clarion-Ledger Newspaper
[redacted]

--WLBT T.V. News
[redacted]

--Jackson Advocate Newspaper (Black owned &operated) 300 N.Farish Street
Jackson,MS 39202
[redacted]--fax

IF YOU WOULD LIKE MORE INFORMATION OR ARE INTERESTED IN HELPING TO RAISE MONEY FOR AZI'S DEFENSE PLEASE CONTACT THE NCADP AT "[redacted]" or [redacted], ext.5

NOTE: The National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty (NCADP) was founded in 1976. Our affiliates include several large civil rights, religious and political organizations, and over 100 state and local anti-death penalty groups. We are located at 918 F.Street, NW Washington, DC 20024. Our phone number is [redacted]. Our e-mail address in "[redacted]."

↑ Index

59. Gwyn McVay
Polish children's song
Wed 7 Aug 1996

OK, here's one really obscure/abstruse for y'all: I need help tracking down a children's song in Polish which is about crows and begins with the refrain "Caw, caw, caw," although without any Ginsbergian "Lord Lord Lord" in it. I swear this is for a poem. Please help a fellow Polack who married Irish.

Gwyn McVay
no, that doesn't mean green champagne

↑ Index

60. Rod Smith
Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Aug 1996 to 5 Aug 1996
Wed 7 Aug 1996

>Hannah Weiner and Doug Oliver,
among others, have won Slams at the Nuyorican

Bob,
when did Hannah read at the Nuyorican?

--Rod

↑ Index

61. george hartley
Re: re poetry & speed
Thu 8 Aug 1996

Christina Fairbank's
>
> "Poetry in motion"

the Indigo Girls? on this list at last!
the speed of cultural transmission (Virginia Woolf, Galileo)
the speed of light in the poetry of the stars at night

↑ Index

62. Kevin Killian
Yet another SF reading
Thu 8 Aug 1996

Idiom Presents

a reading with

Dodie Bellamy and Alicia Wing

Tuesday, August 13, 7:30 p.m.

at Four Walls Gallery
3160A 16th Street (entrance on Albion)

↑ Index

63. Henry Gould
Upcoming reading (Rhode Island)
Thu 8 Aug 1996

For anyone in the Rhode Island area: on Thursday, August 15th at 8 pm Beth Anderson & Keith Waldrop will be reading at Native Gallery, 387 Charles St, Providence. The current five-artist exhibit will also be open.

Native Gallery is a large new space just beyond the Prov. Main Post Office, in a former factory complex across from the entrance to Rt 146. For more info or directions, call the gallery at [redacted], or email me at [redacted].

Reading sponsored by the Poetry Mission, first of a series at the gallery in conjunction with new shows. Next reading will be Fri. Sept 6th and will feature RI poets Sylvia Moubayed & Stuart Blazer.

↑ Index

64. maria damon
Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Aug 1996 to 5 Aug 1996
Thu 8 Aug 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> >Hannah Weiner and Doug Oliver,
> among others, have won Slams at the Nuyorican
>
> Bob,
> when did Hannah read at the Nuyorican?
>
> --Rod

yeah, i wanna know about this too. what did she read, and what 's her reading like in general?--md

↑ Index

65. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: re poetry & speed
Thu 8 Aug 1996

On Thu, 8 Aug 1996, george hartley wrote:

> Christina Fairbank's
> >
> > "Poetry in motion"
>
> the Indigo Girls? on this list at last!
> the speed of cultural transmission (Virginia Woolf, Galileo)
> the speed of light in the poetry of the stars at night
>
Thank you, George, but credit for those poetry & speed posts goes to David Baptiste Chirot who is logged into POETICS via my address -

↑ Index

66. Michael Leddy
disgruntled postal workers
Thu 8 Aug 1996

Re Italian postal service: In their essay "Social Time: The Heartbeat of Culture," Robert Levine and Ellen Wolff report an average time of 47 seconds to sell a single stamp in Rome and Florence. (I came across this essay in a freshman comp anthology.)

And re disgruntled postal workers and lit--as of y'day's log, no one had yet mentioned Charles Bukowski's novel _Post Office_.

Michael Leddy / Charleston, IL

↑ Index

67. George Bowering
Re: re poetry & speed
Thu 8 Aug 1996

---

who are the Indigo Girls, and in what way are they fast?

George Bowering. "a workingman shd/ be alone

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

with his mind,

whatever that is ."

--Paul Blackburn

↑ Index

68. Robert Drake
Re: clear-cut
Thu 8 Aug 1996

herb announced the pending release of clear-cut, an anthology of seattle-area poets, and mentioned that a website version would also be forthcoming... it is now up, & is worth a visit:

http://www.speakeasy.org/clear-cut/

lbd

↑ Index

69. wystan
Speed
Fri 9 Aug 1996

Dear list, this is good. Speed, poets, it not only a matter of rush rush rush though. Vorticists are fast, projectivists are fast. What IS the hurry? What about slow? Is slow also a value? I think I would like someone to put in a good word for slow. Fast poems, slow readings? Does poetry speed up or slow down relative to the culture? TV and movies have been getting faster over the years and what does that have to do with it? There's some question of the general economy also. What thoughts do you have on this tonight, good list people? I am at my post. wystan

↑ Index

70. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: re poetry & speed (fwd)
Fri 9 Aug 1996

---------- Forwarded message ---------- Date: Thu, 8 Aug 1996 18:00:33 -0500 (CDT) From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]> To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> Cc: Multiple recipients of list POETICS <[redacted]> Subject: Re: re poetry & speed

On Thu, 8 Aug 1996, george hartley wrote:

> Christina Fairbank's
> >
> > "Poetry in motion"
>
> the Indigo Girls? on this list at last!
> the speed of cultural transmission (Virginia Woolf, Galileo)
> the speed of light in the poetry of the stars at night
>
Thank you, George, but credit for those poetry & speed posts goes to David Baptiste Chirot who is logged into POETICS via my address -

↑ Index

71. Kevin Killian
Conventional Wisdom
Fri 9 Aug 1996

This is Dodie Bellamy. Kevin and I will be correspondants for the Conventional Wisdom webpage, a conceptual art project designed by Margaret Crane and Jon Winet. Following is a call for submissions for the "From Our Viewers" section of the site.

> We are writing to see if you'd be interested in being part of the project we're working on during the Republican and Democratic Conventions. It's a website - Conventional Wisdom - that will be published in real time during the festivities
>
> The site resembles a newspaper front page and will contain a changing series of images from the conventions and writing from around the country. We'd like to invite you contribute to the "From Our Viewers" section of the site. This area will contain a series of short comments, insights and reactions to the conventions (and the surrounding political and social climate).
>
> The site will be running during August 12-15 for the Republican National Convention in San Diego and August 26-28 for the Democratic National Convention in Chicago. We welcome your contributions during that time.
>
> Comments can be sent directly to the site via email. Please post to:
> [redacted]
> indicate "Comments" in the subject area.
>
> The URL/address for the site is:
> http://www.pair.xerox.com/cw
>
> FYI:

> The complete version of Conventional Wisdom is best viewed using a JAVA compatible browser. In this version, writing and images will change automatically throughout the day. If you're on a PC using Netscape 2.0, you'll be able access this version.
>
> There will also be a static version for computers/browsers that will not run JAVA. Unfortunately, this includes many Macintoshes. This version can be accessed through the same URL/address.
>
> We're looking forward to hearing from you.
>
> Best Regards
> Margaret Crane, Jon Winet

↑ Index

72. henry gould
Re: Speed
Fri 9 Aug 1996

slowness. there was a thread related to this about 9 months ago. Talent is often a very slow learner. Slow, stubborn, meticulous. Einstein, Cezanne [there are probably better examples]. Stein, Whitman. The slow growth process bumps up against the speed-idols of the avant-garde. The aged turtles often win the race (but it depends on what race you think you're running). America, of course, they say is becoming a nation of aged turtles (I don't know abt New Zealand). In a turtle race, the FAST aged turtle wins. (speaking of which, Herbert Huncke passed away this week, age 81).

- from "Turtle Island", Hank "slo-poke" Gould p.s. see Frost's amazing wedding sonnet for his daughter, wish I could remember the lines, about speed - how they will win by standing still, "wing to wing and oar to oar".

↑ Index

73. Pierre Joris
Buland al-Haidari
Fri 9 Aug 1996

The Kurdish Iraqi poet Buland al-Haidari died on Tuesday in London where he had been living in exile since 1982. He was 70. Early on a member of the avant-garde group "The Lost Time Group," & one of first f proponents in Arab poetry during the 40ies. A communist sympathizer & political activist he was exiled & fled to Lebanon in 1963.

His books include _The Throb of Clay_ (1946), _You came at Dawn_ (1961),_Steps in Exile_ (1965) & ,many more, though only a few have been translated inti English. His last collection, _Alleyways of Exile" was published last week in London. Here is the title poem from the 1968 collection _Journey of the Yellow Letters_, translated by John Mikhail Asfour (in: _When the Words Burn: An Anthology of Modern Arabic Poetry 1945-1987_):

JOURNEY OF THE YELLOW LETTERS

For a thousand years, children of my poor village
we have been the yellowed letters in the Torah
and the Qu'ran
and the New Testament,
the encrusted blade of the chisel carving our frightful shadows in your eyes -- shadows you
worshipped in your hearts,
shadows that became a history void of men.
Each letter swells, and sometimes is a minaret that stands in prayer;
a church, sometimes, in the dreary mountains;
sometimes black nooses
and ropes.
In sad villages your streets know them,
your sins know them.
For a thousand years
we have been the yellowed letters in the New Testament and the Totah
and the Qur'an,
the letters of mould
daily manifested
in every shameful pregnancy, in idols,
in the aoppressor's whip
in God, in Satan
but not once in a human being.

For a thousand years, children of my poor village
we have slept the long sleep of history and worshipped our frightful shadows in your eyes

(September 1968)

========== Pierre Joris | "Poetic knowledge...is the knowledge of finitude, Dept. of English | of words and things that happen once and SUNY Albany | once only, measurable but not repeatable, the Albany NY 12222 | intuitions of _nonstatistical_ probabilities tel&fax:[redacted] | that are _creative_, not merely re-creative email: | (or recreational)." -- Don Byrd [redacted]|
==========

↑ Index

74. Bob Holman
Slam Stats
Fri 9 Aug 1996

Rod, I don't hae access to my Complete Slam Stats file here, but I'm pretty sure it was spring or fall of 1990.

BobH

↑ Index

75. Bob Holman
Slam Stats
Fri 9 Aug 1996

Hey Maria,

I participated in some group performances of Hannah's work at the Church in the late 70s-early 80s. They cry for multi-voice, eh? and each of us (I think Bernadette and Sharon Matlin were involved) were different tones/speeds, mainly using the map of the lines as a score.

But Hannah reads as she writes, like a journal, the Real Thing, just get it down. She seems em on yr forehead, she writes em down. Also that amazing journal when she was locked in the doorless room, fasting.

Offhand is the best brilliance. She did well at the Slam because she always reads so true and affectless, the crowd was stunned into understanding. We were welcome in her world. In another world there is a monotone, a matter of factness belying the quickcutting synapse-leaping Stein-sinking poetry.

BoHo

↑ Index

76. Pierre Joris
Buland al-Haydari
Fri 9 Aug 1996

correction: a typoglitch in my note on Buland al-Haydari mangled a line which should have read:

"early on a member of the avant-garde group "The Lost Time Group," & one of first proponents of free-verse"

Pierre

========== Pierre Joris | "Poetic knowledge...is the knowledge of finitude, Dept. of English | of words and things that happen once and SUNY Albany | once only, measurable but not repeatable, the Albany NY 12222 | intuitions of _nonstatistical_ probabilities tel&fax:[redacted] | that are _creative_, not merely re-creative email: | (or recreational)." -- Don Byrd [redacted]| ==========

↑ Index

77. Thomas M. Orange
poetry and speed
Fri 9 Aug 1996

One of those old Cademon LP recordings of Eliot reading "The Hollow Men," played at 78 rpm. 45 isn't fast enough.

t.

↑ Index

78. Charles Bernstein
Speed and Hannah Weiner
Fri 9 Aug 1996

Hannah Weiner is one of the truly great performers of the time. The best record of this is the New Wilderness Audiographics tape of Hannah reading with Sharon Matlin and Peggy DeKoursey: Hannah reads the roman type (diary voice), and Peggy reads the italics (mostly comments) and Sharon reads the CAPS (give instructions); both italics and Caps are "words seen"for me it's the best realization of polyvocality I know of. James Sherry and I once performed with Hannah and it was interesting to see how exacting her directions for our reading were. She had a very specific pace in mind and also wanted a precise adherence to the text. This is partly because she had an auditory vision of exactly what the text sounded like. (I have a copy of this performance and someday may be able to put it up on the web as a soundfile!) Hannah is also featured on the Live at the Ear CD and you can get some sense of her speed reading from that. Hannah always said to me she couldn't stand slow readers at poetry readings and that applied to virtually all readings by fiction writers. In her earlier work she would fill the page up without any space or margin partly to transmit the electric sense of speed that pulses through the writing. White space was a vacuum that she abhorred or sucked up.

I have a bibliography of Weiner books, mss and reviews that I did in 1990 and have today updated; I will try to bring to put it up on the EPC as soon as I can. I will also send a version out to Poetics now. There are a couple of queries in that and no doubt some errors; any help appreciated.

 As I think I probably mention on the list before, I wrote "Introjective Verse" (now out in the new CHAIN) in response to the editors (Pierre Alferi and Olivier Cadiot) of a French magazine "Revue Generale de Litterature" wanting a piece on Olson's "Projective Verse" for an issue they were doing on "speed". I wanted to do something on slowing down, along the line Wystan suggests in his post.

↑ Index

79. Charles Bernstein
Hannah Weiner bibliography
Fri 9 Aug 1996

HANNAH WEINER:

MS/Book Chronology

1966 Magritte Poems (Sacramento: Poetry Newsletter, 1970). 11pp. Nonclairvoyantly written, short poems.

1968 The Code Poems (Barrytown: Open Studio, 1982). 29pp.

1970 The Fast. 50pp ms. Sections published in Acts #4, United Artists #14, and Blue Smoke #1 (in that order); (New York: United Artists, 1992).

1971 Country Girl. 18pp ms. Descriptive journal about seeing auras.

1972 Pictures and Early Words. app. 69pp. -- untyped. Seeing pictures and early versions of seen words.

1973 The 1973 Journal. app. 200pp ms; short segment in This # 7. Has caps and quoted words for words seen.

1974 Clairvoyant Journal. 180pp ms. About one-third published in Angel Hair edition, 64 pp. (1978: Lenox, Mass). Other sections in up to two dozen magazines, and in Sun June 9, 5 pp. (Providence: Diana's Bimonthly, 1975). Audiocasette from New Wilderness Audiogrpahics (wth Peggy DeCoursey and Sharon Matlin), c. 1976 (New Wilderness taped the whole Journal and published March and April. Videotape (1974 solo reading): New York: Internmedia Foundation, 1985.

1976 Little Girl Books. Four small notebooks.

1977-80 Little Books/Indians (New York: Roof Books, 1980). 91pp.

1980 Nijole's House (Needham, Mass.: Potes & Poets Press, 1981). 24pp.

1981 Spoke (College Park, MD: Sun & Moon Press, 1984). 115pp.

1982 Sixteen (Windsor, VT: Awede Press, 1983). 16pp.

1984 Written In/The Zero One (Victoria, Australia: Post Neo, 1985). 21pp.

1986 Weeks (Ann Arbor: Xexoxial, 1990). 50pp. Published with audiocasette.

1988 Abazoo. 13pp ms.

1989 Seen Words with It. 20 ms.

1989 The Book of Revelations. 106 shaped pages in notebook.

1989-91 Silent Teachers / Remembered Sequel (Providence: Tender Buttons, 1993)

1992- Visions and Silent Musicians. Ms in progress.

1993-4. We Speak Silent. 89pp ms.

ESSAYS
"Criticism of My Hannah Fool", Margins 21/22 (1975).
"Capitalist Useless Phrases after Endless", The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book, ed.
Bruce Andrews & Charles Bernstein (Carbondale: Southern Illinois University Press, 1984).
"Skies III from This 11 and quote the page", The Difficulties, Ron Silliman issue (1985).
"Mostly about the Sentence", Jimmy and Lucy's House of "K" 7 (1986).
"Excerpts from an Interview with Hannah Weiner" by Charles Bernstein, The Line in Postmodern Poetry, ed. Robert Frank and Henry Sayre (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1988).
"Research important conflict two obedient", Writing 25 (1990).
"Meaning bus Halifax to Queensbury", Patterns/Contexts/Time, ed. Phillip Foss & Charles Bernstein (Sante Fe: Tyuonyi 1990).
"If Workshop", Poetry Project Newsletter, February-March 1990.
"Dear Andrew letter peyote, `Dark Ages Clasp the Daisy Root'.

"Two Works", Writing 27 (1992)
"Ubliminal" [part 1], Chain 2 (1995)
"Ubliminal", [part 2], big allis #7(1996)
"Plus Title", Central Park #19/20 (1991)
"Blank Verse: A Decidedly Highpoint in the History of English Prosody"

REVIEWS/CRITICISM Dick Higgins, Sun June 9, Margins 21/22 (1975). Sharon Mattlin, Clairvoyant Journal, Poetry Showcase at CPGB (1975) Charles Bernstein, "Making Words Visible" [on The Clairvoyant Journal, L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E 5 (1978); rpt. The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book and Content's Dream (Los Angeles: Sun & Moon, 1986). Sharon Mattlin, Clairvoyant Journal, Poetry Project Newsletter, May/June 1979. Tina Darragh, "Virgin", L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E 11 (1980). Tim Dlugos, "Perfectly Clairvoyant", Little Books/Indians, The SoHo News, December 30, 1980. Barbara Barg, Little Books/Indians, Poetry Project Newsletter, May 1981. Ron Silliman, Little Books/Indians and Nijole's House, Sulfur 5 (1982), rpt. The New Sentence (New York: Roof, 1987). Jeff Wright, Code Poems, East Village Eye, April 1983. John Perreault, Code Poems, Poetry Project Newsletter, May/June 1983. Jackson Mac Low, Sixteen & The Code Poems, Poetics Journal 4 (1984). Tony Green, Code Poems and Sixteen, Splash 2 (Auckland, New Zealand: 1984). Arlene Stone, "Poets in the Combat Zone", Code Poems, Contact II 36/37 (1985). Dennis Barone, "Large Poetic Concerns", Spoke, Contact II 38/39/40 (1985). Paul Green, Spoke, Reality Studios 7 (London: 1985). Sherry Quart, Written In/The Zero One, UCSD's Archive Newsletter, Spring 1987. Joseph Keppler, "Four by Three", Sixteen & Spoke, Gargoyle 32/33 (1987). Kathleen Fraser, "Line. On the Line. Lining up. Lined with. Between the Lines. Bottom Line.", The Line in Postmodern Poetry, ed. Robert Frank and Herny Sayre (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1988). Charles Bernstein, "Weak Links", preface to Weeks (Ann Arbor: Xexoial, 1990) Johanna Drucker, The Fast. Poetry Project Newsletter Oct/Nov 1992 Mark Wallace, Silent Teachers/Remembered Sequel, Taproot #5 (1994) Juliana Spahr, "Composition as Explanation", presented at MLA Annual Convention (1993)

??:
"Blank Verse: A Decidedly High Point in the History of English Prosody": offprint exists w/o source information
Paul Green, review of several books — published in UK 1990s

—compiled by Charles Bernstein, 1989, updated, 1996; send corrections or additions to [redacted].

↑ Index

80. Mark Wallace
Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
Fri 9 Aug 1996

Can anyone who knows backchannel me with Juliana Spahr's new e-mail address? She sent it around on a card a week or two ago, but I can't seem to find the information.

Thanks.

Mark Wallace

↑ Index

81. Joseph Lease
Re: changing
Fri 9 Aug 1996

RE: poetics discussion

It would interest me to start a low-key discussion concerning a range of post-modern poetics evoked by but not limited to the work of such poets as John Yau, Fanny Howe, David Shapiro, Susan Howe--with reference also to Amiri Baraka, Robert Creeley, Adrienne Rich--

I'm just wondering if there's a forum for articulating and sharing concerns with lyric practice that cut across so called party lines and (obviously) share a variety of kinds of concern with poetic experimentation and politcal and cultural opposition--and--if such a phrase doesn't seem so neutral--aesthetic and political thought-- so--

All Best,
Joseph Lease-

↑ Index

82. Charlie King
Re: Introduction of Charlie King
Fri 9 Aug 1996

> Hi,
> I'm new on the list. My name is Charlie King, I'm 25 years old and live > in South Africa. I subscribed to this list because poetry seems to be a

> "neverending attachment to oblivion";-) and I can't get enough of it.
> Right at this moment I don't quite know what it is this list is about but

> I trust that with a little help from the current subscribed, I will learn.
> Yours,
> Charlie King
> ----------
> Name: Charlie King
> E-mail: [redacted]
> Date: 07/08/96
> Time: 07:53:54 PM
>
>
> This message was sent by Chameleon
> ----------
>
>

Name:
E-mail: [redacted]
Date: 09/08/96
Time: 08:27:23 PM

This message was sent by Chameleon

↑ Index

83. Joel Kuszai
New Books from Meow Press
Sat 10 Aug 1996

Hi everybody, before we begin our (pause) "infomerical" (laughter from audience) I'd like to take this moment to think back to Orono, you know, Orono. I want to thank Orono for Melvin Tolson, whom I've found in the Buffalo Public Library. Funny to think that you can't check out a book of poetry in buffalo, most poetry existing behind closed stacks. The same is true for music library too--and the ERie/County-Buffalo public main branch has a great music section, a mix of 20th sentry music (probably lingering from the good ol' days at the philharmonic (John Tesh coming this year, Doc Severinson's holidy opus+)and an interesting selection of music from around the world--both traditional and contemporary. They let you check out 10 cds for a week and I'm gettin a real education in music this way. Anyway, it is okay to have books stored away for safety, for some future researcher, I suppose. Like music, you have to make the books you need to read.

On that note, some books are finally available from Meow Press, which is 3years old this month. More books on the way include: Aaron Shurin, CODEX (with in-laid color reproductions), Stephen Ratcliffe, SENTENCE, Noemie Maxwell, THRUM, Charles Alexander, FOUR NINETY EIGHT TO SEVEN, Jorge Guitart, FILM BLANC, Denise Newman, OF LATER THINGS YET TO COME, Deanna Ferguson, ROUGH BUSH, David Carl, THE LIBRARY, and more (I don't have the list with me).

Catalogs are available by mail: send queries backchannel to me.

Now Available from Meow Press

Michael Basinski, Hee-Bee Jeebies
7x6.5" 24pg.
$5.00

Natalee Caple, The Price of Acorn
6.5x4.5" 36pg.
$6.00

Wendy Kramer, Patinas
8.5x7" 20pg.
$5.00

Hank Lazer, The Early Days of the Lang Dynasty
6.5x6" 36pg.
$6.00

Jena Osman, Jury
6.5x4.5" 28pg.
$5.00

Meredith Quartermain, Terms of Sale
8.5x7" 48pg.
$6.00

Lisa Robertson, The Descent
8.5x7" 24pg.
$5.00

Lisa Samuels, Letters
7x6.5" 24pg.
$5.00

Gary Sullivan, Dead Man
6.5x5" 32pg.
$6.00

Sullivan & Caple are prose. The whole set of 9 books is available right now for $40 for poetics-fans. Call today!

↑ Index

84. Gabrielle Welford
Arthur Craven
Sat 10 Aug 1996

Does anyone have info on works about Craven? gab.

↑ Index

85. Tenney Nathanson
Craven?
Sun 11 Aug 1996

> Date: Sat, 10 Aug 1996 11:34:13 -1000
> From: Gabrielle Welford <[redacted]>
> Subject: Arthur Craven
>
> Does anyone have info on works about Craven? gab.

no.

but: you might look in the index of John Shoptaw's book about Ashbery--I recall that there are some remarks about Ashbery's Craven poem in DDOS--and I think a footnote or two that might be of some use.

btw what do others make of the Shoptaw book?

↑ Index

86. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: poetry in motion
Sun 11 Aug 1996

Re: "Poetry in Motion"

Actually the song stuck relentlessly in mind was by Johnny Tillotson, in 1960, on the Cadence label.

Two years before "The Loco-Motion" by Little Eva on Dimension.

From Poetry on Cadence to Loco on Dimension---

In the immortal words of Bo Diddley:

When you're in the groove
You really got to move

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

87. DS
Re: Speed
Sun 11 Aug 1996

Perhaps one should have david eggleton & melville (clarel) reading at the same time. they are fairly silly examples. on the page, i am in favour of slow, i like words to come out about the speed that i think. Talking is pretty fast at the moment & poetry provides a greatly needed contrast. I've been rereading long poems recently (for a project): the maximus papers, patterson, homer they have a certain ponderousness which is part of their reading pleasure. Aloud speed can have advantages but (if you'll excuse a sport analogy) is more like boxing than sailing. Comes down to the mood i guess. Sunday nights a slow poetry night.

Sleeping soon,

Dan

At 07:35 PM 8/9/96 GMT+1200, you wrote:
>Dear list,
> this is good. Speed, poets, it not only a matter of rush >rush rush though. Vorticists are fast, projectivists are fast. What >IS the hurry? What about slow? Is slow also a value? I think I would >like someone to put in a good word for slow. Fast poems, slow readings?
>Does poetry speed up or slow down relative to the culture? TV and movies >have been getting faster over the years and what does that have to do >with it? There's some question of the general economy also. What >thoughts do you have on this tonight, good list people? I am at my post.
> wystan
>
>

↑ Index

88. Robert Drake
Re: Speed
Sun 11 Aug 1996

"there is more to life than increasing its speed"
--e.f. schumacher (on efficiency)

lbd

↑ Index

89. Douglas Messerli

Re: Hannah Weiner bibliography

Sun 11 Aug 1996

Thanks for passing on the great Weiner bibliography Charles. Members of the Poetics List can now get copies of one of Hannah's best works, SPOKE, for $4.00. Order through our website or directly through my E-mail address.

The website (just a reminder) is http//:www.sunmoon.com. My E-mail at Sun & Moon is [redacted].

Sun & Moon will be making new offers for several new titles and older ones this next week.

Douglas Messerli

At 01:43 PM 8/9/96 -0400, you wrote:
>HANNAH WEINER:
>
>MS/Book Chronology
>
>1966 Magritte Poems (Sacramento: Poetry Newsletter, 1970). 11pp.
>Nonclairvoyantly written, short poems.
>
>1968 The Code Poems (Barrytown: Open Studio, 1982). 29pp.
>
>1970 The Fast. 50pp ms. Sections published in Acts #4, United Artists #14, >and Blue Smoke #1 (in that order); (New York: United Artists, 1992).
>
>1971 Country Girl. 18pp ms. Descriptive journal about seeing auras.
>
>1972 Pictures and Early Words. app. 69pp. -- untyped. Seeing pictures and >early versions of seen words.
>
>1973 The 1973 Journal. app. 200pp ms; short segment in This # 7. Has caps >and quoted words for words seen.
>
>1974 Clairvoyant Journal. 180pp ms. About one-third published in Angel >Hair edition, 64 pp. (1978: Lenox, Mass). Other sections in up to two >dozen magazines, and in Sun June 9, 5 pp. (Providence: Diana's Bimonthly, >1975). Audiocasette from New Wilderness Audiogrpahics (wth Peggy De-Coursey >and Sharon Matlin), c. 1976 (New Wilderness taped the whole Journal and >published March and April. Videotape (1974 solo reading): New York: >Internmedia Foundation, 1985.

>
>1976 Little Girl Books. Four small notebooks.
>
>1977-80 Little Books/Indians (New York: Roof Books, 1980). 91pp.
>
>1980 Nijole's House (Needham, Mass.: Potes & Poets Press, 1981). 24pp.
>
>1981 Spoke (College Park, MD: Sun & Moon Press, 1984). 115pp.
>
>1982 Sixteen (Windsor, VT: Awede Press, 1983). 16pp.
>
>1984 Written In/The Zero One (Victoria, Australia: Post Neo, 1985). 21pp.
>
>1986 Weeks (Ann Arbor: Xexoxial, 1990). 50pp. Published with audiocasette.
>
>1988 Abazoo. 13pp ms.
>
>1989 Seen Words with It. 20 ms.
>
>1989 The Book of Revelations. 106 shaped pages in notebook.
>
>1989-91 Silent Teachers / Remembered Sequel (Providence: Tender Buttons, 1993)
>
>1992- Visions and Silent Musicians. Ms in progress.
>
>1993-4. We Speak Silent. 89pp ms.
>
>ESSAYS
>"Criticism of My Hannah Fool", Margins 21/22 (1975).
>"Capitalist Useless Phrases after Endless", The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book, ed.
>Bruce Andrews & Charles Bernstein (Carbondale: Southern Illinois University >Press, 1984).
>"Skies III from This 11 and quote the page", The Difficulties, Ron Silliman >issue (1985).
>"Mostly about the Sentence", Jimmy and Lucy's House of "K" 7 (1986).
>"Excerpts from an Interview with Hannah Weiner" by Charles Bernstein, The >Line in Postmodern Poetry, ed. Robert Frank and Henry Sayre (Urbana: >University of Illinois Press, 1988).
>"Research important conflict two obedient", Writing 25 (1990).
>"Meaning bus Halifax to Queensbury", Patterns/Contexts/Time, ed. Phillip

>Foss & Charles Bernstein (Sante Fe: Tyuonyi 1990).
>"If Workshop", Poetry Project Newsletter, February-March 1990.
>"Dear Andrew letter peyote, `Dark Ages Clasp the Daisy Root'.
>"Two Works", Writing 27 (1992)
>"Ubliminal" [part 1], Chain 2 (1995)
>"Ubliminal", [part 2], big allis #7(1996)
>"Plus Title", Central Park #19/20 (1991)
>"Blank Verse: A Decidedly Highpoint in the History of English Prosody"
>
>REVIEWS/CRITICISM
>Dick Higgins, Sun June 9, Margins 21/22 (1975).
>Sharon Mattlin, Clairvoyant Journal, Poetry Showcase at CPGB (1975)
>Charles Bernstein, "Making Words Visible" [on The Clairvoyant Journal, >L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E 5 (1978); rpt. The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book and >Content's Dream (Los Angeles: Sun & Moon, 1986).
>Sharon Mattlin, Clairvoyant Journal, Poetry Project Newsletter, May/June 1979.
>Tina Darragh, "Virgin", L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E 11 (1980).
>Tim Dlugos, "Perfectly Clairvoyant", Little Books/Indians, The SoHo News,
>December 30, 1980.
>Barbara Barg, Little Books/Indians, Poetry Project Newsletter, May 1981.
>Ron Silliman, Little Books/Indians and Nijole's House, Sulfur 5 (1982), >rpt. The New Sentence (New York: Roof, 1987).
>Jeff Wright, Code Poems, East Village Eye, April 1983.
>John Perreault, Code Poems, Poetry Project Newsletter, May/June 1983.
>Jackson Mac Low, Sixteen & The Code Poems, Poetics Journal 4 (1984).
>Tony Green, Code Poems and Sixteen, Splash 2 (Auckland, New Zealand: 1984).
>Arlene Stone, "Poets in the Combat Zone", Code Poems, Contact II 36/37 (1985).
>Dennis Barone, "Large Poetic Concerns", Spoke, Contact II 38/39/40 (1985).
>Paul Green, Spoke, Reality Studios 7 (London: 1985).
>Sherry Quart, Written In/The Zero One, UCSD's Archive Newsletter, Spring 1987.
>Joseph Keppler, "Four by Three", Sixteen & Spoke, Gargoyle 32/33 (1987).
>Kathleen Fraser, "Line. On the Line. Lining up. Lined with. Between the >Lines. Bottom Line.", The Line in Postmodern Poetry, ed. Robert Frank and >Herny Sayre (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1988).
>Charles Bernstein, "Weak Links", preface to Weeks (Ann Arbor: Xexoial, 1990)
>Johanna Drucker, The Fast. Poetry Project Newsletter Oct/Nov 1992

>Mark Wallace, Silent Teachers/Remembered Sequel, Taproot #5 (1994) >Juliana Spahr, "Composition as Explanation", presented at MLA Annual >Convention (1993)
>
>??:
>"Blank Verse: A Decidedly High Point in the History of English Prosody":
>offprint exists w/o source information
>Paul Green, review of several books — published in UK 1990s
>
>—compiled by Charles Bernstein, 1989, updated, 1996; send corrections or >additions to [redacted].
>

↑ Index

90. Charles Bernstein
My Home Pages
Sun 11 Aug 1996

A while ago Mark Wallace mentioned my essay "Frame Lock". With the permission of Jerry McGuire, editor of College Literature, which published the essay in 1994, I have now put it up on the EPC:

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/bernstein

In June I also put up some "HTML" poems I have been working on, and you can find these at my home page as well, with links to Kenny Goldsmith terrific ongoing anthology of visual poetry. My idea for these works was to create viusal texts that came out working within my word processing program, so that the "visuality" was less pictoral and more a byproduct of the means availalbe in this medium to visually represent language (and in this way related to my other visual texts, such as "Veil" and "Language of Boquets" that Kenny has samples on his site). I have also put up the syllabus for my Fall graduate seminar on the Poetics of Translation.

~~~
~~~

one too and don't waste a minute getting to it, or not more than a minute, well maybe till Labor Day, but not longer that, or not too much longer ....:

now let me translate:

let me be efectlky celard
don;t wasted a monet
the suns' sup and the sky is a limnit of what you thinkg it might be some support out small and enven medium sixed presses and even the ups th eUPS, when they publsiher
thingsd lik tyhis]

+++++++

> short comments, insights and reactions to the conventions (and the surrounding political and social climate).
>
> The site will be running during August 12-15 for the Republican National Convention in San Diego and August 26-28 for the Democratic National Convention in Chicago. We welcome your contributions during that time.
>
> Comments can be sent directly to the site via email. Please post to:
> [redacted]
> indicate "Comments" in the subject area.
>
> The URL/address for the site is:
> http://www.pair.xerox.com/cw
>
> FYI:
>
> The complete version of Conventional Wisdom is best viewed using a JAVA compatible browser. In this version, writing and images will change automatically throughout the day. If you're on a PC using Netscape 2.0, you'll be able access this version.
>
> There will also be a static version for computers/browsers that will not run JAVA. Unfortunately, this includes many Macintoshes. This version can be accessed through the same URL/address.
>
> We're looking forward to hearing from you.
>
> Best Regards
> Margaret Crane, Jon Winet

↑ Index

92. Schuchat
Re: Craven?
Sun 11 Aug 1996

Regarding Arthur Cravan, I haven't gotten that far in the book yet, but it seems that Carolyn Burke's bio of Mina Loy has a fair amount of info about the boxer-poet Cravan, who was her second husband.

Also, for some reason I have always thought (don't know from whence this information is derived) that Cravan was supposed to be the model for the hero of Gide's Caves du Vatican (Lafcadio's Adventures).

↑ Index

93. Tristan D. Saldana
Re: Speed
Sun 11 Aug 1996

On Fri, 9 Aug 1996, wystan wrote:

> Does poetry speed up or slow down relative to the culture? TV and movies have been getting faster over the years and what does that have to do with it?

Good language is always good at getting us to expand our sense of the present, our presence. The media seems to be inhumanely good at eliminating the present, and (once again) our presence. A virtue I have found in paying attention to language is that it puts me in a comfortable relationship to time . . . enables evaluativeness. Not (an)esthetic, but an esthetic sedation that helps the 'bash' of the high-threshold lows created by the "blunting of the senses" that need hourly gratification as Wordsworth says. The world is too much with us, indeed.

I just heard some great lyrics today by a pretty good poet and not half bad drummer on this subject . . . how humans, today, live in dog years:

"I'd rather be a tortoise from Galapagos or a span of geological time . . ."

Tristan

↑ Index

94. Kevin Killian
Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
Mon 12 Aug 1996

This is Dodie.

Is it true these rumors I'm hearing that Juliana and ten others have left the poetics list and started their own poetics list?

↑ Index

95. Al Filreis
Williams house to be sold
Mon 12 Aug 1996

Friends & colleagues:

The NJ section of the NY Times, 8/11/96, reports that WCW's home is for sale. "Located at 9 Ridge Road in Rutherford. Built more than 100 years ago. Listed on the NJ and National Registers of Historic Places. Contains medical office, examining rooms and residence. WCW's son, Dr. William Eric Williams, continued the pediatric medical practice until he died about a year ago. His widow and daughter are the sellers."

Asking price $330,000

Annual property taxes $7,806

Listed with ERA Justin Realty, Rutherford, NJ

--Al Filreis
--University of Pennsylvania

↑ Index

96. maria damon
Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
Mon 12 Aug 1996

---

yeah me too; i never got one of those postcards, maybe she sent it to the cape, anyway i did n't gt it and have been trying to send stuff. xo, md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
discussion group writes:
> Can anyone who knows backchannel me with Juliana Spahr's new e-mail > address? She sent it around on a card a week or two ago, but I can't seem > to find the information.
>
> Thanks.
>
> Mark Wallace

↑ Index

97. maria damon
Re: Speed
Mon 12 Aug 1996

---

on slowness, thich nhat hanh: paraphrased. the more we have to do, the busier we are, the slower we shd go.
btw: what is a "groove," and how does one get in it; once in it; how shd one "move?"
md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> Dear list,
> this is good. Speed, poets, it not only a matter of rush

> rush rush though. Vorticists are fast, projectivists are fast. What > IS the hurry? What about slow? Is slow also a value? I think I would > like someone to put in a good word for slow. Fast poems, slow readings?
> Does poetry speed up or slow down relative to the culture? TV and movies > have been getting faster over the years and what does that have to do > with it? There's some question of the general economy also. What > thoughts do you have on this tonight, good list people? I am at my post.
> wystan

↑ Index

98. Douglas Messerli

Returned mail: Host unknown (Name server: ubvm.cc.bfuualo.edu: host not found)

Mon 12 Aug 1996

>Return-Path: <MAILER-DAEMON>
>Date: Mon, 12 Aug 1996 09:34:43 -0700 (PDT)
>From: Mail Delivery Subsystem <[redacted]>
>Subject: Returned mail: Host unknown (Name server: ubvm.cc.bfuualo.edu: host not found)
>To: <[redacted]>
>Auto-Submitted: auto-generated (failure)
>
>The original message was received at Mon, 12 Aug 1996 09:34:40 -0700 (PDT) >from ppp74.cinenet.net [198.147.81.74]
>
> ----- The following addresses have delivery notifications ----- ><[redacted]> (unrecoverable error)
>
> ----- Transcript of session follows ----- >550 <[redacted]>... Host unknown (Name server: ubvm.cc.bfuualo.edu: host not found)
>
> ----- Original message follows -----
>
>Return-Path: <[redacted]>
>Received: from ppp74.cinenet.net by hollywood.cinenet.net with SMTP (8.7.3/25-eef) > id JAA23676; Mon, 12 Aug 1996 09:34:40 -0700 (PDT)
>Date: Mon, 12 Aug 1996 09:34:40 -0700 (PDT)
>Message-Id: <[redacted]>
>X-Sender: [redacted] (Unverified)

>X-Mailer: Windows Eudora Light Version 1.5.4 (16)
>Mime-Version: 1.0
>Content-Type: text/plain; charset="us-ascii"
>To: [redacted]
>From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
>Subject: New offers from Sun & Moon Press
>
>SPECIAL OFFERS TO THE POETICS LIST
>
>Sun & Moon Press has several new books, which we offering >for sale to people on the Poetics List for a 20% discount.
>These include:
>
>Rene Crevel's great surrealist novel BABYLON
>Paperback, $12.95
>
>CREDENCE, by Dennis Phillips. The most recent collection >of poetry by this important Los Angeles-based writer.
>Paper, $10.95
>
>WHERE HEAT LOOMS, by Andre du Bouchet, translated by >David Mus. One of the most signficant--and the last living-- >of the great French modernist poets. This book represents >the first of several du Bouchet translations that will be >published by Sun & Moon. Paper, $12.95
>
>THE BLAZING LIGHTS OF THE SUN, by Rosita Copioli. An im>portant contemporary woman Italian poet, translated >by Renata Treitel. Paper, $11.95
>
>JUDE THE OBSCURE, Thomas Hardy. Yes, you heard right,
>The great classic appears on the Sun & Moon label, reprinted >from the first American edition of 1896. Paper, $12.95
>
>GHOST IMAGE, by Herve Guibert. Michel Foucault's purported >lover, died of AIDS in 1991. These are essays on photographer, >beautifully written and very moving. Paper $13.95
>
>WHAT BECAME WORDS, by Claes Andersson. A major Finnish poet-- >and head of Finnish culture at the moment. Paper $11.95
>
>==========

>
>We are also offering amazingly low prices on the following >backlist titles:
>
>As long as you order at least 2 books, you can purchase >these for $4.00 each.
>
>
>SPOKE, by Hannah Weiner. Paper $7.95
>
>THE YELLOW FLOOR: POEMS 1978-1983 by Gil Ott. Paper, $6.95
>
>POEMS, by Nick Piombino. Paper $8.95
>
>ARENA, by Dennis Phillips. Paper $10.95
>
>A WORLD, by Dennis Phillips. Paper $9.95
>
>MAXIMS FROM MY MOTHER'S MILK/HYMNS TO HIM, Douglas >Messerli Paper $8.95
>
>

↑ Index

99. Walter K. Lew
Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
Mon 12 Aug 1996

Dear Maria and Mark,

Juliana Spahr
182 Elm St. Upper
Albany NY 12202
[redacted]

Walter K. Lew
8 Old Colony Rd.
Old Saybrook, CT 06475
ph/fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

100. David Baratier
lost in the supermarket
Mon 12 Aug 1996

Tristan,

There is no present. A present is so close it seems obtainable but when it comes down to the gritty, just far enough of a length to have some downtime between interstices. Hence the reliance on endings, as if the history of circadian rhythms were a false premise because some whiteguy made a newfangled discovery. Throw it all away. Talk about speed, in the suburbs where to renounce speed through the act of walking (one which I might add furthers the connection with the present) is to conflict with the classist version of interior space, one where the landscape is not to be littered with such apparitions of outsiders, the marginalized, the crazy, the children walking to the supermarket. In similitude, the affliction of the lyric is sold to us as a renunciation of speed, that scenes of an uncertain action of disjunction should be upheld to create a violence on the eye of a potential reader whose distance is a recess. The multimedia elimination of the present (& prescence) is no different in vacuity than the false asssumption that we can fully appropriate an experience of the other, just because of the great textual I am. In terms of a post-modern syndoche, the ghost of a part confronts us, while the compared whole, or solid core, has dissappeared.

CB: Weiner has a healthy section of work in the new 6ix, including an essay by Marc DuCharme.
Be well.
David Baratier

↑ Index

101. Mark Wallace go fast or go slow
Mon 12 Aug 1996

It seems to me that there's not any inherent value per se in a poetry that goes fast or a poetry that goes slow--statements like "I like it fast" or "I like it slow" may tell us something about the taste of the authors in question regarding the aesthetics of poetry or whatever else, but in fact they tell us little more than that. The issue seems to me rather how a certain "fast" or "slow" dynamic in various social contexts pertains to those contexts and not simply to the dynamic of the writer him or her self. Marinetti's interest in speed has to do with his ideology of the machine; differently, the laconic nature of, say, Robert Frost, has something to do with his rejection of modernist investments in the machine, in favor of (equally problematic to me) a staunch restatement of the condition and value of certain traditional moral stances in the face of change--neither of these are meant as total descriptions of their authors. I'm tempted to make a case for Hannah Weiner's speed, and her assault on white space as pertaining to the way her work seems to argue that "blank space is already written on," that is, far from representing some existential silence, white space in her work is that place where ideology is in charge of us; her ability to write against that white space seems almost like a "talking back to" or "talking through and with" a set of voices that might otherwise overwhelm her by forcing her to be silent. But that's just what I'm thinking today.

mark wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] "I have not yet begun | |
to go to extremes" | | GWU: |
| http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

102. Joseph Lease

Re: go fast or go slow

Mon 12 Aug 1996

On Mon, 12 Aug 1996, Mark Wallace wrote:

> It seems to me that there's not any inherent value per se in a poetry that goes fast or a poetry that goes slow--statements like "I like it fast" or "I like it slow" may tell us something about the taste of the authors in question regarding the aesthetics of poetry or whatever else, but in fact they tell us little more than that. The issue seems to me rather how a certain "fast" or "slow" dynamic in various social contexts pertains to those contexts and not simply to the dynamic of the writer him or her self. Marinetti's interest in speed has to do with his ideology of the machine; differently, the laconic nature of, say, Robert Frost, has something to do with his rejection of modernist investments in the machine, in favor of (equally problematic to me) a staunch restatement of the condition and value of certain traditional moral stances in the face of change--neither of these are meant as total descriptions of their authors.
>
> I'm tempted to make a case for Hannah Weiner's speed, and her assault on white > space as pertaining to the way her work seems to argue that "blank space is already written on," that is, far from representing some existential silence, white space in her work is that place where ideology is in charge of us; her ability to write against that white space seems almost like a "talking back to" or "talking through and with" a set of voices > that might otherwise overwhelm her by forcing her to be silent. But that's just what I'm thinking today.

>
> mark wallace
>
> /----------
> | |
> | [redacted] "I have not yet begun |
> | to go to extremes" |
> | GWU: |
> | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw |
> | EPC: |
> | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace |
> |_____|

I really like the point here--the Frost/Weiner contrast works brilliantly--and the matrix shifts as well when one thinks of, for example, Blake's anti-industrialism and the different kinds of poetics that his work suggests-- question--though-- where would Pound's anti-industrialism fit in here--

All Best,

Joseph Lease

↑ Index

103. Gary Roberts
Re: go fast or go slow
Mon 12 Aug 1996

See also S. Kern's study of the Culture of Time and Space, a brilliant study of modernism in terms of late nineteenth century revolutions in transportation and communications technology.
See also R. Poggioli's comments on "activist" mode of experimental writing in the classic Theory of the Avant-Garde.
See also various Ashbery poems like The School of Velocity and The Art of Speed.
That's all I have time and room for now.
Gary Roberts

↑ Index

104. Gabrielle Welford
Re: Craven?
Mon 12 Aug 1996

On Sun, 11 Aug 1996, Schuchat wrote:

> Also, for some reason I have always thought (don't know from whence this > information is derived) that Cravan was supposed to be the model for the > hero of Gide's Caves du Vatican (Lafcadio's Adventures).
>
Hmmm, that's interesting. Anyone else know if that's true? gab.

p.s. Thanks for all the info from everyone. Great stuff.

↑ Index

105. David Baratier
Pavement Saw brief sale
Mon 12 Aug 1996

I am moving this upcoming weekend, so we are selling two of our titles cheap over a cellanoid medium rather than carry as many of the physical objects.
Information below. Pick from Chris Stroffolino's _Oops_ or Joshua McKinney's _Permutations of the Gallery_ for only five dollars.
Backchannel me with your home address and title you are interested in by this Thursday, August 15th.
Pay when received.

Be well
[redacted]

Pavement Saw Press winner of the 1995-1996 chapbook award:

Permutations of the Gallery
by Joshua McKinney

Poems from this collection first appeared in publications such as the Columbia Poetry Review, Denver Quarterly, Situation, Santa Barbara Review, and Willow Springs.

Publication, a prize of five hundred dollars and ten percent of the book run are awarded to the winner of the annual prize. Permutations of the Gallery was selected by Naton Leslie as the 1996 winner of the Pavement Saw Poetry Chapbook Award.

About the book:

Permutations of the Gallery is an ambitious collection, even if recklessly so. Joshua McKinney's poems struggle against the confines of syntax and literal sense, in order to arrive at a uniquely clear grasp of the truces we must maintain with time and spacial existence. To attempt to paraphrase these knotty and paradoxical poems would be akin to stating that Wallace Stevens wrote about the weather. Don't search for narrative threads here, poems about Queen Anne's Lace or cicadas, or paeans for our humdrum, domestic lives. And don't expect to read this book once.
Naton Leslie

Joshua McKinney knows that philosophy is not an abstract matter, nor in anyway separate from our everyday lives. His poems show that to engage the world intimately, we need to _think_ it in the most particular ways. In Permutations of the Gallery family friends, nature, and a troubling social world are not givens, but rather questions by which we explore the twisting, disruptive, estatic, sometimes even annihilating terms of our existence.

Mark Wallace

A poetry held taut, that revels in economy and clarity, is filled with insights and syntactical compassion. I highly recommend Permutations of the Gallery. Simon Perchik

Published in a limited edition of 250 copies, perfect bound, 6 by 9 size

---

Pavement Saw Press
Oops by
Chris Stroffolino

"Oops stoops over everything and bows to nothing but a longing to believe that somehow, somewhere something will change. Each poem is involved in a continuous monologue that would be a dialogue if it wasn't a poem. Wat gies is what is felt and what is dealt with to feel." Pam Rehm

Features poems which have appeared in Sulfur, Talisman, Lingo, TO, Caliban, New American Writing, American Letters & Commentary and others.

64 pages, perfect bound in attractive purple cover with smiling picture of the author on the back.

The book is $6.95 including postage and handling.

Checks made out to Pavement Saw Press / 7 James Street / Scotia, NY 12302

↑ Index

106. Gabrielle Welford
Re: Speed
Mon 12 Aug 1996

This made me think--I bet this is part of the reason students and sometimes I (and critics maybe who prefer to talk about than dive into) resist sinking into the words of poetry. gab

On Sun, 11 Aug 1996, Tristan D. Saldana wrote:
>
> Good language is always good at getting us to expand our sense of the > present, our presence. The media seems to be inhumanely good at > eliminating the present, and (once again) our presence. A virtue I have > found in paying attention to language is that it puts me in a comfortable > relationship to time . . . enables evaluativeness. Not (an)esthetic, but > an esthetic sedation that helps the 'bash' of the high-threshold lows > created by the "blunting of the senses" that need hourly gratification as > Wordsworth says. The world is too much with us, indeed.
>
> I just heard some great lyrics today by a pretty good poet and not half > bad drummer on this subject . . . how humans, today, live in dog years:
>
> "I'd rather be a tortoise from Galapagos > or a span of geological time . . ."
>
> Tristan
>

↑ Index

107. Pierre Joris
G7 Internet policy
Mon 12 Aug 1996

Something of possible interest to the lis -- Pierre

G7 NATIONS PROPOSE RESTRICTIONS ON INTERNET COMMUNICATIONS

HUMAN RIGHTS WATCH WARY OF OUTCOME OF TERRORISM CONFERENCE

At a meeting to discuss terrorism on 30 July in Paris, France the G7 group of nations "endorsed a number of restrictions and controls on the Internet," reports Human Rights Watch (HRW). HRW is part of two coalitions deploring

"threats by the G7 to restrict free speech and privacy rights." According to one coalition, composed mainly of international divisions of the Electronic Frontier Foundation and HRW, "The G7 (United States of America, Canada, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan) called for "the prohibition or censorship of sources that may contain `dangerous' information, restrictions on the electronic speech of unpopular political organisations, and the imposition of `key escrow' or other means of allowing governments to violate privately encrypted correspondence."

The latest action, which HRW and its partners call "anti-terrorist hysteria," springs from recent events in the US such as the Olympic bombing and the Trans World Airlines (TWA) crash. It is "another case in a long list of attempts to restrict freedom of speech in electronic networks, of which there are alarming examples in many countries including Australia, Belgium, China, France, Germany, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, the USA and Vietnam, under a variety of pretexts ranging from `pornography' to incorrect political opinion to `terrorism.'"

HRW and the others point out that "`offensive' material being targeted is no different from similar material available in libraries and bookshops. As well, information on how to make bombs, as well as other things that would be `banned,' is widely available, often from the very governments pushing for censorship." HRW et al opine that "banning such publications from the Internet will not make it any less widely available. However, it could become the tool for the censorship of any debate or opinion which happens to displease the authorities, or `pressure groups' that do not share those opinions."

HRW also belongs to the Global Internet Liberty Campaign (GILC), which has pledged to fight these and other recommendations to censor the Internet. HRW program director Cynthia Brown said, "Free speech on the Internet is already under attack from states like Saudi Arabia, China and Singapore, and with this agreement, the G7 countries are only reinforcing that negative trend." The GILC was formed at the annual meeting of the Internet Society in Montreal. In addition to HRW, members of the coalition include the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), the Electronic Privacy Information Center, the Internet Society, Privacy International, and the Association des Utilisateurs d'Internet.

Further details on the G7 meeting are contained in a GILC press release available on the Web at: http://www.aclu.org/gilc/index1.html For a summary of efforts around the world to censor the Internet see the "10 May 96 Silencing the Net" report on the HRW gopher site at: gopher://gopher.igc.apc.org:5000/11/int/hrw/general For more background on global censorship of the Internet see the web sites: http://www.eff.org/~declan/global/ and http://www.io.org/~sherlock/doom/threat.html For information on global and international online freedom issues see the Electronic Frontier Foundation web site: http://www.eff.org/pub/Global/ Some of this information will be available in French by e-mail: [redacted], in Catalan at WWW site: http://www.lander.es/~jlmartin/in Italian at WWW site: http://www.nexus.it/alcei.html, and in Spanish at WWW site: http://www.lander.es/~jlmartin/

↑ Index

108. FUNKHOUSER CHRISTOPH

interesting article on the web

Mon 12 Aug 1996

---

i came across an interesting, if problematic, article on the web at http://darkwing.uoregon.edu/~heroux/uc4/4-lockard.html
it's called
VIRTUAL WHITENESS AND NARRATIVE DIVERSITY
begins with the eye catching phrase "electronic alterity" though doesn't develop it very far.
the EPC is mentioned in the article.

*

recently finished "Poetry Webs 1996" at http://cnsvax.albany.edu/~poetry/webs.html

*

In an article about "Zork" a couple of years ago in the Times Book Review 2 or 3 years ago, Robert Pinsky said two of the things that poetry and computers have in common are "memory" and "speed" -- I can't find the article right now but don't remember him particularly backing the statement up in any mind blowing way.

chris f

↑ Index

109. Douglas Messerli

Re: New Books from Meow Press

Mon 12 Aug 1996

Meow--send you your back channel E-mail address and I'll order something.

Douglas Messerli at [redacted]
==========

At 10:58 AM 8/10/96 -0400, you wrote:
>Hi everybody, before we begin our (pause) "infomerical" (laughter from >audience) I'd like to take this moment to think back to Orono, you know, >Orono. I want to thank Orono for Melvin Tolson, whom I've found in the >Buffalo Public Library. Funny to think that you can't check out a book of >poetry in buffalo, most poetry existing behind closed stacks. The same is >true for music library too--and the ERie/County-Buffalo public main branch >has a great music section, a mix of 20th sentry music (probably lingering >from the good ol' days at the philharmonic (John Tesh coming this year, >Doc Severinson's holidy opus+)and an interesting selection of music from >around the world--both traditional and contemporary. They let you check >out 10 cds for a week and I'm gettin a real education in music this way.
>Anyway, it is okay to have books stored away for safety, for some >future researcher, I suppose. Like music, you have to make the >books you need to read.
>
>On that note, some books are finally available from Meow Press, which is >3years old this month. More books on the way include: Aaron Shurin, CODEX
>(with in-laid color reproductions), Stephen Ratcliffe, SENTENCE, Noemie
>Maxwell, THRUM, Charles Alexander, FOUR NINETY EIGHT TO SEVEN, Jorge
>Guitart, FILM BLANC, Denise Newman, OF LATER THINGS YET TO COME, Deanna >Ferguson, ROUGH BUSH, David Carl, THE LIBRARY, and more (I don't have the >list with me).
>
>Catalogs are available by mail: send queries backchannel to me.
>
>
>
>
>Now Available from Meow Press
>
>
>
>Michael Basinski, Hee-Bee Jeebies
>7x6.5" 24pg.
>$5.00
>
>Natalee Caple, The Price of Acorn
>6.5x4.5" 36pg.

>$6.00
>
>Wendy Kramer, Patinas
>8.5x7" 20pg.
>$5.00
>
>Hank Lazer, The Early Days of the Lang Dynasty
>6.5x6" 36pg.
>$6.00
>
>Jena Osman, Jury
>6.5x4.5" 28pg.
>$5.00
>
>Meredith Quartermain, Terms of Sale
>8.5x7" 48pg.
>$6.00
>
>Lisa Robertson, The Descent
>8.5x7" 24pg.
>$5.00
>
>Lisa Samuels, Letters
>7x6.5" 24pg.
>$5.00
>
>Gary Sullivan, Dead Man
>6.5x5" 32pg.
>$6.00
>
>
>Sullivan & Caple are prose. The whole set of 9 books is available right >now for $40 for poetics-fans. Call today!
>

↑ Index

110. Ann Lauterbach
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Mon 12 Aug 1996

To Charles Bernstein---

Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talking to the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!

↑ Index

111. maria damon

Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...

Mon 12 Aug 1996

---

al writes
> To Charles Bernstein---
>
> Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never > even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, > forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talking to > the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!

hi ann, we've never met, but it's a pleasure nonetheless.
best wishes, maria damon

↑ Index

112. Eiichi Hishikawa

Sun & Moon Press Address

Mon 12 Aug 1996

> Date: Sun, 11 Aug 1996 12:10:25 -0700
> From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Hannah Weiner bibliography
>
> Thanks for passing on the great Weiner bibliography Charles.
> Members of the Poetics List can now get copies of one of Hannah's > best works, SPOKE, for $4.00. Order through our website or > directly through my E-mail address.=20
>
> The website (just a reminder) is http//:www.sunmoon.com. My E-mail > at Sun & Moon is [redacted].
>
> Sun & Moon will be making new offers for several new titles and older > ones this next week.
>
> Douglas Messerli

Thanks very much for your excellent book _From the Other Side of the Century: A New American Poetry 1960-1990_ (Sun & Moon Press, 1994).

A friend of mine, who recommended this book to me, said his letter to Sun & Moon Press (at 6026 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, California 90036) was sent back to him with the message "unknown address." He said he used to be able to reach you with this address.

Could you tell me if this address is still valid?

P.S. I'm collecting Internet resources on 20th-century poets writing in English (with biographical data) at http://www.lit.kobe-u.ac.jp/~hishika/20c_poet.htm
Your book mentioned above has been a tremendous help for my page, thanks.

Quid prodest hoc ad aeternitatem
Michael Eiichi Hishikawa [redacted]
20c poetry -- http://www.lit.kobe-u.ac.jp/~hishika/20c_poet.htm

↑ Index

113. Rod Smith
Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
Mon 12 Aug 1996

> This is Dodie.
>
> Is it true these rumors I'm hearing that Juliana and ten others have left the poetics list and started their own poetics list?

Hi Dodie, it's just a gang of us on a cc list, most are on Poetics as well. Larry Price's idea. Some call it sub-poetics. I call it the A-list.

--Rod

↑ Index

114. Thomas M. Orange panel on WCW for Louisville
Mon 12 Aug 1996

listfolks,

i'm interested in putting together a panel for the twentieth-century literature conference to be held in louisville ky in february 1997.

my work on william carlos williams' early writing (roughly from tempers through his collected 1921-1931) has got me looking currently at imagism, objectiv-"ism," pound, zukofsky, periodicals and anthologies from the teens into the thirties (and all the folks that went into publishing those as well: kreymbourg, bodenheim, mcalmon), "minor" poets of the period, etc.

submissions are not due until october, which give us plenty of time to kick this around. i'd welcome ideas for papers on any related and sundry topics. feel free to reply directly to the list or backchannel.

tom orange
[redacted]

↑ Index

115. george hartley
Re: re poetry & speed
Tue 13 Aug 1996

Thanks to all for the clarifications. And to George Bowering (I think): the indigo Girls are a pop rock-folk duo from Georgia who write and sing sentimental lyrics and rhythms that haunt me.

George

Actually the song stuck relentlessly in mind was by Johnny Tillotson, in 1960, on the Cadence label.

Two years before "The Loco-Motion" by Little Eva on Dimension.

From Poetry on Cadence to Loco on Dimension---

In the immortal words of Bo Diddley:

When you're in the groove
You really got to move

--dave baptiste chirot

> On Thu, 8 Aug 1996, george hartley wrote:
>
> Christina Fairbank's
>
> "Poetry in motion"
>
> the Indigo Girls? on this list at last!
> the speed of cultural transmission (Virginia Woolf, Galileo)
> the speed of light in the poetry of the stars at night
>
> Thank you, George, but credit for those poetry & speed posts goes to > David Baptiste Chirot who is logged into POETICS via my address -

↑ Index

116. Jordan Davis confidentiality, subpo, california
Tue 13 Aug 1996

Dodie! Of all the juicy rumors I gave you you chose the one specifically about email to out? Or maybe I delivered the juicier rumors to Kevin? Or Rodrigo? There is a subpoetics. You can have your own subpoetics. Feel free to add me in, I love to blab.. I go away for two weeks and the Kiev gets someone else to bake the challah. Basically we wanted to talk about things on a smaller and a larger scale. Anybody else stunned to see Hank Lazer's two new books and Bruce Andrews' new book from who is it, Southwest Illinois Modernism Studies? Way cool. Gettin to them right after I get to Samuel Delaney, who's had too many hits on my 'who should I read page' to continue to ignore. For instance, Dodie, you could talk about what I characterized as New York's 'Bruce problem'. That would be a real potato caliente, a jesus prepuce to end all whatevers. Anybody (everybody?) read RH Blyth's Zen in English Literature? O so mary burger does this great magazine called 'proliferation' and there are a bunch of amazing autobio poems by Alice Notley in it. That's one thing I learned in California. How to start a subpoetics. Ask some people if they wouldn't mind being in a subpoetics. Then send an email message ccing all the people who said no they wouldn't mind. Next year this time I hope to have a server with L-Soft running. Maybe then we can have a thousand poetics. That was the idea behind poetics, no? To promote the individual indeces of the real, in as decent a way as possible? Or was it to have a listserv? either way cool. Scared to see what's happened to the kasha varnishkas. Also I learned photoshop. Was the speed question an oblique tie in to the olympics? A little marinetti action? Is kemp going to win? Ach so many questions. Oh right! Finally got to the famous 530 Page #2 which was even better than they said. Missed the cordial Katie Lederer but caught the gracious Anselm Berrigan--a cool lively presence, a Shakespeare play in himself. Props to Kevin for his amazing intros and outros at New College. Kevin Killian, of course. Got Stephen Ratcliffe's 'present tense' and wished I had money for Carla harryman's city lights book. Went to the antenym #what? steve? reading at Canessa Park, Steve Carll in pink tuxedo shirt, shaky handed Eddie Berrigan read, read well, Elizabeth Robinson read some great baby poems, Chris Daniels read a knockout Pessoa translation. The virtuality all connects to something! Yipes! Wow. So does that mean there are as many imaginings caused by a reading of a work of poetry as there are readers, the poet is the superintendent or the reader? Did anybody offer poetics bill Luoma's Lisa Jarnot's Marcella Durand's Kevin Davies's or my books? I could make that offer. I could offer Steve Carll's and Ange Mlinko's books too, but that may take an extra week to sort out.

End of performative east coast occasion.
Jordan

↑ Index

117. filch
Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail [new satire #3]
Tue 13 Aug 1996

---

above santa monica blvd. just west of westwood on a billboard is a picture of a beautiful persian man. he is always there dressed well, impeccably to be precise, so that the perfect white scarf around his neck and draped down across his breast seems as though it had just snowed and he being an eager and refined man has just stepped out into the world to participate in this newfound snow while across the traffic a toyota billboard trumpets the latest model in three pictures appearing as though on a schedule as the blinds which hold these images rotate in full circle directly behind the board listing live the number of dead and this man, his teeth perking from behind his well shaven face except for his well shaped mustache with its just dusted grey the hair on his pate in the field of his black black hair and his black, so incredibly black, tailored suit so that it just soothes you with this incredible feeling of competancy, this overwhelming desire to go with him to the ball to join him and the woman he would dine with who must be one of the true beauties, the actual real queens from the shah's court and this man has his hand reaching out to you and on his hand, his wonderfully manicured hand, is perched a gorgeous white, like you've never ever in your whole life seen white, dove with its eye a glint and behind this man it says "the A list. . ."

> Is it true these rumors I'm hearing that Juliana and ten others have left the poetics list and started their own poetics list?
>
> Hi Dodie, it's just a gang of us on a cc list, most are on Poetics as well. Larry Price's idea. Some call it sub-poetics. I call it the A-list.

↑ Index

118. filch
gender discourse
Tue 13 Aug 1996

```
<!-
    the following document is best viewed with
->
<html>
<head>
```

```
<title> gender discourse
</title>
<base href="http://www.chronotope.com/"> </head> <body bgcolor="#ffffff"
    background="/i/child.gif" link="#ff0000"
    alink="#ff0000"
    vlink="#ff0000" > <center> <table width="480"
    border="0"
><tr><td
    width="480" colspan="16"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="480"
    height="10"
></td></tr><tr><td
    width="15"
    colspan="1"
    rowspan="16"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="15"
    height="260"
></td><td><font size="7"
>healing. </td>
</tr>
</table> </center>  </body>
</html>
```

↑ Index

119. Henry Gould
Re: confidentiality, subpo, california
Tue 13 Aug 1996

As Jacques La Can O'Raida writes in his _The U-Turn of the Other_:

"In poetics, there is always already already always already a subpoetics." - Henry La Corn O'Gould

↑ Index

120. cris cheek
Re: Craven?
Tue 13 Aug 1996

Atlas Press '4 Dada Suicides' has useful discursions around Craven. Included is Conover's suggestion that, based on considerable evidence, he didn't die off Mexico but reinvented himself and made a living forging Wilde manuscripts.

The book presents selections from Craven's writings also. Worth checking.

love and love
cris

↑ Index

121. maria damon
Re: Juliana Spahr's new e-mail
Tue 13 Aug 1996

---

what are the main topics of conversation? (if you're allowed to say)--md
>
> Hi Dodie, it's just a gang of us on a cc list, most are on Poetics as well.
> Larry Price's idea. Some call it sub-poetics. I call it the A-list.
>
> --Rod

↑ Index

122. maria damon
Re: Hannah Weiner bibliography
Tue 13 Aug 1996

---

thanks charles; i'm going to try to write something on weiner for the midwest mla and the regular mla. this, along w/ comments from you and others on the list, is extremely helpful. bests, md

↑ Index

123. Christina Fairbank Chirot

speed & poetry (fwd)

Tue 13 Aug 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Tue, 13 Aug 1996 09:39:40 -0500 (CDT)
From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: speed & poetry

The world as we see it is passing--Paul of Tarsus

Re speed and poetry--one way to think of it is as speed in poetry--as Susan Howe writes in an essay on Olson, "seeing in a poem". Speed in poetry has to do with perception and scale. For example, Emily Dickinson:

To close the eyes is travel.

I have but to cross the floor to stand in the Spice Islands.

I do not go away, but the Grounds are ample--almost travel--to me.

Emerson writes that "language is vehicular". In "Nature", he cites the use of mechanical means to attain a "low level of the sublime"in order to over come "the blank or ruin" that is in the eye. Through a change in view, the habitual is revealed as "original".

Pound, Wiiliams and Olson urge writing that is efficient, fast--Pound thought of X-Rays in relation to poetry (at one point his nickname was X-Ray Pound), Williams the car and Olson the typewriter. This speed is related to perception--"one perception following another" faster and faster as Olson says. High speed perception slows things down (as in a camera)--hence the slowness of reading required by the notation used by Pound, Olson and Williams, their making long works of fragments, their use of juxtapositons, "fast cutting" so to speak, among masses of disparate materials, typographies, spaces. High speed also makes for the slowing, stopping of perception, so that the movement of a rock through geological time may be presented.It also makes possible the focusing on particulars, which, seen close up, slowed, change not in appearance but in scale. An example of this is the poetry of Larry Eigner. Eigner writes often of his concern with "immediacy and force". The speed of perception opens space, opens a moment in time, "another time in fragments". Speed in poetry is concerned with immediacy. (hence the documentary aspect in Pound, WCW, Olson, Eigner, Emily Dickinson, Howe). Immediacy is not transparency--hence the opacity, the "look" on the page of these writers. One does not see "through" the words to the immediate. The immediate is made present by the act of reading, which is slowed, and focuses, makes one aware of, the attention.

The opposite kind of speed is that of speed reading--which erases particulars while asserting that it trains one to be able to absrob large amounts of data. The smooth surface of speed reading removes the physical immediacy of opaque writing--"smooths out the bumps", "irons out the rough spots".

A paradox may be that writing concerned with the presentation of immediacy is eidetic--simply by being an object that is opaque rather than "transparent".

Which paradox finds its most extreme manifestation in Kerouac, the fast typer and passenger in Neal Cassady's fast cars. Kerouac wants to write spontaneous bop prosody, does sketching in front of objects and scenes--yet is called "memory Babe", is obsessed by memory.

Speed in poetry in relation to perception and opacity may also be thought of as a resistance. That is, if the opaque poem as object engages the attention, makes one aware of attention--it directs one to the question of the art object in relation to perception: to whom does it "belong". (Both perception and object).

Robert Smithson wrote: A great artist can make art by simply casting a glance. A set of glances could be as solid as any thing or place, but the society continues to cheat the artist out of his "art of looking", by only valuing "art objects".

Speed in poetry directs the attention to an "art of looking", "seeing in a poem" that opens time, space in relation to scale--and opens the question of who and what and how are time and space and objects being turned from perceptions into territories, objects, histories that are owned, bought and sold.

(an examination of some of these questions may be found in Karl Young's review of Olson's Maximus to Gloucester, at the EPC Olson page.)

re the Olympics, speed and poetry--check out Pindar's Olympian Odes!

the view changes/windows/the same silence/cars.a mass resting/earth/backyard/clumps/a block/everyday/mysteries/a while/a gas leak/to do nothing/is it death?/no/consider it/newspaper/real needed/shadows and fireebreaks/bushes button the hills

--larry eigner

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

124. Douglas Messerli

Re: Sun & Moon Press Address

Tue 13 Aug 1996

Yes, 6026 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, CA 90036 is still our address. Don't know why a letter never reached us.

Douglas

At 11:33 AM 8/13/96 +0900, you wrote:
>> Date: Sun, 11 Aug 1996 12:10:25 -0700
>> From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Re: Hannah Weiner bibliography
>>
>> Thanks for passing on the great Weiner bibliography Charles.
>> Members of the Poetics List can now get copies of one of Hannah's >> best works, SPOKE, for $4.00. Order through our website or >> directly through my E-mail address.=20
>>
>> The website (just a reminder) is http//:www.sunmoon.com. My E-mail >> at Sun & Moon is [redacted].
>>
>> Sun & Moon will be making new offers for several new titles and older >> ones this next week.
>>
>> Douglas Messerli
>
>Thanks very much for your excellent book _From the Other Side of >the Century: A New American Poetry 1960-1990_ (Sun & Moon Press, 1994).
>
>A friend of mine, who recommended this book to me, said his letter >to Sun & Moon Press (at 6026 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, >California 90036) was sent back to him with the message "unknown address."
>He said he used to be able to reach you with this address.
>
>Could you tell me if this address is still valid?
>
>P.S. I'm collecting Internet resources on >20th-century poets writing in English (with biographical data) at >http://www.lit.kobe-u.ac.jp/~hishika/20c_poet.htm
>Your book mentioned above has been a tremendous help for >my page, thanks.
>

>
>Quid prodest hoc ad aeternitatem
>Michael Eiichi Hishikawa [redacted]
>20c poetry -- http://www.lit.kobe-u.ac.jp/~hishika/20c_poet.htm
>

↑ Index

125. Gale Nelson
Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
Tue 13 Aug 1996

Maggie Zurowski & Sam Truitt are reading at The Fall Cafe, Smith St, Brooklyn, Saturday, 17th August at 3:oo p.m. These two cats will read some great verse -- so if you're in ear shot, make a bee line.

Maggie has been hanging in Berlin on a Fullbright fellowship & has seen her work in Mirage & the Impercipient. She holds an AB from Brown.

Sam is an MFA holder from Brown and has a great reading style.

Be there, once twice three times.

Gale

↑ Index

126. Jordan Davis
the saddest story (book offer)
Tue 13 Aug 1996

And in all that mess
the graciousness
of friends was necessary sometimes going uncredited--

For instance Dodie Bellamy lately outing subpoetics of the 'Bruce problem'
discussions and the 'coigns'

Dodie thank you for setting up the reading Mary Burger
the mysterious Robert Hale and I gave at New College

It's a great room, good crowd
A mural painting friend of mine arrived alerted by your publicity, I was amazed

Maria for $100 I'll let you have the subpoetics archives on a zip drive Mr Filch
I am not java compatible

but you know how email is so asychronous, a thread will go along then someone will come back to town and answer thirty messages

it's not exactly abc!
Dodie I was amazed and grateful for instance, the word 'beautiful' is the topic right now Lisa Jarnot refers to it as the 'Special Ed Poetics List' which I like better than a-list, Rod it gets how we've totally missed the point all along because this is a publication and that is a backroom

and both have their morning glories and smoky zones the semi-privacy affords some well not candor but reaction Dodie if I pause

it's because my parents come from different class backgrounds Steve what do you make now of that consistently coincidental laughter and of anybody's failure to say hey POETICS how are you, to say hello four hundred people, there's a comfort level like a middle distance race not one to one and not Mussolini at the balcony either tho sometimes I get the feeling anyway consciousness at 40 hertz and A at 440

awake it's noon here and back to work
SPECIAL OFFER FROM SUBPOETICS/

POETRY CITY
Sea Lyrics by Lisa Jarnot $5
Western Love by Bill Luoma $5
Lapsis Linguae by Marcella Durand $5

Thunk by Kevin Davies $3
A Little Gold Book by Jordan Davis $5
All five of these books for $20 ppd
Send a message with your address to

[redacted]
and I'll bill you
thanks Steve for being thanks Dodie
Love, Jordan

↑ Index

127. Herb Levy
Re: the saddest story (book offer)
Tue 13 Aug 1996

Jordan -

Please send me the handy five-pack for $20.

Is the Kevin Davies book a further instance of the Canadian language in the tradition of Dan Farrell's "Thimking of You"?

& does Noemie Maxwell (not a Canadian)'s "Thrum" fit into these Canadian conjugations?

Or not.

Herb Levy
P O Box 95744
Seattle, WA 98145

E-mail me an address & I'll send a check even before these books arrive. Hoo-hah.

Bests

Herb

> SPECIAL OFFER FROM SUBPOETICS/

> POETRY CITY
> _Sea Lyrics_ by Lisa Jarnot $5
> _Western Love_ by Bill Luoma $5
> _Lapsis Linguae_ by Marcella Durand $5
>
> _Thunk_ by Kevin Davies $3
> _A Little Gold Book_ by Jordan Davis $5
> All five of these books for $20 ppd
> Send a message with your address to
>
> [redacted]
> and I'll bill you
> thanks Steve for being thanks Dodie
> Love, Jordan

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

128. Joseph Lease
Re: defining or refusing to define
Tue 13 Aug 1996

--a couple of days ago I posted a message asking if anyone would be interested in discussing a range of poets--a certain range but I tried to word my message so as to leave the range open--ie, let the poets define certain topics of discussion (sites of poetics)--and go for them--adding poets whenever to the convesation whenever one wanted to--

--the response--and a very reasonable question--was--well, what makes these poets a group--

--but of course I didn't say they were a group

--nor did I want them to be a group

--however, of course groups are necessary and real and useful and generative--and of course people understand that there are differences within groups as well as differences between groups--

--but a question I would like to read pursued is:--what are the ways that poets can read poets from different and differently defined groups together (or, as Whitman might put it, side by side)--

--for example (and I really only mean this as an example)--

--one pairing that seems fruitful to me is Amiri Baraka / Bruce Andrews

All Best,
Joseph Lease

↑ Index

129. Herb Levy
Oops
Tue 13 Aug 1996

While that last missive from me wasn't as embarrassing as some of the misdirected e-mail that accidentally goes out to the whole list, I didn't need to bore all you folks with my request to Jordan.

So now I can bore with this too. Sorry.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

130. Henry
Re: defining or refusing to define
Tue 13 Aug 1996

On Tue, 13 Aug 1996 14:38:58 -0400 Joseph Lease said:
>--a couple of days ago I posted a message asking if anyone would be >interested in discussing a range of poets--a certain range but I tried to >word my message so as to leave the range open--ie, let the poets define >certain topics of discussion (sites of poetics)--and go for them--adding >poets whenever to the convesation whenever one wanted to--
>
>--the response--and a very reasonable question--was--well, what makes >these poets a group--

Was there ANY response? I didn't see any on the list. Thought it was a good opener...
>
>--but a question I would like to read pursued is:--what are the ways that >poets can read poets from different and differently defined groups >together (or, as Whitman might put it, side by side)--

I thought Dave Chirot's post on speed was a good recent example of how to think along these lines. Trying to open up an overview of different strains of 20th cent poetry - sense of historical development and the general purpose behind certain techniques - how to move toward a kind of simultaneous perspective on the different traditions, their strengths & weaknesses... Weakness, for example in the Pound/Wms/Olson quick-cut collage speed perception poetry Chirot describes, might be that there are problems with too-easy breakup of syntax & argument - problems of coherence ("it all coheres, all right, though my notes don't"), problems of dramatic impact, problems of meaning (stevens, for example, faulted both the over-scholarly "notation" style of Eliot & Pound as well as the overly-impressionistic style of Williams - but his own version of pseudo-statement & pseudo-argument (as in Ashbery) has its own weaknesses. Who can fault these artists, I'm not saying anything was right or wrong, but it might help to move toward new style-simultaneity to keep in mind the kind of awareness on the level of aesthetic effect that Chirot's post showed. The same approach could be taken using dramatic narrative speech & stanza effects. And then you see how they bend these various techniques toward artistic-political-"philosophical" poem making (i.e. as you say Baraka & Andrews, for one example). Chirot's paradoxical remarks on how speed of perception - sometimes mechanically induced - produced "slowness" of aesthetic effect & relate to immediacy & documentation - were very apropos. How does this relate to the performance-overdrive poetry of today (thinking of the Hannah Wieners posts)? - Henry Gould

↑ Index

131. •

Re: speed & poetry (fwd)

Tue 13 Aug 1996

Is this my cousin? I was Lynda Nelson, now Imburgia! Just checking! :)

From: Gale Nelson[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, August 13, 1996 8:46 AM
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Re: speed & poetry (fwd)

Maggie Zurowski & Sam Truitt are reading at The Fall Cafe, Smith St, Brooklyn, Saturday, 17th August at 3:oo p.m. These two cats will read some great verse -- so if you're in ear shot, make a bee line.

Maggie has been hanging in Berlin on a Fullbright fellowship & has seen her work in Mirage & the Impercipient. She holds an AB from Brown.

Sam is an MFA holder from Brown and has a great reading style.

Be there, once twice three times.

Gale

↑ Index

132. filch
for Chris Funkhouser. . .thanks
Tue 13 Aug 1996

---

http://www.chronotope.com/funkhouser/

↑ Index

133. filch
Tyuonyi & building clocks
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Two things:

Does anyone know if - Tyuonyi is still published and any contact issue with either the mag or Phillip Foss if it isn't published anymore.

Whether John Taggart's 'How to Construct a Clock' is still in print? Contact info?

cf

↑ Index

134. Janet S. Gray
growing up poems
Wed 14 Aug 1996

For a friend who is looking for 'accessible' poems to spice up
a mostly prose syllabus on growing up marginalized:
any suggestions of poems about growing up gay/lesbian,
growing up chicano/a, jewish, puertoriqueno/a, black,
native american, asian american, disabled, ... ?

Janet
[redacted]

↑ Index

135. Gale Nelson
Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Not likely a cousin, Lynda (unless rather distant), but possibly a college colleague? Did you play volleyball for the Claremont Mudd Scripps team in the early 80s?

From a relative-deprived Nelson (both my parents were only children),

Gale

↑ Index

136. Gale Nelson
Re: defining or refusing to define
Wed 14 Aug 1996

A very clever inversion of initials?

Amiri Baraka
Bruce Andrews

Political layer with language orientation or language orientation with political layer?

The movement from one well-defined approach to another (a "maturing" of aesthetic) over the course of each poet's career?

A few bites on Joseph's line...
Gale

↑ Index

137. Gary Roberts
Re: defining or refusing to define
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Shouldn't this discussion of speed and slowness (an interesting asymmetry there) be also keyed to the paces of the other body zones, not just the the mind and the sense organs? Most obviously, the paces of other activities such as walking, breathing, sex. Gary Roberts

↑ Index

138. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: growing up poems
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Janet--

Sandra Maria Esteves's poem "My Name is Maria Cristina" comes to mind right away. I believe it's in her book Blues Town Mockingbird Mambo.

↑ Index

139. Burt Kimmelman
Re: defining or refusing to define
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Joseph,

Okay, why pair baraka and andrews?

Burt

↑ Index

140. maria damon
Re: growing up poems
Wed 14 Aug 1996

-the famous poem by countee cullen abt being called "nigger" in --baltimore?
can't remember what' its' called.
-anything by gary soto; living up the street teaches extremely well
-house on mango st, cisneros
md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> For a friend who is looking for 'accessible' poems to spice up
> a mostly prose syllabus on growing up marginalized:
> any suggestions of poems about growing up gay/lesbian,
> growing up chicano/a, jewish, puertoriqueno/a, black,
> native american, asian american, disabled, ... ?
>
> Janet
> [redacted]

↑ Index

141. maria damon
Re: mackey e-address
Wed 14 Aug 1996

---

does anyone out there have an e-address for nate mackey? i seem to have deleted said info from my old aol account. thanks groovoids. md

↑ Index

142. Gale Nelson
Re: growing up poems
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Just like a Real Italian Kid, Michael Gizzi (The Figures)

This book, like Michael's work in general, pops with just about every kind of energy you could imagine. Childhood memories galore.

Gale

↑ Index

143. rob wilson
Re: growing up poems
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Zack (R. Zamora) Linmark's "They Like You Because You Eat Dog" is all of the below, and more, crazed cyborgian linkages of becoming muliple selves from Manila to Honolulu to SF gay scene, plus the language is equal too indeed exceeds all such fixities of what "growing up" or down or out might me in US polity of Nick at Night acculturations. See "Rolling the R's" (Kaya Press Productions, out this year) and/or work in Haggedorn's anthology "Charley Chan Is Dead" etc and Walter Lew on the whole schmeer of space and selfhoods (Premonitions); Zack has even wilder work on cross-gender reinventions and recursive Catholicism (not as dessicated or displaced as Jack Spicer machinics) in Hawaii Review 44 (Fall, 1995), edited Sean Mac Beth, which has some demonic poems by Morgan Blair (ex Faye Kicknosway socalled) for goodly measure of excess too. Hope this helps a bit re below. Rob Wilson

On Wed, 14 Aug 1996, Janet S. Gray wrote:

> For a friend who is looking for 'accessible' poems to spice up
> a mostly prose syllabus on growing up marginalized:
> any suggestions of poems about growing up gay/lesbian,
> growing up chicano/a, jewish, puertoriqueno/a, black,
> native american, asian american, disabled, ... ?
>
> Janet
> [redacted]

↑ Index

144. Gale Nelson
CSPAN-2 to Air "Freedom to Write" Program
Wed 14 Aug 1996

C-SPAN-2 will air an edited version of the Freedom to Write Conference, held at Brown this past spring. The air date is Saturday, 31 August at 8:00 p.m., via their "About Books" program.

The Freedeom to Write Conference, sponsored by Brown University's Freedom to Write Program (housed in Creative Writing), fetaured an international symposium, including a teleconference conversation with Salman Rushdie, moderated by Freedom to Write Program founder, Robert Coover, with "present" panelists including Joanne Leedom-Ackerman, Carlos Fuentes, Gara LaMarche, Liao Hui-ying, and Liam Rector.

Speakers and presenters at other portions of the five-day conference were: Mark Amerika (USA), Bei Ling (China), Vladimir Ceballos (Cuba), Chen Jo-hsi (China), Augustin Garcia (Cuba), Hwang Liang (Taiwan), William Keach (USA), Li Lu (China), Liao Hui-ying (Taiwan), Jonathan Lubin (USA), Ma Jian (Hong Kong), Mang Ke (China), Carole Maso (USA), Mei Xin (Taiwan), Meng Lang (China), Gale Nelson (USA), Aishah Rahman (USA), Luis Rivera (Cuba), Doug Unger (USA), Keith Waldrop (USA), C.D. Wright (USA), Xiang Ming (Taiwan), Xue Di (China), Yang Ge-ling (China), Yang Xiaobin (China), Ying Ping-shu (Taiwan).

If you have cable, you may find the edited version of this conference to be an interesting document.

Gale Nelson

↑ Index

145. Joel Felix
Rube Steps In <<LEAVE BOOKS>>
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Anybody

Not to confuse the ether-ial with the real, but I was in Buffalo last weekend and was struck by the number of ass-kicking chapbooks from "Leave Press," which published several of the people on this list. Does anyone know who publishes "Leave" Books?

Shouts out to JKuzai for hot chaps tambien.

A general question placed to the field: Is the future of poetry in the U.S. the 500 copy laserprinted chapbook? Is this the nascent node of the cultural production formerly known as "Poetics?" I do not come bearing critique, here, just typing aloud, as it were.

and thanks to those of us (ooh, bad english--, well, how else would a collective mind talk to itself?) who caught hold of the Ronald Johnson broadside firestorm. (nudge)

Felix

↑ Index

146. George Bowering
Re: disgruntled postal workers
Wed 14 Aug 1996

> And re disgruntled postal workers and lit--as of y'day's log, no one had yet mentioned Charles Bukowski's novel _Post Office_.

Oh, I thought we were talking about serious writing.

George Bowering.

"Sighing is extra."

--Gertrude Stein

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

147. Pierre Joris
[Fwd: David Tudor (fwd)]
Wed 14 Aug 1996

14 Aug 96 15:11 EDT
From: "Fred E. Maus" <[redacted]>
Subject: David Tudor (fwd)
To: [redacted]
Date: Wed, 14 Aug 1996 15:11:37 -0400 (EDT)

> Date: 14 Aug 96 12:58:32 EDT
> From: Volker Straebel <[redacted]>
> To: s / silence <[redacted]>
> Subject: David Tudor
>
> Sad news, according to Mimi Johnson, Artservices:
>
> David Tudor died on Tuesday, August 13, at his home in Tomkins Cove, New York, after a series of strokes. He was 70 years old.

> Volker Straebel

↑ Index

148. Douglis Beck
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1996 to 11 Aug 1996
Wed 14 Aug 1996

---

debra sez: "Craven's probably surfin the waves." not sure what that means, but there it is. go figure.

↑ Index

149. Loss Glazier
Re: Rube Steps In <<LEAVE BOOKS>>
Wed 14 Aug 1996

Joel, You can find info about these presses at the Electronic Poetry Center
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc
then select "Presses"

At 11:21 AM 8/14/96 CDT, you wrote:
> Anybody
>
>Not to confuse the ether-ial with the real, but I was in Buffalo >last weekend and was struck by the number of ass-kicking chapbooks >from "Leave Press," which published several of the people on this >list. Does anyone know who publishes "Leave" Books?
>
> Shouts out to JKuzai for hot chaps tambien.
>
> A general question placed to the field: Is the future of >poetry in the U.S. the 500 copy laserprinted chapbook? Is this >the nascent node of the cultural production formerly known as "Poetics?"
>I do not come bearing critique, here, just typing aloud, as it were.
>
> and thanks to those of us (ooh, bad english--, well, >how else would a collective mind talk to itself?) who caught hold >of the Ronald Johnson broadside firestorm. (nudge)
>
>Felix
>
>

↑ Index

150. Gabrielle Welford
info on azi (fwd)
Thu 15 Aug 1996

I got information before I forwarded this because it seemed so extreme and horrendous. gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 14 Aug 1996 13:19:29 -1000
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: info on azi

Gabrielle,
We received your request. Please excuse the dealay in getting back to you.
 We've been running day and night on this case.

Enclosed please find A)an article that recently ran in the Jackson Advocate B) an excerpt from the pre-trial hearing and C) an articel that ran in the Clarion-Ledger last April.

I hope these will give you a satisfactory range of perspectives and information.

If I can be of further service, please don't hesitate to call on me.

In Solidarity,

Ben Jealous
NCADP Program Coordinator

South African Child Facing Legal Lynching, Civil Rights Activists Protest

"Under Apartheid, under the state of emergency, Black children were tried as adults," observed Elaine Salo, a South African doctoral candidate studying in Atlanta. "This case is very reminiscent of that situation. He may not be accused of a political crime, but they are not taking his age into consideration. This is really a child we are talking about." After surviving some of Apartheid's most turbulent years, Azikiwe Kambule a 10th grade South African child is facing the death penalty in Mississippi for a crime in which many say he was little more than a bystander. Despite having no criminal record, no history of violence, providing his full cooperation to the authorities, and not being present when the killing took place Azi has been charged as an accomplice to capital murder. Mississippi is seeking the death penalty against Azi-- a child who isn't even old enough to buy a beer, let alone sit on a jury. Two local prosecutors, Hinds County District Attorney Ed Peters and Madison County

D.A. James Kitchens, have already acted to seal Azi's fate. In April, Peters was quoted in the Clarion-Ledger, a local daily newspaper, as saying that because the "jurors in [predominantly black] Hinds County have a reputation for refusing to vote for the death penalty," he and Kitchens moved Azi's trial to Madison County where the outcome would be more certain, if not predictable. The setting for John Grisham's A Time To Kill, Madison's racial environment is notorious. "That jury's gonna lynch 'em," says Charles Tisdale, publisher of The Jackson Advocate. "It's just that simple." With one of the largest white populations in Mississippi, Madison has become a virtual haven for the state's less tolerant elites. "That county is home to this country's richest and poorest people," says Tisdale. "The white folks ran there to avoid desegregation, and the black folks who've stayed have never received the benefit of their own civil rights." Like his fictitious counterpart in Grisham's's novel, county officials say, the current Madison County D.A. is hoping this high profile death penalty case will advance his career. "Word is he's planning on running for Judge soon," said a county attorney who asked his name not be printed. Azi's friends and supporters say they are concerned that the part-time public defender who's defending him won't be up to the challenge. "Those attorneys are contracted-- they aren't paid anything extra to handle capital trials," says Sheila O'Flaherty who was with the Mississippi Capital Defense Resource Center until congressional Republicans eliminated its funding earlier this year. The office had been charged with making sure that cases like Azi's didn't fall through the cracks. According to Steve Hawkins, executive director of the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty, court-appointed attorneys in southern states often receive the equivalent of 4 or 5 dollars per hour to handle death penalty trials. "Look at the facts," says Reverend Robert Abrams, a United Methodist pastor from Gulfport, Mississippi, "and you will see this boy is more of a victim than anything else." Azikiwe Kambule came to the United States two years ago with his mother who had received a fellowship to finish her college education in America. "He was very excited," remembers his mother, Busisiwe Chabeli. "He had always heard us talk about America and he wanted the chance to see for himself." As a student at Chastain Middle School in Jackson, Azi had no trouble adjusting academically; he received excellent grades, was placed in honors classes and joined the school choir. Yet, Azi found himself under immense social pressure -- he didn't look, speak or dress like other children in his neighborhood. Azi wanted to "fit in" with his peers, and not be the subject of their ridicule. He met and started spending time with youth who were older and very street-wise. While attending Jackson's Murrah High School, Azi's grades began to fall; his parents worried that his new friends were the wrong crowd. Fearing the worst, they decided to scrape together the funds to send Azi to a boarding school. Tragically, it was already too late. Last January, a week before he was to leave for the Piney

Woods School, Azi found himself in the middle of a car-jacking in which a young African American woman was kidnapped and ultimately killed. According to police testimony during a pre-trial hearing, Azi himself was so far away from the crime scene that he did not hear the gunshots. When arrested, he was the only one to cooperate with the police. He fully explained the terrible series of events that ended with the death of Pamela McGill-- a young African American woman who was popular in the local community. After his arrest, Azi tried repeatedly to help the authorities in their investigation. Civil rights activists say they fear that outrage about McGill's murder has inhibited many people's ability to see the injustice being perpetrated by local prosecutors. "While the tragedy of Ms. McGill's death is an emotional fire burning out of control in our community, we must look at the larger political dynamic of the prosecutors' decision to move this trial to Madison County to ensure these two young people get the death penalty," commented L.C. Dorsey, assistant professor of social work at Jackson State University and former executive director of the Mississippi Prison Defense Committee. "It seems that their guilt has been decided even before the trial has begun." Scheduled to commence August 19, Azi's case is already beginning to attract national and international attention. "The situation in which Azi finds himself speaks volumes about the use of the death penalty against children," Hawkins says. "During this decade, only five nations in the world are known to have executed persons for crimes they committed before their eighteenth birthday. Those countries are Iran, Pakistan, Yemen, Saudi Arabia . . . and the United States. And America has executed more than the other four combined." According to the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty, a condemned child in the United States also tends to be of darker hue -- 66% of those persons sentenced to death as children have been from racial minorities. "Nowhere is the international rule of law more clear than the prohibition on the use of the death penalty against children. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which the United States has ratified, clearly states that the 'sentence of death shall not be imposed for crimes committed by persons below the age of eighteen'," Hawkins explains. "Indeed, every major human rights treaty in the world has the same express wording." Rev. Abrams says he is concerned that Americans have become so fearful and angry about violence in their communities that they're no longer contemplating the consequences of their responses to crime. "There is a feeding frenzy going on in America right now" he says. "And we are feeding on our youth." --

_____ [NOTE: This is only an excerpt from the complete transcript. The information cited below can be found on pages 1 and 3-14 of the official transcript, which is available from the Madison County Circuit Court Clerk's Office]

IN THE COUNTY COURT OF THE FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT
OF HINDS COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

STATE OF MISSISSIPPI PLAINTIFF VERSUS NOS. 96-228 & 96-229 RUDY
RHODES AND SANTONIO BERRY
DEFENDANTS

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS HAD AND DONE IN THE PRELIMINARY HEARING OF THE ABOVE-STYLED AND NUMBERED CAUSES BEFORE THE HONORABLE WILLIAM R. BARNETT, HINDS COUNTY JUDGE, ON THE 22ND DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1996. * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

DIRECT EXAMINATION BY MR. LEMON: Q. Would you state your name, please. A. James French. Q. Where are you employed? A. City of Jackson Police Department, Violent Crimes Task Force. Q. How long have you been employed there? A. I've been employed with the police department a little over 18 years. Q. Have you had reason to investigate a crime involving a Rudy Rhodes and Santonio Berry? A. Yes, sir, I have. Q. Did you also investigate a crime involving an Azikiwe Kambule? A. Yes, sir, I did. Q. And they are all related in the same crime? A. Yes, sir. Q. Do you understand that because Mr. Kambule's attorney is not able to be here today because of a conflict we're only going to proceed on Mr. Rhodes and Mr. Berry? A. Yes, sir. Q. Okay. What crime had you investigated the defendant Rhodes and defendant Berry for? A. The initial crime was simply a missing person. They were--they have been arrested and charged. Mr Berry has been charged with armed robbery and kidnapping, Mr. Rhodes has been charged with accessory to armed robbery and accessory to kidnapping. Q. And where did this crime take place or begin? A. 1523 County Line Road, Somerset Apartments. Q. Is that in the First Judicial District of Hinds County? A. Yes, sir. Q. Could you please tell the Court the involvement in the crimes as to Rudy Rhodes and Santonio Berry; and when necessary please speak to defendant Azikiwe Kambule, also. A. Yes, sir. Initially Pamela McGill was reported missing on the 25th of September [sic]. We obtained a bank photo from the Trustmark Bank at County Line Road, an ATM machine, showing Ms. McGill--the last know time that we know that she was alive at 5:55 P.M. on that date. As she drives through the--away from the ATM a white Mitsubishi driven by Mr. Berry, a clear facial shot of him, pulls through the ATM. From that point on Ms. McGill has never been seen. She had a meeting set up for 6:20--6:15 that day. The person that was supposed to meet her did not arrive at her apartment until 6:20. Ms McGill was not there at that time. She's never been seen from again. The--Ms. McGill at the time she went through the bank was driving her 1993 red Dodge Stealth. She withdrew $50.00 in cash from the bank, and there was a debit against her account for $51.00, the extra one dollar against the account. We began looking for the vehicle. We received information that an individual from Laurel and two from Jackson were trying to sell the vehicle in Laurel on a street called Lucas Street. We contacted Laurel P.D. Laurel P.D. began looking for the vehicle. They found the vehicle parked on a parking lot at Howard Industries in Laurel. This was on the 5th of February around 5:00 P.M. The vehicle was processed for evidence by the Mississippi State Crime Lab. Items missing from the vehicle were the car radio, a set of floor mats, and a cellular telephone--Dodge Stealth floor mats. Also found in the car was a spent hull from a Makarov pistol, a 9 by 18 Makarov style--Makarov style pistol. They recovered other pieces of evidence. February the 6th a Mr. Preston Ramsey contacted us and advised that he had received information that Rudy Rhodes and two individuals from Jackson had taken the red Dodge Stealth to an Oscar George in Laurel. Detective Windham with the Laurel P.D. was contacted and asked to locate Oscar George. In the meantime, members of the task force went to Laurel. On the 6th special agent--FBI agent Artis and detective--and myself interviewed Oscar George. Oscar George stated that Rudy Rhodes and two individuals that he thought to be from Jackson had tried to sell him this red Dodge Stealth for a thousand dollars. On the 6th members of the Violent Crimes Task Force and the Fugitive Task Force arrested Rudy Rhodes. At 8:30 P.M. Rudy Rhodes signed a rights waiver form. This was witnessed by FBI agent Hal Neilson, Mississippi Highway Patrol investigator Tommy Squires, and myself. Rudy Rhodes then gave a written statement as to this incident. Q. Without getting into the--exactly what was said in the statement, could you please tell the Court the effect of that statement? A. The statement indicates that Azikiwe Kambule and Berry showed up at Rhodes' apartment. They were driving a red Dodge Stealth. Rhodes indicated that as soon as he saw it he knew that it was probably a stolen vehicle. They wanted to go to Laurel. He had already planned to go to Laurel, so he allowed them to follow. Rhodes and his girlfriend, Pammy Porter, rode in Rhodes' red Dodge--in a red Plymouth Laser; and the red Dodge Stealth driven by Berry and a passenger, Kambule, followed. Pammy Porter spent the night at her mother's house. Berry, Kambule, and Rhodes spent the night, the night that Ms. McGill first--missed her first appointment. The next day, Friday, Rhodes stated that he took Kambule and Berry to Oscar George's business which is a repair shop, auto repair shop; and they did in fact try to sell the car for a thousand dollars. Santonio Berry removed the radio from the vehicle and placed it in the trunk of the red Plymouth Laser that's jointly owned by Rudy Rhodes and a Stacy Roy. While in Laurel, Santonio Berry and Azikiwe Kambule told Rhodes that they had followed a woman driving from a bank to some apartment. They made the woman move over and drove toward Raymond. They turned off the highway toward Raymond on a long, dark road, made the woman get out, and drove off. They did not tell Rhodes, according to his statement, that they had murdered her. Super Bowl Sunday, which I believe is the 28th--they came back to Jackson on Saturday. Pammy Porter drove the Plymouth Laser, and the three individuals were in the car with her. And Super Bowl Sunday Berry went back to Rhodes and said he wanted to go back to Laurel. Rhodes and Berry went back to Laurel and moved the vehicle from an individual's house to the parking lot at Howard Industries where they left it. And that's basically Rhodes' statement. Q. Okay. Did any of the others make any statements? A. Yes, sir. Azikiwe Kambule when he was arrested by special agent Neilson, investigator Squires, and myself made a statement that he and--to the effect that he and Berry had in fact observed Pam McGill on the parking lot of the Trustmark Bank at the corner of County Line and Wheatley. They were standing outside of Berry's car about to use an ATM card themselves. Ms McGill drove around them, pulled in the machine. Berry made a statement that he wanted that car. They got back into Berry's car, followed her to the apartments. Kambule said that it appeared to him that Ms. McGill was getting out of her vehicle as if to check the mail, and at which point-- Q. This is back at her apartment? A. At Somerset Apartments. Kambule stated that Berry used his Makarov pistol to force Ms. Berry [sic] back into the car. He forced here through the driver's seat into the passenger's seat of this vehicle. Berry got in behind the driver's seat with the weapon on Ms. McGill. Kambule indicated that he got into the passengers door and almost had to lie down to get behind the from seat--behind the seat on the passenger's side. Berry drove. Kambule again was right behind the seat. Ms. McGill was in the right, front seat. They left Berry's Mitsubishi at Somerset Apartments. As they drove, Pam McGill kept begging for them to just take the car and take her money and let her go. According to Kambule, they went to a road down toward Raymond. Berry stopped the car, made the woman get out, and he told Kambule to turn the car around. Kambule stayed in the car. Berry walked the woman into the woods. Kambule tried to turn the car around. He cannot drive a straight shift and could not get it turned around. Berry returned shortly; and Berry stated--according the Kambule, Berry said that he had shot--he had made the girl kneel down and shot her in the back of the head. They then went, according to Kambule, went to Rhodes' apartment. There they left the Dodge and had Rudy Rhodes take them back to where they had left the white Mitsubishi. Berry drove the Mitsubishi to his apartment on Poplar Avenue. They then returned to Rudy Rhodes' home and then went to Laurel. Kambule tried to point out the road that--where the--where Ms. McGill had been placed, but he was not successful. Q. Has anyone else attempted to assist the police or the authorities in finding Ms. McGill's body? A. In--no, they all-- Q. Concerning the defendants. A. We got statements from Cedric Bernard Jones and from a Brian Cooley. They were with all three defendants on the Saturday night--excuse me--on the Friday night following the abduction; and Santonio Berry showed Brian Cooley the firearm. All three defendants showed these two witnesses the vehicle. At that time it was--when they saw it, it was parked on the parking lot at Jones County Junior College. They talked about the incident; and according to Cooley and Jones, they indicated that they had forced the woman into the car, taken her to a long, dark road and made her get out. Jones and Cooley indicated they thought the woman was still alive when she was put out of the vehicle. Pammy Porter was interviewed by agents Neilson and Detective Rainey, and she indicated that she had in fact gone to Laurel, that when she first--on the night of the incident when she returned home, she walked into her apartment and heard Santonio Berry saying something to the effect "two shots, pow, pow." She went on into the apartment. They wanted to go to Laurel. They followed Porter and Rhodes to Laurel, that during the weekend she did in fact overhear them saying that they had taken the car--taken the woman, taken the car and put her out on a long, dark road. On the way back from Laurel that Saturday, Pammy Porter was driving the vehicle with the other three individuals in it. She was stopped in Mendenhall-on Highway 49 at Mendenhall and issued a ticket for driving with no tag. Q. How did the two defendants that abducted Ms. McGill receive their vehicle back that they had parked at her apartment complex? A. According to Kambule, Rhodes--they went--after they put Ms. McGill out, they went to Rhodes' apartment. They got into Rhodes' car. Rhodes took them to Somerset Apartments. Berry got into the Mitsubishi, drove the Mitsubishi to Poplar Street where he had an apartment, and this is prior to going to Laurel. Q. I'm sorry. Where were the items that were taken from Ms. McGill's car found? A. The radio that was taken from Ms. McGill's car was found in the trunk of Rudy Rhodes' car. He identified it as being the radio that came out of the car. The cellular telephone was recovered by Laurel Police Department. An individual turned it in, and an individual there whose name escapes me now identified it as being the phone that came out of that car. The floor mats from the vehicle were found in a mini storage building in Clinton during the serving of a search warrant. So that' the only three items we've recovered from the car. The Makarov pistol we believe to have been used in the incident was found in the possession of Mr. Berry at the time he was arrested by Clinton Police Department... CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. FORTNER: Q. Jim, I've just got a few questions. How long after Kambule was arrested did you arrest Mr. Berry? A. Mr. Berry was arrested somewhere in the neighborhood of 5:15, 5:30 in the morning. Q. Did Mr. Berry make any statements to the police? A. No, sir. Q. None at all? A. To my knowledge, no, sir. Q. Are you the only person that attempted to ask him any questions, or did you attempt to ask him any questions? A. I was not present during the time he was arrested. I did see him following his arrest. They brought him up to our office for processing into the jail. He was advised of his rights, but he didn't want to talk. So to my knowledge he's not made any statements whatsoever. Q. Did Mr. Kambule--is Mr. Kambule the only witness you've spoken to or the only person you or anybody else has spoken to that says Mr. Berry told him that he killed the woman? A. Yes, sir. Q. All of the other people that you've talked to, the people down in Laurel, the names that you listed, all of those people only say that Kambule and Berry said that they took her out on a road and put her out. Is that right? A. Yes. Q. Do we even know for certain what road we're talking about here? A. No. Q. So do we even know for certain that if this woman was killed it occurred here in Hinds County? A. We know that the crime began in Hinds County. Q. But we don't know where it ended. Is that right? A. Correct. Q. Right now my client is not charged with murder. Is that right? A. Correct. Q. And is it your intention to try to present a murder charge against him to the grand jury? A. Yes, sir. Q. Did Mr. Kambule--what time was it when they went through the ATM? A. 5:55. Q. And what time was it when they got to Mr. Rhodes' apartment? A. There's some discrepancy on that. Q. What does Rhodes say? A. I think Rhodes and--I believe Rhodes said around 8:00 or 9:00 P.M. Q. What about Kambule? A. He didn't say. Q. And Kambule testified--or in his statement he told you that--he told you that he did see my client with a gun. Is that right? A. Kambule? Yes, sir. Q. How long--you said that Kambule said that Mr. Berry left the car with Ms. McGill; and he tried to turn the car around, couldn't do so, and Berry returned shortly. A. Yes, sir. Q. What is shortly? A. I don't know. Q. Was he any more specific than that? A. No. Q. Did Mr. Kambule tell you that while Mr. Berry and Ms. McGill were outside of the vehicle that he heard a gunshot? A. He specifically said he did not hear a gunshot. BY MR. FORTNER: That's all.

---------- MADISON COUNTY WILL TRY SUSPECTS IN MCGILL SLAYING

[Note: This is a copy of an article that ran in Jackson, Mississippi's Clarion-Ledger Neewspaper on April 5, 1995]

Pamela McGill's suspected killers will be tried in Madison County, officials said Thursday. Investigators said they don't plan to directly file charges related to McGill's slaying against Santonio Berry, 21, and Azikiwe Kambule, 17, but will present the case to the grand jury as a capital murder punishable by the death penalty. "I requested the Madison County District Attorney take the case and he's agreed to do that," said Hinds County District Attorney, Ed Peters. "The family, from the beginning, has expressed a desire that the people charged get the death penalty and the best way is to send it to another county," Peters said. McGill, 31, disappeared Jan. 25. Police say the incident began in Hinds County, where she was kidnapped, and ended in Madison County, where she was slain. "Both counties would have jurisdiction," Peters said. Police say Berry wanted her sports car and he and Kambule kidnapped her from her Jackson apartment. Kambule told police Berry drove the car to a deserted road outside Jackson and shot McGill in the head after making her walk into the woods and kneel. Berry, Kambule and Rudy Rhodes, 19, were arrested Feb. 7. Berry and Kambule were charged with armed robbery and kidnapping, Rhodes was charged as an accessory. Rhodes is accused of arranging to sell McGill's red 1993 Dodge Stealth in Laurel; investigators say Pammy Porter, 19, Rhodes' fiancee, also knew of the crime. Porter also is charged as an accessory. Madison County Coroner Alex Breeland said an autopsy confirmed McGill was shot in the back of the head. The body was released to her family Thursday. McGill's body was found Thursday in a wooded area near North County Line Road just inside Madison County after Berry pinpointed the general location for investigators. Two previous searches, based on Kambule's vague description of the site, failed. Hinds County Sheriff Malcolm McMillin said he had no preference which county will try the case. "My position is there's good judges and good juries in Hinds and Madison counties," he said. Peters sees things differently. "The jurors in Hinds County have a reputation for refusing to vote for the death penalty," he said. "Certain judges in Hinds County have gotten so prejudiced against the prosecution that they won't even allow confessions to be entered as evidence." _____---------- END OF TRANSMISSION

↑ Index

151. •

Re: speed & poetry (fwd)

Thu 15 Aug 1996

No! I was'nt an athelete! But I did dabble in poetry some! I do have a = cousin named Gale Nelson tho! I can see now you are not her! I'm sorry = you don't have more relatives.....but you can adopt them! I did! I have = a large family.....but adopted a Grandmother, a Brother, and a cousin! = They are wonderful! Thanks for answering! .....Lynda.

From: Gale Nelson[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, August 14, 1996 6:32 AM
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Re: speed & poetry (fwd)

Not likely a cousin, Lynda (unless rather distant), but possibly a = college colleague? Did you play volleyball for the Claremont Mudd Scripps team = in the early 80s?

> From a relative-deprived Nelson (both my parents were only children),

Gale

↑ Index

152. Gabrielle Welford
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Hey, Lois Ann Yamanaka's _Saturday Night at Pahala Theater_ and Zack Linmark's _Rolling the R's_. Some of Mary TallMountain's poetry and stories, if you want more stories--a wonderful one called "Green March Moons" and others. gab

↑ Index

153. Schuchat
WW II in Japanese Film (fwd)
Thu 15 Aug 1996

The following, which I cross post from another list, may be of interest to some of us.
---------- Forwarded message ----------

Subject: WW II in Japanese Film

Hello all,

For those of you in or passing through the San Francisco - Bay Area:

A Chinese acquaintance has informed me of the following films being shown at the Pacific Film Archive in Berkeley: "WW II in Japanese Film"

August 16 -- Seisaku's Wife 7:00
        -- Clouds at Sunset 9:15 August 17 -- Hoodlum Soldiers Return 7:30
        -- Dear His Majesty 9:20
August 30 -- Senso Daughters and Karayuki-San:
                The Making of a Prostitute 7:30
August 31 -- Extremely Personal Eros: Love Song 7:00
        -- The Emperor's Naked Army Marches On 8:55

For more info see http://www.uampfa.berkeley.edu/pfa/

Pacific Film Archive
2621 Durant Avenue
Berkeley, California 94720-2250
510/[redacted] (office)
510/[redacted] (tickets)

Thomas Pixley email: [redacted]
Program Officer
Asia/Pacific Research Center
200 Encina Hall
Stanford University phone: [redacted]
Stanford, CA 94305-6055 fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

154. Brian Carpenter
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Hello POETICS --
(there, i did it)

Also might suggest _American Dreams_ by Sapphire, publ. by Vintage Books. A wide range of voices from urban america, growing up, and a considerable sampling of groups in our Tossed Salad. Others on the list might know more specifics on the book, as I've (eek) only read a handful of pages so far.

= Brian Carpenter

↑ Index

155. Janet S. Gray
Growing up marginalized poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

thanks for the help, all!

Janet

↑ Index

156. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Hey Maria et al,

I believe the Cullen poem is called "Incident." Somone (I can't remember the artist's name) covered it on an album recently. I brought that in to play for my class the day we discussed the poem, and it was a great way to get the students into it. It may have been Ani DiFranco--does anyone know if that's right? Also in the first Nuyorican anthology (the one edited by Algarin and Pinero) there are two poems by a young poet, Jorge Lopez, which may be interesting because they are actually written by a kid.

On Wed, 14 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:

> -the famous poem by countee cullen abt being called "nigger" in --baltimore?
> can't remember what' its' called.
> -anything by gary soto; living up the street teaches extremely well
> -house on mango st, cisneros
> md
>
> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
> group writes:
> For a friend who is looking for 'accessible' poems to spice up
> a mostly prose syllabus on growing up marginalized:
> any suggestions of poems about growing up gay/lesbian,
> growing up chicano/a, jewish, puertoriqueno/a, black,
> native american, asian american, disabled, ... ?
>
> Janet
> [redacted]

↑ Index

157. william marsh
Re: speed and WODEN Nichol
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Perhaps the "speed" discussion has run its course but just wanted to point out by way of postscript (sorry if it's already been mentioned) bp Nichol's treatment of it in "Probable Systems 18" (_art facts_) -- an amazing series of dream commentaries which constructs (to quote) "a number of numbered energy routes and details them in terms of acceleration & deceleration." What interests me is the way he maps his "Accelerator and decelerator calculations", suggesting a treatment of speed (motion) and locale (space) within the same equation. "What this map gives us access to is an understanding of 'the speed of thot'..." ---> a speed map, which as he writes earlier points to "the ability to analyze reading at a finer level of detail i.e. the change of tempo from letter to letter in any cluster of letters (be they words or more abstract groupings)."

An amazing poem (and book) for any who haven't read it. (Available, by the way, through Chax.)

bmarsh

↑ Index

158. william marsh
Re: Tyuonyi & building clocks
Thu 15 Aug 1996

At 08:47 PM 8/13/96 -0800, you wrote:
>Two things:
>
>Does anyone know if - Tyuonyi is still published and any contact issue with >either the mag or Phillip Foss if it isn't published anymore.

I've tried repeatedly to locate Phillip and the mag, but to no avail. Not much help, sorry, but i'm curious as well.

bmarsh

↑ Index

159. Daniel Bouchard
Pub Announcement: MASS AVE.
Thu 15 Aug 1996

I'm pleased to announce the publication of the premier issue of MASS AVE. This first issue is devoted exclusively to poetry thematically grounded (loosely) in the city. The works of 14 poets from 9 cities are featured. They are:

Jawanza Ali Keita
Ange Mlinko
Jordan Davis
Renee Gladman
Chris Stroffolino
David Baratier
Giovanni Singleton
Bill Luoma

Lisa Amber Phillips
Beth Anderson
Meredith Quartermain
Steve Carll
Michael Leddy
David Golumbia

56 pages, perfect-bound.

For a copy, please send 5 dollars to

MASS AVE.
Daniel Bouchard
PO Box 230
Boston, MA 02117

Make checks payable to Daniel Bouchard

Thanks.

[redacted]

↑ Index

160. Christina Fairbank Chirot
growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

For Janet Gray:

Two writers who have much material which may be of interest, use are Joseph Bruchac and Leslie Marmon Silko. Excellent writers both. Joseph Bruchac has also written many childrens' books presenting Native American texts.

Though not poems (more prose poems, really) two excellent presentations of growing up in a marginalized community are Jack Kerouac's Visions of Gerard and Doctor Sax. Visions of Gerard especially has a polyphony of sounds in its movement among Nashua and Lowell Quebecois and American English.

As my Pepere used to say, thank God for Kerouac--now Americans know Quebecois can be more than hockey players and lumberjacks.

Lowell now has along with the Quebecois and Greek and Irish communities Kerouac wrote of a vital and growing Cambodian community.

Comme on dit: Vive les differences!

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

161. Joseph Lease
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

---

re: growing up texts

just to mention some obvious ones--

Call It Sleep by Henry Roth Go Tell It on the Mountain by James Baldwin

in a way--

Dutchman by Leroi Jones / Amiri Baraka (as well as tons of his early poems)

--reading other people's suggestions for this area has been very exciting--

All Best,
Joseph Lease

↑ Index

162. Gabrielle Welford problems with the Azi message
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Did anyone besides Charles have problems with this message coming into their system? Sorry if it did. gab.

↑ Index

163. maria damon
Re: problems with the Azi message
Thu 15 Aug 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
discussion group writes:
> Did anyone besides Charles have problems with this message coming into > their system? Sorry if it did. gab.

problems as in technical difficulties or problems as in objections?

↑ Index

164. Gale Nelson
Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
Thu 15 Aug 1996

I've looked at works like Corona (1973) and Film Noir (1978) as working with reader/audience in ways significantly different from the work by Andrews that I've seen over the last few years. Film Noir uses the page itself as instrument of reception -- typography/layout questions carrying a certain amount of weight This does not, it seems, become instrumental in the Andrews texts I've reviewed more recently. The characteristics of Corona are just beyond my reach at present -- I've not looked at it for some years, and shall make further comments tomorrow once having done so -- but when I read anything else by Andrews, that text always whispers to me as though from a separate carriage.

Perhaps others will remark on Corona while I revisit it.

Gale

↑ Index

165. David Baratier
tying up
Thu 15 Aug 1996

If there is anybody on the list Rodrigo's new phone number in San Francisco, please back channel ASAP.

As for my new digs:

David Baratier
934 Ebner St.
Columbus, OH 43206
[redacted]

The journal address will stay the same. Thanks to all who participated in the PBQ film issue and those who ordered books from us. For people who have ordered the grenier title in advance (Herb, CFunk, etc) the printing is finished and we should have it in the mail later this month.

Be well

↑ Index

166. Gabrielle Welford
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1996 to 11 Aug 1996
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Of COURSE!! I should look for him round here. He would have had time to make it this far by now... gab.

On Wed, 14 Aug 1996, Douglis Beck wrote:

> debra sez: "Craven's probably surfin the waves." not sure what that means, but there it is. go figure.

↑ Index

167. Joseph Lease
Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
Thu 15 Aug 1996

On Thu, 15 Aug 1996, Gale Nelson wrote:

> I've looked at works like Corona (1973) and Film Noir (1978) as working with reader/audience in ways significantly different from the work by Andrews that I've seen over the last few years. Film Noir uses the page itself as instrument of reception -- typography/layout questions carrying a certain amount of weight This does not, it seems, become instrumental in the Andrews texts I've reviewed more recently. The characteristics of Corona are just beyond my reach at present -- I've not looked at it for some years, and shall make further comments tomorrow once having done so -- but when I read anything else by Andrews, that text always whispers to me as though from a separate carriage.
>
> Perhaps others will remark on Corona while I revisit it.
>
> Gale

Gale,

--in terms of politics and reception--how would you describe the force or weight of Andrews's syntax--in recent work--

Cheers,
Joseph>

↑ Index

168. Gale Nelson

Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996

Thu 15 Aug 1996

In work from the early-mid period of this decade, I received the work as being driven by a manic "found language" machine, fed by logical sentence structure with unexpected content <I cheese my drawers>, unexpected turns within a larger sentence structure <Most of life is just pre-school anyway; paste like that, money should be detached from ego -- creme, no sugar, no urine, like the junior mints of a previous century; I'm nothing more than a noise gate.> In <I cheese my drawers>, which continues, there's something akin to a confession/ admission, but of what? With <Most of life...>, there's the kind of statement start-point that could be the basis for a best-selling self-help book, but what follows distracts the reader (or at least this reader) from staying with that "thought" -- and becomes centered on "I'm nothing more than a noise gate." So then, intersperse statements of "politics" -- <Woman's place = sexual deviance, doesn't it have pockets?> <in America country means white> -- give the reader the open-door as to read something "ironically," "straight" "meaningfully meaningless" <Stalin's genius consisted of not french-kising: sometimes I want to be in crud.> -- the work in relation to the political pull seems to be "in the mix" -- but how does "narrator" or "voice" play in Andrews? The tone is awash with layers of urbanity, hipness, coyness, reportage, quasi-reportage, etc. So, the poltical statements may resonate when the poem is set down -- or the politics may be in destablizing the very nature of received communication (or at least opening up the potential). The reader, depending upon the degree to which s/he has already come to grips with "received communication structures") will converge upon the text in a hermeneutics of deciphering. And what is deciphered has indicators, surely, witness <Biko/Biko/Biko> as the repeated word possibly out of the mouth of a parrot; it holds a primacy in visual space toward the end of the poem, so a "mouthing" by the parrot seems to suggest the yearning of the reader for a certain justice in South Africa pulls the political into focus once more. Of course, the poem doesn't end there -- too determined for the reader, but it resonates from there. (The poem I'm reacting to is Stalin's Genius, selected as the Hoover anthology was most readily available as "Guide to Bruce Andrews" this summer afternoon).

Now, spacing on the page plays a subtle role here. In Film Noir, for instance, I sense spacing as my primary way into the text at hand.

Cheers, gale

↑ Index

169. Gabrielle Welford
Re: problems with the Azi message
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Sorry, technical problems. Chas said it kept jumping him off e-mail. gab. Objections...?

On Thu, 15 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:

> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
> discussion group writes:
> Did anyone besides Charles have problems with this message coming into > their system? Sorry if it did. gab.
>
> problems as in technical difficulties or problems as in objections?

↑ Index

170. Franklin Bruno
Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Question for gale nelson or others: What do you see as the Andrews' two essentially different approaches? I've always thought of his work as largely having all of its ducks in a row from the start--what am I missing? Whenish do you see the break?

fjb

↑ Index

171. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: problems with the Azi message
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Hey--
That happened to me, too. I thought it was something with my program or my Mac. What's the deal?

On Thu, 15 Aug 1996, Gabrielle Welford wrote:

> Sorry, technical problems. Chas said it kept jumping him off e-mail.
> gab. Objections...?
>
> On Thu, 15 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:
>
> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
> discussion group writes:
> Did anyone besides Charles have problems with this message coming into > their system? Sorry if it did. gab.

>
> problems as in technical difficulties or problems as in objections?

↑ Index

172. Walter K. Lew
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Dear Janet S. Gray,
  The following most quickly come to mind as being fresh and accessible without being simplistic:

Early 20th-century, Lower Eastside, NYC/Brownsville, Brooklyn Jewish childhood: Charles Reznikoff, Part III ("Early History of a Writer") of "By the Well of Living and Seeing", available in _Poems1918-1975: The Complete Poems of Charles Reznikoff_, Seamus Cooney, ed. (Black Sparrow 1989), pp. 137-78.

Bi-racial and sexuality issues from an Asian American feminist perspective, set largely in NY and Hawaii: KIMIKO HAHN, _Earshot_ (Hanging Loose 1992) and _Unbearable Heart (Kaya Production1995), poems abt childhood scattered throughout.

Growing up gay, Filipino, and proto-diva in Hawaii:
R. Zamora Linmark, _Rolling the Rs_ (Kaya 1995)

Chinese American family life and searches to recover a personalized Chinese American West Coast history: Alan Chong Lau, _Songs for Jadina_ (Greenfield Review Press 1980, out of print)

Childhood years in a Japanese American concentration camp during World War 2: Lawson Fusao Inada, _Legends from Camp_ (Coffee House 1993). (A wonderful reader for student audiences by the way; teaches at Southern Oregon State in Ashlans.)

From _Premonitions_ (WKL888, ed. [20% discounted copies can be ordered directly from me]):
Growing up in 1960s NY Chinatown:
FRANCES CHUNG, first eight of the nine poems, pp. 50-57.
Lesbian schooldays:
ANN KONG, "Ponies and Spanish Guitars", pp. 152-54.
Childhood in Vietnam during the war and moving to the U.S. as an adoptee:
CHRISTIAN LANGWORTHY, five poems, pp. 206-220.

Sexual tensions and violence in multi-racial Hawaiian high school settings: LOIS-ANN YAMANAKA, four poems, pp. 412-423.

Warning: Although the huge _New Worlds of Literature: Writings from America's Many Cultures_ (Norton 1989, 1994) includes several genres of prose and poetry and is pedagogically tempting to some for its breadth of ethnic constituencies, Norton anthology-style questions, and teacher's guide, I find most of the work plain boring-a prime example of homogenized, reduced, non-specific, linguistically unadventurous textbook multiculturalism. (The second edition is, however, better than the first.) Some of the work is good or useful (including maybe my own poem!), but you have to wade through so much to find it.

Hope this is of use.

Walter K. Lew
Until August 30:
8 Old Colony Rd.
Old Saybrook, CT 06475
[redacted] (ph/fax)

↑ Index

173. Emily Lloyd Incident...
Thu 15 Aug 1996

---

yep, that's the name of Cullen's poem. It wasn't the fabulous ani difranco, tho, but Disappear Fear who incorporated Cullen's poem into the lyrics of their song "Who's So Scared," adding a second verse of their own about growing up queer...em

Julie Marie Schmid wrote:
>
> Hey Maria et al,
>
> I believe the Cullen poem is called "Incident." Somone (I can't remember > the artist's name) covered it on an album recently. I brought that in to > play for my class the day we discussed the poem, and it was a great way > to get the students into it. It may have been Ani DiFranco--does anyone > know if that's right?

↑ Index

174. Emily Lloyd
Re: Incident
Thu 15 Aug 1996

---

yep, that's the name of Cullen's poem. It wasn't the fabulous ani difranco, tho, but Disappear Fear who incorporated Cullen's poem into the lyrics of their song "Who's So Scared" (on self-titled album), adding a second verse of their own about growing up queer...an experience which, to hark back to the Plath thread, they briefly compare to the Shoah...em

Julie Marie Schmid wrote:
>
> Hey Maria et al,
>
> I believe the Cullen poem is called "Incident." Somone (I can't remember > the artist's name) covered it on an album recently. I brought that in to > play for my class the day we discussed the poem, and it was a great way > to get the students into it. It may have been Ani DiFranco--does anyone > know if that's right?

↑ Index

175. Kathrine Varnes
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

---

here's another:

Wanda Coleman -- "Poetry Lesson Number One" in _Heavy Daughter Blues_ (Black Sparrow, 91?)

Kathrine Varnes

↑ Index

176. DS
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

You could try and get hold of one of Roma Potiki's books. (New Zealand Maori poet) She is 'accessible', and also at times pretty bloody thought provoking and good. Also for accessibility, Dancing on the Rim of the Earth. 'An Anthology of Contemporary Northwest Native American Writing.' ed Andrea Lerner. (Arizona Press) is pretty didactic at times, but also has some good stuff. (Can pm me if you want more info about Roma Potiki)

Regards,

Dan

> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> For a friend who is looking for 'accessible' poems to spice up a mostly prose syllabus on growing up marginalized: any suggestions of poems about growing up gay/lesbian, growing up chicano/a, jewish, puertoriqueno/a, black, native american, asian american, disabled, ... ?
>
> Janet
> [redacted]

↑ Index

177. DS

Re: info on azi (fwd)

Thu 15 Aug 1996

Meanwhile New Zealand happily plays rugby against an Afrikaaner convicted of beating a black farm boy to death.

Its not just horrendous it's fucking sick.

At 06:20 PM 8/14/96 -1000, you wrote:
>I got information before I forwarded this because it seemed so extreme and >horrendous. gab.
>
>---------- Forwarded message ----------
>Date: Wed, 14 Aug 1996 13:19:29 -1000
>From: [redacted]
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: info on azi
>
>Gabrielle,
>We received your request. Please excuse the dealay in getting back to you.
> We've been running day and night on this case.
>
>Enclosed please find A)an article that recently ran in the Jackson Advocate > B) an excerpt from the pre-trial hearing and C) an articel that ran in the >Clarion-Ledger last April.
>
>I hope these will give you a satisfactory range of perspectives and >information.

>
>If I can be of further service, please don't hesitate to call on me.
>
>
>In Solidarity,
>
>Ben Jealous
>NCADP Program Coordinator
>_____
>South African Child Facing Legal Lynching, Civil Rights Activists Protest
>
>
> "Under Apartheid, under the state of emergency, Black children were tried as >adults," observed Elaine Salo, a South African doctoral candidate studying in >Atlanta. "This case is very reminiscent of that situation. He may not be >accused of a political crime, but they are not taking his age into >consideration. This is really a child we are talking about."
> After surviving some of Apartheid's most turbulent years, Azikiwe Kambule a >10th grade South African child is facing the death penalty in Mississippi >for a crime in which many say he was little more than a bystander.
> Despite having no criminal record, no history of violence, providing his >full cooperation to the authorities, and not being present when the killing >took place Azi has been charged as an accomplice to capital murder.
> Mississippi is seeking the death penalty against Azi-- a child who isn't >even old enough to buy a beer, let alone sit on a jury.
> Two local prosecutors, Hinds County District Attorney Ed Peters and Madison >County D.A. James Kitchens, have already acted to seal Azi's fate.
> In April, Peters was quoted in the Clarion-Ledger, a local daily newspaper, >as saying that because the "jurors in [predominantly black] Hinds County have >a reputation for refusing to vote for the death penalty," he and Kitchens >moved Azi's trial to Madison County where the outcome would be more certain, >if not predictable.
> The setting for John Grisham's A Time To Kill, Madison's racial environment >is notorious. "That jury's gonna lynch 'em," says Charles Tisdale, publisher >of The Jackson Advocate. "It's just that simple."

> With one of the largest white populations in Mississippi, Madison has become >a virtual haven for the state's less tolerant elites.
> "That county is home to this country's richest and poorest people," says >Tisdale. "The white folks ran there to avoid desegregation, and the black >folks who've stayed have never received the benefit of their own civil >rights."
> Like his fictitious counterpart in Grisham's's novel, county officials say, >the current Madison County D.A. is hoping this high profile death penalty >case will advance his career.
> "Word is he's planning on running for Judge soon," said a county attorney >who asked his name not be printed.
> Azi's friends and supporters say they are concerned that the part-time >public defender who's defending him won't be up to the challenge.
> "Those attorneys are contracted-- they aren't paid anything extra to handle >capital trials," says Sheila O'Flaherty who was with the Mississippi Capital >Defense Resource Center until congressional Republicans eliminated its >funding earlier this year. The office had been charged with making sure that >cases like Azi's didn't fall through the cracks.
> According to Steve Hawkins, executive director of the National Coalition to >Abolish the Death Penalty, court-appointed attorneys in southern states often >receive the equivalent of 4 or 5 dollars per hour to handle death penalty >trials.
> "Look at the facts," says Reverend Robert Abrams, a United Methodist pastor >from Gulfport, Mississippi, "and you will see this boy is more of a victim >than anything else."
> Azikiwe Kambule came to the United States two years ago with his mother >who had received a fellowship to finish her college education in America.
> "He was very excited," remembers his mother, Busisiwe Chabeli. "He had >always heard us talk about America and he wanted the chance to see for >himself."
> As a student at Chastain Middle School in Jackson, Azi had no trouble >adjusting academically; he received excellent grades, was placed in honors >classes and joined the school choir. Yet, Azi found himself under immense >social pressure -- he didn't look, speak or dress like other children in his >neighborhood.

> Azi wanted to "fit in" with his peers, and not be the subject of their >ridicule. He met and started spending time with youth who were older and >very street-wise.
> While attending Jackson's Murrah High School, Azi's grades began to fall;
>his parents worried that his new friends were the wrong crowd. Fearing the >worst, they decided to scrape together the funds to send Azi to a boarding >school. Tragically, it was already too late.
> Last January, a week before he was to leave for the Piney Woods School, Azi >found himself in the middle of a car-jacking in which a young African >American woman was kidnapped and ultimately killed.
> According to police testimony during a pre-trial hearing, Azi himself was so >far away from the crime scene that he did not hear the gunshots. When >arrested, he was the only one to cooperate with the police. He fully >explained the terrible series of events that ended with the death of Pamela >McGill-- a young African American woman who was popular in the local >community. After his arrest, Azi tried repeatedly to help the authorities in >their investigation.
> Civil rights activists say they fear that outrage about McGill's murder has >inhibited many people's ability to see the injustice being perpetrated by >local prosecutors.
> "While the tragedy of Ms. McGill's death is an emotional fire burning out of >control in our community, we must look at the larger political dynamic of the >prosecutors' decision to move this trial to Madison County to ensure these >two young people get the death penalty," commented L.C. Dorsey, assistant >professor of social work at Jackson State University and former executive >director of the Mississippi Prison Defense Committee.
> "It seems that their guilt has been decided even before the trial has >begun."
>Scheduled to commence August 19, Azi's case is already beginning to attract >national and international attention.
> "The situation in which Azi finds himself speaks volumes about the use of >the death penalty against children," Hawkins says.
> "During this decade, only five nations in the world are known to have >executed persons for crimes they committed before their eighteenth birthday.

> Those countries are Iran, Pakistan, Yemen, Saudi Arabia . . . and the >United States. And America has executed more than the other four combined."
> According to the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty, a >condemned child in the United States also tends to be of darker hue -- 66% of >those persons sentenced to death as children have been from racial >minorities.
> "Nowhere is the international rule of law more clear than the prohibition on >the use of the death penalty against children. The International Covenant on >Civil and Political Rights, which the United States has ratified, clearly >states that the 'sentence of death shall not be imposed for crimes committed >by persons below the age of eighteen'," Hawkins explains. "Indeed, every > major human rights treaty in the world has the same express wording." > Rev. Abrams says he is concerned that Americans have become so fearful and >angry about violence in their communities that they're no longer >contemplating the consequences of their responses to crime.
> "There is a feeding frenzy going on in America right now" he says. "And we >are feeding on our youth."
>--_____
>[NOTE: This is only an excerpt from the complete transcript. The >information cited below can be found on pages 1 and 3-14 of the official >transcript, which is available from the Madison County Circuit Court Clerk's >Office]
>
>IN THE COUNTY COURT OF THE FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT
>OF HINDS COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI
>
>STATE OF MISSISSIPPI PLAINTIFF
>VERSUS NOS. 96-228 & 96-229
>RUDY RHODES AND >SANTONIO BERRY
DEFENDANTS
>
>* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
>TRANSCRIPT OF THE PROCEEDINGS HAD AND DONE IN THE PRELIMINARY HEARING OF THE >ABOVE-STYLED AND NUMBERED CAUSES BEFORE THE HONORABLE

WILLIAM R. BARNETT,
>HINDS COUNTY JUDGE, ON THE 22ND DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1996.
>* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
>
>DIRECT EXAMINATION BY MR. LEMON:
> Q. Would you state your name, please.
> A. James French.
> Q. Where are you employed?
> A. City of Jackson Police Department, Violent Crimes Task Force.
> Q. How long have you been employed there?
> A. I've been employed with the police department a little over 18 years.
> Q. Have you had reason to investigate a crime involving a Rudy Rhodes and
>Santonio Berry?
> A. Yes, sir, I have.
> Q. Did you also investigate a crime involving an Azikiwe Kambule?
> A. Yes, sir, I did.
> Q. And they are all related in the same crime?
> A. Yes, sir.
> Q. Do you understand that because Mr. Kambule's attorney is not able to be >here today because of a conflict we're only going to proceed on Mr. Rhodes >and Mr. Berry?
> A. Yes, sir.
> Q. Okay. What crime had you investigated the defendant Rhodes and defendant
>Berry for?
> A. The initial crime was simply a missing person. They were--they have been >arrested and charged. Mr Berry has been charged with armed robbery and >kidnapping, Mr. Rhodes has been charged with accessory to armed robbery and >accessory to kidnapping.
> Q. And where did this crime take place or begin?
> A. 1523 County Line Road, Somerset Apartments.
> Q. Is that in the First Judicial District of Hinds County?
> A. Yes, sir.
> Q. Could you please tell the Court the involvement in the crimes as to Rudy
>Rhodes and Santonio Berry; and when necessary please speak to defendant >Azikiwe Kambule, also.

> A. Yes, sir. Initially Pamela McGill was reported missing on the 25th of >September [sic]. We obtained a bank photo from the Trustmark Bank at County >Line Road, an ATM machine, showing Ms. McGill--the last know time that we >know that she was alive at 5:55 P.M. on that date. As she drives through >the--away from the ATM a white Mitsubishi driven by Mr. Berry, a clear facial >shot of him, pulls through the ATM. From that point on Ms. McGill has never >been seen. She had a meeting set up for 6:20--6:15 that day. The person that >was supposed to meet her did not arrive at her apartment until 6:20. Ms >McGill was not there at that time. She's never been seen from again. The--Ms.
>McGill at the time she went through the bank was driving her 1993 red Dodge >Stealth. She withdrew $50.00 in cash from the bank, and there was a debit >against her account for $51.00, the extra one dollar against the account. We >began looking for the vehicle. We received information that an individual >from Laurel and two from Jackson were trying to sell the vehicle in Laurel on >a street called Lucas Street. We contacted Laurel P.D. Laurel P.D. began >looking for the vehicle. They found the vehicle parked on a parking lot at >Howard Industries in Laurel. This was on the 5th of February around 5:00 P.M.
>The vehicle was processed for evidence by the Mississippi State Crime Lab.
>Items missing from the vehicle were the car radio, a set of floor mats, and a >cellular telephone--Dodge Stealth floor mats. Also found in the car was a >spent hull from a Makarov pistol, a 9 by 18 Makarov style--Makarov style >pistol. They recovered other pieces of evidence. February the 6th a Mr.
>Preston Ramsey contacted us and advised that he had received information that >Rudy Rhodes and two individuals from Jackson had taken the red Dodge Stealth >to an Oscar George in Laurel. Detective Windham with the Laurel P.D. was >contacted and asked to locate Oscar George. In the meantime, members of the >task force went to Laurel. On the 6th special agent--FBI agent Artis and >detective--and myself interviewed Oscar George. Oscar George stated that Rudy >Rhodes and two individuals that he thought to be from Jackson had tried to >sell him this red Dodge Stealth for a thousand dollars. On the 6th members of >the Violent Crimes Task Force and the Fugitive Task Force arrested Rudy >Rhodes. At 8:30 P.M. Rudy Rhodes signed a rights waiver form. This was >witnessed by FBI agent Hal Neilson, Mississippi Highway Patrol investigator >Tommy Squires, and myself. Rudy Rhodes then gave a written statement as to >this incident.
> Q. Without getting into the--exactly what was said in the statement, could >you please tell the Court the effect of that statement?

> A. The statement indicates that Azikiwe Kambule and Berry showed up at >Rhodes' apartment. They were driving a red Dodge Stealth. Rhodes indicated >that as soon as he saw it he knew that it was probably a stolen vehicle. They >wanted to go to Laurel. He had already planned to go to Laurel, so he allowed >them to follow. Rhodes and his girlfriend, Pammy Porter, rode in Rhodes' red >Dodge--in a red Plymouth Laser; and the red Dodge Stealth driven by Berry and >a passenger, Kambule, followed. Pammy Porter spent the night at her mother's >house. Berry, Kambule, and Rhodes spent the night, the night that Ms. McGill >first--missed her first appointment. The next day, Friday, Rhodes stated that >he took Kambule and Berry to Oscar George's business which is a repair shop, >auto repair shop; and they did in fact try to sell the car for a thousand >dollars. Santonio Berry removed the radio from the vehicle and placed it in >the trunk of the red Plymouth Laser that's jointly owned by Rudy Rhodes and a >Stacy Roy. While in Laurel, Santonio Berry and Azikiwe Kambule told Rhodes >that they had followed a woman driving from a bank to some apartment. They >made the woman move over and drove toward Raymond. They turned off the >highway toward Raymond on a long, dark road, made the woman get out, and >drove off. They did not tell Rhodes, according to his statement, that they >had murdered her. Super Bowl Sunday, which I believe is the 28th--they came >back to Jackson on Saturday. Pammy Porter drove the Plymouth Laser, and the >three individuals were in the car with her. And Super Bowl Sunday Berry went >back to Rhodes and said he wanted to go back to Laurel. Rhodes and Berry went >back to Laurel and moved the vehicle from an individual's house to the >parking lot at Howard Industries where they left it. And that's basically >Rhodes' statement.
> Q. Okay. Did any of the others make any statements?
> A. Yes, sir. Azikiwe Kambule when he was arrested by special agent Neilson, >investigator Squires, and myself made a statement that he and--to the effect >that he and Berry had in fact observed Pam McGill on the parking lot of the >Trustmark Bank at the corner of County Line and Wheatley. They were standing >outside of Berry's car about to use an ATM card themselves. Ms McGill drove >around them, pulled in the machine. Berry made a statement that he wanted >that car. They got back into Berry's car, followed her to the apartments.

>Kambule said that it appeared to him that Ms. McGill was getting out of her >vehicle as if to check the mail, and at which point-- > Q. This is back at her apartment?
> A. At Somerset Apartments. Kambule stated that Berry used his Makarov pistol >to force Ms. Berry [sic] back into the car. He forced here through the >driver's seat into the passenger's seat of this vehicle. Berry got in behind >the driver's seat with the weapon on Ms. McGill. Kambule indicated that he >got into the passengers door and almost had to lie down to get behind the >from seat--behind the seat on the passenger's side. Berry drove. Kambule >again was right behind the seat. Ms. McGill was in the right, front seat.
>They left Berry's Mitsubishi at Somerset Apartments. As they drove, Pam >McGill kept begging for them to just take the car and take her money and let >her go. According to Kambule, they went to a road down toward Raymond. Berry >stopped the car, made the woman get out, and he told Kambule to turn the car >around. Kambule stayed in the car. Berry walked the woman into the woods.
>Kambule tried to turn the car around. He cannot drive a straight shift and >could not get it turned around. Berry returned shortly; and Berry >stated--according the Kambule, Berry said that he had shot--he had made the >girl kneel down and shot her in the back of the head. They then went, >according to Kambule, went to Rhodes' apartment. There they left the Dodge >and had Rudy Rhodes take them back to where they had left the white >Mitsubishi. Berry drove the Mitsubishi to his apartment on Poplar Avenue.
>They then returned to Rudy Rhodes' home and then went to Laurel. Kambule >tried to point out the road that--where the--where Ms. McGill had been >placed, but he was not successful.
> Q. Has anyone else attempted to assist the police or the authorities in >finding Ms. McGill's body?
> A. In--no, they all--
> Q. Concerning the defendants.
> A. We got statements from Cedric Bernard Jones and from a Brian Cooley. They >were with all three defendants on the Saturday night--excuse me--on the >Friday night following the abduction; and Santonio Berry showed Brian Cooley >the firearm. All three defendants showed these two witnesses the vehicle. At >that time it was--when they saw it, it was parked on the parking lot at Jones >County Junior College. They talked about the incident; and according to >Cooley and Jones, they indicated that they had forced the woman into the car, >taken her to a long, dark road and made her get out. Jones and Cooley >indicated they thought the woman was still alive when she was put out of the >vehicle. Pammy Porter was interviewed by agents Neilson and Detective Rainey, >and she indicated that she had in fact gone to Laurel, that when she >first--on the night of the incident when she returned home, she walked into >her apartment and heard Santonio Berry saying something to the effect "two >shots, pow, pow." She went on into the apartment. They wanted to go to >Laurel. They followed Porter and Rhodes to Laurel, that during the weekend >she did in fact overhear them saying that they had taken the car--taken the >woman, taken the car and put her out on a long, dark road. On the way back >from Laurel that Saturday, Pammy Porter was driving the vehicle with the >other three individuals in it. She was stopped in Mendenhall-on Highway 49 at >Mendenhall and issued a ticket for driving with no tag.

> Q. How did the two defendants that abducted Ms. McGill receive their vehicle >back that they had parked at her apartment complex?
> A. According to Kambule, Rhodes--they went--after they put Ms. McGill out, >they went to Rhodes' apartment. They got into Rhodes' car. Rhodes took them >to Somerset Apartments. Berry got into the Mitsubishi, drove the Mitsubishi >to Poplar Street where he had an apartment, and this is prior to going to >Laurel.
> Q. I'm sorry. Where were the items that were taken from Ms. McGill's car >found?
> A. The radio that was taken from Ms. McGill's car was found in the trunk of >Rudy Rhodes' car. He identified it as being the radio that came out of the >car. The cellular telephone was recovered by Laurel Police Department. An >individual turned it in, and an individual there whose name escapes me now >identified it as being the phone that came out of that car. The floor mats >from the vehicle were found in a mini storage building in Clinton during the >serving of a search warrant. So that' the only three items we've recovered >from the car. The Makarov pistol we believe to have been used in the incident >was found in the possession of Mr. Berry at the time he was arrested by >Clinton Police Department...
>CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. FORTNER:
> Q. Jim, I've just got a few questions. How long after Kambule was arrested >did you arrest Mr. Berry?

> A. Mr. Berry was arrested somewhere in the neighborhood of 5:15, 5:30 in the >morning.
> Q. Did Mr. Berry make any statements to the police?
> A. No, sir.
> Q. None at all?
> A. To my knowledge, no, sir.
> Q. Are you the only person that attempted to ask him any questions, or did >you attempt to ask him any questions?
> A. I was not present during the time he was arrested. I did see him >following his arrest. They brought him up to our office for processing into >the jail. He was advised of his rights, but he didn't want to talk. So to my >knowledge he's not made any statements whatsoever.
> Q. Did Mr. Kambule--is Mr. Kambule the only witness you've spoken to or the >only person you or anybody else has spoken to that says Mr. Berry told him >that he killed the woman?
> A. Yes, sir.
> Q. All of the other people that you've talked to, the people down in Laurel, >the names that you listed, all of those people only say that Kambule and >Berry said that they took her out on a road and put her out. Is that right?
> A. Yes.
> Q. Do we even know for certain what road we're talking about here?
> A. No.
> Q. So do we even know for certain that if this woman was killed it occurred >here in Hinds County?
> A. We know that the crime began in Hinds County.
> Q. But we don't know where it ended. Is that right?
> A. Correct.
> Q. Right now my client is not charged with murder. Is that right?
> A. Correct.
> Q. And is it your intention to try to present a murder charge against him to >the grand jury?
> A. Yes, sir.
> Q. Did Mr. Kambule--what time was it when they went through the ATM?
> A. 5:55.

> Q. And what time was it when they got to Mr. Rhodes' apartment?
> A. There's some discrepancy on that.
> Q. What does Rhodes say?
> A. I think Rhodes and--I believe Rhodes said around 8:00 or 9:00 P.M.
> Q. What about Kambule?
> A. He didn't say.
> Q. And Kambule testified--or in his statement he told you that--he told you >that he did see my client with a gun. Is that right?
> A. Kambule? Yes, sir.
> Q. How long--you said that Kambule said that Mr. Berry left the car with Ms.
>McGill; and he tried to turn the car around, couldn't do so, and Berry >returned shortly.
> A. Yes, sir.
> Q. What is shortly?
> A. I don't know.
> Q. Was he any more specific than that?
> A. No.
> Q. Did Mr. Kambule tell you that while Mr. Berry and Ms.
McGill were outside >of the vehicle that he heard a gunshot?
> A. He specifically said he did not hear a gunshot.
>BY MR. FORTNER: That's all.
>----------
>----------
>MADISON COUNTY WILL TRY SUSPECTS IN MCGILL SLAYING
>
>[Note: This is a copy of an article that ran in Jackson, Mississippi's >Clarion-Ledger Neewspaper on April 5, 1995]
>
> Pamela McGill's suspected killers will be tried in Madison County, officials >said Thursday.
> Investigators said they don't plan to directly file charges related to >McGill's slaying against Santonio Berry, 21, and Azikiwe Kambule, 17, but >will present the case to the grand jury as a capital murder punishable by the >death penalty.
> "I requested the Madison County District Attorney take the case and he's >agreed to do that," said Hinds County District Attorney, Ed Peters.

> "The family, from the beginning, has expressed a desire that the people >charged get the death penalty and the best way is to send it to another >county," Peters said.
> McGill, 31, disappeared Jan. 25. Police say the incident began in Hinds >County, where she was kidnapped, and ended in Madison County, where she was >slain.
> "Both counties would have jurisdiction," Peters said.
> Police say Berry wanted her sports car and he and Kambule kidnapped her from >her Jackson apartment. Kambule told police Berry drove the car to a deserted >road outside Jackson and shot McGill in the head after making her walk into >the woods and kneel.
> Berry, Kambule and Rudy Rhodes, 19, were arrested Feb. 7. Berry and Kambule >were charged with armed robbery and kidnapping, Rhodes was charged as an >accessory.
> Rhodes is accused of arranging to sell McGill's red 1993 Dodge Stealth in >Laurel; investigators say Pammy Porter, 19, Rhodes' fiancee, also knew of the >crime. Porter also is charged as an accessory.
> Madison County Coroner Alex Breeland said an autopsy confirmed McGill was >shot in the back of the head. The body was released to her family Thursday.
> McGill's body was found Thursday in a wooded area near North County Line >Road just inside Madison County after Berry pinpointed the general location >for investigators.
> Two previous searches, based on Kambule's vague description of the site, >failed.
> Hinds County Sheriff Malcolm McMillin said he had no preference which county >will try the case.
> "My position is there's good judges and good juries in Hinds and Madison >counties," he said.
> Peters sees things differently.
> "The jurors in Hinds County have a reputation for refusing to vote for the >death penalty," he said. "Certain judges in Hinds County have gotten so >prejudiced against the prosecution that they won't even allow confessions to >be entered as evidence."

>_____----------
>----------
>END OF TRANSMISSION
>
>

↑ Index

178. DS
Re: growing up poems
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Well then, why not Ginsberg.

At 11:38 AM 8/15/96 -0500, you wrote:
>For Janet Gray:
>
> Two writers who have much material which may be of interest, use >are Joseph Bruchac and Leslie Marmon Silko. Excellent writers both.
>Joseph Bruchac has also written many childrens' books presenting Native >American texts.
>
> Though not poems (more prose poems, really) two excellent >presentations of growing up in a marginalized community are Jack >Kerouac's Visions of Gerard and Doctor Sax. Visions of Gerard especially >has a polyphony of sounds in its movement among Nashua and Lowell >Quebecois and American English.
>
> As my Pepere used to say, thank God for Kerouac--now Americans >know Quebecois can be more than hockey players and lumberjacks.
>
> Lowell now has along with the Quebecois and Greek and Irish >communities Kerouac wrote of a vital and growing Cambodian community.
>
> Comme on dit: Vive les differences!
>
>--dave baptiste chirot
>
>

↑ Index

179. Tony Green
Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Thanks D Chirot for comments on speed! !!! Slow reading has long been a pleasure, like a couple of hours reading a page of prose (I remember doing this kind of reading some years ago for preference and being so delighted with it that I could not bear to read at academic rates of page- per - 45 - seconds for many years).

Regarding slow looking, looking like a painter looks and similar thoughts see James Elkins: The Object Stares Back (Simon & Shuster, NY, March 1996) which a friend put in my hands recently as a loan only. (Forcing fast reading on me, really.) The modes of attention with ears and eyes are various and too little explored I believe.

An hour looking at a Rembrandt portrait (say) is barely a substitute for having the same portrait in your house on your wall for thirty years, some days seeing it fleetingly with little attention, some days absorbed by it for some indefinite time -- the conditions of looking it was made for.

Ill and in bed one black and white ink drawing on the wall opposite was enough to keep me happy for a couple of hours one day this week. I watched the six rough oriental-looking brush marks and four ink splashes shift in their varied and incomplete suggestions of images, more engagingly than rabbit-duck readings of the "same" drawing.

For sheer slowness, Aram Saroyan one-word poems, or Clark Coolidge's two word poems are of that order?

But then in midst of longer texts I recall falling over the two words "monopoly polopony" of Ron Silliman (isn't that in Ketjak?), a hook, I'd say, on which I was hooked for quite a long while.

Memory is fun that way. Like dreams, so hard to get it all down as it presents itself to the wandering "mind" (a retelling as story-teller of the intimate contents, all that soul to soul intention of openness of J Kerouac). It all comes at you to quick and too dense and too elaborate for slow sequential speech. Imagine telling what each image in a quick-cut movie says before the next image hits.

Cough, cough cough, I'm going back to bed.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

180. Gabrielle Welford
Re: problems with the Azi message
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Sorry, I don't know. Unless it's just cos it's so long. I'll write maybe and tel lthem. gab.

On Thu, 15 Aug 1996, Julie Marie Schmid wrote:

> Hey--
> That happened to me, too. I thought it was something with my program or my Mac. What's the deal?
>
> On Thu, 15 Aug 1996, Gabrielle Welford wrote:
>
> Sorry, technical problems. Chas said it kept jumping him off e-mail.
> gab. Objections...?
>
> On Thu, 15 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:
>
> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
> discussion group writes:
> Did anyone besides Charles have problems with this message coming into their system? Sorry if it did. gab.
>
> problems as in technical difficulties or problems as in objections?

↑ Index

181. Tony Green
Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
Thu 15 Aug 1996

sorry a line got omitted by the machine in my last posting, makes not too much difference I guess. except that I mentioned James Elkins' book Simon & Shuster, NY, March 1996 and the details got left out.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

182. Tony Green
Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
Thu 15 Aug 1996

---

and now i find it restored on my screen, spooky

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

183. Gabrielle Welford
Re: info on azi (fwd)
Thu 15 Aug 1996

Yes, fucking sick about describes it. gab.

↑ Index

184. George Bowering
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Thu 15 Aug 1996

> To Charles Bernstein---
>
> Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talking to the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!

I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming, N.Y.

George Bowering.

"Sighing is extra."

--Gertrude Stein

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

185. Rod Smith
Re: Bruce Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
Thu 15 Aug 1996

If early Bruce (Edge, Wobbling, Love Songs, Executive Summary)
"a manic "found language" machine"

later (Give em Enough Rope, I Don't Have Any Paper), as Perelman in Marginalization of Poetry
"a kind of megaphone of the political unconscious."
Question of whether newish long work Lip Service might constitute yet another 'period' in his work.
But oh so much more to it than that.
Lots more on this early & late in forthcoming
Aerial 9: Bruce Andrews. Contributors to include DuPlessis, Quartermain, Perloff, Levy, Friedlander, Rasula, Golding, Lazer, Price, Bellamy, McGann, Lee Ann Brown & Hannah Weiner colab, Mittenthal, many others. Out this fall, you'll be the first to know.

--Rod

↑ Index

186. George Bowering
Re: speed & poetry (fwd)
Thu 15 Aug 1996

> From a relative-deprived Nelson (both my parents were only children),
>
> Gale

If that's all they were, how did they handle bringing up a third child?

George Bowering.

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"Sighing is extra."

--Gertrude Stein

↑ Index

187. Joel Kuszai
fwd this? (fwd)
Fri 16 Aug 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Tue, 13 Aug 1996 12:27:46 -0400 (EDT)
From: Juliana Spahr <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: fwd this?

Joel:

Can you forward this to list? I'm out of my domain.

I have not left poetix list but just increased my email for some reason.

I seem to need 3 poetix lists.

That was sad joke attempt.

Here is my new address since I sent it out and now some of it is false:

Juliana Spahr
182 Elm St
Albany NY 12202

[redacted] (this changed)

I can be reached at some point soon at [redacted].

Right now I can be reached at [redacted] or [redacted].

I welcome anyone passing through Albany to call me up.

↑ Index

188. Gale Nelson

Re: speed & poetry (fwd)

Fri 16 Aug 1996

They were precocious perhaps...
Gale
----------Original message----------
>>From a relative-deprived Nelson (both my parents were only children),
>
>Gale

If that's all they were, how did they handle bringing up a third child?

George Bowering. "Sighing is extra."

2499 West 37th Ave., --Gertrude Stein
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

189. Gale Nelson

Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996

Fri 16 Aug 1996

On the ever-continuing Bruce Andrews thread:

Here's a poor rendition of one page from _Film Noir_, with larger letters being represented by: when just the first letter is larger: _GREAT (G is big) the whole word is larger (than "standard"): _GREAT_ (all letters big)

Again, apologies for the poor representation:

```
          TAUNTS
                ORAL HUSTLE

        CRADLE

                                  _DRUID?

                    HINGES

                    RIDE
                     LAVA
                          _XEROX

        BADGES
             TATTLE SHILL FEEBLE
                          MY PICKININNY

      NATIONAL TOXIC

                              EAR-DRUMS LULL
           TINT ECLAIR

             PRAT
            SPIRE

                    _MUCUS_ _HOLOGRAPH_
                              _INDIGNENT_
            _PURE_
                                  _HAY_
```

 end of page

The sense of words floating -- having negative space to cushion -- will perhaps increase the "slow reading" Tony Green was suggeting happens when he looks at one-word or two-word poems -- & gives the words a level of primacy I find less apparent in the denser text fields I've been more likely to see from Bruce Andrews in more recent years. Better or worse? That is not the point. What the reader is asked to do -- how gaps are formed, seems more pertinent.

Cheers, Gale

↑ Index

190. Gale Nelson
Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
Fri 16 Aug 1996

Bruce Andrews thread ad nauseum?

Corona seems to hold together a more fragile vocal register -- the swaggering, propulsive energy in "stalins genius" (quoted from, in passing, yesterday) is little be found here. There's a hitch in the swing, to use baseball lingo here, where the poem becomes, at many turns, about the _hitch_.

find it never have have it

reads section 17 of this sequence, and the movement between search and possession/and the possibility of possession leads to wonderment in a precisely tentative ground.

To read section 19:

my costumes

is to read a form of self-representation that cannot be pinned down. The "my" is a multivalenced and the "costumes" equally so. These two words, then, could be read as "referential" in a "sincere" sense, "exploratory" of what "sincerity" might represent, or simply a passing reference to any _my_ (not necessarily the "speaker/author/narrator" -- possibly just a passing "Joe"/"Joanne") or to no specific _my_ whatsoever. The "cosume" is equally open -- a reader might think of the writer wrapping himself (in this case a himself) in the costume of poet, of "a creature" (there's lots of "nature" blooming or emerging in other passages), etc.

The driving force for me in the poem, is the energy constructions through the specificity of word selections in a taut field -- so that the page reverberates many pages later (and earlier) as one passes through from one field to the next. Context is -- s p a c e d o u t -- given a very real breathing room. The gaps are laden. In later Andrews, the propulsion factor seems the constructive force -- the gaps are in the inability to process all of the information that comes careening toward the reader. So, yes, I'd say that Andrews' work has changed over the last 20-some years.

Those of you who know Bruce Andrews and have talked with him about his work can nod happily, saying, "Gale Nelson is an eccentric reader." But, alas, this is where I'm at as such reader, eccentric, but interested.

↑ Index

191. Henry Gould
Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
Fri 16 Aug 1996

Just an aside to Gale's meditations on Bruce Andrews: at the Hoboken Russ-American conference, Andrews read right after Jackson Mac Low. The similarities, to my uneducated ear (I'v read very little of either of them) were interesting. In both of them, the long riveted lines of vocabulary, full of venom & glee, like a glossary of the Byzantine empire read aloud by aliens from outer space. Only Mac Low seemd more wry & somber; in Andrews the glee factor was higher. Ecclesiastes & King David, respectively. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

192. filch
A.N. Chicherin
Fri 16 Aug 1996

I wanted to thank all for the info on Tyuonyi, Foss and Taggart.

New question: Has 'Change of All' by Aleksey Nikolaevich Chicherin (1924) ever been translated into english? If so where would I find it?

filch

↑ Index

193. Rod Smith
New Andrews, Auster, Lazer &&& @ Bridge Street
Fri 16 Aug 1996

All those new Northwestern collections, & much else.

1. _Paradise & Method: Poetry & Praxis_ by Bruce Andrews, Northwestern, $16.95. Andrews' essays & interviews over two decades. "A syndicalism of syntax and reference -- and of their intertwining that looks out beyond the self-enclosures of the text toward an implicating of wider social (& bodily) horizons. The vectors outward, an arrow array, love's body, from language's social body."

2. _Why Write?_ by Paul Auster, Burning Deck, $10. Little book of essays including title piece, wonderful reminiscence of Reznikoff, & "Twenty-five Sentences Containing the Words _Charles Bernstein_."

3. _Ports of Entry: William S. Burroghs and the Arts_, Robert A. Sobieszek ed. w/ an afterword by Burroghs, L.A. County Museum of Art/ Thames & Hudson, $24.95. Big art book for the price including Burroghs' recent paintings, older collaborations w/ Gysin & others, Haring, Rauschenberg, & others. Lots o' text too.

4. _Arcade_ by Erica Hunt, woodcuts by Alison Saar, Kelsey St., $15. Another fine Kelsey St. artist/poet production. "The culture beats the brow with equal parts spectacle and punishment, often in the same sitcom (coming to a theater _in you_) . . .

5. _Opposing Poetries Volume One: Issues and Institutions_ by Hank Lazer, Northwestern University Press, $16.95. "A broad awareness of the decentralization of poetry production, as well as an established critique of the limited nature of today's professionalized and institutionalized poetry writing, have had a salutary effect on attempts to describe American poetry." This collection is varied & engaging. Thanks Hank.

6. _Opposing Poetries Volume Two: Readings_ by Hank Lazer, Northwestern, $16.95. Essays on Bernstein, DuPlessis, Silliman, Andrews, Hejinian, Howe, Retallack, Messerli, Sherry, & & &. This collection is varied and engaging. Thanks Hank.

7. _Swoon Rocket_ by Bill Luoma, The Figures, $6. It's "gobi time"!

8. _The Dance of the Intellect: Studies in the Poetry of the Pound Tradition_ by Marjorie Perloff, Northwestern, $16.95. Back in print! Essays on Pound/ Stevens, Pound/Cage, Pound/Joyce, Oppen, Beckett, L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E, etc.

9. _Green and Black: Selected Writings_ by Leslie Scalapino, Talisman House, $10.50. 100 page selected, last 25 pages recent work from "New Time" & the title piece. "Writing in its simplest movements is the light elation. The movements are only in that and induce themselves."

10. whaddya lookin' for?

Poetics folks receive free shipping on orders of more than $20. Free shipping + 10% discount on orders of more than $30. There are two ways to order. 1. E-mail your order to [redacted] with your address & we will bill you with the books. or 2. via credit card-- you may call us at [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] w/ yr add, order, card # & expiraton date, we will send a receipt with the books. We have to charge for shipping out of U.S.

Bridge Street Books, 2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Wahsington, DC 20007.

↑ Index

194. Rachel Loden
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Sat 17 Aug 1996

George Bowering wrote (the bit beginning "I was wondering..."):
>
> >To Charles Bernstein---
> >
> >Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never > >even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, > >forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talking to > >the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!
>
> I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to > me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming,
> N.Y.

Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction manual.

↑ Index

195. Bob Holman
National Poetry Slam
Sat 17 Aug 1996

The National Poetry Slam! unbelievable

Will be held Aug 20-25 in PoLand, OR -- check out amazingly full sked at: http://www.teleport.com/~bigmouth/

Bob Holman will be booksignreading with Marc Smith at Powell's Books on Tues., Aug 20, 7:30.

All five parts of THE UNITED STATES OF POETRY will be screened at McMennimin's Brew Pub Cinema beginning at 9:30 on Tues., Aug 20.

On Wed, Aug 21, apres Slam (11 ish), the rich and dense PRINT (16mm) of USOP Show 5 (Eigner, Creeley, Harryman, Depp, Franti et al) will be screened, again at MacMinnamon's.

27 Slam vennues will be represented...

↑ Index

196. Bob Holman
National Poetry Slam -- AOL CyberSlam
Sat 17 Aug 1996

Celebrating the opening of the National Poetry Slam, USAWeekend will present a CyberSlam ...

Get a jump on the Nationals! Taste the bitter fruit of CyberSlam on :

Monday, Aug. 19, midnight, ET.

Tonguethrust Gladiators (sorry, text only) include: Beth Lisick (independent from Oakland), Mychele (Phoenix) Alexandra Oliver (Vancouver), Beau Sia (NYC), Ngoma (CT), and Jeff Meyers (ringer from PoLand).

Judge from the comfort of yr Barcalonger. I think it's a choice of 3: Thumbs UP, Thums DOWN, All (or No) Thumbs (sideways).

From AOL, Go To Keyword USAWeekend

The Countdown to the Countdown's Being Counted Down!

Babalu Holmanski

↑ Index

197. maria damon
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Sat 17 Aug 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> George Bowering wrote (the bit beginning "I was wondering..."):
> >
> > >To Charles Bernstein---
> > >
> > >Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never > > >even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, > > >forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talk-ing > > to > > >the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!

> >
> > I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to > > me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming,
> > N.Y.
>
> Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in > Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh
> Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the > hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction > manual.

was that Pomo or po-mo?

↑ Index

198. Hank Lazer
Re: George Starbuck
Sat 17 Aug 1996

George Starbuck died Thursday morning at his home in Tuscaloosa at age 65 after a twenty year bout with Parkinson's disease. A fine poet and generous person, George directed the graduate writing programs in creative writing at Iowa (where, ages ago, he hired Kathleen Fraser) and at Boston University. While at SUNY-Buffalo in 1963, he initiated a successful challenge of New York's Feinberg loyalty-oath law. After a semester as writer-in-residence, George decided to live in Tuscaloosa. For the past several years, he has been a kind friend, much valued for his learning, his conversation, and his advocacy of a wide range of poetries.

--Hank Lazer

↑ Index

199. Joe Amato
Re: speed (long)
Sat 17 Aug 1996

---

a little latecoming to this thread, but thought the following pertinent... apologies if this duplicates a prior post...

best//joe

SPEED: AN ELECTRONIC JOURNAL OF TECHNOLOGY, MEDIA AND SOCIETY

---

http://www.arts.ucsb.edu/~speed

***

Bulletin: June, 1996: Please Forward

***

1. SPEED 1.3: AIRPORTS AND MALLS HAS ARRIVED
2. CALL FOR PAPERS: SPECIAL ISSUE ON PAUL VIRILIO
3. CALL FOR PAPERS: FETISHISM: HOW CYBORGS FUCK?
4. ABOUT SPEED/ WHAT, WHO, HOW?

"Postmodern cyber criticism collides with cyber cool in this smart, savvy, and, dare I say, hot looking journal of technology, media, and society. The intention of _SPEED_ "is to contribute toward a democratic discourse of technology and media, one that is always focused upon the material conditions of life that technologies and media constitute and demand, and yet does not lose sight of the power of ideas to change those conditions." That is, wired culture gets self-reflexive, and it's about time."

--from GNN, on-line Whole Internet Catalog

1. SPEED 1.3: AIRPORTS AND MALLS HAS ARRIVED

"The globe shrinks for those who own it; for the displaced or dispossessed, the migrant or refugee, no distance is more awesome than the few feet across borders or frontiers." -- Homi K. Bhabha.

"This version of the SPEED periodical/software concerns the transformation of social space by information technologies, and the value of dystopian mapping practices in accounting for the re- locations of personalized politics that those transformations demand....

"A sheer centralization of aesthetics signals an empowered domain of inhabited information. Perhaps no social space serves to exemplify this development more so than the airport. It stands for the globalization of participant space under the sign of hegemonic capital circulation, and of the standardization of capital and circulation under the sign of information. The mechanical and totemic work that it does in such service wishes to succeed at, and complete, a utopian theater. But something is still messy. For Us, the story that it, as a place, tells about itself and asks us to play a part in, suffers a vanity of false resolution and improper closure. Its utopian infantilization of our bodies which it mediates does not finally succeed in convincing us that the global system of temporized space it links is quite truly so seamless and resolved. For most, this was never even a question. For all, this is part of the rude claim made by the infomatic revolution in the built environment....."

-- from "SUR-Urbia: An Introduction to Airports and Malls."

VERSION 1.3 "AIRPORTS AND MALLS" INCLUDES:

BENJAMIN BRATTON (U.C. SANTA BARBARA)
"SUR-Urbia: AN INTRODUCTION TO AIRPORTS AND MALLS"

JOHN THACKARA (NETHERLANDS DESIGN INSTITUTE)
"LOST IN SPACE - A TRAVELER'S TALE"

BOBBY RABYD (BROWN UNIVERSITY)
"AIRPORT NOVEL"

JUSTIN STINCHCOMBE (U.C. SANTA BARBARA)

"FLY AWAY LITTLE BIRDIE"

JEFF GATES (EYE to I)
"IN OUR PATH: ESSAYS"

JASON BROWN (U.C. SANTA BARBARA) AND GABRIEL WATSON (ECHO IMAGES)"PROSTHESIS"

MARK BURCH (UNIVERSITY OF HAWAII)
"PLATEAUS OF CONSUMPTION: THE BIOSEMIOTICS OF CONSUMER FASCISM"

CARINA YERVASI (UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN)
"PRE/SUB/URBAN SPRAWL: NINETEENTH-CENTURY PARISIAN PASSAGE AS URBAN MALL"

JENNIFER SMITH (McMASTER UNIVERSITY)
"THE MALL IN MOTION: A NARRATIVE STROLL THROUGH THE OBSTACLE COURSE"

"THE FLESH MADE IMAGE, LONG LIVE THE NEW IMAGE" A CONVERSATION WITH JEFF HARRINGTON OF iDEAL oRDER/PSYCHIC TV

"BIOSPHERE 3: AUDIENCE WITH/OF THE MALL OF AMERICA"
A CONVERSATION WITH HERB SIMON OF SIMON AND ASSOCIATES

WITH ARTWORKS BY:

JEFF GATES (EYE to I)
"IN OUR PATH"

ROBERT NIDEFFER (U.C. SANTA BARBARA)
"TERMINAL CIRCLES"

JASON BROWN (U.C. SANTA BARBARA)
"MOVING PICTURES"

MICHELLE WAKIN (U.C. SANTA BARBARA)
"FOR YOUR SAFETY"

---

2. SPEED 1.4: SPECIAL ISSUE: ON PAUL VIRILIO

We are currently reviewing abstracts and proposals for articles for a future transmission of _SPEED_ (WWW-specific projects encouraged) on the critical significance of the work of Paul Virilio. In extremely diverse arenas Virilio's cybernetic systems theory of the social has arranged the horizons of wildly unlikely moments of questioning. As his vision of interpretation/accusation crosses the spectrum of disciplinary knowledges (while being at "home" in none), we now hear literary critics speaking of the military origins of the city-state, newscasters phrasing a "Nintendo War," historians of science commenting on the phenomenology of electronic banking, architectural theorists conceiving "the velocity" of airport space, and computer industry professionals discussing the political history of the film projector. Certainly these peculiar arrangements are not to be entirely credited to (blamed on?) Virilio, but they do suggest that his vocabulary is significant beyond the relatively narrow concerns of a "Virilio Studies." We hope, therefore, to both interrogate and expand what it is possible to make "Virilio" say.

---

3. SPEED 1.5: FETISHISM: HOW CYBORGS FUCK?

"Object Relations" becomes a difficult strategy for love in a virtualizing world. Difficult, but still preferred. "Fetishism: How Cyborgs Fuck?" will cut between the technologies of fetishism and the fetishisms of technology -- from the techno-eroticism of B/D and S/M to the B/D and S/M of postmodern advertising. Future Sex? Yes, thank you. As long as we can keep our black patent-leather Newton PDA's! "That's a big hard drive you've got there, General!" The issue is desire, or rather desire transformed into technology's modes of enframing and poesis. The moments that these actions are made for "devices" ("ooh, it's so smooth") and not "technologies" ("we've got 98% efficiency, sir") become even more to the point. This issue will include projects relating to, but not exclusive to, Cyborg Studies, techno-psychoanalysis, transfeminism, S&M Studies, CyberSex, the cinematics of just-in-time alienation, and all other general economies of dissemination. WWW-based proposals are particularly encouraged.

---

4. ABOUT SPEED

SPEED provides a forum for the critical investigation of technology, media and society. Our intention is to contribute toward a democratic discourse of technology and media, one that is always focused upon the material conditions of life that technologies and media constitute and demand, and yet does not lose sight of the power of ideas to change those conditions. We feel that as media of various kinds become more ubiquitous, what it means to live with and talk about a "medium" changes and expands, and so do the critical vocabularies of interpreting what those transformations indicate. Our primary goal in that effort is to foster a cross- fertilization of ideas between communities of people in the "academy" and "industry" too often separated, not by interest or common concern, but by artificially imposed disciplinary and organizational boundaries. We think that _SPEED_ is a promising step toward making these institutional boundaries more permeable, and a critical politics of "mediated sociality" more powerful.

EDITORIAL BOARD FOR SPEED 1.3

Benjamin Bratton
Laura Grindstaff
Robert Nideffer

TECHNICAL IMPLEMENTATION

Interface Design:

Jason Brown
Robert Nideffer

Links and Links Text:

Benjamin Bratton

.GIF and .JPEG:

Jason Brown
Robert Nideffer
Adam Zaretsky

MIDI:

Ken Fields

.AIFF and .AU:

Ken Fields
Nathan Freitas
Robert Nideffer

JAVA and VRML Scripting:

Nathan Freitas

Terminal Modeling:

Rand Eppich

 TO SUBSCRIBE TO _SPEED_, send e-mail to [redacted] with "subscribe" in the subject header. In addition to receiving all future issues, you will be kept up to date on developments regarding the journal.

----------==========----------

HOW TO CONTACT _SPEED_

e-mail:

Please send all submissions, criticisms, praise, suggestions, or anything else you have on your mind to: [redacted].

snail-mail:

If for whatever reason you need to communicate with us via the U.S. Postal Service, please send your correspondence to:

SPEED
c/o Robert Nideffer
Department of Art Studio
University of California, Santa Barbara
Santa Barbara, CA. 93106

----------==========----------

ISSN 1078-196X

Benjamin Bratton
Department of Sociology
University of California, Santa Barbara
[redacted]

SPEED: An Electronic Journal of Technology, Media and Society
http://www.arts.ucsb.edu/~speed
[redacted]

↑ Index

200. maria damon
Re: George Starbuck
Sat 17 Aug 1996

---

thanks for the news hank. 65 is much younger than i would have placed him...
md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> George Starbuck died Thursday morning at his home in Tuscaloosa at > age 65 after a twenty year bout with Parkinson's disease. A fine > poet and generous person, George directed the graduate writing > programs in creative writing at Iowa (where, ages ago, he hired > Kathleen Fraser) and at Boston University. While at SUNY-Buffalo in > 1963, he initiated a successful challenge of New York's Feinberg > loyalty-oath law. After a semester as writer-in-residence, George > decided to live in Tuscaloosa. For the past several years, he has > been a kind friend, much valued for his learning, his conversation, > and his advocacy of a wide range of poetries.
>
> --Hank Lazer

↑ Index

201. Douglis Beck
textual graphicalities
Sat 17 Aug 1996

---

as to problems with the azi text, & yes I'm with ya there; technical difficulties yes, but an interesting (though quite unreadable) graphic/text of sorts. look for it as a cover to something or other coming soon from StL,MO. get back to ya on that one.

↑ Index

202. Douglis Beck
poetry & speed; poetry on speed; & a 180 turn around for love
Sat 17 Aug 1996

I don't think anyone has mentioned Alice Notley's texts with regards to poetry/speed/slowness. "it seems that" "their composition" "as compilations of" "quotes" "from various" "though unknown" "sources are both" "interesting & resistent" "to speed" "reading" -& writing, I might add. typing all those quote marks takes TIME. reading them does as well, which is my point.

poetry ON speed seems more fun. now, I'm not necessarily talking about narcotics, certainly a possibility (& reality I'm sure), but other options could be writing while driving, writing really fast, writing while driving really fast, or reading/performing really fast. these would not be cultural products of our hyper-whatever (hypertext?-writing that can be transmitted very fast) society that demands instant access &c, but conscious decisions of an inherent speed of some things, while there is a slowness to others. to make the anology with colors: I can't imagine a slow red or yellow, nor a fast brown. interestingly blue seems to swing both ways. (cf: bill gass "on being blue") as for the other: stand up & turn around. thanks deb.

see ya.

↑ Index

203. Joseph Zitt
Re: National Poetry Slam
Sat 17 Aug 1996

On 17 Aug 96 at 19:17, David Benedetti wrote:

> I realize this is probably an old issue, but having tried to go to a few "poetry slams", I find it is like watching wrestling on TV, and has very little to do with poetry and a lot to do with the lowest common denominator of audience entertainment/jacking off. Does anyone else feel this competitive/entertainment trend in poetry readings (in an effort toward popularity) is the wrong direction to move in...?

I'm growing to enjoy the slams more and more as time goes on. I started out opposed to them, but have sort of come around. Last night, my ensemble performed as the feature at the Dallas slam, and I was one of the judges.

The poetry has a wider range than I might expect -- there's seeming to be less in-your-face assault of late and more personal material. As necessitated by the rules, the best of the performances are very focused, some toward audience assault, and some much quieter material. In fact, the older-style assault poetry is getting lower scores of late, and everyone seems to be getting tired of the endless array of Maggie Estep clones. This is leading to a wider range.

For a while, I hosted a quite popular poetry event that was pretty much the anthithesis of the slams, and got much of its attendance from people who, having started at the slams, were interested in moving into other areas. (That it fell apart was due not to the material, but to personality conflicts among the hosts.)

I think its very good that some poetry is moving toward audience entertainment. Fortunately, it's not the only direction that it's leading, and it's opening doors to other possibilities. Our ensemble's work is perhaps closest to the work of the Four Horsemen than to anything else we've run across, and probably would not win a slam, but much of our audience has come from the people who were first turned on to verbal performance by attending slams.

There's nothing at all wrong with being popular or entertaining. And, at least around here, it's doing more to help encourage other poetries than it is hindering them. ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

204. Joseph Zitt
Re: National Poetry Slam - David Benedetti
Sat 17 Aug 1996

On 17 Aug 96 at 19:26, filch wrote:

> There's actually a guy in Austin named Whammo who approaches his readings like they were a wrestling match and he even looks like a wrestler and some of his poems are some of the most interesting political word play skewers I have ever heard.

Yeah! Wammo's dynamite (though he's looking much less like a wrestler nowadays); he won a slam here in Dallas last week, and is heading off to Portland with the Austin team. I've worked with him some, and he's very clear about what he's doing and how he's doing it. One of the best performers around. (I saw him opening for Lydia Lunch at South By Southwest a few months back. He was captivating (while Lunch was dull enough, going for the easy shots without much performance in it, that we left soon into her set.)) ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

205. JOEL LEWIS
Re: Williams house to be sold
Sat 17 Aug 1996

Does anyone know what is happenong (or has happened) to the art collection the WCW home? There are Hartleys, Demuths, Sheelers, etc. There was apparently a dispute between the two WCW sons as what to do w/ them. Wm. Eric Willaims, who lived there, did not want to sell them, claiming they were part of his house. Brother Paul, thought they should be put on the market. Any fan of

WCW should go to Rutherford at least once (easy from NYC,#190 NJT bus) & just walk around

Joel Lewis

↑ Index

206. Christina Fairbank Chirot slamming, competition, entertainment, politics
Sat 17 Aug 1996

Re: slamming, competition,entertainment,politics

Float like a butterfly,
Sting like a bee
The Greatest slammer
Is Muhammad Ali

↑ Index

207. filch
Re: National Poetry Slam - David Benedetti
Sat 17 Aug 1996

David,

Wow, what a treat to see your name.

A few years ago I saw you in front of E.J.'s and told you that I liked a poem of yours that I had seen in some mag somewhere and you were kind enough to give me a copy of your book "defense mechanism".

That night a friend of mine, whom I had been friends with for years, came over to my place on Silver (or was it Lead?) and we sat around and smoked and drank and read aloud your poems. Actually I read them aloud and he listened. He was someone who had never ever expressed any interest in poetry before the whole time I had known him. He was quite taken by your work, most particularly the poem 'REPRODUCTIVE SUCCESS'. After reading your book he expressed an interest for the first time in reading some of my writing. Something he had never ever done before.

So I wanted to express my gratitude once again for your kindness.

As for slams I think it is important to realize that while there is a certain amount of truth to what you say it is not the whole truth. I have on a few occasions been to slams where the winner is none other than the best writer there. The vast majority of the time the winner is the best performer and sometimes the winner is someone who is equally good at both writing and performing but sometimes, rarely, the writer wins out.

Rather than say the "wrong direction to move in" maybe it would be more appropriate to say it is "another direction to move in".

Mayakovsky, while a still great writer, made his name when he started because he was handsome and dashing and one hell of a performer, not to mention a shrewd politician (which in my experience has a whole hell of alot more to do with winning modern day slams than either writing skill or performing ability). And while some of the dadaists did some great things outside of performance value it nevertheless played a vital role in their work as well as in the "Theatre of Cruelty". Also I believe Joy in your department has expressed, in David's book last year, the sentiment that her work with "Poetic Justice" is another form of her poetry, albeit with a groove. Perhaps slams are simply another media. I don't know.

And actually in my experience slams and the spoken word movement has not occured because of a desire towards popularity (certainly that plays a role) so much as a desire to read and be heard in spite of being shut out of the "academy" (refer back to politics).

There's actually a guy in Austin named Whammo who approaches his readings like they were a wrestling match and he even looks like a wrestler and some of his poems are some of the most interesting political word play skewers I have ever heard.

filch

> I realize this is probably an old issue, but having tried to go to a few "poetry slams", I find it is like watching wrestling on TV, and has very little to do with poetry and a lot to do with the lowest common denominator of audience entertainment/jacking off. Does anyone else feel this competitive/entertainment trend in poetry readings (in an effort toward popularity) is the wrong direction to move in...?

↑ Index

208. maria damon

Re: National Poetry Slam

Sat 17 Aug 1996

---

benedetti writes:
> I realize this is probably an old issue, but having tried to go to a few
> "poetry slams", I find it is like watching wrestling on TV, and has very > little to do with poetry and a lot to do with the lowest common > denominator of audience entertainment/jacking off. Does anyone else > feel this competitive/entertainment trend in poetry readings (in an > effort toward popularity) is the wrong direction to move in...?

in connection w/ a piece on slams i'm reading an essay by musicologist simon frith called "the good, the bad, and the indifferent: defending popular culture from the populists." i'm struggling w/ the issue of "evaluation." frith argues something that seems obvious once it's said, but still sounds novel when i read it; that everyone is making aesthetic judgments, but the criteria differ from person to person, class to class, venue to venue. he thinks that students and scholars of pop and mass culture who disavow any need for acknowledgeing the aesthetic are being disingenuous. i haven't finished the article yet (diacritics 1991) but it's easy to read and pretty smart. talking to this crowd, it might be old news, since POETIX seems by + large pretty invested in aesthetic judgment, but for me it's useful. so, slams are aesthetic events that involve judgment (that's the whole format --ranking, judging, etc), but the aesthetic criteria might differ overlappingly with/from other poetry contexts.

someone was telling me today about a kaja silverman book he was reading that discussed a fassbinder movie in which a masochist has just had a sex change operation to please his sadist/lover; his lover is humiliating him in front of the mirror, taunting him/her about his/her new face and body and says, "what do you see when you look in the mirror?" the masochist responds, "I see myself loving you." silverman apparently cites this as an example of the egolessness of the masochist who can only see his/her existence in relation to the other (or something like that); to me, it was a moment characterized by its sheer POETICITY.

i know there's a connection between the two preceding paragraphs but i'm too tired to articulately theorize it. something about context, reception, understanding of what "poetry" is, and a corresponding aesthetic judgment. kinda like seeing that 10yrold girl read that poem to her father at his funeral that i wrote about here a few months ago. xo, md

↑ Index

209. { brad brace } fresh theoretical interpretations
Sat 17 Aug 1996

Interactive Technology suddenly begins to require governing bureaucracies to be accountable to more than special-interest lobbies. Other essential cultures will take longer to free themselves from similarily imposed sanctions; keeping the channels of disbelief open will only assist the maturation process. This is even apparent in the academe-art-world where it is no longer possible to retract and posture behind hallowed 'accredited' texts and papers. The usual claims of singular intellectual and historically verifiable dominance in lieu of anything-else, -- which can only be, after-all, facile emotional, untested, unverifiable,... tripe!

The World is now subsuming this haughty one-track regime; all approaches are now equally valid. The bureaucratic 'art-speak' of the old-world still indignantly bristles at the mention of any challenge. A fresh critical language/practise has only begun to break from the ossified jargon of the hierarchical/insipid academy. Already, the patentedly absurd notion of 'art-movements and schools' is being parodied on IRC -- witness, the Fluxus-Channel, in which participants deliver-up the pseudo-intellectual posturings of yester-year, and thereby inadvertently prompt the Fluxus-Artist-Bot to chime-in with its 'personal' anecdotes of that pseudo-period. This mawkish humor is sure to spawn other similarly 'specialized' channels.

Meanwhile, the remaining art-experts continue to parry, thrust and quibble over verifiable historical details and 'textual evidence' that either supports or dismisses their esteemed positions. But, who knows, some of these players may still be real, and thereby motivated to cling to the vestiges of this morbid, cloying ritual. Perhaps this is the sadistic appeal of these 'period-channels'-- that suddenly, the predatory, selfish, stagnant, internal mechanizations of the art-academy are laid-bare -- their crusty orifices now swollened shut...

Which leads me to mention a current project of mine... (I introduce it now in part because of an inherent elegance which exceeds a cohesion of facts;) which is not to imply that art is yet possible-- real practise must still 'span the current cultural spasm.' It's still not clear whether art-presented through the Net escapes this stultifying condition elsewhere-- that is to say, that art-now can be seen, but then-instantly vanishes within the larger culture without reverberation or consequence. Anyway-- I've finally 'realized' some ideas that I initiated ten-years-ago; I've also found a probable-use for digital-art-image filters. The work consists of a set of collected imagery through various quirky industrial machineries which I've 'stylistically-generalized' with Art-Effects Filters. Once on-screen they look especially appealing and uneasily nostalgic from across the room. I think this imagery would be well-suited to body-tattoos (blue-black as in the illustrations). Let me know if you have one done! <<http://www.teleport.com/~bbrace/bbrace.html or /tattoo.html>>

—

p.s.. for those who care: I've recently moved to San Francisco in order to work a stint as the 'Prepress Specialist' for 'Wired Magazine.' They seem to be demanding more of a political voice of late... which is interesting. The disparity in The City itself is depressing but this takes us right back to the beginning of this missive...

--

{ brad brace } <<<< [redacted] >>>> ~finger for pgp

The 12hr-ISBN-JPEG Project ftp.netcom.com/pub/bb/bbrace continuous hypermodern ftp.teleport.com/users/bbrace photo-art ftp.pacifier.com/pub/users/bbrace -- Usenet-news: alt.binaries.pictures.12hr/ a.b.p.fine-art.misc Mailing-list: [redacted] / subscribe 12hr-isbn-jpeg Reverse Solidus: http://www.teleport.com/~bbrace/bbrace.html

...

↑ Index

210. David Benedetti
National Poetry Slam
Sun 18 Aug 1996

I realize this is probably an old issue, but having tried to go to a few "poetry slams", I find it is like watching wrestling on TV, and has very little to do with poetry and a lot to do with the lowest common denominator of audience entertainment/jacking off. Does anyone else feel this competitive/entertainment trend in poetry readings (in an effort toward popularity) is the wrong direction to move in...?

↑ Index

211. Anselm Hollo
George Starbuck
Sun 18 Aug 1996

---

17 Aug 96
To: POETICS list
From: Anselm Hollo

Emerging from my lair here, to salute the memory of George Starbuck, first met in Buffalo thirty years ago, during my first summer there in the company of G.S., Ann London, Robert Creeley, John Logan, John Wieners, Robert Hogg, Basil Bunting, George Bowering, Jack Clarke, Al Glover, Duncan McNaughton...a summer that definitely changed my life, as did George's subsequent invitation to come and teach at the Iowa Writers' Workshop, whose director he then was. Cet ouvroir was a very different place during his tenure than what it had been before, and, I believe, what it has been since. Not only did he invite Kathleen Fraser and her then husband Jack Marshall, he also invited Ted Berrigan, Steve Katz, Seymour Krim, David Ray--all, at that time, regarded as pretty 'cutting edge' makaris, somewhat threatening, even, to the post-Paul Engle neo-Frostian/pseudo-WCWilliamsian 'Iowa' establishment.

George was a wit, an ironic master of traditional Anglo form, and a gentleman of a wide and utterly non-provincial understanding of the art. I believe that he, Ted Berrigan, and your humble servant deserve credit in Poetry Heaven for our work in that place and time (Ted was politicked out of there after only one year, by the above mentioned establishmentarians; I outlasted George by a couple of years, thanks to painter Hans Breder of the art department who fixed me up with an 'interdisciplinary' gig for a couple more years): the roll call of 'our' (and, yes, Kathleen's & Jack's & Seymour's & Steve's) students looks pretty impressive today: Alice Notley, Robert Grenier, Ray DiPalma, Merrill Gilfillan, Michael Lally, Darrell Gray, Barrett Watten, Bob Perelman, Arthur Vogelsang. (None of them, of course, quite as famous in the Old Iowa Lineage as, say, Norman Dubie or Michael Ryan.)

So--Thank You, Captain George.

Anselm Hollo

↑ Index

212. Kevin Killian

SPT Archive

Sun 18 Aug 1996

This is Dodie Bellamy.

As many of you already know, Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center in San Francisco has ceased being a bookstore and has been reborn as a literary resource center. In our office at New College we are creating a non-lending library of small press books, available to everyone. There is a lounge area next door to our office where people can lounge and read books.

Small Press Traffic's interns have been busily unpacking and arranging our archive, and we have room for plenty more books. A few local poets are donating duplicates from their personal libraries to the archive, and some presses are sending review copies to be placed in the archive. We will have some kind of opening celebration late fall/early winter.

Anyway, this is a call for donations to the Small Press Traffic Archive. Small Press publishers/writers, please send us one or two couple copies of your publications for our archives. Archive lisitings will eventually be posted at the SPT page at the Electronic Poetry Center. We will also, beginning with the next issue of our newsletter, list recent acquisitions to the archive.

The next issue of the Small Press Traffic newsletter will be out in a couple of weeks. This issue features reviews of books published by Hard Press, O-Books, and Kelsey St. In future issues our review section will be opened up to everybody. If you have a book you would like considered for review, please send it to me.

Small Press Traffic
at New College 766 Valencia St.
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]

The newsletter will be published at the EPC. But anyone not living in the Bay Area who would like the next three issues mailed to them, please send $10 to the above address for a subscription. The newsletter is available in the Bay Area only to members of Small Press Traffic ($35 minimum/full, $25/student).

Thanks for all the support so many of you have given Small Press Traffic.

Dodie

↑ Index

213. William M. Northcutt
identify the poem--please.
Sun 18 Aug 1996

I can't get these lines out of my head, something like:

My mother said, to admit that your bored means you have no natural resourses; I admit
I have no natural resourses.

I can't remember where I read them. Help?

William Northcutt

Walter Benjamin: "Only a redeemed mankind receives the fullness of its past."

William Northcutt
Anglistik I
Universitaet Bayreuth
95440 Bayreuth
email: [redacted]
Tel: 49 921 980612
Fax: 49 921 553641

↑ Index

214. Susan Schultz
Re: Tinfish Net\work
Sun 18 Aug 1996

Ola, a new chapbook from Joe Balaz, has just been published by Tinfish Net/work. Balaz's poems treat contemporary issues of language, culture, class, as well as the Hawaiian sovereignty movement in Hawai'i. "Ola" means "life" in Hawaiian. Balaz is a frequent contributor to _Tinfish_ and the editor of _Ho'omanoa: An Anthology of Contemporary Hawaiian Literature_, which is unfortunately out of print.

Chapbooks are $4, or $3 with a three issue subscription to the journal ($13).

Until August 21st, you may order copies from me at the above email address. After that date, while I'll check that address from time to time, the safest way to get me will be at [redacted].

Susan M. Schultz
Dept. of English
1733 Donaghho Road
University of Hawai'i-Manoa
Honolulu, HI 96822

↑ Index

215. Andrew D Epstein
Re: identify the poem--please.
Sun 18 Aug 1996

On Sun, 18 Aug 1996, William M. Northcutt wrote:

> I can't get these lines out of my head, something like:
>
> My mother said, to admit that your bored means you have no natural resourses; I admit
> I have no natural resourses.
>
> I can't remember where I read them. Help?
>
> William Northcutt
> ----------
> Walter Benjamin: "Only a redeemed mankind receives the fullness of its past."
> ----------
>
> William Northcutt

> Anglistik I
> Universitaet Bayreuth
> 95440 Bayreuth
> email: [redacted]
> Tel: 49 921 980612
> Fax: 49 921 553641

The lines are from John Berryman's Dream Song 14:

"my mother told me as a boy
(repeatingly) 'Ever to confess you're bored
means you have no

Inner Resources.' I conclude now I have no inner resources, because I am heavy bored."

Andrew Epstein

↑ Index

216. Kevin Killian
SPT Archive, part 2
Sun 18 Aug 1996

This is Dodie again. For the SPT archive we'd also welcome donations of critical books on small press type writers (meaning all of poetry). Thanks.

Went to the new SF Public library this afternoon. What a monster.

↑ Index

217. maria damon
Re: National Poetry Slam
Sun 18 Aug 1996

---

in response to the longish pro-slam post below from jzitt, when a discussion of open mike readings (and by extension slams) came up about a year ago on the list, there was much less acceeptance of "entertainment" forms of poetry than there is this time around. i like this shift, esp when narrated as below, from someone who has given slams a chance and sees their value and also, significantly, points out that they change over time; like any poetry, they're not static. interesting discussion, y'all; thanks! md

In message <[redacted]> writes:
> On 17 Aug 96 at 19:17, David Benedetti wrote:
>
> > I realize this is probably an old issue, but having tried to go to a few
> > "poetry slams", I find it is like watching wrestling on TV, and has very > > little to do with poetry and a lot to do with the lowest common > > denominator of audience entertainment/jacking off. Does anyone else

> > feel this competitive/entertainment trend in poetry readings (in an > > effort toward popularity) is the wrong direction to move in...?
>
> I'm growing to enjoy the slams more and more as time goes on. I > started out opposed to them, but have sort of come around. Last > night, my ensemble performed as the feature at the Dallas slam, and I > was one of the judges.
>
> The poetry has a wider range than I might expect -- there's seeming > to be less in-your-face assault of late and more personal material.
> As necessitated by the rules, the best of the performances are very > focused, some toward audience assault, and some much quieter > material. In fact, the older-style assault poetry is getting lower > scores of late, and everyone seems to be getting tired of the endless > array of Maggie Estep clones. This is leading to a wider range.
>
> For a while, I hosted a quite popular poetry event that was pretty much the > anthithesis of the slams, and got much of its attendance from people > who, having started at the slams, were interested in moving into > other areas. (That it fell apart was due not to the material, but to > personality conflicts among the hosts.)
>
> I think its very good that some poetry is moving toward audience > entertainment. Fortunately, it's not the only direction that it's > leading, and it's opening doors to other possibilities. Our > ensemble's work is perhaps closest to the work of the Four Horsemen > than to anything else we've run across, and probably would not win a > slam, but much of our audience has come from the people who were > first turned on to verbal performance by attending slams.
>
> There's nothing at all wrong with being popular or entertaining. And, > at least around here, it's doing more to help encourage other > poetries than it is hindering them.
> ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1----------
> |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \|||
> ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \||
> |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

218. Joe Amato
Re: National Poetry Slam
Sun 18 Aug 1996

hey maria, hi!... happy to complicate things!... nothing wrong with entertainment, hell no, but--- after sitting through most of the republican convention, and esp. elizabeth dole's generally acclaimed oprah-"performance," i guess what i'd like to ask is how, from a broadly cultural perspective, one might go about aligning questions of public literacy with the recent success of oral performance venues like slams (for that matter, i could ask a similar question having to do with print or electronic poetry publication, or with the production of literature generally---but the answers would no doubt be somewhat different)...

that is, i'm asking (and mebbe i'm just being my contentious self here) how we may gauge art-as-entertainment or art-as-performance not only in terms of aesthetics, albeit this is valuable too, but in terms of its cultural quotient---whether spoken word or workshop or what have you---and wrt the macro-mainstreams of u.s. public life... which latter i understand, anyway, as having gone much further Right politically while, for example, performance venues would seem to have increased in popularity (which is certainly not to suggest a causal relation...)...

i fully accept and appreciate the value of resistance in specific communities, specific poetry publics... on the other hand, i guess i feel as though this resistance has itself been progressively (or regressively) displaced in much of our public domain... which has (only apparently?) defused the political quotient of the literary, regardless how performative... so it may be a matter of asking how something so vital in one context can co-exist with a public (televised) 'arena' that mercilessly utilizes the performative to its own ends...

anyway, this is an all-too-hasty post, but i wonder if there isn't some benefit to speculating less about poetry-as-state-of-the-art and more about poetry-as-state-of-the-union, esp. in an election year?...

best,

joe

↑ Index

219. Ian Wilson
Re: National Poetry Slam
Sun 18 Aug 1996

In a message dated 96-08-17 21:23:27 EDT, David Benedetti writes:

<< I realize this is probably an old issue, but having tried to go to a few "poetry slams", I find it is like watching wrestling on TV, and has very little to do with poetry and a lot to do with the lowest common denominator of audience entertainment/jacking off. Does anyone else feel this competitive/entertainment trend in poetry readings (in an effort toward popularity) is the wrong direction to move in...? >>

Amen.

Ian Wilson
Loyola Marymount University
[redacted]
http://users.aol.com/ibar88/private/ian1.htm

↑ Index

220. maria damon
Re: National Poetry Slam
Sun 18 Aug 1996

---

hiya joe. i do think that there is room for skepticism about the relationship between the rise of the right and valuation of public poetries and other representations of "diversity." i think this is not the fault of the diversifiers (though one could make a case for their complicity, but why bother) but an instance of what walter benjamin speaks of as a proto-fascistic state in which freedom of expression is allowed minus freedom of social and economic opportunies, equal access to justice and resources, etc.--basically, "aestheticizing politics" instead of the converse. with regard to the spectacularization of oratory that mobilizes folks, we have the examples of both hitler and martin luther king jr. who had very diff agendas. and again, i don't think it's the oratory itself that does the political work. md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> hey maria, hi!... happy to complicate things!... nothing wrong with > entertainment, hell no, but---
>
> after sitting through most of the republican convention, and esp. elizabeth > dole's generally acclaimed oprah-"performance," i guess what i'd like to > ask is how, from a broadly cultural perspective, one might go about > aligning questions of public literacy with the recent success of oral > performance venues like slams (for that matter, i could ask a similar > question having to do with print or electronic poetry publication, or with > the production of literature generally---but the answers would no doubt be > somewhat different)...

>
> that is, i'm asking (and mebbe i'm just being my contentious self here) how > we may gauge art-as-entertainment or art-as-performance not only in terms > of aesthetics, albeit this is valuable too, but in terms of its cultural > quotient---whether spoken word or workshop or what have you---and wrt the > macro-mainstreams of u.s. public life... which latter i understand, anyway, > as having gone much further Right politically while, for example, > performance venues would seem to have increased in popularity (which is > certainly not to suggest a causal relation...)...
>
> i fully accept and appreciate the value of resistance in specific > communities, specific poetry publics... on the other hand, i guess i feel > as though this resistance has itself been progressively (or regressively) > displaced in much of our public domain... which has (only apparently?) > defused the political quotient of the literary, regardless how > performative... so it may be a matter of asking how something so vital in > one context can co-exist with a public (televised) 'arena' that mercilessly > utilizes the performative to its own ends...
>
> anyway, this is an all-too-hasty post, but i wonder if there isn't some > benefit to speculating less about poetry-as-state-of-the-art and more about > poetry-as- state-of-the-union, esp. in an election year?...
>
> best,
>
> joe

↑ Index

221. maria damon
Re: National Poetry Slam
Sun 18 Aug 1996

---

ps to last response to joe: just want to clarify that there's room for skepticism yes, but not cuz the slammers etc are dupes or pawns of the right; simply that one could question their political effectiveness. but one could question just about anyone's political effectiveness. xo,md

↑ Index

222. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

slammin' and jammin'

Sun 18 Aug 1996

---

it is hard; i started out wanting to like slams. went to a few determined to enjoy (in one of "you must stop writing in a cave" phases) and expected -- dangerous i know -- to find the latest poetic currents.

blechhhhhhh!!!!!

i will not bore eveyone by relating entire blow-by-blow encounters, but let me say that slams bring to my mind the leather motorcycle-jacketed, snotty, clumping (boots and dragged, slogging stride), large, drunken man who brought a couple of tables full of loud friends. when he stood up to read an abominably rhymed, cliched, 'borrowed' without attribution to the point of plagarism, uh, 'offering' which, as he bragged and as was painfully apparent, was written the night before, literally, on a cocktail napkin in a bar while he was drunk, his friends loudly applauded and whistled. they were silent _during_ the performance. this was more of a courtesy than they offered the rest of the readers. i read a sonnet afterwards and he gave me a dirty look, refused to applaud (though that was much like his response, sans dirty looks, to the rest of the readers). at the end of the evening, he lumbered over to me, tried in a non-endearingly clumsy way to pick me up, then threatened a male, black friend who had accompanied me. my friend and i whiled away a couple of beers later trying to parse whether the threat originated because he was black and i was white, because i read a sonnet that i hadn't had to 'borrow' to write, or because even though the lumberer and his crowd sulked, i still got a reasonable amount of applause...

certainly this was the extreme end of things. but, how to describe this, ALL my slams were full of wierd extremes (there was the fine writer, a woman, white, who read a complex, beautiful poem in a soft voice and got almost no applause in the face of what was probably the most original, strong work of the evening... or the man, in costume, who read badly rhymed poems to animals whilst acting the various animals out (i am NOT making this up -- he paused for 2 minute pantomime sessions. this is responsible for at least six of my gray hairs). now, this was about 8 years ago, and things may (we can only hope) have changed since.... and i WAS at in a phase where everything seemed to end up in a sort of derida-ian carnival.

but, appropos "speed" and slams and performance, i've found the best reading poems are long lists of images done in a slow voice to warm people up, then fairly conversational works. and the more dense the work, the more slowly i need to read it to keep the audience from getting that glazed, suffering look in their eyes. i know i have the same needs as an audience... on the other hand, i'm not near as fond of conversational poems on the page as i am of more dense work. e

↑ Index

223. Schuchat
Re: identify the poem--please.
Sun 18 Aug 1996

lines are from John Berryman, somewhere in the Dream Songs I believe.

On Sun, 18 Aug 1996, William M. Northcutt wrote:

> I can't get these lines out of my head, something like:
>
> My mother said, to admit that your bored means you have no natural resourses; I admit
> I have no natural resourses.
>
> I can't remember where I read them. Help?
>
> William Northcutt
> ----------
> Walter Benjamin: "Only a redeemed mankind receives the fullness of its past."
> ----------
>
> William Northcutt
> Anglistik I
> Universitaet Bayreuth
> 95440 Bayreuth
> email: [redacted]
> Tel: 49 921 980612
> Fax: 49 921 553641

↑ Index

224. maria damon
Re: slammin' and jammin'
Sun 18 Aug 1996

eliza, sounds like u had a horrible slam experience. my sister, who writes very formal light verse, read at a slam; she read her parody of the charge of the light (lite?) brigade, which is about making chocolate chip cookies; i feared the worst, in terms of her reception, but she says she scored pretty high (tho' the poem was longer than 3 minutes) and got nice applause, this was in boston/cambridge (kresge aud i think). this was just a few months ago, so maybe things have changed, or maybe, at an auditorium there's less potential than at a bar for things to get weird...? or maybe she didn't tell me about the drunken louts that insulted her...? md

↑ Index

225. Michael Boughn
the wheelbarrow
Sun 18 Aug 1996

For the third time in as many years, I had a student this summer respond to _Spring and All_ with an off the wall anlysis of the wheelbarrow poem that invoked the Cold War, white armies, red armies, (red wheelbarrow, white chickens--get it?) etc etc. All these students had been taught this analysis in high school. Anybody else out there ever hear this? Or have any idea where it comes from? I suspect an issue of _The Explicator_ must be responsible and I thought perhaps somebody might have encountered it.

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

226. Louis Cabri hole 6
Sun 18 Aug 1996

hole 6 is available & features poetics/reviews:

The Device - Lisa Robertson
Loose Change - Fred Wah
Mob - Abigail Child / Susan Holbrook
Dwell - Jeff Derksen / Clint Burnham
The Boy Poems - Rod Smith / Mike Magoolaghan
Mop Mop Georgette - Denise Riley; In the House of the Shaman - Maggie O'Sullivan / Nathaniel Dorward
"hole 1-4." from Linear A - Johan de Wit Cover art - Germaine Koh

slim & trim. $5. (or $9/2 issues)

New addresses for eds.:
Rob Manery, L03-2556 E. Hastings, Vancouver, BC, V5K 1Z3, Canada.
Louis Cabri, c/o 8127 Cedar Rd., Montgomery County, Philadelphia, PA, 19027, USA.
New emails forthcoming.
Best, Louis

↑ Index

227. Tony Green
Re: POETICS Digest - 13 Aug 1996 to 14 Aug 1996
Sun 18 Aug 1996

Gale, go on being eccentric, please, if you will. What is a centric reader?

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

228. Bob Holman
National Poetry Slam
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Yo Filch et al--

FYI, Mouth Almighty Records is releasing a WAMMO (that's the way he spells it) album in Oct... called "The Fat-Headed Stranger" it mixes blues, grunge, rock and uh spoken word. Even a lil ol Laurie Anderson satire. Backchannel me a snail and I'll ship you off a copy....

Wammo himself finished second in the individuals in last year's Nationals -- Austin looks very tough this year, w/ the WamMan as (self-annointed) Captain.

Maria, I read some of the Frith piece in the Voice where he has (had?) a column. The analogy many Slamsters use is of the editor who divides the poetry mss into Yes No Maybe Never OK Possible-plus vs. the Judges at Slams....

as for e's experiences ("but, how to describe this, ALL my slams were full of wierd extremes) I say amen. This is one reason I go to Slams. To hear new unfettered is another. To be able to say to the poet who has talentbut got a low score that you liked the poem is also part of it. The best poet always loses is the only rule in Slam.

Slams, seems to me, function best as a way in to poetry. You hear some poems you like, some you don't, you agree with judges, or you don't, it seems anyone can do it, maybe you'll try, etc. One of the greatest things about Slam is the work of the poets who've used the form and graduated, like Paul Beatty, Willie Perdomo, Dael Orlandersmith, among others....

Bob H

↑ Index

229. George Bowering
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Mon 19 Aug 1996

> To Charles Bernstein---
>
> Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talking to > the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!
>
> I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming, N.Y.
>
> Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction manual.

Charles, how could you!? You told me she was just an intelligent person you had befriended for her quick mind! I am sending your jewelry back.

George Bowering. "Sighing is extra."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

--Gertrude Stein

↑ Index

230. George Bowering
Re: George Starbuck
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Gad, about 1957 in Oliver, B.C., I was picking up drugstore poetry anthologies, and didnt know any names later than WCWilliams, and there was George Starbuck, so I was reading him before I read any of you people, and I am glad that I did. Odd, eh? If he was really 65 at his death, he was pretty young in 1957!

George Bowering. "Sighing is extra."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

--Gertrude Stein

↑ Index

231. George Bowering
Re: identify the poem--please.
Mon 19 Aug 1996

> I can't get these lines out of my head, something like:
>
> My mother said, to admit that your bored means

[?]

George Bowering.

"Sighing is extra."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

--Gertrude Stein

↑ Index

232. Susan Schultz
Re: new addresses
Mon 19 Aug 1996

This is just to say that my address from September through early December will be 107 14th Street, Upper, Buffalo, NY 14213, and my primary email address, as I said in my latest _Tinfish_ missive, will be [redacted].

I hope to be meeting a lot of list folks in coming months, whether in New Hampshire or elsewhere.

all best,
Susan (Schultz)

↑ Index

233. Rachel Loden

Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...

Mon 19 Aug 1996

George Bowering wrote (the bit beginning "Charles, how could you!?"):
>
> >> >To Charles Bernstein---
> >> >
> >> >Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never > >> >even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, > >> >forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without > >>talking to > >> >the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!
> >>
> >> I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to > >> me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming, > >> N.Y.
> >
> >Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in > >Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh
> >Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the > >hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction > >manual.
>
> Charles, how could you!? You told me she was just an intelligent person you > had befriended for her quick mind! I am sending your jewelry back.
>

Some of us don't need trinkets to express the inexpressible, my dear --what do you call yourself--Georgette? Some of us, on a summer's eve, have the freedom of our own thoughts and need not surrender to idle jealousies. Charles may do what he wishes with his heart; I know I'll always have Peekskill, and my memories of the honeymoon suite! P.S. Keep your baubles--you may need to hock them for a few maple leaves.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

234. Joseph Zitt
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 19 Aug 1996

On 19 Aug 96 at 0:37, Bob Holman wrote:

> FYI, Mouth Almighty Records is releasing a WAMMO (that's the way he spells it) album in Oct... called "The Fat-Headed Stranger" it mixes blues, grunge, rock and uh spoken word. Even a lil ol Laurie Anderson satire. Backchannel me a snail and I'll ship you off a copy....

No kidding! I have his previous CD (with his band W.O.R.M.) and it's dynamite. Gotta hear the new one...

> Wammo himself finished second in the individuals in last year's Nationals -- Austin looks very tough this year, w/ the WamMan as (self-annointed) Captain.

Yup -- at the Slam at the Generation X-Po festival here a coupla weeks ago, the members of the Austin team won everything. I think at this point, Wammo could do "There's Too Much Light in this Bar" in his sleep, backwards, in Latvian, and still win.

> as for e's experiences ("but, how to describe this, ALL my slams were full of wierd extremes) I say amen. This is one reason I go to Slams. To hear new unfettered is another. To be able to say to the poet who has talentbut got a low score that you liked the poem is also part of it. The best poet always loses is the only rule in Slam.

Yeah. There's an article on judging Slams in the latest Omnivore (put out by Su Broskowitz somewhere in Massachusetts) that shows, pretty accurately, the way that some judges do it -- and it ain't pretty.

There's a hilarious article in the latest CyberSangha about a (fictitious) Zen competition. The winner bellows at everyone: "I am the most serene!" and gets high scores in levitation and enlightenment.
---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

235. maria damon
Re: the wheelbarrow
Mon 19 Aug 1996

mike b rites:
> For the third time in as many years, I had a student this summer > respond to _Spring and All_ with an off the wall anlysis of the > wheelbarrow poem that invoked the Cold War, white armies, red armies, > (red wheelbarrow, white chickens--get it?) etc etc. All these students > had been taught this analysis in high school. Anybody else out there > ever hear this? Or have any idea where it comes from? I suspect an > issue of _The Explicator_ must be responsible and I thought perhaps > somebody might have encountered it.

>
> Mike
> [redacted]

no direct comment on that, not having heard it myself (would be grateful to, at least it shows an interest, i'm used to stolid silence in the classroom); but another take on the red wheelbarrow from a friend who told me a student in one of his classes insisted that "so much depends on" etc was about a farmer's livelihood, and how much he depended on the wheelbarrow as part of his job. my friend thought this was totally off the wall, but hey, this is the great heartland, where farm machinery really can make or break you...i also had a student once who insisted that the elevator images in Crane's "The Bridge" were about grain elevators, which literally surround our minneapolitan landscape rather than NYcity-type means of transportation up and down skyscrapers. just goes to show, context really does shape a reading...md

↑ Index

236. Joe Amato
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 19 Aug 1996

---

maria, as in the thread earlier this year, i don't want to come out against the artistic-poetic possibilities of slams---the unexpected, slams as a more democratizing venue, the sorts of 'unfettered' experiences bob holman is after...

but the trouble i have/am having/will probably continue to have with slams (and may they continue to proliferate regardless my qualms) is the way the venue works, the way it tends to give short-shrift, say, to the contested basis of aesthetics... and this is sparked perhaps by the spectacle of it all... critical reception, for me, is not an ebert-siskel thumbs-up/down/sideways---which is more evaluation/judgment... and which tends to promote---and here i'm being most harsh---a knee-jerk audience response... at the same time, sure---it's not the 'diversifier's' fault, as you suggest... or at least i'm not interested in 'blaming'... and sure, i like to see folks get together even to gawk over wordplay, but---- i think slams tend to create an aura (i only hint mself at benjamin here) in which, like any potentially powerful entertainment, one may be swept up, down or aside... i am---very def. am---suggesting that the nature of the venue itself plays to our cultural predisposition toward entertainment/spectacle (this latter now an old argument)... not that the structure may not be used against itself, so to say...

that many folks may (will?) exploit the slam scene, as it's currently constructed, largely to the ends of self-validation seems to me a given, and seems to me to further the sorts of simplistic identity formations that have in many ways vitiated all sorts of poetic constructions---making slams no worse, and no better, than much acclaimed poetry... believe me, i'm not against occasionally thundering egos saturated with political righteousness or sublime moments of resplendent logos voiced with utter and complete sincerity... but to put the matter a bit obliquely (and based on my experience): when three-quarters or better of the folks at a slam begin and end on such notes, often without the slightest hint of performance anxiety, i find mself asking, to what do we owe such unmitigated bravery?...

best,

joe

↑ Index

237. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: the wheelbarrow
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Hey all--

I've taught The Red Wheelbarrow for a couple of years now, and tend to teach it on a section on Imagism. Before having them read the poem, I give them Pound's definition of the Image as a framework for their readings, along with Pound's In a Station of a Metro, some HD, some Marianne Moore. It usually works pretty well. Iowa students tend to really like this poem, though, because many of them either grew up on farms or have relatives who live on farms, so they all have a very immediate a personnal response to the complex of images that Wms. is using.

↑ Index

238. John E. Matthias
Berryman
Mon 19 Aug 1996

William Northcutt:

It's Dream Song #14, and it's "inner resources" (not "natural resources")

...my mother told me as a boy
(repeatingly) 'Ever to confess you're bored
means you have no

Inner Resources.' I conclude now I have no
inner resources, because I am heavy bored...

etc.

John Matthias

↑ Index

239. Henry Gould
Re: performance art/slams
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Huck had never seen a bear before. Sometime Aunt Padgett would tell stories about bears that strolled through Mudville in the early morning, long time ago before they built the levee. & sometime Pap would tell about his old huntin days before his leg turned green. So when Professor Bigelow Peepers & his Big Animal Bear Flea Circus came to town, why, Huck ran down there first thing even though he paid his last nickel to Tom for a postcard of the actress Fannie Measles. He snuck in through the back of the tent, & couldn't hardly see for the glare of all them newfangled lights flashin & all the noise & crowds of people from up & down the river roarin & shoutin & laughin & hittin each other. But by golly, sure nough, right there in the center ring walkin around in a circle on a chain with a little party hat on his head, led by a clown in an Abe Lincoln outfit, was...why, a real live sure-shootin BEAR! & that bear was growlin & mumblin...to the tune of YANKEE DOODLE! - Henry Gould

↑ Index

240. maria damon
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 19 Aug 1996

---

joe rites, among other things:

.. when three-quarters or better of the folks at a slam begin > and end on such notes, often without the slightest hint of performance > anxiety, i find mself asking, to what do we owe such unmitigated > bravery?...
>
probably a lot of beer.
so a lot of people use slams to build up their egos. how unlike the demure and self-effacing academy; how unlike the demure and self-effacing AWP scene; how unlike other performance forms, like acting, rock & other popular musics, and "performance art," where humility and anonymity are the ruling ethos.

md

↑ Index

241. Christina Fairbank Chirot
read barrows & lifts (fwd)
Mon 19 Aug 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Mon, 19 Aug 1996 11:05:56 -0500 (CDT)
From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: read barrows & lifts

Re: red wheel barrows and elevators:

A barrow is a grave, stones marking a grave site

A red wheel barrow: a read/red grave

From In the American Grain, "Founding of Quebec" chapter:

The land! Don't you feel it? Doesn't it make you want to go and lift dead Indians tenderly from their graves --to steal from them --as if it must be clinging even to their corpses--some authenticity, that which--

Stealing and reading/writing-and graves--from The Great American Novel:

There cannot be a novel. There can only be pyramids, pyramids of words, tombs . . . He smiled and she, from long practise, began to read to him, porgressing rapidly until she said; You can't fool me.

he became very angry but understood at once that she had penetrated his mystery, that she he was staeling in order to write words.

I have only taught theis poem once--this was method I used as it maeks connections among the read/red graves (read, and red as "red Indians/"dead indians")--stealing in order to write--Williams' use of womens voices ("out of the mouths of Polish mothers")(and where is Flossie's voice--)--and WCW's sense that there is an interealtionship between the landscape and the american id-iom--longing for such, perhaps to steal an authenticity from Indian graves . . .which could be used for reading the Tenochtitlan chapter of In the American Garain for exaample, which he said he tried to model in paragraph structure on the structure of the masonry there-- notice also the close placement of the words "lift" and "steal" in the "Founding of Quebec \" quote above--lift is slang for steal--as well as elevators-- one cd think of lifts going up and down in buildings in connection with stealing/finances/land speculations/the purchase of manhattan--and grain elevators--a hoarding of booty etc--in that hoarding, stock piling can be a form of stealing--driving up prices through shortages etc.

But this approach did open quite a series of good discussions in class room.

As you can think of stealing words in order to write in many relations to sampling in music and "referencing" in music videos--which now causing many legal problems, litigation/literature aspect of stealing words . . .

And--the question of stealing from the dead . . . who may not be able to sue!

anyway--some different approaches to directions opened by the red wheel barrow

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

242. Joseph Zitt
Maybe Morphing Hammer Quoters?
Mon 19 Aug 1996

A quick Altavista search shows the text:

Radical mind, day and night, all the time.
Seven, fourteen, wise divine.
Maniac, Brainiac, winner of the game,
I'm the lyrical Jesse James.

to be from "The Power" by Snap. It's in (gulp) the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers FAQ. ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

243. Joe Amato
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 19 Aug 1996

---

hey, what's good for the goose maria, you're right...

which is why i say that slams are no better and no worse in this regard... but if i'm to take to task poetry that wallows in its own constructions (which i am, incl. mine own) why then i guess i'd ask for this sort of critical reflexiveness in all fora (incl. rock & roll---but i'd hate to erase distinctions twixt performance venues, yknow)... and which it seems to me is not promoted in the slam scene...

or am i wrong?...

mebbe it all comes down to making slams the focus of more active critical attention?... mebbe in fact this speaks to the function of criticism etc?...

but then, this just means that i keep on posting!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

244. Robert Drake
A Humument pages...
Mon 19 Aug 1996

---

om Phillips' wondruffle visual work _A Humument_ has a webpage, with many images from the book:

http://www.wolfenet.com/~duchamp/index.html

i had just pulled my (paper) copy down th other day, after looking at some of Charles Bernstein's visual poem "veil" at the epc:

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/bernstein/visual/veil.html

the software charles used has some roots in CAD and draftsmen's conventions, while phillips background in drafting is aparent thruout.... anyway, id recommend th site (despite the frames...)

lbd

↑ Index

245. Robert Drake
[[redacted]: Postypographika update]
Mon 19 Aug 1996

========== Begin forwarded message ==========

From: [redacted] (Fabio Doctorovich)
To: [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted] (Joop Greypink), [redacted] (Karl Young), [redacted], [redacted]

(Yepiz), [redacted] (Loss Glazier, EPC), [redacted] (Jukka Lehmus), [redacted] (Jordanne Holyoak), [redacted] (Ficus Strangulensis, Transmog), [redacted], [redacted] (Ernesto Golomb), [redacted] (Spencer Selby), "ted.warnell"@bbs.logicnet.com, [redacted], [redacted]

Subject: Postypographika update
Date: Sat, 17 Aug 96 15:48 GMT-0300

I have just finished updating Postypographika, with a very EXtense and IN-tense virtual poetry work by L. P. Gyori.

Regards to all of you!

Fabio Doctorovich
Postypographika
http://www.postypographika.com

↑ Index

246. Sylvester Pollet
National Poetry Foundation Catalogue
Mon 19 Aug 1996

The NPF put out a new catalogue of its books, journals, and special sale titles in June. e-mail Gail Sapiel, [redacted] for a copy. Among several recent titles of interest to Poetics list: Lorine Niedecker: Woman and Poet, ed. Jenny Penberthy. 439pp, photos. $22.50 paper. I will be putting up a book display at Assembling Alternatives: An International Poetry Conference, Univ. New Hampshire, 29 Aug.-3 Sept. If you'd like to take a look at anything in the catalogue, just let me know and I'll bring a sample copy. Sylvester Pollet Assoc. Ed./ Acting Director National Poetry Foundation Room 302 5752 Neville Hall Orono, ME 04469-5752

↑ Index

247. Christopher J. Beach
ACLA 1997 panel
Mon 19 Aug 1996

As a few of you already know, this year's convention of the American Comparative Literature Association will be held in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, from April 10-13. This year there will also be a new format of sessions, with 8-12 person "seminar" sessions in addition to the normal 3-4 person panels. I am submitting a proposal for a larger session on the topic "First World Poets/ Third World Cultures," which I think will be of relevance to the conference's overall theme, "New Worlds for Old." The panel will deal with poetry and poetics of any era, focussing on interactions between poets of the "first world" and "third world" cultures. Possible issues include cultural transmission of ideas and myths, empire and (post)colonialism, translation, use of "other" cultures to challenge or revitalize Western traditions. Papers might also explore contact(s) between poets and "third world" communities or subcultures within "first world" countries.

In order to consider paper proposals for the panel, I will need paper titles and brief descriptions by September 20. These can be sent by email (backchanneled to me) or by regular mail: Professor Christopher Beach, Department of English and Comparative Literature, University of California-- Irvine, Irvine, CA 92717.

I hope some of you will come up with great ideas for the session!

Christopher Beach

↑ Index

248. Maria Damon
hammer ref
Mon 19 Aug 1996

hey, rapsters out there, where exactly does hammer use the line "I'm the lyrical jesse james?" i heard it on the radio when i still had a car radio; don't remember name of song, etc. bests, maria d

↑ Index

249. Maria Damon
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 19 Aug 1996

> mebbe it all comes down to making slams the focus of more active critical attention?... mebbe in fact this speaks to the function of criticism etc?...

ding ding ding, as they say. you get the big cigar, joe. god love ya for it. md

↑ Index

250. Herb Levy
Re: _A Humument_ pages...
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Luigi Bob's right about this Humument site being very very good with lots of images.

<http://www.wolfenet.com/~duchamp/index.html>

Those of us who were looking for Humument criticism earlier (spring, I think) should be aware of a good intro here by Bill Hurrell, a Marvin Sackner essay, and two pieces by Daniel Traister. The (large) bibliography unfortunately seems only to be of first publications of images from the work.

Bests

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

251. filch
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Joe said....." and which it seems to me is not promoted in the slam scene...

or am i wrong?...

mebbe it all comes down to making slams the focus of more active critical attention?..."

That is part of how it is changing, albeit slowly, in that criticism is becoming part of the scene. Active critical attention is certainly appropriate to the scene but lettuce not forget critics by and large don't critique until something, in this case slams, is taken seriously. Perhaps we are going through a phase transition in which the need to critique & understand the slam phenom becomes self evident. Whereas before it has been much easier to dismiss.

I wonder though if the economics of the academy will force this reevaluation. It seems as though from an admin point of view that having a few classes here and there concerned with perform po & slams would certainly be an attractive way to up enrollment ;) in moribound lit departs. Why they might even have to pull in some candidates from the hinterlands of the system to keep up with the demand.

and..." seems to me to further the sorts of simplistic identity formations that have in many ways vitiated all sorts of poetic constructions---making slams no worse, and no better, than much acclaimed poetry... believe me, i'm not against occasionally thundering egos saturated with political righteousness or sublime moments of resplendent logos voiced with utter and complete sincerity... but to put the matter a bit obliquely (and based on my experience): when three-quarters or better of the folks at a slam begin and end on such notes, often without the slightest hint of performance anxiety, i find mself asking, to what do we owe such unmitigated bravery?..."

Simplistic identity formations engender simple people. Hence the state of the world. Umitigated bravery is easy when your preaching to the converted. An audience at a slam could not be more converted. It's easy to read some witty verse deriding the state of society to a group of sympathizers but take that same poem out onto the street corner with a megaphone and see where the bravery lies. When this starts happening, that is when it will get interesting.

cf

↑ Index

252. Christina Fairbank Chirot
tom phillips
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Re Tom Phillips

This is familiar territory to many on list, but for those who don't know it--an excellent assemblage of Phillips materials (interview, writings by Tom Phillips, essays,reviews and bibliography) is to be found in Open Letter Fourth Series, Numbers 1&2 Summer 1978: Between poetry and Painting. Other artists given similar consideration are Joe Phillips and Ian Tyson. The volume was edited by Kevin Power and is Number 7 in The Margins Symposium Series edited by Karl Young

I'd highly recommend the collection to any one not yet familiar with it.

Thanks to those providing Web Site information for visual poetry! Have been on prowl for these.

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

253. George Bowering
Re: the wheelbarrow
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Michael, et al.

My wife Angela had student several years ago that told her Williams's red wheelbarrow and white chickens was all about communists and so on. Well, it was usually as hard as pulling hens' teeth to get those students to try any kind of reading or "interpretation", so something must have been up.

George Bowering. "Sighing is extra."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

--Gertrude Stein

↑ Index

254. Tony Green
Re: George Starbuck
Mon 19 Aug 1996

George, It is a question how old any of us might be at 26. I wasn't so young at that age, married, mortgage, one child, a few grey hairs. How young were you?

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

255. George Bowering
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Mon 19 Aug 1996

For Rachel, if that's your real name---
>> >> >To Charles Bernstein---
>> >> >
>> >> >Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I >>never >> >> >even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so >>dumb,
>> >> >forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without >> >>talking to >> >> >the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!
>> >>
>> >> I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to >> >> me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming, >> >> N.Y.
>> >
>> >Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in >> >Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh
>> >Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the

>> >hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction >> >manual.
>>
>> Charles, how could you!? You told me she was just an intelligent person you >> had befriended for her quick mind! I am sending your jewelry back.
>>
>
>Some of us don't need trinkets to express the inexpressible, my dear
>--what do you call yourself--Georgette? Some of us, on a summer's >eve, have the freedom of our own thoughts and need not surrender to >idle jealousies. Charles may do what he wishes with his heart; I >know I'll always have Peekskill, and my memories of the honeymoon >suite! P.S. Keep your baubles--you may need to hock them for a few >maple leaves.

Oh yeah? Well, Charles told me a VERY interesting story about you and a certain Mister Joris, which I could never repeat in public. But REALLY, did you have to go to Poughkeepsie for something like that?

George Bowering.

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"Sighing is extra."

--Gertrude Stein

↑ Index

256. George Bowering

Re: read barrows & lifts (fwd)

Mon 19 Aug 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Mon, 19 Aug 1996 11:05:56 -0500 (CDT)
From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: read barrows & lifts

Re: red wheel barrows and elevators:

A barrow is a grave, stones marking a grave site

> A red wheel barrow: a read/red grave

God! even the teachers do it now!

George Bowering.

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"Sighing is extra."

--Gertrude Stein

↑ Index

257. Peter Quartermain
The well-read Barrow
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Well, yes, Mike. Two or maybe three times in the last two decades I've had students read it as a poem about Red Chinese economics -- which makes more sense, maybe, in vancouver that it does in Toronna. But not much. An ethnocentrism which gloms onto western material "progress" as the subtext of the poem. The real difficulty is getting them to see how any coded reading closes the poem down. But you get a hell of a lot of (useful) discussion in class as a result.

Peter

+ +

Peter Quartermain
128 East 23rd Avenue
Vancouver
B.C.
Canada V5V 1X2
Voice and fax: [redacted]

+ +

↑ Index

258. Tony Green
Re: poetry slams
Mon 19 Aug 1996

Ice-dancing, synchronised swimming, ballroom-dancing, debating, dog shows, surfing, gymnastics, figure-skating, are all jury-sports. Slams share their problems, or so I gather, lacking finite measures?

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

259. Poetics List
Twentieth-Century Lit. Conference (fwd)
Mon 19 Aug 1996

I'm not sure if Alan Golding has already resent this... but it came to poetics dugout instead
-jk

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Tue, 13 Aug 1996 18:02:59 -0400 (EDT)
From: Alan Golding <[redacted]>
To: Poetics List <[redacted]>
Subject: Twentieth-Century Lit. Conference

Associate Professor of English, U. of Louisville
Phone: [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted]

Tom Orange's recent mention of the U. of Louisville's Twentieth-Century Lit. conference reminded me to send out my annual invitation to the list for papers and panels. Deadline is 10/1 postmark. Proposals should be mailed to the Conference Director, Harriette Seiler, Dept. of Classical and Modern Languages, U. of Louisville, Louisville, KY 40292. Anyone who needs more specifics can get them from Harriette (her e-mail: [redacted]) or from me. Keynote speakers this year are Bonnie Kime Scott and A Player To Be Named Later.

Alan

↑ Index

260. maria damon
Re: poetry slams
Mon 19 Aug 1996

---

as someone with such a weird ego that i can't send stuff out but need others to (i hardly even send academic papers out now; rejection is so yucky), i can relate to this. i don't know if i'd ever participate in a slam unless i were pretty well assured of the crowd as friendly etc. i realize i've been coming at this discussion as a critic/appreciator, rather than as a participant. i've been absorbing the common lore that the competitive aspect of slam is just a pretext for getting folks involved; but of course, it gets me involved as a spectator rather than as a participant.

by the way, is anyone interested in publishing a 25-page paper on lenny bruce's first obscenity trial transcript as a cultural document? please only respond in the affirmative, if you've got a response. bests, maria

In message <[redacted]> UB
Poetics discussion group writes:
> I guess what I really object to is "judges" supposedly judging poetry as > better or worse--or even having the entire audience "vote" and thereby > judge "poetry performances" (slams)--and making the whole event > competitive. Admittedly, this is my personal issue (at least)--I hate > the idea of competition, ranking, judging, hierarchizing, and all the > authority structures that implies--and most especially when this > oppressive crap is applied to poetry readings.
> Criticism points out all sorts of connections, and lack of > connections, (hopefully), and doesn't simple rank and judge on a > scale of one to zero (or minus one).
> I don't mind hearing or giving a forum and some time to the most > drunken lout nazi rip-off, as long as the setting is such that my > poem does not have to be compared to his.
> All the audience can appreciate/not appreciate the work (as they > do) and no ranking and judging is needed, or desired, (it seems to > me)...

↑ Index

261. kaona
Re: hammer ref
Mon 19 Aug 1996

---

is it really Hammer who uses it? i know that Snap had a top-40ish song with that line in it--"I've Got the Power" was the title?

On Mon, 19 Aug 1996, Maria Damon wrote:

> hey, rapsters out there, where exactly does hammer use the line "I'm the lyrical jesse james?" i heard it on the radio when i still had a car radio; don't remember name of song, etc.
> bests, maria d

↑ Index

262. Rachel Loden
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Mon 19 Aug 1996

George Bowering added (the bit beginning "Oh yeah?"):
>
> > >> >> >To Charles Bernstein---
> >> >> >
> >> >> >Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I > >>never > >> >> >even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so > >>dumb,
> >> >> >forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without > >> >>talking to > >> >> >the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!
> >> >>
> >> >> I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to > >> >> me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming, > >> >> N.Y.
> >> >
> >> >Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in > >> >Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh
> >> >Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the > >> >hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction > >> >manual.
> >>
> >> Charles, how could you!? You told me she was just an intelligent person you > >> had befriended for her quick mind! I am sending your jewelry back.
> >>
> >
> >Some of us don't need trinkets to express the inexpressible, my dear
> >--what do you call yourself--Georgette? Some of us, on a summer's > >eve, have the freedom of our own thoughts and need not surrender to > >idle jealousies. Charles may do what he wishes with his heart; I > >know I'll always have Peekskill, and my memories of the honeymoon > >suite! P.S. Keep your baubles--you may need to hock them for a few > >maple leaves.

>
> Oh yeah? Well, Charles told me a VERY interesting story about you and a > certain Mister Joris, which I could never repeat in public. But REALLY, did > you have to go to Poughkeepsie for something like that?

Poughkeepsie! That sweet city with her dreaming spires...But no, I think Charles must have me mixed up with Amy Fisher in her preteen, pre-Buttafuoco days (Pierre's the only one who REALLY knows, and HE at least is too much of a gentleman to say. Aren't you Pierre?). I deal with all of this in my sonnet series "Snorkling the Lotus," for anyone who really wants to plumb the depths of those times. "The past is a foreign country: they do things differently there." I forgive you, Charles.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

263. David Benedetti
poetry slams
Mon 19 Aug 1996

I guess what I really object to is "judges" supposedly judging poetry as better or worse--or even having the entire audience "vote" and thereby judge "poetry performances" (slams)--and making the whole event competitive. Admittedly, this is my personal issue (at least)--I hate the idea of competition, ranking, judging, hierarchizing, and all the authority structures that implies--and most especially when this oppressive crap is applied to poetry readings. Criticism points out all sorts of connections, and lack of connections, (hopefully), and doesn't simple rank and judge on a scale of one to zero (or minus one). I don't mind hearing or giving a forum and some time to the most drunken lout nazi rip-off, as long as the setting is such that my poem does not have to be compared to his. All the audience can appreciate/not appreciate the work (as they do) and no ranking and judging is needed, or desired, (it seems to me)...

↑ Index

264. wystan
Re: Twentieth-Century Lit. Conference (fwd)
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Dear Alan,

Give me details. Would you? Please. Thanks.

Wystan

↑ Index

265. George Bowering
Re: George Starbuck
Tue 20 Aug 1996

> George, It is a question how old any of us might be at 26. I wasn't so young at that age, married, mortgage, one child, a few grey hairs. How young were you?
>
> Tony Green,

Well, I wasnt married yet. I was pretty young, actually. Hmm, 26. That was 1962. I was pretty innocent, though a heavy Olson reader. Well, some smoke. A little jazz. French movies. Didnt get to Mexico till 1963. Didnt get to Europe till 1966. Didnt get to New Zealand till 1984. Pretty innocent still.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

--Tristan Tzara

↑ Index

266. Michael Boughn
Re: The well-read Barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

> Well, yes, Mike. Two or maybe three times in the last two decades I've had students read it as a poem about Red Chinese economics -- which makes more sense, maybe, in vancouver that it does in Toronna. But not much. An ethnocentrism which gloms onto western material "progress" as the subtext of the poem. The real difficulty is getting them to see how any coded reading closes the poem down. But you get a hell of a lot of (useful) discussion in class as a result.
>
> Peter

The student in my class this summer told a nightmare story of having ventured a tentative analysis of the poem only to be told by her high school teacher that she was wrong, that the poem was really about the cold war. According to my student, she gave up on poetry at that point, since she felt she was too dumb to get it. Imagine her surprise when she read _Spring and All_ and saw where the wheelbarrow actually is parked.

The wide-spread nature of this particular "interpretation" leads me to suspect that there's some more systematic conspiracy behind its promulgation. I won't mention any names, but the initials "GB" came to mind right away, not withstanding public attempts on this list by certain poet/novelists in Vancouver to cast suspicion elsewhere.

Skeptically,

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

267. Rachel Loden
trial transcript (was Re: poetry slams)
Tue 20 Aug 1996

---

maria damon wrote:

> by the way, is anyone interested in publishing a 25-page paper on lenny bruce's first obscenity trial transcript as a cultural document?

Maria, is this the trial in which the prosecutor asks a witness whether, on some particular occasion, Mr. Crotch was seen touching his bruce?

Rachel

↑ Index

268. maria damon
Re: trial transcript (was Re: poetry slams)
Tue 20 Aug 1996

---

rachel l (of recent "Oh Charles" fame) rites:
> maria damon wrote:
>
> > by the way, is anyone interested in publishing a 25-page paper on lenny > > bruce's
> > first obscenity trial transcript as a cultural document?
>
> Maria, is this the trial in which the prosecutor asks a witness > whether, on some particular occasion, Mr. Crotch was seen touching > his bruce?
>
> Rachel

no, but lots of other entertaining shenanigans very reminiscent of the recent culture wars and NEA/Jesse Helms stuff. at one point the judge actually quizzes

the defense on the storyline of lysistrata. and the prosecution pits the "long beards at Berkeley" and the stevedores out with the boys against the regular Americans. bests, maria

↑ Index

269. Christina Fairbank Chirot

red Indian barrow

Tue 20 Aug 1996

Literal statements often conceal violent analogies.

--Robert Smithson

In recent posts Julie Marie Schmid, George Bowering and Michael Boughn refer to Williams' "red wheelbarrow". Peter Quartermain writes of "an ethnocentrism which gloms onto western material "progress" as the subtext of the poem. The real difficulty is getting to see how any coded reading closes the poem down.

The lines in the poem are:

a red wheel
barrow

Barrow can also mean a grave site marked by stones.

This grave opens up other readings in Williams' work in relation to red/read graves as "Red Indian" graves to be used in relation to "western 'progress'"and "ethocentrism":

From The Great American Novel:

If there is progress then there is a novel.

There cannot be a novel. There can only be pyramids, pyramidsof words, tombs.

From I Wanted to Write a Poem:

The Tenochtitaln cahpter (in In the American Grain) was written in big square paragraphs like Inca masonry.

From In the American Grain, "Founding of Quebec" chapter:

The land! Don't you feel it? Doesn't it make you want to go out and lift dead Indians tenderly from their graves, to steal from them--as if it must be clinging even to their corpses--some authenticity--that which--

From The Great American Novel:

He smiled and she, from long practise, began to read to him, progressing rapidly until she said: You can't fool me.

He became very angry but understood at once that hse had penetrated his mystery, that she saw he was stealing in order to write words.

Concealing violent analogies in a literal statement: as "the red wheelbarrow" or "a red wheel/barrow": coded readings or encoded readings . . .

open many "grave" questions:

From The Great American Novel:

What difference is it whether I make the words or take the words. It makes no difference whatever.

To steal authenticity . . . to make words . . . in relation to "the land!"

Benjamin's Aura . . . and sampling, referencing in videos . . .

Nations and tribes fighting for the return of bones dug up from graves in Sacred ground and placed in museums and laboratoires . . .

"She saw he was stealing words in order to write" and "out of the mouths of Polish mothers" . . .

A red wheel/barrow as open grave for readings . . .

Walter Benjamin, "Theses on the Philosophy of History":

There is no document of civilization that is not at the same time a document of barbarism . . . (A historical materialist) regards it as his task to brush history against the grain.

A red wheel/barrow read in the context of Williams' writing on Indians, graves, writing and stealing may open up In the American Grain to readings that "brush history against the grain".

---dave baptiste chirot

(Williams also writes of red in relation to misnamed robins in the essay "The American Background". Again, Williams is considering the relation of "the land!" to the American language, the American idiom, as he does in "The Founding of Quebec" chapter: "Here not there".)

↑ Index

270. henry gould
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Just to follow up on Dave Chirot's post, the phrase "so much depends" itself could be taken as an invitation tp "dig deeper". - Henry Gould

↑ Index

271. henry gould
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Addendum to previous post: I think you have to try to find out what the author is trying to say, because it's often very specific (and you have to try, even if it's vague). This is an outdated form of litcrit for some people, I don't want to get into that... My own view is that Williams was just writing sort of an "epiphany" - the poem is the things in it, shining in the daylight, & that's all you need to celebrate. But once you get a sense (at least to your own satisfaction) of what a poem is trying to do, it's legitimate to hear other things in it, unintended meanings & overtones. That's how I read the red/Red wheelbarrow barrow "subtext". Williams quite likely heard those overtones too - but I don't see him making that under-meaning an integral part of the poem. Unless it is some kind of icon for his whole work as a poet - a wheelbarrow is literarily a laboring tool, an earth-mover, lifting the red (Native) earth barrow into view, full of life-rain, next to the (very) white chickens...poetry as wheelbarrow...very well, I contradict myself! Would take some more Williams archaeology to decide this one. My point is to look for a middle ground between "No that's NOT what the poem is about!" and "this poem means whatever I say it means". You have to look for the author's intention (though Derrida might deride). It's usually where the most subtle language effects are, anyway - depend upon it. - H. Gould

↑ Index

272. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: The well-read Barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

---

i had a student last term comment that 'the red wheel barrow' was a sonnet! i gave that student an A in the course for that. i'm just a dissertation student. so what do i know!

carl

↑ Index

273. henry
Re: The well-read Barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

On Tue, 20 Aug 1996 11:00:36 -0700 Carl Lynden Peters said:
>i had a student last term comment that 'the red wheel barrow' was a sonnet!

>i gave that student an A in the course for that. i'm just a dissertation >student. so what do i know!

Just thought I'd warn you - heard backchannel you've been targeted by the sonnet police. You could get 14 lines to life for that. Call Langpo Central after midnight if you need a place to lose your authorial identity.

- An Anonymous Friend

↑ Index

274. Judy Roitman
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Henry Gould writes:

> the poem is the things in it

Things?

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

275. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

On Tue, 20 Aug 1996 13:26:24 -0500 Judy Roitman said:
>Henry Gould writes:
>
> >the poem is the things in it
>
>
>Things?

Yeah, as in "Things & arrowths of outhrageous forthune" - HG

↑ Index

276. Daniel Bouchard
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

On Tue, 20 Aug 1996 13:26:24 -0500 Judy Roitman said:
>Henry Gould writes:
>
> >the poem is the things in it
>
>
>Things?

Yeah, as in "Things & arrowths of outhrageous forthune" - HG

And the 'no ideas but in . . . '

- db

↑ Index

277. George Bowering
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

> Literal statements often conceal violent analogies.
>
> --Robert Smithson
>
> In recent posts Julie Marie Schmid, George Bowering and Michael Boughn refer to Williams' "red wheelbarrow".
> Peter Quartermain writes of "an ethnocentrism which gloms onto western material "progress" as the subtext of the poem. The real difficulty is getting to see how any coded reading closes the poem down.
>
> The lines in the poem are:
>
> a red wheel
> barrow
>
> Barrow can also mean a grave site marked by stones.
>
> This grave opens up other readings in Williams' work in relation to red/read graves as "Red Indian" graves to be used in relation to "western 'progress'"and "ethocentrism":

That is an "opening up"?
Now, what are you going to do with that red wheel.

You have a problem here because the red Insians did not have a wheel, except for the toys made around Tenochtitlan.

But that wheel was used only for that. It was a kind of Bare O

wxh is another use of the sound "barrow". So I figure that Williams is talking about the Aztecs. And all you have to do is look at _In the American Grain_ to see his interest in the Aztecs. And of course one is tempted to call his book _In the American Grave_.

George Bowering. "The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4 --Tristan Tzara

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

278. George Bowering
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

> Just to follow up on Dave Chirot's post, the phrase "so much depends" itself could be taken as an invitation tp "dig deeper". - Henry Gould

You'll have to explain that one to me. Depends means hangs from. Dig means shove one's shovel into and lift. I dont see the invitation mentioned.

George Bowering. "The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4 --Tristan Tzara

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

279. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

On Tue, 20 Aug 1996 12:29:01 -0700 George Bowering said:
>>Addendum to previous post: I think you have to try to find out what the >>author is trying to say,

>
>As an "author", I am bothered by this. Why try to see what I am "trying" to >say. Why not go with what I say?
>
"what the author is trying to say" - it bothers me too, now, but not for the same reason. It bothers me because it's such a tired cliche. But to try to answer your question... in a poem, like other forms of communication, but sealed in writing, the author may be trying to say about a dozen things at the same time. & sealing that in writing is not so easy, may take some trying. Especially if you're trying to say things that are not so obvious, if you're trying to say things in a new or forceful way. Of course, the author may try to say these difficult things in a way which seems fluent & easy - not so easy to do! Try & see! - Henry G

↑ Index

280. George Bowering
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

> Addendum to previous post: I think you have to try to find out what the author is trying to say,

As an "author", I am bothered by this. Why try to see what I am "trying" to say.
Why not go with what I say?

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."
--Tristan Tzara

↑ Index

281. Libbie Rifkin
Berkeley 1965
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Does anyone know whether there are "official" records of the proceedings of the Berkeley Poetry Conference of 1965? I've got the published transcript of Olson's speech, several anecdotal references from Ted Berrigan, and the usual mentions in literary historical accounts. Could anyone direct me to more material on the event? Perhaps there are people on the list who were there who would like to share their experiences?

I'm interested in the tenor of the event as a whole--just how Zeitgeist-y it actually felt. I'm also particularly interested in the way Olson's speech was received, in whether and how Zukofsky (in his absence) played a role, and in Ed Dorn's talk on dead poets.

Any info would be great. Feel free to backchannel if this doesn't seem fit for group discussion.
Libbie

↑ Index

282. Michael Boughn
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Wow, an explication war. I was just looking for an issue of _The Explicator_.

Here's how WCW explains the poem in _Spring and All_:

> The fixed categories into which life is divided must > always hold. These things are normal--essential to every activity.
> But they exist--but not as dead dissections.
> The curriculum of knowledge cannot but be divided into > the sciences, the thousand and one groups of data, scientific, > philosophic or whatnot--as many as there exist in > Shakespeare--things that make him appear the university of all > ages.
> But this is not the thing. In the galvanic category > of--The same things exist, but in a different condition when > energized by the imagination.

I think this is the final word on the damned poem, then--the wheelbarrow is a symbol for Shakespeare.

Hermeneutically,
Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

283. william marsh
Re: The well-read Barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

At 02:23 PM 8/20/96 EDT, you wrote:
>On Tue, 20 Aug 1996 11:00:36 -0700 Carl Lynden Peters said:
>>i had a student last term comment that 'the red wheel barrow' was a sonnet!
>>i gave that student an A in the course for that. i'm just a dissertation >>student. so what do i know!

carl -- 'the red wheel barrow' is as on net

can i get an "A" for that too?

bill

↑ Index

284. maria damon
conference fwd
Tue 20 Aug 1996

From: Center for Advanced Feminist Studies <[redacted]> Date: Tue, 20 Aug 1996 16:51:00 -0500 To: Multiple recipients of list CAFS-F2 <[redacted]> Subject: Frontline Feminisms conference

---------- Forwarded Message begins here ----------
From: [redacted] (Marguerite R. Waller)
Date: Sat, 17 Aug 96 17:33:35 -0500
To: [redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
Center for Advanced Feminist Studies <[redacted]>, [redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],

[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
EAST/[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted],
[redacted]
Cc: [redacted] (Piya Chatterjee), Cheryl Harmer <[redacted]>
Subject: Frontline Feminisms conference

Dear Friends, Please forgive the form letter nature of this communication. As Piya and I begin to map out the program of the Frontline Feminisms conference, I just wanted to thank all of you for your interest and to say that if you have not yet had a chance to send us a proposal and want to, we would like to have something by the end of next week. A paragraph to a page would be fine. You can send it by fax ([redacted]), email, or snail mail (Dept. of Women's Studies, UC Riverside, Riverside, CA 92521). If we have already discussed submitting a proposal in early September, I have duly noted this. If you need more information, send a message to [redacted].

At the same time, please take the opportunity to tell us whether and what kind of financial help you might need to attend the conference.

We will make several kinds of lodging available including hotels, dormatory rooms, and the homes of hospitable community members. The airport serving Riverside most immediately is Ontario. Further details concerning transportation, housing, registration etc. will be forthcoming.

Everyday seems to bring exciting news about the way the conference is shaping up. Several publishers are interested in publishing the proceedings, and we are exploring a recent offer to have the conference audio-taped with radio tie-ins.

We will keep you posted, and please feel free to contact any of us at any time.

Sincerely, Margie Waller, Center for Women in Coalition

Marguerite R. Waller, Chair
Women's Studies Department

---------- Forwarded Message ends here ----------

Karen Moon, Administrative Aide
Center for Advanced Feminist Studies, University of MN
496 Ford Hall/224 Church St. SE
Minneapolis, MN 55455
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

285. Tony Green
Re: George Starbuck
Tue 20 Aug 1996

But 26 AND a poet published in a book is young enough.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

286. Walter K. Lew
Re: conference fwd
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Maria-
Is that the same M. Waller who taught us Dante at Amherst?

WLK888

↑ Index

287. Tony Green
Re: red Indian barrow
Tue 20 Aug 1996

There is nothing in the poem, shining or otherwise.

There are no things. The things are in the place where the words are heard as saying something to do with some things.

The "intention" is unknowable; the various effects are all you can get.
 How
 the rhetoric results in the read effects is a matter for attention -- even though these effects are particular to this one piece.

 It's the only way to understand what happens to the reader as the reader reads.

The "intention" comes down to the varied possibilities opened
 by the text.
                You might say that a certain breadth of possibility was the "intention" since that was the way the writer had it put in print.

 I'd look at it as more a question of the use of the poem, rather than the communication of the thought of the author concealed behind the poem.

Besides it's obvious as a doctor, Williams, with that red and white, was really thinking about red and white blood corpuscles.

best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

288. Walter K. Lew
Whoops
Tue 20 Aug 1996

Poetics list-- I meant to back-channel that question abt the Dante course to Maria. Whatever, I realize now that it had to be a different Waller who taught it, and, just to set the record straight, we weren't Amherst College students, but attending the course through the Five College system. Ho-hum.

WKL888

↑ Index

289. George Bowering
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

---

the author may be trying to say >about a dozen things at the same time. & sealing that in writing is not >so easy, may take some trying.

Maybe you are almost at something there; but I still cannot help but see a patronising attitude in remarks about what the author is "trying" to say. As if the critic or teacher knows more than the author, and the author is putting up a good effort. There there, nice try, little fellow. I like to see an author that really tries.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

--Tristan Tzara

↑ Index

290. George Bowering
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

> Besides it's obvious as a doctor, Williams, with that red and white, was really thinking about red and white blood corpuscles.
>
> Tony Green,

No, no, no. You will remember back before you and I were born, barbers were also surgeons--hence the white and red barber's pole. Williams the doctor was thinking about getting a haircut, and came upon this poem. The barber always asked him how he wanted the sides, and you have seen pictures of WCW. He always said, "Oh, bare," which said backward is of course "barrow."

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

--Tristan Tzara

↑ Index

291. Christina Fairbank Chirot

imagination affirms reality

Wed 21 Aug 1996

"No ideas but in things."

What ideas may be in a "red wheel/barrow"

Olson: "istorin: to find out for oneself".

WCW, Spring and All:

Either to write or comprehend poetry the words must be recognized to be moving in a direction separate from the jostling or lack of it which occurs within the piece.

What direction might "a red wheel/barrow" move?

WCW:

As birds' wings beat the solid air without which none could fly so words affirm reality by their flight.

"No ideas but in things"--"to find out for oneself"--"to be moving in a direction separate . . .from the piece"--"words affirm reality by their flight".

To read may be an act of the imagination that affirms the reality of the poem. To "find out for oneself", Olson's definition of history--which WCW does in In the American Grain.

WCW: What difference is it whether Make the words or take the words. It makes no difference whatever.

Pascal: It is not the elements which are new, but the order of their arrangement.

The rain water glazing the red wheel barrow. Think of how often in WCW water is on what he sees--and how often each day as a dcotor he washed his hands--how seeing and touch in WCW are interelated, yet he is not interested in "holding on to" things:

From The Descent of Winter:

I make really very little money.
What of it?
I prefer the grass with the rain on it the short grass before my headlights when I am turning the car-- a degenerate trait, no doubt.
It would ruin England.

For proof look up,
And read
Where thou art

--Ronald Johnson, Radi Os

to open & to find out, to affirm reality & imagination

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

292. Ron Silliman

Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Aug 1996 to 20 Aug 1996

Wed 21 Aug 1996

Dear Libbie,

I would suspect that the Bancroft Library on the UC campus would have whatever "official" records there might be. Duncan was the poetry consultant to the rare books collection there (which is how they got some of those great Spicer letter/newspapers, for example). The fellow who actually coordinated it, Richard Baker, old MBA grad out of Harvard, went on to become Richard Baker-roshi, head of the SF Zen Center for many years, now somewhere in the southwest I believe. I doubt he did much in the way of archival stuff -- that's not his way.

I was 18 at the time, basically unaware of the literary politics of the occasion (so that when Louis Simpson quit his job at UC and went public in the press with how that event showed that there was no place for his kind of writing in the Bay Area, it came as a shock to read this in the Chronicle--maybe if Joyce Jenkins had been around in those days). I was challenged by the awesome price (which was something like $40 for the whole conference), so hung out around events more than at them. A poet I was hanging out with, Paul X (later Xavier), had some success seducing the best mind of a certain generation, so we got to go to several parties that seemed to be a very fluid extension of the event itself. It's those parties that stand out more now in my memory than any individual event, other than sitting on the stage for Ginsberg's reading which was packed to the rafters. I was surprised (for I was very new to this -- it may have been the first "major" reading I'd ever attended) that he read "new" work (to me at least) rather than the classics of eight and nine years earlier.

But the scandal of the Olson reading or the way in which Spicer was obviously ill at his reading (later reported in some depth in El Corno Emplumado, an excellent little mag out of Mexico City then edited by Margaret Randell and her husband) were lost on me. I sorta knew who Olson was, but had never heard of Spicer. I didn't discover Zukofsky until PBS did the TV show on him in 1966.

Had that event occurred one year later, it would have been a completely different one for me. Such is the narrative of actual events...

Ron Silliman
[redacted]

>Date: Tue, 20 Aug 1996 16:54:52 -0400
>From: Libbie Rifkin <[redacted]> >Subject: Berkeley 1965
>
>Does anyone know whether there are "official" records of the >proceedings of the Berkeley Poetry Conference of 1965? I've got the >published transcript of Olson's speech, several anecdotal >references from Ted Berrigan, and the usual mentions in literary >historical accounts. Could anyone direct me to more material on the >event? Perhaps there are people on the list who were there who would like to share their experiences?
>
>I'm interested in the tenor of the event as a whole--just how Zeitgeist-y it actually felt. I'm >also particularly interested in the way Olson's speech was received, in whether and how Zukofsky (in his absence) played a role, and in Ed
Dorn's talk on dead poets.
>
>Any info would be great. Feel free to backchannel if this doesn't seem >fit for group discussion.

>Libbie
>
>----------

↑ Index

293. Pierre Joris
nice one, bob
Wed 21 Aug 1996

This week's issue of the national left-wing French weekly "Le Nouvel Observateur" has a 3-page spread on Bob Holman, subtitled "With the weapons of the enemy," doing a decent job of explaining the Nuyorican Poets Cafe, the "US of P" & Mouth Almighty, the cd venture. Nice photo, too. Plus an insert on Steve Cannon, "the angel of the Lower Eastside." Same issue has Regis Debray interviewing Benigno, one of the two survivors of the Che's Bolivian guerrilla -- both rather sour on Fidel, to say the least. -- Pierre

↑ Index

294. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

On Tue, 20 Aug 1996 18:00:47 -0400 Michael Boughn said:
>I think this is the final word on the damned poem, then--the >wheelbarrow is a symbol for Shakespeare.

Subtly drawing on the famous "graveside wheelbarrow" scene in Hamlet, when the Danish prince addresses the departed Yorick:

Alas, poor Yorick, I knew thee well!
Excellent spark, hale fellow and well met,
Now gone fore'er into the noodling dark
'Bysm--"

[Gravedigger whacks Hamlet behind the knees with red wheelbarrow]

--what ho! Goes there I say! What,
Thou brutish sodman, ho!

Digger: M'lord, methought thy words so fitting for yon hole, I'd aid thee with a bump, right into it.

Hamlet: Not yet unto the breach, my friend! [etc.]

↑ Index

295. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

On Wed, 21 Aug 1996 15:39:48 GMT+1200 Tony Green said:
>There are no things. The things are in the place where >the words are heard as saying something > to do with
>some things.

Don't these 2 sentences contradict each other?
>
>The "intention" is unknowable; the >various effects are all you can get.
> How
> the rhetoric results in the read effects is >a matter for attention -- even though these >effects are particular to this one piece.
>
> It's the only way to understand what happens to > the reader as the reader reads.
>
>The "intention" comes down to > the varied possibilities opened
> by the text.

Is this the standard way of reading poems now? Seems kind of self- limiting, despite the way it tries to make the text omni-vocal, depending on whatever the reader brings to it (SO MUCH DEPENDS!) But I would think that in order to appreciate all the "effects" of a poem, you'd want to try to hear from the author's place - from the motives & communications & craft background from which the author is coming. All the things that give you an approximation of intention, where the poet is moving. I agree with Dave Chirot that this is also limiting, that the words take off from both writer & listener in a new direction - but I think "where it's coming from" is also important. Looks like three large areas have been outlined: the author's intentions; the direction of the poem itself; & the varied responses it creates in the reader. - HG

↑ Index

296. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

On Tue, 20 Aug 1996 23:27:48 -0700 George Bowering said:
> the author may be trying to say >>about a dozen things at the same time. & sealing that in writing is not >>so easy, may take some trying.
>
>Maybe you are almost at something there; but I still cannot help but see a >patronising attitude in remarks about what the author is "trying" to say.
>As if the critic or teacher knows more than the author, and the author is >putting up a good effort. There there, nice try, little fellow. I like to >see an author that really tries.

Is it patronizing to assume an effort at something difficult & extremely hard to achieve? I think the reverse is true. Of course, if you put it in the imaginary context of a critic who then sets out to "explain" in a patronizing way what the author was trying to say, you're right. But I think it's taken for granted an explication is kind of a prose trot laying out in boring detail what the poem puts together in a miraculous conjunction like an elegant theorem which leads on & on beyond explications. & the elegance of the theorem is precisely in the tenuous balance the writer achieves by TRYING to say many things at once in a flying formation.

All said, however, I repeat what I said before also: you're right, "what the author is trying to say" is a terrible cliche which echoes down through ages of high school english classes. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

297. Gwyn McVay
Re: Stockhausen in New York
Wed 21 Aug 1996

A still-Grateful Deadhead exiled from NY and its radio reach asks wistfully: is anybody going to be taping this? Backchannel me and we can work out a handsome reward.

Hope is the thing with feathers,
Gwyn McVay

↑ Index

298. maria damon
Re: conference fwd
Wed 21 Aug 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> Maria-
> Is that the same M. Waller who taught us Dante at Amherst?
>
> WLK888

yeah, i think so; she went back and did film studies at some UC school, and then became a women's film studies person. teresa di lauretis started out as an italianist too. md

↑ Index

299. Schuchat
Re: imagination affirms reality
Wed 21 Aug 1996

---

red wheelbarrow is full of plums, plunging upon a moth

how much depends on the pink church!

no one to drive the car

↑ Index

300. Schuchat
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

---

there's nothing sentimental about a machine

↑ Index

301. maria damon
Re: imagination affirms reality
Wed 21 Aug 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> red wheelbarrow is full of plums, plunging upon a moth
>
> how much depends on
> the pink church!

>
> no one to drive the car

I will I will;
how pink was my crutch
how red my barrow
you died for my touch
i will die for thee tomarrow.

↑ Index

302. henry gould
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

> there's nothing sentimental about a machine

I'm a little sentimental about my typewriter, a green one-of-a-kind (screw-up) Sears Constellation - & the feeling's mutual.

↑ Index

303. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: sentimental
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Re: sentimental

. . . but "since the world is hollow, and dollie's stuffed with sawdust," I really do not think we had better expose our feelings . . .

Emily Dickinson (to her brother Austin, 1851).

--dbc

↑ Index

304. Jordan Davis
August by Dan Bouchard
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Ange Mlinko's magazine Compound Eye has dedicated its most recent issue (#10) to a long poem by Dan Bouchard, called "August." It is a very good look at Boston, and as I read it I was reminded of the work of such poets as Charles Reznikoff, Frank O'Hara, Robert Lowell, Beverly Dahlen, the list could go on quite a while, but what are influences anyway? Ghosts? Do you believe in ghosts? Like Ange, Dan pays close attention to what's going on, to what he knows, and how to make it all go together. The poem's nine pages (fifteen sections), this is section twelve:

Muffled shouts of neighbors

Boston is dank
and dirty like a drained fish tank

Skateboard kids learn their skateboard skill.

Boylston Street at five.

Someday anthropologists will discover the car alarm and realize how ridiculous we are,
but they will note seeing-eye dogs and know how ingenious we could be.

Stability or engineering erring

The suitability street corner of time

A place set

The dinner on the table

Ange is moving to Providence shortly, so probably the Compound Eye address (52 Park St, Somerville MA 02143) isn't durable. You can email me at [redacted] or Ange at [redacted] or Dan at [redacted] if you're interested in getting a copy.

Okay!
Jordan

Jordan Davis
46 E 7 # 10
NYC 10003
[redacted] "the brat guts aesthetic"
--Bob Perelman

↑ Index

305. Wendy McClure
Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Wed 21 Aug 1996

...if everyone can stand just a bit more tugging on the poetry slam thread (albeit hastily knotted to the teaching thread)...

> i find mself asking, to what do we owe such unmitigated bravery?..."

> Umitigated bravery is easy when your preaching to the converted. An audience at a slam could not be more converted. It's easy to read some witty verse deriding the state of society to a group of sympathizers but take that same poem out onto the street corner with a megaphone and see where the bravery lies. When this starts happening, that is when it will get interesting.
>
> cf

--just thinking about "unmitigated bravery" and "sympathizers," and also the extent to which confrontation figures into the currency of poetry slams --then to follow the notion of bravery (unmitigated and otherwise) amidst the already-converted, then to the unconverted... well, we might find the unconverted or the unsympathetic out on the street (as cf put it) but I couldn't help thinking of the classroom as well --not that I'm at all comfortable with the view of teaching poetry as missionary work but in my experience the feeling's been inevitable sometimes. While I'm all for the possibilities of slams, think they're a blast to attend, eagerly await evolving variations on the slam (as I've seen mentioned here) to show up in Chicago, any recs. anyone? ...still, I've noticed the double-standard a lot of students reveal when it comes to the reception of slam poetry and their receptiveness in the classroom --and the poetry I'm thinking of here is not so much the standard Norton stuff (from which slams provide a nice relief) but language and post-language and experimental work, in short, stuff which I consider in their issues and procedures to be confrontational --it seems a lot of the same students who go for the aggressive confrontation of slam poetry are the ones most resistant (or maybe not, maybe just the first ones to AGRESSIVELY voice their opinions, or else remain, like, passive-aggressively silent?) --or worse, they revert to easy dismissals (of pretentiousness, etc), for which I don't think slams are entirely responsible but I suspect in some instances tend to reinforce... anyway, hoping this is just an initial reaction on the students' part; when I've taught I've tried to put on a good show and likely have a performers' ego...

--WM (I've seen people sign w/ quotes so here's one re: the WCW disc.):

"I know my chicken,
you've got to know your chicken."

--Cibo

Matto

↑ Index

306. Joseph Lease
Re: August by Dan Bouchard
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Re: Jordan on August by Dan Bouchard

--I think it's an extremely strong poem, very sharp with perception and rhythm--

--everyone should read it--

All Best,
Joseph

↑ Index

307. Ira Lightman
Stockhausen in New York
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Hi folks,

As someone who's posted often to this list about the poetics I think are derivable from Stockhausen rather than his contemporary Cage, here's a news flash one-off (I won't do it again!)

ATTENTION NEW YORK STOCKHAUSEN FANS

From midnight August 22 until 5:00 am August 23, WKCR-FM New York 89.9
will present the music of Karlheinz Stockhausen for 29 uninterrupted hours in celebration of his 68th birthday.
We will broadcast lengthy pieces such as Hymnen, Kurzwellen, Sternklang and Stimmung that regular programming schedules do not permit etc. E-mail [redacted] for info....

... transcribed from Stockhausen home
page.

Recommended!

Ira Lightman

↑ Index

308. maria damon
Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Wed 21 Aug 1996

---

wendy mcclure writes:
>
> --just thinking about "unmitigated bravery" and "sympathizers," and also the > extent to which confrontation figures into the currency of poetry slams
> --then to follow the notion of bravery (unmitigated and otherwise) amidst the > already-converted, then to the unconverted... well, we might find the > unconverted or the unsympathetic out on the street (as cf put it) but I > couldn't help thinking of the classroom as well --not that I'm at all > comfortable with the view of teaching poetry as missionary work but in my > experience the feeling's been inevitable sometimes. While I'm all for the > possibilities of slams, think they're a blast to attend, eagerly await > evolving variations on the slam (as I've seen mentioned here) to show up in > Chicago, any recs. anyone? ...still, I've noticed the double-standard a lot > of students reveal when it comes to the reception of slam poetry and their > receptiveness in the classroom --and the poetry I'm thinking of here is not > so much the standard Norton stuff (from which slams provide a nice relief) > but language and post-language and experimental work, in short, stuff which I > consider in their issues and procedures to be confrontational --it seems a > lot of the same students who go for the aggressive confrontation of slam > poetry are the ones most resistant (or maybe not, maybe just the first ones > to AGRESSIVELY voice their opinions, or else remain, like, > passive-aggressively silent?) --or worse, they revert to easy dismissals (of > pretentiousness, etc), for which I don't think slams are entirely > responsible but I suspect in some instances tend to reinforce... anyway, > hoping this is just an initial reaction on the students' part; when I've > taught I've tried to put on a good show and likely have a performers' ego...
>
interesting thots. i used to have the same problem w/ resistance to langpo" in the class room etc., and don't know why it's changed, maybe because i tend to teach "women language poets" which gives a graspable ideological handle for why language must be challenged from the ground up; or maybe it's cuz i'm teaching
more advanced undergrads for the most part. a lot of my students just like anything oppositional, so long as they understand the terms of the oppositionality. also, i teach folks like tracie morris and ntozake shange, who are sort of "inbetween" cases, in that they definitely defamiliarize what students have come to expect of "poetic language," and are challenging to listen as performers, but also have some discernible oratorical and vernacular tradition that bridge the gap between the wholly unfamiliar and the verbal simplicity of much "people's" poetry" and middlebrow stuff like frost, rich and sexton. also frank o'hara. some find his "cliquishness" to be "elitist" (minnesotans' favorite putdown) while others find it liberating to see what poetry can be and what constitutes legitimate material for poetic content.

↑ Index

309. George Bowering
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

& the elegance of the theorem is precisely >in the tenuous balance the writer achieves by TRYING to say many >things at once in a flying formation.
. - Henry Gould

I guess we just have differing notions of where poems come from. I dont feel as if a poem is the evidence of something I am trying to say. In fact, during the composition of such a thing, I am not aware of my trying to say something; rather, I am trying to hear something, and get something down.

George Bowering.

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

--Tristan Tzara

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

310. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

On Wed, 21 Aug 1996 11:25:58 -0700 George Bowering said:
>I guess we just have differing notions of where poems come from. I dont >feel as if a poem is the evidence of something I am trying to say. In fact, >during the composition of such a thing, I am not aware of my trying to say >something; rather, I am trying to hear something, and get something down.

At least we're both trying. Probably very trying. - HG

↑ Index

311. George Bowering
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

> there's nothing sentimental about a machine
>
> I'm a little sentimental about my typewriter, a green one-of-a-kind (screw-up) Sears Constellation - & the feeling's mutual.

Your typewriter doesnt have any feeling for you; it just thinks it has.

George Bowering.

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

--Tristan Tzara

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

312. Tony Green
Scandalous Olson at Berkeley?
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Dear Ron,

the position of eye-witness is shown to be what it is by your comment on the Berkeley Poetry Conference: dependent on the preparedness of the eye-witness.

Wystan gave me a copy of the original printing of the Olson reading, one that he had found in San Francisco in the 70's. Innocently, I had not realised -- until it was mentioned by you -- that there was any scandal attached to it. Far far from the action I had assumed that it was understood at the time and at the place.

It seemed to me to raise the question of what was the poem and what was the reading, where to draw the line. Was it the whole performance of the poet live on the platform. The kind of ruminating thought and the writing of poems in Olson's practice seemed to converge there. The cries of "read the poem" etc from audience seemed to speak to a confusion about what the condition of making poetry was, extending as it did there to a long improvisation, which from time to time included the occasional reading of already written and printed products of this process. (Criticised and revised as a process in the Beloit lectures.) That was scandalous?

Although it does not coincide with practices of quertzblatz poetry of the later 70s and 80s, which appeared to prefer constructed texts to improvisation, does this practice of Olson's (as I understood it) seem to be scandalous anymore? To whom was it scandalous in 1965? Was it scandalous that the improvisations were critical and in a broad sense philosophical and sometimes commenting on politics and not in verse form, therefore "not poetry"? Would it be scandalous to the slammers?

best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

313. Tony Green
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

---

and he had a shampoo too, that's what the water is doing in the poem

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

314. Tony Green
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Henry, Re things and no things in red weel barrow poem(s) No contradiction, maybe a little paradox. The poem, is full and empty, made of words and spaces, not of things. The "things" are what you put into an image you make reading the poems. Even those are not things in any very secure sense. This is further proof of the difficulty of speaking adequately about representations, mediation and/or figuration. One way to handle that is to have regard both for the process of making a representation and the process of "reading" one, trying to maintain what clarity one can all the way. This is not made easier by using the term "things", but harder, as this exchange shows all too clearly.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

315. Tony Green
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Henry, some more: "Is this standard way of reading poems now?" ---?@#%ed if I know. (How would I know, I don't read poems for a living? " Que scais-je? " with a cedilla.)

My business with this is the common problem in the arts, representation". What is the common understanding then of reading/writing,
it is not moving through text?
t is not surprising that the figure of a "writer"
occurs to the reader
as a centre for coherence of text, but the "writer"
is limited to being a figure appearing to the reader.
Isn't that so? Dr Williams cannot cure you of uncertainty as to the meaning of the text, I suppose.

But isn't it also the case that the "reader" is also a similar "figure", not a single centered "I", rather something called into existence by the text. Coping with the text, or not, is, in that case, a matter of how effectively you can be the necessary kind of "reader" figure to read that text.

This is how I figure it, but I suppose this is a complicated kind of answer for e-mail. And subject to really too many unanswered questions.

best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

316. Christina Fairbank Chirot chickens
Wed 21 Aug 1996

> Hey! I thought that was Bob Dole's job, trashin teachers . . .
>
> A teacher can also teach you "to find out for yourself".
>
> It is not they duty to complete the work, > nor art thou free to desist from it.
>
> Love work, hate mastery.
>
> --Rabbinical sayings

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

317. Tony Green
Re: red Indian barrow
Wed 21 Aug 1996

George, "hearing something" and "getting it down" squares with my understanding of what goes on. I believe there is a confusion about purposes emerging (Henry's confusion, not yours, needless to say). There is a certain satisfaction in philosophically analytical writing in applying rhetoric to getting an argument made effectively. Reading that writing that does that, one asks all the time about the implications for an argument of what is being said, the significance and multiplicities and ambiguities of "words" meanign of words used as "counters" or "terms.

The poetries that aim to set down language (thought?) as it occurs are not usually so concerned with words as terms in an argument. Trying to read them as if they were, and taking the prose of analytical argument and communication as standard and universal produces Henry's sense that WCW in red wheel things has cunningly compressed a lot of argumentation or argumentative thinking.

Hi, Henry are you still there? best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

318. filch
Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Wed 21 Aug 1996

Wendy writes

"...still, I've noticed the double-standard a lot of students reveal when it comes to the reception of slam poetry and their receptiveness in the classroom --and the poetry I'm thinking of here is not so much the standard Norton stuff (from which slams provide a nice relief) but language and post-language and experimental work, in short, stuff which I consider in their issues and procedures to be confrontational --it seems a lot of the same students who go for the aggressive confrontation of slam poetry are the ones most resistant (or maybe not, maybe just the first ones to AGRESSIVELY voice their opinions, or else remain, like, passive-aggressively silent?) --or worse, they revert to easy dismissals (of pretentiousness, etc), for which I don't think slams are entirely responsible but I suspect in some instances tend to reinforce..."

I think this is pretty straightforward. Following on the heels of the thread concerning red wheelbarrows and even the reference to the rap of Snap! it follows that the majority of teaching when it comes to the introduction of poetry in the United States at a young age comes through the filter of "this is what the poet is trying to say" and "this is the coding necessary to understand that poem". Both of these statements set in place the mindset and world view for both rap and slam poetry. Rap / slam has as one of its defining attributes an active hostility to the notion of coding. The defining attribute is IMHO narrative and any poem which subverts or too easily confuses the narrative thrust is suspect and falls beyond the pale for the genre of rap / slam.

The methodology of "this is what the poet is trying to say" and "this is the coding necessary to understand that poem" is disempowering to the reader and serves as the political springboard for rap / slam which has as its concern the destruction of this disempowerment. The case 'may' be accurately represented that once a child has gotten to the point where they are empowered with language and feeling 'in control' poetry is introduced in a manner which "disempowers" them by delegating control of the coding process to the authority figure of the teacher.

Crude rhyming and inelegant wordplay are quite often the 'language' point used to support the 'political' point of empowerment and releasing of rage because this complex serves as antidote to the aforementioned methodology. The points of empowerment follow closely the narrative thrust because it is neccessary to show that "you understand what's going on" despite assurances from the teacher (poetry), politician (society), preacher (spirituality), that "you don't know what's going on" unless you are given the key (i.e. coding). It follows as well that rhyming and alliteration, etc. are the tools employed because it is absolutely necessary that the tools of the oppressor - subjugation, rhyme, alliteration et al. be used to defeat those who would disempower 'you'.

Given this reading, IMHO, it makes perfect sense why langpo is received with hostility within the genre / world view of rap / slam.

yours until we bleed,
cf

↑ Index

319. Peter Quartermain
Re: the well-read barrow yet again
Wed 21 Aug 1996

At 03:27 PM 8/20/96 EDT, Henry wrote:

> in a poem, like other forms
> of communication, but sealed in writing, the author may be trying to say
> about a dozen things at the same time. & sealing that in writing is not > so easy, may take some trying. Especially if you're trying to say things > that are not so obvious,

I may have missed a few posts on this, since this, Henry, but I think your phrasing here sure opens a can of worms.

1. I'm not at all persuaded that a poem is a "form of communication," -- or rather, I'm not at all sure what exactly "communication" might mean when it comes to poems -- not, I'd say, the sort of instrumental language of "Doctor, I get a pain just here when I put my left elbow in my Mouth" kind of thing, nor even that of "The whites have slaughtered the Indians" (not that anyone here, I know, has been suggesting this is the "theme" of that Indian Barrow). A poem is a machine made of words, I thought. Perhaps in the sense of Hamlet, to Ophelia, "Yours, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet."

2. Ditto re "sealed in writing." This suggests, does it not, some sort of immutability to a "message" or "content" that the poem somehow, hmmm, "contains"? Or does "sealed" mean "hermetically" and therefore "inaccessibly" sealed?

3. My own reading practice involves -- at least in part and so far as I am able without being utterly pedantic about it (whatever pedantic means here -- probably means "until I can't be bothered any more") -- an attempt to "historicize" the text: for instance (though this is clearly a childish and utterly simplistic example) was "red" associated with revolution or with communism in 1921 when WCW wrote the poem (we all know the answer to that one, of course)? This is important to me because it's self-evident to me that I know "more" than the poet knew -- by "more" here I mean something as simple as "what the poet did not [and perhaps could not] know," and sometimes we (I) need to rescue the poem from our knowledge. The corollary is obvious: the poet knew "more" than I do..

At the same time, though, my own response when I read the poem -- especially but not only for the first time -- may or may not have anything to do with the actual compositional circumstance and history of the poem: the words say what they say. The first time I read any Jabes, for instance, I had no idea AT ALL who he was, thought he was possibly Spanish or even Biblical. And that image of him still sticks, willynilly, when I think of him / his work.

And what then is getting "communicated"? It seems to me that when Bruce Andrews writes, as a complete poem, "lost & found", he shows with great exactitude how what is "communicated" depends on the context of the hearer/reader as well as of the utterer/writer: meaning depends on context, I think Maria

Damon said on another thread not too long ago, and it sure as sure doesn't exist "out there" somewhere, all us poor folks scrambling round to find out what it is so we don't get left out in the cold when gift-giving time comes round.

But of course, what I say is too simple anyway. Henry, or should I say Mike Boughn?, you opened up an inexhaustible can of worms.

This post may be a little heavy-duty I guess for the great delights I've seen in this thread so far, but I don't apologise for that.

Peter
+ +
Peter Quartermain
128 East 23rd Avenue
Vancouver
B.C.
Canada V5V 1X2
Voice and fax: [redacted]

+ +

↑ Index

320. David Benedetti
So much depends
Wed 21 Aug 1996

So many adult diapers
upon the red wheelbarrow

↑ Index

321. Tenney Nathanson
one block over
Thu 22 Aug 1996

> Date: Tue, 20 Aug 1996 23:44:34 -0700
> From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: red Indian barrow
>
> Besides it's obvious as a doctor, Williams, with that red and white, > was really thinking about red and white blood corpuscles.
>
> Tony Green,
>
> No, no, no. You will remember back before you and I were born, barbers were > also surgeons--hence the white and red barber's pole. Williams the doctor was thinking about getting a haircut, and came upon this poem. The barber always asked him how he wanted the sides, and you have seen pictures of WCW. He always said, "Oh, bare," which said backward is of course "barrow."

someplace in the neighborhood of this thread belongs Kenneth Koch's story of doing a mini-residency somewhere, and attending a lecture, about his work, in which the professor carefully explicated "Permanently" to his students: the noun representing Christ, the adjective the Holy Ghost (or whatever); & etc.

others might have heard the story more recently and be able to tell it better.

↑ Index

322. Tenney Nathanson
Tangents R Us
Thu 22 Aug 1996

Ron (S) wrote:

> Duncan was the poetry consultant to the rare books collection there (which is how they got some of those great Spicer letter/newspapers, for example). The fellow who actually coordinated it, Richard Baker, old MBA grad out of Harvard, went on to become Richard Baker-roshi, head of the SF Zen Center for many years, now somewhere in the southwest I believe. I doubt he did much in the way of archival stuff -- that's not his way.

does anyone actually know what SW spot Baker-roshi is actually in?

"just this this"

Tenney

↑ Index

323. Tenney Nathanson
my cat Geoffrey
Thu 22 Aug 1996

Peter Q wrote:

> 1. I'm not at all persuaded that a poem is a "form of communication," -- or rather, I'm not at all sure what exactly "communication" might mean when it comes to poems --

re which see a great essay, Hartman's "IA Richards and the Dream of Communication" (in /The Fate of Reading/? or /Beyond Formalism/?)

↑ Index

324. Michael Boughn
Re: my cat Geoffrey
Thu 22 Aug 1996

> Peter Q wrote:
>
> 1. I'm not at all persuaded that a poem is a "form of communication," -- or rather, I'm not at all sure what exactly "communication" might mean when it comes to poems --
>
> re which see a great essay, Hartman's "IA Richards and the Dream of Communication" (in /The Fate of Reading/? or /Beyond Formalism/?)

Yeah. It's in _The Fate of Reading_.

↑ Index

325. henry
Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Thu 22 Aug 1996

On Wed, 21 Aug 1996 13:11:13 -0800 filch said:
>
>The methodology of "this is what the poet is trying to say" and "this is >the coding necessary to understand that poem" is disempowering to the >reader and serves as the political springboard for rap / slam which has as >its concern the destruction of this disempowerment. The case 'may' be >accurately represented that once a child has gotten to the point where they >are empowered with language and feeling 'in control' poetry is introduced >in a manner which "disempowers" them by delegating control of the coding >process to the authority figure of the teacher.

There's a lot of truth to this, but it also seems one-dimensional to read the classroom simply as a power structure and poems as power codes.
It sets up a binary "dialectic", like beats & new critics, that makes for easy academic readings after the fact ("codes"?), with beats & new critics completely symbiotic (where would the beats be without their establishment foils? where would slams be without high school english class? etc.) I remember nothing more boring, depressing & disempowering than 9th grade english teach asking, "Well, what's the poet trying to say here?" But then again, there's always the option to take him or her up on the call & "try" to figure it out.
>
>coding). It follows as well that rhyming and alliteration, etc. are the >tools employed because it is absolutely necessary that the tools of the >oppressor - subjugation, rhyme, alliteration et al. be used to defeat those >who would disempower 'you'.

This is ironic because a lot of the "coding" in traditional poetry that is the most interesting is political coding, that "tries" to undermine specific political oppressors & social repressions. They who have ears to hear, let them hear (saith the preacher). - Henry Gould

↑ Index

326. Rachel Loden
Re: Scandalous Olson at Berkeley?
Thu 22 Aug 1996

Tony Green wrote (in part):

> Although it does not coincide with practices of quertzblatz poetry of the later 70s and 80s, which appeared to prefer constructed texts to improvisation, does this practice of Olson's (as I understood it) seem to be scandalous anymore? To whom was it scandalous in 1965?

I don't know about scandalous, but I can say that it was extremely upsetting to Robert Duncan on that occasion--he left the reading.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

327. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Thu 22 Aug 1996

On Thu, 22 Aug 1996 08:35:36 GMT+1200 Tony Green said:
>
> My business with this is
>the common problem in the arts, >representation". What is the common
>understanding then of reading/writing,
>it is not moving through text?
>t is not surprising that the figure of a "writer"
> occurs to the reader
>as a centre for coherence of text, but the "writer"
> is limited to being a figure appearing to the reader.
> Isn't that so? Dr Williams cannot >cure you of uncertainty as to the meaning of the text, I suppose.
>
>But isn't it also the case that the "reader" is also a similar

>"figure", not a single centered "I", rather something called into existence >by the text. Coping with the text, or not, is, in that case, a matter >of how effectively you can be the necessary kind of "reader" figure >to read that text.

This all makes a lot of sense to me. I'm one on this list well-known for re-stating new critical truisms as though deconstruction etc. never happened. Master-oversimplificator. But in spite of uncertainty, I still tend to read poems on a basic level, as a practitioner. & as a practitioner I'm moving in certain directions, drawing on past methods & hangups & patterns, & adding new things, & I tend to read other poets the same way - & try to see what they're doing. Mandelstam writes about future literary studies as pursuing the "impulse" behind the text. Maybe that's part (only part) of what he's talking about. (It certainly isn't an autobiographical impulse he's referring to.) - Henry Gould

↑ Index

328. henry
Re: red Indian barrow
Thu 22 Aug 1996

On Thu, 22 Aug 1996 08:53:07 GMT+1200 Tony Green said:
>
> The poetries that aim to set down language (thought?) as it occurs >are not usually so concerned with words as terms in an argument.
>Trying to read them as if they were, and taking the prose of analytical >argument and communication as standard and universal produces Henry's >sense that WCW in red wheel things has cunningly compressed a lot of >argumentation or argumentative thinking.
>
>Hi, Henry are you still there? best

Am I still here? Why, all of us from Zircon-12 never leave our e-posts. The fourth eyeball helps (replaceable). I don't see it as exactly hearing something, nor as compressed argument. More like weaving or architecture - a lot of strands that suddenly find conjunctions that hold each other up in an artful (pseudo-argumentative) way. - HG

↑ Index

329. henry
Re: the well-read barrow yet again
Thu 22 Aug 1996

On Wed, 21 Aug 1996 15:00:38 -0700 Peter Quartermain said:
>At 03:27 PM 8/20/96 EDT, Henry wrote:

>
>I may have missed a few posts on this, since this, Henry, but I think your >phrasing here sure opens a can of worms.

well, as Shakespeare tries to tell us, "a poem, forsooth - tis but a can of worms made of words."

> Indian Barrow). A poem is a machine made of words, I thought. Perhaps in the sense of Hamlet, to Ophelia, "Yours, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet."

Machines can talk. Some even have feelings - just ask my typewriter.
>
>2. Ditto re "sealed in writing." This suggests, does it not, some sort of >immutability to a "message" or "content" that the poem somehow, hmmm, >"contains"? Or does "sealed" mean "hermetically" and therefore
>"inaccessibly" sealed?

Mandelstam: "I say again: I will liken the poem to an Egyptian ship of the dead, in which everything necessary for life is stored."

> At the same time, though, my own response when I read the poem -- especially but not only for the first time -- may or may not have anything to do with the actual compositional circumstance and history of the poem: the words say what they say. The first time I read any Jabes, for instance, I had no idea AT ALL who he was, thought he was possibly Spanish or even Biblical. And that image of him still sticks, willynilly, when I think of him / his work.

I agree with you. This is what I said in a post yesterday: there's the impulse of the poet, there's the free poem itself, there's what the reader brings to it.
>
>And what then is getting "communicated"? It seems to me that when Bruce >Andrews writes, as a complete poem, "lost & found", he shows with great >exactitude how what is "communicated" depends on the context of the >hearer/reader as well as of the utterer/writer: meaning depends on context,

That's what makes the poet's job interesting. It's why s/he has to "try" so hard.
- HG

↑ Index

330. Rachel Loden
Re: Berkeley 1965
Thu 22 Aug 1996

Libbie,

Ron was 18, I was 17 (and didn't know Ron, or anyone else; some things don't change). Since I had been wrapped up in the Don Allen anthology--to the point of having to hold it together with a rubber band--being in rooms with these people had me completely agog. In retrospect I can see that it was a bit of a childhood fantasy: watching a book come to life. Unfortunately, because I was 17, half the time I had no idea what I was seeing/hearing. Stuff I remember vividly (be warned that this will have the spotty quality of real memory):

Creeley and I believe Dorn in a small classroom, and Creeley commenting on the irony and perhaps pity of holding this event at the University of California (this in the context of the Free Speech Movement, of course).

Sitting right behind Bobbie Creeley in that small classroom. Why is this as available as yesterday? Perhaps because I was in a state of near-religious ecstasy...I mean, the actual Bobbie of _For Love_ (okay, you can laugh). Beatrice.

Duncan sweeping around in his cape. His extremely--eccentric--reading style. Walking from one place to another with the group, and noticing Robin Blaser's beauty.

Ted Berrigan reading. A revelation! (Went home and ordered a mimeo, I think, copy of _The Sonnets_, heartbreakingly eaten by insects on the island of Oahu circa 1977.)

Lenore Kandel reading, I think at the same event? In this case not so much the poetry, but the energy, the buzz from the breaking of language taboos. Probably also vivid because it is a woman speaking.

The Olson reading: mostly I can just see that commanding figure. I had no idea of the subtext, and remember being somewhat outraged by the audience. Duncan walked out (with others?). I took notes during all of this (and during the conference as a whole) but can only shudder to think what sort of notes I might have taken at 17. May be able to find these if I undertake an archaeological dig of my notebooks.

Watching Kenneth Anger movies. This can't have been part of the event proper, but I think a lot of poetry people were there.

And that's about it for the vivid stuff. I paid $45 at an office on Oxford St., I think, for all this--I know it was $45 because I still have my ticket (according to the ticket, which does specify "Berkeley Poetry Conference [Seminars] July 12-23, 1965," there was also a $25 option). I keep thinking that somebody might want to use this ticket if there's ever an exhibit on the conference. Let me know.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

331. Jordan Davis
"this is the coding necessary to understand that poem"
Thu 22 Aug 1996

I'm not prepared to accept this subject line as a baseline for the discussion of poetry. As Maria pointed out or quoted earlier (and I'm sure I'm bending the meaning) there is an aesthetic judgment in every judgment--and since we can read anything in terms of any category--for instance, the picture of a self we get from Bruce Andrews, society in Susan Howe, passion in Paul Muldoon--and I'm probably not prepared to accept someone else's we, either--since anything can be read in terms of any category, a reader, one has to decide whether to do the charitable thing and decode the categories the writer is choosing to work in, on, through, or whether to read the writer's work in contexts of one's own devising. This latter choice I take it leads to that hallucinatory wheelbarrow. Does it lead there necessarily? Or is there a set of critical selves one can bounce among that will occasionally push one into the bumpers of the writer's categories and then into the bonus targets of the world.

CODES AT WORK (PLAY?) HERE:
reading as pinball wheelbarrow thread (dbc, gb, hg, tg, pq, md, cf, etc)
the "bruce problem"
"the brat guts aesthetic"
Critique of Judgment
Isenberg, Mothersill

Which is to say, you read, you have taste, a taste anyway, and you argue for it. One does. Does it preexist, does it develop, bleagh. Not the issue. The issue is that it is there, one participates in one's own taste, even when one rejects bland unexamined instances of other peoples' taste or 'sensibility'. So. One is open to evaluation on the terms of all categories at all times. That is, one is available to be read by anybody always already cough. One may wish to resist, to preserve the integrity of that reading through closing gestures, error, erasure, hermeticism, ironic cuteness/ugliness, but this may prove to be paranoia. What is at stake in any reading, what power is there, why am I for one struggling so much to achieve it/dismantle it. I suppose asking questions is the best way to centralize power. Was Kurt Cobain a practitioner of the New Sentence? Are you still reading. Is that a question it is important to ask? Shall we overpraise the present and be done with it. Am I grateful for the simultaneous expansion of vocabulary and relaxation of the sentence. Yes. I am grateful for the opportunity to use any word I hear in any sort of sentence I want to write. Am I even more grateful for the words I like best, and the opportunity not to finish my sentences. Yes I am even more grateful. Why. Because those give me more. That is, the cadence, the development of the cadence. Grr. Does one feel the urge to be 'compulsively readable'. Break it up. Does one feel the urge to ride a power mower. Oar hour. Does one have to include more or less than is expected. Does one have to include exactly as much as expected. Who is expecting? Blush. No, no news. But what if there were. Would it be verboten, aesthetically, intellectually? What part of the bandwidth permits that news its nonstatistical centrality. This does seem a live issue. I am not asking. Pause.

Jordan

Jordan Davis
46 E 7 # 10
NYC 10003
[redacted]

and moved to the burbs, where we eat wild blueberries every night and shoot raccoons.
--Ange Mlinko

↑ Index

332. Jonathan A Levin
Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Thu 22 Aug 1996

A few thoughts on coding:

1) Is rap really that transparent? I often find myself smiling at my ignorance as I listen to it. Coding doesn't strike me as uniquely a tool of power in that sense. Think, too, of the codedness of early Stein, about which Catherine Stimpson has written well.

2) Probably the experience that got me into this mess was "decoding" poems (and novels) in high school. I remember Kubla Khan in particular: we had a field day. Of course, I had a good teacher, and that makes all the difference. But the message was unmistakeably, there's more here than meets the eye. He--Mr. Moceri, for the record, aka Mr. Mo, of Parkway North Senior High, Creve Coeur, MO--had a way of just reading the poem aloud that nudged us to come to terms with what more might in fact be there.

So, framing my answer in good Jeopardy fashion, isn't there a difference between the impetus to decode (which, it seems to me, we have to do all the time, in life and in poems) and the spirit in which we go about our decoding (roughly, liberally or restrictively)?

Best to all--

Jonathan Levin

By the way: went to one slam about four or five years ago and had a wonderful time--it made more of an impression on me than most readings. Maggie Estep won (at the Nuyorican), deservedly. It was excellent theatre. I have to admit, I don't absorb poetry terribly well at readings, but I remember an astonishing amount of poetry from that night, including one introductory piece (out of competition) that began, roughly, The lions at the New York Public Library roar at me when I walk by them. Anybody know who/what that was? What was so striking was the way this relatively small guy (as I remember him, at least) let loose this, well, roar of words. I was convinced, immediately, that these folks were restoring something vital.

↑ Index

333. maria damon
Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Thu 22 Aug 1996

---

jlevin writes:
> A few thoughts on coding:
>
> 1) Is rap really that transparent? I often find myself smiling at my > ignorance as I listen to it. Coding doesn't strike me as uniquely a tool > of power in that sense. Think, too, of the codedness of early Stein, > about which Catherine Stimpson has written well.

i agree; rap is often delivered at a speed and with vernacular inflections that act as real defamiliarizations (for me anyway) of a language i usually think i know. and isn't "defamiliarization" an old r-formalist hobby horse characteristic of "literary"/poetic language? sometimes its messages appear to be straightforward expressions of anger (fuck tha police etc) but there's much more to it than that, lots of intertextuality (sampling) that presumes a deep insider knowledge etc... md

↑ Index

334. Gwyn McVay
Chax e-mail?
Thu 22 Aug 1996

Hey poetics people,

Please indulge one who's been ill--can Charles Alexander still be reached at [redacted], or does he have a new e-address to go with his "real" address in spatial "reality"?

Gwyn McVay

↑ Index

335. Julia Stein

Re: POETICS Digest - 20 Aug 1996 to 21 Aug 1996

Thu 22 Aug 1996

> Libbie asks re the 1965 Berkeley poetry conference, Perhaps there are people on the list who were there who would >like to share their experiences?
>>
>I was at the Berkeley poetry conference as an eighteen year old. It was also >my first poetry reading, first poetry conference, etc. It was right after I >got arrested at Free Speech Movement in December so the spring had a certain >magical feeling as the whole campus was changing. It seemed like the whole >universe was changing quickly--a very wacky and wonderful feeling of the >universe opening up.

The poetry conference fit right in. I remember the Ginsberg reading was packed. I mean packed. Ginsberg read this incredible poem about just being crowned king of May in Prague by the Czech students, then getting arrested by the Czech police, thrown onto to plane & thrown out of the country. He was yelling & angry & tremendous. His reading was part of the zeitgeist--here at Berkeley we students had stood up & gotten arrested. And in Czechoslovakia the Czech students had also stood up & had to face their police. Ginsberg's reading was a preview of coming attractions.

I also heard Lenore Kendale--she was the only woman poet I remember. I was fascinated to hear her read in a poem about washing dishes! Terrific. I hadn't read any woman poets before. Now here was a live woman poet! Inspring!

I heard Olsen read--is that what you meant by Olsen's speech? I didn't know who he was--just knew about the beats.He was a Big Man. He read & drank from a bottle of whiskey in one of the auditoriums. It was shocking and wonderful, as you weren't supposed to drink whiskey in a classroom. He kept on reading & drinking. He got drunk. We in the audience loved it. A little dean in a suit came in, to try to stop the reading. We in the audience were against him & with the Big Drunken Poet. The little dean (I called him a deanlet) went up the the Big Poet & tried to get him to stop. We in the audience booed. The little dean slunk away in deafeat. We in the audience felt: another victory for students! Olsen kept reading and drinking. It was a wonderful experience--oh yes, it fit right into the zeitgest. Bye, Julie

↑ Index

336. william marsh
Re: argument
Thu 22 Aug 1996

> The poetries that aim to set down language (thought?) as it occurs are not usually so concerned with words as terms in an argument. Trying to read them as if they were, and taking the prose of analytical argument and communication as standard and universal produces Henry's sense that WCW in red wheel things has cunningly compressed a lot of argumentation or argumentative thinking.

Tony and others -- this particular strain (poetry and argument) has always interested me. I'm wondering to what extent a poem like WCW's (and much of his work) can be read as argumentative without relying on the standards of analytical argument and communication that otherwise might inform a reading. To disagree a bit, i find that many of the poetries that "aim to set down language (thought) as it occurs" are very much concerned with words as terms in an argument. But admittedly, the nature of the argument is a bit different, skewed from the conventional sense of how argumentative rhetoric works. I'm thinking of the work of Lyn Hejinian and bpNichol in particular (tho there are several other possible examples)--two strategies in writing that i would say approach language from an argumentative angle, Hejinian's through the logic (illogic) of association, Nichol's through paragrammatic play--but both "following a line" to suggest a point or several points (if not a neatly resolved conclusion). A good reading on my part leads to a place where i "get the argument," although i may not be able to trace its development via conventional modes (cause/effect, etc.). So i wonder how a statement like "all writing is argumentative" would be met and challenged. For me it would be helpful to expand the notion of argument to include more than just the Aristotelian variety.

bill marsh

↑ Index

337. Henry Gould
Re: argument
Thu 22 Aug 1996

Interesting bk on this is Jonathan Kertzer, Poetic Argument McGill-Queens U. Press, 1988. though I think he takes narrower position than you (values poems that make some kind of real argument). (I could be wrong - read it a long time ago!)

also think of von Hallberg's book on Olson where he talks about 1st part of Maximus as in form of classical oration.
- Monk #12-b flat

↑ Index

338. Christina Fairbank Chirot
c/od-ing, hide in plain sight
Thu 22 Aug 1996

---

re: c/od-ing; Hide in plain sight

Not only do the words change meanings but meanings vary locally at the same time. A final glossary, there, cannot be made of words whose intentions are fugitive.

William S.Burroughs, Junkie

(Insofar as nobody loves my dashes anyway, I'll use regular punctuation for the new illiterate generation.)

Jack Kerouac, Vanity of Duluoz

Gertrude Stein wrote that on first seeing camouflaged tanks, Picasso said, It is we who made that.

There are many essays on the problem of determing what is rock art and what is simply natural formations and markings made by weather and chemical interactions among minerals.

Who runs may read
--Gertrue Stein

And read
where thou art
--Ronald Johnson
--dbchirot

↑ Index

339. filch
Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Thu 22 Aug 1996

I did not mean to imply that rap was transparent. Nor is slam poetry transparent. I was directly referring to the disparaging remarks earlier in this thread concerning "tacky rhymes" at slams as emblematic of the genre.

The coding of rap is an extremely interesting topic. I still believe it is distinctly different in intent than coding in langpo.

"act as real defamiliarizations (for me anyway) of a language i usually think i know." Very good point.

> 1) Is rap really that transparent? I often find myself smiling at my ignorance as I listen to it. Coding doesn't strike me as uniquely a tool of power in that sense. Think, too, of the codedness of early Stein, about which Catherine Stimpson has written well.

↑ Index

340. Judy Roitman

Re: argument

Thu 22 Aug 1996

Instead of "argumentative," how about "didactic"?

> Tony and others -- this particular strain (poetry and argument) has always interested me. I'm wondering to what extent a poem like WCW's (and much of his work) can be read as argumentative without relying on the standards of analytical argument and communication that otherwise might inform a reading. To disagree a bit, i find that many of the poetries that "aim to set down language (thought) as it occurs" are very much concerned with words as terms in an argument. But admittedly, the nature of the argument is a bit different, skewed from the conventional sense of how argumentative rhetoric works. I'm thinking of the work of Lyn Hejinian and bpNichol in particular (tho there are several other possible examples)--two strategies in writing that i would say approach language from an argumentative angle, Hejinian's through the logic (illogic) of association, Nichol's through paragrammatic play--but both "following a line" to suggest a point or several points (if not a neatly resolved conclusion). A good reading on my part leads to a place where i "get the argument," although i may not be able to trace its development via conventional modes (cause/effect, etc.). So i wonder how a statement like "all writing is argumentative" would be met and challenged. For me it would be helpful to expand the notion of argument to include more than just the Aristotelian variety.
>
> bill marsh

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

341. Joe Amato
Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom
Thu 22 Aug 1996

yeah, that's just it---from one pov, it's ALL coded... one dominant gradient in our public discourses asks us to construe meaning-making as a process of en/decoding... part of this is a consequence (broadly) of information technologies... you've all heard this before---'the information is encoded, transmitted through a conduit, and emerges at the other end to be decoded'... but to say this is to recognize, as well, the specifically political dimension of communications apparatus... b/c the question, as a few folks have suggested, becomes a matter of who possesses the intelligence or counterintelligence cheat-sheet---who's doing the en/decoding?...

nevertheless, this is a powerful means of manipulating demographics, of transforming specific information into specific insider(-outsider) knowledges...

what it's all about, in more dystopic terms, is constructing audiences-markets predisposed to responding (or consuming) along certain coordinates---political speeches, cereal boxes, poems, what have you... i don't wish at all to naysay anybody's particular transgressive-resistance hobbyhorse---but so long as you play primarily to this latter grid, you're probably enjoying the interpretive fruits of a statistically-conceived reality the likes of which one sees at work in every nook and cranny of a vegas casino...

some of what comes out of such transactions can be of value, yes...

now, whether or how meaning is made is not necessarily the same thing as persuasion... but if you persuade folks to make meaning in accordance with an a=b rhetoric (-logic), it's likely their general response to the meaning process itself can eventually be controlled... that is, you persuade folks to accept thus & so as persuasion, however familiarizing or defamiliarizing...

it seems to me that, in general, the performative these days seems to be taken as itself (regardless what's said or acted or ____) a measure of persuasive validity... again: elizabeth dole may only have simulated a get-down-and-dirty-with-the-people talk, but it mattered little---the gesture itself, by stepping outside of standard performance criteria for convention speeches, rec'd goo-goo-eyed acclaim even by more experienced broadcast journalists...

which i trust won't be taken as an argument against persuasive poetics as such...

joe

↑ Index

342. Tony Green
Re: argument
Thu 22 Aug 1996

---

re William Marsh on argumentation: yep, MORE than the Aristotelian variety, will do for a start. Or the Cartesian variety? Argument in Lucretius is a classic instance isn't it of an argumentational poetry? (or so I somewhat vaguely recall).

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

343. Tony Green
Re: argument
Thu 22 Aug 1996

I like "didactic" in there as a possible alternative, Judy. Could you say some more? best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

344. Peter Quartermain
Re: argument
Thu 22 Aug 1996

At 10:15 AM 8/23/96 GMT+1200, Tony Green wrote

> Argument in > Lucretius is a classic instance isn't it of an argumentational > poetry? (or so I somewhat vaguely recall).

So's Samuel Daniel of slightly more recent date, in some of his (gasp!) sonnets.

Peter

+ + + +

345. Jordan Davis
that lions poet
Thu 22 Aug 1996

I think, Jonathan, you're thinking of Regie Cabeco, who does have a NY public library poem. The issue of conception/abortion of the anterior anteater at readings (Atrides) SOS an interesting one, and the cooing of the glam poets does E.T. some wrong ecco the haole incandescent chyme traduction. No, Beck takes that slack. No coding gets a strong get-go of Anbesol, let alone that erudition. But as Plato told us, Galway's mnemonic quicksand bellows to the world! Uh, no, he didn't. (The novel Coors there is a 'where's waldo' Sen Sen I had listing to Raster Man, when I was expecting -- who's expecting? -- to get the 'magic eye' of sensimilla -- which I don't cotton regularly, thank you, the farmer hearing John Godfrey read -- inert privilege of disparaging the ether of every 90s pop phenomenon (Subpop). I know it must have undead when Blank went solo, but your early albums were the best, man! (ma'am))!

Please, poets, no more jokes! And no more tricks! We know them and what they're wearing. Send in the new affects, soon!

Thank you.
Jordan Davis

↑ Index

346. Wendy McClure
slams again; symbolic chicken in the classroom
Fri 23 Aug 1996

cf writes:
Rap / slam

has as one of its defining attributes an active hostility to the notion of coding. The defining attribute is IMHO narrative and any poem which subverts or too easily confuses the narrative thrust is suspect and falls beyond the pale for the genre of rap / slam.

The methodology of "this is what the poet is trying to say" and "this is the coding necessary to understand that poem" is disempowering to the reader and serves as the political springboard for rap / slam which has as its concern the destruction of this disempowerment. The case 'may' be accurately represented that once a child has gotten to the point where they are empowered with language and feeling 'in control' poetry is introduced in a manner which "disempowers" them by delegating control of the coding process to the authority figure of the teacher.

Crude rhyming and inelegant wordplay are quite often the 'language' point used to support the 'political' point of empowerment and releasing of rage because this complex serves as antidote to the aforementioned methodology. The points of empowerment follow closely the narrative thrust because it is neccessary to show that "you understand what's going on" despite assurances from the teacher (poetry), politician (society), preacher (spirituality), that "you don't know what's going on" unless you are given the key (i.e. coding). It follows as well that rhyming and alliteration, etc. are the tools employed because it is absolutely necessary that the tools of the oppressor - subjugation, rhyme, alliteration et al. be used to defeat those who would disempower 'you'.

Given this reading, IMHO, it makes perfect sense why langpo is received with hostility within the genre / world view of rap / slam.

It does make sense. Though it's the subversion of narrative that's the appeal to teaching langpo et al in the first place --demanding more attention just to elements (and I mean elements: space and punctuation and alphabet, to name a few); introducing the concept of encountering a poem as just an experience of reading rather than extracting "meaning". I think you can pretty much carry over the same value to rap / slam for usefulness in emphasizing listening/voice over, say, speculating over what those damn chickens symbolize, etc, --esp. when students intuit (see WCW thread) and think they must, for the moment at least, adhere to a teacher's narrative (just another in a world of competing narratives). I've always hoped that showing students quote difficult poems unquote does a bit to mitigate the presence of that narrative when they figure out for themselves why the author is doing something that initially bothers them so much. I've seen the ones that do --they become terrific readers/listeners of just about anything and hence empowered; sometimes they remained bothered by the stuff, but in getting it on their own terms, not defeated.

best, wm

↑ Index

347. henry gould

Re: Slams again; chicken in the classroom

Fri 23 Aug 1996

> yeah, that's just it---from one pov, it's ALL coded... one dominant gradient in our public discourses asks us to construe meaning-making as a process of en/decoding... part of this is a consequence (broadly) of information technologies... you've all heard this before---'the information is encoded, transmitted through a conduit, and emerges at the other end to be decoded'... but to say this is to recognize, as well, the specifically political dimension of communications apparatus... b/c the question, as a few folks have suggested, becomes a matter of who possesses the intelligence or counterintelligence cheat-sheet---who's doing the en/decoding?...

This seems like a good description of what poetry is NOT about. (I realize you're not saying it IS, Joe!) As I understand it, a poem is like a cognitive "solution" to a set of images/concepts/things-that-are-important-to-the-writer - a set which, without the poem, don't hold together, don't "make sense", are vague & disparate & inchoate & skemanderlous. And because that's so, the poem contains a measure of difficulty, equal to concision. What was that phrase of Pound's, something like dictare = condensare (to write is to condense?). And the invention/discovery aspect of the poem, it's newness, is also a discovery for the writer. It's super-coded; it's not a code manipulated & programmed for a particular use. It's not power OVER; it's verbal power per se. And verbal power has consequences in all directions, & can't be pigeon-holed by a particular socio-political theory. This is not to idealize or make the poem "clean" : look at Pound's conglomerations for example. But one can ask whether the poetry in Pound dominated by fixed ideas & stubborn assumptions is really new, really discovering anything. Pound is just one example. When a poem is ready to prove something by rhetoric rather than discovery, we start to "see through" it, it doesn't move much, it's dead. It's a speech, a code. Does this contradict what I wrote before about the poet trying to "communicate" something? Maybe not. The poem is what emerged from the impulse to communicate something; it's more than the impulse, but the impulse can't be discounted. (The urge to kill for a cause in Pound is an impulse; to kill for glory, for the right, for the epic.) But I think there's a disinterestedness in real poetry; not indifference, but a specific poetic energy that achieves something as-poem, in itself. - Henry G

↑ Index

348. Judy Roitman
Re: argument
Fri 23 Aug 1996

> I like "didactic" in there as a possible alternative, Judy. Could you say some more? best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

Briefly, sure.

Has to do with pointing towards truth, as opposed to worrying about methodology of establishing same. Or maybe its speaking from grounds of, rather than establishing. Not sure.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

349. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: small presses
Fri 23 Aug 1996

Hi all--

I'm looking for anything and everything that has been written (articles, manifestos, personal musings on the subject, political motivations/goals behind the small press, economics, relationship between poetry "scene" and small press "scene," whatever) about small poetry presses, rationale for founding them, or anything written about self-publishing, and/or connections between small press publishing and Web page publishing. I would also be interested in hearing from anyone who has founded their own press or has published on small presses. If you'd like, you can backchannel to [redacted]

Thanks!

↑ Index

350. Libbie Rifkin
Re: Berkeley 1965
Fri 23 Aug 1996

Thanks so much to Ron Silliman, Albert Glover, Rachel Loden and Julia Stein for your thoughts, reminiscences and research leads. I'm going to try to make it out to Berkeley in the next couple of months to listen to the tapes at the Bankroft, and to find out more about Robert Duncan's work as Poetry Consultant to the collection.

Thanks for your help!
Libbie

↑ Index

351. George Bowering
Re: Berkeley 1965
Fri 23 Aug 1996

Libbie R.

As you seem to be at Cornell, you probably know that the Berkeley '65 poetry thing was the sequel to the Vancouver '63 poetry thing, and the precursor to the Buffalo '67 one, eh?

Lots of info about all of them at Special Collections, Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, B.C. Charles Watts the expert there.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."
--Tristan Tzara

↑ Index

352. George Bowering
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Fri 23 Aug 1996

> George Bowering added (the bit beginning "Oh yeah?"):
>
> To Charles Bernstein---
>
> Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I

never
even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talking to the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!

I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming,
N.Y.

Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh
Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction manual.

Charles, how could you!? You told me she was just an intelligent person you had befriended for her quick mind! I am sending your jewelry back.

Some of us don't need trinkets to express the inexpressible, my dear
--what do you call yourself--Georgette? Some of us, on a summer's eve, have the freedom of our own thoughts and need not surrender to idle jealousies. Charles may do what he wishes with his heart; I know I'll always have Peekskill, and my memories of the honeymoon suite! P.S. Keep your baubles--you may need to hock them for a few maple leaves.

Oh yeah? Well, Charles told me a VERY interesting story about you and a certain Mister Joris, which I could never repeat in public. But REALLY, did you have to go to Poughkeepsie for something like that?

Poughkeepsie! That sweet city with her dreaming spires...But no, I think Charles must have me mixed up with Amy Fisher in her preteen, pre-Buttafuoco days (Pierre's the only one who REALLY knows, and HE at least is too much of a gentleman to say. Aren't you Pierre?).
I deal with all of this in my sonnet series "Snorkling the Lotus," for anyone who really wants to plumb the depths of those times. "The past is a foreign country: they do things differently there." I forgive you, Charles.

Rachel Loden

I was told personally by Ron Silliman that "Snorkling the Lotus" was about him! Oh, I get it; you tell all your conquests that the poem was about them. Well, some of us here in poetry-land think too much of our craft to employ it in amatory adventures. Some of us, such as I, live a life of the mind. What is Ron going to do when he finds out that you dalled with Pierre, and heaven knows how many others? Ron Silliman is a sensitive man. And he does not go around writing public poems about his affairs of the heart.

George Bowering.

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

--Tristan Tzara

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

353. Jonathan Brannen
NEW MARK WALLACE CHAPBOOK
Fri 23 Aug 1996

!!

NOW AVAILABLE FROM STANDING STONES PRESS

MARK WALLACE'S 27 part poem:

IN CASE OF DAMAGE TO LIFE, LIMB OR THIS ELEVATOR

(four dollars post-paid)

Standing Stones Press
7 Circle Pines
Morris, MN 56267

!!

MARK WALLACE

In Case of Damage to Life, Limb or This Elevator

Enthusiasm for secret doors loses itself in the house of redundant emphasis on the money that wants to take over the day.
My best thoughts are ones
I stop myself from saying.

Who needs the state to censor me?
Across the courtyard huddles the empty building of blatant charities which knows what's not getting used to it.
Let's have our cake and eat our words, inventing ghosts who hover in basements uncovering useless crimes.
The world just isn't the mind which keeps falling over the matter of fact that wasn't there when no one showed up.
Listening at night,
what do you hear beyond
the mangled psychodramas?
I never let myself think in silence and the air-conditioning of lives that go their own way.
Wind blows the pages apart.

Other Standing Stones Press Publications:

Tom Ahern, Skippy Taggart's Wife
Curt Anderson, Umbra
Dennis Barone, The Masque Resumed
Jonathan Brannen, Crunching Numbers
Gerald Burns, Probability and Fuzzy Dice
Cydney Chadwick, The Gift Horse's Mouth o.p.
Mark DuCharme, Contractng Scale
Peter Ganick, IT OR S/HE
Geof Huth, To a Small Stream of Water (or Ditch)
H.T. (Heather Thomas), Circus Freex
Stephen-Paul Martin, Crisis of Representation
Michelle Murphy, The Tongue in its Shelf
Sheila E. Murphy, Wind Topography
John Perlman, Anacoustic o.p.
Susan M. Schultz, Earthquake Dreams o.p.
Mark Wallace, In Case of Damage to Life, Limb or
This Elevator

All publications are $4.00 or any four for $12.00
(postage included).

Standing Stones Press
7 Circle Pines
Morris, MN 56267

↑ Index

354. Susan Schultz
Re: NEW MARK WALLACE CHAPBOOK
Fri 23 Aug 1996

Dear Jonathan--I'd like to get a Mark Wallace book. Will pay as soon as my life is straight--I tried to leave Hawaii the other night but ended up in a 10 hour delay that resulted in my being here until later today (I hope). I'll be in Buffalo by Sept 3 at 107 14th Street, Upper, Buffalo, NY 14213.

all best, Susan

↑ Index

355. Joseph Zitt
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Fri 23 Aug 1996

On 23 Aug 96 at 13:10, George Bowering wrote:

> George Bowering added (the bit beginning "Oh yeah?"):

This thing is turning into The Renga According to Proust !-) ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

356. william marsh
Re: Chax e-mail?
Fri 23 Aug 1996

At 11:50 AM 8/22/96 -0400, you wrote:
>Hey poetics people,
>
>Please indulge one who's been ill--can Charles Alexander still be reached >at [redacted], or does he have a new e-address to go with his "real" >address in spatial "reality"?
>
>Gwyn McVay
>

>
Gwyn -- the last i heard he can still be reached at this email address, tho he did post about a week back that he'd be off-line for a week or so.

best,

bmarsh

↑ Index

357. Rachel Loden
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1...
Sat 24 Aug 1996

George Bowering wrote (the bit beginning "I was told personally by Ron Silliman"):

> To Charles Bernstein---
>
> Wondering how you are this late summer eve. Or summer's eve. Since I never > even look at the Digest except when the when turns into the then (so dumb, > forget it), am glad to see your CB. HOw does one say hello without talking to > the whole team? Hi team Ever, Ann!
>
> I was wondering that too, Charles. I want to tell you how much you mean to > me, and especially how much I savor that weekend in the motel in Wyoming,
> N.Y.
>
> Not that I've forgotten our last blissful night at the Bide-A-Wee in > Peekskill, when stars fell into the Hudson and we were as pomo gods. Oh
> Charles, how awful to have to say these things to you in front of the
> hoi polloi. Hi hoi polloi! Ever your girl. P.S. Please send instruction > manual.
>
> Charles, how could you!? You told me she was just an intelligent person you > had befriended for her quick mind! I am sending your jewelry back.
>
> Some of us don't need trinkets to express the inexpressible, my dear
> --what do you call yourself--Georgette? Some of us, on a summer's > eve, have the freedom of our own thoughts and need not surrender to > idle jealousies. Charles may do what he wishes with his heart; I > know I'll always have Peekskill, and my memories of the honeymoon

> suite! P.S. Keep your baubles--you may need to hock them for a few maple leaves.
>
> Oh yeah? Well, Charles told me a VERY interesting story about you and a certain Mister Joris, which I could never repeat in public. But REALLY, did you have to go to Poughkeepsie for something like that?
>
> Poughkeepsie! That sweet city with her dreaming spires...But no, I think Charles must have me mixed up with Amy Fisher in her preteen, pre-Buttafuoco days (Pierre's the only one who REALLY knows, and HE at least is too much of a gentleman to say. Aren't you Pierre?). I deal with all of this in my sonnet series "Snorkling the Lotus," for anyone who really wants to plumb the depths of those times. "The past is a foreign country: they do things differently there." I forgive you, Charles.
>
> I was told personally by Ron Silliman that "Snorkling the Lotus" was about him! Oh, I get it; you tell all your conquests that the poem was about them. Well, some of us here in poetry-land think too much of our craft to employ it in amatory adventures. Some of us, such as I, live a life of the mind. What is Ron going to do when he finds out that you dalled with Pierre, and heaven knows how many others? Ron Silliman is a sensitive man. And he does not go around writing public poems about his affairs of the heart.

Really now, Georgette--seems to me that Ron goes around doing little else. Reading him is an endless game of connect-the-nasty-bits ("Only a minute after we agree that we're going to hop up, take a shower and not make love this morning, you're on top of me, rubbing, gradually slipping my penis in"). No, "Snorkling the Lotus" is all will-o'-the-wisp, all gossamer and hardly bears comparison to that sort of tawdry retailing. The affair you mention, if it happened at all, should have remained a private matter between Ron and me (and possibly the night manager of that place in Ossining). Oh Charles, how could a few soft words on a summer's eve result in such humiliations? XXXOOO a few disconsolate kisses in memory of my feelings.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

358. Burt Kimmelman
Re: Berkeley 1965
Sat 24 Aug 1996

Hey Libbie and George,

You may recall that there was a big shindig at Cortland prior to the Buffalo fest, at which CO was the main guy but many others were there too, and somewhere there is a tape and transcript of his "performance."

Burt

↑ Index

359. George Bowering
Re: Berkeley 1965
Sun 25 Aug 1996

> Hey Libbie and George,
>
> You may recall that there was a big shindig at Cortland prior to the Buffalo fest, at which CO was the main guy but many others were there too, and somewhere there is a tape and transcript of his "performance."
>
> Burt

I would like to hear that! Also, if the SFU special collectiuons doesnt have it, I bet they wd love to.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"The BAZOOKA is only for my understanding."

--Tristan Tzara

↑ Index

360. Rachel Loden
it's citation time
Sun 25 Aug 1996

Hi team! In response to backchannel queries, I want to say that yes:

> "Only a minute after we agree that we're going to hop up, take a shower and not make..." [censored]

is a real Silliman quote. It's from _Under_, specifically the hunk published in _B City_ #9, 1994, p. 4 (and I don't believe that Ron has ever apologized for such passages).

Cheers,

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

361. maria damon
weiner again
Sun 25 Aug 1996

---

hi guyzies i'm trying to theorize hannah weiner as 1) a jewish writer and 2) in terms of trauma theory, or let me rephrase that: her texts seem to me to be "effects" (hey that almost rhymes) of the trauma of postmodernity. and also of being a jewish american girl (princess?) in the 40s and 50s --whose relatively comfortable youth was concurrent w/ the Holocaust; this is a twist, i think, on our earlier discussion of middleclass american women's "right" to use (the use and/or abuse debate) the holocaust as touchstone for articulating their experience: in this case it's not weiner but me who is trying to claim that as a legitimate, if "silent teacher"ly subtext of her decentered, disavowed and displaced writings-by-dictation. whaddya think? charles, you said something once about a pasage in clairvoyant journal that was particularly germane to her Jewishness; i can't recall/find what it was. any thots, any won? maria d ps you'll all be duly acknowledged in resulting essay, which is due in (yipes) three days.

↑ Index

362. Joseph Zitt
Re: word alchemy
Sun 25 Aug 1996

On 25 Aug 96 at 22:51, Alan Sondheim wrote:

> The gematria I think is numerological (someone please correct me!) but most of the Kabbalah is a study, not only of the words and letters, but of the actual _shape_ of the letters related to the inner meanings of words.

I haven't seen much, in the Kabbalah writings that I've read, referring to the meaning of the shapes of the letters. It sounds intriguing -- can you point me toward a reference? ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

363. maria damon
Re: weiner again
Sun 25 Aug 1996

---

and by the way guyzies, who was Alex Hladky, mention in weiners's SIXTEEN as having died in the fall of 1982?
bests, maria d

↑ Index

364. maria damon
Re: weiner again
Sun 25 Aug 1996

---

whaddya have in mind, miekal? do you wanna join our range/renga quabal, or do you want to do a pas de deux (duet)? by the way, do you have any tape cassettes of Hannah Weiner? that i can buy from you? bests, maria d

In message "maria damon" writes:
> and by the way guyzies, who was Alex Hladky, mention in weiners's SIXTEEN as > having died in the fall of 1982?
> bests, maria d
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

365. maria damon
word alchemy
Sun 25 Aug 1996

---

sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or letters, the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
bests, maria d

↑ Index

366. Alan Sondheim
Re: word alchemy
Sun 25 Aug 1996

Kabbalah

On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:

> sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
> is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,
> the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
> Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
> bests, maria d

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

↑ Index

367. Charles Bernstein
Re: weiner again
Sun 25 Aug 1996

I am sorry I don't have time tonight (first week of classes at UB and acutely hectic for me) to respond more fully to Maria's thoughts about Hannah Weiner, though I do try to touch on some of the same issues in the LINEbreak interview I did with Hannah. But I think the reference Maria is referring to is from her recent work "Paw" where she recounts that a magical creature has followed her from Mexico to NYC and that this creature houses itself in a small velvet-lined drawer inside her forehead. This, it seems to me, is an image of the Tfellin* (the scripture that Orthodox Jews bind on their forehead). Also: Hannah emphasizes, in respect to the Clairvoyant Journal, that she see words on her forehead and the picture of her on the cover of the book has WORD written on her forehead. BUT, Hannah Weiner herself makes no connection to any Jewish reference.

I think on the LINEbreak tape I pose this to Hannah and she notes that I misremembered some of the details on "Paw" (which I heard at a reading about two years ago but have not read). Problem is, with this speed of this medium, to send this out now, and not in a month say, I am repeating the same misremembered details, which, if adjusted to what is in "Pah" would, I think, still hold. (I believe this poem is part of a ms that will be coming out before too long. It's a marvelous --wild -- piece, kind of a cross between Beatrice Potter and Magic Realism, but then again like neither one, and presented by its author as actual. But I better stop before I misremember more.)

*not sure if I spelled this right I checked my on-line dictionary here and it suggests "Telling", the title of Laura (Riding) Jackson's book [The Telling]. Weiner's method is also, of course, am image of a/the "telling".

↑ Index

368. maria damon
Re: word alchemy
Sun 25 Aug 1996

---

i thot of that, alan, and thanks, but the kabbalah is also, isn't it, based on numerology?
md

In message <[redacted]> UB
Poetics discussion group writes:
> Kabbalah
>
> On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:
>
> > sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
> > is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or
> > letters,
> > the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
> > Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
> > bests, maria d
> >
>
> http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
> images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
> 4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

↑ Index

369. maria damon
Re: weiner again
Sun 25 Aug 1996

---

cb writes:
> I am sorry I don't have time tonight (first week of classes at UB and > acutely hectic for me) to respond more fully to Maria's thoughts about > Hannah Weiner,
..

thanks charles, very helpful. how can i get a tape of linebreak interview? md (backchannel's fine)

↑ Index

370. Alan Sondheim
Re: word alchemy
Sun 25 Aug 1996

The gematria I think is numerological (someone please correct me!) but most of the Kabbalah is a study, not only of the words and letters, but of the actual _shape_ of the letters related to the inner meanings of words.

Alan

On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:

> i thot of that, alan, and thanks, but the kabbalah is also, isn't it, based on numerology?
> md
>
> In message <[redacted]> UB
> Poetics discussion group writes:
> Kabbalah
>
> On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:
>
> sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
> is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,
> the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
> Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
> bests, maria d
>
> http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
> images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
> 4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

↑ Index

371. Herb Levy
Poetics scrap book
Sun 25 Aug 1996

Whoever keeps track of press coverage of the EPC Web site (I think that'd probably be Joel Kuzsai, but what do I know) should check out p 191 of the September issue of Wired, the one you can read standing around at news stands right now.

Others on the list may also be interested in checking it out. Besides the positive verbiage on EPC there are URLs for some other poetry sites including a cowboy poet site <http://www.westfolk.org/> & something called Oyster Boy Review <http://sunsite.unc.edu/ob/> which, from the look of it (I haven't checked it out yet), is a Bukowski love feast. You'll also find a listing for Ocassional Screenful, an e-mail list that does nothing but send a poem every few weeks (as opposed to Poetics-L which does everything including sending a poem every few weeks).

Needless to say all of the graphics come from Oyster Boy, rather than the EPC, even though the piece starts out with a slam on Quentin Tarantino.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

372. maria damon
Re: word alchemy
Sun 25 Aug 1996

---

thanks alan; i looked up kaballah and its origin is qabal, to receive or take, so in terms of weiner's clairvoyance it's perfect, though it's not what i thought i was asking. this is a very exhilerating project as it turns out; i was dreading having to grind out an 8-page special for yet another conference (i adore conferences mostly, but i'm getting tired of having to write things, i mean, i'm not getting tired as it turns out, but i get tired at the idea of having to write something; when i actually do it it's a gas)...the worry is it good enough...this is for a panel on theorizing the traumatic and the other panelists are doing this highpowered stuff on freud, deleuzian post-holocaust cinematics and german film etc, and here i am saying isn't this neat, this lady sees words! o well. anyone out there on the list going to the midwest mla in my fair(haired and skinned) city? actually i saw baraka read here last night as part of the beat exhibit, it was exhilerating, and my colleague john wright performing l hughes's ask your mama with a jazz quartet and a slide show. bests, maria d

In message <[redacted]> UB
Poetics discussion group writes:
> The gematria I think is numerological (someone please correct me!) but > most of the Kabbalah is a study, not only of the words and letters, but > of the actual _shape_ of the letters related to the inner meanings of words.
>
> Alan

>
> On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:
>
> > i thot of that, alan, and thanks, but the kabbalah is also, isn't it, based > > on > > numerology?
> > md
> >
> > In message <[redacted]> UB
> > Poetics discussion group writes:
> > > Kabbalah
> > >
> > > On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:
> > >
> > > > sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
> > > > is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or
> > > > letters,
> > > > the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
> > > > Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
> > > > bests, maria d
> > > >
> > >
> > > http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
> > > images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
> > > 4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR
> >
>
> http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
> images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
> 4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

↑ Index

373. Christina Fairbank Chirot

word alchemy

Sun 25 Aug 1996

There's always Rimbaud's Alchemy of the Word, the "Lettre du Voyant" --dbchirot

↑ Index

374. Charles Smith
Re: word alchemy
Sun 25 Aug 1996

In a message dated 96-08-25 22:07:48 EDT, maria writes:

<<
 sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
 is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,
 the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
 Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
 bests, maria d
  >>

maria,

Kabbalah comes to mind....

& a quick look at Johanna Drucker's _The Alphabetic Labyrinth_ mentions: curses, spells defixiones, amulets, lamellae, kleromancy & alectryomancy alectryomancy (credited to a follower of Pythagoras, Iamblichus): "divination by means of a fowl. To use this method one scratched the letters of the alphabet out around a circle in the sand and then sprinkled grain over them. The fowl was released and the pattern of its pecking was recorded. The sequence of letters was studied for hidden meanings or messages." --p. 68

she also mentions Agrippa's _De Occulta Philosophia_

don't know if this is of any help to ya

hope to get to SF for yr G Stein talk next week

charles

↑ Index

375. maria damon
Re: weiner
Mon 26 Aug 1996

another one for you geniuses (this is really useful): what does "Hannah" mean in hebrew? i'm embarrassed to say i don't know. hanni i know means happy in arabic, so maybe its the same thing? md

↑ Index

376. Oren Izenberg
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

Hi all.

Gematriya is indeed numerological-- but it is based on the correspondence between the letters of the alphabet and their assigned number values. The numbers serve to indicate equivalences (mystical and otherwise) between words.

best,

O.

↑ Index

377. Oren Izenberg
Re: weiner
Mon 26 Aug 1996

Two possible roots: "Cheyn" means (more or less) "charm", a beauty not of aspect but of person. Perhaps less interestingly (and probably further from the true etymology) "Choneh" means to camp or pitch a tent; the past tense would be chana-- but the syllabic stress is different from the name-- Cha'nna the name, chana' the verb.

On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:

> another one for you geniuses (this is really useful): what does "Hannah" mean in hebrew? i'm embarrassed to say i don't know. hanni i know means happy in arabic, so maybe its the same thing?
> md

↑ Index

378. Alan Sondheim
Re: weiner
Mon 26 Aug 1996

Chet-nun-hay is to be gracious; it may be related to this. Chet-mem-shin is the root of happy; hay-nun-hay is to be agreeable, pleased, pleasant; for that matter, hay-nun-hay in the sense of hee-nay is behold or lo.

Alan - there are Arabic cognates as well.

On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:

> another one for you geniuses (this is really useful): what does "Hannah" mean in hebrew? i'm embarrassed to say i don't know. hanni i know means happy in arabic, so maybe its the same thing?

> md

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

↑ Index

379. Alan Sondheim
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

I remember Hannah, the first time I met her, reading the word "poison" on my forehead, and I thought at that point, it's also a weapon.

Just as depression (my own included) is a weapon.

That can't be overlooked.

Kabbalah - original meaning "to be opposite," then "to take that which is opposite, to take over, to receive." Indication it might be related to Akkadian words for "battle" and "middle," and Arabic "qalb" for "heart."

Check out Ernest Klein, A Comprehensive Etymological Dictionary of the Hebrew Language, for Readers of English, Macmillan, 1987. If you want more traditional sources, I can find them.

Alan

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

↑ Index

380. Douglis Beck
small press & poetry
Mon 26 Aug 1996

---

julie, there are two excellent books you should check out on small presses. one is richard peabody's "Mavericks" (subtitle is something like: 7 renegade publishers; whatever, its packed, sorry.) its very good & probably much better than the other: "The Art of Literary Publishing" can't remember the editor, but it strikes me as more pedantic than richard's book. both will be interesting to you though. douglis.

↑ Index

381. Alan Sondheim
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

I remember material in the Zohar discussing the name of God - it might also be in tales of the Chassidim - in terms of the Hay needing support from the yod (also means hand) for example...

Alan

On Mon, 26 Aug 1996, Joseph Zitt wrote:

> On 25 Aug 96 at 22:51, Alan Sondheim wrote:
>
> The gematria I think is numerological (someone please correct me!) but > most of the Kabbalah is a study, not only of the words and letters, but
> of the actual _shape_ of the letters related to the inner meanings of words.
>
> I haven't seen much, in the Kabbalah writings that I've read, > referring to the meaning of the shapes of the letters. It sounds > intriguing -- can you point me toward a reference?
> ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1----------
> |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \|||
> ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \||
> |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
4 GIN 1/3 SA KUG. BABBAR

↑ Index

382. Thomas Bell
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

maria damon wrote

> ...the worry is it
> good enough...this is for a panel on theorizing the > traumatic and the other > panelists are doing this highpowered stuff on freud, > deleuzian post-holocaust
> cinematics and german film etc, and here i am saying > isn't this neat, this lady > sees words!

-as I"ve said before, it's the act of writing or drawing that counts. I've seen this as a therapist and in my own work. The names and the theories you note are just part of their own secret kabbalah. Go get 'em!

tom

↑ Index

383. Christina Fairbank Chirot
word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

For word alchemy as performance score, see Emmett Wiiliams, The Alphabet Symphony:

This is a symphony in which you can spell "love" by smoking a cigar, blowing a silent dog whistle, eating a chocolate eclair off the floor on all fours.

In The Alphabet Symphony, twenty-six objects are substituted for the letters of the alphabet. These objects, with instructions on what the performer should do with them, are arranged on the stage in alphabetical order. The conductor draws a letter from a box. He calls the letter "E", for example, and the performer proceeds to the row of objects, selects the "E" object, and does with it what the instruction tells him to do. The objects and actions can vary from performance to performance . . . it was the most popular of my performances in early Fluxus days . . . (1962). The complete text may be found at:

http://www.panix.com/~fluxus

Instructions in a Symphony that varies from performance to performance--interesting to think on in relation to the intersections of predictions/control/fate/chance--

(some of which were brought up during the "stochastic" thread on this list a number of weeks ago)
--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

384. Rachel Loden
Hannah
Mon 26 Aug 1996

Maria, at this very odd site

> http://www.sasknet.com/~dramashar/hannah.htm

found this:

> Pronunciation, meaning & background

>  Channah, {pronounced khan-naw'}.*
>  Hannah means 'grace'*
>  1) the mother of Samuel, one of the wives of Elkanah*
>
> - or -
>
>  chanan {khaw-nan'}*
>  - mercy, gracious, merciful supplication, favor, besought, pity, fair, favorable, favored*
>  1) to be gracious, show favor, pity*
>  1 a) (Qal) to show favor, be gracious*
>  1 b) (Niphal) to be pitied*
>  1 c) (Piel) to make gracious, be favorable, be gracious*
>  1 d) (Poel) to direct favor to, have mercy on* >  1 e) (Hophal) to be shown favor, show consideration*
>  1 f) (Hithphael) to seek favor, implore favor*
>
> The actress should consult, and be very familiar with, the story of Hannah in 1 Samuel, chapters 1 and 2.

Rachel

↑ Index

385. Judy Roitman
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

Alan Sondheim suggested that

> Kabbalah

was the answer to Maria Damon's question
>
>> is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,
>> the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
>> Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
>> bests, maria d
>>

Kabbalah is a lot bigger than that. A lot bigger.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

386. maria damon
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

---

judy writeman roits:
> Alan Sondheim suggested that
>
> >Kabbalah
>
> was the answer to Maria Damon's question
> >
> >> is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or
> > letters,
> >> the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
> >> Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
> >> bests, maria d
> >>
>
> Kabbalah is a lot bigger than that. A lot bigger.
>
that's what i thought, but so many folks have responded by pointing me to the Kaballah that...uh-oh, it might be time for me to descend. i've always been fearful of not having the "right stuff" (by which i don't mean traditional gender requirements, but a kind of energy for sustained longterm inquiry into things more profound than imaginable, kinda like taking acid as a metaphysical exercise). not wanting to just cruise the surface, but aware of the significance of diving deep. who'd a thot that a dinky-ass little conference paper wd land me in the Kaballah.
thanks everyone, there's been lots of helpful response.
md

↑ Index

387. Jerry Rothenberg
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

For maria d --

In the original edition of A BIG JEWISH BOOK I have a selectiion from Hannah's Clairvoyant Journal -- set between an image of Wallace Berman's 1960s "Wall" and a number of medieval Hebrew (masora) "calligrams." The commentary on Hannah begins: "Weiner's journals -- contemporary -- arise from an experience of word-visualization reminiscent of those of the traditional poet-mystics: 'I see words on my forehead, in the air, on other people [etcetera].' With this the reader can compare, e.g., the appearance of the Hebrew letters (above, p. 391) as "great mountains," or the oral manifestation to the kabbalist Joseph Caro (1488-1575) of a maggid (heavenly messenger), who took the name Mishna & a persona between male & female ..." It then goes on to quote Caro's description of the visitation, which is in fact a gift of spoken rather than written words -- words that "will speak in thy mouth & thy lips will vibrate." The great mountains reference from an anonymous 13th century author, describes an act of word kabbala involving recombinations of the letters of the names of God & runs like this: "During the second week the power became so strong in me that I couldn't manage to write down all the combinations of letters which automatically spurted out of my pen. ... When I came to the night in which power was conferred on me, & Midnight had passed, I set out to take up the Great Name of God, consisting of 72 Names, permuting & combining it. But when I had done this for a little while, the letters took on the shape of great mountains, strong trembling seized me & I could summon no strength, my hair stood on end, & it was as if I were not in this world. Then something resembling speech came to my lips & forced them to move. I said: "This is indeed the spirit of wisdom."

[This is probably the kind of thing Alan Sondheim had in mind in speaking about the shapes of letters.]

I conclude the above quote with some more: "The range of approaches & names ("the whole Torah is nothing but the great name of God" -- thus J. Gikatilla) should be clear in the images that follow. From what is in effect a sacred 'concrete poetry.'" And the conclusion to the commentary on Hannah: "The lack of a similar context for Weiner's experience, etc., is a condition of our time -- on which no further comment."

Anyway there's more in fact that could be said -- e.g. about gematria as a field of both letters & numbers, etc. -- but it's a busy morning in San Diego & about as far as I can go.

Jerome Rothenberg

↑ Index

388. maria damon
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

---

thanks jerry for the reminder that i have this terrific resource (a big j-book) right on my shelf. almost wrote 'on my self' --apropos.
bests, maria d

↑ Index

389. Burt Kimmelman
Re: Berkeley 1965
Mon 26 Aug 1996

George et al.
Does anyone know if and where a recording of the Cortland Poetry Convocation is? (I know there is a transcript somewhere).

burt

↑ Index

390. Kevin Killian
Marlene Nourbese Philip
Mon 26 Aug 1996

This is Dodie Bellamy. Marlene Nourbese Philip will be reading at Small Press Traffic in November. I remember there was quite an involved discussion of her work here on the poetics list a few months ago. I'd like to look that discussion up in the list archives. Anybody remember around when that was?

Thanks.

↑ Index

391. Jerry Rothenberg
Re: Berkeley 1965
Mon 26 Aug 1996

Burt --

You might try the Blackburn archives at UC-San diego (Archive for the New Poetry), which has all of Paul's tapes. I'd guess the Cortland Poetry events were a few years before Paul moved there, but there's a chance (I'm just guessing) that he would have been there, and in that case, there's every chance he would have come back with a recording.

The number is [redacted], and the person to talk to is Brad Westbrook.

All best

Jerry Rothenberg

↑ Index

392. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: word alchemy (fwd)
Mon 26 Aug 1996

> jack burnham (north western university) writes on the kabbalah and marcel duchamp. he's done amazing work, and sometime ago had begun a bk on the shapes of the letters and duchamp's work -- it was called (tentatively) _narrative structure in western art_. i think he's abandoned that project, tho, or is holding onto the manuscript -- but probably the most accessible bk of his which outlines all of this is his collected essays: _great western salt works_ -- i think it's out of print, but any university library will (or shld) have it. what's especially interesting for me is what he has to say abt gnosticism and duchamp's _indifference_ --
>
> c.

↑ Index

393. George Bowering
Re: word alchemy
Mon 26 Aug 1996

> Kabbalah
>
> On Sun, 25 Aug 1996, maria damon wrote:
>
> sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
> is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,
> the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
> Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
> bests, maria d

Well, I thought of Kabala too, but that's kind of numbers and letters, eh?

George Bowering. "Nuestros cuerpos se cubren

de una yedra de s=EDlabras."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

--Octavio Paz

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted] =20

↑ Index

394. George Bowering
Re: weiner
Mon 26 Aug 1996

My old Webster gives Hannah as "grace"

George Bowering. "Nuestros cuerpos se cubren

de una yedra de s=EDlabras."
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
--Octavio Paz
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted] =20

↑ Index

395. maria damon
Re: weiner
Mon 26 Aug 1996

---

thanks george; my old webster gives nothing of meaning.

In message <v01530503ae47c996dae6@[142.58.126.37]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> My old Webster gives Hannah as "grace"
>
>
>
>
> George Bowering. "Nuestros cuerpos se cubren
>
> de una yedra de s=EDlabras."
> 2499 West 37th Ave.,
> Vancouver, B.C.,
> Canada V6M 1P4
> --Octavio Paz
> fax: [redacted]
> e-mail: [redacted] =20

↑ Index

396. James Sherry
Hannah Weiner
Mon 26 Aug 1996

Roof Books will publish Hannah's Weiner's <<We Speak Silent>> this fall. I will try to make a special offer to the list when the book becomes available.

Meanwhile, Maria, I wonder about your theory. The themes in Hannah's writing don't seem to me to have much to do with holocaust. A list of them would show late sixties tv and political issues, the fast, lsd, family, friends, and isolation. Why not take her at her word?

The interest for me in Hannah's writing has always been her ability to weave through inside and out without the usual membranes and transitions. For Hannah much of what we call art comes quite easily to her once she has put herself in a particular position, which I don't need to characterize.

Also see Maria Damon's essay in the new issue of <<Chain>>: Hannah makes a pure play at consciousness by mixing genres. Sometimes she succeeds and the reader is pleased.

James

↑ Index

397. Charles Watts
Berkeley poetry conference 1965
Mon 26 Aug 1996

George Bowering is right, we do have a good deal of information here about both the Vancouver (1963) and Berkeley (1965) poetry conferences, including tape recordings of the roundtable discussions and readings in Vancouver and of the lectures and readings in Berkeley. The Berkeley recordings are copies of those held in the library at UC Berkeley; the Vancouver recordings are unique. And no, unfortunately we cannot make copies of these recordings available to interested users without the permission in writing of the participants/readers or their estates. If you want to hear them, come to Vancouver!

Ralph Maud has been publishing a lot of useful material about the Berkeley poetry conference, particularly about Charles Olson's reading/talk. Several years ago, Ralph "published" for his own classes' use a new, corrected transcription of Olson's talk at Berkeley which is much more accurate and complete than Zoe Brown's _Charles Olson Reading at Berkeley_, published in 1966 by Coyote. Ralph Maud's transcription was eventually included in _Muthologos: the Collected Lectures and Interviews of Charles Olson_, The Four Seasons Foundation, 1978.

Recently Ralph has been publishing material related to Olson's appearance in Berkeley (as a kind of rebuttal to Tom Clark's account in his bio of Olson), in _The Minutes of the Charles Olson Society_. I don't have the exact issues at hand, but you can write to Ralph (snail mail only) at 1104 Maple Street, Vancouver, B.C. Canada V6J 3R6 with specific queries. If you want issues or a subscription to _The Minutes of the Charles Olson Society_, write to the Charles Olson Society at the same address. Single issues are $2.50 a copy, a subscription to the current series (series 2) is $25. Also, a transcription of the "Angel, Muse, Duende" discussion featuring Olson, Ginsberg and Duncan, Vancouver, 1963, is published in _Sulfur_ 33. There's also a memoir (from Duncan McNaughton, I think) of Olson's talk at Cortland in one of the _Minutes of the Charles Olson Society_.

If you have questions about materials held here in Special Collections, Simon Fraser University, you can contact me backchannel at [redacted]. A caution, tho: I'll be away from this screen and email address for the next two weeks.

As a kind of perspective on the ever-mounting heap of compost in that red wheelbarrow, look again at what Melville said about doubloons and their beholders in _Moby-Dick_.

Best,

Charles Watts

↑ Index

398. Joseph Zitt

Re: Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources

Mon 26 Aug 1996

On 27 Aug 96 at 0:50, Carnography wrote:

> numbers. There is also ancient trick that is used to reduce the
> the entire text of the bible (in the original Sanskrit) into > a sequence of permutations on a single formula.

Sanksrit?! Which bible? ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

399. maria damon
Re: Hannah Weiner
Mon 26 Aug 1996

---

james sherry writes:
> Roof Books will publish Hannah's Weiner's <<We Speak Silent>> this fall. I > will try to make a special offer to the list when the book becomes available.

goody! in the meantime, where can i get "PAH" or PAW, that charles mentioned?
>
> Meanwhile, Maria, I wonder about your theory. The themes in Hannah's > writing don't seem to me to have much to do with holocaust. A list of > them would show late sixties tv and political issues, the fast, > lsd, family, friends, and isolation. Why not take her at her word?

i'm not talking about thematics so much as effect; her writing as an effect of post-holocaust (Jewish) subjectivity. something like that. not trying to ferret out any subtext. still, thanks for the list of identifiable themes.
>
> The interest for me in Hannah's writing has always been her ability to > weave through inside and out without the usual membranes and transitions.
> For Hannah much of what we call art comes quite easily to her once she > has put herself in a particular position, which I don't need to characterize.

good point; i like stuff about weaving and membranes.
>
> Also see Maria Damon's essay in the new issue of <<Chain>>: Hannah makes > a pure play at consciousness by mixing genres. Sometimes she succeeds and > the reader is pleased.

interesting; what specific genres wd u say she mixes?
>
> James maria d

↑ Index

400. Carnography
Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources
Tue 27 Aug 1996

---

maria damon typed:

> sorry guys its me again, going a little crazy:
> is there a word for a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,

> the way numerology is based on numbers and astrology is based on stars?
> Logology? Logomancy? alphabetrics?
> bests, maria d

Magic, alchemy and Kabbalism are based on exact formulas of words and numbers or, more specifically, perfectly realized paradoxes and complexities coded in letters and numbers. Blavatsky once said, "God is math," (can't give you title or page number: I find her prose insufferable), and the statement hardly originated with her. The Book of Numbers, available in certain magic-related book stores, even gives tables for the translation of words into numbers. There is also ancient trick that is used to reduce the the entire text of the bible (in the original Sanskrit) into a sequence of permutations on a single formula.

My research had to do with the Sephira, Adam Kadmon, and Qliphoth, but perhaps a few of my books will be useful to you.

Sources:

The Saragossa Manuscript (both the film and the novel are brilliant),
 Count Jan Potocki,
On the Kabalah and Its Symbolism, Gershom Scholem
The Book of Numbers (?)
The Golem, Gustav Meyrinck
The Hidden Chakrahs (?)
The Book of Imaginary Beings Borges, of course)
_Dictionary of the Kabalah
The Astral World, Panchadasi

Books with question marks were read or copied at the library. This was a novella ("Val Demar's Pear," to be published by Permeable Press in November) rather than a paper, so I didn't keep meticulous footnotes.

§§§

401. Carnography
Re: Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources
Tue 27 Aug 1996

Joseph Zitt typed:

> Sanksrit?! Which bible?

Someone was listening: This was part of the explanation as given to me by a Blavatsky disciple. She (the disciple) maintained that the Hebrew text of the bible came from a Sanskrit text, which was said to be the origin of the permutated sequence she showed me. Some people who study the occult, a few of whom I've met, maintain that (and please don't kill the messenger) Kabbalism is a variant of Eastern mysticism. No authoritative text that I've read verifies this--but I have seen the bible-code idea referred to in _On the Kaballah and Its Symbolism_, by Gershom Scholem.

But really, I'm not interested in getting into a discussion for the next month or so. I haven't time. I was just trying to be helpful.

All the best,

Rob Hardin

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

402. - Kim Tedrow
Hannah/Anna
Tue 27 Aug 1996

Hi Maria,

I don't know if Hannah and Anna are the same word in Hebrew, but "Anna" is from the Hebrew word meaning "Grace" (I remember reading this in a standard dictionary, it may have been the Random House Unabridged).

Kim

↑ Index

403. maria damon
Re: Kaballah, possibly unrelated resources
Tue 27 Aug 1996

---

once again, thanks to all who've helped...off to sf now so will be incommunicada for a wk, then, kablammo! i'll be back, signed, hannah akhmatfillin...

In message <v01540b13ae487cfffe1e@[204.74.3.74]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> Joseph Zitt typed:
>
> > Sanksrit?! Which bible?
>
> Someone was listening: This was part of the explanation as > given to me by a Blavatsky disciple. She (the disciple) maintained > that the Hebrew text of the bible came from a Sanskrit text, which > was said to be the origin of the permutated sequence she showed me.
> Some people who study the occult, a few of whom I've met, maintain that > (and please don't kill the messenger) Kabbalism is a variant of Eastern > mysticism. No authoritative text that I've read verifies this--but > I have seen the bible-code idea referred to in _On the Kaballah and > Its Symbolism_, by Gershom Scholem.
>
> But really, I'm not interested in getting into a discussion for the next > month or so. I haven't time. I was just trying to be helpful.
>
> All the best,
>
> Rob Hardin
>
> http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

404. Burt Kimmelman
Re: Berkeley 1965
Tue 27 Aug 1996

Jerry,

Great idea. I have to be in touch with Brad soon anyway, and will follow up.

Burt

↑ Index

405. Ira Lightman
Robert Sward etc missed by UTOPIAN FORMALIST round-ups
Tue 27 Aug 1996

Does anybody on the list have any interest in Robert Sward? Born in the USA, lived and wrote

(don't know if [redacted] still alive) in Canada, selected poems 1957-1991, to give idea of times he was writing, now out of print tho full text available from a website. I've always been privately very interested in his work, came across it by luck when the reference book, Contemporary Poets, fell open on his entry when I picked it up idly once. He rarely got into or gets into Books of Canadian Verse etc anthologies, as USA born I suppose;
I got interested in him while living in New Zealand, when I was "coincidentally" looking at the issue of: Where Do You Get Noticed If You're Not Part of a Movement (LangPo, New Formalism etc),
Not the big Mainstream Name, and, above all in New Zealand, if You're Not Your Country's Nationality.

Have more perhaps heard of Daphne Marlatt? Far and away my favourite Canadian writer, got into no Canadian anthologies; as she was born outside Canada; and I've often wondered if she only started to get in because her work in the eighties started to feel representative of a "minority group", as a gay writer, as a feminist writer, not just because she's a really good writer.

Anyone like Alan Riach? A Scot living in New Zealand, also rarely gets put in Scottish roundups or New Zealand roundups, but I think his work is fabulous.

Shouldn't there be an anthology of the people who don't usually get into anthologies?
The Poetry for the Millenium book just missed all these emigres I'm mentioning -or others, like David Miller, an Australian living in England.
And isn't it the case that ex-Brits Steve MacCaffery and David Bromige are harder to put into LangPo anthologies? Is it because those anthologies are really American LangPo Anthologies, in order to create a pure essence of LangPo utopia, connected to the long tradition of Americans-writing-up-their-enthusiasms-as-UTOPIAN-FORMALISM
-------- rather than experimental-practice-most-successful-and-appreciated-in-American-experimentalism-consuming-practices (of which there are nearly none in Britain and New Zealand, in my experience, where it's still poets in-joking to other poets, to the frustration of a lot of great UK and NZ experimentalists!, rather than artistic stimulation of consciousness enjoyed by an active audience of other artists and thinkers) ---------- rather than actually look at how different poets in english-speaking cultures with different speech-writing relations have foregrounded their relations and the role of language with them?

Would anyone on the list nominate their inclusions for such a book, or feelings on this subject?

Best

Ira Lightman

↑ Index

406. Cynthia Franklin
Intl.MELUS Conf.
Tue 27 Aug 1996

First International and Eleventh National MELUS Conference
Multi-Ethnic Literatures Across the Americas and the Pacific:
    Exchanges, Contestations, and Alliances
Honolulu, Hawai'i
April 18-20, 1997

The following information is also available at the conference website:
http://www.lll.hawaii.edu/web/conference/melus97

Keynote Speakers

Linda Hogan A Chickasaw originally from Oklahoma, Linda Hogan is currently Associate Professor in the English Department of the University of Colorado where she teaches creative writing. The recipient of several major grants, Hogan is a prolific poet, essayist, playwright, and novelist. She is the author of four volumes of poetry: Calling Myself Home (1978), Daughters, I Love You (1981), Eclipse (1983), Seeing through the Sun, which won a Before Columbus Foundation American Book Award, and of the acclaimed novel Mean Spirit (1990). Her essay collections on women and and Native American cultures include Stories We Hold Secret: Tales of Women's Spiritual Development (1986) and Dwellings: a Spiritual History of the Living World (1995), and she has recently collaborated on a non-fiction collection with her father, entitled That Horse .

Haunani-Kay Trask Director of the Center for Hawaiian Studies, Professor of Hawaiian Studies at the University of Hawai'i at Manoa, and member of Ka Lahui Hawai'i, Dr. Trask is a versatile poet, scholar, teacher, public lecturer, and activist for Native Hawaiian rights. Trask is the author of Eros Power: the Promise of Feminist Theory, as well as two works on colonialism, Fighting the Battle of Double Colonization and From a Native Daughter: Colonialism and Sovereignty in Hawai'i (1993), and the poetry collection Light in the Crevice Never Seen (1994). Her essays and poems have been widely anthologized.

Albert Wendt As a writer, teacher, and editor, Albert Wendt has played a pivotal role in promoting cultural production in the Pacific. Born in Western Samoa, Wendt is the author of six novels (several of which have been made into feature films), two short story collections, two poetry collections, and major essays on Pacific literature (including "Toward a New Oceania"). He is the editor and introducer of the groundbreaking Lali: A Pacific Anthology (1990) and a follow-up anthology, Nuanua: Pacific Writing in English since 1980 as well. Wendt is currently Professor of English at the University of Auckland, having previously taught in Fiji and Samoa. Leaves of the Banyan Tree, Wendt's epic third novel, won the New Zealand Wattie Book of the Year Award, and is considered a classic of Pacific literature. Other works include the novels Sons for the Return Home, Flying-Fox in a Freedom Tree, Pouliuli, Black Rainbow, and Ola .

Accommodations

The majority of conference activities (including banquet and sessions on April 19 and 20) will be held at the Ala Moana Hotel. Accommodations at special conference rates will be available at the Ala Moana Hotel, 410 Atkinson Drive, Honolulu, adjacent to the Ala Moana Shopping Center and the Ala Moana Beach Park. The hotel is centrally located, ten minutes away from the more touristy areas of Waikiki and close to historic downtown Honolulu and Iolani Palace. Special rates for the conference are as follows:

Kona Tower--city view
$80 for single occupancy
$80 for double occupancy
Waikiki Tower--city view
$92 for single occupancy

$92 for double occupancy
$112 for triple occupancy

Rooms are subject to Hawai'i' s state excise tax of 4.17% and hotel room tax of 6.0% (rates are subject to change). Hotel rates in downtown Honolulu/Waikiki are generally very costly, and we highly recommend the quality and convenience of the accommodations at the Ala Moana Hotel, which is offering conference participants these excellent rates. Airport shuttles service the hotel.

As the conference will consist of 3 full days beginning April 18, 1997, we suggest that participants check-in by April 17. Reservations should be made by March 17, 1997. Room requests after this date will be confirmed based on space availability, and if available will be extended at the conference rate. Room extensions of three nights prior and three nights after the conference dates of April 18-20, 1997 will be honored at the conference rate. For reservations, call [redacted].

Transportation

United Airlines has agreed to provide discounted airfares to all conference attendees traveling to Honolulu from the United States and Canada. Reservations and schedule information may be obtained by calling the United Meetings Desk at [redacted] and referencing the ID Code 507SA. Meeting Desk hours are Monday thru Sunday, 7am to 12 midnight (EST).

Registration

Please print out this form, complete it, and mail it with your check payable to "East West Center" to:

MELUS Conference
English Department
1733 Donaghho Road
University of Hawai'i
Honolulu, HI 96822

DEADLINE for registration is January 15, 1997.

Last Name:
First Name:
University/Institutional Affiliation:
Address:
City:
State/Country:
Postal Code:
Daytime Phone:

Fax:
E-mail:

Non-Students $75
Students $50

Conference registration fee is non-refundable. Registration fee includes a banquet and two luncheons.

Please make checks payable to East West Center

↑ Index

407. James Sherry
4 U.K. Writers Read at Segue Performance Space
Tue 27 Aug 1996

THE SEGUE PERFORMANCE SPACE @ 303 East 8th Street (Betw Aves. B&C)
New York, New York [redacted]

is proud to announce that 4 renouned writers from the U.K. will read at our lovely loft on TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3 at 8:00 p.m. sharp, following the Poetics Conference in New Hampshire over Labor Day Weekend.

These being:

Richard Makin
Caroline Bergzall
Geoff Ward
&
Miles Champion

Suggested contribution for this exciting kickoff to the Fall reading season is a mere $4.00.

This event is curated by Andrew Levy, Fiona Templeton & Dan Machlin. Please contact Dan at The Segue Foundation [redacted] with any questions. Not to be missed!

when gregor samsara slept one night escaping troubled wakedreams he found himself transformed in his debt into a monstrous writer: Lingua Frankeinsteiner, the moonstra upturned, vicous rolling n rocking, entrapped in a hard shelly shock pad carapax of stone from which swindled unredoubtable logs off puce, coulee slathering hire and high the stari night acrospheres

- Richard Makin (from FORWORD)

↑ Index

408. Ian Wilson
Re: Intl.MELUS Conf.
Tue 27 Aug 1996

Hawaii or Mexico?

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: Intl.MELUS Conf. Author: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> at Internet Date: 8/27/96 8:15 AM

First International and Eleventh National MELUS Conference
Multi-Ethnic Literatures Across the Americas and the Pacific:
Exchanges, Contestations, and Alliances
Honolulu, Hawai'i
April 18-20, 1997

The following information is also available at the conference website:
http://www.lll.hawaii.edu/web/conference/melus97

Keynote Speakers

Linda Hogan A Chickasaw originally from Oklahoma, Linda Hogan is currently Associate Professor in the English Department of the University of Colorado where she teaches creative writing. The recipient of several major grants, Hogan is a prolific poet, essayist, playwright, and novelist. She is the author of four volumes of poetry: Calling Myself Home (1978), Daughters, I Love You (1981), Eclipse (1983), Seeing through the Sun, which won a Before Columbus Foundation American Book Award, and of the acclaimed novel Mean Spirit (1990). Her essay collections on women and and Native American cultures include Stories We Hold Secret: Tales of Women's Spiritual Development (1986) and Dwellings: a Spiritual History of the Living World (1995), and she has recently collaborated on a non-fiction collection with her father, entitled That Horse .

Haunani-Kay Trask Director of the Center for Hawaiian Studies, Professor of Hawaiian Studies at the University of Hawai'i at Manoa, and member of Ka Lahui Hawai'i, Dr. Trask is a versatile poet, scholar, teacher, public lecturer, and activist for Native Hawaiian rights. Trask is the author of Eros Power: the Promise of Feminist Theory, as well as two works on colonialism, Fighting the Battle of Double Colonization and From a Native Daughter: Colonialism and Sovereignty in Hawai'i (1993), and the poetry collection Light in the Crevice Never Seen (1994). Her essays and poems have been widely anthologized.

Albert Wendt As a writer, teacher, and editor, Albert Wendt has played a pivotal role in promoting cultural production in the Pacific. Born in Western Samoa, Wendt is the author of six novels (several of which have been made into feature films), two short story collections, two poetry collections, and major essays on Pacific literature (including "Toward a New Oceania"). He is the editor and introducer of the groundbreaking Lali: A Pacific Anthology (1990) and a follow-up anthology, Nuanua: Pacific Writing in English since 1980 as well. Wendt is currently Professor of English at the University of Auckland, having previously taught in Fiji and Samoa. Leaves of the Banyan Tree, Wendt's epic third novel, won the New Zealand Wattie Book of the Year Award, and is considered a classic of Pacific literature. Other works include the novels Sons for the Return Home, Flying-Fox in a Freedom Tree, Pouliuli, Black Rainbow, and Ola .

Accommodations

The majority of conference activities (including banquet and sessions on April 19 and 20) will be held at the Ala Moana Hotel. Accommodations at special conference rates will be available at the Ala Moana Hotel, 410 Atkinson Drive, Honolulu, adjacent to the Ala Moana Shopping Center and the Ala Moana Beach Park. The hotel is centrally located, ten minutes away from the more touristy areas of Waikiki and close to historic downtown Honolulu and Iolani Palace. Special rates for the conference are as follows:

Kona Tower--city view
$80 for single occupancy
$80 for double occupancy
Waikiki Tower--city view
$92 for single occupancy
$92 for double occupancy
$112 for triple occupancy

Rooms are subject to Hawai'i' s state excise tax of 4.17% and hotel room tax of 6.0% (rates are subject to change). Hotel rates in downtown Honolulu/Waikiki are generally very costly, and we highly recommend the quality and convenience of the accommodations at the Ala Moana Hotel, which is offering conference participants these excellent rates. Airport shuttles service the hotel.

As the conference will consist of 3 full days beginning April 18, 1997, we suggest that participants check-in by April 17. Reservations should be made by March 17, 1997. Room requests after this date will be confirmed based on space availability, and if available will be extended at the conference rate. Room extensions of three nights prior and three nights after the conference dates of April 18-20, 1997 will be honored at the conference rate. For reservations, call [redacted].

Transportation

United Airlines has agreed to provide discounted airfares to all conference attendees traveling to Honolulu from the United States and Canada. Reservations and schedule information may be obtained by calling the United Meetings Desk at [redacted] and referencing the ID Code 507SA. Meeting Desk hours are Monday thru Sunday, 7am to 12 midnight (EST).

Registration

Please print out this form, complete it, and mail it with your check payable to "East West Center" to:

MELUS Conference
English Department
1733 Donaghho Road
University of Hawai'i
Honolulu, HI 96822

DEADLINE for registration is January 15, 1997.

Last Name:
First Name:
University/Institutional Affiliation:
Address:
City:
State/Country:
Postal Code:
Daytime Phone:
Fax:
E-mail:

Non-Students $75
Students $50

Conference registration fee is non-refundable. Registration fee includes a banquet and two luncheons.

Please make checks payable to East West Center

↑ Index

409. Julia Stein
Re: POETICS Digest - 25 Aug 1996 to 26 Aug 1996
Tue 27 Aug 1996

>

>Maria Damon asks,
>another one for you geniuses (this is really useful): what does "Hannah" mean

>in >hebrew? i'm embarrassed to say i don't know. hanni i know means happy in >arabic, so maybe its the same thing?
>md
>
>----------

I once read that "Hannah" is an acronym for the three traditional tasks of Orthodox Jewish women: lighting Shabbas candles for the Sabbath; going to mikva or the ritual baths in order to keep the laws of ritual purity; and making hallah or white bread. Sorry, but I don't remember the citation.

I was named after my grandmother whose original name was Hannah. After she moved to this country, she anglicized it to "Anne." I used the above information in a poem I wrote about my name once called "The Songs of Two sisters, Hannah and Galia." I also was named after my great-aunt whose name was originally Galia & that got anglicized to "Julia."

Julie

↑ Index

410. Rachel Loden

Re: Robert Sward etc missed by UTOPIAN FORMALIST round-ups

Tue 27 Aug 1996

Ira, Sward's very much alive, and (according to catalogue) teaches at UC Santa Cruz extension.

Rachel

Ira Lightman wrote:
>
> Does anybody on the list have any interest in > Robert Sward? Born in the USA, lived and wrote
> (don't know if [redacted] still alive)

↑ Index

411. Gabrielle Welford

NCADP CASE BRIEF: South African Youngster Facing Death Row in Mississippi (fwd)

Tue 27 Aug 1996

This one shouldn't down your e-mail! gab.

---------- Forwarded message ---------- Note: Thank you to every one who requested more information on Azi's case. We regret not being able to respond to each individual query. However, we trust this case brief will shed a brighter light on Azi's life, the events leading up to his arrest, and the need for concerned people to become involved in stopping this grave injustice.

If you would like additional information, to find out how you can become involved in Azi's case or make a donation to Azi's defense fund please contact our offices at:

National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty
918 "F" Street, NW Suite 601
Washington, DC 20004
[redacted], ext.5
[redacted]

---Steven Hawkins
NCADP Executive Director

NCADP CASE BRIEF:

Azi Kambule: A South African 10th Grader Facing the Death Penalty in Mississippi

Azi's Background:

Azikiwe Kambule was born and raised in the black township of Soweto, directly outside of Johannesburg in South Africa. When Azi was 10-years-old, his parents moved to Spruitview, where he attended the Ridge School. Initially, school officials were concerned with Azi's admittance because he, like many children in Soweto, had missed many days of formal instruction on account of school boycotts in protest of Apartheid. These concerns were quickly alleviated. Azi not only performed NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE-- well in his classes, but found the time to participate actively in sports and sing in the school choir. After matriculating at the Ridge School, Azi attended Parktown Boys and was an exceptional student there as well.

In January of 1994, when he was 15-years-old, Azi moved with his parents to Jackson, Mississippi. They came to the United States because Azi's mother, Busisiwe, hacholarship to obtain a Bachelor's degree at Jackson State University in Psychology. Azi's father, Michael, joined the family a year later. Unable to find employment before his visitor's visa expired, Mike returned to South Africa a year later determined to find a job that would enable him to hire proper counsel for his son.

Although Azi had done well in the rigorous educational program at the Ridge School and Parktown Boys, the school authorities in Mississippi nevertheless required him to be held back. Azi was placed in 8th grade at the Chastain

Middle School in NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE-- Jackson. Far from being educationally deficient, Azi was accepted into the honors French class.

In 1995, Azi began 9th grade at Jackson's Murrah High School. He performed well in his classes during his freshman year and enjoyed singing in the school choir. While Azi had no difficulty adjusting academically, there were social problems. Because of his foreign accent and mannerisms, his peers would make fun of him. These social pressures mounted by the time Azi reached the 10th grade. Wanting to be accepted, Azi befriended a group of older youth who spent little time in class but NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE-- were very street-wise. When his grades began to fall, Azi's parents decided to scrape together the funds to send him to Piney Woods, a well-respected boarding school for black youth outside of Jackson. Azi was set to begin at this new school when tragedy struck.

Events Leading to Azi's Arrest:

On January 25, 1996, Azi was riding in a car driven by Santonio Berry, a man in his early twenties with a history of criminal behavior.

According to Azi's statement to the police, Berry saw Pam McGill drive by in a red sports car and stated that he wanted the vehicle. Berry drove behind Ms. McGill, and when she pulled into her apartment building's parking lot, he got our of his car with a gun. Berry forced Ms. McGill to move into the passenger seat of her vehicle and told NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- Azi to get in the back. Berry then drove from Jackson into neighboring Madison County. He stopped the car, instructed Ms. McGill to come with him and told Azi to stay in the car. Berry took Ms. McGill deep in to the woods. Azi could not see or hear them. He also could not leave because he did not know how to drive the car. Eventually, Berry returned saying that he had shot Ms. McGill.

Azi was arrested approximately one week later when an informant notified police that Berry had been trying to sell Ms. McGill's car. From the moment of his arrest, Azi was cooperative. He took the police out several times to where he thought Berry had stopped McGill's car. Azi -- a child from a foreign county with no drivers license, no car, and no knowledge of the area beyond Jackson -- was unable to pinpoint NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- the location. Eventually, some two months later, Berry took the police to the crime scene.

It was only then that authorities were able to verify that Ms. McGill had been killed. Azi was then charged as an accomplice to capital murder. This despite the fact that he had no criminal history; was not at the crime scene; and had cooperated fully with the authorities.

Madison County and The Impossibility of a Fair Trial:

The Hinds County prosecutor, Ed Peters, purposely moved Azi's trial to Madison County to increase the chance of a death sentence. As reported in the local NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- paper, Peters stated that he was moving the trial because the "jurors in [predominantly black] Hinds County have a reputation for refusing to vote for the death penalty."

Madison County has become a refuge community for white police and civil servants seeking to create a racially exclusive environment. Middle-class families in Madison tend to live in private communities where entry is limited and private security companies often share the beat with local police. In the towns where there is some Black presence-- such as Canton, the county seat -- public schools are almost devoid of white pupils. White children in these areas are routinely sent to low-cost private NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- Christian academies to thwart efforts at school desegregation.

Nor surprisingly, Madison County is the setting for John Grisham's A Time To Kill. Like neighboring Simpson County -- made famous in the late 1980s and early 1990s by the frequency with which young black inmates were found hanging by their belts and shoelaces -- law enforcement in Madison County has historically been racially biased.

In 1995, for example, amid wide-spread accusations of voter fraud and intimidation, federal agents had to be brought in to relieve the Sheriff's department of their election monitoring duties. The Black candidate for mayor of Canton had been expected to win and become the first African American to hold the post since Reconstruction. Under federal supervision, a new election was held. Shortly thereafter, Canton inaugurated its first Black mayor in over a century.

Earlier, in 1971, the Mississippi Supreme Court documented clear instances NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- in which Madison County officials had systematically excluded Blacks from jury rolls -- decades after the United States Supreme Court declared the practice unconstitutional. Civil rights groups and defense attorneys say that prosecutors in counties like Madison still routinely remove Blacks from juries in capital trials.

The Criminal Justice System in Mississippi:

Why is Azi-- a child with no criminal record (or history of violence), an honor student and someone who cooperated fully with the police-- being tried for capital murder? The answer lies in the political rewards of seeking the death penalty.

It is not uncommon for prosecutors to use high profile cases to propel NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- themselves into higher office. Madison County District Attorney John Kitchens sees his political future as being intimately linked with his ability to get harsh sentences in well publicized cases. This view pervades Mississippi politics.

Mississippi Governor has stated unequivocally that he intends to make Mississippi "the capital of capital punishment." For Fordice, the future of law enforcement and social control lies rooted in the past. Fordice has removed radios and televisions from prisons and reintroduced "zebra suits" as inmate uniforms. He also supported legislation that would have required violent criminals to receive six months of mandatory flogging upon entry into the state penitentiary. After Fordice's changes were NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- implemented, the state penitentiary system experienced its biggest inmate riots in years.

Seeking the death penalty against Black youth under circumstances like Azi's which do not warrant such extreme punishment is not rare in Mississippi. In the late 1980s a Black teenage mother, Sabrina Butler, was sentenced to death for allegedly bludgeoning her baby. Sabrina's claim that she had given failed CPR to her baby was not only ignored, but used to argue that she had no shame. Only when private attorneys and medical experts intervened was it determined that Sabrina was telling the truth. After spending years fighting to clear her name and facing execution, Sabrina NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- was found innocent and released. She left Mississippi's death row this year.

Children on Death Row in the U.S.: A Human Rights Violation and Racially Biased:

The situation in which Azi finds himself speaks volumes about the use of the death penalty against children. During this decade, only five nations in the world are known to have executed persons for crimes they committed when under 18-years-old. Those countries are Iran, Pakistan, Yemen, Saudi Arabia . . . and the United States. Of these five, America has executed the most. A condemned child in the United States also tends to be of darker hue -- 66% of those persons sentenced to death as children have been from racial minorities. In this century, 75% of all persons sentenced to death as children have been African American. Of the nine girls sentenced to death NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- in the history of the United States, eight were African American and one was Native American. Given these racially biased statistics, it is not surprising that Azi has been chosen for the death penalty.

And nowhere is the international rule of law more clear than the prohibition on the use of the death penalty against children. Nearly every major human rights treaty in the world expressly forbids sentencing children to death. Significantly, the United Nations Covenant on Rights of the Child, which the US has signed, clearly states: "Neither capital punishment nor life imprisonment without possibility of parole shall be imposed for offenses committed by persons below eighteen years of age" If the Madison County prosecutor is successful in his attempt to convict Azi as an NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- accomplice to capital murder, either of the possible sentences will violate international human rights standards.

Denied Bail, Azi Tries to Better Himself and Avoid Danger:

Although Azi had no history of violence or arrest, he was denied bail. He is currently being housed in the Madison County Jail. Since incarceration, Azi has continued his studies, having passed with high marks the initial tests for a general equivalency high school diploma. Azi has also received a letter of commendation from a correspondence Bible school. While trying to make the best of his terrible situation, Azi is also in great danger. As noted earlier, the Mississippi jail system has a history of Black teens being found dead in their cells. The occurrence has been so prevalent that NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- the United States Department of Justice conducted a full-scale investigation just a few years ago.

Azi is in particular danger because he has been assigned to share a cell with a person who has already been convicted of a crime. It is against the law to keep pre-trial detainees like Azi in the same cell with persons who have already been found guilty. Azi's cellmate continuously harasses Azi and threatens to do bodily harm to him. Azi has also been denied access to a spiritual adviser. His minister was suddenly denied access to visit with Azi; this is the first time in all his years of visiting persons in jail has the minister ever been stopped from going inside. Additionally, Azi has been NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE BRIEF--NCADP CASE- denied proper access to a telephone. The phone has been broken for several weeks, making it impossible for him to call his mother.

END OF BRIEF--NCADP--END OF BRIEF--NCADP--END OF BRIEF---NCADP--END

4 THINGS YOU CAN DO RIGHT NOW TO HELP SAVE AZI:

1) FORWARD THIS MESSAGE TO ALL OF YOUR FRIENDS AND PRESS CONTACTS

2) WRITE THE D.A.: ---Azi is a South African child who has no history of violence or prior run-ins with the law; was so far away from the murder that he did not even hear the gun shots; and has fully cooperated with the police. There is no reason why DA Kitchens should be seeking to kill him or put him behind bars for the rest of his life! -----JOHN KITCHENS, ESQ. / MADISON COUNTY DISTRICT ATTORNEY/P.O. BOX 121/ CANTON, MS 39046/[redacted]-fax /[redacted]-phone.

3)MAKE YOUR VOICE HEARD:
Please contact the following news organizations:
--Clarion-Ledger Newspaper:
"Mississippi's Newspaper"
[redacted]

--WLBT T.V. News
[redacted]

--Jackson Advocate Newspaper:
"The Voice of Black Mississippians"
300 N.Farish Street
Jackson,MS 39202
[redacted]--fax

4) Contact the NCADP to join the campaign.

--Inquiries and conrtributions should be directed to:
National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty
918 "F" Street, NW Suite 601
Washington, DC 20004
[redacted], ext.5
[redacted]

↑ Index

412. Peter Quartermain
AA in NH
Wed 28 Aug 1996

Assembling Alternatives is not a prospect for most of us, at least this far out of the New Hampshire core of things, and I for one would be grateful indeed for any reports, on fashion or no (Kevin, you'll be missed!), that EVERYONE there, surely (beg! Beg! cajole!), should send to the rest of us, please. I'm really sorry not to be going, and am thus in desperate need of a fix. Have a good time, all. It should be quite a shindig.

Peter
+ +
Peter Quartermain
128 East 23rd Avenue

Vancouver
B.C.
Canada V5V 1X2
Voice and fax: [redacted]

+ +

↑ Index

413. Tom Mandel
Gematria
Wed 28 Aug 1996

"a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,"

The term you are looking for, Maria, is Gematria. Doesn't Jerry Rothenberg have a large book based on Gematria?

It's not really a matter of divination or magic, by the way, as Kabbalah is also not really a matter of "the occult" (too much TV being watched by someone?) as someone referred to it.

Gematria is a mystical practice of the determination of meaning and the creation of meaning.

The word Kabbalah means, essentially, "tradition"

Scholem has an excellent introduction, smply called "Kabbalah", which is a compilation of his articles on K-related topics for a Jewish encyclopedia. It includes an essay on Gematria. His book "On the Kabbalah and its Symbolism," referred to elsewhere in this thread is one of the most extraordinary books I've ever read. For those looking for a long summer read (this is a little late of course), Scholem's _Sabbatai Sevi, The False Messiah_ will help one think for a decade or so. I could go on, but the simple way to put it is that anything by him is worth reading.

****
Tom Mandel * 2927 Tilden St. NW
Washington DC 20008 * [redacted]
vox: [redacted] * fax [redacted]
****

↑ Index

414. Gwyn McVay
Re: Gematria
Wed 28 Aug 1996

Hey Tom,

/APR/ responded positively to my query about a review of PROSPECT OF RELEASE, and now I have to write the damn thing. Did Charles write a press release or any other PR blah blah about the book? Is there anything I should know, or any angle to take, that isn't obvious from the author's note? I want to make this a killer review so we can get PROSPECT some good ink.

Gwyn McVay

↑ Index

415. Wendy Battin
Re: Robert Sward etc missed by UTOPIAN FORMALIST round-ups
Wed 28 Aug 1996

Ira,
You can find several of Sward's books on-line in the Contemporary American Poetry Archive:
http://shain.lib.conncoll.edu/CAPA/capa.html

His homepage:
http://www.cruzio.com/~scva/rsward.html

Wendy

Wendy Battin [redacted]

(home) http://camel.conncoll.edu/ccother/wjbat/
(CAPA) http://shain.lib.conncoll.edu/CAPA/capa.html

↑ Index

416. Gwyn McVay
Swear word here!
Wed 28 Aug 1996

---

big oops--private message went to the list again--at least it wasn't the one about my intrigue with Rachel L. while Pierre took pictures--

Gwyn, tres embarrassed

↑ Index

417. Hank Lazer
Re: mandel / release
Wed 28 Aug 1996

Gwyn--

Embarrassed or not, I'm glad to hear that APR is interested. I just sent Tom a letter of gratitude for PROSPECT OF RELEASE (just released from Chax). Tom's book, which I had read in manuscript a few years ago, is extraordinary. Charles A did a beautiful design job, and the cover design too is wonderful.

From my perspective, Tom's book does so many things that hostile critics of "experimental" poetries say can't be found in such poetries. First, is the emotional intensity (which Ron Silliman claims on the book jacket of PROSPECT, and which Ron already e-mailed to Poetics). In my opinion, Ron's claims ("these are the most intensely felt poems I have ever read") are not hyperbolic. Second, Tom's work is attached to a significant, recognizable, and personal event: the death of his father. Third, he risks moments of didacticism and directness of statement. Fourth, there is a substantial and serious engagement with issues that might be called religious (Jewish), metaphysical, and spiritual.

I do not know Celan's poetry very well, so I suspect that I miss certain resonances in Tom's book. Tom's series of fifty sonnets strike me as most like Rilke's _Sonnets to Orpheus_--a similarly grave engagement with death. As someone whose own father died this past winter, I found myself moved by Tom's book into reflection and into new writing. I hope that others on the List might take a look at Tom's book, which ends:

One whom I thought abandoned me returned.

Another I asked to stay must leave.
From you I learn better and now know why each mind must bend, but only to its task, soul dancing at the prospect of release.

↑ Index

418. Carnography
Re: Gematria
Wed 28 Aug 1996

Tom Mandel:

> "a system of magic or divination based on words or letters,"
>
> It's not really a matter of divination or magic, by the way, as Kabbalah is also not really a matter of "the occult" (too much TV being watched by someone?) as someone referred to it.

Actually, no one said that Kaballah was a "matter of the occult." This is what I said:

> Some people who study the occult, a few of whom I've met, maintain that (and please don't kill the messenger) Kabbalism is a variant of Eastern mysticism. No authoritative text that I've read verifies this--but > I have seen the bible-code idea referred to in _On the Kaballah and Its Symbolism_, by Gershom Scholem.

Thus, what was referred to was an interpretation of Kabbalism, not Kabalism itself.

BTW: Since the Kaballah itself was not referred to as "the occult," and since I gave other sources for my information, it is misleading to refer to my research as "too much TV-watching." Moreover, your characterization of occult practitioners--people who study Blavatsky, Crowley, etc--as TV phantoms might just as easily be dismissed as the result of "too much TV-watching"--if I were inclined to make ad hominem accusations.

Much so-called white magic is based on eclectic interpretations of Kabbalism. Various texts,some of which I've cited here, involve such interpretations, (see Blavatsky's _Treatise on White Magic_, if you can stand it--I can't), as do taped lectures from the Theosophical Society's Lodge, for example. I have known people who practiced magic since I was twelve (Novelist John Shirley being the first). Is it fair to presume that the ideas you question come from television rather than from familiarity with religious sects and practitioners whose principles you find dubious?

Listening to the OTO (and other popular magic sects) interpret Kabbalism is a bit like enduring a heavy metal version of Vivaldi. Still, certain popular magic practices are relevant to this conversation, which was originally about magic rather than Hebrew mysticism a la carte.

Look at the way in which the Sephira have been interpreted in magical practice: This has more to do with an occult interpretation of Kabbalah than with Kabbalism itself.

Obviously, if one wishes to study Kabbalism, it is wisest to go to the source--which is why I cited Schocken's _On The Kabbalah and Its Symbolism_ long before anyone else mentioned the name. But the Sanskrit bible idea has nothing to with early Jewish mysticism: that came into fashion far later (post-Golden Dawn?) with a different set of practitioners. It was the Sanskrit idea that I referred to in the context of occult interpretation.

There is no reason for you to have to agree with any occult interptretation of Kabbalism: I don't, hence my earlier comment on not "killing the messenger." But neither should you deny the existence of such unorthodox variants. OTO ceremonies sometimes take place in a building visible from my roommate's window. Neo-medieval, neo-mystical, neo-gnostic magicians, all of whom make use of concepts taken from Kabbalah, exist outside my very door and not merely on TV.

However, thanks for the term gematria.

> Gematria is a mystical practice of the determination of meaning and the creation of meaning.

All the best,

Rob Hardin

PS: Thanks to all for honoring my request not to respond to my post because I'm too busy. Who said that manners were obsolete?

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

419. Tenney Nathanson
raw & cooked (reheated?)
Wed 28 Aug 1996

Did the question of where the "raw and cooked" as tropes for American poultry came from ever get solved on the list?

anyway I came across another candidate, or a candidate (not sure whether someone mentioned this one already) on p. 277 of Ian Hamilton's big biography of Lowell, there's an account of Lowell using these terms, in 1960, in his National Book Award address. Hamilton claims this is the first use of raw/cooked for talking about poetry.

Tenney

(I guess I might as well confess to still teaching LSFUD in my contemporary poetry course:

btw:

Lowell, LSFUD
Bishop, Collected
Merrill, Selected
O'Hara, Selected
Ashbery, Selected
Koch, On the Great Atlantic Rainway: Selected Poems
Bernstein, Dark City
Scalapino: Way (last 30 copies on earth?)
Hunt, Local Histories
Mullen, Muse & Drudge

6th man award:
Notley, Descent of Alette

↑ Index

420. Wendy Battin
Virtual Muse
Wed 28 Aug 1996

Just out:

Virtual Muse: Experiments in Computer Poetry by Charles O. Hartman from Wesleyan

Paper $14.95
Cloth $35 ISBN: 0819522392

& Northwestern University Press is about to release a re-print of Hartman's _Free Verse: An Essay on Prosody_, which has been o.p.
 ISBN: 0810113163 $14.95 paper

Wendy B

Wendy Battin [redacted]
(home) http://camel.conncoll.edu/ccother/wjbat/
(CAPA) http://shain.lib.conncoll.edu/CAPA/capa.html

↑ Index

421. George Bowering
Re: Marlatt
Wed 28 Aug 1996

> Have more perhaps heard of Daphne Marlatt? Far and away my favourite Canadian writer, got into no Canadian anthologies; as she was born outside Canada; and I've often wondered if she only started to get in because her work in the eighties started to feel representative of a "minority group", as a gay writer, as a feminist writer, not just because she's a really good writer.

The notion that Daphne did not get into anthologies (she did, though) because she was born outside of Canada is not tenable. If it took a while for her to get into anthologies it was largely because she was (a) from the west coast, and (b) she was identified as part of an avant-garde movement--while most of the anthologies were made by squares from back east. She certainly never had any problem getting into my anthologies.

If you want to see a case of someone who does not get into anthologies enough, have a look at Robin Blaser, who does not get into those recent US anthologies of contemporary poetry (maybe because he is a canadian), and is not gathered by the squares back east, (perhaps because he was an American), and does not get into regular anthologies because he is perceived to be difficult.

Being perceived to be difficult is the main reason that people do not get into anthologies (other than second-ratedness). Do you remember who were the first Allen Anthology poets to get into Nortons and other such anthologies? Ferlinghetti, Snyder and Levertov. They have never been thought difficult.

George Bowering.

"Nuestros cuerpos se cubren

de una yedra de s=EDlabras."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

--Octavio Paz

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

=20

↑ Index

422. George Bowering

Re: AA in NH

Wed 28 Aug 1996

> Assembling Alternatives
> is not a prospect for most of us, at least this far out of the New Hampshire core of things, and I for one would be grateful indeed for any reports, on fashion or no (Kevin, you'll be missed!), that EVERYONE there, surely (beg! Beg! cajole!), should send to the rest of us, please. I'm really sorry not to be going, and am thus in desperate need of a fix. Have a good time, all. It should be quite a shindig.
>
> Peter
> +
> Peter Quartermain
> 128 East 23rd Avenue
> Vancouver
> B.C.
> Canada V5V 1X2
> Voice and fax: [redacted]
>
> +

Oh, that Quartermain. Needs his Brit-fix.

George Bowering.

"Nuestros cuerpos se cubren

de una yedra de sílabras."

2499 West 37th Ave.,

Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

--Octavio Paz

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

423. George Bowering

Re: Swear word here!

Wed 28 Aug 1996

> *big oops--private message went to the list again--at least it wasn't the one about my intrigue with Rachel L. while Pierre took pictures--*
>
> Gwyn, tres embarrassed

That was YOU? As Pierre is a lousy photographer, but a great poet, it was hard to tell who the partly-clad person was. I thought it looked a little like David Bromige, but the tan wasnt deep enough.

George Bowering. "Nuestros cuerpos se cubren

de una yedra de s=EDlabras."

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

--Octavio Paz

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted] =20

↑ Index

424. Rachel Loden

Re: Swear word here!

Thu 29 Aug 1996

George Bowering added ("That was YOU?"):

> *big oops--private message went to the list again--at least it wasn't the one about my intrigue with Rachel L. while Pierre took pictures--*
>
> Gwyn, tres embarrassed
>
> That was YOU? As Pierre is a lousy photographer, but a great poet, it was hard to tell who the partly-clad person was. I thought it looked a little like David Bromige, but the tan wasnt deep enough.

I certainly hope Pierre finished duplicating the pictures so we can clean up in New Hampshire. Btw that WAS Bromige in the corner, but he seemed more interested in his baseball card collection (despite all the brave talk about "desire"). P.S. Pierre, when do we get paid for the shoot?

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

425. Gwyn McVay
Re: Swear word here!
Thu 29 Aug 1996

On Thu, 29 Aug 1996, Rachel Loden wrote:

> George Bowering added ("That was YOU?"):
>
<snip>

> > That was YOU? As Pierre is a lousy photographer, but a great poet, it was > > hard to tell who the partly-clad person was. I thought it looked a little > > like David Bromige, but the tan wasnt deep enough.
>
> I certainly hope Pierre finished duplicating the pictures so we can > clean up in New Hampshire. Btw that WAS Bromige in the corner, but > he seemed more interested in his baseball card collection (despite > all the brave talk about "desire"). P.S. Pierre, when do we get > paid for the shoot?
>
> Rachel Loden
>
If Bromige's other flank had been showing, he would have been recognized by the tattoo on his left, well, anyway, of Venus surrounded by cherubs and scalapinos. However, this body art is very similar to one Mark Wallace has, of Venus surrounded by veal scaloppini, so I understand why there might have been confusion.

Gwyn McVay

↑ Index

426. Tom Mandel
Gematria
Thu 29 Aug 1996

Yes, sorry for reading too quickly and conflating phrases and sentences to saddle you, Rob, with a description of Kabbalah as relating to "the occult," although perhaps I was also being a bit of a snob too, as in fact there are aspects of "occultism" and "popular religion" in the long Kabbalist tradition.

And deep thanks to Gwyn and Hank. I remember David Bromige once saying "you get your readers one by one" or as Bob Dylan puts it in "Every Grain of Sand" "Sometimes I turn, there's someone there / other times it's only me."

Best to all.

Tom

****
Tom Mandel * 2927 Tilden St. NW
Washington DC 20008 * [redacted]
vox: [redacted] * fax [redacted]
****

↑ Index

427. Carl Lynden Peters
THINKINGalien (fwd)
Thu 29 Aug 1996

thot this may be of interest to some --

> THINKING alien
> is an international, inter-disciplinary event > sponsored jointly by the Centre for the Study of Cultural Values, > University of Lancaster, and the Centre for Cultural Studies, > University of Leeds, to be held at Leeds University (Roger Stevens > Building) on 16 & 17 September 1996
>
> THINKING alien brings together over 50 speakers from the fields of > cultural, aesthetic and literary theory, from philosophy, musicology, > sociology and psychology
>
> PANEL TOPICS INCLUDE:
> the philosophy of gilles deleuze; legacies of the situationists;
> science fiction and cultural theory; alien aesthetics; prosthetics, > technology, culture; antihumanism and feminism; donna harraway and the > cyborg; nomadic spaces; abjection, alienation and artefactuality;
> intimations of apocalypse; technologies of sound; music and dance;
> sonic expression
> plus multimedia performances from -jim flint - switch - digital chaos
> - angus carlyle
>
> FEES:
> stlg20/stlg15 concessions - cheques payable to University of Leeds - send > to: THINKINGalien Dept. of Fine Art University of Leeds LEEDS LS 2 9JT

please include your mail address for full conference programme (abstracts, information, accommodation) conference registration 9.00 - 11.00 hrs, 16 september - final panel ends 19.30 hrs, 17 september

ACCOMMODATION:
the organisers regret that there is only a limited amount of university accommodation available - for university accommodation contact - 0113 2336100 - for hotel accommodation contact Leeds Leisure Services - 0113 2425242 - or see programme for hotel listings

THINKING alien is run in conjunction with close very very close
a sequence of time-based installations - a programme of film and video roger stevens building, university of leeds, 16 - 17 september, 10.00 - 17.00 hrs information email: [redacted]

FUTUREsonic
at back to basics, leeds, 17 september, 1pm - 6am
a unique multimedia symposium and club event - exploring and extending the horizons of electronic music and dance culture - concessionary rate of stlg8 to all attending THINKINGalien information email:
[redacted] - http://www.phreak.co.uk/haywire/futuresonic

THINKINGalien
specialists in cultural capital since 1996

THINKING alien

an international, inter-disciplinary conference sponsored by the centre for cultural studies, university of leeds, and the centre for the study of cultural values, university of lancaster to be held at Leeds University (Roger Stevens Building) on 16 & 17 September 1996

PAPERS AND PRESENTATIONS:

sara ahmed (lancaster university): phantasies of becoming - john armitage (northumbria university): accelerated aesthetics: paul virillio's vision machine - rachel armstrong (multimedia producer, occ multimedia): the anatomy of aliens - richard barbrook (westminster university): the sacred cyborg - j. barton (warwick university) - hinterlands:music, micro-politics, deleuze and guattari - diane beddoes (leeds university): side communication - a. bennett (durham university/ i.a.s.p.m.): t.b.c. - andrew blake: the difference engine: music outside theory - fred botting and scott wilson (lancaster university): ghosts of the machine: artificial imaginaries and the second death - micheal bull (goldsmiths): technologies of the visible, technologies of the invisible: walkman use as a strategy of looking and disappearing - pete buse (salford university): actor inhuman - angus carlyle (warwick university): the k's to key largo (audio-visual presentation) - carolyn brown (greenwich university): celibatory machines: cyborgs, cybersex and the uncanny logic of the letter - duncan campbell (university of wales): s and before p? microserfs and the "new" - micheal corsten: the dispositif of rave - jane crawford (warwick university): fyb(erd)roids: alien nomad - digital chaos: multi-media presentation - the discourse unit (chairs - angel j. gordo-lopez (bradford university) and ian parker (bolton institute): workshop - abjection, alienation and artefactuality: cyberpsychological prosthetic memory - dagmar fink and anne scheidhauer (university of frankfurt/main): cyborg narratives - phil edwards: cultural pimping and the overthrow of situations: (anti)situationist art - jim flint: multi-media presentation - mariam fraser (loughborough university): springs and flows: foucault, feminism and deleuze - jennifer friedlander (university of pittsburgh): capturing children/ preserving aliens - mark goodall (leeds university): basic banalities: a sonic evocation of the work of guy debord - phil goodchild (st. martins, lancaster): alien ethics: deleuzean ethos vs. postmodern morality - ray guines and omayra cruz (leeds university): hopeful narratives and monstrous aliens - paul haynes (lancaster university): we have never been human - graham harvey (king alfred's, winchester): the technologies of ecstasy: techno-shamanic techniques of ecstasy and neo-shamanic healing therapies - andrew hussey (huddersfield university) and gavin bowd (manchester university): le musee guy debord: paris by night - alessandro imperato (keele university): inner space: symptoms of alienation - barbara kennedy (staffordshire university): "k(n)ights in white satin:" faciality, film and fin-de-siecle femmes - nick land (warwick university): contagious rhythmic practices - nigel liddel (leeds university): a geometry for life - celia lury (lancaster university): prosthetic culture and identity - iain mackenzie (queen's university, belfast): thinking differently: vitalism in the political philosophy of gilles deleuze - bruce mcclure (warwick university): xenoglossolalia: alien tongues - catherine maidens (huddersfield university): "beneath the pose" the feminine and the alien - sarah marklew (bolton institute): the double within science fiction film - roland miller (huddersfield university): manufacturing an alienated nation - simon o'sullivan (leeds university): of angels and aliens - william pawlette (loughborough university): utility and excess: the radical sociology of bataille and baudrillard - carl peters (simon fraser university, british columbia): bp nichol and concrete poetry as a source of writing and allegory - j. pettigrew: koan: how long will koan music last? andrew quick (lancaster university): presentation t.b.c. - andrea rehberg (greenwich university): nietzsche's desert thought - david rice (university of california): alien prophecy - j.k.l.scott (university of wales): loving the alien: pluralism, polyculturalism and voodoo existence - kay schaffer (university of adelaide): the contested zone: cybernetics, feminism and representation - rob shields (lancaster university): cultures of the internet - mark sinker: taking sweets from unearthly strangers: radio waves, unearthly voices, long-distance desire - c.r.r. smethurst (warwick uiversity): jungle duration - david sorfa: erasure and apocalypse in three texts - marcella stecher (vienna): inner body to outer space: deconstructing femininity in ridley scott's "alien" - william stephenson (leeds university): the tape that exploded: william borroughs and sonic parody - paul sutton (bradford university): remembering the future: postcards from an alien world - switch: grey matter (audio-visual presentation) - acim szepanski (force inc. and mille plateaux records, hamburg): t.b.c.- yvan tardy (de montford university): art, everyday life, spectacle: a situationist trilogy - imogen tyler (manchester metropolitan university) and bruce bennett (bolton institute): donna harraway's primate visions: science, fiction and speculative futures - neil todd (manchester university): rhythmic motion: neuronal representations of rhythm and time - j. urpeth (greenwich university): alien forms: the vitalisation of form in art - steven h. weinberger (george mason university, fairfax): search for the perfect alien language - dan welch (lancaster university): alien abduction and the memoro-politics of apocalypse - alan wright (university of florida): echomania: from the dialectical image to the dub encounter

THINKING alien

ACCOMMODATION:

the organisers regret that there is only a limited amount of university accommodation for university accommodation contact- 0113 2336100 for hotel accommodation contact Leeds Leisure Services - 0113 2425242 - or see programme for hotel listings

> FEES:
> stlg20/stlg15 concessions - cheques payable to University of Leeds > send to:
> THINKINGalien
> Dept. of Fine Art
> University of Leeds
> LEEDS
> LS 2 9JT
> please include your mail address for full conference programme (abstracts, information, accommodation) conference registration 9.00 - 11.00 hrs, 16 september final panel ends 19.30 hrs, 17 september
>
> THINKING alien is organised in conjunction with:
>
> close very very close
> a sequence of time-based installations - a programme of film and video > roger stevens building, university of leeds, 16 - 17 september, 10.00 - 17.00 hrs information email: [redacted]
>
> FUTUREsonic
> a unique multimedia symposium and club event - exploring and extending the horizons of electronic music and dance culture - stlg8 concessionary rate for conference attendees
> http://www.phreak.co.uk/haywire/futuresonic back to basics, leeds, 17 september, 1pm - 6am information email: [redacted]

↑ Index

428. Julia Stein
Re: Justice for Garment Workers Reading
Thu 29 Aug 1996

A Justice for Garment Workers Literary Reading will take place:
September 8th, Sunday,
5:00 pm
Midnight Special Bookstore
Santa Monica CA
[redacted]

Taking part will be:
Mary Helen Ponce
Carol Schwalberg
Julia Stein
Edna Bonacich

This reading is in soldarity with the UNITE campaign against Guess Inc. and is sponsored by Los Angeles local, National Writers Union/U.A.W. and Common Threads from Carol Tarlen's poem "Sisters in the Flames" about the Triangle Fire:

Sister of the flames
take my hand
I will hold you in the cradle of my billowing skirt in the ache of my shoulders the center of my palm our sisters already dance on the sidewalk nine floors below the fire is leaping through my hair Sister I will hold you the air will lick our thighs grab my hand
together now fly
the sky is an unlocked door and the machines are burning

↑ Index

429. Blair Seagram
12? in sanskrit
Fri 30 Aug 1996

Does anybody know what the sanskrit word for 12 is?

Blair

↑ Index

430. Michael Boughn
need some info
Fri 30 Aug 1996

Does anybody on the list know of a book called _Un Homme grand: Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures_? I'm having a really hard time tracking it down. Even Buffalo doesn't seem to have it. I'm specifically interested in an essay by Gerald Nicosia called "Kerouac: Writer without a home".

Thanks,
Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

431. Diane Marie Ward
Re: need some info
Fri 30 Aug 1996

The book Un homme grand : Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures= Jack Kerouac at the crossroads of many cultures -- is available at the University of Buffalo - we have 2 copies -- if you like (since I spend most of my daylight hours working for the Libraries) I can put you in touch with our Inter Library Loan Program / or put you in touch with the Poetry Collection. Email me backchannel.

Also, does anyone have an email address for John (J. W.) Curry in Toronto?

On Fri, 30 Aug 1996, Michael Boughn wrote:

> Does anybody on the list know of a book called _Un Homme grand: Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures_? I'm having a really hard time tracking it down. Even Buffalo doesn't seem to have it. I'm specifically interested in an essay by Gerald Nicosia called "Kerouac: Writer without a home".
>
> Thanks,
> Mike
> [redacted]

Diane Ward
[redacted]
State University of New York at Buffalo

THE AESTHETE'S LIST : http://www.acsu.buffalo.edu/~dward/

"I dreamt I dwelt in marble halls,
And woke to find it true;
I wasn't born for an age like this;
Was Smith, Was Jones, Were you?" -- George Orwell written in 1935.

↑ Index

432. Gale Nelson
Events in Providence
Fri 30 Aug 1996

The following events are planned for Providence in the coming weeks:

Wed, 4 Sep.
Poetry readings by Maurice Scully (Dublin) and Tony Lopez (Devon)
8:00 pm TF Green, Young Orchard Street, between Hope & Cook, East Side

Thu, 5 Sep.
Performance work by MURMUR
8:00 pm TF Green (see above for address)

Tue, 10 Sep.
Mixed genre readings by Lori Baker (fiction) and Gale Nelson (poetry)
7:00 pm Little Professor Book Center, N. Main Street

Thu, 12 Sep.
Night of A Thousand and One Readings by the Graduate Students of Brown Creative Writing
8:00 pm TF Green (see above for address)

Thu, 19 Sep.
Poetry reading by August Kleinzahler, visiting assoc. professor at Brown
8:00 pm TF Green (see above for address)

Thu, 26 Sep.
Fiction reading by Robert Coover
8:00 pm TF Green (see above address)

1-5 Oct.
Unspeakable Practices III
A festival of vanguard narrative, organized by Robert Coover
Brown campus, various locations

All events listed above are free and open to the public. All save the Little Professor Book Center Reading are sponsored by Creative Writing, Brown University.

↑ Index

433. Joe Amato
Re: interesting article on the web
Fri 30 Aug 1996

---

a few weeks back, chris funkhouser posted in about an article on the web entitled

"virtual whiteness and narrative diversity"

by one joe lockard of uc/berkeley...

just finished reading the piece, found it to be extremely interesting, and i too recommend it to those of you with an interest in questions of race/ethnicity and how critical discourse relating to these latter may be brought to bear on cspace...

again, at

http://darkwing.uoregon.edu/~heroux/uc4/4-lockard.html

best,

joe

↑ Index

434. Christina Fairbank Chirot

Street-Art: File: "DATABASE OUTPUT" (fwd)

Fri 30 Aug 1996

This of much interest & concern--to be aware of.

(fwd. dbchirot)
---------- Forwarded message ----------

For Immediate Release: A.R.T.I.S.T. president Robert Lederman's New Trial Date Set For 9/9/96

A new trial date has been set for Monday 9/9/96 Jury Part 1, 5th floor 100 Centre Street, Criminal Court Bldg. 9:30 A.M. The previously scheduled trial date of 7/30 was unexpectedly adjourned when a roomful of print and T.V. journalists showed up to cover the proceedings. Robert Lederman will be the first N.Y.C. street artist brought to trial. The prosecuting the case is D.A. David Jaffe. Judge Pickholtz is scheduled to hear the trial. Lederman is represented by attorney and one-time prosecutor, Marc Agnifilo [redacted]. The defense has six eyewitnesses to the illegal arrest prepared to testify.

Since 1993 the City has handcuffed and arrested more than 350 artists for displaying or selling their paintings on N.Y.C. streets. While it has avoided prosecuting any artist's case, the City continues to sell thousands of works of fine art it has illegally confiscated at its monthly forfeiture auction at One Police Plaza. D.A.'s and judges have begun publicly expressing disapproval of the policy.

Lederman is charged with Unlicensed General Vending and two additional charges of Disorderly Conduct. Each charge carries a possible three month sentence. This is an unusual case in that the Disorderly Conduct charges as described by D.A. Jaffe at a preliminary hearing involve nothing more than the defendant handing out literature, holding up a protest sign that read, "Stop Arresting Artists", photographing the police confiscating another artists' work and handing out eight protest signs to other artists present. These activities, as well as displaying art, are fully protected by the First Amendment. Lederman has been arrested twice before for distributing literature exposing the City's artist arrest policy and numerous times while displaying his art.

At a preliminary hearing held on 6/27 prosecuting D.A. David Jaffe told the presiding judge, "Robert Lederman has been arrested 13 times. If we don't stop him this will only continue. Before being arrested he handed out protest signs to the other artists and they marched up and down. He's even displaying photos of artists being arrested alongside his paintings."

At that hearing the judge appeared predisposed to find Lederman guilty regardless of the facts in the case. Lederman's attorney was told he couldn't talk about the First Amendment. The judge and D.A. didn't want the defense to enter photographs taken at the arrest scene, which contradict the police report, as evidence. The judge also denied the defense the right to subpoena witnesses to testify on N.Y.C.'s vending ordinance or to enter relevant testimony by City officials from the ongoing street artist Federal suit, including the Corporation Counsel's admission that artists, "...cannot obtain a Vending License". [Lederman v. City of New York 94 civ. 7216 (MGC)]. The Federal case is presently before the 2nd Circuit Federal Appeals Court with a decision expected at any time. Numerous museums, arts and legal rights groups, including the ACLU, The Whitney and MOMA have joined the suit in support of the artist- plaintiffs.

Lederman is president of A.R.T.I.S.T. an advocacy group of over 200 New York street artists. He has been an outspoken critic of Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's quality of life arrest policies and of City Council Member Kathryn Freed. Freed is known to be a motivating force behind the artist arrests and, according to the N.Y. Times, is in Federal Court "..seeking to overturn Constitutional protection for visual art". Observers believe this Criminal Court trial is an attempt to intimidate artist activists.

Recently, Lederman and other A.R.T.I.S.T. members distributed a controversial leaflet at Criminal Court ("Why Plead Guilty?") advising so-called "quality of life" defendants to not plead guilty or accept plea bargaining arrangements and to demand a trial. Members of the D.A.'s office, defense lawyers and judges agreed with the leaflet, causing the Giuliani administration considerable embarrassment. A number of reporters claim they've been pressured by City officials and by the NYPD not to continue covering the street artist issue.

For more information or to receive a press kit contact
A.R.T.I.S.T. [redacted] E-mail [redacted]
or visit the A.R.T.I.S.T. web page:
http://www.openair.org/alerts/artist/nyc.html
Photos of this and other artist arrests are available.

References to this trial, artist arrests and related material can be found in the following:
New York Times, Sunday July 14, 1996, City section pg 13, lead story); "The War of Nerves Downtown; Kathryn Freed's War of Nerves" [detailed expose of City Council Member Freed]
New York Times Magazine, Sunday July 14, 1996 pg. 8 The City
"It's a Quality, Quality Life"

Art In America, March 1996 pg. 128 "New Allies for Street Artists"
New York Times Wednesday, January 24, 1996 Metro section pg. B1 "Street Art: Free Speech or Just Stuff?"
New York Magazine, January 23, 1995 pg 16 "Among the Artlaws"
Christian Science Monitor Thursday, July 14, 1994 pg. 11 "New York Reins In Street Art"
Christian Science Monitor Wednesday, February 14, 1996 "Conflict On the Street: Artists v. N.Y.C."
Time Out Magazine Feb 21-27 1996 pg. 18 "Peddle Pushers"
New York Amsterdam News Saturday, June 15, 1996 pg. 4 "Artists To Sue Over First Amendment Right of Speech".

↑ Index

435. Jordan Davis
(no subject)
Fri 30 Aug 1996

CURRENT PRICE LIST from SUBPOETICS/POETRY CITY

Sea Lyrics by Lisa Jarnot $5
Western Love by Bill Luoma $5
Lapsis Linguae by Marcella Durand $5
Immediate Orgy & Audit by Ange Mlinko $5
August by Dan Bouchard (special issue of Compound Eye, ed. A. Mlinko) $1
Thunk by Kevin Davies $3
A Little Gold Book by Jordan Davis $5
Sincerity Loops by Steve Carll $5

and now...

MASS AVE, ed. by Dan Bouchard $5
since 1996
Mass Ave has featured such writers as Jawanza Ali Keita, Ange Mlinko, Jordan Davis, Renee Gladman, Chris Stroffolino, David Baratier, Giovanni Singleton, Bill Luoma, Lisa Amber Phillips, Beth Anderson, Meredith Quartermain, Steve Carll, Michael Leddy and David Golumbia--

"the tightest
pants in heaven"

To order, send an email to [redacted] with your street address and the books you need. Add $3 for first class shipping, orders over $25 add $0 for shipping even though here in New York we have to take all of our packages to the post office somebody with a tv let me know if the unabomber movie is any good.

Jordan Davis
46 E 7 #10
NYC 10003
[redacted]

↑ Index

436. George Bowering
Re: Kerouac
Fri 30 Aug 1996

> Does anybody on the list know of a book called _Un Homme grand: Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures_? I'm having a really hard time tracking it down. Even Buffalo doesn't seem to have it. I'm specifically interested in an essay by Gerald Nicosia called "Kerouac: Writer without a home".
>
> Thanks,
> Mike
> [redacted]

Mike,

Yeah, the book is as you titled it. Edited by Pierre Anctil, Louis Dupont, Remi Ferland and Eric Waddell. Published by carleton University Press, 1990. It's proceedings from that Kerouac conference in Quebec.It is distributed by Oxford, so shd be easily obtainable. Nicosia's piece is 20pp long.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"Nuestros cuerpos se cubren

de una yedra de s=EDlabras."

--Octavio Paz

=20

↑ Index

437. Douglas Messerli
Re: Hannah Weiner
Fri 30 Aug 1996

Sun & Moon is publishing PAW soon in its new magazine:
Mr Knife, Miss Fork. Hannah's wonderful narrative will be one of the major works in that special issue devoted to the "theatrical" in lit.

Douglas Messerli

At 10:11 PM 8/26/96 -0500, you wrote:
>james sherry writes:
>> Roof Books will publish Hannah's Weiner's <<We Speak Silent>> this fall. I >> will try to make a special offer to the list when the book becomes available.
>
>goody! in the meantime, where can i get "PAH" or PAW, that charles mentioned?
>>
>> Meanwhile, Maria, I wonder about your theory. The themes in Hannah's >> writing don't seem to me to have much to do with holocaust. A list of >> them would show late sixties tv and political issues, the fast, >> lsd, family, friends, and isolation. Why not take her at her word?
>
>i'm not talking about thematics so much as effect; her writing as an effect of >post-holocaust (Jewish) subjectivity. something like that. not trying to >ferret out any subtext. still, thanks for the list of identifiable themes.
>>
>> The interest for me in Hannah's writing has always been her ability to >> weave through inside and out without the usual membranes and transitions.
>> For Hannah much of what we call art comes quite easily to her once she >> has put herself in a particular position, which I don't need to characterize.
>
>good point; i like stuff about weaving and membranes.
>>
>> Also see Maria Damon's essay in the new issue of <<Chain>>: Hannah makes >> a pure play at consciousness by mixing genres. Sometimes she succeeds and >> the reader is pleased.
>
>interesting; what specific genres wd u say she mixes?
>>
>> James
>maria d
>

↑ Index

438. jeffrey timmons

xxx/event: one

Thu 25 Jan 1996

---

xxx/event: one

they took over the campus at arizona state university this week
75,000 people coming for the supperbowl
corporate hospitality suites rise over the sacred parking lots worshiped by high and low alike classes were cancelled for two days closed the library early locked the doors completely to accomodate
stuporsunday
official souvenir vendor distribution sites for all this splurf-fest capital guzzle feed-trough
greenback shower of the sports season
a soft-drink company (who will remain anonymous so as not to endorse this product unwittingly)
will throw a party for students with hot dogs for sale
a local hemp spokesman says he will sell dope at the scupperbog
the economic wind fall for tempe phoenix
arizona will be tremendous according to the saturation coverage by the arizona republic(an) for the potential to "cash-in"
on the xxx/event
arizona state university is "bloated and inefficient"
according to a republican govenor whos filed for bankruptcy
budget cuts will likely lead to tuition raises while the other two state schools will suffer no such cutbacks
the stutterbloff is on more peoples minds than the next goverment shut-down
arizona state university students marched down
the main strip of tempe protesting the ironies of this money-gozzling fleet-ditch diving city . . .

↑ Index

439. Douglis Beck

Corbu Poetics?

Sat 31 Aug 1996

---

does anyone know of poetics works mentioning, dealing with, anything on Le Corbusier's Ronchamp Chapel? I imagine this is a longshot, but architecture school makes you desperate. & hey Rod(Smith)--did you ever get the (e)mail I sent you so very long ago? thanks. douglis

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

September 1996

608 messages · Sat 31 Aug 1996 – Mon 30 Sep 1996

September 1996: cruise missiles into Iraq on the third, Tupac Shakur shot in Las Vegas on the seventh and dead of it on the thirteenth, the Defense of Marriage Act signed in the small hours of the twenty-first. Of the three the list registers one, and only as a forwarded action alert somebody passed on with a note. Its own seventh of September was a different day. What the room was doing across six hundred and eight letters that month was arguing, at length and with feeling, about whether writing about poetry is a parasite upon poetry.

That fight had been smouldering since July and it caught properly on the fifth, when Michael Boughn opened a thread addressed to Marjorie Perloff by title and rank — Dear Professor Perloff — and put George Steiner in evidence against her whole profession: the dominion of "secondary and parasitic discourse over immediacy", of the critical over the creative, an anxious wish for something to stand between us and the primary thing. Forty-one letters ran under critics and poets, fifteen more under Poets vs. Critics, and the room divided along the line it always divides on, which is not really about criticism at all but about who is permitted to say what a poem is worth.

It ran alongside the funniest thing the list did all year. In July the room had spent a fortnight in anguish over whether a member might forward another member's words to a non-member. In September David Benedetti posted under the heading Confidential to everybody on the list, enquiring how many present wished to hear about Rachel Loden's confidential messages to Mark Wallace concerning George Bowering's imaginary dildo. Gwyn McVay asked whether there was a choice, and proposed instead an account of Bernstein, Rothenberg and Joris "hanging out of the windows at the Chelsea Hotel" while Perloff worked a counterfeit Ouija board on Rod Smith. Twenty-six letters of invention followed. The room had found the only sane response to its own July, which was to make the whole thing up.

And on the eighth, Kevin Killian and Dodie Bellamy wrote jointly to say that Daniel Davidson had died in San Francisco on the Saturday night, by his own hand, after many years of pain following open-heart surgery. They marked their paragraphs so you could tell who was speaking. Dodie had met him in the mid-eighties at the UCSF medical centre, where she was a temp and he was coming in for follow-ups; they talked about writing and music and drugs, and listened to Messiaen's Quartet for the End of Time in his flat on Haight Street; she had never seen anyone “live more grandly on a fixed income” — Salvation Army castoffs dyed black, a dashing figure. Kevin remembered him at every reading in the city, come to poetry late and burning with it, and, because of the plastic valve in his heart, always certain he had no time.

He had been scheduled to read that Friday, the thirteenth, at Small Press Traffic; the reading became his memorial. And at the end of the notice, having given the list a man’s whole life in nine paragraphs, Killian apologised: “Sorry to fill up the bandwidth” with all this about Dan and us — a grief, he said, not unmixed with guilt. Then the thread on critics and poets resumed, and ran another fortnight. I have set the argument and the notice where September put them, three days apart and never once touching, because a room that spent the month deciding whether commentary is a parasite on the primary thing was, on the eighth of it, handed the primary thing, and said sorry for the bandwidth.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 608 in all.

WRITERS

Addressing, Bitmap 431, 503
Amato, Joe 63, 94, 103, 111, 129, 142, 175, 187, 206, 414, 417, 457, 466, 487, 501, 568, 578, 584, 591
Angels, Dismissive With 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 550
Archambeau, Robert 31
Basinski, Michael D 26
Beach, Christopher J. 393
Bell, Thomas 168, 196
Benedetti, David 332
Bentley, Scott 295
Bernstein, Charles 15, 482, 572
Bitmap 405
Blackwood, Sarah E. 252
Bouchard, Daniel 318, 340, 397, 424, 546
Boughn, Michael 58, 68, 92, 117, 118, 119, 176, 240, 241, 426, 455
Bowering, George 6, 16, 39, 40, 79, 80, 81, 82, 88, 138, 139, 140, 164, 165, 166, 192, 193, 198, 229, 230, 256, 257, 258, 306, 348, 349, 373, 375, 376, 377, 379, 380, 403, 440, 442, 443, 470, 485, 504, 505, 524, 597
Brannen, Jonathan 249, 478
Brennan, Sherry 411
Brown, Pam 531
Bursky, Rick 560
Cabri, Louis 303, 441
Carll, Steve 363
Carnography 132, 182
Carpenter, Brian 374, 454
Cayley, John 188, 189, 190
Cheek, Cris 316, 360, 386, 476, 558
Cheney, Don 18
Chip, Dutch Chocolate 525
Chirot, Christina Fairbank 14, 22, 78, 107, 115, 134, 186, 202, 203, 214, 228, 246, 274, 296, 432, 434, 472, 479, 502, 544, 551, 579
Coffey, Michael 69, 263, 571
Conte, Joseph 513
Crown, Jean 54, 514
Damon, Maria 47, 55, 56, 60, 61, 64, 74, 85, 97, 99, 102, 106, 121, 123, 141, 143, 144, 173, 179, 183, 184, 195, 213, 219, 222, 245, 268, 294, 328, 336, 345, 367, 370, 381, 382, 390, 395, 412, 413, 418, 500, 510, 536, 537, 549, 570, 574, 585, 590
Davis, Jordan 20, 65, 100, 126, 128, 208, 209, 216, 243, 292, 308, 339, 365, 371, 394, 399, 437, 438, 495, 511, 521, 547, 548, 600, 606
Drake, Robert 10, 67, 232, 429, 430, 519, 520, 535, 569
DS 43, 86, 350, 368, 372, 378, 497, 506, 562
Edwards, Ken 44, 90, 149
Filch 7, 21, 76, 83, 84, 89, 125, 220, 223, 269, 271, 297, 311, 333, 351, 383, 401
G, Henry 41, 62, 70, 91, 93, 120, 122, 131, 261
Gale, Bob 66
Geraets, John 239
Glazier, Loss 34, 155, 281, 357, 358, 483
Golding, Alan 137
Goldsmith, Kenneth 596
Golumbia, David 329
Gordon, Nada 326
Gould, Henry 95, 98, 244, 273, 320, 490, 512
Gould, M. 335
Green, Tony 191, 194, 218, 221, 224, 225, 288, 343, 344, 369, 402, 480, 498, 499, 527, 556, 593, 602, 603
Guest, Eliza McGrand- CVA 77, 145, 146, 148, 162, 227, 266, 337, 398, 400, 404, 445, 451, 538, 555, 573, 577, 607
Hansen, Jeff 215, 420, 422
Hartley, George 605
Henry 109, 110, 231, 259, 387, 409, 410, 415, 416
Henryg 72
Hilton, Mary 599
Hollo, Anselm 522, 533
Holman, Bob 608
Huk, Romana Christina 133, 181, 185
Izenberg, Oren 464
Jarnot, Lisa 278
Joris, Pierre 9, 57, 112, 159, 327, 486
Kellogg, David 71, 75, 101, 104, 105, 124, 158, 276, 298, 325, 575, 576
Killian, Kevin 151, 153, 154, 180, 251, 300, 352, 353, 385, 406, 462, 463
Kimmelman, Burt 157, 217, 436
Kinsella, John 299
Kirschenbaum, Matt 293, 305, 313
Kuszai, Joel 152
Landers, Pete 346, 347, 425, 428, 465
Landers, Peter 526
Lazer, Hank 456
Lease, Joseph 210, 211, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238
Levin, Jonathan A 260
Levy, Herb 11, 23, 160, 433, 477, 491

LEWIS, JOEL 167, 301
Light, Wait For 582
Lightman, Ira 52, 113, 114, 212, 284
List, Poetics 199
Liu, Timothy 481
Lloyd, Emily 163
Loden, Rachel 4, 28, 59, 127, 130, 171, 174, 254, 355, 407, 474, 488, 509, 583
Lookingbill, Colleen 279
Luoma, Bill 27, 35, 156, 508
Mandel, Tom 205, 469
Marsh, William 50
McHale, Brian 48, 314, 317
McVay, Gwyn 3, 116, 177, 200, 248, 334, 388, 408
Messerli, Douglas 12, 13, 36, 37, 49, 207, 282, 283, 287, 302, 315, 423
Moriarty, Laura 275, 277, 496, 601
Murphy, Sheila 204, 290
Nathanson, Tenney 2, 169, 170, 588
Nicoll, Hugh 384, 534
Nielsen, Aldon L. 285, 286, 323, 324
Orange, Thomas M. 262
Perloff, Marjorie 33, 87, 147, 197
Peters, Carl Lynden 427
Phillips, Lisa Amber 29
Pritchett,Pat 265, 338, 435, 598
Process, The Brown Bag 566, 567, 580
Quartermain, Peter 19, 507
Roberts, Gary 136, 272, 421, 489
Roberts, Mark 330, 361, 594, 595
Roitman, Judy 96, 178, 264, 267, 291, 461
Ross, Joe 45
Samuels, Lisa 366
Schmid, Julie Marie 53, 233, 419
Schuchat 17
Schuchat, Simon 587
Schultz, Susan 42, 172, 201, 581
Schuster, Joshua N 484
Schwartz, Jay 563
Sherry, James 444
Shoemaker, Steve 439, 517, 529, 586
Silliman, Ron 25, 150, 354
Simon, Beth 341, 356, 389, 391
Smith, Charles 309, 310, 322, 528
Smith, Rod 289, 331, 494, 530, 532
Sondheim, Alan 8, 250, 453, 458, 475, 589
Stein, Julia 5, 38, 242, 471, 493
Taciuch, Dean 452, 459, 460, 473
Taylor, Brigham 319
Tejada, Roberto 270
Thilleman, Tod 364
Tietz, Ward 247
Timmons, Jeffrey W. 515, 516, 518, 552, 553, 554, 559, 561
TremblayMcGaw, VPI R 564
Tuma, Keith 46, 161, 304
Varnes, Kathrine 30, 108
Vickery, Ann Louise 255
VIDAVER 362, 492
Wallace, Mark 1, 51, 359, 523
Weber, M.L. 253
Welford, Gabrielle 24, 73, 135, 307, 312, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 467, 468, 557, 565
Wessman, Ralph 321
Wheeler 280, 592, 604
Wilson, Ian 32, 392, 396, 545
Wystan 342
Zitt, Joseph 226

NAMES MENTIONED

Acker, Kathy 132
Adams, Henry 514
Adams, John 150
Agamben, Giorgio 176, 179
Ahearn, Joe 482
Albon, George 251, 279
Alice, Mary 27, 355
Altieri, Charles 150, 212, 296
Americans, Asian 84, 88, 137, 255, 291, 297, 395, 422, 435, 492, 514, 565
Amirkhanian, Charles 9
Anderson, Beth 26
Andre, Michael 572
Andrews, Bruce 15, 35, 282, 444
Andrews, Jim 314, 317
Anton, Robert 533, 534
Apollinaire, Guillaume 11, 13, 18, 36, 434
Armantrout, Rae 137, 316, 530
Arnold, Bob 62
Ashbery, John 437, 513
Ashley, Robert 364
Atkins, Tim 57
Auden, W. H. 384
Augustine, Jane 253
Baker, Lori 26
Baker, Peter 513
Baratier, David 26
Barbiero, Daniel 45
Barnard, Mary 572
Barnes, Diane 481
Basinski, Mike 26
Beach, Christopher J. 393
Beach, Eric 321, 344, 361
Beckett, Tom 530
Benn, Walter 596
Bennett, John M. 10, 19
Bergvall, Caroline 34, 190, 530
Berkeley, Michael 89, 277, 300, 326
Berlin, Irving 533, 534
Berman, Tosh 589
Bernard, Kenneth 572
Bernhard, Thomas 530
Bernstein, Emma 21, 34, 93, 97, 137, 208, 334, 335

Berrigan, Anselm 17, 35, 180, 207, 278, 521
Berrigan, Ted 17, 35, 437
Bertholf, Robert J. 9
Blake, William 66
Blaser, Robin 34, 352, 513, 524
Blau, Rachel 572
Bok, Christian 34
Borkhuis, Charles 45
Bouchard, Dan 26, 35, 521
Boughn, Mike 62, 71, 75, 80, 81, 92, 101, 105, 137, 138, 231, 433
Bowie, David 589
BpNichol 427, 432, 434
Brakhage, Stan 285, 324, 329
Brecht, George 11, 13, 18, 36
Bromige, David 16, 28, 34, 40
Bronk, William 513
Brooks, Gwendolyn 513
Brossard, Nicole 34, 255, 530
Browne, Colin 384
Burger, Mary 180, 207, 251
Burns, Elizabeth 599
Burns, Robert 107
Burroughs, William S. 454
Burton, Philip 384
Butterick, George 230
Caesar, Little 606
Cage, John 9, 226, 491
Cameron, David 364
Carey, Peter 520
Carlos, William 22, 514
Carter, Angela 9
Caruso, Fred 364
Cassidy, Brian 419
Catling, Brian 360
Catullus 11, 13, 18, 27, 36, 50, 52, 465
Celan, Paul 363, 367
Cendrars, Blaise 533, 534
Chapman, Cecelia 284
Chapman, Lee 267
Child, Abigail 44, 316
Chirot, Dave 93, 97
Claire, Barbara 530
Clark, Emilie 533, 534
Clinton, Bill 291, 297
Cobain, Kurt 284
Cobbing, Bob 247
Cohen, Ethan 57
Colby, Todd 364, 521
Coltrane, Alice 502
Coltrane, John 502
Columbus, Christopher 452
Connor, Bruce 572
Coolidge, Clark 316, 533, 534
Cooper, Dennis 190
Coover, Robert 26
Corman, Roger 530
Corso, Gregory 533, 534
Coultas, Brenda 521
County, Madison 35, 84
Creeley, Robert 34, 285, 333, 352, 533, 534
Crosby, Harry 492
Crowe, John 485, 488, 504
Crown, Kathleen 54, 514
Culley, Peter 35
Cunningham, John 9
Curtis, Dana 227
Czury, Craig 599
Darragh, Tina 530
Davenport, Steve 128, 144
Davidson, Dan 180, 205, 207, 239, 249, 251, 275, 277, 279, 290, 323
Davidson, Harriet 54
Davies, Kevin 9, 26
Davis, Martin 278, 511
Davis, Tim 444, 521
Day, Jean 251
Delany, Samuel R. 521
Derksen, Jeff 35, 44, 303
Derkson, Jeff 316
Derrida, Jacques 50, 52, 132, 212, 530
Dewey, John 513
Dickinson, Emily 150, 485, 488, 504
Donne, John 13, 18, 36
Doris, Stacy 444
Doyle, Kirby 84
Duncan, Robert 34, 352
Dunn, Joe 352
Durand, Marcella 26
Dutton, Paul 34, 35, 137, 432
Eigner, Larry 96, 178, 186, 202, 264, 267, 291, 297, 461
Eliot, Joe 35, 50, 52, 62, 425
Ellen, Mary 364, 479
Elliot, Joe 364, 444
Ellis, Stephen 265
England, Amy 34, 113, 137, 167, 181
Eshelman, Clayton 295
Eshleman, Clayton 309, 444
Ethan, Jeffrey 493, 500, 505
Eugene, Brett 514
Evans, Steve 42
Farrell, Dan 444
Fawcett, Brian 303
Ferguson, Jesse 35, 44, 303, 530
Filliou, Robert 11, 13, 18, 36, 434
Finkelstein, Norman 296
Fisher, Allen 34, 46, 137, 316
Fitterman, Rob 152, 282, 444
Fleisher, Kass 599
Fletcher, Sasha 384, 514
Flynn, Nick 508
Flynt, Henry 112
Fodaski, Elizabeth 444

Fraser, Kathleen 34, 530
Frazer, Vernon 572
Friedlander, Ben 310, 315, 484, 521
Friedman, David M. 9
Frost, Corey 126, 490
Frost, Robert 120, 359
Gardner, Drew 278
Gardner, Janet 513
Genet, Jean 50, 52
Gibson, William 530
Gilbert, Roger 513
Gilbert, Susan 279, 314
Gillespie, William 21
Ginsberg, Allen 533, 534
Giscombe, Cecil 385, 392, 395, 397, 398, 401, 420
Gizzi, Peter 44, 524
Gladman, Renee 26
Glück, Robert 182, 196
Godfrey, John 150
Goldman, Judith 444
Gould, Glenn 93, 97, 320, 334, 335, 514
Graham, Lea 227
Grahn, Judy 467
Gray, David 572
Grenier, Bob 34, 100, 139
Grenier, Robert 115
Griffin, Tim 354, 513
Grossman, Pam 19, 521
Guest, Barbara 299, 302, 353, 530
Hansen, Jefferson 599
Hardin, Rob 132, 182, 196
Harper, Michael 19
Harris, Kaplan 270
Harryman, Carla 137, 190, 255, 437, 444, 530
Harvey, James 9
Hass, Robert 54
Hawking, Stephen 316
Hayden, Tom 513
Healey, Randolph 316
Healy, Randolph 181
Heidegger, Martin 50, 52
Heidsieck, Bernard 247
Hejinian, Lynn 210, 513, 530
Heller, Michael 253, 513
Henderson, David 84
Henning, Barbara 278
Henri, Charles 122
Herman, Rachel 32, 506, 509
Higgins, Dick 10, 11, 13, 18, 19, 36, 434
Highfill, Mitch 20
Hoffman, Cara 479
Hogan, Kevin 183
Hollander, Ben 309
Homer 10, 19
Hoover, Paul 253
House, White 291, 297, 565
Howe, Susan 181, 530
Hughes, Peter 384
Hull, Jeff 444
Indiana, Robert 159, 389, 390, 406, 435
Inman, Peter 15, 21
Ireland, Lauren 35, 87, 93, 97, 110, 137, 181
Jackson, Jesse 35, 66, 508
Jaffe, Harold 429
Jaffe, Larry 26
Jameson, Fred 150
Jillway, Jill 199
Johnson, Kent 254
Johnson, Robert 66, 78
Jones, Brian 26, 278, 360, 530, 596
Jordan, June 20, 126, 210, 216, 217, 234, 235, 236, 237, 339, 340, 359, 365, 371, 379, 381, 394, 396, 399, 409, 416, 438, 495, 603
Joseph, Safdie 84, 159, 210, 211, 214, 228, 236, 243, 572
Joyce, Trevor 46, 316
Kathryn, Mary 26, 432
Kelly, Robert 10, 19, 25, 37, 513, 572
Kelsey, Karla 462
Kerouac, Jack 26, 352, 419
Kerry, John 364
Khlebnikov, Velimir 15, 21, 22
Kim, Myung Mi 423
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 293, 305, 313
Klein, Lucas 521
Koch, Kenneth 437
Kocik, Robert 444
Kuenstler, Frank 15, 21
Kyger, Joanne 352
Landrey, David 513
Lauterbach, Ann 572
Leddy, Michael 26
Lederer, Katie 180, 207
Lederman, Robert 26, 432
Lennon, Brian 284
Lennon, John 284
Leonard, Tom 448
Levertov, Denise 513
Levi, David 309
Levinas, Emmanuel 57
Levy, Andrew 599
London, Frank 9, 66, 188, 189, 190, 270, 316, 386, 464, 533, 534
Lopez, Tony 26, 35
Lorca, Federico García 385, 395
Louise, Bobbie 255, 330, 364
Lowell, Amy 514
Lyons, Kim 278
Macdonald, Helen 9
Machlin, Dan 444
Mackey, Nate 181

Mallarmé, Stéphane 572
Mandelstam, Osip 320
Mann, Chris 321
Mann, Thomas 423
Marie, Anne 278
Marie, Diane 26
Martin, Camille 183, 227, 352, 364, 564
Mason, Janet 391, 473
Masuda, Barry 42
Mathews, Elizabeth 19, 23, 440
Mathews, Harry 11, 13, 18, 19, 23, 36
Maus, Fred E. 479
Maxwell, Andrew 9
Mayer, Bernadette 437, 513, 530
McCaffery, Steve 10, 11, 13, 18, 19, 34, 35, 36, 303
Mead, Philip 33
Melnick, David 444
Meltzer, David 88, 138, 139, 140, 164, 165, 166
Melville, Nicky 504, 506, 509
Meredith, William 26
Merrill, James 513
Messerli, Doug 17, 310, 315
Meyer, Steven 479, 514
Michaels, Leonard 596
Middleton, Christopher 190, 384
Middleton, Peter 46, 190
Milton, John 307, 572
Miriam, Erica 513
Mittenthal, Robert 491
Monroe, Jonathan 152
Moore, Allison 9, 509
Moore, Marianne 514
Morris, Dee 84, 291, 297
Moses, Robert 10, 19
Mottram, Eric 44
Moxley, Jennifer 35
Muldoon, Paul 147, 181
Mulford, Wendy 530
Mullen, Harryette 161, 170, 181
Myers, Michael 479
Nechvatal, Joseph 159, 214
Neilson, Melanie 444, 492, 530
Nelson, Gale 26
Nelson, Paul 6
Nguyen, Hoa 251
Nichols, Travis 513
Nicosia, Gerald 26
Niedecker, Lorine 530
Nielsen, Aldon L. 285, 286, 323, 324, 329
Norman, Peter 318
Notley, Alice 521
Nowak, Mark 172, 173
O'Sullivan, Maggie 137, 530
Olson, Charles 9, 533, 534
Olson, Kirby 34, 89, 181, 253, 491
Oppen, George 513
Orange, Thomas M. 262
Orwell, George 26
Osman, Jena 521
Padgett, Ron 17, 243, 437
Parker, Michael 596
Paterson, Don 514
Paterson, William 9
Patton, Julie 247
Peirce, Kathleen 490
Perelman, Bob 34, 35, 46, 133, 137, 149, 180, 207, 484
Perry, David 391, 514
Peterson, Katie 203, 513
Phillip, Andrew 42, 208, 243
Polkinhorn, Harry 520
Portugal, Anne 492
Pound, Ezra 514, 572, 596
Powell, Ren 66
Prince, Richard 514
Pritchett, Patrick 265, 435, 598
Prize, Poets 278
Professor, Little 26
Rasula, Jed 150, 296
Rauschenberg, Robert 9, 352
Raworth, Tom 34, 35, 137, 190
Reagan, Nancy 208, 279, 460
Reeves, Jennifer 227
Retallack, Joan 34, 35, 190, 439, 456, 469, 481, 530
Rexroth, Kenneth 513
Reznikoff, Charles 51, 164, 171, 192
Ribot, Marc 12
Rich, Adrienne 54
Richards, Brian 9, 66
Ridge, Tom 84
Riley, Denise 34, 167, 181, 316
Robertson, Lisa 35, 137, 190, 316, 365, 530
Roche, Judith 491
Rodefer, Stephen 35, 444
Rosenberg, Jim 34, 190
Rosenfield, Kim 444
Ross, Andrew 150
Rothenberg, Jerome 132, 327
Rothenberg, Jerry 334, 335, 486
Rubin, Michael 572
Sagan, Carl 428
Salmon, Dan 43, 49
Sandburg, Carl 234, 237
Santorum, Rick 84
Saper, Craig 484
Sappho 66, 465
Saroyan, William 216, 234, 237
Scalapino, Leslie 34, 190, 251, 316, 530
Schmidt, Michael 197
Schmidt, Paul 181
Schuster, Josh 484

Schwerner, Armand 513
Scroggins, Mark 513
Seagram, Blair 26
Selby, Spencer 279, 323
Shakespeare, William 66, 360
Shapiro, David 243, 572
Sharma, Prageeta 278
Sheppard, Robert 316
Shere, Charles 9
Sherman, Cindy 270
Shurin, Aaron 491
Sikelianos, Eleni 267, 521
Simic, Charles 46, 167
Simon, Greg 167, 587
Simone, Frank 57
Sloan, Margaret 35, 491
Smith, Harry 26, 56, 66, 84, 270, 364, 479, 508
Smith, Hazel 34, 35, 42, 137, 316
Smithson, Robert 214, 296
Snyder, Gary 513
Solomon, Carl 509
Spahr, Boyd 190
Spahr, Juliana 35, 44, 152, 484, 511, 513, 521
Sparrow, John 278
Spicer, Jack 186, 202, 440
Spicer, John 186, 202
Squires, Geoffrey 181
Stalin, Joseph 298, 320
Stanley, George 380
Stein, Chuck 278
Stein, Gertrude 34, 78, 207, 363, 367, 418, 419, 421, 425, 440, 465, 486, 496, 514, 530
Steiner, George 58, 61
Steiner, Konrad 62, 137, 231
Stevens, Wallace 122, 364, 514, 583
Stewart, Amanda 247
Stewart, Jon 455, 530
Strang, Brian 530
Strauss, Zoe 309
Stroffolino, Chris 26, 35, 44, 316, 484
Sullivan, Andrew 34
Sullivan, Gary 279
Summers, Rod 247
Sweeney, Chad 84
Tarlo, Harriet 181
Taylor, Richard 514
Templeton, Fiona 34, 35, 189, 530
Texas, Irving 150, 159, 226, 446
Thesen, Sharon 491
Thomas, Dylan 84, 183, 294, 474, 485, 488, 493, 500, 504, 505, 572
Thompson, Jim 134, 472
Timmons, Jeffrey W. 515, 516, 517, 518, 529, 552, 553, 554, 559, 561
Torra, Joe 35
Trevor, Jesse 227
Tudor, David 9, 289
Turner, Victor 307
Tyler, Richard 596
Vallejo, César 35
Vangelisti, Paul 12
Vaughan, Sarah 9
Vendler, Helen 35, 46, 150
Vermont, Charlie 159, 327
Vidaver, Aaron 362, 382
Vincent, Stephen 247
Waldman, Anne 16, 39, 40
Waldman, Ken 84
Waldrop, Rosemary 482, 530
Waldrop, Rosmarie 572
Walker, Laura 84
Wallace, Nicole 4, 16, 28, 40, 45, 530, 531, 532
Walsh, Catherine 34, 46, 181, 183, 294, 316
Warren, Kenneth 303, 564
Washington, George 6, 16, 28, 40, 45, 159, 183, 289, 291, 297, 469, 479, 514, 523, 533, 534, 565, 599
Watten, Barrett 34, 35, 46, 50, 52, 316
Weber, Damian 253, 264, 586
Webster, Noah 353
Weinberger, Eliot 301
Weiner, Hannah 2, 12, 26, 530
Weiner, Lawrence 26, 34
Welch, Lew 352
Weldon, Rebecca 84
Welish, Marjorie 167, 530
Welsh, Lawrence 572
Whiting, John 9
Whitman, Walt 132, 260, 261, 266, 268, 272, 514
Wieners, John 352, 521
Wilkes, John 134
Wilkinson, John 35
Williams, John 364
Williams, Paul O. 22, 84, 140, 278, 321, 514, 519
Williams, William Carlos 533, 534
Williamson, Lindz 227
Willis, Elizabeth 514
Wilson, Colin 327
Wilson, Karen 203
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 530
Wright, Charles 513
Yasinski, Nick 54, 185
Young, Geoff 167
Young, Kevin 521
Zedd, Nick 521
Zukofsky, Louis 17, 28, 40, 50, 52, 513

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 26, 84, 237, 432
Aesthetics 63, 65, 132, 137, 210, 414, 438, 549, 566, 571

African American poetry 385, 395, 432, 500, 505, 551
Anthologies 12, 19, 25, 37, 92, 105, 112, 212, 243, 278, 293, 298, 300, 310, 315, 321, 344, 361, 385, 395, 452, 519, 596
Appropriation 42, 82, 86, 88, 214, 221, 291, 297, 325, 394, 396, 457, 494, 497, 518, 525, 529, 553, 555, 563, 566, 567, 569, 570, 586
Archives and libraries 15, 26, 57, 76, 84, 199, 316, 333, 444, 513, 514
Autobiography 50, 52, 493, 500, 505
Avant-garde 149, 208, 214, 284, 479, 502, 503, 572
Beauty 200, 228, 229, 389, 390, 486, 514
Biography 208, 254, 276, 513
Black Mountain 9, 333, 352, 373, 425
Book announcements 212, 277, 278, 320, 353, 393, 462, 535, 599
Bookstores 327, 576
Calls for submissions 54, 429
Capitalism 114
Censorship 227
Cities 26, 159, 279, 319, 328, 347, 432, 486
Collage and montage 15, 45, 333
Conferences and festivals 7, 9, 26, 31, 33, 34, 35, 41, 42, 44, 46, 47, 53, 54, 55, 61, 62, 82, 87, 90, 103, 107, 110, 111, 114, 128, 133, 136, 137, 142, 144, 147, 149, 150, 152, 155, 160, 162, 167, 175, 181, 185, 188, 189, 190, 191, 201, 206, 212, 214, 220, 221, 231, 233, 242, 247, 255, 262, 278, 281, 285, 307, 316, 330, 514, 565, 572
Copyright and permissions 8, 50, 52, 502
Craft 5, 208, 392, 396
Creative writing pedagogy 392, 395, 397, 414, 417, 420, 431, 452, 454, 457, 460, 466, 473, 480, 489
Dada 234, 237, 270, 482, 486, 519
Deconstruction 316
Difficulty 149, 199, 452, 468
Digital archives 596
Disability 432, 520, 565
Dreams 214, 424, 471, 504, 506, 509, 530, 533, 534
Ecology and ecopoetics 568, 574, 583
Editing 479
Electronic poetry and hypertext 1, 15, 34, 51, 199, 281, 316, 357, 358, 359, 459, 483, 596
Elegy 533, 534
Epic 181, 316, 572
Epistemology 554
Ethics 469, 553, 586, 591
Experimental poetry 34, 50, 52, 96, 190, 212, 489
Feminism 54, 56, 255, 390, 572, 594
Film 15, 26, 112, 124, 125, 159, 208, 213, 215, 252, 257, 265, 270, 279, 316, 435, 547
Formalism 137, 489, 490
Free speech 26, 432
Free verse 328
Gender 252, 257, 265, 268, 270, 272, 274, 397, 422, 479, 516, 520, 594
Grants and funding 31, 56, 143, 144, 278, 304, 361, 460, 502, 514, 533, 534, 572
Haiku 15, 334, 335, 343, 514, 593
Hermeneutics 316
Homophonic translation 10, 11, 13, 14, 17, 18, 19, 20, 23, 24, 25, 27, 29, 30, 36, 37, 39, 50, 52, 107, 465
Humour and satire 9, 14, 19, 44, 100, 138, 146, 216, 234, 237, 243, 278, 348, 351, 360, 387, 393, 404, 407, 408, 409, 410, 412, 428, 469, 494, 517
Identity politics 54, 395
Ideology 234, 237, 319, 328, 347, 469
Imagism 262, 554
Indigenous and Native poetics 54, 107, 395, 422, 435
Interviews 17, 84, 150, 199, 227, 295, 333
Jewish poetics 214
Language poetry 15, 35, 41, 46, 113, 167, 190, 201, 209, 210, 211, 212, 220, 234, 237, 293, 295, 296, 298, 300, 301, 303, 305, 308, 309, 310, 311, 313, 315, 322, 325, 359, 393, 425
Latino and Latin American poetry 54, 432
Letters and correspondence 57, 280, 507, 510, 520
List moderation 15, 425, 504, 506, 509, 566, 575, 586
Little magazines 2, 12, 20, 26, 32, 84, 113, 156, 199, 227, 251, 254, 278, 293, 298, 299, 300, 302, 357, 358, 416, 423, 432, 444, 477, 479, 533, 534, 554, 594, 599
Lyric poetry 590
Marxism 554
Materiality of the text 154, 578
Memory 146, 186, 202, 278, 316, 326, 482, 533, 534, 572, 586
MFA programs 278, 396, 520
Modernism 50, 52, 404, 514, 596
Mourning and loss 34, 44, 128, 144, 155, 180, 190, 199, 207, 231, 249, 281, 304, 357, 358, 483
Multiculturalism 42, 47
Music and poetry 9, 22, 27, 41, 42, 127, 145, 165, 174, 180, 207, 212, 247, 260, 261, 278, 279, 316, 327, 479, 502, 511, 589, 596
Nationalism 65
Nature 51, 130, 149, 166, 183, 200, 214, 215, 229, 316, 425, 454, 514, 516, 533, 534, 591
Negativity and refusal 152
New Formalism 137
New York School 234, 237, 243

Négritude 216, 234, 237
Obituary and memorial 9, 15
Objectivism 262
Oulipo 418, 440
Performance and the poetry reading 26, 34, 54, 63, 66, 87, 93, 97, 165, 174, 180, 279, 360, 364, 374, 386, 452, 471, 484, 572
Philosophy 9, 57, 61, 181, 221, 242, 327, 490, 514, 530, 568, 574, 583
Place and region 181
Poetics 18, 26, 31, 33, 36, 45, 46, 54, 55, 60, 74, 78, 97, 108, 113, 123, 133, 141, 144, 149, 160, 173, 179, 190, 197, 199, 206, 211, 222, 224, 235, 236, 237, 245, 252, 255, 257, 262, 268, 299, 302, 304, 306, 308, 311, 316, 336, 337, 338, 370, 381, 382, 385, 387, 390, 393, 395, 396, 407, 409, 410, 412, 413, 415, 418, 419, 421, 428, 435, 440, 449, 455, 465, 471, 478, 481, 483, 489, 492, 496, 500, 505, 510, 513, 514, 525, 530, 536, 537, 545, 549, 563, 566, 567, 568, 570, 572, 574, 583, 586, 598, 602, 608
Politics and poetry 149, 181
Post-structuralism 404, 436
Postmodernism 596
Print vs. digital 11, 13, 18, 26, 36, 44, 180, 207, 276, 320, 322, 325, 432, 452, 477, 513, 517, 545, 568, 574, 583
Prizes and awards 128, 144, 174, 278, 282, 321, 330, 353
Procedural and constraint writing 183
Prosody and meter 150, 159, 413, 415, 533, 534
Psychoanalysis 398, 401, 572
Queer poetics 27, 144, 291, 297, 328, 385, 395, 460, 468, 473, 492, 594
Race and poetry 26, 42, 46, 48, 167, 181, 190, 244, 245, 270, 385, 395, 397, 406, 414, 420, 422, 424, 431, 432, 435, 442, 452, 457, 460, 468, 471, 477, 502, 516, 520, 594
Reading announcements 353, 508, 511, 512, 521
Religion and the sacred 22, 26, 34, 44, 57, 76, 247, 428, 432, 435, 497, 502, 514, 520, 578
Representation 35, 486, 554
Reviewing and criticism 26, 30, 32, 46, 58, 61, 62, 63, 70, 71, 72, 75, 77, 80, 81, 83, 84, 87, 89, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 103, 105, 106, 109, 110, 111, 113, 114, 118, 121, 122, 124, 125, 126, 129, 131, 132, 136, 137, 138, 150, 152, 160, 168, 175, 177, 178, 181, 183, 189, 190, 193, 194, 197, 198, 199, 200, 208, 212, 214, 215, 216, 220, 229, 231, 232, 234, 237, 240, 254, 273, 276, 278, 293, 298, 300, 303, 315, 322, 325, 327, 392, 396, 398, 399, 400, 401, 423, 425, 428, 455, 479, 520, 572, 581, 596
Revision 143, 183, 392
Romanticism 181
Science 35, 183, 294, 301
Semiotics 530
Serial poem 87, 93, 97, 110, 425
Sestina 77
Small press publishing 143, 180, 182, 196, 199, 207, 216, 234, 237, 251, 278, 323, 327, 409, 412, 416, 428, 444, 462, 523, 530
Software and code 484, 526, 527
Sonnet 28, 35, 40, 45
Sound poetry 34, 247, 491
Structuralism 404, 436
Subjectivity 26, 27, 128, 144, 150, 195, 199, 212, 291, 297, 346, 357, 469, 486, 585, 588, 591
Surrealism 167, 210, 216, 234, 237, 243, 278, 419
Terrorism 84, 551
The academy 26, 29, 30, 32, 34, 44, 46, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 61, 62, 63, 71, 75, 78, 92, 94, 96, 97, 101, 104, 105, 108, 111, 114, 124, 128, 137, 143, 144, 150, 152, 157, 158, 178, 181, 183, 187, 195, 199, 203, 213, 214, 220, 221, 232, 262, 264, 267, 276, 278, 288, 291, 293, 294, 296, 297, 298, 304, 305, 313, 325, 330, 361, 389, 390, 392, 396, 404, 411, 429, 446, 460, 461, 473, 479, 493, 500, 505, 514, 520, 523, 545, 564, 565, 572, 574, 575, 576, 581, 594, 595
The body 56, 71, 72, 75, 80, 83, 96, 124, 125, 486, 568, 574, 583
The canon 66, 168, 182, 196, 212, 242, 244, 245, 435
The Gulf War 551
The Holocaust 26, 413, 415
The internet 18, 26, 27, 36, 84, 206, 227, 307, 316, 330, 336, 338, 345, 370, 391, 396, 457, 459, 545, 551
The line 199
The listserv 16, 18, 26, 28, 36, 40, 43, 47, 49, 56, 95, 100, 130, 137, 166, 199, 213, 216, 231, 234, 237, 255, 262, 280, 281, 285, 314, 328, 332, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 343, 345, 346, 348, 349, 351, 371, 381, 382, 387, 393, 403, 409, 411, 446, 491, 507, 510, 523, 525, 533, 545, 550, 566, 586, 587, 593, 602
Theatre 9, 34, 66, 159, 247, 353, 418, 419, 421, 440, 465, 496, 511, 514
Translation 10, 11, 13, 14, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 24, 25, 27, 29, 30, 36, 37, 39, 50, 52, 128, 144, 188, 189, 190, 228, 278, 327, 434, 454, 465, 482, 486, 533, 534, 569, 572,

592, 598, 601, 605
Visual and concrete poetry 221, 482, 519
Visual art 9, 22, 26, 228, 352, 364, 425, 432, 512, 514, 518, 529
Women's writing 34, 44

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 608 in all.

31 AUG 1996

1. Mark Wallace — veal scallopini

1 SEP 1996

2. Tenney Nathanson — PAW & other parts of the sun & moon family of corporations?
3. Gwyn McVay — Re: veal scallopini
4. Rachel Loden — Re: veal scallopini
5. Julia Stein — Re: Labor Day
6. George Bowering — Re: veal scallopini
7. filch — Re: CSPAN-2 to Air "Freedom to Write" Program

2 SEP 1996

8. Alan Sondheim — Time / Script / Unix
9. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: David Tudor Obituary]
10. Robert Drake — homophonic translation/translitics...
11. Herb Levy — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
12. Douglas Messerli — Re: PAW & other parts of the sun & moon family of corporations?
13. Douglas Messerli — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
14. Christina Fairbank Chirot — trains late in a pollen air (fwd)
15. Charles Bernstein — Frank Kuenstler 1928-1996
16. George Bowering — Re: Swear word here!
17. Schuchat — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
18. Don Cheney — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
19. Peter Quartermain — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
20. Jordan Davis — Re: homophonic translation / a very clean thread
21. filch — Re: Frank Kuenstler 1928-1996
22. Christina Fairbank Chirot — zaum

3 SEP 1996

23. Herb Levy — Re: Not homophonic Mathews
24. Gabrielle Welford — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
25. Ron Silliman — Homophonic translations
26. Michael D Basinski — Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Aug 1996 to 30 Aug 1996
27. Bill Luoma — Re: homophonic translation/translitics
28. Rachel Loden — Re: Swear word here!
29. Lisa Amber Phillips — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
30. Kathrine Varnes — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
31. Robert Archambeau — Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Sep 1996 to 2 Sep 1996
32. Ian Wilson — The Herman Review
33. Marjorie Perloff — Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Sep 1996 to 2 Sep 1996
34. Loss Glazier — Assembling Alternatives
35. Bill Luoma — New Hampshire Briefs
36. Douglas Messerli — Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
37. Douglas Messerli — Re: Homophonic translations
38. Julia Stein — Re: Post-Labor Day
39. George Bowering — Re: Homophonic translations
40. George Bowering — Re: cocktail waitress
41. henry g — DEATH OF THE LANGUAGE POET

4 SEP 1996

42. Susan Schultz — my two senses
43. DS — Sun&Moon
44. Ken Edwards — Assembling Alternatives

45. Joe Ross — Re: New from Buck Downs Books
46. Keith Tuma — Re: Assembling Alternatives
47. maria damon — Re: my two senses
48. Brian McHale — Re: Assembling Alternatives
49. Douglas Messerli — Re: Sun&Moon
50. william marsh — Re: translations/transcriptions
51. Mark Wallace — pasta point of no return
52. Ira Lightman — Re: Homophonic translations
53. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: query re. public poetry conference
54. Jean Crown — Re: query re. public poetry conference
55. maria damon — Re: query re. public poetry conference
56. maria damon — fwd

5 SEP 1996

57. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: MB: Levinas Center]
58. Michael Boughn — critics and poets
59. Rachel Loden — Roddy Slyme is retiring
60. maria damon — Re: Roddy Slyme is retiring
61. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
62. henry g — Re: critics and poets
63. Joe Amato — critics and poets...
64. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
65. Jordan Davis — nice critics and poets
66. Bob Gale — Dead Poets' Society
67. Robert Drake — Re: critics and poets
68. Michael Boughn — Re: critics and poets
69. Michael Coffey — Re: critics and poets -Reply
70. henry g — critics & poets
71. David Kellogg — Re: critics and poets
72. henryg — Re: critics and poets
73. Gabrielle Welford — EZLN on Red Alert (fwd)
74. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
75. David Kellogg — Re: critics and poets
76. filch — Padmasambhava
77. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — gould sestina -- critics and poets
78. Christina Fairbank Chirot — poet-ics
79. George Bowering — Re: the object
80. George Bowering — Re: critics and poets
81. George Bowering — Re: critics and poets
82. George Bowering — Re: Assembling Alternatives
83. filch — Re: critics and poets
84. filch — Re: critics and poets (disabuse onself of importance said the flea as it consumed t...
85. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
86. DS — Re: Assembling Alternatives

6 SEP 1996

87. Marjorie Perloff — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
88. George Bowering — Re: Assembling Alternatives
89. filch — Marjorie & the poets
90. Ken Edwards — critics and poets
91. henry G — Re: critics and poets
92. Michael Boughn — Re: critics and poets
93. henry G — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
94. Joe Amato — Re: critics and poets
95. henry gould — Re: critics and poets
96. Judy Roitman — Re: critics and poets
97. maria damon — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"

98. henry gould — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
99. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
100. Jordan Davis — Re: critics and poets
101. David Kellogg — Re: critics and poets
102. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
103. Joe Amato — Re: critics and poets
104. David Kellogg — Re: critics and poets
105. David Kellogg — Re: critics and poets
106. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
107. Christina Fairbank Chirot — socially constructed poets
108. Kathrine Varnes — Re: critics and poets
109. henry — Re: critics and poets
110. henry — Re: Marjorie & the poets
111. Joe Amato — Re: critics and poets
112. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: Henry Flynt lectures at Anthology Film Archives]
113. Ira Lightman — Re: Marjorie & the poets
114. Ira Lightman — Re: Marjorie & the poets (cont.)
115. Christina Fairbank Chirot — overlap
116. Gwyn McVay — Re: overlap
117. Michael Boughn — Re: Marjorie & the poets
118. Michael Boughn — Re: critics and poets
119. Michael Boughn — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
120. henry g — Re: overlap
121. maria damon — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
122. henry g — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
123. maria damon — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
124. David Kellogg — Re: critics and poets
125. filch — Re: critics and poets
126. Jordan Davis — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
127. Rachel Loden — Re: the object
128. Jordan Davis — the ghettoization of poetry
129. Joe Amato — Re: critics and poets
130. Rachel Loden — confidential to Mark Wallace
131. henry g — Re: critics and poets
132. Carnography — Both critic and poet, both reader and writer
133. Romana Christina Huk — Assembling Alternatives
134. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Both
135. Gabrielle Welford — Re: critics and poets
136. Gary Roberts — poetry and criticism
137. Alan Golding — UNH Again
138. George Bowering — Re: critics and poets
139. George Bowering — Re: critics and poets
140. George Bowering — Re: overlap
141. maria damon — Re: critics and poets
142. Joe Amato — Re: Assembling Alternatives
143. maria damon — Re: abolishing tenure as we know it
144. maria damon — Re: the ghettoization of poetry
145. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — the bedfellows -- poets and critics (wrning - this is a poem)
146. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — HELP!!! "humor institute"

7 SEP 1996

147. Marjorie Perloff — Re: Assembling Alternatives
148. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — m. boughn's satin shoes with high heels
149. Ken Edwards — Assembling Alternatives
150. Ron Silliman — Methodist hymns and other protestant matters
151. Kevin Killian — Re: uncle

152. Joel Kuszai — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
153. Kevin Killian — Re: uncle
154. Kevin Killian — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
155. Loss Glazier — Assembling
156. Bill Luoma — uncle
157. Burt Kimmelman — Re: abolishing tenure as we know it
158. David Kellogg — Re: critics and poets
159. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: Did you know that in.....]
160. Herb Levy — NOT Re: critics & poets
161. Keith Tuma — harryette mullen
162. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: NOT Re: critics & poets
163. Emily Lloyd — Re: [Fwd: Did you know that in.....]
164. George Bowering — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
165. George Bowering — Re: the object
166. George Bowering — Re: confidential to Mark Wallace

8 SEP 1996

167. JOEL LEWIS — UNH:"can't we all get along?"
168. Thomas Bell — Conceptual crit?
169. Tenney Nathanson — slightly awake
170. Tenney Nathanson — nope
171. Rachel Loden — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
172. Susan Schultz — Re: to Mark Nowak
173. maria damon — Re: to Mark Nowak
174. Rachel Loden — Re: the object
175. Joe Amato — poet critic critic poet...
176. Michael Boughn — fetishized texts
177. Gwyn McVay — poet, critic, he loves me, he loves me not
178. Judy Roitman — Re: poet, critic, he loves me, he loves me not
179. maria damon — Re: fetishized texts
180. Kevin Killian — Dan Davidson
181. Romana Christina Huk — Assembling Alternatives
182. Carnography — Re: Conceptual crit?
183. maria damon — fwd: umn tenure code revisions
184. maria damon — Re: Conceptual crit?
185. Romana Christina Huk — The Rutgers Conference
186. Christina Fairbank Chirot — poetry & baseball
187. Joe Amato — Re: fwd: umn tenure code revisions
188. John Cayley — Assembling - General - Respect!
189. John Cayley — Assembling - (Paper)form(alitie)s - (Critics & Poets)
190. John Cayley — Assembling - Appreciations - Issues
191. Tony Green — Re: UNH Again
192. George Bowering — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
193. George Bowering — Re: poet, critic, he loves me, he loves me not
194. Tony Green — Re: poet, critic, & umpire
195. maria damon — Re: fwd: umn tenure code revisions

9 SEP 1996

196. Thomas Bell — Re: Conceptual crit? fetish?
197. Marjorie Perloff — Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Sep 1996 to 8 Sep 1996
198. George Bowering — Re: poet, critic, & umpire
199. Poetics List — Welcome Message
200. Gwyn McVay — Re: poet, critic, & umpire
201. Susan Schultz — Re: Assembling - Appreciations - Issues
202. Christina Fairbank Chirot — poetry & baseball (fwd)
203. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Art on the Edge of Fashion (fwd)
204. Sheila Murphy — test message

205. Tom Mandel — (no subject)
206. Joe Amato — Re: Assembling - (Paper)form(alitie)s - (Critics & Poets)
207. Douglas Messerli — Re: Dan Davidson
208. Jordan Davis — sans teeth (p lopate)
209. Jordan Davis — Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
210. Joseph Lease — Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
211. Joseph Lease — Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
212. Ira Lightman — Assembling Alternative UK Criticism
213. maria damon — Re: critics & Poets
214. Christina Fairbank Chirot — CONSCIOUSNESS REFRAMED
215. Jeff Hansen — critics & Poets
216. Jordan Davis — mookie (loop) ten years after
217. Burt Kimmelman — Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
218. Tony Green — Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
219. maria damon — Re: Conceptual crit?
220. filch — Re: Conceptual crit?
221. Tony Green — Re: Assembling - (Paper)form(alitie)s - (Critics & Poets)
222. maria damon — Re: Conceptual crit?
223. filch — Re: Conceptual crit?
224. Tony Green — Re: poetry & baseball + RADIO
225. Tony Green — Re: test message
226. Joseph Zitt — Re: CONSCIOUSNESS REFRAMED
227. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Notice to critics, writers and/or readers -- E-Zine

10 SEP 1996

228. Christina Fairbank Chirot — duchamp quote
229. George Bowering — Re: poet, critic, & umpire
230. George Bowering — Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
231. henry — Re: poet critic critic poet...
232. Robert Drake — Re: Conceptual crit?
233. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: The Rutgers Conference
234. Joseph Lease — Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
235. Joseph Lease — Re: Conceptual crit?
236. Joseph Lease — poetics follies (fwd)
237. Joseph Lease — Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
238. Joseph Lease — Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
239. John Geraets — Re: Dan Davidson
240. Michael Boughn — poet critic critic poet
241. Michael Boughn — Re: Conceptual crit?
242. Julia Stein — Re: narratives
243. Jordan Davis — postconfessional, postcolonial, let's call the whole thing
244. Henry Gould — Re: canons
245. maria damon — Re: canons
246. Christina Fairbank Chirot — can on
247. Ward Tietz — Sound Poetry Events
248. Gwyn McVay — Re: can on
249. Jonathan Brannen — Re: Dan Davidson
250. Alan Sondheim — Jennifer
251. Kevin Killian — SPT--Proliferation #3 Reading
252. Sarah E. Blackwood — Re: POETICS Digest - 8 Sep 1996 to 9 Sep 1996
253. M.L. Weber — invitation to submit

11 SEP 1996

254. Rachel Loden — Yasusada/Kent Johnson
255. Ann Louise Vickery — Assembling Alternatives
256. George Bowering — Re: Conceptual crit?
257. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 8 Sep 1996 to 9 Sep 1996

258. George Bowering — Re: invitation to submit 259. henry — Re: can on
260. Jonathan A Levin — Whitman Qestion
261. henry g — Re: Whitman Qestion
262. Thomas M. Orange — wcw panel louisville
263. Michael Coffey — invitation to submit -Reply
264. Judy Roitman — Re: invitation to submit -Reply
265. Pritchett,Pat — Re: gender mimicry
266. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: Whitman Qestion
267. Judy Roitman — Eleni Sikelianos
268. maria damon — Re: Whitman
269. filch — Re: invitation to submit
270. Roberto Tejada — Dressing Up
271. filch — Re: invitation to submit -Reply
272. Gary Roberts — Whitman
273. Henry Gould — Re: Dressing Up
274. Christina Fairbank Chirot — dressing up--the Post Card Queen
275. Laura Moriarty — Dan Davidson
276. David Kellogg — Re: Dressing Up
277. Laura Moriarty — Re: Dan Davidson
278. Lisa Jarnot — ear inn readings

12 SEP 1996

279. Colleen Lookingbill — Dan Davidson
280. wheeler — Assembling Alternatives
281. Loss Glazier — Re: Assembling Alternatives
282. Douglas Messerli — Sun & Moon NAP and NAF competitions
283. Douglas Messerli — (no subject)
284. Ira Lightman — Re: Conceptual crit?
285. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: catching up
286. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: no back channel
287. Douglas Messerli — (no subject)
288. Tony Green — Re: cross-dressing

13 SEP 1996

289. Rod Smith — David Tudor Memorial
290. Sheila Murphy — Re: Dan Davidson
291. Judy Roitman — Fwd: VETO DOMA - How to help (fwd)
292. Jordan Davis — Kevin Young's phone number
293. Matt Kirschenbaum — query: langpo and its discontents
294. maria damon — update u of mn
295. Scott Bentley — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
296. Christina Fairbank Chirot — query & discontents
297. filch — Re: Fwd: VETO DOMA - How to help (fwd)
298. David Kellogg — Re: query: langpo and its discontents

14 SEP 1996

299. John Kinsella — Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996
300. Kevin Killian — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
301. JOEL LEWIS — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
302. Douglas Messerli — Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996
303. Louis Cabri — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
304. Keith Tuma — Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996
305. Matt Kirschenbaum — Re: query: langpo and its discontents

15 SEP 1996

306. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996

307. Gabrielle Welford — Former Alliance member/_Turner Diaries_ expert says Hello! (fwd)
308. Jordan Davis — how the west was won and where it got us

16 SEP 1996

309. Charles Smith — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
310. Charles Smith — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
311. filch — Re: how the west was won and where it got us
312. Gabrielle Welford — Re: how the west was won and where it got us
313. Matt Kirschenbaum — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
314. Brian McHale — Re: late assemblages (longish)
315. Douglas Messerli — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
316. cris cheek — late assemblages (longish)
317. Brian McHale — Re: late assemblages (longish)
318. Daniel Bouchard — Charles Norman
319. Brigham Taylor — Theraputix
320. Henry Gould — Re: Theraputix
321. Ralph Wessman — Eric Beach
322. Charles Smith — Re: query: langpo and its discontents
323. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Dan Davidson
324. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Stan Brakhage
325. David Kellogg — Re: query: langpo and its discontents

17 SEP 1996

326. Nada Gordon — Dan the flaneur
327. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: the Outsider]
328. maria damon — Re: Theraputix
329. David Golumbia — Re: Stan Brakhage
330. Mark Roberts — (Forwarded) AWOL: Olympic Sports Poet Winners announced
331. Rod Smith — Re: Padmasambhava
332. David Benedetti — Confidential to everybody on the list
333. filch — the end of the world can be directly traced to robert creeley teaching at black mou…
334. Gwyn McVay — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
335. M. Gould — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
336. maria damon — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
337. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
338. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
339. Jordan Davis — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
340. Daniel Bouchard — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
341. Beth Simon — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
342. wystan — Re: Theraputix
343. Tony Green — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
344. Tony Green — Re: Eric Beach
345. maria damon — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
346. Pete Landers — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
347. Pete Landers — Re: Theraputix
348. George Bowering — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
349. George Bowering — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list

18 SEP 1996

350. DS — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
351. filch — Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
352. Kevin Killian — Tom Field show opens in San Francisco
353. Kevin Killian — Barbara Guest reading in San Francisco
354. Ron Silliman — Confidential to David Benedetti
355. Rachel Loden — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
356. Beth Simon — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
357. Loss Glazier — Mag/Press Listing

358. Loss Glazier — Mag/Press listing
359. Mark Wallace — language poetry on treble
360. cris cheek — CD announcement / spoken word
361. Mark Roberts — Re: Eric Beach
362. VIDAVER — Dildo & The Real
363. Steve Carll — Re: Confidentially...
364. Tod Thilleman — Re: poets/painters collaborate in NYC
365. Jordan Davis — Lisa Robertson / treble kicker
366. Lisa Samuels — McCaffery e-address?
367. maria damon — Re: Confidentially...
368. DS — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
369. Tony Green — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
370. maria damon — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
371. Jordan Davis — redux is a drug
372. DS — Re: Dildo & The Real
373. George Bowering — Re: Tom Field show opens in San Francisco
374. Brian Carpenter — Re: CD announcement / spoken word
375. George Bowering — Re: Confidentially...
376. George Bowering — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
377. George Bowering — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
378. DS — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
379. George Bowering — Re: redux is a drug
380. George Bowering — Re: Dildo & The Real
381. maria damon — Re: redux is a drug

19 SEP 1996

382. maria damon — Re: Dildo & The Real
383. filch — Re: Dildo & The Real
384. Hugh Nicoll — Re: Dildo & The Real
385. Kevin Killian — Giscombe/Fugitive
386. cris cheek — Re: CD announcement / spoken word
387. henry — Re: redux is a drug
388. Gwyn McVay — Re: Dildo & The Real
389. Beth Simon — Re: Dildo & The Real
390. maria damon — Re: Dildo & The Real
391. Beth Simon — Re: Dildo & The Real
392. Ian Wilson — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
393. Christopher J. Beach — Re: redux is a drug
394. Jordan Davis — the martians we always have with us
395. maria damon — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
396. Ian Wilson — Re: the martians we always have with us
397. Daniel Bouchard — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
398. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
399. Jordan Davis — BAP critics
400. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: BAP critics
401. filch — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive BAP
402. Tony Green — Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
403. George Bowering — Re: redux is a drug
404. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: redux is a drug

20 SEP 1996

405. bitmap — Nexis Lexis
406. Kevin Killian — Re: student racism (white trash)
407. Rachel Loden — Re: redux is a drug
408. Gwyn McVay — Re: redux is a drug
409. henry — Re: redux is a drug
410. henry — Re: redux is a drug

411. Sherry Brennan — space
412. maria damon — Re: redux is a drug
413. maria damon — Re: redux is a drug
414. Joe Amato — teaching traumas...
415. henry — Re: redux is a drug
416. Henry — po-biz
417. Joe Amato — teaching traumas cont'd...
418. maria damon — Re: poetry and play
419. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: poetry and play
420. Jeff Hansen — student racism
421. Gary Roberts — poetry and play
422. Jeff Hansen — None
423. Douglas Messerli — new magazine on line
424. Daniel Bouchard — Re: student racism
425. Pete Landers — status of my 'zine - Happy Genius
426. Michael Boughn — Re: redux is a drug
427. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: poetry and play
428. Pete Landers — Re: redux is a drug
429. Robert Drake — [[redacted]: Call for submissions]
430. Robert Drake — Re: redux is a drug
431. bitmap addressing — Re: student racism (white trash)
432. Christina Fairbank Chirot — 1st Amendment Freedom: Community Vigilantes: N.Y.C. Community C…
433. Herb Levy — Re: redux is a drug
434. Christina Fairbank Chirot — correction
435. Pritchett,Pat — Re: student racism (white trash)
436. Burt Kimmelman — Re: poetry and play
437. Jordan Davis — Re: poetry and play
438. Jordan Davis — deluxe drug introductions
439. Steve Shoemaker — reading retallack
440. George Bowering — Re: poetry and play
441. Louis Cabri — Re: redux is a drug
442. George Bowering — Re: student racism (white trash)
443. George Bowering — Re: redux is a drug
444. James Sherry — Readings and Readings at The Segue Performance Space - October
445. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: poetry and play
446. Gabrielle Welford — forward from another list - it's your privacy ... (fwd)
447. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Nexis Lexis
448. Gabrielle Welford — Re: poetry and play
449. Gabrielle Welford — Re: redux is a drug
450. Gabrielle Welford — Re: poetry and play
451. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: poetry and play

21 SEP 1996

452. Dean Taciuch — Re: teaching traumas...
453. Alan Sondheim — 207
454. Brian Carpenter — traumatic teaching
455. Michael Boughn — Re: redux is a drug
456. Hank Lazer — Re: reading retallack
457. Joe Amato — Re: teaching traumas...
458. Alan Sondheim — Jennifer by Jennifer
459. Dean Taciuch — Re: teaching traumas...
460. Dean Taciuch — Classroom (?) trauma
461. Judy Roitman — Re: teaching traumas...
462. Kevin Killian — SPT: Moriarity/Tu
463. Kevin Killian — SPT: Moriarity/Tu

464. Oren Izenberg — Re: poetry and play
465. Pete Landers — Re: poetry and play
466. Joe Amato — Re: teaching traumas...
467. Gabrielle Welford — Judy Grahn
468. Gabrielle Welford — e-mail for-ums
469. Tom Mandel — reading retallack
470. George Bowering — Re: redux is a drug
471. Julia Stein — Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Sep 1996 to 20 Sep 1996
472. Christina Fairbank Chirot — citings/sightings
473. Dean Taciuch — Re: Classroom (?) trauma

22 SEP 1996

474. Rachel Loden — more flavours
475. Alan Sondheim — uunames
476. cris cheek — desire / and the 39 steps
477. Herb Levy — teaching traumas
478. Jonathan Brannen — Re: POETICS Digest - 20 Sep 1996 to 21 Sep 1996
479. Christina Fairbank Chirot — New journal (fwd>
480. Tony Green — Re: Classroom (?) trauma
481. Timothy Liu — Re: reading retallack
482. Charles Bernstein — Helmut Heissenbuttel 1921-1996
483. Loss Glazier — Poetics back files

23 SEP 1996

484. Joshua N Schuster — Ben Friedlander reading @ Upenn
485. George Bowering — Re: more flavours
486. Pierre Joris — Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel 1921-1996
487. Joe Amato — Re: teaching traumas
488. Rachel Loden — Re: more flavours
489. Gary Roberts — poetry and play
490. henry gould — Re: poetry and play
491. Herb Levy — Subtext readings fall '96
492. VIDAVER — Dildo Whaling
493. Julia Stein — Re: teaching traumas
494. Rod Smith — Re: poetry and play
495. Jordan Davis — Re: poetry and play
496. Laura Moriarty — Re: poetry and play
497. DS — Re: Dildo Whaling
498. Tony Green — 5757
499. Tony Green — Re: Dildo Whaling
500. maria damon — Re: teaching traumas
501. Joe Amato — Re: teaching traumas
502. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Blasphemy and the Avant-Garde (fwd

24 SEP 1996

503. bitmap addressing — Re: Blasphemy and the Avant-Garde (fwd
504. George Bowering — Re: more flavours
505. George Bowering — Re: teaching traumas
506. DS — Re: more flavours
507. Peter Quartermain — My long silence
508. Bill Luoma — Reading
509. Rachel Loden — Re: more flavours
510. maria damon — Re: My long silence
511. Jordan Davis — Poetry City Oct 10 - Bouchard / Mills
512. Henry Gould — RI reading
513. Joseph Conte — Dictionary of Literary Biography
514. Jean Crown — Conference on Modernism and the Orient

515. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: reading retallack (fwd)
516. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: teaching traumas... (fwd)
517. Steve Shoemaker — Re: reading retallack (fwd)
518. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: reading retallack (fwd)
519. Robert Drake — Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel 1921-1996
520. Robert Drake — forwarded mssg: position available
521. Jordan Davis — Epistrophe, Anastrophe, Poetry City

25 SEP 1996

522. Anselm Hollo — Helmut Heissenbuttel
523. Mark Wallace — National Congress Sample Press Release (fwd)
524. George Bowering — Re: My long silence
525. dutch chocolate chip — Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
526. Peter Landers — Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
527. Tony Green — Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
528. Charles Smith — Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
529. Steve Shoemaker — Re: reading retallack (fwd)
530. Rod Smith — new Perloff, Wallace, Out of Everywhere etc @ Bridge Street
531. Pam Brown — Re: new Perloff, Wallace, Out of Everywhere etc @ Bridge Street

26 SEP 1996

532. Rod Smith — Re: new Perloff, Wallace, Out of Everywhere etc @ Bridge Street
533. Anselm Hollo — Helmut, Here We Go Again
534. Hugh Nicoll — Anselm Hollo's Attachment
535. Robert Drake — [[redacted]: Fwd: BOOK PARTY]
536. maria damon — Re: the bleeding edge
537. maria damon — Re: the bleeding edge
538. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: the bleeding edge
539. dismissive with angels — the bleeding edge
540. dismissive with angels — the bleeding edge
541. dismissive with angels — the bleeding edge
542. dismissive with angels — the bleeding edge
543. dismissive with angels — the bleeding edge - the last drop
544. Christina Fairbank Chirot — on the edge of mutiny
545. Ian Wilson — Re[2]: the bleeding edge
546. Daniel Bouchard — Re: bleeding the edge
547. Jordan Davis — chodosh englay 1.inst
548. Jordan Davis — bndwdth
549. maria damon — Re: dismissive
550. dismissive with angels — Re: the bleeding edge
551. Christina Fairbank Chirot — "artifacts" (fwd)
552. Jeffrey W. Timmons — bleeding edge
553. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: "artifacts" (fwd)
554. Jeffrey W. Timmons — (no subject)
555. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: the bleeding edge
556. Tony Green — Re: Helmut, Here We Go Again
557. Gabrielle Welford — Re: the bleeding edge
558. cris cheek — Re: My long silence
559. Jeffrey W. Timmons — HELP
560. Rick Bursky — rumours & question
561. Jeffrey W. Timmons — the bleeding edge
562. DS — Re: the bleeding edge
563. Jay Schwartz — Re: the bleeding edge
564. VPI R TremblayMcGaw — Robert Gluck's Upcoming Readings

27 SEP 1996

565. Gabrielle Welford — Immigration Alert: URGENT (fwd)

566. the brown bag process — the bleeding edge (dismissed by angels)
567. the brown bag process — Re: the bleeding edge
568. Joe Amato — query...
569. Robert Drake — Re: the bleeding edge
570. maria damon — Re: the bleeding edge
571. Michael Coffey — Re: the bleeding edge -Reply
572. Charles Bernstein — Barnard Translation Conference
573. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: the bleeding edge
574. maria damon — Re: query...
575. David Kellogg — Re: the bleeding edge
576. David Kellogg — Re: query...
577. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — bleeding edge -- grovelling in embarrassment
578. Joe Amato — Re: query...
579. Christina Fairbank Chirot — and they became what they beheld. . .
580. the brown bag process — San Francisco Fine Arts Museum
581. Susan Schultz — jobs jobs jobs

28 SEP 1996

582. wait for light — Re: bleeding edge -- grovelling in embarrassment
583. Rachel Loden — Re: query...
584. Joe Amato — Re: query...
585. maria damon — Re: query...
586. Steve Shoemaker — technorationality
587. Simon Schuchat — filch no, firbank yes

29 SEP 1996

588. Tenney Nathanson — post-fordist yayas
589. Alan Sondheim — for Tosh Berman and David Bowie
590. maria damon — Re: post-fordist yayas
591. Joe Amato — Re: query...
592. wheeler — Quick Query
593. Tony Green — Re: the bleeding edge
594. Mark Roberts — (FWD) AWOL: HECATE magazine's special offer
595. Mark Roberts — (Fwd) AWOL: Launch of HOW TO CONCEIVE OF A GIRL
596. Kenneth Goldsmith — Marjorie Perloff Homepage Update

30 SEP 1996

597. George Bowering — Re: the bleeding edge
598. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Quick Query
599. Mary Hilton — Announcement: Political Diction
600. Jordan Davis — the way of all languages
601. Laura Moriarty — Re: Quick Query
602. Tony Green — Re: the bleeding edge
603. Tony Green — Re: the way of all languages
604. wheeler — Thanks
605. george hartley — Re: Quick Query
606. Jordan Davis — Re: the way of all languages
607. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — post-constructionism and lingerie
608. Bob Holman — Re: POETICS Digest - 28 Sep 1996 to 29 Sep 1996

1. Mark Wallace
veal scallopini
Sat 31 Aug 1996

I really must correct Gwyn on this point--I've never been seen in public dressed only in veal scallopini. I wear Ziti or nothing at all. Any pictures saying otherwise are hoaxes, and I'm prepared to sue.

mark

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] "I have not yet begun | |
to go to extremes" | | GWU: |
| http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

2. Tenney Nathanson
PAW & other parts of the sun & moon family of corporations?
Sun 1 Sep 1996

> Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 14:19:01 -0700
> From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Hannah Weiner
>
> Sun & Moon is publishing PAW soon in its new magazine:
> Mr Knife, Miss Fork. Hannah's wonderful narrative will be > one of the major works in that special issue devoted to > the "theatrical" in lit.
>
> Douglas Messerli

Douglas--

what's the current array of s&m magazines, and what's the logic of the one-press-multi-mag tack? There's PAW, and RIBOT, and?

all best (long time no see!)

Tenney

↑ Index

3. Gwyn McVay
Re: veal scallopini
Sun 1 Sep 1996

I'm sorry, Mark, ziti or no ziti, you're pasta point of no return.

Gwyn

↑ Index

4. Rachel Loden
Re: veal scallopini
Sun 1 Sep 1996

Mark Wallace wrote:
>
> I really must correct Gwyn on this point--I've never been seen in public > dressed only in veal scallopini. I wear Ziti or nothing at all. Any > pictures saying otherwise are hoaxes, and I'm prepared to sue.

The ever-litigious Mr. Wallace should think twice before indulging these proclivities. If he really wanted to maintain his double life, why did he allow himself to be lured out onto that hotel balcony? The harder they come, the harder they fall (as Stephanopoulos is so fond of saying).

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

5. Julia Stein
Re: Labor Day
Sun 1 Sep 1996

In honor of Labor Day, this poem by Fred Voss from his book Goodstone, a book of work poems about his job as a machinist in a Southern California aircraft factory.

Asleep

We machine the teeth of gears and the cutting edge of drills.
We bore out cyclinders,
turn pistons and rods,
thread screws and nuts and bolts.
We machine the dies
that stamp out pipes and seals and valves.

We are the engine, the driveshaft,
and the pump;
the wing and the wheel-- and yet we believe that we are powerless as we sit in bars

and watch the president on television.
Fred Voss

↑ Index

6. George Bowering
Re: veal scallopini
Sun 1 Sep 1996

> I really must correct Gwyn on this point--I've never been seen in public dressed only in veal scallopini. I wear Ziti or nothing at all. Any pictures saying otherwise are hoaxes, and I'm prepared to sue.
>
> mark

I noticed the panic with which you make this avowal, Mark. I remember on my only trip to Washington D.C., I distinctly saw you with two other people of undiscernible sex near the Lincoln Memorial, and two of you at least were wearing Thai cuisine, the third in veal scallopini.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"snowdrops grow
near the warm chimney"
--Nelson Ball

↑ Index

7. filch
Re: CSPAN-2 to Air "Freedom to Write" Program
Sun 1 Sep 1996

Thanks for mentioning this Gale. It was especially interesting. I was altogether enraptured by the phrase "The poet is the only one who never forgets."

cf

> C-SPAN-2 will air an edited version of the Freedom to Write Conference, held at Brown this past spring. The air date is Saturday, 31 August at 8:00 p.m., via their "About Books" program.

↑ Index

8. Alan Sondheim
Time / Script / Unix
Mon 2 Sep 1996

-

Hell: Cannot Create Time:

Script started on Sun Sep 1 23:21:07 1996 warning: could not update utmp entry netcom% telnet panix3.panix.com Trying...
Connected to panix3.panix.com.
Escape character is '^]'.
No directory /net/u/6/s/sondheim!
touch: cannot touch //.motd_time: no write permission $ touch motd_time touch: cannot create motd_time: Permission denied $ touch time
touch: cannot create time: Permission denied $ touch exit touch: cannot create exit: Permission denied script done on Sun Sep 1 23:21:50 1996

↑ Index

9. Pierre Joris
[Fwd: David Tudor Obituary]
Mon 2 Sep 1996

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

Hi folks -- thot this may ineterest you -- Pierre

John Whiting wrote:
>
> The [London] Guardian August 28 1996
>
> OBITUARY
>
> David Tudor
>
> Black Mountain sounds
>
> DAVID Tudor, who has died aged 70, abandoned a career as a > virtuoso performer of contemporary piano music to devote himself > to the composition and performance of electronic music.

>
> Tudor was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he began his > career as an organist. After studying composition and piano, he > began to concentrate on the piano and soon became known as an > interpreter of some of the most demanding works in the > contemporary repertory.
>
> In New York in 1950, he gave the American premiere - and the > second performance anywhere - of Pierre Boulez's Second Piano > Sonata. He also gave the first performances of works by > Karlheinz Stockhausen, who dedicated a piece to him, and many > others. But his closest association was with John Cage, who said > that all his works until 1970 were written either directly for > Tudor or with him in mind. He gave the first performances of > Cage's Music of Changes (1952) and the Concert for Piano and > Orchestra, the latter at a retrospective concert of Cage's music > at New York Town Hall in 1958, when the work was "conducted" by > Merce Cunningham.
>
> When the Merce Cunningham Dance Company was formed at Black > Mountain College in North Carolina, in the summer of 1953, with > John Cage as musical director, Tudor joined him as company > musician. He continued to perform and tour with the company > until the end of 1994, when ill-health caused him to retire.
> After the death of Cage in August 1992, Tudor had succeeded him > as the company's musical director, and he continued as musical > advisor.
>
> In the early days, Tudor loved to play 19th century salon music, > and he made a selection of such pieces for Cunningham's Dime a > Dance in 1953. Another Cunningham dance of that year was Banjo, > to music by Louis Moreau Gottschalk. Cunningham's dancers could > not understand why the choreographer had chosen the piece when > they heard it played by another pianist, so Cunningham asked > Tudor to play it for one rehearsal. "It sounded like 50 banjos > all played at once," Cunningham has said, and when they heard, > the dancers understood. Tudor also played music of this kind for > dances by the eccentric and beautiful Katherine Litz.
>
> At Black Mountain in 1952, where Tudor was an instructor, he took > part in Cage's famous untitled, unstructured theatre piece, > together with Cunningham, the poets Mary Caroline Richards and > Charles Olson, and the painter Robert Rauschenberg. A number of > friends from Black Mountain later formed the Gate Hill Co-op in > Stony Point, New York, known as "The Land," where Cage, Tudor, > Richards, and other artists lived for many years.

>
> In the early 1960s, Cage and Tudor initiated the trend towards > "live" (as opposed to taped) electronic music in the Cunningham > company's musical repertory, and Tudor ended his active career as > a pianist. In 1968 he composed his first score, for Cunningham's > Rain Forest. This was followed by Sounddance (1975), Exchange > (1978), Channels/Inserts (1981), Quartet (1982), Phrases (1984), > Shards (1987), Five Stone Wind (with Cage and Takehisa Kosugi) > (1988), Polarity (1990), and Enter (1992). In the autumn of > 1992, he returned to the acoustic piano in concert performances > of Cage's Winter Music with Atlas Eclipticalis and, in 1993, Solo > for Piano. In 1994, Cunningham was able to realise his final > collaborations with Cage, Ocean, to which Tudor contributed the > electric component, Soundings: Ocean Diary. The orchestral > element, played by 112 musicians, is by Andrew Culver, following > Cage's original concept. The work was performed earlier this > summer, at the Lincoln Center Festival in New York.
>
> Many of the electronic devices used in Tudor's compositions were > designed and made by himself. Tudor was one of four core artists > who collaborated on the design of the Pepsi Pavilion for Expo
> '70, Osaka, Japan, a project of Experiments in Art and > Technology. With the visual artist Jacqueline Monnier, he > developed a kite environment that was installed at the Whitney > Museum in New York in 1986, in Dusseldorf in 1988, and at the > Jack Tilton Gallery. in New York in 1990. Other collaborators > included the filmmaker Molly Davies, the choreographer Viola > Farber, and the painter Robert Rauschenberg.
>
> He was a great cook, particularly of the cuisine of India, where > he had spent much time. "John Cage said David had a golden ear," > Merce Cunningham said recently, and added, "that he did, but he > also had a marvellous sense of humour." In general, Tudor's > contribution to the life and work of the Cunningham company was > more than just musical; as much as Cunningham and Cage > themselves, he personified its philosophy.
>

> One day at Black Mountain when Cunningham was rehearsing an > extremely complex solo, one of the first he had choreographed > with chance process, he sat down in despair. Tudor then > remarked: "Well, this is clearly impossible - but we'll go right > ahead and do it anyway."
>
> David Vaughan
>
> David Tudor, composer, born January 20, 1926; died August 13, > 1996

id EAA25491; Wed, 28 Aug 1996 04:47:04 -0400
Date: 28 Aug 96 04:44:54 EDT
From: John Whiting <[redacted]>
To: Charles Amirkhanian <[redacted]>,
"Robert J. Bertholf" <[redacted]>,
Dale Carter <[redacted]>, RONALD GUY DAVIS <[redacted]>,
Richard Elen at Apogee E <[redacted]>,
Richard Ehlich <[redacted]>,
Dave Foister <[redacted]>,
Richard Friedman <[redacted]>,
Gehlhaar-Matossian <[redacted]>,
Maria Gilardin <[redacted]>,
Don Guttenplan <[redacted]>,
Michael Hrebeniak <[redacted]>,
Pierre Joris <[redacted]>,
David Josephson <[redacted]>,
Matthew Lasar <[redacted]>,
Hugh Macdonald <[redacted]>,
Dave Malham <[redacted]>, "Richard K. Moore" <[redacted]>, jack nessel <[redacted]>,
Gallery October <[redacted]>,
"\"John Ohliger\"" <[redacted]>,
"Dr. William Paterson" <[redacted]>,
Charles Shere <[redacted]>,
William Sommerwerck <[redacted]>,
Maxwell Steer <[redacted]>,
Colin Still <[redacted]>,
Carl Stone <[redacted]>, John Sunier <[redacted]>,
Larry or Lynn Tunsta <[redacted]>,
"\"Harvey Wheeler\"" <[redacted]>,

John Whiting <[redacted]>
Subject: David Tudor Obituary

The [London] Guardian August 28 1996

OBITUARY

David Tudor

Black Mountain sounds

DAVID Tudor, who has died aged 70, abandoned a career as a virtuoso performer of contemporary piano music to devote himself to the composition and performance of electronic music.

Tudor was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he began his career as an organist. After studying composition and piano, he began to concentrate on the piano and soon became known as an interpreter of some of the most demanding works in the contemporary repertory.

In New York in 1950, he gave the American premiere - and the second performance anywhere - of Pierre Boulez's Second Piano Sonata. He also gave the first performances of works by Karlheinz Stockhausen, who dedicated a piece to him, and many others. But his closest association was with John Cage, who said that all his works until 1970 were written either directly for Tudor or with him in mind. He gave the first performances of Cage's Music of Changes (1952) and the Concert for Piano and Orchestra, the latter at a retrospective concert of Cage's music at New York Town Hall in 1958, when the work was "conducted" by Merce Cunningham.

When the Merce Cunningham Dance Company was formed at Black Mountain College in North Carolina, in the summer of 1953, with John Cage as musical director, Tudor joined him as company musician. He continued to perform and tour with the company until the end of 1994, when ill-health caused him to retire. After the death of Cage in August 1992, Tudor had succeeded him as the company's musical director, and he continued as musical advisor.

In the early days, Tudor loved to play 19th century salon music, and he made a selection of such pieces for Cunningham's Dime a Dance in 1953. Another Cunningham dance of that year was Banjo, to music by Louis Moreau Gottschalk. Cunningham's dancers could not understand why the choreographer had chosen the piece when they heard it played by another pianist, so Cunningham asked Tudor to play it for one rehearsal. "It sounded like 50 banjos all played at once," Cunningham has said, and when they heard, the dancers understood. Tudor also played music of this kind for dances by the eccentric and beautiful Katherine Litz.

At Black Mountain in 1952, where Tudor was an instructor, he took part in Cage's famous untitled, unstructured theatre piece, together with Cunningham, the poets Mary Caroline Richards and Charles Olson, and the painter Robert Rauschenberg. A number of friends from Black Mountain later formed the Gate Hill Co-op in Stony Point, New York, known as "The Land," where Cage, Tudor, Richards, and other artists lived for many years.

In the early 1960s, Cage and Tudor initiated the trend towards "live" (as opposed to taped) electronic music in the Cunningham company's musical repertory, and Tudor ended his active career as a pianist. In 1968 he composed his first score, for Cunningham's Rain Forest. This was followed by Sounddance (1975), Exchange (1978), Channels/Inserts (1981), Quartet (1982), Phrases (1984), Shards (1987), Five Stone Wind (with Cage and Takehisa Kosugi) (1988), Polarity (1990), and Enter (1992). In the autumn of 1992, he returned to the acoustic piano in concert performances of Cage's Winter Music with Atlas Eclipticalis and, in 1993, Solo for Piano. In 1994, Cunningham was able to realise his final collaborations with Cage, Ocean, to which Tudor contributed the electric component, Soundings: Ocean Diary. The orchestral element, played by 112 musicians, is by Andrew Culver, following Cage's original concept. The work was performed earlier this summer, at the Lincoln Center Festival in New York.

Many of the electronic devices used in Tudor's compositions were designed and made by himself. Tudor was one of four core artists who collaborated on the design of the Pepsi Pavilion for Expo '70, Osaka, Japan, a project of Experiments in Art and Technology. With the visual artist Jacqueline Monnier, he developed a kite environment that was installed at the Whitney Museum in New York in 1986, in Dusseldorf in 1988, and at the Jack Tilton Gallery. in New York in 1990. Other collaborators included the filmmaker Molly Davies, the choreographer Viola Farber, and the painter Robert Rauschenberg.

He was a great cook, particularly of the cuisine of India, where he had spent much time. "John Cage said David had a golden ear," Merce Cunningham said recently, and added, "that he did, but he also had a marvellous sense of humour." In general, Tudor's contribution to the life and work of the Cunningham company was more than just musical; as much as Cunningham and Cage themselves, he personified its philosophy.

One day at Black Mountain when Cunningham was rehearsing an extremely complex solo, one of the first he had choreographed with chance process, he sat down in despair. Tudor then remarked: "Well, this is clearly impossible - but we'll go right ahead and do it anyway."

David Vaughan

David Tudor, composer, born January 20, 1926; died August 13, 1996

----------4BAC54735E77--

↑ Index

10. Robert Drake
homophonic translation/translitics...
Mon 2 Sep 1996

---

i'm looking for references to poems &/or poets using "homphonic translations"--th process ov "translating" texts from another language by substituting similar-sounding english words... as this:

> I am the milkshake without color
> And without hands, come the butcher,
> Come Moses the rocker!
> An I am wild as a pauper,
>
> For the abbreviation of my Sahara,
> The jailer has the eyes of Southern france.
> My desire has gone, fled the desperation
> Over the black's salty tears...
>
> --Andrew Klimek
> from _Flowers of Mel_

Dick Higgins credits Robert Kelly for the term, and mentioned Steve McCaffery as having done such? & Dave Melnick has some based on Homer (Men in Aida)... specific refs wd be much appreciated.

i have in hand 2 recent: _The Real Ideal_ by Joel Lipman, & _Prime Sway_ by John M. Bennett; i wanted to be able to put them better into context.

shoe crayon
luigi-bob drake

↑ Index

11. Herb Levy
Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
Mon 2 Sep 1996

> i'm looking for references to poems &/or poets using "homphonic translations"--th process ov "translating" texts from another language by substituting similar-sounding english words... as this:

Several that come quickly to mind are:

Louis (& Celia) Zukofsky's translation of the complete Catullus. The opening of Louis (only, I think) Zukofsky's "A"-14 is a homophoic translation of selections from the Book of Job. Six Fillious by, collectively, bp Nichol, Steve McCaffery, Dick Higgins, Robert Filliou, George Brecht, and Dieter Roth is made up of various homophonic translations of Filliou's 14 Chansons et 1 Charade (published by Membrane Press). I think one of the translations in Nichol's Translating Translating Apollinaire is also homophonic as are several and in general there is a kind of homophonic tendency that comes and goes in Nichol's work including homophonic English trnalations of English original texts and words. I remember that several Harry Mathews and Charles Bernstein poems being identified as homophonic but I don't recall which ones.

I'm sure there are lots of others I'm forgetting & way more that I never knew about.

Bests

Herb

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

12. Douglas Messerli

Re: PAW & other parts of the sun & moon family of corporations?

Mon 2 Sep 1996

Ribot is its own magazine, not published by Sun & Moon Press all--just distributed by us. It's published by Paul Vangelisti in Los Angeles.

The new "magazine" is actually a semi-annual anthology of specific topics.

In fact S&M doesn't publish any magazines.

Douglas

At 09:54 PM 8/31/96 -0700, you wrote:
>>Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 14:19:01 -0700
>>From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
>>Subject: Re: Hannah Weiner
>>
>>Sun & Moon is publishing PAW soon in its new magazine:
>>Mr Knife, Miss Fork. Hannah's wonderful narrative will be >>one of the major works in that special issue devoted to >>the "theatrical" in lit.
>>
>>Douglas Messerli

>
>Douglas--
>
>what's the current array of s&m magazines, and what's the logic of the >one-press-multi-mag tack? There's PAW, and RIBOT, and?
>
>all best (long time no see!)
>
>Tenney
>

↑ Index

13. Douglas Messerli

Re: homophonic translation/translitics...

Mon 2 Sep 1996

You might also be interested in David Melnick's PCOET
and in my own poem, "A Vector of the Straddle," a completely sound-rhymed poem from Donne.

Douglas Messerli

At 07:33 AM 9/2/96 -0700, you wrote:
>>i'm looking for references to poems &/or poets using "homphonic >>translations"--th process ov "translating" texts from another >>language by substituting similar-sounding english words... as >>this:
>
>Several that come quickly to mind are:
>
>Louis (& Celia) Zukofsky's translation of the complete Catullus. The >opening of Louis (only, I think) Zukofsky's "A"-14 is a homophoic >translation of selections from the Book of Job. Six Fillious by,
>collectively, bp Nichol, Steve McCaffery, Dick Higgins, Robert Filliou, >George Brecht, and Dieter Roth is made up of various homophonic >translations of Filliou's 14 Chansons et 1 Charade (published by Membrane >Press). I think one of the translations in Nichol's Translating Translating >Apollinaire is also homophonic as are several and in general there is a >kind of homophonic tendency that comes and goes in Nichol's work including >homophonic English trnalations of English original texts and words. I >remember that several Harry Mathews and Charles Bernstein poems being >identified as homophonic but I don't recall which ones.
>

>I'm sure there are lots of others I'm forgetting & way more that I never >knew about.
>
>Bests
>
>Herb
>
>
>Herb Levy
>[redacted]
>

↑ Index

14. Christina Fairbank Chirot
trains late in a pollen air (fwd)
Mon 2 Sep 1996

---

re homophonic translation;

might be thought of also in terms of American humor writing, vaudeville and movies-- with varying degrees of literacy and a huge popuation of ESL speakers and writers--a lot of American humor has used the english language as the language to be translated-- an early example is Artemus Ward--there's a story about a boy constructor for example, a giant menacing snake who can swallow near anything-- and in the Marx Brothers, the "Why a Duck"-- small children practise homophonic translation on a regular basis-- witness what goes on during "wreck creation" time--one child's homophonic explanation for destruction of a kindergarten class room--

trains late in a pollen air

--dbchirot

↑ Index

15. Charles Bernstein
Frank Kuenstler 1928-1996
Mon 2 Sep 1996

Frank Kuenstler 1928-1996

Poet and film maker Frank Kuenstler died on August 11. A short obituary appeared in The New York Times, August 31. There will be a memorial service for Frank on Wednesday, September 4, at 670 West End Avenue (call [redacted] for more information).

In the next month I hope to have a full bibliography of Kuenstler's work on the EPC. His books are:

LENS (New York: Fim Cultures, 1964)
Selected Poems (New York: Eventorium Press, 1964)
Paradise News (New York: Eventorium Press, 1966)
Fugitives. Rounds (1966)
13½ Poems (New York: SZ/Press, 1984)
Continued (New York: Night Three Press. 1987)
Miscellany (New York: Night Three Press. 1987)
In Which (New York: Cairn Editions, 1994)

Here's what I wrote for 13½ Poems:

The publication of 13½ Poems marks the twentieth anniversary of Film Culture's edition of Frank Kuenster's first book Lens. Lens's brilliantly iconoclastic and cosmic compression of syntax and lexicon ranks Kuenstler with such pioneers of Zaum (Khlebnikov's word for pervasively neologistic poetry) as Gillespie, Melnick, and Inman. In 13 ½ Poems, we get another side of Kuenstler – less intractably opaque, more lightheartedly amusing. Each of the poems in the new collection suggests a different style: Kuenstler has provided a group show all on his own. More remarkably, in the long, final poem, "Text", Kuenstler achieves a maniacally nonstop synthesis of "blunt" cut-up and everyday "pandemonium" —"Foolish spirit foolish theory zeal almost macabre A craze … alert aggressive, military Maudlin, extreme."

LENS remains, for me, Kuenstler's great work. It is composed, basically, of two-word pairs joined by a period (though a period follows every word pair as well); though sometimes phrases stand in for single words. It is flush right, with hyphens noting split words. It runs 92 pages and is dated at the end: 1952-1964. Here is the opening of LENS (minus the italic "f."s and accents on metie'r and cre'me & not justified):

mm.Pris. metier.AAA. prime.Airies. numbers.Racquet. comma.Dei. rr.1919. peru.Ruse. glen.A. ggg.Ire. leapfrog.Mick. creme.Nail. game.Ble. flame- Bouyant. f.Rose. not.Ice. door.I. nigh.Eve. feather.Rail. mm.Error. mm.- Pris. Oscar.Later. f.Oil. I'm.Moon. bb.Abe count.Tokay. newman.Asiatics. mezzo.Potomac. sinned.- Drone. signed.Hormone. rr.Asp. clues.Ott. oft.Shoes. Deaf.Acid. ggg.Own. rape.- Cyclical. Faith.Per Se. soul.Elicit. F.Unction. tie- Grass. sign.Am carp.- Pathagorean gas.Tone mm.Acquire f.Rail salon.- Leica. Canine.Father tv.Jeeps it must be spring-A. picture of a flower just flashed upon the screen. rr.Lourdes. rr.Lao-tse. rr-Enter. Rr.Entire.

Frank lived in my neighborhood not only metaphorically but literally: I occasionally ran into him in the xerox store and on the streets. For a number of years he send out xeroxed pages of found art, with just an almost anonymous ARCHIVE stamped where a return address would usually be. Bruce Andrews did a cut-up of LENS for L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E #13 (1981); he called it: "And For Anything I Could Call My Own Thinking".

***

finally a haiku from Paradise News:

Fish swim. They die. They rise to the surface.
It is their way of falling.

↑ Index

16. George Bowering

Re: Swear word here!

Mon 2 Sep 1996

> George Bowering added ("That was YOU?"):
>
> *big oops--private message went to the list again--at least it wasn't the one about my intrigue with Rachel L. while Pierre took pictures--*
>
> Gwyn, tres embarrassed
>
> That was YOU? As Pierre is a lousy photographer, but a great poet, it was hard to tell who the partly-clad person was. I thought it looked a little like David Bromige, but the tan wasnt deep enough.
>
> I certainly hope Pierre finished duplicating the pictures so we can clean up in New Hampshire. Btw that WAS Bromige in the corner, but he seemed more interested in his baseball card collection (despite all the brave talk about "desire"). P.S. Pierre, when do we get paid for the shoot?
>
> Rachel Loden

I have been instructed by my old friend and present co-author Mr David Bromige to tell you that his lawyer will be in touch with you, just as soon as he has finished compiling his information for the suit he has prepared against a Mr Wallace, who apparently was a little careless with some women's clothing in Washington.

George Bowering.

"I sit inside the blond before you"

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4 --Anne Waldman

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

17. Schuchat
Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
Mon 2 Sep 1996

Numerous works by Ted Berrigan and Ron Padgett, especially those collected in BEAN SPASMS.

Ron Padgett's SOME BOMBS (homophonic translations of Reverdy) (in Great Balls of Fire) always seemed to me particularly successful.

Berrigan talks about the difference between these works and the Zukofsky CATULLUS in one of the interviews collected in TALKING IN TRANQUILITY.

(Doug Messerli, when are you going to reprint Bean Spasms in your S&M Classics series?)

↑ Index

18. Don Cheney
Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
Mon 2 Sep 1996

---

is PCOET a homophonic translation? or were you thinking of melnick's MEN IN AIDA?

doncheney
[redacted]

You might also be interested in David Melnick's PCOET
and in my own poem, "A Vector of the Straddle," a completely sound-rhymed poem from Donne.

Douglas Messerli

At 07:33 AM 9/2/96 -0700, you wrote:
>>i'm looking for references to poems &/or poets using "homphonic >>translations"--th process ov "translating" texts from another >>language by substituting similar-sounding english words... as
>>this:
>
>Several that come quickly to mind are:
>
>Louis (& Celia) Zukofsky's translation of the complete Catullus. The >opening of Louis (only, I think) Zukofsky's "A"-14 is a homophoic >translation of selections from the Book of Job. Six Fillious by,

>collectively, bp Nichol, Steve McCaffery, Dick Higgins, Robert Filliou, >George Brecht, and Dieter Roth is made up of various homophonic
>translations of Filliou's 14 Chansons et 1 Charade (published by Membrane >Press). I think one of the translations in Nichol's Translating Translating >Apollinaire is also homophonic as are several and in general there is a >kind of homophonic tendency that comes and goes in Nichol's work including >homophonic English trnalations of English original texts and words. I >remember that several Harry Mathews and Charles Bernstein poems being >identified as homophonic but I don't recall which ones.
>
>I'm sure there are lots of others I'm forgetting & way more that I never >knew about.
>
>Bests
>
>Herb
>
>
>Herb Levy
>[redacted]
>

> -- Saved internet headers (useful for debugging)
> Received: from listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu by mail.ucsd.edu; id JAA19303 sendmail > Received: from listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu (listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu [128.205.7.
> Received: from UBVM.CC.BUFFALO.EDU by UBVM.CC.BUFFALO.EDU (LISTSERV release > Received: from UBVM (NJE origin [redacted]) by UBVM.CC.BUFFALO.EDU (LMail
> Received: from hollywood.cinenet.net by UBVM.cc.buffalo.edu (IBM VM SMTP V2R3)
> Received: from ppp83.cinenet.net by hollywood.cinenet.net with SMTP (8
> X-Sender: [redacted]
> X-Mailer: Windows Eudora Light Version 1.5.4 (16)
> Mime-Version: 1.0
> Content-Type: text/plain; chars
> Message-ID: <1.5.4.16.19960902080017.1
> Date: Mon, 2 Sep 1996 09:25:23 -0700
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> Sender: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]
> From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
> To: Mul

↑ Index

19. Peter Quartermain

Re: homophonic translation/translitics...

Mon 2 Sep 1996

In addition to those mentioned by Herb Levy, there's the comic stuff, most famously
1. Mots d'heures: Gousses, Rames: The d'Antin Manuscript
New York: Grossman, 1967
2. Guillaume Chequespierre and the Oise Salon: an Anthology Selected and Edited by John Hulme.
New York: Harper & Row, 1986.

sample poem from #2 (french accentuation and lengthy footnotes omitted):

"En ca, ne doux dite coup belle la Cannes
Aas tete, lippe l'azur d'homem, di cri
Ou air; alfa de sias crete riverain.
Truc a verne ce, mais jure lesse tout main.
Don tous a sonne l'esse, si . . . "
--S. Colleriche (Kubla Khan)

"Baille de chose ouef guichet gourmet
Baille de chaine y ne bigue si ou or terre.
Ce tout de ce oui Guam oeuf no commises.
Dort terre ouef demon, nos commises."
-- H. Longeuvelo (Hiawatha)

I remember some years ago reading that Harry Mathews was compiling a vocabulary of words that existed in both French and English, out of which he was projecting a novel. But I no longer have the source for this snippet of information. Does anyone out there know anything about the Mathews project? Did he ever write any of it? ---

Peter

At 09:19 AM 9/2/96 -0400, Robert Drakewrote:
>i'm looking for references to poems &/or poets using "homphonic >translations"--th process ov "translating" texts from another >language by substituting similar-sounding english words... as
>this:
>
> I am the milkshake without color
> And without hands, come the butcher,
> Come Moses the rocker!
> An I am wild as a pauper,

>
> For the abbreviation of my Sahara,
> The jailer has the eyes of Southern france.
> My desire has gone, fled the desperation
> Over the black's salty tears...
>
> --Andrew Klimek
> from _Flowers of Mel_
>
>
>Dick Higgins credits Robert Kelly for the term, and mentioned >Steve McCaffery as having done such? & Dave Melnick has some >based on Homer (Men in Aida)... specific refs wd be much >appreciated.
>
>i have in hand 2 recent: _The Real Ideal_ by Joel Lipman, & >_Prime Sway_ by John M. Bennett; i wanted to be able to put >them better into context.
>
>shoe crayon >luigi-bob drake
>
>
+ + + +

Bruce Andrews's recent work, 'Lip Service', that's a sound translation of Dante, right? Of the Paradiso?

Lived is short,
Jordan

↑ Index

21. filch

Re: Frank Kuenstler 1928-1996

Mon 2 Sep 1996

Mr. Bernstein wrote-
"Lens's brilliantly iconoclastic and cosmic compression of syntax and lexicon ranks Kuenstler with such pioneers of Zaum (Khlebnikov's word for pervasively neologistic poetry) as Gillespie, Melnick, and Inman."

I am quite probably wrong and in need of correction but it is my understanding that zaum is more accurately translated as transrational, trans-sense, or beyond sense. I'm not sure I understand how one gets from that to "pervasively neologistic" which I understand to mean "new words". I suppose the argument could be made that zaum encompasses this idea of "new words" however it is my understanding that Khlebnikov had a distinct fascination with the origins of words as such and prefered greatly to return to the origins of the Russian language rather than to create something new. From what I understand, his coinages etc. were, in his opinion, a sort of "etymologism" which seems to leave little room for "new words".

I believe Markov wrote, at one point, that Kruchonykh & Khlebnikov together created the foundation for zaum in their piece entitled "The Word As Such." I believe also there has been a great deal of uncertainty about the actual origins of the word, popularly attributed to Khlebnikov, as it seems several different people actually claim "the rights" as it were. I even remember reading on a plane a few years ago a rather bizaare theory which held that the word actually originated with one of the Burliuk brothers, probably D. God help me if I can remember where I got that one.

Any help clarifying this would be greatly appreciated.

BTW I am still wondering if anyone knows of an English translation of A.N. Chicherin's "Change of All"?

filch

↑ Index

22. Christina Fairbank Chirot
zaum
Mon 2 Sep 1996

---

re zaum:

Markov also sugested a source for zaum may have been essays on "speaking in tongues"in various religous sects in Russia--this would be as "filch" pointed out, not the invention of new words, but transrational words with sources in a traditional religous context-- the relationship of the spiritual to the work of Kruchenyk, Khlebnikov, Malevich (not to mention Kandinsky) is well known on the next to last page of Spring and All, Wiiliams Carlos Williams says of zaum, as he knew of it:

Writing is likened to music. The object would be it seems to make poetry a pure art, like music. Painting, too. Writing, as with certain of the modern Russians whose work I have seen, would use unoriented sounds in place of conventional words. The poem would be completely liberated when there is identity of the sound with something--perhaps the emotion.

(This is interesting in relation to Ornette Coleman's famous remark re Free Jazz: "It's not about notes, it's about feelings.)

--dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

23. Herb Levy
Re: Not homophonic Mathews
Tue 3 Sep 1996

Peter Quartermain wrote:

> I remember some years ago reading that Harry Mathews was compiling a vocabulary of words that existed in both French and English, out of which he was projecting a novel. But I no longer have the source for this snippet of information. Does anyone out there know anything about the Mathews project? Did he ever write any of it?

Peter -

I remember seeing something about this somewhere, too. &, if anyone could do an entire novel in this mode, Mathews is one writer who might could. But I'd thought this double vocabulary (sort of the inverse of homophonic - but I can't think of a suffix that'd mean spelling, false cognates maybe) was for the only slightly (don't want to offend any poets who may be on this list) more modest possibility of short poems.

I mean, there's only so much you can do with the fact that, say, "pour" and "pain" are words in both languages. To make a sustained narrative that makes even an extremely tortured kind of sense in both languages seems to be a perhaps insurmountable problem. Shorter lyrics seem a little less problematic.

But then the first time I read, in French, about an amazing machine they had at IRCAM which could do all kinds of weird transformations of sound. It was weeks before I found someone who could tell me what it was. & I found out that an "ordinateur" is just a "computer."

So, uh, I may not be the best person to judge the possible options here.

Bests

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

24. Gabrielle Welford
Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
Tue 3 Sep 1996

Anyone know of "Ladle Rat Rotten Hut?" Not poetry but homophonic and funny. gab.

↑ Index

25. Ron Silliman
Homophonic translations
Tue 3 Sep 1996

Luigi-B.,

My one attempt at homophonic translation was published in the "SF Forum" of ROOF 5 (winter 78) as "Do We Know Ella Cheese?" It begins:

Where
when itch scree
hurt as much?

Then how's their angle
or known gun?

Honky sets selves,
his name a eye nor much.

Plows lick answers:
each fucking a fun sign-in,

starker in design.
Dent is seen as niche....

(and so forth for seven long pages in that old Roof 8.5 x 11 format). It was a piece I started circa '71 and worked on sporadically for several years before I began to be satisfied with it.

I believe that somebody (Robert Kelly?) at one point a few years back was trying to put together an anthology of such translations, but I don't think anything ever came of the effort.

All best,

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

26. Michael D Basinski

Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Aug 1996 to 30 Aug 1996

Tue 3 Sep 1996

Michael Basinski
Poetry/Rare Books Collection
SUNY at Buffalo
[redacted] Fax: [redacted]

On Sat, 31 Aug 1996, Automatic digest processor wrote:

> There are 10 messages totalling 426 lines in this issue.
>
> Topics of the day:
>
> 1. 12? in sanskrit
> 2. need some info (2)
> 3. Events in Providence
> 4. interesting article on the web
> 5. Street-Art: File: "DATABASE OUTPUT" (fwd)
> 6. <No subject given>
> 7. Kerouac
> 8. Hannah Weiner
> 9. xxx/event: one
>
> ----------
>
> Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 02:40:46 -0400
> From: Blair Seagram <[redacted]>
> Subject: 12? in sanskrit

Does anybody know what the sanskrit word for 12 is?

Blair

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 07:57:31 -0400
From: Michael Boughn <[redacted]>
Subject: need some info

Does anybody on the list know of a book called _Un Homme grand: Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures_? I'm having a really hard time tracking it down. Even Buffalo doesn't seem to have it. I'm specifically interested in an essay by Gerald Nicosia called "Kerouac: Writer without a home".

Thanks,
Mike
[redacted]

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 08:12:00 -0400
From: Diane Marie Ward <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: need some info

The book Un homme grand : Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures= Jack Kerouac at the crossroads of many cultures -- is available at the University of Buffalo - we have 2 copies -- if you like (since I spend most of my daylight hours working for the Libraries) I can put you in touch with our Inter Library Loan Program / or put you in touch with the Poetry Collection. Email me backchannel.

Also, does anyone have an email address for John (J. W.) Curry in Toronto?

On Fri, 30 Aug 1996, Michael Boughn wrote:

Does anybody on the list know of a book called _Un Homme grand: Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures_? I'm having a really hard time tracking it down. Even Buffalo doesn't seem to have it. I'm specifically interested in an essay by Gerald Nicosia called "Kerouac: Writer without a home".

Thanks,
Mike
[redacted]

Diane Ward
[redacted]
State University of New York at Buffalo

THE AESTHETE'S LIST : http://www.acsu.buffalo.edu/~dward/

"I dreamt I dwelt in marble halls,
And woke to find it true;
I wasn't born for an age like this;
Was Smith, Was Jones, Were you?" -- George Orwell written in 1935.

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 10:44:13 EDT
From: Gale Nelson <[redacted]>
Subject: Events in Providence

The following events are planned for Providence in the coming weeks:

Wed, 4 Sep.
Poetry readings by Maurice Scully (Dublin) and Tony Lopez (Devon)
8:00 pm TF Green, Young Orchard Street, between Hope & Cook, East Side

Thu, 5 Sep.
Performance work by MURMUR
8:00 pm TF Green (see above for address)

Tue, 10 Sep.
Mixed genre readings by Lori Baker (fiction) and Gale Nelson (poetry)
7:00 pm Little Professor Book Center, N. Main Street

Thu, 12 Sep.
Night of A Thousand and One Readings by the Graduate Students of Brown Creative Writing
8:00 pm TF Green (see above for address)

Thu, 19 Sep.
Poetry reading by August Kleinzahler, visiting assoc. professor at Brown
8:00 pm TF Green (see above for address)

Thu, 26 Sep.
Fiction reading by Robert Coover
8:00 pm TF Green (see above address)

1-5 Oct.

Unspeakable Practices III
A festival of vanguard narrative, organized by Robert Coover
Brown campus, various locations

All events listed above are free and open to the public. All save the Little Professor Book Center Reading are sponsored by Creative Writing, Brown University.

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 10:23:50 -0500
From: Joe Amato <[redacted]> Subject: Re: interesting article on the web

a few weeks back, chris funkhouser posted in about an article on the web entitled

"virtual whiteness and narrative diversity"

by one joe lockard of uc/berkeley...

just finished reading the piece, found it to be extremely interesting, and i too recommend it to those of you with an interest in questions of race/ethnicity and how critical discourse relating to these latter may be brought to bear on cspace...

again, at

http://darkwing.uoregon.edu/~heroux/uc4/4-lockard.html

best,

joe

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 11:26:37 -0500
From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]>
Subject: Street-Art: File: "DATABASE OUTPUT" (fwd)

This of much interest & concern--to be aware of.

(fwd. dbchirot)
---------- Forwarded message ----------

For Immediate Release: A.R.T.I.S.T. president Robert Lederman's New Trial Date Set For 9/9/96

A new trial date has been set for Monday 9/9/96 Jury Part 1, 5th floor 100 Centre Street, Criminal Court Bldg. 9:30 A.M. The previously scheduled trial date of 7/30 was unexpectedly adjourned when a roomful of print and T.V. journalists showed up to cover the proceedings. Robert Lederman will be the first N.Y.C. street artist brought to trial. The prosecuting the case is D.A. David Jaffe. Judge Pickholtz is scheduled to hear the trial. Lederman is represented by attorney and one-time prosecutor, Marc Agnifilo [redacted]. The defense has six eyewitnesses to the illegal arrest prepared to testify.

Since 1993 the City has handcuffed and arrested more than 350 artists for displaying or selling their paintings on N.Y.C. streets. While it has avoided prosecuting any artist's case, the City continues to sell thousands of works of fine art it has illegally confiscated at its monthly forfeiture auction at One Police Plaza. D.A.'s and judges have begun publicly expressing disapproval of the policy.

Lederman is charged with Unlicensed General Vending and two additional charges of Disorderly Conduct. Each charge carries a possible three month sentence. This is an unusual case in that the Disorderly Conduct charges as described by D.A. Jaffe at a preliminary hearing involve nothing more than the defendant handing out literature, holding up a protest sign that read, "Stop Arresting Artists", photographing the police confiscating another artists' work and handing out eight protest signs to other artists present. These activities, as well as displaying art, are fully protected by the First Amendment. Lederman has been arrested twice before for distributing literature exposing the City's artist arrest policy and numerous times while displaying his art.

At a preliminary hearing held on 6/27 prosecuting D.A. David Jaffe told the presiding judge, "Robert Lederman has been arrested 13 times. If we don't stop him this will only continue. Before being arrested he handed out protest signs to the other artists and they marched up and down. He's even displaying photos of artists being arrested alongside his paintings."

At that hearing the judge appeared predisposed to find Lederman guilty regardless of the facts in the case. Lederman's attorney was told he couldn't talk about the First Amendment. The judge and D.A. didn't want the defense to enter photographs taken at the arrest scene, which contradict the police report, as evidence. The judge also denied the defense the right to subpoena witnesses to testify on N.Y.C.'s vending ordinance or to enter relevant testimony by City officials from the ongoing street artist Federal suit, including the Corporation Counsel's admission that artists, "...cannot obtain a Vending License". [Lederman v. City of New York 94 civ. 7216 (MGC)]. The Federal case is presently before the 2nd Circuit Federal Appeals Court with a decision expected at any time. Numerous museums, arts and legal rights groups, including the ACLU, The Whitney and MOMA have joined the suit in support of the artist-plaintiffs.

Lederman is president of A.R.T.I.S.T. an advocacy group of over 200 New York street artists. He has been an outspoken critic of Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's quality of life arrest policies and of City Council Member Kathryn Freed. Freed is known to be a motivating force behind the artist arrests and, according to the N.Y. Times, is in Federal Court "..seeking to overturn Constitutional protection for visual art". Observers believe this Criminal Court trial is an attempt to intimidate artist activists.

Recently, Lederman and other A.R.T.I.S.T. members distributed a controversial leaflet at Criminal Court ("Why Plead Guilty?") advising so-called "quality of life" defendants to not plead guilty or accept plea bargaining arrangements and to demand a trial. Members of the D.A.'s office, defense lawyers and judges agreed with the leaflet, causing the Giuliani administration considerable embarrassment. A number of reporters claim they've been pressured by City officials and by the NYPD not to continue covering the street artist issue.

For more information or to receive a press kit contact
A.R.T.I.S.T. [redacted] E-mail [redacted]
or visit the A.R.T.I.S.T. web page:
http://www.openair.org/alerts/artist/nyc.html
Photos of this and other artist arrests are available.

References to this trial, artist arrests and related material can be found in the following:
New York Times, Sunday July 14, 1996, City section pg 13, lead story); "The War of Nerves Downtown; Kathryn Freed's War of Nerves" [detailed expose of City Council Member Freed]
New York Times Magazine, Sunday July 14, 1996 pg. 8 The City "It's a Quality, Quality Life"
Art In America, March 1996 pg. 128 "New Allies for Street Artists"
New York Times Wednesday, January 24, 1996 Metro section pg. B1 "Street Art: Free Speech or Just Stuff?"
New York Magazine, January 23, 1995 pg 16 "Among the Artlaws"

Christian Science Monitor Thursday, July 14, 1994 pg. 11 "New York Reins In Street Art"
Christian Science Monitor Wednesday, February 14, 1996 "Conflict On the Street: Artists v. N.Y.C."
Time Out Magazine Feb 21-27 1996 pg. 18 "Peddle Pushers"
New York Amsterdam News Saturday, June 15, 1996 pg. 4 "Artists To Sue Over First Amendment Right of Speech".

--- from list [redacted] ---

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 13:02:07 -0400
From: Jordan Davis <[redacted]>
Subject: <No subject given>

CURRENT PRICE LIST from SUBPOETICS/POETRY CITY

Sea Lyrics by Lisa Jarnot $5
Western Love by Bill Luoma $5
Lapsis Linguae by Marcella Durand $5
Immediate Orgy & Audit by Ange Mlinko $5
August by Dan Bouchard (special issue of Compound Eye, ed. A. Mlinko) $1
Thunk by Kevin Davies $3
A Little Gold Book by Jordan Davis $5
Sincerity Loops by Steve Carll $5

and now...

MASS AVE, ed. by Dan Bouchard $5
since 1996
Mass Ave has featured such writers as Jawanza Ali Keita, Ange Mlinko, Jordan Davis, Renee Gladman, Chris Stroffolino, David Baratier, Giovanni Singleton, Bill Luoma, Lisa Amber Phillips, Beth Anderson, Meredith Quartermain, Steve Carll, Michael Leddy and David Golumbia--

"the tightest
pants in heaven"

To order, send an email to [redacted] with your street address and the books you need. Add $3 for first class shipping, orders over $25 add $0 for shipping even though here in New York we have to take all of our packages to the post office somebody with a tv let me know if the unabomber movie is any good.

Jordan Davis
46 E 7 #10
NYC 10003
[redacted]

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 13:14:56 -0700
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Kerouac

Does anybody on the list know of a book called _Un Homme grand: Jack Kerouac a la confluence des cultures_? I'm having a really hard time tracking it down. Even Buffalo doesn't seem to have it. I'm specifically interested in an essay by Gerald Nicosia called "Kerouac: Writer without a home".

Thanks,
Mike
[redacted]

Mike,

Yeah, the book is as you titled it. Edited by Pierre Anctil, Louis Dupont, Remi Ferland and Eric Waddell. Published by carleton University Press, 1990. It's proceedings from that Kerouac conference in Quebec.It is distributed by Oxford, so shd be easily obtainable. Nicosia's piece is 20pp long.

George Bowering. "Nuestros cuerpos se cubren

de una yedra de s=EDlabras."
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
--Octavio Paz
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted] =20

Date: Fri, 30 Aug 1996 14:19:01 -0700
From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Hannah Weiner

Sun & Moon is publishing PAW soon in its new magazine:
Mr Knife, Miss Fork. Hannah's wonderful narrative will be one of the major works in that special issue devoted to the "theatrical" in lit.

Douglas Messerli

At 10:11 PM 8/26/96 -0500, you wrote:
james sherry writes:
Roof Books will publish Hannah's Weiner's <<We Speak Silent>> this fall. I will try to make a special offer to the list when the book becomes available.

goody! in the meantime, where can i get "PAH" or PAW, that charles mentioned?

Meanwhile, Maria, I wonder about your theory. The themes in Hannah's writing don't seem to me to have much to do with holocaust. A list of them would show late sixties tv and political issues, the fast, lsd, family, friends, and isolation. Why not take her at her word?

i'm not talking about thematics so much as effect; her writing as an effect of post-holocaust (Jewish) subjectivity. something like that. not trying to ferret out any subtext. still, thanks for the list of identifiable themes.

The interest for me in Hannah's writing has always been her ability to weave through inside and out without the usual membranes and transitions.
For Hannah much of what we call art comes quite easily to her once she has put herself in a particular position, which I don't need to characterize.

good point; i like stuff about weaving and membranes.

Also see Maria Damon's essay in the new issue of <<Chain>>: Hannah makes a pure play at consciousness by mixing genres. Sometimes she succeeds and the reader is pleased.

interesting; what specific genres wd u say she mixes?

James
maria d

Date: Thu, 25 Jan 1996 17:45:14 -0700
From: jeffrey timmons <[redacted]> Subject: xxx/event: one

xxx/event: one

they took over the campus at arizona state university this week
75,000 people coming for the supperbowl
corporate hospitality suites rise over the sacred
parking lots worshiped by high and low alike
classes were cancelled for two days
closed the library early
locked the doors completely to accomodate
stuporsunday
official souvenir vendor distribution sites for all this splurf-fest capital guzzle feed-trough
greenback shower of the sports season
a soft-drink company (who will remain anonymous so as not to endorse this product unwittingly)
will throw a party for students with hot dogs for sale
a local hemp spokesman says he will sell dope at the scupperbog
the economic wind fall for tempe phoenix
arizona will be tremendous according to the saturation coverage by
the arizona republic(an) for the potential to "cash-in"
on the xxx/event
arizona state university is "bloated and
inefficient"
according to a republican govenor whos filed for bankruptcy
budget cuts will likely lead to tuition raises while the other two state schools will suffer no such cutbacks
the stutterbloff is on more peoples minds than the next goverment shut-down
arizona state university students marched down
the main strip of tempe protesting the ironies of this money-gozzling fleet-ditch diving city . . .

End of POETICS Digest - 29 Aug 1996 to 30 Aug 1996
****

↑ Index

27. Bill Luoma

Re: homophonic translation/translitics

Tue 3 Sep 1996

Don Cheney has done some good work in this area. All of Catullus and 10 Propertius Odies. Don is a skilled prose writer, so in his hands you get a real nasty & hilarious narrative, as you get in Catullus & Propertius, but you also get great sound. Whereas in Zukofsky's homophones, eg, you for the most part just get great sound, with the nasty humors subordinate.

Below are some Propertius Cheney's stolen from the web at:

http://fuji.ucsd.edu/alfredo

First

Cynthia. First, your misery. I see the pit in your eyes and we don't hold each other after love.
To me this constant deceit looms fast and it is impossible (dead) to press it: I love your feet.
Do kiss me and do quit casting all these improbable women at me, I don't want your consolation.
And I am totally furious that there's no deficit this year.
I know you have God but I have adultery.
Milanion knew the fugue would end and told the workers to say that you and I are aunts conducting a tour of the silo.
Now, I'm in no Parthenonian mood to make amends for your aunt's errors.
I bat and she always suits me up, fair as video.
She and I are jalai percussionists. You'll hear the ramifications.
Arcadia is sow city where dopey buses run the gamut.
Scram you poor, crazy, domestic woman,
love in tandem precedes you and is a valiant benefactor.
In me, love is always late, not that you understand art.
And now that you mention it I note that in a previous life I was angry at you. We quibbled about duck tape and lunar fallacies and worked in sacred, magic monasteries in a dumb age dominated by men who converted us and, face it pal, they were going to eat me or mince me.
I think some of the credit goes to your side and almost all to the Cytae posse who belted out song after song.
And you who never lapses into "Once In Love With Amy," I love you.
Why this is right I can't say. Your breasts exhilarate for breasts and for rum your pate, myrrh and ignorance.
I have liberty in the sit mode but why did you light and locate my anger?
We're furtive for radical men and furtive for underwear.

I won't write why your cat isn't female or why you bus to see your facile god's annual aura.
Your parents always love to see us in a tutu.
To me you are Venus, especially at night when we exercise our love.
And no one you accuse has a temper to fit my love.
In hock, no money. You and I are bad off, so when we have more money to cure our net assets will mutate into crazy love.
But if the money is late it will be adieu to you,
you who wants lots of references, you are...Bah! Oh, my money!

Third

The sea is calm and I quit seeing the singing dentist.
Language deserts us. Knowledge (literally: "bus") is also calm. And accurate.
I am liberal during "coitus andromeda".
I am an assiduous necker, less than Eden but fess up, the chore is calm in her funny conceit. A pie doesn't know how tall you or I or the USA is. Hi Molly, I'm spiraling quietly.
Cynthia, I'm not certain I can put the nix on so many kisses.
I'm sober like many foreigners who used to say "banco!"
and who rent Sarah at night. Face it boys, thank your egos not your dumb senses which everyone depends on.
I impress Molly: "A condor is just a dire bull."
And what music can only duplicate, my heart corrects. While you and I are bent over love or a book you tell me that God's uterus is the subject the thief posited. To tempt is to lacerate the eyes and admonitions of "so sue me and arm my hands" don't soothe your wounds. The air is dominant, the turbulence quiets 'em.
Expert matrons, I urge you satiate, but my sick intentions fix my eyes on a harem (bam!).
Arguments and ignorance in a kitty corner of the bus.
And my only mode is our mode of front-wheel- drive Corollas.
That pony is yours, Cynthia, temporarily.
My mode lapses into gaudiness, for the mare's capillaries are not furtive because a pony is not a damn bus.
Largely, everyone is an ingrate but some grate more.
Money is always prone to violent scenes and quotients are rarely suspected of having motives.
Obstinately you want the suspicious credit.
You don't want to be insolent and you aren't. You are timid.
Now which life are you in that you know to be yours?
Don't die you ersatz procurer of hats from the moon.

The moon is dead but you are illuminated.
Compose it on a bus the radius of which can fake it on a cello.
Molly, sit down and fix the torn cubicle.
"We" refers to "you" in "tandem" in your lecture.
If you alter the clauses will you be expelled and put on a bus?
Not that you belong. Our consumation in the temporal night was languid and exact. Do I ride on the side of the bus?
Oh you tease me at night with improbable tales from magazines.
My misery always has you in it.
I fall (bam!) on my somnolent stamina. The purpose is verses and I confess Orpheus sings lyrics.
Enter the dumb thief. I come and a Gay bar is deserted.
And outside is always the longest in the morass of love.
And dumb me: "I can sop-up this lap, Sam, so pour impudent Alice a strawberry liqueur which ultimately will cure me."

↑ Index

28. Rachel Loden

Re: Swear word here!

Tue 3 Sep 1996

George Bowering added ("I have been instructed..."):

> *big oops--private message went to the list again--at least it wasn't the one about my intrigue with Rachel L. while Pierre took pictures--*
>
> Gwyn, tres embarrassed
>
> That was YOU? As Pierre is a lousy photographer, but a great poet, it was hard to tell who the partly-clad person was. I thought it looked a little like David Bromige, but the tan wasnt deep enough.
>
> I certainly hope Pierre finished duplicating the pictures so we can clean up in New Hampshire. Btw that WAS Bromige in the corner, but he seemed more interested in his baseball card collection (despite all the brave talk about "desire"). P.S. Pierre, when do we get paid for the shoot?
>
> I have been instructed by my old friend and present co-author Mr David Bromige to tell you that his lawyer will be in touch with you, just as soon as he has finished compiling his information for the suit he has prepared against a Mr Wallace, who apparently was a little careless with some women's clothing in Washington.

Peckham, Gass, Fairweather & Zukofsky
Attorneys at Law

September 3, 1996

Dear Mr. Bowering:

It has come to our attention that you are making veiled threats to our client, Rachel Loden, using the cover of a Mr. David Bromige, a notorious carnival barker of uncertain national origin. We strongly advise you to refrain from further insinuations about Ms. Loden and the originality of her sonnet sequence, "Snorkling the Lotus." If we are unsuccessful in obtaining your cooperation, we may be forced to bring certain delicate matters to light. We are in particular most anxious to avoid any further mention of that sordid little contretemps with the cocktail hostess in Winnipeg. Need we go on?

As for Mr. Wallace, we earnestly hope that he seeks counseling.

Yours very sincerely,

Roderick Slyme, Esq.

↑ Index

29. Lisa Amber Phillips

Re: homophonic translation/translitics...

Tue 3 Sep 1996

Gabrielle-- I have a copy of "ladle rat rotten hut" on my office door at school, and I pass it out to my academic writing students as a "cautionary tale" against excessive dependence upon their word-processing spell checkers. I end up reading it in a sing-songy voice like the Swedish Chef from the muppets.

Lisa Amber Phillips

↑ Index

30. Kathrine Varnes

Re: homophonic translation/translitics...

Tue 3 Sep 1996

On Mon, 2 Sep 1996, Gabrielle Welford wrote:

> Anyone know of "Ladle Rat Rotten Hut?" Not poetry but homophonic and funny. gab.
>
> Yeah. W.D. Snodgrass has an essay in the Southern Review (?) all about the importance of nonsense in poetry and pleasure. He talks at length about Ladle Rat Rotten Hut and ties that to poetry. I don't have all the details because I only borrowed a friend's copy, but it's a fun essay -- many illustrations of this sort.

Kathrine Varnes
[redacted]
University of Delaware

↑ Index

31. Robert Archambeau

Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Sep 1996 to 2 Sep 1996

Tue 3 Sep 1996

I understand Marjorie Perloff's frustration about the lack of time for discussion at the New Hampshire poetry conference/festival: the best discussions I had there were informal and private, and I feel that many of the most interesting questions didn't get asked in a public forum. But to some degree at least I think those who came as critics (a group in which I include myself) were responsible for this state of affairs: I noticed that people tended to go over the allotted time limit, even when they skipped passages of the essay that they'd come to read. Had all of the papers actually _been_ 20 minutes long, there would have been time to start some interesting discussions.

As far as the question of the status of critics goes, Marjorie raises an interesting point. Although I have nothing to complain about personally (I had the opening slot on the first plenary session) the critics did only get to speak once, and the poets tended to both address critical issues and to read from or perform their work. There is a bit of a conundrum here, though: if poets are restricted to only one activity, we are deprived of the "poet's prose" that can often be so valuable, especially with experimental work; if critics are allowed to read twice in order to receive as much attention as poets, conference schedules will be even more crowded than they already are, and there will be even less time for discussion. The real solution, of course, would be to have longer conferences, but who has the funding (or the time)?

All that aside, I look at my schedule from New Hampshire and realize that it was a miracle that this conference came into being, and think that Romana Huk deserves our thanks for pulling it all together.

--Robert Archambeau

↑ Index

32. Ian Wilson
The Herman Review
Tue 3 Sep 1996

Some of you may be familiar with The Herman Review published by Rick Bursky in Los Angeles. The journal has featured both well known and less known poets. Bursky is interested in the best writing he can find, no matter who it comes from.

For a variety of personal reasons, Rick is considering stopping publication. He had assembled all the material for the No. 3 when circumstances arose that may force him to abandon the project if not forever than for a long, long time.

I believe Rick Bursky would welcome expressions of support, written or financial. Please do NOT take this as a solicitation. Small magazines, unaffiliated with a publishing house or an academic sponsor have a rough time of it. If nothing else, I think Rick Bursky needs to hear that his journal has value and that it would be a shame for it to cease publication.

Rick Bursky can be reached at [redacted]

Ian Wilson
Loyola Marymount University, Los Angeles
[redacted]
http://users.aol.com/ibar88/private/ian1.htm
http://users.aol.com/ibar88/private/story/index.htm

↑ Index

33. Marjorie Perloff
Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Sep 1996 to 2 Sep 1996
Tue 3 Sep 1996

I have a question for all my dear friends on this List: if, as Alan Golding reminded us in his paper, there isn't supposed to be a real divide between poetry and theory, if, as "linguistically innovative" writers have been saying for 20 years or more, genres are fluid, hybrid, etc etc., why is it that at "Assembling Alternatives" the critics were absolutely second-class citizens? The poets got to read for 20 minutes and give 20 minute papers; the critics and scholars got to give 20 minute papers, often in slots where there was no time for discussion. The poets are listed in the brochure, with pics and bios; the critics, all of whom paid their way to this conference (in my case over $1,000) were invisible in that regard. Do we then still believe in the secondariness of critical discourse? Would critics have been allowed to spend their 20 minute "papers" schmoozing about this and that as some of the poets who gave papers did? And if so, how is all this "linguistically innovative" discourse any different from the good old poetry festival attended by poets only?

A second important issue which also relates back to the Orono conference: I think that when there's no time for discussion, as there wasn't here, really strange things happen. People will make authoritative statements that may in fact be just plain wrong. No one calls the person on it, no one takes up the issues--and there we are. Philip Mead came all the way from Australia for the conference, spoke for 20 minutes on the situation in Australian poetry which is fascinating and that was that. No questions, no responses.

There were many exhilerating moments and wonderful readings and for those of us from the U.S. it was very exciting to meet (however briefly in the endless marathon) the British poets. But it remains wholly unclear to me who was allowed to read or perform, what makes some of the people who read or performed "linguistically innovative" or "alternative," and so on. I wonder if anyone else shares my frustration.

Marjorie Perloff

↑ Index

34. Loss Glazier
Assembling Alternatives
Tue 3 Sep 1996

ASSEMBLING ALTERNATIVES

An international poetry conference/festival held at the University of New Hampshire, Durham
29 August-2 September, 1996

THE NEW ENGLAND CENTER sits like a nest into a boulder-spattered wooded hillside on the edge of the University of New Hampshire campus. "To assemble," "one or other of two," etc.—-well, here it was: "Assembling Alternatives" sang like a bird’s egg, snug in the downy center of its forest loft. And what could be more to the point? Robbin’ these words from all points of the compass! Like the Vancouver conference of last summer, this conference enjoyed not only splendid weather (made even more delicious by the impending—though never arriving—sledge hammer of hurricane Edouard aka Hugo Ball rolling up the coast) but a similar (though not author-based) focus and an exhilarating sense of multi-Englished poetries. (Aussi avec un peu de Quebécoise!) For a brief few days, New England became New Englishes, words falling ah from the clear blue skies. Unlike larger conferences (and the word "conference" shouldn’t even be used here) where words tend to sediment into a drone, Assembling Alternatives offered a gourmet feast of language leaping electrified across continents, seas, and islands. The talks were terrific, the readings offered one after another exemplar of how experimental writing (also sometimes called "linguistically-innovative" writing—-among other terms) might propose itself—and how also it might NOT be limited. Despite the wide range of pronunciations, dialects, sets of vernacular, tropes, themes, perspectives, and forms, Assembling Alternatives allowed a multi-voiced rendering of innovative language—-languages that never once sat still nor relented on their challenge to the gourmet-fed, sleep-deprived, conversation-charged, tone-ecstatic, grammar-doubting assemblers. As I mentioned in the talk I gave-—and this was completely earnest—-listing the linguistic predecessors to electronic poetries—-Following World War II, the examination of system in Olson, Duncan and Blaser's serial works, Creeley's numeric determinations, Bernstein, Silliman, Grenier, Howe's radical typographies, the explorations of language by Maggie O'Sullivan, Karen MacCormack, Joan Retallack, and Hannah Weiner—and the work of all those listed in this conference program--and the alleatories of Mac Low and Cage point in different ways to various forms of nonlinearity that present in New Hampshire was a regiment of innovators that pointed in all these ways (as Gertrude Stein puts it: "a spectacle and nothing strange a single hurt color and an arrangement in a system to pointing.") There could hardly be a better assembly in this day and age to put forward what I wanted to say. It is hard to mention any specific participants (this is my point!) without doing disservice to the fact that the quality and strengths of nearly all of those present, were unveeringly strong. However, evening readings through the penultimate night alone offered the likes of Maggie O'Sullivan, Kathleen Fraser, Ken Edwards, Joan Retallack, Tom Raworth, Pierre Joris, Leslie Scalapino, Allen Fisher, Catherine Walsh, Steve McCaffery, Robert Sheppard, Karen MacCormack, Charles Bernstein, Bob Perelman, Denise Riley, Abigail Child, Barrett Watten, and Nicole Brossard, among other great readers. What, beside this extraordinary talent, made the conference so useful? One fact was the significant presence of women poets. (Out of 39 evening slots, for example, 16 were occupied by women—not yet representative but a sight better than most events.) Further, typically marginalized areas of working were brought straight onto the stage. One of these was performance poetry. The wide participation by performance poets was inspiring—-and the final night's reading turned out to be a state of the art fête, gala, grand … FESTIVAL (after all, this word was right on the conference program!) on how experimental poets might perform the word. In one evening, in a sticky Portsmouth theatre briefly stolen from the Rocky Horror Picture Show, performance/artists/poets such as David Bromige, Fiona Templeton, cris cheek, Paul Dutton, Caroline Bergvall, Hazel Smith, Christian Bök, and Seán ÓhUigín each took to the brightly-colored, multi-leveled stage. Sound poets Dutton and Bök performed at the apex of sound poetry's possibilities. cris cheek provided a multi-voiced tour de force.

Bergvall may've stolen the show with her understated style, her poignant delivery, her arched body which seemed to act as a catapult hurling her taut, multi-leveled sensual incantations sizzling into the top rows of the Seacoast Repertory Theatre. Another marginalized area brought into the spotlight was witnessed by the inclusion of electronic media in the event—-not only as a footnote but somewhat prominently. Though this was conference was not about electronic poetries let me congratulate Romana Huk for being one of the first to recognize, by including such a panel in the discussion of issues about innovative writing, that the formal issues about writing at the heart of experimental poetries ARE THE SAME ISSUES being explored by the literary electronic media. This is the first time I know that in a literary conference this kinship of language concerns has been addressed. This plenary session on electronic media included John Cayley, Jim Rosenberg, Chris Funkhouser, and me. The question period for this session was extremely animated. The main question: are the electronic media torturing the word by their hidden codes? Or are they providing tools to be used in an exploration of the possibilities of language? Though this matter wasn't brought to a final rest, the afternoon readings that day, which included poets working in electronic media (we got asterisks—-my spell checker just suggested "ostriches" or "austerities" here—-on the program!) certainly helped to suggest an answer to this question. This is perhaps a poet's perspective. Events such as this can always, in hindsight, be found to have shortcomings. But as a venue for listening to such poets reading and talking, the conference was an intense joy over too soon. And now? Many more books (and writing in other forms) to read. Edouard? Extratropical to the south of Nova Scotia, so says the National Hurricane Center. Thankfully, I still see pine trees and can now more vividly sense Irish intonations as I read...

↑ Index

35. Bill Luoma
New Hampshire Briefs
Tue 3 Sep 1996

a short report from an unprofessional New Hampshire conference crasher. I only saw events from Sat evening thru mon, so missed lots of good things. also missed lots of early morning stuff. apologies.

I did buy Randolph Healy's book 25 Poems (from the Beau Booklet Series) (16a Ballyman Road / Bray, County Wicklow / Republic of Ireland / $10) and love it.

Readings that stuck with me:

Paul Dutton, mercury.
Deanna Ferguson, good sparse.
Lisa Robertson, repeating amazon over & over.

Miles Champion, 5 words at once.
Chris Stroffolino, eyes rolled back in head.
Hazel Smith, backwards.
Juliana Spahr, wanting to go to the beach.

I enjoyed the drive up with Tony Door because an '81 80 Langston Street tape of Berrigan's sonnets magically appeared in my mailbox on friday afternoon along with The basement tapes thank you anonymous donor, stopping in Boston friday night & sleeping on the floor of a studio apt with 5 others then having breakfast with Dan Bouchard Ange Mlinko Joe Torra and the twins, trading books, Margy Sloan with a streak in her hair saying that women usually asked her about her rings, chris cheek (who looks like mephistopheles according to JJ Moxley) walking up to Marjorie Perloff during his talk gyrating his hands and saying I am exciting the molecules in front of your face and you will breathe them in and be affected, trying to talk Paul Dutton out of his disillusionment with baseball, Miles Champion who reads faster than Tom Raworth, seeing Jim Rosenberg's screen of overlapping words & realizing it to be a representation of Miles Champion's tonal clusters yes I find hearing Miles Champion read not to be a diachronic event, Juliana Spahr saying there were three poems with monkey penises tonight, Peter Culley saying well what would Ted Berrigan do, meeting John Wilkinson who really saw the marginalization of Rodefer and we thought maybe Rodefern gets more popular in the uk and then Helen Vendler discovers him, sleeping on the floor of Miles Champion's & Peter Gizzi's motel room & yakety yak, watching the weather channel hysteria of eduardo, Lisa Robertson and the tie question (shorter is better), Tony Door tying it short the wife's job, Charles Bernstein drawing a graph of his educational riser on the chalk board in the bar (slope=4.7) while he told the story of how Clayton Eshelman once gave me an F in Vallejo/Artaud,

The Q & A session:
Q. Where are the brits?
A. In the bar,

drinking scotch with my friends and sitting on the ground at 2:30 in the morning, Tom Raworth wanting a pizza, Deanna Ferguson poking Bob Perelman in the chest repeatedly and saying you're more macho than Bruce Andrews, that's pronounced matcho for all you yanks, asking directions in a car from a local old guy and riffing with Steve McCaffery, Miles Champion, Tony Door, & Karen MacCormack:

take the spaul pspsauld sp shc sh shpalll

sp scshpaulding
turnpike,

Romana Huk being gracious and doing a great job, Fiona Templeton taking the skirt off the plenary session table, Steve McCaffery wanting to install trousers on its the exposed legs, noting that the daughters of albion took their breakfast together, Barrett Watten saying Eliot was most British when a) he was refusing to incorporate popular culture into his pomes or b) not having sex, Tony Lopez calling Barrett Watten ignorant & Barrett Watten saying he didn't appreciate being addressed in that manner, Billy Miles saying he's sick of americanocentrism, wondering about the assumed center of language poets in the "experimental community," Tony Door saying he always thought experimental meant like Jackson Jackson and that l-poets weren't experimental in a scientific sense, Barrett Watten saying his first degree was in science & usually people criticise him & camp as being too lab coaty oh and Joan Retallack is rigorous, lots of folks wondering where the people of color were, hearing only two men showed up to my panel which was composed of women, writing a Jeff Derksen poem on the drive home with Peter Culley Lee Ann Brown & Tony Door, I smell interstate.

↑ Index

36. Douglas Messerli

Re: homophonic translation/translitics...

Tue 3 Sep 1996

Thanks Don, for correcting that. I was think, of course, of MEN IN AIDA, but pulled my copy of PCOET instead.

Douglas

At 03:44 PM 9/2/96 -0700, you wrote: >is PCOET a homophonic translation? or were you thinking
> of melnick's MEN IN AIDA?
>
> doncheney
> [redacted]
>
>You might also be interested in David Melnick's PCOET
>and in my own poem, "A Vector of the Straddle," a completely >sound-rhymed poem from Donne.
>
>Douglas Messerli
>
>

>At 07:33 AM 9/2/96 -0700, you wrote:
>>>i'm looking for references to poems &/or poets using "homphonic >>>translations"--th process ov "translating" texts from another >>>language by substituting similar-sounding english words... as
>>>this:
>>
>>Several that come quickly to mind are:
>>
>>Louis (& Celia) Zukofsky's translation of the complete Catullus. The >>opening of Louis (only, I think) Zukofsky's "A"-14 is a homophoic >>translation of selections from the Book of Job. Six Fillious by,
>>collectively, bp Nichol, Steve McCaffery, Dick Higgins, Robert Filliou, >>George Brecht, and Dieter Roth is made up of various homophonic
>>translations of Filliou's 14 Chansons et 1 Charade (published by Membrane >>Press). I think one of the translations in Nichol's Translating Translating >>Apollinaire is also homophonic as are several and in general there is a >>kind of homophonic tendency that comes and goes in Nichol's work including >>homophonic English trnalations of English original texts and words. I >>remember that several Harry Mathews and Charles Bernstein poems being >>identified as homophonic but I don't recall which ones.
>>
>>I'm sure there are lots of others I'm forgetting & way more that I never >>knew about.
>>
>>Bests
>>
>>Herb
>>
>>
>>Herb Levy
>>[redacted]
>>
>
>
>>-- Saved internet headers (useful for debugging) >>Received: from listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu by mail.ucsd.edu; id JAA19303 sendmail
>>Received: from listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu (listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu [128.205.7.
>>Received: from UBVM.CC.BUFFALO.EDU by UBVM.CC.BUFFALO.EDU (LISTSERV release

>>Received: from UBVM (NJE origin [redacted]) by UBVM.CC.BUFFALO.EDU (LMail
>>Received: from hollywood.cinenet.net by UBVM.cc.buffalo.edu (IBM VM SMTP V2R3)
>>Received: from ppp83.cinenet.net by hollywood.cinenet.net with SMTP (8
>>X-Sender: [redacted]
>>X-Mailer: Windows Eudora Light Version 1.5.4 (16)
>>Mime-Version: 1.0
>>Content-Type: text/plain; chars
>>Message-ID: <1.5.4.16.19960902080017.1
>>Date: Mon, 2 Sep 1996 09:25:23 -0700
>>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>>Sender: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]
>>From: Douglas Messerli <[redacted]>
>>Subject: Re: homophonic translation/translitics...
>>To: Mul
>

↑ Index

37. Douglas Messerli
Re: Homophonic translations
Tue 3 Sep 1996

Yes, Ron, and it's still one of favorite poems.

Douglas Messerli

At 03:34 AM 9/3/96 -0700, you wrote:
>Luigi-B.,
>
>My one attempt at homophonic translation was published in the "SF >Forum" of ROOF 5 (winter 78) as "Do We Know Ella Cheese?" It begins:
>
>Where
>when itch scree
>hurt as much?
>
>Then how's their angle
>or known gun?
>
>Honky sets selves,
>his name a eye nor much.

>
>Plows lick answers:
>each fucking a fun sign-in,
>starker in design.
>Dent is seen as niche....
>
>(and so forth for seven long pages in that old Roof 8.5 x 11 format).
>It was a piece I started circa '71 and worked on sporadically for >several years before I began to be satisfied with it.
>
>I believe that somebody (Robert Kelly?) at one point a few years back >was trying to put together an anthology of such translations, but I >don't think anything ever came of the effort.
>
>All best,
>
>Ron Silliman
>

↑ Index

38. Julia Stein

Re: Post-Labor Day

Tue 3 Sep 1996

In honor of the exotic dancers in S.F. who just voted to unionize their work-place, I'd like to contribute an excerpt from Joan Jobe Smith's poem "Intimacy" from her book Jehovah Jukebox about working as a go-go dancer:

We were Delilah, Salome, Jane Avril, and Gypsy Rose Lee. We knew what happened to Samson's hair, the Baptists's head, why Toulouse longed for absinthe, and who was the real father of the child in our wombs. We knew the original looney tunes, and go-go steps danced in the Cro-Magnon caves by moonlight ...

↑ Index

39. George Bowering
Re: Homophonic translations
Tue 3 Sep 1996

> Luigi-B.,
>
> My one attempt at homophonic translation was published in the "SF Forum" of ROOF 5 (winter 78) as "Do We Know Ella Cheese?" It begins:

I also did some of that stuff in _Allophanes_

George Bowering.

"I sit inside the blond before you"

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

--Anne Waldman

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

40. George Bowering
Re: cocktail waitress
Tue 3 Sep 1996

> George Bowering added ("I have been instructed..."):
>
> big oops--private message went to the list again--at least it wasn't the > *one about my intrigue with Rachel L. while Pierre took pictures--*
>
> Gwyn, tres embarrassed
>
> That was YOU? As Pierre is a lousy photographer, but a great poet, it was > hard to tell who the partly-clad person was. I thought it looked a little > like David Bromige, but the tan wasnt deep enough.
>
> I certainly hope Pierre finished duplicating the pictures so we can > clean up in New Hampshire. Btw that WAS Bromige in the corner, but > he seemed more interested in his baseball card collection (despite > all the brave talk about "desire"). P.S. Pierre, when do we get > paid for the shoot?
>
> I have been instructed by my old friend and present co-author Mr David > Bromige to tell you that his lawyer will be in touch with you, just as soon > as he has finished compiling his information for the suit he has prepared > against a Mr Wallace, who apparently was a little careless with some women's clothing in Washington.

>
> Peckham, Gass, Fairweather & Zukofsky
> Attorneys at Law
>
> September 3, 1996
>
> Dear Mr. Bowering:
>
> It has come to our attention that you are making veiled threats to our client, Rachel Loden, using the cover of a Mr. David Bromige, a notorious carnival barker of uncertain national origin. We strongly advise you to refrain from further insinuations about Ms. Loden and the originality of her sonnet sequence, "Snorkling the Lotus." If we are unsuccessful in obtaining your cooperation, we may be forced to bring certain delicate matters to light. We are in particular most anxious to avoid any further mention of that sordid little contretemps with the cocktail hostess in Winnipeg. Need we go on?
>
> As for Mr. Wallace, we earnestly hope that he seeks counseling.
>
> Yours very sincerely,
>
> Roderick Slyme, Esq.

That little slattern! She promised me that she would not breathe a thing to a soul. Okay, Okay, I take it back. And I think that I can speak for mr. Bromige.

I apologize to rachel for everything, Mssrs. Perhaps you can tell me how I might return a certain object to her. I remember the way the corners of her eyes turned up when she showed it to me.

George Bowering.

"I sit inside the blond before you"

--Anne Waldman

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

41. henry g

DEATH OF THE LANGUAGE POET

Tue 3 Sep 1996

DEATH OF THE LANGUAGE POET

to the tune of "erie canal"

It was 40 miles from Albany forget it I never shall (or was it Buffalo? or - Orono?)
he was driving like hell through the Dutch foothills in Dutch.
The night was fauogued, dark,cloodie.
Nedertlandisch.
He was thinking to hisself: "raw puddle strudle chip fart blague m'gosh".
Swerved to avade a mere lil bunny rabbit - into the right lane!
The wrong right lane - the left lane...
Cops to the right of 'im - cops to the left of 'im hollered and thundered. Stormed at with shot & shell (fergit it me never shall) he pulls over. Officer Les Strudel - in hip boots.
"Drivers License." Lou Paul (Langpo):
"Skid works the road flip fear squirt."
Les steps back apace. "OK fella - step outa the car, slowly."
Lou climbs out meekly (wearin his collegiate apron
Two bars of community service demi-denim & blue loafers)
Les: "Feelin alright?" Lou: "Brit band-aid" Les: "Bump yr head er something?" Lou: Egg fool neal viper young no-head!"
Les: Now don't get rowdy - where you headed?
Lou: Squeeze chip le autre genes warpo trammel hide bucket frisbee..."
[mumbling, reaches for conference paper. Les "freaks" FREAKS f*r*e*a8l.n
>AKje
draws. Fires. Lou falls, South Dakota. Presses lettres to litter atcher atch atchoo agghhhhhh.....[sound of archived papers fading into futurity]] Les: I didn't mean to...
Lou: I'm not really....[sighs] Dad. I am an... AUTHOR. [fade-out] Je suisse..
[brit music. french kisses. American Flag.]
The Boy Scouts washed his body off the turnpike with Pan T-Hose and D-Odiferrance-Defungt...

↑ Index

42. Susan Schultz

my two senses

Wed 4 Sep 1996

Dear all--to those of you who were in New Hampshire, it was delightful meeting you again or for the first time. Best to Romana, who did an absolutely terrific job. A few comments, following Marjorie Perloff, if not exactly on the same subjects, and perhaps too autobiocritical: --I felt least at home toward the beginning of the conference when I encountered utter culture shock moving from a place (Hawai'i) where Caucasians are a minority to a place (the conf) where there was hardly anyone else and I had the sense that differences were being hidden under a rhetoric of assembling samenesses; --I felt most at home at the end of the last panel during the postcolonial moment (this was when the culture shock wore off quickly!) when suddenly the Welshman was chiding the Englishman for colonizing the concept of "bard" and the Irishman was critiquing the American poets for being provincial and the Australians were silent perhaps because they were not even on the billing, though Phillip Mead and Ann Vickery and Hazel Smith were very much in attendance and participating brilliantly, and I felt compelled to make trouble about the lack of multicultural input from my peripheral perspective in mid-Pacific (actually, I'm now in New York state, but no matter, I'm still jetlagged by several hours). --This reminded me of local Asian American writers in Hawai'i telling mainland white writers and critics that they didn't know enough about Hawai'i and were getting things so very wrong. It reminded me of Hawaiian writers and critics telling both local Asian writers and mainland haoles that they were appropriating the place for their own interests. It was so damn contentious that I felt right back at home. --So I'm glad we met and listened to too much stuff and looked at pictures of some poets and heard critics through the interstices (cf. Marjorie P). And I'm actually glad that we fought a bit. --In response to something Steve Evans, whose work I greatly admire, said to me. No, I don't think that I was assuming that this conference as normative and that we should invite others to participate in it. Rather, I think we should change the entire rhetoric of our "alternative" conferences to include--in a REAL sense--writers who are not white and who are marginalized in very different ways from Language writers--marginalized by class and language and race, rather than by position or stance, such that a genuine and noisy dialogue would ensue. How's about Language writers (we all know their names!) and Hagedorn and Yamanaka and LKJ and Brathwaite and Barry Masuda (a former student and wonderful local/Language writer) and others and others all together under one hothouse roof?? This involves more than just inviting people. It involves re-figuring our rhetoric about ourselves a bit. And it would be exciting--to cite just one imagined example--to see cris cheek perform with a dub poet and to hear the music of what happened (to quote a name much hissed at). --This is where I admired Bob Perelman's brief plea for intelligibility. Yes, the poetry should be, can be, as unintelligible as possible. But the explanations need to be there and be good. In my classrooms the explanations are rewarded with some interest. Otherwise, any Language writer, no matter how revolutionary and subversive her rhetoric is "just another white guy" in Hawai'i--or other places off the beaten monocultural track--and will not get noticed except as another imperial presence. Ten people, all of them lobbied frenetically, will show up to her reading in a large auditorium, because they've already seen, or think they've seen, too many such "white guys" before. Unless that engagement is entered into, and shouted about, certain assumptions, which are often untrue, will govern. This is not a sell out, but a possible connection with writers who are doing similar, if different (of course!) projects, and who would not be reached or reach "us" without the effort. --My aol bill is increasing geometrically! A fond good bye to all.

Susan

↑ Index

43. DS
Sun&Moon
Wed 4 Sep 1996

Sorry to ask this over the list.

Could someone Sun & Moon email me, i have lost the address & need to discuss an account.

Thanks,

Dan Salmon.

↑ Index

44. Ken Edwards
Assembling Alternatives
Wed 4 Sep 1996

I write in a state of exhaustion & jetlag, so forgive me. New Hampshire was quite overwhelming, and I share the sense of excitement in Loss Glazier's and Bill Luoma's posts.

In reply to Marjorie, with the greatest respect to her and her critical kindred (and I was very pleased to meet her for the first time -- her energy & erudition reminded me somewhat of the late Eric Mottram, whose irascible shade I felt hovered over New Hampshire like that hurricane that never arrived): I was glad to be part of an event in the academy in which poets prevailed. Speaking for myself, I would not have been able to attend if I hadn't had financial assistance from the conference -- thanks, Romana. It was right that poets without access to the institutional support of the academy should have been helped in this way, and that they were the focus of the event (embarrassing as those pics in the brochure were!). I too was sorry that Philip Mead's excellent paper on the Australian scene provoked no discussion, but perhaps this was not unconnected with the fact that there were no Australian poets present, so it was decontextualised.

I think some of Marjorie's points are answered quite well by Robert Archambeau, so I won't take any more space here. My only beef about the panel sessions was that people tended to turn up to those panels addressing subjects they already knew, rather than seeking out, um, alternatives. (I am amazed that anyone at all turned up at 8.30 in the morning to my own talk on British small presses, but disappointed they were mostly Brits who knew it all backwards anyway.)

Revelations for me (here I disregard the British contingent, and others whose acts I already know & love): Lisa Robertson's fierce intellectual girlishness, Leslie Scalapino's spine-chillingly wonderful voice, Rae Armantrout's humour, Abigail Child (including such of her films I managed to catch), Christian Bok's virtuoso vocals. There was an unfortunate sense that the afternoon readings were second-billing to the evenings, and I wish I'd caught more than the last five minutes of Jeff Derksen; I also enjoyed Lee Ann Brown, Peter Gizzi, Deanna Ferguson, Juliana Spahr and Chris Stroffolino, among others.

The strong showing by women poets and critics has been mentioned. Good to see an Irish contingent, and Maurice Scully in particular was as great as always, but the older Irishmen seemed strangely out of place here.

I'm sad it's all over, looking forward to the book and the video, a little more hopeful that national barriers are coming down. The difficulties and shortcomings are hugely outweighed by the thanks we owe Romana Huk for this extraordinary thing happening at all.

Ken Edwards

↑ Index

45. Joe Ross

Re: New from Buck Downs Books

Wed 4 Sep 1996

A Must Have . .

Sonnets of a Penny-A-Liner

Poems by Mark Wallace
Prints by Lawley Paisley-Jones

Orders to: Buck Downs Books
P.O. Box 50376
Washington, D.C. 20091
($9.00)

"The road to wisdom / has lots of stores and restaurants"

Mark Wallace's wonderfully sharp, self reflexive, and darkly humorous sonnets are wisdom teeth stolen from the golden mouths of metaphysical husksters, penny-a-line journalists, late 20th century loners, liars, and poetic hit-men. Death and the double keep Wallace company on his forays into the tumultuous twister of the American psyche. Whether playing a ghostly stranger from a Burrough's cut-up or a Kafkasque desk clerk "chopping off fingers and facts," Wallace is always the witty, wandering versifier behind the dry jibe and existential stool. His poems and essays have played a major role in helping to define what has become post "language" poetry.

-Charles Borkhuis

In this new collection of poems, Mark Wallace shows that the obstensible strictures of the sonnet form can be liberating, can be an enabling constraint allowing the thought to branch and scan. A distinct sensiblity emerges here, one that is preoccupied with a past that interweaves with the inexplicable details of daily living, and which struggles with the effort to establish human connection against the odds of indifference and unthinking reflex. Rounding out the words are Lawley Paisley-Jones's highly evocative digitized images.

-Daniel Barbiero

Mark Wallace creates a poetics of paradoxes. The reader is stunned by the sheer intelligence of it, yet there is warmth and an almost frightening vulnerability. Mark Wallace is a visionary who refuses to deny what he sees. His poems are sensitive and important.

-Susan Smith Nash

from: Sonnets of a Penny-A-Liner

$1.54
Poetry doesn't care who loves it warehouses howl of debris, random fetters of work, business seizes ground Who could possibly be superior when countries are filled with all they don't know Whoever comes forward to take the mantle

in the history of kings is a fool and I hate them Stand me in my house
Stun me to know where art is a prison
A graver stain is in the blood then who will be the next and latest greatest thing I'll drink to complaint and go on plying trade turned to a wing, above this boat, to fly so not to float

↑ Index

46. Keith Tuma

Re: Assembling Alternatives

Wed 4 Sep 1996

Still too sleep-deprived to wash off the gallon of coffee I just poured over my head, so a longer post will have to wait, if it's forthcoming at all, but here's a few brief remarks regarding NH:

1) You were there (or weren't) the day that "language poetry" died its most public death. But it was already dead. Now that Frankenstein has been put to rest, the question is whenceforth,and I expect that "language poets" will--as they have begun to--provide SOME of the most provocative suggestions and examples.

2) Marjorie Perloff has been slugging it out on behalf of SOME of the most vital work (in the US) for years in the crucial site (cf. my conference remarks) of the academy. She was the only academic critic of her gerneration at the conference and deserved more time. Money is another matter: Mills and Catherine Walsh both work part-time in Dublin. Etc. etc.

3) American self-absorption and provincialism has been and is a problem (cf. my conference remarks). But anti-american sentiments have been (and are) a problem too. All of these things have a history: "americanocentrism" (what a word) is an abstraction. The whence now question involves a thinking-through of the problems of distribution. Allen Fisher, cris cheek, Peter Middleton, Trevor Joyce, Alan Golding, and the zombie now typing had hoped to initiate a public discussion of possible SOLUTIONS to these but the crush of events prevented it. This here little list might take up such a discussion. Or it can whine about this and that.

4) Everybody (I hope) knows we have to rethink "alternative" with more attention to ethnic, regional, class, and racial particularities. But we also have to reconsider its value in group formation (cf Peter Middleton), audience- building and poetic practice (cf. Perelman), and political praxis (cf. Watten). Charles Simic was at several of the readings. Tapes should be sold cheap to Helen Vendler, who has now (almost I'm told) managed to acknowledge Mina Loy.

5) Re #3 above: not only distribution but critical and institutional practice vis-a-vis poetry and poetics.

6) Open-panel discussions with poets and critics, more public space, mats for free-style wrestling. But Romana Huk deserves a medal, if she hasn't already won one in long-distance running.

7) More coffee please and some of those sour grapes. Numbers 8-1997 forthcoming asap. Hello again Saddam!

Keith Tuma

↑ Index

47. maria damon
Re: my two senses
Wed 4 Sep 1996

i appreciate susan schultz's comments. even tho i wasn't there an NH, the matters she brings up are ones that are not limited to that conference but extend to this "scene" in which i've found myself a happy and (as far as i can tell) respected player (i never thot i'd be here; it's been wonderful to have interlocutors). don't get me wrong, i enjoy the list, the scene, the folks. but we're not as eclectic as i'd like us to be; not as inclusive (and i don't mean that in the grande-geste patronizing piety of much "multiculturalism") etc etc...well y'all know what i mean, i won't go on and on...just came back from sf it was grand so maybe i shd lay low a coupla daze before blasting back onto the list; saw dbkk, steve carll, charles smith (thanks for coming all that way, charles), norma cole, mpalmer, kush, whom i haven't seen since shortly after kaufman's death, jay schwarz (are you on yet jay?), some stein fans i didn't know, beverley dahlen bob gluck mostly folks i was meeting for the first time. anyway, it was fun and so i shdn't come back blasting off. bests, maria d

↑ Index

48. Brian McHale
Re: Assembling Alternatives
Wed 4 Sep 1996

More New Hampshire post-mortem: I don't think I share Marjorie's sense of grievance at critics being treated like second-class citizens at "AA." Frankly I was happy enough to hear from the poets twice over; their talks & readings were information-rich even when they didn't succeed particularly well. But I second Marjorie's complaint about the lack of discussion-time. Not only did good papers not get the responses they'd earned, but also people didn't get called often enough on statements they ought to have been called on. An example: at least twice, speakers casually knocked ethnopoetics, & there was no opportunity to demand that they explain/justify themselves. Well, we all know that ethnopoetics was benighted -- racist -- neocolonialist -- primitivist -- don't we? It sure is lucky that we're enlightened now .... I find it amaz- ing that with all the constant chatter about historicizing this & historicizing that we're (first-person plural to spread the blame around) still ready & will- ing to apply present standards a-historically to past moments. (Retrosepctive self-righteousness is one of my favorite attitudes.) Not that we shoudn't judge the past. But a little fairness, please: remember that the ethnopoetics project changed over time, & that its practitioners cor- rected or repudiated earlier missteps; remember how valuable the whole project was in expanding our collective sense of what "poetry" could be, of what "con- temporary" could mean, etc. In short: without the contribution of ethnopoetics (among many other things) we wouldn't be in the position now to criticize retro spectively the benighted neocolonialism, primitivism, etc. of ethnopoetics.Pity the poor ladder: folks use it to climb, then just kick it away.... End of ser- mon. Apart from that, "AA" was a gas. All honor to Romana Huk. Brian

↑ Index

49. Douglas Messerli

Re: Sun&Moon

Wed 4 Sep 1996

Our E-mail address is [redacted]
Our website, from which you can also E-mail us is:
htt;://www.sunmoon.com

At 05:33 PM 9/4/96 +1200, you wrote:
>Sorry to ask this over the list.
>
>Could someone Sun & Moon email me, i have lost the address & need to discuss >an account.
>
>Thanks,
>
>Dan Salmon.
>

↑ Index

50. william marsh
Re: translations/transcriptions
Wed 4 Sep 1996

For some of the reasons addressed here, i've often considered "transcription" a better term for this practice -- especially in the musical sense of an arrangement for a different instrument -- but also perhaps as a phonetic transcription, in which English serves as the "phonetic alphabet" into which the original is transcribed.

bmarsh

At 10:41 AM 9/4/96 BST, you wrote:
>I just wanted to address the word "translation"
>in this phrase "homophonic translations":
>
>1) Is there an attempt to bring in an idiom >that brings over the author translated; ie what >that author might have done in our >language environments and culture environments?
>
>2) Is there an attempt to bring in a >(translated) author whose presence in modern >idiom is rebarbative, disruptive,
>not hip and modern, as a corrective to >modern idiom, eg T.S. Eliot?
>
>3) Is homophonic translation an excuse for >a poet with a rampant ego (like Zukofsky - >see Mary Oppen's memoir in her Meaning A Life)
>to riff off the original, perhaps as if thus >an equal, without actually measuring up?
>Does it take some of the reflected glory
>of say Catullus, the Establishment glow?
>
>3-B) If it is "play", when we play as adults >shouldn't it be different from playing as a >child - since we cannot pretend to a child's >lack of understanding of ramifications,
>except as a forcefully asserted imitation >child persona? Whose play is that? How >enjoyable for those others in one's circle?
>
>4) How often is homophonic translation what it >might say it's trying to be: a more modest >attempt to enter the cultural negotiation

>between readers in an Establishment and writers
>who have been canonised into an Establishment?
>Who do not necessarily belong there and/or are >not particularly there for themselves but >actually as a culturally representative >lab specimen in a lab which neither understands >the culture nor "its" "specimens"?
>
>5) How often is such translation a kind of >Johnny Rotten type punk (ie High Modernist,
>though not, interestingly for the great >20th century translator, Poundian) hatred >of the past, and puerile yaa boo sucks to
>the repressed patricians who need to lighten >up (or as Barrett Watten is reported, not much >less puerilely to have said at New Hampshire, >about Eliot) or get more sex, without fully >addressing one's envy, one's desire to have >the same (actually skilfully & heroically, >sometimes, achieved) poetic appeal?
>
>6) And what kind of language permission is >there, esp for an experimental poet, to use >more politically incorrect diction and old-fashioned
>"patriarchal" wistful lyrical cadences, under the >guise of doing it only ironically?
>
>7) Can the pure homophonic pleasure, of attempting >to produce a similar sound and surface to one's >original, help one to do some translation which >incorporates a good homophonic ear but also >seems to respect the author and the author's >content? This seems to be to what Derrida does >when he writes through (and in imitation of,
>but also going off at lateral tangents to)
>Ponge, Genet, Heidegger, Hegel etc?
>
>
>I haven't seen too many examples of 1, 2 or 7.
>

>
>
>Ira Lightman
>
>

↑ Index

51. Mark Wallace
pasta point of no return
Wed 4 Sep 1996

Dear Ms. Loden and others:

My lawyers have counselled me to say that I am not responsible for any cyber replicas bearing my features and claiming to be me. Although I did participate in early stages of the CIA cloning project, I quickly saw that the goals of the program were not, in fact, to make me more available, but instead to undermine my public image as a wearer of only the finest pastas. Anyone on the list who misunderstands the nature of this communication, and the reason why it must take place in a forum claiming to have some relevance to the practice of poetry, is directed to take their concerns to the CIA, who I must say, in all fairness, are experts at policing, despite the dubious goals of the current cloning project.

BEWARE ALL CLONES!

Sincerely,

Mark Wallace (as represented by Reznikoff and Stephens)

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] "I have not yet begun | |
to go to extremes" | | GWU: |
| http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

52. Ira Lightman
Re: Homophonic translations
Wed 4 Sep 1996

I just wanted to address the word "translation"
in this phrase "homophonic translations":

1) Is there an attempt to bring in an idiom
that brings over the author translated; ie what
that author might have done in our language environments and culture environments?

2) Is there an attempt to bring in a (translated) author whose presence in modern idiom is rebarbative, disruptive,
not hip and modern, as a corrective to modern idiom, eg T.S. Eliot?

3) Is homophonic translation an excuse for
a poet with a rampant ego (like Zukofsky -
see Mary Oppen's memoir in her Meaning A Life)
to riff off the original, perhaps as if thus
an equal, without actually measuring up?
Does it take some of the reflected glory
of say Catullus, the Establishment glow?

3-B) If it is "play", when we play as adults shouldn't it be different from playing as a child - since we cannot pretend to a child's
lack of understanding of ramifications,
except as a forcefully asserted imitation
child persona? Whose play is that? How enjoyable for those others in one's circle?

4) How often is homophonic translation what it might say it's trying to be: a more modest
attempt to enter the cultural negotiation
between readers in an Establishment and writers
who have been canonised into an Establishment?
Who do not necessarily belong there and/or are not particularly there for themselves but actually as a culturally representative
lab specimen in a lab which neither understands
the culture nor "its" "specimens"?

5) How often is such translation a kind of Johnny Rotten type punk (ie High Modernist,
though not, interestingly for the great 20th century translator, Poundian) hatred
of the past, and puerile yaa boo sucks to
the repressed patricians who need to lighten
up (or as Barrett Watten is reported, not much

less puerilely to have said at New Hampshire,
about Eliot) or get more sex, without fully addressing one's envy, one's desire to have
the same (actually skilfully & heroically,
sometimes, achieved) poetic appeal?

6) And what kind of language permission is there, esp for an experimental poet, to use
more politically incorrect diction and old-fashioned
"patriarchal" wistful lyrical cadences, under the guise of doing it only ironically?

7) Can the pure homophonic pleasure, of attempting to produce a similar sound and surface to one's original, help one to do some translation which incorporates a good homophonic ear but also seems to respect the author and the author's content? This seems to be to what Derrida does
when he writes through (and in imitation of,
but also going off at lateral tangents to)
Ponge, Genet, Heidegger, Hegel etc?

I haven't seen too many examples of 1, 2 or 7.

Ira Lightman

↑ Index

53. Julie Marie Schmid

Re: query re. public poetry conference

Wed 4 Sep 1996

Hi all--

I've been trying to track down information regarding the public poetries conference at Rutgers this spring, but to no avail. Does anyone out there have information re. who to contact, deadlines, etc.? Any help (posted to list or backchanneled) will be much appreciated!!

Thanks.

Julie Schmid
University of Iowa
[redacted]

↑ Index

54. Jean Crown

Re: query re. public poetry conference

Wed 4 Sep 1996

Hi Julie:

"Poetry and the Public Sphere," a conference on contemporary poetry, will take place next April 24-27 at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, NJ. (I just received your letter and was about to reply when I got your incoming poetics message). The interdisciplinary conference aims to provide new understandings of poetry's participation in the public sphere. The conference will feature poetry readings and performances and panel presentations by a wide range of poets, scholars, and activists, including Adrienne Rich, Miguel Algarin, and Robert Hass. Although not named here, many other poets and scholars will be invited. The planning is in its final stages and a Call for Papers listing participants will go out in the next few weeks. We invite paper proposals on topics including but not limited to the following:

poetry and social movements
African American poetry
poetry and popular culture
poetics of performance poetry
Native American poetry global poetries contemporary poetry cultures
Latino/a poetry
spoken word events
rap-meets-poetry
politics of form
poetry and public sphere theory
feminist poetry
poetry as witness poetry and identity politics
Asian American poetry
poetry slams
poetry and/as history
poetry and AIDS
politics of publishing

In the meantime, you may send detailed two-page paper proposals by November 1, 1996 to:

Harriet Davidson
Associate Professor of English
Director of Women's Studies
P.O. Box 5054
Rutgers University--New Brunswick
New Brunswick, NJ 08903-5054

You may send inquiries to the conference coordinators: Kathleen Crown ([redacted]) and Nick Yasinski ([redacted]). This is a very preliminary announcement; I will send a more detailed announcement to the Poetics List very soon. All best, Kathleen Crown PS: We are following the discussion of the New Hampshire conference as we plan ours--thanks to those who provided reports on the happenings.

On Sep 4, 3:14pm, Julie Marie Schmid wrote:
> Subject: Re: query re. public poetry conference
> Hi all--
>
> I've been trying to track down information regarding the public poetries > conference at Rutgers this spring, but to no avail. Does anyone out > there have information re. who to contact, deadlines, etc.? Any help > (posted to list or backchanneled) will be much appreciated!!
>
> Thanks.
>
> Julie Schmid
> University of Iowa
> [redacted]
>-- End of excerpt from Julie Marie Schmid

--

↑ Index

55. maria damon

Re: query re. public poetry conference

Wed 4 Sep 1996

---

yeah, contact kathleen crown, a grad student at rutgers english dept, or elliott katz, also a gr-stud same dept.
bests, maria

In message <[redacted]> UB
Poetics discussion group writes:
> Hi all--
>
> I've been trying to track down information regarding the public poetries > conference at Rutgers this spring, but to no avail. Does anyone out > there have information re. who to contact, deadlines, etc.? Any help > (posted to list or backchanneled) will be much appreciated!!
>
> Thanks.
>
> Julie Schmid
> University of Iowa
> [redacted]

↑ Index

56. maria damon
fwd
Wed 4 Sep 1996

From: Center for Advanced Feminist Studies <[redacted]> Date: Wed, 4 Sep 1996 16:42:18 -0500 To: Multiple recipients of list CAFS-F2 <[redacted]> Subject: New Listserv

Subject: A New Electronic Discussion List on European Women's Stu

From: [redacted] (Judith Ezekiel)

We are happy to announce the launch of a new electronic discussion list: WISE-L. WISE-L is a list for all practitioners of women's studies: teachers, students, scholars, writers, administrators, activists, etc.. It is a forum for information on research projects, funding sources, fellowships, job openings, conferences, calls for papers, teaching methods, course syllabi, useful texts, bibliographies, student and staff exchanges, women's studies program development, European or national policy issues, and political and theoretical debates concerning women's studies. We will try to conduct discussions in several languages.

The list is sponsored by WISE, a European feminist studies organization founded in 1990. WISE seeks to promote feminist critiques of knowledge, and support practices and research which will improve the quality of women's lives. WISE is grounded in grass-roots women's studies organizations throughout Europe.

To "subscribe," send the following message by email to [redacted]:
SUB WISE-L Your Name (e.g., SUB WISE-L Jane Smith).
You will receive an automated reply, asking you to confirm your request. Just reply with the word OK in the body of your message. You will also receive a User's Guide with more information on the list.

Regards,
Judith Ezekiel and Eva Isaksson, for WISE

Karen Moon, Administrative Aide
Center for Advanced Feminist Studies, University of MN
496 Ford Hall/224 Church St. SE
Minneapolis, MN 55455
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

57. Pierre Joris

[Fwd: MB: Levinas Center]

Thu 5 Sep 1996

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

This may be of interest to some po-listies -- Pierre

Date: Wed, 4 Sep 1996 15:15:28 -0400
To: [redacted]
From: [redacted] (Richard Cohen)
Subject: MB: Levinas Center

>To: [redacted]
>From: [redacted] (Richard Cohen)
>Subject: Levinas Center
>Cc: [redacted]
>
>Announcement (9/4/96): LEVINAS CENTER at UNCC
> I am in the process of establishing a Levinas Center located at the Atkins Library (currently undergoing a 3 year, $23,000,000 expansion) of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte (UNCC). The Levinas Center is intended as an international research facility whose object is to facilitate scholarly research into the philosophy of Emmanuel Levinas (1906-1995). Levinas's publications, writings about Levinas (books, dissertations, articles), and revevant audio and video tapes, will be located at one site, catalogued, and made available to scholars and interested individuals. Email, fax, and a website will make this catalogue and information available to the worldwide scholarly community. The Center would also serve to disseminate information regarding future papers and conferences on Levinas. In addition, the Levinas family heirs (the son, Michael Levinas, and the daughter, Simone Hansel) have been contacted and a request has been made to receive copies of all unpublished manuscripts, papers, lecture notes, and letters of the late Professor Emmanuel Levinas.
> Request: If you have relevant documents -- books, dissertations, articles, lecture notes, videos, cassette tapes, correspondence -- and would like to make a donation to the Levinas Center, please send to: Levinas Center, c/o Richard A. Cohen, UNCC - Religious Studies, 9201 University City Blvd., Charlotte, NC 28223-0001. PLEASE POST THIS ANNOUNCEMENT
>

----------6F6444B749E9--

↑ Index

58. Michael Boughn
critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

Dear Professor Perloff:

Pehaps Alan Golding is just wrong. I prefer George Steiner myself:

"The Byzantine dominion of secondary and parasitic discourse over immediacy, of the critical over the creative, is itself a symptom. An anxious desire for interposition, for explicative-evaluative mediation between ourselves and the primary, permeates our condition. . . . We seek immunities of indirection. In the agency of the critic, reviewer or mandarin commentator, we welcome those who can domesticate, who can secularize the mystery and summons of creation." (_Real Presences_, 38-39)

He goes on to call the "claim to theory in the humanities as impatience sytematized" (86). Marvelous!

Jeez. One little event where the poets actually get more time than the critics, and the critics go bonkers.

Quel dommage,
Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

59. Rachel Loden
Roddy Slyme is retiring
Thu 5 Sep 1996

George Bowering wrote:

> I apologize to rachel for everything, Mssrs. Perhaps you can tell me how I might return a certain object to her. I remember the way the corners of her eyes turned up when she showed it to me.

Roderick Slyme Esq. is retiring from a lifetime in the law in order to complete his dried monkey nuts collection. As his last act he will be more than happy to receive the object in question, as long as it is (a) disinfected and (b) delivered in discreet packaging. He does, however, wonder why Mr. Bowering has seen fit to keep it for such a long time.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

60. maria damon
Re: Roddy Slyme is retiring
Thu 5 Sep 1996

if the posts below signal the end of a poetricks thread, i'd like to thank all participants for many chuckles, and to apologize to anyone out there who may feel that my chuckles were had at his or her expense.--bests, md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> George Bowering wrote:
>
> > I apologize to rachel for everything, Mssrs. Perhaps you can tell me how I > > might return a certain object to her. I remember the way the corners of her > > eyes turned up when she showed it to me.
>
>
> Roderick Slyme Esq. is retiring from a lifetime in the law in order to > complete his dried monkey nuts collection. As his last act he will be > more than happy to receive the object in question, as long as it is (a) > disinfected and (b) delivered in discreet packaging. He does, however, > wonder why Mr. Bowering has seen fit to keep it for such a long time.
>
>
> Rachel Loden

↑ Index

61. maria damon
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

boughn writes:
> Dear Professor Perloff:
>
> Pehaps Alan Golding is just wrong. I prefer George Steiner myself:
>
> "The Byzantine dominion of secondary and parasitic discourse > over immediacy, of the critical over the creative, is itself a > symptom. An anxious desire for interposition, for > explicative-evaluative mediation between ourselves and the > primary, permeates our condition. . . . We seek immunities of > indirection. In the agency of the critic, reviewer or mandarin > commentator, we welcome those who can domesticate, who can > secularize the mystery and summons of creation." (_Real > Presences_, 38-39)

>
> He goes on to call the "claim to theory in the humanities as > impatience sytematized" (86). Marvelous!
>
> Jeez. One little event where the poets actually get more time than the > critics, and the critics go bonkers.
>
> Quel dommage,
> Mike
> [redacted]

now just one minute. i'm aware that poets are not given their due in the academy (unless they're dead, white, male and British, no kidding even in 1996); i'm aware that writers not connected w the academy struggle like hell, unless they're connected w the corporate world, etc etc. i'm glad to see poet honored. HOWEVER! george steiner is a critic (duh...), one of those whose pomposity gave the trade a bad name. part of these critics' agenda is/was to revere the dead white british male poets and trash not critics like themselves but those like the recent continental philosophers who have sought to break down the artificial barriers between critical and poetic discourse. i've been troubled before on this list by discussions of critics "versus" poets. many of us critics are poets as well; we're just shy about it. or, as i describe myself, a poet manquee. sometimes i'm embarrassed when a POET at a conference asks, so, maria, do you write poetry as well? i feel that my credibility is on the line, and if i answer in the negative i drop a coupla notches; at the same time if i answer in the affirmative i feel dishonest because i haven't published, or i don't write what others consider "poetry" (even in as enlightened a crowd as poetricks, there seems to be a taken-for-granted difference, if not in the discourses themselves, in those who practice them). i have no problem w/ a conference that highlights poets, but let's not let this conversation devolve into george steiner. or, while we're at it, why not trot out matthew arnold saying that anyone w/ a last name like "bugg" or "jones" can't write decent poetry? or f.r.leavis and queenie leavis singing the praises of manly vigorous crisp prose? mdamon

↑ Index

62. henry g
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

On Thu, 5 Sep 1996 10:00:57 -0500 maria damon said: >discourses themselves, in those who practice them). i have no problem w/ a >conference that highlights poets, but let's not let this conversation devolve >into george steiner. or, while we're at it, why not trot out matthew arnold >saying that anyone w/ a last name like "bugg" or "jones" can't write decent >crisp prose? mdamon

Maria,
So G. Steiner is on the other side of an issue (the merger or disjunction of poetry & criticism) from you. How have you addressed the actual statement Mike Boughn quoted, besides just "trashing" his "name" in exactly the same way you say he & Arnold trash others? The shared anxieties, sufferings, injustices, blah blah that both poets & critics must carry, the fact that you write poetry too or poet writes criticism, don't really counter what Steiner is saying either. I think some friction over this issue is natural at such a conference because poetry & criticism are not like two complementary academic disciplines. The academy studies a "field" of interest. How many anthropology conferences bring along the subjects of their study to make addresses? How many archaeology conferences bring along their mummies? But poets talk back.
It's a weird situation, especially since there's so much straddling & mutual interest. TS Eliot was smart to confine his critical work for the most part to poets dead 300 yrs [beep:
provocation: beep] - Henry Gould

↑ Index

63. Joe Amato
critics and poets...
Thu 5 Sep 1996

---

wish i could make it to one of these conferences i keep hearing about!...

poets vs. critics: sounds like the headline i saw the other night on---was it cnn?---"showdown with saddam"...

ok, ok... i wish we could find a way to talk about what it is we expect from poetry as opposed to criticism (mike's quotes from steiner along these lines)... specifically i'd be interested in hearing more about how we come to understand and address the underlying categories... i.e., "poetic," ("creative"?) and "critical"... or should that conjunction have been, again, "vs."?...

that was a rhetorical question... clearly there is room for overlap, clearly the critical is creative, and just as clearly (though not as generally acknowledged in many if not most academic circles) the creative is critical... i think the confusion is owing to institutional and situational realities, not anthropological or left-right hemispherical ones...

poetry and criticism ARE different at the level of expectation, at the level of how some 'we' expects to be affected (and effected, both writer- and reader-wise)... but the discursive distinctions that emerge, no matter how historically or demographically determinate, in no way correspond intrinsically to "poetry" or to "criticism"...

it's probably a safe bet that most of us don't generally read a piece of criticism expecting a few laughs [well, mebbe a very few... ha]... and that most of us don't generally read a book of poetry expecting to learn all about the ins and outs of buoyant forces [a-ha]... yes, at some level it's the explanatory vs. the expressive stance that designates the differences at work here... but at the level of cultural work, there's no reason in the world why poetry can't be as informative as criticism, or why criticism can't be as evocative as poetry... though there are many reasons this may not be so for so many, these reasons have as much to do with interpretive leanings as with authorial motivations... i can at least imagine a public for whom poetry would be valued in everyday terms much as a bread recipe, or a public for whom criticism would be regarded as a vital realm of experience (apologies for these rather reductive analogues)... and i can imagine a public for whom poetry and criticism are expected to operate, however they do so, in the same place at the same time...

which suggests a more fully hybridized understanding not only of process and product, but of reception, much as the emergence of emedia against a backdrop of print practices opens up formal-material and audience possibilities... one way to go with such considerations would be to ask what the apparent aversion [gasp] to media/genre mixing in some quarters---or in other quarters, the intervention-less ease [sigh] with which many do so---tells us about the specifically social underpinnings of our aesthetic choices/constraints... i mean 'social' in terms of the sorts of publics for whom such choices/constraints have value... e.g., i keep asking myself where i stand on this question of performance poetry, whence my occasional resistance to same, etc....

surely there are more possibilities available than are... currently available... i guess i'd like to see a more openly creative critical forum---among critics---and a more widespread critical engagement among, say, poets and fiction writers... and i suspect the how's of enactment are far more multivariate than most are led to believe, and i'd like to think that the tags 'poet' and 'critic' will continue to be useful insofar as they designate the primary (sets of) effects we wish to achieve---in ourselves as well as others (if you don't like "effects" that's ok too)... and sure, this has ultimately all to do with the various how's of the various what's we value... i don't expect, mself, the current distinctions twixt poetry and criticism to evaporate overnight, and i'm not sure i'd want them to disappear entirely (i'm not sure what it would mean to have no grain to work against)... but i'm quite certain we need to open up more space (publishing space included) for pushing those envelopes, for mixing it up much more than we have thus far...

in any case, trying to alter the expectations of poets OR critics, as many of you who've tried are no doubt aware, is and will continue to be none too easy, simply b/c we seem to be such creatures of habit...

joe

↑ Index

64. maria damon
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

gould writes:
How many anthropology conferences bring along the subjects of their study to make addresses?

more and more. but they try not to do it like, "bringing them along" --rather to present equal hearings.

↑ Index

65. Jordan Davis
nice critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

apparently some _like_ to read and write-- but doesn't all this attention to the issue of genre- hoppers/privilegers make you wonder what is not being talked about-- which might be the growing (and predictable) discontent? (declare victory and leave) or rather it's not the social blurring (nationalism?) of critics/poets but among the _writers_ along the axis of politico-aesthetic affiliations? leading towards the close bracket? beg pardon? talking is nice, talking about is nice, talking about about is nice, no vacancy? circular drive? J

↑ Index

66. Bob Gale
Dead Poets' Society
Thu 5 Sep 1996

For those of you in the Minneapolis/St. Paul area, the Cacophony Chorus presents the DEAD POETS' SOCIETY, Sept 11, 8:00 pm, at the Bryant-Lake Bowl.

This adventurous group of local poets is dedicated to bringing the canon of great literature to life for a new generation. With works ranging from Sappho to Shakespeare, the DEAD POETS' SOCIETY is not your standard literary reading.

Offering standard poetry presentations of to musical funk interpretations, the evening promises to be lively and enlightening.

The DEAD POETS' SOCIETY is hosted by SHOUT! editor, Bob Gale, and features artists Lily Baber, Juin Charnell, Adrian Jackson, Yolanda Johnson, Elise Matthesen, Cliff Mayhood, Joy Mincy Powell, Jovelyn Richards, Blake Seboldt, and Darin Smith. The Bryant-Lake Bowl is located at 810 West Lake Street, in South Minneapolis. Theater doors open at 7:00 p.m. for diner seating, with show time at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are $6.00. Reservations can be made by calling [redacted].

The Cacophony Chorus is an ongoing performance series dedicated to highlighting the variety and vibrancy of spoken word talent. For further information, please email [redacted]

\\ The Spoken Word Universe: Home of Shout! Newspaper, \\ \\ the Cacophony Chorus, and London Productions \\ \\ 3010 Hennepin Ave S, #245, Minneapolis, MN 55408 USA \\ \\ [redacted] http://www.spoken.com \\

↑ Index

67. Robert Drake
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

> maria writes:
> gould writes:
>
> How many anthropology conferences bring along the subjects of their study to make addresses?
>
> more and more. but they try not to do it like, "bringing them along" --rather to present equal hearings.

frinstance, much of the current work in Mayan epigraphy is now being done by Mayans, rather than gringos... it had become a problem when folks realized the part of the epigraphic project on glyphs included work on living Mayan languages--so the "subject" was no longer just carvings on rock, but living individuals & their culture...

hmmm... critical responses to texts as self-contained artifacts, vs response to/among a language community... sounds like a problem...

lbd

↑ Index

68. Michael Boughn
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

Put it this way, Maria. Ya got yer poets and ya got yer critics. Now, if you take away one whole group, who's up the proverbial creek without a paddle?

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

69. Michael Coffey
Re: critics and poets -Reply
Thu 5 Sep 1996

let us not forget: critics are readers, first of all. we need all we can get.

↑ Index

70. henry g
critics & poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

To visit dilapidated zoos, to sit down and read, to glance up through the iron bars and write something down about the weather or the sky in a blistered notebook, undiscovered by critics and unsought for by bored readers - this is one of those poet-type things done by poets.

Eventually every reader finds twelve or thirteen poets in a lifetime. It's not so easy to read, unless you're one of those real readers bitten by what someone could write - usually it comes along thanks to some critics, one of those people who'd rather go blind than look at the sky.

Only plein-air airplanes write on the sky.
Did you notice that? Maybe you're one of the "poets."
But if you're reading this, your probably a couple of critics.
They like to read.
Too bad most of them can't write.
They wish they could, often enough - they're wishful readers.

In the zoo, even some of the monkeys are readers. But most of them just scramble around or screech at the sky. Sit them down at a terminal and they'll learn how to write, I reckon. There's probably already a group who call themselves poets - the Simian Group (motto: "We Know How to Read.") If they fuse all that with screeching, they'll make good critics.

The zoo is run by keepers - people who wish they were critics!
Can you believe it? And they're not even readers!
Though occasionally they burn newspapers. I read.
I saw. I conquered. The air, the plane, the bars, the sky...
They'd put them all behind bars, the poets that is. Who they, anyway? I don't know - you write for a while.

YOU write.
Me, critic.
You, poets.
Here comes Tarzan, readers!
Out of the sky!
Bashing open the bars! (But can he read?)

If you read between the bars, you can also write.
The work's cut out for you, readers and critics!
The poet's gone to sleep, and the skywriting is - all sky.

↑ Index

71. David Kellogg
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

Mike Boughn wrote:

> Put it this way, Maria. Ya got yer poets and ya got yer critics. Now, if you take away one whole group, who's up the proverbial creek without a paddle?

Is "critics" so obvious? Not for me -- not, anyway, in the prevailing cultural economy. I suspect that the cultural capital of living poetry is so dependant on criticism and theory that the sudden absence of critics would be a virtual amputation to the body of poetry, producing its own version of phantom pain.

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

There is no mantle
and it does not descend.

-- Thomas Kinsella

↑ Index

72. henryg
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

On Thu, 5 Sep 1996 15:57:19 -0400 David Kellogg said:
>
>Is "critics" so obvious? Not for me -- not, anyway, in the prevailing >cultural economy. I suspect that the cultural capital of living poetry is >so dependant on criticism and theory that the sudden absence of critics >would be a virtual amputation to the body of poetry, producing its own >version of phantom pain.

Trouble with this theory is, for "living poetry", culture is not capital. Poetry is anti-cultural. Anti-literature. It's a form of rawness. Culture is the continual coming to terms with poetry. Say what you want about the poor suffering un-knowns saved by the good old critic. It's all hogwash. An "unknown poet" has already come to terms. Real poets don't even know it! (no adjectives hang to their capital britches) Cheers, Henry

↑ Index

73. Gabrielle Welford
EZLN on Red Alert (fwd)
Thu 5 Sep 1996

for anyone following Chiapas. gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Andrew Flood <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

http://www.geocities.com/CapitolHill/3102/

The communities of the EZLN have vote to break off talks with the government as of September the 4 1996. At the same time a month long military build-up in Chiapas and the heightening in tensions cause by the wave of attacks by the EPR in other areas of Mexico have led them to belive the military may be about to launch an attack on them. They have gone on Red Alert and are appealing for national and international support.

More details including the communiques can be found in the Red Alert section of the Irish Mexico Group web page at
http://www.geocities.com/CapitolHill/3102/

please forward this announcement as relevant

in solidarity
Andrew Flood

↑ Index

74. maria damon
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

---

it's the basic assumption i question.
md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> Put it this way, Maria. Ya got yer poets and ya got yer critics. Now, > if you take away one whole group, who's up the proverbial creek > without a paddle?
>
> Mike
> [redacted]

↑ Index

75. David Kellogg
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

First I wrote:

> Is "critics" so obvious? Not for me -- not, anyway, in the prevailing cultural economy. I suspect that the cultural capital of living poetry is so dependant on criticism and theory that the sudden absence of critics would be a virtual amputation to the body of poetry, producing its own version of phantom pain.

And then Henry G. wrote:

> Trouble with this theory is, for "living poetry", culture is not capital. Poetry is anti-cultural. Anti-literature. It's a form of rawness. Culture is the continual coming to terms with poetry. Say what you want about the poor suffering unknowns saved by the good old critic.

> It's all hogwash. An "unknown poet" has already come to terms. Real poets don't even know it! (no adjectives hang to their capital britches)

Except for "real", of course. As compared to. . . artificial? I deny (1) that some poets are more real poets than others, and (2) that most sentences beginning "Poetry is [fill in the blank]" should be taken seriously.

As long as I'm waiting for hurricane Fran:

My point was, I thought, pretty simple. Mike Boughn suggested that poetry could get along fine without criticism. I thought that was an oversimplification. I still think so, and I don't think the rhetoric of authenticity ("real" poets) makes it any less so.

repeating words and the interwoven positions/concepts of read, write, critic, writer, and poet was wonderful -- rminds one of the possibilities and reasons why one would choose to write in sestina if it weren't just a class assignment! and of course, what position is mr. gould occupying here -- writer? poet? critic? reader? or....

i know, let's whale on THEORISTS for a while (gawd, come on, i'm just kidding...)
e

↑ Index

78. Christina Fairbank Chirot

poet-ics

Thu 5 Sep 1996

---

mightn't an argument re poets/critics be "academic" given the setting: a list based at a State University-- called "poetics" (poets+critics=poetics?)

"divide & conquer"?
"codependency"?

(note: this sent via a State University system despite the spray paint stains on my hands . . .

"the writing is on the wall" and "the moving hand having writ, moves on"?

"Who runs may read"--Gertrude Stein
"And read/where thou art"--Ronald Johnson

-dbc

↑ Index

79. George Bowering

Re: the object

Thu 5 Sep 1996

> George Bowering wrote:
>
> I apologize to rachel for everything, Mssrs. Perhaps you can tell me how I might return a certain object to her. I remember the way the corners of her eyes turned up when she showed it to me.
>
> Roderick Slyme Esq. is retiring from a lifetime in the law in order to complete his dried monkey nuts collection. As his last act he will be more than happy to receive the object in question, as long as it is (a) > disinfected and (b) delivered in discreet packaging. He does, however, wonder why Mr. Bowering has seen fit to keep it for such a long time.

But Ms Loden said that if i wanted to I could lend the object to Herb Levy, and I had a heck of a time getting it away from him, and then a worse time getting it through customs. Herb said, by the way, that he was disappointed, because he had expected it to change his life. He said that he can get more from a Lyle Lovett CD.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"the sculptor
of Ankh-haf sure knew his bones"

--Lola Lemire Tostevin

↑ Index

80. George Bowering
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

> Mike Boughn wrote:
>
> Put it this way, Maria. Ya got yer poets and ya got yer critics. Now, if you take away one whole group, who's up the proverbial creek without a paddle?
>
> Is "critics" so obvious? Not for me -- not, anyway, in the prevailing cultural economy. I suspect that the cultural capital of living poetry is so dependant on criticism and theory that the sudden absence of critics would be a virtual amputation to the body of poetry, producing its own version of phantom pain.
>
> Cheers,
> David

David: was it not obvious to you that Mike was saying that?

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"the sculptor
of Ankh-haf
sure knew his bones"

--Lola Lemire Tostevin

↑ Index

81. George Bowering
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

> My point was, I thought, pretty simple. Mike Boughn suggested that poetry could get along fine without criticism.

No he didnt. He said that they need each other. Go and read what he said. or asked.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"the sculptor
of Ankh-haf
sure knew his bones"

--Lola Lemire Tostevin

↑ Index

82. George Bowering
Re: Assembling Alternatives
Thu 5 Sep 1996

> 3) American self-absorption and provincialism has been and is a problem (cf. my conference remarks). But anti-american sentiments have been (and are) a problem too. All of these things have a history: "americanocentrism" (what a word) is an abstraction.

Yep. and all that is further hassled by the US appropriation of the word "American", as if it applies only to people between mexico and canada.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"the sculptor
of Ankh-haf
sure knew his bones"

--Lola Lemire Tostevin

↑ Index

83. filch
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

>David Kellogg wrote
"I suspect that the cultural capital of living poetry is >so dependant on criticism and theory that the sudden absence of critics
>would be a virtual amputation to the body of poetry, producing its own >version of phantom pain."

i believe this says far more about the (slice of) soci ety you wander Mr. Kel log than it does about (any) poet ry.

cf

↑ Index

84. filch
Re: critics and poets (disabuse onself of importance said the flea as it consumed the dog)
Thu 5 Sep 1996

COMPUTER HACKER SEVERELY BEATEN AFTER CRITICIZING PRISON CONDITIONS

TARGET OF CAMPAIGN BY U.S. SECRET SERVICE

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

A convicted hacker, in prison for nothing more than possession of electronic parts easily obtainable at any Radio Shack, has been savagely beaten after being transferred to a maximum security prison as punishment for speaking out publicly about prison conditions. Ed Cummings, recently published in Wired and Internet Underground, as well as a correspondent for WBAI-FM in New York and 2600 Magazine, has been the focus of an increasingly ugly campaign of harrassment and terror from the authorities. At the time of this writing, Cummings is locked in the infectious diseases ward at Lehigh County prison in Allentown, Pennsylvania, unable to obtain the proper medical treatment for the severe injuries he has suffered.

The Ed Cummings case has been widely publicized in the computer hacker community over the past 18 months. In March of 1995, in what can only be described as a bizarre application of justice, Cummings (whose pen name is "Bernie S.") was targetted and imprisoned by the United States Secret Service for mere possession of technology that could be used to make free phone calls. Although the prosecution agreed there was no unauthorized access, no victims, no fraud, and no costs associated with the case, Cummings was imprisoned under a little known attachment to the Digital Telephony bill allowing individuals to be charged in this fashion. Cummings was portrayed by the Secret Service as a potential terrorist because of some of the books found in his library.

A year and a half later, Cummings is still in prison, despite the fact that he became eligible for parole three months ago. But things have now taken a sudden violent turn for the worse. As apparent retribution for Cummings' continued outspokenness against the daily harrassment and numerous injustices that he has faced, he was transferred on Friday to Lehigh County Prison, a dangerous maximum security facility. Being placed in this facility was in direct opposition to his sentencing order. The reason given by the prison: "protective custody".

A day later, Cummings was nearly killed by a dangerous inmate for not getting off the phone fast enough. By the time the prison guards stopped the attack, Cummings had been kicked in the face so many times that he lost his front teeth and had his jaw shattered. His arm, which he tried to use to shield his face, was also severely injured. It is expected that his mouth will be wired shut for up to three months. Effectively, Cummings has now been silenced at last.

>From the start of this ordeal, Cummings has always maintained his composure and confidence that one day the injustice of his imprisonment will be realized. He was a weekly contributor to a radio talk show in New York where he not only updated listeners on his experiences, but answered their questions about technology. People from as far away as Bosnia and China wrote to him, having heard about his story over the Internet.

Now we are left to piece these events together and to find those responsible for what are now criminal actions against him. We are demanding answers to these questions: Why was Cummings transferred for no apparent reason from a minimum security facility to a very dangerous prison? Why has he been removed from the hospital immediately after surgery and placed in the infectious diseases ward of the very same prison, receiving barely any desperately needed medical attention? Why was virtually every moment of Cummings' prison stay a continuous episode of harrassment, where he was severely punished for such crimes as receiving a fax (without his knowledge) or having too much reading material? Why did the Secret Service do everything in their power to ruin Ed Cummings' life?

Had these events occurred elsewhere in the world, we would be quick to condemn them as barbaric and obscene. The fact that such things are taking place in our own back yards should not blind us to the fact that they are just as unacceptable.

For more information on protest plans, email [redacted] or call our office at [redacted].

Complete details on this case can be found on the following web site: http://www.2600.com.

9/4/96

UPDATE: 9/5/96

At around 10AM, we received a rather upbeat call from Ed. He's still feeling pretty lousy, but he did speak to his lawyer this morning. Ken (lawyer) called Judge Panella in Northampton County and also Dan Pollanski, the District Attorney. They both agreed that there was no valid reason for Ed to have been transferred to Lehigh County maximum facility and that a transfer to a minimum security facility with good medical services should be sought. The also concurred that Ed should not be sent back to Bucks County due to the administrative treatment he received there.

The judge spent a good 30 minutes discussing this with Ken, which is virtually unheard of. They discussed that Panella's sentencing had specifically stated that Ed was to serve all of his sentence at Bucks County, alluding to the fact that the BCCF administrators should never have transferred him. Furthermore, the judge agreed that there was no basis provided for the "protective custody" designation.

On an even more positive note, the judge and the DA were to discuss revisiting Ed's sentence with Ken today. They both agreed that they had expected Ed to serve his minimum sentence and be paroled after 6 months. We will hear more about this around 6PM today. This _could_ result in Ed's immediate release. A note of caution to you optimists out there: several layers of administrative b.s. are in place to assure that prisoners are not easily released (to prevent them from taking advantage of family or political ties, etc.)

So, we were felling fairly upbeat about the whole situation...

At 12:30, Ed phoned me from yet another prison phone system (TeleLink). He was transferred back to Northampton County Prison. As most of you will remember, this prison was built in the 1800s and has horrible conditions including roaches and rats.

Ed is now in the infectious disease medical unit there. There is not supposed to be any smoking on this unit, but of course inmates do. Ed is allergic to cigarette smoke. When he was last in this facility, he was very ill with 104 fever and coughing up blood. I'm sure we can imagine how difficult that type of coughing could get with Ed's jaw broken and wired shut.

The medical facility there is run by a private company (Correctional Healtcare Solutions, [redacted]) who cuts costs wherever possible, including neglecting to provide prescribed medications to inmates. Ed was given a pillow, which seems like a bonus compared to the Lehigh facilities.

Ed was woken up around 8am on 9/5 and moved to a new cell in the infectious disease ward (he had been transferred yesterday as well). He also got to see the Lehigh Prison doctor for the first time since his release from the hospital. The doctor was concerned about continued pain Ed has in his right temple and was to call the hospital to review the xrays for possible fracture there. He was also going to prescribe a stronger painkiller for Ed (currently on Tylenol 3 with Codeine). Ed is fairly sure that he will have to start this process all over again with a doctor at Northampton County, whenever one sees him.

The discharge unit at Lehigh County refused to allow Ed to take his legal paperwork with him. His lawyer has phoned the discharge unit, who is now "searching for the folders".

Ed still needs to get a soft toothbrush and a cover for his cast so he can shower -- believe it or not, he hasn't been able to shower since last THURSDAY; when they transferred him on Friday, he was in a holding cell for about 10 hours and hadn't had a chance to shower before 10AM on Saturday. You can just imagine his current condition, after losing a few pints of blood and then having surgery...

We have no assurance that they will allow him to receive the package we're sending 9/5 which includes these items. We tried getting a copy of his medical release instructions to send along with the package, but the hospital requires Ed to sign a release form before they'll provide the instructions to anyone but Ed. The prison system, including medical facilities, seem to feel no compulsion to follow the medical orders. Lehigh didn't provide him with liquified food and didn't have a mortar/pestle to grind up his medication and vitamins. Ed doesn't hold much hope that the Northampton County facilities will be any better. He also hasn't had any ice on his incisions since last night (more than 12 hours ago). If his arm swells under the cast, his circulation could be cut off.

We've also just called the Lehigh County DA's office to find out what Ed has to do to file criminal charges against the guy who beat him up (Michael Williams). Apparently, no one from the police department has asked Ed if he wants to file charges. No one took photographs of Ed's condition after the beating. Ed has to ask for a special criminal complaint form from the prison he's in. He'll do this today; he has to file the criminal complaint against his assailant before he can file civil complaints against Bucks County and Lehigh County prisons.

The only other decent news is that the 'new' prison phone system also seems to allow 3 way calls. Ed hasn't had any of the weird number blocking problems with this system, either.

If anyone can send him a money order for $10 or $15, that would also help - he could then purchase soap, shampoo, paper, pen and stamps at the comissary.

He's now at Northampton County Correctional Facility
ATTN: Ed Cummings, M3
666 Walnut Street
Easton, PA 18042

For the record, the Warden at this facility is Terrence O'Connel voice: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]

Looks like our protest may have to change sites to Northampton County.

****

These are the people responsible for keeping Ed Cummings imprisoned.

Name/Address Phone Fax

Bucks County Correctional Facility [redacted] [redacted]
1730 South Easton Road
Doylestown, PA
Director: Mr. Nesbitt (warden equivalent)
Chief: John Henderson (had Cummings thrown into maximum security for receiving a fax from a reporter - later told Cummings he had "no right" to speak to the press)

Lehigh County Prison [redacted]
38 North Fourth Street
Allentown, PA 18103
Warden: Ed Sweeney [redacted] [redacted]

Haverford Township Police Department
John Morris [redacted] [redacted]
(original arresting officer who believed Cummings was involved in a drug deal because he was observed selling electronic components to a vehicle occupied by African Americans)

Northampton County Probation Department
Scott Hoke (parole officer) [redacted] [redacted] (as Cummings' parole officer for a minor infraction years earlier, Hoke had told Cummings that parole was a waste of time for such a trivial offense. However, after being interviewed by the Secret Service, Hoke did an about face and began referring to Cummings as a very dangerous criminal who needed to be in prison for a long time.)

Harrisburg Parole Office
Ralph Bigley [redacted] [redacted]
Mr. Bigelow [redacted]

Northampton County Courthouse (main) [redacted]
Judge Panella [redacted] [redacted]

US District Court, Philadelphia (main) [redacted]
601 Market Street
Philadelphia, PA 19106
Judge Marjorie Rendell [redacted] [redacted]
Judge Jay C. Waldman [redacted] [redacted]
Judge Charles B. Smith [redacted] [redacted]

Assistant U.S. Attorney
Anne Whatley Chain, Esq. [redacted]
615 Chestnut Street
Suite 1250
Philadelphia, PA 19106

Special Agent Thomas L. Varney U.S. Secret Service (main) [redacted] [redacted] Room 7236 Federal Building 600 Arch Street Philadelphia, PA 19106 (Varney was the key factor in having Ed Cummings imprisoned since March of 1995. It was he who convinced Det. John Morris that Cummings' possession of electronic components and certain books and magazines made him a danger to society. His testimony stands out in its incredible assessment of Cummings as nothing short of a terrorist and his ability, as a representative of one of the nation's most powerful agencies, to convince others in law enforcement that Cummings belongs in prison with the most dangerous and most violent of criminals.)

****

Every one of these people has the power to do something. Please contact them and convince them to take an interest!

Pennsylvania Elected Officials

Governor:

Tom Ridge
[redacted]
[redacted]

Senators:

Arlen Specter (R)
[redacted]

Rick Santorum (R)
[redacted]

Representatives:

1st District
Thomas Foglietta (D)
[redacted]

2nd District
Chaka Fattah (D)
[redacted]

3rd District
Robert Borski (D)
[redacted]

4th District
Ron Klink (D)
[redacted]

5th District
William Clinger (R)
[redacted]

6th District
Tim Holden (D)
[redacted]

7th District
Curt Weldon (R)
[redacted]

8th District
James Greenwood (R)
[redacted]

9th District
Bud Shuster (R)
[redacted]

10th District
Joseph McDade (R)
[redacted]

11th District
Paul Kanjorski (D)
[redacted]

12th District
John Murtha (D)
[redacted]

13th District
Jon Fox (R)
[redacted]

14th District
William Coyne (D)
[redacted]

15th District
Paul McHale (D)
[redacted]

16th District
Robert Walker (R)
[redacted]

17th District
George Gekas (R)
[redacted]

18th District
Mike Doyle (D)
[redacted]

19th District
Bill Goodling (R)
[redacted]

20th District
Frank Mascara (D)
[redacted]

21st District
Phil English (R)
[redacted]

↑ Index

85. maria damon
Re: critics and poets
Thu 5 Sep 1996

---

lbd rites:

hmmm... critical responses to texts as self-contained artifacts, vs response to/among a language community... sounds like a problem...

i rite: this is an interesting way to articulate a difference in perspective. not so much a "problem" as a difference to be registered; it's the latter situation, "response to/among a language community," that i find compelling insofar as it explores the cultural work a text or text/event performs...bests, maria d

↑ Index

86. DS
Re: Assembling Alternatives
Thu 5 Sep 1996

> Yep. and all that is further hassled by the US appropriation of the word "American", as if it applies only to people between mexico and canada.

Or perhaps between the North pole and the south pole????

↑ Index

87. Marjorie Perloff
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

To Michael Boughn et al. I wonder if you actually read what I wrote. I was NOT setting up poets versus critics in the way you imply. I think the poetry readings were terrific. But why did all the poets give critical papers? Do the poets have a special corner on criticism? Many were sophomoric, self-indulgent, and just plain empty. I come back to my original question: who gets to speak and why? I'm sorry to sound so Foucauldian but I've never seen the issue so clearly represented as at the Assembling Alt. conference. For example, Lee Ann Brown's paper consisted of having all of us sing Helen Adam's ballads to Methodist hymn tunes. It was a lot of fun. But now suppose an invited critic had done the exact same thing? I think there would have been lots of objection. That's known as poetic license and what it suggests to me is that with all the talk of cultural construction etc., underneath we still believe that poets are special people inspired by the Muse, the inner voice, God, whatever--so that whatever a "poet" decides to say is fine, thank you. So we had the spectacle of an Irish poet (can't remember his name) announcing that there was a return to the long poem in Ireland. Oh really? When were there no long poems in Ireland? How about Paul Muldoon's MADOC? Now if a student said that in class, she would stand corrected by her peers and the professor but if a poet announces it gradly, it's evidently OK.

This is the phenomenon I'm talking about. I am not downgrading poets or poetry readings and I personally think poets (at their best) are certainly more important, useful, interesting etc etc. than us lowly critics. But let's at least define our terms.

Marjorie Perloff

↑ Index

88. George Bowering

Re: Assembling Alternatives

Fri 6 Sep 1996

> Yep. and all that is further hassled by the US appropriation of the word "American", as if it applies only to people between mexico and canada.
>
> Or perhaps between the North pole and the south pole????

That is exactly who it does refer to in the languages of all the people in all those countries, exept the US, who think just they are the Americans. They even call their country "America". Why dont they just call it "The World." Well, in a way they do: their professional sports playoffs always end up in what they call the "World Championship".

George Bowering.

"I'm more than human,
I'm a woman!"

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

--David Meltzer

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

89. filch

Marjorie & the poets

Fri 6 Sep 1996

This sounds like Olson redux circa Berkeley discussed earlier last month.

Marjorie Perloff said
">Would critics have been allowed to spend their 20 minute "papers" >schmoozing about this and that as some of the poets who gave papers did?"

In my experience it is a nice thing when critics are not given the time to discuss their criticism in a public venue as more often than not the talk turns exclusively away from the actual text which is supposed to be the object of inquiry into a discussion of the wherefores and whatnots of crit theory or some position vis a vis lit crit theory. In my humble opinion the venue for criticism which works best is the printed page. As opposed to poetry which splurts in many directions. In my experience it is a rare occasion when a paper is actually delivered to an audience which has access to the text in question before, during, or after the paper. Any close textual reading which does get done in these situations almost invariably gets lost in the frame. Subsequently most question and answer periods seem to revolve around either issues not supported by the text and/or issues completely unrelated and dealing more with politics and or power of the personalities involved in the setting.

Actually I would hold that critics are indeed second class citizens in that the need to codify and "tame" produces an academy which is by and large completely ignorant of, and indeed AfraiD of the "whole art" of poetry. A Slap in the Face of Public Taste must happen over and over again for just such reasons. When the critic and the poet become too comfortable with each other the work has stopped. At this point they become accomodating to each other and may even be seen writing jacket blurbs for each other.

A critic will say something like, "Milan Kundera is overrated, all he ever writes about is sex anyway." and the poet will know that the only way to say such a thing is through pose. Which is after all an important part of poetry.

You have the Word and what follows is the word.

cf

↑ Index

90. Ken Edwards
critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

"many of us critics are poets as well; we're just shy about it. or, as i describe myself, a poet manquee. sometimes i'm embarrassed when a POET at a conference asks, so, maria, do you write poetry as well? i feel that my credibility is on the line, and if i answer in the negative i drop a coupla notches; at the same time if i answer in the affirmative i feel dishonest because i haven't published, or i don't write what others consider "poetry" (even in as enlightened a crowd as poetricks, there seems to be a taken-for-granted difference, if not in the discourses themselves, in those who practice them)."

Maria: speaking as a white male British poet, not quite dead yet -- all of which I apologise for --

I am grateful for the existence of people who take an interest in the kind of poetry I write, without necessarily wanting to write it themselves (this tiny band, which I call "the audience", includes such as Romana Huk, the organiser of Assembling Alternatives). For one thing, it eliminates the suspicion of bad faith that sometimes lingers ("I'm pretending to be interested in your poetry because I hope you'll swell the crowd at my own reading, or buy my book, or publish me"). Though I would still do the poetry even if there were no such persons.

Ken Edwards

↑ Index

91. henry G
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Thu, 5 Sep 1996 17:04:16 -0400 David Kellogg said:
>
>And then Henry G. wrote:
>>It's all hogwash. An "unknown poet" has already come to terms.
>>Real poets don't even know it! (no adjectives hang to their capital >>britches)
>
>Except for "real", of course. As compared to. . . artificial? I deny (1) >that some poets are more real poets than others, and (2) that most sentences >beginning "Poetry is [fill in the blank]" should be taken seriously.

You're right, saying "real" this or real that isn't saying much. What I meant by "real poets don't even know it" was that even poets, most of the time, are not "in" poetry. In my experience, anyway, it's a change of state, from mild to fairly drastic. It's a "fit". That's part of the rawness, continually explained away by theory, culture, literature, various echo chambers, choruses. Secondly, I think sentences beginning "poetry is" are statistically no more ridiculous than any member of the set of all sentence ever written, lalla poohbah spingwah, nonetheless, etc. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

92. Michael Boughn
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> My point was, I thought, pretty simple. Mike Boughn suggested that poetry could get along fine without criticism. I thought that was an oversimplification. I still think so, and I don't think the rhetoric of authenticity ("real" poets) makes it any less so.

David:

George is right. I never suggested poetry could get along fine without criticism. That would be an oversimplification. They are in some sense wed. But let's not pretend they embody the same relation to language. Or that their interests are the same. That somehow they are interchangeable acts.

While it's true that if you are concerned not strictly with poetry, but with other issues such as fame, notoriety, anthology spots, academic positions, i.e. the business of poetry, then you can't do without critics. But Henry's point is, believe it or not, a lot of very fine poets could care less about that crap. Poetry is enough for them and their small, local audiences. I'm not sure that what we're calling criticism could ever be enough in that sense. But, hey, I could be wrong about that. I've never been initiated into the inner rites of criticism.

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

93. henry G
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Thu, 5 Sep 1996 22:21:33 -0700 Marjorie Perloff said:
>example, Lee Ann Brown's paper consisted of having all of us sing Helen >Adam's ballads to Methodist hymn tunes. It was a lot of fun. But now >suppose an invited critic had done the exact same thing? I think there >would have been lots of objection.

Probably only from the other critics, though.

> what it suggests to me is that with all the talk of cultural construction etc., underneath we still believe that poets are special people inspired by the Muse, the inner voice, God, whatever--so that whatever a "poet" decides to say is fine, thank you.

No, I think Lee Ann Brown probably thought it was a special OCCASION.

> So we had the spectacle of an Irish poet (can't remember his name) announcing that there was a return to the long poem in Ireland. Oh really? When were there no long poems in Ireland? How about Paul Muldoon's MADOC? Now if a student said that in class, she would stand corrected by her peers and the professor but if a poet announces it gradly, it's evidently OK.

Good thing it wasn't a class! Gosh! Poor no-name Irish poet would have taken the heat! What a spectacle he made of himself!
>
>This is the phenomenon I'm talking about. I am not downgrading poets or >poetry readings and I personally think poets (at their best) are certainly >more important, useful, interesting etc etc. than us lowly critics. But >let's at least define our terms.

I think Dave Chirot made the most telling point on this whole question. It's a foregone obvious conclusion poets & critics are allies. Critics are readers with a voice, a mind, & power. Poets have power too, but because it's a power they can't control, they're jealous for its prerogatives. And it's not power in the socio-political sense (that's where critics come in). Poets often badmouth critics because they sense that critic's power is like a gun aimed blind. Touting the mediocre for all the wrong reasons. Now I know there's Mr. Bernstein & Silliman a-lurking out there, and many more, who've given these matters a lot of delicate thought. But sometimes old sentences can be silly too, as noted in previous post to Mr. Kellogg. - Mr. Gould

↑ Index

94. Joe Amato
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

ok: i continue to be puzzled by any and all assertions that lay claim not only to what poetry or criticism is (for all time? in all places? for all writers and readers?), but to how thence to distinguish twixt these allegedly fixed domains...

it's not that i don't understand how my activity as a poet is often experienced (by me) in ways that don't resemble (what i understand to be) critics' activity (as critics... and yeah, i write what some folks might call criticism too)... it's that this difference that i sense, when looked at a bit more closely, is predicated on a particular (sub)set of practices and beliefs, presumably shared with a particular group of people... many of whom remain strictly fictive for me, or anonymous... meaning, that i have every reason to believe that these practices and beliefs may change over time and place and person, and that i have no reason not to believe that there is the possibility---perhaps contested---for particular practices and beliefs to overlap... that is, to be experienced as overlapping by some particular group...

so you might say that i'm being a mite particular...

if you like: at any given moment i may be neither a poet nor a critic, or i may be both---and i do not equivocate, and this is not merely academic...

joe

↑ Index

95. henry gould
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

No question that poetry & criticism overlap. A lot of poetry is a criticism of past poetry. Look at Pope as prime example of poet-as-critic, purely literary critic. And criticism makes use of poetic effects - irony, paradox, structure, blah blah. Overlap, yes. But unless you're going to deny that there is this general something called Poetry & another called Criticism (which is clearly the game of recent times) I think there are real distinctions. In essence, if not along the edges. I guess a lot of people on the list would disagree. There is only Writing. Fine, if that's your aim - Write it. In my own case, I think, most of the time, when I hear a poem or write a poem I'm aiming for something distinguishable from criticism or writing per se. What are the distinguishable distinctions? 1. a different approach to topic or subject-matter. 2. a more heightened sense of what has gone before - in my OWN writing. 3. a desire to go beyond, to excel - not just intellectually (as in a critical work) but in an all around verbal construction project. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

96. Judy Roitman
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> David Kellogg wrote
> "I suspect that the cultural capital of living poetry is
> so dependant on criticism and theory that the sudden absence of critics
> would be a virtual amputation to the body of poetry, producing its own > version of phantom pain."

> i believe
> this says far more about the > (slice of) soci
> ety you wander Mr. Kel
> log than it does about (any) poet > ry.
>
> cf

Well let's unpack this statement and be less personal.

Experimental poetry has been written continuously for at least 100 years, although critical theory seems to have caught up with it only fairly recently.

I also find it interesting that folks who, as is said, "know theory," can be ignorant of writing which situates itself squarely in the middle of this theory, and in fact may not have the slightest clue how to read it. Not being in an Eng. Dept. I don't know how common this situation is, but suspect it is very common.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

97. maria damon
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

really, this is almost touchingly silly. i've now seen messages scolding critics for wandering in their analyses from "the actual text" they are "supposed" to be discussing, for responding to another critic's grandiose putdown of criticism on the basis that (I) wasn't dealing with the "actual" quotation, for having "socio-political power" (ever heard of vaclav havel, if we're going to talk about "actual" authors?)(what critics used to have that poets didn't was academic positions; this has changed considerably); etc etc. marjorie and i are, i think, of the mind that ("alternative", though sometimes we differ on what constitutes alternative) poets and poetry shd receive more attention in the academy; i at least am exploring the interstices between poetic and critical discourse in my own writing practice, etc etc etc, lots of critics are poets too but until recently haven't been able to "come out" as poets; many poets are writing criticism... But more to the point, haven't we learned anything from the last 30 years of theory? do we really still have to fetishize "actual texts" as if they had no context? do we really still have to treat authors as if they are not socially made, but spring from zeus's head fullblown, with texts in turn springing fullblown from their precultural heads? to read some of you, you'd think poets had no socius but operated in a cultural void, prey to overwhelming forces that they do not understand, oracularly emitting the Truth --sounds kinda...primitivistic, doesn't it? patronizing?

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> On Thu, 5 Sep 1996 22:21:33 -0700 Marjorie Perloff said:
> >example, Lee Ann Brown's paper consisted of having all of us sing Helen > >Adam's ballads to Methodist hymn tunes. It was a lot of fun. But now > >suppose an invited critic had done the exact same thing? I think there > >would have been lots of objection.
>
> Probably only from the other critics, though.
>
> >what it suggests to me is that with all the talk of cultural construction > >etc., underneath we still believe that poets are special people inspired > >by the Muse, the inner voice, God, whatever--so that whatever a "poet" > >decides to say is fine, thank you.
>
> No, I think Lee Ann Brown probably thought it was a special OCCASION.
>
> >So we had the spectacle of an Irish poet (can't remember his name) > >announcing that there was a return to the long poem in Ireland. Oh > >really? When were there no long poems in Ireland? How about Paul > >Muldoon's MADOC? Now if a student said that in class, she would stand > >corrected by her peers and the professor but if a poet announces it > >gradly, it's evidently OK.
>
> Good thing it wasn't a class! Gosh! Poor no-name Irish poet would > have taken the heat! What a spectacle he made of himself!
> >
> >This is the phenomenon I'm talking about. I am not downgrading poets or > >poetry readings and I personally think poets (at their best) are certainly > >more important, useful, interesting etc etc. than us lowly critics. But > >let's at least define our terms.
>
> I think Dave Chirot made the most telling point on this whole question.
> It's a foregone obvious conclusion poets & critics are allies. Critics > are readers with a voice, a mind, & power. Poets have power too, but > because it's a power they can't control, they're jealous for its > prerogatives. And it's not power in the socio-political sense > (that's where critics come in). Poets often badmouth critics because > they sense that critic's power is like a gun aimed blind. Touting > the mediocre for all the wrong reasons. Now I know there's Mr.

> Bernstein & Silliman a-lurking out there, and many more, who've given > these matters a lot of delicate thought. But sometimes old sentences > can be silly too, as noted in previous post to Mr. Kellogg.
> - Mr. Gould

↑ Index

98. henry gould
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Fri, 6 Sep 1996 10:07:11 -0500 maria damon said:
>poets are writing criticism... But more to the point, haven't we learned >anything from the last 30 years of theory? do we really still have to fetishize >"actual texts" as if they had no context? do we really still have to treat >authors as if they are not socially made, but spring from zeus's head >fullblown,
>with texts in turn springing fullblown from their precultural heads? to read >some of you, you'd think poets had no socius but operated in a cultural void, >prey to overwhelming forces that they do not understand, oracularly emitting
>the >Truth --sounds kinda...primitivistic, doesn't it? patronizing?

I think I provided a context for where I see poetry coming from, in a sketchy way. Maybe not the context you're interested in. In fact, it's probably the context that large edifices of theory have been trying to close off for some time now. A context so overwhelmingly silly it can never become "socially made". A scandal. Though I guess this too becomes a "theme" for research. Sorry, it's just poetry. Theory might enrich vocabulary but 30 yrs of it won't teach poetry anything. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

99. maria damon
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

hg writes:

That's part of the rawness, continually explained away by theory, culture, literature, various echo chambers, choruses.

i rite:

As a critic who values rawness but nonetheless sees "rawness" as socially determined (i.e. we --trained critics and trained poets --find a power in "rawness" that foregrounds our own trainedness, etc, we assign value to it possibly different from how the "naive" artist wd understand his/her work, etc)(i.e. i'm quite suspicious of my own attraction to what i perceive as "rawness" and find ample room for self-critique w/in that phenomenon of attraction) -- the best theory etc does not "explain away" anything but enriches it, provides a stimulating intertext with its purported subject that then becomes itself part of the discursive/cultural environment of the (pre-)text. what do you think of steven caton's work? does he "explain away" the "mystery" of yemeni poetry by showing how it operates as social practice? does philippe sollere "explain away" writing and the experience of limits? do deleuze and guattari, derrida and co "explain" anything "away?" often the complaint that i hear is that they make things more mysterious! which of course, becomes another way of putting down theory. does dick hebdige really "explain away" the mystery of youth subcultural style? i don't think so. bests, md

↑ Index

100. Jordan Davis
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

The fine relief pitcher Tug McGraw used to draw (or have drawn for him) a comic strip about a fine relief pitcher, 'Scroogie'. In one strip, a very Bake McBride-like outfielder fades back, back, and catches cleanly in his mitt a football. "I hate the overlap," he says. My question for the list is, are Bob Grenier and Tug McGraw friends? J

↑ Index

101. David Kellogg
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> My point was, I thought, pretty simple. Mike Boughn suggested that poetry could get along fine without criticism.
>
> No he didnt. He said that they need each other. Go and read what he said. or asked.

My mistake. It's what I get for jumping into the middle of a thread. If that's the case, I withdraw my objection.

~~~
~~~

David Kellogg [redacted] University Writing Program [redacted] Duke University FAX [redacted]

There is no mantle
and it does not descend.

-- Thomas Kinsella

↑ Index

102. maria damon
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

boughn writes:

I've never been initiated into the inner rites of criticism.

i rite: that could explain the misperceptions i've seen in this thread. believe it or not, i've felt language-mystical raptures while riting whatever it is i rite, which some here would call "criticism written in a poetic sort of prose." many of the people you seem to be calling "critics" are happy if their books sell 500 copies. many "critics" (who are they anyway? people who care about poetry but don't publish their own?) don't write books; they teach instead. not all critics are consumed with ambition. many belong to book-clubs and that's their critical practice; or they read to their kids at night. etc. etc.

↑ Index

103. Joe Amato
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

henry, my reason for pointing to overlap is to suggest a more open, perhaps even less confrontational approach to the substantive issue, which seems to me to be one of---alas---territory (and how is one not to be confrontational about territory?)... in essence the questions that have been raised and answers that have been provoked, stemming from marjorie's observations re the 'assembling alternatives' conference, have revolved around the way a certain who who speaks (poet or critic) is greeted, reception-wise... and i think this question of reception must be addressed in terms less of formal differences and in terms more of perceived social/community/venue power---advantage/privilege/entitlement...

hence i'm suggesting that there may be ways to reconceive this power, with the hope of redistributing it in more equitable, workable terms...

which is not to deny the very real incidences (and places) where either critical power per se or poetic power per se goes unchallenged or unabated... i just don't understand, again, how (what i see as) this question of institutional power resolves to intrinsic differences, formal and otherwise, between 'poetry' and 'criticism,' and thence between poets and critics... even though we might point, say, to poetic under and over-privileging since the ancients, or critical limelighting today, it ain't necessarily so that things have to be this way by virtue of the categories "criticism" and "poetry"...

maybe it's just more apparent now than in some more stable pasts that these categories are just that---categories...

best,

joe

↑ Index

104. David Kellogg
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> i believe
> this says far more about the > (slice of) soci
> ety you wander Mr. Kel
> log than it does about (any) poet > ry.

We all take our societies one slice at a time. Judging by this example, your slice seems a bit sour. De gustibus.

105. David Kellogg
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

Mike Boughn wrote:

> David:
>
> George is right. I never suggested poetry could get along fine without criticism. That would be an oversimplification. They are in some sense wed. But let's not pretend they embody the same relation to language. Or that their interests are the same. That somehow they are interchangeable acts.

Did I suggest that? They are histories apart, but cross-implicated nonetheless. I have no particular stake in arguing against genre, and in fact I don't think I've ever done so. What I object to is the pairing of poetry and criticism in primary/secondary terms.

> While it's true that if you are concerned not strictly with poetry, but with other issues such as fame, notoriety, anthology spots, academic positions, i.e. the business of poetry, then you can't do without critics.

I wonder -- honestly -- whether it's possible to be concerned "strictly with poetry." The history of poetry is littered with failed attempts to articulate such a concern. But that's another thread, and I've already pissed too many people off in this one.

writing POETRY" i can't write. and like most on this list, i suspect, i have to write to survive. i would most definitely write if there were no audience. but it's true, i wouldn't write "criticism." i'd write writing.

↑ Index

107. Christina Fairbank Chirot

socially constructed poets

Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

earlier today I had the pleasure of encountering a socially constructed poet:
a statue of Robert Burns this on the way to preparations for Indian Summer Festival--a native American celebration which takes place near the Art Museum which is in the same building as the War Memorial
--dbc
(not to be homophonically confused with debussy)

↑ Index

108. Kathrine Varnes

Re: critics and poets

Fri 6 Sep 1996

I question it too, and besides, no one IS taking away either group. Imagine the partial bodies left behind.

On Thu, 5 Sep 1996, maria damon wrote:

> it's the basic assumption i question.
> md
>
> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> Put it this way, Maria. Ya got yer poets and ya got yer critics. Now, if you take away one whole group, who's up the proverbial creek without a paddle?
>
> Mike
> [redacted]

Kathrine Varnes
[redacted]
University of Delaware

↑ Index

109. henry
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Fri, 6 Sep 1996 10:29:02 -0500 Joe Amato said:
>
>which is not to deny the very real incidences (and places) where either >critical power per se or poetic power per se goes unchallenged or >unabated... i just don't understand, again, how (what i see as) this >question of institutional power resolves to intrinsic differences, formal >and otherwise, between 'poetry' and 'criticism,' and thence between poets >and critics... even though we might point, say, to poetic under and

Maybe you don't understand it because no one ever made that claim. I tried to describe, from a practical point of view, what I see as some "essential" differences between poetry & criticism. They had nothing to do with institutional power. Institutional power does not "resolve to intrinsic differences." I also agreed with you that despite essential differences, there is a lot of overlap. The issue of power came up in regard to "poets vs critics" & all the friction that can happen, not in regard to "poetry vs criticism". - Henry G

↑ Index

110. henry
Re: Marjorie & the poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Fri, 6 Sep 1996 16:44:52 BST Ira Lightman said:
>
>It seems to me that Marjorie Perloff's example
>critique of the unnamed Irish poet is a perfect >example of the kind of contemplative and >intelligent culture of comments we need.
>
>And yet didn't many respond to her as if she >was saying "total rubbish" or "why can't I >control this". Do we have to respond to her >as if she was a schoolteacher SuperEgo?
>
>It seems to me that poets need to develop >a sense of discrimination to be able to >acknowledge well-meant probing criticism

>when it comes, and not be in a permanent >state of muscle-cramp tenseness rehearsing >an all-purpose (and off the point) snappy >comeback.

You're right, it was a sophomoric comeback. And you're right about intelligent criticism is the great service of real informed interested critics. But without having been at the conference, and so unable to judge, I tried to imagine the statement made by the no-name Irish poet & its context. He's making a statement: there's a revival of the long poem in Ireland. Marjorie doesn"t say, "well, is that really true? There's been such and so..." Instead, she says "we are treated to the spectacle of ..." etc etc implying some mindless slob going unchallenged. Now in my opinion that's a fairly snappy attack. And every snappy attack deserves a snappy comeback. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

111. Joe Amato
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

one further thought comes to me after reading the flurry of responses to this thread: that ironically, it's precisely the (mostly academic) critics on this list who are acutely aware of the degree to which poetry and poets have in so many academic circles been neglected... and these selfsame critics---marjorie, maria, david, and others of you---have in fact acted through their work to correct this neglect, which i see less as a territorializing gesture than as an expression of engagement and an assignation of value (and certainly not as an act of appropriation---which is, for example, how i read the way new historicists have deployed the terms "poetic" and "creative"... i.e., with little if any critical intervention from contemporary poets' quarters)...

so if in fact a critic like marjorie should 'complain' about the way poets' articulations vis-a-vis critics' articulations have been received at a conference, it'd probably be a good idea at least to consider that her commitment to poetry and poets marks same as a worthy academic-critical pursuit... and that in light of this commitment, her observation would seem to be aimed at bringing poets and critics closer to talking turkey...

best,

joe

↑ Index

112. Pierre Joris
[Fwd: Henry Flynt lectures at Anthology Film Archives]
Fri 6 Sep 1996

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

For anyone getting tired of critpo/pocrit thread/ts, here's how to go hear talking about moving pix -- Pierremalgosia askanas wrote:
>
> Henry Flynt is going to do three lectures in October at the Anthology > Film Archives in NYC: Oct 17, 24 and 31. All on Thursdays, and always > at 8pm. The AFA is on 2nd St at 2nd Ave, SE corner.
>
> -malgosia
>
> --- from list [redacted] ---

Date: Fri, 6 Sep 1996 11:34:47 -0400 (EDT)
From: malgosia askanas <[redacted]>
To: [redacted], [redacted]
Subject: Henry Flynt lectures at Anthology Film Archives

Henry Flynt is going to do three lectures in October at the Anthology Film Archives in NYC: Oct 17, 24 and 31. All on Thursdays, and always at 8pm. The AFA is on 2nd St at 2nd Ave, SE corner.

-malgosia

----------667D1112480F--

↑ Index

113. Ira Lightman
Re: Marjorie & the poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

I just want to join in this discussion, like Maria Damon and Marjorie Perloff, on the side of the critic. It seems to me that there remains a strong fear of critics among poets, at least this is something I notice a lot in England; poets are afraid to be seen to writing criticism themselves, and I think this is not just because it's seen as an impure or reductive act but because, as Ken Edwards was saying, a lot of one's audience are other poets. I agree with Ken that it's very nice to have audience members who are just readers, just keen on one's stuff, and that there are too many times where, as Ken says, I poet come and see you poet so you poet will come and see me poet. The corollary for me, that Ken didn't mention, is that this also means a lot of poets in the British experimental scene live in glass houses and everybody winces when anyone throws stones. Is it the same in other POETICS members' nations?

I lament the lack of a journal and criticism scene in the UK like that of Poetics Journal and L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E (although Peter Middleton's reviews in Ken-edited Reality Studios were excellently written and helpful). More than that, I lament in both cases, Uk and American, the absence of criticism that is NOT extolling the critic or poet-critic's enthusiasms ie you get a lot of puffs but not much honest and useful feedback.

Whereas you get a lot of "why are you even doing that?" or "I didn't like it, so it's total rubbish, start all over again".

It seems to me that Marjorie Perloff's example
critique of the unnamed Irish poet is a perfect example of the kind of contemplative and
intelligent culture of comments we need.

And yet didn't many respond to her as if she was saying "total rubbish" or "why can't I control this". Do we have to respond to her
as if she was a schoolteacher SuperEgo?

It seems to me that poets need to develop a sense of discrimination to be able to acknowledge well-meant probing criticism
when it comes, and not be in a permanent
state of muscle-cramp tenseness rehearsing
an all-purpose (and off the point) snappy
comeback.

Ira Lightman

In my experience it is a nice thing when critics are not given the time to > discuss their criticism in a public venue as more often than not the talk > turns exclusively away from the actual text which is supposed to be the > object of inquiry into a discussion of the wherefores and whatnots of crit > theory or some position vis a vis lit crit theory. In my humble opinion

> the venue for criticism which works best is the printed page. As opposed > to poetry which splurts in many directions. In my experience it is a rare > occasion when a paper is actually delivered to an audience which has access > to the text in question before, during, or after the paper. Any close > textual reading which does get done in these situations almost invariably > gets lost in the frame. Subsequently most question and answer periods seem > to revolve around either issues not supported by the text and/or issues > completely unrelated and dealing more with politics and or power of the > personalities involved in the setting.
>
> Actually I would hold that critics are indeed second class citizens in that > the need to codify and "tame" produces an academy which is by and large > completely ignorant of, and indeed AfraiD of the "whole art" of poetry. A > Slap in the Face of Public Taste must happen over and over again for just > such reasons. When the critic and the poet become too comfortable with > each other the work has stopped. At this point they become accomodating to > each other and may even be seen writing jacket blurbs for each other.
>
> A critic will say something like, "Milan Kundera is overrated, all he ever > writes about is sex anyway." and the poet will know that the only way to > say such a thing is through pose. Which is after all an important part of > poetry.

>
> You have the Word and what follows is the word.
>
> cf

↑ Index

114. Ira Lightman

Re: Marjorie & the poets (cont.)

Fri 6 Sep 1996

I think Chris's contribution to this debate is a good example of one culture of criticism.
I really agree with his observations, but not all of the argument so I want to close read my own reading of it. The controversy-stirring critic-ego-piqueing start strikes a "human" (ie conspiratorial, between him writing and me reading) note:

"In my experience it is a nice thing when critics are not given the time to discuss their criticism in a public venue"

I feel, yes, that's the Oscar Wilde-ism I needed when confronted with so much bad public criticism. Chris continues:

"as more often than not the talk turns exclusively away from the actual text which is supposed to be the object of inquiry into a discussion of the wherefores and whatnots of crit theory or some position vis a vis lit crit theory."

I begin to bristle, as I fear a
"all criticism is bad, un-sensual, cerebral" (who ever said the cerebral is not sensual!) anti-theory blast coming.

This fear is not eased by the (rather reactionary?) point -

"In my humble opinion the venue for criticism which works best is the printed page."

- which is the kind of social edict I feel bearing through people's stares at me when I try to reason out something complex in public and I start to stutter, fearing calls of Egghead and Brainbox and Blue Stocking. Then Chris says:

"As opposed to poetry which splurts in many directions."

And I think of the many occasions in which it doesn't,
and on which the first sentence of a lecture, especially if it's contentious, does (as I hope I'm demonstrating by showing Chris' ideas, sentence by sentence, causing splurts in my brain). And I begin to think, I know where you're coming from but you don't know where I'm coming from... BUT Chris suddenly takes off with critical eloquence:

"In my experience it is a rare occasion when a paper is actually delivered to an audience which has access to the text in question before, during, or after the paper.

My italics...

"Any close textual reading which does get done in these situations almost invariably gets lost in the frame. Subsequently most question and answer periods seem to revolve around either issues not supported by the text and/or issues completely unrelated and dealing more with politics and or power of the personalities involved in the setting."

I'm not sure what "in the frame" means here,
why just "gets lost" doesn't end the sentence best.
But this is really good detailed criticism, and criticism of the best kind, because it starts by taking something undiscussed that has put many in an isolating rage, which the critic-champion can skillfully bring out in the open, and with a really good detailed narrated observation of what seems typical of the average critic's lack of interest in the reader: 'I don't want to persuade, if it involves work, I want to research and deliver and go home with an event notched up. I've spoken soberly, as if from the high ground of public service, about which I'm less concerned than I seem, and am really doing what I'm good at to too little point.'

But that doesn't sound unlike a lot of poets, who surge at one with their own high ground (of attachment to the deep things, the muse, deep feeling, real anger) and I leave thinking that's like that person I bump into when shopping who just holds forth and never listens or asks about me - which, as a cultural critic not just a poetry critic,
I see as endemic in this phase of consumer capitalism, a real problem of current social and inter-personal relations....
I don't want to hear a poet appearing to perhaps care about this inter-personal attitude while actually perpetuating it in performance. Similarly, cults and single issue pressure groups are a modern problem insofar as they urge you to go along with them but quell dissent or only partial affiliation. Lee Ann Brown's talk, from Marjorie's description, sounds like it maybe parodies that while enacting it while not really moving it on?

My point is (in conclusion!) that Chris is a critic, and a good one, with great argumentative skills but some reactionary reductionism. His well-observed example could as easily have been used in a (more accomodating, only initially snubbing) case made for better criticism, good criticism.

Given the culture and poetry we have,
we need good criticism. Marjorie has identified a big problem, a big lack, and it's false healing (denial!) to say "hey, we don't have a problem, we don't need this thing we can't have". My question is, would critics, any more than poets, have been ready for questions afterwards? You can make a conference rule that all papers must be backed up by xeroxes of work discussed, but not so easily alter the culture. Intellectual fire and moral urgency are needed to prompt people (a list as clever as this) to help change the culture.

Needed is a perspective of the importance of criticism and universities. Just because there is a lot of very bad indolent contemporary criticism (and university lit theory), doesn't mean we should be cynical about the possibility of criticism (heaven forbid that anyone should be so cynical about the many glass house abiding poets who squander the possibility of poetry). Marjorie is a rare example of good criticism; it seems amazing to me that some should attack her as a conservative guarding the rot she is trying to reform.

Ira Lightman

↑ Index

115. Christina Fairbank Chirot overlap
Fri 6 Sep 1996

Robert Grenier was All City (Minneapolis) Basketball Team, 1959.

He was also co-captain and captain, basketball and golf teams.

Michael Jordan--basketball, golf, baseball--would be the overlap of McGraw and Robert Grenier.

--dbc

↑ Index

116. Gwyn McVay
Re: overlap
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

plug for alma mater: Theodore Roethke was coach of the tennis team at Penn State--

Gwyn

↑ Index

117. Michael Boughn
Re: Marjorie & the poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> It seems to me that Marjorie Perloff's example critique of the unnamed Irish poet is a perfect example of the kind of contemplative and intelligent culture of comments we need.

A longish note I posted this morning relevant to this seems to have gotten bush-whacked somewhere in e-space (a critical plot?). Perhaps it will come limping in later, in which case this will be redundant, but what the hell, that's never stopped me before.

I wasn't at the event that prompted Professor Perloff's initial post. That said, my sense is that the problem arose as a kind of discharge from the contact of two disonant cultures. Prof. Perloff obviously (according to what she's written here) showed up meaning business. The poets (or some of them) showed up for poetry mystery initiation rituals including singing ditties to old Methodist tunes and making outrageous statements about Irish poetry. It's not for others, who are not taking part in these rituals, to judge them. These cultures as they are revealed in Prof. Perloff's comments seem incommensurable to me, and my initial point, restated, was simply why does everybody have to mean Prof. Perloff's business?

Hooo hooo.

Mike

[redacted]

Oh yeah, one final point from my bushwhacked post. With all due respect to Prof. Perloff, many people think that all this social construction business is just another cult among the School(wo)men, soon to go the way of other cults like the Freud cult, but certainly with no more claim to "reality" or "truth" than my encounters with the muse. Those who disparage the muse are those s/he hasn't deigned to visit.

↑ Index

118. Michael Boughn
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> Did I suggest that? They are histories apart, but cross-implicated nonetheless. I have no particular stake in arguing against genre, and in fact I don't think I've ever done so. What I object to is the pairing of poetry and criticism in primary/secondary terms.

My point is that the relationship is asymmetrical. How are you going to write a book about a poem until the poem gets writ? Is that what you mean by "primary/secondary"?

> I wonder -- honestly -- whether it's possible to be concerned "strictly with poetry." The history of poetry is littered with failed attempts to articulate such a concern. But that's another thread, and I've already pissed too many people off in this one.

Well, David, this may be one of those critical issues where it's theoretically impossible, but thousands of people are doing it anyway. They haven't heard, I guess.

And who said anything about being pissed off? This is fun, no?

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

119. Michael Boughn
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

damon writes:

> But more to the point, haven't we learned anything from the last 30 years of theory? do we really still have to fetishize "actual texts"

Personally, they're my favorite, next to rubber clothing and satin shoes with spike heels!

Kinkily,
Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

120. henry g
Re: overlap
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Fri, 6 Sep 1996 13:21:25 -0400 Gwyn McVay said:
>plug for alma mater: Theodore Roethke was coach of the tennis team at >Penn State--

tennis...at Penn... I think there's an overlap there. If you take down the net. -Robert Frost

↑ Index

121. maria damon
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

  Sorry, it's just poetry. Theory
> might enrich vocabulary but 30 yrs of it won't teach poetry anything.
> - Henry Gould

theory and poetry, it seems to me, are closer to each other than either is to "criticism," meant in the old-fashioned sense of "secondary commentary on a text." it's obvious that imaginative writing, to the extent that such a thing can be separated from other discourses, anticipates by many decades the discourse of commentary. i think i'll retire from this thread after reiterating that the point, to me, is to understand the "criticism/poetry" binary as illusory. bests, maria d

↑ Index

122. henry g
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Fri, 6 Sep 1996 12:48:25 -0500 maria damon said:
> Sorry, it's just poetry. Theory
>> might enrich vocabulary but 30 yrs of it won't teach poetry anything.
>> - Henry Gould
>
>theory and poetry, it seems to me, are closer to each other than either is to >"criticism," meant in the old-fashioned sense of "secondary commentary on a >text." it's obvious that imaginative writing, to the extent that such a thing >can be separated from other discourses, anticipates by many decades the >discourse of commentary. i think i'll retire from this thread after >reiterating

>that the point, to me, is to understand the "criticism/poetry" binary as >illusory. bests, maria d

Wallace Stevens would probably agee with you. They'll figure it all out someday, at the Sorbonne. - Henri le Goulash

↑ Index

123. maria damon
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> damon writes:
>
> > But more to the point, haven't we learned anything from the last 30 > > years of theory? do we really still have to fetishize "actual texts"
>
> Personally, they're my favorite, next to rubber clothing and satin > shoes with spike heels!
>
> Kinkily,
> Mike
> [redacted]

i must admit, l wear milton to excess, especially at odd hours and with odd acquaintances...md

↑ Index

124. David Kellogg
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> David Kellogg said,
> We all take our societies one slice at a time. Judging > by this example, your slice seems a bit sour. De gustibus.
>
> It seems naive to me to say that poetry needs criticism. Poetry has > existed long before criticism reared its head and will exist long after > criticism has been defunded.

I honestly don't understand what it means to talk about poetry and criticism in terms this general. The poetry BC (Before Criticism) is not the same as the poetry AC.

> Poetry is enhanced by criticism and serious poetry engages criticism, among other things.

Some poetry is, some serious poetry is, yes.

> On the other hand criticism NEEDS poetry else it wouldn't exist.
> And of the poets I know and work with 99.9% would feel no phantom limb pain if criticism were excised from the body. But they would sorely lack for a valuable and, when done well, beautiful resource.

That's not my point. The post in which I made the phantom pain comparison had nothing to say about individual poets, but a lot to say about the social body of contemporary poetry. Someone else (I forget who now) has complained that such concerns are only about the business of poetry, not poetry as such. Since in my view there is no outside-the-social, I'm skeptical of such distinctions. But hey, that's why this is a fun list. And as Joe Amato nicely pointed out, the folks on this list who have taken this position are quite committed to poetry and are not interested in debasing it.

> What you, David Kellogg, say about poetry/critics need for each other may be true in certain segments of the poetry community but to extend that beyond certain segments seems problematic. I imagine that a great number of the poets presented in Bob Holman's recent film work do not engage criticism in a very serious fashion & I doubt very seriously any of them would be damaged by its (criticisms) absence.

The PBS station near us, damn them, didn't carry the USOP, so I can't comment yet specifically on that. But this discussion seems to be turning into a Jurrasic-Park-like "what if" scenario, or, better, a critical "rapture" fantasy (to dig out a term from premillenial fundamentalist Xianity). What if -- poof! -- there were no critics tomorrow? Obviously unanswerable and silly. -- "First, let's kill all the critics." Your point about the USOP poets is historically specific, and that's one reason I take it seriously. But my point was always social, never individual. And if the film itself can be seen as an act akin to criticism, then that example becomes complex indeed, no?

I also want to second Maria's skepticism about the term "criticism," since that's not quite what I do in my "critical" work, and there's a handmaid quality built into the word.

↑ Index

125. filch
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

David Kellogg said,
>We all take our societies one slice at a time. Judging >by this example, your slice seems a bit sour. De gustibus.

It seems naive to me to say that poetry needs criticism. Poetry has existed long before criticism reared its head and will exist long after criticism has been defunded.

Poetry is enhanced by criticism and serious poetry engages criticism, among other things.

On the other hand criticism NEEDS poetry else it wouldn't exist.

And of the poets I know and work with 99.9% would feel no phantom limb pain if criticism were excised from the body. But they would sorely lack for a valuable and, when done well, beautiful resource.

What you, David Kellogg, say about poetry/critics need for each other may be true in certain segments of the poetry community but to extend that beyond certain segments seems problematic. I imagine that a great number of the poets presented in Bob Holman's recent film work do not engage criticism in a very serious fashion & I doubt very seriously any of them would be damaged by its (criticisms) absence.

It may be true that the "Muse" as referenced before in this thread is a little "primitive" (in some minds) but no matter how hard the modern experimental writer/critic tries the "Muse" cannot be taken out of any equation involving poetry.

The existance of the muse does not preclude context or society or anything else no matter how touchingly silly it may sound.

cf

↑ Index

126. Jordan Davis
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Fri 6 Sep 1996

okay, poetry v criticism no binary. but what's criticism? where does it exist? at conferences? in journals? in popular magazines, newspapers, on websites, in listservs, at readings, on the phone, at the bar, in the park, on the softball field?

There are still some poets who are amused by the idea of conferences, and bless them. Who are suspicious, but who will listen and smile when you tell them about what happened. Jordan

PS Don't invoke Frost unless you really want to talk about him, in which case, evvybody turn to 'New Hampshire' and let's talk-- otherwise you're cheap shooting, and that's no go in an election year, unless you're a politician (there's a binary)

↑ Index

127. Rachel Loden
Re: the object
Fri 6 Sep 1996

George Bowering wrote:

> But Ms Loden said that if i wanted to I could lend the object to Herb Levy, and I had a heck of a time getting it away from him, and then a worse time getting it through customs. Herb said, by the way, that he was disappointed, because he had expected it to change his life. He said that he can get more from a Lyle Lovett CD.

I don't know what George and Herb did with this thing (and please don't tell me, guys), but, as they say in Paris, the song is not the same. Couldn't you two at least have sprung for a new set of batteries?

Rachel

↑ Index

128. Jordan Davis
the ghettoization of poetry
Fri 6 Sep 1996

Maria, I had a feeling you might fetishize syntax...

____

the subject line up above is the title of Richard Howard's keynote address to PEN at the ceremony for their translation award (given to Guy Davenport for _7 Greeks_). In that talk he argues that National Poetry Month is the worst thing to happen to poetry in years, and that we must make poetry a secret again (he plays on _secretion_) or risk the loss of 'our heritage.' The title caught my attention, especially in relation to Bob Perelman's book _The Marginalization of Poetry_. Since the apparent subtext of the New Hampshire conference was the dismantling of certain assumptions about power (and irony) in what for lack of jargon I'll call the alternative/academic poetry-in-English community, can anyone speak to this problematic equation of poetry and outside? Maria? J

↑ Index

129. Joe Amato
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

henry, i guess i'm not being my [cough] usual cogent self: what i'm saying---and if it's fashionable to say so this is in part b/c it's accurate---is that there are differences in institutional power, and that these explain different apprehensions of the relationship between "poetry," "criticism," "poets," "critics," etc... and in fact---and this is perhaps where we disagree---that for me to make this claim is contra the claim that there are "essential differences" between these categories (which of course are rubrics under which many of us "live") that are not a function of such apprehensions, so described... ergo, as before, institutional power does not resolve to blah blah blah...

best,

joe

↑ Index

130. Rachel Loden
confidential to Mark Wallace
Fri 6 Sep 1996

Mark Wallace wrote:

> Anyone on the list who misunderstands the nature of this communication, and the reason why it must take place in a forum claiming to have some relevance to the practice of poetry, is directed to take their concerns to the CIA, who I must say, in all fairness, are experts at policing, despite the dubious goals of the current cloning project.
>
> BEWARE ALL CLONES!

Mark, as I said to you before, please seek help as soon as possible. Your psychosis is advancing by leaps and bounds and I don't want to hear that you turned up on the "raped by aliens" episode of _Geraldo_.

Rachel

↑ Index

131. henry g
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

On Fri, 6 Sep 1996 13:53:22 -0500 Joe Amato said: >henry, i guess i'm not being my [cough] usual cogent self: what i'm >saying---and if it's fashionable to say so this is in part b/c it's >accurate---is that there are differences in institutional power, and that >these explain different apprehensions of the relationship between "poetry," >"criticism," "poets," "critics," etc... and in fact---and this is perhaps >where we disagree---that for me to make this claim is contra the claim that >there are "essential differences" between these categories (which of course >are rubrics under which many of us "live") that are not a function of >such apprehensions, so described... ergo, as before, institutional power >does not resolve to blah blah blah...

Maybe this ought to be backchanneled! I can't figure out what you're saying! But let me try to respond anyhow! Are you saying that the understanding of what poetry & criticism are is relative - and it's based on different levels of institutional power? It's a kind of sociological reading? I'm not going to argue with its "essential relativity" or non-rel. "Pragmatically" speaking, my own view is that poetry & criticism differ in essence. What I am NOT saying (as I tried to emphasize in previous post) is that POETS & CRITICS are essentially different or necessarily antagonistic. So: if you say - poetry & criticism are not essentially different - then we disagree. But: if you're saying - there's no criteria to judge this, it's all a question of power - then we're talking past each other. It's a different debate. - Henry

↑ Index

132. Carnography
Both critic and poet, both reader and writer
Fri 6 Sep 1996

The problem would seem to be one of categorization, yet people seem to be arguing over hierarchical significance. This is utterly predictable and understandable: Ask a popular/populist novelist what s/he thinks about difficult prose and you're likely to hear: "There's a lot more writing than reading in that book" (direct quote from Katherine Dunne). Ask a certain (former) Nyorican poet what s/he thinks of Jerome Rothenberg and you're likely to be told that poetry without narrative is elitist poetry--an ironic reversal, since much eighties postmodern fiction claimed to be free of the constraints of traditional narrative for political reasons (Acker, for example).

Fundamentally, these people are defending prejudice as praxis: a certain intolerance is sometimes necessary to a practicing writer. Also, writers are so ignored in America, and writing is such a solitary activity, that there is always an atavistic struggle to assert which kind of writing is most deserving of attention.

Still, I find it amazing that people who are peculiarly trained to understand one another's work would arm-wrestle in the name of a disinterested public.

In this discussion group, people often turn away from questions that frame the aesthetic context. But here it is extremely pertinent: There is a point at which a prejudice toward a particular aesthetic is not only harmless but necessary to the work of a practicig writer. Since we are all writers and readers by virtue of our being in this (written) discussion group, I will speak only of readers who are also writers.

If the wReider listens repeatedly to Machaut in a house full of grotesquely ornate furniture, and associates that environment with pleasure, s/he might seek out writing that has an intricate, ornate and bristling texture. In that case, s/he would be more likely to read Alabaster and Derrida than Whitman and Holman. If the wReider grew up hearing and creating fantastic stories, and associates that activity with pleasure, then s/he might ignore criticism, mistrust poetry, and seek out strong narrative writers like Amado and O'Connor.

In that context--in that petrii dish of culturally programmed aesthetic fetishism--what is the use of arguing against privilege or for artistic pre-eminence?

All the best,

Rob Hardin

PS: The poet who writes about criticism--even one whose motive is to categorize critics as minor artistic entities--has in that moment become a critic. Thus, on this poetry list, we are all critics--so long as we discuss the significance of criticism.

"Ticks and tones might shake my throne,
 But frames will never shirt me."

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

133. Romana Christina Huk
Assembling Alternatives
Fri 6 Sep 1996

I'm just back on the line, recovering from the event here last weekend and catching up with the chat about it and "poets and critics." I'm probably just tired but I find all of this rather disheartening and surprising, especially Marjorie's almost entirely negative take on the conference. I want to offer a few simple points just to deflate the ballooning implications of the event's planning that have become the topic of conversation. First off, I confess that it was my own bad organization and lack of experience in running conferences that resulted in lack of discussion time; if you look at the schedule again, you'll see that at least one quarter of the time for each session should have been devoted to talk, but since virtually no session started on time(something I should have foreseen), talk became abbreviated. I want to stress, however, that in only one case did this result in no time whatsoever; there WAS time for questions about Philip Mead's fine paper, for example--it just got overtaken by questions directed at Bob Perelman.

Secondly, the program was full of bios and pics of the poets because it was made with the evening audience in mind, not the conference audience. (I think I would have felt pretty silly presenting such a thing to those of us who already know most of these people.) I can see that Marjorie may not have realized this because fewer "members of the public" showed up than I had hoped; if they had, the need for these brochures might have been more apparent. I had no time to make introductions, given the long list of readers each night; it was key that the uninitiated had some sketches of the poets on stage.

These are boring points to make, but I'm trying to show you that in many cases what you're reading as fair or foul intention are the effects of my own poor planning and/or communication. Bigger issues involve the amount of time allowed poets vs. critics, and I must say that the problem never crossed my mind. I thought: all day to the conference (with an hour and a half for afternoon readings) and all night to the readings. What would have been more fair? Most of the poets coming to the conference felt that they needed to read as well as give papers, so I accommodated them to the extent that I could, never even thinking this might be a problem for the critics. The fact was that I had less response from people wishing to give papers than I had hoped, even though the "call" was as widespread as I could manage to make it. Those I "invited" were simply the people whose addresses I had; I asked that information be passed on. And I took papers all the way up until the week before the conference. Go figure.

I won't go on with this. I would have hoped that the conversation would have been about the differences we heard and saw -- some of them illustrative of writers working at some distance from our conversations on poetics and therefore a bit uncomfortable about coming together as we did. So at times the papers didn't satisfy those who like Marjorie are at a different edge of talk; I was in a less demanding way pleased that the Irish poet whose been batted about a bit here left saying that he had a lot to read, and would do so with pleasure.

That was the point of my doing this.

We should talk now about what makes all of these people "alternative" or no -- talk with them, too. I'm sorry that this event didn't plan well enough that crucial time; I hope someone else does this again soon -- does it better.

Thanks to all who came.

Romana Huk

↑ Index

134. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Both
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

re: both

(Not to be confused with Paul Metcalf's book by that name--say Poe and (John Wilkes) Booth at the same time: Both!)

I just learned two things at that college, Mr. Ford, that was ever of any use to me . . . the other was a definition I got out the agronomy books, and I reckon it was even more important to me than the first. It did more to revise my thinking , if I'd really done any thinking up until that time. Before that I'd seen the everything in black and white, good and bad. But after I was set straight I saw that the name you put to a thing depended on where you stood and where it stood. And . . . and here's the definition, right out of the agronomy books: "A weed is a plant out place." I find a hollyhock in my cornfield, and it's a weed. I find it in my yard, and it's a flower."

--Jim Thompson, The Killer Inside Me

--dbc

↑ Index

135. Gabrielle Welford
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

Hey maria, you have so published! :-) gab.

↑ Index

136. Gary Roberts
poetry and criticism
Fri 6 Sep 1996

As Rene Char put it: There is no pure seat.

This genre struggle (I am aware that here I privilege textual practice over community practice) also seems to be about the ritual use of names. Critical play/work (conference, essay, listserve, poem...) requires forms of identification and procedes by the exchange of these tokens, whereas poetic play/work does not need such an exchange. Acts of criticism such as quotation and allusion at some point involve nominal references which can no longer be deferred. A poetic practice such as the use of a diction need not necessarily involve names, though it can, nor need a poetic use of names be critical. I suppose I cannot imagine a criticism without provided or implied names, though I can imagine such a poetry. And, of course, I can imagine a critical poetry either with or without names. Gary R

↑ Index

137. Alan Golding
UNH Again
Fri 6 Sep 1996

Alan Golding
Prof. of English, Univ. of Louisville
[redacted]; [redacted]

The possibility that Mike Boughn recently posted to the list of Alan Golding conceivably being wrong about something strikes me as most odd. The two terms--"Golding" and "wrong"--seem directly contradictory.

"But seriously, folks . . ."

Perhaps I am just wrong. It's happened plenty of times before. But, Mike, please don't assume it based on Marjorie's half-sentence paraphrase of my talk at the UNH Conference. (Marjorie's comment was accurate enough in terms of the general field within which I moved [scrabbled?], but didn't address my argument, such as it was, and I don't think it was her point / purpose to do so.) Anyway, my talk was more in the spirit of your Steiner quotation than not, and I spent some time talking about how numerous "linguistically innovative" poets seem to hold closer to some version of the Steiner position than they are often stereotyped as doing. But like MD,I'm somewhat uncomfortable with Steiner's rhetoric--in particular, the rhetoric of disease ("symptom," "parasite") and what strikes me as an untenable opposition between "immediacy" and "mediation," as if it were somehow possible to choose between the two. In my talk, I tried to explore some possible middle ground between the poles of "poet" and "theorist" via some work I like that I see as genuinely generically ambiguous (anti-generic? post-generic?)--Bob Perelman's "The Marginalization of Poetry." I'm trying to work through what I find some intriguing (and moving) moments of self-division in Perelman (and in a longer version, Bernstein), where they end up privileging poetry (which, despite being a critic, I actually have no problem with) in texts that seem to argue against that privileging. And I'm trying to think about to what extent differences between poetry and theory are institutional rather than essential. To me, none of this is quite as simple as the Steiner quotation suggests (though I'll make no inferences from that to Steiner's work generally, since I barely know it). I focused on the institutional in my talk precisely because institutional theorizing (which I distinguished explicitly from the many forms of theorizing or speculative thinking possible) and criticism has not followed through either on its own pomo. premises or on the possibilities offered it by poetry. Poet-theorists have done so; writers whom one would identify mainly as academic theorists and critics (like me) have not. I was interested in discussing that continued condition of what Charles B. calls "Frame Lock," and in speculating how texts like Perelman's might help break the deadlock that--to judge from the current discussion--"we" still live within. But c'mon, Mike: you're a part of these institutional networks too, but hardly a parasite, even if that particular aside bugged me some. I'm happy to send you (or anyone) the paper--your feedback is always helpful.

On the conference itself, not much to add to what others have said. No, I didn't feel like a second-class citizen; Marjorie has some understandable reasons for feeling that way, based on some misunderstanding / miscommunication about the terms of her own participation (wd. you agree, M.?) (Whether one complaint counts as "the critics going bonkers," I'm not sure.) I had a great time, and felt no poet-critic divide myself--though maybe I'm not representative 'cause I consider many of the folks there my friends, and anyway, who knows what they said behind my back? Generally, the camaderie and sense of shared interests was very strong--though as someone else said, the Draconian scheduling left almost no chance for differences to be aired, talked through, etc. Critics and poets alike suffered from the exhausting and over-tight scheduling: truncated readings, truncated discussions, truncated everything (including sleep). And there were lousy readings and talks and good readings and talks and people disagreed as to what were the lousy ones and what were the good ones. No surprise there. A lot of the poets I'd heard many times before and pretty much knew what to expect and took great pleasure in getting it (sounds very consumerist, somehow)--mostly the Americans and Bromide and McCaffery. But among those I'd never heard or not heard much, my personal faves were the Anglo-Saxon-ly visceral Maggie O'Sullivan, the high-speed Tom Raworth, the even higher speed Miles Champion, the sharp-and-lyrical Rae Armantrout, the tone-hopping Lisa Robertson, the Great American Novelist Carla Harryman, ex-Horseman Paul Dutton, monologuiste extraordinaire Hazel Smith, and Apollo and Dionysos, Allen Fisher and cris cheek. Arguing AF's theories of narrative at 3:00 a.m. with these latter two, Tuma, and assorted Irish companions (including a bottle of Jameson's) was a positively Olsonian experience (all the way to the maleness of it, I guess . . .) Every critic should have something like it.

And yes, it should have been called Assembling White Alternatives. Is this some kind of social atavism? Not a single non-white person in sight at the conference, or at least in my sight. And I'm told there was only one at the New Formalism-fest earlier this summer. And we've already talked about Orono.

Nor was there much discussion or imagining of alternatives outside of the academic context in which the conversation took place. When there was, it came mostly from non-US participants, as you'd expect given that the relation of poetry to the academy is very different in England, Ireland, and even (I think--help me on this, listmates) Canada from what it is in the US. Put another way, the alternatives talked about tended to be aesthetic more often than social. (OK, who's going to be the first to jump on me for that distinction?)

Having offered some critique, I now feel ungrateful--I actually had a tremendous time, learned a ton, picked up loads of books I couldn't otherwise get, and generally am amazed simply at the fact Romana Huk could make this thing happen. She deserves endless kudos. And as an antidote to the frustration of discussions and questions cut short--here we are.

Well, that became much longer than I'd planned. Is anyone still awake?

Alan

↑ Index

138. George Bowering
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

> Mike Boughn wrote:
>
> David:
>
> George is right. I never suggested poetry could get along fine without criticism. That would be an oversimplification. They are in some sense wed. But let's not pretend they embody the same relation to language. Or that their interests are the same. That somehow they are interchangeable acts.

David kellog wrote:
>
>Did I suggest that? They are histories apart, but cross-implicated >nonetheless. I have no particular stake in arguing against genre, and >in fact I don't think I've ever done so. What I object to is the pairing >of poetry and criticism in primary/secondary terms.

Wait, wait! When did anyone in this thread say anything about genre? I took it for granted that we were discussing ALL kinds of poetry and ALL kinds of criticism. And help me, please: what is "arguing against genre"? Does that mean disallowing, say, comic verse? Or saying that comic verse is not separable from laments? Whew! Where is this all going?

George Bowering.
"I'm more than human,
2499 West 37th Ave., I'm a woman!"
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
--David Meltzer
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

139. George Bowering
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

are Bob Grenier and Tug McGraw friends? J

Naw, just good lovers.

George Bowering.
"I'm more than human,
2499 West 37th Ave., I'm a woman!"
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
--David Meltzer
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

140. George Bowering
Re: overlap
Fri 6 Sep 1996

Well, there are some who say that William carlos Williams was the greatest athlete ever at Penn.

George Bowering.

"I'm more than human,
I'm a woman!"

--David Meltzer

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

141. maria damon
Re: critics and poets
Fri 6 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
discussion group writes:
> Hey maria, you have so published! :-) gab.

its twu its twu, thanks to u & u & u...
thus blurring even further the distinctions...
bests, md

↑ Index

142. Joe Amato
Re: Assembling Alternatives
Fri 6 Sep 1996

romana, i feel it necessary to chime in here that this discussion has made me regret even more that i couldn't find a way to your conference... by my account, whether critical or celebratory, post-conference discussion of this sort pays homage to the event...

so hey, good work!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

143. maria damon
Re: abolishing tenure as we know it
Fri 6 Sep 1996

dear friends; the regents of my university voted yesterday to adopt changes to the tenure code that give them virtually unlimited license to fire at will. at this time i'd like to issue an SOS to anyone who knows of academic positions coming up at other institutions for which i might be a suitable candidate; i'm very serious about trying to find another job. i append the letter the faculty consultative committee has drafted, just to give you a flavor of the seriousness of the situation. in the meantime, we're trying to unionize, but there's a strong sense that unions are mean and confrontational (very unminnesotan, despite the state's history of progressive populism) so that's not a sure deal either. bests, maria d

From: Gary Engstrand <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 6 Sep 1996 17:53:38 CST
To: Multiple recipients of list UMN-FAC <[redacted]>
Subject: FCC Press release

>From Faculty Consultative Committee, University of Minnesota
September 6, 1996
Contact Prof. Victor Bloomfield ([redacted])

The Faculty Consultative Committee (FCC) of the University of Minnesota said today that the revisions to the University Tenure Code proposed at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Regents would, if adopted, destroy the University as a major research institution. A statement unanimously adopted by the FCC asserted:

The University of Minnesota's position as a leading research university has been crucial to the economic and social health of the State of Minnesota. The teaching, research, and outreach efforts of its faculty have generated billions of dollars of economic activity, attracted hundreds of millions of research dollars, created tens of thousands of jobs, and taught hundreds of thousands of Minnesota citizens.

Continued University contributions to the well-being of the State depend on our being able to continue to attract and retain the best and most creative faculty. Up to this time we have been able to hold our own, despite severe national competition and declining state funding, because of our strong reputation for educational excellence and academic freedom.

The tenure revision proposal under consideration by the Board of Regents undermines the commonly accepted principles of academic freedom. If adopted, it will quickly and inevitably destroy our reputation, our competitive position, and our ability to serve the citizens of Minnesota.

Contrary to the claims of the outside lawyers and consultants engaged by the Regents, the proposed tenure revisions are drastically outside the norms of Big 10 and other leading research universities. The revisions allow for virtually unlimited administrative arbitrariness in layoffs and salary reductions, and effectively demolish the protections to academic freedom afforded by tenure.

Academic freedom is of primary benefit not to professors, but to society. It allows faculty to do the novel research and develop the unconventional ideas that challenge current wisdom, improve our quality of life, and move civilization forward. Tenure, granted only after years of rigorous testing of probationary faculty, embodies the rules that protect academic freedom. Tenure does not protect faculty from sanctions (including removal) if they are seriously derelict in their duty. But it must protect them from arbitrary actions by vindictive or short-sighted administrators, or pressures from external interest groups.

The changes proposed by the Board of Regents would render such protection meaningless. No sensible prospective faculty member would choose to come to the University of Minnesota when its policies are so out of step with the rest of the nation's leading institutions. Many of our best faculty will choose to leave. And those who stay will hunker down, avoiding controversy and resisting necessary institutional change.

We do not doubt the sincerity of the Regents' "commitment to maintaining and supporting excellence at the University of Minnesota". However, the proposed changes to the tenure code will have just the opposite effect, severely damagingthe University and its ability to contribute to the State. We implore the Regents, in our shared concern and affection for this vital institution, to withdraw their proposed changes and work with the faculty and administration to develop a sounder, less destructive policy.

↑ Index

144. maria damon
Re: the ghettoization of poetry
Fri 6 Sep 1996

In message <v01530503ae5620a77c04@[166.84.199.56]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> Maria, I had a feeling you might fetishize syntax...

i don't get it...i've never purchased or borrowed a syntax or any other such object in my life. george bowering can attest to this.
>
> ____
>

> the subject line up above is the title of Richard Howard's keynote address > to PEN at the ceremony for their translation award (given to Guy Davenport > for _7 Greeks_). In that talk he argues that National Poetry Month is the > worst thing to happen to poetry in years, and that we must make poetry a > secret again (he plays on _secretion_) or risk the loss of 'our heritage.'
> The title caught my attention, especially in relation to Bob Perelman's > book _The Marginalization of Poetry_. Since the apparent subtext of the New > Hampshire conference was the dismantling of certain assumptions about power > (and irony) in what for lack of jargon I'll call the alternative/academic > poetry-in-English community, can anyone speak to this problematic equation > of poetry and outside? Maria? J an interesting, provocative phrase...personally i think the "feminization of poetry" is a bit more fitting, since poetry is cordoned off as both too "effete," "ineffectual" etc to be of use in the world, AND as too potentially subversive (cf Victor Jara's, Neruda's, etc, assassinations). this double-whammy resonates with ye olde virgin/whore dichotomy where chicks can't win for losing. at first glance, poetry is kept under surveillance like a Camille in an oxygen tank more than like a Mumia Abu-Jamal on death row, tho it's also true that most oppressions operate at multiple levels (i.e. a target group is simultaneously "wily" and "childishly naive"). i think the argument robert duncan articulates in both versions of "the homosexual society" can be seen in the predicament of poetry; poets' discourse often ghettoizes itself, through a defensive if understandable need for self-protection, as a response to majority insensitivity...these are off-the-cuff, undertheorized responses admittedly. any other takers?

ps i do think it important sometimes to argue that poetry is "ghettoized" --in order to increase funding for poets etc; it's also important to realize the ways in which poetic (anti)discourse does and/or does not interact with and partake of other discourses, so that no ghetto is an island...in fact the majority society is far more dependent on the functioning of that ghetto than its PR wd have one believe... xo,md

↑ Index

145. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

the bedfellows -- poets and critics (wrning - this is a poem)

Fri 6 Sep 1996

Auditron

Hissing and clicking pictures into the box
you touch, take your fingers rubbing your temples, carrying sweet oil to the keys

tapping quickly, lightly
The keys gather, heave into spasms, subside

I am in the box
you read, sucking me
though rubber lines

into your sleep, showers, into the song you hum cooking, into your quick looks stroking, pulling, holding pictures I feed into the box that holds me.

EMC
8/20/96

↑ Index

146. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

HELP!!! "humor institute"

Fri 6 Sep 1996

---

i saw the phrase "the humor institute" somewhere and it sparked me to write a poem but now...

i can't remember where i saw it and i need the source for proper attribution...!

can anyone help my failing memory? backchannel if you think best to [redacted]

e
THANKS!

↑ Index

147. Marjorie Perloff

Re: Assembling Alternatives

Sat 7 Sep 1996

Romana (and others)--I think you're absolutely right and I wasn't "totally negative" at all, just raising some key issues. You're right that the real subject was meant to be, should have been, what made some of these poetries "alternative."

But do you feel we really discussed how, why, where, when they were alternative?

What IS the difference between say, Paul Muldoon, Eavan Boland, Medh Megkukian (can't spell right?) and the Irish poets at the conference? This is not a rhetorical question--I would honestly like to know.

And where do US/ UK poetries come together, diverge, etc? I hope we keep that ball rolling.

Marjorie

↑ Index

148. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

m. boughn's satin shoes with high heels

Sat 7 Sep 1996

---

are these, perhaps, the unmentionable objects that have been dominating the hearts and minds of messr.'s and mesdm.'s bowering, loden, and wallace? perhaps someone might consider sharing this treat and putting a GIF of them up on a web site somewhere, unless there are irreconcilable legal complications...

e

↑ Index

149. Ken Edwards

Assembling Alternatives

Sat 7 Sep 1996

I sincerely hope the "critics v poets" thread is petering out now. It's a pity that, following Marjorie Perloff's initial post, this is the thread that has been pursued most energetically since the conference.

Those who were fortunate enough to be there will know, and those who weren't should be made aware, that this was NOT an issue there.

One of the most urgent questions Assembling Alternatives posed for me was: What is the relationship between the different communities writing poetry in English in non-normative ways? Do we have a common politics of poetic form? Assertions about "American" hegemony are not necessarily going to move us on much further. But it is clear, for instance, there is a large body of Canadian work which is exciting and reaching new stages of development, with a strong presence by women. It is clear that the Irish avant-garde scene is small (the conference participants constituted just about the whole of it) but could usefully be included in the wider colloquy. It is also the case that the British scene is rich and well-established, but its exponents are only just beginning to be read across the Atlantic. And finally, to reiterate a point I made in a previous post, Philip Mead's paper pointed to parallel developments in Australia, and I for one would certainly like to know more about "innovative" writing there and in New Zealand.

Perhaps we should be working to get beyond these national categories now, and start learning more from each other. It may be one of the ways forward that Bob Perelman was urging us to consider in his "after 'language' what?" presentation. The question of distribution of texts is one practical difficulty to be addressed. But it seems to me that the Poetics list by its very nature provides the ideal forum for discussing these issues. Why don't we start doing it, instead of indulging in fruitless mutual sniping?

↑ Index

150. Ron Silliman
Methodist hymns and other protestant matters
Sat 7 Sep 1996

"Lee Ann Brown's paper consisted of having all of us sing Helen Adam's ballads to Methodist hymn tunes. It was a lot of fun. But now suppose an invited critic had done the exact same thing? I think there would have been lots of objection."

Actually, if it were Stephen Greenblatt at the MLA, it might come as a great breath of fresh air. But if it were Fred Jameson, it just might be seen as the 800 pound gorilla pissing to mark the edges of his territory (an image Greenblatt once used to describe his own project, actually). If Andrew Ross did it, people would check out his threads and see it as very post something. Ditto Avital Ronell. Dr. Sokol would then conduct a session in which we would sing the poems of Emily Dickinson to the tune of the Yellow Rose of Texas. And then write about it. But if a graduate student, particularly a female grad student, or a tenuously situated untenured person tried it, they would be toast.

Not having been to the conference in question -- having in fact not once seen even a single piece of literature on it (nor any other mention, save on this list), not even a call for Methodist hymns -- I'm intrigued at the debate. My distant take on the whole event initially was that this was a pretty typical academic affair. Other than maybe NYC, all the folks involved seem to have had some connection to a school -- even if might be something homegrown like Naropa.

So Marjorie's plahn (lookitup) is interesting on the face of it. Implicit (or not so implicit) in her comments is the idea that poets who don't "have anything to say" should shut up, or at least maintain a decorous silence. Critics (to create a mythic category that is at least as much a fictive construct as "poets") would know better than to speak w/o anything of value to contribute to the occasion.

Of course if this were really the case, most MLA conventions would consist of job interviews and little else. All those pointless papers in little hotel rooms would be lost forever.

Okay, I'm being snide, I admit it. I think that the compulsion to speak (which is the publish or perish (or worse yet, to disappear into that purgatory known as adjuncthood) impulse at its most basic) is every bit as totalitarian and mind-numbing as the "poets do it, they don't talk about it" anti-theoretical mandate that we have only in the past 20 years begun to recover from. I suspect that if for the next half century ALL academic conferences consisted ONLY of people singing Helen Adams to the tune of Methodist hymns we would just begin to balance things out a little bit. I want Vendler sitting in in every one of those sessions.

Of course, it gets more confusing if it's the poets telling poets that they have to "be critical" and give talks or whatever. That's at least as obnoxious.

But there are some deeper questions under all this--one is the territorialization of literature via the process of singing ABOUT, rather than just singing AS SUCH. When poets don't sing about their work and that of others, they cede the territory (in the most literal sense) to others who have no particular ground for their insights other than as a career strategy. The number of critics who actually write something of value about the subject of contemporary literature is considerably fewer than the number of words in this paragraph. And for every Marjorie Perloff, there are hundreds if not thousands of others singing the tune of tenure and calling it discourse.

When you look at what Marjorie has contributed versus, say, the work of others of roughly the same generation (Altieri, say, whom I think may be on this list, or Von Hallberg), it seems clear enough to me that it is only the most exceptional of critics who ever contributes anything beyond mere background chatter that ultimately has no impact whatsoever or only so indirectly (Von H, for example, has provoked some good pieces by Jed Rasula, Jerry McGann and others, and clearly influenced Alan Golding who, like Marjorie, is one of those very rare critics--the absolute number has to be less than two dozen--who also knows how to read) as to be irrelevant within 3 months of publication. We can't take Marjorie Perloff to be the "baseline" of what critical writing means, because it places the bar far too high for most practitioners.

At least Lee Ann Brown offers us a tune through which to view Helen Adams' work. In fact, I think looking at one writer's prosody through another prosodic system makes a lot of sense as a critical project.* And doing this directly might lead to far greater insight than doing it through a more indirect discursive method. It might actually change how somebody someday writes something. Which, so far as I can tell, is the only test of criticism that counts.

hummin' along,
Ron Silliman
[redacted]

*For example, if you were to sing the Maximus poems in a rap format, whose work would it be? Or Lee Ann Brown--can you read her work to the sound of ZZ Top? I can imagine that Mr. Bowering and Ms. Loden might have much to say about such possibilities and others [[What does it mean that so many of Ted Berrigan's records were by Arthur Godfrey??]] if only they would get themselves out from under the sheets in that virtual motel room....

↑ Index

151. Kevin Killian
Re: uncle
Sat 7 Sep 1996

Hi this is Adam DeGraff, author of Uncle. I'm pleased that Bill has payed consideration to my book. If anyone would like a copy then send me four bucks and I'll send one out to you. Right now I'm over at Kevin Killian's house using his account, but here's my address,

Adam DeGraff
530 Page #2
San Francisco, CA 80525

↑ Index

152. Joel Kuszai
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Sat 7 Sep 1996

I've not logged in a couple days--but have been watching the clouds circle in from the east and wanted to comment on something Marjorie Perloff said in her recent post. Personally I think the poet-critics debate is kind of silly, yet I wonder if there aren't threads of things that need to be discussed that aren't being addressed.

On Thu, 5 Sep 1996, Marjorie Perloff wrote:

> ... why did all the poets give critical papers? Do the poets have a special corner on criticism? Many were sophomoric, self-indulgent, and just plain empty. I come back to my original question: who gets to speak and why?

This is an issue I've been wondering about for some time. Granted, my experience with conferences has been extremely limited to conferences held since the rise of G2+ with the conference organized by Juliana Spahr now more than 3.5

years ago, THE NEW COAST. And I'm not thinking of, say, conferences such as the one Jonathan Monroe organized last year at Cornell, which was for the most part mostly an academic conference (though poets did speak there, as both critics and poets). But rather, I am thinking of the Rob Fitterman sponsored NYC Poetry Talks, New Coast, etc. Unfortunately, I was not able to attend the conf. at New Hampshire, and sorely wish that I had been able to afford it. I made the commitment to attend the Maine 50s conf., and give a paper there (something I hope to do more and more). The issue for me isn't one of poets-vs.-critics, which seems like a replay of an issue as old as poetry itself, but rather something else. And here it is (sorry for the long disclaimer). Why are poets required, asked, invited--and now I would say, "compelled" to speak at all? Perhaps there is a historical reason for this, or a structural one. At New York, the presence of grad students from Brown, Buffalo, and elsewhere explains why the critical and theoretical discourse may have such a cultural cache. In fact, the poets of this orbit may be inclined to have theoretical work to do, axes to grind, or otherwise a need to involve and invest in such discouses. But is that something that everyone (even of this group) shares? I'm not suggesting that poets not speak at conferences, or not be theoretical--actually the opposite. But Marjorie's description of Lee Ann's performative talk is something I've seen before. What happens is that poets are invited to speak/ AND read, rather than, say, being invited to propose a topic to be discussed on a panel. The same is true of Maine, which should, in my mind, have been juried a little. After that one, I personally felt ripped off by the piss-poor quality of some of the papers. (and not all of them by poets). The idea that all poets should be theorists (of their own work, at least) or that they make discriminating intellectual decisions about the value of poetry they like or dislike--this is a great idea, a great theory. But the reality is that poets get up there, without a handle on the hip vocabulary they know they need to use. The result is the "performative" (which is often masked by a vapid refusal to engage the audience through "disruptive" or "creative" language practices). This is all fine, on the one hand. And we know how to address such material, and it really works a lot of the time. But on the other, the point of having a panel discussion is reduced to something less than surfing the net.

Why do organizers of conferences feel that every poet needs to make a speech?

Why aren't such conferences juried the way that real academic conferences are (or should be)? The case with Maine being for me a lesson learned.

↑ Index

153. Kevin Killian
Re: uncle
Sat 7 Sep 1996

> Hi this is Adam DeGraff, author of Uncle. I'm pleased that Bill has payed consideration to my book. If anyone would like a copy then send me four bucks and I'll send one out to you. Right now I'm over at Kevin Killian's house using his account, but here's my address,
>
> Adam DeGraff
> 530 Page #2
> San Francisco, CA 80525

This is Dodie--the above is not Adam's zip code, at least not in this incarnation. His real zip code is: 94117.

↑ Index

154. Kevin Killian
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Sat 7 Sep 1996

At 8:15 AM 9/7/96, Joel Kuszai wrote:
>Why are >poets required, asked, invited--and now I would say, "compelled" to speak >at all? Perhaps there is a historical reason for this, or a structural >one. At New York, the presence of grad students from Brown, Buffalo, and >elsewhere explains why the critical and theoretical discourse may have >such a cultural cache. In fact, the poets of this orbit may be inclined to >have theoretical work to do, axes to grind, or otherwise a need to involve >and invest in such discouses. But is that something that everyone (even of >this group) shares?

This is Dodie, and yes, Joel, I think you're pointing in an important direction. Last night was the SF Art Institute's faculty cocktail party (it was hard to believe even when I was there that I was at such an event), and I got a ride home from another visiting faculty member, a local photographer whose work evidences a fine intelligence, each photo evoking history, politics, emotion and the materiality of the photographic processes involved. So, we were discussing our classes and our students, and I started talking about art/writing that came out of a theoretical basis. He denied that his work had a theoretical basis. When I countered with, look at all the stuff that you have drawn on in making your work, he replied that his work was conceptual--not theoretical. At first I thought: we're just playing around with vocabulary here. But, I wonder. Perhaps "conceptual" would be a useful model, as a writer, to adopt--as a way of being "smart" without having to walk around spouting abstractions like a little professor. And yes I am aware that many Conceptual Artists are fountains of spouting theory--theory which has had more of an impact on my writing than poetic theory--because it always seems to point back to the world. When I hear the word conceptual (as opposed to theoretical) I get more of a sense of a rationale that is organic to the work, growing from inside rather than pasted onto it.

Dodie

↑ Index

155. Loss Glazier

Assembling

Sat 7 Sep 1996

What I think would be interesting (and I know some of the participants are just recovering from the ardors of their return journey and have for that reason not yet contributed) - aside from the thread that evolved and expanding from Romana's thoughts - would be to hear more about/from the poets who were there, their work as performed or in general, about/from the critics who gave papers and what the papers given were about. That is, talk about what we saw or what we might've missed (for those who couldn't go).

I fear of course the way the trend is going (the conference -> an issue related to but at a remove from the conference), the discussion will next evolve towards "the phenomenon of tangential discussions on listservs" (the conference -> an issue related to but at a remove from the conference -> how listservs discuss tangential issue).

Simply put, it would be great to hear more about the work presented at Assembling!

I'd also like to think about what alternatives if any might be assembled from the fact of this gathering. I also think that if there was a shortage of time for discussion while we were all together, now is the time that specific questions CAN be brought up.

↑ Index

156. Bill Luoma

uncle

Sat 7 Sep 1996

---

an SF poet named Adam DeGraff sent me a chpbk with blue type that he write. a series of "journal" poems to his new nephew Dante giving him hints about how to live.

this poem has meaning for the current blithering about poets and critics. it's called may 24th:

Look, first of all, if you're trying to inherit the earth, then you're probably not all that meek to begin with.
Secondly, owning a planet would only be fun for a little while, but then, like everything else in your closet, would soon go out of style. And third, imagine the liability, the outlandish cost of utilities. Who needs the responsibility? No, much better to take the world by force, thus ensuring failure. Then, of course, you're safe. It's no secret failure is foolproof.

↑ Index

157. Burt Kimmelman
Re: abolishing tenure as we know it
Sat 7 Sep 1996

Maria et al.,

It's notable that tenure is under attack at schools where the AAUP is not. In my view, tenure is a necessary evil. At my school, where there is a good affiliate of AAUP, and where there is a decent relationship with the administration, nevertheless a recent job ad was for "temporary tenure track" positions. go and figure. it turned out to be a clerical error. but was it?

God save us from the MBAs of this world.

Burt

↑ Index

158. David Kellogg
Re: critics and poets
Sat 7 Sep 1996

George Bowering wrote:

> Whew! Where is this all going?

Damned if I know. Meanwhile it's muddy as hell outside and nobody I know here has power at home. (Duke, from where I write, has its own generator.) I'm going to go try to find some ice; clearly I intervened in the middle of a discussion that was going on fine without me and will continue to do so.
~~~
~~~

Writing Program [redacted] Duke University FAX [redacted]

There is no mantle
and it does not descend.

-- Thomas Kinsella

↑ Index

159. Pierre Joris

[Fwd: Did you know that in.....]

Sat 7 Sep 1996

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

some light fare for saturday afternoon, coming, of all places from the "avant-garde" list... enjoy, Pierre for id UAA13921; Sat, 7 Sep 1996 20:22:37 +0200 for <[redacted]> id UAA05868; Sat, 7 Sep 1996 20:08:19 +0200 Date: Sat, 7 Sep 1996 20:29:06 +0100

To: [redacted]
From: [redacted] (NECHVATAL Joseph)
Subject: Did you know that in.....

> Alabama
> It is illegal for a driver to be blindfolded while operating a vehicle.*
>
> California
> Community leaders passed an ordinance that makes it illegal for anyone to try to stop a child from playfully jumping over puddles of water.*
>
> Connecticut
> You can be stopped by the police for biking over 65 miles per hour.*
> You are not allowed to walk across a street on your hands.*
>
> Florida
> Women may be fined for falling asleep under a hair dryer, as can the salon owner.*
> A special law prohibits unmarried women from parachuting on Sunday or they risk arrest, fine, and/or jailing.*

If an elephant is left tied to a parking meter, the parking fee has to be paid just as it would for a vehicle.*
It is illegal to sing in a public place while attired in a swimsuit.*
Men may not be seen publicly in any kind of strapless gown.*

Illinois
It is illegal for anyone to give lighted cigars to dogs, cats, and other domesticated animals kept as pets.*

Indiana
Bathing is prohibited during the winter.*
Citizens are not allowed to attend a movie house or theater nor ride in a public streetcar within four hours after eating garlic.*

Iowa
Kisses may last for as much as, but no more than, five minutes.*

Kentucky
By law, anyone who has been drinking is "sober" until he or she "cannot hold onto the ground."*
It is illegal to transport an ice cream cone in your pocket.*

Louisiana
It is illegal to rob a bank and then shoot at the bank teller with a water pistol.*
Biting someone with your natural teeth is "simple assault," while biting someone with your false teeth is "aggravated assault."*

Massachusetts
Mourners at a wake may not eat more than three sandwiches.*
Snoring is prohibited unless all bedroom windows are closed and securely locked.*
An old ordinance declares goatees illegal unless you first pay a special license fee for the privilege of wearing one in public.*
Taxi drivers are prohibited from making love in the front seat of their taxi during their shifts.*

Nebraska
A parent can be arrested if her/his child cannot hold back a burp during a church service.*

New Mexico
Females are strictly forbidden to appear unshaven in public.*

New York
A fine of $25 can be levied for flirting. This old law specifically prohibits men from turning around on any city street and looking "at a woman in that way." A second conviction for a crime of this magnitude calls for the violating male to be forced to wear a "pair of horse-blinders" wherever and whenever he goes outside for a stroll.*

North Dakota
Beer and pretzels can't be served at the same time in any bar or restaurant.*

Ohio
Women are prohibited from wearing patent leather shoes in public.*

Oklahoma
Violators can be fined, arrested, or jailed for making ugly faces at a dog.*
Females are forbidden from doing their own hair without being licensed by the state.*
Dogs must have a permit signed by the mayor in order to congregate in groups of three or more on private property.*

Pennsylvania
A special cleaning ordinance bans homemakers from hiding dirt and dust under a rug in a dwelling.*
No man may purchase alcohol without written consent from his wife.*

Texas
A city ordinance states that a person cannot go barefoot without first obtaining a special five-dollar permit.*
It is illegal to take more than three sips of beer at a time* > while standing.

>
> Vermont
> Lawmakers made it obligatory for everybody to take at least one bath each week- - on Saturday night.*
>
> Washington
> All lollipops are banned.*
> A law to reduce crime states: "It is mandatory for a motorist with criminal intentions to stop at the city limits and telephone the chief of police as he is entering the town.*
>
> West Virginia
> No children may attend school with their breath smelling of "wild onions."*

Joseph Nechvatal @ Paris
http://www.dom.de/arts/artists/jnech/
http://www.cybertheque.fr/galerie/jnech

----------57C27F1A4C1A--

↑ Index

160. Herb Levy
NOT Re: critics & poets
Sat 7 Sep 1996

Uh, I'm just going through my poetics mail box after a busy week. I've got nearly 200 messages here, I'm up to sometime Wednesday or so & I've looked ahead & see LOTS of discussion about the poet/critic conundrum.

Being neither I find this abstractly interesting in some vague way, but I was wondering if there were any folks who had further reports on the Assembling Alternatives conference as such. The first few were good but then things got sort of kidnapped.

Maybe people just didn't change their subject lines & I'll be pleasantly surprised as I read ahead, but why do I doubt this is the case?

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

161. Keith Tuma
harryette mullen
Sat 7 Sep 1996

Anybody out there have either an e-mail address or a phone number for Harryette Mullen?

I'd be grateful; backchannel please.

Keith

↑ Index

162. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: NOT Re: critics & poets
Sat 7 Sep 1996

---

look at the headings labelled assembling alternatives. also, starting late last night and early this morning, messages started blazing in detailing new hampshire... oh yeah, also some headered "UNH"
e ps
i wasn't there.
psps
at the conference

↑ Index

163. Emily Lloyd
Re: [Fwd: Did you know that in.....]
Sat 7 Sep 1996

You see, I just knew there was a perfectly good reason for why it never even crossed my mind to apply to the Writers' Workshop in Iowa...emily

Pierre wrote:
> Subject: Did you know that in.....
> > > Iowa
> > > Kisses may last for as much as, but no more than, five > > > minutes.

↑ Index

164. George Bowering
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Sat 7 Sep 1996

> damon writes:
>
> But more to the point, haven't we learned anything from the last 30 years of theory? do we really still have to fetishize "actual texts"
>
> Personally, they're my favorite, next to rubber clothing and satin shoes with spike heels!
>
> Kinkily,
> Mike
> [redacted]

I'm more into handcuffs and Charles Reznikoff poems.

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"I'm more than human,
I'm a woman!"

--David Meltzer

↑ Index

165. George Bowering
Re: the object
Sat 7 Sep 1996

> George Bowering wrote:
>
> But Ms Loden said that if i wanted to I could lend the object to Herb Levy, and I had a heck of a time getting it away from him, and then a worse time getting it through customs. Herb said, by the way, that he was disappointed, because he had expected it to change his life. He said that he can get more from a Lyle Lovett CD.
>
> I don't know what George and Herb did with this thing (and please don't tell me, guys), but, as they say in Paris, the song is not the same. Couldn't you two at least have sprung for a new set of batteries?
>
> Rachel

Ah jeez. Herb said "She'll never notice."
I said, "Come on, look at the whole side of it there."
Herb said,"In the stete she's in when she goes for the object, she's not going to notice, I tell you."
I said, "Let's take up a collection from all the Slam Poets that enjoyed it, and buy her a new one."
Herb said, "Oh yeah, george? You know where to get them?"

George Bowering.

"I'm more than human,
I'm a woman!"

--David Meltzer

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

166. George Bowering
Re: confidential to Mark Wallace
Sat 7 Sep 1996

> Mark Wallace wrote:
>
> Anyone on the list who misunderstands the nature of this communication, and the reason why it must take place in a forum claiming to have some relevance to the practice of poetry, is directed to take their concerns to the CIA, who I must say, in all fairness, are experts at policing, despite the dubious goals of the current cloning project.
>
> BEWARE ALL CLONES!
>
> Mark, as I said to you before, please seek help as soon as possible. Your psychosis is advancing by leaps and bounds and I don't want to hear that you turned up on the "raped by aliens" episode of _Geraldo_.
>
> Rachel

Hey, Mark! Me too! Hey, they got me when my car broke down on the road between Seattle and Concrete. It was awful. There were 23 of them, and I can remember every minute of that night. What happened to you? Did they make you promise the same thing thay made me promise? You think that's a binding promise now? I am so glad that this happened to someone else. I was thinking....well, you know....

George Bowering.
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

"I'm more than human,
I'm a woman!"

--David Meltzer

↑ Index

167. JOEL LEWIS

UNH:"can't we all get along?"

Sun 8 Sep 1996

yikes! What do people who were not at the AA in NH make of all the banter about poets vs. critics (World Wide Wrestling time?) going on this list?

I for one, had a great time. The nicest thing about the event was that people, on the vast whole, were REALLY NICE AND FRIENDLY TO EACH OTHER. This is a change from the landshark scene at MLA and the eyeing of the "enemy talent" one sees at most poetry gatherings. I met many nice people and came away with new friends and contacts. In this crapped-out climate, that's saying a lot.

Romana's great accomplishment was bringing together an international gathering of (mostly) english-speaking poets. In an age of faxes, email, web-sites and (comparitivly) inexpensive International phonecalls, UK and NA poets seem to have less contact w/ each other than in the previous generation. Hopefully this conference will start the lines of conversation going.

As w/ any large enterprise, their were good and bad papers/readings. Was impressed by Rae Armatrout, Denise Riley & Mile Champion's sets (plenty others but not thinking so well here). Good conversations, etc.

My take on Marjorie's points: for myself and most poets not in academia, the conference fees & etc. came out of our pockets. We get no professional "credit" in attending nor do we have an institution that will reimburse some of our fees. A number of poets simply crashed because they didn't have the funds to be present. I don't think critics were treated as 2nd class citizens, most of us poets are happy that there are scholars interested in the writers we care about.

There are smaller quibbles. The honkyfest aspect of the event bothered most of us -- and the lack of a forum to discuss why racial issue were such a small part ofthe proceedings. I also felt that the range of American poetries presented was VERY narrow, comapared to the range of UK poetry presented. A shame as Susan Wheller, Marjorie Welish and Simon Pettit were present & did not read.

Ignored were US publishers, like Geoff Young & Peter Gannick, who both live in New England.

I was also surprised that Charles Simic was not asked to read (I hear he was wandering about, as he is a prof at UNH). We have to get over this our side/ their side thing. Simic continues with a surrealist tradition, from much of our current experimentalist work has some origin in. Is this some problem w/ the current configurations of Language Poetry? In the late 70's, there was an acknowledgement of origins -- now it seems that L.poetry arrived by two meterors that landed in SF and Manhattan. --

I think we need two, three, many AA's. Poets and critics need to meet and just talk about things. It is a rare person, with the energy and imagination to pull something like AA off. Thanks again, Romamna

Joel Lewis

↑ Index

168. Thomas Bell
Conceptual crit?
Sun 8 Sep 1996

At 03:40 PM 9/7/96 +0100, Kevin Killian wrote: >and I started talking about art/writing that came out of a theoretical >basis. He denied that his work had a theoretical basis. When I countered >with, look at all the stuff that you have drawn on in making your work, he >replied that his work was conceptual--not theoretical. At first I thought:
>we're just playing around with vocabulary here. But, I wonder. Perhaps >"conceptual" would be a useful model, as a writer, to adopt--as a way of >being "smart" without having to walk around spouting abstractions like a >little professor. And yes I am aware that many Conceptual Artists are >fountains of spouting theory--theory which has had more of an impact on my >writing than poetic theory--because it always seems to point back to the >world. When I hear the word conceptual (as opposed to theoretical) I get >more of a sense of a rationale that is organic to the work, growing from >inside rather than pasted onto it.
>
>Dodie
>

the new TRR intro by luigi-bob drake - "literary "canon' is presented as something to be passively accepted, consumed like all the other commodities we poor plebes are expected to blindly buy....in contrast we see the micropress movement is an example of self-determined culture, and a chance for real change."

Perhaps, the issue is not critic/poet/psychologist (my particular curse) but consumer/creator (critics and readers can and should create) or theoretician/concepter?

I would be interested in hearing more about conceptual crit, active reading, etc.
tom

↑ Index

169. Tenney Nathanson
slightly awake
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Alan (Golding)

late here but yes, still awake enough to want to take you up on yr offer to provide copy of your paper to interested parties.

am MIME and UUENCODE capable (and can dance!) if that's usable.

all best,

Tenney

↑ Index

170. Tenney Nathanson
nope
Sun 8 Sep 1996

> Date: Sat, 7 Sep 1996 15:56:46 EST
> From: Keith Tuma <[redacted]>
> Subject: harryette mullen
>
> Anybody out there have either an e-mail address or a phone number for Harryette Mullen?
>
> I'd be grateful; backchannel please.
>
> Keith

no.

but: (as mentioned a couple months back): am going to do /MUSE & Drudge/ in ug class in a couple months, a bit nervously (apparently we ordered Gil's last 30 copies?), and would welcome insights or leads about Mullen's work.

Tenney

↑ Index

171. Rachel Loden
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Sun 8 Sep 1996

George Bowering added ("I'm more into...")
>
> >damon writes:
> >
> >> But more to the point, haven't we learned anything from the last 30 > >> years of theory? do we really still have to fetishize "actual texts"
> >
> >Personally, they're my favorite, next to rubber clothing and satin > >shoes with spike heels!
> >
> >Kinkily,
> >Mike
> >[redacted]
>
> I'm more into handcuffs and Charles Reznikoff poems.

That's what he says for public consumption, but stripped down I hear it's all lacy underthings and Adelaide Crapsey.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

172. Susan Schultz
Re: to Mark Nowak
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Dear Mark--I'd appreciate a backchannel message that would include your address. In short, I never got that book...

all best, Susan

↑ Index

173. maria damon
Re: to Mark Nowak
Sun 8 Sep 1996

hi susan, mark isn't on poetix right now but i forwarded yr msg to him...bests, maria d

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> Dear Mark--I'd appreciate a backchannel message that would include your > address. In short, I never got that book...
>
> all best, Susan

↑ Index

174. Rachel Loden

Re: the object

Sun 8 Sep 1996

George Bowering wrote:
>
> >George Bowering wrote:
> >
> >> But Ms Loden said that if i wanted to I could lend the object to Herb Levy,
> >> and I had a heck of a time getting it away from him, and then a worse
time > >> getting it through customs. Herb said, by the way, that he was > >> disappointed, because he had expected it to change his life. He said that > >> he can get more from a Lyle Lovett CD.
> >
> >I don't know what George and Herb did with this thing (and please don't > >tell me, guys), but, as they say in Paris, the song is not the same.
> >Couldn't you two at least have sprung for a new set of batteries?
> >
> Ah jeez. Herb said "She'll never notice."
> I said, "Come on, look at the whole side of it there."
> Herb said,"In the stete she's in when she goes for the object, she's not > going to notice, I tell you."
> I said, "Let's take up a collection from all the Slam Poets that enjoyed > it, and buy her a new one."
> Herb said, "Oh yeah, george? You know where to get them?"

I guess that's why you won the Governor General's Award for Fiction, George. But I heard a very different story from a three-time slam queen from Saskatoon whose name would not be unknown to you. She says that you and Herb talked incessantly about opening a toy and poesy shoppe called The Passion Bower, with a special emphasis on rare editions of Ron Silliman, and a line of leather gear you liked to call "Mistress Marjorie."

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

175. Joe Amato
poet critic critic poet...
Sun 8 Sep 1996

---

well i guess i'll have to be a bit gadfly-ish and go on record as saying (with absolutely no ill-intent directed at a conference i didn't attend, but wish i had) that the poet-critic thread produced a remarkable amount of dissonance, hence that it probably remains a real bone of contention, hence that it's probably worth continued gab (esp. when one considers that a majority of critics hereabouts are probably academics, and that a goodly number of poets hereabouts may not be)...

i understand that there are productive and counterproductive tensions in any discourse community, network, what have you... and that this list may not be able to sustain any further discussion along these lines... but i'd still aver that there's something worth considering here, esp. after reading ron s.'s post... me, i'm still looking for alternatives to current critical practice, so defined, and to current poetries, so defined... and i'm still looking to find ways to get critics as well as poets to talk about the intellection (conceptual, theoretical, etc.) that goes hand-in-hand with poetry and criticism, so defined...

joe

↑ Index

176. Michael Boughn
fetishized texts
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Giorgio Agamben, in _Stanzas_ I think, has a great passage where he discusses fetishization as the liberation of the object from the limitations of narrowly determined human use into a realm of undetermined connections and pleasures. From this perspective, the fetishized text is a text freed from the slavery of uses (unless, of course, like George, it's into handcuffs.)

Mike

↑ Index

177. Gwyn McVay
poet, critic, he loves me, he loves me not
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Reading Emerson's "The Poet"--the very first sentence contains the spectacular phrase "esteemed umpires of taste"--

so what do you gotta do to get to first base?

Gwyn

↑ Index

178. Judy Roitman
Re: poet, critic, he loves me, he loves me not
Sun 8 Sep 1996

> Reading Emerson's "The Poet"--the very first sentence contains the spectacular phrase "esteemed umpires of taste"--
>
> so what do you gotta do to get to first base?
>
> Gwyn

Hit em in the balls.

Oops, that gets you thrown out of the game, doesn't it. I guess you gotta hit the ball they throw at you within the spatial limits pre-assigned, with enough unpredictability or power that your "hit" isn't "caught," and then run down a narrowly defined path until you are "safe".

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

179. maria damon
Re: fetishized texts
Sun 8 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> Giorgio Agamben, in _Stanzas_ I think, has a great passage where he > discusses fetishization as the liberation of the object from the > limitations of narrowly determined human use into a realm of > undetermined connections and pleasures. From this perspective, the > fetishized text is a text freed from the slavery of uses (unless, of > course, like George, it's into handcuffs.)

>
> Mike
> [redacted]

tooshay! nice work (if u cn get it), mike. i like the complication of the scene w/ the positive use of "fetish." liberate all handcuffs. chains of the world unite; you have nothing to lose but your workers and use value, etc.--md

↑ Index

180. Kevin Killian

Dan Davidson

Sun 8 Sep 1996

We have some sad news to deliver. San Francisco poet Daniel Davidson died Saturday night, apparently by his own hand, after many years of pain following open heart surgery. Details are sketchy at this point, but more detailed obituaries will follow.

I (Dodie) met Dan in the mid-80s (actually got to know him, since I'd seen him around) at the UCSF medical center where I was a temp secretary and he was coming frequently for follow-up for his heart surgery. He and I spend many an evening together discussing writing, living, music, art (and drugs). We were both avid about Messiaen's "Quartet for the End of Time" and sometimes we'd shut up long enough to listen to it at his apartment on Haight Street. I've never seen anyone live more grandly on a fixed income than Dan--he was amazing. Bringing home castoff clothing from the Salvation Army, dyeing them black, and cutting such a dashing figure. At that time Dan hadn't published much, but shortly afterward he became an important figure in the Bay Area writing scene, writing, giving readings, curating series. He taught an after-school program for small children at Small Press Traffic when it was still on 24th Street.

I (Kevin) remember Dan always in the audience at every kind of poetry reading you could imagine, always with his own determined take on things. Perhaps because he came to poetry late, he was burning up with poetry fever, and he could be exhausting in his naked need to know more. And because he had this plastic heart valve he often thought of himself as not having much time. He was generous to a wide variety of young writers and attentive to his elders. I was glad to be able to write a "blurb" for his first book "Product." In recent years I didn't see him around much. Couldn't figure it out. The last reading I saw him give was with Bob Perelman at New Langton Arts, and when was that? At least 2 years ago. He shied away from all the events he used to shine at. Last month when Anselm Berrigan and Katie Lederer left for parts East, Dan came to the party for them--still Byronic, still dashing, but gray, gray.... and he and I talked then about this and that. God! The ironic thing is that he was scheduled to participate in the "Proliferation 3" reading Dodie and Mary Burger are holding at Small Press Traffic this coming Friday (the 13th). And now their plans are to make it into some kind of memorial in his honor, I guess.

Sorry to fill up the bandwidth with all this info about Dan and us, but as you can see, we have the kind of grief that's hard to take hold of and make sense of--a grief not unmixed with guilt. I know that the book Dan wrote with Tom Mandel is coming out soon, the collaboration from Poets and Potes Press of which he was so pleased and so proud. That's something, tho' right now I don't know what.

↑ Index

181. Romana Christina Huk
Assembling Alternatives
Sun 8 Sep 1996

On Fri., 6 Sep 1996, Marjorie Perloff wrote:

> Romana (and others)--I think you're absolutely right and I wasn't "totally negative" at all, just raising some key issues. You're right that the real subject was meant to be, should have been, what made some of these poetries "alternative." But do you feel we really discussed how, why, where, when they were alternative?
>
> What IS the difference between say, Paul Muldoon, Eavan Boland, Medh Megkukian (can't spell right?) and the Irish poets at the conference? This is not a rhetorical question--I would honestly like to know.
>
> And where do US/ UK poetries come together, diverge, etc? I hope we keep that ball rolling.

Thanks, Marjorie, for these questions, which I think are key; I'll start the ball rolling with some responses from my perspective and hope that others (especially those who know the Irish scene better than I) will take it up.

(And no, I _don't_ think we got enough chance to really discuss these things at the conference; I'm grieved that I couldn't make the event be what I'd hoped it would be -- a real exchange between poets thought to be "alternative" in their various contexts but obviously different from one another given the differing cultural/historical spaces in which they use their English. Maybe now, post-conference, the talk will start....)

The first simple answer to your question about the Irish poets is that those present at the conference are _perceived_ to be ones working outside the powerful publishing houses (Paul, Eavan and Medbh all publish with presses like Oxford, Faber, etc. (though Eavan also works with Carcanet, where ed Michael Schmidt is beginning to do things like publish Miles Champion and print interviews like the one I did with Denise Riley in his mainstream mag _PN Review_)). James Mays at University College Dublin helped me put together a group of "alternative" poets (James is the one who's probably going to get Susan Howe over to Ireland for a stint at UCD); I already knew the work of Maurice Scully and Catherine Walsh, but the others that came to NH were new to me as well.

I think the differences between Paul Muldoon's work and that of the experimentalists at the conference are less easy to draw than those between Eavan Boland's and Medbh McGuckian's work and the same. That's why I wanted Paul at the conference; he was actually planning to come until family responsibilities persuaded him otherwise. He doesn't think of himself as "experimental" -- wanted me to "name off some of those folk" when I saw him here in NH in the winter -- but I think that poems like "Madoc," which Marjorie mentioned, rely on disjunctive practices and use of language qua language to an extent that the term is helpful. (All that play in "Madoc" with the "epic" of philosophy itself, done by throwing in its way the other disciplines from which it has tried to separate itself -- history, linguistics, even geography....) What interests me, though, is the different imperative in the work that disallows complete disjuncture (or the sort of situation in which the impact of the poem rests wholly in its unmaking and commentary on/foregrounding of language) and instead begins to tease out parallels between imperial, colonial and postcolonial articulations of history. I'm indebted to Clair Wills's fine book on Irish work (_Improprieties_) in my readings of poets like Paul; she makes me wonder whether we can possibly have what Ken Edwards wondered about in a recent post -- "a common politics of poetic form" -- in English-speaking contexts so vastly different, one from the other, in their relationships to language, "community" and political project.

I don't think disjunctive form is the only or even best way to identify an alternative poetry, though it might identify the culture from which it comes. I've just written on Susan Howe's poems as compared to Eavan Boland's and Denise Riley's, arguing that the forms as derived from Olson don't necessarily make her work more "radical" in impact than that of the other two but do tend to make her more vulnerable to _different_ kinds of contradictions and romanticisms embedded in our poetic tradition. The word as thing separated from its discursive environment -- whether that be class or territory of speakers -- seems to get less use in Irish and U.K. work that I know, for differing reasons in each context; the poems often sound less disruptive of syntax but the "alternative" trajectory of their materials should be unmistakable. Getting back to Marjorie's question, I'm not sure I always see it in Medbh's work, as syntactically complex as critics like to describe it as being. (Clair Wills makes a good counterargument to mine in her book.) And Eavan, in poems aside from "Outside History," which I think is an astonishing piece of work, often seems to operate through a wholly unproblematic relationship to language and its sincere expression of feelings. I can't imagine her writing the first poem that Randolph Healy read, for example; certainly not any read by Maurice Scully or Catherine Walsh (the latter working within what seems an Anglo-American-influenced mode). But I agree with others who have said that perhaps Geoffrey Squires, one of the Irish contingent, seems to be writing in a more conventional fashion, though I could see that what the British critic/poet Harriet Tarlo had to say about "radical landscape" poetry in northern England might force me to revise that opinion. His poem "This," which I tried to help him present, is an interesting piece insofar as it seems to dissolve as you read it -- an intriguing thing to happen in a "landscape" poem -- though its internal contradictions and perceptive angst are still too muted to be caught by a listening audience, I think.

I'm going to stop here and let someone else jump in -- especially on the U.K./U.S. relationship. But I just want to reiterate one thing for all of you who were, like myself, troubled by the lack of racial diversity at the conference (I'm sorry that that sounds like such "universitese"). I had invited as many people as I knew of from the other ethnic groups on this side of the Atlantic (there are only one or two who would call them- selves "experimental" overseas). At the outset, Nate Mackey and Harryette Mullen were part of my "advisory committee"; neither ended up coming, however. I feel badly that I couldn't do a better job of finding people to discuss the issues, which, as those of you who received the information know, were part of the main agenda (under "blindspots and cultural chauvinisms"). I think the problem of reading across cultures should be discussed in tandem with the problem of reading "alternatives" within differing ethnic communities; I'm new to the terrain (though I need to think through the problem of total whiteness in the U.K. experimental community before the MLA conference and the paper I'm supposed to give there!).

Romana Huk

↑ Index

182. Carnography
Re: Conceptual crit?
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Thomas Bell:

> the new TRR intro by luigi-bob drake - "literary "canon' is presented as something to be passively accepted, consumed like all the other commodities we poor plebes are expected to blindly buy....in contrast we see the micropress movement is an example of self-determined culture, and a chance for real change."

What is the difference between fetishizing "The Canon" and fetishizing zine/ small press culture? Either way, one foregrounds the idea that the text is defined not by the reader's experience of it, but rather by its location: by the context of the text's mere publication.

Also: Aren't we in a position to renounce, say, Voltaire (deliberately obvious example), precisely because we've grown up privileged enough to have been taught _Candide_? I would not argue that it is my place to deny another student that same privilege: familiarity with a text that is both influential and commonly referred to throughout the history of world literature. (And no, in this context--in the context of literary influence--the fiction of Robert Gluck is not as important historically as the satires of Voltaire.) I would argue that, generally, it is more useful for a student to know Voltaire than it is for h/e/i/r/m to know my published work. With all due respect, isn't the fetishization of non-autonomy predicated on an elitist preconception of autonomy in the first place? How did we arrive at this lofty position--to be able to judge for everyone else which work is inherently elitist and which is not?

All the best,

Rob Hardin

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

183. maria damon
fwd: umn tenure code revisions
Sun 8 Sep 1996

---

friends: for those of you who've asked for further details, and also because i've been requested to by the folks who are spearheading faculty opposition to the abolition of tenure at the U of MN, i'm forwarding the faculty consultative committee's response to the threat to tenure at the U of MN. it could happen to you too...

bests, maria d

From: Tom Walsh <[redacted]>
Date: Sun, 8 Sep 1996 10:40:54 -0500
To: [redacted]
Subject: National Message

The following email was sent to all University of Minnesota faculty by the chairs of the Senate committess responsible for the Minnesota tenure code. It was sent Friday, September 6, 1996. The mail header has been removed and a couple of line breaks and tabs have been fixed. Otherwise, it is unchanged.

We are sending this to you for your information. The actual new tenure code can be found in text form at http://mnnt1.hep.umn.edu/ufa/, which will enable you to compare this document with the code.

The new code was developed by the regents together with their consultant Richard Chait and also Martin Michaelson of the Washington, DC firm of Hogan & Hartson. As best we can tell, the code was worked out between June and the release date of September 5. We are not aware of anyone outside this group who knew of the provisions before release.

We regard this code as the prototype of tenure revisions which other university governing boards will attempt to impose in coming years. It is therefore of national interest.

Paula Rabinowitz, Department of English
Thomas Walsh, Department of Physics
University Faculty Alliance
University of Minnesota

Dear Colleagues,

Our attempt to reach a compromise on revision of the Tenure Regulations has failed. The Regents have proposed new amendments at their meeting on Thursday. In effect, they have accepted the parts of the Faculty Senate draft in which the faculty made compromises and rejected the parts in which the administration recognized faculty concerns. Far from being a compromise, the new proposal goes well beyond any prior administration proposal.

The Regents have asked that the faculty complete review of their new draft within a month, so that they can take final action on October 10. The draft contains the most substantial changes in tenure policy that have been put forward here in over 50 years. To meet this hectic schedule, the faculty committees will meet in the week of September 16, and the Faculty Senate will meet on the first day of classes, September 26.

The Regents put forward their proposal over President Hasselmo's strenuous opposition. Given the manner in which the proposal was prepared, the extremely limited opportunity for faculty consultation on the draft, and their unwillingness to discuss with us the merits of various proposals, we must conclude that they intend to move forward on this proposal.

At this point, we can only summarize the major parts of the proposal. Other details will be provided later. Major points are:

1. FIRING FACULTY IN CASE OF PROGRAM CHANGE. The proposal eliminates the tenure protection currently available in cases of program change. It provides: --60 days' notice of programmatic change. (There is no other provision for faculty participation in these decisions.) --reassignment or retraining of tenured faculty, unless "in the University's judgment" this would be "not practicable." (Note that it does not require that reassignment or retrainging be "impracticable," but only that the "University's judgment" be such. Give the distinction of the Regents' Washington lawyers who prepared this language, it is apparent that the intent was to exclude any subsequent review of the decision.) --one year's notice of termination be given. --there is no definition of "program," so a single faculty member could be targeted by defining that individual's specialization for elimination.

2. REDUCTIONS IN BASE PAY. The proposal eliminates the guarantee of base pay contained in the current regulations. Instead, it would provide that "Absent reasons found to be compelling by the Board of Regents or its delegate," "it is expected that" base pay would be protected. Again, carefully note the drafting. The first of these clauses does NOT require "compelling reasons" before reducing base pay; it only requires that the administrator STATE that his reasons are compelling. The second clause does not guarantee base salary, but only articulates a general and vague expectation in that regard. The language eliminates any legal claim to base pay.

The language, as drafted, would permit reductions of salary targeted at single individuals. (The statement in the Star-Tribune this morning that such pay cuts could only be imposed on groups of faculty, not on individuals, was apparently based on the oral statements of the Regents' lawyer in describing the plan. An examination of the actual text reveals no such limitation.) Indeed, the new languageprovides no effective protection of salary. The provision also cuts off any review of such issues by the Judicial Committee, even in cases of alleged violation of academic freedom.

3. POST TENURE REVIEW. The post tenure review process has been substantially rewritten. Rather than the remedial process we proposed, seeking to improve the performance of faculty experiencing difficulties, the provision in now primarily punitive in orientation, emphasizing dismissal and salary reduction. It now permits annual 10% salary reductions ad infinitum. Many of the procedural protections have been removed.

4. FACULTY DISCIPLINE. The faculty discipline section represents a radical departure from existing rules. It introduces surprising new language. For example, faculty members may be punished if they do not "maintain . . . a proper attitude of industry and cooperation with others within and without the University community." Discipline, including dismissal may be imposed when "commonly held standards of conduct" (not further specified) are violated. A new ground for firing a faculty member, "other grave misconduct" is added.

A whole new category of "lesser sanctions" is created, including PAY CUTS (which may be permanent and are not limited in amount) and suspensions from duty. These may be imposed by the administrator after notice and an opportunity to respond, but the discipline "need not involve formal proceedings of any kind." For example, this would authorize a dean to impose a permanent 50% pay cut without a hearing before an impartial body. The Judicial Committee is also excluded from review of these actions, although the faculty member might file a grievance with an outside arbitrator.

5. JUDICIAL COMMITTEE PROCEDURES. Although access to the Judicial Committee has been cut off in many cases--including many possible cases involving academic freedom issues--new major restrictions are imposed upon the operation of the Judicial Committee. These include: --Judicial committee proceedings will be presided over by a law officer, who must not be a faculty member. --The President will no longer be required to respect the Judicial Committee's report and recommendation. The current regulations contain a legal limitation (he can overrule the committee only for "compelling reasons") and a procedural check (he can do so only after meeting with the Judicial Committee). The Regents' draft deletes both provisions, giving the President total freedom to ignore the hearing panel's report. --The new draft permits a dean to suspend a faculty member without pay, in certain circumstances, while a proceeding to dismiss is underway.

* * *

Two other points should be made:

Some of the proposed changes track language in other universities' tenure regulations. But those universities may have long-established practices or other policies that effectively limit the exercise of the power granted by the tenure codes there. If we adopt the bare language of those universities, but not the other limitations that exist there, we will be deviating sharply from the norm. There seems to be no effort to simultaneously adopt the practices of other institutions.

Given the radical nature of these changes, this is not merely an attempt to respond to the Faculty Senate proposals. It seeks to impose a radical changes in the relations of faculty, administration, and Regents. Given the controversy that has been generated, we must assume that the Board intends to exercise fully the powers that they are creating by these changes.

Take these proposals seriously and act accordingly. The Regents intend to act on them on October 10.

Sincerely yours

FRED L. MORRISON, Professor of Law
MARY DEMPSEY, Professor of Biochemistry
VIRGINIA GRAY, Professor of Political Science
ED FOGELMAN, Professor of Political Science
DAN FEENEY, Professor of Small Animal Clinical Science

Chairs of the respective Faculty Senate Committees

↑ Index

184. maria damon
Re: Conceptual crit?
Sun 8 Sep 1996

carnography rites:

..to be able to judge for everyone else which work is inherently elitist and which is not?

i rite: huh? where in the thread did "inherent elitism" rear its nonsensical head? never mind...i sd i'd retire..just procrastinating on my next project...bests to you, rob xo, md

↑ Index

185. Romana Christina Huk
The Rutgers Conference
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Before I forget, someone asked about the Rutgers conference on "Poetry and the Public Sphere" which I have info. on. It's April 24-27, and the person to call is Nick Yasinski ([redacted]); fax: [redacted].

Romana Huk

↑ Index

186. Christina Fairbank Chirot poetry & baseball
Sun 8 Sep 1996

re comment using baseball as analogy for "playing it safe" in poetry--

not so for Jack Spicer or Larry Eigner

Eigner early an avid listener to Red Sox games, used baseball statistics as way to develp memory in terms of visualization for doing mat--also for visualizing words--

Summers I was "good to myself"and every day waited for the Red Sox game on the radio--and you wanted the Red Sox to win today and win tomorrow whether they did or din't today . . . . maybe you're surprised when you forget to the extent you depend on memory . . . .

Remember/sabbath days to/keep time still/how multiple . . .

Eigner also listened to radio for Cid Corman's poetry show . . .

Spicer had his radio, too--the poet as radio--often tuned to baseball games--

"getting to first base"--Eigner has book called A Count of Some Things--from Score publications, Crag Hill's press

Spicer:

no telling what happened in this game. Except one didn't strike out. One feels they fielded it badly at second base.
Oceans of wildflowers. Utter logic of the form and color.

"Utter logic"--"speaking in tongues"--visualizing words--

"keep time still/how multiple"

Un coup de des n'abolira jamais le hasard . . . .

dbc

↑ Index

187. Joe Amato
Re: fwd: umn tenure code revisions
Sun 8 Sep 1996

---

maria, esp. after reading item 4 (which warrants a collective FUCK YOU to the regents) in conjunction with my rereading of late of _discipline and punish_, sounds an awful lot like the sorts of pressures we've been experiencing here at iit (and with only some success here at mitigating such attempts---the jury is still out on revised tenure & promotion procedures, esp. now that they've eliminated the position of provost on my campus)...

thanx for sending that along, i'll spread it mself through other channels...

best,

joe

↑ Index

188. John Cayley

Assembling - General - Respect!

Sun 8 Sep 1996

[I've a number of brief reports/responses I'd like to make, on the conference and to the subsequent discussions, and I've decided to separate them into posts with, hopefully, indicative, relevant subject lines.]

This conference was a wonderful event. Romana Huk should not take herself to task for any 'bad organization and lack of experience in running conferences'. AA worked and it worked well. Both those of us fortunate enough to be invited to contribute and those who were provoked or inspired to attend were presented with a full, rich and various programme/art.

If there was insufficient (formally) framed discussion, if certain issues/groups/persons went unrepresented, then this is also the responsibility of us others, including those who were not there. In conception and development an agenda seems full of potential; after the meeting we are overwhelmed by the inevitable and arbitrary aspects of 'what actually took place'. I know that Romana worked hard to try and convey to contributors how they might focus on specific issues, but ...

No conference will ever cover the full range of (relevant) concerns which at any one moment engages (even) any one of its participants. So what. No participant ever seems to produce a contribution (or a reading of the papers or talks) that is exactly what is asked/expected of her. So what.

The information:noise / art:noise ratio of this event was, imho, excellent. Perhaps there is little more that can be expected of such a difficult form as the 'conference', and its combination with a 'festival' (art:noise) aspect is still all too rare and valuable.

Romana Huk deserves our heartfelt thanks and deep respect.

- - - - - >
John Cayley Wellsweep Press [in Chinese HZ:]
^ innovative literary translation from Chinese ^
1 Grove End House 150 Highgate Road London NW5 1PD UK
Tel & Fax: 0[redacted] Email: [redacted]
http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/
< - - - - -

↑ Index

189. John Cayley

Assembling - (Paper)form(alitie)s - (Critics & Poets)

Sun 8 Sep 1996

I'm not sure about this equal time for poets and critics thing, although I absolutely agree that we should all be answerable and that criticism may be as artful and fulfulling as any other form of life. I liked what Romana Huk said in reply, 'I must say that the problem never crossed my mind. I thought: all day to the conference (with an hour and a half for afternoon readings) and all night to the readings. What would have been more fair? Most of the poets coming to the conference felt that they needed to read as well as give papers, so I accommodated them to the extent that I could, never even thinking this might be a problem for the critics.'

Then I think: if giving more/equal time to the critics means having to listen to still more written-papers-read-out-loud (and with them still running over their 20 mins, eating into precious [framed] discussion time), then hold on. Bring back the Cultural Revolution! and let's institute instead an absolute ban on the ill- or misuse of a lively and flexible medium -- the talk, the lecture, the oration. If we have to listen to even more fine criticism then let's at least agree to leave our papers in our brief cases when we meet and talk face to faces.

Sometimes I can't understand how the reading-of-papers form has survived, unless it is as the most refined example of the internalization of literacy, muting a paralysed orality in the very act of a particular form of utterance. I'm not being logocentric about this (honest). And I understand the need both to defend oneself against the fear of uncertain, indeterminate exposure, and to display the pleasures and refinements of a considered literacy (as in most of the poetry we heard _read_), but so much potential seems to be swept aside by the relentless eyes-down read-through.

Some of the speakers (poets mostly I think) made gestural, performative (see subject line: 'Assembling - Appreciations - Issues') reference to this (perennial) problem -- cris cheek and, as Bill L. mentioned, Fiona Templeton as she (literally) undressed the panel-bearing table (which Steve McC. later reclad and regendered).

If 'genres are fluid, hybrid, etc. etc.' (M.P.) and the work of poets and critics share the same spaces, then at least let's continue to problematize the singularly lifeless pseudo-orality of the 'read paper'.

- - - - - >

John Cayley Wellsweep Press [in Chinese HZ:]
^ innovative literary translation from Chinese ^
1 Grove End House 150 Highgate Road London NW5 1PD UK

Tel & Fax: 0[redacted] Email: [redacted]
http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/

< - - - - -

↑ Index

190. John Cayley

Assembling - Appreciations - Issues

Sun 8 Sep 1996

Suddenly, it seems invidious to do what I first considered: to go through the programme and pick out those papers or readings which struck me. I got something from nearly everything I attended (and it was impossible, sadly, to attend everything), especially since I still consider myself a 'sometime' or 'amateur' reader of this work. And there seems little real benefit in reiterating a sense of the greatness of what we mostly agree is great.

So pick out, instead, some work/issues which relate closely to your/our specific concerns which might not otherwise have received some attentions they deserve.

This isn't true of - the first plenary session, esp. Peter Middleton and Keith Tuma, which addressed a central concern of the conference: the differing 'contexts/histories/localities/institutions' of alternative poetries in (primarily) the UK and US. I can't, don't dare attempt to summarize Middleton or Tuma in a couple of sentences. I hardly dare to speak openly, or to align myself anywhichhow. After, all, I write from UKania (see Middleton). But I understand myself a little better, and can see how life might be lived 'elsewhere'. If for no other reason the conference succeeded because many participants did raise, address and discuss - formally and informally - these issues, an explicit aim of the organizers.

- The fine reading of post-Mao poetry from mainland China and its contexts by Jeff Twitchell-Waas, along with the spectacular readings of particular works of so-called Chinese 'language' poets (and in a separate, second paper [critical over-compensation foul!?] a couple of well-known North American 'language' luminaries) by Ming-Qian Ma. The Chinese stuff is a special, quasi-professional interest of my own and came as unexpected bonus in the AA context (in which I particiapated for other reasons). Neither speaker addressed the question, but I now wonder whether/how the inclusion of papers on contemporary Chinese poetry, and the presence of a fine Chinese critic, serves to balance some of the remarks/criticisms raised (in the conference's 'postcolonial' moments) about the apparent failure of AA to embrace conspicuously absent alternative poetries. And I answer myself: it doesn't seem to? Why don't we see the inclusion/exclusion of Chinese poetry as a race/identity issue? Why isn't Chinese poetry black poetry? Is it because, as the translator Arthur Cooper put it, the Chinese are

'the other Greeks'? Because theirs is the other imperial culture, such that we entertain an absolute disregard and an absolute reverence for Chinese culture at one and the same time? Our subordinating/post-colonizing racism seems to dissolve or get lost in the orientalism we project onto Chinese culture as it is reflected back to us - instaneously - as occidentalism. There is something of critical/political importance in this which I/we/they/you must think about.

- The opportunity to meet and talk with other poets (Jim Rosenberg, Loss Glazier, Chris Funkhouser) working in/with electronic media. A confirmation of the sense that the poetics we may encounter or develop 'beyond codexspace' relate strongly to the poetics of the writing which was well represented at the conference, or as Loss Glazier has already put it so well (his caps), 'the formal issues about writing at the heart of experimental poetries ARE THE SAME ISSUES being explored by the literary electronic media.'

- Finally, and most interestingly to me, I came away from the conference, unexpectedly, with a new sense of the centrality of performance, performance writing, writing as performance. So many of the finest readers were reading-performance (Retallack, Scalapino, Spahr, Robertson, Harryman, Bergvall, Templeton, and/or in a direct-(gendered)-speed-voice-embodied-linkage of language/performance: Raworth, Champion). Because, perhaps, concerns shared in performance might allow the uncompromising inclusion of those absent other alternatives (?in the same sort of way that language poetry has been able to [unexpectedly?] ally/align itself with sound/concrete/visual precursors and colleagues). Because performance also characterizes qualities of the performative (and even, in a strictly limited sense 'interactive') literacy which is made possible or accessible by electronic media, leading to

- the performance of literary objects (themselves).

- - - - - >

John Cayley Wellsweep Press [in Chinese HZ:]
^ innovative literary translation from Chinese ^
1 Grove End House 150 Highgate Road London NW5 1PD UK
Tel & Fax: 0[redacted] Email: [redacted]
http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/

< - - - - -

↑ Index

191. Tony Green
Re: UNH Again
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Dear Alan Golding, Still awake at the end and wondering was that, in there, DAVID Bromide at the conference? best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

192. George Bowering
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Sun 8 Sep 1996

> George Bowering added ("I'm more into...")
>
> damon writes:
>
> But more to the point, haven't we learned anything from the last 30 years of theory? do we really still have to fetishize "actual texts"
>
> Personally, they're my favorite, next to rubber clothing and satin shoes with spike heels!
>
> Kinkily,
> Mike
> [redacted]
>
> I'm more into handcuffs and Charles Reznikoff poems.
>
> That's what he says for public consumption, but stripped down I hear it's all lacy underthings and Adelaide Crapsey.
>
> Rachel

Not really lacy, but they have to be well-made, and of superior quality. I was taught this by Mark Wallace.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

193. George Bowering
Re: poet, critic, he loves me, he loves me not
Sun 8 Sep 1996

> Reading Emerson's "The Poet"--the very first sentence contains the spectacular phrase "esteemed umpires of taste"--
>
> so what do you gotta do to get to first base?
>
> Gwyn

Well, if it's with me, just buy me a pastrami sandwich and get me a little drunk on belgian beer.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

194. Tony Green
Re: poet, critic, & umpire
Sun 8 Sep 1996

Judy Roitman's assumption about umpires that they are for base- or sfot- ball shd not so lightly disregard the possibility of Emersonian cricket. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

195. maria damon
Re: fwd: umn tenure code revisions
Sun 8 Sep 1996

---

joe a writes:
> maria, esp. after reading item 4 (which warrants a collective FUCK YOU to > the regents) in conjunction with my rereading of late of _discipline and > punish_, sounds an awful lot like the sorts of pressures we've been > experiencing here at iit (and with only some success here at mitigating > such attempts---the jury is still out on revised tenure & promotion > procedures, esp. now that they've eliminated the position of provost on my > campus)...

>
> thanx for sending that along, i'll spread it mself through other channels...
>
yeah, thanks you, joe, sorry all for co-opting the precious list-space for matters decidedly unpoetic, but if you'd all just forward the msg to all the other lists yr on i'd be most grateful, or to administrators at your respective institutions, so we can get some censure of these folks going...and then not another word from me on the subject, i promise.bests, md

↑ Index

196. Thomas Bell

Re: Conceptual crit? fetish?

Mon 9 Sep 1996

Ron, The problem may be with my elipses obscuring the quote, but I take _passively accepted, consumed_ to be the operative words so that zines could as you say become a fetish, but as lbd says, this is an example of a self-determined culture, not _the_ self-determined culture, no? all the best tom

At 04:21 PM 9/8/96 -0400, Carnography wrote:
>Thomas Bell:
>
>> the new TRR intro by luigi-bob drake - "literary "canon' is presented as >> something to be passively accepted, consumed like all the other commodities
>> we poor plebes are expected to blindly buy....in contrast we see the >> micropress movement is an example of self-determined culture, and a chance >> for real change."
>
>What is the difference between fetishizing "The Canon" and fetishizing zine/>small press culture? Either way, one foregrounds the idea that the text >is defined not by the reader's experience of it, but rather by its location:
>by the context of the text's mere publication.
>
>Also: Aren't we in a position to renounce, say, Voltaire (deliberately >obvious example), precisely because we've grown up privileged enough >to have been taught _Candide_? I would not argue that it is my place >to deny another student that same privilege: familiarity with a text >that is both influential and commonly referred to throughout the history >of world literature. (And no, in this context--in the context of literary >influence--the fiction of Robert Gluck is not as important historically >as the satires of Voltaire.) I would argue that, generally, it is more >useful for a student to know Voltaire than it is for h/e/i/r/m to know >my published work. With all due respect, isn't the fetishization >of non-autonomy predicated on an elitist preconception of autonomy >in the first place? How did we arrive at this lofty position--to be >able to judge for everyone else which work is inherently elitist

>and which is not?
>
>All the best,
>
>Rob Hardin
>
>http://www.interport.net/~scrypt
>
>

↑ Index

197. Marjorie Perloff

Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Sep 1996 to 8 Sep 1996

Mon 9 Sep 1996

Romana's analysis of the Irish situation is extremely helpful! Thanks, Romana, I hope you'll write more on this topic. Your commentary really explained a lot. I know a little bit about the attempt to bridge the gap from Michael Schmidt at PN Review but now I know more.

Marjorie Perloff

↑ Index

198. George Bowering

Re: poet, critic, & umpire

Mon 9 Sep 1996

> Judy Roitman's assumption about umpires that they are for base- or sfot- ball shd not so lightly disregard the possibility of Emersonian cricket. best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

What the heck is Emersonian Cricket?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,

Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

199. Poetics List

Welcome Message

Mon 9 Sep 1996

Because there are so many new people on this list, I thought we should replay an old favorite. FYI: as of this morning there are 401 subscribers to this list. --jk

---

Welcome to the Poetics List

&

The Electronic Poetry Center

sponsored by The Poetics Program, Department of English, Faculty of Art & Letters, of the State University of New York, Buffalo

---

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

_____Contents_____

1. About the Poetics List
2. Subscriptions
3. Who's Subscribed
4. Digest Option
5. When you'll be away
6. The Electronic Poetry Center (EPC)
7. Poetics Archives at EPC
8. Publishers & Editors Read This!

[This document was prepared by Charles Bernstein ([redacted]. edu) and Loss Pequen~o Glazier ([redacted]).]

---

1. About the Poetics List

Please note that this is a private list and information about the list should not be posted to other lists or directories of lists. The idea is to keep the list to those with specific rather than general interests, and also to keep the scale of the list small and the volume manageable. Word-of-mouth (and its electronic equivalents) seems to be working fine.

The "list owner" of Poetics is Charles Bernstein: contact me for further information. As of May, Joel Kuszai is working with me to administer the list. For subscription information contact us at [redacted]

---

2. Subscriptions line, to:

[redacted]

the one-line message should say:

{or}

(replacing Jill Jillway with your own name; but note: do not use your name to unsub)

We will be sent a notice of all subscription activity.

*

If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note:

Sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to send messages to mail. To avoid this, unsub from the old address and resub from the new address. If you can no longer do this there is a solution if you use Eudora (an e-mail program that is available free at sharewar sites): from the Tools menu select "Options" and then select set-up for "Sending Mail": you can substitute your old address here and send the unsub message.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced. Please try avoid having messages from the list returned to us. If the problem is low disk quota, you may wish to request an increase from your system administrator. (You may wish to argue that this subscription is part of your scholarly communication!) You may also wish to consider obtaining a commercial account.

---

3. Who's Subscribed

To see who is subscribed to Poetics, send an e-mail message to blank. In the body of your e-mail message type:

review poetics

You will be sent within a reasonable amount of time (by return e-mail) a rather long list containing the names and e-mail addresses of Poetics subscribers. This list is alphabetized by server not name.

---

4. Digest Option

The Poetics List can send a large number of individual messages to your account to each day! If you would prefer to receive ONE message each day, which would include all messages posted to the list for that day, you can use the digest option. Send this one-line message (no subject line) to [redacted]

set poetics digest

NOTE:!! Send this message to "listserv" not to Poetics or as a reply to this message!!

You can switch back to individual messages by sending this messagage:

set poetics mail

---

5. When you'll be away

Do not leave your Poetics subscription "active" if you are going to be away for any extended period of time! Your account may become flooded and you may lose not only Poetics messages but other important mail. You can temporarily turn off your Poetics subscription by sending a message:

You can temporarily turn off your mail by sending a message:

set poetics nomail

& turn it on again with: set poetics mail

When you return you can check or download missed postings from the Poetics archive. (See 7 below.)

---

6. What is the Electronic Poetry Center?

our URL is

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

The mission of this World-Wide Web based electronic poetry center is to serve as a hypertextual gateway to the extraordinary range of activity in formally innovative writing in the United States and the world. The Center provides access to the burgeoning number of electronic resources in the new poetries including RIF/T and other electronic poetry journals, the POETICS List archives, an AUTHOR library of electronic poetic texts, and direct connections to numerous related electronic RESOURCES. The Center also provides information about contemporary print little magazines and SMALL PRESSES engaged in poetry and poetics. And we have an extensive collection of soundfiles of poets' reading their work, as well as the archive of LINEbreak, the radio interview series.

The EPC is directed by Loss Pequen~o Glazier.

---

7. Poetics Archives via EPC

Go to the EPC and select Poetics from the opening screen. Follow the links to Poetics Archives. You may browse the archives by month and year or search them for specific information. Your interface will allow you to print or download any of these files.

Or set your browser to go directly to:
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/poetics/archive

---

8. Publishers & Editors Read This!

PUBLISHERS & EDITORS: Our listings of poetry and poetics information is open and available to you. We are trying to make access to printed publications as easy as possible to our users and ENCOURAGE you to participate! Send a list of your press/publications to [redacted] with the words EPC Press Listing in the subject line. You may also send materials on disk. (Write file name, word processing program, and Mac or PC on disk.) Send an e-mail message to the address above to obtain a mailing address to which to send your disk. Though files marked up with html are our goal, ascii files are perfectly acceptable. If your word processor ill save files in Rich Text Format (.rtf) this is also highly desirable

Send us extended information on new publications (including any back cover copy and sample poems) as well as complete catalogs/backlists (including excerpts from reviews, sample poems, etc.). Be sure to include full information for ordering--including prices and addresses and phone numbers both of the press and any distributors.

Initially, you might want to send short anouncements of new publications directly to the Poetics list as subscribers do not always (or ever) check the EPC; in your message please include full information for ordering. If you have a fuller listing at EPC, you might also mention that in any Poetics posts.

Some announcements circulated through Poetics and the EPC have received a noticeable responses; it may be an effective way to promote your publication and we are glad to facilitate information about interesting publications.

END OF POETICS LIST WELCOME

↑ Index

200. Gwyn McVay
Re: poet, critic, & umpire
Mon 9 Sep 1996

George, Emersonian Cricket is when you hit the ball with the paddle hard enough to awaken it to the beauty of nature and the transcendental world beyond this one. In this way it vaguely resembles Zen Lacrosse.

Gwyn "Kwatzu! Gesundheit!"

↑ Index

201. Susan Schultz
Re: Assembling - Appreciations - Issues
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Re: John Cayley's comments. I did think that the inclusion of Chinese material was a good thing and did go against the whiteness of the conference. My only comment there would be that their work was billed as "Language writing"--in other words, they're included because they're "like us," as it were. I'll say no more because unfortunately (I gave a paper at the same time) I was unable to attend that panel.

all best, Susan

↑ Index

202. Christina Fairbank Chirot poetry & baseball (fwd)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Sun, 8 Sep 1996 15:52:56 -0500 (CDT)
From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: poetry & baseball

> re comment using baseball as analogy for "playing it safe" in poetry--
>
> not so for Jack Spicer or Larry Eigner

Eigner early an avid listener to Red Sox games, used baseball statistics as way to develp memory in terms of visualization for doing mat--also for visualizing words--

Summers I was "good to myself"and every day waited for the Red Sox game on the radio--and you wanted the Red Sox to win today and win tomorrow whether they did or din't today . . . . maybe you're surprised when you forget to the extent you depend on memory . . . .

Remember/sabbath days to/keep time still/how multiple . . .

Eigner also listened to radio for Cid Corman's poetry show . . .

Spicer had his radio, too--the poet as radio--often tuned to baseball games--

"getting to first base"--Eigner has book called A Count of Some Things--from Score publications, Crag Hill's press

Spicer:

no telling what happened in this game. Except one didn't strike out. One feels they fielded it badly at second base.
Oceans of wildflowers. Utter logic of the form and color.

"Utter logic"--"speaking in tongues"--visualizing words--

"keep time still/how multiple"

Un coup de des n'abolira jamais le hasard . . . .

(or as Tug McGraw would say---You Gotta Believe
dbchirot

↑ Index

203. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Art on the Edge of Fashion (fwd)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Sun, 8 Sep 1996 18:34:49 -0500 (CDT)
From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Art on the Edge of Fashion

re: "From Outlaw to Classic'-fashion to museum--alternative to academy etc

'Art on the Edge of Fashion' at the Arizona State University Art Museum

focuses on contemporary art that uses the highly readable visual language of clothing and fashion.

Invitation/Preview/Press Information WebPage...

http://asuam.fa.asu.edu/artedge/artedge.htm

Eight artists from across the U.S. and Canada are featured in the exhibition:
Charles LeDray (New York), Christine LoFaso (Chicago), Kerrie Peterson (Los Angeles), Elaine Reichek (New York),
Beverly Semmes (New York), Jana Sterbak (Quebec), Nick Vaughn (Albuquerque), and Annie Wilson (Chicago).

February 1, 1997 through April 27, 1997.

↑ Index

204. Sheila Murphy test message
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Test

↑ Index

205. Tom Mandel
(no subject)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Dan Davidson was one of the most gifted and alive human beings I have known and I count myself lucky to have come to know him as well as I did, tho never well enough.

Only a couple of weeks ago, Dan asked me whether I thought we should send out a couple of earlier collaborative poems we'd done in preparation for Absence Sensorium, and we exchanged email about the production of AS just a few days ago. So I know he was thinking of the future, not of shutting down that future, quite recently.

I will miss him terribly.

Tom
Screen Porch
****
Tom Mandel * think [redacted] * out fax [redacted] * here

[redacted]*
****

↑ Index

206. Joe Amato
Re: Assembling - (Paper)form(alitie)s - (Critics & Poets)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

---

just to throw in with john cayley on this question of emedia, and to suggest one way to functionalize helpfully: those of you with good internet resources might consider holding a pre-conference salon/symposium (even moo---though i prefer mself the less synchronous fora)... or setting up a provisional web site (which could comprise papers, poetry, etc.)...

it's been done before, sure, and sometimes to good advantage... i think in fact the poetry/critical thread could have been chewed over some with some positive results before convening... i'm not certain poetics is the place to do this (and i'm not the one to say), but it seems to me that there's a lot of potential for prefacing conferences through the internet...

joe

↑ Index

207. Douglas Messerli
Re: Dan Davidson
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Dear Kevin,

Is this the same Daniel Davidson who wrote "Bureaucrat, My Love," some of which appeared in Gertrude Stein Awards in 1993-1994?

Douglas

At 09:13 PM 9/8/96 +0100, you wrote:
>We have some sad news to deliver. San Francisco poet Daniel Davidson died >Saturday night, apparently by his own hand, after many years of pain >following open heart surgery. Details are sketchy at this point, but more >detailed obituaries will follow.
>
>I (Dodie) met Dan in the mid-80s (actually got to know him, since I'd seen >him around) at the UCSF medical center where I was a temp secretary and he >was coming frequently for follow-up for his heart surgery. He and I spend >many an evening together discussing writing, living, music, art (and >drugs). We were both avid about Messiaen's "Quartet for the End of Time" >and sometimes we'd shut up long enough to listen to it at his apartment on >Haight Street. I've never seen anyone live more grandly on a fixed income >than Dan--he was amazing. Bringing home castoff clothing from the >Salvation Army, dyeing them black, and cutting such a dashing figure. At >that time Dan hadn't published much, but shortly afterward he became an >important figure in the Bay Area writing scene, writing, giving readings, >curating series. He taught an after-school program for small children at >Small Press Traffic when it was still on 24th Street.

>
>I (Kevin) remember Dan always in the audience at every kind of poetry >reading you could imagine, always with his own determined take on things.
>Perhaps because he came to poetry late, he was burning up with poetry >fever, and he could be exhausting in his naked need to know more. And >because he had this plastic heart valve he often thought of himself as not >having much time. He was generous to a wide variety of young writers and >attentive to his elders. I was glad to be able to write a "blurb" for his >first book "Product." In recent years I didn't see him around much.
>Couldn't figure it out. The last reading I saw him give was with Bob >Perelman at New Langton Arts, and when was that? At least 2 years ago. He >shied away from all the events he used to shine at. Last month when Anselm >Berrigan and Katie Lederer left for parts East, Dan came to the party for >them--still Byronic, still dashing, but gray, gray.... and he and I talked >then about this and that. God! The ironic thing is that he was scheduled >to participate in the "Proliferation 3" reading Dodie and Mary Burger are >holding at Small Press Traffic this coming Friday (the 13th). And now >their plans are to make it into some kind of memorial in his honor, I >guess.
>
>Sorry to fill up the bandwidth with all this info about Dan and us, but as >you can see, we have the kind of grief that's hard to take hold of and make >sense of--a grief not unmixed with guilt. I know that the book Dan wrote >with Tom Mandel is coming out soon, the collaboration from Poets and Potes >Press of which he was so pleased and so proud. That's something, tho' >right now I don't know what.
>

↑ Index

208. Jordan Davis

sans teeth (p lopate)

Mon 9 Sep 1996

Interesting invisibility of the avant-garde in Phillip Lopate's NY Times Book Review 'bookend' on contemporary American Poetry. Anybody read it? A fairly standard and caustic assessment of workshop poetry (tho Lopate refuses to identify it as such), such as you might see by R. Silliman or C. Bernstein circa 1980, but with this difference--Lopate thinks it just lacks sufficient _molarity_.

"Paradoxical as it sounds, American poetry today suffers not from being too personal and confessional, but from being not personal or confessional enough. Often the poet pulls back from providing just those biographical specificities and idiosyncratic reactions that would bring him alive as an authentic individual. Instead, there is a judicious ladling of images and metaphors and sense details to make the poem resemble that craft object, that Procrustean bed, the contemporary American poem; and the poet, abandoning onerous individuality, merges prematurely with the collective ethos. The result is that we do not encounter that many quirky, uniquely voiced individuals in poetry today. What we do encounter is a lot of half-baked sages, speaking piously for their tribal or communal sliver."

I'll forswear to kid Lopate's style, which is as monstrously post-Trilling as it gets (judges wield gavels, not ladles, btw), and look at, I mean characterize, his argument (which, echoing the title of the essay, singles out no particular 'weak poet'--David Shapiro's phrase). This is the Tarantino (Spielberg) argument, that American film has gotten too wimpy and needs strong narrative, explicit violence, and a good soundtrack. It is not dissimilar to the Gingrich (Reagan) argument, that American politics needs to put even more power in the hands of the very few who have power. I believe that American poetry does not need greater intensities of personality and confession _from those who would make a career of personality and confession_. No. Some, even a little, fun (in all the late capitalist haze of that word) would be enough to redeem _those_ poets, at least for the page or two one encounters them on when one is uncareful, ambitious, or lonely. As Lopate said nothing about _any other kind of poet_, I'll say nothing about _us_, except that I myself haven't felt the need to listen all the way through a baseball game since October 1986 (Attn: Steve Evans-- a more politic starting time for the current poetic era than 1989?). That probably says more about me than it does about poetry, but I can't believe _everybody_ who talks about 'personism' in terms of 'lucky Pierre' has that wild a life.

I would ask any poets reading this list who do _not_ believe that _all_ American poetry today is congruous with Lopate's assessment to write a brief letter stating so to:

The Editor
New York Times Book Review
229 W 43rd St
New York NY 10036

It is not that often that a critic both wrongheaded and genially capable of reading will get in the way so opportunely--anyway. Just thought some of you would enjoy thinking about it.

Jordan Davis

↑ Index

209. Jordan Davis
Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Well that was a bad sentence. Obviously I mean that Lopate's criticisms of mainstream poetry are not that different from Langpo's criticisms of mainstream poetry. Have a nice thread!

J

↑ Index

210. Joseph Lease
Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

On Mon, 9 Sep 1996, Jordan Davis wrote:

> Well that was a bad sentence. Obviously I mean that Lopate's criticisms of mainstream poetry are not that different from Langpo's criticisms of mainstream poetry. Have a nice thread!
>
> J

Jordan,

I don't know yet what the sentence in question was but your choice to take on Lopate seems loaded, overdetermined, in a variety of ways you could profitably acknowledge. Obviously know-body on this list, including and especially me, would agree with the limits of Lopate's configuration. Although, within that configuration, there is much that he says that could do good and be the opposite of the Tarrantino/Gingrich equation you try for. David Shapiro's work is an example of work that does so much more than what Lopate says most postconfessional work does: and as you know Lopate has praised Shapiro's work for that very reason. By the way, what is the 86 versus 89 thing about. I read with interest Dodie's post saying that Hejinian was happy to hear that people said Language poetry had been over for ten years. That seems a healthy and healthful and helpful response on her part, gracious as well. And presumably we can say over in one important sense continuing in another. Aesthetic breakthroughs are there for poets: surrealism is there, seventeenth century poetry is there, if one can make them convincing in one's praxis. So, and I see you were addressing Steve here, but, really, what is our current era.

Joseph

↑ Index

211. Joseph Lease
Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

On Mon, 9 Sep 1996, Jordan Davis wrote:

> Well that was a bad sentence. Obviously I mean that Lopate's criticisms of mainstream poetry are not that different from Langpo's criticisms of mainstream poetry. Have a nice thread!
>
> J

PS

And obviously I also mean that Lopate's criticisms of mainstream poetry are not that different from Langpo's criticisms of mainstream poetry. So though I'm not going to bumrush the times today I agree that everyone should. Not, obviously, under one banner but in the full glory of multiple communities with multiple histories to go with multiple poetics.

Joseph

↑ Index

212. Ira Lightman
Assembling Alternative UK Criticism
Mon 9 Sep 1996

I was really glad for Joe Amato's statement that we could safely assume on this list that we're not talking about most critics (Ron Silliman's justified attacks on Altieri etc notwithstanding).
Because there still seems to be so much prejudice against critics. I think it's groovy that, as Romana puts out, the by now infamous unnamed

Irish poet did go away with new books to read. But does that amount to an openness to those books? Or are they simply (as Derrida says critically about Freud's reading of The Emperor Has No Clothes story as being essentially about nakedness) going to use the "new" books to stage repetitions of their old solipsisms?

A lot of Uk "linguistically innovative" writers present a thinker as the guarantor of their work, without letting you say "how, given this and this", "why that thinker?", "why do you think that's what that thinker means?", a key idea for Derrida, one of the finest poets living. This critic/poet issue is crucial for current UK practice, because there simply is less exchange than in the US Language Writing scene. You can trace the way that Language Writers gave each other paradigms, accepting gracefully, not being scared to resemble each other; where UK poets often have to say "I saw it first, or, if you did, I can't use it". This was going to be the subject of the paper I offered to Romana for AA, though there was no money to go (and Romana battled to get me there till a week before).

I'm not saying I critic wish to control this situation and, if possible, somehow punish bad behaviour; I'm actually saying that I cherish poetic culture, and that critic-baiting solipsism endangers it. People are so scared of poetry and it is important to be careful and scrupulous towards them. Many many poets, in my opinion, unconsciously love this fear of poetry in their audience and use it to counterbalance their own fear of presenting their work in public - but it would be better if they did some confidence training! Otherwise, the fearful reader comes into the reading and is, I think, overwhelmed by the potentials of what might be (as people are when first hearing a piece of complex music longer and more various than a pop song, Philip Glass thus not included on the latter count);

"where might this go next? anywhere! madness!
revelation!" you hear the audience's brains going. If a poet says "here is the return of the Irish longpoem", many audience members will take it in, without thinking what long and short might mean, and repeat it to others and by canon-idealism refuse to read work that differs from that canon-definition;
and, again, I think many poets want this,
to pull up the ladder behind them, to be the Last Poet. But it destroys poetic culture, it privatises it round that one poet.

Sometimes I think, with Chris F perhaps?, there should be no criticism whatsoever,
although I for one used Marjorie's books as a bible/anthology (like a younger generation carried The New American Poetry round?) more than In The American Tree (tho this has become my favourite book, it took me years, literally, via Marjorie, to get into it, to know how to stand in it, to not feel scared and lost and I want to go home).

But then this is why, as somebody indicated shouldn't be said, poets should be told as forcefully as critics are being on this list (another false dichotomy: poets are easily hurt, critics can take it) to shut up;
no remarks at all. Or be more accurate.
Because either the former, silence, or the latter, accuracy, respects the fear of the newcomer but allows the newcomer respect and space and slow careful nurturing into poetic culture (which is a way of being, as Cage might have said, not a cult round an author; it is the author's privilege to facilitate it, to stimulate it not frame it with one's art).

If it is aggression by a critic, to say shut up, it is on behalf of the audience and, indeed, the higher way that the poet could enjoy if more in tune with the audience.

This poet/critic thread is not irrelevant to a conference bringing together (primarily) Uk poets and Us Language Writers; it may well be not what a lot of people want to come out of AA, but it is a key issue in British experimental poetry, which has a much smaller regular audience than a lot of US poets of similar publication longevity, and, I think, largely deserves it, in acting fearfully towards fear.

Ira Lightman

↑ Index

213. maria damon
Re: critics & Poets
Mon 9 Sep 1996

---

j hansen sez: The irritation at critics, though, has a real basis. When at SUNY-Buffalo I overheard one graduate student in film studies tell another that it was interesting to hear the filmmaker discuss her work because "artists never know what they are really doing."

i say: i've observed this too; u of mn grad student criticizing Claude Lanzman, of all people, for his belief that an artist/filmmaker (himself) was really accomplishing something in approaching the unspeakable...they found it theoretically naive. with all respect to grad students on the list, i find this to be more typical of grad students who are learning to be "academics" than of seasoned "critics" or academics who actually interact w/ artists a lot...but much of this is a reaction to the daze when critics/academic saw their primary task as transmitting, with a bullying sort of messianic energy (cf dead poets' society) an uncritical worship of certain texts and certain GENIUSES. etc md

↑ Index

214. Christina Fairbank Chirot

CONSCIOUSNESS REFRAMED

Mon 9 Sep 1996

---

re Jeff Hansen's note--the student who thought that artists don't know what they are saying anyway--

Marcel Duchamp liked to point out the phrase, "bete comme un peintre'--say it gave him some 'food for thought" so to speak--to make art that demontrates art as thinking-- of course this has given rise to an industry of interpretations--(among them the Kabbalah as I think some one pointed out in a previous thread--)--leading Robert Smithson to propose Duchamp as an Occultist--

(or a cult figure . . .)

Smithson wrote of an "art of looking"--as opposed to "art objects"-- which leads to one of questions of poets/critics thread--who owns, controls, maps out territories--of what is called poetry--re Emerson--notice ways he discusses property in relation to the poet in "Nature" and "The Poet"-- from "Nature": There is a property in the horizon which no man has but he whose eye can integrate all the parts, that is, the poet."

But such discussion also occurs in relation to creation of American 'original relation to the universe"--hence caught up in issue of a National Culture--and becomes complicated--

In "The Poet" : the poet is 'Land-Lord, air-lord, sea-lord"--again poetry and property--

A Russian critic of Marinetti's visit to Russia before WWI pointed out that Marinetti's ruptures of syntax in his Parole in Liberta did not nothing to change property relations since the rights of private property are inscribed in the U.S. Constitution--seems appropriate to examine aspects of the poets/critics threads in the usa in relation to mapping of territories, controlling and owning of such, distribution of it . . .

presentation of poetry via the academy--what is taught in classrooms--as this may have as much effect long term as criticism etc--(this list after all being presented through academic system)

and this in relation to debates going on over dissemination and control of e networks, e mail--and virtual reality, cyberspace--

so here a conference on aspects of virtual art which may be of interest

dbchirot

F orwarded message -
--------- Date: Mon, 9 Sep 1996 10:56:18 +0100
From: NECHVATAL Joseph <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: CONSCIOUSNESS REFRAMED

I am serving on the advisory board for an upcoming International Conference entitled "CONSCIOUSNESS REFRAMED" which is being conducted at CAiiA, the Centre for Advanced Inquiry in the Interactive Arts, at the University of Wales. We are holding this International Conference on July 5,6 in 97.

My area of interest involves VR & theoretical avant-garde artistic spacial constructs of VR information. The topic heading will be : " Deframed Perceptual Spaces : mirrorings, imaginings, replicas & copies of mirrored images".

There are other topics groups in development as well. Here they all are:

* Mapping and Responsive Visualisations
* Public-Personal
* Sonic Reembodiment/Disembodiment
* Left Brain Navigation
* Cyberception and Paranature
* The Cybernetics of Architecture
* Community of Ahomogeneous Systems
* Dream Consciousness Reality
* Transformations and Future Body

I'm looking for avant-garde art related papers on these subjects. If interested please contact me at: [redacted]

Feel free to circulate this notice.

Joseph Nechvatal @ Paris
http://www.dom.de/arts/artists/jnech/
http://www.cybertheque.fr/galerie/jnech

Data only becomes information if it changes something.

↑ Index

215. Jeff Hansen
critics & Poets
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Three cheers for Michael Boughn,

The argument that criticism could exist without literature has been bunk since the insecure new critics used it to try to shore up their claim to intellectual legitimacy. (Yes, we are as objective as the scientists.) Criticism certainly has a role to play, but to pretend that it could exist w/o literature is as ridiculous as claiming that natural science could exist w/o nature.

There is, however, a reciprocity. Critics do help poets: by placing our work in historical context, by evaluating us (sorry, but at some point this is an institutional necessity and it must and will be done--distasteful, though.), by explaining what we do, by championing some of us. We are perhaps in some sort of symbiosis.

The irritation at critics, though, has a real basis. When at SUNY-Buffalo I overheard one graduate student in film studies tell another that it was interesting to hear the filmmaker discuss her work because "artists never know what they are really doing."

Such critical arrogance is commonplace today: Many critics need to hold on to the naive myth of artists as romantic primitives, bellowing out inspired works that they do not understand. [Note that this myth was applied to artists by Plato and was one of the reasons he banned them from his Republic: they are intuitive and inspired rather than rational.] It serves them well. It makes the critics more important than the artists.

finally, marjorie Perloff has done so many poets and the poetry community in general a service by her advocacy of us to other academics and the public at large. I appreciate all that she has done, and I know from her writings that she has more respect and love for art than do most critics. I feel that I can understand why she reads. With many critics, I'm left wondering: Do you actually enjoy reading?

Jeff Hansen

↑ Index

216. Jordan Davis
mookie (loop) ten years after
Mon 9 Sep 1996

I am referring to the Buckner bobble, of course, as the moment in 1986 (glorious revolution?) from which I date this different feeling. If as you say my writing against Lopate (from within the offices of an organization he practically invented) is 'overdetermined' then I have written so to remain within some semblance of the limits of the terms of Lopate's (unambiguous) argument. Does this make me a sucker? To want to show that _even within Lopate's version of poetry, his argument is conservative?_ I am not quite sure what overdetermined might mean here. It sounds like 'written in crayon' or 'written as if through forty sheets of carbon paper' to me most of the time. Now if you want to read Lopate's argument (from the one paragraph I took from a full-page piece) as a variation on the archetypal language cry of "Resistance!" then fine. I'm French, I won't call that bluff. But I don't see it. Instead, I see a contrarian opening a possibility for public non-debate--one in which everyone involved may profit in column inches, and in which risk will remain fairly low _as long as nobody names names_. Elsewhere in the essay, Lopate seems to take as a given the evolution of the contemporary American poem into a truncated personal essay. In the spirit of Sheila Murphy's test message, I ask you again, true or false. You will ask, can we really take the NY Times Book Review seriously. What sort of question is that? Is there no talking to the deans of Columbia College, or the Princess Caetani, or the listserv manager, or Chip McGrath? Really? If there is no 'taking on' willful ignorance when it blunders on in public, then all this discussion is really about is making sure our names appear. That--that jumping on the wrong, and doing one's best to avoid it in one's own work--is what excites me about the anonymous writing on this list, it's what thrills me about many recent chapbooks from anonymous and minuscule presses, it's why I go to readings and host them and give them, because it is profoundly exciting to be saying something, anything, that is _not_ recognized, that _cannot be_ recognized by the literary and publishing public, not through any fault of theirs _or_ my own. When Aram Saroyan, fed up with New York and the poetry-consuming public of the early 70s, left for the west coast, he wrote an open letter to the Poetry Project Newsletter. It was kind of silly. There were a lot of underlined words. In the subsequent issue of the Newsletter, a letter signed I think it was "The New York School" appeared, listing all the words Saroyan had underlined. A funny satire does a famous amount of work, even if it marks the few people capable of it with the word 'humorist'--a word no one has yet gotten out from under, though most of the truly and consistently funny writers of the last 10,000 years have tried. I'm not proposing that someone call Lopate a humorist--habeas corpus, etc. But why the surrealists, why the seventeenth century? Why not the silver poets, or the negritude poets, or anybody? Why only the A+ movements--consider the context and the unstated requirements of the A plus. Or don't, I don't want to discuss _my_ private life either. I guess all I wanted was to posit a mainstream other, you know, not for _electioneering_ but to provide some focus, some _context_ for the discussion about poets/critics.

Okay!
Jordan

↑ Index

217. Burt Kimmelman
Re: sans teeth (p lopate)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Jordan,

Thank you for so eloquently summing up my frustrations at Lopate's pot shots.

Burt

↑ Index

218. Tony Green
Re: "Poets vs. Critics"
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Good move, Dodie. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

219. maria damon
Re: Conceptual crit?
Mon 9 Sep 1996

---

filch rites: If a bunch of academics can get together and call themselves and the poetry they study to be "alternative" then it certainly makes sense that "elitism" would be a tad confusing to those academics.

i rite: i take exception to your tone. i know the meaning of the word "elitist." i am familiar with its uses, particularly the way it gets tagged onto anything one wants to diss. the assumption is that elitism is bad, and one should go to any and all measures to avoid being called "elitist." i'm not a stupid person, and i'm not a bunch of academics calling things things. md

↑ Index

220. filch
Re: Conceptual crit?
Mon 9 Sep 1996

This thread arose directly out of critic/poet thread.

> i rite: huh? where in the thread did "inherent elitism" rear its nonsensical head? never mind...i sd i'd retire..just procrastinating on my next project...bests to you, rob xo, md

If a bunch of academics can get together and call themselves and the poetry they study to be "alternative" then it certainly makes sense that "elitism" would be a tad confusing to those academics.

Correct me if i am wrong - is it not true that the majority of publishing poets today are associated with universities? Is it not true that 99% of the (limited) money to be made in poetry; whether grants, stipends, (royalties - granted I'm sure there is not a lot of that), or salaries go to those in the academy?

It strikes me that the assembling of alternatives would entail getting the poet who goes into the prisons and workshops with prisoners, or the poets who recite verse on the subway on the weekends to the upwardly mobile and homeless. Nirvana at the end was so alternative you could see their "alternativeness" in every record store in the land. They were so alternative Cobain put a shotgun in his mouth to escape the alternatives.

It might make sense within the academy to gather writers together under the auspices of a university and say things like "we were able to gather the entire Irish avante garde together for this conference" or we are "concerned about the lack of people of color at the conference" but don't for a minute believe this is done without elitism. The avante garde cannot be found within the academy no matter how linguistically interesting the work may be. The status quo is in the university and no matter the battles which rage within the academic community of langpo vs not or whatever as long as the status quo resides within the university it cannot honestly claim "alternative" or "avante garde" for itself.

I would go so far as to say that since, to my limited knowledge, poetry has never been involved to a great extent in the commercial realm that Bob Holman's producing of poetry shows for Toyota is far more avante garde than anything at all going on in the academy. To that extent (mt)v is far more avante garde as well in that it has given voice to poetry outside of the academy as well.

Today's situation is analogous IMHO to the soviet era of the writer's union. Far more valuable work is going on now within the "union" but please don't pretend it's not a union. "Inherent elitism" is not nonsensical to me.

cf

> i rite: huh? where in the thread did "inherent elitism" rear its nonsensical head? never mind...i sd i'd retire..just procrastinating on my next project...bests to you, rob xo, md

↑ Index

221. Tony Green
Re: Assembling - (Paper)form(alitie)s - (Critics & Poets)
Mon 9 Sep 1996

John Cayley's comments on the Rite of Reading Papers (= Conference) hit home. Recently there was an invitation to a Visual Poetry Conference. In an e-mail exchange I learned that if I was unable to go (New Zealand to Canada) to the Conference, I could send a poster. I enquired whether the poster was to represent a paper or a visual poem. No reply. At a conference here in Auckland this year, the problem of appropriate discourse came up again, a conference on Narrative. Should a conference on narrative consist of critical papers on narrative or should it largely consist of narrations which concerned, or related to, the "conceptual" base ((avoiding the word "theory" here)) of narrative?

Where's the differences, then?. Between conference papers and narratives? between philosophical, conceptually analytical discourses, and narrative? what would Plato have to say?

reading The Protagoras last week, I note that Platos has Socrates begin by telling the story of his encounter with Protagoras. Protagoras, at one point in this story, asks Socrates and the other persons present, whether he should explain something or tell a story. He tells a story which turns into an explanation as it goes, that is to take advantage of the narrqative by pointing to what is ssalient to his "argument". Plato also represents even the longest of the discourses as if they are spoken and off the cuff at that.

What authorises the peculiar practice of the modern academic conference? in which there is a cleqr divide between speaker and listener roles, often with little chance for discusssion.

best Protagoras last week3sanrratives

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

222. maria damon
Re: Conceptual crit?
Mon 9 Sep 1996

---

hey wow. i'm touched. i guess my point is that i've seen the term "elitist" used in so many contradictory ways (but always negative) that anyone can call anything elitist and have it mean not much more than "i feel left out." i was a diehard anti-elitist as a grad student in stanford's modern thought and lit, and was mortified to see a profile of our program characterize the student body as a group who "enjoyed their status as a small and selective elite." then i came to the u of mn, a huge public landgrant univ, whose lack of "real" elitism led to a yucky kind of status anxiety on the part of faculty etc; they outdid each other in wearing tweed, going to the symphony, bewailing low student achievement -- and calling those of us who were younger and theory-literate both "elite" and "yahooistic" depending on immediate context. my students, as i've said, use the word "elitist" to describe a text containing words that are more than two syllables. at the same time, they expect their college education to give them a familiarity w/ "the classics" that will enable them to get a good money-making job...the contradictions are endless and obvious. etc.md

In message <v02130502ae5a50922e0d@[198.147.97.100]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> I publicly apologize to Maria. Upon rereading my post it is indeed too > confrontational.
>
> I believe my points are valid but my tact is lacking.
>
> pher
>
> >filch rites:
> >If a bunch of academics can get together and call themselves and the poetry > >they study to be "alternative" then it certainly makes sense that "elitism" > >would be a tad confusing to those academics.
> >
> >i rite: i take exception to your tone. i know the meaning of the word
> >"elitist." i am familiar with its uses, particularly the way it gets tagged > >onto anything one wants to diss. the assumption is that elitism is bad, > >and one > >should go to any and all measures to avoid being called "elitist." i'm not > a > >stupid person, and i'm not a bunch of academics calling things things.
> >md

↑ Index

223. filch
Re: Conceptual crit?
Mon 9 Sep 1996

I publicly apologize to Maria. Upon rereading my post it is indeed too confrontational.

I believe my points are valid but my tact is lacking.

pher

> filch rites:
> If a bunch of academics can get together and call themselves and the poetry they study to be "alternative" then it certainly makes sense that "elitism" would be a tad confusing to those academics.
>
> i rite: i take exception to your tone. i know the meaning of the word "elitist." i am familiar with its uses, particularly the way it gets tagged onto anything one wants to diss. the assumption is that elitism is bad, and one > should go to any and all measures to avoid being called "elitist." i'm not a stupid person, and i'm not a bunch of academics calling things things.
> md

↑ Index

224. Tony Green
Re: poetry & baseball + RADIO
Mon 9 Sep 1996

English writers of a certain age will find it difficult to evade acknowledging the influence on poetics of such grand figures as Raymond Glendenning and John Arlott. Rado commentators on sports action perform what I take to be an important language/poetic function. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

225. Tony Green
Re: test message
Mon 9 Sep 1996

Yout test score: 100%

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

226. Joseph Zitt
*Re: *CONSCIOUSNESS REFRAMED
Mon 9 Sep 1996

On 9 Sep 96 at 12:09, Christina Fairbank Chirot wrote:

> Marcel Duchamp liked to point out the phrase, "bete comme un peintre'--say it gave him some 'food for thought" so to speak--to make art that demontrates art as thinking--

For the few of us out here who don't speak French: What does that phrase mean? ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ==== [redacted] ===== Dallas, Texas \||| ||/ Question Authority, The == SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt == <> <> == The Data Wranglers! \|

↑ Index

227. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

Notice to critics, writers and/or readers -- E-Zine

Mon 9 Sep 1996

---

since everyone else is posting ezine info on the web, here is mine: i am assistant editor at an ezine on the web called Free Cuisenart, the literary magazine for Creative Coalition of Artists (CCA), the site organized about a year ago to fight censorship on the net

Free Cuisenart had a special international issue in August featuring Viktor Carr's essay on growing up in Croatia, poems by Karen McKevitt, Tom Hubschman, Martin Auer, Jim Gourley, and Liz Thelen, and a short story by Trevor Reeves. The August "Wowzine" issue can be found at: http://www.stjpub.com/cca/fca.html

This month's issue has an interview with Stephen Williamson (editor and co-creator of _Motley Focus Locus_), poems by LeeAnn Heringer, Ray Heinrich, Taylor Graham, Bruce Bentzman, Sean Curtis Brendan-Brown, David Kitchel, Michael McNeilley, Richard Fein, and CyberClem, a story by Trevor Reeves, and an incredible poem/essay on living in Canada by semi-regular to regular (he is charmingly noncommittal) Viktor Carr. All the work, of course, is incredible and i don't just say that because i work there.

we are always looking for readers, of course, but we are also looking for writers. if you'd like to send us work, the email address is: [redacted]

↑ Index

228. Christina Fairbank Chirot

duchamp quote

Tue 10 Sep 1996

Joseph Zitt--apologies for ye elitist untranslated french quote-- bete comme un peintre--means stupid like a painter (bete means beast,animal--so painter a stupid animal, or dumb beast so to speak--)(for the millions of kids who know "bete" from the Disney Beauty and the Beast--"bete" like a painter--might seem a little surprising and funny--) --dbc

↑ Index

229. George Bowering
Re: poet, critic, & umpire
Tue 10 Sep 1996

> George, Emersonian Cricket is when you hit the ball with the paddle hard enough to awaken it to the beauty of nature and the transcendental world beyond this one. In this way it vaguely resembles Zen Lacrosse.
>
> Gwyn "Kwatzu! Gesundheit!"

Ah! It sounds a lot like what we call Shelleyan Badminton.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

230. George Bowering
Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
Tue 10 Sep 1996

> I am referring to the Buckner bobble, of course, as the moment in 1986 (glorious revolution?) from which I date this different feeling.

I believe that the Buckner Bobble was one of those momentous events that you remember the way you remember Kennedy's killing. Like, where were you when Buckner let Mookie's weak grounder go thru him?

I was in a bar in Cleveland, watching the game on TV, across the street from Muni Stadium. Unfortunately, I was drinking with a bunch of guys from New York! Damnit! George Butterick was one of them.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

231. henry
Re: poet critic critic poet...
Tue 10 Sep 1996

Have to agree with Joe (hey, I was a main culprit). To criticize the easy critics - why can't the list have several topics going, without getting badmouthed? You want reminiscences about the conference, instead of po/crit debates - ok, just ask for them. You want to discuss something else - fine, bring it up. But don't play the one-up game every time you have an opener. (I'm trying to take my own advice.)

Mike Boughn & Joe Amato brought up what seems to me the basic issue, at the root of all the framing discomfort. If poetry is simply a human activity, under human control - then we can make it whatever we want. The categories of poetry/prose/cricitism etc. are up to us. This is a gray area - in a certain sense, it can't be denied - everything is socially constructed. But what I was trying to emphasize, & what the Steiner quote was about (partly), is that in creative work there is a certain rawness, a LOSS of control, a surrender - to inspiration, the Muse, the Other, whatever you want to call it. This is where the rawness, the originality, the ghettoization, the discomfort, the Platonic exile, the glory/shame of it are all about. How much is a scientist "in control" when s/he comes up with an earth-shaking new theory or discovery? Poetry is the surrender to strange coherence (sorry for the "poetry is..." phrase). And if it's purely a strategic choice on my part to try to differentiate between poetry & criticism it's not to ghettoize them or antagonize them but to bring out something that's really there, whether in fusion with criticism or not. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

232. Robert Drake
Re: Conceptual crit?
Tue 10 Sep 1996

(filch):
>Correct me if i am wrong - is it not true that the majority of publishing >poets today are associated with universities? Is it not true that 99% of >the (limited) money to be made in poetry; whether grants, stipends, >(royalties - granted I'm sure there is not a lot of that), or salaries go >to those in the academy?

by my count (& i measure "publishing poets" by the yard, on my overflowing "to be reviewed" shelves), you are _quite_ wrong, in terms of numbers of publishing poets--also in quantity of publications, and i'd guess in readership (dare i wonder outloud, here, about "quantity" vs. "quality"? no, i dare not)... certainly, tho, th majority of criticism published is criticism of poets associated w/ universities (directed to same?); likewise the $$ bit...

what's the point?

lbd
trr/burning press/etc...

↑ Index

233. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: The Rutgers Conference
Tue 10 Sep 1996

Thanks all for the information. Hope to see you there!

Julie Schmid

↑ Index

234. Joseph Lease
Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
Tue 10 Sep 1996

On Mon, 9 Sep 1996, Jordan Davis wrote:

> I am referring to the Buckner bobble, of course, as the moment in 1986 > (glorious revolution?) from which I date this different feeling. If as you > say my writing against Lopate (from within the offices of an organization > he practically invented) is 'overdetermined' then I have written so to > remain within some semblance of the limits of the terms of Lopate's > (unambiguous) argument. Does this make me a sucker? To want to show that > _even within Lopate's version of poetry, his argument is conservative?_ I > am not quite sure what overdetermined might mean here. It sounds like > 'written in crayon' or 'written as if through forty sheets of carbon paper'
> to me most of the time. Now if you want to read Lopate's argument (from the > one paragraph I took from a full-page piece) as a variation on the > archetypal language cry of "Resistance!" then fine. I'm French, I won't > call that bluff. But I don't see it. Instead, I see a contrarian opening a > possibility for public non-debate--one in which everyone involved may > profit in column inches, and in which risk will remain fairly low _as long > as nobody names names_. Elsewhere in the essay, Lopate seems to take as a > given the evolution of the contemporary American poem into a truncated > personal essay. In the spirit of Sheila Murphy's test message, I ask you > again, true or false. You will ask, can we really take the NY Times Book > Review seriously. What sort of question is that? Is there no talking to the > deans of Columbia College, or the Princess Caetani, or the listserv > manager, or Chip McGrath? Really? If there is no 'taking on' willful > ignorance when it blunders on in public, then all this discussion is really > about is making sure our names appear. That--that jumping on the wrong, and > doing one's best to avoid it in one's own work--is what excites me about > the anonymous writing on this list, it's what thrills me about many recent > chapbooks from anonymous and minuscule presses, it's why I go to readings > and host them and give them, because it is profoundly exciting to be saying > something, anything, that is _not_ recognized, that _cannot be_ recognized > by the literary and publishing public, not through any fault of theirs _or_ > my own. When Aram Saroyan, fed up with New York and the poetry-consuming > public of the early 70s, left for the west coast, he wrote an open letter > to the Poetry Project Newsletter. It was kind of silly. There were a lot of > underlined words. In the subsequent issue of the Newsletter, a letter > signed I think it was "The New York School" appeared, listing all the words > Saroyan had underlined. A funny satire does a famous amount of work, even > if it marks the few people capable of it with the word 'humorist'--a word

> no one has yet gotten out from under, though most of the truly and > consistently funny writers of the last 10,000 years have tried. I'm not > proposing that someone call Lopate a humorist--habeas corpus, etc. But why > the surrealists, why the seventeenth century? Why not the silver poets, or > the negritude poets, or anybody? Why only the A+ movements-- consider the > context and the unstated requirements of the A plus. Or don't, I don't want > to discuss _my_ private life either. I guess all I wanted was to posit a > mainstream other, you know, not for _electioneering_ but to provide some > focus, some _context_ for the discussion about poets/critics.
>
> Okay!
> Jordan
>

Ok. I only mentioned surrealism and seventeenth century poetry as what is open to being rehistoricized. Silver age, negritude, Carl Sandburg, Dada, all likewise. No one's a sucker and yes we should take the times seriously even as they make it virtually impossible to do so. I agree that Lopate's argument is conservative in one way and I also agree with you that his criticism of mainstream postconfessional stuff is similar to Langpo's. So what to do with that loop. And I certainly wasn't asking you to get postconfessional about a private life (whatever that is, isn't the personal political even when the personal must be exploded in order for ideology to be revealed at work). I think all I meant was isn't Lopate affiliated with NY School in a way.

Ok.

↑ Index

235. Joseph Lease
Re: Conceptual crit?
Tue 10 Sep 1996

On Mon, 9 Sep 1996, maria damon wrote:

> filch rites:
> If a bunch of academics can get together and call themselves and the poetry they study to be "alternative" then it certainly makes sense that "elitism" would be a tad confusing to those academics.
>
> i rite: i take exception to your tone. i know the meaning of the word "elitist." i am familiar with its uses, particularly the way it gets tagged onto anything one wants to diss. the assumption is that elitism is bad, and one should go to any and all measures to avoid being called "elitist." i'm not a stupid person, and i'm not a bunch of academics calling things things.
> md

poets have always written about poetry institutions have always corrupted

in any event we are always multiple communities with multiple and simultaneous histories that needs to be the starting point for the context in which to say as Jordan wants to that Lopate's position vis a vis postconfessional isn't tough enough and likewise as filch and md want to that theory and poetics are both here and manifest subject positions coming into being against (sometimes) great social odds

↑ Index

236. Joseph Lease
poetics follies (fwd)
Tue 10 Sep 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Mon, 9 Sep 1996 17:17:07 -0400
From: Jordan Davis <[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
Subject: poetics follies

Joseph-- My apologies for any snippiness in the last back to you. I think I got a bit carried away. Lopate's analysis isn't bad--but he's not clear about how much of poetry he's talking about.. that is, his premises are bad. Anyway.. thanks for the lively back and forth. Jordan

↑ Index

237. Joseph Lease
Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
Tue 10 Sep 1996

On Tue, 10 Sep 1996, Joseph Lease wrote:

> On Mon, 9 Sep 1996, Jordan Davis wrote:
>
> > I am referring to the Buckner bobble, of course, as the moment in 1986 > > (glorious revolution?) from which I date this different feeling. If as you > > say my writing against Lopate (from within the offices of an organization
> > he practically invented) is 'overdetermined' then I have written so to > > remain within some semblance of the limits of the terms of Lopate's > > (unambiguous) argument. Does this make me a sucker? To want to show that > > _even within Lopate's version of poetry, his argument is conservative?_ I > > am not quite sure what overdetermined might mean here. It sounds like
> > 'written in crayon' or 'written as if through forty sheets of carbon paper'
> > to me most of the time. Now if you want to read Lopate's argument (from the > > one paragraph I took from a full-page piece) as a variation on the > > archetypal language cry of "Resistance!" then fine. I'm French, I won't > > call that bluff. But I don't see it. Instead, I see a contrarian opening a > > possibility for public non-debate--one in which everyone involved may > > profit in column inches, and in which risk will remain fairly low _as long > > as nobody names names_. Elsewhere in the essay, Lopate seems to take as a > > given the evolution of the contemporary American poem into a truncated > > personal essay. In the spirit of Sheila Murphy's test message, I ask you > > again, true or false. You will ask, can we really take the NY Times Book > > Review seriously. What sort of question is that? Is there no talking to the > > deans of Columbia College, or the Princess Caetani, or the listserv > > manager, or Chip McGrath? Really? If there is no 'taking on' willful > > ignorance when it blunders on in public, then all this discussion is really > > about is making sure our names appear. That--that jumping on the wrong, and > > doing one's best to avoid it in one's own work--is what excites me about > > the anonymous writing on this list, it's what thrills me about many recent > > chapbooks from anonymous and minuscule presses, it's why I go to readings > > and host them and give them, because it is profoundly exciting to be saying > > something, anything, that is _not_ recognized, that _cannot be_ recognized > > by the literary and publishing public, not through any fault of theirs _or_ > > my own. When Aram Saroyan, fed up with New York and the poetry-consuming > > public of the early 70s, left for the west coast, he wrote an open letter > > to the Poetry Project Newsletter. It was kind of silly. There were a lot of > > underlined words. In the subsequent issue of the Newsletter, a letter > > signed I think it was "The New York School" appeared, listing all the words > > Saroyan had underlined. A funny satire does a famous amount of work, even > > if it marks the few people capable of it with the word 'humorist'--a word

> > no one has yet gotten out from under, though most of the truly and > > consistently funny writers of the last 10,000 years have tried. I'm not > > proposing that someone call Lopate a humorist--habeas corpus, etc. But why > > the surrealists, why the seventeenth century? Why not the silver poets, or > > the negritude poets, or anybody? Why only the A+ movements-- consider the > > context and the unstated requirements of the A plus. Or don't, I don't want > > to discuss _my_ private life either. I guess all I wanted was to posit a > > mainstream other, you know, not for _electioneering_ but to provide some > > focus, some _context_ for the discussion about poets/critics.
> >
> > Okay!
> > Jordan
> >
> Ok. I only mentioned surrealism and seventeenth century poetry as what is > open to being rehistoricized. Silver age, negritude, Carl Sandburg, Dada, > all likewise. No one's a sucker and yes we should take the times > seriously even as they make it virtually impossible to do so. I agree > that Lopate's argument is conservative in one way and I also agree with > you that his criticism of mainstream postconfessional stuff is similar to > Langpo's. So what to do with that loop. And I certainly wasn't asking > you to get postconfessional about a private life (whatever that is, isn't > the personal political even when the personal must be exploded in order > for ideology to be revealed at work). I think all I meant was isn't > Lopate affiliated with NY School in a way.

>
> Ok.
>
having now read and breathed a bit: so many problems come from positing one and only one mainstream other poetics and culture being fortunately and unfortunately more multiple and polyvalent than that one problem of position (one) other mainstream is that it makes for one avant-garde when we are thousands

ok ok

now allow me to become postconfessional: I haven't actually read Lopate's piece. heard about it from other friends. stopped reading times ages ago precisely because it is so stupid about poetry.

so. my question is how to be activist in response without being counterdependent.

and no overdetermined didn't mean written in crayon or anything like that and I didn't know Lopate really at all except that he has praised Shapiro's work and certainly in terms consistent with Langpo's critique of postconfessional conventions.

↑ Index

238. Joseph Lease
Re: mookie (loop) ten years after
Tue 10 Sep 1996

PS

I'm still curious: what's the 86/89 deal.

↑ Index

239. John Geraets
Re: Dan Davidson
Tue 10 Sep 1996

How emptying to hear of Daniel Davidson's death. My knowledge of him comes from email exchanges over the past few months, a thing or two sent in the mail. Last Thurs he finished a note, Gotta go... good to hear from you.
I enjoyed our exchanges, he said he did too, and though there was a strong sense of him, there's also the sense now of how suddenly that's stopped.

In the limited way I knew him, much respect,

John

↑ Index

240. Michael Boughn
poet critic critic poet
Tue 10 Sep 1996

A couple of quick points--

I'm sorry Alan. Nothing I said was meant to stand in judgement of you work. I haven't read the essay and and was only using it rhetorically. Cheap trick. Sorry. I would love to read it. Can you email it to me?

The thing is, as much as some people would like to deny these differences or theorize them away, they continue to evoke strong, passionate feelings, probably for a number of different reasons. That I don't want to go into. But they do. (Steiner's description early in _Real Presences_ of the graveyard of dissertations as a metaphor for his sense of the problem is terrifyingly funny).

Anyway, I don't want to open this up again, only say that, for all the brouhaha, it seems to me Steiner's basic point about what he calls domestication raises uncomfortable, and hence pertinent, points that remain unsettled, whatever you think of his biblio-sexual orientation (is he a true textual fetishist or just a biblio-invert?). If his language is provocative, well, so what? Maybe he's trying to shake things up a bit. And maybe they could use a shake.

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

241. Michael Boughn
Re: Conceptual crit?
Tue 10 Sep 1996

> If a bunch of academics can get together and call themselves and the poetry they study to be "alternative" then it certainly makes sense that "elitism" would be a tad confusing to those academics.
>
> i rite: i take exception to your tone. i know the meaning of the word "elitist." i am familiar with its uses, particularly the way it gets tagged onto anything one wants to diss. the assumption is that elitism is bad, and one should go to any and all measures to avoid being called "elitist." i'm not a stupid person, and i'm not a bunch > of academics calling things things.

> md

I hear scuttlebutt of an elite cadre of textual fetishists getting organized in Vancouver. The word is they like to dress up in baseball uniforms and talk about books in the dark. Talk about alternative! Yikes. Lock up your kids!

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

242. Julia Stein
Re: narratives
Tue 10 Sep 1996

> accomplishing something in approaching the unspeakable...they found it

>
>Date: Tue, 10 Sep 1996 10:19:55 GMT+1200
>From: Tony Green <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: Assembling - (Paper)form(alitie)s - (Critics & Poets)
>
>Tony Green asks:
Should a conference on narrative consist of critical >papers on narrative or should it largely consist of narrations which >concerned, or related to, the "conceptual" base ((avoiding the word >"theory" here)) of narrative?

My Websters dictionary said "narrate" is from Latin "gnarus" or "knowing" akin to Latin "gnoscere," "nosere" "to know." If you look up "know" one finds Latin "gnoscere, nocere" or "to come to know. " Narratives or tales or myths around the world were a way of "knowing" or "coming to know."
Tales or myths are a way of explaining.
>
  Where's the differences, then?. Between conference papers and >narratives? between philosophical, conceptually analytical >discourses, and narrative? what would Plato have to say?

 Plato has been criticized a lot lately.
>But in regarding to Plato, the more I think about him versus the Sophists, I'm >leaning more and more to the Sophists.

What if there was no canon, no Platonic justification of a literary canon. What if people just gave up on that activity? What if we try to find different ways to talk about literature without the canon.

Also, Guess Inc. has been firing people who are trying to organize so the fired people are calling for a boycott of Guess.

Julia Stein

↑ Index

243. Jordan Davis
postconfessional, postcolonial, let's call the whole thing
Tue 10 Sep 1996

> I think all I meant was isn't
> Lopate affiliated with NY School in a way.

Sort of. Phillip has argued against the surrealist tendencies in the New York School for years, leaning more towards the David Shapiro side than the Ron Padgett side (though those two sides are not far apart these days, nor is one more 'surreal' than the other). But what if he is? I don't get the import.

86/89. -- Joseph -- this is totally unimportant, being a tinkering with the proposed start-date for life after language. It is a parody/homage (an attempt on the life after language? no -- just bending the Marx-defying bent of the 89 world events).

I seemed to be positing one main stream because I was presenting Lopate's argument. Lopate's anthology _The Art of the Personal Essay_ is a much more complex piece of work than his Times article, which doesn't look so bad to me--only too narrow (univocal?). Poetry is not a weaker cousin of the personal essay. Writers afield embarrass sometimes.

And what if Lopate is sympathetic to the New York School. He wrote about poetry for a huge audience in an irritating way; I thought it would be strange to let it go unremarked.

Jordan Davis

↑ Index

244. Henry Gould
Re: canons
Tue 10 Sep 1996

People talk about canons usually in terms of power, culture, class, who's in, who's out. Seems like just as important is general human propensity to set up markers for evaluation & run competitive races (handy critical tool). Be interesting to see how many "canonical" writers actually came from outside or margins of the "elite"in their societies. Outsiders see the main chance in the race itself. One lesson of slams popularity might be: forget about destroying the cannon or unmasking the canon. Just set up different markers & hire different judges. Everybody likes a good horserace (until they're sick of it). Of course lots of literary charioteers have been onto this for a long time (re: "alternative" this & that). - Henry Gould

↑ Index

245. maria damon

Re: canons

Tue 10 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> People talk about canons usually in terms of power, culture, class, who's > in, who's out. Seems like just as important is general human propensity > to set up markers for evaluation & run competitive races (handy critical > tool). Be interesting to see how many "canonical" writers actually > came from outside or margins of the "elite"in their societies. Outsiders > see the main chance in the race itself. One lesson of slams popularity > might be: forget about destroying the cannon or unmasking the canon.
> Just set up different markers & hire different judges. Everybody likes > a good horserace (until they're sick of it). Of course lots of > literary charioteers have been onto this for a long time (re:
> "alternative" this & that). - Henry Gould good pt; a teacher of mine, an anthropologist who did a lot w/ narratve and expressive cultures, was constantly puzzled the energy stirred up by the "canon" debates among literary scholars. who cares, he'd say; or, when i wd say, so why are these texts not in the canon, w/ some rhetorical indignation, he'd say, cuz they're written by poor teenage girls, it's an open and shut case, next question? i found his approach refreshing md

↑ Index

246. Christina Fairbank Chirot

can on

Tue 10 Sep 1996

---

as we used to say while putting up our garden vegetables for winter:

can on!

(also known as making "preserves")
--dbc

↑ Index

247. Ward Tietz
Sound Poetry Events
Tue 10 Sep 1996

I thought I'd post for anyone who might be interested the dates and participants for sound poetry for this year's "Festival de la Batie, the annual two-week festival of theater, dance, music and sound poetry in Geneva, Switzerland.

September 13

Roger Lewinter

September 14

Bernard Heidsieck

Nomads - Guenther Ruch, Juergen O. Olbrich with Rod Summers, Guy Bleus, Fernando Aguiar and Robin Crozier

Amanda Stewart

September 15

Bob Cobbing / Hugh Metcalfe

Mark McMorris / Ward Tietz

Christian Uetz

Julie Patton

All performances will be held at 8:30 pm at Sud des Alpes, 10 rue des Alpes, Geneva, Switzerland. If you're interested in knowing more about the festival or in submitting proposals for next year you can contact Vincent Barras at <[redacted]>.

I'll try to post something next week on the performances themselves.

Ward Tietz

↑ Index

248. Gwyn McVay
Re: can on
Tue 10 Sep 1996

Kannon! Yes! The Bodhisattva of Compassion. Exactly who we need.

On Tue, 10 Sep 1996, Christina Fairbank Chirot wrote:

> as we used to say while putting up our garden vegetables for winter:
>
> can on!

> (also known as making "preserves")
> --dbc

↑ Index

249. Jonathan Brannen
Re: Dan Davidson
Tue 10 Sep 1996

Other than some minimalist correspondance, I didn't know Daniel Davidson but I do know and greatly admire his work. Daniel Davidson was a brilliant poet, one of the few. I am stunned and deeply saddened to learn of his death. The following is a poem he wrote and enclosed in a letter I received from him last February.

Imperative

1.

We walk and talk, shore filling the past.

To bring myself along
I dig my eyes into the lap of liquid, what we've learned is such an elegant poison in pieces of elements, buoyed by the warped and narrow walkways, the curtain staring between us. Then to remember our occupation, refrain, circumstance around which everything happens blank of water and muscle, where a heart grasps the blood inside it, stillness otherwise so common. Breathing credulity, a turbulent condition for sight, a sign of touch that "Spectator, of the Willing Participant", is part of you.

2.

The ships of sail in mourning washed the feet of the sea, bread, cirrus, circuses blanketing after dawn, and the birds following each impose their directions. One light between us, or two?, for our sprouting wings, for silence, for sleep or sleepless daydreams purging the stones underfoot, where falling proceeds, one step coming after to another.

3.

Bare embraces every earth, handwritten cornices gleaming fictions, sweet, tasty entrances borders eveary country life, whatever is pursued.

I've learned to believe when you describe the imaginable when tracing the outlines of passing simplicity a self-sealing break making room for another listening, to the selves we've gathered.

Daniel Davidson, February 1996

↑ Index

250. Alan Sondheim
Jennifer
Tue 10 Sep 1996

They surfaced again in 1688.

↑ Index

251. Kevin Killian
SPT--Proliferation #3 Reading
Tue 10 Sep 1996

Small Press Traffic Presents

Proliferation #3 a reading by contributors

George Albon
Norma Cole
Jean Day
Hoa Nguyen
Leslie Scalapino

Since Dan Davidson was scheduled to appear at this reading, some contributors will be reading work by Dan as well as their own work.

=46riday, September 13, 7:30 p.m.
New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Proliferation is a post-Language, post-Naropa journal of the new generation, edited by San Francisco=B9s Mary Burger.

↑ Index

252. Sarah E. Blackwood
Re: POETICS Digest - 8 Sep 1996 to 9 Sep 1996
Tue 10 Sep 1996

Could anyone refer me to any sort of works dealing with gender mimicry, costuming, even drag. I am starting out looking at Cindy Sherman's film stills, but would appreciate any genre of art. Thanks. Sarah Blackwood

↑ Index

253. M.L. Weber invitation to submit
Tue 10 Sep 1996

I am inviting submissions for a lit-mag---will do it twice a year at least, approx. 64 booksize pages, to be called Sugar Mule.

Paul Hoover, Lance Olson, Pierre Joris, Jane Augustine, Kate Lila Wheeler Michael Heller and others are in the first issue.

Please send to [redacted] by Sep 15 to be considered for the second issue.

The print version of #1 is available from M.L. Weber, 2 N. 24th St., Colo. Spgs., CO 80904 for $5 (or can be viewed on-line at http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/sugar_mule).

↑ Index

254. Rachel Loden
Yasusada/Kent Johnson
Wed 11 Sep 1996

FYI--

Subject: Araki Yasusada/Kent Johnson
> Date: 10 Sep 1996 18:36:54 GMT
> From: [redacted] (Emily S. Nussbaum)
> To: [redacted]
>
> I'm writing an article about the "Araki Yasusada" situation for Lingua > Franca magazine. Poems have published under the name Yasusada in Grand > Street, Conjunctions, and American Poetry Review, among other places, with > biographical information presenting Yasusada as a recently discovered > Japanese poet who was a survivor of Hiroshima. This biographical > information was invented, and the actual author(s) of the poems is > (intentionally) unclear. If anyone has any information about this > situation, about Kent Johnson (who has acted as the middleman for these > submissions, and who may have written the work), or about connected > matters, please contact me at [redacted] as soon as possible, as > I'm on deadline. Thank you!

>
> Emily Nussbaum
> Lingua Franca
>
>

↑ Index

255. Ann Louise Vickery
Assembling Alternatives
Wed 11 Sep 1996

Having just got back to Australia, I've only just battled with jetlag to read through the rush of responses to the AA conference and add to the pile. Even though there were not many of us Australians at the conference (made even less in number by the felt absence of John Kinsella), it was quite important for those of us who were to be there (in whatever degree of visibility). While the conference seemed specifically aimed at further encouraging a transatlantic exchange of contemporary poetries and poetics, it was important also at a broader level of opening up the cultures of poetry beyond the usual national borders (within the discussion of who was centralized and who was outside the focus of the conference, no-one seems to have mentioned the wonderful reading of Nicole Brossard and Carla Harryman). The idea of nation was raised rather prominently in some of the past messages on the list and at the conference. From my point of view, the wonderful elements of the conference were the points of connection between different poetic communities, of moving beyond an 'Australian' context or a 'Canadian' context for instance, to looking at how particular practices actually overlap or shape one another in various ways.

In terms of who got heard at this conference, it needs to be recognized that much depended on who wanted to listen and how one was listened to. It was not so much the organizer, who did a fantastic job, so much as people in the audience (or deciding to be an audience) that, in many cases, affected the direction of debate. Just one or two examples. It has already been mentioned that there was no public discussion after Philip Mead's paper because the response centred on Bob Perelman's paper. I may be wrong but the responses that came out of that session were all, if not nearly all, from Americans. While Bob Perelman raised some interesting points, I think it significant that those who responded were on fairly familiar ground. Similarly, in the session I was in, which concerned generally US-Canadian intersections of feminist practice, the audience were almost all Canadian or English (American interest was fairly thin on the ground). To begin looking at the pattern of attention and response (who attends which papers and who feels able to talk in the limited space of post-paper discussion) perhaps goes some way in beginning to understand why there may be various silences at such events as well as a lack of ethnic diversity in US poetry conferences more generally.

To finish up, I want to thank Romana for staging a much-needed event. Thanks to her enthusiasm and support at my participation, I was able to meet many American, Canadian and British writers who I have been reading for some time, or have only recently discovered. As well as many whose work I discovered while I was there. It was a great experience,

Ann Vickery

↑ Index

256. George Bowering

Re: Conceptual crit?

Wed 11 Sep 1996

> I hear scuttlebutt of an elite cadre of textual fetishists getting organized in Vancouver. The word is they like to dress up in baseball uniforms and talk about books in the dark. Talk about alternative! Yikes. Lock up your kids!
>
> Mike
> [redacted]

Okay, it's true. But some of us look really good in baseball uniforms. Only ten years ago I had great definition in my upper arm muscles. So we talk about books in the dark! I'm not ashamed! I'm not! Sometimes we dont even talk about books much!

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

257. George Bowering
Re: POETICS Digest - 8 Sep 1996 to 9 Sep 1996
Wed 11 Sep 1996

> Could anyone refer me to any sort of works dealing with gender mimicry, costuming, even drag. I am starting out looking at Cindy Sherman's film stills, but would appreciate any genre of art. Thanks.
> Sarah Blackwood

Best thing I have ever read/seen was Michel Tremblay's great play, _Hosanna_

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

258. George Bowering
Re: invitation to submit
Wed 11 Sep 1996

--==========_-1369701603==_==========

> Thanks for invitation. I'm sending something attached.

Best-

--==========_-1369701603==_==========

(This file must be converted with BinHex 4.0)

:%P4SC5"0BA*dHA*[E'pRH5!a-3"A4%*1690A4!%%!!!+!!!!!!#pD[ih!#-!!!! !!!!
%!!!C!!!!!!!!!!"!!!!!k)!!!Qk!!!!!!!!!U)!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!J!!#3!!!J!!#3!!!
JN!!!!!!JN!!!!!!JN!!i!!!Jb!#!!!!K 5!!!!!!K5!!!!!!K5!!!!!!K5!!S!!!KF!!S!!!KQ!!!!!!KQ!
%B!!!LX!(J!!!K 5!!!!!!NN!#!!!!P%!"S!!!PU!#S!!!Q8!!!!!!JN!!!!!3!"!!!*DJ!!!!!*AJ!
-!!!*DJ!!!!!*DJ!!!!!*P!!Q!!!*DJ!!!!!*DJ!!!!!*DJ!!!!!*DJ!!!!!*DJ! !!!!*DJ!!!!!
0$3d03N&545"E6N&,484G)09&$3d0$3d0$@j[Gb"6G#iJ8QP`)(G KFb"[redacted])
([redacted]'KP)'NJBf&Z)(0PC3edD'&Z)(4SC5"[redacted])(0 PB3d0#3N*#90d,L"5DA!
JG'mJG'KP)'jKDf9N)'N0Gf&c)'jPGQ9b)'&d)(*PFh3
X)'&d)'*PFh3JB5"[redacted]"`C@&MC3edD'8JD'pXC5"dD'PZCb`JF(9XE'9N)'P Z)'*PD'PZC#"[redacted]$3P6G#iJ8QP`)(GKFb"[redacted]"dD'8JFA9TBfX0#A4TE'` JD'8JF(9XE'9N)'PZ)'C[FL"K)("TG#"cG'p`$3d*EQ9hE(NJG'[redacted])'PMH5" [redacted])JGf&fCA-0#@C[FL"dD'8JBh*[Gf30$3PTBhNJF'&[redacted])'[redacted]

ZC(-0#@pZ)(4SC5"RFQ&ZC#"`FQPi)'0TFQ0eF`d0#3N*$3N*#AGP) (0KGb"5DA! JF(9XE#"KGf&j)'CbEfdJG'KP)'0eFQ)0$3N*#G9P) (GKFb"cEb"[redacted]`d0#3N [redacted]'9QG#$[redacted]@aQ)'PZ) (4SC5"NGA0d$3d0#3N#3NU$3d0Gf&ZG'9N)(4
[)'0KE'`JD'PY)&0d,L"[redacted]$[redacted]'8JGf&XDf9N$3e[[redacted])09 [redacted]"[GA*c$[redacted])(GP)'4bEh"d)'peFL"KDA4MD'9c$@CbEfdJBfp MD`edE`eVEQ9P$3e[e5"ME'&cFfPMB@`[redacted]"`[redacted]@& fC5$[redacted]$3eYEh*P)([redacted]$3N*#3NU$3d*#3N*#@pb)(GP)'*eFQj
d)09PFJd*#3N*$3*e!-K2drqd6pArY&!Xrfp3,[p[8#rr1&!krl431rqd8%(qK9" 9rl439`"-8'(qd9"Mrja3C2l88'Ar(&"Trl43Erpl8((r1&"crhY3JIk&8,lqd9#
rrhY3armF8-m!!!%!!!!$SJ!!!k8!
qJ!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!
!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

J!!! 0SJ!D!!!0b`!U!!!0p3!!!!!-B!!!!!%!!J!!$FX!!!!!$E`!$`!!$FX!!!!!$FX !!!!!$I8!(!!!
$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$3e
$38j86b"$3d0$3d0$8R9GQ8JBQ9PEL"QE'PZC`dQ)'j[Gb"[redacted]!d0$5i
0$3e0H5"`BA*d)'pQ)(4SC5"jBA*N1Jd0CQPcD#"[GA3JCR*[ER30$8*TFQ4c)'p eG#"[redacted]$3d0,Jd0$9GSBA3JC'[redacted])'4[$AGTG'JJCfp[C#"`Ef9YFcm0$9P [G5"bC@&N)([redacted]&TEJd0$5i0$3e*eACP)'[redacted]`dQ)'j [Gb"[redacted]$3d0,Jd0$9P[G5"[redacted])'jPGQ9b$A0PC5"dD'9cC5"hEh*NFb"
KCf&TEJd0$5i0$3e*)'&Y$@a[[redacted])'e[FQ80$@[redacted]@&b)(4 [$@ejFf9XCJd0E'PVC5"[redacted]$3dZ$3d05G9fC5"[redacted])(*TEQF0*L"ZEhFJ5G9 Y)
(*PC!d0$5i0$3e*EL"5G@jeA-J3f&QC5`0G([redacted])(4[)(*[redacted]"+Efj
KG'KKEL"[redacted]@&YFb"#EfpV,!eSC5"[GQ9bD'9KFR-JB5"hEfeKEL"NCA0MFQP
[redacted]$A4SC5"[redacted]'PMF`e[CL"SCA)[redacted])(0eFQGPFRNZ$3d0dP4 SCAN-JFf0bBA"PC#"[CQBJF'&bG#"[CL"dD'8JC'PcD`eKEQ3JG'KPFQ8JGf&c)'0 KE'0eE(9c)'pZ)'Pd,Y-0$3dZ$[redacted]'KP)'CTFR0d$AG[FQ3JEfi0G'KTFb"
`[redacted])'Pc$@4eBfX0$AP[G5"[redacted]'9Z$[redacted]$@4[E'aKFR-0$3dZ$3d 05G9fC5"[redacted])'*[redacted]$5BJEQph)%R9E5"LFQ9N$3d0,Jd0$8&MBfpbC'PZCb"
dEb"[redacted]@&YF`ehD'9Z)%PMBA*eFb"[redacted]$@Pd)(GKFb"ZEb"[redacted]'9KE!d
0$5i0$3e8D'Pc)'Pc)'K[Gb"*)'YPCA!JEfi0E'[redacted])'C[FL"PGQ9b1Jd0B5" [redacted])
(4KBQaPG#"PGQ9bH5"YEh*[redacted]$AGTG'JJDR9TBf8X)'%J4Q9YBf&X)(4
KBQaPG!ePGQ9bH5"[redacted]!d0EQPZC5"[redacted])'9iCA*MDA0PFb"PGQ9bH5"YEh* [redacted]$@C[GA)JBQ&MDb"PH'9bBfPcCA-
JCACPFRNJEQPRD(30$@9iBf9`G#"hD'9 Z)
%NJCQpbCf9d$3d0,Jd0$90PE'9MG'9N)%aPG(4PFR-0$A-0$@)0$@`0$@%0$Em
0$A30$AB0$3dZ$3d05G9fC5"[redacted])'4TEQF0$3d0$3ae!(N"H`-UI!6XI3%SabM
(+-FSa`5'!!!!2,D'EpKf"'!%+-GCKVD'ErJQ6(B!B![redacted]!'8iDfKQhf61iBk2r S6Pj1G8j@!!")ja-B*Qi!##`Z!!aq!'!'&XFJ"P1')!Yb!m+!C`4+KQlZ+%Yf2'! N+-FS-abM(+-FSabM(+-FSabM(+-FSabM(+-FSabM(")B!!!!mYSC[f(B%B!3SaeQ
'YSC[q#C-GJ"J"KE()!C6KVD'EIC-lKM)rqa1ANje6PB!!#m$)(J*5(!0X+J)!'B
%F!"J'RB!F!5`VI5qCJiJH!P)F!'`D!-mC`*f!4!$*Llrr%jH6R919J!!)
(J*5#m)6Ud6+NS!@%pR-#"i#8J`+!"``(`!rh)!-J"`!V!!!!%!!!!%S`!!",-!!!6L!!!
%l`$l!
28!!!!!

*C!!!#@J! !!P`!!!*G!!!#AJ!!!Qi!!!+A!!!#Y`!!!XF!!!,H!!!#h`!!!Z!!!!-$!!!$)J! !!b-!!!- N!!!$*J!!!bF!!!-S!!!$03!!!cd!!!0+!!!$6`!!!e!!!!0F!!!$C3! !!fd!!!0Z!!!$E`!!!h%!!!
0b!!!$F`!!!i-!!!
15qr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lq r[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[l!!!!"!!!!5(!!!i!B`! !!j)!!!16!!!$P!!!!jB!!!
1A!!!$Q!!!!ki!!!1r!!!$dJ!!!p-!!!28!!!$eJ! !!pF!!!2B!!!$lJ!!!rm!!!3!!!!%(!!!"$J!!!
4%!!!%43!!"'F!!!5(!!!%L!! !"*d!!!5H!!!%R`!!"+%!!!5L!!!%S`!!",3!!!5e!!!
%Y`!!",J!!!5k!!!%Z`! !",d!!!5q!!!%`!!!"-%!!!6$!!!%a!!!"-B!!!6(!!!%b3!!"-S!!!6,!!!
%c3! !"-i!!!62!!!%hJ!!"0m!!!6J!!!
%i3!!"1,lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqr[lqrX!!!!!!!!
!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!

259. henry
Re: can on
Wed 11 Sep 1996

On Tue, 10 Sep 1996 16:22:17 -0400 Gwyn McVay said:
>Kannon! Yes! The Bodhisattva of Compassion. Exactly who we need.

Might help un-rig some of the horseraces.
- HG

↑ Index

260. Jonathan A Levin
Whitman Qestion
Wed 11 Sep 1996

O.K., Whitman fans:

Would anybody care to offer a gloss on the phrase "lacy jags" in the last section of "Song of Myself":

I depart as air . . . . I shake my white locks at the runaway sun, I effuse my flesh in eddies and drift it in lacy jags.

If you go to the OED, be prepared to spend some time there. Thanks--

Jonathan Levin

↑ Index

261. henry g
Re: Whitman Qestion
Wed 11 Sep 1996

On Wed, 11 Sep 1996 09:32:44 -0400 Jonathan A Levin said:
>O.K., Whitman fans:
>
>Would anybody care to offer a gloss on the phrase "lacy jags" in the last >section of "Song of Myself":
>
>I depart as air . . . . I shake my white locks at the runaway sun,
>I effuse my flesh in eddies and drift it in lacy jags.

Two possibilities:
1. it's the jagged lace of foamy surf.

2. it's a typo. Walt actually wrote: RACY jags (the car). - hg

↑ Index

262. Thomas M. Orange
wcw panel louisville
Wed 11 Sep 1996

with all the heat that has been generated lately over academic-type conferences, i nonetheless overcome my hesitation to repost the following query.

i'm interested in putting together a panel or panels for the twentieth- century literature conference to be held in louisville ky in february 1997.

my work on william carlos williams' early writing (roughly from tempers through his collected 1921-1931) has got me looking currently at imagist and "objectivist" poetics, and how pound and zukofsky as readers of williams situate him in relation to those poetics.

we have the initial makings of a panel on reading williams and/or the history of these movements, and are interested in some more proposals that would help us round out (or narrow down) these panels.

louisville needs submissions of panels and completed papers (10 pp.) by october 1, and i'd welcome ideas for papers on any related and sundry topics. feel free to reply directly to the list or backchannel.

tom orange
[redacted]

↑ Index

263. Michael Coffey invitation to submit -Reply
Wed 11 Sep 1996

Thanks for the invitation to submit to Sugar Mule. I attach "In Robert Motherwell's Car." I have a book out from Sun & Moon, and another coming from Coffee House next year. And Good luck with the mag. Jesus, to witness the demise of the SASE. Who'd've thunk it.

↑ Index

264. Judy Roitman
Re: invitation to submit -Reply
Wed 11 Sep 1996

Could people submitting to Sugar Mule send their stuff to M.L. Weber and not to the entire list?

Also, beware of PostScript garbling.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

265. Pritchett,Pat
Re: gender mimicry
Wed 11 Sep 1996

Sarah,

don't know if this would help, but a good place to start, at least historically, is with the fascinating story of the Chevalier D'Eon, a cross-dressing spy/soldier/economist in the court of Louis XVII. A good deal of his spying was done dressed as a woman. Havelock Ellis did a study of him and there at least two good books on him (one of them published last year), plus several "colorful" Victorian accounts, as well as some contemporary records. I did quite a bit of research on him for HBO Pictures, whom I worked for when I lived in LA. Believe it or not, they're actually making a movie of his life. If you want book titles, authors, etc, feel free to backchannel me.

Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

↑ Index

266. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: Whitman Qestion
Wed 11 Sep 1996

---

i'm probably going to sound like the proverbial idiot savant writer here, but the line "i effuse my flesh in eddies and drift it in lacy jags" sounded perfectly clear to me, in a visual sort of way...

uh, jagged. something is jagged, thus it "jags"... yes, i know, quite probably that isn't syntactical but i have a dreadful feeling i've done it myself somewhere... and lacy, a sort of ragged, spread out, thin sheet. you know when someone is smoking, and there is no wind, or maybe a teensy current. and the smoke rises, or spirals slightly, from the cigerette in those odd, flattened, tearing apart eddies? better image, you know in cartoons when they have creatures dissolved or blown up, they have that thin net of creature-body float in the air...

that is a something that "jags" and it does so in lacy way. because of the lace, i'm assuming whitman means a two-dimensional sheet, like a peice opaper with lots of holes and the disembodied weightlessness of smoke...

e

↑ Index

267. Judy Roitman
Eleni Sikelianos
Wed 11 Sep 1996

Lee Chapman has asked me to ask if anyone has Sikelianos' address. If you do, please contact Lee at [redacted].

Thanks.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

268. maria damon
Re: Whitman
Wed 11 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> "Lacy jags" to me = a wonderful way to characterize the fractal geometry of > turbulent systems such as clouds. Also seems an interesting diction cluster, > perhaps meant to play off gender connotations of each word, a kind of > hermaphrodic entity or bisexual manifestation, though there's an important > asymmetry: adjective/noun equal or not equal to female/male???
> Peter Out

J.C. Lags to me: an abnormally lovely way to mandate the fibonacci express! bring on the hermaphroditic diaspora syntax! pour on the infestation of mailed females, an exotic asymmetry.

↑ Index

269. filch
Re: invitation to submit
Wed 11 Sep 1996

--==========_-1369661581==_==========

> Thanks for invitation. I'm sending something attached.
>
> Best-
>
> Attachment converted: Velimir:The Martyrology 11 (WDBN/MSWD) (0001B05D)
>
> Attachment converted: Velimir:Canto I (WDBN/MSWD) (0001B05E)
>
> George Bowering.
>
> 2499 West 37th Ave.,
> Vancouver, B.C.,
> Canada V6M 1P4
>
> fax: [redacted]
> e-mail: [redacted]

--==========_-1369661581==_==========

(This file must be converted with BinHex 4.0)

:"d0KER4[)%N!9d4#6Ne69d3!!!!!%!!!!!!!Y3$q0`!M!!!!!!!!"!!!'3!!!!! !!!!!!3!!!!
6L!!!1%3!!!!!!!!2L!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! -!!"J!!!-!!"J!!!-B!!!!!!-B!!!!!!-B!!
1!!!-EJ!m!!!-UJ!!!!!-UJ!!!!! -UJ!!!!!-UJ!+!!!-Y!!3!!!-a!!!!!!-a!"'!!!0#J"i!!!-UJ!!!!!0JJ!
J!!! 0SJ!D!!!0b`!U!!!0p3!!!!!-B!!!!!%!!J!!$FX!!!!!$E`!$`!!$FX!!!!!$FX !!!!!$I8!(!!!
$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$FX!!!!!$3e
$38j86b"$3d0$3d0$8R9GQ8JBQ9PEL"QE'PZC`dQ)'j[Gb"[redacted]!d0$5i
0$3e0H5"`BA*d)'pQ)(4SC5"jBA*N1Jd0CQPcD#"[GA3JCR*[ER30$8*TFQ4c)'p eG#"[redacted]$3d0,Jd0$9GSBA3JC'[redacted])'4[$AGTG'JJCfp[C#"`Ef9YFcm0$9P
[G5"bC@&N)([redacted]&TEJd0$5i0$3e*eACP)'[redacted]`dQ)'j [Gb"[redacted]$3d0,Jd0$9P[G5"[redacted])'jPGQ9b$A0PC5"dD'9cC5"hEh*NFb"
KCf&TEJd0$5i0$3e*)'&Y$@a[[redacted])'e[FQ80$@[redacted]@&b)(4 [$@ejFf9XCJd0E'PVC5"[redacted]$3dZ$3d05G9fC5"[redacted])(*TEQF0*L"ZEhFJ5G9 Y)
(*PC!d0$5i0$3e*EL"5G@jeA-J3f&QC5`0G([redacted])(4[)(*[redacted]"+Efj
KG'KKEL"[redacted]@&YFb"#EfpV,!eSC5"[GQ9bD'9KFR-JB5"hEfeKEL"NCA0MFQP

[redacted]$A4SC5"[redacted]'PMF`e[CL"SCA)[redacted])(0eFQGPFRNZ$3d0dP4 SCAN-JFf0bBA"PC#"[CQBJF'&bG#"[CL"dD'8JC'PcD`eKEQ3JG'KPFQ8JGf&c)'0 KE'0eE(9c)'pZ)'Pd,Y-0$3dZ$[redacted]'KP)'CTFR0d$AG[FQ3JEfi0G'KTFb"
`[redacted])'Pc$@4eBfX0$AP[G5"[redacted]'9Z$[redacted]$@4[E'aKFR-0$3dZ$3d 05G9fC5"[redacted])'*[redacted]$5BJEQph)%R9E5"LFQ9N$3d0,Jd0$8&MBfpbC'PZCb"
dEb"[redacted]@&YF`ehD'9Z)%PMBA*eFb"[redacted]$@Pd)(GKFb"ZEb"[redacted]'9KE!d
0$5i0$3e8D'Pc)'Pc)'K[Gb"*)'YPCA!JEfi0E'[redacted])'C[FL"PGQ9b1Jd0B5" [redacted])
(4KBQaPG#"PGQ9bH5"YEh*[redacted]$AGTG'JJDR9TBf8X)'%J4Q9YBf&X)(4
KBQaPG!ePGQ9bH5"[redacted]!d0EQPZC5"[redacted])'9iCA*MDA0PFb"PGQ9bH5"YEh* [redacted]$@C[GA)JBQ&MDb"PH'9bBfPcCA-
JCACPFRNJEQPRD(30$@9iBf9`G#"hD'9 Z)
%NJCQpbCf9d$3d0,Jd0$90PE'9MG'9N)%aPG(4PFR-0$A-0$@)0$@`0$@%0$Em
0$A30$AB0$3dZ$3d05G9fC5"[redacted])'4TEQF0$3d0$3ae!(N"H`-UI!6XI3%SabM
(+-FSa`5'!!!!2,D'EpKf"'!%+-GCKVD'ErJQ6(B!B![redacted]!'8iDfKQhf61iBk2r S6Pj1G8j@!!")ja-B*Qi!##`Z!!aq!'!'&XFJ"P1')!Yb!m+!C`4+KQlZ+%Yf2'! N+-FS-abM(+-FSabM(+-FSabM(+-FSabM(+-FSabM(")B!!!!mYSC[f(B%B!3SaeQ
'YSC[q#C-GJ"J"KE()!C6KVD'EIC-lKM)rqa1ANje6PB!!#m$)(J*5(!0X+J)!'B
%F!"J'RB!F!5`VI5qCJiJH!P)F!'`D!-mC`*f!4!$*Llrr%jH6R919J!!)
(J*5#m)6Ud6+NS!@%pR-#"i#8J`+!"``(`!rh)!-J"`!V!!!!%!!!!%S`!!",-!!!6L!!!
%l`$l!
28!!!!

!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

d)09PFJd*#3N*$3*e!-K2drqd6pArY&!Xrfp3,[p[8#rr1&!krl431rqd8%(qK9" 9rl439`"-8'(qd9"Mrja3C2l88'Ar(&"Trl43Erpl8((r1&"crhY3JIk&8,lqd9#
rrhY3armF8-m!!!%!!!!$SJ!!!k8!
qJ!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!
!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

In addition to Sherman, different contemporary artists immediately come to mind: the French performance artist Orlan who undergoes self-transformation through plastic surgery (to mimic models from Classic paintings, from pop culture). See article by Barbara Rose in February 1993 issue of Art in America. Also, Lyle Ashton Harris foregrounds gendre and race issues in his large format cibachromes in assorted attire, as does Anna Deavere Smith in her multivocal performances (See Mirage: Enigmas of Race, Difference and Desire, Institute of Contemporary Arts, London, 1995.) In this century--as opposed to cross-dressing in Shakespeare--the performative mode and intent around much of this might be traced back to dada (i.e. Duchamp in tutu as Adam in Picabia's Relache, etcetera).

--Roberto

↑ Index

271. filch

Re: invitation to submit -Reply

Wed 11 Sep 1996

--==========_-1369661435==_==========

> Thanks for the invitation to submit to Sugar Mule. I attach "In Robert Motherwell's Car." I have a book out from Sun & Moon, and another coming from Coffee House next year. And Good luck with the mag. Jesus, to witness the demise of the SASE. Who'd've thunk it.
>
> Attachment converted: Velimir:6POEMS.DOC (WDBN/MSWD) (0001B05F)

--==========_-1369661435==_==========

(This file must be converted with BinHex 4.0)

:#MC36d908bj%6d-!9d4#6Ne69d3!!!!!8!!!!!!!+6,3ca(JSE%Di3!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!! l!!-!r[m*!!B!!!!!!!!!!!!!!%!!!!"!!!!!!!!!!!3!!!#!!! !!3!!!2lrrrm!!!!!!!!!!
2rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrhrrrm5!!!! r[rrra-!!!!&!!!!"J!!!!F!!!!)!!! !#3!!!!S!!!!,!!!!$!!!!!d!!!!1!!!!$`!!!"!!!!!4!!!!&!!!!2lrrrrqrrr r&3!!!"B!!!!A!!!!'!!!!"N!!!!D!!!!'`!!!"`!!!!G!!!!(J!!!"m!!!!J!!! !)3!!!#)!!!!
M!!!!*!!!!#8!!!!Q!!!!r[rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr r8J"[!'m!G!!J!%8!EJ"d!()!
H3!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"B!"3$rrrrrrrrr`-!!!!!
#3)!!!!!!-!!!!!!!!" '!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!K[Qr2b5IZ`%$!!!!3!-!!!!!!!!"!%-!E`"Y!(!!
6`"L!'S !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

2rrrrm!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!)Ej[cmNRlX"K[Qr2b5IZ`%!!!!!e!dd&%!%e!d"!!!! r[rrr`-!!!!%!!! !"3!!!!B!!!!(!!!!#!!!!!N!!!!+!!!!#`!!!!`!!!$qrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr`%!r[m$#J!!rrrrr`!*!J!!!!!!`!!!!!!!!%BF!!! !
[redacted])&G[FQ3J0Li`)%4[[redacted]!!S!!!"08eG[FQ4%Ef-!%!!!!&G
[FQ3Z4'[redacted]!!!!!!1`!$!2lr#3!'!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"!!!!!3!!!!! !r[m!!!-
+!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!3!!!1#&Rr,j6fJ3Uj%)!#XRXpN`!!! !M!)!!!d!!!!(!!!!Q!!!!!3!!!
$F!!!!#!!!!!!"!!!-!!!!*!%!!!X!!!")!3! !$3!!!'`"!!!2!!!!N!!"!!!3!!!!Y!%!!!S!!!$B!3!!
%J!!!2`"!!!1!!!!)!) !!!N!!!"%!J!!%`!!!'J#!!$rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr rrrrrrrrrrrr(J!!!#!!!!"(1Pa23NTF39"38ea08dp'4NP$49a16e*038`Z4%p 8!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Z$3dU+LS0$8&S,#"dEb"LC5"[redacted] S)'&ZC#"SBACP)'%JCQ9h)
(4SEh9RD(4c)'Pc)'&XE#i0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d
0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$[redacted])'&XE#"bCAC[E([redacted]`JDA3JFh9 LFh4TG([redacted]"ZCAF0FQ9cG(*TBh4TEfjc)'C[FL"[E'3JEfjPFbiZ,Li J8Q9KE#"QFQ9PC'pY)(G[[redacted])'*P)(4[)(9cC3edD'Pc)'ePG'K[C#"hD'9Z)'P d)'0[[redacted])'*P)'pQ)([redacted])'0[FR*PBh3JDA3Z,LiZ)&0PH(9KE#" XD@*PFR4j,!d0Hd*bCA4[EPdJ)("[redacted]@3X)'[redacted])'9fCA*j)'0[EQ0 PDACK-BQaP$A0PH(9KE#"KBh30CAKMCA"d)'C[FL"SEfe[Ff9iG@&XDA4j$[redacted] P) %0bCACPE#`J8Q9ZC5"$FQ9fC@`X)&*PEQ8J3h*PGQ9XA5b8)(GbEh4P)%&cD'* PFRNZ$3dU+LS0$94SC5"eER0TCfKdE(NJCf9ZCA4TBb"MEfaXDA0TEfi0Ef-BJB5" -B84eC5"KEQ3JB5"[redacted]'[redacted]'4c)'%JD(9YF'KBfYPC#`JFfaKER3 YCAPPC#`0CQPcD#eYEh9dD'9N)'[redacted],#"KEL"PBfKd,@eKFQaTELi0$5SU+J d [redacted]$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$8e KC'8JEfB-JBQPbBfKLBA*V)'&ZC#"[redacted])X$AGKFb"`FQpNC'9N)'&XEfjR)'P Z) (4SC5"cGA*Q)'j)'%JFh4TBfXX$@YTEQ3JEfBJB5"MBA4KE@&bFQ&Z$A4SBA3 JBf&bFQPPC#"K)'[redacted]@&Z,Jd035"YEh4SCA)X)([redacted]'9PF#`[redacted] [redacted]#"TG#`JDR9cG#"[CQBJFfK[FQ8X$A0dBA*[redacted])(0[[redacted]'9bC5" ZC@&b)&0KCf&`EfjKBfX0D'9KC'PZCb"hCA0d)(4SC5"[redacted]'JJEfBJ6'pZCb" *FfaKEQ3J,L!Z)#i0$5SU+Jd0,L!Z)#[redacted]@3JG'mJ6Q9h)&P[FQXJ3Q&j,!e eF#"dD'8J5(9NFfpZ)(4[)%aKDf8J3fKKEA"[redacted]$@&ZC#"KE'pZCb"dD'8J8h3 Z) %aKGh*PEQ0P)'j[FR4SC@&cG!edEb"dD'8JGfPNC5`JBR*[redacted]@- JEfBJC(*[redacted],L!Z)#i0$5SU+JdZ)#iJ,L"NEhGZ)(4SC5"MEf&cG#"dEb"#Eh0 [redacted])'&cD'pbC5i0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d
0$3d04ACPEQPZCb`JGf8JGf9bC5"fDA0TG'PZCbi055"KE5"&C'4TC5`JEANJCQ&
dD'9bNR-JBQpj$@*eG#!a-#"jC@&bFb"[E'3X$@%JF'&bG#"[CL"dD'8JCACPEQP ZCb`JE'PVC5"dD'8JCQaTCA-0$@&ZC#"dD'8J4QaPDA0SE@&ZET*c) (GSDA0VCAN [redacted])(4SC5"QE(PPFL"QEh)JG'KP)'0[[redacted]"[redacted],![redacted]` J55"hBA-X)
(GKFb"YC5`0BRNJ4'&N)'&ZC#"%EhPXC5"KEQ3J4'&ZG'8Z$3dU+LS 0$5iJ,L!Z)
%KeG'[redacted]'mJG'KP)%0bEh0c)%0[[redacted]"&H("bCA0cGf& j,!edD'9Z)
(P[G5"SDA3J1$FJ6QpbG'JZ$94KDf8JG'KKG#"QEh)[redacted])'PdNR- JGfpbG'redacted([redacted])'4[GfiJG'K
P)'KTE'`[redacted])'[redacted]"jEh8Z$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d
0$3d0$3d0$3d05fj[GfPZCb`JE'PVC5"*)'YZEhFJEQph,!ejEh8JE'9KFQiJG'm JE@&VC5"PH'0PF(4TEfjc$@&ZC#"MD'&ZCf8Y,@%JDfPZC#"[CL"KE'a[Gf&ZBf 8 0CQpb)'[redacted]"KEQ3JEQ&dGA*KE#"NDA0[FQ4PFLi0$8NJFh4KH5"cEf*PFL" dD'9cC5"NBAPc,#"[redacted],3ehBANJG'KPFQ8X)'YTEQ3JEfBJE'PVC5"KEL"KE(" SB@*PG!ejEh8JG'PbC5"[CL"KG#"dD'8JE'9dG'9b)%XX)(4SC5"YGA0TBb"cG'p `Fbi08h9NC'9ZE(NX)'Pc)'pXC#`JDA-JC'9KCLi0$5SU+Jd05A3JDA-JEh9b)'C [FQec)(4SBA3JCQ&TE#"eFb`0F(9bF'[redacted]'aj,L""G#"dD'8J)$B`,@C[Eh3 JF'p[E! eKBQpfC5"dD'8JFh4bCA4MD#"[CL"bDACPFL"hC5"eFf9N)(4[)([redacted] 055"REb"hDA4S)'ej)'YTC(-X)(0PC5"K)'[redacted]"[CL"%FQ&REfpZFbi0$5S

U+Jd09'KP)(0SBA"P)'pQ)'4PFfPbC5"ZCACPFL"MD'&ZCf9c,Jd0$3d0$3d0$3d 0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3e%EhPXC5"[FL"[redacted]'[redacted])'9 fEfafC5dY$84KE'[redacted])J6'pZCb"*FfaKEQ3Y,[redacted])'%J9(*TFh4KEL" 8HQ&bB5"KFR*KF`ePGQ9Z)&*[redacted]&dJEQ9fCA)JFf&TC#"dEfpV,Jd 08h4TE'`X)%TKBfXJ6"GQ9ZG(PGA)X)'%JBQPcG([$@PZ)'%J3R*PG'pZ)(" [redacted])%NJFf&h$@&d)[redacted])%KKE'`[redacted]@&cG'KKEA"dEfiZ$8NJFf&h)%4 [EQ&dDC*c)(0`EfpVH5"[redacted]'0[E@&ZD@&c)#iJ,L!Z$3dU+LS0$5iJ,L!Z)'& ZC#"0BAPK)%4PFQ9ZNR-JNd&d)%aKEQ58)([redacted]&ZFf9dG#"[EL" dD'8JBQ9KBfKPFb`JFf&ZC!eTEL"LE'&MDb"KEQ3JGfKTG'8X)([redacted]`JB5" NC@&N)'eKEL`0B5"MD'9cFb"`[redacted]$5SU+Jd06@&i)%9bER0dNR-JF'aKFh4 PFL"YEf4PE#"[CL"K)%YTEQFJFfPdG'PZCb"TEL"5Ef*[redacted]'9bGf9XE
c)'0KFLi0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$8aKG'8JEfj
P)'jTCfKd)%NJFh4[F!eKG#"[GA)J8Q9NCQpbC#"$D(9bBfJl)[redacted]$94 SC5"[redacted]@jN)'pMD(*P)'&ZC#"MD'&XDbehD'PdC5"cG'pZC3eSEh9cC5"[CL" hEh*cD'P`)(GSCA*P)%NJFh"PER30$90eEQ4KH5"YEh*[redacted]@%X)&"K1L" hC5"[redacted]'KP)([redacted]'9h,Je*Gc)'4KFQXJEQph,L"AD'mJBf&bCA-r)&4SC5"MD(9bBfJJDA-JEh"[redacted])(4SCANJBA*P)'PZ)(4SC5"MEh9ZG(*
j,Je*)'KKGQ8JB5"XEh3JEfBJC(*[redacted]@8Z$3dU+LS0$8ej)'[redacted]#" cBAPc)'PdNR-JFh"TEL"MEfjdFQpX,#"[redacted],Je)C5"VEQ9h)%4KC#`JGf&c)'% JEQ9`D'9h)(4[)%4[[redacted],[redacted]c)'pZC5"[redacted][NR-JFf9PEL"dD'8 JCQ&MC5"[CL"(Ef3Z$8KP)'a[[redacted])(4[)'Pd,Jd0+LSU$3e8D'9bCC c) (4SC5"dD'PZCb"TEL"dD'8JG(*PCA-X)'&ZC#"dD'8JGfPZC#i0$3d0$3d0$3d
0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$8NJGf&XDb"cE'phE([redacted]"RE'& cFb"NEfpbFbi09'KP)(CPFh4TBR9XC5"XC@&[redacted])(4[)(4SC5"KDA0XC5i09'K PFf8JBA*P)'jPGbiJ55"[redacted])'4[Gfi0G'KP)([redacted]"d)#Jr+5`JFQ9MEhC
PFQPZCb`JCQ9TCfjTEQFJCh9TE'80$A4[)(4SC5"[redacted]&TE#iJ55"
redacted'&ZC#"NEfk5G#"[redacted])(4 [,Je*)'[redacted])'&ZC#"[redacted])(4SC5"[redacted])'pQ)(4SC5"[redacted])'C [FL"K)'e[[redacted]#"XEfpV)'&d)%TPFh9c,Jd0+LSU$3e"EQ3J55"VEQph)'KTE5` [redacted])(4SFQpeCfJJD'PY$@KP)'YZEhGc)'eP,L"(Ef3JFf&jFb"*NQdJCR9MDfP ZCb"eF#i09fKKGc)'jPGcmJ55"cBANJ5'8JDA-JG'p[,JeAC5"SBACP)'&Z)'& bFQ&[redacted],Jd0+LSU$3e8D'[redacted][E'PP)'GPG(-JD'Pc)'4eC5"hD'9Z)(4 SC5"SCA*N)'Pc)'0XDA"`[redacted]$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d
0$3d0$3e8D(9c)%4[[redacted])#K[FL"[redacted]+5"KCR4PFL"[redacted]'PPC!dSEQpd)%4 KER4P+5"[redacted]@jR)'eP,#"KE'`JC'9hCANYCAPPC#`0GfKKGc)(GSBA3X)'P Z)'%JGQpTBf8JE'PVC5"dBA+5Fbi035"cBfK[BfXk)'KP)'YZCAFJG'KP)("[CA4
c)'pQ)(4SC5"#[redacted]&b,Jd09fK[)(G[[redacted])'KKGQ8JDfj[GfiJDA3r$90eFQ8 X) (GTG'JJG'KP)%3Q5!eSCC*N)'*[redacted]'mJC5"fCA*j)'0[[redacted]"TEL"dD'8 JFh4KG'8X$@PZBfaeC'PZCb"CBA4PFb"KEQ3J9hP[[redacted])&GTE'[redacted] J6hG-PEMm0$5SU+Jd08fK[[redacted]*c)'pQ)'%JE@&bE'PZ,L")C@&N)'pQ)'%JF'P
Z,Je*G#"MEh9XC#"YEhCP)'&Z)'9ZCfPZC5"LE'pMD`ehDA4S)'pZC5"[redacted])#K [FL"[redacted]+3eKEQ3JBfpeER3JG'mJG'9Z,Jd0+LSU$3e")'4eE'`JBh*[redacted]

JB5"[redacted]@*PFQ9N)'[redacted](NJBfp[E([redacted]$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d
0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3e"[redacted]"KE'&LBA0dCA)J55"hEh9 XC'k5G#"VEQph)'Pd,Je*Gc)'%JF'PZDb`JFfpbG#"[CL"MD'P`F'9N,[redacted]
P,@pXC#eQFQpcG'PZCb"YEfaN,#"`E'&cG'9b$@eKH@*P,#"dD'8JBQpNH5"[CL
" $D(*TFh3X)'KTFb"bEf*P,[redacted]'KP)'0KFL"cG'PXE#"[redacted]@jR$AGKFQd [redacted]'KP)(GTER4PFJe*)'KKGQ8JG'KP)(KC'P[)'pZ,Je6EfeP)(0[EQFJ55" VEQph,#"cEfeP)([BfYPFLi0$5SU+Jd055"cBANX)*0$NQe[EL`JG'&VC5"YC5" [redacted])Z$9P[G5"dEfpV)(4SC5"[redacted]#"RGANJ4'&N)'YZCAFJEQ&[redacted] J4'pjE'8ZP!e#GA3JD'8JGfpZGd,L")CC*c)'[redacted]$@KP)'4[ET*d)'a TFh4PELi0$[redacted]'KP)(G[FQaN)'&ZC#"[GA3JEfBJDA3X)(P[G5"[redacted]
P)'PdFb"bEf&NFbi0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$8p
Q)%4[[redacted])([redacted]"[CL"SDA-JD'peFf8Y,3e*)'4bEhCP)'*j,5d 0BA*P) (4SC5"cG'&[redacted]!JG'KP)'KTE'`Z$84KER4 PNR-JC'9KC#`J5C*fC5"[redacted],L"[redacted])&4SC5"VEQpXE#"QE'&d$3ehD'9bC5" dD'8JD'peFf8JGA0PC#"dEb"`DA4MD!eKFb"*)'4bDACP)'*j$@&ZC#"cG'PXE#" NEfk5G#"VEQph$AGSBA3JE'&cG(-JEfBJGfKKGc)([redacted]$3dU+LS0$3d
0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$3d0$8G[C#iJ9'K PH5"ZCACPFL"cF'pVC5"[CL"[redacted]+'pb)'KPFLN0BR9d)'pQ)&*[BfYPCQ9XE'9
b,#"jCA0cDA)Z)&[redacted]"dD'Pc)(0PER0P$@pQ)'[redacted]#"*NRCP)'KKC#" PGQ9b) (0TEQ0P$A4[)(4SC5"hEh*N)*0REhCPFQj[FLk8$3e)EhFJGfKKG#"hBA-JBR9TE(3JGf&c)'*eDA3Z)%KK)5""EQ3JGfKj,[redacted]'ph)(4SC5"MBA*NFb" KFQ8JF'[redacted],![redacted])%4[[redacted],#"[redacted])PE5"[redacted]#i04'& N)'j[C(- JG'KbEh9RD#"dD'8JFfe[Df8JE'PVC5"SC5"SBA-JDA3JE@&NC5i0$5S
U+Jd05C*XE#"[redacted])(P[G6SJDA55Fb!J06!`)'eTE'9c$8e[[redacted]'mJ8f& [redacted]`JCAKTG#!c13e[CQBJG'KP)%j[FR4SGf&j1b"K)(0SEh*d)([redacted]$AG PFh3-JEfiJ8QpeG'8J-b`[redacted]*P)(4SCA*P,Jd0+LSU$3eACA3JD'&j)(4[Eb" PBA*XH5"TEL"dD'8JBQ&bEL"[redacted])'*eFQiZ$3-!U`%!d-m4i+'a'Z%!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!1`!$!2lr#3!'!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"!!!!!3!!!!!!!!!!%!!!!J! !!!%!!!
$qrrrr!!!!!!!!!!$rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrm&!
&-!G3"Y!'d!B3"b!(N!53"Z!'B!E`"b!'d!B3" d!'N!E`"Z!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
+!!#!2rrrrrrrrrrrr rr`!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

!!rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr!!-!!"`$!!!X#!!!-!J !!)XD!!#3!"S!!2d!
q`$j!! !!!
!!!!!!!!!!!! !! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
!! !!
!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!!!!!!!!!!!!!% !!#hq#3!!r`N!!!-+!!!Z#J!!,`S!!$!+!!!a#J!!-JS!!$- +!!!d#J!!03S!!$B +!!!h#J!!1!S!!$N+!!!k#J!!1`S!!$`+!!!p#J!!2JS!!$m+!!"!#J!!
33S!!%) +!!"$#J!!4!S!!%8+!!"'#J!!4`S!!%J+!!"*#J!!5JS!!%X+!!"-#J!!63S!!%i
+!!"2#J!!8!S!!&%+!!"5#J!!E3S!!)N+!!#E#J!!`3S!!-)+!!$I#J!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!
F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$ q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!3!!,Gm+!!!##`!!(JX!!$S ,!!!l#`!!2`X!!%!,!!"a#`!!L!X!!+8,!!
#d#`!!Y3X!!,N,!!#k#`!!j3X!!1B ,!!$R#`!!k!X!!1N,!!$U#`!!k`X!!1`,!!$Y#`!!lJX!!
1m,!!$`#`!!m3X!!2) ,!!$c#`!!p!X!!28,!!$f#`!!p`X!!2J,!!$j#`!!qJX!!2X,!!$m#`!! r3X!!2i ,!!$r#`!!!!`!!!%-!!!#$!!!!``!!!3-!!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$ q!!(!)I!!
rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#( `!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!
F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"!!!Y"!
`!!!8-!!!'$!!!"``!!!J-!!!L$!!!2``!!&m -!!#!$!!!J3`!!+!-!!$%$!!!mJ`!!!d0!!!1$3!!
%Jd!!"-0!!!a$3!!9!d!!(m 0!!#X$3!!V3d!!,%0!!#b$3!!e3d!!0B0!!$A$3!!f!d!!0N0!!
$D$3!!f`d!!0` 0!!$G$3!!hJd!!0m0!!$J$3!!i3d!!1)0!!$M$3!!j!d!!180!!$Q$3!!j`d!!
1J 0!!$T$3!!kJd!!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!
F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$ q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(
`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!!!!!!!!!!!!!!% !!#hU$3!!k`d!!1`0!!$Y$3!!lJd!!
1m0!!$`$3!!m3d!!2)0!!c3!!p!d!!28 0!!f3!!&Ji!!#m1!!"+$J!!EJi!!'m1!!#4$J!!
U3i!!-F1!!aJ!!mJi!!2B 1!!hJ!!(3m!!%!2!!"S$`!!G`m!!(J2!!"m$`!!I3m!!-82!!
$'$`!!a`m!!-J 2!!$*$`!!bJm!!-X2!!$-$`!!c3m!!-i2!!2`!!d!m!!0%2!!$5$`!!
rJ!"`#( `!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!
F!Km!$ q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!3!!,G)2!!6`!!e!m!!08 2!!$@$`!!e`m!!0J2!!$C$`!! fJm!!0X2!!F`!!h3m!!0i2!!$I$`!!i!m!!1% 2!!L`!!i`m!!132!!P`!!jJm!!1F2!!
p`!!(4!!!%83!!"N%!!!C4!!!*B 3!!$$%!!!i4!!!2i3!!$r%!!!!a%!!!34!!!X%3!!8"%!!
(`4!!#5%3!!Na%!!*F 4!!#B%3!!aK%!!-F4!!$)%3!!b4%!!-S4!!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$ q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !
rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#( `!2i!!F!Km!$q!!

(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!
F!Km!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"!!!YbK%!!-X4!!$-%3!!c4%!!-i4!!$2%3!!d"%!!0% 4!!$5%3!! da%!!034!!$9%3!!eK%!!0F4!!$B%3!!f4%!!0S4!!$E%3!!h"%!!0d 4!!$H%3!! ha%!!1!4!!$K%3!!iK%!!1-4!!$N%3!!j4%!!1B4!!$R%3!!k"%!!!J 5!!!X%J!!4a)!!
(35!!"e%J!!R4)!!-%5!!$T%J!!#4-!!!S6!!!1%`!!$a-!!#m 6!!"9%`!!FK-!!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!
F!Km!$ q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#( `!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!!!!!!!!!!!!!!% !!#eb%`!!LK-!!)X6!!#2%`!!N!!6!!$#%`!!`a-!!-36!!
$&%`!!aK-!!-F6!!$ )%`!!b4-!!-S6!!$,%`!!c"-!!-d6!!$1%`!!ca-!!0!6!!$4%`!!dK-!!0-6!!$ 8%`!!e4-!!0B6!!$A%`!!f"-!!0N6!!$D%`!!fa-!!0`6!!$G%`!!hK-!!0m6!!$ J%`!! i4-!!1)6!!$M%`!!j"-!!!J8!!!`&!!!9"3!!)!8!!#"&!!!QK3!!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$
q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#( `!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!!!!!!!!!!!!!!%!!#fD&!!!V43!!0B8!!! &&3!!"K8!!!S9!!!,&3!!-48!!
%m9!!"R&3!!H48!!(S9!!"q&3!!Ia8!!,%9!!# b&3!!Xa8!!,39!!#e&3!!YK8!!,F9!!
#i&3!!Z48!!,S9!!#l&3!!["8!!,d9!!# q&3!![a8!!-!9!!$"&3!!`K8!!--9!!$%&3!!a48!!-
B9!!$(&3!!b"8!!-N9!!$ +&3!!ba8!!-`9!!$0&3!!cK8!!-m9!!$3&3!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#( `!2i!!
F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$
q!!(!)I!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!3!!,G!9!!$4&3!!dK8!!0-9!!$p&3!!'aB!!$X@!!" J&J!!B4B!!(S@!!
#0&J!!SKB!!-%@!!$#&J!!aKB!!-F@!!$Q&J!!&aF!!$3A!!" &&`!!4KF!!
%SA!!",&`!!HaF!!(`A!!"p&`!!IKF!!(mA!!#!&`!!J4F!!))A!!# $&`!!K"F!!)8A!!
#'&`!!KaF!!)JA!!#*&`!!LKF!!)XA!!#-&`!!M4F!!)iA!!# 2&`!!N!!A!!#4&`!! rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$ q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#( `!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!
F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!3!!,C%A!!#5&`!!NaF!!*3A!!#9&`!!PKF!!*FA!!
#B&`!!Q4F!!*SA!!#E&`! !R"F!!*dA!!$#&`!!caF!!2SA!!!R'!!!+"J!!%BB!!"8'!!!
D4J!!)FB!!#)'!! !M"J!!)dB!!#1'!!!MaJ!!!!'!!!N4J!!)B!!#6'!!!P"J!!*8B!!#@'!!!

PaJ !!*JB!!#C'!!!QKJ!!*XB!!#F'!!!R4J!!*iB!!#I'!!!S"J!!+%B!!#L'!!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!
F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$ q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(
`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!
(!)I!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!3!!,D)B!!#M'!!!T"J !!+8B!!#Q'!!!TaJ!!+JB!!#T'!!!UKJ!!+XB!!
#X'!!!V4J!!+iB!!#['!!!X"J !!,%B!!#b'!!!XaJ!!,3B!!#e'!!!YKJ!!,FB!!$G'!!!#aN!!
#NC!!""'3!!3KN !!'`C!!#+'3!!V"N!!0`C!!$G'3!!i4N!!1)C!!!"J!!(4S!!$dD!!"F'J!!
A4S !!'%D!!"L'J!!LaS!!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I! !rJ!"`#(`!
2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#( `!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!! rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F! Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!
(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!
$q!!(!)I!!rJ! "`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i!!F!Km!$q!!(!)I!!rJ!"`#(`!2i !!F!
Km!$q!!(!)I!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"!!!T$J!2!!
J!!3",!!m!!!!&!"S!!%$ar`)!'J! '6QpbE@&X!!)!!!!$!'%*"!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!L!%&!
m[qK!#)!&N4 PCQ&eE(3J8'&[redacted]"S)%C[ER3!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!#,&`!!"!#,'J!!"3$ rrrrr$3!%)Irr!3!!)Irr!J!%)Irr!`!!)Irr"!!%)Irr"3!!)Irr"J!%)Irr"`! !)Irr#!!
%)Irr#3!!)Irr#J!%)2rr#`!!)Irr$!!%)Irr$3!!!!!!X`%!!'i$!!" T"3!!6JF!!!-*!!$b#J!! i``!!131!!$J%!!!ca)!!*N8!!#c&3!!LaF!!!!!!3! !!!%!!3!!!!)!!3!!!!-!!3!!!!3!!3!!!!8!!
3!!!!B!!3!!!!F!!3!!!!J!!3! !!!N!!3!!!!S!!3!!!!X!!3!!!!`!!!!!!!!$!!#3!"S!!!i!!!-!!
+X%!!"G"J! !6`J!!2i*!!$I#J!!"!`!!1S0!!5`!!bK%!!()6!!#D&!!!d"8!!*%A!!#L'!! !
LaS!!!m!%!!4!")!%`!8!"8!&J!A!"J!'3!D!"X!(!!G!#d!$NeTBfKKC@`J3fp QC-Q9j'dBkA&4&@&4F6N9A8%p&690F0P"248e6,N423rp!5&!
J6'&cCA*+CA3J0#m d63"-8&3a1J"SF("ME$9P!%K3)%aKFf9b5Q9d)
$3[0%d!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !#J-*!%3!e`!$"`!!!3!"!!!!!!!!!%!"`$mr`!!!3!!!!!!
(3!!!)MVd4%$!!3 !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!3!"!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! !!!!!!!%!3!
#J"3!!!J!!!!$r!!)!!!!"!!!!!9J#!!!!!!!!!
`!!!!!!!!!"`! !! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
!!! !!!!!!!!!(3!!!!!!5&!
J6'&cCA*+CA3J0#md63!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!+!`N !4!$A!!-(!!!"!!%!!!!!!!!!!3!(!
2cr!!!"!!!!!!!G!!!!L1[4%3-!"!!!!!! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!"!!
%!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

$qrrrr!!!!!!!!!!$rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr
rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrcR+!!!!:

--==========_-1369661435==_==========

--==========_-1369661435==_==========--

↑ Index

272. Gary Roberts
Whitman
Wed 11 Sep 1996

"Lacy jags" to me = a wonderful way to characterize the fractal geometry of turbulent systems such as clouds. Also seems an interesting diction cluster, perhaps meant to play off gender connotations of each word, a kind of hermaphrodic entity or bisexual manifestation, though there's an important asymmetry: adjective/noun equal or not equal to female/male??? Peter Out

↑ Index

273. Henry Gould
Re: Dressing Up
Wed 11 Sep 1996

Marjorie Garber wrote a big book on this subject called Vested Interests. Routledge Press, 1992. Haven't read it - but it got a lot of review "coverage". - HG

↑ Index

274. Christina Fairbank Chirot dressing up--the Post Card Queen
Wed 11 Sep 1996

re the dressing up enquiry

read/see/hear the works and performances of Kenward Elmslie--

Postcards on Parade for example--with its backdrops of 150 handmade gender bending postcard collages--Kenward performing --singing, speaking, dressing up--all the roles--

Kenward has a new show soon-- all of his books and tapes are available from SPD or Z and Bamberger Presses--Bamberger wrote an interesting piece on KE's recent work in Sulfur 37

Long live the Postcard Queen!

dbchirot

↑ Index

275. Laura Moriarty
Dan Davidson
Wed 11 Sep 1996

We've just gotten a message from Geoffrey Green who teaches here at SFSU that there will be a memorial service for Dan Davidson on Saturday September 14, 5:30 PM at 2948 16th Street at Capp. Dan was in the Creative Writing program here at State in the eighties. I don't know more about the servie or who to call to confirm. Hopefully, we will know more by the SPT/ Proliferation reading this Friday at New College.

↑ Index

276. David Kellogg
Re: Dressing Up
Wed 11 Sep 1996

> Marjorie Garber wrote a big book on this subject called Vested Interests. Routledge Press, 1992. Haven't read it - but it got a lot of review "coverage". - HG

Apparently (as I learned from an article in Lingua Franca) this book it spends some time ruminating on the picture of "Oscar Wilde" as Salome which appeared in Ellmann's biography and has now been shown to not be Wilde (or a man, for that matter) at all.

Not to slag the book (which I haven't read). Just a little tidbit of knowledge.
~~~
~~~

We did some research here at the Center and have a partial list of publications:

Product, e.g.press, San Francisco, 1991
Image, Zasterle Press, Canary Islands, 1992
Weather, Score Press, Berkeley
Absence Sensorium, with Tom Mandel, forthcoming from Potes and Poets Press, Elwood, CT

> We've just gotten a message from Geoffrey Green who teaches here at SFSU that there will be a memorial service for Dan Davidson on Saturday September 14, 5:30 PM at 2948 16th Street at Capp. Dan was in the Creative Writing program here at State in the eighties. I don't know more about the service or who to call to confirm. Hopefully, we will know more by the SPT/ Proliferation reading this Friday at New College.

↑ Index

278. Lisa Jarnot
ear inn readings
Wed 11 Sep 1996

October and November 1996: Readings at The Ear Inn

OCT 5: PRAGEETA SHARMA, MARK MCMORRIS Prageeta Sharma is a graduate of the MFA program in Creative Writing at Brown University. In 1995 she was a fellow at the MacDowell Colony and was awarded the Academy of American Poets Prize. She currently lives in Brooklyn, New York. Mark McMorris is the author of Figures for a Hypothesis, Mothwings, and the forthcoming collection The Black Reeds. This September he collaborated with Ward Tietz on a performance installation and sound poem for the Geneva Arts Festival. He lives in Providence, Rhode Island.

OCT 12: CLIFF FYMAN, LEE ANN BROWN Cliff Fyman lives in New York City where he is a poetry editor of Cover magazine. His work has recently been published in The San Francisco Chronicle, Hanging Loose, The World Anthology: Out of this World, and Lungfull!. Lee Ann Brown is a poet and filmmaker. Her work has been published in several magazines and journals and her first book, Polyverse, is forthcoming from Sun and Moon this fall. She recently moved to New York City where she is the editor/publisher of Tender Buttons press.

OCT 19: ANSELM BERRIGAN, KIM LYONS Kim Lyons recently collaborated with Ed Epping on an artists book called Mettle. She has poetry forthcoming in The World and Pagan Place and her chapbook, Rhyme the Lake, is available from leave books. Anselm Berrigan has returned to New York after a two year stay in San Francisco. His recent publications include a chapbook, On the Premises, and poems which have appeared in several magazines, including Talisman, Prosodia, and Yale Younger Poets.

OCT 26: DEIRDRE KOVAC, BARBARA HENNING Deirdre Kovac lives in Brooklyn. She is associate editor of Big Allis and is completing her first collection of poems, Mannerism. Her poetry and criticism have appeared recently and are forthcoming in American Letters & Commentary, Denver Quarterly, Letterbox, Object, The Poetry Project Newsletter, and Torque. Barbara Henning is the editor-publisher of Long News Books. Her most recent collection, Love Makes Thinking Dark, was published by United Artists Books in 1995. Her work can be found in Talisman, Chain, and Trois and she has a collection of poems, In Between, forthcoming from Spectacular Diseases.

NOV 2 BETH BORRUS, SCOTT BENTLEY Scott Bentley lives in Oakland and teaches at Cal State Hayward. He has an O book called Ground Air that rides shotgun into the KWave. He handles landscapes and large objects. Beth Borrus has recently returned from a hiatus in Paris with Edith Piaff. She has a new collection of poems called Fast Divorce Bankruptcy published by Incommunicado. She lives in Elizabeth and works in Newark.

NOV 9 ANGE MLINKO, EDWIN TORRES Ange Mlinko lives in Providence and edits Compound Eye. She has a new chapbook out from Lift called Immediate Orgy & Audit. She grooves to New York. Edwin Torres is a poet who exists in the you-misphere of the alphabet. He was recently curator of the monday night series at St. Mark s and a recipient of a grant from the Foundation for Contemporary Performance Art. His two collections are Lung Poetry & I Hear Things People Haven't Really Said.

NOV 16 DREW GARDNER, CHUCK STEIN Drew Gardner does not play loud like a young jazz drummer. He has two chapbooks, Stonewalk published by St. Lazar and The Cover from Leave. He practices at night and lives in Brooklyn. Chuck Stein will not stop working on his life project forestforthetrees. His most recent book is a selected poems from Station Hill called hatracktree. Marie Osmond has performed his speaking backwards poetry on Ripley's Believe It or Not. He lives in the Hudson Valley.

NOV 23 LYDIA DAVIS, PATRICIA JONES Patricia Jones has a new book out from Coffee House called The Weather That Kills and a Telephone chapbook called My Mythologies Always. She is a fellow at Breadloaf, teaches at Sara Lawrence and lives in the heart of Brooklyn. Lydia Davis is a prose writer and translator living in upstate New York. Recently out from High Risk are The End of the Story and Break It Down. A new collection of stories called Almost No Memory is soon to be published by Farrar-Strauss.

NOV 30 ROSS BROCKLEY, JIM KRELL Jim Krell is the author of three collections of poetry: Here & Now, a Black Sparrow imprint edited by Jonathan Williams, Vice of Woes, and On the Advice of Wolves (Terminal Inc.). His new project is a series of love poems to Michelle. He is a fixture in the east village.

Ross Brockley performs Monday nights at the Luna Lounge. His work has been described as the surrealist mutterings of damaged goods. As Janeane Garafolo says in Playboy, "I woke up and rolled over, and there was Ross Brockley. My first thought was, Oh, I know that guy! He's funny. Thank God it's a good comic. I mean he could have been a hack."

SATURDAY AFTERNOON READINGS begin at 2:30 pm, $3.00 contribution goes to readers. THE EAR INN is at 326 Spring St. NYC. Coordinators for this series are Lisa Jarnot (October) and Bill Luoma (November). Continuing support of this series is provided by the Segue Foundation. Funding is made possible by support from the Literature Program of the New York State Council on the Arts. PLEASE SUPPORT THE EAR-- COME EARLY FOR LUNCH, STAY LATE FOR DINNER!

↑ Index

279. Colleen Lookingbill

Dan Davidson

Thu 12 Sep 1996

I first met Dan Davidson in 1987, at a bus stop following a poetry reading in San Francisco. Our destination was hardly a block away from each other in the same neighborhood and we soon became friends, of sorts, for a few years. He had just abandoned involvement in the local punk rock scene, said he knew Jello Biafra of the Dead Kennedys and bragged of his conquests in picking up young women at the clubs. I believed him, he was capable of being very charming and comedic. He had an incredible gift for talking-up strangers in public. A walk with him to a used bookshop, to scavenge for treasures, was a minor adventure, you never knew who he'd engage or where it would end. He also collected photographs that he found on the street. He often did much of his writing at the old, now defunct, SF Modern Art Museum. We attended some of the contemporary music performances together there, at what was known as the "Green Room." In those days, there were interesting readings nearly every week, it seemed like a "scene", and Dan was a part of it. The sound of his artificial heart valve ticking could be heard in the audience, it was often mistaken for a loud watch, and Dan used to joke about it. Eventually he hosted his own reading series at Forest Books.

Dan held a literary salon in the living room of his funky share apartment. Some of the participants included Gary Sullivan, George Albon, David Gilbert, Laurie Price, Spencer Selby and Colleen Lookingbill. Dan played matchmaker in introducing me and encouraging me to date my wife-to-be. In the style of the Situationists, Dan often created his own flyers of altered advertising images, which he publicly posted or handed-out himself. The Reagan - Bush years kept him busy. I remember he was very excited about the release of the first BATMAN movie, which he read as a postmodern sign of social crisis. He never held a straight job, as far as I know, and he was proud of that. A sign outside his apartment gate read : Anarchist Arboretum. He claimed his upstairs neighbors were SM professionals and he could hear the screams at night. He decided to get a tattoo and chose a simple circle or oval on his forearm (I believe).

Later, I became estranged from him, but ironically, after some years spent living on the other side of the city, I relocated to a building close to his. These last few years, I passed him on the street from time to time, exchanged polite greetings, had no knowledge of his life, but he seemed content.

Jordon Zorker

↑ Index

280. wheeler
Assembling Alternatives
Thu 12 Sep 1996

Having now read through the correspondence here, I only want to add my thanks to Romana Huk. For me, it was a real joy to hear so many people whose work I'd followed in one place, one time. I gave my own paper late in the conference, and until then heard panels that tangentially related in order to incorporate what came up -- I regretted all I missed. I would be grateful to see any of the papers, in whole or part, posted to the list; this may sate others' curiosity too, yes?

Susan Wheeler voice/fax [redacted]

↑ Index

281. Loss Glazier
Re: Assembling Alternatives
Thu 12 Sep 1996

At 07:36 AM 9/12/96 -0400, you wrote:
>I would be grateful to see any of the papers, in whole or part, posted to >the list; this may sate others' curiosity too, yes?
>Susan Wheeler

Conference papers may also be sent to me to be included in an online "book" on the conference at the EPC!

Loss Glazier <[redacted]>
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

↑ Index

282. Douglas Messerli
Sun & Moon NAP and NAF competitions
Thu 12 Sep 1996

Now that the season has begun, I thought you might want to be reminded for yourself, your students, and for your friends that Sun & Moon Press is still reading manuscripts for its 1996 New American Poetry (NAP) and New American Fiction (NAF) competitions.

The competitions are open from January 1 to December 30th of each year. All manuscripts are read both in-house and by an independent judge.

Full length manuscripts of either poetry or fiction may be entered. Please put your name and address on the title page (but do not repeat it elsewhere, since the manuscripts out of house are read blindly).

There is a $25.00 entrance fee which is used toward the publication of the books.

If you wish your manuscript returned after the competition , please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The award winners are announced each year in February. And the books will be published within the next calendar year.

This past year's (1995) winners were:

Poetry: Rob Fitterman, METROPOLIS (chosen by Bruce Andrews) Fiction: Eleana Greenspan, POSSESSED BY A DEMON (chose by Douglas Messerli)

Douglas Messerli

↑ Index

283. Douglas Messerli
(no subject)
Thu 12 Sep 1996

Please send entries for the New American Poetry and New American Fiction competitions to:

Sun & Moon Press
6026 Wilshire Boulevard
Los Angeles, CA 90036

↑ Index

284. Ira Lightman
Re: Conceptual crit?
Thu 12 Sep 1996

> Nirvana at the end was so alternative you could see their > "alternativeness" in every record store in the land. They were so > alternative Cobain put a shotgun in his mouth to escape the alternatives.

Or, alternatively, Mark Chapman put a gun in John Lennon's mouth because of the double bind of being cool and a Rebel; Lennon half said all Beatles songs were untouchable, half that they were all rubbish and they "sold out" (his words) with their first record; these schizoid indexes of value exist in relation to some schizoid thing called society which, for the people who don't care about Nirvana or any of us on this list, don't matter at all on the day-to-day basis that they seem to matter in this argument.
The point is not always to dent the present, but to be true, and wait for it to be seen; the alternative.
Elvis Presley's first records, as records, were quiet and minimal and not grabbing attention compared to the pop culture they entered; after the pelvis hoo-hah, that's why his work remains musical, not situationist.
The danger of quick reaction in this supposedly quick
e-medium is going for quick solutions, and not thinking.
There was one culture around Nirvana not unlike the one that just poets (not critics) make around poetry both straight and avant-garde: emotionally inept, hyper, not interested in the feelings or the chords of Kurt Cobain which helped stoke his internalised feelings of no longer being alternative because he couldn't be alternative in attitude to their satisfaction. One member of this list privately once told me that he laughed when he heard Lennon had been shot "he was already dead"; that seems to me to be consumer culture at its worst from an avant-gardist; it's yesterday's product. Not to buy that attitude is alternative, no matter your sales.

Ira Lightman

↑ Index

285. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: catching up
Thu 12 Sep 1996

---

reading through back numbers of the list -- still only getting online about once a week from Boulder --

The Joe Lockard who authored the article spoken of favorably here last week was one of the speakers on the panel I chaired at the Maine conference this Summer -- I would invite list-o-philes to read Lockard's piece and decide for themselves if his is guilty of reductive sociological approaches to literature -- on newer news -- Creeley reads at Naropa this week-end --

Stan Brakhage has just been released from the hospital after major surgery -- It looks like he'll be OK, but he's been through a real trial -- I know there are lots of Brakhage fans out there, so I'll post an update on his health next week --

love to all and sundry

↑ Index

286. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: no back channel
Thu 12 Sep 1996

Keith -- if you're still looking for Harryette's phone number, call me at mine:
[redacted]

↑ Index

287. Douglas Messerli
(no subject)
Thu 12 Sep 1996

Sorry to bother everyone again, but my most recent post seemed to confuse as many people as it was meant to reveal information.

For the both the NAF and NAP competitions, Sun & Moon Press is interested only in previously unpublished full-length manuscripts.

The chosen manuscript will be published, with a contract, by Sun & Moon Press in its New American Fiction or New American Poetry Series.

A full-length poetry manuscript must be at least 50 pages 70-150 is a more normal length.

Fiction manuscripts may be from 70 pages at may extend to any length.

Douglas Messerli

↑ Index

288. Tony Green
Re: cross-dressing
Thu 12 Sep 1996

More biblio on this from Kyla McFarlane, who has just completed a thesis on Fetishism in New Zealand and Australian art:

String of Pearls: Stories about Cross-Dressing ed. Tony Ayres, Allen and Unwin, St Leonards, Australia, 1996. This may not be available in the US yet. Fetishism as Cultural Discourse, eds. Emily Apter and William Pietz, Cornell University Press, Ithaca, 1993. This book also has a very useful and extensive bibliography. (Note particularly the article by Jann Matlock, pp.13-31. Another version of Matlock's piece is reproduced in Grand Street, no.53, Summer 1995.) Also, Valerie Steele's book Fetish: Fashion, Sex and Power, Oxford University Press, 1996, might be of some use... Marjorie Garber is a well known writer in this area, but you probably already know of her. If not, her book entitled Vested Interests is a useful text.

Good luck...

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

289. Rod Smith
David Tudor Memorial
Fri 13 Sep 1996

In Celebration of David Tudor
January 20, 1926 - August 13, 1996

Judson Memorial Church
55 Washington Square South

New York, New York
Tuesday, September 17, 1996
8:00 P. M.

↑ Index

290. Sheila Murphy
Re: Dan Davidson
Fri 13 Sep 1996

Jordon, Thanks for sharing your experiences and feelings about Dan Davidson. I only met him briefly in San Francisco when you and Colleen invited Peter and me to read and during the reading for THE ART OF PRACTICE. Like so many others, I will continue to admire Dan's work.

The fragilities or decisions of others often remain unknown to us.

Best to you and Colleen,

Sheila

↑ Index

291. Judy Roitman
Fwd: VETO DOMA - How to help (fwd)
Fri 13 Sep 1996

Long political message follows, the gist of which is to send a message to Clinton on the vetoing the federal ban on gay marriages. Why not?

> ---------- Forwarded message ----------
> Date: Wed, 11 Sep 1996 19:28 -0700 (PDT)
> From: [redacted]
> Reply-To: [redacted]
> Subject: Fwd: VETO DOMA - How to help
>
> Are you as mad as I am about DOMA? Here's something to do. Pass the word:
>
> Subj: VETO DOMA - How to help
> Date: 96-09-09 22:52:28 EDT
> From: BLUE EYES2
>
> President Bill Clinton has been taking way too much advice from his right-wing advisors like Dick Morris on the subject of DOMA. He needs to know that we will not sit back and allow him to score election year points by denying basic rights to lesbian or gay Americans. It is the most important battle of our political lives and no matter what we think about the timing or the politics behind this issue, we cannot afford to sit this one out. This is an experiment in using the net for grass roots politics. Your voice will make a difference.

To participate in this experiment:

1. E-mail this message, exactly as it is, complete with this introduction to at least five of your friends. Add it to any mailing lists you are on. Please, distribute as widely as you can.

2. Copy the message below the line, without this introduction, to a new e-mail message.

3. Address that new message to: [redacted]

4. Fill in your name, street address and the date in the appropriate places top and bottom. The White House tosses e-messages with no street address.

5. In the subject line, write VETO DOMA

6. Hit the send button and your copy of message will be on its way to The White House.

If you follow all of these directions the President could receive a few hundred thousand messages titled VETO DOMA. It would be too much to ignore.

We can and will make a difference in 1996!

your name
your street address
your city, state, & zip code

---

date<

President Bill Clinton
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, DC

Dear Mr. President:

Republicans in Congress, with the help of many Democrats have passed the so called Defense Of Marriage Act, or DOMA. They created the bill from ignorance, from hatred for gay Americans and out of the desire to embarrass you in an election year. You helped its progress when, to > make yourself look good in a election year, you announced early that you would sign it. Now, you must change your mind and do the right thing. Veto DOMA! We will not allow you to make political gains by creating pain for our gay Americans.

>
> DOMA is a dangerous threat to the civil liberties of gay Americans and to the Constitution itself. As Jim Crow laws once did to African Americans in the South, DOMA would use the mighty power of the federal government to deny to one class of citizens, gay Americans: income tax benefits, pensions, social security survivor benefits, access to partners in federal hospitals, immigration rights, and so much more that we have not yet considered. DOMA would create for the first time under federal law two classes of citizenship with different rights for gay and straight Americans. This divisive law threatens one of our most important Constitutional principles, equal protection under the law.
>
> You must do the right thing Mr. President. Speak out against the hatred, eschew the politics of division and rise above the political expedience. Do the right thing for your country and its citizens. Veto DOMA. Raise your voice against this monstrous injustice. Use the power of your veto pen to bring us together, instead of your signature to divide our nation by creating a new federally ordered apartheid system of injustice.
>
> Sincerely,
>
> your name
> your street address
> your city, state, & zip code

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

292. Jordan Davis

Kevin Young's phone number

Fri 13 Sep 1996

Would somebody please backchannel me with Kevin Young's phone number?

Would somebody
please backchannel me with Kevin Young's
phone number?

Would somebody please backchannel me with Kevin Young's phone number?

Thanks--
Jordan Davis

↑ Index

293. Matt Kirschenbaum
query: langpo and its discontents
Fri 13 Sep 1996

Lately I've been interested in the specifics of the rhetoric employed in critiques of/attacks on language writing (whether the journal, any of the several anthologies, the work of individual poets, etc.) Can anyone suggest a particularly nasty broadside or polemic, something perhaps not unlike Robert Buchanan's infamous "Fleshly School" review of the Pre-Raphaelites . . .

Thanks,

--Matt

========== Matthew G. Kirschenbaum University of Virginia [redacted] Department of English
http://faraday.clas.virginia.edu/~mgk3k Electronic Text Center

↑ Index

294. maria damon
update u of mn
Fri 13 Sep 1996

---

hi guyzies sorry to clog the airwaves w/ matters distinctly less than poetic, but it's impt to our situation here to get the word out/ so here's the latest news, hot off the union meeting earlier today (that is, our hoping-to-be-union).

md

From: Tom Walsh <[redacted]>
Date: Fri, 13 Sep 1996 16:32:33 -0500

To: [redacted]
Subject: Cease and Desist

Dear Colleague

Today the University Faculty Alliance filed our present authorization forms with the Bureau of Mediation Services (BMS). We now have a copy of the cease and desist ("maintenance of status quo") order which was faxed to the University this afternoon. This will forestall any precipitous action by the Board of Regents. Of course, we may have to defend this order in court.

The maintenance order refers to the entire Twin Cities instructional faculty. We regard this as meaning the AHC is included in the order. The AHC is not included in the filing unit at this moment, but has until November 1 to join (as does the Law School).

As you know, this quick response of the faculty was only possible due to broad agreement among many of us--UFA, AAUP, the ad hoc "Group of 19", our Regents Professors and governance groups.

As a colleague observed:

> "The guillotine is stuck halfway down."

This is at heart a fight to preserve the University as a major American research university with access to Minnesotans regardless of their economic status. It is not solely about tenure.

If we are to prevent the guillotine blade from falling the rest of the way, we will have to continue a vigorous action to collect authorization forms from the entire University. We need such numbers that the public and legislature will be convinced that we are united and that the entire State of Minnesota has a stake in the outcome.

Sincerely,
Paula Rabinowitz, Department of English
Thomas Walsh, Department of Physics
University Faculty Alliance

↑ Index

295. Scott Bentley
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Fri 13 Sep 1996

I remember some years ago (say, 1986) that Clayton Eshelman had some pretty fiery things to say about "L" poetry, but I can't remember where. It was either in POETRY INTERNATIONAL, POETRY FLASH, or POETRY TODAY (I think). Also, Bob Haas made an interesting single paragraph summary of "L" in an interview in the S.F. EXAMINER about six months ago. Sorry not to be more specific but your query caught my attention, so I thought I'd reply and get you started. Hopefully someone else will remember the specifics.

Scott Bentley

↑ Index

296. Christina Fairbank Chirot query & discontents
Fri 13 Sep 1996

re the query seeking specific rhetoric involved with attacks on Langaueg poetry--

A book that may be of use is Politics and Poetic Value edited by Robert von Hallberg (Chicago: U of Chicago P, 1987). Specifically the essays by Jerome J. McGann (Contemporary Poetry, Alternate Routes), Charles Altieri (Without Consequences is No Politics: A Response to Jerome McGann), McGann again (Response to Charles Altieri) and Jed Rasula (The Politics of, the Politics in). (Needless to say--re the recent poets/critics thread--these present the rhetoric of the academy in dealing with the issues. Thus should be taken as but one aspect among many of the question . . .)

Robert Smithson wrote: "Literal statements often conceal violent analogies".

An interesting way to approach the question of specific attacks--lines, words, phrases--might be to take statements for and against Language Poetry--including those specific to Language Poetry itself as statements, claims--and present them in juxtaposition. The apposition of vocabularies of opposition may provide interesting material for investigation.

The Utopian Moment by Norman Finkelstein may also be an interesting book to look at.

hope these may be of use
--dbchirot

↑ Index

297. filch
Re: Fwd: VETO DOMA - How to help (fwd)
Fri 13 Sep 1996

It might be helpful to know that email is all but ignored in political circles. The staff does not exist to adequately filter the mail. The medium is considered too "impulse" to carry weight. As always a good strong letter using your own words on real paper is worth a great deal more in the process of deciding these things. In essence 10000 email messages don't count nearly as much as one bona fide letter from a member of the rotary club in bumfuk, idaho.

if email were to be the medium of choice it would perhaps be more appropriate to aim it at those who will end up enforcing such a law rather than those who make and enact such laws as the voices of enforcement will undoubtably carry more weight than 10000 email messages.

filch

> Long political message follows, the gist of which is to send a message to Clinton on the vetoing the federal ban on gay marriages. Why not?
>
> ---------- Forwarded message ----------
> Date: Wed, 11 Sep 1996 19:28 -0700 (PDT)
> From: [redacted]
> Reply-To: [redacted]
> Subject: Fwd: VETO DOMA - How to help
>
> Are you as mad as I am about DOMA? Here's something to do. Pass the word:
>
> Subj: VETO DOMA - How to help
> Date: 96-09-09 22:52:28 EDT
> From: BLUE EYES2
>
> President Bill Clinton has been taking way too much advice from his right-wing advisors like Dick Morris on the subject of DOMA. He needs to know that we will not sit back and allow him to score election year points by denying basic rights to lesbian or gay Americans. It is the most important battle of our political lives and no matter what we think about the timing or the politics behind this issue, we cannot afford to sit this one out. This is an experiment in using the net for grass roots politics. Your voice will make a difference.
>
> To participate in this experiment:
>
> 1. E-mail this message, exactly as it is, complete with this introduction to at least five of your friends. Add it to any mailing lists you are on. Please, distribute as widely as you can.
>
> 2. Copy the message below the line, without this introduction, to a new e-mail message.
>
> 3. Address that new message to: [redacted]
>
> 4. Fill in your name, street address and the date in the appropriate places top and bottom. The White House tosses e-messages with no street

address.

5. In the subject line, write VETO DOMA

6. Hit the send button and your copy of message will be on its way to The White House.

If you follow all of these directions the President could receive a few hundred thousand messages titled VETO DOMA. It would be too much to ignore.

We can and will make a difference in 1996!

your name
your street address
your city, state, & zip code

---

date<

President Bill Clinton
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, DC

Dear Mr. President:

Republicans in Congress, with the help of many Democrats have passed the so called Defense Of Marriage Act, or DOMA. They created the bill from ignorance, from hatred for gay Americans and out of the desire to embarrass you in an election year. You helped its progress when, to make yourself look good in a election year, you announced early that you would sign it. Now, you must change your mind and do the right thing. Veto DOMA! We will not allow you to make political gains by creating pain for our gay Americans.

DOMA is a dangerous threat to the civil liberties of gay Americans and to the Constitution itself. As Jim Crow laws once did to African Americans in the South, DOMA would use the mighty power of the federal government to deny to one class of citizens, gay Americans: income tax benefits, pensions, social security survivor benefits, access to partners in federal hospitals, immigration rights, and so much more that we have not yet considered. DOMA would create for the first time under federal law two classes of citizenship with different rights for gay and straight Americans. This divisive law threatens one of our most important Constitutional principles, equal protection under the law.

> You must do the right thing Mr. President. Speak out against the hatred, eschew the politics of division and rise above the political expedience. Do the right thing for your country and its citizens. Veto DOMA. Raise your voice against this monstrous injustice. Use the power of your veto pen to bring us together, instead of your signature to divide our nation by creating a new federally ordered apartheid system of injustice.
>
> Sincerely,
>
> your name
> your street address
> your city, state, & zip code
>
> ---
> Judy Roitman | "Glad to have
> Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
> Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while."
> [redacted] | Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
> ---

↑ Index

298. David Kellogg

Re: query: langpo and its discontents

Fri 13 Sep 1996

At 05:54 PM 9/13/96 -0400, Matt Kirschenbaum wrote:
>Lately I've been interested in the specifics of the rhetoric >employed in critiques of/attacks on language writing (whether
>the journal, any of the several anthologies, the work of >individual poets, etc.) Can anyone suggest a particularly >nasty broadside or polemic, something perhaps not unlike >Robert Buchanan's infamous "Fleshly School" review of the >Pre-Raphaelites . . .

Well, I think the obvious place to start is Tom Clark's "Stalin as Linguist" parts I and II, at least one of which was published in Poetry Flash. (I think both parts are reprinted in a book of Clark's from the Michigan Poets on Poetry series.)

~~~
~~~

University FAX [redacted] Durham, NC 27708
http://www.duke.edu/~kellogg/

There is no mantle
and it does not descend.
--Thomas Kinsella

↑ Index

299. John Kinsella
Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996
Sat 14 Sep 1996

Does anyone know if Sulfur is still active? I've not heard of anything appearing since early last year. Is Barbara Guest on e-mail? I'd like to contact her re Salt poetry journal.

Thanks

John Kinsella

↑ Index

300. Kevin Killian
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Sat 14 Sep 1996

> Lately I've been interested in the specifics of the rhetoric employed in critiques of/attacks on language writing (whether the journal, any of the several anthologies, the work of individual poets, etc.) Can anyone suggest a particularly nasty broadside or polemic, something perhaps not unlike Robert Buchanan's infamous "Fleshly School" review of the Pre-Raphaelites . . .

Around ten years ago in the Poetry Flash (located in Berkeley) there was an all out war against language poetry, with langpos sending angry letters back. It was all anybody talked about for months. Here's the phone number of the Flash: [redacted]. They might be able to help you.

Dodie

↑ Index

301. JOEL LEWIS
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Sat 14 Sep 1996

---

there was a crazy piece in CONTACT II in the early 80's coming from a very normative point of view--a good source for this stuff is Charles Bernstein who kept track of all these polemics. A forgotten number is the exchange between Eliot Weinberger and various L. Poets that was in three issues of Sulfur -- Weinberger has never collcted this in his volumes. Give a look to the responces to my intro to LAN poetry that appeared in Poets & Writers circa '90 (article ws called INk Mathematics), which is a rare glimpse of how everyday, non-theorist types looked upon the work

↑ Index

302. Douglas Messerli

Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996

Sat 14 Sep 1996

Barbara is not on E-mail.

I can provide her address. I'll back-channel you.

Douglas

==========

At 12:32 PM 9/14/96 +0800, you wrote:
>Does anyone know if Sulfur is still active? I've not heard of anything >appearing since early last year. Is Barbara Guest on e-mail? I'd like to >contact her re Salt poetry journal.
>
>Thanks
>
>John Kinsella
>

↑ Index

303. Louis Cabri

Re: query: langpo and its discontents

Sat 14 Sep 1996

If you're interested in cross border, take a look at Warren Tallman's last collection of essays and letters, for a take on Steve McCaffery and new Vancouver writing. Also see review by Brian Fawcett of the antho. East of Main (which includes a section of writing by Derksen, Ferguson and others), in The Georgia Straight circa 1990. - Louis

↑ Index

304. Keith Tuma
Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996
Sat 14 Sep 1996

John Kinsella asks if Sulfur is still active.

It is, the next issue is due in late October or early November, but loss of NEA money has meant, among other things, a reduction in the number of distributors. Probably best, especially for those not in the US, to subscribe:

$14 for individuals; add $4 ($10 airmail) for foreign subscriptions.

Sulfur
c/o English Department
Eastern Michigan University
Ypsilanti, MI 48197
USA

↑ Index

305. Matt Kirschenbaum
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Sat 14 Sep 1996

Many thanks to everyone who's responded so far. All of your suggestions have been helpful, even the one mailed to me backchannel suggesting that I "begin with a study of Langpo's rhetoric and critique of nearly everyone else."

--Matt

==========
========== Matthew G. Kirschenbaum University of Virginia [redacted] Department of English http://faraday.clas.virginia.edu/~mgk3k Electronic Text Center

↑ Index

306. George Bowering
Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Sep 1996 to 13 Sep 1996
Sun 15 Sep 1996

Latest _Sulfur_ I have is No. 38, Spring 1996.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

307. Gabrielle Welford

Former Alliance member/_Turner Diaries_ expert says Hello! (fwd)

Sun 15 Sep 1996

I haven't checked out the validity of this, so it may be a put on. But I thought I'd forward it in case anyone can use the info. It came through after I'd set the badsubjects list to "nomail" so perhaps there's a reason? gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Milton Kleim <[redacted]>
Subject: Former Alliance member/_Turner Diaries_ expert says Hello!

Hello everyone!

I was a member of William Pierce's National Alliance for nearly a year, and was an "associate" (i.e. follower) of his for much longer. I was the chief (de facto) propagandist for the National Alliance on the Internet, primarily USENET, for over two years. I was privy to much information about the inner workings of the National Alliance (although I wish I had even more knowledge). I had been invited to the Hillsboro, WV head- quarters for the April 20th (Hitler's birthday) leadership conference, by special signed invitation of Pierce. However, I did not attend due to a major conflict which led to my resignation from (but not my disassociation with) the Alliance. In fact, although I had trouble with Pierce's sale of _the Turner Diaries_ to Barricade Books, I continued to support Alliance Internet operations until June, including helping to write the TTD webpage (http://www.natvan.com/turner.html) -- most of the words are mine, though Pierce modified a few things I said.

Due to rather traumatic personal circumstances in late May and early June, as well as a build-up of disgust and bitterness over the failings of the White Nationalist "movement," I made a "resignation" statement in early June (see my webpage -- "A Reckoning"). Further statements have been made subsequently, and I am now completely free of the influence of the "movement's" "persuasive" techniques. I am more than happy to speak my mind about the potentially evil possibilites which the "movement" can foster, as it has fostered in Oklahoma City.

Make no mistake about it: the "movement" can and probably will implement further acts like the OKC bombing. This is most unfortunate, but a terrible fact which cannot be avoided. The "movement's" ranks are, for the most part, quite benign, as I was -- all talk -- but there are, sadly, certain elements within it who are quite capable of anything, including another OKC, or worse, using nuclear, biologial, or chemical weapons on a much larger scale. Many of those in the "movement" who are prone to violence are amoral and apolitical, but are driven to action by the hot rhetoric I and others put out, including, especially, Pierce's _The Turner Diaries_ and his even worse book, _Hunter_ (pretty much a "how-to" manual for "do-it-yourself" assassination of political figures and interracial couples). They are enthralled by the pursuit of power and thrill, and killing people in such fashion as happened at OKC is the only way they can fulfill their fantasies and perverted needs.

I know _the Turner Diaries_ (and _Hunter_) in depth, free of the media distortion which occurs thanks to Mr. Dees and others. If anyone would like my opinions on the matter, for curiosity, or for research, please do feel free to ask. If I can help to prevent the further realization of Dr. No's, uhh, I mean Dr. Pierce's "vision," I'm happy to do so.

Please do check out my webpage, which will explain many things about me. There are also some rather bold statements against _the Turner Diaries_ archived at the Nizkor site, in files kleim.0896 and kleim.0996.

Good day to you all.

-- Milton John Kleim, Jr.
Sacramento

--

http://www.ncf.carleton.ca/~bb748

--

↑ Index

308. Jordan Davis
how the west was won and where it got us
Sun 15 Sep 1996

Uilleain pipes, Didn't Mark Wallace write an essay for Poetics Briefs about strong hostile reactions to language poetry? For those of you who haven't read Mark's essays, they're a trip -- cogent, fiery, encyclopedic. But I have to ask -- is any unexcited description of language poetry a 'discontented' reaction? I've described language poetry a lot, often late at night, when everything's turned down except the treble. Jargon

↑ Index

309. Charles Smith
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Mon 16 Sep 1996

As follow-up to the Sulfur issues Joel Lewis mentioned, you might want to look at Temblor 9, which has responses by Ben Hollander & David Levi Strauss to Ron Silliman's "Negative Solidarity" that Eshleman published in Sulfur 22, followed by a comapnion Silliman piece, "Poets & INtellectuals." These at least get beyond the namecalling nonense that charcterized much of what was printed in the Poetry Flash Dodie mentioned, & even Weinberger's stuff in Sulfur.

I tempted to ask why anyoe wd want to dredge this stuff up, but, no, I really don't want to ask.

all best,
charles

↑ Index

310. Charles Smith
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Mon 16 Sep 1996

A critique of the Messerli anthology by Ben Friedlander can be found in Jimmy & Lucy's House of "K" #8, which begins:

"Is this the great language poetry anthology?"

happy reading

charles

↑ Index

311. filch
Re: how the west was won and where it got us
Mon 16 Sep 1996

please turn down the treble and let er rip.

> Uilleain pipes,
> Didn't Mark Wallace write an essay for Poetics Briefs about strong hostile reactions to language poetry? For those of you who haven't read Mark's essays, they're a trip -- cogent, fiery, encyclopedic. But I have to ask -- is any unexcited description of language poetry a 'discontented' reaction? I've described language poetry a lot, often late at night, when everything's turned down except the treble.
> Jargon

↑ Index

312. Gabrielle Welford
Re: how the west was won and where it got us
Mon 16 Sep 1996

On Sun, 15 Sep 1996, Jordan Davis wrote:

> Uilleain pipes,

Oh uilleain pipes, indeed and indeed, a fine job altogether. g

↑ Index

313. Matt Kirschenbaum
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Mon 16 Sep 1996

After generous suggestions, Charles Smith asks by not asking:

> I tempted to ask why anyoe wd want to dredge this stuff up, but, no, I really don't want to ask.

My immediate interest is in poetries that have been branded as "mechanistic" or "lifeless." Far be it from me to ever engage in literary rubbernecking.

> all best,
> charles

Thanks, --Matt

========== Matthew G. Kirschenbaum University of Virginia [redacted] Department of English http://faraday.clas.virginia.edu/~mgk3k Electronic Text Center

↑ Index

314. Brian McHale
Re: late assemblages (longish)
Mon 16 Sep 1996

Grateful for cris cheek's reminder of the riches at Durham, after some the some what recriminatory tone of some recent postings on that thread. Myself, I came away with pages of Things to Do: books to read, people to contact, items to track down etc. So here's one: I heard tell of a piece by Gilbert Adair on Bruce Andrews in "Reality Studio" 10. That's not available anywhere in my immediate neighbor- hood, so I want to try to reel it in through Interlibrary loan -- for that I need exact title & page numbers. Could someone in the know kindly supply those? Back-channel would be fine, unless you think the list at large might want to share the reference. Thanks, Brian

↑ Index

315. Douglas Messerli
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Mon 16 Sep 1996

Charles,

I didn't know Jimmy & Lucy's still published? Can you send me a xerox of that review. Is it any good?

Douglas

At 03:05 AM 9/16/96 -0400, you wrote:
>A critique of the Messerli anthology by Ben Friedlander can be found in Jimmy >& Lucy's House of "K" #8, which begins:
>
>"Is this the great language poetry anthology?"
>
>happy reading
>
>charles
>

↑ Index

316. cris cheek
late assemblages (longish)
Mon 16 Sep 1996

A belated addition to the Assembling Alternatives footage, some of which Los showed to me when i visited Buffalo and some of which I've missed in the interim. I only just got back, having taken a longer route home via Buffalo - archive, EPC (check out the web page that Los launched for me there - you'll need Netscape 3.1. to view the on-line animation / performance), readings, burgeoning presses and clusters of younger poets. I hope that at least some of what i add here is useful and doesn't repeat prior reportage - having said which please bear in mind that i haven't been able to read all of the exchanges to date.

Several points are sticking with me. They are given in no particular priority. The fact that many of the most energised moments at conferences and festivals occur in the foyer or the bar or on a brief excursion into the surrounding woodlands and rocky outrops and streets is axiomatic. Nature, no doubt an arguably overextended schedule contributed to this. However, the often inconsiderate opening and closing of the clattering door at the back of the main hall, especially during readings (as people voted for al fresco discussion) bracketed some readings (of both papers and poems) disolutely. "Let's talk about later" it was an overheard limit of corridor would-be dialogue around the 'center' - conjoined by the feeling of desperately trying,

and often failing, to eat at two or three tables simultaneously.

There was a marked difference, in the broadest sense, between the written cadences of those two broad 'sides' of that atlantic represented. The British (there lies imperial many forms of evil embodied) and the North American ("same glutten again!") poets sounded different not by dint of mere accent but by phrase - by unit cadence - by rhythm. Someone could sort through the recordings and work up a paper on this.

Also prevalent was a tendency (certainly shared by this bullet head) to break into or close to song during poems. I take this to signal a major shift towards orality in the versioning of texts through performance. Denise Riley surely sang the blues on!

Notable mic-addressing techniques from Leslie Scalapino, Karen MacCormack (wonderful whistling harmonics), Lisa Robertson (whose 'Debbie: an epic' is eagerly awaited), Denise Riley, Robert Sheppard, Catherine Walsh. Many of the readings by the British poets were the best i have heard them give. It was that level of occasion.

Some encroachment of low tec into the proceedings must also be noted. Tom Raworth's use of 'Fred' or 'Frank' (there seem to be differing names for the Stephen Hawking voice simulation - i know that there are now half a dozen or more voicings available) was salutary.

Stand-up comedy was the ghost in the conference geist. Barrett Watten even deliberately generated heckling and summarily despatched it. Uncontrollable outbreaks of laughter were provoked by Randolph Healey, Steve McCaffery, Rae Armantrout (my reader of the week), Jeff Derkson, Miles Champion, Chris Stroffolino, Hazel Smith and Charles Bernstein. Each using a differing technique to crack the crowd open.

Bearing in mind Fiona Templeton's deconstruction of conference as a performance form and David Bromige's prone presentation of podium behaviour (someone might give him a tv show, with lounge setting, a long long mike lead and a fake cigarette) - it was remarkable how some (though thankfully not too many) of the papers and poems being voiced, lacked any awareness of the performative aspects that the situation demanded. I mean if you don't want to read out loud then post your materials for silent consumption in the lobby, or tidy up your script and have it presented without prejudice in the proceeds.

Discussion could follow readings of poems as well as readings of papers. Time for robust large group discussions has been lamented all round.

One highlight, for me, was listening to the animated chatter of a packed busload on its way into Portsmouth for the final night dinner. What an exquisite nest of birds!

More mischievous 'play' with the form of papers, both in how they were written and how presented would be welcome. The tactic of alluding to what can't be read for example, given the constraints of time, seemed way underexplored ("skipping material on the hermeneutics of quotation", "I'm cutting a bunch of stuff on Coolidge and astrology","no time for the marital status of the number five, it'll be in the published version", "sliding past several paragraphs on the pre-millenial Carnival of Paradigms") as strategic diversion. Then it might have been worth trying different conference configurations in different rooms - in the round for example (to state an obvious). In many respects then this was an assemblage of contemporary conventions, and extremely useful in being that. Interdisciplinarity was for the most part noticeably absent and the authority of the 'text' in the dominant.

In this respect the film showings (by Fiona and Abigail Child) were welcome. As too the hypertext / CD Rom / Video presentations - but I'd like to have been able to play with that technology in an installation available throughout.

But what of music / movement? - especially as so many of those present work in collaborations of various kinds, or compose themselves. These issues are integral to the development of our poetics - as Barrett Watten suggested in what for me was a strong closing paper, unfortunately hijacked by concerns which could more usefully have formed the basis for an opening session. The gripes raised mostly legitimate concerns - but were misplaced as end notes.

The Leaning Tower of Pizza, along the drive to New Hampshire from Boston has stuck in my memory. A fraying fabric of signage, the neon of which was partially missing (or partially representing), lining much of the route.

Allen Fisher (with whom, alongside Trevor Joyce, i was rooming) reported back on the Continental Breakfast at the Dover Days Inn as being a pink doughnut with an ice cold apple and coffee. Forgoing that delight we walked in Dover, discussing a collaboration for the Sunday night, admiring the angular articulations given to junctional space by telegraph poles.

Allen's own paper on narrativity and consciousness (great to hear him read 'Bel Air' again btw) elicited my favourite overheard exchange. Two men in the men's toilet:

1. "It could take you the rest of your life to think through all of the things in that paper"

2. "I was hoping to have my consciousness expanded, but ended up feeling pretty stupid"

1. "There you are you see, you did have your consciousness expanded"

There was a curious feeding frenzy as books were released from cardboard boxes amid the registrations before the first evening reading even began. I'd like to second Keith Tuma's comment on the urgency of keeping the channels open on nuts and bolts of book exchange / information and distribution that such a list as this can only partially fulfill. The sheer fact that the Irish poets had never met each other is staggering proof enough of the need for more such events and better channels of communication.

Many of those who had had some exchanges through this medium were meeting for the first time. I found all of this, putting a hand and a hug and a voice and a face to a name, close to exhilerating. It was curious how many people, myself not included, seemed to have formed an image of each other from their post.

And then there were all those who, for various reasons, were missing and sorely missed.

see you in Dublin, Sydney, Vancouver, Cape Town, Rotterdam or London
love and love
cris

↑ Index

317. Brian McHale
Re: late assemblages (longish)
Mon 16 Sep 1996

I take it all back. Incredibly, within minutes of posting that request for infor on Adair on Andrews, I received a photocopy of it in the mail. What does this mean? Brian

↑ Index

318. Daniel Bouchard
Charles Norman
Mon 16 Sep 1996

Does anyone have information on the poet Charles Norman? I was told he died over the weekend at the age of 92.

[redacted]

↑ Index

319. Brigham Taylor
Theraputix
Mon 16 Sep 1996

Did anyone see the piece in the City section of yesterday's NYTimes about the "poetry as therapy" group in Brooklyn??? It was hilarious and horrfying, going so far as to provide a chart matching up specific psychological complaints with specific poems (almost all chestnuts); i.e. Identity Crisis--Dickinson's "I'm Nobody"; Alcoholism--Roethke's "My Papa's Waltz," etc. Now, I think we all might be able to make some money suggesting poems as cures for physical ailments. Like for Constipation--"Howl" or for chronic B.O.--"asphodel oh greeny flower" or for overeating--Galway Kinnel's "The Bear." But why stop there? Maybe we can use specific poems to cure ideological ills as well: Unpatriotic??? Try "O Captain My Captain" or "Death of the Ball Turret Gunner." Anti-recycling??? "The Waste Land," Natch!!! Who else can contribute ideas to our communal well-being??

Brigham

↑ Index

320. Henry Gould
Re: Theraputix
Mon 16 Sep 1996

Take a look at a new book by Russian writer Vitaly Shentalinsky, called "Arrested Voices", for another take on this question. Chapt 4 describes how poet/scientist Nina Hagen-Torn survived the Gulag & helped many others by composing, memorizing, & reciting poems. Shentalinsky has been a pioneer in getting access to KGB files on victimized writers under Stalin; the book covers the "trials" & punishment of Isaac Babel, B. Pilnyak, Mandelstam, Pavel Florensky, many others, with a lot of long-hidden documentary material. - H. Gould

↑ Index

321. Ralph Wessman
Eric Beach
Mon 16 Sep 1996

Laura wrote (1st May) ... the American left and artists have a long way to go to even touch the coattails of their Australian counterparts TT.O, thalia, Chris Mann, ACR, Jas Duke, lauren Williams, Eric Beach, Carmel Bird....

Toby Green wrote (3rd May) ... Interesting to see Eric Beach surface in a list of Australian poets. He got anthologized some years back as a young NZ poet.

Just to add, Eric was named joint winner a fortnight ago of the Kenneth Slessor Award (a major prize - part of the New South Wales Premier's Award) for his recent (fourth) collection, `Weeping for Lost Babylon'. - great news.

Regards

Ralph Wessman, Hobart

↑ Index

322. Charles Smith
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Mon 16 Sep 1996

In a message dated 96-09-16 11:08:59 EDT, you write:

<< I didn't know Jimmy & Lucy's still published? Can you send me a xerox of that review. Is it any good?

Douglas >>

Jimmy & Lucy's never made it into the 90's. The last issue of J & L was #9, Jan '89. Ben's review was in #8, Jan '88 & is a fair critique from a sympathetic reader who (largely) reviews the book w/ yr stated aims in sight.

charles

Looking at the issue again today, I noticed that there is also a review of _Tree_ in it by David Sheidlower.

↑ Index

323. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: Dan Davidson
Mon 16 Sep 1996

I got as far as the news about Dan last week and was stopped in my tracks -- it was truly unexpected -- I can't get to the memorial -- but I will record one memory here --

I first began talking with Dan after he instigated a wonderful week-edn conference during his time at San Francisco State -- A couple of years later, Dan, Spencer Selby and I drove up to Crag Hill's place for a publication reading honoring the chapbook of Dan's that Crag had just put out. I was doing a radio program still in those days, and brought along my recording equipment. Whenever Spencer, Dan and I were together, there was fiery conversation. That much time together in a car produced a lot of sparks, one of the most informative drives I've ever taken.

As the reading got under way, I noticed a distinct ticking sound in my earphones. I asked Dan to take off his watch. He told me the sound was coming from his heart. I thought Dan was still putting me on, as he had in the car a time or two. He handed me his watch at last; it was digital -- non-ticking -- I was suitably abashed -- The reading was tremendous --

Later that week, as I broadcast Dan's poetry to a South Bay audience of thousands, I sat there in the booth listening to Dan's wonderful work, and his heart valve. It will always be good to have that recording of Dan, but it will always hurt, and I will always be grateful to Dan for giving that work to us

↑ Index

324. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: Stan Brakhage
Mon 16 Sep 1996

Brakhage's cancer surgery was successful -- He has been released from the hospital and is recovering at home, still working his way through Ronald Johnson's _Ark_ last I spoke to him.

↑ Index

325. David Kellogg
Re: query: langpo and its discontents
Mon 16 Sep 1996

At 07:27 PM 9/16/96 -0400, Charles Smith wrote:
>In a message dated 96-09-16 11:08:59 EDT, you write:
>
><< I didn't know Jimmy & Lucy's still published? Can you send > me a xerox of that review. Is it any good?
>
> Douglas >>
>
>
>Jimmy & Lucy's never made it into the 90's. The last issue of J & L was #9, >Jan '89. Ben's review was in #8, Jan '88 & is a fair critique from a >sympathetic reader who (largely) reviews the book w/ yr stated aims in sight.
>
>
>charles
>
>Looking at the issue again today, I noticed that there is also a review of >_Tree_ in it by David Sheidlower.

This exchange was fun to watch.

I think the obvious confusion here was over which "book" was being reviewed. I too briefly thought you might have been referring to From the Other Side of the Century until I remembered Douglas's *'Language'
Poetries* from an appropriate period and came to my senses.

Momentary time-warp -- good for the soul.
~~~
~~~

University FAX [redacted] Durham, NC 27708
http://www.duke.edu/~kellogg/

There is no mantle
and it does not descend.
--Thomas Kinsella

↑ Index

326. Nada Gordon

Dan the flaneur

Tue 17 Sep 1996

The last time I saw Dan was about five years ago. He was coming out of the UC Berkeley art museum, scowling and looking internal. He seemed not at all surprised to see me, although I hadn't seen him for a few years and he knew well I was no longer a bay area resident. In fact he barely spoke to me, and I was a little offended.

Much later he apologized for his brusqueness via e-mail, explaining he'd just witnessed a fight which much disturbed him.

I asked him in one of our infrequent e-mail exchanges how his physical being was. He said that being sick just made him realize more sharply that he was under the same sentence as everyone else. I wish I still had this message.

I do still have a poem he sent me in April. I take the liberty of sharing it here:

> Now, other, after
>
> Where is it, the bus you've been traveling > the corners and waiting, streets along > blankets, retrospection, libraries > of flowers and fervent ledges in uneasy itinerary > observed, bare there before you.
>
> What is it to learn at birth > or to have, in the unrest of the streets
> no place at all except blindness.
> I don't know who you are, here among everyone
> the layers of innocence and youth
>
> and corruption, except that each moment, every breath > reaches through the air of another person > so perfectly, indecent, ignorant of effects > like a recent memory of hunger.
> I wish you were here, cradling the starlight out of the sky.

> I have no answers, and expect none
> so no single, solitary story is likely to be enough > for me, laying its quiet head on a pillow...
> this is the larger part of any opportunity, even > the dictum of impermanence that gnaws at a flowering day
>
> one color at a time, how it gets into the skin
> and then into the ink, the ice there and the warm pleasure.
>
> daniel davidson

↑ Index

327. Pierre Joris

[Fwd: the Outsider]

Tue 17 Sep 1996

Thought this may interest those in the LA area, but others as well:
>
> The Outsider (after the Colin Wilson book of the same name) is dedicated to > independent and small press publications and productions--zines, books, > music, performance, etc. We have the largest instore selection of zines in > the LA area --local, national and international publications--and a select > choice of 'alternative' press books from Atlas to Masquerade to > Semiotext(e). The bookstore is located at the borders of Silverlake, Los > Feliz, Hollywood and Los Angeles on Fountain Ave between Vermont and > Sunset. Some upcoming events include readings by science fiction erotica > publisher Cecilia Tan of Circlet Press; world renowned poet, translator > and editor Jerome Rothenberg; cyberpunk/avant-pop philosopher, critic and > editor, Larry McCaffery; and screenings of Dreyer's "The Passion of Joan of > Arc" and Jack Smith's "Flaming Creatures."
>
> take care
> james adams
>
> the Outsider Bookstore
> 4505 Fountain Avenue
> Los Angeles, CA 90029
> ph #[redacted]

↑ Index

328. maria damon
Re: Theraputix
Tue 17 Sep 1996

---

brigham writes:
> Did anyone see the piece in the City section of yesterday's NYTimes about the
> "poetry as therapy" group in Brooklyn??? It was hilarious and horrfying, > going so far as to provide a chart matching up specific psychological > complaints with specific poems (almost all chestnuts); i.e. Identity > Crisis--Dickinson's "I'm Nobody"; Alcoholism--Roethke's "My Papa's Waltz," > etc. Now, I think we all might be able to make some money suggesting poems
> as cures for physical ailments. Like for Constipation--"Howl" or for > chronic B.O.--"asphodel oh greeny flower" or for overeating--Galway > Kinnel's "The Bear." But why stop there? Maybe we can use specific poems > to cure ideological ills as well: Unpatriotic??? Try "O Captain My > Captain" or "Death of the Ball Turret Gunner." Anti-recycling??? "The > Waste Land," Natch!!! Who else can contribute ideas to our communal > well-being??
>
> Brigham

i can see why poetry's value is in some ways its purported LACK of "use value," and that the scenario above wd be offensively, well, and literally, prescriptive to many folks on this list. however, if poetry saves lives --and probably many folks here have experienced that --who is anyone to say precisely how it shd do so. i've had students turn on to David antin, of all poets, as a model of therapeutic journaling because of the "lack" of punctuation. i know someone who was inspired not to kill herself because she saw a caffe fassett (knitting and needlepoint designer) video so full of beautiful colors it gave her hope. i've recounted before on the list a scene in a documentary about a lesbian wedding in which the trite free verse of a hallmark card was read aloud as the moment of deepest feeling between the women. hey, i can laugh at their taste (and i do find the scene comical as well as moving), but to respond only with dismissive contempt is to miss something. wouldn't you be glad to know that one of your poems --maybe not even one you thought that highly of, or one taken so out of context that you felt that the reader had "misunderstood" it --saved a life? --md

↑ Index

329. David Golumbia
Re: Stan Brakhage
Tue 17 Sep 1996

I got the "Re:" but not the original message on this... can somebody reiterate the details?

Aldon L. Nielsen wrote:
>
> Brakhage's cancer surgery was successful -- He has been released from the > hospital and is recovering at home, still working his way through Ronald > Johnson's _Ark_ last I spoke to him.
>

--
[redacted]
David Golumbia

↑ Index

330. Mark Roberts
(Forwarded) AWOL: Olympic Sports Poet Winners announced
Tue 17 Sep 1996

A top spin on literary competitions

INAUGURAL OLYMPIC SPORTS POET WINNERS ANNOUNCED

The winners of the inaugural Olympic Sports Poet Award were announced at the NSW Writers Centre Spring Writing Festival. The judges of the competition were Ron Pretty and Les Wicks and the awards were presented by Andrew Landenberger, current Olympic Champion in yachting (Tornado class).

The winners were:

FIRST PRIZE: 'First Lady' by Louise Wakeling. Study of the trials of Kay Cottee's history making solo voyage around the world.

SECOND PRIZE: "Day my father came to football - Part 2' by Myron Lysenko. Lysenko's threat of intensive training has paid off with this record setting story of parents and benches.

THIRD PRIZE: "Work of knowing" by ShaunAnne Tangney. Interestingly also concerned with parents....and basketball.

FIRST PRIZE (Junior): "Not last anymore" by Edwina Lau. The thrill, and relief, of coming second last.

Competition promoter Michael Katefides said " I am delighted by the way the Sports Poet competition has been accepted in both the sport and literary communities. The internet proved successful in facilitating entries world wide with one being a prize winner. The continued expansion of the Sport Poet award is more than justified when one sees the enthusiasm of the entrants, particularly those of the juniors."

Continuing judge, Les Wicks, noted the sharp increase in the standard of the entries. The fact that two of the winners also won last year is no way indicative of the scarcity of quality entries.

The winning pieces will be on display at the Network Tennis Australia Centres at Annandale and Wicks Park. Poems are also available for reproduction. For further information contact NTA at 210 Annandale NSW 2038 Australia. Phone 61 2 9566 2100, fax 61 2 95172466.

AWOL
Australian Writing On Line
[redacted]
http://www.ozemail.com.au/~awol
PO Box 333 Concord NSW 2137 Australia
Phone 61 2 7475667, Mobile 015063970
Fax 61 2 7472802

Mark Roberts
Student Systems Project Officer
Information Systems
University of Sydney NSW 2006 Australia
[redacted]
PH:(02)9351 5066
MOBILE 015063970
FAX:(02)9351 5081

↑ Index

331. Rod Smith
Re: Padmasambhava
Tue 17 Sep 1996

"When the iron eagle flies and horses run on wheels the Tibetan people will be scattered over the earth and the dharma will go to the land of the red man," --Padmasambhava, 8th Century AD

Someone had asked for this a while back. Finally found it in a notebook.

--Rod

↑ Index

332. David Benedetti

Confidential to everybody on the list

Tue 17 Sep 1996

How many of you on the list want to hear about Rachel Loden's confidential messages to Mark Wallace concerning George Bowering's imaginary dildo?

↑ Index

333. filch

the end of the world can be directly traced to robert creeley teaching at black mountain college or how i shot the fetishization of text and survived to tell the tale

Tue 17 Sep 1996

```
<html>
<head>
<title>
The End of the World Can
Be Directly Traced to Robert
Creeley
</title> <base href="http://www.chronoto pe.com/">
</head> <!- frAmed ->

<frameset cols="20,*" ><frame marginwidth="0"
    marginheight="0"
    scrolling="no"
    name="navbar" noresize
    border="no"

src="/Robert_Creeley/lingui stic.html"
><frame marginwidth="0"
    marginheight="0"
```

```
    scrolling="auto"
    name="active"
    noresize
    border="no"

src="/Robert_Creeley/path.
html"
></frameset>

<!- frAmed close ->

<noframes>

<body bgcolor="#ffffff"

background="/i/shaft.gif" link="#000000" alink="#000000"
    vlink="#ffffff" > <table
    width="480"
    border="0"
><tr><td
    width="310"
    valign="top"
    colspan="1"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="310"
    height="1"
><a href="/(mt)v/"
    name="explication"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='explication serves or rather, enrage'; return true"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="180"
    height="70"
    hspace="20"
    vspace="10"
    border="0"
```

```
><a href="//"
    name="explication"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='service an explanation, engage'; return true"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="150"
    height="78"
    hspace="10"
    vspace="5"
    border="0"
    align="left"
><a href="//"
    name="explication"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='explicate rather sucking meats, flange';
return true"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="80"
    height="80"
    hspace="20"
    vspace="5"
    border="2"
    align="left"
><br clear="left"
><a href="//"
    name="explication"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus=', enrage - at least that for a heterosexual audience';
return true"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="90"
    height="60"
    hspace="5"
    vspace="3"
```

```
    border="0"
></td><td
    width="170"
    rowspan="2"
><img
    src="/i/dot_clear.gif"
    width="170"
    height="15" > &#34;I mean the bottoms are always scared. I always try to tell them, &#39;Look,
<a href="http://www.klaaskids
.inter.net/pg-0521.htm"
    name="porn"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='is one of the few contemporary occupations';
return true"
>I&#39;m not going to hurt you. <a href="http://www.math.tau.
ac.il/~nin/relax.html"
    name="relax"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='if you relax comfort';
return true"
>Just relax - <a href="http://www.vix.com/men/falsereport/daterape/gut mann.html"
    name="daterape"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='false report, a former fireman'; return true"
>it's not going to be that bad.&#39;

```

<a href="http://copernicus.bbn.
com/people/PDavis/htlchapt2.html"
    name="does"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='does knot'; return true"
>I do have a big dick and I know that.

But the bottoms are always scared because they're usually <a href="http://www.ygc.com/ygcnew.htm"
    name="guys"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='we are going to bond we are going to change';return true"
>young guys - <a href="http://www.golf.com/tour/pgatour/ryder/interview s/0920coupstr.htm"
    name="first"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='receivable criteria';
return true"
>it might be their first time. You can see the look of <a href="http://www.ljworld.c om/LJW/archives/sports/05 1396s2.html"
    name="jelly"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='grow your business';
return true"

>fear in their eyes.

You know, think about it.
<a href="http://www.zen.org/~ jeffrey/cigarette.html"
    name="collage"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='what happens when you run out of collage?';
return true"
>You're eighteen years old, and all of a sudden you're in a <a href="http://www.spe.sony
.com/Pictures/SonyMovies/netexclsv.html#IRWIN"
    name="redrum"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='rooms without person'; return true"
>room full of people with lights and cameras watching you, <a href="http://www.thonline.
com/news/th0506/stories/97 99.htm"
    name="near"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='nearly dormant in mat, because linguistic'; return true"
>butt naked, as you get a <a href="http://rs.internic.net/c gi-bin/whois?cock.com"
    name="vagina"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='vaginal inflection';

return true"
>cock <a href="http://www.cs.umbc.
edu/pub/funny/pickups"
name="violence"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus=' e n g i n e e r '; return true"
>shoved up your <a href="http://rs.internic.net/c gi-bin/whois?ass.com"
name="memories"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='within an other entry';
return true"
>ass.
<a href="http://www.virtual.co
.il/news/news/arutz7/news.f eb22-96.htm"
name="memories"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='please assume to instruct'; return true"
>It hurts, but <a href="http://www.dot.state.
tx.us/tdotnews/trnscrpt/109 5trns.htm"
name="memories"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='within an other entry';
return true"
>you don't want to say anything and let people know what you're feeling, and <a href="http://www.worldgol
f.com/wglibrary/october/par sons.html"
name="memories"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='with an urge towards meaning'; return true" >everyone is watching you, so you can't relax and let it go in.
It's very frightening, and <a href="http://robotics.stanfor d.edu/Ratlist/rats-digestv2.archive/0077.html"
name="memories"

onMouseOver="window.sta tus='a kind of guidebook through the workings of the psyche'; return true">the boys are scared
shitless, because they know it can be a bad experience."</
p></td></tr></table> </body>
</html>

↑ Index

334. Gwyn McVay

Re: Confidential to everybody on the list

Tue 17 Sep 1996

Is there a choice? Can we switch renga-channels and hear instead about Messrs. Bernstein, Rothenberg, and Joris hanging out of the windows at the Chelsea Hotel whilst Mme. Perloff duped Rod Smith with a counterfeit Ouija board and M. Gould tottered out of the bathroom/storeroom holding a crumpled leather bag?

Signed, Wondering

↑ Index

335. M. Gould
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

On Tue, 17 Sep 1996 15:49:29 -0400 Gwyn McVay said:
>Is there a choice? Can we switch renga-channels and hear instead about >Messrs. Bernstein, Rothenberg, and Joris hanging out of the windows at >the Chelsea Hotel whilst Mme. Perloff duped Rod Smith with a counterfeit >Ouija board and M. Gould tottered out of the bathroom/storeroom holding a >crumpled leather bag?

I've been trying really hard to restrain my probabblenouncements on this list, but now I have to take my stand & set the record straight. I was not tottering. I was rehearsing for my upcoming Reading (note to self: remember to check mail for Invitation To Read). Furthermore, it was not a leather bag. It was Plasmahyde. & I will act as my own lawyer from heretofore and what'smoreto-fore etc. etc. [see attached deposition]. Judge Elmer Pudge is handling this case, he's known to be tough on the bench (it looks like a very warped skate-board). So bring your flip pads, ginnelmen & ladles of the 4th estate: this one's going over the top. [1. excerpted from: _The National Enquirer : A Bibliography of Contemporary Scandals, Mysteries, and Visitations_, ed. by Ridgewood Fro-bisher. Squeamish Univ. Press, 1983] - M. Gould

↑ Index

336. maria damon
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

---

well now david, that's an interesting question. it was my understanding that these msgs were not confidential; that they were, in fact, staged specifically for the enjoyment of the poetix audience, and that, privately, loden, wallace and bowering have more likely than not never spoken, met or corresponded. i may be wrong. i've been enjoying the whacky thread that has also included others at times, but if the players want to retire or think they're pushing the envelope on "good taste" or whatever, i'm happy to leave the decision to them. i have not felt my sensibilities to be violated, though in this day plus age, one can't be too careful; loden, bowering et al may be called up before the internet family values committee and given a brisk public spanking. xo as ever, md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
discussion group writes:
> How many of you on the list want to hear about Rachel Loden's > confidential messages to Mark Wallace concerning George Bowering's > imaginary dildo?

↑ Index

337. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

---

i have been enjoyingt the thread immensely. in the midst of so much talk of how a Modern Poetics must be able to make fun of itself, i found this thread a charming example of precept in action. also, it was fun to have somehting funny in the middle of all the usual nervous seriousness.

e

↑ Index

338. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Only if it's a talking dildo. If it's a talking dildo, why then fine.
Something along the lines of the Brazen Head of Friar Bacon. Why then, yes, by all means, Let 'er rip. But if not, then not.

From: maria damon
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Date: Tuesday, September 17, 1996 3:11PM

well now david, that's an interesting question. it was my understanding that these msgs were not confidential; that they were, in fact, staged specifically for the enjoyment of the poetix audience, and that, privately, loden, wallace and bowering have more likely than not never spoken, met or corresponded. i may be wrong. i've been enjoying the whacky thread that has also included others at times, but if the players want to retire or think they're pushing the envelope on "good taste" or whatever, i'm happy to leave the decision to them. i have not felt my sensibilities to be violated, though in this day plus age, one can't be too careful; loden, bowering et al may be called up before the internet family values committee and given a brisk public spanking. xo as ever, md

In message <[redacted]> UB
Poetics
discussion group writes:
> How many of you on the list want to hear about Rachel Loden's > confidential messages to Mark Wallace concerning George Bowering's > imaginary dildo?

↑ Index

339. Jordan Davis
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Significant is D Benedetti's hostility -- which was something I certainly felt when I had just started reading the list a year and a half ago -- and which is a standard reaction of people entering poetry 'scenes' -- I asked Charles Bernstein once at the ear whether he knew why people behaved that way -- I was myself shaking with rage at having to be at the ear at the time -- I wanted a diagnosis -- he said he had an idea but just then the reading started and I forgot to ask him ever again -- why do people get angry at poetry discussions when they're about to start talking in them -- I would supply some more first-person narrative / anecdotes but it's been too long since I started blabbing my head off about things I know nothing about -- that is, I'm past hostility and part of the problem -- I hope -- Jordan --

↑ Index

340. Daniel Bouchard
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Jordan wrote:

I asked Charles Bernstein once at the ear whether he knew why people behaved that way -- I was myself shaking with rage at having to be at the ear at the time -- I wanted a diagnosis --

I had similar reactions at the throat and knows, but there was no doctor bernstein on hand to ask.

Re: the dildo-- no fun if it's just made up, when there's a real one, then it will make an interesting thread. And now that Maria's promised spankings-- oh wow, this is big treat!

[redacted]

↑ Index

341. Beth Simon
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Are we voting on public spanking vs confidentially talking dildoes, or just whether we are in favor of public spanking, or that we don't have to be responsible for the spanking, hire the spankeurs, be the spankees, but through no fault of our own get to be there, or is someone about to admit in public that no matter how much confidentiality that dildo violated, his wife stands by him?

beth

↑ Index

342. wystan
Re: Theraputix
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Maria

You speak of how Poetry Saves Lives. I've also heard tell it can kill. Sure, I'd be glad if a poem of mine--no matter how misread it was (although I do have insurance cover for the misreading of my work)--saved a life, about like I'd be sad if someone died because of a poem of mine. But I'd still put in my claim.

Your good health

Wystan

↑ Index

343. Tony Green
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Hi David Benedetti,

I'm a bit late on this one, but I've been following the electronic epistolary tale cum electronic renga-novel with bated breath, on the edge of my seat, while poets and critics were confusing one another on the other channel. Is there such a thang as an e'couteur, as distinct from a voyeur, it's me.

I'm glad tho yr objection is now public, rather than back-channel. As always, you have yr trusty Delete button at hand?

all the best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

344. Tony Green
Re: Eric Beach
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Dear Ralph, is that a typo, Toby Green? Glad to know E Beach is alive and well and active. I liked the anthologized NZ poems.
best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

345. maria damon
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

Now wait: someone said i "promised spankings" --i did no such thing. Here at the Internet Family Values Ass'n, all public spankings are fully consensual and cannot be promised by any other than the prospective spankees. Our highly trained specialists are ready to punish, avec bells and whistles etc, any and all willing spankees, be they of the loden-bowering, uh, stripe or of the, uh, how can i put this, benedetti persuasion. i cannot promise for them. they must submit willingly.

↑ Index

346. Pete Landers
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

---

thread trashing is easy. if you want to change the subject or start a new thread, go right ahead. trash may float, but it don't fly.

Pete Landers
(by the way, this is a new address)
[redacted]

David Benedetti wrote:
>
> How many of you on the list want to hear about Rachel Loden's > confidential messages to Mark Wallace concerning George Bowering's > imaginary dildo?

↑ Index

347. Pete Landers
Re: Theraputix
Tue 17 Sep 1996

It is difficult to get the poetry from the news...

Brigham Taylor wrote:
>
> Did anyone see the piece in the City section of yesterday's NYTimes about the
> "poetry as therapy" group in Brooklyn??? It was hilarious and horrfying, > going so far as to provide a chart matching up specific psychological > complaints with specific poems (almost all chestnuts); i.e. Identity > Crisis--Dickinson's "I'm Nobody"; Alcoholism--Roethke's "My Papa's Waltz," > etc. Now, I think we all might be able to make some money suggesting poems
> as cures for physical ailments. Like for Constipation--"Howl" or for > chronic B.O.--"asphodel oh greeny flower" or for overeating--Galway > Kinnel's "The Bear." But why stop there? Maybe we can use specific poems > to cure ideological ills as well: Unpatriotic??? Try "O Captain My > Captain" or "Death of the Ball Turret Gunner." Anti-recycling??? "The > Waste Land," Natch!!! Who else can contribute ideas to our communal > well-being??
>
> Brigham

↑ Index

348. George Bowering
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

> How many of you on the list want to hear about Rachel Loden's confidential messages to Mark Wallace concerning George Bowering's imaginary dildo?

This benedetti guy must have dildos on the mind. There was no dildo, imaginary or otherwise, mentioned at all in our rather unsubtle satire of US Leftist adventurism.

George Bowering.
,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

349. George Bowering
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Tue 17 Sep 1996

> Now wait: someone said i "promised spankings" --i did no such thing.

Now look, Maria, you promised me one via back-channel. Okay, maybe that doesnt count, certainly not as a "public" spanking.

George Bowering.
,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

350. DS
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Hoist the spanker.

At 04:17 PM 9/17/96 EST, you wrote:
>Are we voting on public spanking vs confidentially talking dildoes,

↑ Index

351. filch
Re: Confidential to everybody on the list
Wed 18 Sep 1996

---

i thought the object in question was col. mustard's candle stick holder. and here i was trying to shape my wick and get it to stand up, boy i feel stupid.

> This benedetti guy must have dildos on the mind. There was no dildo, imaginary or otherwise, mentioned at all in our rather unsubtle satire of US Leftist adventurism.

↑ Index

352. Kevin Killian
Tom Field show opens in San Francisco
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Hi, it's Kevin Killian. I hope all of you on this list who live here in San Francisco (or anyone who plans to visit here within the next 6 weeks of so) will get the chance to see this wonderful show which opens tomorrow. It's called "Paintings from Black Mountain College and the Beat Era," it's the first large show of the work of the late Tom Field, who died here a year ago, and this is the address: 871 Fine Arts, 49 Geary Street, San Francisco.

Tom Field was born in 1930, went to Black Mountain College (there's a great story in Martin Duberman's book about the time he tried to run down Robert Creeley in a car), met Robert Duncan and Jess there @ 1956, and came to San Francisco when the College closed in 1957. In San Francisco he joined a host of other "Mountaineers" including Joe Dunn, John Wieners, Basil King, etc., etc. and began work as a merchant mariner, shipping out and shipping in, a sailor's life, blah blah blah. While on land he produced in short order at least a dozen large A-E type magnificent paintings and became Jack Spicer's favorite painter. For a while he lived in the famous East-West House where he met Joanne Kyger, Lew Welch, Jack Kerouac, Lenore Kandel and so forth (in Kerouac's novel "Big Sur" he appears under the name "Lanny Meadows," not so imaginative I suppose). Last year he died there @ 65.

Robin Blaser has written the essay that accompanies this show, which gathers together for the first time most of the great pictures from the late fifties and early sixties, drawn from a variety of private collections (Kyger, Jess, Fran Herndon, Ernie Edwards, etc). I sneaked in to the gallery last Saturday, while the Rauschenberg show was still up, and saw the Field pictures leaning against the walls, not hung yet, and I was blown away. If there's any justice this exhibition should re-write Bay Area art history...it's miles better than SFMOMA's over-hyped "Abstract Expressionists of San Francisco" show which is running concurrently. Come on down! Tell me what you think. The reception is tomorrow (Thursday) between 5:30 and 7:30--California time, so you could probably show up Saturday and the reception would still be going on. Thanks everyone!

↑ Index

353. Kevin Killian
Barbara Guest reading in San Francisco
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Hi it's Kevin Killian. Perhaps some of you who live in San Francisco or who will be here Sunday will want to come to see Barbara Guest, who will be reading at Avery Burns' series at Canessa Park, Sunday, the 22nd, at 3:00 p.m. It's the book launch for her new book, the title of which I cannot properly reproduce via e-mail, but it's something like "Quill Solitary Apparition" (with lots of different spaces and italics) from Post Apollo Press.

This appearance should answer the question, how will La Guest top her last public appearance. Bay Area theater goers have awarded her the Sarah Siddons prize for her remarkable Margo-Channing style performance in my play "Island of Lost Souls" this past spring. She tore up the stage as Clarice, the sister of Claus von Bulow...Clarice, a character torn from a lost John Webster Jacobean decadent play, obsessed by her incestuous relationship with her brother (played by Rex Ray), bitterly opposed to his marriage to spoiled, insipid, diabetic heiress Sunny (Alicia Wing). "Blow out the candles, Clarice!" Anyway although she will be playing no character on Sunday, she is still a diva assoluta and it should be quite a show!! Thanks everyone.

↑ Index

354. Ron Silliman
Confidential to David Benedetti
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Personally I would LOVE to see George Bowering spanked with a dildo, if that is now what is being offered or promised. As an epistolery novel, this thread has great potential. It's already a far more interesting project than, say, Griffin and Sabine. And just think what this technology will make possible in a few years--we'll take the "virtual" right out of it!

Oggling,

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

355. Rachel Loden
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

> Are we voting on public spanking vs confidentially talking dildoes,

Personally, I'd have to vote for the confidentially talking dildoes. None of the dildoes in my museum-collection of Dildoes Throughout History says a WORD. I'm a bit muffed, I mean miffed.

Rachel Loden

"O Tiger-lily," said Alice, addressing herself to one that was waving gracefully about in the wind, "I wish you could talk!"

"We can talk," said the Tiger-lily: "when there's anybody worth talking to."

↑ Index

356. Beth Simon
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Carried away by something, I have no idea what, I posted the one from column a query
    Are we voting on public spanking vs confidentially talking dildoes

But I am glad to learn (since I didn't check my Warner's) that how more than one talking dildo is not spelled with an e.

breathlessly awaiting the write-ins from Chicago's North Side,

beth

↑ Index

357. Loss Glazier
Mag/Press Listing
Wed 18 Sep 1996

If you are publishing a magazine or running a press and you do not have a listing at the Electronic Poetry Center, consider filling out the form that follows. We'd love to share our 13,000 transactions a month with you! One of our goals is to get good writing to those who seek it! -- Loss ---------- <--- cut here ---> ----------
---------- Electronic Poetry Center Mag/Press Listing Listing Created/Revised:

Title:

Editor(s):
Postal Address:

E-mail (if available):

Issn [if mag]:
Frequency:
Sub. Cost:

Ed. Stmt: [General statement - a few words or longer if you wish. This sometimes helps, for example: new British poets, e.g. - You may also write at greater length.]

- either -

Issue Info [mags]: Issue by issue descriptions

- or -

Publications [presses]: List of publications with descriptions (and ISBNs if possible)

[If you have both a mag and a press please fill out one form for each. Submit forms by e-mail with "EPC Mag/Press listing" in the subject line and send to [redacted]]

Loss Glazier <[redacted]>
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

↑ Index

358. Loss Glazier
Mag/Press listing
Wed 18 Sep 1996

If you are publishing a magazine or running a press and you do not have a listing at the Electronic Poetry Center, consider filling out the form that follows. We'd love to share our 13,000 transactions a month with you! One of our goals is to get good writing to those who seek it! -- Loss

---
Electronic Poetry Center
Mag/Press Listing
Listing Created/Revised:

Title:

Editor(s):
Postal Address:

E-mail (if available):

Issn [if mag]:
Frequency:
Sub. Cost:

Ed. Stmt: [General statement - a few words or longer if you wish. This sometimes helps, for example: new British poets, e.g. - You may also write at greater length.]

- either -

Issue Info [mags]: Issue by issue descriptions

- or -

Publications [presses]: List of publications with descriptions (and ISBNs if possible)

[If you have both a mag and a press please fill out one form for each. Submit forms by e-mail with "EPC Mag/Press listing" in the subject line and send to [redacted]]

↑ Index

359. Mark Wallace
language poetry on treble
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Hey Jordan:

My own take on one of the main legacies of the language poets (to the extent, when and where, that they constitute a group, which they do in specific ways and not in specific others) is the necessity for an intense critique of all other poetry coming before and around you, etc. So pointed critique is not simply what language poets deserve, both as a group and as individuals, but something their methods often literally demand. One of my points in at least one of those essays is that what counts, I think, is the difference between critiques of language poetry that work and critiques that do not, and my attempt at least partly was to involve both; that is, both to critique those positions that seemed to me not to work, as well as to put forward some critiques that seemed to me more workable. I'm not a fan of language poetry, for instance in the way that one would be (should be!--go birds!) a fan of the Baltimore Orioles (but not a fan of the business of sports), although there are times and places that one should cheer on poetry even if it means Robert Frost (ever work at a community college?).

Rather, as a poet and a writer on poetry I take myself to be ENGAGED with the questions that poets from multiple traditions put forward--I cheer and I rage, I love and I hate, and I try as much as possible to put grounds for those attitudes (and their lack of ground) out on the table.

mark wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] "I have not yet begun | |
to go to extremes" | | GWU: |
| http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

360. cris cheek
CD announcement / spoken word
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Sound & Language are proud to announce their first spoken word CD release:

'skin upon skin' by cris cheek (SLCD0300)

three pieces are featured ('Skin Upon sKin' + 'rooftop fog' w/ Sianed Jones + 'stranger' w/ Sianed Jones) at a total playing time of over 70 minutes.

'cris cheek is capable of vocalisations that seamlessly weld plummy Olivien Shakespeare to Hollywood demons, mournful blues to Madagascan laments, and are able to pull through them texts that glimmer and shudder in social fierceness, pathos and humour. Cheek's merging of cultural high ground and political lowlife is unpredictable, its cunning velocity quivers on the edge of mania.' (Brian Catling)

The production quality is extremely high. Price: Ten pounds sterling (inc) Fifteen dollars (inc p& p)

cash payment (dollars or sterling) U.K cheques or international money orders only - made payable directly to Sound & Language

thanks
Suzy Lacey (production assistant)

↑ Index

361. Mark Roberts
Re: Eric Beach
Wed 18 Sep 1996

> Dear Ralph, is that a typo, Toby Green? Glad to know E Beach is alive and well and active. I liked the anthologized NZ poems.
> best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

I just remebered a grant Cauldwell poem about standing on the shore of a bay in Tasmania (hi Ralph) with Eric smoking a joint and arguing about the moon-light.....

_____
Mark Roberts
Student Systems Project Officer
Information Systems
University of Sydney NSW 2006 Australia
[redacted]
PH:(02)9351 5066
MOBILE 015063970
FAX:(02)9351 5081

↑ Index

362. VIDAVER
Dildo & The Real
Wed 18 Sep 1996

In reply to Daniel Bouchard's concern for a real dildo, I am happy to inform the list that there is a small town, just north of Blakeville and east of Spread Eagle, Newfoundland, named "Dildo". In fact, there is a series of locations within that vicinity that are unabashedly specified by the name, such as Dildo Pond, South Dildo, and Dildo Island (which is an important archaelogical site containing Beotuk and Maratime Archaic Indian remains).

Of interest in this connection is the curious absence of Dildo (or "Dildo," that is, the word) in that poem in Robin Blaser's "Syntax" sequence of _The Holy Forest_ entitled, "The Mystic East" where we find, naturally, Heart's Content (just north of Dildo) and the names of some of the other points along Trinity Bay.

As Bowering notes, the imaginary dildo is itself imaginary vis-a-vis the ongoing collaboration because it did not exist until Benedetti invented it. However, because of this remark we now have "Bowering's Imaginary 'Imaginary Dildo,'" as an entity which forms part of the reality of this world-disclosive electronic mailing list. This may be an unpleasant multiplication for subscribers who have certain expections about the functions and structures of [redacted], but for someone who is studying the form of electronic records and their disposition to archives, it makes for exciting and complex study.

Aaron Vidaver
[redacted]

↑ Index

363. Steve Carll
Re: Confidentially...
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Golly, Maria, if I'd known you were THAT type of girl, I wouldn't have left so soon after your Stein lecture at New College.

'Course, if I'd known you were that type of girl, I wouldn't have been able to CONCENTRATE on your Stein lecture.

****
[redacted] Steve Carll

In seed-
sense
the sea stars you out, innermost, forever.

--Paul Celan
****

↑ Index

364. Tod Thilleman
Re: poets/painters collaborate in NYC
Wed 18 Sep 1996

KEEP BREATHING/ KEEP SHOUTING
Artists and Writers Collaborating September 18 thru 28, 1996

reception and poetry reading: Saturday, Sept. 21 5 - 7 pm

450 Broadway Gallery, 4th floor between Grand and Canal info: karen Marston @ [redacted]

artists/writers

J.F. Ahlin/John Williams Winifred McNeill/John Woodruff James Barr/ Anne Elliot Karen Marston/Inna Mattei Meredtih Bergmann/ Michael Bergmann Lisa Martin/Gail Feldt Ardythe Ashley Robert Bruce/Tod Thilleman Ellen Louise Smith/Duane McDiramid Fred Caruso/Burt Kimmelman Kerry Stevens/David Cameron Juri Kim/ Gina Bonati Audrey Stone/Dina Ben-Lev David Lantow/Todd Colby Paul Vilinsky/Jonathun Blunk

limited number catalogues available for out of towners intnersted: e-mail backchannel me adfdress

↑ Index

365. Jordan Davis
Lisa Robertson / treble kicker
Wed 18 Sep 1996

No Lisa's not joining Pavement, not that I know of -- but does anybody have her e-mail address or phone number?

—

Mark -- I'm all for pointed critique, being a wayward fan of the all, but in my neighborhood everybody wants me to turn up the _bass_ -- then I do and I can't hear the words -- gotta hear the words -- Jordan

PS Why is everything produced in the 80s accused of using the modes of Reaganism? Why are those 80s producers of cultural goods regarded as _collaborators_ and not as people exhibiting symptoms? Or am I just rehashing cultural critique I haven't read.

↑ Index

366. Lisa Samuels
McCaffery e-address?
Wed 18 Sep 1996

would steve mccaffery or another kind person please backchannel me his e-address? pretty please with sugarplums? send to

[redacted]

thanks much lisa s.

↑ Index

367. maria damon
Re: Confidentially...
Wed 18 Sep 1996

steve carl writes:
> Golly, Maria, if I'd known you were THAT type of girl, I wouldn't have left > so soon after your Stein lecture at New College.
>
> 'Course, if I'd known you were that type of girl, I wouldn't have been able > to CONCENTRATE on your Stein lecture.
>
> **********
> [redacted] Steve Carll
>
> In seed-
> sense
> the sea stars you out, innermost, forever.
>
> --Paul Celan
> **********

well now steve. i didn't know celan was THAT kind of a guy; if i'd known i might have sought out john felstiner a little more aggressively during my graduate school years. and to think, i spent a weekend with pierre and nicole without even knowing.--md

↑ Index

368. DS
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

For this we would have to blame quayle

> But I am glad to learn (since I didn't check my Warner's) that > how more than one talking dildo is not spelled with an e.
>
> breathlessly awaiting the write-ins from Chicago's North Side,
>
> beth

↑ Index

369. Tony Green
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Re dildos. The mention of "batteries" suggested that the "object" was perhaps a vibrator. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

370. maria damon
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Again, the Internet Family Values Ass'n wishes to go on record as saying that it neither condones nor performs battery, simple or aggravated by assault; it administers with the exquisite expertise of its ministers, delicious punishment that is explicitly begged for. This is our plain, simple, and unbeatable recipe for American society, of which we are the foundation and the cornerstone. bests always, md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> Re dildos. The mention of "batteries" suggested that the "object" was perhaps > a vibrator. best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

371. Jordan Davis
redux is a drug
Wed 18 Sep 1996

---

and I want to know what it is people want from this space -- this listserv if you're not a spatialist -- I asked when I got here and I'm asking again now -- what do you want -- what do you wish would happen here

Jordan

↑ Index

372. DS
Re: Dildo & The Real
Wed 18 Sep 1996

and i fought the dildo was extant

↑ Index

373. George Bowering
Re: Tom Field show opens in San Francisco
Wed 18 Sep 1996

Kevin,

any information about the Tom Field show travelling? Well, I guess it IS a SF thing, and I guess I'd better not get my hopes up. But I have always dug that man, I mean paintings and things said. I met him only once, at some kind of rehearsal of someone's masque, i think, in about 1962. He was wearing a nice plain sweater with very visible stitches, and he was quiet and assured. He was only the second Black Mountaineer I met.

Is there going to be a catalogue, with Robin's piece, and pictures? Available.?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

374. Brian Carpenter
Re: CD announcement / spoken word
Wed 18 Sep 1996

> Sound & Language are proud to announce their first spoken word CD release:

Sounds great. But what is the Sound & Langauge address?

=bc

↑ Index

375. George Bowering
Re: Confidentially...
Wed 18 Sep 1996

> i spent a weekend with pierre and nicole > without even knowing.--md

Yeah, Maria. They are like that. I once spent a weekend in a hot tub with them and didnt notice.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

376. George Bowering
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

> For this we would have to blame quayle

Isnt that Quayl ?
>
>
>>But I am glad to learn (since I didn't check my Warner's) that >>how more than one talking dildo is not spelled with an e.
>>
>>breathlessly awaiting the write-ins from Chicago's North Side,
>>
>>beth
>>
>>

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

377. George Bowering
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

> Re dildos. The mention of "batteries" suggested that the "object" was perhaps a vibrator. best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

Now, I think that is just a little hasty. Well, it is a kind of fixation for Brits, and as we know, New Zealanders are really south seas Brits. I mean, come on: lots of objects employ batteries. Travel alarm clocks, for instance. Laptops (oops). Well. . . well. . . uh, gameboys (oops). . well...

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

378. DS
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Wed 18 Sep 1996

At 07:38 PM 9/18/96 -0700, you wrote:
>>For this we would have to blame quayle
>
>
>Isnt that Quayl ?

Que?
>>
>>
>>>But I am glad to learn (since I didn't check my Warner's) that >>>how more than one talking dildo is not spelled with an e.
>>>
>>>breathlessly awaiting the write-ins from Chicago's North Side,
>>>
>>>beth

>>>
>>>
>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
> ,
>2499 West 37th Ave.,
>Vancouver, B.C.,
>Canada V6M 1P4
>
>fax: [redacted]
>e-mail: [redacted]
>
>

↑ Index

379. George Bowering
Re: redux is a drug
Wed 18 Sep 1996

> what do you wish would happen here
>
> Jordan

Same thing that happens in "East Coker".

George Bowering.

,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

380. George Bowering
Re: Dildo & The Real
Wed 18 Sep 1996

One day last spring the famed poet George Stanley pickled his hair. Held his head in brine for quite some time, and then had Wanda work on his locks.

Among the poets of Robson Street at least, George Stanley was the first to have a dill do .

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

381. maria damon
Re: redux is a drug
Wed 18 Sep 1996

In message <v01530505ae664b6403f0@[166.84.199.56]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> and I want to know what it is people want from this space -- this listserv
> if you're not a spatialist -- I asked when I got here and I'm asking again
> now -- what do you want -- what do you wish would happen here
>
> Jordan

life, love, unceasing efflorescence of creative ecstasy, smarttalk, silliness, and social responsibility. lifelong friendships, inconceivable depth of soulful conversation, ethereal heights of giddy triumph of the inane, and so forth. bests always, md

↑ Index

382. maria damon
Re: Dildo & The Real
Thu 19 Sep 1996

---

does anyone have any etymological info on the word "dildo" either as a sex toy or as the place-names mentioned below?--md ps it cd almost be a weaving word, it's that silly sounding.

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> In reply to Daniel Bouchard's concern for a real dildo, I am happy > to inform the list that there is a small town, just north of > Blakeville and east of Spread Eagle, Newfoundland, named "Dildo".
> In fact, there is a series of locations within that vicinity that are > unabashedly specified by the name, such as Dildo Pond, South Dildo, > and Dildo Island (which is an important archaelogical site containing > Beotuk and Maratime Archaic Indian remains).

>
> Of interest in this connection is the curious absence of Dildo (or > "Dildo," that is, the word) in that poem in Robin Blaser's "Syntax" > sequence of _The Holy Forest_ entitled, "The Mystic East" where > we find, naturally, Heart's Content (just north of Dildo) and the > names of some of the other points along Trinity Bay.
>
> As Bowering notes, the imaginary dildo is itself imaginary > vis-a-vis the ongoing collaboration because it did not exist until > Benedetti invented it. However, because of this remark we now > have "Bowering's Imaginary 'Imaginary Dildo,'" as an entity > which forms part of the reality of this world-disclosive > electronic mailing list. This may be an unpleasant multiplication > for subscribers who have certain expections about the functions and > structures of [redacted], but for someone > who is studying the form of electronic records and their disposition > to archives, it makes for exciting and complex study.
>
> Aaron Vidaver
> [redacted]

↑ Index

383. filch
Re: Dildo & The Real
Thu 19 Sep 1996

in searching for info on dildo etymology i came across the http://www.oed.com/ site which although it is not open yet looks to be a wonderful machine. FYI.

> does anyone have any etymological info on the word "dildo" either as a sex toy or as the place-names mentioned below?--md ps it cd almost be a weaving word, it's that silly sounding.

↑ Index

384. Hugh Nicoll
Re: Dildo & The Real
Thu 19 Sep 1996

Re: OED on "dildo", from the CD-ROM version

dildo1. Also dildoe. a. A word of obscure origin, used in the refrains of ballads. Also, a name of the penis or phallus, or a figure thereof; spec. an artificial penis used for female gratification; the lingam of Hindu worship; formerly, also, a contemptuous or reviling appellation of a man or lad; and app. applied to a cylindrical or <oq>sausage<cq> curl. <Ntilde>1593 T. Nashe Choise of Valentines or the Merie Ballad of Nash his Dildo (1899) 20 Curse Eunuke dilldo, senceless counterfet. 1598 Florio Worlde of Wordes 261/3 Pastinaca muranese, a dildoe of glasse. Ibid. 278/2 Pinco, a prick, a pillicock, a pintle, a dildoe. 1610 B. Jonson Alch. v. iii, Here I find..The seeling fill<cq>d with poesies of the candle: And Madame, with a Dildo, writ o<cq> the walls. 1611 Shakes. Wint. T. iv. iv. 195 He has the prettiest Loue-songs for Maids..with such delicate burthens of Dildo<cq>s and Fadings. <Edh>1627 Middleton Chaste Maid i. ii, What, has he got a singing in his head now? Now<cq>s out of work he falls to making dildoes. 1638 Ford Fancies iv. i, This page a milk-livered dildoe. 1647 Parl. Ladies 12 The very sight of this Madam with a Dildoe..put the House into a great silence. <Ntilde>1650 Roxb. Ball. II. 455 She prov<cq>d herself a Duke<cq>s daughter, and he but a Squire<cq>s son. Sing trang dildo lee. 1656 S. Holland Zara (1719) 41 That Gods may view, With a dildo-doe, What we bake, and what we brew. 1659 Torriano, Bacillo..a simple gull, a shallow pate, also a dill-doe, or pillie-cock. 1661 R. W. Conf. Charac. To Rdr. (1860) 7 O thou faint-hearted dildo. 1688 R. Holme Armoury ii. 463/2 A Campaign Wig hath Knots or Bobs (or a Dildo on each side) with a curled Forehead. 1698 Fryer Acc. E. India 179 Under the Banyan Tree, an Altar with a Dildo in the middle being erected, they offer Rice. 1785 Grose Dict. Vulgar T. s.v., Dildoes are made of wax, horn, leather, and diverse other substances. 1886 Burton Arab. Nts. X. 239 Of the penis succedaneus,..which the Latins called phallus and fascinum, the French godemich<eacu> and the Italians passatempo and diletto (whence our <oq>dildo<cq>), every kind abounds. 1952 Auden Nones 11 The nude young male who lounges Against a rock displaying his dildo. 1965 New Statesman 9 Apr. 570/2 Why does it matter so much to them whether lesbians use a dildo or not? b. Comb. dildo-glass, a cylindrical glass; ? a test-tube. <Ntilde>1625 Fletcher Nice Valour iii. i, Whoever lives to see me Dead, gentlemen, shall find me all mummy, Good to fill galipots, and long dildo-glasses.

dildo2.
[prob. the same word as prec., from its cylindrical form like a <oq>dildo-glass<cq>.]
A tree or shrub of the genus Cereus (N.O. Cactace<ae>). Also dildo-tree, dildo-bush, dildo pear tree.
1672 W. Hughes Amer. Physitian 43 The Tree was long since called by the Spaniards, and by the Negroes that lived there, the Dildoe-Tree; and the English retain the same name still.

1696 Phil. Trans. XIX. 296 The Dildoe-tree is the same with the Cereus or Torch-Plant.
1697 W. Dampier Voy. I. 81 Barren Islands without any Tree, only some Dildo-bushes growing on them.
Ibid. 101 The Dildoe-tree is a green prickly shrub, that grows about 10 or 12 foot high, without either Leaf or Fruit. It is as big as a mans Leg, from the root to the top, and it is full of sharp prickles, growing in thick rows.
1700 W. King Transactioneer 11 The Toddy-Tree, the Sower-Sop, the Bonavists, and the Dildoe.
1756 P. Browne Nat. Hist. Jamaica (1789) 238 The larger erect Indian Fig, or Dildo Pear Tree.
1926 Fawcett & Rendle Flora of Jamaica V. 279 C[ereus] peruvianus... Dildo. Dry parts of Jamaica on southern side.
1956 J. Hearne Stranger at Gate xix. 156 It<cq>s like getting a dildo thorn out of your foot.

↑ Index

385. Kevin Killian
Giscombe/Fugitive
Thu 19 Sep 1996

This is Dodie.

For my Creative Writing 1 class I assignmed C.S. Giscombe's essay on the TV series The Fugitive, which is in the Leave Books anthology, _The Poetics of Criticism_. I really like this essay, think it's kind of fun, find Giscombe's revisioning of the fugitive as black so intereting, enjoy his jibes at the white academy, am impressed by the deftness of the slippages in his language. So Š we get in class yesterday afternoon, and I say something bland like, "What did you think of this essay?" And I got this torrent of complaints: I hated it, this guy can't write, this is reverse racism, this really pissed me off, just because he thinks something it doesn't mean it's true, how dare he say the fugitive isn't black enough, it's ridiculous to say that white people can't teach black writers as well as black people, what does he know about Tracy Chapman's singing! One girl latched onto Giscombe's discussion of Ellison's _Invisible Man_, said, "Have you read that book?" Before I could answer, she added, "I hated it! All that guy did was complain." The bulk of this response came from three (of eleven) students, the ring-leader being the Invisible Man-hater.

I tried working with their feelings--yes, Giscombe is using some confrontational language in his piece but Š But nothing I could do could quite turn the situation around from my trying to defend the essay into looking at what the essay had to offer. Particularly because some of the "pissed off" students had totally misread the essay (for instance Giscombe never says the fugitive isn't black enough--he says quite the opposite) and in their rage were irrational. Unfortunately, there are no black people in the class. To me many of the students' responses reeked of racism--to call a black man's reinterpretation of cultural icons of the 60s reverse racism!!???

Frankly I'm stunned, don't quite know what to do about this. When we read _Wigger_ by Lawrence Braithwaite, I'd better bring in a seatbelt--that book really is incendiary, wiggers being white suburban kids who want to be black. Braithwaite is black, gay, and Canadian--I'm afraid he's going to be like a Martian to my students. Call in the Marines, blast this alien to smithereens! Speaking of Martians, we are going to be reading Spicer's letters to Lorca.

Have any of you dealt with this kind of thing?

Dodie

↑ Index

386. cris cheek
Re: CD announcement / spoken word
Thu 19 Sep 1996

Sorry to all about excluding the mailing address.

all mail to:

Sound & Language
85 London Road South
Lowestoft
Suffolk NR33 OAS
UK

thanks for the enquiries love and biscuits
Suzy

↑ Index

387. henry
Re: redux is a drug
Thu 19 Sep 1996

On Wed, 18 Sep 1996 21:00:44 -0400 Jordan Davis said:
>and I want to know what it is people want from this space -- this listserv
>if you're not a spatialist -- I asked when I got here and I'm asking again
>now -- what do you want -- what do you wish would happen here

1. Less silly chatter of no "poetics"interest (I include myself as one of the culprits). I'm all for humor & lightness (except when I'm against it). Imagine how it looks to a newcomer searching for "poetics".

2. Less personal & business messages & replies that should have been backchanneled.

3. More regional info & calendars from round de world (with region in subject line).

4. More input from lurkers (both new & jaded old-timers).

5. Discussion on varieties of issues people have brought up, threads never taken up. (Now what were they...)
- Henry Gould

↑ Index

388. Gwyn McVay
Re: Dildo & The Real
Thu 19 Sep 1996

They are from Water Island off the French Riviera--"d'Ile d'Eau."

Gwyn

↑ Index

389. Beth Simon
Re: Dildo & The Real
Thu 19 Sep 1996

An OED is a thing of beauty. Usually find a couple of the two volume versions (the 20 vols entire plus the "supplement") They used to give away as an inducement to join (Which?) Book Club. Also, the Shorter OED is a marvel at one volume. You can keep either right next to the keyboard, in front of your 3rd International Unabridged Webster's (4th due out before the mill). For etyms (of Brit Eng, ScotsIr, and AmerEng), the OED is necessary and delicious.

Beth Simon
(formerly of the Dictionary of American Regional English (aka among the DARE eds as the dict)
Assistant Professor, Linguistics and English
Indiana University - Purdue University

ach, i see i didn't finish my sentence above--you can usu fd thm at used bk stores

↑ Index

390. maria damon
Re: Dildo & The Real
Thu 19 Sep 1996

---

actually, my preference is not for the OED. i adore etymological dictionaries, and i find that the OED is too literary, too exclusively English (i mean, they only give examples from words' appearances in their modern form in English literary texts) and they, for example, didn't have the word "feminism" in there as of the late 1980s except to mean "a feminine gesture, trait, etc". as in, he exhibited a feminism when he flashed that limp wrist. however, this dildo info is useful (the word doesnt apear in my etym dict.) thanks all for the feedback. md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> An OED is a thing of beauty. Usually find a couple of the two volume > versions (the 20 vols entire plus the "supplement") They used to give > away as an inducement to join (Which?) Book Club. Also, the Shorter > OED is a marvel at one volume. You can keep either right next to > the keyboard, in front of your 3rd International Unabridged Webster's > (4th due out before the mill).
> For etyms (of Brit Eng, ScotsIr, and AmerEng), the OED is necessary > and delicious.
>
> Beth Simon
> (formerly of the Dictionary of American Regional English (aka among > the DARE eds as the dict)
> Assistant Professor, Linguistics and English
> Indiana University - Purdue University
>
>
>
> ach, i see i didn't finish my sentence above--you can usu fd thm at > used bk stores

↑ Index

391. Beth Simon
Re: Dildo & The Real
Thu 19 Sep 1996

One of noticeable changes from the first Caught In The Web Of Words gang to the folks who did the first Supplement, is that the latter crew read lots and lots and lots of murder mysteries, so sources for use are interesting. Perry Mason, take a bow.

I haven't taken a look at the Middle English Dictionary. How's that for etyms?

beth

↑ Index

392. Ian Wilson

Re: Giscombe/Fugitive

Thu 19 Sep 1996

> When we read _Wigger_ by Lawrence Braithwaite, I'd better bring in a seatbelt

Dodie,

Is _Wigger_ a novel? Or what form then?

Any chance of turning the discussion away from the perceived content and onto the craft -- if "teaching" creative writing is what you're doing in the workshop? Lately, the fiction workshops I've been in have been barring judgmental comments ("I didn't like the main character") and forcing the respondents to make pure observations such as "All the dialogue is expositional," "Only the main character is round all the rest are flat characters," "The level of discourse is primarily indirect throughout." The first time I saw this in action, it was amazing how much lower the high horses got. All criticism with even a tinge of the ad hominem disappeared. It makes the writer's job more difficult because he or she has to figure out the significance of these remarks. The professor, privately, will discuss their significance for revision purposes.

But if you're going to allow content-laden reader-response to the pieces, can you demand textual backup of each respondent's opinion? You said in your post that people misread, can you make them go back into the piece and prove their positions? The New Criticism is still worth something as a pedagogy, I think.

Or maybe my suggestions are beyond the scope of a Creative Writing I class, I don't know.

Ian Wilson
Loyola Marymount University, Los Angeles
[redacted]
http://users.aol.com/ibar88/private/story/index.htm

↑ Index

393. Christopher J. Beach
Re: redux is a drug
Thu 19 Sep 1996

I would second Henry Gould's suggestions, and I have made some of the same suggestions about the list before. As a jaded old-timer and (mostly) lurker on the list, I would probably be more inclined to actively participate if we could cut down a bit on the "silly chatter" and "personal business and replies" and do more substantive discussions like those on poetic form, poets vs. critics, poetry and institutions, future(s) of LangPo, poetry and class, relationships between different poetic communities, musical settings of poetry, etc. Some of these threads have been really interesting. Also I love to hear about conferences (especially those I am unable to attend), new presses, mags, books, etc. And what ever happened to the thread about "what new books I've been reading lately"? I always learn a lot from hearing what everyone's been reading and enjoying, and it is encouraging in this day in age to know that people are still reading.

Chris B

On Thu, 19 Sep 1996, henry wrote:

> On Wed, 18 Sep 1996 21:00:44 -0400 Jordan Davis said:
> and I want to know what it is people want from this space -- this listserv if you're not a spatialist -- I asked when I got here and I'm asking again now -- what do you want -- what do you wish would happen here
>
> 1. Less silly chatter of no "poetics"interest (I include myself as one of the culprits). I'm all for humor & lightness (except when I'm against it). Imagine how it looks to a newcomer searching for "poetics".
>
> 2. Less personal & business messages & replies that should have been backchanneled.
>
> 3. More regional info & calendars from round de world (with region in subject line).
>
> 4. More input from lurkers (both new & jaded old-timers).
>
> 5. Discussion on varieties of issues people have brought up, threads never taken up. (Now what were they...)
> - Henry Gould

↑ Index

394. Jordan Davis
the martians we always have with us
Thu 19 Sep 1996

Ian --

This is probably a pointless poetically-correct quibble, but would you really call any category of response 'pure'? Sure you want to privilege one kind of reading -- that's one of the perqs of teaching, right? You get to call that shot -- but do you want to put everything on the axis of purity / mixture? It seems loaded, especially when you're trying to deal with hostile racialist readings. 'Objective' doesn't seem much better. If it weren't such a joke, historically, I'd suggest the word 'neutral'. 'Balanced'? 'Unbalanced'? 'Cool'? 'Appropriate'? It's funny, but there may not be a valid common vocabulary for the range of desired response -- which probably has something to do with the end, for educators, of the post-war old-school assessment jargon, and the clumsy shoring (almost wrote 'klupzy girling') together of new ways of talking about what to encourage in students. I say give 'em the martians that are always here, Dodie.

One who loves all shores,
Jordan

↑ Index

395. maria damon
Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
Thu 19 Sep 1996

Hi Dodie: welcome to the fun, privileged, protected world of teaching. it's a dreamjob, huhn. i totally and completely sympathize. i've had a lot of this kind of stuff, including people complaining that WEB DuBois is "writing over his head" --(read: I, a white boy from suburban minnesota, feel threatened by a Black Harvard PhD whose prose is poetic and complex); that they have been oppressed too, and the prime example is that when Native Americans exercise their fishing treaty rights, it cuts down on the population of fish available to sports fishermen (i.e. themselves, their dads and uncles--believe it or not, this is one of the hottest political issues in the upper midwest); yes, the term "reverse racism" is widely used. Myself and female friends who teach "minority" and "postcolonial" literatures routinely get evaluations that say stuff like "it is offensive to be forced to read about issues such as poverty and racism..." "there were too many books by minorities in this class"(if its not a class actually entitled "minority lit"); "how can you expect me to read this book [by a Lesbian] since I am not a lesbian" etc etc. It's a real eye opener to those of us who think we're past the age of "identity politics," crude socialist advocacy for the traditionally oppressed, etc. etc.--and who, in some contexts, do argue against a simplistic multiculti-ism. I have actually declined to teach "Literature of American Minorities" for a number of years now for the very reason that i find it utterly demoralizing; also, its an intro lecture class, so there're literally over a hundred (white) students glaring at me and sometimes leaving the classroom, slamming doors behind them. It is also common for the women teaching these classes to have anonymous letters sent to the dept chair complaining about their unfairness, incompetence, etc etc.

In message <v01540b00ae66b64a97c5@[205.134.228.42]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> This is Dodie.
>
> For my Creative Writing 1 class I assignmed C.S. Giscombe's essay on the T> V > series The Fugitive, which is in the Leave Books anthology, _The Poetics of > Criticism_. I really like this essay, think it's kind of fun, find > Giscombe's revisioning of the fugitive as black so intereting, enjoy his > jibes at the white academy, am impressed by the deftness of the slippages > in his language. So Š we get in class yesterday afternoon, and I say > something bland like, "What did you think of this essay?" And I got this > torrent of complaints: I hated it, this guy can't write, this is reverse > racism, this really pissed me off, just because he thinks something it > doesn't mean it's true, how dare he say the fugitive isn't black enough, > it's ridiculous to say that white people can't teach black writers as well > as black people, what does he know about Tracy Chapman's singing! One girl
> latched onto Giscombe's discussion of Ellison's _Invisible Man_, said,
> "Have you read that book?" Before I could answer, she added, "I hated it!
> All that guy did was complain." The bulk of this response came from three > (of eleven) students, the ring-leader being the Invisible Man-hater.
>
> I tried working with their feelings--yes, Giscombe is using some > confrontational language in his piece but Š But nothing I could do could > quite turn the situation around from my trying to defend the essay into > looking at what the essay had to offer. Particularly because some of the > "pissed off" students had totally misread the essay (for instance Giscombe > never says the fugitive isn't black enough--he says quite the opposite) and > in their rage were irrational. Unfortunately, there are no black people in > the class. To me many of the students' responses reeked of racism--to call > a black man's reinterpretation of cultural icons of the 60s reverse > racism!!???

>
> Frankly I'm stunned, don't quite know what to do about this. When we read > _Wigger_ by Lawrence Braithwaite, I'd better bring in a seatbelt--that book > really is incendiary, wiggers being white suburban kids who want to be > black. Braithwaite is black, gay, and Canadian--I'm afraid he's going to > be like a Martian to my students. Call in the Marines, blast this alien to > smithereens! Speaking of Martians, we are going to be reading Spicer's > letters to Lorca.
>
> Have any of you dealt with this kind of thing?
>
> Dodie

↑ Index

396. Ian Wilson

Re: the martians we always have with us

Thu 19 Sep 1996

Jordan,

In the pc arena, I can't argue with you on the use of the word "pure." It's a completely loaded word. And I also think that you can't completely separate out the political and talk only about the structural without that decision also being a political one.

All that said, writing workshops have been termed the last bastion of New Criticism, and they are when the focus is on craft. So when I say can the discussion be turned to pure observation, any of your other terms will work: neutral observation, non-judgemental observation, observation that focuses solely on the written artifact as a form.

Given the heat of the discussion in Dodie's class, it might make for an interesting assignment for the class to respond with an essay to the Fugitive piece.

Ian Wilson
Loyola Marymount University, Los Angeles
[redacted]
http://www.iglou.com/irwilson/index.shtml

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: the martians we always have with us Author: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> at Internet Date: 9/19/96 2:00 PM

Ian --

This is probably a pointless poetically-correct quibble, but would you really call any category of response 'pure'? Sure you want to privilege one kind of reading -- that's one of the perqs of teaching, right? You get to call that shot -- but do you want to put everything on the axis of purity / mixture? It seems loaded, especially when you're trying to deal with hostile racialist readings. 'Objective' doesn't seem much better. If it weren't such a joke, historically, I'd suggest the word 'neutral'. 'Balanced'? 'Unbalanced'? 'Cool'? 'Appropriate'? It's funny, but there may not be a valid common vocabulary for the range of desired response -- which probably has something to do with the end, for educators, of the post-war old-school assessment jargon, and the clumsy shoring (almost wrote 'klupzy girling') together of new ways of talking about what to encourage in students. I say give 'em the martians that are always here, Dodie.

One who loves all shores,
Jordan

↑ Index

397. Daniel Bouchard
Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
Thu 19 Sep 1996

Dodie, Maria, et al:

The students you are describing are having a natural reaction to your class. Not natural in the sense that they are correct in their reactions, but natural in that what they (probably most) are exposed to up to the point of your class result predictably in those reactions.

In other words, they haven't been prepared for the idea that there may be ideas (in the world, in the classroom) that will shake the foundations of ideas that they have come to think of as their own. When presented with radical ideas, they (naturally?) regard it as an attack on their beings. They are 18-22? Obviously, they know everything and the instructor in the room is there to pass the time with (with some book chat).

I think that regardless of all the history, issues of race, gender, class, etc. will continue to be radical ideas to many many people. And people find radical ideas threatening. That's why they're radical.

I haven't really offered anything in terms of how to deal with this, but want to say that I've been there and have found it just as upsetting.

What kind of frame or context are these classes presented to the students?

[redacted]

Aside, and somewhat relevant: reading about a poll taking in USA about 20 yrs ago. Question: where does this phrase come from "From each according to their ability, to each according to their need?" Most common answer: the Constitution.

↑ Index

398. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
Thu 19 Sep 1996

god yes. i have dealt with this kind of thing. it is the despair of my life.

i've begun to call it the "righteousness without a cause" syndrome. people

i have this theory: think about when literature, or let us say, to try and harness in (though one can never harness them in) the hole-pokers, written formed narratives began. almost no one could read. thus, almost no one could write. thus, there were very FEW written formed narratives. if you adopted the interpretation/cultural placement/knowledge of these narratives as your profession, you were sitting in the catbird seat.

fast forward. invention of the printing press. things get a little tougher but not much. fast forward. monks/church schools are teaching more and more people to read, hence more and more people write. the ones who make mastering texts their business are now not so clearly in the catbird seat. ruffians from the bleachers are beginning to sit in their section, beginning to displace them in the seat when they get up to go to the bathroom...

fast forward. now. in u.s. and europe, almost everyone can read (i'll take just these areas because they are what i know). now, because so many people can read.... many many people write. now, there is not only a massive, and GROWING backlog of all sorts of Great Literature for the Masters of the Literature Universe to somehow read, interpret, and master, there is MORE of the stuff piling in everyday.

so what happens? what has been happening all along, in one way or another, to "control," assert "mastery" over these unruly texts... a criticism of dismissal...

i.e. (actual paraphrased quote) "oh the confessionals, they all write about suicide and drugs. freudian melodramas..." using this example. well, there you have it. you never have to read sexton, lowell, snodgrass, plath, etc. becuase now we all know they just write about suicide and drugs and freudian melodramas. BAP. a whole pile dismissed.

students pick up the gestalt of criticism of dismissal, and practice it perhaps less gracefully, not in the least becuase a really GOOD criticism of dismissal depends on a sort of haute culture elan, a kind of personal power and unapproachability that makes one able to scare would-be includers off.

i say this, fully aware of my own immersion in criticism of dismissal, distrusting it when i don't like a "sort" of poetry... and hearing, god forbid this nightmare, students saying things that sound like me...

"oh X poetry, it is just about YZ"... i have been having a running debate with a friend on poetries she is enjoying at present. i thought, from samples she had sent me, that i had them pegged. then she sent some jack spicer poems which i found entrancing, and i have had the designer-outfit-wearing Critics Of Dismissal Ghosts shaking their chains in my doorstep ever since... e

↑ Index

399. Jordan Davis
BAP critics
Thu 19 Sep 1996

BAP. a whole pile dismissed.

But Eliza, critics are _supposed_ to do that, aren't they? If you take away a critic's privilege of _focus_, then you make the job of general criticism informational and no longer federal, no longer regulatory. That sounds nice, but who then will take a job the products of which everyone ignores (except the few members of the audience who remain ignored), if the power of which, what little there may be, is taken away?

Jordan

↑ Index

400. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: BAP critics
Thu 19 Sep 1996

---

ayup (a maine noise equivalent to the sound of a burp and a fish line dropping in the water)... tis a tough job but someone has to do it.

honestly, we bitch when criticism seems overly regulatory, but we bitch when crummy texts are paraded by lazy writers as Great Writing even though we know they were scrawled on a cocktail napkin the evening before in bad pentameter with june-moon rhymes. or less obvious targets. and then we yearn, even if we don't dare voice it, for the Tough Scary Critics to ride in on their dismissals...

i never said i had an answer. if i did, i'd exorcise the Ghosts of Texts Dismissed, as well as the Ghosts of Critics of Dismissal... maybe a little worcestershire sauce on my threshold... e

↑ Index

401. filch
Re: Giscombe/Fugitive BAP
Thu 19 Sep 1996

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

> god yes. i have dealt with this kind of thing. it is the despair of my life.

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

> i've begun to call it the "righteousness without a cause" syndrome. people

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."
>
>i have this theory: think about when literature, or let us say, to try and >harness in (though one can never harness them in) the hole-pokers, written >formed narratives began. almost no one could read. thus, almost no one >could write. thus, there were very FEW written formed narratives. if you >adopted the interpretation/cultural placement/knowledge of these narratives >as your profession, you were sitting in the catbird seat.

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

>
>fast forward. invention of the printing press. things get a little tougher >but not much. fast forward. monks/church schools are teaching more and more >people to read, hence more and more people write. the ones who make mastering >texts their business are now not so clearly in the catbird seat. ruffians >from the bleachers are beginning to sit in their section, beginning to displace >them in the seat when they get up to go to the bathroom...

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."
>
>fast forward. now. in u.s. and europe, almost everyone can read (i'll take >just these areas because they are what i know). now, because so many people >can read.... many many people write. now, there is not only a massive, and >GROWING backlog of all sorts of Great Literature for the Masters of the >Literature Universe to somehow read, interpret, and master, there is MORE >of the stuff piling in everyday.

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."
>
>so what happens? what has been happening all along, in one way or another, >to "control," assert "mastery" over these unruly texts... a criticism of >dismissal...

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."
>
>i.e. (actual paraphrased quote) "oh the confessionals, they all write about >suicide and drugs. freudian melodramas..." using this example. well, there >you have it. you never have to read sexton, lowell, snodgrass, plath, etc.
>becuase now we all know they just write about suicide and drugs and freudian >melodramas. BAP. a whole pile dismissed.

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."
>
>students pick up the gestalt of criticism of dismissal, and practice it perhaps >less gracefully, not in the least becuase a really GOOD criticism of >dismissal depends on a sort of haute culture elan, a kind of personal power >and unapproachability that makes one able to scare would-be includers off.

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."
>
>i say this, fully aware of my own immersion in criticism of dismissal, >distrusting it when i don't like a "sort" of poetry... and hearing, god >forbid this nightmare, students saying things that sound like me...

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."
>
>"oh X poetry, it is just about YZ"... i have been having a running debate with >a friend on poetries she is enjoying at present. i thought, from samples she >had sent me, that i had them pegged. then she sent some jack spicer poems >which i found entrancing, and i have had the designer-outfit-wearing Critics >Of Dismissal Ghosts shaking their chains in my doorstep ever since...

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

> e

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

"Everyone thinks that Milan Kundera is such an important writer. He's completely overated, all he ever does is write about sex."

↑ Index

402. Tony Green
Re: Confidential to everybody on the lis
Thu 19 Sep 1996

Put the apparent haste down to sheer South seas excitement. Best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

403. George Bowering
Re: redux is a drug
Thu 19 Sep 1996

> On Wed, 18 Sep 1996 21:00:44 -0400 Jordan Davis said:
> and I want to know what it is people want from this space -- this listserv
> if you're not a spatialist -- I asked when I got here and I'm asking again
> now -- what do you want -- what do you wish would happen here
>
> 2. Less personal & business messages & replies that should have been > backchanneled.

And a more sure command of vocabulary. No use of "less" where "fewer" is indicated, for instance.
>

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

404. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: redux is a drug
Thu 19 Sep 1996

more personal chat. i want to know everyone's bra size. more humor. less nervous seriousness. winning lotto numbers (before they are picked). more poems. reading announcements. book announcements. tenure-gaining announcements. theoretical posits. theoretical refutations. refutations of theory. posits of theory. post-structuralist positions. post modernist positions. pre modern positions. prestructural renovations in position. queries about quotes. thrills chills and everyone's bra size. what people are reading. why. why not. why no one reads miles kundera (i hear it's cause all he talks about is sex... you'd think that would go over big). political alerts. poetical alerts. obits. birth announcements. celebrations. job openings. The Stuff Of Life. e

↑ Index

405. bitmap

Nexis Lexis

Fri 20 Sep 1996

This might be of interest, it concerns "a service from Nexis Lexis called P-Trax.

In this email it was said that this (PAY ONLY) database was being made available by Lexis and in it was all kinds of personal and private information about .. well just about EVERYBODY! .. the email went on to say that the data included our name ('s) that might include your maiden name or aliases you may have used, your current address and maybe your previous address, your social security number, your mother's maiden name, your birth date and other personal information.

Well this sure put the 'fear of the net' in me in a big big hurry! =-)

BUT... I called the (very stressed and phone abused) folks at Lexis and I found out the real deal...

It seems the kind of data thats held within that database includes the following:

> Your Name and maybe other names you may have gone by.
> Your Current Address and maybe a previous address.
> Your Phone Number

Update: Some net.seaching did turn up this very interesting story that was done by our good friends at c|net Central... You can read it in full text at their new web site http://www.news.com/ a fast link direct to the story is http://www.news.com/News/Item/0,4,1539,00.html. Anyway in that story I found out that Lexis does (or did) indeed have our Social Security Numbers and they were AT ONE TIME indeed in the P-TRAK database but thanks to some complaints that came in.. it seems that a few members of congress (after the c|net story was published) may have been concerned as well and the information was indeed removed.

Now I still think thats more information than I want strangers to know about me... Especially without me knowing about it first. Heck, its nobodys business where my previous residence was even if I did live on Mars before calling this nice planet my home =-) and does anyone else really need to know that at one time I went by the assumed name 'Derrenger Dave From Deluth' I don't think so... =-)

Okay.. all kidding aside, personal privacy is very important to us all (or should be) and if you think your name might be contained in this database you really should consider if you want it to remain there.

Yes Virgina you can indeed get it removed. How you ask... well thats were Lexis-Nexis makes it kinda tricky... Lexis will not take you name off the database unless you send them your Name and Address via fax or snailmail - they refuse to do it via phone, email or web.

I have to tell you this does indeed make me a little mad so instead of being nice and putting their fax number in this little story I have chosen to instead post their 1-800 number from that number a recording tells users the address and fax number... the way I look at it, 'let them pay for the call'

Oh, I also have another bone to pick with them... When I called them I simply wanted to find out if my name was indeed in their database and exactly what personal information they did have up for sale on me, because I figure if it isn't in their database already then why on earth should I fax them the info! Well, do you know what I was told??? The charge for the search would be $85.00. If thats not nerve... Doesn't the United States Federal Govenment have some kinda laws covering this kinda thing?? Damn!! CHARGING ME just to see if they are making money by USING MY NAME... So once again... LET THEM PAY FOR THE CALL! [redacted]

I for one WILL have my name removed from that list... and remember please pass this story around but PLEASE make sure you are not spreading mis-information (remember this DB does NOT have SSN, DOB, Mothers Name and some 'reports' I've seen even eluded to the fact they they also had credit info on you... this stuff is not true... if it were imagine how mad I would have been =-)"

↑ Index

406. Kevin Killian
Re: student racism (white trash)
Fri 20 Sep 1996

At 9:49 AM 9/20/96, bitmap addressing wrote:
>I must say that i come from a very long line of white trash and carry the >appelation proudly. My wife and i were discussing last night how my family >line is full of people who were too dirt poor to be oppressors. I'm sure >if given the chance my ancestors would have been excellent at it & i would >come from a long line of slaveholders and genocidal poops. But as it is as >far back as the family has roots we have always been dirt poor white trash >with its accompanying complexes of racism, sexism, abuse, addiction, & >incest.
>
>filch

This is Dodie. While I wasn't raised in such an environment, my heritage too is a long line of white trash--my family was upwardly mobile skilled labor. After the depression many of my white trash (though hillbilly was the word of choice in Indiana) relatives migrated from Kentucky to the Calumet Region to get jobs in the mills and in construction. Up there, there was lots a prejudice against anybody with a Southern accent, and I took on that prejudice, and felt appauling shame at my relatives, my millions of bare-footed shitty toe-headed cousins. When I was in high school most of them moved back to Kentucky and onto welfare, and I haven't seen any of them since. I have come to more of an appreciations of my relatives--but my grandfather was in the Ku Klux, and I've heard stories of cousins getting into knife fights with blacks--I would hardly call them harmless.

↑ Index

407. Rachel Loden
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

---

henry wrote:

> 1. Less silly chatter of no "poetics"interest

Interesting the assumptions in this statement. The dry heaves of dueling press releases (as in the poets vs. critics thread) are "of poetics interest." Pomposity is fascinating. Satire is silly.

> Imagine how it looks to a newcomer searching for "poetics".

Imagine what the neighbors will think. Anyone who comes here looking for certainties should get the chance to be baffled. Didn't I hear a rumor that this was a list for experiment (or is that only for the narrowly defined "work")? This place is interesting, IMO, when it's a source of puzzlement.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

408. Gwyn McVay
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Rachel, I thought h's post was satire. Is there (obligatory crit jargon alert!) room for an alternative reading of the text in question?

Gwyn

↑ Index

409. henry
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

On Fri, 20 Sep 1996 04:54:37 -0700 Rachel Loden said:
>henry wrote:
>
>> 1. Less silly chatter of no "poetics"interest
>
>Interesting the assumptions in this statement. The dry heaves of >dueling press releases (as in the poets vs. critics thread) are "of >poetics interest." Pomposity is fascinating. Satire is silly.

Was I referring to some thread you were involved in, Rachel? I don't think I mentioned any particular thread. Nor did I claim that the poets & critics thread was "fascinating". Who's assuming what about who? Did I say satire was silly? I remember I did say that I considered myself "one of the culprits." - & I mean, engaging in silly chatter! (much of it about poets & critics)
>
>> Imagine how it looks to a newcomer searching for "poetics".
>
>Imagine what the neighbors will think. Anyone who comes here looking >for certainties should get the chance to be baffled. Didn't I hear >a rumor that this was a list for experiment (or is that only for the >narrowly defined "work")? This place is interesting, IMO, when it's >a source of puzzlement.

I agree with that. Jordan asked what we would like to see on the list. I gave my opinion - which is: I miss some of the intense complicated discussions of poetics per se, which in my view, there's been a dearth of in the last few months (maybe it's summer, maybe it's too much chatter - mine included). The best thing in these list police discussions (which are mostly self-defeating) is to just START a discussion, as many have already pointed out. Meanwhile, I'll keep searching for a new opportunity to be baffled. - HG

↑ Index

410. henry
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

On Fri, 20 Sep 1996 08:16:18 -0400 Gwyn McVay said:
>Rachel, I thought h's post was satire. Is there (obligatory crit jargon >alert!) room for an alternative reading of the text in question?
>
Gwyn, let me make myself perfectly less fewer clear:
I was deadly.... serious, SERIOUS. As alwayszzzzzz.....(huffle huffle snort snort).....zzzzzz - What's his name. Choreman of the Bored

BORED ANNOUNCEMENT

A new poetics sub-group spinoff has been formed. We're calling ourselves the "cool poetics nerds". To join, well, it's kind of a clique, some of us just felt we weren't satisfied, you know, it's like an in-group thing. Calling ourselves the Z-team, * started it a few weeks ago, we're all still part of the poetics list anyway. But if you're alabaster, neuter, over 45, and VERY interested in serious literary controversies, you might want to email *. Send along a curriculum mortae. - HG

↑ Index

411. Sherry Brennan space
Fri 20 Sep 1996

> n Wed, 18 Sep 1996 21:00:44 -0400 Jordan Davis said:
> and I want to know what it is people want from this space -- this listserv
> if you're not a spatialist -- I asked when I got here and I'm asking again
> now -- what do you want -- what do you wish would happen here

I just wnat to know that there are other spaces out there, other than this cubicle where I spend my days with my comjputer. I'm not into regulating hwat those other spaces are. Just want to space spacing spaces . xs

Sherry Brennan
Development Research
The Pennsylvania State University
[redacted]

↑ Index

412. maria damon
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

---

rachel rites:
> henry wrote:
>
> > 1. Less silly chatter of no "poetics"interest
>
> Interesting the assumptions in this statement. The dry heaves of > dueling press releases (as in the poets vs. critics thread) are "of > poetics interest." Pomposity is fascinating. Satire is silly.
>
> > Imagine how it looks to a newcomer searching for "poetics".
>
> Imagine what the neighbors will think. Anyone who comes here looking > for certainties should get the chance to be baffled. Didn't I hear
> a rumor that this was a list for experiment (or is that only for the > narrowly defined "work")? This place is interesting, IMO, when it's > a source of puzzlement.
>
> Rachel Loden

i rite: for the record; i was telling a colleague/friend about the silliness of our list of late, with the benedetti v. loden/bowering thread and how it blossomed. she was in stitches and wished she had an e-community that was half as fun.--
md

↑ Index

413. maria damon
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

---

the gould rites:
I miss some of the intense complicated

discussions of poetics per se, which in my view, there's been a dearth of in the last few months

i don't recall much of this at all; are you referring to, for instance, the plath/sexton/ holocaust type stuff? or stuff about meter? this is an honest question: what constitutes a serious discussion of poetics? what in fact is meant by poetics? i ask this because i had real departmental problems with this one in the past, being in a situation where i thought "poetics" meant something like "the functioning of (talking about) verbal artifacts in a social space" and my powerful senior colleagues thought it meant "prosody." so, on this list, i don't know when i'm being "digressive" and when i'm actually tending to business. and to tell the truth i kind of like not knowing. i think that's the way new knowledge gets generated, when there's advertent or inadvertent slippage between discourses. bests always md

↑ Index

414. Joe Amato
teaching traumas...
Fri 20 Sep 1996

there isn't a day goes by, it seems, when i'm not faced with resistance from my students to moving discussions in any direction which suitably challenges more orthodox constructions of self or society... in considering just about anything written by foucault, or any poem that is non-narrative, or any social opine that goes against-the-perceived-orthodox-grain, i'm often met immediately, by a certain faction (which latter varies), with resistance if not outright resentment...

my strategy has been to try to create a classroom setting from the outset in which students feel they can give voice to their more self-ish or racist or sexist or ? sentiments... i like to talk in class about the way i come to teaching and learning, about how i see my own profession, and i like to get my students to talk about what they think they're going to get out of an education, how they see themselves as students... this latter discussion is not the sole topic of discussion, but it is a recurring topic in each and every one of my classes... one way of getting students to pipe up (which may or may not work, depending on the context---there are no guarantees) is to give voice at times to one's own anxieties, and to get into the habit of questioning, listening, and encouraging students to do as well... i'm not talking about teaching-as-confessional (though i suppose there is an element of this, and of related risk)---i am talking about redistributing pedagogical authority so as to decenter the instructional role through openness and willingness to make public one's own methods and frailties, while at the same time raising urgent questions... which may include, in fact, whether a more 'democratic' classroom is desirable... mebbe b/c i'm a white guy i can get away with this more easily, it's true... for example, a woman, viewed in more maternal terms by students, may likewise be viewed as "betraying" her self-defined student-offspring through a denial of authority... i say this only in order to complicate my own pedagogy...

i'm not suggesting that instructors should avoid confrontation... i am saying---and in my case i teach, these days, a lower-middle-class, technically-oriented student body, with a fair amount of international students (who are not lower-middle-class), and mebbe 20% women---that confrontation of any sort is not going to be all that meaningful unless students (and faculty) are willing to articulate where they're coming from, and why... and that it takes some amount of work to create a classroom in which there's enough trust and commitment to entertain such provocations publicly...

mebbe you can get 'into' a 'controversial' text if you can create such a classroom... mebbe such texts can help in that process simply b/c they foreground known anxieties or concerns of one sort or another... mebbe you can get students to see a text as something of (aesthetic, cultural) value (imagine that), as something that speaks to xyz issues in perhaps unsettling ways... but this latter process simply has, as i see it, to take place within a legible pedagogical-educational framework... if you don't discuss the how's and why's of educational motives with your students, you're setting yourself up in their eyes as a demagogue... esp. when you introduce into a classroom a text that is (demographically speaking, now) likely to be viewed as challenging their beliefs...

for what it's worth, please pardon my use of second person, i'm talking to myself too//

joe

↑ Index

415. henry
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

On Fri, 20 Sep 1996 09:22:16 -0500 maria damon said:
>the gould rites:
>I miss some of the intense complicated >discussions of poetics per se, which in my view, there's been a dearth >of in the last few months
>
>i don't recall much of this at all; are you referring to, for instance, the >plath/sexton/ holocaust type stuff? or stuff about meter? this is an honest >question: what constitutes a serious discussion of poetics? what in fact is >meant by poetics?

By "poetics per se" I mean "the gab about poetry".
But methinks perhaps the Muse hath departed.
O woe then I cry, cry I then woe O,
For lo, the blab doth feed upon itself
And all o'erwhelm propinquity and jest!
Yea, unto the legions forthright fortified
With regulation, what ho! Dagnab it all!
Whew!

[from: PROSODY IS ONLY AN ITTY-BITTY PART OF POETICS, by E. Randolph Squirtgunnington; E. Lemon Press, 1946]

[Note: Squirtetc. cites the above as an example of latent extenuated devolved anglo-saxon verse prosody, remarking: "note the labial sibilance in the third beat from the top layer (proto-Ugarit sandstone). How moving - and yet, how pathetic." (p.1745)]

↑ Index

416. Henry po-biz
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Peter Landers apologized for "business" message about his magazine on the list. I'm sorry if my dimwitted "regulatory" comments were unclear. I'm ALL IN FAVOR of small press business announcements etc. on this list. I just don't think people should hit the reply button & order their individual copies, etc. on-list. Anyway, it ain't up to me - I just wanted to clear that up. (Jordan, you will pay for starting this thread...!!!) - HG

↑ Index

417. Joe Amato
teaching traumas cont'd...
Fri 20 Sep 1996

---

and permit me to gloss one facet of my last post one stitch further: one of the greatest difficulties i face is in my tendency to talk too much (surprised? i bet not)... so in order to help turn over the classroom to students (which is what "student-centered" really means), i try to develop a teaching format-structure such that i can at regular intervals get up and WALK OUT...

yeah---just walk away... let them talk things out among themselves (or if you have the technology, write things out among themselves), only to re-enter the discussion at a later point...

now it helps if you have a long-ish class period... but the point here is that an instructor's input is not required at each and every instant, and that in fact it might help in general to ask class participants (please note the shift in terminology) to delve into a specific issue IN YOUR ABSENCE...

i do it all the time, with generally good results... a certain number of participants usually object at first, but they get over themselves once they realize they have much to learn from one another... when i re-enter the discussion, i tend to ask participants to tell me what all they've been discussing, where the major conflicts were (if any), what further speculation/inquiry/even research is possible or necessary, etc... and i try, i try to limit my input and tendency to paraphrase, albeit i've been known to blab some at this point...

joe

↑ Index

418. maria damon
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> I'm putting together a course on play, games, and lit, and am looking for > recommendations-- I've got fictions and theater covered, but the poetry side > of the experience needs help. Stein and Cage are in the running, but other > suggestions would be appreciated. Silly or serious poems/poets/poetics > are welcome.
> Thanks,
> Gary Roberts

the oulipo people, italo calvino, lewis carroll, ws gilbert, joan retallack, bp nichol, aram saroyan, ...

↑ Index

419. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Hey Gary--

Hope all is well. Will backchannel you when I have the time. What about anything by Breton or the Surrealists--not about games per se, but writing based on games, role of the dice, etc. It would work well with Cage, I would think. Or what about the Daisy poem that Kerouac & Cassidy wrote together? (I can't remember the title, but know where to find it if you're interested.)

Julie

On Fri, 20 Sep 1996, Gary Roberts wrote:

> I'm putting together a course on play, games, and lit, and am looking for recommendations-- I've got fictions and theater covered, but the poetry side of the experience needs help. Stein and Cage are in the running, but other suggestions would be appreciated. Silly or serious poems/poets/poetics are welcome.
> Thanks,
> Gary Roberts

↑ Index

420. Jeff Hansen
student racism
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Dodie a day or two ago -- it takes me a while to get my messages, slow system -- wrote about her students' seemingly racist response to a Giscombe essay she had them read.

Alas, I am not at all surprised. I get this sort of thing all the time. The prep school students I teach -- at least the white ones -- almost all claim not to be racists. And they're right to the extent that they hold no ill feelings toward blacks or other minorities. But they are wrong insofar as racism is institutional: Any time discussion of race turns away from "subjective feeling" and to actual instances of and structures that promote white privelege and minority disenfranchisement, things get ugly. Most whites react irrationally and angrily. The strangest such instance is when some white students claims to be as "victimized" as minorities. (My God, what a sad state of affairs.) The declaration of being a victim has become a rhetorical ploy to establish authority ("You have to listen to me; I've been unjustly hurt.") and these kids do not want it denied them.

Once you scratch beneath the surface, the ugliness is extraordinary.

& it's not just race; it's class as well. In the prep school I taught in in NY state, some students uncritically referred to lower class whites as "white trash." I said, "let's find a better word." A student replied, "Oh, they're not white trash?" I said, "These people would fall under the category `poor white trash.' But I don't believe we should refer to any human beings as trash, especially not in a classroom." "Wow, I never thought of that." These kids are receiving superb educations.

The schools I teach at are full of economically elite students steeped in "multicultural" (I hate that word -- too simlistic)social studies and English classes.

Does the elitism overrde the multi-cultural indoctrination? Or are these students actually more sensitive to issues of "otherness" than are many less fortunate whites?

It all makes me shudder. I wish that I, like Dodie, could be surprised.

In NY state I taught some kids ripe for the neo-Nazis. (No, all of the neo-Nazis are not poorly educated, disenfranchised white men. These boys had the world at their feet.) When I began my introduction of Woolf's TO THE LIGHTHOUSE, one of the students asked, "Is she black, too?" He had become sick of reading black authors after a unit on African poetry. The coming generation may be the most racist since before the Civil Rights era.

I guess we educators have our work cut out for us. Do we make a difference? What do you non-educators think?

Jeff

↑ Index

421. Gary Roberts
poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

I'm putting together a course on play, games, and lit, and am looking for recommendations-- I've got fictions and theater covered, but the poetry side of the experience needs help. Stein and Cage are in the running, but other suggestions would be appreciated. Silly or serious poems/poets/poetics are welcome. Thanks, Gary Roberts

↑ Index

422. Jeff Hansen
None
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Maria Damon mentioned in passing that a hot upper midwest political issue concerns the treaty rights of native Americans to fish in certain waters at times when they are off-limit to other groups. She goes on to say that many whites oppose it because it cuts down on the fish they will catch. This is true in part, but the issue is much more complex.

Certain small resort owners suffer real economic trouble because of these treaties (which should be enforced -- I'm not arguing against Native American's rights.) And many of these people are not rich: they make a hell of a lot less than a tenured professor or, in my case, a prep school teacher. An extremely slow season resulting from either the real or perceived lack of fish in the lake due to Native fishing can send some of these people out of business.

The point here is that, once again, it is lower class whites who pay a disproportionate price for the attempt to redress past racism. This is political suicide: It splits the Leftist and potential Leftist constituency along racial lines. This problem is, I think, the most serious one created by the New Left. Yes, gender and racial politics are necessary. But we need to keep the economic in view. And we need to keep in mind that white people are not all the same, and we need to ask ourselves who we are asking to pay for redressing past racism. 'tain't all equal.

A simple 'fuck the whites, they're all priveleged' is escapism and dangerous politics.

↑ Index

423. Douglas Messerli

new magazine on line

Fri 20 Sep 1996

I just wanted to let everyone know that the newest issue of WHERE LITERATURE LIVES, No. 2 (September 1996) is now on line at Sun & Moon Press's web-sit (http:// www.sunmoon.com).=20

The newest issue contains work by several upcoming and new Sun & Moon writers (Myung Mi Kim, Charles Bernstein, Ren=E9 Crevel, Thomas Mann, others) and reviews from recent Sun & Moon books as well as "In the News," new information about Sun & Moon writers and events.=20

In future issues, Sun & Moon will publish some reviews of non-Sun & Moon books. If you have a book you'd like to review, please let me know (Douglas Messerli). We look forward to publishing a few other reviews in each of our monthly issues.

I hope you'll vising our web-site and enjoy the contents. You're welcome to download material as long as it's for personal usage only. Incidentally, we will be keeping back issues on the site as well. No 1 of WHERE LITERATURE LIVES can still be accessed.

Douglas Messerli

↑ Index

424. Daniel Bouchard
Re: student racism
Fri 20 Sep 1996

I guess we educators have our work cut out for us. Do we make a difference? What do you non-educators think?

——

In some recent reading a comment was made that the people (mostly white men) with high school educations who feel disenfranchised and believe in "reverse-racism" and are falling into the ranks of those spouting vicious right-wing rhetoric of racial divisiveness and general assaults on poor people, and are likely candidates for the so-called "militias," etc. were, three generations ago the same people forming the rank and file of the CIO. The conclusion (made in the article) was(IS) a disastrous failure on the part of the Left (today), and an organizer's dream still waiting to happen.

That's a lot of work. What do people think? And does poetry have a place in it?

A: Poetry does have a place in it. Poetry can inform.

[redacted]

↑ Index

425. Pete Landers
status of my 'zine - Happy Genius
Fri 20 Sep 1996

please pardon the non-poetic, business nature of this post. a few poets on this list have work going in my up-coming 'zine, Happy Genius.

Happy Genius is suffering from money problems. this is out-of-pocket. if it is going too slowly for anyone, just write me. i understand.

the low-down: Happy Genius is 1. core text only. i like a little crit but there are many 'zines out there for that. 2. Black Mountain and langpo influenced. my taste. 3. paper and web. many people really do judge a book, or 'zine, by the quality of the print job. for some, web-only is not real! wouldn't that be a turbulent thread!

i hit up some poets whose work i've liked a long time, and, from this list, i received a lot of work that is just about exactly what i wanted to get. unfortunately, i also got work from women on a one to seven ratio! (another thread that would be interesting to pursue.) i then tried to make a concerted effort to attract women; trolling, as it is called on irc. a stupid error happened that is embarassing but should be funny. i wrote a particularly intelligent woman on this list (based on the content of her posts) begging work from her. she isn't a poet. she's a critic. i bet most of you know exactly who i mean! the result of that troll was null. there is still a seven to one ratio of men to women.

there is still room for submissions to Happy Genius. in order to use the perfect binding method, at least 96 pages are necessary. i have almost that much now, and could put in one or two of my own longer poems (which are brilliant!), but i would prefer more work.

long poems, word play, mental activity, that's what i like.

please note that my email address has changed to:
[redacted]

and my snail mail address has changed to:
Happy Genius
Pete Landers, ed.
34 Rose Circle
Hamlin, NY 14464

in other words, if you snail me and don't think "Gertrude", it could be the wrong address. is that obscure? sorry. Stein made the circle of "a rose is a rose is a rose is". rose circle.

again, if Happy Genius is going too slowly and i'm holding your poem, get in touch. i'm not Clayton-like*. i'll send my phone # back channel if you want to talk.

Pete Landers
[redacted]

* bashing Clayton is fun, but i'm sorry to hear Sulphur is in a bad way with money. with or without the controversies, he and Eliot put some good work out there and they have excellent distribution. maybe it's time he pull a Heyerdahl on those cave painting technix.

↑ Index

426. Michael Boughn
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Personally, I'd like to see BIGGER dildoes in more flavours. After all, this is America, ain't it?

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

427. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

gary,

bpNichol! lots and lots and lots of bpNichol! -- have you seen the collected performance scores of the _four horsemen_? you can still get this thru karl young.

take care,

c.

↑ Index

428. Pete Landers
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

henry wrote:
>
> On Fri, 20 Sep 1996 04:54:37 -0700 Rachel Loden said:
> >henry wrote:
> >
> >> 1. Less silly chatter of no "poetics"interest
> >
> >Interesting the assumptions in this statement. The dry heaves of > >dueling press releases (as in the poets vs. critics thread) are "of > >poetics interest." Pomposity is fascinating. Satire is silly.

etc...

the poets vs. critics thread almost got me to unlurk. might as well say it now. in my opinion, criticism is useful. it's like religion for the people who want some spirituality but don't want to figure out the core texts for themselves. poems are for people who read poetry and criticism, likewise, is for people who want it. bashing all critics, like bashing all religions, is wasted energy. one might as well hate Carl Sagan for bawdlerizing modern science. might as well hate snow for falling, water for being wet.

what do i want from this list? i can say what i don't want. i don't want to put limits to any discussion here.

Pete Landers
[redacted]

↑ Index

429. Robert Drake
[[redacted]: Call for submissions]
Fri 20 Sep 1996

========== Begin forwarded message ==========

From: [redacted] (Harold Jaffe)
To: [redacted]
Subject: Call for submissions
Date: Fri, 20 Sep

Would it be possible for you to forward the following ad to your lists:

Call For Submissions

Fiction International will be publishing its second consecutive issue on the subject of Pain. Fiction, non-fiction, hybrid forms and visuals should be sent (with SASE) between 9/1/96 and 12/15/96 to: Harold Jaffe, Editor, Fiction International, English Dept. San Diego State University, San Diego, CA 92182-8140. Please write "Pain" on your envelope.

Thanks,
Harold Jaffe, Editor

↑ Index

430. Robert Drake
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

---

hello all,
i was asked to line a clamshell box with felt. the box is going to house a volume bound in goatskin.
the felt i can get is 100% polyester.
i would like to find out whether its use is objectionable and for what reason?
thank you gudrun

[found 9/19/96]

↑ Index

431. bitmap addressing

Re: student racism (white trash)

Fri 20 Sep 1996

I must say that i come from a very long line of white trash and carry the appelation proudly. My wife and i were discussing last night how my family line is full of people who were too dirt poor to be oppressors. I'm sure if given the chance my ancestors would have been excellent at it & i would come from a long line of slaveholders and genocidal poops. But as it is as far back as the family has roots we have always been dirt poor white trash with its accompanying complexes of racism, sexism, abuse, addiction, & incest.

filch

> & it's not just race; it's class as well. In the prep school I taught in in NY state, some students uncritically referred to lower class whites as "white trash." I said, "let's find a better word." A student replied, "Oh, they're not white trash?" I said, "These people would fall under the category `poor white trash.' But I don't believe we should refer to any human beings as trash, especially not in a classroom." "Wow, I never thought of that." These kids are receiving superb educations.

↑ Index

432. Christina Fairbank Chirot

1st Amendment Freedom: Community Vigilantes: N.Y.C. Community Court

Fri 20 Sep 1996

Carl Peters had an excellent suggestion re poetry & play--The Prose Tattoo by The Four Horsemen, available from Karl Young's Light and Dust. Light and Dust also has cassettes of Paul Dutton, Rafael Barreto-Rivera and bpNichol available, as well as othe bpNichol texts. Look for Light and Dust at Grist On-Line http://www/thing.net/~grist also re poetry and play,(and who gets to play and who not) racism & class war--here is the following

From: [redacted]
Subject: Community Vigilantes: N.Y.C. Community Court

This Community Wants Its Very Own Kangaroo Court
by Robert Lederman

On Tuesday night (9/17/96) I attended a meeting of Community Board #2's Community Court Task Force. As the president of A.R.T.I.S.T., an advocacy group for N.Y.C. street artists, my concern is that CB#2 and City Council Member Kathryn Freed will use the proposed Community Court to further harass and persecute street artists in SoHo and the West Village. Having been an artist-defendant a number of times in the 54th Street Community Court, which CB#2 acknowledges as their role model, I wanted to find out just what CB#2 had in mind.

The 54th Street Community Court specializes in targeting minorities, the poor, the homeless, disabled veteran vendors and street artists accused of "violating" the community. These "violations" usually involve nothing more than being in the area. It is neither a court of equal justice nor of constitutional law. This "court" functions as a mechanism for business interests and local community "activists" to harass and eliminate so-called "undesirables" whom the police are unable to focus attention on while dealing with legitimate issues of public safety and crime.

Alan Gerson is the chair of the CB#2 Community Court Task Force. He took issue with a letter I had written to a local newspaper criticizing the proposed Court as a vehicle for Council Member Freed's particular brand of vigilantism and assured me I'd "...gotten it all wrong". At first, Gerson vigorously denied that Council Member Freed had anything to do with the proposed Community Court. Later he admitted that he was appointed to CB#2 and to the chair of the Committee by Council Member Freed and that numerous other board members were also appointed by Freed. Ms. Freed has built a career on "quality of life" issues and is working with the Fifth Avenue Association, the SoHo Alliance and other real estate interests to eliminate First Amendment protection for visual art as a means of eliminating artists from New York City's streets.

Gerson had a large pile of copies of a document he'd written entitled, "Outline For CB#2's Community Court". After much pressuring, he allowed me a brief look at the document and then quickly took it back.

The document was later leaked to me by a board member.

Like the 54th Street Court on which it is modeled the goal of CB#2's Court is to address so-called "quality of life" violations rather than robberies, rapes or serious criminal offenses. According to Gerson's outline, "Late night hours would be utilized by the police to bring individuals they find engaged in illicit activity to the court for immediate intake." The "illicit activities" would presumably include displaying art, playing a radio, loitering, panhandling, sleeping on the street, distributing handbills, vending or holding an open beer.

CB#2's proposed court would not just be a vehicle for police activity. Local residents would be encouraged to identify quality of life violators and bring them before the court. "Community residents...must have standing to initiate 'citizen suits' alleging the violation of the administrative code...[by] signing a petition or [by] the endorsement of the community board." While the initial target of this neighborhood "cleanup" will be "outsiders", the outline acknowledges that, "...most such alleged violations involve accusations among neighbors, including neighboring residents and businesses". In other words, anyone with a petty grudge against his or her neighbor will now have a means of dragging them into court on the pretext of having violated their "life quality".

While expressing deep admiration for the 54th Street Court, CB#2 wants to go even further in their practice of "justice" than its role model does. "In criminal violations, the court must be authorized to conduct trials. In that way our court would differ from the Midtown Court which only deals with defendants who plead guilty, and refers other defendants to the regular courts. The CB#2 Court could therefore conduct any necessary trials." In the midtown court defendants who are not successfully coerced into pleading guilty and doing community service are immediately rescheduled for arraignment in Manhattan Criminal Court at 100 Centre Street.

Justice will be swift and certain in CB#2's court. "The Court must be set up to conduct intake for persons accused of criminal violations...and would therefore need to include a holding area supervised by Court Officers. The immediacy of intake would send a positive message to defendants and potential defendants using our streets...".

Nevertheless, CB#2 does not intend to sentence defendants to actual jail time. "Our Community Court would never impose jail sentences. In addition to imposing fines, the Court would utilize alternative sentencing for persons who plead guilty or are found guilty of criminal violations. The court would retain jurisdiction over the sentenced defendant until he or she completes their sentence. Persons who refuse to complete their sentence, and repeat offenders, would be referred to the regular criminal court system, where jail time remains an option." Alternative sentencing includes cleaning and sweeping CB#2's streets, painting buildings and doing landscaping and maintenance for the "community".

Barbara Feldt, a community activist from the 54th Street Court was a guest speaker at the meeting and gave us some idea of just how this "alternative sentencing" works. "My personal interest is in maintaining trees", she explained. "So I call up the 54th Street Court Supervisor and have them send over defendants, who I supervise in maintaining the trees in my neighborhood". When I commented that this sounded a bit like legalized slavery, she became offended and assured me that she had never profited in a personal way from any of the crews assigned to work under her direction. She also described how she and other 54th Street Court "community activists" had obtained the names and addresses of men arrested by undercover cops who pose as prostitutes and solicit passing cars, and had written personal letters to each of their wives.

Unlike the 54th Street court, which was built and continues to be financed by the Fifth Avenue and Times Sq. Business Improvement Districts, C.B. #2 believes their court, "...deserves full public financing from the City and State", and proposes, "...an aggressive campaign for grants from the federal government and from foundations...". The grants from foundations would include money from N.Y.U. which could use the court as a, "...wonderful opportunity for collaboration between the criminal justice system and higher education".

The trend of developing Community Courts goes hand in hand with the spread of B.I.D.s (Business Improvement Districts). Business and community "leaders" are dissatisfied with the delays caused by bothersome constitutional protections such as the First Amendment, due process and civil rights, and the fact that many judges dismiss quality of life cases because they know the defendants were arrested due to their race or social status.

B.I.D.'s and community courts transfer the authority of duly elected government officials and judges to local business leaders who make no pretext of understanding or caring about civil liberties. B.I.D.s and Community Courts are simply advocates for property owners and real estate interests. Protecting the real or imaginary "rights" of property owners is their sole mission.

Unlike Manhattan Criminal court, where only 80-90% of the defendants are minorities, at the 54th Street Community Court virtually 100% of the defendants are African-American or Latino. Most know nothing of their legal rights. Almost all accept a guilty plea and do community service after being coerced into doing so by their court appointed lawyer, a judge answerable to and appointed by the local community and helpful "intake personnel". They are then used by the same "community activists" who had them arrested and by the B.I.D.s as a source of unpaid labor within the community.

The more arrests that are made the greater the supply of free labor.

Admittedly, this is an ingenious return to the plantation system which helped build this nation in the 17th and 18th centuries. Community Court convict-defendants usually wear orange or other easily identifiable coveralls emblazoned with the courts' logo while working out their sentences in the community. Ms. Feldt calls this forced labor, "...giving something back to the community".

Rather than creating jobs or addressing social inequality, this system puts poor people to work as a punishment for being visible in an otherwise middle-class or wealthy community. Community Courts are similar to the vigilante justice practiced by groups like the Klu Klux Klan and can ultimately lead to the kind of police state that existed in Nazi Germany and in the Soviet Union. There, every citizen acted as a police informer reporting the real or imaginary transgressions of foreigners, peddlers, outsiders and eventually, their own neighbors. The motivation is blatantly racist and classist. In the Manhattan D.A.'s words it is, "A bad idea whose time has come".

For more information on A.R.T.I.S.T. contact:
Robert Lederman, president of A.R.T.I.S.T.
(Artists' Response To Illegal State Tactics)
[redacted] E-mail [redacted]
A.R.T.I.S.T. web site [a journalistic resource]:
http://www.openair.org/alerts/artist/nyc.html

A Selection of Articles on the Street Artist issue..... Daily News 9/8/96 pg. 13, "Law Called Vend-ictive"; Art In America, March 1996 pg. 128 "New Allies for Street Artists"; New York Times, Sunday July 14, 1996, City section pg 1); "The War of Nerves Downtown; Kathryn Freed's War of Nerves" [detailed expose of City Council Member Freed]; N.Y. Times 9/1/96 City Section pg 1; "Is This Man Dangerous? The Portrait Artist in an Age of Zero Tolerance; Inside the Quality of Life Wars"; Christian Science Monitor Wednesday, February 14, 1996 "Conflict On the Street: Artists v. N.Y.C.";

New York Times Wednesday, January 24, 1996
Metro section pg. B1 "Street Art: Free Speech or Just Stuff?"; New York Magazine, January 23, 1995 pg 16
"Among the Artlaws"; N.Y. Post 5/26/94 pg. 54,
"Throwing the Book at Artist"; Christian Science Monitor Thursday, July 14, 1994 pg. 11 "New York Reins In Street Art"; Time Out Magazine Feb 21-27
1996 pg. 18 "Peddle Pushers"; New York Amsterdam
News Saturday, June 15, 1996 pg. 4 "Artists To Sue Over First Amendment Right of Speech".

Council Member Freed [redacted]
C.B.#2 [redacted]
Manhattan D.A. [redacted]

↑ Index

433. Herb Levy
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Mike Boughn writes:

> Personally, I'd like to see BIGGER dildoes in more flavours. After all, this is America, ain't it?

Exactly how long HAVE you been living in Toronto, Mike?

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

434. Christina Fairbank Chirot
correction
Fri 20 Sep 1996

correction: grist On-Line is http://www.thing.net/~grist (typed an / in place of a . previously) also check out Translating Translating Apollinaire by bpNichol et al and Six Fillious (by Robert Filliou, George brecht, Dieter Roth, bpNichol, Steve McCaffery and Dick Higgins) some of this work is on web site Poetry section of Light Dust-- or Art Facts by bpNichol from CHAX (also available from SPD)

--dbchirot

↑ Index

435. Pritchett,Pat
Re: student racism (white trash)
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Interesting, Dodie. My grandfather was in the KKK, too. Worked the RR out of Knox, Indiana, but hailed from Evansville. In the 1930's, my father was a pool hustler and got into fights with people he called "hillbillies" though I don't imagine he was far removed from them himself. But in South Bend, where I grew up, everyone was Polish or so it seemed.

I'm curious about this thread on students & racism as I'm now an undergrad in Humanities at CU-Boulder at the maybe too ripe age of 39. After working in the film industry and the insurance biz, I've decided to become a professor (whatever that may be). So far, I've caught not a whiff of racism among my fellow students. The curriculum in my modern fiction class is fairly canonical, though, so it doesn't encourage people to venture into the kinds of discussions (or whining) that's been described here.

In my American Indian Religion class I can sense a strong, but unspoken, split among students: on the one hand, people are filled with an almost pious respect for Native Americans that borders on the sentimental; on the other hand, a sharp sense of condescension arises now and then, as if to say, "Well they were only Indians afterall and we are contemporary Americans, white & affluent." I feel this is largely attributable to the often callous attitude of the young, though I could be wrong. The teacher is Choctaw.

Anyway, these reports are none to encouraging...

Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

From: Kevin Killian
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Re: student racism (white trash)
Date: Friday, September 20, 1996 1:02PM

At 9:49 AM 9/20/96, bitmap addressing wrote:
>I must say that i come from a very long line of white trash and carry the >appelation proudly. My wife and i were discussing last night how my family >line is full of people who were too dirt poor to be oppressors. I'm sure >if given the chance my ancestors would have been excellent at it & i would >come from a long line of slaveholders and genocidal poops. But as it is as >far back as the family has roots we have always been dirt poor white trash >with its accompanying complexes of racism, sexism, abuse, addiction, & >incest.

>
>filch

This is Dodie. While I wasn't raised in such an environment, my heritage too is a long line of white trash--my family was upwardly mobile skilled labor. After the depression many of my white trash (though hillbilly was the word of choice in Indiana) relatives migrated from Kentucky to the Calumet Region to get jobs in the mills and in construction. Up there, there was lots a prejudice against anybody with a Southern accent, and I took on that prejudice, and felt appauling shame at my relatives, my millions of bare-footed shitty toe-headed cousins. When I was in high school most of them moved back to Kentucky and onto welfare, and I haven't seen any of them since. I have come to more of an appreciations of my relatives--but my grandfather was in the Ku Klux, and I've heard stories of cousins getting into knife fights with blacks--I would hardly call them harmless.

↑ Index

436. Burt Kimmelman
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Gary,

Have you read THE PLAY OF THE WORLD by James Hans. No particular poem in it, but an incredible discussion of play that goes well beyond Huizinga's HOMO LUDEN as well as earlier poststructuralism.

Burt

↑ Index

437. Jordan Davis
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

The collaborations of John Ashbery and Kenneth Koch
" " " Ted Berrigan and Ron Padgett

The work of Bernadette Mayer
" " " Carla Harryman

↑ Index

438. Jordan Davis
deluxe drug introductions
Fri 20 Sep 1996

You know what I liked a lot in the last few months?
I liked Gale Nelson's posts about what he liked about Bruce Andrews' work. They were detailed, thoughtful, passionate, etc. On the axis of informing / posturing, those were pretty saturated with information. I don't suppose many of us have the time, now that postseason play is nigh upon us, to compile _pro bono_ remarks that would show some part of some aesthetic arc that although in plain sight very truly goes unnoted.
But that sort of lawyering (as in "New Hope") can be very bracing, especially if the inditor takes Gale's cue and avoids special pleading -- sticking to what is there and shying from 'why don't people read this.' I know that _I_ don't read things, don't go see things, don't think about things because those things haven't been mentioned to me (or if they have, and I've looked and not pursued, then not pursuing has been either a matter of taste or one of misunderstanding -- and misunderstanding may possibly be corrected).

I guess you can tell from the look of this post that I liked Ira's posts a lot too. Anyway, it's only our time and money that we're spending on this. All the posts are fine and unfinished. I may be looking at a cathode ray tube but I'm not seeing the popular culture or its countercultural mirror either, I'm getting something being otherwise. As a denominator that's enough for me, though I would like the multiple to get going, if you dig. No? No dig? Ay! -- Jordan

↑ Index

439. Steve Shoemaker
reading retallack
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Can anyone recommend useful essays or reviews on Joan Retallack's work, esp.
AFTERRIMAGES? Or does anyone have anything to say about it in this space?
I'm still trying to find my way in myself, but wld like to help create a good reception when she comes to read here in November. Joan is a friend of mine, but for that reason i'm too embarrassed to ask for help firsthand. Thanks.

And btw, i guess this is my first post from Charleston, SC rather than Charlottesville, VA. The new address is [redacted] for anyone trying to get in touch.

Steve Shoemaker

↑ Index

440. George Bowering
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> I'm putting together a course on play, games, and lit, and am looking for recommendations-- I've got fictions and theater covered, but the poetry side of the experience needs help. Stein and Cage are in the running, but other suggestions would be appreciated. Silly or serious poems/poets/poetics are welcome.
> Thanks,
> Gary Roberts
>
> the oulipo people, italo calvino, lewis carroll, ws gilbert, joan retallack, bp nichol, aram saroyan, ...

I was going to mention most of them, esp I think harry Mathews and Georges Perec.

Add Jack Spicer.

George Bowering.

,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

441. Louis Cabri
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

henry,
it's wattle.
-l

↑ Index

442. George Bowering
Re: student racism (white trash)
Fri 20 Sep 1996

> But as it is as > far back as the family has roots we have always been dirt poor white trash
> with its accompanying complexes of racism, sexism, abuse, addiction, &
> incest.
>
> filch

Boy, when you put it in those terms, you're talking about my mother's family, which once in its life had the good sense to escape the Ozarks and move to Alberta, and then into B.C. mountains, where they sat on fences with long rifles and no shoes. No kidding.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

443. George Bowering
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

> Personally, I'd like to see BIGGER dildoes in more flavours. After > all, this is America, ain't it?
>
> Mike
> [redacted]

I knew it! I knew it! Mike B. is a sizist!

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

444. James Sherry

Readings and Readings at The Segue Performance Space - October

Fri 20 Sep 1996

This is Dan Machlin over at The Segue Foundation.

The following are October Readings to be held at The Segue Performance Space, 303 East 8th Street, NY, NY (between Aves. B&C), Buzzer 1R. All events at 7:30 p.m. sharp, Suggested Contribution $3.00 (except OBJECT Mag. Benefit see below)

Thursday, October 3
LAURA MORIARTY & MELANIE NEILSON

Thursday, October 10
ELENI SIKELIANOS, LAIRD HUNT, CHARLES BORKHUIS

Thursday, October 17
LEE ANN BROWN (New video work + writings)
JULIE PATTON (Performance Texts)

Thursday, October 24
GROUP READINGS FROM THE SEGUE FOUNDATION SMALL-PRESS ARCHIVE
(A continuing series - shared texts provided) Group Readings From TUUMBA - Lyn Hejinian's Letterpress Chapbook Series

MEN IN AIDA by David Melnick (#47 - Dec. 83)
PROPERTY by Carla Harryman (#39 - May 82)
BEYOND THE EDGE a double monologue by Doug Hall & Jody Procter of T.R. Uthco
(#8 - Mar. 77)
PLANE DEBRIS by Stephen Rodefer (#36 - Nov. 81)
THE GOSPEL OF CELINE ARNAULD by Clayton Eshleman (#12 - Nov. 77)

Sunday, October 27, 3:00 - 6:00 p.m., Suggested Contribution $5.00 OBJECT MAGAZINE BENEFIT READING Featuring Kim Rosenfield, Judith Goldman, Bruce Andrews, Brian Kim Stephans, Stacy Doris, Robert Kocik, Dan Farrell, Joe Elliot, Bill Luoma, Melanie Neilson, Tim Davis, Rob Fitterman, Jeff Hull, Elizabeth Fodaski & many others.

Thursday, October 31, Special Holloween Blockbuster Reading SIANNE NGAI, CAMILLE GUTHRIE & JUDITH GOLDMAN

- BEYOND OCTOBER -

Thursday, November 21
LISA JARNOT, JENNIFER MOXLEY

Thursday, December 12
PETER GIZZI, ERICA HUNT

& watch for other readings and performance events t.b.a.

For more information about this series, the archive or the Performance Space you may e-mail after 9/22 to [redacted]

↑ Index

445. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

Re: poetry and play

Fri 20 Sep 1996

---

i'd add judy grahn (for her wordplay) if you don't all think i'm too fuddy duddy for mentioning her...
e

↑ Index

446. Gabrielle Welford

forward from another list - it's your privacy ... (fwd)

Fri 20 Sep 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: LYNN EUBANK <[redacted]>

This was sent to me by a reliable source in the AI lab, and I think you should all be aware of this also.

Your name, social security number, current address, previous addresses, mother's maiden name, birth date and other personal information are now available to anyone with a credit card through a new Lexis database called P-Trax. As I am sure you are aware, this information could be used to commit credit card fraud or otherwise allow someone else to use your identity.

You can have your name and information removed from this list by making a telephone request. Call [redacted], select option 4 and then option 3 ("all other questions") and tell the representative answering that you wish to remove your name from the P-trax database. You may also send a fax to [redacted], or physical mail to LEXIS-NEXIS / P.O. Box 933 / Dayton, Ohio 45401-0933.

Sending physical mail to confirm your name has been removed is always a good idea.

[Actually, it's option 4, then option 9, and all they tell you is that they need your request in writing (full name and address) sent to the fax or snail mail address listed above]

As word of the existence of this database has spread on the net, Lexis-Nexis has been inundated with calls, and has set up a special set of operators to handle the volume. In addition, Andrew Bleh (rhymes with "Play") is a manager responsible for this product, and is the person to whom complaints about the service could be directed. He can be reached at the above 800 number. Ask for extension 3385. According to Lexis, the manager responsible is Bill Fister at extension 1364.

The representative will need your name and social security number to remove you from the list.

****

Richard J. Samuels
Head, Department of Political Science
Director, MIT Japan Program
Massachusetts Institute of Technology tel: [redacted] fax: [redacted]

Dr. Lynn Eubank, Chair
Graduate Studies in English
Department of English
University of North Texas
Denton, TX 76203
USA
[redacted]

Lynn Eubank, PhD
Division of Linguistics
Department of English
Univ of North Texas
Denton, TX 76203
USA
[redacted]
[redacted]

↑ Index

447. Gabrielle Welford
Re: Nexis Lexis
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Ooops. Sorry all, just saw the corrections as I plough through my umpty ump messages. Ignore moi, pliss, I will sit in the dark. gab

↑ Index

448. Gabrielle Welford
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Tom Leonard is a great poetry player. gab.

↑ Index

449. Gabrielle Welford
Re: redux is a drug
Fri 20 Sep 1996

On Fri, 20 Sep 1996, henry wrote:

> By "poetics per se" I mean "the gab about poetry".
> But methinks perhaps the Muse hath departed.

No, no, it's okay i'm still here. gab

↑ Index

450. Gabrielle Welford
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

Hey, no fuddyduddy in judy grahn as far as I know. "Descent to the Roses of the Family" not playful nor gamey, but certainly not fuddyduddy... gab.

↑ Index

451. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: poetry and play
Fri 20 Sep 1996

---

ooohhh, "Descent to the Roses of the Family" is new to me -- what is it from? Excitement, a new judy grahn poem!

no, i was thinking of the linguistic play of _She Who_...

e

↑ Index

452. Dean Taciuch
Re: teaching traumas...
Sat 21 Sep 1996

This is a follow-up to Joe Amato's 'teaching traumas' post--I too have had similar experiences in both creative weiting and literature classes. The first was several years ago in an Intro Cw (poetry) course in which I tried to use the Before Columbus Foundation anthology. Several of the students liked the chance to see poetries in other forms, spoken forms for example, and dealing with materials they'd been told were not "poetic." But a few students (one in particular) was outraged by the introduction to the book (by Ishmael Reed) and simply could not get past that. He felt the entire book was an example of "reverse racism." I tried speaking with him after class, but without much success. He went to the Department Chair, complained that the text was oppressing him--never mind the irony of him using the very rhetoric he described to me as "whining". . .

In another case though, I taught two advanced courses which could have gone the same way. One on Spoken Word Poetry which used, among others, the Aloud anthology; and another Postmodern Poetry course which drew heavily on what I thought were some very challenging and difficult poets. Anyway, the advanced courses were much more successful. I did encouter some resistance in the PM course, not concerning racism but simply due to the strangeness of some of the texts. In these classes, I used a method similar, I think, to Amato's pedagogy--I opened discussion by talking about how I tried to read these texts, both when I first encountered them, and my own lingering uncertainities. The students were not nearly as resistant, I think, when they saw that these were _supposed_ to be challenging texts, that they were _supposed_ to have some very fundamental questions about how to read, etc.

Of course, not everyone wants to challenged, not everyone wants these questions asked. And when the discussions got directly political, discussion clearly died down. I haven't tried Amato's technique of walking out, though. Maybe next time . .

Dean

↑ Index

453. Alan Sondheim
207
Sat 21 Sep 1996

---

207 1 - 1 ---------- 2
---------- 1
---------- 1
_____ 1
_____ 1
_____ 4 _____ 7
_____ 2
_____ 1 1
[...] 1 America H$$v$ng 1 January February March April 1 May June July August 1 September October November December 1 brngng th$ wh$l$ t$ $ h$lt. Th$ c$$glt$$n s$nks l$$d$d nt th$ 1 $n c$mp$t$t$$n w$th th$ $n$rt dcy $f nvrsl cpt$l in America. 1 _h$$v$ng_ $f ffct, r$$trt$$ns vr $nd vr $g$$n, $ thr$w $f th$ 1 prhps crss v$r$$$s nds, n$ d$m$ns$$n$l$ty $t ll, bt $ c$rt$$n 1 t$n$$$sly h$$v$s th$ ln $r pl$n$ $r n-d$m$ns$$n$l bjct, stttr$d 1 ; feels he's losing it / the application - 1 - just along for the ride - want to walk into a wall of flesh - or at 1 << much confusion prevails >>

↑ Index

454. Brian Carpenter
traumatic teaching
Sat 21 Sep 1996

Howdy--

Speaking as a middleclass whiteguy undergrad just one year out of high school it seems to me that professors and students alike ought to acknowledge that they are prey to the same variables (which have been farily well documented in this thread). Judging from the input in this thread the effects seem quite similar.

Adaptation to each others' learning/teaching "styles" is a central matter of course. For my own part, my entire perspective on the classroom dynamic shifted for the better after one of my best high school teachers told me bluntly (after I'd had her classes): "I'm here to learn. Teaching is entirely secondary." Many of the students you find sitting in your classroom (especially those fresh out of HS of course) hold in their minds a degree of perceived teacher-apathy from their high-school experience. This naturally gets carried over and projected onto their professors way too often and in turn is translated into student-apathy. I remember quite well that high-school students will tend to read an exhausted & flustered teacher as an apathetic teacher; likewise will undergrads tend to read the mannerisms of peeved professorship as a sort of You-Are-Here-To-Take-Notes default teachingmethod. When the class deals with texts, things to be actively engaged, this kind of communicative block extracts out a whole lot of potential energy from those students who do in fact give-a-damn about the texts as much as the professor. Way too many of these problems arise out of that common human problem of misreading other peoples' signals.

For students who are less engaging out of a more entrenched apathy I have nothing to offer. Such seems the nature of the Beast of Olde whose name is General Education Requirement. As to being 18-22 and knowing everything, thats all the more reason for confrontation not only from the texts but from the professor! In my limited experience, it seems that classroom problems and reactions to texts such as those voiced in this thread are precisely those from which the teacher has more opportunity than usual to wring out a learning experience of particular quality for all involved. A classroomful of faces tepidly staring at you is understandably aggravating and difficult. Sitting amongst a classroomful of tepid stares and faces is also aggravating and difficult. Apathy expands exponentially. Seems to me that profs and students in tandem can most likely contain it so long as there's an understanding in the environment that problems that arise regarding content/style/whathaveyou can, ought, and will be dealt with through discussion of demographics (students', prof's, text's) as needed. This is, for the most part, a promoted way of saying "hear hear" to Joe Amato's comments on the matter:

> confrontation of any sort is not going to be all that meaningful unless students (and faculty) are willing to articulate where they're coming from
>
> it takes some amount of work to create a classroom in which there's enough trust and commitment to entertain such provocations publicly...

Takes some work indeed. Involving the students in the very process of creating said environment is a quicker, if not altogether more practical way of going about this. And I can think of no better instigator of this process than a text that pokes the reader in the, well.... wherever.

Apologies using this space to sound thoughtful sans any practical tips. Digressions happen. Classes start here on Tuesday, so I'll see how well I adapt to my profs and they to me. I trust we'll get along roaring well after a good sniffing.

Best,

Brian C

P.S. As to interest in reading lists, I am completing my first walk (or stroll as it were) through _Ulysses_--a book not to be finished. Thus ends my summer reading list. Bring on the syllabi!

""""""

on poetics you might have lying around the house. She suggests staying away from manuscripts of theory and criticism as generally they are too soft to make good dildoes.

For more info, backchannel Herb or me.

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

456. Hank Lazer
Re: reading retallack
Sat 21 Sep 1996

Steve--

There's a brief essay on Joan Retallack's work in my OPPOSING POETRIES (vol 2 - "Partial to Error: Joan Retallack's _Errata 5uite_"). I believe that Marjorie Perloff has written on AFTERRIMAGES, but I can't remember where the essay appeared--perhaps Sulfur?

Hank Lazer

↑ Index

457. Joe Amato
Re: teaching traumas...
Sat 21 Sep 1996

---

dean, yeah---this is similar to what maria d. and others were saying some time ago... if you bring into a classroom some presumably difficult work, and you point out simply that it's not the sort of work that's supposed to be understood just like that, message-in-a-bottle-style---that it's work that requires a critical engagement, yes, even an unorthodox sense of things poetic, but that anybody can actively engage so---why then it's relatively easy to get class participants to begin to talk openly about what they make of the work... but the issue here, as you suggest, turns less on what you say about the work than on what they say... ergo the need to develop fora in which they're primarily the ones who are doing the saying, in which you offer your guidance/feedback etc. only as part of a larger class effort...

in this regard, i've also found online discussion lists useful (if you have the resources on your campus, have your computer folks set up a provisional list for your class)... online lists foster distances and proximities of a different order, depending on the individual... i've found it useful, recently, to put my syllabus up on the web (for a business com course, of all things), and to create link(s)

within my syllabus to appropriate web sites (as a start---each person has got to get in the habit of seeking out independently as well)... and as i posted some time ago, i've also required monthly electronic journals, based on the results of web searching and internet experience...

naturally there are issues here having to do with class level (grad, undergrad) and major (there are no english majors on my campus)... in a few cases, when a class member really gets into a specific author and generates something provocative, i've even put that person in contact (generally online) with the poet or writer in question... both ron silliman on this list, and michael joyce, have generously responded directly to some of my students... i wish i could use this latter strategy even more frequently, but of course this turns on how much time writers like ron or michael have to help me out with my job!...

anyway, just some thoughts... i think the key issue here is to think through the varying qualities of the student body (perhaps, as some have indicated, racist sexist etc. to varying degrees, but also inquisitive supportive etc. too) in terms of instructional authority and responsibility---which is to say, again, that we need as instructors to consider our own complicity in these various institutional evils, as brian c. indicates, and how best to 'get at' same given the full-range of educational apparatus we have available to us... when a dozen folks take to exploring in detail even the formal qualities of text, as many of you know, it becomes an exercise in negotiating conflicting values...

best,

joe

↑ Index

458. Alan Sondheim
Jennifer by Jennifer
Sat 21 Sep 1996

2.8

Jennifer

I will put a flower on my head
And I will get into my bed
And I will be dead

I will lead me to the slaughter
Up from the attic rafter
Down to the cleansing water

Lost I will never be Nor kissed slavishly
Nor sung eternally

For I will put a rose upon my face
And I will lie down in my lace
And I will leave you in this place

Not for nothing, calls in winter
Birds in summer, called hereafter

↑ Index

459. Dean Taciuch
Re: teaching traumas...
Sat 21 Sep 1996

I use email lists for all of my courses--students here are automatically given an email account, although many never bother to access it. I also have set up web pages for all of my courses, with syllabi and resource links (including, for my poetry courses, a link to EPC and so to this very discussion). The problem is how to get the students to use these resources. There are Internet connected computers all over the campus in the computer labs, the dorms have ethernet connections, and dial in access from off campus is free (though that only gives access to email).

Any way, looks like we have bigger problems here at GMU. Check out my next post. . .

dean

↑ Index

460. Dean Taciuch
Classroom (?) trauma
Sat 21 Sep 1996

I'm forwarding a message that just came through the faculty list here at GMU. This illustrates that the problems of racism, sexism, etc that we've been discussing are not limited to the classroom.

> Begin forwarded message
>
> The University Board of Visitors has put a freeze on funding for the slated gay and lesbian resource center here on campus because, as they say, homosexuality is illegal in the state of Virginia. This is, of course, incorrect. Sodomy is illegal (which means, in this state, > anything but the missionary position with your married partner), but homosexuality is not. The center exists on paper, someone has been offered the job, etc., but now there's no money for it because of this. The person that, supposedly, is now in charge of the Board of Visitors' committee on the issue is EDWIN MEESE, the rabid ex-Attorney General to Ronald Reagan. No other center on campus has ever had to answer to the Board of Visitors. More forthcoming on this issue as more info. comes in, but there is a Pride Alliance meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 1st when this issue will be discussed, and there is another Board of Visitors meeting on November 20th where this issue will be discussed.

>
> Please, at this time, just spread the word about this. The Board of Visitors expects us all to just shut up and take it, so spreading information is the first step. Tell you students and colleagues.

dean

↑ Index

461. Judy Roitman
Re: teaching traumas...
Sat 21 Sep 1996

Ah, it ain't only in lit/writing classes. When I do the requisite 2 minutes on woman/so-called minorities/other cultures and math in a class for future high school math teachers, inevitably a bunch of students gets violently upset, accusing me of favoring women -- it's even been mentioned to the associate chair. Another bunch tells me they are incredibly grateful...

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

462. Kevin Killian
SPT: Moriarity/Tu
Sat 21 Sep 1996

Small Press Traffic presents

Laura Moriarty
Hung Tu

Friday, September 27, 7:30 p.m.

New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, SF
$5

Laura Moriarty (who I'm sure needs to introduction to this group) is the author of Symetry (Avec), like roads (Kelsey St.), and Rondeaux (Roof). She is the director of the American Poetry Archives at San Francisco State.

Hung Tu has been published in Situation, Mirage, and Tense Present (Incommunicato Press). His chapbook A Great Ravine is forthcoming from Parentheses Press. He's one of the most exciting young poets to come out of the poetry renaissance that's boiling in San Francisco.

↑ Index

463. Kevin Killian
SPT: Moriarity/Tu
Sat 21 Sep 1996

> Laura Moriarty (who I'm sure needs to introduction to this group)

That should read: needs NO introduction (and you could put a "whom" in there as well).

↑ Index

464. Oren Izenberg
Re: poetry and play
Sat 21 Sep 1996

Poetry and play: see a terrific book of what is essentially cultural anthropology called The Singing Game by Ione and Peter Opie. It documents origins and variants of, cross-cultural influences on, etc. children's games like "London Bridge".

↑ Index

465. Pete Landers
Re: poetry and play
Sat 21 Sep 1996

Gary Roberts wrote:
>
> I'm putting together a course on play, games, and lit, and am looking for > recommendations-- I've got fictions and theater covered, but the poetry side > of the experience needs help. Stein and Cage are in the running, but other > suggestions would be appreciated. Silly or serious poems/poets/poetics > are welcome.

> Thanks,
> Gary Roberts

Most replies have recommended reading. Here are some games:

Exquisite corpse is always fun to play. Each student writes one line as the poem is passed around the room.

There is another game in which people write several of their favorite words then compose a poem from that list.

Tami Regula and I have been playing with homophonic translation as a means to discovering the sound of Sappho. After much brain sweat we came up with this line:

Aster iceman, i'm fickle insulation for Asteres men amphi kalan selannan

See the homophonic translation thread from a few weeks ago. This was fun. We were fascinated by Zukofsky's Catullus. Hope this helps.

Pete Landers
[redacted]

↑ Index

466. Joe Amato
Re: teaching traumas...
Sat 21 Sep 1996

---

dean, so meese is up to his tricks?... geezus... sorry to hear this...

yeah, this is not exactly a classroom issue, it speaks to the larger institutional crises in (attacks on) higher ed... which filter into the classroom, to be sure...

as to getting classes online and such: one way is simply to demand same, assuming all class participants have access (many institutions provide email accounts these days to all students)... i've made this a basic part of the course, and i allow folks the space to complain about it (if they like)... but complaints should at the very least be informed by first-hand experience... this becomes, like reading and writing or calculating, one of the givens of classroom structure... there will be disparities in access, in any case, but even those who resist initially are likely to appreciate the experience in the long haul on pragmatic grounds... a quick check at the beginning of the semester is to insist that each student contact you via email...

which is not to say that you won't have persistent problems... the electronic stuff is gonna enjoy the same sorts of absenteeisms as the flesh & blood venues...

joe

↑ Index

467. Gabrielle Welford
Judy Grahn
Sat 21 Sep 1996

I'm not sure where "Descent" is published. I was around when she was writing it around 1986 or so, around the same time as the play about Helen was put on in the Bay Area. gab

↑ Index

468. Gabrielle Welford
e-mail for-ums
Sat 21 Sep 1996

I'm completely stuck on e-mail conversations as a requirement for my students now. One funny thing is that the students sometimes still haven't learned each other's name to face recognition. But this makes it even easier for them to blab away on e-mail--for instance about how they just can't bring themselves to talk in class, how they hate the reading, and othre things like how they've experienced racism in their own lives. Of course, so many of the students here being non-white is a help on that score. Most students do eventually get on and say something. Others write in several times a week. And this semesterr, I have 3 students on the class list who've stayed on from last semester and wrote in without my suggesting it to introduce themselves. They've volunteered to be kind of peer mentors to the younger folk in my present class. Warms the cockles of me eart.

I've had less experience with racism here in Hawaii than on the mainland, and there it was anti-gay prejudice. A bigger problem here is the difficulty of relating to the contexts of, say, British Victoriana, anything that has frozen winter in it... gab

↑ Index

469. Tom Mandel
reading retallack
Sat 21 Sep 1996

I don't know what reviews of JR's work have been written, but I think of her work as operating in an area one might dub "play of the world," where play has the sense of play in a joint or fitting and simultaneously the linked meanings of fun and experimentation.

Joan Retallack invites the reader to hear inside a response to fact and event that frames them for questioning before they reach one's subjectivity with their constructed or ideological power. At the heart of her work is the freedom of the reader, freedom in an ethical and imaginative sense. To free the reader's imagination of the world, and in her mind (imho) this moves the readre to a deeper sense of the ethic of action and response.

The work owes to Cage its openness to just hear the phenomena of language and meaning as happening in and of the silence and noise that are their/our largest context. From a very different set of sources (the Marx brothers I think) comes Retallack's characteristic "read" of language events for their metaphysical humor.

Anyway, that's where I begin in my sense of JR's "take" ... but they are just some immediate thoughts.

****
Tom Mandel * 2927 Tilden St. NW
Washington DC 20008 * [redacted]
vox: [redacted] * fax [redacted]
****

↑ Index

470. George Bowering
Re: redux is a drug
Sat 21 Sep 1996

I just found this from p. 91 of the Sun&Moon edition of Gertrude Stein's _Mrs. Reynolds_:

"I suppose said he that a dildo could be a lightning conductor."

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

471. Julia Stein
Re: POETICS Digest - 19 Sep 1996 to 20 Sep 1996
Sat 21 Sep 1996

>____
>Daniel Bouchard said:
>In some recent reading a comment was made that the people (mostly white men) >with high school educations who feel disenfranchised and believe in >"reverse-racism" and are falling into the ranks of those spouting vicious >right-wing rhetoric of racial divisiveness and general assaults on poor people, >and are likely candidates for the so-called "militias," etc. were, three >generations ago the same people forming the rank and file of the CIO. The >conclusion (made in the article) was(IS) a disastrous failure on the part of >the Left (today), and an organizer's dream still waiting to happen.
>
>That's a lot of work. What do people think? And does poetry have a place in it?
>
>A: Poetry does have a place in it. Poetry can inform.
>
Yes, it does:
Poets and educators can organize poetry readings in solidarity with labor struggles. I organized one in support of the UNITE garment worker union campaign to end sweatshop conditions at Guess Inc. We all read about Kathy Lee Gifford as well as the Thai slaves making clothes in Los Angeles. We know that the clothing industry is largely sweatshop industry. Guess Inc. is one big sweatshop and firing workers who try to organize unions. The State of California did raids of Guess contractors and found out that their clothes are illegally sewn in people's homes, they don't pay minimum wage, they don't pay overtime pay, they falsify recrods. So I figured that this kind of stuff goes on as long as we all do nothing about it. Any kind of poetry can be read in such a reading; the reading helps educate people about Guess Inc. and gets people to boycott Guess.

And many poets and critics teach high school and college students--the ones who are targeted by Guess ads. Having a reading against Guess is another way to educate students that there are alternatives to the rampant materialism re clothes since they are bombarded with the ads.

And if you really want to strike a blow a Guess, help leaflet a Guess shop in a shopping mall. Yes, poetry does have a place in it.

Julia Stein

↑ Index

472. Christina Fairbank Chirot
citings/sightings
Sat 21 Sep 1996

(seems like this might tie a few threads together . . .):

I've loafed around the streets sometimes, leaned against a storefront with my hat pushed back and one boot hooked around the other--hell, you've probably seen me if you've ever been out this way--I've stood like that, nice and friendly and stupid, like I wouldn't piss if my pants were on fire. And all the time I'm laughing myself sick inside. Just watching the people . . .

"You mean," I said slowly, "do I feel persecuted? Well, as a matter of fact I do, doctor. But I never worry about it. I can't say that it doesn't bother me, but--" "Yes? Yes, Mr. Ford?" "Well, whenever it gets too bad, I just step out and kill a few people. I frig them to death with a barbed wire cob I have. After that I feel fine" . . . .

"Stick around," I said. "I'll show you that corncob. Or maybe you can show me something from your collection--those Japanese sex goods you used to flash around. What'd you do with that rubber phallus you had? The one you squirted into that high school kid's face? Didn't you have time to pack it when you jumped the Coast?" . . .

"Me, Doc? But I sleep well. I don't have headaches. I'm not worried a bit. The only thing that bothers me is that corncob wearing out."

--Jim Thompson, The Killer Inside Me
--dbc

↑ Index

473. Dean Taciuch
Re: Classroom (?) trauma
Sat 21 Sep 1996

Some clarifications I've just gotten here: Although Ed Meese certain;ly doesn't favor a gay resource center, he is not on the Committe for Student Affairs (which defunded the resource center). He is on the Board Of Visitors (chair of the Academic Affairs Committee!!). The motion to defund the center passed the entire BOV at something like 12-2. The new President of the University, wearing a "Diversity" button in support of the University's recent "Diversity" activities on campus, said nothing.

Yes, there's a big sign as you drive onto campus this week: "Mason Celebrates Diversity."

↑ Index

474. Rachel Loden
more flavours
Sun 22 Sep 1996

George Bowering wrote:
>
> I just found this from p. 91 of the Sun&Moon edition of Gertrude Stein's > _Mrs. Reynolds_:
>
> "I suppose said he that a dildo could be a lightning conductor."

Thomas Nashe (1567-1601) in "The Merry Ballad of Nash his Dildo":

> My little dildo shall supply your kind.
> A youth that is as light as leaves in wind:
> He bendeth not, nor foldeth any deal,
> But stands as stiff as he were made of steel.

But then again in a more Benedettian mode (from "A Litany in Time of Plague"):

> Adieu, farewell, earth's bliss;
> This world uncertain is;
> Fond are life's lustful joys;
> Death proves them all but toys;
> I am sick, I must die.
> Lord, have mercy on us!

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

475. Alan Sondheim
uunames
Sun 22 Sep 1996

All My Uunames

empowerment uslitho compuchat convolve commspec duck straylight nha gra falstaff wolfe tml metro-net hope siotech satan fighter candy deli itcnet1 rdb suzys jcainc parousia bwen sdale cliplaw tusrifny ravinomics jupiter lions-wing dcisun mollusk clotho alan neuromancer apteryx essert mel maddog clarchitects clmultimedia londonfischer dongrn netcomsv atari nova powermail tcbdata perun hpi genesis fesny argos yarcomm nams2 perform ramnet njn ubellent warwick jennifer clara echo mydog kc2yu upaya absol cius crayola honey sci goo brann dont waena jmtunix softport thetis sss-gw emc treebranch server galaxy999 sjluucp tiffany salinasgroup amnumsoc strand tminet pubmedia cyb stone cemetery brownstone bottomer wbsg oli uslynx nn teamdnet cyberia trangy chesler wa2oga major prcs lamp comstat orb bicny salty rbsis dolphy wildlife girisuci NYMSYS mtgany midnite eastnet icphost stam10 gbs homer

---

↑ Index

476. cris cheek
desire / and the 39 steps
Sun 22 Sep 1996

lunges towards the bell. duty-led and vanishing before an introduction could be gleened. convention riddled counter cultures replicating market priveleges of the branding mall. surprising how an exit could be so effected as to shame itself by so refusing.

↑ Index

477. Herb Levy
teaching traumas
Sun 22 Sep 1996

I haven't been following this thread very closely, but a book and magazine that MIGHT be useful in this context is Race Traitor edited by Noel Ignatiev and John Garvey. The book (published by Routledge) draws from the first five or six issues of the magazine. The address for the magazine is P O Box 603, Cambridge, MA 02140.

The focus is on the social construction of race, and abolishing, not racism, but the notion of a white race, with lots of first person accounts amidst the polemics.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

478. Jonathan Brannen
Re: POETICS Digest - 20 Sep 1996 to 21 Sep 1996
Sun 22 Sep 1996

I'll be in the Seattle area from Oct. 3 through Oct. 9 including forays to Portland and Vancouver. I'd be interested in meeting any subscribers to this list who live in those vacinities. Contact me back-channel <[redacted]>.

Jonathan Brannen

↑ Index

479. Christina Fairbank Chirot
New journal (fwd>
Sun 22 Sep 1996

Gender-related topics on anything involving sound and
"avant-garde" would be welcome.

==========
==========

WOMEN AND MUSIC: A JOURNAL OF GENDER AND CULTURE

International Alliance for Women in Music announces the inauguration of a new publication:

WOMEN AND MUSIC: A JOURNAL OF GENDER AND CULTURE is a journal of scholarship about women, music, and culture. Drawing on a wide range of disciplines and approaches, the refereed journal seeks to further the understanding of the relationships among gender, music, and culture, with special attention being given to the concerns of women.

Submissions of varying length are now being accepted for consideration in the inaugural issue. Expected publication of the first issue is winter, 1997. Author guidelines: Send three copies, two without identifying information and one with, and a disk copy to:

Women and Music/IAWM
Department of Music
B-144 Academic Center
The George Washington University
Washington, DC 20052

All submissions undergo a blind review process.

For further information, call the IAWM office at [redacted], or send a FAX [redacted], or an e-mail message to: Catherine Pickar at <[redacted]>.

WOMEN AND MUSIC: A JOURNAL OF GENDER AND CULTURE will be available to IAWM members as part of the current dues structure and to non-IAWM members for a fee.

Editorial Board Members:

Patricia Adkins-Chiti
Karen Ahlquist, Reviews Editor
Jane Bowers
Rae Linda Brown
Marcia Citron
Susan C. Cook
Suzanne Cusick
Joke Dame
Linda Dusman
Annegret Fauser
Sophie Fuller
Eve Meyer, ex-officio
Lydia Hamessley
Ellie M. Hisama
Freia Hoffman
Jeffrey Kallberg
Ellen Koskoff
Fred E. Maus
Susan McClary
Helen Metzelaar
Pirkko Moisala
Margaret Myers
Jann Pasler
Karen Pegley
Catherine J. Pickar, Editor
Eva Rieger
Julie Anne Sadie
Catherine Parsons Smith
Ruth A. Solie
Judy Tsou
Riita Valkeila
Amy Wajda, Editorial Assistant

Catherine J. Pickar
Associate Professor of Music
The George Washington University
Washington, DC, 20052

Phone: [redacted]
FAX: [redacted]

↑ Index

480. Tony Green
Re: Classroom (?) trauma
Sun 22 Sep 1996

Diversity, Dean, shouldn't that read Perversity?

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

481. Timothy Liu
Re: reading retallack
Sun 22 Sep 1996

I was just in the Cedar Rapids Barnes and Noble this morning and read a review of AFTERIMAGES in the latest issue of (all places) PRAIRIE SCHOONER, a rather nice layman's intro into Retallack's poetics . . .

Timothy Liu

↑ Index

482. Charles Bernstein
Helmut Heissenbuttel 1921-1996
Sun 22 Sep 1996

I note with sadness a small item in today's New York Times marking the death of Helmut Heissenbuttel, a marvelous German poet, whose work will be known to many on this list. The Times, via the AP, presents Heissenbuttel as a "leader in the post-Dada style of literature known as concrete poetry, an experimental form relying on puns and other wordplay, and not adhering to the rules of grammar and punctuation." What? Well ... not quite, not even nearly ...

I have three pamphlets of Heissenbuttel translated by Rosmaire Waldrop and published by Diana's BiMonthly (Tom Ahearn) in 1977: The Dilemma of Being High and Dry, Schematic Development of Tradition, and Novel. The middle of these ends like this:

"and thus those who aren't there any more have already taken along immeasurably much of what those who were there did and resolved in memory of those who weren't there immeasurably much is in possession of those who aren't there and it will always grow more and more and since they have it in their possession and this possession is ever growing one can in regard to those who aren't there speak of their memory of those who are there because those who aren't there any more were once there not being there is something that is thought of while being there and being there is living off the possession which those what aren't there are still accumulating in the name of those who aren't there any more and are more because those who aren't there anymore and are more have a name and we are there in their name."

*****
And to all those out in Poeticsville
Have a good 5757

↑ Index

483. Loss Glazier
Poetics back files
Sun 22 Sep 1996

There have been some topsy turvey times in the churning bowels of the computing center here perched on Niagara as the machines pose, mimic greek gods, and try on hair styles as flashy as those of the fifties. E-mail has sometimes been down for days. However, it is my good luck to be able to report that some stability has been reestablished - or at least it seems so at this ripe hour of the weekend. Let's hope this continues! So, on to the news. I wanted to let everyone know that I've just successfully updated the Poetics list back files. It requires a lot of cooperation between machines and so has been difficult to accomplish. But we should be up to date now - through the current month.
Loss --- Loss Glazier <[redacted]> http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

↑ Index

484. Joshua N Schuster
Ben Friedlander reading @ Upenn
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Hi all,

Below is an announcement for a new reading series sponsered by Upenn as funneled thru the Writers House. The program is for the most part run by undergraduates. The programming is inconsistent, optimistic, and not meant to be kept as a secret. No entrance fees; all are welcome. Another another Website with more info:

http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh

or call us at 215-573-WRIT

Next reading: Juliana Spahr and Chris Stroffolino, Oct. 7-8.

More later.

-Joshua Schuster

> THE WRITERS HOUSE--3805 Locust Walk***
>
> From Sept. 26-28
>
> presents (its first)
>
> Writer-In-Residency:
>
> BENJAMIN FRIEDLANDER
>
> Reading Poetry at 8pm, Thursday, Sept. 26
>
> ---
>
> AT 7pm, FRIDAY, SEPT. 27
>
> All Welcome to:
>
> "What to do with all this writing?"
> An Informal Panel on the Future Uses of a Literary History
>
> WITH: Ben Friedlander, Bob Perelman, Ron Silliman and Craig Saper

↑ Index

485. George Bowering

Re: more flavours

Mon 23 Sep 1996

> George Bowering wrote:
>
> I just found this from p. 91 of the Sun&Moon edition of Gertrude Stein's _Mrs. Reynolds_:
>
> "I suppose said he that a dildo could be a lightning conductor."

Rachel Loden added:
>
>Thomas Nashe (1567-1601) in "The Merry Ballad of Nash his Dildo":
>
> My little dildo shall supply your kind.
> A youth that is as light as leaves in wind:
> He bendeth not, nor foldeth any deal,
> But stands as stiff as he were made of steel.
>
>But then again in a more Benedettian mode (from "A Litany in Time of >Plague"):
>
> Adieu, farewell, earth's bliss;
> This world uncertain is;
> Fond are life's lustful joys;
> Death proves them all but toys;
> I am sick, I must die.
> Lord, have mercy on us!
>
Excellent!

Just this weekend I was looking at some early Emily Dickinson, and found this:

> Success is counted sweetest
> By those who ne'er succeed.
> To comprehend a dildo
> Requires sorest need.

As John Crowe Ransome used to say: "Amazing!"--shaking his head of locks the while.

George Bowering.

,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

486. Pierre Joris

Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel 1921-1996

Mon 23 Sep 1996

I recently translated a text by Heissenbuttel for the second volume of POEMS FOR THE MILLENNIUM, & would like to offer it here to honor him, preceded by the "commentary" Jerry Rothenberg & I composed for HH. -- Pierre

Helmut Heissenbuttel

Changes in language mean changes in the interpretation of the world. (H.H.)

Probably the most consistently experimental of the postwar Gruppe 47 writers, Heissenbüttel's prodigious & very varied output (poems, proses, essays, novels, & concrete & semantic experiments that prove him a true heir to Dada & Gertrude Stein) has been shockingly little translated into English to date. The final section of his theoretical text, Premises, reads in part: "My experience of a fundamental change arose from the situtation in which literary speech, exemplary speech, is forced to involve itself explicitly and specifically with the ground of language itself. When the traditional way of saying things failed, it became a matter of penetrating, so to say, into the interior of language to break it open and question it in its most hidden connections. The result of this cannot be a new language. It is a way of speaking that plays on its contrasts with traditional syntax and word usage. ... This essential indeterminacy factor never permits it to arrive at what one could call image or metaphor. Image and metaphor, as something clearly identifiable, would be part of that language which is withdrawing itself. The subjects, objects and predicates of the sentence drop away because the experience, which is being related, stands outside the subject-object relation. ... Connections are made not through systematic and logico-syntactical interweavings, but through connota-tions, through ambiguities -- outgrowths of a decayed syntax. Uncertainty, alienation, fumbling-in-the-dark (...) become thematically visible in the most wornout cliches and petrified slogans of culture, become thematic with the use of the little particle 'because.' None of this happens in an 'abstract' combination of 'linguistic matter,' as if instead of stains, drips and brush-slaps one now used words and sentence fragments. Nor is it some kind of 'encipherment.' It happens as a first time attempt to penetrate and get a foothold in a world that still seems to escape language. The boundary that is reached (...) is the boundary of that which is not yet sayable."

Helmut Heissenbuttel

from Textbook 10

Lesson 3

and then down into the black soul

1

to stylize to deny the body can be traced back to rationality in that context also the desirable body it has to be that that too part of the calculation the desirable a kind of lure

2

and then down into the black soul

3 what I want to say is I saw it the room naked as a hand I locked up the black princess the sheath of the angel naked I swear it from head to toe from anus to navel what I want to say is my mind rotates in images of beauty and desire my gaze embraces naked what I want to say is fruit of a suit flight of a bird

4

and then down into the black soul

5 enjoyably and deeply I lost myself in all the minglings and intertwinings of joy and pain from which emanate the spice of life and the flower of feelings a florid fire flowed through my veins what I dreamed was not just some kiss not just the wish to break the smarting stings of longing it is not for your lips alone that I long or for your eyes or for your body but it was a romantic confusion of all of these things a wondrous tangle of all the various remembrances and longings.

6

and then down into the black soul

7

the element wherein desire and its object exist indifferently against each other and autonomously is the alive Dasein the gratification of desire sublates this as far as it concerns its object but this is the element which gives both their separate reality rather a Being that is essentially a representation

8 and the down into the black soul

9 gratified lust does indeed carry the positive meaning to have become itself as objective self-consciousness but just as much the negative one namely to have sublated itself and by grasping its realization only in terms of that meaning its experience enters its consciousness as contradiction wherein the achieved reality of its singleness sees itself annihilated by the negative being and yet is the selfsame's devouring power

10

and then down into the black soul

11 in the silver moonlight alongside the ships and the large buildings and the canals which cut into and through the city's innermost core the forest of masts the lines of beams and cordage crossing a thousand fold all in moonlight strange and magic at one corner but a glance into a brightly lit room where a hundred diligent hands were sewing sails

12

and then down into the black soul

13 actually today everything is like yesterday except for the hallway where yesterday the handbag kept surprising me today I am surprised that the handbag is no longer there thus it would be more accurate to say that today everything is completely different from yesterday but then again not really either

translated by Pierre Joris

Page 000

↑ Index

487. Joe Amato
Re: teaching traumas
Mon 23 Sep 1996

herb, yes, i'm aware of _race traitor_, have used an excerpt in one of my classes a while back... most def. can be useful in focusing discussion, as you suggest...

joe

↑ Index

488. Rachel Loden
Re: more flavours
Mon 23 Sep 1996

> George Bowering wrote:
>
> I just found this from p. 91 of the Sun&Moon edition of Gertrude Stein's _Mrs. Reynolds_:

> "I suppose said he that a dildo could be a lightning conductor."
>
> Rachel Loden added:
>
> Thomas Nashe (1567-1601) in "The Merry Ballad of Nash his Dildo":
>
> My little dildo shall supply your kind.
> A youth that is as light as leaves in wind:
> He bendeth not, nor foldeth any deal,
> But stands as stiff as he were made of steel.
>
> But then again in a more Benedettian mode (from "A Litany in Time of Plague"):
>
> Adieu, farewell, earth's bliss;
> This world uncertain is;
> Fond are life's lustful joys;
> Death proves them all but toys;
> I am sick, I must die.
> Lord, have mercy on us!

George Bowering added:
> >
> Excellent!
>
> Just this weekend I was looking at some early Emily Dickinson, and found this:
>
> Success is counted sweetest
> By those who ne'er succeed.
> To comprehend a dildo
> Requires sorest need.
>
> As John Crowe Ransome used to say: "Amazing!"--shaking his head of > locks the while.

What a coincidence! I just stumbled over this nugget from Millay's "Ashes of Life":

Love has gone and left me and the days are all alike;
Eat I must, and sleep I will, -- and would that night were here!
But ah! -- to lie awake and hear the slow hours strike!
Would that it were day again! -- with twilight near! ...

Love has gone and left me, -- and the neighbors knock and borrow,
And life goes on forever like the gnawing of a mouse, --

And to-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow
There's this little dildo and this little house.

Who'd a thunk it?

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

489. Gary Roberts
poetry and play
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Thanks to various poetics players for your tips. In case this thread is not yet played out, I would appreciate help with a less important pedagogical problem: how to use, or criticize, or resist, the generalization that "all is play," which young adults seem to reach for when the topic of play is opened up for discussion. It seems to me that they learn this move from consumer cable-surfing culture, and I have a devil of a time talking about differences or discriminations after that totalization is laid on the table. Experimental poetry then becomes one option among all others, and in the classroom at least, new readers of it can dismiss it as boring or accept it as obvious; either way, its sparkle dims. This result also might come from the potential contradiction in studying play instead of playing it, and I do plan on putting play-time (exquisite corpse, etc.) into the scheme of things.

Often the questions arise: what is not play? not language play? Common answers: work, reality, instrumental language, absence of language. A related topic then pops up: play is an end-in-itself, rather than means to an end. But the implicit formalism of this claim will not do for radically playful language games which have explicit poetic or political aims.

How can an institutional setting generate fun and transformative study of literary play?

Gary Roberts

↑ Index

490. henry gould
Re: poetry and play
Mon 23 Sep 1996

On Mon, 23 Sep 1996 11:33:42 -0500 Gary Roberts said:
>
>Often the questions arise: what is not play? not language play? Common >answers: work, reality, instrumental language, absence of language. A related >topic then pops up: play is an end-in-itself, rather than means to an end. But >the implicit formalism of this claim will not do for radically playful language >games which have explicit poetic or political aims.

>
>How can an institutional setting generate fun and transformative study of >literary play?

Some vague off-the-cuffers on this one: Maybe one way would be to raise the issue, in a kind of general anthropological sense, of the border between work and play, serious and festive. Going back to when "miming" of divine beings was both serious & make-believe at the same time. Festivals as "sacred" times when cultures confront (and mystify) what they hold ultimately serious THROUGH play. Maybe the borderline where work and play are indistinguishable is analogous to "free" thinking, contemplation, creative invention. Peirce called it "musement" - "retroductive" free/ordered thinking about the origins or meaning of things undertaken by science & philosophy. How does that Frost poem go?

Only when ... are one,
And the work is play for mortal stakes,
Is the deed ever really done
For heaven and the future's sakes.

--and the irony of how such cultural "play" (various intellectual/political "power plays" throughout history) actually organizes a society's WORK on a vast scale...

Another way to think about it: the play of art and poetry is actually part of a larger, more general, and more dramatic conversation ongoing in a society about how to live. Example: Tolstoy in Russia. Play in the context of social evil becomes morality play. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

491. Herb Levy
Subtext readings fall '96
Mon 23 Sep 1996

For those of you making fall travel plans: please consider the following schedule of readings in Seattle's [redacted] series. I'm sure that one or more will appeal to anyone on the list.

Note that these readings can be part of package tours which may be customized for your personal interests: play the first piano that John Cage prepared; visit historic grunge rock clubs; drink beer where Theodore Roethke drank beer (and where students of students of students of Roethke still drink beer);

experience Seattle's fabled public art collection; see the site of the first outdoor espresso cart in North America; meet former Microsoft employees; see the Boeing hangar that's been called the largest building in the world; etc. Hoo-hah.

All performances scheduled to start at 7:30 pm unless otherwise noted:

October 17

Robert Mittenthal
Mary Margaret Sloan

November 9 (8:00 PM)

Original and classic sound poetry performed by Jaap Blonk

November 21

Roberta Olson
Aaron Shurin

December 19

Judith Roche
Sharon Thesen

The Speakeasy's on the NW corner of 2nd Avenue & Bell Street in Seattle's Belltown district. You know, catty corner from Wall of Sound, just below the 211 pool hall.

Writers on the list making travel plans for winter/spring '97, let us know if you'll be in the area: we may be able to schedule a reading. Respond by e-mail & I'll put you in touch with the (as-yet-to-be-determined) curators for 1997 readings.

See you all there.

& don't forget to check out the always growing Web site:
<http://www.speakeasy.org/subtext/>

Bests,

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

492. VIDAVER
Dildo Whaling
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Since Maria Damon requested more information about Dildo, NF, I offer the following selections from local web pages regarding the place & name.

"DILDO"
[http://www.stemnet.nf.ca/~jlafitte/school/Dildo1.html]

Dildo is a very historic place that was settled in the early 1800's by Reids, Prettys, Smiths, and the Newhooks. During the 1980's these names were still predominant names in the community. There are about 1,000 or more people currently living in Dildo. Dildo is located very close to good fishing grounds and the cod fishery has always been its primary basis of the economy until the "COD MORATORIUM", that was issued by John Crosby almost three years ago in the year 1992. In the late 1850's herring fishing began and then some years later a sawmill and a butter factory opened.These industries did not last long but in the later part of the Nineteenth Century Dildo was well-known for its squid, where Americans and Canadians came regularly to purchase bait.

In 1889 a permanent fisheries commission was set up for the Colony and a fishery was established on Dildo Island under the direction of A. Neilson, Superintendent of the Fisheries. This hatchery was one of the most modern and largest of its type in the world, and was designed to hatch between two million and three million cod in a season. A spawning pond was added in 1891 and a 5.5 m high windmill to provided the power to pump sea water into the pond. In 1891, 39,550,000 cod and 517, 353,000 lobsters were hatched. Two years later 201,435,000 cod and 517,353,000 lobster were propagated. Twenty people were employed in the hatchery but was discontinued because of the financial crisis of the Colony in the 1890's.

In the Twentieth Century dildo was a flourishing whaling centre until the ban on whaling in the early 1970's brought this industry to a close. The closing of the whaling industry also had an effect on the mink ranches because it depended on whale meat as a cheap source of food. In 1955 an entire mink farm was transported from Lester Island, near Vancouver, to Dildo but in the late 1960' rising feed prices forced the ranches to close. Dildo has changed a lot since the 1800's mainly of its economic growth. There are a lot more businesses and resources that have been created and up-dated since this time. There are about 3 stores in Dildo and there is another about to be open which will be a grocery store. There are about four or five people in Dildo who have started their own businesses which continues to grow.

Even though Dildo doesn't have a town council it still has many resources and regarded for its activities. Dildo has it's own swimming pool, an SUF lodge, and Lions centre. There is also baseball field but it's old and falling down so it is rarely used. Every year Dildo celebrates Canada Day and our own Traditional Dildo Day. These events are held on the swimming pool grounds where there are many activities, such as games, swimming, hot dogs, cold plates, and much more. As you can see Dildo is a very historic and traditional community.

"Dildo name"
[http://www.stemnet.nf.ca/~jlafitte/school/Dildo_nm.html]

It seems like the name of our fair town (Dildo) has attracted some attention albeit on the condescending type but hey attention is attention. I must appologize to all that came before that I hadn't addressed the very interesting point about our name sake and that it is not a town of perverts but rather a quaint, historic seaside town on the Eastern shores of Trinity Bay, Newfoundland with a proud seafaring history of fishing, whaling and sealing. Even though some of these ways of obtaining a livelihood are not the politically correct thing to do today noteably whaling and sealing and the government has put a moritorium on cod fishing... I don't mean to ramble. Back to the name Dildo. The history of the name varies depending on whom you speak to but basically it come down to three basic thoughts. .

1. It is thought the name came from a place in Portugal/Spain or
2. It is the name of an algonquin tree or
3. It comes from the shape of the headland that forms Dildo harbour.

Take your pick it doesn't realy matter. The name has survived the passage of time and while some of the faint of heart in the region want the name to be changed as they have done in other places. No more can one go to Gay Side or Hibbs Hole as they now have more politically correct names I hope our namesake will endure. If it was good enough for our fore fathers it shall be good enough for us.

...

An artcile on Whaling in South Dildo can be found at:
http://www.stemnet.nf.ca/~jlafitte/school/sdldohis.html

& A crude map of the Avalon Penninsula may be found at:
http://www.stemnet.nf.ca/~jlafitte/school/school.gif

Blaketown, however, seems to me to be the more interesting site south of Heart's Desire:
http://www.stemnet.nf.ca/~jlafitte/school/blakehis.html

& while there, poetics list members may be interested in the local words:
http://www.wordplay.com/tourism/folklore/newfwords.html

↑ Index

493. Julia Stein
Re: teaching traumas
Mon 23 Sep 1996

My major teaching trauma is last Novemeber I saw in the Los Angeles Times that Ethan Thomas Jr, one of my former African-Anmerican students, had just been killed at 22 years. He was also a journalist intern at the Los Angeles Times. He was in my class when I taught English in a community college in Southcentral Los Angeles. He was one of the best student/writers I ever had, was managing editor and journalist on the school newspaper. I remember when the class had to do autobiographical writing Ethan wrote about seeing cops stopping people in Southcentral. He wanted to report on it for the Los Angles Times, told the cop he was a Times reporter but the policeman wouldn't believe him. I had him read the story to the class and he was an exceptionally powerful reader of his own work. He also had a rare sensitivity to the plight of other people's suffering. AFter Ethan's death, the Times published another autobiographical piece of his in which he described his mother as being addicted to crack cocaine and asking him to buy crack for him her at a young age. He was trying to leave that life behind, make a new life for himself as a journalist, and was ready to transfer to a state university when he was killed.

I'm not at that school anymore. But I still have many young talent African-American male students this fall, and looking at them, I see Ethan Thomas Jr.

Julia Stein

↑ Index

494. Rod Smith
Re: poetry and play
Mon 23 Sep 1996

> How can an institutional setting generate fun and transformative study of literary play?

Of course this is nearly impossible. I don't know if you're teaching creative writing but one thing I found useful was to have students write in response to something other students had written. They could appropriate or not-- & they didn't mind at all when it became parody but more often it didn't, or certainly not just that. I was lucky enough to have a stylistic range among my students so this worked particularly well.

Just telling them "it's not all play" doesn't seem to me like it would work-- but letting them think it's all play if they want & quickly getting them to _focus_ that play might.

Another question would be can one really teach innovative writing in a context that doesn't involve doing it as well.

--Rod

↑ Index

495. Jordan Davis
Re: poetry and play
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Rod, That's a great idea, to make the students conscious of being inspired -- or maybe just energetically referring -- to something another student wrote. Could you or Gary say something about what you mean by 'inflexible' and 'flexible' settings, though? Jordan

↑ Index

496. Laura Moriarty
Re: poetry and play
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Gary -

Carla Harryman's book There Never Was A Rose Without A Thorn from City Lights ('95) is much about play and games and contains plays. It is a very enjoyable read and I would think a natural for your course.

Laura Moriarty

> I'm putting together a course on play, games, and lit, and am looking for recommendations-- I've got fictions and theater covered, but the poetry side of the experience needs help. Stein and Cage are in the running, but other suggestions would be appreciated. Silly or serious poems/poets/poetics are welcome.
> Thanks,
> Gary Roberts

↑ Index

497. DS
Re: Dildo Whaling
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Well paint me pink. All this talk about dildos just as i was trying to decipher a poem by a poet called Rough Trades... quite appropriate when you read the poem.... & you may note the connections with other stains of discussion.

DILDO OF THE FAT FACED MAN

None guards the moor where stands Receipt of scorn, doting on dildo
Mill as fool compose, compare, come Fair padre to your pleated score
Mind the ducks but not the door
Autumnal blooms have made us snore

By crickey good people, this sort of muck ought to be banned. I'll have to bring it to the attention of my local christian candidate, it is election year down this way too.

Yours sincerely,

Dan

↑ Index

498. Tony Green
5757
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Thanks for the greeting, Charles, and Well over the Fast.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

499. Tony Green
Re: Dildo Whaling
Mon 23 Sep 1996

In fairness, DS, send the Dildo Whaling poem to ALL political parties. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

500. maria damon
Re: teaching traumas
Mon 23 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> My major teaching trauma is last Novemeber I saw in the Los Angeles Times > that Ethan Thomas Jr, one of my former African-Anmerican students, had just > been killed at 22 years. He was also a journalist intern at the Los Angeles > Times. He was in my class when I taught English in a community college in > Southcentral Los Angeles. He was one of the best student/writers I ever > had, was managing editor and journalist on the school newspaper. I > remember when the class had to do autobiographical writing Ethan wrote > about seeing cops stopping people in Southcentral. He wanted to report on > it for the Los Angles Times, told the cop he was a Times reporter but the > policeman wouldn't believe him. I had him read the story to the class and > he was an exceptionally powerful reader of his own work. He also had a rare > sensitivity to the plight of other people's suffering. AFter Ethan's death, > the Times published another autobiographical piece of his in which he > described his mother as being addicted to crack cocaine and asking him to > buy crack for him her at a young age. He was trying to leave that life > behind, make a new life for himself as a journalist, and was ready to > transfer to a state university when he was killed.

>
> I'm not at that school anymore. But I still have many young talent > African-American male students this fall, and looking at them, I see Ethan > Thomas Jr.
>
> Julia Stein

thanks for the reality story. md

↑ Index

501. Joe Amato
Re: teaching traumas
Mon 23 Sep 1996

---

julia, yes, that's trauma alright... i've fortunately never had the experience, though i know teachers who have...

thanx for bringing that to light...

joe

↑ Index

502. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Blasphemy and the Avant-Garde (fwd
Mon 23 Sep 1996

Re the recent "alternative" and " avant-garde" threads-- (fwded with permission)
--dbc

Maintaining 'what you think it is' through the gateway of 'what it will become;' is the greatest art-lesson. The avant-garde is now sanctioned, economically expedient and pre-disposed to favor its own replicated hierarchy. Slashing all arts funding can be a positive purge. The a-g bureaucrats (curators, professors, gallerists) in fact still receive exorbitant funding and perhaps worse, perpetuate this self-serving dependence and cynically 'crowd out' and 'contextualize' most significant shifts. Truth is, the institutions of art today very rarely expedite meaningful events, support working artists or contribute to the communities that are forced to bankroll them. We've come to expect elitist/restrictive, officious posturing and collegial pandering all in the name-only of the avant-garde. Our art institutions at best deliver some social cache for the board of directors and are high-class dating services for patrons. More often than not Art education, rather than respecting and supporting working itinerant artists on a serious scale, merely spawns self-satisfied, tenured, mediocrity.

...

I attended The Saint John Coltrane Church recently where the (jazz) music and art inspire community and self-respect. The Minister plays sax and conch-shell and the house-band Ohnedaruth, along with whatever players have turned up in the congregation, churn out the rifts of John Coltrane. The bassist, Wanika King, would close her eyes and achieve the quiet focus to carry forth the rhythm and the punctuated gospel message from the Voices of Compassion choir. The life-sized icons of Saint John the Divine Sound Baptist that adorn the walls of this storefront church are created by Rev. Mark Dukes and adeptly incorporate a mannerist modeling that recalls stylized inner-city tags. Here there is hope.

- -

The Saint John Coltrane Memorial Human Outreach Programs
351 Divisadero Street, San Francisco, California 94117

...so therefore brotherhood is there, and I believe with brotherhood there would be no poverty... And also with brotherhood, there would be no war...
-Saint John Will-I-Am Coltrane

Love Inspired
Providing Works of Charity Committed to Serving the Needs of the People

Free Hot Meals -- 27 years of continuous service, recognized by the California State Legislature. Free hot vegetarian meals. No discrimination as to race, creed, religious affiliation. Participants served as honored guests. Including international travellers.

Free Clothing -- Infant, children's program. Teen and single parents. Poor families, hospitals, shelters. Periodic distribution of coats, quilts and blankets.

Temporary Shelter -- Limited space available for teen parents, women with children, orphans, men.

Free Music Classes -- Music theory and practice. Music appreciation skills clinics. Listening clinics - cd's, tapes, records. Instruments given by scholarship.

Computer and Graphics Classes -- Macintosh Basic Skills Classes

CPR and First Aid Classes -- Basic life support for infants, children and adults. Certification from the American Heart Association. Taught by Registered Nurses.

Saint John Coltrane Community Garden -- Providing a peaceful and meditative meeting and prayer space. Voluntary service of the community with gardening and upkeep.

ftp://users.aol.com/McGrafx/Coltrane/index.html
http://www.teleport.com/~bbrace/coltrane.html

—

↑ Index

503. bitmap addressing

Re: Blasphemy and the Avant-Garde (fwd

Tue 24 Sep 1996

"merely spawns self-satisfied, tenured, mediocrity."

hhhhhhhmmmmpppth! I resemble that remark said the spider to the fly.

↑ Index

504. George Bowering

Re: more flavours

Tue 24 Sep 1996

> George Bowering wrote:
>
> I just found this from p. 91 of the Sun&Moon edition of Gertrude Stein's _Mrs. Reynolds_:
>
> "I suppose said he that a dildo could be a lightning conductor."
>
> Rachel Loden added:
>
> Thomas Nashe (1567-1601) in "The Merry Ballad of Nash his Dildo":
>
> My little dildo shall supply your kind.
> A youth that is as light as leaves in wind:

> He bendeth not, nor foldeth any deal,
> But stands as stiff as he were made of steel.
>
> But then again in a more Benedettian mode (from "A Litany in Time of Plague"):
>
> Adieu, farewell, earth's bliss;
> This world uncertain is;
> Fond are life's lustful joys;
> Death proves them all but toys;
> I am sick, I must die.
> Lord, have mercy on us!
>
> George Bowering added:
>
> Excellent!
>
> Just this weekend I was looking at some early Emily Dickinson, and found this:
>
> Success is counted sweetest
> By those who ne'er succeed.
> To comprehend a dildo
> Requires sorest need.
>
> As John Crowe Ransome used to say: "Amazing!"--shaking his head of locks the while.

Rachel replied:
>
>What a coincidence! I just stumbled over this nugget from Millay's
>"Ashes of Life":
>
> Love has gone and left me and the days are all alike;
> Eat I must, and sleep I will, -- and would that night were here!
> But ah! -- to lie awake and hear the slow hours strike!
> Would that it were day again! -- with twilight near! ...
>
> Love has gone and left me, -- and the neighbors knock and borrow,
> And life goes on forever like the gnawing of a mouse, --
> And to-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow
> There's this little dildo and this little house.
>
>Who'd a thunk it?

I cant believe this! Late last night, unable to sleep, I stood beside the bedroom window, and by the light of the stars read this curious piece called "Art" by Herman Melville. It suggests, I am afraid a cynicism one hopes not to meet often:

> In placid hours well-pleased we dream
> Of many a brave unbodied scheme.
> But form to lend, pulsed life create,
> What unlike things must meet and mate:
> A flame to melt--a wind to freeze;
> Sad patience--joyous energies;
> Humility--yet pride and scorn;
> Instinct and study; love and hate;
> Audacity--reverence. These must mate,
> And fuse with Jacob's mystic heart,
> To wrestle with this dildo--Art.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

505. George Bowering
Re: teaching traumas
Tue 24 Sep 1996

> In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group writes:
> My major teaching trauma is last Novemeber I saw in the Los Angeles Times that Ethan Thomas Jr, one of my former African-Anmerican students, had just been killed at 22 years. He was also a journalist intern at the Los Angeles Times. He was in my class when I taught English in a community college in Southcentral Los Angeles. He was one of the best student/writers I ever had, was managing editor and journalist on the school newspaper. I remember when the class had to do autobiographical writing Ethan wrote about seeing cops stopping people in Southcentral. He wanted to report on it for the Los Angles Times, told the cop he was a Times reporter but the policeman wouldn't believe him. I had him read the story to the class and he was an exceptionally powerful reader of his own work. He also had a rare sensitivity to the plight of other people's suffering. AFter Ethan's death, the Times published another autobiographical piece of his in which he described his mother as being addicted to crack cocaine and asking him to > buy crack for him her at a young age. He was trying to leave that life behind, make a new life for himself as a journalist, and was ready to transfer to a state university when he was killed.

>
> I'm not at that school anymore. But I still have many young talent African-American male students this fall, and looking at them, I see Ethan Thomas Jr.
>
> Julia Stein
>
> thanks for the reality story. md

Yes. That story makes our problems up here seem pretty manageable. I dont know how a person can bear such a thing.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

506. DS

Re: more flavours

Tue 24 Sep 1996

Melville is well known for such themes. Think on Me & My Chimney, The Lightening Rod Man & not least his poem 'Suggested by the Ruins of a Mountain-Temple in Arcadia, One built by the Architect of the Parthenon'

Dan

> I cant believe this! Late last night, unable to sleep, I stood beside the bedroom window, and by the light of the stars read this curious piece called "Art" by Herman Melville. It suggests, I am afraid a cynicism one hopes not to meet often:
>
> > In placid hours well-pleased we dream
> > Of many a brave unbodied scheme.
> > But form to lend, pulsed life create,
> > What unlike things must meet and mate:
> > A flame to melt--a wind to freeze;
> > Sad patience--joyous energies;
> > Humility--yet pride and scorn;

> Instinct and study; love and hate;
> Audacity--reverence. These must mate,
> And fuse with Jacob's mystic heart,
> To wrestle with this dildo--Art.

George Bowering.
,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

507. Peter Quartermain

My long silence

Tue 24 Sep 1996

Dear all:

Sorry to abuse the list with this mass mailout, but it's the only more or less effortless way i can find to do this. Those of you to whom this does not apply will please ignore it, but I want to ask all those I've neglected over the last couple of weeks with my curnudgeonly silence not to take it personally. I've been very ill and am now SLOWLY recovering. Now I'm back home I can receive e-mail once again (and read the 14 day backlog!) but it will take me a while (2 weeks I'd guess) to get all those individual replies convalescently off, and some are obviously more urgent than others. I SHALL get all letters of recommendation in on on time; I'll be a bit slower with diss. chapters and the like. Please forgive my slowness, and hang in there. Thanks.

Peter

+ + + +

+ +

↑ Index

508. Bill Luoma
Reading
Tue 24 Sep 1996

Nick Flynn & Major Jackson will read Sunday Sept 29th at the Fall cafe in Brooklyn
at 3:00pm
(307 Smith street near president).

for info on the series, call [redacted]

↑ Index

509. Rachel Loden
Re: more flavours
Tue 24 Sep 1996

George Bowering wrote:

> I cant believe this! Late last night, unable to sleep, I stood beside the bedroom window, and by the light of the stars read this curious piece called "Art" by Herman Melville. It suggests, I am afraid a cynicism one hopes not to meet often:
>
> > In placid hours well-pleased we dream
> > Of many a brave unbodied scheme.
> > But form to lend, pulsed life create,
> > What unlike things must meet and mate:
> > A flame to melt--a wind to freeze;
> > Sad patience--joyous energies;
> > Humility--yet pride and scorn;
> > Instinct and study; love and hate;
> > Audacity--reverence. These must mate,
> > And fuse with Jacob's mystic heart,
> > To wrestle with this dildo--Art.

Curiouser and curiouser. I do feel I must have entered a parallel universe. This morning in the garden, reading Miss Moore, I came upon a poem both utterly familiar and strangely changed--although I cannot put my finger on exactly where:

> If I, like Solomon, . . . > could have my wish--

my wish . . . O to be a dildo, a symbol of the power of Heaven--of silkworm size or immense; at times invisible.
Felicitous lingam!

Surely this throws a new and somewhat disturbing light on the poet's well-known love for the artifact. Or--the other possibility--I am losing my mind.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

510. maria damon
Re: My long silence
Tue 24 Sep 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
discussion group writes:
> Dear all:
>
> Sorry to abuse the list with this mass mailout, but it's the only more or > less effortless way i can find to do this. Those of you to whom this does > not apply will please ignore it, but I want to ask all those I've neglected > over the last couple of weeks with my curnudgeonly silence not to take it > personally. I've been very ill and am now SLOWLY recovering. Now I'm back > home I can receive e-mail once again (and read the 14 day backlog!) but it > will take me a while (2 weeks I'd guess) to get all those individual replies > convalescently off, and some are obviously more urgent than others. I SHALL > get all letters of recommendation in on on time; I'll be a bit slower with > diss. chapters and the like. Please forgive my slowness, and hang in there.
> Thanks.
>
> Peter

peter, sorry you've been ill, and while i am not awaiting a letter of rec or a personal note, i wish you a gentle and speedy transition back to health. take good care, rest a lot and drink plenty of water...bests, maria d

↑ Index

511. Jordan Davis
Poetry City Oct 10 - Bouchard / Mills
Tue 24 Sep 1996

Poetry City's second season begins on Thursday October 10, 7 pm. Dan Bouchard, "August" author and Mass Ave editor, will be reading with David Mills, poet, playwright, actor and teacher. Poetry City (like Brigadoon) exists only once a week in the offices of Teachers & Writers Collaborative, 5 Union Square West, New York NY 10003. Admission is free. There will be wine, food and music. Reading at Poetry City on Friday October 18 at 7 pm will be Tim Davis and Juliana Spahr. Poetry City is hosted by Jordan Davis and Anna Malmude, and is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts. This announcement to you was brought by the trope 'epistrophe.'

↑ Index

512. Henry Gould
RI reading
Tue 24 Sep 1996

Nancy Donegan & Steve Oberberg will read at Native Gallery on Fri. October 4th at 8 pm. Gallery opening for October exhibit 6-8 pm. Free/pass-the-hat.

Native Gallery, 387 Charles St, Providence. Call [redacted] for directions (or backchannel to me). Sponsored by the Poetry Mission.

↑ Index

513. Joseph Conte
Dictionary of Literary Biography
Tue 24 Sep 1996

I thought I would take the opportunity to promote a recently-published volume that is of general interest to members of the Poetics list:

Dictionary of Literary Biography 165: American Poets Since World War II, ed. Joseph Conte (Detroit: Gale Research Press, 1996), 377 pp.

The volume contains several new essays on poets--and by contributors--who are important to all of us, including:

Roger Gilbert on A. R. Ammons Anne Dewey on Denise Levertov Tom Gardner on John Ashbery Peter Baker on Bernadette Mayer Miriam Nichols on Robin Blaser W. Spiegelman on James Merrill John Ernest on William Bronk Jeff Peterson on George Oppen F. J. Griffin on Gwen Brooks Linda Hamalian on K. Rexroth David Landrey on Hayden Carruth Phoebe Pettingell on S. Sandy Juliana Spahr on Lyn Hejinian A. J. Sabatini on Armand Schwerner Burt Kimmelman on Michael Heller Kevin McGuirk on Gary Snyder Patrick Meanor on Robert Kelly James McCorkle on Charles Wright Ruth Hsu on Li-Young Lee Mark Scroggins on Louis Zukofsky

The essays are rather thorough (5000-15,000 words) with primary and secondary bibliographies and _photo illustrations_. Easily photocopiable on 8 1/2 x 11 in. paper!

The _DLB_ series is generally found in the reference collection of most university, college, and (larger) public libraries. Because of the cost per volume (about $120) I'm not promoting individual sales (I don't make any royalties on this project anyway). But I think you might want to have a look at several of the terrific essays in the book the next time you're in your local library.

A second volume has already been sent to the publisher with an additional 25 essays and should be in print within a month or two.

Joseph Conte

↑ Index

514. Jean Crown
Conference on Modernism and the Orient
Tue 24 Sep 1996

Here is a conference announcement that may be of interest to some members of the Poetics List. --Kathy Crown

>>
>>
>> A CONFERENCE ON MODERNISM AND THE ORIENT IN CONJUNCTION
>>
>> WITH THE EXHIBITION
>>
>> PETALS ON A WET BLACK BOUGH: MODERNISM AND THE ORIENT
>>
>> YALE UNIVERSITY, OCTOBER 18-19, 1996
>>
>> American Modernist writers discovered the Far East at the turn of >>the Twentieth Century, just as they prepared for their careers. The best >>known instance was Ezra Pound's receipt of Ernest Fenollosa's notes on >>Chinese poetry and Japanese Noh drama in the autumn of 1913. Pound's >>interest inspired his colleagues to follow suit while Chinese history >>and poetry were to mark his life work.
>> But the story of the American writers' readiness to examine the >>Far East lies in earlier American experience, from the opening of Japan >>by Commodore Perry in 1853 to the publication of Pound's famous >>pre-Fenollosa haiku in POETRY in April, 1913:
>>
>> IN A STATION OF THE METRO

>>
>> The apparition of these faces in the crowd;
>> Petals on a wet black bough.
>>
>>Through travel, literature, philosophy, education, religion, and the >>fine and decorative arts, Americans involved themselves in the East, >>particularly China and Japan. Bayard Taylor, the most widely read >>journalist of his time, accompanied Perry and published his impressions >>of the voyage; he lectured about his experiences in nearly 100 American >>cities and towns. When the first Japanese delegation came to New York, >>Walt Whitman watched their broadway parade, and his poem about it >>appeared in the NEW YORK TIMES for June 27, 1860. In 1876, the >>Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia featured a Japanese Pavilion where >>Americans observed objects crafted with unseen beauty; the next year, >>President Grant met with the Prince Regent of China and the Emperor of >>Japan, a step hitherto unimaginable, and his trip electrified Americans.
>>Percival Lowell, John La Farge, and Henry Adams traveled to Japan to >>observe customs, nature, and art in the 1880s.Meanwhile, Chinese and >>Japanese themes inundated fiction and the theater, with THE MIKADO and >>MADAMA Butterfly rising to immense popularity. Influence by Lowell's THE >>SOUL OF JAPAN, Lafcadio Hearn moved to Japan and his books on local life >>became best-sellers in the States. Stirred by these events, Leo Stein, >>later a collector of Japanese art, and Hutchins Hapgood, a journalist >>who helped to found the Provincetown Players, were the first of the >>Modernist generation to travel to Japan and bring their experiences home >>to Gertrude Stein and Eugene O'Neill.
>> After Harvard, Ernest Fenollosa taught philosophy at the >>Imperial University in Tokyo and later established himself as an >>authority on Japanese art; he formed the great collections of the Museum >>of Fine Arts, Boston, and the Freer Gallery. His legacy of Chinese >>poetry and Japanese Noh drama, unpublished at his death, received >>Pound's best attention and survives today. The other American >>modernists, H.D., Wallace Stevens, Williams Carlos Williams, Amy Lowell, >>E. E. Cummings, Marianne Moore, Stein and O'Neill among them, made >>serious and largely unobserved use of Japanese and Chinese art and >>literature, both in response to Pound's influence and because of their >>own meetings with Eastern art, literature, and philosophy. These >>influences and responses will be demonstrated in the exhibition by >>books, manuscripts, photographs, and works in other media.
>>
>> MODERNISM AND THE ORIENT: A CONFERENCE
>>

>>Friday, October 18: 5:30 pm, Sudler Hall (across from the Beinecke >>Library)
>> Opening lecture by Jonathan Spence, Sterling Professor of >>History,
>> Yale University: "Whose Modernism? The View from China"
>>
>> A reception and the opening of the exhibition at the Beinecke >>Library follow
>>
>>Saturday, October 19: 9:00-5:00, Whitney Humanities Center, 53 Wall >>Street
>>
>> Richard Taylor, University of Bayreuth, on Yeats
>> Zhaoming Qian, University of New Orleans, on Stevens and Chinese >>Art
>> Stephen Meyer, Washington University, on Stein
>> Patricia Willis, Yale University, on pre-Modernist Orientalism >> Mary Paterson Cheadle, Seattle, Washington, on Pound and >>Confucius
>> Jennifer Greeson, Yale University, on John Gould Fletcher
>>
>>Co-sponsored by the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library and the >>Whitney Humanities Center. The conference is free and open to the >>public. A complementary buffet lunch will be served.
>>
>>Please contact: Patricia C. Willis [redacted]
>>Fax: [redacted]
>>Email; [redacted]
>>Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library
>>121 Wall Street
>>Yale University
>>New Haven CT 06520-8240
>>

--

↑ Index

515. Jeffrey W. Timmons
Re: reading retallack (fwd)
Tue 24 Sep 1996

---

steve: re retallack

i dont get it either. though im tempted to say that its a trick of the eye. its certainly a challenge though isnt it? and those longish sections with what looks like the space of two pages being used across the bottom third of the page? does one read across the two pages or one then the other left to right top to bottom. i also believe theres actually another books called afterimages . . . but the author escapes me.

jeffrey timmons

↑ Index

516. Jeffrey W. Timmons
Re: teaching traumas... (fwd)
Tue 24 Sep 1996

---

in terms of teaching traumas . . . ive dealt with "reverse racism" and associated phenomena as well. but rather than stories from the front i wanted to offer somewhat apropos joe amatos post that anytime one foregrounds the various positions from which we confront texts such differences create (productive) tension: in the sense that reading can no longer be a unmediated experience. foregrounding issues like race class gender is creating a theory of reading that asks students to reflect self-consciously on their own ways of reading/seeing. and in a writing course reflection on such processes is good. also: in a recent critical inquiry article on white liberal guilt the writer made the claim that theory induces guilt: precisely because of its self-reflexive nature.

jeffrey timmons

↑ Index

517. Steve Shoemaker
Re: reading retallack (fwd)
Tue 24 Sep 1996

Jeff,

Well, i hadn't "gotten" it, literally, in that i hadn't even obtained a copy of AFTERRIMAGES until a few days after my original post. This isn't meant to imply that i don't find the reading difficult. Now that i have the book and have made a start, I do. But i'm also enjoying it quite a bit as well, finding, among other things, much humor. I've only gotten thru the first section so far, so haven't reached the part you're talking about below. So far i like the effect of the bifurcated page, and find myself thinking (in this first section) of the bottom of the page as an after(r)image of the top part, a kind of dis/integration of what has gone before that is also a strongly visual re/composition. I like the way the book drives you to attend to pagespace. Much of the meaning-making i find myself engaged in seems to work on architectural principles, as in "text breaks into architecture of page" . . .

steve

And many thanks to those other who have replied to my query.

On Tue, 24 Sep 1996, Jeffrey W. Timmons wrote:

> steve: re retallack
>
> i dont get it either. though im tempted to say that its a trick of the eye. its certainly a challenge though isnt it? and those longish sections with what looks like the space of two pages being used across the bottom third of the page? does one read across the two pages or one then the other left to right top to bottom. i also believe theres actually another books called afterimages . . . but the author escapes me.
>
> jeffrey timmons

Steve Shoemaker

↑ Index

518. Jeffrey W. Timmons
Re: reading retallack (fwd)
Tue 24 Sep 1996

---

steve:

and doesnt it require you to read much more say visually? doesnt it place the word as image in a different space require a more visual imagination? its been a while since ive read it but even "reading" doesnt seem to approximate what is appropriate to the poem. actually it reminds me of how visual artists are coming the other way to text (as opposed to writers coming to visual image/word). what sort of critical language is appropriate/conducive to such a image/text?

jeffrey

↑ Index

519. Robert Drake
Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel 1921-1996
Tue 24 Sep 1996

> I note with sadness a small item in today's New York Times marking the death of Helmut Heissenbuttel, a marvelous German poet, whose work will be known to many on this list.
>
> The Times, via the AP, presents Heissenbuttel as a "leader in the post-Dada style of literature known as concrete poetry, an experimental form > relying on puns and other wordplay, and not adhering to the rules of grammar and punctuation."

> What? Well ... not quite, not even nearly ...

Emmett Williams included several poems of Heissenbuttel's in his _Anthology of Concrete Poetry_, w/ the note: "Although Heissenbuttel does not consider himself a concrete poet, Daniel Spoerri inclueded this poem ["das sagbare sagen..."] and two others by H. in the first international anthology of concrete poetry in 1958."

blame it on th anthologists...

lbd

↑ Index

520. Robert Drake
forwarded mssg: position available
Tue 24 Sep 1996

---

i'm just passing this on: reply direct to Harry Polkinhorn at the address below...

Begin forwarded message:
From: [redacted] (Harry Polkinhorn)
To: [redacted]
Date: 96-09-21 11:38:30 EDT

Fiction Writing. Tenure-track position in fiction writing beginning Fall 1997 at associate professor rank for published writer with several books. MFA or Ph.D. preferred. Undergraduate and graduate instruction, including MFA workshops. Candidates with demonstrated interdisciplinary teaching and research interests and the ability to work well with students from diverse cultural backgrounds, as well as a commitment to teaching excellence and scholarship are strongly encouraged to apply. Send application to include cover letter, 20-page sample of writing, CV, and three letters of recommendation to Carey Wall, Chair, English & Comparative Literature, San Diego State University, 5500 Campanile Way, San Diego, CA 92182-8140, [redacted] FAX [redacted]. Review of applications will begin November 15, 1996, continuing until position is filled. SDSU is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity/Title IX employer and does not discriminate against persons on the basis of race, religion, national origin, sexual orientation, gender, marital status, age, or disability.

End forwarded message

↑ Index

521. Jordan Davis

Epistrophe, Anastrophe, Poetry City

Tue 24 Sep 1996

Around,
Turning around,
And blushing; around
Accidents strange flowers, around
The dictionaries near misses, around
And around -- hysteron proteron -- not around Epistrophe words are inverted, no, but around Anastrophe, Anna tells me, are they turned around.
Around Friday -- not Thursday -- Oct 18
Photographer, bicyclist, poet, Tim Davis,
Author of _The Analogy Guild_, and Juliana Spahr,
Of _Testimony_, _Nuclear_, and _Response_ the author,
She, late of the lower east side but now of Albany,
Of the genre-rewiring Chain (with Jena Osman) editor,
Will read their poetry. Really. And then, to skip
To the end, a week before Boxing Day Anselm Berrigan
And Max Winter will read, on the 19th, a Thursday, Preceded by two days by Ishmael Klein and Alice Notley.
The week before, on the twelfth, Ben Friedlander
And Samuel R. Delany will read their work, and after seven Days before that we will have heard Brenda Coultas
And Ange Mlinko. A week after Halloween, to jump
To the 7th of November, poets John Wieners and Eleni
Sikelianos will read, to be followed on the 14th
By Kevin Young and Janice Lowe. Thanksgiving comes
A week after Rochelle Kraut and Pam Grossman read,
And four weeks after Steve Carll arrives in New York,
Or, to be perverse about it, five weeks after Todd Colby and Nick Zedd do what they will. It is all Out of sequence now, but after Dan Bouchard and David Mills have read on October 10, I imagine things Will be clearer, will all seem to be connected and Yet in a sequence that makes as much sense as any other.

↑ Index

522. Anselm Hollo
Helmut Heissenbuttel
Wed 25 Sep 1996

--PART.BOUNDARY.0.7143.emout17.mail.aol.com.843629963

re: Helmut Heissenbuttel

--PART.BOUNDARY.0.7143.emout17.mail.aol.com.843629963

--PART.BOUNDARY.0.7143.emout17.mail.aol.com.843629963-ad
name="heissenb ttel";
X-Mac-Creator="4d574949";
X-Mac-Type="4d573244"

--PART.BOUNDARY.0.7143.emout17.mail.aol.com.843629963-ad
name="heissenb ttel";
X-Mac-Creator="4d574949";
X-Mac-Type="4d573244"

--PART.BOUNDARY.0.7143.emout17.mail.aol.com.843629963-ad--

--PART.BOUNDARY.0.7143.emout17.mail.aol.com.843629963--

↑ Index

523. Mark Wallace
National Congress Sample Press Release (fwd)
Wed 25 Sep 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 25 Sep 1996 01:14:57 -0400
From: Jonathan David White <[redacted]>
To: Multiple recipients of list GWENGL <[redacted]>
Subject: National Congress Sample Press Release

Interested in creating better working conditions for Graduate Teaching Assistants, part-time faculty, adjuncts, and non-tenure-track full-time faculty?

In Washington DC, December 27-28, concurrent with the MLA Convention, will be a National Congress of Part Time, Adjunct, GTA, and Non-Tenure Track faculty. We will be meeting to share information and ideas about solutions to the ongoing crisis in the working conditions of marginalized faculty like us. The National Congress will include workshops on specific issues of interest to graduate students, part-timers, and full-time faculty who are committed to justice in higher education, as well as plenary discussions on such issues as unionization of marginal faculty, how to make the AAUP more responsive to part-timer/GTA concerns, and ways to open the make the MLA more engaged in issues of justice in employment.

The National Congress is free and open to anyone genuinely interested in the employment conditions of part-time faculty, GTAs, non-tenure track faculty, and adjuncts.

More information, and a chance to get involved in planning the National Congress, is available by joining the NATLCONG listserv. Send a subscription message ("Subscribe NATLCONG yourname") to [redacted]. Other requests for information can be directed to [redacted].

I hope many of you, especially those already planning on attending the MLA this December, will participate in what looks to be a very important event in the development of a national strategy for justice in college/university teaching.

↑ Index

524. George Bowering
Re: My long silence
Wed 25 Sep 1996

Dear Peter

Just get better and better every day in every way.

Be heartened by the fact that I showed Peter Gizzi the photo of you and Blaser and me acting like right fools at the party for WCL

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

525. dutch chocolate chip
Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
Wed 25 Sep 1996

Anselm,

It is 99% of the time inappropriate to send attachments to a listserv. One reason being that it produces an inordinate load on the server. Attachments are handled differently than the mime type of your mail so it requires more cpu time to handle attachments. If this were done on a regular basis by all members of the list it has the ability to bring the poetry server to its knees which would result in none of us getting any mail. Not to mention the additional cost (read $) to our gracious hosts.

Another reason is that since we all have differing platforms and clients there is no way that you as the sender can be assured of anyone being able to read your missive (whereas with email you can). This is the case for me with your last post's attachment. I may have the ability to read your attachment if I find the correct client to read it. I am not going to do that as I don't have time. My guess is that most if not all of the recipients of the list do not have access to the correct client necessary to read your attachment.

For the sake of clarity it is always appropriate when sending to a listserv that you copy your text into a clipboard file and then paste it directly into an email message rather than send it as an attachment. When you do this you will enable 100% of the listserv clients to read your text (as all of our mail readers are fully mime compliant) and allow the listserv to operate at normal efficiency.

The best to you & hope you can resend your message to the list.

Sincerely,

Col. Eduard Lingum & his dancing slave girls.

> MIME-Version: 1.0
> Date: Wed, 25 Sep 1996 01:39:24 -0400
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> Sender: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> From: Anselm Hollo <[redacted]>
> Subject: Helmut Heissenbuttel
> To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS <[redacted]>
>
> Content-ID: <[redacted]>
> Content-type: text/plain
>
> re: Helmut Heissenbuttel
>
> Content-ID: <[redacted]>
> Content-type: application/applefile;
> name="heissenb ttel";
> X-Mac-Creator="4d574949";
> X-Mac-Type="4d573244"
>
> Attachment converted: Velimir:heissenbüttel (MW2D/MWII) (0001BE4F)

↑ Index

526. Peter Landers
Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
Wed 25 Sep 1996

I was very excited to get that email from Anselm! Wow!

But then I thought, what about the people who don't use the same software. And then I thought, and what about the folks who get the digest. I bet it doesn't look very good in the digest...

Anselm,

If you tell me to, I will repost that for you.

Pete Landers
[redacted]

↑ Index

527. Tony Green
Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
Wed 25 Sep 1996

HH text looked very strange on my software. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

528. Charles Smith
Re: Helmut Heissenbuttel (Anselm Hollo)
Wed 25 Sep 1996

Please repost this Anselm! I managed to open it, but the way it comes out on my screen, there are line breaks in the middle of words.

thanks,

charles

↑ Index

529. Steve Shoemaker
Re: reading retallack (fwd)
Wed 25 Sep 1996

Jeffrey--Yes, to what you say about visual imagination. The space created strikes me as somehow meditative as well (as it also does the anonymous blurber on the back cover). As for developing "critical language," tho, i'm afraid i'm not yet at that stage of reading. Still first blushing... steve

On Tue, 24 Sep 1996, Jeffrey W. Timmons wrote:

> steve:
>
> and doesnt it require you to read much more say visually? doesnt it place the word as image in a different space require a more visual imagination? its been a while since ive read it but even "reading" doesnt seem to approximate what is appropriate to the poem. actually it reminds me of how visual artists are coming the other way to text (as opposed to writers coming to visual image/word). what sort of critical language is appropriate/conducive to such a image/text?
>
> jeffrey

Steve Shoemaker

↑ Index

530. Rod Smith
new Perloff, Wallace, Out of Everywhere etc @ Bridge Street
Wed 25 Sep 1996

Some of the latest.

1. _Idoru_ by William Gibson, Putnam, $24.95. "They say the world will end when the combined weight of all the human nervous tissue on the planet reaches a specific figure."

2. _What is Situationism?: A Reader_ ed. Stewart Home, AK Press, $14.95. Contributors include Sadie Plant and Bob Black.

3. _Late July_ by Gretchen Johnsen, Edge, $3 (chapbook).
"your hieroglyph, my life."

4. _Emancipation(s)_ by Ernesto Laclau, Verso, $18.
"Why do Empty Signifiers Matter to Politics?" Laclau makes great use of Derrida in this book.

5. _The Muses_ by Jean-Luc Nancy, Stanford, $12.95. Given Hegel's "art is the sensible presentation of the Idea" Nancy asks "Why are there several arts and not just one?" He takes it back of course. Complex, interesting book.

6. _The Granite Pail: Selected Poems_ by Lorine Niedecker, ed. Cid Corman. Back in print in larger format. hoo rah!

7. _Out of Everywhere: linguistically innovative poetry by women in North America and the U.K., ed. with introduction by Maggie O'Sullivan, Reality

Street, $15. Contributors: Susan Howe, Joan Retallack, Tina Darragh, Paula Claire, Diane Ward, Carla Harryman, Lyn Hejinian, Melanie Neilson, Denise Riley, Rae Armantrout, Catriona Strang, Nicole Brossard, Wendy Mulford, Rosmarie Waldrop, Deanna Ferguson, Hannah Weiner, Carlyle Reedy, Geraldine Monk, Karen Mac Cormack, Kathleen Fraser, Lisa Robertson, Marjorie Welish, Barbara Guest, Grace Lake, Caroline Bergvall, Fiona Templeton, Fanny Howe, Bernadette Mayer, & Leslie Scalapino. "After. Word" by Wendy Mulford.

8. _Wittgenstein's Ladder: Poetic Language and the Strangeness of the Ordinary_ by Marjorie Perloff, U. Chicago, $27.95 hardcover. "Philosophy ought really to be written only as a form of poetry," wrote Wittgenstein -- in this book Perloff reads Wittgenstein relative to the work of Stein, Cage, Beckett, Kosuth, Bernhard, Bachmann, Hejinian, & others. It's strange, it's ordinary, it's useful.

9. _Dogs_ by Phyllis Rosenzweig, Edge, $4 (chapbook). No line or set of lines even obliquely characterizes this book. It is the detailed duration's continuance within interruption that makes this work for me.

10. _Sonnets of a Penny-a-Liner_ by Mark Wallace, prints by Lawley Paisley-Jones, Buck Downs Books, $9. "one runs out of details / to describe the subtle lacks" -- "will you give me a penny a line / for dreams that won't fit the news."

Poetics folks receive free shipping on orders of more than $20. Free shipping + 10% discount on orders of more than $30. There are two ways to order. 1. E-mail your order to [redacted] with your address & we will bill you with the books. or 2. via credit card-- you may call us at [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] w/ yr add, order, & card # & we will send a receipt with the books. We must charge some shipping for orders out of the US.

Bridge Street Books, 2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Wahsington, DC 20007.

↑ Index

531. Pam Brown

Re: new Perloff, Wallace, Out of Everywhere etc @ Bridge Street

Wed 25 Sep 1996

Dear Bridge Street Books -
Thanks for your prompt response - Could I order "Out of Everywhere" and "The Granite Pail" and "Late July" please....
My address for postal mail is

Pam Brown,
3 West End Lane,
ULTIMO.
NSW 2007
AUSTRALIA

And could you invoice me please.
Thanks
Pam Brown
>

↑ Index

532. Rod Smith
Re: new Perloff, Wallace, Out of Everywhere etc @ Bridge Street
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

oops, left off previous post: the Niedecker's publisher is Gnomon, the price is $14.50.

↑ Index

533. Anselm Hollo
Helmut, Here We Go Again
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Date: Tues, Sept 24, 1996
From: [redacted]
Subj: Helmut Heissenbuttel 1921-1996
To: [redacted]

[Apologetic Addendum, Wed 25 Sept 96: old ignorant fart that I am in this Cyberworld, & SO proud to have figured out, only recently, how to "attach files" to e-mail, I was completely unprepared for the disastrous result. Apologies to one & all. And, now I know how those mysterious cyber-zaum-texts come about which I have occasionally encountered even on this listserv. --AH]

Sad to hear of the end of HH's marvelous run, but very pleased to see Charles's and Pierre's posts on same. I was privileged to meet him once in his offices at the Suddeutscher Rundfunk (South German Broadcasting Corporation) in Stuttgart in the early Sixties, on a visit from London where I was working for the BBC and moonlighting as "Anton Hofman" writing radio features in German on, a.o., William Carlos Williams, Allen Ginsberg, Robert Creeley, Charles Olson, Gregory Corso for Heissenbuttel's literary radio program. One-armed like Blaise Cendrars (the left "left," as they say, on some dismal battlefield in 1942), tall, calm funny, and erudite, HH had (as he put it) "a lasting soft spot for the black banner of anarchy. My innermost conviction is anarcho-syndicalist. Never mind that I know it [=anarcho-syndicalism] can never be realized, but that is where my secret love lies." Rosmarie Waldrop's and Pierre Joris's translations are wonderful: HH is far from 'easy,' somewhere between Clark Coolidge and Finnegan's Wake on the translation meter. His "occasional poems, days of the dead [=elegies], landscapes 1965--1980," however, contain most of his overtly satirical and Catullan pieces, and I'd like to offer, here, my translations of the following two in his memory. He was a hero of mine.

OEDIPUS COMPLEX MADE IN GERMANY

Daddy has been ruling for about a thousand years
the Oedipus complex of the German people is called NSDAP after that we tried it with Grandpa but that was not a permanent solution now we just don't know who can advise us quiz masters wanted
who landed us in this stew Bild magazine wants to know Grandpa has been preserved in a glass coffin Daddy's representatives have their names erased as time goes by but have we forgotten Daddy
we're still doing better than in the Third Reich that is not a
    a permanent solution
do they have Daddies in Washington or Moscow too our ersatz Oedipus complex is called Pankow Grandpa o mein Papa or in Rome

Daddy's reign is extinct but bits of it still hang in the air it is the air of Berlin still that smell whose name was Josef what we demand is an end to Daddies and Granddads an end to Oedipus complexes
enlightened as we now are enlightened as we now are enlightened as we now are
enlightened as we now are grant power to the most rational why don't you just try that for a change

x

ESSAY IN GREEK

if I knew Greek I would converse with you in Greek
but I don't know any Greek Amery's sentence on the drive from Brussels to Waterloo 9-24-1975 rainy street Atlantic low pressure ran a red light threatening Belgian cops
du machst mich an spoken in Cologne dialect you turn me on said Amery has purely sexual connotations
telephone voice surprises I'm always on time rubbed in between thumb and palm glance across trees in a dream leaning against the hood nipples erect and hard a long time

look at me look at me look at me
I have no Greek and difficulties with classical education all those Patmoses Lesboses Apollos Dionysuses
the Greeks' antique nakedness is replete with ideational content
nakedness without content our nakedness simply just naked
to learn that nakedness instead of content
say Greek woman wouldn't you be safer in your Greece but when pressure mounts there is increased danger of everything bursting even though pressure can lead to nice things though maybe a little weird
who loses steam gnaws bones losing steam losing sense makes for a wrinkled pouch and a tiny prick
wrinkly present wrinkly nature
cutapplebrown
the brown of cut apples
in Greek I would converse with you in Greek but I don't have any Greek and you can't understand me sexual union means insight into the matter at hand not into psychology
your rage your grunting does open you but not your psychology
even when I can't stand it I hurl myself into gaping flesh into flesh which is definitively and in the most extreme sense facing me and I am not naked torsos half asleep incessantly interchangeable repeatable
quartered backsides repeatable
the bird quite clearly flown to Idaho railroad embankment Thoreau
crumpled and gummed-up moon
we have lived under this moon
crumpled and gummed-up moon
we have lived under this moon for a long time
crumpled and gummed-up moon
it may well be we have lived under this moon for too long my language is a noise

Translated by Anselm

Hollo

From: Odipuskomplex Made in Germany, 1981
These translations (C) 1996 Anselm Hollo

↑ Index

534. Hugh Nicoll
Anselm Hollo's Attachment
Thu 26 Sep 1996

I am taking the liberty of re-posting Anselm Hollo's HH transations because they are so moving no one should have to wait too long to enjoy them. I have manually removed line breaks that caused formating problems in the initial MWII conversion to ascii.

Hugh

Date: Tues, Sept 24, 1996
From: [redacted]
Subj: Helmut Heissenbüttel 1921-1996
To: [redacted]

Sad to hear of the end of HH's marvelous run, but very pleased to see Charles's and Pierre's posts on same. I was privileged to meet him once in his offices at the Süddeutscher Rundfunk (South German Broadcasting Corporation) in Stuttgart in the early Sixties, on a visit from London where I was working for the BBC and moonlighting as "Anton Hofman" writing radio features in German on, a.o., William Carlos Williams, Allen Ginsberg, Robert Creeley, Charles Olson, Gregory Corso for Heissenbüttel's literary radio program. One-armed like Blaise Cendrars (the left "left," as they say, on some dismal battlefield of in 1942), tall, calm funny, and erudite, HH had (as he put it) "a lasting soft spot for the black banner of anarchy. My innermost conviction is anarcho-syndicalist. Never mind that I know it [=anarcho-syndicalism] can never be realized, but that is where my secret love lies." Rosmarie Waldrop's and Pierre Joris's translations are wonderful: HH is far from 'easy,' somewhere between Clark Coolidge and Finnegan's Wake on the translation meter. His "occasional poems, days of the dead [=elegies], landscapes 1965--1980," however, contain most of his overtly satirical and Catullan pieces, and I'd like to offer, here, my translations of the following two in his memory. He was a hero of mine.

OEDIPUS COMPLEX MADE IN GERMANY

Daddy has been ruling for about a thousand years
the Oedipus complex of the German people is called

NSDAP after that we tried it with Grandpa but that was not a permanent solution now we just don't know who can advise us quiz masters wanted
who landed us in this stew Bild magazine wants to know Grandpa has been preserved in a glass coffin Daddy's representatives have their names erased as time goes by
but have we forgotten Daddy
we're still doing better than in the Third Reich that is not a
a permanent solution
do they have Daddies in Washington or Moscow too our ersatz Oedipus complex is called Pankow Grandpa o mein Papa or in Rome
Daddy's reign is extinct but bits of it still hang in the air it is the air of Berlin still that smell whose name was Josef what we demand is an end to Daddies and Granddads an end to Oedipus complexes
enlightened as we now are enlightened as we now are enlightened as we now are
enlightened as we now are grant power to the most rational
why don't you just try that for a change

ESSAY IN GREEK

if I knew Greek I would converse with you in Greek
but I don't know any Greek Améry's sentence on the drive from Brussels to Waterloo 9-24-1975 rainy street Atlantic low pressure ran a red light threatening Belgian cops
du machst mich an spoken in Cologne dialect
you turn me on said Améry has purely sexual connotations
telephone voice surprises I'm always on time rubbed in between thumb and palm glance across trees in a dream leaning against the hood nipples erect and hard a long time
look at me look at me look at me
I have no Greek and difficulties with classical education all
those Patmoses Lesboses Apollos Dionysuses
the Greeks' antique nakedness is replete with ideational content nakedness without content our nakedness simply just naked
to learn that nakedness instead of content
say Greek woman wouldn't you be safer in your Greece

but when pressure mounts there is increased danger of everything bursting even though pressure can lead to nice things maybe a little psycho who loses steam gnaws bones
losing steam losing sense makes for a wrinkled pouch and a tiny pin

wrinkly present wrinkly nature
cutapplebrown
the brown of cut apples
in Greek I would converse with you in Greek but I don't have any Greek and you can't understand me sexual union means insight into the matter at hand not into psychology

your rage your grunting does open you but not your psychology
even when I can't stand it I hurl myself into gaping flesh
into flesh which is definitively and in the most extreme sense
facing me and I am not naked torsos half asleep incessantly interchangeable repeatable
quartered backsides repeatable
the bird quite clearly flown to Idaho railroad embankment Thoreau
crumpled and gummed-up moon
we have lived under this moon
crumpled and gummed-up moon
we have lived under this moon for a long time
crumpled and gummed-up moon
it may well be we have lived under this moon for too long a time
my language is a noise

Translated by Anselm Hollo

From: Ödipuskomplex Made in Germany, 1981
These translations (C) 1996 Anselm Hollo

↑ Index

535. Robert Drake
[[redacted]: Fwd: BOOK PARTY]
Thu 26 Sep 1996

========== Begin forwarded message ==========

From: [redacted] (Womens Studio Workshop Inc)
To: [redacted] (Multiple recipients of list BOOK_ARTS-L)
Subject: Fwd: BOOK PARTY
Date: Thu, 26 Sep

-- [From: Womens Studio Workshop Inc * EMC.Ver #2.5.02] --

book signing party at printed matter, 77 wooster st, nyc thursday nov. 7 from 6-8pm for new books published by women's studio workhsop. artists will be on hand. new books from eva mantell, susan mills, molly barker, rita mac-donald, indigo som, melissa smedley & stacy doris. hope to see you there. for more infor on these and other artists' books and wsw grants and residencies contact wsw at: [redacted]

------- FORWARD, End of original message -------

↑ Index

536. maria damon
Re: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

hey filch, maybe i've got a problem this a.m. but i find this forwarding of msgs from someone in distress rather disturbing, voyeuristic, rather than amusing. --md

In message <v02130504ae706dd570cb@[198.147.97.167]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> found[09.26.96]_____
>
> muneer habibi please page me man i am in great shit i do not think you > realize the degree of shit i am in??????!!!!!!!!!!! please page me.
> [redacted] or at [redacted]. thanx
>
> _____

↑ Index

537. maria damon
Re: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

ps. from maria , esp when a phone # is being publicly distributed. --md

In message <v02130504ae706dd570cb@[198.147.97.167]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> found[09.26.96]_____
>
> muneer habibi please page me man i am in great shit i do not think you > realize the degree of shit i am in??????!!!!!!!!!!! please page me.

> [redacted] or at [redacted]. thanx
>
> _____

↑ Index

538. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

Re: the bleeding edge

Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

ditto maria. i am not sure what the point of it is. i know if i were yasmine, i would find this extremely humiliating.
e

↑ Index

539. dismissive with angels

the bleeding edge

Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

found[09.26.96]_____

muneer it is me again it is my first time using this goddammed e-mail shit and i do not know if you received my previous message. muneer it is yasmine from lab and i need you to page me right away regarding it . i am in trouble please muneer page me at 310-2367264 now. if you get this message ANY time later page me before tomorrow. thank you .....yasmine

_____

↑ Index

540. dismissive with angels

the bleeding edge

Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

found[09.26.96]_____

Muneer, hi it is yasmine from bio lab. listen it is an emergency please page me at 310-2367264 right away. please, please,please, muneer do so now!!!!!!!! muneer i would really appreciate it. i am in need of great help!!!!!!!!!! if you get this later do not hesitate to page me it is to do w/ the lab tomorrow i am in shit!!!!!!

thank u, yasmine

_____

↑ Index

541. dismissive with angels
the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

found[09.26.96]_____

muneer habibi please page me man i am in great shit i do not think you realize the degree of shit i am in??????!!!!!!!!!!! please page me. [redacted] or at [redacted]. thanx

_____

↑ Index

542. dismissive with angels
the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

found[09.26.96]_____

muner i sent you a message around 10 minutes ago and you have not paged me back yet.....please muneer i am not messing around i seriously need your help..... page me at anytime. i guess you are out. page me at [redacted] or at [redacted] and i shall call you right away. thank you soooooooooooo much!!!!!!!!!!!!

_____

↑ Index

543. dismissive with angels
the bleeding edge - the last drop
Thu 26 Sep 1996

found[09.26.96]_____

muneer please page me. now i know that you are definitely out!!! please do not forget to page me tonight please.

_____

↑ Index

544. Christina Fairbank Chirot on the edge of mutiny
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Mutineer: No need for your help at the lab. I got this email figured out and we're gonna jam this filchy guy's address til he begs for mercy. No quarter given--take no prisoners. Yours in mutiny, Yasmine.

↑ Index

545. Ian Wilson
Re[2]: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Filch,

Fascinating and speaking to what large confluences and in what way?

Maybe other people's mailreaders reveal who sent the message but on Lotus cc:mail, I'm only notified that it comes from the Poetics list. So your five found messages arrive with no explanation, no context, and no idea who sent them.

I didn't find them fascinating, I found them an annoyance: they took up bandwidth on a list that's already frequently bombarded by stuff that rightfully ought be backchannelled (Look at the book orders that got made to the whole list this morning -- now if only they'd included their credit card number. . .).

In the absence of any explanation from you, seems to me that Maria and Eliza had to "read" the posts, naturalize them and find some context for themselves.

What was your point?

Ian Wilson
Loyola Marymount University, Los Angeles
[redacted]
http://users.aol.com/ibar88/private/story/index.htm

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: Re: the bleeding edge Author: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> at Internet Date: 9/26/96 11:01 AM

Maria (and Eliza),

perhaps i am incorrect but didn't you inject "amusing" into this. i don't believe i used that word. i believe i found the entire bundle to particularly fascinating and speaking to very large confluences i perceive in our culture. i was not however amused.

it would seem that my posting of this "artifact" pushes buttons. i wonder why? if indeed the names and places are accurate why do you perceive that as a threat? doesn't this speak to just exactly what is going on in this list and indeed this medium. i can never be sure that some "words" which drop from my mouth onto the monitor won't land on some strangers desk. this message to you could somehow be misrouted or hung somewhere and end up in a completely detextualized place. in what way will i be hung by my own words or cause others to be disturbed or amused. to what extent do i have control of my words?

given the medium in which "this" word races how accurate is it or how naive am i to believe my words will only be shared with the 400 or so others on the list.

this woman (((and her problem) if there is such a thing) as though in the context it mattered) is completely decontextualized. these texts are graffitti on the wall next to the urinal. what are we to make of this? what happens to these texts when they are decontextualized and why do we find this so threatening?

filch

↑ Index

546. Daniel Bouchard
Re: bleeding the edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Filch wrote:
>> this woman (((and her problem) if there is such a thing) as though in the context it mattered) is completely decontextualized. these texts are graffitti on the wall next to the urinal. what are we to make of this?
what happens to these texts when they are decontextualized and why do we find this so threatening?

_____

these texts are buttons on the urinal that I push these texts and her problem if there is such a thing these when they are these texts are decontextualized

this woman and her problem if there is such a thing
this woman as though in the context it mattered
what are we to make of this woman?

what happens to this woman when decontextualized?
what happens to these texts if there is such a thing?
this woman as though in the context it mattered

do we find this so threatening?
the wall next to the urinal is completely decontextualized

this woman and her problem and why do we find this so threatening?

↑ Index

547. Jordan Davis
chodosh englay 1.inst
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

they're very good at partitioning space. the guards work six hour shifts for the big night, really it's 2.5 then half hour break then three. Not supposed to twang the thread, which divides the room where they have the readings. there's one room where the strings stretched from the ceiling to the floor make two perpendicular spaces you could pass between. these won't fall over and kill anybody, but they're closely watched. the spaces, it's like a bubble you blow with your lips. three guards mouth phrases to each other, make no eye contact with you. upstairs there's an easter egg show about 'abroad'. Munoz is all right, if you like depopulated wax mannequins and stairways to nowhere. some do. some do not. a movie set, think 'il conformista'. Think! meanwhile the eggplant t-shirts were a myth and instead of a show they've got a watch company's self-portraits, vodka and pomegranate. there is the cool which is okay, but it's a static cool, it unfolds, you can flatten it out and if not own it then possess it. don't go. go over to the batting cages and let me know if they're thinking better there. J

↑ Index

548. Jordan Davis
bndwdth
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

xtrrdnrpplrdlsnsndthmdnssfcrwds

↑ Index

549. maria damon
Re: dismissive
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

so, filch, if i read you right, you posted five found msgs to the poetics list, w/ no commentary or explanation except that they were found objects, to teach us all a lesson in reception aesthetics? md

↑ Index

550. dismissive with angels
Re: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Maria (and Eliza),

perhaps i am incorrect but didn't you inject "amusing" into this. i don't believe i used that word. i believe i found the entire bundle to particularly fascinating and speaking to very large confluences i perceive in our culture. i was not however amused.

it would seem that my posting of this "artifact" pushes buttons. i wonder why? if indeed the names and places are accurate why do you perceive that as a threat? doesn't this speak to just exactly what is going on in this list and indeed this medium. i can never be sure that some "words" which drop from my mouth onto the monitor won't land on some strangers desk. this message to you could somehow be misrouted or hung somewhere and end up in a completely detextualized place. in what way will i be hung by my own words or cause others to be disturbed or amused. to what extent do i have control of my words?

given the medium in which "this" word races how accurate is it or how naive am i to believe my words will only be shared with the 400 or so others on the list.

this woman (((and her problem) if there is such a thing) as though in the context it mattered) is completely decontextualized. these texts are graffitti on the wall next to the urinal. what are we to make of this? what happens to these texts when they are decontextualized and why do we find this so threatening?

filch

↑ Index

551. Christina Fairbank Chirot
"artifacts" (fwd)
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Mister Filch raised some interesting points in regards to some of the current legislation being considered concerning suych issues as immigration, terrorism, the control and access to messages sent via email and the internet. Notice the names of the people involved--which seemed to be Muslim or Arabic. Leading up to, during and after the Gulf War I had severl Arab-American, Arab, and African-American Muslim students cite a continuous stream of harrasement of one kind or another. These students pointed out the one safe group to target in the USA was themselves. After the Oklahoma City bombing and recent jet explosion near NYC it was immediately assumed that terrorists were involved--no need to say which "Kind" of terrorists. Mr. Filch says: "if indeed the names and and places are accurate why do you perceive that as a threat?"

well--what if mr. filch had to worry about having someone swoop down on him to make sure his papers were in order? Since the people with the Muslim sounding names appear to be doing something in a lab--let's call both Immigration and the FBI! Heck--why not bug"em now we got the phone number?

Mr Filch asks "to what extent do I have control of my own words?"

This is a disingenous question: he did not use his own words.

Mr. Filch asks: "What happens to these texts when they are decontextualized and why do we find this so threatening?"

They are not decontextualized but recontextualized--that is the problem. Mr. Filch writes of his "posting . . . this 'artifact;"--hardly a decontextualization. An artificat implies a context in which it is an artifact--i.e. that Mr. Filch has brought in a found object which he wishes to put on a display in a museum, or a shop where artifacts are on display. Since this museum seems to have an affinity with urinals--is Mr. Filch propsing that the "artifact" here be considering a neo-Duchampian urinal? Yet Duchamp's urinal did not include his name nor his phone number. Nowadays it carries a price tag. Considering some of the laws being proposed re immigration, terrorism, control and acces of the net--the price may be someone's freedom.

dbchirot

↑ Index

552. Jeffrey W. Timmons bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

daniel: another version buttons on the urinal push these texts

her problem
if there is such a thing when they are these texts decontextualized

this woman
her problem
if there is such a thing

this woman
in the context
it mattered

what are we to make of this woman?

what happens
to this woman
when decontextualized?

what happens to these texts
if there is such a thing?

this woman as though
in the context
it mattered

do we find this so threatening?

the wall
the urinal is decontextualized

this woman
her problem
do we find this so threatening?

↑ Index

553. Jeffrey W. Timmons
Re: "artifacts" (fwd)
Thu 26 Sep 1996

"appropriating" texts is problematic: there is an ethics to be observed; even when attempting to make a point about "ownership" on the net/web.

jeffrey timmons

↑ Index

554. Jeffrey W. Timmons
(no subject)
Thu 26 Sep 1996

a quiry and a self-promotion:

im doing work on revolution and was curious if anyone might be able to recommend any scholarship on the epistemological (de)structures of revolution. im interested in post-marxist work especially; while a great deal has been written about revolution in such work im interested in anything that examines how revolution becomes a complement to changes in representation/epistemology/ontology.

i also have an essay forthcoming in november from the Journal of Imagism; its a new journal edited by George Castellito at Felician College in (of course) new jersey.

jeffrey timmons

↑ Index

555. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

filch as a woman who has been assaulted i find your "appropriation" of texts -- desparate cries for help from a woman -- misguided, trivialized, and in extremely poor taste. i find the trivialization of a woman in extremity both mind-bogglingly insensitive and a grotesque form of crying wolf. further, as maria pointed out, telephone numbers broadcast in this way subject the owner of the telephone number to risk of extreme harrassment.

again, speaking as a battered woman, if ever my requests for help HAD been put in some public medium -- a mailing list of complete, uninvolved strangers for instance -- i would be humiliated, hurt, and very distressed.

in other words filch, please try to imagine you are something and someone other than yourself. what you are doing is disrespectful to people who have to read these random notes, and even worse, to the woman about whom they were written (whose pager number is, presumably, included). i think there are other people on this list who have had experience with a loved woman in their life being hurt and i suspect they find this as appalling and painful as i do. e

↑ Index

556. Tony Green
Re: Helmut, Here We Go Again
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Dear Anselm, the resulting texts were strange but in their way delightful. Do another shor5t one jus for7 the 6he9ll o4f it, p99l65e7ase. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

557. Gabrielle Welford
Re: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

I don't know why but I just assumed that filch had made these up, including the phone #s. They sound like made up stuff, even to me who teach freshmen. If they aren't in fact made up, there is a huge difference, and I agree with what Eliza says about humiliation. Words do have a life of their own and found objects are treasures, but there's nothing without a context. This context, if they're real, is not banishable. gab.

↑ Index

558. cris cheek
Re: My long silence
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Hi Peter,

simply big good wishes to you on your recovery.
Valuing your presence and tremendously generous energies.

love and love
cris

↑ Index

559. Jeffrey W. Timmons
HELP
Thu 26 Sep 1996

---

sorry to bother any/everyone:

could the listmanagerperson contact me. i cant seem to find the address to write for HELP--and i need some. im still getting two messages for everyone sent. and as much as i love to read. . . .

jeffrey timmons

↑ Index

560. Rick Bursky
rumours & question
Thu 26 Sep 1996

I'm very new to this group. Does anyone know of any other poetry bb's like this that discuss, read and comment on poems? Any info would be appreciated. Oh, I've encluded one of my poems.

Rick

The Rumours

They're talking about opening the laundromat again.
And why not? There's no shortage of water and the women could use the time they'd save to walk the children home from school.
They must know the messages on the bulletin board would be different now:
an old radio or pair of wire-rim eyeglasses for sale,
a room to rent because a son is gone.

Of course, we heard rumours like this before. Someone once said, the restaurant next to the old fire station was going to reopen on a Tuesday. We waited there for hours until rain drove us away. Those streets have become more calm without us, no one runs-off the stray dogs when they growl in the doorways or urinate on the walls.

↑ Index

561. Jeffrey W. Timmons
the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

hey jay
i dont know who you were referring to but since when is "a swamp
of pubescent flames
and fart jokes"
not "a highly sophisticated

understanding/practice of language
use/reception/production?"

jeffrey timmons

↑ Index

562. DS
Re: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

> when is "a swamp
> of pubescent flames
> and fart jokes"

this whole strand is becomming highly flammable

dan

↑ Index

563. Jay Schwartz
Re: the bleeding edge
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Most subscribers to this list have a highly sophisticated understanding/practice of language use/reception/production etc... So I find it especially annoying to receive these lame and degrading attempts at exploring appropriation from Filch. Condescending, both to "Yasmine", and to the subscribers of the Poetics List.

If anyone wants to revel in a swamp of pubescent flames and fart jokes, check out the URL www.batmanforever.com. The posts there are more interesting experiments in appropriation and decontextualiztion (and strange abject word-play) than the "Yasmine" texts Filch posted.

Jay Schwartz

↑ Index

564. VPI R TremblayMcGaw
Robert Gluck's Upcoming Readings
Thu 26 Sep 1996

Dear All--

Thought you might be interested in Robert Gluck's upcoming readings:

NEW YORK
with Lynne Tillman
Monday, Sept 30th at 8 pm
Hudson Grill, 350 Hudson (1 bk south of Houston)

MONTREAL
Tuesday October 8th at 4 pm
Lionel-Groulx Bldg
University of Montreal for info, call Robert Martin
[redacted]

DETROIT
with Gail Scott
Friday, October 11 at 3 pm
English Dept, 51 West Warren, Rm 3234
Wayne State Univ

SAN FRANCISCO
with Sarah Van Arsdale
Thursday, Oct 24 7:30 pm
First Unitarian Church
1187 Franklin St

Connect Mail Sent: September 26, 1996 8:44 pm PDT Item: R00YoW4

↑ Index

565. Gabrielle Welford
Immigration Alert: URGENT (fwd)
Fri 27 Sep 1996

Blech. gab.
---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Laura McClintock <[redacted]>

USSA
Immigration Update
September 25,1996

Urgent Action Needed !!!

The immigration bill has come out of conference and is now on a fast path to the White House. The Gallegly (R-CA) amendment, which would have denied public education to undocumented children, was dropped from the bill. However, at the last minute, a new provision was added to the bill which penalizes persons who are HIV+.

The last-minute amendment would prevent all non-citizens, whether legal or undocumented, from receiving medical treatment for HIV/AIDS. Furthermore, the bill denies HIV testing to undocumented immigrants. If Congress is truly committed to preventing the spread of this fatal disease, these provisions make absolutely no sense. Undocumented students will not be able to access university health care services for testing and legal immigrant students, even those with full blown AIDS, will not be able to receive care. Citizens, legal immigrants, and undocumented immigrants are all put at risk by this discriminatory amendment.

Further provisions in the bill include: --"Back door" cuts in legal immigration. Millions of Americans will be denied the ability to reunite with spouses and children because they don't earn 140% of the poverty level. For example, a citizen student who married a non-citizen would have to prove that she earned 140% of the poverty level while in school in order to bring her husband to the U.S. Even if her parents co-sponsored her application, she herself would have to earn 125% of the poverty level.

--Deportation of persons who receive welfare or disability benefits for over 12 months.

--Application of sponsor deeming to dozens of programs not covered in the welfare bill.

--An elimination of protection against discrtimination by requiring that any person, citizen or non-citizen, who files a civil rights claim in connection with the proposed national verification system prove "intent," a nearly impossible standard.

Today, this horrible bill passed by a wide margin in the House.

Students need to call their Senators ASAP to urge them to speak against the bill and to register a no-vote when it comes to the floor.

To contact your Senators call the FREE Alliance to Save Student Aid Hotline at 1-800-574-4AID

Students must also call the White House and insist that the President veto the immigration bill.
To contact the President call
[redacted]

Erica Adelsheimer Phone: 202.347.USSA Legislative Director
Fax: [redacted] U.S. Student Association E-mail: [redacted] 1612 K Street NW Ste. 510 http://www.essential.org/ussa Washington, DC 20006

↑ Index

566. the brown bag process

the bleeding edge (dismissed by angels)

Fri 27 Sep 1996

i certainly opened myself up for attack.

on any and every listserv the master of the listserv has the option to make the reply-to on every message either to the "list" proper or to the "sender". the poetry listserv has the reply-to set to the "list" proper. when the reply-to is set at the "list" itself the conversation which results tend to be spontaneous and engaging, there are more flames, they tend to more quickly thread themselves off into unrelated topics and they tend to produce an awful lot of mail in comparison to the listserv which has its reply-to set to the "sender". when the reply-to is set to "sender" the messages tend to be a great deal less frequent (because it takes more work for everyone involved), the messages tend to be more thought out and precise, threads don't wander quite as fast, & there tends to be less flame.

one way of looking at it, which i've been doing alot of lately, is that the former setup promotes a sense of community while the latter promotes a sense of individuality. the former is chaotic while the latter is orderly. these are of course conclusions rendered impotent by anecdote but structurally these differences are worth studying.

for instance on a listserv set reply-to "listserv", such as this one, we get many posts to the list proper which were intended as back channels yet, because of the architecture and human factor criteria, end up in everyone's client.

Maria Damon writes:

"so, filch, if i read you right, you posted five found msgs to the poetics list, w/ no commentary or explanation except that they were found objects, to teach us all a lesson in reception aesthetics?" md

i have no interest or ability to teach anyone lessons. i am meditating on the bleeding edge texts. this is my koan. if you respond or react then you become part of the meditation.

it is fascinating that for the purposes of the text "Yasmine" who is obviously desperate to find "Habbib" is employing both email and pager to achieve contact. i think it safe to say that there is an unmentioned answering machine in Habbibs residence filled with the wailing of "Yasmine". yasmine is, to me, brimming over with fear and loneliness. somehow this closeness and immediacy brought about by yasmine's and habbib's technology feels farther away than Irkutsk feels to me here in LA.

on a day to day to day basis i receive pages from people who didn't page me. i receive emails such as the bleeding edge texts which people didn't send me.

Eliza McGrand says:

"as a woman who has been assaulted i find your "appropriation" of texts -- desparate cries for help from a woman -- misguided, trivialized, and in extremely poor taste...again, speaking as a battered woman, if ever my requests for help HAD been put in some public medium -- a mailing list of complete, uninvolved strangers for instance -- i would be humiliated, hurt, and very distressed."

The text in question says
"muneer it is yasmine from lab and i need you to page me right away regarding it."

Considering the pronoun here appears to be referring to the lab and the deadline of "tomorrow morning" has been imposed by yasmine i would propose that the trouble in which the yound lady finds herself has to do with school work of some kind related to the lab.

Given the complete text it seems that any "abuse" in this text has been placed there by the reader. which is one of the reasons why this text decontextualized so finds such fascination with me.

dbchirot

> 'Mr Filch asks "to what extent do I have control of my own words?"
> This is a disingenous question: he did not use his own words.'

given the context of the listserv and this medium in which appropriation has and or can be brought to new levels is it really so disingenous? are any of these my words? i believe i got them from my parents. maybe i am wrong.

dbchirot says:"Mr. Filch writes of his "posting . . . this 'artifact;"--hardly a decontextualization. An artificat implies a context in which it is an artifact--i.e. that Mr. Filch has brought in a found object which he wishes to put on a display in a museum, or a shop where artifacts are on display."

Posh. just because something has been recontextualized does not mean it has not or could not also be decontextualized. the bleeding edge texts have been recontextualized on a "poetics listserv" and they have in that process been decontextualized from the context in which they were born.

filch

↑ Index

567. the brown bag process

Re: the bleeding edge

Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

thanks for the kind words. i am not interested in appropriation. we are all thieves and none of us are honest about it. (myself included) but we all try desperately to maintain our context. why is that so important? for what i am interested in batmanforever is of no interest whatsoever. there is a design behind ever word you read there and its purpose is to be on that sight. the folks who designed the sight by keeping it up to this date to be the recipient of such "graffitti" are interested in much different things than me. your finding of the texts in question to be lame and degrading makes me think the bleeding edge texts are even more fascinating than i originally perceived. once again i ask why are you so threatened? thanks again for your help! filch
>
>Most subscribers to this list have a highly sophisticated >understanding/practice of language use/reception/production etc... So >I find it especially annoying to receive these lame and degrading >attempts at exploring appropriation from Filch. Condescending, both to >"Yasmine", and to the subscribers of the Poetics List.
>
>If anyone wants to revel in a swamp of pubescent flames and fart jokes, >check out the URL www.batmanforever.com. The posts there are more >interesting experiments in appropriation and decontextualiztion (and >strange abject wordplay) than the "Yasmine" texts Filch posted.
>
>Jay Schwartz

↑ Index

568. Joe Amato

query...

Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

hey folks: the other day i was handed a copy of david whyte's _the heart aroused: poetry and the preservation of the soul in corporate america_ (currency doubleday, 1994)... whyte is a poet born in england, with whose work i'm not at all familiar...

the book really threw me for a loop... whyte is well-intentioned, yeah, but you know what they say about good intentions... really whacked-out stuff, very new age-ish, but also saturated with a specific conflation of various poetics alongside a soul-saving apparatus of which i haven't seen the likes till now... you're left at the end with an organizational philosophy that must allow (through attention to, as you might expect, the sciences of chaos, bateson's "ecology of mind," and such like) for the full conjunction of 'doing' with 'being' (the corporation---work---is doing, the soul is being, ETC.)... poetry becomes one way of interrogating BEING in all of its disorder, wildness, what have you... lots of quotes from poets (incl. whyte himself), a positive appraisal of dana gioia's "can poetry matter?"--- and so forth...

i know---sounds like you've heard it all before... but it's the mix that i find new, and, well, scary... REALLY...

an excerpt from near the end:

> the organization that has made room for the soul learns slowly and painfully that clinging to premature and constricted identities restricts the flow of energy from outside the system it has created. constricted by monochromatic images of how things should be, people, talent, and money all have a hard time leaving and entering. a constricted identity puts too much focus on boundaries that tell us what is familiar and what is not. but a focus on the interior vastness of beingness itself creates a strong sense of self without having to delineate the barriers in advance. (297)

naturally, poetry becomes one of the "great arts" that can "remind and embolden us to this end" (298)...

given my disposition, i'm predisposed to see whyte's book through foucault's critique of "soul" as a technology of power (w/associated anatomy, in _discipline and punish_---the body becomes the prisoner of the soul etc.)... but i'm wondering if any of you have come across the book and, if so, what you make of it...

joe

↑ Index

569. Robert Drake
Re: the bleeding edge
Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

part of the objection to these posts seemed to be their lack of or ambigious context. ov course, we do have context for these email messages; the sender seems to be:

*a relative newcomer to this list *a person who uses an alias instead of his/her "real" name (interesting that several of us have assumed it is a "he") *someone who's previous posts have seemed to be (to me, at least) quarrelsome and condescending

& i'm reading this all--filche's original posts, and the responses to them--as an interesting example of how e-communities formulate themselves, "enforce"

their "norms" and deal with "transgressions" (and i'm saying that not at all to be critical of such processes).

<for what it's worth, i also found th posts to be abusive rubbish, for reasons already cited...>

but th fragments themselves reminds me of the recent translitics thread--ira lightman i think posted some interesting questions (which, interestingly, went mostly unanswered & marked the end of that thread) along th lines of homophonic translation as a problematic appropriation of an other's culture? the "Basque mis-translationslam" frm the new _underground forest_ highlighted the question fr me: multiple translitics (by charles bernstein, anselm hollo, lee ann brown, and kenneth koch, among others) of a basque poem fragment, but th original fragment goes unattributed... <i'm trying to work the word "colonialism" in here, but cant... there, i did it> and finally, in contrast, i'm reminded of an earlier piece of email writing, the Two Solitudes project... & the contrast of it's careful (if pedestrian) contextualization. here's the introduction:

> Date: Sat Oct 1 17:42:10 1994
> From: [redacted] (Carl Steadman)
> Subject: Two Solitudes, an e-mail romance
> To: [redacted]
>
> Thank you for subscribing to Two Solitudes, an e-mail romance.
>
> Over the next several weeks, you'll receive carbon copies of messages exchanged between two persons familiar with each other, as they send them. If their romance does come to an end, it is only because all things must come to their ends.
>
> Subscription problems and comments should be sent to <[redacted]>. Keep this address handy should you need to end your subscription or change your address. Currently, subscription adds and deletes are done by hand; please allow adequate time for your request to be processed. Also, your suggestions and criticisms are always welcome.
>
> Special thanks to Jim Miner, Matthias Neeracher, Scott Custer, and Melissa Pauna.

what followed was about 2 months worth of messages; sometime 2 or 3 per day, sometimes skipping a day or two, ostensably sent between a 2 folks... some of it was daily chit-chat, some deeper soul-baring, and the sense was one was these folks only had contact via email... i thot the writing was evocative & playful, the personae of the "characters" clear & th messages rang "true" a email, w/ all it's vagaries. the pacing was used effectively, too, & certaily played on the voyeuristic pleasure of eavesdropping, right up to the (predictable) ending of several messages from one of the characters bouncing as undeliverable. while pleny conventional in many ways, i thot it was one of the simpilist & more effective uses of the emedium as fiction i'd seen...

lbd

↑ Index

570. maria damon
Re: the bleeding edge
Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

hi filch: i don't think there's much question about the inappropriateness of forwarding someone's phone #, which was meant for the eyes of one friend only, to an entire discussion group of strangers. instead of posturing about how "threatened" we all are to be the recipients of personal information that was not intended for us, why not simply apologize for your error and pursue the theoretical aspects of the matter in a different vein. trying to exonerate yourself with defensive abstractions such as "we are all thieves and none of us are [sic] honest about it" is evasive and gets you in deeper doodoo than what,in my reading, was previously simply a thoughtless impulse on your part. maria d

In message <v02130504ae713c2267ab@[198.147.97.99]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> thanks for the kind words. i am not interested in appropriation. we are > all thieves and none of us are honest about it. (myself included) but we > all try desperately to maintain our context. why is that so important?
> for what i am interested in batmanforever is of no interest whatsoever.
> there is a design behind ever word you read there and its purpose is to be > on that sight. the folks who designed the sight by keeping it up to this > date to be the recipient of such "graffitti" are interested in much > different things than me. your finding of the texts in question to be lame > and degrading makes me think the bleeding edge texts are even more > fascinating than i originally perceived. once again i ask why are you so > threatened? thanks again for your help! filch
> >
> >Most subscribers to this list have a highly sophisticated > >understanding/practice of language use/reception/production etc... So > >I find it especially annoying to receive these lame and degrading > >attempts at exploring appropriation from Filch. Condescending, both to > >"Yasmine", and to the subscribers of the Poetics List.

> >
> >If anyone wants to revel in a swamp of pubescent flames and fart jokes, > >check out the URL www.batmanforever.com. The posts there are more > >interesting experiments in appropriation and decontextualiztion (and > >strange abject wordplay) than the "Yasmine" texts Filch posted.
> >
> >Jay Schwartz

↑ Index

571. Michael Coffey
Re: the bleeding edge -Reply
Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

dear filch:

why is it that you continue to characterize people's negative reactions to your postings as "threatened." i don't think anyone is threatened by these pieces at all; what's to fear, personally? Or are you saying that some aesthetics are threatened by being discomfited by what amounts to lamentations from another time and another place about which one can (and should do) nothing? The only notion being challenged here, i think, it that this list exists in order to facilitate conversation about poetry. Most people hold to that, are holding to that, and you should be getting the message that people aren't threatened, they are irritated; they aren't paranoid, they're real annoyed.

↑ Index

572. Charles Bernstein
Barnard Translation Conference
Fri 27 Sep 1996

TENTH INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON TRANSLATION

November 15-16, 1996

BARNARD COLLEGE, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

"Centering Marginality"
This conference is dedicated to the memory of LeRoy C. Breunig and Andre Lefevere

TRANSLATION: to move from one place to another. Within a contemporary ideological framework that same term might be used to define possible moves from the margins to the center and thus put into question the concept of mobility and apply it to a whole range of experiences starting with our naming certain languages "exotic" or tracing the cross-poetics of U.S. and French avantegardes.

In such a move, on a metaphorical level, feminism's rapport with experimentation would also be included as well as anthropology's self-scrutiny or, in the final analysis, suggesting new approaches to the translation of a poetic text itself.

FRIDAY NOVEMBER 15 (Locations and general information at end.)
SESSION 1 Translation Workshops 1:00-4:00 pm
Arabic: Nayra Atiya (Translator)
Catalan: Rosa Flotats (Facultat de Traduccio i Interpretacio d' Osana, Barcelona, Spain)
Chinese: Julie Landau (Translator)
French: Professors Peter Connor and Anne Boyman (Barnard)
German: Professor Erk Grim (Barnard)
Hebrew: Ruth Raphaeli (Columbia)
Hungarian: Judith Sollosy (Translator)
Italian: Professors Antonella Ansani and Daniela Noe (Barnard)
Japanese: Carl Sesar (Poet/Translator)
Persian: Zagra Partovi (Translator)
Russian: Professor Catherine Nepomnyashchy (Barnard)
Spanish: Agueda Rayo, Flora Schiminovich (Barnard) and Lydia Hunt, professor, Monterey Institute of International Studies
Swedish: Verne a Moberg (Columbia)
Welsh: Professor Margaret Charlotte Ward (Translator and professor, Department of English, Universidad de Puerto Rico)
Wolof: Fallou Gueye (New York University)

SESSION II Translating "Exotic" Languages 4:15-5:30 pm Chair: Professor Joseph Malone, Linguistic Program, Barnard Rosa Flotats, professor and translator, "Translating Milton into Catalan" Margaret Charlotte Ward, professor and translator. "Welsh Poetry/Poetics" Fallou Gueye, Wolof Instructor, NYU. "The Untranslatable..."

SESSION III Lecture by Gildersleeve Visiting Professor 5:45-7:00 pm McIntosh Center
JULIA KRISTEVA, novelist, literary critic, psychoanalyst, professor at the Univ. Paris VII;
Gildersleeve Visiting Professor - "Translating Feelings or Writing and Singularity"
Introduction: Elizabeth Dalton, chair and professor of English, Barnard

RECEPTION 7:30-8:30 pm Altschul Atrium

SESSION IV A Bilingual Poetry Reading 8:45-10:00 pm McIntosh Center
MAZISIS KUNENE, major Zulu epic poet, reading his own works in Zulu and English translations with musical accompaniment

SATURDAY NOVEMBER 16 SESSION V Viewing the Eye: Anthropology and Translation. 9:30-11:00 am Chairs: Professor Paula Rubel and Abraham Rosman, Anthropology Department, Barnard William O. Beeman, Professor of Anthropology, Brown University Michael Silverstein, Professor of Anthropology, University Chicago Michael Herzfeld, Professor of Anthropology, Harvard University

SESSION VI Poetry Reading 11:15 am-12:30 pm
Josee Lapeyrere Rosmarie Waldrop Rachel Blau DuPlessis
Charles Bernstein Anne Lauterbach Kathleen Frazer

LUNCH 12:45-1:45 pm

GREETINGS from Judith Shapiro, President of Barnard College, 2:00 pm

SESSION VII America's Feminism and the Poetics of the Avant-Garde. 2:15-3:30pm Chair: Rachel Blau DuPlessis, poet, critic and Professor of English, Temple Univ. Kathleen Frazer, poet, critic, and editor and publisher of HOW(ever), 1983-1991, Professor of Creative Writng, San Francisco State University, 1972-1992 Susan Rubin Suleiman, critic and professor of Romance Languages and Comparative Literatures, Harvard University Cecilia Vicuna, poet and artist Rosmarie Waldrop, poet, writer and translator; editor/founder of Burning Deck Press

SESSION VIII French and American Views: Pound and Mallarme 3:45-5:00 pm
Chair: Charles Bernstein, poet, critic and David Gray Chair of English Literature, SUNY-Buffalo
Yves di Manno, poet, translator and essayist; director of the collection "Poesie" at Flammarion publishers
Pierre Joris, poet, translator and professor of English, SUNY-Albany
Norma Cole, poet, translator and artist
Serge Gavronsky, poet, translator, and professor and chair of French, Barnard

SESSION IX Translation: Exclusion? Inclusion? 5:15-6:30 pm
Chair: Maryse Conde, novelist, critic and professor of French and Romance Philology, Columbia University Antonio Benitez-Rojo, novelist and Thomas B. Walton, Jr., Memorial Professor of Romance Languages, Amherst College
James Maraniss, translator and professor, Department of Romance Languages, Amherst College
Richard Philcox, translator
Annie Saumont, writer and translator

RECEPTION 6:45-8:00 pm

SESSION X Trans/Translation: Holderlin in English 8:15-9:15 pm
Chair: Serge Gavronsky

Robert Kelly, poet, translator, critic and professor, English Department, Bard College
Schuldt, poet translator and artist

SESSION XI Bilingual Poetry Reading 9:30-11:00 pm Norma Cole
Pierre Joris Julie Landau Yves di Mano Bernard Noel Zahara Partovi Carl Sesar Margaret Charlotte Ward

GENERAL INFORMATION

The first Barnard International Conference on Translation was held on October 20, 1983. Among the distinguished participants was Andre Lefevere, to whom this conference is partially dedicated. He was that great and wise specialist of the interconnection between culture and that complex act of translation which mirrors taste, politics an da historical period's definitions of what is allowed and what is not. The Tenth Barnard International Conference continues this tradition of questioning translating at both its literal and metaphorical levels. The conference is chaired by Professor Serge Gavronsky, chair of the Department of French at Barnard College.

LOCATION

All conference sessions will be held in Barnard Hall and McIntosh Center.

REGISTRATION

Enrollment is limited and will be conducted on a first-come, first-served basis. Registration forms should be in by Friday, November 8th. Walk-in registration will take place on Friday, November 15th, and Saturday, November 16th, in the lobby of Barnard Hall, located just inside the Barnard gates at Broadway and 117th Street. No confirmation of your registration will be sent. Your cancelled check will serve as your receipt and registration acknowledgement.

LUNCH

On Saturday, November 16th, a box lunch will be provided for conference participants attending the Translation Workshops. The cost of the lunch is $8.50. Hot and cold beverages will be provided. A list of local restaurants will also be provided in your registration packet. Please indicate on the registration form if you wish to order lunch.

FEE

The fee for the two-day conference is $55 with a special rate of $15 for students. The one-day fee for Friday is $20; for Saturday it is $35. There is also a special one-day rate of $10 for students. The conference fee includes refreshments, but does not include lunch. The cost of the box lunch is $8.50.

CANCELLATION

For individuals who pre-register, cancellations will be accepted until November 11th. The balance will be refunded, less a $5 penalty fee. Individuals wishing to cancel after November 11th will forfeit the entire conference fee.

QUESTIONS

- If you have questions regarding registration, hotel accommodations, or any special needs, call Jean McCurry, Conference Coordinator, Office of Summer Programs, at [redacted] or fax [redacted].
- Although there is no parking available at the College, information on parking in the vicinity is available upon request.
- Barnard College is wheelchair accessible.
- For further information regarding the content of the conference contact: Professor Serge Gavronsky, Dept. of French, Barnard College, 3009 Broadway, New York, NY 10027-6598 [redacted].

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This conference is made possible by a generous grant from Barnard College, the LeRoy C. Breunig Fund, the Cultural Services of the French Embassy, and the Virginia C. Gildersleeve Visiting Professor Fund, a gift from the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College.

PROGRAM IS SUBJECT TO CHANGE.

REGISTRATION FORM

TENTH INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON TRANSLATION
"CENTERING MARGINALITY"
BARNARD COLLEGE, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY
NOVEMBER 15-16, 1996

REGISTRATION FORM
Please note: this is converted from a print document! No e-mail address is given. Do not reply to the Poetics List or the sender!

Please register me for the following:__ Two-day Registration ($55; $15 for students) $_____ __ Friday, November 15th ($20; $10 for students) $_____ __ Saturday, November 16th ($35; $10 for students) $_____ __ Box Lunch on Saturday, November 16th. Remember to include $8.50 for lunch.Enclosed is a check for $_____ made payable to BARNARD COLLEGE.Please send information regarding: __ Travel __ Hotels __ ParkingMail (to be received on or before November 8, 1996) to:Jean McCurry, Conference Coordinator, Office of Summer Programs, Barnard College, 3009 Broadway, New York, NY 10027-6598. FAX [redacted].
Name_____

Address_____ City, State,Zip_____ Telephone (incl.area code)_____

Conference participants will need to prepare in advance for Friday's Translation Work-shops. If you plan to attend, please request the texts you wish to receive in advance.__ Arabic __ Catalan __ Chinese __ French__ German __ Hebrew __ Hungarian __ Italian__ Japanese __ Persian __ Russian __ Spanish__ Swedish __ Welsh __ Wolof

↑ Index

573. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest

Re: the bleeding edge

Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

bravo for you -- clear, sensible, direct. at this point, i think filch is just a shallow, not very bright nuisance (his last post made NO sense at all) who is so narcisstic he is caught in an astoundingly flat world -- him and his self-dramas and self-importance. no one else. i'm planning on deleting his mail on this (and possibly anything else for a while) unread. and not dignifying his posturing foolishness with any further response.

blech.
e

↑ Index

574. maria damon

Re: query...

Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

hey joe thanks for the hot tip, this is exactly the kind of thing i wanna know about. doubleday? not an academic press? hmmm that tells me something right thre. i'll got get a copy prontissimo.--md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> hey folks: the other day i was handed a copy of david whyte's _the heart > aroused: poetry and the preservation of the soul in corporate america_ > (currency doubleday, 1994)... whyte is a poet born in england, with whose > work i'm not at all familiar...
>
> the book really threw me for a loop... whyte is well-intentioned, yeah, but > you know what they say about good intentions... really whacked-out stuff, > very new age-ish, but also saturated with a specific conflation of various > poetics alongside a soul-saving apparatus of which i haven't seen the likes > till now... you're left at the end with an organizational philosophy that > must allow (through attention to, as you might expect, the sciences of > chaos, bateson's "ecology of mind," and such like) for the full conjunction > of 'doing' with 'being' (the corporation---work---is doing, the soul is > being, ETC.)... poetry becomes one way of interrogating BEING in all of its > disorder, wildness, what have you... lots of quotes from poets (incl. whyte > himself), a positive appraisal of dana gioia's "can poetry matter?"--- and > so forth...

>
> i know---sounds like you've heard it all before... but it's the mix that i > find new, and, well, scary... REALLY...
>
> an excerpt from near the end:
>
> >the organization that has made room for the soul learns slowly and painfully > >that clinging to premature and constricted identities restricts the flow of > >energy from outside the system it has created. constricted by monochromatic > >images of how things should be, people, talent, and money all have a hard > time
> >leaving and entering. a constricted identity puts too much focus on > >boundaries that tell us what is familiar and what is not. but a focus on > the > >interior vastness of beingness itself creates a strong sense of self without > >having to delineate the barriers in advance. (297)
>
> naturally, poetry becomes one of the "great arts" that can "remind and > embolden us to this end" (298)...
>
> given my disposition, i'm predisposed to see whyte's book through > foucault's critique of "soul" as a technology of power (w/associated > anatomy, in _discipline and punish_---the body becomes the prisoner of the > soul etc.)... but i'm wondering if any of you have come across the book > and, if so, what you make of it...
>
> joe

↑ Index

575. David Kellogg
Re: the bleeding edge
Fri 27 Sep 1996

> bravo for you -- clear, sensible, direct. at this point, i think filch is just a shallow, not very bright nuisance (his last post made NO sense at all) who is so narcisstic he is caught in an astoundingly flat world -- him and his self-dramas and self-importance. no one else. i'm planning on deleting his mail on this (and possibly anything else for a while) unread. and not dignifying his posturing foolishness with any further response.

This seems a worthwhile response. Filch obviously lives (at least on email) for attention; I'm surprised the word "flame-bait" hasn't come up (till now) to describe her/his posts.

Ignore the filch.

~~~
~~~

Durham, NC 27708 FAX [redacted]
http://www duke.edu/~kellogg/

There is no mantle
and it does not descend.
-- Thomas Kinsella

↑ Index

577. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest bleeding edge -- grovelling in embarrassment
Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

when responding to maria's last posting on this thread, i meant to mail only her. however my home interface is very clumsy and there are LOUD plasterers in the vacant apartment downstairs (complete with the most bizarre array of sounds i have ever heard) and i'm afraid i was distracted at a crucial moment and sent response to list, rather than to maria.

i would never wish to expose filch, or anyone, to that kind of dressing down in a public place (it would be a matter for private mail only) and i am VERY sorry not only to filch for embarrassing him this way, but to anyone who got stuck reading it.

i tried to cancel it when i realized what had happened, but evidently both my frantic cancel messages arrived too late.

sorry filch and list. sorry. sorry. (very red in the face) e

↑ Index

578. Joe Amato
Re: query...
Fri 27 Sep 1996

---

david, it's not "self-improvement" per se that bugs me in whyte's text... it's in fact his appeal to the "soul" -- both at the individual and organizational levels -- as though such an appeal simply reinforces the "natural" capacities of the individual even as it calls forth the "natural" evolution of the organizational (which latter becomes akin to something like axelrod's (i think it was) "evolution of co-operation")... there's an all-too-human human history buried here of tactics/strategies of incorporation, largely through pseudo-incorporeal means (which mask corporeal ends... and ok, i'm not esp. religious)... so poetry is talked about w/o all of its attendant material trappings... nevermind publishing networks and such like, but even the explicit materiality of language practices has to be sidestepped some to get into the spirit of such things...

and once this happens, it's only a short step to corporate transcendance of one sort or another... perfect feedback loop: the corporation cooperates with individual soul-searching, and individual soul-searching cooperates with the corporation... sure, it sounds so... nice, like it'll all just happen if we're all... cooperative!... we'll all become chummy little ecocritters who believe that our coporate logos really do add up to Logos...

i think meaningful work (individual or organizational) is tougher to come by than whyte suggests (and his book is real short on the how's, except as he allows for first-hand experience), simply b/c there are those material realities out there... hell, poetic self-identity may or may not be a function of soul, however articulated... and at least it's been the case in my experience that organizational improvement always seems to be a matter of finding new ways to buck the system -- useful monkeywrenches...

anyway, thanx for posting!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

579. Christina Fairbank Chirot and they became what they beheld. . .
Fri 27 Sep 1996

filch posted a note which pushed a lot of buttons as a defense he sent a note about pushing buttons on the computer filch posted a note saying a forwarded message was an artifact filch recieved a note mentioning museums as a context for artifacts filch posted a note about a musuem . . .

↑ Index

580. the brown bag process
San Francisco Fine Arts Museum
Fri 27 Sep 1996

FYI

WEB AND FINE ARTS MUSEUM GET UP CLOSE AND PERSONAL
http://www.famsf.org/~thinker

A big problem that museums and libraries share, of course, is lack of physical space to show their holdings. Archival space for storing the goodies is doable, but not primo display space (museums can often show only 3 to 5% of their treasures). But on September 30, one museum group, the Fine Arts Museum of San Francisco, is going to try to do something about this problem.

Following the Loma Prieta earthquake of 1989, the Legion of Honor, which is located in San Francisco's Lincoln Park, embarked on a huge collections-management project to take stock of its entire collection.

The conservators took inventory, bar-coded each work of art, linked the records to a database, photographed, and then digitized each piece of artwork. Serious work, indeed.

And the result of all this work is The Museum's cool new Web site, The Thinker, which goes live on September 30th.

With The Thinker, you'll be able to:

* Access all of FAMSF's artwork all of the time, not just the masterpieces * Enjoy art in a new way, at home or in the office, searching the database by personal interest * See works rarely shown or too fragile to display

And with The Thinker, FAMSF can create interest in the original works, bringing more people to the Museum as well as offer donors and artists unlimited space and assurance that the public will have continual access to the work, and that it won't spend the bulk of its life in storage.

↑ Index

581. Susan Schultz jobs jobs jobs
Fri 27 Sep 1996

Just thought I'd let everyone know a few days in advance that the University of Hawai'i will be advertising this year in "poetry theory and criticism" (along with several other things). I hope some of you will be applying; please feel free to get in touch with me with any questions, though I'm on sabbatical and so don't have my finger on the departmental pulse, as it were.

all best, Susan

↑ Index

582. wait for light
Re: bleeding edge -- grovelling in embarrassment
Sat 28 Sep 1996

given that the topology of a discourse in this environment is defined such that errant texts become a matter of course;
how does the discourse protect itself from or adjust itself to these errant texts, how does it qualify them for inclusion or exclusion,

on what basis is this qualification made and does it differ in degree or kind?

Eliza McGrand said:

"when responding to maria's last posting on this thread, i meant to mail only her. however my home interface is very clumsy and there are LOUD plasterers in the vacant apartment downstairs (complete with the most bizarre array of sounds i have ever heard) and i'm afraid i was distracted at a crucial moment and sent response to list, rather than to maria.

i would never wish to expose filch, or anyone, to that kind of dressing down in a public place (it would be a matter for private mail only) and i am VERY sorry not only to filch for embarrassing him this way, but to anyone who got stuck reading it.

i tried to cancel it when i realized what had happened, but evidently both my frantic cancel messages arrived too late.

sorry filch and list. sorry. sorry. (very red in the face) e"

↑ Index

583. Rachel Loden
Re: query...
Sat 28 Sep 1996

Joe, I heard Whyte on _Fresh Air_ a couple of years ago (which I suppose speaks volumes about the sorry state of poetry coverage on that show--and radio in general). Apparently he holds retreats for corporate execs and reads them poetry, etc. I agree that the whole enterprise sounds a bit creepy, but considering the sort of dreck (and debasement of language) usually purveyed in such situations, these guys are probably lucky to be listening to a few Wallace Stevens poems.

Rachel

Joe Amato wrote:
>
> hey folks: the other day i was handed a copy of david whyte's _the heart
> aroused: poetry and the preservation of the soul in corporate america_ > (currency doubleday, 1994)... whyte is a poet born in england, with whose > work i'm not at all familiar...
>
> the book really threw me for a loop... whyte is well-intentioned, yeah, but > you know what they say about good intentions... really whacked-out stuff, > very new age-ish, but also saturated with a specific conflation of various > poetics alongside a soul-saving apparatus of which i haven't seen the likes

> till now... you're left at the end with an organizational philosophy that > must allow (through attention to, as you might expect, the sciences of > chaos, bateson's "ecology of mind," and such like) for the full conjunction > of 'doing' with 'being' (the corporation---work---is doing, the soul is > being, ETC.)... poetry becomes one way of interrogating BEING in all of its > disorder, wildness, what have you... lots of quotes from poets (incl. whyte > himself), a positive appraisal of dana gioia's "can poetry matter?"--- and > so forth...
>
> i know---sounds like you've heard it all before... but it's the mix that i > find new, and, well, scary... REALLY...
>
> an excerpt from near the end:
>
> >the organization that has made room for the soul learns slowly and painfully
> >that clinging to premature and constricted identities restricts the flow of > >energy from outside the system it has created. constricted by monochro-
matic
> >images of how things should be, people, talent, and money all have a hard time
> >leaving and entering. a constricted identity puts too much focus on > >boundaries that tell us what is familiar and what is not. but a focus on the > >interior vastness of beingness itself creates a strong sense of self without > >having to delineate the barriers in advance. (297)
>
> naturally, poetry becomes one of the "great arts" that can "remind and > embolden us to this end" (298)...
>
> given my disposition, i'm predisposed to see whyte's book through > foucault's critique of "soul" as a technology of power (w/associated > anatomy, in _discipline and punish_---the body becomes the prisoner of the > soul etc.)... but i'm wondering if any of you have come across the book > and, if so, what you make of it...
>
> joe

↑ Index

584. Joe Amato
Re: query...
Sat 28 Sep 1996

rachel, right---wallace stevens, a guy who knew how to balance the corporate with the poetic... i mean, i like stevens' work, even if i do at times hear insurance logic gurgling through... stevens shows up in whyte's book too...

i guess, on a more personal level, what creeps me out is that i know i've experienced some serious personal dislocations in having left industry (as an engineer) in order to pursue the poetry mantra... now i don't mean to naysay corporate endeavor across the board (why is it i get so cutesy talking about this stuff?), but at the same time i see real problems with the assumption that poetry's various anarchies may be used so blatantly to promote ideas of emergent order...

mebbe there's an unintended consequence in whyte's "pitch" that has something to do with how (certain?) various poetries may be read as arguing a status quo... on the other hand, i guess just about anything can be used to ill-effect...

best,

joe

↑ Index

585. maria damon
Re: query...
Sat 28 Sep 1996

joe rites:
> mebbe there's an unintended consequence in whyte's "pitch" that has > something to do with how (certain?) various poetries may be read as arguing > a status quo... on the other hand, i guess just about anything can be used > to ill-effect...
>
i rite: one argument i tussle with constantly is the karlheinz stierle's contention that poetry is essentially "anti-discourse." i find this liberating, and at the same time, how can it be? the larger context of his article goes on to make the pt that the function of "anti-discourse" is apotropaic --it replenishes the status quo by introducing novelty, by being an outlet for anti-discursive impulses, etc --its a realm of pure subjectivity where the subject can, as it were, get its yayas out and then return to function all the better within the strictures of institutional discourse. thus its relevance and utility to the new anti-fordist, pro-"creativity" model of corporate productivity. maria d

↑ Index

586. Steve Shoemaker
technorationality
Sat 28 Sep 1996

I have only filch's testimony that he has received the sort of message described below. But if it is true, I'd like to register my perturbation. In the rather lengthy, if intermittent, time i've been participating here, the list has always been "unmoderated." That means people make their posts directly to the list and say pretty much whatever the hell they want to. When someone says something other listmembers deem inappropriate, then those members tell him or her so. This is what happened with the bleeding edge case, and in my opinion this is the way it should work.

It is, on the other hand, ridiculous to say that the bleeding edge posts simply took up too much disk space. There's a lot of junk posted here all the time taking up more space than those few forwards. Max Weber, as many of you are no doubt aware, once used a couple of big German words to make the distinction between "rationality of means" and "rationality of ends." He thought our modern technocratic society was far too enamored of the former, and I agree. We like to pose narrowly technical questions rather than large moral ones. Our political leaders like to ask questions like, "Can we drop an A-bomb on Hiroshima?" rather than "Should we?" If the "listmaster" (Charles?) wants to formulate and enforce a policy based on ethical grounds then that policy should be clearly stated and made "public" to the members of the list. The ethical content of the question at hand should not be disguised by recourse to a "technical" rationale.

If this isn't, in fact, what has happened, I bow down before the Listmaster and apologize to everyone for wasting valuable list space-time. Otherwise, it seems to me worth thinking about.

steve

filch wrote:

"The poster of these texts - AKA "not playing w/ a full deck", "boring", "flamebait", "shallow, not very bright nuisance", "posturing", "abusive", "quarrelsome and condescending", has been notified by the custodian of the Poetics List that the 14k of memory which the bleeding edge texts filled were an "overload" on the system and so for technical reasons it would be necessary to refrain from

"casually forwarding messages or otherwise writing messages with minor interest to the list as a whole."

↑ Index

587. Simon Schuchat
filch no, firbank yes
Sat 28 Sep 1996

---

considering the meaning of "filch" (petty theft, unannounced borrowing), the shifting handles and the faux-provocative messages, doesn't he seem rather an "unreliable" narrator? I mean, I'm as bourgeois as anyone else on this list, and I haven't been epater'd, so what's the point?

my question for the list, is Firbank's novel "The Flower Beneath the Foot" (aka "Prancing Nigger") socially progressive or not? And could Firbank's strategy in that novel be used today (not necessarily with the same ethnic and genre components) to any useful effect?

↑ Index

588. Tenney Nathanson
post-fordist yayas
Sun 29 Sep 1996

>i rite: one argument i tussle with constantly is the karlheinz stierle's >contention that poetry is essentially "anti-discourse." i find this liberating,
>and at the same time, how can it be? the larger context of his article goes on >to make the pt that the function of "anti-discourse" is apotropaic --it >replenishes the status quo by introducing novelty, by being an outlet for >anti-discursive impulses, etc --its a realm of pure subjectivity where the >subject can, as it were, get its yayas out and then return to function all the >better within the strictures of institutional discourse. thus its relevance and >utility to the new anti-fordist, pro-"creativity" model of corporate >productivity. >maria d

Maria--

citation? it'll make it blue Monday to read it, but I better

thanks,

Tenney

↑ Index

589. Alan Sondheim
for Tosh Berman and David Bowie
Sun 29 Sep 1996

---

a what b is c this d glassy-eyed e stare
f that g has h no i ontic j sense k in l its m nubby n head o but p lulu q to r be s there t or u find v a w lewd x mumu y better z read slut, tis Liszt, massy guy's beware!

flat jazz goes sonic; hence wins Kit's stubby bed!
tut!, booboo's hew, see where bores mind, shut rude mama's letter dead!

↑ Index

590. maria damon
Re: post-fordist yayas
Sun 29 Sep 1996

---

tenney n rites:
> Maria--
>
> citation? it'll make it blue Monday to read it, but I better
>
tenney: it was originally in german, i read it in french; it's "Identite du discours et transgression lyrique." poetique 32, novembre 1977. he actually talks about lyric --i guess maybe i'm misrepresentning it to call it "poetry"--md

↑ Index

591. Joe Amato
Re: query...
Sun 29 Sep 1996

---

maria, yeah, i'd love to have that citation too...

let's see if i've got this right: poetry (or poetic anti-discourse) serves basically as an outlet so that the subject is that much more willing to be normalized?... this would require a theory of the subject, anyway, or subjectification... i mean, why would poetry perform this function (primarily?) and not, say, sex?... i can see the appeal, as you say, to postfordist creativity corps, but what i don't see is the logic of the corporation here except insofar as poetry serves some sort of release function for nasty corporate motive...

what interesting about whyte's book, again, is that his theory of the organizational is steeped in discussions of chaos and such like... and because he aligns this with poetry, or with certain interpretations of certain poetries (coleridge's fascination with starlings, for example), the anti-discursive beingness of poetry (i'm recombining here) is positioned as a vital complement to the discursive of doing, as in fact directly appealing to those very same sciences of disorder and emergent order (i'll stop short on this latter here, but suffice to say he reads james gleick's book on chaos as definitive, when in fact ilya prigogine/isabelle stenger's book on same (_order out of chaos_) twists things in distinctively european directions which are considerably more formidable in terms of language and the like)... i mean to say that whyte's is not, as i read it, an oppositional or strategic relationship, one in which corporate motive is unwittingly accommodated by poetry's unorthodox gestures, but a relationship structured by the very nature of things... the only opposition whyte articulates is that of the old corporate (fordist) logic, which for whyte is giving way to the new as much out of necessity as anything else (which is why i see a natural-evolutionary gradient here too)...

i'm making this a bit less fuzzy than does whyte, so caveat emptor...

seems to me one of the problems this sort of thing poses IS esp. educational... i can recall being sent to motorola (along with the rest of my school's faculty) about four years back for quality-creativity-ethics-leadership (qcel) training (i narrated this episode hereabouts perhaps a year ago)... anyway, the 'creativity' aspect of said training reflects precisely the turn you suggest, and in fact mirrors some of the "creative" rhetorics i was exposed to when i worked in industry (and was sent through similar 'training')... and there is now a course on 'creativity' on my campus, along with another course on "innovation" (much easier word for corporate types to swallow), etc... i say this w/o wishing to denigrate any of my colleagues or their work, but i think it's fair to call attention to the perceived legitimacy of this category as an educational slot...

best,

joe

↑ Index

592. wheeler
Quick Query
Sun 29 Sep 1996

Sorry to ask all, but anyone handy this evening who can translate "la curandera"? Many thanks.

Susan Wheeler

↑ Index

593. Tony Green
Re: the bleeding edge
Sun 29 Sep 1996

Better late than never? -- my first posting (Friday) went by mistake only to Gabrielle Welford, instead of the list.

There is one feature of the "bleeding edge" affair that interests me. How, on e-mail, do you tell fact from fiction (or fict from faction)? -- after the "renga-novel" of Loden-Bowering-et-al . The lack of location and voice and visible body of participants makes it hard to know what is to be taken as "authentic". Irony is also sometimes hard to detect. A distasteful affair, perhaps, but it does raise some interesting questions about electronic "communication".

I thought the postings were "made up" -- Eliza evidently seems to have had no doubt about their factuality. Response to some extent depends on how they were taken. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

594. Mark Roberts
(FWD) AWOL: HECATE magazine's special offer
Sun 29 Sep 1996

>Date: Mon, 30 Sep 1996 06:14:32 +1000
>To: [redacted]
>From: [redacted] (awol)
>Subject: AWOL: HECATE magazine's special offer
>
>The following information has been posted by AWOL on behalf of >HECATE magazine. Please address any inquiries to the editor at the >contacts listed below.
>
>*******
>
>
>Hecate: A Women's Interdisciplinary Journal, now in its 22nd year of >publication, offers perspectives on the situation of women in Australia >with a particular emphasis on issues of class, race, sexuality and gender.
>The latest issue (22.1) includes The Image of the Backyard Abortionist in >Pro-abortion Politics; Abortion and Class in Australian Women's Novels;

>`Non-political' Lesbian Organisation in Melbourne; Whatever Happened to >Feminist SF; Hetty Wietzel; Aboriginal Domestic Servants in Queensland and >Creative writing.
>
>
>Subscriptions: Aust$20 Individual
> Aust$60 Institutional
>
>For a sample copy, send Aust $5.
>Hecate
>PO Box 99
>St Lucia Q4072
>Australia.
>
>Editor:
>Associate Professor Carole Ferrier
>Department of English
>The University of Queensland
>St Lucia, QLD 4072
>Australia.
>
>Email: [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>
>
>*******
>
>
>AWOL
>Australian Writing On Line
>[redacted]
>http://www.ozemail.com.au/~awol
>PO Box 333 Concord NSW 2137 Australia
>Phone 61 2 7475667, Mobile 015063970
>Fax 61 2 7472802
>
>
>
>

Mark Roberts
Student Systems Project Officer
& User Representive SIS Team.
Information Systems
University of Sydney NSW 2006 Australia
Ph. (02) 93517710
Mobile 015063970
Fax (02) 93517711

↑ Index

595. Mark Roberts

(Fwd) AWOL: Launch of HOW TO CONCEIVE OF A GIRL

Sun 29 Sep 1996

>Date: Mon, 30 Sep 1996 06:26:20 +1000
>To: [redacted]
>From: [redacted] (awol)
>Subject: AWOL: Launch of HOW TO CONCEIVE OF A GIRL
>
>The following information has been posted by AWOL on behalf of Randon >House/Vintage publishers and author Beth Spencer. Please address any >enquiries to the publisher or author at the contacts listed below.
>
>*******
>
> You are invited to celebrate the launch of > HOW TO CONCEIVE OF A GIRL, > stories and novellas by Beth Spencer, > published by Vintage Australia.
>
> Sydney
> Soho Bar, upstairs, Picadilly Hotel, 171 Victoria Street, Kings Cross > Wednesday 2nd October, 6.30 for 7 pm > launched by Anna Gibbs
>
> Blue Mountains
> Varuna Writers Centre, 141 Cascade Street, Katoomba
> Saturday 12th October, 2 pm > launched by Tom Flood
>
> Melbourne
> The International Lounge Bar, 1st floor, 18-24 Market Lane, Melbourne

>(off Bourke Street, between Russell & Exhibition Streets)
> Wednesday 16th October, 6.30 for 7pm
> (MC to be confirmed)
>
>Enquires: contact Tracey Carr
>at Random House Australia on (02) 9954 9966 >or email: [redacted]
>
>
>
>
>*******
>
>
>AWOL
>Australian Writing On Line
>[redacted]
>http://www.ozemail.com.au/~awol
>PO Box 333 Concord NSW 2137 Australia
>Phone 61 2 7475667, Mobile 015063970
>Fax 61 2 7472802
>
>
>
>
Mark Roberts
Student Systems Project Officer
& User Representive SIS Team.
Information Systems
University of Sydney NSW 2006 Australia
Ph. (02) 93517710
Mobile 015063970
Fax (02) 93517711

↑ Index

596. Kenneth Goldsmith
Marjorie Perloff Homepage Update
Sun 29 Sep 1996

Author and critic Marjorie Perloff's Author's Page at The Electronic Poetry Center has been updated:

http://www.buffalo.edu/epc/authors/perloff

Several papers will be of interest to members of this group:

*Wittgenstein's Ladder: Poetic Language and the Strangeness of the Ordinary (1996)

*Introductory Chapter to Wittgenstein's Ladder (1996)

*Whose New American Poetry?: Anthologizing in the Nineties

*Barbed-Wire Entanglements: The New American Poetry 1930-32

*What Has Occured Only Once: Barthes's Winter Garden / Boltanski's Archives

*The Music of Verbal Space: John Cage's "What You Say"

*John Cage's Dublin, Lyn Hejinian's Leningrad: Poetic Cities as Cyberspaces

*What We Don't Talk About When We Talk About Poetry: Some Aporias of Literary Journalism

*Parker Tyler: Late Late Modern

*Postmodernism / Fin de Siecle:The Prospects for Openness in a Decade of Closure

*Sentence, not Sentence

*Poetry 1956: A Step Away From Them

*Tolerance and Taboo: Modernist Primitivisms and Postmodernist Pieties

*Modernism without the Modernists: A Response to Walter Benn Michaels

*Something is Happening Mr. Jones

*Discussing Ezra Pound

========== Kenneth Goldsmith
work: http://www.ubuweb.com [redacted] play:
http://wfmu.org/~kennyg [redacted]

↑ Index

597. George Bowering
Re: the bleeding edge
Mon 30 Sep 1996

Hey, was that a real letter from Tony Green, discussing the fictionality of stories on the net? Or was it a construction?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

598. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Quick Query
Mon 30 Sep 1996

No exact translation, but: a curandera is a "medicine woman," or someone who cures the ill.

Patrick Pritchett

From: wheeler
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Quick Query
Date: Monday, September 30, 1996 8:20AM

Sorry to ask all, but anyone handy this evening who can translate "la curandera"? Many thanks.

Susan Wheeler

↑ Index

599. Mary Hilton
Announcement: Political Diction
Mon 30 Sep 1996

Just in time for the debates, "Political Diction, Issue 1996" is now available. A multi-partisan magazine distributed each election year, PD deals with issues involving the electoral process, politics, our government, and most specifically the election year 1996.

Contributors are Joe Amato, Charles Bernstein, Elizabeth Burns, Craig Czury, Buck Downs, H. Kassia Fleisher, Jefferson Hansen, Andrew Levy, Rod Smith and Mark Wallace. Their work is humorous, demanding, intelligent and an excellent commentary on the state of the campaigns.

Cost is $2.00. All checks may be made payable to Mary Hilton and mailed to:

Political Diction
c/o Mary Hilton

1706 U Street, NW, #102
Washington, DC 20009

Thank you!

↑ Index

600. Jordan Davis
the way of all languages
Mon 30 Sep 1996

---

would that poetry were anti-discourse?
so what is it, para-discourse? a way into all languages?
what is it with that Seinfeld guy?

J

↑ Index

601. Laura Moriarty
Re: Quick Query
Mon 30 Sep 1996

La curandera means the healer, in this case female.

> Sorry to ask all, but anyone handy this evening who can translate "la curandera"? Many thanks.
>
> Susan Wheeler

↑ Index

602. Tony Green
Re: the bleeding edge
Mon 30 Sep 1996

"Hey" ""George Bowering"" or "whatever" is "out there",("where?"), uncertainty as to what or who makes the stuff appear on screen gets to "people" ok. Why else did Eliza ask the list to serve up bra sizes?

How does anyone ever know when anyone is "making things up"? There's a central poetics question, "I" suppose. Good day or good night to "you".
best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

603. Tony Green
Re: the way of all languages
Mon 30 Sep 1996

Why do you mention Seinfeld, Jordan, in the context of yr question? some episode you've seen recently? perhaps not yet onsold to other parts of the globe? or just some general sense of the show? best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

604. wheeler
Thanks
Mon 30 Sep 1996

Many thanks to all those who took a moment to answer my quick query either above or below ground (sorry, can't stand the net lingo). It was immensely helpful.

Susan Wheeler

↑ Index

605. george hartley
Re: Quick Query
Mon 30 Sep 1996

If you mean the phrase itself (that is, you are not referring to a work by that title), it means (I believe) something like medicine woman, an herbalist and healer, with a sort of magical touch.

--George

> La curandera means the healer, in this case female.
>
> Sorry to ask all, but anyone handy this evening who can translate "la curandera"? Many thanks.
>
> Susan Wheeler

↑ Index

606. Jordan Davis
Re: the way of all languages
Mon 30 Sep 1996

I mean yada yada yada yada!
Lap up the joy! the situationism's gerting stronger lately. When I fight authority, authority always wins.
And you know, 'senses of responsibility' to keep awake, Julius Caesar carried a box of

↑ Index

607. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest post-constructionism and lingerie
Mon 30 Sep 1996

all right. i admit it. i was seduced by a new zealand entrepreneur who, reading in numerous postings of the alleged fascination with various articles of intimate apparel professed by participants in this mutual endeavour (or, if we are to be lockeian, isolated beings who are persuaded by the mere evidence of their self-mediated perceptions of senses that they participate in what only their senses inform them are mutual endeavours among conjectured others), thought that if he had the inside skinny (or not skinny, as the case may be) on personal clothing telemetry for various unnamed members of list, a killing in direct, _targetted_, marketing might be made.

perhaps it was an error in judgement on my part, but the benefices offered to the literary are notoriously scant, whilst the expenditure of the avant garde on intimate habillement is notoriously bloated, thus i made certainly understandable, if poorly disguised, efforts to augment my income with what was promised to be a generous percentage. of the swag.

unfortunately, the aforesaid new zealand entrepreneur has refused to fork over; some people were, evidently, brought up to disregard the promises of the evening. one might wish the undertakings of certain pan-oceanics were writ on more than the wind, but as the man said, a verbal contract is not worth [so it appears] the paper it is printed on...

it might be considered some bolstering (albeit scant) of the rumors of actual meat people engaged in parlance (as opposed to literary, fictional, and/or conspirational constructs) if measurements had been produced together with whimsical and incrementally internally consistent idiosyncratic response, but the skeptics may consider this merely accidental or experimenter-introduced artifact and go off muttering about monkeys and typewriters....

e

↑ Index

608. Bob Holman

Re: POETICS Digest - 28 Sep 1996 to 29 Sep 1996

Mon 30 Sep 1996

La Curandera -- healer, "curer," esp. with organics. Can be associated with spells. Can be associated with Santeria.

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

October 1996

698 messages · Tue 1 Oct 1996 – Thu 31 Oct 1996

On the third of October the Swedish Academy gave the Nobel Prize in Literature to Wisława Szymborska, and for once the list engaged the news wholeheartedly: some thirty letters on the prize, the Academy, Heaney three years earlier, what a Nobel is for and whether it can be for a poet at all. October was the month the room thought about readership from every side it had. It thought about it more thoroughly than any month that year. And on the twenty-second, at half past ten in the morning, three thousand miles from most of the people writing, a woman who wanted very much to be read set herself alight.

Before that, two arguments, and both of them are about her without knowing it. The first was Dodie Bellamy's. Still teaching, still playing the subject supposed to know, she posted a poem from another listserv that struck her as a perfect example of bad student poetry, and asked the room a real question: when something wholly wrong-headed and wholly sincere is put in front of you, and your mind goes blank, and you cannot simply grunt out don't do this anymore — what do you say "as a way to begin a dialogue?" Twenty-eight letters tried to answer her. It is one of the kindest threads in the archive.

The second was the old one. Fifty-odd letters ran under politics & poetry and its variants, set off by the Perloff–Warsh exchange in Talisman and by Eliot Weinberger's charge that the Language poets were "Reagen-era capitalist dupes" for unhinging words from history much as Reagan had. Perloff's line that "The personal is the political" was quoted at the room and the room took it apart. Can a poem do political work; is a poetics a politics; what would it even look like if it were. The thread was still running on the twenty-second.

Kathy Change was forty-six. She had changed her name from Chang to mean it. For fifteen years she had danced and carried flags on the University of Pennsylvania campus, arguing that America must be remade into something actually democratic, and almost nobody had listened. Two hours before she died she "delivered packages of her writings to six students" and two residents of the neighbourhood. Her statement, dated the seventh, said her real intention was to spark a discussion of how the world might be peacefully transformed, and that she offered herself as "an alarm against Armageddon and a torch for liberty". She died within the half-hour. Louis Cabri, a poet in the English department there, forwarded the wire report to the list the next afternoon.

What followed is four days long and I have not touched a line of it. Pat Pritchett said, honestly, “I don’t see the point of Ms. Change’s actions”, never having heard of her. Steve Shoemaker posted a sentence of Williams — “The perfect type of the man of action” is the suicide — and the room turned to it with relief and did not turn back. Jennifer-Alan found the Williams “It’s also incoherent and ugly” and offered to deconstruct man, action, perfect and type; maria damon noted the words were Nietzsche’s; henry gould and George Bowering finished on Hemingway and touché. Nobody opened the packages. I have set the sincerity thread, the politics thread and the twenty-second where October put them, because this is the month a room spent four weeks asking how to answer sincerity and whether a poem can be political, and then a sincere political writer handed her writing to six strangers and died to make somebody read it, and the room discussed a quotation.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 698 in all.

WRITERS

Amato, Joe 20, 21, 83, 109, 117, 152, 193, 246, 262, 335, 393, 468, 487, 500, 509, 591, 624, 676
Barbour, Douglas 86, 87, 204, 228, 229, 247, 494, 555, 557, 593
Battin, Wendy 209, 239, 513
Beard, Tom 140, 368, 414
Bell, Thomas 82, 95, 377, 416, 417, 418, 473, 615, 696
Berman, Tosh 437, 446, 463
Bernstein, Charles 154, 263
Bouchard, Daniel 40, 107, 596
Boughn, Michael 15, 145, 148, 159, 195, 422
Bowering, George 1, 10, 37, 38, 75, 80, 81, 138, 139, 172, 216, 236, 254, 259, 312, 313, 373, 401, 402, 403, 442, 454, 563, 697, 698
Brennan, Sherry 340, 475
Brook, James 258, 421, 522, 541
Brown, Pam 316, 489, 560
Bursky, Rick 264, 550
Cabri, Louis 419, 420, 453, 456, 462, 476, 490, 512, 519, 561
Carll, Steve 27, 324, 364, 367, 398, 408, 517, 518, 638
Carnography 192, 232, 378, 464, 552, 584, 585, 589, 660, 666
Cayley, John 2, 3, 97, 98, 99, 100, 241, 436
Cheek, Cris 299, 347, 379, 380, 381, 546
Cheney, Don 280
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 278, 647
Chirot, Christina Fairbank 5, 12, 18, 39, 49, 50, 305, 343, 506, 549, 575, 634, 689
Chris, Simon Or 77, 147
Clay, Steven 181
Clippinger, David W. 143
Clubb, Issa 452
Coffey, Michael 122, 125, 482, 502
Cope, Stephen 215, 225, 587
Crown, Kathleen 558, 566, 567
Damon, Maria 6, 22, 23, 34, 41, 112, 113, 132, 146, 156, 179, 180, 205, 223, 237, 243, 250, 288, 300, 388, 424, 425, 458, 497, 498, 505, 525, 528, 530, 537, 538, 539, 547, 548, 571, 586, 625, 626, 628, 648, 651, 672, 686
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 267
Davis, Jordan 11, 25, 31, 33, 47, 84, 116, 118, 160, 166, 168, 189, 226, 283, 303, 315, 323, 326, 333, 346, 385, 389, 430, 444, 472, 495, 507, 508, 542, 545, 570, 640, 670, 681, 695
Dlugonski, Dan Raphael 260, 268, 661
Drake, Robert 105, 201, 510
DS 175, 194, 240, 298, 360, 480
Edwards, Ken 255
Epc 58
Epstein, Andrew D 131, 231, 613
Evans, Steve 235, 371, 564, 573
Felix, Joel 217
Foster, Edward 59, 108, 574
Funkhouser, Chris 504
G, Henry 17, 121, 397, 434, 448, 474, 492, 579, 605, 609, 610, 623, 627, 649, 654, 683
Geraets, John 450, 595
Glazier, Loss 245, 256, 351, 386, 524, 526, 527, 531, 532, 533
Gleason, Eryque 253, 374, 429, 646, 665
Goldsmith, Kenneth 52, 53, 455
Gordon, Nada 200
Gould, Henry 8, 64, 119, 144, 151, 307, 358, 423, 520, 521, 523, 590, 668
Green, Jeremy F 55, 249, 317, 318, 356
Green, Tony 14, 32, 124, 129, 196, 198, 199, 221, 265, 286, 413, 441, 514, 515
Guest, Eliza McGrand- CVA 61, 543, 544
Hansen, Jeff 157, 569, 622, 679
Hehir, K.a. 577
Henry 16, 73, 74, 104, 149, 161, 167, 337, 383, 427, 467, 568, 632, 636, 690
Hilton, Mary 438, 669
Hollo, Anselm 76, 409
Holman, Bob 106
Huang, Yunte 85, 572, 619, 620
Januzzi, Marisa 222, 352
Jarnot, Lisa 89, 252, 281, 410
Jennifer-Alan 536, 551
Jfelix 484
Joris, Pierre 9, 72, 211, 212, 276, 407, 412, 426, 465, 680, 682, 684
Kaona 123
Kellogg, David 7, 128, 359, 499, 556, 642, 657
KENNEDY, MICKIE E. 191
Killian, Kevin 91, 93, 101, 102, 142, 242, 244, 251, 270, 271, 272, 273, 279, 285, 332, 369, 370, 460, 503, 608, 630
Kimmelman, Burt 45, 111
Kinsella, John 269
Kirschenbaum, Matt 197, 411, 529, 612
Landers, Pete 372
Larkin, Peter 344
Lease, Joseph 163, 164, 165, 576, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 652, 653

Lecky, Thomas 471
Levy, Herb 162, 176, 187, 188, 257, 314, 329, 469, 470
Lew, Walter K. 656
Lightman, Ira 306, 394, 395, 435
List, Poetics 169
Loden, Rachel 178, 207, 224, 331, 339
Luoma, Bill 26, 43, 44, 183, 213, 277, 297, 439, 493
Machlin, Dan 24, 309, 311
Main 581, 658
Malone, Tom 406
Mandel, Tom 338, 384
Marsh, William 134, 186
McClure, Wendy 141
McHale, Brian 219, 644
McVay, Gwyn 220, 387, 639, 645
Messerli, Douglas 60, 62, 66, 68, 88
Moriarty, Laura 488
Muratori, Fred 153
Nathanson, Tenney 36
Nielsen, Aldon L. 310, 325, 328, 345, 362, 363, 400, 404, 405, 431, 440, 451, 534, 535, 565, 635, 637, 678, 692
Orange, Thomas M. 415
Osman, Jena 659
Pape, Eric 479
Pollet, Sylvester 4, 19, 150, 671
Price, Larry 687
Pritchett,Pat 130, 158, 208, 218, 248, 284, 287, 291, 304, 366, 466, 485, 511, 633, 655, 677, 688
Prone, T-Bone 685
Quartermain, Peter 171, 173, 174
Reiner, Christopher 46, 588
Rifkin, Libbie 120
Roberts, Gary 127, 136, 210
Roberts, Mark 35, 202, 296, 301, 320, 321, 322, 330
Roitman, Judy 56, 71, 206
Rothenberg, Jerry 190
Rotor, Elda 592
Samuels, Lisa 674
Schmid, Julie Marie 13, 496, 559
Schuchat, Simon 582, 616
Schultz, Susan 135, 182, 629
Schuster, Joshua N 617
Scroggins, Mark W 614
Selby, Spencer 491
Sherry, James 349, 350
Sherwood, Kenneth W 597, 694
Shoemaker, Steve 126, 155, 234, 447, 459, 501, 540
SHURIN, AARON 354
Silliman, Ron 65, 103, 177, 203, 382, 443, 667
Simon, Beth 114, 115, 261, 562
Smith, Charles 110, 170, 290, 342, 353, 693
Smith, Rod 29, 63, 90, 92, 137, 361, 376, 396, 432, 606, 607, 618, 631, 641, 643, 675
Sondheim, Alan 48, 67, 69, 78, 79, 96, 233
Sondheim, Alan Clara 282, 289, 293, 295, 308
Sondheim, Alan Honey 461, 477, 478
Sondheim, Alan Jen 553, 650, 663
Tabbi, Joe 57
Tal, Kali 266
Thilleman, Tod 54, 230
Tietz, Ward 51, 70, 214, 554
Timmons, Jeffrey W. 457, 483, 486, 611, 662, 691
Tosh, This Is 673
TremblayMcGaw, VPI R 481, 664
Tuma, Keith 227, 275, 327, 341, 375, 392, 433, 449, 580
Varnes, Kathrine 42
Vincent, Stephen 294
Wallace, Mark 274, 334, 336, 357, 428, 594, 621
Watts, Charles 28
Welford, Gabrielle 30, 94, 184, 185, 292, 319, 348, 390, 391, 583
Wheeler 399
Wiens, J.l. 578
Wystan 133
Zamsky, Robert 238, 355, 516
Zukowski, Peter 302, 445
}, { Brad Brace 365

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbott, Keith 488
Abrams, Jen 391
Acker, Kathy 56, 666
Adams, Robert 421, 502, 659
Agee, James 130
Aitken, Adam 202
Albon, George 242, 260
Alexander, Charles 140, 222
Alexander, Jane 481
Alice, Mary 592
Allan, Don 125
Allan, Edgar 681
Altieri, Charles 169, 375
Americans, Asian 49, 371
Anderson, Jon 415, 666
Anderson, Laurie 56, 202, 415, 666
Andre, Michael 241, 260, 403
Andrews, Bruce 24, 257, 349, 350
Antin, David 493
Apollinaire, Guillaume 120, 131
Arnold, Bob 491, 681
Ashbery, John 58, 60, 120, 131, 153, 154, 161, 245, 252, 253, 256, 260, 269, 613
Ashley, Renee 491
Ashley, Robert 70

Atkins, Tim 410
Auden, W. H. 633
Austin, Geer 491
Aviram, Amittai F. 42
Ayler, Albert 305
Bacharach, Burt 460
Baker, Lori 573
Baker, Mary 421, 522
Balaz, Joe 202
Balpe, Pierre 554
Baraka, Amiri 154, 245, 256, 259, 260, 310, 340, 606
Baratier, David 336, 417, 491
Barlow, John 491
Barnard, Mary 49, 573
Barnes, Diane 183, 234
Barnett, Anthony 98
Baudelaire, Charles 65, 66
Baudrillard, Jean 18, 39, 72
Baxter, Ted 491
Beckett, Samuel 100, 130, 136, 137, 158, 546
Beckett, Tom 491
Beckman, Joshua 521
Beckman, Paul 521
Bellamy, Dodie 91, 491
Belle, Cecelia 491
Benjamin, Walter 49, 66, 71, 202
Benn, Walter 375, 580
Bennett, John M. 49, 491
Bentley, Scott 281
Bergvall, Caroline 263, 327
Berkeley, Michael 49, 270, 564, 608, 630, 664
Berkson, Bill 242, 260, 488, 681
Berlin, Irving 290, 338, 343, 491
Bernard, George 49, 269
Bernhard, Thomas 542
Bernstein, Emma 49, 137, 141, 164, 256, 598, 619, 623
Berrigan, Anselm 89, 252, 281, 410, 430, 542, 545, 681
Berrigan, Eddie 120, 131, 132, 226, 253, 260, 488
Berrigan, Edmund 251
Berry, Jake 105, 260, 491
Bertola, Carla 491
Bidart, Frank 327, 341, 375
Bishop, Elizabeth 566, 681
Blackburn, Paul 373, 398, 522
Blaser, Robin 386
Blau, Rachel 606, 659
Blazer, Stuart 8
Borkhuis, Charles 334
Botts, Gregory 545
Boughn, Mike 162, 634
BpNichol 201, 305, 313, 343, 555, 634
Bradley, Daniel 491
Bradley, Tom 201
Bradstreet, Anne 681
Brainard, Joe 410
Brashear, Jim 659
Brazil, David 491
Brodey, Jim 681
Brodsky, Joseph 76, 79, 103, 384
Bronk, William 227
Brown, Ann 89, 252, 253, 260, 385, 545, 659, 681
Bruno, Franklin 380, 491, 680
Bryant, Elizabeth 681
Buckley, Jeff 659
Bunting, Basil 306, 327, 375
Burgaud, Patrick 554
Burger, Mary 491, 659
Burns, Avery 242, 260, 491
Burns, Elizabeth 491, 669
Burroughs, William S. 56, 340
Burrus, Harry 491
Burton, Philip 2
Butterick, George 28
Buuck, David 93
Byrum, John 491
Caesar, Little 623
Cafe, Poets 558
Cage, John 211, 345, 384
Cameron, Sharon 681
Capen, Samuel P. 154
Carlos, William 66, 71, 445, 606
Carroll, Jon 30
Carroll, Lewis 666
Casey, Sean 5
Castro, Michael 241, 260
Cather, Willa 681
Catling, Brian 327
Catullus 348
Celan, Paul 27, 66, 71, 324, 364, 398, 408, 518, 638
Ceravolo, Joseph 545
Chaloner, David 98
Chang, Juliana 99, 476, 485, 501, 511, 656
Chang, Tina 592
Chapman, Lee 491
Cherry, Don 305
Chester, Jeff 491
Child, Abigail 666
Chirot, Dave 8
Chomsky, Noam 432, 607
Cigale, Alex 491, 584, 660
Claire, Paula 680
Clare, John 114
Clark, Cheryl 456
Clark, Susan 270, 491
Clarke, Jack 169
Clifford, Pat 491
Clinton, Bill 30, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 655, 667

Clippinger, David W. 143
Cobain, Kurt 373, 378, 384, 398
Cobbing, Bob 51, 491
Colby, Todd 430, 508, 542, 681
Coleman, Victor 305
Coltrane, Alice 251
Coltrane, John 256
Columbus, Christopher 93, 348, 491
Comments, Chicago 589
Conner, Bruce 93
Conrad, Tony 158
Conte, Joseph 245, 260, 606
Coolidge, Clark 160
Cooper, Dennis 606, 666
Coover, Robert 552, 573, 589
Corbett, Robert 491
Cornell, Katherine 154, 245, 256, 260
Corso, Gregory 491
Costanza, George 32
Coultas, Brenda 410, 430, 439, 542, 545
County, Madison 391
County, Mike 49, 56, 226
Cox, Kenneth 606
Crane, Lee 681
Crane, Margaret 93
Crane, Stephen 681
Creeley, Bob 148, 149, 154, 156, 159, 162, 170
Creeley, Robert 103, 127, 128, 130, 154, 199, 227, 231, 245, 254, 256, 259, 260, 265, 278, 310, 351
Cross, Elizabeth 659
Crowe, John 148, 614, 616, 618
Crown, Kathy 169, 558
Crozier, Andrew 98, 327
Curtis, Dana 302
Czury, Craig 669
Césaire, Aimé 355
Daive, Jean 680
Daly, Lew 334
Darras, Jacques 680
Davidson, Harriet 169, 558
Davidson, Ian 558
Davie, Donald 306, 327, 334, 347, 371, 375, 394
Davies, Alan 349, 350
Davies, Kevin 125, 430
Davis, Leslie 242, 260
Davis, Martin 281, 430
Davis, Ray 30
Davis, Tim 226, 323, 410, 430, 508, 659
Dawkins, Richard 663
Day, Jean 349, 350
Debrot, Jacques 8
Deguy, Michel 613, 680
Delaney, Samuel 552
Dennis, Michael 181, 297, 391, 491, 659
Derrida, Jacques 306, 519
Desmond, Rae 391, 499, 502
Dickinson, Emily 165, 681
Dine, Jim 154
Dlugos, Tim 606
Dole, Bob 597, 646
Donnelly, Jean 92
Donovan, Thom 307
Doris, Stacy 58, 60, 89, 659
Doyle, Erica 491
Drucker, Johanna 181, 659
Duncan, Andrew 97, 162, 242, 260, 263, 306, 491, 633
Duncan, Robert 162
Durand, Marcella 226
Dutton, Paul 305, 343, 353, 354, 573, 589
Dylan, Bob 18, 31, 34, 35, 38, 40, 148, 149, 364, 373, 378, 382, 398, 444, 605
Dylan, Michael 25, 39, 149, 320, 338, 340, 343, 373, 415, 422, 666
Edgar, Chris 681
Edmond, Murray 181
Eigner, Larry 56, 71, 206, 302, 349, 350, 634
Elena, Maria 8, 82
Eliot, Joe 145, 173, 306, 569
Eliot, T. S. 681
Ellen, Mary 292
Elliot, Joe 89, 297, 410
Elliott, George 313
Ellis, Stephen 491
Eluard, Paul 181
Emerson, Claudia 602, 681
England, Amy 100, 307, 347, 371, 394, 407, 573
Eno, Brian 303, 320, 329, 330
Erickson, Ann 491
Ernst, Max 49, 406
Eshleman, Clayton 491
Espitallier, Michel 680
Evason, Greg 201
Fagin, Larry 389, 402, 430, 681
Faulkner, William 681
Federman, Raymond 584, 660
Fenton, Jayne 659
Filreis, Alan 297
Finch, Peter 226
Fischer, Norman 256
Fisher, Allen 327, 386
Fisher, Harrison 97, 140, 263, 327
Fitterman, Robert 252, 253, 260, 297, 410, 430
Fleisher, Kass 669
Fletcher, Nielsen 49, 145, 173, 491
Fodaski, Elizabeth 410, 430, 491
Folsom, Eric 491
Foust, Graham 202, 336, 417, 491
Fox, Skip 491

Fox, William 659
France, Peter 51, 311, 491, 554, 680
Frances, Mary 49
Fraser, Simon 49, 422, 491
Frazer, Tony 491
Freeman, Brad 49, 659
Freilicher, Jane 681
Frost, Corey 79, 84, 128, 130, 177, 179
Frost, Robert 76, 79, 681
Fuller, Heather 659
Fuller, William 92, 445
Ganick, Peter 491
Gardner, Drew 89, 252, 253, 260, 281, 410, 545
Gass, William 573
Gevirtz, Susan 97, 242, 260, 659
Gilbert, Roger 471, 491, 494, 680
Gilmore, Gary 559
Ginsberg, Allan 256, 596, 603, 605, 625, 650, 655
Ginsberg, Allen 56, 252, 253, 260, 582, 598, 603, 606, 613, 625
Gioia, Dana 327
Giscombe, Cecil 80, 81, 102, 107, 141
Gitlin, Todd 49
Gizzi, Michael 573
Gizzi, Peter 573
Gladman, Renee 242, 260, 336, 417
Godfrey, John 410, 439, 545
Goldman, Judith 89, 226, 410, 430
Golumbia, David 659
Gomez, Audrey 491
Good, Philip 252, 253, 260, 410, 430, 681
Goodman, Craig 93
Gordon, Ruth 49
Gould, Glenn 149, 361, 423, 432, 474, 623, 627, 683
Graham, Jorie 369
Graham, Susan 98, 260, 263, 369
Gray, David 181
Greene, Jonathan 1, 49
Greenwald, Ted 681
Gregory, Dick 226, 503
Grenier, Bob 333
Griffin, Tim 226, 430, 681
Griffiths, Bill 263, 327
Grossman, Allen 375
Guattari, Félix 677, 680
Gudath, Lauren 242, 260
Guest, Barbara 242, 260, 573, 606
Guest, Edgar 308
Gunn, Paula 86, 87
Gunn, Thom 231
Hall, Lind 528, 586
Hall, Steven 226, 681
Hall, Stuart 343
Halle, Craig 491
Halliday, Mark 613
Halsey, Alan 263
Hamilton, Diana 49
Hansen, Jefferson 46, 92, 334, 491, 578, 669
Harb, Marcella 545
Hardin, Rob 192, 208, 224, 232, 378, 408, 464, 470, 546, 552, 573, 584, 585, 589, 660, 666
Harper, Michael 573
Harris, Ken 241, 260, 387, 491, 666, 681
Harryman, Carla 435, 659
Harvey, George 49, 52, 54
Harvey, Lee 52
Harwood, Lee 327
Haslam, Michael 327
Hass, Robert 169, 375, 428, 558
Hatlen, Burt 2
Hawkins, Bobbie 391
Hawkins, Ralph 98
Hawthorne, Alison 260
Hawthorne, Nathaniel 681
Heaney, Seamus 58, 60, 63, 65, 66, 76, 77, 79, 83, 90, 91, 94, 101, 109, 112, 114, 115, 116, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 157, 176, 178, 204, 228, 240, 260, 394, 494, 499, 502, 513, 555
Heidegger, Martin 285, 293
Heidsieck, Bernard 51, 65, 66
Hejinian, Lyn 55, 86, 165, 302, 340, 613
Heller, Michael 386, 606
Hengst, Clifford 93
Henning, Barbara 252, 253, 260, 281, 410, 430, 545, 659
Henri, Charles 70, 491, 680
Herbert, George 77, 181
Herman, Rachel 681
Hewicker, Scott 93
Higgins, Dick 181
Highfill, Mitch 410
Hill, Crag 491
Hirsch, Edward 491
Hirschman, Jack 181, 183, 234
Hoffman, Daniel 681
Hollander, John 681
Hoover, Edgar 275, 276, 278
Hoover, Paul 491
Howard, David 140
Howard, Richard 415, 534, 614, 678, 686
Howe, Susan 55, 86, 260, 372
Hughes, Langston 681
Hughes, Peter 98
Hughes, Ted 86, 116, 680
Huk, Romana 2
Hull, Jeff 252, 253, 260, 430
Hunter, Carrie 49
Indiana, Gary 261, 503, 606
Inman, Peter 137

Ireland, Lauren 94, 122, 499, 502
Israel, David R. 491, 691
Israeli, Henry 106
Jackson, Jesse 89, 185, 297, 378, 410, 491
Jackson, Michael 378
Jacob, Max 445, 680
Jirgens, Karl 491
Johns, Jasper 49
Johnson, Nicholas 98
Johnson, Robert 384
Johnson, Ron 206, 212, 215, 217, 218, 219, 220, 222, 225, 227, 231, 236, 248, 260
Johnson, Thomas 206, 215, 217, 218, 219, 222, 225, 227, 229, 231, 244, 248, 260, 332, 342, 352, 353, 354, 369, 569, 592, 659
Johnston, Daniel 290
Johnston, Devin 227, 231
Jones, Bob 93, 97, 260, 263, 281, 299, 305, 546
Jones, David 249
Jones, Jill 202
Jones, Tom 103
Jordan, June 11, 12, 13, 25, 32, 40, 43, 47, 53, 84, 90, 116, 160, 161, 166, 168, 189, 256, 283, 297, 303, 315, 317, 320, 324, 326, 329, 330, 333, 345, 346, 367, 385, 389, 402, 496, 498, 504, 523, 570
Joseph, Safdie 163, 166, 185, 314, 522, 569, 598, 599, 600, 626
Jouet, Jacques 680
Joyce, Michael 145, 158, 173, 308
Kalleberg, Garrett 545
Karasick, Adeena 659
Katz, Steve 545
Kaufman, Alan 592
Kaufman, Andy 477
Kearney, Larry 242, 260
Keats, John 666
Keckler, Joseph 491
Kelley, Karen 659
Kelley, Mike 49
Kelly, Paul 49
Kelsey, Karla 24
Kennedy, Kit 49
Kermode, Frank 472, 489
Kerouac, Jack 267, 271, 279, 280, 284, 293, 305, 313, 315, 606
Killian, Sean 89, 545
Kimball, Cynthia 659
King, Martha 386
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 411, 529, 612
Knott, Bill 341
Knowles, Alison 181
Koch, Kenneth 76, 79, 613, 681
Koethe, John 375
Kostelanetz, Richard 302
Kramer, Wendy 8
Kristeva, Julia 606
Kuhn, Steve 154, 245, 256, 260
Kushner, Tony 545
Lacan, Jacques 267, 271, 280, 284, 395
Larkin, Philip 318, 327, 394
Laughlin, James 153, 430
Lauterbach, Ann 573
Lavagnino, John 524, 525, 526, 529
Lazer, Hank 111, 334
Lear, Edward 666
Lederer, Katie 681
Lederer, Katy 89
Leftwich, Jim 491
Lehman, David 613
Leigh, Mike 642, 651
Leithauser, Brad 55, 86
Lennon, John 338, 343
Leonard, Tom 94, 334, 569
Levertov, Denise 633
Levi, David 353, 354
Levin, Jonathan 49
Levinas, Emmanuel 606
Levine, Jeffrey 681
Levine, Phil 297, 375
Lew, Walter K. 656
Lewis, Joel 681
Lewis, Susan 47, 49, 202, 545
Lloyd, Warren 202, 491
Locke, Duane 242, 260
London, Frank 2, 3, 98, 99, 100, 125, 263, 347, 348, 386, 406, 415, 436, 460, 491, 546
Loney, Alan 491
Long, Paul 336, 417
Lopez, Richard 263, 327
Lorca, Federico García 65, 66
Mac Low, Jackson 667, 681
Lowell, Amy 86
Lyons, Kim 252, 253, 260, 281, 410
Mackey, Nathaniel 491
Madison, James 49, 114, 491
Madrid, Anthony 491
Magee, Kevin 659
Malanga, Gerard 659
Mallarmé, Stéphane 51, 181, 606
Malmude, Anna 430, 542, 545, 681
Malmude, Steve 542, 545
Mandelstam, Osip 8, 338, 343, 623
Manning, Nicholas 49, 242, 260, 564, 573, 630, 664
Manson, Peter 491
Marley, Bob 98
Martin, Chris 98, 299, 390, 464, 546, 612, 666
Mason, George 49, 491
Mathews, Harry 471
Maud, Ralph 28
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 343, 549, 634

Mayer, Bernadette 252, 253, 260, 410, 430, 681
Mayer, Jane 410, 445
McCaffery, Steve 125, 512, 659
Mellors, Anthony 491
Meltzer, David 181, 488
Melville, Pierre 681
Mengham, Rod 98
Merrill, Stuart 153
Merwin, W. S. 127, 128, 130
Messerli, Doug 66, 67, 68, 69, 71, 73, 74, 75, 78, 87, 88, 104, 138, 275, 276, 278
Meyer, Tom 659
Michaels, Leonard 375, 580
Middleton, Peter 98
Miller, Lee 659
Mills, David 226
Milne, Drew 263, 275, 278, 344, 491
Milosevich, Karla 93
Milton, John 569, 610
Mitchell, Stephen 606
Monk, Ray 606
Moore, Marianne 681
Moore, Michael 185, 456, 475, 477
Moore, Nicholas 153, 249, 260, 263, 275, 278, 391, 456, 479, 484, 491, 575
Morgan, Robin 57
Morris, Tim 202, 495, 496, 497, 498, 504, 681
Morrison, Jim 348, 415, 666
Morrison, Rusty 348, 666
Morrow, Bradford 491
Morton, Colin 420, 429
Mossin, Andrew 491
Mottram, Eric 386
Moure, Erin 270, 369
Moxley, Jennifer 428, 564, 606, 630, 664
Mukherjee, Aryanil 319
Muldoon, Paul 125, 555
Murphy, Michelle 202
Murray, Elizabeth 305, 659
Myles, Eileen 154, 245, 260
Nader, Ralph 675, 685
Napora, Joe 491, 575
Neilson, Melanie 252, 253, 260, 659, 681
Nelson, Gale 49, 573
Neruda, Pablo 136, 158
Newman, Denise 659
Nguyen, Hoa 491, 659
Nicholson, Andy 258, 421, 522
Niedecker, Lorine 66, 71, 606
Nielsen, Aldon L. 310, 325, 328, 345, 362, 363, 400, 404, 405, 431, 440, 451, 534, 535, 565, 593, 633, 635, 637, 661, 678, 692
Nixon, Richard 569, 681
Norman, Peter 49, 488, 491
Norton, John 55, 86, 122, 153, 372
Notley, Alice 147, 488, 613
Noto, John 334, 491
Nowak, Mark 491
O'Hara, Frank 428, 447
Ochs, Larry 340
Olds, Sharon 327
Oliver, Douglas 275, 278, 327
Oliver, Laura 192, 208, 263, 315, 327, 557, 565, 593, 693
Olsen, Lance 584, 660
Olson, Charles 9, 10, 28, 86, 125, 127, 128, 130, 137, 256, 259, 385, 492, 494, 566, 634
Olson, John 202
Oppen, George 71, 86, 569, 580, 597
Orange, Thomas M. 415
Ortiz, Travis 659
Orwell, George 491
Ostriker, Alicia 169
Pacific, Asian 49, 99, 202, 481, 664
Padgett, Ron 613
Palmer, Michael 55, 86, 443, 659
Park, Louis 491
Parker, Karl 403, 491, 542
Parkway, Neal 491
Partch, Harry 211, 343
Patterson, Ian 49
Patton, Julie 89, 385
Penberthy, Jenny 606
Perelman, Bob 644
Perloff, Marjorie 142, 143, 181, 334, 569, 580, 606
Perot, Ross 185
Perry, David 659
Peters, Mark 202
Peterson, Katie 506
Pettet, Simon 59, 545, 681
Phillip, Andrew 56
Pinsky, Robert 428
Piombino, Nick 349, 350, 659
Plimpton, George 681
Pluto, Anne E. 297
Poe, Allan 681
Porter, Anne 613
Portugal, Anne 58, 60, 491
Potter, Steve 49
Potts, Charles 235, 275, 278, 306, 315, 317, 327, 334, 337, 356, 371, 375, 394, 413, 416, 423, 425, 441
Potts, Robert 235, 249, 260, 275, 278, 306, 327, 371
Pound, Ezra 66, 71, 192, 208, 427, 606
Pound, Scott 40, 66, 145, 158, 173, 226, 257, 264, 306, 371, 579
Prevallet, Kristin 8, 334, 438, 659
Prigent, Christian 680
Di Prima, Diane 39
Pritchett, Patrick 130, 144, 158, 208, 218, 232, 248, 260, 272, 284, 287, 289, 291, 304, 308, 366, 466, 485, 501, 511, 633, 655, 663, 677, 688

Prynne, J. H. 263, 269, 275, 278, 318, 327, 334
Purcell, Jack 491
Quasha, George 181
Quinn, Terry 30
Quixote, Don 638
Ramsdell, Heather 545
Randall, Karen 49
Rasula, Jed 181
Raworth, Tom 97, 290, 334, 341
Reagan, Nancy 444, 569
Reed, Lou 252, 253, 260
Retallack, Joan 2, 659
Rexroth, Kenneth 147
Rich, Adrienne 90, 141, 169, 558
Ridge, Cedar 491
Ridge, Tom 491
Riding, Laura 297
Riley, Denise 327
Riley, John 97, 185, 258, 263, 443
Riley, Peter 98, 327
Rilke, Rainer Maria 430
Rimbaud, Dee 235
Rivera, Alex 93
Robbins, Bruce 659
Robertson, Lisa 270, 369
Robertson, Pat 270
Robeson, Paul 558
Robinson, Mary 491, 642, 651, 681
Robinson, Peter 98
Rockwell, Norman 104, 681
Rodefer, Stephen 97, 263
Roediger, David 49
Rogers, Kimberley 49
Rollins, Henry 12, 13
Rollman, Michelle 93
Roosevelt, Franklin 680
Rorty, Richard 49
Rosenberg, Jim 241, 260
Rosenfield, Kim 430, 681
Ross, Diana 369
Ross, Joe 92, 491
Ross, Stuart 491
Rotenberg, Tina 242, 260
Rothenberg, Jerome 181, 606
Rothschild, Douglas 89, 226, 252, 253, 260, 410, 430, 542
Rubin, Michael 49
Rumble, Ken 307
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 242, 260
Salerno, Mark 339, 491
Sanchez, Jorge 169, 558
Sanders, Jay 56, 251
Sartre, Paul 72, 285, 293
Satie, Erik 606
Savage, Tom 681
Scalapino, Leslie 93, 302, 334
Schlesinger, Kyle 49
Schneeman, George 681
Schneider, Dan 258, 592
Schultz, Lou 664
Schuster, Josh 617
Schwartz, Jay 242, 260, 491
Schwartz, Judy 569
Sexton, Anne 65, 66
Shakespeare, William 579
Shapiro, Daniel 545
Shapiro, David 439, 545, 613
Shapiro, Gary 545
Sharma, Prageeta 89, 319, 410, 545
Shelley, Andrew 98, 100
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 100, 581
Sheppard, Robert 491
Sherman, Bill 210
Sikelianos, Eleni 410, 430, 545
Simic, Charles 127, 128, 130
Simms, Colin 98
Simon, Greg 77, 90, 98, 147, 347, 443, 481, 522, 582, 598, 614, 616, 618
Simone, Frank 136, 158
Sinclair, John 98, 249, 255, 260, 327, 413, 416
Sloan, Margaret 202
Smith, Dave 375
Smith, Tracy K. 12, 13, 56, 93, 202, 242, 252, 253, 260, 460, 659, 666
Snyder, Gary 613
Snyder, Rick 127, 128, 130, 596, 603, 605, 625, 641, 653
Sokal, Alan 423, 425
Solnit, Rebecca 242, 260
Sorrentino, Christopher 154, 245, 256, 260, 302, 471, 584, 660
Spahr, Boyd 430
Spahr, Juliana 323, 334, 370, 394, 410, 430, 491
Spandrift, Jack 307
Sparrow, John 281
Spence, Pete 491
Spicer, Jack 86
Sprague, Jane 491
Stadler, Matthew 242, 260
Stanley, Jared 49, 270
Steele, Timothy 341
Stefans, Kim 659
Stein, Chuck 281
Stein, Gertrude 125, 156, 159, 170
Stein, Suzanne 55, 86
Steinem, Gloria 369
Stengel, Jill 5
Stevens, Wallace 681
Stewart, Amanda 51

Stewart, Rod 305
Stewart, Susan 270
Strang, Brian 242, 260, 270
Stratton, Dirk 244, 260
Strauss, Zoe 66, 353, 354
Strickland, Stephanie 202
Stroffolino, Chris 89, 297, 430, 545, 681
Sullivan, Gary 8, 659
Sumner, Graham 491
Sweeney, Jennifer K. 49
Szamatowicz, Carol 670
Tarn, Nathaniel 334
Tate, Allen 148
Tate, James 341, 428
Taylor, Brigham 430
Taylor, Thomas 491
Tejada, Roberto 491
Templeton, Fiona 659
Terry, Philip 185, 202
Texas, Irving 37, 49, 261, 522
Theater, Poets 242, 260
Theroux, Alexander 471
Thomas, Dylan 202, 226, 378, 456, 476, 485, 501, 511, 642, 651, 666, 671, 680
Thompson, Jon 491
Thurston, Scott 386
Timmons, Jeffrey W. 457, 466, 483, 486, 611, 662, 691
Toscano, Rodrigo 92
Towle, Tony 681
Trevor, Jesse 211, 461
Trinidad, David 606
Tudor, David 211, 343
Turner, Brian 98, 428
Twain, Mark 176, 178, 681
Updike, John 681
Upton, Lawrence 386, 491
Valentine, Jean 464, 470
Vangelisti, Paul 491
Vassilakis, Nico 659
Vincent, Gregory 242, 260, 491, 613
Virgil 347
Vitiello, Chris 491
Wagner, Catherine 176, 178
Waldman, Anne 659
Waldo, Ralph 681
Waldrop, Keith 302
Waldrop, Rosmarie 8, 302, 573
Walker, Alice 307, 440, 442, 451, 460, 463, 666, 673
Walker, Scott 436, 437, 460, 666
Wallace, Sara 93, 302, 413, 491, 644
Walsh, Catherine 580
Warren, Kenneth 491
Warsh, Lewis 252, 253, 260, 410, 545, 569, 580
Washington, Harold 30, 49, 185, 226, 338, 343, 384, 391, 426, 438, 481, 491, 681
Wasserman, Ann 302
Watson, Craig 573
Watson, Sasha 18, 39, 72, 202
Watten, Barrett 165, 334
Weaver, Rebecca 145, 173
Weber, Charles 491
Weigl, Charles 370, 430
Weinberger, Eliot 275, 276, 278
Weiner, Hannah 137, 566
Weinfield, Henry 606
Welch, Brian 49, 97
Welch, John 98
Welish, Marjorie 573
Wellman, Don 659
Wentworth, Don 491
Whalen, Philip 488
Wharton, Samuel 681
Wheale, Nigel 98
Whitman, Walt 165, 297, 681
Wieners, John 430
Wilkinson, Joshua 97, 263
Williams, Tony 49, 66, 71, 120, 131, 140, 153, 173, 281, 371, 563, 568, 606
Williams, William Carlos 343, 681
Williamson, Aaron 263, 299, 491, 546
Wilson, Steve 49, 202, 506
Woolf, Virginia 158
Wright, James 659
Yamanaka, Ann 94
Yasinski, Nick 558
Yates, Katie 659
Yau, John 147, 302
Young, Karl 181, 305
Zedd, Nick 430, 508, 542
Zimmerman, Daniel 39, 333
Zukofsky, Louis 66, 71, 127, 128, 130, 375
Zweig, Janet 659
Žižek, Slavoj 606

CONCEPTS

9/11 456
Activism and protest 30, 49, 169, 197, 319, 393, 476, 485, 501, 511, 558, 569, 581, 597, 608, 612, 688
Aesthetics 83, 90, 91, 117, 127, 141, 148, 169, 186, 192, 208, 340, 389, 393, 402, 423, 425, 558, 570, 606, 666
African American poetry 202, 401, 503
Anthologies 24, 55, 86, 100, 235, 249, 255, 257, 260, 263, 269, 275, 278, 327, 347, 371, 372, 407, 413, 416, 500, 503, 504, 574
Appropriation 42, 57, 77, 141, 169, 181, 197, 291, 304, 308, 313, 343, 348, 379, 380, 430
Archives and libraries 28, 49, 153, 245, 258, 260, 309, 311, 344, 385, 412, 421, 443, 454, 455, 460, 472, 489, 491, 513, 522, 541, 555, 560, 573

Autobiography 54, 122, 251, 542, 666
Avant-garde 82, 127, 128, 130, 181, 306, 327, 371, 375, 382, 384, 396, 406, 425, 445, 478
Beat generation 267, 315
Beauty 18, 72, 235, 267, 270, 271, 280, 284, 662
Biography 29, 157, 222, 634
Book announcements 8, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 88, 100, 103, 202, 235, 241, 245, 251, 258, 260, 281, 297, 311, 336, 417, 428, 430, 438, 456, 573, 592, 638
Bookstores 18, 55, 72, 86, 191, 222, 248, 260, 294, 592
Calls for submissions 169, 455, 528, 558, 567, 571, 620
Capitalism 25, 235, 306, 318, 327, 371, 384, 395, 397, 545, 569, 606, 621, 630, 664
Censorship 334, 394, 396
Cities 185, 238, 243, 258, 260, 421, 503, 528, 592, 647
Class 197
Close reading 428, 433, 447, 453, 459, 462, 519, 528, 561, 666
Collage and montage 406
Conferences and festivals 18, 39, 51, 56, 72, 98, 154, 169, 199, 211, 214, 238, 243, 252, 253, 260, 311, 314, 347, 355, 491, 528, 534, 535, 539, 552, 554, 557, 558, 567, 571, 573, 586, 589, 595, 629
Copyright and permissions 180, 306, 456, 476, 485, 501, 511, 612
Craft 70, 256
Creative writing pedagogy 122, 211, 221, 425, 580, 587, 591, 599, 646, 648, 658, 663, 694
Dada 491
Deconstruction 282, 536, 537, 540, 546
Difficulty 138, 279, 293, 306, 347, 357, 358, 365, 394, 597, 667
Digital archives 52, 53, 455
Disability 299, 586
Dreams 58, 60, 97, 151, 297, 334, 438, 460, 545, 546, 662, 681
Ecology and ecopoetics 30, 282, 612, 634, 653
Editing 145, 173, 211, 347, 479, 491, 502, 620, 634
Electronic poetry and hypertext 2, 27, 46, 58, 207, 230, 241, 245, 256, 260, 274, 324, 331, 334, 336, 339, 351, 357, 364, 367, 386, 398, 408, 417, 428, 447, 491, 517, 518, 524, 525, 526, 529, 531, 532, 560, 594, 621, 634, 638
Elegy 235, 465
Empire and imperialism 605
Epic 410, 411
Epistemology 591, 650, 655
Erasure 98, 342, 352, 353, 354
Ethics 95, 152, 175, 180, 188, 194, 211, 257, 484
Experimental poetry 91, 126, 127, 128, 130, 157, 311, 334, 341, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 368, 372, 375, 377, 383, 384, 404, 413, 414, 418, 422, 425, 491
Fascism 667, 677, 680
Feminism 61, 62, 93, 169, 558
Film 244, 252, 253, 260, 297, 305, 319, 343, 370, 374, 378, 390, 420, 429, 430, 456, 457, 458, 466, 468, 482, 484, 486, 488, 521, 528, 545, 612, 680
Formalism 382, 425, 614, 615, 616, 624, 639
Free verse 416, 624, 628
Futurism 343
Gender 77, 394, 578
Globalization 49
Grants and funding 30, 100, 187, 251, 281, 362, 404, 481, 522, 539, 679, 692
Haiku 256, 336, 417
Humour and satire 44, 260, 281, 297, 335, 341, 370, 378, 467, 542, 546
Identity politics 169, 347, 558, 578, 594, 605
Ideology 30, 235, 262, 266, 407, 421, 484, 581, 598, 606
Improvisation 51, 192, 208, 224, 256, 311, 420, 429, 557
Indigenous and Native poetics 169, 558
Interviews 120, 131, 140, 153, 181, 227, 231, 297, 394, 464, 470, 471, 606
Israel and Palestine 106, 491, 691
Language poetry 83, 91, 101, 126, 137, 235, 257, 297, 327, 334, 341, 344, 394, 600, 626
Latino and Latin American poetry 169, 491, 558
Letters and correspondence 153, 586, 606
List moderation 169, 211, 556, 558
Little magazines 24, 28, 46, 97, 98, 100, 140, 145, 167, 173, 202, 235, 241, 256, 260, 270, 302, 305, 311, 331, 334, 341, 368, 371, 377, 387, 394, 421, 443, 445, 471, 481, 482, 491, 539, 552, 554, 564, 575, 592, 620, 626, 630, 643, 664, 666, 672, 674, 681
Lyric poetry 36, 41, 97, 267, 283, 293, 306, 310, 315, 316, 322, 325, 328, 333, 343, 346, 347, 348, 382, 385, 414, 428, 460, 491, 525, 557, 566
Marxism 235, 509, 525, 602
Materiality of the text 181
Memory 13, 48, 51, 109, 281, 282, 318, 343, 465, 494, 508, 513, 517, 546, 560, 589, 681, 696
MFA programs 42, 57, 573, 587, 599
Modernism 3, 173, 202, 260, 344, 362, 371, 404, 406, 407, 519, 556, 626

Mourning and loss 2, 193, 207, 245, 254, 256, 257, 259, 260, 265, 310, 351, 386, 491, 524, 525, 526, 527, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 556, 659, 671
Multiculturalism 528, 574, 674
Music and poetry 18, 32, 51, 58, 60, 70, 72, 103, 119, 161, 176, 178, 204, 211, 235, 245, 251, 256, 260, 267, 272, 280, 281, 283, 284, 287, 288, 289, 291, 293, 295, 296, 303, 304, 305, 306, 308, 310, 313, 314, 315, 316, 320, 322, 324, 325, 329, 330, 333, 338, 340, 343, 345, 346, 347, 348, 364, 365, 367, 373, 376, 378, 384, 388, 394, 398, 403, 408, 415, 443, 452, 454, 463, 464, 478, 517, 528, 533, 545, 546, 557, 560, 565, 589, 593, 617, 621, 634, 666, 673, 674, 693
Nationalism 371
Nature 81, 95, 107, 181, 185, 193, 235, 257, 357, 359, 431, 489, 569, 570, 579, 589, 591, 613, 624
Negativity and refusal 103, 371
New Formalism 614, 615, 616, 639
New York School 211, 315, 317
Obituary and memorial 386
Ontology 226, 516, 591
Oulipo 252, 253, 260
Performance and the poetry reading 91, 169, 243, 260, 299, 386, 445, 542, 545, 546, 558, 613
Philosophy 2, 18, 72, 145, 165, 173, 187, 235, 285, 295, 296, 304, 308, 344, 453, 459, 522, 591, 602, 606, 691
Place and region 97, 306, 542, 658, 665
Poetics 3, 17, 22, 23, 28, 32, 34, 41, 46, 67, 68, 69, 79, 86, 87, 106, 113, 122, 127, 130, 141, 146, 157, 158, 169, 175, 180, 181, 186, 193, 204, 205, 208, 209, 213, 218, 228, 229, 230, 235, 239, 240, 243, 244, 247, 248, 257, 260, 269, 273, 277, 284, 287, 289, 291, 304, 306, 308, 310, 314, 327, 328, 330, 334, 341, 347, 349, 350, 357, 358, 378, 388, 393, 397, 398, 399, 401, 403, 404, 405, 411, 415, 425, 448, 458, 465, 466, 467, 485, 491, 494, 497, 498, 501, 511, 515, 521, 525, 526, 528, 529, 530, 531, 539, 546, 547, 548, 555, 557, 558, 560, 564, 567, 571, 573, 581, 587, 589, 593, 596, 599, 603, 605, 606, 614, 616, 625, 626, 630, 632, 633, 651, 655, 664, 666, 671, 677, 686, 688
Politics and poetry 91, 183, 569, 574, 578, 590, 596, 597, 598, 603, 604, 605, 607, 608, 610, 620, 622, 625, 633, 634, 635, 646, 648, 650, 653, 655, 658, 665
Postmodernism 344, 362, 404
Print vs. digital 90, 98, 116, 122, 141, 147, 176, 178, 181, 235, 260, 275, 278, 290, 297, 306, 317, 327, 348, 353, 354, 393, 443, 456, 468, 491, 499, 502, 522, 626, 634, 660
Prizes and awards 31, 34, 35, 38, 40, 58, 60, 65, 66, 68, 69, 71, 72, 76, 77, 79, 85, 87, 91, 103, 114, 127, 128, 130, 133, 136, 139, 144, 147, 148, 149, 152, 154, 156, 157, 158, 159, 162, 170, 183, 186, 187, 270, 272, 287, 289, 291, 293, 296, 298, 301, 311, 312, 369, 481, 517, 560, 613
Procedural and constraint writing 235
Prose poem 251, 345, 545
Prosody and meter 297, 306, 378, 415, 428, 666
Psychoanalysis 395, 441
Queer poetics 169, 266, 555, 558, 573
Race and poetry 49, 80, 81, 102, 107, 210, 394, 586, 683
Reading announcements 114, 244, 260, 290, 294, 297, 307, 353, 354, 545, 660, 670
Religion and the sacred 51, 82, 106, 181, 235, 266, 306, 327, 348, 390, 391, 465, 536, 537, 540, 586, 627, 646, 648, 658, 680, 694
Representation 443, 512, 522
Reviewing and criticism 83, 89, 91, 98, 100, 105, 162, 173, 188, 192, 208, 224, 225, 227, 231, 235, 237, 247, 260, 262, 266, 269, 275, 276, 277, 278, 281, 302, 306, 315, 317, 318, 319, 327, 334, 344, 351, 371, 393, 394, 396, 406, 441, 447, 491, 494, 519, 532, 554, 634, 644, 672, 686
Romanticism 347, 519
Science 18, 72, 368, 377, 414, 423, 425, 545, 624, 674
Semiotics 210
Serial poem 86
Small press publishing 24, 71, 89, 93, 201, 213, 245, 260, 270, 281, 306, 310, 318, 319, 340, 352, 353, 354, 369, 438, 481, 533, 564, 573, 589, 630, 664
Software and code 192, 208, 224, 546, 558, 573
Sonnet 120, 131, 132, 150, 151, 153, 322, 523, 606, 656, 657
Sound poetry 51, 70, 201, 311, 374, 429, 455, 634
Subjectivity 258, 267, 566, 598, 666
Sublime 203, 205
Surrealism 281, 334, 516, 521, 542, 666
The academy 7, 35, 42, 49, 56, 57, 62, 68, 69, 71, 86, 87, 89, 96, 100, 105, 120, 128, 129, 130, 131, 153, 154, 169, 197, 198, 202, 204, 206, 211, 228, 229, 232, 240, 244, 247, 260, 261, 296, 297, 311, 320, 321, 322, 330, 340, 341, 344, 348, 358, 359, 360, 365, 371, 375, 378, 391, 411, 416, 422, 423, 425, 434, 454, 475, 476, 477,

481, 485, 491, 494, 499, 501, 503, 506, 511, 522, 528, 529, 552, 555, 556, 557, 558, 573, 586, 589, 591, 593, 594, 595, 613, 622, 623, 642, 651, 657, 667, 672, 674, 678, 686
The body 193, 257, 261, 270, 426, 634
The canon 306, 425
The Holocaust 152, 188, 465
The internet 49, 53, 202, 211, 421, 426, 455, 481, 532, 612, 664
The listserv 9, 10, 30, 66, 71, 82, 91, 129, 142, 148, 149, 188, 189, 211, 215, 217, 218, 222, 267, 268, 271, 280, 284, 310, 315, 325, 349, 350, 384, 388, 394, 412, 426, 463, 467, 476, 485, 501, 511, 569, 576, 619, 621, 674, 678, 684, 686
Theatre 154, 242, 245, 251, 256, 260, 270, 319, 369, 445, 482, 555, 584, 612, 623, 660, 681
Torture and Abu Ghraib 578
Translation 2, 3, 8, 58, 60, 61, 62, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 73, 74, 76, 79, 85, 87, 88, 91, 99, 114, 123, 124, 147, 181, 192, 208, 269, 270, 281, 333, 384, 406, 436, 460, 492, 528, 584, 585, 606, 620, 655, 660, 663, 666, 673
Vietnam 569, 581, 683
Visual and concrete poetry 297, 305, 370, 378, 420, 429, 455, 491, 634
Visual art 56, 65, 66, 140, 157, 190, 210, 242, 245, 256, 260, 307, 311, 319, 343, 358, 360, 365, 406, 439, 528, 545, 621
Voice 122

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 698 in all.

1 OCT 1996

1. George Bowering — Re: the bleeding edge
2. John Cayley — reading retallack
3. John Cayley — modernism and the orient
4. Sylvester Pollet — Kellogg's Mantle
5. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: Mickey's (not Kellogg's) Mantle
6. maria damon — Re: Kellogg's Mantle
7. David Kellogg — Re: Kellogg's Mantle
8. Henry Gould — Nedge
9. Pierre Joris — OLson date
10. George Bowering — Re: OLson date
11. Jordan Davis — slam
12. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: slam
13. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: slam
14. Tony Green — Re: the way of all languages

2 OCT 1996

15. Michael Boughn — Re: Nedge
16. henry — Re: Nedge
17. Henry G — Re: Nedge
18. Christina Fairbank Chirot — what is real and what is not
19. Sylvester Pollet — Kellogg's Mantle/Mantel
20. Joe Amato — new book...
21. Joe Amato — new book...
22. maria damon — Re: new book...
23. maria damon — Re: new book...
24. [redacted]
25. Jordan Davis — Re: the way of all languages
26. Bill Luoma — malomar
27. Steve Carll — Dis Mantel Here?
28. Charles Watts — Re: POETICS Digest - 30 Sep 1996 to 1 Oct 1996
29. Rod Smith — limpets
30. Gabrielle Welford — CAN-RW digest 235 (fwd)
31. Jordan Davis — privileged cultural moments and you!
32. Tony Green — Re: the way of all languages
33. Jordan Davis — Re: the way of all languages
34. maria damon — Re: privileged cultural moments and you!
35. Mark Roberts — Re: privileged cultural moments and you!

3 OCT 1996

36. Tenney Nathanson — Blue Monday citation
37. George Bowering — Re: malomar
38. George Bowering — Re: privileged cultural moments and you!
39. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Immigration Laws & privileged cultural moments
40. Daniel Bouchard — Re: privileged cultural moments and Jordan
41. maria damon — Re: Blue Monday citation
42. Kathrine Varnes — Poet Ad (fwd)
43. Bill Luoma — orion
44. Bill Luoma — rerion (fwd)
45. Burt Kimmelman — Re: orion
46. Christopher Reiner — WITZ address change
47. Jordan Davis — Re: orion

48. alan sondheim — marking maybe
49. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Columbia Teach-in
50. Christina Fairbank Chirot — a stretch of cultural moments

4 OCT 1996

51. Ward Tietz — Geneva Sound Poetry Events
52. Kenneth Goldsmith — Orion
53. Kenneth Goldsmith — Orion In All His Graphic Glory On The Web
54. Tod Thilleman — Re: Orion's Autobiography
55. Jeremy F Green — The New Norton
56. Judy Roitman — Burroughs
57. Joe Tabbi — Re: job announcement
58. epc — Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
59. Edward Foster — LANSING!!! PETTET!!!
60. Douglas Messerli — Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
61. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
62. Douglas Messerli — Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
63. Rod Smith — Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)

5 OCT 1996

64. henry gould — Szymborska
65. Ron Silliman — Heidsieck before Heaney
66. Douglas Messerli — Messerli returing to Szymbroska
67. alan sondheim — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
68. Douglas Messerli — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
69. alan sondheim — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
70. Ward Tietz — Re: Heidsieck
71. Judy Roitman — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
72. Pierre Joris — [Fwd:]
73. henry — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
74. henry — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
75. George Bowering — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska

6 OCT 1996

76. Anselm Hollo — Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
77. Simon or Chris — nobel prize
78. alan sondheim — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
79. alan sondheim — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
80. George Bowering — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
81. George Bowering — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
82. Thomas Bell — Re: poetry and play
83. Joe Amato — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
84. Jordan Davis — Frost's audience
85. Yunte Huang — Re: nobel prize
86. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 3 Oct 1996 to 4 Oct 1996
87. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Oct 1996 to 5 Oct 1996
88. Douglas Messerli — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
89. Lisa Jarnot — Ear Inn Series
90. Rod Smith — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
91. Kevin Killian — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
92. Rod Smith — new B City
93. Kevin Killian — Hope you all can come to my play
94. Gabrielle Welford — Re: Heidsieck before Heaney
95. Thomas Bell — Re: poetry and play

7 OCT 1996

96. alan sondheim — terrible true account of the origin of the text

97. John Cayley — Reality Street Editions Web Site
98. John Cayley — Many Press Web Site
99. John Cayley — Ig-nobel
100. John Cayley — New Books from the Many Press
101. Kevin Killian — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
102. Kevin Killian — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
103. Ron Silliman — SOME OTHER KIND OF MISSION
104. henry — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
105. Robert Drake — forward: New Orleans Rev. call for work
106. Bob Holman — Re: POETICS Digest - 5 Oct 1996 to 6 Oct 1996
107. Daniel Bouchard — Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
108. Edward Foster — Re: LANSING!!! PETTET!!!
109. Joe Amato — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
110. Charles Smith — found
111. Burt Kimmelman — Hank Lazer
112. maria damon — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
113. maria damon — Re: found
114. Beth Simon — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
115. Beth Simon — Re: Heidsieck before Heaney
116. Jordan Davis — Concentration
117. Joe Amato — Re: Concentration
118. Jordan Davis — Re: Concentration
119. Henry Gould — Re: Concentration
120. Libbie Rifkin — Berrigan cites
121. henry g — Re: Concentration
122. Michael Coffey — Re: POETICS Digest - 5 Oct 1996 to 6 Oct 1996 -Reply
123. kaona — Re: Englishes/Latins
124. Tony Green — Englishes/Latins
125. Michael Coffey — Re: Concentration -Reply
126. Steve Shoemaker — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
127. Gary Roberts — polkas, gigues, and slams
128. David Kellogg — Re: polkas, gigues, and slams
129. Tony Green — Re: Englishes/Latins
130. Pritchett,Pat — Re: polkas, gigues, and slams
131. Andrew D Epstein — Re: Berrigan cites
132. maria damon — Re: Berrigan cites
133. wystan — Szymborska
134. william marsh — Dora Marsden
135. Susan Schultz — Re: Englishes/Latins
136. Gary Roberts — yet more Nobel

8 OCT 1996

137. Rod Smith — Re: Concentration -Reply
138. George Bowering — Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
139. George Bowering — Re: nobel prize
140. Tom Beard — New journal - CURRENT
141. Wendy McClure — Anyone up for picking on BAP?
142. Kevin Killian — Re: Marjorie Perloff
143. David W. Clippinger — Marjorie Perloff
144. henry gould — Re: polkas, gigues, and slams
145. Michael Boughn — Re: Dora Marsden
146. maria damon — Re: Englishes/Latins
147. Simon or Chris — poil buck
148. Michael Boughn — Re: Concentration
149. henry — Re: Concentration
150. Sylvester Pollet — WCW vs. The Sonnet

151. henry gould — Re: WCW vs. The Sonnet
152. Joe Amato — nobels, the Good, here we go...
153. Fred Muratori — WCW on the Sonnet
154. Charles Bernstein — Creeley Festival
155. Steve Shoemaker — Re: Dora Marsden
156. maria damon — Re: Concentration
157. Jeff Hansen — what's a good poem
158. Pritchett,Pat — Re: yet more Nobel
159. Michael Boughn — Re: Concentration
160. Jordan Davis — reconstruction
161. henry — Re: reconstruction
162. Herb Levy — Re: Concentration
163. Joseph Lease — Re: reconstruction
164. Joseph Lease — Re: reconstruction
165. Joseph Lease — Re: reconstruction
166. Jordan Davis — Re: reconstruction
167. henry — Re: reconstruction
168. Jordan Davis — homage to Ed Foster
169. Poetics List — Call for Papers (fwd)
170. Charles Smith — Awards
171. Peter Quartermain — (Sort of) end of silence
172. George Bowering — Re: (Sort of) end of silence
173. Peter Quartermain — Re: Dora Marsden
174. Peter Quartermain — Re: (Sort of) end of silence

9 OCT 1996

175. DS — Re: Englishes/Latins
176. Herb Levy — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
177. Ron Silliman — The meaning of Time/Life
178. Rachel Loden — Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
179. maria damon — Re: The meaning of Time/Life
180. maria damon — Re: Englishes/Latins
181. Steven Clay — The Book, Spiritual Instrument / The Word Made Flesh
182. Susan Schultz — Re: Englishes/Latins
183. Bill Luoma — noble
184. Gabrielle Welford — Re: (Sort of) end of silence
185. Gabrielle Welford — "Death in a Landslide" in New York this week (fwd)
186. william marsh — Re: what's a good poem
187. Herb Levy — Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
188. Herb Levy — Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
189. Jordan Davis — chops and steaks (the atmosphere of jokes)
190. Jerry Rothenberg — (no subject)
191. MICKIE E. KENNEDY — Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
192. Carnography — That's Blaxdhhhhhhxqtploitation!
193. Joe Amato — Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
194. DS — Re: Englishes/Latins
195. Michael Boughn — Re: Englishes/Latins
196. Tony Green — Re: Englishes/Latins
197. Matt Kirschenbaum — FYI: MLA Resolution (fwd)
198. Tony Green — Re: Englishes/Latins
199. Tony Green — Re: Creeley Festival
200. Nada Gordon — weightlifting
201. Robert Drake — afterwords website [forward]

10 OCT 1996

202. Mark Roberts — AWOL: New magazine releases (forwarded)
203. Ron Silliman — The Weight

204. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Oct 1996 to 8 Oct 1996
205. maria damon — Re: The Weight
206. Judy Roitman — Ron Johnson
207. Rachel Loden — Re: weightlifting
208. Pritchett,Pat — Re: That's Blaxdhhhhhhxqtploitation!
209. Wendy Battin — Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Oct 1996 to 8 Oct 1996
210. Gary Roberts — watteau
211. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: Electronic Music Foundation Update]
212. Pierre Joris — Re: Ron Johnson
213. Bill Luoma — chat net
214. Ward Tietz — Re: The Weight
215. Stephen Cope — Re: Ron Johnson
216. George Bowering — Re: (Sort of) end of silence
217. Joel Felix — Re: Ron Johnson
218. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Ron Johnson
219. Brian McHale — Re: Ron Johnson
220. Gwyn McVay — Re: Ron Johnson/rumors
221. Tony Green — Re: watteau
222. Marisa Januzzi — Re: Ron Johnson/Dora Marsden
223. maria damon — Jay and Kay deFeo
224. Rachel Loden — assorted indignities

11 OCT 1996

225. Stephen Cope — Re: Ron Johnson
226. Jordan Davis — Bouchard 8, Mills 9
227. Keith Tuma — Re: Ron Johnson
228. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
229. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
230. Tod Thilleman — Re: chat net
231. Andrew D Epstein — Re: Ron Johnson
232. Carnography — Re: That's Blaxdhhhhhhxqtploitation!
233. alan sondheim — ....liam dedrawroF (dwf)
234. Steve Shoemaker — Re: noble
235. Steve Evans — How To Not Read
236. George Bowering — Re: Ron Johnson/rumors
237. maria damon — Re: How To Not Read
238. robert zamsky — Minnesota
239. Wendy Battin — Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996

12 OCT 1996

240. DS — Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
241. John Cayley — Visible Language: New Media Poetry
242. Kevin Killian — Re: Jay and Kay deFeo
243. maria damon — Re: Minnesota
244. Kevin Killian — Ronald Johnson
245. Loss Glazier — Creeley at 70 in Buffalo
246. Joe Amato — Re: How To Not Read
247. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Oct 1996 to 11 Oct 1996
248. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Ron Johnson
249. Jeremy F Green — Re: How To Not Read
250. maria damon — Re: Jay and Kay deFeo
251. Kevin Killian — Steve Carll reading
252. Lisa Jarnot — Ear Inn Update
253. Eryque Gleason — Re: Ear Inn Update

13 OCT 1996

254. George Bowering — Re: Creeley at 70 in Buffalo

255. Ken Edwards — How To Not Read
256. Loss Glazier — Re: Creeley at 70 in Buffalo - Part II
257. Herb Levy — Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
258. James Brook — San Francisco library scandals
259. George Bowering — Re: Creeley at 70 in Buffalo - Part II
260. Dan Raphael Dlugonski — Molecular Jam
261. Beth Simon — _Out Of Nowhere, The Body's Shape_
262. Joe Amato — lentricchia...
263. Charles Bernstein — Conductors of Chaos
264. Rick Bursky — Thirty pound sacks: poem
265. Tony Green — Re: Creeley at 70 in Buffalo - Part II
266. Kali Tal — Re: lentricchia...
267. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: student sincerity

14 OCT 1996

268. Dan Raphael Dlugonski — post-electronic jam
269. John Kinsella — Re: POETICS Digest - 12 Oct 1996 to 13 Oct 1996
270. Kevin Killian — Robertson & Moure rock SPT
271. Kevin Killian — student sincerity
272. Kevin Killian — Re: student sincerity
273. Kevin Killian — Re: student sincerity
274. Mark Wallace — Steve Evans
275. Keith Tuma — Re: Conductors of Chaos
276. Pierre Joris — Re: Conductors of Chaos
277. Bill Luoma — your review
278. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: Conductors of Chaos
279. Kevin Killian — Re: student sincerity
280. Don Cheney — Re: student sincerity
281. Lisa Jarnot — fall ear inn readings
282. alan clara sondheim — blushes, ecology (fwd)
283. Jordan Davis — Re: student sincerity
284. Pritchett,Pat — Re: student sincerity
285. Kevin Killian — Re: student sincerity
286. Tony Green — Re: student sincerity
287. Pritchett,Pat — Re: student sincerity
288. maria damon — Re: student sincerity
289. alan clara sondheim — Re: student sincerity
290. Charles Smith — Fwd: Conquering the World with Type
291. Pritchett,Pat — Re: student sincerity
292. Gabrielle Welford — Help us publicize this as much as possible (fwd)
293. alan clara sondheim — Re: student sincerity
294. Stephen Vincent — Reading
295. alan clara sondheim — Re: student sincerity
296. Mark Roberts — Re: student sincerity

15 OCT 1996

297. Bill Luoma — Trip Report
298. DS — Re: student sincerity
299. cris cheek — Sound & Language event
300. maria damon — Re: Trip Report
301. Mark Roberts — Re: student sincerity
302. Peter Zukowski — Private's Coming Out
303. Jordan Davis — ye olde music thread
304. Pritchett,Pat — Re: student sincerity
305. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Kerouac,bpNichol & listening
306. Ira Lightman — Re: How To Not Read
307. Henry Gould — another reading in RI

308. alan clara sondheim — Re: student sincerity
309. Dan Machlin — Reading: Charles Bernstein & John Kinsella
310. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: return of the repressed (fwd)
311. Dan Machlin — Re: Invasion of the reading reminders
312. George Bowering — Re: student sincerity
313. George Bowering — Re: Kerouac,bpNichol & listening
314. Herb Levy — New Music Web tour
315. Jordan Davis — Re: return of the repressed (fwd)
316. Pam Brown — Songs
317. Jeremy F Green — Re: return of the repressed (fwd)
318. Jeremy F Green — Re: How To Not Read
319. Gabrielle Welford — Actions on Doshi-Hussain Gufa (Press Release) (fwd)
320. Mark Roberts — Re: ye olde music thread
321. Mark Roberts — Re: student sincerity
322. Mark Roberts — Re: Songs
323. Jordan Davis — Tim Davis / Juliana Spahr @ Poetry City
324. Steve Carll — Hey Natalie Merchant
325. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: repressing the returned
326. Jordan Davis — chaos
327. Keith Tuma — Re: How To Not Read
328. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: the other thing I'd never thought to see here

16 OCT 1996

329. Herb Levy — Re: ye olde music thread
330. Mark Roberts — Re: ye olde music thread
331. Rachel Loden — Arshile 6
332. Kevin Killian — Ronald Johnson sighting
333. Jordan Davis — Hit Lyrics
334. Mark Wallace — Keith Tuma and "chest thumping"
335. Joe Amato — Re: How To Not Read
336. Mark Wallace — Situation #13
337. Henry — Re: Keith Tuma and "chest thumping"
338. Tom Mandel — exinclusio
339. Rachel Loden — editor/Arshile
340. Sherry Brennan — nick cave
341. Keith Tuma — Re: Keith Tuma and "chest thumping"
342. Charles Smith — Re: Ronald Johnson
343. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: exinclusi & listening
344. Peter Larkin — Conductors of Chaos
345. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Crossing Jordan
346. Jordan Davis — spirits rejoice
347. cris cheek — Re: How To Not Read
348. Gabrielle Welford — Menocal, Shards of Love (fwd)
349. James Sherry — ROOF BOOKS SPECIAL OFFER
350. James Sherry — ROOF BOOK OFFER
351. Loss Glazier — Flash: Creeley Update
352. Marisa Januzzi — Re: Ronald Johnson
353. Charles Smith — Re: Ronald Johnson
354. AARON SHURIN — Re: Ronald Johnson

17 OCT 1996

355. robert zamsky — Re: Minnesota
356. Jeremy F Green — Re: Keith Tuma and "chest thumping"
357. Mark Wallace — What experimental poets do to the mainstream
358. Henry Gould — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream 359. David Kellogg — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
360. DS — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream

361. Rod Smith — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream 362. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
363. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Corporate Post-Impressionism
364. Steve Carll — defender of pop
365. { brad brace } — Expunged Titles for 1996
366. Pritchett,Pat — Re: grazie
367. Steve Carll — song or poem?
368. Tom Beard — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
369. Kevin Killian — Ronald Johnson, Jorie Graham
370. Kevin Killian — Re: defensiveness as prop?
371. Steve Evans — Re: How To Not Read
372. Pete Landers — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream 373. George Bowering — Re: defender of pop
374. Eryque Gleason — primi too taa
375. Keith Tuma — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream

18 OCT 1996

376. Rod Smith — Re: defender of pop
377. Thomas Bell — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
378. Carnography — Re: defensiveness as prop?
379. cris cheek — Re: What's experimental and totally predictable?
380. cris cheek — Re: "chest thumping" and the uncalled for
381. cris cheek — apologia
382. Ron Silliman — The Times (Lit Sup) are a-changing....
383. Henry — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
384. Tom Mandel — all over the map
385. Jordan Davis — Welcome to the Windhover
386. Loss Glazier — UK Readings
387. Gwyn McVay — Re: defensiveness as prop?
388. maria damon — Re: defender of pop
389. Jordan Davis — Re: defensiveness as prop?
390. Gabrielle Welford — testy response (fwd)
391. Gabrielle Welford — AZI KAMBULE UPDATE (fwd)
392. Keith Tuma — Re: "chest thumping" and the uncalled for
393. Joe Amato — public relations & poetry...
394. Ira Lightman — Re: How To Not Read
395. Ira Lightman — How To Not Read & a political abstraction
396. Rod Smith — Re: How to Not Read
397. Henry G — Re: public relations & poetry...
398. Steve Carll — Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Oct 1996 to 17 Oct 1996
399. wheeler — Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Oct 1996 to 17 Oct 1996
400. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Where are the ag readings of yesteryear
401. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Oct 1996 to 17 Oct 1996
402. George Bowering — Re: defensiveness as prop?
403. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Oct 1996 to 17 Oct 1996
404. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream (fwd)
405. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Corporate Post-Impressionism (fwd)

19 OCT 1996

406. Tom Malone — Helmut Heissenb|ttel
407. Pierre Joris — Re: Helmut Heissenb|ttel
408. Steve Carll — Eclecticism: Snap Crackle AND pop

20 OCT 1996

409. Anselm Hollo — Re: Heissenbuttel encore
410. Lisa Jarnot — Ear Inn Update
411. Matt Kirschenbaum — Darick Chamberlain

412. Pierre Joris — [Fwd: South Africa International Book Drive]
413. Tony Green — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
414. Tom Beard — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
415. Thomas M. Orange — defensiveness as prop?
416. Thomas Bell — Marginalized?
417. Thomas Bell — Re: Situation #13

21 OCT 1996

418. Thomas Bell — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream
419. Louis Cabri — Re: Corporate Post-Impressionism (fwd)
420. Louis Cabri — Re: primi too taa
421. James Brook — SF library controvery - media sources
422. Michael Boughn — Re: What experimental poets do to the mainstream 423. henry gould — Re: Marginalized?
424. maria damon — Re: defensiveness as prop?
425. maria damon — Re: Marginalized?
426. Pierre Joris — Human Rights Watch
427. henry — Re: Meeting the poet through the poem
428. Mark Wallace — close readings
429. Eryque Gleason — Re: primi too taa
430. Jordan Davis — Spahr (long work), Davis 19
431. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Being regarded as a dangerous experimentalist"
432. Rod Smith — Re: Marginalized?
433. Keith Tuma — Re: close readings
434. henry g — Re: Marginalized?
435. Ira Lightman — Meeting the poet through the poem
436. John Cayley — defensiveness as prop?
437. Tosh Berman — Re: defensiveness as prop?
438. Mary Hilton — "Lead, Glass and Poppy" by Kristin Prevallet
439. Bill Luoma — Ichor
440. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: My Ship Is Coming In
441. Tony Green — Re: Marginalized?

22 OCT 1996

442. George Bowering — Re: My Ship Is Coming In
443. Ron Silliman — What is a library?
444. Jordan Davis — A Parade of Theories
445. Peter Zukowski — Poetry reading in Chicago
446. Tosh Berman — Re: My Ship Is Coming In
447. Steve Shoemaker — Re: close readings
448. Henry G — Re: A Parade of Theories
449. Keith Tuma — mountain goats
450. John Geraets — Experimental marginalized
451. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: I'm a Roadrunner, baby
452. Issa Clubb — Re: mountain goats
453. Louis Cabri — Re: close readings
454. George Bowering — Re: What is a library?
455. Kenneth Goldsmith — Call for Papers (Internet)
456. Louis Cabri — michael moore
457. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: michael moore
458. maria damon — Re: michael moore
459. Steve Shoemaker — Re: close readings

23 OCT 1996

460. Kevin Killian — Re: defensiveness as prop?
461. Alan Honey Sondheim — (no subject)
462. Louis Cabri — Re: close readings

463. Tosh Berman — Re: defensiveness as prop?
464. Carnography — mountain goats et albini
465. Pierre Joris — Re: A Parade of Theories
466. Pritchett,Pat — Re: michael moore
467. Henry — Re: A Parade of Theories
468. Joe Amato — Re: michael moore
469. Herb Levy — Re: defensiveness as prop?
470. Herb Levy — Re: mountain goats et albini
471. Thomas Lecky — Qwerty Arts
472. Jordan Davis — british book disaster
473. Thomas Bell — Re: A Parade of Theories
474. henry g — Re: A Parade of Theories
475. Sherry Brennan — Re: Michael Moore
476. Louis Cabri — Kathy Change
477. Alan Honey Sondheim — Re: Michael Moore
478. Alan Honey Sondheim — last of 2
479. eric pape — Re: michael moore
480. DS — Re: michael moore
481. VPI R TremblayMcGaw — Open Studio: The Arts Online
482. Michael Coffey — Re: michael moore -Reply
483. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: michael moore
484. jfelix — Re: michael moore -Reply
485. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Kathy Change
486. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: michael moore -Reply
487. Joe Amato — michael moore...
488. Laura Moriarty — report on Whalen/McClure birthday event
489. Pam Brown — Re: british book disaster
490. Louis Cabri — olson & oratory

24 OCT 1996

491. Spencer Selby — mag list
492. henry g — Re: olson & oratory
493. Bill Luoma — Re: olson & oratory
494. Douglas Barbour — Re: that poem by Seamus Heaney, for Wendy Battin
495. Jordan Davis — to get back to Tracie Morris
496. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: to get back to Tracie Morris
497. maria damon — Re: to get back to Tracie Morris
498. maria damon — Re: to get back to Tracie Morris
499. David Kellogg — Whatever you say say nothing
500. Joe Amato — Re: michael moore -Reply
501. Steve Shoemaker — Re: Kathy Change
502. Michael Coffey — Whatever you say say nothing -Reply
503. Kevin Killian — Re: michael moore -Reply
504. Chris Funkhouser — Re: to get back to Tracie Morris
505. maria damon — Re: michael moore -Reply
506. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Art on the Edge of Fashion
507. Jordan Davis — michael moore's reply
508. Jordan Davis — Poetry City Oct 24 NZ/TC
509. Joe Amato — Re: michael moore -Reply
510. Robert Drake — Re: Whatever you say say nothing -Reply
511. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Kathy Change
512. Louis Cabri — p p p p
513. Wendy Battin — Re: that poem by Seamus Heaney, for Wendy Battin
514. Tony Green — Re: A Parade of Theories
515. Tony Green — Taking a break
516. robert zamsky — Poesis & Politics

517. Steve Carll — Mountain Goats
518. Steve Carll — suicide and narcissism
519. Louis Cabri — famus close readings, #1

25 OCT 1996

520. henry gould — Re: Kathy Change
521. Henry Gould — there was a reading in Providence
522. James Brook — a librarian on libraries--and librarians
523. Henry Gould — Sonnet With Dog In It
524. [redacted]
525. [redacted]
526. [redacted]
527. [redacted]
528. maria damon — Re: CALL FOR PAPERS
529. [redacted]
530. [redacted]
531. [redacted]
532. Loss Glazier — EPC in Public
533. Loss Glazier — Re: Mountain Goats
534. [redacted]
535. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Called Fur papers

26 OCT 1996

536. Jennifer-Alan — Re: Kathy Change
537. maria damon — Re: Kathy Change
538. maria damon — scary message
539. maria damon — Re: Called Fur papers
540. Steve Shoemaker — Re: Kathy Change
541. James Brook — situationist archives on line
542. Jordan Davis — Colby 20, Zedd 3 (65)
543. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: scary message
544. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest — Re: scary message
545. Jordan Davis — Shapiro 15, Coultas 11, Godfrey 10 @ Ichor/Clementine
546. cris cheek — Re: Marginalized?
547. maria damon — Re: scary message
548. maria damon — Re: scary message
549. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: Kathy Change
550. Rick Bursky — "help"
551. Jennifer-Alan — Re: "help"
552. Carnography — There was a reading in Providence? What about Brown?

27 OCT 1996

553. Alan Jen Sondheim — lulled bye (fwd)
554. Ward Tietz — Alire: French Review of Electronic Writing
555. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Oct 1996 to 24 Oct 1996
556. [redacted]
557. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 25 Oct 1996 to 26 Oct 1996
558. Kathleen Crown — more info on Poetry & the Public Sphere
559. [redacted]
560. Pam Brown — Re: Mountain Goats
561. Louis Cabri — Politics; Change; Fabulous poetry; Close reading
562. [redacted]
563. George Bowering — Re: Kathy Change
564. Steve Evans — New Publication

28 OCT 1996

565. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Jump Up

566. [redacted]
567. Kathleen Crown — Re: CALL FOR PAPERS
568. henry — Re: Kathy Change
569. Jeff Hansen — politics & poetry
570. Jordan Davis — Re: politics & poetry
571. maria damon — Re: CALL FOR PAPERS
572. Yunte Huang — Re: politics & poetry
573. Steve Evans — There was a reading in Providence? What about Brown?
574. Edward Foster — Re: politics & poetry
575. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: politics & poetry
576. Joseph Lease — Re: politics & poetry
577. k.a. hehir — Re: Marginalized?
578. j.l. wiens — Re: politics & poetry
579. henry g — Re: politics & poetry
580. Keith Tuma — Re: politics & poetry
581. main — Re: politics & poetry
582. Simon Schuchat — Re: politics & poetry
583. [redacted]
584. Carnography — SPITTING IMAGE Reading on No. 2nd: Forward
585. Carnography — SPITTING IMAGE Reading on No. 2nd: Forward
586. maria damon — Re: postcolonial? other conference ?

29 OCT 1996

587. Stephen Cope — Re: politics & poetry
588. Christopher Reiner — WITZ note
589. Carnography — Re: There was a reading in Providence? What about Brown?
590. Henry Gould — politics & poetry
591. Joe Amato — Re: politics & poetry
592. Elda Rotor — New Digressions magazine
593. Douglas Barbour — Re: POETICS Digest - 27 Oct 1996 to 28 Oct 1996
594. Mark Wallace — "Politics"? "Poetry"?
595. John Geraets — postcolonial? other conference ?
596. Daniel Bouchard — politics, poetry, etc etc
597. Kenneth W Sherwood — Re: JH and Political poetry
598. Joseph Lease — Re: politics & poetry
599. Joseph Lease — Re: politics & poetry
600. Joseph Lease — Re: politics & poetry
601. Joseph Lease — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
602. Joseph Lease — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
603. Joseph Lease — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
604. Joseph Lease — Re: JH and Political poetry
605. henry g — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
606. Rod Smith — new Moxley, Niedecker, Rothenberg, Satie, at Bridge Street
607. Rod Smith — Re: JH and Political poetry
608. Kevin Killian — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
609. henry g — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
610. henry g — politics post hotdog w/mustard
611. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: "help"
612. Matt Kirschenbaum — poetry/media/politics
613. Andrew D Epstein — Gary Snyder Reading (NYC)
614. Mark W Scroggins — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
615. Thomas Bell — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc

30 OCT 1996

616. Simon Schuchat — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
617. Joshua N Schuster — poetry & politics
618. Rod Smith — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc

619. Yunte Huang — Re: politics & poetry
620. Yunte Huang — This Place
621. Mark Wallace — what's relevant to politics
622. Jeff Hansen — (no subject)
623. henry g — (no subject)
624. Joe Amato — new awp...
625. maria damon — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
626. maria damon — Re: politics & poetry
627. henry g — Re: politics & poetry
628. maria damon — Re: new awp...
629. Susan Schultz — melus conference
630. Kevin Killian — Re: New Publication
631. Rod Smith — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
632. henry — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
633. Pritchett,Pat — Re: splitting my very last hair
634. Christina Fairbank Chirot — poelitics
635. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: splitting my very last hair
636. henry — Re: poelitics
637. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: "How do y'all do it?"
638. Steve Carll — new book
639. Gwyn McVay — Re: new awp...
640. Jordan Davis — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
641. Rod Smith — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
642. David Kellogg — Announcement: New Poet
643. Rod Smith — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
644. Brian McHale — Re: politics & poetry
645. Gwyn McVay — /Paradise & Method/
646. Eryque Gleason — Re: JH and Political poetry
647. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
648. maria damon — Re: JH and Political poetry
649. henry g — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
650. Alan Jen Sondheim — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
651. maria damon — Re: Announcement: New Poet
652. Joseph Lease — Re: poelitics
653. Joseph Lease — Re: politics, poetry, etc etc
654. henry g — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
655. Pritchett,Pat — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
656. Walter K. Lew — Re: Announcement: New Poet
657. David Kellogg — Re: Announcement: New Poet
658. main — Re: JH and Political poetry
659. Jena Osman — New issue of Chain is out
660. Carnography — Correction: SPITTING IMAGE Reading
661. Dan Raphael Dlugonski — "Aldon L. Nielsen" <[redacted]> >Subject: Re: Jump Up
662. Jeffrey W. Timmons — 12.31.95
663. Alan Jen Sondheim — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
664. VPI R TremblayMcGaw — Re: New Publication INTERNET 2K Oct-30-96

31 OCT 1996

665. Eryque Gleason — Re: JH and Political poetry
666. Carnography — A late response to prop/Carll thread
667. Ron Silliman — Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)
668. henry gould — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
669. Mary Hilton — Politics, Poetry and "Political Diction"
670. Jordan Davis — the time is at hand
671. Sylvester Pollet — NATIONAL POETRY FOUNDATION WEBSITE OPEN !
672. maria damon — Re: Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)

673. This is Tosh — Re: A late response to prop/Carll thread
674. Lisa Samuels — New WebLit Journal "POEPHYSICS" (fwd)
675. Rod Smith — Re: Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)
676. Joe Amato — Re: Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)
677. Pritchett,Pat — Re: from pol to pal
678. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Always a Bridesmaid State University
679. Jeff Hansen — (no subject)
680. Pierre Joris — from pol to pal
681. Jordan Davis — Object / Poet's Corner / Berkson - Koch
682. Pierre Joris — apos re pol to hal
683. henry g — Re: Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)
684. Pierre Joris — Re: apos re pol to hal
685. T-Bone Prone — Re: Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)
686. maria damon — Re: Always a Bridesmaid State University
687. Larry Price — Re: Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)
688. Pritchett,Pat — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
689. Christina Fairbank Chirot — GISCOMBE READING
690. henry — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
691. Jeffrey W. Timmons — Re: "Politics"? "Poetry"?
692. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: from a justified sinner
693. Charles Smith — Oliver Lake
694. Kenneth W Sherwood — Poetry politics and classrooms
695. Jordan Davis — Re: Poetry politics and classrooms
696. Thomas Bell — Poepolitics?
697. George Bowering — Re: Tiger chasing its tail (or tale)
698. George Bowering — Hmm

1. George Bowering
Re: the bleeding edge
Tue 1 Oct 1996

If it really was a "Tony Greene" who sent the clarifying message from a place designated as "New Zealand", I would like to proffer my thanks for said clarification.

The only problem I am having is deciding whether what I am saying right now is being said by anyone I recognize.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

2. John Cayley
reading retallack
Tue 1 Oct 1996

Should've picked up on this before (has someone already mentioned it?), but there were two interesting papers on JR at the recent New Hampshire conference, (where she also read, wonderfully) -- Burton Hatlen 'Joan Retallack, a philosopher among the poets, a poet among the philosophers' and Alan Devenish, 'Living with the mess: Joan Retallack's "poethical wager"'. Perhaps these are already mounted at the EPC? Or will be published in the proceedings? (Check with Loss Glazier or Romana Huk.)

- - - - - >
John Cayley Wellsweep Press [in Chinese HZ:]
^ innovative literary translation from Chinese ^
1 Grove End House 150 Highgate Road London NW5 1PD UK
Tel & Fax: 0[redacted] Email: [redacted]
http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/
< - - - - -

↑ Index

3. John Cayley
modernism and the orient
Tue 1 Oct 1996

Could someone, back-channel, send me details -- or the organizer's email address -- of the recently forwarded posting to Poetics about a forthcoming conference at Yale on 'Modernism and the Orient'.

Thanks, in anticipation. (I lost the reference it in a delete-key shuffle.)

- - - - - >
John Cayley Wellsweep Press [in Chinese HZ:]
^ innovative literary translation from Chinese ^
1 Grove End House 150 Highgate Road London NW5 1PD UK
Tel & Fax: 0[redacted] Email: [redacted]
http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/
< - - - - -

↑ Index

4. Sylvester Pollet
Kellogg's Mantle
Tue 1 Oct 1996

The quick help on La Curandera made me feel it was perhaps time to respond to David Kellogg's oft-repeated plaint that his fireplace lacks an adjust- able shelf. He borrows words from Thomas Kinsella to say it: There is no mantle/and it does not descend. David, if you see it as a long bosuns chair, the construction is pretty straightforward. Take a 2x8 or 2x10, drill two holes at each end, run lines crossing diagonally under the plank, & tie them together a couple of feet above it (though eye-splices give a more elegant appearance). Attach a single-sheave block to the ceiling, clip (or tie with a bowline) a halyard to the shelf lines, haul it up to what- ever height you like, and tie it off to a cleat on the wall next to the fireplace. If you don't like the halyard crossing the space behind the mantle, you'll need a second block to act as a fairlead--then you can run the halyard along the ceiling to wherever you like--even right to your armchair, if you bolt a cleat to the side. You can adjust it rise-descend without even getting up. But remember, some people don't even have fireplaces. best, Sylvester

↑ Index

5. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: Mickey's (not Kellogg's) Mantle
Tue 1 Oct 1996

And here I've thought all along that it was Mickey's Mantle that does not descend now that Mickey Mantle has ascended to the Hall of Fame in the Sky. As Casey Stengel was wont to say: "You could look it UP."

--dbc

↑ Index

6. maria damon
Re: Kellogg's Mantle
Tue 1 Oct 1996

---

sylvester pollet rites:
> The quick help on La Curandera made me feel it was perhaps time to respond > to David Kellogg's oft-repeated plaint that his fireplace lacks an adjust> able shelf. He borrows words from Thomas Kinsella to say it: There is no > mantle/and it does not descend.

now, this is an area in which i've experienced some confusion of late, don't ask me why it seems to have come up fairly frequently in the last several months: isn't the fireplace thing spelled "mantel," whereas the garment thing is spelled "mantle"?

↑ Index

7. David Kellogg
Re: Kellogg's Mantle
Tue 1 Oct 1996

Thanks for the help! That's as good as the response I got from the geophysicist...

>The quick help on La Curandera made me feel it was perhaps time to respond >to David Kellogg's oft-repeated plaint that his fireplace lacks an adjust>able shelf. He borrows words from Thomas Kinsella to say it: There is no >mantle/and it does not descend. David, if you see it as a long bosuns >chair, the construction is pretty straightforward. Take a 2x8 or 2x10, >drill two holes at each end, run lines crossing diagonally under the plank, >& tie them together a couple of feet above it (though eye-splices give a >more elegant appearance). Attach a single-sheave block to the ceiling, clip >(or tie with a bowline) a halyard to the shelf lines, haul it up to what>ever height you like, and tie it off to a cleat on the wall next to the >fireplace. If you don't like the halyard crossing the space behind the >mantle, you'll need a second block to act as a fairlead--then you can run >the halyard along the ceiling to wherever you like--even right to your >armchair, if you bolt a cleat to the side. You can adjust it rise-descend >without even getting up. But remember, some people don't even have >fireplaces. best, Sylvester

>
>
~~~
~~~

The Poetry Mission is an independent nonprofit all-volunteer arts organization.
- Henry Gould [redacted]

↑ Index

9. Pierre Joris
OLson date
Tue 1 Oct 1996

Would anybody on the list know the exact date of composition of Charles Olson's "A Plan for the Curriculum of the Soul" (the text that is used on the inside covers of the various Institute of Further Studies booklets). I know it dates to somewhere between fall '63 & spring '65, i.e. the date sof Olson's teaching gig at UB, but need a more exact date. Backchannel or post to the list, whatever -- & thanks. Pierre

↑ Index

10. George Bowering
Re: OLson date
Tue 1 Oct 1996

> Would anybody on the list know the exact date of composition of Charles Olson's "A Plan for the Curriculum of the Soul" (the text that is used on the inside covers of the various Institute of Further Studies booklets). I know it dates to somewhere between fall '63 & spring '65, i.e. the date sof Olson's teaching gig at UB, but need a more exact date. Backchannel or post to the list, whatever -- & thanks. Pierre

Pierre. I think Fred Wah might be able to tell you. His address is

[redacted]

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

11. Jordan Davis slam
Tue 1 Oct 1996

Is there any connection between poetry slams and slam dancing? Can we look forward to poetry moshes anytime soon?

Jordan

_____
Jordan Davis
[redacted] "more poetry t-shirts, please"

↑ Index

12. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: slam
Tue 1 Oct 1996

Henry Rollins (Black Flag) comes to mind

lot of punk/poets--Exene Cervenka or earlier Patti Smith & Richard Hell

(pogo as proto-slam . . .

On Tue, 1 Oct 1996, Jordan Davis wrote:

> Is there any connection between poetry slams and slam dancing? Can we look forward to poetry moshes anytime soon?
>
> Jordan
>
> _____
> Jordan Davis
> [redacted] "more poetry t-shirts, please"

↑ Index

13. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: slam
Tue 1 Oct 1996

The poetry slam is actually named in memory of a grand slam that Marc Smith saw Ernie Banks hit. Even so, there seem to be some pretty obvious connections that one could draw between the two.

On Tue, 1 Oct 1996, Christina Fairbank Chirot wrote:

> Henry Rollins (Black Flag) comes to mind
>
> lot of punk/poets--Exene Cervenka or earlier Patti Smith & Richard Hell
>
> (pogo as proto-slam . . .
>
> On Tue, 1 Oct 1996, Jordan Davis wrote:
>
> Is there any connection between poetry slams and slam dancing? Can we look forward to poetry moshes anytime soon?
>
> Jordan
>
> _____
> Jordan Davis
> [redacted] "more poetry t-shirts, please"

↑ Index

14. Tony Green
Re: the way of all languages
Tue 1 Oct 1996

also hopeful but unthought through manipulation breaks down because of the predictable failures of communication between the manipulators yes?

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

15. Michael Boughn
Re: Nedge
Wed 2 Oct 1996

> Published by the Poetry Mission, PO Box 2321, Providence, RI 02906. To order within the U.S.: send $6.25 ($5. issue plus $1.25 postage) to the above address. Or send $10. for a 2-issue postpaid subscription (#4 & 5). Limited copies available; priority will go to those who prepay; but you may also email me your street address & I will send & bill you. Outside U.S.: please email me & we'll figure it out.
>
> Listmember contributors: it's on the way to you!

> The Poetry Mission is an independent nonprofit all-volunteer arts organization.
> - Henry Gould [redacted]

Henry, I'd like to sign up. My address is 653 Euclid Ave., Toronto, ON M6G 2T6. I can send you a cheque. Just let me know. The postage is a bit more I think.

Later,
Mike

↑ Index

16. henry
Re: Nedge
Wed 2 Oct 1996

Thanks, Mike. I haven't done this before - I guess my bank will accept foreign personal checks. I'll send you a copy, check with my bank, and get back to you (that way I'll know the exact postage too). - Henry

↑ Index

17. Henry G
Re: Nedge
Wed 2 Oct 1996

Very sorry, poetics list. Once again the mechanics of "reply" eluded me. I thought it would go back to sender only. - HG

↑ Index

18. Christina Fairbank Chirot
what is real and what is not
Wed 2 Oct 1996

re the recent thread concerning the ficitional & factual and the disappearance of the real--or the real of disappearance-- and the princess and the prince discuss what is real and what is not but there are no truths outside the Gates of Eden

--Bob Dylan

--db cooper aka chirot

> if possible, could you post the following to your list?

CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT:
CHANCE: 3 DAYS IN THE DESERT

JEAN BAUDRILLARD PLAYS (near) VEGAS
with ALLUCQUERE ROSANNE STONE & DIANE DI PRIMA

WHEN? November 8 - 10, 1996
WHERE? Whiskey Pete's Casino, Primm Nevada (see below)
HOW? Check out the CHANCE website at:
http://www.artcenter.edu/events/chance.html
email: [redacted]
phone: 818/[redacted]

WHAT?.....
CHANCE is a philosophical rave & summit meeting between artists & philosophers, chaosophists & croupiers, mathematicians & musicians at Whiskey Pete's Casino in the Nevada desert. A CHANCE to redefine this century's romance with randomness & synchronicity less innocently for our era.

CHANCE to explore the multiplicity of identity.

Three days of chance encouters, gambling & deep thought with Jean Beaudrillard, Allucquere Rosanne Stone & 30 other internationally active cultural strategists.....Music from the San Francisco bands Towel & Ohm-a-Revelator.....a one-time mystery jam between six special guest star musicians with Red Krayola lead guitarist Tom Watson.....the intensely nameless beauty of Oguri & Renzoku butoh.....a roving fun-house of installation art & readings organized by Sarah Gavlak, Pam Strugar & Dan Frydman.

Appearing in addition to Baudrillard, Stone & diPrima will be

DOUGLAS HEPWORTH, Wall Street Chaos Trader
DJ SPOOKY, That Subliminal Kid
SHIRLEY TSE, Hong Kong Artist
ANN ROWER, New York Writer
SYLVERE LOTRINGER, Semiotext(e)ician
JEREMY GILBERT-ROLFE/THE CHANCE BAND/SHEPPARD POWELL
& THE CHANCE OF THE UNKNOWN

Primm, Nevada is located at the border of Nevada & California: Paiute nuclear waste specialist Calvin Meyers will lead a desert walk & talk about the desecration of tribal land.

WHO? As above..... & YOU!

WHY?

> the Outsider Bookstore
> 4505 Fountain Avenue
> Los Angeles, CA 90029
> ph #[redacted]

↑ Index

19. Sylvester Pollet
Kellogg's Mantle/Mantel
Wed 2 Oct 1996

for Maria Damon--yes, though either spelling is acceptable, same word. The French distinguish with a qualifier: manteau and manteau de cheminee. But now, what's the French for bosun's chair? I don't have my big Larousse here, but find maitre d'equipage for bosun (boatswain). Maybe Pierre Joris could help? Ah, Poesy!

↑ Index

20. Joe Amato
new book...
Wed 2 Oct 1996

taking a moment to call your attention to the work of a long-time friend of mine, greg hewitt, whose first book of poetry, _to collect the flesh_, is just out on new rivers press (winner of the minnesota voices project annual competition)...

greg's work is at once intellectually demanding and surprising, constructed around (generally) a lyrical-narrative 'i' that is sometimes colloquial, sometimes more formal... a number of the poems in this collection deal with love between men, and with father-son relationships... perhaps my favorite is "george washington, lover," which is simply remarkable in surfacing a homoerotic potential between washington and alexander hamilton...

highly recommended...

joe

↑ Index

21. Joe Amato
new book...
Wed 2 Oct 1996

EEK... and i go and spell greg's last name wrong... must be some sort of coded alphaphobia...

it's not hewitt, it's hewEtt...

so sorry//

joe

↑ Index

22. maria damon
Re: new book...
Wed 2 Oct 1996

---

ah, joe, you beat me to the draw...and for those of you in the twin cities area, tonite at the Landmark Center in St Paul there'll be a reading/book signing party for greg (by the way it's "hewett" with an e, rather than "hewitt," those of you racing for your "books in print"), at 7 or 7:30. see ya there, groovoids.
bests, maria d

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> taking a moment to call your attention to the work of a long-time friend of > mine, greg hewitt, whose first book of poetry, _to collect the flesh_, is > just out on new rivers press (winner of the minnesota voices project annual > competition)...
>
> greg's work is at once intellectually demanding and surprising, constructed > around (generally) a lyrical-narrative 'i' that is sometimes colloquial, > sometimes more formal... a number of the poems in this collection deal with > love between men, and with father-son relationships... perhaps my favorite > is "george washington, lover," which is simply remarkable in surfacing a > homoerotic potential between washington and alexander hamilton...
>
> highly recommended...
>
> joe

↑ Index

23. maria damon
Re: new book...
Wed 2 Oct 1996

---

oh joe, so sorry, didn't mean to be schoolmarmish...just living up to my Lady Poetrix, Mistress of Discipline persona...
md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> EEK... and i go and spell greg's last name wrong... must be some sort of > coded alphaphobia...
>
> it's not hewitt, it's hewEtt...
>
> so sorry//
>
> joe

↑ Index

24. Dan Machlin
Laura Moriarty and Melanie [redacted]
Wed 2 Oct 1996

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3RD, 7:30 p.m. sharp
SEGUE PERFORMANCE SPACE
303 EAST 8th STREET (BETW AVES B&C)
Suggested Contribution $3.00

LAURA MORIARTY is the author of Symmetry (Avec), L'Archiviste (Zasterle), like roads (Kelsey St), Rondeaux (Roof), Two Cross Seizings (Sombre Reptiles), Persia (Chance Additions) and Duse (Coincidence Press). She is the Director of the American Poetry Archives at The Poetry Center, San Francisco State University. MELANIE NEILSON is the author of Civil Noir (Roof) and Natural Facts (Poets & Poets). A chapbook Vertigo is forthcoming from Moxey Books. An essay "Chandeliers get in my ears: Reading Bruce Andrews" will appear in AERIAL # 9. She has work in upcoming issues of Primary Writing, Tongue To Book (U.K.) and the anthologies Moving Borders (Talisman House) and Out of Everywhere (Reality Street). She is the editor of Big Allis Magazine.

↑ Index

25. Jordan Davis
Re: the way of all languages
Wed 2 Oct 1996

Tony --

Aren't those predictable 'failures of communication' actually the sites of artistic negotiation? Isn't it pleasant to sit here watching the clouds go by while monopoly capitalism extinguishes itself through a bland hierarchical arson? While Bob Dylan sings? While another one steps up to the microphone?

Jordan

_____
Jordan Davis
[redacted]

Orion sightings:
7th & A, eight postings on the phonebooth, dealing mainly with
'nasal crutches'

↑ Index

26. Bill Luoma
malomar
Wed 2 Oct 1996

---

the fans said alomar sucks alomar sucks alomar sucks as the umps took the field last night at yankee stadium

the fans withrew their support later in the game as blue was telling mariano dunken where the bench was after calling him out on a pitch both high & outside with runners on

↑ Index

27. Steve Carll
Dis Mantel Here?
Wed 2 Oct 1996

At 12:02 AM 10/2/96 -0400, Maria Damon wrote:

>now, this is an area in which i've experienced some confusion of late, don't ask >me why it seems to have come up fairly frequently in the last several months:
>isn't the fireplace thing spelled "mantel," whereas the garment thing is spelled >"mantle"?

The garment thing is, to my knowledge, always "mantle", but the fireplace thing can be either "mantel" or "mantle."

****

[redacted] Steve Carll
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/mags/antenym http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/ezines/antenym

In seed-
sense
the sea stars you out, innermost, forever.

--Paul Celan
****

↑ Index

28. Charles Watts
Re: POETICS Digest - 30 Sep 1996 to 1 Oct 1996
Wed 2 Oct 1996

Pierre asks the exact date of composition of Charles Olson's PLAN FOR A CURRICULUM OF THE SOUL. I checked with Ralph Maud, who came up with a letter from Olson to George Butterick, dated 26 February 1968, re/ the publication of the "Plan" in THE MAGAZINE OF FURTHER STUDIES. Olson writes:

"Just for the accuracy, please change word "drugs" in first line of "Plan for a Curriculum of the Soul" to "the mushroom. . . ."

The "Plan" was published in THE MAGAZINE OF FURTHER STUDIES, No. 5, July 1968. Ralph reckons that Olson wrote it expressly for the magazine early in 1968, probably February. The letter can be found in the Don Allen file at the Archive for New Poetry, UC San Diego.

Cheers,

Charles Watts

↑ Index

29. Rod Smith
limpets
Wed 2 Oct 1996

---

from new Bertrand Russell biography by Ray Monk-- little Bertram at five, his first trip to the seashore-- "Aunty, do limpets think?"
"I don't know," she replied.
"Then," he said "you must learn."

↑ Index

30. Gabrielle Welford
CAN-RW digest 235 (fwd)
Wed 2 Oct 1996

Sorry this is kind of long. gab.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 2 Oct 1996 06:28:45 -1000
From: [redacted]

Topics covered in this issue include:

1) Details on mean-spirited immigration bill
   by [redacted] (Center for Campus Organizing)
2) CAN-PEACE: Campus Activism to Cut Military Spending
   by [redacted] (Center for Campus Organizing)
3) CHALLENGE THE LIE$: Lie #2
   by [redacted] (Center for Campus Organizing)

Topic No. 1

<< start of forwarded material >>

From: USSA Erica Adelsheimer <[redacted]>
To: Multiple recipients of list <[redacted]> Subject: Immigration Update

USSA
Immigration Update
October 1, 1996

The immigration bill (H.R. 2202) that passed the House last week was most recently attached to the FY97 CR/Omnibus bill. The CR was passed yesterday by the Senate and signed last night by President Clinton. While some of the most reprehensible provisions of the immigration legislation were removed prior to Senate and Administration approval, the bill remains a mean-spirited document which penalizes undocumented persons and makes it more difficult for legal immigrants and U.S. citizens to reunite with their families.

Provisions which were removed prior to passage: % Deeming a sponsor's income as available to a legal immigrant student who applied for federal financial aid % Gallegly Amendment, which would have denied public education to undocumented children % Deportation of immigrants who received public benefits for 12 months (including students who received grant aid) % Denial of certain public benefits to legal immigrants (although most legal immigrants remain ineligible for many public assistance programs under the welfare legislation signed into law by Clinton in August) % Denial to legal immigrants of access to treatment for HIV

Provisions which remain in the bill: % Establishment of pilot program for collecting information about non-immigrant students to ensure that such student do not overstay their visas. The program would require entering foreign students to pay a fee of up to $100 to support the program % Requirement that sponsors of immigrant relatives earn at least 125% of the poverty level % One year time limit for applying for political asylum % Denial of certain due process measures to persons who arrive without documents, including political asylees % Establishment of employee verification program (with a 27% possibility of error!) in five states with high populations of undocumented persons so that employers can check legal status of prospective employees % Increased burden of proof for prospective employees claiming hiring discrimination based on immigration status. Such persons will need to show an "intent" to discriminate, a nearly impossible standard % Increased border control, including 1000 new agents by 2001 and $12 million for a new border fence and other measures

Students should register their complaints about the immigration legislation with both their Representatives and Senators as well as with the Administration and should indicate that part of the student agenda for the upcoming year will be to work to reform this oppressive and discriminatory bill.

Erica Adelsheimer Phone: 202.347.USSA Legislative Director Fax: [redacted] U.S. Student Association E-mail: [redacted] 1612 K Street NW Ste. 510 http://www.essential.org/ussa Washington, DC 20006

Topic No. 2

Yesterday, both Congress and the President approved a 1997 Pentagon budget of $244 billion, $9.4 billion more than the military wanted, while claiming to be concerned about "balancing the budget!"

We invite you to join an e-mail discussion for campus activists interesting in challenging this hypocracy, and the military/prison priorities of our society in general. The list is called called CAN-PEACE (Campus Activists' Network, Peace Activism) and already there are about 150 subscribers.

In 1996-7 CAN-PEACE will provide communication for campus activists participating in a national campaign and speaking tour to question the justification for federal priorities in which 52 cents of every tax dollar is used by the military.

To expose the underlying ideology behind this madness, we are calling this campaign "Challenge the Lie$. We also offer resources to help make this campaign a participatory activity, open to anyone concerned about our society and willing to challenge the climate of fear and cynicism that enables military and prison contractors to continue robbing us blind. Several national groups, listed below, have agreed to provide information and support.

This discussion is cosponsored by national Peace Action and its new Student Peace Action Network, and facilitated by Brad Van Guilder of Stockton State College ([redacted]). You are invited to subscribe; you may unsubscribe at any time.

1. TO SUBSCRIBE, send e-mail to: [redacted] with a subject of "canet" whose body just says:
      sub can-peace Firstname Lastname

2. TO SEND A MESSAGE to the list, you must be subscribed. E-mail it to:
[redacted]

   with a subject of "canet" whose body ONLY says:
      unsub can-peace

4. If the volume of mail on this list becomes too large, you can always change your subscription to a "digest" (1 big message per day) by sending e-mail to:
[redacted] with subject "canet" and body: set can-peace mail digest

   To undo this use "ack" in place of "digest".
   To suppress mail for the summer, use "noack" in place of "digest."

5. For a list of Campus Activists' Network discussions, send email to:
[redacted]

---------- | CHALLENGE THE LIE$ || A national campaign to expose the stranglehold | | Social Justice || military and prison spending have placed on | | Speaking Tour || important social and environmental priorities. |
|----------| | Host a speaker; research the facts; design your own campaign! CCO will | | provide a packet with petitions, flyers, brainstorm ideas, and speakers:| | Helen Caldicott *Gene Carroll *Jonah Edelman *Michio Kaku *Loretta Ross |
|----------| | The organizing packet is only $1 from the CENTER FOR CAMPUS ORGANIZING | | P.O. Box 748, Cambridge, MA 02142, [redacted] o [redacted] |

Email contacts for "Challenge the Lie$" co-sponsors are:
   -Center for Campus Organizing (Dave Pai, [redacted])

-DC SCAR (Ray Davis, [redacted])
-Speak Out! (Felicia Gustin, [redacted])
-Student Peace Action Network (Amy Quinn, [redacted])
-Women's Action for New Directions (Susan Shaer, [redacted])

Topic No. 3

LIE #2:

"The U.S. Constitution prevents us from spending our tax dollars on social programs."

WHAT'S THE TRUTH?

Article 1, section 8 of the Constitution reads: " The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States"

The Constitution does not prevent investments in our social welfare.

What prevents these investments is a Congress controlled by the weapons industry!

[Excerpted from the _Challenge the Lie$ Campaign Organizing Guide_, (c) 1996 Center for Campus Organizing. You may distribute this lie and rebuttal provided that this notice is included in its entirety.]

---------- | CHALLENGE THE LIE$ || A national campaign to expose the stranglehold | | Social Justice || military and prison spending have placed on | | Speaking Tour || important social and environmental priorities. |
|----------| | Host a speaker; research the facts; design your own campaign! CCO will | | provide a packet with petitions, flyers, brainstorm ideas, and speakers:| | Helen Caldicott *Gene Carroll *Jonah Edelman *Michio Kaku *Loretta Ross |
|----------| | The organizing packet is only $1 from the CENTER FOR CAMPUS ORGANIZING | | P.O. Box 748, Cambridge, MA 02142, [redacted] o [redacted] | | -for an excerpt, send a blank e-mail to: [redacted] | ----------

---

End of CAN-RW Digest 235
****

↑ Index

31. Jordan Davis
privileged cultural moments and you!
Wed 2 Oct 1996

So what will everybody do if Bob Dylan wins the Nobel Prize for literature?

J

↑ Index

32. Tony Green
Re: the way of all languages
Wed 2 Oct 1996

Jordan - Magic Fire Music + harp and nasal twang + While the Clouds Roll by (synthesizer strings)+ wearing a George Costanza Fan Club t-shirt + bra with words on it: Poetics List + e-mail address (TM Eliza NZ Enterprises)-- worn outside--- + Stock Market report (voice over) ---all these in negotiation with one another could be productive of lots and lots of art? like the murder of the doll that looks like George's mother for starters (TVNZ 2 yesterday 7.30 p.m.) JUXTAPOSED mind you with 8 p.m. Mad About You. The nightmare for the stand-up with ketchup on his trousers, no material, no props is also productive, if confronted and acted out? Have a Nice Day.

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

33. Jordan Davis
Re: the way of all languages
Wed 2 Oct 1996

---

looks good to me Tony until you get to the TV part.

J

↑ Index

34. maria damon
Re: privileged cultural moments and you!
Wed 2 Oct 1996

In message <v01530500ae788abab01d@[166.84.199.56]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> So what will everybody do if Bob Dylan wins the Nobel Prize for literature?

>
> J

shd be an interesting moment to be in mpls. i guess i'll...walk down 4th St.--md

↑ Index

35. Mark Roberts
Re: privileged cultural moments and you!
Wed 2 Oct 1996

> So what will everybody do if Bob Dylan wins the Nobel Prize for literature?
>
> J

I suppose everyone will just have to go get stoned.....
Mark Roberts
Student Systems Project Officer
& User Representative SIS Team.
Information Systems
University of Sydney NSW 2006 Australia
Ph. (02) 93517710
Mobile 015063970
Fax (02) 93517711

↑ Index

36. Tenney Nathanson
Blue Monday citation
Thu 3 Oct 1996

Maria--

thanks for the reference; will brush off my Mansion (hmm) and go at it

Tenney

> tenney: it was originally in german, i read it in french; it's "Identite du discours et transgression lyrique." poetique 32, novembre 1977. he actually talks about lyric --i guess maybe i'm misrepresentning it to call it "poetry"--md

↑ Index

37. George Bowering
Re: malomar
Thu 3 Oct 1996

> the fans said alomar sucks alomar sucks alomar sucks as the umps took the field last night at yankee stadium
>
> the fans withrew their support later in the game as blue was telling mariano dunken where the bench was after calling him out on a pitch both high & outside with runners on

Yeah? Well, the umpires sure shafted the Texas pitchers in the second game. AND Raines was not safe at first! I will never forgive. Never.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

38. George Bowering
Re: privileged cultural moments and you!
Thu 3 Oct 1996

> So what will everybody do if Bob Dylan wins the Nobel Prize for literature?
>
> J

Look forward to Rush Limbaugh getting the Peace Prize.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

39. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Immigration Laws & privileged cultural moments
Thu 3 Oct 1996

Thanks again to Gabrielle Welford for the posts concerning the Immigration Laws.

Actually the privileged cultural moment wasn't Dylan quote--but if you scroll down past that, is a post re conference to be held on Chance in Las Vegas (where else?) featuring Baudrillard, Diane di Prima, Tom Watson, et al.
Too bad Pascal the Wagerer can't be there!

"No more "liknesses of reality,' no idealistic images, nothing but a desert!"
--K. Malevich, "The Non-Objective World"

"The most beautiful world is like a heap of rubble tossed dwon in confusion."
--Heraclitus

"I pity the poor immigrant/who wishes he would have stayed home." --Robert Zimmerman

↑ Index

40. Daniel Bouchard
Re: privileged cultural moments and Jordan
Thu 3 Oct 1996

> So what will everybody do if Bob Dylan wins the Nobel Prize for literature?

Realize how correct Pound was when he warned poets to ignore all literary prizes-- expecially the ignoble Nobel.

[redacted]

↑ Index

41. maria damon
Re: Blue Monday citation
Thu 3 Oct 1996

---

i must admit i have put this essay to uses that may not do justice to its complexity. i'd be interested to hear what u think of it, tenney, plus all you others who may be familiar w/ it... bests, maria d

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics
discussion group writes:

> Maria--
>
> thanks for the reference; will brush off my Mansion (hmm) and go at it
>
> Tenney
>
> >tenney: it was originally in german, i read it in french; it's "Identite du > >discours et transgression lyrique." poetique 32, novembre 1977. he actually > >talks about lyric --i guess maybe i'm misrepresentning it to call it
> >"poetry"--md

↑ Index

42. Kathrine Varnes

Poet Ad (fwd)

Thu 3 Oct 1996

A forward from Amittai F. Aviram:

ANNOUNCEMENT

I hope the following job announcement is not inappropriate to this list.

We're hiring a POET! The following announcement is appearing in the _MLA Job List_, the _Chronicle of Higher Education_, and the _WPA Job List_--

Beginning Assistant Professor. Poet to teach in undergraduate and MFA program. Significant publications and promise of wide recognition. Interest in Women's Studies preferred.

Letter, CV, recommendation letters, and WRITING SAMPLE should be sent to:

Professor Robert Newman
Chair
Department of English
University of South Carolina
Columbia, South Carolina 29208

Feel free to e-mail me if you need more info.

Best,
Amittai F. Aviram
Associate Professor
Department of English
University of South Carolina
Columbia, South Carolina 29208
E-mail [redacted] or (alias) [redacted]

↑ Index

43. Bill Luoma
orion
Thu 3 Oct 1996

Jordan thanks for the oriion sighting:

> Orion sightings:
>
> 7th & A, eight postings on the
> phonebooth, dealing mainly with
> 'nasal crutches'

orion was looking good at a mad alex reading last week. walked around talking about stephen paul miller and presence. was stephen paul miller really his own presence? or was his presence just a bourgeois rhetorical tactic to gain attention? sorry i'm paraphrasing.

Bill

ps, how do you verify an orion sighting that is written down? please instruct me how to read.

↑ Index

44. Bill Luoma
rerion (fwd)
Thu 3 Oct 1996

billi remember you saying orion saying something more like is stephen paul miller an ironic stance adopted as a parody by a more intelligent being, or is stephen paul miller merely the victim of his own bourgeous rhetorical stance? (another paraphrase but gives the idea i came away with.)

to answer the question of how you spot orion words---he puts copies of his poems on mail boxes & lamp posts in the east village--Jordan collects them--I think hw should publish them--urge him to type a few for our edification--i think orion is brillian--but he smells bad.

Tony Door, EV

↑ Index

45. Burt Kimmelman
Re: orion
Thu 3 Oct 1996

bill,

i may have missed the start of this thread: are you referring to Orion Feig?

BTW, just now heard from stephen-paul miller in Krakow, who is settling in there for a while on a fullbright. if you or someone wants his email address, let me know. he says he'd love to write something for some publication about the polish scene and poetry etc.

burt

↑ Index

46. Christopher Reiner
WITZ address change
Thu 3 Oct 1996

Hi everybody...

WITZ: A Journal of Contemporary Poetics has a new a address.

WITZ
P.O. Box 40012
Studio City, California 91614

The next issue will appear around the end of this month. It will feature an essay by Jefferson Hansen ("Anarchism & Culture) and reports on two recent conferences (Assembling Alternatives and the Russian extravaganza in New Jersey). Also, of course, book reviews.

Subscriptions to WITZ are $10 (US)/3 issues (individuals) and $30 (US)/3 issues (institutions).

Back issues are archived at the Electronic Poetry Center, in the "Journals" section.

best,

Chris Reiner
[redacted]

↑ Index

47. Jordan Davis
Re: orion
Thu 3 Oct 1996

None other than Orion Feig, who is currently describing Steven Spielberg and Hal Sirowitz in the magic-marker notes he tapes to street signs and phone booths in the East Village. These notes seem very much the product of a schizophrenic imagination (a lot of parsing out the meaning of words by means of folk etymology, a lot of free-floating and then very pointed hostility). As I say, his latest motif is 'the nasal crutch', the meaning of which I prefer not to know. Joel Lewis knows more about Orion than I do, probably many of you know Orion. He spends most of his time in Tompkins Square Park. I don't know where he sleeps. I'm told he goes south for the winter. Kenny Goldsmith has some of Orion's writings up on his website. Kenny?

Jordan

↑ Index

48. alan sondheim
marking maybe
Thu 3 Oct 1996

nothing [to exclaim]

much sadness although (a voyeur in memory of screen - neither white knees press outside into pants, nor arms move window knuckle rap-glass; nevertheless eye in shaved pussy / cock in knees... however shivered floorflesh pants in pants since my breath goes down your legs rap glass?) but my breath goes up your legs nonetheless,... there's no other point to the real and Net sex sounds like everything else: either like a poem about it or a story.

↑ Index

49. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Columbia Teach-in
Thu 3 Oct 1996

The intellectual community joins the new labor movement in

"The Fight For America's Future"

A Teach-In with the Labor Movement

October 3-4, 1996

Columbia University
New York, New York

Opening Plenary:

Thursday, October 3, 1996 7:30 p.m.

Low Library

Chair: Eric Foner, Columbia University

Speakers:

John Sweeney
President, AFL-CIO

Betty Friedan
Wilson Center for Scholars

Cornel West
Harvard University

Patricia Williams
Columbia University

Richard Rorty
University of Virginia

Plenary Session #2:
The Incorporation of America

Friday, October 4, 1996 -- 9:00 a.m.- 10:30 a.m.

Altschul Auditorium, (Int'l. Affairs Bldg.)

Chair: Ira Katznelson, Columbia University

Speakers:

Katha Pollitt
Writer

Orlando Patterson
Harvard University

Linda Chavez-Thompson
Executive Vice-President,
AFL-CIO

Joel Rogers
University of Wisconsin
Madison

Morning Workshops

Friday October 4, 1996, 11:00 am - 12:30 pm

1. Globalization and the American Standard of Living
   Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 410
   Convener: Steve Fraser
   Participants:

   Bennett Harrison, New School for Social Research
   Ron Blackwell, Corporate Affairs, AFL-CIO
   Joel Rogers, University of Wisconsin, Madison

2. Politics and the Future of the Labor Movement
   Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 404

Convener: Mike Kazin
Participants:

Ruy Teixeira, Economic Policy Institute
Roger Wilkins, George Mason University
Mark Erlich, Carpenters Local #40
Elaine Bernard, Harvard Trade Union Program

3. Labor and Immigration
Location: Hamilton Hall, Rm. 302
Convener: Gary Gerstle
Participants:

Katie Quan, UNITE
Philip Kasinitz, Hunter College
Maria Ontiveros, Golden Gate Law School
Patricia Fernandez Kelly, Johns Hopkins University

4. Working Families on the Fault-line
Location: Hamilton Hall, Rm. 303
Convener: Joan Williams
Participants:

Lillian Rubin, University of California, Berkeley
Guy Molyneux, Peter Hart Research Association
Joan Williams, American University Law School

5. Organizing the University
Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 411
Convener: Richard Boris
Participants:

Wells Keddie, AAUP
Kathy Newman, GESO Activist, Yale University
Kris Rondeau, University Organizing, AFSCME
Maida Rosenstein, UAW Local 2110 (Barnard)

6. Culture, Identity, and Class Politics
Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 403
Convener: Nelson Lichtenstein
Participants:

Todd Gitlin, New York University
Robin Kelley, New York University
Jo-Ann Mort, UNITE
Jerry Hudson, 1199

7. The Wages of 'Race': Unions and Racial Justice
   Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 413A
   Convener: Tom Sugrue
   Participants:

   David Roediger, University of Minnesota
   Derrick Bell, New York University
   Mae Ngai, Asian Pacific Am. Labor Alliance, AFL-CIO
   Michael Eric Dyson, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

8. Labor and the Law (cosponsored by the CENTER FOR PUBLIC INTEREST LAW, Columbia Univ. School of Law)
   Location: Jerome Greene Lounge, Law School Convener: David Abraham
   Participants:

   Karl Klare, Northeastem University
   Willie Forbath, Texas/UCLA
   Larry Englestein, AFL-CIO
   Katherine Stone, Cornell Law School

Afternoon Workshops

Friday October 4, 1996, 2:00 pm - 3:30 pm

9. Intellectuals and the Labor Movement
   Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 403
   Convener: Norman Birnbaum
   Participants:

   Bob Welch, Assistant to the President, AFL-CIO
   Tom Geoghegan, Labor Lawyer & Writer
   Paul Berman, Writer

10. Work, Welfare, and the Labor Movement
    Location: Hamilton Hall, Rm. 302
    Convener: Josh Freeman
    Participants:

    Katherine Newman, Harvard University
    Bill Fletcher, Education Dept., AFL-CIO
    Herb Gans, Columbia University

11. Union Summer & A New Generation of Organizers
    Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 410

Convener: Kevin Pranis
Participants:

Sarah Potter, student, Columbia University
Andy Levin, Director, Union Summer
Johanna Marquina, student, CUNY Staten Island
Valerie McCrory, Yale Student Labor Action Coalition

12. African Americans and the Labor Movement
Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 413A
Convener: Leith Mullings
Participants:

Jerry Hudson, 1199
Betty Hugley, 1199

13. Organizing Women
Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 411
Convener: Joan Williams
Participants:

Marion Crain, Univ. of North Carolina Law School
Chris Woods, Organizing Department, AFL-CIO
Donene Williams, Harvard Union of Clerical & Technical Workers, AFSCME

14. Professional and Technical Workers
Location: Hamilton Hall, Rm. 301
Convener: Stanley Aronowitz
Participants:

Tom Dawes, Local 375, AFSCME
Ernst Benjamin, AAUP
John Ronches, Committee of Interns and Residents

15. Are Labor's Values (Still) Everyone Else's?
Location: Hamilton Hall, Rm. 303
Convener: Ronald Aronson
Participants:

Jerry Deneau, Graphics Communications Intl. Union
Lewis Gordon, Brown University
Heidi Hartmann, Inst. for Women's Policy Studies

16. Organizing in the Global Economy
Location: Int'l Affairs Building, Rm. 405
Convener: Mark Levitan
Participants:

Wilfredo Larencuent, UNITE
William Milberg, New School for Social Research
Barbara Shailor, International Affairs, AFL-CIO
Pharis Harvey, International Labor Rights Federation

Closing Plenary Session:
Organizing the Unorganized

Friday, October 4,1996 -- 4:00 p.m.-6:00 p.m.

Altschul Auditorium, (Int'l Affairs Bldg)

Chair: Manning Marable, Columbia University

Speakers:

Richard Trumka
Secretary-Treasurer, AFL-CIO

David Montgomery
Yale University

Karen Nussbaum
Women's Department, AFL-CIO

Jose La Luz
Int'l Area Director, AFSCME

Frances Fox Piven
City University of New York

Names of approximately 150 distinguished academic and union endorsers omitted; among others: Julian Bond, Alan Brinkley, Jonathan Cutler, Christopher Jencks, Randall Kennedy, Jonathan Kozol, Denis MacShane M.P., Victor Navasky, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., Carl Schorske, Richard Sennett, Lester Thurow, Michael Walzer, William Junius Wilson,

---

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS:

American Federation of Labor-Congress of Industrial Organizations + United Automobile Workers Local 2110 + District Council 37, American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees + UNITE + New World Foundation, New Labor Fund + Amencan Association of University Professors + Queens College Labor Resource Center + Sagan Foundation + American Social History Project + Bernstein & Lipsett, Washington, D.C. + Carol

Bernstein Ferry + Jeremy Blacklow + Sarah Potter + Timothy McCarthy

---

Committee for a National Teach-In; Steven Fraser & Nelson Lichtenstein, Co-Chairs
Phone:[redacted] Fax:[redacted]
E-mail:[redacted]
For more information, contact Jonathan Cutler:
[redacted]

[End]

This document will be available on the Web at:

http://jya.com/teachin.txt

ftp://jya.com/pub/incoming/teachin.txt

↑ Index

50. Christina Fairbank Chirot

a stretch of cultural moments

Thu 3 Oct 1996

(for george jones)

"TIME DON'T MEAN A THING TO ME I'VE GOT LIFE TO GO"

```
S I N G          S I N G
 S I N           S I N
  I N            I N
   I             I
  I N            I N
 S I N           S I N
S I N G          S I N G
 S I N           S I N
  I N            I N
   I             I
  I N            I N
 S I N           S I N
S I N G          S I N G
 S I N           S I N
  I N            I N
   I             I
```

```
 I N            I N
 S I N          S I N
S I N G         S I N G
 S I N          S I N
 I N            I N
  I             I
 I N            I N
 S I N          S I N
S I N G         S I N G
 S I N          S I N
 I N            I N
  I             I
 I N            I N
 S I N          S I N
S I N G         S I N G
 S I N          S I N
 I N            I N
  I             I
 I N            I N
 S I N          S I N
S I N G         S I N G
```

--dbchirot

↑ Index

51. Ward Tietz

Geneva Sound Poetry Events

Fri 4 Oct 1996

I'm sorry I'm so late with this, but here's a brief summary of the "festival de la Batie" sound poetry events I said I'd post, which were held in Geneva, Switzerland on September 13th, 14th and 15th.

It was a very enjoyable festival. There was a nice mix of work, performed text, recording-enhanced material, theatrical/linguistic and looser happening-style performance. The entire "festival de la Batie" was very well organized and publicized, with posters, catalogs, all over Geneva and also in neighboring France.

Roger Lewinter held a conference/reading on Mallarme on the 13th. I heard part of it in rehearsal, but missed the performance, so I can't say much more. I heard, though, that Mallarme devotees enjoyed it.

The performances of September 14th were quite memorable. The highlight, I thought, was Bernard Heidsieck who gave what was probably the most complete literary performance I've ever seen. As Mark McMorris said, it's surprising Heidsieck isn't better known in the U.S. He has an elegance and presence in performance that's quite rare.

Amanda Stewart performed some very nice pieces, technically accomplished and varied in an almost classic sound poetry style, with a lot of phonemic emphasis and speed. Some of her pieces had a more textual base and displayed a more writerly character, which made for an interesting contrast.

Guenther Ruch and Juergen Olbrich performed an action based piece with interaction via phone and fax. They placed phone calls to designated participants, which were broadcast to the audience, received faxes throughout the performance, and performed a variety of sound actions involving velcro, the hammering of spaghetti, the destruction of a cuckoo clock, etc. Their piece had some very curious and successful moments.

The performances of the 15th were also quite varied. The evening started off with Christian Uetz. He performed most of his pieces in High German, with sections in Swiss German dialect, a few pieces in French and then also a few in German, French and English, all it seemed from memory. His work was very athletic with a lot of twist and speed. It seemed to work especially well in German.

Mark McMorris and I performed second. Our piece "Accompong" combined elements of the languages of the Jamaican Maroons, along with the use of various large three-dimensional letter-rubrics that had been constructed out of steel and wood. The performance joined action to voice to rubric: interacting with the letters, rocking them, carrying them, hitting them, and so on, while speaking, reading, or shouting. Mark's performance of the Nyankopong section of the piece, which Mark performed while balancing a 90 pound steel "M", his head in the "V" of the "M" on a waist-high wooden "H", was mysterious and beautiful.

Julie Patton's performance was very well received. A lot of people enjoyed her blusey, jazzy rhythms and it was a pleasant reminder to have music so strongly allied with speech rhythms. The pieces that emphasized her voice were very nice, especially the passages which had speech moving in and out of song.

Bob Cobbing and Hugh Metcalfe rounded out the evening with a sound performance extravaganza. They were wonderfully wild, brilliant, awful, funny, wise, stupid, scary, and best of all comfortable and at ease. Bob Cobbing's singing is a wonder. It's difficult to know exactly where it comes from, but then it's there, and it's wonderful; no words, just grumbly sounds, with drums, bells and other instrumentation mixed in. Hugh Metcafle's musical improvisations were perfect accompaniment.

Ward Tietz

↑ Index

52. Kenneth Goldsmith
Orion
Fri 4 Oct 1996

There is a remarkable co-written novel on line by Margueritte and Orion. Each swaps turns at writing and Orion's style is particularly astounding:

http://www.thecurrent.com/newworld/harvey.htm

Don't Call Me Harvey
by Margueritte and Orion

This is the true story of Orion, a poet in his forties experiencing a full blown schizophrenic illness while living outdoors in the famous Tompkins Square Park of New York City, and Margueritte, a poet in her fifties who is a psychiatric nurse. The title, DON'T CALL ME HARVEY is from a joke of theirs that developed from one of Orion's delusions, that Margueritte was really Lee Harvey Oswald.

+==========+ Kenneth Goldsmith play: http://wfmu.org/~kennyg [redacted] work: http://www.ubuweb.com 611 Bway #702, NYC 10012 v. [redacted]

Beans Dear?

↑ Index

53. Kenneth Goldsmith
Orion In All His Graphic Glory On The Web
Fri 4 Oct 1996

Jordan D. sed:

> Kenny Goldsmith has some of Orion's writings up on his website.
> Kenny?

There is a bunch of Orion's incredible work, scanned in all its graphic glory at:

http://wfmu.org:80/~kennyg/found/orion/orion01.html

Kenny G.

+==========+ Kenneth Goldsmith play: http://wfmu.org/~kennyg [redacted] work: http://www.ubuweb.com 611 Bway #702, NYC 10012 v. [redacted]

Beans Dear?

↑ Index

54. Tod Thilleman
Re: Orion's Autobiography
Fri 4 Oct 1996

schizophrenia as autobio-novel,a kind of helix-related parsing thru the medium of one poetess/nurse Margueritte, as opposed to schiz as poetry on east village phone booths (abc no rio mid eighties rantings on the kennedy assasination & 'You') was I believe, written, published, or going to be published by Enemy Loose Publications in Brooklyn, NY called Don't call me Harvey. Any interested in obtaining, should try query at [redacted].....

↑ Index

55. Jeremy F Green
The New Norton
Fri 4 Oct 1996

I don't know if this is an old thread (haven't had much time for lurking/reading lately), but has anyone had a look at the new (4th edition) Norton Anthology of Poetry? It's just about to hit the bookstores.

I got a glimpse at it last night. Pre-20th century looks like a big improvement; 20th century very discouraging. Stein (from "Stanzas in Meditation") and Riding are now included, but the post-1950 selection is pretty horrific. A couple of Michael Palmer poems, but no Susan Howe, Lyn Hejinian, Charles Bernstein, etc., etc. Maybe the thinking was that Paul Hoover's Pomo. Norton had covered such "minority" interests, but please, Brad Leithauser?!

And my particular pet peeve: STILL NO OPPEN.

Jeremy Green

↑ Index

56. Judy Roitman
Burroughs
Fri 4 Oct 1996

The following, from Jim McCrary, is an announcement of activities related to the work of William S. Burroughs here in Lawrence in November.

Y'all come on down.

> "Ports of Entry: William S. Burroughs and the Arts" organized by Los Angeles County Museum of Art traveling to Lawrence, Kansas.

> KU Spencer Museum hosting retrospective of WSB. Ports of Entry. Show opens Nov 2. Symposium sponcered by Spencer and Hall Center on that date from 10am-5pm will feature: Allen Ginsberg, > Kathy Acker, Legs McNiel (punk writer), Robert Sobieszek (curator of show for LA County Museum of Art) and George Condo (painter and WSB collabortor). Opening reception at musuem (free to public) from 5-7. For more information contact Spencer Museum, U of Kansas, Lawrence, Ks.
>
> Nov 26th, 7:30 pm at Lied Performance Center, Lawrence, Ks
>
> NOVA Convention Revisited featuring:
>
> Patti Smith, Deborah Harry, Ed Sanders, Phillip Glass, Laurie Anderson, John Girono.
>
> Lied Center Box office or Ticketmaster.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

57. Joe Tabbi

Re: job announcement

Fri 4 Oct 1996

This is Joe Tabbi. I'm on the poet search committee this year at the University of Illinois-Chicago, and I would be pleased to read applications from people on this list. The advertisement follows. Thanks!

SEEK POET. Assistant Professor, tenure track, or Associate Professor, beginning fall, 1997, pending budgetary approval, in creative writing (poetry). Significant book publications and experience teaching at graduate and undergraduate levels required. MFA in creative writing or PhD in appropriate field desirable. Creative writing faculty advise students and share in responsibility for the writing program, which offers the BA, MA, and PhD with specialization in creative writing. We encourage applications from women and members of minority groups. Send application letter, curriculum vitae, and writing sample (maximum 10 pages) to: Cris Mazza, Chair Search Committee in Creative Writing UIC-English (M/C 162) Rm. 2027, 601 S. Morgan Chicago, IL 60607-7120 Do not send additional materials until requested to do so. Screening begins immediately. For fullest consideration, send application by November 1. The University of Illinois at Chicago is an AA/EIOE.

↑ Index

58. epc

Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)

Fri 4 Oct 1996

I forward a message of some interest ...

Forwarded message:
> From: Richard Soos <[redacted]>
> Subject: Wislawa Szymborska
> _____
>
> I am both happy and proud to let you know that Wislawa Szymborska was > awarded the Nobel Literature Prize this week. She has been a candidate for > several years, and it is great to see her finally earn the award at age 73.
> She has many loved poems translated into English, including "The End and the > Beginning", and "People On The Bridge." One of my personal favorites is:
>
> Hitler's first photograph
>
> And who's this little fellow in his itty-bitty robe?
> That's tiny baby Adolf, the Hitlers' little boy!
> Will he grow up to be an L.L.D.?
> Or a tenor in Vienna's Opera House?
> Whose teensy hand is this, whose little ear and eye and nose?
> Whose tummy full of milk, we just don't know:
> printer's, doctor's, merchant's, priest's?
> Where will those tootsy-wootsies finally wander?
> To a garden, to a school, to an office, to a bride?
> Maybe to the Buergermeister's daughter?
>
> Precious little angel, mommy's sunshine, honey bun.
> While he was being born, a year ago,
> there was no dearth of signs on the earth and in the sky:
> spring sun, geraniums in windows,
> the organ-grinder's music in the yard,
> a lucky fortune wrapped in rosy paper.

> Then just before the labor his mother's fateful dream.
> A dove seen in a dream means joyful news--
> if it is caught, a long-awaited guest will come.
> Knock knock, who's there, it's Adolf's heartschen knocking.
>
> A little pacifier, diaper, rattle, bib,
> our bouncing boy, thank God and knock on wood, is well,
> looks just like his folks, like a kitten in a basket,
> like the tots in every other family album.
> Sh-h-h, let's not start crying, sugar,
> The camera will click from under that black hood.
>
> The Klinger Atelier, Grabenstrasse, Braunen.
> And Braunen is a small but worthy town-- > honest businesses, obliging neighbors,
> smell of yeast dough, of gray soap.
> No one hears howling dogs, or fate's footsteps.
> A history teacher loosens his collar
> and yawns over homework.
>
> - trans. Baranczak/Cavanagh
>
> Poland deserves to be proud of its rich poetic heritage. Wislawa Szymborska > is the 9th woman to win the literature award in 95 years.
>
> This is the second year in a row that a poet has won, and the second year in > a row that a European has won. Folks to watch for in coming years include > Hugo Claus from Belgium, Ismail Kadare from Albania, Jaan Kross from > Estonia, Gyorgy Konrad from Hungary, Doris Lessing from Britain, Jose > Saramago and Antonio Lobo Antunes from Portugal, John Ashbery of the United > States, and Bei Dao of China.
>
> Irish poet Seamus Heaney was last years winner. One of my personal favorites > of his is:
>
> Oracle
>
> Hide in the hollow trunk
> of the willow tree,
> its listening familiar,

> until, as usual, they > cuckoo your name
> across the fields.
> You can hear them
> draw the poles of stiles
> as they approach
> calling you out:
> small mouth and ear
> in a woody cleft,
> lobe and larynx
> of the mossy places.
>
>
> **********

↑ Index

59. Edward Foster
LANSING!!! PETTET!!!
Fri 4 Oct 1996

In BOSTON! This Tueday, Oct. 8th, 7:30 PM. Big! Big!! Big!!! Reading with Gerrit Lansing and Simon Pettet. Orgazined by the Grolier: call for details, and don't miss it. The best poetry you're going to hear from now to ever . . . . !!!!

↑ Index

60. Douglas Messerli
Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
Fri 4 Oct 1996

And these are supposed to be great poems!!!?

Drivel by my standards.

Douglas

At 03:27 PM 10/4/96 -0400, you wrote:
>I forward a message of some interest ...
>---
>Forwarded message:
>> From: Richard Soos <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Wislawa Szymborska
>> _____
>>
>> I am both happy and proud to let you know that Wislawa Szymborska was >> awarded the Nobel Literature Prize this week. She has been a candidate for >> several years, and it is great to see her finally earn the award at age 73.

>> She has many loved poems translated into English, including "The End and
the >> Beginning", and "People On The Bridge." One of my personal favorites is:
>>
>> Hitler's first photograph
>>
>> And who's this little fellow in his itty-bitty robe?
>> That's tiny baby Adolf, the Hitlers' little boy!
>> Will he grow up to be an L.L.D.?
>> Or a tenor in Vienna's Opera House?
>> Whose teensy hand is this, whose little ear and eye and nose?
>> Whose tummy full of milk, we just don't know:
>> printer's, doctor's, merchant's, priest's?
>> Where will those tootsy-wootsies finally wander?
>> To a garden, to a school, to an office, to a bride?
>> Maybe to the Buergermeister's daughter?
>>
>> Precious little angel, mommy's sunshine, honey bun.
>> While he was being born, a year ago,
>> there was no dearth of signs on the earth and in the sky:
>> spring sun, geraniums in windows,
>> the organ-grinder's music in the yard,
>> a lucky fortune wrapped in rosy paper.
>> Then just before the labor his mother's fateful dream.
>> A dove seen in a dream means joyful news--
>> if it is caught, a long-awaited guest will come.
>> Knock knock, who's there, it's Adolf's heartschen knocking.
>>
>> A little pacifier, diaper, rattle, bib,
>> our bouncing boy, thank God and knock on wood, is well,
>> looks just like his folks, like a kitten in a basket,
>> like the tots in every other family album.
>> Sh-h-h, let's not start crying, sugar,
>> The camera will click from under that black hood.
>>
>> The Klinger Atelier, Grabenstrasse, Braunen.
>> And Braunen is a small but worthy town--
>> honest businesses, obliging neighbors,
>> smell of yeast dough, of gray soap.
>> No one hears howling dogs, or fate's footsteps.

>> A history teacher loosens his collar
>> and yawns over homework.
>>
>> - trans. Baranczak/Cavanagh
>>
>> Poland deserves to be proud of its rich poetic heritage. Wislawa Szymborska >> is the 9th woman to win the literature award in 95 years.
>>
>> This is the second year in a row that a poet has won, and the second year in >> a row that a European has won. Folks to watch for in coming years include
>> Hugo Claus from Belgium, Ismail Kadare from Albania, Jaan Kross from >> Estonia, Gyorgy Konrad from Hungary, Doris Lessing from Britain, Jose >> Saramago and Antonio Lobo Antunes from Portugal, John Ashbery of the United >> States, and Bei Dao of China.
>>
>> Irish poet Seamus Heaney was last years winner. One of my personal favorites >> of his is:
>>
>> Oracle
>>
>> Hide in the hollow trunk
>> of the willow tree,
>> its listening familiar,
>> until, as usual, they
>> cuckoo your name
>> across the fields.
>> You can hear them
>> draw the poles of stiles
>> as they approach
>> calling you out:
>> small mouth and ear
>> in a woody cleft,
>> lobe and larynx
>> of the mossy places.
>>
>>
>> **********
>

↑ Index

61. Eliza McGrand- CVA Guest
Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
Fri 4 Oct 1996

---

i always hate these "drivel by my standards!" kinds of messages about poems that are, by general measures of these things, good quality. it has such a sour, preening tone...

the heaney is, as any heaney poem is, at the very least a solid poem. i don't happen to think it is his best, and i can think, easily, of poems by him i like better ("Mid-Term Break" springs immediately to mind). the poem by Wislawa Szymborska was, i thought, wonderful -- a sort of quick, idiosyncratic, feminist re-vision of something i would have thought had no new angles. i DID find myself wondering how much i missed in translation, if the translator(s) appended their own cross-translations of lovetalk, and what the literal in polish would be -- how does "honey bun" cross? is it really "honey bun" in the polish, or one of those wonderfully murmurous, tender polish repeating appellations. "Bapcia" (bap-shee) is grandmother, and, even more sound-charming, djadju (dja-jdoo) -- not sure of polish spelling here -- is grandfather. how, i wonder, did "precious little angel" and "mommy's sunshine" move in the polish.

what i really liked especially about the Szymborska poem is the way it brings the home-ish, the rich sound of one of the most central human relationships, the "lovetalk" of a mother to a child, the ecstasy of that state and its glowing, rhythmic language, into both the traditionally male realm of HIStory and into the realm of the Significant Literary. such a bold, witty stroke...

e

↑ Index

62. Douglas Messerli
Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
Fri 4 Oct 1996

I think they're both bad poems by any standard but the most academic notions of poetry. Further the poems reproduced by Szymborska in the NY TIMES and LA Times were equally, to my thinking, mediocre.

Douglas

At 06:42 PM 10/4/96 -0400, you wrote:
>i always hate these "drivel by my standards!" kinds of messages about poems >that are, by general measures of these things, good quality. it has such >a sour, preening tone...
>

>the heaney is, as any heaney poem is, at the very least a solid poem. i >don't happen to think it is his best, and i can think, easily, of poems by >him i like better ("Mid-Term Break" springs immediately to mind). the poem >by Wislawa Szymborska was, i thought, wonderful -- a sort of quick, >idiosyncratic, feminist re-vision of something i would have thought had no >new angles. i DID find myself wondering how much i missed in translation, >if the translator(s) appended their own cross-translations of lovetalk, >and what the literal in polish would be -- how does "honey bun" cross? is >it really "honey bun" in the polish, or one of those wonderfully murmurous, >tender polish repeating appellations. "Bapcia" (bap-shee) is grandmother, >and, even more sound-charming, djadju (dja-jdoo) -- not sure of polish >spelling here -- is grandfather. how, i wonder, did "precious little angel" >and "mommy's sunshine" move in the polish.
>
>what i really liked especially about the Szymborska poem is the way it >brings the home-ish, the rich sound of one of the most central human >relationships, the "lovetalk" of a mother to a child, the ecstasy of >that state and its glowing, rhythmic language, into both the traditionally >male realm of HIStory and into the realm of the Significant Literary.
>such a bold, witty stroke...
>
>e
>

↑ Index

63. Rod Smith
Re: Wislawa Szymborska (fwd)
Fri 4 Oct 1996

---

um, what's "solid" abt that Heaney poem?

↑ Index

64. henry gould
Szymborska
Sat 5 Oct 1996

I liked the Szymborska poems I read in various newspapers. Never heard of her. Hard for me to tell yet. A lot of "lie down in Tiamat" out there. But they se emed clear, original, simple in a good way. A good storyteller. I'll give her the benefit of the drivel. I mean doubt.

Under cover of a whisper under wings of snow

I draw forth the star
from the velvet cloak
I draw forth the star
of your protection
Black Madonna, Black Madonna.

Where life has fallen and ships gone under and clouds of November take flight in haste
and clouds of November shadow your cloak
Black Madonna, Black Madonna.

Who thinks you are gone follows their shadow far from the sky road
your green star glimmers
far from the sky road
and circles the children
Black Madonna, Black Madonna.

- Henry Gould (oh, who's children? Whose?)

↑ Index

65. Ron Silliman
Heidsieck before Heaney
Sat 5 Oct 1996

Multiple comments here:

Ward,

Okay, I'll bite (munch): "The highlight, I thought, was Bernard Heidsieck who gave what was probably the most complete literary performance I've ever seen. As Mark McMorris said, it's surprising Heidsieck isn't better known in the U.S. He has an elegance and presence in performance that's quite rare."

I agree with you that he should be much more well known, but I'd love to know what about his performance made it "the most complete literary...." Don't just tease us. We want the facts, the details, the nuances.

Regarding Szymborska and Heaney: I've seen some of her poems in translations that made me think that there might be something there, as well as ones that look like the worst of Anne Sexton (which is sort of how I took the one posted here). I think it's difficult to make the kind of sweeping "drivel" judgment across languages unless one has a lot of evidence. After all, there are dozens of dreadful Lorca translations and mushy translations of Baudelaire abound. I try to imagine how hard it must be translate certain American and Canadian poets (Rae Armantrout's poems, for example, are so taught and yet fully coded in a particular idiom that one would have to either jettison a world of nuance [precisely what gives her poems their remarkable depth] or else puff them out the way popped corn kernals are, which might end up looking like some of Szymborska's poems.

Heaney on the other hand might be an argument for recognition of different modes of English as different languages, but... reading works like the one below (and I've found this sort of stuff in every piece of his I've ever read), I cannot imagine the self respecting poet who would not simply cringe at that "cuckoo your name" line, which happens to be the hinge of this whole hoary construction. Beyond that, he's simply putting the pathetic back into its fallacy, no?

Oracle
>>
>> Hide in the hollow trunk
>> of the willow tree,
>> its listening familiar,
>> until, as usual, they
>> cuckoo your name
>> across the fields.
>> You can hear them
>> draw the poles of stiles
>> as they approach
>> calling you out:
>> small mouth and ear
>> in a woody cleft,
>> lobe and larynx
>> of the mossy places.
>>
>>
The idea that this is "solid" is like suggesting that a redwood burl coffee table is great sculpture (or "solid" sculpture). It's perhaps tighter than some of the conservative bad poems (as distinct from the conservative good ones, which frankly there are plenty of) out there, but it definitely depends on thinking that that old conceit is reason enough to write a poem and that the word "mossy" is in itself a sufficient revelation to ground its clanging sense of closure. What makes this "award winning" is a study in the social pathology of reading in our time, rather than a study in literature, no?

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

66. Douglas Messerli
Messerli returing to Szymbroska
Sat 5 Oct 1996

Dear Ron,

You're quite right about the comments you made about=20 translation. It is hard to truly evaluate a poet on the basis of translation, although I do think--particularly with a good translation (which this may not be)--one can get a fair sense of the work, and in some (few) cases it can actually make the work seem MORE interesting. Perhaps the=20 excellence of Swedish translation of Szymborska's work=20 accounts for the award--although the Nobel committee has certainly made some atrocious choices in literature over the last decade.

I was, of course, being intentionally provocative yesterday, for several reasons. At times there seems to be a kind of unstated notion on the list, a kind a passive notion that all poetry is the same, and=20 no distinctions need be made, that we should never talk about the "quality" of a poem.

More importantly: although I can enjoy a good dildo as much as the next man and woman, it does seem that it would be fun, occasionally, to turn our attention back to poetry and=20 the discussion of it.

I think "Hitler's First Photograph" is particularly bad, however. I interprete the poem as a mildly ironic construction with two possible ideas behind it:

1. That all children (and human beings) have the potential for great evil, and

2. Given the "cutsey" childlike attentions of the adults, that=20 whatever happened to the young Hitler boy, the culture helped=20 to instill.

Both of these ideas are a bit facetious: Certainly we may all have the potential for great evil, but fortunately there are not that many Hitlers. And although the culture may have instilled many of ideas that led to Hitler's actions, it was not committing the vast atrocities without him.

But what I object to even more than the thematics is the METHOD of=20 the poem. It relies simply on the one word--Hitler. Without that,=20 the entire work would collapse. If you said the Strauss baby, for=20 example, the poem would be truly trite. But Szymborska relies solely=20 on the recognition by her readers that this is not just ANY child, but=20 the monster himself.=20

In short she has created a little construct that relies entirely upon the reader's agreement before he has even uttered the first word of=20 the poem. There is no discovery of anything in this poem; it is all=20 pre-determined before we have even begun. We will react as we do=20 because the poem hits at the point where the reflex is inevitable.

For me poetry (writing in general) is always a discovery, an uncover- ing, if you will, of questions more than answers, particularly=20 since it engages the very medium through which we recieve and=20 comprehend the world. There is no room for reflex actions or pre- conceived constructs in order for the poem to truly exciting.

Storytelling it is--as Henry Gould has responded. But I go with Pound every time: "Flaubert and De Maupassant lifted prose to the rank of a finer art, and one has no patience with contemporary poets who escape=20 from all the difficulties of the infinitely difficult art of good=20 prose by pouring themselves into loose verses." At another point,=20 Pound makes clear that he dismisses poets who are merely telling=20 stories by chopping up their lines into verse. For me storytelling=20 (which I love) and poetry are quite different arts.

This is only one poem, however, and I make no claims to know=20 Szymborska's oeuvre. But certainly none of the poems I read=20 (admittedly only seven short poems!) could compare with the poetry=20 of Lorine Niedecker (another so-called "homey" poet) or William=20 Carlos Williams, or George Oppen, or Louis Zukofsky, of Ezra Pound,=20 or Paul Celan, or Benjamin P=E9ret, or Marina Tsvetayeva, or=20 Tchicaya U Tam'si....the list could go on for a long while:=20 all poets who never received the Nobel Prize.

Thanks, Ron, for your good responses.

Douglas

At 04:17 AM 10/5/96 -0700, you wrote:
>Multiple comments here:
>
>Ward,
>
>Okay, I'll bite (munch):
>"The highlight, I thought, was Bernard Heidsieck who gave what was >probably the most complete literary performance I've ever seen. As >Mark McMorris said, it's surprising Heidsieck isn't better known in the >U.S. He has an elegance and presence in performance that's quite >rare."

>
>I agree with you that he should be much more well known, but I'd love >to know what about his performance made it "the most complete >literary...." Don't just tease us. We want the facts, the details, the >nuances.
>
>Regarding Szymborska and Heaney:
>I've seen some of her poems in translations that made me think that >there might be something there, as well as ones that look like the >worst of Anne Sexton (which is sort of how I took the one posted here).
>I think it's difficult to make the kind of sweeping "drivel" judgment >across languages unless one has a lot of evidence. After all, there are >dozens of dreadful Lorca translations and mushy translations of >Baudelaire abound. I try to imagine how hard it must be translate >certain American and Canadian poets (Rae Armantrout's poems, for >example, are so taught and yet fully coded in a particular idiom that >one would have to either jettison a world of nuance [precisely what >gives her poems their remarkable depth] or else puff them out the way >popped corn kernals are, which might end up looking like some of >Szymborska's poems.
>
>Heaney on the other hand might be an argument for recognition of >different modes of English as different languages, but... reading works >like the one below (and I've found this sort of stuff in every piece of >his I've ever read), I cannot imagine the self respecting poet who >would not simply cringe at that "cuckoo your name" line, which happens >to be the hinge of this whole hoary construction. Beyond that, he's >simply putting the pathetic back into its fallacy, no?
>
> Oracle
>>>
>>> Hide in the hollow trunk
>>> of the willow tree,
>>> its listening familiar,
>>> until, as usual, they
>>> cuckoo your name
>>> across the fields.
>>> You can hear them
>>> draw the poles of stiles
>>> as they approach
>>> calling you out:

>>> small mouth and ear
>>> in a woody cleft,
>>> lobe and larynx
>>> of the mossy places.
>>>
>>>
>The idea that this is "solid" is like suggesting that a redwood burl >coffee table is great sculpture (or "solid" sculpture). It's perhaps >tighter than some of the conservative bad poems (as distinct from the >conservative good ones, which frankly there are plenty of) out there, >but it definitely depends on thinking that that old conceit is reason >enough to write a poem and that the word "mossy" is in itself a >sufficient revelation to ground its clanging sense of closure. What >makes this "award winning" is a study in the social pathology of >reading in our time, rather than a study in literature, no?
>
>Ron Silliman
>

↑ Index

67. alan sondheim

Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska

Sat 5 Oct 1996

Well, I personally like the fact that the poem rises or falls on "Hitler" - that the word disorients the whole. The other point here is the rela- tion of the Poetics list to traditional and other poetics/ries - Why _this_ poem up for critique and not one of the less traditional - which have been far more numerous? Is inter-penetrated abstraction harder to judge? Are we too polite?

There was a billowing and uncomfortable softness to the Szymbroska poem, even in translation, that reminded me of Dali's Hitler comments, equally uncom-fortable; I'm not at all that willing to dispose so succinctly. As far as facetious-ness, it was a poem, not a thesis, but it does open itself to thesis/plural, just as any poem does, even bad ones.

Alan

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
desire in deity (D.G.R)

↑ Index

68. Douglas Messerli

Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska

Sat 5 Oct 1996

Alan,

I guess it depends upon how you define words like "traditional." For me, the tradition of 20th Century poetry has been one of innovation and experimentation. The "billowing and uncomfortable" softness which you describe is characteristic of a great many poems (of any generation) which are often described as more "traditional" or as (and I think this is a misnomer, even though I have used it myself) "academic." I just think they're weaker poems, outside of the great tradition of 20th century writing.

As for delimiting the critique, I'd have no limits. I just felt the need to react to the high praise poured upon poets who have won the Nobel Prize.

Enough said from me. But I hope others will go on.

Douglas

At 12:52 PM 10/5/96 -0400, you wrote:
>Well, I personally like the fact that the poem rises or falls on "Hitler"
>- that the word disorients the whole. The other point here is the rela>tion of the Poetics list to traditional and other poetics/ries - Why >_this_ poem up for critique and not one of the less traditional - which >have been far more numerous? Is interpenetrated abstraction harder to >judge? Are we too polite?
>
>There was a billowing and uncomfortable softness to the Szymbroska poem, >even in translation, that reminded me of Dali's Hitler comments, equally >uncomfortable; I'm not at all that willing to dispose so succinctly. As >far as facetiousness, it was a poem, not a thesis, but it does open itself >to thesis/plural, just as any poem does, even bad ones.
>
>Alan
>
> http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
> images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
> desire in deity (D.G.R)
>

↑ Index

69. alan sondheim

Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska

Sat 5 Oct 1996

By "billowing and uncomfortable" softness, I was referring to the contents of the poem, not the style (which I agree with you about of course) - I just wanted to clarify this. It reminded me in a weird way of Sartre's Childhood of a Leader.

Alan

On Sat, 5 Oct 1996, Douglas Messerli wrote:

> Alan,
>
> I guess it depends upon how you define words like "traditional." For me, the tradition of 20th Century poetry has been one of innovation and experimentation. The "billowing and uncomfortable" softness which you describe is characteristic of a great many poems (of any generation) which are often described as more "traditional" or as (and I think this is a misnomer, even though I have used it myself) "academic." I just think they're weaker poems, outside of the great tradition of 20th century writing.
>
> As for delimiting the critique, I'd have no limits. I just felt the need to react to the high praise poured upon poets who have won the Nobel Prize.
>
> Enough said from me. But I hope others will go on.
>
> Douglas
>
> At 12:52 PM 10/5/96 -0400, you wrote:
> Well, I personally like the fact that the poem rises or falls on "Hitler" - that the word disorients the whole. The other point here is the relation of the Poetics list to traditional and other poetics/ries - Why _this_ poem up for critique and not one of the less traditional - which have been far more numerous? Is interpenetrated abstraction harder to judge? Are we too polite?
>
> There was a billowing and uncomfortable softness to the Szymbroska poem, even in translation, that reminded me of Dali's Hitler comments, equally uncomfortable; I'm not at all that willing to dispose so succinctly. As far as facetiousness, it was a poem, not a thesis, but it does open itself to thesis/plural, just as any poem does, even bad ones.
>
> Alan
>
> http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
> images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/

> desire in deity (D.G.R)

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
desire in deity (D.G.R)

↑ Index

70. Ward Tietz
Re: Heidsieck
Sat 5 Oct 1996

Ron,

I suppose what I was thinking of with Heidsieck was a perception of fullness and dimension in his performance that I rarely experience at typical readings of fiction or poetry. I think this probably has something to do with a slightly different understanding of the formal possibilities of reading. In Heidsieck's case I think this comes from experimentation outside of the normal channels of writing, with tape recorders, multi-track recording, etc., that stress different units of sense, rhythm and sound. This allows him, I think, to conceptualize and perform a reading with a wider range of expressive solutions. He started one piece, for example, in a gravely whisper and went through a very varied range of articulation in speed, volume and tone that I think would have been very difficult to conceptualize without a considerable background in sound or music.

I think this applies to someone like Robert Ashley too, although certainly in Ashley's work music is a much more important element. But again a sense of sound and performance that is developed outside of textual practice becomes available to reading, and is reclaimed in some ways as another dimension of the text.

It's tricky because it gets back to a notion of what the material was in the first place and how it was formalized. With Heidsieck you get the sense that what's performed could function autonomously as a text. There is a sense of solidity and craft that almost offers the performance as a bonus or surplus, but then it's the strength of the performance that convinces you of this fact, so it's difficult to say finally what enforces the criteria.

I think this sort of thing is somewhat rare in sound poetry. The more conceptual approach taken by Gerhard Ruehm, for example, or the more phonemical and sound oriented work of Henri Chopin, tend to bypass textual paradigms, and in many other cases where literary forms are foregrounded there is often some incommensurability that goes along with it. The text was mediocre, but the performance of it was good, etc. With Heidsieck it was all there.

Ward Tietz

↑ Index

71. Judy Roitman

Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska

Sat 5 Oct 1996

Doug Messerli write:
>
>But what I object to even more than the thematics is the METHOD of=20 >the poem.... she has created a little construct that relies entirely upon >the reader's agreement before he has even uttered the first word of=20 >the poem. ... But certainly none of the poems I read=20 >(admittedly only seven short poems!) could compare with the poetry=20 >of Lorine Niedecker (another so-called "homey" poet) or William=20 >Carlos Williams, or George Oppen, or Louis Zukofsky, of Ezra Pound,=20 >or Paul Celan, or Benjamin P=E9ret, or Marina Tsvetayeva, or=20 >Tchicaya U Tam'si....the list could go on for a long while:=20 >all poets who never received the Nobel Prize.
>

Right, and isn't that kind of the point? How many Nobel winners got legs? In 100 years who'll read stuff that just confirms that the cliches of folks in 1996? And if its marginally clever, wow, the reader gets to feel smart too.

We have a guy in town here who wrote a whole chapbook on Mengele -- Mrs. Mengele worried about her husband's health, that kind of thing. So embarrassing! And they asked him to read at the Jewish Center! And people told me what a shame it was that I missed it!

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

72. Pierre Joris

[Fwd:]

Sat 5 Oct 1996

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

hmm, fear & loathing near vegas... if I still had my old mustang, I'd drive out to hear that jam... Pierre ps. Douglas seems rather accurate in his evaluation of the latest wet-dynamite prize winner. but who worries about the nobel anyway? writers rarely get it, it's mainly the likes of Pearl Buck or Shameless Hussy, this Brit generation's token Irish. The kiss of death, as Sartre knew, & therefore refused to accept it.

Pierre

From: [redacted] Date: Sat, 5 Oct 1996 14:05:21 -0400

Date: Sat, 5 Oct 1996 09:35:28 -0800
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT: BAUDRILLARD/STONE/DIPRIMA/NEVADA

[NOTE: Spoon-Announcements is not a list; it's a mechanism for distributing information of potentially general interest to all subscribers of the Spoon Collective's mailing lists without bombarding them with cross-postings.]

[The following text is in the "iso-8859-1" character set]
[Your display is set for the "US-ASCII" character set]
[Some characters may be displayed incorrectly]

would you be so kind as to post this for me?

i thank you in advance - edi vaché

CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT:
CHANCE: 3 DAYS IN THE DESERT

JEAN BAUDRILLARD PLAYS (near) VEGAS
with ALLUCQUERE ROSANNE STONE & DIANE DI PRIMA

WHEN? November 8 - 10, 1996
WHERE? Whiskey Pete's Casino, Primm Nevada (see below)
HOW? Check out the CHANCE website at:
http://www.artcenter.edu/events/chance.html
email: [redacted]
phone: 818/[redacted] & 213/[redacted]

WHAT?..... CHANCE is a philosophical rave & summit meeting between artists & philosophers, chaosophists & croupiers, mathematicians & musicians at Whiskey Pete's Casino in the Nevada desert. A CHANCE to redefine this century's romance with randomness & synchronicity less innocently for our era.

CHANCE to explore the multiplicity of identity.

Three days of chance encouters, gambling & deep thought with Jean Baudrillard, Allucquere Rosanne Stone & 30 other internationally active cultural strategists.....Music from the San Francisco bands Towel & Ohm-a-Revelator.....a one-time mystery jam between six special guest star musicians with Red Krayola lead guitarist Tom Watson.....the intensely nameless beauty of Oguri & Renzoku butoh.....a roving fun-house of installation art & readings organized by Sarah Gavlak, Pam Strugar & Dan Frydman.

Appearing in addition to Baudrillard, Stone & diPrima will be

DOUGLAS HEPWORTH, Wall Street Chaos Trader
DJ SPOOKY, That Subliminal Kid
SHIRLEY TSE, Hong Kong Artist
ANN ROWER, New York Writer
SYLVERE LOTRINGER, Semiotext(e)ician
JEREMY GILBERT-ROLFE/THE CHANCE BAND/SHEPPARD POWELL
& THE CHANCE OF THE UNKNOWN

Primm, Nevada is located at the border of Nevada & California: Paiute nuclear waste specialist Calvin Meyers will lead a desert walk & talk about the desecration of tribal land.

WHO? As above..... & YOU!

WHY?

the Outsider bOOkstore
4505 fountain avenue
los angeles, ca 90029
213/[redacted]
[redacted]

''...:'..+..'..+.''why be good? be beautiful & be sad!''...:'*..+.
+....'' ......:'..' ....-:charles baudelaire, by trunc:-.....:'*..'.........

----------2A5B7FA42F62--

↑ Index

73. henry
Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
Sat 5 Oct 1996

But Doug, what if your idea of the "idea" behind the poem is off the mark? What if the un-Poundian "looseness" of the [unjudgeably translated] verse is an effect of concision - i.e., say Szymborska was less concerned with rhythm and mellifluousness than with brevity and impact? Setting aside the question of whether we can so neatly dissect the idea/poem - what if her "idea" is simply to present the shock of 20th century horror and disaster buried, encapsulated in the single image of Hitler/child? i.e. concision - one of the few (admittedly ambiguous) ways poetry has of speaking the unspeakable. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

74. henry
Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
Sat 5 Oct 1996

Hey Judy, maybe you should nominate that poet for the Nobel. His work seems to mean a lot to the people around your part of the country. And heck, maybe when he's translated into Polish, or the other European languages, all the dumb slobs over there who want to feel smart will get a kick out of it too. Gee, aren't prizes dumb? - Henry Gould

↑ Index

75. George Bowering
Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
Sat 5 Oct 1996

> By "billowing and uncomfortable" softness, I was referring to the contents of the poem, not the style (which I agree with you about of course) - I just wanted to clarify this. It reminded me in a weird way of Sartre's Childhood of a Leader.
>
> Alan

I am having trouble, as this thread ravels, understanding what A Sondheim is saying here. First, I have tyrouble with the concept of "content" in a poem. But ignoring that for the moment, how can there be, as "content", some "billowing and uncomfortable softness." I just can not get my head around this.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

76. Anselm Hollo
Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Subject: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels

Both Szymborska's and Heaney's works are examples of the kind of poetry favored by the Nobel Prize Committee (not to mention the U.S."mainstream" press and large tracts of academia).

It's the SLOW and UNDEMANDING kind.

Poetry that moves at speeds even a little higher than the average firing of neurons in a Committee member's brain, or (and perhaps, hence) requires her/him to read it more than twice, is automatically eliminated. The rest is "cultural" "politics" and has never been anything else.

It is, of course, unfortunate that the public at large, presented with poorly translated snippets such as those printed in the U.S. press (of Szymborska's work), has once again received its annual confirmation of the utter triviality and irrelevance of poetry. "If THIS is the BEST...".

NB: It is also not surprising that three recent Nobel laureate poets (the late Josef Brodsky, Derek Walcott, and Seamus Heaney) have just appeared as co-authors of a festschrift to, you guessed it, the pretty darn slow and undemanding Robert Frost.

"'Something there is that doesn't hump a sump,'
He said; and through his head she saw a cloud
That seemed to twinkle."
--Kenneth Koch, "Mending Sump," 1950

Cheers,

Anselm Hollo

↑ Index

77. Simon or Chris nobel prize
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Hey wait a minute, the Nobel prize in literature is political (in the New York Times front page sense) rather than literary, even if sometimes writers of genuine literary value win. The Szymborska prize is related to bringing Poland into Europe, along with promises of NATO enlargement and eventual EU membership. The last two "Polish" Nobel Laureates (I.B. Singer and Czeslaw Miloscz) were American citizens; Singer didn't even write in Polish. She is representative of Polish intellectuals who did not go into exile and maintained integrity despite Communism etc etc. She gets the prize instead of the somewhat better known Zbignew Herbert because (I'm guessing) of a) her gender and b) Herbert's international reputation presupposes a greater degree of compromise with the authorities. I don't know the Polish language but I am sure that, within its parameters, she is a fine a poet. The way the prize seems to work is that a country or region is deemed due for the prize, and then the issue is, which of that locations leading writers is most appropriate -- thus, Oe Kenzaburo over Inoue Yasasushi or Endo Shusaku. I don't know what other Irish writer besides Heaney there was to chose from, but clearly the Northern Ireland peace process is responsible for his award. Meanwhile, Pearl Buck remains the only Chinese writer to have won, French writers seem scandalously underrepresented, etc.

↑ Index

78. alan sondheim

Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska

Sun 6 Oct 1996

That's exactly my billowing and soft point, content-ed or no.

On Sat, 5 Oct 1996, George Bowering wrote:

> By "billowing and uncomfortable" softness, I was referring to the contents of the poem, not the style (which I agree with you about of course) - I just wanted to clarify this. It reminded me in a weird way of Sartre's Childhood of a Leader.
>
> Alan
>
> I am having trouble, as this thread ravels, understanding what A Sondheim is saying here. First, I have tyrouble with the concept of "content" in a poem. But ignoring that for the moment, how can there be, as "content", some "billowing and uncomfortable softness." I just can not get my head around this.
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> 2499 West 37th Ave.,
> Vancouver, B.C.,
> Canada V6M 1P4
>
> fax: [redacted]

> e-mail: [redacted]

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
desire in deity (D.G.R)

↑ Index

79. alan sondheim
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Who is poetry for?

This is the basis of the entire thread. Frost, like it or not (and I'm not fond of him), has a wide-spread audience, much larger than most of the people, if not all of us, writing on Poetics. So we decry demographics, yes? We retain a certain purity against slow and undemanding work?

Alan

On Sun, 6 Oct 1996, Anselm Hollo wrote:

> Subject: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
>
> Both Szymborska's and Heaney's works are examples of the kind of poetry favored by the Nobel Prize Committee (not to mention the U.S."mainstream" press and large tracts of academia).
>
> It's the SLOW and UNDEMANDING kind.
>
> Poetry that moves at speeds even a little higher than the average firing of neurons in a Committee member's brain, or (and perhaps, hence) requires her/him to read it more than twice, is automatically eliminated. The rest is "cultural" "politics" and has never been anything else.
>
> It is, of course, unfortunate that the public at large, presented with poorly translated snippets such as those printed in the U.S. press (of Szymborska's work), has once again received its annual confirmation of the utter triviality and irrelevance of poetry. "If THIS is the BEST...".
>
> NB: It is also not surprising that three recent Nobel laureate poets (the late Josef Brodsky, Derek Walcott, and Seamus Heaney) have just appeared as co-authors of a festschrift to, you guessed it, the pretty darn slow and undemanding Robert Frost.
>
> "'Something there is that doesn't hump a sump,'
> He said; and through his head she saw a cloud
> That seemed to twinkle."

> --Kenneth Koch, "Mending Sump," 1950
>
> Cheers,
>
> Anselm Hollo

http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html
images: http://www.cs.unca.edu/~davidson/pix/
desire in deity (D.G.R)

↑ Index

80. George Bowering
Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Dodie, my jaw dropt when I heard about your students' remarks regarding Giscombe's essay. I couldnt believe it. Holy shit! No, I have never run into anything like this. Maybe racist Canadian students are more reserved.

George Bowering.
,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

81. George Bowering
Re: Giscombe/Fugitive
Sun 6 Oct 1996

> Dodie, Maria, et al:
>
> The students you are describing are having a natural reaction to your class. Not natural in the sense that they are correct in their reactions, but natural in that what they (probably most) are exposed to up to the point of your class result predictably in those reactions.

No, Daniel, that is not a natural reaction. That is a conditioned response. It is something they pick up from their racist families and friends, etc. Nature never was guilty of that kind of prejudice.

George Bowering.
,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

82. Thomas Bell
Re: poetry and play
Sun 6 Oct 1996

---

resend to old thread

I'm sure there are several on the list more conversant with the poetic and language implications of the following. For me it also has some interesting psychological and neuropsycholical implications:

"that spell of the "sheer sound of words" which bursts out in the expressive, sorcerous, and mythopoetic tasks of language, and to the utmost extent in poetry...endowing the distinctive features themselves with the power of _immediate_ signification.....in rereading the poem 'Das grosse Lalula' of Christian Morgenstern in his book of _Galgenlieder_ introduced by Zarathrustra's saying - 'a true man conceals in himself a child who wants to play' - one is struck by lines...with glossolalic _ntr_, ...[and] counting-out rhymes....it was precisely the counters of children's games which inspired the versicle '_Vanja-banja_' ...by the Russian avant-garde poet Elena Guro (1877-1913)." (234)

"the drive for autonomization through the use of the sound shape with no evident meaning attached...[as in] glossalalia....[and a] magical formula chanted for protection.... Such usage is correlated with the magical function of language. It is seen as a way for the human and the divine, the human and the superhuman, to communicate. Obvious resemblences to avant-garde poetry...; to children's counting-out rhymes...; to the verbal play which children seem to delight in...; and to magical phraseolical expressions. All of these uses show the so-to-speak 'spell' of the speech sounds...the drive for autonomization and _immediacy_ of the distinctive features is associated with the mythical, the poetic, the magical, and the playful use of language." (270) Waugh and Jacobsen, _The Sound Shape of Language", de Gruyter, 1987

tom bell

↑ Index

83. Joe Amato
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Sun 6 Oct 1996

i think, as alan says, the question does turn on what poetry is for, who it's for, etc...

clearly, whether we find it merely interesting or useful or trivializing or politically motivated or commercial, poetry has its uses... now if you come at it in literary terms, and you're careful to define what those terms are, you can probably argue for the aesthetic value of just about anything... and poetry as a contested site then turns on the specifically literary value one finds in it...

which is not to say that it isn't somehow political at the same time (as are all consequent judgments)...

but if you come at it in political terms, it may be that lamentably simplistic poetry (from somebody's literary angle, i mean) does enormous political or cultural work...

so it does seem---what i'm trying to say, sorry for not saying it sooner---that in passing judgment, we ought at least to be willing to clarify our presuppositions... this list has a good number of folks subbed who subscribe as well to an interest in and positive appraisal of langpo (right?), hence it's somewhat less than surprising to find criticism here of nobel laureate work... i would like to think we might at times be just as critical of langpo work (have we been?---which we? which work?)... and i would like to think, in any case, we would try to serve up our judgments with due regard for other aesthetics & politics and such like... which is to say, make legible what it is we come to poetry for...

perhaps the problem, specifically, is that there's more than two aesthetics around these parts...?...

joe

↑ Index

84. Jordan Davis
Frost's audience
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Uh, I hate to mention this, but _North of Boston_ and _New Hampshire_ are pretty clever books of poetry in which one hears the rumblings of future Creeleys Kochs Berrigans ets ceterae. That may just be my weetabix settling now, of course, but wasn't the concern for audience--the will to audience--the (to be Olsonian about it) FACT of Frost?

Jordan

PS I think Simon's 'political' reading of the Nobels is absolutely correct--

↑ Index

85. Yunte Huang
Re: nobel prize
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Pearl Buck is Chinese? Nevah heard of it. Actually Chinese writers have been crying all the time that us chinks have never gotten anything from them Nordics. But the committee blamed on the translation. I blame the translation too, but for a different reason (see my essay "The Translator's Invisible hand: The Problems in the Introduction of Contemporary Chinese Poetry" in _River City_ Winter 1996 issue).

I'm really sick of my countrymen wanting the prize so bad. I like what Pierre Joris (hi, P, your recent visit at Buffalo was wonderful!) and Anselm Hollo said about this prize-winning event. Nobel Prize is not always the right place to look for interesting works. I won't be surprized at all if Bei Dao gets it in the near future, but the fact is Bei Dao's poetry is no longer interesting to many people. Go and read it if you don't believe me. The time when the Nobel Committee can no loger blame on the translation, when the translation of Bei Dao's poetry become smooth and transparent enough to cater to the committee member's taste (a tendency I bashed in my essay), Bei Dao will get it. But it will only give me more reasons to ignore whatever comes out of that royal academy.

Long liver revolution.
Yunte Huang

↑ Index

86. Douglas Barbour
Re: POETICS Digest - 3 Oct 1996 to 4 Oct 1996
Sun 6 Oct 1996

About that Norton. Havng tried to teach from it, in a regularized course on British & American poetry post-WW2, so not looking for anything too far out, I still couldnt believe how bad the choices were for 'their' poets (bad on Lowell for example in some ways, very poor on Hughes), but also how absolutely awful the choices were for, say, Olson, in terms of what an anthology might be assumed to do, & then never no never after all these years, a sign of even a small serial poem from Spicer. I gave up. This doesnt sound much better (& up here, the cost!) I'd agree about the Oppen too. Let alone the recent writers -- feh!

>

>Date: Fri, 4 Oct 1996 10:37:24 -0700
>From: Jeremy F Green <[redacted]> >Subject: The New Norton
>
>I don't know if this is an old thread (haven't had much time for >lurking/reading lately), but has anyone had a look at the new (4th >edition) Norton Anthology of Poetry? It's just about to hit the >bookstores.
>
>I got a glimpse at it last night. Pre-20th century looks like a big >improvement; 20th century very discouraging. Stein (from "Stanzas in >Meditation") and Riding are now included, but the post-1950 selection is >pretty horrific. A couple of Michael Palmer poems, but no Susan Howe, Lyn >Hejinian, Charles Bernstein, etc., etc. Maybe the thinking was that Paul >Hoover's Pomo. Norton had covered such "minority" interests, but please, >Brad Leithauser?!
>
>And my particular pet peeve: STILL NO OPPEN.
>
>
>Jeremy Green

All the best

Doug

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
H: [redacted]

'Metaphor is not sacred; it's just complex'

- Paula Gunn Allen

↑ Index

87. Douglas Barbour
Re: POETICS Digest - 4 Oct 1996 to 5 Oct 1996
Sun 6 Oct 1996

The exchange on 4 Oct was fascinating because I rreally felt something being thought & said. Silliman's comments making real sense, & I would go with Messerli on how all those ommissions 'prove' the problems of the Nobel,or perhaps any prize. But maybe it's the 'play' of language in someone like Armantrout that can't be translated, while the 'thematic' of the Hitler poem is all too obvious. I could read it with s light smile & say, yeah, while with her stuff I'm always, delightedly, at sea, I admit. The shoe never does drop, so I keep coming back to watch the performance again. I do like the fact that for the first time since I starte getting this a week or so ago, there was some discussion about poetry & poetics (although I always enjoy George's disocveries of new dido poems, oops I mean dildo...

All the best

Doug

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
H: [redacted]

'Metaphor is not sacred; it's just complex'

- Paula Gunn Allen

↑ Index

88. Douglas Messerli
Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Dear Henry,

My only response is that there are certainly much better ways to present "horror and disaster." Indeed,
I didn't feel any "horror or disaster" from her poem--she persumed it, but her poem certainly didn't present me with any. That's my point. It's all preconceived. No horror. No disaster in this cutesy-pie poem.

Having just published a book on the "horrors" of Nazism and World War II (part of a larger exploration of evil in the 20th century) I'm most interested in methods of presenting or--as I would prefer--discovering and questioning the horrors of our past--and potential future.

Didn't see them in Szymbroska at all.

Douglas

At 08:20 PM 10/5/96 EDT, you wrote:
>But Doug, what if your idea of the "idea" behind the poem is off the mark?
>What if the un-Poundian "looseness" of the [unjudgeably translated] verse >is an effect of concision - i.e., say Szymborska was less concerned with >rhythm and mellifluousness than with brevity and impact? Setting aside the >question of whether we can so neatly dissect the idea/poem - what if >her "idea" is simply to present the shock of 20th century horror and disaster >buried, encapsulated in the single image of Hitler/child? i.e. concision - >one of the few (admittedly ambiguous) ways poetry has of speaking the >unspeakable. - Henry Gould
>

↑ Index

89. Lisa Jarnot
Ear Inn Series
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Hey you all: Here's an update from the Ear Inn:

Saturday October 5th was the first reading of the series, featuring Brooklyn poet Prageeta Sharma and Providence poet Mark McMorris. It was a rocking day-- Prageeta opening with new work (recently rejected by the Paris Review) which was very cool. Mark read some new and some old favorite poems which were "exposed, meandering, supine" and great. Mark has a brand new beautiful chapbook from Burning Deck (Mothwings) and his book The Black Reeds is coming out from University of Georgia Press in February.

The audience included fashionable luminous luminaries Jackson MacLow, Stacy Doris, Judith Goldman, baseball great Bill Luoma, Douglas Rothschild (of the New York Rothschilds), Chris Stroffolino, new new yorkers Anselm Berrigan and Lee Ann Brown, Drew Gardner, Joe and Leo Elliot, Segueway baron Dan Machlin, West Coast poet Robert V. Hale, Iowa poet Katy Lederer, Samuel Truitt, Sean Killian, Julie Patton, a table of unidentified poetry lovers and/or government agents, and a bunch of people watching baseball at the bar.

The Ear in is at 326 Spring Street, readings start at 2:30, $3 contribution.

Don't miss out on the fun/never a dull moment/sometimes a free beer-- if you happen to be in new york next saturday October 12 you can come to see Cliff "secret bard of the lower east side" Fyman and Lee Ann "crush groove" Brown. Cliff's been working on a new series of Mayer-esque experiments and Lee Ann will be reading from new and forthcoming work-- keep an eye out for her book Polyverse, soon to arrive from sun and moon.

↑ Index

90. Rod Smith
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Sun 6 Oct 1996

While I agree with Simon & Jordan that the Nobel is political-- it seems to me that this merely increases the need to raise aesthetic questions with regard to those anointed. Is the Nobel in Literature anything more than bad poets used for propaganda purposes? Occasionally it may be, though I have no examples at hand. This is not to say that the propoganda aims may not on occasion have some efficacy-- however it is one more example of the degree to which individuals are subject to state authority. That this is _so_ obvious is exactly why it needs to be pointed out.

The Best American Poetry 1996 edited by Adrienne Rich, was recently published. The introduction contains an epigram and two or three citations from Charles Bernstein's _A Poetics_. The book itself, which, admittedly, I have not examined carefully, seems to contain very little that would fall under the rubric "innovative writing." Past editions of this "Best" have included a number of such writers. So, discursive statements about the usefulness of an aesthetics of multiplicity are ok, but the actual practice of such. . . ? I'll look at the book a bit more, hopefully it's more interesting than it appears.

--Rod

↑ Index

91. Kevin Killian
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Sun 6 Oct 1996

At 9:26 AM 10/6/96, Joe Amato wrote:

> so it does seem---what i'm trying to say, sorry for not saying it sooner---that in passing judgment, we ought at least to be willing to clarify our presuppositions... this list has a good number of folks subbed who subscribe as well to an interest in and positive appraisal of langpo (right?), hence it's somewhat less than surprising to find criticism here of nobel laureate work... i would like to think we might at times be just as critical of langpo work (have we been?---which we? which work?)... and i would like to think, in any case, we would try to serve up our judgments with due regard for other aesthetics & politics and such like... which is to say, make legible what it is we come to poetry for...

This is NOT Kevin, this is Dodie.

I don't think anyone said S's poems were drivel because they weren't language poetry. They were declared drivel from the perspective of the type of poetry they were attempting to be (with reservations given due to the vagaries of translation). Pushing this into a langpo versus the rest of poetry is irritating to me.

As far as political poetry goes, San Francisco is reeking with bad political poetry. Nobody's giving any of it a Nobel Prize.

From the perspective of someone trying against all odds to curate an "experimental" reading series (many of my readers would never want to be called langpos) I'm very appreciative of any space that provides a welcome environment to share and discuss the avante-garde. Even though I've been critical of the theory "boys" in the past I actually miss them on this listserv. Most of the world is against experimental writing. It's too bad this space has been co-opted by so many who share that againstness.

Dodie Bellamy

↑ Index

92. Rod Smith

new B City

Sun 6 Oct 1996

B City # 11
edited by Connie Deanovich & Mark Wallace

William Fuller
Susan Schultz
Andrew Levy
Jefferson Hansen
Rodrigo Toscano
Carolyn Koo
Joe Ross
Rod Smith
Jean Donnelly
Mark DuCharme
Mark Wallace
Connie Deanovich

available for $6 from
B City
517 North Fourth St
Dekalb Illonois 60115

↑ Index

93. Kevin Killian

Hope you all can come to my play

Sun 6 Oct 1996

Hi everyone, this is Kevin Killian.

If any of you are going to be in the Bay Area on Wednesday (October 9) (and I know many of you will be), then please come to my play, "Wet Paint," which Small Press Traffic is presenting in collaboration with the San Francisco Art Institute, in conjunction with the "Beat Culture and the New America" show which has just opened here in S.F.

It's on Wednesday, October 9, 7:30 p.m. at the San Francisco Art Institute Lecture Hall (800 Chestnut Street at Jones Street, SF)‹a block up from Columbus. And cheap! It is only $6 to get in‹four dollars if you are a student or a member of Small Press Traffic. And if you attend the Art Institute you get in free.

One woman . . . Jay DeFeo . . . walking a perilous tightrope between obscurity and fame in the late 1950s. The brilliant romantic artist, taunted by sister Kay de Feo, a mind so vicious she sneaks in night after night to dash more paint on Jay¹s finished production. Jay, woman, rebel, artist, haunted by a shoplifting arrest in her past, and puzzled by how dark her apartment seems to be getting. And the men in her life, the _cute guys_ who made North Beach a bongodelia of high art and Beat esteem--Bruce Conner, Wallace Berman, Michael McClure, Wally Hedrick, Kenneth Anger. And the visitors from Mexico, who dared Jay De Feo to her masterpiece por chevre--Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera! Her shady psychiatrist, pressuring her to abandon feminist art work and return to Hallmark sell-out. The Hollywood starlet who came to the Fillmore to study up for an important role--Tuesday Weld. And Janis Joplin, the woman who worshipped Jay and inspired ³The Rose.²

"They invented a new kind of art . . . and a new kind of SEX to go with it!" Starring D-L Alvarez, David Buuck, Ethel Chase, Norma Cole, Margaret Crane, Kate Delos, Kathi Georges, Phoebe Gloeckner, Craig Goodman, Jonathan Hammer, Clifford Hengst, Scott Hewicker, Caitlin Mitchell-Dayton, Karla Milosevich, Rex Ray, Michelle Rollman, Leslie Scalapino, Wayne Smith and Alicia Wing.

Actually, the play will have no reference to the artist (and former iconoclast) Bruce Conner, whose attorneys wrote to me very sternly shortly after the publicity began to unfold about my play. They claimed they had an advance copy of my play (wrong! I just finished it yesterday!) and that under no circumstance was I to use his a) name b) image or c) likeness in what he calls a "frivolous exploitation" of his work. I wanted to hire a lawyer of my own, to accuse him of prior restraint, etc., --but decided not to, it's supposed to be fun. So come on down and help me pay tribute to a great artist, Jay DeFeo, and the California funk assemblage movement in general. Thanks for your bandwidth everyone.

↑ Index

94. Gabrielle Welford
Re: Heidsieck before Heaney
Sun 6 Oct 1996

On Sat, 5 Oct 1996, Ron Silliman wrote:

> Heaney on the other hand might be an argument for recognition of different modes of English as different languages,

I must leeeeap in here. Please say more. This is an idea that intrigues me so much I want to fashion it into some kind of dissertation--having sprung into it via Finnegans Wake rather than Heaney. And as a political reclaiming move, like Tom Leonard foregrounding the local English over mainstream (or BBC as he says), as Susan Schultz says of Lois Ann Yamanaka here. And the local Englishes--as I well know from having lived in Ireland and Hawai'i--rooted in the grammar and much of the vocabulary of the language(s) that was there before. gab.

↑ Index

95. Thomas Bell
Re: poetry and play
Sun 6 Oct 1996

Does the current bankruptcy of Duty and Truth leave poetry as play as the lone pillar?

From the apparently infamous Steele book:

"Kant's _Critique_ 'Poetry...expands the mind by giving freedom to the imagination...free, spontaneous, and independent of determination by nature..as a sort of schema for, the supersensible. It plays with semblance, which it produces at will, but not as an instrument of deception; for its avowed purpose is merely one of play.'

"Poetry lacks direct relevance to the world of empirical fact and ethics...it is merely 'play'...spontaneous...'self-active' Power of Imagination'"

Poe - "Poetry of words.._The Rhythmical Creation of Beauty_. Its sole arbiter is Taste. With the Intellect or with the Conscience, it has only collateral relations. Unless incidentally, it has no concern whatever either with Duty or Truth."

↑ Index

96. alan sondheim
terrible true account of the origin of the text
Mon 7 Oct 1996

2.81

A True Account

I went onto IRC to investigate breathing/heaving through textual correc- tions and backups. I joined channel #zz as @Alan op. There was no one else of course. I began typing when "Helis" (changed the name) replied to me. Helis was not on zz, but was somehow monitoring it and messaging me with com- ments. This is precisely the origin of scattering/heaving - the breath- ing of the text here, beyond the control of _this_ writing into the domain of the _other:_

/j zz<P> #zz \|/ PhoEniX v2.25 \|/  Alan ([redacted]) has joined channel #zz Users on #zz: @Alan @Alan (+is) #zz \|/ PhoEniX v2.25 \|/ I want to Describig ng desire as it implements itself across the screen, whatreen, what<Alan> Describing desire as it implements itself across the screen, what<P> I8AM @Alan (+is) #zz Lag ? - E/X E/X 'd refer to as breathing or heaving - which is an extension of the _text-t he _text-object_<Alan> I'd refer to as breathing or heaving - an extension of the _text-object_<P> into a symptomology, diegesis - thinking through the aura that rera that re- sults<Alan> into a symptomology, diegesis - thinking through the aura tha t results<P> [Helis:[redacted]] why do you think this?or thinking 9AM @Alan (+is) #zz Lag ? - E/X E/X at cross-purposes - as if: an action, i.e.:<Alan> or thinking at cross-purposes - as if: an action, i.e.:<P> /m Mel is why not becua ause this is running in this fashion<-[Helis]-> why not be- cause this is running in this fashion<P> /me worrying through the text and in- trusion of the fourth -* Alan worrying through the text and intrusion of the fourth -<P> /whois Helis<

P>  Whois Information for: Helis Address :
[redacted] IRCNAME : NEKKED WOMAN Server : irc.ilstu.edu ([thor.cmp.ilstu.edu] Illinois State University)[Helis:[redacted]] you are strange40AM @Alan (+is)

#zz Lag ? - E/X 1 - E/X /m Helis i'd think so to be sure -<-[Helis]-> i'd think so to be sure -<P> /sc<P> Pub: #zz @Alan taking it further with the other coming into the sane<Alan> taking it further with the other comin

g into the sane<P> /me auratic, downtrodden...* Alan auratic, downtrodden...<P> /1AM @Alan (+is) #zz Lag ? - E/X l1 - E/X <P>  Alan has left channel #zzAlan (+is) Lag 1 - E/X

↑ Index

97. John Cayley
Reality Street Editions Web Site
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Please visit Reality Street Editions' new web site at:

http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/reality/

... and keep visiting, since we will be adding new content, including hypertextual arrangements of work by cris cheek, Miles Champion and others.

Email inquiries, orders, etc. to Ken Edwards please:
[redacted]

As a reminder of what's on offer, here is an author/title listing:

cheek, cris & Jones, Sianed Songs from Navigation 1-874400-09-1 GB Pounds: 12.50

Corcoran, Kelvin
Lyric Lyric 1-874400-00-8 GB Pounds: 5.99

Duncan, Andrew
Cut Memories and False Commands 0-9507018-6-6 O/P

Edwards, Ken
Good Science (pub. by Roof Books) 0-937804-48-7 GB Pounds: 6
A4 Landscape 0-9507018-5-8 GB Pounds: 2.50

Fisher, Allen
Dispossession and Cure 1-874400-03-2 GB Pounds: 6.50
Unpolished Mirrors 0-9507018-2-3 GB Pounds: 15 (signed edition only)

Gevirtz, Susan
Taken Place 1-874400-02-4 GB Pounds: 6.50

Howe, Fanny
O'Clock 1-874400-07-5 GB Pounds: 6.50

Kirsch, Sarah
The Brontes Hats 0-904225-13-5 GB Pounds: 7.99
(signed edition GB Pounds: 15)
T 1-874400-05-9 GB Pounds: 4.50

James, John
Dreaming Flesh 0-904225-14-3 GB Pounds: 5.99
Kinderlieder (pub. by Avocado) No isbn, GB Pounds: 7.00

Mulford, Wendy
The Bay of Naples 0-9507018-8-2 GB Pounds: 5.99
(signed edition GB Pounds: 15)

O'Sullivan, Maggie
In the House of the Shaman 1-874400-01-6 GB Pounds: 6.50

O'Sullivan, Maggie (ed.)
Out of Everywhere 1-874400-08-3 GB Pounds: 9.00

Raworth, Tom
Catacoustics 0-904225-12-7 GB Pounds: 5.99

Reedy, Carlyle
The Orange Notebook 0-9507018-3-1 O/P

Riley, Denise
Mop Mop Georgette 1-874400-04-0 GB Pounds: 6.50

Riley, Peter
Distant Points 1-874400-06-7 GB Pounds: 6.50

RSE 4Packs 1
Champion, Miles
Kidd, Helen
Tarlo, Harriet
Thurston, Scott
Sleight of Foot 1-874400-10-5 GB Pounds: 5.00

Seed, John
Interior in the Open Air 0-9507018-9-0 GB Pounds: 5.99
(signed edition GB Pounds: 10)

Welch, John
Blood and Dreams 0-9507018-7-4 GB Pounds: 6.95
(signed edition GB Pounds: 10)

Wilkinson/Rodefer/Mengham
Writing out of Character 0-904225-15-1 GB Pounds: 6.50

Reality Studios magazine
Set of 6 volumes, Reality Studios 5-10 (1983-88) GB Pounds: 20

Email inquiries, orders, etc. to Ken Edwards please:
[redacted]

↑ Index

98. John Cayley
Many Press Web Site
Mon 7 Oct 1996

The Many Press (London) has just set up a web site at:

http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/many/

Please visit it when you can. The site is based on the 1995 annotated catalogue which covered 20 years of the press's output. It's a long and interesting list and it continues to grow.

"The Press when founded was part of the poetic revival of the late Sixties and early Seventies; there was a feeling, quite widely shared, that much of what was most interesting was likely to be found outside the productions of the mainstream publishers. Changes in the technology of typesetting and printing also had much to do with it. During the Seventies I printed a number of publications at the Printshop of the Poetry Society. Financially the Press has always been a non-profit-making venture, though the limitations of my time and energy, rather than financial considerations, are what have mainly restricted the Press' output."

- from the introduction to the catalogue by the editor, John Welch

John Welch does not have an email account, but I can forward messages to him if they are sent to:
[redacted]

Here is the author/title list. For more details of the books and their availability, please go to the site.

Paul Ashton
Farmworker's Story

Anthony Barnett
Quiet Facts

Kate Bass
The Onion House

Alison Brackenbury
Two Poems

John Cayley
- Under it All

Alfred Celestine
- Confessions of Nat Turner

David Chaloner
- Today Backwards

Amarjit Chandan
- Being Here

Andrew Crozier
- Were There

Tim Dooley
- Three Poems

Ricardo Duranti
- The Archer's Paradox

Cory Harding
- The Art of Flicker Book Speech

Jeremy Harding
- The Book, The Bay, The Breakfast Table

Ralph Hawkins
- English Literature

Neville Hodgson
- Privileged A Ticket

Anthony Howell
- The Mekon
- Winter's Not Gone

Peter Hughes
- Bar Magenta
- The Interior Designer's Late Morning
- The Metro Poems

Charles Ingham
- The Alexander Graham Bell Poems
- Writing a Letter Home

Nicholas Johnson
- Listening to the Stones

Martha Kapos
- The Boy Under the Water

Judith Kazantis
Two Poems

Nicholas Lafitte
Near Calvary

B. C. Leale
Three Poems

Tom Lowenstein
Booster: A Game of Divination
Filibustering in Samsara
The Shaman Aningatchaq
La Tempesta's X-Ray

Barry MacSweeney
Hellhound Memos

The Many Review

Brian Marley
Turbines

Simon Marsh
Bar Magenta
The Vinyl Hat Years

Rod Mengham
Glow-Worms

Peter Middleton
Signs

Ruth Padel
Alibi

Jeremy Reed
Jack's in his Corset

Peter Riley
The Musicians The Instruments

Peter Robinson
Anaglypta
Going Out to Vote
Overdrawn Account

Sudeep Sen
New York Times

Vittorio Sereni
- The Disease of the Elm

Andrew Shelley
- Peaceworks

W. G. Shepherd
- The Antonine Poems
- The First Zone of the Growth Furnace
- The Gifted Child
- Three Odes of Horace

Colin Simms
- Time Over Tyne
- Voices

Ian Sinclair
- The Penances

Six Towns Poetry Festival
- Peacocks Two

James Sutherland-Smith
- The Country of Rumour
- Death of a Vixen
- A Singer from Sabiya

Martin Thom
- Ceremonial Devices

Peter Tingey

Nick Totton
- Seeing It Through
- A Talisman

Vanessa Poetry Magazine

Irving Weinmann
- The Eye of the Storm

John Welch
- Braiding the Squadron
- Erasures
- Estuary
- The Fish God Problem
- Five Poems Five Landscapes
- For a Birth
- Grieving Signal

- Hydrangea
- Performance
- The Storms/Lip-Service
- Six of Five

Nigel Wheale
- The Plains of Sight
- Phrasing the Light
- Simples

Peter Winter
- The Steel Chair
- Twenty One Poems

John Welch does not have an email account, but I can forward messages to him if they are sent to:
[redacted]

↑ Index

99. John Cayley
Ig-nobel
Mon 7 Oct 1996

(I guess I may have missed the punctuation for 'tongue-in-cheek', since the post was otherwise great but I can't resist the following, in case anyone thinks she was born there or something...)

> Pearl Buck remains the only Chinese writer to have won,

"Chinese" ?????? !!!!!!

"writer" ?

There are also some members of the gliterati on both sides of the Atlantic (but not, as far as I know, on the "far" side of the Pacific) who think that Jung Chang (author _Ugly Ducklings_) is a "Chinese writer".

"Chinese" ?

"writer" ?????? !!!!!!

... It's just that this is precisely the sort of problem that those of us trying to get Chinese writers read 'over here' have to deal with. The general reader does think that Pearl Buck, Han Suyin, Jung Chang etc. are Chinese writing.

- - - - - >
John Cayley Wellsweep Press [in Chinese HZ:]
^ innovative literary translation from Chinese ^

1 Grove End House 150 Highgate Road London NW5 1PD UK
Tel & Fax: 0[redacted] Email: [redacted]
http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/

< - - - - -

↑ Index

100. John Cayley

New Books from the Many Press

Mon 7 Oct 1996

MANY PRESS (London, UK)

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Peaceworks by Andrew Shelley.
Poems. 24pp. 1996. GB Pounds: 3.00. 0 907326 34 X

Andrew Shelley was born in Huddersfield in 1962. He was educated at the University of Cambridge and at Oxford where he held a fellowship and wrote a doctoral dissertation on Samuel Beckett. He has also held scholarships at the universities of Athens, Crete and Istanbul. His articles and literary journalism have appeared in a wide range of publications including Essays in Criticism and The Sunday Times and his poetry in various little magazines and anthologies. He is currently preparing a collection of poems and a prose work. He lives in Oxford.

Shelley's is an intellectual yet sensuous poetry in which the insisted-upon details of individual experience are held in often rebarbative contact with the increasingly embattled categories of mind that support shared life, common society. Despite this, by virtue of a reasoned intuition that attends as much to the particular contingencies of life - at home in work and love - as to their wider determinations, there occur moments of great lyrical intensity in which thinking and feeling combine.

The Onion House by Kate Bass.
Poems. 16pp. 1996. GB Pounds: 2.50. 0 907326 35 8

Kate Bass was born in East Finchley in North London in 1962. Poems of hers have appeared in magazines; this is her first collection to be published. After graduating in Chemistry from Edinburgh University in the early eighties she worked for the Patent Agency in London. In 1989 Kate Bass moved to Cambridge; since 1993 she has been studying Illustration at Anglia Polytechnic University.

Kate Bass' poems combine directness with a strong sense of mystery. There is great accomplishment in the apparently calm and ordered balance of her narratives; but always underlying them a haunting sense of otherness. It is writing which can, for instance, introduce the myth of Persephone in a manner which is all the more effective for seeming quite natural and unforced.

The Onion House features a cover illustration by Kate Bass.

Prices include postage, but if you cannot send funds in British pounds, please add US$ 8.00 to cover bank charges.

Please also visit the Many Press web site:
http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/many/

Please order direct from:

The Many Press
15 Norcott Road
London N16 7BJ
England

email inquiries (must be forwarded): [redacted]

↑ Index

101. Kevin Killian
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Mon 7 Oct 1996

At 10:37 AM 10/7/96, Joe Amato wrote:
>still, i was pressing a bit to >ask whether, in fact, there is some inertia around here when it comes to >self-critique, by which i mean critique of more experimental forms... and >the only way i know to handle this w/o presumption is to propose judgments >along with a sense of where one is coming from...
>
>but mebbe that's just the point---mebbe there's already the assumption of >some shared assumptions that not everybody around here shares...

First of all, I don't think that tolerance for other schools has ever lead to good poetry or art--or has ever been a requirement for poets or artists. Poets should have the right to draw from whatever feeds them and to dismiss the rest.

And you and others are right that drivel is a really ugly, dismissive word. I never would have used it--it does reverb with bigotry.

I don't think that people who are into expermental writing (langpo being just one vein of that) do have these uniformly shared assumptions. When this list was smaller there was lots of fighting going on among the members. I think people are very aware of the lack of shared asssumptions on this list. I think that's why many people I'd like to be hearing from are no longer posting. There has to be a certain common ground for things to be worth discussing.

Dodie

↑ Index

102. Kevin Killian

Re: Giscombe/Fugitive

Mon 7 Oct 1996

At 9:33 AM 10/7/96, Daniel Bouchard wrote:

> I will strive to be more careful with my choice of words.

Yes, Dan, please do that.

Dan's posting reminded me that I never responded to any of the responses to my original post. First of all, thanks for all the support and good suggestions I received on this list and back channel.

By way of follow-up, the two ringleaders of the racist responses dropped my class. The remaining nine students are sweet as can be. I enjoy all of them. Their written responses to Giscombe were not racist. One guy, without ever referring to the Giscombe essay, wrote this gruesome little story about capturing mice in traps. I liked it a lot. I encourage them to give "creative" responses to the readings, not essays.

When we had our follow-up discussion, neither of the ringleaders was there and the rest of the class apologized to me for not being more vocal in combatting them. One woman who hadn't read the essay when the blow-up happened said she went home and read it and was very confused about what the problem was for the other students.

I think that the extreme negative reaction to the essay went beyond racism--I think that many of the students found the Giscombe essay more formally challenging than I had anticipated--to me it was pretty straightforward. I think its unconventional formal elements were threatening to some and they didn't have the vocabulary to address that (beyond "This guy can't write!") and so they attacked something they knew how to talk about.

Dodie

↑ Index

103. Ron Silliman
SOME OTHER KIND OF MISSION
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Anselm sugggests that the Nobel prize committee wants work that won't cause short circuits in their brains (or rapid sub-cranial movements of any kind). Big surprise. My own favorite would have been Bao Dei, who has written some poems that read well in English. And it would have been nice to have had a laureate younger than I. It may be that his work has "smoothened" out to reach that take-it-slow crowd. Remember, that if they gave it for music, Tom Jones would've had a Nobel years ago.

Still, I think there's always the question (often a political one) of how a given writer's work fits into her/his society, as such. Brodsky has a very different meaning in Russia (where he represented a total refusal to "play along") than in the US (where he became another Cold War icon) and I've often wondered which Brodsky won the prize.

If there were justice in this world, we'd be hearing the names Creeley and Ginsberg on the short list for such awards, not to mention Rakoski, Guest, Ortiz, Grahn....

On the other hand, if you want to give your brains and heart a real workout, there's another great new book out -- SOME OTHER KIND OF MISSION by Lisa Jarnot, from Burning Deck ($11, wherever good books are sold...which means SPD, Woodland Pattern & through Rod at Bridge Street). It'll remind you why you read poetry in the first place.

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

104. henry
Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
Mon 7 Oct 1996

On Sun, 6 Oct 1996 08:51:52 -0700 Douglas Messerli said:
>
>My only response is that there are certainly much >better ways to present "horror and disaster." Indeed,
>I didn't feel any "horror or disaster" from
>her poem--she persumed it, but her poem certainly >didn't present me with any. That's my point. It's >all preconceived. No horror. No disaster in this >cutesy-pie poem.

I'm sorry to grind another minor issue to small powder - but are you saying there's no irony in the poem? That it's a Norman Rockwell cutesy-pie image of Hitler as child? No, you're not going that far. You're saying she "presumed" the history. Well, I'm saying that was her point: to hide it all in full view. To maintain silence & show Hitler as a child: a shocking thing to do in a poem. You found it distasteful; but however one finds the poem, the reader IS confronted with the history that followed, by means of the concise bizarre fusion of Hitler/child. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

105. Robert Drake

forward: New Orleans Rev. call for work

Mon 7 Oct 1996

Forwarded message:
Subj: New Orleans Review Call for Work
Date: 96-10-06 16:17:40 EDT
From: Wtlav

New Orleans Review, published by Loyola University, is currently seeking creative written work in any genre. We attempt to publish a wide range of literary material, from traditional to experimental, from Leon Stokesbury to Ron Silliman to Jake Berry. If you would like to submit, please do so by e-mail to:

[redacted]

We can only accept previously unpublished work.

Reply to Wtlav, not to R. Drake...

↑ Index

106. Bob Holman

Re: POETICS Digest - 5 Oct 1996 to 6 Oct 1996

Mon 7 Oct 1996

To go fast, you start slow. Anybody out there yodling harmelodic lullabyes? My daughter likes "inchworm" from _Hans Christian Andersen_ (Danny Kaye).

Brilliant exegesis of political forces (which Polish intellectual, etc.). Could a Nobel go to an Israeli poet at this moment? Which Bosnian Serb?

Try Eavan Boland's _Object Lessons_ for "other" Irish.

"Mending Sump" rules.

Bob Holman reads his poems at Biblio's, 317 Church just below Canal, NYC, every Monday in Oct, 6:30-8:30. A Retrospective Series from Mad Alex: Ex=tended Play.

↑ Index

107. Daniel Bouchard

Re: Giscombe/Fugitive

Mon 7 Oct 1996

George Bowering:

"natural in that what they (probably most) are exposed to up to the point of your class" is meant to imply what you are calling "a conditioned response."

I was not saying that bigotry and racism are natural. Perhaps "inevitable" would have been a better word to describe the reactions of students (the students of Dodie and Maria; reactions that students of mine have also had) when presented with ideas and material that radically challenges notions of the world that they may have been brought up with.

I will strive to be more careful with my choice of words.

[redacted]

> The students you are describing are having a natural reaction to your class. Not natural in the sense that they are correct in their reactions, but natural in that what they (probably most) are exposed to up to the point of your class result predictably in those reactions.

No, Daniel, that is not a natural reaction. That is a conditioned response. It is something they pick up from their racist families and friends, etc. Nature never was guilty of that kind of prejudice.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

108. Edward Foster
Re: LANSING!!! PETTET!!!
Mon 7 Oct 1996

UPDATE! UPDATE! BOSTON'S EVENT OF THE SEASON -- THE GERRIT LANSING, SIMON PETTET READING -- WILL BE HELD IN

> THE SENIOR COMMON ROOM of ADAMS HOUSE
> 26 PLYMTON STREET > CAMBRIDGE

tommorrow! tesday, october 8th! 7:30 p.m.!

OH YES OH YES OH YES!!!!! YESSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSS!!!!!!

↑ Index

109. Joe Amato
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

well dodie you got a point...

but i got a point too!...

the point is simply this: i haven't heard anybody around here, who's stayed around here for any length of time, dismiss a langpoem (and please permit me this shorthand)---or for that matter much of what you're calling "experimental" work, which i like to think i'm committed to mself---with a tag as summary as douglas's "drivel"...

if this has happened, please refresh my memory...

in any case, and being only a bit of a gadfly, i think it's only fair to observe that it FEELS easier around here to tag a nobel laureate's work so than to so tag a poem by, say, zukofski...

now i far prefer, mself, zuk to szymborska... but that's not the point, or at least, not my point... and i agree with rod, insofar that there would seem to be a mainstream against which many different alternative poetries are inevitably 'measured' and dismissed... still, i was pressing a bit to ask whether, in fact, there is some inertia around here when it comes to self-critique, by which i mean critique of more experimental forms... and the only way i know to handle this w/o presumption is to propose judgments along with a sense of where one is coming from...

but mebbe that's just the point---mebbe there's already the assumption of some shared assumptions that not everybody around here shares...

best,

joe

↑ Index

110. Charles Smith
found
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

found this yesterday, the Fox network lineup:

Big Deal
Oops
Presidential Debate

charles

↑ Index

111. Burt Kimmelman
Hank Lazer
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Hank,

are you out there? if so, could you backchannel me?

Burt

[redacted]

↑ Index

112. maria damon
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

i guess my problem w/the szymborska pome is that it doesn't do enough to justify itself. it cd be done in 4 lines. i read the 1st stanza w/ some interest, expecting it to go somewhere, but it didn't, it just said the same thing over and over in not very rich language. there aren't enough ideas in it for me, it doesn't accomplish enough on its own terms. alice miller's chapter on hitler's childhood in thou shalt not be aware is far more powerful and developed, regardless of what you think of her theory. md

↑ Index

113. maria damon
Re: found
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

cool.

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> found this yesterday, the Fox network lineup:
>
>
> Big Deal
> Oops
> Presidential Debate
>
>
>
>
>
> charles

↑ Index

114. Beth Simon
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Mon 7 Oct 1996

For those interested (no lo etc.)
Clare Cavanaugh will read from her translation of Wislawa Szymborska's

View with a Grain of Sand: Selected Poems

, which, it says here, won a PEN/Bk of the month award for outstanding transl for 1996 for her and her collaborator, Stanislaw Baranczak.

She reads in Madison, WI (she's a UW-Madison assoc prof) at Borders Bks on Oct 8 (tomorrow), at 7:30 pm.

beth simon

↑ Index

115. Beth Simon
Re: Heidsieck before Heaney
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Dear Gab and Ron S.,

Processes of piginization and creolization, and then decreolization, yes?

beth simon

↑ Index

116. Jordan Davis
Concentration
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

the imitable joe amato wrote:
>still, i was pressing a bit to >ask whether, in fact, there is some inertia around here when it comes to >self-critique, by which i mean critique of more experimental forms...

and I would direct him to the also imitable Alfred Corn who on the CAP-L side of things is asking EXACTLY THE SAME THING -- which is 'what makes a lang-poem bad.'

What would make a Seamus Heaney poem good? Or for that matter a poem by any of the other 'squish-poets' -- Kinnell Hughes Rich etc -- or the 'pinot-grigio' poets or the coff coff -- go ahead Rod investigate the Best of the year, but don't think of it as a book of poems, think of it as a game of concentration. When you find an unusual word, try and remember where else in the book you saw THE SAME WORD. When you find a person writing under unusual circumstances, find someone else writing under THE SAME CIRCUMSTANCES. When you notice a profoundly corny figure -- aerial view of town at night -- find another poem with THE EXACT SAME FIGURE.

Do not assume that great poems will simply come along. Ridicule anyone who tells you what you have to do or what you cannot do in a poem.

Joe -- why don't _you_ tell us what a bad language poem is.

Jordan

↑ Index

117. Joe Amato
Re: Concentration
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

geez, jordan, alfred corn?...

ok: am trying to get other poetic pov's into this discussion, much in line with dodie's observation that there are those on this list who no longer post (and i feel this latter of late too)... and i've (or had anyway) a hunch that one reason could be possibly b/c they don't want to be accused of liking drivel... but perhaps this is too too harsh a way of putting things, at least insofar as douglas m. is concerned... i understand that he was himself being provocative... but perhaps in being provocative he touched a nerve that needed touching... in any case, i can imagine a public context (not this one) where i might have mself made an observation similar to douglas's... but my point, again, is why was it made here?...

so, what makes a bad langpoem bad?...

er, no---what makes a langpoem bad?... or what do i expect of such poetry (assuming we could have a "such") that, lacking, i tend to see as bad?... pretty much (isn't this a surprise?) what i would say makes most poetry bad---lack of engagement, of follow-through with the aesthetic... not wringing out of the words so many of their possibilities (and i mean thematic as well), or not creating a formal context through which such wringing might take place...

which is probably an argument for complexity of sorts...

best,

joe

↑ Index

118. Jordan Davis
Re: Concentration
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Joe, I knew you'd take the comparison in stride, that's why I made it -- and I'd be all too quick to rattle off the qualities I think make a non-bad poiem, langly or otherwise -- energy, sufficient complexity, vulnerability (charm), except that I've been a real ball hog and want to start raking in the assists -- so -- what are some other good qualities? Or does value in poetry work some way that doesn't have to do with qualities?

Jordam

↑ Index

119. Henry Gould
Re: Concentration
Mon 7 Oct 1996

On Mon, 7 Oct 1996 15:48:09 -0400 Jordan Davis said:
>
>except that I've been a real ball hog and want to start raking in the assists
>--

>so -- what are some other good qualities? Or does value in poetry work some >way that doesn't have to do with qualities?

Okay Jrdn, here's something from left field. There are the usual qualities that are called for in your basic good poem: the ones you mentioned, plus music, sense of the language (meaning & sound), originality, sense of past writings, sense of future writings. Let's continue with baseball metaphor & consider realm of poetry a playing field, where sometimes there are levels of standards, not set in stone, but people have a sense of them. Then there are some of real originality who sort of make the game their own. They can do all the basics - but they personalize everything, take it to a new level of freedom & depth.

Some qualities these originals rely on, I believe, that you don't hear much about nowdays, are: anonymity, modesty, renunciation. Tools by which poetry enters other dimensions of the human conversation. Opposite side from mannerism, poem as autotelic object, etc. The danger here, is kind of debased "civic" poetry, poetry used for some manipulative purpose; but the real originals tend to avoid this or transcend this category. This is the feeling of Russian poetry & culture that I harp on now & then & that real exper ts in it (which I'm not) will probably deny: but it's a kind of modesty & solemnity which you just don't hear in American poetry nowdays, that I'm aware of. A solemnity coming from a sense of commitment to a larger conversation, & a free place within it for poetry. Probably has its down side too (the hokum of the Serious). Think of Anonymous as the perennial benchmark for quality. Just rambling here. - Henry G

↑ Index

120. Libbie Rifkin

Berrigan cites

Mon 7 Oct 1996

Hello List,
Does anyone know where Ashbery says "The academy of the future is opening its doors"? And/or where Apollinaire said it first?

How about where Williams said "The sonnet is dead." I have the interview where he talks about how he hates the sonnet, but that line isn't it.

Berrigan's sonnets have me on a wild goose chase.

Thanks, all.
Libbie

↑ Index

121. henry g
Re: Concentration
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Addendum to previous: maybe part of sense that Russian poetry is part of a larger conversation is due to the fact that Russians not only like to sit around drinking and talking - it's kind of an integral everyday ritual & part of their life (or used to be). The bigger conversation was happening right in your own crowded apartment. - HG

↑ Index

122. Michael Coffey
Re: POETICS Digest - 5 Oct 1996 to 6 Oct 1996 -Reply
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

bob holman wrote:
Try Eavan Boland's _Object Lessons_ for "other" Irish.

Let me second that recommendation. Boland's memoir (published by Norton last year) is a brilliant critique of an entire tradition, in this case, Irish and Anglo-Irish poetry, which carefully exposes the male domination of the forms, down to the expectations of the poetic voice, the poetic subjects, and the poet himself in his public and private persona, in the pub, in the classroom, in the bedroom. she candidly recounts her own instinctive acknowledgment that this was the case, her early careerist attempt to orient herself as a "male" poet and, only after having met with some unsatisfying success and then experiencing motherhood, did she find an alternative voice, for herself at least, and perhaps for others... her book also broadens, or perhaps it is deepens, the interesting site of struggle that language is in Ireland, which I have always taken as a coherent example of how cultural, political and in boland's case sexual issues are fought out at the level of language. Also, the book is beautifully written.

↑ Index

123. kaona
Re: Englishes/Latins
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

da kine stay da kine--perhaps an emphatic 'contextuality' is what struck you most? or do you mean something different in saying 'compact'?

On Tue, 8 Oct 1996, Tony Green wrote:

> Is what happened to Latin i.e."becoming"
> French, Spanish, Italian etc and then dying
> happening to English, with its wide range of > Englishes. I had an amazing essay written in > a Polynesian English a couple of weeks back.

> It was non-standard, but it worked, provided
> I worked at translating it to my own version > of English. I cd not find effective paraphrases
> that were not cumbersome and awkward,
> comparefd to the very compacted language
> of the text. It offered an Olsonian "refreshing"
> of language. Unfortunately I haven't got it > here to quote. I guess Susan Schultz and Gabrielle > Welford will recognise what I'm talking about.
>
> best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

124. Tony Green
Englishes/Latins
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Is what happened to Latin i.e."becoming"
French, Spanish, Italian etc and then dying
happening to English, with its wide range of Englishes. I had an amazing essay written in a Polynesian English a couple of weeks back.
It was non-standard, but it worked, provided
I worked at translating it to my own version of English. I cd not find effective paraphrases
that were not cumbersome and awkward,
comparefd to the very compacted language
of the text. It offered an Olsonian "refreshing"
of language. Unfortunately I haven't got it here to quote. I guess Susan Schultz and Gabrielle Welford will recognise what I'm talking about.

best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

125. Michael Coffey
Re: Concentration -Reply
Mon 7 Oct 1996

jordan davies wrote:

and I'd be all too quick to rattle off the qualities I think make a non-bad poiem, langly or otherwise -- energy, sufficient complexity, vulnerability (charm),

except that I've been a real ball hog and want to start raking in the assists -- ok, i'll bite. I wonder if the call for folks to identify "good" language poems might be met with an embarassment of silences; or perhaps a few nominations, in jordanspeak, of "non-bad langpoems."

i could say, show me a good hannah weiner poem and I'll show you a bad language poem, but i haven't read all of hannah. do i need to?

or p inman, who once read a paper at st mark's that was brilliant. still, i haven't read all of P; do i need to?

for a good language poem: mac low's light poems, all of them. and anything in jackson's From Pearl harbord Day to FDR's birthday, from Sun & Moon.

and Bruce Andrew's Wobbling, or Give em Enough Rope, Fiona Templeton's London.

what makes for a poem i want to read over and over? an order of sounds I delight in hearing or having my tongue perform that themselves suggest or imply worlds of possible meaning that destabilize the one I left before entering the poem and that manage to permanently alter the world of meaning i return to. that's all. This has happened to me with writers as diverse as Gertrude Stein and Paul Muldoon, and never Heaney. Or Olson. Or Charles Bernstein. Allan Davies yes. And wild Steve McCaffery. But never Neidecker. Someone stop me, I will stop, Sam, thanks.

↑ Index

126. Steve Shoemaker
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Mon 7 Oct 1996

I think there's plenty of support for experimental poetry on this list, enough that I don't see why we couldn't critique some of it without much risk of losing our "common ground." If anything, i wld probably want even more "difference." If "experimental" folks (and i count myself one, for lack of a better term) are reluctant to post, even here, because of the perception of such difference, that doesn't seem to me to speak well of the vigor of the discourse.

And besides, as any one here knows, it doesn't take that many voices to make a strong thread anyway, so if there's something to say that isn't getting said why not just take a shot? steve

Dodie wrote:

> I don't think that people who are into expermental writing (langpo being just one vein of that) do have these uniformly shared assumptions. When this list was smaller there was lots of fighting going on among the members. I think people are very aware of the lack of shared asssumptions on this list. I think that's why many people I'd like to be hearing from are no longer posting. There has to be a certain common ground for things to be worth discussing.
>
> Dodie

Steve Shoemaker

↑ Index

127. Gary Roberts
polkas, gigues, and slams
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Yes, poets and everyone else for that matter is free to draw whatever aesthetic and political lines they want as far as their own tastes and poetics are concerned. However, it seems gratuitous to slam Frost-- who never won a Nobel, who is not exactly a live wire these days, and who was once marginally innovative even if we now assume his poetic to be a dead end.

As for the ad hominem remarks on the slow-wittedness of readers who prefer Heaney et al and/or who actively dismiss other traditions, I am reminded of the Speed & Performance threads of a couple months back. What kinds of mental and physical operations does experimental poetry require/enact/enforce, and is it possible to produce inductive arguments about their political and psychological differences from the Nobel stuff, on the basis of their respective rates of consumption? Answering these questions seems a more interesting response to the perennial retrospection and repetition compulsion of these award-givers/receivers. I am not persuaded that Creeley or Snyder say, are running at a different speeds from other poets like Merwin or Simic who are not affiliated with avant-garde social networks. However, Zukofsky or Olson, say, are demanding different responses than Walcott and Heaney, but settling for or even reinforcing an implicit binarism is not going to crack the institutional prejudice against the global energies of experimentalism.

↑ Index

128. David Kellogg
Re: polkas, gigues, and slams
Mon 7 Oct 1996

> As for the ad hominem remarks on the slow-wittedness of readers who prefer Heaney et al and/or who actively dismiss other traditions, I am reminded of the Speed & Performance threads of a couple months back. What kinds of mental and physical operations does experimental poetry require/enact/enforce, and is it possible to produce inductive arguments about their political and psychological differences from the Nobel stuff, on the basis of their respective rates of consumption? Answering these questions seems a more interesting response to the perennial retrospection and repetition compulsion of these award-givers/receivers. I am not persuaded that Creeley or Snyder say, are running at a different speeds from other poets like Merwin or Simic who are not affiliated with avant-garde social networks. However, Zukofsky or Olson, say, are demanding different responses than Walcott and Heaney, but settling for or even reinforcing an implicit binarism is not going to crack the institutional prejudice against the global energies of experimentalism.

I agree. After days trashing Heaney, Frost and Szymborska, this thread has finally provoked some responses that value diversity, first from Michael Coffey and now from Gary Roberts. Thank you. De gustibus.
~~~
~~~

of apologetic tone about discussing high art topics, as if to another audience, one unfamiliar with, distrustful of and defensive towards pakeha culture. But she doesn't write an altogether different English from what is usually thought of as "standard" in the academy.

This is nothing new to many on the List I suppose. But it has become recently very noticeable among my students, with more and more Polynesian and Asian students (in great cultural variety) . The effect on European Art History is curious. The eurocentric character of the discourse becomes glaringly apparent.

best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

130. Pritchett,Pat
Re: polkas, gigues, and slams
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Nobel Prize = best poetry money can buy.

The whole idea of the Nobel & its ilk raises the old Ciceronian "Who benefits?" Not poetry, I think. Rather the bourgeois institutions that seek to quell the anxiety they experience vis-a-vis "art" and so create wprizes and whatnot to that end. The Nobel has always seemed to me a ratification of the status quo. Writing that "agitates the sleep of mankind" seldom is recognized by the Committee (though Beckett would certainly seem to prove the exception). James Agee once spoke of "the emasculation of acceptance" when talking about the relationship between art and its intended audience. That's a pretty loaded phrase, to be sure; divisive and more than a bit juvenile, but if the shoe fits...

At all events, no writer should be looking for rewards from captains of industry. How the Nobel gratifies bestower and recipient, but esp. the former, tells us more about the current relationship between art, commerce and culture, then about putative "artistic merit." It seems to me that once you establish the idea of a prize, you've already compromised something essential in the creative process.

Cheers,
Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

From: David Kellogg
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS

Subject: Re: polkas, gigues, and slams
Date: Monday, October 07, 1996 5:53PM

>As for the ad hominem remarks on the slow-wittedness of readers who prefer >Heaney et al and/or who actively dismiss other traditions, I am reminded of the >Speed & Performance threads of a couple months back. What kinds of mental and >physical operations does experimental poetry require/enact/enforce, and is it >possible to produce inductive arguments about their political and psychological >differences from the Nobel stuff, on the basis of their respective rates of >consumption? Answering these questions seems a more interesting response to >the perennial retrospection and repetition compulsion of these >award-givers/receivers. I am not persuaded that Creeley or Snyder say, are >running at a different speeds from other poets like Merwin or Simic who are not >affiliated with avant-garde social networks. However, Zukofsky or Olson, say, >are demanding different responses than Walcott and Heaney, but settling for or >even reinforcing an implicit binarism is not going to crack the institutional >prejudice against the global energies of experimentalism.

I agree. After days trashing Heaney, Frost and Szymborska, this thread has finally provoked some responses that value diversity, first from Michael Coffey and now from Gary Roberts. Thank you. De gustibus.
~~~
~~~

131. Andrew D Epstein
Re: Berrigan cites
Mon 7 Oct 1996

On Mon, 7 Oct 1996, Libbie Rifkin wrote:

> Hello List,
> Does anyone know where Ashbery says "The academy of the future is opening > its doors"? And/or where Apollinaire said it first?
>
> How about where Williams said "The sonnet is dead." I have the interview > where he talks about how he hates the sonnet, but that line isn't it.
>
> Berrigan's sonnets have me on a wild goose chase.
>
> Thanks, all.
> Libbie
>
Hi Libbie --

The "academy of the future is/ Opening its doors" is from the poem "Last Month" which is from Rivers and Mountains. It's also in the Selected.

Take care,
Andrew Epstein

↑ Index

132. maria damon
Re: Berrigan cites
Mon 7 Oct 1996

---

the sonnet is dad indeed. but whose.

↑ Index

133. wystan
Szymborska
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Dear List, One of the many things you do is inform. I have read an opinion or two about one poem by this Polish prize winner, and on the prize itself. Can we do better than this? Has anyone one here read any other poems by her? Who reads Polish? List I'm all ears. Wystan

↑ Index

134. william marsh
Dora Marsden
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Can anyone tell me who "Dora Marsden" is? -- reference in Wms' "Spring and All", in the first paragraph of the prose section following "By the road to the contagious hospital..." ?

Thanks in advance.

bmarsh

↑ Index

135. Susan Schultz
Re: Englishes/Latins
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Dear Tony--I'd love to see that nonstandard essay.

all best, Susan (Schultz)

↑ Index

136. Gary Roberts
yet more Nobel
Mon 7 Oct 1996

Of course, prizes are the devil's blessing, but I am unsure whether the "status quo" argument is accurate. Beckett is indeed a major exception, but then again, who would deny his importance? What about Claude Simone and Octavio Paz? These recent winners are not exactly "status quo" and have direct ties to avant-gardism. Going a little further back, what about Neruda and Montale? Sure they're safe enough now, but that wasn't always the case. I know that quibbling about a roster is not really getting to the heart of the poetic issues necessarily raised by this year's selection, but I thought maybe the ambiguous examples I have cited would complicate the tendency to think of the prize as only going to the Pearl Bucks of the world.

Gary R.

↑ Index

137. Rod Smith
Re: Concentration -Reply
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Michael Coffey, In naming Inman & Weiner as the langpos you're not enticed by I'm tempted to say oh, so you really don't like language poetry. To say a few words not so much in defense but in response-- both of these poets seem to me to write on their own terms, there is a very strong sense of the immediacy & integrity in the writing. Ok, what immediacy, what integrity?

Inman's immediacy is that the weight of each letter, each word, each phrase, each paragraph is the same, & they are all weighed very carefully. The writer has attended to them neither more nor less than they demand. Peter often mentions Beckett (a fine synonym for integrity), & one senses in his work that Beckettian understanding that there is really nothing to be gotten from the writing other than the experience of it, the doing of it. So, to be gotten from the reading of it is a very particular kind of intelligence, I can't help but think of deKooning but without the heroic junk.

Hannah's a dialogic hurricane. Hurricane's have something like 200,000 times the power of an atomic bomb. One feels that the intensity of engagement with language that _she_ feels in the writing is something like that. If you don't like hurricanes, don't go there. I'm fascinated by them. Or if you don't like that overblown analogy simply say that it's a multiple dialogism -- there's _a_ conversation going on in her work, but it's not locatable, it never stays in one place long enough, & yet it's _information_. & I think often she's very funny. Try _The Fast_, though _Little Books/Indians_ is possibly my favorite.

Not liking Olson or Bernstein or Niedekker's a conudrum I shan't engage at the moment. But o I plea that the great infinity might bestow upon you the treasures & fruits & vegetables of their wondrous labour

--Rod

↑ Index

138. George Bowering
Re: Messerli returing to Szymbroska
Tue 8 Oct 1996

> That's exactly my billowing and soft point, content-ed or no.

Now I am having even more difficulty.

How can a point be billowing?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

139. George Bowering
Re: nobel prize
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Pearl Buck remains the only Chinese writer to have >won, French writers seem scandalously underrepresented, etc.

Pearl Buck was Chinese?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

140. Tom Beard
New journal - CURRENT
Tue 8 Oct 1996

I'm emerging from a long period of lurkerdom to announce a new journal:

> CURRENT - journal of the mind & senses
>
> http://www.comm-unity.co.nz/~current/

It includes work by listmembers Charles Alexander, Tom Beard, John Geraets, Tony Green and ShaunAnne Tangey. Other contributors with whom you may be familiar include Ebon Fisher, David Howard, Kapka Kassabova, Sugu Pillay and Mark Williams.

The contents will be updated as new work comes to hand, and an announcement on the print version will be made shortly.

CURRENT aims to be a multi-disciplinary, multi-media journal, and includes poetry, audio, theory, fiction, interviews and visual art. Also of note is "Complete with Instructions", possibly the first use of Java to present and animated poem.

I look forward to your feedback.

Tom Beard.

↑ Index

141. Wendy McClure

Anyone up for picking on BAP?

Tue 8 Oct 1996

Whoa just wrote the following post and then logged on and there was the digest in all its flammable glory... just scanned it for now cause I gotta sleep... I get the sinking feeling that I missed all the fun...

Rod Smith writes:

> _The Best American Poetry 1996_ edited by Adrienne Rich, was recently published. The introduction contains an epigram and two or three citations from Charles Bernstein's _A Poetics_. The book itself, which, admittedly, I have not examined carefully, seems to contain very little that would fall under the rubric "innovative writing." Past editions of this "Best" have included a number of such writers. So, discursive statements about the usefulness of an aesthetics of multiplicity are ok, but the actual practice of such. . . ? I'll look at the book a bit more, hopefully it's more interesting than it appears.
>
> --Rod

Something compels me to buy the BAP books every year and for the past few I've found little to reward the reflex... the Rich edition, while I'm not crazy about it, is the first one in a while that hasn't left me mostly regretting another year of the habit. As for the relationship between her intro and the book itself I'd say her appropriation of the Bernstein quotes hold up for the purpose of her essay at least --i.e. really only one instance where she takes anything that C.B. has to say towards "innovation" in writing, and there she's citing only a few of her choices (& they're actually ones I agree with, a really good Giscombe poem for one). Now for the rest of the book & the ensuing practice, -- or two practices, I guess, one is Rich's selection & she's pretty honest about her priorities, admitting to pushing aside the designations of "best" ... anyway, when it comes to the poets themselves and _their_ practice of an aesthetic multiplicity I got the vague feeling that they blew it somehow, usually in the form of too much "post-practice": something like 50 pages of contributor's notes filled w/ anecdotes and/or explanations for things that not particularly evident in the poems themselves (esp. disheartening when they were "formal choices") --in short, a lot of "aesthetic" that didn't seem to make it into the poems. Overall I guess I consider the collection as a document of Rich's encouragement and read the poems together w/ her intro as an assessment of so much more that needs to be done towards a poetics of innovation and difference... it's not an easy choice but I guess I'd rather see some of the poems fall visibly short of the editor's expressed standards, as opposed to the limits of a safer consistency that I've seen in BAP before.

--Wendy McClure

↑ Index

142. Kevin Killian
Re: Marjorie Perloff
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Why don't you ask her yourself--she's on the list:

Marjorie Perloff <[redacted]>

x,
Dodie

↑ Index

143. David W. Clippinger
Marjorie Perloff
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Could someone please backchannel me Marjorie Perloff's address.

Thank you,
David Clippinger

↑ Index

144. henry gould
Re: polkas, gigues, and slams
Tue 8 Oct 1996

On Mon, 7 Oct 1996 18:28:00 -0500 Pritchett,Pat @Silverplume said:
It seems to me that once >you establish the idea of a prize, you've already compromised something >essential in the creative process.

I think Pindar, for one, would disagree. Isn't there a love/hate atmosphere for everyone, winners/losers & bystanders, involved with prizes? But the world would be a drabber place without races, competitions, prizes, recognitions. A "simpler" place, in a negative sense. I don't think the Nobel committee, or anyone else, considers the Nobel the ultimate arbiter of value. The arbiter, in literature, is the reader, the audience. I for one was moved when Naguib Mahfouz won the Nobel, & it's sad if it's considered another example of Western imperialism. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

145. Michael Boughn
Re: Dora Marsden
Tue 8 Oct 1996

> Can anyone tell me who "Dora Marsden" is? -- reference in Wms' "Spring and All", in the first paragraph of the prose section following "By the road to the contagious hospital..." ?
>
> Thanks in advance.
>
> bmarsh

Dora Marsden was the editor of the Freewoman which became the New Freewoman and then The Egoist around 1914. At that time she asked Harriet Weaver to take over editorial responsibilities while Marsden pursued her interest as a philosophical writer (while writing for the magazine that went on to hire Pound as literary editor and to publish work by Joyce, Eliot, HD, Aldington, Fletcher, de Gourmont, etc.). Marsden's books include The Definition of the Godhead, The Mystery of Time, and The Philosophy of Time.

If you can, you should check out the original issues of the magazines. They're fascinating. Pound, Joyce, and HD alongside articles on vegetarianism and free love and Marsden's long philosophical essays on time and the godhead.

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

146. maria damon
Re: Englishes/Latins
Tue 8 Oct 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> Dear Tony--I'd love to see that nonstandard essay.
>
> all best, Susan (Schultz)

yeah me too--md

↑ Index

147. Simon or Chris

poil buck

Tue 8 Oct 1996

---

yes of course Mrs. Buck was born (nee Seidenstricker, I think) somewhere in West Virginia and only went to the orient as a small child (not sure of exact date -- her parents were missionaries).

The nobel prize line is a misremembered quote from John Yau.

however, her translation of the Shui Hu Chuan, which she called "All Men are Brothers," (its otherwise translated as "The Water Margin" or "Outlaws of the Marsh") is well worth anybody's reading. It is a slightly odd sounding English she used, probably affected by her translation method (supposedly, because she was fluent and illiterate in Chinese, she had a collaborator read the book aloud to her and she translated from that) but it gives more of the flavor and feel of that kind of Chinese literature than anything else I know. Rexroth was a fan of her translation, so is Alice Notley.

↑ Index

148. Michael Boughn

Re: Concentration

Tue 8 Oct 1996

Henry writes:

> Let's continue with baseball metaphor > & consider realm of poetry a playing field, where sometimes there are levels > of standards, not set in stone, but people have a sense of them. Then there > are some of real originality who sort of make the game their own.

The part of the baseball metaphor that comes to my mind is the team thing. After all the razzle dazzle aesthetics (which start to sound remarkable like something cribbed from John Crowe Ransome or Allen Tate), everybody just wants their team to win. The problem is the umps are all recruited from the other team(s).

> anonymity, modesty, renunciation. Tools by which poetry > enters other dimensions of the human conversation. Opposite side from > mannerism, poem as autotelic object, etc.

Wow, that's the most scandalous, avant-grade thing ever posted here!

Have people on the list heard that Bob Dylan sold the rights to "The Times They Are a Changin'" to the Bank of Montreal for use in their new advertising campaign? Maybe that was part of the deal of that got him shortlisted for the Nobel.

This is just not the kind of world in which Bob Creeley can ever get the Nobel prize. Maybe we should make up our own prize and award it to him.

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

149. henry
Re: Concentration
Tue 8 Oct 1996

On Tue, 8 Oct 1996 09:03:43 -0400 Michael Boughn said:
>
>Have people on the list heard that Bob Dylan sold the rights to "The >Times They Are a Changin'" to the Bank of Montreal for use in their >new advertising campaign? Maybe that was part of the deal of that got >him shortlisted for the Nobel.

Yeah, but they agreed to change the lyrics to: "The Monies they are a-Changin'".
>
>This is just not the kind of world in which Bob Creeley can ever get >the Nobel prize. Maybe we should make up our own prize and award it to >him.

Maybe Bob (Dylan, that is) would help fund it. He is from Minnesota, after all.
- Henry "Eat Crow, Ransom" Gould

↑ Index

150. Sylvester Pollet
WCW vs. The Sonnet
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Libby Rifkin et al, It's not quite in the words you quoted, but the line of WCW's I like re sonnets is in his Author's Introduction (1944) to the Collected Later Po- ems: "To me all sonnets say the same thing of no import- ance." He goes on to clarify, "There is no poetry of distinction without formal Invention...." Which may be what we're really griping about vis a vis the poem on baby Shickelgru- ber. On that thread, though, I don't trust The New York Times to choose a poet's best work--there's a politics of that level of selection also. I'm suspending judgment until I read more work.

↑ Index

151. henry gould
Re: WCW vs. The Sonnet
Tue 8 Oct 1996

On Tue, 8 Oct 1996 09:57:46 EDT Sylvester Pollet said: >ance." He [WCW]goes on to clarify, "There is no poetry of distinction without >formal Invention...."

This should be written in stone over the portals to 20th century American experimental writing. It's the dogma I was referring to in my "shocking" post re: mannerism, poem as object, etc. In my noble dream world I have revised this maxim to read: "There is no poetry of distinction without formal invention, carefully disguised and completely hidden". - Henry Gould

↑ Index

152. Joe Amato
nobels, the Good, here we go...
Tue 8 Oct 1996

---

(1) re the nobels: any way we might speculate as to how the literature awards do/do not align with more empirical fields?... sure, we all know that lit. tends to be, on the surface of it, a more subjective category... or does it?... i mean, is there a common denominator at work in the nobels, one that presumably seeks out, say, the Good... regardless how political all the awards may be de facto, what i'm asking about here is whether and how a meta-category (say, the Good) is distributed across the award spectrum...

(2) this relates to jordan's question to me (loaded as hell!---but thanx jord, we need to be provoked so) about what makes for a bad langpoem (and will somebody please forgive me this shorthand)... i teach tech. writing, and as i just posted a list member backchannel, i tend to focus these days in my classes, as a sort of historical backdrop, on the distinction between good tech. writing that's designed (literally) for beneficial ends and good tech. writing that's not... that is, the latter writing might be proficient, expeditious, and so forth, but may be used in the service of BAD ethics, morals, politics... so mebbe, in fact, it's BAD (and there are surely places and people who would say so---which raises the issue of good and bad as these relate to culture and community)... in particular, my classes examine the national socialist rhetoric of wwii (we build on a remarkable essay that appeared some time ago in _college english_ (march 1992), steven katz's "the ethics of expediency: classical rhetoric, technology, and the holocaust")... in short: if i can take my tech. writers, and tech. writing in general, to task for not owning up to its complicity in a rhetorical bracketing of ethics-morals-politics (have a look at the stc ethical code) while promoting some technical-technologized "good," why then i suppose, i should hold poetry so accountable... and certainly with an understanding that poetry (whatever it is) doesn't work the same way, hence that poetic 'accountability' is not going to work the same way... and with the recognition that some poetries seem to be more easily held accountable (why is this?), which is not to say that they're less demanding necessarily...

i'm posing questions here for which i have no easy answers... but of course the question of the good is not simply formal---and in any case, formal issues, as many would argue, do in fact lend themselves to matters of social un/desirability, esp. when viewed against various norms...

joe

↑ Index

153. Fred Muratori
WCW on the Sonnet
Tue 8 Oct 1996

> How about where Williams said "The sonnet is dead." I have the interview where he talks about how he hates the sonnet, but that line isn't it.
>
> Thanks, all.
> Libbie

Hi Libbie --

Though I can't find WCW's original statement on the sonnet, your question gives me an opportunity to bring up WCW's later comment on the form, which everyone seems to have forgotten, and which significantly modifies his earlier opinion. This is from a letter to James Laughlin dated Jan. 23, 1938. The comment follows WCW's expression of admiration for the sonnets of Merrill Moore:

"The sonnet, I see now, is not a form at all but a state of mind. It is the extremely familiar dialogue upon which much writing is founded: a statement then a rejoinder of a sort, perhaps a reply, perhaps a variant of the original -- but a comeback of one sort or another...I never had the intelligence to realize that it wasn't the sonnet that was at fault but the bad artists who wrote in the form that were the calamity. The imagination rescues us all but how difficult to realize the simplest formulations until someone, some ONE, liberates us. Now sonnets can be written again."

This is from pages 25-26 of the _Selected Letters_ of WCW to Laughlin, published by Norton in 1989.

Take care,

Fred Muratori

Fred Muratori
Reference Services Division
Olin - Kroch - Uris Libraries
Cornell University
[redacted]
http://fmref.library.cornell.edu/spectra.html

****

"The spaces between things
keep getting bigger and more important"

-- Jon Ashbery
****

↑ Index

154. Charles Bernstein
Creeley Festival
Tue 8 Oct 1996

> This is just not the kind of world in which Bob Creeley can ever get the Nobel prize. Maybe we should make up our own prize and award it to him.

At the University at Buffalo, we've cut to the chase with our Creeley 70th birthday celebration, starting Thursday night and going to Saturday night. Come on down, up or over -- (All events are free.)

Thursday, October 10
8pm: Hallwalls: Eileen Myles Reading, introduced by Robert Creeley

Friday, 10/11
3-5pm Katherine Cornell Theater, North Campus
Welcome: UB President William Greiner
Reading: Gil Sorrentino and Amiri Baraka
5-6:30pm 420 Capen Hall Opening, "Here: Fifty Years of Poetry in Buffalo", Poetry/Rare Books Collection, 420 Capen
8:30-10pm Katherine Cornell Theater
Reading by Robert Creeley // Conversation with Creeley and Jim Dine

Saturday, 10/12
4-5pm Katherine Cornell Theater: John Ashbery
8:30pm Hallwalls: Concert with Steve Kuhn and Carol Fredette Reception and party with Mercury Rev

↑ Index

155. Steve Shoemaker
Re: Dora Marsden
Tue 8 Oct 1996

I don't know much about Marsden, but Mariani's bio of WCW mentions a long piece of hers called "Lingual Psychology" that was serialized in The Egoist. WCW critiqued the piece in a long letter to the mag that was printed over two successive issues. All this around 1917.

--steve

On Mon, 7 Oct 1996, william marsh wrote:

> Can anyone tell me who "Dora Marsden" is? -- reference in Wms' "Spring and All", in the first paragraph of the prose section following "By the road to the contagious hospital..." ?
>
> Thanks in advance.
>
> bmarsh

Steve Shoemaker

↑ Index

156. maria damon
Re: Concentration
Tue 8 Oct 1996

mike b rites This is just not the kind of world in which Bob Creeley can ever get the Nobel prize. Maybe we should make up our own prize and award it to him.

now that is a truly sensible suggestion. like what the before columbus foundation did with the American Book Award and what Messerli's doing w/ the Gertrude Stein awards. all we need is a big chubby endowment. md

↑ Index

157. Jeff Hansen
what's a good poem
Tue 8 Oct 1996

OK, I've been a lurker for a while.

On dismissal: I'm quite suspicious of it, particularly when it involves intergenerational activity. It is not necessary to dismiss poets you don't find useful. Just ignore them.

Underlying the whole Nobel thread is the frustration of experimental poets at not having access to the insitutions with tremendous culural capital. We want wider distribution and exposure. Mainstream newspapers and intellectual publications ignore us in favor of the Heaneys et al of this world. We want some of that largesse for ourselves. We want experimentalism to be more central to cultural life.

What would that mean, socio/politically/economically, to have experimentalism at the core? Perhaps a look at the visual art world through much of the 20th century would give an answer. `Tain't a pretty sight. Any other ideas?

So why do we rail? (And I rail as much as anyone. Yesterday at lunch I explained why the mainstream Erdrich was inferior to the nonmainstream Young Bear, and not a few weeks earlier I had denounced Heaney to the same colleague.) If major cultural capital brings with it the grotesque wheeling and dealing and imaging-making that we see in the artworld, who needs it? Visual artists that I know are all appalled by their position relative to the image-makers.

Would experimental poetry, if given major support, be different? Probably. Innovation in visual arts is tightly tied to marketing and niche-making. There is not enough of a market in poetry to sell mainstream stuff, let alone experimental. Perhaps experimental could get more capital without changing. Dunno.

Maybe this is why I don't post a lot: I dunno.

As far as what I like in a poem, language or otherwise: Challenge. I want it to stretch my mind. Sometimes this is historical: why did someone write this in 1432? Sometimes it is based on figurative language: where do the metaphors lead me? Sometimes it's the sound of the piece: can I give words to such a feeling? how is such a sensation created? Sometimes it is based on a weird pull, a sense that the poem is uttering a significance for my life that I cannot articulate. Sometimes I know the poet and wonder why he or she would write this from what I know of the givens of biography.

I want poetry that provides me an opportunity for mental calisthenics.

I propose a new prize. The POETICS LIST MENTAL CALISTHENICS POET OF THE YEAR.

Dig it.

Jeff

↑ Index

158. Pritchett,Pat
Re: yet more Nobel
Tue 8 Oct 1996

You raise a good point, Gary. Mebbe I shld have sd "tends to ratify." All the examples you mention are "exceptions" and one could add more. (I think). But for every Paz or Montale there seem to be ten Jaroslav Sieferts (the WS of his day?). Taking it farther back, why give the prize to Kipling and not to Conrad? What about Joyce, Woolf, Pound, WCW? Why has a US poet never won? We could beat this thing to death and maybe we have. At bottom I suppose it all comes down to the fact that hierarchies (of whatever kind) always breed resentment. On the other hand, I like Henry's notion that's it all just part of the circus...

Patrick Pritchett

From: Gary Roberts
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: yet more Nobel
Date: Monday, October 07, 1996 10:48PM

Of course, prizes are the devil's blessing, but I am unsure whether the "status quo" argument is accurate. Beckett is indeed a major exception, but then again, who would deny his importance? What about Claude Simone and Octavio Paz? These recent winners are not exactly "status quo" and have direct ties to avant-gardism. Going a little further back, what about Neruda and Montale? Sure they're safe enough now, but that wasn't always the case. I know that quibbling about a roster is not really getting to the heart of the poetic issues necessarily raised by this year's selection, but I thought maybe the ambiguous examples I have cited would complicate the tendency to think of the prize as only going to the Pearl Bucks of the world.

Gary R.

↑ Index

159. Michael Boughn
Re: Concentration
Tue 8 Oct 1996

> mike b rites
> This is just not the kind of world in which Bob Creeley can ever get the Nobel prize. Maybe we should make up our own prize and award it to him.

> *now that is a truly sensible suggestion. like what the before columbus foundation did with the American Book Award and what Messerli's doing w/ the Gertrude Stein awards. all we need is a big chubby endowment.*
> md

Although I know it's a bit meagre, Bob would probably be happy with a bowling trophy and a ten dollar money order. It's the thought, or the thinking, etc.

Onward,
Mike

↑ Index

160. Jordan Davis reconstruction
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Henry.

Sound and meaning? I'm not sure that's sufficiently complex. Frinstance what about syntax, which is a simultaneous structuring of sound and meaning that isn't particularly affected by word choice or intended meaning? I'm also worried that putting 'sound and meaning' up front that way will lead to the [what's the right word here? privileging? valorization? winning-of-awards? ratification! that's it, dirty ratification] of one particular kind of sound, as the perennial victory of the absurd squish-writers has shown. I'd hate it if everybody tried to write like Clark Coolidge --- wait maybe they did and it was the 80s -- even though to my ear parts of _Solution Passage_ sound as good as anything else.

My understanding of anonymity in Russian poetry is that one had to be anonymous because one had to be anonymous. I would hate to feel that necessity, and I would hate to emulate the behavior of people who felt that necessity. To have a name is not so bad. Each one works out where they are on the axis of comfortable / cautious. The trend always seems to tip back towards cautious during even the most predictable election year -- fast money.

So -- I liked Jefferson's list --

Jordan

↑ Index

161. henry
Re: reconstruction
Tue 8 Oct 1996

On Tue, 8 Oct 1996 13:24:15 -0400 Jordan Davis said:
>

>Sound and meaning? I'm not sure that's sufficiently complex. Frinstance >what about syntax, which is a simultaneous structuring of sound and meaning >that isn't particularly affected by word choice or intended meaning? I'm >also worried that putting 'sound and meaning' up front that way will lead >to the [what's the right word here? privileging? valorization?

I'll agree with you there. Sounds like a textbook: "Sound & Meaning: Poetry for Hungry 9th Grade Ears". & I liked Jefferson's post too. He mentioned something about how the sound creates a new or hard-to-grasp feeling, that said it better. But if you want complexity I think the sound & meaning have to work together with the syntax, maybe not in lockstep, but... it IS affected by vocabulary & meaning. Ashbery & his disciples like to disconnect them, create fake rhetorics... I used to like it but now find it sort of boring.

> My understanding of anonymity in Russian poetry is that one had to be anonymous because one had to be anonymous. I would hate to feel that necessity, and I would hate to emulate the behavior of people who felt that necessity. To have a name is not so bad. Each one works out where they are on the axis of comfortable / cautious. The trend always seems to tip back towards cautious during even the most predictable election year -- fast money.

I'm thinking of it more in terms of the various literary effects of anonymity. I think French poets get at it pretty well. Villon, Corbiere, even Laforgue - they achieve this kind of "Everyman" quality - the poem stands on the exact borderline between folksong and art song - the writer gets lost in Anonymous. Or there's a fusion of the individual and Anonymous. This works on a lot of levels. Not to advertise too much but I wrote an essay that gets into this called "School of Anonymous" in the latest Nedge. I wouldn't call it caution - to write like Anonymous is not something for the cautious. More like a kind of negative capability.
- Henry Gould
>
>So -- I liked Jefferson's list --
>
>Jordan

↑ Index

162. Herb Levy
Re: Concentration
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Mike Boughn wrote:

> This is just not the kind of world in which Bob Creeley can ever get the Nobel prize. Maybe we should make up our own prize and award it to him.

I think the National Poetry Foundation did just that for Robert Duncan in 1984/5 after so little attention had been paid to Duncan's "Ground Work I". I think the cash award came from donations from poet/critic signers of the certificate.

I think this was discussed in the Duncan Sagetrieb issue. I don't have it at hand so I may have misremembered some details.

I agree, though, that prizes as an ongoing annual "event" are a cheap way to deal with culture. Or Culture.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

163. Joseph Lease
Re: reconstruction
Tue 8 Oct 1996

If the opposite of anonymity is identity (the textual kind if anyone wants to know) then we valorize both anonymity and identity when we experience them as oppositional and liberating. So particular writing procedures are probably context dependent in this sense. Syntax is as always a particularly generative area to investigate because more obviously than the easily metaphorized squishyness of sound (and what could be squishier than meaning) syntax is a braid or torque or juxtaposition that involves self and other in an active deployment: syntax is social.

Joseph

↑ Index

164. Joseph Lease
Re: reconstruction
Tue 8 Oct 1996

PS

Of course syntax is social also means that various manipulations (including but not limited to distortions) of syntax are social too. No one kind of syntactical procedure should be assigned the same social valence always and everywhere but trends are audible and worth differing over as we invent and reinvent.

I do not mean trends as in trendy but rather well if Shlovsky says thus and such about parataxis and Bernstein agrees that describes a trend as opposed to a closed system. Shared but not universal facts.

↑ Index

165. Joseph Lease
Re: reconstruction
Tue 8 Oct 1996

PPS

I know what I meant by a distortion of syntax but looking back over what I wrote a few minutes ago I wish I could retract that phrase: I don't mean to imply a norm from which distortions etc. but I do think that ordinary language in the sense of ordinary language philosophy allows for the establishing of language games which recognize distortions. The same could be said for realism (I mean realism the way Silliman, Watten, Hejinian do and the way that tradition can be said to start in Whitman, Dickinson, and Thoreau). Realism as a constructivist narrativity grounded in fact. Syntax one of the motions.

↑ Index

166. Jordan Davis
Re: reconstruction
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Joseph -- you're right that squishiness is context-dependent -- I'm thinking mainly of the squish-poets' tendency to make lugubrious every process they encounter, as if everything were a fen. That's probably incorrect grammar, but if syntax is social, is bad grammar the residuum of individuality that we have to preserve? Jordan

↑ Index

167. henry
Re: reconstruction
Tue 8 Oct 1996

To get back to anonymity: there's a perfect example of what I was talking about with regard to the French, in Dan Bouchard's new magazine, MASS AVE. It's called "Matrix Blues", by Giovanni Singleton. It's not a narrativity memo from a de-centered slave-subject of the po-squish zitgeist. It's all Anonymous & all Giovanni Singleton, simultaneously. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

168. Jordan Davis
homage to Ed Foster
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Henry,

Thanks for bringing up Dan Bouchard.

DAN BOUCHARD IS READING IN NEW YORK CITY!!!!!! WOW!!!!!!!
AT 7 PM ON THURSDAY THE 10TH!!!!!! AT POETRY (BLEEP)ING CITY!!!!
THE MAYOR WON'T BE THERE!!!!! HE'S ALREADY APOLOGIZED!!!!
5 UNION SQUARE WEST, 7TH FLOOR!!!!! READING WITH DAN IS DAVID MILLS!!!!
OH! MY! GOD!!!!!!!

Love,
Jordan

↑ Index

169. Poetics List
Call for Papers (fwd)
Tue 8 Oct 1996

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Tue, 08 Oct 1996 12:07:04 -0400
From: Kathleen Crown <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Call for Papers

Hello All: Here is the updated Call for Papers for POETRY AND THE PUBLIC SPHERE, to be held at Rutgers next April. The deadline has been extended to DECEMBER 1st. Please do not send email proposals; email inquiries may be sent to [redacted]. --Kathy Crown please post on appropriate lists:

call for papers

The Department of Literatures in English at Rutgers University, New Brunswick announces

Poetry and the Public Sphere: a conference on contemporary poetry, April 24-27, 1997

Scheduled to partcipate: Adrienne Rich, Robert Hass, Sonia Sanchez, Miguel Algarin, Poets from the Nuyorican Poets' Cafe, Charles Bernstein, Tricia Rose, Charles Altieri, Maria Damon, Alicia Ostriker, Cheryl Clarke, Michael McKeon, Elin Diamond, Abena Busia, and many others.

This interdisciplinary conference is open to the public and aims to provide new understandings of poetry's participation in the public sphere. The last two decades have witnessed a resurgence of interest in public poetry--readings, festivals, performances, films, television series, and poetry slams. In examining the way poetry affects and is affected by social context, we will consider a range of contemporary poetries in their public settings, including performance-oriented, community-based, socially engaged, and formally experimental work. Questions of audience and aesthetics will be central to our discussion of poetry's active role in building, defining, questioning, and motivating social and political communities. The conference will feature poetry readings and performances, keynote lectures, and panel presentations by a wide range of poets, scholars, and activists.

We welcome submissions from anyone with an interest in poetry. We are currently accepting:

Detailed two-page proposals for 15-minute papers, not limited to the topics below. (Feel free to suggest panel topics; however, we are not accepting group panel proposals at this time.)

Detailed proposals for roundtable discussions (no more than four people), to consist of five-minute remarks and a moderated discussion. You may provide participant names or make suggestions. Please provide names and brief profiles of chair and 3-4 panelists, plus a two-page proposal describing the topic, approach, and intended contribution of each discussant.

poetry and social movements
poetics of performance poetry
politics of form
poetry and public sphere theory
poetry as witness poetry and community activism
African American poetry
poetry slams ethnography and poetry
poetry and popular culture
global poetry
Latino/a poetry
poetry and identity politics
poetry and/as history
Native American poetry
gay/ lesbian poetry
spoken-word events
feminist poetry

poetry and AIDS
rap-meets-poetry
politics of publishing
Asian American poetry
contemporary poetry cultures

Send proposals by December 1 to Harriet Davidson, Associate Professor of English and Director of Women's Studies, P.O. Box 5054, Rutgers University, New Brunswick, NJ 08903-5054. More information will be available soon at our website (address to come); information about a pre-conference discussion forum online will also be available at that address.

--

↑ Index

170. Charles Smith
Awards
Tue 8 Oct 1996

In a message dated 96-10-08 12:11:38 EDT, you write:

<< mike b rites This is just not the kind of world in which Bob Creeley can ever get the Nobel prize. Maybe we should make up our own prize and award it to him.

now that is a truly sensible suggestion. like what the before columbus foundation did with the American Book Award and what Messerli's doing w/ the Gertrude Stein awards. all we need is a big chubby endowment.
md
>>

or like the National Poetry Award organized by the national Poetry Foundation (& others) in 1985 to recognize Robert Duncan's work.

cs

↑ Index

171. Peter Quartermain
(Sort of) end of silence
Tue 8 Oct 1996

I simply want to thank everyone for all those wonderful and really encouraging get-well messages and sympathy -- it's amazing, such messages really do help. And I am clearly, now, on the road to full recovery -- minor surgery turned into major life-threatening systemic infection, but massive i.v antibiotics for a week stemmed the tide. So I feel like a rather exhausted but successful Canute, and am slowly catching up on all my delinquencies. And again I send my heartfelt thanks to you all.

Peter

+ +

Peter Quartermain
128 East 23rd Avenue
Vancouver
B.C.
Canada V5V 1X2
Voice and fax: [redacted]

+ +

↑ Index

172. George Bowering
Re: (Sort of) end of silence
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Welcome back, Peter Quartermain!

Now how about making up for your downtime? Tell us the meaning of life.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

173. Peter Quartermain
Re: Dora Marsden
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Among others, Marsden published Williams, who in The Egoist for August 1917 published "The Great Sex Spiral: A Criticism of Miss Marsden's 'Lingual Psychology.'" This and related matters are thoroughly discussed in Bruce Clarke's really excellent book _Dora_Marsden_and_Early_Modernism_:_Gender, _Individualism_and_Science_. U Of Michigan Press, 1995.

Peter

At 08:42 AM 10/8/96 -0400, you wrote:
>> Can anyone tell me who "Dora Marsden" is? -- reference in Wms' "Spring and >> All", in the first paragraph of the prose section following "By the road to >> the contagious hospital..." ?
>>
>> Thanks in advance.
>>
>> bmarsh
>
>Dora Marsden was the editor of the Freewoman which became the New >Freewoman and then The Egoist around 1914. At that time she asked >Harriet Weaver to take over editorial responsibilities while Marsden >pursued her interest as a philosophical writer (while writing for the >magazine that went on to hire Pound as literary editor and to publish >work by Joyce, Eliot, HD, Aldington, Fletcher, de Gourmont, etc.).
>Marsden's books include The Definition of the Godhead, The Mystery of >Time, and The Philosophy of Time.
>
>If you can, you should check out the original issues of the magazines.
>They're fascinating. Pound, Joyce, and HD alongside articles on >vegetarianism and free love and Marsden's long philosophical essays on >time and the godhead.
>
>Mike
>[redacted]
>
>
+ + + +

174. Peter Quartermain
Re: (Sort of) end of silence
Tue 8 Oct 1996

Why, thanks, George.
The meaning of Life is the same as the meaning of Time.
Didn't you know?
Peter

At 06:12 PM 10/8/96 -0700, George Bowering wrote:
>Welcome back, Peter Quartermain!
>
>Now how about making up for your downtime? Tell us the meaning of life.
>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
> ,
>2499 West 37th Ave.,
>Vancouver, B.C.,
>Canada V6M 1P4
>
>fax: [redacted]
>e-mail: [redacted]
>
>
+ + + +

At 07:49 AM 10/8/96 -0500, you wrote:
>In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
>group writes:
>> Dear Tony--I'd love to see that nonstandard essay.
>>
>> all best, Susan (Schultz)
>
>yeah me too--md
>
>

↑ Index

176. Herb Levy
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Rod Smith wrote (regarding the best American Poetry 1996):

> I'll look at the book a bit more, hopefully it's more interesting than it appears.

I think Mark Twain said of Wagner "his music sounds better than it is."

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

177. Ron Silliman
The meaning of Time/Life
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Peter,

It's good to know that you will be with us for a few more decades. We're counting on it.

I do hope that the meaning of Life (& Time) is not the same as the meaning of Sports Illustrated.

Or even of M/E/A/N/I/N/G

All best,

Ron

Jeff,

In this world there are those of us who think that the experience of reading should be like weightlifting, an exercise that can be felt as such and which leaves us all the stronger for it. And then there are those (in the majority) who think it should be like watching television, transparent and "painless." Frost was for the latter, and that is why he was a "bad person."

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

178. Rachel Loden
Re: Szymborska/Heaney/Nobels
Wed 9 Oct 1996

I think Twain said "Wagner's music is better than it sounds." Which is, perhaps, an even defter put-down.

Rachel Loden

Herb Levy wrote:
>
> Rod Smith wrote (regarding the best American Poetry 1996):
>
> >I'll look at the book a bit more, hopefully it's more interesting than it > >>appears.
>
> I think Mark Twain said of Wagner "his music sounds better than it is."
>
> Herb Levy
> [redacted]

↑ Index

179. maria damon
Re: The meaning of Time/Life
Wed 9 Oct 1996

---

ron rites:
> Jeff,
>
> In this world there are those of us who think that the experience of > reading should be like weightlifting, an exercise that can be felt as > such and which leaves us all the stronger for it. And then there are > those (in the majority) who think it should be like watching > television, transparent and "painless." Frost was for the latter, and > that is why he was a "bad person."

>
> Ron Silliman

funny, i never thought of weightlifting as an analogue for the reading experience. wonder why not. and then some of us think that the experience of reading should be like having a conversation with a smart and or trusted friend or stranger: challenging, revealing, transformative. or maybe weightlifting w/ the friend as weight. now there's a promising potential for revelation, transformation, challenge.

↑ Index

180. maria damon
Re: Englishes/Latins
Wed 9 Oct 1996

---

1. if permission is asked and granted
2 if the name is not revealed,
i don't know why it wouldn't be.
md

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> Is that ethical??
>
> At 07:49 AM 10/8/96 -0500, you wrote:
> >In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics > > discussion
> >group writes:
> >> Dear Tony--I'd love to see that nonstandard essay.
> >>
> >> all best, Susan (Schultz)
> >
> >yeah me too--md
> >
> >

↑ Index

181. Steven Clay
The Book, Spiritual Instrument / The Word Made Flesh
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Granary Books announces two new publications:

1)-THE BOOK, SPIRITUAL INSTRUMENT edited by Jerome Rothenberg & David Guss.

The Book, Spiritual Instrument addresses the "ethnopoetics of the book." Originally published as New Wilderness Letter #11 in 1982 and now long out-of-print, this newly designed edition contains all of the original material along with a new preface by Jerome Rothenberg.

Contents include: "Le Livre, Instrument Spirituel" by Stéphane Mallarmé, translated and visually interpreted by Michael Gibbs; "The Book and the Desert/[Wilderness]" an interview with Edmond Jabès, translated by Jack Hirschman; "The Book as an Instrument of Performance" Becky Cohen's fold-out section of photographs of poets reading from their work; Alison Knowles & George Quasha on The Book of Bean; "A Book" by Dick Higgins; selections from the Popul Vuh with translation and commentary by Dennis Tedlock; plus works by Karl Young, David Meltzer, Tina Oldknow, J. Stephen Lansing, Eduardo Calderón, David Guss, Jed Rasula, Paul Eluard, Gershom Scholem and Herbert Blau.

The Book, Spiritual Instrument is a welcome and important contribution to discussions of poetics, book art and performance.

"Prefaced by Mallarmé's famous dictum that 'everything in the world exists in order to end up as a book,' this spirited collection demonstrates the reverse as well: everything in the book exists in order to end up in the world. . . In a series of exemplary essays on, and demonstrations of, what might be called the ethnopoetics of the book, books from a wide range of cultural traditions are portrayed as radical extenders of form rather than neutral vessels of content. The result is a vision of books as laboratories for the invention and performance of perceptual systems: new worlds carved out of the wilderness of human thought and language." -Charles Bernstein, Poet, Editor and David Gray Professor of Poetry and Poetics, SUNY-Buffalo.

Designed by Diane Bertotlo. Paperback, smythe sewn, 160 pages, illustrated throughout with black & white photographs. ISBN 1-887123-08-3 Price: $21.95 plus $6.00 shipping (domestic) / NY residents add appropriate sales tax

2)-THE WORD MADE FLESH by Johanna Drucker

Calling attention to the visual materiality of the text, this book attempts to halt linear reading, trapping the eye in a field of letters which make a complex object on the page. The writing refers continually to the visceral character of language, literalizing metaphors of tongue,breath, and flesh. The work both embodies and discusses language as a physical form, one whose properties cannot be ignored by arriving at a disembodied content.

"Unlike the avant-garde artist's book of the early century, Drucker's doesn't boast a single illustration, a single pictorial equivalent to the text. Rather, it is the alphabet itself that is made flesh, the letter being seen in all its visual potential, as if to say that, desensitized as we are by the endless billboard discourse around us, we have almost forgotten the astonishing power of the alphabet to create human meanings." -Marjorie Perloff, Radical Artifice

Printed offset in two colors, this is a facsimile of the original letterpress edition (now long out-of-print) 12 1/2" wide, 10 1/2" high. 30 pp. Handbound in boards and with a two-color letterpress dust jacket printed by the artist. ISBN 1-887123-09-1 $60 + $8 shipping (domestic)+ applicable tax for those in the state of NY.

TO ORDER contact Steve Clay at Granary Books via Email: [redacted]

a selection of other unusual books published by Granary may be seen at:
www.granarybooks.com

Granary Books
568 Broadway #403
New York, NY 10012
[redacted]

↑ Index

182. Susan Schultz
Re: Englishes/Latins
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Tony--you ought to ask the student first...yes.

↑ Index

183. Bill Luoma
noble
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Dodie wrote:

"As far as political poetry goes, San Francisco is reeking with bad political poetry. Nobody's giving any of it a Nobel Prize."

someone should give Jack Hirschman the noble just for those letters to Djuna Barnes in the new miragie. thanks. and how is wayne smith doing?

Bill

↑ Index

184. Gabrielle Welford
Re: (Sort of) end of silence
Wed 9 Oct 1996

On Tue, 8 Oct 1996, Peter Quartermain wrote:

> Why, thanks, George.
> The meaning of Life is the same as the meaning of Time.
> Didn't you know?
> Peter

Why, darn! I thought it was 42! gab

↑ Index

185. Gabrielle Welford
"Death in a Landslide" in New York this week (fwd)
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Anyone in the city seen this? gab.

---------- Forwarded message ---------- I thought I would pass on this message from Jay Martel, one of the writers of TV Nation and most recently, the writer of the play "Death in a Landslide" which is in New York this week.

Dear Friends,

I need your help in getting the word out as soon as possible about "Death in a Landslide," a new comedy. The show opened last weekend to fantastic response but the odds are that the play has two more weeks of life and then goes away forever. Given these dire circumstances, I want the largest number of people to see it as possible. Even if you're not in the New York area or are unable to make the show OR have already seen it, I would greatly appreciate your help in forwarding the following couple paragraphs to five e-mail buddies who might be able to come:

"Death in a Landlside" is a play about what happens when Death comes for Cuff Riley, the slickest political operator in Washington. In a bargain that's part "Faust," part "Frankenstein," Death spares Cuff in exchange for Death getting a shot at the presidency. In other words, Cuff Riley goes where Lee Atwater would have--if he could have. By far the strangest independent presidential candidate since Ross Perot, Death hits the campaign trail with a pro-gun, pro-capital punishment, pro-death-pro-life platform that charms conservatives, splinters liberals, and gives a whole new meaning to the concept of "scare tactics." Using campaign slogans like "Death: For a Change" and "Give us Liberty AND give us Death, " Cuff Riley uses every trick in his bag to elect a Force of Nature president and, of course, gets more than he bargained for.

The show stars Chuck Montgomery (Hal Hartley's "Amateur") and Joseph McKenna (Terry Gilliam's "Twelve Monkeys"), was directed by Kirk Jackson (Cucaracha's "Viva Las Vegas"), written by Jay Martel, and co-produced by Michael Moore and Kathleen Glynn ("T.V. Nation," "Roger and Me").

"Death in a Landslide" runs for only two more weeks, beginning at 8:00 p.m., Wednesday through Sunday, from now until October 20th at the Grove Street Playhouse (39 Grove Street in the Village, west of Bleecker and Seventh Ave.). Tickets are $12. For more information and reservations call [redacted].

Thanks, Jay

↑ Index

186. william marsh
Re: what's a good poem
Wed 9 Oct 1996

> I propose a new prize. The POETICS LIST MENTAL CALISTHENICS POET OF THE YEAR.

i.e., COOL-AESTHETICS POET OF THE YEAR?

↑ Index

187. Herb Levy
Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Joe Amato wrote:

> (1) re the nobels: any way we might speculate as to how the literature awards do/do not align with more empirical fields?... sure, we all know that lit. tends to be, on the surface of it, a more subjective category... or does it?... i mean, is there a common denominator at work in the nobels, one that presumably seeks out, say, the Good... regardless how political all the awards may be de facto, what i'm asking about here is whether and how a meta-category (say, the Good) is distributed across the award spectrum...

Taking your lead to look beyond the Nobel Prize for Literature, let's look at prizes within the arts in general, rather than to the Nobels in general. (I don't see The Good in revisiting territory previously covered in the lengthy discussions of the Sokol essay in Social Text, but maybe that's just me.)

Looking at any award system, I think you'll find the common denominator is not The Good, but rather The Opinion, a very different philosophical category. Especially when The Opinion comes from a committee. In this case, The Opinion of what's good usually has to do with the social dynamics of who's on the panel, who selected them, etc.

There are very few selection committees for prizes, grants, fellowships, etc. with a mandate to value innovation in the arts across the board. Cf. Appendix 7 of Jed Rasula's American Wax Museum for some poetically relevant details. It's not much better in other genres, in some it may be worse.

Bests

Herb

Herb Levy

[redacted]

↑ Index

188. Herb Levy
Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Abstracting the argument away from good and bad innovative poems to Good and Bad innovative poems doesn't address the same problem. Especially in the context of an article on expedience, rhetoric, accountability, & complicity with the Holocaust and concept-matrices like "ethics-morals-politics".

I think many (though not all) on the list would agree that there can be bad innovative poems that are not Evil. However, I expect few list members will be willing to go on record with their specific choices for this category. & that's the real problem with looking for a definition of a "bad innovative poem" on this list. Most people who have the chops to make the distinctions feel uncomfortable doing so in such a public forum. The field is too small for that kind of public infighting. & this list is even smaller, though more public.

Perhaps when a "mainstream" writer or critic says something like "but you experimental writers just support each others work, making little critical distinction among writers at the same career levels" or some such, the best response is to say "yes, it looks VERY familiar, doesn't it?"

Bests

Herb

Joe Amato wrote:

> *(2) this relates to jordan's question to me (loaded as hell!---but thanx jord, we need to be provoked so) about what makes for a bad langpoem (and will somebody please forgive me this shorthand)... i teach tech. writing, and as i just posted a list member backchannel, i tend to focus these days in my classes, as a sort of historical backdrop, on the distinction between* > good tech. writing that's designed (literally) for beneficial ends and good tech. writing that's not... that is, the latter writing might be proficient, expeditious, and so forth, but may be used in the service of BAD ethics, morals, politics... so mebbe, in fact, it's BAD (and there are surely places and people who would say so---which raises the issue of good and bad as these relate to culture and community)... in particular, my classes examine the national socialist rhetoric of wwii (we build on a remarkable essay that appeared some time ago in _college english_ (march 1992), steven katz's "the ethics of expediency: classical rhetoric, technology, and the holocaust")... in short: if i can take my tech. writers, and tech. writing in general, to task for not owning up to its complicity in a rhetorical bracketing of ethics-morals-politics (have a look at the stc ethical code) while promoting some technical-technologized "good," why then i suppose, i should hold poetry so accountable... and certainly with an understanding that poetry (whatever it is) doesn't work the same way, hence that poetic 'accountability' is not going to work the same way... and with the recognition that some poetries seem to be more easily held accountable (why is this?), which is not to say that they're less demanding necessarily...

>
> i'm posing questions here for which i have no easy answers... but of course the question of the good is not simply formal---and in any case, formal issues, as many would argue, do in fact lend themselves to matters of social un/desirability, esp. when viewed against various norms...
>
> joe

Herb Levy

[redacted]

↑ Index

189. Jordan Davis
chops and steaks (the atmosphere of jokes)
Wed 9 Oct 1996

> I think many (though not all) on the list would agree that there can be bad innovative poems that are not Evil. However, I expect few list members will be willing to go on record with their specific choices for this category. & that's the real problem with looking for a definition of a "bad innovative poem" on this list. Most people who have the chops to make the distinctions feel uncomfortable doing so in such a public forum. The field is too small for that kind of public in-fighting. & this list is even smaller, though more public.

Herb -- interesting that THIS paragraph would appear shortly after a cogent paragraph by you about Good v. Opinion, a case long since settled out of Court.

Re: having those chops and not using them -- very wondrous. I've heard of people who know medicine but don't like to practice -- _pro bono_ -- poetry reform,

Jordan

↑ Index

190. Jerry Rothenberg
(no subject)
Wed 9 Oct 1996

For any of you in the San Diego area, the following is a calendar of readings for this fall s New Writing Series. All readings, it should be noted, are free and open to the public, and (except for that on October 24th) all will take place at 4:30 p.m. in the Visual Arts Facility Performance Space. NEW WRITING SERIES SCHEDULE / FALL QUARTER 1996

DAVID MELTZER + Wednesday October 16
4:30 p.m. at Visual Arts Facility Performance Space

JAYNE CORTEZ + Wednesday October 23
4:30 p.m. at Visual Arts Facility Performance Space
YEHUDA AMICHAI + Thursday October 24
7:00 p.m. at The Cross Cultural Center (Lyman and Artists Lane)
BOB PERELMAN + Friday November 1
4:30 p.m. at Visual Arts Facility Performance Space

WILL ALEXANDER + Wednesday November 6
4:30 p.m. at Visual Arts Facility Performance Space

SUSAN HOWE + Wednesday November 13
4:30 p.m. at Visual Arts Facility Performance Space

MYUNG MI KIM + Wednesday November 20
4:30 p.m. at Visual Arts Facility Performance Space

↑ Index

191. MICKIE E. KENNEDY
Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
Wed 9 Oct 1996

I would like to go record as saying most poems are both bad and Evil, with the caveat that the remainders are unlikely to be both good and Good--just at a lower cost and found in a bin at your local bookstore.

↑ Index

192. Carnography
That's Blaxdhhhhhhxqtploitation!
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Re the erudite eds at American Book Review:

I don't know what's happening to the OCR software in Normal, Illinois, but my short-short review of Darius James's _That's Blaxploitation!_ got obscured by a stonehenge of em-dashes, double parentheses, bulgingly balanced sentences and improvisatory spellings. Though ABR's proofreaders are usually fastidious, I somehow got translated into what can only be described as Prig Latin: I read like some harumphing disembrained polyglot in a tome by Oliver Sachs! Indeterminists, take note: a good time can be read by (A=E5hhhll<)>. To all others, I say: Buy Darius James's book and the rest will make sense.

BTW: In the same issue of ABR, there is another review that I must recommend: "Legend and Language," Marjorie Perloff's illuminating look at the neglected (but resurrected) Mina Loy. And guest-editor Larry McCaffery is his usual selfless self, breathlessly promoting neglected writers like an Ezra Pound on meth. (McCaffery's an angel; I just wish there were more like him.)

Anyhow, back to work on an album with the Scottish band, Truth. I just laid out my own book, _Distorture_, for Black Ice Books, due in March, 1997: a labor for the anal, it's true, but I'm thrilled that the publishers gave me that kind of artistic control. Respect for authorial aesthetics? Nothing normal about that.

All the best,

Rob Hardin

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

193. Joe Amato
Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
Wed 9 Oct 1996

herb, all points well-taken... still, i'll press a bit and say that i think the question of good/Good bad/Bad is worth continued navigation in these parts (and i know neither of us means The Good), albeit i admit to being somewhat at a loss as to how to proceed... and in part for the reasons you mention about the nature of this public forum...

really, i hate to keep coming back to this issue, but if in fact it's the forum itself that's preventing such dialogue, why then there's the need to reflect on same... what is it about that complex [wink] of ethico-moral-political that's untouchable around here?...

i might make the argument (as i have on occasion) that certain attitudes about poetry or poetics are irresponsible when it comes to their institutional embodiment... now as a teacher, the institutional is relatively easy for me to access (in such terms, i mean)... but even poets and writers with no professional obligations or commitments to teaching must readily acknowledge that what they advocate as poets and writers have institutional effects that are more and less desirable... i regret, for example, those three nobel laureate poets (i think it was walcott, paz, and milosz) who together proclaimed their opposition to electronic media, an attitude that i find not only lamentable and compromising to more innovative work, but in fact aiding and abetting print hegemonies from which all three of these gents' work might be said to profit directly...

of course emedia is my hobbyhorse... and of course this question of the Good i raise is specifically one having to do with inter-poetic, if not inter-media, struggle (sorta)... but if you find yourself linking your effort as a poet or scholar or teacher with broader social concerns, why then the Good will of necessity be ramified across many other domains...

anyway, i'd like to hear more...

best,

joe

↑ Index

194. DS

Re: Englishes/Latins

Wed 9 Oct 1996

That was what i meant when i asked if it was ethical, thanks Tony.

> I think it would be difficult or obnoxious to expose the writer herself to view, as an object of linguistic curiosity. The questions raised by non-standard writings in supposedly standardised and standardising environments is the issue that I'm concerned with and my reason for citing the essay in the first place.
>
> best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

195. Michael Boughn
Re: Englishes/Latins
Wed 9 Oct 1996

> The questions raised by non-standard writings in supposedly standardised and standardising environments is the issue that I'm concerned with and my reason for citing the essay in the first place.
>
> best
>
> Tony Green,
> e-mail: [redacted]

Tony

Do you feel like elaborating what those questions are for you in relation to this particular essay? I'd be interested to hear.

Mike
[redacted]

↑ Index

196. Tony Green
Re: Englishes/Latins
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Sorry, I don't have the essay and I don't have a note of the name of the writer, and I would be extremely reluctant to post it anyway, as initially a private communication and in confidence.

If the student had been someone on this list and willing or able to discuss the essay herself in her own terms, ,on equal terms, maybe then.

I think it would be difficult or obnoxious to expose the writer herself to view, as an object of linguistic curiosity. The questions raised by non-standard writings in supposedly standardised and standardising environments is the issue that I'm concerned with and my reason for citing the essay in the first place.

best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

197. Matt Kirschenbaum

FYI: MLA Resolution (fwd)

Wed 9 Oct 1996

From root Wed Oct 9 16:44:12 1996
Message-Id: <[redacted]>
Date: Wed, 09 Oct 1996 16:37:22 -0400 (EDT)
Reply-To: [redacted]
Sender: [redacted]
Precedence: bulk
From: [redacted]
To: Graduate Student Caucus of the MLA <[redacted]>
Subject: MLA Resolution (fwd)
MIME-version: 1.0
Content-type: TEXT/PLAIN; charset=US-ASCII
Content-transfer-encoding: 7BIT
X-Sender: [redacted]
X-Listprocessor-Version: 7.2 -- ListProcessor by CREN

Dear e-gradders: The attached is a resolution regarding the exploitation of graduate students and other academic workers drafted by the MLA's Radical Caucus.

It is _not_ one of the resolutions drafted by the Graduate Student Caucus, although the concerns expressed overlap in many areas.

If you wish to indicate your support for the Radical Caucus resolution, you may do so by following the instructions contained in the post below.

Best, Marc

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 09 Oct 1996 11:59:42 -0700
From: Leo Parascondola <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: MLA Resolution

Marc -- I have included a separate posting of the Radical Caucus MLA Resolution. Are you in a position for forward this to E-GRAD or ANY OTHER discussion list that seems relevant? If so, would really appreciate it. I have taken the liberty of identifying you as contact person for Grad Student Caucus to Working Class Studies discussion group of CCCC. There are many grad students who are probably crossovers who will be interested in our issues inside MLA. Resolution follows.

Best, Leo

****

Resolution to 1996 MLA Delegate Assembly on Exploitation of Part-Time, Adjunct, Graduate Assistant, and other Campus Labor

(sponsored by members of the Steering Committee of the Radical Caucus of the MLA)

CURRENT MLA MEMBERS ONLY will want to print, sign, and fax the resolution below; others will want to take note. Deadline for submission to MLA office is Oct. 15, 1996. SIGNED COPIES SHOULD BE FAXED IMMEDIATELY to either:

[redacted] or [redacted]

Please phone the MLA, [redacted], to verify that the fax has indeed been received. Please fax your signed copies in immediately! The absolute deadline is Oct.15 (one week from now).

Please do not email your hyperspace "signatures" to the MLA. They WILL NOT ACCEPT any such signatures. Resolution begins below.

WHEREAS global movements of capital, coupled with rampant corporate greed and shrinking tax expenditures on the public good, have resulted in unprecedented levels of unemployment and underemployment among all sectors of the world's workforce, an increasing polarization of skilled and unskilled workers, and corporate downsizing; and

WHEREAS the consequences of this trend has been, from the point of view of capital, a decreased need for college- and university-trained workers in general and, in particular, a decreased need for the graduates of nonelite and public colleges and universities; and

WHEREAS the impact of this trend in U. S. higher education has been budget cuts, elimination of jobs and in some cases of entire departments, speed-up, increasing use of part-time and adjunct faculty, greater exploitation of graduate student labor, and erosion of tenure; and

WHEREAS this trend reflects the increasing polarization of the "haves" and the "have-nots" and reveals the inherent antagonism between the interests of capital and the educational needs of the great majority of the working class (which includes most of the so-called "middle class"); and

WHEREAS those who work and teach on campuses should not gain any improvement in their working conditions off the backs of graduate and undergraduate students in the form of tuition and fee hikes, which have been astronomical over the past two decades; and

WHEREAS there is an urgent necessity for an activist movement on campuses that unites tenured and untenured professors, adjunct and part-time faculty, graduate students, undergraduate students, and other campus workers;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the MLA advocate that all college and university-level teaching positions other than those of graduate students be full-time, with full benefits, at a living wage, and carrying reasonable expectations of job security, while graduate students and teaching assistants should receive a living wage and full benefits; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the MLA support unionization efforts among campus workers at all levels; oppose reprisals on those who engage in unionization activity; and oppose any and all attacks on the tenure system; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the MLA censure institutions not complying with these principles and take appropriate punitive measures, such as banning job advertisements in the MLA JOB LIST and suspending institutional membership in the ADE and/or ADFL.

NAME SIGNATURE INST. AFFILIATION

Please: FAX your signature immediately to one of these two MLA fax numbers:

[redacted], or [redacted].

Please either FAX or mail a copy to:

Grover Furr
Department of English
Montclair State University
Upper Montclair NJ 07043

> FAX: [redacted]
>
> Please circulate widely and continuously. The deadline for the first 10 signatures is October 15. Obviously we would like to get as many signatures as possible, right up to the MLA Convention itself.

↑ Index

198. Tony Green
Re: Englishes/Latins
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Yes, Michael Boughn, I cd elaborate a little.
But I am in a state of some confusion over what is happening.

I've just come from a small group tutorial "on" Watteau. The little group of three older women arrive together (Anglo-Scottish, Irish) one young Chinese woman, who cannot be persuaded to say anything, one exceedingly shy young man and one tall blond young woman, Anglo-Scottish, whatever, and for the first time this whole semester which is now finishing, four young women, Polynesian and quite various in appearance.

The assumptions of a teacher of European art history as to the audience's assumptions and what it takes for granted culturally are no longer operative in this situation. Chinoiserie is something to pause over --, so is the appearance of persons of colour in paintings by Watteau or Rubens, though that has not been an issue yet -- but the styles of dress and makeup of Watteau's imaginary figures of courting couples is emphatic about the whiteness of the skin of the young women's bosoms.

How does that sound and look to the Polynesian women?

As for their writing, what is expected of them? What do they expect of themselves? I am looking for possibilities of encouraging them to ask their own questions about the artworks they are looking at and in the language they have available to them. Is this naive of me, is this altogether going in the wrong direction? Should I be encouraging them to appear the same as all the other students, as if cultural difference did not enter into the equation? Consequently "grading papers" becomes a more complicated task than usual, when it is clear that cultural differences are making themselves felt in the language.

I have met this before with one or two students in a class, but now about a third of my second year class is not European in its cultural expectations and I feel the need to adjust what I do, but I am unsure how to do it.

I have a strong suspicion that it requires the university as a whole, or at least the humanities teachers to take action as a group, and that anything I do to encourage non-standard writing may get the students concerned into deep trouble with other teachers.

best

4 is ss, hPakehachinese

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

199. Tony Green
Re: Creeley Festival
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Thanks for the invitation to Creeley Fest -- and for one received in the mail yesterday, Charles,-- Judi Stout and Tony Green will be there in thought or in a manner of speaking. All the best to Buffalos and to Bob -- and to Pen..

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

200. Nada Gordon
weightlifting
Wed 9 Oct 1996

Ron (and all):

Reading should be like weightlifting because it makes you a stronger person??!??!

So a complex text = Popeye's spinach, lo how the muscle bulges. Ketjak as Charles Atlas course.

Ugh.

I wouldn't say I'm one of that select group of people who believes so, no. But I recently read a book about the emotional lives of animals and learned the word "funktionslust" -- the enjoyment of one's capabilities, i.e. the pleasure a cat takes in climbing trees or a monkey in swinging from branch to branch. Maybe I like to read tough things because I can, and that pleasure is its own reward, not the great macho overweaning ectomorphic forehead brain muscle that will develop because I made the exertion. And if it does, I'll just have to wear a scarf or something.

Although I do like spinach, I don't eat it primarily because it's good for me.

And speaking of lust -- I know the battery fell out of the dildo thread long ago, but I found this bit in Philip Whalen's On Bear's Head last night. NB this is not a hoax, look it up for yourselves, p. 376:

> "IN MY LIVINGROOM!
> Sitting there imagining "Divine Bodies" in My Livingroom!
> Maybe you think I didn't tell him! Without a stitch on, & that > Electric Vibrator of mine that the DOCTOR told me to use for my > Neck and Shoulder! Maybe you think I wasn't nearly floored! I > want to tell you . . ."

nada

↑ Index

201. Robert Drake
afterwords website [forward]
Wed 9 Oct 1996

========== Begin forwarded message ==========

Announcing the all new...

afterwords literature website

http://www.io.org/~dalopes/after/

Now more powerful, faster and easier to use.

Search the entire small press catalogue to find what you're looking for or to generate a custom list of items. The search tool will return matches to any part of the listing, including author, title, publisher, type, and description. So you can generate your own list for bill bissett, Ganglia Press, sound poetry... anything you like.

The previous lists (work by and related to Daniel f Bradley, Greg Evason, jwcurry, damian lopes, bpNichol and David UU) have been condensed into a form that is faster to browse. All the details remain quickly assessible, but you'll spend your time browsing rather than waiting for documents to load. A frame-ready browser, like Netscape 2 or higher, is recommended.

afterwords literature is a retailer of small press literature.

Box 657 Station P Toronto Canada M5S 2Y4
http://www.io.org/~dalopes/

========== End forwarded message ==========

↑ Index

202. Mark Roberts

AWOL: New magazine releases (forwarded)

Thu 10 Oct 1996

>Date: Thu, 10 Oct 1996 12:41:31 +1000
>To: [redacted]
>From: [redacted] (awol)
>Subject: AWOL: New magazine releases
>
>New Magazine Releases
>
>It can be difficult keeping up with the latest issue of your favourite >magazine. Now you can order them through AWOL. Decide which magazines you >wish to order and and then email us with your order. We will invoice you by >email, fax or snail mail mail your payment and we'll mail you yourmagazines >(we hope to allow credit card ordering soon).
>
>
>
>Tinfish 3
>
>Tinfish 3 is now available through AWOL distribution. Tinfish is a journal >of experimental >poetry with an emphasis on work from the Pacific region. Issue 3 contains >work by >Contributors: Nathan Kageyama, red flea, Malia Pangilinan, Kapulani, Susan
>M. Schultz, Rob
>Wilson, John Kinsella, Carolyn Lei-lanilau, Adam Aitken, Tony Quagliano, >Pam Brown, Liz
>Waldner, Janet Bowdan, Range poets, Graham Foust, Connie Deanovic, Faye >Kicknosway,
>MTC Cronin, John Olson, Che Quian-zi, Joe Balaz, Mark Peters, Stephanie >Strickland,
>Duoduo, Bret Bajema, Ron Silliman and Mark Wallace.

>
>RRP $5.00 (ISSN 1087-2132)
>
>
>
>Antithesis Vol 8. No 1
>
>Antithesis is a postgraduate journal of interdisciplinary studies. Articles >in in this issue include
>'Inoculating the Internet: Memetic Metaphors & the Computer-mediated >Community' by Sean
>Smith, 'Wilde at Heart: Disease & the Wildean Body' by Benjamin Flood, 'Located >Cosmopolitans: Grounding the Rhetoric of Autonomy' by Tania Lewis, 'The >Erotic Impact:
>Terminal Velocities in Cyberspace (or how to survive a virtual crash) by >Tom Pettman,
>'Cancerous Bodies & Apartheid in JM Coetzee's Age of Iron' by Fiona Probyn,
>'In the >Footsteps of the Flaneur: Modernism & Thomas Pynchon's V' by Brain Morris &
>'The Idot in >the Mirror: The Rhetorics of Jacques Lacan' by Justin Clemes. Poetry by >Adam King, Lizz
>Murphy, Jane Sloan, Terry Callahan, Catherine Magree & Justine Lloyd.
>
>$10.00 (ISSN 1030-3839)
>
>
>
>Overland 144
>
>Overland 144 is a special Black Writing edition featuring work by Warrigal
>Anderson, Samuel
>Wagan Watson, Fabienne Bayet, Mudrooroo, Pat Mamajun Torress & Lisa Bellar.
>In addition >there is work by Kevin Brophy, Ben Goldsmith, Geoff Page, Denis Kevans, >Jill Jones, PI0,
>plus more poetry, reviews, fiction & articles.
>
>$8.00 (ISSN 0030-7416)

>
>
>
>Lexicon 1
>
>Lexicon is a new literary magazine published from Brisbane. It aims to >highlight work by new & >unplished writers of all genres. The first issue is an impressive debut, >well produced and >containing some interesting writing. It is also perhaps the only Australian >literary magazine to >contain a cross word!
>
>$4.95 (no issn)
>
>
>
>For order under $20 please add $1.50 postage. All prices are in Australian >dollars. Please contact us for overseas prices (Overseas orders for Tinfish should be directed to [redacted]). >You can also order through >the Virtual Bookshop section of our website. These titles are also >distributed by AWOL so if you want to order them through your local >bookshop tell them to contact us.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>AWOL
>Australian Writing On Line
>[redacted]
>http://www.ozemail.com.au/~awol
>PO Box 333 Concord NSW 2137 Australia
>Phone 61 2 7475667, Mobile 015063970
>Fax 61 2 7472802
>
>
>

>
Mark Roberts
Student Systems Project Officer
& User Representative SIS Team.
Information Systems
University of Sydney NSW 2006 Australia
Ph. (02) 93517710
Mobile 015063970
Fax (02) 93517711

↑ Index

203. Ron Silliman
The Weight
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Nada Gordon,

How's Japan??

When I compared reading to weightlifting it was with the presumption that weightlifting is one of the most sublime pleasures one can have in this world. Try it. You'll see. There is hardly anything that can compare to the afterburn of a good leg press.

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

204. Douglas Barbour
Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Oct 1996 to 8 Oct 1996
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Not sure what thread I'm getting into here, but as someone who has always had some trouble understanding why heaney was taken so seriously, who found his work unatisfying on various levels although I understood somewhat why he was taken up as he was, I do want to pass on a small story that partly ties in to Tony Green's talk about various 'englishes.' A colleague in Post-Colonial studies also plays in a small group that does mostly Irish (Celtic) folk music around Edmonton in various bars where the irish in town gather. Heaney's brother lives here so he visits upon occasion. The last time he was here, the announcer told the audience he was in the place & everyone gave him a standing ovation, after he was introduced as a poet who spoke for them all. So: Eavan Boland probably has many valid points against such rhetoric as his, but.... Further unto this, my friend said that the Irish woman in the group, who is not an "English" type, bu which he meant she did not study literature, was trying to explain to him the various 'codes' operative whenever a catholic & protestant met, finally threw up her hands & said, "I cant explain, but listen," picked a copy of heaney's poems out of her backpack, & read him a poem in which heaney explored exactly that problem. His point, as he knows I'm not a fan, was that for his community, heaney does have something important to say. I cannot disagree, even if I still find most of the poetry only 'interesting,' not exciting to me. The first of these could justbe a reaction to 'fame,' but the second suggests that in fact heaney does speak to & for a particular community.

This ongoing discussion has been fun to follow.

Meanwhile, I too welcome Peter back, even though he was gone before I joined. It's been a long time since we talked Peter, but I'm glad we still might be able to the next time I'm in Vancouver...

All the best

Doug

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
H: [redacted]

'The universe opens. I close.
And open, just to surprise you.'
- Phyllis Webb

↑ Index

205. maria damon
Re: The Weight
Thu 10 Oct 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion
group writes:
> Nada Gordon,
>
> How's Japan??
>
> When I compared reading to weightlifting it was with the presumption > that weightlifting is one of the most sublime pleasures one can have in > this world. Try it. You'll see. There is hardly anything that can > compare to the afterburn of a good leg press.

>
> Ron Silliman

dear ron, how's pennsylvania? when i compared reading to good conversation it was with the presumption that good conversation is one of the most sublime pleasures one can have in this world. try it. you'll see. there is hardly anything that can compare to the afterglow of a good yak w/ a pal. maria damon

↑ Index

206. Judy Roitman
Ron Johnson
Thu 10 Oct 1996

A friend asked me to ask about Ron Johnson -- he heard that Johnson died but knows little more.

If you know any more, please respond to me backchannel; I'm going out of town and will be off the listserve.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Glad to have Math, University of Kansas | these copies of things
Lawrence, KS 66045 | after a while." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996

↑ Index

207. Rachel Loden
Re: weightlifting
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Nada Gordon writes:

> And speaking of lust -- I know the battery fell out of the dildo thread long ago, but I found this bit in Philip Whalen's On Bear's Head last night. NB this is not a hoax, look it up for yourselves, p. 376:
>
> "IN MY LIVINGROOM!
> Sitting there imagining "Divine Bodies" in My Livingroom!
> Maybe you think I didn't tell him! Without a stitch on, & that > Electric Vibrator of mine that the DOCTOR told me to use for my > Neck and Shoulder! Maybe you think I wasn't nearly floored! I > want to tell you . . ."

Well, Nada, since we're sharing distressful experiences, I was on an innocent jaunt to http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/demo.html

when I stumbled on the L-po dildo, to wit:

My thumb instead of a dildo: serbo-martian exile pens essay in plain style.

Dear Loss: is there to be no sanctuary even at the EPC?

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

208. Pritchett,Pat
Re: That's Blaxdhhhhhhxqtploitation!
Thu 10 Oct 1996

ABR is going through a "transition" right now owing to Romayne Rubinas' vacating the job she held for so long (and did so well, in my opinion). The new editor is Paula Goodnight and when I talked to her a month ago she sounded as though she'd been thrown to the lions. Too bad about your piece. Things should settle down soon (I hope).

Patrick Pritchett

From: Carnography
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: That's Blaxdhhhhhhxqtploitation!
Date: Wednesday, October 09, 1996 3:23PM

Re the erudite eds at American Book Review:

I don't know what's happening to the OCR software in Normal, Illinois, but my short-short review of Darius James's _That's Blaxploitation!_ got obscured by a stonehenge of em-dashes, double parentheses, bulgingly balanced sentences and improvisatory spellings. Though ABR's proofreaders are usually fastidious, I somehow got translated into what can only be described as Prig Latin: I read like some harumphing disembrained polyglot in a tome by Oliver Sachs! Indeterminists, take note: a good time can be read by (Aåhhhll<)>. To all others, I say: Buy Darius James's book and the rest will make sense.

BTW: In the same issue of ABR, there is another review that I must recommend: "Legend and Language," Marjorie Perloff's illuminating look at the neglected (but resurrected) Mina Loy. And guest-editor Larry McCaffery is his usual selfless self, breathlessly promoting neglected writers like an Ezra Pound on meth. (McCaffery's an angel; I just wish there were more like him.)

Anyhow, back to work on an album with the Scottish band, Truth. I just laid out my own book, _Distorture_, for Black Ice Books, due in March, 1997: a labor for the anal, it's true, but I'm thrilled that the publishers gave me that kind of artistic control. Respect for authorial aesthetics? Nothing normal about that.

All the best,

Rob Hardin

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

209. Wendy Battin
Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Oct 1996 to 8 Oct 1996
Thu 10 Oct 1996

On Thu, 10 Oct 1996, Douglas Barbour wrote:
> Irish woman in the group, who is not an "English" type, bu which he meant
> she did not study literature, was trying to explain to him the various
> 'codes' operative whenever a catholic & protestant met, finally threw up > her hands & said, "I cant explain, but listen," picked a copy of heaney's > poems out of her backpack, & read him a poem in which heaney explored

Doug,
Do you happen to know which poem? (Sure there are many, but am curious to know which she chose.)

Wendy

Wendy Battin [redacted]
(home) http://camel.conncoll.edu/ccother/wjbat/
(CAPA) http://shain.lib.conncoll.edu/CAPA/capa.html

↑ Index

210. Gary Roberts
watteau
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Tony,

One of the things that you all could consider in Watteau's paintings is the role of costumes, ceremony, and interaction rituals. To use a crit theory buzz word, his painting are very much about the "performative" aspects of self-presentation. Trying as a group to derive a rhetoric and vocabulary of gestures and signs in his paintings seems like a useful exercise, as long as you don't have a predetermined list that you are trying to get the group to guess. How are emotional states, for example, alluded to or signified by the surface features of the human figures and their settings/backgrounds? How outlandish are they from your perspectives? Is racial whiteness a staged property/a stage prop in his work? It seems that the familiar conflation of make-up (for clowns and women, say) and oil paint for pictures is also at play here. How could non-European readers of Watteau's paitings (or even the something like the photos of Cindy Sherman) relate to or criticize the cultural work of masking and unmasking?

As for writing, it seems to me that you might need to determine if you and the rest of the group accept any analogies between the kind of dynamic social self-presentation in the images and self-presentation in writing framed by institutional settings.

Gary R.

↑ Index

211. Pierre Joris
[Fwd: Electronic Music Foundation Update]
Thu 10 Oct 1996

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

More news from the electronic music foundation, for those on the list innerested in new & experimental musics -- Pierre

Date: Thu, 10 Oct 1996 10:24:27 -0500
To: [redacted]
From: [redacted] (Electronic Music Foundation)
Subject: Electronic Music Foundation Update

ELECTRONIC MUSIC FOUNDATION
========== October 10, 1996
ACCESS TO MATERIALS

This update contains summary information about EMF's website and tells you how you can receive detailed information by email if you prefer.

We are sending this update to you either because you're already on our list or because we believe you'll be interested in this information. These updates will be sent approximately every month. If you would rather not receive future updates, simply let us know.

If this has been forwarded to you by someone else and you would like to receive these notices directly, just send an email message to [redacted] and say something like "Put me on your list" and we'll put you on our list.

Contents:

1. CDeMUSIC is growing fast
2. The rest of the website
3. Looking for classroom materials?
4. Receiving information by email
5. Partner and sponsor news
6. A few editorial words about our email communications
7. Last call for Charter Subscribers

==========

1. CDeMUSIC is growing fast

CDeMUSIC is fast becoming a worldwide comprehensive and coherent source for compact discs of non-commercial, experimental, and electronic music. Our web site lists CDs by composer's name as well as in curated catalogs and selected organization and company catalogs.

We're now in process of creating a composer's page for every composer, with links from an alphabetical list. These pages will eventually include all materials related to that composer's available work. We're starting with Charter Subscribers and important pioneers in the field (often the same people). To get an idea of where this is going, click on David Tudor or Alvin Lucier at http://www.emf.org/cde_gencat.html

The curated catalogs currently are 'Pioneers of Electronic Music', 'John Cage and the New York School', 'A Few Stitches from The Knitting Factory', 'Microtonality', and 'Words and Music'. And several additional catalogs are in progress. The selected company and organization catalogs currently include the EMF label, the CDCM computer music series, Wergo's Computer Music Currents series, the INA/GRM label (Groupe de Recherches Musicales), North/South Recordings, SEAMUS, and Stockhausen Verlag. This list also will grow dramatically during the next month. The catalogs can be browsed at http://www.emf.org/cde_catalogs.html

Further, a group of 'spotlight' CDs, which will change every ten days or so, will focus on particular composers and catalogs. The current spotlight is on the pioneers and includes 'The Historical CD of Digital Sound Synthesis', Laurie Spiegel's 'Unseen Worlds', and David Tudor's 'Neural Networks'. Take a look at

http://www.emf.org/cde_frontdoor.html

We project growth not only in numbers of CDs, but also in the scope of the collection. In the next month or so, expect to see increasing numbers of CDs of improvised music and the acoustic avant garde.

==========

2. The rest of the website

The EMF Worldwide Calendar is updated on a weekly basis and now includes special features and notices (from IRCAM, CNMAT, The British Harry Partch Society, to name a few) as well as events listings. Have a look at

http://www.emf.org/cal_frontdoor.html

Note the pictorial features on David Tudor's and Sophia Ogielska's 'Toneburst' at Wesleyan University, 'Lucier @ 65' (concert coming up in New York), the 1996 ICMC in Hong Kong in August, and Tod Machover's 'Brain Opera' as seen in New York in July.

Current offerings in The EMF Store include Iannis Xenakis' 'Formalized Music', Reynold Weidenaar's 'Magic Music From the Telharmonium', Trevor Wishart's 'Audible Design', and Luigi Russolo's 'The Art of Noises'. Take a look at

http://www.emf.org/store_frontdoor.html

We're also offering 'M', Intelligent Music's interactive composing program, written by David Zicarelli in 1986. This is a historically important program that everyone should experience. It takes an hour or two to learn and it contains a wealth of musical wisdom. The main screen is shown at http://www.emf.org/store_m.html

If you're interested in the web, keep checking 'Sites, Sights, and Sounds' for continuing updates on exceptionally interesting places to visit, a list of internet electronic music resources, and an electronic music internet directory which is fast becoming comprehensive.

==========

3. Looking for classroom materials?

Note that there exists a videotape called 'Mastering the Theremin' in which Lydia Kavina, virtuoso and Leon Theremin's cousin, shows how the theremin is played. Read the description at http://www.emf.org/store_videotheremin.html

and you'll note that the format of the videotape is a series of lessons moderated by Robert Moog.

This is not, however, only for those who want to learn how to play the theremin. This is for any and all teachers lecturing in electronic music. It shows students how this remarkable instrument is played. And btw, don't forget to listen to the classic compact disc of Clara Rockmore playing the theremin in concert. It leads the listing in the pioneers catalog at http://www.emf.org/cdcat_pioneers.html

==========

4. Receiving information by email

If you don't have easy access to the web and you'd like to receive any catalogs, product notices, or other information as email, just send an email message to [redacted] and tell us what you'd like. We'll do our best to comply.

==========

5. Partner and sponsor news

Robert Moog, who normally presides at Big Briar, Inc. where he designs theremins according to Leon Theremin's principles, will be speaking at the Theremin Center in Moscow on October 14 and 15, and then making presentations on October 17, 18 and 19 at Musikmassen, an electronic music festival in Goteborg, Sweden.

Carla Scaletti and Kurt Hebel, inventors of the Kyma System at Symbolic Sound, will be demonstrating the latest Kyma upgrades in booth 1406 at the AES show, November 8-11, in Los Angeles.

==========

6. A few editorial words about our email communications

Issues regarding the emailing of this information have occasionally been raised. And since we agree with those who hold that crowding cyberspace with ugly commerce is undesirable behavior, we'd like to clarify our position.

EMF's mission is the dissemination of information and materials about the history and current practice of electronic music. Dissemination of information means giving away information. Dissemination of materials means selling materials. We do both. Our sales, however, are of noncommercial items not easily found elsewhere. Our sales are not to be confused with a large-scale commercially motivated operation and our email notices should not be comfused with a commercial junk-mail infringement of Internet ethics.

We enlarge our email list partly by requests directly from individuals who want to receive it, partly by recommendations from others. So if you're surprised to receive this mailing, well, check it out and simply decide if you'd like to continue to receive mailings. If not, just let us know.

==========

7. Last call for Charter Subscribers

A Charter Subscriber is someone who has chipped in during our first two years of existence to help us establish our operations. In exchange for their support, we offer lifelong professional and consumer benefits, including preferential access to all of our programs. Note our distinguished list of current Charter Subscribers at

http://www.emf.org/emf_csubs.html

Note also that our startup period will end this month. If you're interested in becoming a Charter Subscriber, please act fast. If you're interested in knowing more, look at http://www.emf.org/emf_invitation.html

or ask us about it by email.

==========
CDeMUSIC is a trademark of Electronic Music Foundation, Inc.

==========
Electronic Music Foundation
116 N. Lake Ave.
Albany, NY 12206
USA

http://www.emf.org

[redacted] voice
[redacted] fax
[redacted]

----------284051C549E6--

↑ Index

212. Pierre Joris
Re: Ron Johnson
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Judy,

The same rumor came my way in a letter from ken irby a few weeks back -- but have not been able to confirm (or definitely deny) the rumor, not even via our numero uno obit-man, the owner of this here list. meanwhile I will go on believing that news of RJ's death has been much exagerated. -- Pierr

↑ Index

213. Bill Luoma
chat net
Thu 10 Oct 1996

jordan, dodie, i don't know what i want from this list. perhaps part of the dull problem is that we have high expectations. & also it's as difficult to say anything interesting about poetry as it is to write a good poem. also we are afraid of saying anything interesting because so many people are listening so we take the form of poetics to be marketing press release. & it's not just here. i've been thinking that all poetics is just marketing. it's not necessarily wrong or possible to escape from this, but it's often dull if not acknowledged & tweeked. i thought kevin's invite to his play was fabulous. i guess i like the announcements the best because they're not subtle.

also evident of high expectations are what we call the back channel. i've never liked the meaning commonly associated with this phrase because i think this is the back channel here. i mean what we call the back channel is the real channel.

Bill

↑ Index

214. Ward Tietz
Re: The Weight
Thu 10 Oct 1996

I've written a few heavy words in my time. The heaviest so far is the word "FOLKS" which was made out of bricks as part of a piece for the Convergence II festival in Providence, RI in 1989. It weighed 5 tons. After the festival someone in the parks department made a patio out of it.

I usually write words in the 100 to 200 pound range. They're far more commonplace, but they're easier to lift.

Ward Tietz

↑ Index

215. Stephen Cope
Re: Ron Johnson
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Judy Roitman asks:

A friend asked me to ask about Ron Johnson -- he heard that Johnson died but knows little more.

If you know any more, please respond to me backchannel; I'm going out of town and will be off the listserve.

***

If anyone knows more please post to the list as well. I'd like to know more about this, as Johnson's a poet I've only very recently had occasion to read...

Thanks,

Stephen Cope

↑ Index

216. George Bowering
Re: (Sort of) end of silence
Thu 10 Oct 1996

> Why, thanks, George.
> The meaning of Life is the same as the meaning of Time.
> Didn't you know?
> Peter

I knew! I did know!

I just forgot, just forgot!

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

217. Joel Felix
Re: Ron Johnson
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Dear List--uh, Peter O'Leary has recieved a letter from the (kicking) Ron Johnson w/in the last week...so unless one of the fabled plains lightning balls has taken him in the last few days i think it's safe to assume he's alive. More interesting is how this rumor may have started, maybe owing to his dropping out of the SF area to Topeka, Kansas. Ron would love to hear what anyone w/in earshot of this list may have to say abt the complete ARK on Living Batch press. His address: Ron Johnson 3901 Drury Lane Topeka, KA 60604

Joel Felix

Stephen Cope wrote:
>If anyone knows more please post to the list as well.

↑ Index

218. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Ron Johnson
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Thanks for the info Joel. That's very good news. I love the new (&complete) ARK and will drop RJ a note when I've finished it to say so. (But really now, Drury Lane? Is this Book of the Green Man Redux or what?)

Patrick Pritchett

From: Joel Felix
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Re: Ron Johnson
Date: Thursday, October 10, 1996 4:13PM

Dear List--uh, Peter O'Leary has recieved a letter from the (kicking) Ron Johnson w/in the last week...so unless one of the fabled plains lightning balls has taken him in the last few days i think it's safe to assume he's alive. More interesting is how this rumor may have started, maybe owing to his dropping out of the SF area to Topeka, Kansas. Ron would love to hear what anyone w/in earshot of this list may have to say abt the complete ARK on Living Batch press. His address: Ron Johnson 3901 Drury Lane Topeka, KA 60604

Joel Felix

Stephen Cope wrote:
>If anyone knows more please post to the list as well.

↑ Index

219. Brian McHale
Re: Ron Johnson
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Wait, wait. Now that we know Johnson is still with us, could someone please supply fuller data on publication of the Complete Ark. Address for Living Batch Press, please? E-mail, even? Brian

↑ Index

220. Gwyn McVay
Re: Ron Johnson/rumors
Thu 10 Oct 1996

---

strange rumors about the mainstreamers too--we got a call at the office today asking us if Gjertrud Schnackenberg had died--is somebody trying to quash poetry by spreading disinformation?

Gwyn

↑ Index

221. Tony Green
Re: watteau
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Gary Roberts, thanks for your v interesting comments on possible places for interaction in the paintings and then in the writing and also I suppose in the role playing in the classroom. best

Tony Green,
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

222. Marisa Januzzi
Re: Ron Johnson/Dora Marsden
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Hello list

Two fast notes in total haste (my whole life is total haste these days!) to say --- THANK YOU for resurrecting Ron Johnson; been meaning to send fan mail myself and thought, for a minute there, I'd lost my chance.

ARK and Living Batch books (including his Southwest Cooking book) are distributed through Univ. of New Mexico Press-- I think it was Charles Alexander who sent this post via the list to me, when I was trying to get a hold of ARK. Any good local bookstore, in other words, shld be able to get it for you. Heck I even shamed the local B&N into carrying it & placing a copy in the window. Backchannel me for good sources of o.p. Johnson stuff.

As for Marsden, I'm surprised no one's trotted out my favorite anecdote about her-- how she waited all night on the roof of Parliament, for the right moment to call down through the circular opening in the dome and heckle (I think) Winston Churchill about suffrage: "What about the women, Mr. Churchill?" They were all over her like the bomb squad on luggage.

It's in the biography.

ciao-- Marisa

> Wait, wait. Now that we know Johnson is still with us, could someone please supply fuller data on publication of the Complete Ark. Address for Living Batch Press, please? E-mail, even?
> Brian

↑ Index

223. maria damon
Jay and Kay deFeo
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Hey there, dbkk, are we going to get a report on Kevin's play?
breathless,
maria d

↑ Index

224. Rachel Loden
assorted indignities
Thu 10 Oct 1996

Rob Hardin wrote (in part):
>
> Re the erudite eds at American Book Review:
>
> I don't know what's happening to the OCR software in > Normal, Illinois, but my short-short review of Darius James's > _That's Blaxploitation!_ got obscured by a stonehenge > of em-dashes, double parentheses, bulgingly balanced sentences > and improvisatory spellings...

Recently received ten contrib copies (now buried in the back yard) of a mag that shall remain nameless. A prose piece was printed as a poem, complete with twenty gut-wrenchingly bad line breaks and various spelling riffs. Just sign me--

Rachel, prisoner of poesy

↑ Index

225. Stephen Cope
Re: Ron Johnson
Fri 11 Oct 1996

As regards Johnson: I believe it was Chicago Review that recently did an issue dedicated to him. I haven't seen it myself, but am of mind that it had essays as well as selections etc. Anyone know more about it?

Thanks,

Stephen Cope

↑ Index

226. Jordan Davis
Bouchard 8, Mills 9
Fri 11 Oct 1996

Bouchard 8, Mills 9 at Poetry City

Time: B (27 mins), M (40 mins)
Attendance: 20

Opening day at Poetry City, the Mayor threw out the first ball, "MASS AVE" editor Bouchard was in good form, loose, built up with six shorter pieces to his longer work "August." Early line drives--"Make way for the language," "If you'd like to make a speech, press pound now," "for lack of what is Pound there," "ampersand ampersand ampersand." A rally in the third as Bouchard riffed on the last line of the Maximus Poems, "My wife my car my color my credit rating..." Titles of poems: "A Pavement Ontology," "Hesiod's Notebook," "Ben's Release," "Purple Finch," and "Washington Square." Bouchard was wearing tan bucks, a green-brown sweater, blue jeans and a watch. His poems are political, because as he put it, he could avoid political concerns as much as he could avoid the fact that it's snowing. Shaking off a cold and the ride in from Boston, Bouchard read eight poems coolly.

David Mills, a teacher in the T&W program, read nine poems, drawing significant guffaws from the mostly Subpoetics crowd with lines like "I'm gonna call Dick Gregory," "Our stepfather who art in Macon County," and "One must be at least an octoroon on this ride." In a zipped-up fleece jacket, black jeans, black shoes, Mills, whose subject matter ranged from the topical (Clarence Thomas, oral sex, cross-country car trips) to the almost purely rhythmic, Mills was a captivating eccentric stage presence. Titles included: "North Rim," "Great Adventure," "Back Space Talking," and "Strangers in Paradise."

A brief post-game wrap-up at Poetry City was followed by a brisk walk to the Cedar in the cold. Too crowded. Half the audience of the reading went to the Old Town, where if you want to get what they do, get the hamburger. The shepherd's pie isn't bad but...

(In attendance at the reading: Bill Luoma, Douglas Rothschild, Tim Davis, Judith Goldman, Steven Hall, Marcella Durand, Anna Van Lenten, Tim Griffin, Anselm Berrigan, and others.)

--Jordan Davis

↑ Index

227. Keith Tuma
Re: Ron Johnson
Fri 11 Oct 1996

Stephen:

Chicago Review 42.1 (1996) has short essays on Ronald Johnson by Creeley and Gunn, an interview with the un-dead by Peter O'Leary (co-editor of LUNG), ARK 66 (for EP), BEAM 1, RJ's "Hurrah for Euphony" (prose), and an intro floating the boat by Devin Johnston. Also some Bronk, Fanny Howe, etc.

$6 from Chicago Review 5801 S. Kenwood Ave. Chicago, IL 60637-1794 Subscriptions = $18 (good things coming down the line at CR I think)

--keith

↑ Index

228. Douglas Barbour
Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
Fri 11 Oct 1996

> Date: Thu, 10 Oct 1996 11:13:08 -0400
> From: Wendy Battin <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Oct 1996 to 8 Oct 1996
>
> On Thu, 10 Oct 1996, Douglas Barbour wrote:
> Irish woman in the group, who is not an "English" type, bu which he meant
> she did not study literature, was trying to explain to him the various
> 'codes' operative whenever a catholic & protestant met, finally threw up
> her hands & said, "I cant explain, but listen," picked a copy of heaney's > poems out of her backpack, & read him a poem in which heaney explored
>
> Doug,
> Do you happen to know which poem? (Sure there are many, but am > curious to know which she chose.)
>
> Wendy
>
> ---
> Wendy Battin [redacted]
> (home) http://camel.conncoll.edu/ccother/wjbat/
> (CAPA) http://shain.lib.conncoll.edu/CAPA/capa.html
> ---

Sorry, I dont, but I will ask my friend if he recalls the title of the poem & get back to you. He was telling me this partly because he knew I wasnt a big fan of Heaney's. As a theoretical type, deeply into post-colonial work, he considers another Nobel winner the 'best' (? wrong work: he means, I think, most interesting in terms of what he does) poet in english today: Derek Walcott. I had read only a few Walcott poems & not thought much one way or another, but a reading of the _Collected Poems_ did lead me to somewhat reise my opinion. There is much there, albeit within a tradition I am not all that interested in, that is fascinating. Sorry for getting off topic from your request. I will ask.

All the best

Doug

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
H: [redacted]

'The universe opens. I close.
And open, just to surprise you.'
- Phyllis Webb

↑ Index

229. Douglas Barbour
Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
Fri 11 Oct 1996

Boy it sure is good to hear that Ronald Johnson is alive & well, but even better to hear about a complete (is that it?) ARK. Ive been following him with delight since _The Green Man_, & especially _Radi Os_.

All the best

Doug

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
H: [redacted]

'The universe opens. I close.
And open, just to surprise you.'
- Phyllis Webb

↑ Index

230. Tod Thilleman
Re: chat net
Fri 11 Oct 1996

bill I like the non-subtle advances made thru language too, and I think you've hit on the weighty core to what of course is the approaching structure life-philosophy. dig two books, one kind of older, onr kind of new: Daimon Life by David Krell who has a new novel out on the life of Neitzche. DL is study of Heidegger's Sein Und Zeit over against the what the poetics which (neat you'd like them drawings on the cover,) that unsubtle language you are singing about. New one: Anger, Madness, and the Daimonic: psychological Genesis of Violence, Evil, and creativity by Stephen Diamond. I mention these, and the incredible actuality and greatness of the commercial on television for the visa gold card, inserted between the bickering europeans at the cash machine...which ran during the olympics. I'm also digging the budweiser spin-off for WPLJ the croaking men as toady sign readers in the backyard swimming pool, and the new chevrolet jingle making its way over the air's waves and digging tthe new addition to the epc biblio hannah weiner of the worded forehead, great wealth on her writing career I just downloaded and glad to have

↑ Index

231. Andrew D Epstein
Re: Ron Johnson
Fri 11 Oct 1996

On Fri, 11 Oct 1996, Stephen Cope wrote:

> As regards Johnson: I believe it was Chicago Review that recently > did an issue dedicated to him. I haven't seen it myself, but am of > mind that it had essays as well as selections etc. Anyone know > more about it?
>
> Thanks,
>
> Stephen Cope
>
>
Chicago Review (Vol. 42, no 1) did just do an issue dedicated to Johnson. There is an interesting interview with Johnson by Peter O'Leary (who some of you may have met at Orono -- I did), an introduction to ARK by Devin Johnston, enthusiastic remarks on the work by Thom Gunn and Robert Creeley, two sections of ARK, and a prose piece ("Hurrah for Euphony") by Johnson.

Andrew Epstein

↑ Index

232. Carnography
Re: That's Blaxdhhhhhhxqtploitation!
Fri 11 Oct 1996

> ABR is going through a "transition" right now owing to Romayne Rubinas' vacating the job she held for so long (and did so well, in my opinion). The new editor is Paula Goodnight and when I talked to her a month ago she sounded as though she'd been thrown to the lions. Too bad about your piece. Things should settle down soon (I hope).
>
> Patrick Pritchett

Patrick:

I hope my missive didn't seem dismissive: ABR is great, and I wouldn't want to put it down in any way. I have only known the staff at ABR to be fastidious, and my James piece was really a kind of prolonged blurb for his work, which I feel is frequently overlooked. Had my piece been longer or more serious, I might have been genuinely upset; still, it is never a good idea to sound like a hydrop-cephaloid in an academic publication.

Sorry to hear about Romayne Rubinas's departure. I'm certain that Paula will do fine once she settles in (if she hasn't already).

Still, really didn't mean to complain about ABR. I only wanted people to understand that I'm not a careless or illiterate writer, which is what I appear to be in my swift, pithed, and formerly pithy piece.

(Also: I'm never faxing anything to any publication ever again.)

All the best,

Rob Hardin

http://www.interport.net/~scrypt

↑ Index

233. alan sondheim
....liam dedrawroF (dwf)
Fri 11 Oct 1996

18.2

sgniht talf daed era slegna gnipeels ma I nehw sdrow ym egnarraer ohw

ekawa ma I nehw sdrow ym egnarraer meht esare sdrow ym etirw niaga dna niaga yas t'nac I tub wonk t'nod I gnihtyna tuoba tsuj
enil eht kcolb yeht esuaceb slegna tuoba taht os ti egnarraer trohs ti peek reporp ro seman rieht evig t'nac _ti_ deggar snur _ti_ taht os sserdda gnihton ot steg ti resolc eht

↑ Index

234. Steve Shoemaker
Re: noble
Fri 11 Oct 1996

Is "miragie" a mag? Can Bill or somebody give publication/subscription info?
steve

On Wed, 9 Oct 1996, Bill Luoma wrote:

> someone should give Jack Hirschman the noble just for those letters to Djuna Barnes in the new miragie. thanks. and how is wayne smith doing?
>
> Bill

Steve Shoemaker

↑ Index

235. Steve Evans
How To Not Read
Fri 11 Oct 1996

Robert Potts's review of Iain Sinclair's CONDUCTORS OF CHAOS (Picador) appeared in the Times Literary Supplement of 20 September 1996. I just got around to reading the review--which bears the lurid title "The blood-soaked perimeter"--this morning.

The single non-ideological claim that I can reconstruct from the full-page, four-column review is this: "There is a book."

This afternoon, when I should have been doing any number of other things, I found myself thinking of Potts's review. It struck me that such a pure example of xenophobic reading doesn't come along everyday, and so I set about writing through the review, trying not to overlook any of its moves.

Since the review was in a manifest state of non-relation to anything like the objective fact of CONDUCTORS OF CHAOS I decided to go along with Potts (and Husserl) and just bracket the "thing-itself" entirely. That is, rather than address the numerous distortions at the level of empirical fact, I thought I would concentrate on what this person took to be "the case." To better watch the way his claims (implicit and explicit) worked, I tried to substitute abstract terms for as many of the particular elements as I could. (In cases where I couldn't bring myself to "abstract" I left the term in between brackets.)

The review is broken into two parts, each of which begins with an oversized drop-cap. There are eleven paragraphs in all, to which the numbered sections of my comments correspond.

-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-

HOW NOT TO READ

There is a book.

I.

1. There is a book. But the book does not know (or will not say) what kind of book it really is. The reviewer is in a position to clarify the matter. The book is an anthology.

There is a group. But the group does not know (or will not say) that it is a group. The reviewer, though not a member of any group himself, can tell a group when he sees one.

The group has brought upon itself its own marginality. The reviewer likes to say this while engaged in the application of all the techniques of marginalization known to him.

The editor's project in this book is not original. Having suppressed what is novel about the editor's project in an earlier sentence, the reviewer can now charge him with lack of originality. It does not help that the reviewer can think of one other project that also did not deny the existence of experimental writing.

The group is fearful, idiosyncratic, and sectarian. The reviewer is fearless, normal, disinterested. The group is shy, insular, distrustful. The reviewer is gregarious, open, without worry because without sin. The group has for a long time been complacent and self-absorbed. The reviewer's ethnographic gaze provides "a fresh and foreign" look at the group's essential truth.

2. The writers whom the editor has brought together in his book know that one another exist. The reviewer takes exception to such effrontery. Certain specific writers go so far as to respect other specific writers. The review knows this to be communism. Though united in their anti-capitalist practice of respect for one another and for writing, these writers apparently find it unnecessary to think that they are all writing the same thing. The reviewer is familiar with what passes for intelligence at [Cambridge].

3. The group that does not know itself to be a group is the [X] School. The reviewer will maintain this fact in the face of all evidence, subjective and objective.

There is a writer in the book who is forthright. The reviewer pauses to commend this virtue otherwise so little in evidence in the present volume. This forthright writer once attempted to address the fact that writing he recognizes as having value has existed for quite a while and in many places. The reviewer regrets that this writer chose the insular venue of a little magazine in order to make his remarks; still, the reviewer likes a writer who will name names and spell out the complex internal workings of this arcane and hostile group whose conspiratorial reach cannot be overstated.

The group has pursued its agenda with grim determination in [X] and in [Y]. The reviewer takes this opportunity to warn members of the bourgeoisie in each of these high-risk areas to take measures against the theft of their speaking voices.

4. Some of the writers in the book have a critique of speech-based poetics. Some/others also seem to have read [Rimbaud].

The highly organized ring of voice-thieves, numbering more than thirty, have undertaken voluntarily and arbitrarily an agenda of "willed incoherence," but some (well over half) will their incoherence to a greater degree than do others (the other half). The reviewer makes an important distinction here between the otherwise delightful practice of ripping out the vocal chords of bourgeois poets and the same practice taken to "hideous extremes."

Some of the writers in the book have found it possible to read other poems composed in the twentieth-century. The reviewer takes this opportunity to remind his readers of such oddities and atrocities as "open field" and "(post)modern" poetics and, that most recent aberration, ["L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E"] poetry.

Some of the writers in the book can give reflexive accounts of their aims. Some also are accustomed to reading the reflexive accounts given by others. The reviewer is living proof that pausing to reflect before writing can introduce serious obstacles to facile expression. Some of the writers in the book do not imagine their readership to be incapable of complex thought-processes. The reviewer cannot understand how these writers mean to have literary or political success if they are not willing to accept such basic assumptions as the essential ignorance and laziness of readers and citizens.

A specific writer in the book has so extended his capacity for reflexivity that he actually has a critical relationship to an intellectual position he nonetheless respects. The reviewer firmly believes that a strict separation should always be maintained between what one likes and understands and what one despises and is paid to review in the TLS.

Even this specific writer seems to consider the majority of readers to be human and to be familiar with the phonemic distinction between "th" and "dr," as in the words "think" and "drink." The reviewer avails himself of the opportunity to call his reader a horse while vouching for the clear water in his trough.

The specific writer is an intellectual; not surprisingly, then, he remains committed to certain of the preconditions for reasonable discourse. The reviewer praises the writer for not breaking entirely with form, syntax, and logic.

5. The specific writer has been preceded in his poetic and intellectual practice; indeed, one poet and intellectual in particular has shouldered a great deal of the burden of generating and sustaining interest in the practices this writer values. The reviewer wishes that the younger of the writers could be more discerning with respect to the selection of his predecessors.

This predecessor makes more than ornamental attempts at transforming the processes of "meaning." The reviewer disallows the validity of any meanings that aren't "clear" upon first reading; he does not mind that no text valued by his culture meets this criterion.

This predecessor does not rigidly separate cognition from emotion, thinking perhaps that the expansion of one cannot but expand the other. The reviewer expects to be compensated in pleasure for every meaning he passes up; no arrests to date.

The predecessor has a body of work of tremendous breadth, complexity, and internal differentiation. The reviewer extracts the essence of his project from four cited lines. Suspicion is once again the posture recommended to all good people who find themselves in the vicinity of [X].

The same four lines which synopsize a writer's life-work and recommend its wholesale dismissal can, conveniently, also synopsize and facilitate the dismissal of the nearly five hundred pages of writing in the book under review.

6. Knowing all linguistic acts that don't resolve to clear meaning instantly upon encounter to be "gobbledygook," the reviewer introduces an important distinction between strategic "gobbledygook" and that inferior brand of "gobbledygook" which has devolved into mere "charmless mannerism."

Some of the writers in the book bring the visual dimension of their text to the foreground; some/others also have grounds for considering the restriction of meaning to "intention" an intellectual anachronism that did not survive serious examination in any of the disciplines of the human sciences that devoted a moment's thought to it. They might point to philosophy, linguistics, literary and cultural studies, history, sociology in making their case.

The reviewer concedes that some private meaning may incidentally attach to typographical irregularities perpetrated by a given author, but cannot be brought to consider that a reader could ascertain the nature of this entirely hermetic experience from the evidence provided by the text.

Some of the writing in the book values surprise, the unexpected, the spontaneous. The reviewer is certain that just outside the gates of narrative regularity awaits total anarchy.

Some of the writers in this volume have detected what seems to them a worrisome and cloying uniformity in the kinds of messages produced within the circuits of the dominant, capital-intensive media; some/others think that poetry needn't reproduce the structure and content of these messages. The reviewer reminds his reader once again that these are the sort of people who forced one to learn a pronunciation of the word "hegemonic." His verdict upon them is subtly rendered: at least they are not as troubled as they might be by the "eerie homogeneity of their strings of apparently meaningless phrases."

II.

7. The editor in introducing the work he has assembled in this book has not adopted a tone of smug indifference toward that work. The reviewer's own style suggests to no one, surely, the adjectives "rabid and polemical." The editor passionately argues his poetic position. The reviewer considers only dispassionate utterances that presuppose his own assumptions to be "clear." The editor's poetics are not merely wrong (a substantive evaluation) but they even fail on procedural grounds--they are "disguised."

The editor in introducing the work he has assembled in this book has taken the trouble to foresee, and respond to, a frequent objection made to much writing of value; namely, that it is (too) difficult. The reviewer notes in his opponent's language (and when wasn't the editor of this volume considered an opponent by this reviewer?) an allusion to a predecessor, but really lights up when he thinks of another (more recent) predecessor's retort to that (less recent) predecessor.

The reviewer's preferred predecessor describes the writer/reader relationship on a contractual mode in which the reader contracts with the writer for a specified amount of meaningful experience, to be paid for in cash and ingested at the reader's convenience, satisfaction guaranteed. The preferred predecessor abases himself before the image of an harried reader tight on time and money. The writer should do nothing unduly troublesome to such a reader. The editor, his book, and the writers whose work is collected in that book, all want to do troubling things to such readers.

8. The reviewer feels just as though he has been appointed to adjudicate the contract dispute between the book and its possible readers (it is a class-action suit). Noted on the readers' behalf are numerous injurious failures to deliver: there are no theses or critiques, no musical pleasures (due in part to the existence of a bad foreign predecessor who encouraged writers to abjure music), nor even fragments of music.

Because no rational alternative to the contract that binds seller to buyer can be imagined by the reviewer, and because certain of the writers in the book under review do not write in a manner conformable to the contract theory of language, a "religious covenant" must be in place. Here the reviewer relies on the old saw, when you try to be secular, it is because you are a Marxist; when you try to be Marxist, it's clearly because you are a cult-member.

9. In a book nearly five hundred pages long there are likely to be techniques, and even whole pieces, that someone out of sympathy with the project in general can like. The reviewer writes one sentence about each of the seven writers who appear to him as having, however inexplicably, broken free of the cultish, conspiratorial, gobbledygook-centered, communist-plot-hatching, Cambridge set.

Exceptional writer 1 floods the reader, speckles the noise, and is grimly amusing.

Exceptional writer 2 wrestles with and somehow overcomes her platitudinous subject matter.

10. Exceptional writer 3 isn't part of the group anyway, as shown by the beauty and self-confidence of his poem imitative of a foreign predecessor of uncertain long-term value.

Exceptional writer 4 contributes an essay and an elegy; the former is careful, the latter quietly subtle.

Exceptional writer 5 receives two sentences. He is said to be careful in how he confuses things and also hilarious and disturbing.

Exceptional writer 6 overcomes a tendency to obliqueness to present a "hospital-centered narrative."

Exceptional writer 7 also receives two sentences. He too shows signs of obliqueness, but he is charming and innocent in addition. Indeed, this writer conflates musicality with mellifluity in a way that excites the reviewer. He is called a "Holy Fool" but the reviewer means it as a compliment.

11. The review of the book that won't say what kind of book it is, collecting work by a group of writers who won't say they are a group, edited by a person who doesn't know what he means to do, and who only writes poetics in disguise, must end sometime (sigh).

What better way to close, thinks the reviewer, than with another allusion to the cultural authority of my preferred predecessor. Poetry is a wide and varied territory, says the predecessor; we understand him to mean that there are many contracts to sign. Taking sides is no way to understand poetry, says the predecessor; we understand his advice to us very well: Quiet subsumption under a false universal is preferable to stubborn endurance in illegitimate particularity. These guiding words of the preferred predecessor are especially stirring in the wake of the reviewer's systematic violation of every norm appealed to therein. It is refreshing to find practice once again so far out ahead of abstraction and theory.

The writers in the book under review have decided to test the validity of their writing against criteria other than those of the market. The reviewer sees this as elective auto-marginalization. The writers in the book under review have contested the assumption that writing which submits to market-criteria is the only writing there is. The reviewer sees this as sour grapes.

The appearance of objectivity requires concessions such as: No work is all bad. The reviewer candidly admires some of the results yielded by "open forms, surrealism, ellipsis." That out of the way, the temporarily postponed judgment arrives with undiminished zeal: No work is all bad, but this work is as near as one gets. What is good about the writing of sullen elective auto-marginalizing types is not specific to them. It is good also in good, accessible, mainstream writing. What is good about the good writing in this bad book may lift some of these writers out of the captivity of the bad group responsible for the bad book. The bad writers will sink back into the shadowlands of narcissism, self-congratulation, and delusory elitism, where they will try to suppress their brief encounted with "fresh and foreign critical interrogation."

The reviewer will appear again in the pages of the TLS.

---

r i a t n m u a t s u o o o s

↑ Index

236. George Bowering
Re: Ron Johnson/rumors
Fri 11 Oct 1996

> strange rumors about the mainstreamers too--we got a call at the office today asking us if Gjertrud Schnackenberg had died--is somebody trying to quash poetry by spreading disinformation?
>
> Gwyn

Is there really a poet with such a name, or are we in the middle of another composite novel?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

237. maria damon
Re: How To Not Read
Fri 11 Oct 1996

two-shay, steve evans! (gotta spell it that way cuz my enclitics don't work on e-mail) great review of review. --md

↑ Index

238. robert zamsky
Minnesota
Fri 11 Oct 1996

Dear List:

I will be in Minneapolis for a conference on October 18 and 19 -- I've never been to the city before and would love any information about readings, events, etc... thanks --

rob zamsky

↑ Index

239. Wendy Battin
Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
Fri 11 Oct 1996

On Fri, 11 Oct 1996, Douglas Barbour wrote:
> Sorry, I dont, but I will ask my friend if he recalls the title of the poem > & get back to you.

Many thanks. That was one of my earliest englishes and I'd like to take a look & listen, esp to the coding.

Wendy

↑ Index

240. DS
Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
Sat 12 Oct 1996

---

and may i say i enjoyed Omeros which i read start to finish

At 08:33 AM 10/11/96 -0600, you wrote:
>>Date: Thu, 10 Oct 1996 11:13:08 -0400
>>From: Wendy Battin <[redacted]>
>>Subject: Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Oct 1996 to 8 Oct 1996
>>
>>On Thu, 10 Oct 1996, Douglas Barbour wrote:
>>> Irish woman in the group, who is not an "English" type, bu which he meant
>>> she did not study literature, was trying to explain to him the various
>>> 'codes' operative whenever a catholic & protestant met, finally threw up
>>> her hands & said, "I cant explain, but listen," picked a copy of heaney's >>> poems out of her backpack, & read him a poem in which heaney explored
>>
>>Doug,
>>Do you happen to know which poem? (Sure there are many, but am >>curious to know which she chose.)
>>
>>Wendy
>>
>>----------
>>Wendy Battin [redacted]
>>(home) http://camel.conncoll.edu/ccother/wjbat/
>>(CAPA) http://shain.lib.conncoll.edu/CAPA/capa.html
>>----------

>
>Sorry, I dont, but I will ask my friend if he recalls the title of the poem >& get back to you. He was telling me this partly because he knew I wasnt a >big fan of Heaney's. As a theoretical type, deeply into post-colonial work, >he considers another Nobel winner the 'best' (? wrong work: he means, I >think, most interesting in terms of what he does) poet in english today:
>Derek Walcott. I had read only a few Walcott poems & not thought much one >way or another, but a reading of the _Collected Poems_ did lead me to >somewhat reise my opinion. There is much there, albeit within a tradition I >am not all that interested in, that is fascinating. Sorry for getting off >topic from your request. I will ask.
>
>All the best
>
>Doug
>
>Douglas Barbour
>Department of English
>University of Alberta
>Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
>[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
>H: [redacted]
>
>'The universe opens. I close.
>And open, just to surprise you.'
>   - Phyllis Webb
>
>

↑ Index

241. John Cayley
Visible Language: New Media Poetry
Sat 12 Oct 1996

 Apologies for cross-postings ***

Just published and well worth checking out:

A special issue of the journal: VISIBLE LANGUAGE
Volume 30, no. 2

NEW MEDIA POETRY
Poetic Innovation and New Technologies
Guest edited by: Eduardo Kac

Contents:

Introduction / Eduardo Kac

The Interactive Diagram Sentence:
Hypertext as a Medium of Thought / Jim Rosenberg

Poetic Machinations / Phillipe Bootz

Videopoetry / E. M. de Melo e Castro

We Have Not Understood Descartes / Andre Vallias

Virtual Poetry / Ladislao Pablo Gyori

Beyond Codexspace:
Potentialities of Literary Cybertext / John Cayley

Holopoetry / Eduardo Kac

New Media Poetry:
Theories and Strategies / Eric Vos

Selected Webliography / Eduardo Kac

ORDER FROM:
Visible Language, Rhode Island School of Design
Graphic Design Department, 2 College Street,
Providence RI 02903, USA
Tel: [redacted]
Email inquiries: [redacted] (Carrie Harris, for more details)
This issue: $10 (check postage with business contact)
Subscriptions: (1 year = 3 issues) $30 (individ.) $55 (instit.)

Web references:
Eduardo Kac:- http://www.uky.edu/FineArt/kac/kachome.html
Jim Rosenberg:- http://www.well.com/user/jer/
John Cayley:- http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/in/

↑ Index

242. Kevin Killian
Re: Jay and Kay deFeo
Sat 12 Oct 1996

> Hey there, dbkk, are we going to get a report on Kevin's play?
> breathless,
> maria d

Maria, thanks for asking about my play, "Wet Paint," which indeed did get finished, still wet, and presented on Wednesday. All the actors‹a motley crew of the Bay Area's best painters, filmmakers, poets, videographers, drag performers, art writers, and novelists‹showed up, which was such a help, and so difficult corralling 19 divas all in one room at one time. And some of them are the kind who, presented with a script, will whip out rulers to determine how many inches they have (of dialogue, of course). But they were all there and all fantastic.

I could try to reconstruct the audience a la Jordan Davis, but I was too nervous really to note more than a few of the hundreds of people who were there. I remember however Fanny Howe coming up to me after the show was over and saying that it reminded her of growing up in Cambridge when her mother, Mary Manning Howe, was in charge of the Poets Theater there (mid-fifties?), and nothing could have pleased me more.

Also spotted: the writers Rebecca Solnit, Tina Rotenberg, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Matthew Stadler, Renee Gladman, Michael Price, Avery Burns, Leslie Davis, Pamela Lu, Barbara Guest, Susan Gevirtz, Laura Moriarty, Brian Strang, Aaron Shurin, Charlie Smith, Rena Rosenwasser, Duncan McNaughton, Bill Berkson, Larry Kearney, Jay Schwartz, Lauren Gudath, George Albon (replete with new, utterly delicious new boyfriend), and the artists Brett Reichman, Fran Herndon, Chris Komater, Peter Mitchell-Dayton, Vincent Fecteau, Jennifer Locke, Nao Bustamente....

And many more both on this list and not. Tosh Berman, you will be glad I know to hear that each of your appearances was greated with a tremendous round of applause. You were played by a Cabbage Patch doll that Dodie bought at our local Thrift Town--actually, a Cabbage Patch knockoff, and carted around in a simply, 1959 style brown paper bag. At one point in the action of the play, you wander away and get sucked into the vast 2000 pound "Rose" painting of Jay DeFeo, but happily rescued by your good father. More later. Thanks‹Kevin K.

↑ Index

243. maria damon
Re: Minnesota
Sat 12 Oct 1996

In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group
writes:
> Dear List:
>
> I will be in Minneapolis for a conference on October 18 and 19 -- I've > never been to the city before and would love any information about > readings, events, etc...
> thanks --
>
> rob zamsky

what's the conference? there're a coupla weekly papers, the Twin Cities Reader and the City Pages, that have extensive listings of events, etc. they're free at most coffee shops, etc. also, call the Loft (the largest writing institution in the cities) for their events. the loft is pretty conservative in its scope tho. also call bryant-lake bowl (a groovy bowling alley, cafe, and "alternative" performance space), and the walker art center, which sometimes hosts fun stuff. some listers past and present from the tcs are: me, mark nowak, jeff hansen, gary sullivan, marta deike, kurt anderson, jonathan brannen (actually i morris mn), bob gale (another person to call about events, as he edits SHOUT!, a free monthly for spoken word arts), some lurkers i do and don't know about. that's about it for first thing in the morning; i'll give it a bit more concerted thot in the next week or so. maybe we cd have a coffee hr somewhre and meet u. maria d

↑ Index

244. Kevin Killian
Ronald Johnson
Sat 12 Oct 1996

It's Kevin Killian--again. As far as Ronald Johnson goes, Dodie tells me that he's reading at New College in November (if she remembers correctly) so bring your copies of ARK for him to sign. Has anybody seen the new "Ronald Johnson" by Dirk Stratton--it's one of those little books from Boise State University (Western Writers Series #122). The drawing of RJ on the cover makes him look just like poetics list member Ed Foster; however there's no picture of author "Dirk Stratton." Does anyone know him, or do I just remember that name from "Bonanza"? (Or, possibly, some old Fred Halsted film from the seventies?)

Stratton says (page 52), "Maybe Johnson is a writer of the American West, but we are simply unable to recognize exactly why." So it's interesting. E-mail for Western Writers Series is at [redacted].

Thanks everybody.

↑ Index

245. Loss Glazier
Creeley at 70 in Buffalo
Sat 12 Oct 1996

CREELEY AT 70 IN BUFFALO

DATELINE BUFFALO. The 70th birthday celebration in honor of Robert Creeley moves along with extraordinary momentum. First night: Eileen Myles, introduced by Creeley, read to a packed crowd in the large Halwall's performance space, with its stage bordered on three sides by the audience. Her figure animated against the somewhat large stage, reading and letting each page of text drift to the floor after reading it. Voice, presence, narrative rang solidly to a thoroughly enthusiastic crowd. Second day: the formal opening of activities by William Greiner, UB president and Creeley colleague who first met Creeley long-distance while Creeley was in Finland. Then, Gil Sorrentino, fondly introduced by Joseph Conte, reading in the Katherine Cornell Theatre, a good-sized semi-formal spaceship architecture palace space on the edge of Buffalo's tundra-tinged north campus. Sorrentino read prose from a new piece (I think forthcoming in _Conjunctions_). A richly written piece, supercharged with irony, purposely laden with the banalities of the wife-swapping personalities it characterized and the revolting misogyny and sexual beasty balls of its less-than-likable narrator. Above this content, the precision of Sorrentino's prose glimmered like a city skyline. Amiri Baraka, originally scheduled to read with Sorrentino, was unable to appear. Creeley therefore gave a preview mini-reading, talking briefly and reading the full text of his _Dogs of Auckland_ (approximate title) chapbook forthcoming from Meow Press. A gorgeous piece of work. This reading was followed by a reception in the poetry collection and its great assembly of rare, beautiful, and ephemeral Creeley materials and also a retrospective (mostly small press) of poetry chez Buffalo for the past 50 years. A delirious spread of rare and richly-diverse print artifacts that gave a varied sense of the "scene" as passing in and out and back into the "city of no illusions". Back at Katherine Cornell, next up was the Creeley-Dine event, the room full to the rafters. (So packed the fire marshall was threatening to turn back poetry-goers if they could not prove they had a seat.) Creeley introduced at length and eloquently by Susan Howe. Then an extraordinary reading by Creeley. First an explanation of the 1-2-3 method then a 1-2-3 section from _Mabel: A Story_ a prose work dating an early Creeley-Dine collaboration. This was a long piece, at times dropping into choppy Burroughsesque rhythms, other times richly wry and funny, and other times simply sailing along tellingly. A rare treat to witness the performance of this important earlier prose piece. This reading was followed by "Histoire de Florida" a later, powerful, long, languid, pulling out like the tide and the backdrop of all-that-has-happened, rhythmic, emotional, and meditative masterwork. Then Dine was introduced excellently by Charles Bernstein followed by the Creeley-Dine conversation. Truly extraordinary, to hear these two men talk about a range of subjects near and dear to both art and writing, "tools" of any trade, age and its perspectives, perseverance and its perspectives, the necessities of incessant travel and, well, all in all, what it means to hang in there. This was a primo opportunity to hear both the writer and the artist talk. Creeley and Dine were terrific. It was a particularly wonderful opportunity to hear from Dine, an artist who gets to Buffalo all too rarely, and to hear him speak so openly, honestly, his talk as rich as writing itself, there in the open space where things are stilled for some hours we can all hold for the true celebration of artistic life they are. Hey, this is what it means to hang in there. STILL TO COME: Ashbery reading this afternoon then tonight Hallwalls Jazz concert with Steve Kuhn and Carol Fredette. ONLINE: check out http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/creeley/70th where you can also see the Dine painting for this event and other stuff. --- Loss Glazier <[redacted]> http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

↑ Index

246. Joe Amato

Re: How To Not Read

Sat 12 Oct 1996

---

bravo, steve!... i'm gonna be using that piece of yrs sometime, if you don't mind, in one or the other of my classes...

best,

joe

↑ Index

247. Douglas Barbour

Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Oct 1996 to 11 Oct 1996

Sat 12 Oct 1996

Re Steve Evans's review of the review: I just want to say Thank you. That was illuminating & great fun to boot. I really must go out & find that thing, or maybe not...

All the best

Doug

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
H: [redacted]

'The universe opens. I close.
And open, just to surprise you.'
- Phyllis Webb

↑ Index

248. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Ron Johnson
Sat 12 Oct 1996

Brian and anyone else:

The info on Living Batch is:

Living Batch Bookstore
106 Cornell Dr SE
Albuquerque, NM 87106
505- [redacted]
(don't know about e-mail)

Price of the ticket: $25.00
Bon voyage!

Patrick Pritchett

From: Brian McHale
To: Multiple recipients of list POETICS
Subject: Re: Ron Johnson
Date: Thursday, October 10, 1996 4:58PM

Wait, wait. Now that we know Johnson is still with us, could someone please supply fuller data on publication of the Complete Ark. Address for Living Batch Press, please? E-mail, even?
Brian

↑ Index

249. Jeremy F Green
Re: How To Not Read
Sat 12 Oct 1996

My thanks too to Steve Evans.

Along with the practice of "summing up" complicated bodies of work with a sentence or 4-line quotation, the TLS reviewer (who is Robert Potts?) manages also to bracket the construction of tradition in the Sinclair anthology. A few of the demonized poets showcase their forebears: David Jones, J.F.Hendry, W.S.Graham, Nicholas Moore...So I guess what is being bracketted here is British modernism. As ever, "traditionalists" like the TLS reviewer prove to have the most advanced amnesia.

↑ Index

250. maria damon
Re: Jay and Kay deFeo
Sat 12 Oct 1996

thanks kevin, i'm glad i asked; sounds delicious.--md

↑ Index

251. Kevin Killian
Steve Carll reading
Sat 12 Oct 1996

Hi, it's Kevin Killian. Thanks, Steve, for announcing your reading over the internet. I'm back and I'm glad I went. As usual the reading started over 2 hours late, but "on time" for other readings that I've attended there at 530 Page Street. Everyone was in a party mood and that's exactly what they got. First Edmund Berrigan read--a selection of poems from all different manuscripts, leading up to the new work, a series of prose poems in which he has finally escaped from the autobiographical this and that allusion trap of his previous oeuvre. Well done, Edmund. Then I saw some big strong men moving around an elaborate stereo system and realized we were in for a multi-media presentation by Steve Carll. He put on a record and announced that since he wrote to music, it seemed possible to try to reproduce those conditions while reading. I think the record was by Alice Coltrane and Pharaoh Sanders. Over this melange of sound Steve read excerpts from his two new books, "Sincerity Loops" and "trace a moment's closure for clues," for about twenty five minutes, then the music stopped and he read some short funny essays on "Drugs" Caffeine, television, ecstasy, morphine, crack and alcohol are some I remember. Everyone was in stitches or if not stitches in knits and purls. Long live the salon, where there's an intimacy that sometimes more suited towards sharing new work than in the big spaces in town here. Now how can I get funding for having people over at my apartment? Does funding = theater?

↑ Index

252. Lisa Jarnot
Ear Inn Update
Sat 12 Oct 1996

EAR INN UPDATE:

On Saturday October 12th Cliff Fyman and Lee Ann Brown read at the Ear Inn. Cliff Fyman-- resident of the lower east side, secret poetical genius, and waiter at Sardi's Restaurant-- read from a spectacular mix of prose and poetry, including his crowd pleasing oulipo poem "mouse". Lee Ann Brown-- recent returnee to New York City-- read from her new project Cento, mixing it up with some greatest hits (such as "Crush") and newest new short poems inspired by some of the filmmakers represented at this year's International Film Festival at Lincoln Center.

For the second week in a row the Ear Inn was filled to capacity. Attendees included Bernadette Mayer, Philip Good, Lewis Warsh, Barbara Henning, Gavin Smith, Melanie Neilson, Robert Fitterman, Jeff Hull, Douglas Rothschild, William Luoma, Drew Gardner, Boston poet Sianne Ngai, new New Yorker Daniel Farrell, Albany poet Chris Funkhouser, Boston poet Daniel Bouchard, Anselm Berrigan, a busload of poets from Staten Island, and some other people eating lunch.

Don't miss out on the fun. Come early stay late drink beer. The Ear Inn is at 326 Spring Street in lower Manhattan. Next week's readers are ANSELM BERRIGAN and KIM LYONS. Anselm is a Yale Younger Poet. John Ashbery says "He rocks." Brooklyn poet Kim Lyons recently had some great work in THE WORLD. Allen Ginsberg recently said "She totally rocks." Check out the Ear. Lou Reed says "It rocks big time."

↑ Index

253. Eryque Gleason
Re: Ear Inn Update
Sat 12 Oct 1996

---

dear lisa (or anybody else), could you post the whole schedule for the ear? thankee! eryque

> EAR INN UPDATE:

> On Saturday October 12th Cliff Fyman and Lee Ann Brown read at the Ear Inn. Cliff Fyman-- resident of the lower east side, secret poetical genius, and waiter at Sardi's Restaurant-- read from a spectacular mix of prose and poetry, including his crowd pleasing oulipo poem "mouse". Lee Ann Brown-- recent returnee to New York City-- read from her new project Cento, mixing it up with some greatest hits (such as "Crush") and newest new short poems inspired by some of the filmmakers represented at this year's International Film Festival at Lincoln Center.
>
> For the second week in a row the Ear Inn was filled to capacity. Attendees included Bernadette Mayer, Philip Good, Lewis Warsh, Barbara Henning, Gavin Smith, Melanie Neilson, Robert Fitterman, Jeff Hull, Douglas Rothschild, William Luoma, Drew Gardner, Boston poet Sianne Ngai, new New Yorker Daniel Farrell, Albany poet Chris Funkhouser, Boston poet Daniel Bouchard, Anselm Berrigan, a busload of poets from Staten Island, and some other people eating lunch.
>
> Don't miss out on the fun. Come early stay late drink beer. The Ear Inn is at 326 Spring Street in lower Manhattan. Next week's readers are ANSELM BERRIGAN and KIM LYONS. Anselm is a Yale Younger Poet. John Ashbery says "He rocks." Brooklyn poet Kim Lyons recently had some great work in THE WORLD. Allen Ginsberg recently said "She totally rocks." Check out the Ear. Lou Reed says "It rocks big time."

↑ Index

254. George Bowering
Re: Creeley at 70 in Buffalo
Sun 13 Oct 1996

Loss-

Thanks so much for going to the trouble to writew that interim report of the Creeley fest. Wish I were there. I mean sometimes Buffalo is lucky and sometimes vancouver is.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

255. Ken Edwards
How To Not Read
Sun 13 Oct 1996

Thanks, Steve Evans. I've taken the liberty of snail-mailing a copy of your devastating piece to Iain Sinclair, the editor of _Conductors of Chaos_. By the way, may I commend the anthology to readers of this list who want to get a fix on what's happening these days in British poetry that's interesting.

Ken Edwards

↑ Index

256. Loss Glazier
Re: Creeley at 70 in Buffalo - Part II
Sun 13 Oct 1996

CREELEY AT 70 IN BUFFALO

DAY 3. Back in the Katherine Cornell theatre, Susan Schultz could have had no more style, zest, and presence than in her introduction of John Ashbery in which she first met a man who called himself Ashbery (Bernstein) and in which she recounted her pilgrimage to the Ashbery family apple farm not far from the site of the present event. Ashbery’s reading was first-rate. Ashbery, a poet who will soon be the same age as the man who this gathering celebrated, performed fully in command of his craft, reading from his latest book as well as from new poems. Ashbery’s reading was followed by a reception across the hall where poetrygoers were able to congregate and compare notes at the penultimate chime of this poetry celebration’s verse-bent clock. What could top things so far? The finale of course! The night of day three, Hallwall’s Jazz concert with Steve Kuhn and Carol Fredette. Perhaps the most decked out I’ve seen Hallwall’s with not only great book tables (thanks to Talking Leaves) but also, inside, two food tables, one with the cheeses, meats, breads, and grapes, and the other buckling under the weight of the two enormous cakes (one chocolate, one yellow) specially lettered for such a day. Inside, Kuhn and Fredette got going. Standards sprinkled among renditions of takes from the Steve Swallow release _Home_ (ECM Records 1160) on which Sheila Jordan did the vocals. The piano’s tones, registers, chordal thunderwalls in boots soled with celestial dust — while Fredette’s scats were nourished by dizzying drops into the deep, mellow, honey-coated lower register of her extraordinary voice. Many numbers to stun the crowd ("She Was Young" and "Ice Cream" among the memorable takes) and many numbers lifted like toasts to the music ship’s first mate seated with a grin and pensive attentiveness front row center. One of the outstanding moments was Kuhn’s solo improvisation dedicated to Creeley. No piano has ever been explored, imploded, stretched into silver multi-vocaled strands, rode into a thundered, multi-leveled, multi-chromatic union with the absolute possibilities of sound. As the program was originally envisioned, Mercury Rev would've been next on stage. They had canceled so, really, it would've been over now. But seated behind me in the second row, humming audibly to some of the standards was the man who would do the finale for this 70th, Amiri Baraka, introduced with incredible acumen by Bill Fischer. Baraka could've no less stormed the stage than if he had been backed by the John Coltrane quartet itself. Baraka's small build gives one no preparation for the immense vision, rhythm, voicing, and cadences that will emerge from the flaming words of his performance. Invoking as central to the _Yugen_ of Baraka's earlier years, "the big three" of the magazine, Ginsberg (is that right?), big Charlie Olson, and Bob Creeley. (Sorrentino, by the way, also appeared in _Yugen_.) Baraka paid homage to Creeley then performed from _Transbluecency_ and his more recent _Funk Lore_ (Los Angeles: Littoral Books, 1996). Baraka's humming, chanting, and vocal renditions of the standards-a la-Baraka were in perfect accord with the chords still lingering, clinging to the packed, overflowing theatre. No printed text can do this! People filling all seats, people on all sides, standing, squatting, spilling out into the Hallwall's hallway. Blues, transblues, transvoicings, the unbelievable coup d'états of Baraka's "lowcoups" (African American version of that knock-out blast commonly associated with the haiku), and his closing triumph (slaves, dig, we were once slaves). Indeed, it was about people, what we are, the rhythms that vibrate through one and the same. Amiri brought it home. And home we were — at least so is Buffalo in many senses. Oh, for a home like this. Happy birthday celebration, Robert Creeley! ONLINE: check out http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/creeley/70th/ where you can also see the Dine painting for this event.

Loss Glazier <[redacted]>
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

↑ Index

257. Herb Levy
Re: nobels, the Good, here we go...
Sun 13 Oct 1996

Joe -

I'm sorry it's taken a couple of days to get back to this. 'cause no one else picked up on this thread, I probably should have just back channelled this. But I took the morally indefensible position of sending it to the entire list instead.

I understand the desire for a more clearly sited ethos in the work. I'm just not sure I see it growing out of some official selection of this week's poem of the year, or defining a bad innovative poetry, the discussions which you jumped off from.

Despite the mottled (at best) political history of experimental verse in this century, it is difficult to imagine any innovative writing now that comes from a conservative mindset. Although I don't see Language poetry as the only viable contemporary innovation, I may have been blinded to other possibilities by the blitz of adamant progressive left positions taken in many (especially early) critical and poetic works from the Language end of things.

Perhaps I just don't know about the redlining bank loan officers, killers, and right-wing militia members who are currently writing innovative non-mainstream verse. Looking at moral issues much finer than these gets into a morass that often just seems like gossip to me. Let those writers who are without sin ...

I can think of a couple of things that do go in a direction that may be useful to you. In Bob Perelman's two recent books of essays, especially, but not only, the sections about Pound and Andrews, touch on the responsibility of the writer, and the reader, to address moral and political issues.

And I recently read a short piece somewhere (& I'll probably be embarassed, if not ethically compromised, when I finally remember where) that made a case for the anthology "Poems for the Millenium" as a stronger collection of ethical/ politically engaged work than some of the current collections of "poetry of witness."

> herb, all points well-taken... still, i'll press a bit and say that i think the question of good/Good bad/Bad is worth continued navigation in these parts (and i know neither of us means The Good), albeit i admit to being somewhat at a loss as to how to proceed... and in part for the reasons you mention about the nature of this public forum...
>
> really, i hate to keep coming back to this issue, but if in fact it's the forum itself that's preventing such dialogue, why then there's the need to reflect on same... what is it about that complex [wink] of ethico-moral-political that's untouchable around here?...
>
> i might make the argument (as i have on occasion) that certain attitudes about poetry or poetics are irresponsible when it comes to their institutional embodiment... now as a teacher, the institutional is relatively easy for me to access (in such terms, i mean)... but even poets and writers with no professional obligations or commitments to teaching must readily acknowledge that what they advocate as poets and writers have institutional effects that are more and less desirable... i regret, for example, those three nobel laureate poets (i think it was walcott, paz, and milosz) who together proclaimed their opposition to electronic media, an attitude that i find not only lamentable and compromising to more innovative work, but in fact aiding and abetting print hegemonies from > *which all three of these gents' work might be said to profit directly...*

>
> of course emedia is my hobbyhorse... and of course this question of the Good i raise is specifically one having to do with inter-poetic, if not inter-media, struggle (sorta)... but if you find yourself linking your effort as a poet or scholar or teacher with broader social concerns, why then the Good will of necessity be ramified across many other domains...
>
> anyway, i'd like to hear more...
>
> best,
>
> joe

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

258. James Brook
San Francisco library scandals
Sun 13 Oct 1996

As some on this list already know, the San Francisco library--especially its new high-tech main library--has been having a rough time of it.

The New Main Library buiding is a kind of suburban postmodern joke-- plenty of light wells and no room for books or reading. The City Librarian is in love with obsolete computers and his corporate pals who are intent on privatizing library services on a fee-per-use basis. The system is short-staffed--it takes a book between one and three months to make it back to the shelf after it's been returned to the library. The City Librarian is responsible for dumping many thousands of books without following proper weeding procedures. And on and on. All this in the effort to make the San Francisco public library a "21st-century library."

Though some of the scandals are indeed local and have to do with particular corrupt and incompetent people, the example of what's happened to the San Francisco Public Library has bearing on the transformation of libraries around the world. To my mind, it's an object lesson of what can go wrong when a mania for technology combines with the limited morality of corporate sharks to turn a public space into an "information node" and "profit center." The result is an antilibrary: enemy of books and readers.

Details are available in Nicholson Baker's fine article in this week's New Yorker, "The Author vs. the Library." The current Ampersand has articles by historian Gray Brechin, poet and librarian Steve LaVoie, and bookbinder Dominic Riley. I have a letter in the current San Francisco Weekly. And I've attached a summary of a recent CNN spot on the subject.

James Brook

- - - - - -

CNN Abstract of SFPL Piece as posted on WWW (Web has pics)

Title: San Francisco library accused of pitching thousands of books Date of Post: October 13, 1996 Web posted at: 8:15 a.m. Broadcast: Story aired October 12, 1996 at 2:20 p.m.(PST) (Also on FOX TV) WEB address: <HTTP://[redacted]/US/9610/13/library.book.toss/index.html>

San Francisco Library Accused of Pitching Thousands of Books

SAN FRANCISCO (CNN) -- A group of book lovers in San Francisco is fuming over the opening of a new library, claiming that thousands of books were dumped to accommodate the spanking clean building. "I think the library, in essence, has become a showcase for high technology at great expense to book collections and print collections," historian Walter Biller said.

Biller has a computer list which he claims identifies thousands of books, many irreplaceable, that were discarded when the San Francisco Public Library moved into its new location, heralded as the coming of a new age for libraries. "I believe 19,000 of them were last copies," he said.

A recent New Yorker article called it "The Great Book Purge" and said more than 100,000 books were hauled to the dump. Librarian Marcia Schneider admits an error occurred "for a brief period of time," and library officials say they don't know for sure how many books were tossed out, but estimate it to be around 20,000. But Schneider points out that some 430,000 new books were added to the library's collection when it moved.

"It has 9.1 miles of more shelf space than the old library. It has proportionately more shelf space than the old library," Schneider said, adding that it's a debate about the future of libraries.

"In many ways, it's a debate about technology versus the old-fashioned version of the library." Critics say computers belong in the library but so do the print treasures of the past. "Where are the books?" Biller asks. "There are atriums. There are spaces in the floor that go up five stories and there is nowhere for books?"

Correspondent Rusty Dornin contributed to this report.

↑ Index

259. George Bowering
Re: Creeley at 70 in Buffalo - Part II
Sun 13 Oct 1996

> Loss, thanks for section 2.

Interesting Baraka notes. I have been lucky enough to hear him in each decade in different places, and I appreciate what you say about amazing power he knows to speak. I remember once in the late, I think 80s, he is at the Sunsplash in Victoria, and there are a bunch of youngsters (this is outdoors of course) who have come to hear Taj Mahal, but then this other Black man, a little guy in glasses, makes his first noise in the mike, and those youngsters, been sprawled about, they SIT UP fast, and lissen!

But also remember in the Olson days, Amiri saying he was never going back to Buffalo, and I imagine he uttered a number of nevers in his day.

Thanks again for the desc.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

260. Dan Raphael Dlugonski
Molecular Jam
Sun 13 Oct 1996

Am real happy to announce the publication of my new book, Molecular Jam, from Jazz Police Books ([redacted].) the book is available from SPD, Permeable Press & Chris Drumm Books. on the back cover, Ivan Arguelles says "Like the best of his contemporaries, Jake Berry or Will Alexander, Raphael takes his language into the swiftly developing chasms of new sci-tech terminology, while still maintaining his balance of humor. Clearly, in reading his text, we are part the end of the 20th century" I'll be reading from the book 11/13 at Powells Books on SE Hawthorne here in Portland OR.

>There are 13 messages totalling 447 lines in this issue.
>
>Topics of the day:
>

> 1. POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
> 2. Visible Language: New Media Poetry
> 3. Minnesota
> 4. Creeley at 70 in Buffalo
> 5. How To Not Read (2)
> 6. POETICS Digest - 10 Oct 1996 to 11 Oct 1996
> 7. Ron Johnson
> 8. Jay and Kay deFeo (2)
> 9. Ronald Johnson
> 10. Ear Inn Update (2)
>
>----------
>
>Date: Sat, 12 Oct 1996 19:40:58 +1300
>From: DS <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: POETICS Digest - 9 Oct 1996 to 10 Oct 1996
>
>and may i say i enjoyed Omeros which i read start to finish
>
>At 08:33 AM 10/11/96 -0600, you wrote:
>>>Date: Thu, 10 Oct 1996 11:13:08 -0400
>>>From: Wendy Battin <[redacted]>
>>>Subject: Re: POETICS Digest - 7 Oct 1996 to 8 Oct 1996
>>>
>>>On Thu, 10 Oct 1996, Douglas Barbour wrote:
>>>> Irish woman in the group, who is not an "English" type, bu which he meant
>>>> she did not study literature, was trying to explain to him the various
>>>> 'codes' operative whenever a catholic & protestant met, finally threw up
>>>> her hands & said, "I cant explain, but listen," picked a copy of heaney's >>>> poems out of her backpack, & read him a poem in which heaney explored
>>>
>>>Doug,
>>>Do you happen to know which poem? (Sure there are many, but am >>>curious to know which she chose.)
>>>
>>>Wendy
>>>
>>>----------
>>>Wendy Battin [redacted]
>>>(home) http://camel.conncoll.edu/ccother/wjbat/

>>>(CAPA) http://shain.lib.conncoll.edu/CAPA/capa.html
>>>----------
>>
>>Sorry, I dont, but I will ask my friend if he recalls the title of the poem >>& get back to you. He was telling me this partly because he knew I wasnt a >>big fan of Heaney's. As a theoretical type, deeply into post-colonial work, >>he considers another Nobel winner the 'best' (? wrong work: he means, I >>think, most interesting in terms of what he does) poet in english today:
>>Derek Walcott. I had read only a few Walcott poems & not thought much one >>way or another, but a reading of the _Collected Poems_ did lead me to >>somewhat reise my opinion. There is much there, albeit within a tradition I >>am not all that interested in, that is fascinating. Sorry for getting off >>topic from your request. I will ask.
>>
>>All the best
>>
>>Doug
>>
>>Douglas Barbour
>>Department of English
>>University of Alberta
>>Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
>>[redacted] FAX: [redacted]
>>H: [redacted]
>>
>>'The universe opens. I close.
>>And open, just to surprise you.'
>>   - Phyllis Webb
>>
>>
>
>----------
>
>Date: Sat, 12 Oct 1996 10:49:12 +0100
>From: John Cayley <[redacted]>
>Subject: Visible Language: New Media Poetry
>
>  Apologies for cross-postings ***
>
>Just published and well worth checking out:
>
>A special issue of the journal: VISIBLE LANGUAGE

> Volume 30, no. 2
>
>NEW MEDIA POETRY
>Poetic Innovation and New Technologies
>Guest edited by: Eduardo Kac
>
>Contents:
>--------
>Introduction / Eduardo Kac
>
>The Interactive Diagram Sentence:
>Hypertext as a Medium of Thought / Jim Rosenberg
>
>Poetic Machinations / Phillipe Bootz
>
>Videopoetry / E. M. de Melo e Castro
>
>We Have Not Understood Descartes / Andre Vallias
>
>Virtual Poetry / Ladislao Pablo Gyori
>
>Beyond Codexspace:
>Potentialities of Literary Cybertext / John Cayley
>
>Holopoetry / Eduardo Kac
>
>New Media Poetry:
>Theories and Strategies / Eric Vos
>
>Selected Webliography / Eduardo Kac
>
>--------
>
>ORDER FROM:
>Visible Language, Rhode Island School of Design
>Graphic Design Department, 2 College Street,
>Providence RI 02903, USA
>Tel: [redacted]
>Email inquiries: [redacted] (Carrie Harris, for more details)
>This issue: $10 (check postage with business contact)
>Subscriptions: (1 year = 3 issues) $30 (individ.) $55 (instit.)
>

>--------
>
>Web references:
>Eduardo Kac:- http://www.uky.edu/FineArt/kac/kachome.html
>Jim Rosenberg:- http://www.well.com/user/jer/
>John Cayley:- http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/in/
>
>----------
>
>Date: Sat, 12 Oct 1996 08:20:36 -0500
>From: maria damon <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: Minnesota
>
>In message <[redacted]> UB Poetics discussion group
>writes:
>> Dear List:
>>
>> I will be in Minneapolis for a conference on October 18 and 19 -- I've >> never been to the city before and would love any information about >> readings, events, etc...
>> thanks --
>>
>> rob zamsky
>
>what's the conference? there're a coupla weekly papers, the Twin Cities Reader
>and the City Pages, that have extensive listings of events, etc. they're free >at most coffee shops, etc. also, call the Loft (the largest writing institution
