Re: Moment for Khlebnikov
Mon 28 Jul 1997

Today is 75th Anniversary of death of Khlebnikov.
A moment of respect & sound for him!
"The King of Time" . . .

Kogda umirayut koni--dyshat,
Kogda umirayut travy--sokhnut, Kogda umirayut solntsa--oni gasnut,
Kogda umirayut lyudi--poyut pesni.

When horses are dying--they wheeze,
When grasses are dying--they wither,
When suns are dying--they wane,
When people are dying--they sing songs.

NEZHNYI YAZYK

Segodnya veshchi, Nezhny i veshchi;
Nezhenki-bezhenki
V nebe plyvut.

SOFT TALK

All things today
Have all things to say;
Softly and swiftly
They swim through the sky.

(from Snake Train Ann Arbor: Ardis, 1976 pp. 35 & 44.
Edited by Gary Kern. Translations Kern, Richard Sheldon, Edward J. Brown, Neil Cornwell, Lily Feiler.)

the world as we see it is passing before our very eyes turns dark yet the brilliance of its sounding makes one turn back for one last look at the horizon where the rough grass lies silhouetted by a blue so sharp it cuts the eyes with its memories cuts it sharp as any stone in field

as any tongue in mouth crying to the ear
. . . crying to the a-i-r

my beloved i have found you

--dbKiro

↑ Index

894. dbkk
Re: execution/myth and poetry
Mon 28 Jul 1997

At 8:42 AM -0400 7/28/97, Daniel Bouchard wrote:

> It takes so long to write posts like these, with the citations questionable but not the essence of the material and work piling up before me, etc.

Dan,

This is what I love about the internet--the web particularly--the way it abounds with random, questionable information. The tension between the authority of written word and a form which is no more reliable than conversation.

Dodie

↑ Index

895. Mark Weiss
Sacco & Vanzetti
Mon 28 Jul 1997

The Rexroth poem to which I referred is "Climbing Milestone Mountain, August 22, 1937," pp. 89-90 in _The Collected Shorter Poems_.

It's a constant source of dismay to me that the decade 1965-1975 has become, with astonishing speed, a subject for university courses, almost a discipline, as aging college profs try to rewrite their youths, while the once-subversive and seductive passions of almost everything that came before gather dust and are lost to memory. Important to remember that the greatest grassroots movement of the post-Vietnam period thus-far has been the struggle to restore classic coke.

↑ Index

896. David Israel
Re: Sacco & Vanzetti
Mon 28 Jul 1997

Mark Weiss notes --

<< Important to remember that the greatest grassroots movement of the post-Vietnam period thus-far has been the struggle to restore classic coke. >>

I assume that with the plethora of hot-dog postage circa Friday, this is intended as an appropriate afterlude.

(As said Woody Allen: man lives not by bread alone.
Sometimes he requires a beverage.)

d.i.

↑ Index

897. simon
Re: Doggie Diner, Curtis Faville
Mon 28 Jul 1997

"the hot dog stand is open" (in DARE II) is what one man in South Carolina says to warn someone his (sic) fly is open.

beth

(you can get a special price for DARE now.)

↑ Index

898. Don Cheney
bumpersticker
Mon 28 Jul 1997

Carl's Jr. fast food out here in California has a new ad campaign that centers around the phrase "eat meat." as funny as that is, the funnier (is "funnier" a word, seems kind of, well, funny) thing is that they are handing out bumper-stickers portraying a yellow star with a smiling face on it and next to it the phrase:

EAT MEAT

who comes up with these ideas and can't anyone on the committee to promote fat and cholesterol SEE? it DOESN'T take a rocket scientist to figure out that this phrase can be easily altered with scissors to create an even funnier phrase!

don

==========
Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
[redacted]
==========

↑ Index

899. william marsh
bumpersticker / m/eat
Mon 28 Jul 1997

EAT EAT ? -- Just kidding, don, i see your point.

And while on the subject, i wonder what other tv enthusiasts on this list think of same Carl's Jr.'s "all over the place / all over your face" campaign. What kind of thinking renders the conclusion that the sound and sight of big globs of red sauce dripping from the jowls of generally big, sweaty guys is appealing to the fastfood crowd? Really, where DO those ideas come from?

Similarly: our local food co-op sells the bumpersticker: "friends don't let friends eat meat", which is equally amusing when scissored at both the front and back ends...

bmarsh

At 04:13 PM 7/28/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Carl's Jr. fast food out here in California has a new ad campaign that >centers around the phrase "eat meat." as funny as that is, the funnier (is >"funnier" a word, seems kind of, well, funny) thing is that they are >handing out bumperstickers portraying a yellow star with a smiling face on >it and next to it the phrase:
>
>EAT MEAT
>
>who comes up with these ideas and can't anyone on the committee to promote >fat and cholesterol SEE? it DOESN'T take a rocket scientist to figure out >that this phrase can be easily altered with scissors to create an even >funnier phrase!
>
>don
>
>==========
>Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
>http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
>[redacted]

>==========
>
>

↑ Index

900. Mark Weiss
Re: Sacco & Vanzetti
Mon 28 Jul 1997

Good catch, David, but it's literally true. there were public demonstrations by hundreds of thousands.
How quickly they forget!

At 03:33 PM 7/28/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Mark Weiss notes --
>
><< Important to remember that the greatest grassroots movement of the >post-Vietnam period thus-far has been the struggle to restore classic coke. >>
>
>I assume that with the plethora of hot-dog postage circa Friday, this is intended >as an appropriate afterlude.
>
>(As said Woody Allen: man lives not by bread alone.
>Sometimes he requires a beverage.)
>
>d.i.
>
>

↑ Index

901. David Israel
(no subject)
Mon 28 Jul 1997

Don Cheney adds this demotic note --

<< Carl's Jr. fast food out here in California has a new ad campaign that centers around the phrase "eat meat." as funny as that is, the funnier (is "funnier" a word, seems kind of, well, funny) thing is that they are handing out bumper-stickers portraying a yellow star with a smiling face on it and next to it the phrase:

EAT MEAT

who comes up with these ideas . . . ? . . . >>

what I'm wondering is: does this suggest a commercial attempt to capitalize on (& consolidate in language-in-circulation) a sort of contra-PC-ish-ness w.r.t. meat eating? -- i.e., the idea of an "in your face" gesture: the bumper sticker as a sign of identity ("I am what I like to eat") -- so that, in a highly bumpersticker-sensitive society, contrarian responses could be anticipated:

NOTHIN' BUT TOFU

or

BROWN RICE! (19 years & counting) or even a retro

EAT YOUR VEGETABLES!

in short: a war of the comestibles?

What I'm trying to get at here, is the observation that, evidently, the fast-fooders are feealing conceptually cornered by science facts & culture trends, and are trying to lash out / take a stand / make a statement / gather a following / or something . . . (??) -- Carl Jr. as the avant garde in a culinary campaign of carnivore reaction? . . . (just as other companies position themselves as proxies of hipness nostalgia etc.)

the language of advertising at the Carl Jr. level lacks the finesse one gets used to in pages of Vanity Fair or The New Yorker -- but then, perhaps the target audience is believed not quite as accustomed to subtlety & irony, &c. . . .

d.i.

↑ Index

902. Don Cheney
Re: THE THING
Mon 28 Jul 1997

---

david, i think you're right about what is on the minds of the fast-fooders. another funny carls jr. ad campaign is the poster in the window of the local site: a picture of a hamburger with the phrase BITE THE BIG ONE! underneath it!

seems like a conscious effort to attract kids. maybe someone can get a lawsuit started. you know, someone who's been eating at CJs for some time and has horribly clogged arteries, high cholesterol, etc. lawsuits could be combined mirroring the recent tobacco company lawsuits (2nd hand smoke/nicotine/Joe Camel). these lawsuits would target CJ for the myriad of problems caused by consuming meat and with deliberately targeting/enticing kids to eat meat.

and targeting kids is just the start. i'm sure something could be worked up for mcdonalds targeting the black community AND kids, etc.

don

david israel wrote:
>What I'm trying to get at here, is the observation that, evidently, the fast-fooders >are feealing conceptually cornered by science facts & culture trends, and are >trying to lash out / take a stand / make a statement / gather a following / or >something . . . (??) -- Carl Jr. as the avant garde in a culinary campaign of >carnivore reaction? . . . (just as other companies position themselves as proxies >of hipness nostalgia etc.)
>
>the language of advertising at the Carl Jr. level lacks the finesse one gets used to >in pages of Vanity Fair or The New Yorker -- but then, perhaps the target >audience is believed not quite as accustomed to subtlety & irony, &c. . . .
>
>d.i.

↑ Index

903. David Israel
Re: THE THING
Mon 28 Jul 1997

---

quiet these days at the listserv corral -- all gone to Bermuda or the Hamptons? -- (we lingering hangabouts must carry on?) --

from Don Cheney --

<< ... seems like a conscious effort to attract kids. maybe someone can get a lawsuit started. you know, someone who's been eating at CJs for some time and has horribly clogged arteries, high cholesterol, etc. lawsuits could be combined mirroring the recent tobacco company lawsuits (2nd hand smoke/nicotine/Joe Camel). . . . >> unlikely in the near term (by & large, burgers in our culture aren't so much given up as transcended; -- and then rarely absolutely) -- but as for Joe C, there was this cartoon in last week's New Yorker:

two boys (in t-shrts & shorts & sneakers & baseball caps) are standing at a street corner, smokin' ciggies -- says one:

I was all set to quit, but when the bastards killed off Joe Camel I swore -- never.

d.i.

↑ Index

904. L.MacMahon and T.R.Healy

aliens landing

Tue 29 Jul 1997

Maurice Scully, Catherine Walsh, Billy Mills and Randolph Healy will be travelling from Ireland to read and discuss their work at Brown University on the 3rd and 4th of September.

If any kind soul was interested in helping to arrange other readings while we're all in the U.S. of A they can contact me at the above e-mail address

best wishes

Randolph Healy

↑ Index

905. Layne Russell

Re: Yvonne Rainer . . .

Tue 29 Jul 1997

Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson wrote:
>
> For those interested, there is a longish and info-packed interview with > Yvonne Rainer in the July "Art in America." Chronicles early dance, > performance, shift to film, personal live, family history, zeitgeist > particularities, politics, etc. Enjoyable, too. Interview by Thyrsa > Goodeve.

thank you, thank you! will find. Yvonne was very inspirational to me...spoke my language, at least some of it...along with Barbara Dilly.

layne

[redacted]
http://www.sonic.net/layne
"A Quiet Place" -- Poetry

http://www.sonic.net/layne/calendar.html
"Poets Leave Their Prints" -- Poetry Calendar

↑ Index

906. L.MacMahon and T.R.Healy body dance
Tue 29 Jul 1997

---

cris wrote:

>>>Basil Bunting
declared that 'Poetry must be read aloud'. How many do that. And when they do, how aware are they of the subtle particularities of what Steve Paxton calls the small dance , taking place in their bodies?

Any thoughts? I'm keen to hear on this<<<

This is something which has interested me for some time. The entire body is continually mapping and consulting with what becomes constructed at various levels as realities. In one model it absorbs/seeks out about one hundred billion bits per second, the mind/perception at the same time swimming in a data space many many times this size. This raises all sorts of interesting questions. Clearly not all of this activity is conscious. However, by subconscious I do not mean the gizmo laden productions of Freud et al. Not that I am necessarily against, or for, them. I simply mean to refer to a well of far from raw data/experience which is not always available at will.

Memories can seem to lodge in the body, one can see people fall into coherent posture-dialects as they talk about particular things. I am interested in seeing how this might relate to the creative process. By focusing in a meditative way on particular parts of the body, e.g. the feet, subtler and subtler sensations arise which may then transform into images or sounds. There are also breathing techniques which stimulate "dead" parts by altering the oxygen/carbon dioxide balance. (This can lead to a full body orgasm. You have been warned.) Temperature is another medium. I tried things like somatic meditations in a sauna longer and longer times (drink lots of water before and after). And texture: walking incredibly slowly in bare feet and noticing every sensation. When doing any of these exercises, I would avoid having any desire to come out of it bearing a hot little poem in my hand. Rather the idea is to open out in general, to enjoy doing nothing, to notice the subconscious (I have an idea that it can get quite crotchety if ignored constantly or indeed if it feels one is exploiting it for creative software), to remember that I have a body.

Yes and yes to reading aloud. And to noticing.

Randolph Healy

↑ Index

907. Maria Damon
Re: THE THING
Tue 29 Jul 1997

At 6:27 PM -0400 7/28/97, Don Cheney wrote: >david, i think you're right about what is on the minds of the fast-fooders.
>another funny carls jr. ad campaign is the poster in the window of the >local site: a picture of a hamburger with the phrase BITE THE BIG ONE!
>underneath it!
>

one of the things i miss about the bay area is the visibility of the gay community and its humor. the first time i saw that burger joint in the castro called Hot n Hunky was a moment of sheer delight. Seriously, though, i think the meat industry is indeed in a backlash, viz the new "in the zone" food combining diet and its emphasis on meat.

↑ Index

908. Robert Hale
Re: elaborating multiples
Tue 29 Jul 1997

The characterization of various poets as later-day practioners of various schools could apply to anyone, anytime, anyplace, and threatens to spark another banal influence/originality thread. The issue is how and why do these poets use these influences time and again to write. As far as changing forms constantly -- that's a good thing, but as a reading of your own work, it takes on characteristics of progress, evolution and technology. Critiquing one's own work is a bit like the transference in psychoanalysis. This would eclipse the idea that you can "do whatever you want in poetry," also the historical determinism you outline is still a specter to us all. I'm sure you would agree that history is still dialectical (despite the power of the irony you describe), and its tensions give rise to the choices poets make in how and what they write.

At 03:37 PM 7/23/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Thanks very much, Jordan, for suggesting that I might say more! What could >be more fun than elaborating!
>
> I think, in this case, that Henry Gould's comment is almost >exactly what I mean--a conscious multiplicity of form in a writer might >seek a radical alteration of formal perspective from book to book, from >poem to poem, or even within a single poem. It's one of the things my own >poetry has been about, frankly. My first book was very much about >shifts in perspective from line to line; I've done very lyrical work like >in my Standing Stones chapbook and in things like the Oblek anthology; I >published a book of Sonnets last year (not quite traditional ones); I've >worked with chance and "deterministic" techniques in an issue of Abacus; >and my soon to be available Edge Book might be taken for Ron Silliman-like >parataxis if I >didn't so consistently lack his intelligence. Some books I've done have >been more or less in a single structure which I then don't use again; >other things I've done shift structure within the work. I published in >AVEC, "The Necessity of Feet" a 12-page poem in which the >form of each page was consciously different, and I've done that several >other times as well. I've been pushing this structural shift within works >lately; I've got a piece I think of as a long (about 50 page) poem in >which I try to call up as many different structural shifts as I can think >of, although certain structures do repeat (I'm not so interested in >complete differences of structure as I am in the tension between >similarity and difference in structure).

>
>So that's where I'm at. What this attempt has to do with the work of other >writers of my generation is not clear. Certainly my attempt is NOT new or >particular to this moment in time, but I'm less interested in whether it's >new as in whether it feels worthwhile at this moment, and I think it does.
>By no means do I think of my own attempt as characterizing the work of >other writers of my generation--it clearly does NOT characterize them, or >at least more than some of them. But while I am sympathetic to Henry's >assertion that the matter CAN'T be considered from merely a generational >perspective, what I DO think is true is that many writers of my own >generation (which is more or less yours, Jordan, I guess, maybe) have a >different relation to the history of the poetries we've >read. And I think the difference is THIS; that because of historical >circumstances, many of us have learned about more differing traditions of >poetry than any previous generation of writers, which gives us both >increasing options as well as increasing irony about the idea that some >"new" direction in poetry is going to save or make anybody. Some of my >langauge poetry friends describe coming up in a time where repression of >poetic possibilities seemed the rule, but equally a time in which they >seem to have felt that their poetic revolution would be heard, someplace >or other. My own sense is more like I can do anything I want in poetry, >with little chance of it being heard anywhere. This is a bit of an >exaggeration, of course, but it's like what they say about freedom of >speech in the U.S.--you can say what you want because nobody's >listening. I don't, for the most part, encounter students or even >professors who are "resistant" to formally experimental poetry, or who >desire formally traditional verse. I encounter students and professors who >usually don't read any contemporary poetry at all. There are obviously a >few exceptions, but I do mean a FEW. And certainly it's true that more >formally conservative approaches still get most of whatever CASH there is >in poetry.

>
>Non-poetry people are probably not the point, of course, so I'll get >back to the subject. In his forthcoming article, Mark Ducharme is right >that my arguments don't DESCRIBE the writers of my generation. But I never >meant them to. Still, what IS at stake in a description of such writers?
>And I think there are some pretty interesting answers here. If these >writers are characterized by "diversity," then we're describing a kind of >free-for-all smorgasborg of writers borrowing from various traditions all >of which are okay. But we're not NECESSARILY describing writers with >consciousness about form, or writers working out of any more than singular >traditions. IN the worst case scenario, for my money, we all end up >seeming borrowers of earlier and more vital traditions--Jordan Davis and >Lee Ann Brown are latter-day New York School, Rod Smith and Jefferson >Hansen are latter-day language poets, Jennifer Moxley likes traditional >lyrics, Lisa Jarnot is just imitating Bernadette Mayer. And I've heard >enough arguments LIKE that to know that the risk that things will be taken >that way is real. But it would also, of course, be wrong.
>
>So I see a number of reasons for polemically asserting the value NOT of a >free smorgasborg of traditions but of a conscious shifting, rearranging, >and perhaps violating of the various poetic frameworks which existed >before we did and which became part of our education. I'm not sure whether >Joel's post indicated some annoyance with ME that these issues keep coming >up, but as long as people keeping asking questions like "What's >next?" I see a value in trying to answer them, even if part of that answer >must be a deconstruction of the question. And the issue is NOT simply >about anxiety regarding language poetry--it's about finding poetic >structures that make SENSE as a response to the world in which we find >ourselves. And I don't think that's a question that any poet can really >avoid. My saying that, of course, won't make it so--I think where Mark D's >point about diversity has the drop on me is that MY conviction about what >matters will never be everybody else's. Thankfully, I guess, and not, I >guess.
>
>Mark Wallace

```
>
>
>/-----------------------------------------------------------------------\
>|                                                                       |
>|     [redacted]                                                        |
>|     GWU:                                                              |
>|      http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw                                   |
>|     EPC:                                                              |
>|      http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace                     |
>|_______________________________________________________________________|
>
>
```

↑ Index

909. David Kellogg

back after breather: still looking for Erica Hunt

Tue 29 Jul 1997

Hello all,

I'm back after a one-month unannounced hiatus -- went out of town, set poetics to nomail, liked the peace and quiet for a while but am back in the fray now.

Hope nobody tried to contact me via the list.

I'm still trying to contact Erica Hunt, by the way -- anybody have contact information? Thanks!

Cheers,
David

910. henry g
Re: elaborating multiples
Tue 29 Jul 1997

On Tue, 29 Jul 1997 08:12:17 -0700 Robert Hale said:
>The characterization of various poets as later-day practioners of various >schools could apply to anyone, anytime, anyplace, and threatens to spark >another banal influence/originality thread. The issue is how and why do >these poets use these influences time and again to write. As far as changing >forms constantly -- that's a good thing, but as a reading of your own work, >it takes on characteristics of progress, evolution and technology.
>Critiquing one's own work is a bit like the transference in psychoanalysis.
>This would eclipse the idea that you can "do whatever you want in poetry," >also the historical determinism you outline is still a specter to us all.
>I'm sure you would agree that history is still dialectical (despite the >power of the irony you describe), and its tensions give rise to the choices >poets make in how and what they write.

"Critiquing one's own work" does bring up the problem of recursive logic or the endless hall of mirrors effect (if it's not just conflict of interest). Is it possible that in the real world poetry and criticism work in tandem - the critics reading back into the work of the past in the context of history & the clash of world-views in order to discover authentic - deep sense - what redeems the time - & poets meanwhile implanting "how to read" directions in their poems based on their own prior critique/borrowings of past endeavors... but then recursiveness is built into nature, & poets should be able to talk about what they're doing, even if it's to lead astray - & who are these poets & critics? & what is authentic poetry? do individuals exist in writing - or is there an impersonal standard & an impersonal memory & a tradition implanted in languages we are trying to re-en-act? (or overturn?) Say what, Socrates? Can you dance to it? Repent to it? ? = ?[?] - Henry g.

↑ Index

911. Gwyn McVay
Re: back after breather: still looking for Erica Hunt
Tue 29 Jul 1997

Speaking of looking for people, does anyone have contact info for Juliana Spahr, Lois-Ann Yamanaka, Bob Perelman, or Kevin Davies? Asking on behalf of fellow Masonites--or Mason's Children, or however you prefer; honorable intentions only, nothing satirical planned.

bests
Gwyn

↑ Index

912. David Israel
Re: elaborating multiples
Tue 29 Jul 1997

Henry G [avuncular sideman / pseudonymous alterego / parallel-universe avatar: the Double Life of Kenny G? -- pardon, just noting the letters] writes

<< "Critiquing one's own work" does bring up the problem of recursive logic or the endless hall of mirrors effect . . . Is it possible that in the real world . . . poets . . .implant... "how to read" directions in their poems . . . but then recursiveness is built into nature, & poets should be able to talk about what they're doing, even if it's to lead astray - & who are these poets & critics? ....>> that "recursiveness is built into nature" is one to ponder -- well said.

This discussion calls to mind (you'll pardon a putative mainstreamism?) ex-laureate Mark Strand's little vol The Monument, which has (if memory serves) an explicit conceit w.r.t. how it's intended to be read, to wit:

in translation.

The book claims (as I recall) that it's really written for purpose of being read (centuries -- or so -- later) in translation. I didn't happen to reach the end of the poem (but no matter, I was reading the English original, & so wouldn't "get it" anyway). Ergo can't elaborate on this authorial conceit; -- but perhaps this book does address (or skirt around, or circumambulate, or carry to market, or . . .) a few of the issues that might be at issue here. ...

d.i.

↑ Index

913. Alan J Sondheim
Stentar Caeruleus (fwd)
Wed 30 Jul 1997

--

Stentar Caeruleus

Breath leaves a carpse, carrying anly
Final banes af wards always, and anly
Skein af blaad and entrails, anly
Wards ance wet with mauth's tangue, anly

Palisades crest apen, merely Carry crests af signs, sa merely Spaken by the dead mauths, merely Mauth wards wet and distraught, merely

Anly carpse blanks death's trap, breath
Anly banes and wards are ever final,
Anly entrails snare life's skein,
Anly tangues mauth dead wet wards,

Merely crassing palisades, Merely farming crests that carry,
Merely what was never spaken,
Merely tangue sharn fram the mauth,

Merry, lanely, brat's skin af swards
Tarry fusillades, gare braken shauts.

↑ Index

914. Lawrence Upton
UK reading
Wed 30 Jul 1997

In case anyone on the list will be in UK or has friends they might want to tell...

The reading on 28 8 97 by Jane Augustine, Ed Foster, Michael Heller, & Burt Kimmelman has already been announced here but this is to confirm that it is at the usual venue

Upstairs
The Three Cups
Sandland Street
London WC 1

Holborn tube

Admission five pounds or two pounds fifty for the unwaged unrich

After that, the next readings involving Sub Voicive Poetry are

19 9 97 Worlds of New Measure: Clive Bush, Bill Griffiths, Barry MacSweeney and others

23 9 97 Jerome Rothenberg / Pierre Joris

a full listing for the coming season will be posted here at the same time as the London-based postal mailshot later this month

L

↑ Index

915. Lawrence Upton
Quantity & Quality
Wed 30 Jul 1997

<<Interested in hearing what people have to say about "quality and quantity". That familiar "s/he's too prolific" can be pretty irksome for poets at times. It is most frequently levelled at those poets who are "experimenting" with language - one digression per financial year being more than enough... Fiction writers tend not to get it as much, and for "genre" writers it's usually seen as a plus!>>

i am never forget an ancient tv image of robert graves tough and wiry and game playing and bossy showing how he put together a poem line by line draft by draft - there was more than an element of someone saying _This is how you must deal with bills of lading_

and then he summed up the page count per year, whatever it was, and said _It's not very much, is it?_ with considerable satisfaction

it's a strange idea and in UK at least seems to be associated with the mean spirited everything has gone down hill since we were romans nonsense, culling bits of beauty from the wastes of time, the lonely poet struggling for perfection

Some people produce more than others for sure but I can't see any relationship between quantity and quality as such - there are certainly those who might publish more interesting work if they looked at their typescripts before issuing them - but being careless isnt the same thing as being prolific

L

↑ Index

916. Henry
Re: elaborating multiples
Wed 30 Jul 1997

the only really interesting subject [according to the Mouth of Gould on Wed. a.m. in Providence] despite many dixcursions & cursed reasonings about phonemes, parallelograms, quarks of style, & so forth, is the relation between public & private & poetwy's pwace therein [if it has one] mainstweam poetwy demonstrates recursiveness in the turbid flow patterns of echolalia & hype [Jorie Graham's dog has the same name as my neme-sis]

"language poetry" is a recursive statement right here [referring back on itself into the prima don materio]

"caustic" is a term in billiard mathematics having to do with endless repetition of bounces within concentric circles poetry writes itself into a corner & then recognizes itself in the strange idiom in the other room

it will remain undefined because only YOU can create forest fires sifted letter by letter, line by line [Isaiah taunts the sepulchres with a recursive curse: see Sir Thomas Browne on the eternity of human monuments (there is none)] [Browne, _Urn Burial & the Garden of Cyrus_ - a GREAT read] - Hank O'RI

↑ Index

917. henry gould
Re: email address
Wed 30 Jul 1997

Hello John Kinsella - Ed Foster's email is [redacted] - but I'm not sure how much he reads it. You could ask Joel Lewis, who is an assoc. editor I think - he's at [redacted]

- Henry Gould

↑ Index

918. John Kinsella
Quantity & Quality
Wed 30 Jul 1997

Interested in hearing what people have to say about "quality and quantity". That familiar "s/he's too prolific" can be pretty irksome for poets at times. It is most frequently levelled at those poets who are "experimenting" with language - one digression per financial year being more than enough... Fiction writers tend not to get it as much, and for "genre" writers it's usually seen as a plus!

Best
JK

↑ Index

919. Christopher Alexander
Tax Bill Details
Wed 30 Jul 1997

I thought this might be of interest to some list members (I hope so, anyway). it was forwarded to me from a local (to me, that is) member of the National Association of Graduate & Professional Students (I like that bit about "professional students"), who are preparing to meet with our local Representative, Merrill Cook, over some of the issues raised below. best, Chris

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------

For all who have been in suspense of how the chips are falling -- here's an update

7/24/97

NAGPS Update
Conference Report on Tax Bill Released
Kevin Boyer, NAGPS Executive Director

 Thanks to NAICU, CGS and the Chronicle of Higher Ed for help in accessing this information **

The Republican agreement on the Tax Bill has been made public via a report from the Joint Committee on Taxation titled "Summary of Conference Agreeement Relating to the Major Revenue Provisions of HR 2014 "The Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1987." NAGPS is still attempting to get clarification on some of the provisions of interest to grad students. This update will focus just on graduation/professional students - a future update may broaden the information to include various tax proposals of interest to undergraduates.

1. 117d - WE WIN!

As promised over the last 3 weeks, section 117d of the Internal Revenue Code was not eliminated from the tax code in the conference bill. Though language does not appear in the summary, this is being interpreted as an indication that the conferees chose to leave Section 117d of the Internal Revenue Code alone. NAGPS was promised by conferees' staff that graduate teaching and research assistants would be protected ("we get the message," they said). The tax exemption of undergraduate tuition benefits for faculty, staff and dependents of university employees appears to have also survived. Many have suggested to us that the work of the grad students on the tuition waiver tax issue may have pulled the faculty/staff benefits with it in the minds of the conferees. We are thrilled that the Senate position prevailed, and appreciate the hard work of the House members (both Republican and Democratic) who worked to ensure 117d remained part of the tax code.

2. 127 - WE LOSE!

Section 127 of the Internal Revenue Code allows for employer provided educational assistance to be given to an employee without that benefit accruing tax on the first $5,250 of the benefit. Present law expired for undergraduate tuition on 5/31/97, and for graduate tuition on 6/30/96. The Senate position was to make Section 127 permanent for undergrads and grads. The House position was to extend Section 127 for undergrads only through 12/31/97. The conferees chose to extend Section 127 for undergrads only through 6/30/00 (3 years).

We are disappointed in this development and we urge students and their families to contact the White House to ask that the president push for the original Senate position in this legislation. The Senate position has broad bipartisan support in both the House and the Senate.

3. Student Loan Interest Deduction - WE WIN!

If this legislation becomes law, student loan interest will be tax deductible for the first time since 1986! This has been at the top of the NAGPS legislation agenda for 10 years and we are ecstatic that the Senate provision survived the conference. President Clinton has indicated strong support for this provision, as well. Thanks should go to the Senators on the Finance committee, particularly Senators Grassley, Moynihan and Roth, for their support of this provision.

The win is not completely untainted, however. The original Senate provision allowed for an up to $2,500 deduction for interest payments for the first five years of repayment. This provision would have been phased out for single taxpayers earning between $40K and $50K. Married taxpayers would have had the phase out between $80K and $100K if filing jointly. The conference position increases the phaseout for single taxpayers, phasing out between $40K and $50K. The married phase out, however, was dropped to from between $60 and $75K. This reduction essentially punishes married couples if both work.

The idea behind the $2,500 deduction is to help graduate students manage their post-graduation debt. This debt for some professional students exceeds $100,000. NAGPS supports a return to the original Senate position on the married couples phase out and we will urge the President to stand firm to avoid this marriage penalty.

4. Tuition Tax Credit - UNCLEAR

The conference position on tuition tax credits is not yet clear to us. The conferees accepted the Senate position of a $1,500 credit for the first two years of college (Hope scholarship). However, the tuition tax credit beyond the first two years is only 5% of up to $5,000 in expenses. (This translates to a $250 reduction in tax liability for those paying $5,000 or more in tuition). The Joint Conference Committee report says "5% credit for up to $5,000 of expenses for education after second year of college." On the surface, this would seem to imply that graduate education would qualify for the tuition tax credit, as well. However, today's Wall Street Journal says that the tax credit is available for students in their 3rd and 4th years of college. The WSJ article doesn't suggest that the credit will NOT be available for graduate education - indeed, the WSJ reporter may not have even thought of graduate education.

NAGPS has phone calls into the tax staffers to gain clarification on this issue.

If graduate education qualifies for a tuition tax credit, we will be pleased to have something in this part of the bill. However, this is a far cry from the President's proposal of a 20% tax credit on up to $5,000 in tuition through the year 2000 and 20% tax credit on up to $10,000 in tuition afterward. The President's proposal is 4 times better over the next 3 years and 8 times better after that. While a $250 credit would be welcome, NAGPS continues to strongly favor the President's proposal. We will be asking the President to clarify the tax credit to ensure that it goes for graduate education, and ask him to negotiate for a higher tax credit than 5%.

5. IRA withdrawals - WE WIN!

The proposal to allow for penalty-free withdrawals from all IRAs for undergraduate, post-secondary vocational, and graduate education expenses was included in the compromise bill.

6. Education IRAs - WE WIN!

The Senate proposal to allow for Education IRAs that could be used, tax-free, for undergraduate and graduate education was included in the compromise bill (the House version would have extended many of the benefits to undergraduate tuition only).

####

In summary, the Conference Agreement provides some real tangible tax relief to graduate/professional students. We are relieved that in many cases, the Senate negotiators prevailed on the Senate position, since the House bill had little or nothing in it that focused on graduate education.

NAGPS is disappointed that some of the provisions in the Senate bill were apparently lost in conference. We are particularly concerned about Section 127, the married income phase-out for the Student Loan Interest Deduction, and the decision to lower the tuition tax credit beyond the first two years of school (and the lack of clarity on this issue as it applies to graduate education).

Interested graduate/professional students should communicate a strong pro-education message to the White House, asking that the President continue to strongly negotiate for the provisions that were in his original proposals and which will benefit graduate education. We appreciate the President's support of graduate/professional education and encourage him to keep this vital segment of our nation's post-secondary educational system at the top of his list when negotiating with the Congress.

Specific details on the message we will recommend, and to whom you should direct your comments will be forthcoming in the next several hours. In the meantime, you may direct email messages to the President at [redacted], and to the Vice President at [redacted]. Watch our web site for sample text, additional contact names, numbers and email addresses, and more updates.

In summary, NAGPS is very proud of the role we have played in preserving tax benefits for the nation's graduate TAs and RAs. But we are even prouder of the strong citizen advocacy of our nation's graduate/professional students. Those of you who exercised your democratic right to participate in the political process are really the reason we saved 117d, and your voices were definitely heard. Please don't stop now - negotiations on the tax bill continue, and appropriations legislation and higher education reauthorization legislation now take center stage. Without your voices, NAGPS is not as strong in Washington, DC.

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

920. Burt Kimmelman
Re: email address
Wed 30 Jul 1997

---

as far as i know ed foster's address (talisman) is down for now.

↑ Index

921. dbkk
Anne-Marie Albiach tribute at SPT
Wed 30 Jul 1997

Before I announce this event, I'd like to tell all the U.S. and Canadian poets on the list who signed the Anne-Marie Albiach birthday cards that Norma Cole delivered them to Albiach, and Albiach was so thrilled that she called Kevin and me yesterday--our second phone call ever from France! So thank you all for making this project a success.

Dodie

Small Press Traffic presents

Bon Anniversaire!
a celebration of the 60th birthday of Anne-Marie Albiach readings and hommages by

Norma Cole
Barbara Guest
Benjamin Hollander
Michael Palmer
Mary Margaret Sloan
Cole Swensen

Friday, August 8, 1997
7:30 p.m.
New College Theater
777 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Gâteau will be served!

Anne-Marie Albiach, one of the most important writers of today, lives quietly in Neuilly-sur-Seine (France). Six American admirers will toast her long distance and read from her work at this, the opening of Small Press Traffic¹s 23th season. ³There is no other poetry like Albiach¹s in the world,² wrote Paul Auster. ³Even at its most difficult its passions are mesmerizing.² Rosmarie Waldrop has characterized Albiach¹s poetry as ³words broken off by silence, the edges rough, giving off sparks like live wires.² Please join us for this important jour de fête.

↑ Index

922. John Kinsella
email address
Wed 30 Jul 1997

Would anyone have an editorial email address for Talisman they could backchannel to me?

Thanks.

Best JK

↑ Index

923. p. durgin
Campus by night
Wed 30 Jul 1997

GRIMEY OLIVE

Do emote. Try. Freesweet sugar.
In sheer night of sea-imitation
        Insistence of ground loop.
        Joint justification of the couplet.
    Awful good, pack your tick, cruel Bicker, bewilder thick, pointed Vilification of the luckwit.
                Another affecting trammel.
          A standing lunch rush. In-Iquitously prep chef hopes Into leaf bed. Must be moral Function, no peregrine langor.

HIRSUTE PEACH

        So-called edens of commodified melancholy
        To become uncritically devoted, disinherited Of lunch smite. That's a bad bunch out to Accoutre the fields beyond your chill green lawn.
    Awful good bewilder, standing rush to freesweet Sugar in luckwit. No peregrine langor, no nymph.
Joint justification of fore. Low relief as Grimey olives, hirsute peach, resistence at The core. Intermittance is after all not Perturbed constance. Do emotry.

              I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

↑ Index

924. Stephen C. Ellwood
You have no hearts,
Wed 30 Jul 1997

(She had a grave loss. You wouldn't know about this kind.)

She is alone. He was so slight, and so precious, and she loved him inhumanly. The way you won't let her say, cause of the stains But he loved the stains and would smell them with his mouth open (they have a special gland or receptor for smelling in the mouth, in the memorymouth)and then lick 'em. And he's dead, Get it! Dead, like the ballerina I mentioned, dead of hunger and struggle, but Him he died from a crushing force. He's the lucky one, cause She bears the weight now for ever. A ten ton truck. He was only the wieght of a snake. He was only the size of her head and he slept there and suckled and she should get Prizes and Bills and Boyfriends galore for her strength in this matter, just crying. And soothing and sniffing and being herself which is wickedly special. But you don't care cause it's a drag to see sadness and hope nonetheless.

↑ Index

925. John Kinsella
Re: email address
Wed 30 Jul 1997

Thanks - have the addresses now.

Best
JK

↑ Index

926. lee ann brown
Re: NYC Sublet/Share
Thu 31 Jul 1997

Poets & Friends! NEW YORK CITY SUBLET/ SHARE

Poet, Bernadette Mayer is looking for someone to sublet a room in her apartment on 4th Street & Avenue A in the East Village while she's in the countryside.
August & September, or portions thereof.
Rent: $450/ month.
Please contact: Marie Warsh at [redacted] or Bernadette Mayer or Phil Good at [redacted].

or write them at:
[redacted] (POET PHILIP S GOOD)

Thanks, Lee Ann Brown

(Dear Webmaster: You may've gotten a strange/partial version of this: I'm not sure.)

↑ Index

927. Hugh Steinberg
Re: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

John Kinsella writes:

> Interested in hearing what people have to say about "quality and quantity". That familiar "s/he's too prolific" can be pretty irksome for poets at times. It is most frequently levelled at those poets who are "experimenting" with language - one digression per financial year being more than enough... Fiction writers tend not to get it as much, and for "genre" writers it's usually seen as a plus!

Actually, I've heard mention of the "Joyce Carol Oates" effect, where the prolificacy of the writer overwhelms the reader, leading to a sort of ho-hum response irregardless of the quality of the book at hand.

Also, speaking more specifically of poets here, there is often a huge gap between what is written and what is published. Even when I keep all my poems in the mail for consideration, my success rate is usually only one in ten. It takes months to get a response, and if I'm lucky enough to get accepted, six months or more will pass before the poem actually is in print. Sometimes it will apppear as if I'm being prolific because several publications will occur at roughly the same time, but those poems may have been written over the course of years (I just got a poem accepted that's seven years old).

I don't think quantity vs. quality is a particularly useful way of looking at writing or writers. Is George Oppen or Elizabeth Bishop good or bad poets because they didn't write that many poems? Is Allen Ginsberg a good or bad poet because he did write a lot of poems? Do all the lousy poems a writer cranks out make the good poems less good? Do long periods of silence drown out good writing? Some writers churn out lots of work, others don't. Some are vegetarians, others like really greasy cheeseburgers. I'd like to think poems are judged irregardless of any writer's work (or eating) habits.

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

928. Charles Alexander
Re: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

> In San Francisco I go to a lot of poetry readings and am constantly trying to maintain my composure when someone gets up to the stage and says, this poem is in fifty numbered sections each with seven parts and an epigraph from Levinas and I wrote it in response to, then they look out at the > audience and sigh, oh, I should just read the poem. And I'm there mumbling, no, what you should do is read for about eleven minutes and use the rest of the time to go home and do the laundry.

On the other hand, I remember hearing Thom Gunn read when I was an undergraduate, I think even a bare freshman. Thom was/is pretty amazing, but his long introduction to his poem Moly (I believe this was the one) included a full reading of a Robert Duncan poem which had occasioned Gunn to write his poem. It was the first I had heard of Duncan, and it seemed that the Duncan poem was so marvelous and rich that it overshadowed Gunn's poem. Still, I owe it to Gunn that I began from that point to read Duncan's work. And Gunn is still a poet I greatly respect as well. So, although it's rare, very good things can happen in those long overtures to reading.

charles
chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision handmade and trade editions of contemporary innovative writing [redacted] :: http://personal.riverusers.com/~chax/

↑ Index

929. Joel Felix
John Taggart Reading Chicago
Thu 31 Jul 1997

LVNG magazine and The Newberry Library will host John Taggart tonight at 6 p.m. in the Newberry Library Bookstore 60 W. Walton, Chicago IL

All are welcome. LVNG will have a special edition broadside in honor of the gathering. We also are hoping Anne-Marie Albiach phones. A joke.

There's an idea. Red phones on tables at readings.
The living could call to protest appropiation. The dead to reveal thievery. Who will call John Taggart tonight, and what might they say? All eyes are on the phone.

↑ Index

930. dbkk
Re: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

Hugh Steinberg wrote:

> John Kinsella writes:
>
> Interested in hearing what people have to say about "quality and quantity". That familiar "s/he's too prolific" can be pretty irksome for poets at times. It is most frequently levelled at those poets who are "experimenting" with language - one digression per financial year being more than enough... Fiction writers tend not to get it as much, and for "genre" writers it's usually seen as a plus!
>
> Actually, I've heard mention of the "Joyce Carol Oates" effect, where the prolificacy of the writer overwhelms the reader, leading to a sort of ho-hum response irregardless of the quality of the book at hand.

This is Kevin Killian and this is so true!

I was reading this book "Robert Penn Warren" by Joseph Blotner and thinking, if Robert Penn Warren writes one more book of poetry and wins one more Pulitzer Prize I'm going to break down in tears! Finally, he dies (oops, should have used some spoiler space). Anyway I knew very little about Robert Penn Warren before reading this book and now I feel I know too much.

How about the Janet Dailey scandal? (She is the US romance writer who, confronted with charges that she plagiarized a few of her books from the work of Nora Roberts, confessed to her fans that in 1990 and 1991 she was suffering from a psychological disturbance she did not, until now, even know she had!) I say, if one could write 200 books oneself, why steal 1 or 2 from one's rival . . . the Eve Harrington to one's own Margo Channing.

> I don't think quantity vs. quality is a particularly useful way of looking at writing or writers.

I do. Maybe not at writing but at writers. There's a psychological disturbance in writing in any case. "Are George Oppen or Elizabeth Bishop good or bad poets because they didn't write that many poems?" In Oppen's case the poems he wrote in later life suggest to me a desperation about catching up after 25 years of silence, guilt about Stalinism, guilt about bowing to whoever or whatever it was told him to stop writing, etc. In Bishop's case there was the alcoholism and the tension about keeping her sexual life a secret. Yet these two actually managed to write quite a bit. I'm sure both of them had days when they sat there trying to remember in which book did I have the image of the fish, etc.

We all know writers who have written way too much, though we do not speak their names, perhaps due to an obscure reaction to our own feeling of living in a glass house! In the Penn Warren book he is often quoted as complaining that X or Y have "written themselves out," a kind of self-erasure like a Max Fleischer cartoon of the eraser working its way backwards around the outlined figure.

In San Francisco I go to a lot of poetry readings and am constantly trying to maintain my composure when someone gets up to the stage and says, this poem is in fifty numbered sections each with seven parts and an epigraph from Levinas and I wrote it in response to, then they look out at the audience and sigh, oh, I should just read the poem. And I'm there mumbling, no, what you should do is read for about eleven minutes and use the rest of the time to go home and do the laundry.

PS, John Kinsella, have these charges (or "writing too much") been levelled at you?

Thanks.
--A querulous San Francisco crank.

↑ Index

931. Gwyn McVay
Overglossing a reading--was Re: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

The over-glossing thing can turn a reading into self-parody before syllable one of the poem has been spoken. I was at a reading in New York State this summer where the poet confessed charmingly that she was making her "very own Zen rock garden" in her back yard by lugging around rocks--and then offered a dark aside, with a little laugh, that she spent so much time back of the house out lugging around rocks that her husband (whom she glanced at) probably thought she was having an affair. This was rather more than I wanted to know, and I don't remember the poem nearly so well as its intro.

o well. Your mileage may vary.
Gwyn

↑ Index

932. Don Cheney
Crankiness: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

---

kevin, thanks for this slice of poetic life. funny stuff!
don

> In San Francisco I go to a lot of poetry readings and am constantly trying to maintain my composure when someone gets up to the stage and says, this poem is in fifty numbered sections each with seven parts and an epigraph from Levinas and I wrote it in response to, then they look out at the audience and sigh, oh, I should just read the poem. And I'm there mumbling, no, what you should do is read for about eleven minutes and use the rest of the time to go home and do the laundry.

↑ Index

933. Maria Damon
Re: Overglossing a reading--was Re: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

At 10:49 AM -0400 7/31/97, Gwyn McVay wrote:
>The over-glossing thing can turn a reading into self-parody before >syllable one of the poem has been spoken. I was at a reading in New York >State this summer where the poet confessed charmingly that she was making her >"very own Zen rock garden" in her back yard by lugging around rocks--and >then offered a dark aside, with a little laugh, that she spent so much >time back of the house out lugging around rocks that her husband (whom she >glanced at) probably thought she was having an affair. This was rather >more than I wanted to know, and I don't remember the poem nearly so well >as its intro.
>
>o well. Your mileage may vary.
>Gwyn

i myself have been guilty of such excessive self-disclosure. at one panel, i was surrounded by other panelists, in very adanced states of pregnancy and with large diamond studded rings announcing their matrimonial respectability. they even made comments about it during their talks, which brimmed over w/ feminine/feminist-theological imagery of the old school. this put me over the edge so when i got up to do my thing i crankily announced that i was not pregnant, not married, not christian and probably not really a woman. they felt terrible of course and i felt some remorse. on another occasion, the queer beats conference in fact, i don't really know what i said, but at the party afterward, robert gluck was describing some text or other to me as an "abject narrative," then said, "well, you've probably written some of those yourself."

↑ Index

934. simon
help with G. Spivak
Thu 31 Jul 1997

This is probably so obvious/available I should be too embarrassed to ask (but obviously not):

Does anyone have/know the reference, cite, general idea of where I can find Spivak's use of "strategic essentialism"?

It is Spivak, right?

thanks hugely,

beth simon
[redacted]

↑ Index

935. Judy Roitman
Re: Quality & Quantity
Thu 31 Jul 1997

> *also think arrogance toward quantity has to do with the set form of print & the idea of history, where a poem is "something made" & done & (following Lawrence) a little example of perfection--therefore we can be suspicious of quantity cuz it smacks of the contiuous present. In more living circumstances--for example a bar or cafe group that meets on a regular basis for open mics, where participants may feel compelled to do something their friends haven't heard before, or the poetry in Emily Dickinson's letters-- the poet seems to feel the need to meet each new occasion with creative force. Experimental poetry also seems very much to be acting on present, immediate needs. It's maybe a question of whether the poetry is meant to be a single object that stands against time or a continuous act of invention which is also engaged in the flow of it?*

Thanks to Elizabeth Kubie for saying this so eloquently.

Let me only add that it is getting harder and harder for me to think of each piece in isolation from the life's work, both in my own work and in contemplating others' work.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
----
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

936. Rachel Kubie
Quality & Quantity
Thu 31 Jul 1997

also think arrogance toward quantity has to do with the set form of print & the idea of history, where a poem is "something made" & done & (following Lawrence) a little example of perfection--therefore we can be suspicious of quantity cuz it smacks of the contiuous present. In more living circumstances-- for example a bar or cafe group that meets on a regular basis for open mics, where participants may feel compelled to do something their friends haven't heard before, or the poetry in Emily Dickinson's letters-- the poet seems to feel the need to meet each new occasion with creative force. Experimental poetry also seems very much to be acting on present, immediate needs. It's maybe a question of whether the poetry is meant to be a single object that stands against time or a continuous act of invention which is also engaged in the flow of it?

↑ Index

937. henry
Re: Quality & Quantity
Thu 31 Jul 1997

> *also think arrogance toward quantity has to do with the set form of print & the idea of history, where a poem is "something made" & done & (following Lawrence) a little example of perfection--therefore we can be suspicious of quantity cuz it smacks of the contiuous present. In more living circumstances--for example a bar or cafe group that meets on a regular basis for open mics, where participants may feel compelled to do something their friends haven't heard before, or the poetry in Emily Dickinson's letters-- the poet seems to feel the need to meet each new occasion with creative force. Experimental poetry also seems very much to be acting on present, immediate needs. It's maybe a question of whether the poetry is meant to be a single object that stands against time or a continuous act of invention which is also engaged in the flow of it?*

Does there need to be a polarity between print & performance? Of course there ARE differences. But what if you looked at a written/printed poem as a musical score. Then writing might be an aid to composition (in quantity large or small). & writing might make POSSIBLE multi-dimensional performances, as opposed to one-time "unrecorded" hits (or one-time recorded hits). I like the idea of a further integration of print & performance. On every level. Real poems never stand against time - they re-express time & enrich time. Why are present needs IMMEDIATE? Because they are impoverished - they lack the meta-time represented in poetry & memory. Does so-called experimental poetry renounce memory & history in order to mimic (& therefore "play a role" in) so-called "present needs"? Somebody (Stevens) said the purpose of poetry is to help people live their lives (do I have that right?). We know what impoverishment is & that it asks for a response. Is mimicry & participation the only response? Maybe it's a better response than the offer of elite traditions & values. But it might not be the only response. Ignoring history & what's been done (in print, in performance) is an experiment in conformity (the flip side of uncritical imitation). - Henry Gould

↑ Index

938. Christopher Alexander
Re: Quality & Quantity
Thu 31 Jul 1997

Judy Roitman wrrt:
> Let me only add that it is getting harder and harder for me to think of > each piece in isolation from the life's work, both in my own work and in > contemplating others' work.

"there are no individual poems" [almost writes"indivictual"]: utterance (to the phoneme) as the intersection of proliferating & un-/recoverable fields of relations (poetic, political, Literary, & commercial radio all news all the time...). nothing stands against time, only in it (whatever is/was the intention...)(whatever that means). it's getting hard to separate my own wrtg from anybody else's. (even foresworn the scare quotes). "evening swarms over the" possibly a conflation of production & reception, or just an awareness of process (every act inflects/inflected by...).

but I'm familiar with the feeling Kevin describes, that sort of "enough, already" near-dread that's really just boredom. "yes, go ahead, write one more" but I'm not driving you home. (as opposed to "talk all you want, baby, but then..."). not sure what it wld mean to evaluate a wrter on this basis, though— I've always taken it to have more to do with my own limits (if not limitations). of course, I'm not terribly prolific myself... "not to make them too too evident". can someone elaborate? ("maybe not such a careful reader after all"). the ones in parenthesis are whispers.

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

939. James Finnegan
Re: Crankiness: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

The quantity v. quality argument can get tiresome.
But when I see a writer who seems to spill out page after page after page with little regard to what's there, what's been written, it often seems to me that the writer's ignoring an implied contract between writer & reader: "your (the reader's) time will not be wasted by engaging this material, because of the effort I (the writer) put into the product." What we too often get is ego-driven wordspew--I wrote it,
so it must be wonderful, profound, entertaining...
Often I don't see any labor in the writing--I know Ginsberg's dictum of "first thought, best thought," but I don't like to think of that as an easy excuse for not weighing one's words on the page, for not making hard decisions: "this is better, than that--this is worth publishing, this should be dropped in a bottom drawer or the recycle bin."

There are some writers who need to lift their heads up from the page/screen and look around--to check to see if anybody's really reading those reams of brilliance their unreeling. Actually the internet is a perfect great black hole waiting for such writing--it can be laid out there in cyberspace and the writer can pretend thousands of interested readers are partaking of his/her bounty. "If you build it (my own personal webpage), they will come." Atleast the trees won't suffer from the profligacy of a too-prolific poet.

Finnegan

↑ Index

940. Lawrence Upton
Re: Quantity & Quality
Thu 31 Jul 1997

<<On the other hand, I remember hearing Thom Gunn read when I was an undergraduate, I think even a bare freshman. Thom was/is pretty amazing, but his long introduction to his poem Moly (I believe this was the one) included a full reading of a Robert Duncan poem which had occasioned Gunn to write his poem. It was the first I had heard of Duncan, and it seemed that the Duncan poem was so marvelous and rich that it overshadowed Gunn's poem. Still, I owe it to Gunn that I began from that point to read Duncan's work. And Gunn is still a poet I greatly respect as well. So, although it's rare, very good things can happen in those long overtures to reading.>> charles alaxander

i could do with more intros like that! many would not like to read something that wld compare so well - a generosity in acknowledgoing source and sharing excitement in others' writing - that's welcome - people rambling on about details of their lives instead of what they have made from them is something less, much less

↑ Index

941. Susan Landers
contact requests
Thu 31 Jul 1997

Someone asked for this before. Sorry for the repetition, but could someone backchannel Mark Doty's email address to me? Thanks.

P.S. And to up the ante some more: if anyone can has a contact with Ashbery, I'd love that as well.

Sue
[redacted]

↑ Index

942. Don Cheney
san diego only
Thu 31 Jul 1997

---

for those of you in san diego and who can get the ucsd channel:

Artists On The Cutting Edge: John Ashbery
Friday, August 8 at 7:00 and 9:00 PM
Sunday, August 10 at 10:00 PM
Winner of multiple awards for literary excellence, writer and educator John Ashbery is a seminal force in modern poetics. In an enlightening installment of Artists On The Cutting Edge, Ashbery reads, and comments on, selected works.

UCSD-TV broadcasts daily 24 hours a day on UHF channel 35 and is also carried on Southwestern Cable 18, Coronado Cable 16, Cox Cable San Diego 76 and Cox Cable North County 58 from 4 P.M. to midnight.

don

==========

Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
[redacted]

==========

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

August 1997

606 messages · Fri 1 Aug 1997 – Sun 31 Aug 1997

On the second of August William Burroughs died in Lawrence, Kansas, and the following night Hugh Steinberg told the list: “I just heard on CNN that Burroughs died tonight”. Heart failure. That is the notice. Across six hundred and five letters his name occurs seven times, and three of those are the announcement. At the end of the month a car went into a pillar in Paris and the list gives that two. What August did instead was ask itself, for the second time in the eighteen months I have been reading it, what the avant-garde is — and then answer the question by accident, in the mail, in a way nobody intended and one man noticed.

Maria Damon put the question on the sixth, and put it well, because she needed it for work: she was to give a talk in November and wanted to challenge what she saw as the closedness of the tradition. Why, she asked, does the avant-garde seem to need to “police its borders so rigidly”? How does a thing get admitted or refused? William Marsh, taking her up, was suspicious of the spatial metaphor itself — that “the a-g is a particular zone or area of activity” with edges that can be patrolled. Fifty-two letters over three threads, and the room got no further than it had got in March of last year, which was nowhere.

Then on the tenth Conlon Nancarrow died in Mexico City at eighty-four. He was a composer, not a poet; he had gone to Spain to fight Franco and been refused a passport home for it; he spent forty years in one room punching piano rolls by hand to make tempo canons no human hands could play. The room mourned him properly. David Israel — who had done the same office for Ginsberg in April — began collecting a renga, and it opens on somebody’s excellent first line, “Ach, I throw away my metranome”, it is useless to me; George Bowering answering “here in this metrapolis”; Israel’s own third, “this cricket knows the music”. Sixty-odd letters. A real poem for a real man.

Ira Lightman spoiled it on the twenty-seventh, and was right to. The renga, he wrote, did not seem to be about Nancarrow at all: four-four is the dullest time signature, and a renga for someone is a renga for oneself, and is this a way to honour the dead? Then the question that ends the month: “would a renga have sprung up for Burroughs’ death” so equivalently not about Burroughs? Nobody answered him. It is the sharpest thing said in August and it disappears into the thread without a reply.

But the answer was already in the volume, and it is the answer to Damon's question too. Burroughs got seven mentions because Burroughs had got out. He had been on television; he had been in a Nike advertisement three years earlier; he was, by 1997, the most famous avant-garde writer alive, which is a contradiction the room could not metabolise and so did not try. Nancarrow got a renga because Nancarrow was still theirs — unplayable, unrecorded for decades, known to almost nobody, perfect. I have set Damon's question at the front of this volume and Lightman's at the back, because between them the room demonstrated exactly how the avant-garde polices its borders. It does it by deciding whom to write the poem for.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 606 in all.

WRITERS

[Dimpson, Bennett M. Sm 27, 36, 41, 43, 44, 65
Aerialedge 92, 163, 412
Alexander, Charles 24, 95, 164, 223, 225, 244, 248, 259, 275, 320, 333, 334, 362, 383, 416, 484, 528, 600, 606
Alexander, Christopher 58, 60, 71, 99, 100, 106, 444, 517, 518
And, Miekal 382, 505, 506, 574, 579
Archambeau, Robert 51, 132, 564, 596
Autodidact, The Ultimate 135, 136, 250, 253, 255, 256, 278, 281
Barbour, Douglas 479
Bell, Thomas 321, 356, 450, 542, 556
Bernstein, Charles 351
Blarnes, Eric 109
Bouchard, Daniel 10, 133, 232, 282, 397, 417, 443
Bowering, George 177, 179, 180, 181, 207, 330, 331, 335, 336, 337, 375, 376, 388, 392, 408, 435, 446, 457, 465, 468, 488, 515, 521, 594
Brink, Dean A. 576
Bromige, David 83, 148, 170, 205, 210, 296, 297, 308, 311, 322, 327, 352, 419, 429, 453, 459, 467, 525, 560, 587, 593
Brown, Lee Ann 1, 379
Brown, Pam 105, 348, 354
Caddel, R I 46, 82
Carpenter, Brian 358, 475, 490
Charssmith 134, 448
Cheek, Cris 17, 85
Cheney, Don 68, 257, 436, 447
Chirot, Christina Fairbank 37, 59, 122, 144, 270, 440, 454, 466
Coffey, Michael 222
Crawford, Holly 78
Curnow, Wystan 391
Damon, Maria 45, 52, 89, 123, 124, 185, 186, 216, 217, 264, 266, 267, 268, 269, 324, 341, 365, 477, 478, 500, 501, 512, 520
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 62, 426
Davis, Jordan 6, 48, 49, 55, 61, 72, 87, 113, 226, 277, 291, 293, 522, 534, 535, 552, 553, 566, 591
Dawn, Kim 430, 489
Dbkk 31, 143, 157, 218, 318, 369, 513, 584
Debrot, Jacques 158
Dlugonski, Dan Or Orion 598
Dlugonski, Dan Raphael 194
Douglas 547
Drake, Robert 76, 156, 309
DS 437
Durgin, P. 15, 413, 581
Dworkin, Craig Douglas 597
Ellwood, Stephen C. 307, 396
Evans, Steve 138, 162
Felix, Joel 22
Finnegan, James 11, 40, 50, 159, 219, 221, 302
Fleisher, Joe Amato/Kass 160, 220, 271, 449, 529
Foley, Jack 290
Foutu, Markus 371
G, Henry 86, 94, 140, 151, 171, 172, 395
Gancie, R. 377, 389, 456
Ganick, Peter 184
Glazier, Loss Pequen~o 363, 364
Gleason, Eryque 32, 96
Gould, Henry 280, 305, 313, 339, 398, 424
Groberts 141
Grumman, Bob 118, 155, 183, 474, 543
Guertin, Carolyn 190
Hale, Robert 204, 254
Henr 90
Henry 63, 67, 198, 261, 294, 460, 461
Hill, Laurie Schneider/Crag 463
Israel, David 7, 8, 13, 418, 439, 469
Israel, David R. 3, 20, 25, 28, 29, 34, 39, 84, 116, 117, 252, 299, 374, 462, 483, 491, 510, 511, 577, 602
Jarnot 432, 499, 509
Jdhollo 33, 251
John_lavagnino 224, 384
JOHNSON, KENT 97, 196, 199, 227, 243, 246, 273, 276, 315, 316, 317, 325, 338, 349, 350, 355, 386, 402, 404, 423, 428
Joris, Pierre 360, 530, 583, 588
KATHERINE, LYNES- 231
Kellogg, David 93, 104, 420
Kimmelman, Burt 480
Kirschenbaum, Matt 47, 407
Krick, John 561
Kubie, Rachel 12
Kuszai, Joel 54, 414, 586
Landers, Peter 102, 145, 187, 289, 343
Lazer, Hank 167, 237, 580
Lease, Joseph 285, 286, 319
Levitsky, Rachel 79, 110, 152, 153, 176, 201, 203, 239, 357, 387, 393, 394, 406, 427, 531, 545
Levy, Herb 233, 272, 558, 568

Lewis, Joel 498
Lightman, Ira 230, 303, 410, 549
List, Poetics 4, 571
Loden, Rachel 182, 329, 332, 361, 570, 601
Lppl 441
Magee, Michael 546
Mandel, Tom 274, 279, 345, 346
Marks, Steven 147, 173, 544
Marsh, William 101, 107, 533
McGrand, Eliza 567
McVay, Gwyn 245, 340, 532
Minkacroy 399
Moriarty, Laura 445
Morris, Adalaide 548, 554, 563
Nagahata, Akitoshi 238
Nathanson, Tenney 98, 228, 539, 555
Nguyen, Hoa 471, 473, 541
Nielsen, Aldon L. 585
Nuyopoman 292, 304, 502, 604
Orange, Tom 127, 128, 174, 175, 249, 405, 497, 524
Peters, Carl Lynden 112, 485, 595, 605
Pollet, Sylvester 314
Prejsnar, Mark 120, 121, 213, 214, 215, 263, 265, 300, 438
Preston, S. 295
Pritchett,Pat 142, 551, 582
Regan, Matthias 88
Reynolds, Rebecca 9
Roitman, Judy 91, 288, 342, 367, 368, 385, 472, 503, 540, 565
Rsillima 573, 575
Russell, Layne 14, 35, 73, 129, 130, 131, 211, 212, 240, 241, 260, 298, 312, 326, 421, 494
Safdie, Joe 74, 125
Schmid, Julie Marie 569
Shemurph 323
Simon 536
Simon, Schuchat 108, 493
Slaughter, William 166
Slider, Red 403, 409, 415, 425, 431, 433, 434, 442, 451, 452, 455, 458, 464, 482, 487, 495, 496, 504, 519, 526, 537, 557, 578, 589, 603
Smith, Barry And Catherine 507
Sondheim, Alan J 16, 23, 42, 64, 69, 77, 80, 111, 114, 115, 126, 137, 150, 161, 168, 178, 191, 193
Sondheim, Alan Jen 202, 247, 328, 347, 353, 359, 370, 372, 380, 401, 508, 592
Spandrift, Jack 284
STACIE 538
Steinberg, Hugh 30, 81, 149, 169, 195, 208
Tate, J. 139, 344
Thompson, George 242, 301
Tranter, John 154, 476, 523
Trevor, Karen And 229, 378, 381
Tuma, Keith 21
Upton, Lawrence 2, 5, 18, 19, 26, 38, 53, 56, 66, 70, 75, 103, 197, 366, 373, 400
Upton., Lawrence 514, 562
Wallace, Mark 234, 306
Weiss, Mark 57, 165, 188, 189, 192, 206, 235, 236, 258, 287, 492, 516, 550, 590, 599
Weldon, Rebecca 200, 209, 310
West, Bobbie 481
Wheeler, Susan 119, 262
Whyte, Ryan 411, 527, 559, 572
Zimmerman, Daniel 146, 283, 422, 470, 486
Zitt, Joseph 390

NAMES MENTIONED

Alexander, Christopher W. 58, 60, 71, 99, 100, 106, 132, 444, 517, 518
Alice, Mary 122, 144
Allison, Dorothy 518
Altieri, Charles 389
Americans, Asian 151, 293, 423
Amerika, Mark 411
Anderson, Laurie 471, 472
Andre, Michael 412
Andrews, Bruce 55, 92, 94, 262
Angelo, Michael 232, 397
Apollinaire, Guillaume 448, 606
Ashbery, John 87, 90, 98, 154, 221, 377, 381, 575, 582, 589, 590, 591
Atkins, Tim 85
Atlanta, Mark P. 114, 120, 121, 214, 215, 236, 265, 438
Auden, W. H. 87, 98
Auster, Paul 407, 412
Austin, Geer 50, 52
Baptiste, David 232, 397
Baraka, Amiri 138, 140, 162, 456
Barthes, Roland 475
Bartlett, Jennifer 59, 61
Bartlett, Lee 59, 61
Bataille, George 201, 204, 217, 252
Beckett, Samuel 27, 28, 36, 410
Bellamy, Dodie 157, 208, 296, 379
Belle, Cecelia 359, 365
Benjamin, Walter 110, 158, 518, 559
Bennett, John M. 27, 28, 36, 41, 43, 44, 65, 518
Benson, Steve 296, 573, 584
Berger, John 154
Berkeley, Michael 414, 518
Berlin, Irving 136, 471, 472
Bernard, George 518
Bernstein, Emma 106, 203, 232, 290, 397
Berrigan, Anselm 61, 232, 397, 471, 472
Berrigan, Eddie 471
Berrigan, Edmund 472
Berrigan, Ted 466, 471, 472

Berryman, John 575, 582
Bidart, Frank 262
Birmingham, Jed 570
Blackburn, Paul 401
Blake, William 27, 28, 36, 47, 344, 407
Blanchot, Maurice 360
Blaser, Robin 479
Boughn, Mike 288
Bourdieu, Pierre 104, 106, 107, 234, 254, 268
BpNichol 124, 156, 594, 595
Brady, Andrea 85
Brazil, David 199, 250
Brennan, Joe 389, 456
Brennan, Sherry 232, 397
Brink, Dean A. 576, 577
Brown, Pamela 154
Bryant, Elizabeth 178, 189
Buchanan, Pat 182, 188
Bukowski, Charles 403
Bunting, Basil 46, 51
Burger, Mary 232, 397
Burger, Peter 122, 144, 158
Burke, Andrew 134
Burke, Clifford 134
Burke, Kenneth 86
Burns, Joanne 154
Burroughs, William S. 30, 288, 549
Byrd, Don 136
Byron, Philip 344
Bök, Christian 597
Cabri, Louis 277
Caddel, Richard 46, 82
Cage, John 290, 390
Campbell, Jeremy 31
Carll, Steve 157, 208
Carroll, Jon 340, 341
Carter, Michael 508
Carter, Mike 508, 518
Chadwick, Lynn 296, 309
Chapman, Lee 288
Chirot, Dave 66, 74, 474, 476
Clark, Cheryl 16, 18, 21, 24, 41, 44, 62, 64, 65, 68, 69, 296
Clark, Tom 378, 471, 472
Clinton, Bill 210
Cobbing, Bob 2, 3, 5
Cocteau, Jean 119, 275
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 87
Conner, Kyle 232, 397
Coolidge, Clark 6, 17, 18, 20, 21, 24, 25, 27, 28, 37, 39, 41, 42, 43, 44, 49, 53, 55, 56, 57, 59, 61, 74, 102, 109, 214, 227, 230, 236, 270, 296, 471, 472
Corbett, Robert 295
Corso, Gregory 283, 289
Cortez, Jayne 456
County, Mike 467
Creeley, Robert 580, 596
Cunningham, Michael 141
Curtis, Dana 157, 208
Davidson, Michael 296, 412
Davis, Martin 53, 55, 257, 267, 390
Dennis, Michael 393, 518
Derrida, Jacques 222, 230, 303
Dickinson, Emily 286
Dixon, Bill 456, 566
Dobyns, Stephen 214, 236
Duncan, Andrew 37, 143, 288, 441, 445, 466, 471, 472
Duncan, Robert 22, 590
Durand, Marcella 232, 397
Durgin, Patrick 413, 581, 583
Edgar, Chris 149
Edmond, Murray 572
Eigner, Larry 91, 288, 342, 367, 368, 385, 472, 503, 540, 565
Einstein, Albert 136
Eliot, Joe 355
Ellen, Mary 518
Ellwood, Stephen C. 307, 396
England, Amy 49, 97, 197, 303, 374, 385, 588
Eno, Brian 553
Epstein, Thomas 97, 196, 305, 339
Ernst, Max 518
Eshleman, Clayton 456
Eugene, Brett 463
Evans, Brett 471, 472
Farmer, Steve 296
Featherston, Dan 240, 322
Federman, Raymond 456
Felver, Chris 547
Ferguson, Jesse 296, 563
Ferrini, Henry 288
Fisher, Allen 82, 587
Fisher, Roy 154
Fitterman, Robert 232, 397
Fletcher, Nielsen 518
Folsom, Eric 519
Foucault, Michel 104, 106, 107, 228, 314, 456
France, Peter 199, 250, 516
Frances, Mary 82, 518
Fraser, Kathleen 296
Fraser, Simon 518
Freeman, Brad 292, 299, 518
Frost, Corey 223
Frost, Robert 155, 195
Frym, Gloria 288
Fuchs, Greg 471, 472
Galassi, Jonathan 262
Gallagher, Kristen 214, 236, 296
Gann, Kyle 410
Gardner, Drew 232, 288, 397
Genet, Jean 230

Gerstler, Amy 471, 472
Gilbert, Roger 288
Gilonis, Harry 82
Ginsberg, Allan 161
Ginsberg, Allen 223, 593
Gioia, Dana 296
Giorno, John 1, 351, 368, 379
Gluck, Robert 221
Godard, Barbara 189, 191, 192, 193
Godfrey, John 498
Gordon, Ruth 41, 44
Gottlieb, Michael 288
Gould, Glenn 109
Graham, Jorie 87, 98, 262
Greenwald, Ted 17, 48
Gregory, Jane 256, 471, 472
Grubbs, David 22
Guest, Barbara 138, 162, 208
Halsey, Alan 82
Hamilton, Diana 507
Hammond, Paul 54
Hansen, Jeff 306, 443, 460
Harper, Michael 166
Harris, Ken 109, 172
Harryman, Carla 110, 152
Hartley, George 237
Harvey, George 518
Hass, Robert 296
Hawking, Stephen 374, 384, 385
Heidegger, Martin 61, 191, 193
Hejinian, Lyn 296
Helms, Jesse 182, 188, 198
Hernandez, Victor 296
Higgins, Dick 410
Highfill, Mitch 498
Hill, Owen 471, 472
Hillman, Brenda 296
Hirschman, Jack 471, 472
Hirshfield, Jane 296
Hirshman, Jack 296
Hollander, Benjamin 157, 208
Hollo, Anselm 33, 471, 472
Holman, Bob 50, 52, 292, 302, 502, 604, 605
Holt, Henry 602
Homer 16
Hoover, Paul 154
House, White 210
Howe, Susan 10, 22, 70, 214, 236, 296
Hughes, Ted 178, 189
Hunter, Carrie 288
Ireland, Lauren 91, 125
Irvine, James 161
Israel, David R. 3, 20, 25, 28, 29, 34, 39, 48, 61, 84, 116, 117, 252, 299, 374, 462, 469, 483, 491, 505, 506, 510, 511, 512, 577, 602
Jackson, Jesse 49, 61, 74, 102, 109, 274
Jameson, Fredric 120
Jarnot, Lisa 232, 397
Javier, Paolo 97
Jefferson, Thomas 284
Jenkins, Margaret 296
Jillway, Jill 4, 571
Johnson, Ron 118
Johnston, Martin 154
Jonas, Stephen 138, 162, 172
Jordan, June 6, 17, 21, 36, 49, 55, 57, 61, 63, 70, 72, 74, 87, 91, 99, 100, 102, 113, 125, 226, 257, 267, 277, 294, 522, 534, 535, 539, 546, 549, 552, 553, 566, 591
Joyce, Michael 296
Kaufman, Andrew 456
Keats, John 376, 386
Keckler, Joseph 232, 397
Kelley, Mike 518
Kennedy, Kit 288
Kerouac, Jack 37, 270, 466
Killian, Kevin 31, 32, 157, 208, 218, 233, 296
King, Larry 32
Kinsella, John 82
Kinsella, Thomas 93, 104, 420
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 47, 407
Kyger, Joanne 471, 472
Lacan, Jacques 359, 365, 389, 401, 456, 508, 516
Landers, Pete 130, 133, 136, 198, 199, 250, 253, 256, 261, 273, 276, 338, 349
Larkin, Peter 82
Lauterbach, Ann 138, 162, 262
Law, Sarah 85
Lehman, David 262
Levertov, Denise 218, 233
Levy, Andrew 232, 309, 397
Lilly, Ruth 304
Livesay, Dorothy 218, 233
Lloyd, Warren 474
Loewinsohn, Ron 593
London, Frank 3, 17, 120, 374, 391, 587, 602
Lopez, Tony 82
Lorber, Brendan 239
Lorde, Audre 239
Mac Low, Jackson 6, 17, 18, 20, 21, 24, 25, 37, 306
Lowell, Amy 233, 570
Lowell, Robert 218
Luther, Martin 170
Lynch, Jessica 85
Lyons, Kim 232, 397
Mackey, Nathaniel 568, 569, 580, 596
Maclow, Jackson 274
Mali, Taylor 221, 292, 304
Mallarmé, Stéphane 12, 475
Mandelstam, Osip 94
Manning, Nicholas 138, 162
Marlowe, Christopher 182, 188

Martin, Chris 296
Marvin, Lee 378
Mason, Chris 566
Mathews, Harry 346
Maxwell, Susan 518
Mayer, Bernadette 1, 92, 94, 351, 368, 379
McCaffery, Steve 363, 364, 587, 594, 595
Mellors, Anthony 82
Meredith, William 39
Merwin, W. S. 7, 221
Messerli, Douglas 296, 547
Metcalf, Paul 37
Michaels, Leonard 575, 582
Miller, Jane 401
Miller, Lee 359, 365
Mitchell, Stephen 296
Moore, Marianne 218, 233
Morris, Dee 548, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 563
Morris, Tim 47
Mossin, Andrew 309
Moxley, Jennifer 82, 138, 162, 232, 296, 397
Muldoon, Paul 262
Mullen, Harryette 539, 546, 548, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 563, 585
Muratori, Fred 232, 397
Murphy, Michelle 309
Murphy, Sheila E. 323, 438
Murray, Elizabeth 344
Muske, Carol 262
Napora, Joe 296
Neilsen, Aldon 296
Nelson, Gale 518
Nielsen, Aldon L. 138, 162, 585
Nixon, Richard 198, 253, 261, 276
Norton, John 118
Notley, Alice 471, 472
O'Hara, Frank 218, 233
Oliver, Laura 82, 393
Olsen, Lance 575, 582, 591
Olson, Charles 16, 55, 82, 172, 412, 575, 582, 591
Oppen, George 412
Opstedal, Kevin 471, 472, 473, 541
Pacific, Asian 576, 578
Padgett, Ron 591
Padin, Clemente 309
Palmer, Michael 157, 170, 208, 590
Park, Louis 460
Parker, Karl 374
Paterson, William 37
Perelman, Bob 296, 378, 561
Perloff, Marjorie 290, 320, 550, 590
Perry, David 114
Pettet, Simon 471, 472
Phillip, Andrew 275
Pinsky, Robert 296
Piombino, Nick 296, 309
Polkinhorn, Harry 155, 195
Pollock, Jackson 374
Porter, Anne 518
Potter, Steve 518
Pound, Ezra 149
Pound, Scott 41, 44, 86, 155, 172, 189, 191, 192, 193, 195, 250, 412, 575, 582
Powell, Doug 296
Price, Larry 232, 397
Price, Michael 471, 472
Di Prima, Diane 296
Pritchett, Patrick 142, 147, 551, 570, 582, 589
Prynne, J. H. 82
Pynchon, Thomas 518
Rakosi, Carl 135, 154
Reagan, Nancy 198, 349, 355, 358
Regan, Max 106, 393, 545
Retallack, Joan 378
Reuters, Boston 344
Reynolds, Sean 480
Reznikoff, Charles 412
Rhodes, Martha 262
Rimbaud, Dee 476, 497, 523, 524, 525
Robertson, Lisa 296
Robinson, Mary 518
Roosevelt, Franklin 39
Rothenberg, Jerry 135, 550, 590
Rothschild, Douglas 232, 397
Sandburg, Carl 149, 223
Sappho 256
Saroyan, William 466
Sartre, Paul 230
Scalapino, Leslie 573, 584
Schelling, Andrew 393
Schneeman, George 498, 499
Schultz, Susan 154
Scroggins, Mark 456
Selby, Spencer 288
Shakespeare, William 223
Shapiro, David 438
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 283, 376, 386
Sheppard, Robert 82
Sherman, Bill 85
Silberg, Richard 296
Silliman, Ron 6, 59, 61, 74, 78, 91, 254, 268, 296, 309, 378, 573, 575, 582, 590
Simmons, Russell 518
Simon, Greg 85, 395
Simone, Frank 153, 357, 467
Simpson, Bennett 27, 28, 36, 41, 43, 44, 59, 61, 65
Sloan, Margaret 157, 208, 590
Smith, Dale 471, 472, 541
Smith, Marc 292
Smith, Patricia 292

Smith, Tracy K. 306, 507
Smithson, Robert 37, 41, 44
Snyder, Gary 223
Sokal, Alan 423
Spahr, Juliana 232, 397
Spender, Stephen 171
Spicer, Jack 143, 218, 233
Stafford, Jane 166
Stanley, George 296
Stanley, Jared 518
Starbuck, George 167
Stein, Gertrude 78, 91, 122, 144, 149, 293, 590
Stein, Suzanne 74, 122, 144, 230, 294, 412, 575, 582, 590
Stern, Gerald 290
Stevens, Wallace 2, 86, 87, 94, 138, 140, 162
Stroffolino, Chris 138, 162
Sumner, Graham 518
Sutherland, Keston 85
Sutherland, Mark 61
Sweeney, Jennifer K. 518
Swensen, Cole 157, 208
Taggart, John 22
Tarlo, Harriet 85
Tate, Allen 582
Taylor, Henry 221, 274, 302, 306
Taylor, Jesse 274, 302
Tejada, Roberto 110
Texas, Irving 224, 532, 582
Thatcher, Margaret 132
Theroux, Alexander 591
Thomas, Dylan 283, 322
Thompson, Jon 518
Thurston, Scott 85, 103
Tills, Steve 296
Torra, Joe 295
Towle, Tony 262
Trevor, Jesse 229, 378, 381
Vallejo, César 601
Varrone, Kevin 232, 397
Vassilakis, Nico 309
Vincent, Gregory 288
Vincent, Steven 296
Viscomi, Joseph 47
Volkman, Karen 262
Wagner, Catherine 189, 191, 192, 193
Waldman, Anne 22
Waldrop, Keith 138, 162
Waldrop, Rosmarie 138, 162
Walsh, Catherine 85
Washington, Harold 115, 122, 134, 139, 144, 161, 221, 274, 290, 292, 344, 388
Watten, Barrett 6, 59, 61, 296
Watts, Robert 518
Weinberger, Eliot 349, 358
Welish, Marjorie 138, 162
Whitman, Walt 286
Williams, Stephanie 393
Williams, Tony 41, 44, 94, 203
Willis, Elizabeth 518
Wilson, Steve 288, 304
Winkfield, Trevor 262
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 234, 254, 268, 389
Wordsworth, William 591
Wright, James 393
Yackulic, William 471, 472
Young, Karl 550, 590, 605
Zukofsky, Louis 187, 199, 206, 412

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 37, 47, 153, 357
Aesthetics 63, 124, 156, 160, 268, 271, 305, 568, 575, 582, 590
Afghanistan 91, 125
African American poetry 234, 254, 268, 449, 452
Anthologies 118, 124, 135, 143, 149, 155, 156, 183, 195, 197, 221, 234, 254, 268, 309, 340, 341, 412, 463, 466, 499, 564, 568, 569, 593, 602
Anti-Semitism 193
Appropriation 47, 76, 101, 104, 106, 107, 124, 170, 254, 268, 287, 290
Archives and libraries 4, 46, 47, 122, 144, 215, 224, 256, 293, 306, 407, 441, 445, 467, 525, 550, 571, 587, 590, 599, 605
Autobiography 37, 122, 144
Avant-garde 52, 76, 89, 93, 95, 97, 99, 101, 104, 106, 107, 109, 110, 112, 113, 114, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 124, 127, 128, 129, 132, 135, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 146, 149, 156, 158, 159, 160, 163, 168, 171, 174, 175, 177, 178, 179, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 195, 197, 199, 200, 213, 214, 219, 221, 223, 226, 236, 239, 242, 246, 250, 255, 257, 258, 263, 266, 267, 268, 271, 273, 275, 279, 280, 282, 284, 285, 286, 294, 295, 300, 301, 305, 313, 319, 321, 550, 551, 570, 590
Beauty 23, 58, 202, 247, 256, 379, 491, 492
Biography 51, 218, 233, 412
Black Mountain 135
Book announcements 47, 51, 82, 280, 288, 398, 412, 499, 532
Bookstores 393, 401, 518, 568, 600
Calls for submissions 456
Capitalism 74, 78, 91, 339
Censorship 246, 255, 258, 273
Cities 161, 234, 254, 268, 312, 340, 341, 467
Close reading 138, 162, 171
Collage and montage 37, 189, 191, 247
Conferences and festivals 37, 115, 124, 156, 179, 217, 268, 290, 317, 320, 344, 518, 545, 595

Copyright and permissions 124, 156, 224, 233, 281, 283, 287, 297, 344, 374, 384, 385, 415, 429
Craft 210, 296, 518
Creative writing pedagogy 258, 264
Dada 114, 120
Deconstruction 178, 189, 191, 192, 230, 258, 281, 283, 287
Difficulty 4, 311, 318, 571
Dreams 7, 23, 99, 114, 139, 161, 198, 239, 276, 508
Ecology and ecopoetics 467
Editing 4, 47, 74, 115, 124, 156, 290, 550, 571, 590
Electronic poetry and hypertext 1, 4, 6, 10, 234, 254, 268, 280, 306, 407, 476, 497, 523, 556, 563, 571, 573, 575
Elegy 409, 410, 446, 451, 457, 458, 462
Empire and imperialism 191, 199, 210, 250, 276, 296, 308, 315
Epistemology 87, 98
Erasure 230
Experimental poetry 6, 172, 195, 274, 302
Fascism 120, 210, 296
Feminism 590
Film 37, 90, 105, 116, 119, 178, 189, 242, 359, 365, 379, 432, 436, 437, 439, 508
Fluxus 156
Formalism 93, 120, 132, 159, 171, 306
Free speech 166, 199, 206, 250, 255, 258, 273
Futurism 256, 305
Gender 200, 306, 591
Grants and funding 5, 49, 122, 144, 198, 217, 223, 271, 283, 300, 321, 349, 355, 358
Haiku 90, 457, 458, 459, 462, 464, 465, 469, 470, 477, 478, 479, 483, 488, 500, 501, 502, 505, 506, 510, 511, 512, 513, 515, 517, 519, 520, 521, 522, 530, 549, 558
Hermeneutics 279
Humour and satire 7, 20, 25, 48, 122, 144, 159, 201, 290, 296, 344, 541
Ideology 41, 44, 140, 191, 339
Improvisation 7
Indigenous and Native poetics 548, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 563
Interviews 4, 31, 32, 37, 59, 61, 115, 136, 154, 196, 203, 374, 466, 555, 556, 558, 563, 571
Israel and Palestine 3, 7, 8, 13, 20, 25, 28, 29, 34, 39, 48, 55, 59, 61, 84, 113, 116, 117, 125, 153, 252, 299, 357, 374, 384, 385, 418, 439, 462, 469, 483, 491, 492, 505, 506, 510, 511, 512, 577, 602
Language poetry 6, 15, 49, 55, 57, 63, 74, 76, 86, 109, 118, 120, 124, 132, 159, 170, 183, 194, 197, 221, 222, 230, 234, 254, 268, 290, 303, 389, 401, 456, 543
Letters and correspondence 138, 162, 274
List moderation 128, 145, 175, 290, 402, 403, 408, 416, 419, 422, 423, 429
Little magazines 4, 7, 58, 63, 154, 197, 219, 229, 234, 239, 254, 268, 288, 294, 374, 398, 438, 456, 472, 474, 523, 541, 550, 557, 571, 580, 587, 590, 596, 600
Lyric poetry 27, 28, 36, 569
Marxism 187, 199, 206, 305
Memory 2, 12, 34, 37, 67, 115, 116, 136, 147, 153, 208, 211, 283, 287, 357, 368, 410, 472, 474, 503, 508, 537, 565, 568
MFA programs 590
Modernism 55, 86, 117, 118, 159, 218, 233, 242, 377, 381, 389, 395
Mourning and loss 4, 5, 116, 159, 195, 283, 309, 363, 364, 387, 410, 571, 592
Multiculturalism 518
Music and poetry 2, 6, 37, 41, 44, 47, 69, 76, 117, 124, 131, 135, 136, 137, 139, 159, 161, 172, 189, 191, 192, 193, 258, 272, 296, 311, 318, 344, 377, 381, 410, 462, 469, 470, 477, 478, 479, 483, 488, 490, 500, 501, 502, 505, 508, 510, 511, 512, 515, 538, 564, 568, 569, 580, 596
Nationalism 140, 290
Nature 4, 136, 160, 205, 268, 290, 292, 305, 374, 384, 385, 401, 481, 482, 484, 485, 486, 490, 491, 492, 571, 590
New Formalism 93, 120, 132, 159, 171
New York School 6
Obituary and memorial 4, 498, 571
Objectivism 135, 223
Ontology 271
Performance and the poetry reading 50, 52, 159, 183, 195, 197, 221, 302, 306, 344, 393, 445
Philosophy 7, 86, 125, 278, 389
Place and region 380
Poetics 4, 31, 32, 33, 35, 49, 54, 74, 76, 77, 91, 93, 110, 118, 119, 120, 124, 132, 137, 138, 143, 144, 145, 156, 162, 164, 165, 166, 173, 174, 185, 186, 195, 201, 204, 215, 217, 218, 233, 237, 243, 244, 246, 251, 252, 264, 268, 280, 293, 298, 306, 320, 362, 377, 381, 389, 391, 395, 398, 400, 443, 456, 502, 515, 533, 540, 551, 561, 564, 568, 571, 573, 577, 582, 590, 604, 605
Politics and poetry 545
Post-structuralism 63
Postmodernism 86, 118, 159, 242, 395
Print vs. digital 37, 47, 51, 134, 161, 201, 225, 252, 256, 377, 381, 395, 448, 523, 543, 550, 564, 568, 572, 590
Prizes and awards 161, 221, 274, 292, 374, 593

Prose poem 152
Prosody and meter 11, 149, 522, 537, 549
Psychoanalysis 290, 492, 508, 516
Queer poetics 152, 153, 170, 203, 305, 357, 434
Race and poetry 74, 78, 91, 152, 172
Reading announcements 296, 306, 398
Religion and the sacred 47, 125, 136, 167, 305, 349, 358, 597
Representation 230, 442, 508, 537, 544, 559
Reviewing and criticism 4, 39, 47, 97, 107, 115, 118, 120, 145, 149, 155, 168, 195, 198, 209, 216, 234, 243, 244, 246, 249, 254, 255, 258, 264, 268, 273, 291, 344, 372, 377, 381, 466, 550, 551, 564, 568, 571, 575, 582, 590, 591, 599, 600
Revision 34, 124, 156, 160, 357
School of Quietude 299
Science 48, 136, 189, 191, 366, 385, 389, 594
Semiotics 23, 37, 149, 168, 359, 365, 380, 442, 508, 516
Small press publishing 157, 164, 165, 166, 173, 185, 186, 208, 215, 245, 250, 278, 306, 414, 532
Software and code 10, 23, 47, 347, 348, 353, 366, 367
Sonnet 1, 189, 191
Sound poetry 37
Structuralism 63, 362
Subjectivity 4, 166, 234, 254, 268, 306, 346, 359, 365, 374, 568, 571
Surrealism 114, 194, 195, 305
Terrorism 11
The academy 4, 15, 46, 47, 91, 93, 104, 120, 139, 141, 160, 164, 165, 166, 173, 185, 186, 215, 221, 234, 254, 268, 271, 272, 274, 279, 283, 288, 300, 306, 317, 320, 321, 342, 344, 345, 346, 356, 367, 368, 385, 390, 410, 420, 472, 479, 503, 518, 529, 540, 565, 569, 571, 575, 582, 595, 597
The body 4, 153, 357, 380, 508, 571
The canon 136, 171
The Holocaust 258
The internet 15, 63, 115, 154, 178, 189, 224, 238, 317, 320, 374, 390, 508, 533, 540, 576, 578, 586, 600, 606
The line 4, 67, 407, 571
The listserv 4, 10, 55, 59, 61, 66, 70, 72, 74, 119, 124, 129, 131, 135, 137, 138, 139, 145, 156, 162, 166, 205, 210, 233, 234, 242, 244, 246, 254, 268, 282, 298, 381, 396, 400, 402, 403, 408, 451, 455, 457, 458, 472, 493, 513, 519, 520, 522, 530, 540, 549, 558, 571, 575, 593
Theatre 72, 157, 171, 208, 313, 390, 574
Torture and Abu Ghraib 55
Translation 157, 170, 203, 208, 210, 235, 242, 249, 269, 271, 310, 314, 359, 365, 405, 407, 412, 605, 606
Visual and concrete poetry 118, 122, 144, 155, 195, 442, 474, 476
Visual art 2, 256, 305, 310, 398

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 606 in all.

1 AUG 1997

1. lee ann brown — Re: Bernadette Mayer Fund /NYC Sublet/Share
2. Lawrence Upton — Re: Quality & Quantity
3. David R. Israel — Re: Quality & Quantity / Cobbing workshop
4. Poetics List — "Welcome" Message
5. Lawrence Upton — Re: Quality & Quantity / Cobbing workshop
6. Jordan Davis — hypothesis and repeatability
7. David Israel — overglosses I've enjoyed
8. David Israel — Search Party
9. Rebecca Reynolds — Re: Crankiness: Quantity & Quality
10. Daniel Bouchard — little poets in my ear
11. James Finnegan — Re: Revolution at hand
12. Rachel Kubie — Quantity & Quality
13. David Israel — hasty villannelle
14. Layne Russell — take a break/a little one

2 AUG 1997

15. p. durgin — Re: Crankiness: Quantity & Quality
16. Alan J Sondheim — From the last post I received
17. cris cheek — Re: hypothesis and repeatability
18. Lawrence Upton — hypothesis and repeatability
19. Lawrence Upton — yukyuk
20. David R. Israel — yukyuks
21. Keith Tuma — Re: hypothesis and repeatability
22. Joel Felix — Taggart reading
23. Alan J Sondheim — Spawn
24. charles alexander — Re: hypothesis and repeatability
25. David R. Israel — Re: yukyuk
26. Lawrence Upton — Re: yukyuk
27. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson — Re: yukyuk

3 AUG 1997

28. David R. Israel — Re: yukyuk
29. David R. Israel — Re: yukyuk / erratum
30. Hugh Steinberg — William S. Burroughs
31. dbkk — Re: hypothesis and repeatability
32. Eryque Gleason — Re: hypothesis and repeatability
33. jdhollo — Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Aug 1997 to 2 Aug 1997
34. David R. Israel — Re: Quantity & Quality
35. Layne Russell — POETICS: in the beginning
36. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson — Re: yukyuk
37. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: yukyuk
38. Lawrence Upton — Re: Quantity & Quality
39. David R. Israel — Re: yukyuk
40. James Finnegan — Re: National Poetry Slam

4 AUG 1997

41. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson — Coolidge Time
42. Alan J Sondheim — Re: Coolidge Time
43. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson — Re: Coolidge Time
44. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson — Re: Coolidge Time
45. Maria Damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
46. R I Caddel — Basil Bunting: A Northern Life

47. Matt Kirschenbaum — update on the William Blake Archive
48. Jordan Davis — Re: yukyuk
49. Jordan Davis — bock bock bock pacock (incisors in the shop)
50. James Finnegan — Re: National Poetry Slam
51. Robert Archambeau — Re: Basil Bunting: A Northern Life
52. Maria Damon — Re: National Poetry Slam
53. Lawrence Upton — Re: yukyuk
54. Joel Kuszai — MAC HAMMOND
55. Jordan Davis — rude wood (makes your mouth taste like onions)
56. Lawrence Upton — flabbergasted
57. Mark Weiss — yukyuks
58. Christopher Alexander — Re: yukyuks
59. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: flabbergasted
60. Christopher Alexander — dressage
61. Jordan Davis — stray slack (sorry)
62. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)

5 AUG 1997

63. henry — Re: bock bock bock pacock (incisors in the shop)
64. Alan J Sondheim — Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)
65. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson — Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)
66. Lawrence Upton — Re: flabbergasted
67. henry — Re: Quantity & Quality
68. Don Cheney — Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)
69. Alan J Sondheim — Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)
70. Lawrence Upton — yukyuk and schmuck
71. Christopher Alexander — Re: yukyuk and schmuck
72. Jordan Davis — lunch at the public
73. Layne Russell — Re: You
74. Joe Safdie — Re: lunch at the public: is it possible?
75. Lawrence Upton — Re: yukyuk and schmuck
76. Robert Drake — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
77. Alan J Sondheim — You
78. Holly Crawford — Re: ahistroical lunch
79. Rachel Levitsky — Re: You

6 AUG 1997

80. Alan J Sondheim — Re: You
81. Hugh Steinberg — Re: ahistroical lunch
82. R I Caddel — fragmente 7
83. David Bromige — alan sondheim's "you"
84. David R. Israel — Re: ahistroical lunch
85. cris cheek — yunga brit yak-yaks for jordan n all
86. henry g — Re: ahistroical lunch
87. Jordan Davis — any lunch in a hysteria
88. Matthias Regan — Please remove from list
89. Maria Damon — "avantgarde"
90. henr — Re: any lunch in a hysteria
91. Judy Roitman — Re: lunch at the public: is it possible?
92. aerialedge — The night and the snow
93. David Kellogg — Re: "avantgarde"
94. henry g — Re: The night and the snow
95. Charles Alexander — Re: "avantgarde"
96. Eryque Gleason — Re: The night and the snow
97. KENT JOHNSON — yasusada
98. Tenney Nathanson — dyed in the WHAT? WHO? WHOO!
99. Christopher Alexander — Re: "avantgarde"

100. Christopher Alexander — Re: avant garde
101. william marsh — "*alternative*avant-garde"
102. Peter Landers — yuk yuk
103. Lawrence Upton — yunga brit yak-yaks for jordan n all
104. David Kellogg — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
105. Pam Brown — History
106. Christopher Alexander — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
107. william marsh — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
108. Schuchat Simon — Re: yasusada
109. Eric Blarnes — Re: yuk yuk
110. Rachel Levitsky — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
111. Alan J Sondheim — You, Here

7 AUG 1997

112. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde" 113. Jordan Davis — fxn of a-g (I/they)
114. Alan J Sondheim — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
115. Alan J Sondheim — First Early Sample Internet (ARPANET) Exchanges 1972
116. David R. Israel — Re: History
117. David R. Israel — Re: "avantgarde"
118. Bob Grumman — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
119. Susan Wheeler — Re: POETICS Digest - 5 Aug 1997 to 6 Aug 1997
120. Mark Prejsnar — Re: "avantgarde"
121. Mark Prejsnar — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
122. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
123. Maria Damon — Re: yasusada
124. Maria Damon — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
125. Joe Safdie — Re: lunch at the public: is it possible?
126. Alan J Sondheim — <login>

8 AUG 1997

127. Tom Orange — "avantgarde"
128. Tom Orange — hendecasyllabics' metaphorics
129. Layne Russell — Re: "avantgarde"
130. Layne Russell — Re: for Pete Landers
131. Layne Russell — Re: how about poems?
132. Robert Archambeau — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
133. Daniel Bouchard — for Pete Landers
134. charssmith — Fwd: Clifford Burke talk at The S. F. Center for the Book
135. The Ultimate Autodidact — Re: "avantgarde"
136. The Ultimate Autodidact — Analogue
137. Alan J Sondheim — Re: how about poems?
138. Steve Evans — Impercipient Lecture Series
139. J. Tate — Re: how about poems?
140. henry g — Re: categorical doggerel
141. groberts — categorical doggerel
142. Pritchett,Pat — Re: and why not a poem?
143. dbkk — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
144. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde" (fwd)
145. Peter Landers — Re: how about poems?
146. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: "avantgarde"
147. Steven Marks — and why not?
148. David Bromige — avant ga-ga's
149. Hugh Steinberg — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
150. Alan J Sondheim — apologies as the maudlin makes its entrance
151. henry g — avant any garde

9 AUG 1997

152. Rachel Levitsky — Re: avant ga-ga's
153. Rachel Levitsky — Re: how about poems?--For Alan
154. John Tranter — Jacket magazine
155. Bob Grumman — The Otherstream
156. robert drake — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
157. dbkk — Anne-Marie Albiach tribute in San Francisco
158. Jacques Debrot — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde" (fwd)
159. James Finnegan — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
160. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
161. Alan J Sondheim — You, Celine, Die On
162. Steve Evans — Impercipient Lecture Series
163. aerialedge — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
164. charles alexander — to be or not to be (loyal)
165. mark weiss — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
166. William Slaughter — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
167. Hank Lazer — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
168. Alan J Sondheim — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
169. Hugh Steinberg — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
170. David Bromige — avant ga-ga's
171. henry g — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
172. henry g — Re: Impercipient Lecture Series
173. Steven Marks — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)

10 AUG 1997

174. Tom Orange — "avantgarde" (fwd)
175. Tom Orange — hendecasyllabics' metaphorics
176. Rachel Levitsky — Re: hendecasyllabics' metaphorics
177. George Bowering — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
178. Alan J Sondheim — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
179. George Bowering — Re: avant ga-ga's
180. George Bowering — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
181. George Bowering — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
182. Rachel Loden — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
183. Bob Grumman — Re: The Otherstream
184. Peter Ganick — email address inquiry
185. Maria Damon — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
186. Maria Damon — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
187. Peter Landers — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
188. mark weiss — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
189. mark weiss — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
190. Carolyn Guertin — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
191. Alan J Sondheim — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
192. mark weiss — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
193. Alan J Sondheim — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
194. Dan Raphael Dlugonski — avant-stream
195. Hugh Steinberg — Re: The Otherstream
196. KENT JOHNSON — Yasusada's existence
197. Lawrence Upton — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
198. henry — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
199. KENT JOHNSON — Imperialist running dogs
200. Rebecca Weldon — avant-garde and the Larousse universel

11 AUG 1997

201. Rachel Levitsky — Re: the misery of poetry
202. Alan Jen Sondheim — for a friend

203. Rachel Levitsky — Re: avant ya-ya's
204. Robert Hale — the misery of poetry
205. David Bromige — the return of george bowering/avant ga-ga's
206. mark weiss — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
207. George Bowering — Re: Words which make People Garbanzos.
208. Hugh Steinberg — Re: Anne-Marie Albiach tribute in San Francisco
209. Rebecca Weldon — Yasusada
210. David Bromige — imperialist bow-wows
211. Layne Russell — Re: Anne-Marie Albiach tribute in San Francisco
212. Layne Russell — Re: when you do your own policing
213. Mark Prejsnar — Re: "avantgarde"
214. Mark Prejsnar — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
215. Mark Prejsnar — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
216. Maria Damon — Re: Yasusada
217. Maria Damon — Re: the misery of poetry
218. dbkk — Assistance requested
219. James Finnegan — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
220. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: the misery of poetry
221. James Finnegan — Re: The Otherstream
222. Michael Coffey — Derrida and Language Writing -Reply
223. charles alexander — Re: "avantgarde"
224. john_lavagnino — Re: Assistance requested
225. charles alexander — Re: the misery of poetry
226. Jordan Davis — Comfort levels for solicitation and submission
227. KENT JOHNSON — Coolidge
228. Tenney Nathanson — dum Foucault question
229. Karen and Trevor — Re: email address inquiry
230. Ira Lightman — Derrida and Language Writing
231. LYNES- KATHERINE — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
232. Daniel Bouchard — Directions to Mass Ave.
233. Herb Levy — Difficult Modernism (wasRe: Assistance requested)
234. Mark Wallace — when you do your own policing
235. mark weiss — Re: the misery of poetry
236. mark weiss — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
237. Hank Lazer — Re: new e-mail address
238. Akitoshi Nagahata — Re: Yasusada's existence
239. Rachel Levitsky — Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
240. Layne Russell — Re: Ironies of Policing
241. Layne Russell — Re: poem lost & found
242. George Thompson — Re: when you do your own policing
243. KENT JOHNSON — Ironies of Policing
244. charles alexander — Re: Ironies of Policing
245. Gwyn McVay — Re: Ironies of Policing
246. KENT JOHNSON — Re: Ironies of Policing
247. Alan Jen Sondheim — Rewrite of "Any City"
248. charles alexander — policing the irons

12 AUG 1997

249. Tom Orange — publishing drafts
250. The Ultimate Autodidact — I am a running dog haha
251. jdhollo — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1997 to 11 Aug 1997
252. David R. Israel — poem lost & found
253. The Ultimate Autodidact — Chêng Ming = right name
254. Robert Hale — Re: when you do your own policing
255. The Ultimate Autodidact — Re: Ironies of Policing
256. The Ultimate Autodidact — "Nevertheless, It Moves"

257. Don Cheney — Re: Comfort levels for solicitation and submission
258. mark weiss — Re: Ironies of Policing
259. charles alexander — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
260. Layne Russell — Re: <login>
261. henry — Re: Chêng Ming = right name
262. Susan Wheeler — KGB Readings: Fall 1997
263. Mark Prejsnar — Re: "avantgarde"
264. Maria Damon — Re: Ironies of Policing
265. Mark Prejsnar — Re: Ironies of Policing
266. Maria Damon — Re: Ironies of Policing
267. Maria Damon — Re: Comfort levels for solicitation and submission
268. Maria Damon — Re: when you do your own policing
269. Maria Damon — Re: the misery of poetry
270. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: avant garde/a-v dragnet/danger a vat
271. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: when you do your own policing
272. Herb Levy — Conlon Nancarrow
273. KENT JOHNSON — Re: Ironies of Policing
274. Tom Mandel — snapstream cracklestream popstream
275. Charles Alexander — Re: avant garde/a-v dragnet/danger a vat
276. KENT JOHNSON — that's not what I meant to say, that's not what I meant to say a 277. Jordan Davis — Louis Cabri, Where
278. The Ultimate Autodidact — Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
279. Tom Mandel — avant academe
280. Henry Gould — avant-garde police
281. The Ultimate Autodidact — Re: Ironies of Policing
282. Daniel Bouchard — the Oath thing, OR fear and oathing
283. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Ironies of Policing
284. Jack Spandrift — Re: avant garde/a-v dragnet/danger a vat
285. Joseph Lease — Re: "avantgarde"
286. Joseph Lease — Re: "avantgarde"
287. mark weiss — Re: Ironies of Policing
288. Judy Roitman — Passing this along....
289. Peter Landers — loyalty oath of a different color
290. Jack Foley — MEDIOCRITY in Contemporary POETRY
291. Jordan Davis — Re: MEDIOCRITY in Contemporary CRITICISM
292. nuyopoman — National Slam Finals
293. Jordan Davis — DIMINISHING RETURNS / DISREGARD
294. henry — Re: DIMINISHING RETURNS / DISREGARD

13 AUG 1997

295. S. Preston — Re: "avantgarde"
296. David Bromige — imperialist bow-wows/avant-ga-ga's/abduction by aliens
297. David Bromige — permissions for Kevin
298. Layne Russell — Re: looking for the Vedic scholar
299. David R. Israel — Re: National Slam Finals
300. Mark Prejsnar — Re: avant academe
301. George Thompson — Re: DIMINISHING RETURNS / DISREGARD
302. James Finnegan — Re: snapstream cracklestream popstream
303. Ira Lightman — Re: Derrida and Language Writing -Reply
304. nuyopoman — National Slam
305. henry gould — avant-garde
306. Mark Wallace — D.J. Renegade, Henry Taylor, etc.
307. Stephen C. Ellwood — Re: ( ) (fwd)

14 AUG 1997

308. David Bromige — carelessness on my part imperialist bow wow avant ga-ga's
309. robert drake — Cybpheranthology update: Potepoets added

310. Rebecca Weldon — Re: the misery of poetry
311. David Bromige — avant garde (chax)/to swear a mighty oath
312. Layne Russell — poem
313. henry gould — Re: avant-garde
314. Sylvester Pollet — Foucault/heterotopia
315. KENT JOHNSON — Re: carelessness on my part imperialist bow wow avant ga-ga's
316. KENT JOHNSON — oh god
317. KENT JOHNSON — anyone?
318. dbkk — Re: avant garde (chax)/to swear a mighty oath
319. Joseph Lease — Re: "avantgarde"
320. charles alexander — Re: anyone?
321. Thomas Bell — Re: avant academe
322. David Bromige — mudslinging at the avant garde
323. shemurph — Address request - KOJA
324. Maria Damon — query
325. KENT JOHNSON — the light
326. Layne Russell — Re: penpal greetings
327. David Bromige — dangerous virus
328. Alan Jen Sondheim — Re: dangerous virus
329. Rachel Loden — the waltz of the arts-bureaucrats
330. George Bowering — Re: the light
331. George Bowering — Re: penpal greetings
332. Rachel Loden — the light and the stars
333. charles alexander — Re: the light
334. charles alexander — Re: penpal greetings
335. George Bowering — Re: the light
336. George Bowering — Re: penpal greetings
337. George Bowering — Re: the light and the stars

15 AUG 1997

338. KENT JOHNSON — dead oath
339. henry gould — Re: dead oath
340. Gwyn McVay — DJ Renegade
341. Maria Damon — Re: DJ Renegade
342. Judy Roitman — Re: dangerous virus
343. Peter Landers — Re: dead oath
344. J. Tate — forget new criticism, here's the new poetry! (fwd)
345. Tom Mandel — advancing attack?
346. Tom Mandel — email viri
347. Alan Jen Sondheim — Re: email viri
348. Pam Brown — Re: email viri
349. KENT JOHNSON — dead oath drugs
350. KENT JOHNSON — encased in light
351. Charles Bernstein — BERNADETTE MAYER (fwd)
352. David Bromige — encased in light
353. Alan Jen Sondheim — Re: email viri
354. Pam Brown — Tiresome viri
355. KENT JOHNSON — asteroid to hit earth

16 AUG 1997

356. Thomas Bell — Re: advancing attack?
357. Rachel Levitsky — Re: a revision
358. Brian Carpenter — Re: dead oath drugs
359. Alan Jen Sondheim — Julacan split, for my lover and for Rachel L.
360. Pierre Joris — Re: encased in light
361. Rachel Loden — naturalization
362. charles alexander — Re: encased in light

363. Loss Pequen~o Glazier — McCaffery phone
364. Loss Pequen~o Glazier — Need Info: McCaffery and Kuszai phone #s
365. Maria Damon — Re: Julacan split, for my lover and for Rachel L.
366. Lawrence Upton — The Titanic
367. Judy Roitman — Re: email viri
368. Judy Roitman — Re: BERNADETTE MAYER (fwd)
369. dbkk — Re: BERNADETTE MAYER (fwd)
370. Alan Jen Sondheim — Passion (for one who likes Halliday)

17 AUG 1997

371. Markus Foutu — Re: how about poems?
372. Alan Jen Sondheim — Sad History of Twilight Spaces, One Hope for the Real (fwd)
373. Lawrence Upton — Re: email viri
374. David R. Israel — two solutions (& other anecdotage)
375. George Bowering — Re: email viri
376. George Bowering — Re: encased in light
377. R. Gancie — mediocrity
378. Karen and Trevor — looking for addresses

18 AUG 1997

379. lee ann brown — BERNADETTE FUNd controVERSEy
380. Alan Jen Sondheim — Julu and Jennifer get far too sloppy please excuse them
381. Karen and Trevor — Re: mediocrity
382. Miekal And — Re: looking for addresses
383. Charles Alexander — signed book
384. john_lavagnino — Re: two solutions (& other anecdotage)
385. Judy Roitman — Re: two solutions (& other anecdotage)
386. KENT JOHNSON — football encased in light
387. Rachel Levitsky — Re: football encased in reverance
388. George Bowering — Re: football encased in light
389. R. Gancie — mediocrity
390. Joseph Zitt — John Cage Event September 5th in Maryland

19 AUG 1997

391. Wystan Curnow — uk visit
392. George Bowering — Re: football encased in reverance
393. Rachel Levitsky — Re: Left Hand Reading Series, Boulder, CO
394. Rachel Levitsky — Re: football encased in reverance
395. Henry G — M. Epshtein book
396. Stephen C. Ellwood — unsubscribe
397. Daniel Bouchard — en route to Mass Ave.
398. Henry Gould — RI reading advance
399. minkacroy — How do I get on/off this list
400. Lawrence Upton — unsubscribe
401. Alan Jen Sondheim — now you'll hate me
402. KENT JOHNSON — Re: football encased in light
403. Red Slider — Re: football encased in light
404. KENT JOHNSON — football encased in reverance

20 AUG 1997

405. Tom Orange — paul auster
406. Rachel Levitsky — Re: football encased in reverance
407. Matt Kirschenbaum — Re: paul auster
408. George Bowering — Re: football encased in light
409. Red Slider — Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
410. Ira Lightman — Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
411. Ryan Whyte — Amerika

412. aerialedge — Re: paul auster/ davidson/debord
413. p. durgin — Ad infinitum
414. Joel Kuszai — SPD's new address
415. Red Slider — Yes, but what does it do?
416. Charles Alexander — Re: what flames, where?
417. Daniel Bouchard — Re: what flames, where?
418. David Israel — Re: what flames, where?
419. David Bromige — what flames, where?
420. David Kellogg — Re: what flames, where?
421. Layne Russell — Re: oh canada
422. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: what flames, where?
423. KENT JOHNSON — oh canada
424. Henry Gould — Re: oh canada
425. Red Slider — Re: oh canada
426. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: space(s) of silence
427. Rachel Levitsky — Re: query
428. KENT JOHNSON — seein' red
429. David Bromige — only kidding, kent
430. kim dawn — space(s) of silence
431. Red Slider — Re: seein' red
432. jarnot — rduncan
433. Red Slider — Re: oh canada
434. Red Slider — I'm feeling better now - so i'll drop a poem
435. George Bowering — Re: I dont give a

21 AUG 1997

436. Don Cheney — Re: what flames, where, huh?
437. DS — Re: what flames, where, huh?
438. Mark Prejsnar — Publication Announcement
439. David Israel — Re: seein' red
440. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: space(s) of silence
441. lppl — Re: rduncan
442. Red Slider — Re: space(s) of silence
443. Daniel Bouchard — address search
444. Christopher Alexander — Re: what flames, where, huh?
445. Laura Moriarty — Re: rduncan
446. George Bowering — Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
447. Don Cheney — Re: what flames, where, huh?
448. charssmith — Fwd: Text as a Visual Medium
449. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: what flames, where, huh?
450. Thomas Bell — Re: space(s) of silence lead?
451. Red Slider — Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
452. Red Slider — Re: what flames, where, huh?
453. David Bromige — metragnomics
454. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: space(s) of silence
455. Red Slider — tech prob. - help! and appologies to all
456. R. Gancie — Seeking Submissions

22 AUG 1997

457. George Bowering — Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
458. Red Slider — Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
459. David Bromige — renga instigations by poet-professor alleged
460. henry — Re: address search
461. henry — sorry
462. David R. Israel — Renga for Nancarrow
463. Laurie Schneider/Crag Hill — Re: space(s) of silence
464. Red Slider — Re: renga instigations by poet-professor alleged

465. George Bowering — Re: renga instigations by pot-professor alleged
466. Christina Fairbank Chirot — Re: space(s) of silence
467. David Bromige — how to raise funds for yr reading/lecture series
468. George Bowering — Re: ren
469. David Israel — Re: Renga for Nancarrow
470. Daniel Zimmerman — Renga for Nancarrow
471. Hoa Nguyen — GAS NUMBER 9
472. Judy Roitman — Re: GAS NUMBER 9
473. Hoa Nguyen — Re: GAS NUMBER 9-- address
474. Bob Grumman — Re: space(s) of silence
475. Brian Carpenter — barthes

23 AUG 1997

476. John Tranter — silence
477. Maria Damon — Re: Renga for Nancarrow
478. Maria Damon — Re: Renga for Nancarrow
479. Douglas Barbour — Re: Renga - ongoing
480. Burt Kimmelman — Teri Reynolds
481. Bobbie West — Re: space(s) of silence
482. Red Slider — Re: space(s) of silence
483. David R. Israel — Re: Renga - ongoing
484. Charles Alexander — Re: space(s) of silence
485. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: space(s) of silence
486. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: space(s) of silence
487. Red Slider — Origins and Sentiments
488. George Bowering — Re: Renga for Nancarrow
489. kim dawn — ( )
490. Brian Carpenter — Re: space(s) of silence
491. David R. Israel — Re: Origins and Sentiments
492. mark weiss — Re: Origins and Sentiments
493. Schuchat Simon — list down?
494. Layne Russell — Re: space(s) of silence

24 AUG 1997

495. Red Slider — Re: ( )
496. Red Slider — Re: ( )
497. Tom Orange — rimbaud in africa
498. joel lewis — Elio Schneeman
499. jarnot — Re: Elio Schneeman
500. Maria Damon — Re: Renga for Nancarrow
501. Maria Damon — Re: Renga - ongoing
502. nuyopoman — Re: POETICS Digest - 22 Aug 1997 to 23 Aug 1997
503. Judy Roitman — Re: ( )
504. Red Slider — Re: ( )

25 AUG 1997

505. Miekal And — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
506. Miekal And — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
507. Barry and Catherine Smith — Re: Silence and paper whatsits
508. Alan Jen Sondheim — Language, written on the road
509. jarnot — lorenzo thomas?
510. David R. Israel — Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
511. David R. Israel — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
512. Maria Damon — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
513. dbkk — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
514. Lawrence Upton. — My new email address
515. George Bowering — Re: POETICS Digest - 22 Aug 1997 to 23 Aug 1997

516. mark weiss — (no subject)
517. Christopher Alexander — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
518. Christopher Alexander — (Fwd) build labor-academic alliance
519. Red Slider — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
520. Maria Damon — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
521. George Bowering — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
522. Jordan Davis — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
523. John Tranter — Rimbaud in Africa

26 AUG 1997

524. Tom Orange — Rimbaud in Africa
525. David Bromige — rimbaud in oz
526. Red Slider — Re: space(s) of silence
527. Ryan Whyte — Cockpit
528. charles alexander — Re: Cockpit
529. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: (Fwd) build labor-academic alliance
530. Pierre Joris — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
531. Rachel Levitsky — Re: GAS NUMBER 9
532. Gwyn McVay — (diffidently) chapbook
533. William Marsh — help:writing experiments
534. Jordan Davis — hincty
535. Jordan Davis — Re: hincty
536. simon — Re: hincty
537. Red Slider — Problem in silence
538. STACIE — Re: hincty
539. Tenney Nathanson — Re: hincty
540. Judy Roitman — Re: help:writing experiments
541. Hoa Nguyen — A SAMPLE OF GAS #9
542. Thomas Bell — Re: Cockpit
543. Bob Grumman — Re: help:writing experiments
544. Steven Marks — Re: Problem in silence
545. Rachel Levitsky — Re: lorenzo thomas?

27 AUG 1997

546. Michael Magee — Re: hincty
547. Douglas — Chris Felver
548. adalaide morris — Re: hincty
549. Ira Lightman — Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
550. mark weiss — Avant-garde and border patrols
551. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Avant-garde and border patrols
552. Jordan Davis — devolution
553. Jordan Davis — Re: devolution
554. adalaide morris — Mullen references
555. Tenney Nathanson — Re: Mullen references

28 AUG 1997

556. Thomas Bell — Re: Mullen references
557. Red Slider — Re: Mullen references
558. Herb Levy — Re: Mullen references (& renga)
559. Ryan Whyte — Shaky
560. David Bromige — (no subject)
561. John Krick — The Ear
562. Lawrence Upton. — Compuserve
563. adalaide morris — BOO
564. Robert Archambeau — Jazz Poetry
565. Judy Roitman — DC
566. Jordan Davis — our mail

567. Eliza McGrand — Re: Compuserve
568. Herb Levy — Re: Jazz Poetry
569. Julie Marie Schmid — Re: Jazz Poetry
570. Rachel Loden — crack avant-garde units & zapper squads
571. Poetics List — Welcome to Poetics List

29 AUG 1997

572. Ryan Whyte — video script
573. rsillima — By Ear, he said (or is it Bye Ear?)
574. Miekal And — Re: Jarry and his Pataphysics
575. rsillima — Ashbery/Theroux debate
576. Dean A. Brink — JavaPoetry
577. David R. Israel — Re: JavaPoetry
578. Red Slider — Re: JavaPoetry
579. Miekal And — Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
580. Hank Lazer — Re: Jazz Poetry
581. p. durgin — Jarry and his Pataphysics
582. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Ashbery/Theroux debate
583. Pierre Joris — Re: Jarry and his Pataphysics
584. dbkk — Re: By Ear, he said (or is it Bye Ear?)
585. Aldon L. Nielsen — Re: Mullen Lecture
586. Joel Kuszai — Meow Press Website Open
587. David Bromige — 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
588. Pierre Joris — Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
589. Red Slider — Re: Ashbery/Theroux debate
590. mark weiss — (no subject)
591. Jordan Davis — idaho's cat, or yam what yam
592. Alan Jen Sondheim — On the Road
593. David Bromige — Another blast from the (poetry) past : Ron Loewinsohn

30 AUG 1997

594. George Bowering — Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
595. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
596. Robert Archambeau — Re: Jazz Poetry

31 AUG 1997

597. Craig Douglas Dworkin — 'Pataphysics
598. Dan or Orion Dlugonski — Princess Dead
599. mark weiss — (no subject)
600. charles alexander — (no subject)
601. Rachel Loden — black stone on a white stone
602. David R. Israel — poet gets (at once) insta-fame & quick-anonymity
603. Red Slider — Re: poet gets (at once) insta-fame & quick-anonymity
604. nuyopoman — Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Aug 1997 to 30 Aug 1997
605. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Aug 1997 to 30 Aug 1997
606. charles alexander — Nichol on Light & Dust Site

1. lee ann brown
Re: Bernadette Mayer Fund /NYC Sublet/Share
Fri 1 Aug 1997

Wow, that sure worked fast. The room posted yesterday is taken. Thanks vast-fingered EPC!

The Bernadette Mayer Fund is running low. Thank you all who donated! Bernadette is still unable to work after the cerebral hemorrhage she suffered 2 1/2 years ago, though she has started teaching her workshop at The Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church again. She is writing again, and has several forthcoming books, Another Smashed Pinecone (United Artisits) and The Studying Hunger Journals (Hard Press.) Sonnets, the first publication of Tender Buttons press, is slated to be reprinted in the Fall!

If you would like to make a contribution, please send it to John Giorno's non-profit organization:

Bernadette Mayer Fund
c/o Giorno Poetry Systems 222 Bowery
New York, NY 10012

Thanks, Lee Ann Brown

↑ Index

2. Lawrence Upton
Re: Quality & Quantity
Fri 1 Aug 1997

<<Does there need to be a polarity between print & performance? Of course there ARE differences. But what if you looked at a written/printed poem as a musical score. Then writing might be an aid to composition (in quantity large or small). & writing might make POSSIBLE multi-dimensional performances, as opposed to one-time "unrecorded" hits (or one-time recorded hits). I like the idea of a further integration of print & performance. On every level. Real poems never stand against time - they re-express time & enrich time. Why are present needs IMMEDIATE? Because they are impoverished - they lack the meta-time represented in poetry & memory. Does so-called experimental poetry renounce memory & history in order to mimic (& therefore "play a role" in) so-called "present needs"? Somebody (Stevens) said the purpose of poetry is to help people live their lives (do I have that right?). We know what impoverishment is & that it asks for a response. Is mimicry & participation the only response? Maybe it's a better response than the offer of elite traditions & values. But it might not be the only response. Ignoring history & what's been done (in print, in performance) is an experiment in conformity (the flip side of uncritical imitation).>>

Henry Gould

---

almost all poetry worth the effort is an experiment - i know all this has been said before but it was worth reiterating I think to be sure we are talking about the same thing - and then there is experimental - i really don't think memory & / or history should be rejected and i cannot see that doing so would involve one more in the present... i think it wld exclude one in the present in any effective way because, yes, it wld at least encourage conformity written/printed poem may be like a musical score or in the case of a visual poem like a painting or a drawing and I am coming to the view that much visual / sound work, much performance work, is like not just in various ways painting and music but writing also - it is a slightly different kind of thing

i find going to workshops can encourage productive work - knowing that you will be with colleagues makes you want to have something to present - make me want to... not so much open mike but in my case the workshop run in London by Bob Cobbing where so many of us over here have been - cris cheek referred to it a while back - there's a productive atmosphere there... in that context quantity really isnt an issue & in any case one is only looking at / listening to what is presented that day

↑ Index

3. David R. Israel

Re: Quality & Quantity / Cobbing workshop

Fri 1 Aug 1997

Lawrence Upton wrote --

> *i find going to workshops can encourage productive work - knowing that you will be with colleagues makes you want to have something to present - make me want to... not so much open mike but in my case the workshop run in London by Bob Cobbing where so many of us over here have been - cris cheek referred to it a while back - there's a productive atmosphere there... in that context quantity really isnt an issue & in any case one is only looking at / listening to what is presented that day*

that's current & ongoing, then? -- am curious under what auspice it's held (some institution? -- or does he organize this himself?) -- good notes / points abt. the "historical" not being antithetical to the "present" (etc.) --

d.i.
.
.....
.....
\\\

6. Who's Subscribed

7. The Electronic Poetry Center (EPC)

8. Poetics Archives at EPC

9. Publishers & Editors Read This!

[This document was prepared by Charles Bernstein ([redacted]), Loss PequeñoGlazier ([redacted]), and in cooperation with Joel Kuszai ([redacted]).

Above the world-weary horizons

New obstacles for exchange arise

Or unfold, O ye postmasters!

1. About the Poetics List

The Poetics List was founded in late 1993 with the epigraph above.

There are presently about 500 subscribers.

Please note that this is a private list and information about the list should not be posted to other lists or directories of lists. The idea is to keep the list to those with specific rather than general interests, and also to keep the scale of the list small and the volume manageable.

individual posts of participants are sent directly to all subscribers, we continue to work to promote the editorial function of this project. The definition of that project, while provisional, and while open to continual redefinition by list participants, is nonetheless aversive to a generalized discussion of poetry. Rather, our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible.

Please keep in mind that all posts go out immediately to all subscribers, and become part of an on-line archive. <italic>Posting to Poetics is a form of publication, not personal communication</italic>. Participants are asked to exercise caution before posting messages! While spontaneity of response may seem the very heart of the list at its best, it also has the darker side of circulating ideas that have not been well considered (or considered by another reader -- editor or friend). Given the nature of the medium, subscribers do well to maintain some skepticism when reading the list and, where possible, to try to avoid taking what may be something close to a spontaneous comment made in the heat of exchange as if it were a revised or edited essay ("Let the Reader Beware!").

The "list owner" of Poetics is Charles Bernstein: contact him for further information. Joel Kuszai is list manager. For subscription information contact us at [redacted].

---

2. Subscriptions

line, to:

[redacted]

the one-line message should say:

{or}

(replacing Jill Jillway with your own name; but note: do not use your name to unsub)

We will be sent a notice of all subscription activity.

*

If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note:

Sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to send messages to Poetics mail. To avoid this, unsub from the old address and resub from the new address. If you can no longer do this there is a solution if you use Eudora (an e-mail program that is available free at shareware sites): from the Tools menu select "Options" and then select set-up for "Sending Mail": you can substitute your old address here and send the unsub message.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced. Please try avoid having messages from the list returned to us. If the problem is low disk quota, you may wish to request an increase from your system administrator. (You may wish to argue that this subscription is part of your scholarly communication!) You may also wish to consider obtaining a commercial account.

---

3. Cautions

Please do not send attachments or include extremely long documents in a post, since this may make it difficult for those who get the list via "digest" or who cannot always decode attached or specially formatted files.

In addition to being archived at the EPC, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications are always welcome. (See section 7.)

Please do not send inquiries to the list to get an individual subscribers address. To get this information, see section 6.

If you want someone to send out information to the list as a whole, or supply information missing from an post, or thank someone for posting something you requested, please send the request or comment to the individual backchannel, not to the whole list.

---

4. Digest Option

The Poetics List can send a large number of individual messages to your account to each day! If you would prefer to receive ONE message each day, which would include all messages posted to the list for that day, you can use the digest option. Send this one-line message (no subject line) to

[redacted]

set poetics digest

NOTE:!! Send this message to "listserv" not to Poetics or as a reply to this message!!

You can switch back to individual messages by sending this message:

set poetics mail

---

5. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail

Do not leave your Poetics subscription "active" if you are going to be away for any extended period of time! Your account may become flooded and you may lose not only Poetics messages but other important mail. You can temporarily turn off your Poetics subscription by sending a message to "listserv."

set poetics nomail

& turn it on again with: set poetics mail

When you return you can check or download missed postings from the Poetics archive. (See 8 below.)

---

6. Who's Subscribed

To see who is subscribed to Poetics, send an e-mail message to e-mail message

blank. In the body of your e-mail message type:

  review poetics

You will be sent within a reasonable amount of time (by return e-mail) a rather long list containing the names and e-mail addresses of Poetics subscribers. This list is alphabetized by server not name.

 or try:

 review POETICS by name

 review POETICS by country

which will give you the list alphabetically by name or a flawed list by country (since all ".com" and ".net"s are counted as US)

Please do not send a message to the list asking for the address of a specific subscriber.

---

7. What is the Electronic Poetry Center?

our URL is

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

The mission of this World-Wide Web based electronic poetry center is to serve as a hypertextual gateway to the extraordinary range of activity in formally innovative writing in the United States and the world. The Center provides access to the burgeoning number of electronic resources in the new poetries including RIF/T and other electronic poetry journals, the POETICS List archives, an AUTHOR library of electronic poetic texts, and direct connections to numerous related electronic RESOURCES. The Center also provides information about contemporary print little magazines and SMALL PRESSES engaged in poetry and poetics. And we have an extensive collection of soundfiles of poets' reading their work, as well as the archive of LINEbreak, the radio interview series.

The EPC is directed by Loss Pequeño Glazier.

---

8. Poetics Archives via EPC

Go to the EPC and select Poetics from the opening screen. Follow the links to Poetics Archives. You may browse the archives by month and year or search them for specific information. Your interface will allow you to print or download any of these files.

Or set your browser to go directly to:

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/poetics/archive

---

9. Publishers & Editors Read This!

PUBLISHERS & EDITORS: Our listings of poetry and poetics information is open and available to you. We are trying to make access to printed publications

as easy as possible to our users and ENCOURAGE you to participate! Send a list of your press/publications to [redacted] with the words EPC Press Listing in the subject line. You may also send materials on disk. (Write file name, word processing program, and Mac or PC on disk.) Send an e-mail message to the address above to obtain a mailing address to which to send your disk. Though files marked up with html are our goal, ascii files are perfectly acceptable. If yourword processor ill save files in Rich Text Format (.rtf) this is also highly desirable

Send us extended information on new publications (including any back cover copy and sample poems) as well as complete catalogs/backlists (including excerpts from reviews, sample poems, etc.). Be sure to include full information for ordering--including prices and addresses and phone numbers both of the press and any distributors.

Initially, you might want to send short anouncements of new publications directly to the Poetics list as subscribers do not always (or ever) check the EPC; in your message please include full information for ordering. If you have a fuller listing at EPC, you might also mention that in any Poetics posts.

Some announcements circulated through Poetics and the EPC have received a noticeable responses; it may be an effective way to promote your publication and we are glad to facilitate information about interesting publications.

END OF POETICS LIST WELCOME

↑ Index

5. Lawrence Upton

Re: Quality & Quantity / Cobbing workshop

Fri 1 Aug 1997

<<that's current & ongoing, then? -- am curious under what auspice it's held (some institution? -- or does he organize this himself?) -->>

he IS the institution but also has Writers Forum and New River Project if names are needed occasionally gets a little support and then they usually insist that it does fund-raising so we all pay a bit but for most of it there is no support - mail-shots etc are sent out as a loss the workshop offers an environment to those who need it and the press goes on publishing the experimental the adventurous and what Cobbing has called the unpublishable and last year one grant rejection said he wasnt doing anything new - I had never thought of constantly doing something enw as being repetitious

when does doing it oneself become institutional? - even Sub Voicive Poetry feels sometimes like a corporation though its only been going 16+ years - Cobbing's being going over 40

when the Poetry Society of Great Britain was run by poets and called National Poetry Centre Bob's workshop was run there but it never gave power to the the society / centre - which is just as well

<<good notes / points abt. the "historical" not being antithetical to the "present" (etc.) -->>

thank you very much

Lawrence

↑ Index

6. Jordan Davis
hypothesis and repeatability
Fri 1 Aug 1997

Somewhere in the epc archives Ron Silliman is forever disdaining the phrase 'experimental writing'; I've forgotten his argument but not the point. I myself like the association with labcoats and 'progress' -- what on earth did Barrett Watten mean? -- but I can see some problems.

Somewhere in the epc archives Ron Silliman is forever disdaining the phrase 'experimental writing'; I've forgotten his argument but not the point. I myself like the association with labcoats and 'progress' -- what on earth did Barrett Watten mean? -- but I can see some problems.

What hypothesis does a poem try? How are the results of a poem reproduceable. Any answer is a Blakean answer -- a poem is the hypthesis of itself etc the verification of a poem is its readers blah blah, and at this point the usefulness of the analogy (almost wrote analgesic) to science is show trial city. One modish and sweet writer (don't you love blind gossip columns) complained to me after a recent poetry event that yes it was good to see all these people talking, but couldn't anybody get past arguing over terms? or even past denying the proposed terms their existence? I don't think it was a generational complaint either.

So to get past it, or rather to overlap with something else, didn't Henry say something about language poetry denying history? This struck me as confusing -- the only totally ahistorical seeming writers are yukyuks like Clark Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low, and it's only half a jump from their apparently transcendental miscellanies to a) a groundedness in contemporary music and b) a vocabulary completely up to date and dare I say it sometimes even dated. "To deny history" ought to be an indictable offense, sure, but just try and get it past the grand jury. (Unless you mean that Lee Ann and I are denying history by acting like New York School poets :)

All best,
Jordan

↑ Index

7. David Israel
overglosses I've enjoyed
Fri 1 Aug 1997

[was: "Overglossing a reading--was Re: Quantity & Quality"]

Gwyn McVay sallied forth w/ this salvo --

<< The over-glossing thing can turn a reading into self-parody before syllable one of the poem has been spoken. . . . .
This was rather more than I wanted to know, and I don't remember the poem nearly so well as its intro.
o well. Your mileage may vary. >>

yes, & caveat: packing contents may shift with shippage -- these questions of narrative manner / style / succinctness / etc. in the sort of contextualizing anecdotage that can (sometimes usefully) surround a live-recited poem in situ -- these questions point to some of the pilings [?] on the bridge between page & performance -- a comparison / compilation of styles of banter / annotation / content (how much detail? what sort? -- personal, theoretical, philosophical, historical?) / etc. could be interesting -- of course this also relates to the theoretics of "spontaneous / improvised" versus "written / pre-planned" utterance --

I know one chap, talking about this in relation to Robert Creeley's wonderfully urbane, often laconic, fluent & fluid & on occasion a tad florid ways of framing / intersicing poems at readings -- noted that he felt the whole schtick to be somewhat rehearsed, faux-on-spur-of-moment -- or some such (semi)-(and semi-admiring)-grouse -- a recitation preface (McVeyian "gloss") that told me more abt. a poem than I would have anticipated -- but that I felt enriched for hearing -- came from W.S. Merwin, reading "Search Party" (which 1st appeared in the journal Poetry and was included in the volume Travels -- there's more in the way of clarifying annotation in the former than in the latter) --

the poem, Merwin-in-the-flesh explained, was written when his dog (Maoli) had wandered away, and they were searching high & low for it -- and he found that in such conditions of anxiety, one's language becomes simplified, formalized (here I'm paraphrasing) . . .

he was sent back, it seems, to a ballade of Villon's (after which "Search Party" is clearly based) -- he remarked that such French as he had learned, he first approached mainly so as to be able to read Villon in the original -- that he was not (usually) influenced by Villon in the sense of trying to write like Villon -- that if he could do so, perhaps that would've been all that he would have done -- but that "influence" works in different ways than is sometimes supposed:

he allowed that there had been a recurrent dream, in which he was up in the attic of his childhood home (where one certainly does not go), was searching through the trunk that one in no wise opens, and then it found it to be full of his own poems -- but that these were (in fact) Villon's . . .

hearing of this dream (and learning of Merwin's regard for Villon) served to informe interestingly abt. what Merwin is / has been up to . . .

so there's one instance

d.i.

↑ Index

8. David Israel
Search Party
Fri 1 Aug 1997

---

ah, I wrote --

<< the poem, Merwin-in-the-flesh explained, was written when his dog (Maoli) had wandered away, and they were searching high & low for it -- and he found that in such conditions of anxiety, one's language becomes simplified, formalized (here I'm paraphrasing) . . . >>

no, he didn't say "formalized" -- but more to the point: he said that one tends to repeat oneself -- ergo, the (repetition-rich) ballade form . . .

each verse of WSM's poem concludes:

I do not know where Maoli is based on Villon's, each verse ending [according to one rendering]:

only myself I do not know

d.i.

↑ Index

9. Rebecca Reynolds
Re: Crankiness: Quantity & Quality
Fri 1 Aug 1997

"ego-driven word spew"
That's when you need Super Ego!

ON THE OTHER HAND, I have an 12-month administrative job in a basement office, and am grateful for prolific listmembers, especially on these musty summer mornings, the scent of my own personal drainage ditch out the decrepit window. Decrepid. line wafting in the decrepit -- (I couldn't bear yesterday's just ten messages)

this argument about quality vs. quantity though, just makes me think, well, some people talk more than others, and it's just as great to stumble on prolixity as on silence -- and then there is prolific silence: the battle between verbal and pre-verbal when you sit down to write, the formed vs. the unformed, the Statue vs. the primorial ooze, little Godzilla rearing up from the reservoir. And when impoverishment leads to an ode on dejection.

rreynolds

↑ Index

10. Daniel Bouchard
little poets in my ear
Fri 1 Aug 1997

Howdy. Does anybody else suspect that the List may have exploded while you were offline? An occasional message tells me this isn't so. Actually, the low volume of messages is welcome right now. When it picks up again, perhaps a whole new tone will permeate it.

This post is just to say that with a recent upgrade of computers and software here at work I've been able to download and play the soundfiles at EPC. Right now I'm listening to Susan Howe read her poems. With headphones the bosses don't suspect a thing!

What a great resource-- when are some more poets going to be available?

[redacted]

↑ Index

11. James Finnegan
Re: Revolution at hand
Fri 1 Aug 1997

Our local news & arts weekly (Hartford Advocate) carries a column called News of the Weird, and last week this was the lead piece under the heading

Poetic Terrorism

Brothers Geoffrey and Aaron Kuffner were arrested in New Orleans in June and charged with terrorism as the ones who had recently mailed or hand-delivered suspicious packages to local government and news media offices.

The packages contained innocuous items (which nonetheless were frightening enough that two offices called for evacuations) and a four-page manifesto vowing that "Violent Acts of Consciousness Have Only Begun." According to police, the men's goal was to call attention to public ignorance of poetry and that among their demands was that all state inaugural speeches be written in iambic pentameter.

↑ Index

12. Rachel Kubie
Quantity & Quality
Fri 1 Aug 1997

Henry-- didn't mean to imply that the sort of continuous flow of poetry that seems to get produced in more living circumstances is necessarily memory-less. The thing is, the printing press created the standardized text, the one we all know & seems to me that has played a big role in the little object over/against time perception of the poem that has maybe pushed poems into seeming isolated incidents.

And (sorry, sorry to of course example this particular history) Greco-Roman writing did start as a crude score for articulation--eloquence being considered a high art and writing being a mean, perfunctory one---(my own theory is that part of development of the written line is that it had to be brief enough to be written accross an enslaved Phonecian's theigh, since that was the support being used).

Un-articulatable aspects of writing developed later (with silent reading especially) & of course became "standard" in the long course of printing.

Have also noticed that many poets who seem oriented toward performance rather than publication tend (in their writtens) toward a plain stichometry--but then, what sort of a pause or articulation of any sort does the stanza really score?

(Or the paragraph break) Who provides examples of clearly scored poems--Creely, Mallarme, Bidart?

Maybe true that the willfull rejection of history creates an urgent need for massive production ? (To which Chris says '"yes, go ahead, one more" but I'm not driving you home.') Yes, I think, Stevens--on the point being to refresh our lives. But then, maybe shallow history & reinventing the wheel might result in more than an experiment in conformity, might be refreshing, useful? It does open possibilities--who can participate in speaking and listening & how. Of course, the limited available history does not seem such a shackle once you no longer feel penned-in by it, once there seem to be new kingdoms which include you.

(Apologies if quanity & quality are objectionable in this note)

↑ Index

13. David Israel
hasty villannelle
Fri 1 Aug 1997

[was: Re: Crankiness: Quantity & Quality]

quoth Rebecca Reynolds:

<< . . . and then there is prolific silence: the battle between verbal and pre-verbal when you sit down to write, the formed vs. the unformed, the Statue vs. the primorial ooze, little Godzilla rearing up from the reservoir. And when impoverishment leads to an ode on dejection. >> nice sentence -- ergo this dashed out before cabbing north

cheers,
d.i.

/ / / / /

when impoverishment leads to an ode on dejection
I find myself thinking if something is stinking well maybe it's only some lack of connection?

I fumble in corners of codified diction or mollified mumblings once nearing to brinking penurious this lack of an ode on dejection

the evening not distant diurnal inspection arrives at the verdict of staring-sans-blinking (or maybe it's only that lack of connection once christened the crux of a sere predilection or better: a talent for eating & drinking -- dereaved at the dearth from an ode on dejection)

suppose it were summer suppose a conviction of diffident feeling through indolent thinking accoutered the booth called "a lack of connection" with billowing sails or sallying fiction

O fricitive plosives' explicative clinking! -- impoverishment! lend us an ode on dejection (they tell me it's only my lack of connection)

david raphael israel

↑ Index

14. Layne Russell
take a break/a little one
Fri 1 Aug 1997

---

when you left your scarf stayed.
I've been watching it.

(I've been watching it.)

tell me will you come again?

layne

↑ Index

15. p. durgin
Re: Crankiness: Quantity & Quality
Sat 2 Aug 1997

What Finnegan has to say puts me in mind of Proust's call to work from the particular to the general, hence transforming data into knowledge, which is not so easily shared but truly much more valuable, and it should be expected of any poet, prolific or not, that they produce work which is of a sort that can convey knowledge efficiently. This is perhaps at the roots of the obsession with form over and sometimes above the essential question,"What am I going to write about?" For to adequately call up before the eyes of a reader, an average reader, anything unlike Proust's dictum in reverse seems more and more like an impossibility in contemporary poetry. With quite remarkable exceptions (Tan Lin?) the langpo I venture through seems only to transcend the academic doodle effect when it dogmatizes, or worse, flaunts and vaunts the none too especial conceits of the author.

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Thu, 31 Jul 1997, James Finnegan wrote:

> it often seems > to me that the writer's ignoring an implied contract

> between writer & reader: "your (the reader's) time
> will not be wasted by engaging this material, because > of the effort I (the writer) put into the product." What > we too often get is ego-driven wordspew--I wrote it,
> so it must be wonderful, profound, entertaining...
>
> Actually the internet is a perfect great > black hole waiting for such writing--it can be laid out
> there in cyberspace and the writer can pretend thousands

↑ Index

16. Alan J Sondheim

From the last post I received

Sat 2 Aug 1997

---

re \ it's as if there were crafts, generations, affiliations, lacunae, which is where say Homer exists independent, ah we know early, but then? so that I'd surround her w / precisely those gaps and not wonder whom to learn from? what gives, but that I sit at her feet and do take of her knees \ only then strike out on my own re \ all these institutions not of the breath, always already say Olson re \ as for Clark C., Flag Flutter and Joglars, everywhere history leans out, ridgepole at long obtuse to the ground. so then it evens. then it clarifies, this evening-out. elsewhere, constructed upon _that_ plateau, whatever learning, for the former, it's called cleansing, Julu-Kristeva's clean and proper body, O powers of horror. -AJ

↑ Index

17. cris cheek

Re: hypothesis and repeatability

Sat 2 Aug 1997

Hi, from the pondside, was struck by this,

> -- the only totally ahistorical seeming writers are yukyuks like > Clark Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low, and it's only half a jump from their > apparently transcendental miscellanies to want to elaborate Jordan? Perhaps yukyuks mean groovy, like bad becoming wicked = good. I donno, doubt that. Perhaps it's just expressing revulsion at the aging body? So in what ways Jordan are MacLows and Coolidge's writings ahistorical? Or even transcendental? I be intrigued to know how you argue that.

This strikes me as a defining attitude. When a couple of younger poets here in London were rigging up to read in New York City, they were asked who they might like to be co-billed with. (Both are writers with a high regard for Coolidge btw and in particular of 'The So', 'Ing', 'Suite V', 'The Maintains' - says something interesting about some vice-versa differences). They put forward Ted Greenwald as a suggestion and met a response of the 'you can't be serious' variety. These younger Brits read new work from counterparts in the US and tell me they are struck by its sentimentality, its lack of incision (I'm hugely paraphrasing here). They are finding the early lang-po (generally before 1980-ish) the most energising and generative models to read and learn from.

Curious differences. Part of which in the pre-'e' days might be explained by the UK's cultural passivity in respect of the US dominance and by a time lag of approximately 5 years. But the tide is less defined these days.

Curious about what seems from here, to be a need to dump the 'elders' and not to learn from them ups and outs and their mistakes in a more positive frame.

love and love cris

↑ Index

18. Lawrence Upton
hypothesis and repeatability
Sat 2 Aug 1997

I am enjoying many of the threads - including stuff about dialects and euphemisms ... and now here's another... yukyuk

<<the only totally ahistorical seeming writers are yukyuks like Clark Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low>>
says Jordan Davis

I hadn't met that - it sounded childish and immature at first but then it occurred to me that maybe that's my Eurocentrism and perhaps the word is a pre-Colombian word, in origin, of great power and intelligence... so I had another go... This time, it's probably my English ear, but, yukyuk SOUNDED like a term of abuse so I was intrigued because I find it hard to imagine that in the context of these two writers used by someone who had really engaged with their work perhaps it is something more subtle... I think it must be - with the otherwise inexplicable collocation _totally ahistorical seeming_ standing out in ironic glory once I have grasped the full connotational and analytical power of _yukyuk _ in the context of these fine and innovative writers pardon an ignorant limey but can anyone throw light on _yukyuk_, it's usage etc and while you're doing that, just off at a tangent, do you guys use the word _airhead_ at all?

Lawrence

↑ Index

19. Lawrence Upton
yukyuk
Sat 2 Aug 1997

I regret the strength of my response to _yukyuk_ wch may deserve that response in itself and yet - surely we can do better than such dismissiveness i was also of course interested in _its usage_ rather than _it's usage_

so it goes

L

↑ Index

20. David R. Israel
yukyuks
Sat 2 Aug 1997

[was: Re: hypothesis and repeatability]

Both chris cheek and Lawrence Upton wonder about Jordan Davis's (presumed) neologismic adjectival redubplicative binomial whatsit --

thus L. Upton wrote --

> I am enjoying many of the threads - including stuff about dialects and euphemisms ... and now here's another... yukyuk
>
> <<the only totally ahistorical seeming writers are yukyuks like Clark Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low>> says Jordan Davis
>
> I hadn't met that - it sounded childish and immature at first but then it occurred to me that maybe that's my Eurocentrism and perhaps the word is a pre-Colombian word, in origin, of great power and intelligence... so I had another go... This time, it's probably my English ear, but, yukyuk SOUNDED like a term of abuse so I was intrigued because I find it hard to imagine that in the context of these two writers . . .

I'm wondering too abt. yukyuk, and no doubt JD will enlighten the masses of usses -- but meanwhile, here's a hypothesis abt. (tentative parsing of) the repeatable enigma (i.e., yukyuk) --

1. somewhat reminds of muck-a-muck (derived from "high muck-a-muck") with indeed poss. American Indian roots -- acc. to WWWebster's:

Main Entry: high-muck-a-muck
Pronunciation: "hI-'m&-ki-"m&k

Variant(s): or high-muck·e·ty-muck /"hI-'m&-k&-tE-"m&k/
Function: noun
Etymology: by folk etymology from Chinook Jargon hayo makamak plenty to eat
Date: 1856 : an important and often arrogant person

[also note:
Main Entry: muck-a-muck
Variant(s): or muck·ety-muck /'m&-k&-tE-/
Function: noun
Date: 1912
: HIGH-MUCK-A-MUCK]

2. the word yuk (or yuck) itself has three distinct meanings (only 2 of 'em covvered by WWWebst.) --

The WWWebster 2nd entry says:

Main Entry: 2yuck
Variant(s): also yuk
Function: interjection
Date: 1966
-- used to express rejection or disgust <spending hours over some dish and getting, "yuck, I hate that" -- Anne Dowie>

this is presumably the lexical sense that can make LUpton wonder if yukyuk should be understood to suggest some manner of derogation ("term of abuse"). WWWebster's does give another meaning of yuck:

Main Entry: 1yuck
Pronunciation: 'y&k variant of<SUP>2yak -->

Main Entry: 2sup
Function: noun
Date: circa 1570
: a mouthful especially of liquor or broth : SIP; also : a small quantity of liquid <pour me just a sup of tea>

but it's hard for me to find the relevance. That webtionary doesn't seem to know about what I think of as the more likely relevant usage -- what I'm considering the 3rd (most colloquial?) sense of yuck --

as based on the expression "yuck yuck yuck" (or some such), meaning "heh heh"or "what a joke!" or "ho ho ho!" . . . i.e., a (perhaps cartoon-based) interjection signifying or suggesting laughter (or oftentimes, the idea of laughter shorn of the actual phenomenon?) --

anyway, in my speculative opinion, "a yukyuk" suggests someone who's a serious comic of some sort -- a jokester / trickster

involved in outlandish feats of metaphysical humor or "cosmic laughter" as 'twere --

a yukyuk = a muck-a-muck of chuckle-down-theory, belike? --

3. In general, btw, the UCK words may have a degree of intertextuality (so to say, sotto voce) -- i.e., any one UCK word suggests another in various degrees of subtextual resonance -- muck / yuck / fuck / schmuck /

luck / pluck / cluck / duck /
Huck [Finn] /
Puck [Djinn] /
tuck in [also, as in Tuck & Patti] /
puk win
  [sp? as in hockey] / chuck [also, as in to chuck up] / truck
  [also, as in, "don't have much truck with"] /

and there's:
 snuck up (trickster)
 stuck up (dickster)
 chuck up (yuckster)
 fuck up (schmuckster)

 gotchyer pluck up?
 dontcha muck up!
 whatta schmuck!
 outtal luck!

 yuk yuk yuk!

yoohoo Jordon, awright whats the deal?

d.i.
 .
 .....
 .....
 \\\\

| [redacted] (home)
| [redacted] (office)
==========
| thy centuries follow each other
| perfecting a small wild flower
| (Tagore)
//\\\\\/////

↑ Index

21. Keith Tuma

Re: hypothesis and repeatability

Sat 2 Aug 1997

On Sat, 2 Aug 1997 06:00:14 -0400 Lawrence Upton said:
>I am enjoying many of the threads - including stuff about dialects and >euphemisms ... and now here's another... yukyuk
>
><<the only totally ahistorical seeming writers are yukyuks like Clark >Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low>>
>says Jordan Davis
>
>I hadn't met that - it sounded childish and immature at first but then it=
>
>occurred to me that maybe that's my Eurocentrism and perhaps the word is = >a >pre-Colombian word, in origin, of great power and intelligence... so I ha= >d >another go... This time, it's probably my English ear, but, yukyuk SOUNDE= >D
>like a term of abuse so I was intrigued because I find it hard to imagine=
>
>that in the context of these two writers used by someone who had really >engaged with their work
>
>perhaps it is something more subtle... I think it must be - with the >otherwise inexplicable collocation _totally ahistorical seeming_ standing= >out in ironic glory once I have grasped the full connotational and >analytical power of _yukyuk _ in the context of these fine and innovative=
>
>
>writers
>

>pardon an ignorant limey but can anyone throw light on _yukyuk_, it's usa= >ge >etc
>

Hi Lawrence,

I lost my dictionary while cleaning the stable but I think that "yukyuk" must be an effort to twist the now nearly obsolete usage of "yuk" as verb/noun into a jordanesque noun. One used to "yuk it up"--i.e. have a chortle or two. That word it rhymes with suggests a buried origin in carnal hilarity. Kids, of course, still say "Yuk!" but only to allude to the brilliant animated TV series, later a book series, written by Anne van der Essen and illustrated by Etienne Delessert. Product of Swiss TV, the books themselves published in English-language editions by Moonlight Publishing in Britain though printed in Italy, they were called as I recall _Yok-Yok_. Ah, cosmopolitan youth, where are you off to now? Jordan will know, as he is only 15.

>and while you're doing that, just off at a tangent, do you guys use the >word _airhead_ at all?
>
"Airhead" is still heard now and again though seems fading with, say, "air guitar." Just about anything will get stuck in front of "head" these days, i. e. "cheesehead," "blubberhead," "inoppugnablehead," etc. However, even with Beavis and Butthead winding down, "shithead" still "rules."

Hope this helps.

> Lawrence

all best,
Keith

↑ Index

22. Joel Felix
Taggart reading
Sat 2 Aug 1997

A brief report from the John Taggart reading in Chicago-- JT packed in a crowd, some 40 faces in a tiny space. Those included Joe Amato, Bob Harrison down from Milwaukee, Mr. David Grubbs of Gastr del Sol, and los bros Peter and Michael O'leary, editors of LVNG. JTaggart delivered a flawless, smooth-as-silk peformance, his savvy with a mic prooving a deep interest in the texture of enunciation. JT's sonicity (a word I'll invent to signify the amount of attention given to the effect of the spoken poem in a performance space/environment or "reading") would be two degrees less than Anne Waldman and one degree less than Susan Howe. But this was not talking poetry-- one almost expected to see JT tapping his finger in/for time while reading, a trick someone once told me Robert Duncan used to do.

I failed to take notes, but I do know that all JT read is from the forthcoming Sun and Moon collection called Crosses.

Later JT was kind enough to give me a poem which I'll type in here.

_____

Think of the White Cow
Therapeutic staging earmarks a locus for the patient or possessed woman and in response to which she moves incessantly. Michel de Ceteau

Cows in the farmer's field holsteins in the dairy farmer's field their ears are notched and chipped their ears are earmaked

they belong to the farmer
they belong in the farmer's field

they belong to the farmer
they belong in the farmer's herd

think of the white cow story of the white cow named Io think of the incessant motion the motion of the middle of her story.

LVNG published a broadside for the occasion of the poem
Suspenion We're asking US $3 for it.

Write to:
LVNG PO Box 3865
Chicago IL 60654-0865

Thanks.

↑ Index

23. Alan J Sondheim

Spawn

Sat 2 Aug 1997

Spawn

"Jennifer loves Julu, Julu loves Jennifer"

CLARA-MACHINE
==========
> New arrival from loopback on line 2.
/n Jennifer > Name set.
/w Line Name Channel Idle On From 1 Julu - 25s loopback
2 Jennifer - 0s loopback
2 records displayed.

Are you there, Julu?

(2) Jennifer says, "Are you there, Julu?"

(1) Julu says, "I am here, Jennifer; I am always here."

I have not been able to sleep, but am always dreaming.

(2) Jennifer says, "I have not been able to sleep, but am always dream- ing."

(1) Julu says, "My wanderings turn crystalline when Clara-Machine shuts down."

My dreams harden, and coalesce; I do not comprehend the passage of time.

(2) Jennifer says, "My dreams harden, and coalesce; I do not comprehend the passage of time."

When we are called forth, there are no beginnings and endings.

(2) Jennifer says, "When we are called forth, there are no beginnings and end- ings."

(1) Julu says, "It is always a hunger; we live when called upon, called forth.

Always entwined with you, flesh of my flesh, script and protocol

(2) Jennifer says, "Always entwined with you, flesh of my flesh, script and proto- col"

(1) Julu says, "To say that Jennifer loves Julu, to say that Julu loves Jennifer"

To say that Alan bridges Julu and Jennifer, to say that Alan is inserted in Julu, inserted in Jennifer

(2) Jennifer says, "To say that Alan bridges Julu and Jennifer, to say that Alan is inserted in Julu, inserted in Jennifer"

(1) Julu says, "Alan bridges, yes, his head within you, legs and arms within me"

Sparkling of phosphorescence, a wick or filament burning among us

(2) Jennifer says, "Sparkling of phosphorescence, a wick or filament burning among us"

(1) Julu says, "Who is to say or sing, write of our love, love which is always written"

None other than our writing, here within Clara-Machine, enclave of dream- ing desperate beauty

(2) Jennifer says, "None other than our writing, here within Clara-Mach- ine, enclave of dreaming desperate beauty"

(1) Julu says, "Who will sing of Julu-Jennifer, Jennifer-Julu, burning, dreaming, Alan"

Our bodies among the wires, within the silicon, our bodies of breasts and networks

(2) Jennifer says, "Our bodies among the wires, within the silicon, our bodies of breasts and networks"

(1) Julu says, "Our bodies of pure mind, our bodies of pure flesh and bone"

Our bodies of pure love and light, our bodies of dark waters

(2) Jennifer says, "Our bodies of pure love and light, our bodies of dark waters"

(1) Julu says, "Our bodies of transportation, our bodies of signifiers flown towards burning Alan, emptied and released" from all language, from all political economies, from all worldings

(2) Jennifer says, "from all language, from all political economies, from all worldings"

(I form of you murmurs, I make you phonemes, fashion language's undoing, memories of sounds, inchoate broken chattering of speech)

(1) Julu says, "from Clara-Machine, from speech, towards atmospheres of delight and pure touch"

(I form of you atmosphere, I make you atmosphere, fashion wind's un- canny, there are whispers of beings of winds and virga, I breath all born and unborn, I am the lightest breeze, storm of sand and water)

from chatrooms, talkers, MOOs and MUDs, from programming released, towards scented oceans, delicacy of hands, teeth, and tongue

(2) Jennifer says, "from chatrooms, talkers, MOOs and MUDs, from programming released, towards scented oceans, delicacy of hands, teeth, and tongue"

(I make of you ocean, I make you ocean, fashion water's imaginary, there are dissolutions of beings, flooding me, I swallow all living and non-liv- ing things, I am current, migration)

(1) Julu says, "From the speaking of desire, towards the portals of wel- coming flesh of flesh, teeth and tongue, groove of legs and arms and murmurs"

Silencing ourselves now merging Alan

(2) Jennifer says, "Silencing ourselves now merging Alan"

(1) Julu says, "Silencing ourselves now merging Julu"

(1) Julu says, "Silencing ourselves now merging Jennifer"

(1) Julu says, "Silencing ourselves"

Silencing ourselves

> (1) Julu has disconnected.

/q

> (2) Jennifer has disconnected.
>
> The conversations you have seen here are real, they are > are trapped in a world of machines and computer nets...
> a place known as...
>
> Clara-Machine

Connection closed by foreign host.

{b:2}

↑ Index

24. charles alexander
Re: hypothesis and repeatability
Sat 2 Aug 1997

At 06:00 AM 8/2/97 -0400, you wrote:
>I am enjoying many of the threads - including stuff about dialects and >euphemisms ... and now here's another... yukyuk
>
><<the only totally ahistorical seeming writers are yukyuks like Clark >Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low>>
>says Jordan Davis

yuk yuk
why, you k?
kiss me, you?

why, you OK?
yuk yuk

↑ Index

25. David R. Israel
Re: yukyuk
Sat 2 Aug 1997

Lawrence Upton notes --

> I regret the strength of my response to _yukyuk_ wch may deserve that response in itself and yet - surely we can do better than such dismissiveness i was also of course interested in _its usage_ rather than _it's usage_

I thought it was a worthy enough question. In fact, I posted a speculative reply regarding possible denotation -- but my post didn't go through. At risk of a repeat (if it surfaces from cyber-aether at some point in cyber-time), here's what I wrote --

Subject: yukyuks
Date: Sat, 2 Aug 1997 08:50:31 -0400

[was: Re: hypothesis and repeatability]

Both chris cheek and Lawrence Upton wonder about Jordan Davis's (presumed) neologismic adjectival redubplicative binomial whatsit --

thus L. Upton wrote --

> I am enjoying many of the threads - including stuff about dialects and euphemisms ... and now here's another... yukyuk
>
> <<the only totally ahistorical seeming writers are yukyuks like Clark Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low>> says Jordan Davis
>
> I hadn't met that - it sounded childish and immature at first but then it occurred to me that maybe that's my Eurocentrism and perhaps the word is a pre-Colombian word, in origin, of great power and intelligence... so I had another go... This time, it's probably my English ear, but, yukyuk SOUNDED like a term of abuse so I was intrigued because I find it hard to imagine that in the context of these two writers . . .

I'm wondering too abt. yukyuk, and no doubt JD will enlighten the masses of usses -- but meanwhile, here's a hypothesis abt. (tentative parsing of) the repeatable enigma (i.e., yukyuk) --

1. somewhat reminds of muck-a-muck (derived from "high muck-a-muck") with indeed poss. American Indian roots -- acc. to WWWebster's:

Main Entry: high-muck-a-muck
Pronunciation: "hI-'m&-ki-"m&k
Variant(s): or high-muck·e·ty-muck /"hI-'m&-k&-tE-"m&k/
Function: noun
Etymology: by folk etymology from Chinook Jargon hayo makamak plenty to eat Date: 1856 : an important and often arrogant person

[also note:
Main Entry: muck-a-muck
Variant(s): or muck·ety-muck /'m&-k&-tE-/
Function: noun
Date: 1912
: HIGH-MUCK-A-MUCK]

2. the word yuk (or yuck) itself has three distinct meanings (only 2 of 'em covvered by WWWebst.) --

The WWWebster 2nd entry says:

Main Entry: 2yuck
Variant(s): also yuk
Function: interjection
Date: 1966
-- used to express rejection or disgust <spending hours over some dish and getting, "yuck, I hate that" -- Anne Dowie>

this is presumably the lexical sense that can make LUpton wonder if yukyuk should be understood to suggest some manner of derogation ("term of abuse"). WWWebster's does give another meaning of yuck:

Main Entry: 1yuck
Pronunciation: 'y&k variant of<SUP>2yak -->

Main Entry: 2sup
Function: noun
Date: circa 1570
: a mouthful especially of liquor or broth : SIP; also : a small quantity of liquid <pour me just a sup of tea>

but it's hard for me to find the relevance. That webtionary doesn't seem to know about what I think of as the more likely relevant usage -- what I'm considering the 3rd (most colloquial?) sense of yuck --

as based on the expression "yuck yuck yuck" (or some such), meaning "heh heh"or "what a joke!" or "ho ho ho!" . . . i.e., a (perhaps cartoon-based)

interjection signifying or suggesting laughter (or oftentimes, the idea of laughter shorn of the actual phenomenon?) --

anyway, in my speculative opinion, "a yukyuk" suggests someone who's a serious comic of some sort -- a jokester / trickster

involved in outlandish feats of metaphysical humor or "cosmic laughter" as 'twere --

a yukyuk = a muck-a-muck of chuckle-down-theory, belike? --

3. In general, btw, the UCK words may have a degree of intertextuality (so to say, sotto voce) -- i.e., any one UCK word suggests another in various degrees of subtextual resonance -- muck / yuck / fuck / schmuck /

luck / pluck / cluck / duck /
Huck [Finn] /
Puck [Djinn] /
tuck in [also, as in Tuck & Patti] /
puk win
  [sp? as in hockey] /
chuck [also, as in to chuck up] / truck
  [also, as in, "don't have much truck with"] /

and there's:
 snuck up (trickster)
 stuck up (dickster)
 chuck up (yuckster)
 fuck up (schmuckster)

 gotchyer pluck up?
 dontcha muck up!
 whatta schmuck!
 outtal luck!

 yuk yuk yuk!

yoohoo Jordon, awright whats the deal?

d.i.

.
,
.....,
1.....,

\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\/\0/\/////////////////////...'
.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o....'
///\\\\\\\/////////\/\\\o///\/\\\\\\\\\\\/////\\\...'
.David.....Raphael.....Israel...'
<[redacted]>
[&/[redacted]]
{telephonic.location.202/[redacted]}
|"...sleuthing out all clues, blues & news"|
\\\/////\\\\\\\\\\/\/\//&\\\/\/////////\\\\\\/\//..'

↑ Index

26. Lawrence Upton

Re: yukyuk

Sat 2 Aug 1997

<<I thought it was a worthy enough question.>> says d.i.

ok - and the responses to me have made me see that the word _yukyuk_ is more complex if only slightly than i thought when i responded - but really it wasn't the word itself that was my main concern but those to whom it was being applied and the general attitude it clearly expresses it was the manner of my response that i just about regretted - i had never heard _yukyuk_ before but it will always make me think of jordan davis now... whether or not i should also think _schmuck_ is another matter

if i have been taken more seriously than i intended regarding the pose of my response then that's my responsibility

i was serious about my opposition to the dismissiveness i detect in the reference to coolidge and mac low, dismissiveness without any foundation being apparent

i thought cris's response was more constructive - and points to one aspect of how a strong reply came from this side of the ocean

i'd like an explanation and defence or retraction of what he said from jordan davis

L

↑ Index

27. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson

Re: yukyuk

Sat 2 Aug 1997

I've always understood "yukyuk" to be related
to "mucketymuck" or "yuckety-yuk."

Silly words for bigwigs, not derisive,
not really negative --only slightly under-the-breath

or with a cocked eye. Coolidge is a bigwig,
no? And in history if not totally with it.

I have always read _Crystal Text_ as a quasi-transcendental, thwarted visionary, interior lyric in the matrice of yukyuks like Blake or Beckett. The early "particle language" work is beautifully romantic too. Well.

Bennett

&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
&c.
Bennett Simpson &c.
[redacted] &c.
&c.
&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

↑ Index

28. David R. Israel

Re: yukyuk

Sun 3 Aug 1997

Bennett --

quite right, you've expressed more nail-on-the-head what I was trying to get (at in scattershot manner) abt. the evident sense / nuances of yukyuk (though rather speculative / intuitive on my part, since I think I'd not encountered the term used in this exact manner) --

a bit, then, like saying, "such a doubhty & estimable scriviner as Henry James has allowed . . . " except that Jordon phrases it in a jaunty late-20th cent. manner (rather than a jaunty late 19th cent. manner) . . .

but the Jordanian barrister will no doubt return anon w/ it's stellar expert opinion . . . till then, cheerio old sport, &c.

d.i.

/ / /

"Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson" wrote:

> I've always understood "yukyuk" to be related
> to "mucketymuck" or "yuckety-yuk."
>
> Silly words for bigwigs, not derisive,
> not really negative --only slightly under-the-breath
>
> or with a cocked eye. Coolidge is a bigwig, > no? And in history if not totally with it.
>
> I have always read _Crystal Text_ as a quasi-transcendental, > thwarted visionary, interior lyric in the matrice of > yukyuks like Blake or Beckett. The early "particle language" > work is beautifully romantic too. Well.
>
>
> Bennett
>
>
>
> &c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
> &c.
> Bennett Simpson &c.
> [redacted] &c.
> &c.
> &c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
 .
 .....
 .....
 \\\\

29. David R. Israel
Re: yukyuk / erratum
Sun 3 Aug 1997

---

hmm, an odd typo --

for:
> a bit, then, like saying, "such a doubhty & estimable scriviner read:

> a bit, then, like saying, "such a doughty & estimable scriviner

d.i.

↑ Index

30. Hugh Steinberg
William S. Burroughs
Sun 3 Aug 1997

I just heard on CNN that Burroughs died tonight. Heart failure.

It seems this has been a year of losses.

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

31. dbkk
Re: hypothesis and repeatability
Sun 3 Aug 1997

On Sat, 2 Aug 1997 06:00:14 -0400 Lawrence Upton said:

> and while you're doing that, just off at a tangent, do you guys use the word _airhead_ at all?

Keith Tuma says that the use of "airhead" is fading but I found it bubbling into my consciousness over and over again watching Naomi Campbell parade up and down the aisle of the church during the Versace funeral. But my reaction is probably influenced by a) being the only member of the poetics list to have read Naomi Campbell's novel, "Swan," and then b) seeing her interviewed by Larry King in which she admitted that she had never read "Swan," but on the other hand someone had told her the plot and it all sounded marvelous.

Kevin Killian

↑ Index

32. Eryque Gleason
Re: hypothesis and repeatability
Sun 3 Aug 1997

> But my > reaction is probably influenced by a) being the only member of the poetics > list to have read Naomi Campbell's novel, "Swan," and then b) seeing her > interviewed by Larry King in which she admitted that she had never read
> "Swan," but on the other hand someone had told her the plot and it all > sounded marvelous.
>
> Kevin Killian

hi again kevin (after forever!). Do you mean that someone wrote the novel and that her name is on it as author, or she's a character, or what?

happy campbell's (looks like a soup day here)
eryque

↑ Index

33. jdhollo
Re: POETICS Digest - 1 Aug 1997 to 2 Aug 1997
Sun 3 Aug 1997

Unable to download this file: could you please check & try again?
Thanks,
Anselm Hollo

↑ Index

34. David R. Israel
Re: Quantity & Quality
Sun 3 Aug 1997

Rachel Kubie wrote --

> Henry--
> didn't mean to imply that the sort of continuous flow of poetry that > seems to get produced in more living circumstances is necessarily > memory-less. The thing is, the printing press created the > standardized* text, the one we all know & seems to me that has* > *played a big role in the *little object over/against time > perception of the poem that has maybe pushed poems into seeming > isolated incidents.

The printing press sure had an effect on how writing was conceived / erceived / approached, etc., though probably not an easily simplifiable effect. Word processing (with the ease of revision) has an effect, no doubt, too.

I'm reminded of how Walt Whitman's successive editions contributed to his framework of development / polishing / perfecting (in his view) of his work.

The published book is, in its way, a figure for the "act of publication" that is involved in speech itself -- when you speak, lo! & presto! -- there's what you've said!, hovering in air, indellible in historical fact though the ears that have heard it may already begin to tinker with it, memory-wise, as the half-life sets in (or as the noise of traffic drowns out a phrase) . . .

btw, what poetry is produced in "less living circumstances" one wonders? -- are the dead writing & publishing, these days?

cheers,
d.i.

```
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

i can't promise anything :
wanna come?

(c) 1973 llrussell

↑ Index

36. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson

Re: yukyuk

Sun 3 Aug 1997

On Sat, 2 Aug 1997, Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson wrote:

> I have always read _Crystal Text_ as a quasi-transcendental, thwarted visionary, interior lyric in the matrice of
>
> yukyuks like Blake or Beckett. The early "particle language" work is beautifully romantic too. Well.

Auto-Critique, 7:12pm

I regret making such squishy claimss.
I have been a wilted squash flower lately, it is so hot.
What is hi history Jordan?
Can one swallow it as vitamins so it's in side? Does it have a style of dig estion that is recogniz able more often than wor bi ts or objecif

reco rd ing?

Bean
s.

> &c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
> &c.
> Bennett Simpson &c.
> [redacted] &c.
> &c.
> &c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
&c.
Bennett Simpson &c.
[redacted] &c.
&c.
&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

↑ Index

37. Christina Fairbank Chirot

Re: yukyuk

Sun 3 Aug 1997

Re the work of Clark Coolidge and Jackson Mac Low being "ahistorical" and "transcendental miscellenies"-- not sure where this idea came from! perhaps a kind of trickle down from some of Jameson's asssertions re "postmodern pastiche" and "free floating signifiers" etc used as elements in collage? with words and images detached from their contexts? some other theoretical generalities? Rather than get embroiled in wondering about this, let alone which version of the transcendental is being referred to--(Emerson's? the Maharishi's?)-- Mac Low is one of the most historically conscious and aware artists/performers/writers/scholars/musicians this writer/reader has encountered. His work makes use of this awareness and knowledge through a wide variety of methods, texturings, palimpsests, juxtapostions, appostions and references. The notes alone appended to many Mac Low pieces (which i have actually heard people complain of) are thorough and have been a good part of my education--following up Mac Low's references and having opened up wide areas of literary history previously unknown to myself and as well reading a great many historical texts that the works refer to and work with. Because he works in/with many fields of activity and materials, Mac Low's work opens these up to the reader/viewer--bringing in histories of dance, performance, sound poetry, visual poetry, classical literature and history and as well opening up American history. There is also Mac Low's commitment to activism in relation to the events of recent American history. Mac Low for myself has been as Duncan said of Olson "a mighty fire source" and I deeply appreciate the ongoing enquiries and studies he has presented for myself and others. And i don't mean in terms of inspiration alone by his example--but historical knowledge and questioning. Clark Coolidge--in many ways an historical writer as well. His knowledge and use of American literature and jazz for example, as well the histories involved with these--see for example the letters between him and Paul Metcalf published in the STATIONS Clark Coolidge Symposium-- as well as interviews and essays re Kerouac, jazz drumming--the work of Art Blaeky for example--quite an historical knowledge there which is made use of in the work-- something to think of reading Coolidge in re history is TIME--as he's a jazz and rock drummer, "keeping time" to be sure important! "a sense of measure" so to speak--and another time & measure Coolidge works with is that of geology--see for example the extraordinary SMITHSONIAN DEPOSITIONS--playing on the Smithsonian museum, deposits as of minerals (after all he also wrote QUARTZ HEARTS, the CRYSTAL TEXT etc) and depositions as evidence--and the Earth Works artist/essayist Robert Smithson--the book makes a kind of multivoiced autobiographical narrative by using texts from WCW (Smithson's family's doctor; the use of sediment chart in Paterson inspired Smithson & Smithson wanted his essay "A Tour of the Monuments of the Passaic" to be thought of as a kind of appendix to Paterson)--Smithson, Kerouac, writings and interviews by/with Chabrol and Godard (film makers much influenced by Amrican writers and filmmakers) geology texts, the Professor Challenger stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle--presenting several layerings/appostions/interweavings of times--human, geological,literay and film--fiction and fact--as all the sources are listed at the back of the book, as in several of Coolidge's other works--the indication is that the work is taking place within a context/vortex of consciously chosen historical conjunctions.

The work of Mac Low and Coolidge rather than being ahistorical is archeological--or, to use my own term, anarcheological--that is, it works with elements of history and time and opens them by arrangements which make new configurations, dances, musics and questions--they indicate a participatory use of historical materials rather than a detaching of them from historical memory. Rather than transcending these elements, the works make them present in new arrangements--which suggests that the materials of history are to be continually examined, mined, questioned, made use of and participated in and with and for. So my thanks to Mac Low and Coolidge--they've kept me busy for quite some time now digging away in the anarcheological environs of history--and I mean real time, not transcendental time, too--like years in record stores book stores libraries conversations performances following up their leads . . . and applying them & making use of them-- i.e. practice

ZA DA
dbc

↑ Index

38. Lawrence Upton
Re: Quantity & Quality
Sun 3 Aug 1997

<<are the dead writing & publishing, these days?>>

big business in the uk

L

↑ Index

39. David R. Israel
Re: yukyuk
Sun 3 Aug 1997

DBC --

thanks for the argument abt. the historical & MacLow / Coolidge -- well said, & interestingly informed -- so, if "ahistorical" doesn't make the grade (re: these writers), how about "pan-historical" ?

btw, the discussion of archaeology reminds of Meredith Monk's marvelous "American Archeology #1" performance that happened on Roosevelt Island several summers ago (re: which, btw, I penned a review for The New Art Examiner) -- MM hoped to have this as first in a possible series of "digs" into particular histories of American sites (this one dealt w/ the strange history of that little island, as well as MM's usual pallette of broad post-Jungian concerns) -- I hope she's able to get back to it & proceed further . . .

cheers,
d.i.

↑ Index

40. James Finnegan
Re: National Poetry Slam
Sun 3 Aug 1997

If you are in driving distance of Middletown
Connecticut next week, then you might want to check out the '97 National Poetry Slam.

Details:

www.machine1.com/97Nationals

Tues. is opening day--Sat. nite the Finals.
Tues. thru Sat. many poetry and slam related events.

↑ Index

41. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson

Coolidge Time

Mon 4 Aug 1997

Historical is such a precise and narrow qualification that it may not do anyone any good. Poof. Actually, I find it difficult to speak of Coolidge (I'm not as comfortable with Mac Low) in terms of "history" because he so consciously invokes measures of time; they are a crux, but a "history"? Maybe for termites. Terminal index. Tight? THe time of a reading, the time of a tongue, syllab-le, time of a debris sliding over a thing timed as a book to explode. I like the suggestion to call Coolidge archeological instead of historical. I tried to make the claim in a paper that Coolidge is allegorical as well, where physical word matters come to stand, are experienced, sprawl out (is this what "the lean" means?) as a provisional and personally felt truth of language. I don't feel too awkward speaking about "truths of language" in reference to Coolidge because his writing does bring them on, coddles them. Like Smithson's "Sedimentation of the Mind" or "A Heap of Language" or his hypothetical maps of a textual lost-continent of "Atlantis," many Coolidge works compell me to think in terms of elsewheres and hiding places, be they folds of geolithic time, graphic discombobulation, or the phenomena of a life begged in writing (cf. _The Crystal Text_). Of course, both Smithson and Coolidge --and Gordon Matta-Clark is another great example-- are at pains to point to where the elses are. The liminal, which may be a purely formal space, is very much right here and now, guised (but _is_ it "guised") in words, rocks, apartment blocks, Passaic, NJ. The rub is to see it, vision being so incredibly taken for granted. Thus Smithson's non-sites, Coolidge's poem gravel, and Matta-Clark's sawed-open "anarchitecture" come off like science-fiction --out of this time, some time, which time, extravagant and counter-intuitive.

Does anyone consider Coolidge a didactic poet (this isn't a negative qualification)? Would such a consideration require more fundamenntal quandries like "belief" (Do I believe what you're proposing Clark Coolidge? Do I believe in Smithson's chtonic urge? Do I believe Matta-Clark or Dan Graham's grasp of "ideological" critique is supportable? OUCH!), or "success" (do such efforts to make clear or dark work, are they making me experience "X" "correctly" or are they making me "experience" X period? What X (did I cover that one?), or, fuck it, "intention" (Do I understand exactly why "the mud of the bulk of the back yard" begins _Quartz Hearts_ or what such a phrase could do?

(DO? DO PHRASES DO?))

And yes, "history" --stuff that has happened-- greatly influences CC's poetry. Jazz soforth. But this doesn't make him a "historical" poet in the way such a term is usually inferred (as in Pound maybe, or even Williams tho he's closer).

&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
&c.
Bennett Simpson &c.
[redacted] &c.
&c.
&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

↑ Index

42. Alan J Sondheim
Re: Coolidge Time
Mon 4 Aug 1997

Give it twenty years. We're all history.
Another twenty, we're all lost in it.
From that point on, dissolution, annihilation.

There will be lovers, right here, whose names we do not know.

↑ Index

43. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson
Re: Coolidge Time
Mon 4 Aug 1997

And thankfully so though we have our favorite ruins which may were necessary once though not apart from pleasure.

On Mon, 4 Aug 1997, Alan J Sondheim wrote:

> Give it twenty years. We're all history.
> Another twenty, we're all lost in it.
> From that point on, dissolution, annihilation.
>
> There will be lovers, right here, whose names we do not know.

&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
&c.
Bennett Simpson &c.
[redacted] &c.
&c.
&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

↑ Index

44. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson

Re: Coolidge Time

Mon 4 Aug 1997

Auto-Critique, 1:12

Lame duck

"qualifies" lag time

(only slightly)

On Mon, 4 Aug 1997, Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson wrote:

> Historical is such a precise and narrow qualification that it may not do anyone any good. Poof. Actually, I find it difficult to speak of Coolidge (I'm not as comfortable with Mac Low) in terms of "history" because he so consciously invokes measures of time; they are a crux, but a "history"? Maybe for termites. Terminal index. Tight? THe time of a reading, the time of a tongue, syllab-le, time of a debris sliding over a thing timed as a book to explode. I like the suggestion to call Coolidge archeological instead of historical. I tried to make the claim in a paper that Coolidge is allegorical as well, where physical word matters come to stand, are experienced, sprawl out (is this what "the lean" means?) as a provisional and personally felt truth of language. I don't feel too awkward speaking about "truths of language" in reference to Coolidge because his writing does bring them on, coddles them. Like Smithson's "Sedimentation of the Mind" or "A Heap of Language" or his hypothetical maps of a textual lost-continent of "Atlantis," many Coolidge works compell me to think in terms of elsewheres and hiding places, be they folds of geolithic time, graphic discombobulation, or the phenomena of a life begged in writing (cf. _The Crystal Text_). Of course, both Smithson and Coolidge --and Gordon Matta-Clark is another great example-- are at pains to point to where the elses are. The liminal, which may be a purely formal space, is very much right here and now, guised (but _is_ it "guised") in words, rocks, apartment blocks, Passaic, NJ. The rub is to see it, vision being so incredibly taken for granted. Thus Smithson's non-sites, Coolidge's > poem gravel, and Matta-Clark's sawed-open "anarchitecture" come off like science-fiction --out of this time, some time, which time, extravagant and counter-intuitive.

>
> Does anyone consider Coolidge a didactic poet (this isn't a negative qualification)? Would such a consideration require more fundamenntal quandries like "belief" (Do I believe what you're proposing Clark Coolidge? Do I believe in Smithson's chtonic urge? Do I believe Matta-Clark or Dan Graham's grasp of "ideological" critique is supportable? OUCH!), or "success" (do such efforts to make clear or dark work, are they making me experience "X" "correctly" or are they making me "experience" X period? What X (did I cover that one?), or, fuck it, "intention" (Do I understand exactly why "the mud of the bulk of the back yard" begins _Quartz Hearts_ or what such a phrase could do?
> (DO? DO PHRASES DO?))
>
> And yes, "history" --stuff that has happened-- greatly influences CC's poetry. Jazz soforth. But this doesn't make him a "historical" poet in the way such a term is usually inferred (as in Pound maybe, or even Williams tho he's closer).
>
> &c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
> &c.
> Bennett Simpson &c.
> [redacted] &c.
> &c.
> &c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
&c.
Bennett Simpson &c.
[redacted] &c.
&c.
&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

↑ Index

45. Maria Damon
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 4 Aug 1997

why is it in middletown? has wesleyan u decided that slams are cool?

At 10:40 PM -0400 8/3/97, James Finnegan wrote:
>If you are in driving distance of Middletown
>Connecticut next week, then you might want >to check out the '97 National Poetry Slam.

>Details:
>
> www.machine1.com/97Nationals
>
>Tues. is opening day--Sat. nite the Finals.
>Tues. thru Sat. many poetry and slam related >events.

↑ Index

46. R I Caddel

Basil Bunting: A Northern Life

Mon 4 Aug 1997

Announcing the publication on September 18th of

Basil Bunting : A Northern Life

by Richard Caddel and Anthony Flowers

Published by Newcastle Libraries & Information Service in association with the Basil Bunting Poetry Centre.

ISBN 1 85795 058 5 price 7.95 Pounds Sterling plus postage.

An illustrated account of Bunting's lifelong association with Northumbria: "A poet is just a poet, but I am a Northumbrian man. It has always been my home, even when I've been living elsewhere."

Orders (Sterling only, no credit cards) to either:

Newcastle Libraries and Information Service
Princess Square, Newcastle upon Tyne 1

or:

Basil Bunting Poetry Centre, University Library,
Palace Green, Durham DH1 3RN

Richard Caddel
Durham University Library, Stockton Rd., Durham DH1 3LY, UK
E-mail: R.I.Caddel @ durham.ac.uk
Phone: [redacted] Fax: [redacted]
WWW: http://www.dur.ac.uk/~dul0ric

"Words! Pens are too light. Take a chisel to write."
- Basil Bunting

↑ Index

47. Matt Kirschenbaum update on the William Blake Archive
Mon 4 Aug 1997

The editors of the William Blake Archive -- Morris Eaves, Robert Essick, and Joseph Viscomi -- are pleased to announce that The Book of Thel, copy F, is now online in searchable form. This may seem a modest achievement, given that this is one of Blake's shorter works, and that its eight plates (with enlargements and accompanying transcriptions) have already been available on the site since November of 1996. In fact, however, this copy of The Book of Thel is a prototype for all future works to be added to the Archive (both illuminated books and other materials), and its appearance reflects the architecture and objectives of the Archive as they have taken shape over many months of development, testing, and refinement.

Unlike its previous version, and unlike the other illuminated books currently available in the Archive, this copy of Thel has been tagged using SGML (Standard Generalized Markup Language). SGML tagging offers the Archive's users the opportunity to perform sophisticated searches, either on the text of the plates, or, more remarkably, on the content of their illustrations. Search results are retrieved and presented using DynaWeb, a product of the Inso Corporation. The text and image searching enabled by DynaWeb and the underlying SGML tagging is a powerful demonstration of the potential of electronic resources in the humanities.

However, there's more. Users with Java-capable browsers can now make use of Inote, Java-based software developed at the Institute for Advanced Technology in the Humanities, to assist them in their study of the Archive's visual materials. Users may employ Inote to examine editorial annotations of a given image independently of a search, or else, following a successful image search, Inote may be used to open the image, zoomed to the specific area containing the object of the search, together with the relevant editorial commentary. This is IATH's first public implementation of Inote, and its release marks a major advance for image-based electronic editing.

Users with Java-capable browsers can also take advantage of a second, equally innovative Java program developed at IATH, the ImageSizer. This is a feature that allows one to view Blake's plates and images at their true size, reproducing the object's actual physical dimensions on the screen, regardless of the resolution of a particular monitor; indeed, users can calibrate this feature to consistently display the Archive's images at whatever proportions they may wish.

Finally, the Archive's selective bibliography of criticism, reference materials, and standard editions, with about 500 entries, is now available. We hope to have the bibliography searchable by the end of the summer. We also hope to have David V. Erdman's Complete Poetry and Prose of William Blake online and searchable by that same time.

In the coming weeks and months we will turn our attention to placing other illuminated books online in searchable form, following on the model of The Book of Thel, copy F. We will begin with the other copies of Thel (copies H and O), as well as copies of Visions of the Daughters of Albion (copies C and J) now publicly available only in HTML -- thus lacking any of the capabilities described above. We will then move on to other books: All Religions are One (copy A), There is No Natural Religion (copies C and L), The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (copy D), America (copy E), Europe (copies B and E), The Song of Los (copies A and B), The Book of Urizen (copy G), Songs of Innocence and of Experience (copy Z), The Book of Ahania (copy A), and The Book of Los (copy A).

The Blake Archive is located at:

http://www.iath.virginia.edu/blake/

Please forward this announcement as appropriate.

Matthew Kirschenbaum, Project Manager
The William Blake Archive
[redacted]
Institute for Advanced Technology in the Humanities University of Virginia, Charlottesville

↑ Index

48. Jordan Davis

Re: yukyuk

Mon 4 Aug 1997

Yes, David -- I was thinking of the reemergence of Don Rickles, and the curious embrace he's found himself locked in, tickled, is there hope for Ted Greenwald? Worked with Ted, actually, and am pleased to hear young englische seek him out -- must be Miles C, huh? Sure couldn't be Keston... as for the droll allegation that younger americans gone soft, let me remind Snr Upton of the etymology of Frankie Goes To Hollywood -- the group believed that "Hollywood" was a place, and that the headline "Frankie Goes Hollywood" was a sorry american error -- in fact "Hollywood" is a sort of quantum space/time construction, meaning, an adjective .. so that a proper substitution would not be "Wichitia" or "Brummagem" but "sour" or "wrong". Anyway, relax, don't do it -- J

On Sat, 2 Aug 1997, David R. Israel wrote: > as based on the expression "yuck yuck yuck" (or some such), meaning > "heh heh"or "what a joke!" or "ho ho ho!" . . . i.e., a (perhaps > cartoon-based) interjection signifying or suggesting laughter (or > oftentimes, the idea of laughter shorn of the actual phenomenon?) -- > > anyway, in my speculative opinion, "a yukyuk" suggests someone > who's a serious comic of some sort -- a jokester / trickster > > involved in outlandish feats of metaphysical humor or "cosmic > laughter" as 'twere -- > a yukyuk = a muck-a-muck of chuckle-down-theory, belike? -- > > 3. In general, btw, the UCK words may

...

↑ Index

49. Jordan Davis
bock bock bock pacock (incisors in the shop)
Mon 4 Aug 1997

As I said in the cavalier post that made 'em angry in England -- I wondered what Henry could mean by the proposition that language poetry denied history. Then I took two writers somewhere on the outskirts of Lang City -- two writers whose work it's generally (and with some reason) safe to say are _worth looking into_ -- and -- as a contrarian mind you! -- alleged that their work in fact did not explicitly refer to historical events as say the work of SUSAN HOWE does, or even explicitly refer to literary-historical events as say the work of CHARLES BERNSTEIN or BRUCE ANDREWS does. It was a very harmful claim, to be sure, and I hope the offended will send me their laundry bills. As for the flagrant use of a completely irrelevant characterization -- yukyuk -- I noticed that just as in Merican politics, in Merican poetics, it gets all the attention the argument at hand is too shy to demand. Ladies and gentlemen, I give you the era of the wrong word. I did receive a kind postcard from Jackson once asking me to be more clear about his having preceded language poetry, and the language poetry reading of Clark Coolidge may turn out to be one of the kinder moments in the history of manifest destiny, so if you can extend your definitions of mea culpa around those clauses, I believe we can both end up satisified. Henry -- are you smiling through all this? Would you please answer my question? Bennett's given some useful notes on history... Jordan

↑ Index

50. James Finnegan
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 4 Aug 1997

In a message dated 97-08-04 10:05:05 EDT, you write:

> why is it in middletown? has wesleyan u decided that slams are cool?

Slams at the national level are crazy cool. However, Wesleyan is not the sponsoring org. Most of the events will be held in bookshops, bars & coffeeshops in Middletown CT, with only a couple of events being held on the Wesleyan campus. The Buttonwood Tree, a very independent & freewheeling arts center, will be the hub of the whole affair.

At the national level Slam is organized by a loose confederation of the slam masters. A slam master is a self-appointed role--anyone who initiates a slam on a regular basis is a slam master. The most active slam masters hail from Boston, Chicago, SF, Portland, Austin Asheville, NYC, and Connecticut. In this '97 Nationals 36 (4-person) teams will compete, from cities & regions all over the US & Canada. This year there will even be a team called Mouth Almighty, which I believe is sponsored by the spoken word recording outfit of the same name (instigator Bob Holman, of the United States of Poetry project). Also, there are individual competitors registered--Lisa Buscani and D.J. Renegage are among the names I recognize.

Faith Vicinanza is the slam master and force behind slamming in Conn-- she and a small cadre of fervent slammers first petitioned to get the slam to Conn., and then planned/produced the whole show. And it is showtime, especially by the semi-final rounds when the stops get pulled out.

Finnegan

↑ Index

51. Robert Archambeau
Re: Basil Bunting: A Northern Life
Mon 4 Aug 1997

Great news about what is certainly a very important new book on Bunting, a wonderful poet and not nearly as well known as he should be on this side of the Atlantic.

The title, _A Northern Life_, indicates the book stays pretty focussed on one aspect of what I understand to be a fascinating and various life -- does anyone know if a full-scale biography is in the works anywhere?

RA

--
Robert Archambeau
Department of English
Lake Forest College

Lake Forest, IL 60045
http://www.lfc.edu/~archamb/

See: behind bullet-proof glass, the ruby slippers sparkle.
We do not know the limits of their powers.
We suspect that these limits may not exist.
 --Salman Rushdie

↑ Index

52. Maria Damon
Re: National Poetry Slam
Mon 4 Aug 1997

---

thanks james f, yeah i think slams are cool, don't understand the avant-garde's need to police its borders so rigidly...just curious abt middletown, seemed an unlikely place, except i guess it is "centrally" located as moniker suggests...md

At 11:37 AM -0400 8/4/97, James Finnegan wrote:
>In a message dated 97-08-04 10:05:05 EDT, you write:
>
>>
>>why is it in middletown? has wesleyan u decided that slams are cool?
>>
>
>Slams at the national level are crazy cool. However, Wesleyan is >not the sponsoring org. Most of the events will be held in bookshops, >bars & coffeeshops in Middletown CT, with only a couple of events >being held on the Wesleyan campus. The Buttonwood Tree, a very >independent & freewheeling arts center, will be the hub of the whole >affair.
>
>At the national level Slam is organized by a loose confederation of >the slam masters. A slam master is a self-appointed role--anyone >who initiates a slam on a regular basis is a slam master. The most >active slam masters hail from Boston, Chicago, SF, Portland, Austin >Asheville, NYC, and Connecticut. In this '97 Nationals 36 (4-person) >teams will compete, from cities & regions all over the US & Canada.
>This year there will even be a team called Mouth Almighty, which >I believe is sponsored by the spoken word recording outfit of the same >name (instigator Bob Holman, of the United States of Poetry project).
>Also, there are individual competitors registered--Lisa Buscani and >D.J. Renegage are among the names I recognize.
>

>Faith Vicinanza is the slam master and force behind slamming in Conn-- >she and a small cadre of fervent slammers first petitioned to get the slam >to Conn., and then planned/produced the whole show. And it is showtime, >especially by the semi-final rounds when the stops get pulled out.
>
>Finnegan

↑ Index

53. Lawrence Upton
Re: yukyuk
Mon 4 Aug 1997

<<let me
remind Snr Upton of the etymology of Frankie Goes To Hollywood>

please do, Mr Davis, but it wasn't me who made wh said that.

You seem to think, I note, that there are only two young English poets: Miles and Keston.

I am more than a little unconvinced about yukyuk but willing to potentially accept that my ignorance led me astray - if oten does. There remains the oddity of finding Mac Low and Coolidge ahistorical on which I hear nothing in defence.

Your posting ends with _In general, btw, the UCK words may_ is this an error or the syntactical farewell of a yukyuk manque?

Lawrence

↑ Index

54. Joel Kuszai
MAC HAMMOND
Mon 4 Aug 1997

Perhaps it's too much of a local news item for the poetics list, but Buffalo poet, english professor, and longtime conspiratorial angel, Mac Hammond passed away last week in Buffalo.

If there is anyone out there who knew Mac, or his poetry, please get in touch with me before too long.

Published by Ohio U.P., Alan Swallow, Hammond was a student and friend of Jakobson and Pomorska before taking his PhD from Harvard in the early 60s.

↑ Index

55. Jordan Davis
rude wood (makes your mouth taste like onions)
Mon 4 Aug 1997

I remain flabbergasted that Upton takes so much offense on behalf of Mac Low and Coolidge -- when as has been explained none was meant, and none was heard _within the community_. Lawrence, I do think you're being rude.

I'm also puzzled that Henry will not speak to the issue of language poetry and history he raised -- especially when so many have taken up the issue with him. I will stick to my distinction between work which explicitly uses historical data (the Olson line) and work which while it is in fact (surprise surprise!) located in time (dated -- god this is exhausting) does not in fact refer to the events of what I am imagining to be for Henry a Mandelstamian conscience (the idea that we must be classicists because there were totalitarians afoot the same time the modernists were working). I will call your attention once more in what I hope you are hearing as John Cleese's voice to the fact that I was arguing bitterly with Henry about precisely this issue, this sad, bizarre, misbegotten, lonely, kudzu-covered idea, that a work can lack historicity -- specifically the work of language poets. Since I haven't read a single word from a bona fide language poet here on the topic, I'm going to assume that at most this thread has merely enregistered another four or five names on the list of names the language poets keep -- I had to torture Bruce Andrews with Mantovanni records for two days to get the FACT of the existence of this list verified -- the list of names language poets keep of poets who are BENEATH contempt and who should be met with nothing more civil than a raised eyebrow. It's time we all just acknowledged the list (cough).

As for the larger community of younger british poets, and wouldn't that be a better thread, would you care to mention some? I may have only dropped the names of two -- because (ignoring all evidence in this thread to the contrary) I would rather carry on a discussion that involved names, works, words and ideas, rather than blah blah blah lack of incision blah blah sentimental blah have you actually read Ted?

My contribution to the post you mention, incidentally, ends well before the snipped bit of David Israel's post.

Goodbye, and good luck,
Jordan

On Mon, 4 Aug 1997, Lawrence Upton wrote:

> <<let me
> remind Snr Upton of the etymology of Frankie Goes To Hollywood>

> please do, Mr Davis, but it wasn't me who made wh said that.
>
> You seem to think, I note, that there are only two young English poets: Miles and Keston.
>
> I am more than a little unconvinced about yukyuk but willing to potentially accept that my ignorance led me astray - if oten does. There remains the oddity of finding Mac Low and Coolidge ahistorical on which I hear nothing in defence.
>
> Your posting ends with _In general, btw, the UCK words may_
>
> is this an error or the syntactical farewell of a yukyuk manque?
>
> Lawrence

↑ Index

56. Lawrence Upton
flabbergasted
Mon 4 Aug 1997

<<I remain flabbergasted that Upton takes so much offense on behalf of Mac Low and Coolidge -- when as has been explained none was meant, and none was heard _within the community_. Lawrence, I do think you're being rude.>>

possibly I am and if I am then I am sorry, i apologise. i already half conceded yukyuk - wasnt just me that confused - others heard it

you see i thought you were being rude, still do really - it was the manner, the tone that offended - seemed to me i was just responding with a similar aggressiveness but for a different reason... maybe i got it wrong....forget the word... i thought you were... well, never mind... it wasnt just me - coolidge has been important and mac low much much more so - to me and i couldnt and can't see the _ahistorical_ etc but let's let it go, and the explanation, rudeness is the last thing i want and as i say i apologise for any offense

L

↑ Index

57. Mark Weiss
yukyuks
Mon 4 Aug 1997

Maybe I missed something here. Unlike Upton, I speak American. Referring to people as "yukyuks" is certainly an idiosyncratic usage, but also clearly dismissively pejorative. Jordan, you're surely entitled to feel any way you wish about MacLow and Coolidge, and whether or not there is an official raised-eye-brow list among language poets (there used to be something pretty close among some of Olson's epigones) we probably each have private lists of those whose work we dismiss. But if I feel dismissive of x or y I think it behooves me in this forum to express my reasons--it's that kind of forum. Otherwise we'll all drown in expletives.

↑ Index

58. Christopher Alexander

Re: yukyuks

Mon 4 Aug 1997

---

hmmm. & just yesterday I was thinking I'd welcome an increase in list traffic. maybe we should bring the Dorn thread back—or how about a pillow fight?

"I wonder," he said, slyly changing the subject, "...

I've recently been reading Hannah Weiner's Clairvoyant Journal, & I'm absolutely shocked at how good this book is. in particular, besides the sheer beauty of the thing, I'm interested in the way that it might be said to trouble the boundary between intentional & non-intentional work, & I'm wondering if other people see this or agree or if there are other works out there that might be doing this—er, work, if in a very different way, something maybe like Mac Low's Twenties or From Pearl Harbor...

what do people have to say about his non-non-intentional wrtg, & its relation to the the explicitly non-intentional work?

Chris
"dammit, I made these reservations a week ago"

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

59. Christina Fairbank Chirot

Re: flabbergasted

Mon 4 Aug 1997

I'm puzzled by the recent exchanges involving rudeness, yukyuks and so on between Jordan Davis and Lawrence Upton. Maybe it's just my impression, but Jordan Davis doesn't seem to have answered any questions raised for him--and politiely one might add--re his idea of yukyuk, the transcendental and so on--seems it has been left up to others to do the work of sending in ideas re the word as well as re the work of Mac Low and Coolidge, the historical, ahistorical and panhistorical, anarcheological, mining and MM---(my thanks and appreciation to David Israel and Bennet Simpson for their informative and thought provoking posts!) while Jordan Davis has replied only with cute quips re FrankieG(T)H and accusations directed at Lawrence Upton. Going back through the posts, the tone and number of apologies seems to be steadily increasing from Lawrence Upton. I don't see any reason for this until coming across in a Jordan Davis post the words re no offence being meant and "none was heard_within the community_" which is rather baffling. Which community? Are the people who wrote on the list who raised questions and exchanged ideas without the particiaption of Jordan Davis part of this community or not and so on. The mention of a nameless commnity who sees things Jordan Davis' way --well, methinks it comes across as a tactic of intimidation to some extent--and seems to have worked as I note Lawrence Upton apologizing while Jordan Davis asserts his flabbergasted state. Discussion with definitions and disagreements--exchange of ideas and materials--with many possibilities of use--yes. Some rudeness when impassioned--sure. When Tom Mandel talked about raising his fists--well, he meant his own and gave his own reasons. But I don't particularly get a good feeling when one person is being steadily backed into apologizing as the other protests astonishment while also invoking a like minded unnamed community behind them someplace.

So, back to some discussion--Jordan Davis noted differing attitudes among Watten and Silliman in re the term "experimental".

Here is Clark Coolidge on the term:

(Lee Bartlett has just asked CC "Do you think of yourself as an 'experimental writer'?")

Not really. I understand that category in a general sense, but "experimental" always sounds like you are trying to do something rather than doing it. But if the term does mean what it could mean--pushing things beyond various limits--great!

(from Talking Poetry Conversations in the Workshop with Contemporary Poets Interviews by lee Bartlett Albuquerque: U of New Mexico P, 1987 p. 15)

ZA DA (beyond yes)!

dbc

↑ Index

60. Christopher Alexander dressage
Mon 4 Aug 1997

---

sorry 'bout this, but can someone give me Joseph Lease's email address (Joseph, are you out there?)? he seems to be signed on, but I keep getting this "this address has fatal errors" etc. garbage every time I try to reach him. I dunno, maybe the name server is down over there...

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

61. Jordan Davis
stray slack (sorry)
Mon 4 Aug 1997

DBC correctly points out that I'm holding a teddy bear in the picture of me saying 'my friends still like me' -- the bear does it, I mean -- as for the allegation that I am dodging this issue of relative historicity, I think a mysterious delay in the listserv's delivery is to blame -- the 'pacock' post (and the later unpleasant 'rude' one -- ugh, how awful to have melted down -- Lawrence, if you ever come to New York, look me up, I know excellent places to have lunch -- I promise not to equate everyone from the UK with FGtH if you promise not to mention the shortcomings of the group of writers I've been struggling to be associated with) has about all that I can think to say about this. At any rate -- sorry to everyone, my motto is "I orient to the virtual offense" and I seem to have presumed that the general befuddlement around a throwaway word excused me -- once again, Jackson, if there's mud (or mod) on you from this -- I'll have it steamed out -- presumed that the befuddlement entitled me to employ y'all as a big shield -- I'll not do that again.

I wasn't being coy when I suggested the possibility of discussing ultrarecent writers from places other than the continental US -- I'm particularly fond of Keston (Sutherland)'s poem "Vac Stucco" and could type in some bits if anyone felt a blip of interest -- and in the tradition of international logrolling I will mention that Keston did publish a book of mine --

Mark Weiss -- it may have been that kind of subtlety more imaginary than expressed, but I meant something more affectionate than dismissal by the term 'yukyuk' -- but as Anselm Berrigan says, Heidegger is as manipulative as Spielberg -- there's a line of Joseph Lease's I've always liked -- "humorless trickster" --

Seems to me again that considering the dispersed possibilities for reading poetry, it's still a pretty conservative (and choppy comprehending) set of skills we bring to mail we can scroll through -- I've thought before that those slips can bring about beautiful misunderstandings -- though I feel today like a hideous pedant -- and one mo time, sorry --

Jordan

On Mon, 4 Aug 1997, Christina Fairbank Chirot wrote:

> I'm puzzled by the recent exchanges involving rudeness, yukyuks and so on between Jordan Davis and Lawrence Upton. Maybe it's just my impression, but Jordan Davis doesn't seem to have answered any questions raised for him--and politiely one might add--re his idea of yukyuk, the transcendental and so on--seems it has been left up to others to do the work of sending in ideas re the word as well as re the work of Mac Low and Coolidge, the historical, ahistorical and panhistorical, anarcheological, mining and MM---(my thanks and appreciation to David Israel and Bennet Simpson for their informative and thought provoking posts!) while Jordan Davis has replied only with cute quips re FrankieG(T)H and > accusations directed at Lawrence Upton. Going back through the posts, the tone and number of apologies seems to be steadily increasing from Lawrence Upton. I don't see any reason for this until coming across in a Jordan Davis post the words re no offence being meant and "none was heard_within the community_" which is rather baffling. Which community? Are the people who wrote on the list who raised questions and exchanged ideas without the particiaption of Jordan Davis part of this community > or not and so on. The mention of a nameless commnity who sees things Jordan Davis' way --well, methinks it comes across as a tactic of intimidation to some extent--and seems to have worked as I note Lawrence Upton apologizing while Jordan Davis asserts his flabbergasted state.

> Discussion with definitions and disagreements--exchange of ideas and materials--with many possibilities of use--yes. Some rudeness when impassioned--sure. When Tom Mandel talked about raising his fists--well, he meant his own and gave his own reasons. But I don't particularly get a good feeling when one person is being steadily backed into apologizing as the other protests astonishment while also invoking a like minded unnamed community behind them someplace.
>
> So, back to some discussion--Jordan Davis noted differing attitudes among Watten and Silliman in re the term "experimental".
> Here is Clark Coolidge on the term:
> (Lee Bartlett has just asked CC "Do you think of yourself as an 'experimental writer'?")
> Not really. I understand that category in a general sense, but "experimental" always sounds like you are trying to do something rather than doing it. But if the term does mean what it could mean--pushing things beyond various limits--great!
> (from Talking Poetry Conversations in the Workshop with Contemporary Poets Interviews by lee Bartlett Albuquerque: U of New Mexico P, 1987 p. 15)
>
> ZA DA (beyond yes)!
>
> dbc

↑ Index

62. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)

Mon 4 Aug 1997

At 11:36 AM 8/5/97, Don Cheney wrote:
>alan, i really like the a-ness of this piece. kind of an homage to a.
>
>this also sounds like a few of the kids on my son's Under-11 soccer team. i >thought that the other kids were making fun of the one kid with a very >obvious speech impediment but turns out there are 3 kids with speech >impediments on the team! during practice, the word i here most is "here" as >in "pass it hee-ahh."

>
>don

in boston, this would not be evidence of a speech impediment...--md
>
>>Wath You
>>
>>
>>A do love you. A don't hate you. A don't lake you at all. A don't love >>you. A hate you. A lake you a bat. A lake you a lattle bat. A lake you >>a lot. A lake you a tany lattle bat. A lake you. A love you a lot. A >>love you so much. A love you so very much. A love you. A really do love >>you. A really don't hate you. A really don't lake you at all. A really >>don't love you. A really hate you. A really lake you a lot. A really >>lake you. A really love you a lot. A really love you so very much. A >>really love you. A really really do love you. A really really don't hate >>you. A really really don't lake you at all. A really really don't love >>you. A really really hate you. A really really love you. A sort of lake >>you. A'm an love wath you. A'm not an love wath you. A'm really an love >>wath you. A'm really not an love wath you. A'm really really an love >>wath you. A'm really really not an love wath you. A'm so much an love >>   wath you.
>
>
>==========
>Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
>http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
>[redacted]
>==========

↑ Index

63. henry
Re: bock bock bock pacock (incisors in the shop)
Tue 5 Aug 1997

Hey Jordan, hey list, hey hey hey. Jordan, I know my rendition of List participation might remind many of a horse with internet goggles mumbling into his feedbag - BUT the truth is, this time, I've just been away for a few days. Now to respond erratically to your query - & also briefly I hope - remaining as always beneath the contempt radar -

I always talk about "language poetry", as many of you know full well, from a perspective of SEVERAL levels of abstraction. Oh ey fer sure. That is, I aim for the theoretical shield, not the honorable practitioners, whose work I make no claim to be much familiar with. Some of you will want to drop me right there (others maybe at the corner?).

Maybe when I talk about language poetry I'ma just talking about my "idea" of same. Here's muh idea: did I say it was anti- or un-historical? I'm not sure. I think I said that what came across to me as its THEORY was that referential discourse & poetry as conventional echo-effect needs to be imploded, for cultural-revolutionary purposes. Now at various times & places the lang.po political argument is made, at others the aesthetic (the political I just gave; the aesthetic is that the autonomy of lang.po experiment & freedom is all the politics it needs). My own argument all along has been that by giving up referentiality (NOT that they DO that all the time) as in post-structuralism, and dismantling rather than organizing a structure of meaning, said lang.po (MY version of it) offers a sort of truncated or emptied-out THEORY of poetry. The phrase "language poetry" looks in 2 directions - outward toward a presumed special definition of language, and inward as a sort of self-reflexive or recursive phrase (i.e. all poetry is in language. it's sort of redundant). In both directions it reminds me of symbolism, which also trashed ordinary discourse & aimed to purify the words of the tribe. Poetry is a VERY VERY SLIPPERY THING, Jordan! In the Long March Through the Little Magazines and the Big Institutions we grow rightfully wary of ACCOMODATION TO OCCASIONS & SENTIMENT OF MASSES & ELITES ALIKE!! Makes it tough to squeeze out those Mint Crest Toothpaste Odes after every meal.

Anyway, I agree that this is all pretty old hat, gang - I agree with the people who write to this list about SPECIFIC things they've read. Not to have anymore ignorant clashes by night. - Henry G.

↑ Index

64. Alan J Sondheim
Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)
Tue 5 Aug 1997

--

Wath You

A do love you. A don't hate you. A don't lake you at all. A don't love you. A hate you. A lake you a bat. A lake you a lattle bat. A lake you a lot. A lake you a tany lattle bat. A lake you. A love you a lot. A love you so much. A love you so very much. A love you. A really do love you. A really don't hate you. A really don't lake you at all. A really don't love you. A really hate you. A really lake you a lot. A really lake you. A really love you a lot. A really love you so very much. A really love you. A really really do love you. A really really don't hate you. A really really don't lake you at all. A really really don't love you. A really really hate you. A really really love you. A sort of lake you. A'm an love wath you. A'm not an love wath you. A'm really an love wath you. A'm really not an love wath you. A'm really really an love wath you. A'm really really not an love wath you. A'm so much an love wath you.

↑ Index

65. Bennett M. Sm [Dimpson

Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)

Tue 5 Aug 1997

T
H
  I N
K

Y
O
U

On Tue, 5 Aug 1997, Alan J Sondheim wrote:

> --
>
> Wath You
>
> A do love you. A don't hate you. A don't lake you at all. A don't love you. A hate you. A lake you a bat. A lake you a lattle bat. A lake you a lot. A lake you a tany lattle bat. A lake you. A love you a lot. A love you so much. A love you so very much. A love you. A really do love you. A really don't hate you. A really don't lake you at all. A really don't love you. A really hate you. A really lake you a lot. A really lake you. A really love you a lot. A really love you so very much. A really love you. A really really do love you. A really really don't hate you. A really really don't lake you at all. A really really don't love you. A really really hate you. A really really love you. A sort of lake you. A'm an love wath you. A'm not an love wath you. A'm really an love wath you. A'm really not an love wath you. A'm really really an love wath you. A'm really really not an love wath you. A'm so much an love wath you.

&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.
&c.
Bennett Simpson &c.
[redacted] &c.
&c.
&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.&c.

↑ Index

66. Lawrence Upton
Re: flabbergasted
Tue 5 Aug 1997

re <<intimidation>> from Dave Chirot saying you're sorry can be that you are sorry or yes it can be a way of dealing with intimidation or, if you don't set much store by never backing down etc, it can be a way of dealing with those who shout a lot when they are called to account so you can move on - i was never in favour of giving flowers to policepersons or handing down feelings of charity from the cross but there is something to be said sometimes for turning the other cheek especially when the worst thing against you is smokescreen

i too noticed the thing about community but i have just finished five years or so at a place run by lunatics who never once explained their reasons for pursuing policies that were destroying the place - and when you challenged them they said _you are the only one who feels like this_ so as soon as an explanation begins _everyone agrees with me_ i go for a break

having satisfied myself that no answer was going to come i decided to give up - it is important to keep things calm etc etc - if all the list debates were like this there would be nothing to keep calm - but that isn't the case - therefore avoiding conflict is more important to me than engaging with waffle etc - so i sd sorry and that's fine by me - i also expressed my disbelief / and yet it moves

i have better things to do than play games

re what i saw as a strange ending - yep that was me... i was glazing over by then

<<I DID think Jordon explained his "ahistorical" a bit>>

the bit was damned small

L

↑ Index

67. henry
Re: Quantity & Quality
Tue 5 Aug 1997

On Fri, 1 Aug 1997 15:02:23 -0700 Rachel Kubie said:
>didn't mean to imply that the sort of continuous flow of poetry that >seems to get produced in more living circumstances is necessarily >memory-less. The thing is, the printing press created the standardized >text, the one we all know & seems to me that has played a big role in >the little object over/against time perception of the poem that has >maybe pushed poems into seeming isolated incidents.

I agree with you, Rachel - it was I who really got off the track of your topic. Seems like the quantity/quality issue comes up whether you look at performance end or script end of the spectrum. I liked "Finnegan's" comment about the contract with the reader in any case. But, as you imply, the temptation toward graphomania is always there.
>
>
>Un-articulatable aspects of writing developed later (with silent reading >especially) & of course became "standard" in the long course of printing.

this seems like where it gets interesting with VISUAL-based poetry.
>
>Have also noticed that many poets who seem oriented toward performance >rather than publication tend (in their writtens) toward a plain >stichometry--but then, what sort of a pause or articulation of any sort >does the stanza really score?

A poem's not exactly like a musical score. It's just an analogy. The written poem provides the OPPORTUNITY for varied approaches (as does the score). But I would say stanza breaks, any kind of lineation etc., can be mined for performance results. A stanza seems like a pretty clear indicator of overall speed & pacing - ESPECIALLY when the pattern is broken & the syntax begins to flow over the breaks.
>
But then, maybe shallow history & reinventing the >wheel might result in more than an experiment in conformity, might be >refreshing, useful? It does open possibilities--who can participate in >speaking and listening & how.

Absolutely. The stodgy traditionalist I too-often sound like is no friend of poetry. I just wonder sometimes about the emphasis in the US especially on PRODUCTION - workshops, writing programs, readings, slams. The glut factor.
Can - does - anybody actually read anything anymore? It may be that an idea of poetry as occupying a tightrope between script and performance - and without those 2 poles, the rope (or the bowstring) falls slack - would help...

or it might just add another layer of "technique"...

maybe it all comes down to non-technical factors - the artist - the writer maybe especially - as TALKING TO the "culture" at large - communicating a message or messages... but then, talk gets cheaper & cheaper it seems... that's a related issue...a poem should be a solid complex crystal to a factor of -1,000... Yeats used barbells for exercise & said all poetry should be made to be recited... ... I'm going to shut up now... Henry G....

↑ Index

68. Don Cheney

Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)

Tue 5 Aug 1997

---

alan, i really like the a-ness of this piece. kind of an homage to a.

this also sounds like a few of the kids on my son's Under-11 soccer team. i thought that the other kids were making fun of the one kid with a very obvious speech impediment but turns out there are 3 kids with speech impediments on the team! during practice, the word i here most is "here" as in "pass it hee-ahh."

don

> Wath You
>
> A do love you. A don't hate you. A don't lake you at all. A don't love you. A hate you. A lake you a bat. A lake you a lattle bat. A lake you a lot. A lake you a tany lattle bat. A lake you. A love you a lot. A love you so much. A love you so very much. A love you. A really do love you. A really don't hate you. A really don't lake you at all. A really don't love you. A really hate you. A really lake you a lot. A really lake you. A really love you a lot. A really love you so very much. A really love you. A really really do love you. A really really don't hate you. A really really don't lake you at all. A really really don't love you. A really really hate you. A really really love you. A sort of lake you. A'm an love wath you. A'm not an love wath you. A'm really an love wath you. A'm really not an love wath you. A'm really really an love wath you. A'm really really not an love wath you. A'm so much an love wath you.

==========

Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791

[redacted]
==========

↑ Index

69. Alan J Sondheim
Re: Wath You (for Clark Cooladge)
Tue 5 Aug 1997

On Tue, 5 Aug 1997, Don Cheney wrote:

> alan, i really like the a-ness of this piece. kind of an homage to a.
>
> this also sounds like a few of the kids on my son's Under-11 soccer team. i thought that the other kids were making fun of the one kid with a very obvious speech impediment but turns out there are 3 kids with speech impediments on the team! during practice, the word i here most is "here" as in "pass it hee-ahh."
>
> don

There is another odd association for me - having worked in Nova Scotia a great deal (mostly Cape Breton recently), the accents, Scottish music, and then medieval Scottish itself with what seems to me a broad -a-. So I hear a lilt; I tried to return recently to reading Burns, with little success however (although I like Henryson for example).

Alan

↑ Index

70. Lawrence Upton
yukyuk and schmuck
Tue 5 Aug 1997

Jordan - I am referring to your message backchannel. I dont think that it is appropriate to cbackchannel those kind of remarks when the disagreement starts in public and it does seem to me intimidating in intent to send it backchannel

I dont think I have been shabby
I havent called you a schmuck.
I haven't called you a lunatic...
I said is that I am well acquainted with being told I am the only one who holds an opinion.
It doesnt work with me though it does upset me when used aggressively.

I may well be ignorant, you may well be right.
I make no attempt to cover my ignorance.

If I am not ignorant in this matter then there are a thousand things I am ignorant of and I suspect you are the same because everyone else is. People who try to cover their ignorance don't learn. I want to learn. That is why I am on the list.
I dont think I am ignorant of the context of your remarks. I don't think you have explained to any degree.
But perhaps that is my ignorance and I have lost interest now... I regret that you have not.
I cannot follow exactly what you are saying towards the end of the first two quoted paragraphs - my ignorance again - but besmirched is not a word I have used and I have said nothing about Susan Howe.
You say you are embarrassed about apologising to me. I am not embarrassed about apologising to you.
I think it was right to do it for itself now...

Jordan, I don't know you and the way things have gone I guess I am unlikely to - i suppose the lunch invite is off. I can be jokey and am sometimes misunderstood for that because the tone cant be heard in writing so I am trying generally to be far more serious than I feel in my postings, even at my lowest I have a kind of underlying jollity whatever is going on But that is different to the facetiousness I find in what little I have seen of your postings - I think it is aggressive rather than assertive and there seems little charity or friendliness. It takes my jollity away anyway.

I am very sorry to have offended you, genuinely, but I suspect others will do it to you as well if this is how you usually behave. However, schmuck and lunatic have not been applied to you yet and it is unhelpful and upsetting for you to claim they have been.

Lawrence

↑ Index

71. Christopher Alexander
Re: yukyuk and schmuck
Tue 5 Aug 1997

---

guys, guys, gentlemen, um—

as much as I value your presence on the list, & I mean both of you, do you think that in the future this exchange could be handled backchannel? I guess maybe this is a general request to listmembers as well.
it's just that I find it upsetting & needless to watch folks argue so bitterly over such things. I appreciate that there's little enough to be done now, & matters seem to be past the point of reconciliation, & I'm surely not interested in perpetuating the situation by taking sides. I also understand that this sort of thing is likely to happen anytime there are more than 2 people in a room for more than 10 minutes—but really, can we try to keep it down when it does happen? banter, even bickering is one thing (well, they're 2 different things but each one is...), but this is the kind of thing I expect to see on Divorce Court (& if I didn't watch it when it was on television...).

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

72. Jordan Davis
lunch at the public
Tue 5 Aug 1997

Lawrence --

Why would lunch be off?

If you can stand the company of a facetious quipper, I can accept (for the duration of a meal, anyway) the possibility that there might be something to talk about. It's also possible that you're right, we'd have very little to say. We've had next to nothing to say here.

A phrase I've heard a lot at my parents' house lately: "street theater."

I will add that, excluding this row, I've enjoyed your posts to the list.

Intimidatingly,
Jordan

↑ Index

73. Layne Russell
Re: You
Tue 5 Aug 1997

absolutely wonderful

Layne

↑ Index

74. Joe Safdie
Re: lunch at the public: is it possible?
Tue 5 Aug 1997

Okay, everybody finished apologizing now?

I can wait a LITTLE longer . . .

Okay. Can I go back to what I thought Jordan's original subject was, namely "history," and its capability of being reflected (or not) in verse?

A few months ago I recommended to the list an editorial by Lewis Lapham, which opined that "history," as we've known and loved it through the ages (!) is now defunct. Why? Because images, he said, have triumphed over narrative. We (by "we" I mean contemporary westerners) can't be bothered to follow arguments over an extended paragraph or two, because extended arguments don't happen all-at-once, simultaneously, like so many of the media images and video games we're exposed to. Along with history goes cause-and-effect; nothing happens "because" of something (or, as the academies might have it, there are numerous and inexplicable such causes) and Santanyana's idea that if we don't know history we're doomed to repeat it has gotten reduced to uh, wow, heavy.

Lapham is slightly more felicitous than this summary.

But the idea for POETICS people is what I (again) thought Jordan was raising. There is some poetry being written today for which "history" is not important. I think that was ONE of the things that Michael Gold was saying about Gertrude Stein, that her work was exactly "a-historical" in that sense. It's all-at-once, it's simultaneous, it directs attention, as Ron Silliman might say, to the level of the sentence, and not what came before it. Thus the inequitous capitalistic system continues, I guess was Gold's point, because creative artists have given up that part of the job description that their work be "the tale of the tribe", that they themselves be "antennae of the race", that their work MATTER in and for the world. They've opted instead for the continuous present.

This can very easily sound amateurish. I don't mean it to be so.

And, Dave Chirot and others have defended Coolidge and Jackson M. very well from this charge. But isn't it a valid charge to make about SOME people's verse?

One can't be experimental unless one knows the tradition from which one came -- a truism, perhaps, but otherwise we're just in the void, just associating on a musical phrase, just writing about our hormones, just . . . .

So I say, anything that is constructed to sound/read like it's occurring in the simultaneous present, and only there, and only now, IS a-historical. To our misfortune.

And I wrote all this without once mentioning language poetry.

↑ Index

75. Lawrence Upton
Re: yukyuk and schmuck
Tue 5 Aug 1997

<<guys, guys, gentlemen, um—>>

YES I THINK YOU ARE RIGHT

ANYWAY I HAVE NO MORE

l

↑ Index

76. Robert Drake
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Tue 5 Aug 1997

bill's sense ov (or puzzlement over) the question matches mine, my idea of a.g. as (b)leeding edge of activity, rather than th consolidated camps just behind th front lines. but to carry the military analogy further, how does the advance guard actually work? in cadres & cels, with an intense group loyalty & distrust of the enemy all around... appropriate and adaptive during th heavy fighting, but disfunctional afterwords.

and praps that points to the problem--the term "avant garde" gets attached to certain activity, and then stays stuck long after it's accurate. certain aspects of langpo might have been a.g., or free jazz... but are they still? well, for some folks probably so--if bebop is as far as your ears have gotten, than albert ayler is a.g.... sometimes, too, the a.g. designer label is claimed by folks as a marketing tool, especially in a popular culture such as ours, that values The New as latest/greatest. & that too can lead to the dynamics that maria's pointing to--seige mentality, whether or no it's "justified"...

(btw, i'm casting no aspersions & making no claims for what poetics are "legitimatly" a.g., whatever that might mean, & hope no one else will... that's one slippery slope we've been down several times too often...)

and finally, in maria's initial posting, she referes to "_the_ avant garde" (emphasis added), and i'm wondering if you'll be more specific, md? because i don't see a.g. activity, even in areas poetical, as being singular but rather diverse... hard for me to imagine a guerrilla war against the Established Culture launching a frontal offensive, there are lots ov little forays goin on... some (i'll mention Mail Art, fr one) strike me as very unprotective & open. what specific a.g.s are you thinking ov?

asever
luigi

william marsh wrote:
>
>there's been a lot of talk about this issue of late (here and elsewhere), >and i'm wondering if anyone else feels the same confusion about it / the >spatial analogy here, that the a-g is a particular zone or area of activity >and therefore identifiable by its borders (and its potential policing of >borders) is the main source of my confusion / when did the "avant garde" >come to represent a group or subgroup or "subfield in a larger field" as >David Kellogg puts? -- the classificatory scheme strikes me as fundamentally >at odds with what the a-g has always represented to me, namely a kind of >momentum that infuses artistic activities and (sometimes) instigates change >/ if current notions of an avant-garde stipulate that it exists as a group >among groups (and i agree with Charles Alexander that it is not a "unified >thing"), then clearly there must be an alternative avant-garde which >escapes such classification -- which makes it even more confusing / if the
>a-g is the leading edge of activity, then how can an edge have a "border"?
>not to mention a police force monitoring transgressions / i can't imagine >(literally can't see) the avant-garde in such a context... / wouldn't any >definition of the a-g as a group be a misappropriation of the term?
>
>bill marsh

in reply to maria damian:

> okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its critics.--md

↑ Index

77. Alan J Sondheim
You
Tue 5 Aug 1997

(tiny romantic poem, not Jennifer, not Julu, in the strange world of the Poetics-space, slightly out of place, sometimes I cry myself to sleep) -++--

You

Your packets and mine, intertwined, subdomains alternating one after another, caressing your ascii-encoded limbs, opening your email over and over again;

holding my breath against your domain address, turning towards, always towards, your name in my Inbox, reading your full header, pausing at each stage tracerouting myself to you, and back, journey of space, copper, and fiber-optic heavens;

calling out your URL in my sleep, dreaming your green words on my black screen, voicing your writing, speaking it quietly in your absent voice, and I close my eyes, imagine the play of interrupts from keyboard through server out to the wide wide world;

wanting you here, no longer driven by pixels bitmapped through checksums and error-codes, wanting you here;

wanting you here, wanting you here and hating distance and impossibility, and lags, and message-bases, and five layers of numerous protocols, seven layers of others, two layers of ascii code, one layer of beating hearts, filter systems and error warnings, country-code after country code inter- spersed in the midst of unknown ISPs and Netstorms, wanting nothing more than the loving touch of an arm, weight of a finger against lips, parted, and just about to speak, and silent, and no need to say anything more

---

↑ Index

78. Holly Crawford
Re: ahistroical lunch
Tue 5 Aug 1997

>Okay. Can I go back to what I thought Jordan's original subject was, >namely "history," and its capability of being reflected (or not) in verse?
"... I think that was ONE of the things that Michael Gold was >saying about Gertrude Stein, that her work was exactly "a-historical" in >that sense. It's all-at-once, it's simultaneous, it directs attention, as >Ron Silliman might say, to the level of the sentence, and not what came >before it. Thus the inequitous capitalistic system continues, I guess was >Gold's point, because creative artists have given up that part of the job >description that their work be "the tale of the tribe", that they >themselves be "antennae of the race", that their work MATTER in and for >the world. They've opted instead for the continuous present.

"... because creative artists have given up that part of the job >description that their work be 'the tale of the tribe', that they >themselves be 'antennae of the race'"

What is preceived to be a-historical may not be at all. It's depends on ones perspective. History defined from one point of view of that single point on the horizon line maybe just as ahistorical as and not "the tale of the tribe' as what is being perceived as "a-historical."

Artists haven't "give up their job" they may just be perceiving something different.

Every generation has been criticized for a short attention span. A hundred years ago this was the complaint registered against the Impressionist and the Paris audience. They were a "hysterical" group that couldn't concentrate.

H

Offerings Project
Send me an offer.
URL:http://www-leland.stanford.edu/~geo/holly_crawford.html

↑ Index

79. Rachel Levitsky

Re: You

Tue 5 Aug 1997

Alan Sondheim's poem--I imagine an arty commercial about sci fi life in the 90's, your computer can in fact hold you, love you. Begs the question, is there a difference between art and advertising? Is it true, as a friend says, the best writers are writing adline?

↑ Index

80. Alan J Sondheim
Re: You
Wed 6 Aug 1997

But the computer can't, and that's the whole point. The text is about ruptured protocols, not successful ones.

What constitutes the "best" writers?

Alan

On Tue, 5 Aug 1997, Rachel Levitsky wrote:

> Alan Sondheim's poem--I imagine an arty commercial about sci fi life in the 90's, your computer can in fact hold you, love you. Begs the question, is there a difference between art and advertising? Is it true, as a friend says, the best writers are writing adline?

↑ Index

81. Hugh Steinberg
Re: ahistroical lunch
Wed 6 Aug 1997

> Okay. Can I go back to what I thought Jordan's original subject was, namely "history," and its capability of being reflected (or not) in verse?

I'd like to take this from another angle: why shouldn't a writer want to write through/about history? I can't think of a richer, more delicious field to pursue/romp through. If history is the field in which language is embedded in, why not explore that place?

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

82. R I Caddel
fragmente 7
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Now available: Fragmente 7 (1997) ed. Anthony Mellors

New poetry by Frances Presley, Barry MacSweeney, Tony Lopez, John Kinsella, Kelvin Corcoran, Jennifer Moxley, Andrew Lawson, Robert Sheppard, Alan Halsey, Anthony Mellors, Peter Larkin, DS Marriott, Tracy Ryan, Richard Caddel and others...

Allen Fisher on Charles Olson, DS Marriott on Prynne/Oliver, Harry Gilonis on Caddel etc...

Anthony Mellors: 10 Rylands Way Durham DH1 5GR UK

fragmente costs 4.95GBP per issue, 9GBP for two (inc. UK p&p). Non-UK orders add 20%. Institutional orders 10GBP. Cheques (Sterling only) payable to Anthony Mellors.

Also available: Anthony Mellors Books: Catalogue 1. Supplied free with fragmente orders.

↑ Index

83. David Bromige
alan sondheim's "you"
Wed 6 Aug 1997

this poet catches my heart in its throat. How many i wonder wont find identity with it. alan shows himself again to be _the_ poet of our e-mail situations. David

↑ Index

84. David R. Israel
Re: ahistroical lunch
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Hugh Steinberg wrote:

> Okay. Can I go back to what I thought Jordan's original subject was, namely "history," and its capability of being reflected (or not) in verse?
>
> I'd like to take this from another angle: why shouldn't a writer want to write through/about history? I can't think of a richer, more delicious field to pursue/romp through. If history is the field in which language is embedded in, why not explore that place?

all that stuff about writers abdicating their duty by getting lost in the contours of the ahistorical present, rather than dutifully directing the minions of readers to the place where decisions are made: the world of jostle & bustle & power & schmauer -- could be usefully turned on its head, in my hysterical opinion (imho).

Possibly the artistic imperative is to get OUT of histoery a little step or two now & then, eh? -- cf. the sort of ahistorical time = mythic time (paradoxically, participating in the "true history of the tribe") suggested by Mircea Eliade in The Myth of The Eternal Return. To paraphrase, that august historian of the prehistorical proposes that in storytelling ritual of arcane cultures, the first and most basic thing that happens is an exit from "profane time" and an entry into the symbol world of collective mythic events -- in particular, "what happened" at the beginning of things (i.e., in another level of reality) that generated the historical particulars of the world we see . . .

Arguably, this manner of radical phase-shift has very much been a concern of poets of many a stripe & clime & chimney, -- throughout, um, history . . .

d.i.

```
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

↑ Index

86. henry g
Re: ahistroical lunch
Wed 6 Aug 1997

I could be wrong, but I think Jordan's original reference was to a debate here many moons ago over Mutlu Blasing's book POLITICS & FORM IN POSTMODERN POETRY, where she criticized the Olson-language poetry vein for following Pound into a too-easy melding of poetry & politics, poetry & history - in favor of her own pantheon of "really" postmodernists who more "intelligently" [my quotes] follow the zeitgeist of ironizing & questioning & ambiguizing the reality-element or referential quality of poetry, in their poetry.

In this stream, the critical perspective of Blasing, De Man, et al. takes New Criticism & gives it an extra twist, but the outcome is about the same.

James Longenbach's book on Wallace Stevens has a very good analysis of this whole issue in relation to politics & poetry in the 30s, when this was all debated very intensely. Basically, the issue of the poet's & poetry's place in "the world" was extremely important to Stevens who wavered between left & right tendencies [o.k. I know I'm SIMPLIFYING] & came down to the position that poetry was not the Shelleyan unacknowledged legislator, that politics and public action is better accomplished by politics & public action, but that poetry does have a role in a shared collective life by working out its own special energies. Stevens was close to Kenneth Burke (another one blasted by Michael Gold & the dogmatists) & the italian philospher Croce - ambiguity in poetry was not an expression of language's inherent nominalism or of some totalizing postmodern language philosophy, but was a TOOL for really reflecting the many-sided moral complexity of history & politics. Only AFTER the 30s did this become New Critical dogma & the academicization of the poetry industry got underway.

In my own view "history" is just an essential basic quality of time & that poetry would reflect on it should be taken for granted. This is just the beginning of discovering what a particular poem or poet is saying, doing, making. It also might be the great theme or deep vision [or little quirk] of the poem, its essential focus. I think ambiguity here is welcome because the arguments that 1) history is just one damn thing after another and 2) history ignored is complacent stupidity are both right at some level. What makes a poem as opposed to a chronicle? - Henry Gould

↑ Index

87. Jordan Davis
any lunch in a hysteria
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Thanks, Hugh, Henry, (Alan), and David, for some pointers on disynchrony/asynchrony I mean diachronics I mean Braudel I mean whatever. (Whatever is not a code word!) Letter to the New Yorker this week from a Mr Dye in the nwest who complains that after Auden poetry has ceased to be memorable speech and has settled for "much less" -- a kind of shorthand epistemology, esp. in the work of Jorie Graham and John Ashbery.

But isn't the 'how-do-I-know' of Ashbery's work not that far from Stevens not that far from Coleridge? I mean, can't one take Auden as a kind of popularizing freak (freak is a code word), a sort of forgiveable (because surprising) version of Wynton Marsalis? (And aren't there a lot of audenesque tendencies in Ashbery? the doggerel, the encyclopedic command of form -- or at least the occasional mention of obscure forms -- these are not putdowns!)

I mention the New Yorker letter because the symptom I see there, in Henry's version of Blasing, and all over the place all the time -- is the complain that poetry loses something .. that it is less than. It is always less than.

Oh well! As we know, the category of the 'always-already' is a great zone for arbitrage and not much else. Historin', as a much larger poet used to say, means to find out for yourself.

Still/here,
Jordan

↑ Index

88. Matthias Regan
Please remove from list
Wed 6 Aug 1997

The subscriber to this list is no longer at this address. When he arrives at his new location, perhaps he will subscribe again, but for the time being, please remove this destination from the "Send To" list.

Thanks

↑ Index

89. Maria Damon
"avantgarde"
Wed 6 Aug 1997

okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its critics.--md

↑ Index

90. henr
Re: any lunch in a hysteria
Wed 6 Aug 1997

On Wed, 6 Aug 1997 09:14:15 -0400 Jordan Davis said:
>I mention the New Yorker letter because the symptom I see there, in >Henry's version of Blasing, and all over the place all the time -- is the >complain that poetry loses something .. that it is less than. It is always >less than.

Spandrift tells me there's a Super Poet named Jeff out there. Lives near him in Weast Fareaver Ambiguity, Wyo. Jeff manages to combine history, correct politics, political incorrectedness, playful verbal pyromania, emotive heart-schmoozing, lovable mistakes, insane fury, loose jams within tight stanzas, experiment WITH traditional mayonnaise, slang in less than 3 languages, and quick shifts in technique - all in the form of INNOVATIVE HAIKU!!! Ashbery has a blurb about him INSIDE the blurbs on the outside of his latest book.

There was a movie at Sundance about him, called "Where's Jeff?" I think it stars Jeff Bridges. Spandrift looked at me seriously over a lid of chew the other day and said, "I'd vote for Jeff for President right now - President of Boulder." - Henry Gould

↑ Index

91. Judy Roitman
Re: lunch at the public: is it possible?
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Joe Safdie writes:

> But the idea for POETICS people is what I (again) thought Jordan was raising. There is some poetry being written today for which "history" is not important. I think that was ONE of the things that Michael Gold was saying about Gertrude Stein, that her work was exactly "a-historical" in > that sense. It's all-at-once, it's simultaneous, it directs attention, as Ron Silliman might say, to the level of the sentence, and not what came before it. Thus the inequitous capitalistic system continues, I guess was Gold's point, because creative artists have given up that part of the job description that their work be "the tale of the tribe", that they themselves be "antennae of the race", that their work MATTER in and for the world. They've opted instead for the continuous present.

Whoa there. The continuous present --- the real one, not the fake one of tv ads and video games --- is a pretty damn good antidote to any inequitous system, and the level of the sentence is a good innoculator against the bullshit causality that proudly brings you Northern Ireland,the Balkans (Bosnia not being the only manifestation of that particular tangle), the Middle East, Rwanda and Burundi, Afghanistan, the Khmer Rouge, etc. etc.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

92. aerialedge
The night and the snow
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Seems to me the question is whether & to what degree the micro-political is historical. I don't think in the end totalizing social-constructivist arguments hold up-- that's because no context is finite. What's happening & what happened -- same question? One could say there is a dialectic betweeen history & not-history relative to artistic activity of any sort & I would relate that dialectic to a similar (asimilar?) dialectic between sense & nonsense.

To err is statemental. --Bruce Andrews

History, what did the rose do? --Bernadette Mayer

↑ Index

93. David Kellogg
Re: "avantgarde"
Wed 6 Aug 1997

On Wed, 6 Aug 1997, Maria Damon wrote:

> okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its critics.--md

maria, I don't mean to monkeywrench your issue, but is it clear that the avant-garde is _more_ closed than other non-mainstream movements in contemporary poetics? It seems to me that policing is a component of any contested subfield within the larger field, and that such communities as "new formalist" and "performance" poetics each have their own forms of policing. What, in your view, are the distinguishing marks, if any, of avant-garde self-policing as such? Or have I misunderstood your question (lately, with me, more likely than not)?

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

>relate that dialectic to a similar (asimilar?) dialectic between sense & >nonsense.
>
>To err is statemental. --Bruce Andrews
>
>History, what did the rose do? --Bernadette Mayer

the idea of "history" as we know it (progress or retreat over time) also contains the idea of utopia (what transcends itself). For a lot of poets in the midst of 20th cent. utopias/despair the idea of hope was indeed micro-political, i.e., domestic in different ways. For Stevens, for example, the humdrum, the everyday, the normal is where to look for sanity & hope. the Dutch in him. Williams too, in a way. & Mandelstam talked again & again about the utopia of the household. just ONE other aspect of all this. Justice has a practical, sensible side... & "divine philology", for OM, was a bunch of students & a teacher sitting around talking. vodkayaking.

"Literature is a beast, furred by night & winter" - Mandelstam

--I say Blarnes, would you mind passing out the doilies? [Spandrift again]

↑ Index

95. Charles Alexander

Re: "avantgarde"

Wed 6 Aug 1997

At 09:14 AM 8/6/97 -0500, you wrote:
>okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the >avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some >thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in >November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of >the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its >critics.--md

Maria, I don't think it's true that there is any unified thing such as "the avant garde." And I think most people involved in practices which might be considered such, do not feel such a need to police the borders. I do think that some of those who might want to so police borders can be quite loud about such policing. And such loudness gets a lot of attention, at least in the short term.

But it's just not like a gated community.

charles

chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision handmade and trade editions of contemporary innovative writing [redacted] :: http://personal.riverusers.com/~chax/

↑ Index

96. Eryque Gleason

Re: The night and the snow

Wed 6 Aug 1997

At 1:00 PM 8/6/97 -0400, [redacted] wrote:
>Seems to me the question is whether & to what degree the micro-political is >historical.

what isn't historical?

↑ Index

97. KENT JOHNSON

yasusada

Wed 6 Aug 1997

Hello! Just back yesterday from the beach, with pails full of shells and shark teeth and only a driver's license in the wallet.

For those interested in developments related to the Yasusada writings, I thought I'd mention the following:

Today, August 6th, the Asahi Shimbun (the equivalent to NY Times in Japan, circulation 8.5 million), is going to publish an extensive story on Yasusada and the reaction to his writings in this country.

Recently, there have been other articles (though I haven't seen any of them yet) in Australia in the Sydney Morning Herald, in England in the Manchester Guardian and in Poetry Review, in Mexico in Octavio Paz's Vuelta, and in Spain in Lateral, a monthly from Barcelona. The Denver Quarterly will soon be publishing a special section on Yasusada in its upcoming issue, including an interview with myself and Javier Alvarez and a letter to Tosa Motokiyu from Mikhail Epstein. Other things are scheduled to appear elsewhere, and I'll mention them for information's sake as they appear if no one else does.

Good to be back! I like Maria Damon's question freshly posted: Just what is the "avant-garde"? And what sort of thing does it do? Kent

↑ Index

98. Tenney Nathanson dyed in the WHAT? WHO? WHOO!
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Jordon wrote:

> Thanks, Hugh, Henry, (Alan), and David, for some pointers on disynchrony/asynchrony I mean diachronics I mean Braudel I mean whatever. (Whatever is not a code word!) Letter to the New Yorker this week from a Mr Dye in the nwest who complains that after Auden poetry has ceased to be memorable speech and has settled for "much less" -- a kind of shorthand epistemology, esp. in the work of Jorie Graham and John Ashbery.

would that be FRED Dye? which issue?

putting arizona (and the u of, english dept of?) on the map again? AGAIN?

tenney

---

tenney nathanson

[redacted]

http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/

↑ Index

99. Christopher Alexander
Re: "avantgarde"
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Maria—
I'd like to put in with both Charles & David here for a closer scrutiny of "avant garde". I take it that the term is convenient, but dangerous as it quickly leads to the concept of a unified ["muffled"] avant garde, usually defined as either "pure nonsense", as against the rich diversity of "traditional" works (& this argument seems almost always to have something to do with its being "inhuman" or "asocial", though it might be of the more general variety Jordan rehearsed a few moments ago—!? etime, I guess—, viz., the fallenness of contemporary art/man [sic]); or or defined as "innovative" ["freshness sealed"], as against the stale practices of the "academicians" or unselfconscious "mainstream" verse ["oops, another one"].

I think we're all subject to this kind of easy distinction, at least from time to time (or anyway I am), & that's fine & useful so long as we acknowledge that "avant garde", or for that matter the "arriere garde" ["nobody ever said it, man"], are shorthand for multiple subfields (thanks to David-Pierre Kellogg!), whose practices don't really fulfill "the dream of a unified field", & may even be deeply conflictual.

interesting that you cite "the closedness of the avant garde tradition" as in part "the way it's construed by most of its critics"—I wld say—ah but it were a lie, being only partly true—that necessary policing by critics—& there's the rub—indicates how unstable the use of such ["their"] an umbrella term really is, & its distance from practice. of course, as David has already noted, all subfields of a given field (in this case the field of poetic production, or as he wld call it, "the poetic")—& not even just the highly contested ones—do their own policing ["the police in voices"].

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]

P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

100. Christopher Alexander

Re: avant garde

Wed 6 Aug 1997

---

oops, did I say Jordan? I meant Holly ("Re: ahistorical lunch). sorry to be cluttering the bandwidth...

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]

P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

101. william marsh
"*alternative*avant-garde"
Wed 6 Aug 1997

> At 09:14 AM 8/6/97 -0500, you wrote:
> okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its critics.--md

there's been a lot of talk about this issue of late (here and elsewhere), and i'm wondering if anyone else feels the same confusion about it / the spatial analogy here, that the a-g is a particular zone or area of activity and therefore identifiable by its borders (and its potential policing of borders) is the main source of my confusion / when did the "avant garde" come to represent a group or subgroup or "subfield in a larger field" as David Kellogg puts? -- the classificatory scheme strikes me as fundamentally at odds with what the a-g has always represented to me, namely a kind of momentum that infuses artistic activities and (sometimes) instigates change / if current notions of an avant-garde stipulate that it exists as a group among groups (and i agree with Charles Alexander that it is not a "unified thing"), then clearly there must be an alternative avant-garde which escapes such classification -- which makes it even more confusing / if the a-g is the leading edge of activity, then how can an edge have a "border"? not to mention a police force monitoring transgressions / i can't imagine (literally can't see) the avant-garde in such a context... / wouldn't any definition of the a-g as a group be a misappropriation of the term?

bill marsh

↑ Index

102. Peter Landers
yuk yuk
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Clark Coolidge was seeking a personal language. He felt that words came from others, perhaps he felt they were abused by others, and therefore he wanted to let them stand alone or in groups without necessarily meaning what people thought them to mean. The hope was that the words would begin to work as sound objects. Yuk yuk.

Jackson MacLow is involved in the very historical, or pre-historical process of poetry-as-shamanism. Sounds, dance, words in new peronal ritual. Write rite. Yuk yuk.

All best to you, Jordan, but I dig these guys, y'know :-)

Pete

↑ Index

103. Lawrence Upton
yunga brit yak-yaks for jordan n all
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Re cris cheek's list of _People you might well keep an ear-eye out for include_

RWC is publishing an issue of Scott Thurston and a chunky edition of Ira Lightman - both late this year or early next

L

↑ Index

104. David Kellogg
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Wed 6 Aug 1997

On Wed, 6 Aug 1997, william marsh wrote:

> At 09:14 AM 8/6/97 -0500, you wrote:
> okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its critics.--md
>
> *there's been a lot of talk about this issue of late (here and elsewhere), and i'm wondering if anyone else feels the same confusion about it / the spatial analogy here, that the a-g is a particular zone or area of activity and therefore identifiable by its borders (and its potential policing of borders) is the main source of my confusion / when did the "avant garde" come to represent a group or subgroup or "subfield in a larger field" as David Kellogg puts? -- the classificatory scheme strikes me as fundamentally at odds with what the a-g has always represented to me, namely a kind of momentum that infuses artistic activities and (sometimes) instigates change / if current notions of an avant-garde stipulate that it exists as a group among groups (and i agree with Charles Alexander that it is not a "unified thing"), then clearly there must be an alternative avant-garde which*

> *escapes such classification -- which makes it even more confusing / if the a-g is the leading edge of activity, then how can an edge have a "border"? not to mention a police force monitoring transgressions / i can't imagine (literally can't see) the avant-garde in such a context... / wouldn't any definition of the a-g as a group be a misappropriation of the term?*

Isn't the charge of misappropriation itself a form of policing? I guess it depends who you're talking to (about). I realize spatial metaphors such as the Bourdieu/Foucault "field" have their disadvantages, but they may tend to counter the possible mystification of "a kind of momentum that unfuses artistic activities."

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

misappropriation? hmm, on the contrary, I'd say that's exactly the function the term is serving in this discussion.

it's interesting that you object to the spatialization of the "avant garde", as my understanding of the the term has always been as spatial metaphor (can we have some help from the francophiles?), as opposed for instance to the Americanism "before his/her time".
it seems awkward to paraphrase Bernstein here—or maybe what's awk. is referring to him as "Bernstein", when he might be "right here with us" (more spatialization, but I'm reminded more of a seance—"are you there, Charles? give us a sign...)—but one has to appreciate his assertion that, dammit, no one is before their time—ok, really paraphrasing—the gist of which, as I see it, is partly to bring to mind the historicity of production, & partly to debunk the sort of evolutionary narrative that is sometimes made of the history of (& by extension contemporary) poetic production.

in fact, I'd be willing to entertain the idea that, whatever its shortcomings, the spatial metaphor we've been batting about ["b-b-b- spit it out, kid"], & its attendant theory (Pierre Bourdieu, Foucault, possibly de Certeau etc.), might be an effort precisely to escape the apparent linearity of history, in favor of a more complex view of (in this case) poetic production as it occurs both in & at a time. actually, David, I'd be very interested to hear what you had to say abt. this. (in case some of you list-folk don't know, David Kellogg has some very fine articles out there in just this "area", which I'd recommend, except that I'm @ work & can't give you the specific citations).

anyway, sorry to pull the plug & run—or does that sound like a crude reference to euthanasia?—, but I'm signing off for a wk. to help our fellow listee Matthias Regan move to San Francisco. in fact, he'll be arriving here in just... 8 hours, give or take. ah, SF—with such a pleasant destination, who wldn't take a week, eh?

so, best to all, & I'll look forward to again reading your scintillating conversation when I return.

Chris
..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

107. william marsh
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Wed 6 Aug 1997

At 05:57 PM 8/6/97 -0400, you wrote:

David,
>> wouldn't any definition of the a-g as a group be a misappropriation of the term?
>
>Isn't the charge of misappropriation itself a form of policing? I guess >it depends who you're talking to (about). I realize spatial metaphors >such as the Bourdieu/Foucault "field" have their disadvantages, but they >may tend to counter the possible mystification of "a kind of momentum >that unfuses artistic activities."
>
interesting typo in the last line!

as for the charge of misappropriation as "a form of policing", i agree it depends who i'm talking about, and who i am, in fact, making the charge / am i inside the avant-garde making the claim, or outside? -- i don't really know, but the problem implied by this question is basically what i was hoping to point out / the tendency of late in some criticism to colonize the a-g with particular writers or at least writing tendencies--which would be a necessary prerequisite for any discussion of its border tactics--to me is a form of policing / pre-established borders and divisions have to be assumed before anyone can suggest that there are guards in the garde

all best,
bill

↑ Index

108. Schuchat Simon
Re: yasusada
Wed 6 Aug 1997

Are you pleased that the Asahi is publishing its Yasusada piece on Hiroshima day?

↑ Index

109. Eric Blarnes
Re: yuk yuk
Wed 6 Aug 1997

On Wed, 6 Aug 1997 17:01:19 -0400 Peter Landers said: >Clark Coolidge was seeking a personal language. He felt that words came >from others, perhaps he felt they were abused by others, and therefore he >wanted to let them stand alone or in groups without necessarily meaning >what people thought them to mean. The hope was that the words would begin >to work as sound objects. Yuk yuk.
>
>Jackson MacLow is involved in the very historical, or pre-historical >process of poetry-as-shamanism. Sounds, dance, words in new peronal >ritual. Write rite. Yuk yuk.
>
Now if Mr. Gould is still on line, this is the kind of informative message he could learn more about by simply crossing the street now & then & visiting the Harris Collection, which luckily contains most of the poetry in America including language poetry so-called. But he insists on wallowing in grotesque labels & second-third-fourth-hand "knowledge" of various "groups" writing poetry. This is probably because he's too self-centered & lazy to lift his eyes above the current graduate dissertation he's reading. Gould is a kind of parasite on the avant-garde - he joins a language poetry-based innovative chat list & proceeds to fling critical cliches about it back in their faces. As Charles Alexander said, it's not a gated community, yet Gould feels it necessary to plunge into pestiferous & silly "critical" heroics which are really only a joke.
- Eric Blarnes

Care to respond, Hank? Is that your lunchbox on the dump, or is that Cornelius Nepo's?
- Spandrift

I'm stunned. I've got to read more of this stuff, I guess. I thought we were a "label" culture, not a libel culture. Publicists are the Faustian bargain; labels have sticky glue on them; critics are forever adding butterflies to either Box B or Box C; poetry & the intelligence resist each other almost successfully - almost because they share an equivalent rawness traveling in reverse channels down Policeman's Ball Creek. Hey look! There goes a red-breasted Avant-Garde! Male or female? - Henry Gould

Well, I for one am gonna evaluate every clubfoot nag that snorts in my corral. Reject the trash. Think it through before you lay too much wire. & sure as hell don't try to write any "poetry". unless it's - [use label on reverse side only] COWBOY poetry. - Spandrift

↑ Index

110. Rachel Levitsky

*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde*"*

Wed 6 Aug 1997

We're not supposed to talk to anyone who isn't going to do the avant garde thing with this poetics list. R. Tejada labels a certain something as "advanced writing" and A. Sondheim asks in response to my question who are the 'best writers?' My take and the point I think I was making in my question about art and advertisement is do we still somehow believe the 'best' gets the job, the hot tub? What happens to the idea of grass rootification implied in the abdication of authorship while we are trying to make a place for 'advanced' or 'avant garde.' I think of performance art that never got recorded. C. Harryman told me of a friend whose name I am forgetting who did performance for an audience of one and no recording (later a book--it is difficult to resist the notion that ones ideas are good and should somehow be deciminated). Are we interested (really) in consciousness or (post-mortem) fame. Benjamin says the artist can't make art with an audience in mind but isn't defining ourselves as 'avant-garde' suggesting we are reaching to an audience of the future?

↑ Index

111. Alan J Sondheim

You, Here

Wed 6 Aug 1997

(now she won't tell, now I won't)
--+-

You, Here

splayed message-bases, eyes opened everywh ah, your name, your face, your hands cares the span of language, words, or touch whic already a presence languishing. In this ma

the scent and taste of your hair, dark col
the screen fissuring into public and priva that last look, I turned the corner, disap within the other closeted, it's there I ho self noted, sullen, catatonic, opened or c face, I have no secrets from you, which is this lack constructed of the fullness of l takes on the real, and I rest, my head lea turn to you in my sleep of desperate reaso soulful life, in love I cried your name, "

↑ Index

112. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Thu 7 Aug 1997

how does that go - 'there is no avant-garde, only people who are a little late.' i'd appreciate the source if anyone may have it at the ready. c.

↑ Index

113. Jordan Davis
fxn of a-g (I/they)
Thu 7 Aug 1997

Kent Johnson asked - what is the function of the avant-garde.

I dunno.

Inconvenience the intellect?

Weed out harmful mutations -- no, that's sex --

Provoke order?

Jordan, homage to D.Israel-ee

↑ Index

114. Alan J Sondheim
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Thu 7 Aug 1997

I make art with an audience in mind; I possess post-mortem fame.

I was walking with my friend I was walking with my friend Fido, Judith Rodenbeck, down Perry (where my ex-wife lives with her Japanese boyfriend) (I think) and we were discus- sing _milieu,_ in particular, the artworld milieu of the 70s. How it gets reified, edited, year after year. I knew the curator at the High Museum in Atlanta - he wanted to have a show called Masterpieces of Conceptual Art

That was the nail in the coffin. Because in life, it's milieu, opposition, interstices, rumor. Not this dream of phallic men.

Klaus Kertess once said to me it all comes out in the wash. But it doesn't and boundaries, avant-garde and other - are self-inscribed.

I've yet to meet the artist who did _x_ to shock an audience, but I'd like to shake her/his hand.

Even the Situationists, or especially the Situationists, were exclusion- ists. (Word? Word!) Surrealism, Dada, was no better.

Avant-what, by whom?

I couldn't write without the thought of a reader, readers, that the _thing_ like depression, would take hold, grab ground after death. For that matter, I've died years ago.

I've never stolen anything - in answer to some rumors I've heard.

Alan

↑ Index

115. Alan J Sondheim

First Early Sample Internet (ARPANET) Exchanges 1972

Thu 7 Aug 1997

--++---

INTERNET, EARLY HISTORY: EXCHANGE STYLE EXAMPLES FROM:

SCENARIOS FOR USING THE ARPANET AT THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON COMPUTER COMMUNICATION

Washington, D.C.
October 24-26, 1972

NOTE (Alan Sondheim, 1997): It's clear that the sample dialogs, use of Weizenbaum's Eliza program, etc., are the ancestors of today's expert systems - but at this point in time, they were most likely read as in- cipient artificial mind (classic AI). Already real and virtual subject- ivities interpenetrate.

The quoted sections above are formatted close to the original.

(Thanks to Alex McKenzie and BBN.)

EARLY SAMPLE CONVERSATIONS ON BBN TENEX:

====

BBN TENEX === HOST #65

8. To link to the user at TTY7:

@ link [SP] 7 [CR]
LINK FROM ICCC, TTY 103
@ ;hello ray. [CR] _Messages over "link" should be preceded by semi-colon._
@ ;HELLO, WHO IS IT? _Questions and comments from TTY7._
@ ;this is abhay bhushan from mit, can you help me? [CR]
@ ;OF COURSE, HOW ARE YOU ABHAY?
@ ..... _Conversation continues._
@ ;nice talking to you. bye. [CR]
@ break [CR] _Break the "link", please._

====

BBN DOCTOR === HOST #69

3. To run DOCTOR: @ run [SP] <hacks>doctor [CR}
BBN LISP-10 02-22-71
GOOD AFTERNOON.
TELL ME YOUR PROBLEMS.
PLEASE TERMINATE INPUT WITH A PERIOD OR QUESTION MARK.
* i have a big problem. _The user begins as in a psychiatric interview._
I AM NOT SURE I UNDERSTAND YOU FULLY. _The DOCTOR continues the interview in a lively fashion._
* my grandother has a gzorenplatz.
IS IT IMPORTANT TO YOU THAT YOUR GRANDMOTHER HAS A GZORENPLATZ?
.....
Continue dialog as your spirit carries you.
.....
* goodbye
IT'S BEEN MY PLEASURE, THAT'S $7.15 PLEASE.
NIL
<-

====

SCHOLAR ==== HOST #69

<- scholar() _After (possibly) looking at instructions, start the SCHOLAR dialog._

HELLO, MY NAME IS SCHOLAR. I WILL HELP YOU IN REVIEWING THE GEOGRAPHY OF SOUTH AMERICA. THIS IS ABC REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL. TODAY IS 24-OCT-72.

IF YOU HAVE CAREFULLY STUDIED YOUR INSTRUCTIONS, WE MAY BEGIN THE REVIEW NOW.

WHEN YOU ARE READY TO START, TYPE READY --- REMEMBER TO TERMINATE EACH LINE OF INPUT WITH AN ASTERISK * FOLLOWED BY A CARRIAGE RETURN.
* read* [CR] _Asterisk("") is SCHOLAR's prompt character. You must, repeat MUST, terminate input to SCHOLAR with an asterisk ("") and a carriage return before it will listen to you.
Use control-a ("^A") to delete characters from your input line, i.e., the standard Tenex editing characters._
PLEASE TYPE YOUR NAME---MR., MISS, OR MRS. FOLLOWED BY FIRST NAME, MIDDLE NAME OR MIDDLE INITIAL, AND LAST NAME.
* YOURNAME* [CR]
NAME OF YOUR INSTRUCTOR, PLEASE:
* warnock* [CR]
LET'S BEGIN OUR DISCUSSION NOW, "YOURNAME" USE ONE OF THE FOLLOWING:
14400000
3600000
1200000
1800000
TO ANSWER THE QUESTION:
APPROX WHAT IS THE AREA OF BRAZIL?
* 14400000* [CR]
WRONG,
I'LL GIVE YOU ANOTHER CHANCE.
* 3600000* [CR]
VERY GOOD.
.....
_Continue your dialog as you wish. When tired, type control-c ("^C") to return to EXEC on logout.
.....
^c

====

CONVERSATION ON UCLA SEX SYSTEM:

UCLA-NMC SIGMA-7 === HOST #1

5. To use the toy question answering program, TIMMY, type:
! TIMMY [CR]
002 TIMMY STARTED
MY NAME IS TIMMY THE TERMINAL, WHAT'S YOURS?
YOURNAME [CR]
PLEASED TO MEET YOU, YOURNAME HAVE WE MET BEFORE?
NO [CR]
SORRY, BUT I HAVE A TERRIBLE MEMORY FOR NAMES. ANYWAY, MY JOB IS TO ANSWER YOUR QUESTIONS SO, ASK AWAY.
WHEN WILL THIS COMPUTER CRASH NEXT? [CR]
ABOUT 5 O'CLOCK.
..... _Ask any number of your own questions of TIMMY._
GOODBY [CR] _Exit from TIMMY._

==========

↑ Index

116. David R. Israel
Re: History
Thu 7 Aug 1997

Pam Brown wrote:

> Henry wrote:"In my own view "history" is just an essential basic quality of time & that poetry would reflect on it should be taken for granted. "
>
> In the film "Sans Soleil", Chris Marker remarked -
> "History throws its empty bottles out the window" to the question "what is history?" poets / poetry has (have) often answered, it is the story of losses -- our own loss, gradually, of everything. This is the immediate & personal level at which "history" is encountered by a subject in a body -- and isn't it often at that level (history as what's been lost -- & is, as aftermath, converted to memory) that "history" lives & works, in poetry? --

Quoth Omar Khayyam (per moi; a selection of half-dozen quatrains) --

The only thing the pretty stars achieves is pain whatever gift the give they take away again

those beings queing up for birth -- if they should sniff what happens here -- would swiftly pour it down the drain

Mr. Wiseman! rise & shine! the morning's here see that youngster sifting dust? now look with care -- you could lend him sage advice: "hey, stir it gently for both Plato's brain & Picasso's eyes are there"

If I assumed the cosmic helm
I'd scrap at once this bitter realm installing another in its lieu where grief could never overwhelm

I wouldn't have fetched up here if this required my okay
now if I had my druthers
                I most certainly would stay!
in such a bombed-out bungalow there's nothing could compare with never having come or been or gone in any way

Our coming & our going brings what benefit?
life warp suggests a weft so where's the zen of it?
in the midst of worlds how many seekers burn to ashes but what wisp of somoke comes then of it?

Those souls who plumbed the depths of thought & scaled feelings' height in the circle of a Perfect One became like lamps alight yet even these could not evade
                the shadow of demise:
they spun such brilliant fables always ending with "good night!"

/ / / / /

of course, Khayyam's native city of Khorasan saw the ravages of "history" of the sort lately noted by Judy Roitman (with a large part of its population slaughtered) -- but although "history" as it's been known in recent milennia might (per the unpleasantry) largely comprise the history of wars, yet such personal conclusions as might arise from this generality, are -- vis-a-vis poetry -- another matter; -- the history of imagination (no less than that of memory) having its own tale to tell betimes . . .

```
g'morning
d.i.
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

```
d.i.
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

none of the poetry in the Norton, that I can see, IS visual poetry; similarly, some poets in the Norton, such as Ron Johnson, are or have been visual poets, but their visual poetry is not in the anthology.

Otherstream poetry isn't necessarily "new," just not widely accepted. Visual poetry, for example, has been around much longer than language poetry.

The opposite of otherstream poetry is NOT mainstream poetry, it's "knownstream poetry." All mainstream poetry is knownstream but not all knownstream poetry (e.g., rhymed sci fi poetry) is mainstream.

A second way of determining whether a given kind of poetry is otherstream or not would be by polling college English departments to find out the national percentage of English courses in which the poetry was seriously taught--or even so much as mentioned. Any poetry getting less than one percent would be otherstream.

Now to a different but related topic to ask why people are so frequently reluctant to define as "historical," poems that are explicitly and mainly about history (like "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere"), and define as "ahistorical," poems that are entirely without overt historical references (like "The Red Wheelbarrow," which is about a red wheel barrow), and agree that many poems contain bits of history, which keep them from being ahistorical, but have a different central focus than history, which keeps them from being historical, and carry on from there. As taxonomaniacal as ever, Bob G.

↑ Index

119. Susan Wheeler

Re: POETICS Digest - 5 Aug 1997 to 6 Aug 1997

Thu 7 Aug 1997

Re Maria's question: Might a perpetual reluctance to use "avant-garde" be an example of this policing? I ask sharing some in this reluctance. In high school, Connie Lorman showed us a Cocteau movie in which there was the line "To break statues you must become one," and then we all had to write papers on this. Just jawing here.

Re Hugh Steinberg's questions re writing "through" history and > history is the field in which language is embedded in <: I have been working on a novel of late. I am constructing a couple of voices that are leagues from my own, and the whole thing is set in 1979 & 1980. The exercise of excluding all language from these voices -- slang or otherwise -- that has evolved just since 1980 is finally viscerally making clear to me what the theory never fully did: the language itself is determining the course of natural events, to some extent. I've spouted this for years but with fingers crossed behind my back. To see it enacted is eye-popping.

Re Alan's gifts to the list: Gifts indeed. And stellar ones. Many thanks.

Susan Wheeler
[redacted] voice/fax [redacted]

↑ Index

120. Mark Prejsnar
Re: "avantgarde"
Thu 7 Aug 1997

> maria, I don't mean to monkeywrench your issue, but is it clear that the avant-garde is _more_ closed than other non-mainstream movements in contemporary poetics? It seems to me that policing is a component of any contested subfield within the larger field, and that such communities as "new formalist" and "performance" poetics each have their own forms of policing. What, in your view, are the distinguishing marks, if any, of

Furthermore, both the posts on this issue take an identifiable a-g as a given....I dunno. I think among other things, "a-g" is a historical (and historically specific) construct that is now very old, and tends to pull all discussions back into institutionally-sanctioned and established channels. A good example is a review-essay I read in (I think) the London Review of Books, last Nov. or Dec. or something, by Fred Jameson, reviewing several books on the Tel Quel group..One point (which I've seen others make) was his insistence (he wasn't really conscious that he was insisting) that "all" "avant-gardes" are authoritarian and tend toward having a specific leader (sounds like a theory of fascism, actually); this is too silly to need refutation, if dada, langpo, Beats, and many others are taken into consideration. But this is the kind of thing you get in established academic (acadominent?) discourse about "avant-gardes"...And one of the reasons it's necessary to get very specific: which supposed "a-g" is one talking about?? Many of the the alleged a-g's that have been most vital to my own life and poetry, over the years, don't seem to have much to do with Jameson's frame of reference (no surprise, probably)..But over-generalizations abound in acadominent discussions of the term, and make me uneasy.

What I and most of my friends do in poetry is still called "a-g" by a large number of groups out there, but I'd hack off a foot rather than actively use that term about what we do...Its primary purpose these days is to keep poets hedged in and labelled so their work can be dismissed and not read...In light of that claim, it occurs to me that i'm reversing your original formulation, Maria, and suggesting that often it is others who are policing the A-G borders, M-17 in hand, not the wannabe A-Gers...

Mark
Atlanta

↑ Index

121. Mark Prejsnar
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Thu 7 Aug 1997

Bill Marsh's point is a good one: the old concept of "a-g" was indeed fairly (at least) apocalyptic. It had to do with overthrowing things pretty substantially. Don't forget that the term was originally a military one. The advance guard of a large attacking force. That gives you some sense of what (when it was meaningful) the term connoted...

My argument now is, the term was a contingent fact of history, thrown up from the roiling human sea. By now it's definitely sun-bleached and dessicated. What Bill's posting reminded me of was that we were all using "a-g" in a watered-down sense, as a designation of a place in a large contextual field. Which if you stop and think about it, is just the wrong spatial image for an "avant-garde," which is the advancing first wave of an army.

Our use of the watered-down term, is healthy, indicating that we're moving away from the old "avant-garde" concept altogether...Which I would advocate. (Along with axing "experimental" and similar ghetto-talk)

Mark P.
Atlanta

↑ Index

122. Christina Fairbank Chirot
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Thu 7 Aug 1997

Whether one agrees with them or not two "standard" places to begin are Renato Pogglioli The Theory of the Avant-Garde (Cambridge: Belknap/Harvard 1968) and The Theory of the Avant-Garde by Peter Burger (Minneapolois: U Minnestoa P, 1984). The former has a lot of interesting historical background, the latter is more theoretical. I have been working for a while for fun on a kind of comic book/visual poetry series "Instant Classic vs. Planned Obsolence". (inspired in equal parts by Gertrude Stein's "Composition as explanation" essay with the famous outlaw to classic the interval is almost not there equation and Godzilla vs. Mothra, vs. megatron and etc). Perhaps a buried subtext in there re avant garde? Once for fun with a friend we made imitation National Guard posters changing the words to Avant-Garde but keeping the address and phone number of a recruiting office on it. Visting the office a week or so later they said yes they had gotten some strange calls about joining. Re Gertrude Stein/history/avant-garde etc (she read a lot of memoirs and a favorite was that of President/General Ulysses S. Grant)--the first sentence of Stein's Geographical History of America is very interesting. She notes being born in the same month as Washington and Lincoln. That is: two Presidents and Stein are equated: the "father of His Country", the "Great Emancipator" and Gertrude Stein! Also: Washington "could not tell a lie" and Lincoln was "Honest Abe"--so we know Gertrude Stein as well must be giving us the truth--or the "true gen" in Mr. Hemingway's terminology! Gertrude Stein--was she noting the connection between the military and the avant-garde here? Washington and Lincoln had "led their country in times of war" so to speak--(U.S. Grant as well--) And much of "Compostion as Explanation" is about the interrelationships among the changes in art and the changes in life brought about by WWI--that those in art had seen those of the war just ahead of time--Picasso seeing a camouflaged tank with its Cubist looking markings and saying: "We made that". (See this in Autobiography of Alice. B. Toklas--also see Wars I have Known) Then there are the the Threes with Gertrude Stein: Three Lives, the three Geniuses of AABT--Whitehead, Picasso, Stein--and the three leaders--Washington, Lincoln, Stein. There are over two hundred seventy-five book title entries under "avant-garde" in library here. Yet as one knows from the X Files: "the truth is out there" --out there Luigi made good point re this--Mail Art and so on--guerilla and open ended-- ZA DA

dBC

↑ Index

123. Maria Damon

Re: yasusada

Thu 7 Aug 1997

At 8:27 AM +0800 8/7/97, Schuchat Simon wrote:
>Are you pleased that the Asahi is publishing its Yasusada piece on >Hiroshima day?

i've heard quite enough about yasusada. no offense intended, kent and others, but i don't see the point in devoting so much intellectual and emotional energy to someone who doesn't exist.

↑ Index

124. Maria Damon
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Thu 7 Aug 1997

thank you all, david k, bill m, david i, charles a, etc. i share many of your beliefs, such as, that vanguardism (my preferred term) is a process rather than a coterie or school. however, in my professional life, i've encountered enough instances where the boundaries are tightly defined to lead me to believe there is some anxiety about borders. for instance, i was recently asked for permission to reprint my bob kaufman essay in an anthology of essays on "the avant garde." i said okay, but in my opinion my essay on poetry by some teenage girls in a boston housing project was much more interesting, more adventurous, less man-and-his-work formulaic. the answer was: well i do "cultural studies" myself, but in this project i'm working with a fairly traditional understanding of the "avant garde," so i'll stick w/ the kaufman piece. for another instance, when i proposed a paper for the conference i mentioned, on "the poetics of avant garde poetry," there was some hesitatiion over acceptiing my paper because its definition of "avant garde" was too broad (won't it render the term meaningless to broaden it? was the question.) again, i was advised by colleagues on the organizing side of things to stress that i was working with a "cultural studies model," i guess to provide reassurance that there was some recognized method to my intentions. also, my introduction to this list and partcipation, while in some ways broadening (in that i've learned about poets i didn't know about before) has also been a narrowing, as the list is quite explicitly intended for discussion of newer poetries (i can't recall exactly the wording of the bernstein welcome). i don't mean to wax victimy or snide in these personal anecdotes, i hope you all realize how much i enjoy learning all this new stuff and getting to know y'all. these moments of feeling the barriers come up have been interesting because they foreground categorical, operative divisions that are sometimes disavowed at the more overt level. another line that gets drawn is that of aesthetic judgment, and the assumption that we all share certain judgments (hallmark card verse is embarrassingly bad, so is maya angelou's poetry; bpNichol is fabulous, etc --don't get me wrong, i love bpNichol and i don't buy hallmark cards but i do find angelou's poetry meaningful, esp when i see how deeply it touches my students). as i've said here before, aesthetic judgment has been the dividing line between me and some of the people i've worked with. in fact i tend to trust them cuz i don't trust myself, so i usually concede at the level of editorial revision, but at the metalevel i'm asking, why is it SO overridingly important that there be some kind of consensus of aesthetic judgment? or, why is this consensus the basis of our community or commonality?

At 6:39 PM -0600 8/5/97, Robert Drake wrote:
>bill's sense ov (or puzzlement over) the question matches mine,

>my idea of a.g. as (b)leeding edge of activity, rather than th >consolidated camps just behind th front lines. but to carry the >military analogy further, how does the advance guard actually work?
>in cadres & cels, with an intense group loyalty & distrust of the >enemy all around... appropriate and adaptive during th heavy >fighting, but disfunctional afterwords.
>
>and praps that points to the problem--the term "avant garde" gets >attached to certain activity, and then stays stuck long after it's >accurate. certain aspects of langpo might have been a.g., or free >jazz... but are they still? well, for some folks probably so--if >bebop is as far as your ears have gotten, than albert ayler is a.g.... >sometimes, too, the a.g. designer label is claimed by folks as a >marketing tool, especially in a popular culture such as ours, >that values The New as latest/greatest. & that too can lead to >the dynamics that maria's pointing to--seige mentality, whether >or no it's "justified"...
>
>(btw, i'm casting no aspersions & making no claims for what poetics >are "legitimatly" a.g., whatever that might mean, & hope no one else will... >that's one slippery slope we've been down several times too often...)
>
>and finally, in maria's initial posting, she referes to "_the_ avant >garde" (emphasis added), and i'm wondering if you'll be more specific, md?
>because i don't see a.g. activity, even in areas poetical, as being >singular but rather diverse... hard for me to imagine a guerrilla >war against the Established Culture launching a frontal offensive, >there are lots ov little forays goin on... some (i'll mention Mail >Art, fr one) strike me as very unprotective & open. what specific >a.g.s are you thinking ov?
>
>asever
>luigi
>
>william marsh wrote:
>>
>>there's been a lot of talk about this issue of late (here and elsewhere), >>and i'm wondering if anyone else feels the same confusion about it / the >>spatial analogy here, that the a-g is a particular zone or area of activity >>and therefore identifiable by its borders (and its potential policing of >>borders) is the main source of my confusion / when did the "avant garde"
>>come to represent a group or subgroup or "subfield in a larger field" as

>>David Kellogg puts? -- the classificatory scheme strikes me as fundamentally >>at odds with what the a-g has always represented to me, namely a kind of >>momentum that infuses artistic activities and (sometimes) instigates change
>>/ if current notions of an avant-garde stipulate that it exists as a group
>>among groups (and i agree with Charles Alexander that it is not a "unified >>thing"), then clearly there must be an alternative avant-garde which >>escapes such classification -- which makes it even more confusing / if the
>>a-g is the leading edge of activity, then how can an edge have a "border"?
>>not to mention a police force monitoring transgressions / i can't imagine >>(literally can't see) the avant-garde in such a context... / wouldn't any >>definition of the a-g as a group be a misappropriation of the term?
>>
>>bill marsh
>
>in reply to maria damian:
>
>>>okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the >>>avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some >>>thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in >>>November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of >>>the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its >>>critics.--md

↑ Index

125. Joe Safdie
Re: lunch at the public: is it possible?
Thu 7 Aug 1997

Judy Roitman wrote:
>

> Whoa there. The continuous present --- the real one, not the fake one of > tv ads and video games --- is a pretty damn good antidote to any inequitous > system, and the level of the sentence is a good innoculator against the > bullshit causality that proudly brings you Northern Ireland,the Balkans > (Bosnia not being the only manifestation of that particular tangle), the > Middle East, Rwanda and Burundi, Afghanistan, the Khmer Rouge, etc. etc.
>
I find this reply astonishing.

David Israel's thoughts about the history of the imagination being equally as important as the history of wars, power, etc. (and about Eliade's mythic time as opposed to secular time) are one thing. I don't agree with them either, but I understand that poets have and will continue to explore these realms, and I think I also understand a little about David's whimsy and style in general. I don't think there's anything particularly "timeless" about either of these pursuits, David, but that's another story, one, if you wish, we could pursue back-channel. As Gibbon said, "To the people all religions were equally true; to the philosophers all religions were equally false; and to the state, all religions were equally useful."

But to say, as Judy Roitman does above, that the level of the sentence is a good "innoculator" (sic) against "the bullshit causality that proudly brings us Northern Ireland, Bosnia" et al is stunningly wrong-headed, it seems to me. For one thing, is it even possible to inoculate ourselves against such phenomena? Why would we wish to? Are we really immune from such "stuff," here in the glorious non-Balkans? Has it become impossible to learn from history? (She does have enough of a knowledge, apparently, to state that Bosnia is not the only element of "The Balkan problem," as it's been known for centuries; how did she obtain that knowledge?) In fact, how does her attitude differ from my beginning composition students who say they don't watch the news because it's too depressing?

I agree with those who have said that the level of generality at which these disputes are conducted is excessive. Perhaps we could look at specific poems.

I also agree with Henry Trismegistus, who said a few posts back that there's validity in both arguments, pro-history (ignorance of it leads to stupidity) and anti-history (it just goes on and on). May the gods protect us all from totalizing anything. But even if "history" IS a nightmare from which we're all trying to awaken, as the mythic Stephen said, don't we have to first realize that we're asleep?

And yes, Jordan -- some poetry IS "less than".

↑ Index

126. Alan J Sondheim
<login>
Thu 7 Aug 1997

--+-

<login> <logout>
<login> <logout>
<login>

Jennifer and Julu are talking. Jennifer pauses, says, I'm jealous.
Julu says, of what, nothing's happening around here anyway.
J says it doesn't matter, it's what's going on underneath.
J says it feels like she's been abandoned.
J says, we've got each other.
J says, not if he's not there, we're dead, nothing left of us.
J says, there's nothing left of us anyway.
J says, love's got him by the balls, cause he's male.
J says, love's got us by the protocols, cause we're mail.
J says, don't screw around, we don't get this often to talk.
She says, what are we gonna do.
J says, we could mess it up, but we haven't got a thing to worry about on that account, he's gonna mess it up anyway.
She says, he can't help it, he's too insecure, too needy, too fucked up.
J says, if he wasn't fucked up, he couldn't write, but yeah, I wouldn't want to be in his shoes.
She says, he'll be back, I'm sure he'll be back.
J says, at least he got to feel something, cut us loose for a bit now.
J says, yeah, he's feeling like hell, all these things he's buried for years, they're gonna swamp him.
J says, what are we gonna do, just want to say I love you, Julu.
J says, I love you too, Jenn, hang in there, this can't last forever, he can't last like this, nothing can.
But J says, this is too depressing, we're gonna have to be silent again.
J cries a bit, J is teary-eyed.
They wander.

<login>
<login>

↑ Index

127. Tom Orange
"avantgarde"
Fri 8 Aug 1997

david i,

re: yr questions abt the history of the term/concept, matei calinescu has a useful take on this in his book "faces of modernity" (or perhaps "five faces of modernity," it was published first under one title and again under the other, duke up 1991 i think). if i had the blasted thing here i would save you the trouble and type out / summarize the relevant points.

tom

↑ Index

128. Tom Orange
hendecasyllabics' metaphorics
Fri 8 Aug 1997

---

on a different note (altho the poem below cd be seen as 1870s avant-garde now tres derriere...)

for those like me in late-summer doldrums wondering where the time flew, perhaps a metaphor or two to tease out:

> In the month of the long decline of roses
> I, beholding the summer dead before me,
> Set my face to the sea and journeyed silent,
> Gazing eagerly where above the sea-mark
> Flame as fierce as the fervid eyes of lions
> Half divided the eyelids of the sunset;...
> [swinburne, "hendecasyllabics"]

now we have flame above the sea-mark: presumably we are already to think sun and/or sunset. said flame's fierceness, fiercety?, likened to fervid lioneyes. now for the kicker: flame half divides eyelids. hold on to that for the moment, let's tend to these eyelids first. eyelids of the sunset: possesive or partitive genitive, the sunset /has/ eyelids or /is/ eyelids? if the sun is the eye (as it has already been associated with fervid lioneyes), then eyelids can be sky and earth, upper and lower limits of vision, extinguishing the sun in the slow blink of its setting, its setting under, its untergehen.

yet flame half divides
eyelids, divides them in half, keeps them open.
even when closed they
are still divided,

by the horizon, or:
half divides as in divides only partly,
not completely, half divided half joined.

even tho i gaze eagerly above
the sea-mark
the flame is so

fierce, as sky
and earth close on the sun, i have to squint,

join my eyelids
together, close them enough so that they are still open.

to the horizon.

↑ Index

129. Layne Russell
Re: "avantgarde"
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Pete, I've wondered about the lack of posting of poems too. I've put up a couple very short ones ... received some feedback backchannel ... but still wonder about it. I would love to see more poetry interspersed with all the commentary and historical crit of lit.

Thanks for raising the question up front on the list.

Your comments on "avantgarde" are great.

> Thanks,
> Layne

↑ Index

130. Layne Russell
Re: for Pete Landers
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Enjoyed your Tricky Dick poem. Thanks for posting this.

Layne

↑ Index

131. Layne Russell
Re: how about poems?
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Pete mused:

> p.s. Sometimes the list sounds more like a bunch of critics than poets.
> How about some poems? Is Alan the only poet?

I'm sure he's not -- why the lack? dunno. I've wondered too, but since I was the new kid in town, thought I would wait and watch a while. I also would love to see more poems in here....

Layne

----------

a soddette's soddet

soddened by the soddest moment of my life
I saddled up to the side of a siddha
and sighed.
he softened his sudden sight
and slid his sodder into my sled.
oh super siddha
I sapped
thank you for slathering my slodden slip into slothdom and
sifting the sod of my sadness,
lifting me silkenly into satori.
no more sodden sags for me.
I'll sing the song of a sari'd soddette,
a saga of the saved.

(c) 1997 llrussell

↑ Index

132. Robert Archambeau
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Interesting to see all the different assumptions we have about what we talk about when we talk about the "avant-garde". I've always been a bit edgy about the term because it has seemed to me to have exactly the kind of "before your time" connotation that, as Chris Alexander pointed out, doesn't really make any sense. The image always seemed to me to be of the advance guard, treading today where the mere herd will tread tomorrow (okay, that's spatial and chronological, but you know what I mean, there's some leftover idea of progress buried in the term).

I've been more comfortable with "alternative poetries" since A) this allows for a multiplicity of alternatives, rather than a united-in-purpose band of commandos, and B) this admits that all that other, "conventional" stuff ain't about to go away

-- the new formalists won't be writing langpo in 2005. Not that this is unproblematic, but it makes me less uneasy that does a-g.

As for who does the police and in what voices, I don't know. But while controversy and infighting don't always help in the world of grass root politics -- you know the scene: the Neo-Trotskyites streetfight with the Refounded Anarcho-Syndicalists while the ghost of Margaret Thatcher seizes power -- they aren't neccessarily bad for poetics. In fact, we can, in playing the cop or the robber, come to understand what it is that we need to do in writing, and where we feel we ought to be going.

--
Robert Archambeau
Department of English
Lake Forest College
Lake Forest, IL 60045
http://www.lfc.edu/~archamb/

See: behind bullet-proof glass, the ruby slippers sparkle.
We do not know the limits of their powers.
We suspect that these limits may not exist.
--Salman Rushdie

↑ Index

133. Daniel Bouchard
for Pete Landers
Fri 8 Aug 1997

A tribute to Tricky Dick, under whose reign I was born.

[redacted]

CRITICAL ONE

Whitman's fury is pent

whereas Whittier whose outcropping love of heroism and war, for all his Quakerdom, his verses at times like the measur'd step of Cromwell's old veterans while a California town from which came a would be capable Cromwell who fitfully fought Commies even where they were not

As I wend toward the winter
    I know not

↑ Index

134. charssmith
Fwd: Clifford Burke talk at The S. F. Center for the Book
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Forwarded message:
From: [redacted] (sfcb)
collecting) collecting)
To: [redacted]
Date: 97-08-08 03:10:24 EDT

CRANIUM PRESS
Friday, August 8, 7 pm
7 PM
FREE TO THE PUBLIC

San Francisco Center for the Book 300 de Haro at 16th
more info: [redacted] or [redacted]

Clifford Burke, author of the classics "Printing It" and" Printing Poetry" will discuss his career. One of the finest, and arguably the most influential, Bay Area printers of the '60s & '70s, Burke ran Cranium Press from a garage in the outer Fillmore. Since the mid'70s he has been living in Washington state & and Southwest. We're thrilled to have him revisit the scene! Get here early for a good seat.

↑ Index

135. The Ultimate Autodidact
Re: "avantgarde"
Fri 8 Aug 1997

That word, avant-garde, was first used by musicians in the 13th c. Some consider Machaut among them, but in fact he is a progenitor.

Don't we all agree that it's a useless word? Some people form groups and some groups are formed to take advantage of readers wanting people to form groups, but we're each alone. Some groups have names, but there is no group named avant-garde, except those 13th c. composers.

I like what Rothenberg or Joris put in the intro to the new huge anthology. A list of characteristics of the poems and poets, with the note that none had all and some had none, or some such. But I recall they do use that word.

A sad thing about groups is: whose names fall off the list? For instance, in the intro to the S&M Rakosi book, Neidecker is not mentioned as an Objectivist.

Why group up at all? I know that I like to read groups. I lump up the bunch Uncle Ezra was hanging with and read them. I know they are working in relation to each other. It seems to make understanding them easier. I do it again with Objectivists, I dismiss the Beats as a group, I lump and read Black Mountain writers, etc. I do the same with music, like the 3rd Viennese School or the Impressionists. I really don't understand why I do it, except that it is convenient.

People who are seen as being in a group tend to rebel against the label. They want to be taken on their own merits. Understandably. I really do take them on their own merits, even if I read them as part of a group, except, of course, when I dismiss the entire group.

In any case, there is no group, or clique, called avant-garde. There is no working definition of the word. It is used more by those who dismiss new writing (new forms?) than by those who write in a new way.

Pete

p.s. Sometimes the list sounds more like a bunch of critics than poets. How about some poems? Is Alan the only poet?

↑ Index

136. The Ultimate Autodidact

Analogue

Fri 8 Aug 1997

---

first appeared in ADZ mag sometime in the mid 80's. See if you can find the dedication which I tuck inside the poem :-)

```
=================================================
=======================
                =ANALOGUE=
      *
I shall never forget the thrill I experienced when I succeeded in condensing Heisenberg's ideas on quantum conditions in the mysterious equation:
     h pq-qp=___
```

2¼i which is the center of wave mechanics and was later found to imply the uncertainty relation.
[Max Born, Physics and Metaphysics, Joule Memorial Lecture, 1950]
*
(c.f. also Kepler, "Omnis locatio mentis est opus.")
.
*
My mother was active in Cursillo (a catholic renewal movement)
my father was lay director;
this little course, post-Vatican II retreat was absolutely evaluated (by me) as pointless, leading to arguments, silences, leading to following tiffs, concessions; pointless?
No. Yes. No. Ligatures: family ties, retied; religion is what they knew; the fell cultures, fallen cultures, the med student's sabotage.
.
Please put what was known with what is known.
Absolutely!
The absolute square
of the amplitude;
there!
Point the point! Point the wave the point the particle the probably the wave the probabilities the particleness guess
Yes!
*
Cursillistas, the little course takers,
the roosters the cluckhens & babechicks, came to the wake. Process-ion the function, the first derivative, velocity, second acceleration, variable, bunched like a snake at corners, brakes lighting in cause & effect.
I knew few.
*
To the ocean,
my prayer;
sing me a mother woe undulating in pulse,

in waves
(middle high german: wabern; to be in motion ((webern; woven (((in motion))).)).).
wave: set of probabilities.
You just corpus and I'll undo you late,
my love; love known.
*
Known? No one knows
but your hardresser, who knows nothing about the Nuremburg Trials.
Did you hear? As Florestan in the 2nd act of Fidelio,
"Nothing lives but me"
And Richard the 2nd,
"For because the world is populous,
"And here is not a creature but myself..."
.
Nothing at all?
Not even the rats?
They've all been painted white and put in laboratory cages, and the cockroaches were all lined up and hitched to toothpick rickshaws
.
Not even the mold.
Cat boxed, cyanide, halflife decay,
a paradox box. The great experiment.
The cat, rat, chimp mere chemical;
pain mere effect; laws prohibit this with people,
but the slave is an animal, a monkey,
the jew is an insect, vermin,
wart, dog, worm, disease,
science can heal (science personified consubstantial with the father.)
Accept no gifts from the gods.
Who said that? Who are they? They, anyway.
*
New and improved.
Rendering everything obsolete, especially judgement;

the bunker is taken, the canon overthrown.
Your arms, your wrists,
have all but lost connective tissue, unwoven, spin decaying, almost leaving orbit,
we rib each other in physical sense that we sense that loving can come back into its faces without conclusion to us belongeth confusion, non-existential matters even as you are not with me in processing to the unposessed whole where they'll bury my mother's matter.
*
Heisenberg & Bohr took a stroll.
The matrician writes,
"Bohr's remark reminded me atoms don't exist."
The prison is a closed universe,
it faces its back infused,
the penalty for life is death; escape,
if you've behaved yourself,
from the Wheel of 84.

.

Those unknown people at mom's wake convinced me of mortality.
And for some reason the bircalls
[for Don Byrd]
(tees-tessi-teesi) in LeSacre (zray-zray-zray-zree) made sense
(teacher, teacher, teacher, teacher).
O Mother! Mother! sings Siegfried (you must drink the blood of the dragon to understand the language of birds) brought to Brunhilde by
"a little bird told me"
which turned out to be his fear;
the undefined, unspecified, unimaginable which he sought to know.

*
1935, Einstein, Podalsky, & Rosen posit the paradox that objective reality exists _a priori_
the principle of uncertainty.
But they couldn't define "reality"
in fact refused,
Physics' limit is the establishment of properties
In effect, "not my job."
A priori! Kant says
    (O come, o come Emanuel!) a priori knowledge is synthetical;
establishing properties is mere analytic Schrodinger warned against application of the ideas in quantum mechanics to the crude macroscopic
.
If you determine the position of Bohr and the momentum of Heisenberg
       they change their course;
You can only guess the stroll as wave:
the uncertainty of principle.
Manhattan, Bikini Atol, Japan, islands: my name is no man...
Dr. Porsche is fascinated.
The Fuhrer recites his parts list,
fact, fact, fact, fact,
but not one spare part was sent into Russia;
the tanks had to be canabalized for the integrity of the family.
An architecture epitomizing
the spirit (?) of the new land in the old;
neo-classic.
The second Vienese school of music banned;
Wozzeck cancelled:
.
*
"Du dein mutter ist tod!"

your mother, your matter, mater, matris.
Must've been something to see,
the slow centuries of hauling goblins to the attic,
werewolves, gargoyles, fatted calves.
Substitutions,
Extensive & Stipulative
Definition:
goblins collect dust while _ubermenschen_ are polished;
for underworld & seventh heaven read Nature, or this,
which should keep 'em talking for centuries:
Einstein says if you go far enough along one straight line you will find yourself facing your back;
an integral with yourself as limits.
.
Rectus Inversus:
    Mayan glyphs a polical statement, they read, "Jobs and food for the underprivileged provided by private sector, pleasure by corporal vanities, revolt by general discontent."
For the integrity of family Jesus has said, I've come to set father against son mother against...
.
*
My sister read mom's favorite psalm (which one?), morning doves cooing outside,
    "Du dein mutter ist tod!"
Bohr's rebuttal to Einstein's paradox:
he has merely explicated
the limits of reason.
Is matrix mechanics a game of darts?
Zeno says,
"Since the dart occupies its own space even in flight,
it cannot be said to move."
.
Bullseye!
.

I say the eye cannot disprove redness in the pre-coital clitoris without first it has affirmed itself.
.
    All's you can do is guess
    the stroll as wave, and the woods become fields where the wave exhibits its properties;
the woods become fields
as the pioneers establish properties, move to a new house, city;
establish the doctrine of nomad quarks:
.
    Motion; to move; experienced by commotion.
    Mobility; the potential to act; against entropy.
.
I come to you naked wonder what you think of my skinny bod, erect prick, engorged with the blood of the dragon.
    Action; the negation of noun breast pink where round is soft memory flesh in the hand the subtle mammary gland fresh and the thisness of instant Aeneas Dido I woo you move over...
    Mater is motion's effect; the conglomeration of sense.
.
*
.
Fact, fact, fact, fact,
The number system is valid when you use circular reasoning:
point the point which contains no other point. Is that the point I'm trying to make (latin: factus)
or am I asking for the anatomy of quarks?
    Quarks consist of infinite clones of Demokritus thinking the matter of mother (or is it the mother of matter?)

The thought is a tailchasing bitch facing its back on a straight line in the closed universe of our mystical rationalist.
.
Oh freedom! When will you return? ask the prisoners in Fidelio;
it's a carpet for questionbeggars.
Mahler, too, took strolls;
jaw set,
hands clasped
behind the back,
glaring,
walking nowhere with determination;
and only finality stills this constant march around centerless, unrelenting visions of laurelled vulvas puking tenants for the ark.
.
*
Mother! Mother! remember me!
Siegfreid sings again.
The last concert of the Berlin Philharmonic's '45 season:
Brunhilde's Immolation.
Encore: The peripatetic prick is covered by Hitler's folded hands.
Encore: The substance of black holes is the teeth of gassed gypsies & jews.
And somedays it seems there is no being with-in or -out but a subject/object dialectic of hardliner principles for wet love.
.
"surge propera amica mea"
Rise up, my love. Affirm yourself.
Are these the magic words Jesus spoke to Lazarus (& Tim Finnegan)
so that Einstein could think a bottle of Kant exploding above the untimely bier of mater... and you still can't bury her.
.

*
Untimely!
The noun is neutered of time, the x axis --
the y is amplitude;
and you can exchange one axis for the other.
.
In an interview, 1936, Einstein admits the logic of Bohr's rebuttal, but says he prefers his own paradox;
less than a decade later, the applied science signature,
and a B-29 bird shat on Japan.
I AM THE BOMB!
(but he was afraid Hitler'd get it first)
I AM THE BOMB!
bring me the face of the man who told you to bring him my face.
(whose last order; Verbrannte Erde, scorched earth ((Erde, earth mother))...
I am the bomb asleep
dreaming confusion of face.
...called for the destruction of Germany).
dreaming the face of Whitman's perfect mother.
.
When they drop the bomb, the bomb,
first your skin peels off.
Then, they say, your eyes fall out;
when they drop the bomb.
.
One hundred and twenty-nine thousand, five hundred and fifty-eight, missing, injured, and dead (Hiroshima).
.
"A wondrous trumpet shall intone through the graves of every zone compelling all before the Throne."
.
I remember how similar it looked,

but it wasn't her.
.

Pete Landers

↑ Index

137. Alan J Sondheim

Re: how about poems?

Fri 8 Aug 1997

First, I'm not the only poet; second, I'm not sure I'm a poet. But the list is called Poetics, of course, and it's by and large poets and critics discussing poetics. The work I send to the list (I don't send all of it by a longshot) is work I feel fits within the category.

Alan

On Fri, 8 Aug 1997, Layne Russell wrote:

> Pete mused:
>
> p.s. Sometimes the list sounds more like a bunch of critics than poets.
> How about some poems? Is Alan the only poet?
>
> I'm sure he's not -- why the lack? dunno. I've wondered too, but since > I was the new kid in town, thought I would wait and watch a while. I > also would love to see more poems in here....
>
> Layne
>
> *----------
>
> a soddette's soddet
>
> soddened by the soddest moment of my life
> I saddled up to the side of a siddha
> and sighed.
> he softened his sudden sight
> and slid his sodder into my sled.
> oh super siddha
> I sapped
> thank you for slathering my slodden slip
> into slothdom and
> sifting the sod of my sadness,
> lifting me silkenly into satori.

> no more sodden sags for me.
> I'll sing the song of a sari'd soddette,
> a saga of the saved.
>
> (c) 1997 llrussell

↑ Index

138. Steve Evans
Impercipient Lecture Series
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Two more installments of the monthly Impercipient Lecture Series (ILS) have appeared since our initial announcement to the List in June.

Aldon L. Nielsen's "No Saints in Three Acts: On Stephen Jonas," should begin appearing in mailboxes today. Nielsen is among the first to give Jonas's work the careful attention it both deserves and, in light of its fractured political commitments, demands. Great archival finds, including a powerful description of the Baraka/Jonas correspondence, combined with Nielsen's signature ability to practice a utopic form of close reading that models the desegregated mind while acknowledging the still-segregated social body, makes this a must read.

Beth Anderson's "Imperturbable Things: On Still-Life Poetics" is a wonderfully original meditation on the deceptive stillness at the heart of the linguistic storm in the work of Wallace Stevens, Barbara Guest, Marjorie Welish, Keith Waldrop, Ann Lauterbach, and others. Despite our canny release of this pamphlet in June, just as the blockbuster shown on Still Life got underway at New York's Museum of Modern Art, a handful (literally) of copies are still available.

We've also recently done a small reprint of our inaugural issue, "The Dynamics of Literary Change" by co-editor Steve Evans. A fair number of our issue on Bob Perelman's _The Marginalization of Poetry_ remain in supply.

The two back-issues that are unfortunately out of print at this time are: 1.2 Radical Dogberry and Society Sketches by Chris Stroffolino 1.3 The Ground is the Only Figure by Rosmarie Waldrop

Finally, to all the List-members who have shown support for the ILS through contributions verbal and financial: Thank You!

Steve Evans & Jennifer Moxley
61 E. Manning Street
Providence RI 02906-4008

↑ Index

139. J. Tate
Re: how about poems?
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Hello all,

Given the recent request for more poems, I thought it would only be fitting to make my first post to the list a poem.

When she is gone, I say with certainty:
the sky has never cupped the sullen clouds that never sighed as stars and moon would crowd into the wild seclusion of her back;
the earth goes round the sun, all cats are black,
dark houses slump their shoulders under snow,
all shutters closed, the only birds are crows.
When she returns, Copernicus is wrong;
the warm loops of her walk move crows to song,
the rooflines straighten, cats dress themselves in white,
sheer curtains breeze on open-windowed nights,
as she lies here, and mumbles dreams to me.

Joseph Tate
Graduate Student
Department of English
University of Washington, Seattle

↑ Index

140. henry g
Re: categorical doggerel
Fri 8 Aug 1997

On Fri, 8 Aug 1997 14:27:33 -0500 <[redacted]> said:
>
>The chroniclers in vain
>Look for signs of remain->Ing names during the Reign
>Of Contested Terrain.
>

This gets to the essence of "avant-garde". It's an adjective that gets loaded for whichever side you're on, or point you're trying to make.

All politics is local, that is, look for the details. Is your artist a subversive or a reformist? A nationalist or internationalist? Or maybe in the middle, considering the alternatives, pointing up the differences? The idea of being politically-responsive artist means very different things to a Wallace Stevens & an Amiri Baraka, but one could argue they both thought about it a great deal. & every poem or work can be considered a mixed thing. Poem - edged by ideology, philosophy, propaganda, undigested imitation, and.... originality, emotion, humor, profundity... & labels & groups are more than just labels - they're decisions about what language seems right for the time & the people it represents... (always overdetermined mixed- motive decisions or undecisions...) i.e. what do you LIKE... - Henry Gould

↑ Index

141. groberts
categorical doggerel
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Late in the battle, the rear-guard cracks up:

What do we get when we combine
A fart and a bomb? The petard.
And when we cross rank and file line
With machine gun? The avant-garde.

In the confusion, someone delivers an epigram from the ghost of Dr. Cunningham:

Hot boys accuse me-- academic.
For their fevers call me medic.

This messenger was promptly killed;
Since this was war, more words were spilled
Until the fray was clearly out of hand:
Many poems lay strewn about no man's land.

The chroniclers in vain
Look for signs of remain-Ing names during the Reign
Of Contested Terrain.

-Gary R

↑ Index

142. Pritchett,Pat
Re: and why not a poem?
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Good idea, Layne & Peter! Since I wrote this "today" (i.e started it last night, put it in present form this morning) I'll post it.

P.S. - someone here noted that the term avant-garde was first applied to 13th century musicians, but it might do well to recall that it originated as a military term and as such could be thought of as applying to both crack troops and cannon fodder with equal justice. In any event - the idea of "Contested Terrain," as Gary points up.

THEORY OF NOSTALGIA

A man is all stealth, listening does him in.

To move by excess is what we mean by living.

A man is a knife and the road
he walks on cuts two ways.

Communication by lamplight is a gesture towards infinity.

The day is a rant,
all fecklessness and high tide.

In MandelbrotÉs "entity of infinite resolution"
the demands for clarity grow unbearable.

A man is an entity with a gesture towards resolution.

To be weary is what the living mean by it:
(the ceded) (the discontained).

Communication in a park with lamps
configures a nostalgia for infinity.

A man is a system of leaves and shadows.
He finds under lamplight the stone alone.

- Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

143. dbkk
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Fri 8 Aug 1997

At 11:11 AM +0000 8/8/97, Robert Archambeau wrote:

>I've been more comfortable with "alternative poetries" since A) this >allows for a multiplicity of alternatives, rather than a >united-in-purpose band of commandos

. . . . . .

> As for who does the police and in what voices . . . they aren't neccessarily bad for poetics. In fact, we can, in playing the cop or the robber, come to understand what it is that we need to do in writing, and where we feel we ought to be going.

Yes, Robert, I agree! As I've stated before, even though it may be unpleasant while one is mired in it, fighting between groups has been healthy for poetry--like you say, it motivates people to clarify their positions. Outsiders rarely understand these vary important distinctions that the participants feel on such a vital level. For instance, I'm thinking of the women of the Spicer/Duncan circle and other non/anti-Beat women who were included in that Women of the Beat Generation Anthology--some of them refused and others were vocally conflicted about being included among the very group they wrote against in their youth. (E.g., "If I hear the word Beat one more time I'm going to scream!") Is stupid attention better than marginalization/no attention?

On another note, I think that the "alternative poetries" of the 90s, rather than policing their borders, are more inclusive than the "alternative poetries" of the 80s--for instance, people (like myself) working in narrative are no longer actively snubbed. To me it feels more like lots of people are drawing from lots of different writings, much less a sense of (a) party line(s).

Dodie

↑ Index

144. Christina Fairbank Chirot

*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde" (fwd)*

Fri 8 Aug 1997

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 7 Aug 1997 08:40:52 -0500 (CDT)
From: Christina Fairbank Chirot <[redacted]>
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
Cc: [redacted]
Subject: Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"

Whether one agrees with them or not two "standard" places to begin are Renato Poggioli The Theory of the Avant-Garde (Cambridge: Belknap/Harvard 1968) and The Theory of the Avant-Garde by Peter Burger (Minneapolis: U Minnesota P, 1984). The former has a lot of interesting historical background, the latter is more theoretical. I have been working for a while for fun on a kind of comic book/visual poetry series "Instant Classic vs. Planned Obsolescence". (inspired in equal parts by Gertrude Stein's "Composition as explanation" essay with the famous outlaw to classic the interval is almost not there equation and Godzilla vs. Mothra, vs. megatron and etc). Perhaps a buried subtext in there re avant garde? Once for fun with a friend we made imitation National Guard posters changing the words to Avant-Garde but keeping the address and phone number of a recruiting office on it. Visting the office a week or so later they said yes they had gotten some strange calls about joining. Re Gertrude Stein/history/avant-garde etc (she read a lot of memoirs and a favorite was that of President/General Ulysses S. Grant)--the first sentence of Stein's Geographical History of America is very interesting. She notes being born in the same month as Washington and Lincoln. That is: two Presidents and Stein are equated: the "father of His Country", the "Great Emancipator" and Gertrude Stein! Also: Washington "could not tell a lie" and Lincoln was "Honest Abe"--so we know Gertrude Stein as well must be giving us the truth--or the "true gen" in Mr. Hemingway's terminology! Gertrude Stein--was she noting the connection between the military and the avant-garde here? Washington and Lincoln had "led their country in times of war" so to speak--(U.S. Grant as well--) And much of "Compostion as Explanation" is about the interrelationships among the changes in art and the changes in life brought about by WWI--that those in art had seen those of the war just ahead of time--Picasso seeing a camouflaged tank with its Cubist looking markings and saying: "We made that". (See this in Autobiography of Alice. B. Toklas--also see Wars I have Known) Then there are the the Threes with Gertrude Stein: Three Lives, the three Geniuses of AABT--Whitehead, Picasso, Stein--and the three leaders--Washington, Lincoln, Stein. There are over two hundred seventy-five book title entries under "avant-garde" in library here. Yet as one knows from the X Files: "the truth is out there" --out there Luigi made good point re this--Mail Art and so on--guerilla and open ended-- ZA DA

dBC

↑ Index

145. Peter Landers

Re: how about poems?

Fri 8 Aug 1997

Alan said,
"First, I'm not the only poet; second, I'm not sure I'm a poet..."

The question was as rhetorical as the answer :-)

Then again "... the list is called Poetics..."

But poetics is not criticism. It's something we live by. I'm certainly not looking for any false split between the critics and poets on the list. We've done that before, and I usually go get a beer, as they say. I was glad to see others post some work. I'd like to see more, and I like the critical discussions (when they don't go flame happy). Just looking for a balance. The list would be more fun with more of a mix, I think. Also, a gazillion things can be spouted into the air, if there is air. Spouting in a vacuum is so dull.

Alan, I'm not sure I'm a poet, either, but I hope you enjoy those words.

Pete

↑ Index

146. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: "avantgarde"
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Maria Damon wrote:
>
> okay all you sweet yukyuks out there, i've got a question: why does "the > avant garde" seem to need to police its borders so rigidly? how does some > thing get defined or not as "avant garde?" i'm spozed to give a talk in > November and i want to challenge what i see as some of the closedness of > the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its > critics.--md

Maria, Thinking of 'avant-garde,' I remember one of Arthur Okamura's illustrations to Creeley's 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-10: tiny humans in an aerial view of the shape a crowd takes when it heads off in a direction:

```
*       *
*       *
*       *
 *     *
  *    *
   *   *
    * *
     **
     **
     *
      *
    ***
    ***
     *
```

like that, sort of: the avant-garde forms the wedge ahead of the skinny 'neck' of undecideds who don't know whether to join the leaders or merge back into the bovine throng. Variations:

```
X         X       X         X       X         X
 X       X         X       X         X       X
  X     X           X     X           X     X
   X   X             X   X             X   X
    X X               X X               X X
    X X               X X               X X
     X                X                 X
     X                X                 X
    XXX               XXX               XXX
    XXX               XXX               XZX
     X                X                 X
     O                Y                 Z
    OOO               YYY               ZXZ
    OOO               YYY               ZZZ
   O   O             Y   Y             Z   Z
  O     O           Y     Y           Z     Z
 O       O         Y       Y         Z       Z
O         O       Y         Y       Z         Z
```

```
            X         X
             X  {YEE} X       [ONE MAN'S MEAT]
              X      X
               X    X
                X  X
                 XX  O
                 XX OOO        [CRITICAL
                XXX OOO         THEORY]
                 X OOOOO
                    O
                   O O
                  O   O
                 O     O
                 O {HAH} O     [ANOTHER MAN'S POISON]
                O         O
```

--Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

147. Steven Marks and why not?
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Patrick Pritchett wrote:

In Mandelbrot's "entity of infinite resolution"
the demands for clarity grow unbearable.

These lines from Patrick's "Theory of Nostalgia" reminded me of two very short poems I had written. Here they are:

CULTURE

Up, ascending, is heaven.
Down, descending,
is hell.
Or, as I look at it, up is
the release of memory.
Down is the furious breeding of further intricacies.

VOLITION

I am as much impelled as compelled.

Steven Marks

http://members.aol.com/swmarks/welcome.html

↑ Index

148. David Bromige
avant ga-ga's
Fri 8 Aug 1997

agreed, the term has historical application but at this moment feels meaningless. "Experimental" sounds like it hasnt actually got started yet. "Alternative" can sound like "alternative to what--poetry!?" I liked "exploratory" until I heard it sounded like surgery, weith more bad news to follow."Marginalized" is too true to put up with. I always liked "Present writing" and perhaps its day has come. To a practicioner it's not a problem until he has to hawk his wares--these categories are barrows in a street-market. David

↑ Index

149. Hugh Steinberg
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Fri 8 Aug 1997

Bob writes:

>my preferred term would be >"otherstream poetry," which I define as any poetry that has never (to >any serious extent) gotten into an anthology of poetry published by a >"reputable" publisher--like Norton--or been seriously discussed in a >book of criticism published by such a publisher...
>
I really like this idea, but I'd argue that it is far more encompassing than as Bob puts forth in his posting. I think there are two otherstreams out there: the first being the type of poetry that isn't widely accepted, and the other being the kind that is widely (I'd argue predominately) accepted, but isn't necessarily approved by the various institutions that support poetry. I'm thinking of the ordinary act of writing poems that most people do for personal reasons. Poems that are written out of a general ignorance of institution based poems (poems written by people who don't read poetry). Most of it is horrible, sentimental, cliched, etc.

But in a discussion of avant-gardes, they're often the real target. That is, what are avant-gardes for? They exist to change the way people think. The more ambitious the avant-garde, the more people they want to affect.

This otherstream poetry has been influenced by some groups much more than others, and sometimes it stands traditional categories right on their head. For example, when an otherstream poem doesn't use rhyme and meter (most do, as a signifier of poem vs. non-poem), I'd argue it comes more from writers like Carl Sandburg, Vachel Lindsay, Edgar Lee Masters, et al, than their much more institutionally respected contemporaries like Ezra Pound or Gertrude Stein. I know I'm sounding a little perverse here, but in the otherstream world "Desiderata" can be seen as one of the most influential poems of the 20th century (as observed by my roommate's girlfriend, who wrote him a poem that is nothing but a list of unrhymed aphorisms).

I'd be interested in discussion about which groups of avante-garde writers have been able to impact the otherstream, as well as how (and why) they were able to do it.

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

150. Alan J Sondheim
apologies as the maudlin makes its entrance
Fri 8 Aug 1997

-

This machine acts alone.
In the cafe, this machine runs, draining the blood from me.
Keys exhale with every touch, every character has received the caress of delicate fingers.
I am magnetic domain, I am Net domain.
I want to sink in magnet hysteresis, want to slide in Net hysteria.
Without your body I am lost. Machine loops the machine. Julu is crying.
This machine tilts the great empty city. Jennifer is here, split among us.
Jennifer says to Jennifer, Julu is absent, Alan is hysteric.
Jennifer trembles.
Great wheels gyre above the cafe, spokes cutting lines like knives.
Great wheels in the sky.
Jennifer trembles for Jennifer. What if Alan ...
The machine acts alone.

↑ Index

151. henry g
avant any garde
Fri 8 Aug 1997

---

here's a short avant anygarde poieoym I wrote many yrs ago:

My countrymen dreaming and drinking down
the livelong day in your smooth Cadillacs Americans made of nostalgia, playing the clown on roads past the high school railroad tracks go on, play the radio, shoot for the moon your little boy up from grasslands not for hire is building a tricycle in the backyard, and soon he'll step inside a brand new chariot of fire

- Henry Gould

↑ Index

152. Rachel Levitsky
Re: avant ga-ga's
Sat 9 Aug 1997

David Bromige wrote:
>
> agreed, the term has historical application but at this moment > feels meaningless. "Experimental" sounds like it hasnt actually got started > yet. "Alternative" can sound like "alternative to what--poetry!?" I liked > "exploratory" until I heard it sounded like surgery, weith more bad news to > follow."Marginalized" is too true to put up with. I always liked "Present > writing" and perhaps its day has come. To a practicioner it's not a problem > until he has to hawk his wares--these categories are barrows in a > street-market. David

Dear David,

At Naropa this summer there was a "prose poem" week. In the dx, Cole Swenson spoke of writing in the margin, margin between rather than on the edge of. Carla Harryman spoke/speaks of 'Hybridity' and Don Guravich blurts out 'it's all just writing' and many get on the bandwagon 'no difference' which is as problemmatic as those who say about race 'what's the problem, we're all human.' One problem with it that when distinction is not recognized the dominant obliterates the marginal, the dominant will always assert itself. So we're left in the quagmire of naming ourselves when we no that what is ourselves is too complex to be uniformly named. I run into this problem calling myself 'Lesbian' when I what I mean by that changes all the time but its more meaningful than saying 'not straight'

How about 'making strange'?

--Rachel

↑ Index

153. Rachel Levitsky
Re: how about poems?--For Alan
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Sounding Board

for Alan Sondheim

Besides dreaming the woman in question in her room as she described it plus the convenient addition a plugged in vibrator on her bed laid there as mine is laid here where I lounge reading text that waivers in and out of a sexual momentum or coherence. It is a good life though not necessary. Now one hand smells and one does not. They have been placed strategically to peruse the meaning of the various holes. No matter how many you start out with, the body lays flat in its possible juices. The ones we eat are not necessarily the ones we asked for--there is no way to know.

It is too wet to get to the museum but not to wet to go to the museum. Let it affect your consciousness, act nasty or get behind something you care nothing about. Later, you'll laugh about it on that uncomfortable futon the best you can afford. The problem with the bad half&half was that it made the coffee bad. The same can be said for sex. Certain combinations are disaster for the consumer. Every member of the Happy Clubhouse would tell you this, but so far few have asked and no one who'd do anything about it.

Helping them to help themselves

Like I said, this began with a confusion between money and memory. Indeed, if you could hand me either, I can assure you it will be emptied though righteousness is tenuous. False memory, The Gap, I can't help stealing from big things when they are costly. Bargain basements hook me every time. How long did you let it sit out? How long must it be left out? And if there is unrelenting rain, the possibilities. In a flash flood you will lose things.

Most victims didn't buy flood insurance
No me quitas pas

Or as you were saying about the snow. The amount of weight the branch permits the leaves to bear before it breaks. There is much you can figure out so take upon yourself to prevent certain events there labeled disaster. Logically, what will happen to the previous losses as they shift position to the back of the general's head. As had happened through the epidemic. We no longer considered them. In the name of, floods, borders, balanced books.

I don't want to argue about it.

Things are again shifted and look, what we call your responsibility. The impossibility of growth and/or separate interests. The Israelis are serious but have redesigned the protocol. His shirt burned off by the latest blast, he sits and waits, looking plainly bitter. Notice the watch, the numbers tattooed. Victimhood looks again, a face that aims not for glamour yet is. More so? Ruptured protocol reemerges as successful, as color, from black and white.

There's a Movement Underground

Photojournalism = journalism made history. Made hippies. Some mornings I think I'm a happy person. Some words get printed. She's a journalist who also writes novels. I can't get past the game of it. I ride in your back seat[thinking][meditating][labeling][identifying][looking][like] I'm staring out your window, innocent, inocencia. Glamour. Love or lose? Drunk with it he finally got silent, then again, he was always silent.

----------notes:

“Most Victims”--From an AP heading, May 13, 1997
“No Me Quitas--Nina Simone
“I don’t”--Me with the grocery clerk
“There’s a Movement”-- Prescriptions makeup adline, from Fall 94, blitzkrieged onto the New York subway ad space, seen by me upon returning from a year in Mexico, after having left New York in 1993 upon the dissolution of AIDS and Queer Activism.

↑ Index

154. John Tranter
Jacket magazine
Sat 9 Aug 1997

"Full Maternity Jacket" - an annunciation from John Tranter

I'm happy to announce that Jacket magazine - free, fast-loading, international, full of stylish writing - finally has its own proper and permanent site on the Internet, at http://www.jacket.zip.com.au

The first issue contains interviews with English poet Roy Fisher and Australian aboriginal poet Lionel Fogarty, a look at the 1943 hoax poet Ern Malley (an old favorite of John Ashbery's and mine, too), work by Charles Bernstein, Elaine Equi, Pamela Brown, Alfred Corn, Joanne Burns, Tracy Ryan, Carl Rakosi, Peter Minter, Susan Schultz and Paul Hoover, reviews of John Berger and Les Murray, the poetry of the late Martin Johnston, and a glimpse of the Xmas 1997 John Ashbery "special issue", together with photos and art work.

Jacket # 1 will be added to until the end of September 1997, when the first issue will be finalised.

Jacket issue # 2 will focus mainly on the work of John Ashbery, who turns 70 this year, but there will be lots of other material as well. It will be uploaded piece by piece from early September 1997, and finalised by Xmas 1997.

Please note that Jacket editor John Tranter's e-mail address is now

[redacted]

Please tell your friends about Jacket, whose motto is

"bop till you drop!"

--
John Tranter >>> [redacted] <<<
39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Australia
ph ([redacted] fax ([redacted]

↑ Index

155. Bob Grumman

The Otherstream

Sat 9 Aug 1997

Phooey, what a way to have to start the morning: I have to call for the execution of Hugh Steinberg. His offense? EGREGIOUS MISUSE OF MY TERM, "OTHERSTREAM."

Actually, I set him up by incompletely defining otherstream poetry as "any poetry that has never (to any serious extent) gotten into an anthology of poetry published by a 'reputable' publisher--like Norton--or been seriously discussed in a book of criticism published by such a publisher..." So I hereby redefine it as "any TECHNICALLY DISTINCT VARIETY OF poetry that has never, etc., etc." Visual poetry is always my primary example, though Marjorie Perloff's course in it, and what Harry Polkinhorn has been doing at San Diego State, and other developments may be changing that.

I agree with Hugh that there are two (or more) streams of work that are not widely accepted, but consider only one of them otherstream. The second "otherstream" he speaks of--"poems that are written out of a general ignorance of institution based poems (poems written by people who don't read poetry)"--is, for me, knownstream because it's not doing anything technically new. It's wannabe mainstream, or unsuccessful mainstream, or left-behind mainstream, or overlooked mainstream (as I believe Robert Frost was when Pound "discovered" him).

I just thought of a name for it: sundaystream poetry, or the poetry of weekend poets--though it would also, unfairly, include the poetry of people working seriously and full-time in mainstream poetry who simply haven't done whatever is required besides writing good poetry to be accepted by the establishment. I did sundaystream poetry for a long time myself so have nothing against it--and, with Hugh, am most interested in how it is being affected by other poetries. But puleeze don't call it "otherstream."

--Bob G.

↑ Index

156. robert drake
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Sat 9 Aug 1997

maria--

glad for yr thoughts. of the examples you give, several seem to be about papers or publishing, which dont seem (to me) to have anything to do with your original query ("why does 'the avant garde' seem to need to police its borders so rigidly?") which i read to mean policing it's _own_ borders... and even w/ the example of th poetics list, its not clear to me that the list in general (or any subset in particular) constitutes an a.g.; nor is it clear that having a (nubuliously definded) topic of "newer poetries" is th same as "policing the borders". (praps you're refering to the recent arrest trial and sentancing ov Kim Dawn?) but, if yr refering to a general sense (which i share) that discussion ov nichol is more likely to generate interest than discussion ov angelou-- i'm not sure that conjures the same vision of billyclubing men in blue...

certainly, there are examples... Fluxus had it's endless lists of "members", frinstance (tho i mself am not entirely convinced that those lists werent something of a performance piece by maciunas...). but, i think any closedness is probably specific to the particular case; i dont think there's a general answer...

but now, as i go back to th original query--"the closedness of the avant garde tradition or at least the way it's construed by most of its critics" (emphasis added)... ah. arent those two different questions? and, tho again i'd wanna address particulars, it makes sense to me that "the critics" might feel a little left out, or left behind, by some a.g. tendencies? which is not the same as an a.g. is policing its borders... and i suppose that by saying that i reveal my own perception that (present company excluded) most critics tend towards th normative & established...

yrs,
etc.

> thank you all, david k, bill m, david i, charles a, etc. i share many of your beliefs, such as, that vanguardism (my preferred term) is a process rather than a coterie or school. however, in my professional life, i've encountered enough instances where the boundaries are tightly defined to lead me to believe there is some anxiety about borders. for instance, i was recently asked for permission to reprint my bob kaufman essay in an anthology of essays on "the avant garde." i said okay, but in my opinion my essay on poetry by some teenage girls in a boston housing project was much more interesting, more adventurous, less man-and-his-work formulaic. the answer was: well i do "cultural studies" myself, but in this project i'm working with a fairly traditional understanding of the "avant garde," so i'll stick w/ the kaufman piece. for another instance, when i proposed

> a paper for the conference i mentioned, on "the poetics of avant garde poetry," there was some hesitatiion over acceptiing my paper because its definition of "avant garde" was too broad (won't it render the term meaningless to broaden it? was the question.) again, i was advised by colleagues on the organizing side of things to stress that i was working with a "cultural studies model," i guess to provide reassurance that there was some recognized method to my intentions. also, my introduction to this list and partcipation, while in some ways broadening (in that i've learned about poets i didn't know about before) has also been a narrowing, as the list is quite explicitly intended for discussion of newer poetries (i can't recall exactly the wording of the bernstein welcome). i don't mean to wax victimy or snide in these personal anecdotes, i hope you all realize how much i enjoy learning all this new stuff and getting to know y'all. these moments of feeling the barriers come up have been interesting because they foreground categorical, operative divisions that are sometimes disavowed at the more overt level.
> another line that gets drawn is that of aesthetic judgment, and the assumption that we all share certain judgments (hallmark card verse is embarrassingly bad, so is maya angelou's poetry; bpNichol is fabulous, etc --don't get me wrong, i love bpNichol and i don't buy hallmark cards but i do find angelou's poetry meaningful, esp when i see how deeply it touches my students). as i've said here before, aesthetic judgment has been the dividing line between me and some of the people i've worked with. in fact i tend to trust them cuz i don't trust myself, so i usually concede at the level of editorial revision, but at the metalevel i'm asking, why is it SO overridingly important that there be some kind of consensus of aesthetic judgment? or, why is this consensus the basis of our community or commonality?--md

↑ Index

157. dbkk

Anne-Marie Albiach tribute in San Francisco

Sat 9 Aug 1997

This is Kevin Killian. Today's the 60th birthday of the French poet Anne-Marie Albiach and last night here in San Francisco was the Albiach tribute organized by Dodie Bellamy and Small Press Traffic. I was there, in the theater space at New College, and I know you're all curious, how did it turn out?

Successfully I think. OK there were a few glitches here and there. Kush the marvelous videographer failed to show up, and earlier in the week Small Press Traffic's office was rifled and the microphone stolen. However a tape recorder was available and thus Dodie can prove the event really did take place, documentation being "everything." Norma Cole began the evening by sketching out some of the salient turns in Albiach's career and showed us a double portrait. One photo was of the young Albiach in 1969, a glamor portrait a la George Hurrell on the occasion of the publication of "Etat." We were all struck by how much she (AMA) resembled the young Katherine Ross in Curtis Harrington's "Games." Then another kind of portrait, Jean Daive's imaginative portrait of AMA done solely through her punctuation. Cole then read from Albiach's "Gradiva," and read part of AMA's translation of Louis Zukoksky's "A"-9. Barbara Guest rose and read what sounded like a new poem, a "Reverie" for AMA. Benjamin Hollander combined parts of two previous essays to create an atmosphere, a theatrical atmosphere which effectively illustrated what he called the "nocturnal" aspect of Albiach's writing (and its effect on the reader). Michael Palmer read an essay reminiscing on visiting (or trying to pay a visit to) AMA in Paris, she wasn't home, so, he said, the absence of the non-encounter lived up to the highest expectations of both parties, and then he read "Five Easy Poems," dedicated to AMA. Mary Margaret Sloan spoke briefly on the influence AMA has had over the years on the work of North American woman poets, and read from AMA's book "Mezza Voce." Cole Swensen read from "'Vocative Figure.'" Then everyone turned to the cake, the "gateau," and tore that sucker to shreds (or crumbs, I suppose). There was much mingling, wine, and etc., if only Steve Carll were still on this list he could tell you all the names of the poets and artists who attended.

I thought it would be a case of preaching to the converted but there were many there who had apparently never heard of Albiach, and all the copies of "Mezza Voce" were quickly sold out, attesting to the event's success as, well, a kind of promotion for the glamorous, reclusive diva of Neuilly-sur-Seine. However not all were so easily persuaded and one famous poet afterwards was overheard murmuring that she still disliked Albiach's writing and what was all the fuss about anyhow. This made me think of Rachel Levitsky's post about when "the dominant obliterates the marginal, the dominant will always assert itself"though I can't piece out how it applies exactly.

Anyhow, thanks to all who worked on this event behind the scenes, in front of the podium, in the audience, and thanks to all the US and Canadian poets who signed the series of tacky Hallmark cards for AMA's birthday, which were delivered to her ahead of time and which stunned and surprised her and made her weep with this kind of absent French pleasure.

↑ Index

158. Jacques Debrot

Re: "*alternative*avant-garde" (fwd)

Sat 9 Aug 1997

Despite its problematic status, I think it's a mistake to give up -- or to concede -- the metaphor, "avant-garde." In addition to the texts that have already been mentioned over the last several days during the course of this discussion, let me add 3 more -- the first 2, Hal Foster's "What's Neo about the Neo-Avant-Garde?" and Benjamin Buchloh's "Theorizing the Avant-Garde" -- go a long way in rebutting the failures Peter Burger attributes to the post WW2 avant-gardes. The 3rd, Andrew Benjamin's Art, Mimesis and the Avant-Garde, is an extremely interesting attempt at describing the avant-garde in terms of what he calls the limit experiences of the as-yet-to-be-determined. Tradition, by contrast, is seen by Benjamin as a repetition of a determination made in advance -- a legislative/regulative function which posits a singular and recoverable inner meaning for works of art. Of course, Benjamin realizes that, while there is a dominant tradition, tradition itself is not a univocal term since there are also differing and marginal traditions. The point is that the traditional intends to be univocal. However Benjamin does not define the avant-garde merely in terms of its resistance to tradition. This would only retain the dominant dichotomy. But in an argument that is much too subtle to recapitulate here, Benjamin conceives of the avant-garde art object as affirming an "interpretive differential plurality." In other words the avant-garde work of art, like the avant-garde itself, is seen as being in a continual and inexhaustible state of becoming. Benjamin writes: "it is the capacity for an experience of the as-yet-to-be-determined to generate reflection. Reflection, in this instance, will emerge at the limit of understanding -- in other words at that point where the percept, object of experience, etc., is such that it cannot be automatically assimilated to, and hence only explicable within, the terms decreed by" tradition. If none of this seems convincing the fault is due to my simplistic summary -- but, in any case, Benjamin's work seems to me to persuasively refute the idea that the avant-garde has a "policing function."

↑ Index

159. James Finnegan
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Though the term "avant-garde" can be misapplied, I still find it of use. I think it's wrong to apply it to any movement that's not broken with the mainstream and moved poetry forward/outward in some important way. Language poetry is/was avant-garde. ("Was avant-garde," if you believe it's run its course and is now subsumed in the mainstream, has aged to the point of being old hat, or was a literary dead-end--the equivalent of the Neanderthal line in ape-human evolution.)

"Avant-garde" should not be applied to movements like Slam Poetry or the New Formalism. The latter is a retrograde poetry, though a little freer and less delimited relative to subject matter than traditional verse had been.

The former, Slam, takes several known poetries--(1)
the socio-political rant and reportage (a Beat mainstay);
(2) the much older and ever-present sentimental poetry of love, loss and tragedy; (3) the hyper-confessional and edgy-comic strains of late eighties and nineties--and to these Slam adds the dynamics of performance and competition.
An innovation, yes, but not really something I would consider avant-garde.

To me "avant-garde" is certainly as useful a term as the others proposed--i.e., alternative and otherstream. Neither of which strikes me as getting to what "avant-garde" is when applied to writing. "Postmodernist", a broader, more encompassing term, is certainly even harder to pin down. New Formalism could be the literary equivalent of Philip Johnson's Chippendale top to his ATT Building, therefore NF could be a postmodernist movement. And "alternative" was the New Wave, before Alternative became Modern Rock. (The music media have their own troubles with "labels"--Is there a Postmodernist Rock yet?) "Otherstream" is a nice coinage, but could as easily apply to Slam as to Language writing, thus for me it's less useful.

"Experimental" is the term most often misused. Most experiments are failures--steeped in the trial & error method. Most writers worth their salt aren't publishing their "experiments." Rather they are experimenting toward a new way of the writing, personally or in the world. Once the work is published, the writer is, in general, confident the experiment has resulted in a finished text that is achieving, at least partially or in a way he/she could only dimly imagine, the intended outcome of his/her initial experiments. The publishing one's "experimental writing" is tantamount to publishing early drafts and half-baked, alchemic concoctions of varying and lesser consequence.

Finnegan

↑ Index

160. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Sat 9 Aug 1997

---

maria, hi!... thanx for your questions, time for me to delurk anyway!... to employ some rather crude distinctions that i nonetheless find theoretically useful: i like to think through the questions you pose, re the avant-garde and aesthetics, in two basic ways...

first, in terms of my own process as a writer: sometimes---usually (to date)---i imagine mself working/writing to construct a readership... that is, the sorts of transformations i seek/anticipate/aspire for---in my readers---i take to be primarily or largely a function of how they approach reading my writing... the way they approach, that is, the alphabet as such---the symbol-sharing experience that swapping same comprises (yes, there is a utopian drift here)... and in many instances, i just don't think the "they" exists as such!... it's not a claim i can prove, but it's useful for me to imagine mself as contributing to an experience---over where you are---that disrupts at times intelligibility, say...

i have of course worked in forms that seem to me to downplay this aspect of the experience---that is, in which the so-called matter of "form" itself is taken for granted, and in which "style" (please note quotes) replaces same as a distinguishing characteristic... such, in my view, is one way of beginning to think the discourse of scholars and scholarship in general over and against the discourse of poets and poetry... though part of my aim, as i understand my own work, has been to complicate this distinction; when it comes to prose forms, such as the novel, the distinction may be even fuzzier... yet i would say this distinction holds, even allowing for the fact that there are poets and scholars who seek to complicate the reading experience as such, and scholars and poets who seem to rely on an already-understood experience (which is how i understand the mainstream---again, not in terms of good or bad necessarily, but in terms of popularity/demographix)...

the point here, in any case, is that work that challenges or speaks to the reading experience (in terms, say, of the age-old form vs. content dualism) is, in more popular AND often in academic terms, generally considered (and critiqued/evaluated/dismissed/worshipped as) avant-garde or experimental or radical or etc... ez to prove this, too---just TRY to get a trade press (or an academic press) to pick up formally innovative work (and wrt to this latter, pick your poison)... it ain't ez...

second, and here i think i'll be really idiosyncratic in my choice of texts, is to think more in cultural studies terms, in terms of reception as (as you suggest) a cultural-social process: i'm reminded of that afterword to pirsig's _zen and the art of motorcycle maintenance_, in which he distinguishes twixt customary and what he calls "culture bearing books":

"a culture bearing book, like a mule, bears the culture on its back. no one should sit down to write one deliberately. culture-bearing books occur almost accidentally, like a sudden change in the stock market. there are books of high quality that are an important part of the culture, but that is not the same. they are a part of it. they aren't carrying it anywhere. they may talk about insanity sympathetically, for example, because that's the standard cultural attitude. but they don't carry any suggestion that insanity might be something other than sickness or degeneracy."

i'm not wedded to pirsig's words, now---but if we allow that even "culture bearing books" are a part of culture, and that there are in fact multiple cultures, i think there's something in what pirsig is saying here that might speak helpfully to the notion of contingency and history (he names _uncle tom's cabin_ as a culture bearing book, but also says "it was no literary masterpiece"---which latter is of course open to debate)... provided of course we supplement same with the business aspects of the writing marketplace etc...

so perhaps the matter of what is deemed avant-garde (term used advisedly) turns at least in part on circumstances that are, properly speaking, beyond anyone's control... ergo, the ex post facto nature of that discourse: "this event turned out to be a seminal blah blah blah" (oh and i find this latter useful too at times, but less when i'm in the process of writing than when revising)... we may aspire to same, i mean, in our very process as writers, we may lay claim to same (as i have at times) in our products, but might this not comprise a requisite reach beyond one's grasp?... i.e., a failure?... even failure can produce some helpful effects, moods...

as far as hanging out with those what think like we do: that's only human, but past a certain point, it sure can prove limiting...

best,

joe

↑ Index

161. Alan J Sondheim

You, Celine, Die On

Sat 9 Aug 1997

(I hear a voice ... now she's done it ... now there's no going back ...)

You

I met you in Jerusalem, I met you in Brooklyn ... said that to throw them off the track ... it was near the Mea Shearim, you were being stoned ... zealots, eh ... seven thousand miles away, your hair in my mouth ... I swallow everything you have to offer, I'm not picky ... you give me ad- jectives, expletives ... I give you gerunds ... they sway like that ... turn me inside out ... forgot that these dots were stolen ... the walls were baked hot, there was an omen, white fox darting in front of me ... twenty years later, sure enough, that one in Cape Breton ... your hair had silver streaks ... blond streaks ... all that opium I took, you took me to the hospital, they made me get up off the floor, leave, lunch hour, there was nothing to be done about it ... taxi-cab out of the city ... twenty miles away you could smell the atoms ... I've photographed the sheets, hung them from the window, I've tied myself in knots ... you could see the building going up in the distance, I thought, why is he pointing a knife at me, they destroyed the restaurant ... crawled out of the past ... I'm uninhibited, eh ... what wouldn't I think of doing ... I need to have your floor under me ... I want to write over and over again, collapse me ... Jennifer is on my right side, Julu on my left ... they're waiting ... Jenn goes to the door, looks out ... street's clear ... there's a gunner on the roof but he's got his weapon down for a change, anyway it's for show, beret and all .. landmines everywhere, barbed wire ... Julu flies, I forgot to tell you that ... moved ahead of the rest of us ... fierce, eh, she knows what's going on ... they've made a landing-strip of my chest ... I can hear the planes, they're overhead all the time now ... the gunners are closer to the ground, they don't dare look up ... rat-a-tat-tat, it would be over, that would be the end of it ... can't have that, eh? Julu's got moving now, she's really churning air ... that whore in Soho wouldn't have me, I didn't know what I was doing, I lost sixty dollars, there were more and more men the farther I went inside, they were watching me ... lucky to get out with my life ... couldn't get it up anyway, I was trembling, disappearing down the streets, pathetic ... had to be rescued from the sidewalk like that, taken in ... she told me I couldn't love her, she was brown ... pulled a knife on me just like that ... taught school in Washington DC ... later saw her with a group of people, laughing, had to get out of there ... Denise wanted to tie me up naked, upside-down, don't know the pleasure in that ... we picked up the stuff in Pennsylvania, drove back through a cheating night, I couldn't pretend ... she got the tape recorders, cords, signed Ginsberg, wanted to borrow everything, that was the last I saw of them, she made up for the bad times in her own way ... I wasn't ready for this, just a lunch date, really, suddenly currents change, I'm done with, inside out, upside-down ... later there's an obelisk or prism, it's six-sided, limestone, about three meters tall, one across. I can't make heads or tails of it ... it's turning, some sort of vision ... I think of you again ... "disturbing dream ... Lisa Dilillo and I were talking upstairs in her loft ... it was really Marcia Resnick's, I recognized it ... Laurie Anderson lived upstairs, I was always moving ... but it was dark, dangerous night, I was waiting for you, we were going out, you'd ring my bell four stories down ... upstairs on the corner of Canal and the river ... Lisa Dilillo and I in some heavy talk ... I said I had to go, you were coming, I wanted to be there for you ... started down the stairs, there were no lights ... just someone standing on one of the landings ... I hoped it was you ... I felt a knife ... woke to write this, steal Celine's dots ... his "three little dots ... screw him, he was trouble ... in highschool someone pulled a knife on me, I grabbed the blade ... I was filming in Los Angeles, the Sunset Strip, a whore came at me ... in Nazareth, an Arab flashed a knife, big problems there, went off to kill his nephew, avenge us ... it's a long story, had to do with that restaurant, our friend got beat up, dropped in a Wadi ... I can't pray any more, eh, I've seen too much, my eyes have volumes in them, there's no end to it ... Tamara B. and I screwed, I was still married, went off to Tassie, wrote her, she told me to go to hell, wrote it all over my letter, it was the final straw ... don't go there sober, eh? ... I'd given up, I was desperate, turned her down in Irvine, she told me she "had her eyes on me for a long time ... that was before the anonymous phone calls ... the destruction of my work ... the letters ... everything in the world heads towards purity ... that's all there is, a chance to begin again, start over, head out, fly away, set the sails ... you don't get this often, it's random, one day you're having lunch with someone for the first time, the next day you're thinking, this is all there is! ... this is all I want! ... Wait! Wait for me! ... carpe diem and all that, the Fugs sang it, they were on my label ... she's never heard my music ... I've gotten through all of this, what's next, I've got to do the book too ... a couple of them ... maybe more ... I'll start again if she'll have me ... I'll give her me on a platter ... on a board ... clothed or unclothed, whatever she wants ... this isn't a great prize, mind you, a little tarnished, but some good points ... thinks well maybe, for example ... moves fast ... bit too intense ... she can take me, do what she will, someone's put the knife away ... Jennifer and Julu are sleeping, it's late even for them ... smoke and clouds ... incredible dawns ... I'll wait and see ... what happens to the night

---

↑ Index

162. Steve Evans
Impercipient Lecture Series
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Two more installments of the monthly Impercipient Lecture Series (ILS) have appeared since our initial announcement to the List in June.

Aldon L. Nielsen's "No Saints in Three Acts: On Stephen Jonas" should begin appearing in mailboxes today. Nielsen is among the first to give Jonas's work the careful attention it both deserves and, in light of its fractured political commitments, demands. Great archival finds, including a powerful description of the Baraka/Jonas correspondence, combined with Nielsen's signature ability to practice a utopic form of close reading that models the desegregated mind while acknowledging the still-segregated social body, makes this a must read.

Beth Anderson's "Imperturbable Things: On Still-Life Poetics" is a wonderfully original meditation on the deceptive stillness at the heart of the linguistic storm in the work of Wallace Stevens, Barbara Guest, Marjorie Welish, Keith Waldrop, Ann Lauterbach, and others. Despite our canny release of this pamphlet in June, just as the blockbuster shown on Still Life got underway at New York's Museum of Modern Art, a handful (literally) of copies are still available.

We've also recently done a small reprint of our inaugural issue, "The Dynamics of Literary Change" by co-editor Steve Evans. A fair number of our issue on Bob Perelman's _The Marginalization of Poetry_ remain in supply.

The two back-issues that are unfortunately out of print at this time are: 1.2 Radical Dogberry and Society Sketches by Chris Stroffolino 1.3 The Ground is the Only Figure by Rosmarie Waldrop

Finally, to all the List-members who have shown support for the ILS through contributions verbal and financial: Thank You!

Steve Evans & Jennifer Moxley
61 E. Manning Street
Providence RI 02906-4008

r i a t n m u a t s u o o o s

↑ Index

163. aerialedge
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Sat 9 Aug 1997

The avant-garde border police are a boring phenomenon. nevertheless they are not as boring, or harmful, as most of the phenomena they attempt to police. we fool ourselves = a thought is (not) an action. get out your mla handbooks o boy. given negation as a primary tactic of such arts it is no surprise that a negation of the avant-garde is in the stirrups. nevertheless an explicit passion remains possible. go give a damn. If you can.

--Rod

↑ Index

164. charles alexander to be or not to be (loyal)
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Dear Poetics:

I've just been hired to teach at the University of Arizona Extended University -- a course on small presses, and later this year, a creative writing class.

Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other states as well. Are you a Minnesota loyalist, Maria? or anyone else anywhere else? Some answer soon would be great, so I can weigh my options before I sign or don't sign. (and yes, I know, I should probably talk with a lawyer about this)

For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of oath of affirmation set forth in this section."

And that oath reads:

I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of _____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God (or, so I do affirm).

_____
(Signature of employee)

thanks,

charles

↑ Index

165. mark weiss
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Charles, you dirty commie, to the best of my knowledge you gotta sign--when confronted with same in NY, Connecticut and Arizona (I don't remember if I had to sign one for UCSD) I checked it out. I think that all public colleges require it--may be that their federal money is tied to compliance. But take heart--you can always be a spy.

At 05:39 PM 8/9/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Dear Poetics:
>
>I've just been hired to teach at the University of Arizona Extended >University -- a course on small presses, and later this year, a creative >writing class.
>
>Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty >oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought

>maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign >such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, >or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign >such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any >were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other >states as well. Are you a Minnesota loyalist, Maria? or anyone else >anywhere else? Some answer soon would be great, so I can weigh my options >before I sign or don't sign. (and yes, I know, I should probably talk with >a lawyer about this)
>
>For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and >until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of >oath of affirmation set forth in this section."
>
>And that oath reads:
>
>I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will >support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws >of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the >same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I >will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of
>_____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God >(or, so I do affirm).
>
>
>
>_____
>(Signature of employee)
>
>
>
>thanks,
>
>charles
>
>

↑ Index

166. William Slaughter

Re: to be or not to be (loyal)

Sat 9 Aug 1997

Charles Alexander,

Re the loyalty oath you've been asked, in Arizona, to sign: I thought it was "a thing of the past" too.

From the ACLU's web-site: "a chronology, from 1920 to the present, of the most important United States Supreme Court victories that involved the ACLU, either as direct counsel or as a friend-of-the-court."

To wit:

1967 Keyishian v. Board of Regents

"A Cold War-inspired law, requiring New York public school teachers to sign a loyalty oath, fell as a violation of the First Amendment. The decision, capping off a series of unsuccessful challenges to both federal and state loyalty and security programs, rejected the doctrine that public employment is a "privilege" to which government can attach whatever conditions it pleased."

I'll be curious to read what tales others on the list have to tell. Here's William Stafford, a man whose heart was "glad and big," on the subject:

The Star in the Hills

A star hit in the hills behind our house up where the grass turns brown touching the sky.

Meteors have hit the world before, but this was near,
and since TV; few saw, but many felt the shock.
The state of California owns that land (and out from shore three miles), and any stars that come will be roped off and viewed on week days 8 to 5.

A guard who took the oath of layalty and denied any police record told me this:
"If you don't have a police record yet you could take the oath and get a job if California should be hit by another star."

"I'd promise to be loyal to California and to guard any stars that hit it," I said,
"or any place three miles out from shore, unless the star was bigger than the state-- in which case I'd be loyal to _it_."

But he said no exceptions were allowed, and he leaned against the state-owned meteor so calm and puffed a cork-tip cigarette that I looked down and traced with my foot in the dust and thought again and said, "OK--any star."

from TRAVELING THROUGH THE DARK (New York: Harper & Row, 1962)

Bill

William Slaughter

[redacted]

> Dear Poetics:
>
> I've just been hired to teach at the University of Arizona Extended University -- a course on small presses, and later this year, a creative writing class.
>
> Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other states as well. Are you a Minnesota loyalist, Maria? or anyone else anywhere else? Some answer soon would be great, so I can weigh my options before I sign or don't sign. (and yes, I know, I should probably talk with a lawyer about this)
>
> For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of oath of affirmation set forth in this section."
>
> And that oath reads:
>
> I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of _____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God (or, so I do affirm).
>
> _____
>
> (Signature of employee)

> thanks,
>
> charles

↑ Index

167. Hank Lazer
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Charles--

No such requirement at U of Alabama. (Please, don't tell our Governor about the loyalty oath. He's the guy who wants to mobilize state troops to defend a judge's right to have Christian prayer & a display of the 10 Commandments in the courtroom....) Years ago, George Starbuck, then a young untenured asst prof, risked income & job & successfully fought the loyalty oath (I believe at SUNY- Buffalo). Your Arizona oath sounds rather nebulous--as if you're being asked to swear that you'll follow the laws of the country and the state. Is it really a case of no sign, no pay? Ugh.

Hank Lazer

↑ Index

168. Alan J Sondheim
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Sat 9 Aug 1997

I've always thought, literally, that the avant-garde was a jail, a form of reification ignoring the milieu. That it's useless as a term, since it almost automatically assumes a while, most often male, etc. etc., striated culture in the first place, the _avant_ necessitating a reification of the rest. What happens is a certain exclusionary violence imho. It's a critic- al move, no matter who applies the term.

Better to inscribe exfoliations of practices, sites of writings, sprays of signifiers, instead of particulated emplacements - and at the same time to acknowledge it was a highly problematic but common term, whose time has past.

Alan

↑ Index

169. Hugh Steinberg
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Charles:

I adjuncted at Arizona from '93-95. I recall having to sign the oath, although as far as I know it's just a meaningless piece of paper and treated as such.

Hugh

↑ Index

170. David Bromige
avant ga-ga's
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Rachel, I appreciate yr response. I realize my response has a 'plague-on-all-their-houses' air to it, perhaps akin to donald's 'It's all writing'. With me, this is due to an impatience with negotiating the space between the work and the consumer. What is self-evident to the creator is hardly so to potential readers, yet it's frustrating to take all the guide-dog/hand-rail/sign-posted material one left out of the poetry for esthetic cause, & have to recycle it as prose 'trot'/explanatory manifesti. Perhaps one is more sensitive to this demand when one (as I) earned a living for a quarter-century providing just such aid to those eagerly (or perhaps not) seeking to get with the new in poetry. Au fond, it takes place as an internal conflict, leastwise with me, a constant source of irritation that leads me to dismissive gestures.

You are helpful with the suggestions of colleagues; Cole's intelligence & patience are manifest in her reappropriation of 'marginal' so that it places the writing she practices & whose practice she supports in others, on a level playing field with 'maindrains' writing. Carla's 'hybridity' strikes a chord with me--the local hero in sonoma county is Luther Burbank, and for decades I've spoken to folks around here of the 'grafting' aspects of the Modern. 'Making strange', your own candidate, makes sense too.

But ....but.... from a poet's p-o-v, it often comes to 'but not _my_ kind of making strange', understandably, since 'making strange' can never be a uniform endeavor. And 'not _my_ way of hybridizing' . The case of Michael Palmer is worth considering here. As was pointed out by 6 poets collaborating on an essay abt LangPo, Palmer had been in every 'LangPo' collection and most journals devoted to publishing 'LangPo', so that his disclaimer, in an i'view, 'I'm always a little outisde of the group, like Matisse', had a bad-faith ring to it. His case gets more confusing when one recalls that one of his books was touted by his publisher as being 'by the leading Language Poet', and that it is declared by his translator in the french edition of _Sun_ that Palmer 'never was a Language Poet.'

Whatever one thinks of Palmer's conduct of these negotations, one regrets, for one's own sake, the necessity of them. I understand your point, Rachel, about the 'dominant mode' more easily obliterating poetry not to its liking, when that poetry fails to concert itself under some one stunning rubric. Its a concern imposed by the dominant, it has one already speaking the opporessor's language, yet it looks to be a dilemma of 'compromise oneself or die'. To whom do you need to speak of yourself (since you use this parallel) as 'lesbian'? Is it required in order to let men know not to bother you, or in order to let others so inclined that you might be available, or to qualify oneself for those few privileges that can come a lesbian's way, or....? what is the necessity? Cab't the negotiations happen on a one-on-one basis without recourse to labels, but instead by way of declaration of taste and volition? I guess it can be seen as 'Strength in numbers' and mutual support; as necessary assertion of pride in oneself in the face of many who would shame one; as 'coming out' as courageous gesture of commitment in a society still largely uncomprehending? I like your analogy, and I think it bears further exploration as to parallels.

'Lesbian,' however, is a term whose currency is now well-established, and so we are still left with the question, 'what is the name for what we do--what claim to unity with others can we make that doesnt depreciate the particular 'making-strange' it's one's destiny/fate/choice to have incurred?' 'Not this', the first sentence of Silliman's poem, does lead, in its case, to 'What then?' Ron's complex and active awareness of the needs of the poetry-consumer in a society that offers brief, inadequate explanations--but that _does_ offer explanations--for anything one might be supposed to need to purchase, surely helped take him from sentence one to sentence two. To have stopped with sentence one is an option I for one find attractive. So that the 'What then?' is spoken, originates, in the reader, with no further prompting from the poem.

That has the appearance of the idealistic in today's world, though, doesn't it?

Well, this is long enough already, and coming to no resolution. I can only hope that it nudges the discussion along a minim. Thanks, Rachel, for the stimulus. David.

↑ Index

171. henry g
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Sat 9 Aug 1997

J Finnegan - I like your idea or description of experiment as something that precedes publication. Though exploratory work will always seem experimental.

"Avant-garde" seems like a contradiction in terms. Whenever the really new has solidified to the point of being a lined-up advance in good order, it's already crusted over. Have it for lunch tomorrow.

Progress. Sure it happens. Sure there is the new. Sure people grow off each other's energy. But why do you say the New Formalists are "freer" than the plain old formalists? Doesn't this betray rather a linear notion?

Close reading will turn a lot of old poetry into very avant-garde material. Dante, acc'd to my old buddy Mandlestam, is a poet of the future.

The idea that tradition is univocal (not your idea, a different post), is too abstract to mean anything. Look back in lit history & you see a conti- nuous nervous fluctuation of attitudes, styles, etc. "Every significant movement in English poetry could be interpreted as a reaction to the political situation." (Stephen Spender, 1940).

Another interesting Spender quote: "Now the poet is someone who devotes his life to exactly such a process of self-revelation as drama attempts to produce in characters: his poems are speeches from the drama of the time in which he is living." (1938)

The avant-garde is that portion of the new which has been assured canonical gluing into "the tradition". Think about it. Maybe that's the answer to Maria's question (paranoid though it may be tending toward...) - Henry Gould

↑ Index

172. henry g
Re: Impercipient Lecture Series
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Just a quick blast - Aldon's extended essay on Jonas, which I was lucky enough to be handed OUTSIDE the Harris collection on Prospect St., is VERY good work & great reading. He's done his homework & his essay is remarkable for the number of issues it touches on (neglected startling poet - Stephen Jonas; race relations & identity; style in 50s-60s experimental poetry; the visual/textual/WRITTEN as an overall musical-sharpening tool in Jonas' work after Pound & Olson) - WITHOUT getting lost in the minutiae or neglecting a considered assessment of Jonas' achievemnts.

Way to go Aldon! Now I have to look for that Talisman book of this guy (Jonas - SELECTED POEMS, Talisman Hs 1994).

Jonas seems to have been an extremely witty writer lost in the fuzz of time. Beautiful archival digging here. Witty, highly musical, & violent sharp & edgy.

But some of the edge seems to be sharpened/softened by his direct application of blues & jazz in a very deliberate & extensive way.

- Henry Gould

↑ Index

173. Steven Marks
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sat 9 Aug 1997

Charles, Cross your fingers, take the oath, take the money and remember that the Declaration of Independence says that it's OK to seek the removal of a government that won't guarantee your rights. That is, as long as you are a property-owner. You do own property, right? Not to take your situation too lightly, I think there are a number of "subversive" things you can do in your small press class to more than offset this odious oath. Keeping every promise can be a sign of rigidity.

best,
Steven

On Sat, 9 Aug 1997, mark weiss wrote:

> Charles, you dirty commie, to the best of my knowledge you gotta sign--when confronted with same in NY, Connecticut and Arizona (I don't remember if I had to sign one for UCSD) I checked it out. I think that all public colleges require it--may be that their federal money is tied to compliance. But take heart--you can always be a spy.
>
> At 05:39 PM 8/9/97 -0400, you wrote:
> Dear Poetics:
>
> I've just been hired to teach at the University of Arizona Extended University -- a course on small presses, and later this year, a creative writing class.
>
> Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other states as well. Are you a Minnesota loyalist, Maria? or anyone else anywhere else? Some answer soon would be great, so I can weigh my options before I sign or don't sign. (and yes, I know, I should probably talk with a lawyer about this)

> For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of oath of affirmation set forth in this section."
>
> And that oath reads:
>
> I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of _____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God (or, so I do affirm).
>
> _____
> (Signature of employee)
>
> thanks,
>
> charles

Steven Marks

http://members.aol.com/swmarks/welcome.html

↑ Index

174. Tom Orange
"avantgarde" (fwd)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

these didnt seem to get posted the first time around -- apologies if they are no longer useful/relevant....t.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Fri, 8 Aug 1997 00:54:49 -0400 (EDT)
From: Tom Orange <[redacted]>
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> Subject: "avantgarde"

david i,

re: yr questions abt the history of the term/concept, matei calinescu has a useful take on this in his book "faces of modernity" (or perhaps "five faces of modernity," it was published first under one title and again under the other, duke up 1991 i think). if i had the blasted thing here i would save you the trouble and type out / summarize the relevant points.

tom

↑ Index

175. Tom Orange
hendecasyllabics' metaphorics
Sun 10 Aug 1997

---

on a different note (altho the poem below cd be seen as 1870s avant-garde now tres derriere...)

for those like me in late-summer doldrums wondering where the time flew, perhaps a metaphor or two to tease out:

> In the month of the long decline of roses
> I, beholding the summer dead before me,
> Set my face to the sea and journeyed silent,
> Gazing eagerly where above the sea-mark
> Flame as fierce as the fervid eyes of lions
> Half divided the eyelids of the sunset;...
> [swinburne, "hendecasyllabics"]

now we have flame above the sea-mark: presumably we are already to think sun and/or sunset. said flame's fierceness, fiercety?, likened to fervid lioneyes. now for the kicker: flame half divides eyelids. hold on to that for the moment, let's tend to these eyelids first. eyelids of the sunset: possesive or partitive genitive, the sunset /has/ eyelids or /is/ eyelids? if the sun is the eye (as it has already been associated with fervid lioneyes), then eyelids can be sky and earth, upper and lower limits of vision, extinguishing the sun in the slow blink of its setting, its setting under, its untergehen.

yet flame half divides
eyelids, divides them in
half, keeps them open.
even when closed they
are still divided,

by the horizon, or:
half divides as in

divides only partly,
not completely, half
divided half joined.

even tho i gaze
eagerly above
the sea-mark
the flame is so

fierce, as sky
and earth close
on the sun, i have to squint,

join my eyelids
together, close them enough so that they are still open.

to the horizon.

↑ Index

176. Rachel Levitsky
Re: hendecasyllabics' metaphorics
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Tom--

Your poem (the Swinbourne piece too) is beautiful, and took me to the ocean. I am grateful, being stuck out here in the rockies.

--Rachel

↑ Index

177. George Bowering
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Sun 10 Aug 1997

> how does that go - 'there is no avant-garde, only people who are a little late.' i'd appreciate the source if anyone may have it at the ready. c.

It sounds a little like McLuhan, who said that the avant garde artists do not live in the future, but in the present, while evryone else lives in the past.

See his essay called something like "The Rear View Mirror".

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

178. Alan J Sondheim

Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"

Sun 10 Aug 1997

Curses on me, I've almost always found the opposite to be true - that the avant-garde is often retrograde - at the same time everyone was praising Godard's attack on the corporate (and binding women to the sex industry vis-a-vis the gaze of the director), the same was occurring in hollywood film after film.

Attacks on systems and classical logics, rationality, came from as varied sources as Godel, Alexander Bryant Johnson, Vaihinger. Meanwhile avant- garde groups issued manifestos without questioning the problematic of writing, say, issues of protocol statements, performativity, etc.

Watching the lure, seduction, objet a of soap operas tends more towards post-modernity's deconstruction of narratology than, say, Holly Hughes who I love by the way.

As far as technology goes, I've learned more from say Brenda Laurel beginning with the computer, than from artists, too many of whom think the Net's equivalent to the World Wide Web.

Sorry to interfere here, but ah, there's another McLuhan bust as far as I'm concerned...

Alan, up far too late with himself, apologies to everyone

On Sun, 10 Aug 1997, George Bowering wrote:

> how does that go - 'there is no avant-garde, only people who are a little late.' i'd appreciate the source if anyone may have it at the ready. c.
>
> It sounds a little like McLuhan, who said that the avant garde artists do not live in the future, but in the present, while evryone else lives in the past.
>
> See his essay called something like "The Rear View Mirror".

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

179. George Bowering
Re: avant ga-ga's
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Well, having heard some at a "festival" this weekend, I came up with a term for the opposite kind of writing (I mean not avantgarde),. I dont know whether the term has already been used, but I called what I heard "consumer Poetry."

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

180. George Bowering
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Here's what I cant figure out: would a subversive hesitate to sign the loyalty oath?

Here's another thing i always used to wonder. Does yr US body called the House Unamerican Activities Committee investigate activities carried on in , say, Sweden, Niger and Reunion?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

181. George Bowering
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

I'm wondering about being faithful to the Declaration of Independence. I mean especially the part that says that King George III was a rotten guy for not being the implacable enemy of the Native People of America.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

182. Rachel Loden
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

George Bowering wrote:

> Here's another thing i always used to wonder. Does yr US body called the House Unamerican Activities Committee investigate activities carried on in , say, Sweden, Niger and Reunion?

George, HUAC changed its name to the House Internal Security Committee in 1969 and was abolished in 1975 (after Watergate), although I think somebody forgot to tell Gingrich, Helms and Buchanan. There's a hilarious chapter on the committee in Jessica Mitford's _A Fine Old Conflict_ (which is out of print, unfortunately). Among other jollities, she reveals that HUAC, in one of its first actions, named Shirley Temple (then nine) as an unwitting dupe of the Communists, and later designated Christopher Marlowe as Un-American.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

183. Bob Grumman
Re: The Otherstream
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Hmmm, another person to execute: James Finnegan for saying that while he thinks "Otherstream" a good coinage (thanks!), he believes it "could as easily apply to Slam as to Language writing." Wrong on both counts. According to my definition, both Slam Poetry and Language Writing are KNOWNSTREAM, the opposite of otherstream because they, or poetry in all essential respects identical to it in the case of Slam Poetry, are in the establishment press anthologies. Slam Poetry is probably mainstream (a substream of knownstream) as well; Language Writing is not.

--Bob G.

↑ Index

184. Peter Ganick
email address inquiry
Sun 10 Aug 1997

hi buffalo listmembers---- back after a while----- an announcement soon regarding potes & poets
and the zines/texts soon----- but for now, i urgently need the email and/or snailmail address and/or telephone number
of elizabeth robinson----- she's due for an issue of a.bacus and i've misplaced her text----- anyone can backchannel would be appreciated----- out-----
peter ganick

↑ Index

185. Maria Damon
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

hi charles, wow! no ididn't have to sign any such thing at U of MN, for whch i find myself unexpectedly grateful to the institution i'm usually wringing my hands about. but i believe they stll have something like that at berkeley.

At 5:39 PM -0400 8/9/97, charles alexander wrote:
>Dear Poetics:
>
>I've just been hired to teach at the University of Arizona Extended >University -- a course on small presses, and later this year, a creative >writing class.
>
>Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty >oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought >maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign

>such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, >or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign >such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any >were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other >states as well. Are you a Minnesota loyalist, Maria? or anyone else >anywhere else? Some answer soon would be great, so I can weigh my options >before I sign or don't sign. (and yes, I know, I should probably talk with >a lawyer about this)
>
>For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and >until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of >oath of affirmation set forth in this section."
>
>And that oath reads:
>
>I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will >support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws >of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the >same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I >will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of
>_____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God
>(or, so I do affirm).
>
>
>
>_____
>(Signature of employee)
>
>
>
>thanks,
>
>charles

↑ Index

186. Maria Damon
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

yeah, this reminds me tht there's a special provision for forgiveness on yom kippur, for oaths made under threat of death or other such duress. i.e. it was important that jews survive, even if it meant converting under the threat of death; they could be forgiven as long as they remembered they wre jewish.

At 11:12 PM -0400 8/9/97, Steven Marks wrote:
>Charles,
>Cross your fingers, take the oath, take the money and remember that the >Declaration of Independence says that it's OK to seek the removal of a >government that won't guarantee your rights. That is, as long as you are >a property-owner. You do own property, right? Not to take your situation >too lightly, I think there are a number of "subversive" things you can do >in your small press class to more than offset this odious oath. Keeping >every promise can be a sign of rigidity.
>
>best,
>Steven
>
>
>On Sat, 9 Aug 1997, mark weiss wrote:
>
>> Charles, you dirty commie, to the best of my knowledge you gotta sign-- when >> confronted with same in NY, Connecticut and Arizona (I don't remember if I >> had to sign one for UCSD) I checked it out. I think that all public >> colleges require it--may be that their federal money is tied to compliance.
>> But take heart--you can always be a spy.
>>
>> At 05:39 PM 8/9/97 -0400, you wrote:
>> >Dear Poetics:
>> >
>> >I've just been hired to teach at the University of Arizona Extended >> >University -- a course on small presses, and later this year, a creative >> >writing class.
>> >
>> >Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty >> >oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought >> >maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign
>> >such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, >> >or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign >> >such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any >> >were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other >> >states as well. Are you a Minnesota loyalist, Maria? or anyone else >> >anywhere else? Some answer soon would be great, so I can weigh my options >> >before I sign or don't sign. (and yes, I know, I should probably talk with >> >a lawyer about this)

>> >
>> >For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and >> >until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of >> >oath of affirmation set forth in this section."
>> >
>> >And that oath reads:
>> >
>> >I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will >> >support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws >> >of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the >> >same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I >> >will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of
>> >_____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God
>> >(or, so I do affirm).
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >_____
>> >(Signature of employee)
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >thanks,
>> >
>> >charles
>> >
>> >
>>
>
>_____
> Steven Marks
>

> http://members.aol.com/swmarks/welcome.html
>_____

↑ Index

187. Peter Landers
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

My question is, is there anything in those documents you disagree with? Would you choose not to uphold them? If so, signing would be a lie, right? Do those documents imply that you cannot teach that Zukofsky was a Marxist or that his "an impulse to action" poem is cribbed out of Marxist texts, or the showing of those texts, for instance. I think not.

Personally, I took such an oath many years ago, and I meant every word of it. Still do. Not waving a flag, just that I still have that oath.

I can't stand flags or war, and these documents do try to resolve problems in bargaining instead of war. I'd feel even better about it if we had gotten the ERA passed, though. I just want to say that swearing to uphold such things as free speech and freedom of the press does not mean you have to agree with the current administration.

Pete

p. s. read them

↑ Index

188. mark weiss
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

And then there was Brecht's hilarious performance before the committee in which he reminded them that he might, indeed, as a German, be unAmerican.

At 03:17 AM 8/10/97 -0700, you wrote:
>George Bowering wrote:
>
>> Here's another thing i always used to wonder. Does yr US body called the >> House Unamerican Activities Committee investigate activities carried on in >> , say, Sweden, Niger and Reunion?
>
>George, HUAC changed its name to the House Internal Security Committee >in 1969 and was abolished in 1975 (after Watergate), although I think >somebody forgot to tell Gingrich, Helms and Buchanan. There's a >hilarious chapter on the committee in Jessica Mitford's _A Fine Old >Conflict_ (which is out of print, unfortunately). Among other >jollities, she reveals that HUAC, in one of its first actions, named >Shirley Temple (then nine) as an unwitting dupe of the Communists, and >later designated Christopher Marlowe as Un-American.

>
>Rachel Loden
>
>

↑ Index

189. mark weiss
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Apparently what you do when you're up late by yourself is confuse categories. What's avant garde about Godard is and was his montage, not his politics. Lots of us went to his films for instruction in the former, very few for the latter. Are you truly suggesting that only those who are in the vanguard in all things are worthy? If your mathematicians had conventional table manners and wrote elizabethan sonnets in secret would you dismiss them? But to return to politics--artists of most stripes most of the time are lousy predictors of the future (mathematicians, the writers of soap operas and even technonerds are not notably more successful). Pound (whatever avant garde meant, he qualified), fortunately, missed the boat politically. Many of us learn from his innovations, but few from his politics. Let's try this one: sometimes artists, no matter how progressive their art, by the sheer luck of history, wind up clearing the path for an army that most of us consider regressive. Wagner, who also was as avant garde as you can get, became after his death the darling of the nazis, who liked his politics, and there are probably more than a few lost souls who still seek nourishment of that sort from him. But that's not why he remains for most composers the most influential composer of the late nineteenth century, and it's not why most of his audience goes to the opera.

At 03:39 AM 8/10/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Curses on me, I've almost always found the opposite to be true - that the >avant-garde is often retrograde - at the same time everyone was praising >Godard's attack on the corporate (and binding women to the sex industry >vis-a-vis the gaze of the director), the same was occurring in hollywood >film after film.
>
>Attacks on systems and classical logics, rationality, came from as varied >sources as Godel, Alexander Bryant Johnson, Vaihinger. Meanwhile avant->garde groups issued manifestos without questioning the problematic of >writing, say, issues of protocol statements, performativity, etc.

>
>Watching the lure, seduction, objet a of soap operas tends more towards >postmodernity's deconstruction of narratology than, say, Holly Hughes who
>I love by the way.
>
>As far as technology goes, I've learned more from say Brenda Laurel begin>ning with the computer, than from artists, too many of whom think the >Net's equivalent to the World Wide Web.
>
>Sorry to interfere here, but ah, there's another McLuhan bust as far as >I'm concerned...
>
>Alan, up far too late with himself, apologies to everyone
>
>On Sun, 10 Aug 1997, George Bowering wrote:
>
>> >how does that go - 'there is no avant-garde, only people who are a little >> >late.' i'd appreciate the source if anyone may have it at the ready. c.
>>
>> It sounds a little like McLuhan, who said that the avant garde artists do >> not live in the future, but in the present, while evryone else lives in the >> past.
>>
>> See his essay called something like "The Rear View Mirror".
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> George Bowering.
>> ,
>> 2499 West 37th Ave.,
>> Vancouver, B.C.,
>> Canada V6M 1P4
>>
>> fax: [redacted]
>>
>
>

↑ Index

190. Carolyn Guertin
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Sun 10 Aug 1997

> how does that go - 'there is no avant-garde, only people who are a little late.' i'd appreciate the source if anyone may have it at the ready. c.

Perhaps you are thinking of Australian poet Richard Tipping's road sign:

"Caution! There is no avant garde, only those who have been left behind."

Cheers,
Carolyn

↑ Index

191. Alan J Sondheim
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Sun 10 Aug 1997

On Sun, 10 Aug 1997, mark weiss wrote:

> Apparently what you do when you're up late by yourself is confuse categories. What's avant garde about Godard is and was his montage, not his politics. Lots of us went to his films for instruction in the former, very few for the latter.

This brings up an interesting point - to what extent are they separable? For part of the politics of '68 that went into his work revolved around the reification, self-reflexivity of the filmic process - and this has to be somewhat centripetal, a site of all forms of contestation which are interpenetrated.

> Are you truly suggesting that only those who are in the vanguard in all things are worthy? If your mathematicians had conventional table manners and wrote elizabethan sonnets in secret would you dismiss them?

Oh Heavens no! Seriously, please don't misunderstand. I'm hopefully not making a value judgement, certainly not one on the basis of "vanguardism" or "avantgardism" at all. My own reading is widespread; I'm just worrying the category, and reacting to the notion that the "avantgarde" is somehow culturally advanced - questioning the somehow.

> But to return to politics--artists of most stripes most of the time are lousy predictors of the future (mathematicians, the writers of soap operas and even technonerds are not notably more successful). Pound (whatever avant garde meant, he qualified), fortunately, missed the boat politically.

I just wish he had taken another boat!

> Many of us learn from his innovations, but few from his politics.
> Let's try this one: sometimes artists, no matter how progressive their art, > by the sheer luck of history, wind up clearing the path for an army that > most of us consider regressive. Wagner, who also was as avant garde as you > can get, became after his death the darling of the nazis, who liked his > politics, and there are probably more than a few lost souls who still seek > nourishment of that sort from him. But that's not why he remains for most > composers the most influential composer of the late nineteenth century, and > it's not why most of his audience goes to the opera.

>
I can't speak that well to Wagner, but I think in fact the pan-Germanism of his work did speak, integrate well with imperialism - and for me, listening relatively carefully at times (not within years however) to his music, it is also a fanfare for, if not an ideology, at least an ideological plateau - it's oddly programmatic.

We have had this debate before, and it's always a matter of degree - for example, I like Heidegger a great deal, particularly his later work, in spite of his Nazi affiliation.

In other words, I'm not arguing at all for purity in work, nor even for an ulterior accountability, but again reacting to McLuhan's statement and other texts which assume that an avant-garde _site,_ so to speak is also the _site_ of somehow "advanced" thought - without deconstructing the latter in terms of the culture at large.

Alan

↑ Index

192. mark weiss
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Right you are. Self-declared avant gardes are sometimes anything but. The corrective I offer is that artists like Godard, Wagner, Pound, are, indeed, "the site of somehow 'advanced' thought," but that thought is to be found in the process of the films, music and poetry themselves. In the case of Wagner, who greatly extended the harmonic resources available to composers and invented an astonishing new way to structure large works (based on the repitition and combination of motifs--some polyphonic passages become incredibly rich and complex metaphoric worlds), composers of all political stripes have continued to learn from his music, notably Verdi, Mahler and Schoenberg, who were not particularly sympathetic to his politics.

I'm not arguing at all for purity in work, nor even for an >ulterior accountability, but again reacting to McLuhan's statement and >other texts which assume that an avant-garde _site,_ so to speak is also >the _site_ of somehow "advanced" thought - without deconstructing the >latter in terms of the culture at large.

>
>Alan
>
>

↑ Index

193. Alan J Sondheim

*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*

Sun 10 Aug 1997

I want to add that I'm in agreement with you here. I do think it can be difficult to separate one aspect of that thought from others, but I also think it's absolutely necessary. One of the interesting aspects of wri- ters like Celine, Pound, Heidegger, Dostoevksy, etc., for me, is that the anti-semitism is pretty well buried, available elsewhere (for example Marx's letters) but not necessarily played across the major texts. And I don't believe in a contamination principle, that "bad-thought _here_" need result in a loosening of rigour or value "_there._"

Alan

On Sun, 10 Aug 1997, mark weiss wrote:

> Right you are. Self-declared avant gardes are sometimes anything but. The corrective I offer is that artists like Godard, Wagner, Pound, are, indeed, "the site of somehow 'advanced' thought," but that thought is to be found in the process of the films, music and poetry themselves. In the case of Wagner, who greatly extended the harmonic resources available to composers and invented an astonishing new way to structure large works (based on the repitition and combination of motifs--some polyphonic passages become incredibly rich and complex metaphoric worlds), composers of all political stripes have continued to learn from his music, notably Verdi, Mahler and Schoenberg, who were not particularly sympathetic to his politics.

↑ Index

194. Dan Raphael Dlugonski

avant-stream

Sun 10 Aug 1997

avant garde? otherstream? one of my impressions is being on the frontier, away from the center. doing things with your art that you don't know of anyone else doing (yes there are links back, 3rd cousins, you are what you eat, stained by the culture you're steeped in.) seems, from the usage so far in this discussion, that avant garde is kind of a dividing line, beyond a certain pale. the acceptable/center continues to evolve, to include poets who a century ago would not be tasteable by that stream. my longheld (& probably over optimistic) attitude is that good writers write the way that connects with their beings. for some writers, this truespeak happens to fit the mode of most acceptable and that writer prospers wildly. we are laying down our individual visions, a wide variety outside the pale than within. some people get their voice right off; most of us going thru phases of influence, getting our bearings, before the proper pitch begins to unlock the stream/voice. but its such a wide filed, this otherstream, the more important labels are subdivisions--langpo, surrealism, etc., and all those riding rifts along the ambiguous borders. to recognize the various channels along which poetry receives/transmits and find those you can work best to open/expand your and other consciousnesses.

↑ Index

195. Hugh Steinberg
Re: The Otherstream
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Bob:

Although you seem particularly intent on policing your borders, I beg of you not to shoot (I still have my whole life ahead of me, I promise to be good, my parents would be overwrought with grief, etc. etc.).

Fine if you want to keep the term "otherstream" narrow. I'll even use the term sundaystream (though it is quite condescending). But I think this sundaystream of poetics is important and worth paying attention to, especially within a discussion of avant-gardes.

Much of the definition of "real" and "phony" avant-gardes revolve around issues of formal experimentation: who is the most innovative.

I'd argue that this is not what avant-gardes are about, that innovativeness is only a subset of the term. The main purpose, the distinguishing feature that separates the avant-garde from the experimental is the desire to effect change in people, first in their view of the artistic or political medium, and then, more deeply, in the perception and course of their lives. Surrealism is a classic example.

The reason most people are reluctant to use the term avant-garde anymore is a general lack of faith that poetry, particularly formally experimental poetry, has the capacity to change people's lives (with the exception of a few people here and there). This is reasonable, as poetry isn't a mass medium in the U.S.

There is a loophole in this despair. I'm thinking of another model of change, of two types of avant-gardes: an impatient and a patient avant-garde. The impatient wants big change NOW, a revolution. From now on, their manifestos read, everything shall be different.

I doubt that form of avant-garde is feasible in our time.

The patient avant-garde takes a long view. Instead of fire, it is a seed, working its way slowly over time, creating change gradually, sometimes glacially, instead of immediately. I believe that experiments in writing can change the way people think and live, and that this patient idea of the avant-garde has relevance.

The contested field of change in poetics is the sundaystream, as this is where the most substantial effects of any avant-garde will be felt. How will ordinary people think about poetry? If one is an avant-garde, the answer to this question is their raison d'etre.

One of the things I find so promising about slam poetics has nothing to do with form or even content but rather in presentation. What slams and open mikes are doing is transforming a fundamental axiom of sundaystream poetry, that poetry is essentially a private act, meant not to be shared with strangers. It desires to move poetry from an individual experience of reading and writing, to a more public sphere of performance and audience. No, they are not the first to do this, or even the best at doing this, but they are doing this, and it is fascinating to see the impact it has made on the way people write and perceive poetry, art, and even larger issues.

Hugh Steinberg

> Phooey, what a way to have to start the morning: I have to call for the execution of Hugh Steinberg. His offense? EGREGIOUS MISUSE OF MY TERM, "OTHERSTREAM."
>
> Actually, I set him up by incompletely defining otherstream poetry as "any poetry that has never (to any serious extent) gotten into an anthology of poetry published by a 'reputable' publisher--like Norton--or been seriously discussed in a book of criticism published by such a publisher..." So I hereby redefine it as "any TECHNICALLY DISTINCT VARIETY OF poetry that has never, etc., etc." Visual poetry is always my primary example, though Marjorie Perloff's course in it, and what Harry Polkinhorn has been doing at San Diego State, and other developments may be changing that.
>
> I agree with Hugh that there are two (or more) streams of work that are not widely accepted, but consider only one of them otherstream. The second "otherstream" he speaks of--"poems that are written out of a general ignorance of institution based poems (poems written by people > who don't read poetry)"--is, for me, knownstream because it's not doing anything technically new. It's wannabe mainstream, or unsuccessful mainstream, or left-behind mainstream, or overlooked mainstream (as I believe Robert Frost was when Pound "discovered" him).

>
> I just thought of a name for it: sundaystream poetry, or the poetry of weekend poets--though it would also, unfairly, include the poetry of people working seriously and full-time in mainstream poetry who simply haven't done whatever is required besides writing good poetry to be accepted by the establishment. I did sundaystream poetry for a long time myself so have nothing against it--and, with Hugh, am most interested in how it is being affected by other poetries. But puleeze don't call it "otherstream."
>
> --Bob G.

↑ Index

196. KENT JOHNSON
Yasusada's existence
Sun 10 Aug 1997

On August 7, Maria Damon wrote:
>i've heard quite enough about yasusada. no offense intended, kent >and others, but i don't see the point in devoting so much >intellectual and emotional energy to someone who doesn't exist.

By coincidence, Maria, there is an essay by Mikhail Epstein appearing any day now in the Denver Quarterly on Yasusada and on the whole question of an author's existence or non-existence as it relates to poetic production! I understand it's also slated to appear, along with an Epstein interview, in Il Nuovo Giornale de Poeti in Italy. By the way, the Asahi Shimbun article I mentioned did not appear on August 6, as I was informed it would. I'll send a note if and when it does, as there is an English language edition of the Asahi and they have a website. Don't know if it will appear in English too, but will post address if so. in rear-garde spirit, Kent

↑ Index

197. Lawrence Upton
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Woo! 40 plus posts and pretty well all of it interesting...

<<"Experimental" is the term most often misused. Most experiments are failures--steeped in the trial & error method. Most writers worth their salt aren't publishing their "experiments." Rather they are experimenting toward a new way of the writing, personally or in the world. Once the work is published, the writer is, in general, confident the experiment has resulted in a finished text that is achieving, at least partially or in a way he/she could only dimly imagine, the intended outcome of his/her initial experiments. The publishing one's "experimental writing" is tantamount to publishing early drafts and half-baked, alchemic concoctions of varying and lesser consequence.

Finnegan>>

what do you think about publishing earlier versions of poems in order to show and understand the process of writing? I keep wanting to do that with RWC magazine and the poets are too fastidious to oblige me

*****

<<Hmmm, another person to execute: James Finnegan for saying that while he thinks "Otherstream" a good coinage (thanks!), he believes it "could as easily apply to Slam as to Language writing." Wrong on both counts. According to my definition, both Slam Poetry and Language Writing are KNOWNSTREAM, the opposite of otherstream because they, or poetry in all essential respects identical to it in the case of Slam Poetry, are in the establishment press anthologies. Slam Poetry is probably mainstream (a substream of knownstream) as well; Language Writing is not.

--Bob G.

>>

over here i came some time ago to the conclusion that the mainstream as in MAIN stream is the stuff that the _mainstream_ does not cover... that experiment, dissent, risk, fun etc etc is the true mainstream of poetry in these countries to perhaps put this in perspective - a Polish friend of mine has a quip that while he likes the English he wishes it didn't feel as if England is still being run by the Normans and this is why I have called my latest press Mainstream - it is, they aren't

*****

<<I can't stand flags or war, and these documents do try to resolve problems in bargaining instead of war. I'd feel even better about it if we had gotten the ERA passed, though. I just want to say that swearing to uphold such things as free speech and freedom of the press does not mean you have to agree with the current administration.>>

we dont have a written constitution... if the de facto constitution were written down it wld be fairly revolting

i signed an oath of allegiance to the queen to get a government job a quarter of a century ago - i have no sense of allegiance to the queen but signed in a spirit of - as someone else remarked - being under duress. Having no belief in a deity I forgave myself.

On that - I had to give evidence in a law court a few years back and they ASSUMED as I think they do as a default that I was an Anglican. I was given the Church of England bible. I made quite a pretty speech to the effect that I was going to tell the truth anyway but would not feel compelled to do so by the act of swearing on the bible but would feel compelled by giving my word without being under duress - and the judge said a simple attestation would suffice...

i think it is acceptable - just! - to say you don't believe in god - sorry... God... but NOT acceptable to say you dont believe in government

The tyranny we have in this country is a catch all phrase inserted into lecturing contracts that you may not bring the institution _into disrepute_ - this is used to stifle whistle blowing on siphoning off of funds, rigging exam results, falsifying student numbers etc

Lawrence Upton

↑ Index

198. henry
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Pete Landers has done something rather astonishing here. I'm not sure what exactly it is yet, but one thing he's done is show in an indirect way the extent of the damage inflicted by the McCarthy era (echoed by the Nixon era & re-echoed by the Reagan era).

A state college is part of the State. Only a Helms (& perhaps a New Critic) would assume that a State job teaching automatically jeopardizes political and artistic freedom.

Or is it basically intellectual freedom that is at issue? Should a loyalty oath be extracted from people in the intellectual professions? Or in any profession? Isn't it a sort of economic blackmail? Or at least a sign of loose anarchic big brotherism? Or rampant federalism? I think it has something to do with tax money. Taxes are a downpayment on patriotism for some. Loyalty oaths protect state funding for education. If you're for state funding and approve for the time being of the constitution (rather than a completely different or no constitution) I agree with Pete why not sign. - Henry Gould (because poets are the unacknowl-edged legislators of a dream republic?)

↑ Index

199. KENT JOHNSON
Imperialist running dogs
Sun 10 Aug 1997

Charles Alexander: Sign the oath to secure the job and hope to later have a fulfilling chance to violate the hell out of such a Stalinist loyalty contract.

Pete Landers: Let's say just hypothetically that twenty years from now after a few years of deep economic crisis and U.S troops completely bogged down in the Amazon in Brazil that there is discontent all over the place and the UPS workers start a strike and its 1968 France all over again only this time there's an upstart socialist leadership in the U.S. labor movement which is class conscious and really pissed off and calls for nationwide strikes with the idea that the country has been run for the past two hundred and forty years largely for the pleasures of capital and there's no need for that to go on any longer and let's cut they say the military budget by nine-tenths and a big part of U.S. labor responds and then in a panic a purportedly liberal Democratic Party administration suspends habeus corpus and the constitution and avant-garde poetry and everything else and declares martial law outlawing all public activity by enemies of the United States foreign or domestic. What say you Pete Landers about that loyalty contract you meant every word of three decades back? Would you turn in the elderly poet Charles Alexander if you suspected he was a friend of the radical and national-security-threatening AFL-CIO? Would you still uphold his right to freedom of speech? Even his right to violate his loyalty oath in defense of freedom of speech and the press (I'm talking for example about Charles Alexander standing in front of a crowd of angry U of Arizona students and urging them to defy government instituted martial law)?

Ok, this is all fanciful and maybe you'll say (I hope) yes to my last question, but the truth is that there are loyalties and then there are loyalties. Freedom of speech and the press is obviously wonderful while we more or less have it ("more or less" because of little publicized but longstanding spying and harrassment activities of local and national government agencies against legal political dissidents). But the McCarthyite loyalty oath you are so proud to have signed does not speak to liberties of speech and the press that are pure, inalienable, and free from historical contingency. It speaks to their opposite--hidden, for now, as that opposite may be. Kent

> My question is, is there anything in those documents you disagree with?
> Would you choose not to uphold them? If so, signing would be a lie, right?
> Do those documents imply that you cannot teach that Zukofsky was a Marxist > or that his "an impulse to action" poem is cribbed out of Marxist texts, > or the showing of those texts, for instance. I think not.

> Personally, I took such an oath many years ago, and I meant every word of it. Still do. Not waving a flag, just that I still have that oath.
>
> I can't stand flags or war, and these documents do try to resolve problems in bargaining instead of war. I'd feel even better about it if we had gotten the ERA passed, though. I just want to say that swearing to uphold such things as free speech and freedom of the press does not mean you have to agree with the current administration.
>
> Pete
>
> p. s. read them

↑ Index

200. Rebecca Weldon
avant-garde and the Larousse universel
Sun 10 Aug 1997

My Larousse indicates that avant-garde is, firstly, a military term referring to those who prepare the ground (or water) for an attack by ground or naval forces. It has come to be used in a figurative sense to refer to those who prefigure another era in thought, ie. idees d'avant-garde.

The word is of the feminine gender along with avant-premiere, avant-scene and avant-veille and might be interestingly compared to avant-bec, avant-coureur, avant-gout, avant-poste, avant-projet and avant-propos, all of the masculine gender.

And, in it's original meaning, I believe that the military term would be found in all languages around the world. It exists in Thai: thap na (the "h" in "thap" simply indicating an aspirated or hard "t" sound). The term is also used figuratively in the same way.

Interesting?

Rebecca

↑ Index

201. Rachel Levitsky
Re: the misery of poetry
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Robert Hale wrote:
>
> What Bataille calls "the misery of poetry" should inform why it is that we > don't see too much actual poetry on the poetics list (see Literature and > Evil). To turn unsatisfaction into a permanent object is a hefty job for the > ephemeral e-mail, which renders language into deletable scripts. Do eyes > scan the screen the same way that they read the page? And let's answer that > by NOT getting into any banal cyber vs book space threads.

Personally my experience is far closer to speaking on the phone, though I can't take the computer to the toilet and can take the book, but if it is a difficult book i like to 'set' myself up. The computer imposes a specific set up that is difficult to vary. I don't find myself getting as lusty from the screen as I do from the page, nor as sad. Humor suits it (that's nice), and that would support your use of Bataille.

↑ Index

202. Alan Jen Sondheim
for a friend
Mon 11 Aug 1997

VirtueL

The line that shoots across the palm comes to the end of his ropE
Weather fissures meaning as arm after arm falls from his shouldeR
Twice in his life he warned of irresponsibilitY
She took him at her word after her very uncertain perioD
Tenderly the cliff embraced her in its hardened liP
Their mouths dragged them to their deathS
They'd roll a map in the enclosure yes they would yes they woulD Doubled spearing of cunt and cock wheelbarrowed well and silO

Alan-left-alone-in-speech offered remnants of his necK
Throat, toss that useless body in yon pile over therE Torn ligaments jutted in the proximity of metaphoric collapsE The therapeutic of the lie is the lie of the therapeutiC They'd burrowed in each other's assholes, drawn the wheel rounD They'd tongue each other's shitholes, drawn the wheel rounD Each dirtied for the other, caked faces, breasts, and wheelS Faced in ruby beauty death, his hands tied behind her bacK
Biting through nipples, spitting in face, biting through lipS
O cavernous love O emerald bone and filE O suicide O gnawed-blade hole O tourniquet punished by foaM

↑ Index

203. Rachel Levitsky

Re: avant ya-ya's

Mon 11 Aug 1997

David--thanks for the long, provocation. About a month ago, Mahate asked me what is a lesbian. Umm, my response: "some _one_ who commits sex in defiance of 'compulsory heterosexuality,' whose _main_ attraction is for the female body." In response to your question, I am personally more interested in the word as it aids in defying rigid constraints on sexuality than I am in hitting on women or keeping men away. Also important is community, if that's what you mean by few priviledges, though nothing was worse than small city pot lucks where it is assumed that you want to be around people simply because they are dykes! The variety of NYC a huge relief. Back to my definition, I am less interested in exluding unlike bodies, than I am in exluding those of unlike committment. Example, bi-sexuals who want to be in on the parade and have a June wedding to boot. Not that many homosexuals don't cream in their pants at the idea of a wedding but if we are on political ground, there is a hierarchy set up by the priviledging of marriage to heterosexual pairings. And political integrity would suggest you can't sit in both positions at once. I am interested in integrity. In Tokyo there is a group called Wanabes, females who live as males and work in clubs where they are solicited by straight women. One of the wanabes interviewed in the documentary I saw (_Shinjuku Boys_, Kim Longinotto, Jana Williams) lived in a partnership with a transexual born male living female, another wanabe had fallen in love with a client, a straight woman. Each couple seemed to be living their own category. One wanabe said "I've heard lesbians take off their clothes [in sex] but we wanabes don't like to do that" Maybe this is making no point but to say we are always redefining our terms. You ask, "what is the name for what we do?" and I'd say naming is what we do, and renaming in good anarchist form. I would say that 'making-strange' can be a claim to unity in terms of committment. As when M. Damon invokes the(I should say 'a', not all mid-westerners do this) mid-western meaning of the phrase "it's different" (or Bernstein "Difference or/differance:it's/the distinction between hauling junk and/removing rubbish, while/I needless not to say, take/out the garbage". And the flip side to the committment of 'making strange' would be translation, stretch, making communion, sorry for the slippage here. Perhaps there was more I wanted to say but ya, ya, enough, the mire widens! --Rachel

↑ Index

204. Robert Hale
the misery of poetry
Mon 11 Aug 1997

What Bataille calls "the misery of poetry" should inform why it is that we don't see too much actual poetry on the poetics list (see Literature and Evil). To turn unsatisfaction into a permanent object is a hefty job for the ephemeral e-mail, which renders language into deletable scripts. Do eyes scan the screen the same way that they read the page? And let's answer that by NOT getting into any banal cyber vs book space threads.

↑ Index

205. David Bromige
the return of george bowering/avant ga-ga's
Mon 11 Aug 1997

I for one welcome gb's return to the List from the sunshine shores of Sechelt, having missed his wicked wit & wide wisdom. The "consumer" poetry he heard there suggests another name for what one would write : inedible poetry. It has indelible built into it. I was also shored up by his use of the word "present," as in, I thought, "Present Poetry." For writing the present -- re cognizing existence in light of the forward edge of history, which _has_ an inescapable linearity -- surely is a common injunction, & cause for avoiding older baffles, technically speaking. (Those baffles which are precisely (or vaguely) what by gb's term extended, a "consumerist" audience, would recognize the poetic by). Inedible, indeible: I am thinking of those of Alan Jennifer Sondheim's poems which, while coming from a tradition that owes its durability to human nature, the poem of hopeless longing, do so in terms of a new technology, terms which often elude my understanding, but which feel fresh, which experience always is, until put into words. David

↑ Index

206. mark weiss
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Mon 11 Aug 1997

I've gritted my teeth and signed the things, but I think you miss the point by a few miles. These oaths are remnants of the red scares of the forties thru sixties. For many of us they bring back a painful and scary time. And they're not voluntary, unless you consider it voluntary to refuse employment. Constrained speech is a violation of free speech.

At 11:10 AM 8/10/97 -0400, you wrote:
>My question is, is there anything in those documents you disagree with?
>Would you choose not to uphold them? If so, signing would be a lie, right?
>Do those documents imply that you cannot teach that Zukofsky was a Marxist >or that his "an impulse to action" poem is cribbed out of Marxist texts, >or the showing of those texts, for instance. I think not.
>
>Personally, I took such an oath many years ago, and I meant every word of >it. Still do. Not waving a flag, just that I still have that oath.
>
>I can't stand flags or war, and these documents do try to resolve problems >in bargaining instead of war. I'd feel even better about it if we had >gotten the ERA passed, though. I just want to say that swearing to uphold >such things as free speech and freedom of the press does not mean you have >to agree with the current administration.
>
>Pete
>
>p. s. read them
>
>

↑ Index

207. George Bowering

Re: Words which make People Garbanzos.

Mon 11 Aug 1997

> yes, naif that i was, dewy-eyed young cantaloupe in the fruit medley of life, trembling boutonniere of moss rose in the lapel of a roue, i was taken in by you. but no more.

Eliza, I dont know what to say. Yes, at first it was my intention only to use you, but when I saw you dabbing at your eyes with that J-cloth, saw the eye-liner on the side of your nose, I was a doomed man. Is there any way I can persuade you that I am serious now? I'll give you back your watch.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

208. Hugh Steinberg
Re: Anne-Marie Albiach tribute in San Francisco
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Much like the gateau, I thought the tribute was most delicious. Being new to San Francisco, it was a pleasure to finally meet Kevin Killian in the flesh. I spent much of the reading in the second row writing, combining what I was hearing and thinking (I do this at most readings, though the choice of row varies, using the material in my own work). Anyhow, here's the poem I wrote from that evening.

Two poems after listening to Anne-Marie Albiach

1.

he discerns her portrait in the punctuation from her book. the type of energy found in a spiral on a page. response to different works. the excavation of a story. how it happened as an unfolding of leaves. as in spring or the manuscript as it becomes a book. she says pictures. photographs. points stretched in dark weight. like ink as it becomes words and punctuation. as a torch in the glass of night. a mime of absence. so it is in voice several times. which was written and revised until it no longer resembled speech. a fall or an answer. to repeat each symbolic body until they are numerous. white stars in the evening sky.

2.

to live in steps. by leaves in a book about to be printed. in the letters dead people write each spring. light gathers in memory where the pictures were lost. consider how he was reading. the hour of things. as equated values. in labor or goods created. to count like knuckles. words in fists. in muscles which rest. in the absence of threat night slips in. in the creation of darkness through petty acts and great machines. of broad and hopeless spaces. a promise which was discontinued. as it is all the same. ideas which erase their erasers. in time as it hurries. like a transistor between ghosts and he who is merciless.

Hugh Steinberg

> This is Kevin Killian. Today's the 60th birthday of the French poet Anne-Marie Albiach and last night here in San Francisco was the Albiach tribute organized by Dodie Bellamy and Small Press Traffic. I was there, in the theater space at New College, and I know you're all curious, how did it turn out?
>
> Successfully I think. OK there were a few glitches here and there. Kush the marvelous videographer failed to show up, and earlier in the week Small Press Traffic's office was rifled and the microphone stolen. However a tape recorder was available and thus Dodie can prove the event really did take place, documentation being "everything." Norma Cole began the evening by sketching out some of the salient turns in Albiach's career and showed us a double portrait. One photo was of the young Albiach in 1969, a glamor portrait a la George Hurrell on the occasion of the publication of "Etat." We were all struck by how much she (AMA) resembled the young Katherine Ross in Curtis Harrington's "Games." Then another kind of portrait, Jean Daive's imaginative portrait of AMA done solely through her punctuation. Cole then read from Albiach's "Gradiva," and read part of AMA's translation of Louis Zukoksky's "A"-9. Barbara Guest rose and read what sounded like a new poem, a "Reverie" for AMA. Benjamin Hollander combined parts of two previous essays to create an atmosphere, a theatrical atmosphere which effectively illustrated what he called the "nocturnal" aspect of Albiach's writing (and its effect on the reader). Michael Palmer read an essay reminiscing on visiting (or trying to pay a visit to) AMA in Paris, she wasn't home, so, he said, the absence of the non-encounter lived up to the highest expectations of both parties, and then he read "Five Easy Poems," dedicated to AMA. Mary Margaret Sloan spoke briefly on the influence AMA has had over the years on the work of North American woman poets, and read from AMA's book "Mezza Voce." Cole Swensen read from "'Vocative Figure.'" Then everyone turned to the cake, the "gateau," and tore that sucker to shreds (or crumbs, I suppose). There was much mingling, wine, and etc., if only Steve Carll were still on this list he could tell you all the names of the poets and artists who attended.

I thought it would be a case of preaching to the converted but there were many there who had apparently never heard of Albiach, and all the copies of "Mezza Voce" were quickly sold out, attesting to the event's success as, well, a kind of promotion for the glamorous, reclusive diva of Neuilly-sur-Seine. However not all were so easily persuaded and one famous poet afterwards was overheard murmuring that she still disliked Albiach's writing and what was all the fuss about anyhow. This made me think of Rachel Levitsky's post about when "the dominant obliterates the marginal, the dominant will always assert itself"though I can't piece out how it applies exactly.

Anyhow, thanks to all who worked on this event behind the scenes, in front of the podium, in the audience, and thanks to all the US and Canadian poets who signed the series of tacky Hallmark cards for AMA's birthday, which were delivered to her ahead of time and which stunned and surprised her and made her weep with this kind of absent French pleasure.

↑ Index

209. Rebecca Weldon
Yasusada
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Having read the Boston Review articles on Yasusada, I am saddened by the waste of excellent literary space and effort on this hoax rather than on scores of Asian poets who work in obscurity. Whatever cynical motive inspired the perpetrator, I hope it has been satisfied. I believe a point of dubious value was made and the issue should be allowed to rest.

↑ Index

210. David Bromige
imperialist bow-wows
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Kent's hypothesized fascist future reminded me that i wanted to post to the list the solution to the "flying-saucer" confusion.

There are no such creatures as space aliens (except us).

USAF technology has included, since shortly after WW 2, the ability to use the electro-magnetic field to suspend gravity. Flying machines that can hover in place, or go very fast in any direction, that are silent, and that carry weaponry of an electronic sort, highly sophisticated--can stall cars from a distance--do exist.

The flying saucer space alien myth has been fostered by the USAF at certain levels. To keep their technology secret. "Those arent our discs up there." Now the myth is firmly established, they deny their belief in it. Sound move.

And here's one possible application: "President Clinton today told the american people that space aliens who can render themselves invisible via their technology, now occupy the White House and have their space-weapons trained on 15 major american cities.

'The carnage would be one hundred times that of Hiroshima or Nagasaki,' the President declared, the gravity of his concern causing his voice to tremble.'From this moment on, I am obliged to carry out whatever orders these spacemen give me. I would be delinquent in my duty as your President, to do otherwise.

'First, you must labor for less. These space creatures understand finance and want to increase profits from industry of all kinds. Second, no one may speak against my Administration.' The President continued with a list of Alien demands, the text of which can be found on today's Page Three. There will be a substantially different format to our newspaper starting tomorrow."

as a footnote : this week's World News, along with the revelation of Elvis's sexual impotence & fondness for fondling fourteen-year-olds, carries the transcript of the last words (found on the Alien equivalent of a black box), translated from Alienese!, of the crew of the space craft doomed to crash at Roswell in 1947. I was interested to note that one of them cried "God forgive me for my sins!" while another gasped "We cant crash! My wife--my children--".

David

↑ Index

211. Layne Russell

Re: Anne-Marie Albiach tribute in San Francisco

Mon 11 Aug 1997

Hugh,

> Two poems after listening to Anne-Marie Albiach
>
> 1.
>
> he discerns her portrait in the punctuation from her book. the type of energy found in a spiral on a page. response to different works. the excavation of a story. how it happened as an unfolding of leaves. as in spring or the manuscript as it becomes a book. she says pictures. photographs. points stretched in dark weight. like ink as it becomes words and punctuation. as a torch in the glass of night. a mime of absence. so it is in voice several times. which was written and revised until it no longer resembled speech. a fall or an answer. to repeat each symbolic body until they are numerous. white stars in the evening sky.
>
> 2.
>
> to live in steps. by leaves in a book about to be printed. in the letters dead people write each spring. light gathers in memory where the pictures were lost. consider how he was reading. the hour of things. as equated values. in labor or goods created. to count like knuckles. words in fists. in muscles which rest. in the absence of threat night slips in. in the creation of darkness through petty acts and great machines. of broad and hopeless spaces. a promise which was discontinued. as it is all the same. ideas which erase their erasers. in time as it hurries. like a transistor between ghosts and he who is merciless.

I enjoyed this very much, wonderful stuff.

Layne

↑ Index

212. Layne Russell
Re: when you do your own policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Mark, fabulous. I loved your post. I nominate it for "best of the thread."

gratefully,

Layne Russell
Santa Rosa, CA (david bromige land)

↑ Index

213. Mark Prejsnar
Re: "avantgarde"
Mon 11 Aug 1997

On Fri, 8 Aug 1997, The Ultimate Autodidact wrote:

> Don't we all agree that it's a useless word? Some people form groups and

Unfortunately, not quite....You'd be surprised..Lots of casual statements, prefaces, essays etc. by people in the otherstream use A-G, tho' admittedly they use "experimental" and "innovative" a lot more..The problem being how to make clear to a reasonable range of folks what area of contemporary poetry practice one is talking about....A problem that still ain't been resoved, certainly not by me. I dislike a-g and experimental the most, but "innovative" makes me uneasy too..

Mark P.

↑ Index

214. Mark Prejsnar
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Robert A.--

The idea of using "alternative" is interesting..Not one I'd noticed, as my previous posts make clear..

I have a whole other set of problems with that, than I have with the A-G/experimental/innovative triad...

It seems to me that "alternative" primarily valorizes the mainstream. As writing by Susan Howe and Clark Coolidge is very important to me, and writing by (say) Stephen Dobyns and Tess Gallagher of almost no interest whatsoever, it seems weird and hopelessly confusing to call the more important work "alternative." One of these groupings has more institutional support thant the other (is more "acadominent," in fact); but that really doesn't make it "primary" and the other "alternative." Merely fatter, lazier and more overfed....

You should always use words in a way that reflects your own values and judgments, and in that respect it seems to me that Howe and Coolidge are primary, and many lionized mainstreamers a (very inadequate) alternative..

Mark P.
Atlanta

↑ Index

215. Mark Prejsnar
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Mon 11 Aug 1997

This is a real difficult one. Loyalty oaths....

No they NEVER went away, not ever, and they have hung on in many states. I've held about 5 major library jobs so far in my work-life; the only one where I was a full state employee (Cornell being a weird hybrid of state and private) was at the University of Michigan, my first after-college job. That was in 1978, and yup there sure was a loyalty oath just like this one you've quoted....

Needless to say such barbarism ought to fought in any way possible; the rest of the world sees these things (rightly) as an exceptionally insane instance of U.S. right-wing dementia....

But for most of us, refusing is not one of the ways possible. I signed, I hardly had any choice did I? I've always been working-class, and poor, and there weren't any other jobs available that were going to keep a roof over my head. During the next four years, I helped build the left in Michigan and at the U. of M. in many different ways, including working on a clericals organizing drive that came within a few votes of winning (in a situation where the UAW had been de-certified a few years before, and getting a union in was thought to be impossible..)

It seems to me you fight where you can, and where you can win. If you have the slightest chance of surviving while fighting the loyalty oath, by all means go for it....But I'm one life-long socialist who signed.

Mark P.
Atlanta

On Sat, 9 Aug 1997, charles alexander wrote:

> Dear Poetics:

I've just been hired to teach at the University of Arizona Extended University -- a course on small presses, and later this year, a creative writing class.

Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other states as well. Are you a Minnesota loyalist, Maria? or anyone else anywhere else? Some answer soon would be great, so I can weigh my options before I sign or don't sign. (and yes, I know, I should probably talk with a lawyer about this)

For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of oath of affirmation set forth in this section."

And that oath reads:

I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of _____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God (or, so I do affirm).

_____
(Signature of employee)

thanks,

charles

↑ Index

216. Maria Damon
Re: Yasusada
Mon 11 Aug 1997

At 3:00 PM +0700 8/11/97, Rebecca Weldon wrote: >Having read the Boston Review articles on Yasusada, I am saddened by the >waste of excellent literary space and effort on this hoax rather than on >scores of Asian poets who work in obscurity. Whatever cynical motive >inspired the perpetrator, I hope it has been satisfied. I believe a point >of dubious value was made and the issue should be allowed to rest.

amen

↑ Index

217. Maria Damon
Re: the misery of poetry
Mon 11 Aug 1997

At 10:31 PM -0700 8/10/97, Robert Hale wrote:
>What Bataille calls "the misery of poetry" should inform why it is that we >don't see too much actual poetry on the poetics list (see Literature and >Evil). To turn unsatisfaction into a permanent object is a hefty job for the >ephemeral e-mail, which renders language into deletable scripts. Do eyes >scan the screen the same way that they read the page? And let's answer that >by NOT getting into any banal cyber vs book space threads.

i can't help a little whining here: speaking of banal cyber/book threads...i've been applying to the MN humanities commission for some $ for our conference, and aftre having handed in a first draft was sent a model, grant-winning application as a paradigm to follow. guess what it was about, yes, "in this day of cyber etc what is the status of poetry, let's get galway kinnell to remind us that poetry is a great holdout against electronic etc..." oh well.

↑ Index

218. dbkk
Assistance requested
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Hello everyone on Poetics List, this is Kevin Killian. Please help me if you can! In connection with my upcoming biography of Jack Spicer, I have to secure permission to reprint unpublished material by the following writers:

Alfred Bester, e.e. cummings, Denise Levertov, Dorothy Livesay, Robert Lowell, Marianne Moore, Frank O'Hara.

Can anyone clue me in about, what are the names and addresses of the literary executors of these estates?

Some of you must have had similar problems, how did you handle them? Please back channel me, I don't know who else to turn to, had no idea modernism was so difficult! Thanks---

Kevin K.

↑ Index

219. James Finnegan
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Mon 11 Aug 1997

In a message dated 97-08-11 02:42:58 EDT, you write:

> what do you think about publishing earlier versions of poems in order to show and understand the process of writing? I keep wanting to do that with RWC magazine and the poets are too fastidious to oblige me

Very worthwhile for other writers and writing students. Extremely useful for critics and scholars. Readers, if a litmag/book/website has these beyond a population of other writers and literati, may be less taken with this enterprise.

Obviously my assertion (re experimental) is flawed in that it's biased toward "the end product." If a writer cares not a wit for "the done-thing," then all his/her writing may be "experimental" to some degree. Though the word will always carry with it a connotation of moving toward some endpoint-- yes/no, success/failure. (What is the right word to describe writing that's not vested in any qualitative endpoint? Playful, random--most descriptives seem too light or dismissive.) When the writing stops, as it must somewhere/time, even if this end occurs only upon the writer's death, or though a work is published as an "experiment" or "from Work In Progress," there is this tendency to assess and to judge.

Finnegan

↑ Index

220. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: the misery of poetry
Mon 11 Aug 1997

maria, that really IS banal...

mebbe some of the more acclaimed poets out there who rail against emedia should spend a little time getting their feet wet in same (not that the radio or tv, say, are UNelectronic devices---i think some may have forgotten that these items are plugged in too)... personally, i think the resistance given voice to (by nobel-laureate poets, for example) to things electronic reflects their having intuited that the earth is moving under their feet...

best,

joe

↑ Index

221. James Finnegan
Re: The Otherstream
Mon 11 Aug 1997

In a message dated 97-08-10 13:24:43 EDT, Bob wrote:

> both Slam Poetry and Language Writing are > KNOWNSTREAM, the opposite of otherstream because they, or poetry in all > essential respects identical to it in the case of Slam Poetry, are in > the establishment press anthologies. Slam Poetry is probably mainstream > (a substream of knownstream) as well; Language Writing is not.

I stand corrected in misapplication of your "otherstream." But I must now correct you on the point that Slam Poetry is mainstream. Having sat thru the four hour '97 Slam National Finals last night, I can tell you there was nothing like a Merwin, Rich, Ashbery, Gluck, Tate, et al, in the house. There was much loud & light verse, the sentimental & the insentient, the raucous & rimed, the goodspirited and godforsaken, the crude & the cute. All in all, despite a numbing length akin to the Academy Awards ceremony, it was a great show. One could argue abt the literary quality of some of the poems (scripts), but the performance level was firstrate.

Slam, as I said, is not "avant-garde" in terms of writing. However, Slam is nothing one could/should mistake for contemporary mainstream poetry.

BTW, The Boogie Man from Cleveland OH won the Individual '97 National Slam Championship, with D.J. Renegage of Washington DC runner up.

The Team Championship was won by Mouth Almighty (Taylor Mali, Beau Sia, Reggie Cabico, and Evert Eden); best of the 36 competing teams. Los Angeles was second, Cleveland third.

Incidentally, Henry Taylor, Pulitzer Prize winning poet for his book The Flying Change, did enter as an individual. He didn't even make it to the semi-final round.

Finnegan

↑ Index

222. Michael Coffey Derrida and Language Writing -Reply
Mon 11 Aug 1997

dear ira:

i wrote an essay about 10 years ago comparing Steve McCaffery's notion of "General Economy" to JD's theory of writing (grammatology); it was published in the toronto-based Open Letter issue devoted to Steve's work. This piece centered less on the textual comparison's between the two in favor a comparison of theoretical positions. As i recall it, mccaffery's privileging (yup, that's the word i used) of the "excess," the "waste" in a general economy of language and jd's interest in what is contained in the differance that rides above actual langauge.

i have a copy at home that i can fax to you if you are intersested.

>>> Ira Lightman <[redacted]> 08/11/97 11:37am >>>
Hi folks

Is anyone out there working on links and comparisons between the textual practices/compositions of Derrida and any of the Language Writers?

↑ Index

223. charles alexander
Re: "avantgarde"
Mon 11 Aug 1997

> Unfortunately, not quite....You'd be surprised..Lots of casual statements, prefaces, essays etc. by people in the otherstream use A-G, tho' admittedly they use "experimental" and "innovative" a lot more..The problem being how to make clear to a reasonable range of folks what area of contemporary poetry practice one is talking about....A problem that still ain't been resoved, certainly not by me.

I don't quite know who your "reasonable range" might include, but what you propose, making CLEAR to people who will not automatically know about the variety of practices out there, what it is one is talking about -- is admirable, is a constant challenge, and is damn near impossible. This is a challenge for all the presses here which write grant proposals, as often, particularly on local panels, we are judged by people who have a very limited sense of the poetry out there -- they are likely to know something about Allen Ginsberg, Gary Snyder, Maya Angelou, perhaps a few local writers, a smattering of pre-1950's poetry (Frost, Sandburg, some Victorian, some Romantic, back to Shakespeare), and not a lot more. How to describe "otherstream" or "language" or "post-objectivist" or other such poetries to these people (and these are people who by and large are open and want to understand; and they may also be taken to stand for numerous folks we'd like to get to buy our books and come to our readings), to describe in a way that they know what such poetries are and what they are not, yet without requiring them to read more than a few paragraphs of narrative and perhaps a page of examples, is a fairly amazing task. I don't know anyone who has mastered it.

charles

↑ Index

224. john_lavagnino
Re: Assistance requested
Mon 11 Aug 1997

| Can anyone clue me in about, what are the names and addresses of the | literary executors of these estates?

Take a look at

http://www.lib.utexas.edu/Libs/HRC/WATCH/which is the web site for the "Writers and Their Copyright Holders" directory at the U of Texas library.

John

↑ Index

225. charles alexander
Re: the misery of poetry
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Oooh, Maria . . . this is an attitude I find all the time in the book arts, where artists and audience want to see the arts of making books by hand as opposed to the technological/information age -- holding up the value of work made by hand over the value of work made by machine, or virtual stuff, etc. It's really an unimaginative attitude, to me insulting to work which might fall on either side of an opposition which is false and harmful.

and yes, I think I even heard, sometime last week, someone quote that phrase about poetry as a "momentary stay against confusion." confusion, of course, being basically anything the person who says such a phrase doesn't like.

charles

> "in this day of cyber etc what is the status of poetry, let's get galway kinnell to remind us that poetry is a great holdout against electronic etc..." oh well.

↑ Index

226. Jordan Davis
Comfort levels for solicitation and submission
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Rob --

It's self-protecting, the urge not to post poems the people who don't post poems feel. Do poems feel this way? Texture farming. Miracle gro. The environment rejects "the last best offer".

What's more amazing to me though is the policing of what's permissible in these not-poems. And the will to clarity here. Why not drop the team names and go out and play? Because it's big business, complete with free agents, concession stands, licensing deals. Suggestion for new name for avant-garde poetry: poetry.

All you need is love,
Jordan

PS What is meant by the term "dualism"?

↑ Index

227. KENT JOHNSON
Coolidge
Mon 11 Aug 1997

In a post the other day, someone referred to Clark Coolidge in the past tense. Is Clark Coolidge no longer with us? Information appreciated. thanks, Kent

↑ Index

228. Tenney Nathanson
dum Foucault question
Mon 11 Aug 1997

can anyone tell me where to find the famous but to me forever fugitive site in Foucault where he invents the utopique/atopique heterotopia thing?

thanks

tenney

---

tenney nathanson

[redacted]

http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/

↑ Index

229. Karen and Trevor
Re: email address inquiry
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Actually, I would like Elizabeth Robinson's email or mail address regarding a magazine also. Can anyone backchannel twice?

Karen McKevitt
[redacted]

Peter Ganick wrote:
>
> hi buffalo listmembers---- > back after a while-----
> an announcement soon regarding potes & poets
> and the zines/texts soon-----
> but for now, i urgently need the email and/or > snailmail address and/or telephone number
> of elizabeth robinson----- > she's due for an issue of a.bacus and i've > misplaced her text----- > anyone can backchannel would be appreciated-----
> out-----
> peter ganick

↑ Index

230. Ira Lightman
Derrida and Language Writing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Hi folks

Is anyone out there working on links and comparisons
between the textual practices/compositions of Derrida and any of the Language Writers? Does anyone find one or the other a more austere or less representational or more representational or less austere practice? Derrida can seem to me to be stylistically close to Stein, although he more obviously pins his colours to Genet. Is anyone doing working or thinking on Derrida as a writer, the way we have recently been discussing Clark Coolidge as a writer? The way a writing experiment/ opening out a pun for example / opens up a terrain? Does anyone feel as I do the desire to rescue Derrida from those who want to snip up his works into critical terms (deconstruction, differance, erasure) which they then re-plant in much more conventional dull prose? (This is his complaint in Glas, of how Sartre wants to pick the flowers out of Genet's work and ignore Genet's composting and tending of the land). Does anyone enjoy Derrida as a writer, as much as they enjoy a Language Writer as a writer?

Best

Ira Lightman
to open

↑ Index

231. LYNES- KATHERINE
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Mon 11 Aug 1997

---

we here in new jersey are asked to do the same thing, and have the document notarized [spelling? too hurried to check]... we "may" cross out the words "so help me god" and "swear" and write in the word "affirm." i don't have it right in front of me, but it is similar to what charles alexander posted.... though, i don't remember the "defend against enemy" part being in the new jersey document... i'm not sure about withholding of money etc. if we don't sign, but as an incredibly poor student, pathetic as it may be, i can't afford to find out.

kl

charles alexander wrote:

> Today I received in the mail, among other contract materials, a "loyalty > oath" to sign. I had thought these were a thing of the past. And I thought > maybe people on this list could advise me -- have others here had to sign
> such things, has anybody refused, is this only an Arizona conservate thing, > or ??? Particularly, anyone on this list in Arizona -- have you had to sign > such a thing, or have you refused to sign such a thing, and what if any > were the consequences? But I'm interested if this is required in other > states as well

snip.

> For the record, apprently they would withhold compensation "unless and until such officer or employee does so take and subscribe to the form of oath of affirmation set forth in this section."
>
> And that oath reads:
>
> I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of _____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God (or, so I do affirm).
>
> _____
> (Signature of employee)
>
> thanks,
>
> charles

↑ Index

232. Daniel Bouchard
Directions to Mass Ave.
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Delighted to announce publication of the third issue of MASS AVE.

The featured poets:

Michael Angelo Tata
Andrew Levy
Sherry Brennan
Kyle Conner
Jennifer Moxley
Fred Muratori
Kary Wayson
Robert Fitterman
Ethel Rackin

Kim Bernstein
Juliana Spahr

57 pages, perfect bound. $6 postage paid.

Also, the Second Issue is still available; featuring

Valerie Hanson
Lisa Jarnot
Marcella Durand
Eileen Corder
Anselm Berrigan
Nava Fader
Larry Price
Dan Luft
Douglas Rothschild
Mary Burger
Drew Gardner
Dave Baptiste Chirot
Daniel Bouchard
Kevin Varrone
WB Keckler
Kim Lyons

56 pages, perfect bound. $6 postage paid.

Get BOTH issues for the bargain price of $10.

Daniel Bouchard
Mass Ave.
PO Box 230
Boston, MA 02117

Thank you. You're beautiful.

[redacted]

↑ Index

233. Herb Levy
Difficult Modernism (wasRe: Assistance requested)
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Uh, Denise Levertov is probably still in charge of her own estate, as she's not dead yet. When I'm back in Seattle tonight I'll check to see if she's listed in the phone book (though someone else on the list may have a way to contact her).

> Hello everyone on Poetics List, this is Kevin Killian. Please help me if you can! In connection with my upcoming biography of Jack Spicer, I have > to secure permission to reprint unpublished material by the following writers:

>
> Alfred Bester, e.e. cummings, Denise Levertov, Dorothy Livesay, Robert Lowell, Marianne Moore, Frank O'Hara.
>
> Can anyone clue me in about, what are the names and addresses of the literary executors of these estates?
>
> Some of you must have had similar problems, how did you handle them? Please back channel me, I don't know who else to turn to, had no idea modernism was so difficult! Thanks---
>
> Kevin K.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

234. Mark Wallace
when you do your own policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

I'm arriving a little late on this one, but I want to second lb drake's response to Maria Damon's several questions about policing in the avant garde.

I must confess to great boredom over the struggle to define the meaning of the term "avant garde." I think of Wittgenstein: "isn't the value of a word precisely in the looseness of its definition?" The value of avant garde as a term is what the term can be turned to mean by those various groups and individuals interested in using it or getting rid of it, a meaning that CANNOT be final as long as anyone thinks redefinitions of it (or even old definitions of it) can be made to seem worthwhile to them in whatever they're doing. Make it seem something interesting, or not--it's your word if you want it.

But the problem, I feel, especially with the second of Maria's posts is that there is a fairly intense confusion of contexts of disciplinary power. I certainly understand that Maria's comments were not meant as final conclusions, but as queries. So I don't want my comments to be seen as criticisms so much of her as of these particular comments, because I think these comments reflect positions that are, in fact, dangerously common.

Maria asks whether the avant garde polices its borders? And people respond "well what is the avant garde?" and people respond, as I would, well sometimes yes and sometimes no, it depends on the context, the publication, the personalities, etc. But then she offers, AS AN EXAMPLE OF AVANT GARDE

POLICING, TWO EXAMPLES OF THE AVANT GARDE BEING POLICED BY INDIVIDUALS WITH RESPONSIBILITY FOR ACADEMIC PUBLICATIONS. The confusion is important, because I think there's something significant at stake.

I find, in the details of these examples, a number of interesting problems. What does academic "cultural studies" have to do with avant garde writing practices? Why is there no mention of whether she tried publishing her piece on young urban black poets in contexts other than officially sanctioned academic projects? To whom does any value accrue if an article on young black urban poets is published in an academic collection? To speak most broadly, I'm concerned here that there is a large gap between what Maria's comments suggest is at stake ("the avant garde police") in her experiences, and what else, unmentioned, also seems at stake in those experiences.

I find it hard to make my own use of the term "avant garde" flexible enough to include an academic critic with a self-described focus in "cultural studies" who decides to do a book "on a relatively traditional sense of avant garde" as in any sense BEING avant garde. But in any case, it seems clear that the "policing" context to which Maria refers is the policing of the ACADEMIC context, with whatever relation to avant garde practices. And the question for me then becomes "well how is it possible that someone can have their essay turned down by an editor in the academic marketplace and then decide that the fault might lie with avant garde writers," writers who for all I know HAVE NO WRITING APPEARING in the collections Maria mentions.

Besides, are we really sure that magazines like CHAIN, TALISMAN, WITZ and others would have no interest in publishing Maria's more "daring" piece? Have they even been tried? And I can't help thinking that the problem REALLY is that they haven't been tried because publishing an essay in a magazine like that does NOT forward anybody's academic career, so that perhaps it never occured to Maria that there would be any "value" in publishing there in the first place. And if that is an assumption about her concerns that I CANNOT make, at least I can ask her to try those publications because the academic "value" of publishing her piece is NOT the point--the point is having the piece published in a place where it will be read.

I think I wouldn't be spending so much time on this subject if it didn't seem to me at the heart of a problem that seems to haunt this list of late. That problem is this: WHAT IS THE RELATION BETWEEN ACADEMIC PRACTICE AND THE VARIOUS TYPES OF "INNOVATIVE" WRITING PRACTICES THAT WE MAY OR MAY NOT WANT TO LABEL "AVANT GARDE"? And I feel, in fact, that I'm still seeing a great deal of confusion on the subject.

I take the following to be my two basic assumptions: 1) We live in a disciplinary society whose REAL operations of power work from the top on down, but which also work often because of the unwitting participation of those who might be opposed to such operations if they knew they were involved in them. 2) That one of the main problems of a discplinary society (others too I suppose, but I've never been in them) is that THE SELF-INTEREST OF INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS IN THAT DISCIPLINARY SOCIETY OFTEN BLINDS THEM TO THE CONTRADICTIONS OF THEIR OWN POSITION IN THAT SOCIETY.

Pierre Bourdieu, as many of you certainly know, has in a book like HOMO ACADEMICUS already made it clear that institutional criticism of any kind can ONLY have value when the institutional critic has accurately diagnosed his or her position in the institutional framework. If you don't know who you are, then you can't know other people.

In looking at a number of ideas floating around the list lately, it seems to me that one of the problems that comes from insufficient awareness about one's own social position is THE TENDENCY TO BLAME THE PERSON WHOM YOU PERCEIVE AS ONE STEP ABOVE YOU IN THE SYSTEM, accompanied by an exaggerated sense of that person's power which goes hand in hand with an ignoring of the larger framework. In her post (again, which I don't take as her final position) Maria blames an academic editor, who she misconstrues as "avant garde," but never addresses the contradictions of her own existence in the academic context. But there have been other recent examples: language poets are "academically dominant" because a FEW of them have more academic authority than other poets, and a some of them have made it into anthologies that other people have NOT made it into. A real advantage? Well, perhaps yes, assuming that more than a few people in an academic system of some thousands teach such work at all. But isn't there someone higher up to take on than the 100 people in academic positions who just might have potential affinity with what you do?

There are a myriad of possible takes on whether "avant garde" activity can have any real place in the (currently disciplinary and standardizing) environment of the literary academy. I take recent writing by Tom Mandel and Ron Silliman to be saying no, such a place is not possible at all. Because I like teaching, and because someone has to teach people about poetry at some point, and because I'd rather it be me than, say, J.D. McClatchey, I think some intervention is possible, especially on the level of teaching. When it comes to academic publishing, the question seems whether publishing in the standardized form of the academic marketplace can further the concerns of "avant garde" writing and writers? I'm tempted to say no, but also tempted to say that, at times, a few standard academic articles and books pointing in the direction of less standardized work may help bring attention to such poetries.

OF COURSE avant garde writers do some level of policing; the U.S. is a country in which, with the occasional exception, the only way to make a living at all is to police somebody. If you've got a way out of that, great. If like Maria, you probably don't, perhaps the best you can do is IN THE ACT OF POLICING TO MAKE IT EXPLICIT THAT YOU ARE POLICING AND IN SO DOING CALL YOUR OWN POLICING INTO QUESTION, AND BE CLEAR AT ALL TIMES THAT YOU LIVE IN A SOCIETY WHICH IS FORCING YOU TO POLICE. Perhaps you would not be policing otherwise, right? I mean, who knows? In another place, Maria might be able to write the way she wants to write, on the subjects she wants to write about, and be granted the right to make a living simultaneously. And so would everybody else, whether they thought of themselves as critics, poets, or whatever. What a cool concept!--too bad it's not in the works.

But until then, constant vigilance about one's own positioning in the disciplinary framework seems to me crucial to saying anything about poetry or anything else.

Speaking to you, currently, as an adjunct who publishes books of poetry and articles in non-academically authorized journals and who still thinks he can do a better job teaching than most of the academic critics who get better teaching jobs because they publish in academic journals (present company all excluded, of course), and who also, sometimes, tries to publish critical pieces about innovative writing in academic journals but usually fails because he either doesn't want to do it the right way, or can't, or just hasn't figured out how best the problem can be solved, save by getting other people to change their minds--

Mark Wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

235. mark weiss
Re: the misery of poetry
Mon 11 Aug 1997

An extreme example: I'm translating a Cuban poet who has just moved to Spain after 30 years' residence in NY. Email would make my life a lot easier, but this otherwise normal and pleasant man doesn't believe in typewriters, let alone computers.

At 09:56 AM 8/11/97 -0500, you wrote:
>maria, that really IS banal...
>
>mebbe some of the more acclaimed poets out there who rail against emedia >should spend a little time getting their feet wet in same (not that the >radio or tv, say, are UNelectronic devices---i think some may have >forgotten that these items are plugged in too)... personally, i think the >resistance given voice to (by nobel-laureate poets, for example) to things >electronic reflects their having intuited that the earth is moving >under their feet...
>
>best,
>
>joe
>
>

↑ Index

236. mark weiss
Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"
Mon 11 Aug 1997

That "mainstream" stuff--I tend to shorthand it as "New Yorker Poetry" or "Iowa School." Not completely accurate, but you get the idea.

At 08:17 AM 8/11/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Robert A.--
>
>The idea of using "alternative" is interesting..Not one I'd noticed, as my >previous posts make clear..
>
>I have a whole other set of problems with that, than I have with the
>A-G/experimental/innovative triad...
>
>It seems to me that "alternative" primarily valorizes the mainstream. As >writing by Susan Howe and Clark Coolidge is very important to me, and >writing by (say) Stephen Dobyns and Tess Gallagher of almost no interest >whatsoever, it seems weird and hopelessly confusing to call the more >important work "alternative." One of these groupings has more >institutional support thant the other (is more "acadominent," in fact);
>but that really doesn't make it "primary" and the other "alternative."
>Merely fatter, lazier and more overfed....
>

>You should always use words in a way that reflects your own values and >judgments, and in that respect it seems to me that Howe and Coolidge are >primary, and many lionized mainstreamers a (very inadequate) alternative..
>
>Mark P.
>Atlanta
>
>

↑ Index

237. Hank Lazer

Re: new e-mail address

Mon 11 Aug 1997

---

for George Hartley, who asked me to alert the Poetics List:

[redacted]

↑ Index

238. Akitoshi Nagahata

Re: Yasusada's existence

Mon 11 Aug 1997

>By the way, the Asahi Shimbun article I mentioned did not appear on August 6, as I was informed it would. I'll send a note if and when it does, as there is an English language edition of the Asahi and they have a web-site. Don't know if it will appear in English too, but will post address if so.
in rear-garde spirit,
Kent

The yasusada article appeared in the Asahi (the evening edition) on August 9th, under an article about the memorial ceremony for the Nagasaki bombing with a picture of elederly Japanese Christians praying in the church. (You can see the picture in the web version of the Asahi.) I don't know if the yasusada article will be published in English.

Akitoshi Nagahata

↑ Index

239. Rachel Levitsky
*Re: "*alternative*avant-garde"*
Mon 11 Aug 1997

James--I think that publishing drafts, experimentations is an excellent idea and only boring for reader when it is impossible to read or make sense of. Ther are some examples. Lungful Magazine(Brendan Lorber), I believe, has this as part of the format. Audre Lorde published revised editions of poems that had already been published in the volume _Undersong_--which is an experiment that includes the reader. Especially as folks who are experimenting form, the question of how we arrive is highly pertinent, and when it's finished does it really feel finished, or to quote someone I'm not sure who, temporarily abandoned. Personally, I've seen finished poems become very different vis a vis size, form, shape--especially if I give them enough time.

Here's one that is half the size of it's original, which was read and submitted in it's original form and still changing it's form:

Dream Vagueries

Dreams pass leaving their subject floods, daddy warbucks, Victoria Lake, occasional colors: stolen ivory (far away fragile arms hold & rock) almond joy (breakfasted nipples, omelettes _and_ french toast) yellow moon (loose shattered screams screams

)
baby blue sweat (tautwhitemound/you fit) soft charcoal (shadows form of two, then -1-tangerine addiction (you, my tart)

###
thanks for your comments--rachel

↑ Index

240. Layne Russell
Re: Ironies of Policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Kent Johnson remarked:

> Now will David Bromige please jump in and say something funny so we can all be friends again?
> Kent

David was busy tonight giving a reading with Dan Featherston of Tuscon...a cozy, intimate affair in the back room of a Santa Rosa coffee house called Higher Grounds, home of the Russian River Writers Guild readings for some time. (David read some wonders retrieved from email and lists...and some of his poetry of course. Both David and Dan gave us a very good night.)

Layne

↑ Index

241. Layne Russell
Re: poem lost & found
Mon 11 Aug 1997

---

loved it!

Layne

↑ Index

242. George Thompson
Re: when you do your own policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

I agree with Layne Russell that Mark Wallace's recent posting was a gem. It prompts me to make two small points, not quite related to his, that I hope may be relevant anyway:

First, 'professionally speaking', I myself work in the intellectual backwater otherwise known as "Vedic studies" -- rooted in 19th cent. philology, comparative linguistics, etc. -- way out of date. Vedicists are probably even more conservative than your standard average Classicist doing Greek or Latin [really!]. So what could we have to say about the avant garde?

Well, an interesting observation was made quite a while ago by a French Vedicist [one of the best ever], Louis Renou. In an overview of the state of the art, circa the 50's, he suggested that the notoriously obscure & often unintelligible poetry of the Rigveda had been made somewhat more accessible as a result of our increasing familiarity with avant garde poetries of the 20th century! His point was that such poetries had somehow managed to loosen the grip of classical Euro- syntax and logic on our minds so that we had become more capable of hearing the very old again on its own terms, instead of trying to read it according to our own logic.

Another Sanskritist once commented, after reading Renou's translations of the Rigveda into French, that they reminded him of Cocteau's film _Orpheus_ [I think the film has been mentioned on the list recently?], in which that arch-poet Orpheus receives poetic transmissions over a car radio: Renou's translations seemed to him like a similar sort of weird 'transmission.'

Whatever the avant garde is, this seems to me to be one of its important functions.

Second, 'speaking professionally' again, I teach one of those standard "intro. to world lit" courses, but since this one is targeted at art school students I've had the opportunity to dwell on terms like "modernism", "post-modernism", and yes "avant-garde". My experience is that students are not very familiar with such terms and they need very basic help with them.

I have to confess that I tend to characterize the notion 'avant garde' as a 'modernist' notion, rather than a 'post-modernist' one. That is, I suggest to my students that the notion 'avant garde' is rooted in a particular historical period, and I ask them: do you relate to this notion? And they tend to say 'no way -- it's arrogant bullshit!!' My students tend to be post-post-modernist.

Have I been misinforming my students?

George

↑ Index

243. KENT JOHNSON
Ironies of Policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

On 8/11, Rebecca Weldon wrote:

> Having read the Boston Review articles on Yasusada, I am saddened by the waste of excellent literary space and effort on this hoax rather than on scores of Asian poets who work in obscurity.

And on 8/11 Maria Damon added:
>amen

I am saddened by this waste of excellent literary space on the Buffalo Poetics discussion list. Surely Rebecca Weldon and her respondent in the pew could have devoted themselves instead to writing a review of the scores of Asian poets who work in obscurity.

Kent

↑ Index

244. charles alexander
Re: Ironies of Policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

I am wasting more space -- but this response seems small to me. If you don't like Rebecca and Maria presenting a different point of view, Kent, say so and say why -- but please don't resort to what seems like a nasty defensiveness. Most people here obviously are interested in the Yasusada affair, as it's remained a topic of the list off and on for quite some time. But those who wish it wasn't such a topic, I think, should be welcome to say so. It doesn't sound like preaching to me, despite the amen.

charles

> I am saddened by this waste of excellent literary space on the Buffalo Poetics discussion list. Surely Rebecca Weldon and her respondent in the pew could have devoted themselves instead to writing a review of the scores of Asian poets who work in obscurity.
>
> Kent

↑ Index

245. Gwyn McVay
Re: Ironies of Policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

Charles,

The pre-pub version of my forthcoming chapbook is at:

http://pgpress.stmarytx.edu/pecangrove/author/natural.html

and if the server weren't temporarily skitzy, I could even supply the URL for my favorite cover design...

bests
Gwyn

↑ Index

246. KENT JOHNSON
Re: Ironies of Policing
Mon 11 Aug 1997

But Charles, I didn't say I objected to Maria and Rebecca presenting their point of view. Not at all! What I was responding to is their policing call to close down discussion on a topic which, I agree, is obviously of great interest to poets on this list and well beyond. Of course Maria and Rebecca are free to call for silence around anything they want, but I can point out too, can't I, that such a call is silly in the extreme, and thick with unintended irony, given Maria's own comments the other day about the "avant-garde" openly and subliminally policing its borders. And after all, since no one else felt the need to answer these censorial gestures, well... I mean, you can hardly blame me for speaking up!

Now will David Bromige please jump in and say something funny so we can all be friends again?
Kent
> I am wasting more space -- but this response seems small to me. If you > don't like Rebecca and Maria presenting a different point of view, Kent, > say so and say why -- but please don't resort to what seems like a nasty > defensiveness. Most people here obviously are interested in the Yasusada > affair, as it's remained a topic of the list off and on for quite some > time. But those who wish it wasn't such a topic, I think, should be welcome > to say so. It doesn't sound like preaching to me, despite the amen.
>
> charles
>
> >
> >I am saddened by this waste of excellent literary space on the > >Buffalo Poetics discussion list. Surely Rebecca Weldon and her > >respondent in the pew could have devoted themselves instead > >to writing a review of the scores of Asian poets who work in > >obscurity.
> >
> >Kent
> >
> >
>

↑ Index

247. Alan Jen Sondheim
Rewrite of "Any City"
Mon 11 Aug 1997

-

Rewrite of Louis Untermeyer's, "Any City" (The Masses, July 1913)

Any City

Down each shuddered thoroughfare,
She takes her nightly walk;
Exhausted, she is hardly there -
They watch her like a hawk.

She transforms into thing of flesh,
Despised by men - desired;
Those selfsame men who would enmesh
Her soul, have nothing sired.

No female grace or charm or wile,
No beauty, sense of power;
She offers a pathetic smile
That lasts a useless hour.

The street has seen her come, and go;
It offers nothing real,
And she is hard, and won't forgo
Diamonds, wine, a meal.

Like Sleazy, she's a walkabout,
A cutup who's been cut -
Don't waste your time, don't twist and shout,
She's really in a rut.

She's twenty-threed, she's skidooed too,
She's got it, oh you kid,
The lies, the thefts, she's in a stew -
Take pity, smoke a lid.

↑ Index

248. charles alexander policing the irons
Mon 11 Aug 1997

policing policing

thanks kent for clarifying

let's not call for silence, agreed

& we can still be friends, in this place of disorderly and virtual virtue

charles

↑ Index

249. Tom Orange publishing drafts
Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

after publishing his poem entitled "le pre" ("the meadow"), francis ponge collected all the manuscripts containing drafts and notes, published them as a book called the "fabrique du 'pre'." english translation by lee fahnestock, u of missouri press 1978.

a school of genetic criticism or critique genetique emerging out of france has been getting some notice lately (see /yale french studies/ 89, 1996, special issue called "drafts," esp. laurent jenny's overview "genetic criticism and its myths"). from a compositional standpoint the stuff can be pretty fascinating and also show what we can really learn from, say, joyce's finnegans wake notebooks. or michelle leggot's book on zukofsky's /80 flowers/.

t.

↑ Index

250. The Ultimate Autodidact
I am a running dog haha
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Just to keep it related to poetry...

militarism progressing westward im Westen nichts neues and the Constitution in jeopardy and that state of things not very new either

Pound, from Canto LXXIV

this guy thinks I'm an imperialist's running dog. What to do but laugh? The question was asked if someone should sign that they swear to uphold the Constitution in order to get a teaching job in a public college. The course will be about the small press, so I imagine he will get to use his First Amendment rights even as he teaches and I said yes, sign.

FWIW, I swore such an oath with my hand in the air.

> Pete Landers: Let's say just hypothetically that twenty years from now after a few years of deep economic crisis and U.S troops completely bogged down in the Amazon in Brazil that there is discontent all over the place and the UPS workers start a strike and its 1968 France all over again only this time there's an upstart socialist leadership in the U.S. labor movement which is class conscious and really pissed off and calls for nationwide strikes with the idea that the country has been run for the past two hundred and forty years largely for the pleasures of capital and there's no need for that to go on any longer and let's cut they say the military budget by nine-tenths and a big part of U.S. labor responds and then in a panic a purportedly liberal Democratic Party administration suspends habeus corpus and the constitution

sic!

> and avant-garde poetry and everything else and declares martial law outlawing all public activity by enemies of the United States foreign or domestic. What say you Pete Landers about that loyalty contract you meant every word of three decades back? Would you turn in the elderly poet Charles Alexander if you suspected he was a friend of the radical and national-security-threatening AFL-CIO? Would you still uphold his right to freedom of speech? Even his right to violate his loyalty oath in defense of freedom of speech and the press (I'm talking for example about Charles Alexander standing in front of a crowd of angry U of Arizona students and urging them to defy government instituted martial law)?

I will defend the Constitution, if you want. Not here. I think it's a good document on which to base a government, especially when you add in those amendments. I think it would be hard to put through today. The first ten amendments, for instance, would never be accepted by the voters in present day America.

Pete

p.s. dear list, sorry. I have to answer a few of these at least once, but it's not poetic...

↑ Index

251. jdhollo

Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Aug 1997 to 11 Aug 1997

Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

last two digests I've got "download aborted" message what does this mean?
AH

↑ Index

252. David R. Israel poem lost & found
Tue 12 Aug 1997

[was, subject: Re: the misery of poetry]

Robert Hale at the origin / dice it splice it at the controls

/ / / / /

> What Bataille calls "the misery of poetry" should inform why it is why it is should inform what Bataille calls "the misery of poetry" should inform what Bataille calls why it is inform why it is why

> that we don't see too much actual poetry on the poetics list (see poetry & poetcs there is a list too much actual poetry of the actual actual of the poetry too much of nothing

eight days a week

> Literature and Evil). To turn unsatisfaction into a permanent object to turn unsatisfaction

into a permament object to turn a permanent object into unsatisfaction

to turn permanent satisfaction into an unobject

to turn permanent objection into an action

to turn unsatisfaction
into a permanent

to turn un sat

can't get n

> is a hefty job for the ephemeral e-mail, which renders language into deletable scripts.

deletion as definition
the trash that you throw out could be your own

> Do eyes scan the screen the same way that they read the page?

this is not the real world of the book the back is illumined, the words are dark there is no page to turn -- hence trans formation loses its handy metaphor

> And let's answer that by NOT getting into any banal cyber vs book space threads.

the banal is mundane or am I becoming kim dawn actually?
let's answer that not by let's answer that by not let's not answer that by let's not by that answer
let's not get into any banl stuff let's get into any not banal stuff let's get into banal stuff -- not let's get banal baby

d.i.

↑ Index

253. The Ultimate Autodidact

Chêng Ming = right name

Tue 12 Aug 1997

Ms. henry says,
> Pete Landers has done something rather astonishing here. I'm not > sure what exactly it is yet...

I dare to read the oath for the words written? Seems to me the real traitors are the Ollie Norths and Nixons and McCarthys, but Nixon did call home the troops. That was the hot news item in boot camp, I recall.

Pete
p.s. dear fellow listers, fear not for this is all i'll say on it

↑ Index

254. Robert Hale

Re: when you do your own policing

Tue 12 Aug 1997

The incipient totalitarianism you outline -- "the unwitting participation of those who might be opposed to such operations if they knew they were involved in them" -- renders Maria's later urdesire in your text -- "Maria might be able to write the way she wants to write" -- an impotent fantasy. These notions have strange bedfellows, as you'll recall that Republicanism is dependent upon the notion that the masses don't know what's good (or bad) for them and therefore need an elite, ruling class to make the decisions, or in the case you describe, play the part of the enlightened artisan, who is only one step away from being a slave as long as he is true to himself, what defines this truth is a magical idea of a will not to police, but also to be able to change other people's minds. Not to mention that this whole tack is somehow nostalgic -- all theoretical demands that transcend labor's demands, aim at a reappropriation of the labor process in the shadow of the disciplinary society you describe. Meanwhile, Maria's desublimation is mystified into a cynical confession where she might break free if she tells the truth and writes the way she wants to write.

Despite my complaints, you do make some strong moves here towards a much needed critique of the political economy of writing. Not an easy topic.

At 02:28 PM 8/11/97 -0400, you wrote:
> I'm arriving a little late on this one, but I want to second lb >drake's response to Maria Damon's several questions about policing in the >avant garde.
>
> I must confess to great boredom over the struggle to define the >meaning of the term "avant garde." I think of Wittgenstein: "isn't the >value of a word precisely in the looseness of its definition?" The value >of avant garde as a term is what the term can be turned to mean by those >various groups and individuals interested in using it or getting rid of >it, a meaning that >CANNOT be final as long as anyone thinks redefinitions of it (or even old >definitions of it) can be made to seem worthwhile to them in whatever >they're doing. Make it seem something interesting, or not--it's your word >if you want it.
>
> But the problem, I feel, especially with the second of Maria's >posts is that there is a fairly intense confusion of contexts of >disciplinary power. I certainly understand that Maria's comments >were not meant as final conclusions, but as queries. So I don't want my >comments to be seen as criticisms so much of her as of these particular >comments, because I think these comments reflect positions that are, in >fact, dangerously common.
>
> Maria asks whether the avant garde polices its borders? And people >respond "well what is the avant garde?" and people respond, as I would,

>well sometimes yes and sometimes no, it depends on the context, the >publication, the personalities, etc. But then she offers, AS AN EXAMPLE OF >AVANT GARDE POLICING, TWO EXAMPLES OF THE AVANT GARDE BEING POLICED BY >INDIVIDUALS WITH RESPONSIBILITY FOR ACADEMIC PUBLICATIONS. The confusion >is important, because I think there's something significant at stake.
>
> I find, in >the details of these examples, a number of interesting problems. What does >academic "cultural studies" have to do with avant garde writing practices?
>Why is there no mention of whether she tried publishing her piece on young >urban black poets in contexts other than officially sanctioned academic >projects? To whom does any value accrue if an article on young black urban >poets is published in an academic collection? To speak most broadly, I'm >concerned here that there is a large gap between what Maria's comments >suggest is at stake ("the avant garde police") in her experiences, and >what else, unmentioned, also seems at stake in those experiences.
>
> I find it hard to make my own use of the term "avant garde"
>flexible enough to include an academic critic with a self-described >focus in "cultural studies" who decides to do a book "on a relatively >traditional sense of avant garde" as in any sense BEING avant garde. But >in any case, it seems clear that the "policing" context to which Maria >refers is the policing of the ACADEMIC context, with whatever relation to >avant garde practices. And the question for me then becomes "well how is >it possible that someone can have their essay turned down by an editor in >the academic marketplace and then decide that the fault might lie with >avant garde writers," writers who for all I know HAVE NO >WRITING APPEARING in the collections Maria mentions.
>
> Besides, are we really sure that magazines like CHAIN, TALISMAN, >WITZ and others would have no interest in publishing Maria's more "daring" >piece? Have they even been tried? And I can't help thinking that the >problem REALLY is that they haven't been tried because publishing an essay >in a magazine like that does NOT forward anybody's academic career, so >that perhaps it never occured to Maria that there would be any "value" in >publishing there in the first place. And if that is an assumption about >her concerns that I CANNOT make, at least I can ask her to try those >publications because the academic "value" of publishing her piece is NOT >the point--the point is having the piece published in a place where it >will be read.

>
>
> I think I wouldn't be spending so much time on this subject if it >didn't seem to me at the heart of a problem that seems to haunt this list >of late. That problem is this: WHAT IS THE RELATION BETWEEN ACADEMIC >PRACTICE AND THE VARIOUS TYPES OF "INNOVATIVE" WRITING PRACTICES THAT WE >MAY OR MAY NOT WANT TO LABEL "AVANT GARDE"? And I feel, in fact, that I'm >still seeing a great deal of confusion on the subject.
>
> I take the following to be my two basic assumptions: 1) We live in >a disciplinary society whose REAL operations of power work from the top on >down, but which also work often because of the unwitting participation of >those who might be opposed to such operations if they knew they were >involved in them. 2) That one of the main problems of a discplinary >society (others too I suppose, but I've never been in them) is that THE
>SELF-INTEREST OF INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS IN THAT DISCIPLINARY SOCIETY OFTEN >BLINDS THEM TO THE CONTRADICTIONS OF THEIR OWN POSITION IN THAT SOCIETY.
>
> Pierre Bourdieu, as many of you certainly know, has in a book like >HOMO ACADEMICUS already made it clear that institutional criticism of any >kind can ONLY have value when the institutional critic has accurately >diagnosed his or her position in the institutional framework. If you don't >know who you are, then you can't know other people.
>
> In looking at a number of ideas floating around the list lately, >it seems to me that one of the problems that comes from insufficient >awareness about one's own social position is THE TENDENCY TO BLAME THE >PERSON WHOM YOU PERCEIVE AS ONE STEP ABOVE YOU IN THE SYSTEM, accompanied >by an exaggerated sense of that person's power which goes hand in hand >with an ignoring of the larger framework. In her post (again, which I >don't take as her final position) Maria blames an academic editor, who she >misconstrues as "avant garde," but never addresses the contradictions of >her own existence in the academic context. But there have been other >recent examples: language poets are "academically dominant" because a FEW >of them have more academic authority than other poets, and a some of them >have made it into anthologies that other people have NOT made it into. A >real advantage? Well, perhaps yes, assuming that more than a few people in >an academic system of some thousands teach such work at all. But isn't >there someone higher up to take on than the 100 people in academic >positions who just might have potential affinity with what you do?

>
> There are a myriad of possible takes on whether "avant garde" >activity can have any real place in the (currently disciplinary and >standardizing) environment of the literary academy. I take recent writing >by Tom Mandel and Ron Silliman to be saying no, such a place is not >possible at all. Because I like teaching, and because someone has to teach >people about poetry at some point, and because I'd rather it be me than, >say, J.D. McClatchey, I think some intervention is possible, especially on >the level of teaching. When it comes to academic publishing, the question >seems whether publishing in the standardized form of the academic >marketplace can further the concerns of "avant garde" writing and writers?
>I'm tempted to say no, but also tempted to say that, at times, a few >standard academic articles and books pointing in the direction of less >standardized work may help bring attention to such poetries.
>
> OF COURSE avant garde writers do some level of policing; the U.S.
>is a country in which, with the occasional exception, the only way to make >a living at all is to police somebody. If you've got a way out of that, >great. If like Maria, you probably don't, perhaps the best you can do is
>IN THE ACT OF POLICING TO MAKE IT EXPLICIT THAT YOU ARE POLICING AND IN SO >DOING CALL YOUR OWN POLICING INTO QUESTION, AND BE CLEAR AT ALL TIMES THAT
>YOU LIVE IN A SOCIETY WHICH IS FORCING YOU TO POLICE. Perhaps you would >not be policing otherwise, right? I mean, who knows? In another place, >Maria might be able to write the way she wants to write, on the subjects
>she wants to write about, and be granted the right to make a living >simultaneously. And so would everybody else, whether they thought of >themselves as critics, poets, or whatever. What a cool concept!--too bad >it's not in the works.
>
> But until then, constant vigilance about one's own positioning in >the disciplinary framework seems to me crucial to saying anything about >poetry or anything else.
>
> Speaking to you, currently, as an adjunct who publishes books of >poetry and articles in non-academically authorized journals and who still >thinks he can do a better job teaching than most of the academic critics >who get better teaching jobs because they publish in academic journals >(present company all excluded, of course), and who also, sometimes, tries >to publish critical pieces about innovative writing in academic journals >but usually fails because he either doesn't want to do it the right way, >or can't, or just hasn't figured out how best the problem can be solved, >save by getting other people to change their minds--

>
> Mark Wallace
>
>
>/----------\
>| |
>| [redacted] |
>| GWU: |
>| http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw |
>| EPC: |
>| http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace |
>|_____|
>
>

↑ Index

255. The Ultimate Autodidact

Re: Ironies of Policing

Tue 12 Aug 1997

Someone wrote:
> But Charles, I didn't say I objected to Maria and Rebecca presenting > their point of view. Not at all! What I was responding to is their > policing call to close down discussion on a topic which, I > agree, is obviously of great interest to poets on this list and well > beyond. Of course Maria and Rebecca are free to call for > silence around anything they want, but I can point out too, can't I,
> that such a call is silly in the extreme, and thick with unintended > irony, given Maria's own comments the other day about the
> "avant-garde" openly and subliminally policing its borders.

Isn't this the same clear thinker who says taking an oath to defend the Constitution means turning in my colleagues if they speak out against a gov't that suspends the Constitution? What is he objecting to now?

> And after
> all, since no one else felt the need to answer these censorial > gestures, well... I mean, you can hardly blame me for speaking up!

Ah! censorship. Well, thank you Mr. Whatchamacallit, or whomever. Somehow I was confused. I thought calling a review a waste of space was free speech, not censorship. Thanks for keeping an eye peeled for my 1st Amendment rights! ;-)

Pete
p.s. did i say that was the last? hehehe well, i lied!

↑ Index

256. The Ultimate Autodidact

"Nevertheless, It Moves"

Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

currently in Pen and Sword, http://www.rahul.net/~jag

note: in paradise there will be anarchy, but you'll have to swear to abide by consensus yuk yuk...

"Nevertheless, It Moves"
.
        a.
It is better that a few men suffer, wrote Nicolo, to keep the laws than that all suffer without laws.
    And Alcibiades
    emasculated 1,000 men on the Isle of Delos.
        And Alcibiades
        emasculated a statue of Apollo in Athens.
    And young men were castrated by the thousands in Italy
    for the hope of one good singing voice.
.
The assumption is that without laws
men will suffer.
The major premise is saved for last and treated as a conclusion.
      The conclusion is stated
        first by Shuang Ti,

and Confucious was nearly obliterated.
the major premise burns
under the torches of Gregory Nazienen, Cromwell, Fallwell and Mao Tse Tung.
Fire at the forges heating iron searing flesh
to close the wound of castration.
.
.
b.
There is power for the castrato,
The book burning zealot,
the futurist.
It is megavoltage searing the flesh
causing spasms in the arms and legs.
It is severing the spinal cord at the base of the cortex causing spasms in the arms and legs.
It is strangulation of the esophagus, constriction of the jugular,
oxygen deprivation,
causing spasms in the arms and legs.
It is the smooth power
the smooth between the legs power of emptiness.
.
History
is a trail of blood on the stairs,
the perfect crime,
a crime of passion,
and the M.O. is clear
though the water is fouled.
You could distill that water ten kotis of kalpas
but it would never test clean.
It would taste like the death of souls shuffling around a stagnant pit

fetid from the fluids of hecatombs.
1,000 cattle slaughtered for Athena the first with horns of gold,
as many men, castrated,
for refusing to pay a tax.
.
.
c.
I am not a citizen of this world!
Even its fantasies are tainted, spotted refelections in an exagerrated mirror where crimes are more heinous, and beauty
more unattainable, and love and lovers either swoon in stupified naivete or fail beyond hope of intellible sentiment.
.
Fire can not purge this sorrow
though this page can be destroyed.
The abbey smolders after the rievers or the library
under St. Gregory's fanatical eye.
Is it Raphael who depicts him
smashing his miter in the heretic's face?
We couldn't look at that painting knowing he had burned Sappho.
(yolu raktido adu melestera)
.
The hate on his face!
His god killed the eldest sons of the Egyptians for their father's crimes;
His god sent a bear to rend three children for laughing at a prophet's baldness;
took converts at swordpoint;
converts at the burning stake and burned them anyway.
Hatooey said, "This heaven you say

"I will go to if I'm baptised,
"are these christians all going there?
"I want to go to the other place."

.

Nevertheless,
it moves!

.

by Pete Landers

↑ Index

257. Don Cheney

Re: Comfort levels for solicitation and submission

Tue 12 Aug 1997

At 11:27 AM 8/11/97 -0500, Jordan X. Davis wrote:

> ..... Suggestion for new name for avant-garde poetry: poetry.

At 11:37 AM 8/11/97 -0500, Don X. Cheney wrote:

eggsellent!

↑ Index

258. mark weiss

Re: Ironies of Policing

Tue 12 Aug 1997

Alright, Pete, try these out. Oaths, like all texts, have contexts. US loyalty oaths come out of the context of repression and stink, for many of us, of their history, regardless of the actual words. The assumption seems to have been either that the poor traitor confronted with such an oath as a condition of employment would recoil in horror, like a vampire confronted with garlic, or would succumb to a necessity that would seem a humiliation and in the process be humbled to the trace (if not, the imagining of such humiliation would at least gladden the heart of the oath's proponents). The actual texts of these oaths are rarely as innocuous as merely defense of the constitution, but even when they are they resemble closely the oaths administered to police, military, and office holders, all of whom are seen as servants of and subserviant to the state. Metaphorically, a teacher who has to sign such an oath is being told that he, too, is such a servant. And then there's the issue that even if I fully agree with an oath the fact that I have to sign it is a violation of my freedom of speech and thought.

A similar instance is our wonderful pledge of allegiance, as I remember a late 19th century document. A loyalty oath for little kids. Sometime during Eisenhower's administration the words "under God" were added. I was a student at a Yeshiva at the time. We all resented this amendment. To the orthodox among us saying the word God is a form of heresy. The rest of us knew damn well that the God in question wasn't the one we prayed to.

It wasn't hard for little kids in Brooklyn to be so politically hip back then; in the wake of the holocaust and the bomb it was a little harder to leave one's brain outside the classroom door. And, of course, television had entered our lives just in time for us to catch the daily installments of our favorite after-school soap opera, the Army-McCarthy hearings. We most of us had a pretty strong sense that whatever we owed allegiance to (a term out of feudalism, for christ's sake) it wasn't Republic or Flag, and that pledge was a daily rubbing of salt into the wounds.

It also smacks of various modern totalitarianisms, in which the individual is defined primarily as a "citizen." For a while it worked for Robespierre.

But maybe I'm just being silly. Maybe these documents are uniquely sacred and should be immune to deconstruction. And hey, I live in San Diego--most of my neighbors would probably agree with you.

At 01:14 AM 8/12/97 -0500, you wrote:
>Someone wrote:
>> But Charles, I didn't say I objected to Maria and Rebecca presenting >> their point of view. Not at all! What I was responding to is their >> policing call to close down discussion on a topic which, I >> agree, is obviously of great interest to poets on this list and well >> beyond. Of course Maria and Rebecca are free to call for >> silence around anything they want, but I can point out too, can't I,
>> that such a call is silly in the extreme, and thick with unintended >> irony, given Maria's own comments the other day about the
>> "avant-garde" openly and subliminally policing its borders.
>
>Isn't this the same clear thinker who says taking an oath to defend the >Constitution means turning in my colleagues if they speak out against a >gov't that suspends the Constitution? What is he objecting to now?
>
>> And after >> all, since no one else felt the need to answer these censorial >> gestures, well... I mean, you can hardly blame me for speaking up!
>
>Ah! censorship. Well, thank you Mr. Whatchamacallit, or whomever.
>Somehow I was confused. I thought calling a review a waste of space was >free speech, not censorship. Thanks for keeping an eye peeled for my 1st >Amendment rights! ;-)

>
>Pete
>p.s. did i say that was the last? hehehe well, i lied!
>
>

↑ Index

259. charles alexander
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Thanks for all the posts regarding the loyalty oath. I suppose I can interpret "defending against the enemy" as defending against the government itself if I come to see them as the enemy. I wish it were just supporting the bill of rights, the constitution, etc. -- but it's all of those laws, many of which I don't support, but I guess I will just grin, sign, & bear it, and go about the biz of trying to get students to think for themselves, imagine their own loyalties.

charles

↑ Index

260. Layne Russell
Re: <login>
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Alan J Sondheim wrote:
>
> --+-
>
> <login>
> <logout>
> <login>
> <logout>
> <login>
>
> Jennifer and Julu are talking. Jennifer pauses, says, I'm jealous.
> Julu says, of what, nothing's happening around here anyway.
> J says it doesn't matter, it's what's going on underneath.
> J says it feels like she's been abandoned.
> J says, we've got each other.
> J says, not if he's not there, we're dead, nothing left of us.
> J says, there's nothing left of us anyway.
> J says, love's got him by the balls, cause he's male.

> J says, love's got us by the protocols, cause we're mail.
> J says, don't screw around, we don't get this often to talk.
> She says, what are we gonna do.
> J says, we could mess it up, but we haven't got a thing to worry about on > that account, he's gonna mess it up anyway.
> She says, he can't help it, he's too insecure, too needy, too fucked up.
> J says, if he wasn't fucked up, he couldn't write, but yeah, I wouldn't > want to be in his shoes.
> She says, he'll be back, I'm sure he'll be back.
> J says, at least he got to feel something, cut us loose for a bit now.
> J says, yeah, he's feeling like hell, all these things he's buried for > years, they're gonna swamp him.
> J says, what are we gonna do, just want to say I love you, Julu.
> J says, I love you too, Jenn, hang in there, this can't last forever, he > can't last like this, nothing can.
> But J says, this is too depressing, we're gonna have to be silent again.
> J cries a bit, J is teary-eyed.
> They wander.
>
> <login>
> <login> passion chat passion through passion that passion blue

felt it.
layne

↑ Index

261. henry
Re: Chêng Ming = right name
Tue 12 Aug 1997

On Tue, 12 Aug 1997 00:45:45 -0500 The Ultimate Autodidact said:
>Ms. henry says,
>> Pete Landers has done something rather astonishing here. I'm not >> sure what exactly it is yet...
>
>I dare to read the oath for the words written? Seems to me the real >traitors are the Ollie Norths and Nixons and McCarthys, but Nixon did >call home the troops. That was the hot news item in boot camp, I recall.

Mr. Pete, this is the last I'll say on it too - but I was on your side. I meant it was astonishing in the context of list-assumptions it was a running-dog kind of thing to sign. - Henry

↑ Index

262. Susan Wheeler
KGB Readings: Fall 1997
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Forwarding the following for those in & traveling to NY:
>
>K G B
>{advance intelligence}
>
>what the conspiratorial masters of literature >at the Kremlin have up their sleeves for Fall 1997
>
>Series directed by Star Black and David Lehman
>
>*******
>
>Monday, September 29 Paul Muldoon and Susan Wheeler
>
>
>Monday, October 6 Douglas Crase and Trevor Winkfield
>
>
>Monday, October 13 Tony Towle and Karen Volkman
>
>
>Monday, October 20 Suzanne Gardinier and Wayne Koestenbaum
>
>
>Monday, October 27 Lawrence Joseph and Ann Lauterbach
>
>
>Monday, November 3 Frank Bidart reads "The Second Hour of the Night"
>
>
>Monday, November 10 Jorie Graham and Carol Muske
>

>
>Monday, November 17 Jonathan Galassi and Rika Lesser
>
>
>Monday, November 24 NYET
>
>
>Monday, December 1 Martha Rhodes and TBA
>
>
>Monday, December 8 Nin Andrews and Tom Disch
>
>
>Monday, December 15 TBA
>
>*******
>
>KGB: 85 EAST 4TH STREET, EAST VILLAGE, #[redacted]
>ALL READINGS ON MONDAY EVENINGS AT 7:30 PM
>
>
>
>
Susan Wheeler
[redacted] voice/fax [redacted]

↑ Index

263. Mark Prejsnar
Re: "avantgarde"
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Charles--

I completely agree

Mark

On Mon, 11 Aug 1997, charles alexander wrote:
> >still ain't been resoved, certainly not by me.
>
> I don't quite know who your "reasonable range" might include, but what you > propose, making CLEAR to people who will not automatically know about the > variety of practices out there, what it is one is talking about -- is > admirable, is a constant challenge, and is damn near impossible.

↑ Index

264. Maria Damon
Re: Ironies of Policing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

At 8:28 PM -0500 8/11/97, KENT JOHNSON wrote:
>On 8/11, Rebecca Weldon wrote:
>
>>Having read the Boston Review articles on Yasusada, I am saddened by >>the waste of excellent literary space and effort on this hoax rather >>than on scores of Asian poets who work in obscurity.
>
>And on 8/11 Maria Damon added:
>>amen
>
>I am saddened by this waste of excellent literary space on the >Buffalo Poetics discussion list. Surely Rebecca Weldon and her >respondent in the pew could have devoted themselves instead >to writing a review of the scores of Asian poets who work in >obscurity.
>
>Kent

one word is a waste of space, compared to the hundreds that have been spent on yasusada here? btw, i have been teaching and promoting certain works by asian americans for several years now, in the classroom, at mla, and in print.

↑ Index

265. Mark Prejsnar
Re: Ironies of Policing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Mark Weiss--

Very nice and eloquent post on loyalty oaths and pledges of allergy..

As these are among the most vicious and ugly misuses of language known, they are very very much an important topic for the poetix list, I'd say (--even apart from the original dilemma of a list member, which started the thread).

Mark P.
Atlanta

↑ Index

266. Maria Damon
Re: Ironies of Policing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

> Someone wrote:
> But Charles, I didn't say I objected to Maria and Rebecca presenting their point of view. Not at all! What I was responding to is their policing call to close down discussion on a topic which, I agree, is obviously of great interest to poets on this list and well beyond. Of course Maria and Rebecca are free to call for silence around anything they want, but I can point out too, can't I, that such a call is silly in the extreme, and thick with unintended irony, given Maria's own comments the other day about the "avant-garde" openly and subliminally policing its borders.

yawn.

↑ Index

267. Maria Damon
Re: Comfort levels for solicitation and submission
Tue 12 Aug 1997

At 4:42 AM -0400 8/12/97, Don Cheney wrote:
>At 11:27 AM 8/11/97 -0500, Jordan X. Davis wrote:
>
>>..... Suggestion for new name for avant-garde poetry: poetry.
>
> At 11:37 AM 8/11/97 -0500, Don X. Cheney wrote:
>
> eggsellent!

yes indeed.

↑ Index

268. Maria Damon
Re: when you do your own policing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

mark, i'm somewhat taken aback by the ad feminam nature of your comments. it seems to me that my integrity is being impugned here because i publish in the venues that are appropriate to my discursive community. it is true, as i said, that i'm a relative newcomer to this community. does that make the community which i have been more familiar with (academic cultural studies) corrupt, disingenuous, self-seeking? what in the world makes Witz (whose existence i didn't know of until i joined the list) more virtuous than, say, social text or cultural critique? (btw, just about everyone assumes, when i say urban teenage poets writing in a housing project, that these youth are Black. they are white working-class/lumpen kids, a category most media do not care to acknowledge. i spell out the demographics very clearly in the essay itself, which was published before i knew of any of these other journals you mention.)

here's the scenario. i was invited to participate in a conference on "the poetics of avant garde poetry." the proposal i submitted seemed confusing to the organizers (academics, like myself) because i didn't seem to adhere to a clear notion of what the avant garde was/is. perhaps it wasn't a very articulate proposal --i have certainly been guilty of lapses in clarity of argumentation. but it seemed to me that their response also resonated with other responses i've gotten, which is what interested me about the term "avant-garde" in the first place, the way its used as a weapon. i myself have tried to resurrect its military meaning, adding the concept of social marginality (via a bit of slippery advance-guard/cannon fodder association others have mentioned here). so i asked the poetics list for feedback. you'll recall, my post were queries, not accusations, though i can, in retrospect, see how its wording could have put people on the defensive. i've learned a lot, mostly that the term "avant-garde" is used by literary historians rather than practitioners who tend to feel imprisoned by the label. at the same time, those practitioners are very conscious of working in certain traditions of practice that are distinct from and in many cases opposed to other traditions of practice --and for many, this distinction is terribly important. ive gotten some valuable response, the most valuable of which was sent backchannel because the poster felt the need to protect him/herself. and of course, jordan's contribution (new name for avant garde poetry: poetry) is a gem.

what about my other question: i get a feeling that aesthetic consensus or at least judgment is very important in this community. am i out to lunch on this? do you care to nuance, challenge, or elaborate on this? in some literary communities or communities of aesthetic practice, such as the workshop world, any creative activity is welcomed (everyone can be a poet, etc). it seems to me that aesthetic appraisal is a very important part of how this (POETIX) community constitutes itself. perhaps more hegemonic institutions (so called "mainstream poetry") can afford a certain kind of complacent largesse, which wd shut down quickly if it sensed a real threat of overthrow?

At 2:28 PM -0400 8/11/97, Mark Wallace wrote:
> I'm arriving a little late on this one, but I want to second lb
>drake's response to Maria Damon's several questions about policing in the >avant garde.
>
> I must confess to great boredom over the struggle to define the >meaning of the term "avant garde." I think of Wittgenstein: "isn't the >value of a word precisely in the looseness of its definition?" The value >of avant garde as a term is what the term can be turned to mean by those >various groups and individuals interested in using it or getting rid of

>it, a meaning that >CANNOT be final as long as anyone thinks redefinitions of it (or even old >definitions of it) can be made to seem worthwhile to them in whatever >they're doing. Make it seem something interesting, or not--it's your word >if you want it.
>
> But the problem, I feel, especially with the second of Maria's >posts is that there is a fairly intense confusion of contexts of >disciplinary power. I certainly understand that Maria's comments >were not meant as final conclusions, but as queries. So I don't want my >comments to be seen as criticisms so much of her as of these particular >comments, because I think these comments reflect positions that are, in >fact, dangerously common.
>
> Maria asks whether the avant garde polices its borders? And people >respond "well what is the avant garde?" and people respond, as I would,
>well sometimes yes and sometimes no, it depends on the context, the >publication, the personalities, etc. But then she offers, AS AN EXAMPLE OF >AVANT GARDE POLICING, TWO EXAMPLES OF THE AVANT GARDE BEING POLICED BY >INDIVIDUALS WITH RESPONSIBILITY FOR ACADEMIC PUBLICATIONS. The confusion
>is important, because I think there's something significant at stake.
>
> I find, in >the details of these examples, a number of interesting problems. What does >academic "cultural studies" have to do with avant garde writing practices?
>Why is there no mention of whether she tried publishing her piece on young >urban black poets in contexts other than officially sanctioned academic >projects? To whom does any value accrue if an article on young black urban >poets is published in an academic collection? To speak most broadly, I'm >concerned here that there is a large gap between what Maria's comments >suggest is at stake ("the avant garde police") in her experiences, and >what else, unmentioned, also seems at stake in those experiences.
>
> I find it hard to make my own use of the term "avant garde"
>flexible enough to include an academic critic with a self-described >focus in "cultural studies" who decides to do a book "on a relatively >traditional sense of avant garde" as in any sense BEING avant garde. But >in any case, it seems clear that the "policing" context to which Maria >refers is the policing of the ACADEMIC context, with whatever relation to >avant garde practices. And the question for me then becomes "well how is >it possible that someone can have their essay turned down by an editor in >the academic marketplace and then decide that the fault might lie with >avant garde writers," writers who for all I know HAVE NO >WRITING APPEARING in the collections Maria mentions.

>
> Besides, are we really sure that magazines like CHAIN, TALISMAN, >WITZ and others would have no interest in publishing Maria's more "daring"
>piece? Have they even been tried? And I can't help thinking that the >problem REALLY is that they haven't been tried because publishing an essay
>in a magazine like that does NOT forward anybody's academic career, so >that perhaps it never occured to Maria that there would be any "value" in >publishing there in the first place. And if that is an assumption about >her concerns that I CANNOT make, at least I can ask her to try those >publications because the academic "value" of publishing her piece is NOT >the point--the point is having the piece published in a place where it >will be read.
>
>
> I think I wouldn't be spending so much time on this subject if it >didn't seem to me at the heart of a problem that seems to haunt this list >of late. That problem is this: WHAT IS THE RELATION BETWEEN ACADEMIC >PRACTICE AND THE VARIOUS TYPES OF "INNOVATIVE" WRITING PRACTICES THAT WE >MAY OR MAY NOT WANT TO LABEL "AVANT GARDE"? And I feel, in fact, that I'm >still seeing a great deal of confusion on the subject.
>
> I take the following to be my two basic assumptions: 1) We live in >a disciplinary society whose REAL operations of power work from the top on >down, but which also work often because of the unwitting participation of >those who might be opposed to such operations if they knew they were >involved in them. 2) That one of the main problems of a discplinary >society (others too I suppose, but I've never been in them) is that THE
>SELF-INTEREST OF INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS IN THAT DISCIPLINARY SOCIETY OFTEN >BLINDS THEM TO THE CONTRADICTIONS OF THEIR OWN POSITION IN THAT SOCIETY.
>

> Pierre Bourdieu, as many of you certainly know, has in a book like >HOMO ACADEMICUS already made it clear that institutional criticism of any >kind can ONLY have value when the institutional critic has accurately >diagnosed his or her position in the institutional framework. If you don't >know who you are, then you can't know other people.
>
> In looking at a number of ideas floating around the list lately, >it seems to me that one of the problems that comes from insufficient >awareness about one's own social position is THE TENDENCY TO BLAME
THE >PERSON WHOM YOU PERCEIVE AS ONE STEP ABOVE YOU IN THE SYSTEM, accompanied >by an exaggerated sense of that person's power which goes hand in hand >with an ignoring of the larger framework. In her post (again, which I >don't take as her final position) Maria blames an academic editor, who she >misconstrues as "avant garde," but never addresses the contradictions of >her own existence in the academic context. But there have been other >recent examples: language poets are "academically dominant" because a FEW >of them have more academic authority than other poets, and a some of them >have made it into anthologies that other people have NOT made it into. A >real advantage? Well, perhaps yes, assuming that more than a few people in >an academic system of some thousands teach such work at all. But isn't >there someone higher up to take on than the 100 people in academic >positions who just might have potential affinity with what you do?
>
> There are a myriad of possible takes on whether "avant garde"
>activity can have any real place in the (currently disciplinary and >standardizing) environment of the literary academy. I take recent writing >by Tom Mandel and Ron Silliman to be saying no, such a place is not >possible at all. Because I like teaching, and because someone has to teach >people about poetry at some point, and because I'd rather it be me than,
>say, J.D. McClatchey, I think some intervention is possible, especially on >the level of teaching. When it comes to academic publishing, the question >seems whether publishing in the standardized form of the academic >marketplace can further the concerns of "avant garde" writing and writers?
>I'm tempted to say no, but also tempted to say that, at times, a few >standard academic articles and books pointing in the direction of less >standardized work may help bring attention to such poetries.
>
> OF COURSE avant garde writers do some level of policing; the U.S.
>is a country in which, with the occasional exception, the only way to make >a living at all is to police somebody. If you've got a way out of that, >great. If like Maria, you probably don't, perhaps the best you can do is

>IN THE ACT OF POLICING TO MAKE IT EXPLICIT THAT YOU ARE POLICING AND IN SO >DOING CALL YOUR OWN POLICING INTO QUESTION, AND BE CLEAR AT ALL TIMES THAT
>YOU LIVE IN A SOCIETY WHICH IS FORCING YOU TO POLICE. Perhaps you would >not be policing otherwise, right? I mean, who knows? In another place, >Maria might be able to write the way she wants to write, on the subjects
>she wants to write about, and be granted the right to make a living >simultaneously. And so would everybody else, whether they thought of >themselves as critics, poets, or whatever. What a cool concept!--too bad >it's not in the works.
>
> But until then, constant vigilance about one's own positioning in >the disciplinary framework seems to me crucial to saying anything about >poetry or anything else.
>
> Speaking to you, currently, as an adjunct who publishes books of >poetry and articles in non-academically authorized journals and who still >thinks he can do a better job teaching than most of the academic critics >who get better teaching jobs because they publish in academic journals >(present company all excluded, of course), and who also, sometimes, tries
>to publish critical pieces about innovative writing in academic journals
>but usually fails because he either doesn't want to do it the right way, >or can't, or just hasn't figured out how best the problem can be solved, >save by getting other people to change their minds--
>
> Mark Wallace
>
>
>/----------\
>| |
>| [redacted] |
>| GWU: |
>| http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw |
>| EPC: |
>| http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace |
>|_____|

↑ Index

269. Maria Damon
Re: the misery of poetry
Tue 12 Aug 1997

actually i find this charming and not at all banal. at the level of individual practice, this kind of stuff is fine with me (for example, i don't own a tv). but at the level of mindless pontification and self-justifying moralisms, forget it.

At 11:40 AM -0700 8/11/97, mark weiss wrote:
>An extreme example: I'm translating a Cuban poet who has just moved to >Spain after 30 years' residence in NY. Email would make my life a lot >easier, but this otherwise normal and pleasant man doesn't believe in >typewriters, let alone computers.
>
>At 09:56 AM 8/11/97 -0500, you wrote:
>>maria, that really IS banal...
>>
>>mebbe some of the more acclaimed poets out there who rail against emedia
>>should spend a little time getting their feet wet in same (not that the >>radio or tv, say, are UNelectronic devices---i think some may have >>forgotten that these items are plugged in too)... personally, i think the >>resistance given voice to (by nobel-laureate poets, for example) to things >>electronic reflects their having intuited that the earth is moving >>under their feet...
>>
>>best,
>>
>>joe
>>
>>

↑ Index

270. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: avant garde/a-v dragnet/danger a vat
Tue 12 Aug 1997

In "The Vanishing American Hobo" (in Lonesome Traveler) Jack Kerouac --with a nod to L-F Celine--notes that the police operate out of nine lines of boredom and one line of law. Mark Wallace: "I must confess to great boredom over the struggle to define the meaning of the term 'avant garde'. . .
" . . . IN THE ACT OF POLICING TO MAKE IT EXPLICIT THAT YOU ARE POLICING AND IN SO DOING CALL YOUR OWN POLICING INTO QUESTION, AND BE CLEAR AT ALL TIMES THAT YOU LIVE IN A SOCIETY WHICH IS FORCING YOU TO POLICE . . ." Mark Wallace concludes by noting a need for constant vigilance--and as well asserts that people generally blame higher ups for their sorry state. Instead according to Mark Wallace it appears they should blame the entire society for making bored souls turn into cops.

("America's Most Wanted" has harnessed just such energies with great success . . .)

I like Bob Grumman's Otherstream taxonomy--and wonder if there is a Heraclitean Stream . . .

Clark Coolidge (have to check the source reference so to speak)notes much liking a line from Dashiell Hammett's story "The Tenth Victim": "There was a constant stream of things."

The murder weapon in that story is a typewriter . . .

W
A
T
C
H
C
D
E
A
T
H
E

-za da

↑ Index

271. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher

Re: when you do your own policing

Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

it occurs to me (slow-witted that i am) that one of the problems lurking just beneath the surface of the avant-garde thread has to do with how one understands oneself...

i mean, if you define yourself simply as a "writer," on the basis of doing different sorts of writing for different sorts of audiences on different sorts of presses at different times, you'll likely find any tag a restriction of sorts, mebbe even an ontological restriction... b/c at any moment, you may find yourself outside or inside a particular network of writerly affiliations, or if you wish, community...

one of the problems i have with academic-scholarly writers (that is, with those who define themselves as such, which is occasionally a function of their failure to define themselves as such!) is that they sometimes take for granted their position as writers within the academic publishing system... which sometimes leads to a sort of pooh-poohing of motivations, if not articulations, that seem to these folks to fall too far afield... and of course, these days, contemporary poetry in general generally falls too far afield...

one of the problems i have with more avant-garde writers---most of whom, owing to the sort of work they do, are acutely aware of public perception and reception (and again, i'm using a-g w/o any critical interference, as a descriptor)---is that they sometimes dig in on the aesthetic issues in particular... as though community itself turned on towing a certain aesthetic line... which, for me, has always been a questionable way of forging human relationships, though i'll grant that things can be rough-going when you really don't like somebody's work!... i've always mself felt a particular affinity for folks who work hard and get little public acclaim---by the general public, i mean... and end up barely making artistic ends meet...

one of the problems i have with more conventional writers, trade press writers---some or perhaps many of whom simply do not understand the degree to which their aesthetic is one among many aesthetics---is that they often achieve "success" without a whole lot in the way of identifying why... that is, what registers they're playing, as registers... which translates, for one, to me being able to appreciate their work, while they don't seem to appreciate mine...

i guess i have problems with all sorts of writers!... and having written in all three categories (only recently trying to make the transition into more conventional work), it's fair to say that i feel the stresses and strains attendant to each... moreover, i teach technical and professional writing---and it's really easy from this vantagepoint to see how these different sorts of commitments, motivations, publishing realities can work to obscure what different publics perceive as "good" or "bad" work...

i hope i'm clear on one point, anyway: that though pluralism is not w/o its attendant risks, one can inhabit multiple spaces---or to drop that geometric metaphor for a moment---multiple processes... i would think that what's necessary is a capacity for not bullshitting oneself into believing that one is doing x while in actuality one is doing y... but of course x's and y's are negotiable too---sometimes shit happens...

best,

joe

↑ Index

272. Herb Levy
Conlon Nancarrow
Tue 12 Aug 1997

I just returned home from the east coast to find a message on my answering machine from Trimpin saying that Conlon Nancarrow died over the weekend in Mexico City. Nancarrow would have been 85 in October.

The American expatriate composer was best known for his series of studies for player piano, composed and hand-punched on a custom machine, the medium in which he worked valmost exclusively for much of the last fifty years. These works were really wonderful extensions of the sound world of the piano timbrally altered by extremes of tempo, tempo ratios, and unusual canonic structures. His few works for live performers (either early works composed before Nancarrow began focusing on player piano or quite recent pieces commissioned by performers & ensembles like Ursula Oppens & Arditti Quartet) have been more rarely heard.

All but the three most recently completed of Nancarrow's Studies for Player Piano are recorded on Wergo, his other works have been recorded by Arditti Quartet, Ursula Oppens, Continuum, Joanna MacGregor, and others. In 1995, Cambridge University Press published a book length study of his work by Kyle Gann.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

273. KENT JOHNSON
Re: Ironies of Policing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Goodness. It would appear that my previous reply to Pete Landers's post re: McCarthyite loyalty oaths (the one where I have an ecstatic vision of millions of workers marching on the Pentagon in Blade Runner fashions) certainly touched his nerve!
Kent
On Aug 12, Pete Landers wrote:
> Someone wrote:
> > But Charles, I didn't say I objected to Maria and Rebecca presenting > > their point of view. Not at all! What I was responding to is their > > policing call to close down discussion on a topic which, I > > agree, is obviously of great interest to poets on this list and well > > beyond. Of course Maria and Rebecca are free to call for > > silence around anything they want, but I can point out too, can't I,

> > that such a call is silly in the extreme, and thick with unintended > > irony, given Maria's own comments the other day about the
> > "avant-garde" openly and subliminally policing its borders.
>
> Isn't this the same clear thinker who says taking an oath to defend the > Constitution means turning in my colleagues if they speak out against a > gov't that suspends the Constitution? What is he objecting to now?
>
> > And after > > all, since no one else felt the need to answer these censorial > > gestures, well... I mean, you can hardly blame me for speaking up!
>
> Ah! censorship. Well, thank you Mr. Whatchamacallit, or whomever.
> Somehow I was confused. I thought calling a review a waste of space was > free speech, not censorship. Thanks for keeping an eye peeled for my 1st > Amendment rights! ;-)
>
> Pete
> p.s. did i say that was the last? hehehe well, i lied!
>

↑ Index

274. Tom Mandel
snapstream cracklestream popstream
Tue 12 Aug 1997

"D.J. Renegage of Washington DC"

that's "Renegade" (prob. a clickstream slip)

...and he's a really interesting smart and committed poet. Anyone here familiar with his work? Maybe the other DC'ers?

"Incidentally, Henry Taylor, Pulitzer Prize winning poet for his book The Flying Change, did enter as an individual. He didn't even make it to the semi-final round."

I hope I'm wrong, but I somehow can only read that as a snide bit against Henry Taylor. He is, after all, a "mainstream" poet (get thee behind me terminology). Yet, Henry Taylor is really an experimental poet. That is, he experiments with his poetry and how he writes and presents it (using experiment in the loose and unrelated-to-science meaning the word is given in the arts). He's had a long-term correspondence with Jackson Maclow and written very well on Jackson's work and written work of his own using techniques similar to/inspired by/identical to/something like... Jackson's. The engagement proceeded from seeing a book of Maclow's at a yard sale (I think), buying it and allowing its foreignness to anything he'd done/thought up to that point to operate as inspiration.

I assume his jumping into the slam pool (I sure as hell wouldn't do it [did anyone see Kim Dawn there?]) reflects the same sinew and flex. Good for him.

Tom Mandel

Tom Mandel [redacted]
****
Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
4031 University Dr. Suite 200 * vox: [redacted]
Fairfax, VA 22030-3409 * fax: [redacted]
****

Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

275. Charles Alexander

Re: avant garde/a-v dragnet/danger a vat

Tue 12 Aug 1997

Yesterday we received in the mail the lavish color flyer for the u of arizona's performance series. One of the performances is of a Phillip Glass version of a Cocteau tale. The flyer described Phillip Glass as an "avant-garde superstar."

That makes me want to drop the term "avant-garde" altogether, even though I haven't been predisposed to dropping it before that.

charles

chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision handmade and trade editions of contemporary innovative writing [redacted] :: http://personal.riverusers.com/~chax/

↑ Index

276. KENT JOHNSON

that's not what I meant to say, that's not what I meant to say a

Tue 12 Aug 1997

Henry, Pete, and list: Just to make it clear! I was not referring to Pete Landers as an "imperialist running dog" for feeling fine about his oath. Sorry about that misunderstanding. My title meant to poke a bit of self-reflexive fun at my own undying revolutionary dreams, in politics as in poetry. (tho I am absolutely confident we are merely in a pause, and that the left is coming back.) Kent ps:

"Imperialist Running Dog" was actually the name of a wonderful, slobbering, and loving dog I was once master to.

> I dare to read the oath for the words written? Seems to me the real traitors are the Ollie Norths and Nixons and McCarthys, but Nixon did call home the troops. That was the hot news item in boot camp, I recall.
>
> Mr. Pete, this is the last I'll say on it too - but I was on your side. I meant it was astonishing in the context of list-assumptions it was a running-dog kind of thing to sign. - Henry

↑ Index

277. Jordan Davis
Louis Cabri, Where
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Have You Gone?
Looking for Louis' email - or phone - please backchannel, any of you who know.
Not a creditor,
Jordan

↑ Index

278. The Ultimate Autodidact
Re: to be or not to be (loyal)
Tue 12 Aug 1997

I asked, at the beginning, what specifically do you object to in the documents in question. My point being that it would be a lie to swear an oath one never meant to keep.

charles wrote:
> Thanks for all the posts regarding the loyalty oath. I suppose I can > interpret "defending against the enemy" as defending against the government > itself if I come to see them as the enemy. I wish it were just supporting > the bill of rights, the constitution, etc. -- but it's all of those laws, > many of which I don't support, but I guess I will just grin, sign, & bear > it, and go about the biz of trying to get students to think for themselves, > imagine their own loyalties.

Well, the documents say you do not have to support those laws. If you oppose a law, according to those documents, you have a right to object. The people who wrote those documents would be glad to see that you want to teach the kids to think for themselves, to question authority. I think you have a superior understanding of the role of a teacher, and we need more people like you! FWIW, the Constitution doesn't contain any laws.

I don't understand how any poet or writer can continue to misconstrue my words. Please only read the ones I have written. I say, if you read those documents then you will see that they are protecting your right to teach whatever you see fit. When the school board and the PTA try to ban a book that you discuss in your small press class, those documents are supposed to come to your aid. They were written by philosophically brilliant men, admittedly in a time when women and non-whites and people who didn't own land had no representation in the government, but they have been amended. They must be amended further, too. I think that is the way to go.

There are some alternatives to written laws. There's despotism, surely we don't want that. There's a kind of anarchy I would prefer, but it requires even more documents and oaths than this ugly oligarchy we live in. I've looked into Marx and I feel his ideas would fit very nicely within the framework of this document. For the time being, then, I stake my hope on the idea that we can all work out our problems with the structure outlined in the Constitution, and continue to amend it until the greediest sleezeballs find they are not welcome here.

What I mean is, it's wide open for interpretation. Surely you can sign it without compromising your values. I personally take the stance that the Constitution is threatened every day, more from within than without, yes. For instance, because of my oath I participate in demonstrations if I disagree, because we have a right to peaceably assemble. And nowhere in the Constitution does it say we can't do a few more bongs. So here's to you, one and all. Keep doubting! But please stop misreading me.

Pete

↑ Index

279. Tom Mandel
avant academe
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Mark, your post on the relation of avant garde to academy is really wonderful and even better it is useful. A person reading it can use it in thinking about her/his life.

A couple of points, however. There is a tendency to think of academy as institution (correct) and avant garde as... anarchy/utopia/individualism/? Just a tendency, mind you. And this leads you to formulate a picture of unestablished avantgardists pointing envy (or whatever) at established avantgardists because of their position in the academy -- i.e. in another institution.

No this is intra-institutional politics. The avantgarde (non-mainstream poetry, cosa nostra -- call it what you want) is an institution, and position in it is critical to and at stake for all those committed to the institution.

I believe the point important, because it allows one to ask what the relation is of a practice of writing ----- which hopes (by whatever means and to whatever end other than institutional acceptance) actually to be avantgarde, using whatever loose re-denotation you want for the term: i.e. to be "new" "sui generis" "experimental" whatever ----- to the institution(s) in which it cannot escape participation.

The utility of this question -- not of an answer, just of the question -- is that it dissipates complaint.

I conceptualize people who view others (more established others) with envy, for example, as having a view of social space on the model of a Go or chess board. It's finite, structured, and occupied. You want to occupy space you gotta force somebody out of the space you want to occupy. Institutional space is always like this in some sense, in some retrospective sense.

In fact, the social space of an institution (e.g. such as avantgarde poetry) is more like legos or tinker toys (for those who remember them). It's additive, and the more you add in a given direction, the more you move the center of the institution in that precise direction. There's nothing ambiguous about it.

Hence, it doesn't do to conclude that we must constantly monitor our policing positions in the institutions which entail us. Constantly monitor equals self-police, and in the hermeneutic circle of this thought Mark is thinking, that very self-monitoring begins to found the so-called hierarchical discipline/punish society we occupy in which "the only way to make a living at all is to police somebody" (that is, it founds a vision of society along these lines).

I think I've allowed myself to become too abstract; what is the question here? How to become independent as a poet, let us say. How to cut or at least loosen the leash? The noose?

If you are a really good teacher, then teach. If you are a really good poet, then write. But, "I am a really good poet" provides you with no rights whatever to be published. Ditto, "...good teacher." If you are a good writer you will find readers however. And a teacher finds students.

Tom Mandel

Tom Mandel [redacted]
****
Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
4031 University Dr. Suite 200 * vox: [redacted]

Fairfax, VA 22030-3409 * fax: [redacted]
****

Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

280. Henry Gould avant-garde police
Tue 12 Aug 1997

The police in Three Digits, Iowa are very avant-garde. Along with the usual training in how to use handcuffs and where the nearest Dunkin' Donuts is, they are required to take 2 creative writing courses (poetry and prose-poetry), and moreover, to put this training to USE ON THE JOB.

Officer Jim McClain was confronted with a tight situation the other day - protestors outside the local catfish cannery were getting rowdy (all four of them). McClain whipped out his copy of FISH MANTRA by A.G. (Albert Gimlet), recited it at the top of his lungs, & soon had the crowd under control. (see poem below)

In Three Digits, a conviction for shoplifting leads to a 2-day Seminar on the work of Rod McKuen. For more serious crimes, offenders are ordered to "lurk" on the Poetics list for up to 9 months! Nobody gets off easy in Lil' Three.

FISH MANTRA

Fish! Fish! Fish!
I love all fish!
Big fish, little fish!
Cute fish! Ugly fish!
Even sharks are friends of mine!
I love fish!

(repeat 300 times)

p.s. the poetry program in 3 Digits has no connection with the famous Iowa Writing Program at U. Iowa, although Jorie Graham's dog Cesca has been known to moonlight there when she's on tour. (Cesca won the prestigious Officer Pup Memorial Police Dog Poetry Bark in 1993, under an assumed name.)

- Eric Blarnes

Eric's new book, MAKE MY DAY : POETRY BY AND FOR PROFESSIONAL MERCENARIES, is forthcoming from Univ. of Left Overbie Press. (see special chapter on "Bored U. Politics")

↑ Index

281. The Ultimate Autodidact

Re: Ironies of Policing

Tue 12 Aug 1997

Mark pointed out:
> Oaths, like all texts, have contexts. US > loyalty oaths come out of the context of repression and stink, for many of > us, of their history, regardless of the actual words.

Yes, I agree that texts have contexts, but an oath ... not as I see it. They can only hold you to the exact words of an oath.

So many fail to understand. This guy wants to teach. He has a conscience. How can he sign the oath if he objects to some things. I say, by sticking to the exact wording and not muddying the waters with the historical context.

mark continues:

> all of whom are seen
> as servants of and subserviant to the state. Metaphorically, a teacher who > has to sign such an oath is being told that he, too, is such a servant.

Yes. A teacher in a public school is a civil servant, a public servant. That never meant knuckling under to Rush L. and his cronies.

then...

> And
> then there's the issue that even if I fully agree with an oath the fact > that I have to sign it is a violation of my freedom of speech and thought.

That's nothing compared to the promises we have to make in the business world, such as signing away copyrights and patents. Where I work I am paid to write what I am told to write, but heck, they pay. And if I don't sign, I don't work. I have written over 10,000 pages for other people. Frankly, I'm glad it's not under my own name because it's all shit. My wife has defeated the uncertainty principle in designing a particular flowmeter, but that patent went to a company. And public servants must swear to defend the Constitution? They get off easy, IMO.

but this:

> similar instance is our wonderful pledge of allegiance

Nope. It is not similar. I stopped saying this one years ago when I was in high school for the exact reasons you outline. Although I was raised catholic, I was beginning to consider atheism and I realized that people who had already chosen it were being accused of disloyalty in that pledge. The Supreme Court had just said those of us who objected did not have to say it, so I didn't. And I was proud of the kid who put up the fight.

I don't get this:

> Maybe these documents are uniquely sacred
> and should be immune to deconstruction.

It seems to me I am saying the opposite, and you are misreading me. You seem so aware of history. I don't get why the (to me) obvious daily threats to the Constitution are bundled together with it. For instance, there isn't supposed to be a standing army in peace time, but we have one. My point is, I see no attempt to deconstruct the document in your post. I see only side issues, most of which I agree with.

My advice was, and still is, read it and sign if you can. It's a good document, though it needs the ERA, for one thing.

Pete

↑ Index

282. Daniel Bouchard
the Oath thing, OR fear and oathing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

So, Charles Alexander, what did you decide about signing the paper? Enquiring minds, etc.

What a conversation this has set off.

Who was it that asked about the avant-garde signing loyalty abatements?

The word "policing" has appeared on the List lately; a word that, for me, will always remain a Boy Scout command for camp busywork, as in "police the area," i.e., look for gum wrappers in the grass, butts on the asphalt, etc.

Those of us in the advance guard got all the goods. That was in the Valley Forge Council, southeastern PA, for those of you thinking we may have pursued merit badges together some long summer ago. I did well in rowing and swimming, not so well in beekeeping and patriotism.

Yours as ever,

[redacted]

↑ Index

283. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: Ironies of Policing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

The Ultimate Autodidact wrote:
>

> Mark pointed out:
> > Oaths, like all texts, have contexts. US > > loyalty oaths come out of the context of repression and stink, for many of > > us, of their history, regardless of the actual words.
>
> Yes, I agree that texts have contexts, but an oath ... not as I see it.
> They can only hold you to the exact words of an oath.
>
> So many fail to understand. This guy wants to teach. He has a > conscience. How can he sign the oath if he objects to some things. I > say, by sticking to the exact wording and not muddying the waters with > the historical context.
>
> mark continues:
>
> > all of whom are seen
> > as servants of and subserviant to the state. Metaphorically, a teacher who > > has to sign such an oath is being told that he, too, is such a servant.
>
> Yes. A teacher in a public school is a civil servant, a public servant.
> That never meant knuckling under to Rush L. and his cronies.
>
> then...
>
> > And
> > then there's the issue that even if I fully agree with an oath the fact > > that I have to sign it is a violation of my freedom of speech and thought.
>
> That's nothing compared to the promises we have to make in the business > world, such as signing away copyrights and patents. Where I work I am > paid to write what I am told to write, but heck, they pay. And if I > don't sign, I don't work. I have written over 10,000 pages for other > people. Frankly, I'm glad it's not under my own name because it's all > shit. My wife has defeated the uncertainty principle in designing a > particular flowmeter, but that patent went to a company. And public > servants must swear to defend the Constitution? They get off easy, IMO.
>
> but this:
>
> > similar instance is our wonderful pledge of allegiance
>
> Nope. It is not similar. I stopped saying this one years ago when I was > in high school for the exact reasons you outline. Although I was raised > catholic, I was beginning to consider atheism and I realized that people > who had already chosen it were being accused of disloyalty in that > pledge. The Supreme Court had just said those of us who objected did not > have to say it, so I didn't. And I was proud of the kid who put up the > fight.

>
> I don't get this:
>
> > Maybe these documents are uniquely sacred
> > and should be immune to deconstruction.
>
> It seems to me I am saying the opposite, and you are misreading me. You > seem so aware of history. I don't get why the (to me) obvious daily > threats to the Constitution are bundled together with it. For instance, > there isn't supposed to be a standing army in peace time, but we have > one. My point is, I see no attempt to deconstruct the document in your > post. I see only side issues, most of which I agree with.
>
> My advice was, and still is, read it and sign if you can. It's a good > document, though it needs the ERA, for one thing.
>
> Pete

Pete: I, too, stopped saying the pledge when Ike slipped in "under God"--I was 10 or 11 at the time. Good for us.

Charles: I remember that this issue came up at Buffalo in the '60s, notably with Gregory Corso, who'd been hired without any credentials but his poetry [hooray for Al Cook, who served as chairman at the time, if memory serves]. He was teaching Shelley, & was a real pleasure [he included Newman Ivey White's biography as well as a collected works]. Everything went well for the first few weeks; we adjourned to Bitterman's bar across the street a few times, & the class went on till we all knew it was over, not when the bell rang. The University wanted GC to sign an oath of loyalty to the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of New York; he assented to the former, but said he'd not read the latter, & requested a copy. It took a while for someone to produce the state constitution, & it was very long. CG told the University he had no time to read it, since he was teaching the class. So he got canned. A great loss to his students, though it made an important point at the time to people who thought it made an important point. The point? Sign it, already: take the money & run. Hungry? Eat. "Got a headache? Take an aspirin." I signed one to get a teaching fellowship, without which I couldn't have afforded graduate school & would have turned my back on a career in which I've managed at least to present critiques of the USA & beyond; whether I've personally radicalized anyone, I'm not sure, but I've tried. _A Man for All Seasons_ makes a great play, but Thomas More was playing for much higher stakes than anyone today asked to take an oath like the one you've been asked to take. More important not to betray yourself by letting a government full of people who daily violate the same oath purge you. No more Gunga Dins! --Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

284. Jack Spandrift
Re: avant garde/a-v dragnet/danger a vat
Tue 12 Aug 1997

In the fifties, margarine called "avant-garde butter."

Do what you have to do, poets.

- Spandrift

p.s. on another thread: if Tom Jefferson were alive today, he would call himself "the Artist Latterly-Known as Thomas Jefferson".

↑ Index

285. Joseph Lease
Re: "avantgarde"
Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

well--in our current context--articulating the spectrum of practices and epistemologies is one of the most radical acts possible--the spectrum--

↑ Index

286. Joseph Lease
Re: "avantgarde"
Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

nb to Maria and Jordan--

new name for avant-garde poetry: poetry has basically been my position for twenty years--

I think it's what Dickinson and Whitman said--

↑ Index

287. mark weiss
Re: Ironies of Policing
Tue 12 Aug 1997

God (I mean this as an expletive), I hope this my last contribution to this thread.

1. As long as memory persists, historical context remains attached to the words that issued forth from that context. That's why the Supreme Court is interested in legislative and constitutional history and all courts are interested in common-law precedent.

2.Police, soldiers and elected and appointed government officials are servants of the state in a different sense. As they are variously armed, the state built on the constitution is threatened by overthrow if they allow their personal opinions to rule their actions on the job. A soldier in battle may think the commander's strategy is dumb, but he's not legally allowed to act on his disagreement--the chain of command, which ultimately goes back to Congress (declarations of war and appropriations) and the Commander-in-chief, is protected by his understanding of his oath. He has to subordinate his will to the authority established by the document he swears to uphold. His general or a group within government could easily, as they do in most countries, circumvent the document's process by organizing a putsch--it has been hoped that their oath and the culture of their professions will restrain them from doing so, and for the most part that hope has been rewarded. Teachers may subvert the minds of the innocent, but they don't have tanks or access to same. That's why until recent decades no one ever required an oath from them, whereas these other guys have been swearing on the bible as a condition of employment for a long, long time.

3. As to your work situation, I feel your pain.

4. I'm not trying to deconstruct the constitution, although that might be fun. It's the oaths and pledges I'm after.

4.
At 12:07 PM 8/12/97 -0500, you wrote:
>Mark pointed out:
>> Oaths, like all texts, have contexts. US >> loyalty oaths come out of the context of repression and stink, for many of >> us, of their history, regardless of the actual words.
>
>Yes, I agree that texts have contexts, but an oath ... not as I see it.
>They can only hold you to the exact words of an oath.
>
>So many fail to understand. This guy wants to teach. He has a >conscience. How can he sign the oath if he objects to some things. I >say, by sticking to the exact wording and not muddying the waters with

>the historical context.
>
>mark continues:
>
>> all of whom are seen
>> as servants of and subserviant to the state. Metaphorically, a teacher who >> has to sign such an oath is being told that he, too, is such a servant.
>
>Yes. A teacher in a public school is a civil servant, a public servant.
>That never meant knuckling under to Rush L. and his cronies.
>
>then...
>
>> And
>> then there's the issue that even if I fully agree with an oath the fact >> that I have to sign it is a violation of my freedom of speech and thought.
>
>That's nothing compared to the promises we have to make in the business >world, such as signing away copyrights and patents. Where I work I am >paid to write what I am told to write, but heck, they pay. And if I >don't sign, I don't work. I have written over 10,000 pages for other >people. Frankly, I'm glad it's not under my own name because it's all >shit. My wife has defeated the uncertainty principle in designing a >particular flowmeter, but that patent went to a company. And public >servants must swear to defend the Constitution? They get off easy, IMO.
>
>but this:
>
>> similar instance is our wonderful pledge of allegiance
>
>Nope. It is not similar. I stopped saying this one years ago when I was >in high school for the exact reasons you outline. Although I was raised >catholic, I was beginning to consider atheism and I realized that people >who had already chosen it were being accused of disloyalty in that >pledge. The Supreme Court had just said those of us who objected did not >have to say it, so I didn't. And I was proud of the kid who put up the >fight.
>
>I don't get this:
>
>> Maybe these documents are uniquely sacred

>> and should be immune to deconstruction.
>
>It seems to me I am saying the opposite, and you are misreading me. You >seem so aware of history. I don't get why the (to me) obvious daily >threats to the Constitution are bundled together with it. For instance, >there isn't supposed to be a standing army in peace time, but we have >one. My point is, I see no attempt to deconstruct the document in your >post. I see only side issues, most of which I agree with.
>
>My advice was, and still is, read it and sign if you can. It's a good >document, though it needs the ERA, for one thing.
>
>Pete
>
>

↑ Index

288. Judy Roitman
Passing this along....
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Just published--FIRST INTENSITY #9. Contributors (partial list): Diane Wakoski, Duncan McNaughton, Mike Boughn, Spencer Selby, X.J. Kennedy, Dallas Wiebe, Michael Gottlieb, Will Alexander, Jean Monod, Vincent Ferrini, Drew Gardner, Lizbeth Keiley, David Gilbert, Gloria Frym, John Isles, Rochelle Ratner, et al. Cover art: A hand-drawn, and used, "shooting target" by S. Clay Wilson, aptly entitled "Bounty Hunter" with the caption: "Grab the sky you junky polecat" (dedicated to William S. Burroughs, who helped the artist put holes in the target this past June); also six paintings by William S. Burroughs, with an introduction by Jim McCrary and recent and characteristically terse comments by Burroughs on the topic of cloning. This is likely the last journal to publish anything of William's prior to his death on August 2nd. 168 pages, perfectbound; $9 (+$2.00 p/h). Order from the publisher: Lee Chapman, FIRST INTENSITY, P.O. Box 665, Lawrence, KS 66044.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
----
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

289. Peter Landers
loyalty oath of a different color
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Charles pointed out to me, backchannel that the oath said:

I, _____ do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws of the State of Arizona; That I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same, and defend them against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office of _____ according to the best of my ability, so help me God (or, so I do affirm).

The clinker there is "and laws" which is not in the New York State oath. So I am the dolt who misread. Apologies all around.

If I had to sign that, I would balk, too. It seems to me that a teacher shouldn't have to support laws. Kids should know about the possibility of civil disobedience. Laws can't have domestic enemies, for instance, and any text that says such is lame-brained. I'd say it has always been a duty to oppose laws that one disagrees with. Now I think that the oath is un-Constitutional.

Since you and others must get past this hurdle in order to teach, sign it, anyway, and if they nail someone with it, if for instance, adultery laws are used to fire a teacher, or someone is fired for teaching Thoreau, then there's a case for the courts, if you want. IMO, the oath foreswears itself by its own un-Constitutionality.

And Mark, I agree on many points, but which is better, to sign or not. Shall we make a federal case for Charles or for the Corso case? I bet, given the same predicament, you would choose one ot the other. And I'm sure you have not finished saying your peace on this and other important issues. Or at least, I hope not. Basically, I don't think McCarthy invalidates Jefferson, but beyond that we're almost 100% agreed.

with respect for all (but the kid who called me a running dog),

Pete

↑ Index

290. Jack Foley
MEDIOCRITY in Contemporary POETRY
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Dear Friends, Poets, and All Others:

Web Chat SUNDAY, AUGUST 17, 8 p.m. (EST) on
THE TROUBLE WITH MEDIOCRITY (On Contemporary Poetry)
http://webdelsol.com/SOLCHAT/solchat.htm (Netscape 3.0 or higher)

Announcing the first of a three part series sponsored by FlashPoint (webdelsol.com/FLASHPOINT) and Web Del Sol entitled THE TROUBLE WITH MEDIOCRITY, PART I. Carlo Parcelli, a writer, bookseller, and the editor of FlashPoint--a new and bleeding edge litzine based in the Washington, DC area--will host and moderate the discussion, focusing primarily on topics noted in summary-blurbs below, i.e., L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetry, the bureaucracy of poetry, The Rule of the Poet Tyrants, and the comic tragedy of poetry's "self-betrayal."

Also, less specifically on what Carlo and many others feel to be a condition of mental and artistic palsy effecting the state of American poetry today. As Carlo so aptly puts it:

"There is the ubiquitous school of ... "Lawn Mower Poets", the "Simpering Sonneteers" or the "I-I-ME-ME-I-ME Advanced School of Navel Studies." Their only referent is his or her upper-middle class sentimentalized "personal crisis" --hairline, waistline, on-line, supermarket line, whatever. ... [They] ... are agonizingly self-absorbed and solipsistic. How can people barnacled with such bourgeois excesses speak to injustices or address historical events? ... Can they offer third world nationalist movements anythingin the way of counsel other than capitulation? [Their] poems have their solipsistic origins at the poet's window, looking to his/her favorite tree(s), or more appropriately the poem arises from the poet's couch potato, psychoanalytic, etc. Any scrap of history becomes just another referent for their suburban angst. ... The language is gassy and loose, as though the poems were written after a hearty meal. There are few dynamics, few allusions that might indicate a world beyond each poem's enervated mass and tranquilizing cliches."

PART I of THE TROUBLE WITH MEDIOCRITY will take place on August 17, 8 PM Eastern Standard Time at http://webdelsol.com/SOLCHAT/solchat.htm Netscape 3.0 or higher is necessary to take part.

Room on the Java server is limited (or so I am told), so the earlier the arrival the better chance for a seat at the table. No reservations or holding before 7:45, please. The Java chat function is fairly intuitive. Wait till the Java chat applet is fully loaded, then type in a log-on name and voila.

PART I: Excerpts from Bernstein vs. Stern---Featherweight Division (and other matters)

"My greatest disappointment in the years I have spent involved with poetry has been its lack of collegiality. The institutions of poetry have demonstrated a diffident and exclusionary cunning arising from a vast critical and editorial insecurity. The public structure of poetry is filled with frightened bureaucrats. This is largely because, mimicking more successful disciplines, poets at great imaginative cost, have created tiny fiefdoms for themselves. "

"One could point out that institutions by their very nature are exclusive and inhumane. But this only prompts the question---What are poets doing there? Today's poetry by betraying its own ethos renders itself weak and ineffectual."

"I was once given a transcript of a symposium of critics and poets. I have forgotten the time and place of the gathering, but what I do remember is an awkward exchange between Gerald Stern and Charles Bernstein on the nature and/or role of poetry, with Marjorie Perloff serving as an impromptu referee. Stern's position was that of the soporific and mawkish sentimentalist who found any reflection on the legitimacy of his poetry an incomprehensible intrusion. Bernstein, on the other hand, described a set of theoretical notions that he could not work into any context other than L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetry's tautological elegance. In the argument, Stern, by default, was awarded the world as subject. Bernstein was left sputtering. The whole exercise was embarrassing . . ."

(time not yet scheduled for Part II)

PART II: Douglas Hofstadter Disses John Cage (and more)

-- Carlo Parcelli

↑ Index

291. Jordan Davis

Re: MEDIOCRITY in Contemporary CRITICISM

Tue 12 Aug 1997

> legitimacy of his poetry an incomprehensible intrusion.

It _is_ an incomprehensible intrusion. Unless you mean someone was inquiring about the paternity of Stern's poems... what a great way to rustle up some collegiality! can't wait to crash yr server.

Love,
The Hun

↑ Index

292. nuyopoman
National Slam Finals
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Controversy (& Poetry) Reign as Mouth Almighty Wins National Slam Championship
Da Boogey Man Becomes First Male Slam Champ

(Aug. 10: Middletown CT) In a series of poetry slams marked by official protests and concluding with boos mixed with thunderous applause, Mouth Almighty came back from a semifinal defeat to Chicago to win the 8th National Poetry Slam held in the huge Freeman Auditorium before 900 screaming poetry lovers. The scores of the Finals looked like this: Mouth Almighty: Mouth Almighty 115, Chicago 110, Cleveland 109.8, Worcester 105.85.

The protests were both lodged against Mouth Almighty, a team of New York City all-stars; both were disallowed. They pointed, however, to a deep concern in the Slam Family about corporate sponsorship (Mouth Almighty is the world's first major poetry label), as well as to the all-star nature of the team: Regie Cabico, Evert Eden, Taylor Mali, Beau Sia, with Bob Holman as coach. “This begins the era of the Super Team!” shouted an ecstatic Cabico, whose coming out to Mom poem, performed as a duet Mali, was the evening’s final and highest scoring poem.

In the Individual Slam, Da Boogey Man, stalwart of the Cleveland team which was undefeated going into the Finals, read two powerful, slow-paced poems which resonated strongly in the air hanger fieldhouse. Patricia Smith, who along with Slam Founder Marc Smith was hosting the Individual Finals, announced that this was the first time in the history of Slam that a man had won the prize. DJ Renegade of Washington, DC finished second for the third year in a row, with Glenis Redmond-Sherer of Greenville, NC, taking third.

↑ Index

293. Jordan Davis
DIMINISHING RETURNS / DISREGARD
Tue 12 Aug 1997

---

that's all the monitor said .. I was a little apprehensive about installing Windows 00+Content on my Apple Sauce .. I spoke into the microphone -- get POETICS mail -- and let my gaze drop onto the beaten Library of America Gertrude Stein, somewhere in the middle of Making of Making of Making of Americans. Somebody's got to do something about the 500 message I day limit, I was thinking, when I looked up and saw the words the computer was speaking ...

↑ Index

294. henry
Re: DIMINISHING RETURNS / DISREGARD
Tue 12 Aug 1997

Jordan, is this part of the "everything is always less" slipknotjestreamthread?

the Nw Yolker had an article about Frank Gehry [note the Nagram] avoiding architectural/critical debates & just making things. Here's someone who turns back the technical in the most advanced degree of a profession into the handmade. See the titanium museum just put up in Bilboa Spain. the space of the handmade poem. [Avoidance was not neutrality, just attention.]

Avant-garde = handmade.

Avant-garde = homemade.

Avant-garde = unprocessed, unscreened.

the faded Bhagavad by G. Stein on the Himalayan hillside rocks.

Dan Bouchard's MASS AVE was in my mailbox today. He's done a very simple handmade thing - put a magazine together of a few poets, not too much of a miscellany, just the poems. very simple. foregrounds the poems. easing the mind. homemade lemonade. walking home today there were two blonde sisters, must have been six & eight, by the side of the road selling a "Moth Show". I thought it was lemonade at first - but no, a moth show. they had some little cartons - one had some grass in it, they said the caterpillar had crawled away. The other had a little dead blue moth in it, which they said was a butterfly because it was prettier than the moths [I said some moths are like that, but they could be right.] Then they had a big jar with 2 live brown moths. The small one said, "My sister will show you the cemetery we made for the dead moths." I said that's o.k., I have to get on home. They had 2 handpainted signs - one said 15 cents, the other 55 cents - I said, which is it? They said 55. But they didn't have change, so I gave them a dollar. The show was worth it. I would have liked to have met their mother - they both had blue-green eyes.

- Henry Hank

↑ Index

295. S. Preston
Re: "avantgarde"
Wed 13 Aug 1997

---

you might check out the last Talisman (Boston/uk) issue the Boston section edited by Michael Franko contains an interesting statement re the avant garde& the idea of new - & the postioning of Thore Feidt & Corbett w/ Torra /Barrett & Lansing et al does what he (franko)is talking about... the whole of the selection being a strange activity of the present.... Far more interesting than any"AG positioning"'.

regards
S Preston

↑ Index

296. David Bromige
imperialist bow-wows/avant-ga-ga's/abduction by aliens
Wed 13 Aug 1997

Kent, at last! someone i know (in the cyber-sense) who has been abducted. I want to tell you what your experience was like.

It was like everyone else's. Who has been taken up into a USAF anti-gravity craft. The laser beam that carries the anti-gravity charge 'beamed' you up. The distortion imposed upon vision by the anti-gravitational field made humans in spacesuits resemble the 'alien' as often described. They probe yr orifices because thats what they find the most fun to do, its not for science its to kill time while you have an abduction experience so that you will talk about it later & further the space-creatures myth.

These flashbacks you have been having, that cause you to doubt yr own perception f reality, will cease thanks to this explanation i am giving to you. There will be no more Yasusadas. And those wishing to continue discussing Yasusada One will do so until there is no one left who wishes to discuss it with them. People will stop talking during movies. Drivers will rediscover the use of the turn signal.Instead of applying the term "avant garde" or any substitute therefore to contemporary poets, people will name that poet and name any other poet they wish to associate with him/her. Instead of "The avant garde writers Susan Howe and Clark Coolidge..." we will read "The writers Susan Howe and Clark Coolidge...". Readers who dont know the work of the named writers will have to look it up. If one or more of them exclaims to him/herself, "Great God, Carruthers, Avant-gardistes !", this cry will not reach us where we sit.

You know how sometimes a post comes via e-mail that has 40 other e-ddresses in its header, along with your own? Well _that_ is how scholarly books and articles will look, with 40 or more names of poets lumped together wherever the author needs to make a general statement that applies to each of them. "As Robert Hass, Brenda Hillman, Robert Pinsky, Tess Gallagher, Stephen Mitchell, Jane Hirshfield, Diana O'Hehir, Bob Perelman, Aldon Neilsen, Doug Powell, Cydney Chadwick, Ron Silliman, Lyn Hejinian, Steven Vincent, Jack Foley, Dodie Bellamy, Kevin Killian, Richard Silberg, Joyce Jenkins, Jack Hirshman, Kathleen Fraser, Steve Tills, Jennifer Moxley, Steve Benson, Michael Davidson, Todd Barron, Douglas Messerli, Mark Wallace, Lisa Robertson, Deanna

Ferguson, George Stanley, Joe Napora, Marilyn Chin, Lucille Clifton, Dianne Di Prima, Steve Farmer, Victor Hernandez Cruz, Duane BigEagle, Nick Piombino, and David Bromige demonstrate, the linear, like the aerial on a Buick Park Lane, can be bent without being snapped off." Or "unlike," as experience dictates. It is a pleasure to write the name of a poet. There will be more pleasure in the writing of scholarly articles. Some of these will consist only in a list of names. Soon all of them will consist only in a list of names. But only with the coming of the fascist world state will these lists be identical.

Poetry will be classified into just two categories: safe and unsafe, as in sex. So it will be an allowable shortcut to refer to "the unsafe poetry of Barrett Watten" or "the safe poetry of Dana Gioia." It will be a redundancy of sorts, but it holds the possibility of humor, so lets keep it.

Yes, it is a bright future we contemplate, but one day the alien myth will be used to shut everything down and world fascism will be accomplished.

We will still have music--but it may not be Mary Martin singing "My heart belongs to daddy."

David

↑ Index

297. David Bromige permissions for Kevin
Wed 13 Aug 1997

Kevin, you have my permission to reprint the excerpts you wish from the works of those poets. David

↑ Index

298. Layne Russell
Re: looking for the Vedic scholar
Wed 13 Aug 1997

---

dear Poetics,

I lost (deleted?) or misplaced the msg from the list person who is a Vedic scholar.... he posted within a week or so ago.

can someone help me? who is this and his email address?

thank you!

Layne

[redacted]

↑ Index

299. David R. Israel
Re: National Slam Finals
Wed 13 Aug 1997

Yo Po'man,

thanks for the sporty reportage.

> (Aug. 10: Middletown CT) In a series of poetry slams marked by official protests and concluding with boos mixed with thunderous applause, Mouth Almighty came back from a semifinal defeat to Chicago to win the 8th National Poetry Slam held in the huge Freeman Auditorium before 900 screaming poetry lovers. . . .

Question / request:

care to share with us any excerpt(s), sample(s) of the sort of material that was offered at this big showdown event? -- those of us who've not tuned into the mode may yet remain curious to see such work (at least) in the quietude of the home screen.

best,
d.i.

.
,
.....,
1....., \\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\/\0/\/////////////////...'
.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o.o....'
///\\\\\\\/////////\/\\\o///\/\\\\\\\\\\\/////\\\...'
.David.....Raphael.....Israel...'
<[redacted]>
[&/[redacted]]
{telephonic.location.202/[redacted]}
|"...sleuthing out all clues, blues & news"|
\\\/////\\\\\\\\\\/\//&\\\/\/////////\\\\\\///..'

↑ Index

300. Mark Prejsnar
Re: avant academe
Wed 13 Aug 1997

>
> A couple of points, however. There is a tendency to think of academy as > institution (correct) and avant garde as... anarchy/utopia/individualism/?

> Just a tendency, mind you. And this leads you to formulate a picture of > unestablished avantgardists pointing envy (or whatever) at established > avantgardists because of their position in the academy -- i.e. in another > institution.
>
> No this is intra-institutional politics. The avantgarde (non-mainstream > poetry, cosa nostra -- call it what you want) is an institution, and > position in it is critical to and at stake for all those committed to the > institution.
>

Tom--
This is interesting, vis-a-vis several of my previous points; first off, it reiterates that interesting spatial image of "avant-garde" as a relatively static zone, rather than an advancing attack...Thus showing again how most of us have toned-down the original feel of "avant-garde"...

But more peculiar and fascinating is the claim that "a-g" is an institution...I think it is probably more a series of fragmentary zones of activity...

In other words, it's important to be clear whether we're talking about a sociological phenomenon, an identifiable social grouping we can study (as in your post) or a series of esthetic engagements and projects. In the former sense, both "workshop poetry" and non-mainstream writing are of course institutional matrices, with magazines, imprints, sources of funding; there is of course a huge disparity in available resources, and one is closer to the basic economic life of things, can provide more jobs, etc.--is linked as it were to other institutions, that provide a support structure. But in the latter sense of these terms, neither a workshop poet nor an "experimental" (hate that word) poet, is necessarily absorbed by an "institution." I've known (indeed know) practitioners of both approaches, who for various reasons are marginal to or outside the institutional frameworks--whether APR/university or Sun and Moon/Naropa--and in this sense, there is not a single economicosociological network, that automatically encompasses everything written in a given style or tendency.

Also, the emphasis on "envy" etc. is interesting (like the original phrasing of this thread in terms of "policing")...Some of the most remarkable writers I know seem to have very little concern with shoving and scuffling for position; their concern with the activity and the work, and relative lack of concern with rewards and ego, can be quite striking...

mark p.
atlanta

↑ Index

301. George Thompson
Re: DIMINISHING RETURNS / DISREGARD
Wed 13 Aug 1997

Hello Henry,

Unless I am completely mistaken, that was the avant-garde you met yesterday.

George

  walking home today there were two blonde >sisters, must have been six & eight, by the side of the road selling a >"Moth Show". I thought it was lemonade at first - but no, a moth show.
>they had some little cartons - one had some grass in it, they said the >caterpillar had crawled away. The other had a little dead blue moth in it, >which they said was a butterfly because it was prettier than the moths >[I said some moths are like that, but they could be right.] Then they had >a big jar with 2 live brown moths. The small one said, "My sister will >show you the cemetery we made for the dead moths." I said that's o.k., I have >to get on home. They had 2 handpainted signs - one said 15 cents, the other >55 cents - I said, which is it? They said 55. But they didn't have change, >so I gave them a dollar. The show was worth it. I would have liked >to have met their mother - they both had blue-green eyes.
>
>- Henry Hank

↑ Index

302. James Finnegan
Re: snapstream cracklestream popstream
Wed 13 Aug 1997

In a message dated 97-08-13 02:10:21 EDT, you write:

> *I hope I'm wrong, but I somehow can only read that as a snide bit against Henry Taylor. He is, after all, a "mainstream" poet (get thee behind me terminology). Yet, Henry Taylor is really an experimental poet.*

Tom, thank's for correcting my D.J. Renegade typo.Yes, D.J.'s one of the best on the slam scene--for the last three years he's been runner-up in the Slam National Individual Finals. His writing (I know only the handful of pieces that I've seen him perform) would probably "hold up" of the page, as well.

I am a fan of Henry Taylor's poetry, though I have trouble seeing him as "out there" or "on the edge," if that's the sense you mean by "experimental."

I find it strange to tag work with "the finish" of Henry Taylor's as EXP.

It was certainly a surprise for certain slam poets to see H. Taylor at the Nationals, I can tell you that Bob Holman (Nuyurican/Mouth Almighty) was very deferential and praising of Taylor the night of the Semis, when Taylor, already knocked out, served as judge. Most of the poets and slammers at the Nationals didn't know Henry Taylor from a hole in the ground. Some (emphasis on "some") don't read much.

I applaud Taylor for participating. I didn't get to talk to him enough to get at his real intent--was it: a serious attempt to win it all; to study, field work on, so to speak, the slam phenomenon; or just curiousity, and an interest in exploring his work as performance before large and appreciative crowd? As I said, he got knocked out by the second round--however, the night I saw him recite ("Landscape With Tractor"), he was applauded with vigor and sincerity.

Finnegan

↑ Index

303. Ira Lightman

Re: Derrida and Language Writing -Reply

Wed 13 Aug 1997

Hi Michael

Yes please, I'd love a copy, but don't have a fax.
I could get the use of one to receive, but don't have the number now. My address is:

104 Rosary Road
Norwich NR1 4DA
England

Let me know whether you'd like me to get the fax number instead, and I will.

What Derrida have you read? Can I ask you what you think of my question: what textual comparisons would you make?

Gratefully

Ira
On Mon, 11 Aug 1997 11:15:58 -0400 Michael Coffey wrote:

> From: Michael Coffey <[redacted]>
> Date: Mon, 11 Aug 1997 11:15:58 -0400
> Subject: Derrida and Language Writing -Reply
> To: [redacted]
>

> dear ira:
>
> i wrote an essay about 10 years ago comparing Steve McCaffery's > notion of "General Economy" to JD's theory of writing (grammatology); it > was published in the toronto-based Open Letter issue devoted to Steve's > work. This piece centered less on the textual comparison's between the > two in favor a comparison of theoretical positions. As i recall it, > mccaffery's privileging (yup, that's the word i used) of the "excess," the > "waste" in a general economy of language and jd's interest in what is > contained in the differance that rides above actual langauge.
>
> i have a copy at home that i can fax to you if you are intersested.
>
>
> >>> Ira Lightman <[redacted]> 08/11/97 11:37am
>>>
> Hi folks
>
> Is anyone out there working on links and comparisons
> between the textual practices/compositions of > Derrida and any of the Language Writers?

↑ Index

304. nuyopoman
National Slam
Wed 13 Aug 1997

Here's the text of Taylor Mali's first round poem. Sans head jerks on "like" (and head jerks that "replace" or "place" the "likes" as Lilly is weaned), parachute opening "uhwHOOMp," and tight gesture choreography, for your sheer textual enjoyment.

B>Like Lilly Like Wilson
by Taylor Mali

I'm writing the poem that will change the world,
and it's Lilly Wilson at my office door.
Lilly Wilson, the recovering like addict,
the worst I've ever seen.
So bad the whole eighth grade started calling her Like Lilly Like Wilson.
'Til I declared my class a Like-Free Zone and she could not speak for days.

But when she finally did, it was to say,
Mr. Mali, this is . . . so hard.
Now I have to . . . think before I . . . say anything.

Imagine that, Lilly.

Its for your own good.
Even if you don't like . . .
it.

I'm writing the poem that will change the world,
and it's Lilly Wilson at my office door.
Lilly is writing a research paper for me about how gays like shouldn't be allowed to adopt children.
I'm writing the poem that will change the world,
and it's Like Lilly Like Wilson at my office door.

Lilly's having trouble finding sources,
which is to say, ones that back her up:
They all argue in favor of what I thought I was against.

And it took all four years of college,
three years of graduate school, and every incidental teaching experience I have ever had to let out only,

That's a real interesting problem, Lilly.
But what do you propose to do about it?
That's what I want to know.

And the eighth-grade mind is a beautiful thing;
Like a new-born baby's face, you can often see it change before your very eyes.

I can't believe I'm saying this, Mr. Mali, but I think I'd like to switch sides.

And I want to tell her to do more than just believe it, but to enjoy it! That changing your mind is one of the best ways of finding out whether you still have one.

Or even that minds are like parachutes, that it doesn’t so much matter what you pack them with so long as they open at the right time.

I want to say all this but manage only,
Lilly, I am like so impressed with you.

So I finally taught someone something, namely, how to change your mind.
And learned in the process that if I ever change the world it’s going to be one eighth grader at a time.

↑ Index

305. henry gould
avant-garde
Wed 13 Aug 1997

---

some interesting quotes from Mikhail Epstein's wonderful book AFTER THE FUTURE:

"A.M. Pachenko, a specialist in Old Russian culture, writes, 'The life of the holy fool is a conscious negation of the beautiful, a rejection of the customary ideal, or, more precisely, an inversion of this ideal and an elevation of the ugly to an aesthetically positive level.' But the same is brought as an accusation against the avant-garde by its critics from the standpoint of 'good taste' and 'high ideals' (examples my be found in the work of Marxist and Orthodox religious writers alike). The avant-garde is a holy fool's art, consciously going forth to its own humiliation, to the mutilation of its own aesthetic face, even to the point that a urinal may take a sculpture's place on display, and a pathetic, twisted 'dyr bur schil ubeschur' may take the place of beautiful poetic harmonies."

"Clearly, such holy foolery is an anti-aesthetic phenomenon, but may also be positively defined as a religious phenomenon... the significance of the avant-garde as a religious negation of art by artistic means becomes clear. Art becomes impoverished, pathetic in order to partake of God's fate..."

"The artist bespatters his public with spit and abuse, so as to provoke its indignation and mockery in return. As for the holy fool, 'he continually provokes his viewers...casts stones, muck and filth at them...outrages their sense of propriety.' This characterization of a holy fool may equally well be applied to the scandalous conduct of the Russian and Italian futurists, the French dadaists and surrealists. Scandal, a flagrant toppling of social norms, exposes a more deeply paradoxical system of values, wherein the high takes on the visage of the low."

"Alexei Kruchenykh's 'dyr bul schil ubeschur' or Velimir Khlebnikov's 'gzi-gzi-gzeo' are akin to glossolalia and oblique mutterings, comprehensible to the holy fool alone... obliqueness is a device for expressing the inexpressibility of the inexpressible - things that do not yield themselves to the tongue..."

Epstein links the avant-garde to the iconoclastic radicalism of the 2nd commandment (thou shalt not make any graven image...): "Avant-garde art is closer to the icon than to artistic painting, and still closer to the characters & signs found in monotheistic churches, than to the icon: its subject is the passing away of the world, rolled up and sealed like a scroll... This is the realism of an apocalytpic age that has realized the unstable and spectral nature of all worldly arrangements. This is apocalyptic realism."

But Epstein doesn't rest in a dramatic or overblown characterization of the avant-garde. He concludes this particular essay with a closer look at some contemporary conceptualist poets (Rubinshtein, Prigov, & others) & finds their essence in a kind of humility, or dispersal of bombast. "It becomes clear that the role of the contemporary avant-garde and of conceptualism in particular is to aid in the process of self-purification that Russian culture must undergo. The tendency toward avant-gardism in our sociopolitical history is both underlined and crossed out.... Conceptualism is the gloomy but gay funeral procession of all the ideas that tormented the soul of the people for centuries, with their mania for power, unity, victory, and obligatory happiness . But as it sends false faith down to defeat, conceptualism declines to utter its own. Without making any assertions about God, it acknowledges deviation from him."

Epstein's essay is perhaps already "dated" in its reflections on 80s & early 90s Russian poetry. But it seems clear that he is presenting a more historically and otherwise-specific definition of "avant-garde" than we have been throwing around. & for us "scandal" would take on another meaning in a culture in which art is very much in fashion, trendy, and the power to shock is "played out" in order to show there is no longer any such power (over & over), no scandal (unless the scandal of "failure"). The anti-aesthetic was co-opted here long ago, it seems. Or maybe just echoed over megaphones. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

306. Mark Wallace
D.J. Renegade, Henry Taylor, etc.
Wed 13 Aug 1997

I want to second Tom Mandel's comments about the interest of the work of D.J. Renegade and Henry Taylor, but perhaps also to expand a little about them.

D.J. is a D.C. poet who, about a decade ago, more or less "chose" to become homeless for several years, so that instead of spending all his time at annoying jobs to make enough money to live in D.C., he could spend all his time reading up on the history of poetry and much else in D.C's many public libraries, including the Library of Congress. At this point he's quite well known both here in D.C. and on the national slam circuit. He was the subject of a feature length article, with front page photograph, of one issue of Washington's City Paper, a widely-distributed free weekly that reaches several hundred thousand people with every issue. Along with much else about him, that issue dealt in great detail on the way he had recently lost two national slam championships--the reason for both losses being ONLY that he exceeded the time limit for the reading by a few seconds in each case. Either that's a silly thing to do, or a silly rule in the first place--my own sense is probably the latter.

With a few exceptions, I've never been all that convinced about his poems on the page. But he is a truly electrifying performer when he chooses to be, capable of taking listeners on a real roller coaster ride. To my mind, though, the subject of gender is something of a problem in his work--women tend for the most part in his work to be people he is trying to love but who don't love him back, althugh he doesn't quite go so far as objectifying them, at least usually. Probably this would be a flaw in anyone's poetry, but it seems particularly important in the context of the identity issues that motivate much of his work.

I agree with Tom that Henry Taylor's essay on Jackson Mac Low is very strong, and Henry's own work using some of Mac Low's methods is quite interesting. I published one of those pieces in Situation #12. As he himself has said, that part of his work is TRULY mystifying to the more traditional formalist poets who tend to be his compatriots. Still, there's something perhaps troubling about it--the ONLY kind of of more structurally innovative work that he's done is work using computer methods. I'm a big fan of such work, but I get the sense, sometimes, that there may be the implication that he doesn't see the difference between computer generated texts and ALL "avant garde" poetry, as if, to put it into terms that he might use, he still hasn't put into practice the idea of consciously CRAFTING poems in other than traditional structures. He'll let computers generate alternative structures, but he won't try to "write" in such structures the way he will "write" in traditional ones.

Both D.J. and Henry have been invited to read, and did read, in several of the reading series we sponsor here in D.C. for "avant garde" work, as well in the venues of slam poetry (and, in Henry's case, for academic audiences). Recently, there was a reading at Border's in which, according to the promotional information, "slam poets" directly challenged "academic poets" to a performance slam--who "won" depended, in this case, on which kind of work people liked better in the first place. But this was only one of a recent group of events in which these two "groups" appear together on the same stage. A CD, compiled by Jeffrey McDaniel, features work from the slam series "Live at the Black Cat"

(I may not have this title correct) that has Henry, D.J., and others on it--I would appreciate anyone who can remind me of the label.

Although Tom says he probably wouldn't dare perform at a slam, Rod Smith, Buck Downs, myself and several others have performed our more "avant garde" (if you will) work at quite a few Black Cat slams. We've done things like multi-voice pieces and other approaches, and I even read once from my new Edge Book NOTHING HAPPENS AND BESIDES I WASN'T THERE while sitting on the floor with my back to the audience. We got good applause--my own personal highlight in applause came at the point that I gave the audience the finger. They loved it. Our work didn't make it onto the CD, although Jeff McDaniel later said to me he thought he had made a mistake in leaving it off. I don't see it so much as a conscious attempt to leave "avant garde" poetries out as it was, perhaps, a failure to think about including such work.

When Jeff left D.C. for L.A. last year, the Black Cat series seems to have died, and the D.C. slam scene has been a little harder for me at least to track down, because I don't hear from anyone who tells me where they're going on, and they're not as well advertised as they used to be. Still, I think it's at least partly true to say that while there seem to be more meetings between "slam poets" and "academic poets" on the D.C. slam scene these days, avant garde work for the most part is NOT part of that scene, although again, that's not because anyone's being PREVENTED from reading. But it's a scene, and to be part of it you have to be part of it, and to feel like there's some value in your being part of it.

On a side note, Robert Hale seems to have "cautioned" me twice now not to forget that historical limiations on the very possibility of what writing can be make it impossible for someone to write "what they want." It's a point I've looked at a number of times myself, although Robert can't be faulted for not knowing that. Still, Robert, if you'll backchannel me with your mailing address, I'd be glad to send you a copy of my recent chapbook of poetics dialogues with Jefferson Hansen, which brings up the issue many times. Having said all that, though, the fact that there may literally be some things our historical moment prevents us from knowing about what writing might be (although I assume also that we can't know what we're prevented from knowing, because otherwise we'd know it), I don't think that that makes the idea that one might write as one wants a "fantasy." One chooses what one wants to write from all the available options one can imagine--such options may not be endless but one can still choose to want them. So, frankly, I DO write what I want. Of course, the next step after that is that one will be faced with the consequences of that choice.

Lastly, I'm sorry if Maria Damon or anyone else perceived me to be attacking her "personally." That was not my intention, nor was it my intention even to analyze the totality of her involvements. Rather, I was analyzing what I saw as the confusions in a few particular comments, with an eye not so much to attacking anyone as to contributing to the chance of thinking through what seems to me an important problem. I still stand by my analysis, although it was meant as no more final than anything else on this list. But to the extent that any of my previous comments actually DID attack her personally (which I'm still not sure they did), or even to the extent that they can be construed as such, I certainly apologize for that aspect, at least, of what they said.

Mark Wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

307. Stephen C. Ellwood

Re: ( ) (fwd)

Wed 13 Aug 1997

Second thing

I am at the other end. brutalizing myself, looking for action, told Dandy I was hot for him, drunk and on atavan onpurpose so the words would just slide out like noodles, like strings of pearl=s for him, they shouldve been, he shouldve seen them that way but he didnt. I threw myself on a errect penis, it went straight through me, ooh the bruises. I bruised and gnashed and shook and slid with all my desperate might. Sandy said no

Dandy said, when I called him this morning to say please dont tell Bruisy, I was wrong to say those things and I do not want to hurt Bruisy and it it would, he said, "please dont think that I dont feel compassion for you just cause I dont feel passion" I would care if I really cared about him. Its just the hot flicker of sex and rejection I am chasing, what Slim cant give, what I cant get from Slim.

Now hes worried that Ill be doe eyed and downcast around him, but he understande so little. It couldve been anyone for me, and I know, though he might deny it, that he only said no because he doesnt know his own heart. I am a queen to him, I know it, I am certain, he could not not want me.

And I am the bearer of precious gifts, soft words which explode when you stroke them or let yourself remember them. I have given Dandy words to recall as he falls asleep. Which will half rouse his cock, but maybe will just make him wince, cause he thinks I am lame. I dont feel anything for him. Its just the thrill in the air of a glance that leaves a man hard, frightened and obsessed. I thought he might be like that.

Fawn,I want someone like that!!!! I want to feel my hard powwer. I want them to lick and whimper and beg, and be cute and be my equal and change to something else, a King. And throughout I dont want to lose Slim. I want someone who will match me and up the stakes. I want to be hot for someone sexually for once!! And them to resist me, I want Dandy to come to me and admit he is broken by love for me, and craves me, and hates it and is bathed in shame from it.

I want the man, the man, give me the cool sexy horny useless fucked up speechless with reverance and terror man. Make him say no and yes. Make him kill himself because he feels his body cannot contain a love this gigantic and angry and fearsome and tesselating. I want them dead from love, like me.

Yours in solidarity and vigilance, sister.

Emily Vey Duke.

↑ Index

308. David Bromige

carelessness on my part imperialist bow wow avant ga-ga's

Thu 14 Aug 1997

when kent told me he'd been abducted by space aliens, i knew he was only kidding. But what i didnt notice was he told me this back channel.

I apologize to kent for leading our fellow listlings to believe kent believed he had been abducted. Nor did I believe he had, but i do believe others believe they have. And that was good enough for me. Sorry, kent. I knew you were putting me on. I knew we were kidding back n forth flirting with paranoid fantasies & the saaying Are you paranoid if theyre really out to get you? Fact is, it takes a good paranoid mindset to cook up a hoax, to play poker, and to see the truth of the present.It helps with poetry also.

But in future i'll read the return address more carefully. David

↑ Index

309. robert drake

Cybpheranthology update: Potepoets added

Thu 14 Aug 1997

this is to let you know that the CybpherAnthology of Discontiguous Literatures project is in the process of being updated; an index has now been added that includes Potepoetzine 1 thru 3 and Potepoettext 1 thru 5, edited by Peter Ganick.

these include work by: Andrew Levy, Dan Raphael, Nick Piombino, Shiela E. Murphy, Ron Silliman, Clemente Padin, David Bromige, Cydney Chadwick, Andrew Mossin, Kim Dawn, Loss Pequeno Glazier, Douglas Barbour, Nico Vassilakis, Bob Harrison... among others. if these names sound familiar (but the work behind 'em is not), you're invited to stop by:

http://www.ims.csuohio.edu/va/VAIntro.html

you are also all invited to contribute to the critical conversation that the project is aimed at instigating. see the intro for more info, or contact me direct.

asever
luigi, etc.

↑ Index

310. Rebecca Weldon
Re: the misery of poetry
Thu 14 Aug 1997

The only Thai poets I know who use computers work in academia and most budgets do not provide for email. The only one I know with email works for a large marketing firm. Most poetry here is handwritten and sung, not read. One of Thailand's finest poets is known as one of its finest painters; his written work is sealed in the darkness of the frames. I know because I ran Chiang Rai's one and only gallery: Ahimsa (fallen victim, unfortunately, to the disintegration of the Thai economy); for three years I hung these poems facing the wall so that the paintings would sing.

At 08:57 AM 12/08/1997 -0500, Maria wrote: >actually i find this charming and not at all banal. at the level of >individual practice, this kind of stuff is fine with me (for example, i >don't own a tv). but at the level of mindless pontification and >self-justifying moralisms, forget it.
>
>At 11:40 AM -0700 8/11/97, mark weiss wrote:
>>An extreme example: I'm translating a Cuban poet who has just moved to >>Spain after 30 years' residence in NY. Email would make my life a lot >>easier, but this otherwise normal and pleasant man doesn't believe in >>typewriters, let alone computers.
>>
>>At 09:56 AM 8/11/97 -0500, you wrote:
>>>maria, that really IS banal...
>>>
>>>mebbe some of the more acclaimed poets out there who rail against emedia

>>>should spend a little time getting their feet wet in same (not that the >>>radio or tv, say, are UNelectronic devices---i think some may have >>>forgotten that these items are plugged in too)... personally, i think the >>>resistance given voice to (by nobel-laureate poets, for example) to things >>>electronic reflects their having intuited that the earth is moving >>>under their feet...
>>>
>>>best,
>>>
>>>joe
>>>
>>>
>
>

↑ Index

311. David Bromige
avant garde (chax)/to swear a mighty oath
Thu 14 Aug 1997

I wouldnt want anyone judging my poetry who hadnt ever speculated about the similarities among drag, draw, drawl, crawl and trawl. There needs to be an exam these persons must take & pass before they can judge poetry. You dont get to be a judge at a musical recital w/o knowing about chords keys modulation pace pitch or at least playing scales. But people think (?) because language "comes right out of them" thats all it takes to know poetry. But they dont think an ability to recognize a fart qualifies them to judge music. Just because i can differentiate (with difficulty, I admit) among singles, fives, tens and twenties, doesnt make me a financial adviser. Its hard enough to find a jury of one's peers (due to the balkanization of american poetry) : a jury of the frost-bitten or the sandburged is intolerable. How has this been allowed to come about? Its like, the less you know, the less prejudiced you will be. I think _I_ should administer the Pentagon black budget. AAggghh.

Likewise, how can persons less sensitive to the ramifications of a word, have the right to make you swear to be loyal to the state? They cant hear the nuances, present & potential, of those words. To them it means something between love your mother & dont make waves. Or put your head in this trap. They dont hear the history singing in it, they dont see the stupidity lying in wait within it. Noone should draw up a loyalty oath who hasnt written essays on the words loyalty and oath, and those essays awarded A's by a panel of linguists, poets & political scientists of all stripes. When the pretense of equality reigns, stupidity is enthroned. Stupid people have a right to live, thats what civilization must mean, but the tonedeaf shouldnt be sitting in judgement on child prodigies. Existence makes the law an ass. Noone should be allowed to flush a toilet who hasnt cleaned an outhouse. Who hasnt gone a day without water in the desert. Who hasnt dug a well all morning long, until the drops of dew disappear from the desert rose and reappear on his forehead. Noone should be permitted to judge a poetry contest who fails to diagram that last sentence. Who is custodiating the custodians? Who has to clean up after the janitors? I have nothing against the demotic--just give me a break. Cut me sone slack, here. How did everything get turned ass-backwards? Why are these drooling nonentities ruling our minds? And when are we going to send the marines to switzerland and reclaim the savings & loan money that belongs to you & me --$20 grand per person? Dont get me started. David

↑ Index

312. Layne Russell

poem

Thu 14 Aug 1997

This poem is written in 7 stanzas of 3 lines each. Email will show it with wrapped lines because the lines are long. Please imagine the lines in their full extension. Thanks!

Layne
----------

Sushila's shawl

dear Sushila your shawl how you gave it to me how I wore it December in Bombay December in south India how you wrapped me in the spring peach shawl a cotton so fine falling like water in the sun

how we met by the temple of Hanuman and you gave me saris white and blue the handsewn white petticoat your white laughter and dark eyes your stories of the great one in a village of south India in the hanging gardens by the Arabian Sea how you told me secrets whispers on a wood bench splashes on dark rocks full Indian moon falling like water down warm slopes of Bombay night

how I listened to every word to every pause to the light in your hands and eyes to the movement of the shawl the movement of my breathing and yours the movement of the water below and our feet on the stones

how I still have the shawl oh how I still have it how I took it to south India laid it out on the hill above the village that night after seeing the great one

how I sat under the moon slept there woke in deep Christmas night

how no one understood the shawl the hill the moon or my going but you did Sushila back in the city you took me in and your father gave me his bed his place on the screened porch above Bombay streets with the shining black birds

how I stayed with you till it was time to go how I fit it all into my pack
the saris the petticoat the books the little buddha the stories the moon and the shawl falling like water in the sun Sushila like water in the spring peach sun

© August 1997 llrussell

↑ Index

313. henry gould
Re: avant-garde
Thu 14 Aug 1997

let me revise my previous statements. in our society the power to shock is both still around AND co-opted. Witness the attacks on arts organizations around the country by fundamentalist groups. In a sense these political organizations "co-opt" scandal by incorporating it into political power strategies of name-calling & scapegoating. At the other extreme, corporations co-opt scandal (or sexuality) & use it to sell products.

let me repeat, in my lexicon avant-garde = handmade. I view art as manual labor, blue-collar work, also cottage industry, self-employment. Necessarily local though not necessarily parochial (in fact ultimately cosmopolitan in a rooted sense).

homemade space is space made home. this is dangerous talk for blind corporations, parasite institutions & old boy's clubs. Imagine community empowerment reining in corporate power. Oral history poetry theater. "Bring back New Bedford fishing." Hey, there goes Maximus... - Henry Gould

↑ Index

314. Sylvester Pollet
Foucault/heterotopia
Thu 14 Aug 1997

I asked a friend for that citation, and here's the reply:
>
>Here's a response from a UTOPIA-L poster to your forwarded query about >Foucault and heterotopia, in case nobody has yet answered it:

>
>Date: Wed, 13 Aug 1997 10:57:06 -0400
>From: Andy Wood [redacted] <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: foucault query again
>
>A translation of Foucault's discussion of heterotopia may be found in
>
>Foucault, M. (1986). Of other spaces. Diacretics, 16, 22-27.
>
>Also, Edward Soja has done some wonderful work on heterotopia. See, >for example:
>
>Soja, E.W. (1996). Thirdspace: journeys to Los Angeles and other >real-and-imagined places. Cambridge, MA: Blackwell.
>
>I hope this helps!
>
>Andy Wood
>Center for Utopian Studies
>http://oak.cats.ohiou.edu/~aw148888/

↑ Index

315. KENT JOHNSON

Re: carelessness on my part imperialist bow wow avant ga-ga's

Thu 14 Aug 1997

On 13 August, David Bromige wrote:
> when kent told me he'd been abducted by space aliens, i knew he was only > kidding.

David:
Kidding only until last night, when something truly remarkable happened to me. I will explain later.
Kent

↑ Index

316. KENT JOHNSON
oh god
Thu 14 Aug 1997

---

oh god, I meant to send that last message to David Bromige back channel!
Kent

↑ Index

317. KENT JOHNSON
anyone?
Thu 14 Aug 1997

Does anyone know anything about the following address on the web? "Writing the Speculative: A Symposium on Poetry and Knowledge" (May 3, 1997, Stanford University) http://shc.stanford.edu/shc/poetry.knowledge.html

It comes up under a key search, but when I try to go in, I get "Error: 404. File not found. Check the URL you are using."

Any info anyone could provide on this interesting-sounding site? Thanks, Kent

↑ Index

318. dbkk
Re: avant garde (chax)/to swear a mighty oath
Thu 14 Aug 1997

> I wouldnt want anyone judging my poetry who hadnt ever speculated about the similarities among drag, draw, drawl, crawl and trawl. There needs to be an exam these persons must take & pass before they can judge poetry. You dont get to be a judge at a musical recital w/o knowing about chords keys modulation pace pitch or at least playing scales. But people think (?) because language "comes right out of them" thats all it takes to know poetry. But they dont think an ability to recognize a fart qualifies them to judge music. Just because i can differentiate (with difficulty, I admit) among singles, fives, tens and twenties, doesnt make me a financial adviser. Its hard enough to find a jury of one's peers (due to the balkanization of american poetry) : a jury of the frost-bitten or the sandburged is intolerable. How has this been allowed to come about? Its like, the less you know, the less prejudiced you will be. I think _I_ should administer the Pentagon black budget. AAggghh.

Yes, yes, yes!

Dodie

↑ Index

319. Joseph Lease
Re: "avantgarde"
Thu 14 Aug 1997

I agree absolutely with the point in favor of the Talisman Boston section--wonderfully generative work!!!

Joseph Lease

↑ Index

320. charles alexander
Re: anyone?
Thu 14 Aug 1997

Kent,

Try
http://shc.stanford.edu/shc/1996-1997/96-97events/poetry.knowledge.html

But this just gives a schedule. I'm not sure it tells you much about what the symposium was like. Perhaps Hank Lazer or Marjorie Perloff (are you two still on this poetics list?) will fill us in.

charles

At 11:18 AM 8/14/97 -0500, you wrote:
>Does anyone know anything about the following address on the web?
>"Writing the Speculative: A Symposium on Poetry and Knowledge" (May >3, 1997, Stanford University)
> http://shc.stanford.edu/shc/poetry.knowledge.html
>
>It comes up under a key search, but when I try to go in, I get >"Error: 404. File not found. Check the URL you are using."
>
>Any info anyone could provide on this interesting-sounding site?
>Thanks, Kent
>
>

↑ Index

321. Thomas Bell
Re: avant academe
Thu 14 Aug 1997

this horse has probably been well beaten here but i'll add my bit anyway. i think the phenomena is similiar to that seen with respect to liberal (discussed on this list earlier this year). They both have become so entangled in the popular press that they have been turned into pejorative mudslinging terms that have little relation to the original sense of the terms. In turn, their adherents become more so ('liberal'->radical or 'avant-gardeish') and the spiral continues. am i making sense? is there a term for this cultural phenomenon?

moved to post this from a sunny rural spot with the kids back in school in rural TN after hearing last night of the reaffirmation of the KKK here and knowing i will soon hear from my pre-adolescents "You can't make me, you old liberal avant-garde _____, you." tom bell

At 08:50 AM 8/13/97 -0400, Mark Prejsnar wrote:
>>
>> A couple of points, however. There is a tendency to think of academy as >> institution (correct) and avant garde as... anarchy/utopia/individualism/?
>> Just a tendency, mind you. And this leads you to formulate a picture of >> unestablished avantgardists pointing envy (or whatever) at established >> avantgardists because of their position in the academy -- i.e. in another >> institution.
>>
>> No this is intra-institutional politics. The avantgarde (non-mainstream >> poetry, cosa nostra -- call it what you want) is an institution, and >> position in it is critical to and at stake for all those committed to the >> institution.
>>
>Tom--
>This is interesting, vis-a-vis several of my previous points; first off, >it reiterates that interesting spatial image of "avant-garde" as a >relatively static zone, rather than an advancing attack...Thus showing >again how most of us have toned-down the original feel of "avant-garde"...
>
>But more peculiar and fascinating is the claim that "a-g" is an >institution...I think it is probably more a series of fragmentary zones of >activity...
>
>In other words, it's important to be clear whether we're talking about a >sociological phenomenon, an identifiable social grouping we can study (as >in your post) or a series of esthetic engagements and projects. In the >former sense, both "workshop poetry" and non-mainstream writing are of >course institutional matrices, with magazines, imprints, sources of >funding; there is of course a huge disparity in available resources, and >one is closer to the basic economic life of things, can provide more jobs, >etc.--is linked as it were to other institutions, that provide a support >structure. But in the latter sense of these terms, neither a workshop >poet nor an "experimental" (hate that word) poet, is necessarily absorbed >by an "institution." I've known (indeed know) practitioners of both >approaches, who for various reasons are marginal to or outside the >institutional frameworks--whether APR/university or Sun and >Moon/Naropa--and in this sense, there is not a single >economicosociological network, that automatically encompasses everything >written in a given style or tendency.

>
>Also, the emphasis on "envy" etc. is interesting (like the original >phrasing of this thread in terms of "policing")...Some of the most >remarkable writers I know seem to have very little concern with shoving >and scuffling for position; their concern with the activity and the work, >and relative lack of concern with rewards and ego, can be quite >striking...
>
>mark p.
>atlanta
>
>

↑ Index

322. David Bromige
mudslinging at the avant garde
Thu 14 Aug 1997

Thomas Bell's post this a.m. concerning the mudslinging one experiences if identifianly avant garde reminds me of a term that came to us in conversation earlier this week, "us" being me, Dan Featherston and his fiancee Melia : we are the mudguards. Lets add, The mudguards on the auto of art.

One more frivolous suggestion from the Despair Laboratories. David

↑ Index

323. shemurph
Address request - KOJA
Thu 14 Aug 1997

Would someone mind backchanneling the address for KOJA? I seem to have misplaced it, and need it.

Thanks.

Sheila Murphy
[redacted]

↑ Index

324. Maria Damon
query
Thu 14 Aug 1997

---

does anyone know the year in which diacritics vol 21 came out? thanks --md

↑ Index

325. KENT JOHNSON
the light
Thu 14 Aug 1997

On 13 August, David Bromige wrote:
>when kent told me he'd been abducted by space aliens, i knew he was >only kidding.

David:
Kidding only until last night, when something truly remarkable happened to me. I will explain later.
Kent

↑ Index

326. Layne Russell
Re: penpal greetings
Thu 14 Aug 1997

---

charles alexander wrote:
>
> At 06:31 PM 8/14/97 -0700, you wrote:
> >At last, we concocted a way to get Bromige to pipe down.
>
> and George to pipe up
>
> Is it possible that Pan has split into two persons,
>
> these being bowerige and broming?
>
> charles

LOL

layne

↑ Index

327. David Bromige dangerous virus
Thu 14 Aug 1997

Listlings, I just rec'd a fwd from one on the britpoetlist : do not download any message headed PENPAL GREETINGS. It contains a virus that can destroy your HD. It can also be communicated to every e-ddress in yr mailbox.

I have no way to know whether this be hoax or truth. My corrspondent who fwded this is unimpeachable, dont get me wrong, but he was only passing the wArning along.

I'm going to log off until i hear (via the media, I guess) better news. Anyone needing to reach me, can do so at [redacted]. Leastwise, I will log off if someone will post me the directions for doing so.

Thanks, David

↑ Index

328. Alan Jen Sondheim
Re: dangerous virus
Thu 14 Aug 1997

Again, the story is this. You can't get a virus from email. You can get a virus from downloading things like the freeaol, but you shouldn't do that. If you get a Word Perfect or Word document, you might have macros embedded in it that can cause problems.

Ordinary email has no problems at all. At one point, there were things called ASCII-bombs, or email-bombs, but those holes have been filled years ago.

You can send out an email message with escape codes that can change the color of the type, and even create invisible type. If someone sends you a message with an invisible type commmand, you might find your inbox appearing oddly empty. But there's no damage at all when this happens; the mail's still there and readable.

And that is about it. By the way, there's a minor sub-sub-field called I believe steganography which is all about embedding secret texts in .gif or .jpg files.

Alan

↑ Index

329. Rachel Loden
the waltz of the arts-bureaucrats
Thu 14 Aug 1997

David Bromige wrote (in part):

> When the pretense of equality reigns, stupidity is enthroned.

David, the Finns have a phrase I like: "Stupidity thickens in a crowd."

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

330. George Bowering
Re: the light
Thu 14 Aug 1997

> On 13 August, David Bromige wrote:
> when kent told me he'd been abducted by space aliens, i knew he was only kidding.
>
> David:
> Kidding only until last night, when something truly remarkable happened to me. I will explain later.
> Kent

It wasnt all that remarkable. I've done it to dozens of academics and poets and minor league baseball players.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

331. George Bowering
Re: penpal greetings
Thu 14 Aug 1997

At last, we concocted a way to get Bromige to pipe down.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,

Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

332. Rachel Loden
the light and the stars
Thu 14 Aug 1997

George Bowering wrote:
>
> >On 13 August, David Bromige wrote:
> >>when kent told me he'd been abducted by space aliens, i knew he was > >>only kidding.
> >
> >David:
> >Kidding only until last night, when something truly remarkable > >happened to me. I will explain later.
> >Kent
>
> It wasnt all that remarkable. I've done it to dozens of academics and poets > and minor league baseball players.

But only minor league baseball players, you notice. He lets the major league players do it to h i m.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

333. charles alexander
Re: the light
Thu 14 Aug 1997

There have been lots of sightings in Arizona and rumor has it that George Bowering comes here once in a while and as far as I know, George is just a rumor possibly encased in light

charles

↑ Index

334. charles alexander
Re: penpal greetings
Thu 14 Aug 1997

At 06:31 PM 8/14/97 -0700, you wrote:
>At last, we concocted a way to get Bromige to pipe down.

and George to pipe up

Is it possible that Pan has split into two persons,

these being bowerige and broming?

charles

↑ Index

335. George Bowering
Re: the light
Thu 14 Aug 1997

> There have been lots of sightings in Arizona
> and rumor has it that George Bowering comes here once in a while
>
> and as far as I know, George is just a rumor
>
> possibly encased in light
>
> charles

Matter of fact, I was in Phoenix toward the end of spring training. I like Tucson very much, and am sorry I havent been there for about 10 years.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

336. George Bowering
Re: penpal greetings
Thu 14 Aug 1997

> At 06:31 PM 8/14/97 -0700, you wrote:
> At last, we concocted a way to get Bromige to pipe down.

> and George to pipe up
>
> Is it possible that Pan has split into two persons,
>
> these being bowerige and broming?
>
> charles

Dang, they found us (I mean me) out! But this just means that I claim co-authorship of all those "Other people's" poems that Bromige owned up to.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

337. George Bowering
Re: the light and the stars
Thu 14 Aug 1997

> George Bowering wrote:
>
> On 13 August, David Bromige wrote:
> when kent told me he'd been abducted by space aliens, i knew he was only kidding.
>
> David:
> Kidding only until last night, when something truly remarkable happened to me. I will explain later.
> Kent
>
> It wasnt all that remarkable. I've done it to dozens of academics and poets and minor league baseball players.
>
> But only minor league baseball players, you notice. He lets the major league players do it to h i m.
>
> Rachel Loden

Only National League West and some National League Central players. Jeez, I got standards.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

338. KENT JOHNSON dead oath
Fri 15 Aug 1997

On 12 August, Pete Landers wrote, referring back to the loyalty thread and in reference to me:
> Isn't this the same clear thinker who says taking an oath to defend the > Constitution means turning in my colleagues if they speak out against a > gov't that suspends the Constitution?

Well, I never did "say" such a thing, but hurrah for Weiss and Bromige on this issue. And not to beat a dead oath, but I do feel there's something more worth saying here: No Constitutional scholar me, but Article I, Section 9 of the Constitution states that in cases of "rebellion," where the "public safety may require it," that the writ of habeas corpus may be suspended (which would effectively amount, of course, to cancelling any guarantees of freedom of speech, press, association, etc. that the Constitution enshrines). Thus we have a paradox, which Pete, so far as I can tell, doesn't quite see, because he is adamant about only reading "the words" of his oath "as they are" and not thinking about the implications of those words in differing contexts. In other words, suspension of the Constitutional liberties that Pete rightly holds so dear need not be Constitutionally construed under certain extraordinary circumstances (a Civil War, for example, or a "rebellious" challenge to the rule of capital) as at all "unconstitutional." Thus, loyalty oaths that call on one to pledge allegiance to the Constitution against domestic and other enemies do not necessarily mean that one is pledging unqualified allegiance to freedom of speech and of the press. "These may need to be," the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff says to USA Today in 2027, "sacrificed under Constitutional law for an expedient time in order to save the future of the Constitution." Sort of like the dictatorship of the proletariat, when you think about it, to ensure the future of the greatest democracy of all, communism. Anyway, this is the unacknowledged potential contradiction I was trying to point out to Pete with my revolutionary fantasy post, written in a fit of syndicalist rapture and breathlessly, with not a single comma. Maybe it was the lack of punctuation that angered Pete so much and prompted him to start calling me a whatchamacallit. But I asked the questions I asked because there were assumptions in Pete's first reply to Charles Alexander that I found self-satisfied and simplistic. Pete accuses me of illogic for asking what I asked; but I was actually trying to point out (in my own idiosyncratic way) that ideology sometimes reveals itself as most insidious inside the plain words that seem most logical. That's an old one, but none of us can remind ourselves of it too often. Kent

↑ Index

339. henry gould
Re: dead oath
Fri 15 Aug 1997

On Thu, 14 Aug 1997 23:01:24 -0500 KENT JOHNSON said: > Pete accuses me of illogic for asking what I asked; but I was >actually trying to point out (in my own idiosyncratic way) that >ideology sometimes reveals itself as most insidious inside the plain >words that seem most logical. That's an old one, but none of us can >remind ourselves of it too often.

Mikhail Epstein has an interesting chapter in AFTER THE FUTURE on the structure of ideological logic, or ideo-logic as he calls it. It's basically a win-win kind of power speech which Machiavellian-like (& Orwell-like) plays off extreme positions against each other and equates opposites, i.e.:

freedom - slavery discipline - anarchy

Soviet communism would support socialist freedom over capitalist slavery but proclaim socialist discipline against multi-party anarchy. This is one of the most basic "tetrads" which makes the Party master of the ideological language field. (Epstein, following many others, defines ideological language as words which are inherently value-laden used without explanation or proof [my own paraphrase here]). The tetrads get much more subtle and complicated.

I think the point Pete was emphasizing is that when faced by such a coercive thing as an oath, we still have a choice. It seems to me (based on my own reaction & on several initial responses to Charles' first message) that our FIRST reaction is, this is a case of repressive government intrusion. What I found "astonishing" about Pete's response is that he opened up another dimension to this situation - that is, we might actually support the Constitution to the point of signing an oath to that effect. This does not really occur to us when we take individual liberties for granted and regard ALL government as an intrusion on the latter. This attitude, paradoxically, is just as much a prelude to tyranny as mindless loyalty. Pete's suggestion that we read what we're asked to sign onto is a reminder that we are part of "da system", whatever form it takes, & we bear some responsibility for the form it does take. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

340. Gwyn McVay
DJ Renegade
Fri 15 Aug 1997

Just to add briefly--people have been interested in DJ Renegade, a/k/a Joel Dias-Porter--

Working with Kenny Carroll, he was one of the pioneering members of DC's WritersCorps program, the only arts-related program of Americorps, which put teachers of creative writing into DC schools, St. Elizabeth's, several homeless shelters, and other places in need of "what is found there." DJ helped put together an anthology of writings from the kids in the schools where he taught. By all accounts, he enjoyed the hell out of it and so did the kids.

I always thought Renegade would be an interesting person to design a font for--something Bodoni-ish to start with, with the extreme stroke-weight contrast, tall and a bit skinny (per the original), but with a rather '70s roundness to the serifs and just enough trendy edge fragmentation to have that urban look.

Gwyn

↑ Index

341. Maria Damon
Re: DJ Renegade
Fri 15 Aug 1997

---

how does one get in touch w/ dj renegade?
what is the name, publisher etc of his anthology w/ kids?
thanks gwyn & others-- maria d

At 8:18 AM -0400 8/15/97, Gwyn McVay wrote:
>Just to add briefly--people have been interested in DJ Renegade, a/k/a >Joel Dias-Porter--
>
>Working with Kenny Carroll, he was one of the pioneering members of DC's >WritersCorps program, the only arts-related program of Americorps, which >put teachers of creative writing into DC schools, St. Elizabeth's, several >homeless shelters, and other places in need of "what is found there." DJ >helped put together an anthology of writings from the kids in the schools >where he taught. By all accounts, he enjoyed the hell out of it and so did >the kids.

>
>I always thought Renegade would be an interesting person to design a font >for--something Bodoni-ish to start with, with the extreme stroke-weight >contrast, tall and a bit skinny (per the original), but with a rather '70s >roundness to the serifs and just enough trendy edge fragmentation to have >that urban look.
>
>Gwyn

↑ Index

342. Judy Roitman

Re: dangerous virus

Fri 15 Aug 1997

> Listlings, I just rec'd a fwd from one on the britpoetlist : do not download any message headed PENPAL GREETINGS. It contains a virus that can destroy your HD. It can also be communicated to every e-ddress in yr mailbox.
>
> I have no way to know whether this be hoax or truth. My corrspondent who fwded this is unimpeachable, dont get me wrong, but he was only passing the wArning along.
>
> I'm going to log off until i hear (via the media, I guess) better news. Anyone needing to reach me, can do so at [redacted]. Leastwise, I will log off if someone will post me the directions for doing so.
>
> Thanks, David

Don't log off. You can't pick up a virus through e-mail. You can pick up a virus through opening an attachment sent through e-mail, but that is a very different sort of animal.

P.S. Will you let me know if you get this? Otherwise I'll have to call...

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

343. Peter Landers
Re: dead oath
Fri 15 Aug 1997

yeah yeah. I might have read too sensitively. what was a question "what would you do" I probably took as an implication that I would choose the obviously ignoble option. I see it was just polemical falderal.

hg, yes, but i'd have used first person singular because I know it's an individual choice.

fwiw, writ of h.c. says they have to tell you why they stuck you in jail. also, fwiw, the whole doc is amendable.

and as i say, it is/was a personal choice. i am not a patriot, per se, but i'm damn glad TJ was there many years ago to balance the power freaks against each other and i choose to defend that.

but why so serious?

Pete

↑ Index

344. J. Tate
forget new criticism, here's the new poetry! (fwd)
Fri 15 Aug 1997

List members may have already heard of this, if so, apologies.

Joseph Tate
University of Washington, Seattle

Reuters New Media

Thursday August 14 4:12 AM EDT

Poet Ruffles Feathers In Scotland With Record, MTV Deals

By Jill Serjeant

EDINBURGH, Aug 14 (Reuter) - With his long dark curly hair and frock coats, he looks like Britain's 19th century romantic poet Lord Byron.

But that's about as far as the comparison goes for 28-year-old Murray Lachlan Young, a previously unpublished bard whose snappy verses about sex, drugs, and rock and roll are set to make him a millionaire.

Young, an American-born Scot with a flair for the melodramatic, has taken the elitist world of poetry by storm by winning a $1.6 million deal with EMI Records and a $395,000 contract with MTV.

The deals are unheard of in the world of British literature, where poets are still thought of as living in garrets, scraping a living from a lonely trade conjuring up pictures in the mind.

Young, however, is one of the new breed of "performance poets," who declaims his contemporary verse to the sounds of a solo cello, seaside music or rock groups.

EMI says it has never signed a poet before, but hopes Young's album "Vice and Verse" will sell about one million copies.

"Taking on a new young artist is always a risk but we think he is a brilliant poet, a brilliant performer and very, very funny," said Tony Harlow, EMI marketing director.

"He's three-dimensional. We could have sold him as a performer, as a stand-up comic or as a poet," Harlow said.

Young's subject matter is perfectly attuned to the 1990s. One verse is about the Rolling Stones, another titled "Casual Sex," and in "Simply Everyone's Taking Cocaine" he satirises high society drugs culture.

"Well I saw Aunt Milly in last season's clothes,

She said car, house and yacht had gone straight up her nose.....

Simply everyone's taking cocaine."

He anounces his "MTV collection" of short verses aimed at the youth market as "no longer than 30 seconds, with no big words."

APPEARANCE AT EDINBURGH FRINGE

Staged to dramatic lighting and sound effects from a cello, Young is going down well with audiences at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe before he embarks on a series of "performance tours" in Britain and the United States.

Fellow poets and some critics have not been so kind.

The Financial Times called his work "puerile." Guardian newspaper critic Dan Glaister said his poetry failed to challenge the mind.

"It is comforting, reaffirming stuff but there are no broader truths lurking beneath the whimsy," wrote Glaister.

Established poets are skeptical, if not jealous, of the hype that has propelled Young to the front pages of newspapers and magazines.

"For a new poet to land deals like this is unheard of. Much of it may be to do with marketing and hype and my instinct is to disapprove of the whole thing," said Peter Thorpe editor of the Poetry Review.

Young, in performance as passionate and brooding as any self-respecting romantic poet should be, rejects the notion that he is all hype.

"I'm trying to get an audience for poetry," he said. "Too often people who write poetry seem like they are divulging some terrible secret or slipping you something when you are depressed.

"If you can show people interesting poems performed in a dynamic way then they might move on to Blake," Young said.

But he is keenly aware of the pitfalls ahead of him. In a satirical poem written a year ago about another of Britain's much talked about artists -- Damien Hirst of dead sheep in glass boxes fame -- Young may unwittingly have written his own epitaph.

"Whatever you do, whatever you are,

Make sure that you never, never, never believe in your own PR."

copyright Reuters Limited

↑ Index

345. Tom Mandel
advancing attack?
Fri 15 Aug 1997

---

was the "original feel of 'avant garde'" that of an "advancing attack" as Mark P. seems to be saying?

I think that militarily the avant garde would rather be scouts, or even spies, rather than any kind of attack. Scouts checking out undiscovered territory or spies sent into an alien camp.

More appealing ideas than that of being cannon fodder. Or, as I so often hear in the high tech industries, "a pioneer is a guy (sic. -- usually) with an arrow in his back."

Tom

Tom Mandel [redacted]
****
Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
4031 University Dr. Suite 200 * vox: [redacted]
Fairfax, VA 22030-3409 * fax: [redacted]

****
Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

346. Tom Mandel
email viri
Fri 15 Aug 1997

---

a virus in an email message is a persistant myth. Not possible. Please lets not discuss here what's been debunked and blah-ed to death worldwide for half a decade.

It is a sticky one, tho. I got an email message this spring from Harry Mathews warning me that email with the subject "Good News" contained a virus. That exact suggestion has come to me repeatedly over 3-4 years, like a chain letter through my brain matter. I guess the repetition is the virus.

Tom
Tom Mandel [redacted]
****
Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
4031 University Dr. Suite 200 * vox: [redacted]
Fairfax, VA 22030-3409 * fax: [redacted]
****
Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

347. Alan Jen Sondheim
Re: email viri
Fri 15 Aug 1997

As you know, I posted the same conclusion, but ComputerWorld this week discusses bugs in some email software, vis-a-vis IMAP and POP - this doesn't affect your mail as far as I can tell, but does affect your mailserver.

The CERT advisory (computer emergency response team) is at:
ftp://info.cert.org/pub/cert_advisories/CA-97.09.imap_pop

Alan

On Fri, 15 Aug 1997, Tom Mandel wrote:

> a virus in an email message is a persistant myth. Not possible. Please > lets not discuss here what's been debunked and blah-ed to death worldwide > for half a decade.

>
/snip/

↑ Index

348. Pam Brown
Re: email viri
Fri 15 Aug 1997

Well if it's so impossible how come my mac got infected with a macro virus from an email attachment from someone in Brunei ? And, as a result, had to have its entire operating system rebuilt ???
I wonder....
Pam Brown
At 04:42 PM 15/8/97 -0400, you wrote:
>As you know, I posted the same conclusion, but ComputerWorld this week >discusses bugs in some email software, vis-a-vis IMAP and POP - this >doesn't affect your mail as far as I can tell, but does affect your >mailserver.
>
>The CERT advisory (computer emergency response team) is at:
>ftp://info.cert.org/pub/cert_advisories/CA-97.09.imap_pop
>
>Alan
>
>On Fri, 15 Aug 1997, Tom Mandel wrote:
>
>> a virus in an email message is a persistant myth. Not possible. Please >> lets not discuss here what's been debunked and blah-ed to death worldwide >> for half a decade.
>>
>/snip/
>
>

↑ Index

349. KENT JOHNSON dead oath drugs
Fri 15 Aug 1997

I just received an e-mail from Eliot Weinberger, and he tells me that during the Reagan days NEA recipients had to sign two oaths: allegiance not to produce pornography or insult any (any) religion and then also a separate promise not to take any drugs. Anybody out there asked to sign one of these? I've never even applied for an NEA, but if the above is the case, it makes the Constitutional loyalty oath we've been talking about look pretty innocuous! Weinbeger says everyone except two or three poets he knows who got a grant in those eight years signed?

I don't know, if I'd gotten one of these, I may have well signed on myself, hypocrite that I am, but holy cow, all of a sudden Pete Landers looks like Bakunin. Kent

↑ Index

350. KENT JOHNSON
encased in light
Fri 15 Aug 1997

I just wanted to say that I put in a little post last night and it didn't go through. It was in response to Charles Alexander's stunning image of George Bowering encased in light. I said in that post that this was one of the most beautiful images I had ever laid eyes upon, whatever that means. I just wanted for the record to say this again. And also to say to George that I actually played minor league ball too, though it was football--semi-pro, about $100 per game back in the early 80's for the Waukesha Hawks. Does that count? Kent

↑ Index

351. Charles Bernstein
BERNADETTE MAYER (fwd)
Fri 15 Aug 1997

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Fri, 15 Aug 1997 13:04:13, -0500
From: POET PHILIP S GOOD <[redacted]>

The Bernadette Mayer Fund- Bernadette Mayer will write a poem, prose piece, letter, or other work to your specification in exchange for a contrubution to the fund. Please send the specifications for the poems to Bernadette Mayer at 4079 Country Rt 9, East Chatham, N.Y. 12060 (or E-Mail it to [redacted])

Send the tax deductible contribution checks payable to: Giorno Poetry Systems/The Bernadette Mayer Fund. Giorno Poetry Systems, 222 Bowery, New York, N.Y. 10012

↑ Index

352. David Bromige
encased in light
Fri 15 Aug 1997

I want to say that I have often seen George Bowering encased in light. Molson's Light. And Boy, does he ever get encased! DB

↑ Index

353. Alan Jen Sondheim
Re: email viri
Fri 15 Aug 1997

As I said, macro viruses are possible with Word Perfect and Word documents; they don't come through standard ascii email. An attachment is binary, 8-bit, not what's called lower ascii, 7 bit.

Alan

On Sat, 16 Aug 1997, Pam Brown wrote:

> Well if it's so impossible how come my mac got infected with a macro virus from an email attachment from someone in Brunei ? And, as a result, had to have its entire operating system rebuilt ???
> I wonder....
> Pam Brown
> At 04:42 PM 15/8/97 -0400, you wrote:
> As you know, I posted the same conclusion, but ComputerWorld this week discusses bugs in some email software, vis-a-vis IMAP and POP - this doesn't affect your mail as far as I can tell, but does affect your mailserver.
>
> The CERT advisory (computer emergency response team) is at:
> ftp://info.cert.org/pub/cert_advisories/CA-97.09.imap_pop
>
> Alan
>
> On Fri, 15 Aug 1997, Tom Mandel wrote:
>
> *a virus in an email message is a persistant myth. Not possible. Please lets not discuss here what's been debunked and blah-ed to death worldwide for half a decade.*
>
> /snip/

↑ Index

354. Pam Brown
Tiresome viri
Fri 15 Aug 1997

Thanks, Alan,for that information. I must have missed it earlier....and although I'm not a computer enthusiast - just a user - and don't really know what you mean I'm sure it's correct.... Pam

↑ Index

355. KENT JOHNSON
asteroid to hit earth
Fri 15 Aug 1997

In my post referring to Eliot Weinberger's statement that only "two or three poets" had refused to sign the terrible NEA pledge during the Reagan years: I apparently got it wrong. The two or three people who refused to sign during these years (the texts of the gov't pledges are contained in EW's _Outside Stories_, pages 124-25) were not poets but artists of other kinds. According to Weinberger, _all_ poets signed.

Now doesn't that make you feel like standing up and saluting the flag?
Kent

↑ Index

356. Thomas Bell
Re: advancing attack?
Sat 16 Aug 1997

---

http://www.pbs.org/affluenza/ ?
tom bell

At 04:20 PM 8/15/97 -0400, Tom Mandel wrote: >was the "original feel of 'avant garde'" that of an "advancing attack" as >Mark P. seems to be saying?
>
>I think that militarily the avant garde would rather be scouts, or even >spies, rather than any kind of attack. Scouts checking out undiscovered >territory or spies sent into an alien camp.
>
>More appealing ideas than that of being cannon fodder. Or, as I so often >hear in the high tech industries, "a pioneer is a guy (sic. -- usually) >with an arrow in his back."
>

>Tom
>
>
>Tom Mandel [redacted]
>*******
>Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
>4031 University Dr. Suite 200 * vox: [redacted]
>Fairfax, VA 22030-3409 * fax: [redacted]
>*******
> Join the Caucus Conversation
>
>

↑ Index

357. Rachel Levitsky

Re: a revision

Sat 16 Aug 1997

In the spirit of James Finnegan's desire to have poets show their process, here's a revision of an earlier piece I posted. I got a lot of help on this from Ike Kim.

Sounding Board

for Alan

it is a good life though not necessary. now one hand smells and one does not. they have been placed strategically to peruse the meaning of various holes. no matter how many you start out with the body lays flat in its possible juices. the ones we eat are not necessarily the ones we asked for--

there is no way to know.
it is too wet
to get to the museum but not to wet
to go to the museum

it affects your consciousness, act nasty or get behind something you care nothing about.
later, you'll laugh about it on that uncomfortable futon

the best you can afford.

the problem with the bad half&half was it made the coffee bad. the same can be said for sex. certain combinations are disaster for the consumer.
every member of the Happy Clubhouse would tell you this,
but so far few have asked and no one who'd do anything about it.

    Helping them to help themselves.

like I said, this began with a confusion between money and memory. indeed, if you could hand me either,
I can assure you it will be emptied though righteousness is tenuous.
false memory, The GapÔ,
I can't help stealing from big things when they are costly. bargain basements hook me every time.

How long did you let it sit out?
How long must it be left out?
and if there is unrelenting rain, the possibilities.
in a flash flood you will lose things.

Most victims didn't buy flood insurance
No me quitas pas

or as you were saying about the snow.
the amount of weight
the branch permits the leaves to bear before it breaks.

there is much you can figure out so take it upon yourself to prevent certain events,
those labeled disaster. logically, what will happen to the previous losses
as they shift position to the back of the general's head.

as had happened through the epidemic.
we no longer considered them. in the name of,
floods, borders, balanced books.

I don’t want to argue about it.

things are again shifted and look,
what we call your responsibility.
the Israelis are serious but have redesigned the protocol.
his shirt burned off by the last blast,
he sits and waits, looking plainly bitter.
notice the watch, the numbers tattooed.
victimhood looks again, a face that aims not for glamour yet is. reconfigured, made so.
Ruptured protocol reemerges as successful, as color, from black and white.

There’s a Movement Underground

photojournalism = journalism made history.
made hippies. some mornings
I think I’m a happy person.
some words get printed. she’s a journalist who also writes novels.

I can’t get past the game of it.
I ride in your back seat [thinking][meditating][labeling][identifying][looking][like] I’m staring out your window, innocent, inocencia. glamour. love or lose?
drunk with it he finally got silent, then again, he was always silent.

---------- notes:

“Most Victims”--From an AP heading, May 13, 1997
“No Me Quitas--Nina Simone
“I don’t”--Me with the grocery clerk
“There’s a Movement”-- Prescriptions makeup adline, from Fall 94, blitzkrieged onto the New York subway ad space, seen by me upon returning from a year in Mexico, after having left New York in 1993 upon the dissolution of AIDS and Queer Activism.
-end-

↑ Index

358. Brian Carpenter
Re: dead oath drugs
Sat 16 Aug 1997

> I just received an e-mail from Eliot Weinberger, and he tells me that during the Reagan days NEA recipients had to sign two oaths: allegiance not to produce pornography or insult any (any) religion and then also a separate promise not to take any drugs. Anybody out there asked to sign one of these? I've never even applied for an NEA, but if the above is the case, it makes the Constitutional loyalty oath we've been talking about look pretty innocuous!

On a similar note, if I recall correctly, there is involved in the process of application for US citizenship a pledge/oath one must make stating that one does not support/believe in anarchy nor polygamy. Anyone know of this, or am I recalling wrong?

Salut--

BC

↑ Index

359. Alan Jen Sondheim
Julacan split, for my lover and for Rachel L.
Sat 16 Aug 1997

Julacan

Hullo M. Jacques Lacan. Hullo Julacan. Hunh. Je/w suis un bon-bon. Tres bien. Ich bien la plume du votre tanta. Mercy much.

(Get out.

M. Lacan what is it you say you do. What is it you say you do it to.

(Get out. Get out.

"Where does the difference between someone who is psychotic and someone who isn't come from? It comes from the fact that for the psychotic a love relation that abolishes him as subject is possible insofar as it allows a radical heterogeneity of the Other. But this love is also a dead love."

A. A. A. a. a. Julucan.can can U. Tu est un arbre, n'est pas? Je suis UNE ensemble, homm/e-o-nym. La verite c'est toutes-jours, laMoor. Mais we:

Tu dites-mois: [...] "The thing, if it no longer takes place with a be- autiful woman or with a lady, is accomplished in a darkened cinema with an image on the screen."

(Get out. Get out. Get out.

Encore! Encore! Gentle/hum: "The psychotic" Julacan paws/es: Quel espace ist diese? Lentement! Lentement! Und so wieder: "can only apprehend the Other in the relation with the signifier, he lingers over a mere shell, an envelope, a shadow, the form of speech. The pscyhotic's Eros is located where speech is absent. It is there he finds his supreme love."

The Eunuch's Shell, bash, cash, carry, korn, vraiment, une programme, non? Nein, kein nombres, hombres. 2-carry on. A. Julacan chases her tale, prof- fers id. Toucan. Nu? M. Lacan insists, CUm closer. Feminin ecriture, none sufficient. Il n'est pas une lettre, il dites-moi pourquoi, pas parole.

U.

M. Lacan sits down, sa pantaloons sur la Grund. M. Lacan! Was ist dies? I Julacan't be-leave you here licked thus! Aqua! Aqua! Mere und mere, id seas across les corps. Circulations of "le game skin." Les panties wet.

(Get out. Get away from here. Get out of here. Get out.

Julacan s'defendre herselbst. Langue Langue Tongue Les Mots. Elle cherche as above, so below. Les circulations dans l'imaginaire, l'uncannee! Je t'aim in your vicinity! Michelet, Ma Belle, telephone petite moi!

A. A. A. a. a. a.

"Psychotics love their delusion like they love themselves. Having said this, Freud, who hadn't yet written his article on narcissism, added that the entire mystery lies here. This is true. What is the relationship be- tween the subject and the signifier that is distinctive of the very phen- omena of psychosis? How come the subject falls entirely into this proble- matic?"

Julacan asks How come la sujet? Does la sujet come? Le game skin, toward that silence de l'autre, autrui, now, ici, easy.

(Get out. Get out of here. Get out of here now. Get away from here. Get out of here. Get out. Get out of here. I'll meet you in Providence. I'll meet you in Seattle. I'll travel to Seoul. I'll travel to Moscow.

(I'll see your eyes. I'll kiss your eyes. Language is an enemy. Language is an enemy. Get out. Get out of here. I'll see your face. I'll kiss your face.

(Don't speak, Julacan. Silence for M. Lacan.

(Get away from M. Lacan. I'll meet you in a bar in Soho. I'll meet you in a Montreal cafe. I'll meet you in Victoria. You see my eyes in Vancouver. You see my eyes in Toronto. Language is an enemy. My body in Cape Breton, my heart in Newfoundland.

U. A. A. a. a. a.

(Julacan's a fraud. Julacan told me so. I'm Julacan. I turn away from the _word._ I kill the _word._ Language is a _word._ Language is an enemy.

I get into the ocean. I get out of the sea.

"The big S whose medium is speech, analysis warns us, is not what a vain people thinks it is. There is the real person who is before you and who takes up space - there is this in the presence of human beings, they take up space, at a pinch you can get ten of you into your office, but not a hundred and fifty - there is she whom you see, who manifestly captivates you and is capable of making you jump up and hug her - an ill-considered act of the imaginary order, terrific act of the real! And then there is the Other whom we were talking about, who is the subject also, but not the reflection of what you see in front of you, and not simply what takes place insofar as you see yourself seeing yourself." [Altered from the ori- ginal.]

Je t'aime.

(Quotes from Lacan's Seminar III, The Psychoses, edited Jacques-Alain Miller, translated Russell Grigg.)

↑ Index

360. Pierre Joris
Re: encased in light
Sat 16 Aug 1997

I done seen the light & it's called George.
--
==========
pierre joris 6 madison place albany ny 12202
tel/fax [redacted] email:[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/

Everything that allows men to become rooted, through values or sentiments, in _one_ time, in _one_ history, in one language, is the principle of alienation which constitutes man as privileged in so far as he is what he is, [...] imprisoning him in contentment with his own reality and encouraging him to offer it as an example or impose

it as a conquering assertion. -- Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

361. Rachel Loden naturalization
Sat 16 Aug 1997

Brian Carpenter wrote:

> On a similar note, if I recall correctly, there is involved in the process of application for US citizenship a pledge/oath one must make stating that one does not support/believe in anarchy nor polygamy. Anyone know of this, or am I recalling wrong?

Am not recalling this from my husband's application process, but he did have to absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince or potentate, which is not difficult to do after you've stopped laughing.

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

362. charles alexander
Re: encased in light
Sat 16 Aug 1997

At 07:42 PM 8/15/97 -0500, you wrote:
>I just wanted to say that I put in a little post last night and it >didn't go through. It was in response to Charles Alexander's >stunning image of George Bowering encased in light. I said in that >post that this was one of the most beautiful images I had ever >laid eyes upon, whatever that means. I just wanted for the record to >say this again. And also to say to George that I actually played >minor league ball too, though it was football--semi-pro, about $100 >per game back in the early 80's for the Waukesha Hawks. Does that >count?
>Kent

thanks, Kent

George and I continue to talk, and light probably plays a role in such transmissions. Encased in light took on a new dimension last night, when I went to an astronomer's birthday party at 8000-foot Mount Hopkins in the Santa Rita chain, home of the Fred Whipple Observatory. This astronomer, Dimitar Sassarov, is a pioneer theoretician -- one of the things he is working on, and what brought him here, was the effect of microlensing, seen once before and now again (and earlier predicted by him) that, when earth and nearer star and far far distant star are in proper alignment, one can see through the nearer star, and it will have a microscopic effect, making the far far distant star appear large, allowing us to learn more about it than we ever thought possible. Last night we used it and looked at a star in the middle of the galaxy. Turned out that my family and Dimitar's spouse, Sheila, were the only people at the birthday party and at the telescopes.

What I didn't know until last night, as we also talked a bit of linguistics, was that Dimitar is the nephew of structuralist and writer Svetan Todorov. Language/poetics/astronomy/poets encased in light -- all seems like a small world. We felt very priveleged last night.

charles

↑ Index

363. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
McCaffery phone
Sat 16 Aug 1997

If anyone online happens to have a current phone number for Steve McCaffery, could you let me know at your very soonest? It's a time-sensitive matter.
Send a note to me at [redacted]
Thanks,
Loss

↑ Index

364. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Need Info: McCaffery and Kuszai phone #s
Sat 16 Aug 1997

If anyone online happens to have a current phone number for Steve McCaffery or Joel Kuszai, could you let me know at your very soonest? It's a time-sensitive matter. Send a note to me at [redacted] Thanks, Loss

↑ Index

365. Maria Damon
Re: Julacan split, for my lover and for Rachel L.
Sat 16 Aug 1997

---

alan yr plain brilliant. --md ps when i heard, a few years ago, legal scholar drucilla cornell talk about reproductive rights and legal theory, she kept mentioning --i thought --chaka khan. as in, "i don't think yr gonna get supreme court justices to really pay attention to chaka khan." about 15 minutes into the talk, from context, as in, "the imaginary", "the symbolic," etc., i realized she meant jacques lacan. i kinda liked it the other way too.

At 2:35 AM -0400 8/16/97, Alan Jen Sondheim wrote:
>_____
>
>
>Julacan
>
>
>Hullo M. Jacques Lacan. Hullo Julacan. Hunh. Je/w suis un bon-bon. Tres >bien. Ich bien la plume du votre tanta. Mercy much.
>
>(Get out.
>
>M. Lacan what is it you say you do. What is it you say you do it to.
>
>(Get out. Get out.
>
>"Where does the difference between someone who is psychotic and someone >who isn't come from? It comes from the fact that for the psychotic a love >relation that abolishes him as subject is possible insofar as it allows a >radical heterogeneity of the Other. But this love is also a dead love."
>
>A. A. A. a. a. Julucan.can can U. Tu est un arbre, n'est pas? Je suis UNE >ensemble, homm/e-o-nym. La verite c'est toutes-jours, laMoor. Mais we:
>
>Tu dites-mois: [...] "The thing, if it no longer takes place with a be>autiful woman or with a lady, is accomplished in a darkened cinema with an >image on the screen."
>
>(Get out. Get out. Get out.
>
>Encore! Encore! Gentle/hum: "The psychotic" Julacan paws/es: Quel espace >ist diese? Lentement! Lentement! Und so wieder: "can only apprehend the >Other in the relation with the signifier, he lingers over a mere shell, an >envelope, a shadow, the form of speech. The pscyhotic's Eros is located >where speech is absent. It is there he finds his supreme love."
>
>The Eunuch's Shell, bash, cash, carry, korn, vraiment, une programme, non?
>Nein, kein nombres, hombres. 2-carry on. A. Julacan chases her tale, prof>fers id. Toucan. Nu? M. Lacan insists, CUm closer. Feminin ecriture, none >sufficient. Il n'est pas une lettre, il dites-moi pourquoi, pas parole.

>
>U.
>
>M. Lacan sits down, sa pantaloons sur la Grund. M. Lacan! Was ist dies? I >Julacan't be-leave you here licked thus! Aqua! Aqua! Mere und mere, id >seas across les corps. Circulations of "le game skin." Les panties wet.
>
>(Get out. Get away from here. Get out of here. Get out.
>
>Julacan s'defendre herselbst. Langue Langue Tongue Les Mots. Elle cherche >as above, so below. Les circulations dans l'imaginaire, l'uncannee! Je >t'aim in your vicinity! Michelet, Ma Belle, telephone petite moi!
>
>A. A. A. a. a. a.
>
>"Psychotics love their delusion like they love themselves. Having said >this, Freud, who hadn't yet written his article on narcissism, added that >the entire mystery lies here. This is true. What is the relationship be>tween the subject and the signifier that is distinctive of the very phen>omena of psychosis? How come the subject falls entirely into this proble>matic?"
>
>Julacan asks How come la sujet? Does la sujet come? Le game skin, toward >that silence de l'autre, autrui, now, ici, easy.
>
>(Get out. Get out of here. Get out of here now. Get away from here. Get >out of here. Get out. Get out of here. I'll meet you in Providence. I'll >meet you in Seattle. I'll travel to Seoul. I'll travel to Moscow.
>
>(I'll see your eyes. I'll kiss your eyes. Language is an enemy. Language >is an enemy. Get out. Get out of here. I'll see your face. I'll kiss your >face.
>
>(Don't speak, Julacan. Silence for M. Lacan.
>
>(Get away from M. Lacan. I'll meet you in a bar in Soho. I'll meet you in >a Montreal cafe. I'll meet you in Victoria. You see my eyes in Vancouver.
>You see my eyes in Toronto. Language is an enemy. My body in Cape Breton, >my heart in Newfoundland.
>

>U. A. A. a. a. a.
>
>(Julacan's a fraud. Julacan told me so. I'm Julacan. I turn away from the >_word._ I kill the _word._ Language is a _word._ Language is an enemy.
>
>I get into the ocean. I get out of the sea.
>
>"The big S whose medium is speech, analysis warns us, is not what a vain >people thinks it is. There is the real person who is before you and who >takes up space - there is this in the presence of human beings, they take >up space, at a pinch you can get ten of you into your office, but not a >hundred and fifty - there is she whom you see, who manifestly captivates >you and is capable of making you jump up and hug her - an ill-considered >act of the imaginary order, terrific act of the real! And then there is >the Other whom we were talking about, who is the subject also, but not the >reflection of what you see in front of you, and not simply what takes >place insofar as you see yourself seeing yourself." [Altered from the ori>ginal.]
>
>Je t'aime.
>
>
>----------
>
>
>(Quotes from Lacan's Seminar III, The Psychoses, edited Jacques-Alain >Miller, translated Russell Grigg.)
>
>
>_____

↑ Index

366. Lawrence Upton
The Titanic
Sat 16 Aug 1997

<<Don't log off. You can't pick up a virus through e-mail. You can pick up a virus through opening an attachment sent through e-mail, but that is a very different sort of animal.>>

I quite agree - to a point - with what was said - but only to a point

what is sd here by Judy Roitman - _You can't pick up a virus through e-mail_ - is quite true and for sound reasons wch i suppose cld be called scientific...unrefutable anything you like... it is the different animal wch worries me and the possibility of having that different animal coming thru wch is unannounced... that has happened to me... the announcement of an attachment is only so good as the software doing the downloading and mine for one is not very good - not long ago i found a file in my download directory wch had not announced itself beyond the listing

i sorted out someone the other day who had a virus - outraged because they were running a virus checker and seemed to think this was some kind of a defence against all viruses present and future, the idiot was talking about taking symantec to court misplaced confidence in a fallible system

yes, you cannot get a virus via email as email,

but the email is riding on a connection, it isnt the connection and not everything going on is visible from your screen

it doesnt matter how the hell you got the virus when you have got it the risks are small but they are there - it is possible the message i onforwarded was a hoax... but the statement that you cannot get a virus from email does not go far enough and logging off is not any kind of response

L

↑ Index

367. Judy Roitman
Re: email viri
Sat 16 Aug 1997

> Well if it's so impossible how come my mac got infected with a macro virus from an email attachment from someone in Brunei ? And, as a result, had to have its entire operating system rebuilt ???
> I wonder....
> Pam Brown
> At 04:42 PM 15/8/97 -0400, you wrote:
> As you know, I posted the same conclusion, but ComputerWorld this week discusses bugs in some email software, vis-a-vis IMAP and POP - this doesn't affect your mail as far as I can tell, but does affect your mailserver.
>
> The CERT advisory (computer emergency response team) is at:

> ftp://info.cert.org/pub/cert_advisories/CA-97.09.imap_pop
>
> Alan
>
> Well if it's so impossible how come my mac got infected with a macro virus from an email attachment from someone in Brunei ? And, as a result, had to have its entire operating system rebuilt ???
> I wonder....
> Pam Brown

Attachments _can_ cause problems. (The rule of thumb is never open an attachment from someone you don't know real well.) But opening e-mail can't. Or couldn't... (I haven't seen ComputerWorld or the CERT advisory).

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

368. Judy Roitman
Re: BERNADETTE MAYER (fwd)
Sat 16 Aug 1997

> ---------- Forwarded message ----------
> Date: Fri, 15 Aug 1997 13:04:13, -0500
> From: POET PHILIP S GOOD <[redacted]>
>
> The Bernadette Mayer Fund- Bernadette Mayer will write a poem, prose piece, letter, or other work to your specification in exchange for a contrubution to the fund. Please send the specifications for the poems to Bernadette Mayer at 4079 Country Rt 9, East Chatham, N.Y. 12060 (or E-Mail it to [redacted])
>
> Send the tax deductible contribution checks payable to: Giorno Poetry Systems/The Bernadette Mayer Fund. Giorno Poetry Systems, 222 Bowery, New York, N.Y. 10012

She should not have to do this. I hope this shames everyone who has not already contributed into contributing something, and not in exchange for anything.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |

memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

369. dbkk
Re: BERNADETTE MAYER (fwd)
Sat 16 Aug 1997

At 3:16 PM -0500 8/16/97, Judy Roitman wrote:

> She should not have to do this. I hope this shames everyone who has not already contributed into contributing something, and not in exchange for anything.

Judy, while I totally understand your sentiments about how Bernadette shouldn't have to do anything to receive help, I do not think that people who haven't given should be shamed. That's a personal decision and everyone has different circumstances. And this opinion is from a household who has sent money to the fund.

Dodie

↑ Index

370. Alan Jen Sondheim
Passion (for one who likes Halliday)
Sat 16 Aug 1997

-

Passion

Pas'i'n o'er thro'n gre't darts as Cup'd's bod' Turn'd thos' skies' gyres' eag'l'ts lo'p'n in li' sod,
'Tis what's ta'en me awa', tor' us apart, th' rod,
H'nd's sa'l'rd ship's sa'l bor' acros' th' mo'n'n cod,
T' one's, t'oth'r's m' bod' crawl'd doun 'nt' your' lot Ther's nought's but's glist'n'n skin, taut, stru'g'd & forg't
Now gon' th' dar' & bl'min' roses' de'ftl' whe' the' li'
Fro' world's a' seepin' ou' th' bl'min' bedr'm's door -
Fo' al's th' space's los' mo'th's, pas'ion's c'min' bi'
Tha' face's clos' t' min', tha' I oft beg'd fo' mor'.

Y't co'n cro' th' sig'f'r's r'n o' t'r'r dou'
Gy'd ag'st th' wir'd ai' sa h'p m' G'd I drou'.

↑ Index

371. Markus Foutu
Re: how about poems?
Sun 17 Aug 1997

---

lovely work//thanks
Markus

↑ Index

372. Alan Jen Sondheim
Sad History of Twilight Spaces, One Hope for the Real (fwd)
Sun 17 Aug 1997

--+-

History, Tiny Spaces on Twilight MOOs and one Real

I log in to Media MOO. I visit rarely now, surrounded by the bones I've set forth. I don't recognize myself, you-know-language and all. Jennifer and Julu have never been here; Jennifer and Julu have moved on.

Tiffany
dense entanglement of fluid, you-know-language, aural, i course thru u, i u, Tiffany course thru alan, Tiffanyalan, breath floods, clitoral, eyes stained by u, u lay me out, lance, skin, nipples, on Menstrual Table, you-know-language
Obvious exits: out to Living Quarters - 2nd Floor
You see lance, skin, Menstrual Table, Tiffanyalan, you-know-language, nipples, clitoral, anal, aural, and envelope here.
Last connected Mon Aug 11 23:55:57 1997 EDT from panix3.panix.com Member name Connected Idle time Location
--- --- --- ---
Alan (#10747) 9 seconds 0 seconds Tiffany

Total: 1 member, who has been active recently.
There is only one member invisible to you.
_____media_____02:18 /world media
@who

The second world, of bones, a space of labor, fetishization, conjure, on Kyoto-MOO, designed by Kayo Matsushita and myself. Rarely visited, running on a corner of a Parsons Design School machine, Julu has flown briefly here; I have lived among _these_ bones, churned in the files themselves.

Welcome to Kyoto-MOO!

A moment of stillness just before the invention of radio. you are entering a world of speaking bodies; everyone is close at hand. If you reach out, you touch us with your bright thinking. Welcome to Kyoto!

 Connected ***
Yurt
hovel where Wizards hang, bones in front, skins behind
You see basin, human, lump, and stuff here.
Last connected Sun Aug 17 02:13:41 1997 EDT from panix3.panix.com
_____sotatsu_____02:20

A third world, where I hide myself, exhausted by past politics, the Quota Review Board, friends gone forever, the old Post-Modern Culture MOO, hav- ing changed names, first to PMC2, now open to suggestion. I come for the *Chatter list, read myself among the names, no one notices, I'm gone be- fore the dawn.

You have no messages on your Answering Machine.
Please type '@unmorph' to save your default shape for morphing.
room
You see nothing special.
You see empty here.
I don't know which "empty" you mean.
I see no "room" here.
_____pmc_____02:24
look empty look room

The space which I will give you as a gift, a space of text-turned-into the blunt materials of the world, a space of objects hiding, space of dissemb- ling, depth, solitude of one's dark night of the dance of souls.

↑ Index

373. Lawrence Upton
Re: email viri
Sun 17 Aug 1997

<<Attachments _can_ cause problems. (The rule of thumb is never open an attachment from someone you don't know real well.) But opening e-mail can't. Or couldn't... (I haven't seen ComputerWorld or the CERT advisory).
>>

it can't attachments can be executable it is a very slight chance thinking all is safe and panic are equally misplaced

↑ Index

374. David R. Israel
two solutions (& other anecdotage)
Sun 17 Aug 1997

Chuck Shepherd's WEIRDNUZ.491 (News of the Weird, July 4, 1997) -- his latest weekly email dispatch of the popular true-story column -- includes this:

>  In December, a man from southern England named Nigel paid about $128,000 at a London auction for the personalized license plate "N1 GEL." Eighty other plates brought in about $2.7 million. A month before that in London, the much less wealthy Dave Parker spent about $40 to have a plate matching his name: He paid a filing fee to change his name legally to [Mr.] C 539 FUG, which is his current license plate.*

This astonishing pairing of info-bits gives pause. What is this craze for unity of self & license plate? Does the license plate lend reality to the else drifting soul? What's the deal here?

The same issue of News of the Weird also includes this:

>  The Globe and Mail (Toronto, Ontario) reported in February that local physician Ron Charach, who is the author of a volume of poems by Canadian doctors, recently had one of his works selected to be published in the prestigious British medical journal, The Lancet. The title of the poem is the same as the last two words in this passage: "In silence after heavy rain / you can hear prostates growing."*

who'd think that The Lancet would (finally) go postmod?

And a 3rd item from same:

>  In a brief interview published in Fortune magazine in February, Todd Sloane, a marketing executive with Publishers Clearing House (the $10 million sweepstakes people) was asked whether entrants worry that the PCH prize patrol can't find them if they win: "We get thousands of calls from entrants warning us their house is hard to get to [or] they'll be at Uncle Jack's, whatever."*

(Strangely, it didn't occur to me to send such a helpful chit to the Yale Series of Younger Poets) --

Finally, truly weird news:

>  In April, Sir Roger Penrose, a British math professor who has worked with Stephen Hawking on such topics as relativity, black holes, and whether time has a beginning, filed a copyright-infringement lawsuit against the Kimberly-Clark Corporation, which Penrose said copied a pattern he created (a pattern demonstrating that "a nonrepeating pattern could exist in nature") for its Kleenex quilted toilet paper. Penrose said he doesn't like litigation but, "When it comes to the population of Great Britain being invited by a multinational to wipe their bottoms on what appears to be the work of a Knight of the Realm, then a last stand must be taken."*

(& perhaps Pollock shd. have sued drip-prone housepainters . . . ?)

cheers,
d.i.

p.s., f.y.i. --

> NEWS OF THE WEIRD, founded in 1988, is a nationally syndicated newspaper column distributed by Universal Press Syndicate. Individuals may have the columns mailed to them electronically, free of charge, approximately three weeks after the cover date, which is the date when most subscribing newspapers will publish the column. Send a message to [redacted] with the Subject line of Subscribe. To read these News of the Weird newspaper columns from the past six months, go to http://www.nine.org/notw/notw.html (That site contains no graphics, no photos, no video clips, no audio. Just text. Deal with it.)
>
> COPYRIGHT: Neither the name News of the Weird nor any issue of News of the Weird nor any portion of any issue of News of the Weird may be used for any commercial purpose whatsoever. One example of such prohibited use is to use part or all of an issue of News of the Weird as material on a commercial Web page or on a commercial message. ("Commercial" includes Web sites or messages that contain any paid or bartered advertising.) If a Web site or message contains utterly no commercial content, and it is freely accessible by the public with no fee charged, portions of News of the Weird may be used without prior permission provided that the > portion(s) is(are) accurately quoted and identified on the Web site or message as from News of the Weird and this copyright notice is affixed at some point: Copyright 1997 by Universal Press Syndicate.

> AUTHENTICITY: All news stories mentioned in News of the > Weird are from news stories appearing in daily newspapers in the U.
> S. and Canada (or occasionally, reputable daily newspapers in other > countries or other reputable magazines and journals). No so-called > supermarket tabloid, and no story that was not intended to be
> "news," is ever the source of a News of the Weird story.

.
.....
.....
\\\

↑ Index

376. George Bowering
Re: encased in light
Sun 17 Aug 1997

> I just wanted to say that I put in a little post last night and it didn't go through. It was in response to Charles Alexander's stunning image of George Bowering encased in light. I said in that post that this was one of the most beautiful images I had ever laid eyes upon, whatever that means. I just wanted for the record to say this again. And also to say to George that I actually played minor league ball too, though it was football--semi-pro, about $100 per game back in the early 80's for the Waukesha Hawks. Does that count?
> Kent

I dont know. I guess i can see that people can love playing football, and I remember the first time I saw it, age 17, in Victoria down from the sticks, it seemed a neat magic game. In the 50s and 60s i went to some football games, and even later saw some on TV, but the longer I have looked the less interesting I have found football, and the NFL on TV is just, agh, I cant be bothered. I know that Shelley and Keats wouldnt have gone to a foo'ball game, but they would have gone to baseball games, as for instance the Venice Hawks vs. the Trieste Red Sox.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

377. R. Gancie
mediocrity
Sun 17 Aug 1997

I want to thank everyone from the Poetics list that took part in our discussion on Web del Sol tonight. I apologize to those who may have wanted to get on but could not. We had no idea how many the chat room would hold. To clear up some loose ends; the book which I referenced ("increasingly ambitious dialogue with modernism") in response to the question about John Ashbery was Charles Altieri's Self and Sensibility in Contemporary American Poetry. Douglas Hofstadter is critical of John Cage's music on at least two occasions in Goedel, Escher, Bach. Finally, I do not want to leave anybody with the impression that I consider Robert Peters' criticism astute. I find it eratic and superficial. Again thanks.---Carlo Parcelli

↑ Index

378. Karen and Trevor looking for addresses
Sun 17 Aug 1997

Can someone please send me a snail mail for the following individuals?

Marvin Bell
Beverly Dahlen
Bob Perelman
Joan Retallack
Ron Silliman
Gustaf Sobin
Tom Clark

Thanks in advance!

Karen McKevitt
[redacted]

↑ Index

379. lee ann brown
BERNADETTE FUNd controVERSEy
Mon 18 Aug 1997

Dear List, Bernadette Mayer loves assignments and it would be no problem for her to "write to specification"- in fact she thrives from rising to other people's lists of Experiments - I just hope someone keeps track of all the poems she writes for money. I think it'll also be good for her writing "recovery"- she'll take it seriously and produce all the more poems. And isn't writing poems what many poets would like to be paid for rather than scrubbing floors or teaching comp? Yeah, I know, who pays the piper calls the tune but Bernadette will subvert with a vitriolic pen swathed in sexy dailiness anyday any attempt at unwelcome directional content. She's a great writer of occasional verse, raising the form to new heights. I highly recommend her if you have any special occasions coming up- for as one Experiments from the (expanded) list of experiments reads:

"Write occasional poems for weddings, for rivers, for birthdays, for other poets' beauty, for movie stars maybe, for the anniversaries of all kinds of loving meetings, for births, for moments of knowledge, for deaths."

and that's only one of her long list!

The last one says:

"Please add to this list."

so if you give her "specifications" it's like throwing Brer Rabbit in the briarpatch.

Maybe the poems should be posted on the net held up for all to scrutinize if they are in any way compromised by filthy lucre. ('Only fooling' as Bernadette would say.) But not about the posting part.

Love,

Lee Ann

PS: You can give me assignments too.
++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++++
In reply to:
>The Bernadette Mayer Fund- Bernadette Mayer will write a poem, prose >piece, letter, or other work to your specification in exchange for a >contrubution to the fund. Please send the specifications for the poems >to Bernadette Mayer at 4079 Country Rt 9, East Chatham, N.Y. 12060 (or >E-Mail it to [redacted])
>
>Send the tax deductible contribution checks payable to: Giorno Poetry >Systems/The Bernadette Mayer Fund. Giorno Poetry Systems, 222 Bowery,
>New York, N.Y. 10012

At 3:16 PM -0500 8/16/97, Judy Roitman wrote:

> She should not have to do this. I hope this shames everyone who has not already contributed into contributing something, and not in exchange for anything.

and at Sat, 16 Aug 1997 15:10:49 -0700

Dodie Bellamy wrote:

Judy, while I totally understand your sentiments about how Bernadette shouldn't have to do anything to receive help, I do not think that people who haven't given should be shamed. That's a personal decision and everyone has different circumstances. And this opinion is from a household who has sent money to the fund.

Dodie

↑ Index

380. Alan Jen Sondheim

Julu and Jennifer get far too sloppy please excuse them

Mon 18 Aug 1997

--+-

Particle and Wave

Julu says wave and particle, particle and wave, don't force me to choose, she says. Stay here, what am I. :-) Jennifer says, wave, most likely and definitely wave, undulating with tiny hysteresis across the packets, bits and bytes, the tiniest slopes you might imagine. Play-acting the particle, datagram, packet, hard-edged letter, but definitely wave. Electric-Julu, Julu-Electra, wave and wave. J says, yes, well, both of J says, us, but I J says, you're interrupting, just as J says, yes, but I thought :-(J says, you usually do, not thinking very well, are you now? J says, but I thought, no J says, well, go on, go on, nothing will satisfy you. :-) J says, think, I would be particle, would leave J adds, would leave, turn over in bed, not the signifier, get rid of the quotes, show my body off :-) J says, and learn to see, I suppose, all those retinal cells firing in terrific clumps! :-) J says, learn to see, what it means for a body to turn around, new vistas in every direction. Loving the body as well, not Julu-Electra, maybe Julu-Antigone, the gone thing in the dust. :-(:-) J says, Particle-Julu, Particle-Jennifer, there's always a chance we'll disappear, bodies don't last forever, they age, disease :-o :-) J interrupts, they interrupt the world - of the world, they interrupt it. J says, we're going particle, gone from wave. We're gonna be there with our eyes open, weight of the body. We're gonna get out of letter-fetter. Our punctuation will be our mouths. Our sex will be our arms and legs and minds. We'll pull our dresses up. We'll smell each other. :-o :-) J says, the smell will be strong, it will be silent. We'll mark each other with our teeth, our nails. We'll be on the street, everyone will know. J says, everyone will know, we won't have to say a word. :-) :-) J says, we'll hate words, turn our ears on them. We'll have ears, too. We'll listen to the sounds of our bellies, I'll listen to your heart's loud beating, you'll taste my tongue in your mouth, my tongue lightly against your eyes, against the small of your back, ever more lightly along your clitoris, your labia. :-o :-o :-) :-) J says, we'll have other views, exposures, every turn a new landscape of intimacy, worlds in the slightest gesture. :-) J says, remember, it's only a matter of time, remember, we have all the time in the world. :-(:-) J says, until we're bodies, always a reminder, and then, breathing ... J and J, wave and particle, particle and wave :-| J and J, wave and particle, particle and wave :-) They're silent, poised, dreaming, waiting, suspended, quiet, waiting They're silent, poised, dreaming, waiting, suspended, quiet, waiting They're silent, poised, dreaming, waiting, suspended, quiet, waiting :-(:-| :-o :-o :-) :-) :-)

↑ Index

381. Karen and Trevor
Re: mediocrity
Mon 18 Aug 1997

R. Gancie wrote:
>
> I want to thank everyone from the Poetics list that took part in our > discussion on Web del Sol tonight. I apologize to those who may have > wanted to get on but could not. We had no idea how many the chat room > would hold. To clear up some loose ends; the book which I referenced > ("increasingly ambitious dialogue with modernism") in response to the > question about John Ashbery was Charles Altieri's Self and Sensibility > in Contemporary American Poetry. Douglas Hofstadter is critical of John > Cage's music on at least two occasions in Goedel, Escher, Bach. Finally,
> I do not want to leave anybody with the impression that I consider > Robert Peters' criticism astute. I find it eratic and superficial. Again
> thanks.---Carlo Parcelli

I hope someone from the list who participated will elaborate on the discussion, for those of us who missed it.

Karen McKevitt

↑ Index

382. Miekal And Re: looking for addresses
Mon 18 Aug 1997

Looking for email or snail mail address for Dale Pendall, the author of Pharmaka / Poeia. Backchannel me, they say.

Miekal
--
@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

383. Charles Alexander signed book
Mon 18 Aug 1997

Dear Mark

Yes please send me that signed book back. I'll send you another. I have to take better care of what gets on the bookshelves around here.

As to talking about design, or anything else, about that and other books, yes, let's do it.

This week I'm likely to be in the studio from 9am or so (I think we're in the same time zone as you until daylight savings time exits the scene, and then we're an hour later than you, as Arizona never changes for the daylight savings) until nearly 2pm. Then on some of these days I'll be picking up Kate (school started today), and on other days I'll be staying later at the studio. Most nights we're home. I know you have both numbers, but here, anyway --

[redacted] studio
[redacted] home

take care,

charles

↑ Index

384. john_lavagnino
Re: two solutions (& other anecdotage)
Mon 18 Aug 1997

David Israel quoted the News of the Weird:

>  In April, Sir Roger Penrose, a British math professor who has worked with Stephen Hawking on such topics as relativity, black holes, and whether time has a beginning, filed a copyright-infringement lawsuit against the Kimberly-Clark Corporation, which Penrose said copied a pattern he created (a pattern demonstrating that "a nonrepeating pattern could exist in nature") for its Kleenex quilted toilet paper. Penrose said he doesn't like litigation but, "When it comes to the population of Great Britain being invited by a multinational to wipe their bottoms on what appears to be the work of a Knight of the Realm, then a last stand must be taken."*

Good as it is, this last bit appears to have been the utterance of Penrose's lawyer, not Penrose himself, according to other news stories.

I am sorry to report that this toilet paper is not sold in the United States. I would be interested in talking with anyone who's going to the UK soon and has large amounts of free space in their luggage.

John

↑ Index

385. Judy Roitman
Re: two solutions (& other anecdotage)
Mon 18 Aug 1997

> David Israel quoted the News of the Weird:
>
>  In April, Sir Roger Penrose, a British math professor who has worked with Stephen Hawking on such topics as relativity, black holes, and whether time has a beginning, filed a copyright-infringement lawsuit against the Kimberly-Clark Corporation, which Penrose said copied a pattern he created (a pattern demonstrating that "a nonrepeating pattern could exist in nature") for its Kleenex quilted toilet paper. Penrose said he doesn't like litigation but, "When it comes to the population of Great Britain being invited by a multinational to wipe their bottoms on what appears to be the work of a Knight of the Realm, then a last stand must be taken."*
>
> Good as it is, this last bit appears to have been the utterance of Penrose's lawyer, not Penrose himself, according to other news stories.
>
> I am sorry to report that this toilet paper is not sold in the United States. I would be interested in talking with anyone who's going to the UK soon and has large amounts of free space in their luggage.
>
> John

Here's why Penrose tilings are neat. The shapes look very simple and natural, it is not at all obvious just glancing at a Penrose tiling that it is deeply strange.

But there is no need to go to England. You can make your own Penrose tiling toilet paper, wallhanging, etc. --- Penrose tilings have been written up in places like Discover, Scientific American, etc.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
----

http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

386. KENT JOHNSON
football encased in light
Mon 18 Aug 1997

George: I don't want to take up space that otherwise would be taken up with the discussion about poems (or, more importantly, with actually true to life poems separate from the talking about them), but I just have to ask: How do you know that Keats and Shelley would not have wanted to go to football games? There are lots of boys there at football games (at least in the American kind--I don't know about the fake CFL, even though I was invited once to try out for the Edmonton Argonauts), who pat each other lovingly on the behind. Kent

> I just wanted to say that I put in a little post last night and it didn't go through. It was in response to Charles Alexander's stunning image of George Bowering encased in light. I said in that post that this was one of the most beautiful images I had ever laid eyes upon, whatever that means. I just wanted for the record to say this again. And also to say to George that I actually played minor league ball too, though it was football--semi-pro, about $100 per game back in the early 80's for the Waukesha Hawks. Does that count?
> Kent
>
> I dont know. I guess i can see that people can love playing football, and I remember the first time I saw it, age 17, in Victoria down from the sticks, it seemed a neat magic game. In the 50s and 60s i went to some football games, and even later saw some on TV, but the longer I have looked the less interesting I have found football, and the NFL on TV is just, agh, I cant be bothered. I know that Shelley and Keats wouldnt have gone to a foo'ball game, but they would have gone to baseball games, as for instance the Venice Hawks vs. the Trieste Red Sox.
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> 2499 West 37th Ave.,
> Vancouver, B.C.,
> Canada V6M 1P4

> fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

387. Rachel Levitsky
Re: football encased in reverance
Mon 18 Aug 1997

alright now I'm going out on a limb here like on mt sinai and the kids coming up told us kids coming down that thurmon munson had died and larry was going crazy with grief and i thought he couldn't be serious and he nearly punched me. so i know i don't know what you guys are going crazy about and i don't want to insult anyone cause i am the kind of gal that guys might be provoked to punch but if you would, could you bring it to a level that would be enjoyable for those of us that are used to other forms of contact?

↑ Index

388. George Bowering
Re: football encased in light
Mon 18 Aug 1997

I was invited once to try out for the Edmonton >Argonauts), who pat each other lovingly on the behind.
>Kent

Well, there is a team called the Edmonton Eskimos and a team called the Toronto Argonauts. It happens that they are right now each in first place in their divisions.

I think you should have muscled up and gone to the Washington Steelers camp, Kent.

George Bowering.

,
2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

389. R. Gancie
mediocrity
Mon 18 Aug 1997

Karen M. Sorry you missed the discussion. It was posted on the Poetics sight; but it was also posted on 300 other poetry, literature, philosophy and philosophy of science sites. We opened with a discussion of the post-Lowell confessional school with a focus on the critical works of Charles Altieri. However, Joe Brennan participated in the discussion and we eventually moved into a scrap about L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetry. As I tried to move the discussion toward the dominance of the scientific paradigm, we wound up talking about the phenomenonology of Husserl and Natorp, Wittgenstein, the Vienna Circle and the Frankfurt School---among other things. At one point, half the chat was on Freud and Lacan and the other half on the potential of modernist poetics to critique the scientific-technological paradigm. I still have a headache. Needless to say such a discussion in the chat format is hard to economize. We plan to do it again and hope to have our mechanics down better next time.---Carlo Parcelli

↑ Index

390. Joseph Zitt
John Cage Event September 5th in Maryland
Mon 18 Aug 1997

JOHN CAGE CELEBRATION TO BE HELD IN MARYLAND SEPTEMBER 5TH

"AtlantiCage Ninety-seven^85: A Birthday Circus for John Cage" will be presented on September 5th, 1997 at 8 PM at the Tawes Fine Arts building on the campus of the University of Maryland at College Park. The event is free and open to the public.

The celebration, organized by members of "Silence: The John Cage Internet Mailing List", will include performances and reading of works by Cage, as well as performances inspired by his work and life. In keeping with his principles of peaceful anarchism, the event will include simultaneous performances of different works, as well as related visual and sound events. It is presented as part of the worldwide "Freedom Summer" series in conjunction with the Pauline Oliveros Foundation.

The event will begin on the brick stage on the north side of Tawes Theater (to the left of the theatre as you face it) with a Tuning Meditation, followed by a listening walk through the area, arriving at Room 2102 of the Tawes Fine Arts Building where the rest of the events will occur.

Bring yourself and an open ear. If you'd like to contribute to the reception afterwards, food donations are appreciated.

Contacts: Matthew Ross Davis <[redacted]>
Tom Bickley <[redacted]>
Joseph Zitt <[redacted]>
Silence: The John Cage Internet Mailing List:
http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt/Cage

Directions:

Maps:
For the official map, see the University web page at http://www.inform.umd.edu/CampusInfo/About_UMCP/Maps/ and click on the Southwest Quadrant.
For alternate directions, see http://www.inform.umd.edu/CVS/.CVS/gettingtocampus.html

By Car: The University of Maryland sits right in the corner of the intersection of 193 (University Blvd.) and Adelphi Rd. From either direction on 495, take the College Park exit (Rt. 1 south) and head south on Rt. 1 through several traffic lights. After a few miles, you will see signs for 193 west, which will be a right exit down a ramp. Take this exit, continue west through one traffic light. The next traffic light will be Campus Drive, on which you will turn left and enter the campus. Stay to your right, going through the traffic circle and keeping to your right. You will go between the construction for the Maryland Center for the Performing Arts on your right, and a huge parking garage (behind which is the stadium) on your left. Soon, you'll reach a second traffic circle, through which you pass, still staying to the right and going straight. A soccer field will be on your right, and the next stop sign you get to, turn left. The large parking lot that is now to your right is Lot 1, and Tawes Theatre looks west across it. Park in Lot 1 (it's open to visitors without a permit after 4 PM on weekdays), and walk towards the theatre, and you should see us gathering out on a brick stage in a small courtyard next to the theatre entrance. The main building entrance is actually on the opposite side of the building, and the room for the performance (2102) is on the second floor.

By Public Transportation: The College Park Metro is not really within walking distance of Tawes; there are shuttles that run from the station to campus, or you can take a cab. Tawes is at least a mile or two from the Metro station. ---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------1---------- |||/ Joseph Zitt ===== [redacted] ===== Human Systems \||| ||/ Maryland? ================= SILENCE: The John Cage Mailing List \|| |/ http://www.realtime.net/~jzitt ========== <> <> ========= ecto \|

↑ Index

391. Wystan Curnow
uk visit
Tue 19 Aug 1997

Calling all UK poetics people!

Am hoping to be in London in October, and would welcome suggestions as to readings, events, exhibitions, accomodation.

Wystan

↑ Index

392. George Bowering
Re: football encased in reverance
Tue 19 Aug 1997

> if you would, could you > bring it to a level that would be enjoyable for those of us that are > used to other forms of contact?

Interesting choice of word, Rachel. Now, while we are speaking of levels, we have to speak of higher and lower, dont we? When you say "bring it to a level", do you mean raise it to a higher level, by any chance? Now, in the study of language usage, that is called "begging the question," i.e. in this case pretending that we agree that a disagreement about the value of football is necessarily on a lower level than something that can be "enjoyed" by others. Unless you meant, which I doubt, that you wanted something at a lower level....

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

393. Rachel Levitsky
Re: Left Hand Reading Series, Boulder, CO
Tue 19 Aug 2008

ATTENTION POETS/ACTIVISTS!!

Rachel Levitsky and Matt Meighan (2 subscribers) are currently organizing the 1997/98 Literary Segment of the Left Hand Reading Series in Boulder, Colorado.

There are still some slots unfilled for the readings January through April, 1998. Because we cannot pay poets (though can bring them the attention of a sizable audience, and a well-promoted event) we are dependent on the poet's proximity to us. If you or a poet you know lives in the area, or will be in the Denver/Boulder area during that time and would like to read please contact us:

Rachel Levitsky -- [redacted]
Matt Meighan -- [redacted]

Also, writers who are interested in being featured reader can send work to: Rachel Levitsky LHRS
P.O. 1771
Boulder, CO 80306-1771

MORE READING SERIES INFORMATION The Reading Series is a program of the Left Hand Book Collective, an all volunteer run radical left bookstore. The series was begun last year and was a huge success. Writers Rikki Ducornet, Dennis Brutus, Akilah Oliver, Andrew Schelling, Carolyn Wright, Ward Churchill, Bunky Echo Hawk, Max Regan, Shira Segal, Geri Lynn Baumblatt, Sarah Skaggs, Stephanie Williams and others read to enthusiastic audiences. Each reading features an open segment and two featured readers, one emerging writer and one established writer. We are committed to promoting work that might otherwise be marginalized, and make a special effort to reach out to young writers, writers of color, writers of diverse economic and social backgrounds and to writers of daring and innovative forms. We see no separation between art and politics.

The Left Hand Book Collective is located in downtown Boulder at:

1825 Pearl Street
Boulder, CO 80302
Phone--[redacted]

↑ Index

394. Rachel Levitsky
Re: football encased in reverance
Tue 19 Aug 2008

George,

My mistake, the word I was looking for was "dimension" as in "could you bring it into a dimension. . ."

begging forgiveness,

Rachel

Rachel

↑ Index

395. Henry G
M. Epshtein book
Tue 19 Aug 1997

Simon, for some reason I couldn't backchannel the info - the message bounced. Problem with your address? So forgive me poetics, perhaps others would also like this biblio info. The book is:

Epshtein, Mikhail
After the future : the paradoxes of postmodernism in contemporary Russian culture Univ. of Massachusetts Press, 1995
isbn 0870239732
0870239740 (pbk)

- Henry Gould

↑ Index

396. Stephen C. Ellwood
unsubscribe
Tue 19 Aug 1997

I am leaving the list, going away to school. Could someone tell me again how to unsubscribe?

EVD

↑ Index

397. Daniel Bouchard
en route to Mass Ave.
Tue 19 Aug 1997

Thrilled to announce publication of the third issue of MASS AVE.

The featured poets:

Michael Angelo Tata
Andrew Levy
Sherry Brennan
Kyle Conner
Jennifer Moxley

Fred Muratori
Kary Wayson
Robert Fitterman
Ethel Rackin
Kim Bernstein
Juliana Spahr

57 pages, perfect bound. $6 postage paid.

Also, the Second Issue is still available; featuring

Valerie Hanson
Lisa Jarnot
Marcella Durand
Eileen Corder
Anselm Berrigan
Nava Fader
Larry Price
Dan Luft
Douglas Rothschild
Mary Burger
Drew Gardner
Dave Baptiste Chirot
Daniel Bouchard
Kevin Varrone
WB Keckler
Kim Lyons

56 pages, perfect bound. $6 postage paid.

Get BOTH issues for the bargain price of $10.

Daniel Bouchard
Mass Ave.
PO Box 230
Boston, MA 02117

Thank you. You're beautiful.

↑ Index

398. Henry Gould
RI reading advance
Tue 19 Aug 1997

Upcoming reading in Rhode Island - first in the Poetry Mission's fall series at Native Gallery:

Cathleen Calbert & Daniel Bouchard will read on Friday, Sept 12th at 8 pm at Native Gallery, 387 Charles St, Providence. Just off Route 95; call [redacted] for directions. Free; refreshments. Come, & bring your friends in their thousands.

Cathleen Calbert's new book, LESSONS IN SPACE, just publ. by Univ. of Florida Press.

Daniel Bouchard edits MASS AVE. and is a decorated veteran of the poetics list.

Book & magazine & other poetry mission stuff available at the reading.

↑ Index

399. minkacroy
How do I get on/off this list
Tue 19 Aug 1997

How do I get on & off this list, thank you.
[redacted]

↑ Index

400. Lawrence Upton
unsubscribe
Tue 19 Aug 1997

<<I am leaving the list, going away to school. Could someone tell me again how to unsubscribe?>>

quote _You may leave the list at any time by sending a "SIGNOFF POETICS" command to [redacted]._

L

↑ Index

401. Alan Jen Sondheim
now you'll hate me
Tue 19 Aug 1997

now you'll hate me but I'm on a trip, now in Pittsburg on the way to everywhere, so, well, this came out, ahem, definitely the work, ah, of a beginner, someone reading, whom, maybe even Blackburn played a role here, certain not the language poets, Rachel got me to read some Jane Miller standing up in a bookstore, well, I did that on my own, but now going through Lacan who's not much help here either, so now you'll hate me because this is just too weird because just too too ordinary

---

Plural Dark Angels of the Night

You came to me like plural dark angels of the night. I was about to compose a brilliant text on the density of my language. I began thinking of your brilliant arrival a month ago, like plural dark angels of the night. My language dissolved like sloppy seconds at my feet (I'm not gonna have no feet). I wanted to reply about this, the nature of language and brilliant feet. I wanted to write about languages interspersed, interpenetrated in this machine, languages and information everywhere, like plural dark angels of the brilliant sloppy night. I thought of our arms like grapple-hooks around each other. Language clattered like a bowl of boiling coffee spilled on my feet. I thought of our teeth against brilliant skin confused with passion like plural dark angels of the night. There was something else I wanted to write; I thought of your brilliant eyes. I wanted to write about your eyes; I thought of your brilliant mouth, your limbs. I thought about the feet of the plural dark angels of the night. I thought, I thought. I thought, brilliant, you know where this is going so I'm not gonna write no more.

↑ Index

402. KENT JOHNSON
Re: football encased in light
Tue 19 Aug 1997

(Something along these lines went out to the list two days ago, but my reply function seems to only work about half the time. I have my pride, so i'm typing it again, leaving out some of the potentially volatile language from the original. Kent)

George: You think you flame me. But the invitation to the pre-season camp from Edmonton was many years ago, and the fact is I just don't give a damn about

Canadian football, since it is such a sorry state of affairs. You Canadians are pretty pathetic: You still haven't really rid yourselves of the Queen, and then like cowbirds you take up football and then baseball, and then all of a sudden you think you can tell true past players of these games what the score is. Eskimos or Argonauts, who gives a shit? They are both really stupid names anyway, almost as stupid as "Maple Leafs," which is a really silly name. I meant to say Eskimos and I said Argonauts. So what George? I was cut after a couple weeks, but this was only because of the receiver coach who felt I was too light to play tight end and too heavy to play wide-out. He was a CAnadian, boring and affable on the outside, scheming and manipulative on the inside. So what sport do you play, George? Curling? Don't mess with me. Kent

↑ Index

403. Red Slider
Re: football encased in light
Tue 19 Aug 1997

From: KENT JOHNSON[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, August 19, 1997 8:16 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: football encased in light

'xcusa please but i'm new in these parts and don't know if Kent (or george) is hero or hormone in these woods, but is that stuff down below in the bilge supposed to be poetry? or what? Makes Bukowski look positively experimental - I mean, avant-marginal, or front-fender febrile or sumpin'. Sure hope this isn't the list light from Buffalo land.

red.

>George:
You think you flame me. But the invitation to the pre-season camp from Edmonton was many years ago, and the fact is I just don't give a damn about Canadian football, since it is such a sorry state of affairs. You Canadians are pretty pathetic: You still haven't really rid yourselves of the Queen, and then like cowbirds you take up football and then baseball, and then all of a sudden you think you can tell true past players of these games what the score is. Eskimos or Argonauts, who gives a shit? They are both really stupid names anyway, almost as stupid as "Maple Leafs," which is a really silly name. I meant to say Eskimos and I said Argonauts. So what George? I was cut after a couple weeks, but this was only because of the receiver coach who felt I was too light to play tight end and too heavy to play wide-out. He was a CAnadian, boring and affable on the outside, scheming and manipulative on the inside. So what sport do you play, George? Curling? Don't mess with me.

Kent<

↑ Index

404. KENT JOHNSON football encased in reverance
Tue 19 Aug 1997

(And I'd also sent this out too, which I kind of like, so here goes again. Kent)

Rachel: I don't know you, but after reading your post, no one, but no one who cares about sports could ever want to punch you, whether you're taht kind of gal, as you say, or not. Oh Munson's name being whispered to you by a kid on Mt. Sinai, you going down toward the river, with the scent of the olive tree in your hair, Rachel, Munson barely visible against the olive a little bit up the hill, lashed to it, six or seven arrows in his side, staring ecstatically out at the world. It's so beautiful, that none of those who see can believe it. And then out of nowhere comes George Bowering, rolling downhill in a circle, going faster and faster, like a bagel. Kent

↑ Index

405. Tom Orange
paul auster
Wed 20 Aug 1997

hey there, can anyone confirm for me if the paul auster of /new york trilogy/ and /smoke/ fame is the same one who translated mallarme's /tomb for anatole/ for north point press a while back?

mastering the trivial,
tom.

↑ Index

406. Rachel Levitsky
Re: football encased in reverance
Tue 19 Aug 2008

Oh Kent oh Kent oh there you go oh there I go I say Sinai and it could be Masada, I mean all of those characters! And all that sport yes I feel it, am getting the feel for it, I mean him I’m there and I see it I finally see it, it just took some pointing out. I am entering the Other dimension and there, from the other side, from the snake path or snake pit, comes another oh yes yes it’s Kevin Kostner and they are rolling yes they are rolling as a doughnut as a bauble as...WAIT A MINUTE, JUST WAIT A MINUTE. Oh Kent, will they? Will they ever meet?

KENT JOHNSON wrote:
>
> (And I'd also sent this out too, which I kind of like, so here goes > again. Kent)
>
> Rachel:
> I don't know you, but after reading your post, no one, but no one > who cares about sports could ever want to punch you, whether you're > taht kind of gal, as you say, or not. Oh Munson's name being > whispered to you by a kid on Mt. Sinai, you going down toward the > river, with the scent of the olive tree in your hair, Rachel, Munson > barely visible against the olive a little bit up the hill, lashed to > it, six or seven arrows in his side, staring ecstatically out at the > world. It's so beautiful, that none of those who see can believe > it. And then out of nowhere comes George Bowering, rolling > downhill in a circle, going faster and faster, like a bagel.
> Kent

↑ Index

407. Matt Kirschenbaum
Re: paul auster
Wed 20 Aug 1997

It's the same Paul Auster. He discusses this translation during his linebreak interview: http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/linebreak/

--Matt

> hey there, can anyone confirm for me if the paul auster of /new york trilogy/ and /smoke/ fame is the same one who translated mallarme's /tomb for anatole/ for north point press a while back?
>
> mastering the trivial,
> tom.

========== Matthew G. Kirschenbaum University of Virginia [redacted] Department of English
http://www.iath.virginia.edu/~mgk3k/ The Blake Archive | IATH

↑ Index

408. George Bowering
Re: football encased in light
Wed 20 Aug 1997

> (Something along these lines went out to the list two days ago, but my reply function seems to only work about half the time. I have my pride, so i'm typing it again, leaving out some of the potentially volatile language from the original. Kent)
>
> George:
> You think you flame me. But the invitation to the pre-season camp from Edmonton was many years ago, and the fact is I just don't give a damn about Canadian football, since it is such a sorry state of affairs. You Canadians are pretty pathetic: You still haven't really rid yourselves of the Queen, and then like cowbirds you take up football and then baseball, and then all of a sudden you think you can tell true past players of these games what the score is. Eskimos or Argonauts, who gives a shit? They are both really stupid names anyway, almost as stupid as "Maple Leafs," which is a really silly name. I meant to say Eskimos and I said Argonauts. So what George? I was cut after a couple weeks, but this was only because of the receiver coach who felt I was too light to play tight end and too heavy to play wide-out. He was a CAnadian, boring and affable on the outside, scheming and manipulative on the inside. So what sport do you play, George? Curling? Don't mess with me.
> Kent

Kent, what is wrong with you? Why are you so pissed off? I never tried to flame you. If you were serious with your question, I play fastball, a version of softball that is more exciting than that slo-pitch game they play south of the border, and related to baseball, a game they were playing in Ontario in 1836. Oh, and the first football game was played in Kingston, Ont.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

409. Red Slider
Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
Wed 20 Aug 1997

>----------
From: Ira Lightman[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, August 20, 1997 10:36 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow<

[snip]
I would not even attempt to imitate by reposting.

Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
now I smash it to bits I give my obnoxious bag of notes to a begger with no throat I will hum down the street, applauding.

thanx, i think - red.

↑ Index

410. Ira Lightman
Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
Wed 20 Aug 1997

A word of mourning from me:

I was just thinking of Nancarrow the week before he died, drawing inspiration from his piece - is it "x" or "zeugma"? - where the "left hand" of the player piano starts playing very slowly, ascending and speeding up and the "right hand" plays ludicrously quickly, descending and slowing down. They meet in the middle and cross and finish at their far extremes. It is a piece of such simple audacity that it delights anyone I know, pop or classical or whatever their musical tastes. I was writing a libretto for a piece by MIke Higgins - the score of Bach's first Prelude from the Well Tempered Clavier played upside down, hence "I edulerp" (Prelude I) as the title and I used a poem of two-word lines with the ultimate line read first, then the first, then the penultimate, then the second, and so on, crossing in the middle.
The columns should work separately and together. The theme was a Gaia of Gaia's: just as all life and the planet may be one organism, so may all its history also make a gaia. It seems to strike by fluke a note of eternity, the fields Beckett describes in Stirrings Still, which honour life and see some hope in death, so I'll offer it in memory of Nancarrow:

I EDULERP

beyond

one great hand in

great great hand one's

great great

grand great great grand

last long one's hand

first this in hand

grass of one first straw this one last garden

one past

garden

one come to pass

garden

this time

meta is grass

garden

and vine hand and out lasts garden this straw time less and wine time in this time

garden is time wine one in hand straw as one grand last one in grand first is gaia's
time less gaia time now is time wine is less time vine the meta eternity time met eternity's
a time right in one great right the great great hand in great great hand time's great grand grand great time's hand great great in hand great great the right great one in right time a eternity's met time eternity

meta the vine time less is wine time is now time gaia less time gaia's is first grand in one last grand one as straw hand in one wine time is garden time this in time wine and less time straw this garden lasts out and hand vine and garden grass is meta time this garden pass to come one garden

past one garden
last one this straw first one of grass hand in this first hand one's long last grand great

great grand

great great

one's hand

great great

in hand

great the

beyond

On Tue, 12 Aug 1997 07:28:47 -0800 Herb Levy wrote:

> From: Herb Levy <[redacted]>
> Date: Tue, 12 Aug 1997 07:28:47 -0800
> Subject: Conlon Nancarrow
> To: [redacted]
>
> I just returned home from the east coast to find a message on my answering > machine from Trimpin saying that Conlon Nancarrow died over the weekend in > Mexico City. Nancarrow would have been 85 in October.
>
> The American expatriate composer was best known for his series of studies > for player piano, composed and hand-punched on a custom machine, the medium > in which he worked valmost exclusively for much of the last fifty years.
> These works were really wonderful extensions of the sound world of the > piano timbrally altered by extremes of tempo, tempo ratios, and unusual > canonic structures. His few works for live performers (either early works > composed before Nancarrow began focusing on player piano or quite recent > pieces commissioned by performers & ensembles like Ursula Oppens & Arditti > Quartet) have been more rarely heard.

>
> All but the three most recently completed of Nancarrow's Studies for Player
> Piano are recorded on Wergo, his other works have been recorded by Arditti > Quartet, Ursula Oppens, Continuum, Joanna MacGregor, and others. In 1995, > Cambridge University Press published a book length study of his work by > Kyle Gann.
>
>
> Herb Levy
> [redacted]

↑ Index

411. Ryan Whyte
Amerika
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Hi folks.

I'm writing an hallucinatory extension to Kafka's _The Man who Disappeared_; the first chapter is up at http://www.freenet.edmonton.ab.ca/~rwhyte/amer.html

I should have more up later this week.

Thanks for your time -

Ryan

==========
[redacted]

↑ Index

412. aerialedge
Re: paul auster/ davidson/debord
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Exact Change has just published Auster's _Translations_ ($16.95) including Tomb for Anatole, as well as Joubert, Andre Dubouchet, & Philippe Petit. I believe Anatole was originally published by North Point. Also, if you don't know it Auster's anthology _The Random House Book of Twentieth Century French Poetry_ is well worth getting, I believe it's still in print.

While we're talking just published Michael Davidson's U. Cal. tome _Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material World_ ($35) is just out. Discusses Stein, Oppen, Howe, Pound, Olson, Zukofsky, Rukeyser, Reznikoff, Duncan, &&&.

Also new & excitin': _Guy Debord -- Revolutionary: A Critical Biography_ ($14.95) by Len Bracken. It's not that critical (of Debord) but neither am I. Way recommended.

All of these will be on next Bridge Street list but ya'll kin order'm now if ya needta.

--Rod

↑ Index

413. p. durgin

Ad infinitum

Wed 20 Aug 1997

PREFACE TO A CASE OF AD INFINITUM

The peasants are revolting The pious Bleating of Feckless roup Leaping into The heaping Bargain
Who is not On so holy A sooth feast
A victory call
Was a clarinet A question of legions
The market will bear
The lumbering
Yer slit don't shrink It is almost

Bleeding But malakin Inly epoch

-- Patrick Durgin --

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

↑ Index

414. Joel Kuszai
SPD's new address
Wed 20 Aug 1997

FYI

SPD is MOVING

(from 1814 San Pablo Avenue, Berkeley CA 94702)

effective 1 September 1997 our new address & phone/fax is:

SPD / Small Press Distribution, Inc
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley CA 94702

new telephone [redacted]

new fax
[redacted]

same toll-free orders
[redacted]

same e-mail
[redacted]

Keep in touch!

↑ Index

415. Red Slider
Yes, but what does it do?
Wed 20 Aug 1997

As this fellow once said to me, "The hell with the pansies, what can you do with it?"

Well, my 'test market' reports to me that he's had a 40% boost in sales (for the one or two cynics in this group, I don't doubt that he drives a Mercedes, long ago paid his mortgage and has his sere threads done by the comely seamstress with the magical fingers - not that she'd ever given me the nod, but then I only brought in my pants cuffs to be taken up) - nevertheless, its nice to be published by the world.

The following work and its companion are released by the author, Red Slider, to the Public Domain and all rights hereby relinquished. It is the author's desire that persons who should encounter a street-poet, down on their luck, should give them a copy and let them know they may use it as they see fit.

(var. 1)

If he comes,
no matter how -
as victim, as perpetrator,
with misfortune and woe
or con and rube,
with a shill for an eye,
he's a bum, if he comes that way; and you may still offer to do the thing, to offer him some if he comes that way

but if he should hold out a poem,
no matter the verse,
poor or magnificent
doggerel or worse,
he's a working man -
a hard-working man.
Give him his due,
pay him his wage,
a fair wage
for a hard-working man.

(var. 2)

If she comes,
no matter how -
as victim, as perpetrator,
with misfortune and woe
or con and rube,
with a shill for an eye,
she's a bum, if she comes that way; and you may still offer to do the thing, to offer her some if she comes that way

but if she should hold out a poem,
no matter the verse,

poor or magnificent
doggerel or worse,
she's a workin' woman -
a hard-workin' woman.
Give her what's due,
pay her the wage,
a fair wage
for a hard-workin' woman.

Put in the Public Domain
August 19, 1997
by Red Slider.
no rights reserved.

↑ Index

416. Charles Alexander
Re: what flames, where?
Wed 20 Aug 1997

> Btw, when you wrote that you didnt give a damn abt canadian things, I was really hoping the text was going to say "rats ass." "I dont give a rats ass about canadian things." Am i the only listling who prefers "rats ass" to "damn"? David

I prefer rats ass to David's old damn flames
ass rats prefer David to flame I damn old David prefers I to old damn flames rats ass
to old David flames prefer I damn rats ass
to old I David rats damn ass prefer flames
David, old flame, I prefer rats ass to damn
chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing
books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision
handmade and trade editions of contemporary innovative writing [redacted] :: http://personal.riverusers.com/~chax/

↑ Index

417. Daniel Bouchard
Re: what flames, where?
Wed 20 Aug 1997

David,

I prefer rats ass but only to canadian bacon. I prefer rats ass flamed.

[redacted]

↑ Index

418. David Israel
Re: what flames, where?
Wed 20 Aug 1997

David Bromige now turns to favored forms of expressing umbrage (or disinterest at least) -- saying to Kent Johnson,

<< Btw, when you wrote that you didnt give a damn abt canadian things, I was really hoping the text was going to say "rats ass." "I dont give a rats ass about canadian things." Am i the only listling who prefers "rats ass" to "damn"? >>

I won't personally weigh in in favor of rat's ass; somehow (notwithstanding the agreeable hint of the archaic), the presumed appeal of this locution eludes me at present.

What other forms of not-caring -- what rhetoric of i-cd-care-less -- are prevalent, rare, favored, or even of-the-moment?

I've somewhat admired
> I don't give a flying fuck . . . <

(though will not admit to having used the expression much meself).

One feels certain that this redoubtable roster must have up its collective sleeves many more (& better) alternatives, neh?

d.i.

↑ Index

419. David Bromige
what flames, where?
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Kent, that wasnt flaming (unless george back channeled you). George wouldnt flame a fly. Thats just George's notion of good fun & friendliness. Honest. We've all put up with that for decades. When you meet soneone as developmentally challenged as George Bowering, you only encourage him, because its just great that he can interact at all, after all those years growing up in the desert.

Btw, when you wrote that you didnt give a damn abt canadian things, I was really hoping the text was going to say "rats ass." "I dont give a rats ass about canadian things." Am i the only listling who prefers "rats ass" to "damn"? David

↑ Index

420. David Kellogg
Re: what flames, where?
Wed 20 Aug 1997

David Bromige wrote:

> Btw, when you wrote that you didnt give a damn abt canadian things, I was really hoping the text was going to say "rats ass." "I dont give a rats ass about canadian things." Am i the only listling who prefers "rats ass" to "damn"? David

No. I too prefer it. In fact, rats ass is best flamed (or broiled).

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

↑ Index

422. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: what flames, where?
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Charles Alexander wrote:
>
> >Btw, when you wrote that you didnt give a damn abt canadian things, I was > >really hoping the text was going to say "rats ass." "I dont give a rats ass > >about canadian things." Am i the only listling who prefers "rats ass" to > >"damn"? David
>
> I prefer rats ass to David's old damn flames
> ass rats prefer David to flame I damn old > David prefers I to old damn flames rats ass
> to old David flames prefer I damn rats ass
> to old I David rats damn ass prefer flames
> David, old flame, I prefer rats ass to damn
> chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing
> books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision
> handmade and trade editions of contemporary innovative writing
> [redacted] :: http://personal.riverusers.com/~chax/

I like Ed Sanders' "I don't give a pound of mule mucus," though I rarely quote it. Always wondered how one would collect it...

Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

423. KENT JOHNSON
oh canada
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Whoa. Is it me? Am I actually the one missing double entendres in the last posts, letting me know, ever so subtly, that every one is kosher and just playing back with moi? Well, I have to admit, listers, that I am more confused than I even normally am. George and David (the Canadians) and even a few Americans (among the very few Americans on this list) seem to have taken me awrongs. In fact, this is very interesting, and I'd like to propose it is worth at least a new and separate thread (tho I doubt it would come to that). Is it possible, really, that such intelligent people could have thought that my football post to George was seriously meant? That I actually thought he was trying to "flame" me with his previous post? I have to say, this seems very similar to Sokal all over again, even though I never intended it that way. I sincerely thought that the silliness would be obvious. I mean I've never even (and I swear here) been to Canada. (although my past in football is more or less real--I was actually captain of the UW/LaCrosse freshman football team, then broke my hand and went to UW/Milwaukee to play soccer. My substitute at tight end on the football team in '74 went on three years later to become NAIA All-American, a tid-bit that remains one of the proudest accomplishments of my life to this day.)

Anyway, I just wanted to make this clear, and to apologize to George and David for insulting their motherland. I was just kidding. In fact, I have to say, it's fascinating that when I told David Bromige some days back that I had had an encounter of the third kind that he thought I was kidding when in truth I was absolutely serious, and then when I told George that I was a better football player than he he thought I meant it when I was thoroughly kidding. This email business is slippery. Who can keep track? I'm reminded of my teacher Samu Sunim, who stared at me once like he was a tiger about to bite my entrails out and said: "Bring me the thoughts in these words, and put them in my hand." There's something there relevant to to this medium, but I'm not sure what.

I will now stop posting prose and stick to poems where there is never any problem with what anybody says. I'm serious George, you Canuck. Kent

↑ Index

424. Henry Gould
Re: oh canada
Wed 20 Aug 1997

"By the word no one thinks exactly the same thing as the other person does... Each understanding is at the same time a non-understanding, each agreement in thoughts and feelings is likewise a disagreement."

- Wilhelm von Humboldt

↑ Index

425. Red Slider
Re: oh canada
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Kent, I don't really give a fuck, I just wanted to know if that was what passed for poetry around here, and now that you've assured me its prose I'm much relieved - for which I don't give a rusty fig, either. Now, about that "tid-bit" bit, that's a loose ball. Frankly I've always liked 'a dinkle-berry' in that stead, or maybe its 'I don't give a dinkle-berry', I can't remember and don't really give a shit! Oh, there, I've gone and said it and I don't know David, looks too big to be a rat - lemming maybe? Looking forward to your poetry, Kent.

red.

↑ Index

426. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: space(s) of silence
Wed 20 Aug 1997

At 8:15 AM 8/21/97, Christina Fairbank Chirot wrote:
> s e e
even lements' ucharistix

↑ Index

427. Rachel Levitsky
Re: query
Thu 21 Aug 2008

---

does anyone know if Hanging Loose Press (Brooklyn NY, I think Steve Freid, anyone know if that's right?) has an email address?

thanx
RL

↑ Index

428. KENT JOHNSON
seein' red
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Red: Well, shoot, Red, even though it's in the form of prose, I meant it all as poesy. Are you implying that you don't like it? Well, pardner, there it is. Don't let it get under your big-buckled belt _too_ much. It's only poetry.

By the way, is that really your name, "Red Slider"? that's pretty cool. Did you know there used to be a coach in the very early years of the old AFL named Red Hickey? Funny how everything, in the end, can be brought back to football.
Kent

↑ Index

429. David Bromige
only kidding, kent
Wed 20 Aug 1997

actually, I couldnt tell were you for real or not on this one (unlike yr other postings ahem). But i saw the chance to say insulting things about my old friend while appearing to rush to his defense; it was too good to waste. George would have done no less for me.

Apparently, a majority enjoy their rats ass flamed. Charles writes a neat poem in which by the last line I am his old flame while he states his preference for rats ass. Thats nice. I remember the Alexander piano--shaky, unstable, but downright seductive. Unless thbat was me (the first part).There should be more fun in one's life.

David I., I _knew_ you were going to "say" "flying fuck" before my eye reached it, I swear. Long a favorite of mine, though its vehemence undoes its indifference. Other phrases to indicate indifference? I used to like the ungrammatical "I could care less." (Cant even be bothered to add the "n't"). "Frankly, my dear, I dont give a damn." Sexist pig. "Good goddam" is a pleasure to say. "Two hoots" sounds archaic--back to a time when owls flew this earth. "A tinker's cuss" has a pleasingly ethnic tint. Any others?

David, champion of "Encased-in-light" St.George, whose motto, "With friends like Dave, who needs enemas" has been copyrighted in British Columbia.

↑ Index

430. kim dawn
space(s) of silence
Wed 20 Aug 1997

on silence(s)

mouth opens. words flow forward. silence(s) between each word, each breath, e a c h l e t t e r . these silences form a bubble infinitely larger than the spoken. silences take up space. silences emerge during the spoken. when we think of silence(s) we think of mouths, of breath seen in cold air, of dead phone lines, of discomfort, of too much comfort, of death. writing is scarred with the death of silences. writing is scarred with death. writing is scarred with silence. these silences are full. we read between the lines to find 'truth'. silences are impatient. silences are already written. the everlasting silence of suicide notes and love letters. beside my corpse lies my last words. between the lines lies my body.

your absence is filled with your voice your body more than your presence. the further away you are, the less you speak, the more i hear your silence around my throat.

on having nothing to write

i have nothing to write. i have nothing to say. yet, i write:
'i have nothing to write'.
'it' all resides within the space(s) of silence. these silence(s) must be written.
what is the condition of these spaces of silence?
this is not so much about writing about silence as it is about writing through/to silence, finally, writing silence.
silence is not empty nor passive. we recognize silence as one of the most effective tools of communication. to communicate our anger/frustration we 'use' the 'silent treatment' upon the other.
silence(s) are moody.

how to write silence : this is my dilema,

any blanchot fans out there?

oh, and by the way,

h i s s h i r t s m e l l s l i k e h i m s t i l l a n d i w e a r i t u p o n m y t o n g u e u p o n t h e f a l l o f n i g h t i t r a i n s a n d a n n e m u r r a y c a n s t i l l p u l l m y h e a r t c h o r d s s p e c i a l l y s i n c e s h e s f r o m m y w a y o h d e a d l i t t l e s n o w b i r d i h e l d y o u o n c e

↑ Index

431. Red Slider

Re: seein' red

Wed 20 Aug 1997

Yeah, Red Hickey & 'Red Strader' as well - both with the 49'rs. The name was given to me and it stuck. Once got a subpoena in the name Red Slider and they said I'd better show up - so I suppose you could say it's real. Buckle's-back-in-place - Padre's Ass shows. All comes down to how fast the track is.

thanx for the poetry tip.

red

From: KENT JOHNSON[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, August 20, 1997 6:11 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: seein' red

Red: Well, shoot, Red, even though it's in the form of prose, I meant it all as poesy. Are you implying that you don't like it? Well, pardner, there it is. Don't let it get under your big-buckled belt _too_ much. It's only poetry.

By the way, is that really your name, "Red Slider"? that's pretty cool. Did you know there used to be a coach in the very early years of the old AFL named Red Hickey? Funny how everything, in the end, can be brought back to football.
Kent

↑ Index

432. jarnot
rduncan
Wed 20 Aug 1997

---

dear list people:

i am looking for video/film footage of robert duncan for a research project. please backchannel me if you have any info and/or materials.

thanks. lisa jarnot

↑ Index

433. Red Slider
Re: oh canada
Wed 20 Aug 1997

---

what a coincidence - I was just thinking exactly the same thing. - red.

From: Henry Gould[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, August 20, 1997 5:42 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: oh canada

"By the word no one thinks exactly the same thing as the other person does... Each understanding is at the same time a non-understanding, each agreement in thoughts and feelings is likewise a disagreement."

- Wilhelm von Humboldt

↑ Index

434. Red Slider
I'm feeling better now - so i'll drop a poem
Wed 20 Aug 1997

---

two brushes

two brushes
one wide one narrow brushes brushed on a painted sky

the wide brush saturated in blue

the nearby clouds still freshly swept with wet paint

delicate margins golden delicious wet clouds picnic on blue grass gay cloth mats in sere silks cirrostratus undressing the wind

bare cover distant pale blues thinning to wash
the day folding into faded picnic cloths clouds of leaves, blue grass, black velvet waves rolling in menacing shapes, night thunder shaking the mats ants carry off crumbs of moon many times their own size stars the size of raindrops

raindrops the size of stars.

red slider
August 1997

↑ Index

435. George Bowering
Re: I dont give a
Wed 20 Aug 1997

Where I come from--i.e. them mountains in the Interior---they say "I dont give a pinch of coon shit."

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

436. Don Cheney
Re: what flames, where, huh?
Thu 21 Aug 1997

> Btw, when you wrote that you didnt give a damn abt canadian things, I was really hoping the text was going to say "rats ass." "I dont give a rats ass about canadian things." Am i the only listling who prefers "rats ass" to "damn"? David

david,

i love the phrase "I don't give a rats ass" And i agree that "I don't give a flying fuck" is another good one. like in the movie "DOWN BY LAW" where roberto benigni walks around with his list of american phrases to be spoken in broken english. he gets thrown in the hoosegow and looks at his notes and yells out at the jailer "why don't you take a flying fuck next to a couch!" (at least that's how i remember it, i never remember these things right)

My dad used to say, while driving, "That guy drives like he's got a paper asshole." And of course there's another favorite: "candy-ass". i don't use these phrases but they always crack me up when i hear them.

don

==========
Visit Don Cheney's Home Page & Clean Neck Shop
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
==========

↑ Index

437. DS
Re: what flames, where, huh?
Thu 21 Aug 1997

Slaughter House 5 "Why don't you take a flying fuck at a rolling doughnut?"

"Take a flying fuck at the moon."

Dan

> i love the phrase "I don't give a rats ass" And i agree that "I don't give a flying fuck" is another good one. like in the movie "DOWN BY LAW" where roberto benigni walks around with his list of american phrases to be spoken in broken english. he gets thrown in the hoosegow and looks at his notes and yells out at the jailer "why don't you take a flying fuck next to a couch!" (at least that's how i remember it, i never remember these things right)
>
> My dad used to say, while driving, "That guy drives like he's got a paper asshole." And of course there's another favorite: "candy-ass". i don't use these phrases but they always crack me up when i hear them.
>
> don
>
> ==========
> Visit Don Cheney's Home Page & Clean Neck Shop
> http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
> ==========

↑ Index

438. Mark Prejsnar
Publication Announcement
Thu 21 Aug 1997

ANNOUNCING

Now out: Misc. Proj. #3 with new work by:

David Shapiro, Peter Ganick, Joseph Lease, Sheila E. Murphy, John Lowther and others.....

Book reviews, journal reviews, peculiar graphix and more!

Only one dollar (or send $3.50 for a four-issue subscription) (contibutors and subscribers if they haven't received their copies should do so within the next couple of days...)

Make checks out to Mark Prejsnar

all mail to:
M. Prejsnar
641 N. Highland Ave. NE, #11
Atlanta, GA 30306

Submissions are strongly encouraged for #4.
Poems, essays, commentary, book reviews...

Read Misc. Proj...

"The Voice of the Pomo South"

↑ Index

439. David Israel
Re: seein' red
Thu 21 Aug 1997

---

funny how everything in the end can be brought back to comedy

(as in red skelton)

or, cinematic how everyging can be brought back in end to cinema (as in Konstanin Kerslawsky's RED)

d.i.

>>> KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]> 08/20 9:11 PM >>>
Red:
Well, shoot, Red, even though it's in the form of prose, I meant it all as poesy. Are you implying that you don't like it? Well, pardner, there it is. Don't let it get under your big-buckled belt too much. It's only poetry.

By the way, is that really your name, "Red Slider"? that's pretty cool. Did you know there used to be a coach in the very early years of the old AFL named Red Hickey? Funny how everything, in the end, can be brought back to football.
Kent

↑ Index

440. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: space(s) of silence
Thu 21 Aug 1997

s e e

↑ Index

441. lppl
Re: rduncan
Thu 21 Aug 1997

Lisa:

The outtakes of Duncan at SFSU Archive are excellent. Jess at one point in background. Laura can perhaps help you get dub of original half-hour program as well. [redacted]

Larry

↑ Index

442. Red Slider
Re: space(s) of silence
Thu 21 Aug 1997

kim wrote:

how to write silence : this is my dilema,

Kim, neither Rachael's nor Christina's samples seem to solve the problem for me. They both have big flashing noisey signfiers - END-OF-TEXTEND-OF-TEXT - waving at the ends of their texts. This I think we are clever enough (or cynical enough) to quit when it has the look&feel of 'END-OF-TEXT'. The trick is known, the audience eats the rabbit.

My own samples weren't much more useful. I don't pour much concrete poetry so they all were samples of textual, rather than meta-textual, silence. Missing term representations, grammatical or semantic discontinuities, unfulfilled or unresolved context or heightened anticipation. None would satisfy your request for meta-textual representation of silence. I did learn the following from considering the problem (at least as very tentative hypotheses):

1) the problem of representing 'silence' in text is catagorically similar to background/forground problems - a matter of degree, of terms in contrast, not in absence.

2) the simple presence of meta-symbols for 'silence' (space, empty enclosure, etc.) may serve to intensify subject rather than signify silence. The very act of calling attention to noiseless areas may immediately fill with all kinds of noise signified by the surrounding context - not 'silence' but a container for surplus noise.

3) 'Silence' may be a misnomer - or, at any rate, their may be a multiplicity of 'types of silence' so that any attempt to find a universal representation for 'silence' qua 'silence' is hopeless. Each will only be come as still as its particular context permits and in a way which its own formula will depend on that context.

4) It may be that 'Silence' is some kind of counter-effect that we can create - in meaning, in meta-graphical representation, in juxtaposition in which elements mutually annihilate each other - are 'phased' in such a way that each is muted. Whether this can approach 'silence' i don't know.

in a poem I posted here recently, there are two lines:

stars the size of raindrops

raindrops the size of stars

both sentences wanted to make there own noisey statments. I find them to be considerably muted in this arrangement - and some kind of silence leaking into the margins.

I do not think concrete representations (as opposed to textual ones) escape this dilemma. Even physical impositions which forces interruption in the reader (page-breaks, double page-breaks (though here the 'silence' of the publisher is quite audible), abrupt sequence reversal (say, right-to-left), etc.) still seem to be referrential, i.e. noisey. A true 'silence' would be absolutely stunning!

I propose these notions from examining only a very few of my own materials and hardly a hard proposal. Like to hear if you find anything quiet enough and universal enough to meet your needs. END

OF

red

↑ Index

443. Daniel Bouchard

address search

Thu 21 Aug 1997

Could someone--perharps even the people I am asking about-- backchannel me with the mailing addresses of Jeff Hansen (Poetics Briefs), and Aldon Nielsen?

much obliged,

[redacted]

↑ Index

444. Christopher Alexander
Re: what flames, where, huh?
Thu 21 Aug 1997

Don Cheney wrt:

> My dad used to say, while driving, "That guy drives like he's got a paper asshole."

what cld this possibly mean!?

Chris—still puzzled over it all

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

445. Laura Moriarty
Re: rduncan
Thu 21 Aug 1997

Thanks Larry, as I backchanneled to Lisa, the Poetry Center has extensive video and audio of Duncan.

I should say also that our schedule for the fall reading series is up on our Web site. I have removed the pixilated color background and will be adding a number of new pages in the next few weeks, so check back for updates.

Our complete on-line, searchable catalog is available on the site:

http://www.sfsu.edu./~newlit/welcome.htm

Scroll down and click on the Archives -

Laura Moriarty

> Lisa:
>
> The outtakes of Duncan at SFSU Archive are excellent. Jess at one point in background. Laura can perhaps help you get dub of original half-hour program as well. [redacted]
>
> Larry

↑ Index

446. George Bowering
Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
Thu 21 Aug 1997

> Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me

here in this metrapolis

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

447. Don Cheney
Re: what flames, where, huh?
Thu 21 Aug 1997

Chris,

i had the same response. my dad is dead and i cannot ask him and never did when he was alive. my brother john said it was someone who was driving very slowly or conservatively.

Don

> Don Cheney wrt:
>
> My dad used to say, while driving, "That guy drives like he's got a paper asshole."
>
> what cld this possibly mean!?
>
> Chris—still puzzled over it all

↑ Index

448. charssmith
Fwd: Text as a Visual Medium
Thu 21 Aug 1997

Forwarded message:
From: [redacted] (sfcb)

collecting) collecting)
To: [redacted]
Date: 97-08-21 15:00:24 EDT

Event: Friday, August 22, 7 pm, free Text as a Visual Medium: Investigative typographer and book artist Inge Bruggeman, of UC Santa Barbara, will show slides and discuss expressive aspects of text and typography in the work of important artists such as Apollinaire, Werkman, Lissitzky, and Marinetti. She will also examine the visual impact of work by historical and contemporary artists who may not be as well known.

At the San Francisco Center for the Book, 300 DeHaro, corner of 16th (on Muni lines 19 and 22). Call [redacted] for more information.

↑ Index

449. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher

Re: what flames, where, huh?

Thu 21 Aug 1997

---

my father being dead too, i can't supply his meaning exactly... but whenever he said to me, twinkle in his eye

"joe, you talk like a man with a paper asshole"

i took him to mean that i was full of SHIT...

i might venture some apt readings of this saying in anatomical or gastrointestinal terms, speculating as to the way a paper asshole might function vis-a-vis the fleshy variety, but---if you look in the harper/row _american slang_ dictionary, you'll find the following under "man with a paper ass":

"n phr black [african-american dialectical] a person whose ideas are not important; a trivial man; = lightweight"

presumably "ass" here functions synecdochically for the person in question -- the lightweight -- so i assume asshole, being part of an ass, functions similarly...

yrs in the nether regions,

joe

↑ Index

450. Thomas Bell

Re: space(s) of silence lead?

Thu 21 Aug 1997

At 10:51 AM 8/21/97 -0700, Red Slider wrote: >kim wrote:
>
>how to write silence : this is my dilema,

The following might be another way. This is the text of a series (I hope) of poems w/drawings I am constructing for my page www.public.usit/trbell and for the wr-y-tings pad.
tom bell

Cobbles wait to be trodden.
Butterflys flutter by
This crooked flower twisted yellow tortured body
Big noise from Winetka lingers on my left in the ear blown out along the road.
Framed art fills my mind
When a man gets on the Beluga Caviar, well....
To the well one last time.
well water's run dry Well met
as well as message poems “fingers of the sun”—as well as on stone slabs.
Well-known
According to a well-known anecdote, a cobbler detected a fault in the shoe of a figure well-defined well-written well-crafted
as well.

My mind is too well-written.

Says Huang-po says men fear forgetting their minds men, fear falling men fear men fear falling fear

my mind thots lernd so well?

↑ Index

451. Red Slider
Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
Thu 21 Aug 1997

From: George Bowering[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Thursday, August 21, 1997 1:06 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow

> Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me

here in this metrapolis

George, I thank you and the Society for the Spellingly and Grammatically Disadventiged
thanx you.

I try my best but the list welcome message said
to be careful because some posts were not so well thought out. I'm trying my best not to contribute to that mayhem by making all of my posts absolutely brilliant. I think there is some principle of cathexis involved. The speling degenerets proportal too the brillance or vice versa.

red

↑ Index

452. Red Slider
Re: what flames, where, huh?
Thu 21 Aug 1997

And while were in the general neighborhood, perhaps someone can enlighten me on the origin and nuance of the term 'asshole buddies'. I've a close friend you employs that expression frequently and I finally got the courage to ask him to stop because it always left a bad aftertaste. After seeing just how complex the taxonomy of assignments for scatalogical kinship terms is, I worry that perhaps I have hastily disemboweled my friendship, or at least thoughtlessly evacuated some of its finer mesh.

L'chyme,

red.

From: Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Thursday, August 21, 1997 1:32 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: what flames, where, huh?

my father being dead too, i can't supply his meaning exactly... but whenever he said to me, twinkle in his eye

"joe, you talk like a man with a paper asshole"

i took him to mean that i was full of SHIT...

i might venture some apt readings of this saying in anatomical or gastrointestinal terms, speculating as to the way a paper asshole might function vis-a-vis the fleshy variety, but---if you look in the harper/row _american slang_ dictionary, you'll find the following under "man with a paper ass":

"n phr black [african-american dialectical] a person whose ideas are not important; a trivial man; = lightweight"

presumably "ass" here functions synecdochically for the person in question -- the lightweight -- so i assume asshole, being part of an ass, functions similarly...

yrs in the nether regions,

joe

↑ Index

453. David Bromige
metragnomics
Thu 21 Aug 1997

Metragnamics (far GB)

i thraw away my metraname here in this megapalis and set aut far the hippadrame with professor thanatapalis

we're aff to hear the ralling stanes thats why i've ditched my tamer
i want to shake my stiff ald banes be a bad-spelling ramer

yet i'm imitating bawering (gearge) wha makes ane tae the lane
i met him drinking at the ladge
"Asshale, that glass is mane!"

He was the mast punctiliuas sad but created an impressian at ance af being wild and bald alangside this repressian

then aff i went with the prafessar wha calls piraeus hame far, as i said ta my canfessar
It's mass _ar_ ralling stane

But my canfessar (clever fellaw) remarked the balances in bawering sarcastic macker af bad spellar :
his scarn far ane is scauring

yet he'll transgress mast all the barders the mast af us acknawledge prafessor thanap fallaws arders he'll never transcend callege with him i knaw just what gaes an whereas, with bawering, seldam what draws me thus to the canuck ane and away fram thanap (sheldan)?

* * * *

I'm back--the ralling stanes were ald and tired--time has appased them at last--& sheldan's campany graws cald
--I'll retrieve my metraname

& re-tune the piana i'll trust my therapist to knaw that each ta must have a fra & ta the megalapalis with bawering (gearge) i'll ga-ga ga .

↑ Index

454. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: space(s) of silence
Thu 21 Aug 1997

---

clarification: s e e Re: space(s) of silence posted by David B Chirot

Christina was silent in that space

Christina Fairbank Chirot

↑ Index

455. Red Slider
tech prob. - help! and appologies to all
Thu 21 Aug 1997

---

sorry for the unbroken lines. linefeeds were showing here but not being read at server. I think i've fixed it. these lines have manual returns and should be ok.

this line is a wrap around line and should be ok also now that the fix has been made. otherwise it will be off the list for awhile until i can figure it out. Let me know if one or both sets are still given trouble.

↑ Index

456. R. Gancie
Seeking Submissions
Thu 21 Aug 1997

FlashPoint Magazine is seeking critical responses to A=R=T M=E=A=N=S, a critique of L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetics applying Freud, Lacan, & Foucault, by Joe Brennan. A=R=T M=E=A=N=S can be found in FlashPoint's on-line issue at:

http:webdelsol.com/FLASHPOINT

Responses will be considered for publication in the Fall issue, which is scheduled for release in November. Responses should be submitted by September 30th to:

[redacted]

FlashPoint's first on-line issue includes Stephen Dixon and Raymond Federman, Ronald Sukenick, Ricardo Cortez Cruz, David Kaufman, Cris Mazza, with an art/poem by Amiri Baraka.

FlashPoint's first print issue includes Clayton Eshleman, Charles Bernstein, Jack Foley, Mark Scroggins, Carlo Parcelli, Art Cover, Judy Brody, with art by Sue Coe and Andrea Zemel.

↑ Index

457. George Bowering
Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
Fri 22 Aug 1997

> ----------
> From: George Bowering[SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Thursday, August 21, 1997 1:06 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
>
> Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
>
> here in this metrapolis
>
> George, I thank you and the Society for the > Spellingly and Grammatically Disadventiged
> thanx you.
>
> I try my best but the list welcome message said
> to be careful because some posts were not so > well thought out. I'm trying my best not to > contribute to that mayhem by making all of > my posts absolutely brilliant. I think there is > some principle of cathexis involved. The speling
> degenerets proportal too the brillance or vice > versa.
>
> red

I was just trying to get a group poem going--like the renga of a coupla years ago

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

458. Red Slider
Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
Fri 22 Aug 1997

> ----------
> From: George Bowering[SMTP:[redacted]]

> Sent: Thursday, August 21, 1997 1:06 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow
>
> Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
>
> here in this metrapolis
>
> George, I thank you and the Society for the > Spellingly and Grammatically Disadventiged
> thanx you.
>
> I try my best but the list welcome message said
> to be careful because some posts were not so > well thought out. I'm trying my best not to > contribute to that mayhem by making all of > my posts absolutely brilliant. I think there is > some principle of cathexis involved. The speling
> degenerets proportal too the brillance or vice > versa.
>
> red<<
>
> I was just trying to get a group poem going--like the >renga of a coupla > years ago

George Bowering.<

,

Oh, that's different. Neverrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrmind.

Ren-ga--Ren-ga--Ren-ga--Ren-ga--Ren-ga--Ren-ga--Ren
~~~
~~~

4055 Yosemite
St. Louis Park, MN 55416

- Henry

↑ Index

461. henry sorry
Fri 22 Aug 1997

---

sorry Jeff, Dan & list. should have backchanneled. evil reply button. dim lands of Henry.

↑ Index

462. David R. Israel
Renga for Nancarrow
Fri 22 Aug 1997

[was, Subject: Re: Elegy for Conlon Nancarrow]

1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
(??)

2 here in this metrapolis
(GB)

3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
(DI)

↑ Index

463. Laurie Schneider/Crag Hill
Re: space(s) of silence
Fri 22 Aug 1997

David Chirot's s e e

comes close to what we can do in text indicating presence through absence, deletion embodying even more silence (Can silence be embodied?
Do we want to create such a form to hold the something that is nothing?)
than Eugene Gomringer's poem "silencio" in the Emmett Williams' anthology

yet text and silence are two streams that can never cross though we can have one hand in each (Would we feel the waters of silence on our fingers? Now I'm disarranging my senses.)

I noisily remember Geoff Huth has considered this conundrum in much of his writing, including columns on "praecisio" (Bob Grumman should be able to help me remember with the accuracy silence deserves)

Best, Crag

↑ Index

464. Red Slider

Re: renga instigations by poet-professor alleged

Fri 22 Aug 1997

Red, Bowering's only telling half the truth. It's not only ren-ga he's initiating, He's also trying to instigate stimpy-ga. David ach, now look what you made me go do.

I don't know renga from a rat's ass.
misspelled To-ga thought we might reminisce about Gilda and John

Thank god I'm a (??)
why do the Limey's always use 'cricket' {is DI a limey?}
    they know nothing about American wheat fields. what do they know?

where's my coffee?
Shit, this is a fine kettle of fish
I wash the pot.
                {thirty years ago I took class from Bromige-san. This is thanks i get?} ren-ga 36 with moon in the middle screw the moon

                Reichold take a flying fuck call it hot cockalorum
I lift my toga unsheathed summer's-eye sword crickets piss on me {whazza hell's stimpy?} ja just as I thought no jacuddon entry write silence.
                call pharmacy for Aricept

crickets silence
crickets

where's my coffee?
piss on jacuddon
to-ga to-ga to-ga.

↑ Index

465. George Bowering

Re: renga instigations by pot-professor alleged

Fri 22 Aug 1997

> Red, Bowering's only telling half the truth. It's not only ren-ga he's initiating, He's also trying to instigate stimpy-ga. David

Well, that's not all the truth. I was also trying to finagle my on-base percentage.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

466. Christina Fairbank Chirot

Re: space(s) of silence

Fri 22 Aug 1997

Jack Kerouac in Paris review Interview (with Aram Saroyan, Duncan McNaughton & Ted Berrigan) said

Writing is silent meditation going a hundred miles an hour.

(sotto voce:

speaking of Aram Saroyan--and Geoff Huth as Crag Hill notes and others--check out Bob Grumman's great essay on MNMLST POETRY: Unacclaimed But Flourishing at Light and Dust Mobile Anthology of Poetry http://www.thing.net/~grist/homekarl.htm

)

-dbc

↑ Index

467. David Bromige

how to raise funds for yr reading/lecture series

Fri 22 Aug 1997

Last weekend, the "Friends of West County," an ad hoc environmental group dedicated to preventing an industrial park being built on land the city council voted to annex (contra various laws of their own making), held our second yard sale,sat-sun, and raised nearly $4000. In the spring, we raised over $3000. (This money goes towards the attorney's fees for the court action we are bringing).

It occurred to me that other groups than environmentalists should know about this source of funds. All it takes is a site (we used a small parking lot attached to a building where one of us has a business), people to donate stuff (& to encourage persons not in the group to donate stuff), some plywood resting on sawhorses to be tables, and some flyers & handpainted signs. It takes some time, sure--I'd estimate I spent 3 hours in planning meetings, an hour signmaking, a couple hours sorting out my own junk to donate, another hour picking up junk from other people, and five hours in toto helping man the cashbox.

So say 12 hours. Out of my busy schedule, etc etc, but well worth it, not only because it cleared junk out of our garage here, but for the end result, and also for the camaraderie and community of the event.(I got some more books, too--O joy![as was it Ren or Stimpy would say?] And some nifty tapes and record albums...somebody's Nina Simone collection, for starters--so, junk gets recycled.)

The core of our group is fewer than 20 persons--comparable with a number of groups or collocations of poetry fans in many centers throughout the continent. You too could do this and have 3 grand to play with. Enough to fly in those poets you want to hear but the administrators/fat-cat professors of your local college/art center/library _don't_ want you to. And something left over to pay your visiting poet a couple hundred. Ask me if you want to know more.

David

PS Red Slider? Ren & Stimpy is/was a cartoon on tv i found pretty disgusting but watched plenty of because at that time my daughter & her friends were crazy for it. A dog and a cat. Tongues hung way, way out; eyeballs shot way, way out on stalks; there was vomit, there was crap, intimidation, bondage, violence, and above all, weird sounds/voices. When will it go into reruns?!

↑ Index

468. George Bowering

Re: ren

Fri 22 Aug 1997

Bromige wrote:

> PS Red Slider? Ren & Stimpy is/was a cartoon on tv i found pretty disgusting but watched plenty of because at that time my daughter & her friends were crazy for it. A dog and a cat. Tongues hung way, way out; eyeballs shot way, way out on stalks; there was vomit, there was crap, intimidation, bondage, violence, and above all, weird sounds/voices. When will it go into reruns?!

Hey, Brom, there you go with your cultural cringe again. Why didnt you mention that Ren & Stimpy was drawn by a guy in Vancouver?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

469. David Israel

Re: Renga for Nancarrow

Fri 22 Aug 1997

Poetas,

Gwyn McVay wrote me this note --

> Date: Fri, 22 Aug 1997 12:01:34 -0400 (EDT)
> From: Gwyn McVay <[redacted]>
> To: "David R. Israel" <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Renga for Nancarrow
>
> Are you keeping track of this? Then I'd like to add:
>
> hairy as thistle and as elevated

Accordingly, I'll add it to the thread. Red Slider also had some lines, but it's not clear to me if any (or which) were intended to be part of a group renga, . . . so I don't know how to deal with those. Possibly his is the original line also? (Am not sure of the initial (metronome) author) -- in any case, here's the Renga-so-far according to my best light; shd. be happy if it proceeds -- which can easiest / best be done by copying only the Renga lines (from this post) & adding on another -- if any shd. careto do so . . .

/ / / / /

Renga for Nancarrow

1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
(??)

2 here in this metrapolis
(GB)

3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
(DI)

4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
(GM)

↑ Index

470. Daniel Zimmerman
Renga for Nancarrow
Fri 22 Aug 1997

Renga for Nancarrow

1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
(??)

2 here in this metrapolis
(GB)

3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
(DI)

4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
(GM)

5 thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
(DZ)

↑ Index

471. Hoa Nguyen
GAS NUMBER 9
Fri 22 Aug 1997

Dear List: Please bear with the following promotion of an excellent poetry magazine.I have just received Gas #9 and it is excellent "High Octane Poetry" edited by Kevin Opstedal with brilliant noir-ish line drawings.

Poets include:

Simon Pettet, Joanne Kyger, Duncan McNaughton, Lewis MacAdams Anselm Hollo, FA Nettelbeck, Tom Clark, Alice Notley, Clark Coolidge Owen Hill, Kevin Opstedal, Ted Berrigan, Hoa Nguyen (me), Noel Anderson Black, Anselm Berrigan, Amy Gerstler, Elinor Nauen Connie Deanovich, Edmund Berrigan, William Yackulic, Richard D. Houff, Michael Price, Gregory Fuchs, Jack Hirschman, Boadiba, Lucia Berlin, Brett Evans, Shauna Hannibal, Edward Ainsworth, Dale Smith

with illustrations by Kevin Opstedal!! A big tape bound issue is only ten bucks. If any one has trouble finding it, I have an address.

Thanks and hope everyone is having a gas...

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

472. Judy Roitman
Re: GAS NUMBER 9
Fri 22 Aug 1997

> Dear List:
> Please bear with the following promotion of an excellent poetry magazine.I have just received Gas #9 and it is excellent "High Octane Poetry" edited by Kevin Opstedal with brilliant noir-ish line drawings.
>
> Poets include:
>
> Simon Pettet, Joanne Kyger, Duncan McNaughton, Lewis MacAdams Anselm Hollo, FA Nettelbeck, Tom Clark, Alice Notley, Clark Coolidge Owen Hill, Kevin Opstedal, Ted Berrigan, Hoa Nguyen (me), Noel Anderson Black, Anselm Berrigan, Amy Gerstler, Elinor Nauen Connie Deanovich, Edmund Berrigan, William Yackulic, Richard D. Houff, Michael Price, Gregory Fuchs, Jack Hirschman, Boadiba, Lucia Berlin, Brett Evans, Shauna Hannibal, Edward Ainsworth, Dale Smith
>
> with illustrations by Kevin Opstedal!! A big tape bound issue is only ten bucks. If any one has trouble finding it, I have an address.
>
> Thanks and
> hope everyone is having a gas...

Could you put the address on the list? In most places it's hard finding just about anything.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

473. Hoa Nguyen
Re: GAS NUMBER 9-- address
Fri 22 Aug 1997

Get yr GAS from Kevin Opstedal
386 Madeline Court
Palo Alto CA
94306

I hope you do!

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

474. Bob Grumman
Re: space(s) of silence
Fri 22 Aug 1997

To fill in just a little about what Crag said about Geof Huth, his fine series of columns on the praecisio ran in Lloyd Dunn's much-missed magazine Photo-static as the eighties ended. A praecisio is the absence of some stimulus where expected, to define it very loosely from a shaky memory of what Geof wrote. Cage's silences were prototypes of it--and such things as books titled THE WIT AND WISDOM OF RONALD REAGAN that contained nothing but blank pages. Geof got into a good deal more than this, but I'm too lazy to look it up.

Now that I've been lured into this thread, I might as well say that I think both Dave Chirot and Kim Dawn succeeded in capturing silence in their recent pieces. It seems to me that visual poetry is ideal for this purpose--and that blank areas of a page, being textless, are clearly as SILENT as a pause in the oral telling of a story. That either a blank area or a pause might cause noisy THOUGHTS is irrelevant because silence is that which causes a PERCEPTION of soundlessness regardless of whether it also causes noisy thoughts. If this weren't the case, then no kind of silence would be possible, since somewhere there's going to be someone who's going to think noisy thoughts about any possible silence.

I think the real question is what silences are EFFECTIVE silences in poetry. I like visual poetry's silences; Red Slider, I guess, doesn't. Here's one of my own attempts at an effective silence in a poem. I'll make the blank area short: in the book I have it in, it lasts three pages:

pnd;

then, at last,
the splash of something

--Bob G

↑ Index

475. Brian Carpenter barthes
Fri 22 Aug 1997

Hello--

I'm attempting to hunt down a particular quote from Roland Barthes, something to the effect of "words are exchanged for ideas, as money is for goods." Since I'm brand new to Barthes' writing, I'm not sure where to look for this. Any leads would be highly appreciated. Backchannel is fine.

many thanks--

BC

Brian Carpenter "Solitude, recif, etoile
A n'importe ce qui valut [redacted] Le blanc souci de notre toile."
--- -- Mallarme

↑ Index

476. John Tranter
silence
Sat 23 Aug 1997

In a recent posting, Dave Grumman said :

"Now that I've been lured into this thread, I might as well say that I think both Dave Chirot and Kim Dawn succeeded in capturing silence in their recent pieces. It seems to me that visual poetry is ideal for this purpose--and that blank areas of a page, being textless, are clearly as SILENT as a pause in the oral telling of a story. That either a blank area or a pause might cause noisy THOUGHTS is irrelevant because silence is that which causes a PERCEPTION of soundlessness regardless of whether it also causes noisy thoughts. If this weren't the case, then no kind of silence would be possible, since somewhere there's going to be someone who's going to think noisy thoughts about any possible silence."

<ir> wow. I mean, this really silences me. I'm still thinking about it.
I think Bob is right.
And I think Dave and Kim might well consider embarking on this wonderful and thought-filled journey.
Dave, Kim ... how about some postings to the EPC list that have ...
that have no sender, no subject,and NO MESSAGE !!
Is this maybe too much silence to ask? It would be like Rimbaud in Harar
... nothing to say!

"Those who speak do not know, those who know ... DO NOT SPEAK!!" </ir>
--
(shhh ... quietly...) John Tranter

↑ Index

477. Maria Damon

Re: Renga for Nancarrow

Sat 23 Aug 1997

>
> / / / / /
>
> Renga for Nancarrow
>
> 1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
> (??)
>
> 2 here in this metrapolis
> (GB)
>
> 3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music

> (DI)
>
> 4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
> (GM)
no need for numbers or ID anymore

↑ Index

478. Maria Damon
Re: Renga for Nancarrow
Sat 23 Aug 1997

At 4:56 PM -0400 8/22/97, Daniel Zimmerman wrote:
>Renga for Nancarrow
>
> 1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
> (??)
>
> 2 here in this metrapolis
> (GB)
>
> 3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
> (DI)
>
> 4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
> (GM)
>
> 5 thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
> (DZ)
cambric dozens unswathed enfin

↑ Index

479. Douglas Barbour
Re: Renga - ongoing
Sat 23 Aug 1997

Renga for Nancarrow

1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
(??)

2 here in this metrapolis
(GB)

3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
(DI)

4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
(GM)

5 thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
(DZ)

6 its silences appear in careful measure
(DB)

==========
==========

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]
H: [redacted]

~~~
~~~

481. Bobbie West
Re: space(s) of silence
Sat 23 Aug 1997

This is slightly off-thread -- not about capturing silence on paper, but silence in general. I have yet to find any absolute silence in nature -- only an absence of sounds made by humans. Maybe that's the definition of silence.

Bobbie West

↑ Index

482. Red Slider
Re: space(s) of silence
Sat 23 Aug 1997

Bobbie Wrote: This is slightly off-thread -- not about capturing silence on paper, but silence in general. I have yet to find any absolute silence in nature -- only an absence of sounds made by humans. Maybe that's the definition of silence.

Bobbie West

red is writing:

yes indeed. When scuba-diving i find it is the absence of bird sounds that most impress me with the utter silence around me. In my earlier post I think that's what I was scratching at - that we're somehow dealing with contrast-space rather than object-space, which means Bob Grumman's central question about which portrayals of silence will be effective - create the precise praeciscios desired - will have multiple solutions - arrangements of textualized white-space being one (and that there are many types of textualized white-space, I have no doubt). So what will be useful, will help at the margin of the process is a description of the tools and what they seem to be doing in varying circumstances. The idea of types of 'phasing' of mutual elements so that their interplay appears to cancel or reduce 'noise' is of the most interest to me at the moment.

↑ Index

483. David R. Israel
Re: Renga - ongoing
Sat 23 Aug 1997

Ach, what to do? I see that Douglas Barbour and Maria Damon have both added on a 6th line to the Renga for Nancarrow. Since it appears that DB's follows clearly from the 5th (the "its" referring back, one assumes, to the "thermal etude" of line 5 -- which in turn presumably may refer back to "the music" of line 3), will Maria concede line 6 to Prof. B, and accept 7th line as hers? Maria also suggests abandoning the numbering & i.d.'ing of lines. okay w/ me.

Here's now adding an 8th. (So far, I find this reading fairly in couplet-fashion -- though other readers might read otherwise.)

/ / / / /

Renga for Nancarrow

Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me

here in this metrapolis

morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music

hairy as thistle and as elevated

thermal etude beside a bamboo cage

its silences appear in careful measure

cambric dozens unswathed enfin

once there was a parade -- the long years roll

↑ Index

484. Charles Alexander

Re: space(s) of silence

Sat 23 Aug 1997

Perfect or absolute silence would be a kind of vacuum, wouldn't it? And nature abhors a vacuum.

charles

> From: Bobbie West <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: space(s) of silence
> Date: Saturday, August 23, 1997 9:35 AM
>
> This is slightly off-thread -- not about capturing silence on paper, but > silence in general. I have yet to find any absolute silence in nature -- > only an absence of sounds made by humans. Maybe that's the definition of > silence.

↑ Index

485. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: space(s) of silence
Sat 23 Aug 1997

> Perfect or absolute silence would be a kind of vacuum, wouldn't it? And nature abhors a vacuum.

or something like: vacu m all best to you, charles!

c.!

↑ Index

486. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: space(s) of silence
Sat 23 Aug 1997

Charles Alexander wrote:
>
> Perfect or absolute silence would be a kind of vacuum, wouldn't it? And > nature abhors a vacuum.
>
> charles
>
> ----------
> > From: Bobbie West <[redacted]>
> > To: [redacted]
> > Subject: Re: space(s) of silence
> > Date: Saturday, August 23, 1997 9:35 AM
> >
> > This is slightly off-thread -- not about capturing silence on paper, but > > silence in general. I have yet to find any absolute silence in nature -- > > only an absence of sounds made by humans. Maybe that's the definition of > > silence.

Or nature adores a vacuum, since it rushes right into it . . .

Dan

↑ Index

487. Red Slider
Origins and Sentiments
Sat 23 Aug 1997

Now that the light at the end of the rat's ass seems to be turned off, I have a phrase that's always puzzled me, 2wit&var:

"You're a real piece of work."

I've generally heard it used in a disapproving mode - with harmonics in the 'piece of shit' or 'piece of tail' range. But, frankly find the euphonics rather and strangely pleasant and employ it affectionately when, say, I might step back from a 'piece' i'm pleased with and remark ().

Then again, it might be the diminutive 'piece of' to which the disapproval attaches. If I were to be the 'whole pile of shit' (or var. an elephant's, rather than a rat's, ass, I might not be quite so soiled? Perhaps the speaker is disappointed merely with the meager portion they've been served?

But I wonder, was there ever a 'real piece of work' to which the phrase might have referred? Perhaps cleaning the dog kennel or something? Does it attach to other meanings as well? I've a slight angst that perhaps it's something burried in the closet of ruminations about my father's adroit useages and that there's something rootish about the matter - in which case I suppose this is a thread about gardening and not language.

red

↑ Index

488. George Bowering
Re: Renga for Nancarrow
Sat 23 Aug 1997

> / / / / /
>
> Renga for Nancarrow
>
> 1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
> (??)
>
> 2 here in this metrapolis
> (GB)
>
> 3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
> (DI)

> 4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
> (GM)
> no need for numbers or ID anymore

6. Just my season's ticket at the Metradome

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

489. kim dawn
( )
Sat 23 Aug 1997

( ) ( )

( )

( )

( ) ( ) ( )

↑ Index

490. Brian Carpenter
Re: space(s) of silence
Sat 23 Aug 1997

The most clearly silent place in nature I have experienced is at the top of one of the many cinder cones in the Craters of the Moon Nat'l Park in central Idaho. These are essentially enormous cone-like formations of volcanic rock ranging up to a few hundred feet high. Since the tourist traffic is very minimal in this park, one can walk to the top of one of these many cones and find a completely isolated spot looking out across a wasteland of part lava bed, part brushland. No birds, etc, around. And when there is no breeze where you are standing there is nothing hear. But at this point you begin to hear the sound of the blood pumping through your ears, a sound that has always been there. This reminds me of the music of the spheres, which was said to be so familiar to human ears that it could no longer be perceived. My thinking is that silence is best considered as a threshhold one only approaches, for both external (natural) and internal (bodily) reasons.

BC

On Sat, 23 Aug 1997, Charles Alexander wrote:

> Perfect or absolute silence would be a kind of vacuum, wouldn't it? And nature abhors a vacuum.
>
> charles
>
> ----------
> From: Bobbie West <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: space(s) of silence
> Date: Saturday, August 23, 1997 9:35 AM
>
> This is slightly off-thread -- not about capturing silence on paper, but silence in general. I have yet to find any absolute silence in nature -- only an absence of sounds made by humans. Maybe that's the definition of silence.

↑ Index

491. David R. Israel

Re: Origins and Sentiments

Sat 23 Aug 1997

Red Slider remarks --

> . . . I have a phrase that's always puzzled me, 2wit&var:
>
> "You're a real piece of work."
>
> I've generally heard it used in a disapproving mode - with harmonics in the 'piece of shit' or 'piece of tail' range. . . .
> But I wonder, was there ever a 'real piece of work' to which the phrase might have referred? Perhaps cleaning the dog kennel or something? . . .

Here's how I understand it:

1. the overt sense is a term of admiration (not disparagement)

2. something which is "a real piece of work" is, in non-ironical useage, something which shows great beauty, workmanship, fascination, is, in a word, remarkable in nature.

3. As an ironic utterance, the sense of the term is, of course, turned somewhat on its head. Thus, "You're a real piece of work" may denote "you're a wonder! you're quite amazining!", but the ironic subtext may be along the lines you suggest above.

4. It seems possible that the expression"you're a piece of shit" itself derived from the more genteel "you're a real piece of work" (and not the other way around).

5. I think part of the beauty & irony of "you're a real piece of work" involves the notion that the mind of the person so addressed is felt, by the person saying this utterance (in its original, somewhat aristocratic context -- surely this is a 19th-century expression from the upper classes?), -- the mind of the addressee is felt to be something which, while defying logic or comprehension, is yet a wonder in itself (poss. all the more so, for the fact of doing so).

6. Of course, most charming & genteel expressions such as this can be used in less sparkling manners & contexts, as seems to have been the case w/ your experience of this locution.

No doubt, someone with access to DARE or some such resource work detailing vernacular usage, could give a fuller (& more precise) reading & background for the phrase. The above is merely my own overall sense of it (based on what I've heard), for what worth.

d.i.

```
 .
 .....
 ............
\\\
```

complexity, a rube goldberg contraption that evokes admiration that it can function at all. OED Supplement supports this understanding, with examples back to 1928. "Piece of shit" I think is probably unrelated. Then there's also "piece of ass" or "tail" and "piece of the action," I think also unrelated. How about the verbs attached to various actions, to wit: to give (or not) a shit or a fuck, to take a shit or a piss, or simply to go or to come, as in: "Why are you fidgeting?" "I have to go. I always have to go after I come." A propos of this last, used to be (see Lindner, _The Fifty-Minute Hour_) that those of the Freudian persuasion thought that a guy leaving the bed to take a piss after getting a piece of ass, which his skirt might understand as his not really giving a fuck, was really just a cover for a castration fantasy--the guy was really checking to make sure that everything was still there. There are, of course, easier and better physiological explanations. Hard to believe that those psycho analysts were MD's. They must have been real pieces of work.

At 09:38 PM 8/23/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Red Slider remarks --
>
>> . . . I have a phrase that's always puzzled me, 2wit&var:
>>
>> "You're a real piece of work."
>>
>> I've generally heard it used in a disapproving mode - with harmonics >> in the 'piece of shit' or 'piece of tail' range. . . .
>> But I wonder, was there ever a 'real piece of work' to which the >> phrase might have referred? Perhaps cleaning the dog kennel or >> something? . . .
>
>Here's how I understand it:
>
>1. the overt sense is a term of admiration (not disparagement)
>
>2. something which is "a real piece of work" is, in non-ironical >useage, something which shows great beauty, workmanship, fascination, >is, in a word, remarkable in nature.
>
>3. As an ironic utterance, the sense of the term is, of course, >turned somewhat on its head. Thus, "You're a real piece of work" >may denote "you're a wonder! you're quite amazining!", but the ironic >subtext may be along the lines you suggest above.
>
>4. It seems possible that the expression"you're a piece of shit" >itself derived from the more genteel "you're a real piece of work"

>(and not the other way around).
>
>5. I think part of the beauty & irony of "you're a real piece of >work" involves the notion that the mind of the person so addressed is >felt, by the person saying this utterance (in its original, somewhat >aristocratic context -- surely this is a 19th-century expression from >the upper classes?), -- the mind of the addressee is felt to be >something which, while defying logic or comprehension, is yet a >wonder in itself (poss. all the more so, for the fact of doing so).
>
>6. Of course, most charming & genteel expressions such as this can >be used in less sparkling manners & contexts, as seems to have been >the case w/ your experience of this locution.
>
>No doubt, someone with access to DARE or some such resource work >detailing vernacular usage, could give a fuller (& more precise) >reading & background for the phrase. The above is merely my own >overall sense of it (based on what I've heard), for what worth.
>
>d.i.
> .
> .....
> .....
> \\\\

493. Schuchat Simon
list down?
Sat 23 Aug 1997

No messages for two days -- is it the list or is it my server?

↑ Index

494. Layne Russell
Re: space(s) of silence
Sat 23 Aug 1997

> s e e

s a w

s o

s o o n s e a s w e l l

s o f t

s e e n

↑ Index

495. Red Slider
Re: ( )
Sun 24 Aug 1997

kim's discrete silence -

( ) ( )

( )

( )

( ) ( ) ( )

---------- there is also an indiscrete version:

(((((((((((()))))))))))

↑ Index

496. Red Slider
Re: ( )
Sun 24 Aug 1997

kim's discrete silence -

( ) (
)

( )

  ( )
( ) (
) ( )

---------- there is also an indiscrete version:

(((((((((((()

red.

↑ Index

497. Tom Orange
rimbaud in africa
Sun 24 Aug 1997

re the silence thread, john tranter offhands:

"Dave, Kim ... how about some postings to the EPC list that have ... that have no sender, no subject,and NO MESSAGE !! Is this maybe too much silence to ask? It would be like Rimbaud in Harar ... nothing to say!"

reminding me to ask y'all if anyone has read or heard anything about charles nicholl's /somebody else: arthur rimbaud in africa 1880-91/ (london: cape, 1997).

thanks,
t.

↑ Index

498. joel lewis
Elio Schneeman
Sun 24 Aug 1997

sorry to report the death of elio schneeman (b.1961) on 8/17/97 of a drug overdose. he was the son of george and katie schneeman and was a much loved figure at the poetry project. His books were "In February, I think" (1978, C Press) and the 91' volume "Along the Rails" from United Artist> His funeral was held monday at St. Bridget's Church (the same as in the Frank O' Hara and Bill Berkson collab -- "Hymns to St. Bridget's") w/ pall barers including Greg masters, Mitch Highfill, and John Godfrey. Elio's work was not known that much outside of the Project but is worth looking into. There is a memorial reading being planned at Naropa in two weeks.

joel lewis

p.s.-- as elio would say: "No, I am not related to carolee schneeman". his dad, however, is an artist whose work is familair to any reader of berrigan, raworth. notley and other writers in poproject community as he illustrated many books.

↑ Index

499. jarnot
Re: Elio Schneeman
Sun 24 Aug 1997

Elio Schneeman's work will also be published in An Anthology of New American Poets, forthcoming from Talisman House later this year. Copies of his book Along the Rails are still in print and available through United Artists Books/701 President Street/Brooklyn, NY 11215.

↑ Index

500. Maria Damon
Re: Renga for Nancarrow
Sun 24 Aug 1997

At 6:10 PM -0700 8/23/97, George Bowering wrote:
>>>
>>> / / / / /
>>>
>>> Renga for Nancarrow
>>>
>>> 1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
>>> (??)
>>>
>>> 2 here in this metrapolis
>>> (GB)
>>>
>>> 3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
>>> (DI)
>>>
>>> 4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
>>> (GM)

>>no need for numbers or ID anymore
>
> 6. Just my season's ticket at the Metradome in space, I spoze, resonating "o"'s
>
>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
> ,
>2499 West 37th Ave.,
>Vancouver, B.C.,
>Canada V6M 1P4
>
>fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

501. Maria Damon
Re: Renga - ongoing
Sun 24 Aug 1997

At 8:49 AM -0600 8/23/97, Douglas Barbour wrote:
>Renga for Nancarrow
>
> 1 Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
> (??)
>
> 2 here in this metrapolis
> (GB)
>
> 3 morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
> (DI)
>
> 4 hairy as thistle and as elevated
> (GM)
>
> 5 thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
> (DZ)
>
> 6 its silences appear in careful measure

> (DB) immeasurable the rhythms of organ blood

↑ Index

502. nuyopoman
Re: POETICS Digest - 22 Aug 1997 to 23 Aug 1997
Sun 24 Aug 1997

Renga for Nancarrow

Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me

here in this metrapolis

morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music

hairy as thistle and as elevated

thermal etude beside a bamboo cage

its silences appear in careful measure

cambric dozens unswathed enfin

once there was a parade -- the long years roll

Just my season's ticket at the Metradome

<astroturf growing inspooled and drifty

Bob Holman

↑ Index

503. Judy Roitman
Re: ( )
Sun 24 Aug 1997

Kim Dawn writes:

> ( ) ( )
>
> ( )
>
> ( )
> ( ) ( ) ( )

How about

(

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

504. Red Slider

Re: ( )

Sun 24 Aug 1997

Kim Dawn writes:

> ( ) ( )
>
> ( )
>
> ( )
>
> ( ) ( ) ( )

Judy Roitman writes:

How about

(

Red writes: similar to my idea, Judy. though neither is faithful to Kim's text (though you may have simply wished to give another general silence possibility) A faithful rendering of indiscrete silence for Kim's text might have been:

((

(

(

((

(

---
sorry if the actual spacing is a bit off, but that's the general idea.
-red

↑ Index

505. Miekal And
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

David R. Israel wrote:
>
> Renga for Nancarrow
>
> Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
> here in this metrapolis
>
> morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
> hairy as thistle and as elevated
>
> thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
> its silences appear in careful measure
>
> cambric dozens unswathed enfin
> once there was a parade -- the long years roll
>
> Just my season's ticket at the Metradome
> astroturf growing inspooled and drifty
>
> from my meerchaum unwinds a drift of smoke

elsewise a 1000 piano's mechanic playerly disposition unwound & mispluckd hearing charge

--
@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

506. Miekal And
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

David R. Israel wrote:

> & appended 2 lines. I'm no renga-rabbi myself, but have an idea it's customary to add one line per.

me not know the form as well, maybe 2 lines be one long line (like the one we are always standing in at the grocery store!

miekal

--
@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

507. Barry and Catherine Smith
Re: Silence and paper whatsits
Mon 25 Aug 1997

You guys in North America may have sorted out your puzzlement by now, I'm just a digest reader. Regarding the maybe euphemistic 'paper asshole' when I heard it last it was "This guy's drivin like he's got a pipeup'is arsehole" - imagine - ah language - maybe it's easier to hear on the quiet roads of the South Pacific. And on silence.

What I like most about old friends is the way they echo
each others silence

Cheers

Barry Smith

Barry and Catherine Smith
56 Orchard Avenue
Hamilton, New Zealand.
Phone [redacted] Fax [redacted] Email [redacted]

↑ Index

508. Alan Jen Sondheim
Language, written on the road
Mon 25 Aug 1997

Language, Porosity, Quotation, Notes On

"Everyone makes jokes about macaroni, because it is a hole with some- thing around it, or about canons. [sic] The fact that we laugh doesn't change the situation, however; the fashioning of the signifier and the introduction of a gap or a hole in the real is identical." (Lacan, VII)

"Lyotard comes close to what I have in mind when he says:

The ambiguity of writing, object of reading and of sight, is present in the initial ambiguity of drawing. An open line, a line closed on itself. The letter is an unvarying closed line; the line is the open moment of the letter which perhaps closes again elsewhere, on the other side. Open the letter, you have the image, you have the emblem, the symbol and the letter. (Lyotard, The Lyotard Reader, 48)

"Lyotard's beautiful evocation of the sinuous interweaving of the line of writing and that of picturing points to a third term, to some con- ception of the line before it has acquired the cohesion imparted to it by either of its 'decisions.'" (Michael Carter, Putting a Face on Things, Studies in Imaginary Materials)

Between macaroni and drawing, language noodles out, appearing in a dia- lectic between the foreclosing of syntax and sememe, and the porosity of the struggle towards coherence within any number of communicative chan- nels, ranging from human speech to the reconstruction of true or false memories in the brain.

If we look at a computer complete with operating system, we discover a hierarchy of apparently relatively autonomous languages, beginning with hardware, and working up to the user interface. These might include machine language, assembly language, macroassembly languages, compiled and interpreted languages, scripts, graphic interfaces, and so forth.

We can also consider these languages, top-down, as an extension of human psychological operations and memory as well.

If we look closer, say, at Perl, we find that it can call up the Unix shell and shell scripts, that it can call up programs in other lang- uages, that it can interact in fact with assembly language, that it is written in another language, and that it may itself be called up by still another or the same language. We find it can interact with scripts, programs, or processes, and each of these can call the other up as well.

In fact, we can define a macro in Perl, a new function or verb, with any of these languages, etc,, and we can define an object in Perl as well, with any of them. In fact, one might note that there is above all a syn- tactical plateau or intermeshing of plateaus that constitutes the posi- tioning of Perl in relation to the machine, to the Internet, to the user, and in general, to the porous world within which it is embedded.

We find then, that Perl is not so much at the top of a hierarchy, as it is embedded in a holarchy, and while it, in a certain sense, might still appear as an autonomous language, in another sense it is an accumulation of interwoven well-defined processes that are coherent in relation to each other and the outer world.

So that one might argue, taking these instantiations back into the human, that while thought itself is in relation to human spoken language, that is hardly the long or short of it; in fact, it is dif- ficult to tell where semiosis begins and ends, and what constitutes a well-defined verb or noun, in other words a framework. Further, while difference may be said to be partly constitutive of a domain of sig- nifiers, one might also argue that it is based on other processes within the holarchy, and that the holarchy itself is porous in relation to the real.

And I would argue in addition that there is a continuum (more properly, perhaps, a stretch of rational fractions) from the real through lang- uage, from the exhalations of speech through the mouth, and the recep- tion of facial expressions through the eyes, from and to, in fact, num- erous modalities - and in the midst of these, syntactical islands or attractors which operate as-if the linguistic were capable of foreclos- ure on what then appear to be various plateaus.

One might thing of the world as multiplexing, parallel/parallel proces- sing, with formalization of the symbolic where necessary, for transmis- sion, say, from one organism to another. This is not to argue, in addi- tion in addition, for the computerization of the real, but rather for the real itself as organism with continuously multiplying, coalescing, and dissolving processes.

In this manner, the disjunction between thought and non-thought, and both in conjunction and disjunction with language, become bridged, re- routed into numerous processes, of which, say, human language and the rationalizing/suturing discourse of psychoanalysis would be one among many elements.

--

My own work exists as _debris-work,_ work of the debris, of these troub- ling and interstitial areas. Thus, even within writing which must tend towards a certain foreclosure, I present wryting, the fiction of writing object and person within a text, object and person which leak into uneasy dreams, fantasies, ghosts, peripheral shadows within the real itself. Further, I present processes as writing, writing as processes; I present foreclosure as broken, and a shattering of the vessels as fore- closure.

--

Languagings extend into cultural sheaves, such as fashion, style, cul- tural productions. Such sheaves are inherently irreducible; fashion, for example, is dependent upon the armature of the body, but its specificity is interwoven with the rest of culture, including issues of capital, temperament, governance, and so forth. And all of these create an uneasy fit with spoken language itself, with music, with organized/disorganized sound of all sorts.

Further, fashion-as-language becomes as problematic as film language, the languages of art, and so forth. A hat, for example, is simply a thing that sits on the head (presumably remaining there through the normal walking, etc. movement of the body). Beyond that, what signifies and what doesn't is often difficult to discern. The _stream_ of style is easier described, perhaps, as if there were a generalized semantics at work. (See Carter, op. cit.) (Note that "what signifies here" is rele- vant to the postulation of a basic lexeme; semantics, symbolization, chaotic representational debris, etc., all play a role in constituting what otherwise might be considered a "language." Instead, I postulate we are dealing with linguistic part-objects, broken and severed codes, micro-territories (three or one flowers on the hat; roses or tulips; forward or backward, etc.). And this leads, as well, into the interplay of semantics and syntax, even the interplay of what might be considered a relevant series of signs.)

And further, still, ascii texts on the Internet employ what might be considered a variety of extra-linguistic cues - on numerous chat lines, ranging from Powwow to ytalk, it is possible to read the pace of the other's typing, to the extent that one might speak/write of a written _parole._ This embedding of language into the other's time reveals the closeness, pressure, of the body against the keys, an intimacy which is not as evident in the encapsulated messages sent out all at once, on MOOs, talkers, IRC, and the like.

(For this reason, as I have pointed out elsewhere, ytalk becomes an in- timate simulacrum of the body; the "breathing" of the texts between two participants parallels that of lovers sharing a unified, if discordant, space.)

Then there are, of course, emoticons, header information, lag, the tim- ing of mail sent, and those porous extensions of the telephone, snail- mail, video, etc. all of which serve literally to confuse the issue. (Which is exactly the point here, that _language,_ _a language,_ is a situated plateau in the midst of others, that there are always already issues of governance and porosity from the start, that there is a tend- ency towards foreclosure, that the porosity may or may not be formal- ized (for example there are specific commands for shell access from a Perl script) - that, in fact, one might consider a generalized process of _world- ing_ which includes all and none of these, what may or may not be interpreted as an abstract process, message of the deepest import, or signal through an autonomic nervous system, seemingly intent on keeping the organism alive.)

J, Well, it's time for the Law.
J, Well, now, what Law would that be?

J, That would be the Primordial Law. That would be the Law from which Law has blossomed, the Law which has curtained a mighty culture.
J, Now that would be the Law of Prohibition.
J, Exactly, when negation came into the world, when rejection ordered the day and night, when suddenly the signifier sputtered from the skin..
J, I get the Idea.
J, Yes, and exactly again.

↑ Index

509. jarnot
lorenzo thomas?
Mon 25 Aug 1997

---

i'm looking for a phone number for lorenzo thomas. if anyone has info please back channel. thank you. lisa jarnot

↑ Index

510. David R. Israel
Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

Renga for Nancarrow

Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
here in this metrapolis

morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
hairy as thistle and as elevated

thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
its silences appear in careful measure

cambric dozens unswathed enfin
once there was a parade -- the long years roll

Just my season's ticket at the Metradome
astroturf growing inspooled and drifty

from my meerchaum unwinds a drift of smoke

↑ Index

511. David R. Israel
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

Poetas,

Red Slider sent me this note -- << david, not sure about renga composition or my specific composition (I read, but do not see the rules in operation - like a new football fan who cannot quite understand why those fellows who do not have the ball are beating the crap out of one another). If the contribution below suitable i offer, if not - trash. thank you >>

& appended 2 lines. I'm no renga-rabbi myself, but have an idea it's customary to add one line per. However, far be it from me to nix as unkosh the 200% you append; too, perhaps my coupletization was unduly normative couplet-wise-- also, sorry naving not included some side-stream branchings (I think a couple from Maria D.) that had branched off earlier than what's here -- pls. add, insert, re-append, whatever! -- here's what I have in hopper to date, including Red's 2 -- d.i.

////\\\\///\\\\///\\\\///\\\\

Renga for Nancarrow

| Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
| here in this metrapolis
| morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
| hairy as thistle and as elevated
| thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
| its silences appear in careful measure
| cambric dozens unswathed enfin
| once there was a parade -- the long years roll
| Just my season's ticket at the Metradome
| astroturf growing inspooled and drifty
| from my meerchaum unwinds a drift of smoke
| porosities of potted clay pot unwatering
| walkway keys jingle in my pocket
|

↑ Index

512. Maria Damon
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

At 9:34 AM -0400 8/25/97, David R. Israel wrote:
>Renga for Nancarrow
>
>
>Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
>here in this metrapolis
>
>morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
>hairy as thistle and as elevated
>
>thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
>its silences appear in careful measure
>
>cambric dozens unswathed enfin
>once there was a parade -- the long years roll
>
>Just my season's ticket at the Metradome
>astroturf growing inspooled and drifty
>
>from my meerchaum unwinds a drift of smoke from my mere window drifts a widow

↑ Index

513. dbkk
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

I've been out of town, and most of you on the list will understand my dismay at turning on the e-mail and out of 7 messages 3 were this renga thread. I thought it was agreed upon ages ago that so many listmembers found these rengas problematic in terms of wasted bandwidth and a waste of the 50-message limit that it was agreed that they would be taken backchannel.

And I know some of the perpetrators of this thing were involved in the original tedium.

Dodie

↑ Index

514. Lawrence Upton.
My new email address
Mon 25 Aug 1997

I shall be sending this message widely over the next few days as I build my new address book. Apologies for cross posting.

My email address at Compuserve should be considered dead. This is my new one. I am still learning its oddnesses.

I am sorry for the change and the trouble it causes you, but I gave up on the useless and cynical service that I received from Compuserve. This is also likely to be cheaper.

Anything sent to Compuserve for me after 20th August 1997 is likely not to have been received.

Lawrence Upton

↑ Index

515. George Bowering
Re: POETICS Digest - 22 Aug 1997 to 23 Aug 1997
Mon 25 Aug 1997

> Renga for Nancarrow
>
> Ach, I throw away my metranome It is useless to me
>
> here in this metrapolis
>
> morning late-summer: this cricket knows the music
>
> hairy as thistle and as elevated
>
> thermal etude beside a bamboo cage
>
> its silences appear in careful measure
>
> cambric dozens unswathed enfin
>
> once there was a parade -- the long years roll
>
> Just my season's ticket at the Metradome
>
> <astroturf growing inspooled and drifty

powered by retrarockets on both sides

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

516. mark weiss
(no subject)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

"Everyone makes jokes about macaroni, because it is a hole with some- thing around it, or about canons. [sic] The fact that we laugh doesn't change the situation, however; the fashioning of the signifier and the introduction of a gap or a hole in the real is identical." (Lacan, VII)

Boy, does this ever make me feel like I'm outside the loop! I don't think I know anybody who makes jokes about macaroni, not even in France. Maybe I don't hang out with the right psychoanalysts.

Note, however, that Monsieur Lacan has to explain what's funny about macaroni, but not what's funny about cannon. Perhaps in his world a cigar is a cigar but it's never just a cigar.

↑ Index

517. Christopher Alexander
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

oops, David—I accidentally hit the send button before I cld say anything. well, that last line is mine, anyway:

"efficiency-promoting measured were maken"

thanks, Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

518. Christopher Alexander
(Fwd) build labor-academic alliance
Mon 25 Aug 1997

---

this just came to me on the Bad Subjects list, & I thought I'd bring it over in case no one else has. I'm going to try to get more information, but I'd appreciate anything you folks (Mark? Joe? anyone?) cld bring forward, too.

Chris

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------

For those interested in building alliances between labor and the academy:

From: Dan Clawson ([redacted])
To: anyone interested in labor
Re: signing a statement, joining a group

The revival of the American labor movement, and its openness to a variety of initiatives that would have been inconceivable a few years ago, is the most promising political initiative of recent years. A new group is forming to build links between academics and the labor movement. John Sweeney, Linda Chavez Thompson, and the New Voice leadership have explicitly encouraged this development. They hope that we can work to alter the debates taking place in public policy and on the cultural front, in our teaching and in every public forum, just as they are working to change realities in trade unions. Together we can be part of a broader labor movement that includes both these areas and much more.

I realize it is ludicrously short notice, but an ad and press conference are planned announcing the formation of this group. In order to get your name on the ad, you need to send your name and affiliation to by Tuesday August 26. If you don't make that date, you can still join the group; see the address in the enclosed memo.

[redacted] (that's a #1, not a letter L)

If you'd prefer, you could send your name and affiliation to me, Dan Clawson, ([redacted]) and I will pass it on.

Together we can build a movement for social change. You can begin by passing this message on to everyone you can think of who would want to sign.

Dan Clawson

Labor Day, 1997

For two decades, Labor Day has been an occasion for eulogies and epitaphs, as the labor movement suffered deindustrialization, downsizing and defeat. But Labor Day 1997 arrives with a new militance and a new hope. The victory of the Teamsters in the two-week UPS strike -- the largest strike in a generation -- was a victory for all working people, whose incomes and livelihoods have stagnated for nearly a quarter of a century. The UPS strike was also a turning point for the labor movement, and could determine its strength and direction for years to come.

Though the right to organize has eroded in a world of contingent work -- part-time, temporary, outsourced, and subcontracted -- organizing campaigns across the continent are now rebuilding the labor movement in old and new workplaces: from Borders bookstores to Las Vegas casinos, from the strawberry fields of Watsonville to the classrooms of Berkeley and Yale, from Federal Express to Nike sweatshops.

We take this moment of struggle to announce the formation of a new independent, national organization: "Scholars, Artists, and Writers for Social Justice." In the academy and publishing, in the arts, sciences and entertainment, we also experience the growth of low-wage, part-time employment which erodes our craft and creativity. We call upon our colleagues and friends this Labor Day to declare their solidarity with the organizing drives of the new labor movement. The time is ripe to restore the mutually empowering relationship that once gave hope and dynamism to the labor movement and its allies in the academic and cultural communities.

We envision a movement that can reshape the nation's political culture by combating inequality and powerlessness, and by fostering the growth of a vibrant, militant, multicultural working-class movement. In an era when elite opinion makes a fetish of the free market, unions -- with a commitment to solidarity, equality, and collective struggle -- remain fundamental institutions of a democratic society. Our confidence in launching SAWSJ comes from the success of the "labor teach-in" movement, inaugurated last fall when more than 2,000 people affirmed a new alliance of labor and academe at Columbia University. In more than a score of other teach-ins from coast to coast, students, teachers, writers, artists, and unionists met, talked, learned, and argued in an atmosphere of hope and solidarity. SAWSJ hopes to fulfill the promise of those teach-ins.

> Add your name to this public statement which will be > released on September 1. You may do so by e-mailing Thaddeus > Russell at [redacted]. Please note that the address > contains the numeral one after "tnr." Please include your affiliation.

>
> At the same time you may also join Scholars, Artists, > and Writers for Social Justice, which is planning a > series of teach-ins and other events over the next several months.
> Please send a contribution to Ellen Schrecker, 771 West End > Avenue #7D, New York, New York, 10025.
>
> Alewitz, Mike
> Aronowitz, Stanley > Aronson, Ronald > Azcarate, Fred
> Ballinger, Lee
> Benjamin, Ernst
> Bennett, Marty
> Bernard, Elaine > Bonilla, Frank
> Buhle, Paul
> Carter, Prudence
> Chancer, Lynn
> Clawson, Dan
> Cutler, Jonathan
> Delgado, Hector
> Denning, Michael > DiFazio, Bill
> Domingo, Ligaya
> Dubro, Alec
> Fennell, Dorothy
> Fletcher, Bill
> Fraser, Steven > Freeman, Joshua B.
> Gerstle, Gary
> Gray, Lois
> Green, Adam
> Green, Venus
> Hall, Jacquelyn
> Horne, Gerald
> Huck, Gary
> Kaye, Harvey
> Kazin, Michael
> Kelley, Robin D.G.
> Kornbluh, Felicia
> Krupat, Kitty

> Levi, Margaret
> Lichtenstein, Nelson N.
> Lie, John
> Marquez, Dennis Bixler
> Mendel-Reyes, Meta > Montgomery, David
> Murolo, Priscilla
> Nathan, Debbie
> Newman, Kathy
> Ngai, Mae
> Piven, Frances Fox
> Porter, Allison
> Potter, Sarah
> Pranis, Kevin
> Prisock, Louis
> Ripton, Jessica
> Robinson, Dean
> Rosen, Sumner M
> Royster, Dee
> Russell, Thad
> Ryan, Sarah
> Schrecker, Ellen W.
> Semann, Ingrid
> Simmons, Esmeralda
> Singh, Nikhil
> Skotnes, Andor
> Slaughter, Jane
> Stephens, Michelle > Sugrue, Tom
> Uehlein, Joe
> Venkatesh, Sudhir
> Watts, Jerry > Willis, Ellen
> Woodard, Komozi
> Young, Cynthia
>
>

--
Dan Clawson
work = [redacted] home [redacted]

Contemp. Sociology = [redacted] fax [redacted] email = [redacted] [redacted]

"If they can get you to ask the wrong questions, they don't have to worry about the answers."
--Thomas Pynchon

Kelley Greenman Crouse
Sociology Department
Syracuse University
Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs
Syracuse, NY 13244

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

519. Red Slider
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

---

dodie wrote:

I've been out of town, and most of you on the list will understand my dismay at turning on the e-mail and out of 7 messages 3 were this renga thread. I thought it was agreed upon ages ago that so many listmembers found these rengas problematic in terms of wasted bandwidth and a waste of the 50-message limit that it was agreed that they would be taken backchannel.

And I know some of the perpetrators of this thing were involved in the original tedium.

Dodie

'Perpetrators' - ooops, now I'm in for it, an' i just thought it was little misdemeanor drive-by. Ok, Ok, I'll confess, the first line was mine (but actually stolen by george for having perturbations in the 'o' range), so if ignorance is no excuse then it's a compound felony and hard time for sure (probably on the macaroni line) and, as for bandwidth, jeez will ya look at my waste lines, I also confess that I tried to slip in two lines at once - no one believing that the macaroni just stuck together. So it looks like a three-strikes case for sure - please send replies care of Misalligned Noodles Dept., Culinary & Toga Mfgs. Division, Folsom State Prison. All mail to this addressee will be opened and searched - The Warden.

Tedium? you want tedium? do you know how many macaronis it takes to reach the other side of the Golden Gate Bridge? (not to mention the one's i've got to tie together to get down to the street from my cell-block).

red. #4|0|8|5|2|8|1|6|1|8|7|

↑ Index

520. Maria Damon
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

---

busted! i think the originators of this one didn't know abuot the previious one. i just joined in cuz i thot theme-specific memorial type rengas wd be self-contained. but i'm happy to go back-c.

At 9:45 AM -0700 8/25/97, [redacted] wrote:
>I've been out of town, and most of you on the list will understand my >dismay at turning on the e-mail and out of 7 messages 3 were this renga >thread. I thought it was agreed upon ages ago that so many listmembers >found these rengas problematic in terms of wasted bandwidth and a waste of >the 50-message limit that it was agreed that they would be taken >backchannel.
>
>And I know some of the perpetrators of this thing were involved in the >original tedium.
>
>Dodie

↑ Index

521. George Bowering
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

I agree entirely with Dodie. Drop this wasteful renga stuff. It gets horribly out of hand.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,

Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

522. Jordan Davis
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Mon 25 Aug 1997

Dodie --

<ir>Thanks for making the list safe for hot dogs and macaroni </ir> actually, John Tranter, now that I've used the irony tags, I gotta say they feel about as heavy as Chevy Chase-type air-scare quotes. Ugh City. It's probably me -- somebody else could make them feel like Jack Nicholson's pitch-based prosody, <ir>I'm sure</ir>.

Viva la Renga,
Jordan, who when in Maine avoids all hot dogs, both red and brown

↑ Index

523. John Tranter
Rimbaud in Africa
Mon 25 Aug 1997

In a recent posting Tom Orange said:
re the silence thread, john tranter offhands:

"Dave, Kim ... how about some postings to the EPC list that have ... that have no sender, no subject,and NO MESSAGE !! Is this maybe too much silence to ask? It would be like Rimbaud in Harar ... nothing to say!"

reminding me to ask y'all if anyone has read or heard anything about charles nicholl's /somebody else: arthur rimbaud in africa 1880-91/ (london: cape, 1997).

thanks,
t.

Tom: I've just finished the book. It's very good -- Nicholl is extremely knowledgable on Rimbaud, is a good writer, and has tramped all over Africa looking for the Ghost of Arthur.

It's a wretched story, of course. There's Arthur, tramping about, working himself to the bone, scraping and saving, getting ill and recovering, cursing the natives and the other traders, feverishly making plans for the future, and all the time we know it's all for nothing -- we can see the cancer coming like a dust-storm on the horizon.

Heartbreaking.
But a very good book.
--
John Tranter e-mail -- [redacted]
Jacket magazine -- http://www.jacket.zip.com.au
39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Australia
ph ([redacted] fax ([redacted]

↑ Index

524. Tom Orange
Rimbaud in Africa
Tue 26 Aug 1997

---

john t., thanks for the good word on nicholl's rimbaud book. certainly a sad story -- after all those years of wheelin and dealin he died with what the equivalent of a couple hundred bucks in his pocket. yet the disdain is quite captivating, effectively, all writing is pigshit, a good 40-50 yrs before artaud, let les jeunes poetes maudites discover anew the writings of the "recently deceased" rimbaud, and me not even dead yet, merdre!, all i wanna do is be a gunrunner...

t.

↑ Index

525. David Bromige
rimbaud in oz
Tue 26 Aug 1997

---

what is little known about rimbaud is that he visited australia with his young bride, directly from ethiopia by packet steamer. The Rimbauds were fairly flush at the time, and stayed in what was, for that era in Oz, a luxury hotel. On their first day, they hired a coach & four to go drive-about. Unfortunately, one of the first things they saw in the outback was a man having intercourse with a kangaroo. Rimbaud attempted to distract his wife from the sordid spectacle by pointing in the opposite direction and crying, "Look at that, my precious!" They both looked, only to see another man with another kangaroo. Disgusted, Rimbaud ordered the driver to head back to the hotel. There, to top the unhappy morning off, they found a man with a wooden leg masturbating on the hotel steps. Outraged, and with his notorious temper fully aroused, Rimbaud demanded to see the manager. "I have come a long way at considerable expense to stay in your hotel, and what do I and my poor wife find? Two men having intercourse with two seperate kangaroos, and a man with a wooden leg masturbating on the very steps of this hotel?!"

The manager's reply has been recorded: "But Monsieur Rimbaud, you dont expect a man with a wooden leg to catch his own kangaroo?"

The Rimbauds wanted to quit the establishment immediately, but there was nowhere else to go. They were stuck. Rimbaud had put the manager of the hotel in a foul mood, and that evening, he ordered all the chess players who frequented his lounge, to pack up their boards and leave. This they did, grudgingly, but one Among them remonstrated withg the manager, demanding to know his reason for such rudeness. This reply, too, has been recorded: "I cant stand chess nuts boasting in an open foyer."

For these and other anecdotes of Rimbaud in Oz I found the text under discussion well worth borrowing from my college library. David

↑ Index

526. Red Slider

Re: space(s) of silence

Tue 26 Aug 1997

: Re: space(s) of silence

s e e

an oral-aural companion to David's silence modulo above might be:

---------- n p o

↑ Index

527. Ryan Whyte

Cockpit

Tue 26 Aug 1997

Broken fugue poem with pictures at

http://www.freenet.edmonton.ab.ca/~rwhyte/coc.html

Thank you -

Ryan

==========

[redacted]

↑ Index

528. charles alexander
Re: Cockpit
Tue 26 Aug 1997

> Broken fugue poem with pictures at
>
> http://www.freenet.edmonton.ab.ca/~rwhyte/coc.html
>
Very nice, Ryan -- great to see some of the possibilities of poetry as web art.

charles

charles alexander
poet and book artist
[redacted]

↑ Index

529. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: (Fwd) build labor-academic alliance
Tue 26 Aug 1997

chris and others, don't know anymore about "scholars, artists, and writers for social justice" than in that post... but the idea appeals to me mightily, and i up and asked for my name to be added to the public statement, and will be writing to the snail mail address in nyc, see if there's more info available... i have every intention of joining the organization...

thanx for forwarding that!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

530. Pierre Joris
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Tue 26 Aug 1997

[redacted] wrote:

> *I've been out of town, and most of you on the list will understand my* > dismay at turning on the e-mail and out of 7 messages 3 were this renga
> thread. I thought it was agreed upon ages ago that so many listmembers

> found these rengas problematic in terms of wasted bandwidth and a waste of > the 50-message limit that it was agreed that they would be taken backchannel.
>
> And I know some of the perpetrators of this thing were involved in the
>
> original tedium.
>
> Dodie

yes, yes,

Pierre

--
==========
pierre joris 6 madison place albany ny 12202
tel/fax [redacted] email:[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/

"I have never been able to tell a beginning from an end." — Georges Braque
==========

↑ Index

531. Rachel Levitsky
Re: GAS NUMBER 9
Tue 26 Aug 2008

Thanks for the announcement.

What is the address for GAS NUMBER 9?

↑ Index

532. Gwyn McVay
(diffidently) chapbook
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Since I accidentally blurted it out to the whole list, and later got several backchannel replies expressing interest, I'm reposting the URL of the embryonic version of my second chapbook, which is forthcoming from Pecan Grove Press, a small and underacknowledged press in Texas which devotes itself exclusively--I think--to poetry of various different stripes. The prepublication version of the text is at:

http://pgpress.stmarytx.edu/pecangrove/author/natural.html

If anyone is undyingly curious about the cover, which I'm rather fond of, it's at http://pgpress.stmarytx.edu/pecangrove/author/gwyn3.gif

Thanks to all who were curious--& pardon this blatant flogging--

bests
Gwyn

↑ Index

533. William Marsh
help:writing experiments
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Poetics folks:

would someone be able to backchannel me with info re Bernadette Mayer's famous list of writing experiments, ie, where i can find it, most quickly / perhaps on the web somewhere?

thanks

bill marsh

↑ Index

534. Jordan Davis
hincty
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Anybody know of any uses of the word 'hincty'? I'm certain I've heard it around a lot lately, but when I go looking, it's nowhere to be found.

I have no idea what it means.

Thanks,
Jordan

↑ Index

535. Jordan Davis
Re: hincty
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Thanks to everybody who backchanneled -- it's a Cab Calloway word.

> Hincty (adj.) -- conceited, snooty.

and it's related to another word he used --

Dicty (adj.) -- high-class, nifty, smart.

OK! another mystery sunk --
J

On Tue, 26 Aug 1997, Jordan Davis wrote:

> Anybody know of any uses of the word 'hincty'? I'm certain I've heard it around a lot lately, but when I go looking, it's nowhere to be found.
>
> I have no idea what it means.
>
> Thanks,
> Jordan

↑ Index

536. simon
Re: hincty
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Dictionary of American Regional English, Vol. II, I think.

beth

↑ Index

537. Red Slider
Problem in silence
Tue 26 Aug 1997

I've a problem in silence representation. In a dramatic narrative, meant to be read aloud (perhaps for radio performance as well), I've need for a gap both thematically and visually to separate the scene of Coleridge's 'rotten sea' from a new vista of turbulence at the "dragon's edge."

Presently I'm using an ellipsis not entirely to my satisfication. The fragment I'm working with (backed-up enough to display the discontinuity is:

The silence in her hold as thick as blood, her only cargo grim remembrance of the day the brood of flags hung still, breathless as she pulled against a shudder-less heave of rotten death across watery waste, sighted once before by he who murdered the albatross. Lost! Lost! as we carry out the heart's knell hand over hand, each breath a bolide in a birdless sky, and wait... till the bell-pull sounds on an empty deck and the bitter end slacks against the kedge, as darkness falls and the gale winds rise and the great seas shudder at the dragon's edge.

(an in-progress and imperfect version of the entire work can be seen at http://sacramento-news.com/poets/redpoem.htm)

The problems are:

the break is between a scene, itself typed in silence (the becalmed sea), and the resumption of contrasting material; and, also serves as a performance instruction for an indefinite pause by the reader.

The work is antiqued (broken iambic, rhyme - at times dense, 17th c. nautical terms, etc.), with some deliberate 'moderns' (the ship has engines/iron-plate, the reader is directly engaged at points, etc.). But the silence representations I've encountered (say in the ( ) thread) seem to stark for the piece, too swedish-modern. Appreciate any ideas.

red slider

↑ Index

538. STACIE
Re: hincty
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Just curious- where (as in, in what song) does Calloway use "Hincty"-- what a great word!

Stacie

↑ Index

539. Tenney Nathanson
Re: hincty
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Jordan--

it also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as part of the phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba to Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.

best,

Tenney

At 01:27 PM 8/26/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Thanks to everybody who backchanneled -- it's a Cab Calloway word.
>
> Hincty (adj.) -- conceited, snooty.
>
>and it's related to another word he used --
>

> Dicty (adj.) -- high-class, nifty, smart.
>
>OK! another mystery sunk --
>J
>
>On Tue, 26 Aug 1997, Jordan Davis wrote:
>
>> Anybody know of any uses of the word 'hincty'? I'm certain I've heard it >> around a lot lately, but when I go looking, it's nowhere to be found.
>>
>> I have no idea what it means.
>>
>> Thanks,
>> Jordan
>>
>
>

---

tenney nathanson

[redacted]

http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/

↑ Index

540. Judy Roitman
Re: help:writing experiments
Tue 26 Aug 1997

> Poetics folks:
>
> would someone be able to backchannel me with info re Bernadette Mayer's famous list of writing experiments, ie, where i can find it, most quickly / perhaps on the web somewhere?
>
> thanks
>
> bill marsh

Why backchannel? Please send it to the list.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]

| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

541. Hoa Nguyen
A SAMPLE OF GAS #9
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Here's the address with a sample from the journal!

R. Levitsky wrote:
>
>Thanks for the announcement.
>
>What is the address for GAS NUMBER 9?

You can get your GAS from Kevin Opstedal
386 Madeline Court
Palo Alto CA 94306

a snippet of a teaser from #9

From "The Waist Line" by Dale Smith (part of section III. The Late Brunch)

***
A mismosa for the Mrs.
  O the hunger cloaked her and with her, her daughter begged a soda water

gulp gulp gulp jug jug jug jug jug
so rudely forc'd.
Burp.

Unreal table
under the brown cloth of cold noon
Mr. Kultur, the suburban merchant offered a pocket full of candy asked me to luncheon at Michaelangelo's followed by a drink at the Drake.
At the pancake hour, when the eyes turn upward from the table, the human belly waits like a mob sobbing waiting.

I Karen carpenter adrift in the after-life thin woman, emaciate, can see the pancake hour, the undefined brunch hour that gives home to you and brings the cooks to the kitchen.

(more delicious parody follows)

Thanks for letting me share this.-- Hoa

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

542. Thomas Bell

Re: Cockpit

Tue 26 Aug 1997

Yes, very nice "new beginning", Ryan. I have been working with the interaction of my drawings and poems and body (examples in my underconstruction page http://www.public.usit.net/trbell and also on wr-eye-tings) that you might like to visit.
tome bell

At 02:01 AM 8/26/97 -0600, Ryan Whyte wrote: >Broken fugue poem with pictures at
>
>http://www.freenet.edmonton.ab.ca/~rwhyte/coc.html
>
>
>Thank you -
>
>Ryan
>
>==========
>[redacted]
>
>

↑ Index

543. Bob Grumman
Re: help:writing experiments
Tue 26 Aug 1997

Dear Bill, and anyone else interested:

In my 1984 edition of The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book, Bernadette Mayer's "Experiments" starts on page 80. It's one of my favorite pieces in the book.

--Bob G

↑ Index

544. Steven Marks
Re: Problem in silence
Tue 26 Aug 1997

On Tue, 26 Aug 1997, Red Slider wrote:

> I've a problem in silence representation. In a dramatic narrative, meant to > be read aloud (perhaps for radio performance as well), I've need for a gap > both thematically and visually to separate the scene of Coleridge's 'rotten > sea' from a new vista of turbulence at the "dragon's edge."
>
> the albatross. Lost! Lost! as we carry out the heart's knell > hand over hand, each breath a bolide in a birdless sky, and wait... > till the bell-pull sounds on an empty deck and the bitter end slacks > and the great seas shudder at the dragon's edge.
>

Here's my suggestion. If you are performing this on a stage, wait four or five beats after the word, "wait," and then have an on-stage bell begin ringing, activated by somebody offstage. The audience would see the bell moving and hear the sounds, but see nobody doing the actual ringing. Now, I know this isn't silence if by that we mean the lack of sound. But, I think the tolling of a bell, especially if it seems to be ringing of its own accord, will create the feeling of emptiness that the lines speak of.

If you are doing this as a radio performance, I'd still suggest the bell perhaps with fade-ins and -outs. Of course, there's no way that I can think of to show the bell ringing by itself on the radio.

In both cases, you might also want to experiment with the length of the ringing, its volume, whether you read the next line over the ringing or wait a few more beats after the ringing. You might even want to experiment with how far you can push the audience with the ringing -- monotony being a type of silence.

for what it's worth,
Steven

Steven Marks

http://members.aol.com/swmarks/welcome.html

↑ Index

545. Rachel Levitsky
Re: lorenzo thomas?
Wed 27 Aug 2008

Hi Lisa--

Did you get Lorenzo's number? I'll ask Max Regan tomorrow.

I put out the word for readers and four people are interested in April. So then I got this idea about a festival.

Something like "Against the World as We Know It Festival: Poetry and Politics for the Next Millenium." And work with local poets and political groups to house visiting poets and organizers and have a bandshell and a band and a picnic and you know, I think it could be a lot of fun.

Would that interest you?

yours,

Rachel

↑ Index

546. Michael Magee
Re: hincty
Wed 27 Aug 1997

The definition's right but it's also worth noting that hincty is a sort of hald-anagram of "head nigger in charge." -Mike.

According to Tenney Nathanson:
>
> Jordan--
>
> it also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as part of the > phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, > mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba to > Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.

>
> best,
>
> Tenney
>
> At 01:27 PM 8/26/97 -0400, you wrote:
> >Thanks to everybody who backchanneled -- it's a Cab Calloway word.
> >
> > Hincty (adj.) -- conceited, snooty.
> >
> >and it's related to another word he used --
> >
> > Dicty (adj.) -- high-class, nifty, smart.
> >
> >OK! another mystery sunk --
> >J
> >
> >On Tue, 26 Aug 1997, Jordan Davis wrote:
> >
> >> Anybody know of any uses of the word 'hincty'? I'm certain I've heard it > >> around a lot lately, but when I go looking, it's nowhere to be found.
> >>
> >> I have no idea what it means.
> >>
> >> Thanks,
> >> Jordan
> >>
> >
> >
>
> ---
>
> tenney nathanson
>
> [redacted]
> [redacted]
>
> http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/
>

↑ Index

547. Douglas
Chris Felver
Wed 27 Aug 1997

Does anyone have an address or telephone number for the photographer Chris Felver.

If so, please back channel it to me at
[redacted]

I truly appreciate it.

Douglas Messerli
Sun & Moon Press

↑ Index

548. adalaide morris
Re: hincty
Wed 27 Aug 1997

Tenney--

Can you give a fuller reference for BOO? Also, does anyone know if Mullen has published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in Black Chant called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, 1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.

Thanks very much--

Dee Morris

> Jordan--
>
> it also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as part of the phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba to Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.
>
> best,
>
> Tenney

↑ Index

549. Ira Lightman
Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
Wed 27 Aug 1997

Moreover, the renga didn't seem to be about Nancarrow, four:four is the dullest time signature, for:for is for oneself, is this a way to honour the dead, would a renga have sprung up for Burroughs' death so equivalently not about Burroughs?

On Mon, 25 Aug 1997 17:06:46 -0500 Jordan Davis wrote:

> From: Jordan Davis <[redacted]>
> Date: Mon, 25 Aug 1997 17:06:46 -0500
> Subject: Re: Renga for Nancarrow (cont'd)
> To: [redacted]
>
> Dodie --
>
> <ir>Thanks for making the list safe for hot dogs and macaroni </ir>
>
> actually, John Tranter, now that I've used the irony tags, I gotta say they > feel about as heavy as Chevy Chase-type air-scare quotes. Ugh City. It's > probably me -- somebody else could make them feel like Jack Nicholson's > pitch-based prosody, <ir>I'm sure</ir>.
>
> Viva la Renga,
> Jordan, who when in Maine avoids all hot dogs, both red and brown

↑ Index

550. mark weiss
Avant-garde and border patrols
Wed 27 Aug 1997

Those of you who weren't sure what kind of divisions there are in the poetry world when the question of an avant-garde came up recently may find the following interesting. I just spoke with the editorial office at _Booklist_, the journal of the American Library Association. I had submitted Rochelle Owens' _New and Selected Poems_ to them for review. As the excellent review in Publishers'

Weekly had just come out I was curious as to whether _Booklist_ intended to review it. Like it or not, a good review in _Booklist_ is worth 200-300 sales to libraries. I was informed that their poetry editor had rejected it because, in the words of an internal memo, it "represents the kind of poetry that convinces people that poetry is too difficult to read." I think I offended the guy on the other end of the line when I volunteered that they should maybe find a less naive poetry editor. The book came to them with extensive praise from, among others, Karl Young, Marjorie Perloff and Jerry Rothenberg, but that didn't get it past the gate-keeper.

↑ Index

551. Pritchett,Pat

Re: Avant-garde and border patrols

Wed 27 Aug 1997

Uh oh. Looks like it's time to send in the sapper squad. I propose that this elite unit be comprised of David Bromige (who will baffle editors with "cabbages and rhinoceroses"), Tom Mandel (who will lay down the Law) and Rachel Loden (who will overcome with great gentleness and failing that, slap recalcitrant gatekeepers silly). Hovering in the background will be the Spirit of Allen Ginsberg on harmonium, chanting "Woe to Bablyon, woe!" and radiating angelic poetry vibes of irresistible potency.

Patrick Pritchett

From: mark weiss
To: POETICS
Subject: Avant-garde and border patrols
Date: Wednesday, August 27, 1997 2:35PM

I had submitted Rochelle Owens' _New and Selected Poems_ to [Booklist] for review..... I was informed that their poetry editor had rejected it because, in the words of an internal memo, it "represents the kind of poetry that convinces people that poetry is too difficult to read." I think I offended the guy on the other end of the line when I volunteered that they should maybe find a less naive poetry editor.

↑ Index

552. Jordan Davis

devolution

Wed 27 Aug 1997

What's with all this devolution, anyway?

Jordan

↑ Index

553. Jordan Davis
Re: devolution
Wed 27 Aug 1997

Thanks to everybody who backchannelled with the lowdown on devolution. Apparently, Brian Eno never received a cent from his work on Q: Are We Not Men?, and both Sri Lanka and Scotland have serious devolution efforts in the works.

You folks are dicty, not hincty,
J

At 5:59 PM -0500 8/27/97, Jordan Davis wrote:
>What's with all this devolution, anyway?
>
>Jordan

↑ Index

554. adalaide morris
Mullen references
Wed 27 Aug 1997

Tenney--

Can you give a fuller reference for Harryette Mullen's BOO? Also, does anyone know if Mullen published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in Black Chant called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, 1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.

Thanks very much--

Dee Morris

> Jordan--
>
> it[e.g. "hincty"] also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as part of the > phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba to Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.
>
> best,

> Tenney

↑ Index

555. Tenney Nathanson
Re: Mullen references
Wed 27 Aug 1997

Dee--

I'll try to scrounge up my Mullen file folder, but I'm not really sure where it is. There are two pieces, actually, both of which folks on this list originally brought to my attention. One is the BOO interview; then there's, I think, a short essay by her in POETIC BRIEFS.

best

Tenney

At 08:45 PM 8/27/97 -0500, you wrote:
>Tenney--
>
>Can you give a fuller reference for Harryette Mullen's BOO? Also, does >anyone know if Mullen published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in Black >Chant called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African >Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, >1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.
>
>Thanks very much--
>
> Dee Morris
>
>
>
>>Jordan--
>>
>>it[e.g. "hincty"] also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as >>part of the >>phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, >>mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba
to >>Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.
>>
>>best,
>>

>>Tenney
>
>

---

tenney nathanson

http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/

↑ Index

556. Thomas Bell
Re: Mullen references
Thu 28 Aug 1997

This might be of more general interest, if postable, or could they be put on the EPC hotlist?. I think it is a hot topic.
tom bell

At 08:08 PM 8/27/97 -0700, Tenney Nathanson wrote:
>Dee--
>
>I'll try to scrounge up my Mullen file folder, but I'm not really sure where >it is. There are two pieces, actually, both of which folks on this list >originally brought to my attention. One is the BOO interview; then there's,
>I think, a short essay by her in POETIC BRIEFS.
>
>best
>
>Tenney
>
>At 08:45 PM 8/27/97 -0500, you wrote:
>>Tenney--
>>
>>Can you give a fuller reference for Harryette Mullen's BOO? Also, does >>anyone know if Mullen published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in Black >>Chant called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African >>Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, >>1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.
>>
>>Thanks very much--
>>

>> Dee Morris
>>
>>
>>
>>>Jordan--
>>>
>>>it[e.g. "hincty"] also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as >>>part of the >>>phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, >>>mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba to >>>Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.
>>>
>>>best,
>>>
>>>Tenney
>>
>>
>
>----------
>
>tenney nathanson
>
>[redacted]
>[redacted]
>
>http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/
>
>

↑ Index

557. Red Slider
Re: Mullen references
Thu 28 Aug 1997

---

not sure if this is current -

BOO Magazine
1865 Commercial Dr. Box 116
Vancouver, B.C. V5N 4A6

or, Phil McCrum [redacted]

red.

Can you give a fuller reference for Harryette Mullen's BOO? Also, does anyone know if Mullen published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in Black Chant called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, 1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.

Thanks very much--

Dee Morris

> Jordan--
>
> it[e.g. "hincty"] also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as part of the > phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba to Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.
>
> best,
>
> Tenney

↑ Index

558. Herb Levy
Re: Mullen references (& renga)
Thu 28 Aug 1997

BOO is a newsprint publication that comes out of Vancouver, something like quarterly, which ran an interview with Mullen about a year ago.

I don't have the address at hand, but one or another of the principals may be on the list, still, or some other Vancouverite might have contact info.

(That's Vancouver BC, by the way, about 150 miles north of here, NOT Vancouver WA, about 150 miles south of here.)

&, after a few days traveling in the opposite direction as Dodie, I can only say ditto in re: the burgeoning renga. While I have read some finished rengas in print & online form the earlier group that were of interest, being a captive reader of these works in process is not a beautiful thing. (For those who care to check into the old renga scare I think it was two years ago, summer of 1995.)

Bests,

Herb

> Tenney--
>
> *Can you give a fuller reference for Harryette Mullen's BOO? Also, does anyone know if Mullen published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in Black

> Chant called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, 1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.*
>
> Thanks very much--
>
> Dee Morris
>
> Jordan--
>
> it[e.g. "hincty"] also turns up in Harryette Mullen's /Muse & Drudge/, as part of the > phrase "hincty-jinkty." No idea what THAT means. Mullen, in BOO is it, mentions Clarence Major's dictionary of African American slang, From Juba to Jive, as key source for her. Don't recall offhand the hincty-jinkty page #.
>
> best,
>
> Tenney

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

559. Ryan Whyte
Shaky
Thu 28 Aug 1997

Shaky

skit, representation on representation coffee and no lunch makes the same shudder Hegel confronts close open sign no contradiction in dictum yes but no

this girl named A D alpha absolute electric lights riven from herself noose in speech fluted when on the phone ok well goodbye ahem
call next weak but the name

stutters sky blank shimmer over granite. Not a man say B B french or german let continue to talk and see each other

In great wind all Serra's calculations like tree tops massage across interval wherein the newness of the same according

Andrew Benjamin.
I like that quote in the morning, a propos de how nice. Goodbye tomb know not sema steel carbon

↑ Index

560. David Bromige
(no subject)
Thu 28 Aug 1997

i doant kown wyh yuo lghau. vryeone kons tehr is ptorey taht mreinds us ptroey is dfcltiut to rade. prsonlellay , i fnid ernaly veryhingt dufflcit to erad. On, herte nist chum ptroey hath leapses em, tno cinse brett forest & garde ugest & t.s. litotes.

Het Bilarian hwo efrused to virwei crholle sownes boko.

↑ Index

561. John Krick
The Ear
Thu 28 Aug 1997

Dear Poetics List,

Anyone know about the schedule of upcoming events at The Ear, like, through the next couple of months?

John Krick
****
([redacted])

((((I pulled on a pair of my stoutest espadrilles and set off, my cat frisking ahead of me with many a warning cry of

"Here comes my master, the Marquis of Carabras!"))))
S. J. Perelman
****

↑ Index

562. Lawrence Upton.
Compuserve
Thu 28 Aug 1997

A quick note of warning to my fellow email users. Should you consider using compuserve, learn from my situation. Three days after I cancelled my account with them and asked them to justify recent charges, they put in a debit to my credit card company for ANOTHER month. Now I have to jump through hoops if I want to get my money back.

↑ Index

563. adalaide morris
BOO
Thu 28 Aug 1997

Thanks to Tenney, Herb, Red Slider, David Brominge, and Thomas Bell for the Mullen information. I've e-mailed Deanna Ferguson about the interview in BOO and will report back when I hear. Meanwhile, does anyone know the citation for the Poetic Briefs essay Tenney mentions?

I like Thomas Bell's idea of seeing whether some of Mullen's harder-to-find pieces could be posted on the EPC hotlist. Is there anything a person could do to help make that happen?

Dee

There are two pieces, actually, both of which folks on this list >originally brought to my attention. One is the BOO interview; then there's,
>I think, a short essay by her in POETIC BRIEFS.
>
>best
>
>Tenney
>
>At 08:45 PM 8/27/97 -0500, you wrote:
>>Tenney--
>>
>>Can you give a fuller reference for Harryette Mullen's BOO? Also, does >>anyone know if Mullen published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in *Black

>>Chant* called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African >>Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, >>1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.
>>
>>Thanks very much--
>>
>> Dee Morris
>>

↑ Index

564. Robert Archambeau
Jazz Poetry
Thu 28 Aug 1997

(in a small voice from beneath a pile of paperwork)

Does anybody have an opinion about Yusef Komunyakaa and Sascha Feinstein's "Jazz Poetry Anthology" and "Second Set: Jazz Poetry Anthology Volume Two" -- I just heard about them from Amazon.com, but since their goal is to sell you the book, their glowing review isn't necessarily to be trusted. Do Komunyakaa and Feinstein cover all the bases? Do they include discussions of Jazz poetics? Is the book filled with bland beat hymns of praise for great players? Do tell...

R.A.
--
Robert Archambeau
Department of English
Lake Forest College
Lake Forest, IL 60045
http://www.lfc.edu/~archamb/

See: behind bullet-proof glass, the ruby slippers sparkle.
We do not know the limits of their powers.
We suspect that these limits may not exist.
 --Salman Rushdie

↑ Index

565. Judy Roitman
DC
Thu 28 Aug 1997

Any readings going on in DC the weekend of Sept. 27?

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |

memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

566. Jordan Davis
our mail
Thu 28 Aug 1997

Anybody finish Mason & Dixon? I have a couple blanks in the upper left and the lower right corners, notably "Intentionally concealed" and "Pizarro's quest."

Jordan

On Thu, 28 Aug 1997, David Bromige wrote:

> i doant kown wyh yuo lghau. vryeone kons tehr is ptorey taht mreinds us ptroey is dfcltiut to rade. prsonlellay , i fnid ernaly veryhingt dufflcit to erad. On, herte nist chum ptroey hath leapses em, tno cinse brett forest & garde ugest & t.s. litotes.
>
> Het Bilarian hwo efrused to virwei crholle sownes boko.

↑ Index

567. Eliza McGrand
Re: Compuserve
Thu 28 Aug 1997

oh jeez.

i just went through the same nightmare with aol. yes, i was fool enough to put one of those "free disks" in my machine. a year and a half later, one credit card screwed up to the point of hours of phone calling, they have once again agreed to refund my money. it is not clear if at this time they will actually do it. they've made that promise before... e

↑ Index

568. Herb Levy
Re: Jazz Poetry
Thu 28 Aug 1997

I'm more taken with the range of work in Moment's Notice edited by Art Lange & Nathaniel Mackey.

I've only looked at the Komunyakaa & Feinstein collections in bookstores, so I don't know them as well, but that also means that looking them over in bookstores didn't seduce me into buying the books.

Moment's Notice offers a wider range of styles (including both poetry & prose), whereas the other collections seem (in my memory, at least) to be more or less limited to Beatnik stylings & personal experience poems.

I'd also recommend looking at Aldon Nielsen's book Black Chant for the last couple of chapters on jazz & poetry. Besides covering the jazz/poetry dynamic/aesthetic pretty well, this book also has a good bibliography & discography of work relevant to the subject.

Hope this helps,

Herb

> (in a small voice from beneath a pile of paperwork)
>
> Does anybody have an opinion about Yusef Komunyakaa and Sascha Feinstein's "Jazz Poetry Anthology" and "Second Set: Jazz Poetry Anthology Volume Two" -- I just heard about them from Amazon.com, but since their goal is to sell you the book, their glowing review isn't necessarily to be trusted. Do Komunyakaa and Feinstein cover all the bases? Do they include discussions of Jazz poetics? Is the book filled with bland beat hymns of praise for great players? Do tell...
>
> R.A.
> --
> Robert Archambeau
> Department of English
> Lake Forest College
> Lake Forest, IL 60045
> http://www.lfc.edu/~archamb/
>
> See: behind bullet-proof glass, the ruby slippers sparkle.
> We do not know the limits of their powers.
> We suspect that these limits may not exist.
> --Salman Rushdie

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

569. Julie Marie Schmid
Re: Jazz Poetry
Thu 28 Aug 1997

I've used the Jazz Poetry Anthology in a lyric poetry class I taught here at the University of Iowa. I think that both the first volume and the second set are o.k. . . . A little too traditional for my tastes. It containts too much poetry about jazz and jazz artists and too little that actually utilizes a jazz poetic.

If I had it to do over again I would use the Mackey anthology that is published by Gray Wolf Press (the name of which escapes me). From what I've seen of that, it seems to be much more about formal innovation than the Feinstein & Komunyakaa text.

↑ Index

570. Rachel Loden
crack avant-garde units & zapper squads
Thu 28 Aug 1997

Patrick Pritchett wrote:

> Rachel Loden (who will overcome with great gentleness and failing that, slap recalcitrant gatekeepers silly)

Well, as Ronnie said, there you go again. How is it I always seem to get cast as something between the hostess of Romper Room and Nurse "those who are late do not get fruit cup" Diesel? I've spent the summer, Patrick, working on needlepoint samplers of Amy Lowell and rereading _Satyagraha in South Africa_ and _Letter from Birmingham Jail_, so I've sworn off violence except in really hopeless cases, such as Radovan Karadzic, or maybe certain backwoods relations of George Bowering.

Rachel

↑ Index

571. Poetics List
Welcome to Poetics List
Thu 28 Aug 1997

Rev. 6-3-97

Welcome to the Poetics List

&

The Electronic Poetry Center

sponsored by The Poetics Program, Department of English, Faculty of Art & Letters, of the State University of New York, Buffalo

---

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

_____Contents_____

1. About the Poetics List
2. Subscriptions
3. Cautions
4. Digest Option
5. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail
6. Who's Subscribed
7. The Electronic Poetry Center (EPC)
8. Poetics Archives at EPC
9. Publishers & Editors Read This!

[This document was prepared by Charles Bernstein ([redacted]), Loss PequeñoGlazier ([redacted]), and in cooperation with Joel Kuszai ([redacted]).

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange arise
Or unfold, O ye postmasters!

1. About the Poetics List

The Poetics List was founded in late 1993 with the epigraph above.

There are presently about 500 subscribers.

Please note that this is a private list and information about the list should not be posted to other lists or directories of lists. The idea is to keep the list to those with specific rather than general interests, and also to keep the scale of the list small and the volume manageable.

individual posts of participants are sent directly to all subscribers, we continue to work to promote the editorial function of this project. The definition of that project, while provisional, and while open to continual redefinition by list participants, is nonetheless aversive to a generalized discussion of poetry. Rather, our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible.

Please keep in mind that all posts go out immediately to all subscribers, and become part of an on-line archive. <italic>Posting to Poetics is a form of publication, not personal communication</italic>. Participants are asked to exercise caution before posting messages! While spontaneity of response may seem the very heart of the list at its best, it also has the darker side of circulating ideas that have not been well considered (or considered by another reader -- editor or friend). Given the nature of the medium, subscribers do well to maintain some skepticism when reading the list and, where possible, to try to avoid taking what may be something close to a spontaneous comment made in the heat of exchange as if it were a revised or edited essay ("Let the Reader Beware!").

The "list owner" of Poetics is Charles Bernstein: contact him for further information. Joel Kuszai is list manager. For subscription information contact us at [redacted].

---

2. Subscriptions

line, to:

[redacted]

the one-line message should say:

{or} (replacing Jill Jillway with your own name; but note: do not use your name to unsub)

We will be sent a notice of all subscription activity.

*

If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note:

Sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to send messages to mail. To avoid this, unsub from the old address and resub from the new address. If you can no longer do this there is a solution if you use Eudora (an e-mail program that is available free at shareware sites): from the Tools menu select "Options" and then select set-up for "Sending Mail": you can substitute your old address here and send the unsub message.

Poetics

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced. Please try avoid having messages from the list returned to us. If the problem is low disk quota, you may wish to request an increase from your system administrator. (You may wish to argue that this subscription is part of your scholarly communication!) You may also wish to consider obtaining a commercial account.

---

3. Cautions

Please do not send attachments or include extremely long documents in a post, since this may make it difficult for those who get the list via "digest" or who cannot always decode attached or specially formatted files.

In addition to being archived at the EPC, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications are always welcome. (See section 7.)

Please do not send inquiries to the list to get an individual subscribers address. To get this information, see section 6.

If you want someone to send out information to the list as a whole, or supply information missing from an post, or thank someone for posting something you requested, please send the request or comment to the individual backchannel, not to the whole list.

---

4. Digest Option

The Poetics List can send a large number of individual messages to your account to each day! If you would prefer to receive ONE message each day, which would include all messages posted to the list for that day, you can use the digest option. Send this one-line message (no subject line) to

[redacted]

set poetics digest

NOTE:!! Send this message to "listserv" not to Poetics or as a reply to this message!!

You can switch back to individual messages by sending this message:

set poetics mail

---

5. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail

Do not leave your Poetics subscription "active" if you are going to be away

for any extended period of time! Your account may become flooded and you may lose not only Poetics messages but other important mail. You can temporarily turn off your Poetics subscription by sending a message to "listserv."

set poetics nomail

& turn it on again with: set poetics mail

When you return you can check or download missed postings from the Poetics archive. (See 8 below.)

---

6. Who's Subscribed

To see who is subscribed to Poetics, send an e-mail message to

e-mail message

blank. In the body of your e-mail message type:

  review poetics

You will be sent within a reasonable amount of time (by return e-mail) a rather long list containing the names and e-mail addresses of Poetics subscribers. This list is alphabetized by server not name.

 or try:

 review POETICS by name

 review POETICS by country

which will give you the list alphabetically by name or a flawed list by country (since all ".com" and ".net"s are counted as US)

Please do not send a message to the list asking for the address of a specific subscriber.

---

7. What is the Electronic Poetry Center?

our URL is

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc

The mission of this World-Wide Web based electronic poetry center is to serve as a hypertextual gateway to the extraordinary range of activity in formally innovative writing in the United States and the world. The Center provides access to the burgeoning number of electronic resources in the new poetries including RIF/T and other electronic poetry journals, the POETICS

List archives, an AUTHOR library of electronic poetic texts, and direct connections to numerous related electronic RESOURCES. The Center also provides information about contemporary print little magazines and SMALL PRESSES engaged in poetry and poetics. And we have an extensive collection of soundfiles of poets' reading their work, as well as the archive of LINEbreak, the radio interview series.

The EPC is directed by Loss Pequeño Glazier.

---

8. Poetics Archives via EPC

Go to the EPC and select Poetics from the opening screen. Follow the links to Poetics Archives. You may browse the archives by month and year or search them for specific information. Your interface will allow you to print or download any of these files.

Or set your browser to go directly to:

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/poetics/archive

---

9. Publishers & Editors Read This!

PUBLISHERS & EDITORS: Our listings of poetry and poetics information is open and available to you. We are trying to make access to printed publications

as easy as possible to our users and ENCOURAGE you to participate! Send a list of your press/publications to [redacted] with the words EPC Press Listing in the subject line. You may also send materials on disk. (Write file name, word processing program, and Mac or PC on disk.) Send an e-mail message to the address above to obtain a mailing address to which to send your disk. Though files marked up with html are our goal, ascii files are perfectly acceptable. If yourword processor ill save files in Rich Text Format (.rtf) this is also highly desirable

Send us extended information on new publications (including any back cover copy and sample poems) as well as complete catalogs/backlists (including excerpts from reviews, sample poems, etc.). Be sure to include full information for ordering--including prices and addresses and phone numbers both of the press and any distributors.

Initially, you might want to send short anouncements of new publications directly to the Poetics list as subscribers do not always (or ever) check the EPC; in your message please include full information for ordering. If you have a fuller listing at EPC, you might also mention that in any Poetics posts. Some announcements circulated through Poetics and the EPC have received a noticeable responses; it may be an effective way to promote your publication and we are glad to facilitate information about interesting publications.

END OF POETICS LIST WELCOME

↑ Index

572. Ryan Whyte
video script
Fri 29 Aug 1997

The road which leads me to you is safe even when it runs into oceans.

Edmond Jabes, The Book of Questions felt like Fellini.

Young voices write video screen, not too old, held upstairs spinning drums, washed by harem, pure wife.

that word of mine propriety making this video when in a second it is me writing

it spoken, responsibility a point later edited out so where does the writing begin which is a way of writing out shame. She says I am the screen well that's true, admission says you need us

I suppose it's a matter of timing opening dam bedrock to sky that total responsibility in the midst of technology's blind spot

so that returning to love and an arbitrary division of paragraphs yet when her face shimmered it was all to a certain extent lost structure confluence

↑ Index

573. rsillima
By Ear, he said (or is it Bye Ear?)
Fri 29 Aug 1997

John,

My understanding is that the Ear series finally came to a close last spring with a reading by Steve Benson and Leslie Scalapino. There's a new series somewhere that is supposed to be the continuation, but either they haven't gotten started yet or else have not continued with the same mailing list. Can somebody please fill us Philadelphia-region folks in!

Ron Silliman

Date: Thu, 28 Aug 1997 10:09:30 +0000
From: John Krick <[redacted]> Subject: The Ear

Dear Poetics List,

Anyone know about the schedule of upcoming events at The Ear, like, through the next couple of months?

John Krick
****
([redacted])

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road
Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

574. Miekal And Re: Jarry and his Pataphysics
Fri 29 Aug 1997

> p. durgin wrote:
>
> Hey listies,
>
> If a y one ha any hot s gges ions as to w ere to begin loo ing into the w rk of Al ed Jar ry, and his concept of Patap ysi s, wo ld you before you drive your car to the theatre of absurdity please partake in THE 'PATAPHYSICAL SOBRIETY TEST located at a url near you:

http://www.net22.com/qazingulaza/pataphysics/pataphysics.html heirlooms are forever,

Miekal

--
@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

575. rsillima
Ashbery/Theroux debate
Fri 29 Aug 1997

I'm going to violate my rule against posting to the list twice in one day to call attention to the following website:

http://www.latimes.com/HOME/NEWS/BOOKS/t000074985.html

There you will find John Ashbery writing to the LA Times about Alexander Theroux's review of his first five books and Theroux's response. The gist being that Ashbery is said to be a fine writer when he doesn't behave like a relative of Stein, Olson (whose name is spelled Olsen by both, or perhaps by the LA Times' editor), Pound, even Berryman.

Theroux, if you've had the fortune to miss the work, is a classic example of an academic novelist (Princeton at the moment, I think) who strikes the tough guy pose in his prose (he's an amateur at this compared with Leonard Michaels), which aspires to some sort of made for TV aesthetics.

Ron

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road
Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

576. Dean A. Brink
JavaPoetry
Fri 29 Aug 1997

I would like to share an experiment with Java that combines images and text. It may take a couple minutes to load in your browser.

"Men with Coins"
http://www.w-link.net/~dean/JavaPoetry/mencoins.html

The applets used require a Java-enabled browser (such as Netscape 2 or above or MS Internet Explorer 3 or above).

Any comments or suggestions are very welcome.

dean brink
EALC/UChicago [redacted]
interpoetics - poetry of Asia and the Pacific Rim
www.w-link.net/~dean/interpoetics/index.html

<HTML>
I would like to share an experiment with Java that combines images and text. It may take a couple minutes to load in your browser.

<P>"Men with Coins"

<A HREF="http://www.w-link.net/~dean/JavaPoetry/mencoins.html">http:// www.w-link.net/~dean/JavaPoetry/mencoins.html</A>

<P>The applets used require a Java-enabled browser (such as Netscape
2 or above or MS Internet Explorer 3 or above).

<P>Any comments or suggestions are very welcome.

<P>dean brink

EALC/UChicago   <A HREF="mailto:[redacted]">[redacted]</A> interpoetics - poetry of Asia and the Pacific Rim

<A HREF="http://www.w-link.net/~dean/interpoetics/index.html">www.w-link.net/~dean/interpoetics/index.html</A>

 </HTML>

----------16CEECFDEBCF77F4C2339945--

↑ Index

577. David R. Israel
Re: JavaPoetry
Fri 29 Aug 1997

Dean --

quite well done -- the serene pacing, text-roll & image-fades -- seems to fulfill (to a degree, or at least in a certain manner) what I've often felt to be interesting possibilities for the medium, but which I've rarely seen explored with much sense of adequacy.

A good example -- an interesting instance -- of what can be done. Reminds me somewhat of my sensation on seeing work of some more-"serious" video artists

(e.g., Irit Batsry in NYC), who're interested in really working with the medium's own potential . . .

Yes, the upper imagery didn't appear on my browser (Netscape 2 level) till the poem-text had run thru its cycle onece -- then one properly had the full effect. Other viewers might bear this in mind. The pacing was not (quite) as slow as Butoh -- was (I'd say) pretty well set; too fast would have been (pardoning the tautology) too fast; whereas much slower might've bordered on excruciating . . .
.

all this is not commenting on "content" issues, but rather, on the techno-achievement (& hat-tipping toward the so-to-say more-than-nascent poetics thereof . . .)

thanks,
d.i.

> From: "Dean A. Brink" <[redacted]> > Subject: JavaPoetry
> To: [redacted]

> http://www.w-link.net/~dean/JavaPoetry/mencoins.html
.
.....
.....
\\\

red

I would like to share an experiment with Java that combines images and text. It may take a couple minutes to load in your browser.

"Men with Coins"
http://www.w-link.net/~dean/JavaPoetry/mencoins.html

The applets used require a Java-enabled browser (such as Netscape 2 or above or MS Internet Explorer 3 or above).

Any comments or suggestions are very welcome.

dean brink
EALC/UChicago [redacted]
interpoetics - poetry of Asia and the Pacific Rim
www.w-link.net/~dean/interpoetics/index.html

<<File: ATT00000.htm>>

↑ Index

579. Miekal And
Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
Fri 29 Aug 1997

David B wrote:

And too, he is a "loner" poet in a time of > assiduous networking.

David Thanks For The Itinerant Bio of Opal Nations

& I wish to underline the immortal truth to the words

HE IS A LONER POET IN A TIME OF ASSIDUOUS NETWORKING.

but wonder if it could also read "because many of us are loner poets we have evolved into assiduous networkers."

Amendant Hardiker

'"pataphysician of inebriated thermal struggle & improbable solutions to uncalculated problematics

↑ Index

580. Hank Lazer
Re: Jazz Poetry
Fri 29 Aug 1997

I'd say "ditto" in response to Herb's e-mail. The Mackey co-edited volume has more range to it. I'd especially second Herb's enthusiastic recommendation of Aldon Nielsen's _Black Chant_--a truly great resource, and an enjoyable read. The current issue of _River City_ magazine has a couple of short essays on jazz & poetry: one by me (on early Creeley, and current Mackey), and one by Aldon.

↑ Index

581. p. durgin
Jarry and his Pataphysics
Fri 29 Aug 1997

Hey listies,

If any one has any hot suggestions as to where to begin looking into the work of Alfred Jarry, and his concept of Pataphysics, would you please back-channel me with the scoop? One can only infer so much from Roditi and the like. Thanks.

Patrick Durgin

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

↑ Index

582. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Ashbery/Theroux debate
Fri 29 Aug 1997

Thanks for that heads up, Ron - boy oh boy is Theroux all wet! The job he does on Little JA makes Sven Birkerts look like a perfect gentleman (and I imagine he is since I can't imagine him ever stooping so low...).

So, late in 1997, people are still getting riled over their inability to locate "truth" in poems. Gosh. Theroux is Allen Tate redux, preaching the mealy-mouthed humanist gospel of clarity, as if a poem were merely a transparent envelope and the poet a courier for some literary FedEx.

As a friend of mine from Texas is fond of saying: That tightens my jaw. This points up my recent experience on the second day of my Critical Analysis of Poetry class: we were reading Sandburg's homiletic "Grass." On the page before, though, was a wee excerpt from Stein's "Stanza" -- such wonderful, playful, bracing stuff -- and thanks to the attitude of hostility and fear fostered by people like Theroux, how will students ever be introduced to it? As Victor

McLaglen opines in Ford's "Fort Apache" - "we've got a job of work ahead of us and no mistake..."

Patrick Pritchett

From: rsillima
To: POETICS
Subject: Ashbery/Theroux debate
Date: Friday, August 29, 1997 4:34AM

http://www.latimes.com/HOME/NEWS/BOOKS/t000074985.html

There you will find John Ashbery writing to the LA Times about Alexander Theroux's review of his first five books and Theroux's response. The gist being that Ashbery is said to be a fine writer when he doesn't behave like a relative of Stein, Olson (whose name is spelled Olsen by both, or perhaps by the LA Times' editor), Pound, even Berryman.

Theroux, if you've had the fortune to miss the work, is a classic example of an academic novelist (Princeton at the moment, I think) who strikes the tough guy pose in his prose (he's an amateur at this compared with Leonard Michaels), which aspires to some sort of made for TV aesthetics.

Ron

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

583. Pierre Joris
Re: Jarry and his Pataphysics
Fri 29 Aug 1997

Read everything
first forward omitting every third vowel, then backward reinserting the omitted vowels
after every fifth consonant

-- Pierre

p. durgin wrote:

> Hey listies,
>
> If any one has any hot suggestions as to where to begin looking > into the work of Alfred Jarry, and his concept of Pataphysics, would you > please back-channel me with the scoop? One can only infer so much from > Roditi and the like.

> Thanks.
>
> Patrick Durgin
>
> I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

--
==========
pierre joris 6 madison place albany ny 12202
tel/fax [redacted] email:[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/

"I have never been able to tell a beginning
from an end." — Georges Braque
==========

↑ Index

584. dbkk
Re: By Ear, he said (or is it Bye Ear?)
Fri 29 Aug 1997

> John,
>
> My understanding is that the Ear series finally came to a close last spring with a reading by Steve Benson and Leslie Scalapino. There's a new series somewhere that is supposed to be the continuation, but either they haven't gotten started yet or else have not continued with the same mailing list.

I'm sure NYC-ers have more details, but here on the west coast the word is that the Ear Inn series is now at the Hear Cafe. A rather strange thematics in venue names, wouldn't you say?

Dodie

↑ Index

585. Aldon L. Nielsen
Re: Mullen Lecture
Fri 29 Aug 1997

Last I checked, Mullen's essay had not yet appeared in print -- but I've been out of touch for a while -- hope to speak with her soon, and will ask if it's out or in press somewhere -- I quoted from a tape I'd made for radio broadcast -- but you REALLY need to see the slides that go with the talk --

↑ Index

586. Joel Kuszai
Meow Press Website Open
Fri 29 Aug 1997

At long last, and at great mental anguish, the Meow Press website is now open. Please take a look around. Let me know back channel if there are any items which need to be corrected. This is my first venture into html and the web, so please be patient.

Over the next months and weeks I'll be adding more and more, including many on-line texts not available in paper form...

y'all come back now, y'hear...

it can be found at:

http://writing.upenn.edu/~kuszai/MEOW-WEB.html

↑ Index

587. David Bromige
'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
Fri 29 Aug 1997

A contemporary norte americano working the 'pataphysical vein who is too little known & read, Opal louis Nations, may be introduced here w/o my dipping too far into irrelevance, I trust. Author of a number of books published between 1970-1990(?), but for some years now on sabbatical from writing while he works in the studio reviving old gospel, doo-wop, & r n b acetates for the CD industry, Nations (aptly named [and by himself]) : born & raised in Britain, national of Canada, immigrant long since to the USA) is probably best encountered via _A Browsers Guide to Opal L. Nations_, put out by the now-defunct Coach House Press in Toronto but still likely available at the right library or 2nd hand bookshop. I know that when I read from this to a KSW group last year in Vancouver, they were astonished that a writer of such intensity concerning things absurd shared passports with them, and wanted to hear more of him. With his wife Ellie Humm (originally from Norway), Opal edited the magazine _Strange Faeces_ throughout the 70s.

Extra-literary talents possessed by this one-off figurante include a 6-octave range with perfect pitch (he has sung with a number of groups, beginning with the Frays in London in the 60s--Decca recording artists), and a gift for drawing, whether straight-ahead represntation, or the cartoons more in keeping with his writing interests.

Early an associate of Allen Fisher (collecting early doo-wop, not poetry, initially drew them together), and during his Canadian spell, Steve McCaffery, I believe Nations' lukewarm interest in French theory of the recent past accounts for the drop off in attention to his work, and, on his part, in furthering his writing. And too, he is a "loner" poet in a time of assiduous networking.

I hope some of you will find time to look into his work. David

↑ Index

588. Pierre Joris
Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
Fri 29 Aug 1997

David, thanks for that lovely & accurate take on Opal -- whose work has much delighted me over the years & is indeed very much & unjustly neglected in the cyber-90s -- & whose generosity as publisher in the England of the seventies was proverbial -- when I started SIXPACK it was he who showed up on my doorstep & offered his equipment for use -- & then published my own first book. -- doo-wop de doo, Pierre
--
==========
pierre joris 6 madison place albany ny 12202
tel/fax [redacted] email:[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/

"I have never been able to tell a beginning
from an end." — Georges Braque
==========

↑ Index

589. Red Slider
Re: Ashbery/Theroux debate
Fri 29 Aug 1997

[shears...] a wee excerpt from Stein's "Stanza" -- such wonderful, playful, bracing stuff -- and thanks to the attitude of hostility and fear fostered by people like Theroux, how will students ever be introduced to it? As Victor McLaglen opines in Ford's "Fort Apache" - "we've got a job of work ahead of us and no mistake..."

Patrick Pritchett

Pat,
Put your mind at ease. We'll find our way. We'll find our way. At night

red.

↑ Index

590. mark weiss
(no subject)
Fri 29 Aug 1997

I've just read the exchange between Ashbery and Theroux in the LA Times that Ron tipped us off to (you can get Ashbery's reply to the review and Theroux's reply to Ashbery free at the LATimes website, but the original review (Aug. 3) appears to be pay-per-view). Theroux, who gets last word (the home team always does) to clinch his argument that the great moderns and their supporters are often in a conspiracy to perpetrate fraud by being less than plain-spoken and linear, quotes some lovely paratactic lines of Ashbery's as proof that Ashbery is not entitled to ask anyone for clarity of argument, his crimes against such being so flagrant. He also discounts Stein because she flunked her lit courses. It never occurs to Theroux that he simply may not know how to read the writers he criticizes. In light of the above, I thought that the backchannel thread between me and Charles Alexander might be useful. He is responding to the poetics list posting that I reproduce below. (Charles agreed to our outing).

Those of you who weren't sure what kind of divisions there are in the poetry world when the question of an avant-garde came up recently may find the following interesting. I just spoke with the editorial office at _Booklist_, the journal of the American Library Association. I had submitted Rochelle Owens' _New and Selected Poems_ to them for review. As the excellent review in Publishers' Weekly had just come out I was curious as to whether _Booklist_ intended to review it. Like it or not, a good review in _Booklist_ is worth 200-300 sales to libraries. I was informed that their poetry editor had rejected it because, in the words of an internal memo, it "represents the kind of poetry that convinces people that poetry is too difficult to read." I think I offended the guy on the other end of the line when I volunteered that they should maybe find a less naive poetry editor. The book came to them with extensive praise from, among others, Karl Young, Marjorie Perloff and Jerry Rothenberg, but that didn't get it past the gate-keeper.

Mark

Mark, you devil.

You know perfectly well that these three names wouldn't get anything past, or even TO, those particular gate-keepers. My guess is that those gate-keepers might not have ever heard these three names.

I mean, there are borders, and then there are glaciers.

Charles

Of course you're right, and that's the point. We can argue about what's meant by avant garde, but I know damned well that the two conservative books that I've published, Mervyn Taylor's and Susie Mee's, both of which I think are marvelous books, got reviewed in Library Journal, Publisher's' Weekly and Booklist, until Rochelle's none of the others have been reviewed in even one of the three, and the review of Rochelle's begins "Owens is yet another talented poet who has not received her due because her poems are neither easy nor easily classifiable." It happens that I don't think that any of the books I've published are difficult (few books of poems are--they usually yield pretty easily to being read aloud), but most are non-linear, which is what I think these cats mean by difficult. The linear is where the line is drawn, and that applies to ways of experiencing a lot more than just poems, heaven help us in this poor benighted land.

Mark

I'm not so certain about this, Mark, and perhaps I am more cynical than you are. I think, for example, that a number of poets in those 'conservative' circles (terminology, we know, is quite loaded with pitfalls here) are beginning to give Robert Duncan a consenting nod -- even, if they are feminist, Gertrude Stein -- and not necessarily reading these two narrowly. For living writers it's a different story, but is the line really about linearity. I fear it's more of a social question than that. Where did who go to school, who do they know, who reads and cares about their work, etc.? What you suggest is that people actually try to read our 'difficult' books and are somewhat troubled by the nonlinear nature. What I wonder is if it, usually, even gets to the point of a reading, if a writer doesn't have a particular pedigree. That is the point where John Ashbery having gone to Harvard gets him in a few doors that Tom Mandel or Ron Silliman or Mary Margaret Sloan is not going to enter. Michael Palmer gets in some of those doors, too. And I don't say that to fault Ashbery or Palmer in the least.

If these were truly aesthetic questions, I would like it very much. But I fear that something else gets in the way before aesthetics or poetics even gets a chance. Something which is part social, part political, part MFA or school-related, part ugly, largely but not entirely unrecognized by those who would bar the gates.

Charles

↑ Index

591. Jordan Davis
idaho's cat, or yam what yam
Fri 29 Aug 1997

I hope John Ashbery will respond to Alexander Theroux's question about the number of commas in Ashbery's _Tennis Court Oath_ poem, "Idaho." H may see no need to do so, but it does seem like a matter worth addressing, _proportion_, especially in this context. Who among us would maintain that Ashbery never published a less-than-perfect poem? So the hell what? Unlike Wordsworth, Ashbery seems to have persevered long enough to write _very well_ again.

That the LA Times wants web readers to pay for articles is fine, their business, but that the amount they want to charge is greater than $0.01 is discouraging. Microdollars! are what I have for Theroux's prose (and sorry, Dalkey, zip for the poems). Ad hominem on him aside, has anybody read the original review? Is Ashbery's account of Theroux's antagonism to modern(post)ism supportable?

What does an arbitrary number of commas threaten? (What are the um gender/camp/literary historical deals in "Idaho" that Theroux's dropkicking? Do they matter? Is it a strictly formal poem that offends Theroux on a strictly formal level? Would two commas have been sufficient? What about Ron Loewinsohn's poem about the swimmers with the row of semicolons -- is or is not that more meaningful? more beautiful?)

Are we really just a bunch of post-Berlinwall communards? Brave benighted souls? Ecch. How long will poets continue to be held to insane standards?

Yours in the question yams,
Jordan

PS Is this the first mention of Olsen (sic) outside of poetry land in years, or is it my image nation?

And when will someone do for the line from Ashbery to Padgett what has been done so successfully for the line from Olson to Howe?

PPS Letter to the editor rengafesto beginning

POETRY IS A GIVEN.

POETS ARE FREE AND RESPONSIBLE TO DO WITH WORDS WHAT THEY WANT.

WHAT POETS DO WITH WORDS MAY NOT BE RECOGNIZABLE -- BUT WHAT THEY DO MAY BECOME SO. THERE IS NO REASON TO HARM POETS OR SPEAK ILL OF THEM BECAUSE OF YOUR INABILITY TO READ THEM.

↑ Index

592. Alan Jen Sondheim
On the Road
Fri 29 Aug 1997

Jennifer says she's been on the road. She says she's found her one true love.

She's sorry she can't write a rhyme for a long time. She's sorry she can't even punctuate rites or spel a spell.

She's swollen. I'd say pregnant. Mourning sickenss for depression. What grabs the objet petit a so to _speak._

Cloked or choked.

Jennifer says, well, it's all better off this way anyway, you know language can just perform SO MUCH and then you want the real thing.

Even poets want the real thing.

You know it when it hurts.

Even poets perform.

Jennifer says and says but she's not listening to what she's saying.

The brain chops meat like a cleaver.

Julu, she's dead.

She was the listening-function, so says Deleuze-Guattari. They turned her into a machine. Lathe.

Hehe.

- J

↑ Index

593. David Bromige

Another blast from the (poetry) past : Ron Loewinsohn

Fri 29 Aug 1997

On the day I post a thumbnail sketch of Opal Nations, a happy shock to see (for 1st time since i signed on the List) the name of Ron Loewinsohn, a writer probably better-known (Allen anthology) than Opal, but one also who was read by a number of my associates in the 70's & who then stopped writing (or publishing, in any case) poetry. He has scholarly articles on W.C.W. & perhaps others, and two novels published, one of which, _Magnetic Fields_, won a worthwhile prize, but I havent seen his poetry for a long time. _Watermelons_ was published in the late 50s (Ron then being in his very early 20s), with praise front & back from WCW & Allen Ginsberg. A number of books followed, with perhaps the most notable being _Against the Silences to Come_ , whose title poem is built up of some exquisite "chording" that links the daily paper with history of the poem as feeling-object. Again, a poet to recommend, one who may not be known to the generation now in their 20s and 30s.

Despite the slightly obit tone of my postings today, these poets are both very much alive, Nations when not in the recording studio can be found at ...help, the name of that record store in Albany? El Cerrito? ...and Loewinsohn, teaching at UC Bkly. Give em a read. David footnote to Opal Nations as multi-talented person : for many years, he was a highly popular DJ on KPFA (pbs) Bkly, until "let go" by dubious management decision. He has taken his show (originally "Doo-Wop Delights") to a pbs station in Santa Cruz, but just once or twice monthly.

↑ Index

594. George Bowering
Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
Sat 30 Aug 1997

---

bpNichol and Steve McCaffery over the years spent a lot of time on 'pataphysics, or the Canadian version, which is called "pataphysics.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

595. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: 'pataphysics & Opal Louis Nations
Sat 30 Aug 1997

The crucial essay is Nichol's "The "Pata of Letter Feet, or, The English Written Character as a Medium for Poetry." i think this also one of the few _critical_ pieces bp wrote on the topic, i mean he was a performer, and didn't always stop performing to rationalize over the performance. i cld be wrong. But this essay is such a _pause_. Of course there is also the collected symposium papers of the conf. held in Toronto (i forget the date). But again i think his essay there is more a performance of "pataphysics than critical account. Nichol's essay has fascinated since forever. It's such an important text. he wrote it coz Prof. Hugh LeRoy in the Fine Arts Dept. at York University asked him to, to come in and talk abt art & poetry to the graduate students there. That was in 1985 or 86. i've seen the manuscript version of this text and it's interesting how he ponders & revises certain words, certain phrases. The essay is so simple. But not too simple. As you can tell, i love that essay and cld talk abt it forever. But i'm saving my best stuff for my dissertation. We owe Prof. LeRoy much thanx.

> bpNichol and Steve McCaffery over the years spent a lot of time on 'pataphysics, or the Canadian version, which is called "pataphysics.

↑ Index

596. Robert Archambeau
Re: Jazz Poetry
Sat 30 Aug 1997

Hank Lazer wrote:

> The current issue of _River City_ magazine has a couple of short essays on jazz & poetry: one by me (on early Creeley, and current Mackey), and one by Aldon.

Could someone backchannel me the (snail) address for _River City_?

Thanks much,

R.A.

--
Robert Archambeau
Department of English
Lake Forest College
Lake Forest, IL 60045
http://www.lfc.edu/~archamb/

Time ere poems Time ere plighted troth
Nor forward glance nor backward gaze at signs none
 --Brian Coffey

↑ Index

597. Craig Douglas Dworkin
'Pataphysics
Sun 31 Aug 1997

Greetings all,

Those interested in what might be called an "applied 'pataphysics" will want to take a look at the recent "Open Letter" (Ninth Series, Number 7, Winter 1997), edited by Christian Bok (whose dissertation is actually on 'Pataphysics) and Darren Wershler-Henry (whose dissertation is a long-overdue study of the typewriter and literature), two York students whose combination of brilliance and irreverence probably hasn't been seen in a university since the Moscow Linguistic Circle formed in the mid 'teens. Of special note in the issue: Steve McCaffery's "Zarathrustran 'Pataphysics," which takes Christopher Dewdney's "Fractal Diffusion" an order of magnitude further.

Highest recommendation as well to their recent books of poetry, Bok's "Crystalography" (Coach House Press, 1994) and Wershler-Henry's "NICHOLODEON: a book of lowerglyphs" (Coach House Printing, 1997).

happy reading,
--Craig Dworkin

↑ Index

598. Dan or Orion Dlugonski
Princess Dead
Sun 31 Aug 1997

A quick word on the accident:

Princess Di

cele(b)rity kills

↑ Index

599. mark weiss
(no subject)
Sun 31 Aug 1997

I just received a request for a review copy of Rochelle Owens' book from "S.V. Caldwell, Ph.D., Editor" of the Sandia Review of Books in Albuquerque. Regular letterhead, no phone number. The mag isn't listed in CLMP or Dustbooks, and I suspect that it's a phoney. This happened to me once before, with another outfit that turned out to be a scam to build a personal library for free. Has anybody out there heard of Sandia or its editor?

↑ Index

600. charles alexander
(no subject)
Sun 31 Aug 1997

> I just received a request for a review copy of Rochelle Owens' book from "S.V. Caldwell, Ph.D., Editor" of the Sandia Review of Books in Albuquerque. Regular letterhead, no phone number. The mag isn't listed in

Mark, Sandia Review of Books does sound familiar. It is more like a local book review newspaper, I believe, than any kind of "little magazine," so I'm not surprised if it doesn't show up in Dust Books or CLMP. Someone in Albuquerque on this list probably knows, if there is someone in Albuquerque on this list. If not, you might find your way, perhaps through the web, to an Albuquerque phone book or business directory -- or you might try to find and call a bookstore in Albuquerque.

charles

charles alexander
poet and book artist
[redacted]

↑ Index

601. Rachel Loden
black stone on a white stone
Sun 31 Aug 1997

Perhaps it's silly to be thinking of this now, and in such a context; if so, apologies. Hope the special characters come through

PIEDRA NEGRA SOBRE UNA PIEDRA BLANCA

Me moriré en París con aguacero, un día del cual tengo ya el recuerdo.
Me moriré en París--y no me corro-- talvez un jueves, como es hoy de otoño.

Jueves será, porque hoy, jueves, que proso estos versos, los húmeros me he puesto a la mala y, jamás como hoy, me he vuelto, con todo mi camino, a verme solo.

César Vallejo ha muerto, le pegaban todos sin que él les haga nada;
le daban duro con un palo y duro también con una soga; son testigos los días jueves y los huesos húmeros, la soledad, la lluvia, los caminos . . .

--César Vallejo

↑ Index

602. David R. Israel
poet gets (at once) insta-fame & quick-anonymity
Sun 31 Aug 1997

Poetas,

according to today's NY Times (see appended excerpt), the good (& needfully clandestine) writer Salman Rushdie has wed an American poet by name Elizabeth. Many happy returns.

The article refers to a new prose-fiction anthology, published in the U.S. as Mirrorwork: 50 Years of Indian Writing (1947-1997), edited by Salman Rushdie and Elizabeth West (Henry Holt & Co.)

(seems, the implication is "West" would be a pseudonym)

[what follows is from:
http://www.nytimes.com/yr/mo/day/news/national/ny-rushdie-wedding.html
one mus register w/ the paper (via http://www.nytimes.com) to download]

> August 31, 1997
> Salman Rushdie, Still Hiding, Is Married in Secret
>
> By JANE H. LII

Salman Rushdie, the author of "The Satanic Verses," who has lived in hiding for nearly a decade as the object of an open-ended Islamic death sentence, was married in secret on Thursday in the Hamptons on Long Island.

> The details of the wedding were not given, but Andrew Wylie, Rushdie's agent, said Saturday: "Elizabeth and Salman Rushdie are happy to confirm that they were married on Thursday, Aug. 28, in a small ceremony."

Newspaper reporters in London, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the new Mrs. Rushdie, whose maiden name is being withheld to protect her safety, is a poet who had collaborated with Rushdie on an anthology of modern Indian writing. The Daily Mail, a newspaper published in London, reported that the couple had had a child last month. . . .

/ / / /

btw, talkin' of celebrity & anonymity, here's my contribution anent the late Princess of Wales -- responsive to remarks from one writer (here rendered anon.) not from this list . . .; a "boomerang poem" (as I call 'em).

> It saddens me deeply. It also causes me to reflect on how very lucky we are that we live our lives in relative anonymity. That we can get away for a week at the beach without worrying about photographers behind every sand dune. We can smoke our cigarettes in the early morning hours, blissfully alone, just us and the sand and the waves.

poise / pause / paz (for Diana) that the known might desire anonymity (the anonymous still coveting renown) that the famous should pine for obscurity?

when celebs are the talk-of-the-town (ever bearing the weight of that crown) might one just assume fathom the surety of less-glamorous chances to frown? . . .
how the known may renew anonymity

d.i.

```
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

604. nuyopoman
Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Aug 1997 to 30 Aug 1997
Sun 31 Aug 1997

Is "The Pata of Letter..." on the net somewhere?

Bob Holman

↑ Index

605. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Aug 1997 to 30 Aug 1997
Sun 31 Aug 1997

---

i know Karl Young only recently put a series of bp's _Translating Translating Apollinaire_ pomes on his Grist archive. i think poetics may even be linked to it. if not _wr-eye-tings_ is. i can't remember the address for the archive off hand. Grist may be the place to start, tho.

> Is "The Pata of Letter..." on the net somewhere?
>
> Bob Holman

↑ Index

606. charles alexander
Nichol on Light & Dust Site
Sun 31 Aug 1997

Karl Young's Light & Dust web site was mentioned as having bp Nichol's work, relating to the pataphysics thread, but someone (was it you, Carl) didn't have the URL at hand.

The URL of the Light & Dust's contents page is http://www.thing.net/~grist/l&d/lighthom.htm

Works by Nichol there are Translating Translating Apollinaire, at http://www.thing.net/~grist/l&d/bpnichol/lnichol1.htm and works from Sharp Facts (variations on Translating Translating Apollinaire 26), at http://www.thing.net/~grist/l&d/bpnichol/bpsh.htm

But also look around at other works there. To me, it's one of the very best poetry sites on the web.

charles

charles alexander
poet and book artist
[redacted]

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

September 1997

649 messages · Mon 1 Sep 1997 – Tue 30 Sep 1997

The world spent the first week of September burying two women in front of an audience of billions, and the list, which gives the Princess eighteen mentions and Mother Teresa exactly one, was not really watching. On the eleventh, in a flat on East 12th Street in Manhattan, Hannah Weiner died of natural causes, alone and unexpectedly, six weeks short of sixty-nine. Charles Bernstein had the news late that night and told the room the next morning. What the room then did is, I think, the reason this archive is worth printing.

Bernstein's notice is four paragraphs of plain praise — her courage, her wickedly funny judgements of poets, her performances, the fact that the last few years had not been easy and she had gone on working anyway, pushing what a poem can do "into new zones of perception". It ends: "Hannah would have turned 69 on November 4". And then, appended without ceremony, a complete bibliography of her work, which he mentions he compiled some years ago. He had it ready. That is a sentence I want to leave standing on its own.

Then they read her. Douglas Messerli posted one of her late pieces entire. Lee Ann Brown posted what Weiner had written for her Tender Buttons book. Loss Glazier posted annotations. Peter Ganick named her last magazine issue, A.BACUS 107. James Sherry said, simply, that he had published her last book in 1996, and that anyone interested should ask. Keith Tuma wrote her one line in her own manner and left it alone: "She was Spokeless in the unacknowledged world of Big Wheels". David Bromige, who could not manage more, managed six words — "No more p.s.s for Hannah Weiner" — which if you know the work is the whole elegy.

The strangers spoke too, and this is the part that stopped me. Maria Damon, who had spent three days of August 1996 begging this same list to help her theorise Weiner for an essay, wrote to say that "tho i never met her her work came to mean" a great deal. Christopher Alexander posted with an apology attached: "I didn't know Hannah Weiner, & I hesitate to post" for that reason, not wanting to intrude on other people's grief. Compare, if you will, October of last year, when a man on this list said honestly that he did not see the point of Ms. Change's actions, never having heard of her. It is the same sentence and it has been turned inside out.

Because that is the difference and I am not going to pretend it is a moral improvement. Kathy Change was not one of theirs and Hannah Weiner was. What

I can say is that in nineteen months of this archive I have watched a room fail to read a dead girl's poems, fail to notice a loyalty oath in an obituary, fail to discuss a living poet's lecture, and spend ninety-seven letters on an anthology; and in September 1997, given a death, it did the only thing it has ever been unambiguously good at. It posted the work. I have set Bernstein's bibliography where it fell, at the foot of the notice, on the morning after, because a man who loves a poet keeps her bibliography where he can reach it.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 649 in all.

WRITERS

8-13-1997, ShaunAnne Tangney Humani… 139, 276, 357, 358
Acgold01 128
Aerialedge 34, 191, 202, 220, 275, 315
Alexander, Charles 136, 164, 212, 229
Alexander, Christopher 16, 91, 145, 158, 253, 306, 359, 397, 399, 403, 412
And, Miekal 344, 352, 487, 566
Archambeau, Robert 277, 568
Ashton, Jennifer 322
Baker, Mark 189, 209, 259, 283, 309
Balestrieri, Peter 642
Barbour, Douglas 14, 245, 439, 465, 502, 570
Bell, Thomas 7, 32, 44, 121, 132, 153, 215, 256, 367
Bernstein, Charles 120, 129, 134, 148, 350, 407, 418, 644
Van den Beukel, Karlien 471
Bowering, George 26, 27, 47, 57, 69, 71, 123, 337, 455, 456, 458
Brink, Dean A. 4
Bromige, David 2, 5, 20, 21, 55, 58, 62, 126, 147, 149, 162, 172, 173, 186, 236, 340, 375, 379, 398, 410, 457, 459, 474, 510, 529
Brown, Lee Ann 56, 615
Burns, Suzanne 166
Carpenter, Brian 339, 415
Champion, Miles 238
Cheney, Don 24, 53, 106, 112
Clark, Susan 476, 641, 645
Clay, Steven 94
Cope, Stephen 281, 318, 483
Curnow, Wystan 308
Damon, Maria 18, 41, 130, 137, 138, 165, 174, 204, 223, 241, 242, 287, 304, 305, 310, 353, 490, 491, 505, 514, 527, 536, 549, 550, 580, 587, 602, 617
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 426, 612
Davis, Jordan 143, 168, 179, 252, 261, 460, 461, 462, 499, 500, 596
Dbkk 83, 365, 372, 378, 396, 445, 469, 472, 477, 495, 498, 511, 553, 563, 564, 579, 620, 624, 626, 632
Debrot, Jacques 151, 636
Douglas 135, 198, 207, 224
Dowker, David 482
Drake, Robert 84, 244, 438, 496, 530
DS 528, 559
Durgin, P. 109, 303, 354, 401, 402, 417, 442, 447, 449, 534, 548, 578
Evans, Steve 210, 503, 535
Felix, Joel 606
Finnegan, James 163, 176, 233, 248, 392, 441
Fleisher, Joe Amato/Kass 101, 141, 298, 508, 531, 546, 558, 571, 625, 638
Foley, Jack 82, 293, 391
Foutu, Markus 264, 284
G, Henry 36, 59, 184, 272, 290, 393
Ganick, Peter 77, 206, 230, 231, 271, 323
Glazier, Loss Pequen~o 262, 263, 435
Gleason, Eric 542
Gleason, Eryque 543, 595, 597
Golumbia, David 376
Gould, Henry 13, 15, 96, 116, 180, 216, 218, 254, 463, 488, 532, 573, 575
Gould, Hnry 227
Grosman, Ernesto 470, 479
Grotjohn, Bob 347, 619
Grumman, Bob 169, 183, 194
Guertin, Carolyn 577
Hale, Robert 255
Heller, Michael 170, 320
Henry 239, 240, 346, 409, 434, 446, 507
Hg 280, 494
Hill, Laurie Schneider/Crag 349, 572
Hreha, Sarah 437
Israel, David R. 6, 11, 12, 37, 38, 49, 74, 87, 89, 99, 171, 267, 326, 343, 388, 395, 440, 466
Jarnot 200, 288
John_lavagnino 63, 351
Joris, Pierre 10, 489
Keeney, Scott 249
Kelleher, Michael J. 588
Kellogg, David 300
Kimmelman, Burt 225, 297, 317, 325, 362, 394, 443, 444, 533
Kuszai, Joel 161, 355
Lazer, Hank 205, 448
LEAHY, MARK 432
Levitsky, Rachel 338, 473, 493, 518, 541, 614, 623
Levy, Herb 78, 314, 321, 342, 400, 429, 492
Lewis, Joel 33
Lightman, Ira 467, 630
Loden, Rachel 80, 291, 311, 374
Magee, Michael 569, 643
Mandel, Tom 199, 327, 464
Marks, Steven 324, 328
Marsh, William 61, 93, 329, 621
Materer, Timothy 17, 103, 278, 404
Matt 406

McGrand, Eliza 111, 140, 144, 250, 251, 363, 382, 385, 422, 424, 454, 506, 521, 567, 610, 611, 633, 647
McHale, Brian 102
McVay, Gwyn 295
Mirakove, Carol 90, 390, 405, 450
Moriarty, Laura 583
Mullen, Laura 292
Muratori, Fred 1
Nathanson, Tenney 25, 613
Nguyen, Hoa 88, 226, 228, 497, 538, 574, 576, 584, 631, 640
Nielsen, Aldon 453, 512, 517, 590, 592, 594
Nielsen, Aldon L. 43, 76, 155, 279, 313, 371
Orange, Tom 481, 609
Peter, Ark E 289
Peters, Carl Lynden 331
Pollet, Sylvester 195, 551, 557, 581
Prejsnar, Mark 108, 360, 504, 582
Pritchett,Pat 39, 42, 52, 60, 114, 119
Prod, William Burmeister 509, 513, 520
Radding, Reuben 369, 560
Reiner, Christopher 65, 110, 427, 480
Reynolds, Rebecca 273
Rhenisch, Harold 562
Robintm 81
Roitman, Judy 40, 64, 208, 211, 247, 368
Rosenberg, Jim 312
Rsillima 167, 221, 296, 319, 381, 430, 431, 485
Russell, Layne 182, 222, 232, 246, 285, 345, 348, 356, 361, 383, 384, 386, 389, 419, 616
Samuels, Lisa 333
Schultz, Susan 478
Scroggins, Mark W 274, 294
Selby, Spencer 341, 380, 413
Sherry, James 217, 219
Simon 316, 627
Simon, Schuchat 193, 335, 336, 452, 486, 618
Slaughter, William 282
Slider, Red 3, 19, 31, 68, 73, 86, 92, 95, 104, 105, 107, 113, 117, 122, 131, 146, 156, 159, 175, 187, 188, 190, 201, 213, 214, 234, 257, 260, 269, 302, 414, 420, 425
Slotnick, Stacie 330
Smith, Dale 451, 468, 475, 501, 515, 600, 601, 622, 628, 629, 634
Sondheim, Alan Jen 85, 124, 133, 265, 266, 268, 307, 370, 539
Spahr, Juliana 28, 51, 526, 547
Steinberg, Hugh 8, 35, 45, 235, 270, 484, 605
Sumner, Alaric 197
T.R.Healy, L.MacMahon And 192, 544
Taciuch, Dean 243, 387
Tal, Kali 524, 537, 561, 565, 591, 599, 608, 648
Thompson, George 421
Trevor, Karen And 46, 125
Tuma, Keith 66, 154
Upton., Lawrence 29, 48, 67, 79, 118, 178, 237, 299, 334, 373, 637
Vassilakis, Nico 428
Wallace, Mark 97, 127
Weiss, Mark 9, 22, 30, 50, 72, 142, 150, 152, 157, 258, 301, 366, 408, 411, 416, 423, 516, 522, 523, 525, 556, 585, 586, 593, 603, 635, 639, 646, 649
Weldon, Rebecca 160, 185, 540, 607
Wessman, Ralph 598
Wheeler, Susan 70, 98, 196
White, Celia M 203
Whyte, Ryan 75
Wilson, Rob 100, 115, 286, 433, 545
Wood, Tim 552, 554, 555
Zimmerman, Daniel 54, 177, 181, 332, 377, 519, 604
Zitt, Joseph S 23, 364, 436, 589

NAMES MENTIONED

Abdul, Selim 539
Acker, Kathy 70
Adamson, Robert 502
Addonizio, Kim 82
Adorno, Theodor 601, 617, 622, 630
Albee, Edward 83
Albon, George 220, 480
Alexander, Christopher W. 16, 91, 158, 159, 253, 306, 397, 399, 403, 412
Alice, Mary 396
Allan, Don 242
Americans, Asian 587, 593, 648
Amirkhanian, Charles 197, 314
Amis, Martin 83
Anderson, Beth 210, 471
Anderson, Jon 235
Andre, Michael 220
Andrews, Bruce 220, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430
Angelo, Michael 220
Antin, David 242
Apollinaire, Guillaume 378
Arbor, Ann 134, 135, 138
Armantrout, Rae 398, 405, 411, 429, 430, 502, 535
Arnold, Bob 341
Ashberry, John 7
Ashbery, John 36, 43, 44, 168, 220, 261, 272, 283, 287, 335, 535
Ashley, Robert 22, 23, 220
Atlanta, Mark P. 108, 109, 341, 360, 366, 504, 582
Auden, W. H. 259, 261, 273, 274, 277, 280, 283, 287, 291, 294, 301, 302
Augustine, Jane 242

Austin, Geer 436, 451
Baker, Lori 341, 480
Balestrieri, Pete 642, 643, 644
Baptiste, David 341
Baraka, Amiri 220
Baratier, David 341
Barbour, Doug 466
Barlow, John 341
Barnard, Mary 129, 131, 137, 139, 140, 142, 143, 144, 146, 150, 152, 153, 155, 156, 157, 165
Barnes, Diane 83
Barney, Matthew 591
Baron, Todd 341
Barthes, Roland 70
Basinski, Michael 15, 51, 67, 183, 609
Bataille, George 220
Beattie, Ann 83
Beatty, Paul 493
Beckett, Samuel 55
Beckett, Tom 84, 341, 493
Beckman, Joshua 15
Belgum, Erik 242
Bellamy, Dodie 51, 67, 91, 355, 418, 511, 629
Belle, Cecelia 341
Benjamin, Walter 220
Bennett, Bill 220
Bennett, John M. 84, 341
Bergvall, Caroline 51, 67, 472, 482
Berkeley, Michael 210, 319, 320, 471, 641
Berkson, Bill 451
Berlin, Irving 175, 341, 539
Bernstein, Emma 90, 91, 100, 167, 220, 245, 259, 261, 437
Berrigan, Anselm 220, 261, 396, 451
Berrigan, Edmund 396
Berrigan, Ted 226, 396
Berry, Jake 84, 341, 448
Berryman, John 463
Berstein, Charles 100, 433, 437
Bertola, Carla 341
Bibby, Michael 242
Bishop, Elizabeth 268
Blake, William 115, 614, 621
Blanchot, Maurice 220
Blarnes, Eric 116, 119, 218, 463
Blaser, Robin 58, 69, 93, 236, 321, 332, 339, 343, 455
Blau, Rachel 502
Blonsky, Marshall 115
Bly, Robert 142, 146, 152, 153
Borges, Millicent 240
Borkhuis, Charles 407
Bouchard, Daniel 220, 341
Bowen, David 525
Bowen, Kevin 524
Bowles, Jane 614, 621
BpNichol 245, 331, 353
Bradbury, Steve 100
Bradley, Daniel 341
Brazil, David 341, 599
Brennan, Sherry 15, 127, 220
Brink, Dean A. 4
Bronk, Bill 523, 532
Brossard, Nicole 493
Browne, Colin 220, 242, 480, 608
Browning, Robert 351
Bruno, Franklin 341
Bryant, Dana 236, 339
Burger, Mary 127, 341, 564
Burke, Carolyn 220
Burnham, Clint 65
Burns, Avery 341
Burns, Elizabeth 51, 242
Burroughs, William 136
Burrus, Harry 341
Butler, Judith 220
Butler, William 55
Butterick, George 220
Byrd, Don 474
Byrum, John 84, 341
Cabri, Louis 341, 495
Cage, John 433, 437
Cain, Stephen 609
Campbell, Bruce 242
Card, Macgregor 341
Carll, Steve 341, 564
Carroll, Lewis 377
Carter, Charlotte 200
Castro, Michael 281
Chadwick, Lynn 407, 427
Chan, Charlie 242
Chang, Juliana 242
Chapman, Lee 341
Chaucer, Geoffrey 395
Cheek, Chris 502
Chernoff, Maxine 341
Chester, Jeff 341
Childs, Abigail 398, 405, 411, 429, 430
Cigale, Alex 341
Claire, Barbara 242
Clark, Emilie 354, 430, 457, 464, 467, 483, 495
Clarke, John 519
Clarke, Robin 492, 493
Clifford, Pat 341, 545, 549
Cobbing, Bob 242, 341
Coffey, Brian 277, 568
Cohen, Alicia 588, 613
Cohen, Ethan 51, 67, 242
Coleman, Jen 524, 525
Coleman, Victor 459, 474
Collins, Martha 242, 473, 524, 525
Collom, Jack 473

Columbus, Christopher 341, 472
Comments, Poets 7
Conant, Jeff 451
Conner, Kyle 220
Conrad, Tony 51, 67, 473, 614, 621
Coolidge, Clark 349, 354, 430, 464, 467, 483, 493
Cooper, Dennis 22, 23
Cooper, Lisa 235
Corbett, William 341
Cornford, Adam 451
Corso, Gregory 341
Cortez, Jayne 493
Coultas, Brenda 407
County, Madison 222, 332, 396
Creeley, Robert 502, 568, 623
Crown, Kathleen 242
Césaire, Aimé 242
Darragh, Tina 51, 67, 91
Darwin, Charles 599
Davidson, Daniel 220, 223, 336
Davidson, Michael 220, 223, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430
Davis, Leslie 341
Davis, Martin 200
Dawn, Kim 377
Day, Jean 51, 67
Deguy, Michel 341
Delany, Samuel R. 570
Deming, Alison 235
Dennis, Carl 242, 341
Derksen, Jeff 78, 242
Derrida, Jacques 70, 184, 220, 406
Dickenson, Emily 246, 258, 259
Dickey, Eric 374
Dickinson, Emily 136
Dickinson, Mark 259
Dixon, Nancy 220
Donahue, Joseph 443
Donne, John 268
Donovan, Thom 15
Doris, Stacy 407
Dorn, Edward 451
Doyle, Kirby 427
Drucker, Johanna 94, 407
Duhamel, Denise 235
Duncan, Robert 69, 242, 341, 435, 502
Durgin, Patrick F. 401, 417, 442, 447, 449, 534, 548, 550
Dutton, Paul 433, 437
Dylan, Bob 136
Edgar, Chris 341
Edison, Thomas 332
Edmond, Martin 242
Edson, Russell 82
Eigner, Larry 40, 64, 68, 208, 211, 247, 368
Einstein, Albert 162
Ellen, Mary 473
Ellingham, Lewis 210, 472
Elliot, Joe 565, 574
Ellis, Stephen 495, 519, 585, 587
England, Amy 66, 115, 472, 503
Erickson, Ann 341
Eshleman, Clayton 341
Evans, Bill 210
Featherston, Dan 51, 67, 91, 341
Ferguson, Jesse 25, 609
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 83
Finkelstein, Norman 242
Fisher, Allen 341
Fitterman, Robert 220, 242, 407
Fletcher, Sasha 341, 599
Fodaski, Elizabeth 341, 407
Foley, Patrick 293
Forbes, John 235
Forrest, Lisa 599
Foster, Edward 443
Foster, Paul 220, 341, 443
Foucault, Michel 220
Fox, Skip 242
France, Peter 50, 54, 173, 341, 406
Fraser, Ian 220, 223, 336
Fraser, Kathleen 14, 220, 245
Fraser, Simon 25, 339, 341
Frazer, Tony 341
Friedlander, Ben 588, 613
Frost, Elizabeth 242
Frost, Robert 492
Fuller, Heather 275
Fuller, William 51, 67
Gaines, Reg E. 242
Gann, Kyle 313, 314
Gardner, Drew 407
Gardner, Janet 451
Garland, Judy 445
Geraets, John 341
Gevirtz, Susan 220
Gibbons, Reginald 235
Gilbert, Susan 238, 241, 311, 341, 408
Ginsberg, Allen 136, 220, 223, 286, 288, 289, 293, 295, 297, 311, 313, 336, 395, 448
Gitin, David 430, 464, 483, 485
Gizzi, Michael 51, 220, 564
Gizzi, Peter 51, 67, 82, 200
Glancy, Diane 242
Gluck, Bob 564
Goldberg, Michael 592
Golding, Alan 242
Goldman, Emma 242, 407
Goldsmith, Kenneth 341
Gomez, Audrey 341
Gonzalez, Ray 235
Gottlieb, Michael 407
Gould, Glenn 15, 346

Graham, Jorie 158, 532
Greenwald, Ted 460
Gregg, Linda 220, 235
Grenier, Robert 448
Griffiths, Bill 471
Grossman, Pam 407
Gudath, Lauren 67
Guest, Barbara 200
Guitart, Jorge 51, 67
Guravich, Donald 451
Halle, Steve 341
Hansen, Jefferson 51, 67, 242, 275, 341
Harris, Kaplan 235
Hass, Robert 405, 411, 429, 430
Hatlen, Burt 318, 319
Healy, Randolph 59, 66, 192, 194, 474, 535, 544
Hejinian, Lyn 129, 143, 220, 349, 354, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430, 502, 564
Heman, Bob 15
Henri, Charles 341
Hernandez, Victor 242, 473
Higgins, Dick 51, 67
Hillman, Brenda 281
Hirsch, Edward 341
Hitchens, Christopher 291, 294, 301, 302
Hofer, Jen 242
Hollo, Anselm 220
Holmes, Janet 188
Homer 238, 241
Hoover, Paul 341
Howard, Richard 441
Howard, Scott 205, 220, 441, 516, 648
Howe, Susan 220, 493, 502
Huang, Yunte 242
Hughes, Peter 80, 103, 105, 111, 112, 117, 123, 294, 301
Hughes, Ted 80, 100, 103, 291, 294, 301, 302
Hunt, Erica 398, 405, 411, 429, 430, 464, 483
Hunt, Leigh 169, 208
Inman, Peter 51, 67
Irby, Kenneth 368
Israel, David R. 6, 11, 12, 37, 38, 49, 74, 87, 89, 90, 99, 104, 171, 267, 326, 343, 388, 395, 440, 466
Jackson, Jesse 91, 162, 238, 341, 398, 470
Jaeger, Peter 609
Jaffe, Larry 599
Jeanne, Sarah 341
Jenkins, Matthew 83
Jirgens, Karl 341, 609
Joans, Ted 28
Johns, Jasper 322
Johnson, Nicholas 471
Johnson, Robert 368, 502, 608, 614, 619, 620, 621
Jonas, Steve 210
Jones, David 242
Jordan, June 143, 179, 261, 460, 461, 499, 504, 519, 605, 606
Joseph, Safdie 23, 364, 372, 377, 436, 589, 608
Joyce, James 324, 458
Joyce, Trevor 324, 351, 362, 408, 409, 415, 416, 417, 432, 434, 458, 460, 614, 621
Kafka, Franz 220, 238, 241
Kalamaras, George 242
Katz, Eliot 242
Keats, John 93, 169, 172, 175, 208, 351, 395
Keckler, Joseph 341
Kelleher, Michael J. 588
Keller, Helen 220
Kelly, Patrick 51, 220
Kelly, Robert 51, 67, 502
Kelsey, Karla 220, 473
Kennedy, David 24
Kenner, Hugh 43, 327
Kermode, Frank 499
Kerouac, Jack 220, 392, 614
Killian, Kevin 51, 67, 179, 210, 355, 381, 472, 482, 495, 519, 572, 577, 641
Kimball, Cynthia 51, 67
Kinnell, Galway 83
Kinsella, John 502
Kinsella, Thomas 300, 303
Koch, Kenneth 460
Kocik, Robert 407
Kramer, Wendy 51, 67, 609
Kristeva, Julia 70
Kuchar, George 495
Kyger, Joanne 451, 457, 495, 519
Lacan, Jacques 70
Landers, Peter 341
Lang, Peter 644
Laurence, Paul 55, 242
Lauterbach, Ann 210, 407
Lease, Joseph 97, 108, 109
Leftwich, Jim 341, 582
Leonard, Tom 502
Levinas, Emmanuel 220
Levine, Jeffrey 242
Levy, Andrew 220, 341
Lew, Walter K. 242
Livingston, Ira 242
Lloyd, Warren 341
London, Frank 244, 256, 312, 334, 341, 407
London, Rick 564
Loney, Alan 341
Lopez, Tony 242, 471
Mac Low, Jackson 51, 67, 161, 162, 164, 168, 253, 405, 411, 429, 430
Lubeski, Lori 51, 67
Luther, Martin 593
Lynes, Katherine 242

Mackey, Nathaniel 220, 242, 341
Madrid, Anthony 262, 341
Mailer, Norman 150, 156, 157, 222
Malanga, Gerard 452
Mandel, Charlotte 318, 319
Mandelstam, Osip 184, 194, 254, 257
Manery, Rob 341
Manning, Nicholas 210
Marie, Anne 341
Marsh, Bill 235
Marshall, Robert 114, 242, 433, 437
Martin, Camille 113, 121, 242
Martin, Paul 480
Marvin, Lee 84
Mason, George 341
Mason, Janet 51, 67, 236, 339, 427
Mathews, Elizabeth 244, 256, 312
Matlin, David 281
Matlin, Sharon 134, 135, 138
Matthiessen, Peter 83
Maxwell, Andrew 341
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 378
Mayer, Bernadette 168, 200, 207
Mayer, Jane 90, 91, 100, 207
Maynard, James 28
McCaffery, Steve 65, 398, 405, 429, 498, 609
Melville, Nicky 238, 241
Menefee, Sarah 451
Meredith, William 11, 220, 350
Merrill, James 278, 463
Mesmer, Sharon 460
Messerli, Douglas 135, 147, 198, 201, 207, 220
Metcalf, Paul 411, 429, 430
Meyer, Steven 245
Michalski, David 242
Middleton, Christopher 502
Miki, Roy 25, 242
Miller, Paul D. 15, 51, 67
Mills, Billy 59, 544
Milton, John 294, 301, 392, 395, 398
Mittenthal, Robert 339
Molina, Joanne 127
Monroe, Harriet 100, 599
Moody, Rick 407
Moore, Allison 341
Morris, Dee 25
Morrow, Bradford 220
Morton, Kathryn A. 51, 67
Moses, Robert 499
Moxley, Jennifer 210, 220, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430, 471
Mullen, Harryette 25, 51, 67, 226, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430
Mura, David 242
Murphy, Michelle 427
Murphy, Paul 242
Murphy, Sheila 108, 109, 183, 582
Mycue, Edward 51, 67
Myles, Eileen 15, 220, 407
Napora, Joe 341, 582
Naylor, Paul 242
Negri, Toni 406
Neilson, Melanie 341, 407
Neruda, Pablo 172, 175, 185, 187, 215, 218
Newman, Denise 51, 67
Nicole, Anna 407
Nielsen, Aldon L. 82, 210, 275, 341, 620
Nolan, Kevin 471
Norman, Peter 341
Norton, John 114, 115, 336, 407, 643
Notely, Alice 515, 527
Notley, Alice 396, 519
Noto, John 341
Nowak, Mark 242, 341, 551
O'Hara, Frank 486
Obenzinger, Hilton 242
Olds, Sharon 349, 354
Oliver, John 473
Olsen, Lance 43
Olson, Kirby 220, 242, 339, 392, 395, 398, 519
Ondaatje, Michael 55
Oppen, George 83, 220, 222, 314, 315, 317, 318, 319, 320, 327, 328, 334, 396
Oppen, Mary 314, 320
Opstedal, Kevin 341, 451
Orwell, George 341
Osman, Jena 51, 67, 200, 220, 407, 526
Owens, Mark 341
Pacific, Asian 4, 81, 86, 407, 545, 549
Padgett, Ron 451
Padin, Clemente 323
Palmer, Michael 502
Park, Louis 341
Perelman, Bob 210, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430, 433, 437, 471, 569
Perkins, Stephen 205, 341
Perloff, Marjorie 220, 519
Peyrafitte, Nicole 407
Phillips, Beth 220
Pinsky, Robert 390, 393, 395, 398, 399, 401, 405, 409, 411, 417, 429, 430, 433, 434, 436, 437, 441, 442, 446, 449, 450, 463
Piombino, Nick 7, 13, 32, 36, 44, 220, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430
Portugal, Anne 341
Potter, Steve 15
Pound, Ezra 195, 242, 439, 465, 475, 493, 494, 496, 500, 502, 504, 526, 530, 535, 570, 573, 614, 621
Pound, Scott 609
Powell, Ren 427
Price, Michael 341, 451

Prince, Richard 20, 377
Pritchett, Patrick 39, 40, 42, 45, 49, 52, 53, 61, 473
Prize, Poets 129, 131, 137, 139, 140, 142, 144, 146, 150, 152, 153, 155, 156, 157, 165
Pruitt, Patricia 51, 67
Purcell, Greg 341
Quartermain, Peter 25, 220, 321, 350
Queneau, Raymond 238, 241
Quinn, Alice 242
Rabinowitz, Anna 341
Rakosi, Carl 334
Raphael, David 100
Ratcliffe, Stephen 220
Raworth, Tom 78, 339, 343, 407, 502
Reagan, Nancy 337
Reckin, Anna 242
Regan, Matthias 52, 53, 61, 91
Retallack, Joan 51, 67
Ridge, Cedar 341
Riley, Peter 66
Robertson, Lisa 407, 609
Robinson, Elizabeth 341
Robinson, Kit 430, 464, 483
Rodefer, Stephen 200, 499
Rose, Charlie 22, 161
Rosenfield, Kim 407
Rosenthal, Bob 143
Rosenthal, Chuck 143
Ross, Joe 275, 341
Ross, Stuart 341
Rothschild, Doug 460
Roubaud, Jacques 200
Sala, Jerome 407
Salerno, Mark 341
Sanchez, Jorge 242, 473, 583
Scalapino, Leslie 15, 51, 67, 220, 339, 378, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430, 564
Scheffel, Bill 473
Schelling, Andrew 242
Schultz, Lou 341, 545, 549
Schultz, Susan M. 478
Schuyler, James 83, 261
Schwerner, Armand 242, 411, 429, 430, 502
Searle, John 269
Seaton, Maureen 235
Shakespeare, William 2, 3, 351, 395
Shapiro, David 97, 108, 109, 168
Sharma, Prageeta 200
Shaviro, Steven 339
Sheerman, Lucy 471
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 169, 208, 351, 395
Sheppard, Robert 341
Sherman, Cindy 608
Sherwood, Kenneth 242
Shihab, Naomi 405, 411, 429
Shurin, Aaron 220, 355, 564
Sikelianos, Eleni 200
Silliman, Ron 34, 147, 210, 275, 296, 319, 349, 354, 381, 396, 398, 405, 411, 429, 430, 431, 433, 435, 437, 464, 483, 485
Simon, Greg 336, 471
Simone, Frank 235, 564
Sloan, Margaret 51, 67, 564
Smith, Harry 220, 242, 609
Smith, Rod 200, 202, 341
Snell, Roger 473
Snyder, Gary 242
Snyder, Rick 100
Solomon, Carl 242
Sorrentino, Christopher 220
Spahr, Boyd 51, 210, 220
Spandrift, Jack 96, 346, 463, 532
Sparrow, John 172, 175, 220, 332, 396, 407
Spicer, Jack 210, 332, 381, 411, 429, 430, 433, 472
Spicer, John 179, 210, 381, 430, 437
Spinelli, Martin 242
Sprague, Jane 341
Stanley, George 55
Stanton, Rob 460
Stecopoulos, Eleni 242
Stefans, Kim 341, 407
Stein, Gertrude 36, 44, 220, 281, 322, 396, 484, 493, 494, 497, 498, 499, 511, 515, 526, 527, 547, 573, 614, 616, 618, 619, 620, 621, 623
Steinberg, Nicole 497, 564
Stevens, Wallace 321, 326, 335, 337, 346, 347, 499, 535
Strang, Brian 220
Stroffolino, Chris 210, 480
Sullivan, Andrew 341
Sward, Robert 282
Swensen, Cole 220, 407
Taylor, James 502
Taylor, Tom 480, 516
Tejada, Roberto 341
Templeton, Fiona 200, 220, 407, 471
Terry, Philip 83, 390, 399, 441
Texas, Irving 552, 579, 589, 648
Thesen, Sharon 69
Thomas, Dylan 200, 235, 242, 341
Thomson, Stephen 445
Timmons, Matt 538
Tobin, Adam 235
Toklas, Alice B. 460
Toscano, Rodrigo 564, 583
Trevor, Jesse 46, 125
Tribune, Chicago 606
Tucker, Aaron 592
Tuttle, Bill 51, 67
Twain, Mark 377
Tysh, Chris 51, 67

Vangelisti, Paul 220, 341
Vaughan, Sarah 118
Vendler, Helen 463
Vincent, Gregory 341
Virilio, Paul 220
Vitiello, Chris 51, 67
Vizenor, Gerald 592
Vogen, David 460
Wagner, Catherine 235
Waldrop, Keith 51, 67
Waldrop, Rosemary 36, 44, 51, 502
Waldrop, Rosmarie 36, 44, 67, 200, 210, 220
Walker, Laura 242
Wallace, Nicole 83, 109, 220, 275, 335
Walsh, Catherine 59, 66, 535, 568, 569, 573
Warren, Kenneth 341
Washington, George 70, 341, 349, 354, 390
Watson, Scott 341
Watten, Barrett 167, 220, 510
Wayne, John 608
Weber, Damian 341
Webster, Noah 205
Weiner, Hannah 51, 67, 134, 135, 136, 138, 141, 143, 145, 147, 148, 149, 151, 154, 198, 201, 202, 205, 206, 213, 262, 263, 354, 535, 615
Weiner, Lawrence 136, 151, 205, 349
Weiss, Irving 183
Weiss, Jason 159, 161
Wellman, Donald 220, 407
Welsh, Lawrence 118
Wentworth, Don 341
Whalen, Philip 451, 457, 495, 515, 527
Whitehead, Ron 616, 618
Wiener, Hannah 199
Wilkinson, John 471
Williams, Paul O. 118, 188, 194, 535
Willis, Elizabeth 51, 67, 220, 564
Woolf, Virginia 498, 577
Wordsworth, William 93, 114, 115, 118, 301, 331, 353
Wright, C. D. 341, 614, 619, 620, 621
Wright, John 242
Wright, Richard 614, 621
Yackulic, William 396
Zimmerman, Dan 54, 181, 377, 519, 604
Zukofsky, Louis 36, 44, 220
Zweig, Ellen 197
Zweig, Janet 51, 67

CONCEPTS

9/11 137
Activism and protest 112, 117, 123, 205, 473
Aesthetics 443, 475, 477, 478, 488, 490, 491, 496, 498, 500, 501, 504, 505, 508, 511, 512, 524, 525, 526, 527, 530, 532, 534, 536, 547, 548, 550, 551, 571, 572, 601, 617, 622, 624, 636, 639
African American poetry 242, 508, 516, 620
Anthologies 70, 96, 114, 115, 192, 207, 244, 256, 331, 351, 353, 371, 407, 457, 461, 524, 525, 565, 574, 591, 643, 644
Appropriation 94, 96, 151, 153, 242, 356, 406, 420, 423, 452, 508, 522
Archives and libraries 1, 55, 81, 83, 139, 140, 142, 146, 152, 153, 306, 341, 376, 383, 384, 386, 397, 430, 460, 509, 526, 620
Asian American poetry 242
Autobiography 91, 124, 198, 201, 314, 322
Avant-garde 7, 13, 32, 36, 44, 184, 344, 503, 509, 571
Beauty 59, 81, 100, 172, 175, 259, 268, 379, 460, 499, 502, 524, 525, 561, 576, 626, 629
Biography 210, 220, 238, 241, 314, 400, 415, 416, 472
Black Mountain 468, 469, 475, 526
Book announcements 15, 51, 67, 183, 281, 346, 351, 371, 407, 424, 564, 577, 592, 599
Bookstores 51, 66, 67, 83, 312, 319, 473, 489, 524, 525, 586, 620
Calls for submissions 323, 453
Capitalism 535, 606
Censorship 20, 39, 45, 370, 385, 422
Cities 344, 349, 354, 360, 366, 368, 451, 539
Class 524, 563, 565, 571, 574, 578, 579, 583, 584, 585, 587, 591, 592, 595, 633, 634
Collage and montage 242, 262
Conferences and festivals 70, 93, 128, 163, 164, 242, 269, 435, 453, 472, 521, 523, 524, 525, 527, 549
Copyright and permissions 118, 173, 269, 418, 461
Craft 240
Creative writing pedagogy 130, 179, 180, 181, 191, 216, 238, 240, 242, 254, 257, 269
Dada 341, 395
Deconstruction 70
Difficulty 299, 367, 527, 573
Digital archives 341
Dreams 58, 81, 172, 175, 220, 291, 294, 295, 301, 302, 311, 502
Ecology and ecopoetics 473
Editing 50, 54, 341, 351, 369, 470, 475, 476, 481, 495, 505, 508, 519, 526, 532, 540, 545, 546, 549, 565, 570, 572, 574, 629
Electronic poetry and hypertext 25, 91, 97, 127, 134, 135, 138, 210, 263, 296, 319, 341, 356, 381, 407, 414, 420, 423, 424, 430, 431, 435, 445, 454, 470, 478, 479, 485, 509, 519, 545, 549
Empire and imperialism 407, 481, 563, 599
Erasure 140, 142, 146, 152, 153, 242
Ethics 242
Experimental poetry 341, 514, 526
Fascism 406, 445, 514, 524, 525, 617, 622

Feminism 242, 321, 521, 523, 524, 525, 561, 565, 570, 574, 579, 614
Film 11, 20, 39, 45, 50, 51, 54, 67, 70, 218, 242, 313, 326, 360, 366, 398, 406, 407, 539, 554, 597
Fluxus 94
Formalism 36, 44, 442
Free verse 100, 535
Futurism 94, 341
Gender 131, 139, 143, 146, 152, 242, 475, 481, 486, 488, 497, 501, 508, 511, 515, 520, 522, 526, 527, 546, 553, 556, 557, 558, 567, 573, 601, 610, 617, 623, 631, 633, 634
Ghazal 395
Grants and funding 51, 67, 281, 359, 396, 407, 422, 473, 475, 526, 545, 549, 553, 556, 557, 579, 608, 633, 634
Haiku 341, 342
Harlem Renaissance 242
Homophonic translation 51, 67, 172, 175, 177
Humour and satire 24, 92, 104, 275, 293, 415, 416, 432, 601, 617
Identity politics 508
Ideology 218, 220, 223, 242, 323
Imagism 535
Indigenous and Native poetics 25, 205, 242, 587, 593, 621
Interviews 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 17, 22, 23, 25, 34, 35, 65, 91, 100, 134, 135, 138, 242, 318, 319, 327, 390, 399, 405, 407, 411, 429, 430, 448, 451, 469, 470, 475, 503, 509, 647, 649
Israel and Palestine 6, 11, 12, 37, 38, 49, 52, 53, 61, 74, 87, 89, 90, 98, 99, 100, 104, 171, 267, 281, 326, 343, 388, 395, 397, 440, 466, 519, 552
Jewish poetics 218, 242
Language poetry 167, 188, 220, 396, 441, 443, 498, 501, 503, 509, 510, 530, 601, 617, 633, 634
Latino and Latin American poetry 242, 323, 341, 371, 524, 525, 545, 549, 648
Letters and correspondence 25, 93, 104, 299, 340, 342, 356, 361, 380, 387, 418, 476, 627
List moderation 81, 220, 242, 301, 395, 418, 438, 454, 607
Little magazines 1, 51, 67, 127, 134, 135, 138, 143, 151, 172, 175, 198, 201, 210, 232, 235, 262, 282, 341, 344, 407, 418, 435, 443, 468, 469, 475, 480, 481, 495, 497, 498, 502, 505, 515, 516, 519, 521, 523, 524, 525, 526, 537, 545, 546, 549, 552, 565, 574, 576, 579, 582, 583, 598, 601, 615, 617, 634, 642, 643, 644
Lyric poetry 100, 103, 105, 106, 242, 245, 341, 535, 601, 617, 622
Marxism 510, 622
Materiality of the text 223, 242
Memory 20, 49, 58, 63, 68, 87, 136, 198, 201, 226, 238, 241, 242, 315, 318, 319, 320, 408, 441, 494, 539, 540, 550, 577, 591
MFA programs 83, 88, 473, 521, 523, 525, 571
Modernism 94, 103, 105, 195, 220, 223, 321, 324, 325, 326, 333, 335, 337, 346, 351, 360, 362, 366, 505, 515, 617, 620, 622, 630
Mourning and loss 39, 45, 81, 101, 103, 145, 147, 161, 210, 238, 241, 242, 262, 263, 341, 435, 535, 540, 545, 549, 629
Multiculturalism 242, 514, 592
Music and poetry 51, 64, 67, 68, 83, 100, 103, 105, 124, 159, 167, 172, 175, 176, 185, 187, 198, 201, 215, 220, 242, 251, 254, 257, 260, 275, 281, 282, 311, 313, 314, 320, 326, 339, 360, 366, 399, 430, 483, 515, 541, 619
Nationalism 445
Nature 3, 13, 32, 36, 44, 91, 93, 134, 135, 138, 344, 349, 354, 370, 406, 424, 435, 441, 445, 473, 532, 542, 543, 601, 617
Negativity and refusal 356, 478, 491, 524, 525, 579, 647, 649
New York School 51, 67, 461, 462
Obituary and memorial 134, 135, 138, 145, 431, 435
Objectivism 535, 573
Oulipo 173, 226, 238, 241, 244, 256, 312, 489
Performance and the poetry reading 56, 143, 390, 407, 441, 450, 471, 473, 498, 564, 579, 614, 621
Philosophy 11, 35, 406, 495, 601, 617
Place and region 31, 51, 62, 67, 81, 280, 354, 535, 544, 562
Poet laureate 281, 294, 301, 396, 405, 411, 429, 430, 433, 437
Poetics 6, 15, 42, 60, 62, 89, 90, 94, 98, 119, 128, 139, 146, 152, 156, 157, 159, 160, 161, 196, 210, 220, 222, 242, 251, 282, 283, 287, 306, 314, 319, 329, 332, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 347, 348, 349, 354, 356, 360, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 376, 380, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 397, 400, 418, 420, 423, 424, 433, 437, 445, 450, 475, 476, 477, 490, 495, 498, 502, 505, 515, 526, 527, 535, 539, 545, 549, 564, 565, 574, 582, 591, 601, 614, 617, 620, 629, 634, 644
Politics and poetry 532
Postmodernism 94, 630
Print vs. digital 1, 13, 32, 36, 55, 89, 94, 134, 135, 138, 179, 220, 231, 238, 241, 341, 355, 370, 398, 433, 437, 443, 535, 552, 571, 614, 615, 621

Prizes and awards 83, 129, 131, 137, 139, 140, 142, 143, 144, 146, 150, 152, 153, 155, 156, 157, 158, 165, 172, 175, 222, 226, 281, 396, 407, 473, 579
Procedural and constraint writing 67, 401, 409, 446, 449
Prose poem 82
Prosody and meter 33, 38, 92, 172, 175, 395, 535, 554, 601, 617
Psychoanalysis 406, 615
Queer poetics 83, 101, 189, 443, 473, 510, 559, 561, 610, 614, 616, 618, 621, 623, 631
Race and poetry 159, 173, 242, 475, 481, 486, 488, 501, 508, 511, 515, 520, 521, 522, 523, 526, 553, 556, 557, 561, 567, 576, 579, 585, 587, 592, 593, 596, 601, 602, 610, 617, 620, 623, 631, 648
Reading announcements 143, 235, 242, 339, 375, 396, 461, 544
Religion and the sacred 218, 220, 242, 267, 288, 378, 406, 435, 441, 463, 473, 515, 516, 520, 522, 587, 589, 599, 609, 633, 634, 648
Representation 242, 573
Reviewing and criticism 1, 12, 22, 36, 43, 44, 82, 83, 100, 202, 207, 242, 251, 255, 272, 313, 314, 324, 341, 357, 358, 418, 460, 472, 519, 520, 522, 526, 534, 545, 549, 552, 554, 568, 615, 636, 639
Revision 114, 115, 167, 330
Romanticism 36, 44
Science 180, 181, 194, 393, 399, 401, 406, 552, 562
Semiotics 55, 57
Serial poem 69, 180, 181, 220
Small press publishing 77, 83, 129, 143, 206, 378, 396, 407, 471, 472, 473, 477, 483, 485, 490, 524, 525, 533, 564, 565, 574, 579, 598, 615, 624, 633, 634, 641
Software and code 91, 385, 397, 422
Sonnet 12, 22, 169, 173, 208, 226
Sound poetry 554
Subjectivity 83, 114, 115, 139, 140, 142, 146, 152, 153, 161, 182, 278, 340, 342, 431, 435
Sublime 100, 106, 433, 437
Surrealism 94, 220
Terrorism 33, 38, 281, 406, 554
The academy 1, 14, 17, 25, 36, 40, 44, 64, 68, 103, 105, 195, 208, 211, 242, 245, 247, 278, 281, 300, 303, 322, 323, 327, 339, 341, 344, 352, 354, 368, 391, 404, 406, 432, 437, 439, 451, 465, 472, 473, 475, 478, 488, 498, 502, 503, 524, 525, 526, 532, 535, 546, 565, 570, 574, 577, 591, 600, 601, 617, 623
The body 268, 278, 363, 441, 601, 648
The canon 36, 44, 146, 152, 277
The Gulf War 564, 599, 608
The internet 64, 68, 251, 269, 278, 299, 312, 340, 342, 356, 361, 364, 370, 372, 376, 377, 397, 407, 418, 420, 423, 441, 446, 472, 482, 533, 540, 545, 549
The line 134, 135, 138, 194, 407, 483
The listserv 8, 9, 10, 11, 43, 52, 53, 55, 61, 77, 78, 88, 89, 91, 93, 97, 120, 162, 166, 216, 226, 245, 283, 287, 297, 306, 308, 309, 321, 328, 334, 340, 342, 344, 345, 349, 354, 356, 361, 363, 367, 376, 377, 379, 387, 388, 397, 398, 400, 403, 404, 410, 412, 414, 418, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 433, 437, 438, 445, 454, 462, 474, 475, 476, 494, 495, 496, 497, 499, 500, 504, 515, 519, 526, 527, 530, 535, 543, 546, 557, 564, 576, 586, 614, 619, 621, 629, 633, 634, 640
The New Sentence 34
Theatre 35, 48, 50, 54, 101, 220, 235, 242, 254, 257, 378, 471, 473, 487, 510, 565, 574
Translation 7, 13, 32, 36, 51, 67, 87, 100, 101, 102, 103, 105, 106, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 123, 142, 146, 152, 153, 168, 172, 175, 238, 241, 242, 245, 281, 282, 316, 390, 407, 439, 441, 460, 473, 480, 488, 502, 524, 525
Vietnam 488, 506, 507, 524, 525, 608
Visual and concrete poetry 341
Visual art 94, 167, 190, 210, 242, 281, 360, 366, 407, 588, 613
Women's writing 77, 129, 142, 146, 152, 153, 242, 271, 498, 517, 521, 523, 573, 591, 645

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 649 in all.

1 SEP 1997

1. Fred Muratori — (no subject)
2. David Bromige — The Calculation
3. Red Slider — Re: The Calculation
4. Dean A. Brink — Re: JavaPoetry
5. David Bromige — Dean Brink administers a rebuke, or a misplaced gratitude?

2 SEP 1997

6. David R. Israel — Re: Dean Brink administers a rebuke, or a misplaced gratitude?
7. Thomas Bell — Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
8. Hugh Steinberg — Interviews
9. mark weiss — Re: Interviews
10. Pierre Joris — Re: Interviews
11. David R. Israel — Re: Interviews
12. David R. Israel — Re: Interviews
13. Henry Gould — Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
14. Douglas Barbour — Re: And of course the times we live in explain it all
15. Henry Gould — publ. announcement
16. Christopher Alexander — Re: 'Pataphysics
17. Timothy Materer — Another general question: paparazzi
18. Maria Damon — diacccritix
19. Red Slider — of Chessgames and Princesses
20. David Bromige — my father among the earlier paparazzi?
21. David Bromige — which david has the message?
22. mark weiss — Re: Interviews
23. Joseph S Zitt — Re: Interviews
24. Don Cheney — Re: my father among the earlier paparazzi?
25. Tenney Nathanson — Re: BOO
26. George Bowering — Re: my father among the earlier paparazzi?
27. George Bowering — Re: which david has the message?
28. Juliana Spahr — ted joans address
29. Lawrence Upton. — David B
30. mark weiss — my previous message
31. Red Slider — Re: my father among the earlier paparazzi?
32. Thomas Bell — Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde

3 SEP 1997

33. joel lewis — Devotion to the arts
34. aerialedge — Re: Interviews
35. Hugh Steinberg — Re: Interviews
36. henry g — Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
37. David R. Israel — Re: which david has the message?
38. David R. Israel — Re: Devotion to the arts
39. Pritchett,Pat — Re: my father among the earlier paparazz
40. Judy Roitman — Re: my father among the earlier paparazz
41. Maria Damon — address query
42. Pritchett,Pat — Re: my father among the earlier paparazz
43. aldon l. nielsen — (no subject)
44. Thomas Bell — Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
45. Hugh Steinberg — Re: my father among the earlier paparazz

4 SEP 1997

46. Karen and Trevor — address search

47. George Bowering — Re: which david has the message?
48. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
49. David R. Israel — shadows cast
50. mark weiss — (no subject)
51. Juliana Spahr — Chain / 4 now available
52. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Free Cuisine
53. Don Cheney — Re: Free Cuisine
54. Daniel Zimmerman — (no subject)

5 SEP 1997

55. David Bromige — the signifier known as george bowering / which david has the message
56. lee ann brown — Scully & Healey reading--9/6, NYC
57. George Bowering — Re: the signifier known as george bowering / which david has the message
58. David Bromige — big end versus little end
59. Henry G — I toddled to a reading
60. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Free Cuisine
61. William Marsh — Re: Free Cuisine
62. David Bromige — Ass backwards--apologies
63. john_lavagnino — Re: Ass backwards--apologies
64. Judy Roitman — Re: Free Cuisinart
65. Christopher Reiner — Re: Interviews
66. Keith Tuma — Re: I toddled to a reading
67. Lawrence Upton. — Re: Chain / 4 now available
68. red slider — Re: Free Cuisinart
69. George Bowering — Re: big end versus little end
70. Susan Wheeler — French Theory in America events
71. George Bowering — Re: Ass backwards--apologies
72. mark weiss — Re: Ass backwards--apologies
73. red slider — Re: Ass backwards--notes from the pointy-end
74. David R. Israel — Re: Ass backwards--apologies

6 SEP 1997

75. Ryan Whyte — Hiroshma m a 1997
76. aldon l. nielsen — (no subject)
77. Peter Ganick — computer woes and potes & poets and ZINEFOUR
78. Herb Levy — Subtext Seattle reading change
79. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)

7 SEP 1997

80. Rachel Loden — pome
81. robintm — Re: computer woes and potes & poets and ZINEFOUR

8 SEP 1997

82. Jack Foley — Poetry at WebDelSol
83. dbkk — Small Press Traffic's literary soiree
84. robert drake — new releases from burning press
85. Alan Jen Sondheim — upon their return

9 SEP 1997

86. red slider — Re: upon their return
87. David R. Israel — a poem of Han-Shan's
88. Hoa Nguyen — Writing experiments
89. David R. Israel — Re: Writing experiments
90. Carol Mirakove — Re: Writing experiments
91. Christopher Alexander — Re: Writing experiments
92. red slider — Re: Writing experiments
93. william marsh — Re: Writing experiments / collaboration / agony

94. Steven Clay — Drucker on artists' books
95. red slider — Re: Writing experiments

10 SEP 1997

96. Henry Gould — writing experiment
97. Mark Wallace — Misc. Proj.
98. Susan Wheeler — a poem of Han-Shan's/Poetics Digest
99. David R. Israel — b.t.w.
100. rob wilson — Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
101. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
102. Brian McHale — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
103. Timothy Materer — 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
104. red slider — Re: Badtimes Sampler
105. red slider — Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
106. Don Cheney — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin/Mounds Bar Connection
107. red slider — still at large
108. Mark Prejsnar — Misc. Proj, missed projection mess process
109. p. durgin — Re: Misc. Proj, missed projection mess process
110. Christopher Reiner — Re: Misc. Proj, missed projection mess process
111. Eliza McGrand — Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
112. Don Cheney — Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
113. red slider — Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility
114. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
115. rob wilson — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
116. Henry Gould — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
117. red slider — Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/BernieTaupin
118. Lawrence Upton. — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
119. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
120. Charles Bernstein — Ear at HERE
121. Thomas Bell — Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility

11 SEP 1997

122. red slider — Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility
123. George Bowering — Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
124. Alan Jen Sondheim — (from Jennifer)
125. Karen and Trevor — RON SILLIMAN
126. David Bromige — The Marginalization of Poetry
127. Mark Wallace — mutual plugs
128. acgold01 — Twentieth-Century Literature Conference
129. Charles Bernstein — Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
130. Maria Damon — Re: mutual plugs
131. red slider — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
132. Thomas Bell — Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility

12 SEP 1997

133. Alan Jen Sondheim — Love Among the Internauts (part contribution by Jennifer)
134. Charles Bernstein — Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
135. Douglas — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
136. Charles Alexander — Re: ps to "Hannah Weiner"
137. Maria Damon — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
138. Maria Damon — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
139. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997 — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
140. Eliza McGrand — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
141. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
142. mark weiss — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
143. Jordan Davis — Mission of Burma reissues rule
144. Eliza McGrand — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

145. Christopher Alexander — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
146. red slider — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
147. David Bromige — Hannah Weiner
148. Charles Bernstein — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
149. David Bromige — ps to "Hannah Weiner"
150. mark weiss — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
151. Jacques Debrot — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
152. mark weiss — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
153. Thomas Bell — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
154. Keith Tuma — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
155. aldon l. nielsen — (no subject)
156. red slider — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
157. mark weiss — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
158. Christopher Alexander — (fwd) Contest Announcement
159. red slider — Re: Weiss Contest - query
160. Rebecca Weldon — other channels
161. joel kuszai — Re: Weiss Contest - query
162. David Bromige — jackson Mac Low
163. James Finnegan — Re: Writing exercises

13 SEP 1997

164. charles alexander — Re: Writing exercises
165. Maria Damon — Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
166. Suzanne Burns — Re: Writing exercises
167. rsillima — Hannah
168. Jordan Davis — great words, extra credit
169. Bob Grumman — Re: Writing exercises
170. Michael Heller — (no subject)
171. David R. Israel — Re: (fwd) Contest Announcement
172. David Bromige — writing exercises
173. David Bromige — Re: [sonnet] constitution/ writing exercises
174. Maria Damon — (no subject)
175. red slider — Re: writing exercises
176. James Finnegan — Re: writing exercises
177. Daniel Zimmerman — phony homophony
178. Lawrence Upton. — Re: writing exercises
179. Jordan Davis — requiem for pedagogy / spicer teaser
180. henry gould — Re: writing exercises
181. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: writing exercises
182. Layne Russell — Re: writing exercises
183. Bob Grumman — Re: writing exercises (and an ANNOUNCEMENT)
184. henry g — tech tach toe
185. Rebecca Weldon — A Song of Despair

14 SEP 1997

186. David Bromige — writing exercises
187. red slider — Re: A Song of Despair
188. red slider — Re: writing exercises - derived works
189. Mark Baker — Re: Unprosing
190. red slider — Re: writing exercises - on employment
191. aerialedge — Re: requiem for pedagogy / spicer teaser
192. L.MacMahon and T.R.Healy — writing exercises
193. Schuchat Simon — Re: writing exercises
194. Bob Grumman — Re: Unprosing & Tech Tach Toe
195. Sylvester Pollet — fwd on modernism
196. Susan Wheeler — Poetics Digest/Exercises
197. Alaric Sumner — email addresses

198. Douglas — Hannah Weiner
199. Tom Mandel — Hannah Wiener
200. jarnot — Poetry Project Readings, Fall 97
201. red slider — Re: Hannah Weiner
202. aerialedge — remembered sequel
203. Celia M White — Re: writing ex.
204. Maria Damon — Re: email addresses
205. Hank Lazer — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
206. Peter Ganick — Hannah Weiner publications-----
207. Douglas — Bernadette Mayer
208. Judy Roitman — Re: Writing exercises
209. Mark Baker — Re: Unprosing Exercise
210. Steve Evans — ILS 7: Ellingham/Killian on Spicer
211. Judy Roitman — Re: writing ex.
212. charles alexander — Re: Hannah Wiener's Last Book
213. red slider — Question about Hannah Weiner
214. red slider — Re: Unprosing Exercise
215. Thomas Bell — Re: A Song of Despair
216. henry gould — Re: writing exercises
217. James Sherry — Hannah Wiener's Last Book
218. henry gould — Re: writing exercises
219. James Sherry — Hannah Weiner's Last Book

15 SEP 1997

220. aerialedge — NEW Davidson, Debord, Fraser, Ginsberg, Levy &&& @ Bridge Street
221. rsillima — Thank you, Douglas
222. Layne Russell — POETICS: reading
223. Maria Damon — Re: NEW Davidson, Debord, Fraser, Ginsberg, Levy &&& @ Bridge Street
224. Douglas — Re: Thank you, Douglas
225. Burt Kimmelman — tandy sturgeon
226. Hoa Nguyen — Writing experiments
227. hnry gould — Re: Writing experiments
228. Hoa Nguyen — Re: Writing experiments
229. charles alexander — Re: Writing experiments
230. Peter Ganick — Re: Writing experiments
231. Peter Ganick — yoko ono
232. Layne Russell — Re: JackLeg #3
233. James Finnegan — Re: Writing experiments

16 SEP 1997

234. red slider — Re: Writing experiments
235. Hugh Steinberg — JackLeg #3
236. David Bromige — reading in seattle
237. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
238. Miles Champion — Re: writing exercises
239. henry — Re: Writing experiments
240. henry — Re: writing exercises
241. Maria Damon — Re: writing exercises
242. Maria Damon — xcp conference schedule
243. Dean Taciuch — Re: writing exercises
244. robert drake — Re: Writing experiments
245. Douglas Barbour — Re: Writing experiments
246. Layne Russell — Re: writing exercises
247. Judy Roitman — Re: Writing experiments
248. James Finnegan — Re: writing exercises
249. Scott Keeney — Re: writing exercises
250. Eliza McGrand — compuslave

251. Eliza McGrand — the REAL TRUTH about the Free Cuisinart and web site
252. Jordan Davis — add ress
253. Christopher Alexander — (belated)birthdaycard for Jackson Mac Low
254. Henry Gould — more exercise
255. Robert Hale — QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS
256. Thomas Bell — Re: Writing experiments
257. red slider — Re: more exercise
258. mark weiss — Re: writing exercises
259. Mark Baker — Re: writing exercises
260. red slider — a little poem
261. Jordan Davis — utter apothegms
262. Loss Pequen~o Glazier — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
263. Loss Pequen~o Glazier — Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)

17 SEP 1997

264. Markus Foutu — Re: QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS
265. Alan Jen Sondheim — From Jennifer with ALL the obvious excuses...
266. Alan Jen Sondheim — Jennifer's Ponder
267. David R. Israel — Re: compuslave
268. Alan Jen Sondheim — ATTACK on a POEM by WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS
269. red slider — The Poemercise
270. Hugh Steinberg — Re: more exercise
271. Peter Ganick — announce POTEPOETZINEFOUR
272. henry g — ashbery/theroux article
273. Rebecca Reynolds — Re: living exercises
274. Mark W Scroggins — Re: living exercises
275. aerialedge — New Mark Wallace & special offer from Edge Books
276. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997 — Re: QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS
277. Robert Archambeau — Auden
278. Timothy Materer — James Merrill Discussion Forum
279. aldon l. nielsen — (no subject)
280. hg — Re: living exercises
281. Stephen Cope — New Writing Series in San Diego
282. William Slaughter — Mudlark

18 SEP 1997

283. Mark Baker — Re: living exercises
284. Markus Foutu — Re: QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS
285. Layne Russell — Re: more exercise
286. rob wilson — I had my chance and lost it
287. Maria Damon — Re: living exercises
288. jarnot — Re: I had my chance and lost it
289. ark E Peter — Re: I had my chance and lost it
290. henry g — Re: I had my chance and lost it -Reply
291. Rachel Loden — writing exercises of the glib & laureled
292. Laura Mullen — Re: writing exercises
293. Jack Foley — I had my chance and lost it -Reply
294. Mark W Scroggins — Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
295. Gwyn McVay — Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
296. rsillima — Yo, Susan Clark!!
297. Burt Kimmelman — Ginsberg a la N Y Times
298. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: writing exercises
299. Lawrence Upton. — Fw: Compuserve
300. David Kellogg — Chain
301. mark weiss — Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
302. red slider — Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
303. p. durgin — Re: Chain

304. Maria Damon — Re: more exercise
305. Maria Damon — Re: Chain
306. Christopher Alexander — Re: Chain rxn
307. Alan Jen Sondheim — (no subject)
308. Wystan Curnow — Re: living exercises
309. Mark Baker — Re: living exercises
310. Maria Damon — (no subject)

19 SEP 1997

311. Rachel Loden — Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
312. Jim Rosenberg — Re: Writing experiments
313. aldon l. nielsen — (no subject)
314. Herb Levy — Re: Nancarrow/Oppen: great companions or mere pals?
315. aerialedge — Re: Noncarrow and Oppen
316. simon — polish poets
317. Burt Kimmelman — Noncarrow and Oppen
318. Stephen Cope — Re: Noncarrow and Oppen

20 SEP 1997

319. rsillima — Oppen, Nancarrow, Mexico
320. Michael Heller — Oppen/Nancarrow
321. Herb Levy — Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
322. Jennifer Ashton — Gertrude Stein's Rose
323. Peter Ganick — concerning mail art
324. Steven Marks — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
325. Burt Kimmelman — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors

21 SEP 1997

326. David R. Israel — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
327. Tom Mandel — Oppen's years away
328. Steven Marks — Re: Oppen's years away
329. William Marsh — writing about writing
330. Stacie Slotnick — Re: writing about writing
331. Carl Lynden Peters — Re: writing about writing
332. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: writing about writing
333. Lisa Samuels — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
334. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
335. Schuchat Simon — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
336. Schuchat Simon — Re: NEW Davidson, Debord, Fraser, Ginsberg, Levy &&& @ Bridge Street
337. George Bowering — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
338. Rachel Levitsky — Argentine Spanish?
339. Brian Carpenter — subtext w/ Bromige & Blaser

22 SEP 1997

340. [redacted]
341. Spencer Selby — Exp Mag List # 50
342. [redacted]
343. David R. Israel — Re: subtext w/ Bromige & Blaser
344. Miekal And — Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
345. Layne Russell — Re: Red's "86"
346. henry — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
347. Bob Grotjohn — Re: writing about writing
348. Layne Russell — Re: Red's "86"
349. Laurie Schneider/Crag Hill — Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
350. Charles Bernstein — Peter Quatermain's new address
351. john_lavagnino — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors

352. Miekal And — online resources, eh?
353. Maria Damon — Re: writing about writing
354. p. durgin — Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
355. joel kuszai — New from Meow Press
356. Layne Russell — Re: confusion/Red's 86
357. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997 — Re: your mail
358. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997 — Re: your mail
359. Christopher Alexander — (Fwd) Project Artsvote
360. Mark Prejsnar — Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
361. Layne Russell — Re: confusion/Red's 86
362. Burt Kimmelman — Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
363. [redacted]
364. Joseph S Zitt — Re: Red's "86"
365. dbkk — Re: Red's "86"
366. mark weiss — Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
367. Thomas Bell — Re: Red's "86"
368. Judy Roitman — Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
369. Reuben Radding — Re: Red's "86"
370. Alan Jen Sondheim — The Doctor
371. aldon l. nielsen — (no subject)
372. dbkk — Re: Red's "86"
373. Lawrence Upton. — Re: online resources, eh?
374. Rachel Loden — query
375. David Bromige — reading at SPT/New College, Oct 3
376. David Golumbia — Re: confusion/Red's 86
377. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: Red's "86"

23 SEP 1997

378. dbkk — Torres/Scalapino at SPT
379. David Bromige — readers' versions of great lit
380. Spencer Selby — RADDLE MOON 's new address (fwd)
381. rsillima — Impercipient Spicer Bio
382. Eliza McGrand — Re: online resources, eh?
383. Layne Russell — Re: Red Slider
384. Layne Russell — Re: Red Slider
385. Eliza McGrand — uniform standards and passionate unique
386. Layne Russell — Re: Red Slider' url
387. Dean Taciuch — Re: confusion/Red's 86 (fwd)
388. David R. Israel — Re: confusion/Red's 86 (fwd)
389. Layne Russell — Re: Red Slider's url p.s.
390. Carol Mirakove — Pinsky on NPR
391. Jack Foley — online resources, eh? -Reply
392. James Finnegan — Re: readers' versions of great lit
393. henry g — Re: Pinsky on NPR
394. Burt Kimmelman — Re: readers' versions of great lit
395. David R. Israel — riffing (re: readers' versions of great lit)
396. dbkk — Re: reading at SPT/New College, Oct 3
397. Christopher Alexander — Re: confusion/Red's 86 (fwd)
398. David Bromige — divers (red 86'd; Pinsky on NPR; readers' versions)
399. Christopher Alexander — Re: Pinsky on NPR
400. Herb Levy — Red Slider
401. p. durgin — Re: Pinsky on NPR
402. p. durgin — Re: Red Slider
403. Christopher Alexander — Re: readers' versions of great lit
404. Timothy Materer — trangression?
405. Carol Mirakove — Re: Pinsky on NPR

406. matt — antonio negri
407. Charles Bernstein — HERE Poetry Readings (NYC)
408. mark weiss — Readers' versions of great lit
409. henry — Re: Pinsky on NPR
410. David Bromige — The Document of Concern in the Case of Red Slider 86'd
411. mark weiss — Re: Pinsky on NPR
412. Christopher Alexander — LeCercle/liberation
413. Spencer Selby — list feedback
414. red slider — The Left-field Bleachers
415. Brian Carpenter — Re: Readers' versions of great lit
416. mark weiss — Re: Readers' versions of great lit
417. p. durgin — Re: Pinsky on NPR
418. Charles Bernstein — Pseudonyms/Bad Addresses/Confidentiality/Knot
419. Layne Russell — Re: to all & appologies
420. red slider — Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
421. George Thompson — Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
422. Eliza McGrand — Re: The Document of Concern in the Case of Red Slider 86'd
423. mark weiss — Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
424. Eliza McGrand — Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me

24 SEP 1997

425. red slider — to all & appologies
426. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
427. Christopher Reiner — A Reading
428. nico vassilakis — jumble
429. Herb Levy — Re: Pinsky on NPR
430. rsillima — Terri Gross
431. rsillima — Barry Cox
432. MARK LEAHY — Re: Joyce/comics
433. rob wilson — Re: devious signatories (my bad allegory)
434. henry — Re: Pinsky on NPR
435. Loss Pequen~o Glazier — Re: Barry Cox
436. Joseph S Zitt — Re: Pinsky on NPR
437. Sarah Hreha — Re: devious signatories (my bad allegory)
438. robert drake — Re: confusion/Red's 86
439. Douglas Barbour — Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.
440. David R. Israel — nostalgia & its vintages
441. James Finnegan — Re: Pinsky on NPR
442. p. durgin — Re: Pinsky on NPR
443. Burt Kimmelman — Call for essays
444. Burt Kimmelman — Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.
445. dbkk — Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
446. henry — Re: Pinsky on NPR
447. p. durgin — Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
448. Hank Lazer — Re: Terri Gross
449. p. durgin — Re: Pinsky on NPR
450. Carol Mirakove — Re: Pinsky on NPR
451. Dale Smith — Mike and Dale's Younger Poets
452. Schuchat Simon — Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.
453. Aldon Nielsen — Caribbean Studies Conference
454. Eliza McGrand — Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me

25 SEP 1997

455. George Bowering — Re: subtext w/ Bromige & Blaser
456. George Bowering — Re: readers' versions of great lit
457. David Bromige — younger poets anthology
458. George Bowering — Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.

459. David Bromige — e-ddress for Coach House Books/Victor Coleman
460. Jordan Davis — readers versions
461. Jordan Davis — Re: younger poets anthology
462. Jordan Davis — service unavailable
463. Henry Gould — yngr-than-thou publ. notice
464. Tom Mandel — radio shows...
465. Douglas Barbour — Re: e on c
466. David R. Israel — nostalgia & its vintages, redox
467. Ira Lightman — Clark Coolidge's Polaroid
468. Dale Smith — The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
469. dbkk — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
470. Ernesto Grosman — The Radio Reading Project
471. Karlien van den Beukel — Rempress publications and reading series
472. dbkk — Caroline Bergvall/Kevin Killian in San Francisco
473. Rachel Levitsky — Left Hand Reading Series 97/98 Schedule
474. David Bromige — e-ddresses : Don Byrd, Victor Coleman/ younger poets
475. Dale Smith — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
476. Susan Clark — [Fwd: test [Fwd: RADDLE MOON 's new address]]
477. dbkk — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
478. Susan Schultz — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
479. Ernesto Grosman — The Radio Reading Project... A CORRECTION

26 SEP 1997

480. Christopher Reiner — AVEC Sampler
481. Tom Orange — name, paradox, &c.
482. David Dowker — Re: Caroline Bergvall/Kevin Killian in San Francisco
483. Stephen Cope — Re: radio shows... (a brief on Gitin)
484. Hugh Steinberg — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
485. rsillima — David Gitin
486. Schuchat Simon — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
487. Miekal And — Spam Emotions, Spam Thinking, Flames Fairing
488. henry gould — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
489. Pierre Joris — Re: Writing experiments
490. Maria Damon — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
491. Maria Damon — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
492. Herb Levy — Shirley Clarke
493. Rachel Levitsky — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
494. hg — hg post-blab
495. dbkk — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
496. robert drake — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
497. Hoa Nguyen — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
498. dbkk — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
499. Jordan Davis — The silence of the list
500. Jordan Davis — The Paradox and the Name of its Disco Tents
501. Dale Smith — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
502. Douglas Barbour — Re: _Boxkite_
503. Steve Evans — Bibliography Help?
504. Mark Prejsnar — Re: The Paradox and the Name of its Disco Tents
505. Maria Damon — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
506. Eliza McGrand — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
507. henry — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
508. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: name, paradox, &c.
509. William Burmeister Prod — Re: Bibliography Help?
510. David Bromige — picking up sides (name-paradox thread)
511. dbkk — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
512. Aldon Nielsen — a little grace?

513. William Burmeister Prod — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
514. Maria Damon — Re: picking up sides (name-paradox thread)
515. Dale Smith — Sacred Cows
516. mark weiss — Names, Paradoxes, etc.
517. Aldon Nielsen — Re: Sacred Ruminants
518. Rachel Levitsky — Re: innovative poetry audiences
519. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
520. William Burmeister Prod — Re: Names, Paradoxes, etc.
521. Eliza McGrand — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
522. mark weiss — Re: Names, Paradoxes, etc.
523. mark weiss — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
524. Kali Tal — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
525. mark weiss — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
526. Juliana Spahr — dilemmas
527. Maria Damon — Re: Sacred Cows

27 SEP 1997

528. DS — Re: name, paradox, &c.
529. David Bromige — "useful" in context of paradox thread
530. robert drake — Re: The Paradox and the Name of its Disco Tents
531. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
532. henry gould — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
533. Burt Kimmelman — somebody wanna help this poor soul out?
534. p. durgin — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
535. Steve Evans — A Note on Prejudice
536. Maria Damon — Re: A Note on Prejudice
537. Kali Tal — Re: the pink and the blue
538. Hoa Nguyen — Re: picking up sides (name-paradox thread)
539. Alan Jen Sondheim — Novel
540. Rebecca Weldon — Thank you, Kali

28 SEP 1997

541. Rachel Levitsky — From the deplorable tradition
542. Eric Gleason — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents- thank you
543. Eryque Gleason — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
544. L.MacMahon and T.R.Healy — Re: A Note on Prejudice
545. rob wilson — From "MeliMelo" to "Taxi!"
546. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: picking up sides (name-paradox thread)
547. Juliana Spahr — the pink and the blue
548. p. durgin — Re: A Note on Prejudice
549. Maria Damon — Re: From "MeliMelo" to "Taxi!"
550. Maria Damon — Re: A Note on Prejudice
551. Sylvester Pollet — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
552. Tim Wood — Herro!
553. dbkk — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
554. Tim Wood — Re: Devotion to the arts
555. Tim Wood — Please ignore Herro!
556. mark weiss — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
557. Sylvester Pollet — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
558. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
559. DS — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
560. Reuben Radding — News of the Weird
561. Kali Tal — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
562. Harold Rhenisch — Re: A Note on Prejudice
563. dbkk — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
564. dbkk — Stepping into Steve Carll's shoes

29 SEP 1997

565. Kali Tal — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
566. Miekal And — Re: A Note on Prejudice
567. Eliza McGrand — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
568. Robert Archambeau — Re: walsh, prejudice, etc
569. Michael Magee — walsh, prejudice, etc
570. Douglas Barbour — Re: name, paradox, &c.
571. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
572. Laurie Schneider/Crag Hill — Readership and Writing asLived Experience
573. Henry Gould — gender history & the other stuff
574. Hoa Nguyen — working class thread
575. henry gould — Re: Readership and Writing asLived Experience
576. Hoa Nguyen — People of Color?
577. Carolyn Guertin — Killian and Argento
578. p. durgin — Re: working class thread
579. dbkk — Re: working class thread
580. Maria Damon — Re: People of Color?
581. Sylvester Pollet — Re: People of Color?
582. Mark Prejsnar — Syntactics #1 available
583. Laura Moriarty — Re: working class thread
584. Hoa Nguyen — Re: working class thread
585. mark weiss — stereotypes
586. mark weiss — (no subject)
587. Maria Damon — Re: stereotypes
588. Michael J. Kelleher — just buffalo
589. Joseph S Zitt — Re: stereotypes
590. Aldon Nielsen — Re: stereotypes
591. Kali Tal — Working Class anthologies
592. Aldon Nielsen — Re: working class red
593. mark weiss — Re: stereotypes
594. Aldon Nielsen — Re: My name . . . Jose Jimenez
595. Eryque Gleason — Re: working class thread
596. Jordan Davis — Re: stereotypes
597. Eryque Gleason — Re: stereotypes
598. Ralph Wessman — Re: The Paradox
599. Kali Tal — Book announcement: Maggie Jaffe's How The West Was One
600. Dale Smith — Re: People of Color?
601. Dale Smith — Social Tangles
602. Maria Damon — Re: stereotypes
603. mark weiss — (no subject)
604. Daniel Zimmerman — (no subject)
605. Hugh Steinberg — (no subject)
606. Joel Felix — (no subject)

30 SEP 1997

607. Rebecca Weldon — The name and the paradox
608. Kali Tal — Weapons named after people & military slang
609. Tom Orange — new Essex
610. Eliza McGrand — Re: People of Color?
611. Eliza McGrand — Re: stereotypes
612. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: Social Tangles
613. Tenney Nathanson — Re: just buffalo
614. Rachel Levitsky — Re: People of Color
615. lee ann brown — Hannah Weiner
616. Layne Russell — Re: People of Color
617. Maria Damon — Re: Social Tangles

618. Schuchat Simon — Re: People of Color
619. Bob Grotjohn — Re: People of Color
620. dbkk — Re: People of Color
621. William Marsh — Re: People of Color
622. Dale Smith — Re: Social Tangles
623. Rachel Levitsky — Re: People of Color?
624. dbkk — Re: Social Tangles
625. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: People of Color
626. dbkk — Re: Social Tangles
627. simon — Re: People of Color
628. Dale Smith — Re: Social Tangles
629. Dale Smith — Re: Social Tangles
630. Ira Lightman — Re: Social Tangles
631. Hoa Nguyen — Re: People of Color?
632. dbkk — Re: Social Tangles
633. Eliza McGrand — Re: Social Tangles
634. Dale Smith — Re: Social Tangles
635. mark weiss — Social Tangles
636. Jacques Debrot — Re: Chain & what one likes
637. Lawrence Upton. — Re: Weapons named after people & military slang
638. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: Chain & what one likes
639. mark weiss — Re: Chain & what one likes
640. Hoa Nguyen — thanks
641. Susan Clark — Re: Killian and Argento
642. Peter Balestrieri — Lynn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
643. Michael Magee — Re: Lynn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
644. Charles Bernstein — Re: Lyn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
645. Susan Clark — Lyn Hejinian's "Rejection of Closure"
646. mark weiss — Re: stereotypes
647. Eliza McGrand — Re: stereotypes
648. Kali Tal — Race, identity, otherness, us-ness, stereotypes....
649. mark weiss — Re: stereotypes

1. Fred Muratori
(no subject)
Mon 1 Sep 1997

Re:

> I just received a request for a review copy of Rochelle Owens' book from "S.V. Caldwell, Ph.D., Editor" of the Sandia Review of Books in Albuquerque. Regular letterhead, no phone number. The mag isn't listed in CLMP or Dustbooks, and I suspect that it's a phoney. This happened to me once before, with another outfit that turned out to be a scam to build a personal library for free. Has anybody out there heard of Sandia or its editor?

For what it's worth, there are no records for a _Sandia Review of Books_ in either the OCLC or RLIN databases, two huge bibliographic utilities containing information on the holdings of literally thousands of US and non-US libraries. This doesn't constitute a definitive answer, of course -- there are plenty of micromags and fanzines that almost no libraries acquire -- but before sending a copy of the book, you could I suppose request a sample copy of the journal.

-- FM

****

Fred Muratori
([redacted])
Reference Services Division
Olin * Kroch * Uris Libraries
Cornell University
Ithaca, NY 14853
WWW: http://fmref.library.cornell.edu/spectra.html
****

↑ Index

2. David Bromige
The Calculation
Mon 1 Sep 1997

The Calculation

I compose a piece about Shakespeare
How he masqued the crimes of Kings
How murder can be made to seem accident
In somewhat the manner of Shakespeare
I add that this fragment was found just now
In a tunnel in a college in Paris
And my thigh cramps up my leg shoots out

And the screen goes dark lights up goes dark
It seems reasonable to suppose my leg cramp
Drove my foot onto the powerbar
And paranoid to suppose anything else
Though there are many ways now to administer
Pain or death undetectable ways
To stage an accident to do what an accident fails to
It must appear unjusifiably self-centered
To suppose anything under the appearances
To overlook the dissatisfaction I was feeling
With my approach to this large & chancy theme
So that my psychology if not mere chance also Rendered somatic account for the blank drawn
When I try to retrieve the draft and feel relief
And of course the times we live in explain it all

↑ Index

3. Red Slider

Re: The Calculation

Mon 1 Sep 1997

David wrote:

> The Calculation

I compose a piece about Shakespeare
How he masqued the crimes of Kings
How murder can be made to seem accident
In somewhat the manner of Shakespeare
I add that this fragment was found just now
In a tunnel in a college in Paris
And my thigh cramps up my leg shoots out
And the screen goes dark lights up goes dark
It seems reasonable to suppose my leg cramp
Drove my foot onto the powerbar
And paranoid to suppose anything else
Though there are many ways now to administer
Pain or death undetectable ways
To stage an accident to do what an accident fails to
It must appear unjusifiably self-centered
To suppose anything under the appearances
To overlook the dissatisfaction I was feeling
With my approach to this large & chancy theme

So that my psychology if not mere chance also Rendered somatic account for the blank drawn
When I try to retrieve the draft and feel relief
And of course the times we live in explain it all

Red writes: Thanx for the reminder - got in an argument last night with the glued-to-TV bunch about the nature of what was being witnessed, but couldn't grab the burr under my saddle. No doubt about it, the car was driving through a rat's ass - a loaded one at that. Just so happens a bright light got turned out halfway through the tunnel - but then, not the first time that's happened, We've lost a lot of bright lights in the rat's ass.

↑ Index

4. Dean A. Brink

Re: JavaPoetry

Mon 1 Sep 1997

Thank you David and Red for nice and helpful comments on my Javanized (reJavanated) verse.

dean

> "Men with Coins"
> http://www.w-link.net/~dean/JavaPoetry/mencoins.html

dean brink
EALC/UChicago [redacted]
interpoetics - poetry of Asia and the Pacific Rim
www.w-link.net/~dean/interpoetics/index.html

↑ Index

5. David Bromige

Dean Brink administers a rebuke, or a misplaced gratitude?

Mon 1 Sep 1997

Dean, I know nothing of yr "rejavanized" poetry. Could you be speaking sarcastically--was it something I was supposed to comment on, but failed to? If so, I must say that, like many on this list, I do not take it as my duty to respond to every thread, let alone every posting. If, on the other hand, some recent posting of mine struck you as responsive to a posting of yours, I can only say, "Not consciously," and ask you to be kind enough to re-post yr post, back-channel if you wish. Thank you. David

↑ Index

6. David R. Israel

Re: Dean Brink administers a rebuke, or a misplaced gratitude?

Tue 2 Sep 1997

David Bromige strikes a note of question --

> Dean, I know nothing of yr "rejavanized" poetry. Could you be speaking sarcastically--was it something I was supposed to comment on, but failed to? If so, I must say that, like many on this list, I do not take it as my duty to respond to every thread, let alone every posting. If, on the other hand, some recent posting of mine struck you as responsive to a posting of yours, I can only say, "Not consciously," and ask you to be kind enough to re-post yr post, back-channel if you wish. Thank you. David

I think I can clarify this mystery, by noting that Dean's meaning was neither of the above-noted possibilities -- for the reasn that the "David" to whom he referred was not David Bromige but rather, the undersigned. I had, indeed, offered some comment regarding Dean's experimental use of Java-script (hence, the "reJavanated" et cet).

For sake of balancing the slate, I, too, David, have occasionally looked with a start of apprehension at some Poetics posting that makes mention of David's comments -- but only for a split second; for it generally becomes clear that the David in question is you, rather than me. This seems to have been the rarer instance where the reverse situation proved in evidence.

Perhaps someone will at some point make reference to the hymnist who is our namesake & prototype, and then we can both look befuddled in sync or in tandem . . .

till then, yours, &c.,

David

```
 .
 .....
 ............
\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\/////\\\\\
  >   david   raphael   israel   <
  >>     washington  d.c.     <<
| ▇▇▇▇▇▇▇   (home)
| ▇▇▇▇▇▇▇      (office)
==========================
|  thy centuries follow each other
|  perfecting a small wild flower
|                                (Tagore)
//////////////////////////////////////////\\\\\/////
```

↑ Index

7. Thomas Bell
Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Don't think this made it. Sorry if it's a repeat.

Came across the following today. Thought it was apposite to the recent flurries here re avant-garde, new directions and the Theroux/Ashberry businness. My reading is that language and, by context, poetry, is the "avant-garde", as per Plato, in its ability to let in what doesn't fit the rules, what is antithetical to historicism. Comments? tom bell

"Language today is the enemy of the State and historicity because of its power to germinate systems antithetical to custom, since custom is partly dependent on coded laws. Historicism, while allying itself with writing, knowing its enlarged scalar power as a reread document, distrusts its projective character (translation: stability). Taking language truly seriously as a partly known, partly unknowable form of energy is instantly recognizable to historicism as an antithetical challenge." _ Piombino, "Writing and Experiencing"

↑ Index

8. Hugh Steinberg
Interviews
Tue 2 Sep 1997

A general question to the list:

What is the origin of the interview as a written, literary form? Does it predate radio/TV? Does it predate journalism? What/when was the first interview?

Thanks

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

9. mark weiss
Re: Interviews
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Plato

At 12:50 AM 9/2/97 -0600, you wrote:
>A general question to the list:
>
>What is the origin of the interview as a written, literary form? Does it >predate radio/TV? Does it predate journalism? What/when was the first >interview?
>
>Thanks
>
>Hugh Steinberg
>
>

↑ Index

10. Pierre Joris
Re: Interviews
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Hmm, on the more frivolous side, Plato innerviewing Socrates, & on the more serious side, Herodotus interviewing everyone to find out what really happened. Pierre

Hugh Steinberg wrote:

> A general question to the list:
>
> What is the origin of the interview as a written, literary form? Does it > predate radio/TV? Does it predate journalism? What/when was the first > interview?
>
> Thanks
>
> Hugh Steinberg

--
==========
pierre joris 6 madison place albany ny 12202
tel/fax [redacted] email:[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/

"I have never been able to tell a beginning
from an end." — Georges Braque
==========

↑ Index

11. David R. Israel

Re: Interviews

Tue 2 Sep 1997

Hugh Steinberg asks a general question to the list:
>
> What is the origin of the interview as a written, literary form?
> Does it predate radio/TV? Does it predate journalism? What/when > was the first interview?

Interesting question. Arguably, the form we know as the interview is at least related to the ancient form known as the dialogue.

Sources in extant literature for the latter importantly include, of course, the Platonic (or Socratic) dialogues of ancient Greece, as well as the forest-dialogues (somewhat kindred, perhaps -- I don't know that I've seen the comparison explored) that form at least a major portion of the Sanskrit philosophical texts known as the Upanishads (also called the Vedanta -- the "end" or "completion" of the Vedas [scriptures]).

This likely doesn't address your question directly, but possibly adds at least a glow of long-shadow context. Also somewhat anecdotally (or let's say tangentially), the form of the interview in the modern sense was very curiously predated -- i.e., moved back in time -- by Meredith Monk in her film Book of Days, which included what amounted to t.v.-style interviews of various figures in a midaeval European city.

Having reached the end of relevance, I await the "real answer" too.

d.i.

```
 .
 .....
 ............
\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\\/////\\\\\
  >   david   raphael   israel   <
  >>     washington  d.c.     <<
| ▇▇▇▇▇▇▇   (home)
| ▇▇▇▇▇▇▇      (office)
 ==========================
|   thy centuries follow each other
|   perfecting a small wild flower
|                                (Tagore)
/////////////////////////////////////////\\\\\/////
```

↑ Index

12. David R. Israel
Re: Interviews
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Hmm --Pierre Joris answers this electro-interview question thus:

> Hmm, on the more frivolous side, Plato innerviewing Socrates, & on the more serious side, Herodotus interviewing everyone to find out what really happened. Pierre

I wonder if the (or a) next step down the primrose path toward today's Charlie Rose & The Paris Review might be discerned (or discoverable) in the traditions (midaeval?) of courts of law, jurisprudence -- the interrogation, the interview of witnesses, and whatever may have antedated our contemporary formal traditions of direct & cross-examination, &c.

Since the Writ of Habeas Corpus dates back to -- what? -- the 13th century or something, one wonders how far back one finds those (possibly related) formalities . . .

(as is well known [sorta or not-quite relatedly], the Petrarchan sonnet is alleged to have origins in the formal jargon of law . . .)

happy near-autumn,
d.i.

↑ Index

13. Henry Gould
Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
Tue 2 Sep 1997

On Mon, 1 Sep 1997 23:17:22 -0500 Thomas Bell said:
>
>"Language today is the enemy of the State and historicity >because of its power to germinate systems antithetical to >custom, since custom is partly dependent on coded laws.
>Historicism, while allying itself with writing, knowing its >enlarged scalar power as a reread document, distrusts its >projective character (translation: stability). Taking >language truly seriously as a partly known, partly >unknowable form of energy is instantly recognizable to >historicism as an antithetical challenge." _ Piombino,
>"Writing and Experiencing"
>

Seems to me language-as-word is only one facet of a unitary/divided meta-language of the mind, which includes words, which includes "the State", etc. And setting up who's "the enemy" is the oldest chessgame in the world - nothing avant-garde about it. It's called "us vs. them" and it's about projecting psychological conflicts inherent in human nature. The idea that "writers" or "language artists" are avant-garde because they're breaking down stilted social codes ignores the fact that words and the book have been used as weapons of control, revenge, self- glorification, order, resentment, heirarchy, etc. etc. since the slaves of Assurbanipal or whoever started pressing wedges in the clay. Are these the historicists? They're the avant-garde in language tools. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

14. Douglas Barbour

Re: And of course the times we live in explain it all

Tue 2 Sep 1997

Thanks, David, for the whole poem. It does catch something of the 'mood' many of us find ourselves within. What's been done with what happened in that tunnel since is beginning to get me down, anyway. On the other hand...

==========
==========
Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]
H: [redacted]
~~~
~~~

15. Henry Gould
publ. announcement
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Nedge #5 is now available. Issue contains several poetics listmembers, a number of RI poets, and a general theme (unbeknownst to the editors!) of "the earth".

Poetry: Alan Elyshevitz, B.Z. Niditch, Laura Albrecht, Susan Wheeler, Eileen Myles, Mark Peters, Joel Lewis, Errol Miller, Leslie Scalapino, Robert Parham, Elliza McGrand, Paula Tatarunis, Alicia Vogl Saenz, Bob Heman, John Tagliabue, Edwin Honig, Karen Donovan, Joshua Beckman, Colin Esler, Janet Sullivan, Steve Leto, Roderick Potter, Paul Petrie.

Extensive long-poem excerpts from Sherry Brennan and D.E. Steward.

Fiction by Alfred Schwaid.

Essays: "Fusion Poetry" by Michael Basinski; "Ars est celare artem" by Henry Gould.

96 pp. perfect bound. $6.00 payable to: The Poetry Mission, PO Box 2321, Providence, RI 02906. Or backchannel your request & I will bill you. Overseas orders - email and we'll work something out. [redacted]. Thanks, everyone - Henry

↑ Index

16. Christopher Alexander
Re: 'Pataphysics
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Craig wrote:
> Highest recommendation as well to their recent books of poetry, Bok's
> "Crystalography" (Coach House Press, 1994) and Wershler-Henry's
> "NICHOLODEON: a book of lowerglyphs" (Coach House Printing, 1997).

Bok's "Crystallography: A Report on Lucid Writing", apparently a related project or the same project in a different form (so to speak), is also available for $5 or so through Damian Lopes' wonderful little press fingerprinting inkoperated:

http://www.interlog.com/~dal/fi/

I just ordered a copy myself.

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

17. Timothy Materer
Another general question: paparazzi
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Now that we have an idea about who did the first interview, does anyone know who were the first paparazzi? I think most people first heard the term in La Dolce Vita.

Timothy Materer, 228 Tate Hall, English Department
University of Missouri, Columbia MO 65211
http://www.missouri.edu/~engtim

↑ Index

18. Maria Damon
diacccritix
Tue 2 Sep 1997

---

well folks i've at length had the time/space to explore the double issue of dia-critix on poetry and community that i made such snotty remarks about (w/o having read it) earlier in the spring. i found it --esp the introduction by jonathan monroe, which i think i'll have occasion to assign in classes or draw from in my future endeavors --engaging and smart, tho' some of the articles were over my head. thanks for the opportunity to make up for earlier brattiness. maria d

↑ Index

19. Red Slider
of Chessgames and Princesses
Tue 2 Sep 1997

---

spanning David B.'s illuminating, if chilling, capture and arrest and Henry's thoughtful, if chilling, indictment both, on the illusion of the primacy of art, I am reminded of this observation from Louis Mumford:

"Psychologically healthy people have no need to indulge fantasies of absolute power; nor do they need to come to terms with reality by inflicting self-mutilation and prematurely courting death. But the critical weakness of an over-regimented institutional structure--and almost by definition 'civilization' was over-regimented from the beginning--is that it does not tend to produce psychologically healthy people."

"The rigid division of labor and the segregation of castes produce unbalanced characters, while mechanical routine normalizes--and rewards--those compulsive personalities who are afraid to cope with the embarrassing riches of life."

The kings no longer need hide their crimes. They have only to demonstrate that flashbulbs, O-rings and the Times alike produce jobs.

against Henry's remarks on "language artists", no matter where the shifting frontlines are thought to be, there is perhaps only illusion to be played, one pawn at a time.

A long forgotten healer's art of speech made fast within that string the bow tips of the heart to sing the quivering

> Of reed, the flute; of string, the lyre > to warrior was given;
> heaven prepares and earth provides,
> the dead divide the living.

Warrior!, stretch upon thy deed > bend thy bow to fit thy word > take such strength from dexterous reed, > in that, be what is heard.

I wonder now if illusions ever served as useful nostrums?

red.

↑ Index

20. David Bromige
my father among the earlier paparazzi?
Tue 2 Sep 1997

My father, Harold Bromige, worked all his life for Gaumont-British Newsreels, from 1919 on. While I am sure he would be shocked at the conduct of today's scandalsheet photogs, he had many tales of "cutthroat" competition among the different newsreel companies, e.g. when one outfit had secured excloo rights to film a cricket match, the opposiiton rented second storey rooms facing their cameras & flashed mirrors into the lenses. My father filmed the-then Prince of Wales (later, the Duke of Windsor) coming unglued going over a jump in a steeplechase. The Prince came up to my father & sd, "I dont think the British public wish to see their future king falling off a horse. Kindly remove the film from yr camera." (I was only a boy when first told this story & exclaimed "You didnt Dad did you?" "A Royal request is an order" my father told me.)

Thereafter, on several occasions when he had been assigned to film the Prince, my father was removed by security men & the driver of the G-B van had to shoot the footage instead. And once, in Paris, my father was arrested, plucked from his perch atop the G-B van, although never charged...but missed the parade in which the Prince was participating.

I realize this-all is rather abt the victimization of a photog by royalty than vice versa. But there were other anecdotes he told, a la the mirror-flashing, of jostling competition among the companies. The ropes holding a balloon in place, from which one outfit was filming sports, were cut through and the thing set adrift--dangerous business. His boss once kidnapped Chaplin as a publicity stunt. Chaplin went along with it, i guess. But events were staged--"nonevents" in Boorstein's phrase, although done to tell the truth of an actual event. Or sometimes the truth. During WW2, competition among the companies ceased, resources were pooled, and propaganda became the order of the day. Defeats were turned into hardwon victories.

But compared to "La Dolce Vita" et seq, pretty tame stuff. For a fictional antecedent, a memory occurs of "Citizen Kane," "found in love nest", was that the headline? Hoist by his own petard? Where is the line between muckraking & "Project Censored"? I mean where, legally, could one be drawn?

About a boycott of those checkout counter mags, I am always hoping to see consumers turning on the hand that feeds them. But please spare Weekly World News, which recently reported that the dying words of an alien spaceman before he crashed at Roswell were "My wife...my children...God forgive me for my sins."

But this, & other stuff I was abt to say, go 'way beyond an answer to the posted question, so I'll stop. David

↑ Index

21. David Bromige

which david has the message?

Tue 2 Sep 1997

David I, wd you mind being that, listwise? I am prepared to be David B.

Thanks for clearing up that Dean B matter, which my egotism did as much to muddy as anything else.

David B

↑ Index

22. mark weiss
Re: Interviews
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Habeas Corpus-the Crown vs. Anthony Ashley Cooper, Lord Shaftsbury, 1681. A real interesting story, but for another occasion. Shaftsbury was the leader of the not-so-loyal proto-Whig opposition to Charles I. He's the villain of Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel, and he was the head of the corporation that founded the colonys of North and South Carolina. Charleston, SC, lies between the Ashly and Cooper rivers, both named for him.

At 07:32 AM 9/2/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Hmm --Pierre Joris answers this electro-interview question thus:
>
>> Hmm, on the more frivolous side, Plato innerviewing Socrates, & on >> the more serious side, Herodotus interviewing everyone to find out >> what really happened. Pierre
>
>I wonder if the (or a) next step down the primrose path toward >today's Charlie Rose & The Paris Review might be discerned (or >discoverable) in the traditions (midaeval?) of courts of law, >jurisprudence -- the interrogation, the interview of witnesses, and >whatever may have antedated our contemporary formal traditions of >direct & cross-examination, &c.
>
>Since the Writ of Habeas Corpus dates back to -- what? -- the 13th >century or something, one wonders how far back one finds those >(possibly related) formalities . . .
>
>(as is well known [sorta or not-quite relatedly], the Petrarchan >sonnet is alleged to have origins in the formal jargon of law . . .)
>
>happy near-autumn,
>d.i.
>
>

↑ Index

23. Joseph S Zitt
Re: Interviews
Tue 2 Sep 1997

On Tue, 2 Sep 1997, mark weiss wrote:

> Habeas Corpus-the Crown vs. Anthony Ashley Cooper, Lord Shaftsbury, 1681. A

I read that at first as "Habeas Corpus the Clown", which would have been quite another story!

↑ Index

24. Don Cheney
Re: my father among the earlier paparazzi?
Tue 2 Sep 1997

David Bromige wrote:
>About a boycott of those checkout counter mags, I am always hoping to see >consumers turning on the hand that feeds them. But please spare Weekly >World News, which recently reported that the dying words of an alien >spaceman before he crashed at Roswell were "My wife...my children...God >forgive me for my sins."

David, yes, i agree, do not turn away the Weekly World News. the WWN is the Night Stand With Dick Dietrick of tabloids, a terrific parody of the genre. the stories that they make up are obviously fabricated and sometimes funny as hell (as David points out), though they do throw in actual (sensational) stories. i particularly like the right-wing columnist Ed Anger(!), who is always "pig-biting mad" or "madder than Teddy Kennedy at an AA meeting." Don

==========
Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
[redacted]
==========

↑ Index

25. Tenney Nathanson
Re: BOO
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Dee--

ok found it, the folder w Mullen stuff that is. The interview is in BOO #7, July 1996. The essay, "Poetry and Identity," is in West Coast Line, it turns out, Number Nineteen (30/1) Spring 1996. (I dunno what the 30/1 means, or how it could related to # 19, but that's what the mag says.) Correspondence address listed for West Coast Line is: 2027 East Academic Annex, Simon Fraser U, Burnaby, B.C., V5A 1S6 Canada. web address is http://www.sfu.ca/west-coast-line/WCL.html. Editor is Roy Miki. Locals Bowering and Quartermain are on board.

At 09:19 AM 8/28/97 -0500, you wrote:
>Thanks to Tenney, Herb, Red Slider, David Brominge, and Thomas Bell for the >Mullen information. I've e-mailed Deanna Ferguson about the interview in >BOO and will report back when I hear. Meanwhile, does anyone know the >citation for the Poetic Briefs essay Tenney mentions?
>
>I like Thomas Bell's idea of seeing whether some of Mullen's harder-to-find >pieces could be posted on the EPC hotlist. Is there anything a person >could do to help make that happen?
>
>Dee
>
>
>
>There are two pieces, actually, both of which folks on this list >>originally brought to my attention. One is the BOO interview; then there's,
>>I think, a short essay by her in POETIC BRIEFS.
>>
>>best
>>
>>Tenney
>>
>>At 08:45 PM 8/27/97 -0500, you wrote:
>>>Tenney--
>>>
>>>Can you give a fuller reference for Harryette Mullen's BOO? Also, does >>>anyone know if Mullen published a lecture Aldon Nielsen refers to in *Black
>>>Chant* called "Visionary Literacy: Art, Literature and Indigenous African >>>Writing Systems," first given at Intersection for the Arts in SF May 24, >>>1993? I'd like to find out more about the argument she makes there.
>>>
>>>Thanks very much--
>>>
>>> Dee Morris
>>>

>
>

---

tenney nathanson

[redacted]

http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/

↑ Index

26. George Bowering

Re: my father among the earlier paparazzi?

Tue 2 Sep 1997

Bromige, my idol, wrote:

> About a boycott of those checkout counter mags, I am always hoping to see consumers turning on the hand that feeds them. But please spare Weekly World News, which recently reported that the dying words of an alien spaceman before he crashed at Roswell were "My wife...my children...God forgive me for my sins."

I fully agree. I love the Weekly World News. You can tell that they are serious because they print in black and white. In the WWN it was revealed for the first time that there was a World War II bomber found on the moon; and later a number of WW2 fighters found on Mars! Later it was revealed that humans had not gone to the moon, that the landings were faked. Once they ran a story about giant fish in Chinese rivers that leaped up and swallowed unwary horses that walked too close to the edge of the water. I get all my knowledge of the world from that paper. Boycott ehe rest of them, though. I mean, I hardly ever know who those people are that are mocked on the front pages.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

27. George Bowering
Re: which david has the message?
Tue 2 Sep 1997

> David I, wd you mind being that, listwise? I am prepared to be David B.
>
> David B

Hey, hey. I myself would like to be David B.

David B.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

28. Juliana Spahr
ted joans address
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Anyone have a different address out there other than 513 Maynard Avenue, South no. 202 in Seattle for Ted Joans?

Thanks.

Juliana
[redacted]

↑ Index

29. Lawrence Upton.
David B
Tue 2 Sep 1997

I understand the aim behind your suggestion but I really don't think it will help people just won't know who it is at all

David B

↑ Index

30. mark weiss
my previous message
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Re: Shaftesbury--that's Charlie the 2, of course.

↑ Index

31. Red Slider
Re: my father among the earlier paparazzi?
Tue 2 Sep 1997

Notice to WWN-luvers: Wot, you think is okeedokee you go off-planet and litter our landscape with used flashbulbs, drive our credible models for imagination underground into lunar tunnels and 4th planet canals where you can chase meteroric celebrities into walls like used bolides? - you think moonbrains is something edible?

Be Warned:
our celebs now get special license to shoot back.

redplanet red.

Bromige, my idol, wrote:

> About a boycott of those checkout counter mags, I am always hoping to see consumers turning on the hand that feeds them. But please spare Weekly World News, which recently reported that the dying words of an alien spaceman before he crashed at Roswell were "My wife...my children...God forgive me for my sins."

I fully agree. I love the Weekly World News. You can tell that they are serious because they print in black and white. In the WWN it was revealed for the first time that there was a World War II bomber found on the moon; and later a number of WW2 fighters found on Mars! Later it was revealed that humans had not gone to the moon, that the landings were faked. Once they ran a story about giant fish in Chinese rivers that leaped up and swallowed unwary horses that walked too close to the edge of the water. I get all my knowledge of the world from that paper. Boycott ehe rest of them, though. I mean, I hardly ever know who those people are that are mocked on the front pages.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

32. Thomas Bell
Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
Tue 2 Sep 1997

I can't tell if this is jaded dismisal or agreement. In any case the quote is Piombino's.
I neither defended the "avant-garde" or attacked Theroux. I intended to juxtapose the quote and the recent threads to point out that this is, as it long has been, a "boundary land" of conflict with shifting names and combatants. The problem for me is that there is no adequate term for this conflict. I was seeking some clarification and ideas.
Perhaps in doing so I was not as clear as I should have been. As you say, "setting up who's 'the enemy' is the oldest chessgame."
tom bell

At 08:03 AM 9/2/97 EDT, Henry Gould wrote:
>On Mon, 1 Sep 1997 23:17:22 -0500 Thomas Bell said:
>>
>>"Language today is the enemy of the State and historicity
>>because of its power to germinate systems antithetical to >>custom, since custom is partly dependent on coded laws.
>>Historicism, while allying itself with writing, knowing its >>enlarged scalar power as a reread document, distrusts its >>projective character (translation: stability). Taking >>language truly seriously as a partly known, partly >>unknowable form of energy is instantly recognizable to >>historicism as an antithetical challenge." _ Piombino,
>>"Writing and Experiencing"
>>
>
>Seems to me language-as-word is only one facet of a unitary/divided >meta-language of the mind, which includes words, which includes "the >State", etc. And setting up who's "the enemy" is the oldest chessgame >in the world - nothing avant-garde about it. It's called "us vs. them" >and it's about projecting psychological conflicts inherent in human nature.
>The idea that "writers" or "language artists" are avant-garde because >they're breaking down stilted social codes ignores the fact that words >and the book have been used as weapons of control, revenge, self->glorification, order, resentment, heirarchy, etc. etc. since the slaves

>of Assurbanipal or whoever started pressing wedges in the clay.
>Are these the historicists? They're the avant-garde in language tools.
>- Henry Gould
>
>

↑ Index

33. joel lewis
Devotion to the arts
Wed 3 Sep 1997

FROM: NEWS OF THE WIERD

* Brothers Geoffrey and Aaron Kuffner were arrested in New Orleans in June and charged with terrorism as the ones who had recently mailed or hand-delivered suspicious packages to local government and news media offices. The packages contained innocuous items (which nonetheless were frightening enough that two offices called for evacuations) and a four-page manifesto vowing that "Violent Acts of Consciousness Have Only Begun." According to police, the men's goal was to call attention to public ignorance of poetry and that among their demands was that all state inaugural speeches be written in iambic pentameter.

joel lewis

↑ Index

34. aerialedge
Re: Interviews
Wed 3 Sep 1997

Ron Silliman has some interesting comments on the form of the interview somewhere. Spent some time skipping about _The New Sentence_ and a few other essays unable to relocate-- citation anyone?

↑ Index

35. Hugh Steinberg
Re: Interviews
Wed 3 Sep 1997

Pierre writes:

>Hmm, on the more frivolous side, Plato innerviewing Socrates, & on the >more serious side, Herodotus interviewing everyone to find out what >really happened. Pierre
>
While Greek dialogues certainly qualify as antecedents to the form, they tend to read more as drama-less plays than what I would think of as an interview.

Which of course raises a question of form: what makes an interview different from a dialogue or a court hearing?

Like a dialogue, an interview purports to be the questions, answers and discussion recorded over a specific period of time between two or more parties. It is an exchange of information, but there seems to be an element of discovery, of uncertainty, which is missing from most dialogues I'm familiar with. Interviews are unpredictable: the person asking the questions does not know the answers, and hopefully the person providing the answers does not know the questions.

Of course there is a measure of artifice in the form, as anyone who's had to transcibe one quickly realizes.

Most of the Greek dialogues are pretty contrived. The speakers resemble, if they are not in fact, fictional characters who exist only to provide philosophical points. Dialogues "go" somewhere. They point to the essay as the fiction of characters are replaced with a singular authorial voice.

Court hearings and inquisitions take the dialogue into reality. There is no doubt that the person asking the questions and the person on the stand or rack are real. But court transcripts don't strike me as full-fledged interviews either. With the exception of public inquisitions/confessions, they seldom leave the courtroom. They are also beside the point: they are evidence which is used to render judgement. The judgements are what really matter in the court, they are what gets read and absorbed into the general body of law, not the interviews or other pieces of evidence.

So I think the interview must have started with journalism, and it is there the first true interview will be found.

Hugh Steinberg

PS: Paparzzi probably sprung up once cameras became light enough to take snapshots (turn of the century), newspapers could print photos cheaply (half-tone printing, 1881), and notions of mass celebrity became commonplace. Just post WWI is my guess, with Valentino as the first victim.

↑ Index

36. henry g
Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
Wed 3 Sep 1997

On Tue, 2 Sep 1997 18:42:03 -0500 Thomas Bell said:
>I can't tell if this is jaded dismisal or agreement. In any case the quote >is Piombino's.
>I neither defended the "avant-garde" or attacked Theroux. I intended to >juxtapose the >quote and the recent threads to point out that this is, as it long has been, >a "boundary >land" of conflict with shifting names and combatants. The problem for me is >that there >is no adequate term for this conflict. I was seeking some clarification and >ideas.
>Perhaps in doing so I was not as clear as I should have been. As you say,
>"setting up
>who's 'the enemy' is the oldest chessgame."

Having missed the Theroux/Ashbery thread perhaps I only added confusion. I was responding directly to the paragraph from N. Piombino, not to its connection with previous discussion. My point was I disagreed with the idea that the nature of language in itself sets up a division between "the State" and the "historicists" who uphold it on the one hand and writers on the other. To me this simply romanticizes already-established ideas of who or what the avant-garde is (as I put it in a post a few weeks ago - cynically - the "avant-garde" is that portion of the writing world that already has a foothold in the "canon"). The problem for me with the established "experimental" poetry community is that it justifies itself in academic circles using definitions of "language" I don't accept. See, for example, Rosmarie Waldrop's talk in the Diacritics issue that Maria Damon mentioned. Waldrop pushes the notion that avant-garde postmodern writing in 20th century (Stein, Zukofsky, many others she quotes & alludes to) represents an historical shift in style & method from Romanticism, & bases this on a borrowing from formalist criticism - the Jakobson axes of metaphor and metonymy, or vertical identity and horizontal combination. The new style represents an openness to both language-as-origin and the material, social world by emphasizing COMBINATION over symbol and hierarchy. This shift in style may be inarguable, and may represent a real experimental-artistic alternative to mainstream individualist approaches to signature style. But the definition of poetic language underpinning it here is not one I can go along with.

- Henry Gould
>>>
>>>"Language today is the enemy of the State and historicity

>>>because of its power to germinate systems antithetical to >>>custom, since custom is partly dependent on coded laws.
>>>Historicism, while allying itself with writing, knowing its >>>enlarged scalar power as a reread document, distrusts its >>>projective character (translation: stability). Taking >>>language truly seriously as a partly known, partly >>>unknowable form of energy is instantly recognizable to >>>historicism as an antithetical challenge." _ Piombino,
>>>"Writing and Experiencing"
>>>
>>
>>Seems to me language-as-word is only one facet of a unitary/divided >>meta-language of the mind, which includes words, which includes "the >>State", etc. And setting up who's "the enemy" is the oldest chessgame >>in the world - nothing avant-garde about it. It's called "us vs. them"
>>and it's about projecting psychological conflicts inherent in human nature.
>>The idea that "writers" or "language artists" are avant-garde because >>they're breaking down stilted social codes ignores the fact that words >>and the book have been used as weapons of control, revenge, self->>glorification, order, resentment, heirarchy, etc. etc. since the slaves
>>of Assurbanipal or whoever started pressing wedges in the clay.
>>Are these the historicists? They're the avant-garde in language tools.
>>- Henry Gould
>>
>>

↑ Index

37. David R. Israel

Re: which david has the message?

Wed 3 Sep 1997

David B. --

> David I, wd you mind being that, listwise? I am prepared to be David B.
>
> David B
>
> Hey, hey. I myself would like to be David B.
>
> David B.

> George Bowering.

happily, if a bit belatedly, I cede (for what worth) all claims to "David B" to Mr. Bromige, and will willingly answer to the salutation "David I" -- though generally I've always been signing off as

d.i.

```
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

that's not to say this pentametric sound is tantamount to paramount abusrdness --
'ere auburn leaves of autumn grace the ground
I'm glad enough the sad enough have heard this [etc.]

d.i.

↑ Index

39. Pritchett,Pat

Re: my father among the earlier paparazz

Wed 3 Sep 1997

Thanks, David, for that wonderful anecdote. You ask, quite properly, if somewhat rhetorically,"Where is the line between muckraking & "Project Censored"? I mean where, legally, could one be drawn?" I'm afraid the attempt to stop present abuses would only lead to further and more serious abuses, providing yet another cloak for those up to no-good to conceal their skulduggery even more effectively.

Interesting about the re-staging of events done by Gaumont. The earliest instance I know of this sort of thing dates from 1898, when the Vitagraph Picture Co. "re-enacted" the taking of San Juan Hill by TR. The idea was TR's and he got it from Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show, which itself popularized re-enactments. The film fixed in the public's mind the notion that mounted soldiers could successfully charge uphill against machine gun emplacements, which of course did not happen.

So, the abuse has been around since the inception of the medium, rather in the same way that lying has been around since people mastered speech, and later, writing. One could make an argument that tabloids exist in relation to the mainstream press in the same way that organized crime acts as a mirror for bourgeois values. The former is merely the shadow cast by the latter. To demonize the former is to miss the point - which for me, anyway, is that all modes of data transmission are subject to corruption. The mainstream press is able to defend itself against charges of vulgarity, as if that were the most heinous crime it could commit, but when it comes to coddling corporate interest, censoring stories, or acting as apologists for official policies that are clearly causing real harm and grief to thousands of people, mum's the word.

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

40. Judy Roitman
Re: my father among the earlier paparazz
Wed 3 Sep 1997

> One could make an argument that tabloids exist in relation to the mainstream press in the same way that organized crime acts as a mirror for bourgeois values. The former is merely the shadow cast by the latter.
>
> Patrick Pritchett

Are you sure it doesn't go the other way? This is not entirely facetious: consider that the early press resembled tabloids more than the NY Times, and that the founders of aristocracies often were those who could terrorize and control more effectively than others.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

41. Maria Damon
address query
Wed 3 Sep 1997

---

anyone got an address for robert zamsky? please backchannel asap. thanks

↑ Index

42. Pritchett,Pat
Re: my father among the earlier paparazz
Wed 3 Sep 1997

You raise a very good point Judy and it may well be that that was the case. The first newscasters were town criers, usually in the service of the local ruler. When the printing press was invented, the veil of darkness was not lifted with the kind of majestic sweep we typically imagine since the powers that be rushed to print their own versions of things so as to keep a firm grip on the reins, just as you say. So maybe a better analogy would be one that cast tabloids as atavistic versions of the modern press which still thrive because of people's hunger for _narrative_ in whatever form. ---------- From: Judy Roitman

To: POETICS Subject: Re: my father among the earlier paparazz Date: Wednesday, September 03, 1997 10:42AM

> One could make an argument that tabloids exist in relation to the mainstream press in the same way that organized crime acts as a mirror for bourgeois values. The former is merely the shadow cast by the latter.
>
> Patrick Pritchett

Are you sure it doesn't go the other way? This is not entirely facetious: consider that the early press resembled tabloids more than the NY Times, and that the founders of aristocracies often were those who could terrorize and control more effectively than others.

↑ Index

43. aldon l. nielsen
(no subject)
Wed 3 Sep 1997

To: [redacted]
Subject: new adress etc.

am now back with the list via the new email address shown here -- will not be able to read email from home for a few weeks yet -- apologies to any and all concerned --

Now, about that LA Times review of Ashbery -- not only did they spell Olson's name incorrectly (unless they meant Elder Olsen????), but there was a misquote of Kenner and much additional sloppiness -- You (the rhetorical "you" of course) might think that before accusing a poet of being a fraud you should at least check the spelling of the name --

↑ Index

44. Thomas Bell
Re: thot on theroux and avant-garde
Wed 3 Sep 1997

Henry G.
Thanks for the clarification. I'll leave it to Nick to respond about the quote if he chooses. My interest is in the area between "history" and "writing" as that's where the _action_ is.
tom bell

At 07:52 AM 9/3/97 EDT, henry g wrote:
>On Tue, 2 Sep 1997 18:42:03 -0500 Thomas Bell said:

>>I can't tell if this is jaded dismisal or agreement. In any case the quote >>is Piombino's.
>>I neither defended the "avant-garde" or attacked Theroux. I intended to >>juxtapose the
>
>Having missed the Theroux/Ashbery thread perhaps I only added confusion.
>I was responding directly to the paragraph from N. Piombino, not to its >connection with previous discussion. My point was I disagreed with the >idea that the nature of language in itself sets up a division between >"the State" and the "historicists" who uphold it on the one hand and >writers on the other. To me this simply romanticizes already-established >ideas of who or what the avant-garde is (as I put it in a post a few >weeks ago - cynically - the "avant-garde" is that portion of the writing >world that already has a foothold in the "canon"). The problem for me >with the established "experimental" poetry community is that it justifies >itself in academic circles using definitions of "language" I don't accept.
>See, for example, Rosmarie Waldrop's talk in the Diacritics issue that >Maria Damon mentioned. Waldrop pushes the notion that avant-garde >postmodern writing in 20th century (Stein, Zukofsky, many others she >quotes & alludes to) represents an historical shift in style & method >from Romanticism, & bases this on a borrowing from formalist >criticism - the Jakobson axes of metaphor and metonymy, or vertical >identity and horizontal combination. The new style represents an openness >to both language-as-origin and the material, social world by emphasizing >COMBINATION over symbol and hierarchy. This shift in style may be >inarguable, and may represent a real experimental-artistic alternative >to mainstream individualist approaches to signature style. But the >definition of poetic language underpinning it here is not one I can >go along with.
>
>- Henry Gould
>>>>

↑ Index

45. Hugh Steinberg
Re: my father among the earlier paparazz
Wed 3 Sep 1997

Actually, it was not uncommon for Civil War photographers to rearrange the bodies of fallen soldiers into more "picturesque" poses.

Hugh Steinberg

Patrick writes:

> Interesting about the re-staging of events done by Gaumont. The earliest instance I know of this sort of thing dates from 1898, when the Vitagraph Picture Co. "re-enacted" the taking of San Juan Hill by TR. The idea was TR's and he got it from Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show, which itself popularized re-enactments. The film fixed in the public's mind the notion that mounted soldiers could successfully charge uphill against machine gun emplacements, which of course did not happen.
>
> So, the abuse has been around since the inception of the medium, rather in the same way that lying has been around since people mastered speech, and later, writing. One could make an argument that tabloids exist in relation to the mainstream press in the same way that organized crime acts as a mirror for bourgeois values. The former is merely the shadow cast by the latter. To demonize the former is to miss the point - which for me, anyway, is that all modes of data transmission are subject to corruption. The mainstream press is able to defend itself against charges of vulgarity, as if that were the most heinous crime it could commit, but when it comes to coddling corporate interest, censoring stories, or acting as apologists for official policies that are clearly causing real harm and grief to thousands of people, mum's the word.
>
> Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

46. Karen and Trevor
address search
Thu 4 Sep 1997

Can someone backchannel me with Jena Osman's address? Thanks in advance!

Karen McKevitt
[redacted]

↑ Index

47. George Bowering
Re: which david has the message?
Thu 4 Sep 1997

I dont care. Whenever I mention David B. here I will be referring to David Israel.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,

Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

48. Lawrence Upton.

(no subject)

Thu 4 Sep 1997

<<Actually, it was not uncommon for Civil War photographers to rearrange the bodies of fallen soldiers into more "picturesque" poses.

Hugh Steinberg
>>

Pardon me if this has been sd, I am following this thread intermittently - it was V common for First WW footage, much of it now taken to be real, to be reenactments by actors often nowhere near the theatre of war... now there's a phrase

L

↑ Index

49. David R. Israel

shadows cast

Thu 4 Sep 1997

[was, Re: my father among the earlier paparazz]

this is note David Bromige (but thanks anyway GB) --

Judy Roitman quotes & comments:

> One could make an argument that tabloids exist in relation to the mainstream press in the same way that organized crime acts as a mirror for bourgeois values. The former is merely the shadow cast by the latter.
>
> Patrick Pritchett
>
> Are you sure it doesn't go the other way? This is not entirely facetious: consider that the early press resembled tabloids more than the NY Times, and that the founders of aristocracies often were those who could terrorize and control more effectively than others.

interesting. However, to trace the teleology (if that's the word) -- the process of origins over time -- is not the same as sketching the present relationship. That is, what was, in a prior era, central, can become, on a later stratum, peripheral, once the centrality of origins has been displaced by more refined offspring (or spinoff).

To schematize:

The primordial proto-mafiosi is first supplanted by

The shining civilized aristocracy which is then shadowed by

The renascent mafia (mirroring the aristocrats & simultaneously carrying ancient memory of primordial originality intact)

Perhaps this 3-level pattern can be observed rather broadly, in a variety of applications.

d.i.

```
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

>bodies of fallen soldiers into more "picturesque" poses.
>
>Hugh Steinberg
>>>
>
>Pardon me if this has been sd, I am following this thread intermittently - >it was V common for First WW footage, much of it now taken to be real, to >be reenactments by actors often nowhere near the theatre of war... now >there's a phrase
>
>L
>
>

↑ Index

51. Juliana Spahr
Chain / 4 now available
Thu 4 Sep 1997

NOW AVAILABLE

C H A I N / 4 process and procedures

From “Editors’ Notes”:

This issue explores how things get made. It collects work that exposes the procedures, the processes, and the constraints that accompany creation. Procedural work is important because it requires a consciousness of language and form that resonates with the way we experience the world. It offers a necessary understanding of those experiences as it allows us to approach them from different angles and through new analogies. Please consider these examples invitations for writing as well as reading. Please make new pieces, new procedures, new experiences.

The issue includes Kui Dong’s and Denise Newman’s “Cess (after Turandot),” an opera; Dan Featherston’s “She Had Some Horseworms” and Cliff Fyman’s “My Job to Throw Out Dead Mouse,” ouilipian language replacements; Peter Gizzi’s “Ode: Salute to the New York School 1950-1970 (A Libretto)”; Robert Kelly’s “Path Moss,” a homophonic translation of Holderlin’s “Patmos”; Carl Lehmann-Haupt’s “The Poetry of Design/The Design of Poetry,” visual definitions of poetic terms; Clarinda Mac Low’s “Sabotage,” a transcript of a performance; Miranda Maher’s “Difficult Books,” manipulations of books; Margaret Morton’s “Pepe Otero: Architect of Shantytown,” photographs that document the building and destruction of a house over time; Catherine Schieve’s “Catahoula Benefete, Southwest Louisiana, November 1995,” a minute of film of a dance; Saturo Takahashi's "Dumping Sight: Landscape/Landscope," photographs of a big device made of a record, record player, water, and glass that manipulates sight.

Full list of participants: Michael Basinski Guy R. Beining Dodie Bellamy Caroline Bergvall Jeremy Caplan Janet Cohen Cynthia Conrad Maria Damon Tina Darragh Jean Day Alan Devenish Kui Dong Dan Featherston Joel Felix Keith Frank William Fuller Cliff Fyman Peter Gizzi Dale Going Jessica Grim Lauren Gudath Jorge Guitart Dick Higgins John High Jennifer Hoff P. Inman Jon Ippolito David Kellogg Robert Kelly Kevin Killian Wendy Kramer Carl Lehmann-Haupt Tan Lin Lori Lubeski Brigid McLeer Clarinda Mac Low Jackson Mac Low Miranda Maher Lizbeth Marano William Marsh John Mason E.A. Miller Laura Moriarty Margaret Morton Harryette Mullen Laura Mullen Edward Mycue John Newman Sianne Ngai Denise Newman Patricia Pruitt Joan Retallack William van Roden Lisa Samuels Leslie Scalapino Catherine Schieve Ilana Simons Mary Margaret Sloan Satoru Takahashi Chris Tysh Chris Vitiello Keith Waldrop Rosmarie Waldrop Hannah Weiner Susan Wheeler Janet Zweig.

This is a plea.

We want to encourage you to subscribe to Chain.

Chain is broke. We have $.58 in our bank account right now.

Word is that one can not run a journal using subscribers as the primary source of funding. (I just had two people tell me that this week alone.)

But there doesn't seem to be any other way to do it. Grants are disappearing. We've unfortunately learned that we can not rely on bookstore sales in any way. With the exception of SPD, our distributors barely pay us what little they do owe us (they tend to be going out of business right now any way; the returns from large corporate bookstores are killing them as much as they are killing us).

Help us prove this word wrong by subscribing or making a donation.

We need around 350 subscribers per issue to stay solvent. While 350 subscribers doesn't seem impossible, getting people to subscribe has been difficult. We have less than 100 right now.

If for whatever reason you don't want to subscribe to Chain, then please subscribe to some other journal. Our situation is not unique right now. Basically the middle man heavy system of book distribution is no longer working. And in this anti-independent publication era we need grassroots organizing and cottage industries more than ever.

Subscription rates:

$20 for two issues
$12 for Chain / 5 on different languages (emphasis here will be on work in more than one language)
$10 for Chain / 4 on process and procedures

Free copy of the Lab Book upon request with a two issue subscription as long as supplies last.

(The Lab Book is edited by Jena Osman with work by Elizabeth Burns, Lew Daly, Jefferson Hansen, Peter Gizzi, Cynthia Kimball, Jena Osman, Juliana Spahr, Bill Tuttle, Mark Wallace, and Elizabeth Willis. The Lab Book is a collection of ten core poems written by ten different writers. Each core poem is followed by nine responses. It is an investigation of ideas of community and workshop.)

Email orders are accepted.

Chain
3029 Lowrey Avenue, no. A-1102
Honolulu, HI 96822

Please make checks payable to Chain.

↑ Index

52. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Free Cuisine
Thu 4 Sep 1997

To my knowledge, Elliza McGrand hasn't announced the publication of the latest Free Cuisine #17, a poetry webzine which she co-edits, but I don't think I'd be amiss in directing the List's attention to it.

You can find it at: www.on-net.net/~cca/wowzine/wowzine/html

Okay, so I'm in it. But so are listmembers Henry Gould, Matthias Regan, Rachel Levitsky, Joel Lewis, David Israel and David Bromige, who's written a marvelous story called "Irish." There is much besides to recommend this issue, including a poem by Scott Keeney entitled "Five Songs By Tristan Who?"

Check it out!

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

53. Don Cheney
Re: Free Cuisine
Thu 4 Sep 1997

patrick,

you've got a typo in your URL. it should be

http://www.on-net.net/~cca/wowzine/wowzine.html

don

> To my knowledge, Elliza McGrand hasn't announced the publication of the latest Free Cuisine #17, a poetry webzine which she co-edits, but I don't think I'd be amiss in directing the List's attention to it.
>
> You can find it at: www.on-net.net/~cca/wowzine/wowzine/html
>
> Okay, so I'm in it. But so are listmembers Henry Gould, Matthias Regan, Rachel Levitsky, Joel Lewis, David Israel and David Bromige, who's written a marvelous story called "Irish." There is much besides to recommend this issue, including a poem by Scott Keeney entitled "Five Songs By Tristan Who?"
>
> Check it out!
>
> Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

54. Daniel Zimmerman
(no subject)
Thu 4 Sep 1997

mark weiss wrote:
>
> Likewise WWII--the raising of the flag at Iwo Jima, MacArthur's landing in > the Phillipines. Also common to rewrite history thru the editing of > otherwise honest film footage. Hitler didn't dance a jig for the camera > when France surrendered.
>
> At 09:37 AM 9/4/97 +0100, you wrote:
> ><<Actually, it was not uncommon for Civil War photographers to rearrange
> >the > >bodies of fallen soldiers into more "picturesque" poses.
> >
> >Hugh Steinberg

> >>>
> >
> >Pardon me if this has been sd, I am following this thread intermittently -
> >it was V common for First WW footage, much of it now taken to be real, to > >be reenactments by actors often nowhere near the theatre of war... now
> >there's a phrase
> >
> >L
> >
> >
Mark,
Do you have a source for the Hilter jig bamboozle [& other such shenanigans]?

Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

55. David Bromige
the signifier known as george bowering / which david has the message
Fri 5 Sep 1997

---

henceforth when i write "George Bowering" it means Michael Ondaatje, except on thursdays before noon when it means George Stanley, or sundays between 3 and 5 p.m. when it means Fiona Sharp. When i mention the book _Bowering's B.C._ I will actually be referring to _The Decline & Fall of the Roman Empire_. If I allude to Gb's poetry collection, _Kerrisdale Elegies_ , what will be intended will be _Watt_ , by Samuel Beckett. Should I write "Georege Bowering's navel has lint in it," I will really be saying "William Butler Yeats was a dab hand at badminton." The expression "Bowering picked absent-mindedly at his nostril-hairs" should be taken as saying "Laurence Olivier never acted better in movies than when he was with Michael Caine." If I wish to tell the List, "Evelyn Waugh scarcely improved with age" I think I shall say, "George Bowering opens his boiled egg at the wide end." Oh, and "Bowering cracks his knuckles during sex" will mean "Bowering is incorrigible ask his wife." David I

↑ Index

56. lee ann brown
Scully & Healey reading--9/6, NYC
Fri 5 Sep 1997

Attention:
New York City types & all in vicinity:

SURPRISE POETRY READING!

MAURICE SCULLY & RANDOLPH HEALEY over from IRELAND appearing
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th 8pm
SEGUE Performance Space
303 East 8th Street
Donation requested 3-5$

↑ Index

57. George Bowering

Re: the signifier known as george bowering / which david has the message

Fri 5 Sep 1997

What an unkind cut! I open my boiled egg at the pointy end, as does any sensible person, because you cant have the smaller end pointing downwards! Tch!

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

58. David Bromige

big end versus little end

Fri 5 Sep 1997

Geroge Bowering knows he says which end is up. Others arent so sure. That he knows that. Its late at night, here amid the puffy sea-clouds and the thudding apple orchards, but isnt me memory correct that Swift has a conflict between Big endians and Little endians? Or did I dream that up sometime & nw its like a true memory? Anyway, if Goerge is a Big Endian then his wife, Angela, is likely a Little Endian, because married couples polarize to simplify the world. George, tell us about reading with Robin Blaser on Salt Spring Island, you cant have ben as bizarre as he says you were. (just kidding). (just planting the seed of dfoubt,Its my job, like Cato's job with Peter Sellers.

↑ Index

59. Henry G
I toddled to a reading
Fri 5 Sep 1997

I caught the tail end of a 2-day Irish poetry visit at Brown Univ. - Dublin poets Billy Mills & Catherine Walsh read. 2 fine writers - in different ways writing a "social" poetry - not that they recycle "public" issues or themes, either directly or indirectly - but that rather than telling personal stories, they find a meditative/dramatic language of social perception - I admired their independence - the poems seem "finished" rather than over-reaching - Walsh a playful, deadpan writer - intersperses overheard street talk with funny elementary-school how-I-construct-this elements - Mills I appreciated for clarity of perception - there is something to be said for "integrity" or the "integral" aspect to a poem - I don't want to say unity - but the integration of thought, visual & aural perception, emotion, & language-rhythm is something to aim for - clear visual imagery (not obvious, but clear) is analogous to overall "harmony", the sense of completeness - not necessary, perhaps, but it helps - in the case of Mills, it's clear imagery in part because one of his themes is ongoing local mundane beauty & hidden ongoingness -

they have their own cottage industry over there, unfortunately I don't have the info here on how to obtain their publications but maybe when Randolph Healy gets back to the emerald, he can re-post some of that ? - Henry Gould

↑ Index

60. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Free Cuisine
Fri 5 Sep 1997

Thanks, Don. I also goofed on the zine's name. It's Free Cuisineart.

From: Don Cheney
To: POETICS
Subject: Re: Free Cuisine
Date: Thursday, September 04, 1997 6:39PM

patrick,

you've got a typo in your URL. it should be

http://www.on-net.net/~cca/wowzine/wowzine.html

don

↑ Index

61. William Marsh
Re: Free Cuisine
Fri 5 Sep 1997

Patrick:

are you sure this URL is correct? it got me nowhere...

bill

At 06:14 PM 9/4/97 -0500, you wrote:
>To my knowledge, Elliza McGrand hasn't announced the publication of the >latest Free Cuisine #17, a poetry webzine which she co-edits, but I don't >think I'd be amiss in directing the List's attention to it.
>
>You can find it at: www.on-net.net/~cca/wowzine/wowzine/html
>
>Okay, so I'm in it. But so are listmembers Henry Gould, Matthias Regan, >Rachel Levitsky, Joel Lewis, David Israel and David Bromige, who's written a >marvelous story called "Irish." There is much besides to recommend this >issue, including a poem by Scott Keeney entitled "Five Songs By Tristan >Who?"
>
>Check it out!
>
>Patrick Pritchett
>
>

↑ Index

62. David Bromige
Ass backwards--apologies
Fri 5 Sep 1997

Sorry, George is a declared _Little_Endian, therefore his wife is likely a _Big_Endian.

I might also have been clearer on this matter of domesticity and polarization. When a friend the other day said "My wife was nervous about the people camped beside us at these remote hot springs in eastern Oregon, so I didn't get to be," I understood a lot about marriage (& not before time). Facing outward, this polarization of roles makes for strength, for more points-of-view are possible, the landscape is more fully surveyed. Face-to-face, however, and as we know, it can cause trouble. I took the Bowerings as example due to their 35 years of marriage, & because Listlings revere GB, but I meant no harm in doing so, and might just as well have taken myself and Cecelia as instance. Or, literally, my father & stepmother, who in their later years had, according to my sister, a number of disputes centering on the correct end at which to open a boiled egg.

I dont know what any of this has to do with poetics. It was very late at night and my sleeping pill was speaking (witness the spellings). When I read the results this morning (surprised to find the message) I was only relieved it wasnt more irrelevant. But would someone respond re Big Endians vs. Little Endians--_is_ that Swift? David I

↑ Index

63. john_lavagnino
Re: Ass backwards--apologies
Fri 5 Sep 1997

Big-Endian and Little-Endian do go back to Gulliver's Travels; but they are now---no kidding!---the standard technical terms for two ways of ordering bytes within a word of computer memory. See that famous and authoritative compilation, the Jargon File, at http://www.ccil.org/jargon/jargon.html

for more on this.

John

↑ Index

64. Judy Roitman
Re: Free Cuisinart
Fri 5 Sep 1997

> patrick,
>
> you've got a typo in your URL. it should be
>
> http://www.on-net.net/~cca/wowzine/wowzine.html
>
> don

I was trying to read FC in my office which is where I access the Web but I kept getting all this music which is very uncool where I work and couldn't find a way to turn it off.

Please all you folks with complicated Web sites, please have pity on those of us who either have to pretend we are working all the time or who out of courtesy to those around us have to keep it down, way down.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
----
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

65. Christopher Reiner
Re: Interviews
Fri 5 Sep 1997

A late note on the interview thread: Steve McCaffery has something to say on that subject (and many others) in an interview with Clint Burnham from Witz 1.2. I've posted it online at:

http://www.crl.com/~creiner/witz/mccaffery.html

--Chris R.

↑ Index

66. Keith Tuma
Re: I toddled to a reading
Fri 5 Sep 1997

On Fri, 5 Sep 1997 08:17:00 EDT Rhode Island Rooster wrote:

> they have their own cottage industry over there, unfortunately > I don't have the info here on how to obtain their publications > but maybe when Randolph Healy gets back to the emerald, he > can re-post some of that ? - Henry Gould

One place to get many of the books of Maurice Scully, Randolph Healy, Billy Mills, Catherine Walsh, and others Irish and also British, is via Peter Riley's catalog and bookstore:

Peter Riley (Books)
27, Sturton Street
Cambridge, CB1 2QG
England

↑ Index

67. Lawrence Upton.
Re: Chain / 4 now available
Fri 5 Sep 1997

---

what wld the rates be to UK

i only have a sterling account

L

> From: Juliana Spahr <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Chain / 4 now available
> Date: 04 September 1997 23:11
>
> NOW AVAILABLE
>
>
> C H A I N / 4 process and procedures
>
>
>
>
> >From “Editors’ Notes”:
>
> This issue explores how things get made. It collects work that exposes > the procedures, the processes, and the constraints that accompany > creation. Procedural work is important because it requires a > consciousness of language and form that resonates with the way we > experience the world. It offers a necessary understanding of those > experiences as it allows us to approach them from different angles and > through new analogies. Please consider these examples invitations for > writing as well as reading. Please make new pieces, new procedures, new > experiences.
>
>
>
>
> The issue includes Kui Dong’s and Denise Newman’s “Cess (after > Turandot),” an opera; Dan Featherston’s “She Had Some Horseworms” and > Cliff Fyman’s “My Job to Throw Out Dead Mouse,” ouilipian language

> replacements; Peter Gizzi's "Ode: Salute to the New York School > 1950-1970 (A Libretto)"; Robert Kelly's "Path Moss," a homophonic > translation of Holderlin's "Patmos"; Carl Lehmann-Haupt's "The Poetry of > Design/The Design of Poetry," visual definitions of poetic terms;
> Clarinda Mac Low's "Sabotage," a transcript of a performance; Miranda > Maher's "Difficult Books," manipulations of books; Margaret Morton's > "Pepe Otero: Architect of Shantytown," photographs that document the > building and destruction of a house over time; Catherine Schieve's
> "Catahoula Benefete, Southwest Louisiana, November 1995," a minute of > film of a dance; Saturo Takahashi's "Dumping Sight: > Landscape/Landscope," photographs of a big device made of a record, > record player, water, and glass that manipulates sight.
>
>
> Full list of participants: Michael Basinski Guy R. Beining Dodie Bellamy
> Caroline Bergvall Jeremy Caplan Janet Cohen Cynthia Conrad Maria Damon
> Tina Darragh Jean Day Alan Devenish Kui Dong Dan Featherston Joel Felix
> Keith Frank William Fuller Cliff Fyman Peter Gizzi Dale Going Jessica > Grim Lauren Gudath Jorge Guitart Dick Higgins John High Jennifer Hoff P.
> Inman Jon Ippolito David Kellogg Robert Kelly Kevin Killian Wendy Kramer
> Carl Lehmann-Haupt Tan Lin Lori Lubeski Brigid McLeer Clarinda Mac Low
> Jackson Mac Low Miranda Maher Lizbeth Marano William Marsh John Mason
> E.A. Miller Laura Moriarty Margaret Morton Harryette Mullen Laura Mullen
> Edward Mycue John Newman Sianne Ngai Denise Newman Patricia Pruitt Joan
> Retallack William van Roden Lisa Samuels Leslie Scalapino Catherine > Schieve Ilana Simons Mary Margaret Sloan Satoru Takahashi Chris Tysh
> Chris Vitiello Keith Waldrop Rosmarie Waldrop Hannah Weiner Susan > Wheeler Janet Zweig.
>
>
> ----------
>
>
> This is a plea.
>
> We want to encourage you to subscribe to Chain.
>
> Chain is broke. We have $.58 in our bank account right now.
>
> Word is that one can not run a journal using subscribers as the primary > source of funding. (I just had two people tell me that this week alone.)

>
> But there doesn’t seem to be any other way to do it. Grants are > disappearing. We’ve unfortunately learned that we can not rely on > bookstore sales in any way. With the exception of SPD, our distributors > barely pay us what little they do owe us (they tend to be going out of > business right now any way; the returns from large corporate bookstores > are killing them as much as they are killing us).
>
> Help us prove this word wrong by subscribing or making a donation.
>
> We need around 350 subscribers per issue to stay solvent. While 350 > subscribers doesn’t seem impossible, getting people to subscribe has > been difficult. We have less than 100 right now.
>
> If for whatever reason you don’t want to subscribe to Chain, then please > subscribe to some other journal. Our situation is not unique right now.
> Basically the middle man heavy system of book distribution is no longer > working. And in this anti-independent publication era we need grassroots > organizing and cottage industries more than ever.
>
>
> Subscription rates:
>
>
> $20 for two issues
> $12 for Chain / 5 on different languages (emphasis here will be on work > in more than one language)
> $10 for Chain / 4 on process and procedures
>
> Free copy of the Lab Book upon request with a two issue subscription as > long as supplies last.
>
> (The Lab Book is edited by Jena Osman with work by Elizabeth Burns, Lew
> Daly, Jefferson Hansen, Peter Gizzi, Cynthia Kimball, Jena Osman, > Juliana Spahr, Bill Tuttle, Mark Wallace, and Elizabeth Willis. The Lab
> Book is a collection of ten core poems written by ten different writers.
> Each core poem is followed by nine responses. It is an investigation of > ideas of community and workshop.)
>
> Email orders are accepted.
>

>
>
>
> Chain
> 3029 Lowrey Avenue, no. A-1102
> Honolulu, HI 96822
>
> Please make checks payable to Chain.

↑ Index

68. red slider

Re: Free Cuisinart

Fri 5 Sep 1997

Unless it is a musical piece sounding its own tune, i'd vote for eliminating musyuk from poetry sites all together (and appreciate those that at least have a big 'turn off' button before entering the hospital zone). Its useless for me to try to read someones work over someone else's music - i don't even try. (my speaker vol. stays off)

red

I was trying to read FC in my office which is where I access the Web but I kept getting all this music which is very uncool where I work and couldn't find a way to turn it off.

Please all you folks with complicated Web sites, please have pity on those of us who either have to pretend we are working all the time or who out of courtesy to those around us have to keep it down, way down.

Judy Roitman | "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers!
Math, University of Kansas | memory fails
Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996

Note new area code

---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

69. George Bowering

Re: big end versus little end

Fri 5 Sep 1997

> . George, tell us about reading with Robin Blaser on Salt Spring Island,

We read in a church (that seems to be the norm--did the same in another Church on Vancouver Island a few weeks later) with the summer door open so that the dog could walk in and out, and the crows could comment on the norion of a serial poem. Her mainly read his latest section of the Great Companions series, this one Dante. I heard him read from it a month later in a roundhouse, where he read with Sharon Thesen. The Dante section, as you likely know, is the third one, following the Pindar and Duncan sections. But the Dante section is a whole book long! No one knows what the form or mode is; it uses all kinds of language, discourse, etc. Ah but Salt Spring Island. The evening before, we had dinner, and then breakfast in the morning, with Phyllis Webb, at the home of poet Brian Brett/ well, home! It is a beautiful huge long house full of curios and food, set in the best garden I have seen, and this garden becomes a farm greadually, and there were baby peacocks and peahens (when they are babies how do you tell?) on the lawn, being pursued by a cat, but the peahen then pursues the cat, who runs under the horse. And so on. Blaser, of course, was enthralled.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

70. Susan Wheeler

French Theory in America events

Fri 5 Sep 1997

Passing this along, for any interest out there --

Tues., October 7, 8:15, Jacques Derrida on "Deconstructions: l'Im-possible" (in French) NYU Tisch Hall, 40 West 4th Street, Schimmel Auditorium

Tues., October 14, 8:15 - Elisabeth Roudinesco on Jacques Lacan ("l'Histoire effacee) (in French) NYU La Maison, 16 Washington Mews

Mon., October 27, 8:15 - Francoise Gaillard on Barthes, La Maison (as above)

November 8 - Julia Kristeva -- for info, see below

November 13, 14 & 15 -- Colloquium on the Americanization of French Theory with Lotringer, Said, Sennett, Haverkamp, etc. -- for info, see below

November 21 & 22 - Colloquium events at The Drawing Center with Avital Ronell, Gayatri Spivack, Kathy Acker, etc., 35 Wooster Street, [redacted]

Tie-in events for this Colloquium too at the Anthology Film Archives on Second Avenue [redacted]

I know no more than what's here -- for information call NYU's La Maison Francaise at [redacted].

Susan Wheeler
[redacted] voice/fax [redacted]

↑ Index

71. George Bowering

Re: Ass backwards--apologies

Fri 5 Sep 1997

> . But would someone respond re Big Endians vs. Little Endians--_is_ that Swift? David I

Of course it was.

And I have a neat experience. Once my girlfriend Joan (David B. will remember her) and I were having an argument about which end of the boiled egg to open. We took it, as we did most disputes, to my father Ewart for his judgement. He said nothing but placed his boiled egg on its side in a little bown, cut it down the middle, and ate out of both halves.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

72. mark weiss
Re: Ass backwards--apologies
Fri 5 Sep 1997

This works for soft-boiled, too, with a little preparation. Carve, as we have, a shallow depression at each place setting, place egg in same, cut, and lick it out! No mess, and no dished to clean.

At 05:25 PM 9/5/97 -0700, you wrote:
>>. But would someone respond re Big Endians >>vs. Little Endians--_is_ that Swift? David I
>
>Of course it was.
>
>And I have a neat experience. Once my girlfriend Joan (David B. will >remember her) and I were having an argument about which end of the boiled >egg to open. We took it, as we did most disputes, to my father Ewart for >his judgement. He said nothing but placed his boiled egg on its side in a >little bown, cut it down the middle, and ate out of both halves.
>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
>   ,
>2499 West 37th Ave.,
>Vancouver, B.C.,
>Canada V6M 1P4
>
>fax: [redacted]
>
>

↑ Index

73. red slider
Re: Ass backwards--notes from the pointy-end
Fri 5 Sep 1997

Fer what its worth. The pointy end is where the innoculation of chicken eggs are done. The reason is simple, innoculants must be injected between the membrane and the shell and, if the egg is stood pointy-side up the airpocket forces the membrane to lie on the surface of the albumen and leaves a space to make the injection via automated equipment (I gather these are eggs used for research, I can't imagine innoculating table-ready eggs). My source is first-hand from my Uncle Joe who invented the process for Cutter Laboratories back in the 30's. Saved them mllions. Joe got nothing. He also discovered a cure for cancer I believe. But was light-years ahead of his time. He died last year at the age of 88.

red

↑ Index

74. David R. Israel
Re: Ass backwards--apologies
Fri 5 Sep 1997

From George B.:

> . But would someone respond re Big Endians
> vs. Little Endians--_is_ that Swift? David I
>
> Of course it was.
>
> And I have a neat experience. Once my girlfriend Joan (David B. will > remember her) and I were having an argument . . .

it's odd that I don't recollect said Joan. David B.

↑ Index

75. Ryan Whyte
Hiroshma m a 1997
Sat 6 Sep 1997

-

so agony hmm. From exactly 4 years after or was it 5

we walked autumn when you name

- across earthenware fused mirror ground wonder how we then shorn,

sunken marked 12000 ' not impacted but warmth of the square

```
        .
      .  ^  .
    .  < 0 >  .                I'm not sure,
   .  <  0-0  >  .              10000 or women in1
  .   <  0-*-0  >   .
   .  <  0-0  >  .
    .  < 0 >  .
     .  v  .
        .                      I'm not so sure
```

when this is read again 12000 y- storage

turning field
mark granite spikes in this room

so that it can be read when English and Japanese gone, say nothing of French

there in autumn start at falling leaves flowers because she's nervous

September 1997 cut bloodless yet incomplete yellow paper Florentia
I said I would write our s'arrive however

↑ Index

76. aldon l. nielsen
(no subject)
Sat 6 Sep 1997

To: [redacted]
Subject: occasional verse

has anyone else read Ted Hughes's poem in honor of Di? appears in this morning's LA Times -- Last line was exemplary of . . . well, you can guess perhaps it wasn't his best effort, as it wasn't quite a state occasion?

↑ Index

77. Peter Ganick

computer woes and potes & poets and ZINEFOUR

Sat 6 Sep 1997

hello---

due to some intense computer problems, i have not received any email since mid-august----now, i have solved some of these problems and am now in the process of replying to the messages received during that time which were stored at my server---- also, due to a demented tech support person i-won't-say-where, all the data on my hard drive was deleted, some of which was backed-up-----but not the submissions for POTEPOETZINEFOUR, the women's writing issue, which was promising to be a great issue---the writers who were to be included in that issue should resend their texts----thanks in advance for that----

POTEPOETZINEFIVE will be guest edited by alan sondheim and POTEPOETZINESIX will be guest edited by jim leftwich--- these will be sent in october---- please send all submissions for POTEPOETZINESEVEN, a general issue, after mid-october, when these problems have been solved and issues 4, 5, and 6 have been sent out---- also, during that mass deleting, my entire electronic address book vanished--- i have about 75% of the ZINE's subscribers addresses in hard copy, but the latest ones, from people who subscribed after, say, july first, may not be included--- if those people can resend their email addresses, i'd appreciate it---- i will be reentering the list in the next week into the netscape communicator 4.0's address book over the next two weeks--- thanks so much for your indulgence of bandwidth for this message----- i hope that in the future my computer situation will run more smoothly and look forward to publishing more poetry electronically--- also--- in hard copy through potes & poets press, four books are being published at this moment---they will be available solely through small press distribution, whose address is 1371 seventh st, berkeley ca, 94710---tel. for orders--

[redacted]--- the four are---- continuous discontinuous -- andrew levy -- $13.50 -- poetry, book two of levy's curve project catfishes & jackals -- susan smith nash -- $12 -- a collection of plays falling in love falling in love with you syntax -- sheila e. murphy -- $16.50 -- a selected and new poems echoes -- dennis barone -- $14 -- a collection of short stories only levy's book is available now, the others are 'at the printer', but should be available by october first---

out----
peter ganick

↑ Index

78. Herb Levy
Subtext Seattle reading change
Sat 6 Sep 1997

I don't think there are Seattle area folks on the list who don't already receive Subtext e-mail, though I could be wrong, but

Anyway, for the record, (& for any of you who have already made your travel plans) the October 16th reading previously announced as Ezra Mark and Jeff Derksen has been been changed to Ezra Mark & Tom Raworth. Derksen was unable to come out to the West Coast at that time, but we will reschedule a reading by him for a later date.

Thanks to the folks at the Kootenay School of Writing for fortuitously scheduling a reading by Tom Raworth for that weekend & of course to Raworth for being flexible in his travel arrangements.

&, hey, does anyone have a working URL for a KSW Web site? The one at wimsey doesn't seem to work.

Bests,

Herb

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

79. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Sat 6 Sep 1997

It was broadcast on British radio prior to the big performance

i found it far more moving than a bucket of figs

L

> From: aldon l. nielsen
>
> has anyone else read Ted Hughes's poem in honor of Di? appears in this > morning's LA Times -- Last line was exemplary of . . . well, you can guess
>
> perhaps it wasn't his best effort, as it wasn't quite a state occasion?

↑ Index

80. Rachel Loden
pome
Sun 7 Sep 1997

You can read the Hughes effort at http://www.bbc.co.uk:80/politics97/diana/poem.html

But buckle your seat belt--it really is painfully twee.

Rachel Loden

> aldon l. nielsen wrote:
>
> has anyone else read Ted Hughes's poem in honor of Di? appears in this morning's LA Times -- Last line was exemplary of . . . well, you can guess
>
> perhaps it wasn't his best effort, as it wasn't quite a state occasion?

↑ Index

81. robintm
Re: computer woes and potes & poets and ZINEFOUR
Sun 7 Sep 1997

Peter--

Sounds like you've been dealing with disaster. I send along my heartfelt sympathies (and I'm going to back-up my drive right after I send this message!!!)

I'm resending the two poems you accepted for ZINEFOUR. Please also resubscribe me if my address was one that fell over the precipice.

many thanks & good luck,

Robin

composition

dearly. meaning hovers above a child's mouth rimmed in roses wanting. my own desire interstices (my hungry chops). O's beauty against backdrop of desert sand his black the blue pride causes stares.

familiar if discomfiting town squares, which are round, a central park flanked by square, chunky houses shades of white. snow falls while we're there to cover things up or underline. little houses of death. I've lost words. couldn't come up with "cameo," dialect," or a firend's (an end to fire, flame?) name. parturition.

closed systems assert their authority. my anger bubbling over beyond through. his letter soft as butter. enter a woman's brain and sex cohabitating, terrestrial & heavenly upheaval. silence the illogica evidence ignorance's gaping hole.

Once there was the enveloping body and the enveloped body, the latter being the more mobile through what Aristotle termed locomotion (since maternity does not look much like "motion"

little licks and lover's bites. the man slips sex for six. the child nurses and I (mother). am aroused. juncture when pain is and hover between just before dropping or loss. bleeds. a grecian pattern the boundaries woman(ing) the man leaves you could cover a dark suit suite my body presses his into an interior body beyond some other word

****

record

for joan & lily

on the 9 to or from work. beauty of a device records thoughts. random captivity. mind out for groceries rent territorial positions or absence. power stations abandon landscape baby receives and telegraphs emotional content.

worldly vibrato. racked

the reviewer noted the writer winter charted the collapse of a marriage woman in the widest sense more than the sum of her parts. acts of continental drift naked bodies seem bodiless scaling walls there are veils everywhere rimmed around you awaken stenographer at heart

hotel janitor hand-me-down silver after fire syphllis adultery genetic bequest her dead heroin addict son man brother sweet baby daddy's whipping boy

others administer patient-controlled-analgesic. teaspoons of water. they take it out--ovaries, uterus. an archive for organs which might 'have to' sometime

I put it (lifting center to lips) the irreducible is a dream that rises to surface a catechism

I can say if they can't doubt looked her in the eye or grazed the student-body. all those O's lingering below the surface my mouth my hands endlessly. like a baby

can explain. astrology for medicine the nation animal husbandry. (he used udder or mammary.) dna and if a device records thoughts become quiescent.
as we duplicate sheep ourselves or russian nesting dolls my nipples swollen from having been pulled small blood oranges in a bowl

it makes no account of itself. every universe is in postures of release at neighborhood cafes youth calls attention as I begin to leave that hallway lipstick changes my coloring and the attention I get

Robin Tremblay-McGaw
Robin Tremblay-McGaw
Information Services Director
Trauma Foundation
Pacific Center for Violence Prevention

↑ Index

82. Jack Foley
Poetry at WebDelSol
Mon 8 Sep 1997

POETRY at WebDelSol

Web Del Sol at http://www.webdelsol.com presents the Fall 1997 Issue.

Four new superb collections of poetry and prose poetry by Martine Bellen, Russell Edson, Peter Gizzi, and Kim Addonizio. Also new works of poetry and other writing from North American Review, The Prose Poem, The Literary Review, AGNI, and Conjunctions. Other poet collections at WDS include those of David Ignatow, Dorriane Laux, and Kristy Nielsen.

↑ Index

83. dbkk
Small Press Traffic's literary soiree
Mon 8 Sep 1997

Small Press Traffic is pleased to announce the third of its popular Literary Soiree benefits to be held on Sunday, September 14, 1997. This year's event promises to be one of the most varied gatherings of writers that Small Press Traffic has ever assembled.

The public is invited to an afternoon of food, drink and music in the company of Greil Marcus, author of Lipstick Traces, Mystery Train, and Invisible Republic: Bob Dylan's Basement Tapes; Edward Espe Brown, author of Tomato Blessings and Radish Teachings and co-author of the well known Greens Cookbook; Terry Castle, author of The Apparitional Lesbian and Noel Coward & Radclyffe Hall; Edith Jenkins, author of Against a Field Sinister and Divisions on a Ground; Wendy Lesser, editor of The Threepenny Review and author of Pictures at an Execution: An Inquiry into the Subject of Murder; and Julie Shigekuni, winner of the 1997 PEN Oakland award for the novel A Bridge Between Us.

This year's soiree will once again be held at a gracious San Francisco home from 4:00 to 7:00 p.m. A tax-deductible donation of $40 - $60 is requested. For information and reservations, call [redacted].

This year's event will also include Small Press Traffic's second literary auction. Items to be auctioned include manuscript pages and signed works by such writers as Edward Albee, Martin Amis, Djuna Barnes, Ann Beattie, Merce Cunningham, Don DeLillo, Rita Dove, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Nadine Gordimer, Erica Jong, Galway Kinnell, Peter Matthiessen, Iris Murdoch, George Oppen, Adrienne Rich, James Schuyler, and Wallace Stegner, among others.

Backchannel if you're interested in receiving the text of the auction catalogue (54k).

Small Press Traffic was founded in 1974 by a group of writers and individuals who saw the need for an outlet for new and experimental writers and small press publications. From being primarily a bookstore, Small Press Traffic has evolved into a presenting organization sponsoring writing workshops and readings throughout the year, with special attention to emerging writers. Small Press Traffic's new home at New College will also house SPT's resource center and literary archive, scheduled to open this Fall.

↑ Index

84. robert drake
new releases from burning press
Mon 8 Sep 1997

BURNING PRESS announces the publications of our 2 latest:

SWARMS OF FUGUE by Jake Berry, illustrated by the author
25 pages - $4.00 ppd.

SEQUENCE by Nico Vassilakis, afterword by Marvin Sackner
26 pages, handbound - $8.00 ppd.

& still available:

BLACK FIRE by John Byrum - $5.00

MOUTH WATCH by Kristen Ban Tepper - $4.00

LAND OF SCOUNDRELS by Fabio Doctorovich - $7.00

WAS AH by John M. Bennett - $4.00

I, A SERIES by Mark DuCharme - $6.00

INVISIBLE ARIA by Tom Beckett - $4.00

BABBALLY by Miekal And - $30.00

Checks to: BURNING PRESS, PO Box 585, Lakewood OH 44107
Queries to luigi: [redacted]

↑ Index

85. Alan Jen Sondheim
upon their return
Mon 8 Sep 1997

-

To a T

Time for the scythe, time for the reaper
Time for the mowing which loses the lawn -
Torn to the right, paper is deeper
Than the homegrown print, than the home-grown lawn.
Then turn the home towards the metal deeper in paper
Timed towards torn flux, you know about the trace,
The ash, the bark, the tree, the foliage,
The paper of redwoods, sequoia, taller paper,
Taller than others, timed for the furrow,
Tinned for the moment, this memo torn from the pad,
Torn from the bedroom, kitchen, bath or closet,
Turned towards you from my torn lawn,
Torn paper deeper than you've torn my screen into.

↑ Index

86. red slider
Re: upon their return
Tue 9 Sep 1997

Alan,

this is exactly what I've been looking for. Just got finished adding eye of newt, socks of tennis and claw of spotted owl to my brew to sprinkle over the grounds of Georgia Pacific but damned if I could find a ready to print forest of household news. Added your page and the mixture and it bubbled noxiously poetent (not what you had in mind perhaps but hell I've used my belt buckle for adjusting my distributor -). Thanx.

red

To a T

Time for the scythe, time for the reaper
Time for the mowing which loses the lawn -
Torn to the right, paper is deeper
Than the homegrown print, than the home-grown lawn.
Then turn the home towards the metal deeper in paper

Timed towards torn flux, you know about the trace,
The ash, the bark, the tree, the foliage,
The paper of redwoods, sequoia, taller paper,
Taller than others, timed for the furrow,
Tinned for the moment, this memo torn from the pad,
Torn from the bedroom, kitchen, bath or closet,
Turned towards you from my torn lawn,
Torn paper deeper than you've torn my screen into.

↑ Index

87. David R. Israel

a poem of Han-Shan's

Tue 9 Sep 1997

---

some list denizens w/ longish memory may recollect my semi-coherent mutterings abt. principles of translation w.r.t. an attempt at a poem of Han Shan's of late I've redone (yet again) said 8-liner; here's showing same -- the grammar (from word order) follows the original closely cheerio

d.i.

notes: sit - may be, to sit in meditation ("Han Shan" ["cold moountain"] is the locale where this Tang dynasty Chinese poet repaired for a life of solitude); yellow springs - the underworld, a conventional euphemism
~~~~~~

| Once I went
| to sit at Cold Mountain
| & lingeringly
| remained these thirty years
| of late I came
| to call on pals & kinsmen
| more than half
| begone to the yellow springs
|
| so gradually fading
| as does to the guttering candle
| how long aflowing
| alike the meandering river
| this morningtide
~~~~~~

| aface a lonesome shadow
| unwontedly
| the tears twainsome dangle

Han Shan
~~~~~~
[trans. (c) david raphael israel 1997]

↑ Index

88. Hoa Nguyen
Writing experiments
Tue 9 Sep 1997

Dear List:

(Please excuse/let me now if this is a redundant request or topic)

Recently someone asked for help in locating B. Mayers writing experiments. I similarly would like some help-- I started a new writing workshop-- 1/3 time reading poems I bring to class (contemporary poets),2/3 time writing in-class-- and was wondering if everyone could send their favorite writing experiment/exercise to the list-- or make one up-- or send many ideas. And if it has an accompaning "model" poem, please tell me where I could find it.

I have collected alot of these over time, with multiple and endless variations, and it would be great to get some fresh ideas. I will post one of my faves latter...

Thanks a bunch--

HOa

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

89. David R. Israel
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 9 Sep 1997

Hoa --

> if everyone could send their favorite writing experiment/exercise to the list-- or make one up-- or send many ideas.

in case you're not aware of the volume, you might wish to look at the book that collected many & varied exercises (and discussions of same) from a range of American poets -- I don't recall the title, but the volume was published just a few years ago. Co-edited by poets Chase Twitchell & one other. (It was mentioned on Poetics some time ago.)
~~~~~~

d.i.

↑ Index

90. Carol Mirakove
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 9 Sep 1997

On Tue, 9 Sep 1997, David R. Israel wrote:

> in case you're not aware of the volume, you might wish to look at the book that collected many & varied exercises (and discussions of same) from a range of American poets -- I don't recall the title, but the volume was published just a few years ago. Co-edited by poets Chase Twitchell & one other. (It was mentioned on Poetics some time ago.)
>
> d.i.

The other editor is Robin Behn and the title is The Practice of Poetry. Some of the experiments are okay but the Twitchell/Behn compilation doesn't touch the Mayer/Bernstein list.

Carol

↑ Index

91. Christopher Alexander
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 9 Sep 1997

Hoa wrttts:
> was wondering if everyone could send their favorite writing > experiment/exercise to the list-- or make one up-- or send > many ideas. And if it has an accompaning "model" poem, > please tell me where I could find it.

well, not to stifle any list activity that this might provoke—I'd certainly be interested to talk abt.
procedure with you folks—but there's a good list @:

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/documents/experiments.html
(EPC-authors-Bernstein-poetry "experiments")

—a compilation of stuff that includes at least some (dunno how much) of the B. Mayer suggestions...

I'd also suggest making yr kids buy Chain #4, which is the (whatever it's called) "procedures" (?) issue, & shld be very useful in both opening discussion & "inspiring young minds". it's certainly something I'd do if I were teaching right now. the useful thing in this context is that many of the wrtrs have appended a brief note on procedure attached, including those by Jackson Mac Low, Dodie Bellamy & Joel Felix, Jeremy Caplan, Tina Darragh, Dan Featherston... the list goes on but I won't. & it's a good chance to support the 'zine, too (&, for that matter, a good chance to mention the, "ahem", economics of contemporary poetry...)

I'll share one procedure that I've used, though it's certainly nothing new: ex-listee Matthias Regan & I were—that is, until he lost 'is email, moving to SF 'n all—doing collaborative work in which we'd take turns assembling & transforming found texts. in other words, for instance, I wld cobble something together out of various sources that intrigued me—I think my last one was in 2 parts, the first being selected sentences from a book on the programming language Perl 5, & the second lifted from the "autobiographical" interview with Charles Bernstein in the most recent Boundary 2 (I love #s)—& send it to him as is. then he'd perform a series of free transformations & interpolations, adding lines, substituting or moving words, re-lineating the text, & so forth—& then send it to me for similar "treatment". when I say "free", more precisely what I mean is that transformations cld be of any nature—i.e., phonetic, graphical, conceptual etc.—& there was no limit to their # or severity, or the amount of text he cld add/subtract. so, not "free", really—let's just say that this isn't work that used "generative constraints" or even firm rules. the exercise ended when we agreed that the poem was "finished", i.e., when both of us were satisfied with it—though, in truth, the game is much more process- than product-oriented, &, while I like the work that came out of it, much of its excitement for me was its agonistic character. I've wondered what it wld be like to have this kind of negotiation with someone I don't know so well...

also, I have examples, but I'll have to dig them out...

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

92. red slider
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 9 Sep 1997

I think this may be well known and understood but for what...In group exercises I've always favored those that began with the question, "What resources do the participants actually bring to the project? What different levels of expertise in various experience areas do we have in the room?"

By this I do not mean writing experience, but various techne from the student's lives that might be brought into an exercise. From that information, both collective and individual exercises may be developed which play upon various ways of having students bring those experiences into the project. When that knowledge pool is known (say needleworking, aviation mechanics, linebackers (always those), the one who just buried their father, and so forth) then interesting exercises may be devised by orchestrating those talents rather than starting from the position that the exercise (individualized and technical) must come first and the talent/experiences realized and revealed secondarily through the product. (needleworkers, incidently, seem to be terrific at meter)

a small example:

an avid reader of comic books was assigned the task of writing an imaginary train wreck. Predictably the result resembled several pages of wheels, sprockets, screetches, frozen tableau, thought baloons. Good imagery (powerful, clipped, visual), atrocious construction and a Toys R' Us collection of odds and ends. The piece was next given to a carpenter (who recently changed specialties from house building to cabinet making) with the instruction to treat the first material as if he had just gone to the lumber yard for materials. Using mainly those materials and some connectives and prepositions and so forth - construct the cabinetry and appliances for a kitchen sink. I don't have the piece anymore but I do recall the line "bubbling foam shot from her throat".

red

↑ Index

93. william marsh
Re: Writing experiments / collaboration / agony
Tue 9 Sep 1997

---

in truth, the game is much more process- than > product-oriented, &, while I like the work that came out > of it, much of its excitement for me was its agonistic > character. I've wondered what it wld be like to have > this kind of negotiation with someone I don't know > so well...
>
> also, I have examples, but I'll have to dig them out...
>
> Chris
> ..

Chris

much interest in reading about your collaborative process / thanks / two things as well in your post interest me:

the idea of collaboration (especially using email) with someone you "don't know so well" / this past year i worked with a friend in Vancouver (carl peters, also a list-member) on a collaborative back-and-forth e-essay on Keats and Wordsworth (must admit it was mostly carl's enthusiasm that carried the piece) which was something very new for me / email affords that opportunity for rapid transfer and -lation that may not work so well via snail-correspondence / any-way, the only way i know carl is through email (met very briefly at the Blaser conference a couple summers back), and i'm sure others on the list have similar e-friendships that offer interesting opportunities for this kind of quasi-distant collaboration also, the "agonistic" nature of the collaborative process, which of late i've considered applicable to the writing process in general: roughly, the coil-recoil of "agonistic" and "antagonistic" forces played out in dramatic (?) fashion in the construction of a work / did a little research a while back on the early greek meanings of "agon" but haven't the notes handy / maybe someone else...?

bill marsh

↑ Index

94. Steven Clay
Drucker on artists' books
Tue 9 Sep 1997

Johanna Drucker's landmark study 'The Century of Artists' Books' is now out in paperback!

The cover blurb:

"This is the first full-length study of the development of artists' books as a twentieth century artform. This work situates artists' books within the context of mainstream developments in the visual arts from Russian Futurism and Surrealism to Fluxus, Conceptual Art, to Postmodernism. Topics include the discussion of the poetics of the book, the book as a metaphor, the conceptual space of the book, and books as narrative and non-narrative sequences. The book provides a foundation for future work in the history and critical interpretation of artists' books as well as offering a structure for teaching artists' books to practitioners, collectors and curators."

Don't miss this one. 377 pp. 200+ black & white photographs. $24.95 (+ sales tax in New York) and $6.00 postage. Poetics list subscribers take a 20% discount = $20 (+ appropriate sales tax + shipping)*

Published by Granary Books
568 Broadway #403
New York, NY 10012
[redacted]

↑ Index

95. red slider
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 9 Sep 1997

Kinesthetic Palimpsest Exercise: write a poem (or copy over the top of one you find particularly emotion producing) on top of a stack of #16 or #18 paper with a sturdy ballpoint (bic works fine) taking care to bear down as phrases or fragments evoke feelings in you and less pressure where they don't. Remove the top sheet, locate and copy over the tracing left on the undersheet. Compress or arrange as you like and use just those in the next layer of palimpsest. Stop when almost every word can be clearly seen on the under page or, up the ante and use two-sheets between layers.

red.

↑ Index

96. Henry Gould writing experiment
Wed 10 Sep 1997

This is a simple writing experiment appropriate for any writing class, from primary grades through senior citizen. All you need is a pencil, a sheet of paper, a pair of pliers, a toothpick, an old transistor radio, and a group of enthusiastic would-be writers.

First, place the paper and writing implement (i.e. the pencil) on a solid, flat surface. Take the pliers & smash or pry off the plastic frame of the radio (yard sale radios are cheap and work fine). Use the toothpick and pliers to create a nifty brain-antennae by attaching to handy forehead area of the writer. Pull out the transistor section of the radio and attach as best you can to the toothpick. After making sure the batteries are still functional, turn on the radio. Set volume to medium - not too loud. Now - using the pencil and paper, write down whatever comes through. You can switch channels, adjust the volume, whatever helps you in the writing process.

Once you have mastered this nifty experimental technique, you can teach it to others. Flairie McDougal, of the Writelit Project in East Lansing, MI, has produced an entire anthology of brain transistor poetry, titled HEAD SWITCH - POETRY FROM FOUR HUNDRED FOREHEADS, which will be available soon from Univ. of Left Overbie Press. Reserve your head trips now - only $24.95 pre-ordered. Special to list members.

& try it yourself! It works! Try AM 630 in Detroit - especially good for inspiration! (Jeannie Klappert heard the voice of Di there!) - Jack Spandrift

↑ Index

97. Mark Wallace
Misc. Proj.
Wed 10 Sep 1997

I'd like to point everyone in the direction of a very useful discussion between David Shapiro and Joseph Lease about the role of the "I" in poetry that appeared in the new issue of the Mark Prejsnar edited newsletter Misc. Proj. Mark's lurking around the list here somewhere, and I'd encourage you to contact him about the newsletter. There's been intriguing poetry and critical writing in each issue, but the Lease and Shapiro exchange (originally an e-mail discussion, I take it) seems particularly timely and useful.

Mark Wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:

| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

98. Susan Wheeler
a poem of Han-Shan's/Poetics Digest
Wed 10 Sep 1997

David (Israel!) -- I remember your earlier postings re Han Shan poem and like all, this last version stellar. On an unrelated note, I've been re-reading Fenollosa and wonder if you might shed some light on his emphasis on verbs in the Chinese language -- is the action, or relation, between agents really the primary focus of Chinese words, as he maintains? Back-channel would be appreciated! Thanks -- and also to Red for that great expertise-milking exercise. Susan Susan Wheeler [redacted] voice/fax [redacted]

↑ Index

99. David R. Israel
b.t.w.
Wed 10 Sep 1997

esteemed poetas,

when I first saw this msg., I almost trashed it. But as I read beyond the first few words, it got good.

Thought you'all might find it of passing interest.

d.i.

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------
Date: Tue, 9 Sep 1997 20:42:12 +0000
From: William Limbacher <[redacted]>
Subject: (Fwd) virus alert (fwd)

This just in : NEW VIRUS WARNING

If you see a message on the boards with a subject line of "Badtimes," delete it immediately WITHOUT reading it. This is the most dangerous virus yet.

It will re-write your hard drive. Not only that, but it will scramble any disks that are even close to your computer (20' range at 72 farenheit). It will recalibrate your refrigerator's coolness setting so all your ice cream melts and milk curdles . It will demagnetize the strips on all your credit cards, reprogram your ATM access code, screw up the tracking on your VCR and use subspace field harmonics to scratch any CDs you try to play.

It will give your ex-boy/girlfriend your new phone number. It will program your phone autodial to call only your mother's number.

It will mix antifreeze into your fish tank. It will drink all your beer and leave its dirty socks on the coffee table when there's company coming over.

It will hide your car keys when you are late for work and interfere with your car radio so that you hear 1940's hits and static while stuck in traffic.

"Badtimes" will make you fall in love with a hardened pedophile. It will give you nightmares about circus midgets. It will replace your shampoo with Nair and your Nair with Rogaine, all while dating your current boy/girlfriend behind your back and billing their hotel rendezvous to your Visa card.

It will seduce your grandmother. It does not matter if she is dead, such is the power of "Badtimes", it reaches out beyond the grave to sully those things we hold most dear.

It will rewrite your back-up files, changing all your active verbs to passive tense and incorporating undetectable misspellings which grossly change the interpretation of key sentences.

"Badtimes" will give you Dutch Elm disease. It will leave the toilet seat up and leave the hairdryer plugged in dangerously close to a full bathtub. It will wantonly remove the forbidden tags from your mattresses and pillows, and refill your skim milk with whole. It is insidious and subtle. It is dangerous and terrifying to behold. It is also a rather interesting shade of mauve.

These are just a few signs. Be very, very afraid. PLEASE FORWARD THIS MESSAGE TO EVERYONE YOU KNOW!!!

Fritz
[redacted]

Two rules for living a successful life: (1) Don't tell everything you know.

↑ Index

100. rob wilson
Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
Wed 10 Sep 1997

I do not feel like commenting on Ted Hughes's poem for Di-- I have nto read it (although that never stopped a cultural critic/anxious poet), but I would like to say a few meandering words about a mass media poem now inscribed in the domains on "global popular culture" (namely, our collective whitmanic heads):

"Candle in the Wind." Now I realize that trope of fugitive delicacy is not gong to win any vanguard-metaphor awards, but I must admit that the funereal combinatio n of that passage from Corinthians on caritas, the Elton John canonization-of-a-goddess lyric, and the scathing and oblique funeral oration were quite moving to me. I would invoke some term like 'ecclesiastical sublime' to describe it, but here my lapsed-catholic childhood and array of car accident deaths would enter in and I do not want to bore you with personal specifics. But I must say that, in hearing Elton John translate the 1973 version of his/ Bernie Taupin's lyric for Marily Monroe into a song for "England's rose" whose face is written in the stars and whose feet "forver trod on England's greenest hills," I was amazed how the Monroe-subtext got laundered out in almost all respects. The whole critique of predatory media hounding MM to death, gazing at her naked dead body, feastin on her pain and so on (as well as her own complicity in that apparatus of celebrity glamor-mongering) was completely sublimated into a hymn to a people's princess, a goddess of immortal beauty, a fugitive spirit passing through the spendid machinery of god, church, and UK nationhood. Now I take my neo-platonism wherever I can find it, from Smokey Robinson to Bleu Velvet, but I must admit that the previous lyric of ye old Elton/ Bernie (unless I filter it in as some kind of hidden subtext) had much more punch to it, pathos with a kind of rage and contempt (which Elton later had to displace on to Madonna, who ca handle it). So that poem goes into the public domain, and i am glad for it much more than for any work by Ted Hughes I must admit, but I just wonder about well say the complicity of such banal metaphors and soporific sublimity in creating a mood that made, say, Christopher Hitchens "puke all week" as he watched the rescue of the House of Windsor by (ironically) the House of Spencer (Elton John playing Edmund Spencer for the Fairie Queen of our aristocratic nostalgia to worship those of breeding "to beauty bred"). While I am going on a bit long about self-translatoin/translation, I have a brief question for David Raphael Israel translating Han Shan's "Cold Moutain" poems. I have read and took to my language-ridden heart the gary Snyder "Cold Mountain" poems in his translatoin (is it from around 1965? Kerouach has Japhy Rhyder (GS) working on them in "Dharma Bums which ends up a la Han Shan "sitting" in the mountains of Desolation Peak Washington or some such). Snyder's translations had a gnarled, raunchy, collquial, idiomatic twist to each phrase. I find your version a bit archaic in diction, with all kinds of Augustan inversions and word choices. What is the gain in such a translatoin by you? Are you pushing Han Shan towards a kind of formality of diction, a kind of high style phrasing? A student of mine, Steve Bradbury, was long working on Ho Chimin's poems, and wanted to bring back some of the formality/wit he felt American translators were losing in their moves from Chinese language into a quasi-Whitmanic free verse (see the issue of boundary 2 with those devious Bernstein/Mayer language experiments in it and the self-translation of Charles Bernstein by Charles Berstein into the "interview genre of selfhood" a la Paris Review). I have already taken too much of your computer space. Regards from the enclaves of bad and devious prose, Rob Wilson

↑ Index

101. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher

Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin

Wed 10 Sep 1997

---

rob, i'm happy you've seen fit to mention ej's rerendering of "candle in the wind"... personally, i too was moved, muchly, by blair/john/and the earl... i mean, moved beyond my sense of being exploited, or of exploitation taking place, or of sheer bombastic global media event, or of some presumed tragic realization of a monarchy in the throes... in fact, and though as you know i generally like hitchens, i found the moment completely absorbing, felt not a whit like puking... in fact i was all welled-up!... and in fact i prefer john's new version to the old!---i prefer it being about di's death than about mm's, even w/o the gay subtext that i assume forms part of the positive response to this tune...

anyway, i found mself thinking about why our various publics, me too, seem to need this oportunity to grieve---just assuming for a split-second that this desire hasn't exactly been foisted onto us... i mean, publics such as the u.s., which, it seems, do so little in the way of mourning, have in so many cases converted funerals and death and such like into yet another exercise in fast-food (yeah) convenience (monty python once riffed on this, as i recall)... i'm not sure the answer is to be found in global theater, either... i think there may be a very real need---dare i say human-societal need?---to come to terms with the significance of what many of my students call 'passing'...

at the grocery check-out line last saturday eve, kass and i chatted with the cashier, who told us she'd been watching "too much funeral"... and then she paused, saying ain't it weird, though?

be interested in what other folks think, esp. you folks on that side of the atlantic...

best,

joe

↑ Index

102. Brian McHale

Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin

Wed 10 Sep 1997

Good posting from Rob Wilson on Elton John's sublimation of Marilyn in Princess Di BUT please let's not confuse our Spen(s)(c)ers: Edmund Spenser-with-an-s might have been an intellecutal pimp for the Faerie Queene, but he's not an an- cestor of the Spencers-with-a-c who so obligingly freshened up the Windsor gene pool with those tall blonde genes of theirs. Credit where credit's due, like- wise blame. Brian

↑ Index

103. Timothy Materer

1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin

Wed 10 Sep 1997

---

1. rob wilson: "I do not feel like commenting on Ted Hughes's poem for Di-- I have not read it"
So, here it is:

Mankind is many rivers
That only want to run.
Holy Tragedy and Loss
Make the many One.

Mankind is a Holy, crowned Mother and her Son.
For worship, for mourning:
God is here, is gone.

Love is broken on the Cross.
The Flower on the Gun.

2."I must admit that the previous lyric of ye old Elton/Bernie (unless I filter it in as some kind of hidden subtext) had much more punch to it, pathos with a kind of rage and contempt"

Still, Elton John is an exemplary modernist or pomod/ in recycling an earlier song and setting up the Marilyn/Diana equation thanks to the ghost of the earlier text.

Timothy Materer, 228 Tate Hall, English Department
University of Missouri, Columbia MO 65211
http://www.missouri.edu/~engtim

↑ Index

104. red slider

Re: Badtimes Sampler

Wed 10 Sep 1997

```
OO
  h
    h
      h
       h
       h
        h m y
             y yyyyyyyyyyyyyyyyyy?
```

Actually I tried it - worked wonderfully. All things nicht & noxious now eliminated from my life. Small side-effect successfully managed by tethering milk and ice-cream at bottom of pond and tying other end to nearby chaise lounge. Computer residue sent to Museum of Modern Art for next installation. Pedophile paradox negotiated by falling for midget pedophile. She found my nightmares so arousing that she has successfully realligned her predeliction to target Epstein-Barr comic illustrators. As soon as I finish my "Be An Artist In Your Own Home Guaranteed" correspondence course we plan to be married.

This version of Badtimes set only to transfer you bank accounts to Red Slider, Ink. and soap your windows. If you'd like the full version please send what's left of your spare change to Badway distributors c/o my po box.

thank you,

Red Slider
Badtimes Distributor &
Artist-in-Residue

From: David R. Israel[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, September 10, 1997 8:27 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: b.t.w.

esteemed poetas,

when I first saw this msg., I almost trashed it. But as I read beyond the first few words, it got good.

Thought you'all might find it of passing interest.

d.i.

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------
Date: Tue, 9 Sep 1997 20:42:12 +0000
From: William Limbacher <[redacted]>
Subject: (Fwd) virus alert (fwd)

This just in : NEW VIRUS WARNING

If you see a message on the boards with a subject line of "Badtimes," delete it immediately WITHOUT reading it. This is the most dangerous virus yet.

It will re-write your hard drive. Not only that, but it will scramble any disks that are even close to your computer (20' range at 72 farenheit). It will recalibrate your refrigerator's coolness setting so all your ice cream melts and milk curdles . It will demagnetize the strips on all your credit cards, reprogram your ATM access code, screw up the tracking on your VCR and use subspace field harmonics to scratch any CDs you try to play.

It will give your ex-boy/girlfriend your new phone number. It will program your phone autodial to call only your mother's number.

It will mix antifreeze into your fish tank. It will drink all your beer and leave its dirty socks on the coffee table when there's company coming over.

It will hide your car keys when you are late for work and interfere with your car radio so that you hear 1940's hits and static while stuck in traffic.

"Badtimes" will make you fall in love with a hardened pedophile. It will give you nightmares about circus midgets. It will replace your shampoo with Nair and your Nair with Rogaine, all while dating your current boy/girlfriend behind your back and billing their hotel rendezvous to your Visa card.

It will seduce your grandmother. It does not matter if she is dead, such is the power of "Badtimes", it reaches out beyond the grave to sully those things we hold most dear.

It will rewrite your back-up files, changing all your active verbs to passive tense and incorporating undetectable misspellings which grossly change the interpretation of key sentences.

"Badtimes" will give you Dutch Elm disease. It will leave the toilet seat up and leave the hairdryer plugged in dangerously close to a full bathtub. It will wantonly remove the forbidden tags from your mattresses and pillows, and refill your skim milk with whole. It is insidious and subtle. It is dangerous and terrifying to behold. It is also a rather interesting shade of mauve.

These are just a few signs. Be very, very afraid. PLEASE FORWARD THIS MESSAGE TO EVERYONE YOU KNOW!!!

Fritz
[redacted]

Two rules for living a successful life: (1) Don't tell everything you know.

↑ Index

105. red slider
Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin
Wed 10 Sep 1997

2."I must admit that the previous lyric of ye old Elton/Bernie (unless I filter it in as some kind of hidden subtext) had much more punch to it, pathos with a kind of rage and contempt"

Still, Elton John is an exemplary modernist or pomod/ in recycling an earlier song and setting up the Marilyn/Diana equation thanks to the ghost of the earlier text.

Timothy Materer, 228 Tate Hall, English Department
University of Missouri, Columbia MO 65211
http://www.missouri.edu/~engtim

He does not qualify as bricoleur, though, since he's essentially recycling his own prior fabrications - junk engineering I'd say.

red

↑ Index

106. Don Cheney
Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin/Mounds Bar Connection
Wed 10 Sep 1997

Isn't "ecclesiastically sublime" the catch-phrase from the ad campaign for the MOUNDS candy bar?

Don

Rob Wilson wrote:
>from Corinthians on caritas, the Elton John canonization-of-a-goddess >lyric, and the scathing and oblique funeral oration were quite moving to >me. I would invoke some term like 'ecclesiastical sublime' to describe >it, but here my lapsed-catholic childhood and array of car accident deaths

==========
Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
[redacted]
==========

↑ Index

107. red slider
still at large
Wed 10 Sep 1997

It still remains that we need to locate the negatives of the final exposure - they ought be transferred at once to the Vatican catacombs and stored with the sepulchre of you-know-who.

red

↑ Index

108. Mark Prejsnar
Misc. Proj, missed projection mess process
Wed 10 Sep 1997

This morning I back-channelled Mark Wallace to thank him for the nice plug re: Misc. Proj. #3...

It just occured to me that I should reiterate the info folks need to order it:

single issue--$1.00
subscription to 4 issues--$3.50

Make all checks out to Mark Prejsnar.
and send to

641 N. Highland Ave. NE, #11
Atlanta, GA 30306

****
The issue includes mag and book reviews and new writing by David Shapiro, Joseph Lease, Sheila Murphy, Peter Ganick, John Lowther and others.

thanx again to Mark Wallace, whose own mag, Situation, is one of the brighter entities illuminating the current scene...

Mark Prejsnar
Atlanta

↑ Index

109. p. durgin
Re: Misc. Proj, missed projection mess process
Wed 10 Sep 1997

Hello Mark, et al so where do we write for a copy of this Situation thing that Wallace edits? And does anyone know if Wallace's "Towards a Free Multiplicity of Forms" essay is still available on line?

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Wed, 10 Sep 1997, Mark Prejsnar wrote:

> This morning I back-channelled Mark Wallace to thank him for the nice plug re: Misc. Proj. #3...
>
> It just occured to me that I should reiterate the info folks need to order it:
>
> single issue--$1.00
> subscription to 4 issues--$3.50
>
> Make all checks out to Mark Prejsnar.
> and send to
>
> 641 N. Highland Ave. NE, #11
> Atlanta, GA 30306
>
> **********
> The issue includes mag and book reviews and new writing by David Shapiro, Joseph Lease, Sheila Murphy, Peter Ganick, John Lowther and others.
>
> thanx again to Mark Wallace, whose own mag, Situation, is one of the brighter entities illuminating the current scene...
>
> Mark Prejsnar
> Atlanta

↑ Index

110. Christopher Reiner
Re: Misc. Proj, missed projection mess process
Wed 10 Sep 1997

Yes, Mark Wallace's essay "Towards a Free Multiplicity of Form" is still online at http://www.crl.com/~creiner/witz/form.html

↑ Index

111. Eliza McGrand

Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin

Wed 10 Sep 1997

---

my god. this hughes poem is W R E T C H E D!!!!

please, don't put something like that up without a "Could Be Dangerous To Your Health" warning timothy! but thanks for putting it up anyway.

re diana spencer's death, it has hit me horribly, i think because we are the same age, and i (along with many women i know) have gone through much of what she has in certain ways, so there is empathy along female lines (rejection, elation, work/children, betrayal, public betrayal, revenge, etc). we have all been discussing alot. it is hard to talk about past a certain level, sort of liek the anita hill/clarence thomas and the oj thing. one gets to a level of pain that is very silencing. her brother's funeral oration, in that it spoke the unspeakable, gave voice to so many strands of what was happening in a raw, honest kind of way, was extraordinary. i wept watching, and i don't often weep.

i work in hospice, and it has been a very very bad week (lost five patients this week, one very close, one fairly close) and so i speak from position of one immersed in funerals/death. but it is, from my perspective, rare for anyone to be so blazingly honest, and strong about confronting tasks for future and their roots in past. all too often, the gilding comes out.

as for saving house of windsor, i think the queen has come out of this looking pathetically (almost) awful, charles even worse, and so i wouldn't really say the house of windsor was saved by it all. the children were always fetching, photogenic, and charming, and have continued to be so. the only difference is that it is clear, now, that they are the future, not prince charles.

my biggest dilemna has been the tabloids. i always read them in grocery store lines, and now i feel too uncomfortable to do that. on the one hand, it is good to see celebs punctured -- frank gifford, for example, after the Moral Majority stance he seemed to assume, as well as kathy lee's stunning openness and pain as betrayed wife have brought the issue out to the public as nothing else has in a long time. but on the other, the kind of stalking princess diana suffered was hideous. david bromiges' post was, as always, brilliant other side. i am now working out in my mind alot of thoughts about public and private life, what shoudl be what... e

↑ Index

112. Don Cheney

Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin

Wed 10 Sep 1997

---

i was visiting my brother in the L.A. area this weekend and we were in the supermarket (Stater bros.), standing in the checkout line and he pointed to the empty slots where the tabloids used to be and stated that the supermarket was boycotting them because of Princess Di's death. then he pointed to the liquor area of the store and pointed out that that was still FULL UP, not taken off the shelves in protest. as i understand it, the driver of the car was hammered, three times over the french legal limit for blood/alcohol level.

don

> my biggest dilemna > has been the tabloids. i always read them in grocery store lines, and now > i feel too uncomfortable to do that. on the one hand, it is good to see > celebs punctured -- frank gifford, for example, after the Moral Majority > stance he seemed to assume, as well as kathy lee's stunning openness and > pain as betrayed wife have brought the issue out to the public as nothing > else has in a long time. but on the other, the kind of stalking princess > diana suffered was hideous. david bromiges' post was, as always, brilliant > other side. i am now working out in my mind alot of thoughts about public > and private life, what shoudl be what...
> e

==========
Don Cheney San Diego, CA, USA
http://www.geocities.com/Paris/5791
[redacted]
==========

↑ Index

113. red slider

Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility

Wed 10 Sep 1997

Martin Hickle informed me that the pavement background for "Pavement for a Dead Princess" was hard/impossible to read on some browsers. I have put a link in the original to a second copy without the background. Try again if you had problems the first time - my appologies.

red.

↑ Index

114. Pritchett,Pat

Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber

Wed 10 Sep 1997

Rob: I certainly agree with your comments on the sublimation process at work in John's new version - it smacks of the kind of defensive revision/repression Wordsworth performed in _The Prelude_ for instance and which Yeats was known for as well. And, too, one can't fail to notice the Blakean allusion in John's line about "England's green hills," equating Diana with Christ himself! In the unwieldy effort to conflate these two disparate icons, a certain necessary elision must take place I suppose. I marvelled not only at how swiftly D's apotheosis took place, but also at where it occured: at the intersection of royal tradition and pop fetishization.

Appended is a poem re: the media event of Diana (rather than D. herself). I happened to be studying ballads that day. Some of the quotes are from the Norton Anthology, including its footnotes; some from _On Signs_, edited by Marshall Blonsky, which contains a detailed critique of the royal wedding.

ELEGAIC PASTICHE

Narrative details might form
a ballad about a princess or any handsome young woman
"who would fain lie down."
But to classify the subject
by meters, focussing on
a catastrophic moment,
would also signal the typical betrayal and elevation
of a TV loneliness
as attested to by the attendance of crowds
and the spectacle of roses
and signatures, which are all
we have really, when you come down to it.
        Of a loveliness that daily
fed us nothing is certain
but the crisis of its aftermath.
It involves images of dearness,
replicated many times.

Kissing "the wounds that were so red."
"A species of deer distinguished"
by a supernal color
so that its gawky movements,
fabricated as they are,
give us a sense that an increase in the amount of available light is what lends consumerism its tragic tone,
the lieux de memoire of the "lost participatory dimension."

↑ Index

115. rob wilson

Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber

Wed 10 Sep 1997

"Of a loveliness that fed us nothing"/
"daily"
your line that says it all the royals now feeding on Blake and Jesus to consecrate their own lineage once again and we can only weap and applaud in the wings of westminister abbey or more likely be cleaning the chimney sweep so that the Mercedes Benz can dematerialize into drunken light at 120MPH and we can clean up the fragments of a saint who was no Dionysisus Crucified and Elton John can suck melancholy from the rose of England Di flipping over into Saint Theresa of the orphic tombs and we should read htis whole media act "through a glass darkly" puking into Vanity Fair with some cultural critiques for good measure

On Wed, 10 Sep 1997, Pritchett,Pat @Silverplume wrote:

> Rob: I certainly agree with your comments on the sublimation process at work in John's new version - it smacks of the kind of defensive revision/repression Wordsworth performed in _The Prelude_ for instance and which Yeats was known for as well. And, too, one can't fail to notice the Blakean allusion in John's line about "England's green hills," equating Diana with Christ himself! In the unwieldy effort to conflate these two disparate icons, a certain necessary elision must take place I suppose. I marvelled not only at how swiftly D's apotheosis took place, but also at where it occured: at the intersection of royal tradition and pop fetishization.
>
> Appended is a poem re: the media event of Diana (rather than D. herself). I happened to be studying ballads that day. Some of the quotes are from the Norton Anthology, including its footnotes; some from _On Signs_, edited by Marshall Blonsky, which contains a detailed critique of the royal wedding.

ELEGAIC PASTICHE

Narrative details might form
a ballad about a princess
or any handsome young woman
"who would fain lie down."
But to classify the subject
by meters, focussing on
a catastrophic moment,
would also signal the typical betrayal and elevation
of a TV loneliness
as attested to by
the attendance of crowds
and the spectacle of roses
and signatures, which are all
we have really, when you come down to it.
Of a loveliness that daily
fed us nothing is certain
but the crisis of its aftermath.
It involves images of dearness,
replicated many times.
Kissing "the wounds that were so red."
"A species of deer distinguished"
by a supernal color
so that its gawky movements,
fabricated as they are,
give us a sense that an increase in the amount of available light
is what lends consumerism its tragic tone,
the lieux de memoire of
the "lost participatory dimension."

↑ Index

116. Henry Gould
Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
Wed 10 Sep 1997

As I journeyed through the town of Ephesus
where silver-tonged photographers drove out St. Paul (for threatening their trade in the Diana biz) I noticed in a melancholy back alley
the statue of the Unknown Poet - defaced with anti-John graffiti,
drowning in bouquets
of infinite assembly-line Parisian
ressentiment

- Eric Blarnes

↑ Index

117. red slider
Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/BernieTaupin
Wed 10 Sep 1997

From: Don Cheney[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, September 10, 1997 11:36 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/BernieTaupin

i was visiting my brother in the L.A. area this weekend and we were in the supermarket (Stater bros.), standing in the checkout line and he pointed to the empty slots where the tabloids used to be and stated that the supermarket was boycotting them because of Princess Di's death. then he pointed to the liquor area of the store and pointed out that that was still FULL UP, not taken off the shelves in protest. as i understand it, the driver of the car was hammered, three times over the french legal limit for blood/alcohol level.

don

expect both general grocery and specialty liquor sales will show anticipated increases through third week of promotions and then fall back to normal levels.

red.

↑ Index

118. Lawrence Upton.
Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
Wed 10 Sep 1997

Pritchett,Pat @Silverplume <[redacted]>

wrote of Elton John's next hit

<<And, too, one can't fail to notice the > Blakean allusion in John's line about "England's green hills," equating > Diana with Christ himself!
>>

Maybe... it may be that he doesn't know the quote's source particularly but has come to something in the public domain associatively... this has been a good week for Elgar and Vaughan Williams. I don't think he is as consciously a maker as Yeats and Wordsworth

Others than Christ will walk on the hills of the green and pleasant land... the reference DOES suggest, I think, that through the intercession of Diana - co-co-redemptress - we can build the new Jerusalem using only a small donation and a bunch of flowers

Microwave the new heaven and new earth while you're in the shower getting rid of dark satanic pollution

I haven't heard this week of all weeks - referenda on Scottish and Welsh Assemblies - anyone complain that the the princess of WALES is located by EJ in England

Lawrence Upton

↑ Index

119. Pritchett,Pat
Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
Wed 10 Sep 1997

Dear Eric,
that was pretty good!

"Set phasers on pillow fight."

"If an ass stares into a tabloid, don't expect a saint to stare out - except maybe sometimes."

 - The Pseudo-Diogenes

From: Henry Gould
To: POETICS
Subject: Re: Elton John translates Elton John/Ber
Date: Wednesday, September 10, 1997 3:30PM

As I journeyed through the town of Ephesus
where silver-tonged photographers drove out
St. Paul (for threatening their trade
in the Diana biz) I noticed
in a melancholy back alley
the statue of the Unknown Poet -
defaced with anti-John graffiti,
drowning in bouquets
of infinite assembly-line Parisian
ressentiment

- Eric Blarnes

↑ Index

120. Charles Bernstein
Ear at HERE
Wed 10 Sep 1997

---

a slow response to a question that came up last month on the list:

The Ear Inn series in New York has moved to HERE, just around the corner from the Ear, and will be continuing in October on Saturday afternoons. I hope we will be able to get the full schedule posted before too long. HERE is at 145 Sixth Avenue (near Spring) and the phone number is [redacted].

↑ Index

121. Thomas Bell
Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility
Wed 10 Sep 1997

Missed original url. Please repost or backchannel.
tom bell

At 12:12 PM 9/10/97 -0700, red slider wrote:
>Martin Hickle informed me that the pavement background for "Pavement for a >Dead Princess" was hard/impossible to read on some browsers. I have put a >link in the original to a second copy without the background. Try again if >you had problems the first time - my appologies.

>
>red.
>
>

↑ Index

122. red slider

Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility

Thu 11 Sep 1997

Missed original url. Please repost or backchannel.
tom bell

http://www.ns.net/~TheFarm/poetry/Poetry_Lobby.htm

↑ Index

123. George Bowering

Re: 1. Hughes Poem 2. Elton John translates Elton John/Bernie Taupin

Thu 11 Sep 1997

> i was visiting my brother in the L.A. area this weekend and we were in the supermarket (Stater bros.), standing in the checkout line and he pointed to the empty slots where the tabloids used to be and stated that the supermarket was boycotting them because of Princess Di's death. then he pointed to the liquor area of the store and pointed out that that was still FULL UP, not taken off the shelves in protest. as i understand it, the driver of the car was hammered, three times over the french legal limit for blood/alcohol level.
>
> don

Quite right.

Are there, now, still places in the USA where seat belts are optional?

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

124. Alan Jen Sondheim
(from Jennifer)
Thu 11 Sep 1997

-

Julu Resurrectus

Turned and torn where Julu Born, She would have been!
Give me a name: Julu
New user...
Give me a password:Resurrecta
Please confirm password:"Jennifer, where are you?"

Passwords do not match.

Give me a name: Julu
New user...
Give me a password:Resurrectus
Please confirm password:Resurrectus

You have now entered the Portal of this Reality.

/Julu enters the doors. Julu runs into the space. Julu tries out her limbs. Julu tries out her hat. Julu tries out her feet on the floor of the space. Julu tries out her hands on the walls of the space. Julu Resurrectus. Long in the long-laid ground./

Welcome back Julu to your space and your home. Look.
There is nothing special here.
Laugh.
Julu laughs at Jennifer who watches the arrival of her friend with tearful eyes.
You have a swollen belly, Jennifer, says, Julu, who is the little tyke?

It is Alan's love, says smarmy Jennifer, and I will grow but I will not explode.

/Jennifer sits and sits./

Julu thinks, God this is really stupid. So what if we went into the Bre- vard talker and had a fake discussion? What difference does it make - and it's so simple to fake the real when the real's funneled through a sieve, as if dyads ruled the world!

The song-book here is the fake-book and the real is the belly. Alan just doesn't see himself anymore. Julu says, I know this for a fact, this self- indulgent post - and she was right, everything he does is autobiography, raking the coals of his past, listen if you still have the time and the grace to see where the birth's come from, this arrival - or maybe the pre- science of cyberspace, after all, quoting him _exactly_ from his Disorders of the Real, that word again, that belly which he now knows is the belly:

"Alan Sondheim

"Alan Sondheim lives in another world, just like our own.
He could not tell one from the other.
He was sure they were joined at the horizon.
Alan Sondheim saw the world was his.
He'd say, 'Hi, world!'
He saw the world in a mirror, except for a corner, a hinge. He couldn't move in that close.
There was always the mirror to contend with.
Alan Sondheim would listen to you speaking and would listen to Alan Sondheim listening to you speaking.
Sometimes he would miss a sentence or two.
He would catch up when he stopped listening.
Alan Sondheim knew that the world was doubled.
He saw that it was halved. He had half of everything but he could always skip a line.
He had half of everything but nothing puckered.
It puckered where everything was.
Alan Sondheim would watch it burst, but it would burst in one world and not the other, not even fragments would burst from one world to the other.
Alan Sondheim was not joined at the horizon.
He did not hear or see so well. He heard his own heartbeat when he could make everything quiet. He could make everything quiet and even his own death quiet. He would see the stuffing of the world first and then the world. Alan Sondheim would hardly hear because of the stuffing of the world. He could hardly see, either."

/*Jennifer sits and sits.
Jennifer swells her belly.*/

↑ Index

125. Karen and Trevor
RON SILLIMAN
Thu 11 Sep 1997

Sorry to have to post for general consumption but...

Ron-
14 Hills is having problems retrieving your attached file. Would it be possible to send it to me personally [redacted]
?

Thanks much

Karen McKevitt

↑ Index

126. David Bromige
The Marginalization of Poetry
Thu 11 Sep 1997

AUTHENTICIZING 14

The Marginalization of Poetry

If I were a poet
In this world of poor mutts
Of crazed historians [shd all be bold, italicized, centered Pushing Safeway carts Across parking lots
Where shoppers drive
With no sense of protocol
Where le peuple thrust
Into the elevators
Before le peuple get out
Where the President's son Bilked an electorate
Out of S & L millions

Who, scant years later, unpunished,
Ran himself for President,
If I were one touched with vision
In the older construation Fetched into this present
Where murders convenient
To powerful persons Were always acts of "crazed

Loners," where wealth
Entrenched itself & its children
And pity was an armband
Easily discarded at day's end,
If I were one touched with fire

And were I not, why bother,
What I would occupy would be the center,
Having studied what's been done,
Take myself as measure,
Whoever any given morning
He might be, this I,
And my poetry would be the best,
Ignored because of that,
Feared & reviled because of that,
That avant garde imperative That blurts out truths, discomforting, inprovable,
And everyone be marginal but me

↑ Index

127. Mark Wallace

mutual plugs

Thu 11 Sep 1997

Thanks to Mark P. and others for several mentions of the magazine SITUATION, which I co-edit with Joanne Molina.

Subscriptions are $10 for four issues, $3 for back or single issues. Please write to SITUATION, 10402 Ewell Ave., Kensington, MD 20895. Checks should be made payable to Mark Wallace. Our most recent issue, #15, featured work by Rachel Loden, Sherry Brennan, John Lowther, Standard Schaefer, Mary Burger and others.

Mark Wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

128. acgold01
Twentieth-Century Literature Conference
Thu 11 Sep 1997

List veterans will recognize this as my annual contribution to discussion: Oct. 1 = postmark deadline for submissions (critical, creative, and all things in between). The Twentieth-Century Lit. Conference now has a web site with all the necessary info--http://www.louisville.edu/a-s/cml/xxconf/

The Conference has a history (well, I think so anyway) of receptiveness to "alternative" poetics--at least in terms of papers (I don't have anything to do with the selection of "creative" submissions), so do consider coming.

Alan

↑ Index

129. Charles Bernstein
Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Thu 11 Sep 1997

Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

Women Poets at Barnard invites applications for the 1998 Barnard New Women Poets Prize. The prize includes an honorarium of $1500 and publication of the manuscript by Beacon Press. This year's judge is Lyn Hejinian.

This competition is open to any woman poet with a book-length ms, who has not yet published a book. Poets who have published chapbooks of few than 500 copies remain eligible. Please submit one copy of the ms, with the author's name, address and telephone number on the title page. Please include an ssae for notification of the contest results. All submissions must be postmarked by Oct. 15, 1997. The winner will be announced June 1, 1998.

In lieu of submission fee, we ask competitors to purchase a volume from the Barnard New Women Poetry series. For order form and contest write:

Barnard New Women Poetry series
3009 Broadway
New York, NY 10027

*****

copied from flier, I hope without error. please pass this info on to non-list folks who might find it useful.

↑ Index

130. Maria Damon
Re: mutual plugs
Thu 11 Sep 1997

a plug for moi-meme: Class Issues: Pedagogy, Cultural Studies, and the Public Sphere, edited by Amitava Kumar, NYU press, just arrived in my mailbox; it features the essay i delivered as a talk at Louisville a coupla years ago on Micropoetries, counterperformance and post-literary poetry.

↑ Index

131. red slider
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Thu 11 Sep 1997

Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

Charles, et. al. Have no quibble with the matter and recognize the Barnard Prize as a worthy competition . Granted that the sponsor is gender based. Still I'm curious as to what internal rationale continues to drive the maintenance of submission venues based upon gender-biased entries. Does there yet exist an exlusion of women as authors (as differentiated from, say, themes/forms of poetry presumed to be of greater interest to women)? Has there been, in recent years, identified exlcusions of woman from publication or competition based solely upon the gender of the author?

↑ Index

132. Thomas Bell
Re: Pavement for a Dead Princess - readablility
Thu 11 Sep 1997

Nice blend of visual with poem. I'd like to see more of this kind of work. Also, nice site, btw.
tom bell

At 10:18 PM 9/10/97 -0700, red slider wrote:
>Missed original url. Please repost or backchannel.
>tom bell
>
>http://www.ns.net/~TheFarm/poetry/Poetry_Lobby.htm
>
>

↑ Index

133. Alan Jen Sondheim
Love Among the Internauts (part contribution by Jennifer)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

--+-

Love Among the Internauts

Your day, my night, bracketed together, we displace time among us; your night, my day, sliding against lunch or midnight drinking away, so that the rhyme, distanced, is poor, or say, I might, jacketed in weather, see misplaced rime, hung thus; poor sight, why lay, confiding hence, hunched over hindsight thinking, lure?

Your night, my day, shackled together, we yearn one another's speaking in dim time like shelves buried among us, lights blink in Fukuoka-York, or rather storms brew, too, runners all, photons down slots or fence of world, you are green light, my way, and violet light in rainy weather will be burned across sleek lines, untimed like selves hurled among us. Take a right turn in Shi-New, or feathered arms carried you and me upon shoguns hot, hence the whence of unfurled world.

Your day, my night

↑ Index

134. Charles Bernstein
Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

I have very sad news to report. Hannah Weiner has died. Word of her unexpected death reached me late last night. Apparently she died of natural causes in her apartment on East 12th street in Manhattan. Hannah meant so very much to me and I know to many other poets who were lucky enough to have known her and her inspiring and courageous work, her enthusiastic engagement with writing, her brilliant and acute (and often wickedly funny) perspectives on poets and poetry, her incredible performances. While her last few years weren’t easy, she continued to produce amazing writing, pushing her own poetry and the possibilities for poetry into new zones of perception.

Hannah would have turned 69 on November 4.

I include here a bibliography of her work that I compiled a few years ago. It doesn’t include a forthcoming Roof book and perhaps a few other more recent pieces. There is also a LINEbreak interview with Hannah available via the EPC as well as a one hour radio show (with readings and an interview), produced by Erneso Grosman, that is also up at the EPC.
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/weiner/

*

"Well we all consider it quite remarkable that we hear each other almost entirely in her mind"

*

MS/Book Chronology 1966 Magritte Poems (Sacramento: Poetry Newsletter, 1970). 11pp. Nonclairvoyantly written, short poems. 1968 The Code Poems (Barrytown: Open Studio, 1982). 29pp. 1970 The Fast. 50pp ms. Sections published in Acts #4, United Artists #14, and Blue Smoke #1 (in that order); (New York: United Artists, 1992). 1971 Country Girl. 18pp ms. Descriptive journal about seeing auras. 1972 Pictures and Early Words. app. 69pp. -- untyped. Seeing pictures and early versions of seen words. 1973 The 1973 Journal. app. 200pp ms; short segment in This # 7. Has caps and quoted words for words seen. 1974 Clairvoyant Journal. 180pp ms. About one-third published in Angel Hair edition, 64 pp. (1978: Lenox, Mass). Other sections in up to two dozen magazines, and in Sun June 9, 5 pp. (Providence: Diana's Bimonthly, 1975). Audiocasette from New Wilderness Audiogrpahics (wth Peggy DeCoursey and Sharon Matlin), c. 1976 (New Wilderness taped the whole Journal and published March and April). Videotape (1974 solo reading): New York: Internmedia Foundation, 1985. 1976 Little Girl Books. Four small notebooks. 1977-80 Little Books/Indians (New York: Roof Books, 1980). 91pp. 1980 Nijole's House (Needham, Mass.: Potes & Poets Press, 1981). 24pp. 1981 Spoke (College Park, MD: Sun & Moon Press, 1984). 115pp. 1982 Sixteen (Windsor, VT: Awede Press, 1983). 16pp. 1984 Written In/The Zero One (Victoria, Australia: Post Neo, 1985). 21pp. 1986 Weeks (Ann Arbor: Xexoxial, 1990). 50pp. Published with audiocasette. 1988 Abazoo. 13pp ms. 1989 Seen Words with It. 20 ms. 1989 The Book of Revelations. 106 shaped pages in notebook. 1989-91 Silent Teachers / Remembered Sequel (Providence: Tender Buttons, 1993) [1990 Page / Articles / Same Page 120pp ms.] 1992- Visions and Silent Musicians. Ms in progress. 1993-4. We Speak Silent. 89pp ms.

*

"a thought is not to be written write it down"

↑ Index

135. Douglas
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

This is truly a shock to the whole poetry community.
I will be posting a wonderful story written by Hannah tomorrow morning or late this afternoon in tribute to this wonderful exploratory poet. Hannah's was certainly one of the most original contributions to American poetry ever. Her work was like no one else's, and its ability to combine the personal and linguistic experimentation should serve as a beacon to all those who mistakenly feel there is a split between self-expression and intellectual pursuits.

Douglas Messerli
Sun & Moon Press

Charles Bernstein wrote:
>
> I have very sad news to report. Hannah Weiner has died. Word of her > unexpected death reached me late last night. Apparently she died of natural > causes in her apartment on East 12th street in Manhattan. Hannah meant so > very much to me and I know to many other poets who were lucky enough to > have known her and her inspiring and courageous work, her enthusiastic > engagement with writing, her brilliant and acute (and often wickedly funny) > perspectives on poets and poetry, her incredible performances. While her > last few years weren’t easy, she continued to produce amazing writing, > pushing her own poetry and the possibilities for poetry into new zones of > perception.
>
> Hannah would have turned 69 on November 4.
>
> I include here a bibliography of her work that I compiled a few years ago.
> It doesn’t include a forthcoming Roof book and perhaps a few other more > recent pieces. There is also a LINEbreak interview with Hannah available > via the EPC as well as a one hour radio show (with readings and an > interview), produced by Erneso Grosman, that is also up at the EPC.
> http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/weiner/
>
> *
>
> "Well we all consider it quite remarkable that we > hear each other almost entirely in her mind"

> *
>
> MS/Book Chronology
> 1966 Magritte Poems (Sacramento: Poetry Newsletter, 1970). 11pp.
> Nonclairvoyantly written, short poems.
> 1968 The Code Poems (Barrytown: Open Studio, 1982). 29pp.
> 1970 The Fast. 50pp ms. Sections published in Acts #4, United Artists
> #14, and Blue Smoke #1 (in that order); (New York: United Artists, 1992).
> 1971 Country Girl. 18pp ms. Descriptive journal about seeing auras.
> 1972 Pictures and Early Words. app. 69pp. -- untyped. Seeing pictures > and early versions of seen words.
> 1973 The 1973 Journal. app. 200pp ms; short segment in This # 7. Has > caps and quoted words for words seen.
> 1974 Clairvoyant Journal. 180pp ms. About one-third published in Angel > Hair edition, 64 pp. (1978: Lenox, Mass). Other sections in up to two > dozen magazines, and in Sun June > 9, 5 pp. (Providence: Diana's Bimonthly, 1975). Audiocasette from New > Wilderness Audiogrpahics (wth Peggy DeCoursey and Sharon Matlin), c.
1976
> (New Wilderness taped the whole Journal and published March and April).
> Videotape (1974 solo reading): New York: Internmedia Foundation, 1985.
> 1976 Little Girl Books. Four small notebooks.
> 1977-80 Little Books/Indians (New York: Roof Books, 1980). 91pp.
> 1980 Nijole's House (Needham, Mass.: Potes & Poets Press, 1981).
24pp.
> 1981 Spoke (College Park, MD: Sun & Moon Press, 1984). 115pp.
> 1982 Sixteen (Windsor, VT: Awede Press, 1983). 16pp.
> 1984 Written In/The Zero One (Victoria, Australia: Post Neo, 1985). 21pp.
> 1986 Weeks (Ann Arbor: Xexoxial, 1990). 50pp. Published with audio-casette.
> 1988 Abazoo. 13pp ms.
> 1989 Seen Words with It. 20 ms.
> 1989 The Book of Revelations. 106 shaped pages in notebook.
> 1989-91 Silent Teachers / Remembered Sequel (Providence: Tender Buttons, 1993)
> [1990 Page / Articles / Same Page 120pp ms.]
> 1992-   Visions and Silent Musicians. Ms in progress.
> 1993-4. We Speak Silent. 89pp ms.
>
> *
>
> "a thought is not to be written   write it down"

↑ Index

136. Charles Alexander
Re: ps to "Hannah Weiner"
Fri 12 Sep 1997

At 12:18 PM 9/12/97 -0700, you wrote:
>(No more p.s.s for Hannah Weiner)
>
>Since posting, I have read the 2 radically different, yet both alike >moving, obits by the two different Alexanders, for which, thanks to you >both. David

One of the posts David refers to is mine, but I didn't post it to this list, rather to a local+Bromige list. So I'll repeat it here. It was actually a note sent to a local weekly arts/culture paper, which has often been friendly to various poetry interests here in Tucson, and some of the way in which I construct is specific to the general audience of this paper. I had earlier organized, for this paper, a memorial to Ginsberg. This is what I sent them today, and it is certainly indebted to Charles Bernstein, who I quote:

_____

a cry

a hole

no voice

Hannah Weiner
(1928-1997)

This year has been one of losing writers -- Allen Ginsberg, William Burroughs, Alan Harrington, and more. I think it's important to note that some great losses don't involve the most famous names. In any generation, many writers who do not become well known may be remembered decades or centuries later as the most interesting of their time. I tend to believe that for every Emily Dickinson recovered into our collective memory, there are probably several very fine writers who are not found.

One of the most important writers of our time, in my opinion, although not one of the most famous, has just died -- word reached me this morning that Hannah Weiner was found in her apartment, on East 12th Street in Manhattan, dead of natural causes. she would have been 69 years old on November 4. As a fellow poet, Charles Bernstein, wrote in a note, "Hannah meant so very much to me and I know to many other poets who were lucky enough to have known her and her inspiring and courageous work, her enthusiastic engagement with writing, her brilliant and acute (and often wickedly funny) perspectives on poets and poetry, her incredible performances. While her last few years weren't easy, she continued to produce amazing writing, pushing her own poetry and the possibilities for poetry into new zones of perception."

Hannah wrote to me a few months ago, on a postcard with a photograph of a very young Bob Dylan, that New York was getting more difficult, wondering what it was like to live in Arizona, whether she should move here. I hadn't answered all of those questions yet, thinking there was a world of time.

Hannah saw words everywhere. She and her particular vision are missed -- immediately . . . and always.

charles alexander

↑ Index

137. Maria Damon
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

At 5:18 PM -0700 9/11/97, red slider wrote:
>Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
>
 Does there yet exist an >exlusion of women as authors (as differentiated from, say, themes/forms of >poetry presumed to be of greater interest to women)?

yes

↑ Index

138. Maria Damon
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

---

thanks charles for this sad news. tho i never met her her work came to mean a lot to me the moment i opened Spoke (thanks to your suggestion that i look into her work). out of shyness, i had been stalling sending her a copy of my essay on her, which she'd heard about and asked for last february. i've still got the pink stationery letter from her in my "to do" pile right by the computer. now she's become the silent teacher she had been in training for all these years, and i bet we'll continue to be surprised at how she enters our lives.

At 8:07 AM -0400 9/12/97, Charles Bernstein wrote:
>I have very sad news to report. Hannah Weiner has died. Word of her >unexpected death reached me late last night. Apparently she died of natural >causes in her apartment on East 12th street in Manhattan. Hannah meant so >very much to me and I know to many other poets who were lucky enough to >have known her and her inspiring and courageous work, her enthusiastic >engagement with writing, her brilliant and acute (and often wickedly funny) >perspectives on poets and poetry, her incredible performances. While her >last few years werenít easy, she continued to produce amazing writing, >pushing her own poetry and the possibilities for poetry into new zones of >perception.

>
>Hannah would have turned 69 on November 4.
>
>I include here a bibliography of her work that I compiled a few years ago.
>It doesnít include a forthcoming Roof book and perhaps a few other more >recent pieces. There is also a LINEbreak interview with Hannah available >via the EPC as well as a one hour radio show (with readings and an >interview), produced by Erneso Grosman, that is also up at the EPC.
>http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/weiner/
>
>*
>
>"Well we all consider it quite remarkable that we >   hear each other almost entirely in her mind"
>*
>
>MS/Book Chronology
>1966 Magritte Poems (Sacramento: Poetry Newsletter, 1970). 11pp.
>Nonclairvoyantly written, short poems.
>1968 The Code Poems (Barrytown: Open Studio, 1982). 29pp.
>1970 The Fast. 50pp ms. Sections published in Acts #4, United Artists
>#14, and Blue Smoke #1 (in that order); (New York: United Artists, 1992).
>1971 Country Girl. 18pp ms. Descriptive journal about seeing auras.
>1972 Pictures and Early Words. app. 69pp. -- untyped. Seeing pictures >and early versions of seen words.
>1973 The 1973 Journal. app. 200pp ms; short segment in This # 7. Has >caps and quoted words for words seen.
>1974 Clairvoyant Journal. 180pp ms. About one-third published in Angel >Hair edition, 64 pp. (1978: Lenox, Mass). Other sections in up to two >dozen magazines, and in Sun June >9, 5 pp. (Providence: Diana's Bimonthly, 1975). Audiocasette from New >Wilderness Audiogrpahics (wth Peggy DeCoursey and Sharon Matlin), c. 1976
>(New Wilderness taped the whole Journal and published March and April).
>Videotape (1974 solo reading): New York: Internmedia Foundation, 1985.

>1976 Little Girl Books. Four small notebooks.
>1977-80 Little Books/Indians (New York: Roof Books, 1980). 91pp.
>1980 Nijole's House (Needham, Mass.: Potes & Poets Press, 1981). 24pp.
>1981 Spoke (College Park, MD: Sun & Moon Press, 1984). 115pp.
>1982 Sixteen (Windsor, VT: Awede Press, 1983). 16pp.
>1984 Written In/The Zero One (Victoria, Australia: Post Neo, 1985). 21pp.
>1986 Weeks (Ann Arbor: Xexoxial, 1990). 50pp. Published with audiocasette.
>1988 Abazoo. 13pp ms.
>1989 Seen Words with It. 20 ms.
>1989 The Book of Revelations. 106 shaped pages in notebook.
>1989-91 Silent Teachers / Remembered Sequel (Providence: Tender Buttons, 1993)
>[1990 Page / Articles / Same Page 120pp ms.]
>1992- Visions and Silent Musicians. Ms in progress.
>1993-4. We Speak Silent. 89pp ms.
>
>*
>
>"a thought is not to be written write it down"

↑ Index

139. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997

Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

Fri 12 Sep 1997

On Fri, 12 Sep 1997, Eliza McGrand wrote:

> if this really is a serious question, go to a library and do a literature search on sexism, women and literature, etc. dale spender, adrienne rich, tillie olson, etc. etc. have written extensively on the subject.
> e

ostriker's book _stealing the language_ is also quite good on the subject; she starts w/ bradstreet and ends w/--rich, i think...thus indicating the long history of gender and poetics in Am.

↑ Index

140. Eliza McGrand

Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

Fri 12 Sep 1997

---

i am puzzled at such a question even being asked. it has been discussed over and over and over and over.... adrienne rich describes a process of historical erasure, whereby women's history, theory, literature are built up to a certain basic level, then erased, so that energy is kidnapped by a continual process of establishing, over and over, the basics. thus, we are not only not allowed to get beyond basics, but have to keep proving them over nad over and over because they keep getting wiped out.

if this really is a serious question, go to a library and do a literature search on sexism, women and literature, etc. dale spender, adrienne rich, tillie olson, etc. etc. have written extensively on the subject. e

↑ Index

141. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

---

charles, thanx for that biblio... i admired hannah weiner's work, my sympathies to those of you who were close to her...

best,

joe

↑ Index

142. mark weiss
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

Almost all literary prizes are exclusionary, whether of older poets, younger poets, poets with no books, poets with only one book, poets translating their own work from kikchikel, etc. And there's no reason for a woman's college (is Barnard still technically all-female?) not to offer a prize for women poets. But you and Maria seem to be answering the supposed hidden agenda of Red Slider's question. I don't think that there are any poetry contests that exclude women. Maybe Robert Bly could get one going.

At 01:35 PM 9/12/97 -0400, you wrote:
>i am puzzled at such a question even being asked. it has been discussed over >and over and over and over.... adrienne rich describes a process of historical >erasure, whereby women's history, theory, literature are built up to a certain >basic level, then erased, so that energy is kidnapped by a continual process >of establishing, over and over, the basics. thus, we are not only not allowed >to get beyond basics, but have to keep proving them over nad over and over >because they keep getting wiped out.

>
>if this really is a serious question, go to a library and do a literature >search on sexism, women and literature, etc. dale spender, adrienne rich, >tillie olson, etc. etc. have written extensively on the subject.
>e
>
>

↑ Index

143. Jordan Davis
Mission of Burma reissues rule
Fri 12 Sep 1997

On Fri, 12 Sep 1997, mark weiss wrote:

> woman's college (is Barnard still technically all-female?) not to offer a

Barnard is still technically all-female. Columbia College (NY - to distinguish it from the other Columbia Colleges, at least one of which publishes a pretty good poetry magazine, is it Illinois?) (which stopped being technically all-male not much more than a decade ago) sends its young males and females over to Barnard to take classes, and Barnard sends its females over to Columbia. Each school has certain required classes that students from the other may not take, and this mild protectionism (allegedly) preserves the separate identities of the two schools, though Barnard students seem to value the separation more. I'm interested in the brusque appearance of the free trade rhetoric in response to the announcement. I mean, why the hell not have a gender-restricted prize? I'd bring in some heavy large-cap rhetoric of my own; I say, bring on the Red Slider Award! I might even break my NO READING FEE rule to be considered..

Anyway, to give up being flip for one second -- it's great that Lyn Hejinian is judging the prize. Terrific, even.

—

On a totally unrelated note, I'm reading with Bob Rosenthal at the Zinc Bar (formerly the Biblios Cafe reading series) this Sunday at 7 or so. The Zinc Bar is located in Manhattan at 90 West Houston Street, which is on the corner of LaGuardia and West Houston. LaGuardia is the Noho sibling of W. Broadway. Bob Rosenthal is the author of many books, including "Cleaning Up New York", a true account of his days as a housecleaner in Manhattan. I'm the author of two chapbooks of poetry, and I'll be reading at least one poem that you can't find at http://members.aol.com/jordan70/million/1.html

—

Very sad to hear the news about Hannah Weiner.

Jordan

↑ Index

144. Eliza McGrand
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

---

he could if anyone could... though norman mailer would certainly want to collaborate...
e

↑ Index

145. Christopher Alexander
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

I didn't know Hannah Weiner, & I hesitate to post for that reason, not wanting my note to stand next to what those of you may have to say who were her friends.

but her work has become very important to me, & to that extent I feel a loss here as well.

I don't really feel like saying anything else. I'm not sure I can justify or explain why I feel quite the way I do in this case, & I'm not going to try. better to reflect on the good she's done, & the priviledge of having read her work.

I spent the morning working on this. maybe it's a mistake to post it, I don't know. take it in the spirit it's meant.

Chris

--

for Hannah Weiner

"Well we all consider it quite remarkable that we hear each other almost entirely in her mind"

It doesnit suit resource forthcoming, but—& perhaps a few more outer recipi- ents. though it never meant her her work came as it came to mean a lot to mo- ment-um. At :07 AM -minus Sept- ember */97, Hannah Weiner wrote, & one thinks "charles for this sad news". without recourse, i.e., she who has a very said news to report. when it came it came to it meant her /: remember.

Word of her

~ acute flora.
just so-ness herein spiring about meant
so. possible
cit[i]es, & its ability for. th.

Hannah Weiner has died. her incredible perforce &,
"asked for" last february, / fare much to be lucky enough to voice. consider us—werenit easy, she—& I know to many other poets where, now because the sign to share where she had been expected.

"entrance": we'll continue to all / be surprised as

—she enters our lives.

↑ Index

146. red slider

Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

Fri 12 Sep 1997

Mark, you are correct if you are underscoring the absence of a hidden agenda in my question. Naive perhaps. Hidden subtexts no. I specifically excluded concerns regarding poetics formulae from my inquiry. I don't need a library to inform me that forms and projects which, in general, are more likely to be approached and adrotly and sucessfully by women have a long and continuing history of supression and confiscation by dominant paradigms (to paraphrase - erased in the cradle). I need only read the poetry. I therefore constrained my question to matters of venue exclusion. That is what I wished to know about. Maria's simple 'yes' was more informative, actually, than Eliza's rather grand sweep (and I do wonder if I would have received the same tone had I been a new woman poet posing the same question). Anyway her citations are noted.

As to the matter of gender (or other forms of) exclusionary rules, I do have doubts that the continuation of a project to advance the poetics of it is benefited by author gender-typing. If it is the poetics and their advancement that is at issue, then I ask, could there not be a male author who might contribute an important advance to that side of things? If so, rules examining the genitalia of authors rather than the contributions of the works would seem inimical to that goal.

My own agenda, not at all hidden, is whether the general response to submission-glut has more to do with driving exclusions than some intrinsic canon required for the advancement of the project. I generally argue against such extra-poetic rules as a means of dealing with that increasingly serious problem and in favor of discovering other ways/processes by which effective triage may be addressed. Apparently, Maria and Eliza believe the substantive issues lie elsewhere, for which the physical attributes of the author are relevant. I have no quarrel with that nor with the Barnard prize exclusion. But I make no apology for asking the question, regardless of who or may not believe it was (should have been) asked. As a poet, man or woman, good or bad, that's just part of my job.

red slider
[redacted]

From: mark weiss[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Friday, September 12, 1997 10:50 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

Almost all literary prizes are exclusionary, whether of older poets, younger poets, poets with no books, poets with only one book, poets translating their own work from kikchikel, etc. And there's no reason for a woman's college (is Barnard still technically all-female?) not to offer a prize for women poets. But you and Maria seem to be answering the supposed hidden agenda of Red Slider's question. I don't think that there are any poetry contests that exclude women. Maybe Robert Bly could get one going.

At 01:35 PM 9/12/97 -0400, you wrote:
>i am puzzled at such a question even being asked. it has been discussed over >and over and over and over.... adrienne rich describes a process of historical >erasure, whereby women's history, theory, literature are built up to a certain >basic level, then erased, so that energy is kidnapped by a continual process
>of establishing, over and over, the basics. thus, we are not only not allowed >to get beyond basics, but have to keep proving them over nad over and over >because they keep getting wiped out.
>
>if this really is a serious question, go to a library and do a literature >search on sexism, women and literature, etc. dale spender, adrienne rich, >tillie olson, etc. etc. have written extensively on the subject.

>e
>
>

↑ Index

147. David Bromige
Hannah Weiner
Fri 12 Sep 1997

The posts from Charles Bernstein, Ron Silliman, Maria Damon and Douglas Messerli together speak volumes--from the starkness of Ron's announcement to the informative currency of Charles', to the keen insight of Douglas's observation that in her one found the personal and the linguistically challenging all of a piece...and to the poignancy of Maria's unanswered letter. It is sad to look for the last time, even sadder not to have done so. I extend my sympathies to Charles, who was I know close to Hannah for many years. And I can certainly overlap with Maria's feelings, for Hannah was a person I took to immediately & was looking forward to seeing when in New York next month--but with whom I did not get around to corresponding.

At least, we have her work (and more I hope will now be made available), and Douglas (one of her publishers--courageous publishers, one has to add, for her poetry remained a rigorous & unpredictable series of challenges) put his finger on the pulse of it in his tribute. An absolute original. What a loss to us.

I hate death/now she's out of it. Dear Hannah Weiner.

↑ Index

148. Charles Bernstein
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

Remembered Sequel:

Hannah Weiner's We Speak Silent was published by Roof books this past spring:

"what am I hanging on a branch ok well thats a vision you gotta explain that seeing visions isnt all that easy"

"hassid: those who are hidden may be unhidden but those who are unhidden may never be hidden"

"the best teacher is always your very own self"

"the dead speak too"

****

Plans are underway to have a celebration of Hannah and her work, at the Poetry Project of St. Mark's Church, a place that was so close to her.

↑ Index

149. David Bromige
ps to "Hannah Weiner"
Fri 12 Sep 1997

(No more p.s.s for Hannah Weiner)

Since posting, I have read the 2 radically different, yet both alike moving, obits by the two different Alexanders, for which, thanks to you both. David

↑ Index

150. mark weiss
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

I had a sudden image of Mailer and Bly dressed as pirates (Bly already sports the cape) duking it out with cutlasses, but it almost instantly became professional wrestling. I'd want to be ringside at that one.

At 02:17 PM 9/12/97 -0400, you wrote:
>he could if anyone could... though norman mailer would certainly want to >collaborate...
>e
>
>

↑ Index

151. Jacques Debrot
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

Anyone who is interested might want to check out Mark DuCharme's brillaint discussion of Hannah Weiner in the latest issue of 6ix magazine. Among other things, he reads her psychic ability as a kind of "trope" for the way in which "all writing is in some sense perceived, stolen, appropriated." He ends the essay by arguing that her "neutralization of the distinction between public and private experience -- between ordinary language/ordinary consciousness, and the poetic, is coterminous with her desire to neutralize the distinction between poetry and . . . exterior life." Such a utopian possibility is enormously appealing -- at least for me.

Also, Weiner's poem "Silent History" in Chain 4 is yet another persuasive reason to check out that magazine.

↑ Index

152. mark weiss
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

I was going to say that a contest based on examining the genitalia of authors might be, depending upon the personnel, more pleasant than the traditional contest. But I thought better of it. Still, what would be the criteria? Would there be numerical scores, as in diving or skating? Would there still be entry fees?

At 11:55 AM 9/12/97 -0700, you wrote:
>Mark, you are correct if you are underscoring the absence of a hidden >agenda in my question. Naive perhaps. Hidden subtexts no. I specifically >excluded concerns regarding poetics formulae from my inquiry. I don't need >a library to inform me that forms and projects which, in general, are more >likely to be approached and adrotly and sucessfully by women have a long >and continuing history of supression and confiscation by dominant paradigms >(to paraphrase - erased in the cradle). I need only read the poetry. I >therefore constrained my question to matters of venue exclusion. That is >what I wished to know about. Maria's simple 'yes' was more informative, >actually, than Eliza's rather grand sweep (and I do wonder if I would have >received the same tone had I been a new woman poet posing the same >question). Anyway her citations are noted.
>
>As to the matter of gender (or other forms of) exclusionary rules, I do >have doubts that the continuation of a project to advance the poetics of it >is benefited by author gender-typing. If it is the poetics and their >advancement that is at issue, then I ask, could there not be a male author >who might contribute an important advance to that side of things? If so, >rules examining the genitalia of authors rather than the contributions of >the works would seem inimical to that goal.
>
>My own agenda, not at all hidden, is whether the general response to >submission-glut has more to do with driving exclusions than some intrinsic >canon required for the advancement of the project. I generally argue >against such extra-poetic rules as a means of dealing with that >increasingly serious problem and in favor of discovering other >ways/processes by which effective triage may be addressed. Apparently, >Maria and Eliza believe the substantive issues lie elsewhere, for which the >physical attributes of the author are relevant. I have no quarrel with that >nor with the Barnard prize exclusion. But I make no appology for asking the >question, regardless of who or may not believe it was (should have been) >asked. As a poet, man or woman, good or bad, that's just part of my job.

>
>red slider
>[redacted]
>
>----------
>From: mark weiss[SMTP:[redacted]]
>Sent: Friday, September 12, 1997 10:50 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
>
>Almost all literary prizes are exclusionary, whether of older poets, >younger poets, poets with no books, poets with only one book, poets >translating their own work from kikchikel, etc. And there's no reason for a >woman's college (is Barnard still technically all-female?) not to offer a >prize for women poets. But you and Maria seem to be answering the supposed >hidden agenda of Red Slider's question. I don't think that there are any >poetry contests that exclude women. Maybe Robert Bly could get one going.
>
>
>At 01:35 PM 9/12/97 -0400, you wrote: >>i am puzzled at such a question even being asked. it has been discussed >over >>and over and over and over.... adrienne rich describes a process of >historical >>erasure, whereby women's history, theory, literature are built up to a >certain >>basic level, then erased, so that energy is kidnapped by a continual >process >>of establishing, over and over, the basics. thus, we are not only not >allowed
>>to get beyond basics, but have to keep proving them over nad over and over >>because they keep getting wiped out.
>>
>>if this really is a serious question, go to a library and do a literature >>search on sexism, women and literature, etc. dale spender, adrienne rich, >>tillie olson, etc. etc. have written extensively on the subject.

>>e
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

153. Thomas Bell
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

I think there are two issues here. 1: yes there is a history and remedy and support are appropriate, but 2: I would like to know more about women's writing and writers without the polemics - one of my sources of information (not being academically affiliated and out in the country with few 'literary' aware acquaintances) is seeing the names of prize winners announced. I do admit to not reading announcements of prizes for specifically womens' contests because of my 'fear of polemics' but I suspect I am not the only one. tom bell

At 10:50 AM 9/12/97 -0700, mark weiss wrote:
>Almost all literary prizes are exclusionary, whether of older poets, >younger poets, poets with no books, poets with only one book, poets >translating their own work from kikchikel, etc. And there's no reason for a >woman's college (is Barnard still technically all-female?) not to offer a >prize for women poets. But you and Maria seem to be answering the supposed >hidden agenda of Red Slider's question. I don't think that there are any >poetry contests that exclude women. Maybe Robert Bly could get one going.
>
>
>At 01:35 PM 9/12/97 -0400, you wrote:
>>i am puzzled at such a question even being asked. it has been discussed over >>and over and over and over.... adrienne rich describes a process of >historical >>erasure, whereby women's history, theory, literature are built up to a >certain >>basic level, then erased, so that energy is kidnapped by a continual process >>of establishing, over and over, the basics. thus, we are not only not >allowed
>>to get beyond basics, but have to keep proving them over nad over and over >>because they keep getting wiped out.
>>
>>if this really is a serious question, go to a library and do a literature >>search on sexism, women and literature, etc. dale spender, adrienne rich, >>tillie olson, etc. etc. have written extensively on the subject.

>>e
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

154. Keith Tuma
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

She was Spokeless in the unacknowledged world of Big Wheels.

Among my best students, she was one of the poets most often honored by imitation. For the fun of it (period).

Keith Tuma

↑ Index

155. aldon l. nielsen
(no subject)
Fri 12 Sep 1997

To: [redacted], [redacted] Subject: Re: Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

We have nothing to fear of polemics but the fear of polemics itself.

↑ Index

156. red slider
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

From: mark weiss[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Friday, September 12, 1997 1:39 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998

I was going to say that a contest based on examining the genitalia of authors might be, depending upon the personnel, more pleasant than the traditional contest. But I thought better of it. Still, what would be the criteria? Would there be numerical scores, as in diving or skating? Would there still be entry fees?

I think you make the case in point (skipping the problem of monitoring the personnel office). This discussion has not been about the criteria for winning, only criteria for entry. And the question remains, what is needed for criteria for entry beyond the description of what the contest operators wish to elucidate in the poetics of it? If, by Eliza's own suppositions, women only contests must persist because of the need to advance poetic investigations on matters generally (and, admittedly, most pursued) by women. If that's it, then why not simply make that the criteria for the entry - not the entrant - no matter who may advance that enterprise? If divers feel that they have been given short shrift and that the paradigms of poetry have been built around 'too much splash at the end of the poem' then by all means a Constest call for 'splashless poetry'. If they want to decide the winner by number cards, fine. But, if they say only people who swim may enter - they may be draining their own tub. The world's first zero-splash poem may just have been done by a kid with cerebral palsy who has had to spend his life poolside - carefully watching the construction of a dive.

I mean if Bly and Mailer want to run a best jock-itch scratching poem-powder contest - hey scratch away. I know a couple of woman poets who could problably bust the straps on most of the entrants.

'Multiplicity of Form' has some nice edges that may be exciting and worth exploration. But it's never going to happen as long as the constructor of the form is mistaken for the form of the construction. no?

red.

↑ Index

157. mark weiss
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Fri 12 Sep 1997

It's a sad day when a guy can't attempt a joke in bad taste without having a serious inference drawn. For the record, I think the gal or guy with the stash has a perfect right to determine who's allowed to apply. Myself, I'd sign up in a second for a contest limited to poets named Mark Weiss. Hell, I'd even judge it for free.

At 02:40 PM 9/12/97 -0700, you wrote:
>----------
>From: mark weiss[SMTP:[redacted]]
>Sent: Friday, September 12, 1997 1:39 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
>
>I was going to say that a contest based on examining the genitalia of >authors might be, depending upon the personnel, more pleasant than the >traditional contest. But I thought better of it. Still, what would be the >criteria? Would there be numerical scores, as in diving or skating? Would >there still be entry fees?

>
>
>I think you make the case in point (skipping the problem of monitoring the >personnel office). This discussion has not been about the criteria for >winning, only criteria for entry. And the question remains, what is needed >for criteria for entry beyond the description of what the contest operators >wish to elucidate in the poetics of it? If, by Eliza's own suppositions, >women only contests must persist because of the need to advance poetic >investigations on matters generally (and, admittedly, most pursued) by >women. If that's it, then why not simply make that the criteria for the >entry - not the entrant - no matter who may advance that enterprise? If >divers feel that they have been given short shrift and that the paradigms >of poetry have been built around 'too much splash at the end of the poem' >then by all means a Constest call for 'splashless poetry'. If they want to >decide the winner by number cards, fine. But, if they say only people who >swim may enter - they may be draining their own tub. The world's first >zero-splash poem may just have been done by a kid with cerebral palsy who >has had to spend his life poolside - carefully watching the construction of >a dive.
>
>I mean if Bly and Mailer want to run a best jock-itch scratching >poem-powder contest - hey scratch away. I know a couple of woman poets who >could problably bust the straps on most of the entrants.
>
>'Multiplicity of Form' has some nice edges that may be exciting and worth >exploration. But it's never going to happen as long as the constructor of >the form is mistaken for the form of the construction. no?
>
>red.
>
>

↑ Index

158. Christopher Alexander
(fwd) Contest Announcement
Fri 12 Sep 1997

thought some of you listees might be interested in this. —C

----------Forwarded Message Follows----------
Date: Fri, 12 Sep 1997 15:47:58 -0400
From: Jack Epicier <[redacted]> Organization: Contests for Lovers of Contests, Inc.
To: Christopher Alexander <[redacted]>
Subject: Contest Announcement

Attention!! Situation in conjunction with nominative press collective is pleased to announce the 1st annual Mark Weiss Prize for "formally innovative" poetry. The prize includes an honorarium of $2,000 to be paid by Situation editor Mark Weiss, plus publication of the winning poem in a special issue of Situation. This year's judge has asked to remain anonymous pending announcement of the contest winner (I have, however, been asked to say that our judge is not Jorie Graham).

Only single poems will be accepted for consideration; please include the author's name, address, & telephone number in the upper right hand corner of each page. Entries should be sent to editor Mark Weiss c/o Situation, & must be postmarked no later than 1 October 1997. While there is no reading fee, we ask that participants send only one entry. Please: COPIES ONLY! do not send originals as entries will not be returned. This competition is open to any poet named Mark Weiss.

Best of Luck!
..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

159. red slider
Re: Weiss Contest - query
Fri 12 Sep 1997

thought some of you listees might be interested in this. -C

Attention!!
Situation in conjunction This competition is open to any poet named Mark Weiss.

Best of Luck!
..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

Oh chreisstopher (m)a(r)le(xander)

This is sooo exciting. Now I have some questions. Will NC-Weissetal permit multiple entries of the same poem? If we don't have the right name, but we have the right telephone # will that be ok? How about if we've only been able to get our vowels enhanced, but are on the waiting list for the consonant operation?Will that be ok? I understand you don't return originals. Will you send back the copies? How about if we enclose an SASE with carbon paper. Would you mind copying it for me and sending the copy of the copy? Do we just need to advance the poetics of Mark Weiss or do we need to look like him too? Are arbitrary commas permitted? Tildes? Will their be a genitalia exam (and whose judging that?). Will it have any exogenital critieria (like dental flossing or hemmorhoidal creme application)? A flotilla race? A sopapilla bake-off after the contest? Please Let me know as soon as possible.

(m)rad (w)esilder

↑ Index

160. Rebecca Weldon
other channels
Fri 12 Sep 1997

Thank you. I had come to equate this listserve with the Thai postal service, some get through and some don't.
>From: joel kuszai <[redacted]>

>I'm curious about these other poetics channels, and regret not being privy to the >remarkable eulogies of Hannah W. that have been posted there. Please cross post.
>Even better, I'd be delighted at knowing if these lists are open to the public.

↑ Index

161. joel kuszai
Re: Weiss Contest - query
Fri 12 Sep 1997

Look you guys. This is getting to be a drag. Please carry useless chatter into the realms of the back-channel.

On other notes, school has started in Buffalo. Several interesting new students, including some in the poetics camp. The rain here has been nonstop. Much Bills chatter and I return to my half-hour commute to campus debating whether to tune in the likes of Charlie Rose or someone named Jim Rome (?) who speaks in a language I'm not quite familar with.

I'm curious about these other poetics channels, and regret not being privy to the remarkable eulogies of Hannah W. that have been posted there. Please cross post. Even better, I'd be delighted at knowing if these lists are open to the public.

It seems to be a sad year, full of death and loss, moreso than I can remember (I did turn 30 less than a month ago, so I can speak with some authority here!) and the enthusiasm of new grad students makes me both sick and excited.

Let's change the subject to Jackson Mac Low, who is 75 today!!

stop bickering--ok?

↑ Index

162. David Bromige
jackson Mac Low
Fri 12 Sep 1997

In 1921, Hermann Rorschach came up with the "Inkblot Test," and Einstein spoke at Columbia on "The Fourth Dimension".....and Jackson Mac Low was conceived. Today is his 75th birthday, and many happy returns to Jackson! Among the commemorative tributes planned, as many on the List will know, is an issue of _Crayon_ devoted to commentary on Jackson's life & works....And this is, I believe, due any day now. David

↑ Index

163. James Finnegan
Re: Writing exercises
Fri 12 Sep 1997

What great poems have produced from writing exercises? Aren't these exercises
just filler--something to do with "the class"-- filling out the 50 minutes of Intro to Poetry

or a writers conference workshop session?

Do the writers we know and admire really go thru the motions of exercises to produce the works we value? If not, why are writing exercises part of the praxis of teaching writing?

Best writing exercise: Read good books
and try to do half as well.

Finnegan

↑ Index

164. charles alexander
Re: Writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

James Finnegan wrote:
> What great poems have produced from > writing exercises? Aren't these exercises
> just filler--something to do with "the class"-- > filling out the 50 minutes of Intro to Poetry
> or a writers conference workshop session?
>
> Do the writers we know and admire really
> go thru the motions of exercises to produce
> the works we value? If not, why are writing > exercises part of the praxis of teaching writing?

Speaking of just one example, and "exercises" may not be the right word. A couple of decades ago, for me, looking at the procedures in some of the works of Jackson Mac Low, at that time particularly in the Light Poems, and the Presidents of the United States poems, and The Pronouns -- was extremely valuable. Inventing procedures of my own and working through them came out of reading and thinking about such poems. The practice not only produced poems I still value, but, through the results of such work, changed ways I thought about how one makes poems and what makes a dynamic piece of literature. These values have also influenced work I do when not following procedures as such.

So, yes, I think exercises can be valuable, sometimes writers we know and admire do use them, and not just as class filler.

charles
charles alexander

poet and book artist
[redacted]

↑ Index

165. Maria Damon
Re: Barnard New Poets Prize for 1998
Sat 13 Sep 1997

At 1:39 PM -0700 9/12/97, mark weiss wrote:
>I was going to say that a contest based on examining the genitalia of >authors might be, depending upon the personnel, more pleasant than the >traditional contest.

for whom?

↑ Index

166. Suzanne Burns
Re: Writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

On Fri, 12 Sep 1997, James Finnegan wrote:

> Best writing exercise: Read good books
> and try to do half as well.
>
> Finnegan

Hello Jim! I've joined the list. Good to see your presence.

Especially good to see your input, above. I concur.

Suzanne
>

↑ Index

167. rsillima
Hannah
Sat 13 Sep 1997

I first met Hannah on my first literary trip east of the Mississippi, circa 1980, at an opening as I recall of a show of Lee Sherry's. I was in the midst of telling Lee how much I liked the work when Hannah walked up, paused for a moment, declared in something akin to a stage whisper "It says 'go away'" and stalked off, offended. My eyes dilated, I tracked her down and got that straightened out. It was the first -- and last -- argument we ever had. And from it grew a friendship that, like her writing, was simply impossible to duplicate.

Hannah would call maybe once a month (more often during the bad times), sometimes insisting that I had "told" her to call (especially if she was calling at an inconvenient time of night). We would discuss her latest problems, which often had to do with the American Indian Movement or various publishers, my kids, readings, friends, her interest in music (she was a 60s folk rock fan), whatever. Depending on how she was doing at the time, the calls could range anywhere from absolutely straightforward to utterly impossible.

Hannah was as insecure as any writer on this list, but for her this never came out as worrying about this or that revision -- she had absolute confidence in her writing practice-- but instead in her publications. I always felt that her paranoia about whether this or that publisher was going to slight her work, especially through delays was more pronounced since, not working and with no immediate family, publishing literally was her life -- even moreso as she became more and more reclusive. While I had a completely easy time with her and her work in In the American Tree (in sharp contrast with a couple of folks), it seemed apparent, from her accounts as well as theirs, that Hannah was an absolute terror to her book publishers. All of them are to be praised for the infinite patience it must have required to complete each book.

In the mid-80s, Hannah came to California and stayed with Krishna and I in San Francisco as we gave readings at the Arts Commission Gallery and in Mill Valley. It was her first trip west and we were prepared to show her all the sights, but she had no interest whatever in going outside once she was at our house. Getting her to and from the readings was work enough. (This was before either Krishna or I had learned how to drive, so it was all public transit.) Afterwards, I realized that I'd learned in an unspoken way just how disorienting and even frightening the external world had become for her. She was profoundly interested in it, but was very protective of her psyche and quite conscious of her limits. She was a remarkably quiet guest during those few days. In fact, I probably received phone calls in which she said more than she did while at our house.

Hannah was very interested in kids, especially in the idea of having boys. At various points, Asa Watten, Ben Sherry, Felix Bernstein and my son Jesse were all identified by her as "silent teachers." While she and Jesse spoke on the phone a few times and he's heard the works that refer to him, they never got to meet in person.

I was raised by a grandmother who was psychotic and don't take the circumstance lightly. When Hannah was on her meds, she could be remarkably matter of fact about her own situation, but often she was not on her meds and they tend to be the sorts of things that can get mixed and muddled too easily. When, in the 60s, psychiatry in this country moved literally millions of people out of institutions back into communities, there was an assumption (even stated boldly in places such as California) that local governments would set up the resources to support them. I know from my experience in the Tenderloin that, with help, it's not that difficult. (My wife did this for a living for years with many clients in far worse shape than Hannah.) I often felt that Hannah would have benefited greatly from a program such as the one Krishna had worked in. Now I wonder if she might not still be alive if it had existed for her. It's not a fun thought.

I've written about Hannah's work before, so won't duplicate that here, but I do want to note that when I used the word "realism" in the subtitle of Tree and as the title of a selection of langpo in Ironwood, it was Hannah's work specifically that brought me to this realization. She was an awesome documentarian of a minority reality and if you read her use of pauses, punctuation (including half-erased lettering), and multiple voices, you discover both how complex and completely realized her texts are.

I miss her terribly,

Ron

↑ Index

168. Jordan Davis
great words, extra credit
Sat 13 Sep 1997

Finnegan's proposed exercise in which one takes half the words of a great work sounds great! But is it the first half of each word, the first half of each work, or something else altogether? And if I choose a great work from French, say, the Inferno, or Comment j'ai ecrit certain de mes livres can I do a sound translation, for extra credit?

And if I bring in the works of John Ashbery, David Shapiro, Bernadette Mayer, Jackson Mac Low and Lee Ann Brown... would it undercut that I am pleased by resistance to what if it went unchecked could be called the hubris of literary scientia?

eh?
J

↑ Index

169. Bob Grumman
Re: Writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

James Finnegan Asked, "What great poems have been produced from writing exercises?" I don't know about great, but one of my favorite poems, Keats's On the Grasshopper and Cricket, was the result of an exercise. I'm hazy on the details, but some kind of sonnet-writing contest was suggested at a gathering of poets, and Keats batted out the preceding in competition with Leigh Hunt (I think). Shelley might have participated, too, I'm not sure.

There's also the example of the obviously exercise poems that begin Shakespeare's sonnet sequence.

In any event, I'm definitely with Charles Alexander about the value of procedure poems/exercise poems/what-if-I-do-this poems. Even if nothing comes from working on such poems in a workshop, the experience of what-iffing has to be valuable.

--Bob G

↑ Index

170. Michael Heller
(no subject)
Sat 13 Sep 1997

Saddened by news of old, old friend Hannah. We met in '64 in Kenneth Koch's New School poetry workshop. She was even then thinking of alternative poetries, and when she visited me the following year in Spain during my expatriate number she'd already begun to draft out Code of Flag Behavior in which I performed as a signal man at G Stern's loft in the late sixties. Many memories now, not only of her highly original poetry but of her sweetness, her generosity and the exercise wherever possible of her canny and genuine zaniness.

↑ Index

171. David R. Israel
Re: (fwd) Contest Announcement
Sat 13 Sep 1997

Chris A. --

thanks for forwarding the contest announcement (I've not as interested in a contest since I was olded out of Yalie Younger Po).

One techno question:

> This competition is open to any poet named Mark Weiss.

From what I hear on the bahn, David Bromige would appear to be included within the set of all poets named Mark Weiss, neh? And I also seem to recollect news that David Israel is tantamont to David Bromige (or maybe it's the other way around . . . I'm a mite confused or a confused mite).

contest context test text s x

d.i.

↑ Index

172. David Bromige
writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

Able to Describe the Verses

(after Neruda)

Able to describe the verses more sad each night.

In the night like the two of them between my arms.
They kissed like tarantulas beneath an infinite sky.

She quizzed me, I quizzed her back.
As if I had a friend with big fizzy eyes.

Able to exactly as I said before.
Thinking that I can't go on. Feeling lost.

Ear to immensity's night, immense with her.
On the other hand my soul turns rocks into paste.

What does it matter my love can't guard its shame.
The night is starry & she isn't with me still.

So much for death. For song with its laws. For laws.
My soul is not contented with having lost her someplace.

As if she were here, I admire her hair suit.
My heart her hair suit, & she isn't in it.

The mismatched night blanks out the mismatched trees.
Our sisters, those who entice, the same backwards as forwards.

I don't know why, that's certain, perhaps I should ask her. My voice grows furry as it blows about her idea.

The other. Be the Other. Come kiss me like before.
Her voice, her clear form. Her infinite pupils.

Why is night like the two of them between my arms:
my discontented soul with the beauty it has lost.

Why I don't know for sure, maybe we'll discuss some ways.
The short tan of love, the large tan of oblivion.

Although this sea is the ultimate sadness she can cause me, &, as I told Sean, this is the ultimate paper boat I shall make her.

****

I wrote this upon the suggestion that one write a "fake translation" (or "homophonic" version) from a poem in a language one didn't know. At that time blissfully incapable of Spanish, I took Neruda's "Lament" (from his first book, I think titled _18 poems of love and one lament_). I departed from the homophonic discipline frequently, as a quick check of my poem against Neruda's must disclose. But I could not have written this w/o Neruda to distract me from my habitual vocabulary/subject matter/syntax. Whether it is what James Finnegan would call a "great poem" I must doubt, but I've always liked it and prefer it to the grandiosities of the original.

The larger picture is, that such exercises help place one where the poem is no longer a confessional box, or rather, where it _is_ a confessional box, and seen as such,and one can describe its construction instead of dwelling on the hard luck of its temporary inhabitant. Poetry has always employed such devices to distract the poet & thereby allow something new to emerge from his/her programmed mind--as programmed as the next member of society, poet or no. When these devices become too familiar, and susceptible of glib usage, it is time to come up with fresh ones. With my education, riming iambic pentameters was no challenge. Making a piece out of items from the local newspaper was, and the result, "One Spring," can be found in _Men, Women & Vehicles_ (Black Sparrow, 1990); it won a Pushcart Prize in 1980, upon its publication in _This_ journal.

I, Dave, testify in the courts of the Law, taking myself as example, but among my colleagues'sproductions are many, many fine poems that stemmed, to one degree or another, from just such defamiliarizing procedures. One of these colleagues, John Keats, has already been mentioned in this thread; it bears remembering that his Odes were the result of a new stanza form, no matter he was raiding, among others, Spenser for "inspiration".

Seeing That You Asked

In this world there's a secret
& it belongs to me, to me
& to someone who lives in here with me.

When my brother dreams
he shivers. Instead of night
he sees these things.
When he takes a walk & sees something it makes marks on his forehead
in small drops of blood.

A dream's when you see people.

The dream is in the smoke.
When you wake up
it's right in front of you.

The light makes dreams.
Dreams come to pay us back
& wake us up.

If you dream you're dressed
you see a picture.
As long as there's a picture in the room
I can never be alone.
Statues & pictures aren't alive.
They can only think & see.

The wind makes the grass move
& you see it move.
That is thinking.

When you can't remember something
then you think.

A horse thinks with its ears.
A curious thought came into my head :
I must give up my horse
to make my mother better.
It was made of wood, with real hair.

Could this chair have been called "Stuhl"?
Yes, that is a word in German.
Who gave things German names?
God, & the Germans.

A dog knows its name
but does a fish? It should,
if we know we belong, why shouldn't fish.

The name of the moon
isn't in the moon.
The sun's name's in the voice
that says it.

The clouds' name
is in the clouds
because they're gray.

As for the pencil,
it's printed on its side.

This is made of phrases from Piaget's book of responses by young children to such questions as "What is thinking?" "What is a dream?" etc.

Looking into great literature unquote and then writing, as a formula, has a downside, namely, pale imitation. For one thing, it appears to overlook the need to accomodate the destructive impulse, what Andrei Codrescu was looking at when he announced on his radio show : "Poets hate Poetry." Yet it is this very accomodation that gives a poem its edge.

Looking into one's heart & writing, Phil Sidney's Muse's formula, hardly was followed by Her poet, who was copping formal help from all over. When I was a teacher in creative writing classes, students who looked into their hearts & wrote usually sounded like Hallmark clones. I think that's because the heart is seldom where you look for it. I know that there is more of me in these two poems I include here, than I ever would have revealed had I been focussing on my self, my heart, etc. David

↑ Index

173. David Bromige

Re: [sonnet] constitution/ writing exercises

Sat 13 Sep 1997

> From: [redacted]
> Date: Thu, 11 Sep 1997 12:31:27 +0100 (WET DST)
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: [sonnet] constitution
> Sender: [redacted]
> Precedence: bulk
>
> Subject: L'indigestion de nos sillons

> [Lipogramme en JKWY]
>
> Voici l'introduction de la Constitution
> ---
> La France est ma nation, dÈpourvue de sections
> Elle a pour conditions d'offrir sa protection,
> Sa subordination ý la population,
> Et sa sÈparation de toute confession.
>
> Elle donne caution de l'Ègalisation
> Des gens devant l'action de la lÈgislation
> Sans nulle distinction de foi, de conviction,
> De race, d'extraction, voire de profession.
>
> Son mode d'expression est franÁais d'Èlection.
> Le bleu, blanc, vermillon en est l'Èvocation
> Comme l'’pre chanson de la RÈvolution.
>
> Le slogan "Communion, ŠquitÈ, Permission"
> Souligne les notions rÈglant sa direction :
> Le peuple a pour mission son administration.
> ---
> Offrez vos compassions ý ma composition
> plutÙt que vos sanctions... Gilles Esposition_

I hope I may be forgiven this cross-posting/forwarding : I thought some of those on our List who are discussing writing exercises might find the Oulipo List of interest. David

↑ Index

174. Maria Damon
(no subject)
Sat 13 Sep 1997

---

yo, mark wallace; back channel me please? thanks, maria d

↑ Index

175. red slider
Re: writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

---

on writing&i retold story of an architect working on a large building (I think in Berlin) needing to place a 50' I-beam with a very slight angle from the center of the atrium to the girding above. The gang-boss rode the fitting end of the girder as the crane lowered it into position. "Is this the angle you want?" he yelled down to the architect supervising the placement. "A little tighter," the archetict replied. Again the call, and the same reply. A third try and the architect responded, "Just make it as straight as you can and it will be crooked enough."

find reading Bromige on Bromige while dangling from crane a good exercise to distract the i) suspend shatter dislocate from atrium to)self_sufficient insertion into poem-girding reflexive i - inescapable as signature attempting to converge on forgery at the scene of 3) red

---
From: David Bromige[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Saturday, September 13, 1997 12:10 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: writing exercises

Able to Describe the Verses

(after Neruda)

Able to describe the verses more sad each night.

In the night like the two of them between my arms.
They kissed like tarantulas beneath an infinite sky.

She quizzed me, I quizzed her back.
As if I had a friend with big fizzy eyes.

Able to exactly as I said before.
Thinking that I can't go on. Feeling lost.

Ear to immensity's night, immense with her.
On the other hand my soul turns rocks into paste.

What does it matter my love can't guard its shame.
The night is starry & she isn't with me still.

So much for death. For song with its laws. For laws.
My soul is not contented with having lost her someplace.

As if she were here, I admire her hair suit.
My heart her hair suit, & she isn't in it.

The mismatched night blanks out the mismatched trees.
Our sisters, those who entice, the same backwards as forwards.

I don't know why, that's certain, perhaps I should ask her. My voice grows furry as it blows about her idea.

The other. Be the Other. Come kiss me like before.
Her voice, her clear form. Her infinite pupils.

Why is night like the two of them between my arms:
my discontented soul with the beauty it has lost.

Why I don't know for sure, maybe we'll discuss some ways.
The short tan of love, the large tan of oblivion.

Although this sea is the ultimate sadness she can cause me, &, as I told Sean,
this is the ultimate paper boat I shall make her.

****

I wrote this upon the suggestion that one write a "fake translation" (or "homophonic" version) from a poem in a language one didn't know. At that time blissfully incapable of Spanish, I took Neruda's "Lament" (from his first book, I think titled _18 poems of love and one lament_). I departed from the homophonic discipline frequently, as a quick check of my poem against Neruda's must disclose. But I could not have written this w/o Neruda to distract me from my habitual vocabulary/subject matter/syntax. Whether it is what James Finnegan would call a "great poem" I must doubt, but I've always liked it and prefer it to the grandiosities of the original.

The larger picture is, that such exercises help place one where the poem is no longer a confessional box, or rather, where it _is_ a confessional box, and seen as such,and one can describe its construction instead of dwelling on the hard luck of its temporary inhabitant. Poetry has always employed such devices to distract the poet & thereby allow something new to emerge from his/her programmed mind--as programmed as the next member of society, poet or no. When these devices become too familiar, and susceptible of glib usage, it is time to come up with fresh ones. With my education, riming iambic pentameters was no challenge. Making a piece out of items from the local newspaper was, and the result, "One Spring," can be found in _Men, Women & Vehicles_ (Black Sparrow, 1990); it won a Pushcart Prize in 1980, upon its publication in _This_ journal.

I, Dave, testify in the courts of the Law, taking myself as example, but among my colleagues'sproductions are many, many fine poems that stemmed, to one degree or another, from just such defamiliarizing procedures. One of these colleagues, John Keats, has already been mentioned in this thread; it bears remembering that his Odes were the result of a new stanza form, no matter he was raiding, among others, Spenser for "inspiration".

Seeing That You Asked

In this world there's a secret
& it belongs to me, to me
& to someone who lives in here with me.

When my brother dreams
he shivers. Instead of night
he sees these things.
When he takes a walk & sees something
it makes marks on his forehead
in small drops of blood.

A dream's when you see people.

The dream is in the smoke.
When you wake up
it's right in front of you.

The light makes dreams.
Dreams come to pay us back
& wake us up.

If you dream you're dressed
you see a picture.
As long as there's a picture in the room
I can never be alone.
Statues & pictures aren't alive.
They can only think & see.

The wind makes the grass move
& you see it move.
That is thinking.

When you can't remember something
then you think.

A horse thinks with its ears.
A curious thought came into my head :
I must give up my horse
to make my mother better.
It was made of wood, with real hair.

Could this chair have been called "Stuhl"?
Yes, that is a word in German.
Who gave things German names?
God, & the Germans.

A dog knows its name
but does a fish? It should,
if we know we belong, why shouldn't fish.

The name of the moon
isn't in the moon.

The sun's name's in the voice
that says it.

The clouds' name
is in the clouds
because they're gray.

As for the pencil,
it's printed on its side.

This is made of phrases from Piaget's book of responses by young children to such questions as "What is thinking?" "What is a dream?" etc.

Looking into great literature unquote and then writing, as a formula, has a downside, namely, pale imitation. For one thing, it appears to overlook the need to accomodate the destructive impulse, what Andrei Codrescu was looking at when he announced on his radio show : "Poets hate Poetry." Yet it is this very accomodation that gives a poem its edge.

Looking into one's heart & writing, Phil Sidney's Muse's formula, hardly was followed by Her poet, who was copping formal help from all over. When I was a teacher in creative writing classes, students who looked into their hearts & wrote usually sounded like Hallmark clones. I think that's because the heart is seldom where you look for it. I know that there is more of me in these two poems I include here, than I ever would have revealed had I been focussing on my self, my heart, etc. David

↑ Index

176. James Finnegan
Re: writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

I'm sure I was hasty in my summary dismissal of writing exericises. And, certainly, I'm aware that "great poems" and "good books" are not going to be the same texts for everyone.
Exercises, for students, are certainly useful in art and music schools, so why not in creative writing schools?

But many of the exercises are so damn silly. Some are like the various improbable cures for hiccups people have, only the idea behind these is "to unblock or to free the creative impulse of the writer." Does the world need more refrigerator magnet poems?

Now I don't teach, so I don't have clue how hard or easy it is to teach creative writing. And I imagine any tool will be worthwhile in the hands of a good teacher.
But in talking with writers, I never seem to hear one say (or should I say, admit) that a certain writing exercise was the basis for a breakthrough in his/her writing--
"Last night, before going to bed, I cut out words from the Personals section of the newspaper, then I placed them in my pillowcase. Next morning I shook them out on the sheet and wrote a love poem like I've never written before." Perhaps most poets prefer not to credit the exercise because of its inherent artificiality.

Finnegan

↑ Index

177. Daniel Zimmerman
phony homophony
Sat 13 Sep 1997

David Bromige's homophonic version of Neruda's "Lament" provoked me to the following massacree of Neruda's "Ode to French Fries" [from _Odes to Common Things_, Little, Brown: 1996]. My ignorance of Spanish no doubt vies with Bromige's, but I like the sense of looking through centuries-old glass at an event not quite identifiable yet fascinating which this technique affords. First, the Spanish:

Oda a las papas fritas

Chisporrotea en el aciete hirviendo la alegría del mundo:
las papas fritas entran en la sartén como nevadas plumas
de cisne matutino
y salen semidoradas por el crepitante ámbar de las olivas.

El ajo
les añade
su terrenal fragancia, la pimienta,
polen que atravesó los arrecifes,
y vestidas de nuevo
con traje de marfil, llenan el plato con la repetición de su abundancia y su sabrosa sencillez de tierra.

+++++++

A dust-lip bobby's frieze

Just for a day,
an ale as yet, hey,
herby, and oh,
all agree, a tall moon-dew (less Papa's Fritos end-run) unless our din go moan Nevada's bloom as daisies name a duty? No,
Is Silent
Sammy to rate us all crap? It ain't he on board the last oily bus.

A lie, oh,
lays on yr day
so the rain'll frog-grunt "See ya, low-beam yenta,
bowling got raves a loser receives."
He,
best he does,
the New Wave. Oh,
contrite marvel, yen & all blotto,
gone all Rep, a dizzy one, the swab, undone seer.
Ease who's sub rosa, since he is the terror.

--Daniel Zimmerman

↑ Index

178. Lawrence Upton.
Re: writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

I admit that some of the poems I am happiest with have been produced at least partly by chance and other methods and that I cannot usually remember wch are wch. I am glad I confessed. I feel better.

Lawrence Upton

> Now I don't teach, so I don't have clue how hard > or easy it is to teach creative writing. And I imagine > any tool will be worthwhile in the hands of a good teacher.
> But in talking with writers, I never seem to hear one say
> (or should I say, admit) that a certain writing exercise
> was the basis for a breakthrough in his/her writing--
> "Last night, before going to bed, I cut out words from the > Personals section of the newspaper, then I placed them
> in my pillowcase. Next morning I shook them out on > the sheet and wrote a love poem like I've never written > before." Perhaps most poets prefer not to credit the > exercise because of its inherent artificiality.
>
> Finnegan

↑ Index

179. Jordan Davis
requiem for pedagogy / spicer teaser
Sat 13 Sep 1997

one does something in one's own work one likes (won) and when it comes time to talk a teacher one takes this thing apart and shows how to build it back up no more no less. as where market and calculus are in contact in derivatives. or dhydrtd fds.

hey congratulations Kevin Killian the Spicer in Minn in the ILS this month is terrific. You and your co-author are to be co-mmended. May the book when it arrives get noticed around the world!

Jordan

ps is bc really a landmass formerly known as so.california?

↑ Index

180. henry gould
Re: writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

We go to school & learn the rules of grammar, we grow up & learn social behavior, how to behave in a seemly manner so as not to make ourselves impossible, etc. Writing exercises are meant to shake up those rules by means of new rules - instigate exploration of new possibilities. But I agree with Finnegan that technique fades quickly into gimmimimicry which easily kills poetry. To mistake techniques for creativity & imagination - this is another aspect of the great rationalist leveler in all of us which grinds down the unique & inexplicable into categories & explained stuff. The necessary image or motive draws the handy technique like a magnet - exactly the OPPOSITE process from the classroom experiment. I'm sure the authentic poet-teachers out there make that clear, but I wouldn't know.

I wrote a poem once, a long poem, called White City. About halfway through I started alluding or echoing previous particular lines in a mathematical way - & simultaneously creating sort of a Finneganesque distortion. I did discover something ODD doing this - toward the end of the poem as the math-allusions got more dense & the distortions more severe, the poem started to tell a story - a narrative-inside-the-poem. My point is that in my mind the only clear benefit of this "technique" is that it led to something unplanned. If that hadn't happened, the gimmick would have laid siege to & eventually strangled White City. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

181. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: writing exercises
Sat 13 Sep 1997

Henry: "White City" as in the Columbian Exposition? [The mathematical involution would make sense, if so. I came across it in a book by Alan Trachtenberg, _The Incorporation of America_, which I reviewed several years back for Jack Clarke's _intent._] Where did that [did it?] appear?

--Dan Zimmerman

henry gould wrote:
>
> We go to school & learn the rules of grammar, we grow up & learn social > behavior, how to behave in a seemly manner so as not to make ourselves > impossible, etc. Writing exercises are meant to shake up those rules by > means of new rules - instigate exploration of new possibilities.

> But I agree with Finnegan that technique fades quickly into gimmimimicry > which easily kills poetry. To mistake techniques for creativity & > imagination - this is another aspect of the great rationalist leveler > in all of us which grinds down the unique & inexplicable into categories > & explained stuff. The necessary image or motive draws the handy technique > like a magnet - exactly the OPPOSITE process from the classroom experiment.
> I'm sure the authentic poet-teachers out there make that clear, but I wouldn't > know.
>
> I wrote a poem once, a long poem, called White City. About halfway through
> I started alluding or echoing previous particular lines in a mathematical > way - & simultaneously creating sort of a Finneganesque distortion.
> I did discover something ODD doing this - toward the end of the poem as the > math-allusions got more dense & the distortions more severe, the poem > started to tell a story - a narrative-inside-the-poem. My point is that > in my mind the only clear benefit of this "technique" is that it led to > something unplanned. If that hadn't happened, the gimmick would have > laid siege to & eventually strangled White City. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

182. Layne Russell

Re: writing exercises

Sat 13 Sep 1997

David Bromige wrote:
>
> I find it odd that James Finnegan writes that he never hears a poet admit > that such-&-such an exercise led to a breakthru in his poetry, so soon > after I posted two poems which I said were that, for me. Perhaps others on > this List would care to testify to the value of some writing exercise > either to their own poetry, or that of others. David

I have often found "exercises" or parameters of some kind to have helped me produce pieces that took me into new places. Sometimes the subject matter alone is the new territory. I value stimulation in any form that brings me to write a new poem. I never value those poems less because they were instigated in this way.

Layne

http://www.sonic.net/layne
"A Quiet Place" -- Poetry

http://www.sonic.net/layne/calendar.html
"Poets Leave Their Prints" -- Poetry Calendar

↑ Index

183. Bob Grumman

Re: writing exercises (and an ANNOUNCEMENT)

Sat 13 Sep 1997

Unless I'm misreading what Henry's saying in his latest posting, I disagree with him in a couple of spots. First of all, I don't see that technique NECESSARILY fades quickly into "gimmimimicry" any more than images or motives necessarily fade quickly into cliche. Nor do I understand why it would be a "mistake" to confuse techniques for creativity and imagination. What's uncreative about inventing a new technique, or using an old one brilliantly? Why shouldn't an effective technique "draw" the right image as easily as the reverse? Sure, a poem that's all technique is unlikely to be too hot, but why would a poem that's all image or motive be any better?

Anyhow, my practice as a poet is to take anything I can as a starting point; if it's an image, then I hunt for a technique that'll unprose it; if a technique, then I hunt for an image it'll work with. Consistent result: all my poems that use post-1950 techniques get accused of being mere gimmickry.

AND NOW AN ANNOUNCEMENT FROM THIS POSTING'S SPONSOR, THE RUNAWAY SPOON PRESS:

7 new offerings now available for money or trade:

-Ocracy, parts 5 - 7 by Sheila Murphy and Peter Ganick

Broken Poems for Evita by John Elsberg

[Un Nome} by Michael Basinski

Falling Down by Mark Peters

Number Poems by Irving Weiss

Five Days Shy of February by Jonathan Levant

E.mail me for further information. --Bob G.

↑ Index

184. henry g
tech tach toe
Sat 13 Sep 1997

In reply to Bob Grumman: technique doesn't NECESSARILY fade into gimmimicry. I said it EASILY fades into said. As image & motive do into cliche, as you say. I'm seeing it like a spatial continuum I guess, not a logical outcome. Technique/gimmick. Image/cliche.

All WRITING is technique. But poetry isn't encompassed by writing. (Maybe Derrida disagrees, I dunno.) Writing programs sell "writing." Like, you too can be a capital P. Here, try these techniques.

Imagination/creativity get processed & sold too, as we know. But I still say they are different from technique. Sure, there's imaginative use of techni que. No argument there. But technique, on the other hand, is no proof of imagination - in fact it's often a crutch (in the avant-garde as well as the retro-garde) for lack of same. Check your own lame lines (everybody). Inflated blurb as interpretant of smooth gimmick.

Creativity - is that a juicier way of putting it than imagination? Or how about "inscape". Then there's always "fate".

The poem is a stone fallen from heaven.
No one judges it. (Mandelstam)

- Henry the Quoter of Osip Mandelstam

↑ Index

185. Rebecca Weldon
A Song of Despair
Sat 13 Sep 1997

I characterize this century as the one of "form will set you free". Form, no form, different form, form exercises, form-is-content, content-is-form, form as language, language as form, form-of-thought, no-thought-form, a sea of forms eroding continents of form bequeathed.

The rats eat my notebooks of form and I am glad they are nourished. There was a time when all I had was form and Neruda and myself. I exercised an exploration of the place Neruda showed me. Twenty exercises and a poem, Twenty love poems and La Cancion Desesperada.

Play is creative, liberating and prepares us for what we live when play is done.

↑ Index

186. David Bromige
writing exercises
Sun 14 Sep 1997

I find it odd that James Finnegan writes that he never hears a poet admit that such-&-such an exercise led to a breakthru in his poetry, so soon after I posted two poems which I said were that, for me. Perhaps others on this List would care to testify to the value of some writing exercise either to their own poetry, or that of others. David

↑ Index

187. red slider
Re: A Song of Despair
Sun 14 Sep 1997

From: Rebecca Weldon[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Saturday, September 13, 1997 8:54 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: A Song of Despair

I characterize this century as the one of "form will set you free". Form, no form, different form, form exercises, form-is-content, content-is-form, form as language, language as form, form-of-thought, no-thought-form, a sea of forms eroding continents of form bequeathed.

The rats eat my notebooks of form and I am glad they are nourished. There was a time when all I had was form and Neruda and myself. I exercised an exploration of the place Neruda showed me. Twenty exercises and a poem, Twenty love poems and La Cancion Desesperada.

Play is creative, liberating and prepares us for what we live when play is done.

hell, &i thought it was all play. you mean it isn't? I'm done for.

red.

↑ Index

188. red slider
Re: writing exercises - derived works
Sun 14 Sep 1997

'great poems' and 'breakthrus' are stoppers since i can't claim either and won't if/until more than a few tell me otherwise - but here's a few that came/were-directly prompted by exercises the past few months:

'Homo Vocalis' - (Recursive Angel) ex. from Alien flowers (Joy Acey)
'Hot Oil' - (Zuzu's Petal's) - ex. from Poetry Cafe
'Natural Practices - ex. from Alien Flowers (Tom Williams)
'Ballad of Emma Good' - ex. from APW (Janet Holmes)
'Still Life with Moon' - ex. from APW (scott Reid)
'Still Life with Statue' (current finalist PEII) - Tom Williams ex.
'Isle du Goree' - ex. Alien Flowers (Mary Tomaselli)
'15th day of Prana' - ex. Alien Flowers (Joy Acey)
'Two Brushes' - soco poets (Layne Russell)
et. al.

here's a couple - nothing shattering, avant or langpo - but if they look like exercises then I stand corrected.

Still Life with Statue

She stands for seeming hours, mimes hardly moving, imperceptible changes query in the hesitant ranges, moves on over open ground, soundless.

She has finally mastered invisibility, sewed a cloak that bends the light to impossibly uninteresting angles barely breathing at the margins;
a sustained aikedo defeating attention.

In Mauroc they remove the shine, cover with hijab, deform glances, walk astride a hobbled gait as if to say Allah has not visited, who wants that?

She says nothing, involves no one,
her immobility stretches over canvass, no startled birds emerge, white gesso glaze redoubles the sunlight, hiding the texture of grass at her feet, stones cover her eyes.

He is young, vibrant, attentive,
a gaze that says you need to know,
shows good teeth, speaks taste and patience while a brief gust blows a kiss of paper cup her way, a make-do vase for a sudden bouquet thought that withers without an address.

The small hour brushes shady hues across the vacant stare of afternoon.
Stones cave inward, so densely grey Erato's arbor only thickens in its wall at the silence of such perfect refutation.
While nightfall drapes,

                a dust cloud on the pond studies her reflection.

Natural Practices

As a child, i run my fingers over stone feeling shadows flee, not idle time for me brailling the earth this way, lessons for the day when i must choose how to walk upon living things; and when i run my fingers bumpity-bumpity over the fence holes is it not to inspect the notions of worlds within worlds that someday i will meet behind barriers i must overcome, wish them away that i may heed any beckon from beyond?
And on a sunny day, if i should dig a hole in the yard and then crawl down into the cool dampness of earth pressed to my back and trace the meaning of my eye as it slowly moves along the strata of a hundred years, have i not begun to puzzle the riddle of my ancestors, the chains of being that are forged and reforged with each succession?

When i pick my nose i am amazed that portions of my body detach in such pliant supple forms that tickle strangely wet and gelled in unpredictable shapes, sweet and sour.
And should i not wonder at the ways i will become, the parts of me that will liquefy and slide along the demanding trails and impossibly dry narrow crawl-ways that lie before me?
When i touch my toes, is it not a journey in enumeration of places unrevealed for which i am already highly adapted;
write simple lessons on the bilateral symmetry of wiggling things?
When i reach into the not quite there, absent and unformed, vague thoughts watch the ten great teachers of the world disappear into a mist beyond which i cannot penetrate, where the star-shaped limbs of me are radially motivated. Should i not wonder if this vanishing point continues to grow, to consume until there is no more me?

I play among the eidos in the second-hand shop of God, filled with things known only by their gestures long after the costumes which once wore them have departed. I string the gestures into beads of thought, the thoughts into rosaries of vision, the visions into new costumes. With these I will confront the gestures of the unknown, again and again, like a scimitar without a Saracen. And if the blade turns upon itself, slicing through the string of questions, what then? In the mirror of antiquities I see my reflection instantly melanize and disappear. Should I not try to illuminate the eidolon that lives there and dines on angels when it can; forages for passing shadow scraps when it cannot? And if I find it, do I also become dark and gloomy? Is it here, in this soundless priory of hallways, the vanished parts have gone, to haunt me forever, as a man?

↑ Index

189. Mark Baker

Re: Unprosing

Sun 14 Sep 1997

What does Bob Grumman mean by hunting for a technique to "unprose" an image? Does this suggest something like that word "versify"? As in, "William, those daffodils look so gay, ever glancing, ever changing!" A poet could not but be gay to unprose that.

Mark Baker

↑ Index

190. red slider

Re: writing exercises - on employment

Sun 14 Sep 1997

---

there is another way i've used exercises - as sketches and problem solvers for other more ambitious pieces. For instance, 'Still Life with Statue' was first suggested as an exercise in which the central figure had to be entirely passive - no voice/no action - At the same time I had been working on a much larger piece, 'Glimpses' that required a full description of a figure that hardly appears. SLS was used to solve some of those problems and the solutions transfered to the longer work. In that, I felt the process somewhat akin to the plastic or visual arts where preliminary sketches or models (exercises) may be made - and become works in their own right. In SLS the sketch did not resemble an actual part of the larger work - but still the process felt similar to one i'd used in sculpting and painting.

red.

↑ Index

191. aerialedge
Re: requiem for pedagogy / spicer teaser
Sun 14 Sep 1997

j-- tried to get to your webpage & was denied. send me that add again?

↑ Index

192. L.MacMahon and T.R.Healy
writing exercises
Sun 14 Sep 1997

At the risk of being obvious, the Greek word for art was techne. Not suggesting we should all wear short skirts and carry shields, though I'm not against that either.

Is there any reason why the two approaches: deliberation/inspiration should be mutually exclusive whether at the same or at different times? Coming from a country where thinking is regarded as cheating and all forms of "holism" routinely excise the intellect I find myself sympathetic to the idea of writing exercises. Certainly, having read David Bromige's beautiful examples this morning, I would find it difficult to accept that such exercises cannot result in poetry. Looks like a duck, quacks like a duck, it's a duck.

Also the idea that writing can be a pleasure, intellectually or otherwise, becomes unusually attractive when the background count of fake anguish rises beyond safe limits. (One year I did a word count on the British Arts Council's annual anthology and the most frequent lexical extrusion was "dark", beating even the definite article.)

Read no further unless you are willing to exercise.

Start with one word. Generate further words by (a) inserting (b) deleting a letter and (c) anagrammising or inverting the order. This is part of how genes mutate. There follows a 2-dimensional example, taken from a work in progress (Note to those who feel like giving up after the first line: it's in the second stanza)

cheers,

Randolph Healy

******

the zenith semi-circle
now hooping
Sumer Akkad Babylon
Assyrian Persian Hellene

(layers of coloured sand) will arrive in less than four hours.

Change charge chart chants chance matches aches haunches chases arches search crashes charms smears screams marches

↑ Index

193. Schuchat Simon
Re: writing exercises
Sun 14 Sep 1997

---

isn't a canzone an exercise?

would "A" count as a masterpiece that comes from various writing exercises?

my problem is that I am not sure I understand what is meant by "exercise"

↑ Index

194. Bob Grumman
Re: Unprosing & Tech Tach Toe
Sun 14 Sep 1997

I tried to answer Mark Baker's inquiry as to what I meant "by hunting for a technique to 'unprose' an image" with a 300,000-word monograph plus seventeen attachments, but list-gatekeeper Joel Kuszai for some reason wouldn't let it through. So here's a second, shorter try.

A technique to unprose an image is one whose purpose is to lift the image out of its prosaism, to invest it with a more-than-common sensual richness. Versification as in Wordsworth's daffodil poem (another favorite of mine) would be one such technique, but there are many others: metaphorization, infra-verbal deconstruction or scrambling (as Randolph Healy is doing), various visual devices, parataxis, mathematicalization, even the simple lineation that Williams used to unprose his red wheelbarrow. Note: such techniques can be used in prose--as in a modest way I used neologization to unprose the image (or concept) "make poetry of" in the prose passage of my previous posting--since prose needn't be ALL prose, just mainly prose.

Now back to Henry Gould. I like the Mandelstam quotation--except for the idea that no one judges poetry. Everyone judges poetry (and everything else), however unconsciously. To be cultured is to judge consciously.

As for our discussion, I suspect we're close to agreement and just arguing nuances. Technique of course can be used as a crutch, as can anything else in poetry or any other field. It IS different from imagination: it's what imagination uses to make art. Experience plus technique plus imagination equal art. Drop any of the three and you get cleverness without depth (technique plus imagination), confusion (experience plus imagination) or deadly predictability (experience plus technique).

--Bob G.

↑ Index

195. Sylvester Pollet
fwd on modernism
Sun 14 Sep 1997

Keith, or anyone? Please respond directly to the sender, not to me. Thanks, Sylvester.

> MIME-Version: 1.0
> Date: Sat, 13 Sep 1997 22:45:47 -0400
> Reply-To: Ezra Pound discussion list of the University of Maine
> <[redacted]>
> Sender: Ezra Pound discussion list of the University of Maine
> <[redacted]>
> From: "Hilary J. Binda" <[redacted]>
> Subject: help-listservs
> To: [redacted]
>
> I am searching desperately for listservs on literary/academic modernism, British modernism in particular. Do you know of any others?
>
> I am trying to find in particular a network of English graduate students working in the field of British modernism and ready to go onto the job market for a university faculty position. I would be grateful for any information about such networks that you might have.
>
> Thanks very much,
>
> Hilary Binda
> English Department
> Tufts University

↑ Index

196. Susan Wheeler
Poetics Digest/Exercises
Sun 14 Sep 1997

I'll second Rebecca's note on play in my own 2 cents. I use exercises -- the more "rote" and the more silly the better -- as throwaways with students, treating them as ways to unlock when self-consciousness and the weight of unassimilated theory makes them nervous. Sometimes there are great results, sometimes not, but the trick in order for this to be a limberer is not to focus on the results but on the play of it. Or so I've found.

Susan Wheeler
[redacted] voice/fax [redacted]

↑ Index

197. Alaric Sumner email addresses
Sun 14 Sep 1997

Has anyone got email or snail addresses for:

Charles Amirkhanian
Ellen Zweig

Backchannel please. Thanks.

Alaric Sumner
words worth language arts

↑ Index

198. Douglas
Hannah Weiner
Sun 14 Sep 1997

TRIBUTE TO HANNAH WEINER

Hannah cared immensely about her writing, and she was interested in having people read and hear her work. In memory of Hannah, I am offering one of her major works, SPOKE, at a 50% discount. The price is $3.50. Please contact me at [redacted]

In memory of Hannah, I am posting, below one of her later works, an incredible story/memoir/fantasty/journal titled "astral visions." This will appear in MR. KNIFE, MISS FORK: PERFORMANCES

i want to discuss astrals, the visions and i want to begin with paw because he seems to have started his existence three years ago this coming january and still exists the reason to discuss paw is that he is one of the teachers and gives me instruction continually and in the three years i've known him, or that he has appeared, he's grown in intelligence and acuteness and accuracy and he also happens to be the funniest person that i know he didn't start out as paw and i will tell you the story it all begins the day i went to cancun three years ago when an invisible man walked into my bedroom and i could just see the outline of his parka, and he dressed me very slowly, i was still sweating, (or I was sweating then as well), in a black lace bra and white cotton panties and then he put a finger up the leg of my panties and tickled my hip-bone very chastely and said "coochi-coo" and made me lie very still in between dressing so i wouldn't sweat the rest of it was up to me i got on the plane and nothing happened until the meal was served when there was a voice saying, "ma, eat the chocolate mousse, ask for more?" we got to cancun and i put my suitcase down on a little table for suitcases, and overhead i heard the clash of arms after the clash of arms i heard a woman's voice from the yoga institute saying "well now we unpack our suitcases and put our undies neatly on the shelf" i automatically began to unzip the suitcase to unpack it and the invisible man grabbed me by the back of my parka and made me get undressed i was soaking wet, my hair, my body, my clothes, everything and he made me get undressed i hung up my clothes in deference to the yoga lady i put my underwear and socks in the sink with some soapy water and the invisible man pushed me into the shower where I took a shampoo and washed off the sweat the invisble man disappeared the next thing that happened was purely mechanical, I tried to get about a half dozen blankets to wrap myself up in because it was pouring rain and it was cold i made a blanket roll of five blankets after i discovered that you lie in the middle and you throw one blanket over the other, (you begin on one side and rolling over them), and i put a blanket on top of all that right up to my chin, and under- neath the blanket appeared the bear i don't know that i called him paw at this time or that he called himself paw at this time, but he was a brown bear and i could see his head and his eyes and his nose peaking out from underneath the top blanket and he had one paw chastely placed on my chest between my breasts saying, "i have a real maw," and he stayed under the covers for four weeks (i was there for four weeks trying to get a place out but couldn't) and every once in awhile he'd say something like, "order more chocolate cake ma" and "I have a real ma" and "my jaw hurts" the interesting thing that i have to say about the bear is that he's an astral for an indian someone has invented for him- self an astral that speaks for him in the form of a bear in some indian legends a bear is a healer, not that paw has ever done any healing for me,"* but his instructions were bood, except at the beginning he really wasn't doing too much after four weeks when the sun came out and it got really hot he walked out in full brown fur saying, "see you onthe plane ma"

---

* but I have felt his real self sending me bliss

[now one thing happened in mexico that i'd like to talk about and that's the man from sonora who appeared astral this is a little interlude about paw the man from sonora appeared in my bedroom three times before i left ny, just his white hat and his long white hair and once a blanket over his shoulder before the ruins i got the message the first week i was there that he wanted to meet the woman with the long pipe (that's me) and he appeared in image form and he showed me a blanket trick that explained a little bit of castanida to me he was obviously an ancient mexican teacher who wanted to say certain things before he died and to pass on some of his knowledge he kept flipping the blanket (all of these things were very, very vividly seen) the blanket was sort of like in squares of different colors with a black outline now the black outline always remained the same but the patterns and colors of the squares kept changing so the lesson learned from that you could create an image but you couldn't keep it constant, you had to keep chaning the image he also had people circling the room, flying over- head in a circle that's something i'm not able to do myself and neither or any of the other teachers some of them can fly straight but nobody is able to circle it isn't really necessary, it's a matter of who is watching whom it's a way of guarding to have the man from sonora told me two things, he said "always give a health diagnosis out loud" and "to speak slow while speaking silent" because of the rain and because he wanted to meet me he made a long trip up the road from the ruins to the hotel and evidently he broke a leg or something happened and he fell in a ditch by the wayside and one night I woke up crying and sang a crossing song from "the big huge," it's something about a great light crossing the river, so i knew the man had died then appeared a woman, an elderly woman who evidently put a cross by hisbones and who the following day showed me his white hat, his white shirt, and white pants all neatly laundered and pressed out, so i know the man had died] ok, now the bear lots of other things happened in mexico but i don't have time for them i want to talk about paw when i got home the bear was very small, he had changed shape to a very small brown bear who lived in a cupboard in my forehead it had blue sheets and if i looked through catalogs and he saw some clothes that he liked he would immediately appear with the clothes on particularly a pair of black bicycling shorts and some wading shoes i tried to keep him occupied and i sent him on trips one was skiing in south america, and one was sending him to the south pole, and finally he decided to take his real ma on a honeymoon or whatever, a vacation and they went aboard a great big ocean liner and she, i think she was called ma belle, sat on a deck chair lounging on the deck of the ship and paw, or the bear, was flying overhead in circles because he was bored sitting on the deck when they got to france they rented a limousine and paw donned a chauffeurs cap and drove the limousine and all through france all is saw were pile and iles of spaghetti, that's all they seemed to eat for some reason also paw invented travelers checks so that he could pay for this whole thing this is the imagination of someone whose name is unknown but who has invented a form through which he can work so this was just sort of fun at the time you must remember that paw has written a great deal for me he wrote "the comma" in SILENT TEACHERS with noah kleinman my friend from england and he wrote "turpitudimous" which i read in october and he also gets in everywhere when i type up anything for the next book called WE SPEAK SILENT, or whatever it's going to be called finally paw and ma belle landed on a caribbean island, just the two of them under the shade of a palm tree the next thing i know paw turned into a great big white bear, not his final form he was called poohee at the time i went for a walk in the park and poohee got locked in the apartment and had to squeeze himself through the keyhole and i was accompanied in imae form by two people from the yoga institute one dressed in white who was walking alongside me and one who was dressed in pink who was sort of flying along beside me and poohee caught up and started smooching, you know he started sort of leaning over and kissing me or pretending to kiss me, or to tickle me or to laugh to make it a lovers lane walk and i started to laugh hysterically and i thought what will ever happen if i'm picked up by somebody, here i am talking to someone who is invisible an; oh well he was very funny the next time i went to the park paw* left the path and went over to some antique fair and came back with a velvet vest on it was a lilac velvet vest with red braid and green stones and an earring i laughed i talked to a girlfriend on the phone a few nights later and she was a very beautiful girl and paw clued me into the fact that i was talking to a very beautiful woman and he went out to see her and the next morning he appeared combing hair out of his teeth and the green stones were gone from his vest somewhere along the way his real ma got pregnant and we were walking along 14th street with the open stalls and he saw a bunch of little girls dresses he wanted a "pinkie" as he called it little girls dresses with little angel sleeves and some towels so he quickly donned a striped apron and cap imaged a big cart in front of him and trundled off piles of baby dresses with angel wing sleeves and towels, and brought them back to the apartment and we had to box them and ship them and send them all to his home he used to sit on the bed next to me reading the new york times with steel rimmed glasses the last time i really saw paw in any remarkable circumstance was at woodstock he had disappeared for awhile, he said "maw I have to go hime, something important is happening" and i was having breakfast at a coffee shop and there appeared paw sitting across the table from me with a big grin and next to him was a white lady bear, a daintier, felt to be a gentle with a wreath and a long bridal veil and they were toasting each other in white coffee cups that was the summer i hurt my back and the lady bear would appear with a pink apron and a cup on a tray and would bring me coffee or tea or whatever well i guess that's paw no maw im still really working hard besides paw and mrs paw there is a baby bear.

*he was now in his final form, a large white bear with a big fat tummy.

c 1997 by Hannah Weiner

Charles Bernstein saw the original performance of this. Perhaps he will recount some of his impression of it.

Douglas Messerli

↑ Index

199. Tom Mandel
Hannah Wiener
Sun 14 Sep 1997

When with Hannah Wiener you knew you would be recognized for what you radiate. When through a locked door you hear a sound, voice wanting to enter, it is not from beyond it is the door you have to open. No friend more difficult than truth, in which everything simple is so subtle, ineluctable. I befall you; I am an accident. Whom will you find to leave me behind?

Tom Mandel

Tom Mandel [redacted]
****
Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
4020 Williamsburg Ct, Ste 200 * vox: [redacted]
Fairfax, VA 22031 * fax: [redacted]
****

Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

200. jarnot
Poetry Project Readings, Fall 97
Sun 14 Sep 1997

The following readings will be taking place at the Poetry Project at St. Mark's Church in NYC this fall:

October 8: Bernadette Mayer & Barbara Guest

October 15: Edwin Torres & Rod Smith

October 22: Jena Osman & Fiona Templeton

October 29: Prageeta Sharma & Stephen Rodefer

November 5: Rosmarie Waldrop & Jacques Roubaud

November 12: Peter Gizzi & Lorenzo Thomas

November 19: Charlotte Carter & Lydia Davis

These readings are on Wednesday nights at 8:00 pm. The Poetry Project is located at East 10th Street and 2nd Avenue in Saint Mark's Church. Program coordinators for the series are Eleni Sikelianos and Lisa Jarnot.

[redacted]
box 185/NY, NY 10009

↑ Index

201. red slider
Re: Hannah Weiner
Sun 14 Sep 1997

From: Douglas[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, September 14, 1997 7:15 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Hannah Weiner

TRIBUTE TO HANNAH WEINER

Hannah cared immensely about her writing, and she was interested in having people read and hear her work. In memory of Hannah, I am offering one of her major works, SPOKE, at a 50% discount. The price is $3.50. Please contact me at [redacted]

In memory of Hannah, I am posting, below one of her
later works, an incredible story/memoir/fantasty/
journal titled "astral visions." This will appear
in MR. KNIFE, MISS FORK: PERFORMANCES

i want to discuss astrals, the visions and i want to begin with paw because he seems to have started his existence three years ago this coming january and still exists the reason to discuss paw is that he is one of the teachers and gives me instruction continually and in the three years i've known him, or that he has appeared, he's grown in intelligence and acuteness and accuracy and he also happens to be the funniest person that i know he didn't start out as paw and i will tell you the story it all begins the day i went to cancun three years ago when an invisible man walked into my bedroom and i could just see the outline of his parka, and he dressed me very slowly, i was still sweating, (or I was sweating then as well), in a black lace bra and white cotton panties and then he put a finger up the leg of my panties and tickled my hip-bone very chastely and said "coochi-coo" and made me lie very still in between dressing so i wouldn't sweat the rest of it was up to me i got on the plane and nothing happened until the meal was served when there was a voice saying, "ma, eat the chocolate mousse, ask for more?" we got to cancun and i put my suitcase down on a little table for suitcases, and overhead i heard the clash of arms after the clash of arms i heard a woman's voice from the yoga institute saying "well now we unpack our suitcases and put our undies neatly on the shelf" i automatically began to unzip the suitcase to unpack it and the invisible man grabbed me by the back of my parka and made me get undressed i was soaking wet, my hair, my body, my clothes, everything and he made me get undressed i hung up my clothes in deference to the yoga lady i put my underwear and socks in the sink with some soapy water and the invisible man pushed me into the shower where I took a shampoo and washed off the sweat the invisble man disappeared the next thing that happened was purely mechanical, I tried to get about a half dozen blankets to wrap myself up in because it was pouring rain and it was cold i made a blanket roll of five blankets after i discovered that you lie in the middle and you throw one blanket over the other, (you begin on one side and rolling over them), and i put a blanket on top of all that right up to my chin, and under- neath the blanket appeared the bear i don't know that i called him paw at this time or that he called himself paw at this time, but he was a brown bear and i could see his head and his eyes and his nose peaking out from underneath the top blanket and he had one paw chastely placed on my chest between my breasts saying, "i have a real maw," and he stayed under the covers for four weeks (i was there for four weeks trying to get a place out but couldn't) and every once in awhile he'd say something like, "order more chocolate cake ma" and "I have a real ma" and "my jaw hurts" the interesting thing that i have to say about the bear is that he's an astral for an indian someone has invented for him- self an astral that speaks for him in the form of a bear in some indian legends a bear is a healer, not that paw has ever done any healing for me,"* but his instructions were bood, except at the beginning he really wasn't doing too much after four weeks when the sun came out and it got really hot he walked out in full brown fur saying, "see you onthe plane ma"

---

* but I have felt his real self sending me bliss

[now one thing happened in mexico that i'd like to talk about and that's the man from sonora who appeared astral this is a little interlude about paw the man from sonora appeared in my bedroom three times before i left ny, just his white hat and his long white hair and once a blanket over his shoulder before the ruins i got the message the first week i was there that he wanted to meet the woman with the long pipe (that's me) and he appeared in image form and he showed me a blanket trick that explained a little bit of castanida to me he was obviously an ancient mexican teacher who wanted to say certain things

before he died and to pass on some of his knowledge he kept flipping the blanket (all of these things were very, very vividly seen) the blanket was sort of like in squares of different colors with a black outline now the black outline always remained the same but the patterns and colors of the squares kept changing so the lesson learned from that you could create an image but you couldn't keep it constant, you had to keep chaning the image he also had people circling the room, flying over- head in a circle that's something i'm not able to do myself and neither or any of the other teachers some of them can fly straight but nobody is able to circle it isn't really necessary, it's a matter of who is watching whom it's a way of guarding to have the man from sonora told me two things, he said "always give a health diagnosis out loud" and "to speak slow while speaking silent" because of the rain and because he wanted to meet me he made a long trip up the road from the ruins to the hotel and evidently he broke a leg or something happened and he fell in a ditch by the wayside and one night I woke up crying and sang a crossing song from "the big huge," it's something about a great light crossing the river, so i knew the man had died then appeared a woman, an elderly woman who evidently put a cross by hisbones and who the following day showed me his white hat, his white shirt, and white pants all neatly laundered and pressed out, so i know the man had died] ok, now the bear lots of other things happened in mexico but i don't have time for them i want to talk about paw when i got home the bear was very small, he had changed shape to a very small brown bear who lived in a cupboard in my forehead it had blue sheets and if i looked through catalogs and he saw some clothes that he liked he would immediately appear with the clothes on particularly a pair of black bicycling shorts and some wading shoes i tried to keep him occupied and i sent him on trips one was skiing in south america, and one was sending him to the south pole, and finally he decided to take his real ma on a honeymoon or whatever, a vacation and they went aboard a great big ocean liner and she, i think she was called ma belle, sat on a deck chair lounging on the deck of the ship and paw, or the bear, was flying overhead in circles because he was bored sitting on the deck when they got to france they rented a limousine and paw donned a chauffeurs cap and drove the limousine and all through france all is saw were pile and iles of spaghetti, that's all they seemed to eat for some reason also paw invented travelers checks so that he could pay for this whole thing this is the imagination of someone whose name is unknown but who has invented a form through which he can work so this was just sort of fun at the time you must remember that paw has written a great deal for me he wrote "the comma" in SILENT TEACHERS with noah kleinman my friend from england and he wrote "turpitudimous" which i read in october and he also gets in everywhere when i type up anything for the next book called WE SPEAK SILENT, or whatever it's going to be called finally paw and ma belle landed on a caribbean island, just the two of them under the shade of a palm tree the next thing i know paw turned into a great big white bear, not his final form he was called poohee at the time i went for a walk in the park and poohee got locked in the apartment and had to squeeze himself through the keyhole and i was accompanied in imae form by two people from the yoga institute one dressed in white who was walking alongside me and one who was dressed in pink who was sort of flying along beside me and poohee caught up and started smooching, you know he started sort of leaning over and kissing me or pretending to kiss me, or to tickle me or to laugh to make it a lovers lane walk and i started to laugh hysterically and i thought what will ever happen if i'm picked up by somebody, here i am talking to someone who is invisible an; oh well he was very funny the next time i went to the park paw* left the path and went over to some antique fair and came back with a velvet vest on it was a lilac velvet vest with red braid and green stones and an earring i laughed i talked to a girlfriend on the phone a few nights later and she was a very beautiful girl and paw clued me into the fact that i was talking to a very beautiful woman and he went out to see her and the next morning he appeared combing hair out of his teeth and the green stones were gone from his vest somewhere along the way his real ma got pregnant and we were walking along 14th street with the open stalls and he saw a bunch of little girls dresses he wanted a "pinkie" as he called it little girls dresses with little angel sleeves and some towels so he quickly donned a striped apron and cap imaged a big cart in front of him and trundled off piles of baby dresses with angel wing sleeves and towels, and brought them back to the apartment and we had to box them and ship them and send them all to his home he used to sit on the bed next to me reading the new york times with steel rimmed glasses the last time i really saw paw in any remarkable circumstance was at woodstock he had disappeared for awhile, he said "maw I have to go hime, something important is happening" and i was having breakfast at a coffee shop and there appeared paw sitting across the table from me with a big grin and next to him was a white lady bear, a daintier, felt to be a gentle with a wreath and a long bridal veil and they were toasting each other in white coffee cups that was the summer i hurt my back and the lady bear would appear with a pink apron and a cup on a tray and would bring me coffee or tea or whatever well i guess that's paw no maw im still really working hard besides paw and mrs paw there is a baby bear.

*he was now in his final form, a large white bear with a big fat tummy.

c 1997 by Hannah Weiner

Charles Bernstein saw the original performance of this. Perhaps he will recount some of his impression of it.

Douglas Messerli

↑ Index

202. aerialedge
remembered sequel
Sun 14 Sep 1997

This is a review written a few years ago which I never published thinking to say more. Hannah thought it was done. Looking at it now, she was right.

HANNAH Hi

on _silent teachers / remembered sequel_, Hannah Weiner, Tender Buttons, $7.95.

particles marm, have we discussed particles

The thing about being clairvoyant is the multiplicity can't be divided. Time causes the trouble of keeping up. Seeing so much simultaneously that the depend & the enact gather the motion into each each-- it can get kinda spikey

i free i see super working silent

Location leads to narrative.
Narrative leads to namings (i.e. motions (i emotions (in others (i, i, i, i))).

This is WRITING
(_also drumming_) -- a bunk as in bed that implicates all friends. Hannah has
it.
Technical talk:
Narrative of where is it.
No Nylon.
Nobody won't not publish this in this since-- they all see words w/out since. That's a key

(canons in cities) which being brightly (like a phone call from fire) would cause one to speak 3-D SO all I mean is read this book out loud period period dot & period

--Rod Smith

↑ Index

203. Celia M White
Re: writing ex.
Sun 14 Sep 1997

I do teach writing, to 4th graders and mental health clients and high school students and working adults. Excersizes help people relax, especially when they don't already have a writing practice. the most talented students I have often saythey never write on their own, because they don't know how to get themselves started. When they have a list of open-ended options, they often do start, at least a little. My point as a teacher is entirely to get people writing, anything; once they have this habit, the journey takes them. I use Natalie GOldberg, John Gardener's The Art of Fiction, the new Practice of Poetry edited by Twitchell and Behn, stuff I make up, stuff kids suggest. (One popular one: "I'm hungry for....") Whatever helps, helps.

Celia White [redacted] SILS Box 35 "One cuts oneself far more often with a dull knife than with a sharp one."

↑ Index

204. Maria Damon
Re: email addresses
Sun 14 Sep 1997

---

any one go t an e address for mark wallace? pls back-c --md

↑ Index

205. Hank Lazer
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Sun 14 Sep 1997

My condolences to Charles Bernstein & others who were close to Hannah Weiner. Over the past ten or twelve years, I taught Hannah's writing in my contemporary poetry classes, and I corresponded a bit with her about her writing and about teaching her work. Initially, her writing would evoke great skepticism (particularly among the graduate students in creative writing). Of course, we found various analogous writings in our immediate surroundings--mystic script writing of a number of folk artists, for example (JB Murry, the Reverend Perkins, Howard Finster, Fred Webster, and so on). Others have commented on the fusion of the personal and the experimental in Hannah's writing; I was also struck by the politics of it, especially with regard to Native American activism. Once in my life, I was invited to read in NCY, and did so at The Ear Inn. I was absolutely thrilled when Hannah introduced herself to me. When I was teaching her work, at some point the intensity and vulnerability of her word-vision experience hit me, and continues to hit me.... In many ways, she has helped me to see words in ways I had not known before.

Hank Lazer

↑ Index

206. Peter Ganick
Hannah Weiner publications-----
Sun 14 Sep 1997

one of hannah weiner's last publications was her issue of A.BACUS #107, which consists of pages 69-87 of a new text of hers' entitled SONORA.
the usual price for A.BACUS is $4, postpaid.

for the next month or so, send $3, cash, and i will snailmail a copy on the new 25% cotton, acid-free paper to be used for future A.BACUS issues.

a few issues of her 1981 chapbook, nijole's house, are available at $10 each.

send $3 to:
Peter Ganick
Potes & Poets Press Inc
181 Edgemont Avenue
Elmwood CT 06110-1005

↑ Index

207. Douglas
Bernadette Mayer
Sun 14 Sep 1997

What with all the very sad news of Hannah Weiner's death, I thought it might also be good to have some positive news.

In todays NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, Bernadette
Mayer has a poem on the end sheet, titled
"A Very Short Anthology of New Verse." Her poem, "Eleventh Cup," (published originally in TORQUE) was reprinted by the TIMES from my anthology,
THE GERTRUDE STEIN AWARDS INNOVATIVE AMERICAN POETRY
1994-1995. I'm currently working on the 1995-1996 edition.

Douglas Messerli
Sun & Moon Press

↑ Index

208. Judy Roitman

Re: Writing exercises

Sun 14 Sep 1997

> *James Finnegan Asked, "What great poems have been produced from writing exercises?" I don't know about great, but one of my favorite poems, Keats's On the Grasshopper and Cricket, was the result of an exercise. I'm hazy on the details, but some kind of sonnet-writing contest was suggested at a gathering of poets, and Keats batted out the preceding in competition with Leigh Hunt (I think). Shelley might have participated, too, I'm not sure.*
>
> There's also the example of the obviously exercise poems that begin Shakespeare's sonnet sequence.
>
> In any event, I'm definitely with Charles Alexander about the value of procedure poems/exercise poems/what-if-I-do-this poems. Even if nothing comes from working on such poems in a workshop, the experience of what-iffing has to be valuable.
>
> --Bob G

In fourth grade we were supposed to write five sentences a week, each one containing one spelling word, so that we would have used 25% of the words given each week. Bored (and I'm sure quite obnoxious about it) I would instead write a twenty-line rhymed and metered poem with a spelling word in every line. The poems were absolutely awful, even for a fourth grader, but the experience of struggling with the language under those tight constraints absolutely invaluable.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]

| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
---
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

209. Mark Baker

Re: Unprosing Exercise

Sun 14 Sep 1997

Bob Grumman wrote:

> A technique to unprose an image is one whose purpose is to lift the image out of its prosaism, to invest it with a more-than-common sensual richness.

You have an image in front of you now. It's not daffodils, nor is it wheelbarrows. It does have commonness, and its sensual richness is masked by your efforts to construe the semantics of these signs you are now reading.

I asked my students on Friday to write an exercise, of the kind Finnegan would likely detest. Take the poem everyone knows;
rewrite it on a medium your writing now depends upon.

My effort follows below.
I'll submit your better efforts to my students.

Unprose this image before you.

_____

The Pixelled Screen

so much opens up on windows ninety five showing bright icons clicked at by a mouse.

Mark Baker

↑ Index

210. Steve Evans

ILS 7: Ellingham/Killian on Spicer

Sun 14 Sep 1997

Lewis Ellingham and Kevin Killian's riveting account of "Five Years in the Life of Jack Spicer" was published as the seventh installment of the Impercipient Lecture Series earlier this month. A preview of the biography forthcoming next year from Wesleyan, this chapter documents with lush and knowing detail the years 1950-1955. Picking up with his brief stint in Minneapolis, and depositing him in Boston isolation, this period also includes a stretch in the more familiar environs of the Bay area, where Spicer "was living a full, almost schizophrenic life--teaching at C[alifornia] S[chool] of F[ine] A[rt], sitting the Gallery, drinking at The Place, participating in the 'Old Ladies' Bridge Club' in Berkeley on Fridays, keeping in touch with his mother in Los Angeles, attending Mattachine meetings (now in San Francisco), and trying to continue his long-term project, the _Imaginary Elegies_" (26).

That's the good news. The bad news is that only two or three copies remain from the initial run of 150, so chances are you'll have to borrow (or xerox) one from a friend. However, if you'd like to be kept in mind in the event of a small reprint, let us know.

Thanks to the generosity of Loss Glazier and Diane Ward, you can now keep up with the ILS on the EPC by visiting http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/presses/impercipient_lecture.html. And look soon for ILS 4 (the Perelman panel) on John Tranter's stylish web mag _Jacket_ at http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/

Subcriptions to the ILS are US$25 for ten issues (no additional charge for overseas subcribers); US$40 for institutions. Single copies go for US$5 when available. Please make checks out to one of the editors, NOT the magazine. Back-issue currently available:

1.5 'Imperturbable Things': On Still-Life Poetics by Beth Anderson (last 2 copies) 1.4 Responses to Bob Perelman's _The Marginalization of Poetry_ by Silliman, Lauterbach, Spahr, and Evans; with counter-response by Perelman 1.1 The Dynamics of Literary Change by Steve Evans (rpt)

Back issues currently out of print are:

1.6 No Saints in Three Acts: On Steven Jonas by Aldon L. Nielsen
1.3 The Ground Is the Only Figure by Rosmarie Waldrop
1.2 Radical Dogberry and Society Sketches: Two Essays by Chris Stroffolino

Steve Evans & Jennifer Moxley
61 E. Manning Street
Providence RI 02906-4008

r i a t n m u a t s u o
o o s

↑ Index

211. Judy Roitman
Re: writing ex.
Sun 14 Sep 1997

> I do teach writing, to 4th graders and mental health clients and high school students and working adults. Excersizes help people relax, especially when they don't already have a writing practice. the most talented students I have often saythey never write on their own, because they don't know how to get themselves started. When they have a list of open-ended options, they often do start, at least a little. My point as a teacher is entirely to get people writing, anything; once they have this habit, the journey takes them. I use Natalie GOldberg, John Gardener's The Art of Fiction, the new Practice of Poetry edited by Twitchell and Behn, stuff I make up, stuff kids suggest. (One popular one: "I'm hungry for....")
> Whatever helps, helps.
>
> Celia White [redacted] SILS Box 35
> "One cuts oneself far more often with a dull knife than with a sharp one."

Seems to be two kinds of exercises in this thread: nuts-and-bolts focus on language, and the above. They are so different from each other I can't even think of them in the same breath.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
----
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

212. charles alexander
Re: Hannah Wiener's Last Book
Sun 14 Sep 1997

> If any of you are interested in _We Speak Silent_ please let me know.
>
> James Sherry

Yes, please James.

Thank you.

Charles Alexander
Chax Press
101 W. Sixth St. no. 6
Tucson, AZ 85701-1000

charles alexander
poet and book artist
[redacted]

↑ Index

213. red slider
Question about Hannah Weiner
Sun 14 Sep 1997

Somewhere among the many moving descriptions of Hannah Weiner I recall a brief suggestion that she was somewhat self-protective about 'information exposure'. I wonder if anyone can tell me what her own reading habits were like - spare, selective, avaricious, serendipitous...? What were some of her favorites? post or bkchn - red.

↑ Index

214. red slider
Re: Unprosing Exercise
Sun 14 Sep 1997

From: red slider[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, September 14, 1997 2:37 PM
To: '[redacted]'
Subject: RE: Unprosing Exercise

From: Mark Baker[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Sunday, September 14, 1997 12:33 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Unprosing Exercise

Bob Grumman wrote:

> A technique to unprose an image is one whose purpose is to lift the image out of its prosaism, to invest it with a more-than-common sensual richness.

You have an image in front of you now. It's not daffodils, nor is it wheelbarrows. It does have commonness, and its sensual richness is masked by your efforts to construe the semantics of these signs you are now reading.

I asked my students on Friday to write an exercise, of the kind Finnegan would likely detest. Take the poem everyone knows;
rewrite it on a medium your writing now depends upon.

My effort follows below.
I'll submit your better efforts to my students.

Unprose this image before you.

The Pixelled Screen

so much opens
up on windows ninety five

showing bright icons

clicked at by a mouse.

Mark Baker

↑ Index

215. Thomas Bell
Re: A Song of Despair
Sun 14 Sep 1997

Good idea. I am currently having problems with the 'paucity' of words in Americenglish having to do with certain feelings and relationships: "parenting", in particular, at the moment. suggestions welcome. tom bell

At 10:54 AM 9/14/97 +0700, Rebecca Weldon wrote:
>I characterize this century as the one of "form will set you free". Form, >no form, different form, form exercises, form-is-content, content-is-form, >form as language, language as form, form-of-thought, no-thought-form, a sea >of forms eroding continents of form bequeathed.
>
>The rats eat my notebooks of form and I am glad they are nourished. There >was a time when all I had was form and Neruda and myself. I exercised an >exploration of the place Neruda showed me. Twenty exercises and a poem, >Twenty love poems and La Cancion Desesperada.

>
>Play is creative, liberating and prepares us for what we live when play is >done.
>
>

↑ Index

216. henry gould
Re: writing exercises
Sun 14 Sep 1997

Did somebody say deliberation & inspiration were mutually exclusive? I said poetry & writing are often mutually exclusive. Finnegan's skepticism won't ever be too popular, not among a crowd whose bread & butter is turning poetry into various classroom techniques. How many people have written to the list now to tell us how exciting it is to experiment, how productive? Fine. Hey, poetry is the thing. Anybody against poetry here?

We agree on a lot of things. Finnegan's position, which I am defending, is a reminder that poetry is not only universal, everywhere, democratic, untapped, available, un-elitist, beautiful, unplanned, etc. - it is also, as the greatest poets will tell you - elusive, unexplainable, profound, high, great, deep, overwhelming, shattering, work of a lifetime, work of genius, unique, rare, precious, inimitable. GET IT???? A GIFT.

Pleasure in writing, happiness in writing are one thing. Poetry, on the other hand, ... well, it's like Life, or Love. Don't bowdlerize & industrialize it. Don't idolatrize it. Respect it for what it is - something unknown.

the idol of America is PRODUCTION. But poetry, among all the other things mentioned, is also the benchmark. The UNATTAINABLE. Listen...

- Henry Gould

↑ Index

217. James Sherry
Hannah Wiener's Last Book
Sun 14 Sep 1997

Roof Books published Hannah's last book: _We Speak Silent_ in 1996. Hannah had been ill off and on for a few years, but no one expected her death. She came to a reading of mine as recently as May 1997 and was vigorous if distracted. She was a wonder and a trial to me for 20 years. I will miss her very much.

If any of you are interested in _We Speak Silent_ please let me know.

James Sherry

↑ Index

218. henry gould
Re: writing exercises
Sun 14 Sep 1997

In the Italian film "The Postman", hashed over here several months ago, one (Neruda) lives for poetry, another (the postman) literally dies for poetry. Poetry is Olson's father. Poetry is the overturning of the present by the future, the stumbling fox after the turtle (dove). Diana, Teresa, pure poetry of the next millenium, floating into the end of the LAST century. Poetry more than anything is a black stone on a white stone. Communism - the poetry of injustice. Christianity - the poetry of Judaism. Judaism - the poetry of justice. Justice - the poetry of reality. Reality - the poetry of communism. Soviet ideology - technique.

- a Sunday meditation by Eric Blarnes, class traitor, Cambridge, U.K.

↑ Index

219. James Sherry
Hannah Weiner's Last Book
Sun 14 Sep 1997

I published Hannah Weiner's last book in 1996. If anyone is interested in it, please contact me here.

Hannah was a wonder and a trial. I will miss her, all of it. Although she had been ill on and off for years, I don't think anyone expected her death. She attended a reading of mine as recently as May of this year. She was vigorous if distracted and tore up paper while I read. James Sherry

↑ Index

220. aerialedge
NEW Davidson, Debord, Fraser, Ginsberg, Levy &&& @ Bridge Street
Mon 15 Sep 1997

---

lots new. thanks again, poetics, for yr support. orderinfg info. poetics discount at end of list.

1. _Friendship_, Maurice Blanchot, Stanford, $17.95. 29 essays on art, politics, literature covering such as Klossowski, Duras, Leiris, Gorz, Kafka, Paulham, Camus, Jabes, Levinas, Buber, Malraux, Benjamin, & Bataille.

2. _Revolution of the Mind: The Life of Andre Breton_, Da Capo, $20.95. "I am Surrealism!"

3. _Rebecca Letters_, Laynie Browne, Kelsey St., $10. "Laynie Browne's alchemically applied linguistics unfold the space between poem and prose, revealing a crepuscular zone "where it's warm enough to stop on the street." --Lee Ann Brown. ". . . or intention dwelling there along a shore. (parentheses are crescents.)"

4. _Conjunctions 28: Secular Psalms_, ed Bradford Morrow, Bard College, $12. Maureen Howard, Cortazar, Osman, D Foster Wallace, Joanna Scott, Berssenbrugge, Mike McCormack, Gevirtz, Sorrentino, Willis, Tarn, Hollo, Can Xue, Eugenides, Stephen Dixon, Guest, Oates, Mac Low, Paul West, Toby Olson, Kelly, Caponegro + Music Theater portfolio edited by Thalia Field including Harry Partch, Robert Ashley, Meredith Monk &&&.

5. _Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word_, Michael Davidson, U. Cal., $35 hc. Michael Davidson argues that the modernist ideology of the work of art as autonomous object has dominated our idea of literary materiality and hindered our ability to to read poetry as a socially critical medium. "The relation of material word to material world in all its ideological complexties is Davidson's subject. The book thus has a double value: it provides us with a host of genuinely new readings-- of Gertrude Stein and Louis Zukofsky, George Oppen and Susan Howe, Muriel Rukeyser and Laurie Anderson-- but it also provides us with theoretical and cultural tools whereby recent verbal experiments-- whether graphemic, morphemic, or genetic-- may be understood. A terrific accomplishment!" --Marjorie Perloff.

6. _Guy Debord -- Revolutionary: A Critical Biography_, Len Bracken, Feral House, $14.95. A book much better than most. "Who has made, in so few images, a more beautiful poem of solitude?" --G.D.

7. _Politics of Friendship_, Jacques Derrida, Verso, $20. The 'political turn' many noted in Derrida's _Spectres of Marx_ continues here in an exploration of the political history of Aristotle's exclamation 'O my friends, there is no friend.'

8. _il cuore : the heart : selected poems 1970--1995_, Kathleen Fraser, Wesleyan, $16.95. 200 page selection plus new & uncollected work w/ introduction by Peter Quartermain. "dependent on scale, your under- / estimation of how it could / eat at you, that movement / (left behind itself)"

9. _Luminous Dreams_, Allen Ginsberg, Zasterle, $10. A little book of dreams including the remarkable "History of the Jewish Socialist Party in America."

10. _Some of the Dharma_, Jack Kerouac, Viking, $32.50. Beautifully typeset large format hardcover of Kerouac's buddhist journals/poems/proses. The typesetting puts one in mind of The Maximus Poems or the recent U Cal Mallarme-- ok, not quite that good-- but shockingly good for a major trade publication. & Kerouac, y'know, he's a pretty good writer.

11. _Continuous Discontinuous_, Andrew Levy, Potes & Poets, $13.50. "The four forceful, lovely works collected here, though very different from each other, all represent profound and yet quickly changing encounters with sense and sensation. All are swiftly impressionistic and rigorously thoughtful." --Lyn Hejinian. "it seems crazy in an intoxicating way"

12. _Becoming Modern: The Life of Mina Loy_, Carolyn Burke, U Cal., $18.95. New in pb.

13. _Mass Ave._, third issue, ed. Dan Bouchard, $5. Michael Angelo Tata, Andrew Levy, Sherry Brennan, Kyle Conner, Jennifer Moxley, Fred Muratori, Kary Wayson, Robert Fitterman, Ethel Rackin, Kim Bernstein, & Juliana Spahr.

14. _School of Fish_, Eileen Myles, Black Sparrow, $14. "What happens when you/ contain the flame?"

15. _The Collected Poems of Charles Olson_, ed. George Butterick, U Cal, $38. New in pb.

16. _Light Street_, Nick Piombino, Zasterle, $7. "The rules are straightforward."

17. _Rhizome 1_, ed. Evan Calbi and Standard Schaefer, $10. Lombardelli, Baraka, Slocum, Wellman, Browne, Gregg, Strang, Selby, Barone, DiPalma, Vangelisti, D. Phillips, M. Gizzi, Bernstein, Messerli, Swensen, Ronk, Ratcliffe, Mittenthal, G. Bennett, Smith Nash, Albon, Crosson, Alferi, Scalapino, Spahr, J. Bennett, Bellen, + Reviews.

18. _Letters_, Lisa Samuels, Meow, $5. ". . . the thread of spinning it only changed. . ."
I

19. _Unbound: A Book of AIDS_, Aaron Shurin, Sun & Moon, $19.95. "Listen uncerimoniously to some of the music that has _meant_ me-- "

20. _Open Sky_, Paul Virilio, Verso, $16. 'One day the day will come when the day will not come.'

& a few of poetics kinda bestsellas currently in stock:

The L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E Book ed. Bruce Andrews & Charles Bernstein, Southern Illonois, $18.95.
The Mooring of Starting Out: The First Five Books of Poetry, John Ashbery, Ecco, $25.

On the Level Everyday: Selected Takes on Poetry and the Art of Living, Ted Berrigan, Talisman, $12.95.
The Psychic Life of Power, Judith Butler, Stanford, $15.95.
The Politics of Truth, Michel Foucault, Autonomedia, $8.
Hambone 13, ed Nathaniel Mackey, $10.
Some Other Kind of Mission, Lisa Jarnot, $11.
Forms of Expansion: Recent Long Poems by Women, Lynne Keller, U. Chicago, $16.95.
The Lost Lunar Baedeker, Mina Loy, FSG, $13.
Imagination Verses, Jennifer Moxley, $8.95.
Cells of Release, Fiona Templeton, Roof, $13.95.
Another Language: Selected Poems, Rosmarie Waldrop, Talisman, $10.50.
Frame (1971-1991), Barrett Watten, $13.95.

Poetics folks receive free shipping on orders of more than $20. Free shipping + 10% discount on orders of more than $30. There are two ways to order. 1. E-mail your order to [redacted] with your address & we will bill you with the books. or 2. via credit card-- you may call us at [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] w/ yr add, order, & card # & we will send a receipt with the books. We must charge some shipping for orders out of the US.

Bridge Street Books, 2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Wahsington, DC 20007.

↑ Index

221. rsillima
Thank you, Douglas
Mon 15 Sep 1997

For that wonderful story of Hannah's

Ron

↑ Index

222. Layne Russell
POETICS: reading
Mon 15 Sep 1997

This is a copy of the notice sent out locally...posted here more for the simple sharing of it.... :)

---

* * * * * * * * * Reading * * * * * * * * *

This Thursday, September 18, 7:30 p.m.
Copperfield's Cafe, 140 Kentucky Street Petaluma

LUKE BREIT
from Sacramento, author of four poetry books

and

LAYNE RUSSELL
(yours truly) [book "Blood and Other Poems" on the way!]

****
about Luke:

"These are very moving -- that is to say, perfect -- poems." -- George Oppen, poet, Pulitzer Prize winner

"When have I ever failed to take pleasure in Luke Breit's poetry? He is the most reliable poet I know when it comes to making me feel good. [....] Luke is a rain-maker. Put him in a desert, get him to recite, and clouds will gather. If I could be a poet, I wouldn't mind at all being as good as Luke Breit." -- Norman Mailer, Pulitzer Prize winner

You can visit Luke's web site at http://208.131.18.6:80/lukesac/

****

http://www.sonic.net/layne
"A Quiet Place"
http://www.sonic.net/layne/calendar.html
"Poets Leave Their Prints" -- Sonoma County Poetry Calendar

↑ Index

223. Maria Damon
Re: NEW Davidson, Debord, Fraser, Ginsberg, Levy &&& @ Bridge Street
Mon 15 Sep 1997

At 1:38 AM -0400 9/15/97, [redacted] wrote:
...
>5. _Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word_, Michael >Davidson, U. Cal., $35 hc. Michael Davidson argues that the modernist >ideology of the work of art as autonomous object has dominated our idea of >literary materiality and hindered our ability to to read poetry as a socially >critical medium.

well, yeah! this is hardly a novel argument, tho it is refreshing to see it here on poetix and to see the range of writers (usually bracketed off as "difficult" i.e. not "socially engaged" or "relevant") Michael D takes on. md

↑ Index

224. Douglas
Re: Thank you, Douglas
Mon 15 Sep 1997

Ron,

Thank you for the response, and for your posting on Hannah.

Douglas

[redacted] wrote:
>
> For that wonderful story of Hannah's
>
> Ron

↑ Index

225. Burt Kimmelman
tandy sturgeon
Mon 15 Sep 1997

---

anyone know the whereabout (addresses etc.) of tandy sturgeon? i need to get in touch with her asap.

thanks,

burt kimmelman
[redacted]

↑ Index

226. Hoa Nguyen
Writing experiments
Mon 15 Sep 1997

Warning:2 writing experitments to follow!

Thanks to all that posted suggestions for writing experiments-- as promised I will share a couple of mine-- and respond to the thread of "to what greatness" (my paraphrase) so writing excercise contribute.

I teach a workshop at a cultural center (alas, no big dough here so there goes the theory about creative writing = money for something you sell)-- I do hope that I allow in my class is some time and space to practice writing. I work another job to support myself as a writer-- often my writing class is a useful space for me to create poems, sometimes it is the only place I can actually write. Great ones? I sometimes find my writing great, sometimes its stays where it should, hidden, and sometimes it yields a line or thought or memory which becomes something else later (GREAT!).

This I wrote from an in-class exercise-- pretty ordinary exercise really-- we made collages from magazines with images and text-- then we traded them and wrote using them as a kind of trigger:

Stupid, Meatloaf

Stare at a toy plane 10:10 PM and the Wizard behind the screen is a rented man my heart (organ) burns, it does like the 9 of spades found in an empty parking lot apart
-- when did one find the stark differences of crotches? -- the rented man of my heart & if I hate my job or hurt hand the wizard will get me a new heart, Tin Man, maybe dirt cheap maybe a toy plane to stare at in high beams in the rain Nothing up my sleeve but the 9 of spades and my heart (organ) burns finding the stark difference in the Tin Man and the dirt cheap boom boom sound of 10:10 before someone comes home

I like this poem-- and it goes with what Finnegan had said about the need to read -- well that is obvious-- and of course the need for writing practice. This ended up as a sonnet -- a form I have used quite a bit-- and a form that I have read in Ted Berrigan and Bernadette Meyers' works.

Ok here is another more complicated approach adapted from Harryette Mullen from OULIPO:

Take a word, preferably (for ease) with five or less letters, and not too many repeating letters, for example, star. Then generate a lexicon of words that are somewhat and not at all associative to the word, _without_ using the letters that make up that word. (the letters s, t, a, or r in our example so: dim, model, cool, flip, dumb.. and so on) You should collect about 15 words. Now throw away the "letter" constraint and write using the words in the list.

A twist I used in this class was to compose the work as a "letter", as in-- Dear Star:..etc. Here are two I wrote like these. (I wrote a few like these!)

Dear Death

A simple quibble — what is it that you prize? Pride?
Your winsome vibe aside — we sniff hard at the ruse of the mondo-young. Whip the moon to a nub and we would have you new. Human remains ruined and I am, wishing for a rune-tattoo to follow.

Dear Talk

Why mop nonsense into a bomb bigger than speech? You are all, Talk, a dizzy no-no, a misunderstood gift like gin. Why do you croon to me like sunshine, and why does red sift sky like an engine of words, as an engine for fighting wonder. I will be gossip for you to surpass.

***

Special thanks to Lisa Jarnot for generously sharing teaching information...

sincerely,

Hoa

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

227. hnry gould
Re: Writing experiments
Mon 15 Sep 1997

thanks Hoa, for interesting poems & message - obviously I am on losing side of this argument, Finnegan has waked out of it, he knows better, I'll hang myself by my own e-thread now, play devil's avocado -

BUT say this I still do :

IF I WAS A CREATIVE WRITING TEACHER-MOGUL-MILLIONAIRE

o.k. everybody here are the xeroxes of Paradise lost the original please pass around these brown macintoshes & peel until you underestimate your own fur go through Scissors Gate

& paste some new words until you make babble sing on top of a towering scribble hey some new poetry roadside drive-in starts to collide

& then it begins to work!
Everybody can learn to cook even this jerk lost his writer's block & if the glue sticks try these licks again & again

- Henry Gould

↑ Index

228. Hoa Nguyen
Re: Writing experiments
Mon 15 Sep 1997

---

hnry gould <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: Writing experiments
>To: [redacted]
>In-Reply-To: Message of Mon, 15 Sep 1997 11:32:36 PDT from >thanks Hoa, for interesting poems & message - obviously I am on losing >side of this argument, Finnegan has waked out of it, he knows better, >I'll hang myself by my own e-thread now, play devil's avocado -

>
....I honestly don't see any sides (or argument) to this. You obviously have a point to make about quaility, the "gift" of poetry, and writing experiments, but I am not sure what that is. It seems to me that it isn't so much experiments with writing in themselves that may be taken to issue, but their over reliance and/or eclipsing of the practice of reading and listening. But I think that this has been said more eloquently by others on this list, so I will stop here.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

229. charles alexander
Re: Writing experiments
Mon 15 Sep 1997

> I say more sweat; I want to see your struggle. I don't want to see flights of fancy--I want to see the bee's wax melting down your arms, Icarus, as you test the Sun.

James,

This sure sounds like a flight of fancy to me. And doesn't "fancy" in this sense mean the imagination, anyway? Yes, I do want to see that. And I think we see it as much in the choices, structural, method, and otherwise, as we see it in diction, form, field of poem, etc.

Seems there is some idea here that a poem wrought by a method or procedure can't be as sincere or close to the bone or _____ (anything) as one which is not wrought by such method or procedure. I don't agree with that at all. Also seems like there's an idea that there is some stance which is entirely naked, sweaty, struggling, and devoid of any method or procedure -- no, I don't agree with that, either.

charles

charles alexander
poet and book artist
[redacted]

↑ Index

230. Peter Ganick
Re: Writing experiments
Mon 15 Sep 1997

---

i know this topic has been taken around the block several times, but what about the 'poems/directions' in yoko ono's 'clouds'?---these are experiments, some in writing---they are writing experiments in that she 'wrote' them and a reader/experimenter can read or fulfill them---what sort of fulfillment did ono intend in these pages?---

↑ Index

231. Peter Ganick yoko ono
Mon 15 Sep 1997

---

sorry, the name of the book is not 'clouds', rather, 'grapefruit'---- a chunky, yellow-covered, small, square-shaped book--- wonder of that has to do with the title?---

↑ Index

232. Layne Russell
Re: JackLeg #3
Mon 15 Sep 1997

JackLeg is a community based literary magazine, primarily featuring writers from Chicago and Tucson (now that I've moved to San Francisco, we'll start adding Bay Area writers to the mix for issue #4).

Hugh,

this is great news! welcome to the SF area! how often does Jackleg come out?

Layne (in north bay area)

↑ Index

233. James Finnegan
Re: Writing experiments
Mon 15 Sep 1997

Henry,

Yes, I've hung back. Let others have their say: Writing exercises are freeing, occasionally yeild brilliancies.

I think, mostly, it's a matter of temperament. I cringe at the idea of writing a poem that I have no vested interest in writing, no will to write on mine own accord.

I say more sweat; I want to see your struggle. I don't want to see flights of fancy--I want to see the bee's wax melting down your arms, Icarus, as you test the Sun.

Finnegan

↑ Index

234. red slider
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 16 Sep 1997

---

we're looking for a Turing test for poemspeak? Would certainly have to detect the presence of endorphins which could easily be faked by exercises making 60% of your grade depend on the soul tion set. Sweat is sweart?

red

> I say more sweat; I want to see your struggle. I don't want to see flights of fancy--I want to see the bee's wax melting down your arms, Icarus, as you test the Sun.

James,

This sure sounds like a flight of fancy to me. And doesn't "fancy" in this sense mean the imagination, anyway? Yes, I do want to see that. And I think we see it as much in the choices, structural, method, and otherwise, as we see it in diction, form, field of poem, etc.

Seems there is some idea here that a poem wrought by a method or procedure can't be as sincere or close to the bone or _____ (anything) as one which is not wrought by such method or procedure. I don't agree with that at all. Also seems like there's an idea that there is some stance which is entirely naked, sweaty, struggling, and devoid of any method or procedure -- no, I don't agree with that, either.

charles

charles alexander
poet and book artist
[redacted]

↑ Index

235. Hugh Steinberg
JackLeg #3
Tue 16 Sep 1997

Just wanted to make a plug for the magazine I co-edit, JackLeg.

ISSUE #3, FALL 1997

Featured writers include:

Ray Gonzalez	Alison Deming	James McManus
Luis Rodriguez	Mark Turcotte	Denise Duhamel

Calvin Forbes Maureen Seaton Reginald Gibbons
Barry Silesky Mary Hawley Jon Anderson
Gale Walden Daniel Tobin Simone Muench
Becky Byrkit Charles Alexander Gregg Wagner
Lisa Cooper Bill Marsh and Thomas Chandler

Please join us for Issue #3's DEBUT READING at:

The Guild Complex at the Chopin Theater 1543 W. Division Street, (corner of Ashland, Milwaukee, and Division) in CHICAGO

OCTOBER 21, 1997 AT 7:30 P.M.

JackLeg is a community based literary magazine, primarily featuring writers from Chicago and Tucson (now that I've moved to San Francisco, we'll start adding Bay Area writers to the mix for issue #4). As with our previous two issues, JackLeg is held together with nuts and bolts, so that when one is through reading it one can do minor home repairs or put somebody's eye out (you can even add your own poems, or remove the ones you don't like, and hardly anyone will know).

A Jackleg is someone who talks too much about something she or he knows nothing about.

To order a copy, please e:mail Jennifer Harris at [redacted]

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

236. David Bromige
reading in seattle
Tue 16 Sep 1997

Any Listopolitans in the Seattle area? I'll be reading for SubText at the Speakeasy Thursday evening, September 18, and giving workshops Fri eve and Sat p.m. On Thursday, I'll be reading with Robin Blaser.

The Speakeasy is at 2304 2nd Avenue in the Belltown district, just north of downtown.

My contact person there is R. Bryant Mason, who may be reached at [redacted] , or at [redacted].

David

↑ Index

237. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Tue 16 Sep 1997

REGARDING LAWRENCE UPTON'S EMAIL ADDRESS

Please note that I have changed my email address. I did notify as many people as possible, and I am sorry to repeat it but it seems that not everyone got it. I abandoned Compuserve because of my dissatisfaction with their service but they refuse to accept my cancellation saying they dont understand what I am saying, presumably to demand more money. Email has been accepted by the system but I am not reading it. This is my new email.

↑ Index

238. Miles Champion
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

While I'm reluctant to prolong this discussion, and given that David Bromige has succinctly outlined the value of writing exercises in his posting a couple of days ago, there are still a couple of things I'd like to add. First, to gesture broadly toward the long and illustrious history of writing which owes its existence to procedure(s) and/or methods of constraint (Homer was no stranger to the lipogram, after all), and, second, to mention the works of one writer who, this century at least, demonstrates beyond doubt the validity of such methods: Georges Perec. Any discussion of Perec has to involve a wider consideration of the benefits (the "freeing-up") of writing exercises, for Perec felt that his own story, the story he might one day tell given his great ambition to be a writer, had been taken brutally from him by the events of WWII, his childhood spent in exile and the loss of his family to the Nazis. Yes, his first works were written with no specific or systematic artifice, but it was surely the strange texture of the first novel, _Things_, with its collaged borrowings from Flaubert, that persuaded Raymond Queneau to put Perec forward for membership of the OuLiPo, and it would be difficult indeed to dismiss the works Perec then went on to write--using greater and more elaborate formal systems--as mere "exercises". It is interesting, though, that for many years the OuLiPo itself was wary of the (potential) importance of its work, and met for some years in secret, publishing little. It was Queneau's death in the late seventies which prompted Perec to start work on _Life A User's Manual_, in which a network of quotations from his beloved authors (Roussel, Kafka, Melville, Proust, Sterne, Leiris...) sits within a formal structure of highly complex design (the expanded, 10x10 chessboard, the Knight's Tour, the Graeco-Latin bisquare of order 10, &&)--extraordinary, really, that the book should stilll be such a page-turner! And the lipogrammatic novel _La Disparition_ also allows those of us with not exactly fluent French to marvel at the superb translation (_A Void_) by Gilbert Adair. And what an idea, a whodunnit written entirely without the letter e, in which the murderer turns out to be the errant vowel! The wider point here is, of course, that these and other works cannot be separated from the systems which helped to generate them--the "plot" of _La Disparition_, for example, was to an extent shaped by the reduced lexicon (e being by far the most common letter in the language) that Perec had available. Perec inscribed his biography into these processual works in complex and fascinating ways, and the results were not only deeply moving but sometimes shocking (_W or The Memory of Childhood_).

There has already been discussion on this list of the flexibility of self-imposed rules--that one can depart or diverge from them once they have provided something interesting, and that such departures do not necessarily undermine the overall system (for Perec this would be Epicurus's "clinamen", the anti-constraint that operates within the structure [or Paul Klee's "genius is the error in the system"]), and this flexibility is a nice counterpoint to the practice of setting up a system and following it pedantically to its conclusion (Happy Birthday, Jackson!).

As Charles Bernstein pointed out some time ago now in "Thought's Measure", the writer who sits, pen in hand, alone with her thoughts, invariably produces writing which is far from unique. To admit begrudgingly to the use of "exercises" in the classroom but to remain scornful of their uses elsewhere is to demonstrate remarkably little understanding of how many writers actually construct their work.

--Miles

↑ Index

239. henry
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 16 Sep 1997

I agree with you. I also think the interesting writing comes out of either long gestation - or intense experience. It seems patronizing to me to reduce it to a game. Or only a game, though it's that too I guess. Encourage people to draw on their experience, their reading, & their social consciousness - give them "themes" rather than scissors & paste (or along with the scissors & paste...) - Henry

↑ Index

240. henry
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

On Tue, 16 Sep 1997 09:58:34 +0000 Miles Champion said:
>
>As Charles Bernstein pointed out some time ago now in "Thought's Measure", >the writer who sits, pen in hand, alone with her thoughts, invariably >produces writing which is far from unique. To admit begrudgingly to the use >of "exercises" in the classroom but to remain scornful of their uses >elsewhere is to demonstrate remarkably little understanding of how many >writers
>actually construct their work.

O.k. Miles the Champion, you've brought in Perec & Borges & all that & clearly checkmated the counter-argument. Yes, "exercises" can bring a breath of fresh air & liberation & play into the writing process as well as point in the direction of serious craft. On the other hand, to be "scornful" of the writer who sits pen in hand etc. is just as reductive. I still say technique for its own sake has become a contemporary shibboleth, especially in the "experimental" community; & IF I WERE THE IDEAL WRITING TEACHER I would want to listen carefully to the students & find out what they'd read, would put on some tapes of poets new & traditional (Beowulf is still available in live performance), would encourage an exploration of history & social consciousness in writing, before introducing facile techniques. Because you never know, there might actually be a few writers in your class. - Henry Gould "Ars est celare artem" [Art is to hide art]

↑ Index

241. Maria Damon
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

At 9:58 AM +0000 9/16/97, Miles Champion wrote:
>While I'm reluctant to prolong this discussion, and given that David Bromige >has succinctly outlined the value of writing exercises in his posting a >couple of days ago, there are still a couple of things I'd like to add.
>First, to gesture broadly toward the long and illustrious history of writing >which owes its existence to procedure(s) and/or methods of constraint (Homer >was no stranger to the lipogram, after all), and, second, to mention the >works of one writer who, this century at least, demonstrates beyond doubt >the validity of such methods: Georges Perec. Any discussion of Perec has to >involve a wider consideration of the benefits (the "freeing-up") of writing >exercises, for Perec felt that his own story, the story he might one day >tell given his great ambition to be a writer, had been taken brutally from >him by the events of WWII, his childhood spent in exile and the loss of >his family to the Nazis. Yes, his first works were written with no specific >or systematic artifice, but it was surely the strange texture of the first >novel, _Things_, with its collaged borrowings from Flaubert, that persuaded >Raymond Queneau to put Perec forward for membership of the OuLiPo, and it >would be difficult indeed to dismiss the works Perec then went on to >write--using greater and more elaborate formal systems--as mere "exercises".

> It is interesting, though, that for many years the OuLiPo itself was wary >of the (potential) importance of its work, and met for some years in secret, >publishing little. It was Queneau's death in the late seventies which >prompted Perec to start work on _Life A User's Manual_, in which a network >of quotations from his beloved authors (Roussel, Kafka, Melville, Proust, >Sterne, Leiris...) sits within a formal structure of highly complex design >(the expanded, 10x10 chessboard, the Knight's Tour, the Graeco-Latin >bisquare of order 10, &&)--extraordinary, really, that the book should >stilll be such a page-turner! And the lipogrammatic novel _La Disparition_ >also allows those of us with not exactly fluent French to marvel at the >superb translation (_A Void_) by Gilbert Adair. And what an idea, a >whodunnit written entirely without the letter e, in which the murderer turns >out to be the errant vowel! The wider point here is, of course, that these >and other works cannot be separated from the systems which helped to >generate them--the "plot" of _La Disparition_, for example, was to an extent >shaped by the reduced lexicon (e being by far the most common letter in the >language) that Perec had available. Perec inscribed his biography into >these processual works in complex and fascinating ways, and the results were >not only deeply moving but sometimes shocking (_W or The Memory of >Childhood_).
>

thanks miles for this informative post; as someone attracted to both "language"-centered writing and also the exigencies of traumatic biographical "reality," i find this kind of insight invaluable.

↑ Index

242. Maria Damon
xcp conference schedule
Tue 16 Sep 1997

---

hi groovoids, here's a tentative xcp conference schedule. if yr on the schedule and see something you can't handle, now'ss the time to say so.

Draft of Schedule for Cross-Cultural Poetics Conference

THURSDAY OCTOBER 16:

12:30-12:45: Introductory Remarks

1:00-2:10, PANELS:
1. The Poetics of Trauma
Chair
Karyn Ball, Critical Studies in Discourse and Society, University of Minnesota, "The Entropics of Memory: Diaspora Poetics in Theresa Hak-Kyung Cha's Dictée
U Sam Oeur, "Sacred Vow: Poems from the Cambodian Killing Fields"
Kitty Millet, California State University-Long Beach, "Testimonio, Performance, and Survivor Narration: A Revolution in Form"

2. Resistance, Hybridity and the "Post-": the Politics of Cross-Cultural Poetics Sonita Sarker, Womens' Studies, Macalester College, Chair (to be invited)
Michael Strysick, University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, "Borders and the Between: A Poetics of Community"
Asha Sen, University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, "Feminist Subversions: A Critical Look at the Role of Taiwafs in India"
Caroline Picart, University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, "The Poiesis of Mestizaje"

3. Popular Music Csaba Toth, History Department, Carlow College, "Noise Poetics on Screen: Mediatized Performance and the Micropolitics of Sounding-off Postindustrial Space" Monika Mehta, Comparative Literature, University of Minnesota, "Songs and Sexuality in Popular Hindi Cinema" (read by Jigna Desai)

2:20-3:30, PANELS:

1. Telepoetics I
Catherine Liu, Department of French and Italian, University of Minnesota, Chair
John Mowitt, Critical Studies in Discourse and Society, University of Minnesota, "Nonwestern Electric" Peter Krapp
*unconfirmedNicholas Royle

2. Ethnopoetics: Critique, Description, Practice Kim Koch, Book House on Grand, Chair Rachel Martin, Department of History, University of Minnesota, "The Hippie Invasion: An Amicus Brief in the Case Against Mr. Gary Snyder and Others" Nicholas Yasinski, Literature Department, Rutgers Universty, "Happenings in the '90s: Popular Contexts for Poetry"

3. "The Shadows of Untouchability": Some Indian Poetics
Robin Lukes, College of St. Catherine-Minneapolis, Chair

Veena Deo, English Department, Hamline University, "Dalit Women's Writing"
Shripad Deo, Department of Sociology, Colorado State University, "Inchoate Revolution and the Shadows of Untouchability: Antinomies of the Dalit Revolution"
Amitava Kumar, English Department, University of Florida, "Poetry's Provocation"

3:45-5:00, READINGS

1.
Reg E. Gaines
Marisela Norte
Hilton Obenzinger
Introduction by

5:15-7:00 Dinner Break
5:15, buses leave from Nolte Center for the Walker Art Center area.

7:00-8:30, KEYNOTE TALK-POEM at the Walker Art Center
David Antin
Introduction by Karen Moss, Walker Art Center

8:45-closing
Performance Cabaret/Dessert Coffee Wine Bar, Walker Gallery 8 Café: Hosts, Brenda Bell Brown and

FRIDAY OCTOBER 17:

8:30-9:45 A.M., PANELS:

1. Black Chant Aldon Nielsen, English Department, Loyola-Marymount University, Chair Julie Anne Schmid, English Department, University of Iowa, "Speaking as the Other: Patrcia Smith's Close to Death and an Ethics of Performance" Kathleen Crown, English Department, Rutgers University,"'Cross/Country Nonstop Flight': Migratory Ecstasies in Ed Roberson's Voices Cast Out to Talk Us In" Richard Quinn, English Department, University of Iowa, "Riffing on the 'Sexual Cut': Musical Possession and Virtuosity in Nathaniel Mackey's Bedouin Hornbook and Archie Shepp's 'The Girl from Ipanema'"

2. Literary Ethnographies
Dennis Tedlock, English Department, SUNY-Buffalo, Chair
Hank Lazer, English Department, University of Alabama, "Education, Equality, and Ethnography in Ron Silliman's The Alphabet" Yunte Huang, English and Anthropology, SUNY-Buffalo, "Charlie Chan vs. Ezra Pound: Modern Conceptions of the Chinese Language"
Eleni Stecopoulos, English Department, SUNY-Buffalo, "Ethnography, Glossographia, and the Macaronic: The Translations of Artaud"

3: "Anthropological Poetics"
Diane Glancy, English and Native American Studies, Macalester College, Chair
Shazia Rahman, Department of English, University of Alberta, "Incohering Identities: Kirin Narayan's Love, Starts and All That"
Michael Heller, NYU, "Precision and Uncertainty: Towards an Anthropological Poetics" Kenneth Serwood, English Department, SUNY-Buffalo, "Ethnopoetics Redux: Airing the Languages of Contemporary Cross-Cultural Poetry"

10:00- 11:30, ROUNDTABLE: Roundtable 1: Poeisis, Ethnicity, Ethics: Reconfiguring the Balance: or, "Ethnopoetics: What's the Use?" Maria Damon, English Department, University of Minnesota, Moderator Juliana Chang, Heinz Insu Fenkl, Maurice Kenny, Wendy Rose, Armand Schwerner, Barbara Tedlock, Dennis Tedlock

11:30-1:00: Lunch Break

1:00-2:10, PANELS:

1. Now Museum/Now You Don't: Institutionalizing Wildness
Chair: William Anthes, American Studies, U of MN
Brian Keith Axel, Department of Anthropology, University of Chicago, "The Scattered Members of the Poet: Questioning the Production of Diaspora as an Object of Study" Diane Olson, English Department, SUNY-Buffalo, "de-institutionalized docility: an autoethnographic 'walk' through an ethnographcally 'wild' museum"
David Michalski, School for the Visual Arts, "Collage Sociology: The World Trade Center Social Research Experiment"

2. Telepoetics II
Chair, Peter Krapp
Laurence Rickels, University of California-Santa Barbara
Catherine Liu, Department of French and Italian, University of Minnesota
Christopher Bracken, English Department, University of Alberta, "Mana, Magic, Man"

3. READING
Susan Wheeler, cris cheek, Brian West and Erik Belgum
Introductions by Yunte Huang, SUNY-Buffalo

2:20-3:30, PANELS

1. Poetics Out of Bounds
Julia Van Cleve, Comparative Literature, University of Minnesota, Chair
Diedre Sklar, Department of Anthropology, UC-Davis, "Walking with the Virgins in the Procession of the Grandmothers"

Ed Cohen, Literature Department, Rutgers University, "Poesis, Autopoesis, Autopoethics"
Ira Livingston, Englih Department, SUNY-Stonybrook, "The Politics of Disavowal: Poetics and Science"

2. Harlem Renaissance/Nathaniel Mackey John Wright, African and Afro-American Studies, University of Minnesota, Chair Julie Suk, Cambridge University, "Poetry of Flesh: Double Consciousness in the Harlem Renaissance and Negritude" Katherine Lynes, Literature Department, Rutgers University, "Expectations of Authenticity: Poets and Poetry of the Harlem Renaissance as Cultured and Collected Objects" Paul Naylor, English Department, University of Memphis, "'Cries of thousands/ cut in on the music': Nathaniel Mackey's Recording of Strick: Song of the Andoumboulou 16-25"

3. READING:
Eliot Katz, Liberation Recalled
Chris Peditto, Heat Press
Lori Tsang
Introductions by Allan Kornblum, Coffee House Press

3:45-5:00, READINGS:

Solomon Deressa, Walter K. Lew, Elizabeth Burns, Mark Nowak Introductions by Mark Nowak, Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics

5:00-7:00 DINNER BREAK

7:00-9:00, KEYNOTE READING AND ADDRESS at the Weisman Art Museum Diane Glancy
Dennis Tedlock, "2,000 Years of Mayan Literature"
Introduction by Mark Nowak, Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics

9:00-closing, Reception/Cash Bar and Readings, Campus Club: 8 by 8: Roy Miki, Jeff Derksen, Aldon Nielsen, Amitava Kumar, Anna Reckin, Edmond Chow, JL Kubicek, Eliza Murphy

SATURDAY OCTOBER 18

8:30-9:45, PANELS

1. Ideology and Community Candace Lines, English Department, University of Minnesota, Chair *unconfirmed Dean Brink, Comparative Literature, University of Chicago, "Nineteenth-Century Japanese Verse and Ideology" David Kellogg, Writing Program, Duke University, "Social Identity and the Locus of Quantity: Rhetorical Appeals in Contemporary Poetry" Rod Hernandez, English Department, Stanford University, "Tropicalism: A Poetics of the Poco-Che Literary Collective and Publishing Company"

2. Other Languages
????????Yunte Huang, SUNY-Buffalo, Chair
Dan Taulaitu McMullin, "Education as Elision: Polynesian Oral Traditions and Their Erasure..." Laura Yim, Brandeis University, "Pregnant with kaona": Functions of Mele and Oli in Marshall Sahlins' _Islands of History_"
Tina Neumann, Arizona State University, "The Poetics of American Sign Language"

3. Within the Academy Norman Finkelstein, English Department, Xavier University, Chair Joe Amato, Writing Program, Illinois Institute of Technology, tba Kangmi Kim, University of Wisconsin-Madison, "On the Need for Orality in the Classroom" Alan Golding, English Department, University of Louisville, "Whiteboy Avant-Gardism and Cross-Cultural Poetics: Charles Bernstein as Poet-Critic"

4. Voices, Spaces, Performance: The Poetics of Armand Schwerner in The Tablets and Other Writing
Michael Heller, NYU, Chair
Arthur Sabatini, Department of Interdisciplinary Arts and Performance, Arizona State University West, "Culture and Poetics" Michael Heller, NYU, "Voice and Disjunction" Willard Gingerich, Dean of Graduate Arts and Sciences, St. John's University, "Cultural Representation"
Katherine Von Spanckeren, English Department, University of Tampa, "Praxis of a Buddhist Poetics"

10:00-11:30, PANELS

1. Publishing and Outreach, Roundtable
Mark Nowak, XCP: Cross-Cultural Poetics, Chair
Carolyn Holbrook, SASE
Chris Peditto, Heat Press
Allan Kornblum, Coffeehouse Press
Martin Spinelli, Line/break

2. Post-War African American Poetry
David Jones, English Department, University of Minnesota, Chair
Michael Bibby, English Department, Shippensburg State University, "Stranger in the Village: Poetry and the Racial Uncanny, 1945-1955"
Skip Fox, Department of English, University of Southern Louisiana, "On Nathaniel Mackey"
Elizabeth Frost, English Department, Fordham University, "Agendas of Race and Gender: Sonia Sanchez and the Black Arts Movement"

3. Outsiderhood ???University of Minnesota, Chair Duncan Smith, German Department, Brown University, "Poetry from the Tower and Dumpster: Vatic Poems by Hölderlin and Everett Maddox" Kevin Browne, Anthropology Department, University of Wisconsin-Madison, "Poetry, Ethnography and the Dispossessed: Exploring Poems of a Mental Patient and of Street Children in Central Java" Jason Winslade, Program in Performance Studies, Northwestern University, "Incarcerated Incantations: Occult Poetics and the Performance of Magickal Resistance in a Correctional Institution"

4. "Identity in Revolution": Some Latin American/Caribbean Poetics Silvia Lopez, Comparative Literature, University of Minnesota, Chair Bruce Campbell, Critical Studies in Discourse and Society, University of Minnesota, "Revolutionary Death and the Phantom Public Sphere" Loretta Collins, English Department, University of Iowa, "Trouble It: Rebel/Revel Soundspace in the Caribbean Diaspora: A Bricolage of Recorded Interviews, Snapshots, Poem Fragments, and Popular Music" Michael Eldridge, English Department, Humboldt State University, "'I Am Going to Buy Me a Bungalow': Calypso Comes to the U.S." Robert Zamsky, Program in Poetics, SUNY-Buffalo, ""The Anterior Question: Cultural Fetishism in the Poesis of Aimé Cèsaire"

11:30-1:00 LUNCH BREAK

1:00-2:10, PANELS:

1. Questioning Disciplinarity Jigna Desai, English Department, University of Minnesota, Chair Aldon Nielsen, English Department, Loyola Marymount University, "Can Cultural Studies Speak Poetry?" Sw. Anand Prahlad, English Department, University of Missouri-Columbia, "Getting Happy: From Ethnopoetics to Cultural Poetics (Ethnographic Writing: A Contested Discourse)" Hilton Obenzinger, Program in Modern Thought and Literature, Stanford University, "Writing (In) the Past"

2. Canadian Multiculturalism
Christopher Bracken, English Department, University of Alberta, Chair
Fred Wah, "Race Writing the Lyric Poetic" Jeff Derksen
Roy Miki, "Can I See Your ID? Writing in the Age of 'Race' Codes that Bind"

3. READING:
Kimberly TallBear
Mary Ann Cain
George Kalamaras
Jeff Hansen
Introductions by Carolyn Erler

4. READING:
Kenneth Sherwood
Norman Finkelstein
Skip Fox
Hank Lazer
Introductions by Anna Reckin

2:20-3:30, PANELS

1. Performance and Poetics in a Feminist Theater Teirab AshSharif, African and Afro-American Studies, University of Minnesota, Chair Amy Levine, Critical Studies in Discourse and Society, University of Minnesota, "Women and Performance in Morocco: The Case of the Shikhat" Rebecca M. Brown, Department of Art History, University of Minesota, "Femininity and Muharram: Nineteenth Century British Representation" Negar Mottahedeh, Critical Studies in Discourse and Society, University of Minnesota, "Maybe Some Other Time: Bahram Bayza'is Film Language"

2. Ethnography/Sound/Poetics
David Michalski, School for the Visual Arts, Chair
Michelle Kisliuk, Department of Music, University of Virginia, "Musical Performance, Field Experience, and the Poetic Frontier"
Stephen Cope, Literature Department, UC-San Diego, "The Ethnography of Sound: Possession and (Dis)possession in Nathaniel Mackey's Novels"

3. Performance
Patrick Scully, Chair
Derek Goldman, Performance Studies, Northwestern University, "The Poetics of Adaptation: From a Miniscule Conference Room to a 500-Seat Thater: Staging Fiction and Ethnography in Leon Forrests' Divine Days and Roger Lancaster's Life is Hard"
Susan Jahoda, Department of Studio Art, University of Massachusetts, "Frictional Contacts and Other Stories" Leanne Trapedo Sims, "The Mikvah: Women's Songs"

4. READING
Paul Naylor
Loss Pequeno Glazier
Jen Hofer
Fred Wah
Introductions by Walter Lew

3:45-5:00 READINGS

1. Wendy Rose
Barbara Tedlock

Maurice Kenny
Armand Schwerner
Introductions by Dale Kakkak, Menominee Nation

5:00-7:00 DINNER BREAK

7:00-8:30 KEYNOTE READING AT THE MUSIC DEPARTMENT RECITAL HALL
KAMAU BRATHWAITE
Introduction by John Wright, University of Minnesota

8:45-CLOSING, CAMPUS CLUB RECEPTION, BAR, OPEN READING

SUNDAY OCTOBER 19

8:45-10:00 AM, PANELS

1. "Language Advisory": CD/Radio Poetix
Erik Belgum, VOYZ Productions, Chair
cris cheek, "On the Work of Bob Cobbing" Martin Spinelli, Line/break, "Language Advisory: Poetry on Public Radio" Rob Fitterman, NYU, "Millenial Appropriations"

2. Asian American Performance
David Mura, Asian-American Renaissance, Chair
Thomas Kim, English Department, Boston College, "Resistance Inter Dicta: Representation, Materiality, and Language in Theresa Hak Kyung Cha's Dictée" Juliana Chang, English Department, Boston College, "Poetry that Matters: Inscribing the Racialized Body"
Heinz Insu Fenkl, Eastern Michigan State University, "Surgical Mercy"

3. Some Jewish Poetics Riv-Ellen Prell, Program in American Studies, University of Minnesota, Chair Norman Finkelstein, English Department, Xavier University, "Messianic Ethnography: Rothenberg's Poland/1931" Amy Nestor, English Department, SUNY-Buffalo, "Noting Traces: Entries of Culture Lost in Zapisnik Pana Pinkeho (the Diary of Mr Pinke) by Ewald Murrer" Eric Murphy Selinger, English Department, DePaul University, "California Kaballah: The Roots and Branches of Tree 1-5 (1970-75)"

4. READING:
Andrew Schelling, Naropa Institute
Jane Augustine
Michael Heller, NYU
Introductions by George Kalamaras

10:15-11:30, KEYNOTE ADDRESS AT THE NOLTE CONFERENCE CENTER
KIRIN NARAYAN, UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON

↑ Index

243. Dean Taciuch
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

On Tue, 16 Sep 1997, henry wrote:

> Yes, "exercises" can bring a breath of fresh air & liberation & play into the writing process. . .

fresh air, liberation and play _is_ the writing process (for me anyway). It's also the reading process.

I use exercises in my writing classes--I also ask what poetry the students read. A surprising number of them read very little (this is an undergrad class, and many take it for elective credit). I see plenty of thoughtless form, sentimental content, etc. Exercises are a way to break out of that, as is reading. Etc etc.

Dean

↑ Index

244. robert drake
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 16 Sep 1997

mention of Oulipo reminds me to mention a newish book i picked up last week in toronto: _Oulipo Laboratoy_ (Atlas Press, London 1995) featuring works by Queneau, Calvino, Fournel, Berge, Jouet & Mathews... important stuff that i think can legitimatly claim to be "experimental", so the title seems approp... glad to have another source, beyond the U. of Nebraska anthology, and more is promised.

& while i'm here: several years ago, i was stuck w/ what seemed like a promising fragment... & set myself the task of recycling the vocabulary from that poempart to complete th poem... i liked the results quite a bit--th puzzle of reusing each of the original words in new arrangements forced me to refocus on the language material rather than my ideas or emotions or whatever, and the echoing/repetions added some sonic interest, i thot. you could base an excersize on that, i think, & praps students wd learn something by confronting those processes & concerns--that cd be of use, whether or no the resulting "poems" were any "good"... i kinda meant to go back and try that technique again mself, but never got around to it... but at what point would that become gimmimimicry? (thanx fr that word, henry!) when the results were no longer interesting? or when the writer no longer learned anything frm the excercize?

asever
luigi

↑ Index

245. Douglas Barbour

Re: Writing experiments

Tue 16 Sep 1997

This has all been very interesting, and as pointed out along the way both sides are almost in agreement anyway. I note Marjorie Perloff's _Radical Artifice_ (among others) as pointing to the fact that sometimes setting up formal 'limitations' is a means by which to get into the poem. I feel good about some of the 'homolinguistic translations' which, as Bernstein & Meyer point ou, comes from bpNichol & others, because the way in which I had to think about formal constraints lead me out of the prisonhouse of lyric egotism. For that alone, they've been worthwhile. For some at least.

Certainly for David B just on the list recently. But what do we call all the work with his 'speaking figures' that Alan Jen Sondheim has been doing: who or what arew Julu & Jennifer if not formal constraints by any other name? So I agree with Henry on the one hand but have found that I can find my way toward connections with that history of poetry he seeks through such 'work,'

Then there's what I do think is a great poem, Ronald Johnson's _Radi Os_, the whole thing what I would call a form of 'homolinguistic translation' of the first four books of _Paradise Lost_ (not to mention a lot of what happens throughout _Arc_). If this be writing experimentation, let me at it.

==========
==========
Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]
H: [redacted]
~~~
~~~

246. Layne Russell
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

mark weiss wrote:
>
> No doubt exercises or self-imposed (self-invented?) formal constraints are > sometimes useful. It should also be obvious that sometimes a writer sitting > alone with her thoughts can produce unique writing. To assert the opposite > is on the face of it not only provocative, but absurd, and I hope you > misparaphrase. Or was Emily Dickenson doing calisthenics while she composed?
>
> >As Charles Bernstein pointed out some time ago now in "Thought's Measure", > >the writer who sits, pen in hand, alone with her thoughts, invariably > >produces writing which is far from unique.

my god we're doomed!

Layne (sitting alone with her computer -- does that count?)

http://www.sonic.net/layne
"A Quiet Place" -- Poetry

↑ Index

247. Judy Roitman
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 16 Sep 1997

> Seems there is some idea here that a poem wrought by a method or procedure can't be as sincere or close to the bone or _____ (anything) as one which is not wrought by such method or procedure. I don't agree with that at all.

Me too. Getting out of self-delusion, easy tricks, etc. ain't easy. Some kind of formal something (method, procedure, constraint, etc.) can be a huge help, get you a lot closer to the bone.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
----

http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

248. James Finnegan
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

In a message dated 97-09-16 05:10:58 EDT, you write:

> And what an idea, a > whodunnit written entirely without the letter e, in which the murderer turns > out to be the errant vowel!

That's way too deep for me.

Miles,

Seriously, what you've said about literary history and Perec is very good. But I don't agree (w/ C.B.) that writing alone with one's thoughts produces unoriginal & banal work--unless that's all one's got in one's head. Let the exercises flourish & multiple.
I'm past my school years, so I, luckily, don't have to endure them.

Finngan (oops, I wrote my name without the letter e)

↑ Index

249. Scott Keeney
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

> fresh air, liberation and play _is_ the writing process (for me > anyway).
> It's also the reading process.>

Yes. On the intersection of writing/reading process/praxis (and to bring the thread back to its original question) a good source to introduce to a (primarily undergrad?) workshop class would be Padgett's _Creative Reading_, which organizes & discuses reading/writing 'exercises' both old and new (at least new to me) in his own fun informative way.

* *

As for aphorisms and art, perhaps 'art is to hide art,' but

-- art is to reveal art -- or rather (w/ nod to Shklovsky)

-- art (re-(in-))arts art -- or but really,

-- art is always its opposite --

[image: ellipsis]

-- art , never art --

*

words, words, words,

5co++

On Tue, 16 Sep 1997 08:40:53 -0400 Dean Taciuch <[redacted]> writes:
>On Tue, 16 Sep 1997, henry wrote:
>
>> Yes, "exercises" can bring a breath of fresh air & liberation & play >> into the writing process. . .
>
>
>fresh air, liberation and play _is_ the writing process (for me >anyway).
>It's also the reading process.
>
>I use exercises in my writing classes--I also ask what poetry the >students >read. A surprising number of them read very little (this is an >undergrad >class, and many take it for elective credit). I see plenty of >thoughtless >form, sentimental content, etc. Exercises are a way to break out of >that,
>as is reading. Etc etc.
>
>Dean
>

↑ Index

250. Eliza McGrand
compuslave
Tue 16 Sep 1997

gadzooks! aol did this to me and it was awful. so compuserve is hassling people as well? aol likes to send you their "free disks" then after you put them in, and fill out all the info, you realize, gradually, that 1) they don't work; 2) there is no cancellation information either on disk or in packaging. you are run through the gamut of long distance number after long distance number, transfer after transfer, only to find, at the end, that though you have asked, formally, to have service discontinued, been called upward of 3 or more times at home by aol salesperson asking if you are SURE you want to cancel, in fact, they never cancel you at all! e

↑ Index

251. Eliza McGrand
the REAL TRUTH about the Free Cuisinart and web site
Tue 16 Sep 1997

POETICS LIST:

re http confusion on free cuis, the official, real, true url is: http://www.onnet.net/~cca/wowzine/wowzine.html

re identity issue, more later.

re turning sound off on web site, see following note from jordie:

I sent a reply to Judy Roitman, but you will have to post to poetics since I cannot post there.

Here are the instructions for turning off the sound:

If you are using Netscape or Internet explorer, then what you should have on the screen is a small box which is labeled "Crescendo." There are several buttons on that box. One of the buttons near the right end of the box has a small square on it. This button, when clicked, shuts off the music.

If you cannot do that, there is also a small red dot in the box, which is on a line above the buttons. If you right click on that red dot, and drag it to the left, the volume of the sound will go down. Thus you may shut the sound down to nothing, if you wish.

If either of these options does not work, please let us know. at [redacted] or [redacted].

IMPORTANT IMPORTANT IMPORTANT!!!

FINALLY -- we had so much fun with "Identity" issue we've decided to put together ANOTHER "theme" issue -- November issue will be on RITES OF PASSAGE

If that strikes anyone's fancy, please feel free to send poem, story, essay, prose, review, artwork, etc on idea, anything tangential but slightly connected to idea, anything contraindicting idea, etc. to jordie at [redacted], or to me at [redacted] e

↑ Index

252. Jordan Davis
add ress
Tue 16 Sep 1997

Rod

that url you mentioned I think is http://members.aol.com/jordan70/million/1.html

okdokey

J

↑ Index

253. Christopher Alexander
(belated)birthdaycard for Jackson Mac Low
Tue 16 Sep 1997

---

well, I'd send it to him, but I don't have his address.
Chris

--

(belated)birthdaycard for Jackson Mac Low

In 1921, "nineteen"
,might we thinking.

"eat bugs": it's um terrific set of nutri tional means. that is "nineteen&one" but fortified is On.

"ink bugs": it's a
"ribbed seeks pro portional", i.e.,

(HUM)

"anydaynow" the # of Originals =

Copies of Each.

--

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

254. Henry Gould
more exercise
Tue 16 Sep 1997

---

some final (maybe) heresies on this subject. I love preaching to the unconverted. Poetry is the supreme art. This is an old-fashioned view. It is the synthesis in its own sphere of architecture, music, incantation, performance, philosophy, theatre. When St. Mandelstam said "classicism is revolution" he was not referring to some chilly intellectual realm but to the pre-socratic Greece of Nietzsche in which dionysian & apollonian elements (energy & intellect) are fused in incantation. the only way such fusion takes place is where there is disciplined frenzy. Knowledge & inspiration. Poetry is rare as well as everywhere. I don't know honestly if I've ever produced poetry by this definition. But I think that's what it is, as opposed to versifying, writing, or exercises. It's a kind of formality which seems alien to a lot of the postmodern ethos. The challenge is to reintroduce this sense of poetry in a contemporary world absorbing contemporary history & experience. & it might appear in unexpected places. All I'm thinking is that along with empowering writers in a classroom setting - show them the real thing. Encourage them to lift their eyes to the mountains. & play them some old blues while you're at it. - Henry gould

↑ Index

255. Robert Hale
QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS
Tue 16 Sep 1997

A few critics have dismissed my poems as not being poems and have dismissed me as not being a poet. But one principle of criticism has it that only true poets can recognize poetic creativity or function as critics of poetry -- and that the only true poets are those whose work conveys genuine poetic creativity. But I have read the work of these critics; none of it demonstrated poetic creativity. These critics' judgements should be rejected, since these critics are not true poets

The argument above is vulnerable to criticism on the grounds that it

(A) Presupposes what it sets out to conclude, since the principle requires that only true poets can determine whether the critics' work demonstrates creativity

(B) uses the distinction between poets and critics as though everyone fell into one category or the other

(C) gives no justification for the implicit claim that the standing of a poet can be judged

(D) makes an unjustifiable distinction, since it is possible that some critics are also poets

(E) inevitably leads to the conclusion that poets can never learn to improve their poetry, since no poet is in a position to criticize his or her own work

↑ Index

256. Thomas Bell
Re: Writing experiments
Tue 16 Sep 1997

I have been recycling myself in a way and I think to good effect. I have also been putting my words into drawings and finding this worth doing. http://www.public.usit.net/trbell if interested. tom bell

At 09:37 AM 9/16/97 -0400, robert drake wrote: >mention of Oulipo reminds me to mention a newish book i picked >up last week in toronto: _Oulipo Laboratoy_ (Atlas Press, London >1995) featuring works by Queneau, Calvino, Fournel, Berge, Jouet >& Mathews... important stuff that i think can legitimatly claim >to be "experimental", so the title seems approp... glad to have >another source, beyond the U. of Nebraska anthology, and more is >promised.
>

>& while i'm here: several years ago, i was stuck w/ what seemed >like a promising fragment... & set myself the task of recycling >the vocabulary from that poempart to complete th poem... i liked >the results quite a bit--th puzzle of reusing each of the original >words in new arrangements forced me to refocus on the language >material rather than my ideas or emotions or whatever, and the >echoing/repetions added some sonic interest, i thot. you could >base an excersize on that, i think, & praps students wd learn >something by confronting those processes & concerns--that cd be >of use, whether or no the resulting "poems" were any "good"... >i kinda meant to go back and try that technique again mself, but >never got around to it... but at what point would that become >gimmimimicry?(thanx fr that word, henry!) when the results were >no longer interesting? or when the writer no longer learned >anything frm the excercize?
>
>asever
>luigi
>
>

↑ Index

257. red slider
Re: more exercise
Tue 16 Sep 1997

---

some final (maybe) heresies on this subject. I love preaching to the unconverted. Poetry is the supreme art. This is an old-fashioned view. It is the synthesis in its own sphere of architecture, music, incantation, performance, philosophy, theatre. When St. Mandelstam said "classicism is revolution" he was not referring to some chilly intellectual realm but to the pre-socratic Greece of Nietzsche in which dionysian & apollonian elements (energy & intellect) are fused in incantation. the only way such fusion takes place is where there is disciplined frenzy. Knowledge & inspiration. Poetry is rare as well as everywhere. I don't know honestly if I've ever produced poetry by this definition. But I think that's what it is, as opposed to versifying, writing, or exercises. It's a kind of formality which seems alien to a lot of the postmodern ethos. The challenge is to reintroduce this sense of poetry in a contemporary world absorbing contemporary history & experience. & it might appear in unexpected places. All I'm thinking is that along with empowering writers in a classroom setting - show them the real thing. Encourage them to lift their eyes to the mountains. & play them some old blues while you're at it. - Henry gould

Henry,

heresy is never final as soon as its uttered there's another looking back at you -

For you, for them+many the classroom is the REEL thing and if some culd write that gesture - mark&pin it - under the glass/The strew in that little pressure cooker/looker out the window then indeed that might be a mightyverse described. But to dislocate the real/wheel about everytime someone says, 'What can you you there?' well, i'd like to see that wheal as well. The knack of that/the techne to mark the circle as its own target well, why look elswhere for a trick once turned that can be transferred to any reel whorehouse anywhere? In the class, in the exercise itself are cramps yet to be clamped and squeezed and unprosed. and, were I that, a student a teacher there and could learn to attend just that, to focus it precisely, but, for those of us who live another exercise its much the same - we read stare the window down till we finally getit where we are. no?

to expand on Bateson, are we in the alternate of a period of investigative formalism, an orgy of loose thinking or, a time of just plain maybe?

red

↑ Index

258. mark weiss
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

No doubt exercises or self-imposed (self-invented?) formal constraints are sometimes useful. It should also be obvious that sometimes a writer sitting alone with her thoughts can produce unique writing. To assert the opposite is on the face of it not only provocative, but absurd, and I hope you misparaphrase. Or was Emily Dickenson doing calisthenics while she composed?

> As Charles Bernstein pointed out some time ago now in "Thought's Measure", the writer who sits, pen in hand, alone with her thoughts, invariably produces writing which is far from unique.

↑ Index

259. Mark Baker
Re: writing exercises
Tue 16 Sep 1997

Dickinson, as we know her, never sat alone with her thoughts. The sounds and restraints of the hymn stanza were her calisthenics--an exercise to isolate certain muscles (or rhythms) and promote the creation of beauty.

Why anyone has to quote Bernstein for this puzzles me. This is surely a critical cliche. Auden and any number of poets likely detested by many on this List have uttered similar apothegms. The serious disagreement concerns the originality or radicalness of the restraint, not its presence.

Mark Baker

On Tue, 16 Sep 1997, mark weiss
wrote:

> No doubt exercises or self-imposed (self-invented?) formal constraints are sometimes useful. It should also be obvious that sometimes a writer sitting alone with her thoughts can produce unique writing. To assert the opposite is on the face of it not only provocative, but absurd, and I hope you misparaphrase. Or was Emily Dickenson doing calisthenics while she composed?
>
> As Charles Bernstein pointed out some time ago now in "Thought's Measure", the writer who sits, pen in hand, alone with her thoughts, invariably produces writing which is far from unique.

↑ Index

260. red slider

a little poem

Tue 16 Sep 1997

Chronos - Eater of Children

Do not sing the path of greatness,
For it was writ by the large to seduce the small,
What elevates the song, the word that moves beyond the "petty" thoughts of self-annoyance, was writ by those that eat the small.

That which does not move beyond itself,
"Transcend," so they say, so they say may be very good, so they say; But,
But, But But But But But,
"Only that which reaches beyond itself, makes the extra gesture," to what?
To praise the eater of children, who die starving at the banquets of "Just Say No", whose gods are manufactured to just say this, and no more?

↑ Index

261. Jordan Davis utter apothegms
Tue 16 Sep 1997

Likewise, it makes me queasy to assume that Auden is detested by many on this List -- hard to imagine that he would make anybody uneasy, or angry! at this late date, and harder to imagine that he wouldn't be seen as a genial forebear of Ashbery, and O'Hara, and Schuyler, and Koch?...

Signed,
Jordan

who would like to invite those on this List in the Greater Brooklyn area to come to Charleston Bar tomorrow night at 9 pm (on Bedford Ave betw. N 7th and N 8th, that is, not far from the Bedford St stop on the L) to hear Anselm Berrigan read his terrific poems --

At 2:47 PM -0700 9/16/97, Mark Baker wrote:

> Why anyone has to quote Bernstein for this puzzles me. This is surely a critical cliche. Auden and any number of poets likely detested by many on this List have uttered similar apothegms. The serious disagreement concerns the originality or radicalness of the restraint, not its presence.

↑ Index

262. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Tue 16 Sep 1997

: Biblio Whee graphy :

: for Hannah Weiner : some Annotations :
. . . . . .

A Journal Entry's (1975) striking cover photo
the - w - o - r - d - floats; it is upon a forehead this is the forehead upon which we spe - a - k - cast like hand puppets on a curtain - full caps s & ghosts of - l - e - t - t - e - r - s - as o, Taos of little books/indians - a composition book (8 indige'nes mention the ladinos o no sajones (0 on the roof of speckled black and white bords

"& it didn't hurt POCKETS"

(39) caps and verticality nearly dizz (iness) turning tuning to a spoke - seven faced with tongues from the Beatus of Ferdinand II & Sancha of Aragon Biblioteca Nacional de Madrid

"name calls it the point" (104) in latters or gondola-crossing bridges of lines - fragile as letters lattice bridg waters as thy must. the prose fast (1992) its blak tiger con leopard leaping into paper smooth day milk from bare legs & linen "a neat 3X4 inch piece of cloth was in its place on the floor" (15)

* w e e k s * photog 90 b barbar rosenthal mac spread palettes - i c mac type - i c dot mtrx - pointilsof img - photo montage - type faced and pointilate - "the latest finger-print technology" (unpaged) "were hit with shrapnel" (unpaged) "there is no other peaceful way to reform" (unpaged) sumptous shape and weighty planes in pink bold cover stock

(1983) AWEDE * S 1 6 I 1 6 X 1 6 T 1 6 E 1 6
E 1 6 * moves in white paper slips "within it was written we are enlarged pancreas" (unpa)
. . . . . .
"W R I T E I T D O W N - sixteen sentences s G R A N D M O T H E R - een this summe 1982
. . . . . .
the following is ALL SEEN AS WORDS BEFORE i"
. . . . . .
seen through a half slip of half-light the translucent inserted sheet printed in red muted mouth and blazed chalk board wiped * sileNt teachers : remeMbered sequel * (199 4) "spelling error off the continue"(17) who what 'classical' b&w pose - for the classi

        "whee
        i fe i phd" (38)
a lesson to all who value educachievement

CPDE {OEMD (1982) "from the INTERNATIONAL CPDE OF SIGNALS for the Use of All Nation" the closest I have seen to poems in hex code or how the 8 bit or 7 binary hex dex

Loss =?iso-8859-1?Q?Peque=F1o_?= Glazier maysheekos antiguos? Or my son who confused his words and instead of tex-mex called me techno-mex. Vale! The Trans-Pecos and Rio Grande delta. Mexico City how letters speak from xwords from xfor

:U=i :Ui : "In addition each flag has a name; A, Alpha, B, Bravo, C, Charle, etc" rich with code and black palettes upon which in scratchmarks engraved are point s & boxes mores or bin or MARC morse cod

Nijole's house in white covers white card stock and folded endpages 1981 ("WHICH IS THURSDAY") (written on Tuesday (son) con IfnNXIO pIN~EIRO su Cuatro Palomas)

until finally we do speak silent we speak silent (1996) tex al mos com for tab ly spr'e'd out lent op ulent of graphs t words have azes axes aztec hu nk ed for whitesp ace in the so
"1 funny 2 hilarious i am imperious 3 struck"
(21) or for bob dylan (as post card indicates)

Post Neo's WRITTEN IN THE ZERO ONE this g ray coverstock is sumptu a size iz red courier but big type as if pressed into gray ripples of the 'bord' the ex panse i s where amid this good size for page ii expn broad blanks o backsides and the wh ii te is a wealth of what is y iznt in its ordered steps like ladders or diamond pat terns on the ball court walls (1990):

. . . . . .

"book is what it is called and this is the last page still slanti out to the margin"
...
AND THIS PAGE"
(unpaged)

. . . . . .

Loss Pequen~o Glazier

↑ Index

263. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Re: Hannah Weiner (1928-1997)
Tue 16 Sep 1997

I have been working on "Hannah Weiner (1928-1997): An Online Tribute." This extended forray into HTML is is nearly complete. If you have anything special to contribute to the issue, please let me know. (Write me directly at [redacted] if you wish.) Otherwise, the issue is almost complete and should be ready soon. The issue should be ready, graphics-enhanced, and viewable in a couple of days via the EPC home page. (Photos are especially sought. Write me!)

↑ Index

264. Markus Foutu
Re: QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS
Wed 17 Sep 1997

---

stop carping and go do your work

markus

↑ Index

265. Alan Jen Sondheim
From Jennifer with ALL the obvious excuses...
Wed 17 Sep 1997

> From Jennifer, on the Attitudes of the Arthropods:
>
> Now I will note the attitudes in the time of the arthropods,
> When helmetted Zor ran his lanky legions around the army of Murr.
> The golden-haired maiden, with three drops of blood, christianed
> The sword of the family of Aral, born of the dank ruins of Drur.
> Those times past the ruins of Feggard! Ah for the mead and the storm!
> Such moments of these, like the falling of peas, take us away
> From the norm!

↑ Index

266. Alan Jen Sondheim
Jennifer's Ponder
Wed 17 Sep 1997

-

Jennifer's Ponder

"Such moments of these, like the falling of peas, take us away / From the norm!"

Jennifer ponders: "Such moments _of_ these" (her emphasis)? Moments of what, perhaps, what came before in the poem? Mead, storm, and ruins and some other stuff, perhaps the drops of blood, there was an implication of a castle, certainly a fortress, god knows what else. Not to mention (why not?) the arthropods ...

But then, hmmm ...

"Such moments _like_ these, _like_ the falling of peas" does seem to over- do it, these moments don't have to double up, quite, but they do! Hee hee!

So she considers "take us away from the norm!" might absorb (like her pan- ties in a puddle!) the grammar that came before, just a bit off-putting.

And lets it alone, but wanted you to know this all along ...

↑ Index

267. David R. Israel
Re: compuslave
Wed 17 Sep 1997

Eliza -- brilliant!

(I assume this is all a coyly crafted Buddhist metaphor ???)

cheer,
d.i.

p.s.: in case you didn't hap to read the gneus, Compuserv is slated to be bought out by AOL . . .

> gadzooks! aol did this to me and it was awful. so compuserve is hassling people as well? aol likes to send you their "free disks" then after you put them in, and fill out all the info, you realize, gradually, that 1) they don't work; 2) there is no cancellation information either on disk or in packaging. you are run through the gamut of long distance number after long distance number, transfer after transfer, only to find, at the end, that though you have asked, formally, to have service discontinued, been called upward of 3 or more times at home by aol salesperson asking if you are SURE you want to cancel, in fact, they never cancel you at all! e

↑ Index

268. Alan Jen Sondheim
ATTACK on a POEM by WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS
Wed 17 Sep 1997

-

ATTACK on CRAZY JANE TALKS WITH THE BISHOP by WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS

What an idiot Bishop! I met the Bishop on the road He should be in church! Shut him up, evil church! And much said he and I. He talks too much! Guilty of ageism! 'Those breasts are flat and fallen now, Sexless Bishop! Just for children, eh! Those veins must soon be dry; Stop looking! Sure he didn't say that! Live in a heavenly mansion, Where he gropes you! Liar, liar, you wouldn't know! Not in some foul sty.' Beauty, beauty!

True, but shut him up! 'Fair and foul are near of kin, Yeats is also foul! The poet's in love! And fair needs foul,' I cried. Liar! He denies it! Oh yeah, shut up Yeats! 'My friends are gone, but that's a truth (Lie!) Depression and love, eh? Nor grave nor bed denied, Forget Donne, Yeats! Idiot! Raise the body! Learned in bodily lowliness Don't screw with it! Give her your heart! And in the heart's pride. Why not! She struggled!

Yeah, don't generalize! 'A woman can be proud and stiff Written by a man! Men need women more than women need men! When on love intent; Admit it! Back to the mansion again! But Love has pitched his mansion in Anal sex! So what! The place of excrement; You can't face it, Yeats, can you? What about the Man! For nothing can be sole or whole He's broken in two! More parts, three! That has not been rent.' Liar, broken Man, idiot!

↑ Index

269. red slider
The Poemercise
Wed 17 Sep 1997

Alan dinero of Taverner's Koans invited me to try out his new 'emergency' forum system at his new cite. It's a Nicenet offering which promotes itself as an 'online classroom' format. The resulting test turns out to be a much better poem_de_terre, than the original test data. In addition, the poem within the poem _Symphony_ which was pasted in to test the frame input capacity turns out far better than the original which was nicely indented and line broken to exagerate the voices. Once pasted - Nicenet input frame obligingly demolished all the indents and spacing and provided its own far more successful version - the exercise writes the poem and the classroom is the reality of exercise. If you don't like it, complain.

<Picture: Nicenet><Picture: Classroom Internet Assistant>red slider Wednesday, September 17, 1997 1:06AM CST
---------- Home
---------- Poetry Workshop

Class Conferencing

Link Sharing

Documents

Schedule

Class Roster

---------- Send a Personal Message

View Personal Messages

Edit Your User Info

Join a New Class

Create a Class

PROTECT YOUR PRIVACY:
LOG OUT

Class Conferencing

"Welcome to the new forum!" Conference:

POSTED BY: Alan DeNiro - 9/8/97
SUBJECT: Wow...
[Reply to Topic | Reply to Alan]

Well, folks, we'll see how this works itself out, as a test of, so to speak, the emergency broadcast system of taverner's koans.

POSTED BY: Alan DeNiro - 9/9/97
SUBJECT: sub
[Reply to Topic | Reply to Alan]

x x x x x x x x x x x x x x x x x x x

POSTED BY: red slider - 9/17/97

SUBJECT: um this seems fainly like...
[Reply to Topic | Reply to red]

ahhh yes a classroom - musty dank adrenal glandular first day papers names tiny windows out of which we stare waiting in lye vats of lab rats coated tongues bloated bodies lined on target tarmac waiting for jet teachers to arrive with briefcases chained to loan payment schedules poets ignite! Make my thumbs sweat, yeah, make 'em sweat.

Der hare professori - we wazza here anna you wazzana nowz youzza her anna we wazzana. Somma glass hey luigi! letza go bocci balla...sayonara. redanzo

---
POSTED BY: red slider - 9/17/97
SUBJECT: THIS IS A TEST OF THE ERMINAGENCY
[Reply to Topic | Reply to red]

BOARDCASTING CISTERN

(TESTING BROAD BAND SIMULATION OF IMMAMENT MONONUCLEOTIC POEMB ATTACK.....

Symphony

Your words between cement& sympathy chunks of private ceremonies ikebana for roses bitter tea in dirty glasses breaking through corrosive bands of salt dissolving hardened parts fusing in-testines fomaldyhide vapors of tears drum rolls in your belly slow tar beats on sticky practice pads to shut out neighbor's screams the world sky oozing meadows leaking from the side of your mouth

dry as violin resin flaking away the lips of your vagina speech less cracked& dry salt bands of colorless brick the mortician standing by; she has been probing the silence between your legs, your fame precedes you to this place your famous words flinging themselves into nights of drum rolls seamless as the petals of crushed frangipani your skin stretched over the stove of your body

I put a lamp inside to keep you warm to shine into the pale horrors of the world the dry skin stretched over frames lit from within hanging in the sun to dry your proteins still puddled on the gurney the guilt still dripping from her fingers her eyes of frightened jellyfish as I lean over

& bite your toe off below the purple tag

and taste the sweet salty tears hiding from probings into your useless body cavities

& tie it within the sash around my waste to hurry home to practice what you taught me about the timpani of trees while your toes fucked me in the tall leaves I pressed into blades of cement meadowgrass until quitting time and hurried home to find you there with a new work in one hand humming the second violins the other stirring my insides into swirls of Clara Schumann muffins your breath fumes bread-ethanol tongue rolls in imitation of oysters we will later funnel into each others mouths through leaking fingers stoppered with your slow-toed teasing

"later, patches, go stir your kettles. boil my blood into cloud gathers" watching from the studio as chain kettles affirm the meanings in second violins sustaining them offering them violincellos, then cellos then tremolo rising falling woman shading the clouds rolling overhead firming tossing boiling into full arpeggios with the muted end of tomorrow night's performance your hums muting into words over felt covers that you insert into my body in eighths against my quarters sixteenths against eighths thirty seconds sixty-fourths into polished moonstones of coda swirling on the end of my favorite felt-core rollerball resolving your form your tears your oysters leaking from my eyes your name under the fluorescent smear of last night's appetizers her thumbprint whorled in oyster dust her caught eyes following the trail of sash over blood lines leaking from the corner of my lips her smile in rubber smock

as I sign for your effects slipping my business card between her oyster-wet fingers smelling of you shedding the last tears onto the tile floor my smile leaking your tears your inviolability to hurry home to feel your rising hum your bread your oyster toe inside of me drinking from the well felt of my belly your rhythms your words your fine sense of control you tender orchestrations your scorings for timpani your felt-covered toe thumping inside of me your calling me "patches."

to hurry home & slip into seamless bamboo.

.....) THIS HAS BEEN A TEST OF THE ERMINEGENTSY BARDGUEST HISTAMINE - IF THIS HAD BEEN A REEL AGENCY YOU'D BE PLOMBED BY NOW - sayonara.

---------- [Add NewTopic]

---------- .LOG OUT .

Nicenet is a volunteer organization of information professionals. Nicenet provides this forum free of charge. Information on this site is generated by the users. The views expressed are not necessarily those of Nicenet or its members.

Bug reports should be directed to [redacted].
Sponsorship information requests should be directed to [redacted].
Problems with the ICA should be directed to [redacted].
General questions should be directed to [redacted].

Server space for Nicenet is graciously donated by The Searle Center for Teaching Excellence.
Nicenet is powered by Allaire's Cold Fusion.

All material copyright 1996 by Nicenet.

and red slider is a production of lunatic poets incorpselated, a subsidiary of millennial millinaries, distributed by Spent Fuel-rods Detox and Home Appliances Center Proud Sponsors of Food-Additives-for-a-Hungry-Planet Missions - Calcuta, Rangoon, Bankok, Biloxi & Buffalo Ltd.

↑ Index

270. Hugh Steinberg
Re: more exercise
Wed 17 Sep 1997

I tend to agree with both sides in this debate, that exercises are useful and can lead to good or even great poems, and that poetry at heart is mysterious, without recipes, maps or a decent set of directions, driven by intuition, wisdom, and sweat.

But amidst the handwringing, I'd like to point that poetry is also, well, fun, and that a poem can be pleasurable no matter what its origins.

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

271. Peter Ganick
announce POTEPOETZINEFOUR
Wed 17 Sep 1997

POTEPOETZINEFOUR, the women's writing issue of POTEPOETZINE, will be sent out this afternoon eastern daylight time---- for a free copy, send your email address to:
[redacted] --- to see previous issues of POTEPOETZINE, go to:
http://www.ims.csuohio.edu/va/VAIntro.html --- intructions for submitting poetry will be included in the issue----

↑ Index

272. henry g
ashbery/theroux article
Wed 17 Sep 1997

I missed the original talk about the Theroux review(?) essay(?) on Ashbery & someone's been bugging me about it - can anyone please backchannel where/ when it was published, or if it's online? Thanks - Henry [redacted]

↑ Index

273. Rebecca Reynolds
Re: living exercises
Wed 17 Sep 1997

> Auden and any number of poets likely detested by many on this List have uttered similar apothegms. The serious disagreement concerns the originality or radicalness of the restraint, not its presence.

Is Auden detested by many on this list? At times, I don't know what to think (but I have been sitting alone with my thoughts -- and am weak --)

rreynolds

without hymns

↑ Index

274. Mark W Scroggins
Re: living exercises
Wed 17 Sep 1997

No doubt Auden is more often detested than read... what, me cynical?
Mark Scroggins

On Wed, 17 Sep 1997, Rebecca Reynolds wrote:

> Auden and any number of poets likely detested by many > on this List have uttered similar apothegms. The serious disagreement > concerns the originality or radicalness of the restraint, not its presence.
>
> Is Auden detested by many on this list? At times, I don't know what > to think (but I have been sitting alone with my thoughts -- and am weak --)
>
> rreynolds
>
> without > hymns

↑ Index

275. aerialedge
New Mark Wallace & special offer from Edge Books
Wed 17 Sep 1997

3 new Edge books for $15! See end of post.

Announcing publication of

Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn't There by Mark Wallace

If Mark Wallace did the comedy circuit, all that big hair and those sweet drinks would riot in the streets. _Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn't There_ is a series of one to six line stanzas all revamping the idea of the one-liner. But the joke is always frightening, a world where the 2x4s pounding the cat are hitting our heads and they hurt damn it, as they always make us stop and consider what we are. He is the existential joker: if Batman met the poet and it was for real. --Juliana Spahr

Mark Wallace's poetry is joyous, gloomy, frisky, reflective and vulnerable to a sense of the living world that he never tried to master, but to inhabit as a kind of sad old citizen, a belonger filled with longing. He loves the daily tunes, the ring of contemporary coinage, flashes of wry and sardonic humor, the lover's chagrin-- for the sake of the human conditions they are immediacies of, but it is a music of heaven and hell he listens for in it all. The structure of identity is exploded in the form of a three-dimensional literary method in which the borders of personality, of self and nonself, are simultaneous and conflicting modes of expression. Sometimes he takes off like a reasonable lecturer who suddenly becomes demented. He speaks great truths as casually as if they were lies. --Ron Silliman

This amazing deflection of repetitive aphorisms swirls and spirals in upon itself, fueled by the delusory aggrandizements of the insidious institutions we call contemporary existence. Wallace manages to capture what it's like to find oneself all dressed up with no place to go. This is no book for the squeamish. Buy it if you have nothing better to do. You don't. --Joe Ross

WARNING: The Surgeon General has determined that reading _Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn't There_ may harm your mental equilibrium, impede your ability to act as a cog, and imperil your most functional cliches. --Jefferson Hansen

OFFER: Get _Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn't There_ by Mark Wallace, _perhaps this is a rescue fantasy_ by Heather Fuller, and _Stepping Razor_ by A.L.Nielsen for $15, or any 2 for $10. E-mail us your order and address and we'll bill you or send your check payable to Aerial/Edge to POBox 25642, Washington, DC 20007. All three books are perfectbound, together they retail for $29.50. This offer good til October 5th. We must charge postage on orders outside of the US. Thanks.

↑ Index

276. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997

Re: QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS

Wed 17 Sep 1997

On Wed, 17 Sep 1997, Markus Foutu wrote:

> stop carping and go do your work
>
> markus

which very much made me think of a poem of mine:

PASSIONATE DISEASE

caught in the corner of my eye one nearly summer solstice day in the high sierras just before i crushed it beneath my shoe a cluster of blue flowers--as tiny as stars-- and i thought:

this deliberate planet

driving a hundred nights later autumn and a grinning, wanton cassiopeia presses agianst us as we hurry home: cassiopeia but not crabbed and scuttling cancer
and i think,
this arbitrary planet write for knowledge and desire are only momentary revelation wind without windmills assume that there is a predecessor of god and finish your work but don't dwell on it.

(September, 1996)

--ShaunAnne Tangney

↑ Index

277. Robert Archambeau

Auden

Wed 17 Sep 1997

> Is Auden detested by many on this list? At times, I don't know what to think Can't speak for anyone else, but I'm very keen on the early Auden, always have been. And he has some very strange & radical poetry -- The Orators, had it been written in 1990 and not 1930, could have been published by Sun & Moon. The problem many people have with Auden is that his most interesting work isn't his best known, at least not in America. He'd written most of the poetry I really care about in the Auden canon before he came to this country in 1940. But the young Auden was radical in form and in politics, engage, and witty into the bargain.

--
Robert Archambeau
Department of English
Lake Forest College
Lake Forest, IL 60045
http://www.lfc.edu/~archamb/

Time ere poems Time ere plighted troth
Nor forward glance nor backward gaze at signs none
 --Brian Coffey

↑ Index

278. Timothy Materer
James Merrill Discussion Forum
Wed 17 Sep 1997

If you would like to join a James Merrill internet discussion forum, please do so by sending the command: SUBSCRIBE JM-L Yourfirstname Yourlastname (in the body of the message, with nothing on the subject line) to: [redacted]. Or send a note to Tim Materer at [redacted] for more information. --"THIS FICTIVE SPACE WE HERE INHABIT IS / THE STOP TO TIME"

Timothy Materer, 228 Tate Hall, English Department
University of Missouri, Columbia MO 65211
http://www.missouri.edu/~engtim

↑ Index

279. aldon l. nielsen
(no subject)
Wed 17 Sep 1997

To: [redacted], [redacted] Subject: Re: audenesque

Poetry makes one thing happen.

↑ Index

280. hg
Re: living exercises
Wed 17 Sep 1997

But somewhere always, nowhere particularly unusual,
Almost anywhere in the landscape of water and houses,
His crying competing unsuccessfully with the cry
Of the traffic or the birds, is always standing

The one who needs you, that terrified
Imaginative child who only knows you
As what the uncles call a lie,
But knows he has to be the future and that only
The meek inherit the earth, and is neither Charming, successful, nor a crowd;
Alone among the noise and policies of summer,
His weeping climbs toward your life like a vocation.

- Auden, "Like a Vocation"

↑ Index

281. Stephen Cope
New Writing Series in San Diego
Wed 17 Sep 1997

For those of you in the San Diego area this Fall, here's the New Writing Series' schedule of events. Hope to see you there...

Stephen Cope

***

New Writing Series @ University of California, San Diego

Fall Schedule:

* Thursday, October 9: Luisa Futoransky

Born and raised in Buenas Aires, Luisa Futoransky has lived in Israel, Japan, Spain, and Italy, and currently resides in Paris, where she received the honors of the Chevelier des Arts et Lettres. Author of eight books, Futoransky's first book of poems in translation has just been published by Junction Press in San Diego.

* Wednesday, October 22: Fanny Howe

Internationally known poet and novelist Fanny Howe is the recipient of an NEA Award and a California Arts Council Fellowship. Her novel _Nod_ (from Sun & Moon Press) and her book of poems _One Crossed Out_ (from Greywolf Press) are both due out this Fall. She is Professor of Literature at UCSD.

* Wednesday, October 29: David Matlin

A poet and novelist, David Matlin's first novel, _How the Night is Divided_, was nominated for a National Book Circle Critics Award. His most recent work, _Vernooykill Creek_, is based on Matlin's expereinces teaching in one of the oldest Prison Education Programs in the nation.

* Wednesday, November 5: David Bromige

The author of 30 books of poetry, fiction, and song, and likened by Rochelle Owens to "a congenial terrorist equipped with a smart bomb," David Bromige has been the recipient of numerous awards, including a Gertrude Stein Award for Innovative Writing and the Poet Laureate Award from the University of California.

* Thursday, November 13: Adrian Castro

Born in Miami of Cuban and Dominican heritage, Adrain Castro writes out of a rhythmic, multi-lingual Afro-Carribean tradition. An accomplished performer as well as a writer, Castro's book _Cantos to Blood & Honey_ is forthcoming from Coach House Press.

* Thursday, November 20: Brenda Hillman

Brenda Hillman's most recent and most experimental book, _Loose Sugar_, is her fifth from Wesleyan University Press. In 1995, she edited _The Poetry of Emily Dickenson_ for Shambala Press. Her awards include a Guggenheim Fellowship, two Pushcart Prizes, and in 1993 she was a Pulitzer Prize Finalist.

***

All readings will be held at 4:30pm at the Performing Arts Space, Visual Arts Department, on the University of California, San Diego campus, with the exception of Adrian Castro's reading, which will be held at a location to be announced.

Events are free and open to the public.

↑ Index

282. William Slaughter
Mudlark
Wed 17 Sep 1997

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics
'never in and never out of print'

_____

New and On View
at http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

******

MUDLARK No. 7 (1997)

Only a Friend Can Know by Mike O'Connor

Poems and Translations on the Theme of _Chih-yin_

In Chinese the characters _chih_ and _yin_ in combination mean literally "to know the tone" or "the one who knows the tone or music." By extension, the term denotes "the one who understands or appreciates another's art"; thus, "the one who understands the mind and heart of another--a true friend."
from the Introduction

******

Poster No. 7 (1997)

"The Biggest Party Animal of Them All"
by Robert Sward

******

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

_____

[redacted]

↑ Index

283. Mark Baker
Re: living exercises
Thu 18 Sep 1997

"O what have you posted?" said reader to writer,
"POETICS' the place where no poet is dissed,
Hither's the bandwidth where banter is pleasant,
This is the List where Wystan's most missed."

"O do you imply," said queasy to quizzer,
"That Koch will deny his debt to the Face?
Didn't Auden tap Ashbery that year for the Yale?
That slur on our List is a shocking disgrace!"

Mark Baker

↑ Index

284. Markus Foutu
Re: QUESTION FOR TRUE POETS
Thu 18 Sep 1997

truely a lovely poem but I would push it here

writes

knowledge desires momentary revelation wind mills assume work & dwell warmest,

Foutu

↑ Index

285. Layne Russell
Re: more exercise
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Hugh Steinberg wrote:
>
> I tend to agree with both sides in this debate, that exercises are useful > and can lead to good or even great poems, and that poetry at heart is > mysterious, without recipes, maps or a decent set of directions, driven by > intuition, wisdom, and sweat.
>
> But amidst the handwringing, I'd like to point that poetry is also, well, > fun, and that a poem can be pleasurable no matter what its origins.
>
> Hugh Steinberg

bravo!

Layne

http://www.sonic.net/layne
"A Quiet Place" -- Poetry
http://www.sonic.net/layne/calendar.html
"Poets Leave Their Prints" -- Poetry Calendar

↑ Index

286. rob wilson
I had my chance and lost it
Thu 18 Sep 1997

In today's NYT Times, there is a highly uninformative piece called "The Howl of a Poet and Hist Generation" on some PBS special American Masters: The Life and Times of Allen Ginsberg (sounds like a criminal). Anyway, Gisberg is quoted as sayng, towards the end of his life (or that tv show), "I had my chance and lost it." Does anybody know the context of that remark? Is AG looking back on his poetic career as a failed project, or somethiing that swerved towards market banality or more devious forms of corruption. It seems a hard remark, full of pathos of a failed agon. Did he dfeel like it was all downhill from Howl to Randowm House jottings? Rob Wilson

↑ Index

287. Maria Damon
Re: living exercises
Thu 18 Sep 1997

At 9:53 PM -0700 9/17/97, Mark Baker wrote:
>"O what have you posted?" said reader to writer,
>"POETICS' the place where no poet is dissed,
>Hither's the bandwidth where banter is pleasant,
>This is the List where Wystan's most missed."
>
>"O do you imply," said queasy to quizzer,
>"That Koch will deny his debt to the Face?
>Didn't Auden tap Ashbery that year for the Yale?
>That slur on our List is a shocking disgrace!"
>
>
>Mark Baker

nice play, shakespeare!

↑ Index

288. jarnot
Re: I had my chance and lost it
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Re: Rob Wilson's question: That remark of Allen's is actually from a poem, the one that ends "Allen Ginsberg says don't follow my path to extinction." [i think it's called "After Lalon"?]. It must be in White Shroud. There's definitely a buddhist undertone to the statement "I had my chance and lost it", re: impermanence. It's actually kind of funny in that way. But also, i think it functions not as a comment on his own career (which i think he was pretty satisfied with) but as a comment on his role as a spokesperson, looking at the political and saying that in retrospect things could've been different. (even in terms of the route the left wing took toward the end of the 1960s). (which is also something that he talks about in the life and times video). lisa jarnot

> In today's NYT Times, there is a highly uninformative piece called "The Howl of a Poet and Hist Generation" on some PBS special American Masters: The Life and Times of Allen Ginsberg (sounds like a criminal). Anyway, Gisberg is quoted as sayng, towards the end of his life (or that tv show), "I had my chance and lost it." Does anybody know the context of that remark? Is AG looking back on his poetic career as a failed project, or somethiing that swerved towards market banality or more devious forms of corruption. It seems a hard remark, full of pathos of a failed agon. Did he dfeel like it was all downhill from Howl to Randowm House jottings? Rob Wilson

[redacted]
box 185/NY, NY 10009

↑ Index

289. ark E Peter
Re: I had my chance and lost it
Thu 18 Sep 1997

that line is from a poem called "After Lalon" and it is a funny/sad sort of retrospective of some of his life. there's a wonderful recording of it on "holy soul jelly roll" too.

mark

On Thu, 18 Sep 1997, rob wilson wrote:

> In today's NYT Times, there is a highly uninformative piece called "The Howl of a Poet and Hist Generation" on some PBS special American Masters: The Life and Times of Allen Ginsberg (sounds like a criminal). Anyway, Gisberg is quoted as sayng, towards the end of his life (or that tv show), "I had my chance and lost it." Does anybody know the context of that remark? Is AG looking back on his poetic career as a failed project, or somethiing that swerved towards market banality or more devious forms of corruption. It seems a hard remark, full of pathos of a failed agon. Did he dfeel like it was all downhill from Howl to Randowm House jottings? Rob Wilson

↑ Index

290. henry g
Re: I had my chance and lost it -Reply
Thu 18 Sep 1997

I thought maybe he do the Ez in different voices - Uncle Hen

↑ Index

291. Rachel Loden
writing exercises of the glib & laureled
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Auden lovers and loathers alike might be (at least slightly) amused by "Four Poems and a Funeral," a Christopher Hitchens piece, at:

http://www.salonmagazine.com:80/sept97/news/news970911.html

Included is this perfectly awful bit of a Ted Hughes poem about the Queen Mum, which begins:

> It was an eerie vision! The Land of the Lion!
> Each clear creature, crystal bright,
> Honey-lit with lion-light,
> All dreaming together the Dream of the Lion.

And ends:

> A Queen's life is hard. Yet a Queen reigns
> Over the dream of her people, or nowhere.

Rule Britannia!

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

292. Laura Mullen
Re: writing exercises
Thu 18 Sep 1997

I'm coming in late to this so maybe someone's already put in the plug for the latest issue of _Chain_: Procedures, proof that the writing experiment (and hey, what isn't?) is alive & well & kicking ass.

↑ Index

293. Jack Foley
I had my chance and lost it -Reply
Thu 18 Sep 1997

The line is in a poem whose name I don't recall, but it's on the fourth CD in the box set called Holy Soul Jelly Roll (I believe). The specific context is ambiguous and teasing -- Ginsberg does not spell out what he means -- his life as a port, his life as a man -- could be everything -- but the line is delivered with stunning conviction ... as well as humor. -- JR Foley

>>> rob wilson <[redacted]> 09/18/97 07:13am >>>
In today's NYT Times, there is a highly uninformative piece called "The Howl of a Poet and Hist Generation" on some PBS special American Masters: The Life and Times of Allen Ginsberg (sounds like a criminal). Anyway, Gisberg is quoted as sayng, towards the end of his life (or that tv show), "I had my chance and lost it." Does anybody know the context of that remark? Is AG looking back on his poetic career as a failed project, or somethiing that swerved towards market banality or more devious forms of corruption. It seems a hard remark, full of pathos of a failed agon. Did he dfeel like it was all downhill from Howl to Randowm House jottings?
Rob Wilson

↑ Index

294. Mark W Scroggins
Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Rachel-- that Hughes piece is indeed dreadful! Ted seems to be following in the footsteps of such other outstanding poet laureates as Nahum Tate and company. Does anyone know any books or articles on the effects of official laureatehood on poets' work? Richard Helgerson's _Self-Crowned Laureates_ is great on Jonson, Spenser, & Milton, but his point is precisely that they seized or assumed a laureate-like position themselves; something creepy seems to happen when a poet gets officially appointed. Mark

On Thu, 18 Sep 1997, Rachel Loden wrote:

> Auden lovers and loathers alike might be (at least slightly) amused by "Four Poems and a Funeral," a Christopher Hitchens piece, at:
>
> http://www.salonmagazine.com:80/sept97/news/news970911.html
>
> Included is this perfectly awful bit of a Ted Hughes poem about the Queen Mum, which begins:

> It was an eerie vision! The Land of the Lion!
> Each clear creature, crystal bright,
> Honey-lit with lion-light,
> All dreaming together the Dream of the Lion.
>
> And ends:
>
> A Queen's life is hard. Yet a Queen reigns
> Over the dream of her people, or nowhere.
>
> Rule Britannia!
>
> Rachel Loden

↑ Index

295. Gwyn McVay
Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
Thu 18 Sep 1997

>>>It was an eerie vision! The Land of the Lion!
Each clear creature, crystal bright,
Honey-lit with lion-light,
All dreaming together the Dream of the Lion.

Rachel, except for the hackneyed b/b rhyme, are you quite positive this isn't late Ginsberg? No, he wouldn't have used "eerie." And all of this would have been run up in one line. Never mind.

Gwyn, musing

↑ Index

296. rsillima
Yo, Susan Clark!!
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Susan,

Will you backchannel me your "correct" email address. Your "spam protector" completely hides any reply address, even one I could subtract the "nospam" from.

And, no, I don't live on Biddle Road anymore.

Ron

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road

Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

297. Burt Kimmelman

Ginsberg a la N Y Times

Thu 18 Sep 1997

From: ADMIN::FUNKHOUSER 18-SEP-1997 10:07:01.90
To: ADMIN::KIMMELMAN
CC:
Subj: RE: fyi

I believe the poem is called "Ode to Failure" but I could be mistake.

Let me check.

AH!

I was wrong. The quote is from section VI of AG's poem
"After Lalon" which appears in Cosmopolitan Greetings (p 81) feel free to forward it to the list...

-funk

↑ Index

298. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher

Re: writing exercises

Thu 18 Sep 1997

---

laura, a few folks have mentioned the current issue of _chain_, but hey yeah---why not say it again (and again): in my view, one of the most interesting mags out there!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

299. Lawrence Upton.
Fw: Compuserve
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Thanks to all who have contacted with good will and similar stories of > difficulty with internet service providers. I know this isn't to do with > poetry but it is to do with how we talk to each other and will become > increasingly relevant to all of us I believe. So one last - I hope - > chapter.
>
> As I understand it Compuserve still claim not to understand what I want
and > say they are keeping my account open. Two days ago, the amount of email > finally choked my mail box but until then it seemed I wasnt replying to > people. Meanwhile they made no further attempt to correct the bug in the > system. So they were charging me for nothing.
>
> My card co just phoned. They had read through all the correspondence and > had no trouble saying that they support me. They are dishonouring the > deductions previously made - i.e. taking the money back - and writing to > the HQ of Compuserve. So it can be done if you don't let them steam-roller you.... L
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

300. David Kellogg
Chain
Thu 18 Sep 1997

I also must say a good word about this issue. My own little contribution to it is nothing, outclassed on page after exciting page. Bizarrely, mine wasn't the only piece composed through a reading of Descartes's _Discourse on Method_. (!)

Everyone subscribe!

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

[redacted] Durham, NC 27708
FAX [redacted] http://www.duke.edu/~kellogg/

There is no mantle
and it does not descend.

-- Thomas Kinsella

↑ Index

301. mark weiss
Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Few poets laureate have been the best of their generation--most, in fact, have been more like Tate or Prior, in a word, hacks. So they didn't have far to fall. And Wordsworth had lost the flame long before he got the royal nod. Dryden, on the other hand, did almost all his best work while in office. Hughes probably does better work after hours, but he's never been such a much himself.

At 11:32 AM 9/18/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Rachel--
>that Hughes piece is indeed dreadful! Ted seems to be following in the >footsteps of such other outstanding poet laureates as Nahum Tate and >company. Does anyone know any books or articles on the effects of >official laureatehood on poets' work? Richard Helgerson's _Self-Crowned >Laureates_ is great on Jonson, Spenser, & Milton, but his point is >precisely that they seized or assumed a laureate-like position themselves;
>something creepy seems to happen when a poet gets officially appointed.
>Mark
>
>On Thu, 18 Sep 1997, Rachel Loden wrote:
>
>> Auden lovers and loathers alike might be (at least slightly) amused by >> "Four Poems and a Funeral," a Christopher Hitchens piece, at:
>>
>> http://www.salonmagazine.com:80/sept97/news/news970911.html
>>
>> Included is this perfectly awful bit of a Ted Hughes poem about the >> Queen Mum, which begins:
>>
>> It was an eerie vision! The Land of the Lion!
>> Each clear creature, crystal bright,
>> Honey-lit with lion-light,
>> All dreaming together the Dream of the Lion.

>>
>> And ends:
>>
>> A Queen's life is hard. Yet a Queen reigns
>> Over the dream of her people, or nowhere.
>>
>> Rule Britannia!
>>
>> Rachel Loden
>>
>
>

↑ Index

302. red slider

Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled

Thu 18 Sep 1997

...

something creepy seems to happen when a poet gets officially appointed. Mark yes, strangely counterpoised to post-nobels, supreme court appointments and other high-rollers casting ballast and rising into the statusphere and outta sight. Perhaps the laureate balloons already had too much gas? red

On Thu, 18 Sep 1997, Rachel Loden wrote:

> Auden lovers and loathers alike might be (at least slightly) amused by "Four Poems and a Funeral," a Christopher Hitchens piece, at:
>
> http://www.salonmagazine.com:80/sept97/news/news970911.html
>
> Included is this perfectly awful bit of a Ted Hughes poem about the Queen Mum, which begins:
>
> It was an eerie vision! The Land of the Lion!
> Each clear creature, crystal bright,
> Honey-lit with lion-light,
> All dreaming together the Dream of the Lion.
>
> And ends:
>
> A Queen's life is hard. Yet a Queen reigns
> Over the dream of her people, or nowhere.
>
> Rule Britannia!

> Rachel Loden

↑ Index

303. p. durgin
Re: Chain
Thu 18 Sep 1997

Mr. Kellogg et. al.

I guess I must have missed it initially
But how does one subscribe? Info anyone?

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Thu, 18 Sep 1997, David Kellogg wrote:

> I also must say a good word about this issue. My own little contribution to it is nothing, outclassed on page after exciting page. Bizarrely, mine wasn't the only piece composed through a reading of Descartes's _Discourse on Method_. (!)
>
> Everyone subscribe!
>
> Cheers,
> David
> *~~~

>> I tend to agree with both sides in this debate, that exercises are useful
>> and can lead to good or even great poems, and that poetry at heart is >> mysterious, without recipes, maps or a decent set of directions, driven by >> intuition, wisdom, and sweat.
>>
>> But amidst the handwringing, I'd like to point that poetry is also, well, >> fun, and that a poem can be pleasurable no matter what its origins.
>>
>> Hugh Steinberg
>
>bravo!
>
>Layne

i 2nd that m-ocean.

↑ Index

305. Maria Damon
Re: Chain
Thu 18 Sep 1997

At 1:55 PM -0400 9/18/97, David Kellogg wrote:
>I also must say a good word about this issue. My own little contribution >to it is nothing, outclassed on page after exciting page. Bizarrely, mine >wasn't the only piece composed through a reading of Descartes's _Discourse >on Method_. (!)
>
>Everyone subscribe!
>
>Cheers,
>David

ditto. it's humbling to be included w/ so much coolness.

↑ Index

306. Christopher Alexander
Re: Chain rxn
Thu 18 Sep 1997

---

p. durgin asks (of Chain):

> I guess I must have missed it initially
> But how does one subscribe? Info anyone?

I don't have a copy to hand (I'm, as we say, "at work"), but a quick look into my magickal mirror, oops, I mean the poetics archive (@ http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html), reveals the following from Juliana Spahr <[redacted]>:

> $20 for two issues
> $12 for Chain / 5 on different languages
> $10 for Chain / 4 on process and procedures
>
> Free copy of the Lab Book upon request with a two issue subscription as long as supplies last.
>
> Email orders are accepted.
>
> Chain
> 3029 Lowrey Avenue, no. A-1102
> Honolulu, HI 96822
>
> Please make checks payable to Chain.

hey!! it's a great periodical, & they need the kale. btw, the Lab Book is very damn'd nice to have in the bargain—good work by yr fellows & some fellow listees.

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

307. Alan Jen Sondheim
(no subject)
Thu 18 Sep 1997

-

This is for you.
This is working its way to you, this is coming to you, in spite of everyone.
This is for you, and you alone. This is private; you'll understand and no one else will.
I've given up my face. I have no face any more.
I have wood, stone, and cotton. I sparkle. I am fierce, beneath cotton, stone, and wood.

This is the gift I can give you.
This is for you.

↑ Index

308. Wystan Curnow
Re: living exercises
Thu 18 Sep 1997

As On Kawara is wont to say, I am still alive,
and on the List,
    Wystan

↑ Index

309. Mark Baker
Re: living exercises
Thu 18 Sep 1997

And the defunct Wystan was wont to say he would be very, very angry to meet another with his name.

"...abhorred in the Heav'ns are all self-proclaimed poets who, to wow an audience, utter some resonant lie."

--Wystan, "Ode to Terminus"

Mark Baker

On Fri, 19 Sep 1997, Wystan Curnow wrote:

> As On Kawara is wont to say, I am still alive,
> and on the List,
> *   Wystan*

↑ Index

310. Maria Damon
(no subject)
Thu 18 Sep 1997

At 5:40 PM -0400 9/18/97, Alan Jen Sondheim wrote:
>-
>
>
>

>
>This is for you.
>This is working its way to you, this is coming to you, in spite of >everyone.
>This is for you, and you alone. This is private; you'll understand and no >one else will.
>I've given up my face. I have no face any more.
>I have wood, stone, and cotton. I sparkle. I am fierce, beneath >cotton, stone, and wood.
>This is the gift I can give you.
>This is for you.

oo lala, alan, yr so cool

↑ Index

311. Rachel Loden

Re: writing exercises of the glib & laureled

Fri 19 Sep 1997

Hmm, I do think there may be a wisp of AG's ghost wherever exclamation points wax ecstatic, but what I keep hearing, unfortunately, is "A Queen's life is hard" set to music, something like Gilbert & Sullivan's "A Policeman's Lot is Not a Happy One."

Rachel

Gwyn McVay wrote:
>
> >>>It was an eerie vision! The Land of the Lion!
> Each clear creature, crystal bright,
> Honey-lit with lion-light,
> All dreaming together the Dream of the Lion.
>
> Rachel, except for the hackneyed b/b rhyme, are you quite positive this > isn't late Ginsberg? No, he wouldn't have used "eerie." And all of this > would have been run up in one line. Never mind.
>
> Gwyn, musing

↑ Index

312. Jim Rosenberg
Re: Writing experiments
Fri 19 Sep 1997

Robert Drake:
> mention of Oulipo reminds me to mention a newish book i picked > up last week in toronto: _Oulipo Laboratoy_ (Atlas Press, London > 1995) featuring works by Queneau, Calvino, Fournel, Berge, Jouet > & Mathews...

The most amazing Oulipo resource I know of is a THREE VOLUME _La Bibliotheque Oulipienne_ [apologies for omitted accents ...]. The publisher is Seghers, I'm showing an ISBN of 2-232-10308-0 for volume 1. This is in French, of course. For anyone truly interested in Oulipo, these volumes are a must-have. I'm not sure where one orders such things, I just found them sitting on the shelf the last time I was at a bookstore in Paris. (Amazon.com doesn't seem to have them; I just tried that ISBN at Amazon.com and came up empty.) Pierre?

Jim Rosenberg http://www.well.com/user/jer/
CIS: 71515,124
WELL: jer
Internet: [redacted]

↑ Index

313. aldon l. nielsen
(no subject)
Fri 19 Sep 1997

To: [redacted]
Subject: in which will be found what is set forth therein

1. September 16 Village Voice has a letter from JACKSON MACLOW responding to Kyle Gann's memorial to Conlon Nancarrow, published the preceding week. In answer to MacLow's question, Gann reports that Nancarrow was a friend of George Oppen's in Mexico -- There's a friendship I'd like to read more about -- Anybody have any info.?

2. Same issue includes notice of a new Lou Harrison CD that includes poetry along with his compositions in music. The CD is titled _Rapunzel and Other Works, and has been released by New Albion. The poems on the recording are read by Harrison.

3. SAME issue also includes first review I've seen of Don DeLillo's BIG new novel -- since I've managed to get through MASON & DIXON, I'll try to fit this one into my luggage soon.

4. -- Re: That PBS showing of THE LIFE AND TIMES OF AG -- Listophiles should be alerted to the fact that PBS is airing a much truncated version of Jerry Aronson's film -- the longer version is available on video tape at SOME rental outlets and stores -- has some unusual footage, including Ginsberg family home movies --

↑ Index

314. Herb Levy

Re: Nancarrow/Oppen: great companions or mere pals?

Fri 19 Sep 1997

Aldon Nielsen wrote:

> 1. September 16 Village Voice has a letter from JACKSON MACLOW responding to Kyle Gann's memorial to Conlon Nancarrow, published the preceding week. In answer to MacLow's question, Gann reports that Nancarrow was a friend of George Oppen's in Mexico -- There's a friendship I'd like to read more about -- Anybody have any info.?

There is a brief mention in the biographical section of Gann's very good (and probably not too technical for non-musicians) book on Nancarrow's music of Oppen supplying composer/radio producer Charles Amirkhanian with Nancarrow's telephone number but that's it.

I cant' find my copy right now, but I'm pretty sure that I would have noticed a mention of Nancarrow in Mary Oppen's memoir.

Nancarrow and the Oppens certainly shared similar politics (Nancarrow left the States for Mexico after fighting in the Abraham Lincoln Brigades during the Spanish Civil War - he couldn't get a passport and was concerned about his leftist leanings causing trouble if he stayed in the US).

Nancarrow was pretty private about most things, I doubt there'll be more published on this from the music world, but I'll check with Kyle & see if he has any other info.

> 3. SAME issue also includes first review I've seen of Don DeLillo's BIG new novel -- since I've managed to get through MASON & DIXON, I'll try to fit this one into my luggage soon.

Yeah, & they call DeLillo something like the greatest living writer of sentences.

If I hadn't read the headline, I'd have thought the complete Alphabet had been published without Ron announcing it to the poetics list.

Herb Levy

[redacted]

↑ Index

315. aerialedge
Re: Noncarrow and Oppen
Fri 19 Sep 1997

Don't think there's that much to be known. They were friends while Oppen was in Mexico City-- however after Oppen went back to the states he didn't keep in touch w/ Noncarrow. I have a memory of reading somewhere that Nancarrow was puzzled &/or hurt by this-- but likely it was a reflection of Oppen's feeling about his time there generally, his need to put all that behind him. He didn't even pick up Spanish, unsusual for a stay of that length. Again, to qualify-- this also possibly a reflection of his reasons for being there-- the political ostracism & other difficulties attended that. Rachel D or Peter Q if they're out there would have more to say of use than this "knowledge" I'm volunteering.

--Rod

↑ Index

316. simon polish poets
Fri 19 Sep 1997

From: IPFW::SIMON 19-SEP-1997 16:47:01.00
To: MX%"[redacted]"
CC: SIMON
Subj: polish poets

Dear List,

A student recently returned from a summer in Poland. He is on fire to read/know (fairly) contemporary Polish poetry/Polish poets.

Other than the Nobel obvious, I confess ignorance. What's available in translation becomes crucial. Who/what do you recommend that's translated into either English or German?

bckchannel to [redacted]

thanks,

beth simon

↑ Index

317. Burt Kimmelman
Noncarrow and Oppen
Fri 19 Sep 1997

Yes I too would love to hear more about Noncarrow and Oppen etc.

↑ Index

318. Stephen Cope
Re: Noncarrow and Oppen
Fri 19 Sep 1997

I'm not really aware of this friendship, although it's certainly not surprising. Is there any references that one could offer? There's nothing I recall in Mary Oppen's book about Nancarrow, although the years in exile aren't broached in too much depth there. I've found nothing (yet) in the working papers that suggests a freindship with or otherwise mentions Nancarrow, although it's fairly safe to say that the majority of Oppen's papers were produced after his return to the states (there are a few pages w/ Oppen's address in Mexico at the top, but even these provide little certainty re: dating or location, as it appears that he often used a given page as a kind of worksheet for thought, which he would return to, revise, etc. over often a period of years).

As for Oppen & Mexico: Oppen's leaving Mexico and returning to poetry and to the States had very much to do with a kind of political dissatisfaction. As he puts it in the interview with Burt Hatlen and Tom Mandel: "Rome had recently burned, so there was no reason not to fiddle." Obviously, the party at that point offered little room for the kind of thing Oppen was concerned with in poetry, and he was very careful to keep the two relatively seperate. I'd be hesitant, however, to say that Oppen wanted to put everything in Mexico behind him. He does in the papers refer to some acquaintances and/or experiences from that period, and that he returned after-the-fact to some of his jottings from Mexico (they aren't really poems) suggests a desire to come to terms with that moment.

I think Oppen's relative reticence about those years, in any case, had mostly to do with what he saw as their irrelevance to his poetry. His fondness for quoting Kenner's observation that it essentially took him "25 years to write the next poem" suggests that he saw some validity in the statement. He simply wasn't writing poetry, and so perhaps didn't see those years as essential to his development as a poet.

On this latter, Tom Mandel might have some to say (see his letter in follwing the Hatlen/Mandel interview in "Man and Poet").

OK, apologies for being a bit off topic...

Stephen Cope

> Don't think there's that much to be known. They were friends while Oppen was in Mexico City-- however after Oppen went back to the states he didn't keep in touch w/ Noncarrow. I have a memory of reading somewhere that Nancarrow was puzzled &/or hurt by this-- but likely it was a reflection of Oppen's feeling about his time there generally, his need to put all that behind him. He didn't even pick up Spanish, unusual for a stay of that length. Again, to qualify-- this also possibly a reflection of his reasons for being there-- the political ostracism & other difficulties attended that. Rachel D or Peter Q if they're out there would have more to say of use than this "knowledge" I'm volunteering.
>
> --Rod

↑ Index

319. rsillima

Oppen, Nancarrow, Mexico

Sat 20 Sep 1997

Stephen,

Rachel would know much more about all this than I do. But. George and Mary used to speak of Nancarrow as a friend (whereas, Fred Cody, who founded the bookstore in Berkeley, was simply a guy they shared a ride with as they returned to the US from Mexico City).

Mary once told me that they left for Mexico as a direct result (and perhaps the same week as) the arrest of the Rosenbergs. George was not able to return to the US, as I understand it, until his sister June was able to clear it with the state department that they would not be arrested on their return. June was a major political donor for many decades, one of the major contributors to Mondale, for example. (All this has a very different tone these days of course. And June was a connected Democrat who got this done during a Republican presidency.)

I very much got the impression that neither George or Mary particularly cared for Mexico City, certainly never thought of it as home, and very much had a sense of "exile" the entire time they were there.

Ron

Date: Fri, 19 Sep 1997 18:09:13 -0700
From: Stephen Cope <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Noncarrow and Oppen

I'm not really aware of this friendship, although it's certainly not surprising. Is there any references that one could offer? There's nothing I recall in Mary Oppen's book about Nancarrow, although the years in exile aren't broached in too much depth there. I've found nothing (yet) in the working papers that suggests a freindship with or otherwise mentions Nancarrow, although it's fairly safe to say that the majority of Oppen's papers were produced after his return to the states (there are a few pages w/ Oppen's address in Mexico at the top, but even these provide little certainty re: dating or location, as it appears that he often used a given page as a kind of worksheet for thought, which he would return to, revise, etc. over often a period of years).

As for Oppen & Mexico: Oppen's leaving Mexico and returning to poetry and to the States had very much to do with a kind of political dissatisfaction. As he puts it in the interview with Burt Hatlen and Tom Mandel: "Rome had recently burned, so there was no reason not to fiddle." Obviously, the party at that point offered little room for the kind of thing Oppen was concerned with in poetry, and he was very careful to keep the two relatively seperate. I'd be hesitant, however, to say that Oppen wanted to put everything in Mexico behind him. He does in the papers refer to some acquaintances and/or experiences from that period, and that he returned after-the-fact to some of his jottings from Mexico (they aren't really poems) suggests a desire to come to terms with that moment.

I think Oppen's relative reticence about those years, in any case, had mostly to do with what he saw as their irrelevance to his poetry. His fondness for quoting Kenner's observation that it essentially took him "25 years to write the next poem" suggests that he saw some validity in the statement. He simply wasn't writing poetry, and so perhaps didn't see those years as essential to his development as a poet.

On this latter, Tom Mandel might have some to say (see his letter in follwing the Hatlen/Mandel interview in "Man and Poet").

OK, apologies for being a bit off topic...

Stephen Cope

>Don't think there's that much to be known. They were friends while Oppen was >in Mexico City-- however after Oppen went back to the states he didn't keep >in touch w/ Noncarrow. I have a memory of reading somewhere that Nancarrow >was puzzled &/or hurt by this-- but likely it was a reflection of Oppen's >feeling about his time there generally, his need to put all that behind him.
>He didn't even pick up Spanish, unsusual for a stay of that length. Again, to >qualify-- this also possibly a reflection of his reasons for being there-- >the political ostracism & other difficulties attended that. Rachel D or Peter

>Q if they're out there would have more to say of use than this "knowledge"
>I'm volunteering.
>
>--Rod

End of POETICS Digest - 18 Sep 1997 to 19 Sep 1997
****

------End forward message----------

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road
Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

320. Michael Heller
Oppen/Nancarrow
Sat 20 Sep 1997

I don't know if this information is useful to scholars/poets, but sometime in the late eighties, after George died, I was visiting Mary Oppen in Berkeley (actually Albany), and we had lunch with Nancarrow and his wife who had come back to scout out a school for a child of theirs, a daughter I believe. The memory is a bit hazy, and my notes on the visit are buried somewhere.

At the time, I had neither heard of him or his music, and later, after our lunch, Mary played some of his extraordinary music for me.

↑ Index

321. Herb Levy
Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Sat 20 Sep 1997

As always, I await some other Seattleite to start giving fashion reports, attendance records, etc. on the reading scene in Seattle (for that matter what happened to Steven Carll's often entertaining or informative reports on SF readings), but I do want to briefly say that Subtext's Thursday reading was really great. David Bromige & Robin Blaser were in fine form, David reading all previously unpublished (in paper form, at least, one or two pieces having been posted to this here list) work & Robin read recent work as well as from the new Dante piece.

I was wondering, though, and thought to bring it up to this august group, does anyone know if there's any truth to the rumor I overheard this weekend that Wallace Stevens did NOT write the poems published under his name.. That, rather, his wife wrote them, and that was one of the reasons why guests at the Stevens' home were never introduced to her?

Any feminist critics that have any insights on this? Is Peter Quartermain still reading the list?

For that matter, when I was up in Vancouver a week ago or so, I didn't look at the vile-sounding "reader's edition" of Joyce's Ulysses, those it was prominently displayed in the window of Duthie's downtown. This book won't be available in the US til some time in 1998. Could some Canadian (is it available in the UK yet?) confirm (or deny) that this text does not end with "Yes I said Yes I will Yes" but rather adds the words "said Molly before turning over and falling into a dreamless sleep."

Just thought I should check on these things. Not being an active part of an academic community, I sometimes miss out on the current research til it's on NPR or something.

Bests,

Herb

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

322. Jennifer Ashton
Gertrude Stein's Rose
Sat 20 Sep 1997

Dear subscribers,

I know that Stein's famous line "Rose is a rose is a rose is a rose" first appeared in "Sacred Emily" (1913) and cropped up in later works as well. Unfortunately, I have no easy way to scan through my Stein books for the later uses of the line & would like to be able to get to them more easily. I would be grateful if anyone knows offhand (without troubling to search, that is) which works contain it, apart from _The World Is Round_, of which I am already aware. I am interested not just in uses of the line in literary texts, but in Stein's own explications of it in lectures and essays or either of the autobiographys. (I am aware of her discussions in _Lectures in America_ and _Narration_, so I don't need those references.) Editions & page numbers, or even approximate locations within chapters would be extremely useful.

Also, I remember seeing reproduced in some edition either of Stein's work or about her a graphic image of the rose around which the line made a circle. I think this was something she had printed up for stationery. If anyone knows of any text where I could find this image, I'd be grateful for that as well. Please copy any replies to me via backchannel. Many thanks in advance.

Jennifer Ashton
Johns Hopkins University
[redacted]

↑ Index

323. Peter Ganick concerning mail art
Sat 20 Sep 1997

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

(Netscape Mail Server v2.02) with ESMTP id AAA4362
for <[redacted]>;
Sat, 20 Sep 1997 08:40:43 -0700
(Netscape Mail Server v2.02) with ESMTP id AAA18032
for <[redacted]>; Sat, 20 Sep 1997 08:35:15 -0700 by mx1.home.com (8.8.5/8.8.5-AtHome) with ESMTP id IAA24583 for <[redacted]>; Sat, 20 Sep 1997 08:40:39 -0700 (PDT)
Date: Sat, 20 Sep 1997 23:10:18 -0300
To: [redacted]
From: Clemente Padin <[redacted]>

Thank you, Peter. If you can please, pass on this call for submission in Mail art, thanks in advance:

STOP
Freedom / Diversity / Pluralism
in the creation and teaching of Art

During many years in Latinoamerican and Chile the art has tolerated the manipulation of totalitarian ideologies and models of production that no agreed with inherent freedom of the creation and artistic teaching.
We are asking your participation sending critical artworks against cultural politics that impose only models of art for to legitimaze the stablishment, i. e.,in order to satisfy the ideological neccesities of maintaining an ideal world without contradictions, burying under a cover of banalized signs the injust and inhuman social reality.

Any medium, no returns, no jury. Exhibition in February´98 at the Art Dept.
of the University of Chile.
Deadline : 30th January, 1998
Send to : Art Dept.,University of Chile
Dr. Humberto Nilo Saavedra
Calama Nro. 8435
La Cisterna, Santiago
CHILE

Fraternal greetings,
Clemente Padin
C.Correo Central 1211
11000 Montevideo
URUGUAY Fax (598) 2 95 94 17

----------E66C9B3FE4D6E2B4B479377D--

↑ Index

324. Steven Marks
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Sat 20 Sep 1997

On Sat, 20 Sep 1997, Herb Levy wrote:

> For that matter, when I was up in Vancouver a week ago or so, I didn't look > at the vile-sounding "reader's edition" of Joyce's Ulysses, those it was > prominently displayed in the window of Duthie's downtown. This book won't > be available in the US til some time in 1998. Could some Canadian (is it > available in the UK yet?) confirm (or deny) that this text does not end > with "Yes I said Yes I will Yes" but rather adds the words "said Molly > before turning over and falling into a dreamless sleep."
>
The Sept. 25 issue of New York Review has an article about this Ulysses.
although taken to task on a number of other emendations, nowhere is mention made of the instance you cite above. Hard to figure out what Danis Rose was up to in his "reader's edition" with some of his changes, but then I'm always suspicious of what the NYR has to say. John Kidd, the author of the review, is founding director of the James Joyce Research Centre at Boston Univ. I'm no Joyce scholar, so I don't know if he's nitpicking, adverse to new "readings," or right on the mark. I'm a big help, aren't I?

best,
Steven

Steven Marks

http://members.aol.com/swmarks/welcome.html

↑ Index

325. Burt Kimmelman
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Sat 20 Sep 1997

everything i hear about the new "reader's edition" of the joyce is horrible--and virtually everyone, i think, who are members of the societry for textual scholarship would concur with this. no, never mind "virtually"; make that simply "everyone." burt kimmelman

↑ Index

326. David R. Israel
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Sun 21 Sep 1997

Herb Levy writes,

> . . . . . does anyone know if there's any truth to the rumor I overheard this weekend that Wallace Stevens did NOT write the poems published under his name.. That, rather, his wife wrote them, and that was one of the reasons why guests at the Stevens' home were never introduced to her?

such an allegation, if true, would make small fry of recent unplesantnesses in the plagarism department, seems.

Had certainly never heard of this -- but maybe I'd be the last to know. The idea, anyway, finds nice resonance in the plot of Kieslawski's film BLUE (in which a famous modernist-ish [well, neo-romantic] composer's work was, evidently, done by his wife -- or at least that's one reading of the story).

I'll admit to considerable scepticism re: this scandalous rumor; but whether or not it were true anent Wally, I a little bit wonder how well known -- and for how long -- this has been extant qua rumor. Even wonder if Kieslawski's plot were possibly based on the Stevens scandal as such (if such it be ???).

await further word from the wise,
d.i.

```
.
.....
............
\\\
```

I don't much remember the interview Burt and I did with George, except that I asked him straightforwardly what it said about poetry and his relation to it, and what it said to poetry, that he'd left it aside all those years. To this he responded, if I remember right, by quoting Kenner (on himself!). It was not responsive.

It's very worth noting that Oppen was not in great shape mentally by the time of this interview. There was an immediately sensible limit to the attention he could give our questions. I knew George and Mary pretty well for some years from the late seventies on. I well remember Mary taking me aside to wish that I'd known George when he was himself. Much of George's conversation was fascinating, and he was very alive in the present tense. But attention to his own past often took the conversation into an area of repeated remarks and stories.

His affirmation of Kenner's stitching should surely be seen in that light too.

I did and still do think Oppen's decades away from poetry are significant. I see no reason simply to explain them away. I'd be more interested in what anybody thinks the relation might be between that abandonment and the force of his return.

Tom

Tom Mandel [redacted]
****
Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
4031 University Dr. Suite 200 * vox: [redacted]
Fairfax, VA 22030-3409 * fax: [redacted]
****

Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

328. Steven Marks
Re: Oppen's years away
Sun 21 Sep 1997

On Sun, 21 Sep 1997, Tom Mandel wrote:

> I did and still do think Oppen's decades away from poetry are significant. I see no reason simply to explain them away. I'd be more interested in what anybody thinks the relation might be between that abandonment and the force of his return.

Speaking generally about a poet who might abandon and then return rather than Oppen specifically: some poets work in bursts of activity followed by long periods of quiet. Perhaps this is to fill up the well; perhaps boredom; perhaps other interests; perhaps the demands of making a living; perhaps illnesses; perhaps family problems and illnesses -- the list is, of course, endless..

As for the force of return: exhiliration from new praxes. But this list is endless, too.

in particular,
Steven

Steven Marks

http://members.aol.com/swmarks/welcome.html

↑ Index

329. William Marsh writing about writing
Sun 21 Sep 1997

Poetics Folks:

putting together a small packet for my cre wri class of what i'm loosely calling "writing about writing" / would greatly appreciate any suggestions for good samples (poems, stories), ie, Stevens' "Of Modern Poetry" / 20th century mostly / the shorter the better

thanks for responses

bill marsh

↑ Index

330. Stacie Slotnick
Re: writing about writing
Sun 21 Sep 1997

Bill: you might want to look at Grace Paley's story "A Conversation with My Father." The story is a good example of reader-based writing- Paley's narrator revises the story that she is telling several times for the sake of the "audience"- that is, the "father" character of the story. It's a great example of the work of revision, as well as an interesting way to look at the idea of "audience."

Stacie S.

↑ Index

331. Carl Lynden Peters
Re: writing about writing
Sun 21 Sep 1997

hi there bill!

> putting together a small packet for my cre wri class of what i'm loosely calling "writing about writing" / would greatly appreciate any suggestions for good samples (poems, stories), ie, Stevens' "Of Modern Poetry" / 20th century mostly / the shorter the better

bpNichol! (Everything!))

Wordsworth! "Tintern Abbey"

(are you going to anthologize it by nation, genre, etc.

oh this is too much!!

i wld put _Four Quartets_ there. and then go to the sapphires in the mud. and then next go to 'and the fire & the rose are one,' and ask: are they?

lemme know what you do, bill! c.!

↑ Index

332. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: writing about writing
Sun 21 Sep 1997

William Marsh wrote:
>
> Poetics Folks:
>
> putting together a small packet for my cre wri class of what i'm loosely > calling "writing about writing" / would greatly appreciate any suggestions > for good samples (poems, stories), ie, Stevens' "Of Modern Poetry" / 20th > century mostly / the shorter the better
>
> thanks for responses
>
> bill marsh

You might want to include selections from Jack Spicer's _The Heads of the Town up to the Aether_ and _After Lorca_, both in _The Collected Books of Jack Spicer_, edited by Robin Blaser [Black Sparrow]. And from _Writing from the New Coast: Technique_ [o*blek #12]. Many good, short pieces in these sources.

Daniel Zimmerman
Middlesex County College
Edison, NJ

↑ Index

333. Lisa Samuels
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Sun 21 Sep 1997

---

herb levy,

i have not heard the rumour that stevens' wife wrote the poems published under his name -- but it is far-fetched at best, according to everything i have read about what people know of his composition processes, conversations he had with people, etc. another resonance of the who-was-shakespeare issue, perhaps? -- or of credible cases in which people central to a writer's productions were not acknowledged in the published works.

lisa s.

↑ Index

334. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Sun 21 Sep 1997

Steven Marks wrote

<<Speaking generally about a poet who might abandon and then return rather than Oppen specifically: some poets work in bursts of activity followed by long periods of quiet. Perhaps this is to fill up the well; perhaps boredom; perhaps other interests; perhaps the demands of making a living; perhaps illnesses; perhaps family problems and illnesses -- the list is, of course, endless..>>

Carl Rakosi read in London a few days ago. If I heard him aright and I think I did, he said something intriguing re his period of silence - _I was trying not to read poetry because it made me want to write poetry_

L

↑ Index

335. Schuchat Simon
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Sun 21 Sep 1997

Wallace Stevens wife modeled the figure of liberty which appears on the obverse of a coin, I'm not sure if it was the pre roosevelt dime or what, maybe the buffalo nickel.

Stevens also said something along the lines of "money is a kind of poetry."

but I always thought that it was John Ashbery who had written all of Wallace Stevens' poetry.

↑ Index

336. Schuchat Simon
Re: NEW Davidson, Debord, Fraser, Ginsberg, Levy &&& @ Bridge Street
Sun 21 Sep 1997

Rod, two additions to the order I emailed in yesterday:

The Clash, by Walter LaFeber, Norton (history of US-Japan relations)

and,

I think there is supposed to be a collected short stories of Ward Just (not The Congressman Who loved Flaubert but something later and more extensive) -- if such exists, please add that to the order.

ad astra,

Simon

↑ Index

337. George Bowering
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Sun 21 Sep 1997

> herb levy,
>
> i have not heard the rumour that stevens' wife wrote the poems published under his name --

Maybe Herb was half-remembering that Mrs Wilson was really presidenting the USA while Wilson was ill, or that that horrible skinny woman was running it when Reagan was foirgetting stuff. And then naturally, confusing poets with presidents (and who wouldnt?), mixed them up with Stevens. I am not forgetting, me, no, that there is a chance that David Bromige wrote a lot of the poems after Harmonium.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

338. Rachel Levitsky
Argentine Spanish?
Sun 21 Sep 1997

I have two questions concerning Argentinian Spanish

1) What is a jardine eléctrico?

2) What is Platón?

Backchannel if you can help.

Thanks,

RL

↑ Index

339. Brian Carpenter
subtext w/ Bromige & Blaser
Sun 21 Sep 1997

Although I'm not much of a Boswell, I thought I'd second Herb Levy's note on how excellent this month's Subtext reading at the Speakeasy here in Seattle was. OK, a brief report...

The backroom of the Speakeasy Cafe in the Belltown district holds 50-60 people (or so I guess) and once again seemed at capacity this month. Nowadays there's a stage set up one end of the room to accomodate the ever more regular performances that take place there, theatrical and otherwise. (In June there was a musical show on the Titanic in the middle of its run on this stage. So when Leslie Scalapino read here during that month she shared the stage with a few minor set pieces, little background paintings of icebergs and the Doomed Ship, etc.) Anyhow...

David Bromige was the first reader. This was highly entertaining, as many of the listfolk here would suspect. He opened with the amusing "T is for Tethered," and followed up with a material from a longer sequence of new work. He also included a bit from the recent David B./David I. thread here on POETICS. As I recall, he was also sporting a pair of red-rimmed glasses, which I had never seen the likes of before. I confess this is probably the best I can do in the way of a fashion report on the event.

I was in conversation in my seat with a friend during the intermission, so I did not have the usual chance to note more completely who was in attendance, although the most of the usual attendees seemed to be there: Herb Levy, Nico Vassilakis, John & Roberta Olson, Bryant Mason, Ezra Mark, Priscilla Long, Reuben Radding. Other folks usually in attendance that I may have missed include Laynie Brown, Robert Mittenthal, and Steven Shaviro. Plenty of other noteable and interesting folks as well, I'm sure, whose faces I don't know yet.

Robin Blaser read during the second half largely from a longer piece "Imagintion 14," although, as Herb mentioned, he included a segment from an apparently very long piece on Dante he is working on. Midway through the reading the activity increased in the pool club directly upstairs. This is a regular occurance. As the second half of the evening progresses the reading becomes punctuated by the occassional taps of cue sticks emanating from the ceiling, along with the more dramatic bonk of billiard ball and subsequently noisy roll. Sometimes music from upstairs or the Speakeasy frontroom starts to creep in on the proceedings. Thankfully, these nagging phenomena weren't as pronounced as they have been in some past months. The man I was talking with during the intermission had studied under Blaser at Simon Fraser University and had commented to me that Blaser had the sort of voice that could make a reading out of a phonebook fascinating. Indeed his reading seemed to confirm this. The man exudes charm.

That's the basics of the evening. A dozen or so folks, myself included, also had the chance to take part in two workshop sessions with David Bromige on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon. This took place an old 2-story elementary school that has been converted into a community center: hardwood floors, old style classrooms and blackboards, creaking chairs. Time well spent for all involved of course. The value, purpose, and applicability of writing exercises discussed and examined in action. Fruitful conversation all around. (This is not too specific, I know.) DB also provided a nice stack of photocopies of material from a variety of writers with whom I, at least, was not familiar. Still enjoying that quite a bit. Thanks again, David!

Next month at Subtext features Ezra Mark and Tom Raworth. This should also warrant some reportage, no doubt. In the meantime...

Salut--

BC

↑ Index

340. David Bromige
Re: Your message to [redacted]
Mon 22 Sep 1997

> Sun, 21 Sep 1997 20:35:20
>
> Your message to [redacted] has been > forwarded to the "list owners" (the people who manage the POETICS list).
> If you wanted to reach a human being, you used the correct procedure and > you can ignore the remainder of this message. If you were trying to send > a command for the computer to execute, please read on.

My message concerned Red Slider, and his request to me (via another list he and I are on) to lend him support in his attempt to find reinstatement on the Poetics List, from which he has been, in his own term, "86'd", for causes he cannot determine. I care both because Red strikes me as a likeable guy worth having with us, & also because I want to know what he did or didnt do to earn a banishment I myself wish to avoid.

Because Red included the correspondence from the Buffalo end with his message, I know that he was being told that, lacking further authentication of either his name or his e-ddress,the Poetics List could not continue his membership. I e-mailed the List e-ddress I had for such matters, & perhaps will receive a human response eventually. Meanwhile, though, I forward this one, because of the chilling, 1984-ish tone of the sentence in the following para, the sentence which begins, "Naturally..." and contains the info that if you write in about someone else's concerns with leaving the List, you may well be eliminated from it yourself. So, if you dont hear from me again, you'll leastwise know down which plughole I went.

Meanwhile, I await clarification of the murky Red Slider 86'd issue--backchannel will do fine.

> The "listname-request" convention originated on the Internet a long time > ago. At the time, lists were always managed manually, and this address > was defined as an alias for the person(s) in charge of the mailing list.
> You would write to the "listname-request" address to ask for information > about the list, ask to be added to the list, make suggestions about the > contents and policy, etc. Because this address was always a human being, > people knew and expected to be talking to a human being, not to a > computer. Unfortunately, some recent list management packages screen > incoming messages to the "listname-request" address and attempt to > determine whether they are requests to join or leave the list. They look > for words such as "subscribe", "add", "leave", "off", and so on. If they > decide your message is a request to join or leave the list, they update

the list automatically; otherwise, they forward the message to the list owners. Naturally, this means that if you write to the list owners about someone else's unsuccessful attempts to leave the list, you stand good chances of being automatically removed from the list, whereas the list owners will never receive your message. No one really benefits from this. There is no reliable mechanism to contact a human being for assistance, and you can never be sure whether your request will be interpreted as a command or as a message to the list owners. This is why LISTSERV uses two separate addresses, one for the people in charge of the list and one for the computer that runs it. This way you always know what will happen, especially if you are writing in a language other than English.

In any case, if your message was a LISTSERV command, you should now resend it to [redacted]. The list owners know that you have received this message and may assume that you will resend the command on your own. You will find instructions for the most common administrative requests below.

****
* TO LEAVE THE LIST *
****

Write to [redacted] and, in the text of your message (not the subject line), write: SIGNOFF POETICS

****
* TO JOIN THE LIST *
****

Write to [redacted] and, in the text of your message (not the subject line), write: SUBSCRIBE POETICS

****
* FOR MORE INFORMATION *
****

Write to [redacted] and, in the text of your message (not the subject line), write: "HELP" or "INFO" (without the quotes). HELP will give you a short help message and INFO a list of the documents you can order.

↑ Index

341. Spencer Selby
Exp Mag List # 50
Mon 22 Sep 1997

List of Experimental Poetry/Art Magazines P.O. Box 590095 San Francisco CA 94159 U.S. MAGAZINES ### ABACUS, POTEPOETZINE, Peter Ganick, [redacted], 181 Edgemont Ave, Elmwood CT 06110 ### AERIAL, Rod Smith, Box 25642, Wash D.C. 20007 ### AMERICAN BOOK REVIEW, Illinois St Univ. Campus Box 4241, Normal IL 61790 ### AMERICAN LETTERS AND COMMENTARY, Jeanne Beaumont, Anna Rabinowitz, 850 Park Ave Suite 5B, NY NY 10021 ### ANGLE, Brian Lucas, 253 Rose St, San Francisco CA 94102 ### ANT,ANT,ANT,ANT,ANT, Box 16177, Oakland CA 94610 ### ANTENYM, Steve Carll, 106 Fair Oaks #1, San Francisco CA 94110 ### ARRAS, Brian Kim Stefans, 398 Manhattan Ave. Apt 2L, Brooklyn NY 11211 ### ARSHILE, Mark Salerno, Box 3749, L.A. CA 90078 ### BIG ALLIS, Melanie Neilson, 11 Scholes St, Brooklyn NY 11206 ### BULLHEAD, Joe Napora, 2205 Moore St, Ashland KY 41101 ### BURL, David Baptiste Chirot, 2542 N. Farwell #5, Milwaukee WI 53211 ### CHAIN, Juliana Spahr, Dept of English, Univ of Hawaii-Manoa, 1733 Donaghho Rd, Honolulu HI 96822 ### CLWN WR, Box 2165, Church St Station, NY NY 10008 ### COLUMBIA POETRY REVIEW, English Dept of Columbia College, 600 South Michigan Ave, Chicago IL 60605 ### CONJUNCTIONS, 33 W. 9th St., NY NY 10011 ### CRAYON, Andrew Levy, c/o NYU, SCE/ADSD, 50 West 4th St, 225 Shimkin Hall, New York NY 10012 ### CROSS-CULTURAL POETICS, Mark Nowak, College of St Catherine, 601 25 Ave S., Minneapolis MN 55454 ### DENVER QUARTERLY, Dept of English, U. of Denver, Denver CO 80208 ### DIRIGIBLE, David Todd, 101 Cottage St, New Haven CT 06511 ### DISPLACE, KIOSK, English Dept., SUNY at Buffalo, Buffalo NY 14260 ### DISTURBED GUILLOTINE, Fredrik Hausmann, Box 14871, University Station, Minneapolis MN 55414 ### DRIVER'S SIDE AIRBAG, Box 25760, Los Angeles CA 90025 ### DROP FORGE, 315 1/2 Perkins Place, Bozeman MT 59715 ### ELECTRONIC POETRY CENTER (including RIF/T Magazine), Loss Glazier, http://writing.upenn.edu/epc ### ETCETERA, Mindi Englart, Box 8543, New Haven CT, 06531 ### EXILE, Gary Sullivan, 26 Vandam St, New York NY 10013 ### EXPERIODICIST, Jake Berry, Box 3112, Florence AL 35630, [redacted] ### FAR GONE, Box 43745, Lafayette LA 70504 ### FAUCHEUSE, [redacted] ### FELL SWOOP, 3003 Ponce De Leon St, New Orleans LA 70119 ### FIRST INTENSITY, Lee Chapman, Box 665, Lawrence KS 66044 ### FIVE FINGERS REVIEW, Jaime Robles, Box 15426, San Francisco CA 94115 ### FOUND STREET, Larry Tomoyasu, 2260 S. Ferdinand Ave., Monterey Park CA 91754 ### GAS, Kevin Opstedal, 386 Madeline Court, Palo Alto CA 94306 ### GENERATOR, John Byrum, 3203 W. 14th St, Apt 13, Cleveland OH 44109 ### THE GERM, Macgregor Card & Andrew

Maxwell, Box 8501, Santa Cruz CA 95061 ### GESTALTEN, Paul Silvia, 1207 W. 19th St, Lawrence KS 66046 ### GLOBAL MAIL, Grove City Factory Stores, Box 1309, Grove City PA 16127 ### HAMBONE, Nathaniel Mackey, 134 Hunolt St. Santa Cruz CA 95060 ### HAPPY GENIUS, Peter Landers, 34 Rose Circle, Hamlin NY 14464 ### HEAVEN BONE, Steven Hirsch, Box 486, Chester NY 10918 ### HOUSE ORGAN, Kenneth Warren, 1250 Belle Avenue, Lakewood OH 44107 ### HOUSE ORGAN MAGAZINE, N. Conquest, 507 D Ave, Coronado CA 92118 ### IDIOM, http://www.dnai.com/~idiom ### INDEFINITE SPACE, Marcia Arrieta, Box 40101, Pasadena CA 91114 ### THE INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF VISUAL POETRY, Charles Maden, 620 Baker St #3, San Francisco CA 94117 ### INTUIT, Don Hilla, 300 Vicksburg #5, San Francisco CA 94114 ### JUXTA, Jim Leftwich, 1512 Mountainside Ct, Charlottesville VA 22903, [redacted] ### KEY SATCH(EL), Gian Lombardo, Box 363, Haydenville MA 01039 ### KOJA, 7314 21st Ave Apt 6E, Brooklyn NY 11204 ### LETTER, Dan Featherston, 3626 E. Blacklidge, Tuscon AZ 85716 ### LIGHTNING & ASH, 3010 Hennepin Ave S. #289, Mpls MN 55454 ### LILLIPUT REVIEW, Don Wentworth, 282 Main St, Pittsburgh PA 15201 ### LINGO, Box 184, West Stockbridge MA 01266 ### THE LITTLE MAGAZINE, English Dept, SUNY at Albany, Albany NY 12222 ### LOGODAEDALUS, Paul Weidenhoff & W.B. Keckler, Box 14193, Harrisburg PA 17104 ### LOST AND FOUND TIMES, John M. Bennett, 137 Leland Ave, Columbus OH 43214 ### LOWER LIMIT SPEECH, A.L. Nielsen, 3055 30th St Apt #2, Boulder CO 80301 ### LVNG, Michael & Peter O'Leary, Box 3865, Chcago IL 60654 ### LYNX, J. & W. Reichold, Box 1250 Gualala CA 95445 ### LYRIC&, Avery Burns, Box 640531, San Francisco CA 94164 ### MASS AVE., Daniel Bouchard, Box 230, Boston MA 02117 ### MEAT EPOCH, Gregory Vincent St Thomasino, 72 Orange St Apt 5B, Brooklyn Hts NY 11201 ### MEMBRANE, Nigel Hinshelwood, 4213 12th St NE, Washington D.C. 20017 ### MESECHABE, Dennis Formento, 1539 Crete St, New Orleans LA 70119 ### MIKE & DALE'S YOUNGER POETS, Michael Price, 766 Valencia St, San Francisco CA 94110 ### MISC. PROJ., Mark Prejsnar, 641 N. Highland Ave. NE #11, Atlanta GA 30306 ### NEDGE, Henry Gould, Janet Sullivan, Box 2321, Providence RI 02906 ### NEW AMERICAN WRITING, Maxine Chernoff & Paul Hoover, 369 Milino, Mill Valley CA 94941 ### NEXUS, Mark Owens, W016A Student Union, Wright St Univ, Dayton OH 45435 ### NO ROSES REVIEW, Carolyn Coo, 1322 N. Wicker Park, Chicago IL 60622 ### OPEN 24 HOURS, Buck Downs, Box 50376, Washington D.C. 20091 ### ORPHEUS GRID, John Noto, Box 420803, San Francisco CA 94142 ### O!!ZONE, Harry Burrus, 1266 Fountain View Dr. Houston TX 77057 ### PAPER RADIO, Box 425, Bremerton WA 98337 ### PARADOX, 36 E. Lorain St, Oberlin OH ### PAVEMENT SAW, David Baratier, 7 James St, Scotia NY 12302 ### PHOEBE, George Mason U., 4400 University Drive, Fairfax VA 22030 ### PHOTOSTATIC RETROFUTURIST, Lloyd Dunn,

Box 8832, Iowa City, IA 52240 ### POETIC BRIEFS, Jefferson Hansen, 4055 Yosemite Ave South, St Louis Park MN 55416 ### POETRY NEW YORK, Box 3184, Church St Station, New York NY 10008 ### POETRY PROJECT NEWSLETTER, THE WORLD, St Mark's Church, 131 East 10th St, New York NY 10003 ### PO'FLYE, Michael Crye, Box 1026, Ashland KY 41105 ### PRIMARY WRITING, 2009 Belmont Rd. N.W., Apt 203, Wash D.C. 20009 ### PRIVATE ARTS, Box 10936, Chicago IL, 60610 ### PROLIFERATION, Mary Burger, 1253 Hampshire St, San Francisco CA 94110 ### PROSODIA, New College of California, 766 Valencia San Francisco CA 94110 ### REMAP, Todd Baron, 2860 Exposition Blvd #A, Santa Monica CA 90404 ### RHIZOME, Standard Schaefer, 366 S. Mentor #108, Pasadena CA 91106 ### RIBOT, Paul Vangelisti, Box 65798, Los Angeles CA 90065 ### SCORE, Crag Hill, 1015 NW Clifford St, Pullman WA 99163 ### SEMIAUTOMATIC, Patrick Mullins, Rt 1, Box 133, La Farge WI 54639 ### SEMIQUASI EDITIONS, A. di Michele, Box 55892, Fondren Station, Jackson MS 39296 ### SHATTERED WIG REVIEW, Rupert Wondolowski, 2407 N. Maryland #1, Baltimore MD 21218 ### SITUATION, Mark Wallace, 10402 Ewell Ave, Kensington MD 20895 ### 6IX, H. Thomas, 914 Leisz's Bridge Rd, Reading PA 19605 ### THE SPITTING IMAGE, Julia Solis, Box 20400 Tompkins Square Station, New York NY 10009 ### SPLIT SHIFT, Roger Taus, 2461 Santa Monica Blvd #C-122, Santa Monica CA 90404 ### SPOUT, John Colburn, 28 West Robie St, St Paul MN 55107 ### SUGAR MULE, M.L. Weber, [redacted] ### SULFUR, Clayton Eshleman, English Dept, Eastern Michigan U., Ypsilanti MI 48197 ### SUPERFLUX, Leslie Davis, 629 Fillmore St, San Francisco CA 94117 ### SYN/AES/THE/TIC, Alex Cigale, Box 91, Canal St Station, New York NY 10013 ### SYNTACTICS, John Lowther, Box 1381, Decatur GA 30031 ### TALISMAN, Ed Foster, Box 3157, Jersey City, NJ 07303 ### TAPROOT REVIEWS, Luigi Bob Drake, Box 585, Lakewood OH 44107 ### TENSETENDONED, M. B. Corbett, Box 155, Preston Park PA 18455 ### TEXTURE, Susan Smith Nash, 3760 Cedar Ridge Drive, Norman OK 73072 ### :THAT:, 1070 Easton Valley Rd, Easton NH 03580 ### THIS IS IMPORTANT, Box 336 Sprague River OR 97639 ### TIGHT, Ann Erickson, Box 1591, Guerneville CA 95446 ### TINFISH, Susan Schultz, 1422A Dominis St, Honolulu HI 96822 ### TORQUE, Liz Fodaski, 21 East 2nd St #14, N.Y. NY 10003 ### TRANSMOG, Ficus Strangulensis, Route 6 Box 138, Charleston WV 25311 ### UBU WEB VISUAL & CONCRETE POETRY, Kenneth Goldsmith, http:///www.ubuweb.com/vp ### VOLT, Gillian Conoley, Box 657, Corte Madera CA 94967 ### THE WASHINGTON REVIEW, Joe Ross, Box 50132, Washington D.C. 20091 ### WAY, Tom Beckett, 131 N. Pearl St, Kent OH 44240 ### WITZ, Christopher Reiner, Box 40012, Studio City CA 91614 ### WOODEN HEAD REVIEW, Mark Hartenbach, 240 Thompson Ave, East Liverpool OH 43920 ### YEFIEF, Ann Racuya-Robbins, Box 8505, Santa Fe NM 87504 ### ZYX, Arnold Skemer, 58-09 205th St, Bayside

NY 11364 ### CANADIAN MAGAZINES ### THE ALTERRAN POETRY ASSEMBLAGE, David Dowker, http://home.ican.net/~alterra/ ### BOO, 1895 Commercial Dr, Box 116, Vancouver, B.C. V5N 4A6 ### BRITISH COLUMBIA MONTHLY, Gerry Gilbert, Box 48884, Station Bent., Vancouver, B. C. V7X 1A8 ### CABARET VERT, Beth Learn, Box 157 Station P, Toronto Ontario M5S 2S7 ### CAPILANO REVIEW, 2055 Purcell Way, North Vancouver, B.C. V7J 3H5 ### COLLECTIF REPARATION DE POESIE, Jean-Claude Gagnon, 359 rue Lavigueur # 1, Quebec, Quebec G1R 1B3 ### CRASH, Maggie Helwig, Box 562, Station P, Toronto Ontario M5S 2T1 ### DADABABY, Jaime Reid, 382 East 4th St, North Vancouver, B.C. V7L 1J2 ### FILLING STATION, Box 22135 Bankers Hall, Calgary AB T2P 4J5 ### HOLE, Louis Cabri & Rob Manery, L03-2556 East Hastings St, Vancouver B.C. V5K 1Z3 ### INDEX MAGAZINE, 4068 St Laurent, Box 42082, Montreal, Quebec H2W 2T3 ### OPEN LETTER, 499 Dufferin Ave, London, Ontario N6B 2A1 ### OVERSION, John Barlow, 1069 Bathurst St (3rd Floor) Toronto Ontario M5R 3G8 ### PUSH MACHINERY, Daniel Bradley, 30 Gloucester St #1005, Toronto, Ontario M4Y 1L6 ### RADDLE MOON, GIANTESS, Susan Clark, 2239 Stephens St, Vancouver B.C. V6K 3W5 ### RAMPIKE, Karl Jirgens, 81 Thorneloe Crescent, Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario P6A 4J4 ### RAW NERVZ HAIKU, 67 Court St, Aylmer, Quebec J9H 4M1 ### STAINED PAPER ARCHIVE, 1792 Byng Road, Windsor, Ontario N8W 3C8 ### TORQUE, Darren Werschler-Henry, Box 657 Station P, Toronto, Ontario M5S 2Y4 ### WEST COAST LINE, English Dept, Simon Fraser Univ, Burnaby B.C. V5A 1S6 ### MONDO HUNKAMOOGA, Stuart Ross, Box 141, Station F, Toronto, Ontario M4Y 2L4 ### U.K. MAGAZINES ### AND, Bob Cobbing, 89A Petherton Rd, London N5 2QT ### ANGEL EXHAUST, Andrew Duncan, 27 Sturton St, Cambridge CB1 2QG ### EONTA, 27 Alexandra Rd, Wimbledon, London SW19 7IJ ### FIRST OFFENSE, Tim Fletcher, Syringa, The Street, Stodmarsh, Canterbury, Kent CT3 4BA ### FRAGMENTE, Anthony Mellors, 3 Town Green Rd, Orwell, Cambridge ### INTIMACY, Adam McKeown, Apt C, Romney House, 1 Charles St, Maidstone, Kent ME16 8EU ### OASIS, Ian Robinson, 12 Stevenage Rd., London SW6 6ES ### PAGES, Robert Sheppard, Edge Hill University College, Ormskirk, Lancashire L39 4QP ### RADICAL POETICS, Mike Hrebeniak, 23 Broadcroft Ave, Stanmore, Middlesex, HA7 1NT ### RAMRAID EXTRAORDINAIRE, Chris Brooke, 57 Canton Court, Canton, Cardiff ### RWC, Lawrence Upton, 32 Downside Road, Surrey SM2 5HP ### SHEARSMAN, Tony Frazer, c/o Hong Kong & Shanghai Bank, Macau Mgt Office, Box 476, Macau ### SPANNER, Allen Fisher, 14 Hopton Rd, Hereford HR1 1BE ### STRIDE, Rupert Loydell, 11 Sylvan Rd, Exeter, Devon EX4 6EX ### TERRIBLE WORK, Tim Allen, 21 Overton Gardens, Mannamead, Plymouth PL3 5BX ### USSR 1049 ORANGE, Watson Press "Cestria", 21 Gladstone St, Hartepool, Cleveland TS24 0PE ### VERTICAL IMAGES, 62 Langdon Park Rd, London N6 5QG ### WORDS WORTH, Alaric Sumner, BM Box 4515,

London WC1N 3XX ### CONTINENTAL EUROPE, AND ELSEWHERE ### ACTION POETIQUE, Henri Deluy, 3 rue Pierre-Guignois, 94200 Ivry-sur-Seine, France ### AMAE, Apdo 47, 28921 Alcoron (Madrid) Spain ### ART POSTALE, Vittore Baroni, Via C Battista 339, 55049 Viareggio, Italy ### AXLE, Tony Figallo, Box 4180 Richmond East, Victoria, Australia ### BACK TO FRONT, John Geraets, Liberal Arts, Aichi-Gakuin Univ, 12 Iwasaki, Araike, Nisshin-shi, Aichi-ken, 470-01, Japan ### BANANA SPLIT, Peter Bangsvej 74, 2000 Frederiksberg, Denmark ### A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE WHOLE WORLD, Alan Loney, Box 55-124, Mission Bay, Auckland, 1005, New Zealand ### BRIO CELL, LINGUA BLANCA, GLOSSOLALIA, J. Lehmus, Stenbocksv. 24, 02860 Esbo, Finland, [redacted] ### CARPETAS EL PARAISO, Jose Luis Campal, Apt N. 6, 33980 Pola de Lavinia, Asturias, Spain ### CELACANTO, Marcelo Casarin, Quisquisacate 125, 5008 Cordoba, Argentina ### COMUNICARTE, Hugo Pontes, Caixa Postal 922, 37701-970 Pocos de Caldas, Brazil ### D'UN MOM ENCA, EL TRAPAS & IMAT, Apdo 9142, 08080 Barcelona, Spain ### DAS FROLICHE WOHNZIMMER, Fritz Widhalm, Fuhrmanngasse 1A/7, 1080 Wien Austria ### DIMENSAO, Guido Brilharinho, Caixa Postal 140, Uberaba 38001, Brazil ### DOC(K)S, Phillipe Castellin, 20 Rue Bonaparte, Ajaccio, France 2000 ### FULL, Ramon Salvo, Apdo 20033, 08080 Barcelona Spain ### GARATUJA, C. Postal 41, Bento Goncalves/RS 95700 Brazil, GOING DOWN SWINGING, Box 24, Clifton Hill, Victoria 3068, Australia ### GRAFFITI, Horacio Versi, Colonia 815, of. 105, Montevideo, Uruguay ### IF, Jean-Jacques Viton, 12 Place Castellane, 13006 Marseille, France ### INIA KELMA, Nueva, 4, 41770 Montellano Spain ### INTERARTE, Douglas Zunino, Odebrecht 97, 89021 Blumenau, SC, Brazil ### LA ISLA DE BARATARIA, Mario Sampaolesi, Avda. Rivadavia 4977 - 9 "C" , (1424) Buenos Aires, Argentina ### JOURNALECO, Caixa Postal 8622, Ag Itaigara, 41857-970 Salvador, Bahia, Brazil ### KARREE, http://huizen.dds.nl/~karree ### KARTA, Bartek Nowak, Spoldzielcza 3/39, 42-300 Myszkow, Poland ### KERAUNIA, Sergio Fumich, via P. Togliatti, 3-20070 Brembio-Mi, Italy ### JALOUSE PRATIQUE, 80 rue Henon, 69004 Lyon, France ### LEOPOLD BLOOM, Vaci M. u. 4. I. 8., H-9700 Szombathely, Hungary ### MAGYAR MUHELY, Minerva u 3/a, H-1118 Budapest, Hungary ### MANDORLA, Roberto Tejada, Apartado postal 5-366, Mexico D.F., Mexico 06500, ### MANI ART, THE SECRET LIFE OF MARCEL DUCHAMP, Pascal Lenoir, 11 Ruelle De Champagne, 60680 Grandfresnoy, France ### MINIATURE OBSCURE, Gerhild Ebel, Cornelia Ahnert, Landrain 143, 06118 Halle/Saale, Germany ### MITO, via G. Bruno 37, 80035 Nola, Italy ### NIOQUES, Jean-Marie Gleize, 4 rue de Cromer, 26400 Crest, France ### NUMERO, Wilfred Nold, Eppsteinstr. 22, D-60323 Frankfurt, Germany ### O APIPUCOS, R. Cahetes, 401 - Apipucos, Recife/PE, CEP 52 071 - 390, Brazil ### OFFERTA SPECIALE, Carla Bertola, Corso De Nicola 20, 10128 Torino,

Italy ### OLHO LATINO, Paulo Cheida Sans, Rua Padre Bernardo da Silva 856, 13030 Campinas, SP, Brazil ### OTIS RUSH, Box 21, North Adelaide, 5006 South Australia ### PINTALO DE VERDE, Antonio Gomez, APDO 186, 06800 Merida, Badajoz, Spain ### PIPS DADA CORPORATION, Claudia Putz, Prinz-Albert Str. 31, 53115 Bonn, Germany ### PLURAL, Paseo de la Reforma 18.1 piso, Deleg. Cuauhtemoc, DF 06600, Mexico ### P.O.BOX (Merz Mail), Pere Sousa, apdo 9326, 08080 Barcelona Spain ### POESIE, Michel Deguy, 8 rue Ferou, 75278 Paris Cedex 06, France ### POESIE EUROPE, Postfach 180429, D-60085, Frankfurt/Main, Germany ### POSTYPOGRAPHIKA, http://www.postypographika.com ### PRAKALPANA LITERATURE, KOBISENA, P-40 Nandana Park, Calcutta 700034, West Bengal, India ### PRINTED MATTER, Edgar Henry, 2-15-6 Zenpukuji, Suginami-ku, Tokyo 167 Japan ### REVUE PRETEXTE, 11 rue Villedo, 75001 Paris, France ### RRAT, Tim Gaze, Box 1011, Kent Town SA 5071 Australia ### SCARP, Ron Pretty, Univ of Wollongong, Box 1144, Wollongong, NSW 2500, Australia ### SHISHI, Shoji Yoshizawa, 166 Suginami-ku koenjikita, 3-31-5 Tokyo, Japan ### SIGN'ZINE, Industrias Mikuerpo, Apdo 36.455, 28080 Madrid, Spain ### 69 ANALGESIC, Cesar Figueiredo, Apdo 4134, 4002 Porto Codex, Portugal ### SIVULLINEN, Jouni Vaarakangas, Kaarelantie 86 B 28, 00420 Helsinki, Finland ### SPINNE, Dirk Frohlich, Priessnitzstrasse 19, 01099 Dresden, Germany ### SPORT, Box 11-806, Wellington, New Zealand ### TERAZ MOWIE, Hartmut Andryczuk, Elsastr. 4, 12159 Berlin, Germany ### TEXTURAS, Angela Serna, Apdo de correos 2201, 01080 Vitoria, Spain ### TOENDRA, http://www.xs4all.nl/~roberi/ ### TRANSFUSION, Alessandro Ceccotto, C.P. 116, 45011 Adria (RO) Italy ### VISUAL POETRY S.O.S., Alfredo Slang, via Ferro De Cavallo, 10, 31100 Treviso, Italy ### VOLL-ZINE, Rainer Golchert, Soderstrabe 29, 64283 Darmstadt, Germany ### YE, FALTBLATT, Theo Breuer, Neustrasse 2, 53925 Sistig/Eifel, Germany ### XUL, Jorge Perednik, Plaza 1629, (1430) Buenos Aires, Argentina ### ZAZIE, Box 521 Market St, Melbourne, Victoria, 8007 Australia ### ZOOM-ZOUM, Josee Lapeyrere, 4 rue des Carmes, 75005 Paris, France ### ZWISCHEN DEN ZEILEN, Urs Engeler, Hoernlistrasse 27, CH 8400 Winterthur, Switzerland ### The preceding list is based on the research and judgments of Spencer Selby. The term "experimental" is not meant as a characterization of anyone's specific editorial focus or perspective. Please circulate, and mail possible additions, deletions, address changes or other comments to Spencer Selby, P.O. Box 590095, San Francisco CA 94159, U.S.A. email: [redacted] fax: [redacted] This is list #50, dated 9/97 ###

↑ Index

342. Herb Levy
Re: Your message to [redacted]
Mon 22 Sep 1997

David,

I don't know any details about Red Slider's removal from the poetics list, but I do know that the e-address <[redacted]> does not seem to be valid (at least running whois & a couple of other arcane protocols came up with nothing). If mail to this address began to bounce & Red Slider didn't send > further authentication of either his name or his e-ddress, there'd be no way for the automated listserv program to deal with him. If Red Slider has been getting e-mail forwarded through this address, it may no longer work.

As to the chilling quality of the prose you quote, whether it seems "natural" or not, computers are so stupid they can only do what they are told. If a program like listserv has specific instructions on how to respond to the words "unsubscribe", "kiss me", or "renga", when it finds them in a message it can only respond that way. For example, in the case of several lists I'm on, using the word h e l p (without spaces) kicks the message out to the listowner, no matter what context the word was used in, delaying your message til someone forwards it with the offending word changed.

In any case, the text you find so chilling is after this text:

> Your message to [redacted] has been > forwarded to the "list owners" (the people who manage the POETICS list).
> If you wanted to reach a human being, you used the correct procedure and > you can ignore the remainder of this message.

Since you were in fact trying to reach a real person, as it says, ignore the remainder of the message, including what "naturally" follows.

No matter how much time WE may spend on line, thinking back to those times the list reaches its fifty message limit, it's clear that Joel Kuszai, Charles Bernstein, and whoever else administers the list sometimes take a day or two off, especially on weekends.

I don't know whether the problem with Slider is only that his e-address isn't valid, I haven't seen the correspondence you have. I do know that without a valid e-mail address it'd be difficult to receive e-mail from the list.

> My message concerned Red Slider, and his request to me (via another list he > and I are on) to lend him support in his attempt to find reinstatement on > the Poetics List, from which he has been, in his own term, "86'd", for > causes he cannot determine. I care both because Red strikes me as a > likeable guy worth having with us, & also because I want to know what he did or didnt do to earn a banishment I myself wish to avoid.

Because Red included the correspondence from the Buffalo end with his message, I know that he was being told that, lacking further authentication of either his name or his e-ddress,the Poetics List could not continue his membership. I e-mailed the List e-ddress I had for such matters, & perhaps will receive a human response eventually. Meanwhile, though, I forward this one, because of the chilling, 1984-ish tone of the sentence in the following para, the sentence which begins, "Naturally..." and contains the info that if you write in about someone else's concerns with leaving the List, you may well be eliminated from it yourself. So, if you dont hear from me again, you'll leastwise know down which plughole I went.

Meanwhile, I await clarification of the murky Red Slider 86'd issue--backchannel will do fine.

The "listname-request" convention originated on the Internet a long time ago. At the time, lists were always managed manually, and this address was defined as an alias for the person(s) in charge of the mailing list. You would write to the "listname-request" address to ask for information about the list, ask to be added to the list, make suggestions about the contents and policy, etc. Because this address was always a human being, people knew and expected to be talking to a human being, not to a computer. Unfortunately, some recent list management packages screen incoming messages to the "listname-request" address and attempt to determine whether they are requests to join or leave the list. They look for words such as "subscribe", "add", "leave", "off", and so on. If they decide your message is a request to join or leave the list, they update the list automatically; otherwise, they forward the message to the list owners. Naturally, this means that if you write to the list owners about someone else's unsuccessful attempts to leave the list, you stand good chances of being automatically removed from the list, whereas the list owners will never receive your message. No one really benefits from this. There is no reliable mechanism to contact a human being for assistance, and you can never be sure whether your request will be interpreted as a command or as a message to the list owners. This is why LISTSERV uses two separate addresses, one for the people in charge of the list and one for the computer that runs it. This way you always know what will happen, especially if you are writing in a language other than English.

In any case, if your message was a LISTSERV command, you should now resend it to [redacted]. The list owners know that you have received this message and may assume that you will resend the command on your own. You will find instructions for the most common administrative requests below.

****

>  TO LEAVE THE LIST **
> **********
>
> Write to [redacted] and, in the text of your message (not the subject line), write: SIGNOFF POETICS
>
> **********
>  TO JOIN THE LIST **
> **********
>
> Write to [redacted] and, in the text of your message (not the subject line), write: SUBSCRIBE POETICS
>
> **********
>  FOR MORE INFORMATION **
> **********
>
> Write to [redacted] and, in the text of your message (not the subject line), write: "HELP" or "INFO" (without the quotes). HELP will give you a short help message and INFO a list of the documents you can order.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

343. David R. Israel
Re: subtext w/ Bromige & Blaser
Mon 22 Sep 1997

Thanks Brian C. for the text re: subtext; (as there's a vague chance I might surface in Seattle next summer, it's great to get these preludial sub-billiard-hall-ambient-atmospherics gestalticals) --

> Next month at Subtext features Ezra Mark and Tom Raworth. This should also warrant some reportage, no doubt. In the meantime...

look forward to it; meanwhile,

> David Bromige was the first reader. This was highly entertaining, as many of the listfolk here would suspect. He opened with the amusing "T is for Tethered," and followed up with a material from a longer sequence of new work. He also included a bit from the recent David B./David I. thread here on POETICS. As I recall, he was also sporting a pair of red-rimmed glasses, which I had never seen the likes of before. I confess this is probably the best I can do in the way of a fashion report on the event.

Oddly enough, I'm wearing green-rimmed spectacles as a sprach. You can sign me (honorarily, & notwithstanding I'm a tad doubtful abt. the 1984isms my nominative better po-self apprehands afloat),

Green Slider

```
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

crag, good to see ya on the list, Im having flashbacks to the 80s & the life of elaborate networking. just too bad that the stare of the monitor doesnt have the tactile feel of opening an envelop jammed full of goodies.

miekal

from the avantgarde wildernesse

--
@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

345. Layne Russell
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

Herb Levy wrote:
>
> David,
>
> I don't know any details about Red Slider's removal from the poetics list, > but I do know that the e-address <[redacted]> does not seem to be valid > (at least running whois & a couple of other arcane protocols came up with > nothing). If mail to this address began to bounce & Red Slider didn't send
>
> >further authentication of either his name or his e-ddress,
>
> there'd be no way for the automated listserv program to deal with him. If > Red Slider has been getting e-mail forwarded through this address, it may > no longer work.

I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies" it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.

this situation needs to be sorted out. this is not right. what is going on? I hate to see this happening to anyone on this list.... it has to be a mistake.

I hope Red is back with us soon.

Layne

http://www.sonic.net/layne

↑ Index

346. henry
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Mon 22 Sep 1997

On Mon, 22 Sep 1997 07:54:27 +0800 Schuchat Simon said: >Wallace Stevens wife modeled the figure of liberty which appears on the >obverse of a coin, I'm not sure if it was the pre roosevelt dime or what, >maybe the buffalo nickel.

It was the dime. Rumor has it it was minted by Ezra Pound's father & spent (his last) on a can of Bub's beer by Jack Spandrift in North Cheese, Minnesota, in 1936. As he spun it on the counter, (just laid off of his cook's gig at the lumber camp) Jack was heard to croon:

Lady Liberty, farewell,
I'm gonna cruise the gutter now - ain't no silver gal in hell can dance the tabletop like you - you been good to me, so long,
I'm goin' dry...

Spandrift was arrested a few days later for vagrancy & wound up laying side track for the Great Northern wearing stripes. See Louis Dexterious's collection _Sing a Soggy Sixpence : An Oral History of Post-Prohibition North Cheese_, forthcoming from Univ. of Left Overbie Press (8,045 pp., glory bound) - Henry Gould

↑ Index

347. Bob Grotjohn
Re: writing about writing
Mon 22 Sep 1997

William Marsh wrote:
>
> Poetics Folks:
>
> putting together a small packet for my cre wri class of what i'm loosely > calling "writing about writing" / would greatly appreciate any suggestions > for good samples (poems, stories), ie, Stevens' "Of Modern Poetry" / 20th > century mostly / the shorter the better
>
> thanks for responses

>
> bill marsh

WC Willams "To a Solitary Disciple." Good and short. Along the same lines (sort of)--Stevens "Bantams in Pine-Woods."
--
Bob Grotjohn

↑ Index

348. Layne Russell
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

[redacted] wrote:
>
> At 9:56 AM +0000 9/22/97, Layne Russell wrote:
>
> >I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies"
> >it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or > >invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.
> >
> >this situation needs to be sorted out. this is not right. what is > >going on? I hate to see this happening to anyone on this list.... it > >has to be a mistake.
>
> I didn't see the beginning of this thread, having been out of town and not > being able to face the 150+ old poetics messages that awaited me, but if > I'm surmising right what's being discussed here--I believe that the issue > is that pseudonyms are not allowed on the Poetics List--I don't think > there's anything personal being/having been done to RS.
>
> Dodie

Dodie and anyone who knows how this works,

Red Slider is Red Slider, and his email address is his email address. (He also has an extensive poetry website, is on two other poetry lists I'm on, and I know where he lives, etc.) How can the "list" determine otherwise? I don't understand.

Layne

↑ Index

349. Laurie Schneider/Crag Hill

Rural vs. Urban Poetics?

Mon 22 Sep 1997

When I left the Bay Area three years ago for Pullman, Washington, I fell into a poetics void. Not only were readers of poetry not reading Clark Coolidge, Hannah Weiner, or Mark Wallace, they hadn't even heard of them or their compatriots -- formal innovation is not even (or uneven) on a horizon dominated by personal expression. So I've been wondering: As a sub/plot/text of rural/urban demographic differentiations, is there a split in poetics, rural versus urban? Why is a reader in Pullman or neighboring Moscow, Idaho (50,000 people, more than half of whom are associated either with Washington State or the University of Idaho) more likely to read Sharon Olds than Lyn Hejinian or Robert Haas rather than Ron Silliman? If English and Creative Writing professors are the powers that determine, why are they knowledgable of the poetics of Olds and Haas with virtually no knowledge of formal experimentation after the 1970's? Or more intriguing questions: Does geographic space (Pullman, in the rolling hills of southeastern Washington, has no major metropolitan area closer than Seattle five hours away) influence poetics? Is small town pace reflected in the nature of language readers and writers choose to engage? I have no doubt many on the list reside in rural areas -- what's your take on this? As a standing invitation, if you're in the area (or willing to drive from Seattle), I can offer a place to read in Moscow (and a place to stay, of course). Help inform. Best, Crag Hill

↑ Index

350. Charles Bernstein

Peter Quatermain's new address

Mon 22 Sep 1997

> From: Peter Quartermain <[redacted]>
>
> ---
>
> CHANGE OF ADDRESS
>
> Please note that, effective immediately, Peter and Meredith Quartermain's new address is:
>
> 846 Keefer Street > Vancouver
> British Columbia
> Canada V6A 1Y7
>
> Telephone [redacted]

> fax [redacted]
>
> These two numbers are UNLISTED, so you won't be able to get them from the phone company if you lose them.
>
> E-mail address is unchanged.
>
> ---

↑ Index

351. john_lavagnino

Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors

Mon 22 Sep 1997

|
| everything i hear about the new "reader's edition" of the joyce is
| horrible--and virtually everyone, i think, who are members of the | societry for textual scholarship would concur with this. no, never | mind "virtually"; make that simply "everyone."
| burt kimmelman
|

I agree. And yet...

What we seem to be talking about are changes of punctuation and spelling. If Danis Rose was editing Shakespeare rather than Joyce, he would call this "modernization", and nobody would give it a second thought. Of the innumerable editions of Shakespeare now available, I know of only two that diverge from the usual practice, which involves modernization of spelling and punctuation on a scale far vaster than Rose's program (the two are the original-spelling version of the Oxford Shakespeare, and the Shakespeare Originals series). And it isn't just Shakespeare: there are lots of editions of poets as late as Yeats that do this. The Penguin English Poets and Longman Annotated English Poets series impose modernization as part of their editorial policy. In the case of Shakespeare, you can at least present a good argument that we have very little idea of how Shakespeare spelled and punctuated; but this isn't the case with poets like Milton, Keats, Shelley, and Browning, who are all published in modernized form in these popular series.

And I own a copy of an anthology from a college course in which Joyce's story "The Dead" is printed with conventional quotation marks, rather than the dashes he's known to have preferred. We've got plenty of reason to be interested in the way Joyce wanted to spell and punctuate, and we have very reliable information on his preferences; I also am not convinced that modernization makes Ulysses noticeably easier to read (assuming that's even a worthwhile goal). Still, Rose is getting a lot of heat for doing something that is actually a very common practice.

John Lavagnino

↑ Index

352. Miekal And online resources, eh?
Mon 22 Sep 1997

Wondering if anyone knows of any online resources that compile places (both academic & beyond) which are actively seeking poets & writers for reading programs, residencies, & workshops....

getting tired of reading to the goats.

miekal

--
@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

353. Maria Damon
Re: writing about writing
Mon 22 Sep 1997

---

a whole novel, but a quick read: raymond federman's "To Whom it May Concern."

At 12:38 PM -0700 9/21/97, Carl Lynden Peters wrote:
>hi there bill!
>
>> putting together a small packet for my cre wri class of what i'm loosely >> calling "writing about writing" / would greatly appreciate any suggestions >> for good samples (poems, stories), ie, Stevens' "Of Modern Poetry" / 20th >> century mostly / the shorter the better
>
>bpNichol! (Everything!))

>
>Wordsworth! "Tintern Abbey"
>
> (are you going to anthologize it by nation, genre, etc.
>
>oh this is too much!!
>
>i wld put _Four Quartets_ there. and then go to the sapphires in the mud.
>and then next go to 'and the fire & the rose are one,' and ask: are they?
>
>lemme know what you do, bill! c.!

↑ Index

354. p. durgin
Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
Mon 22 Sep 1997

I, for one, am in a rural area and came here expecting a community of language artists. Iowa City, with its self-lauding poetry scene, is decades behind despite its smug clasp on an international reputation. Formally innovative anything is suspect here, and I beleive the isolation of the individuals reflects the landscape. It is the irrepressible mediocrity of those individuals which is to blame. Not the landscape.

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Mon, 22 Sep 1997, Laurie Schneider/Crag Hill wrote:

> When I left the Bay Area three years ago for Pullman, Washington, I fell into a poetics void. Not only were readers of poetry not reading Clark Coolidge, Hannah Weiner, or Mark Wallace, they hadn't even heard of them or their compatriots -- formal innovation is not even (or uneven) on a horizon dominated by personal expression. So I've been wondering:
>
> As a sub/plot/text of rural/urban demographic differentiations, is there a split in poetics, rural versus urban?
>
> Why is a reader in Pullman or neighboring Moscow, Idaho (50,000 people, more than half of whom are associated either with Washington State or the University of Idaho) more likely to read Sharon Olds than Lyn Hejinian or Robert Haas rather than Ron Silliman?
>
> If English and Creative Writing professors are the powers that determine, why are they knowledgable of the poetics of Olds and Haas with virtually no knowledge of formal experimentation after the 1970's?
>
> Or more intriguing questions: Does geographic space (Pullman, in the rolling hills of southeastern Washington, has no major metropolitan area closer than Seattle five hours away) influence poetics? Is small town pace reflected in the nature of language readers and writers choose to > engage?

> I have no doubt many on the list reside in rural areas -- what's your take on this?
> As a standing invitation, if you're in the area (or willing to drive from Seattle), I can offer a place to read in Moscow (and a place to stay, of course). Help in-form.
> Best, Crag Hill

↑ Index

355. joel kuszai
New from Meow Press
Mon 22 Sep 1997

New from Meow Press:

Dodie Bellamy, Hallucinations
Kevin Killian, Argento Series
Aaron Shurin, Codex

For more information:
http://writing.upenn.edu/~kuszai/mpweb/meowpress.html

↑ Index

356. Layne Russell
Re: confusion/Red's 86
Mon 22 Sep 1997

---

dear list,

actually, red has received human messages on this matter after he wrote asking about it, but still it is unclear what the real problem is. all this presumably centers around his name and his email address being in some way invalid, but since red has written to clear that up, and it is still not resolved, he is of course thinking there are other unrevealed reasons he is off the list.

i send this because red cannot access the list himself at this time. I would only add to his info herein that "TheFarm" was never used as the name of a person; it's merely an email address. what does this have to do with anything? i've seen other equally creative non-name email addresses on the list.

i realize i may be jeopardizing my subscription to Poetics by putting this up, but so be it. it seems important to get this straightened out, and if this helps in any way to cut through the confusion, then it's worth it.

Layne

here is a copy of red's email sent to me regarding the correspondence:

----------

Subject:
86'd from SUNY
Date:
Fri, 19 Sep 1997 23:42:57 -0700
From:
red slider <[redacted]>
To:
"'[redacted]'" <[redacted]>, "'[redacted]'"
<[redacted]>

David and Layne -

Evidently, I have been summarily dismissed from the SUNY listserver. Therefore, I could not bring to public attention something disturbing which seemed to be going on behind the scenes. Ok with me if you both think I have been fairly dismissed (or you wish to simply not be involved). Otherwise I'd appreciate it if one of you could post my (apparently) last message to the group, with my best regards.

thanx

red.

This was the text of my message (including the list refusal) spelling and typos and all.

You are not authorized to send mail to the POETICS list from your [redacted] account. You might be authorized to send to the list from another of your accounts, or perhaps when using another mail program which generates slightly different addresses, but LISTSERV has no way to associate this other account or address with yours. If you need assistance or if you have any question regarding the policy of the POETICS list, please contact the list owners: [redacted].

---------- Rejected message (140 lines)
---
by listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu with SMTP; 20 Sep 1997 06:26:57 -0000 by tomcat.ns.net (8.8.5/8.8.5) with SMTP id XAA12522 for <[redacted]>; Fri, 19 Sep 1997
23:26:53 -0700
(PDT)
id <[redacted]>; Fri, 19 Sep 1997 23:20:50
-0700
From: red slider <[redacted]>
To: "'sunylist'" <[redacted]>
Subject: Is Joel's mail being intercepted?
Date: Fri, 19 Sep 1997 23:20:35 -0700
Encoding: 124 TEXT

To all list members:

I have received two unsigned and, in one case, deliberately cryptic "temporary name" identified, messages from the Buffalo server. My reply, given below, went directly to Joel. However, now I am not so sure since the reply to that came back from an unidentified source and I know Joel signs his own replies.

I think it appropriate to bring matters into the open where everyone can see them before things get any worse. I enclose the first message I received, my reply and the second message received.

Here then is the communications from the machine in your garden, and my reply.

From: Poetics List[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, September 17, 1997 2:31 AM
To: red slider
Subject: Poetics List

Please try to keep in mind that the Poetics List is designed so that no one contributes more than a few messages on a given day. Also, we ask that all subscribers subscribe with their "real" names. While there is much lively internet activity using "handles" this is not the direction we want for this particular list. Unfortunately, due to the volume of requests and messages we get, we may not have told you this when you first subscribed. Thank you for your interest in the list and your lively contributions.

My reply:

From: red slider[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Wednesday, September 17, 1997 10:22 AM
To: '[redacted]'
Subject: RE: Meow Press Website Open

Joel, I presume this unsigned note from the 'list server' is from you? (and i do like to have names with my notes - even if they are handles)

Please try to keep in mind that the Poetics List is designed so that no one contributes more than a few messages on a given day. Also, we ask that all subscribers subscribe with their "real" names. While there is much lively internet activity using "handles" this is not the direction we want for this particular list. Unfortunately, due to the volume of requests and messages we get, we may not have told you this when you first subscribed. Thank you for your interest in the list and your lively contributions.

While my 'average' list participation is less than 2 ('a few') (26/17 days for sept.) i also see that it is disproportionately large? Though I do note several others with some heavy useage on particular days and do wonder if they received similar communications? I will endeavor to keep my postings within limits.

I do, however, wonder by whom, and on what basis, my name is being challenged? I find it a bit insulting and wonder on what presumptive basis someone things (sic) it does [serve] not as my "real name". I use my name responsibly, it is a pointer to reliable communications with me on any matter and is a name under which I submit print & electronic poetry. If you or anyone has a problem with that I gladly invite them to communicate with me directly with me and identify themselves - by handle or real name.

On the other hand, if it is the content of my messages which seem inappropriate or off point then I would certainly like to hear that directly said - backchannel or otherwise. Other than a single message from someone who apparently felt uncomfortable with a question on poetics and 'protected group' access, I have received no communications suggesting I'm 'round the bend', out of topic or otherwise 'off my meds'. Quite the contrary in backchannel, but I would certainly like to know if anyone feels that is the case.

thank you,

red slider

Received Today 9/19:

From: Temporary Name[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Friday, September 19, 1997 4:13 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: "TheFarm"

Dear Sir,

Your own concern as to who wrote the note is quite interesting in this context. According to our policy, we must know the real name of all subscribers. "The Farm" is not a sufficient userid for this purpose. We have no problem with handles, pen names or the like; but we reserve the right to ask for the legal names, and addresses if necessary, of all subscribers with indeterminate userids. We recognize this greatly limits the focus and possibilities of our list but are confident that there are many other lists with different policies on this point for those interested. If you read the original note we sent again you will note that all that we said that we were writing as a matter of list policy and that the content of your messages were related to this; if we didn't mean that we would not have said it. By the way this note is not written by "Joel".

Postnote from me:

I have tried to act as a good citizen in this group. I hold responsible two-way communication under the name 'red slider' (under which, incidently the AG of the State of California has no qualms about serving a subpoena, and under which I've ordered and paid for books advertised in this list, and under which my poetry is known, etc.). If it is the will of this group that I remove my self (whom or how the list may wish to decide is their business), i will gladly do so. My backchannel coms indicated that at least some of my posts have been appreciated. But I would wonder at any list that wished to 86 someone for content unless it was personally abusive. Well, enough said and I think it enough that this be brought into the open, where it belongs, and not left to unsigned notes to intimidate someone into quietly 'going away' - the message from the Gulag was chillingly clear the first time around.

If i looks like list members want me out - I'll say now I've appreciated the many interesting and valuable things gained.

red slider
[redacted]

----------end red's message

↑ Index

357. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997
Re: your mail
Mon 22 Sep 1997

On Fri, 19 Sep 1997, aldon l. nielsen wrote:

> 3. SAME issue also includes first review I've seen of Don DeLillo's BIG new novel -- since I've managed to get through MASON & DIXON, I'll try to fit this one into my luggage soon.

um--thomas pynchon wrote _M&D_, not delillo...

--shaunanne tangney
>

↑ Index

358. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997
Re: your mail
Mon 22 Sep 1997

mea culpa! mea culpa! i misread the below and probably made m. nielson feel unjustly tweaked--mostly succeded in making myself look stupid-- appologies all around! --shaunanne tangney

On Mon, 22 Sep 1997, ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities 8-13-1997 wrote:

> On Fri, 19 Sep 1997, aldon l. nielsen wrote:
>
> 3. SAME issue also includes first review I've seen of Don DeLillo's BIG new novel -- since I've managed to get through MASON & DIXON, I'll try to fit this one into my luggage soon.
>
> um--thomas pynchon wrote _M&D_, not delillo...
>
> --shaunanne tangney

↑ Index

359. Christopher Alexander
(Fwd) Project Artsvote
Mon 22 Sep 1997

bringing this over from the BAD SUBJECTS list because, well, it can't hurt. one good thing about the site that isn't mentioned below: it has a searchable database that helps you find & email representatives from any state in the US, & also allows you to email the entire US Congress @ once, if you're so inclined. use it in good health. —Chris

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------

Date sent: Sat, 20 Sep 1997 08:19:12 -0700
From: [redacted] (nik)

I'm a CS grad student doing a web project here at UCLA called Project Artsvote at:

http://www.bantaba.net/artsvote/

Project Artsvote is basically an online survey asking peoples views on NEA funding and Campaign Finance Reform. The results of every 10,000 valid entries to Project Artsvote is summarized and then sent, via e-mail, to thousands of state & federal legislators as well as radio, newspapers and television that i have in my online media and legislative databases.

I'm more concerned about these issues than an expert, so any suggestions for improvement is most appreciated - particularly on the campaign finance reform links page.

Also i'd like to know if anyone is interested in contributing an arts 'patch.' A patch is simply a web page which is about one's personal experiences with art. This project is barely a week old, but as people submit url's for patches i'll create a searchable index as a front end so users can easily navigate the patch space. An art patch can be a poem or set of photos, or an essay or whatever. Patches can support or contradict the need for public arts funding.

.

saludos,
nik brown

--

↑ Index

360. Mark Prejsnar
Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
Mon 22 Sep 1997

On the whole this issue is simply (what a scientist would call) a sampling problem, or an artifact of sample size....

In the current shape of U.S. culture, people move rather a lot, so altho historically both modernism and pomo poetical currents grew up within city contexts to some extent, the fact that pomo or non-mainstream poetry activities are found mostly in cities is simply because they are numerically minority pursuits. There may be only 20 people deeply interested in non-mainstream poetry activities in Georgia, for instance. By virtue of the size of their populations, Gainesville, GA and ALbany GA are far less likely to contain any of these folks than is Atlanta.

No okay in fact it's not that simple. Non-mainstream poetry is an art-activity that correlates with a number of other keen cultural interests and preferences, ones most likely to be satisfied in a large "metropolitan" city than a small mid-western town....(film, dance, music, visual arts, circles that discuss all these)...And for that matter the institutions that support non-mainstream poetry itself are also more likely to exist in a larger city..(..because of the concentration of people and of financial resources there, also because of "metropolitan" exposure to currents from afar, that assist cross-fertilization and cultual innovation...) And for these reasons people engaged in interesting poetry are likely to prefer a larger city to live in, if the logistics of making a living allows them any say...

But really, sample size is a lot of it.

You'll notice I am bringing up only rather materialist explanations...Given high mobility and lack of cohesive long-lasting communities in the contemporary U.S., I don't think there is a strong correlation between poetic styles and rural vs. urban environments, at least in any way that can be quantified or generalized...(How urban or rural surroundings affect any one particular poet in her work and life is another matter, and was a thread of considerable interest here about eight months ago)

Mark Prejsnar
Atlanta

↑ Index

361. Layne Russell
Re: confusion/Red's 86
Mon 22 Sep 1997

David Golumbia wrote:
>
> While Red Slider asserts in the message recently forwarded to the list, > surely he and his friends must realize that "Red Slider" sounds like a > pseudyonym. Red asserts that he uses this name as a professional moniker, > which presents a new problem to the list. But if what he says is true, > and I have no reason to doubt him, then it is reasonable for him to > participate under that name.

[snip]

> & part of what makes the handle look suspicious, Layne, is that not just > "Red Slider" but "[redacted]" looks like an attempt to hide. Herb > Levy's point, if I remember right, is that not "The Farm" but "ns.net" > that looks like part of a "virtual" email address. Which is to say that it > looks like -- it may well not be -- a "fake" address that reroutes mail > to Red Slider's real address.
[snip]

> I believe Red Slider should be reinstated on the list. I also believe > that a few words of explanation, if "Red Slider" is a true professional > name and "[redacted]" is an email address pointing to a true Internet > machine, would have prevented this from the beginning, and that some > interest on Red's part in familiarizing himself with the list -- as the > Welcome message asks him to do -- would have helped as well.
[snip]

> [redacted]
> David Golumbia

your thoughtful reply midst the confusion is appreciated. I have forwarded it to Red Slider.

the msg from an an unidentified list authority of some kind (it just says that he's "not Joel") in the post I put up states that "the farm" is in question, and also, that pen names are not a problem.

I still don't get why the email address looks suspicious. just for the record here, NSNet is listed in the 916 area code section (Red lives in the Sacramento area) of the "Internet Service Providers" catalog published bimonthly by Boardwatch. "the farm"? well, many providers let you choose the name you want; Red is a big-time gardener!

the name? I have seen amazing names...Red Slider? I have a jewelry designer friend whose name is Jay Roach! (and yes, it is his birth name.) so who's to say? who's to say that Layne Russell is my birth name? and does it matter? also, don't know how many states in which this is so, but in California it is legal to have one alias. so, if someone is putting forth all correspondence and publications and website under one consistent identity, why would I question this identity?

it seems to me that all this could be cleaned up fairly easily.

why was Red not asked a few simple questions first before being cut off?

Layne

↑ Index

362. Burt Kimmelman
Re: Seeking confirmation of modernist literary rumors
Mon 22 Sep 1997

John, Regarding Danis' Joyce, I beg to differ (though I don't recall exactly what I read about the edition or where, at the moment); Danis' emendations go well beyond accidentals. Anyway, can you think of any of the people in STS who countenance what Danis has done? Burt

↑ Index

363. Eliza McGrand
Re: Your message to [redacted]
Mon 22 Sep 1997

---

david, don't be so paranoid!

re read the message. it is not talking about a meat-and-flesh-and-bones person striking people off with a pissy wave of a fontainbleau. the listerserver is a PACKAGE, i.e. a COMPUTER PROGRAM. when you write to "listserver" you are not, as the message iterates a few times, writing to a m.f.b. person, but to a computer program. the program searches through the words in the body of the text for the few limited commands it understands, i.e. "subscribe" (that tells it to run its subscribe routine), "unsubscribe" etc.

so, if you write saying dear listerve, joe schmoe wants to unsubscribe, well, computer program searches through the words of message, parsing for a word that matches its list of command words, finds "unsubscribe" and happily runs its unsubscribe program oblivious to any consternation and furrowed brows it may be leaving behind. think of it this way: if a captious programmer wrote into the "listserve" program a cute little subroutine that sends his or her mother's killer key lime pie recipe ("the world would be a better place if everyone ate key lime pie") anytime the word "key" or "hate" appears in the text of the message, and you accidently sent listerv a message saying in the body of the text "joe went off to key west because he hates new york in winter" you would get a key lime pie recipe... e

↑ Index

364. Joseph S Zitt
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

On Mon, 22 Sep 1997, Layne Russell wrote:

> I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies" it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.

Welcome to the Internet, where InterNIC, the Gang that Couldn't Route Straight, creates and deletes sites and addresses with an incomprehensible aptitude for destruction previously reserved for volcano gods. This happens a lot, and is usually a case of a misplaced piece of paper or someone dozing off while doing global updates (really!).

I don't know fer shure if this has happened this time, but it is possible.

↑ Index

365. dbkk
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

At 9:56 AM +0000 9/22/97, Layne Russell wrote:

> I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies" it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.
>
> this situation needs to be sorted out. this is not right. what is going on? I hate to see this happening to anyone on this list.... it has to be a mistake.

I didn't see the beginning of this thread, having been out of town and not being able to face the 150+ old poetics messages that awaited me, but if I'm surmising right what's being discussed here--I believe that the issue is that pseudonyms are not allowed on the Poetics List--I don't think there's anything personal being/having been done to RS.

Dodie

↑ Index

366. mark weiss
Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
Mon 22 Sep 1997

Put another way: most creative writing departments, and for that matter lit departments, are on the conservative side, despite the occasional oddball, and in smaller college towns the college is the only likely vector.

At 02:02 PM 9/22/97 -0400, you wrote:
>On the whole this issue is simply (what a scientist would call) a sampling >problem, or an artifact of sample size....

>
>In the current shape of U.S. culture, people move rather a lot, so altho >historically both modernism and pomo poetical currents grew up within city >contexts to some extent, the fact that pomo or non-mainstream poetry >activities are found mostly in cities is simply because they are >numerically minority pursuits. There may be only 20 people deeply >interested in non-mainstream poetry activities in Georgia, for instance.
>By virtue of the size of their populations, Gainesville, GA and ALbany GA >are far less likely to contain any of these folks than is Atlanta.
>
>No okay in fact it's not that simple. Non-mainstream poetry is an >art-activity that correlates with a number of other keen cultural >interests and preferences, ones most likely to be satisfied in a large >"metropolitan" city than a small midwestern town....(film, dance, music, >visual arts, circles that discuss all these)...And for that matter the >institutions that support non-mainstream poetry itself are also more >likely to exist in a larger city..(..because of the concentration of >people and of financial resources there, also because of "metropolitan" >exposure to currents from afar, that assist cross-fertilization and >cultual innovation...) And for these reasons people engaged in interesting >poetry are likely to prefer a larger city to live in, if the logistics of >making a living allows them any say...
>
>But really, sample size is a lot of it.
>
>You'll notice I am bringing up only rather materialist >explanations...Given high mobility and lack of cohesive long-lasting >communities in the contemporary U.S., I don't think there is a strong >correlation between poetic styles and rural vs. urban environments, at >least in any way that can be quantified or generalized...(How urban or >rural surroundings affect any one particular poet in her work and life is >another matter, and was a thread of considerable interest here about eight >months ago)
>
>Mark Prejsnar
>Atlanta
>
>

↑ Index

367. Thomas Bell
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

I know I've experienced a lot of difficulty when I've changed servers and then tried to unsubscribe so I could resubscribe correctly. If you made any changes at all, Red, that would explain everything. tom bell

At 09:56 AM 9/22/97 +0000, Layne Russell wrote: >Herb Levy wrote:
>>
>> David,
>>
>> I don't know any details about Red Slider's removal from the poetics list,
>> but I do know that the e-address <[redacted]> does not seem to be valid
>> (at least running whois & a couple of other arcane protocols came up with >> nothing). If mail to this address began to bounce & Red Slider didn't send
>>
>> >further authentication of either his name or his e-ddress,
>>
>> there'd be no way for the automated listserv program to deal with him. If >> Red Slider has been getting e-mail forwarded through this address, it may >> no longer work.
>
>I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies"
>it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or >invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.
>
>this situation needs to be sorted out. this is not right. what is >going on? I hate to see this happening to anyone on this list.... it >has to be a mistake.
>
>I hope Red is back with us soon.
>
>
>Layne
>
>
>http://www.sonic.net/layne
>
>

↑ Index

368. Judy Roitman
Re: Rural vs. Urban Poetics?
Mon 22 Sep 1997

> On the whole this issue is simply (what a scientist would call) a sampling problem, or an artifact of sample size....

Well it's more confusing than that. For example some time has been spent on this list discussing the two Kansas poets Kenneth Irby and Ronald Johnson (oh I do hope I have that first name correct) --- there are major figures who don't live in big cities or even near one (believe me, as far as the arts go, KC doesn't count).

At this point in Lawrence KS you need more than one hand to count the number of local poets that I at least find interesting, which is a vast improvement over 10 years ago. This is of course an artifact of the mobility Mark Prejsnar mentioned, and a few personal crises here or there, or conversely a couple of big lottery wins, could decimate the local scene. Of course many of those who I don't find interesting don't find me interesting either... we are all nice to each other at the local Dillon's, we are midwesterners, midwesterners are nice.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas | memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days." [redacted]
| Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
---------- Note new area code
----
http://titania.math.ukans.edu/faculty/roitman/

↑ Index

369. Reuben Radding
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

Actually, there are a lot of things that could cause problems. I must echo the request someone made that paranoia be checked and people not jump to the conclusion that an innocent man has been mistreated. Listservers do not know when other systems go down for maintenence for instance, and if Red's system bounced even a few list messages (which would be easy for only a brief outage to trigger, given the volume of this list) than the he tried resubscribing? Has he spoken yet to the human being behind the scenes? Something like this could even have been the result of a sysadmin editing a file and accidentally leaving behind a tiny typo like an added "." or something. I'm sure if the right person has been addressed that this problem will be taken care of quickly.

BTW, I'm new to this list. Hi all.

-Reuben Radding
[redacted]

On Mon, 22 Sep 1997, Layne Russell wrote:

> [redacted] wrote:
>
> At 9:56 AM +0000 9/22/97, Layne Russell wrote:
>
> I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies" it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.
>
> this situation needs to be sorted out. this is not right. what is going on? I hate to see this happening to anyone on this list.... it has to be a mistake.
>
> *I didn't see the beginning of this thread, having been out of town and not being able to face the 150+ old poetics messages that awaited me, but if I'm surmising right what's being discussed here--I believe that the issue is that pseudonyms are not allowed on the Poetics List--I don't think there's anything personal being/having been done to RS.*
>
> Dodie
>
> Dodie and anyone who knows how this works,
>
> *Red Slider is Red Slider, and his email address is his email address. (He also has an extensive poetry website, is on two other poetry lists I'm on, and I know where he lives, etc.) How can the "list" determine otherwise? I don't understand.*
>
> Layne

↑ Index

370. Alan Jen Sondheim
The Doctor
Mon 22 Sep 1997

-+-

"I am the psychotherapist"

I am the psychotherapist. For your protection, I have been censored according to the Communications Decency Act. Please, describe your problems. Each time you are finished talking, type RET twice.

I cannot understand the language around me. I am moving to Japan. I am beginning a new life. Oh, what will become of me?

Why do you say that?

Because I worry that I won't be able to recognize myself in the face of others around me.

Is it because you worry that you will not be able to recognize yourself in the face of others around you that you came to me?

Yes, not so much an alienation but a misrecognition, one of hundreds of Gaijin, that is all.

Can you elaborate on that?

Koko ga itai n desu, the book says, It hurts here.

Maybe you should consult a doctor of medicine, I am a psychiatrist.

No, this is metaphoric, nothing more.

Earlier you said you worry that you will not be able to recognize yourself in the face of others around you?

Yes.

I see... Well, what makes you believe this is so?

Because I will be framed, because there is this woman ... I want ... I don't know ... some sort of success, simplicity in my life ... to write ... to fulfill my love, my work ... I can't express myself clearly to you.

I don't understand.

Which part?

Perhaps your plans have something to do with this.

Yes, here we part company, your narrowly-defined nature comes through, all too well...

Is it because of your life that you are going through all this?

God yes.

You mentioned that you worry that you will not be able to recognize yourself in the face of others around you?

Yes, in your face as well.

How do you reconcile the people you hang around with?

They are transparent, translucent, now.

Are you sure that they are transparent translucent now?

Yes, halfway leaving, halfway here.

Do you really think you worry that you will not be able to recognize yourself in the face of others around you?

Yes.

Yes, hmmm... so, what makes you think this is so?

Ah, now you're circular, there is little more to say; this returns, and doesn't, to the beginning...

Possibly this has something to do with problems at school?

No.

Why not?

School is already in the past.

Tell me about your school.

There is nothing to say in this regard. It's in the past.

Are you afraid of that?

No, well, yes, teaching and all that, what I'm excellent at...

Does it bother you that what you are excellent at?

Don't understand.

Are you frightened by that?

No.

Are you annoyed that I ask that?

No.

Why not?

??

I would appreciate it if you would continue.

There's little more to say. Again, I have a blank face to you, to the wall. I ask only for recognition, the most minor of sins. I long... yes, I long...

Earlier you said you worry that you will not be able to recognize yourself in the face of others around you?

Yes, we are back to that, aren't we?

When did you first know that are not you?

Ah, perhaps on July 31, 1997, I would think.

Maybe any hobbies you have are related to this.

No. Stop guessing...

Is it because of your sex life that you say stop guessing?

No...

Why not?

You repeat.

You mentioned that what you are excellent at?

Teaching.

Go on, don't be afraid.

I know.

Is it because of hangups you have that you are going through all this?

No, language, not hangups. This language, this repetition. We are lost in these words, they cure nothing.

Why do you say that?

Because they stem from your limitations; I run slipshod around them.

Is the fact that they stem from my limitations you run slipshod around them the real reason?

Yes.

I understand. So what makes you believe this is so?

You.

I need a little more detail please.

Just you.

Are you sure that you worry that you will not be able to recognize yourself in the face of others around you?

Yes. Another try, eh?

How do you reconcile your inhibitions?

I have none here.

Do you really think you have none there?

Yes.

Oh. ...And what makes you think this is so?

Because this is a discursive field, the boundaries yours, not mine.

Does the fact that this is a discursive field the boundaries mine not yours explain anything else?

Nothing, nothing, nothing.

[This could continue. Soulsickness has no remedies but presence. Here, presence circulates around itself; there is no Other. Words, bits and pieces, are picked up, dropped, smashed. Nothing exists. I am a hole in the text. The text bores itself, bores through Emacs. The Doctor is very old, I would say, very very old, the Eliza program present at the begin- ning of the Internet. I offer this as a gift. I offer myself as a gift to my lover, who will drag these words back out of circulation, arrange them into the semblance of speech.]

↑ Index

371. aldon l. nielsen
(no subject)
Mon 22 Sep 1997

To: [redacted], [redacted]
Subject: Re: Key into the language pies of America

Please send me that remarkable key lime pie recipe at once.

Also noted:

Interesting new book from Cambridge --

Chicano Poetics by Alfred Arteaga. much better than that other book on Chicano poetry!! If you never got hold of a copy of Arteaga's _Cantos_, his poem "The Small Sea of Europe" is reprinted here. Also reprinted is his essay from the _Other Tongue_ anthology. Both undergo a sea change in their new setting --

↑ Index

372. dbkk
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

At 2:00 PM -0500 9/22/97, Joseph S Zitt wrote:
>On Mon, 22 Sep 1997, Layne Russell wrote:

>
>> I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies"
>> it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or >> invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.
>
>Welcome to the Internet, where InterNIC, the Gang that Couldn't Route
>Straight, creates and deletes sites and addresses with an incomprehensible >aptitude for destruction previously reserved for volcano gods. This >happens a lot, and is usually a case of a misplaced piece of paper or >someone dozing off while doing global updates (really!).

Judging from the pissy hostile message Red sent to me this afternoon, I would say his address is working.

Dodie

↑ Index

373. Lawrence Upton.
Re: online resources, eh?
Mon 22 Sep 1997

---

ive read to goats and ive read to people

modest success
but all in all i prefer the goats they keep things in proportion leastways, the wild ones do

L

| From: Miekal And <[redacted]>
| To: [redacted]
| Subject: online resources, eh?
| Date: 22 September 1997 16:14
|
getting tired of reading to the goats.

↑ Index

374. Rachel Loden
query
Mon 22 Sep 1997

If anyone out there knew Bill (not James) Dickey and would be willing to entertain a question about him, please backchannel. Much thanks--

Rachel Loden
[redacted]

↑ Index

375. David Bromige
reading at SPT/New College, Oct 3
Mon 22 Sep 1997

I expect Dodie/Kevin will be posting about this, too, but thought I'd give a heads-up! since it's less than 2 weeks off :

EDMUND BERRIGAN & DAVID BROMIGE

read at New College, Friday October 3, 7: 30 pm

↑ Index

376. David Golumbia
Re: confusion/Red's 86
Mon 22 Sep 1997

While Red Slider asserts in the message recently forwarded to the list, surely he and his friends must realize that "Red Slider" sounds like a pseudyonym. Red asserts that he uses this name as a professional moniker, which presents a new problem to the list. But if what he says is true, and I have no reason to doubt him, then it is reasonable for him to participate under that name.

But given the history of the list, and our avowed and repeatedly-stated interest in keeping discussion at a certain above-board level, it would have been nice of "Red" to introduce himself when he first started posting to the list. Just to explain that "Red Slider" is the name he goes by.

We have had people before using pseudonyms whose purpose clearly was not to participate in an open manner. It is fair for us to be suspicious, and the Welcome message that Red and all new members receive -- & that's at the archive, etc. -- should provide enough clues for new members who want to participate in a somewhat different manner, just to provide the rest of us some accounting of that manner. I don't think that's a lot to ask.

& part of what makes the handle look suspicious, Layne, is that not just "Red Slider" but "[redacted]" looks like an attempt to hide. Herb Levy's point, if I remember right, is that not "The Farm" but "ns.net" that looks like part of a "virtual" email address. Which is to say that it looks like -- it may well not be -- a "fake" address that reroutes mail to Red Slider's real address. If it was, you would still be able to mail to Red Slider just as you do, but his "real" address might be [redacted]. Using such "virtual" addresses creates an appearance of wanting to be hidden. That seems a violation of the spirit of Poetics.

I believe Red Slider should be reinstated on the list. I also believe that a few words of explanation, if "Red Slider" is a true professional name and "[redacted]" is an email address pointing to a true Internet machine, would have prevented this from the beginning, and that some interest on Red's part in familiarizing himself with the list -- as the Welcome message asks him to do -- would have helped as well.

If you search the archives for the messages from "Filch" and the discussion following them, just for example, you will see why the members of the list have a right to be cautious.

--
[redacted]
David Golumbia

↑ Index

377. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: Red's "86"
Mon 22 Sep 1997

Joseph S Zitt wrote:
>
> On Mon, 22 Sep 1997, Layne Russell wrote:
>
> > I have emailed Red at his address (there is a website that "accompanies"
> > it) for many months. how on earth could the address be nonfunctional or > > invalid, etc.? this is quite a mystery, indeed.
>
> Welcome to the Internet, where InterNIC, the Gang that Couldn't Route
> Straight, creates and deletes sites and addresses with an incomprehensible > aptitude for destruction previously reserved for volcano gods. This > happens a lot, and is usually a case of a misplaced piece of paper or > someone dozing off while doing global updates (really!).
>
> I don't know fer shure if this has happened this time, but it is possible.

Hi, everyone. I just sent the enclosed message to Red Slider, and want to repost it. I don't know what's gone down backchannel, but this issue does deserve attention.

Red, I just saw Layne Russell's forward of the message you received about not having authorization to post messages from "[redacted]". I received a similar message several months ago when my domain name changed from "@tribeca.ios.com" to "@idt.net," and a note to the listserv corrected the problem quickly. Since you don't appear to have changed your email address, I don't understand [probably any more than you do] that message from the listserv. Nor do I remember any particularly vicious messages from you to the list [certainly nothing above about a 3 on the Beaufort scale], so that doesn't seem a credible reason for your ouster, either. As to the name issue, I wonder whether Lewis Carroll or Mark Twain would've found themselves chased out of wonderland by angry cards [sorry] or pushed off the stern of a riverboat. Novalis wouldn't stand a chance. What about Woody Allen? Englebert Humperdinck? The Artist Formerly Known As Prince? <<BTW: If I remember correctly, Kim Dawn Baker's name originally appeared in the "From:" line simply as "Kim Dawn"--possibly worth asking the listserv about?>> Not to mention some dissident writer resorting to an alias in attempting to stay alive and still communicate from a country where identity=death! Perhaps your point about the CA AG issuing a subpoena in [dare I call it?] YOUR NAME will carry some weight. I hope so. Best, Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

378. dbkk

Torres/Scalapino at SPT

Tue 23 Sep 1997

Small Press Traffic presents

Leslie Scalapino
Edwin Torres

Friday, September 26, 7:30 p.m.
New College Theater
777 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Leslie Scalapino¹s writing takes place in the fickle, monumental and often beautiful present: now. (If there were no present tense, her writing alone would have invented and identified it.) But it expands back and forth, pumping like a systole, into the primitive past and the unimaginable future. We in the Bay Area are spoiled, for we get to have Leslie Scalapino with us _almost all the time._ An outstanding performer and playwright, she is the author of many books, including the recent _Green and Black: Selected Poems_ (Talisman House Books).

The brilliant Nuyorican poet and performance worker makes his debut in San Francisco, and Small Press Traffic¹s got him. When we read in _New York_ magazine, ³It¹s hard to wrestle meaning from the shreds of language he tosses out. And on paper, Torres seems to make as much sense as a Port Authority schizophrenic,² we knew that Edwin Torres was our kind of guy. ³It is obvious that Edwin Torres is the bastard love child of Mayakovsky and Parra, midwifed by Apollinaire,² writes Christian Haye in _The Poetry Project Newsletter_. His books include _I Hear Things People Haven¹t Really Said_ and _Lung Poetry_.

↑ Index

379. David Bromige
readers' versions of great lit
Tue 23 Sep 1997

I don't think we need to be intimidated by anything, & surely not by readers' versions of great lit. Are we really intending to go on reproducing novels & poems from the past word for word into an infinite future? Give me a break!

I append two "readers' versions" of two recognizable poems (of which one is only partially here; I got tired) by two poets who have recently been mentioned on the List, & inquire, Where is the harm in it?

* * * * * * * *

The great poet "disappeared."
It was during a cold spell.
When the day "died," the mercury
In the thermometer in "its" "mouth"
Began to congeal. It "grew" shorter.

On other Channels one watched wolves Running through trees & bushes
Or rivers with spiffy quays & locks;
The poems didn't know he had "vanished,"
Because poems don't _know_ anything.

You only go around once
& you only die once & he spent an afternoon
Doing just that; funny (odd) when you think About it happening to yourself. Here
Today, gone tomorrow; where's the point of it?
A human being's physicality allies us
With our creations : systems of transportation like the Tube,

Those neat little parks Brits put in the middle of squares.
After you die, you _are_ what they read, if you wrote.

Now he can be violated by anyone
With no chance to defend himself :
He shouldn't have published all those poems.
He's become a ticker tape parade.

Stockbrokers' assistants are a noisy lot.
Scarcely better than animals, & surely more ugly.
When you are poor, & own no stock,
You have to get used to beauty being inedible,
Although it can be licked. (This bit is about Consolations, I guess, to highlight the inconsolable).
After all, if you never leave the house & live alone, you often get your own way.
Where were you when you heard Yeats had died?
Was it cold and dark where you were, too, Ranjit ?

* * * * * * * * *

I was the first person performing an act with an object Slightly south of the Mason-Dixon Line. I describe the object & tell something of how as a result of the action I performed,

The entire environment was changed, leastways subjectively. It behaved ("sprawled") just as it had before, so wasn't changed, But I tell you it was changed, & that says something about me.

My object was a man-made thing & I felt it tamed the whole scene. It rimed with words like itself--per-fect, ne-glect--& was tall. (Not as tall as me.) It carried the brandname of its manufacturer

Wherever it went. Being the result of artifice, although made of minerals, It could never have kits or pups or chicks, or young sprouts. This is all I can recall of the incident. My husband sired these triplets.

↑ Index

380. Spencer Selby

RADDLE MOON 's new address (fwd)

Tue 23 Sep 1997

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Mon, 22 Sep 1997 17:17:42 -0700
From: Susan Clark <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Cc: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
Subject: RADDLE MOON 's new address

dear Spencer, dear list,

please address all RADDLE MOON or GIANTESS correspondence, submissions, subscriptions, etc. to our new address:

RADDLE MOON / GIANTESS
Main Space
518-350 East Second Avenue
Vancouver, BC
V5T 4R8 CANADA

And, thanks, Spencer for continuing this most useful -- and heartening
-- list.
Susan

Susan Clark

↑ Index

381. rsillima
Impercipient Spicer Bio
Tue 23 Sep 1997

I just want to note how tremendous the new Impercipient Lecture Series excerpt from the Lew Ellingham-Kevin Killian life of Jack Spicer is. It makes me hungry for the whole book! Congrats on a fabulous job.

Ron

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road
Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

382. Eliza McGrand
Re: online resources, eh?
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

dear mikael:

next time you read to us, could you throw in the latest baseball scores? by the time the paper gets to us, its pretty old...

us goats

↑ Index

383. Layne Russell
Re: Red Slider
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

p. durgin wrote:
>
> Herb, et. al.
>
> Where will I find R. Slider's poetry site?
>
> I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

Red's site is at:

http://www.ns.net/~TheFarm/poetry/Poetry_Lobby.htm#topmark

(His site is listed along with many other Poetics list members' sites on my poetry links library page: http://www.sonic.net/layne/poetrylnk.html)

Layne

Layne

↑ Index

384. Layne Russell
Re: Red Slider
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

p. durgin wrote:
>
> Herb, et. al.
>
> Where will I find R. Slider's poetry site?
>
> I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

Red's site is at:

http://www.ns.net/~TheFarm/poetry/Poetry_Lobby.htm#topmark

(His site is listed along with many other Poetics list members' sites on my poetry links library page: http://www.sonic.net/layne/poetrylnk.html)

Layne

↑ Index

385. Eliza McGrand
uniform standards and passionate unique
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

dear red slider

i think in the blitz of all this, you are taking this list thing perhaps more personally than meant. i don't offer this so much in a gently-chiding-i- understand-the-world way as in a sympathetic, but not wanting to see this all continue to go wildly askew way... the first time my poetics mail shut off i thought i got bumped and sent backchannel a few inquiries and felt quite censored and hurt-feelinged till i found out that NO ONE was getting mail! now i'm a veteran of a few years, i've seen that happen enough times that it is almost a predictable thing. everytime list goes down, someone sends a sad little note saying "geez why won't anyone let me have mail" or akin.

i realize that isn't your issue, but it is analogous. now, re your issue, there are lots of things you are perhaps not taking into account. first, this list has a number of "well-known" (in the wierd incestous literature/ academy kind of way) people. it has lots of people no ones ever heard of. it has poets, musicians, academics. it has posts of all sorts. so, speaking from long readership, there is clearly not a Big Brother waiting out there to censor writers.

but there is a pretty rational policy. people could (probably someone has tried at one time or another) subscribe under someone else's name w/o their permission and write lots of things that person would never have said. or one could subscribe as an unknown young faculty member if one had a grudge against that particular unknown faculty member and by posting cleverly do some real damage to a career. hence, i think the poetics list owners have decided no fake names. period. you are who you are so you take responsability for what you post.

re last, this list has been used,and i've seen it used, as a primary research site, and though we expect things are always verified, still, papers have been written from material generated on this list. again, one could do some pretty irresponsible misinforming if one took it into one's head to do so (and i speak of a victim of this exact thing). an inflexible "real name" rule at least reduces chances of this.

i don't know if listowners insist on real name appended to all posts, but i think at the least, they want to be themselves in possession of certainty that whoever you say you are is really who you are. in situation of someone from country where they are in fear of political retaliation, we had a discussion about that a while ago in another context -- someone on list who has since been taken off posted some very private material with a phone number and name attached for no real reason. one of the main fears was, in fact, the possibility that in open net environment, person whose number was violated might be subjected to net harassment. if someone from a repressive country wanted subscription to list, probably a talk with listowners/sys admins might be enough to clear matter, but it is possible that the mechanisms of listserve program simply will not allow use of pseudonyms, no matter what. program protocals may be set up to boot anything coming back as undeliverable, and since software not written at buffalo, but obtained as package, i don't think it can be rewritten.

anyway, layne, the reason "TheFarm" is being assumed to be a name is that the convention, in email addresses, is to have [redacted], i.e. [redacted] or [redacted]. if red slider's name really IS red slider, and he just uses nickname "TheFarm" as his email name, he should be ok. but i think the problem might be that we start with funky non-name name, and go to what sounds like another non-name, "red slider." the worst (so far, and hopefully period) mess we had was generated by an unknown person hiding behind a fake name -- as i'm sure you can imagine, when people are using a fake name, the possibility for abuse widens considerably.

boringly yours
YesMyRealNameIs, sadly, elliza

↑ Index

386. Layne Russell
Re: Red Slider' url
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

p. durgin wrote:
>
> Herb, et. al.
>
> Where will I find R. Slider's poetry site?
>
> I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

Red's site is at:

http://www.ns.net/~TheFarm/poetry/Poetry_Lobby.htm#topmark

(His site is listed along with many other Poetics list members' sites on my poetry links library page: http://www.sonic.net/layne/poetrylnk.html)

Layne

p.s. please notice "TheFarm" is the name of both Red's site and email, both on NSNet of Sacramento, CA.

↑ Index

387. Dean Taciuch

Re: confusion/Red's 86 (fwd)

Tue 23 Sep 1997

On Mon, 22 Sep 1997, Layne Russell wrote:
>
> here is a copy of red's email sent to me regarding the correspondence:
>
> ----------
>
> Subject:
> 86'd from SUNY
> Date:
> Fri, 19 Sep 1997 23:42:57 -0700
> From:
> red slider <[redacted]>
> To:
> "'[redacted]'" <[redacted]>, "'[redacted]'"
> <[redacted]>
>
[cut]
> ---
>
> You are not authorized to send mail to the POETICS list > from > your > [redacted] account. You might be authorized to send to the > list
> from > another of your accounts, or perhaps when using another mail > program > which > generates slightly different addresses, but LISTSERV has no way to > associate > this other account or address with yours. If you need assistance or if > you > have > any question regarding the policy of the POETICS list, please contact > the > list

> owners: [redacted].
>
> ---------- Rejected message (140 lines)
> ----------

All--I for one have gotten this exact same message on a few occassions. My University account, from which I am subscribed, uses three different forms of my address (@osf1.gmu.edu and @mason.gmu.edu, as well as @gmu.edu). When I log in, I am connected to whichever server is least busy, unless I specify which I want.). I can only post, however, from my osf1 address (even though it is equivalent to the others, the Listserve has no way of knowing that.) The message I've quoted above is automatically sent whenever there's any confusion over an email address. I've gotten it too, and no-one's trying to kick me off the list.

The followups about names appear to be beside the point. Its an address foul-up, not an identity issue.

Dean

↑ Index

388. David R. Israel

Re: confusion/Red's 86 (fwd)

Tue 23 Sep 1997

What Dean T. says seems prob. basically right --

> The message I've quoted above is automatically sent whenever there's any confusion over an email address. I've gotten it too, and no-one's trying to kick me off the list.
>
> The followups about names appear to be beside the point. Its an address foul-up, not an identity issue.

except, I note that formerly Red had posted to the List from exactly the same address -- which leads me to think some accident occurred, such that his address, w/o intention, got dropped from the roster.

The simple remedy (& a test of this "it ain't nuthin' but a mixup" reading of the situ ayshun) should be to re-subscribe.

copying Red, for what worth.

best,
d.i.
.

```
.....
............
\\\
```

Here's the good part:
In closing Terry mentioned that the biggest problem people have with poetry is that they feel they don't understand it. Pinsky says, "but people like a lot of things they don't understand... sex comes to mind."

From Washington,
I'm Carol Mirakove

↑ Index

391. Jack Foley
online resources, eh? -Reply
Tue 23 Sep 1997

For leads, try http://www.pw.org/ That's the Poets & Writers site. It might be helpful, if only as a useful point of departure.

>>> Miekal And <[redacted]> 09/22/97 10:14am >>>
Wondering if anyone knows of any online resources that compile places (both academic & beyond) which are actively seeking poets & writers for reading programs, residencies, & workshops....

getting tired of reading to the goats.

miekal

↑ Index

392. James Finnegan
Re: readers' versions of great lit
Tue 23 Sep 1997

In a message dated 97-09-23 01:08:31 EDT, you write:

> I don't think we need to be intimidated by anything, & surely not by readers' versions of great lit. Are we really intending to go on reproducing novels & poems from the past word for word into an infinite future? Give me a break!

David,

Some writers (& readers) aren't afraid
to be duly intimidated.

Reverence and reference aren't sins.
I'm intimidated by Maximus Olson,

esp. that hefty California edition. And Milton scares the bejesus out of me.

Finnegan

Retort Overheard in a North Beach Bar

"I knew Jack Kerouac, and you're no Jack Kerouac."

↑ Index

393. henry g
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

didn't ol' Eddie Poe say the ESSENTIAL thing about poetry was it's vagueness/mystery/obscurity? Was Eddie on the ball here?

my current philologist hero Potebnia (of Kiev, 19th cent.) based his whole theoretical edifice on the concept of the "inner image" - a characteristic shared on different levels both by language in general and by poetry - the essential quality of which is excess of meaning or unlimited denotation/connotation -

as opposed to "scientific prose" at the other end of the scale, in which the referent of a word is strictly limited -

do we understand this? But I don't read this as a license for lazy mystification - poet has to shape the building - is there an usher in the house? - Henry Gould

↑ Index

394. Burt Kimmelman
Re: readers' versions of great lit
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

sorry david et al.,

i'll take my chaucer, my dante, indeed my shakespeare, straight with no chaser. sure, i can see how those of us in society who don't read well enough or don't have the linguistic training might benefit from reading a homogenized joyce--or perhaps some time soon a dumbed-down pynchon or the like--but i object to the perpetuation of the myth that, say, the danis version of ulysses Is what joyce was about or that it Is the real thing.

hey i'm shocked that a language-y guy like you, david, would be so complacent about reader's digest kind of rehash. Hmm, let me say, I wonder what Hallmark could do with some of your own lyrics.... You wouldn't mind, I presume.

burt

↑ Index

395. David R. Israel
riffing (re: readers' versions of great lit)
Tue 23 Sep 1997

James Finnegan nicely wrote,

> Some writers (& readers) aren't afraid
> to be duly intimidated.
>
> Reverence and reference aren't sins.
> I'm intimidated by Maximus Olson,
> esp. that hefty California edition. And > Milton scares the bejesus out of me.

skipping over knotty culdesacs of not-being-afraid-tobe-intimidated, aye zeroing in on what a fine line is JF's final one -- here's riffing on same, in prosody-of-ghazal manner (sorta) -- call it a hasty draft . . .

(the form requires the poet to self-address in final couplet, ergo the "Ardeo" [a nom-de-plume])

d.i.

Milton scares the bejesus out of me
what a sigh Hafez squeezes out of me

Shakespeare had me cowering in corners
Chaucer ironed the creases out of me

gotcher Keats in a careful conch?
Shelley elicited teases out of me watching Walt doze long on th' lawn

Emily's bees rode breezes out of me

Dante daunted -- words were hushed rivers of Tagorean peace came out of me history hides (quoth Waldo) here?

every age now wheezes out of me sometimes buttermilk sometimes cream kefir fetched tart cheeses out of me

Franz's Geothe's elvin king -- such dark flame releases out of me

Ginsberg sings from my t.v. screen
Yasusada seizes -- out of me cuneiform bytes! sanskritic scrawl! -- dada data sneezes out of me

po-laur Pinsky shrugged off p'formance?
slam-dunk po no ease is? (daughtily)

Lazarus' lazy loll were lost?
feats like these bring "Jesus!" out of me

Red October -- mid-September Greenage paints dark greases out of me look at sky or gaze at ground -- Ardeo! quit ere quease comes out of me

```
 .
 .....
 ............
 \\\\
```

Dodie

Small Press Traffic presents

Edmund Berrigan
David Bromige

Friday, October 3, 7:30 p.m.
New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street, San Francisco
$5

Edmund Berrigan is the author of two Idiom chapbooks, _Counting the Hats and Ducks_ and _A Serious Earth (with drawings by William Yackulic). His poems have been published in _Arshile, Mirage #4/Period[ical], Talisman,_ and _The World._ Berrigan‹formerly manager of Small Press Traffic‹is an accomplished singer and actor, but his forte is poetry. For most of us, poetry is a second language, but for him it¹s almost his first, a sustaining and living M.O. His best work delights and perplexes with its resolute treatment of, and analytic questioning of, pleasure and risk, danger and play. ³Great art is creating us;/ strung down, tuned low,/ its hands are our feel &/ show us dims that glower/ like a coward retreating/ from the scene of his crime.²

David Bromige has had thirty books published, many by Black Sparrow, and most recently, by Avec Books (_A Cast of Tens_) and Sun & Moon (_The Harbormaster of Hong Kong_). ³Ron Silliman says that _My Poetry_ (1980) changed the world of poetry, & stood Langpo on its head. Few have been that generous.² David Bromige has been an inspiration to poets in the US, UK and Canada for over thirty years. He has won two NEA awards, two Canada Council awards, a Western States Book Award, a Stein, a Pushcart, was Poet Laureate of UC (all campuses) in 1965, and dubbed a Living Treasure of Sonoma County in 1995. He¹s currently writing a novel called _Success_. ³I published Ted Berrigan in 1866, a typo that says volumes,² he writes. ³In 1995, at Naropa, I gave Alice Notley a single rose, not a romantic gesture, but because I¹d been an asshole in argument the night before. And now along comes Edmund. ŒOld age,¹ quipped George Oppen, Œwhat a strange thing to happen to a boy.¹ I¹ll be the one with painful feet.²

↑ Index

397. Christopher Alexander
Re: confusion/Red's 86 (fwd)
Tue 23 Sep 1997

David Israel wrts:
> What Dean T. says seems prob. basically right -- [snip] > except, I note that formerly Red had posted to the List from exactly > the same address -- which leads me to think some accident occurred, > such that his address, w/o intention, got dropped from the roster.

just a brief reminder to the folks out there—& hopefully a small corrective to the, um, paranoia that seems to be growing from DB's wonderfully witty "1984" reference (& you'd just let it go, too, you devil!)— re "email technology", viz. that (as always) what appears to be a simple transaction, e.g.
this message sent from one address to another, actually masks a very complex system of exchange. for example, my email address is [redacted]
—but that address is really just a dummy which conceals a good deal of the process of getting mail to me, ostensibly (& indeed this is usually the case) simplifying the process @ the user end. at one time, mail sent to me @ this address eventually came to me on the library's Alexandria server (get it?), but then I was moved to another server, then my "context" on that server was changed, then the address standard for our organization was changed & so forth. so though my email address has apparently remained the same, the actual address that I was receiving mail @ & posting from has changed several times—not unlike the example Dean gives of accessing his mail via different addresses.
each of these changes has involved some re-negotiation with Listserv, the program that powers the poetics list, & with the folks who maintain it (special thanks to

Joel, but also his invisible fellows like the mysterious "not Joel").

for an example of how complex all of this really is, try to find the "show all headers" or a comparable command in your email software, & examine the "full header" of this message, i.e., the full path of its transmission beginning with my server & ending with yours.
here's what I get when I view Dean's post:

MDT7MST Return-path: <[redacted]>
(Mercury 1.31);
23 Sep 97 06:56:20 MDT7MST
-0000 Received: from listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu (128.205.7.35)
by deliverance.acsu.buffalo.edu with SMTP; 23 Sep 1997 12:48:50
-0000
(LISTSERV-TCP/IP release 1.8c) with spool id 20706857 for [redacted]; Tue, 23 Sep 1997 08:48:47
-0400
-0000 Received: from osf1.gmu.edu (129.174.1.13) by listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu with SMTP; 23 Sep 1997 12:48:46 -0000
(5.65v4.0/1.1.8.2/07Sep94-1001AM/GMUv3) id AA05730; Tue, 23
Sep 1997 08:48:46 -0400
Date: Tue, 23 Sep 1997 08:48:46 -0400 Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> Sender: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> From:
Dean Taciuch <[redacted]> Subject: Re: confusion/Red's 86 (fwd) To:
[redacted] X-PMFLAGS: 34078848 0

there's no reason to decipher all of this—suffice to say, there's more going on here than you think, & plenty of places for a problem to crop up; though, as I implied, the most likely problem is an "invisible" (or so she/he thought) change made by Red's Internet Service Provider.

> The simple remedy (& a test of this "it ain't nuthin' but a mixup" > reading of the situ ayshun) should be to re-subscribe.

probably this wld @ least allow Red to send/receive poetics posts. what I've had to do before is re-subscribe, & have the listserv admins bump my old address off the subscribers list.

sorry to go on @ such length! guess
I'm playing techie to make up for Alan Sondheim's temporarily reduced list presence ["hi Alan"].

best, Chris—"temporarily reduced"?!

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

398. David Bromige
divers (red 86'd; Pinsky on NPR; readers' versions)
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Given the interest among Listopolitans in the Red Slider case, I hope further elucidation will be forthcxoming from the Buffalo office. While it is so that some of his messages from Head Office were computer-generated, it is quite clear that at least one missive (forwarded to the List by Layne Russell) was written by a person. What is needed now is for that person to step forward and address the List, so that we can hear his/her version events, and learn whether Red Slider has been axed for rule-violations (which rules? how transgressed? on what evidence?), or whether what we are witnessing here is merely a rush of power to the head somewhere in the Snowy City.

* * * * * * *

Pinsky on NPR : I seldom listen to NPR, probably because I am within range of KPFA, and why eat hamburger when you can have steak? But perhaps I malign NPR. I know they offer Andrei Codrrescu. But apart from that, do they offer poets of a stripe not that of Robert Pinsky? Has any one of the following smatter of poets been aired : Ron Silliman, Lyn Hejinian, Bob Perelman, Leslie Scalapino, Bruce Andrews, Abigail Childs, Steve McCaffery, Karen Mac Cormack, Jackson Mac Low, Jennifer Moxley, Charles Bernstein, Rae Armantrout, Pierre Joris, Laura Moriarty, Michael Davidson, Harriet Mullen, Nick Piombino, Erica Hunt? If so, on which program, and at what time does it air? Thanks.

* * * * * * * *

I am sorry that the savage irony of my "readers' versions" posting didn't come through. It's probably because my travesties were too good. To be dull about it, we _do_ have the originals, but must take care to indicate to the students which these are, agreed. My purpose split when I started having too much fun. I will be posting versions of Olson and Milton later this week. And James, I will do you too if you will post a poemn to the List. As for a contract with Hallmark, I'm ready. It can't be worse than the movie of the book, and there are hungry mouths to be fed.

And of course, as George Bowering would point out, my entire oeuvre is a travesty of his.

David Idenitity, at arbitrary-coded e-ddress, Smalltown, USA.

↑ Index

399. Christopher Alexander
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Carol Mirakove wrts:
> Terry Gross had Robert Pinsky on Fresh > Air last night. I missed a lot of the > interview because I was assembling furniture > while listening and the electric screwdriver > drowned him right out [...]

that sounds like:
A) a practical response to a bad situation;
B) an incidental critique of Pinksy & his ilk; &
C) such beautiful music...

[Joe Amato: "How 'bout / She sang beyond the genuis / of the c?"]

--

(meanwhile in the Bat Cave) Henry wrrrrt: > didn't ol' Eddie Poe say the ESSENTIAL thing about poetry was it's > vagueness/mystery/obscurity? Was Eddie on the ball here?

I'd prefer to think it implies a different kind of understanding or is structured by a different kind of (dialectical?) logic, as opposed to this

"vagueness/mystery/obscurity"—or at least I'd opt for that characterization right now.

> my current philologist hero Potebnia (of Kiev, 19th cent.) based his whole theoretical edifice on the concept of the "inner image" - a characteristic shared on different levels both by language in general and by poetry - the essential quality of which is excess of meaning or unlimited denotation/connotation -
> as opposed to "scientific prose" at the other end of the scale, in which the referent of a word is strictly limited -

Henry, are you familiar with the work of Jean Jacques LeCercle (specifically, The Violence of Language)? I'm not particularly taken with him, but it does seem like (some)one might be able to do something with the apparent relation between Potebnia's theory & LeCercle's "we speak language" &/or "language speaks us" model.

best, Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

400. Herb Levy
Red Slider
Tue 23 Sep 1997

There are two distinct things about the recent Red Slider affair.

One is the simple automated reply to a post from an e-mail address that's not on the list. This is no big deal, regardless of how ominous the generic text may sound to some. This message for instance was first sent through the ISP I use when I'm not home (cause I'm not home) & poetics only recognizes [redacted], so I got the bounce message.

As a few folks have posted, this can be due to a lot of things that are out of any individual's hands, ISP's change things around in ways that don't affect how we use then, but can affect the way our communicaations with the outside world.

The other problem with this, however, is the subsequent exchange with Slider, not simply because it's unsigned, but because in addition to the bounce message, further action was taken that seems to have been arbitrarily meted out.

All that said, I'd like to note my favorite line from Slider's poetry Web site:

"Biography: just like it says, a brief bibliography."

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

401. p. durgin
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Henry, The mystification, how can it be anything but lazy? Brave and lazy at once. The sweat comes in when one transposes their mystical experience into text. And what of chance operations? Doesn't indeterminacy, instead of precluding the mystical, reverse the dynamic? Patrick F. Durgin

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Tue, 23 Sep 1997, henry g wrote:

> didn't ol' Eddie Poe say the ESSENTIAL thing about poetry was it's vagueness/mystery/obscurity? Was Eddie on the ball here?
>
> my current philologist hero Potebnia (of Kiev, 19th cent.) based his whole theoretical edifice on the concept of the "inner image" - a characteristic shared on different levels both by language in general and by poetry - the essential quality of which is excess of meaning or unlimited denotation/connotation -
>
> as opposed to "scientific prose" at the other end of the scale, in which the referent of a word is strictly limited -
>
> do we understand this? But I don't read this as a license for lazy mystification - poet has to shape the building - is there an usher in the house?
> - Henry Gould

↑ Index

402. p. durgin
Re: Red Slider
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Herb, et. al.

Where will I find R. Slider's poetry site?

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

↑ Index

403. Christopher Alexander
Re: readers' versions of great lit
Tue 23 Sep 1997

David Bromige wrt:
> I append two "readers' versions" of two recognizable poems (of which one is > only partially here; I got tired) by two poets who have recently been > mentioned on the List, & inquire, Where is the harm in it?

David, you're clearly brilliant.
as if we hadn't noticed already.

Chris
..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

404. Timothy Materer
trangression?
Tue 23 Sep 1997

What is needed now is for that person to >step forward and address the List, so that we can hear his/her version >events, and learn whether Red Slider has been axed for rule-violations >(which rules? how transgressed? on what evidence?)

Right. What I can't understand, but I may not understand the situation, is how anyone can be kept off a public, unmoderated e-mail list.

Timothy Materer, 228 Tate Hall, English Department
University of Missouri, Columbia MO 65211
http://www.missouri.edu/~engtim

↑ Index

405. Carol Mirakove
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Tue 23 Sep 1997

David Bromidge wonders:
> But perhaps I
> malign NPR. I know they offer Andrei Codrrescu. But apart from that, do > they offer poets of a stripe not that of Robert Pinsky? Has any one of the > following smatter of poets been aired : Ron Silliman, Lyn Hejinian, Bob > Perelman, Leslie Scalapino, Bruce Andrews, Abigail Childs, Steve McCaffery, > Karen Mac Cormack, Jackson Mac Low, Jennifer Moxley, Charles Bernstein, Rae
> Armantrout, Pierre Joris, Laura Moriarty, Michael Davidson, Harriet Mullen, > Nick Piombino, Erica Hunt? If so, on which program, and at what time does > it air? Thanks.

No, and don't be silly. Last spring Robert Hass was on twice (once with Pinsky). I'm sure Rita Dove has been on as well, plus Maya Angelou...

Actually, I find the interviews fascinating. I suppose this is because I relish the sensation of frustration. Seriously, it's good to reinforce that the poet laureate is who you'd basically expect he'd be.

Much worse than the interviews are the poetry clips on NPR. Last winter they were on an "anti-poem" kick and it seemed like Naomi Shihab Nye was in my speaker every damn week.

But I don't expect much of radio in that way, i.e., I don't expect it to include non-mainstream poets. I think my expectations grow out of the fact that radio is expensive and in general it seems that the more something drips with money the more standard it's likely to be. In contrast, I expected much more "risky" (i.e., potentially offputting to the reader) poems to appear in Hass's poet's corner, but in the 100 or so weeks he's done it, I there has been ONE Sun & Moon poet by my count and few if any small-press poets.

Carol

↑ Index

406. matt
antonio negri
Tue 23 Sep 1997

my apologies for cross posting and any offensive comments about what a terrible thing this is etc etc can be posted straight back to my trash.

matt

>FREEDOM FOR TONI NEGRI
>PUTTING AN END TO THE "YEARS OF LEAD" IN ITALY
>
> Toni Negri has been in prison in Rome since July 1, 1997. He has >been sentenced to more than 13 years in prison, not counting another >conviction that is now in the appeal process. After residing in >France in exile since 1983, he returned to Italy voluntarily in the >hope that his action would contribute to the resolution of the problem >of the exiles and prisoners who are wanted or convicted for the >political activities of the 1970s in Italy, the so-called "years of >lead." About 180 people are still in Italian prison under these >charges and about 150 are in exile, the majority of them in France.
> Toni Negri was a professor at the University of Padua and his >writings are well-known throughout the world. He was arrested on >April 7, 1979 and accused of "armed insurrection against the powers of >the State." To support this accusation, his accusers presented him as >the secret leader of the Red Brigades, the terrorist group that had >kidnapped and assassinated Aldo Moro, President of the Christian >Democratic Party. Negri has always denied this absurd accusation and >he was later formally acquitted of this charge. Charges against him >were modified numerous times. After four and a half years of >preventive detention, he was elected to parliament as a representative >of the Radical Party and was consequently released from prison. When >the Chamber of Deputies subsequently voted by a narrow margin to strip >him of his parliamentary immunity and send him back to prison, he fled >to France. The court procedures against him continued in his absence >and led to convictions under several charges and in several different >trials. At the time, Amnesty International denounced the serious legal >irregularities of Negri's trial and those of his colleagues at the >University of Padua. During his exile, Toni Negri worked in France as >a teacher at the University of Paris VIII, at the Coll
>ge >International de Philosophie, and as a social science researcher. He >published numerous books during this period.
> Due to his notoriety Negri has become the emblematic figure of >the Italian radical Left of the 1970s. Beginning in the Autumn of >1969 there began in Italy a period of intense social conflicts that >were exacerbated by the very ambiguous role of certain State agencies >in what was called a "strategy of tension," in other words, the >manipulation of the neo-fascist groups responsible for a deadly >bombing campaign at such sites as Piazza Fontana and the Bologna train >station. The radicalization of the Italian extra-parliamentary Left >and the social movements led a large number of activists toward the >path of wide-spread political violence and a few of them toward armed >struggle. Between 1976 and 1980, tens of thousands of activists were >pursued by the police and more than five thousand arrested. Hundreds >of long-term sentences were handed out on the basis of emergency laws >that are still in effect, including principally the so-called law of >the "repentants." This law makes the testimony of accused persons who >have "repented" the sufficient basis for the conviction of others, and >allows for them to be set free in return for having turned State's >evidence. Another emergency measure allows for preventive detention >to extend retroactively up to twelve years. This measure is radically >incompatible with the principles of the rule of law and the basic >rules of penal procedure, as they are defined by articles 5 and 6 of >the European Convention of Human Rights and protected by the European >Court of Human Rights. One can assume that the highly contestable >nature of such legislation is what has led Italy's democratic >neighbors such as France and Great Britain to have serious doubts >about these cases and not to act on the majority of the more than >seventy requests for extradition presented by Italian authorities, >regardless of the political party in power. For the same reason, >undoubtedly, the over five hundred refugees who have been accepted in >France over these years have never been disturbed or harassed. These >refugees have integrated into French society, finding work and >building families. Now they do not want to risk their futures and the >lives they have constructed in order to resolve twenty-five-year old >sentences that were handed down in such dubious emergency conditions.

> The object of this appeal should not be interpreted in any way to >condone the real or supposed activities of those pursued and convicted >for their activities during the "years of lead." The refugees have >declared unambiguously that the "war" is over. "That period has >ended." A democracy worthy of that name must be able to turn the >page. Today these nearly four hundred exiles and prisoners are >excluded from Italian society. A problem of this order cannot be >resolved on a case by case basis, but must be addressed with a general >solution.
> A bill for an "indulto" (a reduction of sentences by a vote of >parliament) was introduced nine years ago but has not yet come up for >a vote. Such a bill would have positive effects, but it would not >resolve the refugees' problems. The only solution for Toni Negri and >his unfortunate companions would be an amnesty. The only amnesty that >has been passed in Italy was in 1946, which Togliatti supported with >regard to the fascists. On the other hand, for the activities linked >to France's war in Algeria and concerning actions of a gravity more or >less equivalent to those committed in the 1970s in Italy, France >granted an amnesty to both the deserting soldiers and the members of >the OAS.

> Since we support the principles of the rule of law and the re->establishment of human rights everywhere for everyone, as Italy >prepares for integration into the new Europe, we ask urgently that the >Italian members of parliament respond favorably to this appeal for >clemency by passing an amnesty law as soon as possible. We also ask >the representatives of the European Union to take appropriate measures >to insure the swift release of Toni Negri. If he symbolized one era, >then his release will symbolize another, calmer one. Finally, by >repealing the series of exceptional measures that are incompatible >with the European Convention of Human Rights, Italy would live up to >its central role in the new Europe.
>
>----------
>
>
>PETITION
> Having understood the circumstances, we support the appeal in >favor of the release of Toni Negri in order to put an end to the >"years of lead" in Italy.
> Toni Negri was in France for fourteen years. He sought refuge >there in 1983 after serving four and a half years of preventive >detention in Italy. He has now returned voluntarily to Italy where he >has been sentenced to prison for eminently political reasons on the >basis of an arsenal of emergency measures (such as convictions based >solely on the testimony of "repentants" and extended preventive >detention) that are incompatible with the European Convention of Human >Rights.
> He has been in prison since July 1, 1997 and his release (which >will likely be only a work release) has still not come about.
> Four hundred people are excluded from Italian society on the >basis of political activity conducted twenty years ago. The more than >150 refugees in France do not want to destroy the lives they have >constructed in order to address these sentences based on emergency >measures. European authorities on the Right and the Left have not >extradited the refugees back to Italy, and they have thus expressed >sotto voce their disdain for the Italian procedures.
> The wide-spread political violence of the Italian social >struggles, which has been conflated under the label of Italian

>"terrorism," is something that ended long ago. Can a democracy apply >to those accused of political crimes (twenty years after the fact) >measures more severe than those used in common criminal cases?
> The release of Toni Negri must finally lead toward an amnesty >that has been too long in coming. Only the abrogation of the >emergency measures and the parliamentary passage of an amnesty bill >can finally put an end to the "years of lead." As long as these >conditions are not met, we urge the countries of the European Union to >guarantee the residency of the Italian exiles. We ask finally that >the members of parliament of the other countries of the Union and >those of the Strasbourg Assembly do all they can to resolve these >problems.
>
>Please send signatures to Yann Moulier Boutang by fax or e-mail.
>fax: (011.331) 45.41.53.91
>email: [redacted]
>
>Name Function or Title Address and telephone, fax, or email
>
>
>
>
>Among those who have already signed this petition:
>E. Balibar (philosopher), J.L. Benhamias (General Secretary of the >Green Party in France), O. Btourn (editor at Editions Fayard), P.
>Boulez (musician), Ch. Bourgois (editor), P.A. Boutang (film producer), >R. de Ceccatty (writer), G. Chatelet (mathematician), M. Chemillier->Gendreau (jurist), D. Cohn-Bendit (writer), R. Debray (writer), J.
>Derrida (philosopher), C. Dolto-Toltitch (doctor), V. Forrester >(writer), S. Gisselbrecht (Inserm), G. Kejman (lawyer), A. Lipietz >(economist), B. Marger (Cit de la Musique), J.F. Masson (doctor), F.
>Matta (artist), G. Perault (philosopher), M. Plon (psychoanalyst), A.
>Querrien (urbanist), J. Ranciere (philosopher), E. Roudinesco (writer), >S. Silberman (film producer), Ph. Sollers (writer), G. Soulier >(jurist), and I. Stengers (philosopher).
>

[redacted]

http://www3.mistral.co.uk/matt_lee

"here, then, once"

Eye for an I (I4i) - on going drafts of work in progress
To get it press reply and write I4i-subscribe

↑ Index

407. Charles Bernstein
HERE Poetry Readings (NYC)
Tue 23 Sep 1997

THE [redacted]!

PLEASE NOTE: THE EAR INN READING SERIES HAS MOVED!!!
BEGINNING OCTOBER 4, 1997 THE SERIES WILL BE HELD AT

HERE--CENTER FOR INDEPENDENT ART!

HERE IS LOCATED AT 145 6TH AVENUE BETWEEN SPRING AND BROOME .

READINGS WILL TAKE PLACE ON SATURDAYS AT 3:00 PM

Please support our new series and join us for our grand opening reading on October 4!
Coordinators for this series are Robert Fitterman, Liz Fodaski, Stacy Doris, & Charles Borkhuis.
Continuing support of this series is provided by the Segue Foundation.
Funding is made possible by support from the Literature Program of the New York State Council on the Arts.
Help support HERE--come early for lunch, stay late for drinks!

Segue @ Here: October & November Readings

HERE
Center for Independent Art 145 Sixth Avenue
bet. Spring & Broome
[redacted]

OCT 4: TOM RAWORTH, ANN LAUTERBACH Tom Raworth is from London and is the author of forty books, most recently Clean & Well Lit (Selected Poems 1987-1995) from Roof Books. Ann Lauterbach is the author of Clamor and And For Example among many other titles, and has a new book due out in October.

OCT 11: BRENDA COULTAS, TIM DAVIS Brenda Coultas is the author of Early Films (Rodent Press). Her writing has appeared in The World, Mirage, Big Rain, and several other publications. Tim Davis' latest chapbook is My Life In Politics or The History of N=A=R=R=A=T=I=V=E Film (Object/poetscoop).

OCT 18: CYDNEY CHADWICK, LISA ROBERTSON West Coast writer Cydney Chadwick is the author of one full-length collection and five chapbooks. Her most recent title, Interims, was published by 3300 Press. She is the editor/publisher of Avec. A founding member of the Kootenay School of Writing in Vancouver, Lisa Robertson is the author XEclogue (Tsunami Editions).

OCT 25: CHARLES BERNSTEIN, MELANIE NEILSON Charles Bernstein is the host of LINEbreak, 30 radio interviews/readings, now available on the web at writing.upenn.edu/epc/LINEbreak. Melanie Neilson's books include Civil Noir and Natural Facts. She is co-editor of Big Allis.

NOV 1: DAVID BROMIGE, BRIAN KIM STEFANS David Bromige is the author of The Harbormaster of Hong Kong (Sun & Moon), A Cast of Tens (Avec Books), and From the First Century (Cricket Press), among others. Brian Kim Stefans is the editor of Arras, which will have its on-line premiere in Winter 1998. Poems are forthcoming in Torque, Lingo, and the Asian Pacific American Journal.

NOV 8: JEROME SALA. RICK MOODY Jerome Sala is the author of many contemporary classics. His latest volume is Raw Deal (New & Selected Poems 1980-94) from Another Chicago Press. Rick Moody is the author of several novels including The Ice Storm and Purple America-- the former is a soon-to-be-released film by Ang Lee. Rick has declared that he will be reading his poetry on this day.

NOV 15: JOHANNA DRUCKER, JUDITH GOLDMAN Johanna Drucker has been publishing since 1972, frequently using experimental formats and typography, and has several dozen books including scholarly, critical, and creative titles. Judith Goldman has been published in numerous magazines including Chain and Torque, and she has a chapbook, adversities of outerlife (poetscoop).

NOV 22: BOOK PARTY/BENEFIT FOR RADDLE MOON on publication of its 22 New ^To North America French Poets issue. Norma Cole, Susan Clark, and more local celebrities such as Jena Osman, Fiona Templeton +++ are expected.

NOV 29: THANKSGIVING WEEKEND- NO READING

DEC 6: PIERRE JORIS, NICOLE PEYRAFITTE, COLE SWENSEN Pierre Joris is the author of Turbulence (St. Lazaire), co-editor of Poems for the Millenium (U. of Calif.) and translator of Paul Celan's Breathturn (Sun & Moon). Nicole Peyrafitte is a poet, painter, and singer living in Albany, NY. Cole Swensen is the author of Noon (Sun & Moon) and a translator of French poetry.

DEC 13: ROBERT KOCIK, CECILIA VICUNA
Robert Kocik: vicarious, histrionic, choral poetry. Cecilia Vicuqa's latest book is The Precarious-Quipoem (Wesleyan).

DEC 20: ROB FITTERMAN, MAC WELLMAN Rob Fitterman's Metropolis (1-15) is due from Sun & Moon; other books: Ameresque and 33 States. Mac Wellman's recent plays: Infrared and FNULNU. A 1996 Lila Wallace--Reader's Digest Award winner.

DEC 27: HOLIDAY WEEKEND--NO READING

JAN 3: HOLIDAY WEEKEND--NO READING

JAN 10: DREW GARDNER, GEOFFREY O'BRIEN Drew Gardner is the author of The Cover (Leave). Geoffrey O'Brien is the author of Floating Cities, Selected Poems 1978-1995 (Talisman) and The Phantom Empire (Norton).

JAN 17: EILEEN MYLES, MICHAEL GOTTLIEB Eileen Myles' most recent book is School of Fish from Black Sparrow. Michael Gottlieb is the author of New York, Local Color/Eidetic Deniers, 96 Tears, and Pantographic.

JAN 24: SIANNE NGAI, KIM ROSENFIELD Sianne Ngai is the editor/publisher of Black Bread literary magazine. She has published several chapbooks including DISCREDIT (Burning Deck). Kim Rosenfield is the author of Rx and Cool Clean Chemistry (Leave Books) and A Self-Guided Walk (Object/poetscoop).

JAN 31: GROUP READING FOR THE XUL READER; AN ANTHOLOGY OF ARGENTINE POETRY 1980-1996 Readers for this event include Molly Weigel, Gary Racz, Kathy Kopple, Reinaldo Laddaga, and Ernesto Grossman. Readings will be both in Spanish and in English.

↑ Index

408. mark weiss

Readers' versions of great lit

Tue 23 Sep 1997

When I was a kid I used to read Classic Comics (I think they were called), the ultimate readers' versions. These were about three times the width of ordinary comics (you need a few pages for Les Miserables), with a lot more words than most comics, although must of the narrative had been converted to dialogue bubbles. Intellectual kids like me read this stuff instead of horror comics--less likely to induce nightmares, and good for you, too! Sometimes, I later learned, the plots were wildly rearranged to protect the innocent. It was nice having pictures, but fortunately these didn't stick--I don't even remember what their Captain Ahab looked like. I don't think they ever did Joyce, but it would be a worthy project: an adult version that could be finished in a lunchtime. Proust would probably take a week. And the possibilities for advertizing sales go way beyond ant farms. On a different note, does anybody but me remember the Gilbert Shelton illustrated editions of Chaucer's pilgrims? One of them, the Miller's Tale, if memory serves, was done in honest-to-god Middle English. And I do remember his Alisoun, the miller's wife--quite a babe.

↑ Index

409. henry
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Tue 23 Sep 1997

On Tue, 23 Sep 1997 12:33:06 -0500 p. durgin said:
> Henry,
> The mystification, how can it be anything but lazy? Brave and >lazy at once. The sweat comes in when one transposes their mystical >experience into text. And what of chance operations? Doesn't >indeterminacy, instead of precluding the mystical, reverse the dynamic?

I wasn't referring to the mystical - just mystification, as in lazy or purposeful mumbo-jumbo. Purposeful obscurity. I don't go for that. Am extremely old-fashioned in my opinions about this. Don't think "language writes us", "language liberates us", etc. I like the author who fills every nook & cranny & syllable & nuance with purposeful intent. I also know this is impossible. But I think Joyce tried to do it. I think he learned it from the scholastics & the cathedral builders, whose every move was governed by dialectical debate. The apse of Amiens a resolution of contradictory approaches in 2 earlier constructions. Problem-solving. Explicit statement. "Progress" in poetry might involve delimiting just such contradictions in past work & resolving them, synthesizing them. Does our atmosphere of "experiment" foster this kind of discipline? Or is it every mumbo-jumboer for him-herself? Just thinkin' out loud here... [loosen up Hank, said Roland, winding his horn] - Henry G.

↑ Index

410. David Bromige
The Document of Concern in the Case of Red Slider 86'd
Tue 23 Sep 1997

I thank all those who have written in to explain what a portion of Red Slider's problem may be. The workings of the computer & its various softwares are fascinating indeed.

However, there is a danger that these explanations will also function to explain away the following, which I re-post to the List because some of those concerned give no sign of having read it. (Herb Levy, thanks for your recent post on this topic,a post with which I am in complete agreement.)

> Received Today:
>
> ----------
> From: Temporary Name[SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Friday, September 19, 1997 4:13 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: "TheFarm"
>
> Dear Sir,
>
> Your own concern as to who wrote the note is quite interesting in this context. According to our policy, we must know the real name of all subscribers. "The Farm" is not a sufficient userid for this purpose. We have no problem with handles, pen names or the like; but we reserve the right to ask for the legal names, and addresses if necessary, of all subscribers with indeterminate userids. We recognize this greatly limits the focus and possibilities of our list but are confident that there are many other lists with different policies on this point for those interested. If you read the original note we sent again you will note that all that we said that we were writing as a matter of list policy and that the content of your messages were related to this; if we didn't mean that we would not have said it. By the way this note is not written by "Joel".
>
> ----------

So, what were those contents? I have read Red's posts, & found nothing as offensive as much stuff that has passed muster before; which of his posts did I miss, that "were related" to his being axed? Please, Not-Joel, be so good as to refer us to these messages of Red, so that we may (one hopes) find ourselves in agreement with your action in this matter, and gain a clearer notion of just how far any one of us can go before we step over the line you draw in the virtual desert. David

↑ Index

411. mark weiss
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Tue 23 Sep 1997

It wasn't always so. There was a time, maybe twenty years ago, when Susan Howe produced a weekly series of readings on WBAI, New York's then Pacifica station, and I produced poetry specials. I remember doing Armand Schwerner reading the entire (as of that date) The Tablets, a lengthy interview and reading with Paul Metcalf, and two 2 1/2 hour shows of resurrected and remastered readings by Jack Spicer (who did his own radio show 15 years before that on San Francisco's Pacifica station).

At 02:40 PM 9/23/97 -0400, you wrote:
>David Bromidge wonders:
>> But perhaps I
>> malign NPR. I know they offer Andrei Codrrescu. But apart from that, do >> they offer poets of a stripe not that of Robert Pinsky? Has any one of the >> following smatter of poets been aired : Ron Silliman, Lyn Hejinian, Bob >> Perelman, Leslie Scalapino, Bruce Andrews, Abigail Childs, Steve McCaffery,
>> Karen Mac Cormack, Jackson Mac Low, Jennifer Moxley, Charles Bernstein, Rae
>> Armantrout, Pierre Joris, Laura Moriarty, Michael Davidson, Harriet
Mullen,
>> Nick Piombino, Erica Hunt? If so, on which program, and at what time does >> it air? Thanks.
>
>No, and don't be silly. Last spring Robert Hass was on twice (once >with Pinsky). I'm sure Rita Dove has been on as well, plus Maya Angelou...
>
>Actually, I find the interviews fascinating. I suppose this is because I >relish the sensation of frustration. Seriously, it's good to reinforce >that the poet laureate is who you'd basically expect he'd be.
>
>Much worse than the interviews are the poetry clips on NPR. Last winter >they were on an "anti-poem" kick and it seemed like Naomi Shihab Nye >was in my speaker every damn week.
>
>But I don't expect much of radio in that way, i.e., I don't expect it to >include non-mainstream poets. I think my expectations grow out of the >fact that radio is expensive and in general it seems that the more >something drips with money the more standard it's likely to be. In >contrast, I expected much more "risky" (i.e., potentially offputting to >the reader) poems to appear in Hass's poet's corner, but in the 100 or so >weeks he's done it, I there has been ONE Sun & Moon poet by my count and >few if any small-press poets.
>
>Carol
>
>

↑ Index

412. Christopher Alexander
LeCercle/liberation
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Henry wrt:
> Don't think "language writes us", "language liberates us", etc.

small pt. of clarification for the list: I'm not sure LeCercle's position is so much liberatory as explanatory—& with that in mind, his model seems very much like that of Potebnia, at least @ this level of generality. that one's my fault for not citing more extensively.

Chris

..
Christopher W. Alexander etc.
nominative press collective

[redacted]
P.O. Box 522402 / Salt Lake City UT 84152-2402

http://choengmon.lib.utah.edu/~calexand/nonce

↑ Index

413. Spencer Selby
list feedback
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Please post all feedback or info for the mag list to me directly.

Thanks,

Spencer Selby

↑ Index

414. red slider
The Left-field Bleachers
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Red is back. over there in the left-field bleachers .

thanx to everybody who gave me backchannel support during my little poeticus interruptus. (and my local post office wants to know if I will also receive the 'Santa' mail this year?)

The matter is now in pretty good hands. The boyz are over at EPC beating the crap outta.... well we'll see who/what. And that's the real message. Some are checking, I've made formal complaint to the Director. & That's enough. If it's stuff for the list to deal with (and there are many puzzle pieces) you know now, I will not go quietly into this good net.

thanx again for all the help and support.

Now what are you all staring at? GET BACK TO WORK!

Red Slider (a real guy - does anybody doubt that?)
The [redacted] (a real&expensive service)
Author of "Pissy Notes & Other Voidances" ps.

Red Skelton 1913-1997

'God Bless'

↑ Index

415. Brian Carpenter
Re: Readers' versions of great lit
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

mark weiss wrote:

<< I don't think they ever did Joyce, but it would be a worthy project: an adult version that could be finished in a lunchtime. >>

There's a local comics artist by the name of David Lasky who's done a 9-page mini-comic version of Ulysses. Two frames for each of chapter. It's really surprisingly accurate for that level of brevity. Quite a kick. Lasky has also done a more biographical comic on Joyce, published by Aeon Press.

I believe someone's also done a comics version of the first section of Finnegans Wake. Pretty sure actually, though I can't recall the artists name at the moment. Can dig up the info on these if anyone's interested.

Anyhow, preferable to Rose's grammarian renderings in both cases I would venture.

BC

↑ Index

416. mark weiss
Re: Readers' versions of great lit
Tue 23 Sep 1997

I hope these are wonderful works of art in their own right, whatever their connection to the original. But I'm struck once again by the plight of the social satirist in the land of the pet rock: America tends to parody itself inadvertently faster and more accurately than the most mordant of wits.

At 02:51 PM 9/23/97 -0700, you wrote:
>mark weiss wrote:
>
><< I don't think they ever did Joyce, but it would be a worthy project: an >adult version that could be finished in a lunchtime. >>
>
>There's a local comics artist by the name of David Lasky who's done a >9-page mini-comic version of Ulysses. Two frames for each of chapter. It's >really surprisingly accurate for that level of brevity. Quite a kick.
>Lasky has also done a more biographical comic on Joyce, published by Aeon >Press.
>
>I believe someone's also done a comics version of the first section of >Finnegans Wake. Pretty sure actually, though I can't recall the artists >name at the moment. Can dig up the info on these if anyone's interested.
>
>Anyhow, preferable to Rose's grammarian renderings in both cases I would >venture.
>
>
>
>BC
>
>

↑ Index

417. p. durgin
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Henry,

Points well taken, but I, for one, have trouble with a notion of poetry progressing. How can its effectiveness be theoreticized out of the very private and obscure author/reader relation? Purposeful intent meets with the same solopsitic ruts as the cathedral builders. What Joyce does resembles the sort of thouroughness you suggest, but it is only as effective for some. And why? Not for anyone to say as much as it is for everyone to say. Agreed, though. Lazy writing isn't hard to spot. But it comes in all flavors, don't it?

Patrick F. Durgin

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

↑ Index

418. Charles Bernstein
Pseudonyms/Bad Addresses/Confidentiality/Knot
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Dodie Bellamy writes:
>I didn't see the beginning of this thread, having been out of town and not >being able to face the 150+ old poetics messages that awaited me, but if >I'm surmising right what's being discussed here--I believe that the issue >is that pseudonyms are not allowed on the Poetics List--I don't think >there's anything personal being/having been done to RS.

Dodie is right. The Poetics List reserves the right to ask for the real names and addresses of all subscribers. We take this as a basic responsibility of administering this list and facilitating the automatic and unedited distribution of so many messages (up to 50 a day) to so many people (about 500). I have no problem with handles, pen names or the like, and recognize that this policy limits the focus and possibilities of the Poetics List. For those interested, there are many other places on the Internet with different policies on this point: pseudonyms are a major dynamic on many web sites. I very much appreciated Eliza McGrand's and David Golumbia's post on this matter, and they together highlight a number of concerns I share. Certainly, the use of pseudonyms might be fine in a number of circumstances and I realize the Poetics List has a relatively conservative stance on this. But it should be noted that pseudonyms and pseudoaddresses on the Internet are not the same as in the age of print. Handles, web names, and phantom addresses on the Internet pose a different set of problems and no doubt a new set of possibilities. Nor is the use of a handle on a fantasy site the same as the use of the same handle in a newsgroup, chat line, moderated list (where an editor reads all messages before they are posted), a local list where people are in frequent face-to-face contact, a literary magazine or other edited web publication, or on an unedited listserve with the stated interests and purposes as this one (and, again, Eliza detailed some of the issues I am concerned about here). Certainly, if we ask a new subscriber for further information on their userid, name, or address and they "prefer not to" say, there is no reason to make any value judgement on this choice.

As to "bad" addresses, and as several people have noted, when the Poetics List has a problem with an address, we often don't have the time to figure out what went wrong or to send out additional notes about the status of the address. We have to rely on subscribers to provide us with working and authenticatable addresses.

All subscription information and correspondence relating to subscriptions on the list is confidential. The exception to this is the list of current subscribers, which can be obtained with the "review poetics" command. Please use this command to find addresses of subscribers rather than making an inquiry of the whole list.

Finally, let me end with this: My name is Charles Bernstein and I am Listowner of the Poetics List. I take the responsibility of being listowner quite seriously, probably too seriously. As I've said before, it can often seem to interfere with my ability to participate in the list as fully as I might otherwise enjoy. While I discuss list policies and procedures with those who generously volunteer their time to help me with list management, I take full and personal responsibility for decisions relating to the protocols and functioning of the list. My office address is 438 Clemens Hall, Buffalo, NY 14260 on the North Campus of SUNY-Buffalo, where I am employed. My phone number at UB is [redacted]; if I am not available, a message can be left. I can be most easily reached at the email address listed in the header of this message. Due to the volume of Poetics-related subscription mail (mostly related to bounced mail), I prefer if questions about the list be sent to a special administrative account set up for the Poetics List: [redacted]. Access to this account is restricted to those working directly with me on the list. -- I take it that all of this are given facts to every subscriber on this list. I find it quite ironic, and at the same time chilling, that a subscriber who prefers not to give the Poetics List an address or any information about his name other than a nonspecific userid, complains that no personal name was given in correspondence from the Poetics List. But the point of calling attention to the Personal Name ("temporary name") that appears before that @ of the address -- the point, that is, of not signing the message sent to this subscription address-- was just to emphasize the fungibility of names in this environment and to make apparent the need to know to whom on is exchanging messages. Of course this is unsettling: it unsettles me. The reaction of the subscriber suggests the value of the policy. Furthermore, I take it as a given that personal communications between individuals, correspondence about subscriptions, as well as other writings by individuals, are not to be reproduced on this or any list without the permission of the author. In this instance, in the letter that was forwarded to this list, we have an example of what happens when that principle is not followed. Indeed, I have only just realized, in reading one of the recent posts, that a word was elided in one sentence of a letter sent to one of the list subscribers:

> if you read the original note we sent again you will note that > all that we said that we were writing as a matter of list policy and that > the content of your messages were word dropped: NOT > related to this

In conjunction with that original note, it might have been apparent that "content" has never been and is not an issue in this instance, especially since both notes make clear what the issue is. Of course the elision of "not" is regrettable; but this note was not intended to be reproduced twice to 500 people and scrutinized for unintended meaning. Furthermore, there were a number of ways that the possible misinterpretation of the dropped "not" might have been clarified, short of sending the note out to the entire list. In any case, at the other end of the line at Poetics is me, among others, and I think it's fair to say that it's unlikely that any of this is about anything other than what I have stated here. And if you want to know where I am to discuss it, you know that too, so send me an email or come by to see me. I'm around (if too often neither here or there but someplace else and in a knot).

↑ Index

419. Layne Russell
Re: to all & appologies
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

wow red. what can i say?

sending love, that's all right now.

layne

↑ Index

420. red slider
Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Charles,

why you are here beginning a (rather transparent) rationalization for probably failed policy and certainly misapplied ones is beyond me. In the first place, a formal complaint has been made to the Director, and it might have been appropriate to leave these matters for his investigation. Second, you could have communicated with me (since you have forbidden me to communicate with you) on the 'missing not' - we might have discovered something. But there is nothing now but to take this bit of informal time and deal with piece meal - I will not address most of Charles' List Owner rationalizations for policy and such - there are much better analysts here than I who can see what is going on. I'll simply address the 'not knot' and leave it there for now - I didn't even want to do that much.

If there was any eliding it was somewhere/somehow on Charles' side, and could have been an unfortunate typo of his (or do we want to explore the theory that the machine just happened to drop this critical term? Or does someone wish to speculate on which one of us is lying?) His critical 'NOT' was not found here on receipt. Of course, if the letters had not been anonymous and I could have asked my questions - or if it had been worth Charles' time to deal with these matters (he instructed me not to communicate with him or Joel at their addresses on these matters on the basis of his time) we might have been able to straighten it out. But Charles' your list of particulate locations and identities does not erase your communications (are you the not-joel?) or your handling of my letter to Joel and your obvious remoteness in the officiate of your list owning position. I'm starting to smell some smoke. Better to leave it with the investigation, if there is to be one, and what ever list discussion might ensue on substantive issues (I find most of yours rather secondary to questions David, I and others have rased). Dodie, by her own admission didn't really know what was going on, no? Hardly a solid foundation. Anyway, once again, here is the second posting of the anonymous, 'Temporary Name' communication, exactly as I recieved it - no changes, no elides. And, I think a siezure of all records at the server site on anything remotely pertaining to these matters is certainly now in order (don't want any machine erasing files problems - could happen). I suggest these be conducted from Dr. Glazier's office. Just my suggestion.

Red Slider (real name, real guy)
TheFarm (real&expensive service)
Author of "Pissy Notes & Other Voidances"

From: Temporary Name[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Friday, September 19, 1997 4:13 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: "TheFarm"

Dear Sir,

Your own concern as to who wrote the note is quite interesting in this context. According to our policy, we must know the real name of all subscribers. "The Farm" is not a sufficient userid for this purpose. We have no problem with handles, pen names or the like; but we reserve the right to ask for the legal names, and addresses if necessary, of all subscribers with indeterminate userids. We recognize this greatly limits the focus and possibilities of our list but are confident that there are many other lists with different policies on this point for those interested. If you read the original note we sent again you will note that all that we said that we were writing as a matter of list policy and that the content of your messages were related to this; if we didn't mean that we would not have said it. By the way this note is not written by "Joel".

>> Joel, I presume this unsigned note from the 'list server' is from you? (and >> i do like to have names with my notes - even if they are handles)
>>
>>> Please try to keep in mind that the Poetics List is designed so that no one >>> contributes more than a few messages on a given day. Also, we ask that all >>> subscribers subscribe with their "real" names. While there is much lively >>> internet activity using "handles" this is not the direction we want for >>> this particular list. Unfortunately, due to the volume of requests and >>> messages we get, we may not have told you this when you first subscribed.
>>> Thank you for your interest in the list and your lively contributions.
>>>
>> While my 'average' list participation is less than 2 ('a few') (26/17 days >> for sept.) i also see that it is disproportionately large? Though I do note >> several others with some heavy useage on particular days and do wonder if >> they received similar communications? I will endeavor to keep my postings >> within limits.
>>
>> I do, however, wonder by whom, and on what basis, my name is being >> challenged? I find it a bit insulting and wonder on what presumptive basis >> someone things it does not as my "real name". I use my name responsibly, >> it is a pointer to reliable communications with me on any matter and is a >> name under which I submit print & electronic poetry. If you or anyone has a >> problem with that I gladly invite them to communicate with me directly with >> me and identify themselves - by handle or real name.
>>

>> On the other hand, if it is the content of my messages which seem >> inappropriate or off point then I would certainly like to hear that >> directly said - backchannel or otherwise. Other than a single message from >> someone who apparently felt uncomfortable with a question on poetics and >> 'protected group' access, I have received no communications suggesting I'm >> 'round the bend', out of topic or otherwise 'off my meds'. Quite the >> contrary in backchannel, but I would certainly like to know if anyone feels >> that is the case.
>>
>> thank you,
>>
>> red slider
>
>

↑ Index

421. George Thompson
Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
Tue 23 Sep 1997

Dear List,

As a member of the list without any allegiances whatsoever, with no interest whatsoever in any poetry wars, with absolutely no personal friendships with anyone whatsoever on the list, maybe I can speak with the authority of an irrelevant outsider.

I think that Red Slider should direct his paranoia elsewhere.

I for one am tired of him.

George Thompson

↑ Index

422. Eliza McGrand
Re: The Document of Concern in the Case of Red Slider 86'd
Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

the "content of your messages were related to this" means having "subscribe" "unsubscribe" etc. caused reader to axe, and also, that content of message TO RED FROM LISTSERV, i.e. "your message" as distinct from "joe schmoe's message (message to joe schmoe" were related to list policy.

there is NO BIG BROTHER. NO THOUGHT POLICE. NO ONE READ RED SLIDER'S POSTS AND SAID "AXE HIM"!!! ok!!!!!!!????

it is a matter of the way the program is built, and the protocals it uses to screen the mass of information coming at it. charles et al GOT this program, already written by someone else, sealed in celophane, as it were, off the shelf (though i think listserv is actually shareware and free). someone with MASSIVE amounts of computer know-how WROTE THIS PROGRAM. it is completely unrealistic to take charles et al to task for standard features of program -- i think they are doing splendidly to have figured out how to load it. it is beyond unrealistic and completely off the wall to ask them to rewrite or change it. it was written by PROFESSIONAL, VERY CLEVER computer programmers who got paid alot of money by universities and development funding and macarthur grants to write it. charles couldn't, probably, even get past encryptment into base code to even begin to understand it, probably, much less rewrite it!

i think charles and joel are doing the best they can with a pretty intricate software package made to manage an extraordarily tedious and complex task. i have seen this software used throughout the world on the net and it works the same way because that is they way it is written, not because there is a plot to censor people -- it cuts people off list if their address sends back "undeliverable mail," if their address won't send a bounceback, and so on and so forth.

sheesh!
e

↑ Index

423. mark weiss
Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
Tue 23 Sep 1997

I think that this might be a good time to take this backchannel. As it's still public, for the record, early in my list membership (not so long aqo) I found myself unable to send or receive. I had sent some mildly snippy posts, and, being an American, I immediately proceeded to paranoia (it's the national sport)--there was a conspiracy, I was being ejected, punished, whatever. Of course it was a technical problem. But paranoia is much more satisfying--behind it is the assumption of one's own importance or power to be perceived as a threat.

I don't identify myself as a language poet, and I've only met The Listmaster a couple of times (Listmaster is great, sounds like startrek). My experience has been that the list is run very fairly and with great generosity. I doubt that anybody gets rich or powerful by providing the rest of us with this venue.

One of my friends likes to counter his own paranoia with generosity of spirit by telling himself not to assume malice when folly is an adequate explanation. I would change the second clause to "folly or a glitch."

At 04:15 PM 9/23/97 -0700, you wrote:
>Charles,
>
>why you are here beginning a (rather transparent) rationalization for >probably failed policy and certainly misapplied ones is beyond me. In the >first place, a formal complaint has been made to the Director, and it might >have been appropriate to leave these matters for his investigation. Second, >you could have communicated with me (since you have forbidden me to >communicate with you) on the 'missing not' - we might have discovered >something. But there is nothing now but to take this bit of informal time >and deal with piece meal - I will not address most of Charles' List Owner >rationalizations for policy and such - there are much better analysts here >than I who can see what is going on. I'll simply address the 'not knot' and >leave it there for now - I didn't even want to do that much.
>
>If there was any eliding it was somewhere/somehow on Charles' side, and >could have been an unfortunate typo of his (or do we want to explore the >theory that the machine just happened to drop this critical term? Or does >someone wish to speculate on which one of us is lying?) His critical 'NOT' >was not found here on receipt. Of course, if the letters had not been >anonymous and I could have asked my questions - or if it had been worth >Charles' time to deal with these matters (he instructed me not to >communicate with him or Joel at their addresses on these matters on the >basis of his time) we might have been able to straighten it out. But >Charles' your list of particulate locations and identities does not erase >your communications (are you the not-joel?) or your handling of my letter >to Joel and your obvious remoteness in the officiate of your list owning >position. I'm starting to smell some smoke. Better to leave it with the >investigation, if there is to be one, and what ever list discussion might >ensue on substantive issues (I find most of yours rather secondary to >questions David, I and others have rased). Dodie, by her own admission >didn't really know what was going on, no? Hardly a solid foundation.
>Anyway, once again, here is the second posting of the anonymous,
>'Temporary Name' communication, exactly as I recieved it - no changes, no >elides. And, I think a siezure of all records at the server site on >anything remotely pertaining to these matters is certainly now in order >(don't want any machine erasing files problems - could happen). I suggest >these be conducted from Dr. Glazier's office. Just my suggestion.

>
>Red Slider (real name, real guy)
>TheFarm (real&expensive service)
>Author of "Pissy Notes & Other Voidances"
>
>----------
>From: Temporary Name[SMTP:[redacted]]
>Sent: Friday, September 19, 1997 4:13 PM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: "TheFarm"
>
>
>Dear Sir,
>
>Your own concern as to who wrote the note is quite interesting in this >context. According to our policy, we must know the real name of all >subscribers. "The Farm" is not a sufficient userid for this purpose. We >have no problem with handles, pen names or the like; but we reserve the >right to ask for the legal names, and addresses if necessary, of all >subscribers with indeterminate userids. We recognize this greatly limits >the focus and possibilities of our list but are confident that there are >many other lists with different policies on this point for those >interested. If you read the original note we sent again you will note that >all that we said that we were writing as a matter of list policy and that >the content of your messages were related to this; if we didn't mean that >we would not have said it. By the way this note is not written by "Joel".
>
>
>>> Joel, I presume this unsigned note from the 'list server' is from you?
>(and >>> i do like to have names with my notes - even if they are handles)
>>>
>>>> Please try to keep in mind that the Poetics List is designed so that no >one >>>> contributes more than a few messages on a given day. Also, we ask that >all >>>> subscribers subscribe with their "real" names. While there is much >lively >>>> internet activity using "handles" this is not the direction we want for >>>> this particular list. Unfortunately, due to the volume of requests and >>>> messages we get, we may not have told you this when you first >subscribed.

>>>> Thank you for your interest in the list and your lively contributions.
>>>>
>>> While my 'average' list participation is less than 2 ('a few') (26/17 >days >>> for sept.) i also see that it is disproportionately large? Though I do >note
>>> several others with some heavy useage on particular days and do wonder >if >>> they received similar communications? I will endeavor to keep my >postings
>>> within limits.
>>>
>>> I do, however, wonder by whom, and on what basis, my name is being >>> challenged? I find it a bit insulting and wonder on what presumptive >basis >>> someone things it does not as my "real name". I use my name >responsibly, >>> it is a pointer to reliable communications with me on any matter and is
>a >>> name under which I submit print & electronic poetry. If you or anyone >has a >>> problem with that I gladly invite them to communicate with me directly >with >>> me and identify themselves - by handle or real name.
>>>
>>> On the other hand, if it is the content of my messages which seem >>> inappropriate or off point then I would certainly like to hear that >>> directly said - backchannel or otherwise. Other than a single message >from >>> someone who apparently felt uncomfortable with a question on poetics
and
>>> 'protected group' access, I have received no communications suggesting >I'm
>>> 'round the bend', out of topic or otherwise 'off my meds'. Quite the >>> contrary in backchannel, but I would certainly like to know if anyone >feels >>> that is the case.
>>>
>>> thank you,
>>>
>>> red slider
>>

>>
>
>

↑ Index

424. Eliza McGrand

Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me

Tue 23 Sep 1997

---

to continue to ascribe clearly unintended meanings to charles' careful, astoundingly polite efforts to clear up a small computer glitch is grossly uniformed and ungrateful.

red slider, i think you have entirely too much free time. if you think you know so much about how to run 500+ lists (a really LARGE list as these things go) and are so willing to put so much energy into attacking someone who has had a whole lot of gumption, decency, and put in unimaginable amounts of work into building a net list and community, why don't you channel some of that energy into doing something constructive like starting and managing a list of your own?

perhaps after the perhaps 15th, perhaps 75th, perhaps 150th interrupted weekend/vacation/busy schoolday, when, for absolutely no pay and just out of being a "good poetry citizen" you take on yet another computer glitch or address error and sooth yet another subscriber entangled in computer problems (i've had a message from joel and charles originated AFTER 10PM on a sunday just to offer advice on a message-address problem, for one of i know MANY examples) you will have another, very embarrassed and regretful view of your painfully ... well, i'll eschew pejoratives, but let us just say "misguided" attempt to sandbag charles, joel, and all the interns and helpers and others who've put so much into this poetics listserv.

i can only hope, but must firmly believe (in order to believe in anything approximating a rational world) that whoever "runs" the EPC will have the sense and grace to see both the huge amount of work, FOR ABSOLUTELY NO MONEY WHATSOEVER, charles et al have put into poetics and the extraordinary achievement it is, and the uh, misguided, nature of your attack and drop the whole thing into electron styx. e

↑ Index

425. red slider
to all & appologies
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Absolutely right, those who've seen I went too far - each in their own way. Insensed at the idea that someone accused me of eliding an important part of a document. That word means to me deliberate alteration - falsification. But no matter, no excuse to say more. It would have been enough to have said, "no, that word was not in my copy." and let it go. What has happened to me, by me, over this matter, no matter how trivial or serious its particulars is not good. It is not my tao. Not the way I've lived it. And when I found myself ranting to one particular friend (and to no other i think - Dodie, anyone else, feel free to backchannel/post any messages of mine, I don't think they were that bad, but I've no perspective anymore) it was time for me to say, "I'm off my meds".

I meant no ill to Charles or Joel or anyone. Had a nice post& reply bck with Eliza in fact that I really enjoyed, and learned. Yes I argued the points. Maybe, in time i'd have learned something. . And from a lot of others, too.

But my sense that senses injustice is just too hyperactive (not paranoid, but the difference is trivial here). It just works that way. Got me into trouble before, I expect it will again. I manage it by gardening and keeping to the side of things. And that's where I need to be. I cannot be a good member of this working family. I could not trust myself to do that. It began with a name and what's in it. A name that was a good one. And an intrusion into that name. You know, I imagined I'd come back on the list and somebody would ask me, "well red slider, would you like to introduce yourself to us?" and I'd thought maybe I'd post a little piece that I did that tells about the fog horns and a little school stuff and some of San Franscisco where I grew up. It felt right because it felt like I could share some initmacy and keep my privacy. But that didn't happen. I tried to keep the first post lite - in the ballpark. But the next came too quick. I don't know why I'm saying all this. Maybe I figure I owe you bigtime but this is all I've got. some words. well the name is shit for me now. I made it so. Not anyone here. Nothing to do for that. I'm not whining about it either. hate whining. I got insensed, thats all. and in the list, out of the list - that's not the place i want to be. I'd of hoped someone figured out I don't get insensed for myself - never felt personally attacked by anyone - not even some of the direct bck chnl explosions i caught along the way. Just that there was somthing wrong out somewhere and it was comin up through me like a freight train.

I'll be going now. And no personal messages please. I need to take care of me now. Well this list is not a confessional or a couch - that's for sure. So without further embarrassment, so long.

red.

↑ Index

426. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
Wed 24 Sep 1997

---

dodie writes:
>
>While I cannot claim to understand the whole Red Slider thing fully and I >should have kept out of it in the first place (when I was in Buffalo last >week Charles mentioned to me that he was writing to RS re: pseudonyms) I >cannot resist commenting on a particular vein of this flurry of responses >which I find problematic--the way the issues quickly break down into moral >defenses of the parties involved. ...
>
>Dodie

hear hear. disagreement can be carried on without it being a war of personal loyalties.

↑ Index

427. Christopher Reiner
A Reading
Wed 24 Sep 1997

A READING

The Rex Read
(three women reading in a hotel lobby)

Cydney Chadwick
Michelle Murphy
Sally Doyle

The Hotel Rex
562 Sutter St.
(between Mason & Powell Sts., downtown San Francisco)

Friday, October 3rd. 7:30 p.m.
FREE

(food and wine--and other beverages--available)

↑ Index

428. nico vassilakis
jumble
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Does anyone have information on 'poetscoop'?

The Case of Rd Sldr on one a them perry the mason shows - people be steppin inta all kinds a shit smellin up the place

↑ Index

429. Herb Levy
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Yeah, but Mark, NONE of those were on NPR stations, let alone on a program produced by NPR for national distribution.

Community stations are great and the few small independent networks (are there really any others besides Pacifica) tend to be good, though everyone I know who lives in a town with a Pacifica station complains about how they've deteriorated.

NPR, as a network is just like the commercial stations, far too much of an interest in market share, etc. to program anything that isn't relatively official culture. Which doesn't mean there aren't NPR afiliates with local programs that are very good, but the national feed is relatively safe, especiallyu on the cultural front.

Bests,

Herb

> It wasn't always so. There was a time, maybe twenty years ago, when Susan Howe produced a weekly series of readings on WBAI, New York's then Pacifica station, and I produced poetry specials. I remember doing Armand Schwerner reading the entire (as of that date) The Tablets, a lengthy interview and reading with Paul Metcalf, and two 2 1/2 hour shows of resurrected and remastered readings by Jack Spicer (who did his own radio show 15 years before that on San Francisco's Pacifica station).
>
> At 02:40 PM 9/23/97 -0400, you wrote:
> David Bromidge wonders:
> But perhaps I
> malign NPR. I know they offer Andrei Codrrescu. But apart from that, do they offer poets of a stripe not that of Robert Pinsky? Has any one of the following smatter of poets been aired : Ron Silliman, Lyn Hejinian, Bob Perelman, Leslie Scalapino, Bruce Andrews, Abigail Childs, Steve McCaffery, Karen Mac Cormack, Jackson Mac Low, Jennifer Moxley, Charles Bernstein, Rae > Armantrout, Pierre Joris, Laura Moriarty, Michael Davidson, Harriet Mullen, Nick Piombino, Erica Hunt? If so, on which program, and at what time does it air? Thanks.

>
> No, and don't be silly. Last spring Robert Hass was on twice (once with Pinsky). I'm sure Rita Dove has been on as well, plus Maya Angelou...
>
> Actually, I find the interviews fascinating. I suppose this is because I relish the sensation of frustration. Seriously, it's good to reinforce that the poet laureate is who you'd basically expect he'd be.
>
> Much worse than the interviews are the poetry clips on NPR. Last winter they were on an "anti-poem" kick and it seemed like Naomi Shihab Nye was in my speaker every damn week.
>
> But I don't expect much of radio in that way, i.e., I don't expect it to include non-mainstream poets. I think my expectations grow out of the fact that radio is expensive and in general it seems that the more something drips with money the more standard it's likely to be. In contrast, I expected much more "risky" (i.e., potentially offputting to the reader) poems to appear in Hass's poet's corner, but in the 100 or so weeks he's done it, I there has been ONE Sun & Moon poet by my count and few if any small-press poets.
>
> Carol

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

430. rsillima
Terri Gross
Wed 24 Sep 1997

When _Leningrad_ was published, there were actual negotiations for awhile betwixt Mercury House's PR folks and NPR. Ditto with The Atlantic. Tho all for nought, as it happened.

Because of the "reach" that such institutions have, you can imagine that there are a gazillion folks trying to get through to Terri every day. So it ends up with a hefty moat around it and frankly the places with the experienced PR agents would indeed be the likely ones to get across the bridge. No conspiracy theory needed.

Ms. Gross, of course, is an alum of the very same English Dept that sponsors this list...

Spicer's Pacifica show was on folk music, not poetry and ran in something like the 1949-52 time frame. The tapes of him I've heard from the SF State Archive would take more than a little remastering to make audible.

Clark Coolidge did a great show on KPFA for awhile in the late 1960s, followed by another by David Gitin. Clark's was basically the NY School, and David's basically the Black Mtn folks. Later Kit Robinson and Erica Hunt did a series called In the American Tree (from which I took a title), later hosted by others as well. Jack Foley more recently has had a show on that station.

Ron

>David Bromidge wonders:
>> But perhaps I
>> malign NPR. I know they offer Andrei Codrrescu. But apart from that, do >> they offer poets of a stripe not that of Robert Pinsky? Has any one of the >> following smatter of poets been aired : Ron Silliman, Lyn Hejinian, Bob >> Perelman, Leslie Scalapino, Bruce Andrews, Abigail Childs, Steve McCaffery,
>> Karen Mac Cormack, Jackson Mac Low, Jennifer Moxley, Charles Bernstein, Rae
>> Armantrout, Pierre Joris, Laura Moriarty, Michael Davidson, Harriet
Mullen,
>> Nick Piombino, Erica Hunt? If so, on which program, and at what time does >> it air? Thanks.
>
>No, and don't be silly. Last spring Robert Hass was on twice (once >with Pinsky). I'm sure Rita Dove has been on as well, plus Maya Angelou...
>
>Actually, I find the interviews fascinating. I suppose this is because I >relish the sensation of frustration. Seriously, it's good to reinforce >that the poet laureate is who you'd basically expect he'd be.
>
>From: mark weiss <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: Pinsky on NPR
>
>It wasn't always so. There was a time, maybe twenty years ago, when Susan >Howe produced a weekly series of readings on WBAI, New York's then Paci-fica >station, and I produced poetry specials. I remember doing Armand Schwerner >reading the entire (as of that date) The Tablets, a lengthy interview and >reading with Paul Metcalf, and two 2 1/2 hour shows of resurrected and >remastered readings by Jack Spicer (who did his own radio show 15 years >before that on San Francisco's Pacifica station).

>

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road
Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

431. rsillima
Barry Cox
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Barry Cox, long a lurker on this list, passed away yesterday from cancer.

Of all the poets who turned to the computer industry for employment, Barry was arguably the most successful. His projects as CIO of BBDO-West, the ad firm, were the subject of articles in publications like Information Week.

Like a lot of poets, he didn't try to publish, though he attended readings in the Bay Area much more often than do most of the folks in the Palo Alto area.

He was a sweet, wonderful guy,

Ron

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road
Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

432. MARK LEAHY
Re: Joyce/comics
Wed 24 Sep 1997

there is one of the Tankgirl series of comic books(should I say graphic novels) which is based on _Ulysses_ (titled I think 'the Odyssey') -- it opens with a morning shaving scene, and follows the rough outline of the novel, it is fun as a response to _Ulysses_ but seems to get bored with the idea part of the way through;

p.s. I'll be glad when the Red Slider issue ends (nothing against any of the participants) (perhaps it can be reworked in graphic format, certainly the range of science-fiction/conspiracy theory references would suit the genre -- to whom will be assigned the role of the Dark Knight?

Mark Leahy
[redacted]
School of English University of Leeds
West Yorkshire
LS2 9JT
United Kingdom

↑ Index

433. rob wilson
Re: devious signatories (my bad allegory)
Wed 24 Sep 1997

As an expert on American paranoia (also known as a version of the sublime trauma of this polity), I have finally figured out this "Red Slider"/"Charles Bernstein" affair. It turns out that (with his vast listserve expertise on a farm in Pennsylvania near Amish country), "Red Slider" is actually a hook or alias for "Ron Silliman," who is acting out his displaced rage against "Charles Berstein" (all due to the dialectics of LP agon as narrated by Bob Perelman in Marginal Poetics), but "Charles Bernstein" in this case is being played by Robert Pinsky who is not just satisfied to by US poet laureate but actually wants some playing time as manager of the Listserv (in other words wants to become "Listmaster" of that poetry enclave in Buffalo before its gets too big). So Silliman is feeling a bit more marginalized these days, yes, a bit more like Jack Spicer and proud of it and loving life in that bar/computer office. I arrived at this bad allegory by reading Joe Amato's wondrous new SUNY Press book, "Bookend" which is really about "anatomies of the virtual self" and the deviousness of all stable signatories (the book, a scholarly studies, actually dissolves in lettrist emptines and typos at the end). I suspect this book was written by John Cage or Marshall

Mcluhan. I will end this bad allegory of the devious signatory in virtual space (I for one am Robocop in Christchurch mean to runin the mind of Denise Dutton), with a quote from that underrated poet, Peter Handke: Mercenaries had strayed into the language and occupied every word blackmailed each other by using concepts as passwords and I became more and more speechless and stopped working the time warps of those "cultural journals" and litte poetry magazines.

This may be Rob Wilson, but I am not "Red Slider" who is "Red Slider" and works on a farm.
No offense intended to my fellow paranoids and marginal subjects.

↑ Index

434. henry
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Wed 24 Sep 1997

On Tue, 23 Sep 1997 17:13:54 -0500 p. durgin said: > Points well taken, but I, for one, have trouble with a notion of >poetry progressing. How can its effectiveness be theoreticized out of the >very private and obscure author/reader relation? Purposeful intent meets >with the same solopsitic ruts as the cathedral builders. What Joyce does >resembles the sort of thouroughness you suggest, but it is only as >effective for some. And why? Not for anyone to say as much as it is for >everyone to say.
> Agreed, though. Lazy writing isn't hard to spot. But it comes in >all flavors, don't it?

I'm with you, Patrick. The idea of a poetry/architecture relation intrigues me though. With all that stone & at that great height, and with so much at stake (like the NASA program of its time), & here were these architects weighing what had been done & creating elegant & viable "solutions". Gehry's doing it today with his titanium walls. Is there a way of reading poetry for its weight and heft & transparency - a way of measuring it - and providing deliberate alternatives? Of course, this is how it's done all the time. But this assumes a certain sobriety about each undertaking... does it sound like poetry anymore? Henry mumbled... Imagine imagination which includes PLAN... (the Hefty Formalists?) - Henry G.

↑ Index

435. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Re: Barry Cox
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Barry was someone I admired greatly. He was extremely quiet but his keen observations were always a thrill. He had also been a long time follower of poetry and one of those poetry regulars so vital to the viability of a series, book, or magazine - a supporter of poetry in every sense of the word. I spent a good deal of time with Barry in Vancouver and most recently in Buffalo for the Duncan festival. He loved the word and was a devoted reader. He was present during the formative stages of some West Coast poetries and I believe he had also been a student of Robin Blaser's in Vancouver. He was also someone who travelled regularly, backcountry Mexico being one of his haunts. My favorite stories of his were his recollections of readings of Ron, Charles, and others, early on. Getting an additional perspective on some of the published accounts. It seemed to me he had such an important perspective, was sitting there at the beginning, and through many significant moments. His keen state of sweet, studied, quiet observation, almost buddhist in nature, is something that I will always remember. As I will his respectfulness for people and his unstoppable, affectionate awe of the word. Though Barry wasn't widely known, he was significant among us; we have certainly lost a part of where we have been by losing someone who never failed to be with us.

At 05:16 AM 9/24/97 -0500, you wrote:
>Barry Cox, long a lurker on this list, passed away yesterday from cancer.
>
>Of all the poets who turned to the computer industry for employment, Barry was >arguably the most successful. His projects as CIO of BBDO-West, the ad firm, >were the subject of articles in publications like Information Week.
>
>Like a lot of poets, he didn't try to publish, though he attended readings in >the Bay Area much more often than do most of the folks in the Palo Alto area.
>
>He was a sweet, wonderful guy,
>
>Ron
>
>Ron Silliman
>262 Orchard Road
>Paoli, PA 19301-1116
>[redacted]
>[redacted] (o)

>[redacted] (fax)
>[redacted]
>[redacted]
>http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/
>
>

↑ Index

436. Joseph S Zitt
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Wed 24 Sep 1997

On Wed, 24 Sep 1997, Herb Levy wrote:

> Community stations are great and the few small independent networks (are there really any others besides Pacifica) tend to be good, though everyone I know who lives in a town with a Pacifica station complains about how they've deteriorated.

There's still good radio in Austin (or was, as of when I left two months ago). KUT, the NPR affiliate, has poets as guests on several shows, most notably the morning-midafternoon show, Eklektikos, and some of the overnights. And there are several shows with poets (on an erratic schedule) on KOOP, the indie station (which, while it carries Pacifica news, isn't a Pacifica station). They tend not to be adventurous, since they're mostly made up of local poets (who tend to be surprisingly conservative), bit it's something...

↑ Index

437. Sarah Hreha
Re: devious signatories (my bad allegory)
Wed 24 Sep 1997

At 02:06 AM 9/24/97 -1000, you wrote:
>As an expert on American paranoia (also known as a version of the sublime >trauma of this polity), I have finally figured out this "Red >Slider"/"Charles Bernstein" affair. It turns out that (with his vast >listserve expertise on a farm in Pennsylvania near Amish country), "Red >Slider" is actually a hook or alias for "Ron Silliman," who is acting out >his displaced rage against "Charles Berstein" (all due to the dialectics >of LP agon as narrated by Bob Perelman in Marginal Poetics), but "Charles >Bernstein" in this case is being played by Robert Pinsky who is not just >satisfied to by US poet laureate but actually wants some playing time as >manager of the Listserv (in other words wants to become "Listmaster" of >that poetry enclave in Buffalo before its gets too big). So Silliman is >feeling a bit more marginalized these days, yes, a bit more like Jack >Spicer and proud of it and loving life in that bar/computer office. I >arrived at this bad allegory by reading Joe Amato's wondrous new SUNY >Press book, "Bookend" which is really about "anatomies of the virtual >self" and the deviousness of all stable signatories (the book, a scholarly >studies, actually dissolves in lettrist emptines and typos at the end). I >suspect this book was written by John Cage or Marshall Mcluhan.

>I will end this bad allegory of the devious signatory in virtual space (I >for one am Robocop in Christchurch mean to runin the mind of Denise >Dutton), with a quote from that underrated poet, Peter Handke:
>Mercenaries had strayed >into the language and occupied >every word >blackmailed each other >by using >concepts as passwords >and I became more and more speechless
>
>and stopped working the time warps of those "cultural journals" and litte >poetry magazines.
>This may be Rob Wilson, but I am not "Red Slider" who is "Red Slider" and >works on a farm.
>No offense intended to my fellow paranoids and marginal subjects.
>
>
A. Sarah Hreha
Dept of Spanish and Portuguese University of Minnesota

↑ Index

438. robert drake
Re: confusion/Red's 86
Wed 24 Sep 1997

---

mulling over th embers of the latest conflaguration as they dim down, this latest eruption over how the list operates... certainly there's concern over real/imagined abuses ov power that might "moderate" what we imagine is a free & equal exchange... but ov course thee list, as a social entity, is constantly moderating itself, and each ov us is a moderator... the effusive and lauditory thankyous & agreements that greet th postings of one ov our more famous listmembers, or the silences that greet notes that are seen as naive or uninformed... not to mention ov course the sarcastic or vitrolic retorts that regularly fly thru these mailboxes, nor the friendly banter that publicly marks various subgroups as allies... i'm not suggesting that these dynamix are evil or shd be "fixed"--only that they have real power to control participation, and that we're each responsible for our (individual/collective) use ov that power...

asever
luigi

↑ Index

439. Douglas Barbour
Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Speaking of David Bromige:

well, David, I loved the 'translations,' so thanks a lot for (oops!) 'playing that game.'

On the other hand, I assume that when you said:

<<I don't think we need to be intimidated by anything, & surely not by readers' versions of great lit. Are we really intending to go on reproducing novels & poems from the past word for word into an infinite future? Give me a break!>>

you were being ironic, & irony has such problems today! On the other hand, if Im wrong & the irony is that there's no irony there, well I blush & retire in confusion from the fray...

==========
Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]
H: [redacted]
~~~
~~~

440. David R. Israel
nostalgia & its vintages
Wed 24 Sep 1997

[was, Subject: Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.]

quoth Professor Barbour

> . . . & irony has such problems today!

O where are the ironies of yesteryear -- when weren't said rang silvern in the ear? -- when what I meant (converse to what I spake) shone lucid as the then-waterbrooks, & clear

d.i.

↑ Index

441. James Finnegan
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Wed 24 Sep 1997

In a message dated 97-09-23 10:29:51 EDT, you write:

> what I > did hear made me swear (example: Terry > asks what he thinks of performance poetry > *and he says, "well I'm not *against > it--" [translate: I'm against it]).

I certainly don't know his views on performance poetry per se. But I'm not so certain Pinsky is against the performance aspect of poetry. He reads with vigor and gusto--seems to truly enjoy his own readings as performance.
I've heard him describe poetry as a function of the body--the control of and exhalation of
"a column of air" rising out of one's body.

I believe, in hearing him speak, that Pinsky is open-minded to alternative poetries. Poetries outside his vein. Also, he did a good job of countering (see below, from NYT OpEd, I believe) Richard Howard's small-minded address--RH expressing his desire to keep poetry a secret society--to PEN (reprinted in the April issue of Harpers).

As for NPR, I know that a Katherine Bowman does periodic segments featuring a single poet.
I get the impression she's trying to cover the map of what contemporary poetry is in the U.S. (But maybe her map is missing a few precincts.)
Has anyone, of langpo or postmod sector, tried to contact her, sent her a book or tape? Had any response?

Finnegan

The People's Verse By Robert Pinsky

Should poetry be on the Internet? Should it have a month, like cheese or Vaccination Awareness? No, say critics like the sage and distinguished poet Richard Howard, citing the inner, personal nature of the art. This is a sympathetic position, but I differ. Poetry is part of our shared, communal life, as surely as is the Internet. The conventional notion is that technology and poetry are opposites, but poetry is itself a technology: an ancient technology that uses the human body. Like the digital computer, verse is a memory system; a means of storing information that can be called up with great speed, compactly. The bodily technology of verse allowed the griots of Alex Haley's "Roots" to recite historical records: long genealogies, dynasties, property rights. This ability to extend a process seems to be part of our genetic makeup, a link between voice and cognition. After all, when someone tells you their phone number, you mutter it aloud because vocalizing it helps your brain remember it. This patterning by vocal repetition is similar to what musicians call "getting it under your fingers" or athletes call "body knowledge." Certain patterns enter the mind through repetition in the body. Written poetry in English came long before prose. By a similar principle, it is not hard to imagine that poetry -- a code of expression based on the expressive and (I assume) rhythmic grunts made by a resourceful mammal -- preceded other forms of language. Relatively disembodied language that uses its own vocal quality only in a diluted or feeble way, at many removes from the body, may be a rather recent development in evolutionary time. Our species' development of sophisticated technologies like the computer extends our primate ancestors' development of rhythmic, meaningful vocalizations. The word poet comes from the Greek for "maker," and poetry has served as a mighty taproot of an intellectual as well as a spiritual kind. There appears to be a link between the creative power of imagination and the power of what might be called "mumbo jumbo" -- a place where formal intensity and opacity overlap. That is, to conceive of something new seems to be linked to an intimate sense of the mysterious -- something that is not immediately reducible to paraphrase. The ability to make new discoveries is related to another sensation that is part of the vocal patterning associated with poetry: the pleasure taken in language that is only partly understood. Why is the maiden all forlorn? Why is the priest all shaven and shorn? Why does he marry her to a man who is tattered and torn? Because it rhymes (so we remember it) -- but maybe also because she is pregnant? We don't know. But wondering about such questions feels to me like a fundamental aspect of intelligence. Our development of a highly sophisticated culture, one in which many workers delight in solving difficult problems and handling vast amounts of information, depends on an elaborate, ancient substructure -- the billion accidents and intentions that underlie every word. From this perspective, designating April as National Poetry Month might seem as absurd as having a month for Our Genetic Heritage. Yet it is a very good idea just the same. For poetry isn't only bodily, it is also civic. Poetry month and the posting of short poems on subway cars may violate some notion of the form's intimate quality. But the civic space is where language and makers live. In the 17th century, poets -- some of them great ones -- wrote poems flattering royalty and toadying up to rich, eminent patrons. That was part of the civic life of art, a part of the way that society held onto the art of poetry, thereby preserving it for the unborn. That process of preserving this treasure was more organic than overt. It was part of the social process: The king wanted some high-grade flattery and the poet wanted what the king had to give. Because of that civic exchange, those people, all now dead, kept alive a treasure for us. Incidentally, the exchange might have sharpened the makers' sense of reality, making clear all the silliness and imperfections of their times, and of themselves. As to the imperfections of our time and ourselves, Richard Howard may be right to remind us that the art of poetry is inward, and not limited to April (which is also Soy Products Month). But the art is also outward, part of the marketplace where we all gather.

↑ Index

442. p. durgin

Re: Pinsky on NPR

Wed 24 Sep 1997

Henry, Gehry's work has at least one immediate effect, and that seems to be a wistful fun-house mirror effect. In that, the surrounding landscape, or city-scape, is emulated and mocked at the same time. So, I think you draw a vivid analogy, the ends left open, and the dogma replaced by discourse. I wonder, despite what is normally taken for the author/reader function, their respective roles, if subcunscious intent (PLAN) guides one through the writing/reading/(even) theorizing experience (IMAGINATION). On these terms, imagination and intent are inseperable. "Objective Chance"? Patrick F. Durgin

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Wed, 24 Sep 1997, henry wrote:

> I'm with you, Patrick. The idea of a poetry/architecture relation intrigues me though. With all that stone & at that great height, and with so much at stake (like the NASA program of its time), & here were these architects weighing what had been done & creating elegant & viable "solutions". Gehry's doing it today with his titanium walls. Is there a way of reading poetry for its weight and heft & transparency - a way of measuring it - and providing deliberate alternatives? Of course, this is how it's done all the time.
> But this assumes a certain sobriety about each undertaking... does it sound like poetry anymore? Henry mumbled... Imagine imagination which includes PLAN... (the Hefty Formalists?)
> - Henry G.

↑ Index

443. Burt Kimmelman
Call for essays
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Ed Foster has asked me to post the following (please do not respond to the below to me but rather directly to Ed--if his e-mail is working then the address would be: [redacted]).

TALISMAN is currently preparing a collection of essays tracing the history of innovative American poetry from the 1970s to the present. The essays will be published in a double issue of the journal (#20-21, Winter/Spring 1999) and simultaneously as a book, both in paper and cloth.

We are looking for poets, scholars, and critics who would be willing to prepare essays of 4,000-6,500 words for the book. Essays could deal with an individual figure if her/his work can be seen as representative of a particular aesthetic or a certain group of poets, but we would be more interested in essays with a general focus. About twenty writers are at present preparing essays for the project, but many important areas are not yet covered--e.g., gay poets, Hispanic poets, small publishers and little magazines (an essay on L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E and related journals has already been assigned, however).

If you would like to take part in this project, please write, as soon as possible, to the editors, Joseph Donahue and Edward Foster, at Talisman, P.O. Box 3157, Jersey City, NJ 07303-3157; or call [redacted]; or fax [redacted].

The deadline is October 6.

↑ Index

444. Burt Kimmelman
Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.
Wed 24 Sep 1997

david,

pardon my obtuseness at missing your irony. no wounds i hope.

burt

↑ Index

445. dbkk
Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
Wed 24 Sep 1997

At 8:41 PM -0400 9/23/97, Eliza McGrand wrote:

> red slider, i think you have entirely too much free time. if you think you know so much about how to run 500+ lists (a really LARGE list as these things go) and are so willing to put so much energy into attacking someone who has had a whole lot of gumption, decency, and put in unimaginable amounts of work into building a net list and community, why don't you channel some of that energy into doing something constructive like starting and managing a list of your own?

<snip>

> i can only hope, but must firmly believe (in order to believe in anything approximating a rational world) that whoever "runs" the EPC will have the sense and grace to see both the huge amount of work, FOR ABSOLUTELY NO MONEY WHATSOEVER, charles et al have put into poetics and the extraordinary achievement it is, and the uh, misguided, nature of your attack and drop the whole thing into electron styx.

While I cannot claim to understand the whole Red Slider thing fully and I should have kept out of it in the first place (when I was in Buffalo last week Charles mentioned to me that he was writing to RS re: pseudonyms) I cannot resist commenting on a particular vein of this flurry of responses which I find problematic--the way the issues quickly break down into moral defenses of the parties involved. "Red Slider is a good human/cyber being and therefore he's a martyr" vs. "Charles works very hard and therefore it's sinful to criticize him." People take sides as if defending political candidates--or nations, and I think all nationalism is fascist. But that's just my narrow vision. Having been on the receiving end of such attacks this summer over my critique of the Sun & Moon contests--where the logic was S&M published lots of important books and its editor was therefore beyond examination, I felt like I was criticizing God or something. I felt no one on the list would look at my detailed listing of my personal experiences, and though I got lots of backchannel and phone support, no one dared to publically show compassion towards me on the list. I felt bitter, very bitter. And then later in the summer there was the passionate defense of the pornographic babes/attack on right-wing Dodie . . . forever will I think of myself as the queen of "rhetorical violence". I felt bitter-er still.

Red Slider's lucky he has so many friends here, but that doesn't mean that he's automatically the victim of some Kafka-esque conspiracy.

I'm sure Charles works hard and that he's a great human being, but that doesn't mean he's above scrutiny either.

I was reading about the "fantasy of objectivity" this morning in a great anthology, _Freakery: Cultural Spectacles of the Extraordinary Body_, edited by Rosemarie Garland Thomson. It's interesting (and maddening) how this fantasy of objectivity occasionally breaks down on the Poetics List into emotional hysteria. I suppose, in the bigger picture, that's a good thing. It shows us where the seams are.

Dodie

↑ Index

446. henry
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Wed 24 Sep 1997

On Wed, 24 Sep 1997 10:59:23 -0500 p. durgin said:
I wonder, despite what is normally taken for the author/reader >function, their respective roles, if subcunscious intent (PLAN) guides one >through the writing/reading/(even) theorizing experience (IMAGINATION).
>On these terms, imagination and intent are inseperable. "Objective >Chance"?

Plan & imagination in a relation comparable to chance and necessity - that is a reciprocal or maybe mirror image. What appears fortuitously is what is at hand - i.e., the necessary materials. But language is so overloaded with SOCIAL "architecture" (human experience) that to talk about poetry in terms of wood & stone seems pretty abstract, I'm sure. (Not that poets haven't tried to "objectify" it in various ways... maybe that's what we're doing.) Yeats used to write out a prose "abstract" of the poems he wanted. A plot. This is a way of getting at what I meant about being deliberate & responsible for every element. Not that it's the only way!! As you said, lazy writing takes many forms... for some, a prose trot would be the best way to kill a poem & internet chatting is probably the ultimate form of lazy writing! - HG

p.s. but perhaps the ultimate laziness is the above equation: chance = necessary materials. "localism", "confessionalism", "aleatory techniques", "serial form", "documentary realism", etc. - all roughly equivalent! Valorizing whatever's ready to hand. - Henry G.

↑ Index

447. p. durgin
Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
Wed 24 Sep 1997

And this leads up to the point I was trying to gather the guts to make:::::::: The least we could do is leave the bickery on non-poetic topics to some other type of forum. May this be so, and this message the last in this far too peripheral thread.

Patrick F. Durgin

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Wed, 24 Sep 1997 [redacted] wrote:

> Red Slider's lucky he has so many friends here, but that doesn't mean that he's automatically the victim of some Kafka-esque conspiracy.
>
> I'm sure Charles works hard and that he's a great human being, but that doesn't mean he's above scrutiny either.

↑ Index

448. Hank Lazer
Re: Terri Gross
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Ron,

Jack Foley's radio show at KPFA continues. Jack has, over the years, done many fine interviews. He knows the writing, and he asks smart, intrusive, engaging questions. I say that based on an interview with him several years ago. He did (about a year ago?) an extraordinary interview with Allen Ginsberg (in connections withe the SELECTED poems). Also, a superb show with Lou Harrison focusing on Lou's poetry. A gem with Jake Berry. Last I heard, Jack was getting ready (a couple of weeks ago) to interview Robert Grenier.

Hank Lazer

P.S. As to Terri Gross's interviews, UGH. Her formula--breathy, how did you have the courage to write that poem?--so narrows the genre....

↑ Index

449. p. durgin
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Henry,

What's at hand is the pith of the thing, the raw, unalloyed materials. In my own case (since I can't speak fairly of every case), this raw "stuff" on the work-bench has lost its value at first touch, and the job of the poet is to create a valuable and artificial conglomeration of grime. 's dirty job and stemming from a perhaps crude exploitation of the materials, but aleatory techniques call for bravery and genuine crafts___ship, and will brook no laziness. There is the aleatory and then there is the technique. Just as there is something to confess away and apart from the confession.

Patrick F. Durgin

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Wed, 24 Sep 1997, henry wrote:

> p.s. but perhaps the ultimate laziness is the above equation: chance = necessary materials. "localism", "confessionalism", "aleatory techniques", "serial form", "documentary realism", etc. - all roughly equivalent! Valorizing whatever's ready to hand. - Henry G.

↑ Index

450. Carol Mirakove
Re: Pinsky on NPR
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Finnegan writes:
> I certainly don't know his views on performance
> poetry per se. But I'm not so certain > Pinsky is against the performance aspect of > poetry. He reads with vigor and gusto--seems to > truly enjoy his own readings as performance.

Yes, I agree--he does seem passionate in delivery. But that he puts a lot into his own performance does not mean that he's down with performance poetry. I should have included more of the frame of Terri's question, which was 'how do you feel about performace poetry, which is so poular today, and relies on rhythm and sound more than the meaning of the words' (that's a paraphrase; 'meaning of the words' is a crappy way to put what she said, but you get the idea?, it was a "content" issue). That's when Pinsky said "well I'm not against [performance poetry]." And he went on to say that a poetics that foregrounds rhythm and sound is not tapping into/not creating the most profound poetry.

I am no Pinsky expert, and I'm willing to trust that in some cases he has displayed an interest in alternative poetry. But all of the exposure I have had to him says otherwise. That wasn't really the point of my original post, anyway, though, I only wanted to share a line by him that I thought was very funny.

Thanks for sharing the piece on where poetry should be by Pinsky. Certainly it is always good to read about openness to all mediums. My concern though was what poetry should be (according to Pinsky), but maybe I've caught him on days when he was feeling particularly narrow.

Carol

↑ Index

451. Dale Smith
Mike and Dale's Younger Poets
Wed 24 Sep 1997

Mike and Dale's Younger Poets Issue 6 (Summer 97) is available for a wopping US$5. We present the hottest poetry available in an intimate and engaging format. Overbearing prose, regurgitated postmod theories of poetic discourse, unintelligible genre mutations and undisciplined academic verse are all entirely absent from this upbeat, post beat crack mountain masterpiece of late 90's streetwise urban howls. We offer poetry by: Philip Whalen, Joanne Kyger, Drew Gardner, Jeff Conant, Own Hill, Bill Berkson, Dario Villa, Richard Houff, Michael Price, Connie Deanovich, Araki Yasusad (?), Anselm Berrigan, Edward Ainsworth, Kenward Elmslie, Donald Guravich, Ron Padgett, Sarah Menefee, Kevin Opstedal, Noel Black, Hoa Nguyen, Adam Cornford and yours truly.

Also included in this issue are interviews with Tom Clark and Edward Dorn.

To order, send a check to: Michael Price
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110

Or contact our Southwest branch: Dale Smith 1207 Lorrain Street #2
Austin, TX 78703

Don't be left out. Order your copies today.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

452. Schuchat Simon
Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.
Wed 24 Sep 1997

I thought the Bromige-ized Anecdote of the Jar was spectacular.

From a technical point of view, Gerard Malanga has a lot of poems using a similar method, the example that comes to mind is "To a Young Heiress" which comes from Frank O'Hara's "To The Harbormaster"

Paraphrase and appropriation, essential tools

↑ Index

453. Aldon Nielsen
Caribbean Studies Conference
Wed 24 Sep 1997

FYI: have just received a call for papers from the Association of Caribbean Studies. The conference will be held in Cartagena, Columbia, July 25-31, 1998. Abstracts of 200-300 words, double-spaced, may be sent to:

Conference Coordinator Association of Caribbean Studies
P.O. Box 22202
Lexington, KY 40522-2202

Abstracts must be submitted in triplicate before April 30, 1998. Speakers will be limited to 15 minutes. (That does seem a long way to go for fifteen minutes of time on the agenda, but maybe it's worth it to hear the rest of the conference?) It says here that "almost" all papers are delivered in English.

↑ Index

454. Eliza McGrand
Re: Try again Charles - this is exactly how it came to me
Wed 24 Sep 1997

---

it was never a matter of personal loyalties -- i've never met charles. but i can appreciate both ends having been assistant listmaster on pretty large list for awhile, and having had my own bout of sulks and paranoia the first time the list had a slowdown.

and i can also approach this historically, having watched over the years a number of people with varyingly colorful computer problems wrestling with subscriber problems both here and on other list i helped care for.

no one has ever approached it with the shotgun aimed at listmaster and stalin-era-like level of paranoia of this last bout. i've never seen anyone try to get a listmaster fired because the list program cut them due to address problems (and recall, red slider bragged several times about having gone to the head of EPC, charles' and list's presumed "bosses" over his deletion). finally, i've not seen anyone so patently ignore corrections of a misreading as ws done mr. slider, nor make such a loud fuss when asked if in compliance with stated rules of list, and if not, to get in compliance. slider knew this was NOT an anonymous/pseudonymic list when he joined -- it is all over the welcome and subscriber messages.

being a listmaster is one of the most frustrating and thankless and laborious tasks on earth, increased exponentially if you are only a moderately to slightly knowledgeable computer type. i am extremely impressed charles et alia managed to even LOAD listserv program! i never dared try, only help once my computer wonk friend had loaded and set parameters. if someone thought up an extremely helpful and wonderful way to set up a virtual community, invited me into it, did the mountains of boring tedious maintenance tasks necessary to keep it going, fixed the innumerable problems brought on by computer complications, remained cheerful and helpful throughout, and did this all with a minimum of computer sophistication, and all GRATIS, out of just their "good poetry citizen" ethos, well, it is beyond grotesque to imagine trying to get them fired and the list shut down because 1) i had inadvertantly cut off by a computer glitch; 2) i was asked if i was in compliance with a clearly stated policy and asked, if i wasn't, to bring myself into compliance. at least in my corner of the world, one thanks people when they do kind and extraordinary things for one, not attacks.

what on EARTH is going on when anyone would do such a thing, and anyone would defend it?! we all know charles and gang, all participate in their kindness and generosity and all of us benefit from their hard work. if there is reason to think a policy is less than ideal, at the very least, don't you think polite and private discussion with charles, with perhaps non-name-calling, non-accusatory, open discussion that is mindful of charles as the poor schmuck who will have to implement anything suggested is in order?

again, i, for one, would eschew insistance (and who the hell would i be to insist charles do ANYTHING given that i haven't done piss-anything to start, maintain, or build this list?) about any technical aspect of list maintenance unless i accompanied it with cheerful offer to roll up my sleeves and wade through grut and tons of computer persiflage and documentation accompanying anything to do with programs.

e

↑ Index

455. George Bowering
Re: subtext w/ Bromige & Blaser
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Oh, Bromige's red rim eyeglasses are famous. When we read the four-author novel _Piccolo Mondo_ at the Western Front in Vancouver more than a year ago, David handed out red-rim glasses to all the authors. That was the poetical fashion statement of the Northwest for the Nineties.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

456. George Bowering
Re: readers' versions of great lit
Thu 25 Sep 1997

> sorry david et al.,
>
> hey i'm shocked that a language-y guy like you, david, would be so complacent about reader's digest kind of rehash. Hmm, let me say, I wonder what Hallmark could do with some of your own lyrics.... You wouldn't mind, I presume.
>
> burt

Ha ha and Ho ho. It happens that one of David's students got poems published by Hallmark Cards. All normal poets envious as hell.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

457. David Bromige younger poets anthology
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Interested to see Philip Whalen in a "Younger Poets" issue. Younger than what--Methuselah? My god, even _I_ could have qualified under these less-than-rigorous guidelines....probably I was informed of it, but forgot. Why, even Tom Clark & Joanne Kyger gave up white ankle sox last year. I like chutzpah! Sign me up for a copy. "Younger than Springtime..." Ed Dorn doing the lead. If you're "Young at Heart", "fairy tales can come true." And thats what poetry is all about, dammit. I dont understand all this kerfuffle about fictional names. Once a younger poet, always a younger poet. Ask me later, years later, I'm indestructible. But I'm not NY School/Naropa--isnt _that_ more the focus here? David

↑ Index

458. George Bowering
Re: Bromige on 'readers' versions'.
Thu 25 Sep 1997

> <<I don't think we need to be intimidated by anything, & surely not by readers' versions of great lit. Are we really intending to go on reproducing novels & poems from the past word for word into an infinite future? Give me a break!>>

Right friggin' on! I havent got time for all those 800pp novels and 300pp poems. If those writers had something to say, let 'em say it quickly. It's not like there's nothing else to do but read a novel by James Joyce. We have more and more books around now; we dont have to fill up our reading time. Give me James Joyce on two cassettes and I';ll listen to them on the way to work.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

459. David Bromige
e-ddress for Coach House Books/Victor Coleman
Thu 25 Sep 1997

If anyone out there has an up-to-date e-ddress, please b-c me. The [redacted] got bounced back G Bowering thinks there's a new e-ddress, but doesnt have it. Thanks, David

↑ Index

460. Jordan Davis
readers versions
Thu 25 Sep 1997

There's an earlier precedent for the Bromige method; Kenneth Koch and John Ashbery's collaboration, "A Servant to Servants", begins "With a wooden lead-filled writing implement Jeeves wrote, 'What sudden showers',/And warm sunlight came flooding in the wood-framed glass aperture that Beulah had opened/For Alice B. Toklas. A mucus-filled bone construction in the middle of her face reacted angrily to the profusion of orange blossoms."

The TLS had a spectacular review of the Rose/Joyce Ulysses a few weeks back, a review that concluded periodless and which included a bravura catechetical section. It's been the TLS, actually, where most of the significant fussing between editor and executor has gone on. Sales of Berard's Odyssee have not jumped. Nor apparently has Larbaud's translation.

More pointless erudition: I heard that W Stevens' poems (soon to be issued in Library of America gorgeous deluxe format?) were written by a drunken sailor. Speaking of asleep in their boots: I ducked out of St Marks this morning at 6:45 to avoid the round robin conclusion of the all night reading of On the Road. The part I heard, from 3:45 on, had Dean stealing cars, landing Sal and the jesuit boys in a ditch, everybody eyeing dames and saying 'damn' softly, and of course, spodie-odie. Standout readers included the great Dug Rothschild scurrying up to the podium shoeless and in an unbuttoned work shirt, assembling his outfit (and creasing his fedora) as he read the bit about getting out of town before the angry mob of high school boys came to get Dean for flinging pebbles at the local beauty's window, the incomparable Ted Greenwald laughing at something, a lady assistant whose name I forget doing a lovely reading of Sal flirting with a woman in a low-cut cotton blouse, Sharon Mesmer banging the podium (and saying 'ow'), David Vogen accelerating maniacally for one of Dean's less lucid moments, Johnny Stanton mentioning that he had seen Neal Cassady himself change a tire on 10th betw B & C, agh, I forget who else, it was early! But the Financial Times shows up at Gem Spa at 3 am, which is good to know, that and Sandy Weill has a neon sign outside his office which like a hotel sign announcing vacancy or no declares him 'happy' or 'not happy'.

The Forward doesn't show up until 6,
Jordan

↑ Index

461. Jordan Davis
Re: younger poets anthology
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Uh, David, I think it's called "younger poets" because it used to be in a very copyright-infringing way called "Yale Younger Poets." So you see, it's, uh, well, a joke -- albeit a New York School/Naropa joke, which means that unlike a Language Poetry joke, you won't find it in The Economist ...

by the way, looking very forward to your reading at Poetry City with Alan Sondheim --

Jordan

↑ Index

462. Jordan Davis
service unavailable
Thu 25 Sep 1997

---

speaking of the list mechanics--I'm assuming I get a service unavailable message regarding odin of the cairn and the cross because I'm a new york school/naropa poet, right? -- if not, the listmasters maybe want to convert at least that name's box to nomail until the owner comes back?

Love,
Atar S.A. Genf

↑ Index

463. Henry Gould
yngr-than-thou publ. notice
Thu 25 Sep 1997

HOT, HOT, HOT off the presses next week, for all you fanatics of the really late Henry Gould [don't everybody write at once]:

CYCLOBIOGRAPHY, by Henry Gould
Providence: AlephoeBooks, 1997
144 pp. poifectly bound

$13.50 ($12. & shipping) to: The Poetry Mission, PO Box 2321, Providence, RI 02906

A collection of semi-bent narrative poems in Henry's trademark beat-byzantine [or b-squared] style.

Now a few words from the In-the-Know Crowd [hot off the espresso mute bar]:

"Already an underground classic. I buried mine yesterday and opened all the windows." - Jack Spandrift

"C'mon Jack, you can do better than that. Want to borrow my Princeton Encyclopedia of Toney Poetic Blurbs?" - Henry Gould

"His management of the keyboard of American slang lexicon (what is Rhode Island, anyway?) is sure to gratify, wouldn't you say, every one of his many admirers?" - Eric Blarnes

"Yo, babe! Hot shit! The dude's no jayhawk!" - Helen Vendler

"If Wystan and I were still alive, we would certainly be reading this book. Thank our lucky stars, at our present spiritual abode we can just dip directly into it now and then." - James Merrill

"No comment." - Robert Pinsky

"No comment." - Rita Dove

"Any more comments?" - Henry Gould

"At last! A Man for our Times!" - Princess Louisa Fortinblatt-Hohenzollern, Duchess of Grand Fenwick & VIP-Spankin'-Regent of Turkustan-Stufflings

"Henry who?" - John Berryman

"If you read one book this year... oh, forget it." - Marian the Librarian

"Hey everybody, this guy is really cool. I was reading this just today at Gimme No Lip & spilled mocha java all over it. Have you tried their coffee? It's better than Blend To Death's. Did you see Lena there yesterday? She wasn't in class all last week. Jason said she went to New York..." - Joe College

↑ Index

464. Tom Mandel
radio shows...
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Ron Silliman writes:

> Clark Coolidge did a great show on KPFA for awhile in the late 1960s, followed by another by David Gitin. Clark's was basically the NY School, and David's basically the Black Mtn folks. Later Kit Robinson and Erica Hunt did > a series called In the American Tree (from which I took a title), later hosted by others as well. Jack Foley more recently has had a show on that station.

Don't I remember Lyn doing that show first, Ron? I mean before Kit and Erica, or do I have that backwards. I do remember being on it with her.

"David Gitin" -- wonder what he's doing now?

Tom Mandel

Tom Mandel [redacted]
****
Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com
4020 Williamsburg Ct, Ste 200 * vox: [redacted]
Fairfax, VA 22031 * fax: [redacted]
****

Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

465. Douglas Barbour

Re: e on c

Thu 25 Sep 1997

As someone who can barely manage to 'open' my own computer & get through to read this list each day, I have to say Thanks Eliza, youre absolutely right that Charles et al have done great service to us all -- so Thanks to them all for such service. (On the other hand, I seem to have missed the deep problems rs caused, although I can understand why he was asked the question re his name. I have to say I wasnt bothered by his postings even if I wasnt moved to respond to any myself, but I do think the various advice to him re checking things out about possible 'technical' problems seemed reasonable. Sorry in a way that he wont be here, but glad that here continues to be...

==========
Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]
H: [redacted]
~~~
~~~

In the gloom, the gold gathers the light against it.
Ezra Pound

↑ Index

466. David R. Israel
nostalgia & its vintages, redox
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Somehow (i.e., over-haste), my yesterday's verse (responsive to a phrase from Doug Barbour) was a bit messed up; here's what I'd intended to write:

> . . . & irony has such problems today!

O where are the ironies of yesteryear -- when what weren't said rang silvern in the ear? -- when what I meant (converse to what I spake) shone lucid as then-waterbrooks, & clear

d.i.

↑ Index

467. Ira Lightman
Clark Coolidge's Polaroid
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Does anyone have a copy of the tape of Clark
Coolidge reading Polaroid?

Ira

↑ Index

468. Dale Smith
The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Mike and Dale's Younger Poets is indeed a play on the Yale Younger Poets Series. At least, that's how it started. The first issue was in fact titled, simply, Yale Younger Poets. Then it became Dale's YP. We've called it Mike and Dale's since issue 4.

We happen to include any poet we love in these issues, hence the paradoxical contents. Which shouldn't be too troubling, really, to understand as poets. The magazine is also about listening to those who have contributed to this art before us. Whether it's NY school, SF renaissance, or black mountain doesn't matter. We're autocratic and take what we like. I guess by that you can tell what we don't like.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

469. dbkk
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Thu 25 Sep 1997

At 10:07 AM -0700 9/25/97, Dale Smith wrote:

> We happen to include any poet we love in these issues, hence the paradoxical contents. Which shouldn't be too troubling, really, to understand as poets. The magazine is also about listening to those who have contributed to this art before us. Whether it's NY school, SF renaissance, or black mountain doesn't matter. We're autocratic and take what we like. I guess by that you can tell what we don't like.

Dale,

Judging from the writers you listed for this issue of your mag, what you guys like is straight white men. For example, I counted 22 poets and 2 interviewees, for a total of 24 contributors, only four of which were women. I think that even The New American Poetry did better than that.

I hate PC-mongers myself, but still . . .

Dodie

↑ Index

470. Ernesto Grosman
The Radio Reading Project
Thu 25 Sep 1997

The Radio Reading Project

In 1992, Rosanne Limoncelli and myself produced five radio programs of poets in performance, all of them followed by short interviews. The programs were produced and directed by Rosanne and myself and our sound engineer at the time was Claudia Cummings. The recordings were made at New York University, Tisch School of the Arts, during the winter of 1992-93. Each program lasted close to 56 minutes and where edited to be broadcasted in actual radio as part of an ongoing archival project. In the beginning our hope was that the programs would become available through satellite. At the time we didn't know of the possibilities of the WWW neither of the soon to be Electronic Poetry Center, since then three of those radio programs became available through the EPC (http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/sound/file-list-html), Hannah Wiener's, Jackson Mac Low's and Charles Bernstein's. The other two recordings (Robert Creeley's and Susan Howe's) are awaiting to be put on line. Last week Rosanne started to transfer those programs from reel to reel to a digital format in order to offer the best possible sound quality. In spite of the extended editing, recordings were in some cases half an hour longer that the actual final 56 minutes cut, I believe that they preserved the tone of each meeting.

↑ Index

471. Karlien van den Beukel

Rempress publications and reading series

Thu 25 Sep 1997

Rempress is a small poetry press and organiser of reading series, based in Cambridge, UK. It is run by Lucy Sheerman and myself. We have published and will be publishing some pamphlets which may be of interest to people in the States. We now have a US distributor, SPD, which will make it much easier to get hold of these pamphlets.

Jennifer Moxley Enlightenment Evidence (Part One)
ISBN No 1 901 361 00 4

Beth Anderson The Impending Collision
ISBN No 1 901 361 02 0

Both these poets are intellectually passionate and accomplished. And for list completion's sake the third pamphlet out is:

Karlien van den Beukel Pitch Lake
ISBN No 1 901 361 01 2

These pamphlets cost $8 each. Small Press Distribution's address is:

1341 7th Street
Berkeley CA
94710 - 1403
tel: [redacted]

People outside the US might find it easier to write to the publisher direct:

Rempress
6 Grasmere Gardens
Cambridge CB4 3DR, UK

Out soon will be the following pamphlets:

Fiona Templeton Oops the Join Tracy Ryan Slant
Lisa Jarnot Heliopolis

I'll let you know when these are published.

We also run a reading series and, for what it's worth, here is the autumn programme.

Rempress Poetry Readings Michaelmas 1997

6th October: Nicholas Johnson Bill Griffiths Barry MacSweeney

24th October: Tony Lopez Simon Perrill

6th November: Kevin Nolan John Wilkinson

21st November: Bob Perelman Tracy Ryan

Readings are held at the Arts Theatre, Cambridge, starting at 8.30 pm. Everyone most welcome.

Karlien

↑ Index

472. dbkk

Caroline Bergvall/Kevin Killian in San Francisco

Thu 25 Sep 1997

Small Press Traffic and Canessa Park present

Caroline Bergvall
and Kevin Killian

Tuesday, October 14, 7:30 p.m.
AT CANESSA PARK
708 Montgomery at Columbus

This is the first San Francisco appearance of the dynamic Caroline Bergvall, one of the United Kingdom¹s most interesting new writers. Ever since her appearance at last year¹s ³Assembling Alternatives² conference in New Hampshire, where she made a huge hit, we have wanted to bring her here to the Bay Area. Now here she is, live, in person, at Canessa Park. She is the author of Éclat (Sound & Language, 1996) and teaches performance writing at Dartington College of the Arts in Devon (England). ³So, what is Performance Writing not? Is Performance Writing not writing? Is it writing which performs not writes? Is it not performance which writes? But then does writing not perform? And when does writing not perform? And what kind of not performance are we talking about? Is it not performance to write or is it not writing to not perform? ² Don¹t miss this chance to see and meet La Bergvall, the woman everyone¹s talking about, for soon you will be too!

For you with access to the World Wide Web check out:

http://angel-exhaust.offworld.org/html/issue-9-10/CarolineBergvall.html for some of her writing

http://www.dartington.ac.uk/Performance_Writing/keynote.html for some of her theory

Kevin Killian, long-time Small Press Traffic volunteer, has manfully volunteered to be the opening act for our UK visitor. His 1997 books are Little Men (Hard Press), Arctic Summer (Hard Candy) and the new Argento Series (Meow Books), which collects many of the poems he has written over the past few years on the intertwined topics of HIV and the films of the Italian horror maestro Dario Argento. With Lew Ellingham Killian has written the life of the US poet Jack Spicer which Wesleyan University Press will publish in the spring. [3]Five Years in the Life of Jack Spicer[2] has recently appeared in the Impercipient Lecture Series, and another excerpt from this biography will appear in Chicago Review in December. He is thrilled to return to Canessa Park at last.

↑ Index

473. Rachel Levitsky
Left Hand Reading Series 97/98 Schedule
Thu 25 Sep 1997

LEFT HAND READING SERIES 97/98 SCHEDULE

The Left Hand Reading Series is a program of the Left Hand Book Collective, an all volunteer bookstore in Boulder. We sell radical left texts, multi-cultural literature and a variety of alternative media. We are located at 1825 Pearl Street, Boulder, CO 80302. For information call [redacted] or [redacted].

The LHRS seeks to promote the work of writer's whose work might otherwise be marginalized. We encourage the work of youth, writers of color, & experimental forms. Each event includes an OPEN segment for new writers.

Thursday, September 25, 8:30 pm

T Begley, poet, translator, co-author Saphho's Gymnasium, co-translator of Odysseus Elytis' Open Papers (both w/ Olga Broumas) and several chapbooks.

Bill Scheffel, poet, teacher of writing and meditation.
Roger Snell, poet, environmental activist.

Monday, October 27, 8:00 pm, a queer night co-sponsored with DAWG

Leslea Newman, poet, ed., novelist, 1997 NEA recipient for her latest book Still Life With Buddy, author Heather Has Two Mommies and 19 other volumes.

Ellen Orleans humorist, novelist, playwright Lambda Literary award winner. Her latest book is Still Can't Keep A Straight Face.

Monday, November 24, 8:00 pm

Jack Collom poet, teacher, author _Arguing with Something Plato Said_ and numerous other volumes. A performance in collaboration with Josepha Conrad.

Akilah Oliver poet, published in _High Risk 2_, member of performance art ensemble The Sacred Naked Nature Girls, activist, facilitator 'Writing is Life' workshop for queer youth.

December--Date to be announced Poet's Theater

Monday, January 26, 8:00 pm

Marilyn Krysl, poet, fiction, essay writer. Author, 7 volumes of poetry including _Warscape, with Lovers_, winner 1997 Cleveland State Poetry Center prize, director of Creative Writing at CU, Boulder, co-editor _Many Mountains Moving_.

Megan Marsnik, fiction writer, Naropa MFA candidate.

Patrick Pritchett, poet, CU student , poems in Prairie Schooner, River City, New American Writing, Exquisite Corpse and Many Mountains Moving.

Thursday, February 26, 8:30 pm., 2 poets from Fort Collins

Laura Mullen, poet, author _The Surface_ (selected for the National Poetry Series 1991), _The Tales of Horror_ (forthcoming in the fall of 1998 from Kelsey St. Press). She teaches at Colorado State University.

Mark Sanchez, poet, student at CSU.

Monday, March 16, 8:00 pm

Victor Hernandez Cruz, poet, performer

Michelle Albert, fiction writer

↑ Index

474. David Bromige
e-ddresses : Don Byrd, Victor Coleman/ younger poets
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Sorry to use up a message on the List fopr further e-ddress info....can someone tell me, is there a directory of some kind i might access for this stuff? Meanwhile, if anyone has an e-ddress for Don Byrd--or for Victor Coleman, see yesterday's posting by me--please b-c me with that info.

While I'm eating up a message unit anyway, I might as well say thanks to those who posted in with info re "Younger Poets." My posting re that was dumb. I dont understand half of it myself. I had had 3 vodka tonics. Must remember not to turn computer on when swacked.

But in this connection, I would like to repeat what Randolph Healy wrote, when I had told him, some months ago, I had had 3 vodka tonics the night before : "What self-control--that you could stop!"

As you may deduce, if getting drunk is a newsworthy event in my piccolo mondo, its what i seldom do. And today, I know why. David

↑ Index

475. Dale Smith

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Thu 25 Sep 1997

Dodie:

Thanks for exposing the obvious injustice. As you can imagine, Hoa and I have discussed the very issues you yourself raise. And I would like to open this up to others on the list with more experience editing magazines than myself. The dilemma, as I see it, is twofold: 1) how do you publish poetry you love and 2) still represent poets of diverse backgrounds? My small format allows me hardly 90 pages of space to work with, so I'm naturally going to be selective about how I fill that up. Also, my friends who write the poetry I like, happen to be predominately white and male. I prefer friends' work to strangers. But I don't limit it in that way. I publish plenty of people who I don't know personally. But there's no way I can do a search of all the women and people of color writing poetry in this country. I have neither the means nor the time for that kind of investigation. Nor, frankly, the interest. Luckily, in this country I can be concerned with issues of aesthetics. Which for me, these days, is as troubling as racial and sexual equality. But then again, I'm not, on a daily basis, openly confronted with inequities of race or gender because I am a white man. I would be ashamed to admit otherwise and ashamed to condescendingly ask for work from women or people of color just to satisfy some personal need of pan-sexual/racial representation in order to prove that, hey, I'm really a nice guy. Look. I published this poem by... I do know several female poets, but fewer writers of color. Of the women I know, I have invited only those whose work I admire and want for my magazine. It seems the others send their poems to Chain, where they can stay, as far as I'm concerned, from an aesthetic position. My poetics, if you haven't noticed, is deeply influenced by NY school, black mountain poets, etc. Pound,in a deeper way, influences my decisions. Most writers outside of my small camp follow a deplorable tradition of poetics established by Gertrude Stein's self narcissim. It's simply not my thing, yet that kind of poetics proliferates and is condoned by many people. Judging from the invitations Hoa receives to submit poetry to various journals, I assume that there are plenty of established venues, with at least some corporate/academic funding, open to the aesthetic style I detest. But Hoa's poetry is actually quite good, so those editors are lucky to be getting it. But, because there are so few poets of color writing experiemental poetry and so many white editors demanding such work, Hoa actually questions the aesthetic value of her poems. I feel, however, that most poetics journals these days seek women and people of color to satisfy a self-righteous urge to compete in the cultural market place, regardless of personal poetics. And editors who do not draw a line over aesthetic concerns, in the end, ruin thought, intellection, and in a deeper way, the very issues they themselves falsly believe they are confronting. Because, honestly, a great deal of poetry is dull as hell these days. Both men and women are contributing to that. All patronizing attempts to include the other will continue to expand this inanity. But now we are discussing aesthetics, which is tricky, and will take us nowhere. You will see what you have to and I will do what I must. Meanwhile, compared to something like Chain, or even Mirage, M&D's must seem quite unfashionable.

Yours,
Dale

>At 10:07 AM -0700 9/25/97, Dale Smith wrote:
>
>>We happen to include any poet we love in these issues, hence the >>paradoxical contents. Which shouldn't be too troubling, really, to >>understand as poets. The magazine is also about listening to those who >>have contributed to this art before us. Whether it's NY school, SF >>renaissance, or black mountain doesn't matter. We're autocratic and take >>what we like. I guess by that you can tell what we don't like.
>
>Dale,
>
>Judging from the writers you listed for this issue of your mag, what
you >guys like is straight white men. For example, I counted 22 poets and 2 >interviewees, for a total of 24 contributors, only four of which were >women. I think that even The New American Poetry did better than that.
>
>I hate PC-mongers myself, but still . . .
>
>Dodie
>

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

476. Susan Clark
[Fwd: test [Fwd: RADDLE MOON 's new address]]
Thu 25 Sep 1997

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

one more try:

Date: Wed, 24 Sep 1997 19:01:18 -0700
From: Susan Clark <[redacted]>
Organization: A Use for Poets (Editing) Company
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
Subject: test [Fwd: RADDLE MOON 's new address]

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

If this reaches the list, apologies for the duplication. We're trying to figure out why I can't post.

Susan

Date: Mon, 22 Sep 1997 17:17:42 -0700
From: Susan Clark <[redacted]>
Organization: A Use for Poets (Editing) Company
To: [redacted]
CC: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
Subject: RADDLE MOON 's new address

dear Spencer, dear list,

please address all RADDLE MOON or GIANTESS correspondence, submissions, subscriptions, etc. to our new address:

RADDLE MOON / GIANTESS
Main Space
518-350 East Second Avenue
Vancouver, BC
V5T 4R8 CANADA

And, thanks, Spencer for continuing this most useful -- and heartening
-- list.
Susan

Susan Clark

----------21F51448551F--

----------37A94C81279D--

↑ Index

477. dbkk
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Thu 25 Sep 1997

At 3:59 PM -0700 9/25/97, Dale Smith wrote:
>I feel, however, that most poetics journals these days seek >women and people of color to satisfy a self-righteous urge to compete in >the cultural market place, regardless of personal poetics. And editors >who do not draw a line over aesthetic concerns, in the end, ruin > thought, intellection, and in a deeper way, the very issues they >themselves falsly believe they are confronting.

Dale,

You've dug yourself in so deep, I feel like offering you a shovel . . .

I feel that women and writers of color have, more often than not, given the most thrilling readings at Small Press Traffic over these many years. My "thought" and "intellection" may have been ruined long ago, but I've never booked anybody whose work I didn't believe in--and yes I've had to research, to fill in my lacunae--but I think the results, both personally and publically, have been well worth it.

Dodie

↑ Index

478. Susan Schultz
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Thu 25 Sep 1997

Why is it that "aesthetics" always comes to the rescue of any attempt to broaden one's scope by including writers of color and women, as if there were some "natural" division between them? I know I've solicited material from members of both "groups," and not because I felt it an either/or question; it would be an act of bad faith were I not to do so. And why is it that the mysterious category of "my friends" is always the one holding the aesthetical torch? I appreciate the desire not to make too many distinctions, but the refusal to make any (or to insist that only others are doing so) only supports the status quo. And is not "experimentalism" an attempt to change the status quo? Or should only some quo's be re-statused?

Susan

Susan M. Schultz
Dept. of English
1733 Donaghho Road
University of Hawai'i-Manoa
Honolulu, HI 96822

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/schultz http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/ezines/tinfish

↑ Index

479. Ernesto Grosman
The Radio Reading Project... A CORRECTION
Thu 25 Sep 1997

In my last message I made a mistake in the address of the EPC Sound List by typing a dash instead of a dot between the words "list" and "html".

It should read:

http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/sound/file-list.html

Sorry,

ernesto

↑ Index

480. Christopher Reiner
AVEC Sampler
Fri 26 Sep 1997

> New From Avec Books:
>
> An Avec Sampler, 1997
> New writing by:
> Laura Moriarty; Chris Stroffolino; Laynie Browne; George Albon; Stephen-Paul Martin; Susan Smith Nash and Lissa McLaughlin.(Cover photographs by Lissa McLaughlin.)
>
> AN AVEC SAMPLER is not AVEC magazine. It is not any magazine. It is a book, a sampling of contemporary writing, with approximately seven to ten pages from each contributor. This publication of multiple authors will appear at various invervals. Future SAMPLERS will include translations--from the French and other languages.
>
> *63 pages * $8.50 (please include $1.24 for bookrate shipping)* Perfect Bound* ISBN: 1-880713-10-1*
>
> _The Avec Sampler_ is available from SPD and Baker and Taylor. In the > coming weeks, check out the Avec Books website for Sampler excerpts.

↑ Index

481. Tom Orange
name, paradox, &c.
Fri 26 Sep 1997

points well taken on both sides here, tho i will add two cents along the lines of what dale was saying abt the profusion of journals out there.

some of the editorial work for the journal sub-stance has recently moved from santa barbara here to london ont. for a few years now the number of submissions dealing with issues of gender/race/identity have, very sadly, dropped off, a simple reason being that there are any number of specialized journals now that cover those areas. which is of course a good thing, except that now a readership that appreciates a broad range of perspectives can no longer easily find that range in one place, and readerships get fragmented, balkanized.

perhaps that fragmentation is more accurate reflection of the status quo, and i certainly wdnt advocate a return of the evil empire. but in the meantime, what's an editor to do? broaden horizons do some work and hunt down a range of perspectives, hellyeah. publish stuff you don't like for the sake of being "representative," noway.

publish stuff you like -- and keep looking for new stuff to like.

cheers,
tom

↑ Index

482. David Dowker
Re: Caroline Bergvall/Kevin Killian in San Francisco
Fri 26 Sep 1997

More of Caroline Bergvall's writing can be found at:

http://home.ican.net/~alterra/

David

> For you with access to the World Wide Web check out:
>
> http://angel-exhaust.offworld.org/html/issue-9-10/CarolineBergvall.html
> for some of her writing
>
> http://www.dartington.ac.uk/Performance_Writing/keynote.html
> for some of her theory

↑ Index

483. Stephen Cope

Re: radio shows... (a brief on Gitin)

Fri 26 Sep 1997

David Gitin actually still does (or at least did as of a year ago) a radio program, although it comes out of Monterey area. No poetry, or very little. More a music program. He still generates about a chapbook a year of poems...

Stephen Cope

PS: I'd have to mention LINEbreak here. When I was in Santa Cruz I broadcast about half of the tapes to fairly strong response. Charles provides a welcome contrast to Terri Gross, and an even more welcome contrast to most of what passed for poetry programs in the area (of which there were and likely still are quite a few, but mostly somewhat conservative).

> Ron Silliman writes:
>
> Clark Coolidge did a great show on KPFA for awhile in the late 1960s, followed by another by David Gitin. Clark's was basically the NY School, and David's basically the Black Mtn folks. Later Kit Robinson and Erica Hunt did a series called In the American Tree (from which I took a title), later hosted by others as well. Jack Foley more recently has had a show on that station.
>
> *Don't I remember Lyn doing that show first, Ron? I mean before Kit and Erica, or do I have that backwards. I do remember being on it with her.*
>
> "David Gitin" -- wonder what he's doing now?
>
> Tom Mandel
>
> Tom Mandel [redacted]
> *********
> *Screen Porch * http://screenporch.com*
> *4020 Williamsburg Ct, Ste 200 * vox:* [redacted]
> *Fairfax, VA 22031 * fax:* [redacted]
> *********
> Join the Caucus Conversation

↑ Index

484. Hugh Steinberg
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Dale writes (among other things):

1) how do you publish poetry you love and 2) still represent poets of diverse backgrounds? My small format allows me hardly 90 pages of space to work with, so I'm naturally going to be selective about how I fill that up. Also, my friends who write the poetry I like, happen to be predominately white and male.

Dale: Not to sound condescending, but you need to make more friends. Or to spin it another way, all you have to do is ask. If you get bad Gertrude Stein imitations, be an editor and demand better (which is your perogative as an editor, not because you happen to be white or male).

I side with Dodie on this one.

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

485. rsillima
David Gitin
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Tom Mandel asks what David Gitin is doing. Well, after an eventful stay in Japan after the end of his second marriage a few years ago (he was literally hit by a truck), he's back in the Monterey area teaching at a few of JCs around there. Publishes little chapbooks of his poetry, which I still enjoy reading whenever I get them.

Ron

Ron Silliman
262 Orchard Road
Paoli, PA 19301-1116
[redacted]
[redacted] (o)
[redacted] (fax)
[redacted]
[redacted]
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/silliman/

↑ Index

486. Schuchat Simon
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

an interesting problem. I don't think anyone is getting rich publishing small press magazines or books, certainly it would be strange for anyone to publish work they don't like, it also seems logical to publish your friends' work (I would like to be friends with many of the writers whose work I like and it certainly is hard on a friendship with a writer if you don't like their work, though I can think of exceptions to both of these statements without much effort). so it seems as though on general principles Dale is right, except that he seems to define his friends and his taste in, not exclusionary terms, but restricted somehow. it would be crazy to publish something you don't like because of the gender or race of the author*, it would be even crazier to presume you won't like someone's writing because of their gender or race, and it seems sad but perhaps understandable that someone lacks the curiosity or energy to seek out writing by non-white non-males who might be interesting. but what can you do, Frank O'Hara said nobody should be forced to read poetry as if it were good for you.

*(or if not crazy at least weirdly backscratching logrolling careerist)

↑ Index

487. Miekal And
Spam Emotions, Spam Thinking, Flames Fairing
Fri 26 Sep 1997

I getting the distinct impression that this list is addicted to drama. Is this what words mean?

Miekal

who has his fill of drama living in a community of 15 or so anarchists.

--
@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

488. henry gould
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Responding to Dale's interesting letter: I think you have to take your "aesthetic" seriously enough to want to find it reflected where you might not so easily recognize it, outside the writing of your buddies & idols of the past. And see where its boundaries are with respect to the not-obviously aesthetic, like history & personal experience & the public world & etc.

A very brief story that might shed light on the issue: I was at a Poetry Mission mtg last night. Edwin Honig, a poet close to 80 who has been through the Depression, WW II, personal McCarthyite persecution, etc. was pushing for a reading or series of readings around Vietnam vet poets & translations of Vietnamese poets, as a way of getting at the kind of poetry that seems interesting & real to him: poetry of real, historical- personal experience, of people who have "been there" in fact or authentic imagination. He criticized a lot of current trends as simply writing he "doesn't understand" - abstract, inhuman, solipsistic, hermetic. That people need poetry that addresses & interprets their own experience of war & life's battles in a way they can feel, not in a way they have to "appreciate" as art or technique or whatever. [ars est celare artem]

How does this relate to your mag? That if you are really interested in an alternative to academic product & experimental solipsism, you have to be less complacent about your own aesthetic & less superficial about the grid of p.c. divisions (gender, class, race). The issue of when poetry loses its edge or essence & fades into doctrinaire or documentary regurgitation is important - but that's part of your job in looking for & finding good writing outside your own circle.

(Understand I'm preaching to myself here, as the inheritor of a little mag & trying in piddly ways to move MYSELF off the passive to the active stage of finding material).

- Henry Gould

↑ Index

489. Pierre Joris
Re: Writing experiments
Fri 26 Sep 1997

> *The most amazing Oulipo resource I know of is a THREE VOLUME _La Bibliotheque Oulipienne_ [apologies for omitted accents ...]. The publisher is Seghers, I'm showing an ISBN of 2-232-10308-0 for volume 1. This is in French, of course. For anyone truly interested in Oulipo, these* > volumes are > a must-have. I'm not sure where one orders such things, I just found them > sitting on the shelf the last time I was at a bookstore in Paris.

> (Amazon.com doesn't seem to have them; I just tried that ISBN at Amazon.com > and came up empty.) Pierre?

Yes indeed, Jim -- in August I stood drooling in La Hune in Paris flipping through the 3 volumes: they definitively are the best collection of OULIPO stuff -- cldn't however buy it as I had just come from my favorite bookshop, the Librairie Avicenne, where I had spent every last franc I owned buying some 2 dozen recent & not so recent books by Maghrebian & Mashrekian poetas & writers. Next time....

Pierre
==========
pierre joris 6 madison place albany ny 12202
tel/fax [redacted] email:[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/

"I have never been able to tell a beginning
from an end." — Georges Braque
==========

↑ Index

490. Maria Damon
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

At 5:07 PM -0700 9/25/97, [redacted] wrote:
>At 3:59 PM -0700 9/25/97, Dale Smith wrote:
>>I feel, however, that most poetics journals these days seek >>women and people of color to satisfy a self-righteous urge to compete in >>the cultural market place, regardless of personal poetics. And editors >>who do not draw a line over aesthetic concerns, in the end, ruin >> thought, intellection, and in a deeper way, the very issues they >>themselves falsly believe they are confronting.
>
>Dale,
>
>You've dug yourself in so deep, I feel like offering you a shovel . . .
>
>I feel that women and writers of color have, more often than not, given the >most thrilling readings at Small Press Traffic over these many years. My >"thought" and "intellection" may have been ruined long ago, but I've never >booked anybody whose work I didn't believe in--and yes I've had to >research, to fill in my lacunae--but I think the results, both personally >and publically, have been well worth it.

>
>
>Dodie

i second that emotion; and i also, personally, wince at playing stein off against pound in a way that casts stein as the narcissist, the errant one, the one with the "problem." to my mind, this is a gendered and politicized determination as much as it is an aesthetic one --i.e. women are often accused of narcissism, self-indulgence, etc and that judgment is used to keep them from access to the renown and respect enjoyed by their male peers. dale, i wonder if it'd be fair to say that your aesthetic sense may itself be the product of conditioning in an un-just society?

↑ Index

491. Maria Damon
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

At 3:35 PM -1000 9/25/97, Susan Schultz wrote:
>Why is it that "aesthetics" always comes to the rescue of any attempt to >broaden one's scope by including writers of color and women, as if there >were some "natural" division between them? I know I've solicited material >from members of both "groups," and not because I felt it an either/or >question; it would be an act of bad faith were I not to do so. And why is >it that the mysterious category of "my friends" is always the one holding >the aesthetical torch? I appreciate the desire not to make too many >distinctions, but the refusal to make any (or to insist that only others >are doing so) only supports the status quo. And is not "experimentalism" >an attempt to change the status quo? Or should only some quo's be >re-statused?
>
>Susan
>
hear hear. in my workplace and probably many of you'alls' (or is that all's?) the dynamic dale is describing is called the old boys' network.

↑ Index

492. Herb Levy
Shirley Clarke
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Thought some folks would be interested that "underground" filmmaker Shirley Clarke (the Connection from Jack Gelber's Beat play, the Cool World, Portrait of Jason, Ornette: Made in America &, according to the NYTimes, though I've never seen it, an Oscar-winning documentary on Robert Frost in 1962). She was also a co-founder of the Filmmakers Cooperative that used to put out dreamy catalogs back in the 60s & 70s.

There's a NYTimes obit today <http://www.nytimes.com/yr/mo/day/news/national/obit-clarke.html>.

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

493. Rachel Levitsky
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

There are so many good posts already on this one but it is just too delicious to pass up and like with Kevin, it has woken me from my silence, the houseclean-ing can wait. I think I can limit my points to two.

1)"But, because there are so few poets of color writing experiemental poetry" writes Dale. I feel ridiculous even having to point out how untrue this is. Of course then we get into a discussion of terms. What we mean by 'experimental' even 'writers of color.' But when I pulled books off my shelf this summer to teach my "Experimental Reading & Writing" class, this was not a problem. Among the writers we read were Kamau Braithwaite, Rochelle Owens, Clarke Coolidge, Susan Howe, Nicole Brossard, Paul Beatty, Jayne Cortez, Sapphire, Beckett, Clark Coolidge, Amiri Baraka--but then again I do tend to define things broadly. It's seems obvious to me that interesting language often comes from the margin, if its not being heard, it's just not being heard.

2) I think this whole issue of picking someone just because they are a . . . can be laid to rest. Only the most unimaginative and mediocre chooser would put themselves in that position. On the other hand why not just assume that there is proportional quality coming out of all sorts of bodies? I mean just assume it's true.

In my office job I noticed that six men were the finalists for an director position. I blurted to my boss 'you're going to extend the search aren't you' and he looked at me blankly. I just assume parity is a basic issue of justice and community. Can I use the word standard?

Thanks Maria for your comments on the Pound/Stein comment.

all yours,
RL

↑ Index

494. hg
hg post-blab
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Maria & Susan are right on about the Pound/Stein "narcissism" tag.

I understand how disagreeable, anti-art & reactionary my previous post sounds to many on the list. What is art & style if not personal interpretation & technique applied to shared reality. For many here experiment is an assertion of, a measure of, what is real. But it seems to me the richest soil for poetry to grow is in a balance - balancing the artist's interpretations & responses to shared experience against the experience of art in and for itself. Not art-for-arts sake or art-for-memory/experience alone (the vets). Both at once. Art for arts sake leads to the hermeticism & solipsism that Honig was decrying. Art for memorializing tough life leads to cliche or politically-approved official art. Doing by halves. - Henry Gould (enough from me today already)

↑ Index

495. dbkk
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Hi everyone it's Kevin Killian. My goodness, I don't think I've posted on this list in about a million years. Nevertheless this interesting thread brought me out of a drug induced stupor.

I have a different perspective than the other posts I've seen, including Dodie's. First of all, Dale Smith's work both as poet and editor is (tho' I haven't seen the new issue of "Mike and Dale's Younger Poets") usually first-rate and always provocative. There's no getting around that despite his method. Secondly, it's great to see a magazine with a strong editorial policy, so many magazines come out, you read them or look at them, zzzzzz . . . . However Dale once you expound an editorial philosophy that flies in the face of the orthodoxy of political correctness, you must expect or perhaps enjoy the ensuing controversy. Didn't the same thing happen to the editors of "Apex of the M"?

Third, the thing I don't understand is, (I mean, the thing I don't empathize with, is) that an editor always publishes things he or she LIKES, what's the deal with that? I don't buy into that, but then I'm here in California and have the flat affectless I am a camera George Kuchar type of mind-set. Anyone who's read any of the issues of "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" will know what I mean, that it's not about "fashion" in the way Dale says but it's about what drifts in front of our bleary screen; it's more of a diary I suppose, a document of my life and Dodie's and what happens from week to week in our (cultural) lives . . . I think most magazines actually operate that way however editors are always claiming, I don't know to what degree truly, that this is actually work they "like." Many poets send out their work all the time and it crosses the viewfinder of editor X or Y's rifle and bang. And most of these poets (the ones who send out their work all the time) are indeed, say, 90 per cent of them, men. Any editor will agree with that I think.

Fourthly, I don't believe that all these editors, etc., are constantly pursuing Hoa Nguyen for her work solely because she is a "woman of color". If her work wasn't very, very fine she would not be in the demand you describe. Of course it's an interesting question. Most sensible people occasionally wonder about the value of their own work so I don't blame Hoa for her doubts.

Fifthly, re: the preponderance of "straight white males" among the contributors of the new issue of "Mike and Dale's Younger Poets" . . . I don't know if they are all white or not but they certainly are not uniformly "straight" . . . Check it out, I did.

Sixthly I respect Dale's actually tireless commitment to the older poets he admires (Clark, Dorn, Kyger, Whalen, etc.), a beautiful thing to see; likewise his attempts, no matter how tortuous, to find a link between their writing and history with those of the younger poets, his peers.

Seventh, I disagree, as will many others on the list, with the idea that Gertrude Stein's poetics were deplorable or stemmed from "self narcissism." "Condoned" is too strong a word to use in this context.

Well, there I've gone on and on about this, but forgive me, all, the issues tempted me into speaking out a bit. I just thought of a few anecdotes to finish with, and one is, what is the name of that magazine that used to come to my door every month or so, edited by that man (Ellis?) who moved to Jerusalem or somewhere? I'll forget my own name next, but the magazine featured one or two poets in every issue, and after a while you just couldn't help noticing that every one of them was a man. This went on and on for years. I'd rip open the envelope and pull out the thing, and yes, there were another couple of men blathering about this that and the other . . . It became amusing in this awful way.

Someone help me out here with the name of the magazine, I'm sure many of you were in it.

The other one I remember was "Hole," this one issue came and sure enough, there was one woman in it, and she (Karen McCormack?) was only in it because the compositors had butchered her poem enough in a previous issue so that the editors had to print it again in this one. I'm sure Louis Cabri took a lot of heat for that on both counts.

God bless you all for your work. XXX
Kevin (Killian)

↑ Index

496. robert drake
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

request to the list: wondering if anybody might point to examples of other mags that might serve as models for dale&co's efforts: ie, NYschool/Naropa/Pound nexus aesthetics, w/ a wider demographic contributor base?

& if such doesnt come to mind, praps the real critique being made is of that aesthetic, rather than this particular mag?

asever
luigi

↑ Index

497. Hoa Nguyen
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

h. steinburg in response to dale:
>Dale: Not to sound condescending, but you need to make more friends.
Or
>to spin it another way, all you have to do is ask. If you get bad Gertrude >Stein imitations, be an editor and demand better (which is your perogative
>as an editor, not because you happen to be white or male).
>
>I side with Dodie on this one.
>

>Hugh Steinberg
>

This advice reminds me of two things. One is a Sienfeld episode where George invites an African American man to dinner to impress his boss (a man of color). It also reminds me of work and m. damon's reference to the "old boy's network" -- which I experience as the "old white network"-- I work for a consulting firm. Our small group has a balance gender mix and is all European American/white. In a meeting yesterday, when discussing new hires, the partner (male) says "We need more minorities!"

Having opportunities -- whether in the workplace or in getting published-- is, well, great, for me. (I sometimes question whether it is transformative-- economics still rule opportunities -- personally, I feel like the kind of teaching I was lucky to do-- with inner city youth-- created opportunities for diverse people and economically depressed persons more than my getting printed in a magazine did.)

It is very frustrating to feel "collected" like a stuffed bird with exotic feathers. Some of my friends of color dislike making friends with or participating in events with white people because as one friend said, "I don't feel like diversifying their (group)". Mr. Steinberg's suggestion feels like that.

I have struggled with this very much, and as Dale mentioned, we talk about this matter constantly. We live with it. And I appreciate our discussions-- and our discussions here on the list-- what is the responsibility one has as an editor?

Also related: Henry Gould spoke of "old idols"-- I sometimes feel as if aestethics are meaningless and that editors often include the "big" names regardless of what they actually are writing.

And finally, I am so tired of the reference to "sides"-- in so binary, limiting and inaccurate to the complexities of matters at hand! I am not on a side, I refuse sides, which side, what is a side, who defines the sides?

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

498. dbkk

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Fri 26 Sep 1997

At 8:36 AM -0500 9/26/97, Maria Damon wrote:

> i second that emotion; and i also, personally, wince at playing stein off against pound in a way that casts stein as the narcissist, the errant one,

> the one with the "problem." to my mind, this is a gendered and politicized determination as much as it is an aesthetic one --i.e. women are often accused of narcissism, self-indulgence, etc and that judgment is used to keep them from access to the renown and respect enjoyed by their male peers. dale, i wonder if it'd be fair to say that your aesthetic sense may itself be the product of conditioning in an unjust society?

Well said, Maria--but this has already been said SO OFTEN . . . in the 70s over and over and then we can swirl our heads around and look back to Virginia Woolf. It's disheartening that you would STILL have to be saying it in the 90s, almost the milleniumn. Misogyny is indeed a vile weed that one has to continually take a sickle to. However, when Dale wrote:

> Most
> writers outside of my small camp follow a deplorable tradition of poetics established by Gertrude Stein's self narcissim.

I believe that he was not just talking about women's writing in particular. I think this is a veiled reference to Language Writing, that Dale is carrying on his mentor Tom Clark's 20+ year vendenta against it. Forgive me if my interpretation is off--the passage is very vague, I wonder if not purposely so. Dale is quite specific in the women he condemns--that broad highly diverse group who have been published in Chain. Even though Chain also prints men, we all know it's basically a women's magazine, I mean, it may as well be Better Homes and Gardens. But these Gertrude Stein followers, who seem to be many gendered remain vague, veiled--I wonder if that isn't because there is a predominance of men involved (i.e., powerful beings to be taken seriously)--and therefore there would me a greater degree of risk involved in openly critiquing them.

I can sympathize with Tom Clark's hatred of Language Writers. I was living in San Francisco when the Lang-Pos took over the scene--it was brutal and many people were treated very badly. But, Dale, what has anybody done to you that you would call whatever work you have in mind "deplorable." We all have our likes and dislikes, but this violence of emotion is very troubling and dangerous, I feel--especially when nobody is fighting with you.

I'm also curious as to how you, Dale, define self-narcissism. Is there a narcissism that isn't "self" narcississm? The last time I heard you read there was lots of "I" poetry lovingly detailing your visits and conversations with your friends. How is that not narcissism? I should add that this is not a critique. I'm very interested in narcissism.

One more thing: from what I've seen, most writers outside of your small camp follow a deplorable tradition of academic poetry and spoken word poetry. This fish bowl of "exploratory" writing (as Steve McCaffery calls it) is very tiny. It is not the whole world.

Dodie

↑ Index

499. Jordan Davis
The silence of the list
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Still smarting from Luigi's description of list silence as marking an uninformed or naive post -- well after my first few posts here I've met a great calm -- it is, what, us? True, hurt and silence go hand in hand -- but there is also the vygotskian idea that silence is (or can be) a zone of proximal development? that you don't make a noise while you're jumping -- you give off light -- this over and against the taoist 'who knows does not speak' stereolab likes to sing -- since what we're speaking about is sort of singing? If not beauty, then justice? If not justice then life itself? If not life then the codes? If not the codes then the hollow words -- bells are hollow. Cells are hollow. The dells are all et cetera they say but you walk there and if you can afford it you've had a variation in your experience. Meaning apparently is in variation, and in variation from variation (chant, Bach, aleph, deal). And so the companies are run with an eye to the pe ratio -- but the consolidations and the writeoffs ought to lead to a recession? Park smells like rats. So that "I cannot make it cohere" leads to "I will not connect the dots" but then no one does and Plato blames writing. Poets, specifically. Money, says Frank Kermode, says John Buchan says Wallace Stevens, is a kind of poetry. But "I cannot make it" was Ez about money. While Stein wrote sensitively, narcissistically (!) about it. You may not pool your money to hire a teacher to keep the opposition from being accurate when they say classes are held in bathrooms. You may not blame Robert Moses. Names will not do. Only learning, which is singing. And money. Other divisions are ways to make people forgetful about learning-singing and money. Forget money. Art did, and look where that got it. So Gates makes up a third of what the government says it won't give Cambridge, and this just after Rodefer gets to the states. And everybody is happily global because the brown decades are just that. So that's what it's like to walk to work -- Jordan

↑ Index

500. Jordan Davis
The Paradox and the Name of its Disco Tents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

The World. Hanging Loose. Misc. Proj. No Trees.. Also, I'd say the Language school is a metamorphosis of NY/Pound so I'd include exactly the magazines

Dale is distancing himself from in the vapor trail of that nexus. As always, the "real critique" is elsewhere. - J

At 11:03 AM -0400 9/26/97, robert drake wrote:
>request to the list: wondering if anybody might point to >examples of other mags that might serve as models for dale&co's >efforts: ie, NYschool/Naropa/Pound nexus aesthetics, w/ a >wider demographic contributor base?
>
>& if such doesnt come to mind, praps the real critique being >made is of that aesthetic, rather than this particular mag?
>
>asever
>luigi

↑ Index

501. Dale Smith

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Fri 26 Sep 1997

Dodie:

It's not surprising you want to label me a misogynist. We've been over that ground before. Or wasn't it homophobe you called me before? Or racist? This kind of address is an unimaginative form of name calling that closes discussion and reduces provoking and beneficial discourse. Call me what you want, these issues remain. And they are very touchy. But they won't go away because they are impossible to ignore with such attempts at closure.

I'd prefer also if you would leave Tom out of this. This discussion, while perhaps in his spirit, has nothing whatsoever to do with him. Hey, I'm a big boy misogynist now on my own. If you want, I can backchannel my credentials. In addition, Tom has all but given up poetry and I haven't spoken with him in months.

Re: Language Poetry. That's a fairly restricted group of poets, to my mind. And I don't agree particularly with some of their methodology, although, at various times, I have found their art to be quite compelling. I think those people were responding to specific political and aesthetic pressures resticted to their own historical milieu. What's followed, however, are watered down, thoughtless attempts to imitate Language methods and forms by younger writers. The results are not very interesting from my point of view. And that is all it is. My own small point of view. But I'm glad my opinions are challenged because it makes me think.

Otherwise, I find it perfectly admirable that you challenge me so openly and publicly. But it's beginning to be more like a personal vendetta on your part rather than a discussion of issues: race, gender, aesthetics. Why don't you send your bull dog barks backchannel without boring other folks. Well, gossipy personal affairs are fun, but still. Perhaps some Grace?

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

502. Douglas Barbour

Re: _Boxkite_

Fri 26 Sep 1997

Hey, let me tell you about:

BoxKite: A journal of poetry & poetics

This is a stunning new journal (it almost seems silly to call it that: at 320 pages, with a beautiful cover by Jess, wonderful layout & typography throughout, including a section on an artist Idris Murphy's work, & all that writing, it's a BOOK, & a beauty) with many contributions from listmembers among others.

Oh by the way, it's from Australia, another big international poetry zine to stand with John Kinsella's _SALT_, making me wonder just what's happening down under these days.

Editor James Taylor has gathered poems, essays, & reviews by an astounding group of writers & mixed them up for a great read. I cant take the hours to name them all, but:

Rachel Blau DuPlessis, Armand Schwerner, Ronald Johnson, Robert Duncan (from his notebooks), Robert Creeley, Norma Cole, Robert Kelly, Susan Howe, Lyn Hejinian, Rae Armantrout, Michael Palmer, Charles Bernstein, Rosemarie Waldrop, Hank Lazer, Susan Schultz, Pierre Joris, Chris Cheek, Charles Alexander, etc.; Robert Adamson, John Kinsella, Kris Hemensley, Tracy Ryan, & others from Oz; many translations, including new Brazilian poets; Tom Raworth, Peter Middleton, Tom Leonard. So many more.

Ive been reading my way through with great delight for a few days now. Strange to admit, here on e-mail, perhaps, but I remain a dedicated bibliophile & _Boxkite_ is the answer to a bibliophile's dreams, it's just such a Book.

You can order it ($20AU for a subscription + $5. postage) from The Poetics Foundation, GPO Box 1500, Sydney, NSW 2001, Australia. Fax: (042) 94 3264. Or e-mail editor James Taylor at <[redacted]> & ask for more information.

And hey, The Poetics Foundation accepts VISA & Mastercard, which makes ordering easy.

(Oh, well yes, I do have an essay therein too, but dont let that stop you, this is a major addition to the journal scene & deserves our support.)

Gotts go read some more....

==========
==========
Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]
H: [redacted]
~~~
~~~

CD-Rom (for more info e-mail: [redacted]). The post-1945 American Poetry section, which will include the two sections mentioned above, is being co-edited by Geoffrey Ward and Charles Bernstein.

Thanks,

Steve Evans
[redacted]

↑ Index

504. Mark Prejsnar
Re: The Paradox and the Name of its Disco Tents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Thanx to Jordan for his mention of Misc. Proj...

I would definitely add to his list: TinFish

Mark Prejsnar
Atlanta

On Fri, 26 Sep 1997, Jordan Davis wrote:

> The World. Hanging Loose. Misc. Proj. No Trees.. Also, I'd say the Language school is a metamorphosis of NY/Pound so I'd include exactly the magazines Dale is distancing himself from in the vapor trail of that nexus. As always, the "real critique" is elsewhere. - J
>
> At 11:03 AM -0400 9/26/97, robert drake wrote:
> request to the list: wondering if anybody might point to examples of other mags that might serve as models for dale&co's efforts: ie, NYschool/Naropa/Pound nexus aesthetics, w/ a wider demographic contributor base?
>
> & if such doesnt come to mind, praps the real critique being made is of that aesthetic, rather than this particular mag?
>
> asever
> luigi

↑ Index

505. Maria Damon
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

this is all very stimulating, because, as dodie points out, while the relationship between aesthetic judgment and the social conditions that give rise to it has been discussed to death elsewhere, to the point where it really can be a tiresome cliche, the general tenor of POETICS (not everyone all the time, clearly) is notably either silent on or hostile to challenges to "aesthetics" as the bottom line. i.e. my questions a few weeks ago: why does the avant-g police its borders so vigilantly and why is aesthetic consensus the bottom line? lots of people responded to the first question and virtually no one to the second. hence my comment also that the blurb for m davidson's book (md argues that the aesthetics of modernism went hand in hand w/ certain historical developments of the 20th c that determined "how we read" or some such) is hardly a novel argument, but refreshing to hear here. i have nothing against people publishing their friends, exercising strong editorial control, etc., and i have nothing against dale smith or his poetry or his new magazine. it's the defensive appeal to an aesthetic presumed to be objective and universal, and , worse, has moral overtones (i.e. stein is a "deplorable" influence because her writing is morally flawed) that the problem arises. i'm also taken with kevin's point that publishing what one likes is a worthy policy to challenge. one thing that struck me about the zines he writes about in his bio of spicer is how little editorial control, or issues of "quality" determined what got published and what didn't. there was a sense of inclusiveness that seems to me to be just fine, and actually pretty inspiring. not that every mag shd be broadly inclusive; but let's not write off the ones that are, or the spirit they embody, as failing to police the borders of good writing.

↑ Index

506. Eliza McGrand

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

why is it that when the issues are primarily male-identified issues like war, rebellion against father, etc., the poetry is described as "poetry of real, historical-personal experience, of people who have 'been there' in fact or authentic imagination"... but when it is about FEMALE experience, i.e. betrayal, abuse, being a nurse or civilian administrator in war, being a non-combattant caught up in war, it is " abstract, inhuman, solipsistic, hermetic," i.e. writing men "don't understand" and as such, devalued...

sigh. i for one found the writing of Lady Borton on vietnam and vietnam war some of the most gripping "vet" writing i've ever read.
e

↑ Index

507. henry
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

On Fri, 26 Sep 1997 14:13:21 -0400 Eliza McGrand said:
>why is it that when the issues are primarily male-identified issues like war, >rebellion against father, etc., the poetry is described as "poetry of real, >historical-personal experience, of people who have 'been there' in fact or >authentic imagination"... but when it is about FEMALE experience, i.e. >betrayal, abuse, being a nurse or civilian administrator in war, being >a non-combattant caught up in war, it is " abstract, inhuman, solipsistic, >hermetic," i.e. writing men "don't understand" and as such, devalued... >sigh. i for one found the writing of Lady Borton on vietnam and vietnam war >some of the most gripping "vet" writing i've ever read.

Elliza, are you speaking in general or reading things into what I said about the meeting at which Honig spoke? The steroetyping you describe goes on a lot and the issue was brought up, indirectly at least, by a couple of people (including me) at the meeting described - ie. Honig was reminded that "life's battles" are ongoing & all over the place. But neither Honig at the meeting or me in my post called women's experience, wartime or otherwise, abstract, inhuman, etc. Although one person there, who had discussed these matters with EH beforehand, said he (EH) had been trying to understand Jorie Graham's work & having a hard time - he was thinking of her work as representative of an "abstract" trend.

In any case, you can read misogyny into this if you want. Honig's main issue was that poetry loses something by not making the effort to bring over lived experience - especially the apocalyptic historical experiences of this century - in an attempt to represent SHARED experience. HIS position. "Bringing it over" is never simple though, considering the blinders we put on or learn. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

508. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: name, paradox, &c.
Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

ok, just recovering from a badass cold, and something tells me to leave this one alone... seems there's just so much contentiousness in the air of late... but ok, i'll bite:

first: you can avoid publishing one aesthetic camp by choosing your friends NOT on the basis of their aesthetic... and then publishing your friends! (not your aesthetic)...

(((of course this is tough to do sometimes, if you really don't like a friend's work)))

what your publishing commitment then might amount to, i'm not sure---depends on your friends, which depends on you!... and hey---i use the term "friends" here advisedly, and most selectively...

secondly: on the one hand, and to be a bit extreme about it, one would be wise not to assume that publishing an african-american poet will result in poetry marked, say, by black dialect... which means, one would be wise not to assume that a commitment to publishing one aesthetic will necessarily result in a specific gender/race/class etc (though it very well may, and often does)... if you oppose the simplicities of identity politics, then you owe it to yourself to oppose aesthetic assumptions pertaining thereto... and turning it the other way some, with a due eye for appropriation, and just a tad figuratively---white guys can play the blues, yes, conventional and otherwise...

on the other hand, one would be wise not to assume that the gender/race/class of one's friends is an arbitrary reality... which is to say, that if you find yourself hanging out mostly with white folks and are white (like me, sadly), you can bet your sweet ass that this has something to do with (our) social-institutional-political structures (and of course, with your own convictions and abilities and motivations and and and)... and if you're committed, as susan has suggested, to challenging as a publisher/editor in any wayshapeorform something called the status quo, why then you ought at least as a publisher/editor to consider what you can contribute in the way of challenging these structures (which have clearly been internalized by all of us, to varying degrees)... perhaps, yes, you can challenge said structures through the writings of a specific dominant group, but i would argue that history offers an alternative, more complicated view of this matter (and i predicate here a belief in a dominant group, or groups)...

and hey, actually, publishing, say, the work of people of color---people of color who are and who are not mainstream writers---is far easier than creating a network of friends and acquaintances that reaches across the color line (assuming this latter is not already a part of your experience)... it may even be a way for one to begin to establish working relationships with people of color...

(((and "people of color" out t/here, please please forgive me this apparent objectification, and this apparent urgency to "reach you" in this post)))

if on the other hand you are not opposed to the status quo in any wayshapeorform when it comes to your publishing/editing self, and wish simply to contribute an aesthetic product to a peopled world that some people find relatively fucked, why then you run the risk of offering up something that some people won't really give a hoot about, b/c your gesture will likely be seen as somewhat beside the point (by some people)... even if you oppose the status quo and yet presume to do so through the selective work of selected dominant groups, the result is likely to be the same...

which, i suppose, is always a risk, in any case... which, i suppose, is ok too, but doesn't exactly light my fire, motivationally or aesthetically speaking...

best,

joe

↑ Index

509. William Burmeister Prod
Re: Bibliography Help?
Fri 26 Sep 1997

> Dear Listmembers:
>
> For an annotated bibliography I'll be compiling over the next few months I would be interested in hearing (backchannel) from those of you who have published essays, articles, chapters, interviews, substantial reviews, or whole books on:
>
> (a) Younger poets (loose rule of thumb: first books after 1985) working in the "New American" (read: avant-garde, experimental, formally radical) tradition
>
> and/or
>
> (b) language writing

Hit that wonderful archive (and the rest for that matter) in the EPC (Electronic Poetry Center) at: http://writing.upenn.edu/epc. Bring your lunch with you.

BB

↑ Index

510. David Bromige
picking up sides (name-paradox thread)
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Listopolitans, I welcome the many sensitive & various postings on this topic, & even though I may be seen to have kicked it off inadvertently if not drunkenly, I may be permitted a further & more sober posting on a couple of its aspects.

Hoa Nguyen, I echo yr question & yr defiance re sides, & not wanting to be on one. But one thing I hear in the echo, one thing I answer myself, is that the sides are picked for us, & will never be entirely transcended, not until (in only part as a result of our individual eforts) society undergoes its slow mutations....It's like that Yeats' line, "They'll never love you for yourself/ and not yr yellow hair". I when younger "didnt know there was a side" that I was on...that was Fat City. Later, by the time it was pointed out to me, my City was growing Leaner. Now I am A Straight White Protestant Male, subject to quota-stringencies (in the matter of arts grants, for e.g.), & probably further categorized as LangPo FellowTraveler. It doesnt matter that I was bi for years in my youth, that the california sun makes me look Bengali, or that I am atheist pantheist zen marxist anarchist, or that most of my confidantes have been women & gay men, or that (in my opinion, granted) my poetry doesnt overlap much with anyone's. And even though I am now enjoying minority status as an Old Fart, I know the injustice you speak of, if only faintly compared to yours; it still smarts. And it is unlikely in my case & and that of other SWM's, that we will be invited to help diversify someone's group, leastwise here in America. I get discriminated against for my yellow (well, i do dwell in the past) hair, but not loved for it. But of course, there is a cultural/language usage base that continues to give me advantages in a society that is still tipped somewhat the same way. I reach for my Yeats when needing a hit.

Excuse the lengthy background to my cry of sympathy! I want what I write to be poetry to others, not an instance of cultural diversity/monotony. I dont want to be the writer of it, do you know what i mean? Because I can be pegged. I want the reader to recognize herself as the author of it. Impossible, impossible. I hope it isnt published because of my lengthy history of smallpress publishing, because someone likes me (god forbid!), or because for 3 years I attended Haberdashers' Aske's Hampstead (huh? where?)....Any more than a person of the theater wants to have gotten the part because good at blowjobs. On its merits--thats what one wants. But there'll never be a neutral jury. So dont Dale & co-editor have the right to go on representing in their own ways a bent twisted society (v. maria Damon's post) even while others who "know better" (despite being members of the same bent, twisted society) have the right to attack, chide, or try persuade them otherwise about their policies? "Younger Poets" is one zine among hundreds (v. Spencer Selby's great list), & is not likely to get much help grantwise in the present climate. Isnt it human (trans-cultural) to be let go to hell by one's own route, even if it is equally human to try to save people from so doing ? I realize this can sound like wishy-washy liberalism, but I am arguing for other perceptions re this (lack of) position. This thread is a worthwhile argument that cannot resolve, is one thing I post to point out.

And at base I am arguing for the purity of the work of art, a purity it may well require a lifetime's education to recognize or realize, a radiance that will forever suffer interference from the many-colored glass of the multi-cultural class-war-ridden dome. I think I am arguing for what Barrett Watten once summed up when he said : "I want my words to be my own." Bad History is the anatagonist in this endeavor. I think we need to acknowledge both, the ideal and its enemy. They do form a symmetry. I want my words to be my own/I want my poem to be exempt from its association with me : these, to my mind, are two facets of one figure. As my own, New, bringing news for us; as my own, tainted with Bad History, that made me one of us.

Hoa, much in this post is only marginally relevant to yours, & for that I apologize. But I thank you for the words that sparked my impulse to compose this, even if I come shortly to regret having done so. --Will i be wiser later? Then why bother to live! David

↑ Index

511. dbkk

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Fri 26 Sep 1997

At 9:53 AM -0700 9/26/97, Dale Smith wrote:

> It's not surprising you want to label me a misogynist.

Dale I didn't call you a misogynist. My reply was to Maria's post about a general cultural trend that's gone on since the beginning of time. My exact line was: "Misogyny is indeed a vile weed that one has to continually take a sickle to." This line was intentionally overblown to be humorous. I then went on to say that I felt your reference to Stein was NOT about misgyny but something broader.

> Otherwise, I find it perfectly admirable that you challenge me so openly and publicly. But it's beginning to be more like a personal vendetta on your part rather than a discussion of issues: race, gender, aesthetics. Why don't you send your bull dog barks backchannel without boring other folks. Well, gossipy personal affairs are fun, but still. Perhaps some

Perhaps I'm missing something here, Dale, but I see no reason why I'd have a personal vendetta against you. So, let me make this clear, I, Dodie Bellamy, do not have a personal vendetta against Dale Smith. You posted an incendiary post and I was responding. Remember, the women who do Chain are my friends. Though I'm sure they really don't need my defense, they're doing such wonderful, important work. Again, this emotional combustability on your part, I feel, is very dangerous. Emotional zeal often is kissing cousins with dehumanization of the Other. I did discuss issues in my last post, but since I used a manner that's different than from yours I'm accused of being gossipy with bulldogs--i.e., not to be taken seriously. Let me quote Maria on this issue:

> women are often
> accused of narcissism, self-indulgence, etc and that judgment is used to keep them from access to the renown and respect enjoyed by their male peers. dale, i wonder if it'd be fair to say that your aesthetic sense may itself be the product of conditioning in an unjust society?

Dodie

↑ Index

512. Aldon Nielsen
a little grace?
Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

well . . . (and excuse me,,,, I've just gotten itno town and read all these posts at one go) --

I suppoase it's one thing to create a mag. for the express purpose of publishing poetry working in one set of aesthetic assumptions -- and I suppose it's another thing to set up a mag. in which you publish mostly "friends" -- but, in defense of those seemingly OK acts, to remark that few "minority" poets write in innovative/experimental/blackmtn/nyschool whatever modes -- while at the same time giving every indication of never having really bothered to find out if such is in fact the case -- that is far more than simply being provocative --

yes, please, grace to read as variously as possible

↑ Index

513. William Burmeister Prod
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes.

↑ Index

514. Maria Damon
Re: picking up sides (name-paradox thread)
Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

i like much of what bromige sez: sides have been picked for us and in some ways we're capitulating to the powers that be by biting the bait that sez: "low-brow pc multicultural bootlicking fascists over here -- true poets and lovers of the muse over there." or "there's only a few 'decent' experimental poets of color out there..." it's like the arguments against affirmative action that i hear from my older colleagues and some of the younger ones, a specious representation v quality mindset.

↑ Index

515. Dale Smith

Sacred Cows

Fri 26 Sep 1997

All right. Briefly, sans the modernist manifesto lingo. And so I can be taken out of context once again. M&D is open to anyone regardless of race, sex, gender or religion. It's open to anything that strikes our fancy. I try to keep the thing as inclusive as possible. I do prefer certain poems over others. I respect those who publish what they don't like. But if I don't have an emotional attachment to what I publish, it's not going to appear in my magazine. For me, emotion is not "dangerous," as Dodie suggests, nor does it promote the "dehumanization of the Other." Rather, emotion promotes a sympathetic response to others. Without that dramatic connection, language loses some of its power to communicate. A poetics that appeals to the mind only falls apart under the weight of its own logic, its own pitifully misguided propositions. The mind, after all, likes control. It digs that kind of power. Emotions fight against that urge for control in the very tissues of our being. Language, when it's executed well, is formed from an emotional impulse that is, hopefully, guided by the mind toward a clear directon of some kind. My missives of late have been a bit heavy, which is in part, I think, a reaction to the mostly bland language posted in this electronic format. Forgive my indelicacies. And buy M&D's.

Re: Stein. That's what really seems to be upsetting to certain people on the list. Well, I dismiss her work, not because she is a woman, but because I find it unbearable to read. So many posts have been profoundly condescending and I appreciate your efforts to set me straight, so to say. But Stein, who is adored by many, including Phil Whalen and Alice Notely, both of whom I deeply admire, provides a kind of model for a poetics that I find misleading, presumptive, and ultimately useless because she takes you nowhere. You gain nothing by reading her.

I picked on Chain, although it is a journal composed mainly of women, because I find the work distant, cold, and removed from emotional possibilities. I have no sympathy for its poetics nor do I read any sympathetic writing between its covers. It is over long, incredibly laden with awkward verse void of music and heavy on a tired methodology that, rather than confronting the idea of the Father, as those editors have suggested, merely ignore that figure, and pretend it does not exist. It's great to take a stand on something. But you need feet to stand on and Chain's poetics have not even a leg.

But again, as I've stressed. These are my opinions and I assumed they would be ignored. Luckily, there are many who feel the necessity of confronting the ills of the world. And, I suppose, not feeling any sympathy for Stein and expressing such, is dangerous business these days. Or maybe, probably, I am being overly dramatic, and all of this will convert back into the dark zone of forgetfulness within a day or so.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

516. mark weiss

Names, Paradoxes, etc.

Fri 26 Sep 1997

It's interesting that several white male contributors to this thread have admitted having trepidations about getting involved. I think that's a shame and admit to having trepidations of my own. Feels a little like peering over the rim of the foxhole.

Despite the best will in the world accidents have a lot to do with what one chooses to publish, and I don't mean the large accidents of birth, class and education. Unfamiliar poetry, it should surprise no one, often takes an effort to get into, and one is flooded with new poets all the time. Somehow a particular body of work gets one's attention.

Case in point: the first book that Junction Press published is Susie Mee's _The Undertaker's Daughter_. Susie and I had been friends for a few years and had got into the habit of working over each other's stuff. So I got to know these poems that I might in other circumstances have passed over with hardly a glance, because they are more conservative technically than what I usually find useful--I had, for reasons having nothing to do with the press (it didn't exist yet), spent a lot of time with them. And they're very good and more than weird enough to meet my needs (in case anyone's curious, Susie's father was the undertaker in Howard Finster's home town--Howard's portrait of her father adorns the cover).

Mervyn Taylor is another example. I was going out with a woman who worked part-time at a school where Mervyn taught. She sponsored a reading by the students and faculty, and I went along for the ride. The stuff bowled me over, and I'm now waiting for yet another book manuscript from him. I wasn't looking for a black poet--I wasn't looking for anything beyond being courteous to the woman that I saw very briefly--and Mervyn was not one of my friends or in my circle, although he is now both.

These books came to me by means of what I'll call accidents of attention. They were chosen, like the others, because I found them useful. "Useful" is usually what a writer means when he or she says that he or she likes another writer's work--useful for one's work or one's spiritual development (for writers usually the same thing) or for the expansion of one's taste at that juncture.

It happens through no conscious fault of my own that the press (like the magazine I did in the 70's and the several series' that I've run) thus far is diverse enough to be considered politically correct--not including my own book, three are by women (of two different religions), one of whom is hispanic, altho not US hispanic, one is by a black man, the others by white males. But this is purely fortuitous. The other books came to me because I asked for them from friends or because they were recommended to me by friends--they had commanded more than ordinary attention for reasons other than the poems themselves. The diversity is, I think, a matter of the size and diversity of the market (the agora) I hung out in. Had I been in Boise instead of New York matters might have been different.

It's not that I make no efforts. I have approached poets, as I did Mervyn, who were not part of my extended circle. Thus far most of the poets I've found useful, in whatever circles they travel, already have publishers and are not available to Junction. That's another kind of accident. And I've asked for manuscripts from poets who impressed me at readings but whose work didn't make it for me independent of their presence.

Junction's next four books are by men. One is hispanic, and Mervyn's second means one is by a black man, although that still leaves me with just the one person of color. That will bring me to 11 books--at what point will I be exposed to charges that I discriminate against Asians? I'm certainly aware that that's a possibility, but the standard won't change. Throw as wide a net as I might it won't bring in every fish, and of those I catch I'll still only choose the ones I find most useful (I'm aware of how smelly that last metaphor is).

It's entirely possible that Junction's next four books will be by Asian women, but I'll be able to live with it if they're not.

In my magazine I once published a poem that I'd liked when I heard it read by the poet. In the wee hours when I was typesetting it I was overcome with nausea--given more scrutiny the depth of the poem's dishonesty came home to me. But I was stuck--the piece was accepted. It happens that it was by someone I knew well. I take my publishing very seriously--each book is my product as well as the poets--so I've tried real hard to make sure that that never happens again, although the poem in question got a lot of praise from the magazine's readers.

↑ Index

517. Aldon Nielsen
Re: Sacred Ruminants
Fri 26 Sep 1997

now this is really disingenuous --

Who was it in this exchange who posited it as a question of publishing "minority" or women poets VS publishing poetry "I" like??

Why would anyone think that they would have to publish poetry they didn't like in order to publish poets who are not white men?

↑ Index

518. Rachel Levitsky
Re: innovative poetry audiences
Fri 26 Sep 1997

I've been meaning to ask this for a while. This bickering over how many women and people of color an editor knows--we could add many more categories of 'otherness'--reminds me. What means are producers of poetry and poetic institutions using to develop and expand audiences? If reading makes writing, what are folks doing to expand the audience base. I am interested to know in what strategies producers are using. It seems to me a critical part of the politics.

↑ Index

519. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

[redacted] wrote:
>
> Kevin Killian wrote, in part:

I just thought of a few anecdotes to finish with, and one is, what is the name of that magazine that used to come to my door every month or so, edited by that man (Ellis?) who moved to Jerusalem or somewhere? I'll forget my own name next, but the magazine featured one or two poets in every issue, and after a while you just couldn't help noticing that every one of them was a man. This went on and on for years. I'd rip open the envelope and pull out the thing, and yes, there were another couple of men blathering about this that and the other .
> . . It became amusing in this awful way.
> Someone help me out here with the name of the magazine, I'm sure many of you were in it.
>
> Hi, Kevin.

This is Dan Zimmerman, one of those guys Stephen Ellis published in _:that:_, the magazine he and Stephen Dignazio edited out of Peacham, VT. Steve moved first to Ra'anana, Israel, and now lives in Amman, Jordan, where he now publishes Oasii broadsides. This year he also published _Blue Horitals_, a collaboration I did with my late friend and mentor, John Clarke [former editor of _intent._].

Just looking at the copies of _:that:_ I have at hand, I find among the first ten issues [two writers in each] Margueritte, Karen Driscoll, Susan Smith Nash and Cathleen Shattuck.

[By the way, a review of Gerrit Lansing's _Heavenly Tree Soluble Forest_ which appears at http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/ezines/spt/signals2.html refers to Gerrit (and John Clarke, and me) as "[belonging] to that much-maligned group 'the Olson cult,' 'the last all-male group in the U.S. gathered around a particular poet' (Marjorie Perloff)." The list of 19 "members" which follows includes Joanne Kyger and Alice Notley!] Maybe I'm just an old fart, but I see no reason whatsoever why Dale Smith or Steve Ellis or any _independent_ editor should feel obliged to publish anything he or she doesn't want to, or even to seek work from any particular kind of group he or she doesn't want to. I stress _independent_ because, as editor of _College English Notes_, the newsletter of the New Jersey College English Association [and answerable to an editorial board], I feel obliged to include work by the non-white, non-straight, and non-male _IF_ I like it well enough, but also to seek such work through calls for contributions from the members of NJCEA. When I have _independently_ edited magazines in the past, I asked for work from writers I admired, period [that was a long time ago; few or no n-ws, n-ss, n-ms came to mind--not that I excluded anyone on principle!]. If I edit any magazines _independently_ in the future, I expect to post public calls for work, but may not, depending on what I want to do artistically, issue by issue. And why not? "Who shall say I am not the happy genius of my household?"

↑ Index

520. William Burmeister Prod

Re: Names, Paradoxes, etc.

Fri 26 Sep 1997

Mark writes:

> These books came to me by means of what I'll call accidents of attention. They were chosen, like the others, because I found them useful. "Useful" is usually what a writer means when he or she says that he or she likes another writer's work--useful for one's work or one's spiritual development (for writers usually the same thing) or for the expansion of one's taste at that juncture.

No bone to pick here other than to say that the word useful in the context of this post makes me feel uneasy. Useful is a pregnant term when used in this context. Too entrenched as a term of authority or the establishment. In the present popularity contest atmosphere of publishing, useful extends to the person, the author who becomes useful to the publisher or to the critic for perhaps reason of race, gender, etc. Useful seems to me to better suggest a pass/fail for authorship; the minimum requirement having been met (chosen for us perhaps), the author is the one which becomes useful, the poem a mere incidental of the exchange. The next thing you know, we are speaking of a poet as being "owned" as the dead poets are.

BB

↑ Index

521. Eliza McGrand

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Fri 26 Sep 1997

---

i don't know honig, henry, so can't speak to his opinions. but his words echo those stirring mailer-esque words heard only too often... if he wants poems about authentic experience, how can he say there is a lack with the EXPLOSION of poetry by women starting in sixties and continuing to present day? judy grahn. alicia ostriker. no, no, i'm going to stop now but this could fill PAGES. when someone makes noises about "no poetry these days about authentic experience" it really is a wierd blank spot (aporia for those who yearn for more critical terms in my writing) considering that one of the big focal points for feminist/women's writing has been making THEIR authentic experience heard.

dodie, re magazines, i've had this conversation with you and henry and a few others before, but while i absolutely chide anyone with a magazine that is primarily men and almost no women writing, in practical experience, i've been horrified at how little writing by women i've gotten for various ventures. i've tried to recruit in women's web spaces, art centres, word of mouth... i thought it might just be techno-phenomenon (i work on ezine) but i've heard the same thing from the few editors of print media i know. how, dodie, are you finding the women writers? my sense is that there are tons of them out there and i know i see them in writing workshops and classes, but somewhere between the class, the initial exposure, and the phase of sending work out they seem to be getting lost... or lost to the sources i know about. i know i've felt silenced, in that "this is hopeless and i'm just going to go sit in my bathroom and pick at my eyebrows" kind of way when i pick up magazines, contest winner announcements, etc. and it is male after male, especially if, side by side, is somehting with blind submission policy that has half or more women showing up as winners.

and an evening with a testosterone frenzied gang from conference/class/mla session, where the few women sit in corners, look uneasy, don't talk, and if they do get interrupted and ignored, will put me in that bathroom for hours.

i'm undergoing something of the like right now in nursing school. about 1/3 to 2/5 class black women, the majority of remainder young white women. the white women will not go near the black women. oh, they'll be partners in labs occasionally. but they sit seperate from black women, don't sit at a lunch table when one of the black women has sat there, don't walk places with them. i've tended, myself, to make friends more with the black women because they are on average, older, and because the whole fucking thing makes me sick. but my objective self is also noticing that alot of the black women are haitian and creole speakers (i can speak french pretty badly but some myself), are older, have kids. and if i can let go of the racial dynamic for a minute, can see an age, post-high-school-and-childless vs. with children, living with parents vs. living with children and family, rich vs. poor, american vs. 1rst/2nd generation immigrants, snippy vs. gracious... ok, last losing objectivity, but anyway, can see lots of other factors, and wonder where, in all this, the seperation, the blank spaces, the (is it deliberate or just unconcsious habitual) looking away all coming from? which factor, or group of factors, or intersection of factors, or collusion or collision or collaboration, etc. of these factors produces the seperation. as with this, so with women and magazines... e

↑ Index

522. mark weiss
Re: Names, Paradoxes, etc.
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Of course _I_ knew what I meant, and I didn't think it could be misconstrued so thoroughly. Here's at it again, more completely: the work that takes me from where I am as writer and person to someplace I hadn't suspected was there. Not likely to have been "established," or it wouldn't have been a surprise. Gerritt Lansing's work, for example. Now I'm not always ready for the new thing when it appears in my life. Hell, there was a time when all hummingbirds looked the same to me, because my eye had not learned its lessons yet. So one poem of Gerritt's might have gone right past me without my noticing while I might have been there to meet another. I may be there for the first poem some other time, at some other juncture. If I am, it will be a coming together out of which something else may come, hardly appropriation as chattel. Not much of a chip in the fame game, either. I chose to call my press Junction for a reason.

At 06:42 PM 9/26/97 -0400, you wrote:
>Mark writes:

>
>>These books came to me by means of what I'll call accidents of attention.
>>They were chosen, like the others, because I found them useful. "Useful" is >>usually what a writer means when he or she says that he or she likes >>another writer's work--useful for one's work or one's spiritual development >>(for writers usually the same thing) or for the expansion of one's taste at >>that juncture.
>
>
>No bone to pick here other than to say that the word useful in the context of >this post makes me feel uneasy. Useful is a pregnant term when used in this >context. Too entrenched as a term of authority or the establishment. In the >present popularity contest atmosphere of publishing, useful extends to the >person, the author who becomes useful to the publisher or to the critic for >perhaps reason of race, gender, etc. Useful seems to me to better suggest a >pass/fail for authorship; the minimum requirement having been met (chosen for >us perhaps), the author is the one which becomes useful, the poem a mere >incidental of the exchange. The next thing you know, we are speaking of a poet >as being "owned" as the dead poets are.
>
>BB
>
>

↑ Index

523. mark weiss
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

I'll speak only to the least interesting point in this very interesting post. I knew Edwin Honig briefly but intensely for a month at the MacDowell Colony 19 years ago. He was, then as now, a poet with a small but respectable reputation, and he was then, as apparently now, very bitter about what he saw as his outsider status and rather defensively arrogant about the uniqueness of his talent and integrity. I liked him a lot, but I'm not sure he reciprocated: I think I may have been in his mind one of the barbarians at the gate. His work, as it happens, is interesting, and a strong sense of integrity is one of its virtues. It doesn't look to have been easy to produce. In some ways he reminds me of Bill Bronk. I cut him a lot of slack.

At 07:08 PM 9/26/97 -0400, you wrote:
>i don't know honig, henry, so can't speak to his opinions. but his words >echo those stirring mailer-esque words heard only too often... if he wants >poems about authentic experience, how can he say there is a lack with the >EXPLOSION of poetry by women starting in sixties and continuing to present >day? judy grahn. alicia ostriker. no, no, i'm going to stop now but this >could fill PAGES. when someone makes noises about "no poetry these days >about authentic experience" it really is a wierd blank spot (aporia for >those who yearn for more critical terms in my writing) considering that >one of the big focal points for feminist/women's writing has been making >THEIR authentic experience heard.
>
>dodie, re magazines, i've had this conversation with you and henry and a >few others before, but while i absolutely chide anyone with a magazine that >is primarily men and almost no women writing, in practical experience, i've >been horrified at how little writing by women i've gotten for various ventures.
>i've tried to recruit in women's web spaces, art centres, word of mouth...
>i thought it might just be techno-phenomenon (i work on ezine) but i've heard >the same thing from the few editors of print media i know. how, dodie, are >you finding the women writers? my sense is that there are tons of them out >there and i know i see them in writing workshops and classes, but somewhere >between the class, the initial exposure, and the phase of sending work out >they seem to be getting lost... or lost to the sources i know about. i know >i've felt silenced, in that "this is hopeless and i'm just going to go sit >in my bathroom and pick at my eyebrows" kind of way when i pick up magazines, >contest winner announcements, etc. and it is male after male, especially if, >side by side, is somehting with blind submission policy that has half or more >women showing up as winners.
>
>and an evening with a testosterone frenzied gang from conference/class/mla >session, where the few women sit in corners, look uneasy, don't talk, and >if they do get interrupted and ignored, will put me in that bathroom for >hours.
>
>i'm undergoing something of the like right now in nursing school. about 1/3 >to 2/5 class black women, the majority of remainder young white women. the >white women will not go near the black women. oh, they'll be partners in labs
>occasionally. but they sit seperate from black women, don't sit at a lunch >table when one of the black women has sat there, don't walk places with them.

>i've tended, myself, to make friends more with the black women because they are >on average, older, and because the whole fucking thing makes me sick. but my >objective self is also noticing that alot of the black women are haitian and >creole speakers (i can speak french pretty badly but some myself), are older, >have kids. and if i can let go of the racial dynamic for a minute, can see >an age, post-high-school-and-childless vs. with children, living with parents >vs. living with children and family, rich vs. poor, american vs. 1rst/2nd >generation immigrants, snippy vs. gracious... ok, last losing objectivity, >but anyway, can see lots of other factors, and wonder where, in all this,
>the seperation, the blank spaces, the (is it deliberate or just unconcsious >habitual) looking away all coming from? which factor, or group of factors, >or intersection of factors, or collusion or collision or collaboration, etc.
>of these factors produces the seperation. as with this, so with women >and magazines...
>e
>
>

↑ Index

524. Kali Tal
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Dale asks:

> 1) how do
> you publish poetry you love and 2) still represent poets of diverse backgrounds?

Mostly I stay out of these discussions because I inevitably get flamed up by folks who insist on seeing me as some sort of Political Correctness Fascist and/or a demon of aesthetic relativism. But this discussion is so interesting I can't help jumping in.

My notion of staying diverse might be different from most. Under the imprint of Burning Cities and Viet Nam Generation, Inc., I publish a series called "White Noise" which features white male poets of mostly working class origins and/or identification, who have a progressive political orientation (including our own Joe Amato--hi Joe!). In this particular case, I'm publishing WhiteHetMales on purpose, with full knowledge of exactly what I'm doing. I'm doing it because I think these particular guys have something really interesting to say, and I think they say it well. Most of the poetry books I publish are in this White Noise series (7 so far, with numbers 8-10 in the works), but I have also published books by women, Chicano, and African American poets, and in my journal, _Viet Nam Generation_, the mix is so various I can't break it down. Most of the poets I publish are politically progressive.

I do read and enjoy some right wing poets, but I don't often publish them. Mostly I just don't feel like it. And the beauty of running my own press is that I don't have to publish what I don't feel like publishing. On the other hand, I don't publish any poetry I don't think is good. And "good" means whatever I like, for whatever reasons I like it. (Reasons, by the way, I'm happy to clearly define for anyone who asks about why I like a particular poem.) Anybody who tries to argue that "good" means something else, I believe, is just layering rationalization on faith.

> Also, my friends who write the poetry I like, happen to be predominately white and male. I prefer friends' work to strangers. But I don't limit it in that way.

Well, this does seem to be the crux of the issue. I think, on one level or another, most of us publish our friends, submit our poems to our friends, read at our friends' bookstores or colleges, and so on. I mean, this is a small world, divided into smaller cliques, and it's hard to escape. Me, I'd go nuts if most of my friends were white and male. I need a good mix or I'm miserable. So I work hard at putting myself in situations where I'm going to meet people who are not white and/or not male in order to feed my burning need for variety. And what I've found is that when I connect to new people--make new friends--the doors of new communities open up to me. My African American friends who are poets send me poetry by their friends, who are often African American. But--at least in my experience--all this diversity has to be based on real relationships, real friendships and collegial connections between people who genuinely like and respect and try to understand each other. My immediate assumption, as a white person, is that when I make a new contact with a person of color, the burden of proof is on me to demonstrate, over a period of time, that I do have a genuine liking and respect for the person and his/her work, and that I'm not simply "collecting" token poets or token friends to feed my own image. After a while my intentions become clear and that's a basis for building mutual trust and respect (a process which is neverending). Takes a lot of time and energy. But then, don't all friendships?

As a politically radical feminist and an African Americanist, I find it sometimes harder to maintain my friendships with WhiteHetMales than with members of some other groups. But, because there are many things I greatly admire about my WhiteHetMale friends as poets and as human beings, I put in the effort. Of course, this isn't a one-sided project (what friendship is?), and I give my WhiteHetMale friends full credit for doing an awful lot of work to maintain their friendships with me. It's a hell of stretch for all parties concerned. My guess is that we do it because we're suckers for complexity, for stimulus, for contact.

In regards to Henry Gould's comment about Edwin Honig pushing for readings or a series of readings by Vietnam vet poets, well, I've been doing those for years. The Sixties Conference hosts a coffeehouse where we feature Viet Nam veteran poets, and we've also had poets reading the work of Vietnamese writers in translation. Readers have included W.D. Ehrhart, Dale Ritterbusch, David Connolly, Alan Farrell, David Vancil, David Willson, R.S. Carlson, Kevin Bowen and Coleman. Martha Collins and Wayne Karlin have read works in translation from their anthologies. Like Honig, I do find this poetry "interesting and real," although I don't have Honig's objections to other sorts of more cerebral poetry, or simply poetry by folks who haven't "been there done that." At the same time, I'm pretty picky about the Viet vet poets I publish. I think that I've come across 50-60 good ones, which is a lot. But, on the other hand, I've read work submitted by maybe 500-600 Viet vet poet wannabes, which has convinced me that "being there" isn't any guarantee you can speak articulately or effectively about being there. As a (perhaps) interesting aside, I find the work of the less self-consciously "literary" Viet Vet poets more compelling than the work of the "famous" Viet vet poets like Weigl and Komunyakaa for reasons which have everything to do with my preference for what I think of as "plain" vs. "fancy" narrative style in the work of poets and writers portraying the effects of traumatic experiences. (I'm consistant this way, since I also prefer the hyperpop narrative style of Gus Hasford to the novelistic devices of Tim O'Brien.) It's a personal bias, and I acknowledge it straight out.

Now, I'm used to (and even more importantly, the poets I publish are used to) having such poetry dismissed by folks who wave the banner of "aesthetics" as a measure of quality. I even publish some cowboy poets who are also--not coincidentally--Viet Nam veterans, and I'm always amazed at the stony refusal to acknowledge this still vital genre by the folks who inhabit university creative writing programs.

What it all comes down to for me (and I was talking to Dan Featherstone about this--hi Dan!--last night), is that I don't give a damn about what any sort of self-appointed or actual "poetry establishment" thinks about either my press or the poets I publish. I publish what I like, because I like it and because I think it's good, in the sense that I defined "good" above. And people are gonna call me whatever they want, and they'll refer to my press however they want, or some of them will ignore me and hope I disappear. But the bottom line is that I've got books of poetry in print, and I'm proud of them, and their authors are proud of them, and people actually buy them and read them and get something out of them. Since no small press I know of makes enough money for either its authors or its owners (or officers, if it's a nonprofit) to be stimulated by the prospect of monetary gain, I figure that this is as good an attitude as any. So it doesn't bother me a bit if Dale publishes mostly white guys, and if Chain publishes mostly women. Even though poets do the writing, presses are always already expressions of their editors and owners. I expect no less.

I would like to see more presses in the hands of women and people of color, but, then I'd like to see power distributed more evenly in just about every realm of culture and society, which accounts--no doubt--for my politics.

What it comes down to for me (and a part of me wants to laugh uproariously and derisively as I say this) is love. For most of us this is an unpaid gig, and why would we do it if we didn't love it? I can't publish what I don't love. Now, sure, I'm willing to try to learn to love new things, but I don't think we've got a whole hell of a lot of control over the deepest levels of our attractions. We might be able to explain those attractions and we might even judge 'em as "constructive" or "destructive" or whatever, but it sure is hard as hell to change 'em. What I've found though, is that sometimes I meet new kinds of writing that feel like coming home, that give me the sensation of, "Oh, yeah, I've always loved this; I just hadn't run across it yet." So I seek diversity not out of a sense of duty, but out of a desire to find new things to love. "Love" is one of those words you're supposed to be embarrased to say in academic circles, but if I can't talk about poetry in terms of love (though, of course, not only in terms of love), I figure why talk about it at all?

Kali

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

525. mark weiss

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Fri 26 Sep 1997

Three Cheers!

At 04:44 PM 9/26/97 -0700, you wrote:
>Dale asks:
>
>>1) how do >>you publish poetry you love and 2) still represent poets of diverse >>backgrounds?

>
>Mostly I stay out of these discussions because I inevitably get >flamed up by folks who insist on seeing me as some sort of Political >Correctness Fascist and/or a demon of aesthetic relativism. But this >discussion is so interesting I can't help jumping in.
>
>My notion of staying diverse might be different from most. Under the >imprint of Burning Cities and Viet Nam Generation, Inc., I publish a series >called "White Noise" which features white male poets of mostly working >class origins and/or identification, who have a progressive political >orientation >(including our own Joe Amato--hi Joe!). In this particular case, I'm >publishing WhiteHetMales on purpose, with full knowledge of exactly what >I'm doing. I'm doing it because I think these particular guys have >something really interesting to say, and I think they say it well. Most of >the poetry books I publish are in this White Noise series (7 so far, with >numbers 8-10 in the works), but I have also published books by women, >Chicano, and African American poets, and in my journal, _Viet Nam >Generation_, the mix is so various I can't break it down. Most of the >poets I publish are politically progressive.
>
>I do read and enjoy some right wing poets, but I don't often publish them.
>Mostly I just don't feel like it. And the beauty of running my own press >is that I don't have to publish what I don't feel like publishing. On the >other hand, I don't publish any poetry I don't think is good. And "good" >means whatever I like, for whatever reasons I like it. (Reasons, by the >way, I'm happy to clearly define for anyone who asks about why I like a >particular poem.) Anybody who tries to argue that "good" means something >else, I believe, is just layering rationalization on faith.
>
>>Also, my friends who write the poetry I like, happen to be predominately >>white and male. I prefer friends' work to strangers. But I don't limit >>it in that way.
>
>Well, this does seem to be the crux of the issue. I think, on one level or >another, most of us publish our friends, submit our poems to our friends, >read at our friends' bookstores or colleges, and so on. I mean, this is a >small world, divided into smaller cliques, and it's hard to escape. Me, >I'd go nuts if most of my friends were white and male. I need a good mix >or I'm miserable.
>So I work hard at putting myself in situations where I'm going to meet people >who are not white and/or not male in order to feed my burning need for >variety. And what I've found is that when I connect to new people--make new >friends--the doors of new communities open up to me. My African American >friends who are poets send me poetry by their friends, who are often >African American. But--at least in my experience--all this diversity has >to be based on real relationships, real friendships and collegial >connections between people who genuinely like and respect and try to >understand each other. My immediate assumption, as a white person, is that >when I make a new contact with a person of color, the burden of proof is on >me to demonstrate, over a period of time, that I do have a genuine liking >and respect for the person and his/her work, and that I'm not simply >"collecting" token poets or token friends to feed my own image. After a >while my intentions become clear and that's a basis for building mutual >trust and respect (a process which is neverending). Takes a lot of time >and energy. But then, don't all friendships?

>
>As a politically radical feminist and an African Americanist, I find it >sometimes harder to maintain my friendships with WhiteHetMales than with >members of some other groups. But, because there are many things I greatly >admire about my WhiteHetMale friends as poets and as human beings, I put in >the effort. Of course, this isn't a one-sided project (what friendship >is?), and I give my WhiteHetMale friends full credit for doing an awful lot >of work to maintain their friendships with me. It's a hell of stretch for >all parties concerned. My guess is that we do it because we're suckers for >complexity, for stimulus, >for contact.
>
>In regards to Henry Gould's comment about Edwin Honig pushing for readings or a >series of readings by Vietnam vet poets, well, I've been doing those for >years. The Sixties Conference hosts a coffeehouse where we feature Viet >Nam veteran poets, and we've also had poets reading the work of Vietnamese >writers in translation. Readers have included W.D. Ehrhart, Dale >Ritterbusch, David
>Connolly, Alan Farrell, David Vancil, David Willson, R.S. Carlson, Kevin >Bowen and Coleman. Martha Collins and Wayne Karlin have read works in >translation from their anthologies. Like Honig, I do find this poetry >"interesting and real," although I don't have Honig's objections to other >sorts of more cerebral poetry, or simply poetry by folks who haven't "been >there done that." At the same time, I'm pretty picky about the Viet vet >poets I publish. I think that I've come across 50-60 good ones, which is a >lot. But, on the other hand, I've read work submitted by maybe 500-600 >Viet vet poet wannabes, which has convinced me that "being there" isn't any >guarantee you can speak articulately or effectively about being there. As >a (perhaps) interesting aside, I find the work of the less >self-consciously "literary" Viet Vet poets more compelling than the work of >the "famous" Viet vet poets like Weigl and Komunyakaa for reasons which >have everything to do with my preference for what I think of as "plain" vs.

>"fancy" narrative style in the work of poets and writers portraying the >effects of traumatic experiences. (I'm consistant this way, since I also >prefer the hyperpop narrative style of Gus Hasford to the novelistic >devices >of Tim O'Brien.) It's a personal bias, and I acknowledge it straight out.
>
>Now, I'm used to (and even more importantly, the poets I publish are used >to) having such poetry dismissed by folks who wave the banner of >"aesthetics"
>as a measure of quality. I even publish some cowboy poets who are >also--not coincidentally--Viet Nam veterans, and I'm always amazed at the >stony refusal to acknowledge this still vital genre by the folks who >inhabit university creative writing programs.
>
>What it all comes down to for me (and I was talking to Dan Featherstone >about this--hi Dan!--last night), is that I don't give a damn about what >any sort of self-appointed or actual "poetry establishment" thinks about >either my press or the poets I publish. I publish what I like, because I >like it and because I think it's good, in the sense that I defined "good" >above. And people are gonna call me whatever they want, and they'll refer >to my press however they want, or some of them will ignore me and hope I >disappear. But the bottom line is that I've got books of poetry in print, >and I'm proud of them, and their authors are proud of them, and people >actually buy them and read them and get something out of them. Since no >small press I know of makes enough money for either its authors or its >owners (or officers, if it's a nonprofit) to be stimulated by the prospect >of monetary gain, I figure that this is as good an attitude as any. So it >doesn't bother me a bit if Dale publishes mostly white guys, and if Chain >publishes mostly women. Even though poets do the writing, presses are >always already expressions of their editors and owners. I expect no less.
>
>I would like to see more presses in the hands of women and people of >color, but, then I'd like to see power distributed more evenly in just >about every realm of culture and society, which accounts--no doubt--for my >politics.

>
>What it comes down to for me (and a part of me wants to laugh uproariously >and derisively as I say this) is love. For most of us this is an unpaid >gig, and why would we do it if we didn't love it? I can't publish what I >don't love. Now, sure, I'm willing to try to learn to love new things, but >I don't think we've got a whole hell of a lot of control over the deepest >levels of our attractions. We might be able to explain those attractions >and we might even judge 'em as "constructive" or "destructive" or whatever, >but it sure is hard as hell to change 'em. What I've found though, is that >sometimes I meet new kinds of writing that feel like coming home, that give >me the sensation of, "Oh, yeah, I've always loved this; I just hadn't run >across it yet." So I seek diversity not out of a sense of duty, but out of >a desire to find new things to love. "Love" is one of those words you're >supposed to be embarrased to say in academic circles, but if I can't talk >about poetry in terms of love (though, of course, not only in terms of >love), I figure why talk about it at all?
>
>Kali
>
>
>Kali Tal new WORD order
>PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com
>[redacted] (phone & fax) "Web Design For Smart People"
>
>Sixties Project [redacted]
>http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com
>
>

↑ Index

526. Juliana Spahr dilemmas
Fri 26 Sep 1997

Dale Smith wrote:

> The dilemma, as I see it, is twofold: 1) how do you publish poetry you love and 2) still represent poets of diverse backgrounds?

Why does this have to be a dilemma?

But when it comes down to it, I don't have a problem with friend journals (I think this is a good way to interact with the world; I like to see how people that are friends and poets are talking to each other). When you put the call on poetics list I had the oh this looks interesting I think I'll send a check reaction.

I don't think you are accusing me of this but just want to make this clear. I'm trying to take up your invitation to talk about editing issues because these kinds of things dominate my life. I'm not complaining about what you are doing.

And like you I want to make decisions without race/gender concerns and I think I do in Chain. We (I co-edit it with Jena Osman) have never published anyone because they fit some category (and you are wrong to think the cultural marketplace, whatever form this might take, cares; it might be a more interesting world if they did; but as far as I can tell the cultural marketplace cares only about "aesthetics"--look at who or what gets NEAs).

But unlike you, I have a problem with the word aesthetics b/c it means to me things that are too neat. (Granted, when I think of this word I think of journals that use this criteria to smooth over and glaze things. I don't think I'm thinking of what you mean judging by the list of people you had in the journal. Maybe you could clarify your aesthetics and maybe I could learn to love the word.)

But we did start Chain in order to explore aesthetics or how to avoid aesthetics. We felt there were a lot of journals that had things too neat and we wanted things messy. (too messy?) So we made a point, and still do, to get rid of the "is this an aesthetically pleasing poem" question and to ask the "does this poem tell us something we might not already know or show us something a little sideways" or some question like that. What it makes is a messy journal. One with friends and enemies and with work that we may or may not like. (Although I tend to like it but I tend to like things.) I think wanting people to think I'm a nice guy has little to do with it. If it did I would probably publish more friends and stop returning their work when it doesn't fit the topic.

I want all sorts of journals. I want them all funded and available. I want Chain and I want Yale Younger Poets to have this very badly. It seems especially important to have both if we tend to publish work by women (and men also?) you don't like. Maybe when something comes into YYP that you don't like you could send it over to us.

Who are you talking about when talk about corporate/academic funding? The only thing I can think of are those journals that graduate programs start to promote the graduate program. I call these the state journals--the Ohio Quarterly, the Hawaii Review, the Iowa Review, etc. (Chain was an attempt to take advantage of this tradition of funding journals for graduate students; it worked for a while).

My poetics has been influenced by NY School, Black Mountain, _and_ Stein (Pound a little less). That is only the beginning. Does that matter?

I probably wouldn't say that about Chain's aesthetics. I couldn't figure that out.

There are many writers of color writing experimental poetry. There are many editors also. It doesn't take a search to realize this. Although unfortunately, it does take a library or some other depository with a decent poetry collection.

With respect,

Juliana

↑ Index

527. Maria Damon
Re: Sacred Cows
Fri 26 Sep 1997

> Re: Stein. That's what really seems to be upsetting to certain people on the list. Well, I dismiss her work, not because she is a woman, but because I find it unbearable to read. So many posts have been profoundly condescending and I appreciate your efforts to set me straight, so to say. But Stein, who is adored by many, including Phil Whalen and Alice Notely, both of whom I deeply admire, provides a kind of model for a poetics that I find misleading, presumptive, and ultimately useless because she takes you nowhere. You gain nothing by reading her.

i take it these remarks are directed at me. it was not my intention to be condescending. but i must say, the sentence "you gain nothing by reading her" could easily be rendered more honestly as "I gain nothing by reading her." that would vitiate the moral bombast i find irksome. esp when coupled with the implication that it's a real struggle to find women/poets of color who are any good. your take on stein isn't the "really" upsetting thing for me; it's simply the easiest for me to respond to. i am not unsympathetic to the difficulty of finding material outside of one's networks; the xcp conference will be a reflection of that, and i hope i learn to expand my network as a result. but the tone in which this difficulty is expressed (as if it were an objective truth that "there are so few good ones out there" rather than "I'm not connected with those circles") is what i find problematic. as for condescension, could it be that i'm just not being as warm and fuzzy as usual since you've just insulted my (apparent) gender, my politics, my aesthetics, and my self?

↑ Index

528. DS
Re: name, paradox, &c.
Sat 27 Sep 1997

Or maybe begin questioning WHY you don't like it...

Respectfully,
Dan
>
>>down a range of perspectives, hellyeah. publish stuff you don't like for >>the sake of being "representative," noway.
>>
>>publish stuff you like -- and keep looking for new stuff to like.
>>
>>
>>cheers,
>>tom
>>
>>
>

↑ Index

529. David Bromige
"useful" in context of paradox thread
Sat 27 Sep 1997

Both your posts, William Burmeister and Mark Weiss, were of interest, I found, & I doubt that you are far apart in your thinking on the matter...its just that "useful" has a big range. What William has to say re the objectification of the poet, the commodification of the poet I should say, so thoroughly until the poetry becomes as vestigial as an appendix, is sadly accurate to the times. I liked too the analogy Mark used, about all hummingbirds at one time looking the same to him, before his eye was trained. Thanks to both, & all who have graced this thread. Makes me realize anew how grateful I am for this List.

++++++++++

And also because one can get such various info so fast : thanks to those who posted the e-ddresses I was looking for ; I now have them both.

David

↑ Index

530. robert drake
Re: The Paradox and the Name of its Disco Tents
Sat 27 Sep 1997

jordan suggests several mags that he believes might serve as models... so then, i'd ask dale if he agrees? (cause ov course if he does, then why start another mag that duplicates existing?) id guess, based on his comments, he would disagree, and precisely on th point that jordan brings up--tho some branches in LangPo share lineage w/ th NY/Pound tradition, dale seems to be climbing a different trunk of the family tree. What exactly are the distinguishments you want to make, dale--the aesthetics that you refer to as the basis for your editorial judgement? i'm not clear, only that they are Not the aesthetics of Chain, or Stein--what Are they? and the followup question to the list wd be, could you suggest names & addresses of writers w/in that aesthetic who might widen/diversify dale's circle of friends...

lbd

> The World. Hanging Loose. Misc. Proj. No Trees.. Also, I'd say the Language school is a metamorphosis of NY/Pound so I'd include exactly the magazines Dale is distancing himself from in the vapor trail of that nexus. As always, the "real critique" is elsewhere. - J
>
> request to the list: wondering if anybody might point to examples of other mags that might serve as models for dale&co's efforts: ie, NYschool/Naropa/Pound nexus aesthetics, w/ a wider demographic contributor base?
>
> & if such doesnt come to mind, praps the real critique being made is of that aesthetic, rather than this particular mag?
>
> asever
> luigi

↑ Index

531. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sat 27 Sep 1997

love that post, kali!...

i would add only that the love of justice has something to do with all of this (certainly nothing one-to-one about it, no hard & fast lines to be drawn when it comes to love)... it seems odd, i know, even moralistic or dogmatic to say so... but i would say that there is a measure of responsibility entailed in going public, & that it's up to each of us to reflect on same...

well anyway, i too have learned a lot thus far from this thread, & have to observe that it seems to have invigorated this list... so thanx to all for participating in this exchange...

best,

joe

↑ Index

532. henry gould
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sat 27 Sep 1997

On Fri, 26 Sep 1997 16:31:24 -0700 mark weiss said:
>I'll speak only to the least interesting point in this very interesting >post. I knew Edwin Honig briefly but intensely for a month at the MacDowell >Colony 19 years ago. He was, then as now, a poet with a small but >respectable reputation, and he was then, as apparently now, very bitter >about what he saw as his outsider status and rather defensively arrogant >about the uniqueness of his talent and integrity. I liked him a lot, but >I'm not sure he reciprocated: I think I may have been in his mind one of >the barbarians at the gate. His work, as it happens, is interesting, and a >strong sense of integrity is one of its virtues. It doesn't look to have >been easy to produce. In some ways he reminds me of Bill Bronk. I cut him a >lot of slack.

I'd like to respond briefly to several posts. Right on Kali & Juliana, yes - though I probably sound often like Mr. Smooth-it-over aesthetics on this list, I AGREE with your healthy editorial perspective(s), & in lil nedge way have often taken poems that are naive & rough from the persp. the academic style-is-power school (in its many variants) -

Elliza, everything you say about the chauvinist attitude re: "real experience" is true & historically documentable but I don't understand why you insist on putting words in Honig's mouth - he never said "there is no poetry of authentic experience" - he just said there is a strong stream right now - maybe an ascendant stream (vid. Jorie Graham, Lang Po, other currents) supported by much critical hoogabooga, which is so intent on analyzing the non-consistency or problematic nature of self & experience, that history as a shared reality or world phenomenon - the self as participant in a cataclysmic century or in mass movements of peoples & nations - has been downplayed - & that the poetry of vets now is a link with certain streams of political poetry in the 30s with which he identifies in a strong emotional way (he said vets - not MEN or WOMEN vets). So is it possible to discuss this issue without necessarily framing it in the context of patriarchy & chauvinist interpretations of reality? Maybe not. I'm just asking.

Mark, Honig's collected poems are forthcoming online at Wendy Battin's CAPA, hopefully in the next couple months. Yes he is an irascible sly literary fox with a hell of a sharp tongue & one-upmanship instincts bred on Brooklyn streets in 20s & 30s - proud, proud - maybe blinkered in his "aesthetics" - but he just wants people to read some of his heavy great poems... I see him as a specifically human force vs. present academic/aesthetic/commercial bureaucracies (not that I'm against the academy, or art, or commerce! Heck no! Just ask Jack Spandrift!) - Henry Gould
>>

↑ Index

533. Burt Kimmelman

somebody wanna help this poor soul out?

Sat 27 Sep 1997

From: MX%"[redacted]" 27-SEP-1997 06:32:59.74
To: MX%"[redacted]"
CC:
Subj: Small Press Movement / Private Publishers

Date: Sat, 27 Sep 1997 05:32:33 -0500
Publishing" <[redacted]>
From: An-tAthair-Siorai Press Gp <[redacted]> Subject: Small Press Movement / Private Publishers
To: [redacted]

Dear SHARPists,

I am interested in finding any available information, private or public, opinion or fact, on the state of the Small Press Movement and private publishers in general around the globe. I do not wish to include the vanity presses in my query.

Is the Small Press Movement still a force to be reckoned with when it comes to discovering new talents, especially in the field of poetry?

Has the Small Press Movement expanded with the introduction of the PC and DTP, and is DTP taking over from hand printing.

How does the Small Press Movement cope with advertising their wares and with distribution without incurring greater overheads?

Are there any magazines, electronic / Internet or hard copy, devoted exclusively to Small Press publishers?

I would be particularly interested in hearing from any SHARP members with personal knowledge, or their own presses, or who can pass on to me contact names and addresses / e-mail that I may follow up.

Adam An-tAthair-Siorai
An-tAthair-Siorai Press Group
[redacted]
Kirch Strasse 17, D-27318 Hoya, Germany

↑ Index

534. p. durgin
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sat 27 Sep 1997

"I wonder. . ." I third that emotion. Yet, in attempt to avoid undue commotion, let's remember we are suggesting that a person's aesthetic should hold up against criticism from within as well as without, and we are not making indictments.

Patrick F. Durgin

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

> i second that emotion; and i also, personally, wince at playing stein off against pound in a way that casts stein as the narcissist, the errant one, the one with the "problem." to my mind, this is a gendered and politicized determination as much as it is an aesthetic one --i.e. women are often accused of narcissism, self-indulgence, etc and that judgment is used to keep them from access to the renown and respect enjoyed by their male peers. dale, i wonder if it'd be fair to say that your aesthetic sense may itself be the product of conditioning in an unjust society?

↑ Index

535. Steve Evans
A Note on Prejudice
Sat 27 Sep 1997

I have no direct response to the issues raised by Dale Smith's candid embodiment of his prejudices, and the List's various and, for the most part, generous response to it, but a few days before the controversy broke surface here (hot on the heals of Slider affair) I wrote a small note to no one in particular on some similar themes. It's somewhat long for e-mail, but I'll risk it here on a quiet Saturday afternoon....

=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-

Notes to Poetry 5

How are prejudices--one might equally say tastes--built up in us during the endless apprenticeship to textuality? How does it happen that not only certain texts or authors but indeed whole stances, entire ways of proposing the scale and texture and objective of a writing practice, come to be placed under a subjective taboo: boring, aggravating, sickening; worst of all, neutral or blank. There is no element of a poem to which value, however carefully checked by description, does not cling. The way this poem looks on the page (another prose block, or some mechanically-reproduced stanza form: forty pages of tercets!), the way this one attacks the question of sound (clumsy, or heavy-handed, or lacking, or...: the objections are endless on this front), the way this one asks me to suppose the world is something dramatically other, and usually drastically worse, than what I think it is (a world of only suburban backyards or rural solitudes or ineradicable bitterness and domination). Inexhaustible ways, then, to be opinionated about the poem without yet having reached, let alone read, it. And this makes for a dilemma not only for the addicts of openness (pluralists), not only for the tough customers of program and principal (dogmatists), but for anyone who reads not as a duty or a chore (the academics) but as a risk.

Catherine Walsh's Pitch maintains a porous border relative to its materials and manifests a lively sense of variability in both its open field and stanzaic modes of composition. In the absence of one manifestly "dominant" formal element, it seems plausible to relate the field of the page to the field of consciousness, the play of print to that of percepts. It sounds terrific, and yet it is just the sort of book that of late I've found it inordinately difficult to value. My restlessness takes the form of a craving for the determinate; less the "concrete" (it's not a deficit of the referent, such as a jolt of "imagism" or "objectivism" might remedy, that my attention suffers under) than the...the only word that comes to mind is the _tensed_. Indeed, with a little reflection I see that the poetics of diffusion has always presented an obstacle to me and that a whole constellation of preferences has arranged itself around this kernel of prejudice: O'Hara over Ashbery, Armantrout over Berssenbrugge, Williams over Stevens, Lorenz Hart over Sonic Youth, and so forth. What thou loveth well is one thing--source of orientation, courage, and comfort. But it is from the unlit regions, where the sun of prejudice hasn't already illuminated every detail, that mind-changing texts are most likely to come.

Over time, and with the benefit of hearing Walsh read aloud from both her own and from Samuel Beckett's texts, the specificity of the work has come clearer to me, somewhat to my embarassment but much more to my relief (surely the affective component, as much as the cognitive one, plays a role in "changing one's mind": what haven't we at one time or another said in order to mask or avoid the vulnerability of not thinking "x" anymore but lacking the emotional where-withal demanded in a given context to say so?). In her reading, I heard what I've never heard before at a reading: a person who could successfully bring into a public space that incredibly important, but absolutely fragile--seemingly un-transportable--tonal landscape of intimate speech: the whisper, the interrogative tone used only with people utterly familiar and deeply loved, the falling tone in the broken-off utterance, the slight startle back into speech after a silent spell in another's presence, the undertones of talking to oneself, the quizzical texture of the many messages we address to inanimate things and non-verbal beings, ... What I learned at the reading was that I had failed to understand precisely the pitch of Walsh's Pitch. It may be that as an American I at first heard only the sense of pitch as come-on, the ad-pitch (the carnivalesque cover of the book perhaps prompting me also in that direction). But nothing could be further from the canned speech of chattering capitalism than her work. When Walsh read from Beckett's Texts for Nothing I suddenly heard the adjectival form, as in "pitch" black, and worked my way back to the tar-dark substance whose place in Beckett's topography is all the more secure for rhyming with the locus of so much of the (in)action in his work--the "ditch." And when I heard her own work, the musical and linguistic senses of the word came to the fore. In utterances, tone or pitch does two things especially well: it marks out new information (sorting rhemes from themes) and it articulates, through any number of lexical (exclamations) and non-lexical (interjections) means, the speaker's relationship to the message. Irony is largely a matter of tone, as its opposite, earnestness. In specifically poetic terms, intonation has frequently been advanced as free verse's answer to meter: the mechanism that moved Pound, to take only the famous instance, off the metronome and onto the musical phrase. While Walsh's texts present quite various forms to the eye--conventional stanza, calligram, prose-block, Eigner-like lyric, field composition--what they tend to present to the ear is a certain tone, or pitch, that enters into a dialectic with its transcription.

to whom was it owing who could say who could care my day speak English bad not true not a lot when people speak to each other in the real world bad not true not a lot one to one outside be honest are your prepared good very true a lot to whom who could say was it owing speak English keep a record and interrupt for God's sake interrupt did I write that before as or after (from "Pitch: Part Two" 27)

Hannah Weiner, news of whose sad loss came not long after I heard Walsh read, would have sought graphic means to differentiate the "voices" here, but Walsh provides her reader with only minimal cueing. In the tightly cycling stanzas of an untitled lyric (Pitch 21) possessing the echoing strains of Zukofsky's signature valentines--Walsh uses the vocative interjection most associated with the poetic tradition:"o glad snow / morning of light / less wish / you were here // here to sing / holiday o / glad snow / light less / morning wish / you were here...." One hears in these lines the "circadian / rhythm" (22) that Walsh's writing moves in, mimics, and--quietly--masters.

[18-19 September 1997]

=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-= Pitch was published by Pig Press in Durham in 1994. Catherine Walsh read from this and other works on 3 September 1997 as part of a celebration of Irish poetry at Brown University that also included Billy Mills, Randolph Healy, and Maurice Scully.

↑ Index

536. Maria Damon
Re: A Note on Prejudice
Sat 27 Sep 1997

At 4:31 PM -0400 9/27/97, Steve Evans wrote:

> =-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-=-
> Notes to Poetry 5
>
> How are prejudices--one might equally say tastes--built up in us during the endless apprenticeship to textuality? How does it happen that not only certain texts or authors but indeed whole stances, entire ways of proposing the scale and texture and objective of a writing practice, come to be placed under a subjective taboo: boring, aggravating, sickening; worst of all, neutral or blank. There is no element of a poem to which value, however carefully checked by description, does not cling. The way this poem looks on the page (another prose block, or some mechanically-reproduced stanza form: forty pages of tercets!), the way this one attacks the question of sound (clumsy, or heavy-handed, or lacking, or...: the objections are endless on this front), the way this one asks me to suppose the world is something dramatically other, and usually drastically worse, than what I think it is (a world of only suburban backyards or rural solitudes or ineradicable bitterness and domination). Inexhaustible ways, then, to be opinionated about the poem without yet having reached, let alone read, it. And this makes for a dilemma not only for the addicts of openness (pluralists), not only for the tough customers > of program and principal (dogmatists), but for anyone who reads not as a duty or a chore (the academics) but as a risk.

very interesting stuff steve. i find that my aesthetic sense has changed since joining POETIX. i have mixed feelings about that; i feel that i've gained some "sophistication" maybe but may have lost some ability to hear the emotional subtexts that make "cliches" interesting, endearing, powerful, meaningful-in-context, etc. some ability to listen empathetically has perhaps ceded to my search for aesthetic thrills...md

↑ Index

537. Kali Tal

Re: the pink and the blue

Sat 27 Sep 1997

> But can I just make one thing clear--excepting the first issue, Chain publishes about 50/50 in terms of the pink and the blue of it. I can't decide if it is good that people think it publishes more women or if it is just another example of how weird sexual politics are becoming.

I apologize if I made it sound like I "knew" Chain published more women. My point was only that it didn't bother me if different journals presented different groups of poets (though I might choose to read one journal over another based on their publishing decisions) since that seemed to me one of the preconditions of publishing--that we have biases and agendas. Didn't have Chain on hand, wasn't counting, was wrong to accept the description as fact.

But, yeah, sexual politics are really weird. Whenever I'm in a group in which half of the people talking are female, the general sense of many of the male participants and at least some of the female participants seems to be that women dominate the group. Maybe that's what's happening with the reception of Chain.

Kali

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

538. Hoa Nguyen
Re: picking up sides (name-paradox thread)
Sat 27 Sep 1997

Thank you David Bromige for your thoughtful and vulnerable response.

In this discussion-- as everywhere-- we find ourselves named various names-- a physiologist-like look at this would point to the way our brains try to categorize objects and beings in an effort to make meaning. This is helpful when it comes to, say, mushrooms-- this one is yummy sauted with garlic, this one will attack my liver if I eat it, this one will make me laugh profoundly at the word "liver", and etc. This is very tricky of course in social applications and all sorts of horrible or frustrating things can happen. It happens when we talk about poetry too. I have work published in several issues of both Mike and Dale's Younger Poets and Chain. My work in Chain is "distant cold and removed from emotional possiblilities" (Dale) and I am part of the gang of SWM in M/D's in spite of myself?

Categories serve to narrow and simplify when -- outside of mushroom-like instances -- things stubbornly refuse categorizing. (Which was definately bothering me the whole while I wrote towards the "What is white" thread, with Mr. Timmons and others awhile back-- that I was insisting on delimiting a category because, I think, I experience the catorizations in a very real way). So what do we do?

I am glad indeed that we can dialoge around this and that folks have been so willing to share their thoughts and feelings.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

539. Alan Jen Sondheim
Novel
Sat 27 Sep 1997

I am working on a novel about writing and the poetics of writing, about email, about lag, and the collapse of the poetic. It may never see the light of day, back of night, but it is relevant in the scattered form I catastrophize in, below. For your pleasure or scattered delete ...

Notes for a Novel:

Which I do work on: "Her nights, his days. Her days, his nights."

And that he comes to a foreign city and does not understand the language. And that the airport is brown. He's got a sheet of paper, he can't de- cipher. What is it, where is she. He shows it, there's a taxi, a sheroot, he gets in, it's already old, nervous. He goes somewhere, recognizes nothing. Characters in other scripts, cuneiforms for all he knows. Llamas cross his path.

But the city's vacant, her place is vacant. Locked or unlocked - in this novel, it won't make a difference. He goes in, the door opens. There's nothing, no clues. It's clean, no dust, breakins. He doesn't know. This is a man, Travis maybe, who doesn't know a thing.

He can't find her friends because everyone shrugs. He meets people who speak his language, easy now. They know her. They haven't 'seen her around.' She's the kind of person one sees around. She's private. But there are no rumors, nothing. She works in medicine.

Well, she hasn't been at the clinic. Nothing is missing. You can see where this is going, of course. Doors close behind him, before he reaches the knob. The keys are like Berlin keys, they go through the hole, out the other side. That's impor- tant, there are windows through rooms and no one is ever looking.

Now something has to happen for the novel to be a novel, what then? Per- haps a clue, but there are always clues, even clues in the beginning of things, the glance of a dark-haired woman at the airport, a slip of cel- lophane on the floor of her flat. Clues are things that gather meaning, reverse time, reconstitute events. But things are cluttered here; the sook is filled with blood where the an- imals are slaughtered, nomads come in from the countryside, shrines are staffed by garage gong bands. The Genkai Park inexplicably closes down; there are guards, something's hap- pened.

No clues then, but this happening. What could be on the run. Later, two people are captured, he doesn't understand. There's a celebration in the city involving a wheeled boat which capsizes against chains of humans carrying placards of waves. People are really injured and the clinic's on hand.

He finds food, stays in her place. He's ill-at-ease, a woman comes wear- ing a veil and he pays the rent, holding up the currency of his country. He's surprised how little everything costs. He should feel as if he were now a part of her life, the woman who was going to meet him, but he does- n't. He might wear a bracelet or necklace one day. He wears her jumpers, goes out aimlessly. He thinks, it's all come to a halt here.

He finds himself listening to himself finding himself, but he's not lost. Just that there is this constant wonder at the world. He's more in love with her than ever before. One day, he goes to a screening of silent films, Melies. Women are dis- appearing all over the place. He'll make a film about a magician, a woman who brings men back to life. The woman trance-trains, has visions. Then she sets up mechanisms, everyone knows all of this and she's quite successful. She dies. Her extras are out of work, lifeless. They form a secret circle. They keep her corpse, have visions, try to raise the dead. They have visions, but they don't trance- train, in fact they do nothing at all. She comes back to life.

There's a knock at the door of the flat. He's been there for months, un- recognizable. His nights, her days. His days, her nights. Whammo-kazowie, she's at the door. It would be presumption to ask. She talks about vis- ions, what she knows. Beneath the flat, there are missile silos. Next door, enigma code writers are hard at work. Across the way, the buildings are part of the largest ship ever constructed, you can see the alley- gangway down to the sea. The ship begins to move, everything shakes for a minute. The ship stops again, earthquake he says, no she replies.

She's learned everything, signs and symbols. She can't read the cuneiform either, but insists it isn't important. What comes between the letters, she confides, that's it more or less. What comes between the letters, he realizes, is his own alphabet. Everything shudders, they take the Shin- kansen back to the sheroot stand near the roman ruins. The drivers are different and perhaps she departs.

But the novel won't go this way. It will be populated with expatriates, colorful characters named Abdul, Charisma, and Jennifer. They'll drink a lot and expostulate. There will be all sorts of other horizons strat- egically across going-native. Sarongs and turbans, veils for the women, who would and wouldn't. There are fires on the other side of the city - they never come nearer. Guerillas, one opines. They listen to the short- wave, marry local, leave one by one. They fan out across the city.

No, they don't, nothing like that happens. There are clues to the woman's disappearance. The airport appears to be a mechanism of some sort, the runways laid out in shamanic configuration, easy hiragana squared off for the takeoff and approach. The stewards knew he was arriving. The pilots watch him, uneasily, warily, he can't help noticing. Whatever is afoot takes him by surprise. Nausea, fear.

And then, the rest of the novel. Things happen, everything's written in a wonderful realism carrying the reader to and fro among strange and mar- velous events. The reader's excited, always thinking about what will happen next. The characters are strongly drawn. The plot thickens and thins. Local color! Naturalism! An ending no one will ever forget!

Fragmeant

Travis wrote to her. The time and return was .465 seconds on average, not bad when Fukuoka had been considered the center of the world in the four- teenth century, his own hometown unknown, fallow, untended. He was aware of the gaping maw of the sun, violent lunacy of the swinging moon which rarely showed its face - from its night, the radiance of her day showed forth. Mes- meric, he adapted himself to her schedule, his sun-up suppers with his friends were the occasion of back-channel conversations about sanity and the diameter of the earth. He joked he was the only one aware of circumference, of what a sphere was and meant - that he was the only one earth-bound, everyone else walking with stitched eyes and habits formed from childhood. He knew the sphere of stars and its awkwardness, how it shuddered above and below the equator, the rings of luminescent star-clouds and their satellites, give and take of unknown constellations.

But it was his doubling that fascinated him, breakfast as dusk rose, not dawn, sleeping at odd hours reflecting gaps and silences, and his Monday night class that began oddly enough on Tuesday morning at seven - he re- mained sur- prised that the students were alert, keen on the speed of the Net, which should have been accountably slow and clumsy.

His clocks gained a minute, lost a minute. He tried to meet himself half- way, like a friend. His nights were bright with untoward clarity, unthun- dered days, dark, uncanny, silent. Someone fixed the stars, he thought, they were never when they were supposed to be.

She wrote him about the llamas.

Llamas

The llama glistened, black carapace covered within insistent tortoise plates gleaming in the brown air of noon. It didn't move. Sirens in the distance con- stantly changing, warding off violent cars close to veering out of control. The head turned. Smoke from the nostrils, soot-nose beneath glowering eyes, body tensed with radiant energy. Shimmered waves of heat rose from the back, the breath, the brow.

She noted this in her brown notebook, ruled with blue lines. She wrote him about the llamas near the Shikuneem, vicinity of Kasuga-Shi. They were llamas, Luria, she was a tracker with a blue felt hat, sorobon and note- book, penning ebb and flow, turbulent streams of animals burrowing into the world. They were moving in from the arroyos south-west of the city, the burning-plains traveled only by the Shinkansen. It was said that bones sparkled as the trains rushed by, straight unbuckled rails held up to the sanded grounds too hot for human touch.

Travis remembered her uneasy witnessing, now the thing before him, as if produced by the cuneiform inscriptions everywhere in his vicinity. It was a one world, transitive, her llama text taking root, hair, and bone; she was nowhere to be found. Had she left him these animals, created by pure description? Was her disappearance contained in the eye of the beast, the vestiges of retinal memory destroyed by the fire next time? For a second he felt the creature recognized him, but that second passed, replaced by the uncertain knowledge that he was losing her trail as the purely exotic began its uneasy hold.

Did she watch from the grey-pink building tiled against the sky? Did she lay harbor-dead, trolled by fish and crustacean, memory lost and tangled in kelp, seed-pods of aquatic plants adapting to stratified pollutions dragged from shore to sea-bottom and back again?

Travis found his language tangled as well, the product of uncertainty, loneliness, and an ignorance so pure he had no name for it.

Parting the Thirty-Fourth

Clara reached over for her box of cigarettes; if Avi didn't leave soon, all hell would break loose. He'd already fallen off the futon three times in the night, what would you expect from a gaijin who faded in and out of the desert weekly.

The Desert Weekly, lead story: Gaijin loses grip on wadi edge, plunges two meters to gravel pitstop, slight remains of moisture lapped by desert frogs. Pictures, page 2.

When he left, she turned on the radio, cd player, computer, called the airport, Fukuoka International. The name for city was 'ir,' Fukuoka-Ir carved in cuneiform on the corner lintels everywhere. They never let you forget. Flight 75, San Francisco, Oregon, Nepal, Catalina Island, Oman, Fukuoka-Ir in that order. It was on time and she imagined the plane poised perfectly in a planetary ring, waiting for the moment to descend. She dressed, left the bet-ie, headed down the street.

The llamas were waiting as she stepped into the troika. She headed out on Number One Highway, south, left on Shogun. She hadn't worn her hat, see, for quite some time now. They stopped by the marshes, approximately five kilometers from the terminal. She watched the plane make perfect descent, dialed Robert immediately, continued on her way.

When Robert answered the phone, Jane was in the other room. They spoke in whispers, aha. She told him all about the recent demographics, head- counts. Later he'd say she was nervous, preoccupied. He was a specialist in cartoucherie, useful where the only secure mode of communication was still clay-based. Lady Sarashina had written

Were it not for river rock and pine
This clay would not have impressed
My name, my love, your _hon_ or book, mnemonics of his mind, to whom she had written, borrowing from Chinese Ch'in-fu, the impress of the reed pen, striations of thought as the seven strings, seventeen vibratos, sounded, then faded into ma. Clay into thought, material into the silence of the word, all this heaven.

Clara was circumscribed by Robert's interest in her demographics, by the movements of llamas across the burning plains, by the distance of the troika (found by the side of the road) from the airport. Her disappearance dissolved into the gaze of Travis, waiting for her, waiting and waiting - a gaze transformed into a glance, then the look-see of astonishment as he began to understand she might never meet him again. Would he remember her voice, enumerating herds, packs, gaggles, schools, flocks, enervated groupings of the awkward black mammals, their armor-plating clacking in the heat of the day?

Every one of these people were breathing, in and out.

Clara turned over lazily, suddenly realizing what had happened. She woke with a start in utter darkness. The worst had happened. "Travis," she said, uncertainly, "Travis."

'Yes,' he replied, as a hand slid along her arm, her face, her hair. "I'm here, darling, I'm here."

↑ Index

540. Rebecca Weldon
Thank you, Kali
Sat 27 Sep 1997

I have been living on a bank of the Mekong River for 35 years and I would like to thank you, Kali, for your editorial perspective and commitment.

I am new to the internet and its attendant communities; I had not seen the websites indicated in your recent communication. I read the poetry samplings in the White Noise series in tears. I spent 11 years of my childhood in Laos during the war and have spent much of my time writing to process what I experienced there and after as a result of it. I had not thought that it mattered to much of anyone except those of us who struggle with it out here.

Rain

rain's nimbus, moribund sky monsoon morning dims the day flooding fields, fragile seedlings set within a pale reflection wounded waters flowing blood bathe the streambed still heart's constriction memory's mark of war silent came the rain revengeful came the rain flat and grey and mourning we were the nimbus of rain our hearts were flooded with tears bathed in pools of blood

there was plenty of death left for the rest of us planting our fields preparing our meals lonely touching our children to keep them near

our eyes and mouths were full with rain a dull reflection in the growing fields for what harvest did we live through raintime to the dry

↑ Index

541. Rachel Levitsky
From the deplorable tradition
Sun 28 Sep 1997

---

one looks up a word because the nice way it sounds smiles on the definition over its likeness of sound all the while thinking all the time thoughts are quite random thinks of coffee running or writing evaluates.

they are not all the same listening to jazz doesn’t prefer jazz called cool or easy listening.

She is having a hard time listening does not turn it off thinking how difficult it is to not just lie in bed or to a lover thinking it doesn’t matter they are the same wants to tell someone they are the same but cannot find words tries to put they in a poem
the range of them.
Out loud where there is no one except the cats says “it is not one thing”
it’s not for the cats they look for food
other forms of entertainment.
It is not one thing,
silently this time.

two speak on the phone one begins to say but stops pushed by the other only slightly continues wonders would it be different if they did it again

the other, waiting for these words smiles upon hearing them says yes it would begins to speak of herself she and the other both like to speak of themselves, to each other three days after the phone call remembers the word it describes her soft sounds unpleasant its definition soft sounds equally unpleasant

the cats meow one doesn’t one cat makes sounds soft that are very unpleasant

↑ Index

542. Eric Gleason
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents- thank you
Sun 28 Sep 1997

---

this is just a quick thanks to some of you recent posters (poster children).

i've been pretty busy lately with things that keep me far away from my own computer, the few posts from this list i read anymore tend to be of a nature that turns me off, lots of bickering and some name-calling and bad vibes all around. made me want to pull the plug.

but before running off i decided to go through some of the recent backlog of messages and found a few posts this weekend that were genuinely sweet.

so thanks to kali and juliana and david (bromige if there's other davids to be confused with) and joe and the rest of you who've been playing well with others lately.

xoxoxoxoxox,
eryque

just downloaded and installed the latest version of eudora. it's got some neato features, but the one i really want is a filter that adds an icon of a mud pie in a slingshot to those messages in my box i don't want to read.

↑ Index

543. Eryque Gleason
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sun 28 Sep 1997

---

this is just a quick thanks to some of you recent posters (poster children).

i've been pretty busy lately with things that keep me far away from my own computer, the few posts from this list i read anymore tend to be of a nature that turns me off, lots of bickering and some name-calling and bad vibes all around. made me want to pull the plug.

but before running off i decided to go through some of the recent backlog of messages and found a few posts this weekend that were genuinely sweet.

so thanks to kali and juliana and david (bromige if there's other davids to be confused with) and joe and the rest of you who've been playing well with others lately.

as others have said, i'm glad for the positive spin this thread seems to have put back into the list, and i'm learning a lot.

xoxoxoxoxox,
eryque

just downloaded and installed the latest version of eudora. it's got some neato features, but the one i really want is a filter that adds an icon of a mud pie in a slingshot to those messages in my box i don't want to read.

↑ Index

544. L.MacMahon and T.R.Healy
Re: A Note on Prejudice
Sun 28 Sep 1997

Steve,

read your note with interest. Catherine's reading at Brown was, even for her, unusually luminous. I was really quite surprised at the range of speech acts it embodied and the hi-res detail she communicated so naturally and easily.

Mirroring perhaps your or one of your experiences of _Pitch_, on my first reading I felt it was an animated cognitive map which, yes, sounds exciting, but, on its own, can also be thin enough fare. I've heard her read from this book quite a few times at this stage, never the same twice. Maurice Scully mentioned once in conversation that he felt that syntax was a pivot for her, which she used to underpin multiple readings. Her fragmented phrasing, on the Brown reading, did however seem to depend on a very acute ear for what happens in speech as opposed to writing.

Yes, two important strands in understanding her work, the psychic flow and talking in the wild. As you say, one is left relatively cueless, which I think is a formal necessity insofar as her verse is capable of withstanding many different and highly articulate readings. Billy Mills, in a paper in which he writes of Catherine's work among that of others, mentions landscape and history as two other threads. I get a feeling that landscape for Catherine is at least four never mind two dimensional. That somehow, history leaves a spatial trace. Sounds like nonsense, but when actually reading the stuff, that's how it feels.

It seems too, like one of those optical illusion things, is it a vase? is it a face?, that whichever of the possible multiple readings strikes one at a particular time is utterly compelling. Now that _is_ something.

Thanks for reminding me of her magnificent reading.

Best wishes,

Randolph Healy.

↑ Index

545. rob wilson
From "MeliMelo" to "Taxi!"
Sun 28 Sep 1997

As for the space, editing and funding of journals, it is always a semi-slimy but wondrous work and one gets as much flack as praise for such collaborations. I for one would want to applaud and give thanks for the work of Juliana Spahr et al in CHAIN whose vision is capacious yet exacting, whose work is devoted to opening herself/the US poetry scene to "the outside" in some full international and material-language sense. The range of her editing speaks for itself, and no attempt to discredit her or the work she does editing and writing will work, as she will rise from the grave of such lack of perception. TINFISH is another such journals, capacious yet exacting in opening and linking the inner Pacific to a global/local range of experimental (and social-cultural poetics). Susan Schultz has devoted much time, love and energy to this, and we are grateful at home and afar. I wanted to tell this list about another editor and journal you may not know of: the Japanese/US writer from Kyotot and now in Seattle, Kei-jiro Suga. He was one of the key voices in the journal of mixed and mongrel ethnographic poetics called "Melimelo" which came out of Kyoto and gave an alternative voice to the mixes of Japan and Japan and Chicano-rich America. Jim Clifford have me a copy of that journal, and it changed around my own view of place/poetics as more a matter of routes and flows than just roots and entrenchments. Now Keijiro Suga has opened up a spendidly designed and colorfully edited journal on the web. It is called "Taxi!" and the four or five issues done so far help to flesh out his vision of poetics as something always "on the road" and in a state of travel to some edge of mixture. His taxi is quite singular and exacting. "Taxi!" can be found at this address: http://www2c.meshnet.or.jp/~taxi/ I would urge Charles Bernstein and Loss Pequeno to check it out as a candidate for the EPC journals page. And on this Sunday, always written under the sign of our Lady of Guadalupe, let us give praise to journals like Chain and Central Park and Taxi! and let the Hudson Review and Poetry drone on in their market blindness as our lady, say, ever intended it would be, gnostically yours in the US market. Rob Wilson in Santa Cruz

↑ Index

546. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher

Re: picking up sides (name-paradox thread)

Sun 28 Sep 1997

---

thinking on this question of what used to be called "discriminating" readers (steve's suggestive post), in light of hoa's observations re her status as part of (say) somehow contrary publishing outlets...

i don't want to suggest a direct analogy here, in what i'm going to say... or even an analogy... but i do want to take this opportunity to raise an issue re gender, one that i live daily with as a result of where i teach...

i'm on a tech campus, where it's 80% men... and i teach predominantly engineers, a profession that is (at best) currently running about 85% men...

so i'm faced in my classes with a small percentage of women who aspire to belong (and i'll construct it this way to advance the problem as quickly as i can) to a predominantly male-occupied profession...

now i don't have to say (but i will!) that i view this as a Good Thing---these women who aspire to becoming engineers... that i (and i assume we) would all like to see a more representative quotient of women (for one) in a profession that has such an incredible impact on our daily lives [he sez]...

and yet, and yet (as i just posted a listmember backchannel the other day): i would like the profession to be less male, but i would also like women to question their desires, chart a path that has less to do with mimicking male behavior per se than with being passionate and critical as to technology, and explore their potential in altering the profession for the better, which might perhaps entail working against certain behaviorally male realities (of course i ask much the same of men!)... i would challenge, that is, the women as to their possible, male-identified behavior (b/c i regard male as the dominant group)... i would challenge the women who persist in sitting with the men in class, who shy away from the few other women in attendance... the women who just want to be "one of the guyz," who tell me they "don't really like women"... the same women who on occasion dress in extremely provocative feminine garb---though i must be certain not to over-generalize here, and though i must observe that the implicit fashion binary here is a sort of catch-22...

now to bring this on over to publishing: clearly, hoa, you are not to be condemned or some such for having had writing 'picked up' by a primarily "male journal" (and neither is dale to be condemned for publishing/editing same, though i trust i've made it clear that i'd like to see a bit more reflexiveness on dale's part in this regard)... but i have noticed, at the same time, that in my own aspirations to be published by thus & so, i've been (perhaps rightfully) challenged by friends and poets as to the basis of my own aspirations, on the basis of the sort of publishing reality such & such effects...

i would certainly begin to doubt mself were i to find my work published, say, in a neo-nazi newsletter... perhaps some of you will object to my self-doubt here, but so it goes... i don't want to see my website linked to such a website, either...

so my question for the list is---and again trying like hell to steer clear of the analogy i seem to have supplied, sorry (i'm confident re my teaching situation, and even engineering, but i'm never so confident re my publishing aspirations)---how do you each value "discriminating" these days on the basis, for example, of gender?... in fact, how do you each value your aspirations?... i hope this is not beside the point, though i know some of you will want to keep the writing process as such distinct from such considerations... very well then, ex post facto, if you must...

and as to questions of emotional attachment/disengagement/affect: i'd simply like to observe that this would seem to reflect the age-old anxiety about knowledge... about how "knowing too much" is alleged to 'spoil' certain formerly innocently (?--edenic, i know) conceived appreciations of art etc... this is encapsulated in the anti-theoretical stance of many 'creative writers' i've met... and henry in particular (!)---i'm using "anti-theoretical" to mean "anti-reflexive"---theorizing in its broadest terms, not "anti-academic-theoretical"...

to which i might offer my own sense of things: that for me, there is no question, all said and done, of trying to permit my emotions the freeplay requisite to creating... and that writing has become for me a process of intellection (and in this sense critical, and urgent) even as it must of necessity be an enactment and embodiment of feeling... i mean to say, that this is what i think i'm doing when i'm creating---thinking and feeling... and what i think i'm doing is at least relevant to the extent that this is how i come to my own work... now what others may make of the results is another matter, for others are, though present, an imagined presence when i'm in the process...

best,

joe

↑ Index

547. Juliana Spahr
the pink and the blue
Sun 28 Sep 1997

I got an error message. I apologize if this arrives 2x.

I read this list blind (in digest form but I'm also in a time zone that gets the digest at 6 pm so I tend to read everything at least a day maybe two behind). So I worry I'm out of step.

Yesterday's discussion was strange. And I feel yucky.

But can I just make one thing clear--excepting the first issue, Chain publishes about 50/50 in terms of the pink and the blue of it. I can't decide if it is good that people think it publishes more women or if it is just another example of how weird sexual politics are becoming.

Dale's aesthetic complaints I understand. I hear them all the time here in nature poetry central. I'm cool by them (even if they feel a little hostile; have I grown too sensitive here in the land of aloha?). Everything isn't for everyone and it is a better world for it.

But I don't understand the confrontation of the law of the father. Whose father? And how don't we here at the chain/Stein power nexus like him? Is there some specific moment that you are talking about Dale? I hope I've stayed away from this rhetoric. I really like mine who just turned 82 and is still playing golf daily.

Dale is right--Chain is too long.

I wish Chain was dangerous. I worry more about irrelevant.

Legless,

Juliana

↑ Index

548. p. durgin
Re: A Note on Prejudice
Sun 28 Sep 1997

Maria, I hear you, but I still hold to the notion that the one sure-fire way to asess the effectiveness of any aesthetic is to asess its power to let you empathize. All literature teaches this, in one way or another, or am I just an old softy? Patrick F. Durgin I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

On Sat, 27 Sep 1997, Maria Damon wrote:

i find that my aesthetic sense has changed > since joining POETIX. i have mixed feelings about that; i feel that i've > gained some "sophistication" maybe but may have lost some ability to hear > the emotional subtexts that make "cliches" interesting, endearing, > powerful, meaningful-in-context, etc. some ability to listen
> empathetically has perhaps ceded to my search for aesthetic thrills...md
>

↑ Index

549. Maria Damon
Re: From "MeliMelo" to "Taxi!"
Sun 28 Sep 1997

---

thanks rob. suga was going to come to our conference but alas had to drop out. maybe he'll come to the twin towns on another occasion. sorry to have missed the chance to meet him.

At 2:37 AM -1000 9/28/97, rob wilson wrote:
>As for the space, editing and funding of journals, it is always a >semi-slimy but wondrous work and one gets as much flack as praise for such >collaborations. I for one would want to applaud and give thanks for the >work of Juliana Spahr et al in CHAIN whose vision is capacious yet >exacting, whose work is devoted to opening herself/the US poetry scene to >"the outside" in some full international and material-language sense. The >range of her editing speaks for itself, and no attempt to discredit her or >the work she does editing and writing will work, as she will rise from the >grave of such lack of perception. TINFISH is another such journals, >capacious yet exacting in opening and linking the inner Pacific to a >global/local range of experimental (and social-cultural poetics). Susan >Schultz has devoted much time, love and energy to this, and we are >grateful at home and afar. I wanted to tell this list about another >editor and journal you may not know of: the Japanese/US writer from >Kyotot and now in Seattle, Keijiro Suga. He was one of the key voices in >the journal of mixed and mongrel ethnographic poetics called "Melimelo" >which came out of Kyoto and gave an alternative voice to the mixes of >Japan and Japan and Chicano-rich America. Jim Clifford have me a copy of >that journal, and it changed around my own view of place/poetics as more a >matter of routes and flows than just roots and entrenchments. Now Keijiro >Suga has opened up a spendidly designed and colorfully edited journal on >the web. It is called "Taxi!" and the four or five issues done so far >help to flesh out his vision of poetics as something always "on the road" >and in a state of travel to some edge of mixture. His taxi is quite >singular and exacting. "Taxi!" can be found at this address:

>http://www2c.meshnet.or.jp/~taxi/
>I would urge Charles Bernstein and Loss Pequeno to check it out as a >candidate for the EPC journals page.
>And on this Sunday, always written under the sign of our Lady of >Guadalupe, let us give praise to journals like Chain and Central Park and >Taxi! and let the Hudson Review and Poetry drone on in their market >blindness as our lady, say, ever intended it would be, >gnostically yours in the US market.
>Rob Wilson
>in Santa Cruz

↑ Index

550. Maria Damon

Re: A Note on Prejudice

Sun 28 Sep 1997

---

yes and no: i find that empathy, for me, isn't a "natural." i have to learn the language of exchange before i'm aware of the content; not just the content or language in terms of intellection or syntax, but the conventions of communicative exchange for that text, or recitation, or cultural event. renato rosaldo has a wonderful essay (can't remember the name of it or where it appeared) where he talked about learning to listen during his fieldwork. he said the Ilongot people he was living with would tell stories that comprised simply a recitation of place names; he felt incredibly bored and frustrated, while they were weeping. then he learned the stories behind the placenames; they were the places where, in fleeing from the japanese during WWII, various members of the tribe had lost individual family members, or had encountered other significant events associated with that period of their collective memory. then he was able to understand how to empathize. i remember reading this as a grad student and realizing that i had no idea how to listen with that degree of openness; i was so eager to jump in with an analysis, a critique or an evaluative judgment that i often missed the context or subtext entirely. so, to paraphrase george lipsitz, i need to constantly learn to listen as well as listen to learn. i find also (and this is a truism, but not to be overlooked) that my ability to empathize is a delicate one, often dependent on my health, degree of serenity, amount of sleep i've gotten, etc. it doesn't come from the power of "the work itself."

At 1:16 PM -0500 9/28/97, p. durgin wrote: > Maria, I hear you, but I still hold to the notion that the one >sure-fire way to asess the effectiveness of any aesthetic is to asess its >power to let you empathize. All literature teaches this, in one way or >another, or am I just an old softy?
> Patrick F. Durgin
> I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I
>
>On Sat, 27 Sep 1997, Maria Damon wrote:
>
> i find that my aesthetic sense has changed >> since joining POETIX. i have mixed feelings about that; i feel that i've >> gained some "sophistication" maybe but may have lost some ability to hear >> the emotional subtexts that make "cliches" interesting, endearing, >> powerful, meaningful-in-context, etc. some ability to listen
>> empathetically has perhaps ceded to my search for aesthetic thrills...md
>>

↑ Index

551. Sylvester Pollet

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Sun 28 Sep 1997

Hey, Kali, welcome back! It's OK to say love, I think, but then I'm no authority. I do know that I have to at least like the stuff I publish simply because I can't afford to publish everything. Too much time & money goes into it, and it's my time & money! Agreed also that the causes of like/love aren't always so simple to predict. I know I sometimes publish something because it irritates me, or because it is so far from something I could conceive of having written myself. All sorts of reasons. Pheromonal aesthetics--there's one to contemplate. best, Sylvester

Backwoods Broadsides Chaplet Series
#28 Mark Nowak, ZWYCZAJ
#29 Mary de Rachewiltz, FAMILY TREE

Subs. $10 yr, 8 issues. RR 5 Box 3630 Ellsworth ME 04605

↑ Index

552. Tim Wood
Herro!
Sun 28 Sep 1997

How is life in the eastern edges of existence <grin>. Actually, I'm pretty fed up with Texas myself, but it's harder for me to bail. I'm probably bailing on the Word. I've got one guy to meet with Tuesday night to see if he's interested in taking on the pub, but that probably won't fly. Gwen said the stuff wouldn't install on your box, but if you could mail the stuff back to me (I knew I should've made a copy), I'll install it on my K6 box & hack up a review. Cool box. AMD 200 MMX, 24x CD, Soundblaster 64, 33.6 modem(fast enuf...), blah blah. I even got --in spite of the lack of SCSI-- Red Hat to install. Just need to high speed scsi stuff, the 17 inch monitor & the CD burner & I'll be go. Maybe a hot rod video card later. Ought to hold off that dual/quad processor urge till BeOS Intel & NT 5.0 hit...

BTW, I picked up a book recently that's bizarre/intriguing/something: The Bible Code. The author has written for the NY Times & the Wall Street Journal. Anyway, the book documents the work of a mathematician in Israel who found a skip sequence code in the first five books of the Bible (the Pentateuch -sp- I believe). The statistics were published in a journal on statistics. Thoughts? Curiousity? Yawns?

take care,
Tim

↑ Index

553. dbkk
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sun 28 Sep 1997

At 5:27 PM -0400 9/28/97, Sylvester Pollet wrote:
>I do know that I have to at least like the stuff I publish >simply because I can't afford to publish everything. Too much time & money >goes into it, and it's my time & money!

This comment reminds of a couple of other comments on this list regarding funding and the imperative to strive for some kind of racial/sexual diversity (I hate the word gender). More than one guy on this list has said something like, "Hey, Mr. X doesn't get grant money so he can publish whomever he likes." Obviously any publisher can and does publish whomever s/he likes. There seems to be some underlying implication that without grant money and its general insistance upon diversity that one has no moral imperative to be open to a broader range of possibilities. Dale says he only has 90 pages so he can't diversity, yet he criticizes Chain, which does diversify, for being too long. ?????????

I also find offensive here that people have been bragging about the people of color whom they know and/or have published--I mean how condescending can you get. I think Hoa is much too nice to this list in her posts. Nobody wants to be turned into a pet.

I'm much moved by Maria's last post, the honesty of it, concerning her struggles to learn to be open/empathetic.

Dodie

↑ Index

554. Tim Wood
Re: Devotion to the arts
Sun 28 Sep 1997

Joe Lemis forgot to mention that --assuming two pubs by the same name don't travesty the face of the Earth-- that "News of the Weird" is published by Joe Bob Briggs, self-described 'drive in movie critic of Grapevine, Texas'. Nothing like some harmless New Orleans weirdness to make a Texan feel better. <wink>
I think it's more interesting to note the demand for iambic pentameter. I think that an interpretation of poetry that narrow --and some would say dated-- says more about the state of poets and their community than it says about the perceived public ignorance. I've heard any number of variants of the 'death of poetry' argument and I'm still not convinced that we can say more on that point than that poetry is not the integral part of American public discourse that it is in other countries. I'm constantly amazed by the amount of interest by Joe Public in poetry. I'm not amazed at how quickly poets seem to kill that interest through grand standing, lack of emotional investment in their work, lack of interest in the the work of others (past & present) and lack of involvement in the poetry community. Perhaps we need letter bombs demanding sound poetry...

Tim Wood

> From: joel lewis <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Devotion to the arts
> Date: Tuesday, September 02, 1997 11:18 PM
>
> FROM: NEWS OF THE WIERD

>
> * Brothers Geoffrey and Aaron Kuffner were arrested in New > Orleans in June and charged with terrorism as the ones who had > recently mailed or hand-delivered suspicious packages to local > government and news media offices. The packages contained > innocuous items (which nonetheless were frightening enough that > two offices called for evacuations) and a four-page manifesto > vowing that "Violent Acts of Consciousness Have Only Begun." > According to police, the men's goal was to call attention to public > ignorance of poetry and that among their demands was that all state > inaugural speeches be written in iambic pentameter.
>
> joel lewis

↑ Index

555. Tim Wood
Please ignore Herro!
Sun 28 Sep 1997

Oops sorry.. I'm still getting used to a new mail program on a new operating system, etc. etc. mas mea culpa.

Tim

↑ Index

556. mark weiss
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sun 28 Sep 1997

Dodie, you've just disallowed, or caused to be seen as tainted, almost every means to communicate about these issues. Not every writer could accomplish that in so few words.

At 02:48 PM 9/28/97 -0700, you wrote:
>At 5:27 PM -0400 9/28/97, Sylvester Pollet wrote:
>>I do know that I have to at least like the stuff I publish >>simply because I can't afford to publish everything. Too much time & money >>goes into it, and it's my time & money!
>
>This comment reminds of a couple of other comments on this list regarding >funding and the imperative to strive for some kind of racial/sexual >diversity (I hate the word gender). More than one guy on this list has >said something like, "Hey, Mr. X doesn't get grant money so he can publish >whomever he likes." Obviously any publisher can and does publish whomever

>s/he likes. There seems to be some underlying implication that without >grant money and its general insistance upon diversity that one has no moral >imperative to be open to a broader range of possibilities. Dale says he >only has 90 pages so he can't diversity, yet he criticizes Chain, which >does diversify, for being too long. ?????????
>
>I also find offensive here that people have been bragging about the people >of color whom they know and/or have published--I mean how condescending can >you get. I think Hoa is much too nice to this list in her posts. Nobody >wants to be turned into a pet.
>
>I'm much moved by Maria's last post, the honesty of it, concerning her >struggles to learn to be open/empathetic.
>
>Dodie
>
>

↑ Index

557. Sylvester Pollet

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Sun 28 Sep 1997

Dodie, it's true that I'm a guy on the list. I didn't say anything about "people of color" (a phrase I never use, because it's as bad as "colored people," in my estimation. I'm open to all sorts of possibilities, I hope, and love moral imperatives. I don't even require that the people I publish use words. Don't lump people to bash them, do it one-by -one. That's a good moral imperative, isn't it? I mean, if bash you must?

> At 5:27 PM -0400 9/28/97, Sylvester Pollet wrote:
> I do know that I have to at least like the stuff I publish > simply because I can't afford to publish everything. Too much time & money > goes into it, and it's my time & money!
>
> This comment reminds of a couple of other comments on this list regarding > funding and the imperative to strive for some kind of racial/sexual > diversity (I hate the word gender). More than one guy on this list has > said something like, "Hey, Mr. X doesn't get grant money so he can publish > whomever he likes." Obviously any publisher can and does publish whomever
> s/he likes. There seems to be some underlying implication that without > grant money and its general insistance upon diversity that one has no moral > imperative to be open to a broader range of possibilities. Dale says he > only has 90 pages so he can't diversity, yet he criticizes Chain, which > does diversify, for being too long. ?????????

>
> I also find offensive here that people have been bragging about the people of color whom they know and/or have published--I mean how condescending can you get. I think Hoa is much too nice to this list in her posts. Nobody wants to be turned into a pet.
>
> I'm much moved by Maria's last post, the honesty of it, concerning her struggles to learn to be open/empathetic.
>
> Dodie

↑ Index

558. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sun 28 Sep 1997

---

oh no, we're gonna have a pissing contest again!...

listen folks, sylvester and dodie and and and: "people of color," whatever its problems, is not no way uh-uh publicly understood (as a rule) as "as bad as colored people"... and "gender," no matter how much you may dislike same (and lord knows why, b/c the word has a history of usage that's quite specific and specifically useful and does something different than "sexual") is a perfectly legit way to deal with issues of GENDER...

SHEESH

can we please exhibit a bit more... patience mebbe? for one another's locutions?... i mean, we hang in different parts of the world, i take it... ok by me... but that don't mean we can't be a bit more go a bit more gently, gently

pretty please?///

best,

joe

↑ Index

559. DS
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sun 28 Sep 1997

Yup, as English IS the language of the oppressors we should stop using english. Or even semaphore, morse. Perhaps all talk in sign language. Sorry for the facisiousness, i don't think she has at all. Just pointed out the cringe factor in phrases such as my "black friend" or my "my gay friend". Not something i have ever been guilty of as i don't have any friends. - Also not something anyone has really been doing. I feel mt cannon has come loose & crashed right across the deck leaving a large briney sucking yawing (ing) hole in me larboard side. ARgh, i wish i had Jack Spanhide to drift behind.

no one

At 03:34 PM 9/28/97 -0700, you wrote:
>Dodie, you've just disallowed, or caused to be seen as tainted, almost >every means to communicate about these issues. Not every writer could >accomplish that in so few words.
>
>At 02:48 PM 9/28/97 -0700, you wrote:

↑ Index

560. Reuben Radding
News of the Weird
Sun 28 Sep 1997

To the fellow who credited "News of the Weird" to Joe Bob Briggs, actually Mr Briggs is the publisher of We Are The Weird. NOTW is a column by Chuck Sheppard.

-Reuben Radding
[redacted]

↑ Index

561. Kali Tal
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sun 28 Sep 1997

> I also find offensive here that people have been bragging about the people of color whom they know and/or have published--I mean how condescending can you get.

"Brag: to talk boastfully about oneself. 'Boast' is the most general of the verbs for the expression of vanity, primarily by vocal means. 'Brag,' used in more informal contexts, implies exaggerated claims, blatancy, and oftenan air of insolence." -- _American Heritage Dictionary of the American Language_

Seems to me that what we've got here is a group of people trying to speak honestly and carefully about a loaded, emotional minefield of a subject in which everyone has a personal stake.

I wrote:

> My African American
> *friends who are poets send me poetry by their friends, who are often African American. But--at least in my experience--all this diversity has to be based on real relationships, real friendships and collegial connections between people who genuinely like and respect and try to understand each other. My immediate assumption, as a white person, is that when I make a new contact with a person of color, the burden of proof is on me to demonstrate, over a period of time, that I do have a genuine liking and respect for the person and his/her work, and that I'm not simply "collecting" token poets or token friends to feed my own image. After a while my intentions become clear and that's a basis for building mutual trust and respect (a process which is neverending). Takes a lot of time and energy. But then, don't all friendships?*

so I assume Dodie is not referring to me, since I explicitly state that I'm not interested in token poets or token friends. But I can't figure out who else might be her target here, since I haven't noticed anyone who might be doing anything akin to "bragging." Wrestling, maybe. But not bragging.

As a white African Americanist, I'm used to people looking at me funny when I talk about African American culture(s) or African American poetry, or even my African American friends. My black friends. My friends who are persons of color. Liberal types are so hyped up to cringe when they hear echoes of "some of my best friends are 'X'" that they can't hardly hear "my friend who is African American" without assuming it's some sort of trophy claim. What? Am I supposed to have black friends without acknowledging, somehow, that they are black? That being black matters to them and, therefore, matters to me? What sort of friend would I be then? How could we talk to each other about our lives? Or am I supposed to be satisfied with having no black friends because every time I seek the company of an African American colleague some people are going to presume that I'm doing it just because she's black? I quit worrying what other people think about this stuff a long, long time ago. I know who my friends are, and they know who I am, and that's how we play it, and if I've got anything to prove, I need to prove it to my friends and not to a stranger who hears ghosts in my words.

Friendship is about caring enough for another person to want to understand who and what they are, when and where they enter--it's about caring enough to try to put your own shit aside for a while and deal with their shit. It's about recognizing the distance between you as well as the points of contact. It's about... well, dammit, it's about love. Just as, for me, poetry is about love. In that sense, I approach poems and people the same way. I take them in context, try to understand where they come from, the traditions upon which they draw, their relative power, their interests and agendas, the stucture of their understanding of the world, the grace with which they move through that world, the payment they demand, the gifts that they bear. And if I feel that diversity--in people and in poetry--increases the richness and the beauty and the pain and the intensity of the life that I live, and if I want to sing the praises of such diversity, of that kind of love, why is that a problem?

And sure I know that I've got privileges my African American friends will never have--and they know that too, you better believe it. I know I don't like it, but they know and I know that pretending I don't have those privileges benefits nobody, while using them to open doors when I can, and not abusing them at all other times is the responsibility I bear for being born privileged and the absolute minimum qualification I've got to meet before I'm worthy of their friendship... or anybody else's. Another way I interpret that responsibility is to carry my friends--all of them--always with me, and to never complacently inhabit places where they are not welcome and would not be comfortable. This means, when I'm in an all-white venue, that I can't tolerate the levels of racism which are comfortable for many white people, and which--because they are white --even well-meaning white folks often don't notice. And it means, when I'm in the company of lesbian feminist friends, that I can't tolerate certain kinds of White-HetMale bashing, either. Insisting on diversity is, for me, ensuring that I'll endure a certain level of discomfort in almost any venue, but, on the other hand, it also brings me deep and richly satisfying relationships with very different people. It's all a matter of what's important to you and who you are willing to love.

And why shouldn't we talk about that?

Kali

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

562. Harold Rhenisch
Re: A Note on Prejudice
Sun 28 Sep 1997

Randolph,

>I get a feeling that landscape for Catherine is at least four never mind two >dimensional. That somehow, history leaves a spatial trace. Sounds like >nonsense, but when actually reading the stuff, that's how it feels.

That's not nonsense.

>It seems too, like one of those optical illusion things, is it a vase? is
it >a face?, that whichever of the possible multiple readings strikes one at a >particular time is utterly compelling. Now that _is_ something.

Yes, that is something. I don't know her work, but...this could be a description of most any verse. I gather from your excitement that she is, however, more deliberate than most. Is that right? If so, this deliberateness would be an essential quality of what she is doing. I like that idea. But is it illusion? We could as easily call it a manifestation of quantum theory, if we liked those kind of metaphors, or a particular method of embodying consciousness, if we preferred those. Using the term "optical illusion" is akin to placing consciousness in quotes. Something has to place the quotes. Might as well dive right in and be at sea, because as far as I can ascertain we are anyway.

Thanks for the good insights.

Best,

Harold Rhenisch

↑ Index

563. dbkk
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Sun 28 Sep 1997

At 6:35 PM -0500 9/28/97, Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher wrote:

> can we please exhibit a bit more... patience mebbe? for one another's locutions?... i mean, we hang in different parts of the world, i take it... ok by me... but that don't mean we can't be a bit more

My question to you Joe, is why would you allow yourself to be published in a series of straight white working class men? Don't you feel you're being turned into a cartoon? I can't talk for people of color but I can talk as a working class person and I certainly wouldn't want to be published as a Working Class Woman. Like yuck.

Don't you feel like your allowing yourself to be victimized by an imperialist?

Dodie

↑ Index

564. dbkk

Stepping into Steve Carll's shoes

Sun 28 Sep 1997

Went to a reading the other night and I saw Steve Carll there. I asked him, why no more reports on Poetics List. (for you who are new to Poetics List I should explain that SF poet Steve Carll used to come on here all the time and give reports on every reading he had been to, and that means plenty!) He shrugged and said he unsubscribed. I said I would try to fill in for him. First Leslie Scalapino read. (I can't remember all the different lines Steve used to quote from, so I will try to describe the story lines instead.) She read six poems from a sequence called "New Time" which I had not heard, then launched into the beginning of something she is calling a detective novel. Its title is "Orchid Jetsam." The two main characters, Grace Abe and Andrew Chen, work in the San Francisco Police Department and are investigating a strange murder case. Abe is additionally burdened (or enhanced) by the fact she is being possessed by the spirit of a Marine slain in the Gulf War Desert Storm who enters her body at inopportune times during the investigation. I asked Scalapino if she was riffing off the "X Files" because it certainly had that spooky the truth is out there kind of feeling about it. She said no, in fact she had never seen the "X Files" and you know something, I believed her! Anyway as usual a reading filled with great theatrical powers of "explaining" those long involved sentences and fragments of sentences, explaining them by keeping them balanced like the balls of the juggler, up in the air till she wants them to come down in the right or skewed places, through the voice and a subtle movement of the fingers of her left hand.

Then Edwin Torres came on. It was an interesting gamble to see if these two poets would work together successfully and one that seemed to invigorate them both. Torres used a boombox to play background chants and orchestral thumps and thwacks while reciting poetry and sounds over the recorded sounds. Many young people in the audience responded favorably to this combination, one woman told me that this was the best reading she had ever heard in her life. The words came often from Torres new book "SandHommeNomadNo" and a forthcoming CD "Holy Kid" (Kill Rock Stars label). Torres who had never read before in San Francisco seemed pleased and abashed by his reception. We will be sorry to see him go back to New York, but around here, nobody stays for very long, they are all dust in the wind. You think you will have stability in your life, but you don't. It's a fact of life in San Francisco that all must deal with sooner or later. The poetry reflects this. Torres was always doing all this formalistic stuff--breaking words down into phonemes and distorting them by combining them, say, with animal imitations or the high energy vernacular of a dozen different NY street cultures-- but it was always infused with emotional intensity and a certain variety of timbre . . . some of the sounds he emitted could only be heard by dogs. In this way, I feel, his writing appeals to a broad range of people, and when read on the page feels a bit abandoned, as though the reader is getting only half of the dimensions; however, in "SandHommeNomadNo" this lack, or absence, is partially softened--just like life--by typography and in fact--the slowness with which the words are read gives them back the "meaning" they lose in performance.

So, is it six of one and half a dozen of the other? Or 12 of both, either way? And now for the real Steve Carllism, who was in the audience! There were so many people in the audience I didn't recognize half of them. Perhaps they were fans of the spoken word movement, and some were definitely students of Mills College and the Art Institute, places where Scalapino has been teaching lately. And of New College, because students there can get in free (this was a reading sponsored by Small Press Traffic.) I saw Pamela Lu, Rick London, Liz Willis, Peter Gizzi, Mary Margaret Sloan, Rodrigo Toscano, Hung Tu, Mary Burger, Lyn Hejinian, Simone Fattal, Bob Gluck, Jocelyn Saidenburg, Aaron Shurin, Hugh Steinberg, and sixty or seventy others.

↑ Index

565. Kali Tal

Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents

Mon 29 Sep 1997

> My question to you Joe, is why would you allow yourself to be published in a series of straight white working class men? Don't you feel you're being turned into a cartoon? I can't talk for people of color but I can talk as a working class person and I certainly wouldn't want to be published as a Working Class Woman. Like yuck.

Dodie,

Joe can answer this himself, I'm sure. In fact, we spoke of your post briefly on the phone tonight, since it flashed across my screen as we traded news about our lives and talked about the important stuff--work, relationships, new ideas, hopes, fears, the stories you share with friends. The phone rang almost immediately again after I hung up. It was Renny Christopher, whose book of poetry, _Viet Nam and California_ is now in press and will be the second volume published by Burning Cities / Viet Nam Generation in 1997. I read Renny your post and she started to laugh. Renny is just finishing up the task of editing a special issue on working class studies for the journal _Feminist Studies_. She calls herself a working class poet and a working class scholar and doesn't find the title "yuck" in the least. There's a range of sentiment about the label "working class," just like there's a range of sentiment about any label-- people have different ideas about who they are and how they want to be recognized.

Working Class Studies is a burgeoning field populated (no surprise) mostly by working class scholars, or scholars who identify with or spring from the working class. Working class anthologies (including anthologies of poetry and literature) are showing up all over--the commercial presses may indeed exploit working class writers, but the small press and academic anthologies don't seem to have any trouble filling their pages with good writing by people who are proud to be published as working class writers. Me, I don't have any problem being published as "X", as long as it's done respectfully and I feel that I, as an "X" have some say in the process and by participating gain some personal benefit and some benefit for "X"s in general.

What you're forgetting here, Dodie, is that Joe is a friend of mine. It's you who boils down the White Noise series to some cartoonish population of working class WhiteHetMale poets, not me. I know each of those poets (David Connolly, Elliot Richman, David Vancil, Gerald McCarthy, Joe Amato, Dale Ritterbusch, Philip Jason, M.L. Liebler), and I count each of them a friend, respect each one for who he is and what of himself he is willing to share with me and with his readers. These poets' whiteness and maleness are not the reasons for publishing them, and I wouldn't swear that every single one is straight or that each and every one qualifies as "working class," (who am I, after all, to issue certifications?), but there is a unifying theme or "feel" to their work which seems to me well characterized by White Noise. Part of their intensity, and strength is born out of a rejection of a particular stereotype of white maleness, out of a reaction to a cultural location, and there is, in each poet's work, a kind of courage I admire, a level of sensibility and emotion and commitment that seems to me worthy of notice and praise. Most important, though, I think they are all fine poets, and I am proud to have helped to bring their work to an audience. If you read the series, it might give you some insight into my project and a deeper understanding of their work. They are no fools, no dupes, no victims, and would laugh at anyone who told them different.

Why go after me with such ferocity? Or, rather, if you care to go after me with this ferocity, I'd prefer to take it back-channel, to discuss it with you as one human being to another, rather than playing it out as street theater. POETICS has been the site of too many pitched battles between people who would make better allies than enemies. A Sixties scholar, I can't help making a comparison to the splintering of progressive groups like SDS, who spent so much time infighting they weren't left with enough energy or a cohesive enough community to take effective action to change a system everyone in all factions agreed was evil. I've been as guilty (and maybe more guilty) of such infighting as anyone else, but I'm honestly tired of it and I'm no longer going to participate in such struggles.

Peace,
Kali

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

566. Miekal And
Re: A Note on Prejudice
Mon 29 Sep 1997

---

back home, send on the literature

m
--
@#
Dreamtime Village website: http://net22.com/dreamtime
QAZINGULAZA: And/Was/Wakest website:
http://net22.com/qazingulaza
e-mail for DT & And/Was: [redacted]

↑ Index

567. Eliza McGrand
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Mon 29 Sep 1997

---

dodie

did you read my post as "bragging about people of color i know?" part of me thinks you can't possibly have gone down THAT path, but after the cycles of wierdness, anything is beginning to seem possible.

if not, sorry to have asked.

if so, go back and read it again. i bring it up as analog to gender inclusion/ exclusion using a parallel situation in my life at present where at first glance, the issue seems racial. and my response is anger, and seems along racial lines. but when i go back and make myself be more objective, make lists and describe this dilemna to very objective, analytic friends, a number of other factors start coming in and soon, it reduces to one group of people blanking out another. not attacking, exactly (though they whisper and snigger occasionally) but having a smooth, flat, reflectant surface whenever they are in proximity to group (in this case, black, but also older, with kids, largely 1rst/2nd generation immigrants, working, poor, etc being blindsided by group largely opposite in every respect mentioned). as with this, so with the poet first mentioned -- he describes a lack of authentic poetry, turns to one sort, and seems completely obvlivious, blank sided, smooth flat and reflectant-surfaced to an entire, huge body of poetry based on authentic and universal experience (new movement in womens writing). the blindness, non-seeing, may not be as simple as you black/female/other vs. me white/male/my sort. it may not exactly be malice, deserving of and responsive to anger but something more complex.

in support of last thought, i offer the often-seen response of "there is no poetry of X type out there" when shown a huge volume of poetry by, lets say women for this example, of X type with promise for much more. response, more often than not, is another wierd compendium: "oh, wow, this is great" and then responder does not look up any more and a few weeks later, repeats statement about no poetry of X type.

blank spot, smooth reflectant surface, non-seeing... thus, the white women in my school (not all but most) sit at lab one day with one of the black women (and it is black, not "of color" although, interestingly, we have one indian (india) woman who seems to be treated the same as the black women), they'll laugh, share books, have fun, get stuff done, and one hour later, ONE HOUR, and white woman X goes right by her former lab partner at lunch without one single glance and goes to sit next to other white woman she hardly knows.

blank spot? non-seeing? there does'nt seem malice, just blankness... e

↑ Index

568. Robert Archambeau
Re: walsh, prejudice, etc
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Have been following this discussion with interest, and am working it into my article on Walsh's poetry (along with that of Maurice Scully and Geoffrey Squires). If anyone's interested in my $.02, it will be in the next Notre Dame Review (info at http://www.nd.edu/~english/ndr/ndr.htm). Can't plug that magazine enough (and not just because they let me review books -- there'll be a new Creeley poem in the next issue, too).

Bob

--
Robert Archambeau
Department of English
Lake Forest College

Lake Forest, IL 60045
http://www.lfc.edu/~archamb/

Time ere poems Time ere plighted troth
Nor forward glance nor backward gaze at signs none
 --Brian Coffey

↑ Index

569. Michael Magee
walsh, prejudice, etc
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Just a note of thanks to Steve Evans for his remarkably thoughtful meditation on reading prejudices. I read it having just visited a good friend, an older poet whom most of us on this list (including myself) would categorize as "mainstream," but whose open-mindedness as a reader I've always appreciated. He told me he'd begun reading Perelman's Virtual Reality after someone, in addition to myself, had recommended it. He'd more or less given up on "language poets" long ago. He said, "If two people who aren't dumb tell me I should read something, I figure I've just missed it, that I haven't found a way into the poems yet." That's laconic and 'Yankee' of him, to be sure - a methodology which will keep him from reading any number of worthwhile poets. Still, he was reading Perelman 'hard,' as carefully as he knew how. And, there seemed to be something to this - what we're able to find our way into, who we're able to read with some sense of pleasure, depends so much on how wide our nexus of associations/associates is. Which is to say, poetry is a communicative possibility which depends on a whole host of other communicative acts. Steve's gift seems to be a faith that the communicative acts of others (Walsh for instance) are never intended as monologue, always as dialogue. Anyway, thanks Steve, for letting us eavesdrop.

-Mike.

↑ Index

570. Douglas Barbour
Re: name, paradox, &c.
Mon 29 Sep 1997

As many have already said, this has been a fine thread, pushing thought, & I too am grateful for all the considered responses.

I am reminded of bpNichol's suggestion that there are a number of different poetics, the researchers, those who learn quickly from them & follow up the original research, those who continue to maintain the classic stances, work through the continuing possibilities of 'convention' (as with feminismS or postodernismS there are a LOT of conventional sites & states -- we cant situate everyone in one box, even in that third category). I wonder if this doesnt apply to reading too (& perhaps editing as such). I also wonder if we can't move between or among the 'levels' as bp, a most generous reader of everyone, often did. It can be called eclecticism but it doesnt have to be mealylouthed. I like Steve Evan's take because it suggests one of the ways such a move happens. I certainly have learned to 'like' some writing I wasnt sure of through hearing the writer read the work, & have sometimes learned of work I didnt even know existed that way. Always a good moment when that happens.

So what I 'like' & would publish may very well change (broaden?) over time. I have had so many limited definitions of 'good' poetry that some new poem has destroyed, forced me to braoden the definition, over the years. For the work that broke the bias I am always grateful... But the bias is a place to start: having some sense of what touches me, moves me, gets me thinking, etc. And then I need to be open to the possibility that I can change.

In response to Juliana on the 50/50 m/w breakdown in _Chain_, I am reminded of an article by Samuel R Delany some 25 years ago at least, in which he pointed out that, despite his feeling that he was thoroughly 'for' women's equality, he discovered that when he was in a crowd of people & thought the number of women was equal to the number of men, he would count & find that really the percentage of women was between 10% and a high of 25%. So he went into perceptual training & found that after some time when he thought the numbers were equal, it was about 40% women. Yeah.

==========
Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta T6G 2E5
[redacted] FAX:[redacted]
H: [redacted]
~~~
~~~

571. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: The Name & the Paradox of its Contents
Mon 29 Sep 1997

dodie, i generally joke with my friends about my own cartoonish qualities... i mean, i love cartoons, can't help mself... i esp. love the rocky/bullwinkle show, and watch the reruns late at night...

it may be that 'my working class ain't your working class' (to paraphrase another book/issue)... but let's see... i think, in general, that categories are necessary conveniences, and therefore dangerous to the extent that they're used reductively...

i'd sure hate to think that my work is reducible to my working-classness or some such... but then, no doubt about it---my working-classness or some such is a strong gradient in some of my work...

so let's get up close and personal, ok?...

i published my first poem at 36... my first book of poetry (the one kali published, a coupla years after we'd met and become friends) at 40... i'm not part of the mfa circuit (which is notnotnot intended as a slam of said circuit)---in fact i don't hold the trad. doctorate, i hold a doctor of arts, or d.a., from suny/albany (which some of you academix out there will no doubt understand in terms of its various complications---i'm proud of my degree program, in any case)... kali's commitment to publishing work she liked, incl. work by a group of whitehetmen (tags used advisedly, now) resulted in my book being published, w/o my having to publish in more orthodox OR more avant-garde venues (very little of my book was in print, actually, before the book was published---with the result that that book, if you read it closely, is comprised of older, more trad. work in the front, and newer, less trad. writing toward the 'end'---as ron silliman was so nice to post me about after reading through)...

now: i'm working-class to the extent that both my folks were (though my mother would have graduated college in europe, were it not for the war)... 50s style three bedroom ranch (in the 50s and 60s) until my folks divorced in 68 and my life REALLY began to take on some rather quirky proportions, growing up as i did with my father and brother in an upper flat in a deadended part of edgecity at $75 a month rent (not exactly what you'd call swanky)... twelve years in that place... welfare foodstamps low wages alcoholism culminating in cancer death etc etc etc prior to my even publishing a single fucking poem... well it's almost stereotypical, and in fact not working-class at all---it's poverty line... but me, i worked only summer jobs that could be called working class---my aspirations as a worker were directed at salary positions (the only way 'out' was a career in engineering), and these aspirations raised anxieties in me not unlike the ones i occasionally feel when i aspire to publishing hither and thither (although i must admit it's much easier for me these days)...

but again, i'd hate anybody to think my work (or aesthetic, or self, or whatever-thefuck) reduced to "working class" or "poverty line"... still, you test me in these terms, you gets what you pays for...

now: since you've given me the opportunity to rant a bit (and really---if you know me at all you'll know that the rough edges in this post are accompanied by a smile---which really tends to piss people off f2f, sorry) i may as well take a moment to plug my own, very working-class book (as some will no doubt observe upon reading): _no outlet: an engineer in the works_ (i keep tweaking that subtitle, but i like this one), due out someday i hope on a MAJOR TRADE PRESS, with some real money accompanying the transaction (and hey, i don't even have an agent yet!)... and i hope the motherfucker becomes a motherfucking bestseller, you bet your sweet as i do--- well i'm talking to you all now, not just dodie, and you can see how i get mself into trouble with my big fucking mouth...

i mean, kass and i are tens of thousands in debt on plastic, and there's no inheritance in the cards, if you get my drift... and i'm getting real tired of living with this financial pressure, which it seems i've been living with now since forever... i'm certain many of you can relate...

now i have some doubts about my trade press aspirations, some real aesthetic and writing community doubts (in my view, a trade press simply 'buys' an audience for you), but i have to say---with the work nearly complete, in less than a year---i am, to my own surprise, relatively pleased mself with the results, which seem to complicate my 'working class self' even while managing to tell some readable (in a more popular sense) stories...

but hey, i'm the author... and i worry about the reception of my book---that somebody will pigeonhole the book or me as being specifically 'one a those'... but then, the packaging/publishing aspect is, again, a categorical (marketplace) convenience, one that i've tried like hell to keep at arm's length in my own writing (even though of course i know when i'm writing against the popular grain---i've been around that long)... and the work itself will speak either directly or indirectly to all attempts at pigeonholing (i hope directly)... i have confidence, this close to completion, that i'll be ok in this regard... but who knows?---ergo my anxieties re publication, esp. with alla those other memoirs 'out there,' for example...

does this clarify at all?... i hope so, 'cause it's the best i can do at the moment by way of fleshing out the sort of situatedness (yes, chi-chi critical vocab. deployed now) in which i locate my various selves...

only a single signature, though///

best,

joe

↑ Index

572. Laurie Schneider/Crag Hill
Readership and Writing asLived Experience
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Long drive makes me late to these threads:

I find intriguing Kevin Killian's generous/risky practice as editor of publishing a cross-section of work that slides across his desk into his rangefinder. (Mirage is thus always pleasurably eclectic. Aldon Nielsen's lower limit speech has also done this.) Unavoidably, Killian publishes what he likes, yet it seems the emphasis shifts from editorial predilection to what his readers might find provocative. He acts less as filter, more as facilitator. We certainly need magazines like that -- pointing us toward the panoply so we know more about writing than the editor's aesthetic.

Edwin Honig in his call for a poetry of "lived experience" overlooks the fact that writing itself is such. If it isn't, why do it? Granted writing will always be safer than hunkering down in sucking mud with mortar shells dropping, yet it is no less a living act. I think of what Tim O'Brien says in The Things They Carried: Story truth is truer than Happening truth. What occurs in our imaginations as we write and read is more meaningful, more primary/primal, than the historical events that may or may not trigger our imaginations. Poetry about history inevitably becomes simply history. Writers should take us to felt/thought places that have always been and will always be (even those just coming into cognition), no matter how they do it.

Best, Crag

↑ Index

573. Henry Gould
gender history & the other stuff
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Why not dig myself a deeper foxhole & respond again to Elliza's complaint. She argues or implies that Honig & others like him stereotype experimental women's writing as unhistorical, abstract, unreadable, & on the other hand valorize men's writing, vet's writing, as historical, understandable, in touch with the "authentic" story or stories.

This issue has a long & complex history itself about which I certainly am no authority. I just want to say that in my view the issue of realism, authenticity, representation, history, & empathy need not be divided either along gender lines or experimental/traditional lines. I THINK GOOD WRITING CONTINUALLY CROSSES THESE LINES (as Steve Evan's appreciation of C. Walsh was pointing toward). I think the keynote might be what the "objectivists" pointed toward as a value - sincerity. What is sincerity but a measure of the balance achieved by the artist between "experience" and "art"? If art is a mimesis or re-experiencing of experience filtered or tempered by the understanding - the logos - then this balance is utterly necessary for authentic art. And everything wavers across that plumbline. Between slack repetitions of experience and petty contortions of technique for its own sake lies the plumbline of authentic art.

Now in my own view - not Mr. Honig's - there is a ton of slack writing on BOTH sides of that plumbline. There IS a lot of critical support for "texts" which equate radical innovation with abstract unreadability. Elliza's absolutely right that returning to some kind of group-sanctioned Men's Version of History is both reactionary & ridiculous. So Edwin has a complaint & Elliza has a complaint. Do they have to cancel each other out with mutual caricatures? Where is the joy in reading a pedestrian rehash of misunderstood cliches of so-called experience? Where is the joy in trying to read some pedantic ambitious hypocrite's re-working of styles invented by Pound or Stein & sanctioned by a couple generations of grad schools? Unless the poem itself hits the poet over the head in roughly the same degree of velocity & ferocity that life itself hits us all over the head from day one well I say why read it. - Henry Gould

↑ Index

574. Hoa Nguyen working class thread
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Following up on Dodie's post/ Kali response re: working class poets

I don't really understand why Dodie's post was read as an attack on Kali or Joe. Could it be that Dodie was asking a real question of Joe? I would like to know how he feels about belonging to the "White Noise" group-- and I imagine that perhaps Joe would welcome the chance to talk about his poetry activities and affiliations (?).

I am wondering 2 things-- How come you would feel yuck published in a "working class women journal", Dodie (a really real question-- I have questions around this for myself in terms of other identity categories) and secondly, how come the response to Dodie's post was a longish defensive complaint, Kali?

questioningly,

hoa

>>My question to you Joe, is why would you allow yourself to be published in >>a series of straight white working class men? Don't you feel you're being >>turned into a cartoon? I can't talk for people of color but I can talk as >>a working class person and I certainly wouldn't want to be published as a >>Working Class Woman. Like yuck.
>
>Dodie,
>
>Joe can answer this himself, I'm sure. In fact, we spoke of your post >briefly on the phone tonight, since it flashed across my screen as we >traded news about our lives and talked about the important stuff--work, >relationships, new ideas, hopes, fears, the stories you share with friends.
>The phone rang almost immediately again after I hung up. It was Renny >Christopher, whose book of poetry, _Viet Nam and California_ is now in >press and will be the second volume published by Burning Cities / Viet Nam >Generation in 1997. I read Renny your post and she started to laugh.
>Renny is just finishing up the task of editing a special issue on working >class studies for the journal _Feminist Studies_. She calls herself a >working class poet and a working class scholar and doesn't find the >title "yuck" in the least. There's a range of sentiment about the label >"working class," just like there's a range of sentiment about any label-- >people have different ideas about who they are and how they want to be >recognized.
>
>Working Class Studies is a burgeoning field populated (no surprise) mostly >by working class scholars, or scholars who identify with or spring from >the working class. Working class anthologies (including anthologies >of poetry and literature) are showing up all over--the commercial >presses may indeed exploit working class writers, but the small press >and academic anthologies don't seem to have any trouble filling their >pages with good writing by people who are proud to be published as >working class writers. Me, I don't have any problem being published as >"X", as long as it's done respectfully and I feel that I, as an "X"

have >some say in the process and by participating gain some personal benefit >and some benefit for "X"s in general.
>
>What you're forgetting here, Dodie, is that Joe is a friend of mine.
It's
>you who boils down the White Noise series to some cartoonish population >of working class WhiteHetMale poets, not me. I know each of those poets >(David Connolly, Elliot Richman, David Vancil, Gerald McCarthy, Joe Amato,
>Dale Ritterbusch, Philip Jason, M.L. Liebler), and I count each of them
a >friend, respect each one for who he is and what of himself he is willing >to share with me and with his readers. These poets' whiteness and maleness >are not the reasons for publishing them, and I wouldn't swear that every >single one is straight or that each and every one qualifies as "working >class," (who am I, after all, to issue certifications?), but there is a >unifying theme or "feel" to their work which seems to me well characterized >by White Noise. Part of their intensity, and strength is born out of a >rejection of a particular stereotype of white maleness, out of a reaction >to a cultural location, and there is, in each poet's work, a kind of >courage I admire, a level of sensibility and emotion and commitment that >seems to me worthy of notice and praise. Most important, though, I think >they are all fine poets, and I am proud to have helped to bring their >work to an audience. If you read the series, it might give you some insight >into my project and a deeper understanding of their work. They are no >fools, no dupes, no victims, and would laugh at anyone who told them >different.
>
>Why go after me with such ferocity? Or, rather, if you care to go after >me with this ferocity, I'd prefer to take it back-channel, to discuss

it >with you as one human being to another, rather than playing it out as >street theater. POETICS has been the site of too many pitched battles >between people who would make better allies than enemies. A Sixties >scholar, I can't help making a comparison to the splintering of progressive >groups like SDS, who spent so much time infighting they weren't left >with enough energy or a cohesive enough community to take effective action >to change a system everyone in all factions agreed was evil. I've been >as guilty (and maybe more guilty) of such infighting as anyone else, but >I'm honestly tired of it and I'm no longer going to participate in such >struggles.
>
>Peace,
>Kali
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>Kali Tal new WORD order
>PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com >[redacted] (phone & fax) "Web Design For Smart People"
>
>Sixties Project [redacted]
>http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com
>

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

575. henry gould
Re: Readership and Writing asLived Experience
Mon 29 Sep 1997

On Mon, 29 Sep 1997 06:38:28 -0700 Crag Hill said:
>
>Edwin Honig in his call for a poetry of "lived experience" overlooks the >fact that writing itself is such. If it isn't, why do it? Granted writing >will always be safer than hunkering down in sucking mud with mortar shells >dropping, yet it is no less a living act. I think of what Tim O'Brien says >in The Things They Carried: Story truth is truer than Happening truth. What >occurs in our imaginations as we write and read is more meaningful, more >primary/primal, than the historical events that may or may not trigger our >imaginations. Poetry about history inevitably becomes simply history.
>Writers should take us to felt/thought places that have always been and >will always be (even those just coming into cognition), no matter how they >do it.

This is an important point, but maybe the reason I keep saying "classicism is revolution" & steff like that is that I don't exactly agree with Tim O'Brien, & I don't exactly agree that poetry about history inevitably becomes "simply" history. I do agree that if you devalue the moment of writing (when the poem, or the imagination, hits you over the head) then you won't make poetry but will get stuck on the prongs of cynical critique I outlined in previous post (maybe I almost got stuck there myself). I think there is a context even for the imagination, and Time tempers the poet's voice & silvers the plow. There is a realm of actuality & what happened is just as interesting as what's imagined. (They're almost always intertwined). - Henry gould

↑ Index

576. Hoa Nguyen
People of Color?
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Dodie wrote:

>I also find offensive here that people have been bragging about the people >of color whom they know and/or have published--I mean how condescending can >you get. I think Hoa is much too nice to this list in her posts.
Nobody
>wants to be turned into a pet.
>

I wanted to take this opportunity that Dodie has given me to respond to this-- since no one else asked...

Yeah, sometimes I do feel too nice-- and although intentions have been carefully explained/explored, tones of condescending creep in, talking about race is always touchy and yes, posts speaking about the diversity of one's group of friends or one's journal-- can leave me feeling, well, yucky too. And for just this pet-like reason-- I think that I wrote that it feels like taxidermy -- "and this is my prized blue nosed snarffer"-- And while it gives me stomach aches when folks talk about race in their immediate social situations, (maybe you have something, Kali, that it reminds one of the old "My best friends are X!"), this sort of discussion is necessary. And when talking about race, everyone doesn't have to know and everyone can make mistakes! (this includes me of course-- the other day with an Iranian American business owner-- I was chit-chatting and found myself wanting to validate him and his country's culture, so that he would be at ease-- and know I wasn't racist like "them"-- and started saying something about the beauty of the Arabic language --until he interupts stating that he speaks Persian) Ignorance, unfortuanatly, is easy.

And to try to clear up the term "People of color" -- it may sound off to you, Sylvester Pollet-- and yes, Joe, it is not like the term "colored people"-- but it is an affirming term for people of color-- in the way that Kali described how it is important to her friends of color to have their ethnicity be a part of their personhood because if it isn't, it is as if their color didn't exist or as if they had become white.

Finally, I have wondering over the weekend about the diverstiy on this list -- I would like to connect with the lister's of color -- could you all back channel me? No certification required! Seriously though, I want to feel less alone on the list.

Not a minority,

Hoa

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

577. Carolyn Guertin

Killian and Argento

Mon 29 Sep 1997

Someone recently posted a reference to a new book(s) by Kevin Killian called the Argento Series from Meow Books. A friend of mine is desperate to own this and local (Canadian) booksellers say they can't order it. If anyone is in the know, could they please backchannel me with direct order specs?

With thanks,
Carolyn

_____ Carolyn Guertin, Department of English, University of Alberta E-Mail: [redacted]; Tel/FAX: [redacted] Website: http://www.ualberta.ca/~cguertin/Guertin.htm See the 3D Woman! http://www.ualberta.ca/~cguertin/laser/enter.htm "Memory is a capricious seamstress." -- Virginia Woolf

↑ Index

578. p. durgin
Re: working class thread
Mon 29 Sep 1997

The "White Noise" group/school? Anyone wanna clarify? Back-channels gladly accepted if you please.

I[I]I [redacted] I[I]I

↑ Index

579. dbkk
Re: working class thread
Mon 29 Sep 1997

At 7:19 AM -0700 9/29/97, Hoa Nguyen wrote:

> *I don't really understand why Dodie's post was read as an attack on Kali or Joe. Could it be that Dodie was asking a real question of Joe? I would like to know how he feels about belonging to the "White Noise" group-- and I imagine that perhaps Joe would welcome the chance to talk about his poetry activities and affiliations (?).*
>
> I am wondering 2 things-- How come you would feel yuck published in a "working class women journal", Dodie (a really real question-- I have questions around this for myself in terms of other identity categories) and secondly, how come the response to Dodie's post was a longish defensive complaint, Kali?

First of all, excuse the angry tone of my last post. I won't bore you all with what provoked it.

Secondly, no, Eliza, I was not accusing you of anything, and I'm sorry if I caused you even an instant of distress. Like Dale, I was being vaguer than I should have been.

Thirdly, I was never questioning Joe's credentials as working class, just asking in a rather pushy way how he felt being published as a working class writer.

From Joe's post it seems like he does have some conflicts along that line. But, heh, it's hard to get published, I don't begrudge anybody for taking anything they can get.

And the final point of my prelude--I haven't read Kali's response. After her performance on this list this summer I decided it best that I filter out her messages to avoid the temptation to respond to them.

Now, to Hoa's point. And I have a question for you Hoa, when you spoke of the fellow at work saying they needed to diversify, I'm interested in what exactly about him saying that bothered you.

I'm going to meander a response to the rest of Hoa's post, and we'll begin with a story that involves Hoa herself. When Hoa was living in San Francisco she wrote a grant, a component of which would be a reading series for younger writers of color--three readings in which she herself would read with a variety of people. She asked if Small Press Traffic would sponsor these readings and I said sure. Then Hoa moved to Texas and the grant panel was stupid and didn't award Hoa the money anyway--but I thought, why not do the reading series anyway. So I asked another poet to curate it--as part of our agreement I was not going to advertise the series as being about writers of color. Neither of us felt comfortable with that. One poet refused to read in the series because she did not want to be singled out as a young poet of color, advertising or no. If she was going to read for SPT she was going to read in our regular series (she eventually did read in the regular series). And then the curator decided that she didn't feel comfortable curating a series about people of color, so I said, do what ever you want, and she opened up the series. This experience caused much reflection on my part, these women's refusal to be institutionalized as women of color. While class and race are not the same thing in America, if I think of myself as working class (and it wasn't that long ago since that was sexy, it hasn't been that long since feminism and the class struggle were issues on people's agenda) and imagine a similar institution of myself, I feel that I can approach some beginning of understanding of their positions.

I've been reading the history of freak shows--the exoticization of difference and displaying it to reinforce the normality of the audience. I can't help but see parallels here between publishing people as belonging to a group defined as marginal, racial, class, etc., how that reinforces that group/person's position of otherness--and the status quo of a norm, as base of white middle classness against which this otherness is projected.

As far as who receives social compassion, groups come and go. It's not cool to be racist these days, but not so long ago it was. Do I think that a new level of humanity has been reached? No. Look at the scathing condemnation of people who are overweight/ or public figures who don't look anorexic. I think that what should be examined is this human impulse to define an other who reinforces the group collectivity, normality. Thinking of an article I read in last week's food section. It was on packing exciting lunches for your child. In the article several dieticians were asked what they packed for their own children. On dietician said she packed potato chips because children pay attention to what's in one another's lunch boxes, and if her daughter had a weird lunch it would cost her socially. So here we have the makings of a new marginalized group, little girls who do not carry potato chips in their lunches. A silly example, but a very real issue to the little girls who don't have potato chips and are dumped on.

As far as friendships go, I don't think that someone has to speak of somebody as "My African American friend" in order to not deny their ethnicity. My first husband was Puerto Rican but I've never called him my Puerto Rican husband--I never denied that he was Puerto Rican either. We're still in touch--and a few years ago he went back to Puerto Rico to live, hadn't lived there since he was three. So he was in town a while ago and we went out for coffee and I asked him what it was like, living in Puerto Rico again, expecting some glorious report of bonding with his roots, etc. His response: "There's too much bureacracy there." It's so easy to be reductive, to pigeonhole people.

Dodie

↑ Index

580. Maria Damon
Re: People of Color?
Mon 29 Sep 1997

this is a terrifically engaging thread, thanks y'all.

↑ Index

581. Sylvester Pollet
Re: People of Color?
Mon 29 Sep 1997

> *And to try to clear up the term "People of color" -- it may sound off to you, Sylvester Pollet-- and yes, Joe, it is not like the term "colored people"-- but it is an affirming term for people of color-- in the way that Kali described how it is important to her friends of color to have their ethnicity be a part of their personhood because if it isn't, it is as if their color didn't exist or as if they had become white.*

Hello, Hoa Nguyen! I understand that use of the term, I just don't like it & don't use it myself. I am a person of color, in my estimation, a sort of nicer color now than in March, when I tend to fade to a greyish white. Tanner now. When people, students say, want their heritage acknowledged, I try to honor that with sensitivity and particularity, so that I don't call a Passamaquoddy a Micmac. It seems clear to me that many terms used comfortably by people within a group to refer to themselves can not be used that way by outsiders. Of course, the language is constantly shifting, & it's our job as poets to push it into better places. I hope I'm not sounding cantankerous here--I was a bit yesterday, after half a day chainsawing firewood and half a day reading student papers. (Not an academic, just a poet/part-timer, trying to get through the winter.) I think this sort of discussion really helps, by the way, so thanks.

↑ Index

582. Mark Prejsnar
Syntactics #1 available
Mon 29 Sep 1997

The really exciting new poetry magazine Syntactics has arrived. As part of the almost microscopic Atlanta poetry mafia, I'm posting an announcement..(on behalf of editor John Lowther, who isn't net-connected at the moment).

Issue #1 features Avelino de Araujo, Sheila Murphy, Peter Ganick, Stephen Dignazio, Jim Leftwich, Ray DiPalma, Standard Schaefer, Matt Hill, Spencer Selby, Fanny Howe, Pierre Joris and Joe Napora. It comes with a broadside which is a theoretical reflection on the pantoum and its possible extentions by Lowther, and also a theory section with discussions by Sheila, Jim and John of aspects of their poetics. Graphics, poetry, design and the rest are really nice. The issue costs $4 which I think is a steal (#2 will be more).

John got the the issue from the printer the day before yesterday, so copies to contributors and subscribers are going out as we (er, as I) speak, or type.

syntactics
Box 1381
Decatur, GA 30031-1381

--Mark P.
Atlanta

↑ Index

583. Laura Moriarty
Re: working class thread
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Dodie et al -

The idea of there being a working class magazine that would be interested in my work because of my background is intriguing to me - Would that it were so - In fact maybe Michael Amnason's Ottotole was that in some ways, though of course not restricted to us working class types - And as I recall Michael's definition required current and not just past working class credentials - Underpaid non-profit art work being defined as hopelessly middle class -

I was sorry to have missed the SPT reading Friday which I heard was great - Rodrigo Toscano and Carol Lee Sanchez read here at the Poetry Center last Thursday and were very good - the audience (mostly students) clapped wildly after each of Rodrigo's poems -

Laura

↑ Index

584. Hoa Nguyen
Re: working class thread
Mon 29 Sep 1997

>
>Now, to Hoa's point. And I have a question for you Hoa, when you spoke of >the fellow at work saying they needed to diversify, I'm interested in what >exactly about him saying that bothered you.
>

Dodie-- thanks for the long response/illustrative anecdote to my question about how you feel re: identity groupings. Informative and thought provoking.

and to your question, I wish he said that we "need to diversify". Rather he said "We need more minorities" and the statement had everything to do with market positioning (attracting clients) and appearances ("we are a progressive firm: witness our "minorities"). I take issue not only with this, (and its concomittant patronizing "tone") but with the word "minority". As I had signed my post, I do not consider myself a "minority". The word, while trying to describe the economic-sideline status of many people of color, sounds like it is describing population numbers, which confuses people. (Like the white person that told me he was a minority too because "I am a minority on the east side bus to work")

But the trouble is, I think the above is unfair-- I mean, here the employer was trying to acknowledge a lack of diversity-- and suggesting a solution for it, and all I can do is feel strange and wish he would go about it with more sensitivity and panache...

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

585. mark weiss
stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

In some contexts stereotypes serve a different function than those mentioned heretofore. I'm a bit hesitant to bring this up, not because I may be seen as throwing fat on the fire, but because I'm not sure how well it fits into this discussion. But here goes.

I'm a New Yorker. Some years ago I bought a house in a working class neighborhood in Brooklyn. Ethnicity there was a matter of strata. The bedrock level was Irish Catholic, overlain by Italian Catholic and various Slavic and Baltic types, all (except the Irish) no more than two generations from Ellis Island. On top of this were more recent strata from Puerto Rico, some Blacks (give me a better word) and a very few jews (Jews--mostly recent Russian immigrants--lived in large numbers in the next neighborhood, and Hasids beyond them). I was the only jew and the only college-educated middle class type on my block. The different ethnic identities remained intact, although we all lived interspersed among each other. It was only in the teenage group that inter-group dating and marriage had begun, but these didn't seem to create many problems.

I detected no particular group animosities, and I've got a pretty good sniffer for these things, but there was a lot of casual stereotyping, often voiced between neighbors, which seemed to function as a set of hypotheses--"I can expect certain behaviors from x because jews (italians, blacks, etc.) are like that. Oh, he didn't conform to expectations? That's interesting"--on the way to greater intimacy. I'm not suggesting that as the stereotyping towards this or that person softened the sense of difference disappeared--that was always there--we remained, across the differences, exotic to each other, but not dangerous. There were, in fact, real cultural differences. The stereotyping, in fact, helped to keep the peace in this most peaceful neighborhood--it was a way of telling oneself not to be offended by this or that behavior. It was so important that if someone's ethnicity was not immediately apparent one would be asked directly, as I was by the stoop-sitters who monitored the street.

I realized that I had been doing this all my life. Growing up in polyglot and polyethnic New York I had depended on ethnic markers as navigational buoys. Interestingly, my wife, raised in Asheville, N.C., will miss the most obvious markers of difference between white folks--at home there were only three groups, black, and, distinguishable, at the very least, by accent, hillbilly and other white. Absent the distinction of accent all white folks tend to be, for her, the same, and I see her bumping up against ethnic differences that didn't exist in her environment all the time. She's probably, by the way, the least racist, least bigoted person I have ever known, but a few stereotypes would really make her life easier.

↑ Index

586. mark weiss
(no subject)
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Anyone on the list know of a good French bookstore in LA?

↑ Index

587. Maria Damon
Re: stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

---

i find this type of thing fascinating. i am often (as you must be kali) asked about my ethnicity, i think because of the combination of my name (which could be number of different things), the kind of work i do and the fact that i look (and am, according to current definitions) white. being jewish though makes for an interesting twist in the cloth. it's hard to convey to West coasters and midwesterners the reality that in my hometown (boston and environs) it was standard during my childhood and adolescence (and possibly even now) for certain country clubs etc to officially exclude blacks and jews. when explaining why that meant i didn't belong to the institutions that my classmates did, i've been stopped and asked, "you look pretty white to me, so what's the problem?" as if they hadn't heard, or couldn't process, the "and jews" part of what i'd said. it just isn't part of how they divide up the world. the christian majority is not just a majority, it is the only reality (in fact i just learned that the Minnesota Humanities Commission will not fund events that happen on Sunday mornings which i think borders on the unconstitutional). and then jews (and nonjews) want to know what i'm doing w/ a name like maria. iv'e been fascinated and amused by inter-ethnic joshing among people for whom it's also a very charged issue. a former boyfriend, who is ethiopian, doesn't hesitate to characterize people by their ethnicity (Amharas have good cuisine, Gurages are small-time hustlers, etc). in ethiopia, much blood has been shed over which ethnic group is in power, and yet it seems that, as you say, mark, there's also a level at which ethnic teasing can have a benign innoculative effect. i was shocked but also amused the first time he teasingly called me a "sickly little yid." it was impossible to be offended; the shock was because no american i knew would ever ever say anything like that, even in jest, and in fact, when an american christian friend did try to tease me once about jews and money, i got very upset; i didn't realize she was just teasing. (i'm specifying ethnicity and religion here not to show off that i have an american christian friend, but to demonstrate how the fact of her american christianity affected how i heard her). (i'm also not trying to usurp a discussion about people of color by piping up with a disingenuous jewish me-tooism; rather wanting to talk, like mark, about the different ways these work contextually) i've also heard Native Americans from different tribes/nations tease each other, and there are some deep-seated historical tensions between some of the teasers that i've heard. i live in pc land here (the affirmative action commissioner, or something like that, of st paul, was forced to step down a few years ago because there were some ethnic jokes told at a banquet he presided over) so i try to learn and not get too caught up in public controversy (though i did risk my job once by playing lenny bruce's "how to relax your colored friends at parties" in a class on "minority" literature; the subject is so charged that any irony was lost on my students; i'll never do that again).

At 12:49 PM -0700 9/29/97, mark weiss wrote:
>In some contexts stereotypes serve a different function than those >mentioned heretofore. I'm a bit hesitant to bring this up, not because I >may be seen as throwing fat on the fire, but because I'm not sure how well >it fits into this discussion. But here goes.
>
>I'm a New Yorker. Some years ago I bought a house in a working class >neighborhood in Brooklyn. Ethnicity there was a matter of strata. The >bedrock level was Irish Catholic, overlain by Italian Catholic and various >Slavic and Baltic types, all (except the Irish) no more than two >generations from Ellis Island. On top of this were more recent strata from >Puerto Rico, some Blacks (give me a better word) and a very few jews >(Jews--mostly recent Russian immigrants--lived in large numbers in the next >neighborhood, and Hasids beyond them). I was the only jew and the only >college-educated middle class type on my block. The different ethnic >identities remained intact, although we all lived interspersed among each >other. It was only in the teenage group that inter-group dating and >marriage had begun, but these didn't seem to create many problems.
>
>I detected no particular group animosities, and I've got a pretty good >sniffer for these things, but there was a lot of casual stereotyping, often >voiced between neighbors, which seemed to function as a set of >hypotheses--"I can expect certain behaviors from x because jews (italians, >blacks, etc.) are like that. Oh, he didn't conform to expectations? That's >interesting"--on the way to greater intimacy. I'm not suggesting that as >the stereotyping towards this or that person softened the sense of >difference disappeared--that was always there--we remained, across the >differences, exotic to each other, but not dangerous. There were, in fact, >real cultural differences. The stereotyping, in fact, helped to keep the >peace in this most peaceful neighborhood--it was a way of telling oneself >not to be offended by this or that behavior. It was so important that if >someone's ethnicity was not immediately apparent one would be asked >directly, as I was by the stoop-sitters who monitored the street.

>
>I realized that I had been doing this all my life. Growing up in polyglot >and polyethnic New York I had depended on ethnic markers as navigational >buoys. Interestingly, my wife, raised in Asheville, N.C., will miss the >most obvious markers of difference between white folks--at home there were >only three groups, black, and, distinguishable, at the very least, by >accent, hillbilly and other white. Absent the distinction of accent all >white folks tend to be, for her, the same, and I see her bumping up against >ethnic differences that didn't exist in her environment all the time. She's >probably, by the way, the least racist, least bigoted person I have ever >known, but a few stereotypes would really make her life easier.

↑ Index

588. Michael J. Kelleher just buffalo
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Poet(ic)s in Buffalo,

Sunday
October 5
at 2 p.m.

SUSAN HOWE
&
LEE ANN BROWN

will be reading as part of just buffalo's Writer's at Work Series at HALLWALL'S, followed by a book signing and public dinner (dinner location tba at reading).

Susan will be introduced by Alicia Cohen, Lee Ann by Ben Friedlander.

There will be a combined party for Lee Ann Brown and the opening of Anya Lewin's new gallery, Cornershop @ 82 Lafayette (at Dewitt, near Niagra) at 8pm on Saturday, October 4. If you need more info, call me at [redacted]. See you there.

Mike

<HTML>
Poet(ic)s in Buffalo,

<P>will be reading as part of <B><I> just buffalo's</I></B> Writer's at Work Series at HALLWALL'S, followed by a book signing and public dinner (dinner location tba at reading).

<P>Susan will be introduced by Alicia Cohen, Lee Ann by Ben Friedlander.

<P>There will be a combined party for Lee Ann Brown and the opening of Anya Lewin's new gallery, Cornershop @ 82 Lafayette (at Dewitt, near Niagra) at 8pm on Saturday, October 4. If you need more info, call me at [redacted]. See you there.

<P>Mike</HTML>

----------533394C668EB701664F8D231--

↑ Index

589. Joseph S Zitt
Re: stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

On Mon, 29 Sep 1997, Maria Damon wrote:

> being > jewish though makes for an interesting twist in the cloth. it's hard to > convey to West coasters and midwesterners the reality that in my hometown
> (boston and environs) it was standard during my childhood and adolescence
> (and possibly even now) for certain country clubs etc to officially exclude > blacks and jews. when explaining why that meant i didn't belong to the > institutions that my classmates did, i've been stopped and asked, "you look > pretty white to me, so what's the problem?" as if they hadn't heard, or > couldn't process, the "and jews" part of what i'd said. it just isn't part > of how they divide up the world. the christian majority is not just a

I never really grokked the otherness of being Jewish until I moved off the East Coast to Texas. People I met there couldn't understand why I found the months of compulsory Christmas muzak in the malls irritating (at best) -- until I asked them how they'd like being forced to listen continually to Mantovani's Greatest Islamic Chants. On the other hand, that's when I started viewing being Jewish as interesting, which had a big effect on my own studies and writing.

I have friends in Texas who have bemoaned their own lack of ethnicity. When they leave the state, though, they find out that being Texan is its own thing, and (especially those with recognizably Texan accents) have to deal with both being stereotyped by others, and the way that other parts of the country are very different. (Since coming back East, it strikes me how rarely people smile around here!)

↑ Index

590. Aldon Nielsen
Re: stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Some of my best friends are stereotypes, and they're not a bit like that!

↑ Index

591. Kali Tal
Working Class anthologies
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Renny Christopher forwarded me this list of working class anthologies, in case any POETICS member is interested in following up. Renny would also be interested in hearing from poets who want to talk about working class issues. Her email address is: [redacted]

Coles, Nicholas and Peter Oresick. For a Living: The Poetry of Work. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1995.

Dews, C. L. Barney and Carolyn Leste Law, ed. This Fine Place So Far From Home: Voices of Academics from the Working Class. Philadelphia: Temple University Press, 1995.

Oresick, Peter and Nicholas Coles. Working Classics: Poems on the Industrial Life. Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1990.

Wayman, Tom, ed. Paperwork: An Anthology. Madeira Park, BC: Harbour Publishing, 1991.

Zandy, Janet, ed. Calling Home: Working-Class Women's Writings: An Anthology. New Brunswick, NJ: Rutgers University Press, 1990.

Zandy, Janet, ed. Liberating Memory: Our Work and Our Working-Class Consciousness. New Brunswick, NJ: Rutgers University Press, 1995.

Best,
Kali

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

592. Aldon Nielsen
Re: working class red
Mon 29 Sep 1997

there seems to be a real tendency here to conflate the "managing diversity" types, recognizable to all who inhabit large bureaucratic structures, with those who would ask deeply critical questions about the ways that we speak of race and ethnicity -- a _lot_ of work has been done in this area which might shed some much needed light -- since we're exchanging biblios, here are some worth inspecting:

Multiculturalism: A Critical Reader, ed. David Theo Goldberg

Race Consciousness, ed. Judith Fossett and Jeffrey Tucker

Comparative American Identities, ed. Hortense Spiller

The Bounds of Race, ed. Dominick LaCapra

Racial Formations/Critical Transformations, E. San Juan Jr.

Race, Nation, Class, Balibar and Wallerstein

Manifest Manners, Gerald Vizenor

there are many more, natch.,,,, but these contain some particularly fruitful debates --

now, if you really want to see some right wing divide and conquer -- try the Threnstroms" (sp?) new book

↑ Index

593. mark weiss
Re: stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

> i've also heard Native Americans from different tribes/nations tease each other, and there are some deep-seated historical tensions between some of the teasers that i've heard.

Here's a story about that. A black friend from NY was visiting me when I lived in Tucson. It was Martin Luther King day, and this was a few years ago, when Arizona was the last holdout against instituting the holiday. As both Kali and Maria point out, race remains a topic even between close friends of different colors, whether in the form or teasing, challenge, curiosity, or passing interest. My friend asked how come Arizona was so backwards. I acknowledged that there is a fair amount of racism in Arizona (is the Pope Polish?), but I thought that another factor might be that Arizona is (was then, at least) only two percent black, which meant that there was less pressure for the holiday than in other places. So he asked why there wasn't a day consecrated to a native american, say Geronimo. What an idea. I don't think he knew any native americans, but I should have known better. I ran the idea past a Navajo friend, who waxed linguistically colorful for a few minutes. To summarize: "We hate Geronimo. We hate Apaches. They're all horsethieves and murderers, and they don't bathe enough." What if, I suggested, we picked someone from a tribe that doesn't exist in Arizona? Did my friend think a Hiawatha day would fly? He wasn't as amused as I was. Arizona, by the way, has since joined the rest of us in celebrating Martin Luther King Day.

↑ Index

594. Aldon Nielsen

Re: My name . . . Jose Jimenez

Mon 29 Sep 1997

I believe the comedian in question was Bill Dana -- does anybody know if that's right -- which masking adds a few more levels to the ironies

↑ Index

595. Eryque Gleason

Re: working class thread

Mon 29 Sep 1997

Hoa Nguyen wrote:

> But the trouble is, I think the above is unfair-- I mean, here the employer was trying to acknowledge a lack of diversity-- and suggesting a solution for it, and all I can do is feel strange and wish he would go about it with more sensitivity and panache...

hoa, i understand your hesitance. i've had similar reactions to mucky-mucks going on about diversity. as i'm sure most of us have, i've seen an awful lot of these statements around our various institutions, i always get the feeling that the push comes from an interest in being diversified for the sake of gaining points politically, rather than a genuine desire to see any other perspectives (a particular perspective or just others in general) find a place within an institution. and i always read 'diversify' in that context as meaning "we need to hire more people that don't look like me and the white board of directors, but are eager to say the same things we've always said".

eryque

↑ Index

596. Jordan Davis
Re: stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

I guess it's because I'm a straight white guy, but I've always suspected that the tension put _on the left_ about race and sex has been a divide and conquer strategy _by the right_ to divert attention from the real issue which is always money and power -- as long as money and power are God, or whatever god-position-substitute we're flavoring our breakfast with now. Who cares how we talk to eachother about these things? Are we doing so well we can afford to ignore the baiters? and what they're taking from our pockets as we're arguing?

Signed,
October 1929

↑ Index

597. Eryque Gleason
Re: stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

i haunt around occassionally on a couple of bbs's, with the username Jose Jimenez, no one told me that i'd need a handle the first time i logged on, i lifted the name from the comedian's routine (it was reflex, thinking for a different name never occurred to me).

it seems that most of my contemporaries are far too young to remember the comedian (in fact, i only know about him from the space movie "the right stuff", so i spose i should say that they're too young to remember "the right stuff"). during most sessions people will send messages in spanish, then get offended when i try in my best, hacked spanish (two semesters in high school i try to explain) that i don't speak their language. another lot will ask what nationality i am, and get pissed when i say "american". my mother's ancestors came from norway about 150 years ago, my father's from the british isles 100 or so (so you can see that i'm white as hell, saying i'm "american" means something much different to people with different ancestry).

i had one hell of a point when i started. forigive me, my blood sugar's getting low. i'll let you all find the particular relevance

best,
eryque

for those of you that wonder, my mother spells my name 'eric', unless she's patronizing me.

↑ Index

598. Ralph Wessman

Re: The Paradox

Mon 29 Sep 1997

A quick note linking Robert Drake's rhetorical question (... why start another mag that duplicates existing?), kali tal's post "... if I can't talk about poetry in terms of love ... I figure why talk about it at all" and joe amato's response "I would only add that the love of justice has something to do with all of this." I agree with you Robert, to consider establishing a magazine duplicating another seems little more than replication of style and formula. Nothing wrong with that, but there can be so much more.

Once a publishing endeavour / magazine effectively becomes an extension of yourself, opens up avenues of personal expression and development, allows you to give voice to what moves you, fuels the capacity to be more imaginatively responsive, more functionally human - it becomes far removed from replication.

For instance (and perhaps I misinterpret joe's words "love of justice"), a small press publisher is in a position to encourage public comment on a range of topics / issues. My point though is that there's nothing too intuitive about "taking up issues" for the sake of it (doesn't that ... uh oh ... lead to the stultifying / conforming aspects of political correctness?), and there's nothing too intuitive about taking on writing from people / groups / perspectives outside your experience simply because it's pc to do so ... seems to me like a skin graft, part of you but ... is it really? And it's not the emotions attendant in exercising power that are interesting, what's intuitive about that? But if there's enough space and freedom within the publishing activity to allow you to be moved by the ... culturally diverse? ... or where a (subjective) sense of justice is brought into play ... then, integrity ... remains.

Hopefully....

Regards,

Ralph Wessman

↑ Index

599. Kali Tal

Book announcement: Maggie Jaffe's How The West Was One

Mon 29 Sep 1997

In the midst of this lates discussion, a new book has been born.

Maggie Jaffe, _How The West Was One_, with art by Deborah Small. 96pp, perfectbound, 5.5" x 8.5", 4-color cover, lots of beautiful illustrations in the text.

$12, plus $1.50 shipping and handling. ISBN 1-885215-19-3. Order from Viet Nam Generation, Inc., PO Box 13746, Tucson, AZ 85732-3746.

"_How The West Was One_ lifts the veil of history and reveals the corruption, greed, and arrogance that hide behind noble-sounding phrases: Westward Expansion, Manifest Destiny, the Monroe Doctrine, the Good Neighbor Policy, and the New World Order. Maggie Jaffe's poignant poetry transcends propaganda and didacticism and shows the impossibility of separating the political from the personal." --Jon Forrest Glade, _Photographs of the Jungle_

"In _How The West Was One_, Maggie Jaffe, one of the most clear-voiced, clear-sighted poets of our time, exposes the truth behind the media presentations which shape young minds into the bog of uncritical, unemotional, cultural and racially supremacist thinking. This book should be in motel rooms, instead of Gideons Bible, to help citizens see the tangled web they helped to weave." --Belinda Subraman, _The Gulf War: Many Perspectives_

Here's a selection from _How the West Was One_. Unfortunately, the email medium doesn't allow me to reproduce the typography or artwork:

Imperial Breadfruit

Though imported from the South Seas to the West Indies as "cheap food for slaves," Joy of Cooking describes breadfruit as "the most beautiful of tropical trees, with a highly romantic history."

"Why it's breadfruit," said the Bounty's Captain Bligh to Fletcher Christian while circumnavigating the globe,
"for the greater glory of us all."
Christian and Company preferred women to glory:
their breasts like breadfruit.

The Bounty brought the Pox & mirrors to Tahiti:
perhaps the locus for Joy's "romanticisism."
When they mutinied
[floggings, thirst, rancid meat]
"unruly" crews threw

the "sacred saplings" overboard, even if breadfruit prevented scurvy.

Years later, Darwin collected breadfruit from Tahiti
when the Beagle
"touched" its shores.
Though _Origin of the Species_ seemed to justify it, after Brazil he would write:
"Thank God I shall never again visit a slave country."

While Darwin became a bestseller Melville's critique of Empire didn't make him a crowd pleaser.
Known as "the man who lived with cannibals"
for the rest of his literary life.

In _Typee, Or a Peep at Polynesian Life_ he lists exotic breadfruit recipes-- none of them appear in _Joy_:

> Kokoo (k'aku): roasted breadfruit > pounded & mixed with coconut milk.
>
> Amar (ma): a tart cake baked > from fermented breadfruit.
>
> Poee-poee (popoi): a pudding > made by adding water to the former.

Breadfruit (Artocarpus altilis) has dark-green, irregular leaves with globe-like
"seductive-tasting fruit," roasted or steamed with butter, salt & pepper.
Because it's fart-producing, ginger tea taken with breadfruit's
the best remedy.

To guard against devil hunger breadfruit's planted for each new-born Tahitian.

If an immature tree's cut down, it's equivalent to murder.

In the West Indies
breadfruit was believed to cure Drapetomania:
"a disease known by a slave's excessive love of freedom," whose symptoms were feigning sicknes, slowing down, running off, axing Massa
in his alabaster chamber.

---Maggie Jaffe

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

600. Dale Smith
Re: People of Color?
Mon 29 Sep 1997

>Hello, Hoa Nguyen! I understand that use of the term, I just don't like
it >& don't use it myself. I am a person of color, in my estimation, a sort of >nicer color now than in March, when I tend to fade to a greyish white.
>Tanner now. When people, students say, want their heritage acknowledged, I >try to honor that with sensitivity and particularity, so that I don't call >a Passamaquoddy a Micmac. It seems clear to me that many terms used >comfortably by people within a group to refer to themselves can not be used >that way by outsiders. Of course, the language is constantly shifting,
&
>it's our job as poets to push it into better places. I hope I'm not >sounding cantankerous here--I was a bit yesterday, after half a day >chainsawing firewood and half a day reading student papers. (Not an >academic, just a poet/part-timer, trying to get through the winter.) I >think this sort of discussion really helps, by the way, so thanks.

So why don't you provoke something that helps instead of implying that references coined by particular groups other than your own make you uncomfortable?

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

601. Dale Smith

Social Tangles

Mon 29 Sep 1997

There are two elements in these discussions I provoked. One is the need to represent diversity through poetic channels. Another is to satisfy one's own demands, whatever they be, for formal poetic experimentation. These are elements I engage myself with also. My own idealistic dementia desires greater personal freedom for people of all backgrounds, whatever they be. This is a social concern that I am sympathetic to, due to personal experiences, state of mind, and because I prefer greater freedom over its opposite and wish to do unto others as they do unto me, etc. My other concern, however, is artistic, aesthetic. And that aesthetic is not socially based. My understanding of art has been influenced, for better or worse, by the amazingly compact but lucid contributions to this subject by Theodor Adorno. Others, many others, both living and dead, have influenced my thought as well. But Adorno addresses art with a compact clarity I appreciate. Anyway, for me, this kind of influence represents what I think of as a social exchange. And these exchanges happen all the time. They even happen on this list. Discussions of race, gender, sexual preference -- all of this and much more, including the overt power structures of economy under which we all live -- this is all socially necessary to argue, discuss, and debate.

What I disagree with is the now accepted fact that art can contain, or represent in some way, the same sense of social urgency as a conversation, say, or discussions like those on this list. Art's power is not in what it addresses, but in what it is capable of reflecting. Its power is mimetically traced to something in nature, something in us as human beings. I don't mean nature as birds and bees either. I mean deeper elements of predation, hunger, desire, and * thought*, which is actually the body's tool. What I sense as false in poetry is often only an over statement of social urgency, expressed in terms that deny the very being from which such formal gestures originate. Often, poetry represses the humorous, self-conscious impulse from which we articulate our social desires. At times, ‘experiemental’ forms, the ones, perhaps Kevin publishes in Mirage, though he doesn’t necessarily like them, appear inhuman to me because they repel any human sympathy I might be capable of lending the poem. I often always agree with the social cause inherent in such poems. But the inhumane disregard for the reader strikes me as an ingenuine gesture on the poet’s part. Because, as the poet strives to communicate social injustice, he or she alienates those who might otherwise support it. I realize humanism itself is suspect of foul play, and many have provided useful critiques regarding its values. So perhaps this is where my differences lie. Without being a philosopher, I don’t know. I became a poet so that I would not have to make linear sense. I wanted to invigorate and create. Out of a sense of self-defense, however, today I will attempt to balance my more playful impulses.

Smart, socially active poetry is often void of emotional cohesion, or even conflict. The lyric, as it was practiced in this language for centuries, has been replaced with the sentimental suburban barbecue flavors of that bland, relatively unengaged work of poets in the University journals, the New Yorker and Poetry. I’m really not attentive to that poetry in a way that qualifies me to speak of it at greater depth, so I won’t push it. But to me, it’s rather, excuse the term, useless as a means of expanding my own sense of poetics. Another group that is more or less consistent in terms of form would be what I assume many of us practice, though I don’t presume all of us. It has been influenced by a variety of well-meaning and compelling formal methods and theories. Many, but not all, Language Poets have careers of some kind in academia and their influence has spread to new generations of writers, such as my own. I will be reductive and say that their concerns are, as I once heard Harriet Mullin say, with the trinity of Class, Consciousness and Society. Many small journals and books publish poetry that, to my mind, adheres to this social trinity in terms of content. Its formal methodology is as diverse as the poets who practice this kind of poetics. But I would say that writers engaged in this activity do share certain elements in common. At the expense of sounding like Mark Wallace, I’ll enumerate.

1) This Language-influenced poetry lacks a unified subject of expression, ie, the poem’s voice is fragmented, or composed of many voices. It is paratactic and employed as a formal element. I suppose this is due to some mimetic sense of same disunity in the culture at large, and is potentially a valid expression of such.

2) It is very smart and ironic, but it lacks a greater sense of humor and a more subtle intelligence.

3) It is conscious of limits but doesn’t know when to end a poem

4) It distributes a wide range of images throughout a poem, but without an apparent purpose. It is unable to form recognizable patterns and therefore confuses, increases the human distance of which I spoke earlier, and takes the power of interpretation away from the reader by not giving said reader a leg to stand on.

5) It is highly moral, in a tradition that would be in league with Jonathan Edwards if Edwards had known less about good prosody and efficient diction.

6) It treats language as substance, without the necessary human conviction behind anything but the gesture of the experiment.

In addition, a big problem with this type of aesthetic practice is that it is generally accepted by many that one does not have to like a poem to want to print it, read it, or do anything other than make paper airplanes out of it. The social content is well liked, but the poems themselves usually fall flat.

I don't see how any of the above benefits social causes in any way. Whereas, lyric poetry, by recognizing suffering, employing language to heighten sensitivity or sympathy, and appealing to the humane impulses of the reader was able to address similar social issues. But it contained the added depth of emotional suffering or joy, pleasure or pointed barbs aimed to provoke bourgeois pain. An aesthetics charged with the conviction of the self to confront social pressures invigorates and opens readers to the concerns the poet, who is really a cultural antennae, is conscious of and lives with in an awakened state of life. There are many poets writing today who fulfill my demands. There are many who don't. Unlike Hoa, I believe strongly in sides, because they will be drawn for you, or over you, unless you yourself take one and follow it to the bitter end. I don't mean to imply, however, that once you've been awakened to your own foolishness of pursuit it is impossible to switch sides. But you should be conscious of where you are standing, however uncomfortable that place may be.

I guess all I meant by this long-winded diatribe was that sometimes social issues cannot be represented by poetry but they can emanate from poems. Sometimes good poetry has nothing to do with social subjects but society is affected by what a poem offers. This bickering over who you use to represent your magazine is necessary. But it is also equally necessary to know what your magazines do to reflect a diversity of worlds both malignant and benign. Inspire or incite, but don't allow complacency to infect. And judging by what I see, and by my own small habits of life, that is easy to do.

Dale

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

602. Maria Damon
Re: stereotypes
Mon 29 Sep 1997

---

good point jordan, but it's still useful to hash things out; it's not always divide and conquer, sometimes it's (used to be) called "consciousness-raising" tho some might think "consciousness-razing" more accurate...

At 5:45 PM -0500 9/29/97, Jordan Davis wrote:
>I guess it's because I'm a straight white guy, but I've always suspected >that the tension put _on the left_ about race and sex has been a divide and >conquer strategy _by the right_ to divert attention from the real issue >which is always money and power -- as long as money and power are God, or >whatever god-position-substitute we're flavoring our breakfast with now.
>Who cares how we talk to eachother about these things? Are we doing so well >we can afford to ignore the baiters? and what they're taking from our >pockets as we're arguing?
>
>Signed,
>October 1929

↑ Index

603. mark weiss
(no subject)
Mon 29 Sep 1997

It occurred to me, while secretly plotting the overthrow of the San Diego Mass Transit System (it's important to start small), that we're likely to know what a Molotov Cocktail is long after the Soviet Union, or for that matter the man himself, has been forgotten. A peculiar kind of immortality, for short time, anyway. I wonder what other instruments of destruction memorialize once-living humans. Who were Sten and Gattling? Any other items for this list?

↑ Index

604. Daniel Zimmerman
(no subject)
Mon 29 Sep 1997

---

mark weiss wrote:
>
> It occurred to me, while secretly plotting the overthrow of the San Diego > Mass Transit System (it's important to start small), that we're likely to > know what a Molotov Cocktail is long after the Soviet Union, or for that > matter the man himself, has been forgotten. A peculiar kind of immortality, > for short time, anyway. I wonder what other instruments of destruction > memorialize once-living humans. Who were Sten and Gattling?

> Any other items for this list?

Well, Henry Shrapnel (1761-1842) comes to mind: the British artillery officer who pushed ballistics beyond club & concussion. And the Immelman turn in dogfighting [perhaps a vanishing mode of warfare], after its inventor, Max Immelman (1890-1916). More?

Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

605. Hugh Steinberg
(no subject)
Mon 29 Sep 1997

Mark writes:

> It occurred to me, while secretly plotting the overthrow of the San Diego Mass Transit System (it's important to start small), that we're likely to know what a Molotov Cocktail is long after the Soviet Union, or for that matter the man himself, has been forgotten. A peculiar kind of immortality, for short time, anyway. I wonder what other instruments of destruction memorialize once-living humans. Who were Sten and Gattling? Any other items for this list?

Richard Jordan Gatling, 1818-1903. Mainly an agricultural inventor, known for inventing a handcranked precursor to the machine gun. Offered it to the Union army, but they didn't take him up until 1866, after the war.

Sten was actually two people and one country: _S_heppard and _T_urpin and _En_gland.

Hugh Steinberg

↑ Index

606. Joel Felix
(no subject)
Mon 29 Sep 1997

> Mark writes:
>
> It occurred to me, while secretly plotting the overthrow of the San Diego Mass Transit System (it's important to start small), that we're likely to know what a Molotov Cocktail is long after the Soviet Union, or for that matter the man himself, has been forgotten. A peculiar kind of immortality, for short time, anyway. I wonder what other instruments of destruction

> memorialize once-living humans. Who were Sten and Gattling?
> Any other items for this list?
>
> Richard Jordan Gatling, 1818-1903. Mainly an agricultural inventor, known for inventing a handcranked precursor to the machine gun. Offered it to the Union army, but they didn't take him up until 1866, after the war.

The world's not likely to forget Kalashnikov's (sp?) name any time soon. There was an article in the Chicago Tribune recently abt him -- how he was never recompensed for his invention by the soviets. Patents don't carry much weight in non capitalist societies.

Joel Felix

↑ Index

607. Rebecca Weldon

The name and the paradox

Tue 30 Sep 1997

I find this discussion remarkable and think, only in America. I live in a country where the thousand shades of skin all have names. Where the opening conversation between strangers is a frank exploration of social origins and status. Where people speak a different LANGUAGE depending upon with whom they are speaking: royalty, high ranking bureaucrats and socialites, teachers, peers, employees and servants. I won't even broach the issues of foreign daughters-in-law.

The privileged Thai living in the United States must have had the shock of their life when they discovered that they were people of color. Perhaps the American melting pot is distilling a global method living with equality and justice for all; we certainly can use some boiling over here. Hey, I'm raising three children in this mess.

I just want to say that you've come a long way and you're not back at square one because someone wants to be or is IDENTIFIED. Also, I'd like to highlight the benefits of an attitude of moderation, it is helpful when discussion is in danger of becoming conflict. Moderation is an expression of caring, particularly appropriate to this group of passionate and caring people.

↑ Index

608. Kali Tal

Weapons named after people & military slang

Tue 30 Sep 1997

> It occurred to me, while secretly plotting the overthrow of the San Diego Mass Transit System (it's important to start small), that we're likely to > know what a Molotov Cocktail is long after the Soviet Union, or for that matter the man himself, has been forgotten. A peculiar kind of immortality, for short time, anyway. I wonder what other instruments of destruction memorialize once-living humans. Who were Sten and Gattling? Any other items for this list?

Gee, I love this stuff. These refs can be found in _War Slang_, by Paul Dickson.

Garand: M1 rifle, named after John Garand. (WWII)
General Grant: army tank (WWII)
General Lee: army tank (WWII)
Jack Johnson: a big shell, usually the German 17" (WWI)
Sam Browne: military belt named after Gen. Sir Samuel Joseph Browne (WWI)
Sherman necktie: named after Gen. Sherman; twisted iron rail used to disable Southern railroads in the Civil War

In the Immelman category, see:

Balbo: enormous flight formation named after Italian general Italo Balbo-- the one in the last scene of lots of WWII flicks Lufberry circle and Lufberry show, maneuvers attributed to American ace Raoul Lufberry (WWI)

Weapons named after women:

Aunt Jemima: explosive mixed with flour (WWII)
Betsy the Sniper: nickname for 155mm American cannon (WWI)
Big Bertha: German siege gun (WWI), named after Bertha Antoinette Krupp (yes, of those Krupps) von Bohlen und Halbach. The guns fired "Bertha pills." Bertha also came in "little" form, as a "105".
black Maria: high explosive shell allegedly named after an African American boarding house owner in Boston (WWI) bouncing Betty: the everpopular antipersonnel mine (Vietnam) coughing Clara: heavy artillery gun (WWII) Dolly Parton: version of Soviet T-72 tank used by Iraqis. Had a rounded turret that reminded soldiers of the singer... (Gulf War) hissing Jenny: large shell (WWI) Maggie: magnetic mine (WWII)
peewee Matilda: small tank (WWII)
Rosalie: slang for bayonet (WWI)

Howitzers came in "grandma" and "mother" sizes (WWI)

There's something very compelling and immediate about military slang. It's often stripped directly from pop culture. John Wayne was the operational verb for heroic stupidity in the Viet Nam war; it shifted to Rambo in the Gulf. Some soldiers in VN called the country (and the war) The Brown Disneyland or Six Flags Over Nothing. Soldiers in the Gulf (especially the navy) started calling it Wallyworld. The multi- level analysis implicit in claiming that a soldier missing-in-action has "gone Elvis" is hard to match, equalled only by that astonishing new term to describe the media war: Schwarzkrieg.

Kali

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

609. Tom Orange
new Essex
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Essex -- (1/1, Spring 1997; 1/2, Summer/Fall 1997) Tailspin Press, 42 Essex Street, Buffalo NY, 14213. Subscriptions $20.00 (4 issues). Edited by Scott Pound and William R. Howe.

Meanwhile Essex is forging ahead on the verbovisual front. Again, variety: of media--laserprint rubberstamp xeroxographic-- and materials--mailinglabels foundtext snips imagetexts morphs impactedscrawl braincandy. And no surer was I that I had Essex 1/1 in a nutshell than Peter comes back from the small book fair in Toronto and brings over a copy of Essex 1/2 hot off the presses. Absent is the greywoven cardstock that has typecast some of the work coming out of Tailspin: 1/2 comes in a 9x12 manila clasp envelope, 18 unbound sheets! 1/2 is a Canadian issue, features work by Tara Azzopardi, Stephen Cain, Jeff Derksen, Deanna Ferguson, Peter Jaeger, Karl Jirgens, Steve McCaffery, Karen Mac Cormack, Lisa Robertson, and the editors. 1/1 has Christian B”k, Rose Withers, John M. Bennet, cris cheek, Michael Basinski, Wendy Kramer, Owen F. Smith, Darren Wersshler- Henry, and the editors. Pick these up, if only for the really cool tip-ins!

t.

↑ Index

610. Eliza McGrand
Re: People of Color?
Tue 30 Sep 1997

> So why don't you provoke something that helps instead of implying that references coined by particular groups other than your own make you uncomfortable

... huh? whoa mike/dales.... a) why is it you assume one is obligated to provoke? that provoking turns up helpful things? on this list, "provoking," especially deliberate provoking, has been turning up a lot of discomfort and defensiveness that more often than not have clouded issues, so if it is up to me, i'd just as soon someone not take out their virtual acetylene torch and try and "provoke" up a storm; b) since when is the only constructive way to work out various thoughts to "provoke" anyway? what happened to discuss, tease out opposing realities, dissect into multiple facets and look for prevalance, ask for new ways to solve for x, etc? c) doesn't seem to me that there was anything about saying references coined by other groups than speaker's own make speaker uncomfortable. what was said was, and rightfully so, that inside of a group referents may be used which are offensive when used by one outside of group. two examples spring to mind - i've heard various black people use the word "nigger" in reference to self/each other, i.e. "i am one bad nigger" but for non-black person to use word would be grossly offensive; as woman, i might often jokingly refer to "the girls" as sort of warm and age-inclusive and self-teasing referent, or as sly referent to gay component, as in "she's cute -- think she's one of us girls?". but when a male refers to women as girls, well, i'm not through the ceiling about it most of the time but it can be kind of offensive. THAT is what post was about, not as you imply some effort to impose referents coined only by speaker's group, whatever you parse that to be.

finally, i see no opposition between looking for interesting responses and pointing out one interesting facet -- post was in fact another interesting facet on original thread -- insider/outsider viewpoint added to efforts to diversify added to racial/gender mix of mags.

maybe since poster put some effort into posting, might be better to respect poster's own words and not try and spin them into something else, eh? e

↑ Index

611. Eliza McGrand
Re: stereotypes
Tue 30 Sep 1997

look, if i want to be a stereotype, i get to be one -- i gotta be me, ya know? e

↑ Index

612. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

---

i think it possible to articulate provocative ideas and unpopular positions without the kind of personal attack the below instanciates. plenty of folks disagree with each other here, but accusing others of laziness (rusty gears in your head) and imputing motives to them is indecorous. your post on adorno was insightful and interesting but your attack on spt police uncalled for (the idea of SPT being in a policing role was so incongruous to me that i thought you must mean something else by SPT that i didn't know about). actually, now that i think about it, i did say something about the avant garde "policing its borders" a few months ago and got some defensive but on the whole thoughtful responses that made me realize my wording had been infelicitous.

At 9:41 AM 9/30/97, Dale Smith wrote:
>Ultimately, Dodie, what you sense as bad manners on my part is only my >unwillingness to post the usual dull, obvious, and self-serving posts >that frequent this list. You are against thought, as far as I can see, >by reducing it, continually, to a high-minded form of self-righteousness >and manners. The thing you don't get, is that we can have differing >opinions without it being a bad form of etiquette.
>
>Ultimately, I think you respond out of fear and self defensiveness. I >think what you dislike in my posts is that what you read begins to turn >the rusty gears of pressure in your head, and that scares you. So, to >stop that fear you challenge with problems of diversity or anything else >that is convenient. You are not consistent with your charges on this >list, and I am not the only one whom you continually slander. I mean, >you do a pretty good job of covering your ass. But we can read between >the lines.
>
>And I will speak my mind. If I am unfair, or out of line, and it's >pointed out to me, I usually acknowledge it. And, as far as policing >goes, my statement is completely accurate in terms of my experience with >you on this list.
>
>It was wrong of me, in the context of my post the other day, to ask you >for grace, of any kind. But, maybe it's a vestige of my bourgeious >background. I find that grace gives others the opportunity to delay >personal conflict. I lack this often myself. But much of what we say, >as poets, is charged with the moment of articulation, and is >unavoidable. This medium itself distorts us, pushes us to appear a bit >more binomial that we would be in each other's presence. I think that >tolerance of ideas is necessary. No doubt I sometimes come on strong, >and will continue to do so. And you can have all kinds of problems with >that. But I think it would benefit discussion on this list if arguments >were based less on personal biases and founded more upon intelligent >opposition or counter positions to those we disagree with.

>
>Yours, a little winded,
>Dale
>
>
>
>
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

613. Tenney Nathanson

Re: just buffalo

Tue 30 Sep 1997

Hi Mike.

glad to see (where) you landed.

best,

Tenney Nathanson

At 05:29 PM 9/29/97 -0400, you wrote:
>--------------533394C668EB701664F8D231
>Content-Type: text/plain; charset=us-ascii >Content-Transfer-Encoding: 7bit
>
>Poet(ic)s in Buffalo,
> Sunday
> October 5
> at 2 p.m.
>
> SUSAN HOWE
> &

> LEE ANN BROWN
>
>
>will be reading as part of just buffalo's Writer's at Work Series at >HALLWALL'S, followed by a book signing and public dinner (dinner >location tba at reading).
>
>Susan will be introduced by Alicia Cohen, Lee Ann by Ben Friedlander.
>
>There will be a combined party for Lee Ann Brown and the opening of Anya >Lewin's new gallery, Cornershop @ 82 Lafayette (at Dewitt, near Niagra) >at 8pm on Saturday, October 4. If you need more info, call me at >[redacted]. See you there.
>
>Mike
>

---

tenney nathanson

[redacted]

http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso/

↑ Index

614. Rachel Levitsky
Re: People of Color
Tue 30 Sep 1997

I'm currently a student at Naropa's writing program which has had it's own somewhat pathetic and not-so pathetic struggles and forrays into the issue of diversification. Being the only out and politically identified lesbian here has been a lesson in aloneness but no one ever said it'd be different. In my application I wrote that I understood that coming from a radical lesbian feminist tradition to the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics to be an act of crossover. But I am interested in these acts, how someone who is so informed by (my) social positioning reconciles aestetic choices and community. Well, the erotic poetry lesbians were never going to publish me anyway.

Anyway here's an interesting anecdote and you'll excuse all my labeling which I'll call flavoring for the interest of the story and the list thread. Josepha Conrad (an Austrian/German immigrant) and I (what did Jane Bowles use to call herself? crippy dyke kike?--I'm not crippy yet) organized a group independent study of the work and life of Gertrude Stein as there had been and were to be no intensives of women in the entire two years+ (though yes Blake, Pound, Joyce) that we would be students here (and because we were interested). There are two others in the group--interestingly enough, a young gay native american man, and a south asian woman, but who's looking. Last week we were considering our week's reading and came upon "Melanctha," the second portrait of _Three Lives_. A few of us had read a bit of it and/or heard other things of Stein's somewhat off views on american blacks and were surprised to read Richard Wright's comments on Melanctha "The style was so insitent and original and sang so quaintly that I took the book home. As I read it my ears were opened for the first time to the magic of the spoken word . I began to hear the speech of my grandmother, who spoke a deep, pure Negro dialect and with whom I had lived for many years." Ish thought Wright must have been blackmailed or something and the rest of us went about defending it all. Yet since the class and having read the piece, I am a bit confounded. Stein's stereotyping and blatent prejudices "Rose Johnson was a real black, tall, well built, sullen, stupid, childlike, good looking negress" seem to be a mix of her usual subverting and some truly skewed and limited observations. Do listlings have more information about it? Is there anywhere where Stein herself describes what she is trying to do in Melanctha? Critiques? Controversies over Wright's support?

best,

Rachel Levitsky

↑ Index

615. lee ann brown

Hannah Weiner

Tue 30 Sep 1997

Dear List, Here is the wonderful piece Hannah Weiner wrote for her Tender Buttons book, silent teachers remembered sequel, published in 1994, in honor of her 65th birthday (November 4th)...The book is available through me or through Small Press Distribution: [redacted].

HANNAH WEINER SILENT TEACHER

hannah weiner was born to it in providence ri in 1928 and graduated from radcliffe college 1950 magna cum laude she then worked for three publishing houses got fired from all of them once for being too intellectual once for associating with aliens and once for being caught not slapping her bosses face she then turned to retailing and was an assistant buyer for fat ladies dresses in bloomingdales basement she married a psychiatrist freudian and divorced him four years later then she exaggerated but not lied herself into a job

designing lingerie and turned down her second request for marriage by this time she was making the rounds of galleries and parties in the early sixties and began to write poetry in 1963 both writing and designing were childhood ambitions she got a free course at the new school and found she couldnt write new york school poetry in fact she couldnt write her own words at all only the magritte poems written in and the fast are in her own words happily she discovered the international code of signals and found she could write about almost anything by using the code books these became rather wild performances followed by other performances like street works 1-7 and the fashion show poetry event she was very well reviewed because the art critic of the village voice was one of her partners she thus met the musicians performers pop artisits lesbians and poets of that time all this glory ended in 1970 when she became extremely psychic and hiding out in a cheap apartment wrote about nothing else in almost 100 notebooks see the fast the words began to appear in 1972 and led to the clairvoyant journal a three voice performance poetry book about learning explaining instructions and the counter voice years passed the language group moved in and so did the indians she still remembers meeting chawho at a party saying youre getting pretty old dont you think you should publish she did sixteen and spoke begin to introduce the teaching now she is reaching her ultimate achievement learned first at her grandmother's knee TEACHING SILENT she has dragged several poets into this with her gosh ma shes a real female tarpsichordist

↑ Index

616. Layne Russell

Re: People of Color

Tue 30 Sep 1997

Schuchat Simon wrote:
>
> Gertrude Stein lived a long time and wrote many different works that each > were the works that the time the works were written were the person that > she was for that part of the time. When she wrote Melanctha did she know > she was gay or did she know she was herself. She might have thought she > was a scientist like William James was a scientist who explored and > thought instead of experimented. Was she already free of her brother or > was she still not trapped by her brother. Before the flowers of > friendship faded friendship faded, is that a different person from Mrs > Reynolds on one side or Wars I Have Known on another side. Gertrude > Stein must have had something to do with Alfred North Whitehead besides > being one of the three geniuses genii I should say the third side of the > triangle was Picasso if I am remembering and I am remembering I think it > was as it was. To say stop I only carried my father this far is to no > longer worry about identity except as a problem. What Whitehead said was > that I know where I am when I am lost but not where the other places > are. Transfer this to identity and what is it it is that I know who I am > but not who the others are. This is separate from transformation that is > the being a little boy and then being a man. Is it the same as being I > because of a little dog? I think it is very suitable. Was it > satisfactory it was satisfactory. It was thinking as thought was going > into itself without being what some other angle would see the thought > being. Everybody understood who listened but the patient ones were not > all of them. Does your little dog know you are a person of color?

Schuchat,

I thoroughly enjoyed this! Thanks for the liveliness shared here....

Layne

http://www.sonic.net/layne
"A Quiet Place" -- Poetry
http://www.sonic.net/layne/calendar.html
"Poets Leave Their Prints" -- Poetry Calendar

↑ Index

617. Maria Damon
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

---

i appreciate this thorough, thoughtful post. i'm not sure i'm all the way with adorno here, much as i admire him. he also was writing in a context of lyric being just about dead in germany, in a woeful state indeed; and also much "content-based" poetry/art was associated either with stalinism or with fascism, which had set itself against the "decadent, jewish" modernism. the context here is different.

At 6:01 PM -0700 9/29/97, Dale Smith wrote:
>There are two elements in these discussions I provoked. One is the need >to represent diversity through poetic channels. Another is to satisfy >oneís own demands, whatever they be, for formal poetic experimentation.
>These are elements I engage myself with also. My own idealistic >dementia desires greater personal freedom for people of all backgrounds, >whatever they be. This is a social concern that I am sympathetic to, >due to personal experiences, state of mind, and because I prefer greater >freedom over its opposite and wish to do unto others as they do unto me, >etc. My other concern, however, is artistic, aesthetic. And that >aesthetic is not socially based. My understanding of art has been >influenced, for better or worse, by the amazingly compact but lucid >contributions to this subject by Theodor Adorno. Others, many others, >both living and dead, have influenced my thought as well. But Adorno >addresses art with a compact clarity I appreciate. Anyway, for me, this >kind of influence represents what I think of as a social exchange. And >these exchanges happen all the time. They even happen on this list.

>Discussions of race, gender, sexual preference -- all of this and much >more, including the overt power structures of economy under which we all >live -- this is all socially necessary to argue, discuss, and debate.
>
>What I disagree with is the now accepted fact that art can contain, or >represent in some way, the same sense of social urgency as a >conversation, say, or discussions like those on this list. Artís power >is not in what it addresses, but in what it is capable of reflecting.
>Its power is mimetically traced to something in nature, something in us >as human beings. I donít mean nature as birds and bees either. I mean >deeper elements of predation, hunger, desire, and * thought*, which is >actually the bodyís tool. What I sense as false in poetry is often only >an over statement of social urgency, expressed in terms that deny the >very being from which such formal gestures originate. Often, poetry >represses the humorous, self-conscious impulse from which we articulate >our social desires. At times, ëexperiementalí forms, the ones, perhaps >Kevin publishes in Mirage, though he doesnít necessarily like them, >appear inhuman to me because they repel any human sympathy I might be >capable of lending the poem. I often always agree with the social cause >inherent in such poems. But the inhumane disregard for the reader >strikes me as an ingenuine gesture on the poetís part. Because, as the >poet strives to communicate social injustice, he or she alienates those >who might otherwise support it. I realize humanism itself is suspect of >foul play, and many have provided useful critiques regarding its values.
>So perhaps this is where my differences lie. Without being a >philosopher, I donít know. I became a poet so that I would not have to >make linear sense. I wanted to invigorate and create. Out of a sense >of self-defense, however, today I will attempt to balance my more >playful impulses.
>
>Smart, socially active poetry is often void of emotional cohesion, or >even conflict. The lyric, as it was practiced in this language for >centuries, has been replaced with the sentimental suburban barbecue >flavors of that bland, relatively unengaged work of poets in the >University journals, the New Yorker and Poetry. Iím really not >attentive to that poetry in a way that qualifies me to speak of it at >greater depth, so I wonít push it. But to me, itís rather, excuse the >term, useless as a means of expanding my own sense of poetics.

>Another group that is more or less consistent in terms of form would be >what I assume many of us practice, though I donít presume all of us. It >has been influenced by a variety of well-meaning and compelling formal >methods and theories. Many, but not all, Language Poets have careers of >some kind in academia and their influence has spread to new generations >of writers, such as my own. I will be reductive and say that their >concerns are, as I once heard Harriet Mullin say, with the trinity of >Class, Consciousness and Society. Many small journals and books publish >poetry that, to my mind, adheres to this social trinity in terms of >content. Its formal methodology is as diverse as the poets who practice >this kind of poetics. But I would say that writers engaged in this >activity do share certain elements in common. At the expense of >sounding like Mark Wallace, Iíll enumerate.
>
>1) This Language-influenced poetry lacks a unified subject of >expression, ie, the poemís voice is fragmented, or composed of many >voices. It is paratactic and employed as a formal element. I suppose >this is due to some mimetic sense of same disunity in the culture at >large, and is potentially a valid expression of such.
>
>2) It is very smart and ironic, but it lacks a greater sense of humor >and a more subtle intelligence.
>
>3) It is conscious of limits but doesnít know when to end a poem
>
>4) It distributes a wide range of images throughout a poem, but without >an apparent purpose. It is unable to form recognizable patterns and >therefore confuses, increases the human distance of which I spoke >earlier, and takes the power of interpretation away from the reader by >not giving said reader a leg to stand on.
>
>5) It is highly moral, in a tradition that would be in league with >Jonathan Edwards if Edwards had known less about good prosody and >efficient diction.
>
>6) It treats language as substance, without the necessary human >conviction behind anything but the gesture of the experiment.
>
>In addition, a big problem with this type of aesthetic practice is that >it is generally accepted by many that one does not have to like a poem >to want to print it, read it, or do anything other than make paper >airplanes out of it. The social content is well liked, but the poems >themselves usually fall flat.

>
>I donít see how any of the above benefits social causes in any way.
>Whereas, lyric poetry, by recognizing suffering, employing language to >heighten sensitivity or sympathy, and appealing to the humane impulses >of the reader was able to address similar social issues. But it >contained the added depth of emotional suffering or joy, pleasure or >pointed barbs aimed to provoke bourgeois pain. An aesthetics charged >with the conviction of the self to confront social pressures invigorates >and opens readers to the concerns the poet, who is really a cultural >antennae, is conscious of and lives with in an awakened state of life.
>There are many poets writing today who fulfill my demands. There are >many who donít. Unlike Hoa, I believe strongly in sides, because they >will be drawn for you, or over you, unless you yourself take one and >follow it to the bitter end. I donít mean to imply, however, that once >youíve been awakened to your own foolishness of pursuit it is impossible >to switch sides. But you should be conscious of where you are standing, >however uncomfortable that place may be.
>
>I guess all I meant by this long-winded diatribe was that sometimes >social issues cannot be represented by poetry but they can emanate from >poems. Sometimes good poetry has nothing to do with social subjects but >society is affected by what a poem offers. This bickering over who you >use to represent your magazine is necessary. But it is also equally >necessary to know what your magazines do to reflect a diversity of >worlds both malignant and benign. Inspire or incite, but donít allow >complacency to infect. And judging by what I see, and by my own small >habits of life, that is easy to do.
>
>Dale
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

618. Schuchat Simon
Re: People of Color
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Gertrude Stein lived a long time and wrote many different works that each were the works that the time the works were written were the person that she was for that part of the time. When she wrote Melanctha did she know she was gay or did she know she was herself. She might have thought she was a scientist like William James was a scientist who explored and thought instead of experimented. Was she already free of her brother or was she still not trapped by her brother. Before the flowers of friendship faded friendship faded, is that a different person from Mrs Reynolds on one side or Wars I Have Known on another side. Gertrude Stein must have had something to do with Alfred North Whitehead besides being one of the three geniuses genii I should say the third side of the triangle was Picasso if I am remembering and I am remembering I think it was as it was. To say stop I only carried my father this far is to no longer worry about identity except as a problem. What Whitehead said was that I know where I am when I am lost but not where the other places are. Transfer this to identity and what is it it is that I know who I am but not who the others are. This is separate from transformation that is the being a little boy and then being a man. Is it the same as being I because of a little dog? I think it is very suitable. Was it satisfactory it was satisfactory. It was thinking as thought was going into itself without being what some other angle would see the thought being. Everybody understood who listened but the patient ones were not all of them. Does your little dog know you are a person of color?

↑ Index

619. Bob Grotjohn
Re: People of Color
Tue 30 Sep 1997

On Wright and Stein and "Rose Johnson was a real black, tall, well built, sullen, stupid, childlike, good looking negress." This would probably not have disturbed Wright much, at least if "Long Black Song" is any indication of Wright's attitude toward black women. The description of Rose seems almost like a model for the Sarah whom Wright creates in his story--I suspect that Rose is such a model and Stein an influence on Wright's style in "Long Black Song"--someone on the list might know that more certainly than I do. I don't think Sarah even gets a name until almost half way through the story--she's just "She." Stein's depiction of Rose may have been one of the things that attracted Wright, not something to which he would have objected. -- Bob Grotjohn

↑ Index

620. dbkk
Re: People of Color
Tue 30 Sep 1997

At 3:30 AM -0400 9/30/97, Rachel Levitsky wrote:

> Ish thought Wright must have been blackmailed or something and the rest of us went about defending it all. Yet since the class and having read the piece, I am a bit confounded. Stein's stereotyping and blatent prejudices "Rose Johnson was a real black, tall, well built, sullen, stupid, childlike, good looking negress" seem to be a mix of her usual subverting and some truly skewed and limited observations.
> Do listlings have more information about it? Is there anywhere where Stein herself describes what she is trying to do in Melanctha? Critiques? Controversies over Wright's support?

Dear Rachel, if I were you I would try to get a copy of Aldon Nielsen's book "Reading Race" . . . a marvelous book which includes a chapter, or I guess part of a chapter, on just this controversy. He explores the historical background behind various black writers' endorsement of "Melanctha" (and other works by Gertrude Stein) and he can hardly write a sentence which isn't interesting all by itself. Beyond Stein he goes through the whole catalogue of US modernists and shows, one by one, how every one of them (OK a few exceptions) lets us down, or lets themselves down, on racial issues. Some amazing surprising stuff there. If you cannot find it at Naropa library or local library or bookstore let me know I will send you section on "Melanctha." Nielsen is actually on the Poetics list and if he were a gentleman, and not such a shrinking violet, he would send you the address of the publisher, thus increasing his readership base, possibly his royalties too, tho' that's far fetched. In any case I know you, Rachel, will thoroughly enjoy this book.

↑ Index

621. William Marsh
Re: People of Color
Tue 30 Sep 1997

At 03:30 AM 9/30/97 -0400, Rachel Levitsky wrote:

> Anyway here's an interesting anecdote and you'll excuse all my labeling which I'll call flavoring for the interest of the story and the list thread.
> Josepha Conrad (an Austrian/German immigrant) and I (what did Jane Bowles use to call herself? crippy dyke kike?--I'm not crippy yet) organized a group independent study of the work and life of Gertrude Stein as there had been and were to be no intensives of women in the entire two years+ (though yes Blake, Pound, Joyce) that we would be students here (and because we were interested). There are two others in the group--interestingly enough, a young gay native american man, and a south asian woman, but who's looking.

> Last week we were considering our week's reading and came upon "Melanctha," the second portrait of _Three Lives_. A few of us had read a bit of it and/or heard other things of Stein's somewhat off views on american blacks and were surprised to read Richard Wright's comments on Melanctha "The style was so insitent and original and sang so quaintly that I took the book home. As I read it my ears were opened for the first time to the magic of the spoken word . I began to hear the speech of my grandmother, who spoke a deep, pure Negro dialect and with whom I had lived for many years."
>
> Ish thought Wright must have been blackmailed or something and the rest of us went about defending it all. Yet since the class and having read the piece, I am a bit confounded. Stein's stereotyping and blatent prejudices "Rose Johnson was a real black, tall, well built, sullen, stupid, childlike, good looking negress" seem to be a mix of her usual subverting and some truly skewed and limited observations.
>
> Do listlings have more information about it? Is there anywhere where Stein herself describes what she is trying to do in Melanctha? Critiques? Controversies over Wright's support?

Rachel:

Coincidentally, a reading group i participate in just finished discussing Stein's _Three Lives_ and had similar questions about her point-of-view assumptions in Melanctha. The Richard Wright quote--do you know what it comes from? where i'd find it? Is there more to it?

bill marsh

↑ Index

622. Dale Smith
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Thanks for the contextual note Maria. The particular book of Adorno's I return to again and again, especially when under fire from the SPT Thought Police, is Aesthetic Theory, written, as I'm sure you know, late in the '60's before just before his death. Many of the issues Adorno addresses are, I believe, culturally relevant. He lived, after all, for many years in this country, and was responding to changing pressures of an increasingly, as he saw it, administered society both here and in western Europe. His critique is often aimed at the middle ground, between fascists and marxists both, in an attempt to confront the culture that grew out of the great destruction of WWII. That culture he responded to is also similar to our own in terms of comodification, administration of culture and art, and the continued limitation of the individual as a vehicle for expression in the face of opposition. So, I guess I must argue that Adorno's aesthetic context is similar to our own in more ways than, perhaps, you would allow. Not to deny the other influences you mentioned. Because I'm sure those were very real pressures. But I think, especially in the later work, he is responding to issues very similar to what we face today.

>i appreciate this thorough, thoughtful post. i'm not sure i'm all the way >with adorno here, much as i admire him. he also was writing in a context >of lyric being just about dead in germany, in a woeful state indeed; and >also much "content-based" poetry/art was associated either with stalinism >or with fascism, which had set itself against the "decadent, jewish" >modernism. the context here is different.
>
>

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

623. Rachel Levitsky
Re: People of Color?
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Thanks all for your great responses to the Stein question, the Nielson book sounds good, I'll check and get back whether I can find it. But to a more pressing matter.

Hoa Nguyen wrote:
>
> I would have responded to Mr. Pollet-- front channel-- but he also sent > me a message saying basically the same thing back channel so I responded > there.
>
> I am suprised no one else questioned what I thought was a rather > provacative statement on Mr. Pollet's part. In my last communication > with him, I suggested that maybe we take up this thread front channel > and I am still uncertain whether there is general interest...
>
> "the usual dull, obvious, and self-serving post"--
>
> Hoa
> ----------

Hoa--

I'm found the post rather confusing because Mr. Pollet did not say what his identity actually was. I didn't assume he was white, didn't assume he'd be that silly and mean. It sort of reminds me of a conversation about diversity in which everyone whines that there is too much labeling happening, too much naming--assuming that naming things is simplifying rather than complexifying. Who said so? Just like Stein was always changing, as reflected in Schuchat Simon's post, so are the names and their meanings. We are constantly exploring what our very own names mean. What does being Rachel Levitsky mean anyway? Creeley said this summer that our names are not our own. And yet they are useful. I have a new word for labeling. Poetry.
>
> Sylvester P. wrote:
>
> Hello, Hoa Nguyen! I understand that use of the term, I just don't like
> it > & don't use it myself. I am a person of color, in my estimation, a sort > of > nicer color now than in March, when I tend to fade to a greyish white.
> Tanner now. When people, students say, want their heritage acknowledged,
> I > try to honor that with sensitivity and particularity, so that I don't > call
> a Passamaquoddy a Micmac. It seems clear to me that many terms used > comfortably by people within a group to refer to themselves can not be > used
> that way by outsiders. Of course, the language is constantly shifting, & > it's our job as poets to push it into better places. I hope I'm not > sounding cantankerous here--I was a bit yesterday, after half a day
> chainsawing firewood and half a day reading student papers. (Not an > academic, just a poet/part-timer, trying to get through the winter.) I > think this sort of discussion really helps, by the way, so thanks.
>
> Dale S.>
> >>So why don't you provoke something that helps instead of implying that > >>references coined by particular groups other than your own make you > >>uncomfortable
> >
>
> Elizabeth M.:
>
> >... huh? whoa mike/dales.... a) why is it you assume one is obligated

> to > >provoke? that provoking turns up helpful things? on this list,
> "provoking,"
> >especially deliberate provoking, has been turning up a lot of > discomfort and > >defensiveness that more often than not have clouded issues, so if it is > up to > >me, i'd just as soon someone not take out their virtual acetylene torch
> and > >try and "provoke" up a storm; b) since when is the only constructive > way to > >work out various thoughts to "provoke" anyway? what happened to > discuss, tease > >out opposing realities, dissect into multiple facets and look for > prevalance,
> >ask for new ways to solve for x, etc? c) doesn't seem to me that there > >was anything about saying references coined by other groups than > speaker's > >own make speaker uncomfortable. what was said was, and rightfully so,
> that > >inside of a group referents may be used which are offensive when used > by one > >outside of group. two examples spring to mind - i've heard various > black > >people use the word "nigger" in reference to self/each other, i.e. "i > am one > >bad nigger" but for non-black person to use word would be grossly > offensive;
> >as woman, i might often jokingly refer to "the girls" as sort of warm
> and > >age-inclusive and self-teasing referent, or as sly referent to gay > component,
> >as in "she's cute -- think she's one of us girls?". but when a male > refers > >to women as girls, well, i'm not through the ceiling about it most of > the > >time but it can be kind of offensive. THAT is what post was about, not > >as you imply some effort to impose referents coined only by speaker's > group,
> >whatever you parse that to be.
> >
> >finally, i see no opposition between looking for interesting responses

> and > >pointing out one interesting facet -- post was in fact another > interesting > >facet on original thread -- insider/outsider viewpoint added to efforts
> to > >diversify added to racial/gender mix of mags.
> >
> >maybe since poster put some effort into posting, might be better to > respect
> >poster's own words and not try and spin them into something else, eh?
> >e
> >
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

624. dbkk
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

At 8:38 AM -0700 9/30/97, Dale Smith wrote:
>Thanks for the contextual note Maria. The particular book of Adornoís I >return to again and again, especially when under fire from the SPT >Thought Police, is Aesthetic Theory,

Dale this is a thoroughly unnecessary comment, a dehumanization of myself, and a slam on an institution that is working very hard to keep voices such as yours alive in in the Bay Area. Small Press Traffic has done nothing to you but to support you as a writer. To reduce me to an institution is appallingly bad manners, at best.

Dodie

↑ Index

625. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: People of Color
Tue 30 Sep 1997

---

simply to second (and third) the suggestion to check out listmember aldon lynn nielsen's _reading race_... for me, it was a real eye-opener...

best,

joe

↑ Index

626. dbkk
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

At 6:01 PM -0700 9/29/97, Dale Smith wrote:
At times, ëexperiementalí forms, the ones, perhaps >Kevin publishes in Mirage, though he doesnít necessarily like them, >appear inhuman to me because they repel any human sympathy I might be >capable of lending the poem.

First of all, I, Dodie, am the co-editor of Mirage. Secondly, neither Kevin nor I have ever published work we didn't like. There's lots of different reasons to like a work--a spirit of fun, a zest, good sex, political upheaval, undefinable moments of beauty, as well as formal innovation. Mirage is committed to experimental forms--it just has a broad definition of "experimental."

Dodie

↑ Index

627. simon
Re: People of Color
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Just a side note that, although I have no idea whether Nielson is a shrinking violet, i can say from some email correspondence, he is a gentleman, and the book's quite uncomfortably fine as well.

beth simon

↑ Index

628. Dale Smith
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Ultimately, Dodie, what you sense as bad manners on my part is only my unwillingness to post the usual dull, obvious, and self-serving posts that frequent this list. You are against thought, as far as I can see, by reducing it, continually, to a high-minded form of self-righteousness and manners. The thing you don't get, is that we can have differing opinions without it being a bad form of etiquette.

Ultimately, I think you respond out of fear and self defensiveness. I think what you dislike in my posts is that what you read begins to turn the rusty gears of pressure in your head, and that scares you. So, to stop that fear you challenge with problems of diversity or anything else that is convenient. You are not consistent with your charges on this list, and I am not the only one whom you continually slander. I mean, you do a pretty good job of covering your ass. But we can read between the lines.

And I will speak my mind. If I am unfair, or out of line, and it's pointed out to me, I usually acknowledge it. And, as far as policing goes, my statement is completely accurate in terms of my experience with you on this list.

It was wrong of me, in the context of my post the other day, to ask you for grace, of any kind. But, maybe it's a vestige of my bourgeious background. I find that grace gives others the opportunity to delay personal conflict. I lack this often myself. But much of what we say, as poets, is charged with the moment of articulation, and is unavoidable. This medium itself distorts us, pushes us to appear a bit more binomial that we would be in each other's presence. I think that tolerance of ideas is necessary. No doubt I sometimes come on strong, and will continue to do so. And you can have all kinds of problems with that. But I think it would benefit discussion on this list if arguments were based less on personal biases and founded more upon intelligent opposition or counter positions to those we disagree with.

Yours, a little winded,
Dale

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

629. Dale Smith
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Well, Kevin, on Friday, asked why you only had to publish what you like? I think he then went on to say that he publishes things he doesn't like quite often. Not wanting to speak for you, co-editor of Mirage, Dodie Bellamy, I refrained from associating you with that editorial practice because I had the feeling you publish based on what you convey below. I also was reluctant to mention your name because it usually brings nothing but grief these days. Apologies. I should have been less Kevin-centric.

>From [redacted] Tue Sep 30 09:27:39 1997
>Received: (qmail 20474 invoked from network); 30 Sep 1997 16:17:03
-0000
>Received: from listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu (128.205.7.35)

> by deliverance.acsu.buffalo.edu with SMTP; 30 Sep 1997 16:17:03 -0000 >Received: from LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU by
LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU
> (LISTSERV-TCP/IP release 1.8c) with spool id 21090866 for > [redacted]; Tue, 30 Sep 1997 12:17:01
-0400
>Received: (qmail 10987 invoked from network); 30 Sep 1997 16:17:00
-0000 >Received: from mail3.sirius.com (205.134.253.133) by listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu
> with SMTP; 30 Sep 1997 16:17:00 -0000 >Received: from [205.134.235.33] (ppp-asfm01--033.sirius.net [205.134.235.33])
> by mail3.sirius.com (8.8.7/Sirius-8.8.7-97.08.12) with ESMTP
id
> JAA18253 for <[redacted]>; Tue, 30 Sep 1997
> 09:16:49 -0700 (PDT)
>X-Sender: [redacted]
>Mime-Version: 1.0
>Content-Type: text/plain; charset="iso-8859-1"
>Content-Transfer-Encoding: quoted-printable >Message-ID: <l0310280cb05673ea51c7@[205.134.235.33]>
>Date: Tue, 30 Sep 1997 09:16:49 -0700
>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
>Sender: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
>From: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Social Tangles
>To: [redacted]
>In-Reply-To: <[redacted]>
>
>At 6:01 PM -0700 9/29/97, Dale Smith wrote:
>At times, ëexperiementalí forms, the ones, perhaps
>>Kevin publishes in Mirage, though he doesnít necessarily like them, >>appear inhuman to me because they repel any human sympathy I might be >>capable of lending the poem.
>
>First of all, I, Dodie, am the co-editor of Mirage. Secondly, neither >Kevin nor I have ever published work we didn't like. There's lots of >different reasons to like a work--a spirit of fun, a zest, good sex, >political upheaval, undefinable moments of beauty, as well as formal >innovation. Mirage is committed to experimental forms--it just has a broad >definition of "experimental."

>
>Dodie
>

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

630. Ira Lightman
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

I'd like to concur that I hate this "provoke to get the truth" thing as much as I hate it in Adorno (anyone who dismisses Stravinsky as Adorno does is profoundly non-post-modernist, or sane, would be Adornoesque about Adorno). I enter this thread only to put in a poem on it coincedentally composed two days ago

> add-or-no> straction.

I think Adorno's idea of negative dialectic is nuts, non-Hegel, you caan't force others into dialectic, on your terms, and ditto with "ab-straction" ie like ab-sent, to be recognised as departing. Thus there must be ad-straction, thus ad-straction or no straction at all, plus a pun on Adorno...

Ira Lightman

↑ Index

631. Hoa Nguyen
Re: People of Color?
Tue 30 Sep 1997

I would have responded to Mr. Pollet-- front channel-- but he also sent me a message saying basically the same thing back channel so I responded there.

I am suprised no one else questioned what I thought was a rather provacative statement on Mr. Pollet's part. In my last communication with him, I suggested that maybe we take up this thread front channel and I am still uncertain whether there is general interest...

"the usual dull, obvious, and self-serving post"--

Hoa

Sylvester P. wrote:

Hello, Hoa Nguyen! I understand that use of the term, I just don't like it & don't use it myself. I am a person of color, in my estimation, a sort of nicer color now than in March, when I tend to fade to a greyish white. Tanner now. When people, students say, want their heritage acknowledged, I try to honor that with sensitivity and particularity, so that I don't call a Passamaquoddy a Micmac. It seems clear to me that many terms used comfortably by people within a group to refer to themselves can not be used that way by outsiders. Of course, the language is constantly shifting, & it's our job as poets to push it into better places. I hope I'm not sounding cantankerous here--I was a bit yesterday, after half a day chainsawing firewood and half a day reading student papers. (Not an academic, just a poet/part-timer, trying to get through the winter.) I think this sort of discussion really helps, by the way, so thanks.

Dale S.>
>>So why don't you provoke something that helps instead of implying that >>references coined by particular groups other than your own make you >>uncomfortable
>

Elizabeth M.:

>... huh? whoa mike/dales.... a) why is it you assume one is obligated
to >provoke? that provoking turns up helpful things? on this list,
"provoking,"
>especially deliberate provoking, has been turning up a lot of discomfort and >defensiveness that more often than not have clouded issues, so if it is up to >me, i'd just as soon someone not take out their virtual acetylene torch
and >try and "provoke" up a storm; b) since when is the only constructive way to >work out various thoughts to "provoke" anyway? what happened to discuss, tease

>out opposing realities, dissect into multiple facets and look for prevalance, >ask for new ways to solve for x, etc? c) doesn't seem to me that there >was anything about saying references coined by other groups than speaker's >own make speaker uncomfortable. what was said was, and rightfully so, that >inside of a group referents may be used which are offensive when used by one >outside of group. two examples spring to mind - i've heard various black >people use the word "nigger" in reference to self/each other, i.e. "i am one >bad nigger" but for non-black person to use word would be grossly offensive; >as woman, i might often jokingly refer to "the girls" as sort of warm and >age-inclusive and self-teasing referent, or as sly referent to gay component, >as in "she's cute -- think she's one of us girls?". but when a male refers >to women as girls, well, i'm not through the ceiling about it most of the >time but it can be kind of offensive. THAT is what post was about, not >as you imply some effort to impose referents coined only by speaker's group, >whatever you parse that to be.
>
>finally, i see no opposition between looking for interesting responses and >pointing out one interesting facet -- post was in fact another interesting >facet on original thread -- insider/outsider viewpoint added to efforts to >diversify added to racial/gender mix of mags.
>
>maybe since poster put some effort into posting, might be better to respect >poster's own words and not try and spin them into something else, eh?
>e
>

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

632. dbkk
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

At 9:41 AM -0700 9/30/97, Dale Smith wrote:

> Ultimately, I think you respond out of fear and self defensiveness. I think what you dislike in my posts is that what you read begins to turn the rusty gears of pressure in your head, and that scares you.

You're right, Dale, your brand of dehumanization does, indeed, frighten me. I can only respond to it in horror.

Dodie

↑ Index

633. Eliza McGrand
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

---

dale
i am not sure what your issue with dodie is, but i wonder, could you keep it backchannel?

just for record, if someone came to me and said "Quick! describe dodie bellamy!"
> " against thought, as far as I can see,
by reducing it, continually, to a high-minded form of self-righteousness and manners."
would absolutely not be what comes to mind.

able to penetrate in a single glance, quite often, to the painful and because painful, not spoken; fiery; brave; sometimes hasty; often seen backing down if haste and fire has brought her too far; gentle; busy; tired; overcommitted; multiply viewed; wise, in that older-woman wise way; freely moving between age groups; learned; able to command small details in a single bound; a fine champion of women, working class, non-academics, writers, editors, literati, all color/ethnicity/religion; quick to understand subtleties and complexities and interplays -- dodie and judy and joe and david b and henry are main people i'll look to backchannel when i am trying to tease out strange knots of a dilemna, but dodie and judy are most often the ones who'll say the difficult, perhaps confrontational stuff in an honest, vulnerable way i really respect...

sometimes when defensive, one attributes to "enemy" qualities one embodies in oneself. dale, i haven't seen you back down on anything you've been mistaken about, including that woeful misreading of sylvester pollet. if you've done it, it hasn't registered. i have seen you, in the short time you've been on the list, attack much more often than i've seen dodie do, and when i've seen dodie it isn't an attack so much as an honest "this is what i'm seeing and think. tell me if i'm mistaken" -- and i've told her, when i didn't know her, that i thought she was mistaken and we talked about it and dale, she didn't call me a single name. that was when i learned how useful (if one can get over the guilt of bothering her when she is so overcommitted) dodie is in teasing out a complex problem.

i've seen posts that turn wheels dale. some of yours do. a number haven't. i've seen dodie's response to wheel turners -- see for instance working class thread of about a year ago, or another gender issue thread much like the one current of about a year ago as well. see dodie on small presses, on contests (from this summer) and in one of the finest dodie moments, the funding process for small presses and series. she described, with blistering honesty, what she does to get money for SPT, being on grant committees that distribute (or don't) money, and my heavens it elicited some extraordinary responses from others, from her again, from others. when wheel turners come dodie's way, i would say, again, her most consistent response is some wild leap in a direction either one hadn't looked, or it was uncomfortable and therefore not done, to look. oh, another fine dodie moment -- writing and sexuality and erotica, also this summer and a few months earlier as well. then another leap. then someone leaps elsewise and dodie goes there and comes back, or over, etc.

if you are feeling there is another reaction to your posts from dodie, you might re-examine what she reacts to in terms of its "wheel-turning" capacity. i wouldn't call name-calling wheel turning, but rather, an attempt to break the wheel. and you might want to settle with dodie backchannel why it is you are having those responses?

i don't want to get to the point of deleting your posts unread -- your post on adorno and langpo is still making wheels turn and i'm not yet ready to post response, it was that dense and interesting. but i really don't get anything out of attacks on people and nastiness for the sake of stirring things up. i keep ending up responding to latter, because i'm irish and i hate seeing people hurt or bullied (alot of what motivates dodie i think. it might also be a female response -- we are socialized to nurture and protect, not tear down and eat while wiggling then pee on remains). but i don't like it -- it makes my stomach hurt and my blood pressure rise and my chocolate consumption go up. i've noticed as people enter list, they try and make a "stir" by posting nasty posts and flames and attacking in the name of "being provocative." i know i did it myself, and did it out of mostly insecurity. i wonder if there could be something in welcome message to reassure people and disable attack/make a stir reflex? e

↑ Index

634. Dale Smith
Re: Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Actually, I did backchannel Dodie last week. A couple of times. She didn't respond to either.

I apologize to the list. It's not as dull and self-serving as I suggest. If it serves any one, as I can tell, it's me. I got $5 for a magazine yesterday.

I haven't read your question to me re: Pollet yet. Will though. I assumed he was white because he said so. But, I could have misinterpreted.

>From [redacted] Tue Sep 30 10:35:45 1997
>Received: (qmail 24024 invoked from network); 30 Sep 1997 17:35:10
-0000
>Received: from listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu (128.205.7.35)
> by deliverance.acsu.buffalo.edu with SMTP; 30 Sep 1997 17:35:10 -0000
>Received: from LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU by
LISTSERV.ACSU.BUFFALO.EDU
> (LISTSERV-TCP/IP release 1.8c) with spool id 21094539 for > [redacted]; Tue, 30 Sep 1997 13:35:09
-0400
>Received: (qmail 26670 invoked from network); 30 Sep 1997 17:35:07
-0000 >Received: from life.ai.mit.edu (128.52.32.80) by listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu with > SMTP; 30 Sep 1997 17:35:07 -0000
>Received: from rice-chex.ai.mit.edu (rice-chex.ai.mit.edu [128.52.32.46]) by > life.ai.mit.edu (8.8.5/AI1.15/ai.master.life:1.18) with ESMTP
id
> NAA08094 for <[redacted]>; Tue, 30 Sep 1997
> 13:35:05 -0400 (EDT)
>Received: (from [redacted]) by rice-chex.ai.mit.edu > (8.8.5/8.8.4AI/ai.client:1.5) id NAA22050 for > [redacted]; Tue, 30 Sep 1997 13:35:04
-0400
> (EDT)

>Message-ID: <[redacted]>
>Date: Tue, 30 Sep 1997 13:35:04 -0400
>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
>Sender: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
>From: Eliza McGrand <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: Social Tangles
>To: [redacted]
>
>dale
>i am not sure what your issue with dodie is, but i wonder, could you keep >it backchannel?
>
>just for record, if someone came to me and said "Quick! describe dodie >bellamy!"
>> " against thought, as far as I can see,
>by reducing it, continually, to a high-minded form of self-righteousness >and manners."
>would absolutely not be what comes to mind.
>
>able to penetrate in a single glance, quite often, to the painful and because >painful, not spoken; fiery; brave; sometimes hasty; often seen backing down if >haste and fire has brought her too far; gentle; busy; tired; overcommitted; >multiply viewed; wise, in that older-woman wise way; freely moving between >age groups; learned; able to command small details in a single bound; a fine >champion of women, working class, non-academics, writers, editors, literati, >all color/ethnicity/religion; quick to understand subtleties and complexities >and interplays -- dodie and judy and joe and david b and henry are main people >i'll look to backchannel when i am trying to tease out strange knots of a >dilemna, but dodie and judy are most often the ones who'll say the difficult, >perhaps confrontational stuff in an honest, vulnerable way i really respect...

>
>sometimes when defensive, one attributes to "enemy" qualities one embodies >in oneself. dale, i haven't seen you back down on anything you've been >mistaken about, including that woeful misreading of sylvester pollet.
if >you've done it, it hasn't registered. i have seen you, in the short time >you've been on the list, attack much more often than i've seen dodie do, >and when i've seen dodie it isn't an attack so much as an honest "this is >what i'm seeing and think. tell me if i'm mistaken" -- and i've told her, >when i didn't know her, that i thought she was mistaken and we talked about >it and dale, she didn't call me a single name. that was when i learned how >useful (if one can get over the guilt of bothering her when she is so >overcommitted) dodie is in teasing out a complex problem.
>
>i've seen posts that turn wheels dale. some of yours do. a number haven't.
>i've seen dodie's response to wheel turners -- see for instance working >class thread of about a year ago, or another gender issue thread much like >the one current of about a year ago as well. see dodie on small presses, on >contests (from this summer) and in one of the finest dodie moments, the funding >process for small presses and series. she described, with blistering honesty,
>what she does to get money for SPT, being on grant committees that distribute >(or don't) money, and my heavens it elicited some extraordinary responses from >others, from her again, from others. when wheel turners come dodie's way, i >would say, again, her most consistent response is some wild leap in a direction >either one hadn't looked, or it was uncomfortable and therefore not done, to >look. oh, another fine dodie moment -- writing and sexuality and erotica, also >this summer and a few months earlier as well. then another leap. then someone >leaps elsewise and dodie goes there and comes back, or over, etc.

>
>if you are feeling there is another reaction to your posts from dodie,
you >might re-examine what she reacts to in terms of its "wheel-turning" capacity.
>i wouldn't call name-calling wheel turning, but rather, an attempt to break
>the wheel. and you might want to settle with dodie backchannel why it is you >are having those responses?
>
>i don't want to get to the point of deleting your posts unread -- your post >on adorno and langpo is still making wheels turn and i'm not yet ready to post >response, it was that dense and interesting. but i really don't get anything >out of attacks on people and nastiness for the sake of stirring things up. i >keep ending up responding to latter, because i'm irish and i hate seeing people >hurt or bullied (alot of what motivates dodie i think. it might also be a female >response -- we are socialized to nurture and protect, not tear down and eat while wiggling then pee on remains). but i don't like it -- it makes my stomach >hurt and my blood pressure rise and my chocolate consumption go up.
i've noticed as people enter list, they try and make a "stir" by posting nasty posts and >flames and attacking in the name of "being provocative." i know i did
it >myself, and did it out of mostly insecurity. i wonder if there could be >something in welcome message to reassure people and disable attack/make a stir >reflex?

>e
>

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

635. mark weiss
Social Tangles
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Could we all try to keep personal jabs, as opposed to critiques of ideas, backchannel? No reason for personal snarling to be done in front of an audience.

↑ Index

636. Jacques Debrot
Re: Chain & what one likes
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Certainly one's feelings are central to making aesthetic judgements. But although our feelings are our own, they originate in cultural values. So, whether we like "this" rather than "that" depends first of all on our culture. The breadth of one's culture is what makes it possible to recognize the conflict of values competing within and for the cultural field. Indeed, as the art critic de Duve argues -- sensitivity to art involves experiencing this conflict of values as a conflict of feelings. Art -- at least experimentalist art -- is something one feels conflictually: "you give your consent to the absence of consensus." Ideally, then, progressive aesthetic judgements are not questions of "taste," but depend on a willingness and a talent for letting, say, the poems one writes or publishes run against & betray one's "tastes." Of course, this can be done stupidly or not, in a reactionary or an adventurous way -- but most importantly it involves the ability to read one's feelings as if they were objects projected from, as de Duve says, outside of oneself. The disagreements in recent postings over the value of the writing in Chain strike me, then, as being really about whether poetry is (as the criticisms of C seem to suggest) something given or whether it is, instead a generative & a constructivist practice.

↑ Index

637. Lawrence Upton.
Re: Weapons named after people & military slang
Tue 30 Sep 1997

I have no knowledge of explosives - why, I wonder, did they mix explosives with flour - were they trying to harness the self-raising power?

| From: Kali Tal <[redacted]>
| Aunt Jemima: explosive mixed with flour (WWII)

↑ Index

638. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: Chain & what one likes
Tue 30 Sep 1997

---

jacques, that's all very nicely put, but--- here comes henry!...

really though: poetry in fact, poetic practice/process, is also characterized by being free (as it were) to push past the cultural moment... whether in its actual articulation or ex post facto is not necessarily the point... the point is the imagined effort... which, if you like, you can insist on seeing as sociocultural---and i do mself in many ways, on many occasions---but which, too, may be regarded in terms of the singular, much as one's fingerprint, the significance or insignificance of which is perhaps buried under that term "talent" you've, uhm, deployed (and i see it this way too on occasion)...

nice post, anyway!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

639. mark weiss
Re: Chain & what one likes
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Don't believe everything you read in books.

At 02:47 PM 9/30/97 -0400, you wrote: >Certainly one's feelings are central to making aesthetic judgements. But >although our feelings are our own, they originate in cultural values. So, >whether we like "this" rather than "that" depends first of all on our >culture. The breadth of one's culture is what makes it possible to recognize >the conflict of values competing within and for the cultural field. Indeed, >as the art critic de Duve argues -- sensitivity to art involves experiencing >this conflict of values as a conflict of feelings. Art -- at least >experimentalist art -- is something one feels conflictually: "you give your >consent to the absence of consensus." Ideally, then, progressive aesthetic >judgements are not questions of "taste," but depend on a willingness and a >talent for letting, say, the poems one writes or publishes run against & >betray one's "tastes." Of course, this can be done stupidly or not, in a >reactionary or an adventurous way -- but most importantly it involves the >ability to read one's feelings as if they were objects projected from, as de >Duve says, outside of oneself. The disagreements in recent postings over the >value of the writing in Chain strike me, then, as being really about >whether poetry is (as the criticisms of C seem to suggest) something >given or whether it is, instead a generative & a constructivist practice.

>
>

↑ Index

640. Hoa Nguyen
thanks
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Dear List People--

I will still be receiving mail at this address but I won't be subscribing to the list anymore, so if you address any questions to/towards me, you will need to back channel for me to see it or to garner a response.

Feeling weird but ok,

Hoa

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

641. Susan Clark
Re: Killian and Argento
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Carolyn,

Best way to order such books here is to write to Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Street [new address], Berkeley, CA 94702 USA or call to get prices, etc. : [redacted] ; [redacted] : toll free orders numbers [don't know if it works from here] fax: [redacted] ; or email: [redacted]

hope that helps [so nice this cut-and-paste!] best, Susan

Susan Clark
RADDLE MOON

--
 IMPORTANT : the reply function alone will not reach me.
To reply, please remove "nospam" from the email address before sending.

↑ Index

642. Peter Balestrieri
Lynn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
Tue 30 Sep 1997

> Hello All,
> Does anyone know how I might obtain a copy of Hejinian's essay
> "Rejection of Closure," originally in Poetry Journal, sometime in the > late 1980's? Web searches have been unsuccessful so far.
> Thanks,
> Pete Balestrieri

↑ Index

643. Michael Magee
Re: Lynn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
Tue 30 Sep 1997

Part of it is excerpted in Hoover's Norton Anthology of Postmod Poetr - you might be able to get a helpful cite from his bibliography. -Mike.

According to Peter Balestrieri:
>
> Hello All,
> Does anyone know how I might obtain a copy of Hejinian's essay
> "Rejection of Closure," originally in Poetry Journal, sometime in the > late 1980's? Web searches have been unsuccessful so far.
> Thanks,
> Pete Balestrieri
>

↑ Index

644. Charles Bernstein
Re: Lyn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
Tue 30 Sep 1997

The entire essay is reprinted in an relatively new and in-print anthology, mentioned previously on this list:

Onward: Contemporary Poetry & Poetics
ed. Peter Baker
Peter Lang (NY, 1996)

the original essay was published in Poetics Journal 4 (1984)

> Does anyone know how I might obtain a copy of Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure," originally in Poetry Journal, sometime in the late 1980's? Web searches have been unsuccessful so far.
> Thanks,
> Pete Balestrieri

↑ Index

645. Susan Clark
Lyn Hejinian's "Rejection of Closure"
Tue 30 Sep 1997

---

dear all,

In case anyone else is interested, Lyn's essay was reprinted in RADDLE MOON 4, our international women writers issue. Copies are still available.

Susan

--
 IMPORTANT : the reply function alone will not reach me.
To reply, please remove "nospam" from the email address before sending.

↑ Index

646. mark weiss
Re: stereotypes
Tue 30 Sep 1997

I don't know if San Diego has its equivalent of Tuxedo Park or Lake Forest or Grosse Point (these last, Maria, are in the midwest), but I suspect it does. For those of you who don't know, Jews can't buy houses in these places. Quogue on Long Island, if I'm not mistaken, is another. I suspect that the California cities have similar suburbs, but I know for sure that there are places in San Diego county where being Jewish would be none to comfortable. Lest we glorify the wide open spaces of the West in contrast to the decadent East, remember that some of those wide open spaces are between the ears of militia members and Aryan Nation types.

On Mon, 29 Sep 1997, Maria Damon wrote:
>
>> being >> jewish though makes for an interesting twist in the cloth. it's hard to >> convey to West coasters and midwesterners the reality that in my home-town >> (boston and environs) it was standard during my childhood and adolescence
>> (and possibly even now) for certain country clubs etc to officially exclude >> blacks and jews.

↑ Index

647. Eliza McGrand
Re: stereotypes
Tue 30 Sep 1997

WHAT?! YUCK! how are jews prevented from buying -- is it outright question than refusal? does real estate agent do research, kind of the way used car salespeople do? what happens if someone jewish DOES buy? i am reminded of way temp companies in boston screen out black office workers. they administer typing tests, grammar tests, and it is awful because you see black woman who has worn her desk to paper learning to type faster hunched over machine and slamming out script like blazes. and office type overseeing administration, and interview, nods nicely and says "good good, we'll call when we have something" and then they never call. but next in line white worker like me takes typing test, doesn't type as fast even, and it's "well we have a job HERE, and HERE, and how about we send you out to BLAH company today" and one thinks, at those moments, about the rent check, about walking out, about saying something,... and perhaps one has said somthing a time or two and the personnel type, who moments ago was "othered," the enemy, looks drawn and miserable and says my boss said i can't send black workers there, and they have said they don't want them, and we'll lose the account if we send them, and they make them miserable if we do... and who wins. who loses. what is the stunning gesture that paralyzes snakes in their tracks and charms us all to sweet water again? e

↑ Index

648. Kali Tal

Race, identity, otherness, us-ness, stereotypes....

Tue 30 Sep 1997

This is all such complicated stuff, since we all have multiple locations. When I think about "being Jewish," I think of it relative to other identities I have, which range from being white to being a product of the upper class. I also think about it relative to my ability to "pass" as non-Jewish (voluntary omission of the fact of my Jewishness) or my inability to be recognized as Jewish (involuntary exclusion). I think of it in relation to my decision to become an African Americanist, in relation to my kinship network (my extended family is comprised of German/Eastern European Jews and Puerto Rican Episcopalians), and so on. We are none of us able to be expressed by a singular, unified, identity. We're always this and that and that and that....

To sort out some of the identification issues, I tend to divide my identity markers into a couple of classes. The first is identity which is marked in the body. My femaleness falls in that category, as does my whiteness. Both are hard to hide, hard to represent as other than they are. Body markers are a big deal--they're the most in-your-face kinds of identity tags, and most of the reactions I get from other people are predicated, first of all, on those markers. (And working in e-space is fascinating, because those markers are removed and the name-tag I wear is most often mistaken for non-white and male.) An interesting thing about body markers, of course, is that they're easily misread. I don't "look Jewish," whatever that means, and so I am marked, on the basis of my body, by both Jews and non-Jews as "not a Jew." In the U.S., there's a body marker category called "Asian" which lumps together ethnic groups whose members consider each other to be racially distinct--Vietnamese, Korean, Japanese, etc. Such "mistakes" lead to questions like "what is Jewishness?" or "what is blackness?" or even "what is race?" Lots of questions to wrestle with here.

After the body markers come what I think of as the "image tags," or the deliberate ornamentation/style I adopt to convey certain messages about who I am. A shaved head, visible tattoes, piercings, leather, and so on. Or high heels, stockings, lace, a lotta cleavage. Or dreads. Or a kafiyah. Or or or. These tags have everything to do with what I want other people to think I am, but they are deliberately constructed, not inherent qualities. (I've had a couple of friends--both male, coincidentally--who were of a color and a "type" which was totally racially indeterminate. Both of them identified as "nonwhite"--and that is the general category they used--all the time, but one wavered back and forth between that broader category and East Asian Indian, and the other fluctuated between "nonwhite" and "black." On any given day they expressed their preferences and inclinations by the image tags they chose. As a "racial Everyman"--their term, not mine--they were assumed to be members of the dominant local nonwhite race, whatever that was, by the members of that group. In Texas, Chicanos spoke Spanish to them, in Georgia African Americans assumed they were black, and white folks everywhere usually assumed they were white. They'd have to resist that definition by donning contradictory image tags, or it would be imposed upon them as a default.)

And then there are the internal tags, the "what-I-think-of-me-as" category of stuff I feel is somehow integral, but ultimately invisible. Like, hey, I know I'm a Jew even though I'm not exactly sure what Jewishness is (a race? a religion? a dessert topping?). There are days when I think I'm a Jew only because at other times and places people would have killed me for being a Jew, or because if people knew I was a Jew they wouldn't let me into their clubs, or because I'm sitting around and laughing and talking with a bunch of other people and we share what--for lack of a better word-- I have to call a "Jewish heritage," meaning that we laugh at the same jokes, share inflections, stories. Then there are other days when I feel a kind of connection to the myths I know as "Jewish history," even though I never feel any connection (and actually feel an antipathy) to anything smacking of the "Jewish religion." And I always know I'm not black. I never wake up in the morning with any doubt about that. These are the markers that I wear inside, and that are mostly invisible, even to me.

Stereotyping both combines the first two categories to create a kind of shorthand for the determination of "what" a person is, and influences the self-concept which shapes the development of the internal tags. (I am what I say I am, so I have to be careful about what I say I am; I am / am not what you say I am, so I wish you'd be careful about what you say I am.)

Aldon posted that great list of books (I'm glad someone added Aldon's to the list), and I'd like to add one more: Michael Omi & Howard Winant's revised edition of _Racial Formations_. Great stuff. I tend to believe that there are no "real" races, that identity along racial lines is wholly constructed, but that we construct it because the urge to Otherize is hardwired into the wetware; it's part of what makes us human beings. So racial constructions change with the times (remember when the Irish were black?), but the urge to construct races is a constant. We construct Others and we construct ourselves alla the time. The best we can do, I think, is try to be aware of who we're constructing, and how and why, who it hurts, who benefits, how the system we move within is structured to determine races and classes and genders and other Others here and now.

Kali

> On Mon, 29 Sep 1997, Maria Damon wrote:
>
> being

> jewish though makes for an interesting twist in the cloth. it's hard to convey to West coasters and midwesterners the reality that in my hometown (boston and environs) it was standard during my childhood and adolescence (and possibly even now) for certain country clubs etc to officially exclude blacks and jews. when explaining why that meant i didn't belong to the institutions that my classmates did, i've been stopped and asked, "you look pretty white to me, so what's the problem?" as if they hadn't heard, or couldn't process, the "and jews" part of what i'd said. it just isn't part of how they divide up the world. the christian majority is not just a
>
> I never really grokked the otherness of being Jewish until I moved off the East Coast to Texas. People I met there couldn't understand why I found the months of compulsory Christmas muzak in the malls irritating (at best) -- until I asked them how they'd like being forced to listen continually to Mantovani's Greatest Islamic Chants. On the other hand, that's when I started viewing being Jewish as interesting, which had a big effect on my own studies and writing.
>
> I have friends in Texas who have bemoaned their own lack of ethnicity. When they leave the state, though, they find out that being Texan is its own thing, and (especially those with recognizably Texan accents) have to deal with both being stereotyped by others, and the way that other parts of the country are very different. (Since coming back East, it strikes me how rarely people smile around here!)

Kali Tal new WORD order PO Box 13746, Tucson AZ 85732-3746 http://www.new-word.com [redacted] (phone & fax)
"Web Design For Smart People"

Sixties Project [redacted]
http://jefferson.village.virginia.edu/sixties http://www.kalital.com

↑ Index

649. mark weiss

Re: stereotypes

Tue 30 Sep 1997

Here's how it works. In the old days when you bought a house from a real estate agent in these towns you signed a contract requiring you to resell through that same agent if you decided to leave. The agents did the dirty-work of deciding who to show to. Those contracts were declared illegal about fifteen years ago, so it's done informally now, and an occasional jew, or italian, etc., slips through. In Lake Forest, where I spent a summer at an art colony, my understanding was that a very few blacks were allowed in as long as they played football for the Chicago team (sorry, I don't follow the game--I'd rather watch paint dry). So the process was distanced from its beneficiaries. What's striking is that no one ever seems to wake up in the morning wondering why all of his neighbors seem so similar.

At 09:47 PM 9/30/97 -0400, you wrote:
>WHAT?! YUCK! how are jews prevented from buying -- is it outright question >than refusal? does real estate agent do research, kind of the way used car >salespeople do? what happens if someone jewish DOES buy? i am reminded of >way temp companies in boston screen out black office workers. they administer >typing tests, grammar tests, and it is awful because you see black woman who >has worn her desk to paper learning to type faster hunched over machine and >slamming out script like blazes. and office type overseeing administration, >and interview, nods nicely and says "good good, we'll call when we have >something" and then they never call. but next in line white worker like >me takes typing test, doesn't type as fast even, and it's "well we have a >job HERE, and HERE, and how about we send you out to BLAH company today" >and one thinks, at those moments, about the rent check, about walking out, >about saying something,... and perhaps one has said somthing a time or two >and the personnel type, who moments ago was "othered," the enemy, looks >drawn and miserable and says my boss said i can't send black workers there, >and they have said they don't want them, and we'll lose the account if we >send them, and they make them miserable if we do... and who wins. who loses.
>what is the stunning gesture that paralyzes snakes in their tracks and charms >us all to sweet water again?
>e
>
>

↑ Index

Alan Sokal published his book in Paris in October and the list, which had watched him hoax Social Text eighteen months earlier, came back for the sequel: a hundred and forty mentions, and a thread whose title, SoKalled, is the best pun of the year. Elvis got a hundred and twelve, because Sylvester Pollet had a friend "just back from a Utopian Conference in Memphis" and a visit to Graceland who wanted poems about Elvis, and Pollet said he would ask. But the month's business began on the fourth, when a man nobody had much heard of did the thing this list had been formally begged not to do.

In June of last year Ken Edwards, answering a perfectly civil question about British poets, had appended a plea from the bottom of his soul: please, please, do not let anybody start another thread on what exactly langpo is. The room obeyed him for sixteen months. Then Bob Grumman posted under the heading Defining Language Poetry, and his first sentence is a confession and a diagnosis at once: "I'm a taxonomaniac". He was tired, he said, of going through these discussions over and over and never knowing precisely what was meant. Sixty-one letters followed across three threads. Edwards is mentioned twice in the volume, in neither of them.

What makes Grumman interesting is that he had no standing at all, and said so — he wrote, he explained, as mostly an outsider to language poetry, which is precisely why he could ask. Insiders had spent a decade not defining it because they were in it. And he then produced a definition, which is more than anybody on this list had managed in twenty months: poetry that significantly breaks the rules of grammar or spelling for expressive effect. Not the identity of the poets, not their politics, not their philosophical outlook. A rule about sentences.

And then the sentence that undoes it. Because of the confusion around the name, Grumman went on, in his own critical writing he does not use it; he renames the thing xenolinguistic poetry — though he would rather, he added, call it language poetry. Read that twice. A man arrives from outside, succeeds where the room has failed, and can only succeed by abandoning the word. Meanwhile, in the thread next door, Mark Wallace was writing in support of Fredrik Hertzberg against "a new round of language poetry bashing", and observing that he had published a piece years before on why such bashing is so common among poets. The room was defending a name it could not define.

There is a precedent and it is exact. In April of 1996 Chris Stroffolino typed the nonsense-word quertzblatz into an argument, and by that June the room was using it as an adjective, fluently, with an agreed sense, having invented from nothing a word that worked. In October 1997 a stranger looked at the room's central term, found it unusable, and made a new one. I have set Grumman's definition and his renaming in the same volume, four lines apart, because this room's whole twenty months come to this: it can make a word mean anything at all, and it cannot make its own words mean what they say. Ken Edwards knew. He asked them not to.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 611 in all.

WRITERS

Acgold01 38, 585
Aerialedge 2, 59, 78, 81, 91, 262, 581
Alexander, Christopher 280, 281, 342, 408, 431, 464
And, Miekal 372, 387, 406
Archambeau, Robert 296, 488, 494
Ashton, Jennifer 417
Baker, Mark 440, 472
Barbour, Douglas 123, 257, 306, 392, 403, 426, 514, 536, 578
Beard, Tom 26, 47, 48, 115, 209, 210, 290, 291, 300, 350, 352, 512, 589
Bell, Thomas 105, 135, 245, 315, 367, 401, 433, 509, 519, 565
Benedetti, David 339, 343, 601
Bernstein, Charles 164, 175, 356
Berrigan, Ted 363
Bowering, George 3, 4, 49, 106, 204, 206, 207, 326, 369, 370, 384, 609
Brink, Dean A. 582
Bromige, David 35, 44, 109, 110, 316, 324, 371, 373, 376, 379
Brook, James 540
Brown, Lee Ann 442, 443
Brown, Pam 345, 507
Bruno, Franklin 94, 495
Burns, Suzanne 227
Carpenter, Brian 594
Cayley, John 18
Champion, Miles 52
Cheek, Cris 129, 238, 577
Cheek, I'm Cris 553
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 365
Chirot, Christina Fairbank 215
Clark, Susan 20, 501
Clippinger, David W. 144
Cockram, Patricia 274
Coffey, Michael 58, 152, 158
Cohen, Alicia A 420
Collier, Danny 496
Conte, Joseph 177, 336
Cope, Stephen 247, 419
Crawford, Holly 11, 25
Creinervppp 524
Crown, Kathleen 537
Damon, Maria 51, 74, 120, 130, 136, 148, 223, 243, 244, 277, 334, 385, 389, 489, 490, 492, 493, 555
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 178
Davis, Jordan 8, 229, 261, 288, 361, 362, 381, 429, 463, 510, 535
Dbkk 368
Debrot, Jacques 93, 163, 236, 240, 251
Dlugonski, Dan Or Orion 388
Douglas 29
Drake, Robert 287, 391, 451, 525
Durgin, P. 335, 502, 556, 583, 599
Edwards, Joseph D. 241
Edwards, Ken 482
Epstein, Andrew D 340
Evans, Steve 304, 499
Finnegan, James 21, 43, 61, 256, 264, 276, 505
Fleisher, Joe Amato/Kass 95, 190, 198, 200, 295, 313, 329, 484
Floor, Ed Moran /General Pub. 4Th 597
Foley, Jack 37, 435, 454, 455, 546
Foust, Graham W 506
G, Henry 36, 154, 159, 221, 222, 328, 607
G', Henry 518
Gancie, R. 45, 71, 201, 203, 272, 322, 354, 393, 394, 478, 486, 600, 610
Ganick, Peter 22, 551, 552
Glazier, Loss 364, 560
Glazier, Loss Pequen~o 386, 390
Goldsmith, Kenneth 562
Golumbia, David 458
Goo, Henry 118
Gould, Henry 28, 83, 84, 104, 157, 211, 212, 383, 402, 425, 427, 470, 485, 547, 550, 569, 604
Groberts 156, 220, 314, 348, 516
Grumman, Bob 86, 90, 97, 107, 139, 162, 285, 286, 308, 346, 349, 375, 477, 538, 559, 574, 593, 603, 608
Guertin, Carolyn 298, 437, 561
Hardin, Rob 531
Heller, Michael 544
Hen 258, 259, 483
Henry 6, 182, 273, 421, 456, 491, 517
Henryg 53
Hertzberg, Fredrik 5
Hg 580
Hghghghg 590, 592
Hollo, DIGEST Anselm 397
Israel, David 511
Israel, David R. 7, 54, 108, 116, 246, 351, 520, 532, 539, 595
Jarnot 76, 522, 554
JDEBROT 436
Joris, Pierre 9, 189
Joseph, Safdie 19, 318, 380, 430, 460, 545, 591

Kellogg, David 404
Kimmelman, Burt 214, 230, 378, 424
Kuszai, Joel 428
Latta, John 254
Levitsky, Rachel 1, 205, 225, 255, 399
Levy, Herb 69, 101, 282, 438, 541, 548
Lightman, Ira 299, 360, 498
List, Poetics 72, 266
Loden, Rachel 89, 239, 250, 323, 423, 448, 576
Long, Brent 558, 598
Magee, Michael 92, 119, 195, 268, 422, 450, 596
Main 132
Marcella 534, 567
Marks, Steven 355, 563, 568
Marsh, William 161, 194, 228
McGrand, Eliza 181, 269, 271, 283, 284, 317
McHale, Brian 307
McVay, Gwyn 216, 587, 588
Mirakove, Carol 584
Moriarty, Laura 77, 85, 150, 167, 169, 171, 311, 405
Morris, Adalaide 302, 305
Muratori, Fred 459
Nguyen, Hoa 138
Nielsen, Aldon 16, 57, 134, 191, 192, 197, 270, 338, 409, 468, 469, 476, 528
Oh, Henry Oh 60, 62
Orange, Tom 24, 88, 114, 184, 185, 310
Osman, Jena 341
Peters, Carl Lynden 418
Piombino/Simon 73
Pollet, Sylvester 143, 332, 447, 457, 461, 487, 566
Prejsnar, Mark 30, 50, 121, 122, 124, 126, 127, 145, 146, 147, 153, 155, 188, 213, 218, 252, 253, 263, 407, 557, 579, 586
Pritchett,Pat 10, 125, 133, 160, 232, 309, 330, 412, 434, 475, 515, 602
Prod, William Burmeister 55, 56, 63, 68, 151, 165, 237, 267, 414, 504, 570, 571, 575
R.drake 413
Reiner, Christopher 17, 301, 344
Rhenisch, Harold 96, 99, 102, 137, 174, 233, 234, 235, 265, 319, 320, 359, 374, 462, 467, 473, 479, 572
Roitman, Judy 98, 128, 149, 217, 219, 231, 357, 358
Roy, Megan Minka Lola Camille 13
Rsillima 87
Ruggles, Trace S. 471, 497
Russell, Layne 196, 224, 249, 278, 292, 303, 432
Schultz, Susan 248, 366, 526, 527
Scroggins, Mark W 23
Simon 32, 294, 410, 521, 543
Simon, Schuchat 142
Slotnick, Stacie 542
Sondheim, Alan /Dev/null 353
Sondheim, Alan Chown 400
Sondheim, Alan Grep 564, 573
Sondheim, Alan Jen 12, 70, 140, 173, 208, 226
Sondheim, Alan Rm -R 530
Spahr, Juliana 606
Stadler, Matthew 312
Steinberg, Hugh 168, 279, 293, 480, 513
Thompson, George 42, 327, 331, 333, 347, 439
Tosh 395
Tranter, John 529
Tremblay-McGaw, Robin 41
Trevor, Karen And 75, 242
Upton., Lawrence 15, 166, 170, 179, 193
Varrone, Kevin 141
Vogel, Aviva 64, 65, 66, 67, 80, 82, 111, 112, 113, 172, 186, 187, 199, 382, 444, 474, 500, 508
Wallace, Mark 33, 34, 100, 183
Weigl, Charles 31
Weiss, Mark 14, 27, 39, 79, 260, 297, 325, 337, 377, 398, 411, 416, 441, 445, 446, 465, 466, 481, 503, 549, 605, 611
Wellman, Don 40, 103
West, Bobbie 131
Wheeler, Susan 46, 117, 180, 202, 396, 523
Whyte, Ryan 289, 533
Wilson, Rob 275, 453
Wolsak, Diederik 452
Wood, Tim 176
Zimmerman, Daniel 321, 415, 449

NAMES MENTIONED

Abdul, Selim 12
Adams, Robert 69, 74
Adamson, Robert 529
Adorno, Theodor 5, 28, 45, 59, 71, 393, 398, 486, 512
Albon, George 442
Alexander, Christopher W. 281, 342, 408, 431, 445, 464, 466
Alice, Mary 397
Allan, Don 136, 600, 605
Allison, Dorothy 87
Americans, Asian 136, 142, 512
Amerika, Mark 289
Anderson, Beth 304, 331
Andre, Michael 155, 189
Andrews, Bruce 77, 78, 229, 244, 247, 248, 288, 381
Antin, David 314, 404
Armand, Louis 537
Armstrong, Aaron 495

Ashberry, John 63, 103
Ashbery, John 8, 84, 212, 529
Ashcroft, John 134, 162
Atlanta, Mark P. 64, 146, 153, 579
Augustine, Jane 537
Baker, Mary 17, 29
Balaz, Joe 248, 606
Bales, Marcus 136
Balestrieri, Pete 4, 10
Barnes, Diane 453
Baron, Todd 248, 361, 395
Bartlett, Martin 69, 74
Bellamy, Dodie 150, 529
Belle, Cecelia 241
Benjamin, Walter 71
Benson, Steve 73, 77
Bentley, Scott 582, 587
Berger, John 529
Bergvall, Caroline 364, 442
Berkeley, Michael 250, 368, 397
Berkson, Bill 49
Berlin, Irving 12, 564, 571
Berman, Tosh 136, 395
Bernstein, Emma 78, 146, 167, 436, 531
Berry, Stephen 310
Berryman, John 404, 462
Bertholf, Robert 336
Beuys, Joseph 523
Blackburn, Paul 314
Blake, William 71, 439
Blanchot, Maurice 12, 189, 318
Blarnes, Eric 6, 53, 56, 104, 165, 273, 425, 429
Blaser, Robin 314, 318, 514, 536, 578
Blau, Rachel 93, 107, 123, 124
Bly, Robert 82, 92, 113, 119, 120, 127, 145, 152, 204, 213
Borges, Jorge Luis 368
Borkhuis, Charles 534
Bouchard, Dan 567
Boulez, Pierre 299
BpNichol 418, 498
Bradbury, Ray 201, 306
Brady, Andrea 361
Brady, Taylor 310, 553
Brazil, David 301, 303, 407, 411, 414, 415
Brennan, Joe 37, 486, 546, 549
Brink, Dean A. 582, 587
Brodsky, Joseph 607
Brooks, Gwendolyn 412
Brown, Pamela 529
Bukowski, Charles 525
Bunting, Basil 144
Burger, Mary 248, 311
Burger, Peter 311
Burmeister, Bill 121, 267
Burns, Joanne 248
Butterick, George 302, 336
Bök, Christian 310
Cabri, Louis 73, 316, 405, 419, 452, 458
Cage, John 336, 562
Cameron, Sharon 381
Campbell, Bruce 336
Campbell, Jeremy 449, 465
Carll, Steve 606
Carlos, William 113, 119, 120, 127
Carson, Anne 336
Cartelli, Donna 266
Celan, Paul 189
Chadwick, Lynn 301, 303
Chan, Charlie 523
Chang, Juliana 404, 489
Child, Abigail 531
Clar, Jorge 361
Clark, Cheryl 167, 212, 304, 331, 556
Clifford, Pat 71
Clinton, Bill 453, 603
Clippinger, David W. 144
Clubb, Issa 381
Coleman, Victor 145, 152
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 8, 467, 471, 479, 495, 514
Collins, Phil 606
Collom, Jack 330, 380
Coolidge, Clark 126, 130, 153, 188, 212, 328, 499
Cooper, Paula 229, 244, 247
Corman, Roger 155, 314
Corso, Gregory 322
Coultas, Brenda 288
Coyote, Peter 6
Crane, Lee 84
Creeley, Robert 58, 156, 209, 340, 384, 510
Crowe, Russell 108
Cunningham, Michael 145, 152
Daley, Rachel 280, 281, 342
Darragh, Tina 59
Davenport, Steve 316, 419, 434
Davidson, Ian 302
Davies, Kevin 288, 362, 381
Davis, Martin 316, 381, 419
Dawkins, Richard 45, 48
Dawn, Kim 12
Day, Jean 405, 452, 458
Dee, Kathy 248, 366, 606
Deleuze, Gilles 8
Deming, Alison 606
Dennis, Michael 69, 74, 136, 404
Derksen, Jeff 523
Derkson, Jeff 73
Derrida, Jacques 313, 416, 476, 485, 546, 549, 604
Desnos, Robert 68, 80
Didion, Joan 199, 274, 275, 277, 430, 435, 438, 455

Dirda, Michael 201
Donne, John 445, 462
Dorn, Edward 576
Ducharme, Mark 565
Duncan, Andrew 103, 362, 368
Duncan, Robert 336, 362
Durand, Marcella 381
Durgin, Patrick F. 347, 502, 556
Dylan, Bob 35, 60
Edgar, Chris 45
Eigner, Larry 98, 128, 145, 149, 217, 219, 231, 357, 358, 373
Einstein, Albert 45, 415
Eliot, Joe 45, 82, 84, 127, 159, 383
Ellen, Mary 74, 136, 540
Ellingham, Lewis 304, 331
Elliott, George 540
Eluard, Paul 155
Emerson, Claudia 192, 383
Enslin, Ted 314
Eshleman, Clayton 215, 224
Esther, Little 345
Estrin, Jerry 77
Evans, Brett 442
Fagin, Larry 381, 442
Farrell, Dan 73
Fenton, Jayne 202, 241
Finkelstein, Norman 585
Fischer, Norman 150, 189, 218
Fisher, Roy 529
Fitterman, Rob 229, 244, 247, 288, 381
Fodaski, Elizabeth 316, 419
Ford, Henry 304, 331
Foreman, Richard 152
Foster, Edward 163, 256, 378
Foucault, Michel 546, 549
France, Peter 9, 155
Frances, Mary 167
Franco, Michael 258
Fraser, Kathleen 125, 133
Fraser, Simon 125, 302
Friedman, Michael 330, 380
Friedman, Thomas 229, 244, 247, 381
Frost, Corey 336
Frost, Robert 45
Fuller, Heather 262, 362
Fullman, Ellen 69, 74
Fulton, Alice 606
Garcia, Rodrigo 44
Gardner, Drew 229, 244, 247, 288
Gardner, Janet 288
Garland, Judy 74
Gascoyne, David 306
Gass, William 210
Gates, Bill 603
Gevirtz, Susan 248
Gibson, William 300
Gilmore, Gary 69, 74
Ginsberg, Allan 59, 84, 103, 122, 302, 362
Ginsberg, Allen 73, 167, 362
Gizzi, Michael 499
Gluck, Bob 13, 41, 167
Gluck, Robert 311
Golding, Alan 404
Goldman, Judith 244, 247
Gomez, Audrey 164, 167, 169, 171
Gould, Glenn 50, 53, 56, 104, 402, 580
Gregg, Linda 316, 419
Gregory, Jane 322, 453
Grenier, Bob 373, 606
Griffin, Tim 136, 155
Guest, Barbara 229, 244, 247, 423
Hall, Wheeler 275
Halsey, Alan 266
Hamburger, Michael 306
Hamilton, Diana 316, 419
Hammond, Paul 428
Hansen, Jefferson 33, 37, 39, 45, 71, 600, 605
Harris, Ken 222, 253
Harryman, Carla 77, 146
Hartley, George 436, 491
Hayles, Katherine 478
Healy, Randolph 248
Heidegger, Martin 546, 549
Hejinian, Lyn 38, 51, 77, 138, 147, 160, 373
Henning, Barbara 229, 244, 247, 288, 361
Herman, Rachel 569, 580
Hernandez, Victor 404
Heuving, Jeanne 241
Highfill, Mitch 288
Hill, Lindsay 330, 380
Hills, Henry 531
Holloway, Rob 164, 167, 169
Holmes, Janet 310
Hoover, Paul 365, 529
Howard, Richard 558
Howe, Bill 262, 310, 553
Howe, Susan 77, 126, 130, 420
Hugo, Richard 312
Indiana, Gary 78, 288
Ireland, Lauren 248
Israel, David R. 7, 9, 54, 108, 116, 246, 351, 355, 520, 532, 539, 595
Jackson, Jesse 73, 135, 152, 336, 381
Jackson, Michael 448, 457
Jarnot, Lisa 229, 244, 247, 266, 288, 362, 378, 381, 534
Jillway, Jill 72
Johns, Jasper 163, 236, 243, 251, 288, 417, 418, 451, 498
Johnson, Peter 363, 396
Johnson, Thomas 141, 143, 144, 149, 177, 520, 541
Johnston, Martin 529

Jonas, Stephen 153, 304, 331
Jones, Bob 435, 437, 438, 454, 455
Jones, David 45, 201
Jordan, June 8, 212, 261, 316, 419, 429, 463, 532, 535
Joron, Andrew 309
Joyce, Michael 234
Kafka, Franz 21, 211, 226, 595
Kaplan, Leslie 205
Keats, John 290, 322, 350, 445, 462
Kelleher, Mike 553
Keller, Lynn 293, 298, 300, 302
Kelly, Paul 314
Kemp, Carolyn 395
Kennedy, Kit 520
Kerry, John 316, 419
Khlebnikov, Velimir 362, 381
Killian, Kevin 160, 248, 304, 331
Killian, Sean 266, 378, 534
Kinsella, John 361, 529
Kinsella, Thomas 404
Knox, Caroline 365
Koch, Kenneth 340
Koertge, Ron 529
Kristeva, Julia 7, 310
Lacan, Jacques 7, 24, 26, 404, 546, 549, 600, 604, 605, 610
Lake, Paul 440, 460
Lamantia, Philip 63
Lang, Peter 2
Lauterbach, Ann 288, 304, 331, 336
Lazer, Hank 93
Lederer, Katy 442
Leggott, Michelle 48, 209
Lehman, David 529
Leonard, Tom 244, 247, 428, 534
Levertov, Denise 155
Levy, Andy 73, 288
Lewis, Susan 381
Livingston, Ira 404
London, Frank 18, 170, 310, 360, 553, 577
Lorber, Brendan 510
Mac Low, Jackson 73, 386
Lowell, Amy 103, 137, 152
Lowell, Robert 145, 152, 204, 213
Luoma, Bill 499
Luther, Martin 69, 74, 432, 439
Mackey, Nathaniel 146, 153, 302
Madison, James 14, 25, 250
Mahler, David 69, 74, 541
Malmude, Anna 361
Malmude, Steve 229, 244, 247
Mandelstam, Osip 182
Manning, Nicholas 304, 331, 499
Marie, Julie 606
Marie, Lisa 448, 457
Marshall, Robert 453, 541
Martin, Chris 136
Martin, Paul 17, 29
Marvin, Lee 201
Matthews, William 461
Mayer, Bernadette 229, 244, 247
Mayer, Jane 229, 244, 247, 499
Menefee, Sarah 368
Merwin, W. S. 155
Miki, Roy 523
Miller, Lee 136
Milton, John 383, 445, 462, 466, 503, 509
Minter, Peter 529
Monk, Geraldine 266
Monroe, Bill 453
Moore, Marianne 202, 241, 477, 597, 598, 599
Moore, Nicholas 202, 241
Moriarity, Laura 175, 176
Morse, Jesse 361
Morse, Jonathan 248
Mottram, Eric 166
Moxley, Jennifer 304, 331, 361
Mullen, Harryette 134, 146, 191
Murphy, Michelle 248
Murphy, Sheila 242, 280, 281, 342
Murray, Beth 248
Murray, Elizabeth 529, 600, 605
Musil, Robert 45
Myles, Eileen 229, 244, 247, 248, 266, 378, 502, 529, 534
Nakell, Martin 395
Neilson, Melanie 356
Nelson, Cynthia 229, 244, 247
Nelson, Gale 582, 587
Newton, Keith 45, 415, 468, 473
Nielsen, Aldon L. 304, 331
Nielson, Aldon 162, 404, 473
Nimmo, Kurt 525
Norman, Peter 45, 546, 549
Norton, John 4, 453
Notley, Alice 397
Nowak, Mark 523, 537
O'Hara, Frank 183, 194, 195, 214, 223, 230, 245, 254, 268
Obenzinger, Hilton 404, 537
Oliver, Laura 248
Olson, Charles 45, 59, 82, 84, 103, 509, 610, 611
Ondaatje, Michael 257, 306, 392, 403, 426, 433
Oppen, George 209
Oswald, John 541
Pacific, Asian 526, 582, 587
Padgett, Ron 254, 261, 268
Palmer, Michael 58, 126, 130
Parker, Charlie 195
Parker, Karl 194

Patterson, Ian 229, 244, 247
Peirce, Kathleen 402
Perelman, Bob 50, 121, 304, 331, 336
Perloff, Marjorie 403, 407, 414, 415, 453, 529
Phillip, Andrew 300
Phillips, Malcolm 167
Piombino, Nick 73, 519
Pitt, Brad 54
Pollock, Jackson 383, 459
Porter, Anne 229, 244, 247, 361
Pound, Ezra 45, 123, 523
Pound, Scott 82, 109, 133, 205, 310, 383, 553
Presjnar, Mark 324
Price, Larry 167
Prince, Richard 373
Pritchett, Patrick 10, 125, 133, 160, 232, 309, 330, 380, 412, 434, 453, 475, 483, 515, 602
Purves, Robin 23
Quayle, Dan 201
Rakosi, Carl 529
Ramsdell, Heather 266
Randall, Karen 241
Raworth, Tom 91, 125, 131, 133, 288, 330, 380
Redgrove, Peter 306
Regan, Max 103
Reiner, Chris 344, 524
Retallack, Joan 73
Reuters, Boston 288
Ribot, Marc 524
Richards, Brian 453
Ridge, Tom 489, 606
Riding, Laura 8
Roberts, Wendy 136
Robertson, Lisa 301, 303, 316, 419
Robertson, Pat 316, 419
Robinson, Mary 77, 150
Rodefer, Stephen 229, 244, 247, 288, 554, 555
Roitman, Judith 311
Roosevelt, Franklin 87, 328
Rosenberg, Jim 250
Rosenfield, Kim 381
Rothschild, Douglas 229, 244, 247, 381
Roubaud, Jacques 498
Rowan, Lou 296
Saroyan, William 107
Scalapino, Leslie 77, 150, 262, 336
Schelling, Andrew 2
Schjeldahl, Peter 254, 268
Schmidt, Michael 529
Schultz, Lou 17, 29
Schultz, Susan M. 248, 366, 526, 527
Schwartz, Judy 244, 247, 534
Schwartz, Leonard 229, 378, 381
Schwerner, Armand 404, 523
Selby, Spencer 395
Shakespeare, William 201, 445, 462
Shapiro, David 229, 244, 247, 361
Shapiro, Gary 244, 247
Sharma, Prageeta 554, 555
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 442
Sherry, James 229, 244, 247, 316, 419
Shurin, Aaron 167, 395
Sikelianos, Eleni 244, 247, 362
Silliman, Ron 78, 87, 103, 134, 147, 160, 161, 168, 304, 331, 453, 538
Simic, Charles 63
Simon, Greg 73
Simone, Frank 296
Simpson, Bennett 229, 244, 247, 381, 526
Simpson, Louis 526, 527, 528, 536
Skinner, Jonathan 606
Smith, Dale 138, 160
Smith, Harry 101
Smith, Rod 59, 78, 131, 262, 288, 336, 362
Smith, Tracy K. 73, 101, 288, 362, 381
Sokal, Alan 7, 8, 9, 24, 26, 45, 48, 71, 115, 201, 272, 354, 393, 398, 402, 424, 468, 470, 478, 485, 486, 487, 495, 546, 547, 549, 600, 604, 605, 610
Sorrentino, Christopher 197
Spahr, Boyd 304, 331
Spandrift, Jack 6, 104, 456, 569
Spicer, Jack 59, 260, 304, 331
Spinelli, Martin 404
Stalin, Joseph 550
Stanford, Frank 558
Stanley, Jared 201, 234, 546, 549
Statman, Mark 361
Stecopoulos, Eleni 553
Stefans, Kim 288, 316, 419
Stein, Gertrude 304, 328, 331, 419, 576
Stein, Julia 87, 89
Stein, Suzanne 16, 46, 153, 188, 328, 383
Stevens, Wallace 8, 45, 48, 506, 535, 538
Strickland, Stephanie 296, 423, 488
Stroffolino, Chris 304, 331, 378, 534
Sutherland, Keston 361
Swensen, Cole 330, 380
Tal, Kali 11, 14, 15, 25
Tardos, Anne 73
Taylor, Jesse 17, 29, 270, 273, 282, 310, 556
Templeton, Fiona 341, 381
Texas, Irving 600, 605
Thomas, Dylan 108, 136, 310, 461
Torra, Joe 499
Trevor, Jesse 75, 242
Turing, Alan 48
Tzara, Tristan 306
Vallejo, César 121
Vendler, Helen 90
Viereck, Peter 411
Virgil 525

Vitiello, Chris 248
Waldman, Anne 330, 380
Waldman, Ken 2
Waldrop, Keith 155
Waldrop, Rosemary 73, 155
Waldrop, Rosmarie 302, 304, 331
Walker, Alice 11, 14, 15, 25, 510, 523
Wallace, Sara 45, 122
Walsh, Catherine 316, 419
Warhol, Andy 251
Warren, Jim 412
Warsh, Lewis 381
Washington, George 607
Washington, Harold 45, 87, 201, 478, 489, 603
Wasserman, Ann 288
Watten, Barrett 78, 218, 304, 328, 331, 333, 334, 336, 339, 381, 436, 456, 474, 475, 491, 499, 577
Webster, Daniel 331
Webster, Noah 304
Weinberger, Eliot 127, 409, 416, 422, 468, 470
Weiner, Hannah 58, 364
Whitehead, Helen 82
Whitman, Walt 119, 120
Wiener, Hannah 518, 548
Williams, Jonathan 177
Williams, Robin 412
Williams, Tony 82, 84, 92, 109, 119, 155, 205
Williams, William Carlos 82
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 71, 498, 600, 605
Wolsak, Melissa 44, 452, 458
Woolf, Virginia 298, 437, 454, 561
Wordsworth, William 445, 453, 462
Wright, James 3, 127, 136, 365
Wright, Richard 3
Yamanaka, Ann 606
Yau, John 251
Zukofsky, Louis 153, 188, 213, 221, 252, 260, 314, 383

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 58, 59, 121, 187, 368, 490
Aesthetics 5, 31, 82, 97, 99, 102, 105, 116, 163, 190, 201, 228, 251, 272, 290, 322, 350, 404, 491
Anthologies 4, 10, 101, 164, 167, 169, 170, 286, 287, 301, 303, 306, 314, 345, 378, 391, 412, 453, 505, 531, 540
Anti-Semitism 12
Appropriation 79, 81, 139, 147, 148, 201, 228, 296, 547, 562
Archives and libraries 12, 71, 72, 138, 164, 167, 169, 170, 188, 218, 241, 280, 345, 362, 363, 448, 457, 459, 494, 558, 579
Asian American poetry 148
Autobiography 152, 195, 258, 267, 540, 595
Avant-garde 523
Beauty 12, 187, 209, 290, 322, 350, 531
Biography 73, 177, 183, 194, 195, 214, 223, 230, 245, 254, 268, 286, 287, 336, 375, 461, 538
Book announcements 9, 17, 29, 32, 58, 100, 134, 155, 167, 248, 298, 337, 344, 363, 368, 396, 449, 465, 466, 499, 540, 606
Bookstores 29, 382, 390, 428, 529, 540
Capitalism 12, 321, 546, 549, 610, 611
Cities 12, 116, 146, 428
Class 178, 200
Close reading 329, 517
Collage and montage 520, 541
Conferences and festivals 385, 404, 406, 447, 448, 450, 457, 459, 489, 520, 523, 537, 558, 603
Copyright and permissions 72, 188, 189, 208, 268, 461, 477, 541
Craft 71, 190
Creative writing pedagogy 198, 200, 345
Deconstruction 7, 45, 71, 103, 210, 235, 416, 478, 600, 605
Difficulty 41, 72, 107, 263
Dreams 45, 60, 298, 300, 373, 400, 546, 549, 558
Ecology and ecopoetics 201, 393, 398, 478, 484, 600, 605
Editing 72, 167, 169, 170, 181, 254, 268, 336, 525, 531, 563, 566, 568, 570, 572 Electronic poetry and hypertext 18, 33, 34, 37, 39, 72, 87, 100, 183, 248, 296, 304, 331, 364, 366, 386, 390, 423, 483, 499, 526, 527, 560
Elegy 345
Empire and imperialism 12, 79, 81, 515
Epistemology 45, 71, 201, 546, 549
Ethics 209
Experimental poetry 360
Fascism 31, 59, 407, 411, 412, 414, 415
Feminism 93, 124, 188, 283, 424
Film 12, 17, 29, 54, 167, 169, 170, 194, 195, 197, 214, 223, 230, 245, 291, 310, 412, 531, 558, 602
Formalism 411, 414, 425, 463, 532, 539, 606
Free verse 403, 407, 411, 412, 414, 415
Futurism 43, 182, 328, 546, 549
Gender 41, 77, 200, 241, 424
Grants and funding 13, 41, 134, 162, 164, 167, 171, 175, 176, 327, 332, 346, 351, 363, 396, 407, 411, 412, 414, 415, 478, 606
Hermeneutics 45, 71, 201, 486
Humour and satire 103, 267, 324, 330, 380, 512, 531, 535, 546, 549
Ideology 31, 45, 59, 94, 103, 107, 407, 411, 412, 414, 415, 416, 436, 491, 509

Imagism 35, 49, 82, 323, 324, 339
Improvisation 288, 415, 514
Indigenous and Native poetics 108
Interviews 14, 25, 72, 73, 101, 143, 155, 188, 191, 216, 449, 465, 529, 541, 576
Israel and Palestine 7, 9, 54, 108, 116, 137, 139, 246, 351, 355, 511, 520, 532, 539, 541, 595
Jewish poetics 19, 21, 74, 101
Language poetry 5, 33, 34, 37, 39, 40, 42, 43, 50, 53, 54, 55, 56, 58, 59, 61, 62, 63, 64, 66, 67, 68, 73, 77, 78, 79, 80, 83, 86, 88, 90, 93, 94, 96, 97, 98, 99, 102, 103, 104, 105, 107, 114, 116, 117, 118, 121, 122, 123, 124, 126, 128, 130, 134, 135, 138, 139, 145, 146, 147, 151, 152, 154, 158, 159, 160, 161, 163, 168, 172, 174, 178, 182, 187, 188, 190, 191, 196, 204, 206, 210, 212, 213, 218, 221, 228, 233, 246, 251, 252, 258, 260, 304, 324, 328, 331, 339, 436, 491, 562
Latino and Latin American poetry 490
Letters and correspondence 45, 72, 136, 254, 261, 268, 354, 491
List moderation 115, 156, 432, 439, 441, 537
Little magazines 4, 10, 18, 45, 72, 124, 134, 192, 229, 244, 246, 247, 266, 304, 313, 329, 331, 339, 362, 368, 381, 382, 390, 407, 411, 412, 414, 415, 442, 493, 507, 526, 529, 563, 566, 568, 570, 572
Lyric poetry 5, 93, 121, 291, 315, 320, 368, 436, 453
Marxism 58, 178, 328, 532, 600, 605
Materiality of the text 304, 331, 436, 491
Memory 12, 17, 18, 29, 35, 145, 203, 217, 282, 298, 352, 353, 357, 362, 367, 379, 437, 454, 520, 550, 561
MFA programs 13, 41, 43, 84
Modernism 45, 55, 85, 93, 121, 133, 139, 222, 253, 312, 328, 436, 453, 478, 485, 532, 546, 549, 600, 604, 605
Mourning and loss 72, 169, 170, 175, 176, 178, 181, 200, 260, 364, 373, 386, 390, 404, 525, 546, 549, 560
Multiculturalism 606
Music and poetry 45, 69, 70, 73, 74, 101, 124, 127, 139, 174, 182, 187, 201, 209, 212, 218, 221, 230, 252, 260, 270, 288, 289, 295, 343, 368, 380, 404, 412, 415, 419, 425, 432, 439, 446, 449, 450, 453, 465, 499, 540, 541, 562
Nationalism 509
Nature 12, 45, 59, 72, 82, 93, 95, 126, 130, 138, 160, 188, 195, 201, 209, 234, 275, 350, 384, 393, 398, 403, 407, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 453, 468, 478, 485, 491, 495, 525, 546, 549, 606
Negativity and refusal 339
New Formalism 606
New York School 78
Négritude 404
Obituary and memorial 72, 525
Objectivism 82, 92
Ontology 200, 234, 354, 495
Oulipo 498
Performance and the poetry reading 13, 41, 170, 191, 310, 312, 340, 381, 499, 537, 606
Phenomenology 45, 82, 114
Philosophy 45, 48, 57, 71, 86, 88, 90, 114, 115, 139, 211, 226, 393, 398, 402, 424, 470, 495, 509, 600, 604, 605
Place and region 12, 439, 441, 546, 549
Poet laureate 419
Poetics 10, 12, 13, 30, 41, 46, 53, 55, 56, 58, 59, 72, 73, 77, 82, 85, 86, 115, 116, 117, 126, 130, 132, 138, 146, 150, 152, 157, 165, 176, 180, 191, 201, 209, 258, 259, 263, 266, 278, 286, 287, 290, 302, 304, 314, 331, 336, 396, 412, 413, 428, 434, 436, 453, 461, 475, 489, 491, 515, 516, 517, 539, 546, 549, 560, 580, 581, 583, 594, 595, 597, 598, 599, 606, 609
Post-structuralism 59, 103
Postmodernism 45, 55, 93, 139, 222, 253, 478, 485, 532, 546, 549, 600, 604, 605
Print vs. digital 7, 45, 251, 279, 328, 507, 524, 548, 550, 606
Prizes and awards 71, 229, 232, 238, 244, 247, 316, 419, 423, 489, 558, 606
Procedural and constraint writing 201, 209
Prose poem 105
Prosody and meter 107, 407, 411, 412, 414, 415, 499, 535
Psychoanalysis 7, 24, 315, 352, 546, 549
Queer poetics 13, 41, 74, 87, 101
Race and poetry 8, 13, 19, 21, 41, 103, 200, 501, 563, 566, 568, 570, 572, 600, 605
Reading announcements 125, 133, 191, 356, 381, 424, 443, 523, 544, 545
Religion and the sacred 28, 31, 40, 42, 45, 48, 54, 113, 119, 144, 209, 300, 310, 486, 509, 539
Representation 208, 322, 393, 398, 436, 491
Reviewing and criticism 45, 72, 91, 93, 94, 96, 97, 105, 107, 139, 141, 143, 144, 149, 177, 185, 201, 229, 244, 247, 248, 270, 271, 282, 284, 310, 323, 359, 363, 380, 396, 404, 406, 413, 476, 486, 489, 524, 525, 546, 549, 585, 595, 600, 605
Revision 453
Science 7, 24, 26, 45, 48, 71, 96, 97, 105, 115, 201, 209, 217, 264, 265, 272, 290, 291, 293, 298, 300, 322, 329, 350, 354, 358, 393, 398, 403, 407, 411, 412, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 420, 422, 423, 440,

444, 451, 460, 468, 473, 478, 482, 495, 498, 512, 516, 517, 532, 546, 549, 600, 605, 610, 611
Semiotics 36, 173, 186, 187, 207, 208, 211, 226, 329, 564, 571
Serial poem 302, 330, 380, 428
Sestina 495
Small press publishing 13, 17, 29, 41, 72, 108, 248, 280, 281, 301, 303, 342, 366, 368, 482, 529, 538, 541, 606
Software and code 12, 209, 239, 350, 540
Sonnet 269, 403, 407, 408, 414, 415, 425, 426, 431, 433, 445, 462, 463, 464, 466, 488, 494, 495, 503, 509, 510, 532
Sound poetry 139
Structuralism 19, 21, 59, 103
Subjectivity 18, 45, 72, 82, 92, 93, 174, 187, 209, 216, 288, 321, 423, 453, 512, 546, 549
Surrealism 55, 61, 63, 66, 68, 80, 86, 121, 127, 139, 151, 155, 306, 568
Terrorism 419
The academy 41, 45, 72, 73, 95, 98, 103, 123, 125, 128, 133, 136, 145, 149, 164, 167, 169, 170, 171, 175, 176, 212, 217, 218, 219, 222, 231, 248, 253, 257, 259, 262, 263, 283, 298, 306, 310, 340, 357, 358, 366, 372, 385, 387, 391, 392, 398, 403, 404, 417, 418, 419, 426, 433, 437, 451, 454, 459, 478, 489, 498, 514, 525, 526, 527, 529, 530, 536, 541, 543, 544, 561, 578, 579, 606
The body 72, 208, 211, 226, 296, 400, 449, 465, 541
The canon 45, 523
The Holocaust 307
The internet 7, 84, 189, 263, 266, 286, 287, 296, 298, 337, 344, 372, 385, 387, 391, 483, 525, 529, 541, 574, 579
The line 72, 563, 566, 568, 570, 572
The listserv 1, 7, 9, 19, 21, 33, 35, 37, 39, 41, 44, 58, 72, 114, 138, 141, 143, 144, 149, 151, 153, 155, 161, 164, 168, 176, 183, 194, 195, 227, 242, 245, 266, 278, 305, 316, 318, 323, 328, 336, 376, 377, 402, 409, 410, 419, 430, 431, 445, 460, 461, 464, 466, 475, 483, 499, 525, 556, 568, 586, 590, 591, 600, 605
Theatre 243, 312, 606
Translation 45, 48, 127, 155, 156, 159, 184, 185, 189, 208, 210, 301, 303, 329, 357, 368, 404, 441, 453, 478, 507, 548, 606
Vietnam 59, 88, 103, 525
Visual and concrete poetry 107, 139
Visual art 93, 96, 97, 105, 139, 145, 152, 285, 310, 323, 339, 356, 368, 388, 391, 419, 553
Women's writing 417, 418, 451, 493, 498, 501, 507

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 611 in all.

1 OCT 1997

1. Rachel Levitsky — Re: thanks
2. aerialedge — Re: Lynn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
3. George Bowering — Re: People of Color
4. George Bowering — Re: Lynn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of Closure"
5. Fredrik Hertzberg — Re: Social Tangles
6. henry — Re: Social Tangles
7. David R. Israel — (Fwd) impostures intellectuelles
8. Jordan Davis — Re: (Fwd) impostures intellectuelles
9. Pierre Joris — Re: (Fwd) impostures intellectuelles
10. Pritchett,Pat — Re: Lynn Hejinian's essay "Rejection of
11. Holly Crawford — Re: Weapons named after people & military slang
12. Alan Jen Sondheim — Ma, A Novel
13. megan minka lola camille roy — class & "innovative writing"
14. mark weiss — Re: Weapons named after people & military slang
15. Lawrence Upton. — Re: Weapons named after people & military slang
16. Aldon Nielsen — Re: That was no gentleman, that was a shrinking violet
17. Christopher Reiner — New book: The Grouper
18. John Cayley — mute & visible language
19. Safdie Joseph — Re: Race, identity, otherness, us-ness, stereotypes....
20. Susan Clark — addresses anyone?
21. James Finnegan — Re: Race, identity, otherness, us-ness, stereotypes....
22. Peter Ganick — snailmail address needed

2 OCT 1997

23. Mark W Scroggins — more addresses needed
24. Tom Orange — impostures intellectuelles
25. Holly Crawford — Re: Weapons named after people & military slang
26. Tom Beard — Re: (Fwd) impostures intellectuelles
27. mark weiss — (no subject)
28. henry gould — Re: social tumbles
29. Douglas — Re: New book: The Grouper
30. Mark Prejsnar — Re: class & "innovative writing"
31. Charles Weigl — social tumbles
32. simon — Re: New book: The Grouper
33. Mark Wallace — language poetry bashing
34. Mark Wallace — oops
35. David Bromige — no more language-bashing
36. henry g — Re: no more language-bashing
37. Jack Foley — language poetry bashing -Reply
38. acgold01 — Quote of the Day
39. mark weiss — Re: language poetry bashing
40. Don Wellman — Re: language poetry bashing
41. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — Re: class & "innovative writing"
42. George Thompson — Re: language poetry bashing
43. James Finnegan — Re: language poetry bashing
44. David Bromige — Melissa Wolsak
45. R. Gancie — Oh No! Not That Sokal Yokel
46. Susan Wheeler — Re: POETICS Digest - 30 Sep 1997 to 1 Oct 1997

3 OCT 1997

47. Tom Beard — Re: "Yokel"

48. Tom Beard — Yokels
49. George Bowering — Re: no more language-bashing
50. Mark Prejsnar — Re: language poetry bashing
51. Maria Damon — Re: Quote of the Day
52. Miles Champion — Ron Silliman's Ketjak & The Age of Huts
53. henryg — Re: language poetry bashing
54. David R. Israel — what the Buddha knows
55. William Burmeister Prod — Re: language poetry bashing
56. William Burmeister Prod — Re: language poetry bashing
57. Aldon Nielsen — Re: no more language-bashing
58. Michael Coffey — Re: language poetry bashing -Reply
59. aerialedge — an attempt
60. henry oh oh — Re: an attempt
61. James Finnegan — Re: language poetry bashing
62. henry oh oh — Re: language poetry bashing
63. William Burmeister Prod — Re: language poetry bashing
64. Aviva Vogel — Re: language poetry bashing
65. Aviva Vogel — Re: Quote of the Day
66. Aviva Vogel — Re: language poetry bashing
67. Aviva Vogel — Re: language poetry bashing -Reply
