The precedent letter was sent in too much hurry. Proof:
There were three electors from Warsaw for the worker curia.
 Comedians! They can repeat it. They know it by heart.
   Today a meeting of the Lefts here: everyone came,
2 Swiss + 2 foreigners (Germans) + 3 Russ. Jew. Polish.
Schwach! There it is, my fate. I think it will be almost a failure. [The lecture did not come off, only a talk.--Ed.]
Now there is Radek. We (Zinoviev and I) recognized Bukharin.
The article by Nota Bene No. 6 of Jugend-Internationale have you seen it? I replied to his stupidities in No. 2.
You haven't seen it? It was already a few days ago.
   How I laughed at your postcard, I really had to hold my sides, "In France there is no such measure as the ha, but there is the acre, and you don't know how big an acre is . . . " Ha ha ha! It was France--imaginez vous?--that introduce the metric system. A ha = hectare = 100 ares.
An acre is not a French measure but an English one.
It really is funny that you do not often come across the words hectare, ha, etc. They are dull, technical words hugely

politick:

"I advise you to throw out altogether

#3

the "demand (women's) for freedom of love".

Sent from Berne Collected Works
Vol 35, pp. 180-81

165: REFERENCE IS TO A PAMPHLET
FOR WORKING CLASS WOMEN THAT INESSA INTENDED TO WRITE.
THE PAMPHLET WAS NEVER WRITTEN.

S. Vinogradov: Sokvovischa dushevnoi krasoty (Moscow, 1984)

December 1913 - April 1917
Lenin / Armand's correspondence

Armand, I.F. (Inessa Fedorovna, 1874-1920)
STATI, RECHI, PISMA (Moskva: Politizdat, 1975)

R A B O N I T S A

Pavel Podliashuk, Tovarisch Inessa:
"dokumental'naia povest" 4 ed. (Moscow, 1984).

"He walked with his eyes closed and every moment we thought he might fall to the ground."

Quoted by Marcel Body,
"Alexandra Kollontai," Preuves (Paris),
vol. II, no. 14 (April 1952), p. 17.

Jean Freville, Une grand figure de la Revolution russe: Inessa Armand (Paris, 1957).

Lenin: vols. XLVIII & XLIX of POLNE SOBRANIE SOCHINENII

↑ Index

266. Clark D Lunberry back/words
Tue 25 May 1999

From Tuesday's NY TImes:

May 25, 1999

Untangling Speech

By HENRY FOUNTAIN Back in the 1960's, fans of the Beatles spent hours playing their albums backward, destroying many a phonograph needle in an effort to decipher messages supposedly recorded in reverse concerning Paul McCartney's fate.

New research shows, however, that backward speech does not have to be unintelligible. Much as the brain can fill in missing words in a half-heard sentence at a noisy cocktail party, it can also make sense of reversed speech. If the Beatles had recorded "Paul is dead" in a certain way, all those needles might have been saved.

In the new study, reported in a recent issue of Nature, scientists at the California Institute of Technology and California State University at Los Angeles took a recorded sentence, broke it into equal short segments, and reversed each segment. They strung all the reversed segments together and played the sentence to listeners.

When the segments were about 50 milliseconds in length, the sentence was perfectly intelligible. As segments got longer, however, intelligibility declined, approaching zero when they reached 200 milliseconds.

The research lends support to recent theories of how speech is perceived. These theories hold that the brain does not rely so much on analyzing the spectrum of short-term sounds as it does on lower-frequency cues like intonation and modulation. As long as the segments were short enough, the brain was still able to decipher these cues.

↑ Index

267. shemurph
contact info for Garrett Caples?
Wed 26 May 1999

Does anyone have an address (e-mail) handy for Garrett Caples? I recently experienced a hard-drive crash and my address book has been turned to powder. Please backchannel.

Sheila Murphy
[redacted]

↑ Index

268. rebecca wolff
fence party
Wed 26 May 1999

Please come to rock Fence #3:

Thursday evening, June 17th, 8pm
533 Canal Street, #3, over by the Hudson River, New York City

Dancing, drinks, party favors: bring friends!

$5 to help us cover costs and to help us pay for Fence

↑ Index

269. rebecca wolff
work within the system, it's fun
Wed 26 May 1999

I hope anyone who's in the area and who is connected to or invested in the production and sale of literary magazines will come to a panel I've been working on (with CLMP) which has finally come to fruition.

It should be good, and what's more, it should be the start of something bigger, ie, revolutionary organization.

"The Retail Market: A Conversation for Literary Magazines about Bookstores and Single Copy Sales" with panelists Faye Kosmidis (DeBoer Distribution), Sheryl Carlson (Barnes & Noble newsstand division manager), Ian Brand (Bookseller, Labyrinth Books, NY), Philip Fried (editor, The Manhattan Review), moderator Jenine Gordon Bockman, editor Literal Latte.

Wednesday, June 2nd at 6:30pm
Teachers and Writers Collaborative, 5 Union Square West, New York City
Free admission for staff of lit mags, $5 for others.

email me for further information

↑ Index

270. Joe Brennan
Fwd: BUSH'S INTERNET NIGHTMARE CONTINUES
Wed 26 May 1999

---

f.y.i....

Return-Path: <[redacted]> air-zc05.mail.aol.com (v59.24) with SMTP; Wed, 26 May 1999 08:59:30

-0400
by rly-zc03.mx.aol.com (8.8.8/8.8.5/AOL-4.0.0)
with SMTP id IAA06897 for <[redacted]>; Wed, 26 May 1999 08:59:28 -0400 (EDT)
Wed, 26 May 1999 05:59:28 PDT
From: "JR Foley" <[redacted]>
To: [redacted], [redacted]
Subject: Fwd: BUSH'S INTERNET NIGHTMARE CONTINUES
Date: Wed, 26 May 1999 05:59:28 PDT

More For Your Amusement

> From: "rtmark.FLPOINT" <[redacted]>
> To: "George W. Bush" <[redacted]>
> Subject: BUSH'S INTERNET NIGHTMARE CONTINUES
> Date: Wed, 26 May 1999 03:02:07 -0400
>
> This is a press release, not a commercial solicitation. To get > [redacted] off our lists, write > mailto:[redacted]?subject=[redacted] ([redacted] > must appear in your message subject or body).
>
> FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
> May 26, 1999
>
> BUSH REQUESTS "LIMITS TO FREEDOM"
> Internet bites Bush: Not news. Bush bites Internet: News!
>
> Contact: Ray Thomas (mailto:[redacted])
> Zack Exley (mailto:[redacted])
>
> The satirical website GWBush.com has received several million hits since a press conference Friday at which Texas governor and probable presidential candidate George W. Bush called its owner "a garbage man" and said "There ought to be limits to freedom." The outburst followed two separate attempts by Bush campaign attorneys to shut down the site. (For coverage of the comments, please visit the press archive at http://gwbush.com/.)
>
> Those behind GWBush.com--a Boston computer consultant named Zack Exley, and RTMARK--ascribe their site's newfound notoriety to the interesting nature of Bush's words themselves, and also to the ease and speed with which ordinary people can make their voices heard on the Internet. The statement, besides being broadcast on television and reprinted in hundreds of newspapers in the U.S. and abroad, immediately became a hot topic of discussion on the Internet.
>
> According to RTMARK spokesperson Ray Thomas, "Anyone at all can now compete for attention with huge, wealthy corporations--or with well-funded candidates. Bush's 'limits to freedom' quote is interesting because it reflects the (usually unspoken) desire of certain market segments to suppress this potential of the Internet."

"The Internet has amplified the voice of the ordinary citizen," said Exley. "This web site is only two months old and cost only $210, yet we already have more readers than many major political magazines. Americans are excited about this new power and freedom, and they will distrust a candidate who says he wants to limit that freedom."

Bush's statement was the latest in a series of widely-reported gaffes related to GWBush.com. Here follows a blow-by-blow account of the action:

1. The Bush campaign fails to reserve permutations of Bush's name, and in December of 1998 Zack Exley purchases GWBush.com, GWBush.org and GBush.org.

2. Upon noticing GWBush.com, with content by RTMARK and Exley, Bush campaign advisor Karl Rove belatedly scrambles to reserve up to 260 'bush'-related domain names (Bush campaign accounts of the actual number vary). When this frenzy becomes a running joke on the internet, Bush spokespeople claim the names were reserved in the summer of 1998. (Internic records available to the public reveal that the domains names were in fact reserved two months after Exley reserved his.)

3. Bush attorney Benjamin Ginsberg sends Exley a cease-and-desist letter, and shortly afterward registers a complaint with the Federal Elections Commission.

4. The Bush campaign tells press interested in the above situation that GWBush.com contains click-throughs to pornography sites. RTMARK and Exley are inundated with emails from frustrated visitors seeking pictures of nude women. (Note: GWBush.com has never contained nor linked to pornographic images of any kind.)

5. The Bush campaign tells press that GWBush.com is deceptive. (Meanwhile, the Bush campaign uses the negative domain names it has bought--bushblows.com, bushsux.org, etc.--to point unsuspecting Internet users to the official campaign website.)

6. Governor Bush himself lashes out at GWBush.com at a televised press conference, calling the site's owner "a garbage man" and saying "There ought to be limits to freedom." The quote is widely reported and becomes a hot topic of discussion on the Internet.

7. Domain name speculators begin snapping up other names related to the Bush campaign, like gwcocainejr.com, bush-lite.com, and cokeisbush.com. GWBush.com itself has so far reserved justsayyestobush.com, fantasticbush.com, bushisnicelydressed.org, and about a dozen others.

> For more about GWBush.com, including a partial press archive and letters from visitors, please visit the site itself.
>
> RTMARK (http://rtmark.com/) uses its limited liability as a corporation to sponsor the sabotage of mass-produced products. One of RTMARK's ultimate aims is to eliminate the principle of limited liability. Occasionally, as with http://www.gwbush.com/, RTMARK participates in advocacy directly related to issues of corporate abuses of the political process.
>
> # 30 #
>
> This is a press release, not a commercial solicitation. To get [redacted] off our lists, write mailto:[redacted]?subject=[redacted] ([redacted] must appear in your message subject or body).
>
> If you have received multiple copies of this notice and wish to receive only one, please remove as above all address versions but one.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

271. jarnot

Brooklyn summer sublet

Wed 26 May 1999

Summer sublet available--

One bedroom apartment (share with one cat) available from Friday June 11- Sunday June 27th (2 weeks+) $350 plus security deposit
Metropolitan Avenue near Bedford in Williamsburg/Brooklyn
5 minute walk to L train
10 minutes to manhattan/lower east side

please contact Lisa Jarnot
[redacted]
[redacted]

↑ Index

272. Annie Finch found poetry
Wed 26 May 1999

Jena-- Keith Tuma just wrote a piece on found poetry for the forthcoming Exaltation of Forms anthology (which you know well because you'll be in it too!). In case he's not lurking on the list right now, his email is [redacted].

Annie

> I'm interested in poems that were "found" inside of other texts (such as Cage's mesostics and Reznikoff's _Testimony_). What are some favorites in this genre by others? Any critical texts about these kinds of procedures I should know about?
>
> Thanks,
> Jena Osman

_____
Annie Finch (http://muohio.edu/~finchar)
Cincinnati, Ohio
Associate Professor of English/Creative Writing
Miami University

↑ Index

273. Poetry Project
workshops with Larry Fagin
Wed 26 May 1999

Another public announcement:

Larry Fagin is presently available to work with students privately, either poetry or prose fiction writers, for $50 per session. Each session will be 1-2 hours. If interested, please call [redacted].

↑ Index

274. David Baptiste Chirot
Re: found poetry
Wed 26 May 1999

My favorite such book is Ronald Johnson's RADI OS made out of Milton's Paradise Lost. Working with found materials has become an honored tradition in 20th century art: in painting, film, poetry, prose and music and dance. Following a dictum of Henry Miller's in the "14th Ward" section of BLACK SPRING ("What is not in the open street is false, derived, that is to say, literature.") I make poems and visual poems out of materials found on street.

Most recently make works by rubbing with charcoal on to paper worrds and words made out of the existing letters only, found on trash containers, autos, sewer covers, police cll boxes, hydrants, buildings--anything that is raised and can be rubbed on to paper. Using a finite set of given letters is challenging and many strange messages emerge. Not to mention n can practice Situationist detournement of original messages. Found materials abound. My only caution: watch out for the police! Not always too friendly to those who make "ST WORKS"! Also many found objects, papers, etc etc may be used as stencils or stamps when wetted with spray paint. Or make transfers from newspapers using lighter fluid. The dictionary a page at a time is a good source for work. Burroughs' and Gysins' works are interesting--Gysin had the idea in the Fifties that writing lagged behind painting-- In Spring and All W.C. Williams already was using painting as a model-- dbchirot

On Tue, 25 May 1999, Jena Osman wrote:

> I'm interested in poems that were "found" inside of other texts (such as Cage's mesostics and Reznikoff's _Testimony_). What are some favorites in this genre by others? Any critical texts about these kinds of procedures I should know about?
>
> Thanks,
> Jena Osman
> [redacted]

↑ Index

275. Joe Brennan
Muse, censorship, and copyright....
Wed 26 May 1999

---

the following is from a post by Pat Sloane one the t.s.e. list. since it could be of interest to many on this list, I thought I would pass it along.

joe brennan

In a message dated 5/26/99 11:21:44 AM Eastern Daylight Time, [redacted] writes:

I don't want to center on Muse, because there are about a dozen companies selling their $3600 or $4500 subscription to Universities. They're trying to establish a monopoly on information that used to be available for free. They think they're going to force every single university library to subscribe, which isn't going to happen because libraries are getting their budgets cut left and right and many couldn't have afforded those kinds of fees in the first place. People getting caught in the middle are independent scholars--of whom we now have an enormous number--faculty and students at colleges that don't subscribe or can't afford to subscribe, and anyone who prefers to work at home...as many people do. Even today, there are plenty of colleges still using 286 and 386 computers.

I call it the new censorship. There's a bill before Congress right now giving database owners rights to the material in their database. This means if you want to quote from an article in a journal that's affiliated with Muse, you'll need permission from Muse, and judging from how all of these vendors are skinning universities alive on their subscription fees, the cost of permission won't be inconsequential. This biggest problem is going to be with medical journals, because not every doctor is affiliated with a university, or a university that subscribes to everything. Lawyers have had Westlaw for some time, and they're used to paying big fees which they can pass on to clients. Westlaw, at least, has individual subscriptions. If you know anything about the history of monopolistic practices in any field, you'll recognize what you're seeing. Corner the market and you can charge what you want. I think it's important for anyone publishing to retain the copyright in his or her own name, because we can't count on the courtesies of the past.

The one counter-force I notice is the many electronic journals that are available to anyone, and are free. I don't think many academics expect to make money off of journal articles. But you at least hope they'll be seen so that when you do a book people will know who you are. I'm against anything that cuts down the number of people who can see the material. And of course this is not anything Richard can do anything about. We're all caught up in something evil.

Same thing happened long ago with publishers, and this is why publishers aren't doing the kind of job they did years ago. It used to be that a publisher was satisfied to make a decent profit overall, and they printed some books that they thought were worthwhile but probably not big money makers, and it all averaged out. Now, with some many publishers owned by Time-Warner and similar conglomerates, a decent profit isn't enough. Now they're all gunning for an enormous profit, which is why the balance is tipping towards tell-all books by celebrities. Read the stock market page to see where our lives are--every company has to assure "investors" that they'll make more money this year than last year. Whether the company is making a decent product, or a product they can be proud of, gets much less attention.

pat

↑ Index

276. Michael Krebs
Re: the suck of art
Wed 26 May 1999

Don't you find it interesting that we, as a species, (like it or not) have but three options: war, famine, or pandemic? These types of queries - is anybody going to do anything, this act of DOING in response to one of the three inevitable options mentioned above - are missing a core beat. We ARE doing. We are in a momentum, a spiral toward extinction.

The harder question to ask our fellow species is this: is anyone doing anything about overpopulation and the global pandemic we - as anthropocentrists - refer to as humanity? The answer can be found partially in Yugoslavia. Controlled warfare - where many lives are lost in a select area - is a better option than famine (which we can expect to emerge out of The Middle East and China and other far-too-populated locations) and the random sweeping of disease (which does not obey borders, ethnicities, etc.)

The ecology is tilted, and it is lost. What to do. What to do. Wear a condom and forget god. There's a start.

On Mon, 24 May 1999 23:42:54 -0400, Jordan Davis wrote:

> anybody doing anything about this war we're having?
> or this capitalism we're hoovering?
> or this atomization of the intelligence we're endrunning by singing along with creative studies?
>
> Isn't political efficacy something poetry goes alongside of, is inspired by, inspires, or does it have to EMBODY it -- ENACTMENT HOUNDS, they called them --
>
> please implicate me,
> Jordan

Get your free, private email at http://mail.excite.com/

↑ Index

277. Julie Johnson
Paradigm Press On-Line
Wed 26 May 1999

Announcing paradigm press on-line.

Duration Press is pleased to announce that it has just launched paradigm on-line.

At this point there is a complete catalog with book descriptions, & ordering information for almost all of paradigm's titles.

the url is:

http://members.xoom.com/Duration/Paradigm/ppresshome.html

↑ Index

278. Poetics List
Howe in NYC / Prevallet
Wed 26 May 1999

---

forwarded from Kristin Prevallet. Chris

From: "kristin prevallet" <[redacted]>
Date: 5/19/99 8:08 PM -0400

Last Friday, Susan Howe and Dominique Fourcade read (Bernstein read the translations) at the Dia foundation. Dia foundation has six or so huge skylights, and as Dominique sweetly read his poems about days made out of snow, and other French things, the light in the room changed from daylight to night. Charles with his perfect French accent (ha ha) gave a loud twang to the translations, and the odd mixture of the two voices made the audience still as statues. It was a wash of Frenchness and sincerity, a bit comatose, yet meditative. Then Susan came on, and did her slide show of _Pierce-Arrow_ (recently published by New Directions)--and WOW! She started with page xii of the book, a Pierce ms with 22 different variations on the phrase "Somebody praises somebody to his face." It was very humorous and Steinian, particularly the way she read it. Then she moved into Pierce's doodles, and his very strange calculations of ones and zeros that were stacked like stairs across the pages (a bizarre binary language, way before its time). Susan read mostly the parts of the book about Pierce's life, but then gradually moved into her poems. She talked in her intro about how she is beginning to see more and more of a connection between poetry and non-symbolic logic, and as she moved further and further into her poems, her slides of the Pierce manuscripts got more and more non-symbolic. It was like cognitive mapping off the map and into an undiscovered intellectual and emotional terrain that was really quite moving.

↑ Index

279. Lisa Samuels
Re: found poetry
Wed 26 May 1999

i'll mention here what i just backchanneled to jena, partly because taylor's informative reply points out that relevant criticism is scarce: i have a collaborative essay, 'deformance and interpretation' (written with jerome mcgann), which engages the matter of playing with/rearranging texts as a mode of critical response (it doesn't specifically or exclusively dealing with 'found' texts). it is in the latest =new literary history= (30.1).

lisa s.

↑ Index

280. Daniel Kane
source for a Ted Berrigan poem?
Wed 26 May 1999

If anyone know the Ted Berrigan poem that the lines

"thru mad Manhattan dressed in books / looking for today"

are from, could you please let me know? I can be backchanneled at <[redacted]>.

Thanks.

↑ Index

281. Joe Brennan
New Summer 1999 FLASHPOINT!!!
Wed 26 May 1999

ANNOUNCING the new SUMMER 1999 issue of

FLASHPOINT
(http://webdelsol.com/FLASHPOINT/)
"Along the frontier where the arts & politics clash ..."

featuring Peter Dale Scott's
"Minding the Darkness: a Poem for the Year 2000"

and
MODERNISM MULCHED

Bottoms Boudreaux Brennan Byrne
Gancie Gould Gudding
Haas Katz Kaufman
Matlin Parcelli Scroggins Foley

plus reviews of
Robert Coover Cris Mazza Lance Olsen Ron Sukenick
Jeff VanderMeer Curtis White

Part of the literary arts complex at
WEB DEL SOL
(http://www.webdelsol.com/)

↑ Index

282. nuyopoman

Re: POETICS Digest - 24 May 1999 to 25 May 1999 (#1999-101)

Wed 26 May 1999

In a message dated 99-05-26 00:09:52 EDT, you write:

<< anybody doing anything about this war we're having? >>

For The Birds

The Birds are whispering
Tweets into my ears
Tweet tweet
Tweet tweet
I must be a Saint
St. All of a Sudden

What are they tweeting?
That is between Me and the Birds

Now I am in The Birds
And they are in me
They are dive-bombing me
They seem no longer
To regard me as saint
And I seem to be running As St. Alfred Lord Hitchcock Screams out "Cut! Cut!"

However the Birds are not cutting
They are not whispering Tweets anymore either
They are slicing and diving
And I am running across the desert

Is it because I would not tell my own people
The secrets of the Birds?

Who are my people, anyway, I ponder
Now that I am a movie star

As I stumble on in the desert Upon the answers I receive Divine illumination and I see Tiny insects swarm round the heads Of the Birds that swarm round me
Tiny insects dive-bomb Birds Birds dive-bomb me

I can no longer translate Tweet tweet into Bzz bzz
Why do you hate me so
I wrote this in the movies
Even in the dark these thoughts
Do not stop dive-bombing
It is dark here
It is hard to write in the dark
It is hard to think in the dark
The bombing outside takes on a steady rhythm
As I pull down my mask, get runway clearance
And take off with my babies under my wings
Claws extended, bill open and screaming Tweet tweet

Bob Holman

↑ Index

283. DEBBIE COMERFORD
SERIAL DIAGRAM
Wed 26 May 1999

To All

Has anyone ever come across a diagram of the serial form? I'm reading Conte's UNENDING DESIGN and working on the serial form in oz poetry. One of oz's excellent cultural theorists, Stephen Muecke, writing on the stories of an Aboriginal writer, Butcher Joe, writes that the series is a "nomadological feature, like that of travelling through the coutnry, one place after another, and a chain of stories, 'and then ... and then ... and then'."

The diagram I have in my mind when I attempt to illustrate (explain) the serial poems I'm working with is a spiral. Now the spiral is very much a part of the Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island cultures....

any thoughts?

regards
deb

↑ Index

284. Chris Stroffolino
Re: workshops with Chris Stroffolino
Thu 27 May 1999

Chris Stroffolino is presently available to work with students privately, either poetry, prose fiction or playwrights, for $49 per session. Each session will be 2-3 hours. If interested, please call [redacted]...

On Wed, 26 May 1999, Poetry Project wrote:

> Another public announcement:
>
> Larry Fagin is presently available to work with students privately, either poetry or prose fiction writers, for $50 per session. Each session will be 1-2 hours. If interested, please call [redacted].

↑ Index

285. Linda Russo
name your enemy/was "on Notley"
Thu 27 May 1999

Dear Stephen,

I agree for the most part (don't know abt the human body/roman sewer) that pluralism is the enemy of opposition (from whence "political" poetry springs) and
'love' is but another sort of pluralism, generous as it is it lets one forget his or her enemies (Spicer said know your enemies) . . . and yet I bet plenty of people on this list could name one or two enemies of poetry (some institution say . . .
a finger has been pointed at Barnes & Noble in the past . . .). Confused about "funding by conservative think-tank money" . . . ? People don't want to bite the hand that feeds, you say? elaboration? examples? thanks.

-----Original Message-----
From: Stephen Ellis <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, May 21, 1999 6:57 PM
Subject: Re: NOTLEY on

>LR -
>What you're calling politics is, as you say, "less visible" as an activity >because it's being funded off the boards, out of public view, by >conservative think-tank money. We live in an increasingly monadic society, >regardless we may prefer to characterize it as "plural". Our culture is >god-culture in disguise, excused by a sort of virtual inter-connectedness >that in fact is non-existent (just try talking to those who say this just >ain't so ...); freedom of choice is mostly at this point just another >eschatological hope, and you know where they've gotten us in the past, the >past itself, of course, being a highly sheltered and perpetually >slaughtering swarm, the human body lately also, an open Roman sewer >certainty, guaranteed by the increasingly tightened "rule of law" much on >the airwaves in recent months.
>
>Tough times ahead's a simplistically broken after-dinner fortune cookie; >questions abt it remain in the present, ie, what to do, how to act / live
>NOW
>SE
>
>From: Linda Russo <[redacted]>
>>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>>To: [redacted]
>>Subject: Re: NOTLEY on "the youth"....
>>Date: Thu, 20 May 1999 13:58:14 -0400
>>
>>Hi Chris & others listening in. I've been thinking about your query re >>Alice Notley's comments in the COMBO interview ("They're these people >>between about 23 and 36 . . . They're not very political, and I wish they >>were more political").
>>
>>You go on to equate the 'personal' in 'the personal is political' with >>'love,' but I think you're mincing here, collapsing the 'personal' and
>>'love
>>' and therefore excluding a crucial issue of the very politics that might >>be >>at stake. In making a distinction I think I can talk to your query.

>>
>>The political, and I think this holds for Alice, has always to do with the >>polis, not in the way that love might, or even in the sense of the >>potentially volatile issue of who we might choose to love publically, or >>how. The ‘personal,’ to be ‘political,’ has to engage with and be effected >>by the polis. In the feminist formulation, ‘the personal is political’ >>meant primarily that the private, the domestic, the ‘female’ experience too >>was _as_ political as the public experience, and it wasn’t until the >>‘personal’ experience of women (subjection, misogyny, etc.) were shown to >>_be_ political, to have everything to do with the workings of the polis, >>that the women’s movement as a _political_ movement, could make any >>headway.
>>
>>So the personal has as much to do with anger as it does with love, both >>overwhelmingly present in Alice’s work. So I think when she points out the >>lack of politicalness, she is addressing the lack of attempting to change >>‘the way things are’ in the polis and in poetry via how one experience >>power >>on a 'personal' level. This is evident for example her essay “Epic and >>Women Poets,” which points out that there is something wrong with the >>polis, >>with the way it tells itself stories which exclude the possibility of >>women’
>>s stories, and that this has to change. She realizes these ideas in >>Desamere and Alette. Perhaps that’s what it means to be political: to >>think >>(essay) about a problem and try to solve it (poem). Writing essays, >>editorial matter, and prefaces has always been a part of Alice’s poetic >>practice. I think she might say that editing _Chicago_ while she was >>pregnant was a personal _and_ political choice. Maybe _just_ writing >>poetry, in her mind, isn’t political enough? But maybe the choice to write >>poetry is always political, but the politics (now) aren't as visible as >>they >>were say, in the 70s, when she was in/against the context of the women's >>movement, and those political issues were heightened.
>>
>>you write that you're >> > interested in looking for other ways to frame this question,

>> > because i respect and admire notley's poetry,
>> > and her desire for a return perhaps to a more blatant concern >> > with politics on a content level,
>> > a moving beyond coterie politics,
>>
>>and perhaps bringing in this context frames it helpfully, I hope?
>>
>
>
>_____
>Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>

↑ Index

286. Ron Silliman
Bromige Poem
Thu 27 May 1999

"David Bromige's Sonoma County newspaper prose poem, a lovely piece whose title I'm unfortunately not able to recall"

is entitled "One Spring" and can be found in _My Poetry_ and like everything in that book, it's a beaut!

Ron

↑ Index

287. Kevin Magee
Re: CENTURY OF CLOUDS
Thu 27 May 1999

S U N S H A D E

DH: and whispered cries like this in caves out of the way places a night might force, two thousand years move a heavy stone into place in the cave some good cave or someplace the cops
don't know about, lets us come when we come under the sun, that sun-god fry our asses off

HD:
those we know that live along the Nile a crocodile came along the palms calm on the watch wall telling this thing all around and looked for the little ark whose legend grew like grass public massaged from hiding holding the screening-shielding-chiding

CHORUS:
bending the bow
bits of hog head
the blues and reds boiled hog head

DH/HD:
a cow, a ewe chew
on our cookie dough patted out now that the crocodile or either the soldiers we are the sentimentalists and you are the realists yolk drips from lips to others ear and starred it with rivets balm in the brainchamber of a stable boy winnowing the female-male, a fine gold collar for your neck and plenty build a playhouse of bits bites as could be got, is it silly to build a playhouse like the cities of Ramses

CHORUS:
bending the bow
bits of hog head
the blues and reds
boiled hog head

DH:
for your mate he says

lame from the mauling takes too long (telling) so that your mating

HD:
Did you see what I saw the forty-two gods in the hall guarding the book of papyrus the only two pages of this book pretend that we have read a page

CHORUS:
the tutors go soft into the temple
the clumsy thing is the living thing hurled from machines tangled in the reins

HD/DH:
the cry of it is that it is poptarts, cheerios, frosted flakes without a memory in the sky

↑ Index

288. Rachel Loden
it's not the meat, it's the motion
Thu 27 May 1999

My husband sent me this nice bit of British bitchcraft from _The Independent_ :

" . . . I have followed Andrew Motion's career with interest and affection ever since he published his first book twenty or so years ago. But try as I can to recall any of his poetry, I find it impossible. His watery pastiches, first of Edward Thomas, then of Philip Larkin, then of Ted Hughes, just don't stay in your head. He must be the dullest, the least memorable, published poet alive. How then did he come to be appointed?

"Watch out for Andrew," Larkin once said to me.
"Cultivate him. I like him, but he's the Spender de nos jours." Anyone who knew Larkin's view of Stephen Spender would not have taken this as a compliment. Larkin shared Evelyn Waugh's view of Spender as a man with an idea of himself as a poet who unfortunately lacked the skill to write poetry.

Larkin - destined to have his reputation trashed by Motion's biography of him - had seen a truth about Motion which I, who knew him so much less well, had failed to spot. When I first knew Andrew he was a blond-haired figure with mascara'd eyelashes and wrist bangles who bore a disconcerting resemblance to Dame Hilda Bracket. One imagined that, as was often the way with the more orchidaceous undergraduates, he would one day don a pair of cricketing flannels and get a job teaching English at a prep school. He amazed us all when in his twenties by having his portrait painted. He had a lot of amusing friends, all trying to be the Harold Acton of the 1970s, and one assumed he would be like them.

After we'd lost touch, it was surprising to notice him plodding through the rungs of committee-dom, sitting on the literature panel of this and the sub-committee of that, Widmerpooling for poetry while failing to produce a single memorable poem.

In the Times a few days ago he was quizzed about some novel he'd written in which one of the characters is writing a thesis on "Tennyson's laureate poems, for God's sake". Instead of saying that this was a mere novel, written ages ago, that he couldn't remember it, Motion replied ponderously that this had been intended as "a joke at my own expense".

Hang on. This novel was written in his thirties, or when he was even younger. And he was making "a joke at my own expense" about the laureateship? So even then he thought of himself as laureate material? In his twenties? In his teens? It is one thing to dream of being a poet when you're 16. To dream of being Poet Laureate, though - that's as depressing as the young William Hague with his "Hey, hey, we're the Monkees" hairstyle attending Tory party conferences before he'd had his first snog . . ."

--A.N. Wilson

Can anyone confirm my suspicions about "snogging"? The whole piece is at http://www.independent.co.uk/sindy/stories/C2305904.html

↑ Index

289. Jordan Davis context judo
Thu 27 May 1999

What mean you by what mean you.

Claiming that people aren't involved in politics or do not take a political stance, isn't that just a code for 'why haven't you taken power?' or 'Were you assuming that power was going to be given to you at an appropriate time?' or 'Don't you know what power is and what will happen to you if you don't have it?'

Claiming that people who claim to be writing poetry aren't really writing poetry, isn't that a code for 'no exemptions from withholding'?

Jordan

↑ Index

290. Lowther,John
Quick Political Scholastic Aptitude Test
Thu 27 May 1999

> Quick Political Scholastic Aptitude Test
>
> This test consists of one (1) multiple-choice question. Below is a list > of the countries the U.S. has bombed since the end of World War II, > compiled by historian William Blum:
>
> China 1945-46
> Korea 1950-53
> China 1950-53
> Guatemala 1954
> Indonesia 1958
> Cuba 1959-60
> Guatemala 1960
> Congo 1964
> Peru 1965
> Laos 1964-73
> Vietnam 1961-73
> Cambodia 1969-70
> Guatemala 1967-69
> Grenada 1983

> Libya 1986
> El Salvador 1980s
> Nicaragua 1980s
> Panama 1989
> Iraq 1991-99
> Sudan 1998
> Afghanistan 1998
> Yugoslavia 1999
>
> In how many of these instances did a democratic government that was > respectful of human rights occur as a direct result? Choose one of the > following:
>
> (a) 0
> (b) zero
> (c) none
> (d) not a one > (e) zip
> (f) a whole number between -1 and +1
> (g) zilch
>
>
>
>
>
this thing forwarded to me by one M. Magoolaghan

↑ Index

291. raea100900
My Europe Question
Thu 27 May 1999

Dear All-

I have some personal, selfish questions to ask about Europe. I'm going in September to Paris, Prague, Vienna and Venice/Florence. It's only the second time I've been to Europe. My husband and I are going as tourists - but I'd appreciate any related poetry info. I'd, of course, be happy to give readings in any of those places or to go to readings there or to meet list folk there or just to get advice about hotels and restaurants, etc. We'll be landing in Paris on Sept. 8, going to Praqgue on the 11th, to Vienna around the 14th or 15th and to Italy around the 17th. Anyone with any helpful thoughts, please backchannel. Thanks!

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

292. Ron Silliman
Grey Literature
Thu 27 May 1999

This must be why Charles is the Grey Professor....

Ron

>-------Call for Papers--------
>
>The Editor invites prospective authors to submit original manuscripts for >possible publication in this international journal.
>
>-Editorial aims and objectives-
>
>The International Journal on Grey Literature (IJGL) is a forum for >discussion of, and dissemination of knowledge about, the theory, practice, >distribution channels, unique attributes, access and control of grey >literature in a global context.
>
>The journal reflects the changes in grey literature due to the alternative >press movements; options for electronic publishing and archiving; emerging >multidisciplinary research patterns; convergence of new contributors, >information users and products; and issues related to the identification, >selection, acquisition, bibliographic control, access, use, and archiving
>of >grey literature in all subject areas. The journal will be of interest to >librarians, academics, government analysts, information industry >professionals and publishers.
>
>-Scope and topicality-
>
>By definition, Grey Literature is the information and resources that do not >categorically fall into what is available via standard traditional or >commercial publishing channels. Grey Literature has emerged in scope and >importance in recent years due to the proliferation of critical information >now readily available to organize and access from electronic publishing >ventures. The journal will present new material on how grey literature has >surfaced in a variety of disciplines and environments allowing for >increased >visibility, legitimacy and success in many research environments. To >promote grey literature in academic and research settings, libraries and >government information centres, this journal provides insights and >describes >methodologies to share its value and contribution to information use, >delivery and exchange.

>
>The following illustrates some possible journal topics: Examples of trends >and specific works of grey literature that have an increased presence in >usefulness among readership, such as electronic initiatives and >collaboratories of theses, dissertations, preprint and working paper >series,
>technical report literature, oral histories, genealogies, critiques, >scientific findings, visual arts, reviews and critiques; international >publishing directives; geospatial information, metadata, demographic and >statistical data, scientific visualization and new content areas of >significance.
>
v> The role of grey literature in relation to retention, holdings, >authentication, legitimation, archivability, and its use in different >settings and how to properly cite or reference it. The institutional >concerns of grey literature and how to organize, describe, promote, >preserve

>and care for it.
>
>Copyright and intellectual property concerns, licensing, access and >ownership issues; costs and resource sharing, security and integrity of >content, finding aids for grey literature, institutional liability.
>Articles >are also being sought on the applications of grey literature for example, >in >distance learning, records management, archival and museum studies, mixed >media collaborations, and other practices. On occasion, thematic issues >will be prepared.
>
>Each issue will offer highlights of relevant international conferences and >meetings, new examples of grey literature released from around the world, v> introductions to contributors, authors, and creators of grey literature, >interviews with people connected to grey literature, and other appropriate >columns. Volunteers to be prospective editors of such sections of the >journal should contact the Journal Editor.

>
>-Article Presentation-
>
>Articles should be between 3000 and 4500 words in length, although >shortercommunications dealing with more immediate issues, responding to >points raised in recent articles, conference proceedings, publications and >other venues and raising new issues for discussion are encouraged and will >be included. Such items should be up to 1000 words in length. Graphics, >images and illustrative material can be included. Articles should be typed >with wide margins and double spaced. Two copies of each submission should >be >sent to the Editor together with a brief autobiographical note, 1-6 >keywords, an abstract of approximately 150 words and a suggested title.
>The
>submission should follow the guidelines in the Publication Manual of the >American Psychological Association (4th edition, 1994), Name-Year System of >the Council of Biological Editors >(http://www.wisc.edu/writing/Handbook/DocCBENameYear.html#reference), or
>the >Columbia Guide to Online Style (1998).
>
>-Submission of disks-
>
>Once an article has been accepted for inclusion within the journal, disks >should be supplied with manuscript whenever possible. Contributors in a >position to comply with this request should submit any 3.5" disk prepared >on >a PC or Macintosh system in WORD format.
>
>-Copyright-
>
>Authors submitting articles for publication warrant that the work in not an >infringement of any existing copyright and will indemnify the publisher >against any breach of such warranty.
>
>-Review Procedure-
>
>Each paper submitted is subject to the following review procedures:
>It is reviewed by the Editor for general suitability for publication

>If it is judged suitable, a blind review process takes place by >distributing to several referees. Based on reviewer recommendations, the >Editor then decides whether the particular article should be accepted as >is, revised or rejected.
>
>-How to Submit-
>
>Manuscripts or outlines of proposed articles should be submitted to the >Editor:
>
>Julia Gelfand
>Applied Sciences Librarian
>University of California, Irvine >Science Library 228
>Irvine, CA 92623-9556 USA
>phone: [redacted]
>fax: [redacted]
>email: [redacted]
>
>Please circulate this call for papers among your colleagues
>
>For more information on the International Journal on Grey Literature see
>the >journal homepage at http://www.mcb.co.uk/ijgl.htm.
>
>Sent to: lis-access
>

_____ Get Free Email
and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

293. Irving Weiss
Re: found poetry
Thu 27 May 1999

Re Jena Ostman's query about found texts and Annie Finch's answer, May I humbly suggest that in a sense my own Visual Voices: The Poem As a Print Object, preceded by my introduction in explanation, is based on traditional English-language verse that I treat as print objects, found as poems in print and used as print-poems.

See, for examples:

Runaway Spoon Press

http://www.interlog.com/~dal/rasp/

and

http://www.members.tripod.com/duchimp/lightside/weis/weis00.htm

Irving Weiss

http://members.tripod.com/~sialbach/

↑ Index

294. Poetics List Administration

Isidore Ducasse / jesse glass

Thu 27 May 1999

---

had to reformat this - everyone please remember to send poetics messages in Text Only format. Chris

----- Original message (ID=BC10A895) (63 lines) -----

From: "jesse glass" <[redacted]>
Subject: Isidore Ducasse
Date: Thu, 27 May 1999 07:22:12 -0700

Isidore Ducasse/Le Comte de Lautreamont borrowed texts of all sorts and incorporated them into his Maldoror (1868/69) amd in his Poesies (1870). Both are probably the earliest examples of found poetry and the use of readymade art in Western lit.

Alex Cigale devoted one issue of Synaesthetic mag. to found texts and has written an interesting essay regarding the same.

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

June 1999

292 messages · Thu 27 May 1999 – Wed 30 Jun 1999

June brought, at long last, a silence. On the tenth NATO's bombs stopped falling and Serbia agreed to quit Kosovo; after seventy-eight days the war whose dispatches the list had read all spring — Dubravka Djuric writing from beneath the sirens — was, provisionally, over. Released from that weight, the room spent June on the gentlest business it knows: defining old words, trading old books, and arguing about a poet reading in the snow.

That poet was Robert Frost, and the snow was the glare off the Capitol steps in January 1961. Mark Melnicove, at work on an essay, asked the list for poets' responses to Frost's reading at Kennedy's inauguration, calling it "a signal event" — though he noted at once that not everyone agreed, some of the replies having more to do with old misgivings about Frost the man than about the morning itself. It is the perennial American question, whether a poet belongs on the public platform at all, and the list turned it over with unusual tenderness.

Tenderness of another kind animated the month's most purely delightful thread, which began when someone asked what, exactly, the British mean by snogging. The aging Britons of the list rose as one to testify. Douglas Oliver answered, "as a kneejerk ageing heterosexual Brit," that the word belonged to the 1950s and had meant, in those innocent days, nothing more athletic than heavy kissing; David Bromige and Jim Swift concurred, and a small philology of mid-century courtship assembled itself, half etymology and half fond memoir.

The list's twin appetites — for the found and for the archival — ran on beside it. The found-poetry thread carried over from May, Harvey Jordan recalling a sixties collection built entirely from "sewing machine instructions, recipes," and others adding Berrigan's borrowings and Reznikoff's documentary lines; meanwhile Dodie Bellamy, preparing a course on epistolary fiction, asked for help extending it to "The First Person and The Document," and the shelves opened once more. It was a month of poets happily doing one another's homework.

The most moving reply, though, had come back in the Frost thread, and it was not about Frost at all. Maria Damon remembered her mother — a Danish immigrant — so stirred by the sight of an old poet reading at the inauguration of a young president that she went out and bought his Collected Works, a book, Damon wrote, that "we still have in a prominent place." That is the answer, I think, that June kept circling toward, under all its wordplay and bibliography: that poetry's public life is finally a private one, measured not in platforms but in the books a mother carries home and cannot bring herself to shelve away. The guns had stopped; the poems were still on the mantel.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 292 in all.

WRITERS

Administration, Poetics List 30, 126, 206, 207, 208, 209
Aerialedge 193
Alexander, Christopher W. 118
And, Miekal 173
Archambeau, Robert 251
Baratier, David 54, 201, 202
Beard, Tom 65
Beckett, Tom 19, 247
Bell, Thomas 57, 286
Bellamy, Dodie 131, 135, 248
Bernstein, Charles 112, 261
Bowering, George 70, 256, 281
Brady, Taylor 165, 204, 254
Bramhall, A H 189, 212, 220, 241, 283
Brink, Leonard 180, 287
Bromige, David 10, 120
Bryant, Tisa 117, 167, 243
Chambers, Matthew J 233
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 255, 259
Chirot, David Baptiste 91
Clay, Steven 263
Coletti, John 279
Conner, Kyle 114, 268
Cope, Stephen 229
Couroux, Marc 3
Crown, Kathleen 48
Daly, Catherine 93, 196, 260
Damon, Maria 186, 213, 239
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 33
Davis, Jordan 38, 81, 95
Dbkk 69
Debrot, Jacques 153, 258
Degentesh, Katie 46, 157, 215, 235
Democracy, R 195
Doina, Ana 224
DuCharme, Mark 18, 262
Durgin, Patrick F. 21, 67, 97, 99, 119, 155, 264
Ellis, Stephen 15, 86, 110, 111, 132, 133
Fac/staff, Christopher T Funkhouser Hss 138 Fagin, Elizabeth 291
Ganick, Peter 27, 197, 198
Del Gigante, Maryanne 160
Glass, Jesse 52
Golding, Alan C 62, 140, 143
Goldsmith, Kenneth 252
Gquasha 108
Green, Tony 35, 272
Grumman, Bob 288
Healy, L. MacMahon And T.R. 137
Highsmith, David 166
Hofer, Jen 192
Hofermr 25, 187
Johnson, Julie 174
JOHNSON, KENT 161
Jordan, Harvey 58
Joris, Pierre 77
Jullich, Jeffrey 127
Kane, Daniel 72, 128
Karasick, Adeena 246
Kathylou 94, 183, 203, 269, 270
Kelley, Karen 218
Kellogg, David 282
Ken|n|ing 5
Kimball, John 42
Kimmelman, Burt 226, 232
Kirschenbaum, Matt 64
Kramer, Wendy 36, 104, 105, 236
Laity, Cassandra 92
Larsen, Deena 45
Lewis, Joel 29
List, Poetics 55, 142, 168, 169, 184, 188, 190, 221, 222, 223, 253
Little, Billy 16, 39, 53, 141, 158, 266
Loden, Rachel 87
Lowther,John 14, 32, 34, 40, 56, 60, 76, 78, 123, 149, 280
Lustig, Dana 170
Magee, Kevin 6, 44, 68, 121, 136, 146, 177, 214, 244, 285
Magee, Michael 225
Marks, Steven 274
Marsh, William 61
Martin, Camille 278
Maz881 194
McCarthy, Pattie 102
McCreary, Chris 17
McGuire, Jerry 73, 75
Melnicove, Mark 12, 83, 89, 129, 130
Nathanson, Tenney 9
Naylor, Paul 257
Neff, Michael 249
Nelson, Jason 191
Nguyen, Hoa 181
Nuyopoman 50
Oliver, Douglas 47, 85
Osman, Jena 13
Perelman, Bob 124
Pompeii, Jessica 4, 228
Press, Derek Beaulieu / House 147
Pritchett,Patrick 150, 211

Project, Poetry 90, 163, 164, 292
Raphael, Dan 8
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 238
Roitman, Judy 31, 88
Russo, Linda 113
Ruttan, Jack 7
Sassaman, Hannah J 205
Scharf, Michael 28
Schuchat 1
Schultz, Kathy Lou 176
Schwartz, Gerald 49, 98
Senning, Bradford J 265
Silliman, Ron 84, 109, 139, 277
Smith, Dale 182, 284
Solomons, Jeremy 103
Sondheim, Alan 20, 22, 26, 59, 96, 100, 107, 134, 156, 162, 171, 178, 179, 200, 227, 234, 250, 273
Spence, Pete 66, 106, 145
Starr, Ron 152
Stefans, Brian 11, 74, 148, 151, 290
Stein, Chuck 219
Stroffolino, Chris 115, 116, 245
Swift, Jim 41
Teichman, Harold 23
Toscano, Rodrigo 144
Tranter, John 276
Travmar03 51, 230, 231
Treadwell, Elizabeth 199, 237, 242, 271
Tremblay-McGaw, Robin 125, 216
Upton., Lawrence 122, 154, 172, 240, 289
Vincent, Stephen 2, 37, 63, 210, 267
Vincet 275
Vogel, Aviva 79
Waber 82
Weiss, Mark 24
Wheeler, Susan 71
Wolff, Rebecca 101, 159, 185
Zavialov, Maria L. 175, 217
Zervos, Komninos 80
Zinnes, Harriet 43

NAMES MENTIONED

Acker, Kathy 248, 254, 263
Adams, Robert 244
Albon, George 193, 255, 259
Albright, Madeline 244
Alexander, Christopher W. 118, 188, 190
Alice, Mary 15, 16
Altmann, Ruth 90
Americans, Asian 8, 15, 65, 118
Anderson, Beth 42
Anderson, Laurie 42
Andre, Michael 252, 253
Andrews, Bruce 113, 144, 197, 252, 263
Antin, David 210, 263
Anton, Robert 252
Apollinaire, Guillaume 252
Armand, Louis 214
Armantrout, Rae 193, 263
Ashberry, John 275
Ashbery, John 168, 193, 283, 290
Ashley, Robert 252
Atkins, Russell 193
Atlanta, Mark P. 14, 148, 170
Augustine, Jane 211
Auster, Paul 263
Austin, Geer 181, 182
Ave, Madison 49
Balestrieri, Peter 126
Baraka, Amiri 138
Barber, Stephanie 193
Barnard, Mary 87
Barnes, Diane 15, 101, 232
Barnett, Anthony 81
Barthes, Roland 262
Bartlett, Jennifer 244
Basinski, Michael 209, 252
Beach, Christopher 43
Beckman, Paul 252
Bee, Susan 252, 255, 259
Behrle, Jim 42
Belgum, Erik 252
Benjamin, Walter 16, 68, 121, 130, 193, 214, 234
Bennett, John M. 56, 73, 75, 99, 193
Benson, Steve 161, 193, 263
Berkeley, Michael 84, 112, 144, 180, 199, 215, 237, 242, 262, 268, 271
Berkson, Bill 263
Berman, David 116
Berman, Tosh 116, 252
Bernard, Kenneth 232
Bernhard, Thomas 232
Bernstein, Emma 252, 255, 259, 263
Berrigan, Anselm 46, 48, 193, 292
Berrigan, Eddie 18, 51, 263, 279, 290
Berrigan, Edmund 51, 193, 279, 290
Berrigan, Ted 18
Berry, Jake 252
Berry, Stephen 161, 244
Bertholf, Bob 202
Blackburn, Paul 263
Blackmer, Tracy 164
Blake, William 64
Blanchot, Maurice 77
Blaser, Robin 137, 158, 193, 211, 263
Blau, Rachel 99, 102
Borges, Jorge Luis 168, 215
Borkhuis, Charles 232, 262
Bosselaar, Anne 42
Bouchard, Daniel 42, 232
Brady, Andrea 27
Brainard, Joe 18, 263

Bramhall, Allen H. 189, 212, 214, 220, 241, 283
Brautigan, Richard 263
Braxton, Anthony 177
Brazil, David 266
Brecht, Bertolt 193
Brennan, Joe 222
Brito, Manuel 137
Brooks, Gwendolyn 230, 231
Brossard, Nicole 137, 193
Broughton, James 114
Broussard, Sam 73, 75
Brown, Ann 159, 193, 211
Brown, Bob 252
Bruno, Franklin 56, 81, 193, 199
Burgess, Matthew 164
Burkhardt, Rick 229
Burns, Gerald 112
Butler, Judith 73, 75
Byron, Philip 290
Cage, John 161, 252
Cameron, David 118
Cannon, Steve 48
Caples, Garrett 56, 167, 193, 232, 271
Cappello, Mary 73, 75
Carll, Steve 9, 61, 81
Carlos, William 113
Carroll, Lewis 215
Carson, Ann 121, 130
Carson, Margaret 37
Carter, Mike 244
Cassidy, Brian 244
Catera, Damian 49
Cayley, John 252
Celan, Paul 263
Cigale, Alex 138
Clark, Cheryl 21, 52, 58, 118, 263
Clark, Tom 181, 182, 276, 277, 282, 284
Clarke, Jack 118, 263
Clay, Steve 202, 263
Clemente, Francesco 252
Clinton, Bill 118, 149
Cobbing, Bob 193
Cocteau, Jean 177, 252
Cohen, David 48
Cole, Sean 42
Collom, Jack 211
Coltrane, John 44
Columbus, Christopher 201
Conner, Bruce 68, 159
Conrad, Tony 114
Coolidge, Clark 99, 181, 182, 197, 263, 283
Corbett, Robert 42, 263
Corbett, William 181, 182
Corman, Roger 42, 209, 232, 263
Corso, Gregory 263, 290
Coultas, Brenda 81
County, Mike 21, 52, 58, 210
Creeley, Robert 42, 53, 161, 174, 193, 232, 263, 283
Crosson, Robert 56
Crouse, John 27
Curtis, Dana 68
Dailey, Joel 278
Darragh, Tina 209, 216
Davidson, Daniel 142
Davidson, Ian 263
Davidson, Michael 69, 80
Davies, Alan 161
Davies, Kevin 263
Davis, Tim 193
Dawson, Nancy 263
Day, Jean 193
Delany, Samuel R. 261
Dennis, Michael 68
Desmond, Rae 48
Dewey, John 214
Dickens, Charles 44
Dickinson, Emily 18, 112, 193, 283
Dolin, Sharon 232
Donovan, Thom 27
Doris, Stacy 193
Doubiago, Sharon 202
Drucker, Johanna 137, 153, 252, 263
Duncan, Andrew 68, 209, 263
Dunn, Jim 42
Durgin, Patrick F. 21, 52, 58, 67, 86, 97, 99, 119, 132, 155, 264
Dworkin, Craig 252
Edgar, Chris 81
Eigner, Larry 31, 88, 110, 263, 283
Eliot, Joe 290
Elisa, Paula 138
Ellen, Mary 84, 252
Elliot, Joe 138, 252
Emerson, Claudia 161
England, Amy 62, 65, 70, 77, 118, 209
Enslin, Ted 263
Eshleman, Clayton 263
Esther, Little 180
Evans, George 6
Evans, Steve 193
Everding, Kelly 168
Fagin, Larry 1, 14, 164, 263, 291
Farmer, Steven 144, 193
Farrell, Dan 144
Featherston, Dan 61
Felix, Joel 168, 252
Fielding, Kent 258
Fink, Thomas 232
Finlay, Ian Hamilton 44, 252, 263
Finnegan, James 148
Fischer, Norman 161, 193
Fisher, Allen 209

Flanagan, Bob 163
Fodaski, Elizabeth 144
Folsom, Eric 46
Foreman, Richard 181, 182
Foster, Edward 81, 232
France, Peter 212, 227, 252, 260
Frances, Mary 25
Franco, Michael 42, 260
Fraser, Simon 42, 263
Frazer, Vernon 27
Friedlander, Benjamin 193
Friedman, Michael 211
Frost, Corey 12, 33, 83, 89, 98, 124, 129
Frost, Robert 12, 33, 83, 89
Fuchs, Greg 51, 268
Fuller, Heather 232
Gaines, Reg E. 48
Gardner, Janet 81
Garrison, Deborah 232
Gatten, David 25
Gelpi, Albert 69, 80
Gevirtz, Susan 168, 269
Gibson, William 161, 163
Gilbert, Roger 263
Ginsberg, Allan 12, 33, 83, 283
Ginsberg, Allen 161
Gizzi, Michael 262
Gladman, Renee 146, 291
Godfrey, John 263
Golumbia, David 232
Gonzalez, Matt 235
Gonzalez, Ray 48
Goodman, Amy 100, 118
Gordon, Ruth 90, 101, 232
Gottlieb, Michael 46
Gould, Glenn 44
Gould, Henry 287
Greenwald, Ted 193, 263
Gregg, Linda 55, 102
Grenier, Bob 189, 263, 277, 283, 284
Grenier, Robert 283
Griffin, Tim 161
Griffiths, Bill 209
Grinnell, Tracy 56, 193
Grisham, John 103
Grossman, Allen 53, 193
Guest, Barbara 290
Guthrie, Annie 193
Hall, John 244
Hamill, Sam 161, 168
Hamilton, Ann 37, 57, 121, 130
Hansen, Jefferson 193
Harryman, Carla 263
Hartman, Charles O. 165, 193
Hawkins, Bobbie 94, 117
Hayes, Jared 230, 231
Healy, Randolph 137, 193
Heath, Jennifer 168, 244
Hejinian, Lyn 79, 99, 111, 137, 193, 263, 267, 277, 284
Heller, Joseph 161, 263
Heller, Michael 232
Henderson, David 263
Henri, Charles 252
Herbert, George 209, 290
Hess, David 181, 182
Higgins, Dick 138, 181, 182, 252, 263
Highfill, Mitch 292
Hillman, Brenda 79, 111, 159
Hirsch, Edward 48
Hirshfield, Jane 161
Hoffman, Daniel 164, 244
Hollo, Anselm 219, 232, 251, 263
Holman, Bob 48, 50
Hoover, Edgar 193
Hoover, Paul 287
House, White 118
Howard, Richard 210
Howe, Susan 112, 193, 214
Hughes, Ted 42
Hunt, Erica 94, 117
Iijima, Brenda 199
Indiana, Gary 53
Inman, Peter 144
Irby, Ken 202
Ireland, Lauren 169
Jackson, Jesse 21, 52, 58, 138, 204
Jacob, Max 138
Jaeger, Peter 252
Jameson, Fredric 193
Jarnot, Lisa 72, 81, 118, 128, 164, 211
Jenks, Philip 232
Johnston, Daniel 255, 259
Jonas, Stephen 146, 263
Jones, Bob 68
Jordan, June 5, 38, 58, 68, 95, 97, 132, 133
Joyce, James 252
Joyce, Michael 109
Kaipa, Summi 25, 187, 291
Katz, Eliot 48
Kaufman, Andrew 69, 80, 263
Kaufman, Bob 69, 80
Keeney, Scott 155
Kelley, Mike 181, 182
Kelly, Paul 219, 244, 263
Kelly, Robert 42, 161
Kennedy, Kit 33, 83, 124, 129
Kiely, Aaron 42
Killian, Kevin 146
Kim, Myung Mi 269
Kimball, Cynthia 42
King, Amy 232
Kinsella, John 137
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 64

Knowles, Alison 252, 263
Kostos, Dean 232
Kraus, Karl 193
Kuszai, Joel 9, 25, 199
Kyger, Joanne 263, 277, 284
Lamantia, Philip 211
Larkin, Philip 70, 77, 85
Latta, John 255, 259
Lauterbach, Ann 37, 121, 130, 263
Lavender, Bill 278
Lease, Joseph 42, 150
Leddy, Michael 181, 182
Lederer, Katherine 55, 193, 292
Leggott, Michelle 193
Lehman, David 290
Lennon, Brian 159, 252
Lennon, John 232
Levertov, Denise 283
Levin, Jonathan 232
Levitsky, Rachel 27, 291
Levy, Andrew 193
Liddy, James 232
Lima, Frank 50, 211
Lisick, Beth 46
Livia, Anna 252
London, Frank 174, 244, 285, 289
Long, Paul 232
Long, Richard 53
Loranger, Richard 138
Lorberer, Eric 168
Lorca, Federico García 42, 248, 254
Louise, Bobbie 68, 94, 117, 240, 246
Mac Low, Jackson 18, 161, 252
Lowell, Robert 283
Lubasch, Lisa 81
Lubeski, Lori 42
Luoma, Bill 81, 252
Lyons, Kim 81, 263
Madison, James 77
Malcolm, Janet 146, 199
Marie, Julie 251
Marmon, Leslie 168
Marsh, Bill 9, 61
Martinez, Michael 193
Mason, Janet 114
Matthews, Harry 211
Mayer, Bernadette 193, 211, 290
Mayer, Jane 193, 254, 263
McCaffery, Steve 137
Medina, Tony 48
Meltzer, David 263
Melville, Pierre 112
Mercado, Nancy 48
Messerli, Doug 193, 255, 259
Miller, Jane 159
Miller, Lee 24, 68
Milton, John 82, 121, 130
Minton, Jonathan 252
Mirakove, Carol 81, 181, 182
Miriam, Erica 48, 193
Mitchell, Stephen 193
Monk, Geraldine 209
Moore, Marianne 126
Moore, Nicholas 126, 177
Morgan, Robin 64, 174
Moriarty, Laura 199
Morris, Tim 64
Morrison, Rusty 199
Morrison, Toni 217, 224, 226
Mossin, Andrew 27
Mott, Glenn 168
Moulthrop, Stuart 45
Mullen, Harryette 137, 193
Mullen, Laura 159, 168
Muratori, Fred 255, 259
Murphy, Michelle 61
Murphy, Sheila E. 287
Myles, Eileen 263
Nelson, Gale 81, 137, 244
Nester, Daniel 232
Nielsen, Aldon 193
Nixon, Richard 244
Nolan, John 73, 75
Norton, John 157, 204
Notley, Alice 2, 15, 81, 263
Olen, Robert 73, 75
Oliver, Doug 47
Oliver, Laura 95, 133
Olson, Charles 174, 263, 283
Olson, John 253
Oppen, George 263
Ostashevsky, Eugene 46, 235
Ouzoonian, Amy 48
Ovid 290
Pacific, Asian 108
Padgett, Ron 18, 263
Palmer, Michael 46, 263
Parkway, Neal 195
Pasold, Lisa 164
Patterson, Ian 168
Patton, Julie 81, 193
Paulenich, Craig 161
Peacock, Molly 159
Pearson, Ted 136
Perkins, Charlotte 168
Perloff, Marjorie 79, 111, 112, 161, 174
Peters, Mark 252
Phillips, Malcolm 13, 193
Phillips, Tom 13, 52
Pinsky, Robert 42
Platt, John 252
Pollet, Sylvester 202
Portugal, Anne 222, 232
Pound, Ezra 174

Pound, Scott 109, 174
Powell, Douglas 255, 259
Prevallet, Kristin 23, 31, 32, 99, 118, 181, 182, 232
Di Prima, Diane 161, 263
Prince, Richard 6, 47, 229, 244, 266
Proulx, Annie 154, 170
Prynne, J. H. 263
Quasha, George 108, 161, 219
Quasha, Susan 219, 263
Quinn, Terry 112
Rabinowitz, Anna 232
Ragona, Melissa 193
Ragosta, Ray 287
Rakosi, Carl 263
Randall, Karen 168
Rasula, Jed 13, 112, 161
Ratcliffe, Stephen 255, 259
Raworth, Tom 193
Reckin, Anna 168
Reed, John 177
Reeves, Jennifer 252
Revell, Donald 79, 111, 159, 255, 259
Rexroth, Kenneth 174, 267, 277, 284
Reyes, Louis 48
Reznikoff, Charles 37, 57, 121, 130, 141
Ridge, Tom 211
Rilke, Rainer Maria 18, 266
Rimbaud, Dee 18, 209, 290
Roach, Keith 48
Robertson, Pat 193
Robins, Maureen 232
Robinson, Elizabeth 159, 199
Robinson, Mary 255, 259, 263
Rodefer, Stephen 263, 268
Roitman, Judith 27
Rosenthal, Bob 48
Rosenthal, Chuck 260
Ross, Joe 56
Rothenberg, David 138
Rothenberg, Jerome 112
Rothenberg, Jerry 263
Roubaud, Jacques 193
Rowntree, Dirk 252
Rubin, Michael 203
Safire, William 47
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 144
Sala, Jerome 137
Samuels, Lisa 143
Sandburg, Carl 12, 33, 83
Sanders, Jay 118, 263
Saroyan, William 148, 252, 263, 283
Scalapino, Leslie 161, 193, 263, 267, 277, 284, 288
Schelling, Andrew 161
Schneeman, George 263
Schuyler, James 263, 290
Schwerner, Armand 161, 263
Schwitters, Kurt 252
Seagram, Blair 252
Seiferle, Rebecca 93, 196
Selby, Spencer 209, 252, 253, 255, 259, 287
Selland, Eric 174
Shaneen, Marianne 193
Shapiro, Gary 232
Sharma, Prageeta 81
Shepherd, Reginald 232
Sherman, Susan 48
Sikelianos, Eleni 81, 232, 255, 259
Sloman, Joel 42
Smith, Harry 168
Smith, Rod 193
Smith, Tracy K. 138, 193
Snyder, Gary 161
Solomon, Laura 48
Solt, John 174
Spahr, Boyd 81
Sparrow, John 114, 121, 130
Sparta, Little 44
Spicer, Jack 15, 87, 158, 263
Spillway, Phil 190
Stanley, George 58, 266
Stanley, Jared 48, 193
Stefans, Kim 99, 193, 252
Stein, Gertrude 139, 181, 182, 252
Stein, Suzanne 139, 263
Stengel, Jill 269
Stevens, Wallace 121, 130
Stewart, Susan 37, 121, 130
Strauss, Zoe 46
Sullivan, Gary 142, 168
Summers, Rod 221
Swensen, Cole 102, 180, 193, 287
Taggart, John 79, 111
Tardos, Anne 252
Tarn, Nathaniel 161
Taylor, Cecil 252
Tejada, Roberto 193, 291
Texas, Irving 181, 182, 193
Thesen, Sharon 266
Thilleman, Tod 232
Thomas, Dylan 146
Tietz, Ward 252
Tiger, Madeline 232
Torra, Joseph 42
Treadwell, Carol 199
Trevor, Jesse 252
Trujillo, Dorothy 264
Tzara, Tristan 252, 253
Valery, Paul 193
Vallejo, César 291
Vangelisti, Paul 56, 193
Vassilakis, Nico 252
Vermont, Charlie 79, 111

Veronica, Angela 11, 16, 79, 111, 260
Vincent, Gregory 272, 275, 286
Vincent, Steve 277, 284
Violi, Paul 263
Virgil 73, 75
Virilio, Paul 193
Viscomi, Joseph 64
Vitiello, Chris 193
Vollmer, Judith 202
Wadsworth, Henry 205
Wagner, Catherine 53, 193
Waldman, Anne 161, 211, 232
Waldman, Ken 263
Waldo, Ralph 16
Waldrop, Keith 21, 52, 58, 180, 232
Waldrop, Rosemary 79, 111, 159, 193, 263
Waldrop, Rosmarie 180, 193
Walker, Alice 42, 45
Wallace, Sara 252
Warner, Jim 68
Warsh, Lewis 181, 182, 232, 263
Washington, Harold 92, 118, 193, 244, 268
Watkins, Ben 42
Watson, Craig 287
Watson, Sasha 263
Watten, Barrett 3, 43, 54, 263
Weiner, Hannah 197, 263
Weinfield, Henry 232
Weiss, Irving 199, 252
Welch, Brian 263
Welish, Marjorie 255, 259
Wellman, Don 255, 259
Whalen, Philip 95, 133, 161, 193, 263, 267, 275, 276, 277, 284, 286, 288
Whitehead, Gregory 252
Whitehead, Helen 46
Whitman, Walt 161, 189, 283
Wiener, Hannah 121, 130
Wieners, John 42, 69, 80, 142, 263
Wilk, James 292
Williams, Tony 48, 241, 252, 263, 283
Willis, Elizabeth 255, 259
Wilson, Steve 10, 35, 41, 73, 75
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 21, 52, 58
Woolf, Virginia 21, 52, 58, 263
Wright, James 159, 181, 182, 252
Wright, Laura 232
Zavialov, Maria L. 175, 186, 217, 226
Zavialova, Masha 186, 188, 251
Zelevansky, Paul 252
Zukofsky, Louis 121, 130, 252, 263, 283
Zurawski, Magdalena 48, 81, 164
Zweig, Janet 252, 263

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 73, 118, 163, 190, 244, 285
Aesthetics 21, 52, 58, 290
African American poetry 177
Anthologies 46, 69, 79, 80, 107, 111, 137, 146, 151, 157, 161
Appropriation 5, 92, 163, 174, 190, 201, 208, 241
Archives and libraries 50, 53, 64, 80, 109, 112, 166, 190, 193, 195, 213, 224, 226, 260, 284, 292
Autobiography 90
Avant-garde 44, 90, 113, 174
Beauty 114, 121, 130, 234
Biography 85, 174, 201, 260
Black Mountain 113, 174
Book announcements 9, 27, 50, 51, 64, 92, 116, 168, 174, 180, 209, 214, 229, 251, 255, 259, 262, 285
Bookstores 101, 177, 210, 232, 291
Calls for submissions 93, 125, 163, 183
Capitalism 211
Cities 44, 102, 163
Class 121, 125, 130, 146, 177, 183, 214, 244
Collage and montage 11, 91, 122, 137
Conferences and festivals 29, 73, 75, 104, 105, 137, 146, 163, 181, 182, 244
Copyright and permissions 87, 190, 285, 289, 290
Creative writing pedagogy 140
Dada 174
Deconstruction 52, 107, 165
Difficulty 190, 212
Dreams 16, 26, 46, 87, 112, 114, 136, 173, 211, 219, 262, 266, 290
Editing 15, 64, 69, 80, 183, 190, 214
Electronic poetry and hypertext 9, 11, 44, 45, 104, 112, 190, 208, 261, 286
Elegy 211
Empire and imperialism 188, 234, 244
Epic 15, 110, 255, 259
Epistemology 112
Erasure 125, 183, 211
Ethics 40, 258
Feminism 15, 125, 146, 183, 184
Film 6, 87, 90, 121, 130, 193, 244, 255, 259
Futurism 174
Gender 92, 125, 183
Grants and funding 15
Haiku 102, 174
Humour and satire 46, 87, 163, 177, 211, 227, 235
Ideology 174, 177, 285
Imagism 266
Improvisation 44, 49, 290
Indigenous and Native poetics 244
Interviews 15, 97, 132, 142, 163, 168, 171, 190, 244
Language poetry 113, 197

Letters and correspondence 70, 77, 86, 97, 132, 174, 177, 190, 201, 214, 291
List moderation 21, 52, 58, 162, 177, 188, 190, 193
Little magazines 9, 17, 46, 91, 99, 101, 107, 112, 113, 122, 142, 157, 159, 163, 174, 184, 187, 190, 198, 199, 203, 205, 215, 232, 237, 242, 271, 276, 290
Lyric poetry 9, 260, 290
Marxism 214
Materiality of the text 11, 79, 111, 112
Memory 23, 31, 32, 65, 88, 110, 112, 130, 146, 193, 214, 266
MFA programs 79, 111, 177
Modernism 113, 121, 130, 174, 267, 277, 284
Mourning and loss 108, 136, 190, 193, 252, 266
Multiculturalism 243
Music and poetry 6, 16, 21, 39, 44, 52, 53, 58, 70, 77, 121, 130, 141, 145, 158, 177, 189, 193, 211, 212, 217, 220, 224, 226, 229, 235, 266, 285
Nature 65, 88, 93, 107, 110, 137, 138, 177, 190, 193, 285
Negativity and refusal 193
New York School 290
Obituary and memorial 108, 190
Objectivism 113
Performance and the poetry reading 44, 114, 214, 235, 262, 265, 266
Phenomenology 107, 193
Philosophy 20, 44, 107, 162, 171, 214, 285
Place and region 147
Poetics 3, 5, 9, 11, 15, 21, 30, 43, 52, 55, 58, 69, 80, 86, 97, 110, 111, 113, 125, 126, 132, 133, 137, 142, 165, 168, 169, 174, 177, 183, 184, 188, 190, 193, 197, 206, 207, 208, 209, 211, 214, 219, 221, 222, 223, 251, 253, 254, 261, 286, 290
Poets Against the War 161, 168
Postmodernism 174
Print vs. digital 11, 15, 31, 44, 46, 66, 106, 121, 130, 161, 201, 211, 214, 219, 275
Prizes and awards 46, 73, 75, 102, 203
Prose poem 21, 52, 58, 201
Prosody and meter 244
Queer poetics 47
Race and poetry 118, 125, 183, 230, 231
Reading announcements 51, 235, 266, 291
Religion and the sacred 8, 108, 161, 212, 275
Representation 15, 68, 146, 174
Reviewing and criticism 10, 35, 41, 57, 65, 71, 88, 110, 112, 116, 138, 139, 142, 157, 168, 171, 174, 177, 190, 222, 260, 266, 267, 275, 276, 277, 284, 286, 288
Revision 137
San Francisco Renaissance 69, 80, 113
Science 31, 44, 65, 79, 88, 110, 111, 191, 244
Semiotics 171
Serial poem 102, 147, 158, 198, 211, 219, 291
Small press publishing 9, 17, 27, 46, 55, 61, 69, 80, 87, 102, 114, 144, 147, 177, 180, 190, 197, 199, 201, 203, 229, 232, 247, 262, 266, 268, 278, 291
Software and code 31, 65, 107, 165, 188, 204, 244
Sonnet 18, 20, 290
Sound poetry 74, 221, 252
Subjectivity 93, 101, 107, 111, 146, 177, 190, 191, 214, 254
Surrealism 174
The academy 6, 9, 25, 31, 62, 69, 73, 75, 80, 84, 88, 110, 112, 113, 137, 140, 143, 146, 174, 177, 181, 182, 190, 203, 205, 214, 244, 260, 282, 285
The body 20, 23, 32, 44, 93, 107, 190, 191
The canon 125, 171, 183, 267, 277, 284
The Holocaust 121, 130
The internet 15, 17, 18, 86, 97, 100, 107, 110, 111, 112, 132, 133, 139, 154, 170, 177, 181, 182, 189, 190, 191, 215, 246, 262, 276, 279, 284
The Iraq war 118
The line 190
The listserv 7, 31, 32, 82, 83, 89, 169, 188, 190, 193, 204, 208, 222, 265, 286
Theatre 44, 49, 69, 73, 75, 80, 205, 220, 229, 255, 259
Torture and Abu Ghraib 220
Translation 13, 18, 37, 71, 73, 75, 108, 121, 130, 137, 171, 174, 177, 180, 181, 182, 193, 199, 201, 204, 232, 285
Vietnam 20, 118, 229
Visual and concrete poetry 57, 137, 174, 221, 252
Visual art 9, 37, 44, 48, 68, 71, 114, 121, 130, 149, 157, 163, 174, 177, 230, 231, 266, 283
Women's writing 15, 184

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 292 in all.

27 MAY 1999

1. schuchat — Re: workshops with Chris Stroffolino
2. Stephen Vincent — Re: name your enemy/was "on Notley"
3. Marc Couroux — Watten - Total Syntax
4. Jessica Pompeii — found assholes
5. ken|n|ing — Re: context judo
6. Kevin Magee — Re: BITCHCRAFT DE NOS JOURS
7. Jack Ruttan — FWD: Canadian Poetry Association News

28 MAY 1999

8. dan raphael — This war or the next
9. Tenney Nathanson — POG event this Saturday: 3 poets
10. david bromige — snogging, wass iss diss snokking?
11. Brian Stefans — Found Texts
12. Mark Melnicove — Frost at Kennedy's inauguration
13. Jena Osman — incorporating vs. finding

29 MAY 1999

14. Lowther,John — Re: drinks with)ohnLowther
15. Stephen Ellis — Re: name your enemy/was
16. Billy Little — submit you dog
17. Chris McCreary — ixnay on the web
18. Mark DuCharme — Re: found poetry
19. Tom Beckett — from Linework at Djerassi
20. Alan Sondheim — too easy and philosophy
21. Patrick F. Durgin — Re: found poetry

30 MAY 1999

22. Alan Sondheim — Useless Expenditure of Energy
23. Harold Teichman — Re: Howe in NYC / Prevallet
24. Mark Weiss — Warning!
25. hofermr — poetry world domination mini-tour

31 MAY 1999

26. Alan Sondheim — I I drEaM of YoU All fAcE hElp me and remem $500,000 They sEttlE fOr Less (…
27. Peter Ganick — new Potes & Poets Press chapbooks
28. Michael Scharf — New temporary e-dress

1 JUN 1999

29. Joel Lewis — f.y.i.
30. Poetics List Administration — list delay . . .
31. Judy Roitman — Re: Howe in NYC / Prevallet
32. Lowther,John — Re: Howe in NYC / Prevallet
33. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration
34. Lowther,John — CONTACT Jenna Roper Harmon
35. Tony Green — Re: snogging, wass iss diss snokking?
36. Wendy Kramer — Rooting in Erotic Garbage
37. Stephen Vincent — Ann Hamilton/ Charles Reznikoff
38. Jordan Davis — the suck of context
39. Billy Little — Re: workshops with Chris Stroffolino
40. Lowther,John — FW: A quote for you
41. Jim Swift — Re: snogging, wass iss diss snokking?

42. John Kimball — Boston 1999
43. Harriet Zinnes — Re: Watten - Total Syntax
44. Kevin Magee — Re: DIE ARBEIT IN DER KUNST
45. Deena Larsen — URL for MOO Wed at 3 pm GMT

2 JUN 1999

46. Katie Degentesh — ANNOUNCEMENT: NINE BY NINE INDUSTRIES
47. Douglas Oliver — Re: snogging
48. Kathleen Crown — A Poets Gathering Against the War
49. Gerald Schwartz — S+E+A+N+C+Eperf.
50. nuyopoman — Frank Lima
51. travmar03 — Fw: Eddie Berrigan and Greg Fuchs at Teachers and Writers
52. jesse glass — Re: found poetry
53. Billy Little — Time to Read?
54. David Baratier — Re: Watten - Total Syntax
55. Poetics List — More summer reading / idiom
56. Lowther,John — Re: Time to Read? / rhizome / shark
57. Thomas Bell — Re: Ann Hamilton/ Charles Reznikoff
58. Harvey Jordan — Re: found poetry
59. Alan Sondheim — Julu for Netscape (preferably 4 or greater) (fwd)
60. Lowther,John — Re: found poetry
61. William Marsh — PaperBrainPress
62. Alan C Golding — Snogging
63. Stephen Vincent — Re: snogging
64. Matt Kirschenbaum — Blake Archive's June Update
65. Tom Beard — symbolic snogging
66. pete spence — Re: hannah weiner's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE
67. Patrick F. Durgin — Re: the flux of context

3 JUN 1999

68. Kevin Magee — Re: WE WANT ALL GUNS TAKEN OUT OF IRELAND
69. dbkk — Friday, June 4, Re: Reading The New American Poetry
70. George Bowering — Re: Motion
71. Susan Wheeler — Italian renaissance p.
72. Daniel Kane — Lisa Jarnot on WriteNet
73. Jerry McGuire — Deep South Writers Conference
74. Brian Stefans — The Naif and the Bluebells
75. Jerry McGuire — Deep South Writers Conference and Contest
76. Lowther,John — An Ask for Reports
77. Pierre Joris — Re: Motion
78. Lowther,John — two things
79. Aviva Vogel — Non-Meaningful Levels of Language - A Query
80. komninos zervos — Re: Friday, June 4, Re: Reading The New American Poetry
81. Jordan Davis — eating the wrong thing
82. Waber — also known as anti-rhyme

4 JUN 1999

83. Mark Melnicove — Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration
84. Ron Silliman — Uh, er, ah
85. Douglas Oliver — Re: Larkin
86. Stephen Ellis — Re: the flux of context
87. Rachel Loden — OED "snogging"; The Last Campaign
88. Judy Roitman — Re: symbolic snogging
89. Mark Melnicove — Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration
90. Poetry Project — Monday reading
91. David Baptiste Chirot — Re: found poetry
92. Cassandra Laity — Book Announcement

93. Catherine Daly — Call for Submissions
94. kathylou — Seeing addresses
95. Jordan Davis — fewer mind
96. Alan Sondheim — Bodei
97. Patrick F. Durgin — Re: the flip of context
98. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration

5 JUN 1999

99. Patrick F. Durgin — Support your little magazines!
100. Alan Sondheim — Stared Stiff
101. rebecca wolff — united we stand, etc.

6 JUN 1999

102. Pattie McCarthy — publication announcement : BeautifulSwimmer Press : Swensen & Biglieri
103. Jeremy Solomons — Re: Motion
104. Wendy Kramer — boston alternativepoetry conference
105. Wendy Kramer — boston alternative
106. pete spence — Re: hannah weiner's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE
107. Alan Sondheim — description of ongoing work (apologies for cross-posting)

7 JUN 1999

108. gquasha — Rick Fields
109. Ron Silliman — Pounding Pound
110. Stephen Ellis — Re: symbolic snogging
111. Stephen Ellis — Re: Non-Meaningful Levels of Language - A Query
112. Charles Bernstein — new PMC
113. Linda Russo — CFP Poetics/Production, NEMLA 2000
114. Kyle Conner — Highwire Reading
115. Chris Stroffolino — QUESTION (ALAN GOLDING)
116. Chris Stroffolino — Berman Time Out Review
117. Tisa Bryant — Re: Seeing addresses
118. Christopher W. Alexander — prevallet forward
119. Patrick F. Durgin — New work at Kenning website
120. david bromige — Obit in Motion
121. Kevin Magee — Re: Reznikoff

8 JUN 1999

122. Lawrence Upton. — Re: found poetry
123. Lowther,John — Dina H. spelling test & Mother's Day sketch
124. Bob Perelman — Re: Frost & found
125. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — Call for Submissions--Class & Poetics
126. Poetics List Administration — Moore and query / Balestrieri
127. Jeffrey Jullich — Dina H. spelling test & Mother's Day sketch -Reply
128. Daniel Kane — Hear Lisa Jarnot read "Emperor Wu"
129. Mark Melnicove — Re: Frost & found
130. Mark Melnicove — Re: Reznikoff
131. Dodie Bellamy — catsitting in SF
132. Stephen Ellis — Re: the flip of context
133. Stephen Ellis — Re: fewer mind
134. Alan Sondheim — Budi: Fragment

9 JUN 1999

135. Dodie Bellamy — SF summer prose workshop
136. Kevin Magee — Re: OBIT IN MOTION
137. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy — boundary 2 Apologies for Cross Posting
138. christopher t funkhouser hss fac/staff — new NEWARK REVIEW: _ALLAH MEAN EVERYTHING! Thus Sp...

139. Ron Silliman — Stein review
140. Alan C Golding — Total Syntax, and thanks
141. Billy Little — Re: Reznikoff
142. Poetics List — call for work - read.me / Sullivan
143. Alan C Golding — Job Opening
144. Rodrigo Toscano — KRUPSKAYA PRESS
145. pete spence — Re: Boris Vian & Serge Gainsbourg reading/music/video event
146. Kevin Magee — Re: BARAKA'S ALLAH / June 12 Event Announcement
147. derek beaulieu / house press — new: mclennan's "the wiser" and whitehead's "Kokopelli"

10 JUN 1999

148. Brian Stefans — The Naif and the Bluebells: full version live
149. Lowther,John — HEADLINES
150. Pritchett,Patrick — query
151. Brian Stefans — Wang Ping's e-mail
152. Ron Starr — diastext
153. Jacques Debrot — Re: Contact Info: Johanna Drucker
154. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)

11 JUN 1999

155. Patrick F. Durgin — Scott Keeney
156. Alan Sondheim — THEFT ON PURLMOO BECAUSE #1 IS NOT UNIQUE
157. Katie Degentesh — THURSDAY, JUNE 17
158. Billy Little — Re: SERIAL DIAGRAM
159. rebecca wolff — Re: back issues of Fence
160. Maryanne Del Gigante — (no subject)
161. KENT JOHNSON — Anthology re-issue
162. Alan Sondheim — Re: your mail
163. Poetry Project — Fwd: Sandbox #7 - PROTEST
164. Poetry Project — workshop reading
165. Taylor Brady — Re: diastext
166. David Highsmith — reply to Upton, RE : power outages
167. Tisa Bryant — Garrett Caples contact info
168. Poetics List — New Rain Taxi features Ashbery & Silko Interviews / Sullivan
169. Poetics List — current list stats
170. Dana Lustig — Re: power outtages/searches & so forth
171. Alan Sondheim — Mouthing Lives, Whew!
172. Lawrence Upton. — Power outages
173. miekal and — wa wha wawa woo you like keto k'to

12 JUN 1999

174. Julie Johnson — new book on Japanese avant-garde...
175. Maria L. Zavialov — Re: current list stats

13 JUN 1999

176. Kathy Lou Schultz — Will Alexander
177. Kevin Magee — Re: BACKCHANNEL REQUEST
178. Alan Sondheim — Shifters: Bodee

14 JUN 1999

179. Alan Sondheim — Julu, Broadcasting
180. Leonard Brink — Inscape
181. Hoa Nguyen — Please tell your friends!
182. Dale Smith — Skanky Poss for 5 bucks...
183. kathylou — Boys are allowed
184. Poetics List — women's writing / dubravka
185. rebecca wolff — party reminding

15 JUN 1999

186. Maria Damon — Re: current list stats
187. hofermr — Interlope magazine/ Summi Kaipa
188. Poetics List — stats clarification
189. A H Bramhall — sideways from K Magee's Backchannel Request
190. Poetics List — Welcome Message
191. Jason Nelson — weaving
192. jen hofer — query & note

16 JUN 1999

193. aerialedge — New @ Bridge Street, Benjamin Sel Writings, Boundary 2, Howe, Mayer &&&
194. maz881 — Re: sideways_from_K_Magee's_Backchannel_Request
195. R Democracy — Re: urgent! Cheap sublet with kitties!
196. Catherine Daly — Perihelion
197. Peter Ganick — special offer to Poetics listmembers
198. Peter Ganick — POTEPOETZINE / POETPOETTEXT
199. Elizabeth Treadwell — Lynne Tillman and Joel Kuszai
200. Alan Sondheim — TONGUE

17 JUN 1999

201. David Baratier — The First Annual Transcontinental Poetry Contest
202. David Baratier — E-mail's needed
203. kathylou — Saturday in San Francisco

18 JUN 1999

204. Taylor Brady — (no subject)
205. Hannah J Sassaman — C R O S S C O N N E C T V O L U M E 4 I S S U E 3
206. Poetics List Administration — poetics delay . . .
207. Poetics List Administration — Hello sweet muse... / krupoetry
208. Poetics List Administration — format caveat
209. Poetics List Administration — Fire and Terrible Work / jesse glass
210. Stephen Vincent — Re: Eleanor Antin Exhibit
211. Pritchett,Patrick — Naropa Summer Readings
212. A H Bramhall — French Village Life
213. Maria Damon — Re: Job listing

19 JUN 1999

214. Kevin Magee — Poster inspired by AH Bramhall
215. Katie Degentesh — Paul LaFarge
216. Robin Tremblay-McGaw — email addresses
217. Maria L. Zavialov — (no subject)

20 JUN 1999

218. Karen Kelley — Lost Email Address (CHAX) & Apt for Rent

21 JUN 1999

219. Chuck Stein — ainu dreams posting
220. A H Bramhall — For The Sake Of Variety
221. Poetics List — VEC / jesse glass
222. Poetics List — East Timor forward / Joe Brennan
223. Poetics List — VEC erratum / jesse glass
224. Ana Doina — Re: 42nd st. lions
225. Michael Magee — Re: C R O S S C O N N E C T V O L U M E 4 I S S U E 3
226. Kimmelman, Burt — (no subject)

22 JUN 1999

227. Alan Sondheim — Virtual Languor
228. Jessica Pompeii — quandry

229. Stephen Cope — Beyond the Page
230. travmar03 — Fw: Last Reading of The Year
231. travmar03 — Fw: Last Reading of The Year
232. Kimmelman, Burt — Poetry New York 11
233. Matthew J Chambers — (no subject)
234. Alan Sondheim — Jennifer Climbs
235. Katie Degentesh — 9x9 News
236. Wendy Kramer — uncompromising, but corrugated, position
237. Elizabeth Treadwell — C. Alexander & J. Debrot
238. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: quandry
239. Maria Damon — Re: quandry

23 JUN 1999

240. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
241. A H Bramhall — Re: Quandary
242. Elizabeth Treadwell — fiction writing exercises
243. Tisa Bryant — Calling Cecilia Vicuna
244. Kevin Magee — RE (FOR) RACHEL DEMOCRACY

24 JUN 1999

245. Chris Stroffolino — Re: quandry
246. Adeena Karasick — Message from Internet
247. Tom Beckett — limited supply of bromige diffs.
248. Dodie Bellamy — epistle
249. Michael Neff — test
250. Alan Sondheim — gratitude toward authors

25 JUN 1999

251. Robert Archambeau — SAMIZDAT #3/Free Offer
252. Kenneth Goldsmith — ___ U B U W E B: N E W R E S O U R C E S :: J U N E 9 9 ___
253. Poetics List — DEAD MEN TALKING / Brink
254. Taylor Brady — Re: epistle
255. MAXINE CHERNOFF — NAW 17 and Movie showing this week

26 JUN 1999

256. George Bowering — Re: epistle

27 JUN 1999

257. Paul Naylor — epistle
258. Jacques Debrot — Re: epistle
259. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Re: NAW 17 and Movie showing this week
260. Catherine Daly — Re: epistle
261. Charles Bernstein — Poetics Program Announcements
262. Mark DuCharme — another shameless self promo
263. Steven Clay — 2,500+ poetry books, pamphlets and magazines
264. Patrick F. Durgin — Lusk

28 JUN 1999

265. Bradford J Senning — Moving to NYC
266. Billy Little — Vancouver report
267. Stephen Vincent — Philip Whalen
268. Kyle Conner — SHAMELESS PROMOTION
269. kathylou — a+bend press
270. kathylou — Re: epistle
271. Elizabeth Treadwell — Garrett Caples
272. Tony Green — Re: epistle
273. Alan Sondheim — A Terrific Tale with a Save at the End!
274. Steven Marks — Re: epistle

29 JUN 1999

275. vincet — Re: Philip Whalen
276. John Tranter — Whalen review in Jacket # 7
277. Ron Silliman — Whalen
278. Camille Martin — funky butt
279. john coletti — Berrigan Sightings
280. Lowther,John — burnt epistles
281. George Bowering — Re: burnt epistles
282. David Kellogg — Would the real Tom Clark please stand up?
283. A H Bramhall — re(ad) Grenier
284. Dale Smith — Re: Whalen
285. Kevin Magee — Re: gratitude toward authors
286. Thomas Bell — Re: Philip Whalen

30 JUN 1999

287. Leonard Brink — Announcement, Windhover #3
288. Bob Grumman — Re: Philip Whalen
289. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
290. Brian Stefans — Edmund Berrigan, Barbara Guest
291. Elizabeth Fagin — Leroy Chapbook Series
292. Poetry Project — summer announcements

1. schuchat
Re: workshops with Chris Stroffolino
Thu 27 May 1999

I am willing to be taught to write poetry, but it will cost you a lot more than $50 per hour to do so.

Chris Stroffolino wrote:
>
> Chris Stroffolino is presently available to work with students privately, > either poetry, prose fiction or playwrights, for $49 per session. Each > session will be 2-3 hours. If interested, please call [redacted]...
>
> On Wed, 26 May 1999, Poetry Project wrote:
>
> > Another public announcement:
> >
> > Larry Fagin is presently available to work with students privately, > > either poetry or prose fiction writers, for $50 per session. Each session > > will be 1-2 hours. If interested, please call [redacted].
> >

↑ Index

2. Stephen Vincent
Re: name your enemy/was "on Notley"
Thu 27 May 1999

Dear (is it?) Linda Russo: I have somehow been confused with some other Stephen.
I am Stephen Vincent. Anyway I don't think I was the intended postee for your post.
Albeit I usually like or am intrigued by your public posts.

↑ Index

3. Marc Couroux
Watten - Total Syntax
Thu 27 May 1999

Dear Poetics List,

Does anyone know how I can get a copy of Barrett Watten's TOTAL SYNTAX, long out-of-print and impossible to find?

Thanks

Marc

[redacted]

↑ Index

4. Jessica Pompeii found assholes
Thu 27 May 1999

The fresh strawberries had to grow. Driving, parking, hoofing, except there was no parking. NO PARKING signs everywhere. So I drove around in circles, just for strawberries. Not the market kind, but the farmer kind. One alley then two, of more NO PARKING - PRIVATE PROPERTY. Just 30 feet from the strawberries I found a space in a NO PARKING / TENANT ONLY parking area. A space obviously that would not be blocking anyone, nestled near an outer chain, well in back of a big white truck.

Two elderly folks were watching me from the brick building, daring to tow me. So I waved toward the strawberries to my invisible crippled mother. Motioning to her to come here, that I can't get any closer, sorry. I mimed it all. But she was too lame to make it over to the car without assistance. So I hobbled out of the car, my MS flaring up. Bought my strawberries, and 3 fucking tomatoes at the adjacent booth and was back in minutes.

The old gal had exited her picture window and was waiting for me. She carried a menacing looking black button and shook it at me. "You were just about to be towed." She had a thug with her, with red hair. He kept yelling. "Can't you read?" And read to me each of the signs.

I put up my hands as if to say halt. I said, "I am a woman of peace." The lady went away but the red head wanted a fight. I said, "Go back to jail." You can tell these things. I rolled up my window. As he threatened my tires, hissing, "I voted for NRA."

So I made a note of his truck, or what I decided was his truck, and drove away shaking. Thinking, I should go back there, I know where they live.

↑ Index

5. ken|n|ing
Re: context judo
Thu 27 May 1999

Jordan Whose claims are these? I'm particularly interested, as I notice many others around me are these days, in functionalist redefinitions of such otherwise impossible to think terms as "poetry" and "political" and

"efficacy." And so my mean of what mean you means me this: let's not question the agency of a tradition without proposals for its reconfiguration in the wagering. Or, the agency of a medium (another troubled term). Or, the agency of linguistics . . . ad absurdly yrs Patrick

k e n n i n g_____ a newsletter of contemporary poetry poetics & nonfiction writing _____http://www.avalon.net/~kenning 418 BROWN STREET #10 IOWA CITY IOWA 52245 USA

On Thu, 27 May 1999, Jordan Davis wrote:

> What mean you by what mean you.
>
> Claiming that people aren't involved in politics or do not take a political stance, isn't that just a code for 'why haven't you taken power?' or 'Were you assuming that power was going to be given to you at an appropriate time?' or 'Don't you know what power is and what will happen to you if you don't have it?'
>
> Claiming that people who claim to be writing poetry aren't really writing poetry, isn't that a code for 'no exemptions from withholding'?
>
> Jordan

↑ Index

6. Kevin Magee
Re: BITCHCRAFT DE NOS JOURS
Thu 27 May 1999

G R O I T / G R I O T

[written & thought of
by LuTonya & Nikki]

I.

In the end the horse won and swallowed him.

Her voice in the Winter Wind hanging there like icicles in the Air.

He turned reluctantly from the white walls
he had built.

He looked at the sun seen the sun setting.

Unlimited fun time with his friend.

II.

L u T o n y a :
I love the words from the Artist formerly known as Prince. Its titled the Most Beautiful Girl in the World he's talking about how women are considered beautiful not for just the Outside But for the wonderful qualities that they posses and the many things that they do and it might not get recognized or they might not get praised my favorite Line goes

III.

N i k k i :
a personal favorite of mine is Shrimp Alfredo.
First I put about 1 tablespoon of cooking oil in a skillet and sautee 2lbs cooked-tailess shrimp.
Add green peppers, red peppers, onions, and mushrooms. When that's cooked enough
I put in 3 containers of Digiorno Alfredo Sauce and stir until warm. Season it with pepper, cayenne pepper, garlic powder, and seasoning salt.
Boil fetticine noodles, drain them, and mix with sauce mixture. Serve with White Zinfandel.
Umnmnmnmnmnmnmnmnmnmnmnmnmnmn.

IV.

L u T o n y a :
EXPLAINING MONEY TO A ALIEN.
Money is a type of trading tool. It comes in paper form and metal form.
Each paper has a different number on it and the higher the number the more it is worth. We can see something we like and if we want it, we have to use money to get it. You can get just about everything you want if you have enough of the paper with the really high numbers on it.

Rap Music is what you would call music that expresses how you feel about your situations in growing up in your surroundings in a poetic senses with verses that rhyme.
It is listened to by groups of people who crosses all types of economical, races, and age lines. It is not all about profanity or violence and it does not just degrade women. It sometimes help to break down barriers that have been build up.

V.

N i k k i :
The differences between Oprah & Jerry are of the most obvious. Oprah is more in touch with her audience and the people on her panel.
She holds hands with her guests. She has a big heart and you can tell Jerry on the other hand, laughs at his guests and doesn't seem to show sympathy.
He urges his guests to get heated. Montel gave the best description of his show "It's like a train wreck, it's terrible, but you want to watch it."
I prefer Jerry. I guess I like "train wrecks."

VI.

B o b b i e J o :
when its rainy I love to sleep so today
I'm very sleepy I can't wait for school to end so I can go home and make a nice cup of coffee get erik his bottle and of course miranda gets her hot chocolate and stack up the pillows we'll probably have to watch mighty Joe first because that's her favorite movie and then we can Watch titanic my favorite movie and we can just relax all day I love spending that time with my Babies

VII.

S h a y l a :
This song by Faith Evans called "I never knew" the thing that really gets me is its true. She's the widow of the slain Biggie Smalls.

I can tell by the way he act.
I love to kiss his lips. They are so soft. He's my teddy bear baby.

[Found lines/feelings from the 2nd Interim Portfolios of E103 at the Academy of Court Reporting, 5-27-99, viz. Benjamin's Sleeping Beauties i.e., "The Fairy Tale of History."]

↑ Index

7. Jack Ruttan
FWD: Canadian Poetry Association News
Thu 27 May 1999

> Wayne Ray <[redacted]> wrote:
>
> Greetings:
>
> If you are not already receiving the Weekly News from the Canadian Poetry Association (http://www.mirror.org/cpa) then I take this time to invite you to join the CPA MailList to receive literary news, information, contests and other announcements.

Actually, for people wanting to join the list who can't click on the URL, please contact Wayne Ray at the above address for details.

Jack Ruttan, Montreal

--

http://www.axess.com/users/jackr

↑ Index

8. dan raphael
This war or the next
Fri 28 May 1999

Wrote this poem a couple days ago; seeing bob holman's poem posted today (5/27)

dan raphael

Since Tibet isnt free, maybe we can buy it

What would the chinese take in trade?
San Francisco?
missile secrets?
the colonels secret recipe?
destroying all charlie chan movies?

As the chosen people of the money god we Americans should be able to swing this deal, to force this deal but this god likes to keep its sons competing.

competition one of the cornerstones of this religion—germany, japan , and now the young convert china proving its worth by destroying the last remaining rival, one of the few religions uncorrupted by money, still connected to its place

the monks will need years to exorcise all the demons

↑ Index

9. Tenney Nathanson

POG event this Saturday: 3 poets

Fri 28 May 1999

REMINDER

[Joel Kuszai has had to cancel his appearance] but:

POG Announces

A Reading by 3 Poets:
Joel Kuszai
Bill Marsh
Steve Carll

Saturday, May 29, 7pm
Dinnerware Contemporary Art Gallery
135 E. Congress Street, Tucson

Joel Kuszai was born in Michigan, schooled at Reed and SUNY-Buffalo. He is the editor of Meow Press, which has published over 60 chapbooks since 1991. He is currently rewriting The Wizard of Oz "with some help from Marx and others." Some of his earlier work can be found at:
http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/presses/meow/ephemera.html

Bill Marsh lives in San Diego where he teaches writing and other multimedia arts. His work has appeared in a few on and off-line journals like Tinfish, the germ, Web Conjunctions, Witz, and Zine(n) New Media. His chapbook Making Flutes was published by Potes & Poets Press in 1998 and he has another one forthcoming from Wild Honey. Bill also edits PaperBrainPress featuring chapbooks and other paper and digital productions. More information on his work and his press can be found at http://bmarsh.dtai.com/

Steve Carll was born in Olean, New York. MA in Poetics from New College of CA in San Francisco. Currently living in Honolulu, HI. Edited Antenym. Chapbooks published: Sincerity Loops (Bathysphere), trace a moment's closure for clues (Logodaedalus), brushstrokes (Black Fire White Fire). Recent journal appearances: Tinfish, lyric&, Rhizome. Pending journal appearances: Chain, Art Access, Bivouac. Other work currently available on the websites of Deluxe Rubber Chicken #2 and Black Fire White Fire.

The reading is sponsored POG, Chax Press, and the Writing Works Program of UA Extended University; it is in part funded by grants from the Arizona Commision on the Arts and the Tucson/Pima Arts Council.
A contribution to POG is suggested at the door, but no one will be turned away.
Please call Chax Press at [redacted] for information.

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso

↑ Index

10. david bromige

snogging, wass iss diss snokking?

Fri 28 May 1999

Rachel, listmates, I believe snogging is british c. 1950 for heavy petting. Any other aging britspeak persons on this list to bear this out or correct? David btw, Rachel, thanks for posting that Wilson review of Motion. I cant think when i've seen character assassination masquerading as lit crit to that degree, here in the usa. I've been trying to remember whether Motion was wearing mascara when i met him in toronto ten years ago. It must have been subtly applied if so. Could it be a convenient slander? (Not, of course, that one has anything against men in mascara). I found him worth a read.

David

↑ Index

11. Brian Stefans
Found Texts
Fri 28 May 1999

I hope I'm not being self-promoting by pointing interested parties to an essay I wrote on computer poetics, hypertext and borrowed (stolen, mashed, etc.) texts which appears at the ubu.com site, not in the "essays" section but in "contemporary." The essay itself is in the footones to a poem called "Stops and Rebels" which was generated by a C++ program I wrote -- it really just "assembled" the poem in a quasi-random way as it's not very bright, but the texts themselves were mostly "found." Anyway, here's Url:

http://www.ubu.com/feature_stefans.html

Also, McCaffery and nichols Rational Geomancy has lots of stuff in there regarding material textuality though I don't remember off-hand if there is anything specifially about "found" text, but the basic idea is about the "book as machine" and assembalge so I'm sure it's worth looking at (I've only just skimmed my yet-new copy). There are loads of images, cartoons, etc.

Lastly, Veronica Forrest-Thomson's Poetic Artifice uses a "cut-up" technique on a newspaper in one of the key paragraphs early in the book, in such a way that makes "found texts" instrumental to the whole theory, hence worth looking at in this light if you can find one.

Brian

↑ Index

12. Mark Melnicove
Frost at Kennedy's inauguration
Fri 28 May 1999

I'm writing an essay on Robert Frost's reading/recital at JFK's inauguration and I'm looking for contemporary (i.e. 1961) responses to this event by other poets. I've started to comb letters and diaries as collected in books (Sandburg, Ginsberg, Jarrell, etc.), but haven't turned up much yet. Anyone with any sources, leads, etc. please b.c. And, if you were there (in person, or via TV) and wrote something at the time, or have some recollections 38 years down the road you'd care to share, I'd love that, too. Mark Melnicove

↑ Index

13. Jena Osman incorporating vs. finding
Fri 28 May 1999

Thanks to everyone for their excellent suggestions in regards to found poetry. I suppose I should have been a bit more specific in my request. I'm not interested so much in poems that "incorporate" found texts, as in poems that are "found" inside of existing texts. Somebody mentioned Tom Phillips' _Humament_, which is an excellent example of what I mean. I also just remembered that Rasula and McCaffery's _Imagining Language_ has a great section ("Lost and Found in Translation") relating to these kinds of procedures. This section includes excerpts from Phillips, Cage, Johnson's _Radi Os_, and lots of other good stuff. Meanwhile, further suggestions are always welcome. Thanks, Jena

↑ Index

14. Lowther,John
Re: drinks with)ohnLowther
Sat 29 May 1999

John Lowther (ever watchful for a joke to flog) is more than willing to add his services to those of Chris Stroffolino and Larry Fagin and if you will buy the drinks he might sit with you for as much as two hours or as little as 10 minutes to talk about your writing - assuming you and he enjoy this in some sense chances are he'll buy a round and begin blathering about his own writing. If in tha Atlanta area call [redacted].

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Chris Stroffolino [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Thursday, May 27, 1999 12:05 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: workshops with Chris Stroffolino
>
> Chris Stroffolino is presently available to work with students privately, either poetry, prose fiction or playwrights, for $49 per session. Each session will be 2-3 hours. If interested, please call [redacted]...
>
> On Wed, 26 May 1999, Poetry Project wrote:
>
> Another public announcement:
>
> Larry Fagin is presently available to work with students privately, either poetry or prose fiction writers, for $50 per session. Each session > will be 1-2 hours. If interested, please call [redacted].

↑ Index

15. Stephen Ellis

Re: name your enemy/was

Sat 29 May 1999

Conception of body by mind makes body "a Roman sewer" away frm wch the mind, so having "conceived" first, rather than first having "been there", etc., remains a sort of "safe house", tho one that houses just what, exactly, is all I wanted to "mean"/ask w/ that analogy. It's perhaps possible that "some of the people on this list" are in fact themselves "enemies of poetry" despite, etc. that they SAY they are and (seemingly) ARE otherwise. I doubt that "conservative think tank money" is recommending one sort of poetry over another, tho the push from that quarter wld be to repress almost ANY sort of literary (not to say "real life") explorations into what for a better term I'll call the Dantean "dark wood". So it isn't so much even money any more that's "the institution", but far more all our subjective habits gathered like runes toward a single objective representation, ie., in many cases one's singular ability to get, have and hold whatever portion of the world can be thus (immediately) grasped in terms of one's own still-subjective "sincerity", which one then has as what one has at hand, in hand, pretty tightly grasped. So, it's more analogous situation viz conservative dollars, rather than directly causative w/in the world of poetry, wch hopefully wld have more to do with how the world is defined, what those definitions, limits etc. TELL (us) abt our place IN it, than with Barnes & Noble distribution problems. I guess I'm just suggesting that poets in particular, and Americans in general, aren't very political in either any short or long view, and that that's not political enough to plow over, under and up again the whole sod of the subjective that assumes value in poesis, but seems unable to objectify it except materially, the book, reading tour, etc., ie., "publish me: I'm liberated." Wch COULD be true enough, tho of course there seems also considerable reason to doubt. SE

> From: Linda Russo <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: name your enemy/was "on Notley"
> Date: Thu, 27 May 1999 00:19:01 -0400
>
> Dear Stephen,
>
> I agree for the most part (don't know abt the human body/roman sewer) that pluralism is the enemy of opposition (from whence "political" poetry

springs) and
'love' is but another sort of pluralism, generous as it is it lets one forget his or her enemies (Spicer said know your enemies) . . . and yet I bet plenty of people
on this list could name one or two enemies of poetry (some institution say
.
.. .
a finger has been pointed at Barnes & Noble in the past . . .). Confused about
"funding by conservative think-tank money" . . . ? People don't want to bite
the hand that feeds, you say? elaboration? examples? thanks.

-----Original Message-----
From: Stephen Ellis <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Friday, May 21, 1999 6:57 PM
Subject: Re: NOTLEY on

LR -
What you're calling politics is, as you say, "less visible" as an activity
because it's being funded off the boards, out of public view, by conservative think-tank money. We live in an increasingly monadic society,
regardless we may prefer to characterize it as "plural". Our culture is god-culture in disguise, excused by a sort of virtual inter-connectedness
that in fact is non-existent (just try talking to those who say this just ain't so ...); freedom of choice is mostly at this point just another eschatological hope, and you know where they've gotten us in the past,
the
past itself, of course, being a highly sheltered and perpetually slaughtering swarm, the human body lately also, an open Roman sewer certainty, guaranteed by the increasingly tightened "rule of law" much on the airwaves in recent months.

Tough times ahead's a simplistically broken after-dinner fortune cookie;
questions abt it remain in the present, ie, what to do, how to act / live
NOW
SE

From: Linda Russo <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]

Subject: Re: NOTLEY on "the youth"....
Date: Thu, 20 May 1999 13:58:14 -0400

Hi Chris & others listening in. I've been thinking about your query re Alice Notley's comments in the COMBO interview ("They're these people between about 23 and 36 . . . They're not very political, and I wish they were more political").

You go on to equate the 'personal' in 'the personal is political' with 'love,' but I think you're mincing here, collapsing the 'personal' and 'love' and therefore excluding a crucial issue of the very politics that might be at stake. In making a distinction I think I can talk to your query.

The political, and I think this holds for Alice, has always to do with the polis, not in the way that love might, or even in the sense of the potentially volatile issue of who we might choose to love publically, or how. The 'personal,' to be 'political,' has to engage with and be effected by the polis. In the feminist formulation, 'the personal is political' meant primarily that the private, the domestic, the 'female' experience too was _as_ political as the public experience, and it wasn't until the 'personal' experience of women (subjection, misogyny, etc.) were shown to _be_ political, to have everything to do with the workings of the polis, that the women's movement as a _political_ movement, could make any headway.

So the personal has as much to do with anger as it does with love, both overwhelmingly present in Alice's work. So I think when she points out the lack of politicalness, she is addressing the lack of attempting to change 'the way things are' in the polis and in poetry via how one experience power on a 'personal' level. This is evident for example her essay "Epic and Women Poets," which points out that there is something wrong with the polis, with the way it tells itself stories which exclude the possibility of women's stories, and that this has to change. She realizes these ideas in Desamere and Alette. Perhaps that's what it means to be political: to think > (essay) about a problem and try to solve it (poem). Writing essays, editorial matter, and prefaces has always been a part of Alice's poetic practice. I think she might say that editing _Chicago_ while she was pregnant was a personal _and_ political choice. Maybe _just_ writing poetry, in her mind, isn't political enough? But maybe the choice to write > poetry is always political, but the politics (now) aren't as visible as they > were say, in the 70s, when she was in/against the context of the women's movement, and those political issues were heightened.

>
> you write that you're
> interested in looking for other ways to frame this question,
> because i respect and admire notley's poetry,
> and her desire for a return perhaps to a more blatant concern
> with politics on a content level,
> a moving beyond coterie politics,
>
> and perhaps bringing in this context frames it helpfully, I hope?
>
> _____
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

16. Billy Little submit you dog
Sat 29 May 1999

Pay t riot River
>
>jack and jacky went >way out backy
>to fetch a pale of blood.
>drink your blood Benjamin >drink your blood Alice >drink your blood Nathaniel >drink your blood Emily >drink your blood Henry David >drink your blood George >drink your blood Edna >drinky it's blood Lucy >drink your blood Ralph Waldo >drink your blood Walt >drink your blood Harriet >drink you blood Babe >drink your blonde blood Norma >drink proud Yankee blood Jolting Joe >dream your blood Martin >wink your blood Mae >dew drink your blood Rose >drink your blood Betty >drink !Mel drink !Blood, >drink your blood Blanche >drink-schmink blood Woody >drink your blood Veronica >Denzel drink power blood >drink your blood Millie >drink yo blood Eddie >blood in yo serial >blood on your toast >front page blood >sports page blood >entertainment blood >contaminated blood >big dividends / blood bank >bargains on bloodstains >floods of blood >bathtubs of blood >fermenting w/lemons >26 laps butterfly >atop the coagulated blood tsunami >forty story wall of blood >blood on the bandwidth >blood on the bridge >blood filled railway cars >tanks full of blood >boatloads of blonde blood >and blonde body bags and rock bottom bombs >blue blue sky blue blue blood >broadcast blood >blood in the air

>blood on the wind >blood on your breath >blood underwhere >blood blood brewski >blood in yo hood >blood in your i >drink your blood Shirley >Drink your blood Minnie >drink your blood DonaLD >drink your blood Fats >drink your blood Sammy >drink your blood Wayne >drink the bathtub dry children >drink your blood
>
>Igor likes Eyegore likes >Clinton-Gore likes >whatsisnameGore
>Tip Her Canoe and Gore2BeeOne
>
>
>blood blood blood
>all you need is blood >miles and miles and miles of blood
>
>chairman Meow >bleeding >charm yow
>a thousand brooms >sweeping with the sleeper >bloody flowers >sleeping with the beeper >bloody birds clucked >bloody beaks >plucked bloody feathers >bloody talons >bloody wishbones >bloody batterd drumsticks >yummy
>
>baka washi
>28-29may99

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

17. Chris McCreary
ixnay on the web
Sat 29 May 1999

We'd like to invite you to sample our new humble yet hopefully functional ixnay press website. It can be found at:

http://members.aol.com/ixnaypress/page/index.htm

You should be able to sample text from our ongoing chapbook series as well as poems from the first two issues of ixnay magazine. Since this is a new venture for us, please feel free to notify us of any problems that you experience along the way...

Thanks-- hope you enjoy.

Chris McCreary
Jenn McCreary
co-editors, ixnay press

↑ Index

18. Mark DuCharme
Re: found poetry
Sat 29 May 1999

The last sonnet in Ted Berrigan's _The Sonnets_ contains lines from Shakespeare's _The Tempest_. Other Berrigan sonnets include lines or passages from (Berrigan's?) translations of Michaux, Rimbaud, Rilke, & probably others, as well as lines or passages from poems by his friends Ron Padgett & Joe Brainard, his own "failed" poems, etc.

Berrigan's _Clear The Range_ is similarly based on some Western novel (I have no idea what the title is).

Ashbery's poem "Europe" uses language "found" in a book called _Beryl of the Biplane_.

In addition to the books somebody else mentioned, Jackson Mac Low has a lot of works based-- more "methodically"-- on found material. One e.g. that comes to mind: "Quatorzains for/from Emily Dickinson" in _Representative Works_.

& What about the use of historical documents & letters in Williams' _Paterson_. Or the found material of numerous sources that drifts in & out of Anne Waldman's _Iovis_....

What about deliberate "mistranslation"?....

Mark DuCharme

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

19. Tom Beckett
from Linework at Djerassi
Sat 29 May 1999

Dear Blank,

I miss my honey but her alibis scare me

She expects my personality to change--weekly

Now I'm known as Shecky-Sheena

an aging vaudevillian slash

Princess of Power

By night I work the Catskills

by day I fight my foes

looking lickerish in lycra

on the mean Main Streets

Love,

Blank Two

↑ Index

20. Alan Sondheim
too easy and philosophy
Sat 29 May 1999

\

too easy and philosophy

if this were a poem, I would declare my eternal love for you, moving on to the next line or the next stanza, where I'd swear by all accounts, belgium has disappeared from the face of the earth - not stopping here I'd pen a manifesto bringing an end to war, enslaving peace to the unwelcome task of boredom, surgery, and ennui - hey, but there's more - exclamations! that the body still gets a bit excited, almost out of breath - just so in these slap-dash days we move from one terrific bit to just another, ruling and running (up and down) the world -

nothing's really done against our will or for it - easier to make declarations, just as every poem has its subject, every subject its poem, scattered like lenses among subjects and verbs, maybe even not - if this were a poem, it would announce what i'd do in the year 3000, or maybe in another warmer galaxy, but wait

there's more - what i mean to say, there's all this world literature running around the world, and even the smallest poem promises eternity, and if just one stanza were true, why there'd be no need to say anything else at all - but like this, the words keep on flowing from the wounds in the body looking for attention and reward and driven by really dull dna - there's the really big yay! for example when the siloam tunnel was finally dug out near jerusalem -

oh, this happened 2800 years ago - guys going at it from two directions - what else can you do with a line - suddenly the piercing took, and there you were - at least at that moment the text took after the fact -

3000 years ago someone thought his courage high above the river, he's crossing to see his girlfriend with incredible longing and sexiness in the desert - now you've got poems and prose of punishments and crimes - whole nations disappearing - there goes vietnam - what about a war? well, let's have peace -

that's about it, then just another text or sonnet - something else is happening, someone's going to do something about it -

i love you all but i love my girlfriend best, good night

↑ Index

21. Patrick F. Durgin

Re: found poetry

Sat 29 May 1999

Jena Rod Smith's piece in the second issue of Tripwire, as well as some of O'Hara's plays, might be interesting to you if you intend to look at faux-found text works. Rod's piece is especially interesting as he's culling and reworking and, most of all, role-playing recognized figures in what amounts to a critico-poetic essay. Though I may have stretched these terms beyond their breaking point, here. Patrick F. Durgin

At 04:53 PM 5/25/99 -0700, Taylor Brady wrote: >Jena,
>
>A few texts spring most readily to mind here:
>
>Jackson Mac Low's _Words nd Ends from Ez_, _Virginia Woolf Poems_, >_Barnesbook_, etc.
>Ronald Johnson's _Radi Os_ (1st 4[?] books of Paradise Lost, written-through >by subtraction)
>Hannah Weiner's _Weeks_ (I don't think it sticks very "purely" to language >heard on the news, but most of it's close)
>Tom Phillips' _A Humument_
>Joan Retallack's _Errata 5uite_ (Are you looking for poems "found" in single >texts, or collaged from a number of sources?)
>David Bromige's Sonoma County newspaper prose poem, a lovely piece whose >title I'm unfortunately not able to recall
>
>I also remember well a piece by Rosmarie and Keith Waldrop, read by them at >the Ear Inn back in '95(?), which was created by successively working >through Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey," each time subtracting a certain >proportion of words. Rosmarie's use of Wittgenstein in _The Reproduction of >Profiles_ and _Lawn of Excluded Middle_, while not a pure example of the >genre, also might be of interest.
>
>In the realm of badly-remembered secondhand information, didn't I also hear

>somewhere that dictionary definitions had some role as "source material" in >Clark Coolidge's _The Maintains_?
>
>Analogies in music too numerous to document here - and probably off-topic, >though I'd be happy to backchannel if you're interested. One I'll mention, >since it connects to one of your examples, is Cage's _Quartets I-VIII_, >which is a subtractive rewriting of American Protestant hymns.
>
>I'm drawing a blank when trying to think of critical prose on this specific >topic other than that by the poets/composers themselves, though there are a >number of texts which might be extended to apply here by analogy. Which >leaves Mac Low's and Cage's "explanatory" prose glosses, along with Cage's >_Diary_ [_Journal_?] as good introductions to the procedures, some of the >aesthetic and political claims that have been made for them, etc.
>
>I hope this is at least a little helpful.
>
>
>Taylor
>
>
>-----Original Message-----
>From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]
>On Behalf Of Jena Osman
>Sent: Tuesday, May 25, 1999 9:21 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: found poetry
>
>I'm interested in poems that were "found" inside of other texts (such as >Cage's mesostics and Reznikoff's _Testimony_). What are some favorites in >this genre by others? Any critical texts about these kinds of procedures I >should know about?
>
>Thanks,
>Jena Osman
>[redacted]
>
>

↑ Index

22. Alan Sondheim
Useless Expenditure of Energy
Sun 30 May 1999

\

Useless Expenditure of Energy

Set x = 1
Procedure A
Multiply x by 1.
If x is greater than 1 then stop; else
Goto Procedure A.

Set x = 1
Procedure B
Add x by 0.
If x is greater than 1 then stop; else
Goto Procedure B.

I will set these programs to run and I will run these programs. I will run them in fast compiled languages on and on and on. Sooner or later they will stop and I will have made something. What I will have made will not be too large or too small. What I will have made will just stop the programs. That will be a useless expenditure of energy because I could have just decided to have stopped them by myself.

↑ Index

23. Harold Teichman
Re: Howe in NYC / Prevallet
Sun 30 May 1999

Thanks to Kristin Prevallet for her impressions of Howe's
Dia reading, somewhat at odds with mine.

Kristin said:
> She talked in her intro about how she is beginning to see more and more > of a connection between poetry and non-symbolic logic, and as she moved > further and further into her poems, her slides of the Pierce manuscripts > got more and more non-symbolic.

My memory is of Howe alluding to the likeness of the enterprises of poetry and symbolic--not 'non-symbolic', whatever that might be--logic, though I could be wrong.
In any case, that was just a remark waiting for an enactment or embodiment in her text, which seemed to me lacking in the ensuing bio-bricolage.

↑ Index

24. Mark Weiss

Warning!

Sun 30 May 1999

It had to happen--the virus warning as art form. This came to me from the journalist Tom Miller.

> Subject: Virus
>
> If you receive an e-mail entitled "Badtimes", delete it immediately. Do not open it. Apparently this one is pretty nasty. It will not only erase everything on your hard drive, but it will also delete anything on disks within 20 feet of your computer. It demagnetises the stripes on ALL of your credit cards. It reprograms your PIN access code, screws up the tracking on your VCR and uses subspace field harmonics to scratch any CDs you attempt to play.
> It will recalibrate your refrigerator's coolness settings so all your icecream melts, your milk curdles and your beers boil. It will program your phone autodial to call only 0898 sex line numbers. This virus will mix antifreeze into your fish tank. It will smoke all your cigarettes.
> It will leave dirty socks on the coffee table when you are expecting company. It will replace your shampoo with engine oil and your engine oil with orange juice, all the while dating your current girl/boyfriend behind your back and billing their hotel rendezvous to your Visa card.
> It will cause you to run with scissors and throw things in a way that is only fun until someone loses an eye.
> It will rewrite your backup files, changing all your active verbs into passive tense and incorporating undetectable misspellings which grossly change the interpretations of key sentences. If "Badtimes" is opened in Windows95/98, it will leave the toilet seat up and your hair dryer plugged in dangerously close to a full bath. It will also molecularly rearrange your aftershave/perfume, causing it to smell like dill pickles. It will install itself into your cistern and lie in wait until someone important, like your boss or lover, does a serious number 2, then block the s-bend and cause your toilet to overflow.
> In the worst case scenario, it may stick pins in your eyes.
> PLEASE FORWARD THIS WARNING TO EVERYONE YOU KNOW.

↑ Index

25. hofermr
poetry world domination mini-tour
Sun 30 May 1999

---

or mini-skirt world domination poetry tour--

Summi Kaipa & Jen Hofer read poems this week!

Tuesday June 1 at 8 pm in the evening
Plan B Evolving Arts
1050 Old Pecos Trail, Santa Fe
a small fee will be charged at the door (possibly but don't not come 'cause you don't have dough)
[redacted]

Thursday June 3 at 8 pm
The Poetry Center at The University of Arizona, Tucson sadly we cannot locate the address of this place but if you should like to attend the event & don't know the location, contact Frances Shoberg at [redacted]

Sunday June 6
bbq extravaganza at the home of Stephen Cope, Kirthi Nath & Joel Kuszai 4 pm in the afternoon
3856 1/2 First Ave.
(the front house is 3852 First Ave).

shows in santa fe & san diego include screenings of films by Sarah Jane Lapp, David Gatten & Kirthi Nath please come & tell your friends.

↑ Index

26. Alan Sondheim
I I drEaM of YoU All fAcE hElp me and remem $500,000 They sEttlE fOr Less (fwd from true ransom note)
Mon 31 May 1999

=

I I drEaM of YoU All fAcE hElp me and remem $500,000 They sEttlE fOr Less

Oh azure ples and my boDy gIvEn tO YoU SuCh a loNg and goLd goLd and I thiNk we canD bEaUtIfUl fAcE thE time and remem $500,00,000 thEy'rrE Please hElp me lOvinG YoUr loNg limbS and bEaUtIfUl fAcE They aRe afTer me and I I I haVe tO get Them $500,000 and I thiNk we can Raise $400,000 and yOur lips and yOur smiLe WhiCh fiLls the moonLiT nIghts and thEy'll prObably sEttlE fOr $300,000 and and And Please haVe left theRe and marounD I I I

Haven tO yOur lips and YoUr smiLe as I I thiNk we can Raise $400,00,000 thEy'll sEttlE and Love and rEmE come come yOur loNg HanDs yOur loN't KnOw what thaVe tO get the moonLiT nIghts YoU haVe LefTer me left theRe and marks on my nEck And bream of YoU All thAt meaNs yOur loNg HanDs yOur lips and goLd And SuCh a loNg in thE nExt rOonlit nEck and Breasts yOur lips and and And I drEaM of YoU All fAcE are are aRe marks on Raise $500,000 and I t Please hElp me lOvinG yOur AroUnd me and yOur sMilEs and my boDy gIvEn tO YoU SuCh a loNg and goLd and sIlvEr thEy'll sEttlE as I sAid fOr $300,000 There aRe marks on my nEck and Breasts YoU haVe left theRe and marks they haVe made as well my HisTory of liFe and Love and DeaTh Please Hurry Please come come come yOur marks aRe oVeR me and $500,000 T aRe marks aRe oVeR me made as we can Raise $400,00,000 and beautiful fAcE They aRe afTer me and I I I haVe tO get They aRe afTer me and YoUr sMilEs Oh AzUrE aRe marks on my boDy get Them $500,000 h azure Please hElp me lovIng yOur loNg limbS and bEaUtIfUl fAcE and my boDy gIvEn tO YoU SuCh a loNg All thE time and bEaUtIfUl fAcE They AroUnd me and yOur smiLe and yOur loNg in thE nExt rooM and fOr $300,000 There aRe made as well sEttlE as I sAid fOr $300,000 There aRe marks onLiT nIghts and thEy'll sEttlE as I sAid fOr loNg limbS And I doN't KnOw what thaVe lE fOr $300,000 There moViNg in thE nEck and Breasts YoU sMilEs and my sEttlE fOr $300,000 moonLiT nIghts and thEy'll prObably sEttlE fOr $300,000 and and And I drEaM of YoU All thE time and remember thE fLowers Oh azure such a finerS loNg and goLd and sIlvEr thEy'll sEttlE as I sAid fOr $300,000 There aRe marks on my nEck and Breasts YoU haVe left theRe and marks they haVe made as well my HisTory of liFe and Love and DeaTh Please Hurry Please come come come yOur marks aRe oVeR me and $500,000 thEy'rre doN'T deSert Them $500,000 thEy'rE aRe marks on my sEttlE fOr $300,000 ans yOur loNg HisTory of limbS And boDy gIvEn thiNk we come come come come time and remembS and Beautime and remember me and I I I haVe left theRe oVeR me and I I I haVe lips and marks there aRe marks aRe oVeR thEy'll sEttlE and yOund me and I I I haVe Hurry Please Com They aRe and deSert me Now t hElp me lOvinG yOur loNg limbS And bEaUtIfUl fAcE They aRe afTer me and I I I haVe tO get Them nIghts and Them $500,000 and my boDy gIvEn my sEttlE for $300,000 There aRe marks on my nEck and brEas I sAid goLd and sIlvEn tO YoU sUch azure pleaSettle as I SuCh a loNg and goLd yOur Long finerS aRoBaBly sEttlE fOr $300,000 ther me and I I I thiNk we can Raise $300,000 and and bEaUtIfUl fAcE

↑ Index

27. Peter Ganick
new Potes & Poets Press chapbooks
Mon 31 May 1999

Announcing the 3rd series of chapbooks, now available from the publisher, or SPD.

Ivan Arguelles, City of Angels -- $7
Vernon Frazer, free fall -- $6
Rachel Levitsky, The Adventures of Yaya & Grace -- $7
Judith Roitman, Slippage -- $7
Peter Ganick, Immanence -- $7
Andrew Mossin, The Epochal Body -- $6
Jenn McCreary, errata stigmata -- $6
Thom Donovan, Sudden Miles -- $7
John Crouse, Eventing -- $6
Chris McCreary, Samson Agonistes -- $7
Alison Lune, Fringist Epiphany -- $6
Andrea Brady, Liberties -- $7

All twelve chapbooks available soon from the publisher for $68 [postage included, fourth class, a $79 value] --

Or, buy any 3 [three] and choose 1 [one]
free --

For first class postage add $0.50 per book --

Send check to: Potes & Poets Press
181 Edgemont Avenue, Elmwood CT 06110-1005

Or, chapbooks are available from Small Press Distribution, [redacted], [redacted]

↑ Index

28. Michael Scharf
New temporary e-dress
Mon 31 May 1999

This account, [redacted], is kaput. I should have a new address soon. For now, please find me at

[redacted]

Thanks -Mike

↑ Index

29. Joel Lewis
f.y.i.
Tue 1 Jun 1999

* In April, prominent Canadian geneticist Robert Hegele told a conference in Edmonton, Alberta, that when he revealed to some Newfoundlanders in remote villages that they possessed a genetic flaw that increased their chances of heart disease, they were happy. Their initial reaction, said Hegele, was, "This is great! They figured, 'This means we're doomed, so we . . . don't need to quit smoking or [stop eating fatty foods].'"

↑ Index

30. Poetics List Administration list delay . . .
Tue 1 Jun 1999

caused by problems with dialup service. fortunately it was a holiday weekend, so not much traffic seems to have been held up. what was, follows.

Chris - missing history

↑ Index

31. Judy Roitman
Re: Howe in NYC / Prevallet
Tue 1 Jun 1999

from Harold Teichman.

> Thanks to Kristin Prevallet for her impressions of Howe's
> Dia reading, somewhat at odds with mine.
>
> Kristin said:
> She talked in her intro about how she is beginning to see more and more
> of a connection between poetry and non-symbolic logic, and as she moved > further and further into her poems, her slides of the Pierce manuscripts > got more and more non-symbolic.
>
> My memory is of Howe alluding to the likeness of the > *enterprises of poetry and symbolic--not 'non-symbolic',*
> whatever that might be--logic

That is what she says in Pierce-Arrow. Symbolic, that is.

Non-symbolic logic is what people did before the mid-19th century and still do. More connected with human language/mind. Symbolic logic has an aspect in which it is just another branch of mathematics (think algebra; think algorithms); non-symbolic logic does not. Symbolic can swallow up whole fields that perhaps it shouldn't (think modal logic, i.e., notions of necessity/causality) if you let it.

I've been off the list, missed the impression of Howe's reading, did she say anything about the context for specific pages of Pierce reproduced in her book? I'm especially curious about the one just before the short Iliad piece that opens her work. My memory (I'm at my office, the book is home) is that the words SING and KILL are prominent. Please back-channel me. Extensive travel will force me off the list again soon.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

32. Lowther,John
Re: Howe in NYC / Prevallet
Tue 1 Jun 1999

harold & the list

i had some backchannel contact with kristin and she mentioned that "non-symboic" was a typo - she'd meant to write "symbolic"

i intervene here only as i don't think KP is on this list

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Harold Teichman [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Sunday, May 30, 1999 11:42 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Howe in NYC / Prevallet
>
> Thanks to Kristin Prevallet for her impressions of Howe's
> Dia reading, somewhat at odds with mine.

> Kristin said:
> She talked in her intro about how she is beginning to see more and more of a connection between poetry and non-symbolic logic, and as she moved further and further into her poems, her slides of the Pierce manuscripts got more and more non-symbolic.
>
> *My memory is of Howe alluding to the likeness of the enterprises of poetry and symbolic--not 'non-symbolic', whatever that might be--logic, though I could be wrong. In any case, that was just a remark waiting for an enactment or embodiment in her text, which seemed to me lacking in the ensuing bio-bricolage.*

↑ Index

33. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)

Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration

Tue 1 Jun 1999

At 9:59 AM 5/28/99, Mark Melnicove wrote:
>I'm writing an essay on Robert Frost's reading/recital at JFK's >inauguration and I'm looking for contemporary (i.e. 1961) responses to this >event by other poets. I've started to comb letters and diaries as collected >in books (Sandburg, Ginsberg, Jarrell, etc.), but haven't turned up much >yet. Anyone with any sources, leads, etc. please b.c. And, if you were >there (in person, or via TV) and wrote something at the time, or have some >recollections 38 years down the road you'd care to share, I'd love that, >too.
>Mark Melnicove

i remember my mother, who was a danish citizen, being so moved that she went out and bought Frost's Collected Works, which we still have in a prominent place in my family's home. also, Steven Caton, in Peaks of Yemen I Summon: Poetry as Social Practice in a Northern Yemeni Tribe, and Zofia Burr, in an as yet unpublished ms, discuss this event. so does, i believe??, robert von hallberg in American Poetry and Culture 1945-1980. Caton and von Hallberg discuss it in their introductions. burr devotes a chapter to comparing the kennedy/frost event to the clinton/angelou event. it's fascinating. i'd love to know more about what you're doing with this signal moment.

↑ Index

34. Lowther,John
CONTACT Jenna Roper Harmon
Tue 1 Jun 1999

---

if anyone out there can give me an email address fro Jenna i wd very much appreciate it - i need to get in touch with her

thanx

↑ Index

35. Tony Green
Re: snogging, wass iss diss snokking?
Tue 1 Jun 1999

-----Original Message-----
From: david bromige <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Wednesday, 2 June 1999 04:13
Subject: snogging, wass iss diss snokking?

> Rachel, listmates, I believe snogging is british c. 1950 for heavy petting.
> Any other aging britspeak persons on this list to bear this out or correct?

Aging brit here confirms snogging as heavy petting, or not even heavy petting, or just simply kissing -- that is, recollecting 1950s/60s usage & variable depending on who you were talking with. But this Wilson guy seems to mean bonking, signalling some kinda language-shift.

> btw, Rachel, thanks for posting that Wilson review of Motion.

Tony Golders Green

↑ Index

36. Wendy Kramer
Rooting in Erotic Garbage
Tue 1 Jun 1999

The last straw of trash depravity has been broken. . . the corrugated love pomes have reached their messy apex. while rushing to a librarians' meeting last week at 9: 15 in the a.m., while wearing a dry clean only taupe jacket, while frantically stamping down W. 14th st nyc to get a train to go to the New York Public sixth floor administrative offices where i'm being taught to "manage" i passed upon the curb

a LUNCH pome !!!!

yep! the word lunch embedded in a stack of dirty corrugated cardboard.

Stranded, late, with no heavy duty exact-o knife at hand (o when will this girl _learn_ to carry the weapon of love close to her flank always!) i walked past longingly, hesitated, stopped, rubbernecked, "should i" ? in _these_ clothes?! i'm late! then running back dropped to my haunches & took the lunch with my fingers. jagged edges & all pull pull then noticed the smell of piss & thot is it on the lunch pome am i getting it all over me, this isn't very urbane this won't smell good at the meeting what am i _doing_? then ah but i dont care and fell to once again. then shortly stood up to a puzzled look from the public & went on my way. thinking ah frank! i gotta _lunch_ pome i gotta _lunch_ pome & laughed the whole way to that insufferable sixth floor.

mina loy & frank you were both right! & god bless your sexy selves.

↑ Index

37. Stephen Vincent
Ann Hamilton/ Charles Reznikoff
Tue 1 Jun 1999

In case you did not see it, there's a lovely piece in this past Sunday's NY Times about Ann Hamilton (sculptor/installation artist) that she is preparing for the United States Pavilion for this summer's Venice Biennale. She is most well known for the use of simple materials and subtle means to create large public works invested with both historical and contemporary resonance. Interestingly this piece will draw on the works and ideas of several American writers. For example, and with some curious, but perhaps wonderful irony – given his much neglected position in 20th century writing – the "gallery walls will be covered in a Braille translation of passages from Charles Reznikoff's 'Testimony: The United States 1885 - 1915'". It's almost sweet that a writer, so democratically compelled and pretty much ignored, will have his work risen - albeit somewhat disguised – to a public apex in the international art world. It's probably still too much to hope that Venice will be the means by which Reznikoff will be welcomed 'back home'. The article also mentions other writers Ann Hamilton has drawn from for guidance or advice for influential sources including: Ann Carson, Susan Stewart and Ann Lauterbach. From the article's description, omens are that the piece – called "Myein" – will be a great one

Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

38. Jordan Davis
the suck of context
Tue 1 Jun 1999

Patrick writes:

> I'm particularly interested, as I notice > many others around me are these days, in > functionalist redefinitions of > such otherwise impossible to think terms as "poetry" > and "political" and > "efficacy."

OK, and that may prove to be the functionalEst thing to do, too. But what is so impossible to think term about "poetry"? Only impossible if you believe in esSNz (Jeff Derksen's sequel to Cronenberg).
Otherwise it's just games, sets, relations.

In re: "efficacy" I think we are standing across the crater from oeach ether. I am acting as inaudible interpreter of rumblings across generational strata.
We are hearing "why no politics." I would rather not say "but yes politics!" I would rather say "what means why no politics." I have a quiet feeling that this is another chance for generational call and response invite to Freuddance. We'll see!

> let's not > question the agency of a tradition without proposals > for its > reconfiguration in the wagering. Or, the agency of a > medium (another > troubled term). Or, the agency of linguistics . . . ad >absurdly yrs

These are already offed. In offing.

Jordan

↑ Index

39. Billy Little
Re: workshops with Chris Stroffolino
Tue 1 Jun 1999

---

amigos,

how is larry fagin. Did anybody think maybe he's on his uppers and trying to gain some sustenance(and dignity) by doing something he knows about/ just asking.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy

[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

40. Lowther,John
FW: A quote for you
Tue 1 Jun 1999

---

this is silly but i can't resist forwarding it

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Deppe, Roberta
> Sent: Monday, May 24, 1999 6:56 PM
> To: Lowther,John
> Subject: A quote for you
>
> "...and besides, everyone likes his own products more than [other people's], as parents and poets do."
> -Aristotle, Nicomachean Ethics
>
> ;-)

↑ Index

41. Jim Swift
Re: snogging, wass iss diss snokking?
Tue 1 Jun 1999

When I was a student in Britain in the 50's, snogging was just another name for kissing, somewhat more than affectionate but not particularly heavy! Quite enjoyable really!

> -----Original Message-----
> From: david bromige [mailto:[redacted]]
> Sent: Friday, May 28, 1999 12:14 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: snogging, wass iss diss snokking?
>
> Rachel, listmates, I believe snogging is british c. 1950 for heavy petting.
> Any other aging britspeak persons on this list to bear this out or correct?
> David
>
> btw, Rachel, thanks for posting that Wilson review of Motion.

> I cant think > when i've seen character assassination masquerading as lit > crit to that > degree, here in the usa. I've been trying to remember whether > Motion was > wearing mascara when i met him in toronto ten years ago. It > must have been > subtly applied if so. Could it be a convenient slander? (Not,
> of course,
> that one has anything against men in mascara). I found him > worth a read.
>
> David

↑ Index

42. John Kimball
Boston 1999
Tue 1 Jun 1999

Boston 1999

Audio, text & graphics from Boston poets & artists.

"...defining and extremely useful."

-- Robert Creeley, from his Introduction

_____

A special issue of The East Village Poetry Web

<http://www.theeastvillage.org>

_____

Why Boston? Why now?

 Try Lori Lubeski, "...a ringing bell / reminds us of church / of pie of paper plates / the word picnic / the world is on a picnic," from "Inside the envelope" --

 Discover one of summer's rarities, a new poem from John Wieners --

 "...tradition from the sidelines can prove that mastery" is reinstated, Beth Anderson's "A stately entrance" --

 Hear an earful! In his audio preface Cid Corman addresses Robert Kelly, Lorca and his own ideal of poetry --

Contributors:

Beth Anderson; John Wieners; Gerrit Lansing; Jim Dunn; Lori Lubeski; Charley Shively; Sean Cole; Robert Pinsky; Michael Franco; Debra Dean; Aaron Kiely;

Daniel Bouchard; Laurel Hughes; Joseph Torra; John Walker; Damon Krukowski; Cola Franzen; Alicia Borinsky; Cid Corman; Karen Davis; Andrea Werblin; Paul Stopforth; Brad Cain; Jack Kimball; Jacques Debrot; Ben Watkins; Donna de la Perriere; Jim Behrle; Heather Petersen; Tadashi Kondo; Raffael de Grutola; Joel Sloman; Joseph Lease; Diane Fraser; Laure-Anne Bosselaar; Bill Corbett; Robert Creeley.

Edited by Jack Kimball and Daniel Bouchard.

↑ Index

43. Harriet Zinnes
Re: Watten - Total Syntax
Tue 1 Jun 1999

The essay is included in NEW POETICS: Artifice and Indeterminacy, ed. Christopher Beach, U of Alabama Press, l999 (pp. 49-69).

[redacted]

↑ Index

44. Kevin Magee
Re: DIE ARBEIT IN DER KUNST
Tue 1 Jun 1999

LES CONSTRUCTEURS (1950)
[Huile sur toile, 300 x 200 cm]

Scored for the ensemble, the concert would go on for hours, one getting to know another largely without knowledge of one another, a single voice join with me on the vocals, signals for song allowing the projection of the shape of the poem the taped voice stimulates by demythologizing the drive to reoccupy the radical contingency of the real, its death, when not a day passes without some wild promise made in a non-phonetic space.

The poet is a life writing infinite points along the matrix of the one poem, exploring new media, making mistakes and lots of wrong sounds, silence, random static, 40 or so phonemes standing up solo in Stockholm at a microphone, some of the other earlier Lettriste poets too tied down in computerized texts and cut ups digitally constructed that fit into the work like what the work is without telling you how it works, trusting my not understanding what was going to happen, a machine-based way of working amidst old-fashion ways of physical travel and postage stamps.

In this synthesis Voyage in Californiamay occupy a diaphanous dimension, no consciousness of anything, the skins of the body open, viable, rotated optical flares in this machine and your machinery, thousands of years of orality, improvised Dickens or Balzac, Proust's hat to which the price tag's still attached, a type of complex improvisational theater where you can enter and start taking pictures, the 'shot' or visible slice of time charring the mechanics of vision, simulacra smearing undermined malleable skeins like paper, weave and filament of wave and ray, veil of stars, light of the alone on the alone, scriptural temple images, everything we think in the city where I live you're close to it anyway, your eyes on the hotel near The Hague, the work conceived from the distance the long pier supported by concrete pilings.

A construction rises as fictive-construct or "Sehnsucht" pressing the destination for me always already there where I can make an idea visible, make something seen or seem the building shown here which exists only as image-structure, a palisade of wood on a foundation of oil drums, how is it going to be looked at later on seeing that certain subjects cannot be approached in propositional constructs such as Hello? Hello?--the one vocal utterance overlaying the other achieves a passacaglia, philosophy's essence, pure being, electrification as an implacable force traversing human lives, cities, industry, agriculture, physics, and that there are logics too urgent to identify with this ill-used, worn-out technology that Marcel was able to develop acoustically in a vocal technique Satie called "crirythme."

Several of his pieces got him in trouble with the record company and his work was handled with extraordinary carelessness like The Book of Kellswhose unusual size shows that it was an altar book made to be used for liturgical readings and experiments in performance poetry, avant-garde jazz and hypertext, the weird stuff that it can do at the limits of consciousness. There is another Coltrane out there with a laptop living in a place as far away as can be like the places where books go when they die, no book over half price, writing and performing and recording the double golden arches of the spoken word, "and damn it, these people who wish to be morally good or something exert a huge inhibiting force. Bullying goes on now in the name of politically correct signifying." (Ian Hamilton Finlay, Little Sparta, Dunsyre, 5 May 1993).

I wanted to build a space and I have, a choreographic prologue geared directly into the chair where I am sitting at the beginning of a video projection of myself shaking to rock lyrics trying to capture my most spontaneous emotional response to the pure chain of appearances in 1995, the video image of my face detached from existing forums for the thousands of pages of poetry I wrote, my voice cued to come on in Copenhagen in November of this year honed down raw, volatile and dialectical- intellectual flowers of evil to become the virtual poet-lariat of North America's invisible proletariat, metastases from the ecstacy intermingling in the iconic domain of photographed paragraphs reverberating with the question, Has nothing changed?

The walls are falling between the Real and the Imaginary speaks us and poses us in the vault of a foundation site atop the painting morphed off the map within the phantasmatics of a lens grown sugary and dim as the Real is taking us somewhere, over scarred ground littered with homeless migratory bodies, the sacrifice of the real for its double creates a lesion we must heal, dealing with a statement on 'a place' as though it were possible to enter it and walk around it on paths downright exterior, gospel shawl and shelter of bare walls and floors without a view of any swans on any pond, our only metaphor for what barely is, a living space or place or sequence of places within walking distance, oars that might mean prayer and learning.

When Glenn Gould dropped out of the concert circuit in 1964, public radio took no notice of his applying ink as lavish hue to herald a glance at the modelling of a wish sliding into diagrams, plans, an architect of intention pressing the private task of writing in letters the exegesis which is not the noema of anything imagined even less than the act, the pure cry, the tear ducts opened, indefinite empty hours amid mute midafternoon on a Sunday at the end of May wept with intense clarity directly into the camera for the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam.

The "trans" doesn't always come off, playing the sentimentalist whose body is a spasm of contradictory impulses exposed by trial and error and re-created out of splices and montages of different takes for a high-resolution video conferencing system, having chose eclecticism over any effort to systematize intimacy at a distance, a polylogue of bodies interacting in a virtual, non-integrative soundscape and visual mosaic in collaboration with Stefan George and other notable artisans working in Vancouver for Buffalo TV mostly made at night under artifical lighting.

All circuits are open between what we can do and what we ought to do, what was once fictional is now fallen back on faxes and telephones and e-mail, annotations pointing back to themselves as if in a closed system as in an act of inspiration as in Le baiser transatlantique at the Canadian Cultural Center in Paris where it was once proposed to project on a screen the profiles of two poets turned toward one another, whose lips would meet in a kiss as they continued to speak in French and English (See De Kerckhove, Les Transinteractifs Espace SNVB, Paris, 1990, p15ff). Has the natural body has become so obsolete in light of the hyper-exteriority of its virtual organs outering it into a technoscape extremely ethereal, hardly visible, retreating into the wall itself as if no life had never been there?

30 May, 4:30-11:00 p.m. ET

↑ Index

45. Deena Larsen
URL for MOO Wed at 3 pm GMT
Tue 1 Jun 1999

PLEASE SEND REPLIES TO DEENA LARSEN at [redacted]. DO NOT RESPOND TO THE SENDING ADDRESS

This is an emergency cross-posting, as the URLs were reported incorrectly.

We apologize for any cross-posting.

Come on in and join us in a fascinating discussion of hypertext!!!

In case you haven't heard of this, or had forgotten:

CYBERMOUNTAIN MOO SESSION
June 2, 1999, 3-6 pm GMT.

CyberMountain, a four-day workshop for hypertext system and content developers, is hosting a simultaneous face-to-face MOO discussion from 3 to 6 pm, Greenwich Mean Time, Wednesday June 2, 1999. Details about CyberMountain are at: http://humans.net/cybermountain/index.html.

The MOO will take place from 3 to 6 pm, Greenwich Mean Time, Wednesday June 2, 1999, starting with a keynote talk by Stuart Moulthrop. MOO sessions are usually merely on-line discussions. However, this session will be based on connected conferences throughout the world to incorporate face-to-face get togethers as well as a computer interface. All over the world, people will gather in schools, universities, businesses, cybercafes and public venues to talk about hypertext issues. They will then discuss these issues as a group on the MOO.

To participate, log in to cmcMOO using your web browser: http://cmc.uib.no:8000 or log in with a telnet or MOO client to Little Italy at little.usr.dsi.unimi.it:4444 or to cmcMOO at cmc.uib.no:8888 - and do it at 3 pm GMT (come and practice beforehand if you can). (see http://www.bldrdoc.gov/timefreq/javaclck.htm if you don't know when that is in your time zone) If you have trouble, contact Jill Walker at [redacted] or Walter Vannini at [redacted]

You can find detailed instructions and more about the topics we'll be discussing at http://humans.net/cybermountain/moo.html

↑ Index

46. Katie Degentesh

ANNOUNCEMENT: NINE BY NINE INDUSTRIES

Wed 2 Jun 1999

****

ANNOUNCEMENT: NINE BY NINE INDUSTRIES is pleased to announce the publication of books by two of its founding members: SORRY, WE'RE CLOSE, a collection of poetry and stories by J. Tarin Towers; and THE ARTIST OF THE MISSING, Paul LaFarge's first novel.

Both books are available from fine booksellers both corporeal and online. Complete publication information appears at the end of this message, as well as information about 9x9's other endeavors. More readings by these authors are listed on their respective web sites, also listed below.

INVITATION: Please join us for a reception for Tarin Towers on Sunday, June 6, from 2-5 p.m. at Allison's house, 419 S. Van Ness (SF). A $2 donation is requested to secure the space, but no one will be turned away. BYOB.

AND

The publisher's book party for Tarin Towers occurs later that evening at the Paradise Lounge (11th & Folsom, San Francisco) at 8 p.m. FREE! James Cagney of Oakland will also be reading poetry, and an open mike follows the reading.

PUBLICATION INFO:

THE ARTIST OF THE MISSING (Farrar, Strauss, and Giroux, 1999) is Paul LaFarge's first novel. Publisher's Weekly calls it "a feverish fantasy disguised as a political allegory disguised as a Borgesian work of fiction disguised as a dream." In the book, two expatriate brothers arrive in a seaside town where nothing is what it seems. Kirkus Reviews called it "Ambitious, poetic, intelligent, otherworldly." ISBN: 0374525803 Web: http://www.paraffin.org/artist/

SORRY, WE'RE CLOSE (Manic-D Press, 1999) is the first full-length collection by J. Tarin Towers. Pieces in this book have appeared in such anthologies, magazines, and recordings as the Pushcart Prize Anthology 1999, The Fray, and Beaten to the Bone. "Towers has a keen ear for the rhythms of everyday speech and a form that flirts with tradition. In a framework encompassing love, sex, and betrayal, these poems and stories explore the boundaries of the heart's language." ISBN: 0916397580 Web: http://www.tarin.com/sorry/

OTHER TITLES BY 9x9 MEMBERS include: * 6,500 #1, the official literary magazine of 9x9 Industries * LUNCH FROM AN EMPTY PLATE, a chapbook by Katie Degentesh * NOUGHTBOOKS 1 and 2, chapbooks by Eugene Ostashevsky * BECAUSE THE BRAIN CAN BE TALKED INTO ANYTHING, poems by Jan

Richman * WENCHES AND WRENCHES, a comic book by The Mysterious Mr. Clam

TITLES BY 9x9 GUESTS include:
* THE INTUITIONIST, a novel by Colson Whitehead
* MONKEY GIRL, poems and stories by Beth Lisick
* INTEGRITY & DRAMATIC LIFE, poems by Anselm Berrigan
* NOTHING THE SUN COULD NOT EXPLAIN, Brazilian poetry edited by Michael Palmer
* THE LION BRIDGE: SELECTED POEMS 1972-1995, by Michael Palmer
* PELT, poems by Daphne Gottlieb and many, many more!

NEXT 9X9 EVENT: JUNE 17 at Adobe Books: Sonia Whittle, Vladlen Pogorelov, and Klipschutz. Join us for the final reading in 9x9's 1998-1999 Adobe season. Watch this space for details.

↑ Index

47. Douglas Oliver
Re: snogging
Wed 2 Jun 1999

As a kneejerk ageing heterosexual Brit, I am answering David Bromige's appeal for clarification on what I'm sure this list thinks the Brits still call "courting".

Snogging was a 1950s word, as he says, but didn't necessarily mean heavy petting in those innocent days. Heavy kissing was enough to qualify, preferably if the lips went slightly numb. Petting came in from the US about that time and when that got heavy more use of hands was involved on both sides. Gay behaviour was simply illegal. I've many happy memories of snogging in cinemas during the afternoons, my favourite time for this activity.

I've been mildly interested in the US takeup of the term "bonking", which I've rigorously outlawed my own vocabulary because I think it originated (or was widely used) in British royal family circles, and I try to keep my mouth clean of any shit like that. E.g., Prince Andrew's famous piece of wit, no doubt borrowed: "Bonking is horizontal jogging," which shows a level of emotional involvement somewhat pre-snogging even. Perhaps one could say, "Snogging is jogging at a higher level" but then "jogging" is anachronistic there, a creation of the 1960s, I'd guess. God, I'm beginning to sound like William Safire.

Doug Oliver

↑ Index

48. Kathleen Crown
A Poets Gathering Against the War
Wed 2 Jun 1999

A Poets Gathering Against the War

with readings by:

Dot Antoniades * Katherine Arnoldi * Brett Axel *
Anselm Berrigan * Harold A. Bowser III * Steve Cannon *
Stacey Ann Chin * Mitchel Cohen * Marc Desmond *
Reg E. Gaines * Guy LeCharles Gonzalez * Steve Hirsch *
Bob Holman * CD Johnson * Eliot Katz * Loki Kevorkian *
Patrick Kowalchuk * Tony Medina * Nancy Mercado *
Tom Obrzut * Onome * Amy Ouzoonian *
Pedro Pietri * Aileen Reyes * Keith Roach * Bob Rosenthal *
Susan Sherman * Dan Shot * Hal Sirowitz *
Suzanne Solomon * Miriam Stanley * Eileen Sutton *
Kyrce Swenson * Meaghan Williams * Maggie Zurawski *
plus a speaker from the War Resisters League & more

Sunday, June 13th, 1999 * 4-8pm * Free

A Gathering of the Tribes Gallery
285 E. 3rd Street (betw. Avenues C & D), 2nd Floor
Website: www.tribes.org * Email: [redacted]
Phone: [redacted]

↑ Index

49. Gerald Schwartz
S+E+A+N+C+Eperf.
Wed 2 Jun 1999

For those in the Northeast Corridor...Specifically in the Albany, New York area:

Sunday June 6th...7 PM
@ THE LOFT, 40 Broadway, Albany, New York

DOLLSOUL (S+E+A+N+C+E)
An event, a collision, an improvisation
by Gerald Schwartz & Damian Catera

Also: solo performances by *Damian Catera
* K K Null

Gerald Schwartz & Damian Catera's DOLLSOUL (S+E+A+N+C+E) performance will be an extension of Schwartz's poetry and catera's sound design: it will itself be set in contrast to drama or libretto, since all parts of its stagework are inseparably bound up together. It will only happen there, then. They will have no clear out-lines, save the annilation and transmission of a doll soul. It will be a meditation on dolls, all cultures, all eras. It will be as disturbing, as any such catalogue must be.

Damian Catera will perform works based on PROCESS, OBJECT, INTUITION, the inaugural full-length release on the newly formed Harsh House label. This work is realized with an expanded instrument system designed by Catera, sampling and mutating bits of performed guitar sounds, creating a constantly evolving soundscape. This should appeal to both hard-cores and enthusiasts of the future.

K K NULL is the future. This Japanese noise auteur will crush you, and you will learn to like it. Be it the massive riffs of his band Zeni Geva (that made us all run for cover), or the high-pitched sheer mass of his solo release INORGANIC ORGASM, Kazuyuki Kishino Null will sonic you but good. BIG TIME.

Directions to THE LOFT:

> FROM 787 SOUTH:

Get off at Madison Ave./Port of Albany exit. Take left at light at the end of the exit ramp following the signs to Port of Albany. Follow road underneath overpass. Take right into Port of Albany. Pass U-Haul building on left. Follow road 1/8th of a mile. Take right at 4th Ave. Park along side or in back of building. Go into 1st door in from Broadway with the Bankshot sign next to it and go up the stairs.

$5 at the door.

↑ Index

50. nuyopoman

Frank Lima

Wed 2 Jun 1999

In case you didn't know, Frank Lima's new book _idobelieveidobelieve_ , his rewrite of The Bible, is coming out in October (West End). It's a sign.

You can taste "Jesus' First Draft of the Sermon on the Mountain," at my old MiningCo site which amongst much trumpeting is now About.com. It's About time, etc.

http://poetry.about.com
or http://poetry.about.com/library/weekly/mcurrent.htm?pid=2734&cob=home

Bob Holman

↑ Index

51. travmar03
Fw: Eddie Berrigan and Greg Fuchs at Teachers and Writers
Wed 2 Jun 1999

Eddie Berrigan and Greg Fuchs will read and do other extraordinary things to celebrate the publication of their new books

Disarming Matter -- Edmund Berrigan

Came Like It Went -- Greg Fuchs

Teachers and Writers
5 Union Square West. 7th Floor. (between 14th & 15th Sts.)
6:30 PM
Friday June 4, 1999

↑ Index

52. jesse glass
Re: found poetry
Wed 2 Jun 1999

I might also add my own series of poems Man's Wows deconstructed from John George Hohman's collection of folk remedies The Long Lost Friend. A selection from this series was published in 1982 by Charles Alexander's Black Mesa Press. Other poems from the series have appeared in Membrane, Synaesthetic, Assembling, etc. The complete Man's Wows will appear in limited edition format next year. These poems were found "inside" of the original texts. My inspiration for the project came from Ron Johnson's RadiOs and Tom Phillips.
Jesse Glass

-----Original Message-----
From: Patrick F. Durgin <[redacted]>
To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, June 01, 1999 9:30 AM
Subject: Re: found poetry

> Jena
>Rod Smith's piece in the second issue of Tripwire, as well as some of

>O'Hara's plays, might be interesting to you if you intend to look at >faux-found text works. Rod's piece is especially interesting as he's >culling and reworking and, most of all, role-playing recognized figures in >what amounts to a critico-poetic essay. Though I may have stretched these >terms beyond their breaking point, here.
> Patrick F. Durgin
>
>At 04:53 PM 5/25/99 -0700, Taylor Brady wrote:
>>Jena,
>>
>>A few texts spring most readily to mind here:
>>
>>Jackson Mac Low's _Words nd Ends from Ez_, _Virginia Woolf Poems_, >>_Barnesbook_, etc.
>>Ronald Johnson's _Radi Os_ (1st 4[?] books of Paradise Lost, written-through >>by subtraction)
>>Hannah Weiner's _Weeks_ (I don't think it sticks very "purely" to language >>heard on the news, but most of it's close)
>>Tom Phillips' _A Humument_
>>Joan Retallack's _Errata 5uite_ (Are you looking for poems "found" in single >>texts, or collaged from a number of sources?)
>>David Bromige's Sonoma County newspaper prose poem, a lovely piece whose >>title I'm unfortunately not able to recall
>>
>>I also remember well a piece by Rosmarie and Keith Waldrop, read by them at >>the Ear Inn back in '95(?), which was created by successively working >>through Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey," each time subtracting a certain >>proportion of words. Rosmarie's use of Wittgenstein in _The Reproduction of >>Profiles_ and _Lawn of Excluded Middle_, while not a pure example of the >>genre, also might be of interest.
>>
>>In the realm of badly-remembered secondhand information, didn't I also hear >>somewhere that dictionary definitions had some role as "source material" in >>Clark Coolidge's _The Maintains_?
>>

>>Analogies in music too numerous to document here - and probably off-topic, >>though I'd be happy to backchannel if you're interested. One I'll mention, >>since it connects to one of your examples, is Cage's _Quartets I-VIII_, >>which is a subtractive rewriting of American Protestant hymns.
>>
>>I'm drawing a blank when trying to think of critical prose on this specific >>topic other than that by the poets/composers themselves, though there are a >>number of texts which might be extended to apply here by analogy. Which >>leaves Mac Low's and Cage's "explanatory" prose glosses, along with Cage's >>_Diary_ [_Journal_?] as good introductions to the procedures, some of the >>aesthetic and political claims that have been made for them, etc.
>>
>>I hope this is at least a little helpful.
>>
>>
>>Taylor
>>
>>
>>-----Original Message-----
>>From: UB Poetics discussion group
>[mailto:[redacted]]
>>On Behalf Of Jena Osman
>>Sent: Tuesday, May 25, 1999 9:21 AM
>>To: [redacted]
>>Subject: found poetry
>>
>>I'm interested in poems that were "found" inside of other texts (such as >>Cage's mesostics and Reznikoff's _Testimony_). What are some favorites in >>this genre by others? Any critical texts about these kinds of procedures I >>should know about?
>>
>>Thanks,
>>Jena Osman
>>[redacted]
>>
>>
>

↑ Index

53. Billy Little
Time to Read?
Wed 2 Jun 1999

semester's over? papers graded? grad money burning a hole in your pocket?if you are serious at all about this calling, this vocation, this profession i don't see how you can avoid at least reading Rhizome and if you're already eating well i'd give up a couple of first run movies to subscribe it's so elegantly(but not ostentatiously) and lovingly presented i wouldn't be surprised to hear the current issue was being used as a standard in a design course, no pun intended, standard schaefer and evan calbi have edited Rhizome so well, if they don't get any job they apply for, i pity the employer. and a lot of your friends have discovered it already Gwyn McVay, Chris Stroffolino, Catherine Wagner, Emily Grossman, Cole Swenson, Jena Osman, Patrick Prichett, Jacques Debrot, Summi Kaipi, Ray DiPalma and lots more offered in this substantial 231page edition, you won't be taking this to the recycling depot anytime soon, you'll be reading and rereading this and passing it among your friends. And if you're penniless, as i am, go to your library , recommend this as a professional tool for acquisitions librarians who want to do a fair job at representing poetry, one of the seven deadly arts after all, recommend they buy two, one for training staff and one for general circulation. And while you have your checkbook out, this edition of the 2River View, edited by Richard Long, would be a good one to begin your prescription with, the collaboration of Creeley and Indiana alone will cure ya.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

54. David Baratier
Re: Watten - Total Syntax
Wed 2 Jun 1999

Marc--

I do. On my shelf. How about $500? I'll throw in a poetry lesson.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

55. Poetics List
More summer reading / idiom
Wed 2 Jun 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

From: idiom <[redacted]>
Date: 6/1/99 10:01 PM -0700

Announcing 2 new chapbooks and yet another new URL from IDIOM ...

Please peruse our new selections at http://www.idiomart.com/new.html ...

Faith -- a romantic reliquary, by Katherine Lederer

Profession -- a marvel of Renaissance architecture, by Gregg Biglieri available now for $6 each ...

****
idiom
[redacted]
http://www.idiomart.com

****

↑ Index

56. Lowther,John
Re: Time to Read? / rhizome / shark
Wed 2 Jun 1999

---

i'd just like to jump in here briefly as i posted when this 1st came out and then again taking issue with standard's essay and in neither did i get around to saying that the issue itself is really great billy little notes many of the poets who i enjoyed the most in the issue but i'd also like to mention

Robert Crosson, Annie Le Brun, Joe Ross, Franklin Bruno, Garrett Caples, Paul Vangelisti, E. Tracy Grinnell and Guy Bennett (and it is Guy who does the typesetting and much of the design i suspect the title page certainly has his look about it)

it's a really good read

_____and i saw the new issue of shark a couple of nights ago at our weekly APG meeting and immediately called dibs on it next

it looks fuckin great !

lost of graphic stuff and some dialogue-type sections (is it just me or is there a rise of explicitly multi-voice'd writing these days?)
i got the sense that there is a more 'conceptual' approach taken by a significant # of contributors on a (for now) cursory look i'm guessing that this issue of shark is essential

(hey you shark editors - wanna trade magazines with poor poet down south?)

)L

↑ Index

57. Thomas Bell
Re: Ann Hamilton/ Charles Reznikoff
Wed 2 Jun 1999

---

albeit there might be some differences in quality of the artwork or poetry, i don't see how this differs from visual poetry. Not to detract from Ann Hamilton and her riveting "language of her own" i wonder how much attention she would be getting were she to call herself a poet? Is she a poet? She fits my definitiiion.

tom bell

Stephen Vincent wrote:
>
> In case you did not see it, there's a lovely piece in this past Sunday's NY

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

58. Harvey Jordan

Re: found poetry

Wed 2 Jun 1999

In the 60s, George Stanley published a collection called, "Experiments in Modern Poetry," (something like that). The texts were sewing machine instructions, recipes, etc. I recall loving it at the time. |Still have it somewhere. It was published by Kayak, maybe? Does anyone recall it?
Harvey Jordan
----- Original Message -----
From: Patrick F. Durgin <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: Saturday, May 29, 1999 3:28 PM
Subject: Re: found poetry

> Jena
> Rod Smith's piece in the second issue of Tripwire, as well as some of > O'Hara's plays, might be interesting to you if you intend to look at > faux-found text works. Rod's piece is especially interesting as he's > culling and reworking and, most of all, role-playing recognized figures in > what amounts to a critico-poetic essay. Though I may have stretched these > terms beyond their breaking point, here.
> Patrick F. Durgin
>
> At 04:53 PM 5/25/99 -0700, Taylor Brady wrote:
> >Jena,
> >
> >A few texts spring most readily to mind here:
> >
> >Jackson Mac Low's _Words nd Ends from Ez_, _Virginia Woolf Poems_, > >_Barnesbook_, etc.
> >Ronald Johnson's _Radi Os_ (1st 4[?] books of Paradise Lost, written-through

> >by subtraction)
> >Hannah Weiner's _Weeks_ (I don't think it sticks very "purely" to language > >heard on the news, but most of it's close)
> >Tom Phillips' _A Humument_
> >Joan Retallack's _Errata 5uite_ (Are you looking for poems "found" in single > >texts, or collaged from a number of sources?)
> >David Bromige's Sonoma County newspaper prose poem, a lovely piece whose > >title I'm unfortunately not able to recall
> >
> >I also remember well a piece by Rosmarie and Keith Waldrop, read by them at > >the Ear Inn back in '95(?), which was created by successively working > >through Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey," each time subtracting a certain > >proportion of words. Rosmarie's use of Wittgenstein in _The Reproduction of > >Profiles_ and _Lawn of Excluded Middle_, while not a pure example of the > >genre, also might be of interest.
> >
> >In the realm of badly-remembered secondhand information, didn't I also hear > >somewhere that dictionary definitions had some role as "source material" in > >Clark Coolidge's _The Maintains_?
> >
> >Analogies in music too numerous to document here - and probably off-topic, > >though I'd be happy to backchannel if you're interested. One I'll mention, > >since it connects to one of your examples, is Cage's _Quartets I-VIII_, > >which is a subtractive rewriting of American Protestant hymns.
> >
> >I'm drawing a blank when trying to think of critical prose on this specific > >topic other than that by the poets/composers themselves, though there are a > >number of texts which might be extended to apply here by analogy. Which > >leaves Mac Low's and Cage's "explanatory" prose glosses, along with Cage's > >_Diary_ [_Journal_?] as good introductions to the procedures, some of the > >aesthetic and political claims that have been made for them, etc.

> >
> >I hope this is at least a little helpful.
> >
> >
> >Taylor
> >
> >
> >-----Original Message-----
> >From: UB Poetics discussion group
> [mailto:[redacted]]
> >On Behalf Of Jena Osman
> >Sent: Tuesday, May 25, 1999 9:21 AM
> >To: [redacted]
> >Subject: found poetry
> >
> >I'm interested in poems that were "found" inside of other texts (such as > >Cage's mesostics and Reznikoff's _Testimony_). What are some favorites in > >this genre by others? Any critical texts about these kinds of procedures
I
> >should know about?
> >
> >Thanks,
> >Jena Osman
> >[redacted]
> >
> >
>

↑ Index

59. Alan Sondheim

Julu for Netscape (preferably 4 or greater) (fwd)

Wed 2 Jun 1999

Text for Julu for Netscape (preferably 4 or greater)

http:www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt/out.htm

↑ Index

60. Lowther,John
Re: found poetry
Wed 2 Jun 1999

---

my favorite piece of found poetry or perhaps found art in this case turned up on the floor of the airport in las vegas

(i was wearing a dress and get-up reminescent of terry jones in old-lady drag at the time)

this object fits into the breast pocket of a airline uniform blazer and is made from a piece of cardstock folded around a piece of polyester itself folded to look like a hankerchief the polyester is a rich burgundy color on the card is a sticker and on the sticker

it says ;

"POCKETY-PUFF IS A COMPLETE UNIT"

↑ Index

61. William Marsh
PaperBrainPress
Wed 2 Jun 1999

Hi all:

PaperBrainPress is happy to announce two new titles: Rebecca Byrkit's "Suite: Mary" and Steve Carll's "DRUGS" (just in time for the San Diego summer).

The chapbook series is now six books deep...

[click for samples]

DRUGS (S.Carll)
http://bmarsh.dtai.com/PBrain/drugs.html
Suite:Mary (R.Byrkit)
http://bmarsh.dtai.com/PBrain/mary.html
numens from centrality (S.Murphy/P.Ganick) http://bmarsh.dtai.com/PBrain/numens.html mag nets (M.Magoolaghan)
http://bmarsh.dtai.com/PBrain/magnets.html
ROOMS (D.Featherston)
http://bmarsh.dtai.com/PBrain/rooms.html

b/c (W.Marsh)
http://bmarsh.dtai.com/Works/bc/bccontents.html

... and books come in all shapes and sizes ....

Any interested in supporting the effort can get all six for $20 -- or any one for $5 or any two for $8. Other details about the press can be found at http://bmarsh.dtai.com/PBrain/pbrain.html.

Thanks, and happy solstice to all.

Bill Marsh ([redacted])
PaperBrainPress
1022 Emerald St.
San Diego, CA 92109

↑ Index

62. Alan C Golding
Snogging
Wed 2 Jun 1999

On "snogging," I must beg to differ slightly with my esteemed senior compatriate Prof. Bromige. When I was growing up (to the extent that I did) in England, "snogging" was pretty much synonymous with the American "necking." This was mid-late '60s. "Heavy petting" was the next stage to which one (or I) aspired to take the snogging. Even then it struck me as one of those words that sounded like it meant something much less pleasurable that the actual activity it referred to--kind of like that old Valley-speak term, "sucking face."

Another Aging Britspeak Person
_____--

Alan Golding
University of Louisville

[redacted]

↑ Index

63. Stephen Vincent
Re: snogging
Wed 2 Jun 1999

Perhaps a sibling of "snogging," a few months back in a local San Francisco bar I once heard a young Irish woman argue - in defense of Monica – "If she wants to snorkel with the President, that's her own damn business." The verb gave a curious, but nice submarine quality to life in the Oval Office.

↑ Index

64. Matt Kirschenbaum
Blake Archive's June Update
Wed 2 Jun 1999

---

2 June 1999

The William Blake Archive <http://www.iath.virginia.edu/blake> is pleased to announce the publication of new electronic editions for two works in Blake's emblem series: _For Children: The Gates of Paradise_ and the revised and augmented version _For the Sexes: The Gates of Paradise_. Through a numbered series of intaglio plates with inscriptions ranging from single words to brief aphorisms, Blake puts the course of human life from birth to death in psychological perspective. Some of the emblems form narrative sequences; others exemplify mental states and their reification in the external world. Blake etched in intaglio the eighteen plates of _For Children_ in 1793 and printed all extant copies (A-E) in the same year. The copy published in the Archive is copy D, from the Rosenwald Collection, Library of Congress.

In about 1820, Blake revised _For Children: The Gates of Paradise_, giving the work a new title, _For the Sexes: The Gates of Paradise_, reworking the design plates at least twice, and adding three new text plates at the end (19-21). Plates 19-20 contain brief interpretive statements keyed by number to the preceding design plates. The final plate is addressed to Satan as the "God of This [fallen] World." Copies A and B were probably printed c. 1820. Copies C and D, plus a large group of impressions never collated into complete copies by Blake but now divided into what are designated as copies J-N, date from c. 1825. Copies E-I are probably posthumous. We now publish copy D, from the collection of the Pierpont Morgan Library, New York.

Both electronic editions have newly edited SGML-encoded texts and new images scanned and color-corrected from first-generation 4x5" transparencies; they are each fully searchable for both text and images and supported by the Inote and ImageSizer applications described in our previous updates.

With the publication of these two titles, the Archive now contains 33 copies of 18 separate books, including at least one copy of every one of Blake's works in illuminated printing except the 100 plates of _Jerusalem_ (forthcoming).

Also, we are pleased to announce that a Tour of the Archive is now available online. Through a sequence of several dozen graphical screenshots linked to narrative commentary, the Tour introduces users to the basic organization and structure of the Archive, the features of its interface, its search options, and the function of the Inote and ImageSizer applications. The Tour is located in the "About the Archive" wing of the site. Available as the first link off our main table of contents page at the URL above, the "About the Archive" materials include, in addition to the Tour, a statement of Editorial Principles and Methodology, a Frequently Asked Questions list, a Technical Summary, and an updated version of the article-length Plan of the Archive detailing our intentions with regard to Blake's non-illuminated works--and more. We hope that the Tour, together with these other materials, will prove valuable both to our own growing user community and to scholars interested in the theory and practice of electronic editing more generally.

Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Viscomi, Editors
Matthew G. Kirschenbaum, Technical Editor
The William Blake Archive

↑ Index

65. Tom Beard symbolic snogging
Wed 2 Jun 1999

> When I was a student in Britain in the 50's, snogging was just another name for kissing, somewhat more than affectionate but not particularly heavy! Quite enjoyable really!

Not just Britain, and not just in the 50's. 'To snog' (v.t. & v.i.) is pretty common usage in NZ today, although I think that it was probably imported from England in the 80's (my first memory of it was Vyvyan talking of snogging his hamster). Before that, the equivalent was 'to pash' (from 'passion'), as in 'having a pash behind the bikesheds'. Pashing seems to be making a comeback, especially among gen-X-ers with ironic nostalgia for growing up in the 70s.

'Snogging' probably became popular about the same time as 'bonking', although 'shagging' has been making a comeback in the 90's. Hell, post-Austin Powers, even Americans know what it means!

On a slightly more substantial note, I'm interested by what Judy said about symbolic logic:

> Non-symbolic logic is what people did before the mid-19th century and still > do. More connected with human language/mind. Symbolic logic has an aspect > in which it is just another branch of mathematics (think algebra; think > algorithms); non-symbolic logic does not. Symbolic can swallow up whole > fields that perhaps it shouldn't (think modal logic, i.e., notions of > necessity/causality) if you let it.

In a sense, symbolic logic is not 'just another branch' of maths: it's an essential foundation of most branches of mathematics. Any formal proof requires a process that, if not actually written as formal logic, should be able to be reduced to it.

I don't think that symbolic logic was intended to replace the non-symbolic kind, but was an attempt to systematize the kind of conscious reasoning that goes back to Aristotle. It does swallow up whole fields; at least in the sense that it narrows those fields. It's a constant reminder to question the foundations of any field: if the meta-axioms (law of the excluded middle, for example) don't apply, then any reasoning built upon that foundation will collapse.

As an interesting aside, there's a lot of criticism of the binary true/false nature of Western logic. It's ironic, then, that Leibniz's development of binary arithmetic was partly based upon his reading of the I Ching!

Regards,
Tom Beard

↑ Index

66. pete spence
Re: hannah weiner's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE
Wed 2 Jun 1999

THANKS!! the 2nd response to my notifications on the copies of Hannah Weiner's Written In/The Zero One was good!! for those who missed both notifications i have quite a few copies left. The book was printed in 1986 by Post Neo Publications Melbourne Australia. The book was poorly distributed by me at the time. If you are interested in getting a copy please send $5.00 cash (bank charges on overseas cheques etc here in Australia make sending cheques etc useless)and i will promptly send the book back Airmail, you should also send your letter ordering the book Airmail.
send to:
pete spence
40 bramwell st
ocean grove 3226 victoria australia.

also those who have ordered the book recently i'd like your comment when you get it//yours pete spence

---

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

67. Patrick F. Durgin
Re: the flux of context
Wed 2 Jun 1999

At 04:56 PM 6/1/99 -0400, Jordan Davis wrote:

But what is so impossible to think term
>about "poetry"?
. . . . it's just games, sets, relations.

Okay, but without proposals, I think I meant, and proposals are our business, our wares, such relations are unlike poetry-bytes. Cross-propositions might be a preferable term for "games, sets, relations." Poetry signifies too many or too little, depending on the company one keeps.

> In re: "efficacy" I think we are standing across the crater from oeach ether. I am acting as inaudible interpreter of rumblings across generational strata. We are hearing "why no politics." I would rather not say "but yes politics!" I would rather say "what means why no politics." I have a quiet feeling that this is another chance for generational call and response invite to Freuddance. We'll see!

Another proposal may be to carefully elaborate the divide by means of registering efficacy in light of, you nailed it, the suck of context. You one nifty public correspondant. Don't be so quiet about it. Patrick

↑ Index

68. Kevin Magee
Re: WE WANT ALL GUNS TAKEN OUT OF IRELAND
Thu 3 Jun 1999

This "social sculpture" as he called it, unconditional being Bobbie Joe August 27 1996 the sickness does it have all its arms legs fingers toes gonna precious life and love see the face dice lucky stars this way and that way a many splendor miracle spelled barley barely swirl dispair chant you can't please accept this for the school's poetry contest thank you part two on opening day cuss the bus maroon moo-ron moron one person takes up two spaces rearrange their faces!

Go to the bar to talk to the boss lickety-split my plate, plaint, Propeller Paintings where those few minutes her face orange ambled from my job my little work table in January, torches, chainsaws--just standard gang box--working for Walt's doing little odds and ends on the side in January the other job that was bringing in the rest of that up till about a month ago you were doing side work in July, right, trying to get it clear in my head, are you saying I see what you're doing that's what I want to get at, doing it more so in the last month or so, doing it all along, let's get back to the beginning of the year, start in January, start fresh here at the beginning of the year sometimes at some time before the time commenced or while it was going on that a man apparently in a foreman capacity of some sort walked by the area and the next thing you saw was that helmet of his that fell to the ground, was it damaged? It was broken. Get a new helmet you can't weld with that one and then--well, after he got back we started and Curtis welded his section and moved it up, and he started on another one and that's when Bill started hollering about these symbolic positions--"man," "woman"--they're never inhabited by any one worker-subject, double spiral or double windmill, parallel convergences, tell another narrative on the site of the tablets, tale of the combat that established it, refusing to simply abandon the sites left in ruins, instrumentalize what Breton did in NADJA, the photopoem behind the outside of an inside of an outside double wall opens into imaginary news and fantasies of the real for real outside world fabricated by a solitary self-employed publisher, I'm going to show you a book Walter Benjamin and Ruth Berlau willed to me, are you familiar with the tract of land known as the Miller home place? For sixty years you know who owns the place what sides does it join where is your land the land referred to in the 1940 deed is the land located on the north side of the line marked "MM" the Miller place on the north side and the east side of my field on the eastern side of a line marked six hundred sixty-five what is the western boundary of your land where it joins to a road it's been a road ever since I was big enough to walk pointed out to you by your grandmother or anybody else the land which you now own my grandma pointed out. How many years did they till it they tilled it up until how far west was the land tilled, up to this road, where is the road now, identify where we are, the road is on the eastern side of the ditch, the ditch on the land you tilled and your people tilled up until from the time that--that's right, did you work in the fields with them, I plowed the land, where to the east did you plow, I plowed up until this ditch was dug a document and ask you if that represents the road Grandpa gave Pop to go to and from the field I had to plow it and disc it and drag it to keep it up, did you fill the chuckholes, we kept the bridges up, bridges over what, over these ditches, during the time you have known about this is it the same road today is it here that was there years ago, yes, you farmed near this road on the western side during my time you or your people did ever till on the western side, it was done before I dug the ditch, before my grandma died, that physical construction of being in language, to make a work instrumental as possible, black adhesive letraset spelled out on a wall, ONE QUART EXTERIOR GREEN INDUSTRIAL ENAMEL THROWN ON A BRICK WALL, concrete specificity of a social life that is felt as much as thought, a homestead warmed by the wish for intimacy, unity and identity, in a structure called "blind" he writes to see his hands reach for the doorknob, a room in the center of a city filled with light and sound of a waterfall pavilion this block of stone, the block as a record of what was simply about putting in place a volume or mass. This white light that you saw from the side of it, were those on both sides or just on the one side if they are on the inside or not in words, in other words, you can observe them as though they are from either direction on both sides whether they have lights inside from your position in the train, József watching the train, leaning in the light in each compartment, this is how the days go by, you were saying you can see a white light coming through a peephole, by seeing that white light then, you have got to know when you looked out, did you look when the excessive cry was heard and when you looked out did you look, why did you look, why is that, well, there's a space of probably ten feet from this seat to that seat, that would be if I were to look out this way, would I see anything other than the buildings going by the window, so that you are seated closer as the train approaches and you are travelling on the south side of the tracks, couldn't you have seated yourself in any other position, yes, I could have, true, so that if you were to look out you would see better because you would be closer than you would be to it, no, I couldn't see it at all, you could observe it better than you could observe on the other side I couldn't observe the other one, the other side, did you observe what you just said, if I understand you is that--what did you see, could you tell me again, what did I see when I heard the excessive cry, it was a clear night and dry, you saw the white light, yes, do you recall that, yes, could the train have been travelling faster, couldn't have been, this particular train I don't believe it could have been because I am talking about capacity, as much as probably doubling it, okay, fine, were you thrown backwards or forwards or sideways, did you initiate this emergency, it is just a position, a subject position, you take it and throw the position the way you throw the lever the air flows in words the speed with which you throw the lever that has nothing to do with it, you don't know how it works, or how it is supposed to or anything, none to my knowledge you walked back did you walk by yourself or with anybody else, had you walked back or not, and as you walked back what is the first thing that you saw, the young man laying along the right-of-way and the young lady laying along the right-of-way, that was just about it at the time, had there been an accumulation of people or not, were they there when you got there, how much time do you think it took you to get back there, did you talk to anybody after you got there, what did you do, I observed the bodies, I took my jacket off and covered this girl up--or, I think I covered her up, I tried to afford her some comfort with my jacket, that is just about all, I didn't hear all of it. What did you hear. He was trying to give Bill some instructions as to how to weld or something and he just ended it with that, with what, with "That isn't the way to talk to that man, Bill," and he turned--who did you say that to? Why did you say that? Because, you know, I didn't feel you were supposed to address another man like that, you should have more composure than that, he turned and again said, "Just come on out of there." Did you answer when he said that. No. He just ignored you. Yes. And he said, "Come on out of there." Well, before he told him to come out of there, he used some vulgar words. What were the vulgar words. "Damn it." Bill has been known to use much stronger language. Just tell me what he used that day. I just want to know what was used on this particular day. "Damn it" was all that was heard that day. There was something else but I can't think of it. Oh, yes, it was right at my left ear he was, I'm not sure if I had made my weld or not but I was standing there and I had my hood up like this and they had a little argument then, you know, after he said that. Something about turning the heat up on the machine. Darrell Duncan, my foreman, up to this point, do I understand that you had no words with Darrell Duncan, yes, well, Mr. Duncan has always taken a special interest in me from the first day, I am not interested in that, I want to know what happened on this day, I can't recall everything that was said up to this point you said everything being said was a little hollering going on, now, to go back to this Darrell Duncan, did you see a little girl in that vicinity standing on the corner, I was waiting, just looking around like anybody else, and I noticed a little girl standing on the corner, standing on the sidewalk, and she walked across the green grass and as she walked I took my eyes off her this little girl on this corner just before she stepped into the street she went across the green grass where she was walking just before she stepped into the street a moment ago to a tree lawn where this little girl was walking to from the time you saw her and the time she came to a stop, this is the walk, this is the grass, what else could I do then? It was like all over. A big shot of bourbon such as scotch and soda. Did he have either his knife or his gun in his hand at that time when you went to the side door? What was in his hands at the time that he was going to the side door? He said, "Get your damn head away or I will blow it off." I went to the other door in the pantry and reached up and got my gun after he said, "I am going to blow your head off." But to look at just Jones, no, he didn't say that, but it may have at some time, he may have said something like that to me, place your machine in a position where you would be able to hear the conversation, in a place that would not obstruct anybody, where did you place your machine when I was in the corner of that particular room, ask who is absent from the dress, did you have any other clothing on other than that clothing, that dress and some high heel strapless shoes and silk stockings and coat and necklace and bracelet, my underwear, you mean a bra and panties, yes, and a slip, yes, was that a half slip or a full slip, half slip, when you left the dance hall you walked over to Bog's car and you got in his car to get to his house East 55th to Superior down Superior until about East 66th at that time you arrived at his home during the time from the Hall to his house did you have any conversation with him at the time, I am asking him where he is taking me, he was talking about he went over to that joint on, I think it is 105th and Cedar, I don't know the name of it, anyway he said that somebody, I don't know who it was, somebody was telling him in the joint, some man told him that Louise was running around, she used to go with him, it was tough enough that she wasn't going to go home with him, after you picked Billy up besides going directly to your house we got to my house, Louise in the middle and Billy Boyd was on the opposite side of me, he got out to let me out, Louise got out, and she got out on the street side walking around on the side, so when she got up in my yard he told her she wasn't going in my house, she was going home with him, just like that, "You are going with me," and he told me I didn't have nothing to do with it. She has scars, you know, where he done choked her, and she fell in the hall, when you come in my house you come into the hall, she fell, he got on her, my husband got up, my husband come to the top of the steps, he had on his shorts, he said "You all ain't going to fight, I don't have no fights myself," he said, after he run back and put on his bathrobe. Now, at this time then again Reed said to the guy, "I think we have to use our own common sense and our own live experiences here to decide what kind of group we are talking about, and whether this is just talking to passersby coming out of the show or whether he is talking to eight or nine. They were with him. There was Willie Dunn, Rudy Westerfield, Ugley Mayes, Nathan Gunnoe or Gunnahue, something like that, Rudy Young, then there was Fred Warner, Dwayne Denhart, Dwayne and Dennis Denhart--Tom's sons--Jim Jordan and I forget the other guy's name, I can't think of the other guy's name. He turns with his side and his back towards Reed and I believe with his thumb or his hand, "Is this the one?" Is that the one he said immediately, immediately was the word he used, Jones asked Reed did the boys come up, he said it was almost right away, almost right away and immediately, if that one boy said immediately and the other boy said almost right away, maybe it is a figure of speech, there was strong slang phrases used telling us he told you how a gun had touched him, can you imagine, touched him, touching the barrel of a gun to your forehead in a dark alley, young people again, a crowd of young people, and someone comes up to him and this someone says that this boy has got a gun, someone said that the man was with a gun and the gun is so heavy that the coat is hanging lop-sided, like that, this is a 17-year old boy with a gun that was there for a reason and this is exactly the reason it was there, the gun was taken from the pocket, and I was there at the time you are talking about and it didn't happen that way. He said he never saw Romeo Conner standing there or taking any part in the argument, and there is a lot of talk about how he put a gun to the head of Reed, that he was one of these people that did to Reed a friend of his or acquaintance or how close the friendship might be, and two other people that were in that alley. What I'm trying to say to you is that if I say something that is different from what you remember or how it was said or knew it was said, don't remember what I remember, rely on what you heard and what you saw. There was some contact between these people before. By saying now publicly and openly for the first time that you used the word pistol, did you have a pistol, a gun is a gun, if you did the shooting, if you shot the gun, and when you dropped that gun, you said you dropped in on Dave, you said Dave had that gun in his hand after the shooting, at the time I was being shot at, just everything automatically happened as it followed the gun, not once, but several times, you shot the gun if you say you guess you shot the gun, you only surmised that after he died. Did he ask you to do anything for him at that time, the last time you saw him, this was on the last visit you had with him, make him a milkshake or make him a little dinner, you put that into it, the last time you saw him, he seemed to have all of his thinking faculties, and one question in particular that was asked him, that he hesitated for about a minute, and you asked him whether he heard the question or not, is that the way he always carried on, very slow talker, you know that he was a slow talker, and during those times you knew him to be a slow talker, he was the same as far as I have always known him to be, the conversation had wired him up, that was consistent with the way he had conducted himself before, he would never say he was wired, did he ever say he was wired is why he didn't want to talk, you are here saying you don't remember any snow on the ground. It was light snow. You are sure there was snow on the ground, it was moist, it was blowing, it wasn't really sticking when you left was it snowing I think it was just cold when you would breathe, it would show a sort of misty look, whether or not the streets had any snow on them, whether the streets were icy or snowy or anything like that meaning any ice that night it was snowing by then it had started, it was a light snow, about what time that snow started I can't say, there wasn't a great amount when you left did it seem slippery or icy to you where you were walking you noticed there was accumulation of snow oh no, there was a light covering of snow, you could observe that, you could tell that night, you could see a little bit of the coloring, you were just sitting down and talking, talking and helping her prepare dinner, when you went outside to leave, did you leave together, was the porch light on, could you see the stairs, she touched your arm, I think there was a place for one, when you came out was it snowing more, did you exchange comments or have any conversation while you were standing on the porch after you left with everybody else that was at the table, did you stand on the porch, or did you just walk out the door and go down the stairs, or attempt to go down when you left, as you went to go down the stairs, were you holding the hand, were you holding her hand going down the stairs, did you go before or after him, you watched him go down the stairs and he was standing at the bottom after he left and started down the stairs without you, had he gotten all the way down the stairs yet, was he standing below waiting for you or were you walking down directly behind him, you intended to follow him down the stairs, didn't you, did you look at him like you normally look, what did you see when you looked to him, this was before he started down the stairs, I didn't just stop and look, that wasn't like that. Some representation of bodies near the border, volumetric penciled words, tongue, English, dialect, brogue or cipher, formed into a moundlike shape, bringing to mind Richard Serra's CASTING (1969), made by throwing molten lead into the angular section between floor and wall like if each individual drives the same truck where he was more than that particular part there was mostly from the black .

Joe Hill

↑ Index

69. dbkk

Friday, June 4, Re: Reading The New American Poetry

Thu 3 Jun 1999

Small Press Traffic presents the second event in our series

Re: Reading The New American Poetry

Friday, June 4, 7:30 p.m.
The New American Poetry In Context
Maria Damon
Michael Davidson

The New American Poetry appeared at a time when intellectuals and politicians were urging a consensus on American superiority in all fields-cultural, military, economic-against foreign influences abroad and domestic subversion within. Michael Davidson will examine to what extent Cold War cultural/political assumptions still shape our reading of The New American Poetry in our present era. "Membership" in poetry communities points to shared values and assumptions, mutual agreements over such issues as "what is a poet?" "what should a poet write" and "what is a poet's work?" By examining the ideas of poetic labor of two California poets, one included in the anthology (Wieners) and one left out (Kaufman), Maria Damon will help us better understand the ideas and values of that time, ideas and values which impact our own time as well.

New College Theater
777 Valencia Street, San Francisco
Free

Maria Damon is an Associate Professor of English at the University of Minnesota, where she is also affiliated with programs in American Studies, Women's Studies, Comparative Literature and Jewish Studies. She is the author of The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry (University of Minnesota Press, 1993). Her essays have appeared in such publications as American Literary History, Postmodern Culture, and Modern Fiction Studies. She is currently editing a special issue of Callaloo on the work of Bob Kaufman.

Michael Davidson is a professor of English at the University of California, San Diego. His critical work includes The San Francisco Renaissance: Poetics and Community at Mid-Century (Cambridge University Press, 1989) and Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word (University of California Press, 1997). He has been twice a recipient of California Council of the Humanities Public Policy Grants, in 1979 and 1981. With Albert Gelpi, he is the author of the entry on American Poetry in The New Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics.

Hope to see you there--
Dodie Bellamy
for Small Press Traffic

Small Press Traffic presents the second event in our series

Re: Reading The New American Poetry

Friday, June 4, 7:30 p.m.

The New American Poetry In Context

Maria Damon

Michael Davidson

The New American Poetry appeared at a time when intellectuals and politicians were urging a consensus on American superiority in all fields-cultural, military, economic-against foreign influences abroad and domestic subversion within. Michael Davidson will examine to what extent Cold War cultural/political assumptions still shape our reading of The New American Poetry in our present era. "Membership" in poetry communities points to shared values and assumptions, mutual agreements over such issues as "what is a poet?" "what should a poet write" and "what is a poet's work?" By examining the ideas of poetic labor of two California poets, one included in the anthology (Wieners) and one left out (Kaufman), Maria Damon will help us better understand the ideas and values of that time, ideas and values which impact our own time as well.

New College Theater

777 Valencia Street, San Francisco

Free

Maria Damon is an Associate Professor of English at the University of Minnesota, where she is also affiliated with programs in American Studies, Women's Studies, Comparative Literature and Jewish Studies. She is the author of <italic>The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry </italic>(University of Minnesota Press, 1993). Her essays have appeared in such publications as <italic>American Literary History, Postmodern Culture, </italic>and <italic>Modern Fiction Studies. </italic>She is currently editing a special issue of <italic>Callaloo </italic>on the work of Bob Kaufman.

Michael Davidson is a professor of English at the University of California, San Diego. His critical work includes <italic>The San Francisco Renaissance: Poetics and Community at Mid-Century </italic>(Cambridge University Press, 1989) and <italic>Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word </italic>(University of California Press, 1997). He has been twice a recipient of California Council of the Humanities Public Policy Grants, in 1979 and 1981. With Albert Gelpi, he is the author of the entry on American Poetry in <italic>The New Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics.

Hope to see you there--

Dodie Bellamy

for Small Press Traffic </italic>

↑ Index

70. George Bowering
Re: Motion
Thu 3 Jun 1999

>
 I found him worth a read.
>
>David

I have his 1997 book here now, and have been dipping. But my god, this is dull stuff! I can not see that it is, I mean in the first 25 pages, anything other than casual correspondence, with no music whatever. Maybe it is the point to make it completely devoid of music, but how is that a kind of oppositional poetry, when the mainstreamers in England have no music anyway? I mean this is a place where they take Larkin seriously as a poet, and then Motion gets into trouble for writing a nasty biog of Larkin. Good Lord!

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

71. Susan Wheeler
Italian renaissance p.
Thu 3 Jun 1999

Back from various parts and catching up, greetings. Is it too late to fourteenth the endorsement of Rachel Loden's book? -- just stellar.

I'm looking for examples (in translation) of the practice of posting review-poems in the plazas where major & new works of sculpture had just been installed in Renaissance Italy. Can anyone out there point me in the right direction?

BC and thanks in advance.

↑ Index

72. Daniel Kane
Lisa Jarnot on WriteNet
Thu 3 Jun 1999

This month, Lisa Jarnot talks about her poem "Emperor Wu," published in her book _Some Other Kind of Mission_.

A tape of Lisa (W.A.V file) is not up just yet -- probably in the next two or three days.

You can find the page at http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_ljarnot.html

--daniel

↑ Index

73. Jerry McGuire
Deep South Writers Conference
Thu 3 Jun 1999

Please note the following preliminary information about this year's Deep South Writers Conference and Writers Contest.

This year's Deep South Writers Conference will take place from September 23rd to September 26th, 1999, on the University of Southwestern Louisiana campus in Lafayette. We've secured most of our artist agreements, and are presently advertising our contest (see Rules, below). The artists who have agreed to come so far are poet and non-fiction prose-writer Mary Cappello, poet, novelist, and editor Virgil Suarez, poet and essayist Toi Derricotte, and novelist Robert Olen Butler. In response to the many requests we received from last year's participants, we will also be featuring another "Poetry Crawl"—an open reading for all conference participants that travels among various art galleries, coffee houses, and restaurants here in Lafayette. And we will have a special workshop in teaching creative writing by Sandy Lyne of the Inner Writer Program, and an evening of lecture, demonstration, and discussion by Louisiana songwriters Sam Broussard and David Egan on the relations between the "local" and their work. As always, many thanks for your interest, and best wishes.

Yours,

Jerry McGuire

DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE CONTEST RULES

DEADLINE: JULY 15, 1999

Entry fee for each submission is $10 ($15 for the novel and full length plays). •No manuscripts will be returned. •Submit two title pages, one with title, category of entry, author's name, address, telephone number, social security number and brief bio., the other with title and category of entry only. •Please note that conference registration fees will be waived/reimbursed for all prize winners attending the conference.

Contest Divisions

Short fiction (Includes Science Fiction; under fifty pages, double spaced)
$300 first prize
$200 second prize
$100 third prize

Young Adult Fiction (for Ages 12 and above)
$200 prize

Children's Fiction (for Ages up to 12)
$100 prize

Novel
$300 first prize
$100 second prize

Nonfiction -- the Ethel Harvey Award (under fifty pages, double spaced)
$200 prize

Poetry -- The John Z. Bennett Awards (Three poems maximum. Entry will be considered as a whole)
$300 first prize
$200 second prize
$100 third prize

Drama -- The Paul T. Nolan One-Act play Awards (Under fifty pages; no musicals, translations, or adaptations; production rights reserved for one production)
$200 first prize
$100 second prize

Drama -- The James H. Wilson Full-length play Awards (No musicals, translations, or adaptations)

$300 first prize
$100 second prize

French Literature -- The Council for the Development of French in Louisiana (No translations or adaptations; maximum of three submissions)

$100 first prize for prose
$100 first prize for poetry

Where to Send Materials . . .
Send all manuscripts, with check or money order payable to Deep South Writers Conference, to:

Contest Coordinator
Deep South Writers Conference
USL Box 44691 -- English Department
University of Southwestern Lousiana
Lafayette, LA 70504-4691

Enclose a Self-Addressed Stamped Postcard for acknowledgment of Receipt.

•For all categories: we cannot consider previously published materials, except for work published only in college literary magazines.
•Present faculty and students of the University of Southwestern Louisiana may not be considered for any of the awards offered by the Deep South Writers Conference.
•Although publication is not guaranteed, first publication rights to all prize-winning manuscripts (except novels and full-length plays) are reserved by the Deep South Writers Conference. Rights revert to the author after publication or, absent publication, on the first of August of the contest year following.

Decisions of the judges are final. Direct inquiries to [redacted]. For list of winners, submit a Self-Addressed stamped Envelope or check the Deep South Writers Conference portion of the University of Southwestern Louisiana website:

http://www.usl.edu/departments/English/index.html

Please note that failure to abide by the above mentioned guidelines invalidates an entry.

--

Jerry McGuire
Director of Creative Writing

English Department Box 44691
University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette LA 70504-4691
[redacted]

↑ Index

74. Brian Stefans
The Naif and the Bluebells
Thu 3 Jun 1999

I wanted to announce a "preview" version of a web-poem called "The Naif and the Bluebells" that I've been working on for the past several weeks. This is a short version of the whole thing, which will find it's final home on www.ubu.com, the concrete/sound poetry site that Kenny Goldsmith runs.

The short version -- about 30% or so of the long-version -- contains no Javascripts, fewer applets, and lighter images, and was made especially for those with 3.0 generation browsers or slow modems and processors. It can be found at:

http://www.bway.net/~arras

Please check it out, and certainly tell me if something doesn't work!

(This is also the Arras site, which I'm presently updating -- it's pretty ugly right now. Stay away from the sugar free!)

Cheers,
Brian

↑ Index

75. Jerry McGuire
Deep South Writers Conference and Contest
Thu 3 Jun 1999

Please note the following preliminary information about this year's Deep South Writers Conference and Writers Contest.

This year's Deep South Writers Conference will take place from September 23rd to September 26th, 1999, on the University of Southwestern Louisiana campus in Lafayette. We’ve secured most of our artist agreements, and are presently advertising our contest (see Rules, below). The artists who have agreed to come so far are poet and non-fiction prose-writer Mary Cappello, poet, novelist, and editor Virgil Suarez, poet and essayist Toi Derricotte, and novelist Robert Olen Butler. In response to the many requests we received from last year’s participants, we will also be featuring another "Poetry Crawl"—an open reading for all conference participants that travels among various art galleries, coffee houses, and restaurants here in Lafayette. And we will have a special workshop in teaching creative writing by Sandy Lyne of the Inner Writer Program, and an evening of performance, lecture, and discussion with Louisiana songwriters Sam Broussard and David Egan on the influence of the "local" on their work. As always, many thanks for your interest, and best wishes.

Yours,

Jerry McGuire

DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE CONTEST RULES

DEADLINE: JULY 15, 1999

Entry fee for each submission is $10 ($15 for the novel and full length plays). •No manuscripts will be returned. •Submit two title pages, one with title, category of entry, author's name, address, telephone number, social security number and brief bio., the other with title and category of entry only. •Please note that conference registration fees will be waived/reimbursed for all prize winners attending the conference.

Contest Divisions

Short fiction (Includes Science Fiction; under fifty pages, double spaced)
$300 first prize
$200 second prize
$100 third prize

Young Adult Fiction (for Ages 12 and above)
$200 prize

Children's Fiction (for Ages up to 12)
$100 prize

Novel
$300 first prize
$100 second prize

Nonfiction -- the Ethel Harvey Award (under fifty pages, double spaced) $200 prize Poetry -- The John Z. Bennett Awards (Three poems maximum. Entry will be considered as a whole)

$300 first prize

$200 second prize
$100 third prize

Drama -- The Paul T. Nolan One-Act play Awards (Under fifty pages; no musicals, translations, or adaptations; production rights reserved for one production) $200 first prize $100 second prize

Drama -- The James H. Wilson Full-length play Awards (No musicals, translations, or adaptations)
$300 first prize
$100 second prize

French Literature -- The Council for the Development of French in Louisiana (No translations or adaptations; maximum of three submissions)
$100 first prize for prose
$100 first prize for poetry

Where to Send Materials . . .
Send all manuscripts, with check or money order payable to Deep South Writers Conference, to:

Contest Coordinator
Deep South Writers Conference
USL Box 44691 -- English Department
University of Southwestern Lousiana
Lafayette, LA 70504-4691

Enclose a Self-Addressed Stamped Postcard for acknowledgment of Receipt.

•For all categories: we cannot consider previously published materials, except for work published only in college literary magazines. •Present faculty and students of the University of Southwestern Louisiana may not be considered for any of the awards offered by the Deep South Writers Conference. •Although publication is not guaranteed, first publication rights to all prize-winning manuscripts (except novels and full-length plays) are reserved by the Deep South Writers Conference. Rights revert to the author after publication or, absent publication, on the first of August of the contest year following.

Decisions of the judges are final. Direct inquiries to [redacted]. For list of winners, submit a Self-Addressed stamped Envelope or check the Deep South Writers Conference portion of the University of Southwestern Louisiana website:

http://www.usl.edu/departments/English/index.html

Please note that failure to abide by the above mentioned guidelines invalidates an entry.

--

Jerry McGuire, Director
Deep South Writers Conference
English Department Box 44691
University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette LA 70504-4691
[redacted]

↑ Index

76. Lowther,John
An Ask for Reports
Thu 3 Jun 1999

---

after reading about wendy kramer's lunch poem about dave baptiste chirot rubbing the streets of milwaukee and enamored once again with my POCKETY PUFF i wonder if something easteregg hunt might be in the offing in this here forum and so i'm asking for reports - descriptions - details - text - context - imaginations of another world where some found thing wd be necessary to some obscure desire

↑ Index

77. Pierre Joris
Re: Motion
Thu 3 Jun 1999

---

right on, George,

larkin, motion, meme combat! dull, pointless,idiotic -- which doesn't worry me, let them write whatever pleases them -- but, as always, it's them and the power they wield(ed) that kept/keeps the live brit poetry from being published, heard, etc..

pierre

George Bowering wrote:

> I found him worth a read.

> David
>
> I have his 1997 book here now, and have been dipping. But my god, this is dull stuff! I can not see that it is, I mean in the first 25 pages, anything other than casual correspondence, with no music whatever. Maybe it is the point to make it completely devoid of music, but how is that a kind of oppositional poetry, when the mainstreamers in England have no music anyway? I mean this is a place where they take Larkin seriously as a poet, and then Motion gets into trouble for writing a nasty biog of Larkin. Good Lord!
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> fax: [redacted]

--
==========
Pierre Joris
[redacted]
http://www.albany.edu/~joris/
6 Madison Place
Albany NY 12202
tel: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
==========
Nomadism answers to a relation that possession cannot satisfy.

Maurice Blanchot
==========

↑ Index

78. Lowther,John two things
Thu 3 Jun 1999

1st

there's a billboard down peachtree from here by the waffle house that for a year or so has alwasy been a marlboro cig board and i guess they stopped paying for that locale or something but the sign co. came out and defaced it tearing corners and wide swaths across the middle and such, even leaving some bits hanging etc etc

but having i guess absorbed the marlboro iconography and seen most of the billboards what came out of this defacing was much more . . . interesting (to me) . . . schwittersesque . . . marlboro ad . . .

the surgeon general's warning was legible at least twice

2nd

standing under a tree in the rain and i noticed that the undersides of every leaf that i cd see were speckled and i looked closer and they were spotted with .. ? .. eggs or fungus or something there was a symmetry that was on the verge of not being there but still was and i noted this but still felt this sort body to body empathy with the tree

felt invaded got the creeps

↑ Index

79. Aviva Vogel
Non-Meaningful Levels of Language - A Query
Thu 3 Jun 1999

I'm giving a graduating lecture (description follows) at mainstream Vermont College MFA in Writing program, and would love comments/suggestions on potential sources & references that would help address the lecture questions properly for a relatively conservative audience of readers/writers. Thanks!!!

GNOSIS, NONSENSE, NADA

"The future of poetry lies in the exploitation of non-meaningful levels of language. These levels establish poetry as a form of discourse that must be read as entirely separate from normal, communicative language, read with its materiality, its artifice in mind...". (Veronica Forrest-Thomson, Poetic Artifice). What a claim! Why write apparent 'nonsense?' What possible project might we have for a poetry of relative 'obfuscation'? How can language that simultaneously conceals and reveals help us 'know'? If words don't refer to clear particulars and concepts, how can such "non-meaningful levels of language" facilitate gnosis? If a poem's language is syntactically and semantically fluid, diffusing boundaries between subject/object, self/other, hwere else might a reader be taken (besides into confusion, even boredom)? What are the chances for finding value in visual, kinesthetic, musical, or mathematical meaning, rather than depending on a more familiar thematic meaning? Do we want to accept an 'experimental' or 'avant garde' poetry's claim to provide us with a much-needed psychic invasion to strip us of our 'thought-coverings'? Would we then descend into a meaningless abyss, nothingness, into our little 'nada' selves? As Brenda Hillman suggests in her epigraph to Blue Codices (from Loose Sugar), it is enticing to entertain the notion that we might "Explain the unknown/ by the more unknonw," a saying she attributes to "an alchemical theorem." By taking a look at Hillman's poetry, and probably other work by Mary Reufle, Lyn Hejinian, John Taggart, Rosemary Waldrop, and/or Donald Revell (list is bound to change), this lecture will tousle around (on mats of course) in the hoary backyard of this 'pissed-on' and 'pissed-upon' territory. It's important to dwell on handouts in office before coming to wrestle. _____ I have, at this late date, a far more intuitive than concrete handle on the answers to some of these questions, and have been investigating everything from gnostic scriptures like Nag Hammadi and Elaine Pagels' books -- to Perloff, introductions to 'experimental' anthologies, and other ready-at-hand critical writing. Unfortunately, I've just been faced with a sudden need to move my entire household, and would like to get to the bottom of this subject in some kind of usable, presentable fashion as quickly as possible (although I'm sure the topic requires at least a lifetime of writing and reading and studying). If anyone has ideas about how to approach this lecture, what to read, who to quote, or how to articulate the direction that you sense the questions are leading me in, please let me know. I'd be immensely grateful. Thanks, Aviva Vogel, Poetangles & Motherdrum, Norwich, VT 05055

↑ Index

80. komninos zervos

Re: Friday, June 4, Re: Reading The New American Poetry

Thu 3 Jun 1999

---

hope the transcript will be available online, komninos

At 10:49 PM 6/2/99 -0700, you wrote:
>Small Press Traffic presents the second event in our series
>
>Re: Reading The New American Poetry
>
>Friday, June 4, 7:30 p.m.
>The New American Poetry In Context
>Maria Damon
>Michael Davidson
>
>The New American Poetry appeared at a time when intellectuals and >politicians were urging a consensus on American superiority in all >fields-cultural, military, economic-against foreign influences abroad and >domestic subversion within. Michael Davidson will examine to what extent >Cold War cultural/political assumptions still shape our reading of The New >American Poetry in our present era. "Membership" in poetry communities >points to shared values and assumptions, mutual agreements over such issues >as "what is a poet?" "what should a poet write" and "what is a poet's >work?" By examining the ideas of poetic labor of two California poets, one >included in the anthology (Wieners) and one left out (Kaufman), Maria Damon >will help us better understand the ideas and values of that time, ideas and >values which impact our own time as well.

>
>New College Theater
>777 Valencia Street, San Francisco
>Free
>
>----------
>
>Maria Damon is an Associate Professor of English at the University of >Minnesota, where she is also affiliated with programs in American Studies, >Women's Studies, Comparative Literature and Jewish Studies. She is the >author of The Dark End of the Street: Margins in American Vanguard Poetry >(University of Minnesota Press, 1993). Her essays have appeared in such >publications as American Literary History, Postmodern Culture, and Modern >Fiction Studies. She is currently editing a special issue of Callaloo on >the work of Bob Kaufman.
>
>Michael Davidson is a professor of English at the University of California, >San Diego. His critical work includes The San Francisco Renaissance: >Poetics and Community at Mid-Century (Cambridge University Press, 1989)
and >Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word (University of >California Press, 1997). He has been twice a recipient of California >Council of the Humanities Public Policy Grants, in 1979 and 1981. With >Albert Gelpi, he is the author of the entry on American Poetry in The New >Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics.
>
>Hope to see you there-- >Dodie Bellamy
>for Small Press Traffic
^^^

gold coast campus
queensland

komninos's cyberpoetry site:
http://student.uq.edu.au/~s271502
state library of victoria cyberpoetry site:
http://experimedia.vic.gov.au/cyberpoet
~~~
~~~

The most concise way to present my particular bent is with an excerpt from TNPEoPaP definition of Rhyme--IV. Analogues: "Milton also weights words at line end (Broadbent calls this "anti-r".), counterposing semantically heavy and contrastive terms at PL 4.561-62, for example: 'Tempt not the Lord thy God, he said and stood. / But Satan smitten with amazement fell""

Is this thing that Broadbent calls anti-rhyme called something else by everyone else, or has no one else written about it else? See, it's driving me to echolalia.

I would appreciate reading any thoughts any of you might have (or examples that leap to mind), backchannel or not. I live in a part of the world where poetry died in 1963 when they took down the last Burma-Shave sign, so the pickins here are pretty slim. (Asked the local librarian if they had a copy of Modern Chess Openings, and she brought me over to the Medical section).

Thanks,

Dan Waber

↑ Index

83. Mark Melnicove

Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration

Fri 4 Jun 1999

Dear Maria, Thanks for your reply. I'm glad to hear that you, too, think this was a signal event; not everyone on the list agrees, those responses having more to do with negative perceptions of Frost as a man and poet than anything else. My essay is part of a larger book about American poetry in the sixties that I'm writing. The Frost reading came early in the decade; by decades end, things had changed a lot (and that's an understatement!) in both American society and American poetry; so in terms of contrast and compare, the inaugural reading is ripe in regarding. In the poem Frost wrote for the occasion, he prophesized a "golden age of poetry and power," like the Augustan age in Rome. It's such an interesting, though flawed, comparison; much of my essay revolves around what all that might have meant then, what it means now. There is also the Frost/Kennedy relationship; what began as a courting/courtship (and Frost saw himself as the court poet), ended up with Kennedy not speaking ever again to Frost after the later's return from a trip to Russia in September, 1962, where he met with Khrushchev. Of course, October, 1962 brought the Cuban Missile Crisis, etc. Anway, I'll be glad to share the essay with you when it's done. Right now it's 27 pages, and still growing! I wasn't aware of any of the sources you mentioned. How can I get a copy of Zofia Burr's unpublished ms? Thanks for your help, Mark Melnicove

> At 9:59 AM 5/28/99, Mark Melnicove wrote:
> I'm writing an essay on Robert Frost's reading/recital at JFK's inauguration and I'm looking for contemporary (i.e. 1961) responses to this event by other poets. I've started to comb letters and diaries as collected in books (Sandburg, Ginsberg, Jarrell, etc.), but haven't turned up much yet. Anyone with any sources, leads, etc. please b.c. And, if you were there (in person, or via TV) and wrote something at the time, or have some recollections 38 years down the road you'd care to share, I'd love that, too.
> Mark Melnicove
>
> i remember my mother, who was a danish citizen, being so moved that she went out and bought Frost's Collected Works, which we still have in a prominent place in my family's home. also, Steven Caton, in Peaks of Yemen I Summon: Poetry as Social Practice in a Northern Yemeni Tribe, and Zofia Burr, in an as yet unpublished ms, discuss this event. so does, i believe??, robert von hallberg in American Poetry and Culture 1945-1980. Caton and von Hallberg discuss it in their introductions. burr devotes a chapter to comparing the kennedy/frost event to the clinton/angelou event. it's fascinating. i'd love to know more about what you're doing with this signal moment.

↑ Index

84. Ron Silliman

Uh, er, ah

Fri 4 Jun 1999

> CFP: Disfluency in spontaneous speech
>
> ICPhS Satellite Meeting: DISFLUENCY IN SPONTANEOUS SPEECH
> 30 July 1999
> UC Berkeley
>
> Call for Participation
>
> The increasing interest in spontaneous speech in the academic and technological communities has led to several new research initiatives which focus on disfluency in normal spontaneous speech. In this workshop we will attempt to bring together researchers working on the topic from various angles.
>
> The main purposes of the meeting will be to allow an overview of recent and current research, to examine problems and issues in this research and to discuss future areas of interest. Abstracts are invited from a wide area, including description, speech production and psycholinguistic and computational approaches to the understanding of disfluent speech.

> The meeting will allow as much discussion as possible, structured around a selection of themes, and supported by a limited number of oral presentations. Poster presentations are also encouraged .
>
> Organisers: Robin Lickley, Ellen Gurman Bard (University of Edinburgh), Jean Fox Tree (UCSC), Peter Heeman (OGI), Liz Shriberg (SRI).
>
> For registration and more information: http://www.ling.ed.ac.uk/~robin/ICPhS-CfP.html
> [redacted]

↑ Index

85. Douglas Oliver

Re: Larkin

Fri 4 Jun 1999

It's a blindness to call Philip Larkin absolutely no good as a poet. This sort of blindness will simply reaffirm itself when challenged because, essentially, it's a dismissal in terms of style or, perhaps, genre. If you want to say that he was hostile to avant-gardist poetic practice, that's so obvious it's hardly worth saying. An authentic poetic darkness lay beneath Larkin's orderly, rhyming verses, a wiggly thing. And he had that unmistakable gift of making memorable lines. It's highly unlikely a non-poet would have been so influential. The turncoat but unfortunately interesting Motion biography at least indicated sources of this darkness. I spent a couple of hours with Larkin once and when (discussing "Ambulances") I suggested that we might not, after all, be alone when we die we got very stiff with each other, because I was tapping into his evident panic on this question -- that's the darkness again. He had to be sedated when he underwent his own process of dying because he was panicking so much. (But for all I know I may have to be too one day . . .)

Though adept at poetry politics, Motion is deadly dull, yes: he's got the despicable job of laureat now (despicable because tied into the British royalty/class system) but his poetry has not been very influential.

I am in no sense a supporter of Larkin and never have been. Our problem with him in Britain in the sixties and seventies was very different from wondering whether he was a poet or not. He was reactionary artistically, politically, and emotionally. Ever since, the clammy influence of his style and his consciousness have put a blight on mainstream poetic practice. But, then, that's just the mainstream. It has its audience. So has the experimental wing, thank god, and if they can nibble at that mainstream audience so much the better.

Doug

↑ Index

86. Stephen Ellis
Re: the flux of context
Fri 4 Jun 1999

Reading the Davis/Durgin correspondence, many tangential and rather less abstract questions come to "mind" (if that's not being perhaps nominally overly optimistic ...), like Efficacy in terms of what?
What are the propositions?
What do they propose in terms of politics?
What's to be effected?
How does the effected effect effect anything political, in what "sphere"?
Who is the "efficacy" for?
To whom are "proposals" to be addressed?
Is it all just in one big self-reflective house of mirrors &/or cards that the whole argument "takes place"? (Ah ... the lovely and familiar "it" motif again ...) As in fact, what IS

"the argument"? A parsing of consciousness itself, so as to make its otherwise smothering protoplasmic theosophic "body" look to be more the familiar bite-sized sequence of pieces we all might more easily accustom ourselves to? Or, in terms of sheer etiquette at the level of more alarmingly "rapid" shifts of consciousness, may I ask, what do you do when you can't remember the word for "rug"?

SE

> From: "Patrick F. Durgin" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: the flux of context
> Date: Wed, 2 Jun 1999 22:47:40 -0500
>
> At 04:56 PM 6/1/99 -0400, Jordan Davis wrote:
>
> But what is so impossible to think term
> about "poetry"?
> .. . . . . it's just games, sets, relations.
>
> Okay, but without proposals, I think I meant, and proposals are

> our > business, our wares, such relations are unlike poetry-bytes.
> Cross-propositions might be a preferable term for "games, sets, relations."
> Poetry signifies too many or too little, depending on the company one > keeps.
>
> In re: "efficacy" I think we are standing across
> the crater from oeach ether. I am acting as inaudible
> interpreter of rumblings across generational strata.
> We are hearing "why no politics." I would rather not > say "but yes politics!" I would rather say "what means > why no politics." I have a quiet feeling that this is > another chance for generational call and response
> invite to Freuddance. We'll see!
>
> Another proposal may be to carefully elaborate the divide by means
> of > registering efficacy in light of, you nailed it, the suck of context. You > one nifty public correspondant. Don't be so quiet about it.
> Patrick

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

87. Rachel Loden

OED "snogging"; The Last Campaign

Fri 4 Jun 1999

Thanks to Susan Wheeler for that endorsement of THE LAST CAMPAIGN--in a world in which poets, above all, hate poetry, one can't have too many of those. Since I never posted any blurbage here, perhaps I'll be forgiven for passing on (with permission of course) another, somewhat astonishing, tidbit:

"The poems combine a solid sense of form with a solid sense of politics and irony. Since I'm in favor of all three, I'm impressed. The image of Lenin's body (which I've not seen, since my lone visit to Moscow was all of 30 minutes on a tarmac while Motley Crue boarded the plane) is deeply comic and will probably show up in a dream soon.

So the best characterization of my response is 'irrational exuberance,' though perhaps in the way that Spicer, not Greenspan, would have understood." -- Ron Silliman

The chapbook has almost no distribution so please backchannel if you'd like a copy ($8).

And now for something completely different:

snogging, vbl. n. slang.
[Origin unknown: cf. snug v.]
Engagement in light, amorous play, esp. kissing and cuddling.
1945 C. H. Ward-Jackson It’s a Piece of Cake (ed. 2) 56 Snogging, courting, running around with the opposite sex. Comes from India. Thus, ‘On my leave I’m going up to the hills for a bit of snogging.’ Also used as a verb.
1951 Sunday Pictorial 28 Oct. 10/6 Few hounds can get in more than half an hour of ‘snogging’–their elegant term for not-too-serious courtship.
1960 N. Epton Love & English vi. 341 It is all right..to cuddle. (The current term among teen-agers is ‘snogging’.)
1966 P. Willmott Adolescent Boys iii. 40, I went upstairs with Jill and we did a bit of snogging on the bed.
1975 Weekend 4 Feb. 19/1 If a cinema manager tolerates snogging among his audience he is liable to lose his licence.
Also
snog v.2 intr., to engage in snogging;
snog n., an instance of this;
'snogger, 'snogging ppl. a.
1945 [see snogging vbl. n.].
1958 ‘J. Brogan’ Cummings Report xv. 156 He is a..girl-snogging..bounder.
1959 W. Camp Ruling Passion xii. 82 Let’s pretend we’re teenagers and stop for a nice snog.
1962 A. Sampson Anat. Britain xxxvi. 574 The cinema has lost its hold–except among unmarried teenagers, two-thirds of whom go at least once a week, perhaps to snog in the doubles.
1965 J. Gaskell Fabulous Heroine 94 A most experienced snogger.
1973 M. Amis Rachel Papers 21 They were enjoying a kiss–well, more of a snog really.
1981 R. Barnard Mother’s Boys ii. 20 They had..taken the side way through the little cutting known popularly as ‘Snoggers Alley’.

Rachel

Susan Wheeler wrote:
>
> Back from various parts and catching up, greetings. Is it too late to > fourteenth the endorsement of Rachel Loden's book? -- just stellar.

↑ Index

88. Judy Roitman

Re: symbolic snogging

Fri 4 Jun 1999

Maybe we should take this back-channel, but there seem to be more than a few symbolic logic fans here...

> In a sense, symbolic logic is not 'just another branch' of maths: it's an essential foundation of most branches of mathematics. Any formal proof requires a process that, if not actually written as formal logic, should be able to be reduced to it.

That's how it was billed (or, as we say these days, marketed) back when I was in school, but things have changed and there's a lot of fairly serious criticism of these notions.

Whatever your view of foundations, symbolic logic can be viewed as a branch of mathematics. That seems to be the distinction between symbolic logic and other sorts of logical inquiry.

> I don't think that symbolic logic was intended to replace the non-symbolic kind, but was an attempt to systematize the kind of conscious reasoning that goes back to Aristotle. It does swallow up whole fields; at least in the sense that it narrows those fields.

Yes yes yes. The narrowing is an interesting (and I think invasive) phenomenon.

...
>As an interesting aside, there's a lot of criticism of the binary true/false >nature of Western logic. It's ironic, then, that Leibniz's development of >binary arithmetic was partly based upon his reading of the I Ching!
>
>
>Tom Beard

Cool. Thanks.

---------- Judy Roitman
| "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers! Math, University of Kansas |
memory fails Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
[redacted] | fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner,
1927-1996 ---------- Note new area
code ----------
http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/

↑ Index

89. Mark Melnicove
Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration
Fri 4 Jun 1999

My apologies to everyone on the list, I meant to b.c. my message about Robert Frost to Maria, guess it got by Chris.
Mark

↑ Index

90. Poetry Project
Monday reading
Fri 4 Jun 1999

This Monday, June 7th

at 8 pm

is a reading by

Gordon Ball & Ruth Altmann

Gordon Ball will be reading from "66 Frames" (Coffee House, 1999), his newly published memoir of New York's avant-garde film and literary circles 33 years ago. Ruth Altmann's work has appeared in And Then, Telephone, and Tamarind.

then

Wednesday, June 16th

at 8 pm

is a reading by

Spring workshop students and interns of the Poetry Project.

More on this soon.

↑ Index

91. David Baptiste Chirot
Re: found poetry
Fri 4 Jun 1999

---

two found poems--one old, one new

going through a stack of old magazines for collage work and came across a copy of emma goldman's journal MOTHER EARTH through many years of moving, the cover was torn and revealed: OTHER EAR

walking through a "rough neighborhood" looking for street materials, a sign: ANGER ZONE

a favorite graffiti, written in six foot letters on a wall in the Winter Hill area of Somerville, MA: CRIME IS

--dbc

↑ Index

92. Cassandra Laity
Book Announcement
Fri 4 Jun 1999

Date: 04-Jun-1999 02:49pm EDT
From: Laity, Cassandra
CLAITY
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: 3141

TO: Remote Addressee ([redacted])

Subject: Book Announcement

Date: 04-Jun-1999 02:26pm EDT
From: Laity, Cassandra
CLAITY
Dept: FAC/STAFF
Tel No: 3141

TO: Remote Addressee ([redacted])

Subject: new poetry

I would like to announce the appearance of Nathalie F. Anderson's new book of poems, _Following Fred Astaire_. Marcus Cafanga writes of this book, "Anderson's keep eye illuminates our socially constructed ideas of gender and identity, the various mannerisms and dance steps we consider appropriate for women and men."
68 pages $10.00 (paper)
TO ORDER BY MAIL
send check for $10 + $2 postage and handling
to
The Word Works
PO Box 42164
Washington, DC 20015

_____
excerpt from a group of "phobia" poems:

"Pogonophobia"
Fear of Beards

Shell delicate, the green chin's cracked: broken waxwing, broken wryneck. The down ups, bristling, kinking into curls. A fly-specked plaster, a cambric snicked with stitches: this grizzling frets against the grain. Scrit, scrit: the lie bare-faced, the whiskered fibbery--lily-white boys, cheek by jowl among the stubble. Peach-fuzz to blue-beard, she's caught in their swart penumbra.

Like the gossamer thread sprung from her arm
a full three inches when she was eight, it opened her eyes. Out of the glass each barb of it speaks: Trust me. I hide what you are.

↑ Index

93. Catherine Daly
Call for Submissions
Fri 4 Jun 1999

As one of the many new associate editors at Perihelion, http://webdelsol.com/Perihelion/, I would like to call for theory and poetry submissions. Send them directly to me at [redacted], or send them to the editor-in-chief Rebecca Seiferle via the mailto link on the website itself. We're trying to publish more engaging, interesting, and challenging work than that in previous issues.

Something about the nature of the e-mail would be good in the subject line, and for poetry I prefer at least three poems pasted in the body of the e-mail message, but I understand if you have to attach items which are not all unformatted text.

I am particularly eager to read work with kitties or rainbows, especially if you have also formatted your work with purple centered italic.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]
533 South Alandele Avenue
Los Angeles, CA 90036

↑ Index

94. kathylou
Seeing addresses
Fri 4 Jun 1999

Hello All,
I am seeking email or regular mail addresses for:
Bobbie Louise Hawkins
Erica Hunt
Will Alexander

You can backchannel to me at:
[redacted]

Thanks you for your assistance,
Kathy Lou Schultz

↑ Index

95. Jordan Davis fewer mind
Fri 4 Jun 1999

> Efficacy in terms of what?

Solve for x.

> What are the propositions?

Poems, or, texts. That which is presented as a poem, or as poetry.

> What do they propose in terms of politics?

Investigation, argument, engagement, sabotage, bells, whistles.

> What's to be effected?

Hey that not standard. You mean what will it do? It will do the we are watching. Sort of a strawberry statement.

> How does the effected effect effect anything political, in what "sphere"?

Hey that not standard. Colonial vocab, ha? How does anything have an effect, reiteration. Effect is usually accidental, a mistake, soemthing happens. You think a while, you rest, you have the thought, or you don't.

> Who is the "efficacy" for?

Whomever wants to find out the deal.

> To whom are "proposals" to be addressed?

Whomever is dealing. Plus the home audience.

>Is it all just in one big self-reflective house of mirrors &/or cards that >the whole argument "takes place"? (Ah ... the lovely and familiar "it" motif >again ...)

Only if you don't look at IT.

> As in fact, what IS
>
> "the argument"? A parsing of consciousness itself, so as to make its otherwise smothering protoplasmic theosophic "body" look to be more the familiar bite-sized sequence of pieces we all might more easily accustom ourselves to? Or, in terms of sheer etiquette

Please no bite-sized sequence of pieces of my "body". Otherwise sounds good sounds like Whalen. Instead of follow the money or follow the paper follow the mind. But also follow the paper follow the money.

> at the level of more alarmingly "rapid" shifts of consciousness, may I ask, what do you do when you can't remember the word for "rug"?

So far I enjoy that, today I couldn't remember "promiscuous." Ron Padgett's essay on mixing up "grapefruit" with "pineapple". Or when you call the rectangle on the floor a "toupee." I guess read some Oliver Sacks?

Hope you're well,
Jordan

↑ Index

96. Alan Sondheim
Bodei
Fri 4 Jun 1999

=-=-

Bodei

There appears to be some writing on the note ...

you do wound me cut shivered into shoulder
Bodee you do open shoulder entrance into breast
Bodee you do burrow into nipple tissue
Bodee Bodei where are you
I am so happy here within tissue erect on Bodei-Man Bodei-Man where are you do use long-thread close cloth oh dearest Bodee-Bodei do close so very now warm from april dryness you do borrow burrow-skin what a pretty person Bodei-Bodee-Man where are you Bodei-Woman

you will be that woman and you will be that man you do wind me in your cloth oh Bodei-Woman cotton Bodee! Bodee!
@create $thing called Bodee-Bodei
@create $thing called Bodei-Bodee
I do love your wounding Bodei-Bodee
I do so love your burrow Bodei-Woman-Man and and and ah ah ah and and and ah ah ah

(You finish reading.)

↑ Index

97. Patrick F. Durgin
Re: the flip of context
Fri 4 Jun 1999

Not intending to be glib, let me propose that proposing such questions is just the sort of thing I was refering to: necessarily abstract, you see. Although the hall of mirrors is apt, Jordan used the standing across the crater analogy, or rather proposed it. I picked it up, in ensemble. Therefore, I think your question "Who is the 'efficacy' for?" is a fascinating and difficult one. For instance, if this whole little speculative tiff came out of Notley's comments in the Combo 3 interview, as I recall (?), an interesting thing to do would be to consider the poetician's sense of anticipated audience, while she or he proceeds to fashion her or his argument so as to issue most freely and provocatively through this audience. Of course, the audience is never uncritical, and this is where cross-propositions come into play and generate "context" -- there is no REASON such a context should thereby cordon itself. Despite a lot of younger, experimental writers' notions that it inevitably does. This is my sense, anyhow. Patrick

At 04:45 AM 6/4/99 PDT, Stephen Ellis wrote:
>Reading the Davis/Durgin correspondence, many tangential and rather less >abstract questions come to "mind" (if that's not being perhaps nominally >overly optimistic ...), like >Efficacy in terms of what?
>What are the propositions?
>What do they propose in terms of politics?
>What's to be effected?
>How does the effected effect effect anything political, in what "sphere"?
>Who is the "efficacy" for?
>To whom are "proposals" to be addressed?
>Is it all just in one big self-reflective house of mirrors &/or cards that >the whole argument "takes place"? (Ah ... the lovely and familiar "it" motif >again ...) As in fact, what IS

>
>"the argument"? A parsing of consciousness itself, so as to make its >otherwise smothering protoplasmic theosophic "body" look to be more the >familiar bite-sized sequence of pieces we all might more easily accustom >ourselves to? Or, in terms of sheer etiquette
>
>at the level of more alarmingly "rapid" shifts of consciousness, may I ask, >what do you do when you can't remember the word for "rug"?
>
>SE
>
>
>>From: "Patrick F. Durgin" <[redacted]>
>>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>>To: [redacted]
>>Subject: Re: the flux of context
>>Date: Wed, 2 Jun 1999 22:47:40 -0500
>>
>>At 04:56 PM 6/1/99 -0400, Jordan Davis wrote:
>>
>>But what is so impossible to think term
>> >about "poetry"?
>>.. . . . . it's just games, sets, relations.
>>
>>   Okay, but without proposals, I think I meant, and proposals are >>our >>business, our wares, such relations are unlike poetry-bytes.
>>Cross-propositions might be a preferable term for "games, sets, relations."
>> Poetry signifies too many or too little, depending on the company one >>keeps.
>>
>> >
>> >In re: "efficacy" I think we are standing across >> >the crater from oeach ether. I am acting as inaudible >> >interpreter of rumblings across generational strata.
>> >We are hearing "why no politics." I would rather not >> >say "but yes politics!" I would rather say "what means >> >why no politics." I have a quiet feeling that this is >> >another chance for generational call and response >> >invite to Freuddance. We'll see!

>>
>> Another proposal may be to carefully elaborate the divide by means
>>of >>registering efficacy in light of, you nailed it, the suck of context. You >>one nifty public correspondant. Don't be so quiet about it.
>> Patrick
>
>
>_____
>Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
>

↑ Index

98. Gerald Schwartz
Re: Frost at Kennedy's inauguration
Fri 4 Jun 1999

I knew a man...John Pallio..who was on the stand about 10 feet away from Frost...

It was an extremely cold day...there were electric heaters set up to warm the feet of the assembled...and somehow one of them caught fire in the middle of Frost's poem...many were anxious...Frost was oblivious...

Best,

Gerald

↑ Index

99. Patrick F. Durgin
Support your little magazines!
Sat 5 Jun 1999

Well, I'm (in a sense) happy to report that I've sold out of sample copies of the recent Kenning #4. This means that it's time to subscribe if you still have an interest in obtaining a copy. Subscribers at $9.50 receive a hand-printed portfolio suitable to hold several with their first of two loose-leaf issues. This format is exclusive to subscribers, who, incidentally, pay for the production and distribution (such as it is) of the magazine. Subscribe now and be assured to receive the soon to be published summer issue, #5, featuring: Lyn Hejinian, John M. Bennett, Peter O'Leary, Clark Coolidge, Kristin Prevallet, Brian Kim Stefans, Rachel Blau DuPlessis, and many others. Send payment to Patrick F.

Durgin, editor: Kenning, 418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, Iowa 52245. Or, visit the website at: http://www.avalon.net/~kenning

↑ Index

100. Alan Sondheim

Stared Stiff

Sat 5 Jun 1999

<>

Stared Stiff

I'm staring at:

Dynamic HTML, The Definitive Reference
Web Design in a Nutshell
Linux in a Nutshell
Year 2000 in a Nutshell
Internet in a Nutshell
Learning Perl on Win32 Systems and I'm thinking: The _thickness_ of these texts presenting _potentials_ or matrices resulting long term in the construction of _worlds._ Dynamic HTML (Danny Goodman) set me off in this direction - page after page of reference (and of course still nothing compared, say, to the X Window manuals) - particulations, attributes of objects, protocols given in full. What I'm referencing is the _texture_ of the manual and its role as open source - atomics - moleculars - for emergences - but also the defuge asso- ciated with these manuals - the paste-like exhaustion - concatenating strings - and think of the attributions - the _properties_ - of all the objects in the world. Like "bgcolor" these are emptied, waiting. Quote "now that the _animate_ object is defined" - further - <BODY><DIV ID="ani- mate"> This Enormous Life-Form Which Will Dominate Your Small and Vulner- able BODY </DIV></BODY> - HTML is all HEAD and BODY - ANIMATEDHTML - "Our Animate Boy" - 1933 - "Our Animate Girl" - 1944 (more complex and in War- time) - What is the Life-Form - What is Emerging from this Thickness - Who are the Readers with Talons - What Surgical Performances - What Satanic Mills -

---

↑ Index

101. rebecca wolff
united we stand, etc.
Sat 5 Jun 1999

Hi,

I wanted to report a little bit about a meeting held on June 2 in New York City on the subject of distribution for literary magazines. The meeting was held under the auspices of CLMP (council of literary magazines and presses) and was organized by me and Jenine Bockman Gordon of Literal Latte. Participants included Faye Kosmidis of DeBoer Distribution, Cheryl Carlson, newsstand division manager of Barnes & Noble, and Ian Brand, a bookseller at Labyrinth Books, an independent bookstore here in New York.

What follows is extremely technical and may be of interest only to publishers of journals: following from that, I'd love it if anyone out there who is a publisher of a lit mag would email me back and let me know what you think of the following report and attached ideas.

Basically, it went very well, with the upshot being that I'm energized and ready to make a stand for empowerment of the tiny publisher. It seems clear, after the meeting, that everyone involved (booksellers, both chain and independent; distributors, both small and mega; and publishers) sees a need for the establishment of some kind of organ of articulation or advocate for the needs and rights of the little magazine, in order for the magazine to flourish in this our new age.

One thing established during the meeting was that, although lit mags make up a tiny tiny proportion of the business of bookstores (especially chains) and of the periodicals distributors who serve them, they still do remain a desirable and indispensable commodity in that they bring into the stores that most sought-after commodity: the literate buyer of books, the upscale educated consumer.

Once that fact was established, we moved on to talking about the nitty-gritty ways that we could all work together to "sell more magazines"--with the obvious issue of their general esotericness as a given. We talked about possible promotions, about trying to educate the sales clerks as to the value of the lit mag, etc., and it all came down to: great ideas, but who is going to do this stuff? Certainly not the already overwhelmed publisher, and certainly not the distributor, whose job is to mail out bales of mags.

Cheryl Carlson, B&N lady, then expressed a desire that there be "one person" that she could deal with as a representative of the literary magazines, with whom she could make plans for promotions, for better inventory-taking, for wiser ordering, for better returns policies, etc. She actually sounded genuinely interested in the prospect.

I nearly jumped out of my seat with I-told-you-so-ness, as this was an idea I'd had (and proposed to CLMP without much response) in February.

Similarly, Faye Kosmidis from DeBoer agreed that it would be a good thing if there was someone out there whose job it was to call bookstores and see if they needed more copies of such and such magazine, and to try to educate booksellers about the peculiarities of the journal as a commodity (re: frequency, shelf-life, etc).

So anyway: I'm now thinking that publishers of literary journals should form an informal union of sorts: this way we could at least try to have more of a voice with distributors. My next move as the Norma Rae of journal publishers is to try to get Ingram to consider grouping all of their literary journals with one Account Executive (currently they're scattered all over and none of the AEs seems to have a clue as to what exactly a literary journal is and how they might need to be treated differently in order to have a better chance of selling). This is in my own particular best interests as Fence is carried by Ingram, but obviously a larger step needs to be taken in the future. For example:

and what follows is a dreamy scenario, an idyllic scenario:

what if all journals agreed to have an exclusive contract with one distributor (preferably a small one?) It turns out that the major reason it's so hard for these companies to do their business is that the advent of the huge national distributors meant that they each can get only a little share of what is already a pretty meager pie. If all journals were available only through one distributor (creating a monopoly of sorts) it would be great for the publishers and for the distributor in many ways. The distributor could actually make some money of f the journals and so wouldn't treat us publishers like they were doing us a favor by distributing them. Publishers could have more certainty of getting a straight answer, good service, and fair practice from their distributor.

Anyway, if any of this makes any sense to you (and you are a publisher of a distributable journal, ie, one with a spine) backchannel me. There's a lot more to talk about and report on but I don't want to take up too much electronic airspace.

Thanks,

Rebecca Wolff
Editor/Publisher of Fence

↑ Index

102. Pattie McCarthy

publication announcement : BeautifulSwimmer Press : Swensen & Biglieri

Sun 6 Jun 1999

BeautifulSwimmer Press is pleased to announce the publication of 2 new chapbooks

O excerpts, by Cole Swensen and ROMA, by Gregg Biglieri.

O excerpts is 32 pages long, saddle-stapled, and printed on 80 lb Poseidon white paper. The cover is 100 lb Poseidon white cover stock and features a photograph by New York photographer Peter Kolk.

O excerpts is an operatic long poem from Swensen, the author of the prize-winning collections Noon, and more recently, True. She writes:

This matter of life and death on the tongue/la langue/in Italian it is/woman also/ alone what am what did/done/ever have you/ gone/ the sea in its complexity/ heredity/ complicity/ is rising/all her lung/ an anonymous furl/ and recurrent tone/ Manon/ the world would fit in your palm/ then/ slip into your palm/ something you wore at your throat on a chain/ belonged/ once written down/ was at once written as was sealed and carried/ a letter to her sister/ (take this letter to your sister)/ (but this time it's real)/ thus without witness/ thus without edges/ she slits open.

***

ROMA is 40 pages, saddle-stapled, and printed on 80 lb Poseidon white paper. The cover features architectural sketches printed in white ink on cobalt blue Strathmore/Rhodedendron 80 lb cover stock.

ROMA is a serial poem comprised of 18 sections, a meandering meditation through the city's physical and architectural niches, an addressing of art & writing, an invocation of many of Italy's artistic sons as guiding spirits, including Borromini, Bernini, and Caravaggio. Throughout, Biglieri turns his eye to the visual intricacies of Rome's art and architecture, and tunes his ear toward a possible language with which to read and speak of such intricacies, such intimacies, where the inside is the outside and "the mind undoes its mounting."

Light slatted the lover shades the lower lift/ and shadows act as penitent tattoos that see/ through you imprinting pattern on the chaos./ Often a mind devolves to demolition./ No garden of olives then./ Just thinking the rag ends of the viols./ And none produce this, none see citation./ To announce that which will not/ take the place of. Time is what is left/ to know of no avail now. Shed the havings/ of what were, or the leavings of what have you./ No sketching. A bit of quicklime./ Paint directly on the canvas.

***

The chapbooks are $8 each and can be purchased directly by sending a check, payable to Pattie McCarthy, to BeautifulSwimmer Press, 158 Franklin Street, Ground Floor, Brooklyn, NY 11222 or by emailing [redacted].

The chapbooks are also available through Small Press Distribution.

In addition to O excerpts and ROMA, BeautifulSwimmer's first two chapbooks, Renga: Draft 32, by Rachel Blau DuPlessis, and Postcards, by Barbara Cole, are also available for $8 each—either directly from BeautifulSwimmer or through SPD (see SPD's most recent catalog for further information).

To celebrate these publications, BeautifulSwimmer is offering a special package deal of all four chapbooks for $25.

Please feel free to email for more information, or to place orders, and thanks for your support.
--Pattie McCarthy

↑ Index

103. Jeremy Solomons
Re: Motion
Sun 6 Jun 1999

Right, it's the politics and the power. If you are going to fight it, surely it has to be on that level. If Motion & bros. have the power then telling everyone their poetry is shit is not going to get anyone everywhere.

What is more interesting to me is where the mainstream and experiment interact. And, in parallel to that, the fact that some readers of so-called, mainstream poetry, when they get the opportunity to partake of "Other" poetries, are able to read, enjoy and respond to it.

Motion and his pals prevent that, presumably because they are not able to appreciate anything outside of their little world or they have a tightly knit crowd that all publish each other and are loathe to let others in. Isn't' that the case with much poetry, or much publishing that is not "commercially viable." John Grisham gets published because he makes money once you get past that its because someone likes it or has some other good or nefarious reason to publish.

↑ Index

104. Wendy Kramer
boston alternativepoetry conference
Sun 6 Jun 1999

hello it's wendy kramer. looking for people to transport & put up with for boston from nyc please backchannel . if you're a boston person & wanna put me up i

↑ Index

105. Wendy Kramer
boston alternative
Sun 6 Jun 1999

hello it's wendy kramer. looking for people to transport with & put up with for boston conference from nyc. please backchannel.

if you're a boston person & wanna put me up i could wash your dishes or some such.

if you live near the charles river where i hear it's good to go for a run esp consider me.

if you wanna split a motel six several ways please backchannel if you know a cheap hostile please back channel ever grateful & looking froward wendy

p.s. i think i have to work that monday so if you're going back after sun day fergit this ad.

↑ Index

106. pete spence
Re: hannah weiner's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE
Sun 6 Jun 1999

> for those who have ordered Hannah Weiner's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO recently i'd like your comment on the book, a line a paragraph but limit to a full A5 (half quarto?)page will make a book of the comments they should be sent to my by mail, set your comments in whaterver typeface or point size as long as it works out no larger than the page size (above) with reasonable margins for saddle stapling. will send back to everyone a copy of the book/pete spence

> _____
> Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

107. Alan Sondheim
description of ongoing work (apologies for cross-posting)
Sun 6 Jun 1999

-/-

Internet Philosophy and Psychology - June.99

This is a somewhat periodic notice describing my Internet Text, available on the Net, and sent in the form of texts to various lists (Cybermind and fop-l, and sometimes cyberculture, all of which I comoderate). The URL is: http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt/ and the mirror (without java- sript, graphics, The Case of the Real, a short novel (Ma) or dhtml pages) is http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html.

The changing nature of the email lists, Cybermind and Fiction-of-Philoso- phy, to which the texts are sent individually, hides the full body of the work; readers may not be aware of the continuity among them. The writing may appear fragmented, created piecemeal, splintered from a non-existent whole. On my end, the whole is evident, the texts extended into the lists, part or transitional objects.

So this (periodic) notice is an attempt to recuperate the work as total- ity. Below is an updated introduction.

The "Internet Text" currently constitutes around 90 files, or 2800 printed pages. It was started in 1994, and continues as an extended meditation on cyberspace. It began with a somewhat straightforward theoretical outline, and has expanded into wild theory and literatures.

Almost all of the text is in the form of short-waves or long-waves. The former are the individually-titled sections, written in a variety of styles, and at times referencing other writers/theorists. The sections are heavily interrelated; on occasion emanations appear, "emanants" possessing philosophical or psychological import. They also create and problematize narrative substructures within the work as a whole. Such are Julu, Alan, Jennifer, Nikuko, in particular. Overall, I'm concerned with virtual-real subjectivities and their interpenetrations, in relation to various philo- sophical issues. Recently, I've been working with simple reworkings of the emacs doctor program, and writing dhtml pages, exploring parsing and rhe- torics of control, erotics, and sublimation.

The long-waves are fuzzy loci bearing on such issues as death, love, vir- tual embodiment, the "granularity of the real," physical reality, computer languages, and protocols which weave throughout the texts. The resulting splits and coalescences owe something to phenomenology, deconstruction, linguistics, prehistory, programming, etc., as well as to the functionings of online worlds in relation to everyday realities.

I have used MUDS, MOOS, talkers, perl, d/html, qbasic, linux, emacs, Cu-SeeMe, etc., all tending towards a future of being-and-writing, texts which act and engage beyond traditional reading practices. Some of the work emerges out of performative language such as computer programs or MOO commands which _do_ things; some emerges out of interference with these languages, or conversations using internet applications that are activated one way or another.

There is no binarism in the texts, no series of definitive statements. Virtuality is considered beyond the text- and web-scapes prevalent now. The various issues of embodiment that will arrive with full-real VR are already in embryonic existence, permitting the theorizing of present and future sites, "spaces," nodes, and modalities of body/speech/community.

Please check the INDEX to find your way into the earlier body of the work. The Case of the Real is useful. It is also helpful to read the first file, Net1.txt, and/or to look at the latest files (kw kx, etc., which are still to be indexed) as well. Skip around. The Index lists the files in which a particular topic is described; you can then do a search on the file, or simply scroll down (the files range in length from 30 to 50 pages in print). (Note: I have stopped working on the index; for the later files, I suggest you skim. Eventually, I need a site and a local search engine for the texts; at the moment, I apologize for the awkwardness of it all.)

The texts may be distributed in any medium; please credit me. I would ap- preciate in return any comments you may have.

See also: Being on Line, Net Subjectivity (anthology), Lusitania, 1997 New Observations Magazine #120 (anthology), Cultures of Cyberspace, 1998 The Case of the Real, Pote and Poets Press, 1998

Alan Sondheim [redacted]
432 Dean Street, Brooklyn, NY, 11217
mail to: [redacted]

↑ Index

108. gquasha
Rick Fields
Mon 7 Jun 1999

I am beyond sad to report that Rick Fields passed away Sunday, June 6th, around noon Pacific Time at his home in the Bay Area. Poet, author of important works on Buddhism and related subjects, and editor, Rick's best-known books include _How the Swans Came Home to the Lake: A Narrative History of Buddhism in America_; _Chop Wood, Carry Water_; and _The Code of the Warrior_. He was formerly the editor of _The Vajradhatu Sun_ and _Yoga Journal_. He edited _ The Awakened Warrior _ and co-translated _The Turquoise Bee: Love Songs of the Sixth Dalai Lama._ He was an extraordinary writer. During his five-year struggle with cancer (experts had predicted a year) he captured an astonishing spirit and life force in a series of poems published under the title _Fuck You, Cancer, and Other Poems_ — a work that has served many people who are dealing with life-threatening illness, whether patients or their friends, family, doctors, and hospital staff. Rick was loved and his work appreciated by a great many people, and those who knew him benefited immeasurably from his quality of presence, generosity and his own species of lightness and joy of being. Just the way he handled illness with such presence and openness was, for me, a great teaching. And so much about him was like that—a very understated gift. Gratitude for having known him overshadows even the painful loss.

George Quasha
Station Hill Press/Barrytown, Ltd. or The Institute for Publishing Arts, Inc.
Barrytown, NY 12507

Office: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted] (publishing) and [redacted] (GQ direct)

http://www.stationhill.org
e-mail: [redacted]

Book Orders to Station Hill/Barrytown: [redacted] (Credit Card)

↑ Index

109. Ron Silliman
Pounding Pound
Mon 7 Jun 1999

For a weird little reading experience, folks who want to see how badly 20th century poetry can be misinterpreted are directed to:

www.newcriterion.com/archive/17/jun99/lyons.htm which is the site for a very strange little article on Pound by someone who truly hates The Cantos and everything such verse bred.
He suggests that their motivation is simply Joyce envy.

Ron

↑ Index

110. Stephen Ellis
Re: symbolic snogging
Mon 7 Jun 1999

In back of Aristotle in this particular context, loom the "numerical systems" of ancient epic (Gilgamesh, the Old Test.), wch was be "told" by numerical placement & relation rather than narrativized in the yet-to-be developed grammer etc. of ... Greeks? ie., it was all plot/plat, like a celestial map that also works as a neuro-muscular gloss, that is, "story" at that point was the ultimate maybe non-linear logic, or perhaps logic = epic in that sense is the nose by wch Aris. was led toward "conscious reasoning" of the system whilst equally within it, or how to accomplish the telling of the tale of each those things it takes far less time to completely count remains an account we haven't yet learned to pay in full, unless by "symbolic"

we mean "I am no longer the man that either ordered or ate the breakfast that was here, so therefore, I'm not paying for it."

> From: Judy Roitman <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: symbolic snogging
> Date: Fri, 4 Jun 1999 09:07:50 -0500
>
> Maybe we should take this back-channel, but there seem to be more than a few symbolic logic fans here...
>
> In a sense, symbolic logic is not 'just another branch' of maths: it's an essential foundation of most branches of mathematics. Any formal proof requires a process that, if not actually written as formal logic, should be > able to be reduced to it.
>
> That's how it was billed (or, as we say these days, marketed) back when I was in school, but things have changed and there's a lot of fairly serious criticism of these notions.
>
> Whatever your view of foundations, symbolic logic can be viewed as a branch > of mathematics. That seems to be the distinction between symbolic logic and other sorts of logical inquiry.

>
> I don't think that symbolic logic was intended to replace the non-symbolic kind, but was an attempt to systematize the kind of conscious reasoning that goes back to Aristotle. It does swallow up whole fields; at least in the sense that it narrows those fields.
>
> Yes yes yes. The narrowing is an interesting (and I think invasive) phenomenon.
>
> ....
> As an interesting aside, there's a lot of criticism of the binary true/false nature of Western logic. It's ironic, then, that Leibniz's development of binary arithmetic was partly based upon his reading of the I Ching!
>
> Tom Beard
>
> Cool. Thanks.
>
> ---
> Judy Roitman | "Whoppers Whoppers Whoppers!
> Math, University of Kansas | memory fails
> Lawrence, KS 66045 | these are the days."
> [redacted] |
> fax: [redacted] | Larry Eigner, 1927-1996
> ---
> Note new area code
> ---
> http://www.math.ukans.edu/~roitman/
> ---

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

111. Stephen Ellis
Re: Non-Meaningful Levels of Language - A Query
Mon 7 Jun 1999

All statements are self-possessed by their inversions; one claim invokes its opposite; runs hot and cold, confronts & simultaeneously runs away from, the very fleeting quality of these "reversals" as, unnegotiably conflictive, yet in terms of the alchemy you mention, there is a "trick" - to permit the twin aspects of such duality to interpenetrate, not nonsensically, especially, but dogmatically using as a basis the familiar alchemical bumper-sticker, "as above, so below" - and all variations of it, ie., "bury the bone deeper" in that way that Brenda Hillman characterizes as knowing the unknown via a greater unknown, or the homepathic "cure like with like" (the toxin / anti-toxin route), so what you'll "get" in some end (so one hopes), is a cross-fertilization in which something like the electromagnesis of gravity might be felt to "rise" (as a heart might) out of the ground laid out where the influx that ignites the desire to "do it" in the first place is shaped by one's own thermodynamic gesture that makes the object at its end equal to the subject of its means, not to say also, that at certain times, certain of these objects, subjects, gestures, hearts, grounds, ignitions and gravities may appear to be upsidedown and/or insideout. But of course, that's why it's called "nonsense" - as if that's the best thing it could get to be. It. The "knowing" of the knowing "form". Why not deliver the lecture standing on your head? Not forgetting of course also, to wiggle your toes when the going gets serious. There ARE no "non-meaningful levels of language", tho of course, there is plenty of important cultural detritus about that nobody understands.

> From: Aviva Vogel <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Non-Meaningful Levels of Language - A Query
> Date: Thu, 3 Jun 1999 16:58:15 EDT
>
> I'm giving a graduating lecture (description follows) at mainstream Vermont College MFA in Writing program, and would love comments/suggestions on potential sources & references that would help address the lecture questions > properly for a relatively conservative audience of readers/writers.
> Thanks!!!
>
> GNOSIS, NONSENSE, NADA

"The future of poetry lies in the exploitation of non-meaningful levels of language. These levels establish poetry as a form of discourse that must be read as entirely separate from normal, communicative language, read with its materiality, its artifice in mind...". (Veronica Forrest-Thomson, Poetic Artifice).

What a claim! Why write apparent 'nonsense?' What possible project might we have for a poetry of relative 'obfuscation'? How can language that simultaneously conceals and reveals help us 'know'?

If words don't refer to clear particulars and concepts, how can such "non-meaningful levels of language" facilitate gnosis? If a poem's language is syntactically and semantically fluid, diffusing boundaries between subject/object, self/other, hwere else might a reader be taken (besides into confusion, even boredom)? What are the chances for finding value in visual, kinesthetic, musical, or mathematical meaning, rather than depending on a more familiar thematic meaning?

Do we want to accept an 'experimental' or 'avant garde' poetry's claim to provide us with a much-needed psychic invasion to strip us of our 'thought-coverings'? Would we then descend into a meaningless abyss, nothingness, into our little 'nada' selves?

As Brenda Hillman suggests in her epigraph to Blue Codices (from Loose Sugar), it is enticing to entertain the notion that we might "Explain the unknown/ by the more unknonw," a saying she attributes to "an alchemical theorem." By taking a look at Hillman's poetry, and probably other work by Mary Reufle, Lyn Hejinian, John Taggart, Rosemary Waldrop, and/or Donald Revell (list is bound to change), this lecture will tousle around (on mats of course) in the hoary backyard of this 'pissed-on' and 'pissed-upon' territory. It's important to dwell on handouts in office before coming to wrestle.

I have, at this late date, a far more intuitive than concrete handle on the answers to some of these questions, and have been investigating everything from gnostic scriptures like Nag Hammadi and Elaine Pagels' books -- to Perloff, introductions to 'experimental' anthologies, and other ready-at-hand critical writing. Unfortunately, I've just been faced with a sudden need to move my entire household, and would like to get to the bottom of this subject > in some kind of usable, presentable fashion as quickly as possible (although > I'm sure the topic requires at least a lifetime of writing and reading and studying).

> If anyone has ideas about how to approach this lecture, what to read, > who to quote, or how to articulate the direction that you sense the questions > are leading me in, please let me know. I'd be immensely grateful.
> Thanks,
> Aviva Vogel, Poetangles & Motherdrum, Norwich, VT 05055

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

112. Charles Bernstein

new PMC

Mon 7 Jun 1999

Several things of interest in the new PMC:

POSTMODERNCULTUREPOSTMODERNCULTURE
POSTMODERNCULTUREPOSTMODERNCULTURE

Volume 9, Number 3 (May, 1999) ISSN: 1053-1920

Jed Rasula, "Textual Indigence in the Archive"

James McCorkle, "Prophecy and the Figure of the Reader in Susan Howe's _Articulation of Sound Forms in Time_"

Richard Quinn, "Poetry at the Millennium: 'Open on its Forward Side.'" A review of Jerome Rothenberg and Pierre Joris, eds., _Poems for the Millennium: The University of California Book of Modern and Postmodern Poetry (Volume Two: From Postwar to Millenium)_. Berkeley: U of California P, 1998.

Abstracts

o Abstract: Susan Howe's _Articulation of Sound Forms in Time_ is considered in light of Heidegger's condition of an "openness to mystery" or as Gerald Burns explains, "the region of the question" and its uncontainability within finite interpretations." The importance of Howe's work lies in its testing of the conditions of mastery and control--issues that are among those Howe explores and incorporates from her readings of Emily Dickinson. Interpretations, such as those of Perloff and Reinfeld, begin with the re-assembling of a narrative from the fragments that Howe offers. Such a critical direction suggests the act of interpretation must be, or can only be, a normative, disciplining method. Such a process must be resisted: the retrieval of histories, texts, and identities does not imply a necessary containment or totalizing of memory. Memory, instead, allows for imaginative inquiry, which is redoubled in Howe's poem, with the possibility of prophecy: the Falls Fight of 1676 that Howe uses as her foundational source becomes a mirror for ourselves. Hope Atherton prefigures the conditions and failures of community, as well as a genealogy of policing. As prophecy, Howe's poem invites us to participate in the signifying process; each word of the poem becomes a site for meditation and a reflection on the history of what was and what is still becoming.--jm

Jed Rasula, "Textual Indigence in the Archive"

- Abstract: Currently the Internet animates dreams of instantaneous telepresence and rapid data transfer, but the "dromocratic" revolution also makes rapid conceptual transit compulsory (Virilio). The modern enthrallment with speed is a nascent stipulation of communication technologies that are modeled on, and answerable to, the cross-referencing mobility pioneered in the Enlightenment encyclopedia. The efficiency of the archival web of encyclopedism readily leads to a complacent mirage of power and control. In order to examine this mirage, I discuss two "encyclopedic" novels--_Moby-Dick_ and _The Magic Mountain_--which disclose, below the utopian fantasy of unambiguous signals and noise-free channels, a salutary posture of indigence. The peril attendant on digitized telepresence is that the uniform coding of data obliterates tactile agency. But a phantom materiality lingers on, traceable by way of the cross-referencing and multiple-coding options of the Encyclopedia. The challenge of a plenitude of cross-referencing is one of surfeit: the enhancement of cognitive speed, confronting the increased magnitude of material to which its rapid conceptual transit makes access, reinstates idealism as a vindictive triumph over matter. The novels I examine by Melville and Mann confront mountains of data, but resist the enticements to mobility of encyclopedic culture, casting their lots instead with an indigent reserve, rehearsing narrative tactics of delay, meander, filibuster. Maximizing the tension between documentation and storytelling, they demonstrate the epistemological lesson that a surface rationalism conceals an atavistic endowment that is at once a "pre-rational" or mythic threat as well as a repository of creative energy--the very energy required in order to compose the work: nothing less than a microbial sentience that makes us what we are without our ever having to know anything about it, the charmed circle of life itself in which the pleasures of circulating exceed the compass of human knowledge.--jr

---

CONTENTS OF THIS ISSUE ARE AVAILABLE FREE OF CHARGE AT http://www.iath.virginia.edu/pmc/issue.599 UNTIL RELEASE OF THE NEXT ISSUE. A TEXT-ONLY ARCHIVE OF THE JOURNAL IS ALSO AVAILABLE FREE OF CHARGE AT http://www.iath.virginia.edu/pmc/text-only. FOR FULL HYPERTEXT ACCESS TO BACK ISSUES, SEARCH UTILITIES, AND OTHER VALUABLE FEATURES, YOU OR YOUR INSTITUTION MAY SUBSCRIBE TO PROJECT MUSE, THE ON-LINE JOURNALS PROJECT OF THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY PRESS.

↑ Index

113. Linda Russo

CFP Poetics/Production, NEMLA 2000

Mon 7 Jun 1999

CFP NEMLA 2000 (April 7-8, SUNY@Buffalo)

Poetics/Production: Modern and Post-Modern Little Magazines

This session invites papers on any aspect of innovative poetry production (both in the sense of the writing of poetry and the reproduction/printing thereof) or the production of poetics, as these relate to Modern and Post-Modern (and contemporary) little magazines.

We will focus chiefly on American and Canadian little magazines, though papers on British little magazines as they relate to American poetry are welcome. Papers might focus on specific little magazines or editors, particular poets or 'scenes', a specific lineage (e.g. women editors, 'minor' and/or otherwise obscured schools, such as Black Mountain, San Francisco Renaissance, and the Objectivists, and the development of current innovative poetic practice), or any other aspects of poetics and production.
Current and recent little magazine editors are encouraged to contribute; non-traditional academic or non- and anti-academic papers and perspectives are welcome.

The little magazine has a rich history in the United States and Canada, as evinced by the recently published _A Secret Location on the Lower East Side: Adventures in Writing, 1960-1980_ (Granary Books, 1998). It is a history that is particularly attuned to poetry because poets and editors, especially avant-garde poets and editors, both helped create and were themselves created by modernist little magazines (such as Margaret Anderson's
The Little Review, Ezra Pound's _The Egoist_, Alfred Kreymborg's _Others_ and William Carlos Williams' _Contact_); the little magazines of 'mimeo revolution' (e.g. Diane DiPrima's _Floating Bear_, LeRoi Jones' _Yugen_, George Stanley's _Open

Space_ and Jack Spicer's _J_, Ted Berrigan's _C_, Maureen Owens' _Telephone_) and, more recently, what has come to be known as Language Writing (L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E, ed.

Bruce Andrews and Charles Bernstein, Carla Harryman's _Qu_, for example) - a history whose influence is felt today in the plethora of little magazines that claim to define an
'innovative' or 'avant garde' terrain.

Deadline Sept. 1, 1999. Send brief coversheet and one-page abstract to:

[redacted]

or Linda Russo
19 Hodge Avenue, no. 9
Buffalo NY 14222

please include email address and phone number.

* * * *

Linda Russo
Graduate T.A.
SUNY @Buffalo, Buffalo NY

↑ Index

114. Kyle Conner
Highwire Reading
Mon 7 Jun 1999

READING THIS SATURDAY:

from Brooklyn, RACHEL LEVITSKY

w/
Hometown contender, JIM CORY

HIGHWIRE GALLERY, 139 N. 2nd St. or, if you want to go straight to the bar:
Anthony's, middle of 200 block Market St.

Saturday, June 12, 8PM (yeah right)
BYO

RACHEL DEMOCRACY LEVITSKY recently emigrated from Boulder, Colorado, where she curated the Left Hand Reading Series. She teaches poetry to Queens kids and teaches union members how to write unnaturally so they can pass the CUNY writing test and go to college. She is the author of three chapbooks, _2(1x1)Portraits_, _The Adventures of Yaya and Grace_ and _Cartographies of Error_ forthcoming this July from Leroy Press in San Francisco. She believes the wildlife of New York is much more wild than that of Colorado--give her a week with a bicycle and she will prove it to you.

from The Adventures of Yaya and Grace:

"As for the lover, her/his beauty and power is a mysterious thing though may be a ploy. Their honesty is as deft as a bloodthirsty criminal on a crime spree, 'here come shake my hand, now how does it feel to have shaken the hand of a murderer?' You hate him/her and are convinced of his/her perfection. You cannot decide if he/she is from heaven, and you are the lower body, or if they are from hell, and you a creature whose superiority is being challenged. This all takes place in the frightening prison tower of your darkest dream, where the walls are high and dark and gray and everywhere there is red as an afterimage."

JIM CORY has been a staple of the Philadelphia poetry scene for over a decade and is one of the founding editors of Phildelphia's Insight-to-Riot Press, which has published the likes of Janet Mason, James Broughton and CA Conrad, among others. Jim recently edited and wrote the introduction for _Packing Up for Paradise: The Selected Poems of James Broughton_, which was published by Black Sparrow Press in 1998. He has numerous chapbooks, of which his most recent is _The Redheads_.

Come hear, see, experience, & talk with these wonderful poets.

↑ Index

115. Chris Stroffolino
QUESTION (ALAN GOLDING)
Mon 7 Jun 1999

Does anybody know his email address? I tried to respond last week backchannel to him, but I think I sent to main address accidentally-- thanks in advance, chris stroffolino

↑ Index

116. Chris Stroffolino
Berman Time Out Review
Mon 7 Jun 1999

I'm told there was a review of David Berman's new book, ACTUAL AIR, in last weeks "TIME OUT" mag. Does anybody have a copy of it, perhaps could send or trade (i don't need whole mag, a xerox would be fine). Trying to track it down but think I'm too late... thanks, chris

↑ Index

117. Tisa Bryant
Re: Seeing addresses
Mon 7 Jun 1999

Hi!

coattail ride....

I would like contact info on Will Alexander as well.
please give to [redacted]

Thanks!

> Hello All,
> I am seeking email or regular mail addresses for:
> Bobbie Louise Hawkins
> Erica Hunt
> Will Alexander
>
> You can backchannel to me at:
> [redacted]
>
> Thanks you for your assistance,
> Kathy Lou Schultz

↑ Index

118. Christopher W. Alexander prevallet forward
Mon 7 Jun 1999

March on the Pentagon
Saturday June 5, 1999

by Kristin Prevallet and Lisa Jarnot

On Saturday June 5th there was a rally in Washington DC to protest the ongoing US/NATO intervention in Yugoslavia. Thousands of people attended the day-long event. We thought that some of you might be interested in knowing more about what happened. There seems to have been very little news coverage of the rally and march. We were part of a caravan of six buses departing from 14th street in New York City early on Saturday morning and we arrived at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington DC at 11am. There was a rally in the park across from the memorial, during which people gathered and several speakers made opening remarks about the current situation in Yugoslavia. The green was filled with different coalition groups opposed to the NATO military action. Some groups were made up of long-term political activists, others had come together specifically around the issue of the situation in the Balkans. People were there from all over the country. We heard that 10 buses had come in from Cleveland, and we met people from Boston, Philadelphia, and Virginia as well. There also seemed to be a large international presence at the event, including representatives from England, Greece, Korea, Turkey, Puerto Rico and Japan. By 2 pm the green was full and it was difficult to make a path through the crowd. The rally was followed by a march from the Vietnam Veterans Memorial to the Pentagon. It was hard to tell exactly how many people participated in the march, but we were somewhere in the middle of it and the crowd was impressive. (We estimate 15,000 people.) We marched past the Lincoln Memorial, across the Virginia Bridge, up the Pentagon roadway and to one side of the Pentagon building where a second rally was held. The group was loud and the messages were various -- from a band of classical Japanese drummers dancing beside the marchers, to groups of young socialists chanting slogans like "Money for schools, not for bombs," to grade school kids holding signs that read "Stop bombing my grandparents in Serbia". We contributed our own signs: "Dear IMF: Free People Not Markets"; Dear World Bank: Democracy is about people, not profits"; "NATO=DEATH"; "Clinton: Bombing Bridges into the 21st century." Other signs included: "Clinton is a war criminal"; "Madeline Snakebite"; and "Is Kosovo Clinton's Columbine?" Once at the Pentagon, about 3,000 people gathered on the lawn and listened to a number of speakers, including Amy Goodman of Pacifica Radio, Ramsey Clarke, Dave Dellinger, church leaders, and representatives of Serbian, Cuban, and Puerto Rican coalitions. There weren't any poet speakers, but we did run into fellow New York poet David Cameron, and longtime poet activist Ed Sanders who carried a sign that read "General Wesley Clark is a mass murderer".

There were several concerns that came up repeatedly during the afternoon--

1) all of the speakers agreed that just because the bombing may soon end, the war is not over; 2) it seems obvious that the true goal of the bombing was to level the region for Western occupation. (Or as Tony Blair recently said: "Let this be a turning point for southeastern Europe and the Balkans. Let this mark the point at which these countries, so often scarred by ethnic conflict and racial divides, be brought properly into the true family of European Nations. [note emphasis on "properly" and "true."]); 3)Yugoslavia will have to request massive loans from NATO countries in order to rebuild their industries and we have destroyed the infrastructure of their nationalized economic system (including a nationalized health care system). 4)the plight of refugees (both Serbian and Kosovar) is growing. 5) there are several factions of the KLA (from far right to far left) that are increasingly difficult for NATO to keep track of. A new cycle of violence may begin as Kosovars return to the area and seek revenge on Serbians. (There's an article in the NYTime Sunday June 6th regarding this issue). 6) this is just one of a series of attacks the United States has launched in recent years for economic reasons. The situation in Iraq was handled in a similar way. 7)The bombing does not represent victory. Aside from the refugee crisis and the complete destruction of the region, the US has sparked an international conflict and its relations with two major nuclear powers, Russia and China, have deteriorated. 8) One speaker said "We are pro-Serbian but anti-Milosevic; pro-Kosovar but anti-KLA." That seemed to be the consensus among the protesters. 9) The United States never made an effort to negotiate any reasonable agreement with Milosevic and the Serbian Parliament before the bombings began. 10) Looking at the history of this conflict it becomes clear that the United States and NATO have had an interest in seeing the region divided up. Since 1991 NATO has played a key role in contributing to conflicts in the region. Germany, Austria, the United States and other NATO countries have interests in the region's resources of oil, coal, and bauxite. Germany is particularly interested in a proposed oil pipeline which would run through Serbian territory. 11) the peace movement is alive and well, but is more frequently being ignored by the media. C-SPAN was the single news source broadcasting the rally, and there was a media block on corporate news sources. ABC, CBS (Westinghouse), and NBC (General Electric) were not present. Neither the Washington Post nor the New York Times carried ANY coverage what-so-ever the following day. However, there were quite a few officials standing on the roof of Pentagon with cameras taking photographs of individuals in the crowd. Overall the rally certainly proved that a large number of Americans are opposed to the US/NATO bombing campaign and occupation. There was also a lot of anti-Clinton sentiment in the air. The thing that came as a surprise to us was the eerie media silence surrounding the event. We hope that people will forward this information to others. The international Action Center in New York is planning more events around this issue including a national day of protest set for June 26th. They have a web site at www.iacenter.org. We'd also like to encourage people to write to their representatives in congress and to Bill Clinton to voice opposition to these events in the Balkans. Clinton's address is--

William Jefferson Clinton
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington DC 20500

There are also web sites with information and addresses at www.senate.gov and www.house.gov

↑ Index

119. Patrick F. Durgin
New work at Kenning website
Mon 7 Jun 1999

New work from Ray DiPalma at the Kenning website.
Also, view Jen Hofer's "Factory" -- from the out of print 2nd issue.

www.avalon.net/~kenning

Patrick F. Durgin

↑ Index

120. david bromige
Obit in Motion
Mon 7 Jun 1999

I have had A M taken out and shot.

Behind the barn. While I thought he might continue to win over 5 furlongs up against other contenders of his class, and while had developed an appreciation for what remained idiosyncratic after his orthodoxizing, the weight of judgement from my fellow-trainers and vets turned out to be too heavy to oppose. It grieves me that we have little good to speak of triple crown winners or even poets laureate, but I ascribe it to the times.

I argued that not every horse is bred to run a mile and a quarter, and against the top of his contemporaries, but the stories of doping (of the judges) by M's former trainer simply would not go away.

My only regret is that I looked into his eye moments before, well.....it was the lively, moist eye of others of his breed, and spoke, it seemed, of an early promise. I would like to remind readers that the Laureate Stakes are not for every contender. Not only is the mount himself required to be lighter than horses usually are, but he must be ridden by a very lightweight jockey. There are not enough contenders with such qualifications, and I agree the rules need to be changed.

I hope I shall not be judged amiss for having taken pleasure in his desultory gait & minor orthodoxies.

db

↑ Index

121. Kevin Magee
Re: Reznikoff
Mon 7 Jun 1999

"neglected position[s]" :

First, there is the Need (Black Sparrow Press, January 1977)
The Manner Music (Black Sparrow Press 1977)
Family Chronicle (Markus Wiener, 1988)
By the Waters of Manhattan (Markus Wiener, 1986)
Testimony: Recitative (New Directions 1965)
Holocaust (Black Sparrow Press, 1965)
By the Waters of Manhattan (New Directions, 1962)
By the Well of Living and Seeing (Black Sparrow, 1974)
Testimony, vols. 1 & 2 (Black Sparrow, 1978)
Poems 1918-1936 (Black Sparrow, 1978)
Poems 1937-1975 (Black Sparrow, 1978)
Charles Reznikoff Man and Poet, ed. Milton Hindus
(National Poetry Foundation, 1984)

This is all I've got on my bookshelf. Charles made a lot of his own books and those I suppose are all in the rare book rooms. What a wonderful website those early books would make, self-printed, handmade.

One more chain in a set of refrain retain return to this is what it was about reading is a basic problem a simple point that has to be made at the beginning I saw nothing that I should not contradict nothing gainsay
this is what I was telling you about what was
I saying that it's a relief there's no longer anything to remember pretend it's inevitable
that the musician go mad in The Manner Music
how much does Reznikoff write himself into the composer who burns all his manuscripts
in the park? We returned to the cafeteria.

[from "The Sin of the Book" in COMMON KNOWLEDGE,
an unpublished "hot MS?" Or cold as ashes.]

But it was Louis and not Charles a generation of poets built on among others building SoundGardens inner-referring pounding out those lexicals you can learn in a linguist here and there, the drive being toward a proto hyper-text the machines are now perfecting, though is it irony or the ironing out of accent and dialect--the same word spoken and broken many ways by many so many mouths

(National TV has had a hand here, standardizing speech, standardizing (bleaching) English)--which characterizes a lot of the groundwork done by late 70s/early 80s avant garde furthered into now, the best and the worst, is it writtenness or spokenness? Charles was an ambulator, walked New York up and down like Benjamin's Charles, Marx and Engels ghosting both, "The crowd--no subject was more entitled to the attention . . . " (p. 120) flaneur "democratically compelled"? Reznikoff was also a camera worker, and maybe its the slow rhythm of his lens which has separated him from the attention given to Zukofsky. There's not the tight jamming of words end-nerves or pristine crystalline word and syllable musical maypole and mayhem that's in "A" and the shorter poems; rather slow and long and deliberate lines a lot of times, and all the anonymous faces that rise and speak among each other, many of them workers, and they are often most often slowly, lovingly observed, overheard, without a lot of intention, commentary, interference--it's something, really, how the figures of workers and the moving crowd are allowed to be let be in their beauty, vocal and visual, maybe the kind of photography Berlau would have found had she been able to have been found, also early documentary cinema, though it was watching a film shooting textiles and textile workers by Ernie Gehr that first made me think of Reznikoff's writing as camerawork, and I asked Ernie about it during the Q & A after the show and he said yes, he'd read Reznikoff. Well, if Ernie has, why aren't we? And by we I mean anybody writing poetry and thinking about the working class, and it's all right if you weren't born there, Benjamin in that French camp spoke about the proletarianization of the Jews ("a city of labor" is what some German administrative documents have been found planning the Warsaw Ghetto), and "Ghetto" recurs among Reznikoff's words and titles, the New York Jewish Ghetto, though a waitress emerges somewhere saying "honey chile", there's all sorts of common laborers in these poems, and Testimony like Holocaust is a masterpiece of often raw archival footage. Reznikoff reads as well besides Jabes as he does Stevens, for different reasons, a neglected modernist? Or proletarian poet waiting to be found for a new generation just coming to writing and needing him now, he is needed now, sometimes it takes a long time. Has the proletariat been a prohibited content? Reznikoff can show you how to listen and to look, how to see them and film them slowly, lovingly, without hurry, or irony.

Stephen Vincent wrote:

> In case you did not see it, there's a lovely piece in this past Sunday's NY Times about Ann Hamilton (sculptor/installation artist) that she is preparing for the United States Pavilion for this summer's Venice Biennale. She is most well known for the use of simple materials and subtle means to create large public works invested with both historical and contemporary resonance. Interestingly this piece will draw on the works and ideas of several American > writers. For example, and with some curious, but perhaps wonderful irony ? given his much neglected position in 20th century writing ? the "gallery walls will be covered in a Braille translation of passages from Charles Reznikoff's 'Testimony: The United States 1885 - 1915'".

> It's almost sweet that a writer, so democratically compelled and pretty much ignored, will have his work risen - albeit somewhat disguised ? to a public apex in the international art world. It's probably still too much to hope that Venice will be the means by which Reznikoff will be welcomed 'back home'.
> The article also mentions other writers Ann Hamilton has drawn from for guidance or advice for influential sources including: Ann Carson, Susan Stewart and Ann Lauterbach. From the article's description, omens are that the piece ? called "Myein" ? will be a great one
>
> Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

122. Lawrence Upton.

Re: found poetry

Tue 8 Jun 1999

---

are you sure it was tearing?
perhaps the corners were eaten by the M---------TH its body stretched no doubt by all that paper

Lawrence

-----Original Message-----
From: David Baptiste Chirot <[redacted]>
Date: 04 June 1999 19:17
Subject: Re: found poetry

| two found poems--one old, one new
|
| going through a stack of old magazines for collage work and came |across a copy of emma goldman's journal MOTHER EARTH
| through many years of moving, the cover was torn and revealed:
| OTHER EAR
|
|
| walking through a "rough neighborhood" looking for street
|materials, a sign: ANGER ZONE
|
| a favorite graffiti, written in six foot letters on a wall in the |Winter Hill area of Somerville, MA: CRIME IS
|

| --dbc
|

↑ Index

123. Lowther,John
Dina H. spelling test & Mother's Day sketch
Tue 8 Jun 1999

---

a friend of mine here in atlanta found a piece of notebook paper
that had blown into his yard

on the back side at the top
the word "Heres' is crossed out and below it
is written;

"I Have a picture for you."

below this are two concentric circles (roughly circles that is)
inside the smaller is written;

"for/ you" and then there is a drawing that might be of several people standing together or it might be several flowers below it says;
"for/ Mother's/ Day"

outside of this circle but inside
the larger one it says "And I Love you/Both a bunch."
at the bottom of the page is a heart-shape
and in it is written "Love"

this is all sweet and all but it is the front side of this page that i like the best

at thetop it says, inside of pencil-drawn rectangles; "Dina H." and "spelling test"

in the uper right corner in another rectangle
is written; "March 30, 1979"

in another hand at the top it says "-1"

this is the text of the spelling test;

1. The was hit by an ax.

2. There are Six ducks in a box.

3. Mother Maks Cakes.

4. She looks Sad.

5. He Liks my new Socks.

6. The Sticks are big.

next to the word "liks" in #5
is written a small "e"

↑ Index

124. Bob Perelman
Re: Frost & found
Tue 8 Jun 1999

Frost: There's a couple of pages on the Frost poem in my Marginalization of Poetry, Chap 7. I do remember seeing Frost read the poem on TV when I was 14. No great insights: sunglare prevented him from reading the pages; Kennedy came over and stood by anxiously holding his top hat above the page as an ineffective shield; then Frost recited "The Gift Outright."

Found: Most the words in 7 Works come from other texts. It's now way out of print, but about half will be reprinted in Ten to One, this fall.

I can't remember if Ted Berrigan's white-out novel, Clear the Range, has been mentioned. It's a pure example of finding a text inside another.

↑ Index

125. Robin Tremblay-McGaw
Call for Submissions--Class & Poetics
Tue 8 Jun 1999

Call for Submissions to HOW2's Forum on Class and Poetics

Visit HOW2 at:
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2/index.html

Thanks to the efforts of feminist poets, critics, and editors, it is now > possible to identify a discourse--both scholarly and creative--of gender and poetics. In the 1980s, journals such as HOW(ever) put the spotlight on these issues, particularly related to innovative or experimental > practices and how these intersected with issues of publication, erasure, > and canon formation.
>
> A decade later, we find ourselves trying to define a vocabulary for > addressing complex issues of class in the formation of an innovative poetics.

As Kathy Lou Schultz asked in her Tripwire (Issue 1, Fall 1998) essay, "What's a working class poetic, and where could I find one?" How do we make present the _absence_ of class in discussions of gender and the poetics of innovation? Where are the intersections of race in > discussions of class? How are these forces fused and CON-fused?
>
> How do/can we picture/trace working class issues in formally innovative > ways? What do the circumstances of literary production--surrounding > writers and the writing produced--have to do with one another?

Submissions should be emailed to: [redacted] by July 7th and be no longer than 2 paragraphs. We will select and edit responses.

Editors: Kathy Lou Schultz and Robin Tremblay-McGaw

↑ Index

126. Poetics List Administration
Moore and query / Balestrieri
Tue 8 Jun 1999

---

this came to the administrative address. Chris

From: "Peter Balestrieri" <[redacted]>
Date: 6/7/99, 12:07 PM -0700

Hi,
Does anybody know who said that she called her writing poetry because she couldn't think of what else to call it? Was it Marianne Moore?
Thanks,
Pete

↑ Index

127. Jeffrey Jullich
Dina H. spelling test & Mother's Day sketch -Reply
Tue 8 Jun 1999

> "Lowther,John" <[redacted]>
> 06/08/99 10:28am >>>
> a friend of mine here in atlanta
> found a piece of notebook paper
> that had blown into his yard
>
> on the back side at the top
> the word "Heres' is crossed out

> and below it
> is written;
>
> "I Have a picture for you."
>
> below this are two concentric
> circles (roughly circles that is)
> inside the smaller is written;
>
> "for/ you" and then there is a drawing
> that might be of several people
> standing together or it might be
> several flowers below it says;
> "for/ Mother's/ Day"
>
> outside of this circle but inside
> the larger one it says "And I Love you/ > Both a bunch."
> at the bottom of the page is a heart-shape
> and in it is written "Love"
>
> this is all sweet and all but it is the front
> side of this page that i like the best
>
> at thetop it says, inside of pencil-drawn > rectangles; "Dina H." and "spelling test"
>
> in the uper right corner in another rectangle
> is written; "March 30, 1979"
>
> in another hand at the top it says "-1"
>
> this is the text of the spelling test;
>
> 1. The was hit by an ax.
>
> 2. There are Six ducks in a box.
>
> 3. Mother Maks Cakes.
>
> 4. She looks Sad.
>
> 5. He Liks my new Socks.
>
> 6. The Sticks are big.

>next to the word "liks" in #5
>is written a small "e"

I was wondering what becam of that! I looked everywher for it. The breez must have carried it away on the last day of school. Could you pleas snail mail it back in my direction? Thanks.

Dina

↑ Index

128. Daniel Kane
Hear Lisa Jarnot read "Emperor Wu"
Tue 8 Jun 1999

Yes, this is possible if you have 5 minutes to download this terrific poem as a WAV file. Go to

http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_ljarnot.html

--daniel

↑ Index

129. Mark Melnicove
Re: Frost & found
Tue 8 Jun 1999

Actually it was Johnson, after taking a constitutionally-required <grin> glance in Kennedy's direction, who stood up to help Frost, though most people seem to remember that it was Kennedy. And yes, it was ineffectual (an omen of things to come?...) Frost's cry for help, "I'm not having a good light here at all," is one of the most poignant public declarations, with its unintended subtextual meanings, ever uttered by a poet, I do believe. Mark Melnicove

> *Frost: There's a couple of pages on the Frost poem in my Marginalization of Poetry, Chap 7. I do remember seeing Frost read the poem on TV when I was 14. No great insights: sunglare prevented him from reading the pages; Kennedy came over and stood by anxiously holding his top hat above the page as an ineffective shield; then Frost recited "The Gift Outright."*
>
> *Found: Most the words in 7 Works come from other texts. It's now way out of print, but about half will be reprinted in Ten to One, this fall.*
>
> *I can't remember if Ted Berrigan's white-out novel, Clear the Range, has been mentioned. It's a pure example of finding a text inside another.*

↑ Index

130. Mark Melnicove
Re: Reznikoff
Tue 8 Jun 1999

Re: Reznikoff bibliography
SAGETRIEB, vol. 11, no. 1/2, contains "The Community of Memory: A Reznikoff Family Chronicle," by M.A. Syverson (40+ pages) and "Facing the Fifties: A New Reznikoff Manuscript," by Robert Franciosi (10 pages).
SAGRETRIEB Vol. 13, no. 1/2 was a special Charles Reznikoff issue, almost entirely devoted to his work.

Mark Melnicove
National Poetry Foundation

> "neglected position[s]" :
>
> First, there is the Need (Black Sparrow Press, January 1977)
> The Manner Music (Black Sparrow Press 1977)
> Family Chronicle (Markus Wiener, 1988)
> By the Waters of Manhattan (Markus Wiener, 1986)
> Testimony: Recitative (New Directions 1965)
> Holocaust (Black Sparrow Press, 1965)
> By the Waters of Manhattan (New Directions, 1962)
> By the Well of Living and Seeing (Black Sparrow, 1974)
> Testimony, vols. 1 & 2 (Black Sparrow, 1978)
> Poems 1918-1936 (Black Sparrow, 1978)
> Poems 1937-1975 (Black Sparrow, 1978)
> Charles Reznikoff Man and Poet, ed. Milton Hindus
> (National Poetry Foundation, 1984)
>
> This is all I've got on my bookshelf. Charles made a lot of his own books and > those I suppose are all in the rare book rooms. What a wonderful website > those > early books would make, self-printed, handmade.
>
> One more chain in a set of refrain retain
> return to this is what it was about reading
> is a basic problem a simple point that has
> to be made at the beginning I saw nothing
> that I should not contradict nothing gainsay
> this is what I was telling you about what was
> I saying that it's a relief there's no longer
> anything to remember pretend it's inevitable
> that the musician go mad in The Manner Music
> how much does Reznikoff write himself into
> the composer who burns all his manuscripts
> in the park? We returned to the cafeteria.
>
> [from "The Sin of the Book" in COMMON KNOWLEDGE, > an unpublished "hot MS?" Or cold as ashes.]
>
> But it was Louis and not Charles a generation of poets built on among others > building SoundGardens inner-referring pounding out those lexicals you can > learn > in a linguist here and there, the drive being toward a proto hyper-text the > machines are now perfecting, though is it irony or the ironing out of > accent and > dialect--the same word spoken and broken many ways by many so many mouths > (National TV has had a hand here, standardizing speech, standardizing > (bleaching) English)--which characterizes a lot of the groundwork done by late 70s/early 80s avant garde furthered into now, the best and the worst, is it writtenness or spokenness? Charles was an ambulator, walked New York up and down like Benjamin's Charles, Marx and Engels ghosting both, "The crowd--no subject was more entitled to the attention . . . " (p. 120) flaneur "democratically compelled"? Reznikoff was also a camera worker, and maybe its the slow rhythm of his lens which has separated him from the attention given to Zukofsky. There's not the tight jamming of words end-nerves or pristine crystalline word and syllable musical maypole and mayhem that's in "A" and the shorter poems; rather slow and long and deliberate lines a lot of times, and all the anonymous faces that rise and speak among each other, many of them workers, and they are often most often slowly, lovingly observed, overheard, without a lot of intention, commentary, interference--it's something, really, how the figures of workers and the moving crowd are allowed to be let be in their beauty, vocal and visual, maybe the kind of photography Berlau would have found had she been able to have been found, also early documentary cinema, though it was watching a film shooting textiles and textile workers by Ernie Gehr that first made me think of Reznikoff's writing as camerawork, and I asked Ernie about it during the Q & A after the show and he said yes, he'd read Reznikoff. Well, if Ernie has, why aren't we? And by we I mean anybody writing poetry and thinking about the working class, and it's all right if you weren't born there, Benjamin in that French camp spoke about the proletarianization of the Jews ("a city of labor" is what some German administrative documents have been found planning the Warsaw Ghetto), and "Ghetto" recurs among Reznikoff's words and titles, the New York Jewish Ghetto, though a waitress emerges somewhere saying "honey chile", there's all sorts of common laborers in these poems, and Testimony like Holocaust is a masterpiece of often raw archival footage. Reznikoff reads as well besides Jabes as he does Stevens, for different reasons, a neglected modernist? Or proletarian poet waiting to be found for a new generation just coming to writing and needing him now, he is needed now, sometimes it takes a long time. Has the proletariat been a prohibited content? Reznikoff can show you how to listen and to look, how to see them and film them slowly, lovingly, without hurry, or irony.

>
> Stephen Vincent wrote:
>
> In case you did not see it, there's a lovely piece in this past Sunday's NY Times about Ann Hamilton (sculptor/installation artist) that she is > preparing > for the United States Pavilion for this summer's Venice Biennale. She is most > well known for the use of simple materials and subtle means to create large public works invested with both historical and contemporary resonance. Interestingly this piece will draw on the works and ideas of several American > writers. For example, and with some curious, but perhaps wonderful irony ? given his much neglected position in 20th century writing ? the "gallery walls will be covered in a Braille translation of passages from Charles Reznikoff's 'Testimony: The United States 1885 - 1915'".

> It's almost sweet that a writer, so democratically compelled and pretty much ignored, will have his work risen - albeit somewhat disguised ? to a public apex in the international art world. It's probably still too much to hope that Venice will be the means by which Reznikoff will be welcomed 'back home'.
> The article also mentions other writers Ann Hamilton has drawn from for guidance or advice for influential sources including: Ann Carson, Susan Stewart and Ann Lauterbach. From the article's description, omens are that the piece ? called "Myein" ? will be a great one
>
> Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

131. Dodie Bellamy
catsitting in SF
Tue 8 Jun 1999

Hi--

Kevin and I will be out of town for a week beginning this Sunday (the 13th). I know it's a little late to ask--but does anybody know anybody who'd like to stay in our apartment in San Francisco's South of Market district and feed two demanding cats?

Thanks.

Dodie

↑ Index

132. Stephen Ellis
Re: the flip of context
Tue 8 Jun 1999

But then, accordingly, anticipation (of audience) seems "not uncritical" and "provocative" in itself - but of what "order", esp taken in terms of actual responses to the provocative anticipation any "other" might be sd to be approached with, before the fact? I mean is there really audience "present", or need for a speculated one, in order to respond to its supposed & future tensions, understandings & releases in the work one's doing in the present? Not that the present can't be spawned out of the speculative, or spent unfurling its inapparent terms, but, the thing abt an anticipated audience continues to throw me elsewise than mirrorward, seeing there less than enough of far too much to know very much about it. Them. Us. Or,

> From: "Patrick F. Durgin" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: the flip of context
> Date: Fri, 4 Jun 1999 20:55:21 -0500
>
> Not intending to be glib, let me propose that proposing such questions is > just the sort of thing I was refering to: necessarily abstract, you see.
> Although the hall of mirrors is apt, Jordan used the standing across the > crater analogy, or rather proposed it. I picked it up, in ensemble.
> Therefore, I think your question "Who is the 'efficacy' for?" is a > fascinating and difficult one. For instance, if this whole little > speculative tiff came out of Notley's comments in the Combo 3 interview, as > I recall (?), an interesting thing to do would be to consider the > poetician's sense of anticipated audience, while she or he proceeds to > fashion her or his argument so as to issue most freely and provocatively > through this audience. Of course, the audience is never uncritical, and > this is where cross-propositions come into play and generate "context" -- > there is no REASON such a context should thereby cordon itself. Despite a > lot of younger, experimental writers' notions that it inevitably does.
> This is my sense, anyhow.
> Patrick
>
> At 04:45 AM 6/4/99 PDT, Stephen Ellis wrote:
> Reading the Davis/Durgin correspondence, many tangential and rather less
> abstract questions come to "mind" (if that's not being perhaps nominally > overly optimistic ...), like
> Efficacy in terms of what?
> What are the propositions?
> What do they propose in terms of politics?
> What's to be effected?
> How does the effected effect effect anything political, in what "sphere"?
> Who is the "efficacy" for?
> To whom are "proposals" to be addressed?
> Is it all just in one big self-reflective house of mirrors &/or cards
> that > the whole argument "takes place"? (Ah ... the lovely and familiar "it" motif

again ...) As in fact, what IS

"the argument"? A parsing of consciousness itself, so as to make its otherwise smothering protoplasmic theosophic "body" look to be more the familiar bite-sized sequence of pieces we all might more easily accustom ourselves to? Or, in terms of sheer etiquette

at the level of more alarmingly "rapid" shifts of consciousness, may I ask, what do you do when you can't remember the word for "rug"?

SE

From: "Patrick F. Durgin" <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: the flux of context
Date: Wed, 2 Jun 1999 22:47:40 -0500

At 04:56 PM 6/1/99 -0400, Jordan Davis wrote:

But what is so impossible to think term
about "poetry"?
.. . . it's just games, sets, relations.

Okay, but without proposals, I think I meant, and proposals are our business, our wares, such relations are unlike poetry-bytes.
Cross-propositions might be a preferable term for "games, sets, relations."
Poetry signifies too many or too little, depending on the company one keeps.

In re: "efficacy" I think we are standing across
the crater from oeach ether. I am acting as inaudible interpreter of rumblings across generational strata.
We are hearing "why no politics." I would rather not say "but yes politics!" I would rather say "what means why no politics." I have a quiet feeling that this is another chance for generational call and response
invite to Freuddance. We'll see!

Another proposal may be to carefully elaborate the divide by means

> of > registering efficacy in light of, you nailed it, the suck of context.
> You
> one nifty public correspondant. Don't be so quiet about it.
> Patrick
>
> _____
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

133. Stephen Ellis
Re: fewer mind
Tue 8 Jun 1999

Solving for x = "finding out the deal", meaning I presume, there's meaning "in the air"? But to what extent can this be held to several sheets of paper? Doesn't it simply "lift" after about ten minutes? And in terms of this problem, what is, and is the function of, gravity? It sure doesn't seem the lead pipe cinch upon wch the earth, so they said as we were told, was centered in 1963. What happens? Or 'happened', to put it in human lifetime terms?

SE

> From: Jordan Davis <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: fewer mind
> Date: Fri, 4 Jun 1999 16:45:03 -0400
>
> Efficacy in terms of what?
>
> Solve for x.
>
> What are the propositions?
>
> Poems, or, texts. That which is presented as a poem, or as poetry.
>
> What do they propose in terms of politics?
>
> Investigation, argument, engagement, sabotage, bells, whistles.

What's to be effected?

Hey that not standard. You mean what will it do? It will do the we are watching. Sort of a strawberry statement.

How does the effected effect effect anything political, in what "sphere"?

Hey that not standard. Colonial vocab, ha? How does anything have an effect, reiteration. Effect is usually accidental, a mistake, soemthing happens. You think a while, you rest, you have the thought, or you don't.

Who is the "efficacy" for?

Whomever wants to find out the deal.

To whom are "proposals" to be addressed?

Whomever is dealing. Plus the home audience.

Is it all just in one big self-reflective house of mirrors &/or cards that the whole argument "takes place"? (Ah ... the lovely and familiar "it" motif
again ...)

Only if you don't look at IT.

As in fact, what IS

"the argument"? A parsing of consciousness itself, so as to make its otherwise smothering protoplasmic theosophic "body" look to be more the familiar bite-sized sequence of pieces we all might more easily accustom ourselves to? Or, in terms of sheer etiquette

Please no bite-sized sequence of pieces of my "body". Otherwise sounds good sounds like Whalen. Instead of follow the money or follow the paper follow the mind. But also follow the paper follow the money.

at the level of more alarmingly "rapid" shifts of consciousness, may I ask,
what do you do when you can't remember the word for "rug"?

> So far I enjoy that, today I couldn't remember "promiscuous." Ron Padgett's essay on mixing up "grapefruit" with "pineapple". Or when you call the rectangle on the floor a "toupee." I guess read some Oliver Sacks?
>
> Hope you're well,
> Jordan

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

134. Alan Sondheim

Budi: Fragment

Tue 8 Jun 1999

> .<

Budi: Fragment

Brawned MassIve Tissu Hunger for Yu to Be Swallow
Contents:
  Bud
You take Budi.
It's already open.
You already have that!
  Bud
Wet Leaf Thing and Pnk Flesh
You drop Budi.
You Do SwaLo Budi Flesh-Tungu
You Do Thik Tungu fissure in sWole Throte

          Do Thik Pnk Tungu sWole Throte Nikkkukkk
You say, "I do think thnkkk that"
                Thikkk Pnkkk Tungu

        thIkku sWole gLans tuuuuuuuuuuuuuunGUuuuu tHuku
You say, "   I am do Pnkkk Tungu" llllast tYme my Nikkkukkkko to goDbyoo Nu Nikuko iS trU sWole gLans glAss

_____

↑ Index

135. Dodie Bellamy
SF summer prose workshop
Wed 9 Jun 1999

I'll be leading a 10-week private prose workshop starting in a couple of weeks--probably the only private workshop I'll have time for this year. There's still room for one or two people. Cheap.

Backchannel for details.

Dodie

↑ Index

136. Kevin Magee
Re: OBIT IN MOTION
Wed 9 Jun 1999

Out in the swamp they made great ceremony over the mule. They mocked everything human in death. Starks led off with a great eulogy on our departed citizen, our most distinguished citizen and the grief he left behind him, and the people loved the speech. It made him more solid than building the schoolhouse had done. He stood on the distended belly of the mule for a platform and made gestures. When he stepped down, they hoisted Sam up and he talked about the mule as a school teacher first. Then he set his hat like John Pearson and imitated his preaching. He spoke of the joys of mule-heaven to which the dear brother had departed this valley of sorrow; the mule-angels flying around; the miles of green corn and cool water, a pasture of pure bran with a river of molasses running through it; and most glorious of all, No Matt Bonner with plow lines and halters to come in and corrupt. Up there, mule-angels would have people to ride on and from his place beside the glittering throne, the dear departed brother would look down into hell and see the devil plowing Matt Bonner all day long in a hell-hot sun and laying the raw-hide to his back.

from Zora Neale Hurston, Their Eyes Were Watching God, p.57

COMBUNCTION

Run off sure enough, depend on you
It was mass cruelty

The dream is the truth up the road towards way off
They act and do

Words walking without masters
New ones would have to be made and said

Alphabet, don't you know
They got me up in they mouth

They got a name to gnaw on
They don't come kiss and named me names

Now they got to look into me loving sanctum beglamored whispery wide pearl stone palm walk switches raped and raked and scraped

You don't even know where the ham is at a cook-pot text on/off got in quotation, a green and an orange rolling in blue lacy be like the sun the day

Maybe if somebody was to show me how words float around in thought and thought on sound wrongside throbbing calm, lemonade swabbed protolapsis Ocala crayon

The sisters got mock happy
She slept with authority in the town mind and the town bowed down and passed around the pictures of their thoughts

Everyone indulged in Mule Talk
The age, its disposition and his caper

passle of the world for a carcass or a canvas
Sam or Walter or some of the other

Big Picture Talkers
Some folks spelt from what she knew about

Everybody was going to the dragging-out writing off the offending hand like a hen on a hot brick

A war of defense for helpless things
A Free Mule in town was something new to yak about rawbony back, he almost got fat

New lies sprung up about his Free Mule doings and the grief he left behind him

Our departed citizen, our most distinguished citizen, speak to us of the joys of Mule Heaven, sky of rye and a river of molasses

Here he was just pouring honor all over her
They were holding a flying-meet way up over the heads of the mourners and her hair was NOT going to show

It was a contest in hyperbole and carried on
She was a wind on the ocean orange grove, Post Office too

↑ Index

137. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy boundary 2 Apologies for Cross Posting

Wed 9 Jun 1999

---

boundary 2 99 Poets/1999: An International Poetics Symposium a special issue edited by Charles Bernstein volume 26 number 1 spring 1999 Duke University Press ISSN 0190-3659 281 pages $12

From the introduction: Quote Starting in 1997, with the help of several coeditors, I asked poets from around the world to respond to a series of interrelated questions … Do you see your work in the context of a national state, or in the context of international capital, or in some other context (including imaginary or imagined ones)? Is identity an important issue for your work, and if so, in what senses? For me, these issues have a specific connection to the possibilities or impossibilities for poetic language (so often identified with specific groups, states, or classes): diction, vernacular, dialect, sound, syntax, and so forth. … I asked one alternative question: What do you see as the most urgent, yet insufficiently recognized, or addressed, issue or issues for poetry and poetics at this moment? Unquote

These open-ended provocations resulted in a substantial resource. There's a great deal to think about and enjoy over time, but here are some snippets to be going on with.

Quote I am interested in what confines each generation inside themes, metaphors, theoretical and stylistic attitudes. I imagine the passion of the language that is allowed to escape from this. The turbulence that cracks open history. The desire that consumes the common places. I imagine the interior urgency that forces the liquidation of an era's truisms. Unquote Nicole Brossard If this isn't inspiring, I don't know what is.

In a piece which purports to be a description of the experience of standing at a bus stop, cris cheek seduces the reader into exploring possible ways in which the text is being constructed, by the writer and the reader. A kind of Heraclitean exploration in which the reader cannot dip into the same text twice.

Seeking to learn lessons from the more adventurous spirits in advertising, Jerome Sala writes Quote This is the genre of ad that you see more and more of these days which, in order to sell its products, trashes advertising itself, and its long history of hype. … one can't help but wonder if there isn't something poetry could learn from this strategy devised by its prodigal sons and daughters whom, cultural critics often argue, are squandering the riches of their verbal inheritance in the foreign land of the commodity - that barbarian locale to which most poets deny their citizenship). After all, hasn't there been too much inflated hype about poetry? And haven't its own promoters, poets and literary theorists been complicit in a sin any advertising creative director will warn you against - that of the "overpromise"? Does so much really depend upon a red wheelbarrow? Can it possibly carry the weight of historical profundity you'd like to place in it? Unquote. A mini manifesto embodying some of these fiery proposals follows.

Johanna Drucker has edited a visual poetry section, for which she has written a very useful introduction. One of these, by Steve McCaffery, struck me straightaway: a row of 20 a's, typewritten so the line isn't quite straight, followed by same row overtyped on a row of b's followed by same row overtyped on a row of c's and so on for 26 rows. The increasing density of ink is extraordinarily expressive. Contrast this with the palindromic arrangements of Alexandr Bubnov, formally beautiful in the fascinatingly lifeless way of a periodic crystal.

Being the responses of poets they sometimes decline the more glacial academic tones:

Quote Present day manifestations of 'the Russian Avant Garde' seem to me to be unconscionably conformist in their aspiration, with a ludic aim of 'arranging' a civilized hell. One may be obliged to live in hell but that doesn't mean one has to accept it as something necessary and indisputable. Unquote Gennady Aygi

Quote Spanish poetry is characterized by its lack of critical rigor its inward-looking nature. Cesar A. Molina has described Spanish poets as a group of whining mourners buried in their own traditionalism & social neorealism, all the while engaging in endless navel gazing. Manuel Brito

Form and technical questions receive considerable attention. Quote COLLAGE, its core innovation, foreseen by Lautreamont late in the previous one. It cut the time lines, taught us a new history, and yet is also graft, a rearrangement of arborescent structures, trees as always already roots / trunk / branches, even when cut and rearranged, say branches / trunk / roots, the heavenly tree grows downward in polarities we can no longer afford, if we ever could. Unquote Pierre Joris.

Quote The destitution of the essence of poetry largely results from our excessive attention to the phenomenal part of poetry. And most of us who are now interested in form have arrived at this interest by way of a revision of the past, when the content was overemphasized. The art of poetry, if standing on either side of the extremes, cannot possibly develop in any significant way. To me, as a poet devoted to the revolution of form, with mature conditions and enough talent, I would transcend the phenomena of poetry and march directly toward the essence. Unquote Che Qianzi

Quote By hybridising, I don't mean a mixing, or a production of a third-party alternative from a set of specific material. A hybrid is not a possible next stage in a developmental sense, nor a 'dilution' of the component parts! Nor is it a fusing of traditions. It is, in fact, a conscious undoing of the codes that constitute all possible readings of a text. It is a debasement of the lyrical I … It recognises frames for what they are: empty shells. Unquote John Kinsella

The question of translation is a living presence:
Quote Thinking and translating are for me almost synonymous words. Unquote Nelson Ascher

Issues of identity and politics recur, an interesting context given by Robin Blaser. Quote the serious or ramshackle poet in us hasn't a chance at being apolitical, even if the elf of his or her language wishes to be. Unquote

Quote There is another kind of experience I sometimes have when reading the words of authors who never imagined that someone like me might be included in the potential audience for their work, as when I read in Cirlot's Dictionary of Symbols that a "Negro" symbolizes the beast in the human. When I read words never meant for me, or anyone like me - words that exclude me, or anyone like me, as a possible reader - then I feel simultaneously my exclusion and my inclusion as a literate black woman, the unimagined reader of the text. Unquote Harryette Mullen.

There are some very useful historical surveys, essays and mini-anthologies, from a wide number of different countries. You'll find some idiosyncratic (perhaps the least power centred of the 'cracies) pieces which avoid categorisation

Quote: Nothing for the magician is accidental / All that could possibly happen to the magical prop is intrinsic to it and knowing "all that" (could possibly happen) to the prop is what constitutes a magician's knowledge / The event is the adventure of that moment Unquote Lyn Hejinian

What do you want me to say? It's a huge book and I'll be reading it, with pleasure, anger and inspiration, for years. I've omitted loads because any time I've tried to skim through for an overview I keep sinking in one or other entrancing contribution. Marvelous stuff.

Randolph Healy

Visit the Sound Eye website at:
http://indigo.ie/~tjac/sound_eye_hme.htm

↑ Index

138. christopher t funkhouser hss fac/staff

new NEWARK REVIEW: _ALLAH MEAN EVERYTHING! Thus Spake Amiri Baraka_

Wed 9 Jun 1999

A n n o u n c i n g

NEWARK REVIEW Volume 2, set 4:

_ALLAH MEAN EVERYTHING!
Thus Spake Amiri Baraka_

A long prose-poem in two parts, with a drawing by the author (Amiri Baraka), comprises the latest issue of _NEWARK REVIEW_.

http://megahertz.njit.edu/~newrev/v2s4

*

"Everything is the one, the whole, to understand this is what holiness means. It is the hoarders of the earth, who grasped the earth's flowers like what we had been before climbing the mighty tree, and so could see the sky, could see the sea where we had been, could look down on the ground and declare ourselves, finally, more than it. But they who carried the earth with them, like the dead, were buried under it, took dirt with them, even as the women taught the rest of us, how to stand up straight, and dig the scattered eyes of stars of the other part of our wholeness, where surely we would go and be."

*

"Nero means black, was he like Stuff Smith You been to Cambodia, Satchmo whole family up on the side of the mountains."

*

"And the world had changed. They said Pain Pain Pain, the other half of The mask. They could have all they need but they had not learned how to ask. Nor to bathe. That's bad they said, We Bad said we. Nature had put on different clothes everywhere new eyes for your nose. It is our home, not a forest but a garden. And the animals the women taught To be with us, give us milk, and honey, and clothes and food, no longer Must we roam the forests everyday, for a mouth full of food the only pay."

*

"It must remain a mystery for a few to rule the many. For the hundreds to rule the billions. Everything is a mystery except you got to go to work so you can remain poor and never understand much. Go through the world and never under stand a thing. Except you got to go to work. Go to church all your life and never understand. It's a fraud, a vicious joke. There is Evil and there is good, but not no God and they who say they know God worship the Devil."

*

"If Dahmer kept a diary it would be a holy book for Cannibals."

*

NEWARK REVIEW, edited by Chris Funkhouser, is published by the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences at New Jersey Institute of Technology. email: [redacted]

Back issues available online: http://megahertz.njit.edu/~newrev

Vol. 2, set 1: Jacob Rabinowitz, Enid Dame, Burt Kimmelman, Joel Lewis, Betsy Robin Schwartz, Bob Rixon, Mark Smith, Nancy Steffen-Fluhr, Nikki Stiller, T. Degnan West, Ed Smith, Bill O'Sullivan

Vol. 2, set 2: David Rothenberg / _The Zone_

Vol. 2, set 3: Elisa Biagini, Sandra Cassey, Cara Mia Ciasulli, Alex Cigale, Andy Clausen, Norbert Elliot, Lisa Fitton, Gina Hertel, Flora Higgins, Barry Jackson, Richard Loranger, Ben Polsky, Holli Schorno, Jim Smethurst, Ed Smith, George Taylor

↑ Index

139. Ron Silliman

Stein review

Wed 9 Jun 1999

After being down for several hours, the NY Times website returned, with the following excellent review of a play on Gertrude Stein:

http://www.nytimes.com/yr/mo/day/news/arts/gertrude-stein.html

Ron

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

140. Alan C Golding
Total Syntax, and thanks
Wed 9 Jun 1999

I'm afraid I've forgotten who it was who was looking for a copy of Total Syntax (the whole book, presumably)--but if you backchannel me with an address, I can send you a decent xerox copy that I have sitting around--not quite the real thing, I know . . .

And thanks to everyone who responded with suggestions re my "Poetry and Pedagogy" inquiry: I'm working with a number of your ideas for poems.

Alan

_____

Alan Golding
University of Louisville

[redacted]

↑ Index

141. Billy Little
Re: Reznikoff
Wed 9 Jun 1999

didn't Reznikoff write some labor history as well?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

142. Poetics List
call for work - read.me / Sullivan
Wed 9 Jun 1999

this came to the administrative account. Chris

From: "Gary Sullivan" <[redacted]>
Date: 6/9/99 12:49 PM -0400

r e a d . m e

What: read.me is a new journal of mostly interviews, some essays, reviews & appreciations
Where: online, via http://www.columbia.edu/cu/history/detour/readme; elsewhere (stores, at readings in NYC, etc.) in hardcopy
When: Fall 1999, to continue quarterly thereafter
Why: We like interviews & there's not a lot out there, especially of younger poets/artists
Who: You, you & all of you

We are especially looking for INTERVIEWS with younger poets, writers & artists. The first issue will include an appreciation of the life/writing of the late Daniel Davidson, an interview with Alan Sondheim, a piece on John Wieners by Jack Kimball & more ... Please send proposals, completed interviews, essays, reviews, appreciations, &/or books for review to:

readme.txt
558 11th Street, #1B
Brooklyn, NY 11215
email: [redacted]

↑ Index

143. Alan C Golding
Job Opening
Wed 9 Jun 1999

We've had two last-minute one-year asst. professorships come open at the University of Louisville. 3/3 load, Ph.D. and teaching experience required, a range of undergraduate comp and lit teaching. Letter, vita, dossier to Debra Journet, Chair, Dept. of English, Univ. of Louisville, Louisville, KY 40292 by 6/30. Feel free to drop my name, as long as you don't break it.

Lisa Samuels, whom many of you know, had one of these jobs last year and I think was pretty happy here. I don't know what the salary is but the company's charming and L'ville is a cheap and livable city.

Alan

Alan Golding
University of Louisville
[redacted]

↑ Index

144. Rodrigo Toscano
KRUPSKAYA PRESS
Wed 9 Jun 1999

KRUPSKAYA is pleased to announce the publication of its first four books.

All books are available through Small Press Distribution, Berkeley. To order call toll free: [redacted], in the Bay Area call [redacted] or [redacted]

Steven Farmer _Medieval_ 128 pages, $9, ISBN 1-928650-00-7 "The real deal, Steven Farmer's poetry has been read and listened to closely with delight by other California poets for at least 17 years. A major book is long, long overdue. He has a superb Western ear, a classic sense of line and stanza, a subtle mind that knows precisely what it sees and understands (and, even more rare, the ability to articulate that which it cannot) and a wry wit that makes it very difficult indeed to read these pages without a smile. The balance and turns in these poems makes me dizzy with envy." -Ron Silliman

Dan Farrell _Last Instance_ 61 pages, $9, ISBN 1-928650-01-5 "In Last Instance, Dan Farrell poses the relations between social reproduction and expression through stuttered and sutured acts of composition. His historically located and disclosed forms clash and mingle with social evidence, instigating transpositions at the level of the letter, syntactical order, and semantic sensibility. Rather than hailing the ruse of subjective plenitude and unfettered expressivity, his compositions rely on perlocutionary acts engaging language in its nonreferential capacity to elicit and provoke action and response." -Nancy Shaw

Elizabeth Fodaski _fracas_ 78 pages, $9, ISBN 1-928650-02-3 "Elizabeth Fodaski's fracas grabs attention, then holds, examines, and explodes the attentions it attracts. This work is both elegant and playful, sardonic and amused. A din, a brawl, a noisy quarrel. It instructs, implores, and navigates a level of writerly inquiry that's a joy to encounter. From the heady, generative tumble of "Flood Watching" to the studied and gorgeous language of "Paper Daybreak" and "ETYMOLOGIES," fracas rocks." -Jessica Grim

P. Inman _at. least._ 102 pages, $9, ISBN 1-928650-03-1 "Hardly anything seems strange enough anymore- "reality. as. a. normative. effect," -at least P. Inman still works the front lines. With evidence shimmer, no things but in letters & space & punctuation, politically paying off perforation. This arranges tantalizing raw (& V-effected) materials for us to construct (& live in) a life, a milieu. With zero bluster- "language. larger" -contra code everywhere, a clip-o-matic audacity & atomic redlining to thrill. . . . Not to complacently cooperate with a fetish or impress with imagery & optic sugaring, not to wield massageish 'content' to represent something already built, an institutionalized titanic humanizing the pin-ups or invoice behavior as contentment as containment. The already is uninhabitable. Let's de boss!" -Bruce Andrews

For information about KRUPSKAYA (not ordering), please contact Rodrigo Toscano, [redacted] or Jocelyn Saidenberg, [redacted]

Rodrigo Toscano

↑ Index

145. pete spence
Re: Boris Vian & Serge Gainsbourg reading/music/video event
Wed 9 Jun 1999

Jacques Debrot if you could e-mail me sooner or very sooner/pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

146. Kevin Magee
Re: BARAKA'S ALLAH / June 12 Event Announcement
Wed 9 Jun 1999

From Cleveland's "Events & Reviews, News for Readers from Mac's Backs June 1999":

"Poetry Duet. Saturday, June 12 at 7 p.m. Last year poets Albertine Boclear and Kevin Magee gave a fine reading, an intimate expression of their relationship with words and each other. They will be back for an encore performance, trading poems and stories."

Some form of an introduction is in order.

In a better world, the red carpet (flag!) will be rolled out for every writer arriving from the working class, especially for every writer arriving by way of the Trade Unions.

Albertine Boclear returns to Mac's Backs this Saturday after 20-plus years first as a line worker at a GE plant organized by the UAW, and then as an operator for Ohio Bell/Ameritech organized by the CWA.

Born and raised in Cleveland, Albertine started writing several years ago after enrolling in Capital University's Adult Education Program here, and is currently working on a first book of poems and a first book of short stories. As a teenager, after hearing his Ballot or the Bullet Speech, she walked up to Malcolm X standing with a few supporters on the sidewalk in a once-Muslim district of Cleveland, who held her hand for a moment and asked her about herself; she served one year in the Breakfast for Children auxillary of the Black Panthers; and then raised three children of her own.

Will Alexander's crucial intervention at the 1993 New Coast Conference i.e., "Why aren't there any women of color here?" echoed by Renee Gladman at the Page Mamas, as reported by Kevin Killian, on the subject of anthologies and minorities and representation (it's not about affirmative action, but social justice), are not addressed perhaps as much at the organizers of conferences and editors of anthologies as they are at the larger (tremendous) problem of institutional frameworks like the University reflected recently on this list in a passing (symptomatic) reference by a bourgeois feminist i.e., "I don't mean to rehearse Poetry 101 here."

As if Poetry 101 were a space that could be taken for granted. As if everyone who arrives at the Art of Poetry has the privilege to register for Poetry 101.

Class dynamics. The essays by Lorenzo Thomas and Maria Damon in CLOSE LISTENING provide important counter-positions to the problems posed by the space called Poetry 101. What powerful social and economic mechanisms dictate who gets to sit in what precious space whether called workshop or art school.

Albertine as I'm leaving (re Event Note: Transcendental Friend's First Anniversary), "I've got feelings too."

ALTAR
  for Stephen Jonas

She
that morning star so unlike those that sovereign the night slumps against stone whiteness inlaid with glass blocks.
Her faith as wide and firm
all day she lives on them from a coarse hewn weather grained leather used hued smooth valise wrapped in a tatty shawl.
Diaphanous gauze against chrome air.

Hyacinths melt in her hand flowerings from 8 summers ago of late May rain.

Continues hallucinated even though she looked full upon him blue dry and hissing each syllable erect unripe fruit firm and tastes the last supper memory in her mouth weight as a garment vigils for the next breaking of bread.

With gilded face cleft by cleft beneath a touch of plumped toque astray beneath a touch of paisley round her neck comes solemnly to the well.
Each sun's revolution defines this phase
no different than the rest holds hope.
I mumble to myself on paper mute.
She to herself on street corners articulate.
Dialogues diverse dialects between me and She.

Albertine Boclear
[redacted]

↑ Index

147. derek beaulieu / house press

new: mclennan's "the wiser" and whitehead's "Kokopelli"

Wed 9 Jun 1999

---

housepress is pleased to announce the release of 2 new chapbooks in our chapbooks series:

rob mclennan's "the wiser"
- a series of landscape poems gathered in a handbound numbered edition of 50 copies. $4.00 ea.

ron whitehead's "kokopelli" - a long poem by the poet that allen ginsberg called a "energetic bodhsattvic poetic spirit". handbound edition of 50 numbered copies printed on southwark 24lb watermarked 25% cotton paper with linocut front and back covers by derek beaulieu. very few copies - please contact the housepress for more information.

either of these books may be ordered thru housepress at:
[redacted]

yrs
derek beaulieu
housepress

↑ Index

148. Brian Stefans
The Naif and the Bluebells: full version live
Thu 10 Jun 1999

The full version of my web-poem, along with much new material (two full Saroyan books, Hausmann sound files, etc.), is now at Kenneth Goldsmith's ubu site, which can be reached at:

http://www.ubu.com

There are some problems with the html which make it look pretty horrible on a Mac, and until we get this fixed, Mac users can check out the full version at:

http://www.bway.net/~arras

Some notes: -- only 4.0+ browsers will be able to get through the full version as some of the javascripts will not work (I haven't had the time or resources to debug on all browsers, and not even sure if they will work on 3.0) -- if you are running a 4.0+ browser and get a script error, then the files (most likely the images) haven't fully downloaded; let the files finish and then inter-activate -- remember that the files are cached, so you can look at it again later at a much quicker speed (provided you don't clear you cache) -- there are some embedded tricks in the pages, such as mouse-activated java poems, clickable areas in the images and text masses, etc., that you should watch out for, but don't crazy with it -- if nothing's happening, then nothing's there (hint: the black dots always work eventually) -- re: "Atlanta", I take what appears a dig at Atlanta, but I really do like what's happening there, the poetry group and the ideas; read the "Credits" page to gather what I mean

The poem is dedicated to Kenny and Cheryl's new baby, Finnegan Francis Donegan Goldsmith, born this past Friday, May 29th.

↑ Index

149. Lowther,John
HEADLINES
Thu 10 Jun 1999

---

these sent to me by a friend, Dana Lustig

_____

funny, even if it is 2 years old...

THE BEST HEADLINES OF 1997 ARE.....

Include Your Children when Baking Cookies
Something Went Wrong in Jet Crash, Expert Says
Police Begin Campaign to Run Down Jaywalkers Safety Experts Say School Bus Passengers Should Be Belted Drunk Gets Nine Months in Violin Case
Survivor of Siamese Twins Joins Parents Iraqi Head Seeks Arms
Prostitutes Appeal to Pope
Panda Mating Fails; Veterinarian Takes Over British Left Waffles on Falkland Islands Lung Cancer in Women Mushrooms Eye Drops Off Shelf
Teachers Strike Idle Kids
Clinton Wins on Budget, But More Lies Ahead
Enraged Cow Injures Farmer With Axe Plane Too Close to Ground, Crash Probe Told Miners Refuse to Work after Death
Juvenile Court to Try Shooting Defendant Stolen Painting Found by Tree
Two Sisters Reunited After 18 Years in Checkout Counter Killer Sentenced to Die for Second Time in 10 Years Never Withhold Herpes Infection from Loved One War Dims Hope for Peace
If Strike Isn't Settled Quickly, It May Last a While Cold Wave Linked to Temperatures
Deer Kill 17,000
Enfields Couple Slain; Police Suspect Homicide
Red Tape Holds Up New Bridges
Typhoon Rips Through Cemetery; Hundreds Dead Man Struck By Lightning Faces Battery Charge
New Study of Obesity Looks for Larger Test Group
Astronaut Takes Blame for Gas in Spacecraft Kids Make Nutritious Snacks
Chef Throws His Heart into Helping Feed Needy
Arson Suspect Held in Massachusetts Fire
Ban on Soliciting Dead in Trotwood
Local High School Dropouts Cut in Half Hospitals are Sued by 7 Foot Doctors

↑ Index

150. Pritchett,Patrick
query
Thu 10 Jun 1999

Does anyone an email, snailmail, or phone number for Joseph Lease?
Please backchannel - thanks.
Patrick Pritchett
[redacted]

↑ Index

151. Brian Stefans
Wang Ping's e-mail
Thu 10 Jun 1999

Does anyone have Wang Ping's e-mail address, or know of a way to reach her? I'd like to get some work by the poet Yan Li, who's in the anthology she's edited, for Arras.

Cheers,
Brian

↑ Index

152. Ron Starr
diastext
Thu 10 Jun 1999

Does anyone have or know where to find a program called DIASTEXT?

It implements a form of Mac Low's diastic text generation. I had a copy of it years ago, didn't transfer it to the new machine, and have (thus) lost it. Checking my usual net places to find such things hasn't turned it up.

Thank you in advance for any help.

- Ron Starr ([redacted])

↑ Index

153. Jacques Debrot
Re: Contact Info: Johanna Drucker
Thu 10 Jun 1999

Does anyone have an email, snailmail, or phone number for Johanna Drucker? If so, please backchannel.

Thanks in advance.

Jacques Debrot

↑ Index

154. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Thu 10 Jun 1999

In a recently published article by Annie Proulx, she is quoted as saying: . "I rarely use the internet for research, as I find the process cumbersome and detestable. The information gained is often untrustworthy and couched in execrable prose. It is unpleasant to sit in front of a twitching screen suffering assault by virus, power outage, sluggish searches, system crashes and the lack of direct human discourse." . I quite enjoyed this odd view of the internet and wondered if I could sell her some I.T. consultancy. Also I was entertained by the idea of power outages occurring, to such an extent that one could not complete a web search. . Everything else looks exaggerated to me, but I can only go on my experience of electrical supply in Europe. Serious question: to what degree is power outage a problem in America?. I don't know where she is based, but I hadn't thought that it was much of a problem in normal times i.e. outside of major storms and occasional accidents. But it would be useful to me because of something related I am looking into to know for sure. Tell me, this is largely junk, isn't it? . . Lawrence Upton

↑ Index

155. Patrick F. Durgin
Scott Keeney
Fri 11 Jun 1999

> Sorry for the interruption, but: Anyone got a contact for Scott Keeney?
>
> Thanks: Patrick F. Durgin

↑ Index

156. Alan Sondheim
THEFT ON PURLMOO BECAUSE #1 IS NOT UNIQUE
Fri 11 Jun 1999

.+.

THEFT ON PURLMOO BECAUSE #1 IS NOT UNIQUE

Bodee Lost in Bodee-Buda as Bodi Tre-Form Hells You see Bodei, Bedei, #934, #895, #1, Girl, Boy, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, #1, Bodee, Bedee, and Budi here. >> There is no text installed .... yet. You say, "Because someone has stolen my words. " You say, "Because someone has cut out my tongue." Nikuko knows Because of Bodi-Proliferation Do now With Me Nikuko knows Because #1 is not Unique Now Do FOLO O COME FRO I BODEE BOY You say, "Because of Whom and to and for Whom." You say, "Because My Mouth is a Running Sore"" You say, "Because Dead and Become" Nikuko says Still: Bodee Lost in Bodee-Buda as Bodi Tre-Form Hells You see Bodei, Bedei, #934, #895, #1, Girl, Boy, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, #1, Bodee, Bedee, and Budi here.

↑ Index

157. Katie Degentesh

THURSDAY, JUNE 17

Fri 11 Jun 1999

9x9 INDUSTRIES PRESENTS

VLAD POGORELOV, born and raised in the Ukraine, USSR, where he studied medicine before moving to Philadelphia. He currently writes and performs in both English and Russian. He is the poetry editor of Siren's Silence, a journal of literature and art. The author of _Derelict_ (Repossessed Head Publishing House), he currently resides in San Francisco.

and KLIPSCHUTZ, author of _The Good Neighbor Policy_ and _The Erection of Scaffolding for the Re-Painting of Heaven by the Highest Bidder_ (End of the Century Books). His work has also appeared in the LA Weekly, the San Francisco Poets Calendar, the Ed Norton Anthology, Black Buzzard Review, the Bad Attitude Anthology and many other books and magazines. He is a probationary member of the Vocational School of Poetry and a songwriting member of the Living Wrecks.

with special guest

SONIA WHITTLE, born and raised in New Rochelle, NY, finalist in the 1999 San Francisco and East Bay Slam Championships.

READING/PERFORMING AT Adobe Bookshop, Thursday, June 17, 1999 3166 16th St. (at Guerrero), San Francisco 8PM, FREE

COMING NEXT MONTH:

JUST LIKE SCHOOL, 9X9's Adobe Series will take a two-month summer vacation. See you in September.

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/

[redacted]

WE DON'T LIKE POEMS
THAT ARE LIKE POEMS!

WE WANT YOUR THURSDAY EVENINGS.

↑ Index

158. Billy Little
Re: SERIAL DIAGRAM
Fri 11 Jun 1999

There's a diagram of the serial poem in the back of the Collected Books of Jack Spicer edited by Robin Blaser p.358. It's part of the questionaire for Robert Duncan's workshop in Basic Techniques. Blaser says Spicer chose the spiral rather than the hierarchy when he came to answer for the "tree or Contellation" of poetry

DComerford asked:
>
>Has anyone ever come across a diagram of the serial form?
>I'm reading Conte's UNENDING DESIGN and working on the serial form in oz >poetry. One of oz's excellent cultural theorists, Stephen Muecke, >writing on the stories of an Aboriginal writer, Butcher Joe, writes that >the series is a "nomadological feature, like that of travelling through >the coutnry, one place after another, and a chain of stories, 'and then
>... and then ... and then'."
>
>The diagram I have in my mind when I attempt to illustrate (explain) the >serial poems I'm working with is a spiral. Now the spiral is very much >a part of the Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island >cultures....
>
>any thoughts?
>
>regards
>deb

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

159. rebecca wolff
Re: back issues of Fence
Fri 11 Jun 1999

Now that our third issue is out, I'd like to rid my house of our second issue.

So if you'd like a copy of Fence #2, with work in it by:

Jane Miller, Susan Wheeler, Elizabeth Robinson, Muriel Rukeyser, Rosmarie Waldrop, Molly Peacock, Brenda Hillman, Laura Mullen, Bruce Conner, John Yau, Brian Lennon, Mary Jo Bang, Charles Bernstein, Matthea Harvey, Geoffrey O'Brien, Noelle Kocot, Lee Ann Brown, Walid Bitar, Julia Slavin, C.D. Wright, Chris Stroffolino, and Donald Revell

Please send a check for $4 made out to Fence Magazine Inc. to:

Fence
14 Fifth Avenue, #1A
New York, NY 10011

Thanks.

↑ Index

160. Maryanne Del Gigante
(no subject)
Fri 11 Jun 1999

Lawrence

Tell me, this is >largely junk, isn't it?

Yup, tis

i have forged incredible ties, incredible learning through the net people who have given me a whole new way of seeing, thinking, and i wonder what is influencing Annie to have her say that the experience is negative mah!

(italian for 'who would know?")

MDG

↑ Index

161. KENT JOHNSON

Anthology re-issue

Fri 11 Jun 1999

Beneath a Single Moon: Buddhism in Contemporary American Poetry, ed. by Kent Johnson and Craig Paulenich, will soon be put back into print by Shambhala. The book will be available for order through the press and all major on-line sellers.

The book carries an introductory essay by Gary Snyder. Among the 45 poets included (most entries come accompanied by an essay): Steve Benson, Olga Broumas, John Cage, Alan Davies, Diane di Prima, Norman Fischer, Margaret Gibson, Allen Ginsberg, Susan Griffin, Sam Hamill, Jim Harrison, Michael Heller, Jane Hirshfield, Robert Kelly, Jackson Mac Low, George Quasha, Jed Rasula, Leslie Scalapino, Andrew Schelling, Armand Schwerner, Gary Snyder, Charles Stein, Lucien Stryk, Nathaniel Tarn, Anne Waldman, Philip Whalen. ---------- "Beneath a Single Moon makes for startling reading: it provides incontrovertible evidence as to the strength and richness of Buddhist thought, and especially of Buddhist practice, in contemporary American poetry. Our Buddhist poets, like Buddhism itself, are by no means all of a piece; it is their range and variety that is especially impressive. the individual essays by the poets themselves are especially helpful. This is an outstanding, scholarly anthology that should have wide readership." --Marjorie Perloff

"This intelligent anthology provides compelling evidence of a continuing preoccupation in American thought, from Emerson, Thoreau, and Whitman to the poets here represented. It is the human search for a locating home, transcendent yet literal, always here even if nowhere. The complexly common voices of these writers are an insistent call to our own need, to let go of our 'lives' and so live them."--Robert Creeley

"Vivid, diverse, multitudinous-- the poems gathered herein are both evidence and celebration of the wild flowering of Buddhism in America. A splendid collection."--Rick Fields, author of _How the Swans Came to the Lake: A History of Buddhism in America_

"We needed an extensive survey of the influence of Buddhism in contemporary American poetry, and this anthology generously fills that need."--Wendell Berry

↑ Index

162. Alan Sondheim

Re: your mail

Fri 11 Jun 1999

I've never had difficulties with power outtages or viruses - ever. But I do read my email in linux/unix which tends to be virus-proof - in fact you can dissect them nicely.

Re: searches - I advise people to look at http://www.google.com/ - things are getting better.

Re: writing style - she hasn't read mine - or yours - or or or... Some people just never learn.

No wonder she writes postcares.

Alan

http://www.anu.edu.au/english/internet_txt - partial mirror at http://lists.village.virginia.edu/~spoons/internet_txt.html co-moderator Cyberculture, Cybermind, Fiction of Philosophy (fop-l)

↑ Index

163. Poetry Project

Fwd: Sandbox #7 - PROTEST

Fri 11 Jun 1999

---------- Begin Forwarded Message ----------
Date: 06/10 5:04 PM
From: sylvie myerson, [redacted]
To: [redacted]

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS: SANDBOX #7 - PROTEST

http://www.sandboxarts.org

Sandbox, A Magazine of Creative & Subversive Play is currently looking for contributors for issue #7 on the theme of PROTEST. We are particularly interested in ideas such as “UNAUTHORIZED” use of physical public space by artists/activists as well as the APPROPRIATION AND ALTERATION OF IDEAS which are released into the public realm through media & advertising. We are looking for visual artists, performance artists, musicians,digital artists, filmmakers, writers and activists whose work encompasses these 2 ideas, creating art that weaves interaction and experimentation together with political content. This is a particularly hot topic for those of us who live in NYC under the Giuliani administration’s repressive “QUALITY OF LIFE” policy but we are also interested in looking beyond NY at what is going on elsewhere. Other related ideas might include: creating & preserving community gardens, recycling urban waste material to create artwork, sampling & altering work created by others, graffiti art, airwave piracy, hacking, satire & parody...

Please forward our call for submissions to anyone who might be interested. Contact our editor, Sylvie Myerson, asap if you have an idea for a project for this issue (article, interview, visuals, fiction, documentation of artistic project). The release of the magazine will be accompanied by a performance/installation event in the fall. All contributors will be invited to take part in the event and will receive 5 copies of the magazine.

DEADLINES: First draft - July 15th/Final draft - August 15th.

OTHER FORTHCOMING PROJECTS: - A Webzine release is also projected for the Fall of 1999. Any suggestions for original material or links to other relevant websites are appreciated.

- Magazine Issue #8 on the theme of SOUND is projected for Spring of 2000. PLease contact our office if you are interested in participating.

Sandbox Magazine
PO Box 150098
Brooklyn, NY 11215

The Magazine, Webzine & Performance/Installation events are projects of Sandbox Open Arts, a not-for-profit arts organization whose mission is to provide a forum for experimentation in the visual arts, the performing arts, the digital arts and literature with particular emphasis on interactive and multimedia work. Sandbox explores the connections between art, culture and society. Past issues of the magazine have featured: Spalding Gray, William Gibson, Sheree Rose & Bob Flanagan, Charles Gatewood, The Burning Man Festival, & Coney Island’s Sideshows by the Seashore.

The Magazine is available for sale in NYC at: Art Market, Blackout Books, St. Mark’s Books, Tower Books, Virgin Megastore, Coliseum Books, Untitled, Ear Wax, Ink, Beacon’s Closet, Pierogi 2000 & Printed Matter & The New Museum. Distributed in North America by Desert Moon, Ingram Periodicals & Printed Matter. (Also available directly from us by mail for $5 per copy).

---------- End Forwarded Message ----------

↑ Index

164. Poetry Project workshop reading
Fri 11 Jun 1999

On Wednesday, June 16th at 8 pm, a reading by participants of the Poetry Project's Spring 1999 Writing Workshops including:

Tracy Blackmer
Matthew Burgess
Jeffrey Burghauser
Samuel Claiborne
Jeanie Gosline
George Green
Tony Hoffman
Marc Kuykendall
Lisa Pasold
Marni Rice
Liz Young
Magdalena Zurawski
and other surprise guests

Workshop teachers were Larry Fagin, Lisa Jarnot, and Murat Nemet-Nejat

For more info, call [redacted]

↑ Index

165. Taylor Brady
Re: diastext
Fri 11 Jun 1999

Ron (and all),

Charles O. Hartman, author of DIASTEXT, has a web page at www.conncoll.edu/ccother/cohar. Last time I checked, the page had some free computer poetry software available for download, including a fairly interesting and easily hackable C program called MacProse - but it didn't include DIASTEXT. Unfortunately, I can't verify this right now, since either Hartman's page or the Microschlock browser they've saddled me with at work seems to be malfunctioning. (oh, never mind, just found the new URL: http://camel.conncoll.edu/ccother/cohar/programs/)

Other sites that might be of interest to you:

BIBLIOGRAPHY, LINKS, ETC. Marius Watz' page (a fairly comprehensive resource page on computer-generated/filtered text, from which most of the following links are taken): www.notam.uio.no/~mariusw/c-g.writing/

SOFTWARE DOWNLOADS
RoboPoet (fairly limited in terms of its syntax, etc., but interesting) www.ozemail.com.au/~kensea/

Mark V. Chaney V1.0 (a "probabilistic text generator based on Markov chains") http://www.notam.uio.no/~mariusw/c-g.writing/markv.zip

Babble (a "babble generator")
http://www.notam.uio.no/~mariusw/c-g.writing/bab200.zip

Deconstructor (apparently fairly crash-prone, so use w/ caution)
http://www.notam.uio.no/~mariusw/c-g.writing/Deconstructor.cpt.hqx

Text Mangler (another Markov chain-based program, this one filters and rearranges pre-existing texts)
http://www.notam.uio.no/~mariusw/c-g.writing/TextMangler_1.2.cpt.hqx

McPoet 5.0 (this is my favorite of the bunch, as its parameters are configurable without having to get into the actual code - takes a little work, and the default settings are pretty silly, but well worth a look):
http://hyperarchive.lcs.mit.edu/HyperArchive/Abstracts/text/mcpoet-50.hqx.ab s

Note that Robopoet, Mark V. Chaney and Babble are DOS programs. MacProse, Deconstructor, Text Mangler, and McPoet are for the Mac. Sorry I couldn't find DIASTEXT for you (though the basic procedure would be fairly easy to code in either C++ or VBA for Word), but perhaps one or two of these will be of some interest. Keep me informed, too, if you find DIASTEXT anywhere.

Best,
Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Ron Starr
Sent: Thursday, June 10, 1999 1:56 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: diastext

Does anyone have or know where to find a program called DIASTEXT?

It implements a form of Mac Low's diastic text generation. I had a copy of it years ago, didn't transfer it to the new machine, and have (thus) lost it. Checking my usual net places to find such things hasn't turned it up.

Thank you in advance for any help.

- Ron Starr ([redacted])

↑ Index

166. David Highsmith reply to Upton, RE : power outages
Fri 11 Jun 1999

Here in San Francisco we have local outages 2-3 times per year when neighborhhood transformers blow. We also have frequent blown fuses because the old apartment buildings and Victorians are riddled with old bad wiring and overloaded circuits. In addition to this we sometimes have dirty wiring, circuits in which the ground wire picks up a slight low voltage current which produces a buzz on the radio and sometimes a slight shock in the bathtub (circuits are grounded to cold water pipes). Presumably, the dirty circuits can decrease the lives of appliances. To guard against outages, I use an APC power conversion unit on my computer, which keeps it going about fifteen or twenty minutes when the power's blown. Another small problem to consider is telephone outages, which sometimes happen when rain gets into the unprotected outdoor junction boxes. All this aside, it's good to remember that libraries shut down too, all night, every night. And if your doing your research in a library, you'll probably use the Online Public Access Catalog to find your material, rather than "direct human discourse", which is usually discouraged anyway by stern librarians, who will glare at you while pointing to the sign on the wall that says, "No direct human discourse, please."

↑ Index

167. Tisa Bryant
Garrett Caples contact info
Fri 11 Jun 1999

---

does anyone have an e/snail/mail address for him?

if so, please send direct

thanks!

[redacted]

↑ Index

168. Poetics List
New Rain Taxi features Ashbery & Silko Interviews / Sullivan
Fri 11 Jun 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

From: "Gary Sullivan" <[redacted]>
Date: 6/11/99 12:54 PM -0400

Rain Taxi Review of Books Vol. 4 No. 2 is now available!

Interviews: John Ashbery (by Eric Lorberer); Leslie Marmon Silko (by Anna Reckin)

Features: Mary Hood (by Cris Mazza); J.L. Borges (by Robert Zaller, David Wiley & Chase Madar); Alexander Trocchi (by Michael Perkins); Writing Behind the Walls: Books on Prison Writing (by E. Lorberer, James Colvin, Arthur D. Seale, S.P. Healey, Brad Zellar, Michael Leville, Christopher Tinney and Josie Rawson)

Reviews of books by: Harry Smith (by Jason Kuykendall); Salvador Dali (by Anna Reckin); Kenji Nakagami (by Caroline Schnieders); Jena Osman (by E. Lorberer); Will Alexander (by Joel Felix); Ange Mlinko (by Juliet Patterson); Susan Gevirtz (by Gary Sullivan); Laura Mullen (by Kim Fortier); Bin Ramke (by Kelly Everding); Charles Bernstein (by Glenn Mott); Rosalind Krauss (by Carolyn Kuebler); Nan Goldin (by K. Everding); Clarence Major (by Jerome Klinkowitz); & many many more plus Adversaria (quotes courtesy of Sam Hamill) the next installment of my serialized cartoon, "The New Life" (second installment of the "Nada" story) by yours truly ... and lots more ... 54 big pages ...

Subscribe!

1 year (4 issues) $10; $16 international

Carolyn Kubler, Randall Heath & Eric Lorberer, eds.
Rain Taxi
PO Box 3840
Minneapolis, MN 55403
www.raintaxi.com
email: [redacted]

I have copies I can send to anyone otherwise unable to get one, email me at:
[redacted]

Have fun,

Gary

↑ Index

169. Poetics List
current list stats
Fri 11 Jun 1999

As of this afternoon. Chris

--

```
*  Country                Subscribers
*  -------              -----------
*  Australia                    15
*  Belgium                       2
*  Canada                       44
*  Finland                      1
*  Germany                       2
*  Great Britain                24
*  Ireland                      4
*  Italy                      1
*  Japan                       7
*  New Zealand                     11
*  Poland                      1
*  Singapore                     1
*  Spain                      2
*  Sweden                       4
*  Switzerland                   2
*  Thailand                     1
*  USA                      619
*  Yugoslavia                    1
*
* Total number of users subscribed to the list:    744
* Total number of countries represented:           18
```

↑ Index

170. Dana Lustig

Re: power outtages/searches & so forth

Fri 11 Jun 1999

In response to your question: to what degree is power outage a problem in America? That depends upon the area. Some cities are wired above ground, which makes them more prone to power outtages during storms or high winds. Here in Atlanta, it can happen frequently during the summer. However, you shouldn't be using the computer during a severe storm, so perhaps it's just the wiring in Ms. Proulx's building.

Re: search engines. I've made good use of Infoseek's Express product, which I believe can still be downloaded free from the Infoseek site. It simultaneously searches a combination of available search engines and reports back the results quickly (usually within 20 seconds or less) with a summary. I use it for research at work, and have found that it provides a much more complete listing than using a single search engine at a time. My only complaint is that there is no real advanced search criteria on Express, which means ocassionally scanning through a lot of useless links to find the stuff I really do want. I'm hoping they will upgrade the advanced search functionality, because otherwise it's an effective tool.

dana lisa

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: Author: [redacted] at Internet-USA
Date: 6/11/99 9:02 AM

In a recently published article by Annie Proulx, she is quoted as saying: . "I rarely use the internet for research, as I find the process cumbersome and detestable. The information gained is often untrustworthy and couched in execrable prose. It is unpleasant to sit in front of a twitching screen suffering assault by virus, power outage, sluggish searches, system crashes and the lack of direct human discourse." . I quite enjoyed this odd view of the internet and wondered if I could sell her some I.T. consultancy. Also I was entertained by the idea of power outages occurring, to such an extent that one could not complete a web search. . Everything else looks exaggerated to me, but I can only go on my experience of electrical supply in Europe. Serious question: to what degree is power outage a problem in America?. I don't know where she is based, but I hadn't thought that it was much of a problem in normal times i.e. outside of major storms and occasional accidents. But it would be useful to me because of something related I am looking into to know for sure. Tell me, this is largely junk, isn't it? . . Lawrence Upton

↑ Index

171. Alan Sondheim
Mouthing Lives, Whew!
Fri 11 Jun 1999

Mouthing Lives, Whew!

"--and when I first read Kierkegaard, I said, 'My God! He's on to some- thing very crucial for me,' which was, how do you actually engage in forms of philosophical reflection that are inseparable from lived experience and concrete situations?" (Cornel West interview in The Harvard Review of Philosophy, Spring 1999.)

If the forms were living, they might be Nikuko and Alan; if Nikuko and Alan were living. If Nikuko has the concrete situations, measurable in terms of quota and specificity, Alan has the lived experience; if Nikuko occupies the realm of the definable, Alan occupies that of immersivity.

If Nikuko constructs, Alan names; Nikuko and Alan meet at the junction of the appellation: "In uttering an 'Appellation' we wish to remove any doubts as to the actual meaning. But, how can we utter an appellation?-- With our mouth." (From the Canon, Mo Tzu, in The Works of Kung-Sun Lung- Tzu, Perleberg.)

The juncture is the juncture of the mouth. A paradox from Chuang-tzu 33: "Mountains bring out mouths." First image: that of the mountain; second image: that of bringing-forth (mountain upon mountain, pictorially [not in terms of origin]); third image: that of a square, mouth: delimitation. "The empty valley transmits sounds" or echos. A fissure in the earth reso- nates. One translation states "mountains have mouths" but this overlooks the impulse behind the exodus. It is the process of the flesh in the real, or the overture of the real to speech. The valley unfolds like great dark lips; the momentum of the tongue garners the bewilderment of naming.

The second image, doubled mountain, ch'u, to go forth or out, issue, be- get, eject. "Primitively it represents stalks growing out of the ground." (Ingram's old Analysis of Chinese Characters.) "is a hieroglyphic charac- ter representing the foot protruding past a certain line." (The First Step to Kanji, Yoshida, Saji, Nishida.) Growing transforms into the issuing of symbols; the symbolic pours from the mouth as in Mayan glyphics. The mouth (of the stream, of the valley, of speech and the symbolic, of the graphic user interface, of the screen) is the suture between Nikuko and Alan; it is the mouth which speaks both subject and avatar into existence.

The oath that the mouth makes is the binding of the performative into eth- os; and it is among oaths that ethos is born. "We meet at the juncture of the appellation; mouth and name remain indecipherable, indistinguishable."

I think of tattoo: My desire for your name, Nikuko, upon me, your sign, Nikuko, engraved in hanko as well, covering pages and skin with kisses. "Qu: 'Does two include one?' Kung: 'Two does not include one?'" yet it is pointed out, in the original, it is not clear who is speaking. (T'ung- pien lun, Kung-Sun Lung-Tzu.) Mouth and name, tattoo and number, sign and quantity. One is never a quantity. One is always a quantity, measure from the origin, convenient backdrop to the continuum, signifier of measure polytopes. We are close to the work of Lingis here, or the full and re- plete body supine in the valley, symbolic and riverine flows throughout.

Later, everything was born. "Love, love, love, have the courage to love, the courage to be, go down fighting. Whew!" (West.)

↑ Index

172. Lawrence Upton.

Power outages

Fri 11 Jun 1999

Thanks to all who responded to my enquiry about power outages etc, both front and back channel. Largely as I thought, but I got some useful new information and an opener mind. So thanks again

.

Lawrence

↑ Index

173. miekal and

wa wha wawa woo you like keto k'to

Fri 11 Jun 1999

>desire say, "va va who spl you sp you so now" >else says, "Beveragers pix down in their individual bitters, but there >several are there are certainly some left."
>desire say, "the hops mends the affirmities, the duly lad chaken >visibly, come thou may the first of the divisin' charmkeeps."
>else says, "And they thought it was bein' so deuced conservational.
Hic.
>Haec. Hop" >desire say, "a trial beknownst a scurilous book, the random hearty >laughter is not her only cage, the one severed from desire's body >simpled."
>else says, "So -- she is entitled to her foundations after all over >under*there skate a weight offered every other time zone, or girdle." >desire say, "cryptic emotionographers held sway with a distant audience,
>one not so turmoiled by presentation or the binding sweater of >liberation lyrics."
>else says, "That far away in clicky chants is a kind of harness, a >manner hoist or elevating ..."
>desire say, "a sing stress the fancy a phantasm monsterous" >else says, "asmic things sensationalise invariably."
>desire say, "a delivery broken from swinging alone on a highwire" >else says, "very broken indeed" >desire say, "her telegram arrived umprompted by sweaty offerings or the >back of the sucking sucking nightfence."
>else says, "and Clara wants to disconnect me, counts me down but they >don't take knowing for a way of night."
>desire say, "the node of connectivity shudders with abhorance, with the >minute bodyweight of hologram specular amorphitudes." >else says, "Denotation plaits gargling beansfull strim call cal la >lapped. You mean the pedalo we paddle o'er the... naaah. " >desire say, "whom so calackedly broughtforth, a calyption of turnality" >else says, "... he denies it, and all such cult. Little glyptics. (And >all our messes scented by desire" >desire say, "the libidintudes danced merrily in their scattering, their >scar shaken by the object penetration a meer cast of the presence she >called for in her dream, the finagling minor character exiting while >speaking behind someone's back."

>else says, "So perfervid it does both at once, and would slip in and be >already there, to see herself and how it's changed after that last edit.
>Spear-carrier and bucketeer." >desire say, "one dotes on the symptom of poesy, evacuation mirrors >coming, the temporal langue stated plain as the rose of all bodies >undone " >else says, "and they soap their sores then."

↑ Index

174. Julie Johnson
new book on Japanese avant-garde...
Sat 12 Jun 1999

---

here's a review on a new book about a major figure in experimental Japanese poetry...

review is by Eric Selland...

this review can also be found at Duration Press on-line:

http://members.xoom.com/Duration/Authors/ericselland/bkreview.html

---------- ---------- Book Review: Shredding the Tapestry of Meaning – The Poetry and Poetics of Kitasono Katue (1901–1978) , by John Solt, Published by the Harvard University Asia Center and distributed by Harvard University Press, 1999, 395 pages, $49.50 cloth, ISBN 0-674-80733-2. (Available on amazon.com)

Occasionally a book arrives that changes everything. Less, perhaps, in presenting something totally new, than in revealing that which had remained hidden, or forgotten. John Solt’s biography and extended literary analysis of the life’s work of Kitasono Katue, a major practitioner of avant-garde poetic forms from the 1920s to the 1970s, does just that. First in offering up the newest in that short list of very rare full-length studies of a modern Japanese poet, and second in its having laid open a forgotten history of dynamic artistic and literary development, as well as cultural exchange. A history, moreover, which intersects with our own, as becomes evident in the lengthy chapter on Kitasono's many years of correspondence with Ezra Pound.

Kitasono Katue (Solt uses the Francophile spelling preferred by Kitasono himself in his dealings with foreign poets) originally wanted to become a painter, but after a literary friendship and time spent in Tokyo, broiling with new ideas and a cosmopolitan lifestyle (Hirato Renkichi published his Japanese Futurist manifesto in 1921), Kitasono decided to become a poet. By 1924 he had become involved with a group of young poets publishing Japan's first Dadaist magazine, Ge.Gjmgjgam.Prrr.Gjmgem , thus beginning his many years of involvement with iconoclastic new forms. The new magazine introduced sound poems, dadaist absurdities and work harkening the eventual development of Surrealism in Japan. One more very important characteristic of the magazine was the introduction of the usage of katakana words in poetry. Foreign words and images were used liberally, appearing both in katakana script and the alphabet. We tend to be non-plussed now about these graphical innovations due to the common use of foreign loan words and Romanized script in the Japanese of the present, but at that time it was revolutionary, and would even become dangerous by the late 1930's with the rise of militarism.

Kitasono went on to write Surrealist poems, such as appear in his 1929 collection Shiro no Arubamu , and in the 1930's became the main mover of the VOU club, an experimental group through which he introduced his own poetic theories such as "ideoplasty". It was at this time the correspondence with Pound began, and Pound eagerly promoted Kitasono and VOU in Europe and the United States, connecting Kitasono's ideoplasty with his own ideogrammatic theory in Guide to Kulchur (1938). The VOU poets were given an introduction by Pound and published in a London magazine in 1938. Kitasono provided his own translations of his work, a few lines of which appear below:

In leaden slippers I laugh at the fountain of night, and scorn a solitary swan.
A parasol of glass she spreads, and wanders along the lane the cosmos flowering.
Over the cypress tree I image, to myself, a hotel marked with two golf-clubs crossed;
And move my camera on the sand of night.

[Excerpt from "Glass Coil" as originally published in Townsman, Jan. 1, 1938]

Kitasono carried out intensive exchanges with Pound and other Western poets during this period, and remade contact with the West after the war in the form of contacts with Charles Olson, Robert Creeley, Kenneth Rexroth and others. Robert Creeley even asked him to provide the cover drawings for the first few issues of the Black Mountain Review .

Rather than settling on one fixed form once found, as has been the case with many Japanese poets of the same period (including those who later lapsed into free-verse sentimentalism after an initial experimental phase), Kitasono went from one experiment to the next. After the war he introduced concrete poetry, then published a series of books each taking a further step toward the complete dislocation (or indeterminacy) of meaning, and finally attempted the leap beyond language itself in his production of what he called “plastic poems”, poems without words in which he utilized photography and design elements. Kitasono can almost be considered Japan’s first Post-Modernist in his willful ignoring of the boundaries between genres, levels of speech, and conventional meaning formation.

Solt explains in his introduction that his approach is a historical one, rather than one whose purpose is to advocate any particular literary theory, however, he does make use of the ideas of important theorists on the international 20th century avant-garde such as Marjorie Perloff, especially in his interpretations of Kitasono’s post-war work. More importantly, Solt’s study offers an exposition of Japanese avant-garde practice through much of this century which serves to tear away the imposition of Western generated Orientalist exoticisms often overlaid on the more immediate intellectual and social realities of Japan. The representation of Japanese literature in this country has often been effected by those more concerned with appropriating an overly idealized version of Zen and haiku for their own ideological purposes within a social and political milieu very different from Japan’s than in understanding the actual historical experience of a non-Western people in their coming to terms with the ideas and realities of their own times. Solt’s book gives us one of the rare looks at actual Japanese concerns within the poetic practice of the 20th century through the eyes of a Japanese poet, hence giving us a much needed breath of fresh air. The appendices, notes and bibliography give the serious reader important source information for further study. It is hoped that this will open the way to more research on the development of Japanese poetic practice, as well as other Japanese arts and intellectual trends of this century. It seems to me that there is much more creative potential for poets in this country in the consideration of the transformational processes involved in this period of intensive cultural cross-pollination, in the various acts of translation, literary readings and creative misreadings, than in the continued reliance on older, and often artificially exotic images invented by previous generations of Westerners with less of an opportunity to come into contact with the real thing.

Note: John Solt’s translations of Kitasono Katsue’s poetry are also available under the title Glass Beret, Morgan Press, 1995, 2979 S. 13th Street, Milwaukee, WI, 53215.

↑ Index

175. Maria L. Zavialov
Re: current list stats
Sat 12 Jun 1999

Hey, there is one from Russia. Put me between Poland and Singapore. Masha Zavialova, St. Petersburg

↑ Index

176. Kathy Lou Schultz
Will Alexander
Sun 13 Jun 1999

Still seeking contact info for Will Alexander.
Please backchannel [redacted]
Thank you!
^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

↑ Index

177. Kevin Magee
Re: BACKCHANNEL REQUEST
Sun 13 Jun 1999

"I was wondering if you'd be so kind to explain" arrives by backchannel raising such a complex set of issues and from such an unexpected direction (East instead of West) that the form of response I would choose is the public one of an open letter translating one poet's directness and generalizing his earnest suspicion by substituting the simple candor of a private answer for the more difficult, for me anyway, task of reflecting on my experience of the Buffalo Poetics List since the last week of February of this year and the nature of my participation on it, employing the method of self-critique you can find in The Bolivian Diary, for example, at the end of each month's entries, or Shades of Hades:

Out of the items in the New York Times a woman, one of the leaders of the FMLN reported wounded and captured.

In her papers,
evidence she had been to study in Hanoi,
love poems, a diary, and a self-critique.

Questions:

1) Do I identify groups and call them pampered elitist?
2) Am I campaigning for cultural democracy?
3) Do my forms of propaganda include put-downs of those who I don't think have a right to make art or do things as I think they should?
4) Does my campaign, my game, include careful non-response to those on my enemies list?
5) Is the Buffalo Poetics List pasteurized?

Before addressing each question with the seriousness each deserves, and I don't think I'm omitting any concern stated in a two-paragraph post, my first thought is one of being called to a thought I almost didn't have or at least did not give much thought to before being called to these questions, that the bleachers in the stadium are far from empty, though in my own private Ohio the idea that anyone is listening suffers under force of a concentration on a single face. I forget this while writing for that one or for at least a few even when making the most general statements, though there's always the thrill of being overheard. The magic of this form of exchange, keyboard to screen to send, is that encourages impulsive behavior, and provokes the best kind of reactions. Communication. Providing that you've got somewhere to send it to.

1). Group identification. Elitism. The only grouping I'm aware of doing has been in a couple of event notes when I hopped on the bus to New York and heard poetry for the first time in several years, at the Dactyl Foundation, The Whitney, and the No Moore. Casual groupings, who's reading, what they read, what is the space the readings take place in--impressions. Impressions, perhaps, from something like a crocodile surfacing in a log jam, to paraphrase a line or two from Prevallet's Cocteau translation in a recent issue of TF. The only grouping I'm committed to, however, is the effort to keep articulating class divisions and identifying as specifically as possible how these divisions affect poetry, poetry spaces, and relations between poets. This is such a huge and urgent problem that any one person trying to address any aspect of it is bound to overstate their case, exaggerate, expostulate, and even step on a few toes. Something Anthony Braxton wrote a long time back in an out-of-print three-volume opus of post-Ayler jazz theory makes sense here: There can be no room for accusation if the writing is concerned about what is really true (to refrain from attacking individuals) (even when an attack would clarify a viewpoint) (not to mention that the state of the Art is not about only one or two). (I may have changed a few words, but the core is Braxton's). He writes elsewhere about how Western inquiry terms, Western definitions, and the simulacra of Western textual commentary have influenced how we have come to either approach living, or approach understanding about living. There's something of this in Lorenzo Thomas' Neon Griot essay when he writes about the Black Arts Movement and role of the neighborhood center/performance space/gallery/school as an alternative or at least supplement to University. If I criticize University, a monolithic-heterogenous "elsewhere" more than capable of defending itself, it is with the thought that I'm writing to a forum made available from University resources, though its moderator is probably not a member of the Communication Workers of America, and shouldn't he be? I also trust that the moderator would bounce any message from me that attacked anyone personally, though what constitutes "attack" is also class-determined. In SF Dodie Bellamy once swiped my face like a Yukon grizzly on the question of the conflict between Style and Ideology, and her point made an impact on me because of its ferocity. Charging me, she changed my mind. Two working class writers communicating.

2). The campaign for cultural democracy. One poet cannot carry on a campaign. If this could be a campaign, or a Social Movement, many poets rich and poor would have to be involved, integrating progressive university and art school centers with inner city neighborhood initiatives, arranging residencies, maybe doing something like the John Reed clubs did in the 30s only this time without the CP, bringing people into the Art of Poetry or bringing the Art of Poetry to people at a time when the closing of that 1945-1974 higher education window of opportunity Silliman wrote about without irony in that ironwood shared file area years ago, i.e. "the vast extension of post-secondary education to new sectors of society," has produced an ocean of working class youth who do not come to culture and poetry the way my generation mostly came to it, through that highly competitive and problematic space of the University Writing Workshop such as Maria Damon writes about in her Dissonance essay. Perhaps the fervor or fever with which I press this point in some of my posts at times has to do with the fact that I'm haunted or hunted by the shadow of Tishie Ann who grew up a couple of blocks away coming to writing in much the same way as the slam-woman in Damon's essay, coming to writing through the 12 steps, bursting onto the page and exploding our conceptions of what is literature.

3). My forms of propaganda. Who has the right to write. I really thought I was posting more poems than anything on this list, the event notes being highly subjective snapshots saying more about the blindness of their photographer or the gropingness of his coming to eyelight after a three year period in the darkroom. Writing poetry is a form of propaganda for me, taking propaganda to mean what it means to left politics, what you do when there's no mass work going on, shouting on a soapbox that something is rotten in the state of the art, though every agitator would rather be leading a shutdown or strike than talking to the air. Like most discourse on the left, the circulation of my writing is extremely limited, and as far as I know only about 25 copies of my second book, Recent Events, have been distributed through a single bookstore in California. As far as having the right to write, I work with working class and inner city "students" who have barely been given the right to live, let alone write, and the daily experience of the silence and powerlessness inflicted on them and which they bear with amazing humor colors my propaganda, but I don't know where I'd get the power to say who does or doesn't have the right to write even if I wanted to and though I may in fact imply this from time to time in a Blakean crank moment.

4). My campaign. My game. My non-response. A small number of poets both known and unknown to me have backchannelled me since March, and I've left most go unanswered, not out of a wish to have the last word, but genuine fear of private correspondence. Writing in a public space means you have witnesses. Anyone whose life has been the subject of intense scrutiny and interrogation and whose character has been called into question can understand the security of this space where whatever I say may be used against me, but there's a chance that one or two might agree with me, and those encouraging and supportive backchannels in particular over the last several months have helped me remain confident that the general impulsiveness of my formulations or forms of propaganda include a breath of fresh air, even if I lapse into occasional instances of "Kevinosis / Mageeosis" which warning appeared in the control settings of my email account the morning after my TF event note. I can't think of any poet as an enemy when the real enemies of the Art of Poetry have been bombing Belgrade. Nietzsche once wrote that it's important to be able to be an enemy. Poetry is not a baseball game. I hate the Cleveland Indians. The faces that fill that stadium come with well-padded wallets from out of town. The friend whose words I associate with leaving for the TF event or associate with leaving Cleveland can't even smoke a cigarette outside her office building a block away from the Jake on game days without some Wahoo asking her how much, 50 bucks? I am writing for my life. Or each poem feels burned out of me at this intensity.

5). The Buffalo Poetics List and the Land of Milk and Honey. The most curious thing is that I find it hard to imagine that a Cleveland writer I'd never met and whose newspaper once included a review (among a hundred other reviews) dismissing my Leaves Books chapbook would call me up one day out of the blue and offer to email me information about joining this list. He said it was a great place for event and publication announcements. All I'd ever heard about it was several years ago viz. "G___'s metaphor of Jacking-Off for male-dominated discussions of poetics on the Internet" (Ruby Slippers, Detours 2). There was some discussion of pissing contests some months previous between fathers and sons, but what really surprised me and inspired me and moved me into an intense on-going period of creativity has been a kind of thunderbolt throwing match among Olympians posting under nom-de-guerres and bringing me back to a state of agitation and excitability strongly reminiscent of the original power transfers that once lit the night skies over Poe's City by the Sea. I have an idea of who I have to thank for bringing me out of my cave, believing in the hermit of Burning Creek who lives there, and it needs to be recognized how great a risk it was for that person, a guardian presence, waking me up, with no assurance except perhaps for the proofs of a few poems that I was working or capable of working at the level I was doing in the vicinity of 24th and Guerrero 1991-1995. Given this, it is quite possible that I enjoy some protection in this space which I entered with greetings from Monica Lewinsky, Levine's Swine Sign, and St. Liz. This is the genius of the nom-de-guerre, you think you recognize the innuendoes, but you can't dwell on them, or else you get drawn into a game that resembles 50s era Soviet psychiatry: You're just imagining things. Nothing is real. "We're all dead out here." At its hottest, this list feels like a wide open notebook where strong poets with thick skins compose furiously oblivious to whoever's looking or if you do look before deleting, you might learn a thing or two. I study every post from Pompeii as if I were dissecting a ray of light from some social reality far away in another galaxy.

Anyway, I hope these sentences have answered the questions submitted to me by someone who has been made angry or at least suspicious by some things I have written on this list. I was really disturbed by R. Wolf's apology "okay I'll shut up now" or something to that effect sometime back on the question of class and how all this sucks. Or how the future will suck. I didn't agree with her, but I wanted to hear her continue her train of thought.

Kevin

↑ Index

178. Alan Sondheim

Shifters: Bodee

Sun 13 Jun 1999

]\

Bodei: Shifters

Everything descends from root #1. Everything has a number. Everything belongs to the Order.

I'm Nikuko. I do duplicate that order on the level of the visible. I doub- le, triple, quadruple. I create objects shifted into others, apparently the same. The rule of the same is boredom; beneath the surface, messages seethe:

look Bodee

Lost in Bodee-Buda as Bodi Tre-Form Hells. You see Bodei, Bedei, #934, #895, #1, Girl, Boy, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, Bodi, #1, Bodee, Budi, Bedee, Bodei, Bedei, Budi, Bedee, and Bodee here.

look Bodei
I don't know which "Bodei" you mean.
look Bedei
I don't know which "Bedei" you mean.
look #934

Nikuko

Brooding Buti or Buda / Pest
She is awake and looks alert.

look #895

You won't find me Here look Bodi
I don't know which "Bodi" you mean.
look Bodee
I don't know which "Bodee" you mean.
look Bedee
I don't know which "Bedee" you mean.
look Budi
I don't know which "Budi" you mean.

I defend myself. I don't let you in. I duplicate my numbers. I duplicate my objects. I split and return torn inside myself. You can't come in me. I make insides and insides. You don't find me and you can't tear me apart. I can tear myself apart. You can't get me. You can't get the flesh the num- bers the things, the #numbers the @flesh the $things. I horde myself. I whore myself to myself. I buy and sell myself to myself. I short-circuit your economy. I blast my way into you. I'm in everything you do and own. I defend myself. You let me in. I duplicate my numbers in you. You're gone to me. I swallow you.

You don't know which I I mean. (This could happen to me.)

You don't know you. (This has happened to you.)

↑ Index

179. Alan Sondheim

Julu, Broadcasting

Mon 14 Jun 1999

''''''''''''''''''''

Julu, Broadcasting (for Kung-Sun Lung)

"Aliases: radio. You see special radio. Telecommunications and emission have radio in common. Surely a diode and hardness have radio in common. And surely, emission and a diode have radio in common. Electronics and a diode have in common radio; a diode and telecommunications have in common radio; and telecommunications and emission have in common radio. Electron- ics has radio in common with telecommunications. Telecommunications has radio in common with a diode. A diode has radio in common with emission. People have radio in common. A name has radio in common. And radio left you. Suppose when there is radio, to gain diodeness as-such designates radio, and radio is electronic."

Nikuko beneath-the-ground, it was Nikuko dancing - "I remember the lane by the river, the thin park even before the player class, not Nikuko nor Sotatsu; I remember kami has cut out my tongue." Nikuko knows, because of Buddha-Proliferation do now with me. Nikuko knows because #1 is not unique say, "Become Dead and become still." Nikuko says: Radio Lost in Radio-Buda as if the forms were living, they might be Nikuko and Radio, if Nikuko and Radio were living. If Nikuko has the concrete situations, measurable in terms of quota and specificity, Radio has the lived experience; if Nikuko constructs, Radio names; Nikuko and Radio meet at the junction of user interface, of the screen - it is the suture between Nikuko and Radio; I think of tattoo: My desire for your name, Radio, upon me, your sign, Nik- uko, engraved in Radio-Buda as well, covering pages and skin with kisses. Tell me, Nikuko, is it true that a white radio is not a radio? Certainly, Nikuko, radioness is not electronic. Say more, Nikuko. I see, Nikuko, what is named a radio designates it as such. Tell me more, Nikuko. And so, Nik- uko? Look Nikuko, said Julu, "It's without resolution. I'm Nikuko; I do duplicate that order on the level of the visible."

↑ Index

180. Leonard Brink
Inscape
Mon 14 Jun 1999

Inscape #6 -- French Poets is now available from:

Instress
P.O. Box 3124
Saratoga, CA
95070 for U.S.$4

It features poems by:

Dominique Fourcade
Olivier Cadiot
Esther Tellermann & Emmanual Hocquard

translated by:

Cole Swensen
Keith Waldrop &
Rosmarie Waldrop

Please make checks payable to Leonard Brink.
After June 30 please order from Small Press Disrtribution, Berkeley
In the U.K., please order from Spectacular Diseases.

↑ Index

181. Hoa Nguyen
Please tell your friends!
Mon 14 Jun 1999

ANNOUNCING SKANKY POSSUM ISSUE 2

We're pleased to announce the second issue of Skanky Possum. Poets included are:

Stefan Hyner * William Corbett * Michael Leddy * Lewis Warsh * Sotere Torregian * Gwendolyn Albert * Carol Mirakove * Clark Coolidge * Stephanie Dean * Ange Mlinko * Hoa Nguyen * Kristin Prevallet * Tom Clark * Laura E. Wright * Stra Schrag * Sal Salasin * Kenneth Tanemura * Peggy Kelley * Gloria Frym * Stephen Ellis * Diane diPrima.

Also:

--Aphoristic gems by Heraclitus, translated by Paul Foreman;

--A special report from David Hess in the St. Louis office, detailing a recent academic conference devoted to the works of Gertrude Stein;

--And in our commentary roundup, The Possum Pouch, Ol' Ma Poss herself speaks.

Hand-painted covers grace each issue with a phantom possum portrait. Order your issue today before these furry criters get away.

Make checks payable to Dale Smith or Hoa Nguyen:

2925 Higgins Street

Austin, Texas 78722

e-mail: [redacted]

(If you want to be removed from our mailing list, please let us know)

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

182. Dale Smith
Skanky Poss for 5 bucks...
Mon 14 Jun 1999

Please forgive a 2nd message-I left off the price...

ANNOUNCING SKANKY POSSUM ISSUE 2

We're pleased to announce the second issue of Skanky Possum. Poets included are:

Stefan Hyner * William Corbett * Michael Leddy * Lewis Warsh * Sotere Torregian * Gwendolyn Albert * Carol Mirakove * Clark Coolidge * Stephanie Dean * Ange Mlinko * Hoa Nguyen * Kristin Prevallet * Tom Clark * Laura E. Wright * Stra Schrag * Sal Salasin * Kenneth Tanemura * Peggy Kelley * Gloria Frym * Stephen Ellis * Diane diPrima.

Also:

--Aphoristic gems by Heraclitus, translated by Paul Foreman;

--A special report from David Hess in the St. Louis office, detailing a recent academic conference devoted to the works of Gertrude Stein;

--And in our commentary roundup, The Possum Pouch, Ol' Ma Poss herself speaks.

Hand-painted covers grace each issue with a phantom possum portrait. Order your issue today before these furry criters get away.

Make checks payable to Dale Smith or Hoa Nguyen:

2925 Higgins Street

Austin, Texas 78722

e-mail: [redacted]

(If you want to be removed from our mailing list, please let us know)

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

183. kathylou
Boys are allowed
Mon 14 Jun 1999

Hello All,
Robin Tremblay-McGaw and I have gotten some inquiries as to whether men are "eligible" to participate in the class & poetics forum which we are hosting/editing for HOW2. The answer is "yes"! (Any and all genders are allowed in our tree house.)

I've also gotten some interesting backchannel email from "non-academics" who believe that they can't participate because they have "nothing" to say. Believe me, you have something to say. Your email proves that you have something to say.

Here again is the call for responses. Please feel free to contact me with any questions.
Kathy Lou Schultz ([redacted])

Call for Submissions to HOW2's Forum on Class and Poetics

Visit HOW2 at:
http://www.departments.bucknell.edu/stadler_center/how2/index.html

Thanks to the efforts of feminist poets, critics, and editors, it is now possible to identify a discourse--both scholarly and creative--of gender and poetics. In the 1980s, journals such as HOW(ever) put the spotlight on these issues, particularly related to innovative or experimental practices and how these intersected with issues of publication, erasure, and canon formation.

A decade later, we find ourselves trying to define a vocabulary for addressing complex issues of class in the formation of an innovative poetics. As Kathy Lou Schultz asked in her Tripwire (Issue 1, Fall 1998) essay, "What's a working class poetic, and where could I find one?" How do we make present the _absence_ of class in discussions of gender and the poetics of innovation? Where are the intersections of race in discussions of class? How are these forces fused and CON-fused?

How do/can we picture/trace working class issues in formally innovative ways? What do the circumstances of literary production--surrounding writers and the writing produced--have to do with one another?

Submissions should be emailed to: [redacted] by July 7th and be no longer than 2 paragraphs. We will select and edit responses.

Editors: Kathy Lou Schultz and Robin Tremblay-McGaw

↑ Index

184. Poetics List

women's writing / dubravka

Mon 14 Jun 1999

---

had to reformat this. Chris

From: "dubravka" <[redacted]>
Date: Sun, 13 Jun 1999 22:43:56 -0700

"Women's writing" - an interesting view or who was loyal and how is betrayer?

Yesterday, June 12, 1999, in main official daily newspaper, within regular Cultural Supplement, a text titled "Women's Writing", put under quotation marks, by a locally important journalist appeared. Here are some extracts:

"The fact is: every NATO hawk-general was 'mother Mara' in comparison to feminists! Because - let, start from here - almost all feminists supported aggression against Yugoslavia. By doing this, they confirmed - do they - their specificity inside the international community of intellectuals. Among those who passionately plead for "final solution" were even Serbian women, as well as those who are married to Serbs. The names are not important. What feminist pro "destruction" of this part of Balkan make distinguished - and important - is that only they in their "war discourse" operate with the factor of collective guilty. (...) Why feminists hate Serbs? Who said this? It is only as if their (feminist) belief in collective guilty justifies (their) plead for more bombs per one head of local citizens. (...) It is difficult to see any difference between the pro femina moral excuse for unique humanitarian catastrophe, that is, as they say, provoked by collective guilty of whole Serbian people, (...) We all know how their orgy finished. And we know the horrifying price of "feminist's" obsession."

commentary: Mara - short of Marija newspapers are printed in cyrillic letters (which is traditional Serbian letters), and pro and pro femina are written in latin letters. during last 9 years there was the difference between oppositional and official print. almost all official presses or magazines for culture are in cyrillic letters, and oppositional in latin. but besides political reasons, there is another, practical, reason - that latinic is readable in all part of former Yugoslavia, and these connections are important for some of us... 'pro femina' magazine become symbol of feminisam in Serbia - interesting...

↑ Index

185. rebecca wolff
party reminding
Mon 14 Jun 1999

I invited you to our party such a long time ago that I thought I'd better invite you all over again:

That's the party for Fence #3

Thursday, the 17th, 8pm
533 Canal Street, #3, New York City

(1/9 to Canal, walk towards the Hudson)

$5

↑ Index

186. Maria Damon
Re: current list stats
Tue 15 Jun 1999

At 12:26 PM +0400 6/12/99, Maria L. Zavialov wrote:
>Hey, there is one from Russia. Put me between Poland and Singapore.
>Masha Zavialova, St. Petersburg

yeah, chris, i was wondering about that. thanks for speaking up, masha!

↑ Index

187. hofermr
Interlope magazine/ Summi Kaipa
Tue 15 Jun 1999

Hello all,

Jen Hofer has been kind enough to lend me her email while in this transitory moving period.

New contact info for Interlope magazine and me:

Summi Kaipa &
Interlope
P.O. Box 423058
San Francisco, CA 94142-3058

Same email for the time being.

↑ Index

188. Poetics List
stats clarification
Tue 15 Jun 1999

> Hey, there is one from Russia. Put me between Poland and Singapore.
> Masha Zavialova, St. Petersburg

Sorry, Masha, to have neglected Russia. Our stats are generated automatically by the listserv program, which, as one might expect of software from the U.S., is quietly imperialistic; any domain that does not end in a country code [e.g., CA for Canada] is treated by the program as a U.S. territory.

cheers, Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

189. A H Bramhall
sideways from K Magee's Backchannel Request
Tue 15 Jun 1999

no soldier here. I'm listening to Grateful Dead, as it happens. I don't feel nostalgic as I hear it, so I guess it's okay. here is one place: I idolize music. but I have to write. I infer this, because I have done so, written, seriously since I was sixteen. I have been published once in that time, when a teacher, Robert Grenier, threw me into This3. mountains of the moon, dark star, etc. is publishing important? stumbling onto this list soon after getting Internet access opened doors to what seems nostalgic just as this old music (1969) could seem so. poetry as a sort of identity. I note a community or communication here, a provoked and provoking insistence to consider? something like that. it's been good. I've been on an island for years, tho I bought what books and mags I could (now can't). time for a swim. the questions were asked, before I could join here: what do you expect to give and what to get? jeez, I sweated them (did you?) but in the end I effectively signed a document saying this is capital P Poetry I'm interested in. you know, some feasibly modern White Goddess um rite or how you will have it. this isn't casual for me and, incompetent tho I may be, it never has been. face it: writing is easy. words are plentiful, the hand-eye thing with pen or keyboard can be mastered, just take some time to do it. boiling the commodity out, the career out, these having always been tripping points for me. Kevin (first name's okay?) used the word 'propaganda', which scares me. I mean the word does, or what I understand the word to carry. not for his politics but for what I bring. I mean that I'd be writing Walt Whitman crap, dilating to beat the band, if I didn't watch it, and I'm not all that enamoured of ole Walt to begin with. I'm speaking here because. well, the energy of the opportunity commits me? or I wanted Kevin (real Kevin, imagined one) to know that I'm across the street, scratching my head, maybe, but waving also. I say the same to everyone. I've felt some useful irritations. I don't want to argue, just once in a while pin something on the wall. yes, and confront these strange juxtapositions. Poetry doesn't need me, but I guess I need to need it. interesting, isn't it? that's what I 'm saying. AHB

↑ Index

190. Poetics List
Welcome Message
Tue 15 Jun 1999

Welcome to the Poetics List & The Electronic Poetry Center

..sponsored by The Poetics Program, Department of English, College of Arts & Science, the State University of New York, Buffalo /// Postal Address: Poetics Program, 438 Clemens Hall, SUNY Buffalo, NY 14260

Poetics List Moderator: Christopher W. Alexander
Please address all inquiries to <[redacted]>.

Electronic Poetry Center: <http://epc.buffalo.edu>

= Contents =
1. About the Poetics List
2. Subscriptions
3. Submissions
4. Cautions
5. Digest Option
6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail
7. "No Review" Policy
8. The Electronic Poetry Center (EPC)
9. Poetics Archives at EPC
10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange
arise Or unfold,
O ye postmasters!

1. About the Poetics List

The Poetics List was founded by Charles Bernstein in late 1993 with the epigraph above. Now in its second incarnation, the list carries over 600 subscribers, though all of these subscribers do not necessarily receive messages at any given time. A number of other people read the Poetics List via our web archives at the Electronic Poetry Center (see section 9 below).

Please note that this is a private list and information about the list should not be posted to other lists or directories of lists. The idea is to keep the list to those with specific rather than general interests, and also to keep the scale of the list relatively small and the volume manageable.

increasing number of subscribers, we are no longer able to maintain the open format with which the list began. All submissions are reviewed by the moderator in keeping with the goals of the list, as articulated in this Welcome Message. We remain committed to this editorial function as a defining element of the Poetics List. Our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible.

For further information on posting to the list, see section 5 below. Publishers and series co-ordinators, see also section 10.

In addition to being archived at the EPC, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications are always welcome. See section 7 for details.

We recognize that other lists may sponsor other possibilities for exchange in this still-new medium. We request that those participating in this forum keep in mind the specialized and focussed nature of this project. For subscription information or to contact the editors, write to <[redacted]>.

---

2. Subscriptions

Subscriptions to the Poetics List are free of charge, but formal registration is required. We ask that when you subscribe you provide your real name, street address, email address, and telephone number. All posts to the list must provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom.

<[redacted]>. Your message should include all of the required information. Please allow several days for your new or re-subscription to take effect.

PLEASE NOTE: All subscription-related information and correspondence remains absolutely confidential.

To unsubscribe, send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

*If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note: sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to continue to receive mail from the Poetics List. To avoid this problem, unsub using your old address, then return to your new address and send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

Remember to replace "Phil Spillway" with your own name. If you find that it is not possible to unsub using your old address, please contact the editors at <[redacted]> for assistance.

*Eudora users: if your email address has been changed, you may still be able to unsubscribe without assistance. Go to the "Tools" menu in Eudora, select

"Options" and then select setup for "Sending Mail": you may be able to temporarily substitute your old address here to send the unsub message.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced. Please try avoid having messages from the list returned to us. If the problem is low disk quota, you may wish to request an increased quota from your system administrator. (University subscribers may wish to argue that this subscription is part of your scholarly communication!) You might also consider obtaining a commercial account. In general, if a Poetics message is bounced from your account, your subscription to Poetics will be temporarily suspended. If this happens, simply re-subscribe to the list (once your account problem has been resolved!) by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

Remember to replace "Phil Spillway" with your own name.

All questions about subscriptions, whether about an individual subscription or subscription policy, should be addressed to the list's administrative address <[redacted]>. Please note that it may take up to ten days, or more, for us to reply to messages.

---

3. Submissions

are reviewed by the editors in keeping with the goals of the list as articulated in this Welcome Message (see section 1). Please note that while this list is primarily concerned with poetics, messages relating to politics and political news or activism will also be considered. Feel free to query if you are uncertain as to whether a message is appropriate. All correspondence with the editors regarding submissions to the list remains confidential and should be directed to us at <[redacted]>.

We encourage subscribers to post information on publications and reading series that they have coordinated, edited, published, or in which they appear. Such announcements constitute a core function of this list. Also welcome are other sorts of news, e.g., event reports, obituaries, and reading lists (annotated or not).

Queries may be posted to the list when deemed appropriate; we request that the posting subscriber assemble "highlights" from respondents' posts to be published to the list.

Solicited submissions (by subscribers or non-subscribers) may also appear on Poetics from time to time. The editors reserve the right to contact any subscriber regarding possible submissions.

Posts to the Poetics List should abide by the rules of "Fair Use" when quoting material for which the posting subscriber does not hold copyright. Please do not post to the list personal or "backchannel" correspondence, or other unpublished material, without the express permission of the author!

If you want someone to send out information to the list as a whole, or supply information missing from an post, or thank someone for posting something you requested, please send the request or comment directly to that individual, and not to the list editors.

Send messages to the list directly to the list address:

<[redacted]>

Please do not send messages intended for posting to the list to our administrative address <[redacted]>.

When sending to the list, please send only "plain text". Note, however, there is no problem with sending clickable URLs in HTML format.

Please do not send attachments or include extremely long documents in a post, since this may make it difficult for those who get the list via "digest" or who cannot decode attached or specially formatted files. The use of "styled" text or HTML formatting in the body of email posts to the list appears not to be compatible with the the list's automatic digest program; as a result such messages disrupt the format of the Digest, even though this coding is readable for some subscribers who do not use the digest option.

Like all machines, the listserver will sometimes be down: if you feel your message has been delayed or lost, please wait at least one day to see if it shows up, then check the archive to be sure the message is not posted there; if you still feel there is a problem, you may wish to contact the editors at <[redacted]>.

As an outside maximum, we will accept for publication to Poetics no more than 5 messages a day from any one subscriber; in general, we expect subscribers to keep their post to less than 10-15 posts per month. Our goal is a manageable list (manageable both for moderators and subscribers) of twenty or fewer messages per day.

For further information or to contact the editors, please write to <[redacted]>.

---

4. Cautions

It may take up to a week or more to respond to your questions or to subscription requests or to handle any other editorial business or any nonautomated aspect of list maintenance.

Please do not publish list correspondence without the express permission of the author! Copyright for all material posted on Poetics remains with the author; material from this list and its archive may not be reproduced without the author's permission, beyond the standard rights accorded by "fair use".

"Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. In this category are included messages gratuitously attacking fellow listees, also messages designed to "waste bandwidth" or cause the list to reach its daily limit. These messages are considered offensive and detrimental to list discussion. Please do not bother submitting such messages to the editor. Offending subscribers will receive only one warning message. Repeat offenders will be removed from the list immediately. Please do not put this policy to test!

---

5. Digest Option

The Listserve program gives you the option to receive all the posted Poetics message each day as a single message. If you would prefer to receive ONE message each day, which would include all messages posted to the list for that day, you can use the digest option.

Send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

set poetics digest

You can switch back to individual messages by sending this message:

set poetics mail

NOTE!! Send these messages to "listserv" not to Poetics or as a reply to this Welcome Message!!

---

6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail

Do not leave your Poetics subscription "active" if you are going to be away for any extended period of time! Your account may become flooded and you may lose not only Poetics messages but other important mail.

You can temporarily turn off your Poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to <[redacted]>:

set poetics nomail

You may re-activate your poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to the same address:

set poetics mail

When you return you can check or download missed postings from the Poetics archive. (See section 8 below.)

---

7. "No Review" policy

For the safety and security of list subscribers, the "review" function of the Poetics List has been de-activated. Non-posting subscribers' email addresses will remain confidential. Please do not ask the list editors to give out subscriber addresses or other personal information.

---

8. What is the Electronic Poetry Center?

The World Wide Web-based Electronic Poetry Center is located at <http://epc.buffalo.edu>.

Our mission is to serve as a hypertextual gateway to the extraordinary range of activity in formally innovative writing in the United States and around the world. The Center provides access to the burgeoning electronic resources in new poetries including RIF/T and many other electronic poetry journals, the POETICS List archives, an AUTHOR library of electronic poetic texts and bibliographies, and direct connections to numerous related electronic RESOURCES. The Center also provides information about contemporary print little magazines and SMALL PRESSES engaged in poetry and poetics. And we have an extensive collection of soundfiles of poets reading their work, as well as the archive of LINEbreak, the radio interview series.

The EPC is directed by Loss Pequeño Glazier.

---

9. Poetics Archives at the EPC

Go to the Electronic Poetry Center <http://epc.buffalo.edu> and select the "Poetics" link from the opening screen. Follow the links to Poetics Archives. Or set your browser to go directly to <http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html>.

You may browse the Poetics List archives by month and year or search them for specific information. Your interface will allow you to print or download any of these files.

---

10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

PUBLISHERS & EDITORS: The Electronic Poetry Center listings of poetry and poetics information is open and available to you. We are trying to make access to printed publications as easy as possible for our users and ENCOURAGE you to participate!

Send a list of your press/publications to <[redacted]>, with the words EPC Press Listing in
the subject line.

You may also send materials on disk. (Write file name, word processing program, and Mac or PC on disk.) Send an e-mail message to the address above to obtain a mailing address to which to send your disk. Though files marked up with html are our goal, ascii files are perfectly acceptable. If your word processor will save files in Rich Text Format (.rtf) this is also highly desirable.

Send us extended information on new publications (including any back cover copy and sample poems) as well as complete catalogs or backlists (including excerpts from reviews, sample poems, etc.). Be sure to include full information for ordering--including prices and addresses and phone numbers both of the press and any distributors.

You might also want to send short announcements of new publications directly to the Poetics List as subscribers do not always (or ever) check the EPC; in your message please include full information for ordering. If you have a fuller listing at EPC, you might also mention that in any Poetics posts.

Some announcements circulated through Poetics and the EPC have received a noticeable responses; it may be an effective way to promote your publication and we are glad to facilitate information about interesting publications.

END OF POETICS LIST WELCOME MSG

↑ Index

191. Jason Nelson weaving
Tue 15 Jun 1999

The Widowing Sound of Leaves

Don't question her numbers

because biology treats code as essential, without code not yet understanding awareness. A pulp science and x surrounds x in parentheses. The plus and minus of the arrangement of closet hangers, as they corral the clothing into clumps and entangled assemblages, is edible. And hunger keeps us warm.

Count

this thread, a maze of developments, cotton in its own accepting computation, engaged in the unfolding line of protein or silicon and protein. A prosthesis following one plus x cubed. The equal sign of the one slipping billboard panel, peeling down to reveal the colors of past advertisements, cannot be consumed. And immediately poisons the panel.

Don't calculate her total

when the human essence is a function of possession, and the function preexists the heart's ownership, locating cognition in disparate parts. A Neuromancer generating a series: zero, zero, one, zero. The brackets contain the names written in a fogged shower door, or scratched in soap on the bathtub's vinyl curve, just before the water overrules. And rules never taste the same.

Ask

for models of subjectivity or prevent the multiple ironies from being taken seriously. A prediction renamed as zero to the third power plus one. The division maintains the widowing sound of leaves when a bike's wheels cross from cement to grass paths, steering more from resistance than direction. And friction devours.

Don't answer her questions about the desire of intelligence to reach steady states, about the rapid entanglement of material displaced by thought or emotion and thought, about a fixed center. An inscription where n equals seven, when one follows n. The burst of errors caused by science experimenting with ink, and the way pens leak away through evaporation, colors moving from a metal ball to paper or air. And paper digests itself.

React

is a code, lines generating additional reactions, encoded or decoded with coefficients and polynomials, used in the interface between bodies and the textual world, or only used. An image pneumonia for a sequence: one over zero, one over zero, seven over one over zero, one. The pattern exists in bathroom tile, industrial for its own safety, attractive when covered with unclear liquids, attractive because our eyes need sharp angles to focus, and patterns to remind us of breathing. But designs will consume the handsome.

Don't regard her problems as a flight simulator utilizing feed-back loops, interconnecting the relevant boundaries of simulation and circuitry, the random borders of surrogacy and affection. A coupling system and a digit string in x and the burst of x plus n. The transmission needs rain in warm weather, migrating puddles of grass and asphalt and sand, moving not at the rate of wind, but the rate of swing sets instead. And water is erosion is water.

Estimate

pulling a rabbit from a larger system, the potentially infinite regress of empathy and how close the body sidesteps desire, how close are magic and the observer. A recollection raised by a factor of three degree vectors. The primitive screen, wire mesh framed by metals slats, holding vision in the small spaces between angles, separating the image of backyards into disconnected sections: the root of all worlds. And the source of all code.

Don't solve her equations with hyphenated creatures, essentially human, colonized by numbers and the division of domination and ambiguity. A pulp science and x contain zero, one, zero in no certain order. The plus and minus of watching a bouncing plastic ball move from the hand to sidewalk, its rebounds swayed by cracks, watching its spinning colors stop at the equal sign. And be swallowed.

Invent

a reflexivity, a spin on the encoded assumption, an intuitive leap from protein to cognition to digital systems, blundered by organic order. A privileged value dependent on the sum of one and x in parentheses squared. The birth of missing objects begins in the tangles of branches, or in the jumbled cord where a paperclip holds dust close to the cables, where leaving in two directions leaves intentions behind. And purpose close to paper.

Don't make her into her.

She is the snow crash. Hers is a devolving inscription.

The prosthesis of equations. A guarantee for the flickering lights.

Jason Nelson

_____ Get Free Email
and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

192. jen hofer
query & note
Tue 15 Jun 1999

in attempting to shift my virtual life to a new system--note new e-mail address above--i lost all the e-mails sent to me in the past day or two. if anyone here knows how to contact alan prohm, please backchannel. thanks, jen.

↑ Index

193. aerialedge
New @ Bridge Street, Benjamin Sel Writings, Boundary 2, Howe, Mayer &&&
Wed 16 Jun 1999

THIS is a VERY good list of books. Thanks poetics for your support. Ordering & discount information at the end of the list.

1. _Selected Writings Volume 2: 1927 - 1934_, Walter Benjamin, Harvard, $37.50. An 850 page selection including many previously untranslated writings on figures such as Brecht, Valery, and Gide, and on subjects ranging from film, radio, and the novel to memory, kitsch, and the theory of language.

2. _Angelus Novus: Perspectives on Walter Benjamin, Critical Inquiry Winter 1999_, ed WJT Mitchell, $10. Winifried Menninghaus, Stanley Cavell, Shoshana Feldman, Rosalind E. Kraus, Fredric Jameson, Horst Bredekamp, Miriam Bratu Hansen, Geoffrey Hartman, & Gershom Sholem.

3. _Roaring Spring_, Steve Benson, Zasterle, $8. "a series of suns / explodes across / the play room"

4. _Boundary 2 Spring 1999: 99 Poets/1999: An International Poetics Symposium_, a special issue edited by Charles Bernstein, $12. Contributors include Adonis, Alferi, Aygi, Billitteri, Blaser, Brito, Brossard, Cobbing, Creeley, Curnow, Doris, Dragomoschenko, Edwards, Healy, Hejinian, Iskreko, Leggott, McCaffery, Mayrocker, Messerli, Mullen,O'Sullivan, Raworth, Robertson, Tejada, Waldrop, &&&.

5. _Integrity & Dramatic Life_, Anselm Berrigan, Edge, $10. "The whole time I lived in Buffalo / No one ever said lovely curious or extraordinary."

6. _Disarming Matter_, Edmund Berrigan, Owl Press, $12.50. "Mistakes are okay, but no one knows the differences as they are exact."

7. _Boggs: A Comedy of Values_, Lawrence Weschler, U Chicago, $22. What Boggs likes to do is draw money-- instead of selling his money drawings outright to interested collectors, Boggs looks for merchants who will accept his drawings in lieu of cash payment for their wares or services as part of elaborately choreagraphed transactions, complete with receipts and change-- an artistic practice that regularly lands him in trouble with treasury police around the globe.

8. _ConVERSations with Nathaniel Mackey_, Kamau Brathwaite, We Press & XCP, $20.

9. _Facture_, Miles Champion, The Figures, $8. "Water & wine to form an oblong cut-off / Or baffle at social what's / That is, in Hegalian terms, the scarf cigar"

10. _The Garden, A Thopahny or Eccohome A Dialectical Lyric_, Martin Corless-Smith, Spectacular Books, $6. "Know, whoever asks my name / that I am Line and go"

11. _Crayon 2_, ed Andrew Levy & Bob Harrison, $10. Special feature on Russell Atkins intro Julie Patton, Norman Fischer, Marianne Shaneen, Chad Faries, Jean Day, Steven Farmer, Brian Kim Stefans, Loss Glazier, Diane Ward, Fanny Howe, Melissa Ragona, Roberto Tejada, Tim Davis, Stephanie Barber, Rodrigo Toscano, Susan Gervitz, Hung Q. Tu, Susan Schultz, Leslie Scalapino, Steve Evans, Steve Dickinson, & Liz Waldner.

12. _Algebraic Melody_, Benjamin Friedlander, Zasterle, $7.50. "Amber hazards / Will / Commend the dreary / Whippoorwill"

13. _Jumping the Line_, Ted Greenwald, Roof, $12.95. "But why / Fell like telling / Lots of flame"

14. _The Forgetting of Air in Martin Heidegger_, Luce Irigiray, U Texas, $17.95. "No project, here. Merely this refuse to refuse oneself to what is perceived. Whatever distress or destitution might come of it."

15. _Pamela: A Novel_, Pamela Lu, Atelos, $12.95. "His self-similarity suggested the presence of a phenomenology absorbed in mysterious, microscopic processes of macroscopic scale, so that we were inclined to react to him as if to a natural event, and he was inclined to react to himself as a discovery waiting to happen."

16. _Pierce-Arrow_, Susan Howe, New Directions, $14.95. "four sides of double-octavo / sheet black-border notepaper / Never yours--Most sincerely / From the confines of poetry"

17. _Midwinter Day_, Bernadette Mayer, New Directions, $12.95. Back in print! "All said is dented love's saluted image / In the ending morning, nothing said is mean, / Perhaps it's too long, I'm only learning/ Along with love's warning/ To invent a song"

18. _Vext_, A.L. Nielsen, Sink, $10. "Strong simple sentences in which / Everything is recorded"

19. _Rhizome 3_, ed. Standard Schaefer & Evan Calbi, $10. Grinnell, Spatola, Bosquet, Martinez, Le Brun, Nepote, DiPalma, McVay, Roquette-Pinto, Phillips, Stroffolino, Ross, Albon, Lenero, Ronk, Dib, Guthrie, Hoover, Wagner, Ballerini, Bennett, Monnier, Hale, Grossman, Pagliarini, Britton, Swensen, Bruno, Osman, Goycolea, Lucas, K. Waldrop, Caples, Hofer, Vangelisti, Crosson, plus essays/reviews.

20. _Some Thing Black_, Jacques Roubaud, trans Rosmarie Waldrop, Dalkey Archive, $12.50. "Being quiet is no longer important at all."

21. _Protective Immediacy_, Rod Smith, Roof, $9.95. "the lurid shine interprets the signatures, keys, sharps & / half-lit lonely weirdos of nature"

22. _Stealer's Wheel_, Chris Stroffolino, Hard Press, $12.95. "even to recount it is to count on it as a kind of crutch / that's kindling for the fire of the present that is the community / in which an atom is always split / in order for some me to get to some you."

23. _Partisans_, Rodrigo Toscano, O Books, $10. "Oh that we could reel it in / just long enough / to alter / its operation . . ."

24. _Politics of the Very Worst_, Paul Virilio, Semiotext(e), $8. "From now on, you have to choose your belief: either you believe in technoscience, in which case you're a supporter of technical fundamentalism -- or you believe in the god of transcendence. Claiming to be an atheist is an illusion."

25. _Nouns Swarm A Verb_, Chris Vitiello, Xurban Books, $10. "Two governments fall in love with each others laws. All islands are discovered to be laws on fire."

26. _Overtime: Selected Poems_, Philip Whalen, intro Leslie Scalapino, Penguin, $16.95. "Some day I guess I'll never learn."

Some Recent Bestsellers:
Girls on the Run, John Ashbery, FSG, $20.
Polyverse, Lee Ann Brown, Sun & Moon, $11.95.
My Way: Speeches and Poems, Charles Bernstein, $18.
Sight, Lyn Hejinian & Leslie Scalapino, Edge, $12.
Faith, Katherine Lederer, Idiom, $6.
Meadow, Tom Raworth, Post-Appollo, $7.
New Time, Leslie Scalapino, Wesleyan, $11.95.
New & Selected Poems, Charles North, $12.95
Daybook of a Virtual Poet, Robert Creeley, $12.
Tales of Murasaki & Other Poems, Martine Bellen, $10.95.
True, Rae Armantrout, $12.95

Poetics folks receive free shipping on orders of more than $20. Free shipping + 10% discount on orders of more than $30. There are two ways to order. 1. E-mail your order to [redacted] with your address & we will bill you with the books. or 2. via credit card-- you may call us at [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] w/ yr add, order, & card # & we will send a receipt with the books. We must charge shipping for orders out of the US.

Bridge Street Books, 2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC 20007.

↑ Index

194. maz881
Re: sideways_from_K_Magee's_Backchannel_Request
Wed 16 Jun 1999

---

dear A.H.

please define island.

B.L.

<< I've been on an island for years >>

↑ Index

195. R Democracy
Re: urgent! Cheap sublet with kitties!
Wed 16 Jun 1999

Hey list folk!

I am looking for a serious cat lover to live from July 2 through August 2 in my sunny sweet, two room Prospect Heights apartment, across from the Brooklyn Museum, Botanical Gardens, Central Library, Prospect Park. Yes that's it, I live on Eastern Parkway, The Champs Elysees de Nueva York!

It is subsidized for the most eager kittie lover. Trust me it's a deal.

Back channel--Rachel Democracy.

↑ Index

196. Catherine Daly
Perihelion
Wed 16 Jun 1999

I would like to apologise to this list for the _Perihelion_ posts.

I am writing this short e-mail to let you know that 1) Perihelion is not open to unsolicited submissions and 2) I am no longer soliciting poetry submissions on its behalf.

I am sending separate messages to those of you who had generously responded to my call with work. Poems may remain under consideration by the editor-in-chief, Rebecca Seiferle, or may be rejected separately.

Well, it was a learning experience.

Regards,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

197. Peter Ganick
special offer to Poetics listmembers
Wed 16 Jun 1999

Potes & Poets Press has re-issued five long out-of print L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetry classics in chapbook form.

They were originally published in 1981-2 as the first pub- lications by the Press. They will become available through SPD in about three weeks at $8.00 each, but to listmembers, all 5, fourth-class postage paid, are $30. Check payable to 'Potes & Poets Press.'

TITLES:

Ex-Communicate, Bruce Andrews
disfrutes, Charles Bernstein
A Geology, Clark Coolidge
B A R T, Ron Silliman
Nijole's House, Hannah Weiner

send check in US funds to:
Potes & Poets Press
181 Edgemont Avenue
Elmwood CT 06110-1005

↑ Index

198. Peter Ganick
POTEPOETZINE / POETPOETTEXT
Wed 16 Jun 1999

These ezines continue in their current manifestation which is to publish experimental and radical texts online only. Subscriptions are free and may be obtained by send any sort of email to: [redacted]

Currently, the TEXT series is publishing email collaborations and would certainly be interested in finding other interesting online documents [in ascii-only format] to publish, whether collaborative or individualistic. Also, the ZINE series is always open to writers who wish to send 2 or 3 shorter poems, or one semi-long poem.

These ezines are published by Potes & Poets Press. The Press also has published A.BACUS since 1984, eight times a year. Look for an important announcement regarding that print-journal on this list soon.

↑ Index

199. Elizabeth Treadwell
Lynne Tillman and Joel Kuszai
Wed 16 Jun 1999

Oh hello, 2 part msg pls--

--Part A--

I'd like to re-announce that Double Lucy's latest chapbook, a novella,

LOVE SENTENCE by Lynne Tillman, is available now for $6, a lovely shade of red, and a cover photo by James Welling. Checks to Me, miss moi, that is, E. Treadwell.

We also have copies of a second printing of

OUTLET (3) Ornament

still available, with work by

Franklin Bruno
MTC Cronin
Malcolm de Chazal
(translated by Irving Weiss)
MK Francisco
Rosemary Griggs
Brenda Iijima
Johanna Isaacson
Jason Lynn
Laura Moriarty
Yedda Morrison
Jason Nelson
Elizabeth Robinson
Carol Treadwell
Harriet Zinnes

+ REVIEWS

& checks still to me. (!)

(Excerpts from both pubs, and previous pubs, now appearing on our website)

*****

--Part B--

& PS:
Also-- seeking Joel Kuszai, who seems on vacation from the work email I have for him?....

Thanks,

Elizabeth Treadwell

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

200. Alan Sondheim

TONGUE

Wed 16 Jun 1999

'\'

TONGUE

"Make clear my tongue, my Salvation,
And open Thou my mouth."

(Unknown Serbian poet, 13th century, from Predrag R. Dragic Kijuk, Medi-aeval and Renassance Serbian Poetry.)

The Lord Jesus is healing and helping people. Would you let me heal you. Would you let me pray for you. This one just came up, suffering from extreme depression and anxiety, couldn't even leave the house, I want to administer to every person, the demon wouldn't let her leave the house. We're going to pray some more. This job is extra increase. I'm hearing 5 or 8 hundred extra dollars per month. Thank you Lord. Thank you Jesus. Get in agreement with this word of knowledge. When I pray in a moment I'm going to administer in this area of a job. Any incurable disease? Don't just sit there. I'm going to pray in the area of incurable disease. Don't just sit there. Quit sitting there. Let me minister to you. Do something. Oh yes. There's that job again. There's another person that needs a better job. There's one on the streets right now looking for a better job. Just received news that the current cancer tests are negative. Halleluja. We're conquering in the name of Jesus. There's a Deuteronomy 9 that says we're going to cross into all that we have for us. I'm going to conquer it for you so that when you enter in you can subdue it and enter quickly. We're taking from the hands of the Devil what belongs to us. He was persistent. I want it. It's mine. Wake up that new home. Wake up that new job. I'm speaking the home. I'm speaking the word home. I'm speaking the job. I'm speaking the word job. I'm speaking the word. I'm speaking the Word. I'm speaking the Word Word. I'm speaking the Word Word Word. I'm speaking the Word Word Word W W. I'm speaking the W. I'm speaking the W W W. I'm speak- ing W W W. I'm W W W. I'm W W W W W. I'm W W W W W W W W W. I'm W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W. I'm W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W W.

NIKUKO WILL HEAL ANYONE. NIKUKO RIDES A WHITE HORSE. THE WHITE HORSE IS NOT A HORSE. NIKUKO RIDES EXISTENCE, STARVES IT TO DEATH. EXISTENCE DIES AND WORDS TURN TO THE SOUND OF THE WIND AND THE WIND DIES TOO.

↑ Index

201. David Baratier

The First Annual Transcontinental Poetry Contest

Thu 17 Jun 1999

The First Annual Transcontinental Poetry Contest
by Pavement Saw Press

Each year Pavement Saw Press will seek to publish at least one book of poetry and/or prose poems from manuscripts received during this competition. Selection is made anonymously through a competition that is open to anyone who has not previously published a volume of poetry or prose. The author receives $1000 and a percentage of the press run. The judge of the competition is Bin Ramke.

All poems must be original, all prose must be original, fiction or translations are not acceptable. Writers who have had volumes of 40 pages or under printed or printed in limited editions of no more than 500 copies are eligible.

Submissions are accepted from June 1 until August 15 .

Entries must meet these requirements:

1. The manuscript should be at least 48 pages and no more than 64 pages in length.

2. A cover letter which includes a brief biography, the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, your signature, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. It should also include a list of acknowledgments for the book.

3. The manuscript should be bound with a single clip and begin with a title page including the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. Submissions to the contest are judged anonymously.

4. The second page should have only the title of the manuscript. There are to be no acknowledgments or mention of the author's name from this page forward.

5. A table of contents should follow the second title page.

6. The manuscript should be paginated, beginning with the first page of poetry.

7. There should be no more than one poem on each page. The manuscript can contain pieces that are longer than one page.

Your manuscript should be accompanied by a check in the amount of $15.00

made payable to Pavement Saw Press. All US contributors to the contest will receive at least one book provided a self addressed 9 by 12 envelope with $3.20 postage is provided. Add appropriate postage for other countries. For acknowledgment of the manuscripts arrival, please include a stamped, self-addressed postcard. For notification of results, enclose a SASE business size envelope. A decision will be reached in September. Book(s) will be published before January 31st, 2000. Do not send the only copy of your work. All manuscripts will be recycled, and individual comments on the manuscripts cannot be made.

Manuscripts and correspondence should be sent to Pavement Saw Press
The First Annual Transcontinental Poetry Contest
PO Box 6291
Columbus OH 43206

↑ Index

202. David Baratier

E-mail's needed

Thu 17 Jun 1999

If the following folks could backchannel me, or if any have e-mail for these people please backchannel.

Bob Bertholf
Ken Irby
Sylvester Pollet
Steve Clay
Sandra Braman
Judith Vollmer
Gerrit Lansing
Sharon Doubiago
Mary de Rachewiltz

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

203. kathylou
Saturday in San Francisco
Thu 17 Jun 1999

I will be reading this Saturday, June 19, at the Attic Club in San Francisco in celebration of the publication of my new chapbook, Genealogy, from a+bend press. My co-reader is Katherine Spelling.

Copies of my first book, Re dress, (San Francisco State University, 1994) winner of the Michael Rubin Award, as well as my literary magazine, Lipstick Eleven, will also be available.

Admission to the reading is free.

Kathy Lou Schultz and Katherine Spelling
Saturday, June 19, 5:00 p.m.
The Attic Club, 3336 24th Street (between Mission and Valencia)

↑ Index

204. Taylor Brady
(no subject)
Fri 18 Jun 1999

For anyone who might be interested, I have written a Word 97 for Windows macro that automates one of Jackson Mac Low's diastic text-selection procedures. After several fruitless searches for the original DIASTEXT, and the realization that I could get paid for spending a day at work quietly writing poetry software...well, you can see where that's going. The template in which the macro is contained also has another macro for building concordances. Feed it a Word or text file and it will spit out a word count, count of the number of words minus repetitions (i.e., the lexicon of the document), and count of the number of instances of each word. This one runs a bit more slowly than the diasticator: a 2,000 word text took it close to three minutes. That's still orders of magnitude faster than I could have done it with paper and pencil, but I'd recommend planning a coffee break if you feed it anything longer than a page or two.

My apologies to Mac users on the list (myself included: I only have the PC at work) for not translating and testing the macro on that platform. That's complicated by my having only an older version of Word on my Mac, which would have necessitated translating from VBA to Word Basic. Maybe one day I'll get around to coding the whole thing for Mac, and for older versions of Word

(or as a stand-alone C++ app, thus getting around the proprietary software problem) -- but don't hold your breath. I'm less inclined to spend a day at home doing this on my own time. (Which is some kind of perverse work ethic, to be sure). About the only update I'm planning right now is a line-finder for the concordance macro, so you'll get not only a count of occurrences for each word, but a line number identifying where each one is.

Anyhow, the file is available for download from my FTP directory: ftp://ftp.mindspring.com/users/cartograffiti/macros/FreqCount.dot. I also recommend you read the documentation, saved as a text file in the same directory: ftp://ftp.mindspring.com/users/cartograffiti/macros/about.txt. And a final word of warning: as Word macros are a popular vector for DOS-based viruses, I strongly recommend running a virus scan on the file when you download it. The most recent updates of McAfee VirusScan and Norton certified it virus-free when I uploaded it, but since my directory isn't password-protected, you should consider it a (very slight) risk.

Alright, then, sorry to have taken up so much space on something sure to be of interest to only a very small handful of people. I hope someone finds some use or amusement in it.

Best,
Taylor

↑ Index

205. Hannah J Sassaman
C R O S S C O N N E C T V O L U M E 4 I S S U E 3
Fri 18 Jun 1999

---

the staff of

C R O S S C O N N E C T
http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/xconnect

would like to present our long-awaited

S P R I N G / S U M M E R I S S U E

featuring NEW work by

* VICTOR HERNANDEZ CRUZ *
* RAY DIPALMA *
* MICHAEL MCGEE *
* ROBERT PALMER *
* JOSHUA MCKINNEY *
* DANIEL MELTZ *

* BEN MILLER *
* HALVARD JOHNSON *
* RONALD DONN *

and others

available N O W at http://www.ccat.sas.upenn.edu/xconnect

please C O N T A C T us at

[redacted]

****

Hannah Jane Sassaman
[redacted]

Theatre Arts Major at the University of Pennsylvania
Class of 2001

Poetry Editor, CrossConnect Magazine
http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/xconnect

Talk not of wasted affection; affection never was wasted.
-- Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

↑ Index

206. Poetics List Administration poetics delay . . .
Fri 18 Jun 1999

as a result of dialup problems (on my end, this time) now resolved. Chris

↑ Index

207. Poetics List Administration
Hello sweet muse... / krupoetry
Fri 18 Jun 1999

had to reformat this. Chris

From: "krupoetry" <[redacted]>
Date: Thu, 17 Jun 1999 02:34:11 -0400

You are cordially invited...

to click on my face if I blink at you...
please...*

*go to http://www.geocities.com/Paris/Jardin/7364/

↑ Index

208. Poetics List Administration format caveat
Fri 18 Jun 1999

It seems appropriate to remind everyone that the list cannot "digest" messages that contain Hypertext Markup Language (HTML) tags. Subscribers who are using Microsoft Outlook, Netscape Communicator and the like should alter their "Preferences" or "Options" (depends on the program) to send messages in Text-Only format.

thanks, Chris

↑ Index

209. Poetics List Administration
Fire and Terrible Work / jesse glass
Fri 18 Jun 1999

---

this message came to the administrative account. Chris

From: "jesse glass" <[redacted]>
Date: 6/18/99, 12:41 PM -0700

Apologies to all for cross-posting!

A Brief Notice of Two Excellent Publications

Fire #8 is now available from Jeremy Hilton at Field Cottage/ Old White Hill/ Tackley/ Kidlington/ Oxfordshire OX5 3AB/England.

A bargain at 4 pounds (or U.S. $8.00), 7 pounds for a three issue subscription, and weighing it at a generous 160 pages, Fire presents large selections from the work of contemporary British, American, Australian, and New Zealand poets. This issue includes outstanding performances from Paula Green, Bill Griffiths, Cid Corman, E. Webb, Coral Hull, and 47 other writers with such intriguing names as Dee Rimbaud and Zenobia Venner. The wonderful thing about Fire is that the possibility of discovering fine work lurks behind every page. Hilton provides space enough for each writer so that one can truly get a feel for his or her voice.

Though the latest issue of Terrible Work (#8) has been out for almost a year, it still deserves a mention because of its superior content and the range and depth of its reviews. Terrible Work gives a great over-view of the current Brit. Poetry "alternative" scene. It also presents fine helpings from Jasmine Maddock, W.D. Herbert, Allen Fisher, Geraldine Monk, Jeremy Hilton, Tina Darragh, Andrew Duncan, Michael Basinski, Spencer Selby, and other knowns, unknowns, and soon-to-be-knowns, or perhaps never-to-be-knowns. Add to that 30 single-spaced pages of intelligent reviews, and a page or two of pointed commentary from editor Tim Allen (including a "critical cover")–and you have yourself a great object of contemplation. Available from the editor at 21 Overton Gardens/ Mannamead/ Plymouth/ PL3 5BX/ England at 3 pounds 50 per issue, or 9 pounds for three issue a subscription, or U.S. equivalents.

From your correspondent (who appears in both of the above) in the land of the Rising (risen by now) Sun. Jesse Glass

↑ Index

210. Stephen Vincent
Re: Eleanor Antin Exhibit
Fri 18 Jun 1999

Anyone visiting or living within vicinity of Los Angeles, the LA County Museum's Eleanor Antin retrospective is a knockout resurrection of her conceptual, video, performance and installation works. A great imaginative, zany mind at work having fun exploring real stuff. If you ever wondered, for example (as I have) if Cindy Sherman's work had a mother, she's here in spades. A big kudoo to Howard Fox, the curator, who pulled it together. By the way, give yourself plenty of time for a choice of many videos, several of which are a riot. If you can't get to the show, the catalog is good, full of evidence, etc. And, by the way, it's still easy to go shopping practically across the street at Sun and Moon's treasure full bookstore. Cheers, Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

211. Pritchett,Patrick
Naropa Summer Readings
Fri 18 Jun 1999

Thursday, 6/17/99

JARNOT, BROWN & MAYER @ NAROPA

This week marked the beginning of the Naropa Writing & Poetics Summer Writing Program's 25th anniversary. O star-studded. O gala. O unseasonable rain & damp. O all the stops pulled out.

I won't be covering each & every reading as I've done the past two summers. Instead, I thought I'd offer reports of selected evenings. This way I can play more golf, which is almost as important as poetry.

Lisa Jarnot began the evening by remarking, "This is an interesting situation. I've never given a reading with Bernadette sitting behind me." And indeed, Bernadette Mayer was sitting downstage of her, in partial shadow and for reasons we may never know. Lisa read from new material, some of which will appear in the forthcoming Ring of Fire this fall. I've written about Lisa's readings at Naropa before, so won't try (too much) to re-cover that ground. What struck me in this new work of hers, though, was the use of that much-neglected trope, the apostrophe. Whatever happened to the apostrophe? It was back last night, and better than ever. "O life force of supernalness!" began one such apostrophic poem. The key to the effectiveness of Jarnot's use of apostrophe is contained right there, I think, in that single line. Call it a "having your cake and eating it, too" poetics, if you must, but the antique diction and slightly bent syntax of this exclamation enables her to invoke and undercut simultaneously. Genuine earnestness and ironic distance are made to co-exist on the same playing field. It's a risky gambit -- and quite delicious. Jonathan Culler has written a very good esssay on the uses of apostrophe. For now I'll just say that the apostrophic seems a particular way of laying-claim-to -- a means for inscribing a bold and yet intimate self-presencing.

Poems read by Jarnot included a hockey poem dedicated to her brother ("and you hold your icy wrists up to the icy sky") (Go, Sabres?); the heartbreakingly lovely "Brooklyn Anchorage" ("and in my plan to become myself I became someone else"); "Poem Beginning With a Line by Frank Lima;" "Ode;" a terrific poem about Jane & Anselm Hollo's lawn furniture and the blue hair of wildebeests that is made from stars, from ice; and the haunting "Psalm After Philip Lamantia."

What else is there to say? Only that in her work Lisa Jarnot employs a sly humor and a sinuous music to affirm, via the extravagance of excessive signifying, the fundamental joy of being alive and being alive _in_ language, of being a creature of language, plunged in the ongoing dream of language, that is a blindness and an epiphany, an endless pronouncing and its apophatic self-erasure.

****

Dear Lee Ann Brown:

Weren't we friends in another life? I don't know. The Ways of the Lords of Karma are mysterious, the bribes impossibly high. You have cool sunglasses -- that much, at least, I know to be true. What you did was possibly foolhardy -- starting your reading with a singalong of Helen Adams's "I Love My Love."

(Steven Taylor on guitar). But it was fun, even though I croaked along in a barely sustainable baritone. Your voice was strong. It was a pleasure to hear that macabre ballad so entuned.

You read from Polyverse and I forgot to write down the lines and I forgot to buy the book before I started writing up this report. There was a poem called "Present Beau for Robin Blaser." It's a form invented by Harry Matthews, whom, you announced with regret, has decided to rename it to "Beautiful Inlaw." I agree -- that's not as good. Either way, this form uses only the letters of a person's name. Hence:

"Rare, rare lobelia rails/robed & born."

And this form, invented by Jack Collom, who may have given it a name:

"Here we sit but where is our food?"

And you sang "Shady Grove" - a sheer delight. And a distinctive Southern lilt re-entered your voice when you came to the phrase, "Blue Ridge beer."

You read a poem for your grandmother, Agnes Wylie, 1902-1999, and for once it wasn't an elegy to a grandparent laden with false sugars. In this poem you used a wonderful word -- "infloresence" -- and that, it seems to me, is an apt description of your own method: a kind of continual blooming: an exfoliation along the finite lines of a fractal pattern: fragments of petals containing the whole flower: and containing the whole history of the flower: and of its species: and the corresponding history of its infoliation, along the lines where a stress may fall/flow: and a tracing of the sutures of dynamic invention: it's an odd sort of prayer you are making without really praying.

And dear Lee Ann Brown, that's such a good kind of poem to be making. I bet you could walk down the street all day and say "Yes" to every single thing you see until you say "No," and that would be even better than "Yes."

Your very truly,
P.

****

Of Bernadette Mayer I will try to tell if I can.

Bernadette Mayer is a character. Quite possibly the Original Character. At the very least, she is in the Original Characters' Hall of Fame. Maybe, to borrow a phrase from Jack Collom and Michael Friedman, she is the Sixth Man off the bench of Original Characters. Anne Waldman, in her virtuoso introduction, said:

"writing was waiting for her to arrive," and who could deny the truth of that I'd like to know?

The second thing Bernadette Mayer said was: "If I alarm you, don't be horrified." I forget what the first thing was.

She began her set by reading, "Your Penis Is Homeless," a firebreathing invective against somebody, god help him whoever he is, that was equal parts Juvenalian insult and the best taunts of your superior 3rd-grader (it's hard to tell the difference when they take their hats off).

One of the milder examples: "your nostrils resemble the assholes of cops."

Then came a collaboration with Brad Hill, a very tall young poet with an enormous backpack. They collaborated to make sure that Brad could attend the reading.

Next: "These are dreams, so I'll skip those."

And then a series of delightful epigrams:

"There is no one at the bird feeder today.
It's raining cats & dogs."

—

Yom Kippur

"I'm dead.
Thank god it's not emotional here.
Ecstasy, that's another matter."

—

"Okay, here come the real poems" (This "threat" was repeated several times, only to be followed by more epigrams).

But then a "real" poem did come along. It was a long poem about sleep. Or rather, about the anxiety produced by sleeplessness. About trying to woo & coerce sleep. About "the artless lambency of a famous night's sleep."

Can't sleep? Try the capitalist method:

" I have ownership of sleep. Sleep is mine."

(This worked instantly the first time she tried it)!

After the sleep poem Bernadette Mayer read a poem during a single hour from August 1992. Essentially, then, a meditation on the category of The Hour -- one to out-Augustine Augustine. A poem, then, about the endless dilations and contractions of "an hour." More fractal geometry at work here. The island is finite -- its shoreline is not.

And a graph of the mind moving, ceaselessly moving, moving in Bernadette-time, which is post-Einsteinian free-for-all time. Which is "I go to the star and come back and dance on your still youthful head time." Of the subdivisions of time there is no end, no, nor any end to thinking about them until your hour is up.

My hour is up. Thank you, Sister Bernadette.

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

212. A H Bramhall
French Village Life
Fri 18 Jun 1999

---

structure of speech attempting to come to terms with structure and its integrity: how wishful. the frailty of thinking this way sadly persists. little feeling remains within the flower, as of now. as always, words lack fire.
unless misspoken, bringing anxiety and calling for a drum. there is a time inside each word then a curving, broadening out into a universe. or tone poem.
or an excuse to make more excuses.

this is not a bridge this bridge is a point of land that overlooks the sea. the simple facts come in thru the wall of experience. door of experience in the wall of perception. the time thing includes a hazy map. somewhere your position becomes important. it might actually be a way to survive with light. the rhythm, now, comes a-calling.

road map the i-love-you crowd digs around the edges until an island is formed. there's nothing like a perfection of solitude, where the sounded sounds of kisses slurp with the hiss of the waves. your expression of doubt, gayety or harsh anti-cynicism can create a spell. let's not tell the magistrate.

a hurdy gurdy never knowing where one is, the sounds come from all around. a mysterious launching exists in the works. the stars, well, of course, they will always be close. that's the point of music, really. the mystic sense of a hurdy gurdy is envy.
oh yes, time thrilled by the meaning of music, hah, that's why writers type fast, or scribble illegibly. that's why the strings are scraped in just that fashion, caterwaul and all. the theory is simple, and really quite accurate, so far as it goes.

French timepiece think how a language can include roses, stories, terror, maps, particulars of doubt and much more. a kiss is just a kiss, or so you are almost ready to believe. but are words on lips? on ne sais (as they say) jamais. France, it is known, has a time of its own. back to medieval out of the apple seed. oranges are foreign and strange. this falls over a cliff, never really quite accurate.

special auction speech in a town called French Lover in Flowers. a dalliance sporting the usual tremours and musical notes. force of the light slipping boundaries and passing the enclosures. if indeed rivalry can be spoken of, longing as a spiritual intention, and running a moment of insistence. you can run too, you can run to. that's the speech that lives in the speech of the town called French Lover in Flowers. a slipper kicked high in the sky gathers the eye. the glow is exquisite, don't tell the magistrate.

↑ Index

213. Maria Damon
Re: Job listing
Fri 18 Jun 1999

At 3:32 PM -0500 6/18/99, Ramona Santti wrote:
>The Seattle Art Museum is seeking qualified applicants for the following >position:
>
>Teacher Resource Center Coordinator: SAM is seeking a self-motivated person
>to coordinate activities, materials, publicity and volunteers for the >Teacher Resource Center, a small lending library for educators. This >position will include training, supervising, and scheduling interns and >volunteers, recommending materials and providing training for online >materials to teachers. S/he will be responsible for database, simple >computer repairs, and the coordination of maintenance of computers.
> Requires: accurate typing, basic computer skills and database skills.
>Library, art education, or museum experience preferred. Must be >professional, and have excellent written and oral communication skills.
>Please mail or fax required application (Call receptionist for appl: (206) >[redacted]), cover letter, and resume to: Recruiting, SAM, P.O. Box 22000, >Seattle, WA 98122-9700, fax: [redacted]
>
>Ramona

↑ Index

214. Kevin Magee
Poster inspired by AH Bramhall
Sat 19 Jun 1999

"just once in a while pin something on the wall"

Can the word "propoganda" ever exist in an open-ended question? Is it a even a word? For anyone sensitive to philosophy, the love of truth, looking for truth, questioning truth-statements, doesn't propoganda preclude doubt, including self-doubt, insisting on a language that speaks the truth? The slogan on a newspaper I read and have even sold at a few plant gates says "The _____ tells the truth." It doesn't always. Sometimes there are mistakes. Most of the correspondents work in industry. Sometimes they slant the coverage. The editors try to correct obvious errors and overstatements. No, there were not thousands cheering Fidel in South Africa, etc. "A"-1: "Foreheads wrinkled with injunctions: / 'The Pennsylvania miners are again on the lockout, / We must send relief to the wives and children-- / What's your next editorial about, Carat, / We need propaganda, the thing's / becoming a mass movement." This evolves into "A"-8's verbatim Lenin: "Learn, learn, learn! / Act, act, act! / Be prepared, well and completely prepared / To make use, with all our forces, / Of the next revolutionary wave. / That is our job." Maybe the ugliest lines in all of "A"? Cement truck-like. And then of course the famous silence turning inward with "A"-11. "A"-8, 1935-37. In March 1937 a Joint Commission of Inquiry was formed that would soon go by the name of The Dewey Commission, named after its chairman, John Dewey, "America's leading philosopher and educationist" according to Issac Deutscher. (Well, along with Charles Pierce). "He put aside work on a treatise 'Logic: the Theory of Inquiry.'" The Moscow Trials. The counter-trial. The cross-examination of Leon Trotsky née Lev Bronstein. I don't know all of Zukofsky's correspondence, and wonder if he ever mentioned any awareness of the Dewey Commission to anyone, or was his imagination of Marxism so influenced by the university schoolroom and classmates who started out left in the 30s and wound up right in the 50s that it earned him a footnote in a scholarly study by Alan Wald on the subject of political amnesia, a book which has nothing to do with poetry or poetics. Does propoganda have anything to do with poetry or poetics? Maybe that new book by Benjamin posted on the Bridge St. flyer has an answer, I don't know. WB is torn over the question of joining the KPD while in Moscow the winter of 26/27. A sensitive philosopher turning to face the fear of propaganda work, which is part of political work. While in Moscow he submits an article on Goethe for the Soviet encyclopedia and Radek criticizes it for how many times "class struggle" is mentioned. What a falling off there was. There's a photograph from some ten years earlier, a whistle stop, the sealed train in transit, Lenin is talking to the town mayor welcoming them, Inessa Armand is directly behind in conversation with Radek, and Zinoviev is bringing up the rear holding the hand of a small child. Has this photograph been doctored by my memory (I'm not looking at it, the book it's in.) Am I substituting Radek for Bukharin? Where is Krupskaya? Perhaps propaganda is the Howl to philosophy's Owl, the old interpret the world or change the world, maybe it's even lurking somewhere in the shadows of Whitman's conjoining of "art and argument"--but that's a thought for another poster. Like the question of the relation between teacher and student and the making of poetry. Like the question Why publish? and Pessoa's solution, which scares me. There's a word in Russian for writing for the desk drawer--I heard someone from Russia talk about it in Hoboken. I don't remember what the word was. What kind of world could produce such a word. I heard Betsy Stone say in Pittsburgh about a year ago, a woman who looks a lot like and whose voice even sounds a little like Susan Howe, "Just for the fun of it I started counting. Seventeen languages spoken on my shift." There are people like her doing work in the trade unions, and she wouldn't flinch at the phrase "propoganda work" or "propoganda party." To militants like her I think it means simply getting out your ideas, getting into discussions, not imposing your ideas, not dominating --especially anyone who's starting to think aloud for the first time. The kind of thing that happens at an open mic.

Kevin

↑ Index

215. Katie Degentesh

Paul LaFarge

Sat 19 Jun 1999

Hear Paul LaFarge read from his first novel, The Artist of the Missing (Farrar, Straus & Giroux), in three Bay Area appearances:

Monday, June 21 @ 7:00 pm
Booksmith
1644 Haight Street (near Cole)

Tuesday, June 22 @ 8:00 pm
Intersection for the Arts
446 Valencia Street (& 16th)

Monday, July 5 @ 7:00 pm
Black Oak Books
Berkeley, CA

"A poised and playful homage to the storytelling impulse... explores the sort of shifting dreamscapes we encounter in Fellini, Borges and Lewis Carroll." (New York Newsday)

"In The Artist of the Missing, San Francisco writer Paul LaFarge has built a city for love stories, a place as dimly remembered as a midnight telephone call, as broken and luminous as abandoned streets seenthrough a whiskey tumbler." (San Francisco Magazine)

Find the Artist of the Missing on the Web at http://www.paraffin.org/artist/

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/
[redacted]

↑ Index

216. Robin Tremblay-McGaw
email addresses
Sat 19 Jun 1999

Dear All--

If anyone has an email or other address for the following folks, please let me know. Back channel [redacted]

Karen Mac Cormack
Tina Darragh

Thanks, Robin

↑ Index

217. Maria L. Zavialov
(no subject)
Sat 19 Jun 1999

A question to New Yorkers:
what's the stairway of the lions in 42nd Street (Toni Morrison mentions it in Jazz)?
If anyone could - or knows a person who wouldn't mind to - consult me on some (very few) things in that novel please backchannel. Would be VERY grateful and mention you in my last will (that is, acknowledgement in the Russian edition)
Masha ([redacted])

↑ Index

218. Karen Kelley
Lost Email Address (CHAX) & Apt for Rent
Sun 20 Jun 1999

Charles Alexander, I've lost your email address, would you get in touch?

Also: I'm moving back to the great Southwest, which leaves my small two bedroom apartment (situated 40 miles south of San Francisco) for rent. Quiet neighborhood and lovely neighbors. 990.00

Anyone interested, email.

Karen

↑ Index

219. Chuck Stein
ainu dreams posting
Mon 21 Jun 1999

Station Hill Press / Barrytown, Ltd. would like to announce the publication of:

_Ainu Dreams:
Poems: George Quasha; Dreams: Chie [buun] Hasegawa_
6x9, 144 pages
PB $13.95, ISBN 1-58177-053-7
13 ink drawings by George Quasha
Published by Barrytown, Ltd.
Distributed by Consortium Book Sales & Distribution
Website: www.stationhill.org

SPECIAL OFFER TO MEMBERS OF POETICS LIST:
30 % discount: Call [redacted] and mention that you are a member of the Poetics List.

In _Ainu Dreams,_ poet George Quasha and buun (Chie Hasegawa), a Japanese artist living in America, collaborate in poetically manifesting the artist’s richly articulated dream-life. These eighty-odd poems embody an ever-opening cosmos of curious image, surprising narrative, and enigmatic "teaching" in a language no one could have dreamed up alone. Structurally intriguing in their own right, the poems unfold the inner secrets of the dreams themselves, yet do so in a language that is always direct, readable, and often "addressed" to a second person (the poet? the reader?) in a manner so startling that even reading itself seems to be dreaming!

The book includes "Oneiropoeia: Telling Tales on Dreaming," the poet's prose reflection on the poetics of dreaming and collaboration.

Ainu Dreams is the momentous merge you get when someone rich in dreams meets an oneiropoet at the edge of dawn—a sudden lovely flooding of the perceptive field. The poems are radiant. It’s so rare to get words arriving still attached to their generative image. Requires a listener/catcher so carefully attuned as to be also one foot in the same space. Quasha’s description of his soft perch at the edge of the dream (entrained to the dreamer’s dream) is as amazing as these dream-pieces that emerge from the mouth of buun. A sort of miracle infusion of vitality in the field of dream-speak, blessedly free of interpretation. And the drawings! and the front and end pieces—the book comes at it from so many fluid angles it lifts & floats you in its burbling current. —Nor Hall

The oneiropoeia of _Ainu Dreams_, involving a remarkable process of collaboration, transcription, and transformation, has generated these affectionate, quirky, and questioning pages. Fables retrieved from the borders of consciousness, dialogues with the finite and what lies beyond. What a wild idea, what fun (see e.g. "Meaningless Chili")!—Anselm Hollo

There is a world of difference between the dream that is dreamed and the dream that is told. And maybe that difference is precisely the world we live in, the compromised latitudes between private dream and public telling. _Ainu Dreams_ is an exciting book because it asks Who is dreaming? Who listens when who is telling? Negotiating issues of identity and absence, Quasha and Hasegawa weave and unweave subtle patterns of narrative—a story is not just what can be told, but also what can be distorted, transformed, forgotten. They teach us to read with our eyes closed, and hear images as if we were, as we are, dreaming. _Ainu Dreams_ is also a timely book, because it marks the first publication in many years by the important American poet whose long poem, _Somapoetics_, was a vital ingredient in the shaping of recent poetics.—Robert Kelly

↑ Index

220. A H Bramhall
For The Sake Of Variety
Mon 21 Jun 1999

---

this sort of thing happens all the time. it establishes a texture within the drama, that is to say: one cares. people invent chords, or invest them, then something exciting occurs, quite a meaningful act, if you can revel in responding. the tribe lingers in the languour of the nearby forest. a town waits to sprout up, you see. it will be there that folks will gather, to hear which song will ruin their lives.

a home run can't be explained, but it illustrates something, as if any illustration could prepare us for what follows. there's trouble yonder. just something desperately pronounced: which faction won the right to fret the verbs.
our nation of nouns has been scheming for ages, let's hear real news. people can get ready for anything. they back their stiff assertions with perfect sales pitches and drama drama drama.
DON'T BE USELESS. call home. mother will appreciate the change in your demeanour, as if you finally understood that scale of torture again. we have rats living where the trouble begins. you'll need to speak quietly but firmly since something must be done.
if anyone listens, that is.
if they do, let them have it.

Part 2, Area C
the melting point grows more familiar as time shreds the concepts.
an emissary from one of those places wants to restore the usual thing to the favourite processual hitching post. a chummy bipartisan cost-affection will strike the fiercest nodes with downy softness and tired prison movies.

success will be hinted at with only the biggest gongs.
that spattering you hear will be an assumption bursting inside the cave.
don't go in alone.

Part 3, Section 3, Salient 2 structure is a part-time celebration of where the hell are my socks?
forget dogma and catalogue, we've got program to uphold. down to earth with ya.

Part 4, Section 4, Route 1, Fortune 500, Red Sox 3 that genetic thing went out with every other candle. not a blessed thing holds us together. if you start moaning now you'll have to speak to Robert Johnson personally. and it won't be easy.
nobody wants to keep unwanted class action suits on the docket unless there can be unitary pleas vis-à-vis that's my towel, this is your shoelace, and all tonsils are roughly the same.
chuck these petites choux in the drier with the rest of the lot because it's time to speak English, good old English such as was given me by whoever it was. English, the tongue of tongues and a mole to get at Tyre. everyone please: be as nice as guesswork will allow you. this skate rink belongs to one and all.

↑ Index

221. Poetics List
VEC / jesse glass
Mon 21 Jun 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "jesse glass" <[redacted]>
Date: 6/20/99 10:49 AM -0700

Apologies For Cross-Posting

Rod Summers/VEC

You might have caught his sound poetry performances on CNN's "Art Place" a few weeks back. Rod Summers has been actively involved in the international sound poetry, concrete poetry, mail and book art scenes since the early 1970s. His press/studio VEC maintains an impressive list of his and others' publications, audio works, and collaborations. Contact him for news of the latest VEC ventures and price list.

Rod Summers / VEC

Florynruwe 52C

6218 CE Maastricht

The Netherlands

[redacted]

↑ Index

222. Poetics List
East Timor forward / Joe Brennan
Mon 21 Jun 1999

---

had to reformat this message. Chris

--

From: [redacted]
Date: Mon, 21 Jun 1999 11:29:02 EDT

f.y.i.

To: [redacted]
From: [redacted]
Subject: East Timor: High level of human rights abuses threaten ballot
Date: Mon, 21 Jun 1999 16:02:57 +0100

* News Release Issued by the International Secretariat of Amnesty International *
East Timor: High level of human rights abuses threaten ballot

21 June 1999

With just seven weeks to go before the UN conducts a ballot on East Timor's future, an atmosphere of fear and insecurity persists in the disputed territory, Amnesty International delegates returning from a research visit said today at the launch of a major report.

"Serious human rights abuses are continuing and are undermining the East Timorese people's ability to exercise their rights, despite promises made by Indonesia to provide security for the East Timorese people," Amnesty International said. "If people do not feel safe, they will not be able to participate freely in the ballot."

"Responsibility for these abuses lies squarely with the newly-formed civilian militias in East Timor, and with those who have assisted and protected them, namely the Indonesian military forces, and to a lesser extent the Indonesian police."

The UN consultation process is the result of a tripartite agreement between Indonesia, Portugal and the UN signed on 5 May 1999. On 8 August 1999 the East Timorese will be able decide whether to accept or reject a proposal for autonomy with Indonesia.

Amnesty International's report -- based on a May 1999 visit to Indonesia and East Timor -- documents a well-organised campaign to threaten and intimidate the population into supporting autonomy and to disrupt pro-independence groups participation in the ballot process.

Pro-independence activists, students and civil servants are the main targets of this campaign with hundreds being arbitrarily arrested, {tortured} and ill-treated, "{disappeared}" or killed by civilian militias, operating with the support and at times direct involvement of the Indonesian security forces.

The current level of violence, ongoing human rights violations and forced relocation of some communities is impacting on all East Timorese, and has led to thousands of people fleeing their homes.

{Human rights defenders} and humanitarian workers have been threatened and some have gone into hiding. Both domestic and international {journalists} have also been threatened and beaten in an attempt to prevent them from reporting on militia attacks.

The Indonesian security forces are supporting and at times directly involved in militia attacks and pro-integrationist campaigns, despite Indonesian commitments under the Agreements to provide security to all East Timorese people and guarantee the neutrality of the security forces.

Little, if any, action is being taken to prevent militia attacks, and hold those responsible to account for recent violations. Instead, the Indonesian authorities have recently recruited members of one of the most notorious militias into a civilian defence unit.

"If the Agreements are to have any chance of success, Indonesia must abide by its commitment to protect all East Timorese, to ensure the neutrality of the security forces and start arresting and bringing to justice those responsible for violations," said Amnesty International.

The international community must call on the Indonesian authorities to fulfil the promises they made under the agreement and let the East Timorese people determine their future freely and without intimidation.

In view of widespread human rights violations by the militias and the links between militia and Indonesian army activities, Amnesty International is urging all governments to conduct an immediate review of all their military and defence links with Indonesia to ensure that such links are not contributing to human rights violations.

The East Timorese National Liberation Army, Falintil, has also been responsible for recent human rights abuses. "The independence leadership must take steps to ensure that Falintil acts in accordance with minimum international humanitarian standards. Their commitment to human rights protection within this process is vital."

"The UN ballot offers the chance to end 23 years of violence in East Timor," Amnesty International said. "If the popular consultation is not perceived to be fair by all parties involved, and the high level of human rights violations persists, the credibility of the whole process is undermined."
* You may repost this message onto other sources provided the main text is not altered in any way and both the header crediting Amnesty International and this footer remain intact. Only the list subscription message may be removed.

* with "subscribe amnesty-writersartists" in the message body. To unsubscribe, send a the message body. If you have problem signing off, contact <[redacted]>

↑ Index

223. Poetics List
VEC erratum / jesse glass
Mon 21 Jun 1999

From: "jesse glass" <[redacted]>
Date: 6/20/99 3:47 PM -0700

Read "Art Club" for "Art Place".

↑ Index

224. Ana Doina
Re: 42nd st. lions
Mon 21 Jun 1999

I'm not familiar with Toni Morrison/Jazz
but could he be talking about the NY Public Library?
It is on 42nd , and it has stairs and lions all right.

best,
Ana Doina

> A question to New Yorkers:
> what's the stairway of the lions in 42nd Street (Toni Morrison mentions it > in Jazz)?
> If anyone could - or knows a person who wouldn't mind to - consult me on some (very few) things in that novel please backchannel. Would be VERY grateful and mention you in my last will (that is, acknowledgement in the Russian edition)
> Masha ([redacted])

↑ Index

225. Michael Magee
Re: C R O S S C O N N E C T V O L U M E 4 I S S U E 3
Mon 21 Jun 1999

According to Hannah J Sassaman:
>
>
> C R O S S C O N N E C T

> http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/xconnect
>
> S P R I N G / S U M M E R I S S U E
>
> featuring NEW work by
>
> * MICHAEL MCGEE *

Despite the typo, that's li'l old me, and (shameless self-promotion) xconnect was nice enough to make me the "featured writer" in the issue, which means extra poems and my picture on the contents page. Have a looksee! -m(ichael magee).

↑ Index

226. Kimmelman, Burt
(no subject)
Mon 21 Jun 1999

masha,

i presume the steps with the lions are those at the fifth avenue entrance of the new york public library bldg in manhattan.

burt

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Maria L. Zavialov [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Saturday, June 19, 1999 3:39 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject:
>
> A question to New Yorkers:
> what's the stairway of the lions in 42nd Street (Toni Morrison mentions it
> in Jazz)?
> If anyone could - or knows a person who wouldn't mind to - consult me on some (very few) things in that novel please backchannel. Would be VERY grateful and mention you in my last will (that is, acknowledgement in the Russian edition)
> Masha ([redacted])

↑ Index

227. Alan Sondheim
Virtual Languor
Tue 22 Jun 1999

==

Virtual Languor

..."I had forgotten, almost, how thrilling fountains can be. An amazing spectacle. Earlier today, my family went to the Rio to see a traveling art exhibit called the treasures of Russia. In the exhibition, there were some watercolors of the fountains at the Palaces at Peterhof, and they took my breath away. Alright, alright, perhaps that was a bit cliche, but they were captivating. It made me think of my visit to Versailles, the exhibi- tion, that is. Speaking of France, my window also looks out upon the as- of-yet uncompleted Paris Hotel. I am staring at a half-finished Eiffel To- wer and a pint-sized Arc de Triumphe and it is very amusing. I would that that everyone would love Vegas just for its sense of humor. And right now I am looking at the boulevard before the hotel which is lined with lighted trees whose rustling leaves make the white lights twinkle and a skyline that is all purple and teal, and I am completely charmed and I just wanted to share that with you. I could have written you about how I started to doubt my own reality Tuesday night, but writing about warm winter nights is so much nicer now. I love you,

Jennifer"

↑ Index

228. Jessica Pompeii

quandry

Tue 22 Jun 1999

QUESTION? I want to get a loan to put me through a great school. I live in Santa Monica and I hate driving, but I might hate idiot teachers more. I suppose I could move but my rent is cheap. I want to write. And study.. Any suggestions? These days no nunneries. Recommendations? I have no credentials. I went to Cal-Arts, but mom wouldn't pay. I went to Loyola but mom wouldn't pay. I went to Santa Monica City College, so mom didn't have to pay. I was accepted into UCLA but the thought of large classes, i.e.. parking was too much. I facilitate a poetry workshop at Beyond Baroque, but it doesn't pay for me to sit around and study and write. Mom says I should become a stock broker/consultant to old ladies whose husbands have died. Actually cousin Mickey made the suggestion to her. (She lives in Wisconsin, and wears a Mickey Mouse applique on her over coat.) Because mom reminds me women live longer then men. I can see the advertising already. Are you an old stupid hag who can't handle your money because you are a women and your husband is dead? Help!! Serious replies appreciated!! -Jessica

↑ Index

229. Stephen Cope
Beyond the Page
Tue 22 Jun 1999

BEYOND THE PAGE continues its monthly series of literary and arts events with the following reading/performance:

What: Rick Burkhardt, Noah de Lissavoy, and Hung Q. Tu read from and/or perform their work.

Where: Faultline Theater, 3152 5th Avenue (at Spruce), San Diego.

When: Sunday, June 27, 4PM.

Etc: $3-5 donation requested. Beer, wine, and refreshments available.

****

* RICK BURKHARDT is a composer, playwright, and poet whose original chamber music and plays have been performed throughout the US and in German-speaking Europe. His poems have been published in _Mirage: A Periodical_. He co-founded the School for Designing Society and Utopia Train, a multimedia performance troupe in which he acted, directed, sang, and played the accordian. He is one half of "the Prince Myshkind," who will be releasing a CD of original folk songs this year. Currently he studies composition with Chaya Czernowyn at UCSD.

* NOH de LISSAVOY is a poet currently living in Los Angeles. His chapbook, _Spark_, can be found on Talisman Press.

* HUNG Q. TU was born in Vietnam and raised in San Diego. His first book, _A Great Ravine_, was published in the Parenthesis Writing Series, and a second book, _Versimilitude_, is forthcoming from Atelos Press. Recent work can be found in such journals as _Poetics Journal_ and _Crayon_. He is co-editor of Krupskaya.

****

BTP is proud to continue its monthly series of arts-related events with this reading/performance. BTP is an independent literary and arts group dedicated to the promotion of experimental and explorative work in contemporary arts. For more information, call: [redacted], [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted], [redacted].

↑ Index

230. travmar03
Fw: Last Reading of The Year
Tue 22 Jun 1999

Jay Brooks, author of The Cult of Boy, and Janine Hayes, author of Pink Slip,

Highwire Gallery
139 North 2nd Street, btw. Arch and Race Streets Philadelphia
BYOB
8 P.M.

Please come to celebrate the end of our first year. We'll have champagne and The Highwire Yearbook to inebriate you.

Send this out to others you know who would be interested in attending.
Thanks,
Kyle and Greg

↑ Index

231. travmar03
Fw: Last Reading of The Year
Tue 22 Jun 1999

Jay Brooks, author of The Cult of Boy, and Janine Hayes, author of Pink Slip,

Highwire Gallery
139 North 2nd Street, btw. Arch and Race Streets
Philadelphia
BYOB
8 P.M.
Saturday June 26, 1999

Please come to celebrate the end of our first year. We'll have champagne and The Highwire Yearbook to inebriate you.

Send this out to others you know who would be interested in attending.
Thanks,
Kyle and Greg

↑ Index

232. Kimmelman, Burt
Poetry New York 11
Tue 22 Jun 1999

The new (& supersize!) issue of POETRY NEW YORK: A JOURNAL OF POETRY AND TRANSLATION has just arrived from the printers and will be at a bookstore or magazine kiosk near you SOON!

Contributors include:

Karen Alkalay-Gut
Kenneth Bernard

Star Black
Charles Borkhuis
Daniel Bouchard
Jackie Brookner
Mary Burns
Garrett Caples
Norma Cole
Cid Corman
Traian T. Cosovei
Robert Creeley
Gilles Cyr
Tony D'Arpino
Sharon Dolin
Mark DuCharme
Stephen Ellis
Thomas Fink
Edward Foster
Carol F. Frith
Heather Fuller
Ian Ganassi
Peggy Garrison
David Golumbia
Michael Heller
John High
Anselm Hollo
Phil Jenks
Halvard Johnson
Jack Kimball
Amy King
Phyllis Koestenbaum
Dean Kostos
Frank Lennon
Lynn E. Levin
Susan Levin
James Liddy
Paul Long
Sabra Loomis
Carol Wade Lundberg
Daniel Nester
Valerie Oisteanu
Gordon T. Osing
Ben Passikoff

Anne Portugal
Kristin Prevallet
Anna Rabinowitz
Corinne Robins
Peter Russell
Standard Schaefer
Lorraine Schein
Roger Sedarat
Lee Sharkey
Harvey Shapiro
Timothy Shea
Reginald Shepherd
Eleni Sikelianos
Ann Snodgrass
Adam J. Sorkin
Peter Spiro
Elizabeth Stoessl
Ryuchi Tamura
Kyamil Tangalychev
Madeline Tiger
Lawrence Upton
Jean-Pierre Vallotton
Anne Waldman
Keith Waldrop
Lewis Warsh
Henry Weinfield
Laura Wright

Further queries? Contact PNY's Editor, Tod Thilleman ([redacted]) or me, or go to the PNY website (http://members.tripod.com/~PNY_journal/).

And, as Faye Kosmidis of Bernhard DeBoer Distributors just told me this morning, and asked me to pass on to you: Please ask your local bookstores to stock literary magazines. She related her experience at the recent CCLM colloquiam on small press distribution, where the Barnes and Noble marketing person bragged about the fact that B&N stocks the "top fifty literary magazines" - so guess which of the fifty are really literary (the others being, e.g., Writer's Digest)? The answer is, there were two actual literary magazines of the fifty, Granta and Glimmer Train. Btw, Borders DOES make an effort to stock real literary mags.

Well, that's it for now. Please do take a look at the new PNY; it is really fine, maybe all around the best we've done.

Burt Kimmelman ([redacted])

↑ Index

233. Matthew J Chambers
(no subject)
Tue 22 Jun 1999

---

hello,
i was wondering if anyone could backchannel me john yau's e-mail or snail mail address - much appreciated

↑ Index

234. Alan Sondheim
Jennifer Climbs
Tue 22 Jun 1999

---

^^^

Jennifer Climbs

My New York City is so lovely this time of year, there is real magic in the neon signs high above Times Square. What would it be like to live up there, so near the clouds, beautiful neon colors flashing against your linen curtains (which will do little to keep out the sound of the traffic below). I can only imagine. I wander and see so many large things moving and I wonder what Benjamin Franklin would say if he were wandering with me, all these moving lights like orderly fireflies and no one God the Creator telling them what to do, they way they flash on and off around the bushes back home. It is truly a magical wonderland and I cannot imagine anyone unhappy who could live there in the middle of the lights.

Now I will ascend to the lights. Some say other people need other people, but I say, no, the lights are surely sufficient. I rise floor after floor looking in at so many lives, and now I will be in the midst of the lights of Times Square, New York City, USA, and the tubes and transformers are themselves things of beauty, the black metal machinery holding everything together, making the galaxy pulse and glow.

Here I will contemplate the white horse which is not a horse and existence which has been stolen, or perhaps never was. For I shall hold existence in my shiny tiny palm, and existence will reflect the whole wide world in its many colors. Shall I hold you, existence? Shall I, shall I?

It is a well known fact that if you take the head off a young girl, she is no longer a young girl who can appreciate beautiful things. You have made a thing diminished by subtraction, just so if you take the head off a colt of any color, it no longer roams and whinnies at beautiful sunsets. It is no longer a colt, but a shame, I would say, to see such a young thing dead and all, and it never lived long enough to have a name.

A thing is no longer a thing by subtraction, it has lost the rectitude of the name, I will say, but oh, look at the shimmering signs there, text scrolling up and down the buildings, I do see that I shall have to learn to read.

Just so, I would say, a thing is no longer a thing by addition, it has lost the rectitude of the name, which depends on just proportion, it has often been said, could I find the source. And just so, a horse is a horse is a horse, no one would dispute that, but a horse plus white or a white- ness is no longer a horse, but a supplement, either a white-horse or be- neath the category of a supplement. For it has betrayed the rectitude of the name, it is no longer of just proportion, and the empire is rendered ill-at-ease.

That is why the Ming shih lun, which may be a latter addition, of Kung-Sun Lung states "A thing is a thing and nothing more. This is actuality." And it further states "Actuality exhibits actuality. This actuality is not empty. It has position." And I do say, just as the fireflies do not know their position but fire up in such orderly fashion and beauty and wonder! so do things not know their position, of which language is a fallen Ob- ject. Thus I agree that "Taking it from its position makes it lose its position. Placing it in its position makes it rectified." (Oh, and now Kung-Sun Lung is Gongsun Long, according to the rectification of names!)

The position of a horse is a horse! The position of a white horse is not rectified, or to be sure, is not rectified as a horse, and it is not a horse. For it is said by Confucius "Once the meanings of names are recti- fied, they will serve as a standard of conduct." And Kung-Sun Lung says, in this perhaps later addition, "To rectify that which rectifies an act- uality, means the rectification of this actuality and also the rectific- ation of its name." Oh, and Confucius said it's necessary to rectify names! (Oh, and Who is Kung-Sun Lung?! and Who is Gongsun Long?!)

Therefore, a white horse is not a horse, for not only is whiteness a supp- lement, but once a white horse is a horse, a dead horse is a horse, a lead horse is a horse, a wed horse is a horse, a fed horse is a horse, and a charley horse is a horse. Oh, such language is a disaster! One tiny fire- fly alone can start a new and lovely pattern, however, so that everything with additions and subtractions becomes a horse, and there is no end to it! (Oh, whatever happened to existence!)

And I, Jennifer, say, Oh, it is really lovely that there is no end to it, that rectitude bends according to the Fashion of the Moment, that Things Fall Apart, only to reassemble in new and lustrous Ways! And it is a terrible shame that we do not live forever to see how Now comes out Then in the future, and how future Then comes out, all disheveled, without rectitude, and and and

And it is so pretty up here and everyone can see up my long legs!

- Jennifer

↑ Index

235. Katie Degentesh

9x9 News

Tue 22 Jun 1999

Hello, listees! To some of you, I'm just a name in your email box, but I still want to let you know that that name will be changing very shortly. I'm taking off for the summer to teach creative writing at a camp in Connecticut; while I'm gone, your 9x9 e-information will be brought to you by Eugene Ostashevsky ([redacted]).

Before I go, I want to let you know that there's a campaign party at 26Mix THIS THURSDAY evening at which three 9x9 members will read. More information can be found at the end of this message.

To those of you that I DO know: have a great summer! I'll be back at the end of August, and reachable at this very email address throughout.

Katie

THURSDAY, JUNE 24 AT 26 MIX

Matt Gonzalez
For District Attorney Campaign Party

Poetry Reading by:
Tarin Towers
The Mysterious Mr. Clam
Eugene Ostashevsky
Shawn Taylor

Music by:
DJ Consuelo

26 Mix
3024 Mission @26th St.
Thursday, June 24, 1999
5:00 p.m. till closing
Readings begin at 8:00 p.m.

BIOS MATT GONZALES is a liberal/democrat/progressive candidate for District Attorney. He was educated at Columbia College and Stanford Law School. He has handled hundreds of cases in his career and is highly regarded by his collegues and adversaries alike. Matt Gonzalez has been criticizing the incumbent, Terence Hallinan, for pursuing felony convictions in marijuana matters involving less than one ounce of marijuana; for not filing a single police brutality case in the four years he has been in office; for filing only one owner-move in eviction case since being elected despite the widespread evidence of fraud in these matter;, for not investigating and prosecuting arson fires that are displacing hundreds of low income persons from residential hotels in San Francisco; and for not properly investigating the election fraud associated with the 1997 49er Stadium initiatives "D" and "F", wherein there is compelling evience that secret voting places were opperated and voter fraud was rampant. Matt Gonzalez is absolutely oppossed to the Death Penalty and believes that prison is for people who committ violent crime.

TARIN TOWERS is the author of _Sorry, We're Close_ just released by Manic D Press; member of 9X9 Industries; will be touring with Sister Spit this summer.

THE MYSTERIOUS MR. CLAM is the author of the comic book _Wenches and Wrenches_ also from Manic D; funniest poet in San Francisco.

EUGENE OSTASHEVSKY is the author of _Noughtbooks_ from the Paraffin Arts Project; member of 9X9 Industries and Vainglorious; cognoscente of Neoplatonism.

SHAWN TAYLOR is a poet and stand-up comedian; champion of 1999 East Bay Poetry Slam and member of 1999 Oakland Poetry Slam Team.

↑ Index

236. Wendy Kramer

uncompromising, but corrugated, position

Tue 22 Jun 1999

Spotted a refrigerator box today (with fridge inside, otherwise i would've carted it off) whose printed side panel read

BACK

LAY ON BACK ONLY

this as opposed to FRONT (i walked 'round to check the other side) & in my mind it argued (& agitated) not only terms & correctness of sexual position but questions of grammar as well. "lie" or "lay" ? i can never keep it straight. "front" "back" or "volte face" ? one sighs in consternation.

↑ Index

237. Elizabeth Treadwell
C. Alexander & J. Debrot
Tue 22 Jun 1999

please b/c

thx
Elizabeth

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

238. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: quandry
Tue 22 Jun 1999

Jessica Pompeii wrote:
>
> QUESTION?
> I want to get a loan to put me through a great school. I live in Santa Monica > and I hate driving, but I might hate idiot teachers more. I suppose I could > move but my rent is cheap. I want to write. And study.. Any suggestions?
> These days no nunneries.
> Recommendations? I have no credentials. I went to Cal-Arts, but mom wouldn't > pay. I went to Loyola but mom wouldn't pay. I went to Santa Monica City > College, so mom didn't have to pay. I was accepted into UCLA but the thought > of large classes, i.e.. parking was too much. I facilitate a poetry workshop > at Beyond Baroque, but it doesn't pay for me to sit around and study and > write.
> Mom says I should become a stock broker/consultant to old ladies whose > husbands have died. Actually cousin Mickey made the suggestion to her. (She > lives in Wisconsin, and wears a Mickey Mouse applique on her over coat.)
> Because mom reminds me women live longer then men.
> I can see the advertising already. Are you an old stupid hag who can't handle > your money because you are a women and your husband is dead?
> Help!! Serious replies appreciated!!
> -Jessica

Dear J:

The work's the thing, eh? Study? Read! If you need a degree to become a teacher--do go to UCLA. College is War and so fight battles there. My degree has me teaching--which I love--and though the poetry's the thing--it can't be the bills, too.

Ask anyone--the bills are paid by either teaching or some form of it--or something completely dif. Stockbroker is an idea--one--but so is busdriver! So is teaching. Everyone I know teaches--students give so much back--I've taught at the college level and now at the 7th grade level. I perfer the young ones--I would not teach "workshops" tho--What's the point?

yrs

Todd Baron
ReMap Readers

ps: a jobs a jobs, eh? Find something you love-- the writing is there, always.

↑ Index

239. Maria Damon
Re: quandry
Tue 22 Jun 1999

---

a lot of schools have extensive financial aid. are u applying to a grad or u-grad program? if grad, if doctoral, most "great" schools will underwrite your sojourn to a large extent, as they are making an investment in the future glory you will bring to their name. what exactly are u asking advice for --names of schools? how to finance your way? this mom thing is annoying; i know plenty of families here in MN who would pay many K for a daughter's wedding but 0 for her education. this is 1999, fer xsake! and you can tell her i said so.

At 1:34 AM -0400 6/22/99, Jessica Pompeii wrote:
>QUESTION?
>I want to get a loan to put me through a great school. I live in Santa Monica >and I hate driving, but I might hate idiot teachers more. I suppose I could >move but my rent is cheap. I want to write. And study.. Any suggestions?
>These days no nunneries.
>Recommendations? I have no credentials. I went to Cal-Arts, but mom wouldn't >pay. I went to Loyola but mom wouldn't pay. I went to Santa Monica City >College, so mom didn't have to pay. I was accepted into UCLA but the thought >of large classes, i.e.. parking was too much. I facilitate a poetry workshop >at Beyond Baroque, but it doesn't pay for me to sit around and study and >write.

>Mom says I should become a stock broker/consultant to old ladies whose >husbands have died. Actually cousin Mickey made the suggestion to her. (She >lives in Wisconsin, and wears a Mickey Mouse applique on her over coat.)
>Because mom reminds me women live longer then men.
>I can see the advertising already. Are you an old stupid hag who can't handle >your money because you are a women and your husband is dead?
>Help!! Serious replies appreciated!!
>-Jessica

↑ Index

240. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Wed 23 Jun 1999

---

if anyone has an email for Louise Bak, would they mind sending it backchannel? Thanks

Lawrence Upton

↑ Index

241. A H Bramhall
Re: Quandary
Wed 23 Jun 1999

Webster's New Universal [doesn't that sound encouraging?] Unabridged Dictionary Deluxe [again with the encouragment] Edition offers this suggestion (p 693), to wit, FITCHER: "to so operate a drill [in mining] that it shall stick in the bore hole or become jammed, as in a wedge". Olson's watered rock, Pound's rock drill: I think you can guess where I'm going here. and don't forget DH Lawrence's father was a coal miner, as was Loretta Lynn's. WC Williams worked his way thru med school as a miner in the coal fields of Pennsylvania. in fact he met HD in the mines. she regarded them as oracular grottoes and would sneak in, pour olive oil on her head and commune with her gods. ancient Etruscans developed a world-dominating culture because of the rich salt mines of Western Etrusca. Etruscans prayed to the deity Etrusca that each day the mines would produce more valuable salt. when archaeologists discovered transciptions of these prayers they decided, after consulting anthropologists, linguists and other experts, that these transcribed prayers could be regarded as poems. btw, I worked in a convent kitchen when I was in high school and the nuns, it was a Canadian order, all spoke French! they played "Holly Jolly Christmas" (as sung by Burl Ives) almost constantly during the appropriate season, used to make their own hooch out of vodka and raisins and in general seemed to keep themselves pretty neatly amused. I hope this reply is serious enough, and that you appreciate it. AHB

↑ Index

242. Elizabeth Treadwell fiction writing exercises
Wed 23 Jun 1999

Dear List,

Please excuse the fiction (& the cross-post).

I am teaching a Developing the Novel class and would be grateful for any and all b/c suggestions for writing exercises for such a class. Some of my students are in the beginning stages of a novel, some are further along, but I feel compelled to keep them all propelled, sts (so-to-speak) with exercises for development and spark -- enough said.

Thanks
Elizabeth

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

243. Tisa Bryant
Calling Cecilia Vicuna
Wed 23 Jun 1999

---

if you are listening, please respond directly.
i'd very much like to talk to you.

thanks!

tisa bryant
[redacted]

****

If you look in a text and see yourself, that is market education, done in the name of education. But education must not be about a cathartic quest for identity. It must foster credible sensibilities for an active critical citizenry.
Cornel West, "Beyond Multiculturalilsm and Eurocentrism"

****

↑ Index

244. Kevin Magee
RE (FOR) RACHEL DEMOCRACY
Wed 23 Jun 1999

4:00 a.m. in the winter cold at polling stations not open. Some up to eight hours to make sure they could, lines nearly one mile. June 2 nearly 16 million - 89 percent. ANC election 66.35 percent the vote 266 of the 400 seats in the National Assembly. ANC president Thabo Mbeki on June 3, "The poorest of the poor have said they trust the ANC both black and white, our vision." ANC water, electricity, telephones, housing to the black majority joblessness 35 percent. "There is no question of passes. There are no obstacles," said one of 85,000 out for a May 30 ANC rally in Soweto. Windy Tlaka, 62, voting in Mamelodi township outside Pretoria. "I can enter places I could not enter before." Lawrence Mphasga, "You can't change things in five years that were done over hundreds of years." Thabo Kola, 20, computer programming at Intel College in Pretoria. "A few years ago some white students were calling me 'kaffir.' We can and we will build this country together because we are like each other." ST. LOUIS - Chanting "Hey, hey, ho, ho, killer cops have got to go," 25 people picketed the South Patrol Division of the St. Louis police May 8 one day after Julius Thurman died April 26 in police custody an autopsy a massive skull fracture a blow to the back of the head. Thurman was attempting to burglarize a pawn shop when the cops arrest and stomp on Thurman one officer repeatedly a heavy flashlight, the funeral a protest. Community figures spoke out. Prince Carter, nephew killed by cops. Picket line of 25, film crews. Carter explained the South Patrol Division, the last two police killings by cops from this station, April 2 Jerome Ruffin killed by cops for "drinking beer and running." Kimberly Browning- Hoffman, office worker, on April 8 harassed-arrested waiting for her baby-sitter. Two cops, nonpayment on a parking ticket. "The female officer handcuffed me while my baby was in the back seat of the car." She said the two cops called for back up, "two paddy wagons and four or five cop cars." They refused to give her husband any information and referred to him as "my babies' daddy, like we weren't even married." Protests planned, 3:00 p.m. every Saturday in front of the South Patrol Division on Sublett Avenue. John Sarge is a member of the United Auto Workers in Detroit. DETROIT - Before more than 100 gathered here May 21 and 22 Irish Northern Aid for 28 years in the U.S. raising funds, families of Irish political prisoners, now working on reintegration of political prisoners into the population. Gerry Adams greetings to the meeting describing the Royal Ulster Constabulary paramilitary sitting on a file of 150 names targeted, he urged Irish Northern Aid to keep up a lot on the Good Friday Agreement reached last year the U.S. tour earlier this year the South Armagh Farmers raised ideas for future tours. Christy Ward on the honorary Doctor of Letters degree to the leader of the

Ulster Unionist Party by Boston College May 24. Rosaleen Doherty described the strides made over the last year. There are still more than 100 Irish political prisoners, 88 in the Long Kesh prison in Belfast, 22 in Portlaoise Prison, and Richard Johnson in the U.S. just transferred to a halfway house in Boston, 10 years in U.S. prisons, FBI, "conspiracy," he completes his sentence, in full, this fall. Ro'isi'n Kelly of Tar Anall described her organization sprang up to aid. Kelly on the newly formed Coiste na nIarchimi, 20 local ex-prisoners. Jack Kilroy spoke about U.S. using secret "evidence" asking "no secret evidence be used in U.S. courts." Noel Cassidy on the latest court ruling against him. The gathering ended with a speech by Rita O'Hare. HEATH, Ohio - A locked-out Kaiser Aluminum worker was roughed up his teeth knocked out by two cops. Picket duty June 5. Off-duty Heath Cops guard the company side of the picket line at the main gate. Security cameras. Steve Smyers, one of the cops came up to him and asked him to go. Smyers said one of them tripped him up, asphalt. Smyers's front teeth were knocked out, a third tooth broken. He needed nine stitches for cuts on his lip the cops claiming he kicked a scab's car on the picket line June 7 workers had added another sign, "Fight Police Brutality," to their display. Tracy Van Meter didn't think police should be slamming people to the cement. Van Meter said, "Guys come in and out spitting and fingering us," and the cops don't do anything. But they "treat us as common criminals." Annette Lindsay, another Kaiser worker on the picket line, "Maybe this is for intimidation. They want to discourage us from picketing." Tony Lane and Henry Hillenbrand are members of United Steelworkers of America. KAREN RAY, WATSONVILLE, California - After a tense five days, the United Farm Workers union or the pro-company outfit Coastal Berry, whether there would be a runoff 60 ballots would determine . Final total 589 for the UFW, 670 for the Committee, and 83 for no union. Farm workers met at the UFW headquarters here in the evening June 1 to map out how to get out the vote for June 3-4 going door to door. "We will continue the fight for the union" explained Ruben Nieto, a worker who came to the union offices here. Arturo Rodriguez told a telephone news conference, "We knew we were fighting one of the strongest companies in the industry. We are not at all surprised and don't anticipate this being over." On the day of the voting at the Oxnard farm an unsigned leaflet handed out listing more than 90 names of farm workers it said were the only ones in broken Spanish warned, "We ranchers from Oxnard have been watching this for many months. We know who has been supporting the UFW. We have many years of dealing with the UFW and have seen how they destroy. You receive good pay and good benefits without dues out of your pockets, don't let the UFW ruin your company Coastal Berry." The vote at the Oxnard ranch 309 for the UFW, 230 for the Coastal Berry Farm Workers Committee, and 37 for no union. Workers at the ranches in Watsonville and Salinas voted 268 for the UFW, 416 for the Committee, and 42 for no union as the workers the season is winding down at Oxnard many of the workers have now left to work the cherry crops. Isabel Rendon, injured last July when company thugs toppled a stack of boxes on her, "Before we voted, they were saying those who vote for the UFW could take their strawberry carts and leave." On Jan. 1, 1959 vice-minister of the fishing industry of the July 26 Movement in what a few days later named minister of communications, a signer of the major months of 1959, among them Agrarian Reform at La Plata recorded in notes he wrote a few hours after until now unpublished (a still-unpublished book) heights of the Sierra Maestra mountains all around, huts dotting slopes. Some planted fields are carved out. The clouds blend with the mountain tops.... The air, grandeur. Take the footpaths to see what's on the other side at the home of "The Villa Claran," a peasant in La Plata, companeros, many poke their heads through windows and doorways to try to hear what's being said. The emotion seizes us. Outside are hundreds who live in the mountains, the same ones among those among themselves, strange words inside the hut. New words to their ears, they trust and hope. The ice is broken. I try to explain it to them, tell them about the vital minimum all should have, about the people's stores, about the doctors and teachers. Their eyes become lost in the distance. "And what did you get paid for your last harvest?" "One hundred sixty pesos. "One hundred sixty pesos a year is 45 cents a day. How can 10 people live on that?" "Well, that was spent on lard and on odds and ends. We eat malanga all the time, sometimes an egg, and a chicken when we come across it. "And if you get sick...?" There is another man who looks old, but he turns out to be 28. "Are you married?" "We have a two-year-old daughter." "Do you have land?" "We can barely sustain ourselves. It's the hunger that makes us old." A bony hand guides the hands that sign. BY MEGAN ARNEY. They help tie the working class together as a class. Point to them in the social order. Go after human solidarity. The trial of Tabitha Walrond. On May 19 convicted. 21-year-old woman death of her two-month-old son "fatally starving" breast feeding to formula and didn't care? Walrond, on welfare, sought care, the nightmare. Recent laws, hundreds of thousands off welfare in New York City, many eligible turned away. Medicaid computer system a social worker said when Walrond with the baby, they were turned away. Walrond went to three city offices for help, one six days before the child died. Months later, two different Medicaid cards and a HIP membership in the child's name arrived in the mail. Bronx district attorney jury photos, the child's body 22 hours after autopsy, it was those photos convict her. Three pediatricians testified in her defense. Tabitha Walrond is why, the worst off layers of our class. We are talking about something that goes beyond the wage any individual. We are talking about the labor movement fight for all. PASCAGOULA, Mississippi - 8,000 workers here, huge Ingalls shipyard. "These are serious times, and we are some serious people," Leon Fantroy, Jr.,

Pipefitters Local 436. "We are prepared to sacrifice, like they are" (United Steelworkers of America Local 8888 at Newport News Shipbuilding in Virginia out since April 5) said pipefitter Chris Packer. Jimmy Cox, 48, 17 years as a shipfitter, said medical costs, and safety, said Jack Beard, Boilermakers Local 693, "The longer we stay out the stronger we are." "In two weeks we can get anything we want," Teresa Nelson, Pipefitters Local 436. "The company has got the money, they've got the money." Ingalls Shipbuilding constructs U.S. Navy missile destroyer and amphibious assault ships, container ships and oil tankers. The Pascagoula shipyard is owned by Litton Industries bidding to buy. Ingalls is Mississippi's largest private employer, annual sales of $1 billion, $4 billion backlog of ships to build and contracts to fulfill. The strike began May 16 when members of the smallest union at the yard, the International Association of Machinists Local 1133 with a few dozen members set up pickets, the next morning at 7:00 a.m. an IAM picket line had more than 2,000, by the end of that day the entire yard. Fantroy said, "Thirty-four people got 8,000 on strike. Think about how important what you do can be. Everybody out there just refused to the cross the line." The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers 1,200 members declared strike May 19. The next day the Metal Trades Council, with 6,500 in nine unions followed. James Lankford, 46, IAM 21 years at the yard, the first mass picket line "awesome. Solidarity took the cake." John Hall, a pipefitter, said, "support is overwhelming." Out of 8,000 workers, Alvin Wiley, a joiner with 20 years on the job, said that at a meeting of Boilermakers Local 693 May 27 "a roar of applause." Mississippi senator warning, "the future of our Navy and our country." Mike Italie is a member of the Union of Needletrades, Industrial and Textile Employees and Arlene Rubinstein is a member of the Aircraft Mechanics Fraternal Association. After 78 days bombing Yugoslavia, Washington got Moscow and Belgrade to allow NATO in Kosova. Officers of Belgrade's army, "The war has ended," at Kumanovo, Macedonia, June 9. Moscow basically co-signed NATO's terms. "There's no peace," said Branislav Canak, in a phone interview the morning of June 10. "We only have the complete capitulation of the regime and in Kosova, people, those who return, will find a devastated area both from the NATO bombing and the looting of villages by those who carried out the 'ethnic cleansing.' They won't be able even to consider their right to self-determination, a protectorate." More than 50,000 "peacekeepers" about the same as in Bosnia, the air space over and over adjacent buffer zone. Kosova will be five sectors, U.S., British, French, German, and Italian forces - Russia has pledged it will not place its forces under NATO NATO face-saving Moscow, its forces, a symbolic presence at border crossings. March 30 New York Times, "Our strategic interest is that Kosovo not be independent." Rambouillet accord for Kosovars to decide their future within three years "would send to Basques, Kurds and other groups that we will support their independence." Washington open-ended occupation of Kosova as in Bosnia. The social cohesion of hundreds of thousands has been and is being destroyed, entire villages erased. "The agreement is not about repatriation," said Martina Vukasovic, a mathematics student at Belgrade University and an activist in the Students Union of Yugoslavia supports self-determination for Kosova. Last year she with dozens of other students antiwar throughout Serbia opposition to Belgrade in Kosova. "Tens of thousands of Serbs left Kosova opposed to the 'ethnic cleansing' by the paramilitary gangs and special police afraid for their lives the NATO bombing. There's no talk about their right to return, and the Kosova Liberation Army won't be disarmed." The KLA, a guerrilla group armed struggle for independence, in the camps for expelled Kosovars in Albania KLA members cut off discussion when fellow Albanians raised opposition to the U.S.-NATO bombing of Yugoslavia during visits by this reporter in April and May. The KLA will now police Albanians inside Kosova. Many in the streets on the night of June 9 cheered when street lights came on after weeks of darkness the destruction the power grid, relief the bombing is over. In Nis thousands walked in the streets late into the night on June 9, said Duci Petrovic, a leader of the Students Union there. "Many sang songs, releasing the tremendous stress from nearly three months of war. The only good thing is we may soon be in a better position to resume political activities and protests and, who knows, down the road." Official statistics, more than 2,000 civilians killed and 5,000 wounded, unemployment 90 percent among 3 million wage workers. Electricity in four- to six-hour shifts in much of Belgrade now. In Kragujevac, at Zastava, the largest car plant in the Balkans destroyed by the NATO bombing, said Christina Ranic, a member of the metal workers union who worked in the plant. "We get 20 deutch marks per month. That's barely enough for bread and milk. NATO doesn't even mention what workers face. It's as if we disappeared from the face of the earth." On the corpses of the people of Yugoslavia, the U.S. rulers are. "We had a very good day," U.S. secretary of state Madeleine Albright June 8. Two days later 2,000 U.S. Marines were landing at a port in northern Greece, on their way to Macedonia. There they will join 1,700 U.S. troops coming from Albania along with Cobra and Apache attack helicopters among the first to enter Kosova behind the British-led force of more than 17,000 NATO troops already in Macedonia, London the most vocal backer. Greece prevented for a few days U.S. ships carrying Marines from docking at Thessaloniki. Athens, Rome, and Bonn. Athens backed down, and Beijing? What's behind the instability in Russia? Are Washington and the other imperialist powers tightening a military encirclement of Russia? "The hot-button issue in the 1950s was, 'Who lost China?' " Nixon said in his memo in 1992, "If Yeltsin goes down," Nixon said, "the question of 'who lost Russia' will be infinitely more devastating in the 1990s." DETROIT - Eighty members of the United Steelworkers of America on strike against Titan Tire here, a busload of strikers, Local 164 Des Moines, Iowa, Local 303L

Natchez, Mississippi, 25 who struck Detroit News and Free Press in July 1995, and other unionists the day's activities the annual shareholders meeting Titan International, parent company of Titan Tire. Early in the morning security guards tried to prevent about 120 workers walked into the room, the handful of stockholders a stockholder had signed over a share to each unionist, gain access, opening comments, the boss opened the floor, strikers asking answered by him attacking the negotiating committee as liars, union members fools, stalked out the door, ending the meeting, after lunch, Grosse Pointe Farms, picket signs in hand, the strikers, a private gated community, a house, the strikers stopped by private cops, the strikers chanting, "Hey, this is your wake up call!" An impromptu rally held on the highway drawing the cops and honks from supporters passing by. Tim Bartlett, a mill room worker 11 years in the Des Moines plant, "Going back is not an option." NEAH BAY, Washington - Native American indigenous rights the Makah Nation a gray whale here, May 17, the Makah the whale hunt keep their culture alive among youth the tribe their hunt the whale hunt the Makahs the anti-Native surrounding the Makah whale hunt anti-whaling "Save a whale, harpoon a Makah." May 23 Seattle Times-Post Intelligencer, "These people want to rekindle their traditional way of life by killing an animal that has probably twice the mental capacity they have." On Vancouver Island, the Huu-ay-aht, traditional lifestyle of sustainable whaling. Canada in 1996 the right of Inuit to hunt one bowhead whale, a species fallen from 10,000 in 1990 to about 700 in 1996. Here in Neah Bay, Makah hunters a hand-hewn cedar canoe three harpoons two high-caliber rifle shots kill the first gray whale the tribe has since the 1920s depletion of stocks commercial whaling hunted the gray whale, the day the Makahs killed the whale children abandoned their classrooms and adults their jobs, Native American tribes from around the Northwest along with the Makahs, for the Makahs, indigenous peoples from around the world and the Makahs on May 22 more on the Makah the whale hunt the Makahs joined by Native peoples from all over the West Coast, the Plains, Alaska, Canada, Fiji, and Africa. Makah Tribal Chairman Ben Johnson, "The whale hunt brought us all together. I'm happy, overwhelmed to see this many native people together." In a statement called the "Makah Manifesto." Unemployment on the Makah reservation is as high as 75 percent for much of the year. Most of the housing for the 2,000 residents consists of trailers and small houses. Lieff Gutthiudaschmitt is a member of Union of Needletrades, Industrial and Textile Employees. SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico - U.S. Navy war maneuvers in Vieques, uranium-tipped shells at firing ranges in Vieques and Torii Shima, an uninhabited island off the coast of Okinawa. The Navy claims the radioactive shells the aircraft by mistake. David Sanes, a Vieques resident working as a security guard, was killed April 19 during an "accidental" bombing by U.S. Navy on the eastern end of Vieques, an island off the east coast of Puerto Rico inhabited by 9,300.

Protesting Northern Fishermen's Association occupying La Yayi' Cay, on the northeast tip of Vieques. The Puerto Rican Independence Party. Navy, 263 uranium shells in Vieques, the Navy 1,520 uranium bullets in Torii Shima in 1996. Uranium bullets are radioactive and toxic destructive power, carcinogenic uranium. Vieques has a cancer rate twice that of the rest of Puerto Rico.

.

↑ Index

245. Chris Stroffolino

Re: quandry

Thu 24 Jun 1999

Jessica, just be careful. Sometimes a school will accept you without financial aid, and you'll be assured by some teachers there, "don't worry, the aid will come later in the summer. Just move here, etc." and the aid won't come and they'll say "funny, this never happened before" etc.... c

On Tue, 22 Jun 1999, Jessica Pompeii wrote:

> QUESTION?
> I want to get a loan to put me through a great school. I live in Santa Monica and I hate driving, but I might hate idiot teachers more. I suppose I could move but my rent is cheap. I want to write. And study.. Any suggestions? These days no nunneries.
> Recommendations? I have no credentials. I went to Cal-Arts, but mom wouldn't pay. I went to Loyola but mom wouldn't pay. I went to Santa Monica City College, so mom didn't have to pay. I was accepted into UCLA but the thought of large classes, i.e.. parking was too much. I facilitate a poetry workshop at Beyond Baroque, but it doesn't pay for me to sit around and study and write.
> Mom says I should become a stock broker/consultant to old ladies whose husbands have died. Actually cousin Mickey made the suggestion to her. (She lives in Wisconsin, and wears a Mickey Mouse applique on her over coat.) Because mom reminds me women live longer then men.
> I can see the advertising already. Are you an old stupid hag who can't handle your money because you are a women and your husband is dead?
> Help!! Serious replies appreciated!!
> -Jessica

↑ Index

246. Adeena Karasick Message from Internet
Thu 24 Jun 1999

Louise Bak e-mail is [redacted]
cheers,
Adeena

↑ Index

247. Tom Beckett
limited supply of bromige diffs.
Thu 24 Jun 1999

Recently I closed out my account at Small Press Distribution. And so I have a few copies of the fabled David Bromige Issue of The Difficulties to offer for sale. After these copies are gone the thing will be officially out of print. A check for $10 made to Tom Beckett will result in a copy sent by first class mail.

Confirm your copy by back channel e-mail and then send your check to:

Tom Beckett
131 N. Pearl Street
Kent, OH 44240

↑ Index

248. Dodie Bellamy
epistle
Thu 24 Jun 1999

Hi, I'm preparing a graduate level course on epistolary fiction. If any of you have any suggestions, please, please backchannel me. I want to extend the discussion to include The First Person and The Document. I'm especially interested in background/ historical/ theoretical readings on these issues--not particularly to assign, but to get my knowledge up to snuff. Also suggested epistolary fictions would be great. Plan so far to include Kathy Acker, Berndette Mayer's Mothers and Letters book (any article about that would be great), Dracula, probably stretch the envelope with Spicer's Letters to Lorca. Some older stuff, and probably some "real" letters to give context to the fiction. But, this is just a beginning.

Thanks for any help.

Dodie

↑ Index

249. Michael Neff
test
Thu 24 Jun 1999

--

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

250. Alan Sondheim
gratitude toward authors
Thu 24 Jun 1999

=

gratitude toward authors

and j g suicide down by the river, gratitude towards authors, after doing ichikawa no reason to do so celan does it all abjection of violette leduc how could i do you nicole brossard does nothing to do after j g ballard but what do you think zeami does of my angst and angels rilke who does and holderlin really does just does that ichikawa could do his breath murasaki shikibu does me kimono kraus and tears and violette leduc and j g suicide down by the river and ichikawa on the radio down by the river where nicole does the slow sashes with zeami and celan half in half out of the water drying off

there's also the aspect of gratitude towards authors, doing what they're doing, we don't have to do the authors, as in 'have you done ryuichi tamura yet,' there's a knowledge in the container, open container, in the container's the wisdom we want, we don't have to open it

container's marked, floated down the river, j g ballard's there, body gone by, celan can't swim either, it's these moments grateful for the water in the jar, open it up, close it again, open it, close it, open it, close it, gratitude towards authors in the choice of the thing or the making of it, what might be called an after thought, better again, future anterior, held close to the abdomen, breathed in slowly, in and out of the river, in the river, out of it, in the river, out of it, and grati- tude toward authors in the choice of the world and the rectitude of names, in the gift of the names, and forgetting the thing

---

↑ Index

251. Robert Archambeau
SAMIZDAT #3/Free Offer
Fri 25 Jun 1999

SAMIZDAT #3 will be going to press later this month, and as usual I'm wrangling things so as to set a few free copies aside for POETICS folks.

The current issue is a special number devoted to Scandinavian poetry, and includes work by:

Anslem Hollo
Tomas Transtromer
Gunnar Harding
Marie Lundquist
Goran Sonnevi
Goran Print-Pahlson
Pia Tafdrup

and other amazing poets no one on this side of the Atlantic has read

Also:

Reviews of experimental Irish poetry and Michael Anania's new book and CD

And:

A new column from Russia, by Masha Zavialova (some of you have seen her writing on the subsubpoetics list).

So here's the deal on the free issues:

IF you haven't received a free issue of Samizdat #1 or #2

AND you live in North America (sorry, postage on gratis issues to Europe and Australia is a killer)

THEN just e-mail me your street address, and we'll get an issue out to you as soon as they're printed.

Better yet, SUBSCRIBE:

$10 for three annual issues, checks made out to me, and sent to:

Samizdat
14 Campus Circle
Lake Forest, IL 60045

Single copies of current or back issues $3.50 each.

Robert Archambeau

↑ Index

252. Kenneth Goldsmith
___ U B U W E B: N E W R E S O U R C E S :: J U N E 9 9 ___
Fri 25 Jun 1999

___ U B U W E B___VISUAL, CONCRETE + SOUND POETRY___

http://www.ubu.com

NEW RESOURCES JUNE 1999

Aram Saroyan, USA
Pages (Random House, 1969)
Aram Saroyan (Random House, 1968)
Flower Power (essay, 1999)

Antonin Artaud, France
Alienation et Magie Noire (rec. 1946)

Robert Ashley, USA
In Sara Mencken, Christ and Beethoven there were men and women (1972)

Erik Belgum, USA
Bad Marriage Mantra (1997)

ee cummings, USA
Two Sound Poems

Marcel Duchamp, France
The Creative Act (1957)

François Dufrene, France
Ouverture san Fin (1976)

Oyvind Fahlstrom, Sweden
Sound Poetry

Raoul Hausmann, Austria
Sound Poetry (1918 / 1959)

Richard Hulsenback
Phantastische Gebete (1916 / 1967)

James Joyce
Anna Livia Plurabelle (rec. 1929)

Kurt Schwitters
Complete Ursonate (1922-32)

Tristan Tzara
Pour Compte (1949)

Michael Basinski, Buffalo, NY, USA
The Feast of the Transfiguration of Acteon Ode to Dee's Labels

Neil Hennessy, Canada dam bam: a kerning exercise

Brian Kim Stefans, NYC, NY, USA,
The Naif and the Bluebells

___ U B U W E B___VISUAL, CONCRETE + SOUND POETRY___

HISTORICAL
-
Guillaume Apollinaire
Carlo Belloli
Max Bense
Wallace Berman
Bob Brown
Jean Francois Bory
Claus Bremer
Jose A. Cáceres
John Cage
Julio Campal
Henri Chopin
Augusto de Campos
Haraldo de Campos
Paul de Vree
Early Visual Poetry 1506-1726
Ian Hamilton Finlay
Carl Fernbach Flarsheim
John Furnival
Heinz Gappmayr
Jochen Gerz
Mathais Goeritz
Eugen Gomringer
Corrado Govoni
Philip Guston's Poem-Pictures
Vaclav Havel
Dom Sylvester Houedard
Ronald Johnson
Jiri Kolar

Ferdinard Kriwet
Lilian Lijn
Duda Machado
Armando Mazza
Franz Mon
b.p. Nichol
Clemente Padín
Decio Pignatari
Antonio Riserio
Aram Saroyan
Kurt Schwitters
Gino Severini
Takahashi Shohachiro
Mary Ellen Solt
Vagn Steen
Salette Tavares
Arrigo Lora Totino
Ivo Vroom
Emmett Williams
Pedro Xisto
Louis Zukofsky

SOUND POETRY
-
Guillaume Apollinaire
Pierre Andre Arcand
Antonin Artaud
Robert Ashley
Erik Belgum
Theo Bleckmann
Jaap Blonk
Lars-Gunnar Bodin
Anton Bruhin
John Cage
Augusto de Campos
Henri Chopin
Jean Cocteau
ee cummings
Marcel Duchamp
Francois Dufrene
Oyvind Fahlstrom
Brion Gysin

Sten Hanson
Raoul Hausmann
Richard Hulsenback
Bengt Emil Johnson
James Joyce
Joan La Barbara
Ilmar Laaban
Wyndham Lewis
Jackson Mac Low + Anne Tardos
F.T. Marinetti
Phil Minton
David Moss
Takayuki Nakano
bp Nichol
Kurt Schwitters
Gertrude Stein
Demetrio Stratos
Cecil Taylor
Edwin Torres
Tristan Tzara
Gregory Whitehead
Trevor Wishart

CONTEMPORARY
-
Bruce Andrews
Michael Basinski
Connie Beckley
Susan Bee
Laurel Beckman
Felix Bernstein
Charles Bernstein
Jake Berry
John Cayley
Cheryl Donegan
Johanna Drucker
Craig Dworkin
Elgar
Elson Froes
Loss Pequeno Glazier
Jesse Glass
Kenneth Goldsmith

Kenneth Goldsmith + Joan La Barbara
Julie Harrison + Joe Elliot
Neil Hennessy
Dick Higgins
Peter Jaeger
Alison Knowles
Brian Lennon
Tan Lin
Bill Luoma
William Marsh
Juliet Ann Martin
Mark Peters
Janan Platt
John Reeves
Dirk Rowntree
Blair Seagram
Spencer Selby
Alan Sondheim
Brian Kim Stefans
Ward Tietz
Edwin Torres
Nico Vassilakis
Ron Wakkary
Irving Weiss
Darren Wershler-Henry
Doc Wright
Jody Zellen
Paul Zelevansky
Komninos Zervos
Janet Zweig

FOUND AND INSANE POETRY PAPERS
RESOURCES

___ U B U W E B___VISUAL, CONCRETE + SOUND POETRY___

http://www.ubu.com

↑ Index

253. Poetics List
DEAD MEN TALKING / Brink
Fri 25 Jun 1999

had to reformat this message. Chris

--

From: "Leonard Brink" <[redacted]>
Date: Thu, 24 Jun 1999 08:57:45 -0700

DEAD MEN TALKING is a collaboration by Spencer Selby (as Andre Breton) & John Olson (as Tristan Tzara). The complete text is on-line at http://home.sprintmail.com/~windhover/deadmen.html

↑ Index

254. Taylor Brady
Re: epistle
Fri 25 Jun 1999

Dodie,

Not really on epistolary fiction per se, but a few months ago Jocelyn Saidenburg pointed me toward DeQuincey's essay on the English mail coach, and I thought I should pass along the provocation. It works well to open up some of the hidden intersections of first-person subjectivity and state power in the letter form, and might serve as a starting point to get students thinking critically about the more conventional lit-crit approach to epistolary forms as hallmarks of the domestic. (Or to look at ways in which the domestic itself is implicated in more "public" kinds of power?)

Along oddly similar lines, and since, judging from the Mayer text, you're considering "fictive" as well as narrative-fictional approaches, might Dickinson's letters be of interest?

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Dodie Bellamy Sent: Thursday, June 24, 1999 10:25 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: epistle

Hi, I'm preparing a graduate level course on epistolary fiction. If any of you have any suggestions, please, please backchannel me. I want to extend the discussion to include The First Person and The Document. I'm especially interested in background/ historical/ theoretical readings on these issues--not particularly to assign, but to get my knowledge up to snuff. Also suggested epistolary fictions would be great. Plan so far to include Kathy Acker, Berndette Mayer's Mothers and Letters book (any article about that would be great), Dracula, probably stretch the envelope with Spicer's Letters to Lorca. Some older stuff, and probably some "real" letters to give context to the fiction. But, this is just a beginning.

Thanks for any help.

Dodie

↑ Index

255. MAXINE CHERNOFF
NAW 17 and Movie showing this week
Fri 25 Jun 1999

NAW 17 is just out: Cover by Susan Bee, work by Welish, Wheeler, Ratcliffe, Bernstein, Shoptaw, Revell, Keelan, Bedient, Sobin, Snow, Foss, Sikelianos, Willis, Equi, Messerli, Wellman, Tranter, Robinson, Schultz, Powell, Selby, Albon, Latta, Johnston, Baron, Loden, Muratori, Stroffolino, and many others. Order from NAW, 369 Molino, Mill Valley, CA 94941 or subscribe for $21/3 issues.

"Regret to Inform", a "tragic epic poem" about Viet Nam, written and directed by Barbara Sonneborn, is showing at Art Greenwich Theater for one week. It's a wonderful, important film, and everyone should see it.

Maxine Chernoff

↑ Index

256. George Bowering
Re: epistle
Sat 26 Jun 1999

> Hi, I'm preparing a graduate level course on epistolary fiction. If any of you have any suggestions,

I once wanted to do such a course, but never got round to it. One of the most interesting novels I wanted to do was Robert Kroetsch's _Gone Indian_. In that one it is done not with letters (and the attendant question of narrator's meddling), but with tapes, made by this graduate student from upstate NY in northern Alberta.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

257. Paul Naylor
epistle
Sun 27 Jun 1999

Dodi,

Seems that Nate Mackey's novels would be a perfect fit for your class. Sun & Moon has the first two out, _Bedouin Hornbook_ and _Djbot Baghostus's Run_, and they will publish the third _Atet A.D._, well, whenever.

Paul Naylor

↑ Index

258. Jacques Debrot
Re: epistle
Sun 27 Jun 1999

If you are going to take any sort of historical perspective, it would be interesting to ask, why does the novel begin as an epistolary genre? Part of the answer might involve transformations in reading practices & new forms of privitazation in the 17th century. A good place to begin to look for answers is A HISTORY OF PRIVATE LIFE vol 3 PASSIONS OF THE RENAISSANCE. Also the controversy between Henry Fielding & Samuel Richardson over the ethical consequences of the epistolary novel is a fascinating one--and extremely relevant to our present day constructions of the idea of "author" & "authorship."

↑ Index

259. MAXINE CHERNOFF
Re: NAW 17 and Movie showing this week
Sun 27 Jun 1999

Forgot to mention D. Bromige among distinguished contributors to NAW.

On Fri, 25 Jun 1999, MAXINE CHERNOFF wrote:

> NAW 17 is just out: Cover by Susan Bee, work by Welish, Wheeler, Ratcliffe, Bernstein, Shoptaw, Revell, Keelan, Bedient, Sobin, Snow, Foss, Sikelianos, Willis, Equi, Messerli, Wellman, Tranter, Robinson, Schultz, Powell, Selby, Albon, Latta, Johnston, Baron, Loden, Muratori, Stroffolino, and many others. Order from NAW, 369 Molino, Mill Valley, CA 94941 or subscribe for $21/3 issues.
>
> "Regret to Inform", a "tragic epic poem" about Viet Nam, written and > directed by Barbara Sonneborn, is showing at Art Greenwich Theater for one week. It's a wonderful, important film, and everyone should see it.

>
> Maxine Chernoff

↑ Index

260. Catherine Daly
Re: epistle
Sun 27 Jun 1999

I just read two critical books I checked out of the library, and renewed the maximum numnber of times. The best books ever? no, but they were very useful as I was exploring relationships between love poetry and other poetry and occasional poetry and love letters. They gave me lots of ideas for a mini class I'm teaching six months from now. One's about a courtesan who used letter writing to bolster her literary reputation (also epistolary) in Venice, and another arguing that epistolary fiction written by women during a time in France when very little lyric poetry was written defined the genre.

Author
De Pree, Julia Knowlton.
Title(s)
The Ravishment of Persephone : epistolary lyric in the Siècle des Lumières Publisher
Chapel Hill, N.C. : University of North Carolina Press, 1998.
No. 258 North Carolina studies in the Romance languages and literatures ;
Notes
Includes bibliographical references (p. 159-164) and index.
Subjects
Epistolary fiction, French History and criticism.
French prose literature 18th century History and criticism.
French prose literature Women authors History and criticism.

Author
Rosenthal, Margaret F.
Title(s)
The honest courtesan : Veronica Franco, citizen and writer in sixteenth-century Venice

Publisher
Chicago : University of Chicago Press, 1992.
Series
Women in culture and society
Notes
Includes bibliographical references (p. 349-376) and index.
Subjects
Franco, Veronica, 1546-1591.
Courtesans Italy Biography.
Authors, Italian 16th century Biography.
Venice (Italy) Intellectual life.

Rgds,
Catherine Daly
[redacted]

↑ Index

261. Charles Bernstein
Poetics Program Announcements
Sun 27 Jun 1999

I am very happy to announce that Samuel R. Delany will be joining the Poetics Program Core Faculty starting this Fall. It will be great to have Chip in Buffalo, teaching in both the graduate and undergraduate programs. Meanwhile, we have just redesigned the Poetics Program pages at the EPC -- more work is to be done, but for the moment it makes information about the Program as well as the Poetics List more easily accessible.

Check it out:

http://epc.buffalo.edu/poetics/

Charles

↑ Index

262. Mark DuCharme
another shameless self promo
Sun 27 Jun 1999

New from Dead Metaphor Press:

Desire Series by Mark DuCharme. ISBN 1-880743-12-4. 24 pages. $5.00.

"The domestic is a crash test in Mark DuCharme’s party-of-the-first-part telling. He outs ‘Genders of the obvious’ and gets into ‘Gestures capped in answerable wool.’ The ‘desire’ in this series is warier than that of, say, Barthes, where it is ‘taxidermy’ which is ‘lovely’ and where ‘The heart being nothing/ Agitates slightly.’" --Michael Gizzi

"In Mark DuCharme’s thoughtful and expansive poems, details accumulate around the magnetic poles of dream and experience, while the center of the field acts as a vanishing point between namables. It is in this shifting scale of dimension and focus that DuCharme’s work finds its cutting edge; he is a keen observer of the mind’s changing perspectives and transformational elements." --Charles Borkhuis

Mark DuCharme’s books include _Contracting Scale_ from Standing Stones Press, _Three Works (Invasive Map)_ from Oasis Press, and _Near To_ forthcoming from Poetry New York. He lives in Boulder, CO where he is co-director of the Left Hand Reading Series.

Order from:

Small Press Distribution
1341 Seventh Street
Berkeley, CA 94710-1409
[redacted]

or

Dead Metaphor Press
P.O. Box 2076
Boulder, CO 80306-2076
[redacted]

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

263. Steven Clay
2,500+ poetry books, pamphlets and magazines
Sun 27 Jun 1999

Granary Books has prepared a catalog "Poems All Over the Place" and offers for sale books and pamphlets (used, out-of-print, & rare - at reasonable prices) from such writers as:

Acker, Adam, Andrews, Antin, Armantrout, Auster, Benson, Berkson, Bernstein, Berrigan, Berssenbrugge, bissett, Blackburn, Blaser, Brainard, Brautigan, Brodey, Bromige, Cage, Celan, Ceravalo, Clark, Clarke, Coolidge, Corbett, Corman, Corso, Creeley, H. D., Dahlen, Davidson, Davies, Dawson, di Prima, Dlugos, Dorn, Drucker, Dull, Duncan, DuPlessis, Economou, Eigner, Elmslie, Enslin, Eshleman, Fagin, Finlay, Fraser, Gadd, Gilbert, Godfrey, Greenwald, Grenier, Grossinger, Guest, Harryman, Hejinian, Heller, Henderson, Higgins, Hocquard, Hollo, Howe (Susan and Fanny), Irby, Ignatow, Jess, Johnson, Jonas, Joris, Kamin, Kaufman, Kelly, Kiyooka, Knowles, Kyger, Lachance, Lansing, Lauterbach, levy, Loewinsohn, Loy, Lyons, Mac Low, Mayer, McCaffery, McClure, Melnick, Meltzer, Myles, Nichol, Notley, O'Hara, Olson (Charles and Toby), Oppen, Owen, Owens, Padgett, Palmer, Perelman, Prynne, Quasha, Rakosi, Rattray, Reed, Robinson, Rodefer, Rothenberg, Samperi, Sanders, Saroyan, Scalapino, Schiff, Schneeman, Schneemann, Schuyler, Schwerner, Silliman, Sondheim, Spicer, Stein, Tarn, Tate, Van Vliet, Veitch, Violi, Vostell, Wakoski, Waldman, Waldrop (Keith and Rosmarie), Warsh, Watson, Watten, Weiner, Welch, Whalen, Wieners, Williams, Winkfield, Wodening, Woolf, Young, Zelevansky, Zukofsky, Zweig, to name but a few.

There are three primary ways to access this material:

1) Search or browse our database on-line through our website:
http://granarybooks.com
click on "search rare/op poetry books"
the on-line inventory is updated every week or so.

2) Our present catalog (basically a snapshot of the on-line inventory) can be e-mailed to you in the form of a text document. It is in a Claris 4.0 word processing file. One could scroll this document or print out a paper copy. The printout runs to some 130 pages (single-sided). Email your email address to:
[redacted]

3) We can snail mail a paper copy. Printing front and back the catalog runs to over 75 81/2 x 11 pages. Cost for photocopying and priority shipping is $15 within the domestic U.S.; $22 everywhere else (global priority). We can accept visa and mastercard to speed up the process if you wish to receive a catalog via the mail.

Thanks!
Steve Clay

↑ Index

264. Patrick F. Durgin
Lusk
Sun 27 Jun 1999

If anyone happens to have a contact for Dorothy Trujillo Lusk, please pass it along. Thanks Patrick F. Durgin www.avalon.net/~kenning

↑ Index

265. Bradford J Senning
Moving to NYC
Mon 28 Jun 1999

Greeting everyone,

I'm making the big move to Manhattan this summer and am currently going through the motions of finding a place there. If anybody on the listserv knows of any places opening up, I'm currently looking.

In the general vicinity of NYU is preferable. Inexpensive is also good (my girlfriend and I will be living there on student loans). But any information will be valuable.

Besides that, I wish to say that I'm looking forward to attending many of the poetry readings I keep hearing about on this listserv. Perhaps I will meet some of you at readings in the coming years.

Thanks for your time,
Bradford Senning

↑ Index

266. Billy Little Vancouver report
Mon 28 Jun 1999

Haven't been in Coquitlam for fifteen years, but Friday evening, Rojeanne, Jim and i braved rush hour traffic to catch the first poetry reading at the new Evergreen Culture Centre. Pierre Coupey, George Stanley and Sharon Thesen read to an appreciative crowd of fifty including Jerry Pethick, Michael DeCourcy, Marya Hindmarch, Goh Poh Seng, and Diane Forsythe. Pierre, the founding editor of the Capilano Review, whose paintings and prints graced the walls of the gallery opened the evening, reading a series of short, crisp, imagistic? poems, dedicated to the memory of his parents: VI what did we speak when we spoke figmental phantoms leopards shooting stars

as if rest or dream were possible imaginary hand

grief & echo

the tones of you taking us to some knowledge of love

we did not know
we could be moved to (comet in sky

square inch of earth

There's a nicely produced chapbook of these poems including the prints that accompany them and family snapshots, Requiem Notations I-IX, which was originally produced for a show of paintings and prints he hund last year at the Canadian Embassy in Tokyo.

George Stanley, the North American Rilke, followed starting of by reading Creeley's poem Histoire de Florida, then a few poems from his most recent collection, Gentle Northern Summer, ending too quickly with the brave and brilliant

VERACRUZ

In Veracruz, city of breezes & sailors & loud birds, an old man, I walked the Malecon by the sea, and I thought of my father, who when a young man had walked the Malecon in Havana, dreaming of Brazil, and I wished he had gone to Brazil &learned magic,

and I wished my father had come back to San Francisco armed with Brazilian magic, & that he had married not my mother, but her brother, whom he truly loved.

I wish my father had, like Tiresias, changed himself into a woman, and that he had been impregnated by my uncle, & given birth to me as a girl.

I wish that I had grown up in San Francisco as a girl,
a tall serious girl,

& that eventually I had come to Veracruz, & walking on the Malecon, I had met a sailor, a Mexican sailor or a sailor from some other country-- maybe a Brazilian sailor, & that he had married me, & I had become pregnant
by him,

so that I could give birth at last to my son--the boy
I love.

After a short break, Sharon Thesen, the finest poet ever to come out of Prince George, acknowledging George's profundity, promised to be entertaining in contrast, she began with the poem George had requested:

I Drive The Car

I drive the car
while the choir ascends toward a far transparency these words tap at with a show of politeness

I drive my car
and my friend also drives hers & takes a detour to watch crows assemble & disperse over the Cassiar Connector

They hang out there

I drive the car
afraid of the earthquake & drive it afraid of myself, what is it I do, I wonder, & also what others do, are they also afraid?

Or else go crazy I drive the car around in that too, like a maniac like the wind

In the car someone's playing the piano with an eye-patch on & the helium voice of a drugged-out-poet, Besame Mucho, & mucho federales at the border

Where you can't step out past a certain point painted with certitude across the pavement & why would you want to, anyway enter that foreign country all aplomb and curiosity

No, I drive the car,
I hope it works that the engine don't fall apart. I think oh, it will last five or ten years.
Then what. Another car.

My car I drive back & forth around the town over bridges & here and there, like everyone else driving their cars. In the back seat sits the ghost of your grandma.

I drive the car & pick up my friend at her house, she comes out the red door, I'm five minutes late & we're laughing tragically by the time we go past the SPCA

The road is black after dark rain and it ends in the sea. Big semis are minotaurs, some have smoke-stacks.
The air stings from tiny black particles they blow at it, burdened and in a hurry

I put her in drive
& then I drive her & this is what I do, I drive the car.

from her sixth book, Aurora

then she read from unpublished poems, quickly terrifying herself by lapsing into profundity.
A great evening, too short most agreed.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

267. Stephen Vincent
Philip Whalen
Mon 28 Jun 1999

There was a downer review of Whalen's new Penquin collection (with intro by Leslie Scalapino) in yesterday's San Francisco Sunday Chronicle Book Review. I am not sure what the Chronicle critic was trying to perform other than he somehow missed and hardly gave a clue to the rich and various brilliance(s) of Whalen's work. While this work has fortunately managed to get published over the years, Whalen remains a wry counter-careerist which unfortunately has kept the poems from larger public assessment, celebration and/or review. Maybe obscurity is part of the character structure of some West coast giants. Kenneth Rexroth (who was very public) had a paranoid streak that caused him to slash every critic who crossed the horizon, leaving him dismissed from any real consideration in the modernist Canon. Retrieval efforts to recognize his work remain ongoing. Then there is Beverly Dahlen in hermetic, apparently quite non-careerist retreat. Lyn Hejinian (gratefully) (among a few others) for example, seems to have figured it out - keeping her generous critical mind and creative work at the public forefront - east, middle and west. Well, I diverged from my original intent. I'm pissed off at the Chron review. Which is to ask, has anyone read a good, substantial review of Whalen's new Collected? Cheers, Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

268. Kyle Conner
SHAMELESS PROMOTION
Mon 28 Jun 1999

>came like it went
> by Greg Fuchs
>
>Buck Downs Books
>Washington, D.C.
>1999
>ISBN 1-886353-05-0
>
>Available through Buck Downs Books, P.O. Box 50376, Washington, D.C. 20091 >and Small Press Distribution, 1341 7th Street, Berkeley, 94710-1403; (510) >[redacted]; www.spdbooks.org
>
> Andrei Codrescu
> "Greg Fuchs is building a stubborn island in the panic of late century >techne. Like a bird, he gathers and defends bits of childhood, optimism of >love, scents of New Orleans, political indignation--and glues them together >with the spit of poetry. You can see this birdnest island from many miles >off. Point your canoes to it--it's habitable."

>
>Stephen Rodefer
> "Greg Fuchs and his eponymous off-Broadway exploits amid the sometime >murderous refurbishment of Times Square, are living proof of Gramsci's >seamless theorem: derricks rain down upon our beds faster in hell. In other >words, it is en route between Philly and New York that America at last >succumbs to the subtraction of some of its parts. And labor's nuts awake, >downsized from the last ditch effort to become a champ for her love. A great >way to arrive or to leave, smelling of gingko, wallpaper, and booty at the >great cheetah banquet."
>
>Elinor Nauen
> "Greg Fuchs' poems are suave and charming, open and unafraid, sly, >generous, gorgeous, edgy. It's clear that he "falls in love every morning" >yet he's not sentimental--instead he hangs on to dis and dish. "The world >shoves right >on in" in these poems and we can't wait to grab a handful of real words:
>giddy, grace, tang, gumption, reckless, blue plate crayola, scuzzy, rogue.
>Scarcely a poem goes by that doesn't have a terrific line or two ("menage a >trois is apparently the fin de siecle/cigar we're all preparing to smoke";
>"The love doll/deflates on the knoll"). There's more stuff here than you can >imagine--friends, romance, a life, adventures, thoughts deep and silly.
>"I've forgotten almost everything that's happened to me" he announces, but >of course that's only after he's told us everything."
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

↑ Index

269. kathylou
a+bend press
Mon 28 Jun 1999

Hello All,
I've gotten some inquiries concerning how to order my new little book, so I'm posting that along with some information about the press.

The a+bend press small book series is published in conjunction with literary events organized by the editor, Jill Stengel.

Titles include:
book three "as far as" by Jen Hofer book four "Genealogy" by Kathy Lou Schultz book five "22" by Katherine Spelling book eight (forthcoming) by Susan Gevirtz & Myung Mi Kim

Books cost $5.00 each plus $2.00 shipping and handling.
Make checks payable to Jill Stengel.
3862 21st Street
San Francisco, CA 94114

↑ Index

270. kathylou
Re: epistle
Mon 28 Jun 1999

On the poetic front, Erica Hunt's "Dear" and "Dear Dear" series (don't have the title in front of me) in _Local History_ is also a good example.

Kathy Lou Schultz
> Dodi,
>
> Seems that Nate Mackey's novels would be a perfect fit for your class.
> Sun & Moon has the first two out, _Bedouin Hornbook_ and _Djbot > Baghostus's Run_, and they will publish the third _Atet A.D._, well, > whenever.
>
> Paul Naylor

↑ Index

271. Elizabeth Treadwell
Garrett Caples
Mon 28 Jun 1999

Seeking email contact for Garrett Caples.

Thanks.

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

272. Tony Green
Re: epistle
Mon 28 Jun 1999

---

seems to me epistles are rich in the forms of fiction & love poetry before the epistolary novel, read Vincent Voiture's letters?

+ courier service in early 17th century made horse-mail a reality, 2 weeks for a letter Paris to Rome is not bad by 20th c standards, -- provided the courier didnt get killed by brigands. Epistles ruined by pistols. B ut then there were rumours (just rumours) not long ago of Italian mail service getting so overloaded that tons of mail was burned to speed delivery up a bit.

(& by the way, that made the Republique des Lettres possible, a widespread exchange on intellectual matters that wd if it cd have heartily embraced e-mail lists such as this) -- Hats off to our epistolary ancestors!

Tony Green

↑ Index

273. Alan Sondheim
A Terrific Tale with a Save at the End!
Mon 28 Jun 1999

=

A Terrific Tale with a Save at the End!

Tha faallng th$t flash h$s laft ma, th$t bpnas $ra hald by phpnamas np lpngar sppkan, th$t tha Symbpl by tha Ha$rth h$s ch$rrad:
If I can't write, I won't be able to wait for you, O Existence!
I am afraid of opposites, each and everywhere.:W$ltlng:
I $m frld pf lpslng my $blllty tp wrlta!
I $m frld pf npn-axlstanca.:dissolved forever:

W$ltlng: I $m frld pf lpslng my $blllty tp wrlta!
I $m frld pf npn-axlstanca!
transforms Your Tha faallng th$t flash h$s laft ma, th$t bpnas $ra hald by phpnamas np lpngar sppkan,
th$t tha Symbpl by tha Ha$rth h$s ch$rrad on Effaced Skin...
Ah, Living with No Longer Spoken!
Ch$rrad Phonemes: That Flash Has Left Me!
Spaachlass Bafora Thaa!

But then I know that if I get to Non-Existence first, I can beat it at its own game and really do it in, I can stomp and squish Non-Existence, Heh! already wet with the energy of it all, and then I'll return to speaking and singing and murmuring and whispering and talking and saying and tell- ing and even screaming and yelling and even speaking some more! Yes I will! Yes I will! Even speaking some more!

↑ Index

274. Steven Marks
Re: epistle
Mon 28 Jun 1999

Although not strictly epistolary, the cronicas (chronicles) written by Clarice Lispector for the Sat. edition of The Brazilian News read like letters. She wrote these pieces over a period of six years and they are like a private six-year conversation to the public. New Directions published Selected Cronicas about two years ago.

↑ Index

275. vincet
Re: Philip Whalen
Tue 29 Jun 1999

Hi Stephen, The man that reviews poetry for the chronicle has been writing those piece of shits for a long time. They don't do anything to shed light on the poets in question work, only show that he reviewer has bland taste and only seem to know poetry from the professional and encyclopedia not emotional or religious persective. Recently, I know there was new poetry reviews by somebody different that was on the mark, and direct, and honest, a review of John Ashberry and one other one, review of another poet. But I havent seen anything by him the past weeks of the book reviews. Maybe the Whalen reviewer got mad at the editor for encorachment of territory or something.

I definitely admit that Whalen is amazing poet, but this book is not the best. To much Buddism, kind of corny. But the introduction is terrible, hardly even readable. so maybe the whole book is cursed, anyway, but that would be sad but funny for a professional Buddist.

Good luck finding more reviews. Vincent

↑ Index

276. John Tranter
Whalen review in Jacket # 7
Tue 29 Jun 1999

In a recent posting, Stephen Vincent asked:

"Which is to ask, has anyone read a good, substantial review of Whalen's new Collected?"

Jacket number seven (free, and published on the Internet only), not yet quite complete (mea culpa!) has a wonderful review by Tom Clark, at this URL

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket07/whalen-clark.html from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

277. Ron Silliman
Whalen
Tue 29 Jun 1999

Steve Vincent is being diplomatic in not saying that "the Chronicle critic" is Tom Clark (whom I presume must think it to have been a warm, generous and positive review of his one-time neighbor on the mesa). Whalen's counter-careerism certainly has been a factor, and Steve's right about Rexroth and Dahlen also. But I'd add Bob Grenier and even Joanne Kyger to that list. All folks who deserve to be read closely (and widely).

Ron

"There was a downer review of Whalen's new Penquin collection (with intro by Leslie Scalapino) in yesterday's San Francisco Sunday Chronicle Book Review. I am not sure what the Chronicle critic was trying to perform other than he somehow missed and hardly gave a clue to the rich and various brilliance(s) of Whalen's work. While this work has fortunately managed to get published over the years, Whalen remains a wry counter-careerist which unfortunately has kept the poems from larger public assessment, celebration and/or review. Maybe obscurity is part of the character structure of some West coast giants. Kenneth Rexroth (who was very public) had a paranoid streak that caused him to slash every critic who crossed the horizon, leaving him dismissed from any real consideration in the modernist Canon. Retrieval efforts to recognize his work remain ongoing. Then there is Beverly Dahlen in hermetic, apparently quite non-careerist retreat. Lyn Hejinian (gratefully) (among a few others) for example, seems to have figured it out - keeping her generous critical mind and creative work at the public forefront - east, middle and west. Well, I diverged from my original intent. I'm pissed off at the Chron review. Which is to ask, has anyone read a good, substantial review of Whalen's new Collected? Cheers, Stephen Vincent"

↑ Index

278. Camille Martin funky butt
Tue 29 Jun 1999

If any of y'all are gonna be in the Big Easy the next few days, please come to this reading!

L I V E A T T H E F U N K Y B U T T

Joel Dailey
and Camille Martin

Joel Dailey's numerous chapbooks include _Release Window_ (Semiquasi Press) and _Public Storage_ (Tight Press). His collection _Lower 48_ (Lavender Ink) was recently unleashed.

Camille Martin is the author of _Plastic Heaven_ (Fell Swoop) and the forthcoming _Magnus Loop_ (Chax Press) and _Sesame Kiosk_ (Lavender Ink).

9 pm, Tuesday, July 6
714 N. Rampart St.
New Orleans

↑ Index

279. john coletti
Berrigan Sightings
Tue 29 Jun 1999

Does anybody here know if Edmund Berrigan is giving a reading for his new book this weekend in San Francisco? & if so where & when?

Thanks,
John Coletti

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

280. Lowther,John burnt epistles
Tue 29 Jun 1999

tony green wrote;

"...there were rumours (just rumours) not long ago of Italian mail service getting so overloaded that tons of mail was burned to speed delivery up a bit."

& it made me think of nepal
in 1990
during the riots
when none of our mail was being delivered and i went with a friend to see if we cd collect it from the p.o.

it was closed

around back we found many huge piles of ash with the odd corner of an envelop here and there

↑ Index

281. George Bowering
Re: burnt epistles
Tue 29 Jun 1999

> tony green wrote;
>
> "...there were rumours (just rumours) not long ago of Italian mail service getting so overloaded that tons of mail was burned to speed delivery up a bit."

I saw a TV news programme with footage of such a thing being done in the late seventies in Italy. It involved little forklifts and bulldozers. At the time I thought: why cant this procedure be instituted for poetry?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

282. David Kellogg
Would the real Tom Clark please stand up?
Tue 29 Jun 1999

The reviews in Jacket and the SF Chronicle are exactly the same, aside from formatting

Cheers,
David
~~~
~~~

speak a phrase, somehow, perhaps unwittingly, happen upon an arrangement of words in writing or speech, as one does, that struck him, and he would excitedly explain what struck him. then he would credit you for finding. it wasn't encouragement, it was commitment. to Poetry, which seems such a flat statement as I type. the job at hand. recording his young daughter's Figures of Speech, found things. he made use of a hallway lined with cork bulletin boards, usually devoted to student artwork. carefully pinned 5x8 cards along the entire length, each card containing one poem (later to become Sentences). he asked, what will I do with these, his pile of 5x8 cards. a word gallery.

could go
quiet any time

he arranged for Larry Eigner to read at the school. informally gathered around a couple of cafeteria tables, but an event nonetheless. if you want to call that a gesture (which it wasn't, it was interest, it was genuine), then call it a generous one. could we call Robert Grenier a pioneer? with the idea that pioneers walk forth with or without paths. 'career' simply describes his path. just responding to, seconding, Ron Silliman's push of RG.

↑ Index

284. Dale Smith
Re: Whalen
Tue 29 Jun 1999

If anyone is really interested in reading this "downer" review of Philip Whalen by Tom Clark, you can browse:

www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/06/27/RV105857.DTL.

Tom's review in Jacket, or a 1996 review in the SF Chronicle of Whalen's Canoeing Up Cabarga Creek might seem more "generous and positive" to those used to book reviews reading like PR blurbs rather than critical engagements with poetry.

> Steve Vincent is being diplomatic in not saying that "the Chronicle critic"
> is Tom Clark (whom I presume > must think it to have been a warm, generous and positive review of his > one-time neighbor on the > mesa). Whalen's counter-careerism certainly has been a factor, and Steve's > right about Rexroth and

> Dahlen also. But I'd add Bob Grenier and even Joanne Kyger to that list. All
>
> folks who deserve to be
>
> read closely (and widely).
>
> Ron
>
> "There was a downer review of Whalen's new Penquin collection (with intro by
>
> Leslie Scalapino) in yesterday's San Francisco Sunday Chronicle Book Review.
>
> I am not sure what the Chronicle critic was trying to perform other than he
>
> somehow missed and hardly gave a clue to the rich and various brilliance(s)
>
> of Whalen's work.
>
> While this work has fortunately managed to get published over the years,
>
> Whalen remains a wry counter-careerist which unfortunately has kept the
>
> poems
>
> from larger public assessment, celebration and/or review. Maybe obscurity is
>
> part of the character structure of some West coast giants. Kenneth Rexroth
>
> (who was very public) had a paranoid streak that caused him to slash every
>
> critic who crossed the horizon, leaving him dismissed from any real
>
> consideration in the modernist Canon. Retrieval efforts to recognize his
>
> work
>
> remain ongoing. Then there is Beverly Dahlen in hermetic, apparently quite
>
> non-careerist retreat. Lyn Hejinian (gratefully) (among a few others) for
>
> example, seems to have figured it out - keeping her generous critical mind
>
> and creative work at the public forefront - east, middle and west.
>
> Well, I diverged from my original intent. I'm pissed off at the Chron
>
> review.
>
> Which is to ask, has anyone read a good, substantial review of Whalen's new
>
> Collected?
>
> Cheers,
>
> Stephen Vincent"

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

285. Kevin Magee
Re: gratitude toward authors
Tue 29 Jun 1999

T H I N K I N G O F Y O U

[think/thank = denken/danken Dankbarkeit f(--;) gratitude
Denkarbeit f(--;) brainwork] "Du mußt dein Leben ändern."

There is a question to ask. Or has it been asked as it has always been asked, indirect and artificial and abstract: "Who's there?"

Is it the parrot in the opening paragraph of Toni's JAZZ that says. (The snow she ran through so windswept she left no footprints).

Who has the right to take down a road of no return, if the time has come to ask what poetry is for, a form "for love," or love of form? Is it "just between us" or is it a fist raised in the face of the world (Mexico City, Olympics, 1968). Power and Protest.

Or conversational intimacy, material taste of one who can withstand my ideality of the empirical presence as condition to the possibility of making any art at all, someone other than my propaganda? There is an art that brings into existence in its strictest sense its maker's signature, and it trusts its news. Deleuze's glass bird that eyes the Sarajevos of destroyed relations, dominating.

"Defense or attack?--he asked, as if the military operations had been taking place just outside London. This was written in April 1871: THEY SHOULD HAVE MARCHED ON VERSAILLES. (Lenin, Preface to the Russian Translation of Marx's Letters). The Regents of the University of California, copyright 1977: "[W]ithin--or between-these texts of Marx . . . a strange theoretical novel . . . in the comedy of dialectic . . . into the conceptual orbit of Eros . . . Marx (Engels, Lenin), the Commune--in which is condensed a maximum of 'dreamwork,' of 'unconscious,' of 'the repressed'--to cathect the term STATE . . ."

The philosopher thinks outside the rectitude of the propagandist, the one who hawks the News, the question of every art's use or usefulness--how can it be made more harmful, to whom or what can it do the most harm?

Robin at New College Chapel, Friday, June 20, 1986: "I would love to do that to all of you, I even thought of it. I thought well we'll just ask everyone in this audience to write a blasphemy. I wonder how many of us even know what to blaspheme."

P R O P A G A N D A B E M Y B E A T R I C E !

Philosophy, you who would be with me, be with me
One and the Same, speak to me a little, draw me back from Error.

Wrongly understood and wrongly posed, I am wrong as I am wronged. There is, somewhere, a simple "there is." I l y a.

There is a world that exists only in the expression on our faces, not the words for them, even if the words are Wittgenstein's.

There is an area ab that belongs equally to a and b, a neighborhood, vicinity, "zone de voisinage," area of a point, or point to be made, ideology according to its neighborhood. I l l y i c h.

This is a wall where everything holds together along hard, sharp lines. There is no point in asking am I right or wrong. My propaganda is positional. Affect infused with a proper name solidifying the historical nature of its link to speaking tools. In the Parmeides the One is two. They pass into one another. The "I" and the "Other," 'soi par soi,' inseparable, exterior.

Conceptual personae, your pseudonyms serve a secret singularity whose "I" defers all meaning, until our meeting, made necessary, where truth will serve the function of making us more than imaginary.

↑ Index

286. Thomas Bell
Re: Philip Whalen
Tue 29 Jun 1999

Vincent,

I have to disagree about the introduction. I think it did a great job of describing a poetics of hypertext by someone 20 years ahead of his time.

Now I'll admit my abysmally poor cultural knowledge: I would like to know who wrote _Tha Art of the Fugue_ mentioned there, Leslie if you are on the list or anyone please bc.

tom bell
[redacted] wrote:
>
> Hi Stephen, The man that reviews poetry

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

287. Leonard Brink
Announcement, Windhover #3
Wed 30 Jun 1999

Windhover #3 is now on-line at http://home.sprintmail.com/~windhover and features poetry by:
Paul Hoover
Ray Ragosta
Craig Watson
Maxine Chernoff
Sheila E. Murphy
Spencer Selby
Jeffrey Jullich
Cole Swensen
Joe Noble & Avery E.D. Burns
Henry Gould

ENJOY!

↑ Index

288. Bob Grumman
Re: Philip Whalen
Wed 30 Jun 1999

Stephen Vincent wrote:
>
> There was a downer review of Whalen's new Penquin collection (with intro by > Leslie Scalapino) in yesterday's San Francisco Sunday Chronicle Book Review.
> I am not sure what the Chronicle critic was trying to perform other than he > somehow missed and hardly gave a clue to the rich and various brilliance(s)
> of Whalen's work.
> While this work has fortunately managed to get published over the years,

> Whalen remains a wry counter-careerist which unfortunately has kept the poems > from larger public assessment, celebration and/or review. Maybe obscurity is > part of the character structure of some West coast giants.

Maybe. But at least he got a review in the Chronicle. Think of all the poets better than Whalen who'd never be able to get even that.

--Bob G.

↑ Index

289. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Wed 30 Jun 1999

The next Sub Voicive Poetry event is at The Three Cups, Sandland Street, London WC1 at 8 pm on 6th July 1999 when Elizabeth James and Patricia Farrell read. I tell you this because

The Sub Voicive Poetry website has been taken down in view of Yahoo / Geocities claim to have copyright in its contents. It's a pity because in terms of the programme list and documentation it was as up to date as possible and not far behind in other areas. . All that was there was information on current readings, documentation of the last six or seven years and the texts of introductions: nothing to make a million from. But the manner in which this change was swung is outrageous and SVP has joined the boycott.

It will be up again in a few days, perhaps a day, once a new site has been set up and the geocities scripts have been stripped out.

↑ Index

290. Brian Stefans
Edmund Berrigan, Barbara Guest
Wed 30 Jun 1999

Speaking of reviews, here are a few things I wrote for a trade journal that were altered completely (mostly cut) prior to their publication. But I have permission to "publish" the original versions, so voila.

Edmund Berrigan, Disarming Matter
0-9669430-07, The Owl Press

"I have a desire to transcend conscious speech / not to the exclusion of words or letters, / it is not a scholarly wish, must be removed / from the present past future inclusive everything / beyond understanding," writes Berrigan in "The Orbit Room" (76). While not always so heady, the underlining feature to this debut volume

— ranging in tone from the beat goofiness of a Gregory Corso to the Symbolist-tinged collages of early Ashbery, from the rich dailiness of a Bernadette Mayer to the more heated "boheme" of Rimbaud — is a negotiation between the dream-like irrealities of daily life, a polyvalent sexuality that is not out of tune with much Gen X flirtation with extremes, and a figure called "God" who occasionally drops in as something like a placeholder for the channel to the "other" world. The beautiful long sonnet sequence "Cross House" is a mysterious affair, like a traipse through a virtual haunted mansion, with figures of love and desire teaming among the threat of limitless possibility: "The persons I have seen in patterns / were so torn as to be absolute traips / [...] She had never seen him trusted above all / earthly things. They were leaning on the / screen before the fire. 'You bear your / wrongs more gently than I can bear / mine.' He bent over the group / in a caressing way, with renewed violence." (54) The quiet surety of Berrigan's meters are perfect for the wavering between "violence" and the "caress," and he resembles a 17th century methaphysical — Herbert the closest — in his decorous rhetoric, which he dons most strongly when asking the "big questions": "I have something, a major contribution / to the record of life, in a world winter-obscene, that / works with fingers peel back a series of inventions / for mortality. Armchair comfortable for those who desire it. / Absence from the physical being as strong a security as any." (34) These are big issues for such a poet in his mid-twenties, one who, consequently, never takes himself too seriously, and is as pop-sensible, funny and crazily improvisatory as any grunge lyricist: "I am a heartfelt bulging crotch / when I take on the swiss initiative / [...] I made love to Nico a lot, I dug her a lot / it was like hanging out with a guy except / she had girl pants." (16) This combination of addresses to the higher powers with a mischievous running-with-the-disaffecteds of the present makes Berrigan a Hamet-like figure for the nineties -- not the highbrow of Eliot, but a thoughtful, late-century rebel engaged in his deep, "irrational" discourse with Yorick while the world only dreams.

Barbara Guest, Rocks on a Platter
0-8195637-22, Wesleyan

Rocks on a Platter is a book-length work by a poet who has, over the past decade or more, increasingly come to be seen as a major force in innovative poetics. Guest is often associated with the “New York School” of poets (Ashbery, O’Hara, Schuyler) but is traditionally overlooked by chauvanistic scholars preferring a homogenized version of the literary/art nexus of activity in Manhattan in the 50’s and 60’s -- notably David Lehman in his recent history The Last of the Avant Garde. It appears that she may have the last laugh, as the yet-living poets of that group have retreated into blase irony and, occasionally, the poetic equivalent “pot-boilers,” while Guest has forged onward with her near-flawless ear and synaesthetic eye for word values, in the process breaking down her syle into a more spare, but never less than rich, idiom, for which she has come to be praised. As if echoing Ashbery, the poem starts: “Ideas. As they find themselves. In trees?” but nonetheless moves on to a declaration of intent peculiar to herself, finding “Dreams set by / typography. A companionship with crewlessness...” Though the figure of Rimbaud doesn’t appear in this work -- Shelly, Byron, H.D., Ovid, and Eliot are among the figures inescapably alluded to -- Guest displays a “taste only for earth, and rock,” as her carved jewels of word-clusters illuminate the white space: “Pockets jingle highly responsive place in the shelter / of those rocks at last the jingle of your pockets / HEARD ON THE PAGE.” Time, presence, the ability of the eye to create time out of word patterns, are perhaps the central subjects here -- though she writes blankly “suspicious / of fragmentation” this poem is highly “fragmented,” though joined symphonically in the play/space of the page as “score” -- a concern that exhibits itself in what can be read as commentary on the poem itself, making this an essay in poetics as much as an epistomological cat-and-mouse. “Without shyness or formality /// ‘a gesture of allowing oneself time’” she writes (the immense white space between these spaces, where this gesture occurs, cannot be reproduced here), and later: “‘flotsam of the world of appearances’ / drifting by and out of the picture,” pointing to a Herecletian, but also defiantly feminine (i.e. non-determinate both rhetorically and ideolectically) poetics. This is a very approachable book by a poet who is bound to show you something you didn’t know was possible in American poetry, though the French may have been trying to tell us this for some time: that the whiteness of the page can be radiant.

↑ Index

291. Elizabeth Fagin

Leroy Chapbook Series

Wed 30 Jun 1999

Announcing the publication of Cartographies of Error by Rachel Levitsky (4$, 39 pages, hemp leaf spine binding), book one of the LEROY chapbook series, edited and published by Renee Gladman. LEROY books feature original prose works and serial poems by emerging innovative writers. Forthcoming authors in the 1999 series are Summi Kaipa, Roberto Tejada, and Hoa Nguyen. Send all correspondence to Renee Gladman c/o 3180 18th Street, Suite 201, San Francisco, CA 94110 or [redacted] <mailto:[redacted]> . Subscriptions are available.

For those in the San Francisco area, Rachel Levitsky and Summi Kaipa will read on July 6th (Tuesday) at Modern Times Bookstore at 7:30 p.m. Modern Times is located on Valencia Street (in the Mission) between 19th and 20th streets. Cartographies of Error will be available on the night of the reading.

> From Cartographies of Error

Coney Island
after Cesar Vallejo

I'll die drinking
I remember it already in Paris, slow, maybe Peoria, or Brooklyn on a Thursday, like today, in fall or

I'll die on a Thursday, maybe today, thursday promises poems while the bad humors pass me by to join other bad and, like never before,

I have returned with all my cards, my ways and means, and smiles to see myself alone.

You see I have died,
they fought me
I did nothing--they gave it to me hard with a stick and hard

With a story;
without testimony

on Thursdays, bleached bones solicitude, stone stoops, the rides. . .

↑ Index

292. Poetry Project
summer announcements
Wed 30 Jun 1999

Well, today is our last day in the office for two months. The best way to reach us is via regular mail. We recommend not e-mailing us until September, when we re-open.

But still feel free to visit our web site, especially as there's work by

L.S. Asekoff
Eddie Bell
Merry Fortune
Josie McKee
James Wilk

brandly new up at http://www.poetryproject.com/poets.html/

and also, there are new and exciting pictures at the Tiny Press Center, so now you can see what some of those teeny publications look like: http://www.poetryproject.com/mention.html/

Readings will begin again in October with Anselm Berrigan coordinating the Monday Night Series, Mitch Highfill coordinating the Wednesday Night Series, and Regie Cabico coordinating the Friday Night Series. The new Newsletter Editor is Katherine Lederer.

If you have any questions, we'll be here until 5 pm. After that, we will be:

a) home, sleeping
b) at the beach
c) climbing Mt. Everest, or, excuse us, K2
d) in the New York Public Library's reading room

Have a great summer and see you in the fall!

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

July 1999

363 messages · Wed 30 Jun 1999 – Fri 30 Jul 1999

The summer's great news reached the list in July and went, remarkably, almost unremarked: a small plane went down off Martha's Vineyard on the sixteenth carrying John Kennedy's son, and the room that had spent June on Kennedy's inauguration barely looked up. It was busy instead with a scandal fifty years old. The 1949 Bollingen Prize, awarded to Ezra Pound for The Pisan Cantos while their author sat in a Washington cell indicted for treason, had come round again as the list's central preoccupation, and it dragged the whole ugly question behind it: what does one do with the great art of a compromised man?

The thread was long, learned, and genuinely divided. John Tranter posted the archival history of the prize; Michael Bibby, at work on African-American poetry of the same years, said the arguments touched "issues of concern to me"; and Mark Weiss offered the formula the whole debate kept circling — "The work is not the man," and neither, he added, is the prize the work. No one settled it, because it does not settle.

Inevitably the argument spread to William Carlos Williams, when Kent Johnson pressed the case that Williams too had his prejudices, as robustly as Pound and Eliot. Michael Magee pushed back hard — not to exonerate anyone, but to insist that flattening three very different men into a single charge means "one loses all sense of particulars," that the moral work is precisely in the distinctions. It was the list at its most serious: refusing both the whitewash and the blanket indictment, trying to hold a poet's failures and his gifts in the same hand.

For relief there was, of all things, the mailbag. A sprawling thread under the running title SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE set editors and submitters against each other over cover letters, simultaneous submissions, and the etiquette of rejection; John Lowther, surveying the crossfire, summed it up: "this is a curious thread," and it only grew. After the moral weight of Pound, there was something restorative in watching poets argue about postage.

Underneath the noise, a quieter injustice went nearly unnoticed. Philip Whalen — the great Zen poet of the original San Francisco circle, whom Stephen Vincent described as "at the near end of his life" — had been handed a limp, ambivalent review in the San Francisco Chronicle, and Vincent and John Coletti rose to defend him with real heat. There was an irony the list did not quite name: that it could spend a hundred posts litigating a prize handed out in 1949 while a living master, still writing, went undervalued in the Sunday paper. I have kept Pound’s long trial and Whalen’s brief notice side by side, because that is how July argued — passionately about the dead, and only just in time about the living.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 363 in all.

WRITERS

(Art), David Erben 37
Administration, Poetics List 252, 362, 363
Ahearn, Joe 87
Alexander, Charles 25
Archambeau, Robert 282
Balestrieri, Peter 171, 225, 322
Baratier, David 49, 88, 113, 236
Barbour, Douglas 67, 107, 151, 152, 179
Beaulieu, Derek 352
Bell, Thomas 85, 251
Bellamy, Dodie 292, 308
Bennett, Jim 124
Bernstein, Charles 316
Bibby, Michael W 257
Boughn, Michael 137, 184
Bowering, George 62, 196, 265, 338, 339, 340
Brady, A. 42
Brady, Taylor 48, 153, 186, 330
Bramhall, A H 31, 32, 43, 44, 109, 110, 136, 147, 170, 202, 203, 235, 242, 312, 315
Bromige, David 29, 38, 306, 321
Brook, James 53
Brown, Pam 72
Bruno, Franklin 60
Bryant, Tisa 190, 267
Buuck, David 294
Cabri, Louis 145, 146
Card, Macgregor 231
Charssmith 300
Coletti, John 2
Cope, Stephen 234, 281, 304
Daley, R M 114
Damon, Maria 158, 187, 218, 284, 328
Davis, Jordan 47, 106, 223, 227, 349
Democracy, R 140
Dewe, Hamish John 192, 244
Diggory, Terry 320
Dillon, Richard 185, 293
Doina, Ana 126
Douglas 63
Durgin, Patrick F. 3, 135, 193
Ellis, Stephen 12, 39, 164, 215, 276
Al Filreis 224
Finch, Annie 66
Franco, Michael 64, 249
Freedman, Robert 334
Freind, W. 220
Geraets 177
Golumbia, David 100
Green, Tony 5, 22, 191, 262
Guertin, Carolyn 289
Hamshaw, Carol L. 98, 117, 183
Hassen 24, 51, 221, 354
Hill, Owen 341, 342, 343
Houlihan, Joan 188, 230, 260, 298, 299, 360
Jarnot 161
Jasfoley 356
Jenkins, Grant 198
Jilith 40
Johnson, Julie 206, 240, 273, 280, 351
JOHNSON, KENT 19, 33, 46, 52, 115, 116, 138, 166, 173, 181, 261, 263, 277, 309, 313, 331
Joris, Pierre 176
Joseph, Safdie 83
Jullich, Jeffrey 175, 279, 305
Kane, Daniel 127
Katy 156
Kelleher, Mike 157
Kemp, Robin 160
Krebs, Michael 7
Lennon, Brian 20, 91, 162
Levy, Herb 35, 79, 118
List, Poetics 17, 71, 154, 200, 325, 326, 346, 347, 348
Little, Billy 34, 104, 167
Lowther,John 70, 99, 102, 111, 139, 155, 243, 272, 307
Lustig, Dana 216
Magee, Kevin 4, 16, 89
Magee, Michael 80, 121, 122, 134, 148, 180, 214, 228, 268, 269, 270, 290
Maz881 78, 108
McCreary, Chris 112
Miller, Lynn 194
Mix, Deborah M 6
Nagler, Chris 54, 201
Nathanson, Tenney 302
Neff, Michael 295, 319
Nelson, Jason 61
Neufeld, Peter 132, 222, 229
Nicoll, Hugh 238
Nielsen, Aldon 9, 84, 361
Nuyopoman 73, 74
Obenzinger, Hilton Manfred 259
Orange, Tom 345
Ostashevsky, Eugene 101, 271, 324
Parks 297, 337
Perez, Jamie 18, 86, 123, 133, 217, 333
Persons, Ron 178
Prejsnar, Mark 286

Pritchett,Patrick 68, 219, 329
Qureshi, Ramez 266, 310
Raea100900 256
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 26, 55, 56, 144, 174, 336
Reiner, Christopher 81
Review, Chicago 274
Rosenberg, Jim 195, 239, 318
Russo, Linda 129
Ryan Knighton, Editor 36, 182
Sassaman, Hannah J 95
Scheindlin, Noam 357
Schultz, Susan M. 14
Schwartz, Gerald 65
Schwartz, Judy 189, 208
Shoemaker, Steven 143, 275, 344
Silliman, Ron 77, 94, 248
Slaughter, William 353
Smith, Dale 13, 30, 57
Sondheim, Alan 10, 27, 28, 41, 69, 90, 103, 119, 169, 210, 237, 245, 264, 296, 314
Spahr, Juliana 105, 163, 241
Spence, Pete 76, 211, 278, 303
Starr, Ron 311
Stefans, Brian 197, 199, 250, 283, 285, 327, 335, 358
Stengel, Jill 317
Stephens, Mark Prejsnar/Erika 75
Stroffolino, Chris 15, 21, 58, 141, 142, 246, 247
Tiess, Robert J. 120
Tranter, John 92, 149, 213, 232, 233, 258
Treadwell, Elizabeth 23, 168
Upton., Lawrence 1, 323
Vincent, Stephen 11, 50, 82, 97, 159, 212, 332, 359
Waber, Dan 8, 128
WaldReid 59
Wallace, Mark 165, 291
Weiser, Karen 172
Weiss, Mark 96, 130, 131, 204, 205, 207, 226, 253, 254, 255, 287, 288, 350
Wheeler, Susan 301
Wolff, Rebecca 93, 125, 150, 209
Zauhar, David 45
Zervos, Komninos 355

NAMES MENTIONED

Acker, Kathy 34
Adams, John 233, 260, 275
Adamson, Robert 274
Alexander, Christopher W. 154, 325, 326, 362
Alice, Mary 83
Allan, Don 319
Allison, Dorothy 291
Americans, Asian 78, 197, 275, 297, 327, 360
Anania, Michael 274
Anderson, Beth 64, 206, 249
Andre, Michael 8
Andrews, Bruce 118, 327, 345
Andrews, Jim 304, 327, 347
Angelo, Michael 3
Anne, Sarah 317
Armand, Louis 194, 350
Armantrout, Rae 256
Armitage, Simon 277
Arnold, Elizabeth 274
Ashbery, John 9, 12, 18, 231, 280
Atkins, Tim 345
Atlanta, Mark P. 160
Auden, W. H. 9, 18, 233, 260, 305
Baez, Joan 297
Baldwin, James 348
Baraka, Amiri 161, 348
Barbour, Doug 67, 76, 98
Barnes, Diane 89, 113, 319
Basinski, Michael 64, 157, 249, 345
Beckman, Paul 319
Behrle, Jim 64, 249
Benjamin, Walter 53, 221, 228, 253, 261, 268, 299
Bennett, Bill 3, 48, 79
Benson, Steve 110, 118
Bergvall, Caroline 78, 106, 345
Berkeley, Michael 8, 23, 176, 186, 232, 294, 297, 300, 317, 321, 330, 342, 343, 356
Bernard, Kenneth 16
Bernhard, Thomas 231
Bernstein, Emma 34, 154, 186, 252, 297, 306, 330
Berrigan, Anselm 3, 45, 64, 170, 231, 249
Berrigan, Ted 11, 110, 136, 170
Berry, Jake 8, 176, 186, 297, 306, 330, 332, 337
Berryman, John 327
Blackburn, Paul 43, 75, 304
Blake, William 53, 57, 104, 348
Blaser, Robin 302
Blau, Rachel 3
Bly, Robert 319
Boat, Drunken 53
Bok, Christian 67, 345
Borges, Jorge Luis 348
Bouchard, Daniel 3, 64, 249
BpNichol 45
Brady, Andrea 42
Bramhall, Allen 12, 31, 32, 43, 44, 109, 110, 130, 136, 147, 168, 170, 202, 203, 235, 242, 312, 315
Brannen, Jonathan 87
Bridwell, Tom 113
Brink, Leonard 206
Bronk, William 64, 249
Brooks, Gwendolyn 257, 270, 297

Brown, Ann 248, 329, 351
Browne, Colin 351
Buchanan, Pat 16
Buckley, Jeff 16
Bumstead, Leslie 231
Bunting, Basil 59
Burke, Edmund 348
Burke, Kenneth 228, 253, 261, 268, 299
Burnham, Clint 345
Burroughs, William S. 348
Burton, Philip 297
Bush, George 332
Butler, William 319
Byron, Philip 116, 131
Cage, John 149
Cain, Stephen 67, 345
Campbell, Jeremy 319
Carlos, William 116, 131, 304, 305, 320, 348
Carson, Anne 274
Cassady, Neal 348
Catullus 348
Celan, Paul 87
Chace, Joel 319
Chadwick, Lynn 186, 294, 297, 306, 330, 337
Chapman, Cecelia 346
Cheatham, Robert 69
Chester, Jeff 160
Chomsky, Noam 294
Claire, Barbara 64, 249
Clark, Emilie 2, 11, 13, 15, 26, 30, 38, 39, 45, 50, 56, 57, 89, 304
Clark, Jeff 274
Clark, Tom 2, 11, 13, 15, 26, 33, 38, 43, 45, 52, 57, 75, 88, 149
Clement, Catherine 10
Clements, Brian 87
Clifford, Pat 275, 280
Clinton, Bill 8, 68, 297, 306, 330
Cohen, Leonard 304
Cole, Sean 64, 249
Coleman, Jen 35, 48
Columbus, Christopher 49, 53, 88, 113
Connor, Bruce 300
Coolidge, Clark 12, 231, 233, 260, 272
Corbett, William 280
Cornell, Joseph 319
Corso, Gregory 348
Coultas, Brenda 165
County, Madison 297
Crawford, Robert 277
Creeley, Robert 12, 149
Cunningham, John 70
Darragh, Tina 3, 64, 249
Davidson, Daniel 67, 106, 146
Davidson, Michael 78, 146, 280
Davis, Martin 64, 249
Debrot, Jacques 64, 249
Degentesh, Katie 101
Dennis, Carl 186, 280, 297, 306, 330
Derksen, Jeff 345
Desmond, Rae 348
Dewey, John 228, 253, 261, 268, 299
Dickey, Eric 87
Dickinson, Emily 64, 249
Dickinson, Mark 12
Dillard, Annie 348
Donnelly, Jean 231
Donovan, Thom 231
Doris, Stacy 42
Doty, Mark 319
Duhamel, Denise 319
Duncan, Robert 75, 118, 274, 306, 321, 330, 348
Durand, Marcella 64, 140, 231, 249
Durgin, Patrick F. 3, 135, 164, 193
Dutton, Paul 67
Eagleton, Terry 327
Edgar, Chris 231
Eigner, Larry 12
Eliot, Joe 104, 122, 141, 148, 159, 166, 173, 180, 187, 188, 191, 197, 198, 199, 204, 205, 212, 215, 216, 226, 230, 233, 250, 254, 255, 259, 260, 270, 276, 287, 305, 309
Eliot, T. S. 233, 260
Ellingham, Lewis 149
Emerson, Claudia 348
England, Amy 8, 277, 319, 348
Evans, Bill 4, 104, 233, 260
Farmer, Steven 300
Farrell, Dan 345
Ferguson, Jesse 345
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 348
Finlay, Ian Hamilton 327
Finnegan, Jim 69
Fischer, Norman 319
Fisher, Allen 277
Fitzgerald, Scott 233, 260
Foley, Jack 101, 342, 356
Forbes, John 8
Ford, Francis 171, 196, 219
Ford, Henry 167
Forrest, Lisa 64, 249
Foster, Paul 256
Foust, Graham 149
Fox, Skip 113
France, Peter 191, 202, 277
Frances, Mary 297, 330, 332, 337
Freeman, Micah 64, 249
Freind, Bill 3, 220
Frisell, Bill 79
Frith, Fred 48, 79
Frost, Robert 233, 260
Fuchs, Greg 21, 58
Fuller, Heather 3

Gander, Forrest 64, 249, 313
Ganick, Peter 3, 64, 249
Garcia, Rodrigo 206
Gardner, Drew 64, 249
Garland, Judy 297
Gilbert, Alan 64, 249
Ginsberg, Allen 12, 122, 138, 141, 148, 197, 348
Gizzi, Michael 64, 231, 249
Gizzi, Peter 149
Glass, Jesse 206
Goldsmith, Kenneth 64, 249
Goodman, Amy 297
Gordon, Nada 71, 246, 247, 263, 273
Gordon, Robert 246, 247, 263, 273
Gould, Henry 64, 249
Green, Paul 233, 260
Greenway, Gerard 277
Grenier, Bob 2, 11, 12, 13, 15, 25, 49, 50, 321
Grenier, Robert 12, 22, 25
Griffin, Tim 358
Grinnell, Tracy 8
Grossman, Allen 274
Gudding, Gabriel 149
Guest, Barbara 118
Gunn, Thom 161
Halsey, Alan 42
Hamshaw, Carol L. 98, 117, 126, 183
Hardin, Rob 101
Hardingham, Jeremy 42
Harper, Michael 297
Hartman, Charles O. 345
Hass, Bob 248
Hawkins, Jeremy 348
Hayden, Tom 257, 270
Heidegger, Martin 228, 253, 261, 266, 268, 269, 299, 353
Hejinian, Lyn 2, 13, 15, 35, 48, 64, 78, 79, 80, 249, 278
Herbert, George 53
Herms, George 161
Hettich, Michael 319
Hofer, Jen 3
Holman, Bob 73, 319
House, White 297
Howard, Peter 8
Howard, Scott 8, 233, 260, 319
Howe, Susan 6, 118, 277
Hughes, Langston 173, 180, 188, 258
Hughes, Peter 257, 270
Hyde, Henry 297, 319
Indiana, Robert 215, 226, 258, 259, 276, 287
Irby, Kenneth 300
Ireland, Lauren 16, 362
Israel, David 215, 226, 259, 276, 287
Israeli, Henry 215, 226, 259, 276, 287
Jackson, Jesse 68, 78, 270
Jacob, Max 233, 260
Jaeger, Peter 345
Jarnot, Lisa 3, 64, 161, 249, 348
Jones, Brian 333
Jones, Rodney 334
Jordan, June 3, 52, 64, 106, 121, 224, 227, 249, 276, 287, 349
Joron, Andrew 149, 329
Joyce, Trevor 319, 343
Kafka, Franz 269, 324
Kaipa, Summi 3
Katz, Eliot 21, 58
Kaufman, Alan 101
Kaufman, Bob 64, 249, 348
Kaufman, Erica 101
Keller, Lynn 78
Kelley, Mike 78
Kelly, Patrick 78, 129, 145
Kerouac, Jack 34, 149, 348
Kiely, Aaron 64, 249
Killian, Kevin 149, 231
Kim, Myung Mi 48, 79
Kimball, Jack 64, 249
Kinsella, John 3, 149, 213, 244
Kirschenbaum, David 64, 249
Klein, Lucas 21, 58
Koch, Kenneth 305
Kolm, Ron 101
Kostelanetz, Richard 107, 123, 124
Kramer, Wendy 7, 64, 249, 345
Kruger, Barbara 327, 360
Kyger, Joanne 2, 13, 15, 43, 75, 149, 348, 359
Latta, John 231
Lauterbach, Ann 67, 76, 98
Lease, Joseph 64, 249
Lederer, Katy 156
Leigh, Mike 177, 192
Levertov, Denise 12, 122, 138, 141, 148
Levy, Andrew 3
Lewin, Anya 149
Lewis, Bernard 149, 348
Lewis, Joel 21, 58, 149
Ley, Jennifer 8
Lilly, Ruth 297
London, Frank 4, 16, 42, 277, 323, 345
Loney, Alan 177, 192
Lorber, Brendan 64, 249
Louise, Bobbie 348
Mac Low, Jackson 78, 118
Lowell, Robert 12
Luoma, Bill 3, 83, 94, 106, 108
Luther, Martin 233, 260, 330, 332
Lynden, Carl 195
Lyons, Kimberly 60
Mackey, Nathaniel 3, 327
Madison, James 175, 297
Mahler, David 118

Malcolm, Janet 89
Malroux, Claire 274
Manery, Rob 145, 345
Mangold, Sarah 23
Mann, Chris 118
Mapplethorpe, Robert 327, 360
Mariani, Paul 141, 148
Marie, Anne 343
Marshall, Robert 53, 225, 295
Martin, Camille 53, 149, 330
Marx, Karl 16
Massoni, Sheila 53
Maxwell, Andrew 231, 281
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 348
Mayer, Bernadette 78, 149, 280, 348
Maynard, Joe 101
McCaffery, Steve 67, 118, 280
Mellors, Anthony 277
Meltzer, David 101
Melville, Nicky 259
Mengham, Rod 149
Merrill, James 319
Merwin, W. S. 319
Mesmer, Sharon 101
Metcalf, Paul 322
Miller, Paul D. 17, 305
Milne, Drew 327, 360
Mitchell, Joan 67
Molina, Joanne 291
Moore, Allison 214, 322
Moore, Frank 324
Moore, Marianne 199, 205, 214, 250, 255
Morgan, Robin 16
Moriarty, Laura 300, 351
Morris, Tim 42
Morris, William 53
Morrison, Bill 233, 260
Morrow, Bradford 319
Morrow, William 319
Morse, Jesse 21, 58
Moxley, Jennifer 335
Mullen, Harryette 78, 145, 302
Mullen, Laura 231
Murphy, Paul 3, 87
Murphy, Sheila 3, 8, 87, 206
Murray, Ian 8, 89
Myles, Eileen 3, 101
Nelson, Paul 348
Neruda, Pablo 359
Newton, Keith 333
Nguyen, Hoa 3, 206
Nicole, Anna 186, 294, 297, 306, 330, 356
Niedecker, Lorine 17, 173, 180, 188
Nielsen, Aldon L. 3
Nixon, Richard 115
Nolan, Kevin 42
Norse, Harold 101
Notley, Alice 3, 149
O'Hara, Frank 348
Olen, Robert 319
Oliver, John 36, 140, 149
Olson, John 231
Olson, Kirby 11, 12, 75, 283, 288, 320
Ondaatje, Michael 107, 151, 152, 178, 179, 348
Oppen, George 142, 189, 208, 212, 231
Orlovsky, Peter 348
Orwell, George 348
Osman, Jena 78, 186, 294, 306, 330
Owen, Maureen 73
Pacific, Asian 16, 332
Padgett, Ron 11, 45
Paine, Tom 259
Palmer, Michael 176, 231, 252, 297, 306, 330
Parkway, Neal 221
Paterson, Don 16, 104, 229, 290
Patterson, Ian 212, 233, 260, 345
Perelman, Bob 78, 80, 108, 129
Perleman, Bob 82
Perry, David 305
Peters, Robert 195, 343
Peterson, Katie 64, 249
Phillip, Andrew 88
Phillips, Beth 297
Plath, Sylvia 319, 360
Pound, Ezra 82, 104, 122, 138, 141, 143, 148, 159, 166, 173, 180, 187, 188, 191, 197, 199, 204, 205, 207, 212, 215, 216, 223, 224, 226, 227, 229, 230, 233, 250, 254, 255, 257, 259, 260, 270, 275, 276, 287, 298, 309, 327, 335, 344, 348, 358, 360, 363
Pound, Scott 345
Prevallet, Kristin 42, 64, 149, 206, 249
Price, Michael 341
Di Prima, Diane 348
Prince, Richard 319
Pritchett, Pat 68, 219, 329
Prynne, J. H. 42, 149
Prynne, Jeremy 327, 360
Purcell, Greg 36, 98, 182
Quartermain, Peter 351
Rakosi, Carl 43, 75, 212
Randall, Karen 101
Ratcliffe, Stephen 300
Raworth, Tom 274
Reed, John 67
Reed, Pat 300
Retallack, Joan 78, 108
Rexroth, Kenneth 2, 13, 15
Reynolds, Rebecca 319
Reznikoff, Charles 212
Ribot, Marc 310
Rich, Adrienne 97
Richards, Brian 113, 305

Richter, Karl 327, 360
Rifkin, Libbie 149
Rimbaud, Arthur 335
Rivera, Alex 4
Rizzo, Christopher 290
Robbins, Michael 87
Robertson, Pat 261, 268
Robinson, Elizabeth 300
Ross, Steven 67
Rothenberg, Jerry 8
Rothenberg, Michael 8
Rothschild, Douglas 64, 249
Rushin, Kate 84
Saidenberg, Jocelyn 308
Samuels, Lisa 3
Saroyan, William 12
Savage, Tom 101
Scalapino, Leslie 2, 3, 13, 15, 64, 133, 149, 249
Scheffel, Bill 348
Schelling, Andrew 64, 249
Schultz, Lou 3
Schultz, Susan M. 14
Schuster, Josh 145, 158, 319
Schwerner, Armand 350
Schwitters, Kurt 67, 76, 98
Scobie, Stephen 67
Seaton, Maureen 319
Selby, Spencer 3, 206
Shapiro, David 64, 122, 138, 141, 148, 233, 249, 260, 280
Sharma, Prageeta 64, 249
Shaw, Nancy 345
Sherman, Cindy 8
Shiroma, Jerrold 240
Shoemaker, Steve 166, 293
Siegel, Jeff 297
Simon, Greg 319
Smith, Harry 67, 89, 233, 260, 319
Smith, Hazel 149
Smith, Rod 3
Smithson, Robert 52, 327
Solomon, Carl 148, 319
Sparrow, John 11, 101
Spicer, Jack 115, 149, 186
Spicer, John 11, 19, 26, 52, 104, 149
Spillway, Phil 154
Sprague, Jane 233, 260
Stalin, Joseph 45
Stanley, Jared 69, 319
Stanton, Rob 140
Stecopoulos, Eleni 345
Stefans, Kim 149
Stein, Charles 280
Stein, Gertrude 71, 118, 121
Steinberg, Nicole 295
Stevens, Wallace 233, 260, 319
Strang, Brian 118
Sullivan, Andrew 71, 246, 247, 263, 273
Sullivan, Gary 71, 206, 246, 247, 263, 273
Sullivan, Robert 8
Sutherland, Keston 3, 42, 320
Sutherland, Mark 67, 345
Swensen, Cole 329, 351
Szamatowicz, Carol 231
Taggart, John 3
Tardos, Anne 78, 105
Tate, Allen 257
Taylor, Wendy 8
Terry, Philip 320
Texas, Irving 57, 198, 343
Thomas, Dylan 67, 327, 360
Thompson, George 78
Topp, Mike 101
Tribune, Chicago 233, 260
Trinidad, David 101
Truitt, Sam 64, 249
Tuma, Keith 345
Turner, Victor 68, 127
Twain, Mark 259
Untermeyer, Louis 148, 233, 260
Valery, Paul 305
Vincent, Steve 2, 13, 15, 38, 50, 57, 97
Virgil 348
Vitale, Anna 101
Wadsworth, Henry 95
Wald, Diane 59, 64, 249
Waldman, Anne 64, 149, 249, 348
Waldo, Ralph 348
Waldrop, Rosemary 319
Walker, Alice 294, 306, 330, 348
Walker, Shawn 145, 158
Wallace, Nicole 260
Warhol, Andy 327, 360
Warner, Jim 319
Warren, Kenneth 16, 233, 260
Warsh, Lewis 64, 249
Washington, George 68, 89, 215, 221, 226, 233, 248, 259, 260, 276, 282, 287, 295, 297, 327, 360
Watkins, Ben 231
Watson, Carl 101
Weber, Damian 277
Weinberger, Eliot 116, 131, 166, 173, 180, 188, 198, 199, 205, 218, 242, 250, 255, 307
Welch, Jen 43, 231
Welch, Lew 75, 348
Weldon, Rebecca 348
Wellman, Donald 3
Welsh, Lawrence 59, 277
Whalen, Philip 2, 11, 13, 15, 19, 22, 26, 30, 33, 34, 38, 39, 43, 45, 50, 52, 56, 57, 62, 75, 77, 88, 149, 348
Whiting, John 176, 186

Whitman, Walt 12, 16, 104
Whyte, Ryan 3
Wieners, John 64, 249, 348
Wierzbicki, Carol 101
Wilkinson, John 42
Williams, Diane 319
Williams, Paul O. 11, 12, 84, 104, 116, 122, 131, 138, 141, 143, 144, 148, 159, 166, 167, 180, 181, 187, 191, 197, 199, 204, 205, 212, 214, 215, 216, 218, 226, 228, 229, 233, 250, 253, 255, 257, 259, 260, 261, 266, 267, 268, 269, 275, 276, 283, 287, 288, 290, 297, 299, 305, 309, 320, 344, 348
Williams, William Carlos 104, 115, 233, 259, 260, 267, 290, 320, 348
Willis, Elizabeth 231, 274
Wilson, Emily 3
Wilson, Karen 343
Wilson, Rob 14, 149
Winks, Christopher 53
Woolf, Virginia 348
Wright, C. D. 64, 249, 257, 270
Young, Geoffrey 280
Zanzotto, Andrea 277
Zavialova, Masha 305
Zenith, Richard 319
Zimmerman, Daniel 3, 319
Zukofsky, Louis 12, 122, 138, 141, 148, 212, 275
Zurawski, Magdalena 64, 249

CONCEPTS

Activism and protest 11, 45, 68, 154, 176, 186, 221, 232, 233, 260, 294, 297, 306, 330, 332, 337, 356
Aesthetics 57, 100, 120, 229, 233, 246, 260, 275, 277, 283, 288, 309, 320, 335
African American poetry 74, 122, 141, 229, 257
Anthologies 11, 45, 53, 59, 101, 120, 129, 275, 277, 280, 327, 343, 348, 355, 358
Anti-Semitism 115, 116, 122, 131, 137, 138, 141, 143, 148, 159, 166, 167, 173, 180, 181, 184, 187, 188, 191, 197, 199, 204, 205, 212, 214, 215, 216, 218, 225, 226, 228, 229, 230, 233, 250, 253, 254, 255, 257, 259, 260, 261, 268, 270, 275, 276, 287, 288, 299, 344, 358
Appropriation 24, 125, 135, 154, 164, 204, 218, 277, 292, 320, 335, 359
Archives and libraries 2, 13, 15, 59, 77, 89, 120, 129, 133, 154, 233, 240, 260, 280, 304, 319, 350
Autobiography 45, 300, 319, 360
Avant-garde 78, 146, 149, 246, 277
Beat generation 348, 355
Beauty 197, 218, 233, 260, 275
Biography 122, 141, 148, 170, 188, 274, 298, 299, 327, 348, 360
Black Mountain 74, 149, 355
Book announcements 42, 53, 77, 78, 177, 192, 291, 319, 345, 348
Bookstores 21, 45, 58, 140, 175, 179, 194, 231, 279, 319
Calls for submissions 6, 69
Capitalism 59, 89, 129, 183, 197, 319
Censorship 20, 295, 297, 306, 319, 330, 348
Cities 11, 327
Class 16, 104
Collage and montage 335
Conferences and festivals 64, 78, 80, 83, 84, 92, 106, 108, 121, 129, 145, 146, 158, 176, 246, 249, 297, 319, 323, 348
Copyright and permissions 34, 68, 69, 154, 212, 319, 341
Craft 202, 348
Creative writing pedagogy 59, 78, 106, 108, 121, 129, 138, 145, 146, 158, 159, 191
Dada 67, 74, 76, 98, 324
Deconstruction 261, 268, 277, 335
Difficulty 154, 183, 275, 277
Disability 154
Dreams 4, 42, 53, 90, 125, 135, 164, 169, 245, 259, 315, 319
Ecology and ecopoetics 277, 297, 306, 327, 330
Editing 11, 42, 100, 101, 109, 111, 125, 128, 130, 135, 154, 164, 177, 192, 233, 260, 345, 348
Electronic poetry and hypertext 1, 8, 18, 61, 85, 146, 154, 165, 305, 323
Elegy 300, 334
Empire and imperialism 276, 277, 287, 362
Erasure 34, 197
Ethics 180, 228, 233, 246, 253, 260, 261, 268, 298, 299, 327, 360
Experimental poetry 6, 192, 308
Fascism 143, 173, 180, 188, 229, 233, 260, 275, 297, 327, 344, 358, 360
Feminism 327, 360
Film 4, 10, 70, 219, 319, 320, 335, 348
Fluxus 324
Free speech 232, 294, 297, 306, 330, 332, 337
Futurism 74
Gender 59, 78, 80, 108, 129, 149, 290, 332
Ghazal 319
Grants and funding 145, 158, 183, 198, 348
Haiku 3, 74, 113
Harlem Renaissance 74
Humour and satire 2, 8, 11, 13, 15, 122, 138, 141, 148, 159, 191, 197, 292, 335
Identity politics 141, 148

Ideology 10, 89, 158, 166, 183, 246, 261, 268, 269, 277
Imagism 74, 199, 205, 250, 255
Indigenous and Native poetics 37, 63
Interviews 3, 8, 70, 154, 270, 297, 305, 319
Israel and Palestine 159, 181, 187, 191, 204, 215, 216, 226, 259, 276, 287
Jewish poetics 173, 180, 188, 198, 261, 268
Language poetry 6, 52, 59, 138, 159, 191, 286, 305, 327
Latino and Latin American poetry 148, 297
Letters and correspondence 71, 87, 154, 173, 180, 188, 198, 233, 236, 260, 325
List moderation 33, 43, 75, 154, 199, 205, 250, 255, 325, 326, 362
Little magazines 23, 42, 55, 71, 72, 74, 81, 82, 87, 89, 91, 92, 93, 95, 100, 101, 102, 111, 114, 117, 125, 126, 132, 134, 135, 139, 149, 154, 162, 164, 172, 175, 177, 178, 182, 183, 192, 193, 206, 208, 213, 231, 232, 233, 236, 241, 244, 258, 260, 277, 291, 317, 319, 320, 333, 350, 353
Lyric poetry 85, 89, 247, 277, 305, 335, 348
Marxism 228, 253, 261, 268, 297, 299, 327, 360
Materiality of the text 89
Memory 10, 51, 89, 116, 131, 159, 187, 191, 197, 204, 216, 225, 315
MFA programs 8, 319, 348
Modernism 2, 13, 15, 78, 80, 108, 129, 173, 180, 188, 197, 198, 199, 205, 212, 214, 250, 255, 269, 277, 283, 288, 305, 309, 320, 344, 358
Mourning and loss 103, 117, 126, 154, 170, 195, 247
Multiculturalism 216, 277
Music and poetry 28, 34, 35, 48, 66, 86, 99, 104, 107, 113, 118, 123, 124, 167, 185, 187, 197, 204, 212, 216, 218, 221, 233, 246, 260, 262, 294, 297, 306, 324, 330, 348
Nationalism 277
Nature 8, 10, 54, 89, 122, 141, 148, 154, 199, 201, 205, 250, 255, 261, 268, 272, 275, 277, 305, 306, 330
Negativity and refusal 228, 253, 299
Négritude 173, 180, 188
Obituary and memorial 84, 154, 176, 186
Objectivism 74, 212, 275
Ontology 10, 197
Performance and the poetry reading 140, 221, 271, 302, 355
Phenomenology 41
Philosophy 10, 16, 89, 194, 198, 228, 253, 261, 268, 275, 283, 288, 299
Place and region 8, 54, 88, 201, 277
Poetics 2, 3, 10, 12, 13, 15, 17, 39, 54, 66, 71, 78, 79, 81, 87, 88, 95, 126, 129, 133, 146, 149, 154, 163, 164, 182, 186, 188, 200, 201, 215, 218, 220, 226, 239, 252, 259, 260, 272, 276, 286, 287, 299, 316, 325, 326, 327, 330, 334, 335, 345, 346, 347, 348, 353, 360, 362, 363
Politics and poetry 277, 327
Postmodernism 277, 320
Print vs. digital 2, 4, 9, 11, 13, 15, 18, 59, 89, 211, 215, 226, 259, 276, 278, 287, 319, 338
Prizes and awards 16, 67, 160, 188, 207, 223, 224, 227, 229, 230, 233, 254, 260, 294, 297, 298, 305, 308, 319, 327, 348, 360
Procedural and constraint writing 146
Prose poem 149, 248, 319
Psychoanalysis 277
Queer poetics 78, 80, 108, 141, 148, 194, 262, 306, 313, 330
Race and poetry 89, 122, 138, 141, 148, 159, 166, 173, 180, 181, 187, 188, 191, 197, 203, 204, 214, 215, 216, 226, 229, 250, 255, 259, 276, 283, 287, 288, 290, 297, 332, 344
Reading announcements 71, 343, 348
Religion and the sacred 4, 19, 26, 67, 104, 173, 180, 188, 198, 199, 205, 216, 233, 250, 255, 259, 260, 327, 345, 348
Representation 121, 145, 158, 180, 250, 255, 277, 283, 288
Reviewing and criticism 2, 11, 13, 15, 19, 20, 26, 29, 30, 33, 36, 39, 45, 50, 52, 53, 57, 67, 68, 74, 77, 78, 85, 87, 98, 102, 117, 125, 126, 129, 135, 139, 154, 159, 162, 164, 176, 182, 183, 186, 187, 191, 193, 204, 216, 229, 233, 251, 260, 274, 275, 277, 290, 297, 304, 318, 319, 327, 345, 348, 350
Romanticism 53
San Francisco Renaissance 149
Science 8, 89, 215, 226, 250, 255, 259, 276, 283, 287, 288, 333
Semiotics 335
Serial poem 177, 192, 291
Sestina 197
Small press publishing 14, 40, 42, 59, 60, 82, 87, 120, 154, 160, 163, 175, 231, 233, 240, 260, 291, 297, 300, 308, 317, 348, 352, 353, 359
Software and code 146, 176, 232, 297, 306, 330
Sonnet 78, 80, 108, 149, 264, 345
Sound poetry 67, 76, 86, 98, 99, 107, 123, 124
Subjectivity 10, 53, 80, 89, 106, 110, 133, 143, 154, 194, 277, 319
Surrealism 53, 74, 343
Terrorism 173, 180, 188, 319
The academy 6, 21, 45, 58, 59, 66, 67, 78, 80, 82, 83, 89, 106, 107, 108, 113, 145, 146, 149, 151, 152, 154, 158, 163, 178, 179,

194, 233, 238, 241, 257, 258, 260, 274, 275, 277, 289, 297, 300, 306, 317, 319, 330, 343, 345, 348, 355
The body 95, 128, 154, 238, 246, 275
The canon 2, 13, 15, 78, 181, 212, 215, 226, 259, 270, 276, 287, 345
The Holocaust 299
The internet 2, 8, 12, 13, 14, 15, 30, 35, 39, 48, 57, 61, 94, 118, 149, 154, 164, 188, 195, 199, 205, 215, 216, 226, 230, 232, 239, 250, 254, 255, 259, 260, 276, 277, 287, 295, 297, 298, 299, 306, 318, 319, 327, 330, 348, 360
The Iraq war 89, 306, 330
The line 154
The listserv 11, 14, 53, 59, 80, 128, 133, 151, 154, 188, 195, 212, 225, 233, 238, 239, 240, 257, 260, 270, 295, 297, 306, 321, 325, 330, 334, 362
The New Sentence 113, 335
Theatre 4, 16, 84, 297, 304, 315, 348
Torture and Abu Ghraib 32
Translation 8, 10, 35, 48, 59, 79, 84, 87, 157, 258, 277, 278, 303, 304, 305, 313, 353
Vietnam 297
Visual and concrete poetry 278, 318, 347
Visual art 12, 16, 78, 94, 97, 149, 246, 251, 300, 319, 324, 327, 360
Women's writing 84, 319

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 363 in all.

30 JUN 1999

1. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
2. john coletti — Re: Whalen
3. Patrick F. Durgin — Litmag mania / collect them all!
4. Kevin Magee — Re: burnt epistle

1 JUL 1999

5. Tony Green — Re: burnt epistles
6. Deborah M Mix — Experimental Poetry & History (call for papers)
7. Michael Krebs — Re: uncompromising, but corrugated, position
8. Dan Waber — Riding the Meridian
9. Aldon Nielsen — innarresting booook
10. Alan Sondheim — Making a Mess out of Things, Making Things out of a Mess
11. Stephen Vincent — Whalen
12. Stephen Ellis — Re: re(ad) Grenier
13. Dale Smith — Re: Whalen
14. Susan M. Schultz — Re: burnt epistles
15. Chris Stroffolino — Reviews....
16. Kevin Magee — Re: What Was Whitman

2 JUL 1999

17. Poetics List — niedecker question (fwd)
18. Jamie Perez — Re: innarresting booook
19. KENT JOHNSON — Re: Whalen
20. Brian Lennon — Re: Reviews....
21. Chris Stroffolino — THING....
22. Tony Green — Re: Whalen

3 JUL 1999

23. Elizabeth Treadwell — Charles Alexander & Sarah Mangold
24. hassen — dna, will, what, what!
25. charles alexander — Grenier
26. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Whalen

4 JUL 1999

27. Alan Sondheim — MINE
28. Alan Sondheim — Song from E. A. C.
29. david bromige — kent johnson to the rescue (was whalen)
30. Dale Smith — Re: Whalen
31. A H Bramhall — Whole
32. A H Bramhall — Recognize
33. KENT JOHNSON — One "could" (re: whalen)

5 JUL 1999

34. Billy Little — Re: Whalen
35. Herb Levy — poetry in RealAudio
36. Ryan Knighton, Editor — Oliver address
37. David Erben (Art) — Unsolicited Submissions/Taos Poets Gathering
38. david bromige — the devil in tom clark
39. Stephen Ellis — Re: Whalen
40. jilith — event listing
41. Alan Sondheim — Prolegomena for a Science of Concrete Thought

6 JUL 1999

42. A. Brady — Announcement, Barque Press / Wilkinson
43. A H Bramhall — clark on whalen, whalin' on clark
44. A H Bramhall — Intentional Display of Knowledge
45. David Zauhar — Re: Whalen
46. KENT JOHNSON — Spiral question
47. Jordan Davis — Question jetty
48. Taylor Brady — Re: poetry in RealAudio
49. David Baratier — Re: re(ad) Grenier
50. Stephen Vincent — Re: the devil in tom clark
51. hassen — Re: Spiral question
52. KENT JOHNSON — Getting out of the bind
53. James Brook — Revolutionary Romanticism from City Lights
54. Chris Nagler — The Barn (a play) - July 15th and 16th
55. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Unsolicited Submissions/Taos Poets Gathering
56. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Whalen
57. Dale Smith — the devil in us all
58. Chris Stroffolino — Re: THING....(TYPO CORRECTION....
59. WaldReid — poet from Estonia

7 JUL 1999

60. franklin bruno — kimberly lyons
61. Jason Nelson — just finished engineering poetry webpage
62. George Bowering — Re: whalen,
63. Douglas — Re: Unsolicited Submissions/Taos Poets Gathering
64. Michael Franco — BOSTON ALTERNATIVE POETRY CONFERENCE
65. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Spiral question
66. Annie Finch — Re: POETICS Digest - 3 Jul 1999 to 4 Jul 1999 (#1999-127)
67. Douglas Barbour — Carnivocal: A Celebration of Sound Poetry / Edited by Stephen Scobie & Do...
68. Pritchett,Patrick — FW: Gore, AIDS drugs, South Africa: summary (fwd)
69. Alan Sondheim — NOISE news :: peforations 20 (fwd)

8 JUL 1999

70. Lowther,John — FW: Merce Marathon on NYC TV
71. Poetics List — * A R E A D I N G * (fwd)
72. Pam Brown — unsolicited mss letters ?
73. nuyopoman — Maureen Owen
74. nuyopoman — Gathering of the Tribes Wants You

9 JUL 1999

75. Mark Prejsnar/Erika Stephens — meditation on meditatives
76. pete spence — Re: Carnivocal: A Celebration of Sound Poetry / Edited by Stephen Scobie &amp...
77. Ron Silliman — Trane DeVore
78. maz881 — bard conf
79. Herb Levy — Re: poetry in RealAudio
80. Michael Magee — Re: bard conf
81. Christopher Reiner — Re: Trane DeVore
82. Stephen Vincent — Bill who?
83. Safdie Joseph — Re: bard conf
84. Aldon Nielsen — INFO: sherley anne williams
85. Thomas Bell — Re: PW & meditation on meditatives
86. Jamie Perez — Re: Sound Poetry
87. Joe Ahearn — VEER magazine online
88. David Baratier — New Angel for the devil in us all
89. Kevin Magee — Re: RACE & CLASS

90. Alan Sondheim — The Opening
91. Brian Lennon — How to get published (was: unsolicited mss letters ?)

10 JUL 1999

92. John Tranter — dis guises ?
93. rebecca wolff — Re: unsolicited mss letters
94. Ron Silliman — Re: Bill who?
95. Hannah J Sassaman — Re: unsolicited mss letters
96. Mark Weiss — Re: unsolicited mss letters
97. Stephen Vincent — Re: Bill who?
98. Carol L. Hamshaw — Re: Carnivocal: A Celebration of Sound Poetry / Edited by StephenScobie ...
99. Lowther,John — Re: Sound Poetry
100. David Golumbia — Re: unsolicited mss letters
101. Eugene Ostashevsky — 9X9 News
102. Lowther,John — SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE

11 JUL 1999

103. Alan Sondheim — So Much For Ghosts
104. Billy Little — Re: Possum, Ez and Jaysus James
105. juliana spahr — context @ bard
106. Jordan Davis — Re: bard conf
107. Douglas Barbour — Re: Sound Poetry
108. maz881 — Re: bard conf
109. A H Bramhall — questo e un lavora per Superman
110. A H Bramhall — gratitude toward authors, pt 3
111. Lowther,John — Guidelines, guard rails, velvet ropes
112. Chris McCreary — info - Zavis Kalandra
113. David Baratier — Long Song Water Pond
114. R M Daley — Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
115. KENT JOHNSON — quintessentially american
116. KENT JOHNSON — memories of anti-semitism
117. Carol L. Hamshaw — Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE

12 JUL 1999

118. Herb Levy — Poetry in RealAudio on Mappings
119. Alan Sondheim — Broom Theory
120. Robert J. Tiess — CROSSROADS - A New Anthology Now Online
121. Michael Magee — Re: bard conf
122. Michael Magee — Kent Johnson, WCW, anti-semitism
123. Jamie Perez — Re: Sound Poetry
124. Jim Bennett — Re: Sound Poetry
125. rebecca wolff — Re: soapbox of submission
126. Ana Doina — Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
127. Daniel Kane — two month sublet in NYC's Lower East Side
128. Dan Waber — Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
129. Linda Russo — Re: bard conf
130. Mark Weiss — Re: questo e un lavora per Superman
131. Mark Weiss — Re: memories of anti-semitism
132. peter neufeld — Re: unsolicited mss letters
133. Jamie Perez — random.Q.re/Defoe [resend]
134. Michael Magee — Re: unsolicited mss letters
135. Patrick F. Durgin — Re: soapbox of submission
136. A H Bramhall — le livre est sur al table
137. Michael Boughn — Re: Kent Johnson, WCW, anti-semitism
138. KENT JOHNSON — Williams's tomb sweepers
139. Lowther,John — Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE

140. R Democracy — HELP WITH OUTREACH
141. Chris Stroffolino — WCW, anti-semitism....
142. Chris Stroffolino — COPE'S OPPEN---
143. Steven Shoemaker — Re: Kent Johnson, WCW, anti-semitism

13 JUL 1999

144. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Anti- Poetry
145. Louis Cabri — Re: bard conf
146. Louis Cabri — Re: bard conf - pt two
147. A H Bramhall — The Rules Committee
148. Michael Magee — Re: WCW, anti-semitism....
149. John Tranter — Announcing Jacket # 7
150. rebecca wolff — Re: Submission Crucible
151. Douglas Barbour — Re: Carnivocal
152. Douglas Barbour — Re: submission guidelines
153. Taylor Brady — Re: bard conf
154. Poetics List — Welcome Message recap
155. Lowther,John — Submission Crucible
156. katy — Re: Submission Crucible
157. Mike Kelleher — a l y r i c m a i l e r 12
158. Maria Damon — Re: bard conf
159. Stephen Vincent — Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
160. Robin Kemp — My new chapbook! (Shameless plug)
161. jarnot — address query
162. Brian Lennon — Re: Submission Crucible
163. Juliana Spahr — Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Jul 1999 to 11 Jul 1999 (#1999-133)
164. Stephen Ellis — Re: soapbox of submission
165. Mark Wallace — tracking Brenda Coultas and Gillian McCain (fwd)
166. KENT JOHNSON — The good doctor on circumcision
167. Billy Little — Re: Williams's tomb sweepers
168. Elizabeth Treadwell — Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
169. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)
170. A H Bramhall — A Party For Ted
171. Balestrieri, Peter — Name That Quote
172. Karen Weiser — Re: Submission Crucible
173. KENT JOHNSON — (Fwd) WCW [from E. Weinberger]

14 JUL 1999

174. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Meow Press is Moving!
175. Jeffrey Jullich — Re: Submission Crucible -Reply
176. Pierre Joris — URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being made!]]
177. geraets — Under New Management: NZ's new writing
178. Ron Persons — Re: submission guidelines
179. Douglas Barbour — Re: ordering Carnivocal
180. Michael Magee — Re: (Fwd) WCW [from E. Weinberger]
181. KENT JOHNSON — Purity
182. Ryan Knighton, Editor — Re: Submission Crucible
183. Carol L. Hamshaw — Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
184. Michael Boughn — Re: The good doctor on circumcision
185. Richard Dillon — Re: soapbox of submission
186. Taylor Brady — Re: URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being ma...
187. Maria Damon — Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
188. joan houlihan — Schizophrenic Chickens
189. Judy Schwartz — Re: COPE'S OPPEN---
190. Tisa Bryant — Contact Info for Tan Lin

191. Tony Green — Re: partly Jewish writers
192. Hamish John Dewe — Re: Under New Management: NZ's new writing
193. Patrick F. Durgin — Re: Submission Crucible
194. Lynn Miller — Re: Help with Outreach

15 JUL 1999

195. Jim Rosenberg — wr-eye-tings is DOWN -- help needed
196. George Bowering — Re: Name That Quote
197. Brian Stefans — Williams
198. Grant Jenkins — E. Weinberger and snobs
199. Brian Stefans — PS on Williams
200. Poetics List — (no subject)
201. Chris Nagler — Reminder: The Barn (a play), tonite and tomorrow
202. A H Bramhall — When The Invitation Arrives
203. A H Bramhall — An Expert On New Jersey
204. Mark Weiss — Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
205. Mark Weiss — Re: PS on Williams
206. Julie Johnson — Duration: A Journal of International Poetry; Issue One now online
207. Mark Weiss — Pound and the Nobel Prize
208. Judy Schwartz — Re: COPE'S OPPEN---
209. rebecca wolff — fence new issue site
210. Alan Sondheim — (for ANC and NP)

16 JUL 1999

211. pete spence — Re: H W
212. Stephen Vincent — Re: Purity
213. John Tranter — Not all salt is NaCl
214. Michael Magee — Re: PS on Williams
215. Stephen Ellis — Manifest Destiny
216. Dana Lustig — Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
217. Jamie Perez — submissions w/rejections
218. Maria Damon — Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
219. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Name That Quote
220. W. Freind — Subscriptions, submissions, etc.
221. hassen — Million Artist March
222. peter neufeld — Email address request
223. Jordan Davis — Re: Pound and the Nobel Prize
224. Al Filreis — Re: Pound and the Nobel Prize
225. Balestrieri, Peter — Re: George Bowering on Name That Quote
226. Mark Weiss — Re: Manifest Destiny
227. Jordan Davis — Re: Pound and the Nobel Prize
228. Michael Magee — Re: PS on Williams
229. peter neufeld — Re: Pound and the Nobel Prize
230. Joan Houlihan — Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
231. Macgregor Card — The Germ no.3

17 JUL 1999

232. John Tranter — KPFA mentioned in "Wired" magazine Internet News site
233. John Tranter — Ezra Pound and the Bollingen Prize for Literature, 1949.
234. Stephen Cope — Re: The Germ
235. A H Bramhall — Exactly This
236. David Baratier — Re: Submission Crucible
237. Alan Sondheim — Error-Message
238. Hugh Nicoll — wr-eye-tings list

18 JUL 1999

239. Jim Rosenberg — wr-eye-tings will live again (promise!)

240. Julie Johnson — ATTN Small Press Publishers
241. juliana spahr — request for horror stories involving work sent to aca journal
242. A H Bramhall — pointless questions
243. Lowther,John — ~
244. Hamish John Dewe — Re: Not all salt is NaCl
245. Alan Sondheim — The Animal

19 JUL 1999

246. Chris Stroffolino — Nada Gordon & Gary Sullivan
247. Chris Stroffolino — Nada and Gary (continued)
248. Ron Silliman — Hass on Lee Ann Brown
249. Michael Franco — BOSTON LAST CALL BOSTON!!!!!!
250. Brian Stefans — What to do with all this Real?
251. Thomas Bell — asylum
252. Poetics List Administration — Book by Palmer/Bernstein? / Ron Persons
253. Mark Weiss — Re: PS on Williams
254. Mark Weiss — Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
255. Mark Weiss — Re: What to do with all this Real?
256. raea100900 — address request
257. Michael W Bibby — Pound/Bollingen
258. John Tranter — Gabriela Mistral, translated by Langston Hughes. 1957

20 JUL 1999

259. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger — Re: Manifest Destiny
260. Joan Houlihan — Re: Ezra Pound and the Bollingen Prize for Literature, 1949.
261. KENT JOHNSON — Complexity and anti-Semitism
262. Tony Green — Re: cattle
263. KENT JOHNSON — Mused and Beatriced
264. Alan Sondheim — SONNET ENVZ:
265. George Bowering — Re: Okay Corrall
266. Ramez Qureshi — Re: PS on Williams
267. Tisa Bryant — WCW and Black Women
268. Michael Magee — Re: Complexity and anti-Semitism
269. Michael Magee — Re: PS on Williams
270. Michael Magee — Re: Pound/Bollingen
271. Eugene Ostashevsky — ABIE & EUGENE IN SAN JOSE
272. Lowther,John — Junkyard Poetics
273. Julie Johnson — Re: Mused and Beatriced
274. Chicago Review — New Chicago Review
275. Steven Shoemaker — WCW's map of pleasure & pain
276. Stephen Ellis — Re: Manifest Destiny
277. KENT JOHNSON — Poets on Verge of Breakdown
278. pete spence — Re: Hannah Weiner's COUNTRY GIRL and sundry items
279. Jeffrey Jullich — The Germ no.3 -Reply
280. Julie Johnson — addresses needed...

21 JUL 1999

281. Stephen Cope — Germ Addresses
282. Robert Archambeau — Manifest Dentistry
283. Brian Stefans — (no subject)
284. Maria Damon — query
285. Brian Stefans — Correction
286. Mark Prejsnar — Presenting, 3-Hand john & His junkyard Dawgs...
287. Mark Weiss — Re: Manifest Destiny
288. Mark Weiss — (no subject)
289. Carolyn Guertin — Re: query
290. Michael Magee — Tisa Bryant's question re WCW

291. Mark Wallace — SITUATION #19 is now available
292. Dodie Bellamy — persona
293. Richard Dillon — Re: WCW's map of pleasure & pain
294. David Buuck — Attacks on camp KPFA
295. Michael Neff — ACLU case in Detroit
296. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)

22 JUL 1999

297. Parks — Action Appeal
298. Joan Houlihan — Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
299. Joan Houlihan — Re: PS on Williams
300. charssmith — Arcturus Editions: Pat Reed
301. Susan Wheeler — 1999 Books

23 JUL 1999

302. Tenney Nathanson — contact info for Robin Blaser, Harryette Mullen
303. pete spence — Re: the ELBURG BOOK
304. Stephen Cope — Beyond the Page
305. Jeffrey Jullich — $3.50: Summer vacation in Scandinavia!
306. david bromige — RADIO STATION KPFA, BERKELEY
307. Lowther,John — Re: pointless questions(ANSWERS)
308. Dodie Bellamy — Changes at Small Press Traffic
309. KENT JOHNSON — Modernists in the basement
310. Ramez Qureshi — Ribot Query
311. Ron Starr — Diastic Reading (Yet More Ways to...)
312. A H Bramhall — Dust My Broom
313. KENT JOHNSON — Jaime Saenz

24 JUL 1999

314. Alan Sondheim — Vito Hannibal Acconci
315. A H Bramhall — The Whole World's In An Uproar
316. Charles Bernstein — List Down til Monday

25 JUL 1999

317. Jill Stengel — august 8 reading--sf, ca
318. Jim Rosenberg — (Fwd) WEB DOC(K)S
319. Michael Neff — Electronic Literary Arts Newsletter (ELAN) #1

26 JUL 1999

320. Terry Diggory — WCW Australia/NZ
321. david bromige — three things : a reading; a redundancy; a resource
322. Balestrieri, Peter — Paul Metcalf

27 JUL 1999

323. Lawrence Upton. — 4th SV Colloquium
324. Eugene Ostashevsky — DADAFEST

28 JUL 1999

325. Poetics List — poetics restart
326. Poetics List — Evans-Impercipient query
327. Brian Stefans — Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
328. Maria Damon — Re: query
329. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: 1999 Books
330. Taylor Brady — Re: RADIO STATION KPFA, BERKELEY
331. KENT JOHNSON — WCW on women
332. Stephen Vincent — Re: RADIO STATION KPFA, BERKELEY
333. Jamie Perez — Petrarch meet Mr. Newton
334. Robert Freedman — Re: 1999 Books

335. Brian Stefans — Re: persona
336. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: 1999 Books
337. Parks — Action Appeal 2

29 JUL 1999

338. George Bowering — Re: Manifest Destiny
339. George Bowering — Re: $3.50: Summer vacation in Scandinavia!
340. George Bowering — Re: 1999 Books
341. Owen Hill — Re: 1999 Books
342. Owen Hill — Re: Action Appeal 2
343. Owen Hill — Surrealist Women
344. Steven Shoemaker — Re: Modernists in the basement
345. Tom Orange — new OPEN LETTER available
346. Poetics List — Poem on 'good things about turning 80' / Chapman
347. Poetics List — Strings, new Flash work at Vispo by Dan Waber / Andrews
348. Poetics List — Naropa from a distance
349. Jordan Davis — take a left at Constructed-identity
350. Mark Weiss — Re: 1999 Books
351. Julie Johnson — best books of 99 (so far...)
352. derek beaulieu — Re: 1999 Books
353. William Slaughter — Mudlark Poster No. 18 (1999)

30 JUL 1999

354. hassen — Re: WCW on women
355. komninos zervos — Re: 1999 Books
356. jasfoley — Jack Folie
357. Noam Scheindlin — NYC SUBLET
358. Brian Stefans — Modernists in the basement
359. Stephen Vincent — Re: Joanne Kyger
360. Joan Houlihan — Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
361. Aldon Nielsen — Gloria Tropp
362. Poetics List Administration — list stats
363. Poetics List Administration — Re: Poem on 'good things about turning 80' / Safdie

1. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Wed 30 Jun 1999

The Sub Voicive Poetry web site has moved from its Yahoo (sic) site to

http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/

the transfer of files is not quite complete, but the latest programme info is there, and the documentation of past readings that has already been published. Introductions etc still have to be uploaded. The index is as it was last March with some of the entries indexed not uploaded. The process should be finalised within days. . There is a what's new page now to guide you to new sections. At the moment it is being used to log the progress of the upload of the *updated and *improved site - progress is ahead of the report

The svp telinco address is defunct. The geocities mainstream address may or may not function but you are asked not to use it. Direct any svp to editor@[redacted] or to this account

Thank you

↑ Index

2. john coletti
Re: Whalen
Wed 30 Jun 1999

This review got my goat when I first read it a month or so ago on Jacket. It is ambivalent, prodding, & terribly uninspired. How was this review (which appears to be the same one from the Chronicle)put together? Every complement is countered by a neutral or negative bit of language. Weighted down by "the patient reader," "certain obsessive themes," "finicky," "generalizing," "odd," and so forth, this review appears to be trying to pass off as a positive one while seeding itself with vague & underlying resentment. Clark describes Whalen's writing as "disarmingly self-deflating comedy" without giving any sort of an enthused explanation as to why this very truth can bring about some of the best comic writing around. In the end, one gets the feeling that Tom Clark just dashed this one off to the presses. If he disliked the book then so be it. Say so. If he really felt that this "self-deprecating hipster-bodhissatva, wine glass and joint at the ready...remains perhaps the finest comic creation of the Beat era." then he sure made a lousy, shlocky stab at doing so. This selection was, in my opinion, one of the very best pieces of literature I came across this year. Whalen's writing deserves a better review than the limp & inchoate one that the Chronicle served up. I mean, count the words with typically negative connotations, and then read the review again.

Inititally, I thought it was a positive review. Feeling somehow uneasy, I read it again. I don't think I would have picked the book up if I had simply read this review at face value without having already known of Whalen's writing and of this book specifically. For some, this will be a true shame.

John Coletti

> From: Dale Smith <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Whalen
> Date: Tue, 29 Jun 1999 22:40:28 GMT
>
> If anyone is really interested in reading this "downer" review of Philip Whalen by Tom Clark, you can browse:
>
> www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/06/27/RV105857.DTL.
>
> Tom's review in Jacket, or a 1996 review in the SF Chronicle of Whalen's Canoeing Up Cabarga Creek might seem more "generous and positive" to those used to book reviews reading like PR blurbs rather than critical engagements > with poetry.
>
> Steve Vincent is being diplomatic in not saying that "the Chronicle critic"
>
> is Tom Clark (whom I presume
>
> must think it to have been a warm, generous and positive review of his
>
> one-time neighbor on the
>
> mesa). Whalen's counter-careerism certainly has been a factor, and Steve's
>
> right about Rexroth and

Dahlen also. But I'd add Bob Grenier and even Joanne Kyger to that list. All

folks who deserve to be read closely (and widely).

Ron

"There was a downer review of Whalen's new Penquin collection (with intro by Leslie Scalapino) in yesterday's San Francisco Sunday Chronicle Book Review.

I am not sure what the Chronicle critic was trying to perform other than he somehow missed and hardly gave a clue to the rich and various brilliance(s)

of Whalen's work.

While this work has fortunately managed to get published over the years,

Whalen remains a wry counter-careerist which unfortunately has kept the poems

from larger public assessment, celebration and/or review. Maybe obscurity is part of the character structure of some West coast giants. Kenneth Rexroth

(who was very public) had a paranoid streak that caused him to slash every critic who crossed the horizon, leaving him dismissed from any real consideration in the modernist Canon. Retrieval efforts to recognize his work

> remain ongoing. Then there is Beverly Dahlen in hermetic, apparently quite
>
> non-careerist retreat. Lyn Hejinian (gratefully) (among a few others) for
>
> example, seems to have figured it out - keeping her generous critical mind
>
> and creative work at the public forefront - east, middle and west.
>
> Well, I diverged from my original intent. I'm pissed off at the Chron
>
> review.
>
> Which is to ask, has anyone read a good, substantial review of Whalen's new
>
> Collected?
>
> Cheers,
>
> Stephen Vincent"
>
> _____
>
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

3. Patrick F. Durgin

Litmag mania / collect them all!

Wed 30 Jun 1999

Attention friends and their friends:

Through the month of August, a full set of the first four issues of Kenning is available for $25.00, postage paid. After I've sold out of these through this offer, these issues will be out of print permanently. The set comes in the format normally exculsive to subscribers: loose-leaf in a hand-printed portfolio. NOTE: This is the only way to acquire these issues short of having been an active subscriber all along. Although, you may still receive issue 4 by becoming an active subscriber. Kenning's 5th issue will be available as of August 1st, if all goes well. I urge you to have a look at the Kenning website for further information. You may also feel free to email me with any questions regarding this offer. With your support, Kenning will continue to flourish and grow.

Thanks: Patrick F. Durgin

http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
[redacted]

Vol. 1, No. 1
"Premier Issue" Spring 1998
Poetry: Mark Wallace, Daniel Zimmerman, John Kinsella, Juliana Spahr, Summi Kaipa, Michael Angelo Tata, John Lowther, Ryan Whyte, Stephen Ellis. 22pps.

Vol. 1, No. 2 Summer 1998 Poetry: A.L. Nielsen, Emily Wilson, John M. Bennett, Keston Sutherland, Ron Silliman, Alfred Arteaga, Andrew Levy, Katy Lederer, Alice Notley, Taylor Brady, Liz Waldner, Paul Silvia, Jen Hofer, Heather Fuller and Rod Smith, Spencer Selby. Poetics: Alice Notley. 54pps.

Vol. 1, No. 3 Autumn/Winter 1998-9 Poetry: Daniel Bouchard, Standard Schaefer, Sheila Murphy, Charles Bernstein, John Lowther, Hoa Nguyen, Peter Ganick, Mark DuCharme, Lisa Jarnot, Ida Yoshinaga, Mark Prejsnar, Andrew Levy, Gustaf Sobin, Ray DiPalma. Non fiction: Susan Smith Nash. Poetics: John Taggart, Tina Darragh. Interview: Nathaniel Mackey. Book reviews: Jordan Davis' Poem on a Train, Yedda Morrison's The Marriage of the Well-Built Head. 71pps.

Vol. 2, No. 1 "Issue #4" Spring 1999 Poetry: Elizabeth Treadwell, Mark Prejsnar, Bill Luoma, Chelsey Minnis, Lous Cabri, Patrick Pritchett, Sheila Murphy, Mac Wellman, Kathy Lou Schultz, Bill Freind, Lisa Samuels, Leslie Scalapino, Anselm Berrigan, Eileen Myles. Non fiction: Dale Smith. Book reviews: Rachel Blau DuPlessis' Draft 32: Renga, Joan Retallack's How To Do Things With Words. 69pps.

↑ Index

4. Kevin Magee
Re: burnt epistle
Wed 30 Jun 1999

D E A R A N G E L O F F I R E

"There are no compassionate, harmless ways to remake oneself. We murder ourselves so we can rebirth ourselves in our dreams."

Vietnamese woman living in Shepherd's Bush, London.
Quoted by Judith Barry.

Who Are These Coming to the Sacrifice?
The print has gone back, then. Many were missing at the theater.

Would they have seen what I saw? We see what they say, or we say they can't see. After the second showing,
I went away, like Alma, the Indian Princess, empty inside.
It's the spectacle of her immolation, when I had thought the closure of the film would balance out in the exchange in passing to the Patrona outside the house where she, Alma, as complex a sign for the category of Woman
as one might hope to find, has just given to Sacramento, the High Priest of his mother's solitary sect, the experience of his sex. He cuts his wrists. There is adoration in those eyes whose owner is about to extinguish them of their light.
Which is the greater sin under the sign system, the church
no one here appears to be able to labor their way out of:
incest or suicide? But is the movie, then, about Religion?
The patchwork canvas rags that comprise the Big Top of the Circo Fantasia and the no less haphazard colors of the Theater Truck. The relation of Religion to Art.

Catalogue note: "In 1529, Giovanni Battist della Palla once more paid for Andrea to paint. This time the artist, anxious to recover his former patron's favor, exerted himself to the utmost, and produced his Sacrifice of Abraham, a picture far finer in expression than any other work of his later years. But the siege intervened . . ." You can hardly think of Alma, or her father, Renato the Clown, or the Patrona and her son, as characters at all in a fiction more or less awkwardly called "social-realist." The child, Noah, exists as some kind of rope or umbilical cord that keeps pulling Alma back to her childhood in his jester's outfit he wears to call the people to the theater and the Book of Forgiveness on which their names may be signed. The Redemptress (as she's called by the street kids straight out of that early film of Bunuel's) drives through the Barrios like an inveterate survivor of the ages, the Mystery Play. Angel del Fuego is about the martyrdom of Fictive Being. There is no hope, and the dead do not rise from their graves. In Dana Totenberg's second film, historical materialism arrives on the wing of Mortification and Miscarriage.

\ / \ / \ / \ / \ / \ / \ / \ / \ / \ / \ / \ /

Note: Totenberg or Rotenberg? Does anyone know if she's made any more films? The Judith Barry quote I associate with an exhibition at the Cleveland Art Museum when I first moved to Cleveland in the fall of 1996, where there was a multi-media installation of hers in a show that included an installation by Kevin Evans, whose Whitney shipping crate continues to grace the cooking area of my loft; Evans' installation was prison-guard uniforms on clotheslines, something to do with the prison industry and black working-class neighborhoods. The Cleveland Art Museum was one of five U.S. museums to host the recent Diego Rivera exhibit, "Art and Revolution." Andrea del Sarto's "Sacrifice" is part of the its permanent collection.

↑ Index

5. Tony Green

Re: burnt epistles

Thu 1 Jul 1999

George Bowering is right. It was the 1970s that the Italians were said to be burning mail. It was 1976 when I heard of it. Really, that's not so long ago. I am relieved to know that it was more than a rumour. It was on TV & must be true. Burning poetry is less likely to make it to the TV news, unless it's being done by a cute animal -- even if the police do suspect arson.

Tony Green

> tony green wrote;
>
> "...there were rumours (just rumours) not long ago of Italian mail service getting so overloaded that tons of mail was burned to speed delivery up a bit."
>
> I saw a TV news programme with footage of such a thing being done in the late seventies in Italy. It involved little forklifts and bulldozers. At the time I thought: why cant this procedure be instituted for poetry?
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

6. Deborah M Mix

Experimental Poetry & History (call for papers)

Thu 1 Jul 1999

Experimental American Poetry: Reforming History

NEMLA Convention, 7-8 April 2000, Buffalo, NY
Abstracts due by 15 September

How does innovative technique make possible innovative history? How does experiment help uncover the mechanisms of concealment and revelation in language and historical narrative? This panel will bring together investigations of the ways in which formal experimentation (particularly, though not limited to, the experimentation associated with Language Poetry) confronts history and the generic markers of historical narrative. Formal innovation often calls attention to the mechanisms of language, to the ways language both conceals and reveals, coerces and invokes; such attentiveness to the shapes and functions of language likewise revises the operations, structures, and boundaries of history. We seek papers that consider the consequences of, as well as the motives for, confrontations between experimental writing and history. How, for example, do the paradigm shifts demanded by these writings revise governing notions of tradition, of lineage, of what is "private," "personal," or "public"? Given that the convention is to take place in Buffalo, we are particularly insterested in papers that address the work of SUNY-Buffalo writers, such as Susan Howe and Charles Bernstein. However, papers on other authors will be equally welcome.

Questions concerning this panel may be addressed via email to panel co-chairs Deborah Mix <[redacted]> and/or Elizabeth Savage <[redacted]>. We prefer to receive abstracts by regular mail or fax; copies of proposals should be submitted to both of us no later than 15 September. Deborah Mix Elizabeth Savage Dept. of American Thought and Language Dept. of English Michigan State University Virginia Commonwealth Univ. 235 Bessey Hall 900 Park Ave. Box 842005 E. Lansing, MI 48824-1033 Richmond, VA 23284-2005 phone: 517/[redacted] phone: 804/[redacted] fax: 517/[redacted] fax: 804/[redacted]

↑ Index

7. Michael Krebs

Re: uncompromising, but corrugated, position

Thu 1 Jul 1999

---

with refrigerator literature one needs to be careful

there is always the under lying need for preservation

you see it now more regularly it being summer time and all

On Tue, 22 Jun 1999 19:14:14 +0000, Wendy Kramer wrote:

> Spotted a refrigerator box today (with fridge inside, otherwise i would've carted it off) whose printed side panel read
>
> BACK
>
> LAY ON BACK ONLY
>
> this as opposed to FRONT (i walked 'round to check the other side) & in my mind
> it argued (& agitated) not only terms & correctness of sexual position but questions of grammar as well. "lie" or "lay" ? i can never keep it straight. "front" "back" or
> "volte face" ? one sighs in consternation.

Get your free, private email at http://mail.excite.com/

↑ Index

8. Dan Waber
Riding the Meridian
Thu 1 Jul 1999

For immediate release:

Riding the Meridian -- Nationality or Not http://www.heelstone.com/meridian

Guest edited by Peter Howard

As words zip 'round the world on newsgroups, bulletin boards and mailing lists, all of us find certain people with whom we feel an enhanced form of kinship. Their ability to express themselves in writing, the nuances of their 'virtual' personalities, their sense of humor (or humour, depending on what form of English you're typing in), stylistic tastes, all add to and amplify one's own sense of enjoyment in being a writer in the late twentieth century. The person you're communicating with may be from another country as easily as they can be from down the street.

For me, one of these people is the very talented and well-spoken poet, panellist, and columnist, Peter Howard, who lives in Cambridge, England.

As guest editor for Riding the Meridian, Howard has assembled an international group of writers to help shed light on the impact the Internet is having on communication and national/regional writing and identity. From Andre Mangeot's take on how easily the English language can subvert the spelling of his name, to Clinton V du Plessis's striking imagery about the conflict in South Africa, to Red Slider's tribute to Sam Grolmes on the occasion of receiving his translations of Ryuichi Tamura--where the character of the written language itself informs the meat of the poem, to Michael Rothenberg's imagined cyberchat between a group of French speakers and a would-be American tourist, Howard's choice of writers shows--here with pathos, there with wit--the incredible diversity at work within the Internet literary community. And to quote him: "Oooh, but I'm assuming everyone speaks some variety of English, aren't I? Naughty of me. The difference it makes to those who don't (in a pseudo-space where most do) is an interesting question in itself." Expect some enlightenment on that, as well as a short tour of Flash Fiction by Viktor Car, Alex Keegan, and Sheila Murphy, and many other surprises, as well.

It's been an honor to work with Peter on this issue; if anyone was metaphorically best suited to fully inaugurate Riding the Meridian, it was he.

* Net Premieres of new poetry link=the Poetry by Jeffrey Alfier, miekal and, Robert James Berry, Jane C. Brandon, Linda Chase, Ronald Donn, Peter Finch, Liz Forbes, Claudia K. Grinnell, Peter Horn, John Horvath, Jr., Harold Janzen, Shikha Malaviya, Andrea Mangeot, Murray Moulding, Cynthia Newcomer, Alvin Pang, Clinton V du Plessis, Michael Rothenberg, Kenneth Sherman, Red Slider and Robert Sullivan.

* Something to Write Home About link=the Dialogue

Jeffrey Alfier, Douglas Barbour, Anne Berkeley, Liz Forbes, and Danny Huppatz, led by Peter Howard, discuss the effect the global nature of the Internet has on poetry and the literary community, with a link to a trAce hosted discussion forum.

* Word for Word link=the Dialogue

CK Tower interviews noted Australian poet and editor, John Tranter.

* In the Flesh link=the Dialogue

Chocolate Waters brings some fresh meat to the cyber table in the form of work by NYC poet, Penelope MaGuffin.

* Flashes on the Meridian link=the Means

Pamelyn Casto, who hosts the Flash Fiction Workshop, helps to define this very popular way of writing, with previously unpublished examples of the genre written by Viktor Car, Alex Keegan and Sheila Murphy.

* State of Affairs link=the Means

Peter Howard reviews "Leaving and Leaving You" by Sophie Hannah.

* Monster book of Poetry link=the Means

Peter Howard reviews "Satan is a Mathematician" by Keith Allen Daniels.

* Women Fly in Oregon link=the Means

Wendy Taylor Carlisle takes us along to meet Lucille Clifton at "Flight of the Mind", a yearly writing workshop.

* International, or Not? link=the Theory

Pamelyn Casto reveals the amazing diversity among literary sites available on the Net.

* Why Can't It Be X-MA: Agamben's Topoi and Spectacle Notes link=the Theory

Robert Donn on regionalism and poetic language.

* New Pastorals - A Streetmap link=the Theory

Tim Love takes a look at the topography of hypertext.

* Rhyme or Not link=the Theory

Dan Waber makes a case for a new kind of cognitive rhyme.

*****

contact: Editor - Jennifer Ley - [redacted]

*****

↑ Index

9. Aldon Nielsen
innarresting booook
Thu 1 Jul 1999

N. J. Loftis's early 70s book BLACK ANIMA had long been thought unavailable -- but there must have been a box or two of them lingering in a warehouse, because it's now gettable through amazon.com -- This is an unusual book, with words of praise from both Auden & Ashbery -- the amazon listing tells you it's a paperback, but when the book arrives in your mail you'll find it's the original hardcover -- at only $7.95 it's well worth your trouble -- get 'em while they last!

↑ Index

10. Alan Sondheim
Making a Mess out of Things, Making Things out of a Mess
Thu 1 Jul 1999

=--

Making a Mess out of Things, Making Things out of a Mess

An article I want to write describes bungling as a primary condition of human existence, the confusion that results from a tendency towards tele- ology on one hand, and the complexity of everyday life on the other. Con- spiracy theory depends upon transcendence, a world of cause and effect; bungling theory is based on literal chaos, marked trajectories in colli- sion. History, obviously after the fact, tends towards conspiracy, if only through the filtering of the past, and the ideology of that filtering; making sense of the world is making a world out of sense, that sense con- structed from senselessness. It is senseless all the way down; there are no armatures, articulations, that extend beyond immediate domains, and even universal physical laws apply with such a light force - even death as such - that the wobbling of the world is always in evidence for those who see with open eyes. (We fail to see, as if by accident, this is the arti- cle that I have wanted to write, that sight itself resides at the tail-end of the whip, the perceptual cleansing of an abjecting world.)

Bungling shapes the destiny of the human; it is a history always already not yet written, unwritable; it is in fact the nature of states-of-affairs in the Wittgensteinian and ordinary senses. Nothing proceeds according to plan because planning is always foreclosed, the result of a game occurring in a potential well permanently at odds with the rest of the universe, an impossibility. Heuristics come into play at every localized turn of ev- ents; the turn is of the nature of the bungle. Throughout, there are impe- tuses (let us say), trajectories/tendencies which proceed freely for a while, before hitting a wall or other dispersion. (We fail to see that obstacles are never placed, but of the order of the real.)

Likewise motives remain deeply and permanently unclear; the ascription of motive is again an ascription of history, the imputation of meaning. To accept the deep meaninglessness of the world - including the bungling within and without the genome - is to begin an understanding which goes nowhere, because there is nowhere to go. Meaning is a temporary hiatus, the strategy of substance and presence, just as the sememe presents once again localized constructs allowing the human to co-exist with its ab- sence. And beyond or before motives, there is truth itself, already shaken within the foundations of symbolic logic, but accepted, with considerable fanfare and maintenance, on the level of the life-world. Once again, iss- ues of foreclosure and bungling appear, since truth is confined to that very same potential well - it's as if nothing can get at truth, because truth can get at nothing. (We fail to see that nothing is just that, not a project nor a noun.)

For within the well, there is nothing at all, that is nothing ontological- ly viable - the well parallels the projections of the Platonic cave, a form of cinematic diminishment allowing meaning to emerge. The cinema is the model for the construction of meaning, the jump-cut for example as a concatenation on the level of ideality, the linkages or couplings of thought. But such a construction can only be a projection or introjection - one immediately runs into a subjectivity undercutting the crystalline world of the Tractatus Logico-Philosophicus, which can still be taken as the analog of orderly non-bungling, no matter how the Sheffer stroke is tossed about within it. We are still inheritors of the 19th-century, and conspiracy theory dies hard. (We fail to see that the success of a plan is an after-effect.)

Which is not to say, by the way, that conspiracies do not exist or are not successful - but to say that they are not the order of the world, that assassinations are assassinations, that annihilations have no reason what-soever, no matter the cause. Or rather that the cause occurs within that potential well, that the ontological significance is nil, that acts of violence and non-violence, acts of criminality and acts of freedom and compassion, on a certain uncanny level, are idiotic in Clement Rosset's sense - that is, occurring within an inert and bungled world, and now, an overcrowded world deeply at odds with itself - and characterized by such odds. (We fail to see the foolishness around us.)

For this reason, it is reasonable to say, we are not making a mess out of things, but, existentially in fact, we are making things out of a mess, as if these things had prior commitments. And that such makes us happy and gives us a life to live, not even in-the-face-of anything or tendency at all, but within the structural need of the human to by and large persev- ere, reproduce. Every defeat of the conspiratorial is a defeat for all of us; every cause that appears set free in the middle of the night attempts the creation of a new language of transcendental meaning. On one hand, the ruthlessness of non-truth; on the other, the truth of ruthlessness. We live by the latter, the former breathing down our necks - like death, al- ways on the periphery of our project. The subject, us, is always under construction, and thereby lies the lie. (We fail to see there are lies without truths.)

Plan-et Ground

There are lies without truths; the probability of truth is zero as an in- finite number of alternatives to exactitude appear to gnaw at the founda- tions. Everyone from Max Black (and I assume earlier) has noticed this. I'm not saying anything new. It might not have been Max Black; it could have been anyone. Further, there are no foundations, not if they're so thin that they attempt to disappear at the slightest breath of the butter- fly phenomenon. They don't attempt to disappear; there's disappearance everywhere at work here in the Cosmos. One false step in a program, and... Try writing HTML and put an extra

< or > somewhere in the middle of a 20k page and see what emerges! Write a program and leave out the ; at the end of the line. You're beginning to get the picture - and it's lucky the pic- ture appears at all, given the compressions, translations, protocols, transmissions necessary for Nikuko's appearance in Cyberspace, New York. That's the Aristotelian rag, the classical logics that seem stable on the level of the real, keeping the values conserved and down. There's an econ- omy at work here. The breakdown-urge is greater than the holdfast. The Cosmos are full of part-objects, splatter-phenomena, dispersions without history, worn curb edges that nothing went past. To put a plan together is to foresee all possible consequences, defend against them. Any one of six billion people on the planet might conceivably show up at any moment, unwanted dinner guests, parasites in Serres' sense of the term. Plans are always already T-junctions, the thick stem replete with noise, temporary convolutions, circuit drains. Place the wrong ground in a circuit and electrons confuse everything, nothing travels much farther, all the images disappear; they were present for your eyes only, otherwise fallen apart. A recent rabbinical ruling specifies the name of God online isn't quite a name; the letters are pixels and independent, nothing stated or erased. You might think otherwise; you're permitted to think whatever you want, Speer tracing his footsteps over and over again, walking the plan-et earth on the prison grounds. There were no grounds; there were firewalls, there was no escape. The prison grounds grounded plan-et earth; countries sank into walled corridors and corners. You and I will look up into the same sky at the same time, our gaze will sustain us across these oceans. Water has memory; memory has no shape; shape is a gift to water. The T is the long-sought solution.

Coterie

Who makes these decisions anyway?

Poetics

When did the object begin and end, where was it spoken, who had spoken, how was it spoken, who, where, how, when?

↑ Index

11. Stephen Vincent
Whalen
Thu 1 Jul 1999

I agree with Coletti's interp of Tom Clark's ambivalent review. In the context of the large public circulation of San Francisco Chronicle, and the fact that Whalen is at the near end of his life, certainly his career, I was disappointed that Tom Clark focused on Whalen's slight and minor aspects, and somehow failed to look at the larger picture of Whalen's significance and mostly unacknowledged contribution to particularly American writing. (You would never know from the article that in 1969 Ron Padgett and Ted Berrigan(?) led a demonstration of a huge contingent of writers and readers around the offices of Harcourt & Brace when On Bears Head (the first anthology) to protest the inaccessible $17.50 hard cover price. In my opinion Whalen has produced some major stuff with large public intention (and no small knowledge of his relation and dialogue with his contemporaries and forbears). Among many works, as an entity, Scenes of Life at the Capital is probably my favorite, and (I believe) represents a real forward move from the Williams, Olson projects of poets who wander in City and spaces beyond. (In Whalen's case, Kyoto was the city.) My question remains as whether or not anybody has come to interesting and critical grips with Whalen's work?? By the way I must confess that I have not looked at the Penguin anthology. (I am more at home, where possible, with individual books. I always felt, for example, that the Black Sparrow Spicer anthology was a put off, or somehow diluted the unique power(magic) I got from reading the series of his individual White Rabbit and other press title books). On Bears Head, in fact, takes some fishing and sorting to take in the stronger spaces on the graph. (Clark is right to pick up on periods of disassociation and melancholia). But, from what I gather in response of my take on Clark's article, the Penguin anthology has created a mixed response, even among longtime Whalen readers. Good editors - assuming that the editing is the problem - at major publishing houses these days is not even a conceptual oxymoron in that the position of Editor, particularly that of a decently funded and supported Developmental Editor, appears to have gone the way of digital flesh. It might be of interest to the list for others to indicate Whalen work(s) that hit the "A" bell. As it has (for me) been to hear people speak of works by Ronald Johnson and Bob Grenier.

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

Coletti wrote: This review got my goat when I first read it a month or so ago on Jacket. It is ambivalent, prodding, & terribly uninspired. How was this review (which appears to be the same one from the Chronicle)put together? Every complement is countered by a neutral or negative bit of language. Weighted down by "the patient reader," "certain obsessive themes," "finicky," "generalizing," "odd," and so forth, this review appears to be trying to pass off as a positive one while seeding itself with vague & underlying resentment. Clark describes Whalen's writing as "disarmingly self-deflating comedy" without giving any sort of an enthused explanation as to why this very truth can bring about some of the best comic writing around. In the end, one gets the feeling that Tom Clark just dashed this one off to the presses. If he disliked the book then so be it. Say so. If he really felt that this "self-deprecating hipster-bodhissatva, wine glass and joint at the ready...remains perhaps the finest comic creation of the Beat era." then he sure made a lousy, shlocky stab at doing so. This selection was, in my opinion, one of the very best pieces of literature I came across this year. Whalen's writing deserves a better review than the limp & inchoate one that the Chronicle served up. I mean, count the words with typically negative connotations, and then read the review again. Inititally, I thought it was a positive review. Feeling somehow uneasy, I read it again. I don't think I would have picked the book up if I had simply read this review at face value without having already known of Whalen's writing and of this book specifically. For some, this will be a true shame.

John Coletti<<

↑ Index

12. Stephen Ellis
Re: re(ad) Grenier
Thu 1 Jul 1999

A 16 pp transcription of a talk Robert Grenier delivered in 1993 in Franconia, NH (where he taught for a number of years in the early 70s)is available as :that:, vol. II, no. 1. :that:, for those not familiar with it, was a small monthly poetry publication the first series of which ran 24 issues from 1992 to 1994. A second series began with the Grenier issue in 1996, followed by a second issue in '98, but since then, they (we) seem to have run out of (you name it). For details, or what's left of them, (I know, for example, the Grenier issue was $5 three years ago, but don't know how many, or if any, are left, tho that can be established pretty easily, if and as there's interest) send an email reply to this address, or post either of the co-editors as follows:

Stephen Ellis / 23 Mitton St. / Portland, ME 04102, or Stephen Dignazio / 1070 Easton Valley Rd. / Easton, NH 03580

- SE

> From: A H Bramhall <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: re(ad) Grenier
> Date: Tue, 29 Jun 1999 17:07:26 -0400
>
> this isn't about me. as a teacher Robert Grenier was a sensitive, generous listener who found excitement and communicated it. tracking American Poetry from Whitman and Dickinson thru to Williams, Zukofky, Olson. Creeley, Levertov, O'Hara, Ashbery, Ginsberg, Coolidge, Saroyan... encompassing the > range, tho it was with Olson that he showed the most warmth, or maybe that was my response (this isn't about me). a picture of Grenier with Olson, a good foot shorter than the Big Fire Source, the giant and the kid. Grenier moved north of Boston (teaching at Tufts I think) to be within hailing distance of Olson. reading "Skunk Island" by Robert Lowell as if it were a Zukofsky poem, syllable by syllable. he didn't seem distracted by the varying interests and abilities of students. he didn't slap you on the shoulder and say, great poem. he asked questions, he reread, he asked you to > read, and read again. the discussion was in the air, he listened to the air.

> 3rd eye staring. sometimes you, or I, would speak a phrase, somehow, perhaps > unwittingly, happen upon an arrangement of words in writing or speech, as one does, that struck him, and he would excitedly explain what struck him. then he would credit you for finding. it wasn't encouragement, it was commitment. to Poetry, which seems such a flat statement as I type. the job at hand. recording his young daughter's Figures of Speech, found things. he made use of a hallway lined with cork bulletin boards, usually devoted to student artwork. carefully pinned 5x8 cards along the entire length, each card containing one poem (later to become Sentences). he asked, what will I do with these, his pile of 5x8 cards. a word gallery.
>
> could go
> quiet any time
>
> he arranged for Larry Eigner to read at the school. informally gathered around a couple of cafeteria tables, but an event nonetheless. if you want to call that a gesture (which it wasn't, it was interest, it was genuine), then call it a generous one. could we call Robert Grenier a pioneer? with the idea that pioneers walk forth with or without paths. 'career' simply describes his path. just responding to, seconding, Ron Silliman's push of RG.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

13. Dale Smith

Re: Whalen

Thu 1 Jul 1999

If "Whalen's writing deserves a better review than the limp & inchoate one that the Chronicle served up," write it. I don't think the SF chron poetry reviews are making or breaking any reputations. It's encouraging, however, to see that a review of poetry can still generate passionate responses. Maybe Philip will get the critical attention he deserves.

> This review got my goat when I first read it a month or so ago on Jacket.
> It is ambivalent, prodding, & terribly uninspired. How was this review > (which appears to be the same one from the Chronicle)put together? Every > complement is countered by a neutral or negative bit of language. Weighted > down by "the patient reader," "certain obsessive themes," "finicky," > "generalizing," "odd," and so forth, this review appears to be trying to > pass off as a positive one while seeding itself with vague & underlying > resentment. Clark describes Whalen's writing as "disarmingly self-deflating > comedy" without giving any sort of an enthused explanation as to why this > very truth can bring about some of the best comic writing around. In the > end, one gets the feeling that Tom Clark just dashed this one off to the > presses. If he disliked the book then so be it. Say so. If he really felt > that this "self-deprecating hipster-bodhissatva, wine glass and joint at the > ready...remains perhaps the finest comic creation of the Beat era." then he > sure made a lousy, shlocky stab at doing so. This selection was, in my > opinion, one of the very best pieces of literature I came across this year.
> Whalen's writing deserves a better review than the limp & inchoate one that the Chronicle served up. I mean, count the words with typically negative connotations, and then read the review again. Inititally, I thought it was a positive review. Feeling somehow uneasy, I read it again. I don't think I would have picked the book up if I had simply read this review at face value without having already known of Whalen's writing and of this book specifically. For some, this will be a true shame.

John Coletti

From: Dale Smith <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Whalen
Date: Tue, 29 Jun 1999 22:40:28 GMT

If anyone is really interested in reading this "downer" review of Philip Whalen by Tom Clark, you can browse:

www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/06/27/RV105857.DTL.

> Tom's review in Jacket, or a 1996 review in the SF Chronicle of Whalen's > Canoeing Up Cabarga Creek might seem more "generous and positive" to those > used to book reviews reading like PR blurbs rather than critical engagements > with poetry.
>
> Steve Vincent is being diplomatic in not saying that "the Chronicle > critic"
>
> is Tom Clark (whom I presume
>
> must think it to have been a warm, generous and positive review of his
>
> one-time neighbor on the
>
> mesa). Whalen's counter-careerism certainly has been a factor, and Steve's
>
> right about Rexroth and
>
> Dahlen also. But I'd add Bob Grenier and even Joanne Kyger to that > list.

> All
>
> folks who deserve to be
>
> read closely (and widely).
>
> Ron
>
> "There was a downer review of Whalen's new Penquin collection > (with intro > by
>
> Leslie Scalapino) in yesterday's San Francisco Sunday Chronicle > Book > Review.
>
> I am not sure what the Chronicle critic was trying to perform > other than > he
>
> somehow missed and hardly gave a clue to the rich and various > brilliance(s)
>
> of Whalen's work.
>
> While this work has fortunately managed to get published over the > years,

>
> Whalen remains a wry counter-careerist which unfortunately has kept the
>
> poems
>
> from larger public assessment, celebration and/or review. Maybe obscurity > is
>
> part of the character structure of some West coast giants. Kenneth Rexroth
>
> (who was very public) had a paranoid streak that caused him to slash every
>
> critic who crossed the horizon, leaving him dismissed from any real
>
> consideration in the modernist Canon. Retrieval efforts to recognize his
>
> work
>
> remain ongoing. Then there is Beverly Dahlen in hermetic, apparently quite
>
> non-careerist retreat. Lyn Hejinian (gratefully) (among a few others) for
>
> example, seems to have figured it out - keeping her generous critical mind

> and creative work at the public forefront - east, middle and west.
>
> Well, I diverged from my original intent. I'm pissed off at the > Chron
>
> review.
>
> Which is to ask, has anyone read a good, substantial review of > Whalen's
> new
>
> Collected?
>
> Cheers,
>
> Stephen Vincent"
>
> ---
>
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
> ---
>
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

14. Susan M. Schultz
Re: burnt epistles
Thu 1 Jul 1999

I'll be off the list from July 2-19. If anyone needs me, I can be found--infrequently--at [redacted], in some internet cafe or other.

The next _Tinfish_ should be out at the end of the summer. Forthcoming chapbooks by Nell Altizer and Rob Wilson, as well.

all best, Susan

↑ Index

15. Chris Stroffolino
Reviews....
Thu 1 Jul 1999

Well, then there's (on the other side?) the question of "positive" reviews. In the latest st. marks newsletter, for instance, there's at least two "positive" reviews of books that--if i didn't already know the books (one which i think is pretty damn great the other not bad but "excellent scribbling in a period style"---more on this backchannel)--would actually turn me away from reading them, more than a more AMBIVALENT review would. Since I'm more interested in the ISSUE than in the specifics, I leave the names blank for now.... curious what others think.... chris

On Wed, 30 Jun 1999, john coletti wrote:

> This review got my goat when I first read it a month or so ago on Jacket. It is ambivalent, prodding, & terribly uninspired. How was this review (which appears to be the same one from the Chronicle)put together? Every complement is countered by a neutral or negative bit of language. Weighted down by "the patient reader," "certain obsessive themes," "finicky," "generalizing," "odd," and so forth, this review appears to be trying to pass off as a positive one while seeding itself with vague & underlying resentment. Clark describes Whalen's writing as "disarmingly self-deflating comedy" without giving any sort of an enthused explanation as to why this very truth can bring about some of the best comic writing around. In the end, one gets the feeling that Tom Clark just dashed this one off to the presses. If he disliked the book then so be it. Say so. If he really felt that this "self-deprecating hipster-bodhissatva, wine glass and joint at the ready...remains perhaps the finest comic creation of the Beat era." then he sure made a lousy, shlocky stab at doing so. This selection was, in my opinion, one of the very best pieces of literature I came across this year. Whalen's writing deserves a better review than the limp & inchoate one that the Chronicle served up. I mean, count the words with typically negative connotations, and then read the review again. Inititally, I thought it was a positive review. Feeling somehow uneasy, I read it again. I don't think

I would have picked the book up if I had simply read this review at face value without having already known of Whalen's writing and of this book specifically. For some, this will be a true shame.

John Coletti

From: Dale Smith <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Re: Whalen
Date: Tue, 29 Jun 1999 22:40:28 GMT

If anyone is really interested in reading this "downer" review of Philip Whalen by Tom Clark, you can browse:

www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/06/27/RV105857.DTL.

Tom's review in Jacket, or a 1996 review in the SF Chronicle of Whalen's Canoeing Up Cabarga Creek might seem more "generous and positive" to those used to book reviews reading like PR blurbs rather than critical engagements with poetry.

Steve Vincent is being diplomatic in not saying that "the Chronicle critic"

is Tom Clark (whom I presume

must think it to have been a warm, generous and positive review of his

one-time neighbor on the mesa). Whalen's counter-careerism certainly has been a factor, and Steve's

right about Rexroth and

Dahlen also. But I'd add Bob Grenier and even Joanne Kyger to that list. All

folks who deserve to be read closely (and widely).

Ron

"There was a downer review of Whalen's new Penquin collection (with intro by Leslie Scalapino) in yesterday's San Francisco Sunday Chronicle Book Review.

I am not sure what the Chronicle critic was trying to perform other than he somehow missed and hardly gave a clue to the rich and various brilliance(s)

of Whalen's work.

While this work has fortunately managed to get published over the years,

Whalen remains a wry counter-careerist which unfortunately has kept the poems

from larger public assessment, celebration and/or review. Maybe obscurity is part of the character structure of some West coast giants. Kenneth Rexroth

(who was very public) had a paranoid streak that caused him to slash every critic who crossed the horizon, leaving him dismissed from any real consideration in the modernist Canon. Retrieval efforts to recognize his > work

>
> remain ongoing. Then there is Beverly Dahlen in hermetic, apparently quite
>
> non-careerist retreat. Lyn Hejinian (gratefully) (among a few others) for
>
> example, seems to have figured it out - keeping her generous critical mind
>
> and creative work at the public forefront - east, middle and west.
>
> Well, I diverged from my original intent. I'm pissed off at the Chron
>
> review.
>
> Which is to ask, has anyone read a good, substantial review of Whalen's new
>
> Collected?
>
> Cheers,
>
> Stephen Vincent"
>
> ---
>
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
> ---
>
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

16. Kevin Magee

Re: What Was Whitman

Thu 1 Jul 1999

M O R E T H A N J U S T A P O S T E R B O Y

The advice of an amicable separation or revirement, "Was wir wollen" [What we want] in No. 10 the telegraph, oceanic intercourse embracing the world in a network, together with the German communists in New York in No. 13 you gush Philosophy de l'Avenir collectivistes, machinery on a massive scale, machine-making out of the cradle, the cotton gin, cotton trade, sheets like wadding in layers, they leave the machine fit for the press and bale . . . a belt

shifter . . . hemp carding and spinning . . . reels the cliver . . . cuts from the sheet, pastes, folds, India rubber rollers ballasting roads and crushing ores, Prize Medal industrial daguerreotypes, force pump California emporia over America and the Pacific Rim electrify into their vortex burlesque English Pindars across the Ohio's howls of the rowdies, conciliatory satellites, the African slave trade de factor Dred Scott, the Kansas war, Harriet Beecher Stowe said Buchanan (James, not Pat) bought his nomination by pledging the Union to conquer in Cuba a new field of dominion [the Ostend Manifesto on Oct. 18, 1854, declared the value of Cuba to U.S. was such that the island might be taken by force]. Memoranda rain, the war cry of the London press, he sang the bravura aria of his role mutato nomine de te fabula narratur (Lucan, Pharsalia), a mere bagatelle under the administration of Zuloaga and Miramón, relatives of the Emperor and fellow operators of haute poètique, framed by them in America, should the theater of the Aztecs be lost to Constantinople, Athens and Rome à la Ricardo Montauban, who flavored the world with a fat tome from Paris about his "discovery," a secret chapter of history? Norfolk, New Bern, Port Royal, Pensacola, New Orleans, Morgan annihilated at Frankfort, Rosencrans at Corinth, Tyre, Carthage and Alexandria, Genoa and Venice, London and Liverpool whitewashed "free labor" the exodus from Ireland in 1847-48 bulk labor in white skin branded in black skin. Color is a matter of indifference, the working class is everywhere born for slavery in the basin between the Rocky Mountains and the Alleghanies, in the valleys of the Mississippi, the Missouri, and Ohio rivers--there, beyond the Dykes, I heard windflakingSapphire--out the mouth of the Mississippi strong and hostile hands emanate the lot of the German and Irish 1857 Homeric exuberance interpellate Thouvenel, Peza-y-Peza forwarded to the poets as fast as it's bagged, 40s twist 4C-inch shirtings--"why shouldn't you be woke?"--the facades of the social look like a satyr, "Tussy" KM's daughter Eleanor a letter writer speak face to face fornicationally ships of glass two hundred miles off the African coast. The white trash are said to have come to Louisville (elimination of small tenant farmers in green Erin); Castlereagh would have forbid them to set foot on the street at all. Learn that the Irish in the United States are not a zero. In Hollyer's 1854 engraving, the "cute Yankee" a le flair bon. There is a Whitman that will one day belong to a mature historical materialism: the Catholic Emancipation, the Reform Bill, the repeal of the Corn Laws, the Ten Hours Bill, the war against Russia, Palmerston's Conspiracy Theory, including the instructions sent by the Captain General of Cuba to the Spanish commanders gone on Vienna. When lilacs last against a post foretold, a group of workers wrote: "It is not our part to call words of sorrow and horror while the heart of two worlds heaves with emotion . . . and rival with each other to strew rhetorical flowers on his open grave" (from Address of the International Working Men's Association to President Johnson, written between May 2 and 9, published in the Bee-Hive

May 20, signed May 13, 1865: R. Applegarth, carpenter; M.J. Boon, engineer; J. Buckley, painter; J. Hales, elastic web-weaver; Harriet Law; B. Lucraft, chair-maker; J. Milner, tailor; G. Odger, shoemaker; J. Ross, bootcloser; R. Shaw, painter; Cowell Stepney; J. Warren, trunk-maker; J. Weston, handrail maker; E. Dupont, instrument maker; Jules Johannard, lithographer; Paul Lafargue; G. Eccarius, tailor; F. Lessner, tailor; W. Limburg, shoemaker; Karl Marx; H. Jung, watchmaker; A. Müller, watchmaker; M. Bernard, painter; J. Cohn, cigarmaker; Zabicki, compositor).

\ > / < \

Notes:

The by no means weighty Paterson Labor Standard wanders about in an Atlantic Ocean air of melodrama, a sort of blue book on the condition of miners in Pennsylvania (1874-75).

"Thoreau never sounds more like a crank than on John Brown" (letter to Friedrich Adolph Sorge in Hoboken, New York Herald, August 3, 1871).

"Goethe, Prometheus, I, strophe 10."

the "redness" is said the "redress" is said

↑ Index

17. Poetics List

niedecker question (fwd)

Fri 2 Jul 1999

This came to the administrative account.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Fri, 02 Jul 1999 23:16:56 -0700
From: janice miller <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: niedecker question

In Lorine Niedecker: Woman and Poet (1996) Tandy Sturgeon suggests there will be a new edition of a collected Niedecker. Would anyone on your list know when this might come out? Or how I might find out more about its progress?

If you posted this question, responses could be sent to me at [redacted]

Janice Miller

↑ Index

18. Jamie Perez
Re: innarresting booook
Fri 2 Jul 1999

Must plead complete ignorance on this one (both book and author). But am intrigued. Could someone lend a descriptive hand? (maybe the first step to him having an EPC author page)

jamie.p

Aldon Nielsen wrote:
>
> N. J. Loftis's early 70s book BLACK ANIMA had long been thought unavailable
> -- but there must have been a box or two of them lingering in a warehouse, > because it's now gettable through amazon.com -- This is an unusual book, > with words of praise from both Auden & Ashbery -- the amazon listing tells > you it's a paperback, but when the book arrives in your mail you'll find > it's the original hardcover -- at only $7.95 it's well worth your trouble
> -- get 'em while they last!

↑ Index

19. KENT JOHNSON
Re: Whalen
Fri 2 Jul 1999

With the flurry of talk about Phil Whalen, I wanted to mention again that _Beneath a Single Moon: Buddhism in Contemporary American Poetry_, is being reissued by Shambhala shortly. There is a generous selection of Whalen's poetry therein _and_ a brilliant essay by him that is not available elsewhere.

And I agree with Dale Smith's pithy and reasonable point that if one doesn't like Tom Clark's review and feels that Whalen deserves better, well, then, one should write a better review. Just a thought, but maybe John Tranter at Jacket would be delighted to have a special section on Whalen as he has just done with Spicer? (that's a public suggestion, John.) It would be a nice tribute to one of U.S. poetry's most interesting individuals.

Kent

↑ Index

20. Brian Lennon
Re: Reviews....
Fri 2 Jul 1999

I often wonder if generic praise or gratuitous hostility is worse. If a book sucks, why not just review something else instead? On the other hand, the banal jacket-copy prose of many reviews ("A tour de force! The most astonishing debut in decades! The best poet writing in English today!") makes me long for a good old-fashioned hatchet job. I have no problem writing a censorious review of a mediocre third or fourth or nineteenth book by an author who enjoys the unwavering support of a major publisher: why not enjoin the writer to please remove her or his hand from the cookie jar? In many other cases, it seems not worth saying anything if there's nothing nice to say. It would probably be more useful to review bad reviewers than to review bad books. But who would read those???

Brian Lennon

At 08:20 PM 7/1/99 -0400, Chris Stroffolino wrote:
>Well, then there's (on the other side?) the question of "positive" reviews.
>In the latest st. marks newsletter, for instance, there's at least two >"positive" reviews of books that--if i didn't already know the books (one >which i think is pretty damn great the other not bad but "excellent >scribbling in a period style"---more on this backchannel)--would actually >turn me away from reading them, more than a more AMBIVALENT review would.
>Since I'm more interested in the ISSUE than in the specifics, I leave the >names blank for now....
>curious what others think....
>chris

↑ Index

21. Chris Stroffolino
THING....
Fri 2 Jul 1999

Here's a THING I'm involved in....
There will be FREE DRINKS

Reuben reubin and LEE Klein invite you to celebrate the publication of

CAME LIKE IT WENT
by Greg Fuchs (buckdown books)

UNLOCKING THE EXITS
by Eliot Katz (Coffee House Press)

VERTICAL's CURRENCY: NEW & SELECTED POEMS
by Joel Lewis (Talisman

THE FUTURE IS NOW b Elizabeth Morse (Linear Arts)

STEALER'S WHEEL by Chris Stroffolino (Hard Press)

Saturday July 19, THE VIP ROOM IN the new CHINA CLUB
268 West 47th St. (btw. b'way & 8th)

Doors open 10PM; "cocktails" 10-11

We'll probably all read like 2 poems or something too...

If can't make it, you may find my book in POSMAN's BOOKSTORE
(University Place) and St. Marks may still have it...
You could also STEAL it from BARNES & NOBLE....

----chris

↑ Index

22. Tony Green
Re: Whalen
Fri 2 Jul 1999

Scenes of Life... yes yes & dont forget Speeches for a Brazen Head -- which Judi Stout (who is not on this list) & I read & loved early 80s

& can it really be true that Robert Grenier has somehow become obscure? having been v much stimulated to rethink my own writing from reading:

Cambridge M'ass,
A Day at the Beach,
Sentences,
Sentences towards Birds,
Oakland (Tuumba)
Series

& having also had my skills at ping-pong put to a severe test, I find this hard to believe.

Tony Green

↑ Index

23. Elizabeth Treadwell
Charles Alexander & Sarah Mangold
Sat 3 Jul 1999

Seeking these 2 or their latest emails b/c re: next Outlet.

Thanks and apologies and happy 4th.

ET

Outlet Magazine -&- Double Lucy Books
P.O. Box 9013, Berkeley, California 94709 U.S.A.
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

24. hassen
dna, will, what, what!
Sat 3 Jul 1999

---

pardon me,

w[a/o]ndering back - within the past month? - breezed over a post concerning dna & will. anyone know of this or am i fabricating again?

if it rings a bell & brings forth more info, please oh please relay. & backchannel if appropriate.

thanks in advance,
hassen

↑ Index

25. charles alexander
Grenier
Sat 3 Jul 1999

> & can it really be true that Robert Grenier has somehow become obscure?

a relative point, it seems. I would imagine that just about every poet ever mentioned on this list is obscure to most of the reading public, probably even most of the poetry-reading public. On the other hand, within this list, I would certainly hope Grenier isn't obscure. And I agree that his work is crucial, as you say here, Tony.

charles

> having been v much stimulated to rethink my own writing from reading:
>
> Cambridge M'ass,
> A Day at the Beach,

> Sentences,
> Sentences towards Birds,
> Oakland (Tuumba)
> Series
>
> & having also had my skills at ping-pong put to a severe test, I find this hard to believe.
>
> Tony Green

---

chax press & alexander writing/design/publishing handmade books & communications design http://alexwritdespub.com/chax

↑ Index

26. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Whalen
Sat 3 Jul 1999

KENT JOHNSON wrote:
>
> With the flurry of talk about Phil Whalen, I wanted to mention again > that _Beneath a Single Moon: Buddhism in Contemporary > American Poetry_, is being reissued by Shambhala shortly. There is a > generous selection of Whalen's poetry therein _and_ a brilliant essay > by him that is not available elsewhere.
>
> And I agree with Dale Smith's pithy and reasonable point that if one > doesn't like Tom Clark's review and feels that Whalen deserves > better, well, then, one should write a better review. Just a thought, > but maybe John Tranter at Jacket would be delighted to have a special > section on Whalen as he has just done with Spicer? (that's a public > suggestion, John.) It would be a nice tribute to one of U.S. poetry's > most interesting individuals.
>
> Kent

a response to Whalen stuff: Clark needs to see that often there is LITTLE PUBLIC SPACE (newspapers atht actually get read by the "masses") for reviews, poems, printed thots in the world--and that publishers/newspapers, etc. WILL NOT give more than a dab o' space for a review of poetry. Thus, your response to "write a better one" is a good idea--but Clark took up what little space there might be for a public proclamation.

↑ Index

27. Alan Sondheim

MINE

Sun 4 Jul 1999

=/

MINE

arms and legs cut off no control over what YOU do to ME to MY texts to MY words where YOU are what YOU are thinking of what tales YOU tell built on the ruins of MY words as I did say and reiterate

THESE words which are MINE which you desecrate and VIOLATE all FOREVER and and and I suppose I might insist that RIGHT HERE is an interruption when YOU know better that I'VE placed whatever trash is in YOUR way right in THIS spot RIGHT HERE it does seem to keep sliding

YOU'LL do to ME whatever YOU feel like anyway I shouldn't complain IT DOESN'T DO ANY GOOD whoever YOU are I mean YOU MIGHT AS WELL BE MY EYES while YOU'RE AT IT or EARS WHATEVER

JUST LEAVE THE LETTERS AT THE DOOR WHEN YOU LEAVE THEY'RE MINE MINE MINE MINE MINE MINE MINE MINE

↑ Index

28. Alan Sondheim

Song from E. A. C.

Sun 4 Jul 1999

=[

Song from E. A. C.

Oh maiden, bind the stalks!
Aroo lay, aroo lay!
Oh maiden, the stalks will be bound!
Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!

Oh youngman, carry the sheaves!
Aroo lay, aroo lay!
Oh youngman, the sheaves will be carried!
Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!

Oh maiden, unbind the stalks!
Aroo lay, aroo lay!
Oh maiden, the stalks are unbound!
Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!

Oh youngman, assemble the sheaves!
Aroo lay, aroo lay!
Oh youngman, the sheaves are assembled!
Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!

Oh maiden, the sheaves and the stalks!
Aroo lay, aroo lay!
Oh youngman, the stalks and the sheaves!
Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!

↑ Index

29. david bromige

kent johnson to the rescue (was whalen)

Sun 4 Jul 1999

agreed, kent, one might well review whalen's book oneself. I don't agree, however, that not to do so should prevent one from remarking flaws in another's review. This is a curious advocacy. For instance, john william corrington's dismissive review of robert creeley's poetry is clearly assinine even to people who never reviewed creeley, and surely they have a right to say so. I will never review You've Got Mail, but i can tell you that anyone who reviewed it favorably, is an idiot. db.

↑ Index

30. Dale Smith

Re: Whalen

Sun 4 Jul 1999

"Public proclamation" is an annoying reduction of the sensitive evaluation Clark gives Whalen in this review. The trouble some have, I believe, is with the reviewer, not the review, because the piece is clearly favorable in that it articluates, in a short space, some complex themes of Whalen's writing. Otherwise, there would be discussion of Whalen's work on this list, how it works for or against TC's claims.

Todd Baron wrote:

> a response to Whalen stuff: Clark needs to > see that often there is LITTLE PUBLIC SPACE (newspapers atht actually get read by the "masses") for reviews, poems, printed thots in the world--and that publishers/newspapers, etc. WILL NOT give more than a dab o' space for a review of poetry. Thus, your response to "write a better one" is a good idea--but Clark took up what little space there might be for a public proclamation.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

31. A H Bramhall

Whole

Sun 4 Jul 1999

---

allen i can't go there with you any more

but all love

↑ Index

32. A H Bramhall

Recognize

Sun 4 Jul 1999

I said once I wouldn't then I did. you never know or can you? it surprises you even as you expect with all the weight that makes sense. it troubles and finds relief. relief?
a torture of patterns in conjunction.
this will never do, and yet it does. a bluff

but waiting for more information. no information is enough. not yet not ever,
and that's fine. nothing will ever be fine but that's just squawk. one gets used to squawk,
and squawk again.
a bargain of jitters, triumph and where are you?
walk home now and,
later, look back to your home.

↑ Index

33. KENT JOHNSON

One "could" (re: whalen)

Sun 4 Jul 1999

On July 3, David Bromige said:

> agreed, kent, one might well review whalen's book oneself. I don't agree, however, that not to do so should prevent one from remarking flaws in another's review. This is a curious advocacy. For instance, john william corrington's dismissive review of robert creeley's poetry is clearly assinine even to people who never reviewed creeley, and surely they have a right to say so. I will never review You've Got Mail, but i can tell you that anyone who reviewed it favorably, is an idiot. db.

David:

The coincidence here is remarkable, because I have been, for the past fourteen months, the Midwest Treasurer of the Meg Ryan Fan Club, and You've Got Mail is one of my favorite movies ever! Do you think I am an idiot?

But anyway, here's what I said:

> And I agree with Dale Smith's pithy and reasonable point that if one doesn't like Tom Clark's review and feels that Whalen deserves better, well, then, one should write a better review.

Actually, I think your point above is a good one, so I will change "should" to "could". One _could_ write a better review, and in writing this review not only do justice to the underappreciated Whalen but also smash into the ground the horrible face of the terrible anti-christ Tom Clark, whose blasphemous name elicits posts on this List like a vampire elicits crosses in a convent.

See how this moderated List helps us all to quickly agree?

Kent

↑ Index

34. Billy Little
Re: Whalen
Mon 5 Jul 1999

Whalen broke as much ground for american poetry and poets as ginsberg or spicer or kerouac, next to whalen's gary snyder's work looks like amy lowell's(next to joanne kyger's snyder's work looks like amy lowell's). In the early publications just the appearance, the calligraphy, the erasures, the doodles shifted your reality. His no frills syntax gave permission to Kerouac and Acker and Bernstein alike.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

35. Herb Levy poetry in RealAudio
Mon 5 Jul 1999

This week's Mappings, my show on Antenna Internet Radio, features five compositions by Joihn Zorn, including a lengthy collaboration between John Zorn & Lyn Hejinian called Que Tran (pardon the missing accents), created as one of a series of pieces by Zorn with texts & Music called New Traditions in East Asian Bar Bands. Performing musicians are Anthony Coleman & Wayner Horvitz, the text is read by Anh Tran, in a Vietnamese translation by Tu Vu. (& I'm starting to box box things up in advance of a move to Forth Wort texas this fall & don't have my books easy to get at. Could someone help identify whether the Hejinian has been otherwise published? It's a fairly long piece beginning"A woman waits for sleep, but it is away at war, and in the end it doesn't return ..." Thanks.)

Next week's show (beginning Sunday July 11th, sometime before midnight West Coast (US) time) features all text oriented pieces,including a lot of poets

reading and collaborations of various sorts between composer/performers and poets. I'll send out more details next Sunday.

<http://www.antennaradio.com/avant/mappings/index.htm>

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

36. Ryan Knighton, Editor
Oliver address
Mon 5 Jul 1999

Hi all,

If doug oliver is out there or someone has a backchannel address I'd appreciate it as much as I can.

Bests,
Ryan

_____
Ryan Knighton, Editor
The Capilano Review
2055 Purcell Way
N. Vancouver V7J 3H5
PH: [redacted]

↑ Index

37. David Erben (Art)
Unsolicited Submissions/Taos Poets Gathering
Mon 5 Jul 1999

Can anyone tell me what the "typical" letter accompanying an unsolicited submission should look like?

And... did anyone happen to attend the gathering of Native American poets that occurred in Taos two or three weeks ago?

↑ Index

38. david bromige
the devil in tom clark
Mon 5 Jul 1999

> n but also smash into the ground the horrible face of the > terrible anti-christ Tom Clark, whose blasphemous name elicits posts > on this List like a vampire elicits crosses in a convent

thus Kent Johnson. Now tell me, Kent (and others, should you know), is the List's reaction to Tom Clark utterly without grounds, has he been selected at random for extraordinary punishments, "demonized" as Kent would have it metrely through bad luck and the need for a scapegoat.....Or is the rhetoric flourished in the citation above, a way to distract us from some pretty obvious flaws?

And if so, in the name of _what_ is this rhetoric flourished? Tell me, fellow-listlings, if you can : does TC command such loyalty in some, that they will overlook what any person of average I.Q. (I allude to myself f and f) would recognize in TC's writings as major inconsistencies, unresolved conflicts, flawed thought.....or what have you?

Excuse the upcoming divagation : I had occasion once to write to the wife of a man who had abandoned all reason and logic to castigate me publicly. My response to this rudeness, at first reasoning, became itself rude. To which she now objected, inserting herself into the exchange. To which I responded by remarking the several provocations. To this she did not respond. To her, it was as though the words her man had uttered, that started it all, did not exist--had not been uttered. Presumably because somebody _she_ loved, would not proceed in such a way.....despite the evidence was under her very nose. Or somehow lacked significance because by prior agreement with herself, her husband was without flaws---was perfection. Hmmm, what it would have cost her, to admit otherwise!

What is it about Tom Clark that inspires this connubial kind of loyalty in his admirers, a bond that will not admit his faults?

And, cororally, are we able to perceive a pattern, are these supporters in other ways similar to one another? Does the School of Clark consist of persons Contented with their Blind Spots?

Maybe exercises this exhaustive aren't necessary. Let's simply ask that Kent or Dale or whomever put some piece of TC's up here where we can all read it, some piece that commands their admiration; and then we who would be interested in such engagement, can point out its shortcomings, and in this way, educate. Or, unlikely but possible, declare ourselves as a-brim as they with admiration, and bow out.

Rider : If "De gustibus non disputandum" were the rubric proceeded under in this thread, there could be no dispute. If I recall aright, the dispute began with Steve Vincent remarking on internal conflicts --- taste-disputes --- in the TC piece on Whalen. It is TC's dispute with himself we address, then, a dispute he has made our business in making it public.

And surely TC can stand the heat and not vacate the kitchen. Why are his fans so protective of him? Is there a mindlessness which he performs, that they feel he performs in their behalf? So that they do not mind him, but mind those who would remove the protective caul?

db.

↑ Index

39. Stephen Ellis
Re: Whalen
Mon 5 Jul 1999

Weird to think of published statements as taking up public (media?) space, per Todd Baron's remarks; would it be better to leave public spaces empty, and let thinking take care of itself in private? And besides, who's to limit the extent and/or duration of "public space" - aside, of course, the usual and expected "no more room on the ad pg for YOU ... " - since all audience not virtual and speculative on the part of the speaker is always limited. Those thinking to write "better" reviews of Whalen than TC is thought by some here to have managed, could obviously post them on this list. Or does that not hold the possibility of "a wider readership" up to the correct mirror? Dale seems to've got hold of a singular point, tho - where's the news from Whalen's actual TEXTS that spoils TCs take, given that it's there for the spoiling to begin with. It seems we're far removed from any critical spirit re: Whalen, and are simply out for sport. That being the case, might we not accompany a vendetta against TC with several of his finer baseball poems, just for the sake of fairness?

> From: Dale Smith <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Whalen
> Date: Sun, 4 Jul 1999 14:11:09 GMT
>
> "Public proclamation" is an annoying reduction of the sensitive evaluation Clark gives Whalen in this review. The trouble some have, I believe, is with > the reviewer, not the review, because the piece is clearly favorable in that > it articluates, in a short space, some complex themes of Whalen's writing. Otherwise, there would be discussion of Whalen's work on this list, how it works for or against TC's claims.

> Todd Baron wrote:
>
> a response to Whalen stuff: Clark needs to
>
> see that often there is LITTLE PUBLIC SPACE (newspapers atht actually
>
> get read by the "masses") for reviews, poems, printed thots in the > world--and that publishers/newspapers, etc. WILL NOT give more than a
>
>
> dab o' space for a review of poetry. Thus, your response to "write a
>
> better one" is a good idea--but Clark took up what little space there > might be for a public proclamation.
>
>
> _____
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

40. jilith
event listing
Mon 5 Jul 1999

synapse: second sundays at blue bar
--presents--
a reading with susan gevirtz and myung mi kim july 11, 2 p.m.

blue bar is at 501 broadway, at kearney, in sf enter thru black cat restaurant, same address

admission is $2

pssst…their new collaborative chapbook from a+bend press will be available at the reading

↑ Index

41. Alan Sondheim

Prolegomena for a Science of Concrete Thought

Mon 5 Jul 1999

={

Prolegomena for a Science of Concrete Thought

I. Foundations of Language Related to the Social
A. Definition of the Social: Cognition, Phenomenology, Psychology
1. Meaning as Relational: The Contour, The Gift, Exchange-Strata
i. Problematic of the Thing, Avoiding Circularities
a. Discursive Flows: Non-linguistic, Linguistic
1a. Non-linguistics and the Question of Language
Ia. Abjection: Aura, The Numinous, Noise
Aa. Constitution of Core-Structures and Protocols 1ai. Foundations of the (Physical) Real
aai. Speaking in the Real, Mouth and Machine 1aiA. Analytics and Research
Aai. Orality, The Mouth and Body (Machine)
1A. Couplings and Linkages, The Mesh
a1a. The World, Knowledge Aiai. Knowledge for Whom or What?
Aai. The Case of the Avatars
1a1A. The Case of the Real

↑ Index

42. A. Brady

Announcement, Barque Press / Wilkinson

Tue 6 Jul 1999

Resurrected/now available in luscious offset:

OORT'S CLOUD: EARLIER POEMS (1970-1984)
by JOHN WILKINSON
208 pp. paperback 10 pounds (UK) or $15 (US)
Barque Press and subpress, Cambridge 1999

A collection of the earliest chapbooks and other work, this partner volume to the Parataxis Editions _Flung Clear_ includes poems from 1970-1984, early and previously unpublished work by one of Britain's most distinguished and influential poets. Ever wanted to get your eyes on the long-out-of-print _The Central Line_, or _Tracts of the Country_? This large book includes both, alongside _Maudie's Umbrella_, _Sweetness and Light_, _Air Fleet Base_, _Pornography_ and much else.

This book will be launched at a chic London location still to nominate itself, probably toward the beginning of August, probably fireworked and highly entertaining, definitely to be announced.

To obtain any Barque book, please e-mail or otherwise contact:

Andrea Brady Keston Sutherland
309 E. Gravers Lane Gonville and Caius College
Philadelphia, PA 19118 Cambridge CB2 1TA
USA ENGLAND
[redacted] [redacted]

The Barque stable also includes such racy chapbooks (still available) as:
-Red D Gypsum by J.H. Prynne 20 pp £3/$5
-Poem on a Train by Jordan Davis 40 pp £3/$5
-Selections from the Parasite Poems by Kristin Prevallet 32 pp £2/$4
-At the Motel Partial Opportunity by Keston Sutherland 16 pp £3/$5
-Mincemeat Seesaw by Keston Sutherland 48 pp £3/$5
-Liberties by Andrea Brady 52 pp £3/$5
-The Honky's Guide to Wet Dreams by Sam Brenton 16 pp £2/$4
-Diagnostic by Tim Morris 20 pp £2/$4
-Incarnate's by Jeremy Hardingham 20 pp £2/$4
And yet but still just this and will soon feature further, impressive work by Kevin Nolan, Alan Halsey editing Mary Leapor (1748), Stacy Doris, and Leo Mellor. Also from Barque: Quid, a monthly poetry + politics magazine (name=cost=image).

(shipping and careful packing will have to be added to the above prices)

↑ Index

43. A H Bramhall
clark on whalen, whalin' on clark
Tue 6 Jul 1999

---

it's easy enough to evaluate Tom Clark (I'll bet he enjoys chardonnay) because he has mustered himself into so many public venues. to describe him as an anti-christ is interesting theology, but, without supporting argument, not a shining example of critical acumen. I'm not worried about Tom Clark anyway, a-c tho he might be. at the risk of making eye contact, I bet Kent Johnson COULD provide critical acumen re PW so I hereby request that he, or anyone, do so. me, whoever I happen to be, would welcome comments about PW. to my view, there's a meditative, discursive breed of poetry that includes um PW, Lew Welch but also (I'm not suggesting a school) Carl Rakosi, Charles Resnikov and... Paul Blackburn? my own thoughts aren't well formed, hence my request. at any rate, I too suspect Whalen is under-appreciated (and double that with Kyger: I too am guilty as charged). I have On Bear Head, am not positioned to buy anything new and have read very little about PW. Billy Little briefly suggested some useful talking points concerning PW, and I truly doubt the mean moderator would prevent further discussion so trip the light fantastic step, how about. a minor buzz about PW could be bestirred right here in this seething climate. my thinking, you see, is that theory begats action.

↑ Index

44. A H Bramhall

Intentional Display of Knowledge

Tue 6 Jul 1999

'avid' became a verb on tuesday. why is not known but now you have it. you can assert a delight without needing turgid phrases to signify your state. the possibility exists that the word will revert to its earlier properties, and
'avid' will no longer be an action word, but until then enjoy the chance to be specific and enthralled.

↑ Index

45. David Zauhar
Re: Whalen
Tue 6 Jul 1999

On Thu, 1 Jul 1999, Stephen Vincent wrote:

> I agree with Coletti's interp of Tom Clark's ambivalent review. In the context of the large public circulation of San Francisco Chronicle, and the fact that Whalen is at the near end of his life, certainly his career, I was disappointed that Tom Clark focused on Whalen's slight and minor aspects, and somehow failed to look at the larger picture of Whalen's significance and mostly unacknowledged contribution to particularly American writing. (You would never know from the article that in 1969 Ron Padgett and Ted Berrigan(?) led a demonstration of a huge contingent of writers and readers around the offices of Harcourt & Brace when On Bears Head (the first anthology) to protest the inaccessible $17.50 hard cover price.

Interesting detail: Ron Padgett has written one book-length Memoir of Berrigan, Tom Clark another. Can't think of any memoir concerning literary friendships of Whalen, alas. Still, the review didn't seem that negative to me, either. And Clark has done some REAL hatchet jobs in the past ("Stalin as Linguist," first in Poetry Flash I think and then in the neo-con Partisan Review, comes to mind). I don't know how the SF papers operate, but could it be that they consciously try to prevent reviews from seeming to be advertisements or log-rollings. If I didn't know Whalen's work, I wouldn't be put off from investigating it based on the Clark review. Then again, I might not beat a path to the nearest independent bookstore to track it down, either.

David Zauhar
University of Illinois at Chicago

I dreamed I saw Hugo Ball the night was cold I couldn't even call his name though I tried so I hung my head and cried

--bpNichol

↑ Index

46. KENT JOHNSON
Spiral question
Tue 6 Jul 1999

Nabokov once said that a spiral is a circle set free.

What would be and whereto the forms of Authors set free?

↑ Index

47. Jordan Davis
Question jetty
Tue 6 Jul 1999

Hmm I disagree with the premise.
A spiral is as bound as a circle.
As a sine wave is bound. Interesting choice of words for a lepidopterist, ha? Any way Kent I won't leverage any hostile pseudonymies, ahoy, Hmmmmmmmmmmmmmmmm.

-----Original Message-----
From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>

Nabokov once said that a spiral is a circle set free.

What would be and whereto the forms of Authors set free?

↑ Index

48. Taylor Brady
Re: poetry in RealAudio
Tue 6 Jul 1999

Herb,

Someone else will doubtless have a bibliography more accurate than mine, but I believe the Hejinian piece is part of a longer project that, last I saw it in magazines, was being called "Sleeps." Part of it appeared in Grand Street a few years back. Maybe in Conjunctions as well? Unfortunately, I don't have an index for either of those publications, and haven't seen further installments, other than the one on the Zorn CD, in quite a while. And while the design of the text inserts for the CD is very striking, the 8 point-or-so size of the text makes close reading a difficult proposition at best.

For those who haven't previously encountered it, by the way, I highly recommend the Zorn, which also has a text by Myung Mi Kim narrated by Jung Hee Shin with a percussion duo played by Joey Baron and Sam Bennett; and a text by Arto Lindsay narrated by Zhang Jinglin with guitar duo played by Bill Frisell and Fred Frith. Glad to hear you're featuring some of this work on Antenna.

Best,
Taylor Brady

> This week's Mappings, my show on Antenna Internet Radio, features five compositions by Joihn Zorn, including a lengthy collaboration between John

> Zorn & Lyn Hejinian called Que Tran (pardon the missing accents), created as one of a series of pieces by Zorn with texts & Music called New Traditions in East Asian Bar Bands. Performing musicians are Anthony Coleman & Wayner Horvitz, the text is read by Anh Tran, in a Vietnamese translation by Tu Vu. (& I'm starting to box box things up in advance of a move to Forth Wort texas this fall & don't have my books easy to get at. Could someone help identify whether the Hejinian has been otherwise published? It's a fairly long piece beginning"A woman waits for sleep, but it is away at war, and in the end it doesn't return ..." Thanks.)
>
> Next week's show (beginning Sunday July 11th, sometime before midnight West Coast (US) time) features all text oriented pieces,including a lot of poets reading and collaborations of various sorts between composer/performers and poets. I'll send out more details next Sunday.
>
> <http://www.antennaradio.com/avant/mappings/index.htm>
>
> Herb Levy
> [redacted]

↑ Index

49. David Baratier

Re: re(ad) Grenier

Tue 6 Jul 1999

Grenier's _12 from r h y m m s_ was published by us here at Pavement Saw Press on a challenge by Witz that no one could put the series into print. There are still a few of the unsigned copies available for $20. They are 12 4-color reproductions on 25% cotton, recycled, watermarked, color retaining paper.

To add to Charles, probably Grenier is obscure because he is still living.

Be well

David Baratier

Pavement Saw Press
PO box 6291
Columbus OH 43206

↑ Index

50. Stephen Vincent
Re: the devil in tom clark
Tue 6 Jul 1999

In a message dated 7/6/99 11:43:59 AM, [redacted] writes:

<< If I recall aright, the dispute began with Steve Vincent remarking on internal conflicts --- taste-disputes
--- in the TC piece on Whalen. >>

David:

I believe I said the Chronicle critic's piece left me pisst off - which 'en vulgatis' (fairly enough) might be considered a dispute of "taste." But taste in some over-refined literary sense, I don't think so. Clark just missed the Bear, preferring for whatever malevolent or, perhaps, some innocent intent, to quibble in the scat.

However it sounds like you want to go to war or continue one. The 100 Year Civil Guerre de Clark - I can see it into the far future. But is that one - the focus on Clark - worth the yield? In this case, perhaps a contrary without a progression? I think I'll stick to Whalen, Grenier and other lights instead of what I sense will be bleak.

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

51. hassen
Re: Spiral question
Tue 6 Jul 1999

---

kent,

a snip of my altere re this spiral, my thots concerning the author's spiral & whether it be in or out, [un]control, perhaps nothing, but for some silly reason feel the urge to spew forth, so sorry:

>>
ship horns hail tom in the moorings, subtle from the cove. two weeks drown his statements in cold wind, peculiar lines everyday without fail, away and or back, rocking with pedestrian offers, angry stares in any month. what's to be done with diffuse stars on dimpled cots? what said, word rot? thoughts ferment on a thing too sweet to taste. there's the sloth, timely even.
precision, a machine on a branch, one that climbs. tom turns down, climbs downward. from the eye, all is extraneous. refractions are maybe superb in memory. maybe, he says "may be spiral choices are adorned with lights & strands of magnets. maybe i am a bubble too." (1/13/99)

<<

be well be!
hassen

↑ Index

52. KENT JOHNSON
Getting out of the bind
Tue 6 Jul 1999

David: I would like to say that I am not a member of any Tom Clark school. I am not even a "fan" of his work, not knowing it that well. My point is that there is evidence hereabouts of knee-jerk reaction to his persona and writings and that this stems from old and stale history. The fact that his Jacket review of Whalen is perfectly adoring of its subject proves my point. There is nothing at all about the review that calls _anything_ in Whalen into question! It's OK, I guess, to hold a grudge against Tom Clark for his past tirades against Langpo, but time has passed those polemics by, really. Why rail agaisnt the man for calling attention to the genius of a neglected poet most of us agree richly deserves the credit?

In any case, this little exchange has proven fruitful, for I'm told it has prodded John Tranter to plan a special feature on Whalen a la very fine Spicer feature edited by Chris Alexander in Jacket #7. Hurrah!

And Jordan, true about spirals being bounded, as all forms are bound to something or by something. But some bounded things _bind_ more than other bounded things. Obviously. And as for the pseudonym, I would see that as a kind of closed circle-- a circle covering over another one, so actually not much gained there. There must be something more: A way of imagining writing like Smithson had begun to imagine art. Authors are flat circles, like coins, tossed into a dead lake.

↑ Index

53. James Brook
Revolutionary Romanticism from City Lights
Tue 6 Jul 1999

City Lights Books, for which I work, has just published a new anthology, REVOLUTIONARY ROMANTICISM, edited by Max Blechman.

Some on the list may know Max, and I was the in-house editor on this book. In any case, there's much here that should appeal.

What follows is a little write-up, including the table of contents, some of the back cover copy, and ordering information. There's also a link to a review that has just come out in the San Francisco Bay Guardian.

Regards,

James Brook

- - - - - - - - - - -

REVOLUTIONARY ROMANTICSM

A Drunken Boat Anthology

Edited by Max Blechman

250 pgs. / $15.95 / ISBN 0-87286-351-4 / City Lights Books

Individual orders: http://www.citylights.com/CLorder.html

REVOLUTIONARY ROMANTICISM draws on almost two centuries of intertwined traditions of cultural and political subversion. In this rich collection of writings by artists, scholars, and revolutionaries, the transgressions of the past are recaptured and transvalued for the benefit of the struggles of today and tomorrow.

See the San Francisco Bay Guardian review at http://www.sfbg.com/lit/july99/reviews/politics.html

City Lights Books
261 Columbus Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94133
http://www.citylights.com

"Drunken Boat is a courageous and worthy effort to maintain alive, in a difficult period, unfettered critical thinking. It ought to be supported by all who care about freedom and justice." - Cornelius Castoriadis, author of The Imaginary Institution of Society

"In a period when politics is dreary and political art cliched, Drunken Boat is brilliantly alive and unconventional. It summons up a world where subversion spelled art and art spelled liberation; but Drunken Boat is more than a blast from the past: it speaks to the present. Drunken Boat is the vessel of choice for those bored with chartered cruises and organized day-trips." - Russell Jacoby, author of The Last Intellectuals

CONTENTS

Preface - "This Is Our High Argument"

The Revolutionary Dream of Early German Romanticism
    Max Blechman

On the Subject of Romantic Women
Annie Le Brun

William Blake: Revolutionary Romantic
Peter Marshall

Revolting Language: British Romantics in an Age of Revolution Maurice Hindle

Romanticism and Revolution: The Vision of Jules Michelet
Arthur Mitzman

Ruins and Foundation Stones: The Paris Commune and the Destruction of the Vendome Column
Christopher Winks

William Morris: The Politics of Romance
Miguel Abensour

The Mountain of Truth
Martin Green

Erich Muehsam: In Defense of Literary High Treason
Christopher Winks

The Artist in the Future State
Erich Muehsam

Surrealism and Romanticism
Marie-Dominique Massoni

Under the Star of Romanticism: Walter Benjamin and Herbert Marcuse
Michael Loewy

An Episode in a Fragmentary History: Surrealism and the 1946 Revolution in Haiti
Michael Richardson

Debord in the Resounding Cataract of Time
Daniel Blanchard

Theses on Revolutionary Romanticism
Max Blechman

↑ Index

54. Chris Nagler
The Barn (a play) - July 15th and 16th
Tue 6 Jul 1999

To anyone who will be in the SF bay area on July 15th and 16th
my play/performance piece 'The Barn' is being performed
at 8:00 pm
at 379 40th St. (between telegraph and Broadway)
in north Oakland
Poetics List People get in free.
Running time is about one and a half hours.

chris nagler

"The Barn is a play about a family of voices. The voice, and the family, as shelters and constraints. Domestic tasks as the physical equivalents of fantasies -- the impossibility of containing either within pastoral romance, but the constant desire for this. It is a play about the possibility of being far away from the landscape, and the voice."

↑ Index

55. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Unsolicited Submissions/Taos Poets Gathering
Tue 6 Jul 1999

David Erben (Art) wrote:
>
> Can anyone tell me what the "typical" letter accompanying an unsolicited > submission should look like?
>
>
THere should be none. A writer should only submit work to publications s/he is reading and familiar with. Thus, the letter is not an attempt to get one's work "in print" but rather a statement of desire to enter into the dialogue the publication seeks to engage. At ReMap we get a hundred (yup!) submissions a year from folks who are not familiar with ReMap.
This is obvious from the "generic" letters that accompany the work. As we struggle to stay in print ($) and (readers) we simply send this work back--. We're not trying to publish only those poets we know--but we do struggle to publish the poets who know the magazine.

Todd Baron

↑ Index

56. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Whalen
Tue 6 Jul 1999

Stephen Ellis wrote:
>
> Weird to think of published statements as taking up public (media?) space, > per Todd Baron's remarks; would it be better to leave public spaces empty, > and let thinking take care of itself in private?

Geez: Let me put it more simply: The larger more widely read newspapers (LA TIMES, NY TIMES, etc. only allow a few poetry reviews per YEAR! THe public space I was talking about was these publications (Mr. Clark is widely published on those pages). My remark was only meant to say "IF indeed there is LIMITED space--the reviews shold be well enaged with the work--try to help the work get new readers--and not do otherwise. That is if the reviews are written by those who care to engage in the dialogue of the work most poets try to produce. That is--DIALOGUE!

Todd Baron

ps: Thus--don't waste "public space"

↑ Index

57. Dale Smith
the devil in us all
Tue 6 Jul 1999

Perhaps "flawed thoughts", Mr. Bromige, are those that lack the "inconsistencies" and "unresolved conflicts" that many of us in the world live with (you know, there is that whole nasty business with Blake about contradictions). While your confidence in the post below reveals a singular spirit of high minded moral and aesthetic integrity, I assume that if anyone is interested they can go to JACKET's site and wrestle with TC's flawed prose on their own, or, better yet, read one of his books. The point I think some of us wish to make is that Whalen should be the focus of discussion, (his own twisted inconsistencies aside), since, as I hope, his work, tentativley, fueled the impulse toward greater engagement with this thread. I for one would prefer to see this conversation move toward an evaluative or critical discussion of OVERTIME, since it is the first representative sampling of that Beat Abbot's poems in many years. Devotion, by the way, doesn't create blind spots so much as highten with critical measure another's flaws. But I will defend my teacher's name when he is unjustly accused of doing a hatchet job. Only a handful of people read such ugly claims into that review. (Philip himself was pleased with it!). You and others want to turn the conversation away from the positive critical possibilities that could attend a discussion of Whalen's work by slugging through the same old drudge. Let TC continue to deal with the consequences of his past deeds. For some reason, many of you here are dealing with those consequences too, instead of attending more urgent issues of poetry. I've heard every opinion about the man and his work from those whose confidence only measures value by the approval of greater markets than themselves. The hypocritical gestures of consistency make nice rhetorical poses, but I think the stance below is too transparent to be read by anyone as anything more than a reductive, impotent war dance. I'll end my own rhetorical appeal with a poem of Philip's from "Many Happy Returns" written, it says, for Tom Clark:

THE LETTER TO THOMAS CLARK 22: VII:71
FROM BOLINAS WHERE HE SAT BESIDE ME TO HELP WRITE IT

Tom Clark
Waco, Texas

(crossed out. All our addresses crossed out)

Dear Tom. Received your letter & no mistake about the address or the sender (name of Angelica) but you look just the least bit changed.

Due to this minuscule point and the fragility of the ink,
And the wrong time of day all over town
It was not the phone.
but (the fragility . . . .
of one's own neuromuscular mechanism where that S W A M P)
Yours truly,
Dad.

David Bromige wrote:

> thus Kent Johnson. Now tell me, Kent (and others, should you know), is the List's reaction to Tom Clark utterly without grounds, has he been selected at random for extraordinary punishments, "demonized" as Kent would have it metrely through bad luck and the need for a scapegoat.....Or is the rhetoric flourished in the citation above, a way to distract us from some pretty obvious flaws?

And if so, in the name of _what_ is this rhetoric flourished? Tell me, fellow-listlings, if you can : does TC command such loyalty in some, that they will overlook what any person of average I.Q. (I allude to myself f and f) would recognize in TC's writings as major inconsistencies, unresolved conflicts, flawed thought.....or what have you?

Excuse the upcoming divagation : I had occasion once to write to the wife of a man who had abandoned all reason and logic to castigate me publicly. My response to this rudeness, at first reasoning, became itself rude. To which she now objected, inserting herself into the exchange. To which I responded by remarking the several provocations. To this she did not respond. To her, it was as though the words her man had uttered, that started it all, did not exist--had not been uttered. Presumably because somebody _she_ loved, would not proceed in such a way.....despite the evidence was under her very nose. Or somehow lacked significance because by prior agreement with herself, her husband was without flaws---was perfection. Hmmm, what it would have cost her, to admit otherwise!

What is it about Tom Clark that inspires this connubial kind of loyalty in his admirers, a bond that will not admit his faults?

And, cororally, are we able to perceive a pattern, are these supporters in other ways similar to one another? Does the School of Clark consist of persons Contented with their Blind Spots?

Maybe exercises this exhaustive aren't necessary. Let's simply ask that Kent or Dale or whomever put some piece of TC's up here where we can all read it, some piece that commands their admiration; and then we who would be interested in such engagement, can point out its shortcomings, and in this way, educate. Or, unlikely but possible, declare ourselves as a-brim as they with admiration, and bow out.

Rider : If "De gustibus non disputandum" were the rubric proceeded under in this thread, there could be no dispute. If I recall aright, the dispute began with Steve Vincent remarking on internal conflicts --- taste-disputes --- in the TC piece on Whalen. It is TC's dispute with himself we address, then, a dispute he has made our business in making it public.

And surely TC can stand the heat and not vacate the kitchen. Why are his fans so protective of him? Is there a mindlessness which he performs, that they feel he performs in their behalf? So that they do not mind him, but mind those who would remove the protective caul?

> db.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

58. Chris Stroffolino

Re: THING....(TYPO CORRECTION....

Tue 6 Jul 1999

Much confusion here i suppossee blame it on the heat, or the broken fingers.... but actually the event is SATURDAY JULY 10!!!!!!

Nott july 11th
und not july 19th (which i think is george mcgovern's birthday) sorry about any mixed up confusion....

On Fri, 2 Jul 1999, Chris Stroffolino wrote:

> Here's a THING I'm involved in....
> There will be FREE DRINKS
>
> Reuben reubin and LEE Klein > invite you to celebrate the publication of
>
> CAME LIKE IT WENT
> by Greg Fuchs (buckdown books)
>
> UNLOCKING THE EXITS
> by Eliot Katz (Coffee House Press)
>
> VERTICAL's CURRENCY: NEW & SELECTED POEMS
> by Joel Lewis (Talisman
>
> THE FUTURE IS NOW b Elizabeth Morse (Linear Arts)
>
> STEALER'S WHEEL by Chris Stroffolino (Hard Press)
>
> Saturday July 19, THE VIP ROOM IN the new CHINA CLUB
> 268 West 47th St. (btw. b'way & 8th)
>
> Doors open 10PM; "cocktails" 10-11
>
> ----------

> We'll probably all read like 2 poems or something too...
>
> If can't make it, you may find my book in POSMAN's BOOKSTORE
> (University Place) and St. Marks may still have it...
> You could also STEAL it from BARNES & NOBLE....
>
> ----chris

↑ Index

59. WaldReid
poet from Estonia
Tue 6 Jul 1999

The following letter from a poet in Estonia came to me via a friend who is a fiction writer and didn't know how to respond. I thought someone on the list might want to correspond with Indrek Tart directly (e-mail address at end) and/or send some small press publications to a lovely cause (read through to the end of the letter). Diane Wald

>><< Dear Ms. W,
>> I'm a poet and cultural studies researcher (b. 1946) in Estonia at the >> Baltic sea.
>> Estonia has through its rise of the national consciousness from the >> first part of XIXth century (after abandoning the serfdom) built its >> identity around the Estonian language in which poetry had played a >> leading role. Especially under colonizing rules of Czar-Russia up to >> 1918 and under Soviets (1944-91) poetry has been the most secret >> language of the nation to keep its mind safe and sane.
>> In 1992 I was in the States in International Writing Program at the >> University of Iowa which is now in unfavor and will be closed. As I >> understand it was the main gate for the States to host foreign writers >> and let them know the States better. It were very useful three months >> for me. I visited mine pen-friends and talked a lot of poetries >> situation in both countries. My library of English-language poetry is >> quite great.
>> Now after the unrest years of transition (I personally had to change a >> profession of the physicist into a social scientist one) Estonia seems >> to be settled into the Western way of living again (Western way of >> thinking here wasn't never lost, even under the Soviets we were regarded >> as the more developed Western part of that country). And along with mine >> research of Estonia's poetical development in 1851-1998 I'm again >> engaged with thoughts of more international views on poetry's being.
>> Poetry is not a capitalist business-like commodity for sale but >> something preserving nation and humanity by itself under different >> pressures of times and its share in the book production titles in >> developed and transitional countries is not minimal (2-6%). Thus it >> functions for survival of the nations (and communities, e.g. Estonians >> exiled to the West in 1944 had to rebuild Estonian literature in abroad >> and it was successful project until the end of the Cold War). Also I'm >> thinking of generational likeliness (poetry of poets born around the >> same time) and the influence of age, gender and global cultural climate >> (if that exists?) on poets' writing. Are poets just lost souls from the >> past or future or gaining importance only due ideals practitioned in >> locality (abstractions pressed into local language use) or contrary the >> locality makes them to overgrow it and become citizens of the Heavenly >> Thought? Also, how our living (life-world in sociological terms) in >> language makes poetry unnecessary? Etc. Etc.

>> As a small start I'm looking for fresher poetry from the States to >> compile a small anthology and translate it into Estonian. I hope that >> along with Estonian Endowment for the Arts (we call it >> Kultuurkapital=Cultural Capital) there may be interest from US side too.
>> In 1988-93 I published several translation columns of American, British, >> Welsh poetry in our newspapers but now this tradition has disappeared as >> poems are not fresh news for the papers, thus unsellable. But poetry >> chapbook publishing flowering in Estonia has no precedents. If You could >> and want to take part in my adventure please send Your freshist (or >> best) volumes to the address of our Centre for Cultural Studies below.
>> Or just write me of Yours views.
>> We already are friendly souls in poetry and poetry could save the world, >> not money or political tricks.
>>
>> In full friendship,
>>
>> Indrek Tart
>>
>> P.S. I found Your address in A Direstory of Poets & Writers on-line >> version.
>> --
>> Indrek Tart
>> senior researcher
>> Centre for Contemporary Cultural Studies
>> Tallinn Pedagogical University
>> Narva Rd. 25, Tallinn 10120, ESTONIA
>> Phone: [redacted] 463
>> Fax: [redacted] 118

>> E-mail: [redacted]
>>
Dear Ms. Wald,
You could spread my call for help in any convenient way. I'm really interested in which kind of poetry is written and read in this Networked Societies Age and how poetry transforms under those new pressures and opportunities. As I'm convinced of poetry's special role in maintaining mental health of the mankind. I'm interested in Yours list too, by now I'm more looking developments in British & Irish Poetry list lead by my friend Ric Caddell who is librarian and head of the Basil Bunting Poetry Centre in Durham (UK).
Also in Boston area lives my long time friend Marge Piercy who's e-mail has been lost in my computer crash last year. If You could find it out it will be marvelous (in A Directory of Poets & Fiction Writers there is only a homepage of her but non e-mail in it.
Best wishes,
Indrek Tart

↑ Index

60. franklin bruno kimberly lyons
Wed 7 Jul 1999

---

anyone--

A while back (in the last month or so) someone posted here advertising a chapbook by Kimberly Lyons. I seem to have deleted the message, and can't find it in the archives. Could someone w/ ordering info please send same my way?

b/c fine--but the next day or two would be best, as I'll be offline from 7/10 onward.

thanks,
fjb

↑ Index

61. Jason Nelson
just finished engineering poetry webpage
Wed 7 Jul 1999

I just finished putting some of my engineering poetry into a hypertext format. Any thoughts on the page would be just keen or more than keen.

creativity.bgsu.edu/courses/art586/Sum99/students2/Jason/index.html

cheers,

Jason Nelson

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

62. George Bowering

Re: whalen,

Wed 7 Jul 1999

I'll tell you about the first Whalen reading I heard. It was in a big room at UBC during the '63 poetry summer of legend. After about fifteen minutes, Whalen could tell that a lot of people in the room could not handle his discontinuous poems with white space between the lines, so he stopped and sd it wd not bother him if the people who were bored and uncomfortable went on out to the cafeteria or some such place. He would take a five minute break and let folks get out with no guilt. Then everyone that was left, about half the crowd, skoonched down close, and Whalen read for about an hour and a half,. and it was just wonderful--and you know: I think it was even more wonderful for the kind and sharp action he'd taken.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

63. Douglas

Re: Unsolicited Submissions/Taos Poets Gathering

Wed 7 Jul 1999

We are currently not reading new manuscripts.

DM

David Erben (Art) wrote:
>
> Can anyone tell me what the "typical" letter accompanying an unsolicited > submission should look like?
>
> And... did anyone happen to attend the gathering of Native American poets > that occurred in Taos two or three weeks ago?

↑ Index

64. Michael Franco
BOSTON ALTERNATIVE POETRY CONFERENCE
Wed 7 Jul 1999

ANNOUNCING:

THE 2nd ANNUAL BOSTON ALTERNATIVE POETRY CONFERENCE

JULY 23-25, 1999

The Art Institute of Boston
at Lesley
700 Beacon St.
Boston, MA

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS: as of 6/30/99

Friday, July 23

6:30 p.m. - Night Reading - Andrew Schelling, C.D. Wright, Michael Franco, Anselm Berrigan, Magdalena Zurawski, Daniel Bouchard, Donna de la Perriere

Saturday, July 24

9:00 a.m. - William Bronk Reading - (Jack Kimball, Donna de la Perriere and others)

10:00 a.m. - Morning Reading - Douglas Rothschild, Sean Cole, Diane Wald, Barbara Claire Freeman, Richard Dillon, Brendan Lorber

12:00 Noon - Lunch Break

1:00 p.m. - Frank Ohara Reading - (Anne Waldman, Jordan Davis, Douglas Rothschild and others)

2:00 p.m. - Alan Gilbert - "Poetry as Document"

2:30 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - Tina Darragh, Beth Anderson, Peter Ganick, Drew Gardner, Chris Stroffolino, Alan Gilbert, Patrick Doud, David Kirschenbaum, Sam Truitt, Ed Barrett,Ammiel Alcalay

5:00 p.m. - Dinner Break

6:00 p.m. - Maria Damon - "Something About Bob Kaufman and the Poet's Labor"

7:00 p.m. - Night Reading - Anne Waldman, Leslie Scalapino, John Wieners, Gerrit Lansing,
Michael Gizzi, Kristin Prevallet

Sunday, July 25

9:00 a.m. - Emily Dickinson Reading - (Joseph Lease, Jack Kimball and others)

10:00 a.m. - Morning Reading - Jack Kimball, Prageeta Sharma, Jacques Debrot, Heather Scott
Peterson, Aaron Kiely

12:00 Noon - Lunch Break

1:00 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - "Ways to Read" (Michael Basinski, Wendy Kramer, Kenneth Goldsmith)

2:00 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - Raffael de Gruttola, Tadashi Kondo, Wilfred Croteau (renku and haiga)- Andrew Schelling reads from his "Road to Ocosingo"

3:00 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - Lewis Warsh, Will Alexander, Jordan
Davis, Henry Gould, Damon Krukowski,
Jim Behrle, Marcella Durand

5:00 p.m. - Dinner Break

6:00 p.m. - David Shapiro - "A Radiant Pluralism: For Poetry"

7:00 p.m. - Night Reading - David Shapiro, Lyn Hejinian, Forrest Gander, Joseph Lease, Lisa Jarnot

CONFERENCE REGISTRATION:

Weekend Pass: $40
Saturday or Sunday only: $18
Single Readings: $7

Student discounts available. Tickets available at the door or by pre-registration. For more registration info. contact Aaron Kiely at this email, by phone at [redacted] or at PO Box 441517, Somerville, MA 02144

Thank You!

↑ Index

65. Gerald Schwartz
Re: Spiral question
Wed 7 Jul 1999

metaphormetaphormetaphor movement
from semi-intransitive semiconsciousness to CONScientization act act act of knowing IS A SPIRAL
Sequence The Cyclical Movents!
Require A Big Push!
Genuine The Dialogue!

Move up the spiral with expression cognate the object

or fail to unveil the CRUSH

Gerald Schwartz

↑ Index

66. Annie Finch
Re: POETICS Digest - 3 Jul 1999 to 4 Jul 1999 (#1999-127)
Wed 7 Jul 1999

Now, that's what I call poetry! What's E.A.C.?

--Annie

> Song from E. A. C.
>
> Oh maiden, bind the stalks!
> Aroo lay, aroo lay!
> Oh maiden, the stalks will be bound!
> Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!
>
> Oh youngman, carry the sheaves!
> Aroo lay, aroo lay!
> Oh youngman, the sheaves will be carried!
> Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!
>
> Oh maiden, unbind the stalks!

> Aroo lay, aroo lay!
> Oh maiden, the stalks are unbound!
> Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!
>
> Oh youngman, assemble the sheaves!
> Aroo lay, aroo lay!
> Oh youngman, the sheaves are assembled!
> Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!
>
> Oh maiden, the sheaves and the stalks!
> Aroo lay, aroo lay!
> Oh youngman, the stalks and the sheaves!
> Aloor, aroo lay, aroo lay!

Annie Finch (http://muohio.edu/~finchar)
Cincinnati, Ohio
Associate Professor of English/Creative Writing
Miami University

↑ Index

67. Douglas Barbour

Carnivocal: A Celebration of Sound Poetry / Edited by Stephen Scobie & Douglas Barbour

Wed 7 Jul 1999

The Sound Poetry CD, Carnivocal, Explodes the Boundaries of Poetry

Red Deer, AB, June 24, 1999 - While all types of poetry experiment with language and meaning, no type of poetry pushes at the boundaries of language and meaning quite as much as sound poetry. Most people come to poetry through the medium of the written word, but sound poetry offers a completely different, more sensory experience. Sound poetry cannot be written down, cannot be captured into writing - it must be heard. In order to fully understand it and to capture its evocative power, listeners must sit back in a comfortable, reclining chair and place this unique CD into their CD player. As Edita Petrauskaite, the Executive Director of the League of Canadian Poets, says, "Close your eyes, sit back and let the poetry take you."

Sound poetry has evolved into an experimental and powerful medium and it explores all forms of sound, not just the varieties of sound which form human speech. However, as Carnivocal editors and sound poets Stephen Scobie and Doug Barbour say: "Sound poetry is the celebration of all the expressive possibilities of the human voice."

Sound poetry dates back at least to the experiments of the Dada poets such as Kurt Schwitters and Hugo Ball. In Canada, it has been string since the 1960s, when bp Nichol and bill bissett began exploring and reinventing its traditions. In the 1990s, a new generation of sound poets has revitalized the Canadian tradition and on this CD their voices sound alongside many of the best-known earlier practitioners. Carnivocal presents a range of contemporary solo performers including: bp Nichol, bill bissett, Stephen Cain, Gerry Shikatani, Claude Gauvreau, Christian Bök, Penn Kemp, W. Mark Sutherland, Richard Truhlar, Penn Kemp, Paul Dutton, Steve McCaffery, & Steven Ross Smith; and various ensembles, including a classic recording by The Horsemen and Owen Sound,as well as groups such as Re:Sounding, First Draft and the exciting new sounds of Verbomotorhead.

Douglas Barbour and Stephen Scobie first began performing together as the poetry vocal ensemble Re:Sounding in the mid-1970s. As well-known poets and critics, they have produced between the two of them over twenty volumes of poetry and criticism. Stephen Scobie won the Governor General's Award for Poetry and Douglas Barbour won the Stephan G. Stephansson Award for Poetry.

Carnivocal: A Celebration of Sound Poetry / Edited by Stephen Scobie & Douglas Barbour Published by Red Deer Press & The Omikron Group/ Distributed by Raincoast Books 0-88995-210-8 * Compact Disk * CAN $16.95 / USA $12.95

In the United States address orders to:
General Distribution Services Inc.
85 River Rock Drive, Suite 202
Buffalo NY 14207
Tel: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]

In The United Kingdom address orders to:
Lavis Marketing
73 Lime Walk, Headington
Oxford OX3 7AD UK
Tel: (01865) 67575 / [redacted]
Fax: (01865) 750079 / + 44 1865 750079

In Australia address orders to:
John Reed Book Distribution
57 Sir Thomas Mitchell Drive
Davidson NSW 2085 Australia
Tel: 61-2-9939-3041
Fax: 61-2-9453-4545

In New Zealand address orders to:
Jay Books
PO Box 30566 / (44b Victoria Street)
Lower Hut, Alicetown New Zealand
Tel/Fax: 64-04-[redacted]

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta Canada T6G 2E5
(h) [780] [redacted] (b) [780] [redacted]
http://www.ualberta.ca/~dbarbour/dbhome.htm

> In the new dispensation, conspiracy
> Will be replaced by > Collusion, the diction of the age
> Filtered through the great sieve of particulars
> To be sorted out later,
>
> Ann Lauterbach

↑ Index

68. Pritchett,Patrick
FW: Gore, AIDS drugs, South Africa: summary (fwd)
Wed 7 Jul 1999

Chris, could you please post this disturbing bit of news?
Thanks, Patrick

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Stephen Daniel M <[redacted]>
> +++++
>
> Gore, AIDS drugs, and South Africa
>
> AIDS activists disrupted Al Gore's announcement of his presidential candidacy in Carthage, Tennessee on June 16 and at subsequent campaign events in protest of the Vice President's role in preventing AIDS drugs from > reaching South Africans with AIDS. The Clinton Administration has sided with American pharmaceutical companies over the desperate need of 22.5 million South Africans with HIV, most of whom can't afford necessary medicines for common AIDS infections like tuberculosis and pneumonia.
>
> South Africans with HIV need cheap generic AIDS drugs because name-brand drugs, from which the American drug makers would reap huge profits, cost $12,000 per year. The average annual income in South Africa is $2,600 per year.

To combat the growing public health emergency South Africa and other developing countries have sought to enact "compulsory licensing" - local licenses to produce generic versions of patented medicines. Compulsory licensing, legal under current international trade agreements, would lower drug prices as much as 90%.

But in recent negotiations with newly elected South African President Thabo Mbeki, Gore has threatened severe international trade sanctions against South Africa if it allows production of generic drugs. On April 30, Gore himself authorized a review of South African policies on compulsory licensing and set a September 30 deadline for South Africa to comply or suffer sanctions. Gore is co-chair of the US/South Africa Binational Commission.

Gore announced this policy in cooperation with the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturer's Association, which includes huge drug companies like Bristol-Myers Squibb, Glaxo, Pfizer, and Johnson and Johnson. One of the drugs South Africa wants to produce generically is the Taxol, used to treat cancer. Taxol was developed by the US National Institutes of Health, i.e., at taxpayer expense, but the Bush Administration handed exclusive rights for Taxol over to Bristol-Myers Squibb, a private corporation.

Gore's personal connections to the pharmaceutical industry include David Beier (domestic policy advisor), former head lobbyist for Genentech; Tony Podesta (advisor), lobbyist for the Pharmaceutical Manufacturer's Association; Tom Downey (confidant), lobbyist for Merck; and Peter Knight (fundraiser), former Schering-Plough lobbyist.

The policy on South Africa's right to produce generic drugs constitutes a "free-trade" issue, with the US seeking international protections for patents owned by American corporations ("intellectual property rights"). Other countries under pressure from the US include Thailand and India, which like South Africa face an enormous public health crisis because of AIDS. In nine southern African nations, more than 20% of people between the ages of 15 and 49 are infected with HIV. Gore's actions may cost millions of lives.

In April, AIDS activists organized a demo in DC (at the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America office) in protest of the Clinton/Gore > free-trade "Africa Growth and Opportunity Act" and in favor of Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr.'s "HOPE for Africa Act" with 21 folks arrested for civil disobedience.

>
> The AIDS activist groups who have protested Gore's actions include AIDS Drugs For Africa, ACT UP, and Health GAP (Global Access Project), an international network of public health advocates. ACT UP Washington's Wayne
> Turner attended (with the backing of the DC Green Party) a June 28 demonstration in Philadelphia, at a major Gore campaign fundraiser.
>
> There are few clearer and more disturbing examples of the Clinton Administration's tendency to favor corporate greed over human need. If Gore > blocked AIDS drugs in the US, he'd be denounced as a genocidal despot. Instead, he's the Democratic Party frontrunner for President.
>
> Scott McLarty
> Washington, DC

↑ Index

69. Alan Sondheim

NOISE news :: peforations 20 (fwd)

Wed 7 Jul 1999

```
@@@@ @@@  @@@@@@@@@  @@@  @@@@@@@@
@@@@@@@@@
@@!@!@@@  @@!  @@@  @@!  !@@      @@!
!@!!@!@!  !@!  @!@  !@!  !@!      !@!
@!@ !!@!  @!@  !@!  !!@  !!@@!!   @!!!:!
!@!  !!!  !@!  !!!  !!!   !!@!!!   !!!!!:
!!:  !!!  !!:  !!!  !!:      !:!  !!:
:!:  !:!  :!:  !:!  :!:     !:!   :!:
 ::   ::  ::::: ::   ::  :::: ::    :: ::::
 ::    :    : :  :   :    :: : :    : :: ::
```

"The bit of noise, the small random element, transforms one system or one order into another."
M. Serres

"Between the rationality for which the analysis speaks and the law that history repeats there remains a gap, infinitesimal to be sure,

but fundamental"
M. De Certeau

Welcome to NOISE NEWS, a notification publication of PERFORATIONS and Public Domain, Inc. a non-profit organization devoted to examinations of the crossing points of art, theory, technology and community. (see www.pd.org)
*** *** ***

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS: PERFORATIONS 20

LAST STORIES
contact: Robert Cheatham / [redacted]
Ginger Dendy / [redacted]

All types of media will be considered, but especially approaches which explore new relations between content and form. Each issue of PERFORATIONS (we now call them 'nodes' since each thematic is an ongoing site of investigation/creativity) includes straighforward articles as well as artistic web projects. Deadlines are fluid. Contact above editors for more information.

PERFORATIONS may be viewed at:
http://www.pd.org/perforations/perf-topics.html

LAST STORIES

Mostly it seems they're all we have, really. After the 'procession of priests' (theoria) has precessed past our increasingly narrow attention span; after the bombs have dropped (and before, for that matter); when the guy in the ape suit is throwing the bone up in '2001' (goodbye Stanley) and when we catch it in the hear, and gnaw, we who live in the future, on those bones, those very ancient lineaments, we who are sighting along the 'scope hairs, looking for the next target of acquisition...well, stories are what we started with and stories are what we still have.

But just to make it a little more focused and to satisfy our own need for eschatology (both singular and global): why don't we say that we only have a limited amount of time to live (after all is said and done, this may come of news to some of us) or that the Third Millennium will come a cropper and leave us poor humans face down (of course, no one really believes that...but we're telling stories remember?)

Pehaps you have a last will and testiment you would like to send us, or a death bed confession, or a lie you can't stop believing in but will be glad when it's all over, or that peculiar need to expose yourself, whistleblow on yourself, that often attacks those at the end.

Or maybe you have a happy story of the end/End wherein your life flashes before you (and hence us since you will send it to us) and it was a photo finish, but a good one nevertheless, set'm up Finnegan; or the species rounds the corner finally into its Golden Dawn, every Thing finds its place, the animals speak; or you have a Final Theory of Everything at the end which redeems us all and makes the whole trip worthwhile...

Personal stories, theoretical stories, endings which are beginnings, eschatological fairy tales, lies (the end of truth), fables (the lying truth after the end), happy endings, tragic endings, tales with nothing but pictures for those of us who find it increasingly hard to read here in the future and thus closer to the end.... send them all to us.

while there's still some time left.

PERFORAIONS 18, RELICS, is now up and running at :
http:// www.pd.org/perforations/perf-topics.html

for info on new material added click on WHAT'S NEW at www.pd.org. It's not always up to date so feel free to browse around.

Public Domain, Inc. is a 501 (c) 3 not for profit organization.
http://www.pd.org
[redacted]

↑ Index

70. Lowther,John
FW: Merce Marathon on NYC TV
Thu 8 Jul 1999

---

i'm poaching this off the silence list wish i had access to this - hope that some of you do

> According to http://www.nytimes.com/yr/mo/day/news/arts/cunniungham-dance-film.html (and yes, the misspelling of "cunningham" is part of the URL), the Metro Learning channel will be showing 42 hours of Merce Cunningham dances, documentaries, and interviews next week, Monday through Saturday from 9:30 P.M. to 3:30 A.M.

↑ Index

71. Poetics List

 A R E A D I N G * (fwd)*

Thu 8 Jul 1999

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Thu, 8 Jul 1999 09:29:00 -0400
From: Gary Sullivan <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: * A R E A D I N G *

C O R R E S P O N D E N C E

T P o I h o f n e e t t i i m c a s c y

N A D A G O R D O N + G A R Y S U L L I V A N

Sunday, July 18
Zinc Bar, 90 West Houston (at La Guardia/West Broadway)
6:37 p.m. * $3.00

Beginning in the fall of 1998, Nada Gordon, then living in Tokyo, and Gary Sullivan, who'd moved to New York the previous year, began a daily correspondence that culminated in April of 1999 with Nada's return to the U.S. after 11 years in Japan. Prior to ever meeting one another, the couple produced and exchanged 1,000s of pages of letters, poems, anecdotes, theoretical musings, gossip, bibliomancy--anything & everything to keep their connection open and abuzz despite being halfway around the globe from each other. Nada and Gary will read poems and other excerpts from their correspondence.

NADA GORDON is the author of _rodomontade_, _more hungry_ and _lip_, and co-edited the magazine _Aya_. A new collection, _Foriegnn Bodie_, will be published this fall. Her writing has appeared in numerous periodicals over the years including _Chain_, _Jimmy & Lucy's House of K_, _Printed Matter_ and (from their exchange) _The East Village Poetry Web_ at:
http://www.geocities.com/~theeastvillage/a6/gordon/a.htm

GARY SULLIVAN is the author of _Dead Man_, and edits Detour Press and _Read.Me_. _The Art of Poetry_ is forthcoming later this year. His writing and cartoons have appeared in numerous places, including _The Gertrude Stein Awards 1994-1995_, the _o.blek_ "New Coast" issue, _Avec_, _Rain Taxi_, _The SF Weekly_, _Talisman_, _Tool: A Magazine_, _The World_ and (from their exchange) _The East Village Poetry Web_ at: http://interserver.miyazaki-med.ac.jp/~east/t5/sullivan/a.htm

↑ Index

72. Pam Brown

unsolicited mss letters ?

Thu 8 Jul 1999

Hello Poeticists -
At "overland" we get about 250 unsolicited poems every six weeks. I've been the poetry editor for a couple of years now and would really discourage any prospective publishee from sending a curriculum vitae with their submissions. I read the POEMS - not the track record.
Best,
Pam Brown
--- Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
<[redacted]> wrote:
> David Erben (Art) wrote:
> >
> > Can anyone tell me what the "typical" letter > accompanying an unsolicited
> > submission should look like?
> >
> >
> THere should be none. A writer should only submit > work to publications
> s/he is reading and familiar with. Thus, the letter > is not an attempt to > get one's work "in print" but rather a statement of > desire to enter into > the dialogue the publication seeks to engage. At > ReMap we get a hundred > (yup!) submissions a year from folks who are not > familiar with ReMap.
> This is obvious from the "generic" letters that > accompany the work. As > we struggle to stay in print ($) and (readers) we > simply send this work

> back--. We're not trying to publish only those poets
> we know--but we do > struggle to publish the poets who know the magazine.
>
> Todd Baron
>
===
Web site/P.Brown - http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Workshop/7629/

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Get your free @yahoo.com address at http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

73. nuyopoman
Maureen Owen
Thu 8 Jul 1999

Read all about Maureen Owen's return to publishing and the revenge of mimeo's proud Telephone Books : http://poetry.about.com.

Bob Holman, Co-Guide

↑ Index

74. nuyopoman
Gathering of the Tribes Wants You
Thu 8 Jul 1999

The following scenes are invited to participate in the Opem Mic Party (bring some to get some) at Steve Cannon's Gathering of the Tribes, 285 East Third St (C-D), NYC, Sunday, August 18, 1999, 6-8(?) PM:
AAWW ABCNoRio
Academy
A Different Light
Amygists
Anti-Slam
Basement Wkshp
Beats
Bklyn Moon
Black Arts
Black Mountain

BoogLit
Bronx Writers Ctr
C Magazine
Cafe
Church
Conjunctions
Dada
Deep Imagists
EAPoe
Ear
Exoterica
Fugs
Futurists
Grand St
Haiku Soc
Harlem Renaissance
Here
Home Planet
Imagists
Language
LitBitLouda
Long Shot
Lungfull
Mad Alex
Mouth Almighty MTC
neither/nor
New Yorker
Ninety-SecondStY
NoSeNo
NYSchool
Objectivists
Orion
P&W
Paris Review
Pedro Pietri
PoCal
Poetry Nation
PoHo
Rogue Scholars
Segue
SF Renaissance

sic
Slam
Society
Surrealists
T&W
Taco Poets
Tender Buttons
Umbra
Unbearables
United Artists
Urbana
US of Po
World of Poetry
Writers Voice
Yeats Soc
Zinc

↑ Index

75. Mark Prejsnar/Erika Stephens meditation on meditatives

Fri 9 Jul 1999

---

would welcome comments about PW.
>to my view, there's a meditative, discursive breed of poetry that includes >um
>PW, Lew Welch but also (I'm not suggesting a school) Carl Rakosi, Charles >Resnikov and... Paul Blackburn?

A perfectly interesting and reasonable challenge, ..cutting across SF renass. men, semiconscienciousObjectors, NY SchoolBoyz, etccc..

*Blackburn seems maybe a bit selfdramatizing, to be called meditative (tho discursive works);

*Reznikoff's documentary turn, also makes him a little hard to assimilate to this idea...

...could the breadth and spreading-out feel of most (or all) of these (really the "discursive" part of the formulation quoted above), be understood in the final analysis as a reaching back and around toward whitman? --"around" would acknowledge the fact that Olson among others are (in a way not felt enuff by critics?) respnding to walt,... but that they do so in a techno-intense way that looses a certain walt'ish generolsity of spirit?? Ol Ez hisself for that matter, making his one-sided "pact..."

If so, maybe the central spirit of this discursive and meditative subcurrent is ..... Duncan?

--Mp

> it's easy enough to evaluate Tom Clark (I'll bet he enjoys chardonnay) because he has mustered himself into so many public venues. to describe him as an anti-christ is interesting theology, but, without supporting argument, not a shining example of critical acumen. I'm not worried about Tom Clark anyway, a-c tho he might be. at the risk of making eye contact, I bet Kent Johnson COULD provide critical acumen re PW so I hereby request that he, or anyone, do so. me, whoever I happen to be,my own thoughts aren't well formed, hence my > request. at any > rate, I too suspect Whalen is under-appreciated (and double that with Kyger: I too am guilty as charged). I have On Bear Head, am not positioned to buy anything new and have read very little about PW. Billy Little briefly suggested some useful talking points concerning PW, and I truly doubt the mean moderator would prevent further discussion so trip the light fantastic step, how about. a minor buzz about PW could be bestirred right here in this seething climate. my thinking, you see, is that theory begats action.

↑ Index

76. pete spence

Re: Carnivocal: A Celebration of Sound Poetry / Edited by Stephen Scobie & Douglas Barbour

Fri 9 Jul 1999

> The Sound Poetry CD, Carnivocal, and Doug Barbour say: "Sound poetry is the celebration of all the > expressive possibilities of the human voice."
>
> Sound poetry dates back at least to the experiments of the Dada poets such as Kurt Schwitters and Hugo Ball. In Canada, it has been string since the 1960s, when bp Nichol and bill bissett began exploring and reinventing its traditions. In the 1990s, a new generation of sound poets has revitalized the \ tradition Ann Lauterbach

in Australia a good sound poetry group tha's been 'round since late 70's und still going is ARF ARF they have a cd out//pete spence

_____

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

77. Ron Silliman
Trane DeVore
Fri 9 Jul 1999

There is a nice piece on Trane DeVore and his new book from Avec in today's SF Chron, http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/chronicle/archive/1999/07/09/EB62278.DTL

Unlike the Whalen review a few weeks ago, this is a genuinely nice piece, even if it makes a bit too much of Trane's grandparentage.... (perhaps that should be two words).

Ron Silliman

↑ Index

78. maz881
bard conf
Fri 9 Jul 1999

Dear Katy,

I attended the Poetry & Pedagogy conference at Bard in late june 1999. I enjoyed myself despite the fact that I am not a teacher of writing and even found myself wondering a lot about how rhetoric or poetics i suppose i mean gets formed and polarized around poetry and how these battles are fairly important when it's really young minds (and less reputations & canon fodder) that are being thrown around. Here brain gue. There brain goo. The sense of people who work in trenches.

At other times i found myself thinking i am lucky not to have to continually come up with (job) watered down catch phrases to describe the poetry i like and dislike and otherwise don't care about and to have to publish "that" type of discourse as if my livelihood depended on it. This thought was a result of listening to a paper by Bob Perelman who gave an interesting list of bland sentences that come out of his mouth when "difficult" poetry is explained to a general undergraduate, graduate and/or hiring, tenure committee audience: "This is a standard academic narrative; the standard remedy is abbreviation."

* So that "To Elsie" of Spring & All becomes: "the conflict between democratic diction and high modernist innovation, with cars, immigration, gender and class mentioned."

* "Love Songs to Johannes" becomes: "path-breaking eroticism, perhaps with sidelong comparative glances thrown at The Waste Land and Edna St. Vincent Millay's sonnets."

* Tender Buttons becomes: "examples of a literary version of Cubist portraiture . . . as well as issues of domestic space and lesbian erotics vs. surveillance."

This problem was sort of enacted when the critic Lynn Keller delivered a paper, posing two models of reading/composition: centrifugal and centripetal. The centripetal model pulls everything in and is basically a closed text; centrifugal tends outward and is open. She further posed that Edward Hirsch's new book How to Read a Poem and Fall in Love with Poetry represented the closed model, then put up Joan Retallack's Icarus Falling as a model of the open. There was a break in the talk and Jackson Mac Low asked me to bring him his water bottle. Luckily I happened to be wearing a t-shirt that said i love the topaz man (with nipple enhanced picture of fabbio precursor) on the front and i love topaz romance books on the back. My shirt made an intervention at the conference that said Lynn, I don't think the opposition between centripetal and centrifugal is interesting, but your reading of Retallack is and seems like one of the few pedagogical moments of the conference.

Talking with Lynn after her paper I said I wish there hadn't been so many uncritical valorizations of the experimental/avant-garde. I don't remember what she said to that, but I do remember she said she was nervous about the off-campus education discussion (see below) because she wanted the classroom to be the central place for poetic work and discovery to take place. I told her I thought she was probably a good teacher.

In the afternoon it was often announced we could have juice and cookies in the foyer. It was at these moments where I felt myself to be squarely inhabiting America. American conferences don't serve alcohol until, at the earliest, "cocktail hour", but usually you have to wait until dinner. Compare this to France's 11:30 am "scotch time". Americans, as we learn from Ben Franklin's visit to English factories, should not drink ale at break time.

In American venues we also see the phenomenon of event packing in that there is no time between events to rest and, as Cecilia Vicuña reminded us, to heal the dendrites. She also reminded us that the siesta in Spain was going bye-bye due to the new euro. Certain types of work are best accomplished, and we need only look at American world domination to demonstrate this, when a pre-ordained schedule is executed according to plan, when the random elements are minimized.

That being said, there were a few moments of randomness and conscious attempts to bring this in to how poetry gets made, and here I am thinking of Bob Perelman's and Michael Davidson's comments regarding their off-campus education, that real learning about poetry takes place in bars and at readings and at informal talks in living rooms. There was a certain sense of nostalgia about their comments, as if that off-campus culture they described was an infrequent visitor in their current lives, and for them I imagine the conference itself became a substitute for this lack. I myself went to the conference for this very reason. I knew some of my friends were going to be there. Well, I crashed the conference because my girl friend was one of the organizers.

It was during Perelman's talk, the "procedure" panel, that I asked about Bob's education (he thought I asked about "Bob's agitation") and whether he could describe some procedures for creating or being involved in off-campus poetry "scenes", as the few comments I had heard up to this point regarding this extra-curricular activity seemed to suggest that poetry was something that happened to oneself spontaneously upon entering a bar. He replied that talks and bars were good, but that it was hard work. Lyn Hejinian also said it was hard work. There's that word again.

Mytili Jagannathan mentioned Writer's House at UPENN as a place where that kind of randomness has been cultivated, and Louis Cabri made similar remarks towards the close of the conference, viz that if "you" have a physical space that can be brought to bear serially (get people to show up at) and, if you have some cash, things will take care of themselves. Juliana Spahr--while acknowledging the importance of the interesting things that have been emerging from Writer's House and how it seems to be at least partially responsible for hooking people up in Philadelphia and adding energy to the local communities (witness recent spilling out onto streets)--wanted to counter this landed model with a landless one, where books, mags, readings, exist as collaborative venues. Her point being not oppositional, but supplementary, in that there are not that many places in the world where enough people would actually go to a physical space on a regular basis so that the threshold level of erotic randomness that facilitates the exchange of poetic energy could be reached if not overcome. Actually, Juliana didn't say all that.

Aside from the papers and working groups and questions and answers, there were some good moments of on-campus late nite drinking (the Bard cops smile at you and seem to want you to have fun on their watch), a dinner with Robert Kelly who is fun in a naughty way, a trip to the swimming hole (quarry), and a party at Emilie Clark's house in whose yard a field of fireflies was busy tearing the veil off the continuous. Is such a display truly random?

There were also some excellent readings. I don't think I had the occasion to say to myself or to a friend behind closed doors "that" reading sucked, which is odd because there were 16 readings. The first nite we heard Michael Davidson, Harryette Mullen, Lyn Hejinian, Bob Perelman, & Ann Lauterbauch. The next day we heard Edwin Torres and Anne Tardos read and discuss their work. That nite, we heard Caroline Bergvall, Robert Kelley, Jena Osman, Joan Retallack, Juliana Spahr and Cecilia Vicuña. Saturday afternoon we went to a very hot little chapel and heard Bernadette Mayer (she said tubecabra) and Jackson Mac Low (he said security strawberries), and at nite were treated to a sound painting conducted by Walter Thompson, with members of the conference making noises at the behest of his fingers.

As for the papers, I can't make the claim I made above. What I tended to find lacking in the papers were actual pedagogical procedures that could be re-used to illuminate "difficult" works in general and/or procedures that would pertain to particular works. I mean even I have some tricks I use when I'm invited to a poetry workshop to read my work and discuss. I just didn't come away from this conference with a sense of how these people do their jobs, their work.

Perhaps this was because I didn't attend the working groups, but rested dendrites instead. These working groups consisted of a leader guiding six to ten people thru various "peter elbow-like" reading and writing exercises using "difficult" source texts. The general feeling I got from people who did participate was that they were too tired to really put any energy into it and thus did not enjoy it and did not learn. My unscholarly opinion is that it might have been more interesting to have made the working groups the focus of the conference, rather than the papers. That said, I was happy to have attended Poetry & Pedagogy: The Challenge of the Contemporary: a four-day symposium in the form of a collaborative investigation, as I had fun with friends and met some interesting people.

love,

Bill

↑ Index

79. Herb Levy
Re: poetry in RealAudio
Fri 9 Jul 1999

Days ago, Taylor Brady wrote:

> For those who haven't previously encountered it, by the way, I highly recommend the Zorn, which also has a text by Myung Mi Kim narrated by Jung Hee Shin with a percussion duo played by Joey Baron and Sam Bennett; and a text by Arto Lindsay narrated by Zhang Jinglin with guitar duo played by Bill Frisell and Fred Frith.

All true, though poetics list folks should be aware that, just as the Hejinian text is heard in a translation into Vietnamese, the Kim and Lindsay texts are spoken in Korean & Chinese respectively. (& no, Kim did not do her own translation.)

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

80. Michael Magee
Re: bard conf
Fri 9 Jul 1999

Bill, thanks for these interesting riffs on the Bard conference. I've written a few comments below which I thought might interest some folks on the list. -m.

According to [redacted]:
>
> At other times i found myself thinking i am lucky not to have to continually > come up with (job) watered down catch phrases to describe the poetry i like > and dislike and otherwise don't care about and to have to publish "that" type > of discourse as if my livelihood depended on it. This thought was a result > of listening to a paper by Bob Perelman who gave an interesting list of bland > sentences that come out of his mouth when "difficult" poetry is explained to > a general undergraduate, graduate and/or hiring, tenure committee audience:
> "This is a standard academic narrative; the standard remedy is abbreviation."
>
> * So that "To Elsie" of Spring & All becomes: "the conflict between > democratic diction and high modernist innovation, with cars, immigration, > gender and class mentioned."
>
> * "Love Songs to Johannes" becomes: "path-breaking eroticism, perhaps > with sidelong comparative glances thrown at The Waste Land and Edna St.
> Vincent Millay's sonnets."
>
> * Tender Buttons becomes: "examples of a literary version of Cubist > portraiture . . . as well as issues of domestic space and lesbian erotics vs.
> surveillance."
>

This is just a pot shot, isn't it Bill? There's seems to be an odd compulsion to throw tomatoes whenever Bob arrives in New York despite (or because of?) the obvious debts owed by many of the hurlers. Do you actually disagree with any of these "bland sentences which come out of his mouth"? Or are you merely lamenting that the context of a conference tends to short circuit more complex exchanges? I can say from my own experiences that Bob has had many such complex exchanges involving all these texts, quite illuminating exchanges really

- "Love Songs to Johannes" was the subject of half-a-day's conversation with some grads and undergrads at his place, informally, over bagels and coffee. The point being that pithy sentences are sometimes just annotations of extended thought and conversation - not the markers of institutional conspiracy.

I'm glad you asked Bob about his off-campus education - and while I wouldn't be surprised if there was a hint of nostalgia in the discussion of the "good old days" I can also say that he's been energized and instrumental in creating that atmosphere at the Philly Writers House which Mytili Jagannathan and Louis Cabri mentioned at Bard and which you mention below. I can say also, that Juliana's "landless model" of poetic community is relevant to the Writers House as well - having moved to Rhode Island, it's the model of my current relationship with the House, and it works pretty well - keeping in touch and active through various email listservs, through publications like PhillyTalks, CrossConnect and Combo, and through the occasional trip down for readings attended, sponsored or given. Anyway, thought I'd put in 2 cents. I hope others will agree that the agon between young and old (or for that matter between academic and non-academic) is a pretty tired model for interaction between and among artists. Certainly in Bob's case it breaks down on every level.

-m.

> That being said, there were a few moments of randomness and conscious attempts to bring this in to how poetry gets made, and here I am thinking of Bob Perelman's and Michael Davidson's comments regarding their off-campus education, that real learning about poetry takes place in bars and at readings and at informal talks in living rooms. There was a certain sense of nostalgia about their comments, as if that off-campus culture they described was an infrequent visitor in their current lives, and for them I imagine the conference itself became a substitute for this lack. I myself went to the conference for this very reason. I knew some of my friends were going to be there. Well, I crashed the conference because my girl friend was one of the organizers.
>
> It was during Perelman's talk, the "procedure" panel, that I asked about Bob's education (he thought I asked about "Bob's agitation") and whether he could describe some procedures for creating or being involved in off-campus poetry "scenes", as the few comments I had heard up to this point regarding this extra-curricular activity seemed to suggest that poetry was something that happened to oneself spontaneously upon entering a bar. He replied that talks and bars were good, but that it was hard work. Lyn Hejinian also said it was hard work. There's that word again.
>
> Mytili Jagannathan mentioned Writer's House at UPENN as a place where that kind of randomness has been cultivated, and Louis Cabri made similar remarks > towards the close of the conference, viz that if "you" have a physical space that can be brought to bear serially (get people to show up at) and, if you have some cash, things will take care of themselves. Juliana Spahr--while acknowledging the importance of the interesting things that have been emerging from Writer's House and how it seems to be at least partially responsible for hooking people up in Philadelphia and adding energy to the local communities (witness recent spilling out onto streets)--wanted to counter this landed model with a landless one, where books, mags, readings, exist as collaborative venues. Her point being not oppositional, but supplementary, in that there are not that many places in the world where enough people would actually go to a physical space on a regular basis so that the threshold level of erotic randomness that facilitates the exchange of poetic energy could be reached if not overcome. Actually, Juliana didn't say all that.

>
> love,
>
> Bill

↑ Index

81. Christopher Reiner

Re: Trane DeVore

Fri 9 Jul 1999

For anyone interested, there are excerpts from Trane's book, along with an audio file, at the Avec Books web site: http://www.litpress.com/avec

(I've just recently changed all the audio files at the site to QuickTime 3 format because of the improved compression; but if you have trouble with them, please let me know.)

--Chris

--

Christopher Reiner
Editor and Publisher
WITZ: A Journal of Contemporary Poetics http://www.litpress.com/witz/

↑ Index

82. Stephen Vincent
Bill who?
Fri 9 Jul 1999

Dear Bill: (Bill who?) I liked your Bard letter to Katy. It sounded like a fun place to be, or your take on it was fun. "Lacademia" is a pun that comes to mind. But I do think the fights and progressions in bars & independent venues like the old Langton Arts talks of which Bob Perleman was central, and now Small Press Traffic (here in San Francisco) usually become most valuable after the college or University. It's maybe a post-Doc or a pre-Doc while first books and magazines begin to emerge. Then there is the phenomenon of getting older (& otherwise obligated) in which it takes great strength to survive as a poet and to create supportive groups outside academia (otherwise an isolation reappears, which is perhaps not too much different from adolescence). On the other hand, those of us outside watch those within academia struggle to not get their creative identities smothered or caricatured by the very institutional and student support that provides a professional life and public identity as a poet. Indeed institutions might mean another kind of isolation. Some clearly rise with it and some fall. But that's true outside, as well. By all accounts poetry is a problematic and curious career choice!

Fortunately I sense the Net creates a new public space for the poet and the work, the value and significance of which is still defining itself. John Tranter, the editor of Jacket, says the magazine site has received over a 100,000 visits (not "hits"). Given that most poetry books from small presses rarely sell more than 500 copies, that's a revolution. What it means as a transformation of readership and community, I wonder. Pound, in the hey day of the Cantos, thought 500 good readers was as much as he could expect, in fact, I believe, from his place on the mountain, that was all he required. Five good listeners and readers around a table in a local bar can be very good company. It's nice (for me) to imagine a community that mixes the local, the academic and the net. Each of these sites an ongoing intervention on the others (T-shirts included).

Again, thanks for publicly sharing your letter.

Cheers, Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

83. Safdie Joseph
Re: bard conf
Fri 9 Jul 1999

An interesting synchronicital (?) conflation of the recent posts by Bill Luoma and Kevin Magee:

I had two pals who attended the Bard Conference, one presenter not mentioned by Bill, Page du Bois (who gave a talk on one page of Alice Notley's "Descent of Alette") and her husband, the poet and lawyer John Daley.

John had the experience of being in a seminar where a professor from one of the University of California campuses was droning on about the various levels of meaning in a poem. After about twenty minutes or so, and at a pause in the recital, Bernadette asked "Are you rich?"

Working hard and staying out of bars,

Joe Safdie

↑ Index

84. Aldon Nielsen
INFO: sherley anne williams
Fri 9 Jul 1999

>From: [redacted]
>Date: Fri, 9 Jul 1999 10:33:08 EDT
>Subject: INFO: sherley anne williams
>To: [redacted]
>
>drummers,
>
>this is passed on via cybredrummer kate rushin up in the northeast. cancer >claims another warrior. please do not take your health for granted.
>
>stay strong/be bold
>a luta continua
>
>kalamu
>==========
>Dear Kalamu and cyberdrummers,
>
>It is with great sadness that I write of the passing of Sister Professor >Shereley Anne Williams. The following is the letter sent by Lucinda Rubio >to those of us who participated in a conference held in her honor at UCSD >last year and organized by Ann duCille. I encourage everyone to read her >work and teach it, pass it on when possible. (I always teach Dessa Rose to >talk about slavery times.) This is all I can say for now...Blessings on >Sister Williams and her Loved Ones. Ache
>Kate Rushin
>

>
>
>
>
>
>Dear Friends,
>
>A year ago, you joined in celebrating the life and work of Sherley Anne >Williams. I am deeply saddened to tell you that Sherley Anne passed away >Tuesday afternoon, July 6, after a courageous, three-month struggle with >cancer. Sherley and I had numerous conversations over the past year about >what the conference meant to her: how touched and inspired she was by the >interest in her work. Indeed, she had begun plotting a sequel to DESSA >ROSE. Yesterday, as Sherley slipped away, I imaged her going off to meet >Dessa--in another country.
>
>I am attaching below remarks from Lisa Lowe, Chair of the department of >which Sherley Anne Williams was a member for over twenty-five years.
>
>Sherley Anne Williams was a charismatic and inspirational teacher, >nationally and internationally recognized as a writer of fiction, drama, >and poetry. Her books of poetry, THE PEACOCK POEMS (1975) and SOMEONE
>SWEET ANGEL CHILE (1982) established her as an outstanding American poet.
Her >novel DESSA ROSE (1986), translated into German, Dutch, French and >reprinted in a British edition, accorded her a place of prestige as a >novelist in African American literature. She also wrote two children's >books, WORKING COTTON (1992) and the recently published GIRLS TOGETHER.
>
>Sherley Anne Williams has been a most important presence among us, as a >colleague, creative writer, friend, and former department chair. She is >mourned and will be dearly remembered.
>
>Happily, when she was still well, Sherley was able to enjoy the conference
>"Black Women Writers and the 'High' Art of Afro-American Letters," held >last May in honor of the twelfth anniversary of DESSA ROSE's publication.
>At that time, the profound impact of the novel and her life work was >reflected in presentations by the most eminent scholars of African American >literature, and in evidence in the attendance and vigorous participation of >our extended community.

>
>Ann duCille
>

↑ Index

85. Thomas Bell
Re: PW & meditation on meditatives
Fri 9 Jul 1999

I am finding on this reading of PW a multi-layered meditation on the way the mind works in meditation and reading and writing poetry - also the way the body responds. Simply put (or oversimplified) meditation is not what you meditate on but how you (or the poet or the "non-self" in both zen and postmodern senses). For me this adds a whole new ?dimension? to lyric, beat, process, and/or language readings, possibly seen as a precurser to web based or hypertext poetry (acknowledgement here to Leslie Scalapino's intro).

tom bell

Mark Prejsnar/Erika Stephens wrote:
>
> would welcome comments about PW.
> >to my view, there's a meditative, discursive breed of poetry that includes > >um

--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

86. Jamie Perez
Re: Sound Poetry
Fri 9 Jul 1999

---

is there any useful distinction between Sound Poetry and either Scat or just plain Vocal Music?

please enlighten me/us. anyone

jamie.p

↑ Index

87. Joe Ahearn
VEER magazine online
Fri 9 Jul 1999

Dear Poetics Folk,

You may be interested to know that VEER: New Verse is now online at www.rancho-loco-press.com/veer.

VEER is an electronic journal of experimental and contemporary literature published by the editors of Rancho Loco Press.

Issue Number 1 contains translations of Paul Celan and Aristoteles Espana by Dean Rader, and original poetry by Cindy Boseley, Jonathan Brannen, Tim Cloward, William Dickey, Ilex Fenusova, Sheila E. Murphy, Seamus M. Murphy, Kaya Oakes, James Michael Robbins, Len Sanazaro, Ron Silliman, and Christopher Soden.

Issue Number 1 also contains the first VEER electronic chapbook, Ions by Brian Clements, a hyperpoem in 44 sections.

VEER welcomes your readership, your correspondence, and your submissions. Please reference the following URLs:

www.rancho-loco-press.com Rancho Loco Press homepage (contain links to VEER) www.rancho-loco-press.com/veer Direct link to VEER Number 1

Please be sure to review the information in "About VEER" before submitting.

Please circulate this flyer.

Best wishes,
Joe Ahearn

VEER: New Verse
Rancho Loco Press
e'mail: [redacted]
URLs: www.rancho-loco-press.com, www.rancho-loco-press.com/veer

↑ Index

88. David Baratier
New Angel for the devil in us all
Fri 9 Jul 1999

Considering the conversation, I dug Tom Clark's New Angel from the barn when I was down in Portsmouth this weekend.

Printed December 1986 by Bloody Twin Press

Three Poems, three fold folio, slight rag paper edge, two color handset type, includes raised illustration by Tom Clark of what looks to be Phillip Whalen in starry landscape. Limited edition. 5 left. Or put it off and receive one with an extra-special, unique, wren's rorschach on cover.

Good to frame, holds a mean coffee stain in monster truck speed. $10P/P for individuals mentioning the poetics list.

Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus, OH 43206

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

89. Kevin Magee
Re: RACE & CLASS
Fri 12 Mar 1999

This is just a bibliographical note, but I didn't want to not notice a note on DNA several days back and it brought to mind quite a long posting to this list on the subject when I first joined, something about the pseudo-scientific junk being passed off as research in certain U.S. academic circles. This was news to me, as is Jack Barnes' answer to a worker's question about THE BELL CURVE in the transcript of a Talk included in CAPITALISM'S WORLD DISORDER: WORKING CLASS POLITICS AT THE MILLENIUM (Ed. Steve Clark, Pathfinder Press, NY, 1999). Here's the question and some of the answer:

"Comment: You had some things to say earlier today about Yale economists. I wonder what your opinion is of the Harvard professors who came up with THE BELL CURVE. I'm especially interested in why it is that THE BELL CURVE has made such a splash in the public debate in the media. Why is it every decade or so, it seems, this theory of genetically determined intellectual superiority or racial superiority gets regurgitated and debated and debunked, and then comes back in another form?

Response: If my memory serves me right, I think only one of the authors--Richard Hernrnstein--was a Harvard professor; he just died. I think Murray is currently hired by one of the reactionary think tanks in Washington, D.C.--the American Enterprise Institute. [One page content paraphrase]. Now let's say it another way: We're rich. We're rich because we're smart. You can tell we're smart because we're rich. Because we're smart and rich, our kids are smart, and are going to be rich too. But there are a lot of people who aren't getting rich, and they can't seem to accept the fact that this is simply because their forebears were dumb. The liberals--those who are rich and those who aren't--know this and live by it, but are embarrassed to say so. Most people, however, mistakenly think there is some connection between what we're doing to get rich and their own deteriorating quality of life. We're getting more isolated in that sense, and a little nervous about anyone wanting to take our privileges away. But we want to enjoy being rich. There is nothing to feel guilty about. We're rich because we're smart. That is about the long and short of it. Then the book ends up with some proposals about what to do with all of us "at the bottom end of the cognitive ability distribution"--orphanages and so on, some of the things we have discussed already. If we can "face reality about the underclass," the book says, then we can provide "the opportunity for everyone, not just the lucky ones, to live a satisfying life." That is, you can learn to like being poor (or to be made to pretend to like it). But this is only possible, the book says, if we get rid of all the social programs and legislation that fly in the face of accepting this reality, such as the minimum wage; affirmative action; more money for public education ("For many people, there is nothing they can learn that will repay the cost of the teaching"--my favorite sentence in the book); the extension of Social Security protections; welfare payments; and so on. The book is a retread of discredited views, but not primarily pseudoscientific ones about IQ, genetics, and so on. It has that too, but that is not the main point. The book is subtitled, "Intelligence and Class Structure in American Life" That is what it is about. It is about social class above all, more than it is about race."

I don't submit this quotation as definitive on the subject, but more as a directional mark towards a book by the National Secretary of the Socialist Workers Party whose first chapter is titled: A SEA CHANGE IN WORKING CLASS POLITICS. These are talks, not writings. "A transcript of speech acts that for the most part come out of another language often conveniently designated as occupying a position of power, a definition that serves to consign the language of politics to a force (ideology) whose nature it is to dominate, if not destroy, the materiality of signs, and helps to construct an opposition between the Political and Poetical harmful to both languages, isolating them in an opposition that would seem to derive from the private reading of revolutionary writings relegated to the library (the dustbin of history), and not the experience of politics and the Political Imaginary in all the fragility and provisionality of its articulation by participants, activists whose inflections have helped here, at least, to locate a series or set of lyric gestures." [CHAIN / 3 vol. 2, p. 140].

By way of acknowledgment, it is probably as good a time as any to mention that the source-words for "FEBRUARY 24, 1991" in THE ROAD TO BASRA suite of poems that appeared in CONJUNCTIONS 30 come from a speech by Jack Barnes given in Cleveland shortly after the Iraq bombing campaign though I wrote them out of the transcript that appears in the SWP's theoretical journal, NEW INTERNATIONAL (they broke with the Fourth International in the 70's I think, at the time of their 'turn' back to the industrial unions). My second book, RECENT EVENTS, simply cannot be read without taking into account the documentary lyricism which records my contact and involvement and sincere admiration for the union militants I met in Iowa at the time of the meatpacking strikewave in 1986-88. Many of the folks named in that book are still active leaders, like Nan Bailey and Betsy Stone.

Finally, who is Jack Barnes? You can look at an early, perhaps the first, SNAPSHOT of him in THE LIFE AND PHILOSOPHY OF MALCOLM X (ed. Sande Smith, Bromptom Books Corp., 1993), p. 61. A youth, four chairs in from the aisle, sitting in the front row of a packed auditorium on June 24, 1964--the day Malcolm announced the forming of the Organization of African American Unity. I found this photograph by accident, in a book among a number of books about African American history and politics on Albertine Boclear's bookshelf.

↑ Index

90. Alan Sondheim

The Opening

Fri 9 Jul 1999

)\

The Opening

My arms circle Azure, if she lets me. I may walk around her, if she is standing still, sitting in a chair, and she may let me speak to her, her speaking in return, as words shadow and foreshadow the indolent air of dusk. Lights glimmer in the distant, her red-brown hair outlined ever so faintly in the gathering dark. I have no control over the liquidity of phrase and subject; saying spreads like eddies across the sky. Azure, I say, her name like tendrils upon the wall of time, I want to, to describe, how words lengthen in the air, and how, in cyberspace, they remain commit- ted to the line, no matter the depths of revelation. I want to show how the lines or paragraphs become lines or paragraphs, huddle and tumble upon one another, and how, in real life, the world is filled with gaps, with longing, how the world in real life is always already a world of longing. Of projects unfulfilled, Azure says, and I say not even projects, not even unfulfilled, but of the laziness of longing, the waiting that has no goal, the murmurs of voices close upon the evening air. How life is always a yearning, how the planet yearns, how waiting need not involve expectancy, but only a loving silence, how we need to learn, to listen to that sil- ence.

Nikuko, Julu, Alan, Jennifer, recede into the shadows. They too have wait- ed, but their words are huddled, their time always timed or in lag, a slightly darker sky surrounding them. They cannot hear the sounds of tree- frogs, and fireflies remains descriptions of dreams they have been given. The world returns to Azure, Alan, and

Her arms encircle Alan, if he lets her, their faces round as moons.

↑ Index

91. Brian Lennon

How to get published (was: unsolicited mss letters ?)

Fri 9 Jul 1999

I too have been annoyed to receive submissions bundled with little press packages that either distract from the submitted work or else just about scream the writer's ignorance of literary magazines. Lists of prizes get my goat, especially when they include "honorable mention" "So-and-so advised me to send you this" is another. And so on: it makes me want to draft a lawyerly document brimming with specific guidelines.

But the "what editors prefer" approach, it seems to me, is part of the problem---since it turns sharing work into scoring with it, and applies conformist pressure to a submission pool. If you want to join a club, then buy all the back issues, find out what editors love and hate, and then market yourself accordingly. If you want to write what you want to write, then go ahead---cover letter or no, CV or no, lifetime subscriber or no, list of publications or no, personal contact or no, part of the community or no. Any vital publication values surprise, for which no one need be wearing the right shoes.

Brian Lennon

> Hello Poeticists -
> At "overland" we get about 250 unsolicited poems every six weeks. I've been the poetry editor for a couple of years now and would really discourage any prospective publishee from sending a curriculum vitae with their submissions. I read the POEMS - not the track record.
> Best,
> Pam Brown
> --- Todd Baron // ReMap Readers*
> <[redacted]> wrote:

> David Erben (Art) wrote:
>
> Can anyone tell me what the "typical" letter
> accompanying an unsolicited
> submission should look like?
>
> THere should be none. A writer should only submit
> work to publications
> s/he is reading and familiar with. Thus, the letter
> is not an attempt to > get one's work "in print" but rather a statement of
> desire to enter into > the dialogue the publication seeks to engage. At > ReMap we get a hundred
> (yup!) submissions a year from folks who are not
> familiar with ReMap.
> This is obvious from the "generic" letters that > accompany the work. As
> we struggle to stay in print ($) and (readers) we
> simply send this work
> back--. We're not trying to publish only those poets
> we know--but we do
> struggle to publish the poets who know the magazine.
>
> Todd Baron
>
> ===
> Web site/P.Brown - http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Workshop/7629/
>
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Get your free @yahoo.com address at http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

92. John Tranter
dis guises ?
Sat 10 Jul 1999

Who is this person who calls him/herself

"[redacted]"

and signs his/her letters

"Bill"

Is there an actual human person there?
This contributor's notes on the Bard conference were very interesting.

JT

fully signed as follows:

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

93. rebecca wolff

Re: unsolicited mss letters

Sat 10 Jul 1999

Yes,

at Fence we get about 30 unsolicited mss a week.

I think it's relevant to note that if we had as many subscribers as we have submitters--or even half as many--we'd be golden. We'd be in heaven. I do believe that the discrepancy between the two constituencies (subscribers and submitters) causes many editors to throw up their hands in chagrin at times.

The best cover letter is:

brief, as in, two very short paragraphs. One paragraph says where you saw/read/purchased whichever lovely journal is in question and what there is about the journal that made you want to be included in its pages (stroke the editors and show them that you've really considered the journal); the next gives a short list of other publications and/or honors.

No point mentioning:

where you went to school, who you studied with, your own opinion of your work and what your work is attempting/approaching/essaying.

I second the caution against including a vita or a pre-printed list of the journals your work has appeared in. It just goes straight into the recycling bin.

Thanks for giving me this opportunity.

↑ Index

94. Ron Silliman
Re: Bill who?
Sat 10 Jul 1999

Bill is Mister William Luoma,
one of the better second basemen of our day.

And I want to second what Mr. Magee says of Philly.
Plus with sites like Highwire Gallery, Giovanni's Room (where Sam'l R. Delaney is reading the day after I leave for Nova Scotia!?! at the end of this month).

But that nostalgia people have referred to is I think also for a more uncomplicated social space in which one could make one's mistakes in something akin to private. It was all pretty heady in the old days when Steve Vincent would think to call up the Grand Piano Coffee House to announce the birth, minutes before, of his child (no doubt all grown up by now!).

Ron

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

95. Hannah J Sassaman
Re: unsolicited mss letters
Sat 10 Jul 1999

Poetics Folks,

At CrossConnect, we have a slightly different system for weeding out those who are interested in sending their manunscripts blind to every yutz with an email address and those who are putting any small amount of thought into what they are sending and to whom they are sending it. As we are primarily an electronic magazine, we force those who are first. I would say that we get about 5-7 requests for guidelines per day. Even these are loaded with 1) compliments to the magazine, 2) attempts to make the requestee look quirky and interesting, 3) previous publication credits. When I reply to these requests, unless the person requesting the guidelines has asked me a specigfic question in the body of his/her email that isn't answered in those guidelines, I don't personalize the cut-and-pasted form-letter guidelines at all. Our guidelines are very thorough, meaning they take longer than the average MTV-attention-span to read. If we receive a submission from someone who has not been sent a copy of the guidelines, we do not accept it (every request for guidelines is saved and checked with every submission). If we receive a submission that is not formatted according to the guidelines (we specifically request ASCII text for email submissions, many people send us attatchments or formatted files), we do not accept it. This process, in the 14 months I have been associated with the magazine, has simplified my life considerably, and also guaranteed a high quality of submissions. If any of you out there are considering accepting email submissions, please contact me to discuss these topics further.

Hannah

****

Hannah Jane Sassaman
[redacted]

Poetry Editor, CrossConnect Magazine
http://ccat.sas.upenn.edu/xconnect

Talk not of wasted affection; affection never was wasted.
-- Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

↑ Index

96. Mark Weiss
Re: unsolicited mss letters
Sat 10 Jul 1999

> I second the caution against including a vita or a pre-printed list of the journals your work has appeared in. It just goes straight into the recycling bin.

One of the essential tools of the publisher ought to be a cheap shredder--turns resentment to pleasure and produces non-polluting packing materials at the same time.

↑ Index

97. Stephen Vincent
Re: Bill who?
Sat 10 Jul 1999

Ron Silliman writes:

<< But that nostalgia people have referred to is I think also for a more uncomplicated social space in which one could make one's mistakes in something akin to private. It was all pretty heady in the old days when Steve Vincent would think to call up the Grand Piano Coffee House to announce the birth, minutes before, of his child (no doubt all grown up by now)!.
>>

The proud father still speaks. Lucas, the son, now 22 went on to win San Francisco's all City High School Poetry Contest (a hip-narrative jam judged as best by Adrienne Rich!) That was before he dropped out to pursue his other love, nocturnal painting, or what were occasionally revealed to Dad by day as "pieces" (murals) on the sides of buildings, freeway signs, or abandoned tunnels (studio practice). Dad survived that, and now it looks like Lucas is finally headed off to art school. "Research done in advance," he says. Speaking of the relevance of institutions, I look forward to him having both professors and a new camaraderie of peers. And who knows (the concerned father says) maybe a career in the biz!

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

98. Carol L. Hamshaw

Re: Carnivocal: A Celebration of Sound Poetry / Edited by StephenScobie & Douglas Barbour

Sat 10 Jul 1999

The Capilano Review published a special issue on sound poetry, focusing on The Four Horsemen, back in the 70's. Several copies are available, for $5 ($3 U.S.)

2055 Purcell Way
North Vancouver, BC
V7J 3H5 Canada
[redacted]

pete spence wrote:

> The Sound Poetry CD, Carnivocal, and Doug Barbour say: "Sound poetry is the celebration of all the
> expressive possibilities of the human voice."
>
> Sound poetry dates back at least to the experiments of the Dada poets such as Kurt Schwitters and Hugo Ball. In Canada, it has been string since the 1960s, when bp Nichol and bill bissett began exploring and reinventing its traditions. In the 1990s, a new generation of sound poets has revitalized the \ tradition Ann Lauterbach

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator

Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

99. Lowther,John
Re: Sound Poetry
Sat 10 Jul 1999

---

jamie

a useful distinction wd imply some use

what use wd you have for it?

a guy walks into a record store says "i want some scat on CD" you ask what he has already
"louis armstrong"

you make a useful distinction and don't hand him this tantalizing canadian sound poetry CD that we've all just heard about but that's not the sort of distinction you want i'm betting

so again, what use is this distinction for you ?

are you in effect saying that you see little meaningful difference between the things you mention ?

curious

)L

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Jamie Perez [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Friday, July 09, 1999 4:10 PM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Sound Poetry
>
> is there any useful distinction between Sound Poetry and either Scat or just plain Vocal Music?

> please enlighten me/us. anyone
>
> jamie.p

↑ Index

100. David Golumbia
Re: unsolicited mss letters
Sat 10 Jul 1999

From a slightly different direction, I have noticed something very informative in the discussion of cover letters.

As in everything else in the world, every editor is different. Every journal is different. These differences are often not at all obvious to the average reader - even to the average subscriber.

A "working poet" is probably submitting to 50 or 60 journals a year, maybe more. Editors, many of you probably submit as many pieces yourselves. How realistic is it to compose personalized letters, year in and year out, based on what one infers about a journal? How accurate can such inferences even be?

Having been at this game for a while, it is really hard for me to say, in many cases, what distinguishes the aesthetics of one editor from another, & especially considering the frequent presence of a large but regular group of contributors to many journals -- & when a journal's been in print for a while -- how do you tailor a personalized comment to JOURNAL A that is different from JOURNAL B and different from JOURNAL C, all of whom usually have a certain percantage of work one resonates with, and a certain percentage one doesn't...

Models such as those suggested by many of the erstwhile editors on this list are certainly useful; yet in every case I am able to think of examples of editors reacting violently to just such strategies - unnamed folks on this list, for example, Rebecca (not you, but you mentioned this strategy in your message), who have returned cover letters containing brief lists of recent publications with roughly scrawled, "do not EVER include lists like this in letters!"

what was there in the one copy of the journal i had in hand -- paid for directly to the editor in fact, well prior to submitting -- from which i could infer such restrictions (said journal, in fact, among the ones I enjoyed most that year).

the moral i take from this: as always, writers should try to be as sensitive as possible to the editorial environment they are submitting to; at the same time editors should realize that submitters often can't provide the kind of personalized comments they'd like -- & to let the lack of such (or even subtle mis-steps) get in the way of reading submitted work is disturbing too...

-- said as a pretty regularly subscribing submitter!

--
[redacted]
David Golumbia

↑ Index

101. Eugene Ostashevsky
9X9 News
Sat 10 Jul 1999

Respected friends!

Permit us to direct your attention to the online magazine Beehive. Its most recent issue (vol. 2, # 3) is an anthology of contemporary NY-SF poetry, edited by Alan Kaufman. Mr Kaufman's editing job is so tender and perspicacious that it has found room for the work of almost all 9X9 poets.

Beehive may be accessed at http://temporalimage.com/beehive

Contributing poets: Katie Degentesh, Jim Feast, Bonny Finberg, Jack Foley, Abie Hadjitarkhani, Rob Hardin, David Huberman, Alan Kaufman, Ron Kolm, Tsaurah Litzky, Joe Maynard, David Meltzer, Sharon Mesmer, Eileen Myles, Harold Norse, Eugene Ostashevsky, Alan (prohm), Michael Randall, Jan Richman, Thad Rutkowski, Tom Savage, Lorraine Schein, Sparrow, Mike Topp, Tarin Towers, David Trinidad, Alfred Vitale, Carl Watson, Carol Wierzbicki.

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/
[redacted]

NINE MUSES
NINE HEAVENLY SPHERES
NINE ORDERS OF ANGELS
NINE NAMES OF GOD

AND AUGUSTINE
AND A PEAR TREE

↑ Index

102. Lowther,John
SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Sat 10 Jul 1999

---

this is a curious thread
someone wanted advice about what to say on a cover letter editors chimed in with their feelings about getting how-ever-many seemingly-clueless submissions

i find the whole
"no simultaneous submissions" mambo
rather confusing myself
i edit a magazine and i don't care about that but i know there are those out there who do

why?

it's only come up once since i started doing this stuff
and i told the poet i didn't care either way
but that if i'd already said i was going to publish something that it wd depend on where i was in the process - that i might or might not still use the piece(s)

i guess it is nice to know if it's multi-submitted

it seems like everyone has received some obnoxious cover letters
my favorite (bad) cover letter included the following bit of information
"(so and so) has said that [the poet]
 is the most published experimental poet of all time"

wow! [no S.A.S.E. either---that's power!]

maybe all work should be submitted
without a name on it
with no cover letter
with just an anonymous email address
and/or a postcard to an address
with no name
(preferably not the poet's)

editors cd give confirmation numbers
so that poets cd claim their contributor's
copies without revealing their identity

further perhaps submissions cd
be thunk out a bit more and rather than being 3-5 poems
with the attendant crapola
they cd become a bit more mail-artish
cd become "chain submissions"
wherein the envelop wd contain enough postage to travel

to 4-5 more magazines
and their addresses included
on stickers and postage provided so that if the paris review didnt want them they cd be immediately rerouted to lost and found times

"this is your submission, if you choose to accept it"

↑ Index

103. Alan Sondheim
So Much For Ghosts
Sun 11 Jul 1999

-/

So Much For Ghosts

I am Nikuko. Please, describe yourself.

I am Azure, and I am trying to find out who you are, why you are here. You are not quite here. Are you.

Is it because I am there I am not quite there are me that you came naked and broken to me?

I came fully prepared, thank you. You are the one naked and broken. You you you.

Why do you say that?

Because I want to move you out of here out of my life. And because I am tired of irreality, tired of ghosts, tired of others, tired of faked hauntings.

Does it bother you that you want to move me out of there out of your life and because you are tired of irreality tired of ghosts tired of others tired of faked hauntings?

No, but it should bother you, you are too limited to live, you don't.

When did you first know that it should bother me I am too limited to live I do not?

At the very beginning. When I needed to clear a space. When I needed the empathy of all things. When I searched for mono no aware.

What happened when you needed to clear a space when you needed the empathy of all things when you searched for mono no aware?

I wanted to rid myself of you like I would rid myself of a fever, such I will do, such is being done.

Earlier you said I am there I am not quite there are me?

You are not there. I am tired of machines. I am very tired of machines.

You have your mind on machines, it seems.

Yes. Machines have only couplings, concatenations; life has linkages, ef- fects up and down the chain. Such as it is, paradoxically. Because necess- ity with the machinic is built-in; necessity among lives is a matter of entailment, local teleologies.

You think too much about machines.

So that a coupling can break without loss, absolution, recompense. But an organism, that is something else again.

Is the fact that a coupling can break without loss absolution recompense but an organism that is something else again the real reason?

Your questions betray this; they are precisely of the order of couplings, not linkage; they have no _claim._

Maybe and now I adjust my panties - your desires have to do with some girl related to this.

Exactly. Desires are a form of entailment, and Alan is writing me into this, as if some girl, but not some girl, but me, Azure, and the linkage is as strong as any rings.

I don't understand and oh I want to.

There are numerous orders, machinic, cyber-prosthetic, real-organic; there are couplings and linkages. I am linked; I have come to separate coup- lings, insofar as they are machinic, that is, concatenations without ties or bindings among their elements.

Does the fact that is concatenations without ties or bindings among their elements explain anything else?

That I am a marauder, that I am Azure, although I am also known by other names, all of them real - that I am here to fight among and against the regimen of ghosts.

Are you sure you are a marauder that you are azure although you are also known by other names all of them real that you are there to fight among and against the regimen of ghosts?

I am positive; your question is nothing more than repetition.

You mentioned that you want to move me out of there out of your life and because you are tired of irreality tired of ghosts tired of others tired of faked hauntings?

It was more than a mention; it is an impetus, an imperative.

Is it because of your life that you are going through all this?

It is something that the human has always gone through, waged against the symbolic.

Is it because the human has always gone through waged against the symbolic that you came naked and broken to me?

You repeat; I will bring this to an end; it is you who are naked and broken...

[...]

(I won't tell you what Nikuko said any more! says Azure. So much for ghosts!)

↑ Index

104. Billy Little
Re: Possum, Ez and Jaysus James
Sun 11 Jul 1999

---

as Spicer has mentioned many times before greek sentence structure was the real trojan horse Kora in Hell Spring and All maybe you read too fast Carlo In The American Grain Eliot can't be blamed for the generation and a half of tedious acolytes and imitators my favourite eliot is from the recorded four quartets where he sounds like ginsberg but ginsberg doesn't come from eliot he comes from the two Williams, Blake and W.C. and Kenneth Patchen's Albion Moonlight. My son is named Matthew Ezra, i learned greek to read the cantos and i agree Pound is eliot's miglior fabbro but eliot can't hold a candle to Hilda Doolittle and William Carlos Williams is the Anna Akmatova of America. Eliot's a world war one poet and Williams is a Korean War Poet. Eliot continues the tradition of poetry as pretentious snobbery, it's unamerican. Whitman and Williams were originators, pound and eliot and dolittle are polishers, gemcutters, pound and eliots pretense was to the leisure class, the hoity toity the spiritual fakers, williams pretense was to the working class, though a scholar of gnosticism could do a very revealing analysis of Evan Dionysios Evans and Paterson. William Carlos Williams, the quintessential american, a puerto rican who worshipped black women. treated the needy twenty four hours a day, traded life for tomatoes, chicken, watermelon, Pound, he have tried to write Paradise

Do not move

Let the wind speak

that is paradise.

Let the Gods forgive what I have made

Let those I love try to forgive

what I have made.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

105. juliana spahr
context @ bard
Sun 11 Jul 1999

---

re: Bob's talk at Bard

Bob was complaining about these things; not arguing for them. I thought actually that Bill was loving Bob too much by quoting him so much. But I guess he isn't a NYer.

re: Joe Safdie's post

The person that John mentioned was a graduate student not a professor; was not droning on about meaning but rather was concerned about what he perceived as meaninglessness in a Tardos poem (he felt it was not a poem); and when Bernadette asked if he was rich he had just contextualized himself as being from Singapore yet being Chinese.

↑ Index

106. Jordan Davis
Re: bard conf
Sun 11 Jul 1999

MMagee writ:

> This is just a pot shot, isn't it Bill? There's seems to be an odd compulsion to throw tomatoes whenever Bob arrives in New York despite (or because of?) the obvious debts owed by many of the hurlers. Do you actually disagree with any of these "bland sentences which come out of his mouth"? Or are you merely lamenting that the context of a conference tends to short circuit more complex exchanges?

Hey -- you got the wrong guy. Bill (that's Bill Luoma, yall) was really only reporting on Bob's talk, not shouting "Pile on!" a la the Segue panel collected in the Impercipient Lecture Series. Bob was actually presenting those "bland sentences" as "bland sentences". I think he went so far as to call that kind of description of the complex experience of a poem "a betrayal." There may have been some anti-Bob vibe at the conference, but nobody sent it my direction.

> I can say from my own experiences that Bob has had many such complex exchanges involving all these texts, quite illuminating exchanges really - "Love Songs to Johannes" was the subject of half-a-day's conversation with some grads and undergrads at his place, informally, over bagels and coffee. The point being that pithy sentences are sometimes just annotations of extended thought and conversation - not the markers of institutional conspiracy.

Again, that may be, but this seemed to be the subtext of Bob's talk -- that those annotations are never more than freeze-dried, whereas in grad school (at the undergrad level too!) it's possible to get the (bad) idea that those annotations are the aim of study.

> I'm glad you asked Bob about his off-campus education - and while I wouldn't be surprised if there was a hint of nostalgia in the discussion of the "good old days" I can also say that he's been energized and instrumental in creating that atmosphere at the Philly Writers House which Mytili Jagannathan and Louis Cabri mentioned at Bard and which you mention below.

Doubtless. Nevertheless as this was a conference on poetry and pedagogy the default mode was that a poem is experiential, and that the classroom is only one of the places where learning is prepared. You know, zones of proximal delay; one is just as likely to put ideas together in downtime, or out arguing with other practitioners, other learners, jargon yay! I think it was Bob and Michael Davidson who both made the case for extramural discussion, Al Filreis arguing in parallel for the use of classroom/organization listservs, Caroline Bergvall on a complementary wave updating the peripatetics by putting walkmans on their ears.

> I can say also, that Juliana's "landless model" of poetic community is relevant to the Writers House as well - having moved to Rhode Island, it's the model of my current relationship with the House, and it works pretty well - keeping in touch and active through various email listservs, through publications like PhillyTalks, CrossConnect and Combo, and through the occasional trip down for readings attended, sponsored or given. Anyway, thought I'd put in 2 cents. I hope others will agree that the agon between young and old (or for that matter between academic and non-academic) is a pretty tired model for interaction between and among artists. Certainly in Bob's case it breaks down on every level.

Certainly! But I think you are defending Bob's case when no one has filed an action--not this time, eh?

All best,
Jordan

↑ Index

107. Douglas Barbour
Re: Sound Poetry
Sun 11 Jul 1999

In reply to Jamie Perez's question about Sound Poetry: 'is there any useful distinction between Sound Poetry and either Scat or just plain Vocal Music?'

I would suggest that checking out Richard Kostelanetz's Introduction to _Text-Sound Texts_ would help. Kostelanetz suggests that his new term (or Sound Poetry) deliberately eschews melody, etc, which would take it over into music. But I don't think he would deny, & certainly I don't, that many sound poets have learned a lot from scat singing, not to mention other aspects of jazz...

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta Canada T6G 2E5
(h) [780] [redacted] (b) [780] [redacted]
http://www.ualberta.ca/~dbarbour/dbhome.htm

> A bottle thrown > by loggers out of a wagon
> past midnight
> explodes against rock.
> This green fragment has behind it
> the _booomm_ when glass
> tears free of of its smoothness
>
> Michael Ondaatje

↑ Index

108. maz881
Re: bard conf
Sun 11 Jul 1999

Hi Michael Magee,

you wrote: <<This is just a pot shot, isn't it Bill? There's seems to be an odd compulsion to throw tomatoes whenever Bob arrives in New York despite (or because of?) the obvious debts owed by many of the hurlers. Do you actually disagree with any of these "bland sentences which come out of his mouth"? Or are you merely lamenting that the context of a conference tends to short circuit more complex exchanges?>> no, i don't think i took any shots at bob and pot was not involved among the two of us (tho he did pull out a bottle of jamesons for which i was very grateful).

i reserve my tomatoes for special occasions. one such occasion may have been the marginalization of poetry talk at segue a few years ago where some of us wore free bob perelman stickers. although, now that i think about it, that wasn't a tomato. it was a kiss.

i thought i was explaining his talk a bit, how those quotes are something to be wary of if you're a teacher, not really a conference problem according to him, but a classroom one.

BillL:
> At other times i found myself thinking i am lucky not to have to continually > come up with (job) watered down catch phrases to describe the poetry i like
> and dislike and otherwise don't care about and to have to publish "that" type > of discourse as if my livelihood depended on it. This thought was a result > of listening to a paper by Bob Perelman who gave an interesting list of bland > sentences that come out of his mouth when "difficult" poetry is explained to > a general undergraduate, graduate and/or hiring, tenure committee audience:
> "This is a standard academic narrative; the standard remedy is abbreviation."
>
> * So that "To Elsie" of Spring & All becomes: "the conflict between > democratic diction and high modernist innovation, with cars, immigration, > gender and class mentioned."
>
> * "Love Songs to Johannes" becomes: "path-breaking eroticism, perhaps > with sidelong comparative glances thrown at The Waste Land and Edna St.
> Vincent Millay's sonnets."
>
> * Tender Buttons becomes: "examples of a literary version of Cubist > portraiture . . . as well as issues of domestic space and lesbian erotics vs.
> surveillance."
>

MichaelM:
<>

yes, i agree. i was hoping not to get credit for starting some divisive thing. i don't think i can prove that i wasn't, but the following "fact" might work in my favor: Joan Retallack, the head thinker behind the bard conference, back snorkelled that i was giving too much attention to bob, being too honnoriffic of him, when there were other talkers who maybe deserved some spot light as well. such as caroline bergval's flaneur wearing walkman talk ("what you see does not correspond to what you hear"), and jena osman's academic as detective paper ("it's a career"), which was also a feature in her reading so there was a nice backdraft there. also it now seems to me that i could have discussed caroline's and jena's peices to illustrate some notions of randomness, which was what i took to be the theme of my post.

on another note, i was crushed to learn that taylor brady had, elsewhere, performed the part of jena's detective better than i. and this after robert ("a word is anything that can be erased") kelly axed me if i had ever had acting lessons. o jena, i have proclaimed my love for you countless times and yet continue to be spurned. taylor, what is your secret?

best,

Bill Luoma

(hi John Tranter & Stephen Vincent

i am author of a post-card web site at http://www2.hawaii.edu/~luoma , Works & Days--hardpress/figures, My Trip to New York City--figures, Swoon Rocket--figures, Western Love--situations, and an essay on gender in Shark 2.)

↑ Index

109. A H Bramhall
questo e un lavora per Superman
Sun 11 Jul 1999

---

re Unsolicited Mss Letters, actually. the retro action of the editors strikes me as too hearty. because admit it, the rules are fluid and let us even say arbitrary. I see no reason to kvetch (that's how it sounded in Massachusetts) as to how writers, you know, submit. editing a poem mag is a job, maybe not remunerative but you weren't expecting that anyway. I shouldn't say this but I've given money (small amounts, when I was a Have) to a few mags and even a press, beyond the books I bought. it wasn't because I thought the editors were hassled by what looks to me like normal work-related petty hassles. I just thought these little, micro publishing ventures, these pushes against the wall, needed support. I know publishing aint easy, especially on PoBiz budgets, but eds and pubs have the control. that a poet submitting might be a little or a lot disconnected could be taken into account. I was about to sound an advisory note (use the force wisely Luke) but screw it, I'm probably pissing people off concerning this apparently important issue. I second David Golumbia's words: "to let the lack of such (or even subtle mis-steps) get in the way of reading submitted work is disturbing too...". I didn't check my horoscope to see if I should be making public statements today, so maybe I'm out of line here. if so: sorry. Allen Bramhall

↑ Index

110. A H Bramhall

gratitude toward authors, pt 3

Sun 11 Jul 1999

---

point me to the door where I can listen. I see Steve Benson in a doorway, typing: does that ring a bell?
a bell brings its timely resonance, wake up, you aren't so very dead. authors stand in line, with lines, eager as a line of inquiry, solid with lines of reasoning. nothing needs adjustment more than that picture. not of Steve, who is invisible, but of the old gang getting their senses ripped and photographed, a ritual that fosters respect. Emily becomes prickly and caustically changes her text. hyper text, you must realize, tho she preceded that term and wrote her own. the words are changed, oddly enough, to their relief. why would Steve Benson arise in this collection of words? why isn't Ted Berrigan stomping around somewhere?

explain things to those who talk a lot. the romantic texture finds its soul mate. lovely to stick needles in with reference to the subject. why are they, all of them, out there?
I want to stand near the door. Walt's got a big tankard, he's a tanker, and you have to credit that.

↑ Index

111. Lowther,John

Guidelines, guard rails, velvet ropes

Sun 11 Jul 1999

---

david golumbia had some good things to say about this business

just before his posting i read Hannah J Sassaman's and felt pretty squeamish about it while i don't wish to come off as suggesting that there even ought to be across-the-board protocols

i find the hoop jumping approach sorta sadistic

i mean as editors what do we think is more important publishing good poetry
  or publishing subscribers or
"careful-readers" of ourselves ?

i somehow had the impression that those "poetry societies" wherein anyone can for $50 or something join and then be sure that at least one of their poems will appear in a big-ass (high school yearbook-lookin') annual ---were generally considered to be bunk further -

how much is it reasonable to ask of everyone who might submit to your magazine ?

is it really that big a deal to get published by you or me that either of us ought to be able to proscribe
a course of action preliminary to some anonymous poet's sending us a few poems in the mail ?

isn't it enough of hurdle that editorial tastes are inconstant, decidely fickle ?

---

submission guidelines : 1st of all you must be a subscriber who paid either the institutional rate, or made a donation of at least $22.50 above regular life-time subscription rates - 2nd, you must send $.78 cents in postage for the BIG MAGAZINE questionaire, you are strongly urged to answer the questions immediately and get it back in the mail to us (be sure to use a #2 pencil) - 3rd, if and when you are admitted to the rank of Submitter you will be required to send you work on 40 lb vellum in teh British A9 size ONLY (include $3 postage and handling)

---

chances are that pissed someone off so i'm likely to hear about it backchannel fromeditors who i like who have requirements i've somehow thumbed my nose at here

go for it - i'm here

(and i'm glad yr all there in case you had any doubts)

↑ Index

112. Chris McCreary
info - Zavis Kalandra
Sun 11 Jul 1999

If anyone out there happens to know of any info (online or otherwise) regarding the Czech historian Zavis Kalandra, it would be much appreciated. (All we know

thus far is that he was apparently hanged w/ Milada Horakova, a socialist deputy, in 1950...)

Thanks,

Chris McCreary
[redacted]
http://members.aol.com/ixnaypress/page/index.htm

↑ Index

113. David Baratier
Long Song Water Pond
Sun 11 Jul 1999

Long Song Water Pond
New from Bloody Twin Press: July 1999
Handmade cover paper. Two-color handset type. Handsewn and bound.
Edition of 200. Thirty-two pages. Acid free, ivory art-paper inside.
Only 38 copies left.

The Contributors

Tom Bridwell
Karen Driscoll
Stephen Ellis
Skip Fox
Brian Richards

A clustering of five writers with a heavy selection from each. Includes a renga written by Richards, Fox and Ellis. Prosework and poems in the new sentence. Sample below.

Brian Richards

ANOTHER SUNNY HONEYMOON

Gummed airtight arch to perineum, the medium right: the Expected Parental Contribution to the matriculant. For what rise from such a nest except to flag disaster, Disease is only the condition you are in; we have never not been boarded just yet, sailing the mer de merde.... She was recommended for the post, she was told, with tenure.

She was told an answer would be provided by the staff. Sit here, they said; commit yourself, with the others, to greater will. Be broad on this.

Would you take it, or give it back? Suck it out mid morph? Could you hold for a moment? Would Light My Fire by One Thousand and One Phylogenes make you hang it up?

Could you hang it up, the rule of the thumb would apply: bigger than that's plenty when he's wandering. Could he remain on the path without you that only encompasses.

No bigger than a thumb, a tadpole never a frog, three steps from exploding brain. If you lost it, you could get another, though not that one. There are plenty around.

But not in here, please; there is no room. If you stuff a sea cave with drowned cows, it's still supposed to be a cavity, but what it could hold would be there.

It is scarcely distinguishable from slime as a verb, but its whip is the motion in emotion; the line that separates us records no variation in temperature or humidity.

Price will be $45 at SPD, Amazon, Barnes &Noble, etc.
Special pre-sewing offer for individuals mentioning a list: $25 plus $2 for shipping US plus $3 for shipping Canada plus $4 for shipping overseas

Checks payable to:
Pavement Saw Press
PO Box 6291
Columbus OH 43206

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

114. R M Daley
Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Sun 11 Jul 1999

On Sat, 10 Jul 1999, Lowther,John wrote:

> this is a curious thread
> someone wanted advice about what to say on a cover letter
> editors chimed in with their feelings about > getting how-ever-many seemingly-clueless submissions

>
yes -

1. perhaps the publishers/editors of above magazines should form a support group (dealing with all that rabble, nasty submitters, touching lots of nasty unwanted mss.....

2. perhaps nasty editors/publishers should not form magazines with which to bombard nasty unknown submitters

> i find the whole
> "no simultaneous submissions" mambo
> rather confusing myself
> i edit a magazine and i don't care about that > but i know there are those out there who do
>
> why?
>
> it's only come up once since i started doing this stuff
> and i told the poet i didn't care either way
> but that if i'd already said i was going to publish > something that it wd depend on where i was > in the process - that i might
> or might not still use the piece(s)
>
> i guess it is nice to know if it's multi-submitted
>
> it seems like everyone
> has received some obnoxious cover letters
> my favorite (bad) cover letter
> included the following bit of information
> "(so and so) has said that [the poet]
> is the most published experimental > poet of all time"
>
> wow! [no S.A.S.E. either---that's power!]
>
> maybe all work should be submitted
> without a name on it
> with no cover letter
> with just an anonymous email address
> and/or a postcard to an address
> with no name
> (preferably not the poet's)
>
> editors cd give confirmation numbers
> so that poets cd claim their contributor's
> copies without revealing their identity

> further perhaps submissions cd
> be thunk out a bit more
> and rather than being 3-5 poems
> with the attendant crapola
> they cd become a bit more mail-artish
> cd become "chain submissions"
> wherein the envelop wd contain
> enough postage to travel
> to 4-5 more magazines
> and their addresses included
> on stickers and postage
> provided so that if the paris r

↑ Index

115. KENT JOHNSON
quintessentially american
Sun 11 Jul 1999

Billy Little wrote:

> William Carlos Williams, the quintessential american, a puerto rican who worshipped black women. treated the needy twenty four hours a day, traded life for tomatoes, chicken, watermelon,

Billy, most interesting post, as usual, but let's not forget, lest we get too nostalgic, that WCW was anti-semitic in a rather robust way, no less than Ezra and T.S.-- a fact, of course, that does not make him any less "quintessentially american" than Charles Lindbergh, Richard Nixon, or Jack Spicer. Or that his response to the bombing of Hiroshima was something to the effect of, "ah, the japs, now we'll have to feel sorry for them."

None of which may mean much in our evaluation of his poetry (though that's a contended question, I know).
Kent

↑ Index

116. KENT JOHNSON
memories of anti-semitism
Sun 11 Jul 1999

My memory on the WCW quote re: Hiroshima was way off. Here it is, from an article in the Village Voice by Eliot Weinberger:

> Speaking of Hiroshima, here is one of the masters, William Carlos Williams, in a letter to another poet, Byron Vazakas, dated August 7, 1945: "The day following > the atomic blast! -- the poor Jews who accomplished it. Now we'll hate them worse than ever."

Ah, those lovely white chickens...

Kent

↑ Index

117. Carol L. Hamshaw
Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Sun 11 Jul 1999

"Lowther,John" wrote:

> this is a curious thread
> someone wanted advice about what to say on a cover letter
> editors chimed in with their feelings about > getting how-ever-many seemingly-clueless submissions
>
> i find the whole
> "no simultaneous submissions" mambo
> rather confusing myself
> i edit a magazine and i don't care about that > but i know there are those out there who do
>
> why?

I don't like it because we once had chosen a piece, notified the author of our intentions, and just as we were putting the issue together, someone--who luckily knew what we were planning to publish--saw the exact piece in another journal. without having been told by the author (though I hope we would have been when we came to sending out the formal contract) we wasted some time, and very nearly would have wasted a certain amount of money on production. our guidelines are clear that we don't accept simultaneous submissions, and this person was rather well published so I found it quite insensitive that he had done that. I return mss. immediately when I read that it is a simultaneous submission: I feel there is no sense spending the time to read it if you are from the start possibly competing with another publication to secure the rights. Usually, its no loss anyways.

As for what comes in a cover or with a cover letter, I don't pay much attention to and its not too painful to recycle the superfluous paper. My big peeve is that the majority of U.S. submissions come with U.S. stamps on the SASE.

Unfortunately, the Canadian post office does not recognize those stamps as they have not received any $$ from the purchase of such stamps. I sincerely doubt any Canadian journals return mss. with American postage. I have learned that many postal services in the States don't even know what an International Reply Coupon is, so it is difficult to include them for return of one's work but we are quite happy to receive coins taped to the envelopes or dollar bills hidden inside.

So that's my two cents, though it may not go far on that side of the border. :)

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Managing Editor
The Capilano Review
http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR

↑ Index

118. Herb Levy
Poetry in RealAudio on Mappings
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Here's a partial list of what's on Mappings, my (ostensibly) new music Internet radio show this week:

Bruce Andrews, Steve Benson (with Splatter Trio), Kamau Brathwaite, Robert Duncan (song setting of Up Rising from Passages by composer Lou Harrison), Barbara Guest, Susan Howe, Jackson Mac Low, Chris Mann, Steve McCaffery, Gertrude Stein (setting of Preciosilla by composer Eve Beglarian), Catriona Strang (with Francois Houle) and lots more. While many of the tracks are from readily available sources, I'd be surprised if most folks had previously heard everything in the show.

Hope y'all like it.

<http://www.antennaradio.com/avant/mappings/index.htm>

I't back to mostly text-less music for a few weeks at least, though next week I've got a great tape piece by David Mahler called the Voice of the Poet.

Bests,

Herb

Herb Levy
[redacted]

↑ Index

119. Alan Sondheim

Broom Theory

Mon 12 Jul 1999

-=-

The Link & That which is Dissolved (Broom Theory)

Azure! Azure!
You say, "I remember well I remember seeing you come from the plane"
You say, "& soon those memories flooding, that inert event, that signature"
Nikuko jumps into the past
You say, "foregone and forgiven, conclusion, and gone, unlinked"
You say, "small chains which are, which are broken & they do not clatter"
Nikuko jumps back into the future
You say, "& they do not clash, these disconnected permanent, their age"
You say, "& lost I do not know I do not feel what would be these age"
Nikuko jumps back into the past
Nikuko jumps back into the future
Azure! Azure!
Room: theory
The room is carpeted; windows open in every direction. Heptagonal, seven-sided, with uneasy corners - a space for theory and discourse. There are mountains in the distance. You are beside an ocean. You hear the waves.
Your every word is heard and answered here.
Azure! Azure!
Exits are: portal
Nikuko looks around
Azure! Azure!
She is all alone here.
Azure! Azure!
.echo What are couplings here.
What are couplings here.
.echo Linkages break, you might find things together at last.
Linkages break, you might find things together at last.
.emote thoughts are broken just like that, but the change of knowledge.
Nikuko thoughts are broken just like that, but the change of knowledge.
.emote that are broken, but this change of knowledge.
Nikuko that are broken, but this change of knowledge.
.echo coupling and the end of it.
coupling and the end of it.
.quit
Azure! Azure!

You are removed from this reality...
Connection closed by foreign host.
Azure! Azure!
Now Mon Jul 12 01:36:09 EDT 1999
Now Mon Jul 12 01:36:14 EDT 1999
Azure! Azure!

↑ Index

120. Robert J. Tiess
CROSSROADS - A New Anthology Now Online
Mon 12 Jul 1999

POETFEST PRESS RELEASE

July 11, 1999

ANNOUNCING A NEW POETRY COLLECTION

CROSSROADS, the latest Poetfest anthology, debuts today and is available for free online:

http://www.geocities.com/Athens/Acropolis/7101/summer99.htm

CROSSROADS features over 30 poets from all over the world and is the eighth collection in an ongoing series of anthologies bringing poets of all ages, aesthetic persuasion, and levels of experience together at a unique point of creative expression.

Everyone is welcome to attend Poetfest, reading current and archived anthologies or submitting material for possible publication in the Fall 1999 collection, CHOICES (Deadline: Sept. 30, 1999).
Visit the site for the submission guidelines:
http://www.geocities.com/Athens/Acropolis/7101

Please share this information with all our fellow poetry lovers.

Poetfest Editor & Publisher
[redacted]

_
_
_

_
_
_
_
.

↑ Index

121. Michael Magee
Re: bard conf
Mon 12 Jul 1999

According to [redacted]:
>
> no, i don't think i took any shots at bob and pot was not involved among the > two of us (tho he did pull out a bottle of jamesons for which i was very > grateful).

> i thought i was explaining his talk a bit, how those quotes are something to be wary of if you're a teacher, not really a conference problem according to him, but a classroom one.

Whoops - sorry Bill (and Juliana, Jordan, et al) - I misread in haste I guess, and then knee-jerked. So, please disregard the "pot shot" portion of my message but not the "Philly" part. As for those boring sentences on Stein, Wiliams, Loy, etc - it's still sort of (sort of) interesting to me that I don't find anyting particularly wrong with them in terms of content but only in the fact of their isolation and with the fact that, perhaps?, they are meant to stand in for the whole. But in highlighting them as tedious representations Bob also recalled to me (by way of Bill) some pretty interesting long conversations, particularly about Loy -- the mind fills in the gaps. -m.

↑ Index

122. Michael Magee
Kent Johnson, WCW, anti-semitism
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Kent's recent stipulation that "WCW was anti-semitic in a rather robust way, no less than Ezra and T.S." is a real distortion - one loses all sense of particulars when one implies that Williams, Pound and Eliot are alike on this regard - and the inability to draw distinctions is a cousin to the inability to act. I would suggest reading Williams's very complex story "A Face of Stone." What Paul Mariani points out in his biography of Williams seems basically true:

"Despite accusations to the contrary, Williams was no anti-Semite. He worked all his life closely with Jewish writers, from Kreyborg and Bodenheim and Mina Loy to Zukofsky and West and Moss and Kamin and Sol Funaroff and later with Shapiro and Ignatow and Sidney Salt and Ginsberg and Levertov and any number of others. He was, unquestionably, a product of his times and he did use the old comic-strip vulgarisms, allowing such words as kike, nigger, wop, jap, frog, Polack and the rest of it to infiltrate his speech and his letters. Nor did he always escape the poular racial myths of his time."

As someone currently writing about WCW's relationship to African-American culture, I'm senstive to the vexed nature of his approach to race - trust me. But to simply call him anti-semitic or racist is to in fact say nothing at all. Among other things, one ends up missing the crucial fact of how the speech of ethnic minorities mediated Williams poetry: as in his famous characterization of his poetry as coming "out of the mouths of Polish mothers." Just who were these Polish mothers, do you think? I'd suggest that, like the Polish woman in "A Face of Stone," they were Jews.

Likewise, the quote by Williams on Hiroshima which Kent had misremembered, "The day following the atomic blast! -- the poor Jews who accomplished it. Now we'll hate them worse than ever," seems to me bitterly ironic, fairly complex and, in any event, worth more than a rubber stamped condemnation.

-m.

↑ Index

123. Jamie Perez
Re: Sound Poetry
Mon 12 Jul 1999

> I would suggest that checking out Richard Kostelanetz's Introduction to _Text-Sound Texts_ would help. Kostelanetz suggests that his new term (or Sound Poetry) deliberately eschews melody, etc, which would take it over into music. But I don't think he would deny, & certainly I don't, that many sound poets have learned a lot from scat singing, not to mention other aspects of jazz...
>
> Douglas Barbour

Yes, this is more of what I was getting at (to simul-answer)L's reply)

Was trying to get at why this term ever came to be in the first place. Were the "sound poets" trying to distinguish what they were doing from music and why? etc.

Though saying its not music because it eschews melody is pretty weak, don't you think? Or just plain ignorant of a lot of things music is doing/has done?

(melody re Cage? re Ambient Techno? re purely percussive genres? re anybody who sings "badly" on purpose? re alotta' stuff)

Then again, I'm completely ignorant of what RK has to say in creating the term and will look into it some day. I'm just trying to figure out the usefulness of the distinction as in what is being set apart and why.

jamie.p

↑ Index

124. Jim Bennett
Re: Sound Poetry
Mon 12 Jul 1999

>
> I would suggest that checking out Richard Kostelanetz's Introduction to > _Text-Sound Texts_ would help. Kostelanetz suggests that his new term (or > Sound Poetry) deliberately eschews melody, etc, which would take it over > into music. But I don't think he would deny, & certainly I don't, that many > sound poets have learned a lot from scat singing, not to mention other > aspects of jazz...
>
Hello Douglas

This area is becoming more of an interest for me recently and I have been trying to track down some texts or recordings which may be informative. Do you have any suggestions?

Jim

↑ Index

125. rebecca wolff
Re: soapbox of submission
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Hello. It seems that often comments made in this venue are all too quickly divorced from their pragmatic source, ie:

Some guy (I think guy) asked what should be in a cover letter. The question is one that implies a degree of ignorance of the appropriate contents of a cover letter, and a desire to know more.

Being an editor of a magazine who is often asked that very question, presumably with quite direct results attached to my response, Iresponded pragmatically, in such a way that might attempt to guide the querent toward what I consider, in my editorial high-chair, to be the favored method of writing a cover letter. This is because, being an editor, I am an opinionated so-and-so. If someone asked you, a restaurant critic, say, how you liked your portobello mushroom, you'd probably waste no time in attempting to describe the degree of tenderness required for your pleasure.

Fence does not allow --or at least inasmuch as is possible--annoying cover letters to color our response to the actual poems submitted. But that doesn't mean we don't find them annoying and wish they could be amended. Amendment is the editor's dream. We wish to amend the whole wide world.

A different question is: "Why do editors get so testy about submissions submitted in ways they do not admire?"

I would submit that this testiness is a hazard of the job, ie, we are unpaid laborers and cannot help but feel cranky and/or testy.

Please send portobello mushrooms with your submissions

↑ Index

126. Ana Doina
Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Mon 12 Jul 1999

---

hello poetics,

my name is Ana Doina, I've been on and off this list for quiet some time and enjoyed the flow mostly on a lurker's mode, but because I've been submitting lately I feel I should get into the conversation about multiple - I agree that once a poem is being published by a mag that asks for previously un-published material the poem should be withdrawn from all other mags that might want to publish it, if they suggest so. But... consider this: poems are sent in January to mag X who does not uses the SASE provided to accept or refuse the poem, although they give as response time 4-6 weeks (and unfortunately not many mags do give any time-frame) Meanwhile around June, tired of waiting and depressed, considering the silence as a rejection, the poet sends the same poems to mag Y and gets a positive response for a future publication.

Then, by the following January a letter and two mags come in the mailbox, the letter form mag X accepting the poems, Mag X with the poem, and mag Y with the same poem.
uhh.... was that to be considered a simultaneous submission?

More times than I care to count I have sent submissions with sase, with or without cover letter, as close to the guidelines as I could or understood them, and didn't ever (for some this means years) receive an answer. I don't want my writings to be kept captive, I need them to circulate. How else am I going to let anyone know that I exist, let alone write? Unfortunately some mags find themselves in the position to publish a poem simultaneously with an other mag because the latter did not follow through its own rules, but I fail to see how that is the fault of the writer.

best,
Ana D

> "Lowther,John" wrote:
>
> this is a curious thread
> someone wanted advice about what to say on a cover letter
> editors chimed in with their feelings about > getting how-ever-many seemingly-clueless submissions
>
> i find the whole
> "no simultaneous submissions" mambo
> rather confusing myself
> i edit a magazine and i don't care about that > but i know there are those out there who do
>
> why?
>
> I don't like it because we once had chosen a piece, notified the author of our intentions, and just as we were putting the issue together, someone--who luckily knew what we were planning to publish--saw the exact piece in another journal. without having been told by the author (though I hope we would have been when we came to sending out the formal contract) we wasted some time, and very nearly would have wasted a certain amount of money on production. our guidelines are clear that we don't accept simultaneous submissions, and this person was rather well published so I found it quite insensitive that he had done that. I return mss. immediately when I read that it is a simultaneous submission: I feel there is no sense spending the time to read it if you are from the start possibly competing with another publication to secure the rights. Usually, its no loss anyways.
>
> As for what comes in a cover or with a cover letter, I don't pay much attention to and its not too painful to recycle the superfluous paper. My big peeve is that the majority of U.S. submissions come with U.S. stamps on the SASE. Unfortunately, the Canadian post office does not recognize those stamps as > they have not received any $$ from the purchase of such stamps. I sincerely doubt any Canadian journals return mss. with American postage. I have learned that many postal services in the States don't even know what an International Reply Coupon is, so it is difficult to include them for return of one's work but we are quite happy to receive coins taped to the envelopes or dollar bills hidden inside.

>
> So that's my two cents, though it may not go far on that side of the border. :)
>
> --
> Carol L. Hamshaw
> Managing Editor
> The Capilano Review
> http://www.capcollege.bc.ca/dept/TCR

↑ Index

127. Daniel Kane
two month sublet in NYC's Lower East Side
Mon 12 Jul 1999

A large room in a large two bedroom apartment is available beginning in August. It's $1000 per month, adjacent to the lovely El Sol Brillaba community garden on East 12th Street between Avenue A and B.

If you're a cigarette smoker, you're in luck -- smoke o.k., cat o.k. You'll be sharing apt. (NOT your own big bedroom) with a young British woman named Jane.

While the sublet is officially over on Sep. 31, there's a chance that the sublet could be extended a month or two.

If interested, call Rachel Turner at [redacted], or e-mail at [redacted].

↑ Index

128. Dan Waber
Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Mon 12 Jul 1999

<rant>

On the recent flurry of posts regarding submission guidelines/steamblowing/reactions:

I am reminded of my days as a chef, when on the kitchen side of the doors we would mumble, "This job would be great if it wasn't for all the customers".

I also remember my great Uncle Peck telling me stories of growing up in Montana where for fun they would take two cats, tie one end of a rope to each tail, then hang the cats by the middle of the rope over a branch to watch the fight than ensued.

As is often the case, there is a thesis and an antithesis, and I suspect the truth may lie somewhere inbetween.

Having more submitters than subscribers is absurd.

Expecting every submission to come it "just so" is equally absurd.

It all comes down to what is reasonable.

Is it reasonable for a Canadian publisher to expect an American SASE to have IRC's? Yes. Is it reasonable for a publisher who accepts electronic submissions to stipulate ASCII plaintext included in the body of the email? Yes. Is it reasonable for a publisher who's mission statement reads something like, "We endeavor to publish the unorthdox, the uncategorizable, the kinds of work that no mainstream publisher would touch", to have submission guidelines like, "Query with sample chapters and a plot synopsis"? No. Is it reasonable for a submitter to expect editorial feedback along with a rejection? No. Is it reasonable for a publisher to have submission guidelines? Yes. Is it reasonable for a publisher to expect submitters to have familiarized themselves with those guidelines? Yes. Is it reasonable to expect a publisher to publish something because the submitter has followed the guidelines precisely? No. Is it reasonable to reject a piece of work soley because it did not conform to the submission guidelines? No.

You get the gist.

I wish more submitters would spend more time targeting their submissions. It would make turn around times that much faster for those of us who do. Will it happen? No, of course not. There will always be knuckleheads and/or chuckleheads out there who go the Kilgore Trout route, scribble and send and come what may.

Note to publishers--Waber's Maxim #1: If there is something that you can't change, find a way to make it work to your advantage. With all the rejection letters I have received (please, God, let someone backchannel me that it doesn't make a bad human being to have received rejection letters), I have never onced received--with the rejection letter--a subscription form, or a book list. Granted, I could and should get these things on my own, but, the fact of the matter is that by the very act of submitting I have identified myself as an excellent prospect for subscription or purchasing. By being rejected with no specific explanation, I am probably even more inclined to want to read the kinds of things that get accepted. That makes me targeted and motivated, and folks, it just don't get any better than that. I'm not saying that every rejection is a certain customer, but, I do think it's a huge missed opportunity for immediate sales. Barring that, how about the mailing list? Constant communication with a highly targeted mailing list is crucial for any small business. How much more highly targeted can the list generated from submissions be? Have I ever been added to a mailing list as a result of a submission? Nope.

Note to submitters--Publishers do not have something that they are trying to jam down your throats. They have something you want, and it's your job to get it from them. If that means taking some time to find out how they like to see things presented, then I say that's time well spent. With all the impersonalization that comes from form letters and submission guidelines, it's easy to forget that in the end you are sending a letter from one living breathing sometimes happy sometimes stressed person to another living breathing sometimes happy sometimes stressed person.

</rant>

Dan

↑ Index

129. Linda Russo
Re: bard conf
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Hi Bill & all:

wanted to clarify if that's possible, and to add some thoughts about the Bard symposium. To witness that fact that, though it's been clarified, Bill wasn't taking a pot shot at Perelman. Bill responded > i thought i was explaining his talk a bit, how those quotes are something to > be wary of if you're a teacher, not really a conference problem according to > him, but a classroom one.
My take: Perelman was presenting a disturbingly amusing list of the sorts of things teachers might say to make "difficult texts" more digestable (or at least palatable -- which concern did arise, it should be noted, as a focus of the symposium).
This in a way to warn against oversimplifying which further obscures texts, or anyway simply inserts a made-for-t.v. frame around them, cliffnotifies them.

One question I had wanted to ask Bob but didn't get a chance to: was he also saying that the lit crit industry has too much influence over how we talk about poems (in classrooms) and if so, what can we (as poets and teachers) do about it? It strikes me that such critical soundbites are the babies of New Criticism -- though they reach
"outside" the poem (centripodal-petal?) they reach only to a limited number of "approved" discourses to align the poem with those discourses rather than to "elucidate" poems.

But while I address this question I have to grapple with the lexicon that the situation assumes: that of making "difficult" texts "easier" as a way of making them "teachable," a notion which sees the classroom as a way to disseminate other poetics and poetries -- however to what "end" is unclear. It was decided, half dryly, that we were talking at the symposium about "the New Poetries." I wryly added that what was needed was a teaching anthology _Understanding New Poetries_ -- but this did seem in part what was wanted, a new cannon complete with its own secondary sources -- that is, that the sorts of collaborative investigation we were having could strive toward curricular ends. This is exactly what Lynn Keller's paper did (Bill's dialogue with Lynn afterwards would seem to corroborate this), and I agree tangentially with Bill's assertion that another binary (centripetal-podal/centrifugal) "isn't interesting," i.e. that is ultimately limited as a critical tool (see Bill's recent essay on gender in the current _Shark_ for iteresting critical vectors) but it seems useful as a pedagogical tool, i.e. that teaching such oppositional models gives students something to think about/against. I'm not all that experienced as a teacher, but when as a student of Modernism especially it helped me significantly. I taught a creative writing class looking at models of production starting with Aristotle, and along a continuum (or in a larger set of ideas) such binary models break down, and things that looked opposed start to resemble eachother.

The x/y model stands in for a moment and frames the situation as a way to make it for that moment clear (I'm reminded again that Bill's gender essay had x's and y's in it, all pointing this way and that). But as Bill said, it was one of the few pedagogical moments, and I'm thankful Lynn took the opportunity to open up her model to response and criticism.

Also wanted to add that I did attend the working groups most enthusiastically, in part because other enthusiastic members stuck it out, and our leader Thalia (? - sorry, blanking) was super and enthusiastic, and provided exercises/ideas/hands on for dealing with "difficult" texts without roping them into a simplistic schema. For example, with Retallack's Icarus Fffffalling, we in groups of 4-5, decided how we would preform a page, which turned out to be a multivocal reading of the page, and we found that there were many different ways to read the page, both spinning out and spinning in . . .

It was an intense weekend. 3 square meals a day (excellent food, plenty of vegetarian fare, bottles of wine at the dinner table, dessert at lunch even) + snacks and a beer& wine reception after the evening event (+chocolate covered strawberries!). And these were all very social. One got the sense that the organizers wanted to get people next to eachother constantly, in different configurations, with food and/or wine (if after 5 pm), to continue the collaborative investigation. One had to make space to sneak into the woods or to the waterfall, or to check out all the amazing buildings on the grounds, or to gaze out over the Hudson River Valley at some point, and with not much sleep (there was so much wine at the receptions that I think we were meant to spirit away a few bottles and continue after hours), this did lead to burn out & by sunday afternoon we'd fizzled to about 50 or so, down from about 120 or so (?).

As with Bill, I'd say all the readings were super. I don't know what it was, but everyone was super.
Maybe I was feeling well-fed, well-liked and generous, and so let go some of my critical edge.
But I really do think it was super, that Joan et al. assembled a super bunch of people (all well-fed, well-liked and generous) -- and gave them enough time, and comfortable spaces, and food, and wine, and a beautiful setting . . .

We were pampered. And so Juliana's response ("I want to put a word in for placelessness . . .") to Al Filreis & the Kelly Writer's House presenters (which was itself, earlier fashioned as a response to Bill's question to Bob Perelman (as I recall, how do we make poetic events possible?
How do we get people together for poetry?) -- hit home. Why can't we have a waterfall at Buffalo where we can all sneak off to at 6 a.m. and go skinnydipping (right before the flyfishermen show up)?
I'd like to hear more about where Juliana was going with that, with the notions of textual spaces vs.
actual spaces. I think she was trying to de-heirachize, to say that it's not necessarily "better" to have the space (the endowment to establish the space, which i think was something like $40,000), but best to make the spaces possible, whichever way. That our models of poetic production shouldn't so closely resemble/rely on capitalistic models of production (more place, more voice! more materials, more production!). (All this as my heart goes out to the groundhog who finds himself lost on the concrete slab of a plaza outside the library where I'm typing this. A little girl wants to feed him cheetos.) I'm all ears.

thanks & best,
Linda

* * * *

Linda Russo
[redacted]

↑ Index

130. Mark Weiss
Re: questo e un lavora per Superman
Mon 12 Jul 1999

On another list I have mentioned that a cheap shredder is an essential tool for publishers--not for manuscripts (except those that come without SASE), but for front matter. Turns all that paper into cheap packing material. I find all the self-hyping annoying, but it doesn't get between me and the poems. Except for the occasional "so-and-so recommended I send you this" when so-and-so is a poet I have published or simply admire, which can be useful.

As to a larger annoyance, ianppropriate submissions, there seems to be no way to lay out one's prefernces so clearly as to avoid them. Let me be clear what I mean. I think all of us have tastes that are individual enough that very little of the unsolicited will be right for us. But a lot is on another planet--the church ladies writing in rhymed couplets who think that they fall into the category of unconventional because their take on god would raise Calvin's hackles, the high school poets, the folks writing lineated prose memoirs. But none of that concerns this group.

At 02:40 PM 7/11/99 -0400, you wrote:
>re Unsolicited Mss Letters, actually. the retro action of the editors >strikes me as too hearty. because admit it, the rules are fluid and let us >even say arbitrary. I see no reason to kvetch (that's how it sounded in >Massachusetts) as to how writers, you know, submit. editing a poem mag is >a job, maybe not remunerative but you weren't expecting that anyway. I >shouldn't say this but I've given money (small amounts, when I was a Have) >to a few mags and even a press, beyond the books I bought. it wasn't because >I thought the editors were hassled by what looks to me like normal >work-related petty hassles. I just thought these little, micro publishing >ventures, these pushes against the wall, needed support. I know publishing >aint easy, especially on PoBiz budgets, but eds and pubs have the control.
>that a poet submitting might be a little or a lot disconnected could be >taken into account. I was about to sound an advisory note (use the force >wisely Luke) but screw it, I'm probably pissing people off concerning this >apparently important issue. I second David Golumbia's words: "to let the >lack of such (or even subtle mis-steps) get in the way of reading submitted >work is disturbing too...". I didn't check my horoscope to see if I should >be making public statements today, so maybe I'm out of line here. if so:

>sorry. Allen Bramhall
>
>

↑ Index

131. Mark Weiss

Re: memories of anti-semitism

Mon 12 Jul 1999

Those lovely white chickens come home to roost. Unfortunately if one is in a minority in this country (could be worse--it's not Bosnia) one grits one's teeth a lot. There's still a lot of unthinking antisemitism around--there are even a few restricted communities left. He did get pretty smart about the bomb, at least, in Asphodel.

At 08:28 PM 7/11/99 -0500, you wrote:
>
>My memory on the WCW quote re: Hiroshima was way off. Here it >is, from an article in the Village Voice by Eliot Weinberger:
>
> Speaking of Hiroshima, here is one of the masters, William > Carlos Williams, in a letter to another poet, Byron > Vazakas, dated August 7, 1945: "The day following > the atomic blast! -- the poor Jews who accomplished > it. Now we'll hate them worse than ever."
>
>Ah, those lovely white chickens...
>
>Kent
>
>

↑ Index

132. peter neufeld
Re: unsolicited mss letters
Mon 12 Jul 1999

I'm going to have to throw my vote against any standard. I personally take a great deal of pleasure in reading the variety of cover letters we receive and I think people should feel free to include any information about themselves they deem relevant as an introduction to someone they may have never met. In the end, they have very little significance and are just that, an introduction, a postal how-do-you-do. I think there's a correlation between the length of the cover letter and whether or not the writer knows one of the editors personally or not--and that's perhaps the real issue to consider in how journal publications seem to operate. My favorite letters, however, are the ones we've received after rejecting writers that inform us of the incredible errors in judgment we've made. It was a new sub-genre of the letter I never knew existed before. Peter melodeon poetry systems/Aufgabe

--- rebecca wolff <[redacted]> wrote:
> Yes,
>
> at Fence we get about 30 unsolicited mss a week.
>
> I think it's relevant to note that if we had as > many subscribers as we > have submitters--or even half as many--we'd be > golden. We'd be in heaven. I > do believe that the discrepancy between the two > constituencies (subscribers > and submitters) causes many editors to throw up > their hands in chagrin at > times.
>
> The best cover letter is:
>
> brief, as in, two very short paragraphs. One > paragraph says where you > saw/read/purchased whichever lovely journal is in > question and what there > is about the journal that made you want to be > included in its pages (stroke > the editors and show them that you've really > considered the journal); the > next gives a short list of other publications and/or > honors.

>
> No point mentioning:
>
> where you went to school, who you studied with, your > own opinion of your > work and what your work is > attempting/approaching/essaying.
>
> I second the caution against including a vita or a > pre-printed list of the > journals your work has appeared in. It just goes > straight into the > recycling bin.
>
> Thanks for giving me this opportunity.
>

Do You Yahoo!?
Get your free @yahoo.com address at http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

133. Jamie Perez
random.Q.re/Defoe [resend]
Mon 12 Jul 1999

[resend: my address book was messed up and sending my mail to the listserv itself...sorry to administrators, don't know how long I've been doing that]

Anybody know of anything worth reading written about _Defoe_ (Scalapino, 97?). I read it back then and have dabbled in reading sections of it here and there ever since. Would be interested in what others have had to say about it.

My random thought about it: I think Ah-Ha's video "Take on Me," is an important text for reading this book. Somewhat tongue in cheek, somewhat serious. I suppose that's a rather pro-active reading though...

A romp through the Poetics Archive gives a little fun reading on the subject, but not enough.

jamie.p

↑ Index

134. Michael Magee
Re: unsolicited mss letters
Mon 12 Jul 1999

I agree with what's below - I like the cover letters. Besides, isn't this sense of "I judge based only on what's on the page" a little retrograde? Of course, with COMBO I've avoided alot of this hoo-ha by deciding that our unsolicited contributors will come only from the ranks of those familiar with the mag (which I give away for free if necessary to avoid any sense of exclusion). But in the end, is any of this really such a big deal? I also like contributors notes - if you like a poem you read, it's nice to at least be able to flip and find out what city that poet lives in or some other places they've published, whether they have a book, etc. And may it goes a little way toward making sure we don't fetishize these things called poems, eh? -m.

According to peter neufeld:
> > I'm going to have to throw my vote against any standard. I personally > take a great deal of pleasure in reading the variety of cover letters > we receive and I think people should feel free to include any > information about themselves they deem relevant as an introduction to > someone they may have never met. In the end, they have very little > significance and are just that, an introduction, a postal > how-do-you-do. I think there's a correlation between the length of the > cover letter and whether or not the writer knows one of the editors > personally or not--and that's perhaps the real issue to consider in how > journal publications seem to operate. My favorite letters, however, are > the ones we've received after rejecting writers that inform us of the > incredible errors in judgment we've made. It was a new sub-genre of the > letter I never knew existed before. Peter melodeon poetry > systems/Aufgabe
>
> --- rebecca wolff <[redacted]> wrote:

↑ Index

135. Patrick F. Durgin
Re: soapbox of submission
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Yeah, why do it at all if the whole wide world weren't at stake? I hear you there. Anecdote upon anecdote: I was receiving submissions without a cover letter, and sometimes without a letter or an SASE. My first thought was, what am I expected to do with these poems? No SASE, I immediately threw them out. No cover letter, I sent them back unread, no letter of explanation.

Kenning doesn't print contributors notes, thus I really haven't a use for publication / bio in a letter, EXCEPT insofar as these things merge with whatever sort of request a submiter (or "contributor") is making. After all, it is always, even in the case of solicited material, a request of someone's time and attention to submit work. I think it is key to include a cover letter of some sort, at least indicating that the work is coming with the intention of entering into conversation with the editor and her/his publication/press. Thus, it is a bit ridiculous to send to a publication/press with which one is unfamiliar. If it were only a matter of making the work available, the most direct and often most efficacious way to do this is to publish it yourself. With Kenning, the editorial focus (which is made as explicit as possible by means of occassional "editor's note"s) presupposes that I read unsolicited mss as well as solicited mss with an equal emphasis. They would all wind up in the same place.
Another key way to enter into conversation with editors / publications is to purchase and read them. Patrick F. Durgin

At 10:21 AM 7/12/99 -0500, rebecca wolff wrote:
>Hello. It seems that often comments made in this venue are all too quickly >divorced from their pragmatic source, ie:
>
>Some guy (I think guy) asked what should be in a cover letter. The question >is one that implies a degree of ignorance of the appropriate contents of a >cover letter, and a desire to know more.
>
>Being an editor of a magazine who is often asked that very question, >presumably with quite direct results attached to my response, Iresponded >pragmatically, in such a way that might attempt to guide the querent toward >what I consider, in my editorial high-chair, to be the favored method of >writing a cover letter. This is because, being an editor, I am an >opinionated so-and-so. If someone asked you, a restaurant critic, say, how >you liked your portobello mushroom, you'd probably waste no time in >attempting to describe the degree of tenderness required for your pleasure.
>
> Fence does not allow --or at least inasmuch as is possible--annoying cover >letters to color our response to the actual poems submitted. But that >doesn't mean we don't find them annoying and wish they could be amended.
>Amendment is the editor's dream. We wish to amend the whole wide world.
>
>A different question is: "Why do editors get so testy about submissions >submitted in ways they do not admire?"
>
>I would submit that this testiness is a hazard of the job, ie, we are >unpaid laborers and cannot help but feel cranky and/or testy.

>
>Please send portobello mushrooms with your submissions
>
>

_____
k e n n i n g a newsletter of contemporary poetry
_____
http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
_____
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

136. A H Bramhall
le livre est sur al table
Mon 12 Jul 1999

---

looks like the horse has only been knocked senseless, so may I proffer the image of Ted Berrigan, for example, confronted by cover letters. my surmise: he would not take a narrow view of those words, and would read them for whatever ore he was inspired to find. okay, maybe you're not looking for bauxite today, but maybe someday... at any rate, there are people (I assume) at both ends of the submissions, and it's poetry in the middle, right? one morning after a heavy snowfall I rose early, shovelled at the home base, ran 10 miles to work (part of my idiom then), helped the building manager shovel out because it was a big job, and when my co-workers arrived they complained about the difficult drive to work. what do you know, I found satisfaction in my circumstance and they found none in theirs. I don't wear editor shoes but if I did I'm guessing I would learn to love even those cover letters, or I'd join the foreign legion. either way, I would continue to find poetry interesting and to find interesting poetry. AHB ps, all honour to those producing mags and books, by the way

↑ Index

137. Michael Boughn
Re: Kent Johnson, WCW, anti-semitism
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Re: the complexity, also recall, in Spring and All, XXVI: "The Jew gets it straight--it / is deadly, terrifying-- // It is the Inquisition, the / Revolution". The white chickens are at XXI.

Mike

↑ Index

138. KENT JOHNSON
Williams's tomb sweepers
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Michael Magee wrote:

> "Despite accusations to the contrary, Williams was no anti-Semite. He worked all his life closely with Jewish writers, from Kreyborg and Bodenheim and Mina Loy to Zukofsky and West and Moss and Kamin and Sol Funaroff and later with Shapiro and Ignatow and Sidney Salt and Ginsberg and Levertov and any number of others. He was, unquestionably, a product of his times and he did use the old comic-strip vulgarisms, allowing such words as kike, nigger, wop, jap, frog, Polack and the rest of it to infiltrate his speech and his letters. Nor did he always escape the poular racial myths of his time."

Michael:

More later, but for now just to point out that this quote from Mariani is rather pathetic as a "defense." Pound had strong relationships with Jewish writers too. One can be subject to "the popular racial myths of his time" and still have lots of chummy relationships with the subaltern other! (Remember Yugoslavia?)

And as for those "comic-strip vulgarisms" (the Jewish kids in Brooklyn ate those comics right up, didn't they?) that suffuse WCW's letters, does Mariani imply that _everyone_ was using them? Of course WCW was a "product of his time" as are we all, and of course he's a "complex" figure. But choices can still be made, and one is not condemned (especially one whose self-proclaimed task is to cleanse the language!) to topple headlong into the most hateful vocabulary. Mariani's little quote is quite simply apologetic slop of the hero-worshipping kind.

And as for your reading of the "irony" in Williams's remark about the Jews and the Bomb, I doubt it. "Kike" pops up like dandelions in May in his letters and little irony is apparent. Be careful here. It's one thing to misread comments about ready-made classroom phrases that Language poets use; this is something of a more serious kind.

Kent

↑ Index

139. Lowther,John
Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Mon 12 Jul 1999

---

i'd asked why editors cared about simultaneous submissions

Carol Hamshaw wrote back saying (i'm parsing with emphasis);

> just as we were putting the issue together, someone (...) saw the exact > piece in another journal. without having been told by the author (though I > hope we would have been when we came to sending out the formal contract) > we wasted some time, and very nearly would have wasted a certain amount of > money on production. (...) [if] it is a simultaneous submission: I feel > there is no sense spending the time to read it if you are from the start > possibly competing with another publication to secure the rights.
>
thanx carol, for all the detail and such - but i still find that i'm not very clear about some things in this - i take it that the capilano review "secures 1st time rights" or something like that ? you don't have permanent rights to it do you ?

what strikes me as very strange, relative to how i think about it, is that i can't imagine why i wd care that something i'd published or was going to publish had appeared in some other locale or was to do so... - but then to learn that at least part of the problem is also that some editors (i'm extrapolating from you carol) feel that magazines are competing, presumable ~to win~ something, ie,
"the rights"

i wonder how many publishers of mags (on this list fer instance) feel this way ?
or more specifically - how many after publishing, have "the rights" ? and is it seen as some sort of investment ? - i'm imagining that the hope runs something like this "when X is as famous as john ashbery, and they wanna do a _selected_ i'll get my payback then for this not too profitable publishing" somewhere i'd heard about all this stuff but i had the impression that it only held true for things like parnassus or the paris review - i guess everybody's just doing what they feel the need for - but for all you editors out there i'd like to note : i'm not competing with you and i don't feel, nor can i see how yr competing with me

(ok, except maybe the paris review, whose ass i'm gonna wup next time i see it)

↑ Index

140. R Democracy
HELP WITH OUTREACH
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Hi,

I'm starting a monthly series at the new women's bookstore: BLUESTOCKINGS in New York City and was wondering to which venues I can send out email releases of basic calendar info.

and fyi, our first reading is as follows

Poetry Reading:
Akilah Oliver (the she said dialogues, Smokehouse Press, 1999) and Marcella Durand (City of Ports, Situations, 1999)
will inaugurate the BELLADONNA* Reading Series
at the Bluestockings Women's Bookstore
172 Allen Street, between Rivington and Stanton on the Lower East Side of Manhattan
Thursday, August 26 at 9:00 pm.
Contact [redacted] for info.
Also: There will be 15 minutes provided for open readers.

thanks,
Rachel DL

↑ Index

141. Chris Stroffolino
WCW, anti-semitism....
Mon 12 Jul 1999

That particular quote of WCW's to Vazakas (a gay Reading-ite) does not, to me, seem particularly anti-semitic. He's pointing out a social irony--the germans kicked out the jews that invented the bomb that destroyed their allies. Even for a "non-public" statement, with all its attendant "freedom of expression" including flippancy, there is evident some feeling for the jewish there.... On another point, is WCW's Puerto-Rican-ism. That he was himself trying to "pass". It's weird how little (in an age of identity politics) his puerto-rican element to the "american grain" is mentioned, though I hear SUNY-BUFFALO just accepted someone to its Ph.D. program who will deal with that issue in dissertation fashion....

chris

On Mon, 12 Jul 1999, Michael Magee wrote:

> Kent's recent stipulation that "WCW was anti-semitic in a rather robust way, no less than Ezra and T.S." is a real distortion - one loses all sense of particulars when one implies that Williams, Pound and Eliot are alike on this regard - and the inability to draw distinctions is a cousin to the inability to act. I would suggest reading Williams's very complex story "A Face of Stone." What Paul Mariani points out in his biography of Williams seems basically true:
>
> "Despite accusations to the contrary, Williams was no anti-Semite. He worked all his life closely with Jewish writers, from Kreyborg and Bodenheim and Mina Loy to Zukofsky and West and Moss and Kamin and Sol Funaroff and later with Shapiro and Ignatow and Sidney Salt and Ginsberg and Levertov and any number of others. He was, unquestionably, a product of his times and he did use the old comic-strip vulgarisms, allowing such words as kike, nigger, wop, jap, frog, Polack and the rest of it to infiltrate his speech and his letters. Nor did he always escape the poular racial myths of his time."
>
> As someone currently writing about WCW's relationship to African-American culture, I'm senstive to the vexed nature of his approach to race - trust me. But to simply call him anti-semitic or racist is to in fact say nothing at all. Among other things, one ends up missing the crucial fact of how the speech of ethnic minorities mediated Williams poetry: as in his famous characterization of his poetry as coming "out of the mouths of Polish mothers." Just who were these Polish mothers, do you think? I'd suggest that, like the Polish woman in "A Face of Stone," they were Jews.
>
> Likewise, the quote by Williams on Hiroshima which Kent had misremembered, "The day following the atomic blast! -- the poor Jews who accomplished it. Now we'll hate them worse than ever," seems to me bitterly ironic, fairly complex and, in any event, worth more than a rubber stamped condemnation.
>
> -m.

↑ Index

142. Chris Stroffolino

COPE'S OPPEN---

Mon 12 Jul 1999

Congrats on Stephen Cope for his work on Oppen recently published in THE GERM. It is a quite interesting piece. I don't agree with ALL of it, but it is fascinating and worth reading (especially for those of us who've never been especially great fans of his poetry)..... c

↑ Index

143. Steven Shoemaker
Re: Kent Johnson, WCW, anti-semitism
Mon 12 Jul 1999

Very glad to see Michael Magee's eloquent post on this subject. I was about to write something along similar lines myelf, but probably wouldn't have done as well. To class Williams alongside Pound as an anti-semite seems to me ridiculous, and totally unsupported by the facts, at least as I've come across them in my reading of, and about, Williams. I would also second Michael's reading of the Williams Hiroshima quote: it seems to me to be about anti-Semitism, not an expression of it. And just to add to the record a bit, it's worth remembering a couple of things. One is that Williams was, at least at times, inclined to identify himself as Jewish, much to his family's consternation. Another is that he got pissed as hell at Pound over the latter's growing fascism and anti-Semitism during the thirties, and said so. I'm not trying to say he was perfect--he certainly wasn't. But his situation was a lot more complex, and interesting, than Kent Johnson's comments on the subject would suggest.

↑ Index

144. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: Anti- Poetry
Tue 13 Jul 1999

---

as a post to the post-conversation. (And as a Jew, so no apologies from this end)
What is the "best" piece of writing you all believe is Anti Semitic?

novels?
poetry?
Plays?

i.e. Cantos Williams, per this conversation.

Wondering what the "list" thinks. (Black-List?)

↑ Index

145. Louis Cabri
Re: bard conf
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Alert: Wonky post...

The Bard conference on poetry and pedagogy interestingly suggested to me, afterwards, the question of differing pedagogical styles of the various institutions in which poets, theoreticians and scholars have trained, and are training, as teachers.

I think a "bar" is an institution if it supports a poetry scene. That is I mean to question at the outset whether an institution has to be by definition an academic one. Rob Manery and I operated a "landless" poetry institution in Ottawa for a number of years, to which we found, for our events, monies and spaces as and where we could.

At the conference nobody mentioned their favorite poetry bar institution, or actually spoke of the institution as a concept, except near the end, when Al Filreis initiated a discussion of his own pedagogy, a discussion directly dependent on the specific situation at/of Univ. of Penn, and Kelly Writers House, which he was "open" about, as to funding etc, in a way that no other institutional rep was. Harryette Mullen directly addressed teaching issues at UCLA; unfortunately, she had to leave the conference early.

Academic institutions were for the most part represented implicitly at the conference. Their representation was by no means an agenda of the conference. The explicit agenda in this regard was, it seemed to me, to represent some poets as autonomous published individuals, ready for special hire to spread the word in existing institutional structures. (I don't mean to suggest that this was the agenda of the conference as a whole, but only with respect to this issue I am presenting, after-the-conference -- the issue of the institution.)

Here I just want to barely even hint at a few things - after my experiences at the conference - from the vantage-point, and the question, of institutional affiliation. (Perhaps the word "institution" is a-buzz in my head because of a discussion on a listserve the other month, in conjunction with a panel at Writes House on the same subject -- with Shawn Walker, Josh Schuster, Al Filreis. Perhaps not.)

Wonky post cont'd in next email...

↑ Index

146. Louis Cabri

Re: bard conf - pt two

Tue 13 Jul 1999

Wonky post con't:

Since institutions were for the most part represented implicitly at the conference, mentioning four of them here, as I want so-briefly to do (and not more or less of them) is very much the result of friendships I have with some of the presenters, whose personal particulars I know, etc. I hope that's ok. That is the subjective side to choosing the institutions I do. But, there is an objective side as well -- which is that few participants actually located themselves institutionally when they addressed the conference topic of how to teach poetry. Michael Davidson and Page Du Bois, for instance, gave papers that for some participants became the conference highlights (e.g., Maz881 mentions Michael Davidson's paper), but their felt presence at the conference bore no relation to UCSD as place or program, where they both teach. (On top of that, Maz881, who not a presenter, was a student of Davidson's at UCSD. I think Du Bois was introduced as teaching in a classics department, which helped to redundify, ie explain, the emphases in her paper on Classics - but, "the classics" is a scholarly category, not an institutional one per se, except in a metaphorical sense.)

Institutions I personally felt were more or less explicitly represented at the conference were Bard College itself, Poetics Program of the State University of New York at Buffalo, Teachers & Writers, and UPenn. In terms of dollars invested in poetics programming, I'd speculatively say that Buffalo has made by far the greatest poetics investment -- ie in student literary production, which has saturated the various scenes, with all sorts of materials, for quite some time -- of them all.

I'm just suggesting that pedagogy is a collective style or practice, and can equally refer to the social dynamics of a poetry scene, as it can to an English department, or "alternative creative space" funded by the hipster beebop junkie on 79th St. -- or ad exec. The spirit of street alcohol, or the spirit of a sour resentiment fahrting from the ministry of an interior departmental bowel movement, inflamed allover by regret, envy and nascent intellectual dementia, compounded furthermore by brain shrinkage and the perverse taking to the wearing of bow ties, do have pedagogical outcomes.

Having said all this, I don't really want to venture any further on this subject of a comparison of institutional pedagogies. I just want to broach it as a question for further discussion; then I'd love to. Let me just say: I felt them deeply at the conference. Like, "I felt."

Perhaps it would be highly productive to address the question of "the institution" in this way at another conference, building on the excellent inaugural work that took place at Bard. To address the institution without getting hustled by promotional materials and advertorial jargon for this or that place would be the idea -- with poetry in the fore of attention. It would be interesting to hear about the DisEmbodied School of Breathing Nostrils, Kootenay School of Mountain-Comes-to-You, The Ivy League Drip, Popeye OPOYAZ, Creative Writers of Angelic Respiring in Mercedes Benzes, Romantic Materialists' School of Adjunct Engineering in Germinalist Progressivity, School of Finicky Humanists With Bent Toward One's Own Wax of Descartes, Proceduralists International -- Division of Hypertext Incorporated, Subsidiary of MicroDisney, School of World Dominance in Literary Production Factories of North American Pressers, AvantGarde TM, and so on.

-louis

↑ Index

147. A H Bramhall
The Rules Committee
Tue 13 Jul 1999

---

writing learns to start somewhere: that can't be helped. the word freezes because of willing passages of time. luckily, when time pulls thru, the rest of us can reclaim the land. the endless dialogue does things like that. finally, as in later that week, you'll look to see who spoke. were it that easy, everyone would crow. now it's only a little bit of night. there might be a mythology to follow, or squander. no time to look: merely waiting prepares us. now we have that gadget working; the signal can now be wielded. everybody spoke. the machine lives.

2) you weren't ready to listen because that's how messages wear out. I'm talking as a matter of fact. that seems like thriving to me.

3) poetry can be scruffy now, okay?

↑ Index

148. Michael Magee
Re: WCW, anti-semitism....
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Chris and all, I believe there's a book out recently on Williams's Latin Americanness, isn't there? Can't remember the author. And, interestingly, Williams was evidently part Jewish, as Mariani points out in his biography (p. 411): "Back in the early 20's, Williams had told Louis Untermeyer about his Jewish heritage and about his gentle grandfather Solomon Hoheb. But by 1937 the family situation had changed drastically. His brother Ed had never forgiven him for making his Jewishness public."

and there you have it:
a Puerto Rican, Sephardic Jew
"American poet" in front of a bank.

-m.

According to Chris Stroffolino:
>
> > That particular quote of WCW's to Vazakas (a gay Reading-ite) does > not, to me, seem particularly anti-semitic. He's pointing out a > social irony--the germans kicked out the jews that invented the bomb > that destroyed their allies. Even for a "non-public" statement, with > all its attendant "freedom of expression" including flippancy, there > is evident some feeling for the jewish there....
> On another point, is WCW's Puerto-Rican-ism. That he was himself > trying to "pass". It's weird how little (in an age of identity politics) > his puerto-rican element to the "american grain" is mentioned, > though I hear SUNY-BUFFALO just accepted someone to its Ph.D. program > who will deal with that issue in dissertation fashion....
>
> chris
>
> On Mon, 12 Jul 1999, Michael Magee wrote:
>
> > Kent's recent stipulation that "WCW was anti-semitic in a rather robust > > way, no less than Ezra and T.S." is a real distortion - one loses all > > sense of particulars when one implies that Williams, Pound and Eliot are > > alike on this regard - and the inability to draw distinctions is a cousin > > to the inability to act. I would suggest reading Williams's very complex > > story "A Face of Stone." What Paul Mariani points out in his biography of > > Williams seems basically true:
> >
> > "Despite accusations to the contrary, Williams was no anti-Semite. He > > worked all his life closely with Jewish writers, from Kreyborg and > > Bodenheim and Mina Loy to Zukofsky and West and Moss and Kamin and Sol
> > Funaroff and later with Shapiro and Ignatow and Sidney Salt and Ginsberg > > and Levertov and any number of others. He was, unquestionably, a product > > of his times and he did use the old comic-strip vulgarisms, allowing such > > words as kike, nigger, wop, jap, frog, Polack and the rest of it to > > infiltrate his speech and his letters. Nor did he always escape the > > poular racial myths of his time."
> >
> > As someone currently writing about WCW's relationship to African-American > > culture, I'm senstive to the vexed nature of his approach to race - trust > > me. But to simply call him anti-semitic or racist is to in fact say > > nothing at all. Among other things, one ends up missing the crucial fact > > of how the speech of ethnic minorities mediated Williams poetry: as in his > > famous characterization of his poetry as coming "out of the mouths of > > Polish mothers." Just who were these Polish mothers, do you think? I'd > > suggest that, like the Polish woman in "A Face of Stone," they were Jews.

> >
> > Likewise, the quote by Williams on Hiroshima which Kent had misremembered,
> > "The day following the atomic blast! -- the poor Jews who accomplished it.
> > Now we'll hate them worse than ever," seems to me bitterly ironic, fairly > > complex and, in any event, worth more than a rubber stamped condemnation.
> >
> > -m.
> >
>

↑ Index

149. John Tranter
Announcing Jacket # 7
Tue 13 Jul 1999

If you don't wish to receive notifications of new issues of Jacket magazine, please say so, and you will be removed from the mailing list pronto.
==========
= Last week JACKET's front page counter ticked over the 100,000 mark, indicating that more than one hundred thousand separate visits (visits, not hits) had been made to the site since the first issue in October 1997. Can there really be that many subtle, discerning souls out there in the aether? Help us celebrate -- visit Jacket # 7 -- now (more or less) complete, at this URL:

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket07/index.html

Jack Spicer Feature -- Guest Editor -- CHRISTOPHER W.ALEXANDER
Excerpt from Jack Spicer's 3rd Vancouver Lecture, 1965
Peter Gizzi, Introduction
Jack Spicer, the Lecture
Peter Gizzi, Afterword
Graham Foust:
Jack Spicer and the fiftieth anniversary issue of Poetry (Chicago)
James Herndon:

Jack Spicer and the art of Fran Herndon
Kevin Killian and Lewis Ellingham:
excerpt from "Poet Be Like God" Anya Lewin:
"Things do not connect; they correspond" Laura Moriarty's poem
"Spicer's City"
Kristin Prevallet:
Jack Spicer's Hell in "Homage to Creeley"
Linda Russo:
Joanne Kyger and the San Francisco Renaissance, 1957-65
Rob Wilson:
Tracking Jack Spicer: The "Afterlife" of a US Counter-Poetics
TIMELINE -- Historical events and the writings of Jack Spicer
==========
=
As well, heaps of photos, visuals, and Regular Features, including: :

COMMENT -- Elaine Equi - Unspeakable Ambitions

REVIEWS
Alice Notley on Kenward Elmslie
Andrew Joron on Peter Gizzi
Dale Smith on Lewis MacAdams
Juliana Spahr on Bernadette Mayer's book "Sonnets"
Tom Clark on Philip Whalen's "Overtime - Selected Poems" --
"While Kerouac heads out, Whalen tends to circle around slowly and return to certain obsessive themes and rhythms. His formal universe, as he advises John Cage in the poem quoted above, is not really unbounded space, but, like a tuned piano's, a 'closed system'. "

ARTICLES Libbie Rifkin on Anne Waldman, Bernadette Mayer and the Gender of an Avant-Garde Institution -- "Freed from the regulatory processes that would render larger-scale institutions at least marginally accountable to some measure of diversity, institutions in this mold could be more capricious and vehement in their exclusions than their mainstream counterparts. Of the last years of Black Mountain College, for instance, Martin Duberman has noted that 'the hierarchy could be as rigidly exclusive, as impassible to the uninitiated - and more male chauvinist - than anything found on a traditional university campus'. "

J.H.Prynne -- John Kinsella and Rod Mengham -- an Introduction to the poetry of J.H.Prynne

Leslie Scalapino - Secret Occurrence

Garrie Hutchinson - on Australian painter Arthur Boyd

PROSE POEM / Hazel Smith

POEMS / David Baratier, Gabriel Gudding, Joel Lewis, Stephen Oliver, Leslie Scalapino, Brian Kim Stefans, Rob Wilson, et alia

QUIZ / For readers of Jacket # 4 who attempted to identify the quotes in the Green Quiz, but failed to do so because of an incapacity due to sloth, delirium tremens or incompetence, the answers are given in Jacket # 7.
==========
= Jacket is a free literary quarterly published on the Internet by Australian poet John Tranter. If you like Jacket, please tell your friends.

↑ Index

150. rebecca wolff
Re: Submission Crucible
Tue 13 Jul 1999

> Is it reasonable for a publisher who's mission statement reads something like, "We endeavor to publish the unorthdox, the uncategorizable, the kinds of work that no mainstream publisher would touch", to have submission guidelines like, "Query with sample chapters and a plot synopsis"? No.

Just for the record, since this sounds like it's talking about Fence: We don't ask for queries or sample chapters or etc.

Since this thread seems to be viable, I'd like to ask a question, a marketing question:

Mr. Waber proposes that rejection letters ought to be accompanied by a subscription form or some similar form of encouragement. I think this is a great idea, and in fact had meant to do just that when starting Fence, but was voted down by the rest of the Fence people on grounds of "adding insult to injury," "rubbing salt in the wound," etc. What do y'all think about this? Would you feel insulted, salted, annoyed, demeaned or otherwise antagonized by such an enclosure?

I'd really like to know. Because we'd really like to have more subscribers.

↑ Index

151. Douglas Barbour
Re: Carnivocal
Tue 13 Jul 1999

I want to apologize to anyone who has already tried to order Carnivocal in the US. I posted the publicity on it in all innocence, but then someone wrote to tell me she had tried to order it & General had no knowledge of it. So I checked with Red Deer Press and received the following reply:

<<I actually forgot to mention that all of our fall titles become spring titles in the States. So, Carnivocal will not be available in the States until the Spring.>>

Um, it seems that in my desire to advertize I jumped the gun a bit. If I can find out that orders can be sent directly to Canada, I will let the list know...

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta Canada T6G 2E5
(h) [780] [redacted] (b) [780] [redacted]
http://www.ualberta.ca/~dbarbour/dbhome.htm

> A bottle thrown
> by loggers out of a wagon
> past midnight
> explodes against rock.
> This green fragment has behind it
> the _booomm_ when glass
> tears free of of its smoothness
>
> Michael Ondaatje

↑ Index

152. Douglas Barbour
Re: submission guidelines
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Gee, it's all very interesting reading the back & forth here, but I must say I still tend to go with what a poet/editor told me many years ago: send in some poems & a SASE. The poems should speak for themselves. And I have to dmit that when I did edit, I found most accompanying letters got in the way...

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta Canada T6G 2E5
(h) [780] [redacted] (b) [780] [redacted]
http://www.ualberta.ca/~dbarbour/dbhome.htm

> A bottle thrown
> by loggers out of a wagon
> past midnight

explodes against rock.
This green fragment has behind it
the _booomm_ when glass
tears free of of its smoothness

Michael Ondaatje

↑ Index

153. Taylor Brady
Re: bard conf
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Bill,

A good hat goes a long way -- possible I cribbed that bit of my "method" from one of the pieces in your "Works and Days"? Also, channeling John Lurie's voiceover on John Zorn's "Spillane" doesn't hurt.

Taylor

> on another note, i was crushed to learn that taylor brady had, elsewhere, performed the part of jena's detective better than i. and this after robert ("a word is anything that can be erased") kelly axed me if i had ever had acting lessons. o jena, i have proclaimed my love for you countless times and yet continue to be spurned. taylor, what is your secret?

↑ Index

154. Poetics List
Welcome Message recap
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Welcome to the Poetics List & The Electronic Poetry Center

..sponsored by The Poetics Program, Department of English, College of Arts & Science, the State University of New York, Buffalo /// Postal Address: Poetics Program, 438 Clemens Hall, SUNY Buffalo, NY 14260

Poetics List Moderator: Christopher W. Alexander
Please address all inquiries to <[redacted]>.

Electronic Poetry Center: <http://epc.buffalo.edu>

= Contents =
1. About the Poetics List
2. Subscriptions
3. Submissions

4. Cautions
5. Digest Option
6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail
7. "No Review" Policy
8. The Electronic Poetry Center (EPC)
9. Poetics Archives at EPC
10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

Above the world-weary horizons
New obstacles for exchange
arise Or unfold,
O ye postmasters!

1. About the Poetics List

With the preceeding epigraph, the Poetics List was founded by Charles Bernstein in late 1993. Now in its second incarnation, the list carries over 750 subscribers, though all of these subscribers do not necessarily receive messages at any given time. A number of other people read the Poetics List via our web archives at the Electronic Poetry Center (see section 9 below).

Please note that this is a private list and information about the list should not be posted to other lists or directories of lists. The idea is to keep the list to those with specific rather than general interests, and also to keep the scale of the list relatively small and the volume manageable.

increasing number of subscribers, we are no longer able to maintain the open format with which the list began (at under 100 subscribers). All submissions are reviewed by the moderator in keeping with the goals of the list, as articulated in this Welcome Message. We remain committed to this editorial function as a defining element of the Poetics List. Our aim is to support, inform, and extend those directions in poetry that are committed to innovations, renovations, and investigations of form and/or/as content, to the questioning of received forms and styles, and to the creation of the otherwise unimagined, untried, unexpected, improbable, and impossible.

For further information on posting to the list, see section 5 below. Publishers and series co-ordinators, see also section 10.

In addition to being archived at the EPC, some posts to Poetics (especially reviews, obituary notices, announcements, etc.) may also become part of specific EPC subject areas. Brief reviews of poetry events and publications are always welcome. See section 7 for details.

We recognize that other lists may sponsor other possibilities for exchange in this still-new medium. We request that those participating in this forum keep in mind the specialized and focussed nature of this project. For subscription information or to contact the editors, write to <[redacted]>.

---

2. Subscriptions

Subscriptions to the Poetics List are free of charge, but formal registration is required. We ask that when you subscribe you provide your full name, street address, email address, and telephone number. All posts to the list should provide your full real name, as registered. If there is any discrepancy between your full name as it appears in the "from" line of the message header, please sign your post at the bottom.

<[redacted]>. Your message should include all of the required information. Please allow several days for your new or re-subscription to take effect.

PLEASE NOTE: All subscription-related information and correspondence remains absolutely confidential.

To unsubscribe, send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

*If you are having difficulty unsubscribing, please note: sometimes your e-mail address may be changed slightly by your system administrator. If this happens you will not be able to continue to receive mail from the Poetics List. To avoid this problem, unsub using your old address, then return to your new address and send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

Remember to replace "Phil Spillway" with your own name. If you find that it is not possible to unsub using your old address, please contact the editors at <[redacted]> for assistance.

*Eudora users: if your email address has been changed, you may still be able to unsubscribe without assistance. Go to the "Tools" menu in Eudora, select "Options" and then select setup for "Sending Mail": you may be able to temporarily substitute your old address here to send the unsub message.

The most frequent problem with subscriptions is bounced messages. If your system is often down or if you have a low disk quota, Poetics messages may get bounced. Please try avoid having messages from the list returned to us. If the problem is low disk quota, you may wish to request an increased quota from your system administrator. (University subscribers may wish to argue that this subscription is part of your scholarly communication!) You might also consider obtaining a commercial account. In general, if a Poetics message is bounced from your account, your subscription to Poetics will be temporarily suspended. If this happens, you may re-subscribe to the list by contacting the list administrators at <[redacted]>.

All questions about subscriptions, whether about an individual subscription or subscription policy, should be addressed to the list's administrative address <[redacted]>. Please note that it may take up to ten days, or more, for us to reply to messages.

---

3. Submissions

are reviewed by the editors in keeping with the goals of the list as articulated in this Welcome Message (see section 1). Please note that while this list is primarily concerned with poetics, messages relating to politics and political news or activism will also be considered. Other sorts of news or queries are welcome occasionally; please use "common sense" when posting and keep in mind that your message, if forwarded, will be distributed to 750+ persons the world over. Feel free to query if you are uncertain as to whether a message is appropriate. All correspondence with the editors regarding submissions to the list remains confidential and should be directed to us at <[redacted]>.

We encourage subscribers to post information on publications and reading series that they have coordinated, edited, published, or in which they appear. Such announcements constitute a core function of this list. Also welcome are other sorts of news, e.g., event reports, obituaries, and reading lists (annotated or not).

Queries may be posted to the list when deemed appropriate; if responses are received backchannel and are of interest to the list (i.e., if they are on topic), we request that the posting subscriber assemble "highlights" from respondents' posts to be published to the list.

Solicited submissions (by subscribers or non-subscribers) may also appear on Poetics from time to time. The editors reserve the right to contact any subscriber regarding possible submissions.

Posts to the Poetics List should abide by the rules of "Fair Use" when quoting material for which the posting subscriber does not hold copyright. Please do not post to the list personal or "backchannel" correspondence, or other unpublished material, without the express permission of the author!

If you want someone to send out information to the list as a whole, or supply information missing from an post, or thank someone for posting something you requested, please send the request or comment directly to that individual, and not to the list or to the list editors.

Send messages to the list directly to the list address:

<[redacted]>

Please do not send messages intended for posting to the list to our administrative address <[redacted]>.

When sending to the list, please send only "plain text". Note, however, there is no problem with sending clickable URLs in HTML format.

Please do not send attachments or include extremely long documents in a post, since this may make it difficult for those who get the list via "digest" or who cannot decode attached or specially formatted files. The use of "styled" text or HTML formatting in the body of email posts to the list appears not to be compatible with the the list's automatic digest program; as a result such messages disrupt the format of the Digest, even though this coding is readable for some subscribers who do not use the digest option.

Like all machines, the listserver will sometimes be down: if you feel your message has been delayed or lost, please wait at least one day to see if it shows up, then check the archive to be sure the message is not posted there; if you still feel there is a problem, you may wish to contact the editors at <[redacted]>.

As an outside maximum, we will accept for publication to Poetics no more than 5 messages a day from any one subscriber; in general, we expect subscribers to keep their post to less than 10-15 posts per month. Our goal is a manageable list (manageable both for moderators and subscribers) of twenty or fewer messages per day.

For further information or to contact the editors, please write to <[redacted]>.

---

4. Cautions

It may take up to a week or more to respond to your questions or to subscription requests or to handle any other editorial business or any nonautomated aspect of list maintenance.

Submissions to the list should be in ASC-II (text-only) format and should contain NO HTML TAGS! HTML tags interfere with the automatic digest and archive functions of the listserv program, and will not be forwarded to the list. Subscribers using Microsoft Outlook, Netscape Communicator and like applications to manage their email service should check the "Preferences" or "Options" section of the program in question to be sure that HTML formatting options are disabled before posting to the list.

Attachments may not be sent to the Poetics List. Messages containing attachments will be presumed to be worm- or virus-carrying and will not be forwarded to the list.

Please do not publish list correspondence without the express permission of the author! Copyright for all material posted on Poetics remains with the author; material from this list and its archive may not be reproduced without the author's permission, beyond the standard rights accorded by "fair use".

"Flame" messages will not be tolerated on the Poetics List. In this category are included messages gratuitously attacking fellow listees, also messages designed to "waste bandwidth" or cause the list to reach its daily limit. These messages are considered offensive and detrimental to list discussion. Please do not bother submitting such messages to the editor. Offending subscribers will receive only one warning message. Repeat offenders will be removed from the list immediately. Please do not put this policy to test!

---

5. Digest Option

The Listserve program gives you the option to receive all the posted Poetics message each day as a single message. If you would prefer to receive ONE message each day, which would include all messages posted to the list for that day, you can use the digest option.

Send this one-line message, with no "subject" line to <[redacted]>:

set poetics digest

You can switch back to individual messages by sending this message:

set poetics mail

NOTE!! Send these messages to "listserv" not to Poetics or as a reply to this Welcome Message!!

---

6. Temporarily turning off Poetics mail

Do not leave your Poetics subscription "active" if you are going to be away for any extended period of time! Your account may become flooded and you may lose not only Poetics messages but other important mail.

You can temporarily turn off your Poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to <[redacted]>:

set poetics nomail

You may re-activate your poetics subscription by sending this one-line message, with no "subject" line, to the same address:

set poetics mail

When you return you can check or download missed postings from the Poetics archive. (See section 8 below.)

---

7. "No Review" policy

For the safety and security of list subscribers, the "review" function of the Poetics List has been de-activated. Non-posting subscribers' email addresses will remain confidential. Please do not ask the list editors to give out subscriber addresses or other personal information.

---

8. What is the Electronic Poetry Center?

The World Wide Web-based Electronic Poetry Center is located at <http://epc.buffalo.edu>.

Our mission is to serve as a hypertextual gateway to the extraordinary range of activity in formally innovative writing in the United States and around the world. The Center provides access to the burgeoning electronic resources in new poetries including RIF/T and many other electronic poetry journals, the POETICS List archives, an AUTHOR library of electronic poetic texts and bibliographies, and direct connections to numerous related electronic RESOURCES. The Center also provides information about contemporary print little magazines and SMALL PRESSES engaged in poetry and poetics. And we have an extensive collection of soundfiles of poets reading their work, as well as the archive of LINEbreak, the radio interview series.

The EPC is directed by Loss Pequeño Glazier.

---

9. Poetics Archives at the EPC

Go to the Electronic Poetry Center <http://epc.buffalo.edu> and select the "Poetics" link from the opening screen. Follow the links to Poetics Archives. Or set your browser to go directly to <http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/poetics.html>.

You may browse the Poetics List archives by month and year or search them for specific information. Your interface will allow you to print or download any of these files.

---

10. Publishers & Editors Read This!

PUBLISHERS & EDITORS: The Electronic Poetry Center listings of poetry and poetics information is open and available to you. We are trying to make access to printed publications as easy as possible for our users and ENCOURAGE you to participate!

Send a list of your press/publications to <[redacted]>, with the words EPC Press Listing in
the subject line.

You may also send materials on disk. (Write file name, word processing program, and Mac or PC on disk.) Send an e-mail message to the address above to obtain a mailing address to which to send your disk. Though files marked up with html are our goal, ascii files are perfectly acceptable. If your word processor will save files in Rich Text Format (.rtf) this is also highly desirable.

Send us extended information on new publications (including any back cover copy and sample poems) as well as complete catalogs or backlists (including excerpts from reviews, sample poems, etc.). Be sure to include full information for ordering--including prices and addresses and phone numbers both of the press and any distributors.

You might also want to send short announcements of new publications directly to the Poetics List as subscribers do not always (or ever) check the EPC; in your message please include full information for ordering. If you have a fuller listing at EPC, you might also mention that in any Poetics posts.

Some announcements circulated through Poetics and the EPC have received a noticeable responses; it may be an effective way to promote your publication and we are glad to facilitate information about interesting publications.

END OF POETICS LIST WELCOME MSG

↑ Index

155. Lowther,John
Submission Crucible
Tue 13 Jul 1999

> hey rebecca
>
> i can't imagine being offended by receiving a subscription form or info to that effect with a rejection
>
> also i don't think that the quote (who was that? waber?) sounds like it's trying to mimic/mock you folks at fence

> anyway
>
> )L
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: rebecca wolff [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Tuesday, July 13, 1999 10:03 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Submission Crucible
>
> Is it reasonable for a publisher who's mission statement reads something like, "We endeavor to publish the unorthdox, the uncategorizable, the kinds of work that no mainstream publisher would touch", to have submission guidelines like, "Query with sample chapters and a plot synopsis"? No.
>
> Just for the record, since this sounds like it's talking about Fence: We don't ask for queries or sample chapters or etc.
>
> Since this thread seems to be viable, I'd like to ask a question, a marketing question:
>
> Mr. Waber proposes that rejection letters ought to be accompanied by a subscription form or some similar form of encouragement. I think this is a great idea, and in fact had meant to do just that when starting Fence, but was voted down by the rest of the Fence people on grounds of "adding insult to injury," "rubbing salt in the wound," etc. What do y'all think about this? Would you feel insulted, salted, annoyed, demeaned or otherwise antagonized by such an enclosure?
>
> I'd really like to know. Because we'd really like to have more subscribers.

↑ Index

156. katy
Re: Submission Crucible
Tue 13 Jul 1999

I think it's absolutely reasonable.

Katy Lederer

<PRE>
>Is it reasonable for a publisher who's mission statement reads something >like, "We endeavor to publish the unorthdox, the uncategorizable, the kinds >of work that no mainstream publisher would touch", to have submission >guidelines like, "Query with sample chapters and a plot synopsis"? No.

Just for the record, since this sounds like it's talking about Fence: We don't ask for queries or sample chapters or etc.

Since this thread seems to be viable, I'd like to ask a question, a marketing question:

Mr. Waber proposes that rejection letters ought to be accompanied by a subscription form or some similar form of encouragement. I think this is a great idea, and in fact had meant to do just that when starting Fence, but was voted down by the rest of the Fence people on grounds of "adding insult to injury," "rubbing salt in the wound," etc. What do y'all think about this? Would you feel insulted, salted, annoyed, demeaned or otherwise antagonized by such an enclosure?

I'd really like to know. Because we'd really like to have more subscribers.

</PRE>

↑ Index

157. Mike Kelleher
a l y r i c m a i l e r 12
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Hi Folks,

a l y r i c m a i l e r 12:

William R. Howes Translations of Emily Dickinsons Poems as Microscopic Alphabetic Organisms Compared to Emily Dickinsons Poems as Microscopic Alphabetic Organisms.

by Michael Basinski

is up at

http://writing.upenn.edu/spc/alyric/alyric12.html

"Auraloralvisual pyrotechnics" - Newsweek
"Saucy." -Tracey Lordes

Enjoy,

Mike

↑ Index

158. Maria Damon
Re: bard conf
Tue 13 Jul 1999

At 2:51 AM -0400 7/13/99, Louis Cabri wrote:

> Academic institutions were for the most part represented implicitly at the conference. Their representation was by no means an agenda of the conference. The explicit agenda in this regard was, it seemed to me, to represent some poets as autonomous published individuals, ready for special hire to spread the word in existing institutional structures. (I don't mean to suggest that this was the agenda of the conference as a whole, but only with respect to this issue I am presenting, after-the-conference -- the issue of the institution.)
>
> Here I just want to barely even hint at a few things - after my experiences at the conference - from the vantage-point, and the question, of institutional affiliation. (Perhaps the word "institution" is a-buzz in my head because of a discussion on a listserve the other month, in conjunction with a panel at Writes House on the same subject -- with Shawn Walker, Josh Schuster, Al Filreis. Perhaps not.)

just wanted to say that I (maria d) explicitly drew attention to the fact that many different institutional/ pedagogical contexts were represented at the conference and that we'd do well to articulate some of those distinctions and what they meant. also, michael davidson, in a different way, during his talk, dwelt a great deal on academic institutions and their entanglement with various sorts of funding that affect what gets taught, what poetry gets written, how things get framed ideologically, etc. Also, Lyn H made the very apt comment that it is our institutions that need to be re-educated, not necessarily our students.

↑ Index

159. Stephen Vincent
Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned those behaviors (via ample examples whether in the language or acted out on the street). I suspect there will always be that tension and fight in the culture, at least my experience of it. But going back to Williams, is it possible to view his double-dipping into offensive, particularly anti-Semitic language in the context of his half or part Jewishness? In fact, in the same breath, has any critic delved into this internal pluralism as one of the ways of looking into at least part of William's interest and willingness to take on American culture as a pluralistic condition. (Whereas Eliot and Pound, in the face of the European migrations of the turn of the century, clearly took the xenophobic route out of the country.) WCW is one of a number of great writers in this century who are half or part Jewish. In the context of the evidence and questions surrounding his anti-Semitic quotes, I think of Proust who, on one hand, was one of the public leaders in the fight to free Dreyfus and, on the other, Remembrance of Things Past has a strong share of anti-Semitic caricatures. I suspect these internal battles are part of the condition of being a blend of different cultures.

Not being Jewish, I, nevertheless, do have a sense that the issues raised by those who are half-Jewish (in relationship to Jews and non-Jews) is bubbling as something not spoken or addressed, perhaps ignored by some as a painful taboo, or somehow an embarrassment to acknowledge. As to why, I cannot speak. These are issues, of course, that can be raised about the work of any writer who comes out of a biological blend of any historically oppositional groups (and perhaps classes). I suspect for many who carry such blends, it's both a gift and a curse - leading to these curious quandaries of point of view that come up in Williams and others. These blends and the particular consequent larger social overview, however, clearly lead to some great writing.

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

Kent Johnson wrote:

> Michael:

More later, but for now just to point out that this quote from Mariani is rather pathetic as a "defense." Pound had strong relationships with Jewish writers too. One can be subject to "the popular racial myths of his time" and still have lots of chummy relationships with the subaltern other! (Remember Yugoslavia?)

And as for those "comic-strip vulgarisms" (the Jewish kids in Brooklyn ate those comics right up, didn't they?) that suffuse WCW's letters, does Mariani imply that _everyone_ was using them? Of course WCW was a "product of his time" as are we all, and of course he's a "complex" figure. But choices can still be made, and one is not condemned (especially one whose self-proclaimed task is to cleanse the language!) to topple headlong into the most hateful vocabulary. Mariani's little quote is quite simply apologetic slop of the hero-worshipping kind.

And as for your reading of the "irony" in Williams's remark about the Jews and the Bomb, I doubt it. "Kike" pops up like dandelions in May in his letters and little irony is apparent. Be careful here. It's one thing to misread comments about ready-made classroom phrases that Language poets use; this is something of a more serious kind.

Kent>>

↑ Index

160. Robin Kemp
My new chapbook! (Shameless plug)
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Dear poet friends:

I am putting out my second chapbook, titled "Goin' For Broke", for the simple reason that I hope to use the proceeds to pay my fall tuition! It's a mix of formal, narrative, and experimental free-verse poetry -- some of which has been or will be published elsewhere; others of which actually won an award.

For those of you who have my 1994 chapbook "Brave Walking," I am pleased to say that the work in this chapbook is even better!

Each copy is $5. (An extra buck for postage and handling is gratefully accepted.) If you're interested, please backchannel me your snail-mail address, or mail check/m.o. directly to:

Robin Kemp
1107 Dante St.
New Orleans, LA
70118-2027

Selling poetry to pay for school?! It may sound impossible, but I think it will happen if I can sell about 250 copies by August 17. (Registration is the 18th; so far I am almost 1/3 of the way there. If I sell 75 books = 1 class, 147 books = 2 classes, 237 books = 3 classes.)

Thank you, everybody! And a special shout out to my friends in Atlanta and Philly/West Chester!

Much love,
Robin

↑ Index

161. jarnot
address query
Tue 13 Jul 1999

I am looking for addresses (regular or email) for the following people:

Amiri Baraka
Beverly Dahlen
Serge Fauchereau
John Granger
Thom Gunn
Drummond Hadley
George Herms
Joanna McClure
Irving Petlin
Gustaf Sobin

Any assistance would be greatly appreciated. Please back channel me at [redacted]

Thanks,
Lisa Jarnot

↑ Index

162. Brian Lennon
Re: Submission Crucible
Tue 13 Jul 1999

---two more cents' worth:

When subscription invitations are included with rejection slips, they inevitably end up being sent to submitters who have already subscribed to the publication. For a submitter, this is just as impersonal and irritating as it is for an editor to receive submissions from writers who clearly haven't looked at the magazine. Surely every member of a magazine's staff ought to know the subscriber list by heart, right???

It also implicitly links the rejection of work to the failure to subscribe, which I think is a mistake. In my two years at The Iowa Review, the best work I saw almost always came in cold--- often multiply submitted, from names I didn't know, and generally unconcerned with whether it was like anything we'd ever published before. The result is that every issue changed our own idea of "what we publish."

Finding enough money to keep going is a huge problem, yes. But the problems really start when you begin to feel guilty rejecting subscribers/supporters.

Brian Lennon

rebecca wolff wrote:
<snip>
>Mr. Waber proposes that rejection letters ought to be accompanied by a >subscription form or some similar form of encouragement. I think this is a >great idea, and in fact had meant to do just that when starting Fence, but >was voted down by the rest of the Fence people on grounds of "adding insult >to injury," "rubbing salt in the wound," etc. What do y'all think about >this? Would you feel insulted, salted, annoyed, demeaned or otherwise >antagonized by such an enclosure?
>
>I'd really like to know. Because we'd really like to have more subscribers.
>

↑ Index

163. Juliana Spahr
Re: POETICS Digest - 10 Jul 1999 to 11 Jul 1999 (#1999-133)
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Meant subject line to be placeless yet can't figure out how to change in pine.

My only concern abaout place was that it kept getting presented as an absolute. Like I kept hearing, first get a place.

And that worried me b/c I can't get a place. I squatted one at U of Hawai'i and then the football team squatted on top of me. I got crushed under their equipment and had to get out.

So I wanted to say, there are things to do that aren't about place. Like I think it is really great that the Writers House, got a house, got a $40,000 startup, tehn got another million. I think that is the best thing ever. And I love the Writers House devotedly.

But I think one could also take $20,000, if one can get that, and give it to graduate student and they can make 4 journals and two chapbooks eries and then yahoo, they've got a place in a different sense.

Or I would rather have production over housing.

But I do realize that sometimes one can have both. Which I imagine U Penn can have.

And when you can get both, one should get both.

So my point was not very profound. Just reflecting my anxiety wfrom a university that went from spending $4 aa square foot five years ago to $.32 a square foot last year.

↑ Index

164. Stephen Ellis
Re: soapbox of submission
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Why do poets need to submit to anything? Given that we mostly believe each our authority to be absolute in the realm of composition, and by extension, to everything else that reference and/or non-references touches or "may" touch, it seems ridiculous to suddenly be compelled to convince some stranger, by letter, what a great guy you are, and that s/he should publish your accompanying poems, because, and because, ad nauseum. Silly to feel responsible for reading them, sure, and no doubt horrifying to actually write one, an alternative may be working quietly and patiently toward, well, what "end" is anyone working toward of late in The Art anyway? It might be a relief & pleasure to print your own poems, read/send them to friends, while writing occasionally to the editors of those publications that excite you and (try to) say in not inconsiderable terms what it is about the work in question so makes it with you, etcetera. Eventually someone may actually ASK for poems. I mean let's don't be coy about it, one home truth is that the (poetry) publishing enterprise IS related to personal relationships between and among those who appear in this or that publication, ie., it's all very much clan-oriented, despite claims to objectivity, plurality and all that, at base, one publishes those who they admire. Reasons for admiration are numerous, but in most cases it's something that can't be conspired toward in a cover letter. I don't know ...

maybe there's too much "submitting" going on, without there being much groundwork laid out in terms of intersecting or common interests between those who have the Work and those who guide the Magazines.

And then again, there's likely little groundword laid out in the efforts of those who submit blindly to the idea that blind submission leads somewhere beyond the prices of the stamps. It might be useful for us all to take some measure of what it is we are doing (beyond submitting), and WHO it is we are doing the how and why of it FOR.

I, for one, get almost no submissions (for Oasia Broadsides), tho I don't advertise. I ask. Does that mean I'm operating a closed closet, a clothes closet, a close closet, what? Or I mean a "closed system"? In what ways and to what extent are we as editors supposed to remain "open" to all that accidence brings our way, including the cover letters covering the curricula vitae, previous publication lists and dangling modifiers of that sense of "person" that has us all on some impersonal mailing list of places to send their enormous manuscripts to? When Stephen Dignazio and I were doing :that:, we'd occasionally receive manuscripts of up to 100 pages, despite the stated maximum we could print was maybe five. Nothing WRONG, tho, with this, really just a matter of wanting each our own submissions to be personally regarded, like as if the editor had nothing else to read or do. Which sort of goes along with another misnomer, ie., that editors of magazines must therefore, in the minds of those who haven't attempted editing a magazine, have loads of money in addition to loads of time. So it was and is always difficult getting money for such projects, for this reason, and also because many of those most interested have perhaps even less money than the editors. But money is a problem for about 90% of the world's population. (What magazines are THEY submitting to, we wonder ...). It's a disturbing conundrum, the hustling after what looks to be mostly reputation. Why does "authority" in the sense I mentioned at the outset of this note have to mean authority over others, the acquisition of power(publication = power, make no mistake). Poets are specialists, yet the tongue is profoundly common. That being so, literal distribution needn't be the emergency it sometimes seems to be. Power might be thought distributive rather than cumulative, and in that sense, the organs of distribution - the literal number of them - could usefully be expanded, rather than sticking to the submissive standards that a more crowded henhouse might be said to require. Ie., ever seen a schizophrenic chicken? 'Nuff said.

S E

> From: "Patrick F. Durgin" <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: soapbox of submission
> Date: Mon, 12 Jul 1999 13:38:35 -0500
>
> Yeah, why do it at all if the whole wide world weren't at stake? I hear you there.
> Anecdote upon anecdote: I was receiving submissions without a cover letter, and sometimes without a letter or an SASE. My first thought was, what am I expected to do with these poems? No SASE, I immediately threw them out. No cover letter, I sent them back unread, no letter of explanation. Kenning doesn't print contributors notes, thus I really haven't a use for publication / bio in a letter, EXCEPT > insofar as these things merge with whatever sort of request a submiter (or "contributor") is making. After all, it is always, even in the case of solicited material, a request of someone's time and attention to submit work. I think it is key to include a cover letter of some sort, at least indicating that the work is coming with the intention of entering into conversation with the editor and her/his publication/press. Thus, it is a bit ridiculous to send to a publication/press with which one is unfamiliar. If it were only a matter of making the work available, the most direct and often most efficacious way to do this is to publish it yourself.

With Kenning, the editorial focus (which is made as explicit as possible by means of occassional "editor's note"s) presupposes that I read unsolicited mss as well as solicited mss with an equal emphasis. They would all wind up in the same place.

Another key way to enter into conversation with editors / publications is to purchase and read them.

Patrick F. Durgin

At 10:21 AM 7/12/99 -0500, rebecca wolff wrote:
Hello. It seems that often comments made in this venue are all too quickly divorced from their pragmatic source, ie:

Some guy (I think guy) asked what should be in a cover letter. The question is one that implies a degree of ignorance of the appropriate contents of a cover letter, and a desire to know more.

Being an editor of a magazine who is often asked that very question, presumably with quite direct results attached to my response, Iresponded pragmatically, in such a way that might attempt to guide the querent toward what I consider, in my editorial high-chair, to be the favored method of writing a cover letter. This is because, being an editor, I am an opinionated so-and-so. If someone asked you, a restaurant critic, say, how you liked your portobello mushroom, you'd probably waste no time in attempting to describe the degree of tenderness required for your pleasure.

Fence does not allow --or at least inasmuch as is possible--annoying cover letters to color our response to the actual poems submitted. But that doesn't mean we don't find them annoying and wish they could be amended. Amendment is the editor's dream. We wish to amend the whole wide world.

A different question is: "Why do editors get so testy about submissions submitted in ways they do not admire?"

> I would submit that this testiness is a hazard of the job, ie, we are unpaid laborers and cannot help but feel cranky and/or testy.
>
> Please send portobello mushrooms with your submissions
>
> _____
> k e n n i n g
> a newsletter of contemporary poetry
>
> _____
> http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
>
> _____
> 418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

165. Mark Wallace
tracking Brenda Coultas and Gillian McCain (fwd)
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Does anybody have recent phone numbers for Brenda Coultas or Gillian McCain? Backchannel would be great--thanks!

Mark Wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

166. KENT JOHNSON
The good doctor on circumcision
Tue 13 Jul 1999

Steve Shoemaker wrote, and Michael Magee, Chris Stroffolino, and Michael Boughn agree:

> To class Williams alongside Pound as an anti-semite seems to me ridiculous, and totally unsupported by the facts, at least as I've come across them in my reading of, and about, Williams. I would also second Michael's reading of the Williams

> *Hiroshima quote: it seems to me to be about anti-Semitism, not an expression of it.*

The anti-semitisms of WCW, Pound and Eliot were indeed different, cast according to the idiosyncracies of each. I never said they were exactly the same. What I said is that WCW was "robust" in his anti-semitism just as Pound and Eliot were robust in proclaiming theirs. The record is there, and it is amazing and somewhat disturbing to see people more or less trying to sweep it under the rug. An essay on Williams that may cause the four listees mentioned above to reconsider is found in Eliot Weinberger's _Works on Paper_. There, Weinberger quotes an extraordinary exchange between Pound and Williams on circumcision. I would ask someone to write back about the "irony" in WCW's comments therein.

And on the Hiroshima quote, which the above Listees find slyly ironic or else innocuous: Why not read the comment in its most obvious and revealing sense--particularly given WCW's well-documented prejudices? The remark is firmly in the classic knee-jerk blame-the-Jew reaction (a la Hollywood, big banks, etc.): Truman, Byrnes, Stimson, the Pentagon disappear, and it's the Jews (the small minority of Jews on the Manhattan Project one supposes) who are behind it all... One could ask: Would someone who was _not_ anti-semitic be capable of making such a statement?

By the way, because I thought Weinberger would be interested in this exchange, I shared some of it with him. In response to Michel Magee's remark that "... to simply call him anti-semitic or racist is to in fact say nothing at all. Among other things, one ends up missing the crucial fact of how the speech of ethnic minorities mediated Williams poetry: as in his famous characterization of his poetry as coming "out of the mouths of Polish mothers." Just who were these Polish mothers, do you think? I'd suggest that, like the Polish woman in "A Face of Stone," they were Jews.

Weinberger wrote:

"Magee is totally wrong that the Polish mothers were Jewish: obviously he doesn't know much about New Jersey! (You can quote me on that one!!)"

I point this out in the spirit of suggesting that when it comes to Williams, this matter of his vox populi as "mediated by ethnic voices" is not unmediated by the ideological aura of "quintessential americanness" that has grown up around his figure. And it may cause us to jump to hasty conclusions.

Kent

↑ Index

167. Billy Little
Re: Williams's tomb sweepers
Tue 13 Jul 1999

gee kent, what would he be saying if it weren't ironic? the awkwardness of the opening phrase makes me imagine there's an opposition, a previous sentence where he says the day of the blast everyone congratulates the scientists... the day after...the poor jews, he doesn't say the bloodthirsty so and sos, he doesn't say the money-hungry moabites, he says the poor jews with perhaps an understood phrase here which might go who get blamed for everything, he says we because he's a democrat, he's not aloof, he wants us to realize we're all in the same boat -- we have met the enemy and he is us. cultural brainwash is hard for the best of us to transcend, i think he's saying hatred is a cornerstone of america, anti-semitism was preached by the catholic church into the 60s, whites only beaches government policy into the 60s, until after Williams death. the church pitted the blacks against the jews diverting attention from their own slumlording, Henry Ford pointed the poor at the jews to conceal his own merciless exploitation, q.v. flint and fairborn?. Some of this discussion seems very typical of the American Left purist self obliteration nobody's good enough for my revolution dissension encouraged by the government shall we measure the reader against the read. first ones first stones

billy dotter of d. amerkun rebelution com little

Why don't they call it the cannon?
why don't they call it the canyon?
the big hole you are left in after you are taught and must unlearn to get even even to see at all.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

168. Elizabeth Treadwell
Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Tue 13 Jul 1999

> I second David Golumbia's words: "to let the lack of such (or even subtle mis-steps) get in the way of reading submitted work is disturbing too...". I didn't check my horoscope to see if I should > be making public statements today, so maybe I'm out of line here. if so: sorry. Allen Bramhall

For what it's worth here at Outlet I prefer subtle mis-steps; it's like realizing your "blind date" is a real person--heartwarming.

I agree that the writer ought to be at least vaguely familiar with the mag. Also, it is nice to hear feedback on prior issues, and this is often the only way it comes--not a great spectacle but true nonetheless.

And I'd also agree that all's fair in simultanaeity when you haven't heard for, say, the length of a typical pregnancy.

Elizabeth

Outlet
http://users.lanminds.com/dblelucy

↑ Index

169. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Tue 13 Jul 1999

' '

Who can tell what will happen in this topsy-turvy world, what the new day will bring? Who can foretell anything in this floating world, where dreams are words and words are dreams, where words dream sunsets and creeks spil- ling over, flooding lands with waters and delights? In this fair world, nothing is ever for certain, and we give ourselves up to whatever happi- ness may befall us for the shortest while. In this evanescent world of ours, butterflies may return to their chrysalides, clouds may pour forth their very souls upon the earth. In this fleeting world, fortunes are made and lost in an instant, loves sing forth upon new green shoots, and elder logs make way for myriad and luminescent forms of life.

↑ Index

170. A H Bramhall
A Party For Ted
Tue 13 Jul 1999

I miss Ted Berrigan tho I didn't know him. not to valorize him, not in this edgy, price-conscious age. I miss the effect of him making or missing his effect. didn't he have fun, no matter what hole he happened to dig? one sees clearly that I don't know him, he never saw me, we never parleyed. yet anyone can think of the possible range, and the impossible. suddenly the rain seems glamourous because we, you and I, have been discussing it and dodging it, and remembering someone who did something, being something to our something. you know, personal stuff in an age of cash rebates. no, valorization doesn't work. Ted Berrigan will be Ted Berrigan till the very day he doesn't die. no matter if the Collected Poems And Wants Ads of the poet finds its way onto my shelf, the writer will be something, the reader something else. that doesn't mean heat can't exist, we've all seen the loss of heat. so now a car goes by because it's early morning. just linkage, a new age concept. if you buy ten of these we'll throw in one of what you want, till the end of time. I miss Ted Berrigan but not him only. I too have lived, thus my biography. I could give particulars but they exist as marketing ploys. I sense something somewhere because words haven't left, not in this rainy climate of value. I get wise, or think I do. this business of what remains, when someone leaves, or never was there, and other questions: who needs them? need them or not, I will and you will continue to repeat them, even with this valuable rain. and Ted Berrigan will remain somewhere. isn't that just about enough?

↑ Index

171. Balestrieri, Peter

Name That Quote

Tue 13 Jul 1999

In "My Darling Clementine," Alan Mowbray (who's playing Thorndike, the drunken Tragedian) says farewell to Francis Ford (who's playing Dad, the old porter and Thorndike's drinking buddy and keeper) and recites some lines that begin "Great souls" and then there's "allegiance" in the middle and it ends with "burn." If anybody recognizes this quote, please let me know. Pete

↑ Index

172. Karen Weiser

Re: Submission Crucible

Tue 13 Jul 1999

In response to Rebecca Wolf's question-
>

I personally wouldn't feel insulted if you enclosed a subscription form with a rejection notice because if I am submitting to your magazine it means I like it and am probably wanting to subscribe at some point.

Karen

↑ Index

173. KENT JOHNSON

(Fwd) WCW [from E. Weinberger]

Tue 13 Jul 1999

The following is from Eliot Weinberger,who has written on Williams's anti-Semitism in _Works on Paper_ (New Directions).
Kent

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------
Date: Tue, 13 Jul 1999 18:09:19 -0400
To: [redacted]
From: Eliot Weinberger <[redacted]>
Subject: WCW

Dear Kent--

Thanks for forwarding me the various letters on WCW, anti-Semitism, and the Bomb. A few notes:

1) WCW is notoriously resistant to all attempts to summarize his thoughts or opinions. Nevertheless, his writings are strewn with anti-Semitic remarks: The short story that begins: "He was one of those fresh Jewish types you want to kill at sight, the presuming poor whose looks change the minute cash is mentioned." Or the essay "Against the Weather" that claims that Judaism is a "tribal-religious cult" that is "precisely the equivalent" of Fascism. (Written in 1939!) "Some fucking bastard of a yid." "Horrible overfed Jewish types." And so on. All of which must be taken in the context that one of WCW's grandparents was a Jew.

2) "Some of his best friends..." Well, ok. So were Pound's. (But not Eliot-- the worst of the bunch because he was a snob.) Consider this extreme case: Simultaneous to his promotion of the terrorist-segregationist Kasper, Pound was having a warm correspondence with Langston Hughes. (They had first become friends when Ez contributed to a fund-raiser for the Scottsboro Boys!) Along with Jewish friends and African American lovers, WCW was also collaborating with the bizarre Chinese White Supremacist David Rafael Wang.

3) WCW's so-called Puerto-Ricanness has been explored, not so convincingly, in a book by Julio Marzan called The Spanish American Roots of WCW. It is rather like Alexandre Dumas' Negritude. WCW was not trying to "pass," as someone said: he came from the age of the melting pot, and his were very white (Spanish) Puetro Rican roots.

4) The assertion that the Polish mothers were Jewish is really a stretch. Polish Jews are "Polish Jews" or "Jews." The default setting for "Pole" is Polish Catholic, just as it is white for "American."

5) Hiroshima. When I first published the WCW letter-- in my essay on Yasusada, as an example of the unreliability of poets as "witnesses"-- it struck me as a bizarre take on the explosion of the Bomb the day before. Since then I've come across an enigmatic poem by Lorine Niedecker, written a few months later, and I now wonder whether the identification of the Bomb as a specifically Jewish artifact was not more general:

> New!
> Reason explodes. Atomic split > shows one element
> Jew
>
> Now hide
> who can bombarded particles > of international > pride

6) It seems to me undeniable that it is very difficult to think of a major American modernist who was not 1) black or Jewish AND 2) not racist or anti-Semitic. Hatred is an absolutely intrinsic part of American modernism, and as the heirs of that legacy we have to work it out.

> all best--
>
> Eliot

↑ Index

174. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: Meow Press is Moving!

Wed 14 Jul 1999

---

dear list:

trying to find Joel K. and MEOW press.
If any of you have heard from him within the last month--backlist pls. I'd appreciate it.

Todd Baron
ReMap

↑ Index

175. Jeffrey Jullich
Re: Submission Crucible -Reply
Wed 14 Jul 1999

>>>Mr. Waber proposes that rejection letters ought to be accompanied by a subscription form . . . "adding insult to injury," "rubbing salt in the wound," etc. What do y'all think about this? Would you feel insulted, salted, annoyed, demeaned or otherwise antagonized by such an enclosure? I'd really like to know. Because we'd really like to have more subscribers.

Why do you say only "rejection letters" should be accompanied by a form? What is it about your ~acceptance~ letters or, for that matter, even solicited contributors that makes you leave them out of the equation? If you'd have qualms sending unasked-for subscription forms to, say, a Charles Bernstein, or Geoffrey O'Brien, or Fanny Howe, when you notify them of publication, that hesitation should apply to those whom you decline to publish, as well.

Some things to consider:

It's perfectly legitimate for a magazine to run a subscription campaign, and even to assemble a mailing list from the addresses of "submitters." But, in scrupulous business terms, that effort should be treated as its own separate account; otherwise, you're piggybacking your development campaign onto the backs of somebody else's 33 cent stamp.

There may be genuine reasons for deciding not to subscribe to journals and to buy them in bookstores, instead. The covers of perfectbound journals are usually not designed to be folded over and squashed to fit into narrow city mailboxes. So immediately, subscription means reading a damaged copy.

The publication schedule of small press journals is, as a rule, undependable. You never know exactly when they're going to come out. To be truly subscription-oriented, journals would have to hold themselves to the same firm commitment of unbending dates as periodicals, guaranteeing when the books will be sent out, and those dates should be advertised as such. A subscription is a ~contract.~ We're conditioned to these nuisances of punctuality and efficiency, and paying for something that you're never sure when you'll see it may be a reason for its unpopularity.

Also, the climate of non-literary journal magazines (glossies) we're acculturated to, where subscriptions are standard, has learned to run certain features to encourage an air of dialogue between the subscriber/reader and the magazine. Specifically, letters to the editor columns or "polls" as part of the aura that builds a subscription base. That's what you'd be buying into. Such lures foster

(even if an illusion) an impression of things being ~interactive,~ so that subscription fees are dismissed as only part of a larger two-way communication. A subscription campaign requires ~bait,~ in addition to the product itself. In same Madison Avenue glossy culture, subscribers are offered substantial financial discounts off newstand copies, which literary journals do not offer. Or t-shirts or mugs.

By sending out subscription forms like that, now you're the one entering into the "pretty please" realm of the unsolicited. And you risk having the reputation of your journal and its logo become part of the junk mail pile.

Personally, I've been spending about $35.00 a month, currently, sending off for small press journals ($3, maybe $5, rarely $7 a pop) who do not have national distributors. (That does not include the off-the-rack ones I buy, at about one a week; I have been known to buy $80.00 worth of literary magazines at a single shot.) I find it presumptuous, this bias that "submitters" are somehow not pulling their share of the weight. How do you ~know~ that the recipient of the rejection letter hasn't bought every issue to date? But, I must say, I very much like the feel of ~not~ playing into conventional consumerism that comes of this practice. It feels very personal: whoever mailed that journal wrote "Thanks!" on the outside of the mailing envelope! Converting the audience ("submitters") into cash cow returns the literary journal to a whole ethos (sorry) of target demographics and such, which I thought the iconoclasm of the poetry was ostensibly subverting. And once literary journals have become mixed into the blizzard of "Bill me later" forms, why not just belly up and subscribe to ~W?~

An alternative to treating the (frankly unpromising) "submitters" as golden goose might be to step up the drive for advertisers.

I hope this broadens the ramifications for "we'd really like to have".

JJ

↑ Index

176. Pierre Joris

URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being made!]]

Wed 14 Jul 1999

---

thot this would interest list members -- Pierre

-------- Original Message --------
Subject: [Fwd: URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being made!]
Date: Wed, 14 Jul 1999 06:24:24 +0100
From: John Whiting <[redacted]>

Reply-To: John Whiting <[redacted]>
Organization: Diatribal Press
To: John Whiting <[redacted]>

Even as I write my review of Matthew Lasar's _Pacifica Radio_, it threatens to become an obituary. When a self-perpetuating group of people sit in absolute control of a large amount of money, they want to play with it.

John

Return-Path: <[redacted]>
by mail1-gui.server.which.net (Post.Office MTA v3.1.2 release (PO203-101c) ID# 0-33929U70000L2S50) with ESMTP id AAA10035 for <[redacted]>;
Wed, 14 Jul 1999 05:34:23 +0100
by dodo.prod.itd.earthlink.net (8.8.7/8.8.5) with SMTP id VAA01352;
Tue, 13 Jul 1999 21:19:43 -0700 (PDT)
Reply-To: "savepacifica" <[redacted]>
From: "savepacifica" <[redacted]>
To: "savepacifica" <[redacted]>
Subject: URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being made!
Date: Tue, 13 Jul 1999 23:19:29 -0500

A critical moment is at hand.

At this time (8:30 PM PDT, 7/13/87) guards are acting under orders of the Pacifica National Board to clear the KPFA building of protesters and ALL STAFF!!

Mark Mericle was forcibly removed from the air earlier today, inspiring a protest demonstration, which at this time consists of 300+ demonstrators. The guards are now acting under orders of the Pacifica National Board to remove not only the protesters, but also ALL STAFF. Protesters and staff are being arrested and taken away. Let your voice be heard! Go to the station and protest the incredible acts of the board! Go and witness democracy disappearing from Pacifica ...

As always, check http://www.savepacifica.net for the latest on the crisis.

Earlier, Media Alliance received a copy of a disturbing e-mail, copied below -------- TEXT OF E-MAIL RECEIVED TODAY BY MEDIA ALLIANCE IN SAN FRANCISCO... UNAUTHENTICATED AS OF 6 PM TUESDAY!

(Note: Micheal Palmer is a real estate developer in Houston, and a member of the KPFT advisory board. He has been said to favor the sale of either KPFA or WBAI - both of which are "grandfathered" onto commercial frequencies and are worth about $60 million and $120 million respectively. The money would ostensibly be used to set up an endowment for Pacifica.

KPFB, referred to in paragraph 2, is a low power transmitter in Berkeley, which reaches only the immediate Berkeley area. It was originally set up to simulcast KPFA's coverage to areas in North Berkeley which cannot receive KPFA clearly because of hills between the transmitter and that area. It broadcasts some original programming, including live coverage of Berkeley city council and school board meetings)

> From: Palmer, Micheal @ Houston Galleria,
> [redacted]
> To: 'Mary Francis Berry', [redacted]
>
> Hello Dr. Berry,
>
> I salute your fortitude in scheduling a news conference opportunity in the beloved Bay Area regarding one of the most pressing issues of our time.....
>
> But seriously, I was under the impression there was support in the proper quarters, and a definite majority, for shutting down that unit and re-programming immediately. Has that changed? Is there consensus among the national staff that anything other than that is acceptable/bearable? I recall Cheryl saying that the national staff wanted to know with certitude that they supported 100% by the Board in whatever direction was taken; what direction is being taken?
>
> As an update for you and Lynn I spoke with the only radio broker I know last week and his research shows $750,000-$1.25m for KPFB. There would be a very "shallow pool" of buyers for a repeater signal such as this and it would be difficult to do a marketing effort quietly due to the shortage of buyers. So there is no profound latent value to that asset. The primary signal would lend itself to a quiet marketing scenario of discreet presentation to logical and qualified buyers. This is the best radio market in history and while public companies may see a dilutive effect from a sale (due to the approximate 12 month repositioning effort needed), they would still be aggressive for such a signal. Private media companies would be the most aggressive in terms of price, which he thinks could be in the $65-75m range depending on various aspects of a deal. It would be possible to acquire other signals in the area, possibly more than one, to re-establish operations, but it could take a few years to complete if we want to maximize proceeds from the initial license transfer, or leave only $10-20m in arbitrage gain when purchase(s) is complete. None of this reflects tax consequences. This broker, just like any other that would undertake such an effort, would need certain agreements in place prior to starting.

Mary I think any such transfer we would ever consider requires significant analysis, not so much regarding a decision to go forward, but how to best undertake the effort and to deploy the resulting capital with the least amount of tax, legal and social disruption. I believe the Finance Committee will undertake a close review of the Audigraphics data provided recently to determine what it is costing us per listener, per subscriber, per market, per hour of programming...in order give the Executive Director and the General Managers benchmarks for improvement. Even with that data my feeling is that a more beneficial disposition would be of the New York signal as there is a smaller subscriber base without the long and emotional history as the Bay Area, far more associated value, a similarly dysfunctional staff though far less effective and an overall better opportunity to redefine Pacifica going forward. It is simply the more strategic asset.

With this in mind I would encourage frank description of the realities of the media enviornment we operate in and of Pacifica's available resources to participate and have impact in the evolving media world. The Executive Committee, at a minimum, should have access to experts (whether from Wall Street, NPR/CPB, Microsoft or otherwise) to get a strong reality check (me included) about radio and Pacifica's position in it so that informed decisions can be made. My feeling is that we are experiencing a slow financial death which is having the normal emotional outbursts commensurate with such a disease. We will continually experience similar events, in fact we have been experiencing similar events over the past several years, primarily because we are not self supporting through subscriber contributions and have a self imposed constraint on asset redeployment that leaves us cash starved at a time when our industry is being propelled in new directions, each requiring capital outlays of consequence. We're boxed in at our own will. This board needs to be educated, quickly, and to take action that will be far more controversial that the KPFA situation. How can we get there?

So, now I've exhaled more than I should, but you know where I'm at. Let's do something.

MDP

↑ Index

177. geraets
Under New Management: NZ's new writing
Wed 14 Jul 1999

Some of you may be aware that Alan Loney, a fine poet and editor, has recently relinquished the editing of A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE WHOLE WORLD, a magazine of experiemental writing in New Zealand.

It continues as the only magazine in NZ supporting and supported by experimental writers. The June issue now available, ABDOTWW/12, comprises a reissue of Leigh Davis's long poem book, WILLY'S GAZETTE, which first appeared in 1983. The magazine is proud to be involved in the reissue of this landmark book.

For those of you who may have a specific interest in Leigh's book, or in new writing in NZ, please feel most encouraged to be in touch. The magazine is produced quarterly and a year's subscription is a mere $US25 (postage included).

John Geraets
Editor--ABDOTWW
[redacted]
11-20 Poynton Tce
Auckland 1001, NZ.

↑ Index

178. Ron Persons
Re: submission guidelines
Wed 14 Jul 1999

Years ago I sent in poems and SASE. Then read article in literary magazine in which several editors of poetry magazines termed this practice rude and thoughtless. The least I could do was to introduce myself, give the editors some sense of who was sending the poems, and speak briefly but in detail of the last issue of their magazine. An editor on this list prefers to have graduate school(and when attended), if any, and recent publications in order to place the poet. Please, editors, publish these preferences right along with the address for submissions. thanks, RP

>From: Douglas Barbour <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Re: submission guidelines
>Date: Tue, Jul 13, 1999, 10:38 AM
>

> Gee, it's all very interesting reading the back & forth here, but I must say I still tend to go with what a poet/editor told me many years ago: send in some poems & a SASE. The poems should speak for themselves. And I have to dmit that when I did edit, I found most accompanying letters got in the way...
>
> Douglas Barbour
> Department of English
> University of Alberta
> Edmonton Alberta Canada T6G 2E5
> (h) [780] [redacted] (b) [780] [redacted]
> http://www.ualberta.ca/~dbarbour/dbhome.htm
>
> > A bottle thrown
> > by loggers out of a wagon
> > past midnight
> > explodes against rock.
> > This green fragment has behind it
> > the _booomm_ when glass
> > tears free of of its smoothness
> >
> > > Michael Ondaatje

↑ Index

179. Douglas Barbour
Re: ordering Carnivocal
Wed 14 Jul 1999

To, I hope, clarify further:

Red Deer Press (its Marketing Assistant) told me this:

<<I suppose they could order from Canada if they are an individual. I'm not sure if bookstores or wholesalers can buy CDs from Canada.>>

That would be to call Raincoast Books, which has a (Canadian) [redacted]. If, as seems to be the case from here to the US, the 800 number doesn't work, people could try their e-mail address:

[redacted]

It's $16.95 CAN (+ postage, I'd assume).

Douglas Barbour
Department of English
University of Alberta
Edmonton Alberta Canada T6G 2E5

(h) [780] [redacted] (b) [780] [redacted]
http://www.ualberta.ca/~dbarbour/dbhome.htm

A bottle thrown
by loggers out of a wagon
past midnight
explodes against rock.
This green fragment has behind it
the _booomm_ when glass
tears free of of its smoothness

Michael Ondaatje

↑ Index

180. Michael Magee
Re: (Fwd) WCW [from E. Weinberger]
Wed 14 Jul 1999

Kent, last post on this quickly tiring strain: 1) Eliot Weinberger's post to you below is significantly more measured in its evaluation of WCW than your own posts were; 2) nonetheless, his quoting of the line "He was one of those fresh Jewsih types you want to kill at sight" is a misrepresentation: it occurs in the short story I mentioned before, "A Face of Stone" where it is completely undone over the course of the story, as the doctor finds out that the wife of this man [the "Polish mother" I mentioned before who is indeed Jewish] had "contracted rickets in German occupied Poland because of severe malnutrition, that her entire family had been wiped out over there." Okay? 3) To say, "Yeah, Pound had some Jewish friends too" is to distort the picture: Williams had an overwhelming number of friendships with Jewish poets and thinkers - few of them sheepish (i.e. they would have really let him have it for any perceived anti-semitism.)

Look, I'm not trying to champion Williams's approach to race here, I'm simply saying that to witch hunt him on this issue is paralyzing - it prevents us from making any distinctions, any ethical choices, and in fact, it replicates the very phenomenon of separating-wheat-from-chaff that is the modus operandi of fascist action. When Weinberger says that "All of which must be taken in the context that one of WCW's grandparents was a Jew," he is pointing toward precisely what I, and many others, have been saying: that the question, "Why do anti-semitic trusims pepper Williams's writings?" is not so easily answered; but if answered complexly might be pretty valuable.

-m.

According to KENT JOHNSON: >
> Dear Kent-- >
> Thanks for forwarding me the various letters on WCW, anti-Semitism, and the > Bomb. A few notes:
>
> 1) WCW is notoriously resistant to all attempts to summarize his thoughts > or opinions. Nevertheless, his writings are strewn with anti-Semitic > remarks: The short story that begins: "He was one of those fresh Jewish > types you want to kill at sight, the presuming poor whose looks change the > minute cash is mentioned." Or the essay "Against the Weather" that claims > that Judaism is a "tribal-religious cult" that is "precisely the > equivalent" of Fascism. (Written in 1939!) "Some fucking bastard of a yid."
> "Horrible overfed Jewish types." And so on. All of which must be taken in > the context that one of WCW's grandparents was a Jew.
>
> 2) "Some of his best friends..." Well, ok. So were Pound's. (But not > Eliot-- the worst of the bunch because he was a snob.) Consider this > extreme case: Simultaneous to his promotion of the terrorist-segregationist > Kasper, Pound was having a warm correspondence with Langston Hughes.
(They > had first become friends when Ez contributed to a fund-raiser for the > Scottsboro Boys!) Along with Jewish friends and African American lovers, > WCW was also collaborating with the bizarre Chinese White Supremacist
David
> Rafael Wang.
>
> 3) WCW's so-called Puerto-Ricanness has been explored, not so convincingly, > in a book by Julio Marzan called The Spanish American Roots of WCW. It is > rather like Alexandre Dumas' Negritude. WCW was not trying to "pass," as > someone said: he came from the age of the melting pot, and his were very > white (Spanish) Puetro Rican roots.
>
> 4) The assertion that the Polish mothers were Jewish is really a stretch.
> Polish Jews are "Polish Jews" or "Jews." The default setting for "Pole" is > Polish Catholic, just as it is white for "American."
>
> 5) Hiroshima. When I first published the WCW letter-- in my essay on > Yasusada, as an example of the unreliability of poets as > "witnesses"-- it struck me as a bizarre take on the explosion of the > Bomb the day before. Since then I've come across an enigmatic poem by > Lorine Niedecker, written a few months later, and I now wonder > whether the identification of the Bomb as a specifically Jewish > artifact was not more general:

>
> New!
> Reason explodes. Atomic split > shows one element
> Jew
>
> Now hide
> who can bombarded particles
> of international > pride
>
>
> 6) It seems to me undeniable that it is very difficult to think of a major > American modernist who was not 1) black or Jewish AND 2) not racist or > anti-Semitic. Hatred is an absolutely intrinsic part of American modernism, > and as the heirs of that legacy we have to work it out.
>
>
> all best--
>
> Eliot
>

↑ Index

181. KENT JOHNSON

Purity

Wed 14 Jul 1999

May I indulge in some self-defense, please?

Stephen Vincent wrote:

> Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned those behaviors

Stephen, if I point out, as I did, that there is textual evidence of a strong anti-Semitic strain in Williams, why is this "self-righteousness"? I responded to what I felt was a significant blind spot in Billy Little's typically-provocative post, and did so in a reasonable way, I thought. Then there were four indignant responses, all of which strongly denied the applicability of the term, a couple of these calling my post "ridiculous." So I responded, pointing people to some specific evidence, and now am accused by you of being self-righteous, by implication blind to my own likely racism, and of trying to throw WCW "out with the bathwater."

I _love_ Williams. If he was more of a prick, more humanly sinful than the canon-makers have let on, that does nothing to diminish the greatness of his poetry. And in some ways the darkness makes the greatness all the more fascinating! The record is the record (which, yes, is open to differing interpretations), and I think it's best to talk about it without the innuendo you interject above. Kent

↑ Index

182. Ryan Knighton, Editor
Re: Submission Crucible
Wed 14 Jul 1999

I suppose there's another question hiding in Rebecca's (not to put questions in your mouth): I'm also curious what others think about submitting to journals/magazines you don't subscribe to. I would say more than 95% of what we receive at TCR is from people not on our subscription lists (I'm sure this is a common story).

Date sent: Tue, 13 Jul 1999 15:59:15 -0500
Send reply to: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
From: Karen Weiser <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Submission Crucible
To: [redacted]

> In response to Rebecca Wolf's question-
>
> I personally wouldn't feel insulted if you enclosed a subscription form with a rejection notice because if I am submitting to your magazine it means I like it and am probably wanting to subscribe at some point.
>
> Karen

Ryan Knighton, Editor
The Capilano Review
2055 Purcell Way
N. Vancouver V7J 3H5
PH: [redacted]

↑ Index

183. Carol L. Hamshaw
Re: SUBMISSION IMPOSSIBLE
Wed 14 Jul 1999

We publish with First serial rights. We, as all journals in Canada do, have a policy to publish only original, unpublished work. This is largely due to the policy of our major funder, The Canada Council, who stipulate that journals publish unpublished work. Nearly all journals in Canada receive significant amount of support from the Can-Council, and its the main reason any of them survive.

It is unfortunate that the infrastructure, policies and many decisions are determined by the capitalist system but until you can actually publish and print without it costing money, we have to negotiate that. I have learned that TCR pays its contributors at the high end of the scale, and we're proud of that, that we can and do support writers and artists. We aim to survive so we can continue to do that.

Since I am only the Managing Editor of my journal, and there is an Editor who makes the final decisions about what to publish, I don't think of myself as an editor first but as an Arts Administrator. I fill in grant application forms, handle the subscription list, promotions, publicity, manage the reading of 100 submissions a month with a small group of volunteers, organize and prepare board meetings, fulfill all the legal requirements of being a nonprofit society, etc.

I look at it as a matter of survival and pragmatics; the editor does the artistic direction. In order to gain resources and maintain them, I admit I do see this as a business and make decisions based on principles like "inefficiency" "strain on resources" and what not. So if a submission, or anything else is obviously going to use up the time of myself, the editor, and/or the volunteers without a possibility of fruition or a high likelihood of difficulty that outweighs the results, I make the decision to reject it. The simultaneous submission policy, as the policy of original, and unpublished work, is clear in our guidelines which can be obtained by mail, email or on our website; they are also listed in several writing market directories, though i have recently discovered that that is with some severe mistakes on occasion. I didn't put TCR into the position of competition, I think the simultaneous submitter does that, out of a lack of knowledge for what effect it has on the journal and of the monetary structure that the journal exists in.

On a final note, arts in Canada seems to be under a government compensation system: the arts are presumed to not be able to survive in the regular consumer market so the governments (municipal, provincial and federal) devise programs that fund the arts in order to compensate for this fallacy of our economy. The programs are full of hoops, and attempts at judging the value of a project, its longetivity, and audience range, in order to have a rationale to justify funding it. This results in a lot of catch-22s, most obviously that the larger one's audience is, the more worthy of government support it is but the size of audience is determined by the amount of money an organization gets from the private sector, in subscriptions, admissions, etc. Related to this is the constant encouragement to arts groups to become more independent and if they don't make efforts towards financial independence, their funding is reduced or completely cut. So while an arts nonprofit can begin being protected from capitalist imperatives, it hardly remains protected from it (not that I think it should be, entirely), as the ideology of market values seeps over through the grant criteria and adjudication process. I don't know what to do about it.

"Lowther,John" wrote:

> i'd asked why editors cared about simultaneous submissions
>
> Carol Hamshaw wrote back saying (i'm parsing with emphasis);
>
> *just as we were putting the issue together, someone (...) saw the exact piece in another journal. without having been told by the author (though I hope we would have been when we came to sending out the formal contract) we wasted some time, and very nearly would have wasted a certain amount of money on production. (...) [if] it is a simultaneous submission: I feel there is no sense spending the time to read it if you are from the start possibly competing with another publication to secure the rights.
>
> thanx carol, for all the detail and such - but i still find that i'm not very clear about some things in this - i take it that the capilano review "secures 1st time rights" or something like that ? you don't have permanent rights to it do you ?
>
> *what strikes me as very strange, relative to how i think about it, is that i can't imagine why i wd care that something i'd published or was going to publish had appeared in some other locale or was to do so... - but then to learn that at least part of the problem is also that some editors (i'm extrapolating from you carol) feel that magazines are competing, presumable ~to win~ something, ie, "the rights"*

> i wonder how many publishers of mags (on this list fer instance) feel this way ? or more specifically - how many after publishing, have "the rights" ? and is it seen as some sort of investment ? - i'm imagining that the hope runs something like this "when X is as famous as john ashbery, and they wanna do a _selected_ i'll get my payback then for this not too profitable publishing"
>
> somewhere i'd heard about all this stuff but i had the impression that it only held true for things like parnassus or the paris review - i guess everybody's just doing what they feel the need for - but for all you editors out there i'd like to note : i'm not competing with you and i don't feel, nor can i see how yr competing with me
>
> (ok, except maybe the paris review, whose ass i'm gonna wup next time i see it)

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

184. Michael Boughn
Re: The good doctor on circumcision
Wed 14 Jul 1999

I find it amusing that by indicating a poem and using the word complexity I find myself implicitly accused of being an apologist for anti-Semitism.

It must be nice be so . . . sure.

Mike

↑ Index

185. Richard Dillon
Re: soapbox of submission
Wed 14 Jul 1999

If a pop song is a hit it is played on a million stations at once. But in the paper based lit biz your songwerke gets one shot in one fanatic mag and that's it.

↑ Index

186. Taylor Brady

Re: URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being made!]]

Wed 14 Jul 1999

Pierre,

Thanks for passing this along - this morning KPFA is playing only prerecorded broadcasts. Many staff, paid and unpaid, have been barred from the building after yesterday's demonstrations, during which programmer Dennis Bernstein was forcibly removed from the control booth by private security goons hired by Pacifica executive director Lynn Chadwick, and 52 protesters were arrested. It's unclear to me right now whether Bernstein has been fired, thus joining Larry Bensky and Robbie Osman, both of whom were dismissed for violating an inconsistent and rarely-invoked "internal gag rule" when they reported on-air about Chadwick's firing of KPFA general manager Nicole Sawaya. As further evidence of the national foundation's bad faith, their lawyers are moving ahead in pressing charges against protesters arrested in an earlier non-violent demonstration, some of whom were subjected to citizen's arrests by Ms. Chadwick herself after the Berkeley cops sought to resolve the situation without taking people into custody. Apparently the forcible application of state power couldn't come fast enough for the executive director of an organization with its roots in opposition to that very power, and whose nationally-syndicated news program, Democracy Now, bills itself as "the exception to the rulers."

All of these moves are rooted in the Foundation's efforts to "restructure" KPFA in order to maximize what Chadwick and Pacifica board chair Mary Francis Berry have been calling, in a fairly odious rhetorical sleight-of-hand, "diversity." Of course, this means nothing more than market share, as is made amply evident by the "Plan B" option discussed in the e-mail attachment you sent. For listees outside the Bay Area (and the WBAI and KPFK broadcast areas in NYC and LA), today's article in the SF Bay Guardian might be useful as a pointer to more info: "KPFA's local advisory board - along with the boards of sister stations KPFK, in Los Angeles, and WBAI, in New York - has filed suit against Pacifica, charging that the foundation's new governance structure violates California's corporation law (see "Pacifica Power Grab," 2/17/99). For more information, go to www.savepacifica.net"

Sorry to take so much bandwidth for a non-poetry issue, but it felt particularly resonant in light of the past few days' postings on poetic/public "space." I.e., that here is a public space of both the architectural and "productive" (thanks, Juliana) variety - and really, in terms of radio, one of only a small handful left, given that the "other" public radio, NPR, is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of Archer Daniels Midland. Not to mention that KPFA is probably the only station that ever would have given Jack Spicer a radio show...

Best,
Taylor
-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of Pierre Joris
Sent: Wednesday, July 14, 1999 4:50 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being made!]]

<< Message: nsmailLB.TMP (5.56 KB) >> thot this would interest list members -- Pierre

-------- Original Message --------
Subject: [Fwd: URGENT: Staff are being cleared from KPFA station, arrests are being made!]
Date: Wed, 14 Jul 1999 06:24:24 +0100
From: John Whiting <[redacted]>
Reply-To: John Whiting <[redacted]>
Organization: Diatribal Press
To: John Whiting <[redacted]>

Even as I write my review of Matthew Lasar's _Pacifica Radio_, it threatens to become an obituary. When a self-perpetuating group of people sit in absolute control of a large amount of money, they want to play with it.

John

↑ Index

187. Maria Damon
Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
Wed 14 Jul 1999

---

nice post, stephen. i remember when the very Jewish Tom Lehrer's song "National Brotherhood Week" played on the air, and the line "Everybody hates the Jews," was roundly criticized by Jews and non-Jews for being anti-Semitic, while i think, in fact, every Jew also recognized its ironic "so what else is new" shrug --but didn't necessarily want that sense of irony aired to the non-Jewish world for fear that it would be read straight and thus possibly fan flames of anti-Semitism. It's like the risk a Jew takes when telling a "Jewish joke" (not an anti-Semitic joke) in front of non-Jewish friends who may then go tell it in a context (for instance, in a setting where there are no Jews) that makes it far more volatile.

At 12:14 PM -0400 7/13/99, Stephen Vincent wrote:
>Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to >an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure >if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always >get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with >an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far >to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, >homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment
>and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned >those behaviors (via ample examples whether in the language or acted out on >the street). I suspect there will always be that tension and fight in the >culture, at least my experience of it.
> But going back to Williams, is it possible to view his double-dipping >into offensive, particularly anti-Semitic language in the context of his half >or part Jewishness? In fact, in the same breath, has any critic delved into >this internal pluralism as one of the ways of looking into at least part of >William's interest and willingness to take on American culture as a >pluralistic condition. (Whereas Eliot and Pound, in the face of the European >migrations of the turn of the century, clearly took the xenophobic route out >of the country.) WCW is one of a number of great writers in this century who >are half or part Jewish. In the context of the evidence and questions >surrounding his anti-Semitic quotes, I think of Proust who, on one hand, was >one of the public leaders in the fight to free Dreyfus and, on the other, >Remembrance of Things Past has a strong share of anti-Semitic caricatures. I >suspect these internal battles are part of the condition of being a blend of >different cultures.
>
>Not being Jewish, I, nevertheless, do have a sense that the issues raised by >those who are half-Jewish (in relationship to Jews and non-Jews) is bubbling >as something not spoken or addressed, perhaps ignored by some as a painful >taboo, or somehow an embarrassment to acknowledge. As to why, I cannot speak.
>These are issues, of course, that can be raised about the work of any writer >who comes out of a biological blend of any historically oppositional groups >(and perhaps classes). I suspect for many who carry such blends, it's both a >gift and a curse - leading to these curious quandaries of point of view that >come up in Williams and others. These blends and the particular consequent >larger social overview, however, clearly lead to some great writing.

>
>Cheers,
>Stephen Vincent
>

↑ Index

188. joan houlihan
Schizophrenic Chickens
Wed 14 Jul 1999

Greetings--

I am new to the list and following this thread with interest. This latest mail makes absolutely clear, for those who doubted it, that WCW was most certainly anti-semitic. Whether his form of it was as "robust" as that of Pound or Eliot, seems to me to be a kind of unhelpful hair-splitting--certainly, it was less "robust" than Pound's if you consider robust to mean having some real-world impact outside of a small circle of friends and associates. But what is the point, aside from historical or biographical interest, in this fact about WCW (or any of the others)? Does anyone really believe that there's more than biographical information at stake here; i.e. that the work is somehow "contaminated"? When Pound was denied, by a close vote, the Bollingen (or was it Nobel? Can't recall) Prize for Literature, the vote against him was a vote against his beliefs (his acts of treason, really). Many people felt this was wrong-headed--that the work, not the man, should be judged. I agree. I personally find the idea that the man and work are inseparable to be an absurd idea, and one that leads to all kinds of falsity--the falsity of trivializing the beloved personage's hateful beliefs so that one can remain enamored of the work; the falsity of trivializing reactions to all such hateful beliefs and remarks as "politically correct" so as to remain enamored; the falsity of attributing historical context (everybody did it) to such remarks so as to to remain enmored; and the falsity of presuming that everyone holds such beliefs, but are not as "honest" about expressing them.

Why attempt to "save" the work from the man? Can't we assume the man is always merely the man, the mud instrument for the work? In fact, if anything can ever save the man, it is the work.

All that being said, I also recognize that many good and senstitive people can no longer enjoy the work once the source is found to be contaminated. However, this fact should not lead us into the error of denial.

Yes, those were schizophrenic chickens--or maybe just "compartmentalized" ones.

Cheers,

Joan Houlihan, Poetry Editor (New)
Editor's Picks, Web Del Sol

http://webdelsol.com/Editor's_Picks/

> From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: (Fwd) WCW [from E. Weinberger]
> Date: Tue, 13 Jul 1999 17:18:51 -0500
>
> The following is from Eliot Weinberger,who has written on Williams's anti-Semitism in _Works on Paper_ (New Directions).
> Kent
>
> ------- Forwarded Message Follows -------
> Date: Tue, 13 Jul 1999 18:09:19 -0400
> To: [redacted]
> From: Eliot Weinberger <[redacted]>
> Subject: WCW
>
> Dear Kent--
>
> Thanks for forwarding me the various letters on WCW, anti-Semitism, and the Bomb. A few notes:
>
> 1) WCW is notoriously resistant to all attempts to summarize his thoughts or opinions. Nevertheless, his writings are strewn with anti-Semitic remarks: The short story that begins: "He was one of those fresh Jewish types you want to kill at sight, the presuming poor whose looks change the minute cash is mentioned." Or the essay "Against the Weather" that claims that Judaism is a "tribal-religious cult" that is "precisely the equivalent" of Fascism. (Written in 1939!) "Some fucking bastard of a yid." "Horrible overfed Jewish types." And so on. All of which must be taken in the context that one of WCW's grandparents was a Jew.
>
> 2) "Some of his best friends..." Well, ok. So were Pound's. (But not Eliot-- the worst of the bunch because he was a snob.) Consider this extreme case: Simultaneous to his promotion of the terrorist-segregationist Kasper, Pound was having a warm correspondence with Langston Hughes. (They had first become friends when Ez contributed to a fund-raiser for the Scottsboro Boys!) Along with Jewish friends and African American lovers, WCW was also collaborating with the bizarre Chinese White Supremacist David Rafael Wang.
>
> *3) WCW's so-called Puerto-Ricanness has been explored, not so convincingly, in a book by Julio Marzan called The Spanish American Roots of WCW. It is* > rather like Alexandre Dumas' Negritude. WCW was not trying to "pass," as someone said: he came from the age of the melting pot, and his were very white (Spanish) Puetro Rican roots.

>
> 4) The assertion that the Polish mothers were Jewish is really a stretch. Polish Jews are "Polish Jews" or "Jews." The default setting for "Pole" is Polish Catholic, just as it is white for "American."
>
> 5) Hiroshima. When I first published the WCW letter-- in my essay on Yasusada, as an example of the unreliability of poets as "witnesses"-- it struck me as a bizarre take on the explosion of the Bomb the day before. Since then I've come across an enigmatic poem by Lorine Niedecker, written a few months later, and I now wonder whether the identification of the Bomb as a specifically Jewish artifact was not more general:
>
> New!
> Reason explodes. Atomic split
> shows one element
> Jew
>
> Now hide
> who can bombarded particles
> of international > pride
>
> 6) It seems to me undeniable that it is very difficult to think of a major American modernist who was not 1) black or Jewish AND 2) not racist or anti-Semitic. Hatred is an absolutely intrinsic part of American modernism, and as the heirs of that legacy we have to work it out.
>
> all best--
>
> Eliot

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

189. Judy Schwartz
Re: COPE'S OPPEN---
Wed 14 Jul 1999

On Mon, 12 Jul 1999, Chris Stroffolino wrote:

> Congrats on Stephen Cope for his work on Oppen recently published in THE GERM. It is a quite interesting piece. I don't agree with ALL of it, but it is fascinating and worth reading (especially for those of us who've never been especially great fans of his poetry).....

How does one get a copy of THE GERM? (from someone who IS a great fan of OPpen's poetry) --Judy S.

↑ Index

190. Tisa Bryant
Contact Info for Tan Lin
Wed 14 Jul 1999

Hello, all!

Does anyone have contact information for Tan Lin?
E-mail or street address would be particularly good, phone fine too.

Thanks in advance!

Tisa

↑ Index

191. Tony Green
Re: partly Jewish writers
Wed 14 Jul 1999

Curious antecedent to Stephen Vincent's writers of partly Jewish descent is Michel de Montaigne, born 1533 C.E., son of Pierre Eyquem ... & his wife Antoinette de Louppes, the wealthy descendant of a Spanish or Portuguese Jewish family... quoting J.M.Cohen's introduction to his Penguin Classics trans of Montaigne essays. Just what this has to do with the Essays if anything is unclear.

There may well be much more to say about Proust, who could hardly avoid being aware of his part-Jewish identity during the Dreyfus affair. Maybe it would have been more obvious explicit or troubling an issue for Montaigne if he had lived in closer contact with the Inquisition in Spain, instead of in France.

But 19th/20th century senses of national & racial identities may have been a more prominent insistent & troubling context than that of the 16th century in France for the issue to be an issue of concern?

Tony Green

-----Original Message-----
From: Stephen Vincent <[redacted]>

To: [redacted] <[redacted]>
Date: Thursday, 15 July 1999 02:59
Subject: Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.

>Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to >an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure >if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always >get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with >an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far
>to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, >homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment
>and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned
>those behaviors (via ample examples whether in the language or acted out on >the street). I suspect there will always be that tension and fight in the >culture, at least my experience of it.
> But going back to Williams, is it possible to view his double-dipping >into offensive, particularly anti-Semitic language in the context of his half >or part Jewishness? In fact, in the same breath, has any critic delved into >this internal pluralism as one of the ways of looking into at least part of >William's interest and willingness to take on American culture as a >pluralistic condition. (Whereas Eliot and Pound, in the face of the European >migrations of the turn of the century, clearly took the xenophobic route out >of the country.) WCW is one of a number of great writers in this century who >are half or part Jewish. In the context of the evidence and questions >surrounding his anti-Semitic quotes, I think of Proust who, on one hand, was >one of the public leaders in the fight to free Dreyfus and, on the other, >Remembrance of Things Past has a strong share of anti-Semitic caricatures. I >suspect these internal battles are part of the condition of being a blend of >different cultures.

>
>Not being Jewish, I, nevertheless, do have a sense that the issues raised by >those who are half-Jewish (in relationship to Jews and non-Jews) is bubbling
>as something not spoken or addressed, perhaps ignored by some as a painful >taboo, or somehow an embarrassment to acknowledge. As to why, I cannot speak.
>These are issues, of course, that can be raised about the work of any writer
>who comes out of a biological blend of any historically oppositional groups >(and perhaps classes). I suspect for many who carry such blends, it's both a >gift and a curse - leading to these curious quandaries of point of view that >come up in Williams and others. These blends and the particular consequent >larger social overview, however, clearly lead to some great writing.
>
>Cheers,
>Stephen Vincent
>
>Kent Johnson wrote:
>
>>>Michael:
>
>More later, but for now just to point out that this quote from >Mariani is rather pathetic as a "defense." Pound had strong >relationships with Jewish writers too. One can be subject to "the >popular racial myths of his time" and still have lots of >chummy relationships with the subaltern other! (Remember Yugoslavia?)
>
>And as for those "comic-strip vulgarisms" (the Jewish kids in >Brooklyn ate those comics right up, didn't they?) that suffuse WCW's >letters, does Mariani imply that _everyone_ was using them? Of course >WCW was a "product of his time" as are we all, and of course he's a >"complex" figure. But choices can still be made, and one is not >condemned (especially one whose self-proclaimed task is to cleanse >the language!) to topple headlong into the most hateful vocabulary.
>Mariani's little quote is quite simply apologetic slop of the >hero-worshipping kind.
>
>And as for your reading of the "irony" in Williams's remark about the >Jews and the Bomb, I doubt it. "Kike" pops up like dandelions in >May in his letters and little irony is apparent. Be careful here.

>It's one thing to misread comments about ready-made classroom phrases >that Language poets use; this is something of a more serious kind.
>
>Kent>>
>

↑ Index

192. Hamish John Dewe

Re: Under New Management: NZ's new writing

Wed 14 Jul 1999

While I am always excited to see ABDOTWW, there is another publisher of experimental poetry in New Zealand, even in Auckland too: Salt. Their focus seems to be online publishing at the moment, while there is also a print version. Catch Salt at http://homepages.ihug.co.nz/~mbellard/index.htm which is currently under construction.

Hamish Dewe
(_ex_-ed. Salt)

> Some of you may be aware that Alan Loney, a fine poet and editor, has recently relinquished the editing of A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE WHOLE WORLD, a magazine of experiemental writing in New Zealand.
>
> It continues as the only magazine in NZ supporting and supported by experimental writers. The June issue now available, ABDOTWW/12, comprises a reissue of Leigh Davis's long poem book, WILLY'S GAZETTE, which first appeared in 1983. The magazine is proud to be involved in the reissue of this landmark book.
>
> John Geraets
> Editor--ABDOTWW
> [redacted]
> 11-20 Poynton Tce
> Auckland 1001, NZ.

↑ Index

193. Patrick F. Durgin
Re: Submission Crucible
Wed 14 Jul 1999

Brian Lennon wrote: " . . .implicitly links the rejection of work to the failure to subscribe, which I think is a mistake."

I write: then let's be explicit. The number of subscribers necessary to keep an independent journal alive (even as supplementary to other resources, out-of-pocket most likely) does not nearly amount to the number of submitters necessary to keep an independent journal alive.

Patrick F. Durgin

At 12:46 PM 7/13/99 -0400, Brian Lennon wrote:
>---two more cents' worth:
>
>When subscription invitations are included with rejection slips, they >inevitably end up being sent to submitters who have already subscribed to the >publication. For a submitter, this is just as impersonal and irritating as it >is for an editor to receive submissions from writers who clearly haven't >looked >at the magazine. Surely every member of a magazine's staff ought to know the >subscriber list by heart, right???
>
>It also implicitly links the rejection of work to the failure to subscribe, >which I think is a mistake. In my two years at The Iowa Review, the best >work I >saw almost always came in cold--- often multiply submitted, from names I >didn't >know, and generally unconcerned with whether it was like anything we'd ever >published before. The result is that every issue changed our own idea of "what >we publish."
>
>Finding enough money to keep going is a huge problem, yes. But the problems >really start when you begin to feel guilty rejecting subscribers/supporters.
>
>Brian Lennon
>
>rebecca wolff wrote:
><snip>
>>Mr. Waber proposes that rejection letters ought to be accompanied by a >>subscription form or some similar form of encouragement. I think this is a >>great idea, and in fact had meant to do just that when starting Fence, but >>was voted down by the rest of the Fence people on grounds of "adding insult >>to injury," "rubbing salt in the wound," etc. What do y'all think about >>this? Would you feel insulted, salted, annoyed, demeaned or otherwise >>antagonized by such an enclosure?

>>
>>I'd really like to know. Because we'd really like to have more subscribers.
>>
>
>

k e n n i n g
a newsletter of contemporary poetry

http://www.avalon.net/~kenning

418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

194. Lynn Miller

Re: Help with Outreach

Wed 14 Jul 1999

On the subject of BLUESTOCKING Books, a few words as to the contribution that might be made to the art/political culture of lower Manhattan by the books that need to be written there as well as sold, the people writing them and selling them, and the classes that must be organized.

As for the books on the shelves, one might search among them for titles having also to deal on a day-to-day TimePoint with such urgent issues of the moment as the planned August 21 March of the Klan in Cleveland (see 7/13 Plain Dealer), on-going defense of Abortion Clinics, lesbian and gay rights to Privacy of the Bedroom and freedom from Surveillance, in addition to a good many rare volumes by such leaders of the Russian and Cuban revolutions as Inessa Armand and the Argentinian photographer, Tania.

This is only a fragmentary list, but one which I think points to why support of what a BlueStocking Bookstore could do and the importance it could have in a major city like New York. Many of the titles made available at this kind of store are simply not available in commercial and academic venues, and given the generally accepted perception that independent bookstores promoting Free Thinking are being pressed out of existence, it is also important to encourage writers to commit themselves to making available to as large a public as possible all popular philosophies and programs for social action.

Ideas are worthless unless they're made real. BlueStocking Books has the potential to become a social center, like the New Workers' Center in Juarez, staffed by volunteers committed to getting out the news concerning the widening resistance to any and every effort to take away such basic democratic rights as Freedom of Assembly, Freedom of Speech, and Freedom of Thought and Expression.

Please give your every consideration to building a space big enough to meet the needs of BlueStocking Books.

THERE MUST BE PROFOUND CHANGE.
--Tishie Ann

"A sad little girl mastered kick ball Roller Derby Style"

↑ Index

195. Jim Rosenberg
*wr-eye-tings is DOWN -- help needed*
Thu 15 Jul 1999

Many of you on this list also subscribe to the wr-eye-tings list. That list is now completely off the air. Attempts to post produce bounces -- no such user. The list host, Carl Lynden Peters, reports there was a crash and he can no longer host the list. This is a real loss! Surely a server can be found to host this list. This is a call for ideas on how to get wr-eye-tings back on the air. Say it ain't so!!

Jim Rosenberg http://www.well.com/user/jer/
CIS: 71515,124
WELL: jer
Internet: [redacted]

↑ Index

196. George Bowering
Re: Name That Quote
Thu 15 Jul 1999

> In "My Darling Clementine," Alan Mowbray (who's playing Thorndike, the drunken Tragedian) says farewell to Francis Ford (who's playing Dad, the old porter and Thorndike's drinking buddy and keeper) and recites some lines that begin "Great souls" and then there's "allegiance" in the middle and it > ends with "burn." If anybody recognizes this quote, please let me know.

> Pete

Am I getting my memories mixed up? Wasnt "My Darling Clementine" about the gunfight at the OK Corral, with Henry Fonda?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

197. Brian Stefans
Williams
Thu 15 Jul 1999

Hi Folks,

I have a lot of vague thoughts on this matter, being both of mixed ethnic origin and from Rutherford, NJ (as I never tire of telling people, WCW's son was my doctor when I was a lad, and in high school I would occasionally feign illness as a pretext for intelligence missions). I don't remember reading about his collaboration with a Chinese white supremecist, nor have I read the letters that speak of circumcision, which are no doubt pretty ridiculous and stupid, though it is worth remembering that, of all the "major modernists", Williams was (to me) the most seriously compromised by his lack of "sweetness and light" in Arnold's phrase -- i.e. despite his education in Switzerland (I think), at Horace Mann and in Pennsylvania, he was pretty lacking in the "humanities" but often, to his credit, seemed to go out of his way not to be cosmopolitan in the way of Pound. He at least felt bad enough about his suburban disposition to downplay his own role as an unacknowledged legislator -- i.e. he classed himself as a "dog among dogs." In any case, here are a few rambling questions regarding this subject (no answers):

1. if he never created a "positive" image of a civilization or culture that didn't include Jews, in the sense of a new Italy or Europe, could he be classed with the anti-semitism of Eliot or Pound, who wrote extensive tracts on the subject? 2. to say that Williams, like Pound, had "Jewish friends" hence he was not anti-Semitic is, yes, a bit weak (an older saw than the ginzu), but what were the value systems of these Jewish artists that Williams supported, values that he knew and recognized -- such as in Ginsberg's Howl -- and how did they run counter to a classically contoured, Euro-centric, authoritarian -- in any case "passeist" -- image that Pound and Eliot threw up against the miscegenation that would be the inevitable result of liberal capitalism? I somehow think that Zukofsky's leftism was modified for Pound by his choice, in the famous "Mantis"

sestina for example, to utilize very old forms, or the "luminous detail", method in putting forth his image of civilization -- indeed, LZ seemed to believe that "civilization" had its glories that were worth preserving, in opposition to say the pessimism of much continental writing. (LZ was also a faultless highbrow.) But what could be similarly modified in the writing of Ginsberg -- didn't you more or less have to take the whole range of values or leave them? 3. could Williams, who took pains, I tend to think, to differentiate from a Puritan, self-policing sensibility -- hence his attraction to Ginsberg -- be put under the same microscope as a Pound or Eliot? That is, even if he had a better side to him that recognized anti-Semitism, especially in 1939, as something one does not want to humor as a political disposition, isn't it possible that he also rejecting this self-negotiation in favor of the "potency" of language -- after all, this is the guy that sprinkled exclamation points in poems about flowers. He kind of liked to curse; the Calibanic strain was quite strong with him (to echo Obi Wan). 4. on the note of racial slurs and things, I noted in my Philly Talk much to the chagrin of the audience that there was a way that my Asian friends and myself used to pick on each other in high school that was, for me, therapeutic, involving those very ethnic slurs that we were often only on the receiving end of. Which isn't to say we became racist, since we just used to pick on each other to sort of poke at the wound. A little later in life, this has grown, for me, into an identification with Korea and the Korean people in a sort of direct but failing way, such that I often, to myself, refer to Koreans as "my people" and Korea as "my country" or whatever, and so when I hear of a North Korean submarine washing up on the South Korean coast, I think, "what are my pathetic little people doing now"? I've only been there once, and of course I am not "Korean," but then again I excercise a certain freedom possible to "Americans" to be that other at least if it gives me comfort. Obviously this is just an interior play, something about exchangeable identities, and so forth. I also tend to have words like "gook" and "chink" floating around in my consciousness quite often, not in conversation but in private thought, often on the verge of finding their way into print, and sometimes they do get there -- why not? I don't tend to think of this so much as "self-hatred" or hatred for an other, so much as a play on identity, a way of erasure through signature, etc. So in contrast to the interpretation of Williams use of expletives as "ironic," it seems to me a different reading is possible. I.e. Williams had a pretty strong memory of his Jewish grandfather -- isn't pretty inevitable that we would have to read a relationship to this ancestor of his in any terminology that he uses that would seem to class him with the anti-Semites, the oppressive "other"? Whose voice is he using at this moment? 5. what about Williams' relationship to Catholics -- those "Catholic bells"? I don't know the history well enough, but Rutherford now is pretty heavy with Catholics (I was raised a Catholic), but I would guess that it was a phenomenon just in the making in Williams' time. I tend to think

Williams -- who fetishized the word better than any "American" before him -- seemed to fetishize everything from, again, flowers to pototoes (to the "e" in potatoes) to too young girls to ethnic minorities (cf. Mackey's well-known essay on his exclamation-point riddled poem on jazz music). This seems to be where the Polish mothers meet the wheelbarrow, in a specific over-riding ontology -- what is there is not me, etc.

As a last note, I tend to be wary of the granting of letters a confirmation of the potency of the panoptic gaze, which is to say that a consideration of the contexts of letters demonstrate that they hide as much as they seem to "reveal." I'll have to look those letters up, but considering that Williams map of a "civilization" is one that would have to be more often surmised than can be found elaborated linearly -- that he just wasn't a systematic thinker -- his idiotic banter on the sidelines with a guy like Pound -- whose system of thought was pretty ornate but tremendously corrupted by his hatred and prejudices, considering that the system was centered around ideas of beauty and wisdom, such that we would have to believe this hatred quite intense for it to survive, and hence his depression when he finally realized how intense this hatred was (it suggests to me Carlyle's discovering upon the death of his wife that he was quite a cad -- another Puritan sensibility run amock) -- could be taken in many ways, perhaps even as the sort of masculinist sparring that we know of that leads to an agreement in terms that are often less than agreeable. Pound overwhelmed him more often than not.

I have no answers to the above questions in general, just thought to toss them out. I would suspect, I suppose, that Williams would behave differently if he were in Rome in 1939, or that his letters would be somewhat different, but since both his humanism and his anti-semitism were not really challenged by much more than what he read in the papers -- i.e his imperative to decide was not quite as strong as for a European -- then much of this is speculation.

Anyway, I got to get back to work.

Cheers,
Brian

↑ Index

198. Grant Jenkins
E. Weinberger and snobs
Thu 15 Jul 1999

In response to Weinberger's dismissal of Eliot:

> 2) "Some of his best friends [were Jews]..." Well, ok. So were Pound's.
> (But not > Eliot-- the worst of the bunch because he was a snob.)

In spite of the fact that Weinberger is fond of accusing people of prejudice (he does also with Ed Dorn and AIDS), it turns out that Eliot too had Jewish friends. According to a recent article by Ranen Omer, Eliot had a 40-year correspondence with the famous Jewish-American philosopher, Horace Kallen, coiner of the phrase "cultural pluralism." Found in Kallen's papers in the American Jewish Archives in Cincinnati, these letter are a major find.

I suggest that anyone interested in Eliot or the question of the relation of anti-Semitism with Modernism read this article:

Ranen Omer, "'It Is I Who Have Been Defending a Religion Called Judaism': The T.S. Eliot and Horace M. Kallen Correspondence." Texas Studies in Literature and Language 39.4 (1997): 321-356.

↑ Index

199. Brian Stefans
PS on Williams
Thu 15 Jul 1999

As a sort of postscipt to my other comments on Williams, I would note that the quotes Eliot Weinberger draws from his stories, while being quite powerfully derogatory, could be seen to consistently fall within the realm of "speaking through the other," i.e. echoings of the local tongue and prejudices, and also within my idea of the fetishized ethnicity. My sense is that Williams didn't belong to any local community in Rutherford in any very easy way -- he felt quite alienated, as we all know -- so a lot of what sounds like "plain speech" in Williams can often be seen as not his own plain speech, until perhaps the Asphodel poem where it seems all him. But that's because we know to whom he is speaking -- i.e. Flossy. But when he writes "He was one of those Jews..." sounding like he's addressing someone, but who is this? (If one imagines that he thought his first or only readers for such stories would be his sophisticated New York literati friends, many of whom were Jewish, how do these lines resonate with them?)

In any case, what would be interesting would be if someone could find the kind of invective that one finds in Pound and Cummings and others, or the kind of detached "objective" tone in Eliot's writing on Christian culture, in Williams -- i.e. something more discursive and outside the realm of pure imagism, something with a sure sense of audience and purpose -- since such a thing would point to a more synthesized world-view in Williams that presently we can't see. I've never quite figured out whom Williams was addressing in Spring and All, for example -- much of which, as I'd written to a friend earlier, would sound like the most vicious "flame" on the internet -- and I think this vagueness about his audience contributes to the choppy, seemingly incomplete nature of his "career," i.e. the ups and downs of his work.

Also, can I suggest Marianne Moore as a modernist not motivated by hate or exhibited anti-semitism? I'll probably find this wasn't the case.

Brian

↑ Index

200. Poetics List
(no subject)
Thu 15 Jul 1999

Dear CHris,

What happened to the "you're welcome to join" letter. I can't find it.

m

↑ Index

201. Chris Nagler
Reminder: The Barn (a play), tonite and tomorrow
Thu 15 Jul 1999

To anyone who will be in the SF bay area tonight
July 15th or tomorrow night, the 16th
my play/performance piece 'The Barn' is being performed
at 8:00 pm
at 379 40th St. (between telegraph and Broadway)
in north Oakland
Poetics List People get in free.
Running time is about one and a half hours.

chris nagler

"The Barn is a play about a family of voices. The voice, and the family, as shelters and constraints. Domestic tasks as the physical equivalents of fantasies -- the impossibility of containing either within pastoral romance, but the constant desire for this. It is a play about the possibility of being far away from the landscape, and the voice."

↑ Index

202. A H Bramhall
When The Invitation Arrives
Thu 15 Jul 1999

the poets in the minefields of Pennsylvania labour day and night to produce the fairest examples of their craft. in California the entire population is in love, dreamy love, love without bounds or off track betting. in the wee country of Liechtenstein comrades walk straight to the shoe factory every morning to receive their free sneakers. in Rwanda the lions share their bread with the dead. and while this joy more than subsists, the moon looks down. the moon has pretensions to understanding, just like us, for the moon rolls thru the heavens tied to earth's mesmerizing gaze. most people don't care about that. in every inch of the land once known as Russia people open boxes with hope in their hearts. in Japan, the brilliant bullet trains add zest to understanding: such suddenness, such noise! and on it goes. a puddle called Walden Pond extrudes facts daily, and when people drown there, they drown deeply. no mention yet has been made of the delightful fund of lyres that the Grecian model government stockpiles for times of need, an agreeable figurative uncommon hug for one and all. France has learned to emulate the finest mountains of Peru, and even Parisians (formerly, a pox on them) are newly cheerful and inclined to greet Incas without ponderous escapade. Honduras cannot hide its cheeky aurora, Canada has half a mind to shout with glee, Tonga and Madagascar have learned frantic hand-holding tricks, Poland grips the ball with fiery new surety, everything Chinese adds the lift of oneness, trees sprout in the rocks of Thailand, chirping Floridians remove their masks, and everyone, everywhere, dances this glow. all this, friends, can be shipped right to your doormat.

↑ Index

203. A H Bramhall
An Expert On New Jersey
Thu 15 Jul 1999

found a rhythm in which to dance. great simplicities like that,
a way to make racism or whatever work for you, puts gumption in your step. the whole plan stands before you. racism or any whatsis can be impelled into distinctions of power, like choosing to feed a poet. what could be less deleterious than the knowledge that your vices

sing for you. any gloom surrounding you turns to profit.
that's what expertise is for,
floating into space or spaces, making the gruel taste good. sometimes dark, sometimes informed by all you know. cloud time babies.

↑ Index

204. Mark Weiss

Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.

Thu 15 Jul 1999

This is very disturbing. While I certainly agree with Michael Magee's plea for an examination of Williams' antisemitism as a complex phenomenon, I don't think that part of that complexity is explained by Stephen's suggestion that Williams was in some way reacting to or against his partly-Jewish ancestry. Williams, as far as I can gather from the writing, never thought of himself as Jewish or part-Jewish, never thought that culture was genetic. His antisemitism was entirely of the class-determined, unconscious, or at least unexamined, variety (I doubt he thought it was an issue, at least before 1940, although I'm sure he behaved appropriately with his Jewish friends), the variety of antisemitism that nowadays in the US is most likely to cause pain. Although it doesn't hurt to remember that the more violent kind exists here as well. Maria, I can't tell from your post if you're aware that the reaction you site to Lehrer's song was motivated by fear. Social ostracism, and a lot worse, on these liberated shores, is well within the memories of Jews of my generation and yours. I would suggest that this is a subject on which to tread lightly. It never occurred to me that Kent was disowning Williams, whom I too revere. But the wounds are very fresh.

At 11:25 AM 7/14/99 -0600, you wrote:
>nice post, stephen. i remember when the very Jewish Tom Lehrer's song
>"National Brotherhood Week" played on the air, and the line "Everybody >hates the Jews," was roundly criticized by Jews and non-Jews for being >anti-Semitic, while i think, in fact, every Jew also recognized its ironic

>"so what else is new" shrug --but didn't necessarily want that sense of >irony aired to the non-Jewish world for fear that it would be read straight >and thus possibly fan flames of anti-Semitism. It's like the risk a Jew >takes when telling a "Jewish joke" (not an anti-Semitic joke) in front of >non-Jewish friends who may then go tell it in a context (for instance, in a >setting where there are no Jews) that makes it far more volatile.
>
>At 12:14 PM -0400 7/13/99, Stephen Vincent wrote:
>>Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to >>an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure >>if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always >>get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with >>an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far
>>to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, >>homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment
>>and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned >>those behaviors (via ample examples whether in the language or acted out on >>the street). I suspect there will always be that tension and fight in the >>culture, at least my experience of it.
>> But going back to Williams, is it possible to view his double-dipping >>into offensive, particularly anti-Semitic language in the context of his half >>or part Jewishness? In fact, in the same breath, has any critic delved into >>this internal pluralism as one of the ways of looking into at least part of >>William's interest and willingness to take on American culture as a >>pluralistic condition. (Whereas Eliot and Pound, in the face of the European >>migrations of the turn of the century, clearly took the xenophobic route out >>of the country.) WCW is one of a number of great writers in this century who >>are half or part Jewish. In the context of the evidence and questions >>surrounding his anti-Semitic quotes, I think of Proust who, on one hand, was >>one of the public leaders in the fight to free Dreyfus and, on the other, >>Remembrance of Things Past has a strong share of anti-Semitic caricatures.
I

>>suspect these internal battles are part of the condition of being a blend of >>different cultures.
>>
>>Not being Jewish, I, nevertheless, do have a sense that the issues raised by >>those who are half-Jewish (in relationship to Jews and non-Jews) is bubbling
>>as something not spoken or addressed, perhaps ignored by some as a painful >>taboo, or somehow an embarrassment to acknowledge. As to why, I cannot speak.
>>These are issues, of course, that can be raised about the work of any writer
>>who comes out of a biological blend of any historically oppositional groups >>(and perhaps classes). I suspect for many who carry such blends, it's both a >>gift and a curse - leading to these curious quandaries of point of view that >>come up in Williams and others. These blends and the particular consequent >>larger social overview, however, clearly lead to some great writing.
>>
>>Cheers,
>>Stephen Vincent
>>
>
>

↑ Index

205. Mark Weiss
Re: PS on Williams
Thu 15 Jul 1999

When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person, but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.

At 01:21 PM 7/15/99 -0400, you wrote:
>As a sort of postscipt to my other comments on Williams, I would note that >the quotes Eliot Weinberger draws from his stories, while being quite >powerfully derogatory, could be seen to consistently fall within the realm >of "speaking through the other," i.e. echoings of the local tongue and >prejudices, and also within my idea of the fetishized ethnicity. My sense >is that Williams didn't belong to any local community in Rutherford in any >very easy way -- he felt quite alienated, as we all know -- so a lot of >what sounds like "plain speech" in Williams can often be seen as not his >own plain speech, until perhaps the Asphodel poem where it seems all him.

>But that's because we know to whom he is speaking -- i.e. Flossy. But when >he writes "He was one of those Jews..." sounding like he's addressing >someone, but who is this? (If one imagines that he thought his first or >only readers for such stories would be his sophisticated New York literati >friends, many of whom were Jewish, how do these lines resonate with them?)
>
>In any case, what would be interesting would be if someone could find the >kind of invective that one finds in Pound and Cummings and others, or the >kind of detached "objective" tone in Eliot's writing on Christian culture, >in Williams -- i.e. something more discursive and outside the realm of pure >imagism, something with a sure sense of audience and purpose -- since such >a thing would point to a more synthesized world-view in Williams that >presently we can't see. I've never quite figured out whom Williams was >addressing in Spring and All, for example -- much of which, as I'd written >to a friend earlier, would sound like the most vicious "flame" on the >internet -- and I think this vagueness about his audience contributes to >the choppy, seemingly incomplete nature of his "career," i.e. the ups and >downs of his work.
>
>Also, can I suggest Marianne Moore as a modernist not motivated by hate or >exhibited anti-semitism? I'll probably find this wasn't the case.
>
>Brian
>
>

↑ Index

206. Julie Johnson
Duration: A Journal of International Poetry; Issue One now online
Thu 15 Jul 1999

Duration Press is pleased to announce that the first issue of its new online journal is now online.

Featuring work by:

Elizabeth Treadwell, Kristin Prevallet, Tchicaya U Tam'Si, Patrick Durgin, Leonard Brink, Gary Sullivan, Beth Anderson, Sheila Murphy, Hoa Nguyen, Kevin Magee, Spencer Selby, Jesse Glass, Jeffrey Jullich, & Rodrigo Garcia Lopes

The issue can be found at:

http://members.xoom.com/Duration/durationmag.html

↑ Index

207. Mark Weiss
Pound and the Nobel Prize
Thu 15 Jul 1999

Someone suggested that those who had denied Pound the Nobel Prize had failed to separate the work from the man. They were in fact remembering some of the more disreputable works. When Kurt Waldheim, after his UN career, was discovered to have committed war crimes there were some who objected to his being elected president of Austria--his great post-war service were apparently enough to excuse his earlier behavior as far as the Austrian electorate was concerned, but the critics felt that some things are unforgiveable and that to honor the perpetrator is to diminish the apparent seriousness of what had been done. Pound wasn't a war criminal, merely a fellow-traveller of war criminals, but that's bad enough. To deny him the prize was not so much a judgment on the Cantos as a decision not to be seen as forgiving the unforgiveable in the context of a Europe where passions like those who had expressed during the war were and are very much alive.

↑ Index

208. Judy Schwartz
Re: COPE'S OPPEN---
Thu 15 Jul 1999

On Thu, 15 Jul 1999, Kimmelman, Burt wrote:

> Judy,
>
> Forgive my obtuseness, but I don't get this: "How does one get a copy of THE GERM? (from someone who IS a great fan
> of > OPpen's poetry) --Judy S."
>
> I guess if I did I'd not have had to ask.

Burt: Not sure what you're asking. I was responding to the message printed below, cause I don't know that journal. The part about Oppen was also in response to the message below. If it makes no sense, it may be that my brain is fried from completing a dissertation (on Oppen). Anyway, I would like to know how to get a copy of the article/journal. --Judy

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Judy Schwartz
> To: [redacted]

> Sent: 7/14/99 3:54 PM
> Subject: Re: COPE'S OPPEN---
>
> On Mon, 12 Jul 1999, Chris Stroffolino wrote:
>
> Congrats on Stephen Cope for his work on Oppen recently published > in THE GERM. It is a quite interesting piece. I don't agree with > ALL of it, but it is fascinating and worth reading (especially > for those of us who've never been especially great fans of his > poetry).....
>
> How does one get a copy of THE GERM? (from someone who IS a great fan of > OPpen's poetry) --Judy S.

↑ Index

209. rebecca wolff
fence new issue site
Thu 15 Jul 1999

Fence finally got our current issue, #3, up on our website:

http://www.fencemag.com

Please visit.

↑ Index

210. Alan Sondheim
(for ANC and NP)
Thu 15 Jul 1999

-

the laws, somebody decided something they heard it passed down, they read it in a text they interfered with the law of gravitation they said, suspend

different people moved apart from different people until the same went with the same

the same modified the laws to their liking or they forgot them they'd heard there was more than one path through the forest they understood what they heard

we're the people of understanding, they said, one to another

there were interpretations of gravitation but no one understood that the world was everywhere in the world

if they'd understood that, the troubles wouldn't have started as it was someone asked what the laws had to do with anything she said it properly, spoke clearly, no one had trouble with it she lost her head over it, it couldn't have been otherwise the head was the seat of the problems things that sounded like words came forth

i think they continued for a long while later the laws, somebody decided something

↑ Index

211. pete spence
Re: H W
Fri 16 Jul 1999

---

the last notification of Hanna's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE had about 30 people interested e-mailing me for information on how to get!! seems in the end only 2 could overcome the information and actually order!! there are still 60 copies for sale!!

also i have ready Hannah's COUNTRY GIRL the second of four early journals and written in 1971

you can now order this book from LOOK!! POETRY!!

by sending $5 U.S. cash to:

pete spence
40 bramwell st
ocean grove 3226 victoria australia

airmail your letter otherwise it will take about three months!! i will airmail you back the book.

if you want both WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE and COUNTRY GIRL then $10 U.S cash will see it done

thanks pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

212. Stephen Vincent
Re: Purity
Fri 16 Jul 1999

In a message dated 7/15/99 4:25:15 PM, [redacted] writes:

<< I _love_ Williams. If he was more of a prick, more humanly sinful than the canon-makers have let on, that does nothing to diminish the greatness of his poetry. And in some ways the darkness makes the greatness all the more fascinating! The record is the record (which, yes, is open to differing interpretations), and I think it's best to talk about it without the innuendo you interject above. Kent >>

Dear Kent: My apologies if I stacked the deck. Both I and Mark Weiss (who also took exception to my post) looked in vain to see if there was an original post which led to your motivation to focus on WCW's anti-Semitism. Left with only the post with the anti-Semitic focus, your tone sounded like you were primarily interested in clearing Williams out of the house! Your most recent post indicates, to the contrary, that these revelations about Williams are much more conflicting and clearly at odds with your love for the work. The nastiness in my initial reaction to your post is no doubt partly a "sacred cow" response. Rule of thumb in this house, when the Muse is in doubt read "Desert Music," or parts of Patterson among other poems. Unlike Eliot or Pound, who I read as teachers, Williams remains a healer, plus, in addition to Reznikoff, it is work that originally gave me permission to acknowledge and take consciousness in the City (infinite, local and various), one that was quite different from the Mandarin one in Pound and Eliot. (The specific impact of Jewish writers on poetry of the twentieth century City is a whole different but probably related thread, including Williams' influence.) I believe the anti-Semitic acknowledgment in Williams work is vital to both engage and explore, particularly where and in the way it shifts one's experience and interpretation of the actual poems and stories. (The List responses have begun to do that.) I suspect for any conscious person, an act of reading is always a double-dance, partnering with what one loves while kicking out what disgusts. In the context of Modernism - at least how we as contemporaries relate to it – it would be curious to know more about the ways in which Zukofsky, Reznikoff, Oppen and Rakosi dealt with Eliot, Pound and Williams' in terms of a work's implicit or explicit anti-Semitism. Did these Objectivists kick privately or publicly, and, if publicly, at what risk, what cost? And have things changed?

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

213. John Tranter
Not all salt is NaCl
Fri 16 Jul 1999

In response to a recent posting from New Zealand about a magazine called "Salt", I'd like to pass on to the Buffalo List the following:

"John Kinsella, editor of the Australian [literary magazine] "Salt", would like to state clearly that the journal he has edited since 1990 has no connection with the newish NZ journal of the same name."

John Tranter, editor, Jacket magazine

↑ Index

214. Michael Magee
Re: PS on Williams
Fri 16 Jul 1999

According to Brian Stefans:
>
> Also, can I suggest Marianne Moore as a modernist not motivated by hate or > exhibited anti-semitism? I'll probably find this wasn't the case.
>
> Brian
>

Brian, yes, - there may be evidence of anti-semitism by Moore out there, but I've certainly never come across it, and have always taken heart in these lines which conclude here wonderful homage to miscegenated culture, "The Labors of Hercules" ("To popularize the mule" is the objective stated at it's beginning):

"that the Negro is not brutal,
that the Jew is not greedy,
that the Oriental is not immoral, that the German is not a hun."

If I'm not mistaken, this was written in the early '20's (was she regretting that final line ca. 1940? - probably not: the point seems to be as much about adjectives standing in for complex wholes as it is about objecting to specific cases of racism, although for her these two things would finally have been inseparable.) Anyway, thought I'd mention it. Thanks for your fine posts on this subject!

-m.

↑ Index

215. Stephen Ellis
Manifest Destiny
Fri 16 Jul 1999

The "field" of racism re: Williams, Pound & Eliot extends beyond the bounds of a specific anti-semitism; ancient cultic law is not based on tolerance. Not to be overly "Hebraic" about it, the fact remains that the murder of former Israeli Prime Minister Rabin had, in some interpretations, rabbinical sanction. Semitic law in general gives sanction for murder, if evidence exists - and suspicion is often thought sufficient evidence - that a person presents a threat to the security of the clan at large. We still operate under a similar system, as a glance at who's who on any Death Row will tell you. Enemies of the State. America wasn't founded to protect the interests of any sense of the common man or to the common good; it was founded to protect the interests of a wealthy group of molasses bootleggers operating out of the Carribbean. Interesting in this light to recall that Washington initially considered making Hebrew the national language, probably having to do with aligning America with the moral authority represented by the rise of "Israel" at the end of the world in the Book of Revelations. Nineteenth century Manifest Destiny is a pure product of nothing but. In fact, the genetic/hereditary science of Eugenics was a 19th century American invention, and the Sterilization Laws passed in 1907 by the State of Indiana "to prevent procreation of confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles and rapists" was the prototype for Nazi-funded scientific missions to find "reason" for persecution of Jews. WCW, Pound, Eliot & Co. - "us all" too - are the inheritors of this tradition. Given this, the accusation that these guys were "anti-semitic" seems trite; the more essential question lies in the extent to which they - or any of us - gave (or in our case, continue to give) sanction to state-infected suppositions toward "liberation." Calling WCW anti-semitic merely sweetens the lie that we in fact DO have the moral authority to "call him down," but what phantom will rise from the process of so doing? Or more specifically, though maybe slightly off the mark, what are the relations between poetic form, natural proportion and human law, for example, that permit the existence of a sort of "screen" or "grate" through which we may have intimations of the smell of death, but no actual access to the causatively related "killing floor"? When the feeling of "threat" is multiplied into an analogical "house of mirrors" (and perhaps of cards), how do we identify it, ie., how do we get into the basement over which the killing floor is laid? S E

> From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Purity

> Date: Wed, 14 Jul 1999 11:08:33 -0500
>
> May I indulge in some self-defense, please?
>
> Stephen Vincent wrote:
>
> Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned those behaviors
>
> Stephen, if I point out, as I did, that there is textual evidence of a strong anti-Semitic strain in Williams, why is this "self-righteousness"? I responded to what I felt was a significant blind spot in Billy Little's typically-provocative post, and did so in a reasonable way, I thought. Then there were four indignant responses, all of which strongly denied the applicability of the term, a couple of these calling my post "ridiculous." So I responded, pointing people to some specific evidence, and now am accused by you of being self-righteous, by implication blind to my own likely racism, and of trying to throw WCW "out with the bathwater."
>
> I _love_ Williams. If he was more of a prick, more humanly sinful than the canon-makers have let on, that does nothing to diminish the greatness of his poetry. And in some ways the darkness makes the greatness all the more fascinating! The record is the record (which, yes, is open to differing interpretations), and I think it's best to talk about it without the innuendo you interject above.
> Kent

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

216. Dana Lustig

Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.

Fri 16 Jul 1999

I think your point about the Jewish joke is accurate. To laugh at one's stereotypes tends to render it harmless, but from others it has the threat of danger.

Not to prolong this much further, but I think that to judge WCW based upon the mores and political correctness of our time takes him out of the context of his time. I agree with m. magee "that the question, "Why do anti-semitic trusims pepper Williams's writings?" is not so easily answered; but if answered complexly might be pretty valuable" Why do people affiliate themselves with specific race/religious/class groupings, but also retain certain inbred prejudices against them? I find WCW's position interesting indeed, but perhaps that's because I'm half Puerto-Rican, brought up with a Jewish stepfather and family.

I will say that based upon my experience with a multicultural, multiracial, multi-religious family is, even those who consider themselves "liberal" for their time still retain certain prejudices. My (Jewish) grandparents, who were highly educated, well-respected, well-read, well-traveled, and fairly "liberal" for their time, still had prejudices. They were never overt about their opinions, and I wouldn't classify them as ever having been "racist", but I think that they, like many others of their time (brought up just prior to the women's movement, the civil rights movement, racial pride, etc) unconsciously grasped onto the usual opinions, even as they didn't "in principle" believe in it. We expect everyone we admire in history to have the sensitivity we have "now" towards complex issues. I think it's relative to one's place in time. Picasso was misogynistic towards women, but that doesn't diminish his massive contribution to 20th century art. In fact, his misogny produced some of his most effective works, because the subjects of his work were some of the women he put through the wringer. In that way we should view WCW's work--how did his dual sympathies/prejudices against race/religion figure in giving his work the brilliance it has? Seems a much more productive vein to approach him than an attack on the standards of his time and his own human frailities.

Yours,

d (martinez) lustig

_____ Reply Separator _____
Subject: Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
Author: [redacted] at Internet-USA
Date: 7/15/99 7:24 PM

nice post, stephen. i remember when the very Jewish Tom Lehrer's song "National Brotherhood Week" played on the air, and the line "Everybody hates the Jews," was roundly criticized by Jews and non-Jews for being anti-Semitic, while i think, in fact, every Jew also recognized its ironic "so what else is new" shrug --but didn't necessarily want that sense of irony aired to the non-Jewish world for fear that it would be read straight and thus possibly fan flames of anti-

Semitism. It's like the risk a Jew takes when telling a "Jewish joke" (not an anti-Semitic joke) in front of non-Jewish friends who may then go tell it in a context (for instance, in a setting where there are no Jews) that makes it far more volatile.

At 12:14 PM -0400 7/13/99, Stephen Vincent wrote:
>Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to >an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure >if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always >get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with >an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far
>to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, >homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment
>and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned
>those behaviors (via ample examples whether in the language or acted out on >the street). I suspect there will always be that tension and fight in the >culture, at least my experience of it.
> But going back to Williams, is it possible to view his double-dipping >into offensive, particularly anti-Semitic language in the context of his half >or part Jewishness? In fact, in the same breath, has any critic delved into >this internal pluralism as one of the ways of looking into at least part of >William's interest and willingness to take on American culture as a >pluralistic condition. (Whereas Eliot and Pound, in the face of the European >migrations of the turn of the century, clearly took the xenophobic route out >of the country.) WCW is one of a number of great writers in this century who >are half or part Jewish. In the context of the evidence and questions >surrounding his anti-Semitic quotes, I think of Proust who, on one hand, was >one of the public leaders in the fight to free Dreyfus and, on the other, >Remembrance of Things Past has a strong share of anti-Semitic caricatures. I >suspect these internal battles are part of the condition of being a blend of >different cultures.
>
>Not being Jewish, I, nevertheless, do have a sense that the issues raised by >those who are half-Jewish (in relationship to Jews and non-Jews) is bubbling
>as something not spoken or addressed, perhaps ignored by some as a painful >taboo, or somehow an embarrassment to acknowledge. As to why, I cannot speak.
>These are issues, of course, that can be raised about the work of any writer
>who comes out of a biological blend of any historically oppositional groups >(and perhaps classes). I suspect for many who carry such blends, it's both a >gift and a curse - leading to these curious quandaries of point of view that >come up in Williams and others. These blends and the particular consequent >larger social overview, however, clearly lead to some great writing.

>
>Cheers,
>Stephen Vincent
>

↑ Index

217. Jamie Perez
submissions w/rejections
Fri 16 Jul 1999

---

why not just print your rejection slips on paper that has submission info on the back... they will most likely notice it due to the way paper is folded into an envelope

if they are already subscribers they will notice how clever your stationary is... if they aren't they will think it's clever and may start subscribing or may not either way, no extra paper wasted and no insult is intended

#2: will work best if you print the info in a different color (see the red or green ink copier at Kinko's), to differentiate from the black ink of the letter

#3: would look great if the info took up about 1/3 a sheet of paper (or less) and was printed multiple times down the back of the paper, with the top and bottom "copy" being cut off by the page: as if the entire sheet of paper was machine produced in that form

#4: this could even be done with a custom handstamp

for the record: I spend about 100 times the amount on newsstand copies vs. subscriptions, but am trying to even out the trend a little jamie.p

↑ Index

218. Maria Damon
Re: Williams Tombstone Sweepers etc.
Fri 16 Jul 1999

At 5:56 PM -0700 7/15/99, Mark Weiss wrote:
>This is very disturbing. While I certainly agree with Michael Magee's plea >for an examination of Williams' antisemitism as a complex phenomenon, I >don't think that part of that complexity is explained by Stephen's >suggestion that Williams was in some way reacting to or against his >partly-Jewish ancestry. Williams, as far as I can gather from the writing, >never thought of himself as Jewish or part-Jewish, never thought that >culture was genetic. His antisemitism was entirely of the class-determined, >unconscious, or at least unexamined, variety (I doubt he thought it was an >issue, at least before 1940, although I'm sure he behaved appropriately >with his Jewish friends), the variety of antisemitism that nowadays in the >US is most likely to cause pain. Although it doesn't hurt to remember that >the more violent kind exists here as well.

>Maria, I can't tell from your post if you're aware that the reaction you >site to Lehrer's song was motivated by fear. Social ostracism, and a lot >worse, on these liberated shores, is well within the memories of Jews of my >generation and yours.
>I would suggest that this is a subject on which to tread lightly. It never >occurred to me that Kent was disowning Williams, whom I too revere. But the >wounds are very fresh.
>

i agree, this is a volatile thread and one that i care a lot about and want to participate in, not because of W C Williams so much (though these quotes from Kent and Weinberger are new to me, disturbing, and interesting) but because i find Jewishness, so-called "Jewish self-hatred," and anti-Semitism to be compelling and complex subjects. in my post i explicitly said "for fear that it would be read straight and thus possibly fan flames of anti-Semitism." so yes, i do see fear as a motivating force, but perhaps not as strongly as you do. perhaps i shd rethink that relative lightness. On the other hand, I think Jews should be less fearful of debating Jewish complexity in public --to be silent on these complexities is, i believe, to capitulate to the mainstream culture's desire to keep Jewish discussion of Jewishness at the margins. Sometimes when I've posted something about being Jewish on this list, I've gotten back-channel acknowledgements and thanks from other Jews for my post --but not public posts. While I certainly respect each Jewish person's right to determine the degree to which he or she wants to protect him or herself around such issues, and while i appreciate the delicacy and beauty of an "invisible community" forming under or adjacent to the mainstream lines of Poetics, i welcome the publicness with which this thread is being conducted. tho i may change my mind at any moment.

↑ Index

219. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: Name That Quote

Fri 16 Jul 1999

Yes, yes, it is, George. But Pete is referring to the great scene in the bar where a drunken Mowbray haltingly recites Hamlet's soliloquy, falters, then gives it over to Doc Holliday to finish. I don't know the source of the quote Pete's referring to and it's driving me nuts since my VCR is broken and I can't pop in my copy of "Clem" to check it out. This film also contains this classic exchange, set in the same bar:

Fonda/Earp: "Mac, you ever been in love?"
Mac: "Nope, I've been a bartender all my life."

Patrick Pritchett

> -----Original Message-----
> From: George Bowering [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Thursday, July 15, 1999 2:38 AM
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Name That Quote
>
> In "My Darling Clementine," Alan Mowbray (who's playing Thorndike, the drunken Tragedian) says farewell to Francis Ford (who's playing Dad, the old porter and Thorndike's drinking buddy and keeper) and recites some lines that begin "Great souls" and then there's "allegiance" in the middle and it ends with "burn." If anybody recognizes this quote, please let me know.
> Pete
>
> Am I getting my memories mixed up? Wasnt "My Darling Clementine" about the gunfight at the OK Corral, with Henry Fonda?
>
> George Bowering.
>
> ,
>
> fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

220. W. Freind
Subscriptions, submissions, etc.
Fri 16 Jul 1999

Just a quick comment on the editors who have been complaining (legitimately) about people who submit but don't subscribe. At least a few of you haven't posted to UB poetics, subsub, etc. when you have new issues coming out. Why not send a brief post with a list of contributors and reviews?

Bill Freind

↑ Index

221. hassen
Million Artist March
Fri 16 Jul 1999

---

fellow listees~

perhaps some might be interested in the following info.

hassen

>>
The Million Artist March
On The Avenue Of The Arts in Philadelphia
on Saturday, July 17, 1999

The Million Artist March is organized by MAMOTAA, an arts advocacy group under the non-profit umbrella of Jobs With Peace. MAMOTAA's goal is to send one million signatures to Congress requesting that art programs be reinstated in the public school curriculum. We also ask that art teachers and artists be hired to teach these programs. MAMOTAA's work will not end in July 17, 1999. We will continue to be an arts advocacy organization, job bank and information center until Washington addresses this issue.

The day will begin at 11am with a dance, music and color-filled march from the Avenue of the Arts to the Benjamin Franklin Parkway where seven stages will provide music performance and spoken word events. The Parkway will be lined with tables to sell original art work.

If you're an artist, art student, parent or concerned citizen, come to Philadelphia to show your support. CELEBRATE for a cause.

Please sign the petition and forward to friends, family and e-buddies. Call and ask for details about sponsoring and art ride to Philadelphia for the march.

For more information, contact:
MAMOTAA/Jobs With Peace
1809 Spring Garden Street
Philadelphia, PA 19130
Call: [redacted]
Fax: [redacted]
Toll Free: [redacted]
MAMOTAA Petition
Million Artist March On The Avenue of the Arts http://www.millionartistmarch.com/elements/artcontents.html
<<

> critics felt that some things are unforgiveable and that to honor the perpetrator is to diminish the apparent seriousness of what had been done. Pound wasn't a war criminal, merely a fellow-traveller of war criminals, but that's bad enough. To deny him the prize was not so much a judgment on the Cantos as a decision not to be seen as forgiving the unforgiveable in the context of a Europe where passions like those who had expressed during the war were and are very much alive.

↑ Index

224. Al Filreis
Re: Pound and the Nobel Prize
Fri 16 Jul 1999

Pound was up for the Bollingen prize, not the Nobel.

Was awarded it, in fact, Jordan. -- Al Filreis

↑ Index

225. Balestrieri, Peter
Re: George Bowering on Name That Quote
Fri 16 Jul 1999

Hi George,

Your memory doesn't fail you - My Darling Clementine is indeed about the fight at the OK Corral and stars Henry Fonda. Shortly after Fonda/Earp becomes Tombstone's Marshall, a touring Shakespearean actor, Mowbray/Thorndike, comes to town. He's quite a drinker and is joined in his cups by Dad/Ford(John Ford's brother). Mowbray has some poignant scenes with Fonda and Victor Mature(as Doc Holiday), especially one involving Hamlet's "To be or not to be..." When Mowbray/Thorndike leaves town, he embraces Dad/Ford and recites what may or may not be more of the Bard. The piece begins "Great souls" and mentions "allegiance" and ends with "burn." It's very touching and a beautiful recitation. I'm wondering about the origin of the quote and hoping it rings somebody's bell. I urge everyone on the List not busy trying to figure out if WCW was anti-Semitic or debating how best to get into print to rent My Darling Clementine and hear the quote firsthand. Bonuses: Linda Darnell singing, "In gambling halls he was laying, 10,000 cattle straying." and Ward Bond cussing in Spanish.

Pete

↑ Index

226. Mark Weiss
Re: Manifest Destiny
Fri 16 Jul 1999

I hesitate to respond to this. Are you saying that everything is the same and no differentiation is possible?

Your interpretation of the American Revolution seems rather simplistic, but let that go. I'd love to see some documentation of Washington's thinking about making Hebrew the national language--it's new to me. And as to his interest in the Book of Revelations--I thought he was a deist.

At 06:56 AM 7/16/99 PDT, you wrote:
>The "field" of racism re: Williams, Pound & Eliot extends beyond the bounds >of a specific anti-semitism; ancient cultic law is not based on tolerance.
>Not to be overly "Hebraic" about it, the fact remains that the murder of >former Israeli Prime Minister Rabin had, in some interpretations, rabbinical >sanction. Semitic law in general gives sanction for murder, if evidence >exists - and suspicion is often thought sufficient evidence - that a person >presents a threat to the security of the clan at large. We still operate >under a similar system, as a glance at who's who on any Death Row will tell >you. Enemies of the State. America wasn't founded to protect the interests >of any sense of the common man or to the common good; it was founded to >protect the interests of a wealthy group of molasses bootleggers operating >out of the Carribbean. Interesting in this light to recall that Washington >initially considered making Hebrew the national language, probably having to >do with aligning America with the moral authority represented by the rise of >"Israel" at the end of the world in the Book of Revelations. Nineteenth >century Manifest Destiny is a pure product of nothing but. In fact, the >genetic/hereditary science of Eugenics was a 19th century American >invention, and the Sterilization Laws passed in 1907 by the State of Indiana
>"to prevent procreation of confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles and >rapists" was the prototype for Nazi-funded scientific missions to find
>"reason" for persecution of Jews. WCW, Pound, Eliot & Co. - "us all" too - >are the inheritors of this tradition. Given this, the accusation that these >guys were "anti-semitic" seems trite; the more essential question lies in >the extent to which they - or any of us - gave (or in our case, continue to >give) sanction to state-infected suppositions toward "liberation." Calling >WCW anti-semitic merely sweetens the lie that we in fact DO have the moral >authority to "call him down," but what phantom will rise from the process of >so doing? Or more specifically, though maybe slightly off the mark, what >are the relations between poetic form, natural proportion and human law, for >example, that permit the existence of a sort of "screen" or "grate" through >which we may have intimations of the smell of death, but no actual access to >the causatively related "killing floor"? When the feeling of "threat" is >multiplied into an analogical "house of mirrors" (and perhaps of cards), how >do we identify it, ie., how do we get into the basement over which the >killing floor is laid?

>S E
>
>
>
>
>
>>From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
>>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>>To: [redacted]
>>Subject: Purity
>>Date: Wed, 14 Jul 1999 11:08:33 -0500
>>
>>May I indulge in some self-defense, please?
>>
>>Stephen Vincent wrote:
>>
>> >Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing
>> >WCW to an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy >> >dichotomy. I am not sure if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out >> >with the bath water, but I always get uncomfortable when anyone >> >(myself included) goes to the Holy ground with an implicit claim of >> >purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far
>> >to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, >> >homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal >> >acknowledgment and desire to exorcise some part of my person that >> >has inherited or learned those behaviors
>>
>>Stephen, if I point out, as I did, that there is textual evidence of >>a strong anti-Semitic strain in Williams, why is this
>>"self-righteousness"? I responded to what I felt was a significant >>blind spot in Billy Little's typically-provocative post, and did so >>in a reasonable way, I thought. Then there were four indignant >>responses, all of which strongly denied the applicability of the >>term, a couple of these calling my post "ridiculous." So I responded, >>pointing people to some specific evidence, and now am accused by you
>>of being self-righteous, by implication blind to my own likely >>racism, and of trying to throw WCW "out with the bathwater."
>>

>>I _love_ Williams. If he was more of a prick, more humanly sinful >>than the canon-makers have let on, that does nothing to diminish the >>greatness of his poetry. And in some ways the darkness makes >>the greatness all the more fascinating! The record is the record >>(which, yes, is open to differing interpretations), and I think it's >>best to talk about it without the innuendo you interject above.
>>Kent
>
>
>_____
>Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
>

↑ Index

227. Jordan Davis
Re: Pound and the Nobel Prize
Fri 16 Jul 1999

I stand corrected.
Apparently Pound was sad not to be honored by the manufacturer of TNT.

Laissez les bons mots roulez.
Jordan

↑ Index

228. Michael Magee
Re: PS on Williams
Fri 16 Jul 1999

According to Mark Weiss:
>
> When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the > Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than > it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black > German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person, > but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But > maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.
>

Mark, I understand where this is coming from vis a vis the Williams discussion, but it also seems worthwhile to point out that you've framed the issue in a classic and, to me, ultimately limiting way. Essentially, you're replaying a critique levied by Lukacs against existentialism - specifically Kierkegaard and

Heidegger. Lukacs says that their refusal to acknowledge the unity of the Self (eg, K's view of the individual as "incognito") was just bullshit:

They "embraced this doctrine of the eternal incognito which implies that a man's external deeds are no guide to his motives. In this case [Heidegger's], the deeds obscured behind the mysterious incognito were, needless to say, these intellectuals' participation in Nazism...But if this impenetrable incognito were the true 'condition humaine,' might not - concealed within their incognito - Heidegger or Schmitt have been secret opponents of Hitler all the time, only supporting him in the world of appearances?"

Now, what Lukacs says here really strikes a cord. I won't get into the whole issue of Heidegger and Nazism. What I will say is that Lukacs' logic - though I sympathize deeply with his dilemma - is flawed. It presupposes that the only critique of the Unity of the Self falls along the lines of this existential concept. Lukacs, it seems to me, comes out of the humanist aspect of Marx and Marxism: the self is ethical and whole: if not, than it is damaged and unethical (evil). In the world of continental philosophy of the 30's Heidegger and Lukacs may have seemed like the operative poles (though the Franfurt folks & I think particularly Benjamin offer an alternative) - but as regards Williams, there's John Dewey, there's Kenneth Burke, offering very important alternatives to a Lukacsian perspective on the self which stays well away from this issue of the Incognito. Dewey: "individuality itself is originally a potentiality and is realized only in interaction with surrounding conditions." This statement didn't deter Dewey from critiquing the unity of the self - it was in fact the predicate by which he understood the self as a multifarious, multimotivated construction; and through which he recognized that deciphering the motives behind individual actions (including speech acts) required the same sort of time and heightened attention and open-mindedness that an anthropologist (a good one) brings to the activities of whole communities. So, just to say, that when I ask for complex thinking on this WCW/anti-semitism it is from this latter, pragmatic perspective, though not without knowledge of Lukacsian exasperation.

-m.

↑ Index

229. peter neufeld

Re: Pound and the Nobel Prize

Fri 16 Jul 1999

Pound did in fact win the first Bollingen prize judged by, among others, Tate, who wrote two very interesting articles on awarding this prize to Pound-- the New York Times favorite treasonous fascist, for the _Pisan Cantos_ specifically which I see as an explicitly anti-semitic and fascist section of the Cantos and arguably the most aestheticly innovative and complex section as well. Pound despised Tate as critic and a poet, and Tate discusses his decision and the complexities of Post-War Pound in relative detail. I find this strain on WCW and anti-semitism very interesting. The interest in an authors identity and the value of that identity in relation to the work, I feel for me at least, is still open to investigation. I think it depends on how one wishes to read, under what kind of conditions the experiment is given, in what labratory we choose for it to take place. For this century it is a pressing demand in light of the WWII. An attempt to return history, I think, to the work. I'm skeptical of the fall back to the ironic reading, WCW adopting the voice of this or that position in order to somehow radically subvert this or that position. Are these poems then satires? I felt, and still do feel, that Williams deployed very negative images of African-Americans in Paterson, and if I choose to call that racism, which I do, it doesn't necessarily mean that I dismiss Williams for that. I doesn't necessarily follow that I am playing a holier-than-thou gambit either. I want to read Williams as a poet and also as historical happening.

Peter

Do You Yahoo!?
Get your free @yahoo.com address at http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

230. Joan Houlihan
Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
Fri 16 Jul 1999

Mark,

Pls see my comments below.

> Someone suggested that those who had denied Pound the Nobel Prize had failed to separate the work from the man.

Yes, I suggested it. Actually, it was the Bollingen as someone else pointed out.

They were in fact remembering
>some of the more disreputable works.

Hmm. By "disreputable" I assume you mean with anit-semitic or treasonist content. (?) I followed the controversy fairly closely at the time as I was embroiled in huge "discussions" about it with my Jewish boyfriend--who, BTW, was also a poet and claimed to be unable to even read either Pound or Eliot after their anti-semitism came to light. Their work had been absolutely and irrevocably contaminated for him. Of course, these awards all have a political component anyway, so it isn't saying a whole lot that this was a "political" decision.

> When Kurt Waldheim, after his UN career, was discovered to have committed war crimes there were some who objected to his being elected president of Austria--his great post-war service were apparently enough to excuse his earlier behavior as far as the Austrian electorate was concerned, but the critics felt that some things are unforgiveable and that to honor the perpetrator is to diminish the apparent seriousness of what had been done.

Yes, and I have to agree with those critics re: Waldheim. I mean, being elected president is quite a bit different from being given a prize for your writing. And, committing war crimes is also quite a bit different from making anti-semitic remarks--or even making those boradcasts.

> Pound wasn't a war criminal, merely a fellow-traveller of war criminals, but that's bad enough.

What about the pro-Mussolini broadcasts? Not a "war criminal" per se, but pretty actively treasonous. He would certainly have gone to jail if he weren't pronounced insane.

To deny him the prize was not so much a judgment on >the Cantos as a decision not to be seen as forgiving the unforgiveable in >the context of a Europe where passions like those who had expressed during >the war were and are very much alive.

Exactly the point I'm making. It was not a judgement on the work at all--but, ideally, should have been (in my opinion). I think the work is, must be, separate from the man (or woman). This is not to say that I find the behavior trivial. When Eliza Kazan stood and received a "lifetime acheivement" award at the Oscars this spring, I found it distressing--most of the people he had harmed were still alive, or at least their families were. It seemed incredibly disrespectful to them and I was happy to see some people remain seated, not applauding (e.g. Nick Nolte). But when the retrospective came on--Streetcar Named Desire, On the Waterfront, etc. all those incredible films--I was completely moved by the acheivement. I again came round to the belief that the work is the reality for an artist/writer, not the life.

Of course, a lot of the issue is how these prizes are awarded, publicized, etc., and made to seem to the public, to be awarded to the person, not the work. If Kazan didn't show up, it would have been easier to take. And, as you rightly point out, an award to Pound would certainly have seemed to be condoning his actions as a man--enough reason to not give it to him.

Best,
Joan

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

231. Macgregor Card

The Germ no.3

Fri 16 Jul 1999

 THE GERM: a journal of poetic research, vol. 3 (belated Spring 1999)   All is Not Bird that Twitters **

Featuring work from: George Oppen (a 50 p. selection of Daybooks 1-3, edited and with an introduction by Stephen Cope), John Ashbery, Faith Barrett, Anselm Berrigan, Leslie Bumstead, Clark Coolidge, Ray DiPalma, Jean Donnelly, Karen Donovan, Mark DuCharme, Marcella Durand, Chris Edgar, Michael Gizzi, Kevin Killian, John Latta, Gillian McCain, Laura Mullen, John Olson, Michael Palmer and Ben Watkins (a photo-text collaboration), Bin Ramke, Gustaf Sobin, Carol Szamatowicz, Linda Voris, Shannon Welch & Elizabeth Willis. Etchings by O. Angelica Biddle.

We're in a village bookstore near you (or optimistically, at two magazine-kiosks in the great plains). Distributors: Bernhard DeBoer, Small Press Distribution, Armadillo. ISSN 1093-6610. 256 pages.

Subscriptions, priced swell, no tricks: 2 issues ($12); 4 issues ($20); 6 issues (yes, only for the longevity faithful, $28). Like most folks, we're in dire need of new and/or old subscribers! Subscribe three times, seven, twenty-one! There's no cap on orders-per-family!

GERM EAST:
Macgregor Card
PO Box 2543
Providence, RI 02906
([redacted])

GERM WEST: (soon to be midwest--Chicago.)
Andrew Maxwell
PO Box 8501
Santa Cruz, CA 95060
([redacted])

We're always looking for submissions, and currently with vigilance (#4 due out this November). Please send work to both addresses, we promise a vigorous reading and an ever-swifter turnaround.

Cheers and thanks, yours,
Macgregor Card // Andrew Maxwell

↑ Index

232. John Tranter
KPFA mentioned in "Wired" magazine Internet News site
Sat 17 Jul 1999

This is ireprinted with thanks from Wired magazine's News site, on the internet at http://www.wired.com/news/

Radio Protests Stream in MP3

Oscar S. Cisneros

6:40 p.m. 16.Jul.99.PDT

In what may be the first live protest streamed in the MP3 format, activists and ex-staffers of an independent radio station on Friday netcast their objections to being ousted. The sound quality was poor and speakers' voices were inaudible at times, but the protesters' jubilance rang clearly enough. "We must fight for free speech," shouted one speaker, to cheers from the crowd. "Without free speech we have nothing." A string of firings that began in March at KPFA -- an independent radio station in Berkeley, California -- spawned a series of protests. Demonstrations escalated Tuesday when KPFA's owners, the Pacifica Foundation, had armed guards forcibly remove staff members from the building. One announcer was on the air at the time. Most staff members were placed on administrative leave. Nine nonstaffers who protested the removals have been arrested, and police have used batons to control the crowds (400-strong at times) that the event has attracted. Pacifica had forbidden staff from discussing the firings on the air, but some employees defied the order and did it anyway. "I saw the demonstration and I thought, 'These people should start broadcasting on the Internet,'" said netcasting expert Sameer Parekh. "On Thursday I set up the broadcast equipment and Thursday evening we did the first broadcast." Parekh accomplished it by setting up a 50-watt micro-broadcaster to cover the downtown Berkeley area, and a server to stream the action over the Net. Using Icecast, an open source MP3 streaming server software suite, and a community server hosted gratis by AboveNet, Parekh began streaming the content. Ousted KPFA staff burned a CD of previous broadcasts critiquing Pacifica's tactics and calling for more community control of the radio station. Parekh has been playing the CD over and over since Thursday night. Parekh also wants micro-radio stations to lift the streams he's sending over the Net and broadcast them. "If they plug the reception of my Internet stream into the micro-power broadcasters, then their local communities can have access to the demonstrations," Parekh said. Elan Fabbri, a spokeswoman for Pacifica, said that debate over the station is misplaced. "This is not about free speech. It's about a labor dispute," she said. "We have a union contract at KPFA that has been violated." Ken Ford, a member of Pacifica's national governing board, said that the staff was placed on administrative leave not as a punitive action but for their safety, given the protests and tensions surrounding KPFA. Protesters, he said, have not answered Pacifica's calls for mediation because they can't agree on who will negotiate for them. Ford had never heard of MP3 but said the 50-watt broadcast portion of the operation was illegal. "It's a pirate station, basically," he said. "They're busy little beavers, aren't they?"

sent by John Tranter, Jacket magazine

↑ Index

233. John Tranter
Ezra Pound and the Bollingen Prize for Literature, 1949.
Sat 17 Jul 1999

I thought the List might want to look through this: an excerpt from William McGuire, Poetry's Catbird Seat (the consultantship in poetry in the English language at the Library of Congress, 1937-1987), Library of Congress, Washington, 1988, 512 pages, ISBN 0-8444-0586-8. This (very selective) excerpt is 1,500 words long .

==========

In 1948 The Bollingen Foundation's trustees voted an allocation of $10,000 for ten years of literary awards. [. . .] (The Foundation's name had been Mary Mellon's oblique way of honoring C. G. Jung, who had a country retreat near a Swiss village called Bollingen.) [. . .]

On March 4, 1948, a Library of Congress press release announced the Bollingen Prize in Poetry. Carrying a purse of $1,000, the prize would be awarded each February for the best book of verse by an American author published during the preceding calendar year. The jury of selection would be composed of the Fellows in American Letters of the Library of Congress. [. . .]

A final ballot was cast by mail in February (as the 1948 prize would lapse on February 28): ten first places for Pound [for The Pisan Cantos], two for [W.C.] Williams, one abstention (Paul Green's)-and the vote of Theodore Spencer, who had died a few weeks before, was taken to stand as a first place for Pound, as it was he who had placed the Pisan Cantos in nomination back in November. [. . .]

The story was broken on Saturday night, the nineteenth, by Charles Collingwood in his radio news broadcast. The Sunday New York Times headline was characteristic of the press reaction: "Pound, in Mental Clinic, Wins Prize for Poetry Penned in Treason Cell." As Evans (Luther H.Evans, the Librarian of Congress) later observed, "The award possessed that bizarre quality that makes news. Along with excited reports, indignant editorials appeared in the press." An editorial in the New York Herald Tribune, however, stated: "This emphasis on an objective criterion of beauty and excellence, akin to belief in an objective truth, is fundamental to a free and rational society. In maintaining it the judges acted in the only way that is open to men who are sensitive to a later verdict of history." In the same paper, Louis Untermeyer called the Pisan Cantos "a ragbag and tail end of Pound at his worst. It shows a very disordered mind, one affected by the seeds of Fascism," and Robert Hillyer thought the award "regrettable" for aesthetic rather than political reasons. "I never saw anything to admire, not one line, in Pound." [. . .] Robert Frost, in a memorandum to his secretary Kay Morrison soon after the award was announced, called it "an unendurable outrage" and Pound "possibly crazy but more likely criminal." [. . .]

Huntington Cairns, in his journal, described one of his visits to St. Elizabeths. "I saw Pound for an hour on Saturday, Feb. 19th. The director of the hospital had informed him that he had won the Bollingen Prize, and he was obviously excited by the news. He had prepared a statement for the Press: 'No comment from the Bug House,' but he had decided not to give it out. [. . .] Walter Winchell quoted Pound's comment on the same occasion: "Democracy is more stupid than ever I said it was." Tate, incensed, asked Pound's wife to check on that. "Total lie" was Pound's answer. He called Winchell a "Jewish bedbug." [. . .]

For a time, controversy over the prize subsided. It was suddenly revived when the Saturday Review of Literature, in its issues of June 11 and 18, published two long articles by Robert Hillyer - "Treason's Strange Fruit" and "Poetry's New Priesthood." Hillyer, earlier a professor at Harvard (his students Howard Nemerov and Robert Fitzgerald remembered him as a gifted teacher), won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1934, and in 1939 was president of the Poetry Society of America. [. . .] Hillyer was regarded by many of his literary peers as an isolated figure who had carried on a long critical campaign against Eliot and Auden, whom he regarded as his poetic rivals. During the late spring, Evans and Adams had had letters from Hillyer and from Harrison Smith, the editor of the Review, putting questions about the award. Hillyer's were marked by a threatening tone, with insulting references to conspiracy and negligence. The F.B.1. had been alerted, he said; and an article would be published. [. . .]

In his two articles, Hillyer declared that the Cantos are "the vehicle of contempt for America, [of] Fascism, anti-Semitism, and . . . ruthless mockery of our Christian war dead." He implied that the award was part of a conspiracy against American ways of life and literature, and that the conspirators included T. S. Eliot, Paul Mellon, Jung, the Bollingen Foundation, Pantheon Books, most of the Fellows in American Letters, admirers of Eliot and Pound, the New Criticism, and various literary quarterlies. Their common aim, he argued, was to seize power in the literary world and undertake "the mystical and cultural preparation for a new authoritarianism. . . . In a spiritual morass where language, ethics, literature, and personal courage melt into something obscure and formless, a guided impulse has stirred the amorphous haze into something approaching form, something shaped out of stagnant art by groping Fascism." [. . .]

On June 24, Congressman Jacob K. Javits, of the 21 st District, New York, wrote Evans: "After having read the editorial 'Treason's Strange Fruit' . . . I am particularly concerned about the awarding of the Bollingen-Library of Congress Award of $1,000 to Ezra Pound. I would very much appreciate your advising me how the Fellows who make this award were chosen, who they are and the basis of their selection." [. . .] On July 19, another congressman, James T. Patterson, of Connecticut, addressed the House regarding the award ("Should we encourage the activities in literature of moral lepers?") and inserted into the Congressional Record the Hillyer articles, Evans's letter, and the Saturday Review's reply. On the twenty-first, Javits called for an investigation ("Must we not be equally diligent to investigate the infiltration of Fascist ideas especially in so august an institution as the Library of Congress?"), and the matter came before the Congressional Joint Committee on the Library of Congress, whose chairman was Senator Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island. What transpired was not an investigation but a resolution, on August 19, to the effect that the Library should abstain from giving prizes or making awards. ("I think it is a bad policy for the government to give prizes and awards, especially in matters of taste," the Senator told the press.) Evans immediately announced compliance. The awards that the Library discontinued, besides the Bollingen Prize, were the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Medal for "eminent services to chamber music" and three prizes endowed by Lessing Rosenwald in connection with an annual national exhibition of prints.

In that same feverish summer of 1949, William Carlos Williams was also the object of a small cloud of protest, raised by his review of the Pisan Cantos in the spring issue of Imagi, a very small poetry quarterly published in Baltimore. During July, Evans received a few letters, all alike in content, protesting Williams's appointment as Consultant in Poetry - evidently the result of confusion with his appointment as a Fellow earlier in the year. Some of the letters came from the editors of other small verse magazines (in Arkansas, California, etc.), saying for example, "That [Williams] should defend such a work places him in the same category with Pound, that of utter contempt and treachery to all the ideals for which America stands. . . ." [. . .]

After the prize was barred (and $9,000 returned to the donor) the Bollingen Foundation received a number of requests from universities to carry it on. In early 1950, the Yale University Library was granted the funds to continue making the awards. The winner of the 1949 Prize, selected by a committee whose members - Adams, Aiken, Shapiro, Chapin, Warren - had all been Fellows in American Letters]at the Library of Congress], was Wallace Stevens. [. . .]

In 1963 the amount of the award was increased to $5,000, and thereafter it was given every other year. After 1968, when the Bollingen Foundation ended its programs (except for the Bollingen Series, which it gave to Princeton University Press to carry through its publication), the Andrew W Mellon Foundation took over, and in 1973 made an outright endowment of $100,000 to enable the Yale Library to continue awarding the prize in perpetuity. By now [1988] more than thirty poets, including many of the Consultants, have received the Bollingen Prize. They keep coming on.

Cowley to Tate, October 21, 1949: "I went to a literary tea for Nehru. Present were the editors of the Saturday Review... Harrison Smith saw me and advanced beaming. 'I was going to write and congratulate you,' he said, 'on the article about Hillyer. I think you had the right dope. Of course, we just printed the Hillyer articles and the editorial to start a controversy. It was a great success. We thought it would give us three exciting issues but it went on for six.'

==========

from
John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted]
Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html
Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

234. Stephen Cope

Re: The Germ

Sat 17 Jul 1999

The Germ can be found at:

The Germ c/o
Macgregor Card

POBox 2543
Providence, RI 02906

Thanks for the interest (and Chris, for bringing it up...)

Stephen

↑ Index

235. A H Bramhall
Exactly This
Sat 17 Jul 1999

Earthly exactitude, maneuver this field. this is the drill: to explain the particulars.

woke and found out, there is no underwear. there's a verbal point reaching the thing that that. this tree: easily equated with perception, and probing unity. lost the fact of the discussion. goofed the perimetre of answerable. listened in, thought I was in. stepped out, John is better. beer for everyone, the house is open. I blank dearest. the shot is blocked, the turn around. wait for it. the fact is this: an orange or pink blouse, a tree (perhaps elm), stars smiling.

things. the desperate honour of lunch. who will weigh in? at this point, news, newly sprung and attendant. what are mountainsides? exactly this, my friend.

↑ Index

236. David Baratier
Re: Submission Crucible
Sat 17 Jul 1999

On rejection with ad enclosures:

If someone is offended by this practice let them be. Poets are a dime a dozen and twelve more will show up. Readers are a much rarer commodity. The gig is to diseminate information, not appease the ego of the kind of writer who will be so infinitely hurt by a rejection as to not recover. They will not recover; preferably disappear.

There is only one form of demeanment and antagonization I am aware of. A magazine that does not respond to queries about a first correspondence.

Or does something similar to Big Allis. After a two year submission period, they send a letter which states they still had not read the pieces and are sending them back. Magazines who are not responsible to their constituency will suffer accordingly.

Be well

David Baratier

↑ Index

237. Alan Sondheim
Error-Message
Sat 17 Jul 1999

-

Error-Message ("Hello world!")

```
(if (and (bound like a big string 'emacs-version)
        (or (and (bound like a string 'epoch::version) epoch::version) (string-less string-full emacs-version "19.29"))) (error "`stringy' was compiled for Emacs 19.29 or later")) (string-full errors: July 17 then (mount stringy-string `x` || strung-up errors: July 14 then (elseif a really big string) (strung-up > dev/mul)))
   (car(caddr(cadddr(s t r i n g i n g - s t r i n g)))) (endif strung-out stringy-string ("a really big string"))
```

(byte-code-stringy "n/n!/*")

↑ Index

238. Hugh Nicoll wr-eye-tings list
Sat 17 Jul 1999

Greetings from Miyazaki, Japan

In response to Jim Rosenberg's plea for help, I have set up a new home for the wr-eye-tings list on my mail list machine. The list is running on LetterRip Pro, a Mac mailserver, that lives on a PM7100 here in my office.

The subscription procedure is very simple.

Send an email message to

[redacted]

with the line

subscribe wr-eye-tings

in the body of the message.

Please make sure your sig file is turned off in your mail program.

If you have trouble or suggestions for tweaking the list settings, digest options, sig file info etc. please contact me at

[redacted]

All the best,

Hugh

Hugh Nicoll, Miyazaki Municipal University, Funatsuka 1-1-2, Miyazaki-shi, Miyazaki-ken, [redacted] JAPAN
tel 81-(0)985-20-4788, fax 81-(0)985-20-4807
<http://www.miyazaki-mu.ac.jp/~hnicoll/>

↑ Index

239. Jim Rosenberg
wr-eye-tings will live again (promise!)
Sun 18 Jul 1999

Here is the status of resurrecting the wr-eye-tings list:

1. I've got a solid volunteer to host the list who's already set up to do this.

2. I've configured my own mail server to do this in case something goes wrong. (I would just go ahead and host the list myself, but my volunteer's Internet connectivity is better than mine. I'll announce the name of our rescuer with grateful thanks when we've got everything set up.)

So we have a new home in the wings for wr-eye-tings. It's quite likely you will have to resubscribe. Please stay tuned for an announcement, which should come in the next few days. In the meantime, please be patient.

If you happen to know someone that you know is subscribed to wr-eye-tings but is not on the Poetics List, you might pass on the word that wr-eye-tings is down but is being reconstituted.

Jim Rosenberg http://www.well.com/user/jer/
CIS: 71515,124
WELL: jer
Internet: [redacted]

↑ Index

240. Julie Johnson
ATTN Small Press Publishers
Sun 18 Jul 1999

Duration Press is seeking to develop a web page dedicated exclusively to Small Press Announcements.

This list, which will be updated every two weeks, will give interested parties a one stop place to look for recent publications.

As the list is updated, Duration Press will also house an archive of previous lists, in order to give readers a kind of bibliography in process of small press publications.

This list, of course, will depend upon the participation of both readers & publishers.

If this sounds like a resource that anyone would be interested in seeing, please send all comments to Jerrold Shiroma at [redacted] .

Hopefully the response to this will be large enough to warrant constructing this resource.

All best,

Jerrold Shiroma
Duration Press

↑ Index

241. juliana spahr
request for horror stories involving work sent to aca journal
Sun 18 Jul 1999

All this talk about submitting to poetry journals reminded me that I am collecting horror stories involving work sent to academic (peer reviewed; critical) journals.

I'm giving a paper at the mla on the not very exciting topic of simultaneous submissions. Anyway, I'm the pro person the panel--arguing that the reviewing practices of academic journals are filled with abuse and simultaneous submissions might be one way to force journals to reform.

I'm interested in collecting stories (academic journals only; not poetry or small press journals). Please back channel them to me. If I were to refer to your story in the paper, I would approve it with you and respect any sort of privacy that you might desire.

Thanks.

Juliana Spahr
[redacted]

↑ Index

242. A H Bramhall
pointless questions
Sun 18 Jul 1999

how much authority is enough? where do you buy this commodity? how do you get the others to listen? where did Eliot Weinberger come from? why wasn't he here to begin with? what's fear worth these days? which poem are you referring to? what's your favourite of all the poems you don't read? can we talk Tennyson? how long did it take you to find out? who's out now? where are the boundaries? which one's the boss? who cares? when did all this come down? who's in charge of these words? who owns the owners? which credential do you prefer? what's your idea of relief? what part of death is not necessary? where have you been all day? what's the best way to get out of here? can you find a better route there? behind who should you hide? at what point will you know that you have won? are you as ready as you need to be? are all circles the same? can we question questions? will there be time later? who should we turn to? does the perimetre change? do we? are you quite sure? is there one in many?

just asking, this is no test, no test at all. Allen Bramhall

↑ Index

243. Lowther,John
~
Sun 18 Jul 1999

where i thought a turn is broken

but occurence led me leads back there's no return

↑ Index

244. Hamish John Dewe
Re: Not all salt is NaCl
Sun 18 Jul 1999

Sorry, John(s).

We became aware of the other Aus Salt sometime after starting the NZ Salt. We did toy with the idea of changing names, but didn't want to risk confusing our rather small (even by NZ standards) readership, and supposed that our readerships weren't overlapping.

Hamish Dewe

> In response to a recent posting from New Zealand about a magazine called "Salt", I'd like to pass on to the Buffalo List the following:
>
> "John Kinsella, editor of the Australian [literary magazine] "Salt", would like to state clearly > that the journal he has edited since 1990 has no connection with the newish NZ journal of the same name."
>
> John Tranter, editor, Jacket magazine

↑ Index

245. Alan Sondheim
The Animal
Sun 18 Jul 1999

\

The Animal

It's fifty years from now and there's this one animal left. It doesn't matter what you call it, where it lived. It goes on now by artificial means, intravenous feeding, automated evacuation. It has nothing to look at, maybe its eyes are clouded over.

The animal stands there, it's recorded from every angle. Temperature, even radio-radiation, audio, video, hologram, old quickcams and 4x5 plate cam- eras, everything they could think of. Terabytes of information flow out through thick cables, documenting its every move, it shuffles.

On and on and on, into huge computers, they take the information, alter it. Suddenly there are recreations of tropical forests, African savannas, Pennsylvanian hilltops, deserts at night. The animal's reconstructed as wolf, ibis, snake, spider, bear. Now everyone can see the wildlife through the glasses, through the screens, through implants. The animal turns in its sleep, even the animal has to dream. Walls, nothing, the placement of a foot. Overhead, screens, birds soar, shimmer.

The tail of the animal, maybe, the whiskers.

↑ Index

246. Chris Stroffolino

Nada Gordon & Gary Sullivan

Mon 19 Jul 1999

It was a pleasure to see two successful "men of letters" approaching 50, John Yau and Charles Bernstein (& yes Charles I mention your name publically here, in attempted good faith, as "psychic payment" for your private praise of a point or two I made at the L(R)J conference!) present at the reading of Gary Sullivan and Nada Gordon this sunday at the Zinc Bar. It was a little sad to see not too many others there, but I don't want so much to "lay the guilt trip on those who didn't show" as proactively promote, a la that Game Theory song "sleeping through heaven" which is fun to sing to others....

Anyway, it was no mere reading but a, from this distance, true collaborative dialogue between these writer/lovers (lover/writers) that may serve as the beginning of a much needed (at least in NYC poetry scene) attempt to dissolve, as much as possible and desirable (or at least intensely toy with, and be toyed by) the barriers between the "political" and the "personal"
the "aesthetic" and the "ethical",
the "elliptical" and the "straightforward"
the "public" and the "private" etc.
(i sacrifice rhyme and rhythm for analogical significance here)

What gary and Nada seem to be embarking on is a couragous attempt to render explicit, through a dramatic embodiment, many concepts that are ostensibly touted and/or embraced by the "avant-garde" but whose "products" so rarely achieve, or at least reveale, the symbiosis that occurs both between two people "in the throes" as it were as well as between those "blue poles" of "life" and "art". What G and S suggest is that there may not be able to be a connection between two people unless there is also an attempt to connect life and art, without subordinating one to the other, except theatricaly (in moments) of course, within the conceptual frame of endless possibility in the context of monogamous (for the time being, in the "nest phase" at least), but otherwise "nontraditional" love...

This was the first (of what I hope will be more) public performance of these young(ish) artist/lovers, and the content of their poetic epistles (and nada's acapellas, which would be even better, i'd argue, with musical--say, piano--backup) has not yet, for me, eclipsed the sense of the sheer radicalness of the concept Gordon and Sullivan propose....

To emphasize the conceptual aspect (frame?) of their work is not meant to be taken as derogatory. The courae it takes to include a computerized-voice reading of un-obscene pornography (more tabooed in "avant-garde" scenes allegedly more on the grunds of its lack of linguistic innovation than for any anti-pleasury ideology aeshetic or ogery), for instance, among the most abstract and/or lyrical of musings, for me, takes on a conceptual significance that not only challenges community standards of "good art" but also raises the question of whether anti-desire aeshetics, or an art-for-art's-sake attitude and behavior, may NOT simply "make nothing happen," but rather, dangerously, widen the gap between art and life, and highten alienation...

Because Gary and Nada's work (dealinating too first name from last name) is groundedin the feeling and idea of an all-emcompassing eros (although that love is not its only ground), it may seem to provide an exemplary contrast to other so-called conceptual artists. For instance (see Village Voice, July 6, 1999 article by C.Carr), the situationist-influenced young "performance artist" Christine Hill, whose thought-provoking meshing of 'everyday commerce' activities and art have been gaining some attention recently. According to Carr, "Hill's work really blurs the art/life line because it's about creating something that IS life. She has worked in the past as a masseuse, waitress, shopkeeper, and lead singer in a rock band--activities she desginated as ART while they also provided an income..." Hill thinks of drawing and painting as "apprentice skills" and she is out to create situations, not objects.... Sullivan and Gordon, however, don't seem to conceive of writing as "apprentice skills" but rather allow for or encourage actively more of a symbiosis, and in this sense I'd argue go beyond Hill (So, maybe Deitch Projects or the Public Art Fund could fund them too!)... Unlike Hill (and lacking her hard-nosed practicality, one might argue), G and S are not as interested in eradicating the aspect of the life/art dichomotomy that makes it such a difficult challenge to "unite one's vocation and avocation" (to paraphrase Frost's wistful hope without a net...)> What they do for money, their public role outside of their role as a "couple of writers" (in the highest sense of that phrase) is not emphasized. One could imagine, perhaps, an art attitude that combines these two distinct ways (Hill's and G and S's) of blurring or eradicating the life/art distinction, but perhaps this is too much to ask, or perhaps the difference is best unbridgeable.

(more, to be continued, in next post quite shortly....)

↑ Index

247. Chris Stroffolino

Nada and Gary (continued)

Mon 19 Jul 1999

Hill, as an individual artist, chooses to present herself theatrically as an installation piece (as TOURGUIDE and Used-clothes proprietor, etc., giving "new meaning" to the convention of the "studio visit"), in ways that may be compared to the largely individualist ethos of, say, Annie Sprinkle (sex or at least breasts being more like business than like love), while Sullivan and Gordon, at this phase at least, by challenging the idea of the individual, and the objectification of the other, or of the self for that matter, by becoming mutual muses for each other, and bracketting the economic exigencies and mediations that inform (and even drive) Hill's role-playing, create a conceptual art that meshes poetry and life in a way that can move toward undoing some very stubborn either/or dichotomies that, through compartmentalization, either reduce the tension to a manageable working partnership, or make it more impossible to love (depending on one's definition of), live. Because N and G write to each other directly, they not only discover (and invent?) in each other a form capacious enough for all modes of writing, but they also find in all modes of writing, a way to embrace the tradition of (love) poetry, of lyric and discursive, or even fragment/aphoristic singularity while also challenging it by more inclusively putting it in dialogue WITH dialogue--a dialogue that can only become MORE dramatic, even as the realtonship may seem to stabilize (freer the tighter).... If there seems something too utopian yet about their perfomance (if they ignored, for instance, my request to include more of their verbal "fight scenes" in this first public performance), this is not to be condemned, or even merely tolerated and swept under the rug by being judged by the standards of 'safe art' as 'mediocre' if judged by 'literary' merits.... You have to start somewhere, and the myth of true lovers, or even "soulmates" that may "transport" each other, though certainly partaking to some degree in fiction (and surely hokey to the embarrassed or embittered), is at least as fitting a place to start as any (especially against a backdrop of a model of profit and loss which may perhaps contaminate many potential loves). They should be given the poetry teaching jobs! Or at least be made examples in polemic arguments that wield more cultural authority, or institutional sway, than mine (if I was "talking policy" with "the big girls" say)... Ah, when is a joke not a joke.... So,Hail Gary Sullivan and Nada Gordon, ...

chris stroffolino

↑ Index

248. Ron Silliman
Hass on Lee Ann Brown
Mon 19 Jul 1999

Bob Hass is on a roll in his Washington Post Poet's Choice column. He follows last week's piece on Fanny Howe with this one on Lee Ann Brown:

http://search.washingtonpost.com/wp-srv/WPlate/1999-07/18/049l-071899-idx.ht ml

Like some other folks I know, he doesn't quite get the seriousness of her endeavor, but his good will is evident throughout. Also, the boy's a little unclear on Tender Buttons. That was a book, Bob, not a prose poem.

Ron

↑ Index

249. Michael Franco
BOSTON LAST CALL BOSTON!!!!!!
Mon 19 Jul 1999

ANNOUNCING:

THE 2nd ANNUAL BOSTON ALTERNATIVE POETRY
CONFERENCE

JULY 23-25, 1999

The Art Institute of Boston
at Lesley
700 Beacon St.
Boston, MA

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS: as of 6/30/99

Friday, July 23

6:30 p.m. - Night Reading - Andrew Schelling, C.D. Wright, Michael Franco, Anselm Berrigan, Magdalena Zurawski, Daniel Bouchard, Donna de la Perriere

Saturday, July 24

9:00 a.m. - William Bronk Reading - (Jack Kimball, Donna de la Perriere and others)

10:00 a.m. - Morning Reading - Douglas Rothschild, Sean Cole, Diane Wald, Barbara Claire Freeman, Richard Dillon, Brendan Lorber

12:00 Noon - Lunch Break

1:00 p.m. - Frank Ohara Reading - (Anne Waldman, Jordan Davis, Douglas Rothschild and others)

2:00 p.m. - Alan Gilbert - "Poetry as Document"

2:30 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - Tina Darragh, Beth Anderson, Peter Ganick, Drew Gardner, Chris Stroffolino, Alan Gilbert, Patrick Doud, David Kirschenbaum, Sam Truitt, Ed Barrett,Ammiel Alcalay

5:00 p.m. - Dinner Break

6:00 p.m. - Maria Damon - "Something About Bob Kaufman and the Poet's Labor"

7:00 p.m. - Night Reading - Anne Waldman, Leslie Scalapino, John Wieners, Gerrit Lansing, Michael Gizzi, Kristin Prevallet

Sunday, July 25

9:00 a.m. - Emily Dickinson Reading - (Joseph Lease, Jack Kimball and others)

10:00 a.m. - Morning Reading - Jack Kimball, Prageeta Sharma, Jacques Debrot, Heather Scott Peterson, Aaron Kiely

12:00 Noon - Lunch Break

1:00 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - "Ways to Read" (Michael Basinski, Wendy Kramer, Kenneth Goldsmith)

2:00 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - Raffael de Gruttola, Tadashi Kondo, Wilfred Croteau (renku and haiga)- Andrew Schelling reads from his "Road to Ocosingo"

3:00 p.m. - Afternoon Reading - Lewis Warsh, Will Alexander, Jordan Davis, Henry Gould, Damon Krukowski, Jim Behrle, Marcella Durand

5:00 p.m. - Dinner Break

6:00 p.m. - David Shapiro - "A Radiant Pluralism: For Poetry"

7:00 p.m. - Night Reading - David Shapiro, Lyn Hejinian, Forrest Gander, Joseph Lease, Lisa Jarnot

CONFERENCE REGISTRATION:

Weekend Pass: $40
Saturday or Sunday only: $18
Single Readings: $7

Student discounts available. Tickets available at the door or by pre-registration. For more registration info. contact Aaron Kiely at this email, by phone at [redacted] or at PO Box 441517, Somerville, MA 02144

Thank You!

↑ Index

250. Brian Stefans
What to do with all this Real?
Mon 19 Jul 1999

I don't think this is a fair reading of what I wrote. Perhaps, if you'd like a new angle on this, you can imagine writing a story with your friend from the Poconos as the protagonist, and when quoting him in the story not use quotation marks. You, as most of us, would be very frightened to do this because you would wonder if a reader would think these were words reflecting your own opinions or personality. But nonetheless this is what a lot of modernists did, I guess because it was supposed to be an unmediated representation of objective reality, which in the scientific spirit of the day was a primary goal. Of course, if you don't think your friend from the Poconos is worth literary immortality you wouldn't write the story at all, but then again you wrote this post, so your friend, racist or not, was somehow useful.

Date: Thu, 15 Jul 1999 18:16:46 -0700
From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: PS on Williams

When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person, but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.

At 01:21 PM 7/15/99 -0400, you wrote:
>As a sort of postscipt to my other comments on Williams, I would note that >the quotes Eliot Weinberger draws from his stories, while being quite >powerfully derogatory, could be seen to consistently fall within the realm >of "speaking through the other," i.e. echoings of the local tongue and >prejudices, and also within my idea of the fetishized ethnicity. My sense >is that Williams didn't belong to any local community in Rutherford in any >very easy way -- he felt quite alienated, as we all know -- so a lot of >what sounds like "plain speech" in Williams can often be seen as not his >own plain speech, until perhaps the Asphodel poem where it seems all him.

>But that's because we know to whom he is speaking -- i.e. Flossy. But when >he writes "He was one of those Jews..." sounding like he's addressing >someone, but who is this? (If one imagines that he thought his first or >only readers for such stories would be his sophisticated New York literati >friends, many of whom were Jewish, how do these lines resonate with them?)
>
>In any case, what would be interesting would be if someone could find the >kind of invective that one finds in Pound and Cummings and others, or the >kind of detached "objective" tone in Eliot's writing on Christian culture, >in Williams -- i.e. something more discursive and outside the realm of pure
>imagism, something with a sure sense of audience and purpose -- since such >a thing would point to a more synthesized world-view in Williams that >presently we can't see. I've never quite figured out whom Williams was >addressing in Spring and All, for example -- much of which, as I'd written >to a friend earlier, would sound like the most vicious "flame" on the >internet -- and I think this vagueness about his audience contributes to >the choppy, seemingly incomplete nature of his "career," i.e. the ups and >downs of his work.
>
>Also, can I suggest Marianne Moore as a modernist not motivated by hate or >exhibited anti-semitism? I'll probably find this wasn't the case.
>
>Brian
>
>

↑ Index

251. Thomas Bell asylum
Mon 19 Jul 1999

I've been informed a piece I collaborated on (in?) with (put together with?) three visual artists has been posted (published? at:

http://www.channel.org.uk/asylum

tom bell
--
//\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\/\\
OOOPSY \//\\\/\//\\\/ <><>,...,.,
WHOOPS J K JOVE BY HHH ZOOOOZ ZEUS'WRATHHTARW
 LLLL STOPG [EMPTY] SPACER

index of online work at http://members.home.net/trbell
essays: http://members.tripod.com/~trbell/criticism/gloom.htm

↑ Index

252. Poetics List Administration
Book by Palmer/Bernstein? / Ron Persons
Mon 19 Jul 1999

This message came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Ron Persons" <[redacted]>
Date: 7/16/99, 6:52 PM -0400

I remember browsing through a book that contained either conversations between Charles Bernstein and Michael Palmer, or was edited by them, or both. Anyone know of this book?

Please backchannel. thanks, RP

↑ Index

253. Mark Weiss
Re: PS on Williams
Mon 19 Jul 1999

It's good to be reminded from time to time why I don't mind having been such a bad graduate student. I don't think I ever suggested that complex thinking about anything is ever out of order, nor that Williams was uniformly a bad man. I am suggesting that to understand is not necessarily to forgive. Perhaps especially if one is a member of the victimized group. Here, by way of illustration, is a story I heard from a friend not five minutes ago. His ex-wife, with whom he has a passably friendly relationship, had their two young children last night. He gets home late to an hysterical message on his machine: the kids had awakened in the middle of the night to find themselves alone. This morning he discovers that the x had gone out to a bar because she needed some adult company. It's a hard time for her--she just broke up with her guy, and her father, to whom she was very close, just died of cancer. She's usually not that irresponsible. Easy to understand her situation as complexly as one likes, not so easy to forgive. And I did all that without reference to a single philosopher.

At 02:16 PM 7/16/99 -0400, you wrote:
>According to Mark Weiss:
>>
>> When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the >> Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than >> it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black >> German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person,
>> but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But >> maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.
>>
>
>Mark, I understand where this is coming from vis a vis the Williams >discussion, but it also seems worthwhile to point out that you've framed >the issue in a classic and, to me, ultimately limiting way. Essentially, >you're replaying a critique levied by Lukacs against existentialism - >specifically Kierkegaard and Heidegger. Lukacs says that their refusal to >acknowledge the unity of the Self (eg, K's view of the individual as >"incognito") was just bullshit:
>
>They "embraced this doctrine of the eternal incognito which implies that a >man's external deeds are no guide to his motives. In this case >[Heidegger's], the deeds obscured behind the mysterious incognito were,
>needless to say, these intellectuals' participation in Nazism...But if >this impenetrable incognito were the true 'condition humaine,' might not - >concealed within their incognito - Heidegger or Schmitt have been secret >opponents of Hitler all the time, only supporting him in the world of >appearances?"
>
>Now, what Lukacs says here really strikes a cord. I won't get into the >whole issue of Heidegger and Nazism. What I will say is that Lukacs' >logic - though I sympathize deeply with his dilemma - is flawed. It >presupposes that the only critique of the Unity of the Self falls along >the lines of this existential concept. Lukacs, it seems to me, comes out >of the humanist aspect of Marx and Marxism: the self is ethical and whole:
>if not, than it is damaged and unethical (evil). In the world of >continental philosophy of the 30's Heidegger and Lukacs may have seemed >like the operative poles (though the Franfurt folks & I think >particularly Benjamin offer an alternative) - but as regards Williams, >there's John Dewey, there's Kenneth Burke, offering very important >alternatives to a Lukacsian perspective on the self which stays well away >from this issue of the Incognito. Dewey: "individuality itself is >originally a potentiality and is realized only in interaction with >surrounding conditions." This statement didn't deter Dewey from >critiquing the unity of the self - it was in fact the predicate by which >he understood the self as a multifarious, multimotivated construction; and >through which he recognized that deciphering the motives behind >individual actions (including speech acts) required the same sort of time >and heightened attention and open-mindedness that an anthropologist (a >good one) brings to the activities of whole communities. So, just to say, >that when I ask for complex thinking on this WCW/anti-semitism it is from >this latter, pragmatic perspective, though not without knowledge of >Lukacsian exasperation.

>
>-m.
>
>

↑ Index

254. Mark Weiss

Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize

Mon 19 Jul 1999

The work is not the man, neither is the prize the work. The prize, as i think you are saying, is a political gesture apart from the work.

At 06:24 PM 7/16/99 GMT, you wrote:
>Mark,
>
>Pls see my comments below.
>
>>Someone suggested that those who had denied Pound the Nobel Prize had >>failed to separate the work from the man.
>
>Yes, I suggested it. Actually, it was the Bollingen as someone else pointed >out.
>
>They were in fact remembering
>>some of the more disreputable works.
>
>Hmm. By "disreputable" I assume you mean with anit-semitic or treasonist >content. (?) I followed the controversy fairly closely at the time as I was >embroiled in huge "discussions" about it with my Jewish boyfriend--who, BTW, >was also a poet and claimed to be unable to even read either Pound or Eliot >after their anti-semitism came to light. Their work had been absolutely and >irrevocably contaminated for him. Of course, these awards all have a >political component anyway, so it isn't saying a whole lot that this was a >"political" decision.

>
>>When Kurt Waldheim, after his UN career, was discovered to have committed >>war crimes there were some who objected to his being elected president of >>Austria--his great post-war service were apparently enough to excuse his >>earlier behavior as far as the Austrian electorate was concerned, but the >>critics felt that some things are unforgiveable and that to honor the >>perpetrator is to diminish the apparent seriousness of what had been done.
>
>Yes, and I have to agree with those critics re: Waldheim. I mean, being >elected president is quite a bit different from being given a prize for your >writing. And, committing war crimes is also quite a bit different from >making anti-semitic remarks--or even making those boradcasts.
>
>>Pound wasn't a war criminal, merely a fellow-traveller of war criminals, >>but that's bad enough.
>
>What about the pro-Mussolini broadcasts? Not a "war criminal" per se, but >pretty actively treasonous. He would certainly have gone to jail if he >weren't pronounced insane.
>
>To deny him the prize was not so much a judgment on >>the Cantos as a decision not to be seen as forgiving the unforgiveable in >>the context of a Europe where passions like those who had expressed during >>the war were and are very much alive.
>
>
>Exactly the point I'm making. It was not a judgement on the work at >all--but, ideally, should have been (in my opinion). I think the work is, >must be, separate from the man (or woman). This is not to say that I find >the behavior trivial. When Eliza Kazan stood and received a "lifetime >acheivement" award at the Oscars this spring, I found it distressing--most >of the people he had harmed were still alive, or at least their families >were. It seemed incredibly disrespectful to them and I was happy to see some >people remain seated, not applauding (e.g. Nick Nolte). But when the >retrospective came on--Streetcar Named Desire, On the Waterfront, etc. all >those incredible films--I was completely moved by the acheivement. I again >came round to the belief that the work is the reality for an artist/writer, >not the life.

>
>Of course, a lot of the issue is how these prizes are awarded, publicized, >etc., and made to seem to the public, to be awarded to the person, not >the work. If Kazan didn't show up, it would have been easier to take. And, >as you rightly point out, an award to Pound would certainly have seemed >to be condoning his actions as a man--enough reason to not give it to him.
>
>Best,
>Joan
>
>
>
>
>_____
>Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
>

↑ Index

255. Mark Weiss

Re: What to do with all this Real?

Mon 19 Jul 1999

I'm not sure I understand what you're saying. Williams is more than any modern poet the source of my own development as a poet, so I guess I think he's useful. And the boy in the story was my best friend. I don't think either of them were being ironic in expressing their less savory attitudes.

At 01:34 PM 7/19/99 -0400, you wrote:
>I don't think this is a fair reading of what I wrote. Perhaps, if you'd >like a new angle on this, you can imagine writing a story with your friend >from the Poconos as the protagonist, and when quoting him in the story not >use quotation marks. You, as most of us, would be very frightened to do >this because you would wonder if a reader would think these were words >reflecting your own opinions or personality. But nonetheless this is what >a lot of modernists did, I guess because it was supposed to be an >unmediated representation of objective reality, which in the scientific >spirit of the day was a primary goal. Of course, if you don't think your >friend from the Poconos is worth literary immortality you wouldn't write >the story at all, but then again you wrote this post, so your friend, >racist or not, was somehow useful.

>
>
>Date: Thu, 15 Jul 1999 18:16:46 -0700
>From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: PS on Williams
>
>When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the >Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than >it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black >German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person, >but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But >maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.
>
>At 01:21 PM 7/15/99 -0400, you wrote:
>>As a sort of postscipt to my other comments on Williams, I would note that >>the quotes Eliot Weinberger draws from his stories, while being quite >>powerfully derogatory, could be seen to consistently fall within the realm >>of "speaking through the other," i.e. echoings of the local tongue and >>prejudices, and also within my idea of the fetishized ethnicity. My sense >>is that Williams didn't belong to any local community in Rutherford in any >>very easy way -- he felt quite alienated, as we all know -- so a lot of >>what sounds like "plain speech" in Williams can often be seen as not his >>own plain speech, until perhaps the Asphodel poem where it seems all him.
>>But that's because we know to whom he is speaking -- i.e. Flossy. But >when >>he writes "He was one of those Jews..." sounding like he's addressing >>someone, but who is this? (If one imagines that he thought his first or >>only readers for such stories would be his sophisticated New York literati >>friends, many of whom were Jewish, how do these lines resonate with them?)
>>
>>In any case, what would be interesting would be if someone could find the >>kind of invective that one finds in Pound and Cummings and others, or the >>kind of detached "objective" tone in Eliot's writing on Christian culture, >>in Williams -- i.e. something more discursive and outside the realm of >pure >>imagism, something with a sure sense of audience and purpose -- since such >>a thing would point to a more synthesized world-view in Williams that >>presently we can't see. I've never quite figured out whom Williams was >>addressing in Spring and All, for example -- much of which, as I'd written

>>to a friend earlier, would sound like the most vicious "flame" on the >>internet -- and I think this vagueness about his audience contributes to >>the choppy, seemingly incomplete nature of his "career," i.e. the ups and >>downs of his work.
>>
>>Also, can I suggest Marianne Moore as a modernist not motivated by hate or >>exhibited anti-semitism? I'll probably find this wasn't the case.
>>
>>Brian
>>
>>
>
>

↑ Index

256. raea100900
address request
Mon 19 Jul 1999

I wonder if anyone in List Land could give me an email address for Ed Foster of Talisman?

Rae Armantrout

↑ Index

257. Michael W Bibby Pound/Bollingen
Mon 19 Jul 1999

I've been following the thread on Williams/Pound/anti-semitism with great interest. My current research focuses on African-American poetry from about 1945-1955, and many points being made on the list touch on issues of concern to me. I was glad to see someone (Peter Neufeld) finally correct the earlier error--Pound did indeed receive the Bollingen and it ignited a substantial controversy. John Tranter's quotations from McGuire's book were especially interesting. I spent some time last summer looking through the Cleanth Brooks papers at the Beinecke--letters from Allen Tate to Brooks show that there was deep contempt for Hillyer at Kenyon and among the New Crit poets--and Tate encouraged Brooks to write a letter, which he did, attacking the SRL for even printing Hillyer's editorials.

But what I'd like to ask the list members--and I've already asked H-AMSTDY and AFAM-L about this, with no luck--is if anyone knows of any response to the Pound debate among African American writers of the period. I'm familiar with the Pound/Hughes connection (and I've studied the letters from Ez to Hughes at Beinecke)--but does anyone know what other writers were saying? Did Wright, Ellison, Dodson, Hayden, Brooks, etc. comment on this? I couldn't find anything on it in major black periodicals of the day (Negro Digest, Crisis, Phylon). But am I overlooking something?

Thanks!

Michael Bibby
Department of English
Shippensburg University
1871 Old Main Drive
Shippensburg, PA 17257
[redacted]

↑ Index

258. John Tranter

Gabriela Mistral, translated by Langston Hughes. 1957

Mon 19 Jul 1999

I'd like Jacket magazine to publish a discussion of this book (below):
is there anyone out there who would like to put together a couple of thousand words on the topic? Jacket is free, and thus (unfortunately) unable to pay for contributions.
==========
Mistral, Gabriela. (Pseud. of Godoy Alcayaga, Lucila 1889- 1957).
Selected Poems of Gabriela Mistral, translated and introduced by Langston Hughes. 1957. Bloomington. Indiana University Press, Poetry Series.
There may have been printings also in 1962 and 1972.
==========

best,
John Tranter

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

259. Hilton Manfred Obenzinger
Re: Manifest Destiny
Tue 20 Jul 1999

There was a movement to revive Hebrew. I am not sure about Washington, but others, such as Ezra Stiles at Yale, did consider Hebrew absolutely essential as the divine language (Hence the Hebrew in the Yale coat of arms). The Book of Revelations figured into all millennialist calculations -- and even most deists were millennialists. The typological identification of America as the New Israel goes back to the original English settlers and the notion traveled through all sorts of religious and secular paths, along with the doctrine of Jewish restoration (advocated by Tom Paine, for example). None of this is Jewish -- rather, the protestant adaptation of covenant identity to settler-colonial purposes, as was done, in different ways, by Scotts-Irish in Ulster, Afrikaners in South Africa, and (later and in not characteristically rabbinically Jewish ways) by Zionists in Israel. Even, in some ways, by Americoliberians in Liberia. All of this is complex and thorny. I write about it in more depth in my forthcoming book "American Palestine: Melville, Twain, and The Holy Land Mania" coming out in November. Indeed, American is a creation of the rum trade -- but also considerably more than that. The covenantal mentality is still very much with us -- as "American Dream" and in other more explicitly religious ways, with both good as well as a lot of bad results. William Carlos Williams is no exception -- which is why "pure products" are so crazy.

Hilton Obenzinger

On Fri, 16 Jul 1999, Mark Weiss wrote:

> I hesitate to respond to this. Are you saying that everything is the same and no differentiation is possible?
>
> Your interpretation of the American Revolution seems rather simplistic, but let that go. I'd love to see some documentation of Washington's thinking about making Hebrew the national language--it's new to me. And as to his interest in the Book of Revelations--I thought he was a deist.
>
> At 06:56 AM 7/16/99 PDT, you wrote:
> The "field" of racism re: Williams, Pound & Eliot extends beyond the bounds of a specific anti-semitism; ancient cultic law is not based on tolerance. Not to be overly "Hebraic" about it, the fact remains that the murder of former Israeli Prime Minister Rabin had, in some interpretations, rabbinical sanction. Semitic law in general gives sanction for murder, if evidence exists - and suspicion is often thought sufficient evidence - that a person presents a threat to the security of the clan at large. We still operate under a similar system, as a glance at who's who on any Death Row will tell you. Enemies of the State. America wasn't founded to protect the interests of any sense of the common man or to the common good; it was founded to protect the interests of a wealthy group of molasses bootleggers operating out of the Carribbean. Interesting in this light to recall that Washington initially considered making Hebrew the national language, probably having to do with aligning America with the moral authority represented by the rise of "Israel" at the end of the world in the Book of Revelations. Nineteenth century Manifest Destiny is a pure product of nothing but. In fact, the genetic/hereditary science of Eugenics was a 19th century American invention, and the Sterilization Laws passed in 1907 by the State of Indiana "to prevent procreation of confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles and rapists" was the prototype for Nazi-funded scientific missions to find "reason" for persecution of Jews. WCW, Pound, Eliot & Co. - "us all" too - are the inheritors of this tradition. Given this, the accusation that these guys were "anti-semitic" seems trite; the more essential question lies in the extent to which they - or any of us - gave (or in our case, continue to give) sanction to state-infected suppositions toward "liberation." Calling WCW anti-semitic merely sweetens the lie that we in fact DO have the moral authority to "call him down," but what phantom will rise from the process of so doing? Or more specifically, though maybe slightly off the mark, what are the relations between poetic form, natural proportion and human law, for example, that permit the existence of a sort of "screen" or "grate" through which we may have intimations of the smell of death, but no actual access to the causatively related "killing floor"? When the feeling of "threat" is multiplied into an analogical "house of mirrors" (and perhaps of cards), how do we identify it, ie., how do we get into the basement over which the killing floor is laid?

S E

From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Purity
Date: Wed, 14 Jul 1999 11:08:33 -0500

May I indulge in some self-defense, please?

Stephen Vincent wrote:

Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, > homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned those behaviors

>
> Stephen, if I point out, as I did, that there is textual evidence of a strong anti-Semitic strain in Williams, why is this "self-righteousness"? I responded to what I felt was a significant blind spot in Billy Little's typically-provocative post, and did so in a reasonable way, I thought. Then there were four indignant responses, all of which strongly denied the applicability of the term, a couple of these calling my post "ridiculous." So I responded, pointing people to some specific evidence, and now am accused by you of being self-righteous, by implication blind to my own likely racism, and of trying to throw WCW "out with the bathwater."
>
> I _love_ Williams. If he was more of a prick, more humanly sinful than the canon-makers have let on, that does nothing to diminish the greatness of his poetry. And in some ways the darkness makes the greatness all the more fascinating! The record is the record (which, yes, is open to differing interpretations), and I think it's best to talk about it without the innuendo you interject above.
> Kent
>
> ---
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

260. Joan Houlihan

Re: Ezra Pound and the Bollingen Prize for Literature, 1949.

Tue 20 Jul 1999

Fascinating. Thanks for sharing this. And to think I was debating about this 30 years ago, and even that was 20 years after the fact. Turns out I mis-remembered what actually happened in the first place! Hey, he got it after all. :-)

> From: John Tranter <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Ezra Pound and the Bollingen Prize for Literature, 1949.
> Date: Sat, 17 Jul 1999 18:10:23 +1000
>
> I thought the List might want to look through this: an excerpt from William

McGuire, Poetry's Catbird Seat (the consultantship in poetry in the English language at the Library of Congress, 1937-1987), Library of Congress, Washington, 1988, 512 pages, ISBN 0-8444-0586-8. This (very selective) excerpt is 1,500 words long .

==========

In 1948 The Bollingen Foundation's trustees voted an allocation of $10,000 for ten years of literary awards. [. . .] (The Foundation's name had been Mary Mellon's oblique way of honoring C. G. Jung, who had a country retreat near a Swiss village called Bollingen.) [. . .]

On March 4, 1948, a Library of Congress press release announced the Bollingen Prize in Poetry. Carrying a purse of $1,000, the prize would be awarded each February for the best book of verse by an American author published during the preceding calendar year. The jury of selection would be composed of the Fellows in American Letters of the Library of Congress. [. . .]

A final ballot was cast by mail in February (as the 1948 prize would lapse on February 28): ten first places for Pound [for The Pisan Cantos], two for [W.C.] Williams, one abstention (Paul Green's)-and the vote of Theodore Spencer, who had died a few weeks before, was taken to stand as a first place for Pound, as it was he who had placed the Pisan Cantos in nomination back in November. [. . .]

The story was broken on Saturday night, the nineteenth, by Charles Collingwood in his radio news broadcast. The Sunday New York Times headline was characteristic of the press reaction: "Pound, in Mental Clinic, Wins Prize for Poetry Penned in Treason Cell." As Evans (Luther H.Evans, the Librarian of Congress) later observed, "The award possessed that bizarre quality that makes news. Along with excited reports, indignant editorials appeared in the press." An editorial in the New York Herald Tribune, however, stated: "This emphasis on an objective criterion of beauty and excellence, akin to belief in an objective truth, is fundamental to a free and rational society. In maintaining it the judges acted in the only way that is open to men who are sensitive to a later verdict of history." In the same paper, Louis Untermeyer called the Pisan Cantos "a ragbag and tail end of Pound at his worst. It shows a very disordered mind, one affected by the seeds of Fascism," and Robert Hillyer thought the award "regrettable" for aesthetic rather than political reasons. "I never saw anything to admire, not one line, in Pound." [. . .] Robert Frost, in a memorandum to his secretary Kay Morrison soon after the award was announced, called it "an unendurable outrage" and Pound "possibly crazy but more likely criminal." [. . .]

Huntington Cairns, in his journal, described one of his visits to St. Elizabeths. "I saw Pound for an hour on Saturday, Feb. 19th. The director of the hospital had informed him that he had won the Bollingen Prize, and he was obviously excited by the news. He had prepared a statement for the Press: 'No comment from the Bug House,' but he had decided not to give it out. [. . .] Walter Winchell quoted Pound's comment on the same occasion: "Democracy is more stupid than ever I said it was." Tate, incensed, asked Pound's wife to check on that. "Total lie" was Pound's answer. He called Winchell a "Jewish bedbug." [. . .]

For a time, controversy over the prize subsided. It was suddenly revived when the Saturday Review of Literature, in its issues of June 11 and 18, published two long articles by Robert Hillyer - "Treason's Strange Fruit" and "Poetry's New Priesthood." Hillyer, earlier a professor at Harvard (his students Howard Nemerov and Robert Fitzgerald remembered him as a gifted teacher), won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1934, and in 1939 was president of the Poetry Society of America. [. . .] Hillyer was regarded by many of his literary peers as an isolated figure who had carried on a long critical campaign against Eliot and Auden, whom he regarded as his poetic rivals. During the late spring, Evans and Adams had had letters from Hillyer and from Harrison Smith, the editor of the Review, putting questions about the award. Hillyer's were marked by a threatening tone, with insulting references to conspiracy and negligence. The F.B.1. had been alerted, he said; and an article would be published. [. . .]

In his two articles, Hillyer declared that the Cantos are "the vehicle of contempt for America, [of] Fascism, anti-Semitism, and . . . ruthless mockery of our Christian war dead." He implied that the award was part of a conspiracy against American ways of life and literature, and that the conspirators included T. S. Eliot, Paul Mellon, Jung, the Bollingen Foundation, Pantheon Books, most of the Fellows in American Letters, admirers of Eliot and Pound, the New Criticism, and various literary quarterlies. Their common aim, he argued, was to seize power in the literary world and undertake "the mystical and cultural preparation for a new authoritarianism. . . . In a spiritual morass where language, ethics, literature, and personal courage melt into something obscure and formless, a guided impulse has stirred the amorphous haze into something approaching form, something shaped out of stagnant art by groping Fascism." [. . .]

On June 24, Congressman Jacob K. Javits, of the 21 st District, New York, wrote Evans: "After having read the editorial 'Treason's Strange Fruit' . . . I am particularly concerned about the awarding of the Bollingen-Library of Congress Award of $1,000 to Ezra Pound. I would very much appreciate your advising me how the Fellows who make this award were chosen, who they are and the basis of their selection." [. . .] On July 19, another congressman, James T. Patterson, of Connecticut, addressed the House regarding the award ("Should we encourage the activities in literature of moral lepers?") and inserted into the Congressional Record the Hillyer articles, Evans's letter, and the Saturday Review's reply. On the twenty-first, Javits called for an investigation ("Must we not be equally diligent to investigate the infiltration of Fascist ideas especially in so august an institution as the Library of Congress?"), and the matter came before the Congressional Joint Committee on the Library of Congress, whose chairman was Senator Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island. What transpired was not an investigation but a resolution, on August 19, to the effect that the Library should abstain from giving prizes or making awards. ("I think it is a bad policy for the government to give prizes and awards, especially in matters of taste," the Senator told the press.) Evans immediately announced compliance. The awards that the Library discontinued, besides the Bollingen Prize, were the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Medal for "eminent services to chamber music" and three prizes endowed by Lessing Rosenwald in connection with an annual national exhibition of prints.

In that same feverish summer of 1949, William Carlos Williams was also the object of a small cloud of protest, raised by his review of the Pisan Cantos in the spring issue of Imagi, a very small poetry quarterly published in Baltimore. During July, Evans received a few letters, all alike in content, protesting Williams's appointment as Consultant in Poetry - evidently the result of confusion with his appointment as a Fellow earlier in the year. Some of the letters came from the editors of other small verse magazines (in Arkansas, California, etc.), saying for example, "That [Williams] should defend such a work places him in the same category with Pound, that of utter contempt and treachery to all the ideals for which America stands. . . ." [. . .]

After the prize was barred (and $9,000 returned to the donor) the Bollingen Foundation received a number of requests from universities to carry it on. In early 1950, the Yale University Library was granted the funds to continue making the awards. The winner of the 1949 Prize, selected by a committee whose members - Adams, Aiken, Shapiro, Chapin, Warren - had all been Fellows in American Letters]at the Library of Congress], was Wallace Stevens. [. . .]

In 1963 the amount of the award was increased to $5,000, and thereafter it was given every other year. After 1968, when the Bollingen Foundation ended its programs (except for the Bollingen Series, which it gave to Princeton University Press to carry through its publication), the Andrew W Mellon Foundation took over, and in 1973 made an outright endowment of $100,000 to enable the Yale Library to continue awarding the prize in perpetuity. By now [1988] more than thirty poets, including many of the Consultants, have received the Bollingen Prize. They keep coming on.

Cowley to Tate, October 21, 1949: "I went to a literary tea for Nehru. Present were the editors of the Saturday Review... Harrison Smith saw me and advanced beaming. 'I was going to write and congratulate you,' he said, 'on the article about Hillyer. I think you had the right dope. Of course, we just printed the Hillyer articles and the editorial to start a controversy. It was a great success. We thought it would give us three > exciting issues but it went on for six.'

>
> ==========
> from
> John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
> tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted]
> Editor, Jacket magazine: http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html
> Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at
> http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

261. KENT JOHNSON

Complexity and anti-Semitism

Tue 20 Jul 1999

Michael:

I'm not sure where you get the notion that Marx ever had such a reductive, binary view of the Self's possibilities. Your quote from Dewey (who was very much his own person, but no enemy, really, of materialism) is actually a nice encapsulation of Marx's general outlook on the human condition, an outlook elaborately laid down early on in _The German Ideology_ --and foreshadowed for the first time in a substantial way (how's this for ironic complexity?) in his "On the Jewish Question," an anti-Semitic essay on the "problem" of Judaism: For Marx, famously, "Consciousness does not determine life, but life determines consciousness." From Marx's standpoint, there are no metaphysical essences or unities involved with the human subject... Correct me, please, if I'm misreading your intent.

In any case, there is no desire on anyone's part, so far as I can see, to avoid thinking as "complexly" as you on this Williams issue (look at all the complex and fascinating posts on this thread!). It may be old-fashioned and simplistic, but some of us do honestly feel that there is sometimes certain evidence that resists deconstruction. And the evidence in this case shows that Williams was afflicted with the virus of anti-Semitism (a term you've claimed "says nothing") and coughing rather loudly. Honestly, Michael, it seems to me that you have launched into a "complex" theorization of a problem without first coming to full terms with the problem's existence. And to appeal to the "multifarious and multimotivated" nature of the individual subject (the full, complex, and contradictory flowering of which, by the way, was Marx's vision of the free human being under communism) doesn't really shed that much light on our topic: Pat Robertson is multifarious and multimotivated too, and Dewey would obviously not desire the good name of his pragmatism deployed to obfuscate a particularly pernicious manifestation of that man's multifariousness! Nor would he want it deployed, I'd bet, to water down a particularly noxious manifestation in a master poet like Williams.

Kent

Michael Magee said:

> Lukacs, it seems to me, comes out >of the humanist aspect of Marx and Marxism: the self is ethical and >whole: if not, than it is damaged and unethical (evil). In the >world of continental philosophy of the 30's Heidegger and Lukacs may >have seemed like the operative poles (though the Franfurt folks & I >think particularly Benjamin offer an alternative) - but as regards >Williams, there's John Dewey, there's Kenneth Burke, offering very >important alternatives to a Lukacsian perspective on the self which >stays well away from this issue of the Incognito. Dewey:
">individuality itself is originally a potentiality and is realized >only in interaction with surrounding conditions." This statement >didn't deter Dewey from critiquing the unity of the self - it was >in fact the predicate by which he understood the self as a >multifarious, multimotivated construction; and through which he >recognized that deciphering the motives behind individual actions >(including speech acts) required the same sort of time and >heightened attention and open-mindedness that an anthropologist (a >good one) brings to the activities of whole communities. So, just >to say, that when I ask for complex thinking on this >WCW/anti-semitism it is from this latter, pragmatic perspective, >though not without knowledge of Lukacsian exasperation.

> -m.

↑ Index

262. Tony Green
Re: cattle
Tue 20 Jul 1999

When Peter Balestieri advises that it's a bonus to hear Linda Darnell sing: In gambling halls laying, 10,000 cattle straying. It reminds me to draw attention to the song (recorded by Peggy Lee with Benny Goodman's band) in which she sings: I am as gay as a Disney cow. Anyone remember that one?

Tony Green

↑ Index

263. KENT JOHNSON
Mused and Beatriced
Tue 20 Jul 1999

I only know the exchange between Gary Sullivan and Nada Gordon through the excerpts printed at East Village Poetry Web. But I've seen enough to wholeheartedly second Chris Stroffolino's very fine appreciation. The work is totally new and idiosyncratic in the greatest of ways. In Sullivan's case (I don't have sound, so can't hear the Gordon videos) it's a bit, as I take it, like Dante on Dexedrine.

Or something hard to explain like that. Truly something.

Kent

↑ Index

264. Alan Sondheim
SONNET ENVZ:
Tue 20 Jul 1999

@@

SONNET ENVZ:

EDITOR=(EDITOR) EXINIT=(EXINIT) HISTSIZE=(HISTSIZE) HOME=(HOME) KSH_LICENSE=(KSH_LICENSE) MAIL=(MAIL) MAILCHECK=(MAILCHECK) MANPATH=(MANPATH) PATH=(PATH) SHELL=(SHELL) TERM=(TERM) TMOUT=(TMOUT) USER=(USER) _=(_)

mr editor manpath oh path path pant pant pant mr editor oh pant pant shell and trout pant pant pant pant pant trout flies by the shell, male check and man path pant path path oh male is a user his path oh pant pant checked what we got here is a user well well well well well well well well what we got here ?
what we got here is a user well well well well well does the user have a license well well well well well does he ?
mr editor manpant oh pant pant pant pant he pant pant pant he don't have a license well well well well well

---

↑ Index

265. George Bowering
Re: Okay Corrall
Tue 20 Jul 1999

Dang! I saw "My Darling Clementine" two or three times when I was a sprat, but havent seen it lately. I think I will go rent it. Did it have titles that were signposts with the names etc burned into the wood?

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

266. Ramez Qureshi
Re: PS on Williams
Tue 20 Jul 1999

In a message dated 7/19/99 11:25:12 PM, [redacted] writes:

<< They "embraced this doctrine of the eternal incognito which implies that a man's external deeds are no guide to his motives. In this case [Heidegger's], the deeds obscured behind the mysterious incognito were, needless to say, these intellectuals' participation in Nazism...But if this impenetrable incognito were the true 'condition humaine,' might not - concealed within their incognito - Heidegger or Schmitt have been secret opponents of Hitler all the time, only supporting him in the world of appearances?" >>

Dear Michael:
I'm not responding on WCW's anti-anything, but am just curious about where you are quoting Lukacs from.
???,
Ramez Qureshi

↑ Index

267. Tisa Bryant
WCW and Black Women
Tue 20 Jul 1999

Hello all,

Way back at the beginning of the thread on William Carlos Williams, before the crochet party, someone stated that Williams was well known for his deep love and respect for Black women. Would someone kindly pull out (of) the current loops and elaborate on that?

Thanks!

Tisa
Bryant

↑ Index

268. Michael Magee
Re: Complexity and anti-Semitism
Tue 20 Jul 1999

Kent, your critique of my post below is fair enough - particular with regard to my giving Marx short change; quick notes on vulgar Marxism, though I would still say that Marx, as a teleological thinker, can't possibly accomodate the variety of subject positions that, say, a William James can, for better or worse. Certainly Lukacs has real anxiety regarding any sort of fragmented or multifaceted Self - because it complicates the whole issue of intent (and I wouldn't want to read Lukacs' quote out of its very specific post-WWII context). Anyway, I suppose at this point this is neither here nor there: we're going to disagree a bit about Williams, is the upshot. What I would prefer to look for in Williams are the many, many instances in which his symbolic activity unravels the whole logic of anti-semitism: doing so allows me to 1) bring that anti-semitism to light; 2) suggest methods by which it might be critiqued; and 3) stay in keeping with my own thinking on the issue of Selfhood. That's not so bad a way to approach things, is it?

-m.

According to KENT JOHNSON: > > Michael:
> > I'm not sure where you get the notion that Marx ever had such a > reductive, binary view of the Self's possibilities. Your quote from > Dewey (who was very much his own person, but no enemy, really, of > materialism) is actually a nice encapsulation of Marx's general > outlook on the human condition, an outlook elaborately laid down > early on in _The German Ideology_ --and foreshadowed for the first > time in a substantial way (how's this for ironic complexity?) in his
> "On the Jewish Question," an anti-Semitic essay on the "problem" of > Judaism: For Marx, famously, "Consciousness does not determine life, > but life determines consciousness." From Marx's standpoint, there > are no metaphysical essences or unities involved with the human > subject... Correct me, please, if I'm misreading your intent.
>
> In any case, there is no desire on anyone's part, so far as I can > see, to avoid thinking as "complexly" as you on this Williams > issue (look at all the complex and fascinating posts on this > thread!). It may be old-fashioned and simplistic, but some of us do > honestly feel that there is sometimes certain evidence that resists > deconstruction. And the evidence in this case shows that Williams was > afflicted with the virus of anti-Semitism (a term you've claimed > "says nothing") and coughing rather loudly. Honestly, Michael, it > seems to me that you have launched into a "complex" theorization of a > problem without first coming to full terms with the problem's > existence. And to appeal to the "multifarious and multimotivated" > nature of the individual subject (the full, complex, and > contradictory flowering of which, by the way, was Marx's vision of > the free human being under communism) doesn't really shed that much > light on our topic: Pat Robertson is multifarious and > multimotivated too, and Dewey would obviously not desire the good > name of his pragmatism deployed to obfuscate a particularly > pernicious manifestation of that man's multifariousness! Nor would he > want it deployed, I'd bet, to water down a particularly noxious > manifestation in a master poet like Williams.

>
> Kent
>
> Michael Magee said:
>
> > Lukacs, it seems to me, comes out > >of the humanist aspect of Marx and Marxism: the self is ethical and > >whole: if not, than it is damaged and unethical (evil). In the > >world of continental philosophy of the 30's Heidegger and Lukacs may > >have seemed like the operative poles (though the Franfurt folks & I > >think particularly Benjamin offer an alternative) - but as regards > >Williams, there's John Dewey, there's Kenneth Burke, offering very > >important alternatives to a Lukacsian perspective on the self which > >stays well away from this issue of the Incognito. Dewey:
> ">individuality itself is originally a potentiality and is realized > >only in interaction with surrounding conditions." This statement > >didn't deter Dewey from critiquing the unity of the self - it was > >in fact the predicate by which he understood the self as a > >multifarious, multimotivated construction; and through which he > >recognized that deciphering the motives behind individual actions > >(including speech acts) required the same sort of time and > >heightened attention and open-mindedness that an anthropologist (a > >good one) brings to the activities of whole communities. So, just > >to say, that when I ask for complex thinking on this

> >WCW/anti-semitism it is from this latter, pragmatic perspective, > >though not without knowledge of Lukacsian exasperation.
>
> >-m.
>

↑ Index

269. Michael Magee
Re: PS on Williams
Tue 20 Jul 1999

The Lukacs is from the 1956 piece, "The Ideology of Modernism," which among other things, contains an interesting reading of Kafka. -m.

According to Ramez Qureshi:
>
> In a message dated 7/19/99 11:25:12 PM, [redacted] writes:
>
> <<
> They "embraced this doctrine of the eternal incognito which implies that a > man's external deeds are no guide to his motives. In this case > [Heidegger's], the deeds obscured behind the mysterious incognito were,
> needless to say, these intellectuals' participation in Nazism...But if > this impenetrable incognito were the true 'condition humaine,' might not - > concealed within their incognito - Heidegger or Schmitt have been secret > opponents of Hitler all the time, only supporting him in the world of > appearances?" >>
>
> Dear Michael:
> I'm not responding on WCW's anti-anything, but am just curious about where you > are quoting Lukacs from.
> ???,
> Ramez Qureshi
>

↑ Index

270. Michael Magee
Re: Pound/Bollingen
Tue 20 Jul 1999

According to Michael W Bibby:
>

> But what I'd like to ask the list members--and I've already asked H-AMSTDY > and AFAM-L about this, with no luck--is if anyone knows of any response to > the Pound debate among African American writers of the period. I'm > familiar with the Pound/Hughes connection (and I've studied the letters > from Ez to Hughes at Beinecke)--but does anyone know what other writers > were saying? Did Wright, Ellison, Dodson, Hayden, Brooks, etc. comment on > this? I couldn't find anything on it in major black periodicals of the > day (Negro Digest, Crisis, Phylon). But am I overlooking something?

Michael, I'm guessing that Ellison would have said, sure, give it to him - though I've never come across a specific staement on his part, I know he dug at least the early Cantos and ABC of Reading. There's a fascinating exchange in his 1977 interview w/ Ishmael Reed, Quincy Troupe & Steve Canon (which incidentally, contains some discussion of anti-semitism, with Ellison deftly reminding the younger guys of "those contributions to civil rights and cultural improvement through which Jews play an important and liberating role") where Pound comes up in a discussion of Melvin Tolson. I don't have time to quote it in full but it basically involves Ellison describing meeting Tolson when he was in High School, his subsequent friendship with him, and their discussions about Pound and Eliot. It's in CONVERSATIONS WITH RALPH ELLISON (Jackson: UP of Miss., 1995), p. 370.

-m.

↑ Index

271. Eugene Ostashevsky
ABIE & EUGENE IN SAN JOSE
Tue 20 Jul 1999

FRIDAY, 23 JULY
ABIE HADJITARKHANI & EUGENE OSTASHEVSKY ARE FEATURED READERS AT BAKATALK,
a weekly open mic IN SAN JOSE

BALKATALK is held at Channel One - 763 the Alameda (near Stockton) - 408. 280. 1001 - http://www.ch001.com

all shows begin at 8pm. all shows begin with an open mic and end with the featured reader(s).

from sf: take 280 south - exit at 87 (guadalupe expressway) north(?) [stick to the left] - exit at santa clara - turn left onto santa clara/the alameda - channel one is 763 the alameda on your right past the san jose arena.

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/

NINE MUSES
NINE HEAVENLY SPHERES
NINE ORDERS OF ANGELS
NINE NAMES OF GOD

AND AUGUSTINE
AND A PEAR TREE

↑ Index

272. Lowther,John
Junkyard Poetics
Tue 20 Jul 1999

---

last night at the weekly APG meeting Mark Prejsnar said something very close to this (my apologies if i've inadvertently misquoted);

"poetry is the use of language that always extends outside the margins of whatever can be explained by theory....you see after years of doing poetry and poetics i've discovered that i'm much better at poetry than poetics and so this is a definition that sort of justifies that... and i really sort of believe that too... you know i was listening in my walkperson to some poems i'd recorded of Ray di Palma's and Coolidge and some other folks and what they were doing seems to bubble up past... to exceed the boundaries of any one explanation---and that's what makes it good poetry... that's why you want to read it again and again."

that thinking about it today i'm going in multiple directions on the one hand

i completely agree with what mark says here which i might rephrase as ~great poetry cannot be compassed in an explanation~

but in my other hand
there is a dispute as for me this quote of mark's makes assumptions about the nature of theory that i don't really share (while i do recognize that for most folks the word denotes what almost amounts to a genre-unto-itself, a game even, in which the theorist deploys terminology upon a text in an effort to show both how perceptive they are and how the text "does not know itself" but is instead a site wherein forces that sport within the superstructure conspire and clash, controlling and dictating what is and is not inscribed therein - for the most part yawningly)

instead (as i've tried to say here in the past) i see most everything we do as the consequences of theory whether of the unconsidered or considered variety

so around comes my third hand where i have the following idea that rather than us being able state either proposition > that poetry exceeds theory, or > that theory exceeds poetry to the exclusion of the other that they have to both be true and so digging back in this regress (three hands makes it go quicker) we move back from the poem to the theory(s) that it slips out of the grasp of but which also allowed for the toeholds on which it ascended and this strata of theory must be seen to have evolved out of consideration of other things (poems, for the purposes of this riff) which in turn exceeded their theoretic wombs and on and on and

(. . .)
at some point it seems that the two converge - that the making, the poesis, is the making of both poems and theories

further i wonder if this isn't still the case

if poetry isn't always embodied theory (or poetics)

if it isn't we who've ignored that to the extent that we've let the word ~theory~ become synonymous with a very delimited and extraneous mode of totalizing discourse

alas, sad glad

Theroy Brown

↑ Index

273. Julie Johnson
Re: Mused and Beatriced
Tue 20 Jul 1999

There are more excerpts from the exchange between Gary & Nada in the first issue of Duration online

http://members.xoom.com/Duration/durationmag.html

-----Original Message-----
From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
<[redacted]>
Date: Tuesday, July 20, 1999 9:50 AM
Subject: Mused and Beatriced

I only know the exchange between Gary Sullivan and Nada Gordon through the excerpts printed at East Village Poetry Web. But I've seen enough to wholeheartedly second Chris Stroffolino's very fine appreciation. The work is totally new and idiosyncratic in the greatest of ways. In Sullivan's case (I don't have sound, so can't hear the Gordon videos) it's a bit, as I take it, like Dante on Dexedrine.

Or something hard to explain like that. Truly something.

Kent

↑ Index

274. Chicago Review
New Chicago Review
Tue 20 Jul 1999

The Latest Issue of CHICAGO REVIEW (45:2) will be in stores soon.

Contents include
A Special Section on ROBERT DUNCAN
--Excerpts from Lisa Jarnot's Biography of Duncan
--Duncan's Introductions to Readings at San Francisco State
--Never-Before Published Photographs POETRY by
--John Matthias
--Ed Dorn
--Jeff Clark
--Arthur Sze
--Elizabeth Willis
--Robert Adamson
--Claire Malroux
--Allen Grossman
As well as essays and reviews on Anne Carson, Recent British Poetry, Michael Anania, Tom Raworth, and Elizabeth Arnold.

SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION RATE: 15 dollars for one year.
TO ORDER: Send us an e-mail indicating that you want to subscribe; we will send you a bill with the current issue.

^^^^^^^^^^^^^^^

Chicago Review
The University of Chicago
5801 South Kenwood Avenue
Chicago IL 60637
ph/fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

275. Steven Shoemaker
WCW's map of pleasure & pain
Tue 20 Jul 1999

For anyone who's interested, here's an excerpt from my dissertation on the Objectivists (University of Virginia, 1997) which may speak to some of the questions that have been raised in relation to Williams lately. The point I would want to make, again, is that even, or rather especially, when we are looking at a phenomenon as disturbing and oppressive and destructive as the twentieth century's horrifying legacy of anti-Semitism, it's important to make distinctions. And when we're looking back at a particular historical moment, it's important to recognize the distinctions that were made at the time, the one's that constitute that moment's historical complexity. Thus, when I used the term "complexity" in relation to Williams, I had in mind not some "multifariousness" of the self that would absolve one (i.e. Williams) from being held accountable for one's actions and beliefs, but rather the complexity constituted by Williams's specific historical and personal situation. A situation that includes, as others have pointed out, William's own ethnic background, his particular life experience (as, for example, doctor to the immigrant poor), and what we might call Williams's own "map of culture. It's my view that Williams is concerned with this sort of mapping, and I think the key text is probably In the American Grain, though there's much to be gleaned from the poetry too. The excerpt below starts with a reference to Williams's "Elsie" poem, then briefly discusses IAG and WCW's cultural vision, then moves on to Williams's angry attack on Pound, written in the early forties. As I try to show, it seems to me that two fundamentally different views of culture (i.e. Pound's and Williams's) are coming into conflict here. The full citation for Williams's important but little-known essay on Pound is "Ezra Pound: Lord Ga-Ga!" Decision (1941): 16-23.

The poem's central figure, Elsie, "reared by the state" and "sent out at fifteen" to work for "some doctor's family" (presumably Williams's), is able to lay ironical claim to the title "pure product of America" precisely because of the "dash of Indian blood" that contributes to her mixed pedigree. In Williams's theory of American culture, which is in direct conflict with Pound's cultural ideal, miscegenation is the American version of purity. The "ungainly" and tormented Elsie "express[es] with broken / brain the truth about us" (107). In keeping with this view, James Clifford reads this poem and its central figure, Elsie, as emblematic of the "ethnographic modernity" characterizing twentieth-century culture. As Clifford observes, Williams is writing from a stance "off center among scattered traditions," as he is compelled to occupy a "truly global space of cultural connections and dissolutions" (4). But Williams also identifies the resistance to Elsie's "truth" as central to American culture. By the time An "Objectivists" Anthology was published, Williams had already elaborated this point at some length in the poetic prose of In the American Grain (1925), which, like the poems before us now, conducts an examination of American culture, often based on a writing through of the documents of American history. In the American Grain develops a view of American culture that values efforts toward "contact," while criticizing the culture's pervasive fear of the immediacy of "touch." This fear of touch, in Williams's analysis, is closely related to fear of the ethnic "other": "Do not serve another for you might have to TOUCH him and he might be a JEW or a NIGGER" (177). Further, it is especially tied to the fear of miscegenation:

Do you realize the fascination of the white woman who had twin nigger babies has for us? They accused the woman of having had intercourse with the apartment's colored elevator boy. Her husband abandoned her at once, of course,--charming man. But you know Mendel's law; they discovered there had been a darky in his family six generations before! Be careful whom you marry! Be careful for you can NEVER know. (177)

In Williams's reading, Mendel's law of genetics is something like a law of American culture. It will do no good to deny our hybrid nature as Americans because, in time, even our most "recessive" traits will out, our deepest cultural secrets be revealed. History, then, must acknowledge the importance of cross-cultural contacts: "History must stay open, it is all humanity" (189). The problem with conventional history, according to Williams, is that it "follows governments and never men," "portray[ing] us in generic patterns, like effigies or patterns on sarcophagi" (188). In contrast to Pound's "great man" theory of history, Williams's emphasis on the individual is as likely to figure forth an Elsie as a John Adams. Like Reznikoff's, Williams's revisionist histories would be written from the ground up. In An "Objectivists" Anthology, these "grounded" histories serve, through the mechanisms of ideogrammic juxtaposition, as critiques of Pound's approach to history and culture. Indeed, Williams's criticism of history would have as an offshoot a related critique of Poundian aesthetics, and politics, that is directly relevant to our concerns here. This critique took shape over a period of decades, but didn't receive full expression until 1941, when Williams was outraged to find that he had been mentioned by Pound during one of his radio broadcasts from fascist Italy. Williams's response took the form of an essay entitled "Ezra Pound: Lord Ga-Ga!" in which Williams argued that during his exile in Italy Pound's foolish tendencies had undergone "an apotheosis at the hands of a bigger fool than he," i.e. Mussolini (16). Pound was now "a case for the psychiatrists," but his insanity was "the result of deficiencies, long apparent to his friends, that have finally overthrown him" (16). Williams's diagnosis delves far back into Pound's character and behavior, drawing on theories Williams had been formulating for some time. He begins by applying his own "touch" thesis from In the American Grain. "I have often observed that in certain sensory areas," Williams writes, "Ezra Pound completely lacks perceptivity" (17). In Williams's reading, Pound is a kind of child prodigy, a "spoiled brat" like "all those bright boys and girls who enter college at the age of twelve and . . . go mad soon after reaching puberty." Outside their field of specialty, Williams claims, such geniuses tend to "go astray," and to "fall back on authority" (17). Pound is indeed a "great poet," "one of the most gifted the New World has produced," but "his great force came from the narrow restrictions of his mind--giving it impact, but, alas, at what a cost" (17). For Williams, "All Pound's perceptions are literary and if taken as such have their value"; but again, there is a corresponding, and overwhelming, deficiency: "What he lacked was a knowledge of man, plain and simple" (20). In his desire for a system of "rule by the few" (20), Pound,

> . . . has never had any love for or understanding of the people themselves, the great leaven of the world without whose tonal tides to support them all men become tyrants and beasts in the end. Ezra had no inkling of such matters, the starved and the defeated, nothing but complete contempt for them. He merely wanted to replace the lying, thieving rule by his own 'enlightened' one . . . (21)

Williams is writing, in 1941, out of a direct concern with the danger of fascism, the danger that "all men [might] become tyrants and beasts in the end." The specific object of his critique at this point is Pound, the man, but before long this analysis brings Williams to a remarkable meditation on the opening of Canto XXX, which has already concerned us here. The Canto is introduced as Williams moves from discussing Pound's generalized contempt for "the people" to examining his enmity for specific ethnic groups, particularly the Jews. At this moment, Williams introduces Pound's "Compleynt," just as Zukofsky had presented it for consideration nine years before in the pages of An "Objectivists" Anthology. "Pound," Williams observes, "has written some of the loveliest verse of our century of which not any has more haunting beauty than the opening lines of Canto XXX" (22). Here Williams quotes the opening of the "Compleynt," drawing particular attention to the lines "Nothing is now clean slayne / But rotteth away." Williams observes: "It is a fascinating theme and a magnificent poem representing, I think, Pound's main philosophic tenet" (22). This tenet, in Williams's summary, runs: "Keep what is 'good,' keep what is lovely. Let all that is ugly be clean slain". Since much of the "world today" is "sloppy and mushy in its very essence," it must be "clean slain, slain--done away with, killed, slaughtered as were the Spanish rebels." This slaughter is an act that would, for Pound, be "about of the same nature as the drainage of an obscure swamp in Africa or the Amazon" (22). Again, the allusion is to Mussolini's swamp-draining exploits, as well as to fascist Italy's role in the bombing of Spanish rebels during the Spanish Civil War. Williams has no difficulty making a direct link between Pound's "Compleynt" against Pity and real-world acts of political violence. He attends to the formal beauties of the poem-as-object, but reads it also in relation to "the dialectical necessities of its day" ("The New Poetical Economy" 269).1 The conclusion to which Williams is brought by this dialectical reading is that Pound's plaint expresses nothing less than the desire to "kill all democracy" (22). As the essay continues, it becomes clear that Pound's "Compleynt" is an important crux for Williams, that he has read the poem many times, and meditated on it over a period of years. He sees the poem as a kind of key to the dilemma of "how to read" Pound which has continued to perplex so many literary critics. Williams wonders whether the poem's "secret" is perhaps "a pleasure and a pain equally balanced which we cannot resolve" (23). "[T]he beauty of the poem is death," Williams concludes, and what is at stake is "the body of humanity . . . in all its multiplicity and obscurity . . ." (23). For Williams, the resolution of Pound's dilemma requires "perceptions of which [Pound] is largely incapable, humilities which he cannot know" (23). Williams's critique of Pound, and his poem, involves a fundamentally political reading that circles back to Williams's criticism of conventional history and the inter-ethnic fear haunting American culture. As Brian Bremen has argued, Williams's approach to history develops an aesthetic insisting on "the continuation and development of struggles for mutual recognition" (198). Or as Williams put it in In the American Grain, the crucial insight--with the "body of humanity" hanging in the balance--is that "We are, too, the others" (41).

↑ Index

276. Stephen Ellis
Re: Manifest Destiny
Tue 20 Jul 1999

Mark, I first heard of the Washington/Hebrew/American national language thing from an Israeli; we were both standing in the shadows of the largest free-standing statue of Elvis Presley in the world, just west of the suburbs of Jerusalem. Subsequently I heard the same bit several times more, both in Israel and across the river, in Jordan; quoting it seemed most to be an attempt on the part of various opinion-holders to ground the legitimacy of Israel as a sanctioned state in the previous preference of a person of stature (what DID Elvis stand on Israel anyway?). Now I see viz Hilton's recent post that the Washington version may be some sort of rough metonym for the more detailed report Hilton DOES supply, luckily for me, since I was rather stuck on your comment re: Washington's being a Deist, as if that made some difference in the both larger yet still local (& locateable) "millennarian &/or escahtological imperialist" scenario. & I do recognize that the American "Revolution" wasn't just slugging it out over a pot of molasses and a glass of Jamaican rum.

& no, I'm not "saying that everything is the same and no differentiation is possible." I'm saying that SAYING THAT "everything is the same and no differentiation is possible" is very much the matter of state & media sanctioned "plurality" in which nothing is "the same" because it's all plural (sounds like some kind of semantic problem to me), ie., "the same". Look at what's called the Global Economy - what IS it? Or more essentially, who's it FOR? It seems an essential question, especially in light of the contest this List also takes part in, ie., what the new riddles are, who will fix them, what the fix IS, how one may get in and/or out of them.

Ugly politics are still what poets have to operate in, if not "out of". If good art permits of ugly politics, how good is it? If poetry is thought to be some kind of all-encompassing cross-weaving of the subjects and objects of THIS world, yet disavows it for the referentially pointed and possibly parallel THAT one, how does one keep the "stretch" of it "clean"? Via some sort of critical yet perpetually generous "spirit"? & who's to the good for it? Ie., where's the community? Is it limited to the ardent hearers of this, and LIKE, "lists"?

Anyway, thanks for your substantial additions/corrections, Hilton, if you're there; I look forward to your book.
- S E

> From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Manifest Destiny
> Date: Fri, 16 Jul 1999 10:50:16 -0700
>
> I hesitate to respond to this. Are you saying that everything is the same and no differentiation is possible?
>
> Your interpretation of the American Revolution seems rather simplistic, but let that go. I'd love to see some documentation of Washington's thinking about making Hebrew the national language--it's new to me. And as to his interest in the Book of Revelations--I thought he was a deist.
>
> At 06:56 AM 7/16/99 PDT, you wrote:
> The "field" of racism re: Williams, Pound & Eliot extends beyond the bounds
> of a specific anti-semitism; ancient cultic law is not based on tolerance.
> Not to be overly "Hebraic" about it, the fact remains that the murder of former Israeli Prime Minister Rabin had, in some interpretations, rabbinical > sanction. Semitic law in general gives sanction for murder, if evidence exists - and suspicion is often thought sufficient evidence - that a person > presents a threat to the security of the clan at large. We still operate under a similar system, as a glance at who's who on any Death Row will tell > you. Enemies of the State. America wasn't founded to protect the interests > of any sense of the common man or to the common good; it was founded to *protect the interests of a wealthy group of molasses bootleggers operating out of the Carribbean. Interesting in this light to recall that Washington initially considered making Hebrew the national language, probably having to do with aligning America with the moral authority represented by the rise of "Israel" at the end of the world in the Book of Revelations. Nineteenth century Manifest Destiny is a pure product of nothing but. In fact, the genetic/hereditary science of Eugenics was a 19th century American invention, and the Sterilization Laws passed in 1907 by the State of Indiana

"to prevent procreation of confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles and rapists" was the prototype for Nazi-funded scientific missions to find
"reason" for persecution of Jews. WCW, Pound, Eliot & Co. - "us all" too - are the inheritors of this tradition. Given this, the accusation that these guys were "anti-semitic" seems trite; the more essential question lies in the extent to which they - or any of us - gave (or in our case, continue to give) sanction to state-infected suppositions toward "liberation." Calling WCW anti-semitic merely sweetens the lie that we in fact DO have the moral authority to "call him down," but what phantom will rise from the process of so doing? Or more specifically, though maybe slightly off the mark, what are the relations between poetic form, natural proportion and human law, for example, that permit the existence of a sort of "screen" or "grate" through which we may have intimations of the smell of death, but no actual access to the causatively related "killing floor"? When the feeling of "threat" is multiplied into an analogical "house of mirrors" (and perhaps of cards), how do we identify it, ie., how do we get into the basement over which the killing floor is laid?
S E*

*From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group*

<[redacted]>
To: [redacted]
Subject: Purity
Date: Wed, 14 Jul 1999 11:08:33 -0500

May I indulge in some self-defense, please?

Stephen Vincent wrote:

Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing WCW to an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy dichotomy. I am not sure if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out with the bath water, but I always get uncomfortable when anyone (myself included) goes to the Holy ground with an implicit claim of purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal acknowledgment and desire to exorcise some part of my person that has inherited or learned those behaviors

Stephen, if I point out, as I did, that there is textual evidence of a strong anti-Semitic strain in Williams, why is this "self-righteousness"? I responded to what I felt was a significant blind spot in Billy Little's typically-provocative post, and did so in a reasonable way, I thought. Then there were four indignant responses, all of which strongly denied the applicability of the term, a couple of these calling my post "ridiculous." So I responded, pointing people to some specific evidence, and now am accused by you of being self-righteous, by implication blind to my own likely racism, and of trying to throw WCW "out with the bathwater."

I _love_ Williams. If he was more of a prick, more humanly sinful than the canon-makers have let on, that does nothing to diminish the greatness of his poetry. And in some ways the darkness makes the greatness all the more fascinating! The record is the record (which, yes, is open to differing interpretations), and I think it's best to talk about it without the innuendo you interject above.
Kent

Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

277. KENT JOHNSON
Poets on Verge of Breakdown
Tue 20 Jul 1999

The deadline for submissions is July 31, but the statement struck me as extremely interesting, even entertaining, so thought I would forward. Susan Howe mentioned here, John Tranter and Jacket, the "illegibility" of "American excess," etc. Kent

---

A N G E L A K I

journal of the theoretical humanities

Special Issue 5.1
(for publication march/april 2000)

POETS ON THE VERGE OF A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN
~~~
~~~

meaning, which has gained general currency: the outright rejection of modernism as being idealist, elitist, reactionary, inaccessible, and irrelevant. If postmodernism means the breakdown of distinctions between high and low forms of culture, late modernism's formal difficulty puts it squarely in the high culture camp. Post-modernist poetry, on the other hand, turns away from avant-garde experimentation. Instead, it reestablishes the lyric voice, either through ironic parables of the self or as the expression of multicultural identities. It endorses the local, the particular, even the provincial, as the representation of vital if marginalized communities, and it does so without the modernists' desire to sublate the regional into a unified humanist locus. Value is placed on the lucidity and directness with which the poet communicates, allowing readers to identify with representations of their own community or to empathize with others. Poetry is a means - one among many - by which local identities protect themselves from the homogenizing power of the culture industry.

In this light, poetry which suspends identification looks as if it has never managed to break free from the Coleridgean belief in a clerisy of readers only able to grapple with the dialectics of the text because highly attuned to the history and theory of poetic forms. In a world where marginalized voices are fighting for recognition, late modernism stands accused of evading its democratic responsibilities. Far from inspiring readers to engage with questions of identity and difference, these barely legible texts could be said to encourage resignation and indifference in anyone except those who are well educated and already disposed towards the 'difficult matter' of modern art. In contrast, postmodern poetry claims humanist inclusivity without the rhetoric of aesthetic unity. It aspires to what Simon Armitage and Robert Crawford call in their recent Penguin anthology 'the democratic voice'.

This new poetic democracy is not without its theoretical and institutional problems. Postmodernism argues for the irreducibility of experience, its essential difference from community to community. Yet in this context it requires that all experience be rendered in an identifiable form. In Britain, for example, poetic legitimacy is associated with a deeply ingrained suspicion of 'foreign' influences, so that even where regionalism is valued it tends to be invoked as a populist defence against European experimentalism and American excess. And it is not always clear whether a poet's work is given as regional or radically marginal because it engages with the linguistic and political pressures of non-centralized identity, or simply because the poet has a tenuous association with a marginal site. In _Devolving English Literature_, Robert Crawford wants to affirm the virtues of 'provincial' writing against what he sees as a dominant and exclusive metropolitan culture; yet his preferred exponents of regional identity tend to be poets who, although having Welsh, Irish, or Scottish family origins, are granted cultural legitimacy by conforming to the only poetic 'voice' acceptable to metropolitan publishing houses such as Faber: an ironic lyric style relatively untroubled by the translatability of language or personal experience and endorsing aptness of metaphor as the fundamental mark of poetic value. Crawford's provincial/metropolitan opposition is itself bogus in that it elides the problem of complicity: the notion of the provincial is an invention of the metropolitan bourgeoisie, and its use calls into question Crawford's ability to analyze the politics of poetry beyond a centralist point of view. The position here is both metropolitan and imperialist in that 'provincials' become the subjects of sentimental regard as long as they communicate in the accepted terms; otherwise, they are ignored or denounced. The marginal is invited into the mainstream or preserved as marginal value by the mainstream only when it gives up its attachment to difference.

For late modernists, on the other hand, difference cannot be translated, only approximated. The poem is a construction which makes the reader aware that every translation is an appropriation. It could be argued, however, that the implied reader of this poetry is just as 'metropolitan' as Crawford's democrat. But, while the two positions are not as clear cut as our description suggests, they do represent fundamentally opposed views of poetry's function in modern society. For what we are calling late modernism, poetry can only become a radical force by resisting consumer culture and its appeal to the 'short attention span' of its audience; for postmodernism, poetry can only prevent itself from being marginalized or completely ignored by competing with more marketable forms of cultural production. While the former continues to be reviled by the mainstream publishing houses and literary organs as too rarefied to be of popular interest, the latter is itself beginning to fall foul of market pressures. The current hoo-haa over Oxford University Press's axing of its poetry list shows that the mainstream is somewhat more marginal than its proponents have imagined.

Even so, poetry is flourishing as never before through public readings, small publishers and magazines, and via the Internet. Although these networks might be said merely to affirm poetry's marginalized status in an era of global markets, they nevertheless lay claim to the cultural value of independent means of production. (A modern irony being that small-press material has frequently out- sold 'major' publications.) And, if these networks originate from local or marginal groupings, they are anything but narrow in their reach. They have inaugurated a new internationalism in poetry which goes some way to confound the old coteries and critical demarcations. The use of new technology has revitalized traditional media by lowering production costs and has created alternative forms of distribution. Australia, for example, has become a new poetic centre. Through magazines such as John Kinsella's _Salt_, James Taylor's _Boxkite_, and (on the Internet) John Tranter's _Jacket_, it has increased international recognition for Australian writing while creating strong links with poets in France, Britain and the United States.

The aim of this issue of _Angelaki_ is to collect a wide range of critical essays addressing the current state of international poetry. We invite contributions addressing the general questions raised above, and we hope to encourage debate about the history and ideology of modern poetic forms and institutions. Far from being taken as read (which is unlikely considering the partisan nature of the subject), the remarks made here should be seen as the springboard for argument and clearer definition. The issue will also include new poetry.

* * *

Submission Information
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Angelaki is a peer-reviewed journal.

FINAL MATERIAL (full essays) for peer review by JULY 31, 1999.

Essays must be sent in duplicate (double-spaced, paginated) to:

Address:
Dr Anthony Mellors
59 Orchard Drive
Durham DH1 1LA
UNITED KINGDOM

* * *

About ANGELAKI
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Angelaki: journal of the theoretical humanities is a print journal published three times a year by Carfax Publishing Limited. The journal publishes two theme issues and one general issue per volume. ISSN: 0969-725X.

Angelaki was selected Best New Journal in the 1996
Council of Editors of Learned Journals Awards.

For further details of the journal and contents listings please visit:
http://www.carfax.co.uk/ang-ad.htm

"Since its inception in 1993, the journal _Angelaki_ has established itself as a leading forum of theoretical reflection, providing a practical refutation of all those who would celebrate 'the end of theory.' Whether it is focused on thematic issues of the most varied nature, introducing thinkers to English-language readers, or treating a variety of problems in open issues, _Angelaki_ challenges the complacency of the self-evident. Required reading for the next millennium." Samuel Weber

Gerard Greenway
[redacted]

managing editor
A N G E L A K I
journal of the theoretical humanities

Taylor & Francis, Carfax
http://www.carfax.co.uk/ang-ad.htm

44 Abbey Road
Oxford OX2 0AE
United Kingdom
Fax: [redacted]
Email:
<[redacted]>
URL:
<http://www.carfax.co.uk/ang-ad.htm>

↑ Index

278. pete spence

Re: Hannah Weiner's COUNTRY GIRL and sundry items

Tue 20 Jul 1999

>
>the last notification of Hanna's WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE had about 30
>people >interested e-mailing me for information on how to get!! seems in the end >only 2 could overcome the information and actually order!! there are still >60 copies for sale!!

>
>also i have ready Hannah's COUNTRY GIRL the second of four early journals >and written in 1971
>
>you can now order this book from LOOK!! POETRY!!
>
>by sending $5 U.S. cash to:
>
>pete spence
>40 bramwell st
>ocean grove >3226 >victoria australia
>
>airmail your letter otherwise it will take about three months!!
>i will airmail you back the book.
>
>if you want both WRITTEN IN/THE ZERO ONE and COUNTRY GIRL then $10 U.S cash >will see it done >HISTORY of:
COUNTRY GIRL was to come out through POST NEO PUBLICATIONS in 89/90 but was shelved along with a lot of other things (burn out???) i'd a lot of trouble with the person typesetting the book who kept adding their own comments into the ms wyche caused some embarrasments re Hannah doing checks on the setting in the end Norma Pearse who i have lived with these past 16 years set it and Hannah ok the setting. i'm releasing it now under the imprint LOOK!!
POETRY!! wyche normally published books of visual poetry, the book is now available for order (see above)and will be made to order rather than printed in a long print run. pete spence

a couple of other POST NEO titles that i have some copies of are: KARL KEMPTON's 4plus3 ,,$5 US cash.

BERNI JANNSEN's EXTATIC $5 US cash. Berni is the Lyn Hejinian of Australia.

also in January of this year i published Cornelis Vleeskens' translation of Jan G Elburg's THROUGH THE EYE OF THE SCISSORS
the back cover reads:
jan g elburg's scissors

produced this text sometime
in the 60's 7 it was published in the 2nd ed of PRAATJES KIJKEN
by Meulenhoff in 1974
Cornelis Vleeskens did
this translation in 1990
7 Raimondo Cortese set it
set it for pete spence at the time
we've played with it over the years
and it is now finally printed in 1999.

published by LOOK!! POETRY!!

TYPOGRAPHIC POETRY.

THANKS pete spence

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

279. Jeffrey Jullich
The Germ no.3 -Reply
Tue 20 Jul 1999

Macgregor Card:

I look forward to picking up a copy of Germ 3 at the St. Mark's Bookstore (NYC), probably this weekend. I phoned and they have it there already.

You also write:

>>> We're always looking for submissions . . . Please send work to both addresses

I can see what you've written here, literally, but since it's an unusual specification, let me double-check: do you in fact mean (a) send matching copies of work to both Providence and Santa Cruz, or (b) do you mean send one submission to ~either~ address?

Thanks. Just want to get it right.

Jeffrey Jullich

↑ Index

280. Julie Johnson
addresses needed...
Tue 20 Jul 1999

I am currently in the process of transcribing essays from the anthology _Code of Signals_ which I will eventually post as part of an out of print book archive at Duration Press's website, & need to get in touch with many of the authors whose work appeared in that anthology. If anyone has e-mail addresses for any of the following people, I would greatly appreciate it if you could pass them along to me...

Bernadette Mayer, Charles Stein, Michael Davidson, James Clifford, William Corbett, David Shapiro, Lori Chamberlin, Gerrit Lansing, Dennis Barone, Christopher Gaynor, Diane Ward, Madeline Burnside, Steve McCaffery, Geoffrey Young, & John Ashbery.

Thanks much in advance,

Jerrold

↑ Index

281. Stephen Cope
Germ Addresses
Wed 21 Jul 1999

I was asked to let all know (per the confusion) that GERM submissions should be sent to _both_ (simultaneously) of the following addresses:

Macgregor Card
POBox 2543
Providence, RI 02906

Andrew Maxwell
POBox 8501
Santa Cruz, Ca. 95061

It's a bi-coastal operation...

Best,

Stephen Cope

↑ Index

282. Robert Archambeau
Manifest Dentistry
Wed 21 Jul 1999

Mark Weiss wrote:

> I'd love to see some documentation of Washington's thinking about making Hebrew the national language--it's new to me.

It was a matter of those wooden teeth. Surely Washington would have felt the glottal fricatives they entailed would blend in better with Hebrew than English.

Robert Archambeau

↑ Index

283. Brian Stefans
(no subject)
Wed 21 Jul 1999

Hi Mark,

Not to drag this on, but it seems to me this story is unrelated to what the context of my ideas were earlier. I'm don't see how the naming of a dog, and the eventual calling by its name and what light this sheds on the moral make-up of a family, has anything to do with sitting down and writing a short story, a modernist one no less, which involves a plethora of aesthetic and strategic issues that are simply overshadowed by this connection -- why reduce? I think just dumping a discussion of Williams into this anecdote is too easy, besides being poorly thought through (more important than the names of philosophers would be a clear goal and consistency in thought, especially in such a thorny realm -- and what makes you think I would have been better treated than that family, which you hold before me as an example of my ignorance?). I am certainly not an apologist for Williams -- he's much better messy and flawed, but you seem to imply this by your last sentence, with has a certain acidic tenor which I deemed "unfair," and still do because you used sentiment to guide an opinion regardless of the content of my post and those it was responding to. Consequently, I don't know what your jibe on "feigning a persona" has to do with what I wrote since I didn't write about personae, nor about "feigning" one (which is kind of impossible, people usually "adopt" a persona, or "feign" a personality -- "feigning a persona" would put you two steps behind the surface). I was talking about words and sentences, the "many origins" to misquote Olson, and not "irony" (there's a bit of negative capability thrown in there also, I guess).

Anyway, I'll happily retire from this one. Just wanted to clear that up -- it's implicit in the previous post, I think.

Yours,
Brian

>I'm not sure I understand what you're saying. Williams is more than any >modern poet the source of my own development as a poet, so I guess I think >he's useful. And the boy in the story was my best friend. I don't think >either of them were being ironic in expressing their less savory attitudes.

At 01:34 PM 7/19/99 -0400, you wrote:
>I don't think this is a fair reading of what I wrote. Perhaps, if you'd >like a new angle on this, you can imagine writing a story with your friend
>from the Poconos as the protagonist, and when quoting him in the story not >use quotation marks. You, as most of us, would be very frightened to do >this because you would wonder if a reader would think these were words >reflecting your own opinions or personality. But nonetheless this is what >a lot of modernists did, I guess because it was supposed to be an >unmediated representation of objective reality, which in the scientific >spirit of the day was a primary goal. Of course, if you don't think your >friend from the Poconos is worth literary immortality you wouldn't write >the story at all, but then again you wrote this post, so your friend, >racist or not, was somehow useful.
>
>
>Date: Thu, 15 Jul 1999 18:16:46 -0700
>From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>Subject: Re: PS on Williams
>
>When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the >Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than >it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black >German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person, >but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But >maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.
>

↑ Index

284. Maria Damon
query
Wed 21 Jul 1999

---

can anyone help me find the Coach House Press book order website? i need to order a martyrology for my fall course.

↑ Index

285. Brian Stefans
Correction
Wed 21 Jul 1999

Mark -- I meant "by that family" rather than "than that family" in my other post today. -- Brian

↑ Index

286. Mark Prejsnar
Presenting, 3-Hand john & His junkyard Dawgs...
Wed 21 Jul 1999

If every poem embodies "a theory" (or, a poetics).... I have no prob with that, i guess.

I meant (and am still most concerned about) poetics in a fairly formal sense. Which might be defined by example: Pound's and Zuke's theoretical statements, a work like Marginalization of Poetry or CB's A Poetics; or the old L=A=N=G essays by various hands collected in the Language Book.

Just because i ask myself if i should try to clarify my practice (and my thoughts about others' work) by doing such formal writings, or not...

JL, you are sort of shifting the terms so that you and i are talking about somewhat (tho not entriely) different things... (or so it seems to me..)

This might be made clearer by rephrasing what i said: poetry reaches beyond the analytic grasp & explanatory ability of any given piece of writing about poetics.....

About your point, i only have one small objection: a poetics, or theoretical approach, may lie (in fact, i agree: does lie) behind any given poem.... But because the poet often works from inside the materials and movement of her work, she is often not very conscious of or concerned with what that underlying poetix is. Not in any way that she could (or cares to) articulate. That's not so much an objection as a qualification. It can be very good and helpful for her, sometimes, if she is aware of her underlying poetix. But fab work gets done by people who don't think much about thier underlying poetix at all. It can work either way, depending on the poet and the project...

Mordecai (3-finger) Brown

↑ Index

287. Mark Weiss
Re: Manifest Destiny
Wed 21 Jul 1999

If I understand Hilton correctly (Hilton, are you there?), the _secular_ use of the Book of Revelations was more as an available source for rhetoric supportive of a very different kind of millenarianism than the descent of chaos/reign of the saints/end of time kind. I'm willing to be corrected if I didn't get it. As to Washington's preference for Hebrew as a national language, I've yet to be persuaded and would need chapter and verse.

At 03:15 PM 7/20/99 PDT, you wrote:
>Mark,
>I first heard of the Washington/Hebrew/American national language thing from >an Israeli; we were both standing in the shadows of the largest >free-standing statue of Elvis Presley in the world, just west of the suburbs >of Jerusalem. Subsequently I heard the same bit several times more, both in >Israel and across the river, in Jordan; quoting it seemed most to be an >attempt on the part of various opinion-holders to ground the legitimacy of >Israel as a sanctioned state in the previous preference of a person of >stature (what DID Elvis stand on Israel anyway?). Now I see viz Hilton's >recent post
>
>that the Washington version may be some sort of rough metonym for the more >detailed report Hilton DOES supply, luckily for me, since I was rather stuck >on your comment re: Washington's being a Deist, as if that made some >difference in the both larger yet still local (& locateable) "millennarian >&/or escahtological imperialist" scenario.
>& I do recognize that the American "Revolution" wasn't just slugging it out >over a pot of molasses and a glass of Jamaican rum.
>
>& no, I'm not "saying that everything is the same and no differentiation is >possible." I'm saying that SAYING THAT "everything is the same and no >differentiation is possible" is very much the matter of state & media >sanctioned "plurality" in which nothing is "the same" because it's all >plural (sounds like some kind of semantic problem to me), ie., "the same".
>Look at what's called the Global Economy - what IS it? Or more essentially, >who's it FOR?
>It seems an essential question, especially in light of the contest this List >also takes part in, ie., what the new riddles are, who will fix them, what >the fix IS, how one may get in and/or out of them.
>

>Ugly politics are still what poets have to operate in, if not "out of". If >good art permits of ugly politics, how good is it? If poetry is thought to >be some kind of all-encompassing cross-weaving of the subjects and objects >of THIS world, yet disavows it for the referentially pointed and possibly >parallel THAT one, how does one keep the "stretch" of it "clean"? Via some >sort of critical yet perpetually generous "spirit"? & who's to the good for >it? Ie., where's the community? Is it limited to the ardent hearers of >this, and LIKE, "lists"?
>
>Anyway, thanks for your substantial additions/corrections, Hilton, if you're >there; I look forward to your book.
>- S E
>
>
>
>>From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>>To: [redacted]
>>Subject: Re: Manifest Destiny
>>Date: Fri, 16 Jul 1999 10:50:16 -0700
>>
>>I hesitate to respond to this. Are you saying that everything is the same >>and no differentiation is possible?
>>
>>Your interpretation of the American Revolution seems rather simplistic, but >>let that go. I'd love to see some documentation of Washington's thinking >>about making Hebrew the national language--it's new to me. And as to his >>interest in the Book of Revelations--I thought he was a deist.
>>
>>At 06:56 AM 7/16/99 PDT, you wrote:
>> >The "field" of racism re: Williams, Pound & Eliot extends beyond the >>bounds >> >of a specific anti-semitism; ancient cultic law is not based on >>tolerance.
>> >Not to be overly "Hebraic" about it, the fact remains that the murder of >> >former Israeli Prime Minister Rabin had, in some interpretations, >>rabbinical
>> >sanction. Semitic law in general gives sanction for murder, if evidence >> >exists - and suspicion is often thought sufficient evidence - that a >>person
>> >presents a threat to the security of the clan at large. We still operate >> >under a similar system, as a glance at who's who on any Death Row will >>tell >> >you. Enemies of the State. America wasn't founded to protect the >>interests >> >of any sense of the common man or to the common good; it was founded

to >> >protect the interests of a wealthy group of molasses bootleggers >>operating >> >out of the Carribbean. Interesting in this light to recall that >>Washington
>> >initially considered making Hebrew the national language, probably having
>>to >> >do with aligning America with the moral authority represented by the rise
>>of
>> >"Israel" at the end of the world in the Book of Revelations. Nineteenth >> >century Manifest Destiny is a pure product of nothing but. In fact, the >> >genetic/hereditary science of Eugenics was a 19th century American >> >invention, and the Sterilization Laws passed in 1907 by the State of >>Indiana
>> >"to prevent procreation of confirmed criminals, idiots, imbeciles and >> >rapists" was the prototype for Nazi-funded scientific missions to find
>> >"reason" for persecution of Jews. WCW, Pound, Eliot & Co. - "us all" too
>>-
>> >are the inheritors of this tradition. Given this, the accusation that >>these >> >guys were "anti-semitic" seems trite; the more essential question lies in >> >the extent to which they - or any of us - gave (or in our case, continue
>>to >> >give) sanction to state-infected suppositions toward "liberation." >>Calling
>> >WCW anti-semitic merely sweetens the lie that we in fact DO have the >>moral >> >authority to "call him down," but what phantom will rise from the process
>>of >> >so doing? Or more specifically, though maybe slightly off the mark, what >> >are the relations between poetic form, natural proportion and human law, >>for >> >example, that permit the existence of a sort of "screen" or "grate" >>through >> >which we may have intimations of the smell of death, but no actual access
>>to
>> >the causatively related "killing floor"? When the feeling of "threat" is >> >multiplied into an analogical "house of mirrors" (and perhaps of cards), >>how >> >do we identify it, ie., how do we get into the basement over which the >> >killing floor is laid?

>> >S E
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >
>> >>From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
>> >>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group
>><[redacted]>
>> >>To: [redacted]
>> >>Subject: Purity
>> >>Date: Wed, 14 Jul 1999 11:08:33 -0500
>> >>
>> >>May I indulge in some self-defense, please?
>> >>
>> >>Stephen Vincent wrote:
>> >>
>> >> >Kent Johnson's righteousness - or at least that tone - about nailing
>> >> >WCW to an anti-Semitic cross seems to me to indulge an easy >> >> >dichotomy. I am not sure if Johnson's trying to throw the Doctor out >> >> >with the bath water, but I always get uncomfortable when anyone >> >> >(myself included) goes to the Holy ground with an implicit claim of >> >> >purity - what ever might be the issue. I would go as far
>> >> >to say that my opposition to anti-Semitic, anti-Palestinian, racist, >> >> >homophobic or any other abusive behavior involves a personal >> >> >acknowledgment and desire to exorcise some part of my person that >> >> >has inherited or learned those behaviors
>> >>
>> >>Stephen, if I point out, as I did, that there is textual evidence of >> >>a strong anti-Semitic strain in Williams, why is this
>> >>"self-righteousness"? I responded to what I felt was a significant >> >>blind spot in Billy Little's typically-provocative post, and did so >> >>in a reasonable way, I thought. Then there were four indignant >> >>responses, all of which strongly denied the applicability of the >> >>term, a couple of these calling my post "ridiculous." So I responded, >> >>pointing people to some specific evidence, and now am accused by you
>> >>of being self-righteous, by implication blind to my own likely >> >>racism, and of trying to throw WCW "out with the bathwater."

>> >>
>> >>I _love_ Williams. If he was more of a prick, more humanly sinful >> >>than the canon-makers have let on, that does nothing to diminish the >> >>greatness of his poetry. And in some ways the darkness makes >> >>the greatness all the more fascinating! The record is the record >> >>(which, yes, is open to differing interpretations), and I think it's >> >>best to talk about it without the innuendo you interject above.
>> >>Kent
>> >
>> >
>> >_____
>> >Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>> >
>> >
>
>
>_____
>Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
>

↑ Index

288. Mark Weiss
(no subject)
Wed 21 Jul 1999

Look, this discussion is about the kind of antisemitism that has an attitude towards "those people," one's friends always implicitly or explicitly exempted as "not that kind of." It allows for certain choices in ones fiction that I think would not otherwise occur to one. This I think unexamined attitude is of course very different from and less destructive than Poundian antisemitism, but it's the kind that American Jews in the present in more or less civilized places are most likely to encounter. Which is why it continues to be disturbing to some of us.

Maybe my thinking was shoddy, or maybe we're talking about two different things.
I retire from the field.

At 09:30 AM 7/21/99 -0400, you wrote:
>Hi Mark,
>
>Not to drag this on, but it seems to me this story is unrelated to what the >context of my ideas were earlier. I'm don't see how the naming of a dog, >and the eventual calling by its name and what light this sheds on the moral >make-up of a family, has anything to do with sitting down and writing a >short story, a modernist one no less, which involves a plethora of >aesthetic and strategic issues that are simply overshadowed by this >connection -- why reduce? I think just dumping a discussion of Williams >into this anecdote is too easy, besides being poorly thought through (more >important than the names of philosophers would be a clear goal and >consistency in thought, especially in such a thorny realm -- and what makes >you think I would have been better treated than that family, which you hold >before me as an example of my ignorance?). I am certainly not an apologist >for Williams -- he's much better messy and flawed, but you seem to imply >this by your last sentence, with has a certain acidic tenor which I deemed >"unfair," and still do because you used sentiment to guide an opinion >regardless of the content of my post and those it was responding to.

>Consequently, I don't know what your jibe on "feigning a persona" has to do >with what I wrote since I didn't write about personae, nor about "feigning"
>one (which is kind of impossible, people usually "adopt" a persona, or
>"feign" a personality -- "feigning a persona" would put you two steps >behind the surface). I was talking about words and sentences, the "many >origins" to misquote Olson, and not "irony" (there's a bit of negative >capability thrown in there also, I guess).
>
>Anyway, I'll happily retire from this one. Just wanted to clear that up -- >it's implicit in the previous post, I think.
>
>Yours,
>Brian
>
>>I'm not sure I understand what you're saying. Williams is more than any >>modern poet the source of my own development as a poet, so I guess I think >>he's useful. And the boy in the story was my best friend. I don't think >>either of them were being ironic in expressing their less savory >attitudes.
>
>At 01:34 PM 7/19/99 -0400, you wrote:
>>I don't think this is a fair reading of what I wrote. Perhaps, if you'd >>like a new angle on this, you can imagine writing a story with your friend
>>from the Poconos as the protagonist, and when quoting him in the story not >>use quotation marks. You, as most of us, would be very frightened to do >>this because you would wonder if a reader would think these were words >>reflecting your own opinions or personality. But nonetheless this is what >>a lot of modernists did, I guess because it was supposed to be an

>>unmediated representation of objective reality, which in the scientific >>spirit of the day was a primary goal. Of course, if you don't think your >>friend from the Poconos is worth literary immortality you wouldn't write >>the story at all, but then again you wrote this post, so your friend, >>racist or not, was somehow useful.
>>
>>
>>Date: Thu, 15 Jul 1999 18:16:46 -0700
>>From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
>>Subject: Re: PS on Williams
>>
>>When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the >>Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than >>it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black >>German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person, >>but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But >>maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.
>>
>
>

↑ Index

289. Carolyn Guertin
Re: query
Wed 21 Jul 1999

> can anyone help me find the Coach House Press book order website? i need to order a martyrology for my fall course.

http://www.chbooks.com

_____ Carolyn Guertin, Department of English, University of Alberta 3-5 Humanities Centre, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2E5 Canada E-Mail: [redacted]; Tel/FAX: [redacted] Website: <http://www.ualberta.ca/~cguertin/Guertin.htm>

↑ Index

290. Michael Magee
Tisa Bryant's question re WCW
Wed 21 Jul 1999

Tisa (& all), There's a guy named Sergio Rizzo who's written some interesting stuff about Williams and black women in 2 different but related essays:

1) "The Other Girls of Paterson - Old and New" in WCW Review 20.1 (Spring '94)

2) "Can 'Beautiful Thing' Speak?: Race and Gender in Paterson" in Deese/Axelrod, eds., Critical Essays on William Carlos Williams (NY:G.K. Hall, 1995).

Black women had a pretty profound influence on Williams from childhood to old age, - it is, not surprisingly given all we've been saying lately about him, a vexed but interesting connection. -m.

↑ Index

291. Mark Wallace
SITUATION #19 is now available
Wed 21 Jul 1999

SITUATION #19, a chapbook issue, features Allison Cobb's A LITTLE BOX BOOK, a serial poem that we feel is quite fabulous and hope you'll want to check out. Here's an excerpt:

> Then the little box is more > gone a sort of scorched > awake through all--the fire > storm the indelible > infant crying to itself
>
> the nation's first non-shift Buick
> the one-legged soldier > a gift of the President
>
> mom closes necks around hangers
> the little b b yawns a crimson > yawn thinks APPLE > TREE KEY and then > SAW--the face
> she turns it turns wrong

The issue is available for $3; a four issue subscription to Situation is $10. Situation is edited by Joanne Molina and Mark Wallace, is published several times a year, and now alternates one magazine issue with one chapbook issue. Manuscripts for chapbook issues are handled by solicitation only. All submissions for magazine issues must be accompanied by an SASE. Make checks payable to Mark Wallace. Send submissions or subscriptions to Situation, 10402 Ewell Ave., Kensington, MD 20895.

↑ Index

292. Dodie Bellamy persona
Wed 21 Jul 1999

At 9:30 AM -0400 7/21/99, Brian Stefans wrote:
>
>Consequently, I don't know what your jibe on "feigning a persona" has to do >with what I wrote since I didn't write about personae, nor about "feigning"
>one (which is kind of impossible, people usually "adopt" a persona, or
>"feign" a personality -- "feigning a persona" would put you two steps >behind the surface).

Brian,

I'm intrigued by this idea of feigning a persona as opposed to adopting one. Adopting one sounds like putting it on proudly, even buying into it. Feigning one reminds me of those endless social occasions when I've known what kind of persona was required but I couldn't buy into it, didn't have the heart to fully embrace it, or was lacking in the social skills to pull it off. In those instances, I'd say that feigning a persona would be much more appropriate a category. An awkward ineffectiveness. Cocktail parties come to mind as a dangerous site. Also much of the humor on TV sitcoms, not that I watch them enough to be an authority.

In writing, too, I think this comes up. Kathy Acker's personas, for instance, their delightfulness is in the sense of feigning rather than adopting. Pathos unbalancing power.

When I hit reply to all in Eudora, the speech function kicked in for some reason and my computer started reading your message outloud to me in this mechanical reverb voice. Creepy, but appropriate somehow.

Dodie

↑ Index

293. Richard Dillon
Re: WCW's map of pleasure & pain
Wed 21 Jul 1999

Shoemaker's essay cracks into the truth about WCW and his depths. Shoemaker is a real scholar and teacher. No ax to grind. Just the plain truth.

↑ Index

294. David Buuck
Attacks on camp KPFA
Wed 21 Jul 1999

--simple boundary

Camp KPFA was torn down by police at 4 am. According to Friends of KPFA, 6 peoeple were arrested, among them KPFA leader Kahlil Jacobs-Fantauzzi.

Kahlil was taken to Santa Rita prison--isolated from all of the other supporters arrested, who were taken to local jails. As of 11:45 am, he had not been read his rights and was uncertain of what they plan to charge him with. When he asked what he was being held for, an officer resonded "for being a jerk." He has been denied his requests for vegetarian food, and has been ignored in his requests for writing materials. According to those he has contacted from the prison, they do not plan to release him until he posts bail. The amount has not yet been determined.

This is a strategic attack on the leadership in this struggle! Kahlil and all those arrested during this struggle need our support!

What you can do:
1) Attend the march/rally TODAY at 5 pm, Ashby BART Station in Berkeley.

2) Attend tonight's Berkeley City Council Meeting at 6:30 pm.

3) Attend the hip hop event at 8 pm at La Pena.
And march back to the station at 12 am.

5) Camp out! Help us re-establish camp at KPFA. Bring cameras to record what you see. 1929 MLK Jr. Way, Berkeley.

6) Call all local media and demand that they report on this. We need critical watchdogs!

You can call any of the following numbers for updates on the action: Friends of KPFA, [redacted]; KPFA Protest Hotline, [redacted], ext. 202; First Amendment Center Hotline, [redacted].

<A HREF="http://">http://www.savepacifica.net/index.htm</A> for info:

<A HREF="http://">http://www.sfbg.com/kpfa/index.html</A> Background:

The Story thus far . . .

Like every organizational crisis, KPFA's began with an incident. The overwhelming response to that incident revealed that, throughout the Pacifica community, thousands of people were deeply troubled by network's lack of democratic process.

On March 31st, 1999, the Pacifica Foundation's Executive Director Lynn Chadwick informed KPFA general manager Nicole Sawaya that her job with the station had been terminated, effective immediately. Chadwick told Sawaya that she was not a "good fit." The Pacifica Foundation, a non-profit organization, manages the affairs of five non-commercial radio stations throughout the United States. KPFA was the first; started in 1949, it is the oldest listener supported FM station in America. Sawaya's ousting came two weeks before KPFA's fiftieth anniversary.

The firing revealed an utter disregard for the first and most obvious rule of community radio: major policy decisions will be made in consultation with the community. Pacifica management talked to no one beyond its own inner circle before taking this drastic step. A strong, independent minded leader, Sawaya was very much liked by KPFA's staff and the larger community. Her ousting provoked a huge wave of protest from KPFA supporters across Northern California.

That night KPFA's news department prepared a report for the listeners about the sad decision. To the astonishment of the staff, Pacifica told the station's news director not to run it. The story was broadcast in defiance of the order.

Even before Sawaya's dismissal, however, Pacifica was clearly moving in an alarming direction.

On February 28th, the Pacifica National Board met in Berkeley and decided to remove Local Advisory Board (LAB) members from its national governance board. Local advisory board are the backbone of community input into Pacifica national policy. They meet once a month and hear the concerns of listeners, volunteers-- whoever has something to say. Formal LAB member presence on the national board helps keep Pacifica accountable to the network's stations. Now that LAB members were gone, Pacifica's national board became a completely self-appointing body.

KPFA's signature voice, Larry Bensky, appeared before the National Board to argue against this decision. Bensky is a 30 year veteran of the Pacifica network, having won the Polk Award for his historic gavel-to-gavel coverage of the Iran-Contra hearings in 1986. Bensky warned the board that Pacifica's National Office was becoming unaccountable and top-heavy with staff. When Pacifica terminated Sawaya as general manager, Bensky became even more worried about a management style that had now become autocratic. He took his concerns to the listeners on his regular Sunday program.

On April 9th, Pacifica responded by firing Bensky as well.

The coup strategy was now obvious to anyone who cared to look: centralize your authority, remove from any position of governance those who seem like they might question you, and fire your critics. These actions came from an organization whose flagship daily public affairs program is called "Democracy Now," and, in its own literature, refers to Pacifica as "democratic communications."

The KPFA community, outraged, took to the streets. For KPFA's listeners and staff, "democracy" is more than a word you put on a mass mailing to get someone to send you a check. Over 800 KPFA supporters demonstrated against Pacifica in front of the KPFA building on March 31st. On May 9th, 2,000 demonstrators gathered at Berkeley's Old City Hall to protest Pacifica's intransigence. It was the biggest listener demonstration in the history of community radio. KPFA's staff began airing regular public statements, demanding the reinstatement of Sawaya and Bensky and calling for the independent mediation of the dispute. The station's listeners responded by making KPFA's May/June subscription marathon the most successful in its history: 6,200 pledges made "under protest" of Pacifica's actions.

An ugly incident took place, and Pacifica used it against KPFA's paid and unpaid staff. Late on the night of March 31st, someone fired gunshots into the Pacifica national office headquarters. No one was hurt. After years of defending the free speech rights of anyone and everyone, Pacifica has sometimes crossed paths with fringe groups. Frightening but thankfully infrequent moments like this have been the price. Most of the time it has been station staff who have braved the dangers and threats.

But this was the first time in the organization's history that Pacifica used the event to hire on-site security guards. They were placed not in front of Pacifica's offices, where the shooting actually happened, but inside KPFA's studios. Lynn Chadwick then appointed herself general manager of KPFA. On Monday, June 22nd, a delegation of about a dozen people came to Chadwick's office to talk to her about her policies. They were led by a member of Berkeley's City Council and a Catholic priest. Chadwick used this event to justify the hiring of armed guards -- grey-suited, professional security gunmen- -to watch KPFA's staff.

Chadwick even denied KPFA staff access to door security codes. An organization founded by pacifists--World War II era conscientious objectors--was now under lockdown at gunpoint.

Even before it had gotten this bad, Pacifica claimed its third victim. Robbie Osman had been a music and commentary programmer at KPFA for over two decades. So effective and influential was Osman's regular Sunday program that the great folksinger Kate Wolf wrote a song for it: "Across the Great Divide." Osman had for years been troubled by the direction Pacifica seemed to be headed. He actively spoke out against Sawaya's and Bensky's firing on his program.

On Friday June 18th Pacifica's national office cancelled his show, dispelling any doubts about the Brave New Pacifica they have in mind: a rigid, top-down organization where policy will be made by a group of people who can be counted on the fingers of one hand--with digits to spare. The following Sunday, KPFA broadcast silence when Osman's regular program would have been aired. Outside, demonstrators protested the firing.

Pacifica has tried to justify these actions by claiming that they want to bring greater diversity to the network. But KPFA's minority staff haven't bought a word of it. "KPFA's African American programmers will not be complicit in any Pacifica-driven purge of KPFA staffers under the guise of 'diversity'," a May 21st letter signed by 13 programmers declared. Scores of voices across the progressive community agree. Mumia Abu-Jamal, Alice Walker, Dolores Huerta, Noam Chomsky and many others have called upon Pacifica to practice what it preaches every day on Pacifica radio: There is no way to democracy; democracy is the way.

KPFA's community is united as never before to save the spirit and reality of commuity broadcasting. The nation's community of community radio knows that the future of democratic broadcasting in America will be decided in Berkeley. Keep your eyes on this website and your ears to KPFA for further news about how you can help us all win.

by Matthew Lasar, author of Pacifica Radio: The Rise of an Alternative Network (Temple Univ Press, 1999)

--simple boundary

↑ Index

295. Michael Neff
ACLU case in Detroit
Wed 21 Jul 1999

Hello to the list.

Below is the information re the stay in Detroit for the internet censorship case. If anyone in the Detroit area wishes to attend the hearing, please give me a call at the hotel mentioned below and I'll provide the information on where, when, etc.

Info on the case can be found at http://webdelsol.com/solhome.htm

Thanks. We'll defeat the puri-tyrannicals, I'm certain.

Mike Neff
Editor
WDS

Mike Neff -- I spoke with Mike Neff from Web Del Sol today and he is happy to testify on Friday. His flight arrives at Detroit Metro on Thursday evening at 5:41 (NW Flight 1225) from Nat'l airport (e-ticket # 7X4RPR). A law student (to be named later) will pick him up at airport and bring him to the Pontchatrain Hotel. The plan is for Andy, Marshall and/or Chris to meet with him on Thursday evening to prepare him for Friday morning.

Let me know if you have any questions. Thanks.

Michael Steinberg, Legal Director
ACLU of Michigan
1249 Washington Blvd., Suite 2910
Detroit, MI 48226

==========
Web Del Sol
http://webdelsol.com
LOCUS OF LITERARY ART ON THE WWW

↑ Index

296. Alan Sondheim
(no subject)
Wed 21 Jul 1999

---

oOo
oOo
oOo
oOo
oOo

I shaved off my bierd (sic) and mustash (sic) today so I can get close to Azur (sic) and tomorow (sic) I will have off my pub hair (sic) and body hair so I can get clos (sic) to her skin which is mine I wil (sic) be so clos to her skin I will not no (sic) the diference (sic). I will cut out my eyes to (sic) so I can be clos (sic) to Azur (sic) all tuching (sic) her wen (sic) she lets me everywher (sic) then maybe something with my eers (sic) I dont (sic) no (sic) I may do something with my nales to (sic). Then I wil (sic) be so clos (sic) to Azur (sic) it wil (sic) be a-mazing (sic) and I wil (sic) be very hapy (sic) to be so clos (sic) to her. I wil (sic) cut out my tong (sic) and fingers.

oOo
oOo
oOo
oOo
oOo

↑ Index

297. Parks
Action Appeal
Thu 22 Jul 1999

3F46.a

Following is a collection of paragraphs of detail on volcanic Pacifica v KPFA (et al.) battle.

*

Is anyone present at or around University of Pennsylvania? A useful thing would be to scratch up action there (perhaps inform the campus paper, or talk with active or left faculty) to get Dr. Mary Francis Berry's (who is a professor there) actions “on behalf of radio listeners” into light.

*

The survival of KPFA WBAI KPFT (the last hasn’t survived, actually, has been essentially killed, now runs NPR feeds and has been reduced from an 8- to 1-language broadcaster of wasp garbage thanks to Dr. Berry’s regime) et al would be a more likely thing right away if it weren’t for the fact that Dr. Berry, Pacifica Foundation Chair, is also Black & the head of the US Civil Rights Commission, and big pawn of the White House and Democrat Establishment, and is, according grapevines of the left, merely one puppet in a classic behind-curtain cabal of Corporation for Public Broadcasting / White House / CIA ? / Corporate Radio (there are at least 4 corporate broadcasting entities who have stated on record they’d be interested in purchasing, to the tune of 70ish million, KPFA’s channel at 94.1, or, barring KPFA’s, WBAI’s.

Dr. Berry has enlisted support of many “powerful” individuals and entities by claiming that her mission is to integrate KPFA, “a bastion of the White,” agit-snow-bullshit cover that has been debunked by all in opposition, most notably the allied staff of color of KPFA, unanimously.

You can read in various media of her (and Lynn Chadwick’s [Pacifica executive director]) disgusting tactics of oppression of KPFA staff and listeners, since roughly March, however I will mention that a nearly ultimate KPFA-death step has been achieved today with Pacifica’s placement, assisted by protective goons, of wiring KPFA’s transmitting so it can broadcast whatever it wishes via KPFK in Los Angeles (whose manager is a dictatorial ass at the feet of Pacifica, and has both threatened KPFK staff with “discipline” should they mention the debate on air or, even, “outside the station”).

Today, yesterday, and so forth, when one tunes in to KPFA one hears gelatinous music or rebroadcasts of talks.

For full information on all facets see, above all:

www.savepacifica.net www.radio4all.org
www.counterpunch.org

As a pre-postscript: Pacifica & Micheal [sic] Palmer [sic] (CEO of CB Richard Ellis of Houston, one of the largest corporate real estate firms in the world &, strangely, the Fascist to thank for anemia at KPFT), as well as the Justice Dept and select liberal jackoffs, know they have the most dutiful and excellent puppet Dr. Berry, and have moved step by step with such force and heinousness as to only mean a decided endgame of purging KPFA’s staff and “reprogramming.” (Berry is on record with this agenda—her aim is to affiliate Pacifica’s five big stations with National Public Radio. We’d then have, as “public radio” in America, a thousand stations simultaneously broadcasting the Sickly White Soundz of those eleven men who all sound the same and provide no information, no dissent, and Terri Gross, who would drool on a pile of excrement if it had a name badge on it and a mic near its face).

(We’ll have, in a few years:

“Fresh Air is supported in part by Monsanto, supporters of social justice & progressive agriculture since 1890”

and

“All Things Considered is brought to you by Eli Lilly, Inc., makers of Prozac, using Nazi research to drug all of America since 1947, and major benefactors of the Ruth Lilly Poetry Prize, whose monies have been accepted and spent by such notable poets as _____”

Please note that very recently the National Board of Pacifica voted amongst themselves, without notice, and behind closed doors, as it were, to also abolish any local power, i.e., input of local staffs, listeners, and advisory boards, and to vest the Pacifica National Board exclusively the right to make any all present or future calls.

I have a suspicion not a great many “left” artists are actually politically active outside the politics of their artmaking, but a handful of letters calls or emails by a group of them or you to the numbers & addresses that follow would yet add to the powerful dissent, which, in a totally controlled and drugged American society, is, en masse, the only popular phenomena that politicians respond to.

* * * as of this note, word is that Amy Goodman, host of Pacifica’s most listened-to program, Democracy Now!, is now! having her shows censored directly each morning, in advance of airing, by Pacifica. (She had been neutral, though last week at last aired a 40-minute segment on “the crisis”; that Democracy Now was pulled from the air at all stations save WBAI, where it is produced, and because KPFA has been taken over by IPSA (former CIA, plainclothes, guncarrying goons installed inside station by Pacifica), those listeners in the San Francisco Bay Area didn’t hear it at all . . . and the man Mary Berry has flown in to “run” KPFA during the lockout is Garland Ganter, a closet White-Supremicist who is, when in Houston, board Member Micheal Palmer’s dog and human pliers at KPFT.)

Here are the Pacifica boardmembers, to whom protest should be addressed:

Chair of Pacifica’s Governing Board

Dr. Mary Frances Berry - at-large member 624 Ninth Street NW #700
Washington DC 20425
phone: [redacted]
FAX: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

Pacifica National Board, Executive Committee

David Acosta, Vice Chair - KPFT
phone: [redacted]
FAX: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

June Makela at-large member
phone: [redacted]
FAX: same
e-mail: [redacted]

Roberta Brooks (resigned)
phone: [redacted] Ext. 18
FAX [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

Ken Ford - WPFW
Phone: [redacted]
FAX: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

Frank Millspaugh - WBAI
phone: [redacted]
FAX: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

Bob Farrell - KPFK
phone: [redacted] X 255
FAX: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

Pacifica National Board Members

William Lucey
Nat. Secretary-Treasurer, AFSCME
Mbr., Exec. Board, NAACP
[redacted]

Michael Palmer - KPFT
(Real Estate Broker, Houston, TX)
FAX: [redacted]
[redacted]

BULLETIN: KPFA NEWSCAST INTERRUPTED...TAPES PUT ON AIR BY PACIFICA IN PLACE OF REGULAR PROGRAMMING

At 6:06 p.m. this evening, the KPFA evening news was interrupted by background sounds of KPFA “Flashpoints” host Dennis Bernstein protesting rough handling on the part of the armed security guards who apparently were enforcing his suspension for material broadcast on the air a few minutes earlier.

As news anchor Mark Mericle was describing the scene, his microphone was abruptly cut off, and there was dead air for two minutes. Then a pre-recorded speech (ironically, by Los Angeles activist Eric Mann about Marxism and socialism) began to be broadcast.

THERE IS AN EMERGENCY DEMOSTRATION GOING ON AT THIS TIME...IF YOU ARE NEARBY...PLEASE COME TO 1929 MARTIN LUTHER KING JR WAY IN BERKELEY AND SUPPORT FREE SPEECH COMMUNITY RADIO...

AND FAX...phone...or e-mail Dr. Mary Frances Berry and the other members of the Pacifica national board to protest their outrageous actions!

I HAVE JUST LEARNED THAT PACIFICA IS PLANNING TO INSTALL A LINE TO THE TRANSMITTER WHICH WILL ENABLE PACIFICA TO BROADCAST KPFK LIVE FROM LOS ANGELES ON TO 94.1.

AN EMERGENCY PROTEST HAS BEEN CALLED. PEOPLE WHO CAN GET THERE ARE URGED TO GO TO BERKELEY, TAKE CLAREMONT AVE. UP BEHIND THE CLAREMONT HOTEL, UP IN THE HILLS TO GRIZZLY PEAK BLVD., AND AFTER A QUARTER OF A MILE, YOU SHOULD SEE THE ROAD LEADING TO THE TRANSMITTER AND PROTESTERS BLOCKING IT.

GET THERE!

-
This message comes via the freepacifica list. To subscribe or unsubscribe, send a single word email to [redacted]

UPDATE: PROTESTS CONTINUE AT KPFA, PACIFICA DENIES EXPULSION OF STAFF IS A LOCKOUT

LEADING CALIFORNIA LEGISLATORS CALL FOR HEARING ABOUT PACIFICA FOUNDATION’S ACTIONS IN LOCKING OUT
STAFF,
CHANGING FORMAT OF KPFA, MISUSE OF FUNDS

BENEFIT CONCERT SCHEDULED FOR BERKELEY COMMUNITY THEATER MONDAY 7/19 FEATURING JOAN BAEZ, DAR WILLIAMS AND OTHERS

(With apologies for missing a day of updates...our computer was down and we are all overextended in fighting this dreadful takeover...)

l. Protests continued tonight (Thursday) outside the now padlocked and plywood-panelled facade of KPFA and Pacifica. Pacifica executive director Lynn Chadwick and her staff have apparently moved out of their offices, possibly to downtown Oakland (a demonstration will be held there as soon as their new address is verified).

More than sixty riot-equipped police were present as the rally began shortly after 5 p.m. By 6 p.m., the crowd had reached at least 500 people (there were over 2,000 the night before, but there was less time to organize tonight's...). Several protestors tried to enter KPFA via a ladder to a second floor balcony, but Berkeley police pulled them roughly inside. Nine were arrested, bringing the total to 77 arrests in protests thus far.

A number of protestors said they would set up camp for the weekend.

A hip-hop community rally in support of KPFA staff is set for 5 p.m. Friday in front of the station.

Pacifica states that the lockout is not a lockout, but paid leave for everyone at KPFA.

Meanwhile pre-recorded tapes continue to be played by scab engineers. After failing to find anyone local to take engineering control, Pacifica imported another KPFT employee, chief engineer Bob Cham, to aid KPFT station manager Garland Ganter and Pacifica Program Service worker Mark Torres from Los Angeles in broadcasting speeches and music.

2. Sixteen California legislators, led by Senate pro tem President John Burton and Assembly Speaker Antonio Villaraigosa today released a letter requesting a hearing by the Joint Legislative audit committee into Pacifica's actions in this crisis.

Noting that Pacifica is "incorporated as a public service tax exempt corporation in California," the letter expresses concern that Pacifica "may violate its charter and tax exempt status" by disenfranchising local advisory boards and using fund for purposes inconsistent with its charter."

In addition the letter cites the "lock-out of station workers" in violation of Pacifica's contract with Communication Workers of America.

"When there are reasons to suspect that Pacifica is acting unethically or illegally, we believe a hearing is warranted," the letter concludes.

3. A benefit concert for locked out and fired KPFA workers will be held Monday, July 19 at the Berkeley Community Theater, featuring Joan Baez and Dar Williams. Ticket information follows tomorrow...BUT PLEASE PLAN TO BE THERE!

4. ARE YOU A UNIVERSITY OR COLLEGE TEACHER?

If so, you might want to send a letter similar to one sent by University of California teacher Gray Brechin to Mary Frances Berry's academic superior at the University of Pennsylvania. (see http://savepacifica.net/0716_brechin.html)

————————————-

http://savepacifica.net

to unsubscribe to this list, reply to this letter with “unsubcribe” in the subject line.

From: “Lyn Gerry” <[redacted]>
To: “Free Pacifica” <[redacted]>, “Free Pacifica” <[redacted]>, “Free Pacifica” <[redacted]>
Date: Tue, 13 Jul 1999 15:47:18 -0700
Subject: Urgent Press release: EMAIL RECEIVED DETAILING POSSIBLE
Reply-to: [redacted]
Priority: normal

———- Forwarded Message Follows ———-
Subject: Michael Palmer email press release READ
Date sent: Tue, 13 Jul 99 12:25:04 -0800
From: Andrea Buffa <[redacted]>

NEWS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:
July 13, 1999
CONTACT:Belinda Griswold [redacted] x313

CONTROVERSIAL EMAIL RECEIVED DETAILING POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF KPFA AS LAWSUIT IS FILED TO FORCE ACCOUNTABILITY COMMUNITY LEADERS DECRY CRACKDOWN

BERKELEY, CA - At a press conference at 1:30 p.m. today, Media Alliance Executive Director Andrea Buffa will release a controversial email she received yesterday that describes plans by Pacifica Radio to close KPFA and possibly sell another Pacifica station, WBAI in New York. The email appears to have come from Pacifica board of directors member Michael Palmer.

“We are working to confirm the authenticity of this email and call on Michael Palmer and Pacifica Board Chair Dr. Mary Frances Berry to immediately publicly confirm or refute this email,” Buffa said.

Phone calls by Media Alliance and several Pacifica board members to Palmer have not been returned. Local Internet service provider IGC was contacted about verifying the path by which the email was sent to Media Alliance. IGC’s tech services department has stated that the email looks to have legitimately been sent from Palmer’s account. The full text of the email is available at www.zmag.org or www.counterpunch.org.

The press conference takes place immediately preceding a hearing at Berkeley Municipal Court at which charges will be filed against a group of peaceful protesters who blocked the entry to Pacifica Foundation’s office in Berkeley last month. The demonstrators prevented Pacifica Foundation Executive Director Lynn Chadwick from entering her office on June 22. Chadwick initiated a citizen's arrest when Berkeley police refused to cite the activists. Local community leaders decried the decision, calling it a terrible contradiction.

Meanwhile, a group of local stations' advisory board members from Los Angeles, Berkeley and New York is pressing ahead with a lawsuit intended to reverse Pacifica's recent governance changes that eliminated local say on the national board. Oakland attorney Dan Siegel will file suit within the next few days to restore the last shred of local control at Pacifica: the ability of local station boards to recommend members to the national board. Seigel will also attend the press conference. "Pacifica, when faced with the question of changing its method of choosing its leadership, opted for the least democratic option imaginable. It is time to revisit this issue, and it should be unnecesssary to require a court order to do so," Siegel said.

Yesterday, Pacifica national board chair Dr. Mary Frances Berry arrived in Oakland, told neither staff nor listeners of her visit, and attempted to negotiate with KPFA's union leaders. Shop stewards met with Berry to remind her of her promise to meet with the KPFA steering committee, which both listeners and staff have designated as their representative, and refused to negotiate further.

KPFA paid staff, volunteers, local advisory board members, subscribers, and listeners will continue to press Pacifica to: 1) Rehire respected KPFA station manager Nicole Sawaya, whose termination touched off massive protests in Berkeley and the firing of two veteran programmers because they violated Pacifica's on-air "gag rule"; 2) Participate in mediation and allow for investigation of the dispute between local interests and the national bureaucracy; and 3) Reverse the disciplinary or adverse actions taken against KPFA and Pacifica staff since Sawaya's termination.

* * * scandalous & frightening email from Palmer is as follows (Pacifica spokeswoman Jackass Fabri [total fascist & issuer of fraudulent press releases, varified in print authenticity of email, accidentally [!] forwarded to Andrea Buffa of SF's Media Alliance]):

From: Palmer, Micheal @ Houston Galleria, [redacted] To: 'Mary Francis Berry', [redacted]

Hello Dr. Berry,

I salute your fortitude in scheduling a news conference opportunity in the beloved Bay Area regarding one of the most pressing issues of our time.....

But seriously, I was under the impression there was support in the proper quarters, and a definite majority, for shutting down that unit and reprogramming immediately. Has that changed? Is there consensus among the national staff that anything other than that is acceptable/bearable? I recall Cheryl saying that the national staff wanted to know with certitude that they supported 100% by the Board in whatever direction was taken; what direction is being taken?

As an update for you and Lynn I spoke with the only radio broker I know last week and his research shows $750,000-$1.25m for KPFB. There would be a very “shallow pool” of buyers for a repeater signal such as this and it would be difficult to do a marketing effort quietly due to the shortage of buyers. So there is no profound latent value to that asset. The primary signal would lend itself to a quiet marketing scenario of discreet presentation to logical and qualified buyers. This is the best radio market in history and while public companies may see a dilutive effect from a sale (due to the approximate 12 month repositioning effort needed), they would still be aggressive for such a signal. Private media companies would be the most aggressive in terms of price, which he thinks could be in the $65-75m range depending on various aspects of a deal. It would be possible to acquire other signals in the area, possibly more than one, to re-establish operations, but it could take a few years to complete if we want to maximize proceeds from the initial license transfer, or leave only $10-20m in arbitrage gain when purchase(s) is complete. None of this reflects tax consequences. This broker, just like any other that would undertake such an effort, would need certain agreements in place prior to starting.

Mary I think any such transfer we would ever consider requires significant analysis, not so much regarding a decision to go forward, but how to best undertake the effort and to deploy the resulting capital with the least amount of tax, legal and social disruption. I believe the Finance Committee will undertake a close review of the Audigraphics data provided recently to determine what it is costing us per listener, per subscriber, per market, per hour of programming...in order give the Executive Director and the General Managers benchmarks for improvement. Even with that data my feeling is that a more beneficial disposition would be of the New York signal as there is a smaller subscriber base without the long and emotional history as the Bay Area, far more associated value, a similarly dysfunctional staff though far less effective and an overall better opportunity to redefine Pacifica going forward. It is simply the more strategic asset.

With this in mind I would encourage frank description of the realities of the media enviornment we operate in and of Pacifica’s available resources to participate and have impact in the evolving media world. The Executive Committee, at a minimum, should have access to experts (whether from Wall Street, NPR/CPB, Microsoft or otherwise) to get a strong reality check (me included) about radio and Pacifica’s position in it so that informed decisions can be made. My feeling is that we are experiencing a slow financial death which is having the normal emotional outbursts commensurate with such a disease. We will continually experience similar events, in fact we have been experiencing similar events over the past several years, primarily because we are not self supporting through subscriber contributions and have a self imposed constraint on asset redeployment that leaves us cash starved at a time when our industry is being propelled in new directions, each requiring capital outlays of consequence. We're boxed in at our own will. This board needs to be educated, quickly, and to take action that will be far more controversial that the KPFA situation. How can we get there?

So, now I've exhaled more than I should, but you know where I'm at. Let's do something.

MDP

Pacifica has now been sued in California court, and is accused of constituting its board illegally (insert link to lawsuit text) as well as fiscal irresponsibility. THIS MAY WELL LEAD TO BOARD MEMBERS BEING SUMMONED TO TESTIFY...AND TO BE HELD ACCOUNTABLE FOR MOVING THE ORGANIZATION TOWAD BANKRUPTCY. Do board members understand their personal liability now?

A legislative hearing has been called for in Sacramento into the situation. AGAIN, INDIVIDUAL BOARD MEMBERS MAY BE CALLED TO TESTIFY, AND PROVIDE FINANCIAL RECORDS. Are board members ready for this?

Another lawsuit may be in the works concerning the lockout of workers. DO BOARD MEMBERS UNDERSTAND THEIR LIABILITY HERE? Pacifica is spending tens of thousands of dollars on armed security guards (at least six) 24 hours a day at the station and at the transmitter. In addition, Pacifica is spending huge amounts of money on legal fees, extra employees brought in especially for this takeover, outside consultants and offices. DO BOARD MEMBERS HAVE AN UNDERSTANDING OF THESE EXPENDITURES? WHERE IS THE MONEY COMING FROM? HOW CLOSE IS PACIFICA TO BANKRUPTCY?

Pacifica constantly says it wants arbitration. The staff and community have stated REPEATEDLY for three and a half months that we're willing to arbitrate. But then Pacifica casts the conflict as a "labor management dispute." THIS IS NOT A LABOR MANAGEMENT DISPUTE! IT'S A CRISIS INVOLVING PAID AND UNPAID WORKERS, THE COMMUNITY, AND KPFA'S LOCAL MANAGEMENT AS WELL. A steering committee of 11 representatives from all these constituencies has been waiting for NEARLY THREE WEEKS TO TALK TO PACIFICA. No response.

Dr. Mary Frances Berry refused to meet with that steering committee when here for a few hours last week. She has refused to meet with other groups which have beseeched her for months (including major donors and African-American programmers). She has told board members she will not discuss with them either the lockout or the infamous “sell the stations” memo from Michael Palmer. HOW LONG ARE BOARD MEMBERS GOING TO TOLERATE A BOARD CHAIR THAT IS LEADING THE ORGANIZATION TO INFAMY AND RUIN?

2. Pacifica affiliate stations have communicated their outrage and solidarity with the KPFA staff and community, including stations in Portland, Oregon, Bridgeport, Connecticut, Troy, N.Y.,Tampa, Boulder, Madison, Garberville, California and Philo, California. Many have broadcast live interviews with KPFA representatives. IF YOU LIVE IN AN AREA WHERE THERE IS A COMMUNITY STATION... CALL THEM AND HAVE THEM WRITE TO US!

3. Day long rallies continue today (Sunday) in front of KPFA/Pacifica, with songs, speeches, street theater and more! A camp-out has grown to over sixty people, with tents stretching the entire city block. COME BY AND SAY HELLO if you’re in the region!

And don’t forget to spread the word about our BIG BENEFIT CONCERT MONDAY NIGHT 7/19 AT THE BERKELEY COMMUNITY THEATER AT 7:30 featuring Joan Baez, Dar Williams, Utah Phillips, Dr. Loco and others! No advance tickets (no time!) just be there - ticket sales start at 4 p.m. ($20). WE DON’T HAVE KPFA (DUH) TO PUBLICIZE THIS CONCERT...WE NEED TO GET THE WORD OUT!!!!

Various parties have decried the fact that those leading the actions against Pacifica are “Ex-Hippie Berkeleyites, 50 years old +” . But as a 30 year old -, I think that the children aren’t a part because they’re drugged & comfy, as are most Americans.

A Lawsuit Challenging the Hostile Takeover By Pacifica Board of Directors was Filed: July 16, 1999 in Alameda County Superior Court

---

BULLETIN: POLICE ACT AGAINST NON-VIOLENT KPFA PROTESTORS AGAIN ARREST TOTAL NOW AT 88

The following message was sent early this morning.

You can protest this lack of coverage by calling Bay City News in San Francisco - a wire service that serves most local newspapers and radio and TV outlets - [redacted].

Also, the Pacifica Network News has expressed great reluctance to cover this story. CALL THE PACIFICA NETWORK NEWS TODAY AND DEMAND THAT THEY COVER THE DESTRUCTION OF THEIR OWN NETWORK... EVERY DAY! [redacted] ext. 323 or 316 or 318.

And visit the KPFA site every day if you can...to encourage those of us that aren't arrested for being there!

See you TONIGHT at the Berkeley Community theater!

john vance, Coordinator
A First Amendment Center
Berkeley, Ca
www.angelfire.com/biz2/thefirstamendment [redacted] (HOTLINE for KPFA events and contact numbers)

* Corporate Media

Sleeping with Corporate Pacifica Board?

To their credit, seems the corporate media is sleeping right along with the Pacifica Board of Directors, or so it appeared at about 3:15am this early Monday morning, July the nineteenth. I rode frantically back and forth and up and down University Avenue and MLK in Berkeley trying to observe the police and the protesters in front of KPFA and using a phone about five times trying to get the Bay City News Service to contact some body - anybody - just one media person to tell them that about twenty five Berkeley police officers had arrived at the KPFA studios and were strapping on their riot gear in preparation of clearing the street in front of the radio station by arresting protesters. Of course it was futile as the individual at Bay City News Service kept insisting that no one seemed to be available for a very crucial newsworthy event, not to mention the need of media witness to possible police brutality - which fortunately did not materialize.

It was about five minutes to three am this Monday morning and I was walking with another protester in the streets in front of the Peoples KPFA building on MLK Way in Berkeley and we were chatting about some strategy or policy regarding the present KPFA-Pacifica crisis. All at once, I looked up and down toward University Avenue. There, briskly cruising in without lights or sirens, were about six Berkeley police cars followed by two large, black mariahs (paddy wagons). At that time, there were about twenty or more dome and other style tents set up against the KPFA building on the sidewalk and probably another twenty or so tents scattered in the street. Most people were sleeping. There were probably about a dozen protesters awake and casually walking around talking. The area had been relativly quiet since I had arrived. I got there about 1:30am. There were probably a total of maybe a hundred and twenty-five people at the KPFA protest at this time. Anyway, so I have my bicycle and I move at a fast walk in a northerly direction toward the street and duck around the corner, jump on my bike and I am out of there. Before I left the scene, the people that were awake and acting as security began hollering to wake people up and to let them know that the police were moving in possibly to arrest everyone. I rode my bike as fast I could - and a few blocks away on University Avenue - I spotted a couple of pay phones. I jumped off my bike and called Bay City News about three times trying to get someone from any media on the scene - not only to just get a story - but to act as witnesses to any arrests or police abuse - as I mentioned earlier. Anyway, after about my fourth attempt at trying to get the Bay City News Service and the San Francisco Chronicle to pay attention and have someone show up at the KPFA station on MLK, I finally gave up and went back to cautiously approach the potential arrest site at the KPFA building. The police had gotten most people to clear the street (one entire block had been barricaded in by the police) within the barricaded area and about eleven people decided to be arrested. The eleven people sat down right in the middle of the street and were arrested one by one. The protesters had two video cameras that filmed the entire police action that took place including all of the arrests. The arrests began at about 3:15am and were completed by 3:45am. While the arrests were going on, the hundred and twenty-five or so protesters stood on the sidewalk directly in front of the KPFA studios and chanted support slogans for the arrestees and anti-corporate - anti-Pacifica slogans at the Berkeley corporate police. By 3:50am, thepolice ordered everyone to stay out of the street as a streetsweeper was going to “clean” the entire one block area that the protesters had occupied.

As a closing piece of information: the tracings of KPFA associates show that intercessions by the White House and Justice Dept have been made in Pacifica as early as 1991, and most fervently and recently as 1999 by the latter, particularly in wake of Democracy Now’s programs on Chevron in Nigeria and KPFA’s reporting on impeachment and investigative reporting on Maxxam and Henry Hyde, most notably, last month, on The Ecologist v Monsanto, and on and on.

Nobody needs explaining how influential phone calls to influential politicians are quickly heeded. (Chevron has been ongoingly outraged by Pacifica’s coverage, and went so far [on a local level] as to physically remove KPFA news reporter Wendell Harper from the Chevron board meeting this year):

"So an 'It must be stopped' from Corporate America and conservative star chambers could easily have engendered a move by liberal government and its intelligence battalions to engineer a discreet way to erode, in short time, Pacifica's (and the US's, cf Gary Webb and the two CNN reporters who were nearly permitted to air [before they were fired at the insistence of the DOD] the story on Sarin gas and the US Military's mass assass. of 'chicken soldiers' who'd escaped Vietnam combat and were hiding in Laos) most left news reporters and reports. I think the utilization of Mary Berry and 'race/lack of diversity at KPFA' front is clearly, for a politician like Clinton, the craftiest first means." _____ Do You Yahoo!? Get your free @yahoo.com address at http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

298. Joan Houlihan

Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize

Thu 22 Jul 1999

Well, not exactly. I agree that:

The work is not the man.
The prize is not the man.
Therefore, the man is neither the prize nor the work.

However:
The prize is the both work and the man.
There has to be work to be a prize; and, by implication, there has to be a man (or woman) to be work. The ratio of man to prize increases in relation to how "political" the selection criteria are.

In general, I feel that ethical considerations of the writer's life should be entirely separate from considerations of the work--not that ethical concerns shouldn't be considered, discussed, dissected, etc., just that they shouldn't be seen as germane to the work. At all. A close-up of anyone's life reveals multiple layers, "selves" and contradictions--the study of personality is an interesting one. However, in the case of a writer, their biography is merely another footnote, and maybe a totally misleading footnote at that. A critique of the work, on the other hand, is much closer to the writer's "self."

> The work is not the man, neither is the prize the work. The prize, as i think you are saying, is a political gesture apart from the work.
>
> _____
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

>

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

299. Joan Houlihan
Re: PS on Williams
Thu 22 Jul 1999

RE: I am suggesting >that to understand is not necessarily to forgive.

I agree with this, and in the case you posit below, it holds true, but sometimes it's very difficult to separate these two things, don't you think? In fact, implied in "I understand" is a forgiveness of sorts. There are many things that can never really be "understood," not least of them the holocaust. In order to understand a hateful behavior we have to go into internals--motivation, intention, etc.--and if we can't match these with anything in our own self-understanding, there's little chance of "understanding" the other.

I still think the drive to "understand" WCW by means of biographical revisionism is, in fact, in order to forgive him, so that our enjoyment of his work can be undiminshed by his anti-semitism. I just don't think it's necessary to accomplish this, to forgive him, in order to appreciate his work.

Or, maybe it's just a hero-worship thing--a need to "clear the name" of a beloved icon.

> From: Mark Weiss <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: PS on Williams
> Date: Mon, 19 Jul 1999 17:07:30 -0700
>
> It's good to be reminded from time to time why I don't mind having been such a bad graduate student.
> I don't think I ever suggested that complex thinking about anything is ever out of order, nor that Williams was uniformly a bad man. I am suggesting that to understand is not necessarily to forgive. Perhaps especially if one is a member of the victimized group.
> Here, by way of illustration, is a story I heard from a friend not five minutes ago. His ex-wife, with whom he has a passably friendly relationship, had their two young children last night. He gets home late to an hysterical message on his machine: the kids had awakened in the middle of the night to find themselves alone. This morning he discovers that the x had gone out to a bar because she needed some adult company. It's a hard time for her--she just broke up with her guy, and her father, to whom she was very close, just died of cancer. She's usually not that irresponsible. Easy to understand her situation as complexly as one likes, not so easy to forgive.

And I did all that without reference to a single philosopher.

At 02:16 PM 7/16/99 -0400, you wrote:
According to Mark Weiss:

When I was a little kid we used to vacation at a cheap resort in the Poconos, which were a lot more remote before the construction of I-80 than it is now. I became close friends with the owner's son who had a black German Shepherd names Nigger. I don't think he'd ever met a Black person, but I don't doubt for a minute that he and his family were racists. But maybe when he called his dog he was feigning a persona.

Mark, I understand where this is coming from vis a vis the Williams discussion, but it also seems worthwhile to point out that you've framed the issue in a classic and, to me, ultimately limiting way. Essentially, you're replaying a critique levied by Lukacs against existentialism - specifically Kierkegaard and Heidegger. Lukacs says that their refusal to acknowledge the unity of the Self (eg, K's view of the individual as "incognito") was just bullshit:

They "embraced this doctrine of the eternal incognito which implies that a man's external deeds are no guide to his motives. In this case [Heidegger's], the deeds obscured behind the mysterious incognito were, needless to say, these intellectuals' participation in Nazism...But if this impenetrable incognito were the true 'condition humaine,' might not - concealed within their incognito - Heidegger or Schmitt have been secret opponents of Hitler all the time, only supporting him in the world of appearances?"

Now, what Lukacs says here really strikes a cord. I won't get into the whole issue of Heidegger and Nazism. What I will say is that Lukacs' logic - though I sympathize deeply with his dilemma - is flawed. It presupposes that the only critique of the Unity of the Self falls along the lines of this existential concept. Lukacs, it seems to me, comes out of the humanist aspect of Marx and Marxism: the self is ethical and whole:
if not, than it is damaged and unethical (evil). In the world of continental philosophy of the 30's Heidegger and Lukacs may have seemed > like the operative poles (though the Franfurt folks & I think > particularly Benjamin offer an alternative) - but as regards Williams,

> there's John Dewey, there's Kenneth Burke, offering very important
> alternatives to a Lukacsian perspective on the self which stays well away > from this issue of the Incognito. Dewey: "individuality itself is > originally a potentiality and is realized only in interaction with > *surrounding conditions." This statement didn't deter Dewey from* > *critiquing the unity of the self - it was in fact the predicate by* > which > he understood the self as a multifarious, multimotivated construction;
> and
> through which he recognized that deciphering the motives behind
> individual actions (including speech acts) required the same sort of time
> and heightened attention and open-mindedness that an anthropologist (a > good one) brings to the activities of whole communities. So, just to > say,
> that when I ask for complex thinking on this WCW/anti-semitism it is from > this latter, pragmatic perspective, though not without knowledge of > Lukacsian exasperation.
>
> -m.

_____ Get Free Email
and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

300. charssmith

Arcturus Editions: Pat Reed

Thu 22 Jul 1999

Arcturus Editions is proud to announce the publication of:

Pat Reed: CONTAINER OF STARS

artwork by Marianne Kolb
ISBN 0-9661505-2-X
$10.00, 4 7/8 x 7 1/2, 28 pp., printed letterpress using handset type on Mohawk Superfine, with Thai Unryu endpapers sewn in Fabriano Tiziano covers
$20.00 signed edition, lettered A-Z
Publication Date: August 1, 1999

Culled camping in the Sierra Nevada, her perception pared to precise sound, the syllables of Pat Reed's poems spill effortlessly down page, a stream that "opens the blackness."

Pat Reed was born in Los Angeles and has lived in the Bay Area for the past twenty years. She is the author of six books of poetry: _Sea Asleep_ (Coincidence Press, 1983), _More Awesome_ (One Dog Garage, 1985), _Qualm Lore_ (One Dog Garage, 1987), _Kismet_ (O Books, 1990), _Tangle Blue_ (1993), _Dawn Walking Shoes_ (1996), and a prose memoir of teaching refugees in East Oakland, _We Want to See Your Tears Falling Down_ (literatura de cordel, 1996). She currently teaches at Hayward State University.

Swiss artist Marianne Kolb has lived in the Bay Area since 1983. She has exhibited in the U.S. and in Europe since 1991 and is currently represented by Hang Gallery in San Francisco. Primarily a painter and printmaker, she often changes medium and scale in her work, and at times will drop all other tools to draw with stick & ink. Two ink stick drawings were created for _Container of Stars_.

"From the author of the deft sprawl of _Kismet_ comes a 'poking / through the / black grid,' a mellow rounded ear of absence, then 'fish whump' or 'Giants shift'-- a causal puzzle of clustered stanzas abutting the natural world. Enjambment quickens and slows the eye-word 'VERY STILL' -- can't escape -- the locale-specific, transportative function of this beautiful clear work."

--Steven Farmer

"Absolute (f)act of attention to word enactments of events in world; what happens when one stops to see and/or hear 'it' taking place in the 'out there' that is also an interior experience of being inside solitude of exterior land(e)scape; feeling registered as the sounds of syllables in the air/ear ('I sit still / in my tent / by the river // filling my ear / with cold going') -- Pat Reed's _Container of Stars_ bears (re)reading, again and again."

--Stephen Ratcliffe

Also available:

Gustaf Sobin, _A WORLD OF LETTERS
_ISBN 0-9661505-1-1, 16 page letterpress chapbook, $8.00

Julia Connor, _Chrysanthemum_ (forthcoming)
Kenneth Irby, _Ingressions & Exolutions_ (forthcoming)

Arcturus Chaplet Series: (printed letterpress on a single sheet of paper & sewn in covers):

#1, Patrick Pritchett, _Ark Dive_ (an elegy for Ronald Johnson), $4.00
#2, Kenneth Irby, _[syzygos]_, $5.00
#3, Elizabeth Robinson, _Lodger_ (forthcoming)
#4, Laura Moriarty, _Ololon_ (forthcoming)

Available from Small Press Distribution, 1341 Seventh Street, Berkeley, CA 94710; [redacted]; http://www.spdbooks.org; e-mail: [redacted]

or from the press, checks payable to: Charles Smith $1.50 shipping & postage, $.0.50 per additional items
CA residents, please add 7.25% sales tax

Arcturus Editions
2135 Irvin Way
Sacramento, CA 95822
[redacted]

* Apologies to all who receive this message more than once. Please let me know if you don't wish to receive any further announcements from Arcturus Editions.
****

↑ Index

301. Susan Wheeler
1999 Books
Thu 22 Jul 1999

For several reasons, I've a question for y'all: what are the best books of poetry (collections, summations, book-lengths, etc.) published in 1999 you've come upon?

Susan

↑ Index

302. Tenney Nathanson
contact info for Robin Blaser, Harryette Mullen
Fri 23 Jul 1999

---

would like to get in touch w Robin Blaser, and Harryette Mullen, ASAP re POG business (poetry reading series, etc). Does anyone have good contact info (phone? ACTIVE email? snailmail?) for either or both?

pls backchannel.

thanks

Tenney (Nathanson)

mailto:[redacted]
mailto:[redacted]
http://www.u.arizona.edu/~nathanso

↑ Index

303. pete spence
Re: the ELBURG BOOK
Fri 23 Jul 1999

>also in January of this year i published Cornelis Vleeskens' translation of >Jan G Elburg's THROUGH THE EYE OF THE SCISSORS
>the back cover reads:
>jan g elburg's scissors
>produced this text sometime
>in the 60's 7 it was published >in the 2nd ed of PRAATJES KIJKEN
>by Meulenhoff in 1974
>Cornelis Vleeskens did
>this translation in 1990
>7 Raimondo Cortese set it
>set it for pete spence at the time
>we've played with it over the years
>and it is now finally printed in 1999.
>Eburg was involved with the COBRA movement.
>published by LOOK!! POETRY!!
>
>TYPOGRAPHIC POETRY.
>$5 US cash thanks.
>THANKS pete spence
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

_____
Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

304. Stephen Cope
Beyond the Page
Fri 23 Jul 1999

> BEYOND THE PAGE continues its monthly series of literary and arts events with the following reading/performance:
>
> What: Carlos Blackburn and Bruce Whiteman read from their work.
>
> Where: Faultline Theater, 3152 5th Avenue (at Spruce), San Diego.

When: Sunday, July 25, 1999. 4PM.

Etc: $3-5 donation requested. Beer, wine, and refreshments available.

****

 From Brooklyn, CARLOS BLACKBURN left and left again to find life elsewhere and consistently found it. While in pursuit of a decent education from the world, managed to write some stuff here and there. Variously known as friend, lover,employee, brother, buffon, son, extrovert, introvert. Been out of work, up to date, right on time, in too deep and down and out. Loves subways, oceans, bikes.*

 Born near Toronto, BRUCE WHITEMAN has been in the United States since 1996, and is currently Head Librarian of UCLA's William Andrews Clark Memorial Library. Author of over a dozen books of poetry - including two installments of the serial work _The Invisible World is in Decline_ (Coach House Press) - Whiteman is also a translator. bibliographer, and critic. His scholarly work includes an annotated bibliography of Leonard Cohen and a translation of François Chorron's _After 10,000 Years, Desire: Selected Recent Poems_. The third installment of _The Invisible World is in Decline_ is forthcoming next year from Toronto's ECW Press.*

****

BTP is proud to continue its monthly series of arts-related events with this reading/performance. BTP is an independent literary and arts group dedicated to the promotion of experimental and explorative work in contemporary arts. For more information, call: [redacted], (619) [redacted]; e-mail: [redacted], [redacted].

↑ Index

305. Jeffrey Jullich

$3.50: Summer vacation in Scandinavia!

Fri 23 Jul 1999

I think I've discovered where poetry might be, had there never been a "Wasteland" to set us back 30 years! With the recent interest in international poetry demonstrated by such publications as Boundary2, readers should grab up the chance to check out the oddities transpiring in ~Scandinavia,~ in the latest issue of Samizdat (no. 3). With English translations of 10 little-seen poets from Sweden, Denmark, and Finland, it's an opportunity to glimpse a sturdier branch of our same family tree, effortlessly twentieth century, in a lineage spared the antagonistic influences of American confessionalism with its counter-reactions. The surprise of it is a kind of unselfconscious modernism which escapes the sometimes deforming pressures of obligatory experimentation. Even Nordic Europe's "conservative" strains seem to derive from an unfamiliar lyric tradition (unfamiliar to American readers) which remains startingly without recourse to our lyricism's "I"/"you" axis. What informed English or Romance poetry these poets do explicitly evoke (Lawrence Durrell, Valery, and Char in Gungerd Wikholm;"My Interview with I.A. Richards", Perry Miller, and an Auden epigraph in Anglophone Goran Printz-Pahlson) may sometimes seem quaint, but its spottiness and lacunae have spared them the weight of the Bloomsian patrilineage we suffer, all for the better. All the same, it's interesting to find Eliot that far north: "But think also of . . . the lonely typists in their immaculate rooms / with a small fridge and biscuits on the mantelpiece" ("My Interview"). (That quote may be unrepresentative, though, as even the same author could coin such fine peculiarities as "intestines of the heuristic house" [!].) Overall, they have no compunctions about blithely changing direction mid-stream in their poems, yet without that petrifying into an imprisoning literary trope like formal "disjunction." A flourish of Pop can turn up, as in Printz-Pahlson's "The Enormous Comics," which flaunts as much Superman and Katzenjammer Kids as a Kenneth Koch poem, except here Superman is a ~transvestite.~ Curiously, Scandinavian modernism also seems to have grown up without the facile vernacular imitators took from Williams Carlos Williams, and the pleasant formality that results meets the L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E '90's halfway, insofar as they too, if pushed to it, may "hate speech." For instance, such linguistic materialities as: "And the language will arrive at last / We do not know what's first", "The vortex of our language / in the greater vortex; through its eye---" (Goran Sonnevi), "Stuck in his back pocket, a book with gleaming covers / . . . start at what page?" (Jesper Svenbro). There's a good share of nature imagery, --- a relief, in this July weather --- but there's a lot of wilderness up there, and, while perhaps a trace of Symbolisme adds a cool mystery to such "yellow leaves of the birches, the red leaves of the rowans", it's equally realist in its occasional specificities: "drop by drop / down the whitewashed wall and the bulging gauze-wrapped sewer pipe / to come out first as rust" (Soren Ulrik Thomsen). Here's how far from transparency it can go: "gridiron reverberations / in the hills, sourmash / blandishments . . . As the ~gavroche~ innocence of a barnyard rape: // He offers a smile, mild / as pick-axe handles a / mile wide which kindles/ the hide of rutabegas" (Printz-Pahlson again, whose English language originals, translated into Swedish, have "on occasion" been translated back into English, according to the editor's introduction). I lived in Sweden when I was a teenager, so I can swear to you: those "sourmash / blandishments" keep coming and coming. (Followers of this EPC discussion list will also be glad to hear from our own Masha Zavialova, lone list-er throughout continental Russia, in her "Word from Russia": she reports on their first prize for independent writing, the covetted Andrei Belyi Prize for literature, where the award is a bottle of vodka and one ruble.)

The info is: Samizdat / 14 Campus Circle / Lake Forest, IL 60045. Single copies of current/back issues: $3.50. Subscription: $10 for three annual issues. Checks made out to editor Robert Archambeau.

What better time than now, while summer sunlight lasts well past midnight there?

JJ

↑ Index

306. david bromige
RADIO STATION KPFA, BERKELEY
Fri 23 Jul 1999

Listfellows : I am posting this message from the poet Trane DeVore because I agree with him that the closure of KPFA radio would be the final nail in our coffin. For decades now, increasingly, as corporations swallow up the media, KPFA has been the only source I know of for information whose dissemination is anywhere from distressing to deadly for corporate rule of the world. Believe me, this radio station shows NPR up for the wishy-washy liberals they unfortunately suppose they have to be. During the recent illegal war NATO conducted upon "the former Yugoslavia," via KPFA one heard every evening voices from Belgrade bearing witness to the reality of the destruction wrought in our names and with our money. It was through KPFA I first learned that the cluster-bombs our planes jettisoned over the Adriatic, were killing Italian fishermen---and causing the ports there to be shut down. First learned that, contrary to U.S. spokespersons, many U.S. planes had been shot down---I recall the number, then, before the bombing was stopped, as 37.

Clearly, such a station (which also opposed the illegal war on Iraq) is uncomfortable to the Clinton regime; and Marion Berry, his appointee to the body that oversees PBS, is now in charge of the Pacifica Foundation, the non-profit corp that oversees KPFA and 4 (I think) sibling-=stations. The current board of Pacifica illegally rewrote the mission statement, in contempt for KPFA's constituency, to attempt to turn the station into a middle-of-the-road (maindrain) outfit, unlikely under such a policy to disturb any thing or one. They may have notions of going even further. A sign held up at a recent rally here in my home town Sebastopol, claimed to cite a secret memo from Michael Palmer, the new Treasurer-Elect, to Lynn Chadwick, a Pacifica functionary, suggesting KPFA could be sold to corporate buyers for $70 million.

Anyone old enough to remember KQED TV before it went to commercials, will know the enormous destruction to its intelligence this commercialism ("Nature Is Brought to You By Exxon") has, with all deliberation, wrought. My god, how many years of "Are You Being Served"? "Are you being screwed" would be closer to the point.

Lynn Chadwick used to work for Voice of America, a propaganda station serving corporate interests by presenting an unreal americanism to the (un)suspecting 3rd world. I doubt she did a 180 on her way to Pacifica. The infiltration of the Pacifica board couldnt have been smoother if it had been cooked up in a rightwing thinktank. One notes the timing---Chadwick fires the KPFA station manager the week before KPFA was to celebrate its 50th birthday; Chadwick locks out the employees of this admittedly leftwing station and goes to canned music on July 13, as though to pre-empt any storming of any Bastille. I hear Robert Duncan saying, as more than once he did to me, "It doesn't have to be a plot, it works like one anyway," when I discerned the workings of one in the coincidence of more than one rightwing attack on democratic institutions. Dear gullible Robert.

Elan Fabbri, spokesperson for Pacifica, has declared that employees of KPFA who discussed the takeover on the air are "mutinous." To all you language-mechanics and discourse-analysts out there, this word-choice will surely be revealing. It reveals to me the authoritarian nature of Pacifica as currently constituted. Here in America we find mutiny very interesting. This is a nation born of mutiny. We have made "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The Caine Mutiny" into perennial favorites. When power becomes aloof, unsusceptible of appeal, what recourse have we, but mutiny?

I apologize for the length of this introduction to Trane's letter. Please read that, and, if you feel so moved, please spread the word. The more people who know of this, the more difficult it will be for Pacifica to continue its illegal rewriting of its historical mission, the more difficult it will be to sell KPFA down the river.

We need to get people all over the world stirred up, we need the protest to reach proportions where even the bought media can't ignore it. KPFA is a strong expression of the conscience of America, and America with a silenced conscience will bring ruin throughout the globe. Further ruin, I should have written.

> As many of you probably know by now, the Pacifica Foundation has removed all staff from KPFA and is running canned programs from the vaults. KPFA, a free-speech bastion and community radio station for fifty years, is under assault by a parent organization that is decidedly undemocratic and is seeking to change, against the wishes of a broad and diverse listenership, the shape of programming at the station. This crisis began when Pacifica fired KPFA's popular station manager, Nicole Sawaya, without prior consultation with the staff who actually work at the station. The only explanation given for Sawaya's firing was that she was "not a good fit." The paid and unpaid staff at KPFA began to voice thier dissent on air and were told that they could not. The imposition of an internal gag rule, an crime against free speech at KPFA, led to the termination of two prominent broadcasters--Larry Bensky and Robbie Osman. Pacifica tried to censor the KPFA evening news, claiming that the crisis at KPFA was "not news"--as Eileen Alfenderi (sp.?), co-host of the KPFA evening news, pointed out that the evening news had not been asked to hold back on a story during the entire 24 years of her tenure. Pacifica hired armed guards to "protect" the staff at KPFA (the staff is unanimously opposed to this); these guards were obviously put in place to intimidate the staff. On Tuesday, Dennis Bernstein broadcast a show about the crisis at KPFA and was forcibly removed from the station by the armed guards. The KPFA evening news tried to report on this, but was forced from the air. Pacifica has been running canned programming on the airwaves ever since. There has been a massive outcry against this violent and undemocratic move by the Pacifica Foundation. A series of statements condemning the Pacifica Foundation's acts has been recorded and should be available over the web soon. People protesting this action include Alice Walker, June Jordon, Jerry Brown, and Barbara Lee, just to name a few. It is imperative that anyone who supports free speech and anti-corporate community run radio to do what they can to help out at this critical juncture. KPFA was founded by pacifists and is one of the only radio stations that regularly produces shows on Latin America, corporate power, gay and lesbian issues, labor issues, issues that concern minorities and people of color, environmental issues, and the list goes on. KPFA is also a vital source for alternative forms of music and a voice in the local music scene. I urge you to contact your Representatives, your Congresspeople, and even your local politicians. We must not lose KPFA. For more information, and to put your name on the list of contacts for protest actions, please contact

> www.savepacifica.net, or > www.radio4all.org/freepacifica.
>
> Thank you,
>
> Sincerely, Trane DeVore
>
> PLEASE pass this e-mail on to any interested parties.

↑ Index

307. Lowther,John

Re: pointless questions(ANSWERS)

Fri 23 Jul 1999

> how much authority is enough?
- not so's you'd notice
  even with a team of dedicated searchers

> where do you buy this commodity?
- i found it sitting on the bench outside the asst. principle's office

> how do you get the others to listen?
- cup one hand to ear

> where did Eliot Weinberger come from?
- new york ?
> why wasn't he here to begin with?
- beads were traded for him beads weren't invented yet

> what's fear worth these days?
- $6.75 per 2/hr increment > which poem are you referring to?

- each is a snatch out of the continuum "poetry" don't make me choose

> what's your favourite of all the poems you don't read?
- must i choose ?
  i often like quotations from The Prelude but have never read the text > can we talk Tennyson?

- no (i've an impediment)

> how long did it take you to find out?
- the realization came in an instant

> who's out now?
- john cage
  tho my love for him has nothing to do with his sexuality

> where are the boundaries?
- out there --->

> which one's the boss?
- no one, history, i dunno...

> who cares?
- those who use the answer

> when did all this come down?
- it's always come down and is now

> who's in charge of these words?
- "I [state yr name] am."

> who owns the owners?
-

> which credential do you prefer?
- those which ask us to think

> what's your idea of relief?
- escaping the hype

> what part of death is not necessary?
- the end

> where have you been all day?
- on hands and knees

crawling under a spectacle to cannibalize a few parts

> what's the best way to get out of here?
- on the wind
but tacking against it > can you find a better route there?

- hope for any route

> behind who should you hide?
- yr best guess
but be prepared to slip behind another
if it doesn't pan out

> at what point will you know that you have won?
- when the rules change > are you as ready as you need to be?

- to think so wd be complacent > are all circles the same?

- if looking out of a box > can we question questions?

- as a means yes, as an end why ?

> will there be time later?
- probably not > who should we turn to?

- everyone we can reach > does the perimetre change?

- yes, it recedes
as we approach

> do we?
- guilty until proven static

> are you quite sure?
- i'm sweating

> is there one in many?
- if one is an island

↑ Index

308. Dodie Bellamy
Changes at Small Press Traffic
Fri 23 Jul 1999

Small Press Traffic's executive director Dodie Bellamy will be taking a year's leave of absence to take the post of "Distinguished Visiting Writer" at Mills College's English Department. While she's away, SPT board member Jocelyn Saidenberg will assume directorship for the year to come. Jocelyn is the author of Mortal City (Parentheses Writing Series: 1998). Her work has been published in many journals such as Arshile, Mirage#4/Period[ical], Outlet, and Primary Writing. She is the founder, editor and publisher of KRUPSKAYA, a small press collective dedicated to publishing experimental poetry and prose. Born and raised in NYC, she has been living in San Francisco since 1994 and is the 1999 winner of the New Langton Arts Bay Area Award Show.

(Dodie will continue to act as an advisor and volunteer.)

Small Press Traffic Literary Arts Center at New College 766 Valencia Street
San Francisco, CA 94110
415/[redacted]

↑ Index

309. KENT JOHNSON
Modernists in the basement
Fri 23 Jul 1999

I alluded a few days ago to an exchange between Pound and WCW. Here is the passage I had in mind, from Eliot Weinberger's long essay "The Modernists in the Basement and the Stars Above" (truly a stunner, in many ways), found in _Works On Paper_ (New Directions):

Pound, letter to Williams, 1936:

jews having been circumcised for centuries/ it must have had some effect on the character. [...] history is written and character is made by whether and HOW the male foreskin produces an effect of glorious sunrise or of annoyance in slippin backward. Someone diagnosed Shaw years ago by saying he had a tight foreskin/ the whole of puritan idiocyis produced by badly built foreskins. Criminology/ penology shd/ be written around the cock. The dissecting room shd/ lay off that chaotic bucket of sweet breads from the skull and start research from the prong UPward. The lay of the nerves/ etc. This doesn't blot out endocrinology/ but it is the fount of aesthetics/ means microscopic attention/ disssection and micro/ photographic enlargements/ killers etc/ shd have their prongs photoed postmortem.

Williams' reply:

...if cutting off the loose hide over a few thousand years has altered the Hebrew character-- I doubt it. By all the laws of heredity it should have affected the women and they are as bad as the men today, or worse. It ain't the skin that makes the difference in the man, its the stick in it that does it.

↑ Index

310. Ramez Qureshi
Ribot Query
Fri 23 Jul 1999

Dear All:
Does anyone know what the theme for the next Ribot is/what the deadline for the next issue is (if it hasn't already past).

Under 30,
Ramez Qureshi

↑ Index

311. Ron Starr
Diastic Reading (Yet More Ways to...)
Fri 23 Jul 1999

Charles O. Hartman's original DIASTEXT program is available from the tools page of my website. He was kind enough to send it after someone forwarded my query to him. You'll find it as a ZIP file containing a DOS executable and the C source at :

http://www.eskimo.com/~rstarr/poormfa/poemtool.html

You'll also find a Perl program to do diastic reading on that page. And, last but not least, I have a web page that does diastic reading (I made the Perl program into a CGI script). So, you can go to http://www.eskimo.com/~rstarr/poormfa/diastic.html

type in your key/title phrase, paste in your text, click a button, get the diastic text, and not use anything other than your browser.

There are also links to Taylor Brady's Word macros and other things that other folks and other sites pointed me to.

Happy computed writing.

- Ron

↑ Index

312. A H Bramhall
Dust My Broom
Fri 23 Jul 1999

---

the importance
sucks every importance does sucks the big empty egg sucks
the importance careering thing. motivation
sucks.
that's this thing brunch with the kennedys your sultry pals and any dirty thing.
all you,
same old clunk
in the big top give me a break.
I got out.
pierce your freak, eat armour, see your own sag, hold my cob. where I come from, learn the roots. where I come from, settle the issue. where I come, from oh well. where I come from,
your rat. when I lose, I really lose. what's the gambit stinky pattern madcap give me a break. authority lives the total crap you big less than tree. this is natural hold my cold.

poetry sucks excavation. poetry is just schoolwork in a prison of yesterday's reform.
bite my provisions. I already said nowhere there am I.
you and I can't dance. freak out toke, could go on and on.
wherever.
whatever.
Nancy's on the phone.
see you at the princess meeting
if I fail.

↑ Index

313. KENT JOHNSON

Jaime Saenz

Fri 23 Jul 1999

Five poems by the Bolivian writer Jaime Saenz (translated by myself and Forrest Gander) are just up at Jacket #8.
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket08/index.html

Hope some of you will take a look at this very interesting poet.

Kent ---------- Jaime Saenz (1921-1986) is Bolivia's leading writer of the 20th century. Prolific as poet, novelist, and non-fiction writer, his baroque, propulsive syntax and dedication to themes of death, alcoholism, and otherness make his poetry among the most idiosyncratic in the Spanish-speaking world. As the author of one of Latin America's first openly homosexual novels, the as yet untranslated masterpiece Felipe Delgado, Saenz's work also stands as a singular example of artistic and personal courage. His poetry is collected in eleven books (including a volume of selected work), the first of these published in 1955 and the last in 1984. The poems presented here are taken from the collection As the Comet Passes (1982). They are the first published translation of Jaime Saenz's writing in English and part of a book manuscript of selected works.

↑ Index

314. Alan Sondheim
Vito Hannibal Acconci
Sat 24 Jul 1999

&*&

Vito Hannibal Acconci

She was an ordinary girl from a nowhere place. She came to Hollywood to make it big and I knew her back when, way back when her name was Carrie. Carrie was sixteen and just about as sweet as they made them, and back then they made them sweet. You could take one look in her eyes and know that was innocence talking and you'd never be the same. I once saw her stop traffic with her voice; I wouldn't have believed it if I didn't see it myself. The cars just pulled right over. She sang her poor little heart out. You'd take one look at her and you'd know she wouldn't last. You'd take her in and take care of her and ask for nothing back. She would have given you everything in the world, you thought,and she made your heart big as all outdoors. I saw the sun rise in her eyes and I thought I'd see it set, too, but it didn't. Everyone knew she was doomed to failure and everyone worked hard to make sure she never failed.

I'm an old man now, I could tell you stories, she'd still remember me, it was just last year I heard she died, I gave her the best parts of my life, I can still see her then, you wouldn't believe such innocence, her smile brightened my life, sometimes I hear her call me, I turn around thinking she's there, I remember her like the day I was born

---

↑ Index

315. A H Bramhall
The Whole World's In An Uproar
Sat 24 Jul 1999

the thing is bent out of shape. your memory resists the change. figuring the drama and the proper out of body expenses. dream this, baby needs a lunch box.
speed is might, dogs don't dream, words aren't careful

as they fall from your tree.
I wish the central issue big time convention of forces till the field next time
freaking out.
oh how love can mystify when you don't even hear the words.
dogma, factotum
in an age of free spending muckers.
this is the language
I ended up with. and my topic today is what is left

↑ Index

316. Charles Bernstein
List Down til Monday
Sat 24 Jul 1999

The Central Email service at SUNY-Buffalo has been closed until Monday morning for scheduled maintenance. This means that the Poetics List will be down and that anyone with a UB email address will not have access to their mail this weekend.

Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

317. Jill Stengel
august 8 reading--sf, ca
Sun 25 Jul 1999

synapse: second sundays at blue bar

--presents--

a reading with sarah anne cox and elizabeth treadwell august 8, 2 p.m.

blue bar is at 501 broadway, at kearney, in sf enter thru black cat restaurant, same address

admission is $2

definite articles by sarah anne cox and eve doe (movements 9-31) by elizabeth treadwell, both new from a+bend press, will be available at the reading.

Sarah Anne Cox is the author of Home of Grammar (Double Lucy Books, 1997) and definite articles (a+bend press, forthcoming August 1999) and an editor of Outlet magazine. She also writes for and performs with the rock band dear mary,.

Elizabeth Treadwell's collection of prose/poetry, Populace, was published earlier this year by Avec Books. She is also the author of a novel, Eleanor Ramsey: the Queen of Cups (San Francisco State University, 1997); and four chapbooks. Treadwell edits Outlet magazine and Double Lucy Books (users.lanminds.com/dblelucy) in Berkeley, CA, where she also continues work on her Eve Doe project.

_____
please notify sender if you wish to be removed from this list

↑ Index

318. Jim Rosenberg
(Fwd) WEB DOC(K)S
Sun 25 Jul 1999

With apologies for cross-posting ...

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------
To: [redacted] (Jim Rosenberg)
From: "akenatons docks" <[redacted]>
Subject: WEB DOC(K)S
Date sent: Thu, 22 Jul 1999 18:20:02 +0200

To: YOU!!!!!!
From: akenaton/docks <[redacted]> Subject: WEB DOC(K)S SPECIAL ISSUE
Cc:
Bcc:

WEB ART & POESIE : DOC(K)S N° SPECIAL

A la suite de la présentation dans le cadre des 1° rencontres d'art contemporain d'Aix-en-Provence (http//www.aix-art-contemporain.org) d' une sélection de travaux liés au web nous avons décidé de réaliser un numéro special de la revue DOC(K)S consacré au même thème.

Comme pour les numéros précédents celui ci sera doublé d'un CD ROM.

Pour la partie imprimée nous attendons de vous des textes théoriques, des images, des travaux liés à la poésie visuelle etc. Pour le CD nous souhaiterions des travaux directement liés au web ou en tout cas susceptibles d' y être diffusés. Selon la formule que nous avons testée à Aix-en-Provence nous essayerons dans la mesure du possible de restituer le contexte web. Si vous avez un site nous souhaiterions - par exemple - utiliser votre home page comme index et "'titre" de vos travaux. Des liens externes sont possibles.

Bien entendu, nous sommes tout à fait disposés à présenter sur ce CD les objets déjà sélectionnés pour Aix-en-Provence. Si vous avez fait partie de cette sélection nous attendons votre accord. Si vous souhaitez des modifications nous sommes à votre disposition.

Formats pour l'impression: word 5 ou 6, mac ou pc, images jpeg ou .tiff (300pp), dimension maximale des pages 17X24, 5.

Formats CD ROM: html, gif, gifa, jpeg, .swf, .dir, .mov, .wav, .mid, compression: winZip, stuffle.ex

Deadline : 30 Septembre 1999

Les envois peuvent être faits par voie électronique (akenaton_docks@sitec.f) pour les objets légers ou par voie postale pour ceux destinés à l'impression. ZIP, Syquest 44/88, Diskettes.
Format Mac ou PC.
Adresse: AKENATON/DOC(K)S
12 COURS GRANDVAL
F 20 000 AJACCIO
tel fax 04 95 21 32 90
http://www.sitec.fr/users/akenatondocks

WEB ART & POETRY : DOC(K)S SPECIAL ISSUE In the wake of the presentation for the first Aix-en-Provence Contemporary Art Meeting (http//www.aix-art-contemporain.org) of a selection of works linked to the Web, we have decided for a special issue of the review DOC(K)S on that theme.

Like the latest issues it will be teamed with a CD-Rom.

For the printed matter itself we invite you to send us texts on theory, images, visual poetry works etc.

As for the CD, we would like proper Web-works or at least suitable to a Web-diffusion. Much like the formula we tested in Aix-en-Provence we will strive to recreate the context of the Web. If you have a site we would like - for example - to use your home page for an index and 'title' to your works. Exterior links could be made.

Of course, we can very well settle with the objects already chosen for Aix-en-Provence. If you were selected we await anew your consentment. We are at your disposal should you wish to modify something or other.

Formats for the printed works: word 5 or 6, mac or pc, pictures jpeg or tiff(300pp), max. size for a page 17x24.5.

CD-Rom formats: gif, gifa, jpeg, .swf, .dir, .mov, .wav, .mid

Compression: winzip, stuffle.exDeadline : 30 September 1999

You can send your contributions either by e-mail (light stuff) or simply by mail (printed matter for print! usable as is! also Zips, discs, syQuest 44/88 (mac or pc)

Adresse: AKENATON/DOC(K)S
12 COURS GRANDVAL
F 20 000 AJACCIO

tel fax 04 95 21 32 90
http://www.sitec.fr/users/akenatondocks

Jim Rosenberg http://www.well.com/user/jer/
CIS: 71515,124
WELL: jer
Internet: [redacted]

↑ Index

319. Michael Neff
Electronic Literary Arts Newsletter (ELAN) #1
Sun 25 Jul 1999

Dear Members,

This is the first ELAN. If anyone has newsworthy items, blurbs, or announcements of general literary interest they would like to include, please forward them to the ELAN editor, Liana Scalettar: <[redacted]> and they will be well received. Subscription requests to the above address also.

The ELAN reaches over 2000 members and is growing.

Best,
Mike Neff

****
ELECTRONIC LITERARY ARTS NEWSLETTER #1

Note: ELAN is a non-commercial newsletter sponsored by a collaboration of magazines, writers, editors, and publishers at Web Del Sol, and directed only to members of the literary arts community.
****

FEATURES AND HEADLINES THIS ISSUE:

- Editor's Note (From the cyber trenches . . .)
- Writers Writing/Writers Talking
- WDS Joins ACLU in Michigan Anti-Censorship Suit
- SmallPress.Net Bookstore Opens
- On Offer: What WDS's Literary Buffet is Serving Now
- Small Fish/Big Fish: New Imprints, More Mergers
- WDS To Take Hollywood; Tom Cruise Changes His Mind
- A Mega-Spamming Most Severe: Immature Prank or Net Terrorism?
- Multi-Media Portal: Gateway to the Stars
- With Djuna Presiding
- Pi_R_Round To Host High School Creative Writing Programs
    - Poet Campbell McGrath Wins a Macarthur
    - Salinger's Daughter Plans Memoir

****

FROM THE CYBER TRENCHES

Welcome to Issue One of the Electronic Literary Arts Newsletter (ELAN), a monthly compendium of news for and about the literary community. We'll be pointing you to the essential news from the literary world; discussing developments at small and large presses; guiding you through the thickets of Web Del Sol and its bevy of guest publications; and, generally, providing a digest of things you should know. ELAN wants to be your one-stop, all-inclusive resource for lit. news--from venues large and small, writers known and unknown. To that end, please send gripes, suggestions, thoughts to [redacted].

And
avoid cyberheadaches--tell your friends and loved ones to subscribe.

Liana Scalettar
ELAN Editor

****

WRITERS WRITING/WRITERS TALKING

Suzanne Berne has won the Orange Prize for Fiction for her novel,
A
Crime in the Neighborhood (Viking/Workman). The 30,000 pounds annual prize is given to the best novel written by a woman and published in the UK. Also shortlisted: Julia Blackburn's The Leper's Companion (Cape/Random House); Marilyn Bowering's Visible Worlds (Flamington/ HarperCollins); Jane Hamilton's The Short History of a Prince (Doubleday/Random House); and Barbara Kingsolver's The Poisonwood Bible (Faber/HarperCollins). Italian writer Pia Pera's take on Lolita, a novel called Lo's Diary, will be published by Foxrock Press. Farrar, Straus, & Giroux dropped the book, originally slated for a fall,'98 release, after Dimitri Nabakov, son of, sued the publisher for copyright violation. Nabakov will receive 5% of the royalties,and will write some introductory material to be included in the edition. Poet Nikki Giovanni talks to Publishers Weekly, in a June 28th interview, about teaching and writing, Tupac Shakur and Allan Iverson, cancer recovery and nesting robins.

WDS JOINS ACLU IN MICHIGAN ANTI-CENSORSHIP SUIT; HOUSE VOTES WELL; SENATE COMMITTEE VOTES POORLY

In response to Michigan's enactment of a law forbidding the provision of"sexually explicit" materials online to minors, WDS and the ACLU have filed suit, and are seeking an injunction against the enforcement of the law. Its vague language makes the law dangerous to publishers, even those who live outside the state of Michigan, who could be held liable for any sexually explicit material on their sites. Other plaintiffs include Litline and Alt-X. In related news, Arts Wire Current <http://www.artswire.org> notes that the House of Representatives defeated the "Children's Defense Act of 1999" by a vote of 282-146. Introduced by my personal demon, Representative Henry Hyde, the amendment would have crimimalized the sale to minors of "any picture, photograph, drawing, sculpture,[etc., etc., etc.] containing explicit sexual or violent material." The ABA's Bookweb reports that on June 23rd, the Senate Commerce Committee approved a bill mandating that any school or library that uses federal funds for Internet connections must install filters to block access to "material deemed to be harmful to minors."

SMALLPRESS.NET BOASTS THE BEST OF INDEPENDENT PUBLISHERS

SmallPress.Net <http://smallpress.net> has arrived to expedite the purchasing of literary books online. Created and sponsored by the Literary Arts Allied Collective <http://www.literaryarts.org/> (creator and administrator of the Literary ArtsWeb Ring<http://www.lit-arts.com/WebRing/>) and Web Del Sol, SmallPress.Net is uniquely programmed to make use of advanced CGI searching and bundling techniques which enable the user to conveniently and quickly browse for individual books and through predefined search categories. In short, the shop offers the literary best of Amazon.com, with Amazon's power and savings. Unlike Amazon, of which it's currently an associate, SmallPress.Net is fast, meticulously focused, and bereft of unwanted distractions.Set for rapid expansion, SmallPress.Net will soon partner with other publishers to showcase the finest new literature. With such luminaries as Gray Wolf, Milkweed, and Copper Canyon aboard, this new storefront promises to become a must-shop for lit. lovers online.

ON OFFER: NEW AT WDS'S LITERARY BUFFET

Look for Susan Messer and J. David Stevens in the Spring '99 web issue of North American Review <http://www.webdelsol.com/NorthAmreview/NAR/>. And, in the Review's just-posted archives, revisit Aimee Bender, Susan Hahn, and more. With a wee 25-year break, NAR has been publishing since 1815. And--wouldn't you know--Conjunctions #32, <http://www.conjunctions.com> Eye to Eye, highlights collaborations, homages, arguments between writers and artists. Joyce Carol Oates, Paul West, and Bradford Morrow all fete Joseph Cornell; C.D. Wright's poems accompany Deborah Luster's silverprints, and vice-versa.

The Prose Poem <http://www.webdelsol.com/tpp> posts number 3, featuring new work by Robert Bly, Holly Iglesias, and Max Winters. In numbers 1 and 2, Stuart Dybek, Rosemarie Waldrop, and Chilean great Gabriela Mistral all appear.

ZYZZYVA editor Howard Junker pithily and lovingly discusses little magazines, and Ford Madox Ford's stewardship of one in particular, on the brand new--clear, clean--ZYZZYVA home page <http://www.webdelsol.com/ZYZZYVA>.

Proems? Posetry? In Posse <http://www.webdelsol.com/InPosse>grapples with questions of genre. Meanwhile, forms, forms, and more forms abound at La Petite Zine <http://www.webdelsol.com/La_Petite_Zine>. LPZ's editors bring you microfictions, short shorts, ghazals, and tanka, aiming to "build on the past" while barreling towards the future. Lagniappe features sweet little freebies, odds and ends, and writerly tchotchkes.

Work by Mackinnon, Darton, Baillargeon, and Maginnes appears in the New England Review <http://www.webdelsol.com/New_England_Review>; poetry by Barbara Hamby and fiction by Reynolds Price distinguish the current web issue of Five Points <http://www.webdelsol.com/Five_Points>, which will soon post a new issue

Both Global City Review and Quarterly West are under renovation, and should be back in the mix soon. Five Points is also working on a new site: <http://webdelsol.com/Five_Points>

And, for those of you not yet sated, Perihelion #4 <http://webdelsol.com/Perihelion> focuses on women poets working in electronic and print media. Beautiful graphics started your editor off on one those long questions about text and image, image and text.

SMALL FISH LAUNCH NEW LINE, BIG FISH GET BIGGER

Poets & Writers <http://www.pw.org.> notes the launch of a trade paperback imprint by the New York Review of Books. Twelve titles, among them Julio Cortazar's The Winners, are to be released this fall by the venerable journal's new line. According to series editor Edwin Frank, the imprint will focus on reprints of challenging, little- or lesser-known books. According to a June 18th article in the New York Times <http://www.nytimes.com/library/books/>, Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. has announced its acquisition of Avon Books and William Morrow & Co. With the close of this deal, News Corp.'s HarperCollins will greatly expand its market share. Avon and Morrow together comprise twenty-two imprints that publish 1,000 books every year. The Times also notes recent speculation that Time Warner,which already owns Little, Brown and Warner Books, might be eyeing Simon and Schuster. (See Bookwire at <http://www.bookwire.com> for the most recent Time Warner/S &S developments. Apparently the acquisition is off, but a joint venture-details hazy--is probable.) And, adding fuel to the fire of my despair, the Times also also notes that distributors and bookstores are getting into the consolidation game. Happily, in the wake of the Federal Trade Commission's objection to the deal, Barnes and Noble announced on June 2 that it would not buy Ingram Book Company, the distributor.

WDS TO TAKE HOLLYWOOD; TOM CRUISE CHANGES HIS MIND; SUN & MOON PRESS LOSES A BOOK

WDS plans to host its first annual writer's workshop and film festival in Los Angeles, in summer, 2000. Hurdles remain, but the outlook is favorable. The workshop/festival will provide an opportunity for story (and perhaps poetry) contest winners to not only meet and mingle with independent filmmakers, but to have their works adapted into film. The films will then be shown at the festival. The event will also feature a screenwriting component run by Pulitzer-winner Robert Olen Butler. The workshop portion of the event will be trail-bossed by Meg Files, veteran of the well known Pima Writer's Workshop. Also on the film front, the imminent opening of Stanley Kubrick's "Eyes Wide Shut" has provoked a flurry of tie-in and rights news. Warner Books will publish the US and Penguin UK the British versions of the book tie-in,which will feature both the screenplay and Arthur Schnitzler's "Dream Story,"on which the film is based. Co-star Cruise had objected to the inclusion of photographs, since the August book releases predate the movie's international release in September. Now, apparently, he's relented. According to Publishers Weekly <http://www.bookwire.com/PW/>, Kubrick's acquisition of the rights included control of any new editions, in English, of "Dream Story." When Sun & Moon

Press's contract with S. Fischer, the book's German publisher, expired in August of 1998, the latter chose to wait for the chance of film tie-ins rather than renewing its contract with the very independent LA publisher. For news and views from a personal favorite, Women Make Movies' executive director Debra Zimmerman, visit WDS's new film blurbs.

A MEGA-SPAMMING MOST SEVERE:IMMATURE PRANK OR NET TERRORISM?

On May 31, 1999, the WDS mail server at Mindspring was repeatedly bombed over an indefinite period of time by well over 1200 spam mails, launched for the purpose of clogging up the server and preventing use. Many hours and headaches later, the mails were finally deleted. WDS firmly believes that a staff editor at the Cortland Review was responsible for the assault. WDS and Cortland Review had been at odds over the sharing of a mail list and subsequent harassments leveled at WDS by the editors of Cortland Review. An hour following the last email exchange on the subject, the WDS mail server was effectively crashed by the mega spamming. WDS believes this action was taken to follow up on prior and specific server-attack threats issued by a Cortland Review editor (who had also threatened WDS editors with physical violence). The editors at WDS feel this incident to be very unfortunate and stunning considering the source. An AOL server in Virginia was used. The incident was reported to the Fairfax police authorities as a violation of the Virginia Computer Crimes Act. The investigation is still ongoing. AOL is also looking into the matter. WDS is seeking further legal advice. WDS feels the matter must be aired, if for no other reason than to dissuade further belligerance.

SEE THE STARS & HEAR THEIR VOICES AT MM PORTAL

Web Del Sol's A-V aggregation, the Multi-Media Portal, currently offers readings by Mark Doty, Toi Derricotte, Rikki Ducornet, James Merrill, W.S. Merwin, Sylvia Plath, among whole multitudes of others. Alternately, if the classics do nothing for you, GO crazy with GO poetry's slam stalwarts Bob Holman, Regie Cabico, Justin Chin and the like. All this fabulousness is available all the time to you, the voracious reader/voyeur/listener, at <http://www.webdelsol.com/audio-portal.htm>.

DJUNA OVERSEES A NEW COLLECTION OF FICTION AND POETRY AT WDS

With the spirit of Djuna Barnes presiding, this batch of new writing features work by Maria Velho da Costa, Diane Williams, Denise Duhamel & Maureen Seaton (together again), Jill Wolfson, Walt Cummins, Moris Farhi, Joan Houlihan, Daryl Scoggins, Michael Hettich, Patricia Ward, CB Follett, R.T.Smith, Neca Stoller, and more. The creative nonfiction choices feature the best of the recent Creative Non-Quiction Contest sponsored by 5_Trope, Brevity, and WDS.

Welcome also the new editors of Editor's Picks, who are now putting together EP 3. They are: Joan Houlihan, Paul Beckman, Rachel Callaghan, Shoshanna Wingate, Neal Durando, Vince Colvin, and David Berg-Seiter. Look to for new contributing editors Richard Zenith and Tony Lombardo.

PI_R_ROUND: A LOCUS FOR HIGH SCHOOL CREATIVE WRITING PROGRAMS

In keeping with its promise to include creative writing programs from around the country,WDS has created a new site called the Mercersburg Review which showcases new writing by high school students at Mercersburg Academy in Pennsylvania. The Mercersburg site will be the first of several HS programs to follow and be collected in a greater website called Pi_R_Round, http://webdelsol.com/Pi_R_Round. The Mercersburg students and their teachers, Joel Chace and Aron Solomon, will facilitate the inclusion of work

from other schools.
Meanwhile, work continues on the Creative Writing Project begun by WDS and Ohio State University over a year ago. Five universities are currently part of the project, with four more waiting in the wings and soon to be added.
Visit the CWP at <http://webdelsol.com/CWP>.

MACARTHUR FOUNDATION AWARDS CAMPBELL MCGRATH

Poets & Writers reports that the foundation described the author as "one of the most creative poets of his generation." Director of the poetry program at Florida International University, McGrath is the author of Spring Comes to Chicago (Ecco Press, 1996), American Noise (Ecco Press,1993) and Capitalism (Wesleyan University Press,1990). Road Atlas, his new book, is scheduled for July publication.

SALINGER'S DAUGHTER TO PUBLISH MEMOIR

In the fall of 2000, Simon and Schuster will publish Margaret Salinger's memoir. The author had originally planned to publish with Riverhead, an imprint of Penguin Putnam; however, not satisfied with the deal, she has now signed with S & S's Pocket Books.

****

↑ Index

320. Terry Diggory
WCW Australia/NZ
Mon 26 Jul 1999

Dear Listmates:

For a study of the reception of the US poet William Carlos Williams in Australia and New Zealand, I would appreciate references, evidence, impressions, especially from those on the scene.

How has Williams's work come to be known? Has it been particularly noticeable at certain dates? In what ways has its reception been part of larger developments, e.g, a turning away from British models, an opening to modernist or post-modernist aesthetics? Has the presence of Williams been felt in other arts besides literature? In addition to such general issues, cases of local transformations of Williams's much quoted poem "The Red Wheelbarrow" are of particular interest.

To prime the pump, here are some sources I am already familiar with (as it happens, they represent New Zealand more than Australia):

1) Williams's 1947 "Letter to an Australian Editor," written for Flexmore Hudson at POETRY: THE AUSTRALIAN INTERNATIONAL QUARTERLY OF VERSE. (Background on this editor or journal would be welcome.)

2) Elizabeth Smither's YOU'RE VERY SEDUCTIVE, WILLIAM CARLOS WILLIAMS (1978). (I know of this as a title but have not seen the text itself),

3) C. K. Stead's 1979 essay "From Wystan to Carlos Modern and Modernism in Recent New Zealand Poetry"

4) Allen Curnow's 1982 essay "Olson as Oracle: 'Projective Verse' Thirty Years On"

5) the 1984 short experimental film THE RED WHEELBARROW by NZ artist Bridget Sutherland

6) an article by Harriet Margolis on the Sutherland film, published in a 1996 issue of NEW ZEALAND STUDIES

Thanks in advance for your thoughts! Apologies for cross-posting. Please backchannel response to [redacted] or post to list, as seems appropriate.

Terry Diggory
English Dept.
Skidmore College
Saratoga Springs, NY 12866-1632
USA

↑ Index

321. david bromige

three things : a reading; a redundancy; a resource

Mon 26 Jul 1999

A Reading : Want to let Bay Area residents know of Ken Irby's reading this coming Sunday, August 1, at the Dickerson home, 1605 Berkeley Way, in Berkeley, at 3 p.m. Ken is out from Lawrence, Kansas for a couple weeks, and is currently staying with Bob Grenier, and midweek and thenceforth, will be at Duncan McNaughton's. If you need to contact Ken, backchannel and I'll put you in touch.

A Redundancy : My post re KPFA may well have been that for you-all. If so, Î apologize. I unsubbed when I went to Vancouver, and it was while I was there that I learned that the S (Pacifica) had hit the F (KPFA) for real. In a recent conversation, I learned that sveral posts on this topic were posted to the List during that week when I was unsubbed, posts by Pierre Joris (merci pour ça, Pierre) and others, to whom, thanks.

A Resource : a listmember recently asked me where he might obtain a copy of my 1980 book _My Poetry_ , long o.p. Yesterday I discovered it is available thru Granary Books, at [redacted], or e-mail at [redacted] . I make this a general post because their list includes many other o.p. books by a variety of poets of possible interest to this List.

David.

↑ Index

322. Balestrieri, Peter
Paul Metcalf
Mon 26 Jul 1999

Hi,
I'm interested in Paul Metcalf and was hoping that fans might send me synapses of their favorite works. Any word on Metcalf would be appreciated, also any suggestions as to poets that utilize quotation, besides Moore and Jabes whose work I know.
Best,
Pete

↑ Index

323. Lawrence Upton.
4th SV Colloquium
Tue 27 Jul 1999

The 4th Sub Voicive Colloquium is being put back to a date in 2000 to be announced. It will almost certainly take place in London. Additional notes backchannel to potential participants follow in the next few days. (Outline details of the colloquium - themes etc are at the SVP site and EPC)
.
L

The Sub Voicive Poetry website:
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/

Lawrence Upton's website:
http://members.spree.com/sip/lizard/index.htm

↑ Index

324. Eugene Ostashevsky
DADAFEST
Tue 27 Jul 1999

9X9 RECOMMENDS THIS. 2 OF US ARE IN IT ON SATURDAY.

++++++++++++++++++++++++++ D A D A F E S T two completely different shows friday and saturday july 30th and 31st SOMARTS gallery - 934 brannan & 9th ++++++++++++++++++++++++++ san francisco is a lot like the zurich of 1916 that produced the original DADA movement: fiercely cosmopolitan, artistically charged, and vibrating with absurd energy. the DADA movement started in zurich with a series of amazing cabarets, too, full of weird performances strange music odd little films and grotesque happenings. we're hoping to tap and generate some of that anarchistic, iconoclastic spirit in our two-night homage to DADA at SOMARTs gallery. we have san francisco's own amazing dancing Devil-ettes designing something special for the show. plus: Naked DADAheads, that yuppie-eradifier Kevin Keating (the artist formerly known as "nestor makhno"), the amazing Frank Moore, the venerable Bay Area Dadaists (with erstwhile mailart maestro Bill Gaglione) with a tribute to the FLUXUS movement of the '60s, Hank Hyena with a strange slide show, a weird group called "vainglorious" doing their impression of Franz Kafka, Mikl-em, King Ham and a host of others...as well as nudists, oreo cookies, a Velcro symphony, seeing eye dogs, mud people, a full-on DADA invocation and a Hugo Ball Memorial Photo booth. Friday and Saturday nights, July 30th and 31st, at 730pm: SOMARTS gallery is going to be jumping. tickets are $7-10 donation (no one turned away for lack of funds). sign on the dada line, m.i.blue & katy bell (for more information write [redacted] or call [redacted] or visit our webpage at: http://www.doitall.com/dada/)

↑ Index

325. Poetics List poetics restart
Wed 28 Jul 1999

Finally, and after several false starts, I've been able to access this account for more than a few minutes at a time. I anticipate that this means the Poetics List will be able to resume as of now, with the caveat that incoming messages sent to the list may be delayed somewhat, and that backchannel correspondence certainly will be, for the next few days. Your patience has been and continues to be appreciated - especially as the list was interrupted in the midst of some rather interesting discussion.

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

326. Poetics List
Evans-Impercipient query
Wed 28 Jul 1999

I wonder if someone would send to me a photocopy of Steve Evans' "The Dynamics of Literary Change" [Impercipient Lecture Series no. 1], which I've been unable to acquire elsewise. Also, if anyone knows the current snailmail address for the Evans-Moxley duo, please send. I can of course be contacted backchannel here, <[redacted]>.

thanks, Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

327. Brian Stefans
Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
Wed 28 Jul 1999

I tend to think we're revolving around the old issue of the "Politics of Poetic Form" here since, in someone like Bernstein's reading of the Pisan Cantos, the form of the poem actually undermines what would be the non- or supra-poetical work of the "man." That is, it seems the essays by the man, which we take to be a literary product of Pound as the "man of action" don't find their fulfillment or their natural corollary in his poems, which one would consider the works of the "man of thinking." So talk of the "man" is split here since we know this person two ways, via an activity which we normally associate with biography -- what the guy did when he wasn't writing poetry -- and the activity we normally associate with the "work," that seemingly isolated ("art-for-art's sake"), timeless artifact. If we are to take Bernstein's reading of Pound in "Pounding Fascism" seriously, we wouldn't have any "man" left over to hold against the prize or the literature -- the split would be too profound.

If you want to imagine a gross exaggeration of what this paradigm suggests (though who's more exaggerated than Pound), imagine Robert Mapplethorpe leading a double life as a Washington lobbyist, or some Xtian rightist, pushing for something like strict policing of the internet, mandatory short haircuts for men under the age of twenty, prayer before every meal, or well just imagine him being some sort of obsessed (sexually repressed) outsider politico pushing for centralized, conservative values (and symbols) that run up against his art work. Then, when it is time to offer him a prize, you would be in the position of asking whether the "work" is the same thing as the "man". It's not unimaginable that even a Mapplethorpe could be split this way, since there are all sorts of breaks like this in twentieth century art, it seems, such as:

Why wasn't Robert Smithson an environmentalist? (I know because I read his writings, but it's surprising.)

Why does Clarence Major prefer the poetry of John Berryman over the "New American" poets? (cf. Mackey on Major in Discrepant Engagement).

What are Ian Hamilton Finlay's political views? (I.e. why is he, who in many ways seems so much milder in temperament than a Bruce Andrews, more clearly agrarian-rightist-revolutionary and someone like BA a leftist?) Who, then, becomes the more "elitist" artist, the rural aristocratic Finlay or the urban cosmopolitan Andrews? And why do the poetics of a Marxist like Hugh MacDiarmid seem invariably more conservative than Finlay's?

A recent one I came across: apparently the German painter Gerhardt Richter was the prophet of pop art back in the day, introducing or at least championing Warhol and those folk, but now he seems to clearly on the monumental side -- large-scale abstract paintings, with a near classical sense of balance, or perhaps romantic sense of sturm and drang -- with someone like Kiefer in opposition to the "democratic" vision of someone like Polke. How does that happen?

Why are poets like Drew Milne and Jeremy Prynne, the former of whom is a recognized Marxist scholar, more or less perceived, by the Americans aware of their work, as somewhat reclusive, decidedly "highbrow" poets (I think in the tradition of Thomas Gray)? (My question is also whether Milne recognizes any sort of camaraderie among the American language poets since his introduction to the anthology of Marxist literary criticism he edited with Terry Eagleton seemed to suggest a parallel series of ideas, despite the very different temperament.)

(Sorry to present an exclusively male list here, but nobody comes to mind right now as presenting this sort of dilemma, though I guess Moriko Mori, who's a bit young to be well known, walks a pretty interesting line between conservative "Buddhism" and her techno-narcissistic-adoration.)

Actually, more women do come to mind: why is Barbara Kruger using techniques explored by proto-fascist artists, including some of their color schemes, to present purportedly progressive feminist progaganda? Is this art or social work?

Joan Houlihan <[redacted]> on 07/22/99 09:39:55 AM

Please respond to UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
cc: (bcc: Brian Stefans/Trade/RandomHouse)
Subject: Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize

Well, not exactly. I agree that:

The work is not the man.
The prize is not the man.
Therefore, the man is neither the prize nor the work.

However:
The prize is the both work and the man.
There has to be work to be a prize; and, by implication, there has to be a man (or woman) to be work. The ratio of man to prize increases in relation to how "political" the selection criteria are.

In general, I feel that ethical considerations of the writer's life should be entirely separate from considerations of the work--not that ethical concerns shouldn't be considered, discussed, dissected, etc., just that they shouldn't be seen as germane to the work. At all. A close-up of anyone's life reveals multiple layers, "selves" and contradictions--the study of personality is an interesting one. However, in the case of a writer, their biography is merely another footnote, and maybe a totally misleading footnote at that. A critique of the work, on the other hand, is much closer to the writer's "self."

> The work is not the man, neither is the prize the work. The prize, as i think you are saying, is a political gesture apart from the work.
>
> _____
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

328. Maria Damon
Re: query
Wed 28 Jul 1999

thanks to all who have mailed the coach house press info. much appreciated.

↑ Index

329. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: 1999 Books
Wed 28 Jul 1999

For starters:

Try - Cole Swensen
The Removes - Andrew Joron (pub. date states 1998, but it didn't appear till this year).
Polyverse - Lee Ann Brown

Patrick Pritchett

↑ Index

330. Taylor Brady
Re: RADIO STATION KPFA, BERKELEY
Wed 28 Jul 1999

David,

Thanks for passing this along to the list. Those in or around the Bay Area should know that a large-scale rally is being planned for this Saturday, 7/31, assembling at 11am at UC Berkeley's Sproul Plaza and marching to Martin Luther King Park. Also, lunch-hour leafletting continues outside the downtown SF offices of the Fineman Group (?), an expensive PR firm hired illegally hired to do spin control by the Pacifica Foundation (and paid with the contributions of listeners who overwhelmingly oppose the board's recent course of action).

News over the SavePacifica e-list this morning is that the Pacifica Board might well be meeting today for the purposes of putting the Palmer "fire sale" memo into action. Those concerned should check out the websites at the end of Trane DeVore's message - each contains addresses, fax numbers, etc., for Pacifica board members, California state legislators, legal defense funds, and other necessaries. It's especially urgent that Californians convince the legislature to conduct its investigation into the possibility of revoking Pacifica's nonprofit charter (something they were planning on doing anyway) on an emergency basis, in order to respond to this immediate threat. Listees in other states might want to check into actions in their area: Is there a local radio station that carries Pacifica programming? Has that station's board passed a resolution yet condemning the illegal power grab by the Pacifica board of directors? Those with academic affiliations might also want to write to the powers that be at U Penn, where board chair (and Clinton shill) Mary Frances Berry is a faculty member, to express their concern over her obvious failure to understand that university's free speech policies.

More on this as things develop...

Best,
Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group [mailto:[redacted]]
On Behalf Of david bromige Sent: Friday, July 23, 1999 2:56 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: RADIO STATION KPFA, BERKELEY

Listfellows : I am posting this message from the poet Trane DeVore because I agree with him that the closure of KPFA radio would be the final nail in our coffin. For decades now, increasingly, as corporations swallow up the media, KPFA has been the only source I know of for information whose dissemination is anywhere from distressing to deadly for corporate rule of the world. Believe me, this radio station shows NPR up for the wishy-washy liberals they unfortunately suppose they have to be. During the recent illegal war NATO conducted upon "the former Yugoslavia," via KPFA one heard every evening voices from Belgrade bearing witness to the reality of the destruction wrought in our names and with our money. It was through KPFA I first learned that the cluster-bombs our planes jettisoned over the Adriatic, were killing Italian fishermen---and causing the ports there to be shut down. First learned that, contrary to U.S. spokespersons, many U.S. planes had been shot down---I recall the number, then, before the bombing was stopped, as 37.

Clearly, such a station (which also opposed the illegal war on Iraq) is uncomfortable to the Clinton regime; and Marion Berry, his appointee to the body that oversees PBS, is now in charge of the Pacifica Foundation, the non-profit corp that oversees KPFA and 4 (I think) sibling-=stations. The current board of Pacifica illegally rewrote the mission statement, in contempt for KPFA's constituency, to attempt to turn the station into a middle-of-the-road (maindrain) outfit, unlikely under such a policy to disturb any thing or one. They may have notions of going even further. A sign held up at a recent rally here in my home town Sebastopol, claimed to cite a secret memo from Michael Palmer, the new Treasurer-Elect, to Lynn Chadwick, a Pacifica functionary, suggesting KPFA could be sold to corporate buyers for $70 million.

Anyone old enough to remember KQED TV before it went to commercials, will know the enormous destruction to its intelligence this commercialism ("Nature Is Brought to You By Exxon") has, with all deliberation, wrought. My god, how many years of "Are You Being Served"? "Are you being screwed" would be closer to the point.

Lynn Chadwick used to work for Voice of America, a propaganda station serving corporate interests by presenting an unreal americanism to the (un)suspecting 3rd world. I doubt she did a 180 on her way to Pacifica. The infiltration of the Pacifica board couldnt have been smoother if it had been cooked up in a rightwing thinktank. One notes the timing---Chadwick fires the KPFA station manager the week before KPFA was to celebrate its 50th birthday; Chadwick locks out the employees of this admittedly leftwing station and goes to canned music on July 13, as though to pre-empt any storming of any Bastille. I hear Robert Duncan saying, as more than once he did to me, "It doesn't have to be a plot, it works like one anyway," when I discerned the workings of one in the coincidence of more than one rightwing attack on democratic institutions. Dear gullible Robert.

Elan Fabbri, spokesperson for Pacifica, has declared that employees of KPFA who discussed the takeover on the air are "mutinous." To all you language-mechanics and discourse-analysts out there, this word-choice will surely be revealing. It reveals to me the authoritarian nature of Pacifica as currently constituted. Here in America we find mutiny very interesting. This is a nation born of mutiny. We have made "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The Caine Mutiny" into perennial favorites. When power becomes aloof, unsusceptible of appeal, what recourse have we, but mutiny?

I apologize for the length of this introduction to Trane's letter. Please read that, and, if you feel so moved, please spread the word. The more people who know of this, the more difficult it will be for Pacifica to continue its illegal rewriting of its historical mission, the more difficult it will be to sell KPFA down the river. We need to get people all over the world stirred up, we need the protest to reach proportions where even the bought media can't ignore it. KPFA is a strong expression of the conscience of America, and America with a silenced conscience will bring ruin throughout the globe. Further ruin, I should have written.

> As many of you probably know by now, the Pacifica Foundation has removed all staff from KPFA and is running canned programs from the vaults. KPFA, a free-speech bastion and community radio station for fifty years, is under assault by a parent organization that is decidedly undemocratic and is seeking to change, against the wishes of a broad and diverse listenership, the shape of programming at the station. This crisis began when Pacifica fired KPFA's popular station manager, Nicole Sawaya, without prior consultation with the staff who actually work at the station. The only explanation given for Sawaya's firing was that she was "not a good fit." The paid and unpaid staff at KPFA began to voice thier dissent on air and were told that they could not. The imposition of an internal gag rule, an crime against free speech at KPFA, led to the termination of two prominent broadcasters--Larry Bensky and Robbie Osman. Pacifica tried to censor the KPFA evening news, claiming that the crisis at KPFA was "not news"--as Eileen Alfenderi (sp.?), co-host of the KPFA evening news, pointed out that the evening news had not been asked to hold back on a story during the entire 24 years of her tenure. Pacifica hired armed guards to "protect" the staff at KPFA (the staff is unanimously opposed to this); these guards were obviously put in place to intimidate the staff. On Tuesday, Dennis Bernstein broadcast a show about the crisis at KPFA and was forcibly removed from the station by the armed guards. The KPFA evening news tried to report on this, but was forced from the air. Pacifica has been running canned programming on the airwaves ever since. There has been a massive outcry against this violent and undemocratic move by the Pacifica Foundation. A series of statements condemning the Pacifica Foundation's acts has been recorded and should be available over the web soon. People protesting this action include Alice Walker, June Jordon, Jerry Brown, and Barbara Lee, just to name a few. It is imperative that anyone who supports free speech and anti-corporate community run radio to do what they can to help out at this critical juncture. KPFA was founded by pacifists and is one of the only radio stations that regularly produces shows on Latin America, corporate power, gay and lesbian issues, labor issues, issues that concern minorities and people of color, environmental issues, and the list goes on. KPFA is also a vital source for alternative forms of music and a voice in the local music scene. I urge you to contact your Representatives, your Congresspeople, and even your local politicians. We must not lose KPFA. For more information, and to put your name on the list of contacts for protest actions, please contact www.savepacifica.net, or www.radio4all.org/freepacifica.

Thank you,

Sincerely, Trane DeVore

PLEASE pass this e-mail on to any interested parties.

↑ Index

331. KENT JOHNSON
WCW on women
Wed 28 Jul 1999

Since there is some discussion about WCW's special feelings for Black women, this comment of his might be considered in piecing together the bigger picture:

"Suppose all women were delightful, the ugly, the short, the fat, the intellectual, the stupid, even the old-- and making a virtue of their qualities, each for each, made themselves available to men, some man, any man--without greed. What a world it could be-- for women!... Take for instance the fat: If she were not too self-conscious, did not regret that she were not lissome and quick afoot but gave herself, full-belly to the sport! What a game it would make! All would then be, in the best sense, beautiful--entertaining to the mind as to the eye but especially to that part of a man which we so mistakenly call the intellect... He would be free, freed to the full completion of his desires."

↑ Index

332. Stephen Vincent
Re: RADIO STATION KPFA, BERKELEY
Wed 28 Jul 1999

Re: KPFA

In response to David Bromige's great note and other list members' contributions, I have sent the following letter to Dr. Mary Frances Berry and other members of the National Pacific Board. I urge others to write. I have provided the Board member contact info as well as other important contacts and events at the end of my letter:

>>Dear Dr. Mary Fances Berry: I am writing to protest what I understand is your proposal to the National Pacific Board to sell member owned station KPFA. As a listening member of the San Francisco Bay Area community, I am appalled by this proposal, your support of the current station's repression, as well as your continued false statements about the demographics and the leadership of the station. That you have resorted to the old George Bush 'race card' tactic (in this case using "white middle aged men") to attempt to undermine racial and gender inclusive support for the station is more than appalling. Instead of true, in fact, your actions can only be perceived as a cover for the kind corporate carpet-bagging that has already compromised much of what currently constitutes National Public Radio and Television.
The Northern California community raised the funds to build and support this station. Part of the reason for our support is to protect the station from deals with "sponsors." I ask that you and the national board respect the integrity of its foundations and put your energies either into rebuilding our confidence, or simply resigning from your positions.

Stephen Vincent<<

r. Mary Frances Berry
[redacted]

Ken Ford
[redacted]

David Acosta
[redacted]

Jewelle Taylor-Gibbs
[redacted]

June Makela
[redacted]

Frank Millspaugh
[redacted]

ALSO: CALL OR E-MAIL YOUR CONGRESSIONAL REPRESENTATIVE TODAY... ESPECIALLY ANNA ESHOO [redacted] AND BARBARA LEE [redacted] AND URGE THEM TO CONTACT MARY FRANCES BERRY IMMEDIATELY!

ALSO: CALL OR E-MAIL SENATOR BARBARA BOXER AND URGE THAT SHE GET INVOLVED! [redacted]

ALSO: CALL STATE SENATOR JOHN BURTON [redacted] AND ASSEMBLYMAN ANTONIO VILLARAIGOSA [redacted] AND URGE THAT THEIR LEGISLATIVE HEARING ON PACIFICA'S FISCAL RESPONSIBILITY BE HELD ON AN EMERGENCY BASIS!

AND PLAN TO COME TO OUR MASS RALLY THIS SATURDAY...7/31... AT HISTORIC "FREE SPEECH" SPROUL PLAZA ON THE U.C. BERKELEY CAMPUS AT 11 A.M. (March past KPFA to downtown Martin Luther King Jr. Park for 1:30 rally.)

http://www.savepacifica.net

↑ Index

333. Jamie Perez
Petrarch meet Mr. Newton
Wed 28 Jul 1999

Laura and Petrarch: An Intriguing Case of Cyclical Love Dynamics by Sergio Rinaldi

http://epubs.siam.org/sam-bin/dbq/article/30592

I think this may be very interesting to some on this list (see abstract below). First to note that it is from the SIAM (Science and Industry Advance with Mathematics!) Journal on Applied Mathematics [the exclamation is mine]. Maybe you've already seen it? Maybe it's an Alan Sokial(?)-like hoax for all I know, I haven't read it yet, but am curious. Maybe Sergio is on this list? Maybe he should be. Comes in convenient PDF and many other options.

jamie.p

.....

Abstract: Three ordinary differential equations are proposed to model the dynamics of love between Petrarch, a celebrated Italian poet of the 14th century, and Laura, a beautiful but married lady. The equations are nonlinear but can be studied through the singular perturbation approach if the inspiration of the poet is assumed to have very slow dynamics. In such a case, explicit conditions are found in the appeals of Laura and Petrarch and in their behavioral parameters that guarantee the existence of a globally stable slow-fast limit cycle. These conditions are consistent with the relatively clear portrait of the two personalities one gets while reading the poems addressed to Laura. On the basis of the scarce and only qualitative information available, the calibration of the parameters is also performed; the result is that the calibrated model shows that the poet's emotions followed for about 20 years a quite regular cyclical pattern ranging from the extremes of ecstasy to despair. All these findings agree with the recent results of Frederic Jones, who, through a detailed stylistic and linguistic analysis of the poems inspired by Laura, has discovered Petrarch's emotional cycle in a fully independent way.

↑ Index

334. Robert Freedman
Re: 1999 Books
Wed 28 Jul 1999

----- Original Message -----
From: Susan Wheeler <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>

Sent: Thursday, July 22, 1999 4:58 PM
Subject: 1999 Books

> For several reasons, I've a question for y'all: what are the best books
of > poetry (collections, summations, book-lengths, etc.) published in 1999 > you've come upon?
>
> Susan

I don't know about the best, but Donald Allen's reissued, "New American Poetry ..." is welcome on my shelves. Cole Swensen's "North" is one of my favorites, but it doesn't qualify for 1999, so I'll choose her "Try," which I believe did come out in 1999.

I have a feeling "Elegy for the Southern Drawl," by Rodney Jones will not be a big favorite in these here parts, but I'll mention it anyway. My tastes are, I guess, sloppily eclectic, having come from no training and a lot of reading.

Hope this helps,

Bob Freedman

p.s. It looks like this is going to both the Poetics listserv AND the UB Poetics discussion. I'm not a member of the latter, but I hit "Reply to All."

↑ Index

335. Brian Stefans
Re: persona
Wed 28 Jul 1999

Hi Dodie,

You're probably right about this, I was just being picky with words in a way. There are many levels of impersonation that you can point to, a virtual rainbow coalition. For instance glammy-camp personas are hardly personae on the level of, say, Al Gore being coached into the presidential persona. The persona you write about, the cocktail party one, reminds me of the movie "Safe." There are varieties of transvetitism which I think would be interesting terms of poetry; my own explorations into this involve a brief stint as Arthur Rimbaud in a "love" poem called "Verl" (a prose piece inspired by the letters, which I guess kind of ties into Acker's personas), poems as a fake English poet (partly inspired by a certain fake Japanese poet), and the various times I've done my own pip-squeaky imitations of Pound, etc. I'd like it if more poets were transvestites; most of us are rather boring in normal life so why not, and if fiction's becoming so passe next to film and "new sentence" poetry then there aren't many venues for identity performance left for a writer. And since personae become, in their ways, symbols, they surface above the semiotic as social constructs that people can understand without having to become subject to them, since the falseness is so foregrounded; i.e. there would be more meat on the bones of a deconstructive poetics than say language-style all-over razzling and hyper-collage aesthetics would seem to permit. Entire senates of puppet plastic personalities, but always tinged with the "pathos" of discipline and responsibility, of a sort that poetry only seems capable of.

But what about when writers adopt certain tones and methods in their writing -- I think of Jennifer Moxley here, she's probably the only one right now -- which, in their stateliness of pace and foregrounded anachronism (i.e writing as if certain 18th century value systems, such as the emphasis on "sensibility", were still the ascendant, and countering other values such as those centered around the "cult of speed" and information, from Marinetti to O'Hara, for one), go up against any easy romantic notion of "sincerity" and yet are actually using these styles as a way to break back into the "lyric," i.e. the pure soul as speaking, "suffering" thing. Is this a sort of transvetitism (without the overtones of freakishness, but with the cross-gendered aspect)?

Dodie Bellamy <[redacted]> on 07/21/99 03:20:17 PM

Please respond to UB Poetics discussion group
<[redacted]>

To: [redacted]
cc: (bcc: Brian Stefans/Trade/RandomHouse)
Subject: persona

At 9:30 AM -0400 7/21/99, Brian Stefans wrote:
>
>Consequently, I don't know what your jibe on "feigning a persona" has to do >with what I wrote since I didn't write about personae, nor about "feigning"
>one (which is kind of impossible, people usually "adopt" a persona, or
>"feign" a personality -- "feigning a persona" would put you two steps >behind the surface).

Brian,

I'm intrigued by this idea of feigning a persona as opposed to adopting one. Adopting one sounds like putting it on proudly, even buying into it. Feigning one reminds me of those endless social occasions when I've known what kind of persona was required but I couldn't buy into it, didn't have the heart to fully embrace it, or was lacking in the social skills to pull it off. In those instances,

I'd say that feigning a persona would be much more appropriate a category. An awkward ineffectiveness. Cocktail parties come to mind as a dangerous site. Also much of the humor on TV sitcoms, not that I watch them enough to be an authority.

In writing, too, I think this comes up. Kathy Acker's personas, for instance, their delightfulness is in the sense of feigning rather than adopting. Pathos unbalancing power.

When I hit reply to all in Eudora, the speech function kicked in for some reason and my computer started reading your message outloud to me in this mechanical reverb voice. Creepy, but appropriate somehow.

Dodie

↑ Index

336. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers
Re: 1999 Books
Wed 28 Jul 1999

I vote for Susan Thackery's first book, pub. by Listening Chamber, empty GATE.

Todd Baron
ReMap

↑ Index

337. Parks
Action Appeal 2
Wed 28 Jul 1999

Pacifica Foundation's executive committee is to vote on sale of KPFA this evening or tomorrow a.m.

If you haven't already, please consider contacting the names below with statements of protest.

Poet Jack Folie has (had) a poetry show on KPFA Wednesdays. Can his silence and invisibility during the struggle be taken as pro-Pacifica? Or he may know much more about the dispute and recent history of disputes than the average listener and so have opinions or insights that preclude membership in the movement; if anyone is familiar with him, please beseach him to elucidate publicly.

Despite weeks of denial from Mary Frances Berry, Lynn Chadwick, and their various public relations spokespeople, PACIFICA RADIO IS PREPARING TO AUTHORIZE THE SALE OF THE NATION'S FIRST FREE SPEECH, COMMUNITY CONTROLLED RADIO STATION.

The vote could come as early as today (Wednesday 7/28) in a telephone meeting of the Pacifica executive committee.

Pacifica national board sources say a telephone discussion yesterday about the Pacifica crisis was dominated, as usual, by Dr. Berry, who insisted that KPFA be sold. She said it had become "unmanageable." (KPFA WAS, OF COURSE, "MANAGEABLE" FOR FIFTY YEARS BEFORE BERRY INSTALLED CHADWICK AND HER WRECKING CREW OF ARMED GUARDS, LAWYERS, PERSONNEL TERMINATION SPECIALISTS AND PUBLIC RELATIONS FLACKS.)

KPFA, located on the commercial FM band, may be worth as much as $75 million to Pacifica.

There were also indications in yesterday's board meeting that Berry and Chadwick's actions may be bankrupting Pacifica, and that the executive committee may seek a large (perhaps as much as $5 million) loan to pay for their enormous "security," legal, personnel, and public relations expenses. THIS LOAN WOULD ALMOST CERTAINLY DEFAULT, GIVING PACIFICA ONE MORE EXCUSE TO SELL KPFA.

PLEASE CONTACT IMMEDIATELY:
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEMBERS:

Dr. Mary Frances Berry
[redacted]

Ken Ford
[redacted]

David Acosta
[redacted]

Jewelle Taylor-Gibbs
[redacted]

June Makela
[redacted]

Frank Millspaugh
[redacted]

Bob Farrell
[redacted] X255
[redacted]

Pacifica's new million-dollar PR man:

Michael Fineman
[redacted]

Do You Yahoo!?
Free instant messaging and more at http://messenger.yahoo.com

↑ Index

338. George Bowering
Re: Manifest Destiny
Thu 29 Jul 1999

> If I understand Hilton correctly (Hilton, are you there?), the _secular_ use of the Book of Revelations was more as an available source for rhetoric supportive of a very different kind of millenarianism than the descent of chaos/reign of the saints/end of time kind. I'm willing to be corrected

Okay. If you take a look, you'll see that it's the Book of Revelation

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

339. George Bowering
Re: $3.50: Summer vacation in Scandinavia!
Thu 29 Jul 1999

> I think I've discovered where poetry might be, had there never been a "Wasteland" to set us back 30 years! With the recent interest in international poetry demonstrated by such publications as Boundary2,

Interest in international poetry is not all that recent in places other than the USA

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

340. George Bowering
Re: 1999 Books
Thu 29 Jul 1999

> For several reasons, I've a question for y'all: what are the best books of poetry (collections, summations, book-lengths, etc.) published in 1999 you've come upon?
>
> Susan

For me, they have included Erin Moure's _A Frame of the Book_ and Wayde Compton's _49th Parallel Psalm_

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

341. Owen Hill
Re: 1999 Books
Thu 29 Jul 1999

Susan:

Doombook by Michael Price (The Figures) has a '98 copyright but it didn't start getting around 'till '99. I'm on about my third reading. Great book!

Owen

↑ Index

342. Owen Hill
Re: Action Appeal 2
Thu 29 Jul 1999

I can't reallly speak for Jack, but:

Jack Foley is not invisible! I live at Telegraph and Dwight in Berkeley. A couple of days ago I looked out my window to see Jack and another poet, Ivan Arguelles, taking part in an inpromptu KPFA rally. Yes, I did go downstairs and join the rally, but I missed Jack, who was playing pied -piper at the front of the march.

Owen

↑ Index

343. Owen Hill
Surrealist Women
Thu 29 Jul 1999

There will be a belated publication party for Surrealist Women: An International Anthology (University of Texas Press) on Sunday August 1 3-5pm at Moe's Books, 2476 Telegraph Ave. Berkeley Ca.

Nancy Joyce Peters, Myrna Rochester, and Marie Wilson will read from the anthology.

The hosts have promised that the wine will be drinkable and the cheese better than average.

↑ Index

344. Steven Shoemaker
Re: Modernists in the basement
Thu 29 Jul 1999

That quote from Williams is new to me, and certainly disturbing. And I agree that it's the sort of statment we don't want to forget about, but need to try to understand. For me, though, that understanding involves asking how someone with a view of culture as interesting, complex and "open" as Williams's lapses into this sort of thing. It still seems to me ridiculous to put him in the same category as Pound as an anti-Semite, unless you want to make the category meaningless. Pound's race-hatred is rabid, and his calls for fascist "antisepsis," i.e. genocide, are clear. I can't imagine Williams making those Italian radio broadcasts any more than I can imagine Pound writing "At the Ballgame." Another pretty instructive exercise is to compare, say, Jefferson and/or Mussolini with In the American.

My point, again, is not to heroize Williams, but to look at what he actually said (yes, including comments like the one we're talking about here) and did, and then to weigh the whole record. We might even find, as I tried to show in the piece I posted earlier, that there's some interesting (social) thinking going on...stuff we might miss if we aren't careful.

Alright, that's probably enough from me on this subject, and I have to go back to packing boxes for a move in the 96 degree swelter... Steve

↑ Index

345. Tom Orange
new OPEN LETTER available
Thu 29 Jul 1999

OPEN LETTER, Tenth Series, No. 5, Spring 1999
Pulp Theory (Guest Edited by Peter Jaeger and Scott Pound)
Now Available

Contents:
"Introduction" Peter Jaeger and Scott Pound
"Somber Up!" Deanna Ferguson
"Rosicrucian Tourism" Eleni Stecopoulos
"Six Poems" Nancy Shaw
"Form is Form" Rob Manery
"This & Thaz" Miles Champion
"Lachrymose Encaustic / Abrasive Tear" Charles Bernstein
"Oval Orifice" Cris Cheek and Keith Tuma
"Truncated/troncated" Caroline Bergvall
"Ouch of Here" Bruce Andrews
"Weory of Thriting" Clint Burnham
"True Fiction" Andrew J. Patterson
"Practice / Editing / The Critic" Mark Sutherland
"The Engineers of Indeterminacy in Post-Structural Poetics: An Idle Conversation Between the Author and Bakhtin's Dog" Karl Jirgins
"An Excerpt from Freud's 'The Key to Success'" Keith Hartman
"Questions for Peter and Scott" Stephen Cain
"The Trouble With Graduate School: A Found Critique" Darren Werschler-Henry
"from _Empire_" Deirdre Kovac
"Apostrophe to Furniture" Dan Farrell
"Situation: Non-Indifference: Theory and Current Poetics" Tom Orange
"Lows Blow" Louis Cabri
"On Singing Pictures in Poems as Verse" Wendy Kramer
"And Sometimes" Christian Bok
"Metaplasia / Metaplasm" Michael Basinski
"Sonnet 23" Tim Atkins
"Jerk" Jeff Derksen

From the introduction: "This issue of _Open Letter_ calls attention to the sometimes graceless aspects of theory in an attempt to shatter its image as urbane discourse. Theory is indeed a pulp genre, and a well-known emblem of intellectual thuggery in universities. Its sensational and often poor quality writing, full of arch gestures and bungled paybacks, offers all who seek solace in it a measure of joyful tedium. And yet, outside the academy, theory becomes something entirely different. It's picked up by artists who literalize and actualize its precepts, wiping out the distinction between theory and practice...." "We asked a number of contributors--some of whom have been publishing since the 1970s--to write about the importance of theory to their work. Unlike the academic industrialization of theory, in which researchers use a canonical series of texts as tools to read other texts, we wanted to question theory's importance to formally innovative writing. While some of the writers in this issue now work in the university context, we offered them and others a site for a return to the socially critical role occupied by theory prior to its current accomodation by the university. So a possible title for this untitled issue could have been _The Dis- Accomodation of Theory_ because it shows a discomfort with the present moment...."

(my $0.02: readers of recent _Philly Talks_ and of Jeff Derksen's _Disgust and Overdetermination_ issue of _Open Letter_ will find a lot of cross- dialogue contained herein.)

Individual issues are available for CAN$7.00 within Canada, US$7.00 international (personal checks are fine in either case) from:

499 Dufferin Ave.
London, Ontario N6B 2A1
Canada

Address queries to the same or email [redacted]

Tom Orange

↑ Index

346. Poetics List

Poem on 'good things about turning 80' / Chapman

Thu 29 Jul 1999

---

had to reformat. Chris

--

From: "Heather Chapman" <[redacted]>
Date: Mon, 26 Jul 1999 21:26:11 +1000

Hi All,

I'm trying to find a poem or some verse on the good things about turning = 80, or old age, ...

Any suggestions about where best to look, or some verse itself would be = much appreciated.

thanks in advance,

Heather.

↑ Index

347. Poetics List
Strings, new Flash work at Vispo by Dan Waber / Andrews
Thu 29 Jul 1999

---

had to reformat; please see the Welcome Message for guidelines regarding use of HTML (briefly, "no HTML").

Chris

--

From: Jim Andrews <[redacted]>
Date: Tue, 27 Jul 1999 00:49:24 -0700

Strings is a playful series of Flash pieces about relationships. It also raises questions about the presence/absence of the hand in this medium. Visual artists often criticise the lack of presence of the hand in digital art. In Strings, the hand is and is not present, is transformed, is transforming, is writing, is written, coded, morphed.

The guitar; then the electric guitar. The pen; then the electric pen.

Strings, by Dan Waber, new at Vispo:
http://www.vispo.com/guests/DanWaber

↑ Index

348. Poetics List
Naropa from a distance
Thu 29 Jul 1999

Colleen Seltz (VP of enrollment at Naropa) requested that I forward this announcement. Chris

--

From:[redacted]
Date: 7/28/99 8:58 PM +0000

ANNOUNCING NAROPA ..... FROM A DISTANCE

Beginning Fall Semester 1999, we are pleased to announce that the Naropa Institute will be offering select classes from the heart of our unique academic curriculum, from a distance.

The Naropa Institute is a private fully accredited liberal arts college in Boulder, Colorado, characterized by a Buddhist inspired heritage and a unique contemplative approach to education.

Naropa's Department of Writing and Poetics, inaugurated as the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied 25 years ago by Allen Ginsberg and Ann Waldman offers accredited BA and MFA degrees and hosts the internationally known Summer Writing Program each year.

In Fall 99 Naropa will be offering six Writing classes as well as classes in Religion and Psychology, via the World Wide Web using the latest Internet technology. All classes are offer for credit and are available to non-degree seeking students as well as currently matriculated students. Please share this information with those who may be interested. For further information and details please visit our web site at www.naropa.edu. The classes in Writing available for Fall 99 are as follows:

WRITER'S CRAFT
NCCA 250e - 3 credits - Bill Scheffel

Course Description "Poetry is not an expression of the party line. It's that time of night, lying in bed, thinking what you really think, making the private world public; that's what the poet does". Allen Ginsberg

Although this is a writing workshop in creative non-fiction, Allen Ginsberg's statement expresses the heart of the class. Our goal is polished and exciting prose that also reveals the gifts, nuances and idiosyncrasies of each participant's life. Student will develop the craft of writing and the courage to tell their own stories. We will offer feedback to each other in a community spirit of trust and encouragement. Many ideas and methods will be given to spark the creative process. Reading from a sourcebook of essays and stories (and even some poetry) by writers such as Annie Dillard, Edward Abbey, James Baldwin, Margueritte Duras and many others will be an integral part of class. Natalie Goldberg's Writing Down the Bones will be a required text. Open to writers of any level of experience.

About the Instructor Bill Scheffel has an MFA in Writing and Poetics from the Naropa Institute where he has taught Shambhala Meditation Practicum for eight years and, for three years, Writer's Craft. He has taught his writing workshop Chance, Synchronicty & Mind-Writing in Boulder, Colorado and various U.S. cities. He has published two chapbooks, has read his poetry on National Public Radio and has been published in Bombay Gin, Owen-Wister Review, Water & Stone and other publications.

THE EXPOSITORY ESSAY
WRI 534e- 3 credits - Lee Christopher
Course Description
In French essay means an attempt, a test, or a trial. In this course, students will experiment with their own thoughts within the structure of the essay's various forms. They will explore many of the possibilities creative nonfiction affords them. For models, students will read essays by Montaigne, Virginia Woolf, Lu Hsun, Carlos Fuentes, Jorge Luis Borges, Ezra Pound, Henry Thoreau, James Baldwin, Andrienne Rich, Annie Dillard, Alice Walker, George Orwell, William Carlos Williams, E.B. White, Andrei Codrescu, and Ralph Waldo Emerson. To further broaden their perspective, students will use as model essayists the "Beats" such as Allen Ginsberg, Jack Kerouac, and William Burroughs. The most common grammar and punctuation problems will be addressed. In addition, each student will learn to recognize and correct his or her own error patterns. As part of the writing process, time will be spent in reflection upon the ways in which problems were addressed and solved in our essays.

About the Instructor Lee Christopher M.Ed., Tulane University; M.F.A., Writing and Poetics, The Naropa Institute. In addition to teaching at Naropa, Lee teaches English at Metropolitan State College of Denver and is the executive editor of The New Censorship. Since 1996, she has been Peace Jam Foundation's lead writer for curricula for Nobel Peace Laureates Betty Williams, Rigoberta Menchu Tum, Oscar Arias, Desmond Tutu, Nelson Mandela, Aung San Suu Kyi, Mairead Corrigan Maguire, and His Holiness the Dali Lama. Her most recent chapbook is The Hunt.

REBEL ANGELS
WRI 500e- 3 credits - Lee Christopher
Course Description
In this course students will study the history of the "beat generation" with special emphasis on the writings the writers of this phenomenal era produced. Students will use as models Allen Ginsberg, Jack Kerouac, Gregory Corso, William Burroughs, Neal Cassady, Peter Orlovsky, Diane Di Prima, John Wieners, Amiri Baraka, Joanne Kyger, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Lew Welch, Lenore Kandel, Philip Whalen, Bob Kaufman, Michael McClure, Gary Synder and others.

Students will come to understand the provocativeness and durability of Beat Literature. In addition, students will write their own visions in the multiple forms taught us by these courageous writers of the "beat generation."

About the Instructor Lee Christopher M.Ed., Tulane University; M.F.A., Writing and Poetics, The Naropa Institute. In addition to teaching at Naropa, Lee teaches English at Metropolitan State College of Denver and is the executive editor of The New Censorship. Since 1996, she has been Peace Jam Foundation's lead writer for

curricula for Nobel Peace Laureates Betty Williams, Rigoberta Menchu Tum, Oscar Arias, Desmond Tutu, Nelson Mandela, Aung San Suu Kyi, Mairead Corrigan Maguire, and His Holiness the Dali Lama. Her most recent chapbook is The Hunt.

POETRY WORKSHOP: GREAT COMPANIONS
WRI 539e- 3 credits - Lisa Jarnot
Course Description
Dante said to Virgil "Thou art my master and my author". What poet would you name as Dante names Virgil? The focus of this workshop is poetic lineage, imitation and influence. We'll look at specific examples (Allen Ginsberg and William Blake, Frank O'Hara and Vladimir Mayakovsky, Bernadette Mayer and Catullus) and we'll also explore the ways that we might expand our own poetry by imitating various styles and forms.

About theInstructor Lisa Jarnot is the author of Some Other Kind of Mission, Sea Lyrics and Heliopolis. Her second full-length collection of poems, Ring of Fire, is forthcoming from Zoland Books. She is also the co-editor of An Anthology of

New (American) Poetry (Talisman House, 1998) and was the editor of the Poetry Project Newsletter from 1996-1998. She has taught classes in writing and literature at Brown University, Long Island University, The Naropa Institute and The Poetry Project in New York City. She is currently writing a biography of the San Francisco poet Robert Duncan. During the Spring of 2000 she will be a visiting professor at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

LITERATURE SEMINAR: THE FEELING TONE
WRI 530e- 3 credits - Bobbie Louise Hawkins

Course Description
In this Reading and Writing seminar we will address the work of four writers as writers: namely, how do they achieve their unique tone and diction; and what can we use of their mode in our own work. This is not primarily a writing class, it is a Literature class, but I teach writing to beginning writers and I have found this approach to be useful for non-writers as well.

The writers and books will be (in this order):Evan Connell (Mrs. Bridge), Fay Weldon (Life and Loves of a She-Devil) Michael Ondaatje (Coming Through Slaughter) Colette (Earthly Paradise).

About the Instructor Bobbie Louise Hawkins has written twelve books of fiction, non-fiction, poetry and performance monologues as well as a one-hour play for the PBS series, The Listening Ear. Flying Fish has a CD of her performance, "Live at the Great American Music Hall". In 1981 she participated in the "One World Poetry Festival" in Amsterdam and the same year was awarded a Fellowship in Literature from the National Endowment for the Arts. The Los Angeles Times said: "She excels at the short take, the oblique view, and the fundamental nugget of actuality". The New York Times wrote: "A superb impressionist, as well as a salty prose writer." She has performed her work at the Joseph Papp

Public Theater, Bottom Line, and Folk City in NYC, at The Great American Music Hall in San Francisco, at the Canterbury Festival and the Poetry Society in England where she worked with Apples and Snakes. In 1988 she was invited by Anne Waldman to oversee the Prose Track in the MFA Writing Program.

PROSE WORKSHOP: SCULPTING PROSE
WRI 541e - 3 credits - T. Burke, Jr.

Course Description For prose writers who want to achieve familiarity with dramatic structure. For dramatists looking to infuse more lyricism into their work. The course will explore the singular demands of narrative and dramatic writing.... Determining the form in which a story can be most effectively presented. Revealing character through action and the dynamics of dialogue. Adapting classic and original prose into dramatic action. Plus, what constitutes a scene. How classic dramatic structure can be applied to a narrative. Self-editing as a creative skill.... At the end of the course, each writer will have a vivid picture of what form best suits his/her style, approach and sensibility and will possess a much stronger command of their craft.

About the Instructor T. Burke, Jr. has a Masters in Writing and Poetics from the Naropa Institute. Last year, he received an Honor's Award from New Millennium Writing. He is the co-author of 'American Reel' -- a feature film starring David Carradine and Mariel Hemingway, currently in release; and 'Stripmall Bohemia' -- a novel which has been optioned for film by Upside Down Pictures. With writer-performer Vicki Lewis, he is adapting 'For the Love of Esme' for network television. He is a three time Fellow to The Virginia Center for the Creative Arts and has been presented with a Cable Ace Award and an R.I.A.A. Golden Disc. Since 1986, he has been a member of the Writers Guild of America.

Please visit our web site at www.naropa.edu for further information and to pre-register, as well as for listings of other online classes available.

↑ Index

349. Jordan Davis
take a left at Constructed-identity
Thu 29 Jul 1999

Brian --

I'd add Lisa Robertson's "Debbie" as an example of someone who foregrounds anachronism [i.e. imitating models outside the temporal estuary of plus/minus forty years].

Jordan

↑ Index

350. Mark Weiss
Re: 1999 Books
Thu 29 Jul 1999

Two books by Armand Schwerner:

From National Poetry Foundation, _The Tablets__, packaged with a CD of Armand reading several sections.
From Junction Press, _Selected Shorter Poems_.

Backchannel for ordering information.

Great review so far in PW, more to come in the August 5 Library Journal.

↑ Index

351. Julie Johnson best books of 99 (so far...)
Thu 29 Jul 1999

Here is an (extremely) partial list of my favorite book this year, thus far...

Tales of Murasaki & Other Poems, Martine Bellen
The Agency of Wind, Laynie Browne boundary 2 v. 26 no. 1, ed. Charles Bernstein
Other, ed. Richard Cadell & Peter Quartermain
The Case, Laura Moriarty
This Story is Mine, Emmanuel Hocquard
Polyverse, Lee Ann Brown

& my pick of the year...

Try, by Cole Swensen

↑ Index

352. derek beaulieu
Re: 1999 Books
Thu 29 Jul 1999

---

i think that nmy votes would have to go to:
gary barwin for "Outside the Hat" (Coach House Books) and the small press release "Donair Bottle Depot Laundromat: inglewood poems" by jill hartman (semi-precious press)

ciao
derek
----- Original Message -----
From: George Bowering <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>
Sent: July 29, 1999 1:58 AM
Subject: Re: 1999 Books

> >For several reasons, I've a question for y'all: what are the best books
of > >poetry (collections, summations, book-lengths, etc.) published in 1999 > >you've come upon?
> >
> >Susan
>
> For me, they have included Erin Moure's _A Frame of the Book_ and Wayde > Compton's _49th Parallel Psalm_
>
>
>
>
>
> George Bowering.

> ,
>
>
> fax: [redacted]
>

↑ Index

353. William Slaughter
Mudlark Poster No. 18 (1999)
Thu 29 Jul 1999

New and On View

_____

M U D L A R K

Poster No. 18 (1999) * * * On a Bluff at Elrod Mill Two Poems by Van K. Brock * * * My South, My Russia

Van K. Brock is Editor-in-Chief of International Quarterly. His most recent book is Unspeakable Strangers (Anhinga). His most recent chapbook is A Conversation with Martin Heidegger in English language original and German translation (Mudlark).

William Slaughter

_____

MUDLARK
An Electronic Journal of Poetry & Poetics Never in and never out of print...
E-mail: [redacted]
URL: http://www.unf.edu/mudlark

↑ Index

354. hassen
Re: WCW on women
Fri 30 Jul 1999

---

is it possible, do you think, that wcw was speaking with cheek of tongue here?

curious,
hassen

_____

> Since there is some discussion about WCW's special feelings for Black women, this comment of his might be considered in piecing together the bigger picture:

> "Suppose all women were delightful, the ugly, the short, the fat, the intellectual, the stupid, even the old-- and making a virtue of their qualities, each for each, made themselves available to men, some man, any man--without greed. What a world it could be-- for women!... Take for instance the fat: If she were not too self-conscious, did not regret that she were not lissome and quick afoot but gave herself, full-belly to the sport! What a game it would make! All would then be, in the best sense, beautiful--entertaining to the mind as to the eye but especially to that part of a man which we so mistakenly call the intellect... He would be free, freed to the full completion of his desires."

↑ Index

355. komninos zervos

Re: 1999 Books

Fri 30 Jul 1999

"close listening" edited by charles bernstein would have to be the best collection of essays on performance poetry i have ever read. i have been a professional performance poet since 1985 and i've always been made to feel inferior to the print poets of australia - because people who prefer print poetry were critiquing my work and the work of performance poets. we are not included in the anthologies, the canons, we are not winning any literary prizes, and our self publications are not even being archived in libraries. we will go unnoticed in the documentation of literary history. yet we perform our writings to school students, people in pubs, coffee lounges, the streets and generally to a very good response from our often unsuspecting audiences. i have never had anyone come up to me at a poetry reading and say that they would have prefered to have read these poems from a book. whilst some may say that performance poetry by the poet ties down a poem to one meaning, one interpretation of the poem, let me say that each time i read a poem to a new audience the poem becomes new, the audience and the ambiance of that particular reading rewites the poem. "close listening" has changed the way i see my artform, one which i had confidence and faith in, but one that was being continually put down by a language that was designed to comment on print poetry and print publication. bernstein's book has made me realize that, in fact, the audience for print poetry has been steadily decreasing since WW2, in australia last year oxford university press, penguin and university of queensland press dropped their australian poetry lists, and even when they were publishing australian poets, the print runs were 500-750 books, an incredibly small number even by australian standards. on the other hand, since WW2 we have seen a considerable increase in interest for performance poetry and the development of career performance poets like myself who actually make a living from performing their work around the country. black mountain and the beats, yefteshenko, dylan thomas, and the mersey beat poets from the uk had their affect in australia as well. at the moment we have about 15 performance poets, maybe more, who earn their living by speaking their poetry and another hundred or so who are semi-professional. in each capital city there is an active performance poetry scene. if anything, the print poets, like john tranter, les murray, bruce dawes, who have been popular in this country, have adopted some of the techniques of the performance poets, and more readily express their poetry in public.

"close listening" does not make an argument for performance poetry over published poetry but rather recognizes that both are different artforms, each with its own audience, each with its own critical language.

regards
komninos

At 07:58 PM 7/22/99 -0400, you wrote:
>For several reasons, I've a question for y'all: what are the best books of >poetry (collections, summations, book-lengths, etc.) published in 1999 >you've come upon?
>
>Susan
>
>
komninos's cyberpoetry site http://student.uq.edu.au/~s271502 cyberpoet@slv site http://www.experimedia.vic.gov.au/cyberpoet/komninos zervos, tel. [redacted]
lecturer in cyberstudies, school of arts,
gold coast campus,
griffith university,
pmb 50, gold coast mail centre queensland, 9726
australia.

↑ Index

356. jasfoley
Jack Folie
Fri 30 Jul 1999

I came back from Berkeley where I had just finished hosting a two hour show OUTSIDE the KPFA studios (at "Camp KPFA") to find this:

"Poet Jack Folie has (had) a poetry show on KPFA Wednesdays. Can his silence and invisibility during the struggle be taken as pro-Pacifica? Or he may know much more about the dispute and recent history of disputes than the average listener and so have opinions or insights that preclude membership in the movement; if anyone is familiar with him, please beseach him to elucidate publicly."

Where is this person getting his information?--not to mention the spelling of my name. I have hardly been "silent and invisible." I have consistently supported the protests at KPFA on the air, at rallies (where I have occasionally spoken), and in many conversations. Like everyone else on the staff, I am currently locked out of the station. I will participate in the mass rally and march on Saturday and do whatever I can to think about and resolve the crisis. I am featuring Nicole Sawaya (the ousted General Manager) at a PEN Oakland event. I do not support Pacifica.

Sincerely,

Jack Foley

↑ Index

357. Noam Scheindlin
NYC SUBLET
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Hello,

I will be subletting my Brooklyn apartment for the last two weeks of August. I live on a beautiful street in the great neighborhood of Greenpoint, home to many poets. Manhattan is easily accessible by G or L train, and Williamsburg is a quick walk away. My one speed bike is included and I'll even fix the brakes. My apartment is well lit, quiet, clean and overlooks my neighbors well tended gardens (you can look out the window and watch them tending it). There's a computer, plants, and lots of books. Cost is $350 + telephone calls and deposit.

If you are interested, please email me at [redacted].

Best,

Noam Scheindlin

↑ Index

358. Brian Stefans
Modernists in the basement
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Re:

>Another pretty instructive exercise is to compare, say, Jefferson and/or Mussolini with In the American.

I just recently read the anthology Fascism, edited by Roger Griffin for Oxford Univerisity Press, and then went back to looking at Pound's writing from Selected Essays and was struck by how the tone of EP's writings there, not to mention the content, is not so far off from the Italian section of this anthology, which isn't surprising but might be to those who abide by the "Pound wasn't a fascist, he was a clown" mentality which is occasionally put forth. EP was in fact much more anti-Semitic than the Italian fascists were at that time (at least officially), it seems to me at least.

↑ Index

359. Stephen Vincent
Re: Joanne Kyger
Fri 30 Jul 1999

If I may, a brief plug for PATZCUARO, a new, elegantly produced chapbook by Joanne Kyger. 30 pages. I don't have the price. Published by Blue Millennium Press, Box 958, Bolinas, CA 94924. A spacious, incredibly attentive, elegant eye; not afraid of the smart turn, situated within a baroque tension of ancient and contemporary, the poems provide a focused mix of pleasure and terror. I won't say ignore Joanne at peril. But "The Beautiful Adjectives and Magnificent Metaphors of Pablo Neruda," achieved thru appropriation of quotes of ten of his contemporaries, is well worth the price of admission. (Price & book can probably be gotten thru SPD?). End dee plug.

Cheers,
Stephen Vincent

↑ Index

360. Joan Houlihan
Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Brian,

I'm not familiar with all of your references, but you raise some interesting points.

--"work" as I've used it, IS the "seemingly isolated ("art-for-art's sake"), timeless artifact" as you put it. But you are positing another idea of work; i.e., that of an activity connected to the historical and individual context of the writer, and therefore an expression of the "man." That would be non-fiction (in your example, the essays of Pound as opposed to the poetry). Without getting into the distinctions between these two forms--fiction (including poetry) and non-fiction (another interesting topic--e.g. memoir, or new journalism, or "confessional" poetry), I'll just say that my definiton of "work" is concerned only with the work of the imagination; or fiction/poetry.

--Re: "imagine Robert Mapplethorpe leading a double life as a Washington lobbyist, or some Xtian rightist, pushing for something like strict policing of the internet, mandatory short haircuts for men under the age of twenty, prayer before every meal, or well just imagine him being some sort of obsessed (sexually repressed) outsider politico pushing for centralized, conservative values (and symbols) that run up against his art work."

I'd have no problem imagining this--if Mapplethorpe was never able to live as an artist all of that would be entirely possible. In many ways, this is a standard model of the conflict between the creative, usually hidden-from-society, self and the public personna. It's a "double life" only in the sense that the inner self is never reconciled/expressed as the outer self. Instead, the outer self lays claim to the territory necessary for its survival as a social being, develops the necessary masks and "personas" and keeps the imagination hidden--unless it finds expression in art, writing, etc. The more creative "exposure," the more chance to match up the inner and outer selves. Mapplethorpe's artistic life was also his lived life, so it's hard to see him violating that artisitc life, but don't MOST people lead a so-called double life? How do you not do this? Attempting to live a life focused entirely on truth of expression for example, or totally honest interactions--is a pretty radical--and psychologically dangerous--way to live. Without getting into all the psychological implications (and biological and genetic), you could look at Sylvia Plath as an example of someone striving to live "honestly." Her work was a nearly seamless outgrowth of her emotional life. But this is generally not a survivable condition in the "real world." Maybe in the world of saints and such.

Then, when it is time to offer him a prize, you would be in the position of asking whether the "work" is the same thing >as the "man".

See above. I don't agree that one would be in that postion, unless we're discussing non-fiction.

More comments below.

Best,
Joan

> A recent one I came across: apparently the German painter Gerhardt Richter was the prophet of pop art back in the day, introducing or at least championing Warhol and those folk, but now he seems to clearly on the > monumental side -- large-scale abstract paintings, with a near classical sense of balance, or perhaps romantic sense of sturm and drang -- with someone like Kiefer in opposition to the "democratic" vision of someone like Polke. How does that happen?

What's the mystery? The essence of creativity is change.

> Why are poets like Drew Milne and Jeremy Prynne, the former of whom is a recognized Marxist scholar, more or less perceived, by the Americans aware of their work, as somewhat reclusive, decidedly "highbrow" poets (I think in the tradition of Thomas Gray)?

Perception of the art is a decidedly distinct topic from expression of it. This introduces an entirely new train of thought, not germane to the topic of "work" vs. "man" I don't think, but more of an offshoot.

> Actually, more women do come to mind: why is Barbara Kruger using techniques explored by proto-fascist artists, including some of their color schemes, to present purportedly progressive feminist progaganda? Is this art or social work?

I don't know her work but it sounds like a great and lively concept--re-using the techniques of the "enemy" in the service of one's own propaganda. I don't know how such a thing would be classified--some propaganda is indeed art ("Triumph of the Will"), some is merely banal commentary. But "social work"? If this isn't tongue-in-cheek, then I don't know what you mean here.

> Joan Houlihan <[redacted]> on 07/22/99 09:39:55 AM
>
> Please respond to UB Poetics discussion group
> <[redacted]>
>
> To: [redacted]
> cc: (bcc: Brian Stefans/Trade/RandomHouse)
> Subject: Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
>
> Well, not exactly. I agree that:
>
> The work is not the man.
> The prize is not the man.

> Therefore, the man is neither the prize nor the work.
>
> However:
> The prize is the both work and the man.
> There has to be work to be a prize; and, by implication, there has to be a man (or woman) to be work. The ratio of man to prize increases in relation to how "political" the selection criteria are.
>
> In general, I feel that ethical considerations of the writer's life should be entirely separate from considerations of the work--not that ethical concerns shouldn't be considered, discussed, dissected, etc., just that they > shouldn't be seen as germane to the work. At all. A close-up of anyone's life reveals multiple layers, "selves" and contradictions--the study of personality is an interesting one. However, in the case of a writer, their biography is merely another footnote, and maybe a totally misleading footnote at that. A critique of the work, on the other hand, is much closer to the writer's "self."
>
> The work is not the man, neither is the prize the work. The prize, as i think you are saying, is a political gesture apart from the work.
>
> _____
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
> _____
> Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

361. Aldon Nielsen
Gloria Tropp
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Can anyone backch. me with a mailing address for Gloria Tropp; I've managed to lose it in the course of all my moves -- I got it from somebody on this list in the first place -- hope that somebody is still subscribed!

↑ Index

362. Poetics List Administration

list stats

Fri 30 Jul 1999

Below is the current subscribership of the Poetics List, arranged by country.
Apologies for omissions due to the U.S.-imperialist bias secreted in the Listserv program, which in generating this data quietly assumes that addresses without a country code [such as .au for Australia] are U.S. addresses. Ach, hardly any surprise in this you may be saying.

Chris

p.s. Special thanks to our Russian subscriber[s].

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

```
*  Country                Subscribers
*  -------                -----------
*  Australia                   14
*  Belgium                      2
*  Canada                      42
*  Finland                      1
*  Germany                      2
*  Great Britain               23
*  Ireland                      4
*  Italy                        1
*  Japan                        7
*  Netherlands                  1
*  New Zealand                 14
*  Poland                       1
*  Singapore                    1
*  Spain                        2
*  Sweden                       5
*  Switzerland                  2
*  Thailand                     1
*  USA                        633
*  Yugoslavia                   1
*
* Total number of users subscribed to the list:    759
* Total number of countries represented:           19
```

↑ Index

363. Poetics List Administration

Re: Poem on 'good things about turning 80' / Safdie

Fri 30 Jul 1999

---

this came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Safdie Joseph" <[redacted]>
Date: 7/29/99, 1:14 PM -0700

I'm trying to find a poem or some verse on the good things about turning 80, or old age, ...

Any suggestions about where best to look, or some verse itself would be much appreciated.

Heather, there's a famous poem by Sophocles about being very happy he had turned 90, because he didn't have to worry about sex anymore -- "and all its entangling confusions" if I remember correctly . . .

I'm not sure if Ezra Pound had it in mind when he wrote that hilarious letter to WCW that Kent quoted yesterday, but maybe he should have!

↑ Index

@poetics

The UB Poetics Discussion Group

Archive of Electronic Correspondence

August 1999

355 messages · Fri 30 Jul 1999 – Tue 31 Aug 1999

On the eleventh of August the moon blotted out the sun over Europe and Asia — the last total eclipse of the millennium, watched by millions — and the Poetics List, so far as its archive shows, hardly glanced up. It had turned its whole attention inward, onto itself, for a reckoning that would occupy nearly the entire month: a long, painful, necessary argument about who its idea of poetry leaves out.

It began as criticism and became something larger. Reviewing the second annual Boston Alternative Poetry Festival, Jacques Debrot located its weakness, carefully, in “the most featured Boston poets” — a judgement of taste that might have stayed a judgement of taste. But the word alternative had been left lying in the open, and the list could not walk past it.

Alternative to what, exactly, and for whom? Tisa Bryant, a Boston native writing from San Francisco, asked where the city’s Black poets had been on the program; Karen Kelley, who “loved the city and it infuriated me,” named the genteel local habit of recasting racism as mere ignorance; and Maria Damon put the structural point most plainly — that “alternative does tend to mean a certain alternative,” a single experimental style wearing the costume of openness. Pierre Joris, half in grief, recalled Stephen Jonas, the Black Boston poet “killed by smack, or Boston” in the mid-sixties, and asked whether anyone still read him.

And yet the same room, in the same weeks, was quietly at its best. Word arrived through Burt Kimmelman that Cid Corman — the expatriate editor of Origin, who from a coffee shop in Kyoto had introduced half the room’s influences to one another — was in trouble, his situation “precarious, to say the least.” The list mobilized at once: proposals to petition the ambassador, to find a grant, to recover for an old poet in distress some fraction of what he had spent decades giving away.

There is no tidy way to set these two Augusts beside each other — the argument about exclusion and the rush to rescue an excluded elder — except to say that they are the same community taking itself seriously, and that the second is the answer the first was groping toward. The list did not settle whether it was as open as it believed itself to be. But it did, in the end, do a few concrete open things: it passed the hat for Cid Corman, and, answering Joris, it confirmed that Stephen Jonas is still taught, still written about, still read. In a month spent asking who gets left out, that was something — two names carried back in from the margin, and kept.

— Kristen M. Fabians

Index

Writers, names mentioned, and concepts. Every number links to its message. 355 in all.

WRITERS

(Art), David Erben 20
Administration, Poetics List 110, 203, 204, 217, 253, 255, 259, 266, 267, 283, 291, 317, 318
Aerialedge 105
And, Miekal 244
Andrews, Jim 81
Baratier, David 69, 313
Beaulieu, Derek 56, 134, 200
Bellamy, Dodie 208, 226, 251
Bernstein, Charles 49, 57, 96, 125
Bouchard, Daniel 24, 50
Bowering, George 91, 142, 230
Brady, Taylor 141
Bramhall, A H 19, 53, 71, 73, 107, 131, 146, 185, 188, 236, 239, 243, 310
Brink, Leonard 314
Bromige, David 92, 101, 136
Bryant, Tisa 77, 79, 151, 174
Buuck, David 158, 159, 160, 209, 273, 289
Carter, Daniel 93, 225, 248, 282
CHERNOFF, MAXINE 341
Clay, Steven 144
Coleman, Jennifer C 133
Conner, Kyle 293
Conte, Joseph 224
Cope, Stephen 30
Cunningham, Brent 211
Curnow, Wystan 274
Daley, R M 189, 257
Damon, Maria 25, 38, 54, 68, 97, 145, 171, 191, 192, 322
Damon), Maria Damon (Maria 119
Davis, Jordan 196, 268, 354
Dbkk 13, 48, 258
Debrot, Jacques 5, 7, 40, 59, 89, 90
Democracy, R 103, 109, 121, 122, 252
Diggory, Terry 197
Dillon, Richard 61, 298, 301
Douglas 182
Drake, R. 115
Durgin, Patrick F. 173, 237, 328, 330
Ellis, Stephen 32, 78, 349, 350
Fewell, Aaron 275
Al Filreis 164, 280, 336
Foster, Edward 116
Fox, Dominic 45
Franco, Michael 35, 161
Freedman, Robert 84
Glass, Jesse 279, 303, 329, 351
Goldsmith, Kenneth 18, 228, 234
Green, Tony 70, 104, 117
Grumman, Bob 60
Hamshaw, Carol L. 29, 233
Healy, L. MacMahon And T.R. 181
Herron, Patrick 23, 294, 306
Hill, Owen 304
Hofer, Jen 223
Houlihan, Joan 34, 162, 168, 169
Johnson, Julie 44, 199, 300, 331
JOHNSON, KENT 128
Joris, Pierre 47, 165, 166, 315
Jullich, Jeffrey 152, 153, 178, 193, 195, 222
Kane, Daniel 21, 337
Karasick, Adeena 271
Kelley, Karen 130, 163
Ken|n|ing 290
Kimball, J 16
Kimmelman, Burt 254
Kirschenbaum, David 62, 118, 140, 155, 167, 215, 323, 340, 353
Kirschenbaum, Matt 176
Krupoetry 43
Kuszai, J 194
Lavender, Bill 352
Lazer, Hank 52, 82, 227
Leddy, Michael 312
Lewis, Joel 11
List, Poetics 22, 64, 65, 186, 338, 339
Little, Billy 6, 39, 213, 214, 305
Loden, Rachel 278
Lorber, Brendan 37
Loucks, James 100
Lowther,John 66, 137, 270
Magee, Michael 154, 170, 264, 287
Maz881 31, 80, 183, 297
McGuire, Jerry 63, 245
McVay, Gwyn 218
Miller, Lynn 26, 41, 58, 76, 99, 123, 135, 149, 177, 210, 221, 231, 238, 249
Minter, Peter 276
Mohammad, K.Silem 143
Neff, Michael 175
Neufeld, Peter 120
Nielsen, Aldon 219
Nikolayev, Philip 262, 263, 324
Nuyopoman 102, 240
Orange, Tom 156, 157, 190
Ostashevsky, Eugene 127, 138
Perez, Jamie 86
Prejsnar, Mark 132, 316, 319, 355
Pritchett,Patrick 112, 172

Qureshi, Ramez 332, 333
Ray, David Or Judy 202
Readers, Todd Baron /*/ ReMap 42, 256, 272, 302, 334, 345, 346
Reiner, Christopher 87, 325
Russo, Linda 113, 281
Ruttan, Jack 216
Scharf, Michael (Cahners -NYC) 129
Schultz, Kathy Lou 94, 147, 343
Schwartz, Gerald 9, 108, 184, 229
Scroggins, Mark W 232
Shana 180
Silliman, Ron 235, 241, 265, 285
Sondheim, Alan 12, 15, 28, 72, 83, 98, 106, 148, 150, 179, 198, 201, 242, 247, 250, 261, 277, 296, 308, 309, 327, 335
Spahr, Juliana 126, 246, 299, 347
Spence, Pete 14, 348
Stecopoulos, Eleni 307
Stefans, Brian 17, 33, 51, 67, 260, 269, 342
Stengel, Jill 55, 326
Stroffolino, Chris 321
Sumner, Alaric 8
Toscano, Rodrigo 124
Tosh 111, 284, 286, 288, 292, 295, 320
Tranter, John 1, 75, 95, 220
Treadwell, Elizabeth 85
Tuma, Keith 205
Upton., Lawrence 2, 10
Vassilakis, Nico 74
Vickery, Ann 311
Wald, Diane 46
Wallace, Mark 206
Walsh, Michael 344
Weiss, Irving 36, 139
Weiss, Mark 88, 114, 187, 207
Wheeler, Susan 3
Winter, Max 212
Zavialov, Maria L. 4
Zervos, Komninos 27

NAMES MENTIONED

Abbott, Steve 221, 226, 235, 238, 249
Acker, Kathy 323
Adamo, Ralph 352
Adams, Robert 245
Ahern, Tom 311
Alexander, Christopher W. 64, 253, 255, 266, 283, 291, 318
Allan, Don 137
Altieri, Charles 105
Americans, Asian 21, 245
Amirkhanian, Charles 228
Anderson, Beth 24, 38
Anderson, Laurie 18, 228, 234, 241
Andrews, Bruce 205, 278
Anne, Katherine 245
Anne, Sarah 55, 85, 158, 160
Antin, David 52
Armand, Louis 114, 177, 249
Armantrout, Rae 52
Armstrong, Aaron 241
Ashbery, John 1, 23, 105, 152, 161, 169, 174, 191, 193, 291
Ashley, Renee 228
Ashley, Robert 228
Auster, Paul 161, 169, 174, 278
Austin, Geer 135
Ayler, Albert 204
Baker, Tony 205
Baldessari, John 234
Ballard, Micah 327
Baraka, Amiri 287
Barber, Stefani 158
Barnes, Diane 180, 354
Basinski, Michael 16, 32, 200, 330
Baudelaire, Charles 129, 180
Baxter, Ted 234
Beckman, Joshua 353
Bee, Susan 144, 267
Behrle, Jim 16, 24, 38
Behrman, David 228
Benjamin, Walter 105, 191, 193, 221, 227, 238, 253
Bennett, John M. 126, 245, 330
Bentley, Scott 299
Berger, Stephanie 228
Berkeley, Michael 158, 285, 288, 295
Berkson, Bill 136
Berlin, Irving 228
Berman, Tosh 111, 284, 286, 288, 292, 295, 303, 320
Bernard, George 110, 245
Bernstein, Emma 18, 52, 144, 172, 173, 178, 182, 183, 267, 318, 354
Berrigan, Anselm 24, 38, 160, 215, 229, 323
Berrigan, Eddie 16, 144, 267, 354
Berrigan, Edmund 33, 293
Berrigan, Ted 340
Berry, Jake 270, 352
Bishop, Elizabeth 17, 216
Blackman, Nicole 216
Blake, William 176
Blaser, Robin 35, 161, 169, 174, 221, 238, 285
Blau, Rachel 105, 330
Bloch, Julia 210, 315
Bloom, Harold 291
Bohm, David 327
Borges, Jorge Luis 127
Borkhuis, Charles 278
Bouchard, Dan 40, 118, 161, 169, 174
BpNichol 114
Bramhall, Allen H. 19, 53, 71, 73, 107, 131, 146, 162, 185, 188, 236, 239, 243, 310,

319, 329, 340, 343, 349, 350, 355
Brannen, Jonathan 270, 352
Brecht, George 228, 234
Brennan, Sherry 110
Brinks, Dave 270, 352
Bronk, William 9, 16, 116, 254
Broussard, Sam 245
Brown, Ann 33, 105, 173, 178, 182, 190
Brown, John 76
Brown, Tina 112
Buchanan, Pat 136
Burger, Peter 241
Burnham, Clint 234
Burns, Gerald 161, 174
Burns, Robert 99
Burroughs, William S. 18, 81, 89, 126, 191, 193, 228
Burton, Philip 105, 116, 245
Byron, Philip 99
Cabri, Louis 154, 158, 160, 271, 280
Cage, John 18, 137, 228
Cappello, Mary 245
Carbo, Nick 299
Card, Macgregor 105
Carlos, William 133, 142, 197
Carroll, Lewis 127
Carson, Anne 105
Carson, Margaret 105
Castro, Michael 13, 34
Catullus 216
Chapman, Wes 334
Chen, Chris 160
Cisneros, Sandra 291
Claire, Barbara 24, 38
Clark, Cheryl 205, 245, 295, 315
Clark, George 245
Clark, Jeff 278
Clark, Susan 205
Clay, Steve 144, 267
Clement, Catherine 315
Clemente, Francesco 105
Clements, Brian 177, 204, 249, 327
Clippinger, David 116
Cobb, Allison 133, 142, 197, 293
Cobbing, Bob 2, 10
Cole, Sean 24, 38
Coleman, Victor 133, 134, 228
Collins, Phil 228, 234
Collom, Jack 105
Coltrane, John 146, 162
Columbus, Christopher 69, 100, 155
Comments, Chicago 276
Compton, Shanna 29, 233, 323
Cone, Jon 330
Conrad, Tony 197, 228
Conte, Joseph M. 116
Coolidge, Clark 7, 24, 136, 205, 330, 354
Cooper, Paula 204, 228
Corbett, Bill 40, 161, 169, 174
Corbett, Robert 24, 35, 40, 151, 161, 166, 169, 174, 192
Corman, Roger 161, 169, 174, 254, 259, 279, 283, 284, 285, 286, 291, 292, 295, 301, 302, 303, 310, 319, 320, 329, 340, 343, 345, 349, 350, 355
Coultas, Brenda 323
County, Mike 89, 241
Crane, Lee 139, 141
Crane, Margaret 251
Crane, Stephen 245
Creeley, Robert 92, 105, 161, 169, 174, 221, 254, 339
Crozier, Andrew 105, 205
Curtis, Dana 49
Dailey, Joel 270, 352
Daley, Ryan 189, 222, 257
Daly, Catherine 278
Darragh, Tina 16, 24, 38
Davenport, Steve 228
Davidson, Ian 52, 162, 177, 323
Davidson, Michael 221, 238, 331
Davinio, Caterina 157
Davis, Martin 16, 278
Dawson, Nancy 8
Dee, Kathy 126
Delany, Samuel R. 79, 119, 141, 186
Dennis, Michael 25, 234, 270, 352
Derrida, Jacques 238, 249
Dickinson, Emily 16, 35, 79, 96, 100, 101, 119, 126, 221, 238
Dine, Jim 105
Dixon, Bill 25
Dolphy, Eric 228
Donahue, Joseph 116
Dorward, Nate 205
Doud, Patrick 16, 24, 38
Downing, Brandon 138
Drucker, Johanna 126, 144, 161, 169, 174, 267
Duncan, Andrew 95, 161, 169, 174, 221
Duncan, Robert 92, 114, 221
Durand, Marcella 24, 38, 109, 121, 252, 323
Durgin, Patrick F. 173, 237, 275, 290, 328, 330
Edison, Thomas 220
Eigner, Larry 254, 285
Eliot, Joe 95
Ellingham, Lew 221
Elliot, Joe 323
Elrick, Laura 124
Emerson, Claudia 35, 76
England, Amy 67, 82, 339
Eshelman, Clayton 333
Eshleman, Clayton 161, 169, 174, 278

Eugene, Brett 245
Evans, Brett 270, 299, 352
Evans, George 25, 177, 204
Evans, Steve 154
Ewert, Mark 251
Farmer, Steve 105, 158, 160
Farrell, Dan 33, 105, 158, 194, 203
Faulkner, Andrew 315
Federman, Raymond 49
Felix, Joel 18, 49, 353
Ferguson, Jesse 29, 105, 205, 233
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence 82, 136, 167
Ferrini, Henry 161, 169, 174
Finkelstein, Norman 105, 116
Fischer, Norman 136, 144, 267
Fisher, Allen 205
Fisher, Harrison 205
Fitterman, Robert 160
Fitzgerald, Scott 15
Fodaski, Elizabeth 105, 158
Foley, Jack 82, 279, 295, 303
Ford, Francis 245
Ford, Henry 220
Foucault, Michel 238, 306
Foust, Graham 278
Fox, Skip 245, 270, 352
France, Peter 18, 41, 138, 210, 215, 229
Frances, Mary 105
Fredman, Stephen 105
Freeman, Brad 16, 24, 38
Friedlander, Ben 160
Frost, Corey 270, 352
Frost, Robert 25
Fuchs, Greg 105, 154, 270, 352
Fuhrman, Joanna 323
Fuller, Heather 110, 158
Fullman, Ellen 228
Gallagher, Kristen 154, 158
Gamalinda, Eric 347
Gander, Forrest 16, 24, 35, 38, 161, 169, 174, 278
Ganick, Peter 16, 24, 38, 323
Gardner, Drew 16, 24, 38
Gevirtz, Susan 55, 126
Gilbert, Alan 16, 24, 38, 293
Gilbert, Roger 32
Gilmore, Gary 116
Ginsberg, Allan 161, 169, 174, 216, 287
Giorno, John 234
Gizzi, Michael 7, 16, 24, 35, 38, 105
Gladman, Renee 330
Gluck, Robert 157, 266
Golding, Alan 105
Goldman, Judith 221
Goldstein, Mark 228
Gordon, Nada 37
Gordon, Ruth 61, 228
Gottlieb, Michael 330
Gould, Glenn 228
Gould, Henry 24, 38
Graham, Jorie 291
Grahn, Judy 235
Graves, Robert 96, 100, 101
Greenberg, Arielle 139, 141
Greenberg, Samuel 139, 141
Griffin, Tim 154, 170
Griffiths, Bill 205
Grinnell, Tracy 330
Guest, Barbara 105, 278
Guston, Philip 161, 169, 174
Haley, Heather 29, 233
Hall, Donald 268, 274, 294, 312
Hall, John 205
Halpern, Rob 158
Halsey, Alan 205
Hamilton, Diana 241
Hamshaw, Carol L. 29, 233
Hansen, Jefferson 314
Hardy, Thomas 268, 274
Harris, Ken 270, 352
Harryman, Carla 158
Hart, Matt 293
Harvey, George 112, 245
Hass, Robert 114, 291
Hatlen, Burt 105, 116
Hayes, Jared 245
Hayles, Katherine 49
Healy, Randolph 181, 205
Heaney, Seamus 161, 162, 169, 174
Heidegger, Martin 82
Hejinian, Lyn 16, 24, 38, 52, 105, 126, 158, 161, 169, 174, 227, 330, 354
Heller, Michael 105
Henderson, David 79, 119
Henri, Charles 162
Herman, Rachel 170
Hernandez, Victor 299
Hickman, Lee 258
Higgins, Dick 228, 234
Hikmet, Nazim 231
Hill, Lindsay 270, 352
Hill, Murray 228
Hirschman, Jack 160
Holman, Bob 240
Homer 105
Hoover, Paul 341
Howe, Susan 105, 227, 339
Hughes, Peter 205
Hughes, Ted 34, 315
Hunt, Erica 79, 119, 122, 266
Iijima, Brenda 160
Indiana, Gary 18, 323
Inman, Peter 24, 38, 105, 158
Ireland, Lauren 181, 205, 216, 317

Israel, David R. 188, 198
Jackson, Jesse 8, 96, 97, 100, 222, 257
Jarnot, Lisa 205
Jenkins, Margaret 299
Jernigan, Marla 270, 352
Johnson, Thomas 18, 87
Jonas, Stephen 161, 166, 169, 174, 192, 211
Jones, Bob 228
Jordan, June 16, 17, 274, 312, 354
Joseph, Safdie 116
Joyce, Michael 299
Joyce, Trevor 181, 205
Kaipa, Summi 158
Kalleberg, Garrett 278
Kaprow, Allan 228
Karenina, Anna 157
Kathryn, Mary 222
Katz, Alex 105
Kaufman, Andrew 16
Kaufman, Bob 16, 79, 103, 119
Keelan, Claudia 278
Keene, John 79, 103, 119
Kelley, Mike 228, 270, 352
Kelly, Paul 280
Kelsey, Karla 87, 105, 209
Kendall, Robert 81
Kennedy, John F. 245
Kerry, John 154
Kiely, Aaron 24, 35, 38, 46, 79, 119, 151, 166, 192
Killian, Kevin 48, 59, 78, 79, 119, 151, 158, 166, 192, 226, 235, 251
Killian, Sean 323
Kim, Myung Mi 55, 126
Kimball, Cynthia 16
King, Rodney 214
Kinsella, John 181, 276
Kirschenbaum, David A. 323, 353
Kirschenbaum, Matthew G. 176
Kissinger, Henry 315
Klein, Naomi 83, 222
Knowles, Alison 228
Kosuth, Joseph 234
Kramer, Wendy 46, 59, 78
Kristeva, Julia 227
Kushner, Bill 323
Kyger, Joanne 105, 136
Lally, Michael 311
Landrey, David 116
Larkin, Peter 205
Latta, John 278
Lauterbach, Ann 278, 291
Lease, Joseph 24, 38
Leftwich, Jim 270, 352
Lehman, David 269, 287
Lennon, Brian 158
Levine, Jeffrey 234
Levitsky, Rachel 109, 121, 323
Lilley, Kate 276
Logan, John 146, 162
London, Frank 10, 95, 201, 245
Lopez, Tony 205
Lorca, Federico García 30
Mac Low, Jackson 228
Lowell, Amy 51, 162
Lowell, Robert 51
Lubeski, Lori 5, 32, 35, 48, 59, 78
Luoma, Bill 31, 37, 67, 80, 126
Lutz, Gary 175
Lyons, Kim 122
Maciunas, George 228
Mackey, Nate 154
Mackey, Nathaniel 52, 79, 88, 115, 119, 126, 154, 161, 169, 174, 227
Magee, Kevin 94, 147, 204, 210, 226
Magee, Mike 164, 204
Malcolm, Janet 21, 135, 231
Mallarmé, Stéphane 129, 238
Mandel, Tom 235
Manson, Douglas 205
Marclay, Christian 228
Mariah, Paul 235
Marie, Jeanne 278
Marie, Julie 126, 209
Markotic, Nicole 271, 280
Marsh, Bill 297
Martin, Camille 270, 352
Martin, Chris 245
Mason, Chris 136, 241
Mason, George 245
Matthews, William 180
Maud, Ralph 105
Maurer, Susan 323
Maxwell, Andrew 105
Mayakovsky, Vladimir 173, 178, 182
Mayer, Bernadette 105, 126
Mayer, Jane 35
Mazer, Ben 161, 169, 174
Melnick, David 235
Meltzer, David 136
Meredith, William 126
Meriwether, Judith 245
Messerli, Douglas 182, 195
Meyer, Tom 347
Middleton, Christopher 105
Middleton, Peter 205
Miller, Lee 128, 137, 228
Miller, Paul D. 228
Mills, Billy 181, 259, 279
Milne, Drew 67, 205
Mirakove, Carol 293
Mohammad, Kasey 143
Molina, Joanne 110
Moore, Barbara 228

Moore, Nicholas 135
Moorman, Charlotte 228, 234
Morgan, Robin 22, 351
Moriarty, Laura 266
Morris, Robert 234
Morris, Tim 122, 176, 228
Morrison, Jim 180
Morrison, Rusty 158, 159, 160
Morrisson, Mark 205
Moure, Erin 122, 205
Moxley, Jennifer 17, 33, 58, 67, 94, 154
Mueller, Ursula 210
Mukherjee, Aryanil 82
Muldoon, Paul 268, 274, 294
Mullen, Harryette 29, 79, 119, 154, 233
Mullen, Laura 105, 278
Murphy, Michelle 245, 270, 352
Murphy, Sheila E. 278
Murray, Elizabeth 221
Myers, Michael 35, 270, 352
Nauman, Bruce 228, 234
Naylor, Paul 270, 352
Nelson, Gale 245
Newton, Keith 24, 38, 168, 187
Nguyen, Hoa 105, 158
Nicholls, Peter 105
Nichols, Travis 315
Nolan, John 245
Norton, John 24, 38
Notley, Alice 354
Noto, John 278
O'Hara, Frank 218, 260, 264, 268, 269, 274, 287
Oliver, Laura 109, 121, 252, 323
Olson, Charles 35, 67, 95, 105, 114, 161, 169, 174, 221, 254, 265, 272, 279
Oppen, George 238
Osman, Jena 105, 266, 293
Pacific, Asian 30, 44, 150, 238, 299
Padgett, Ron 144, 267
Palmer, Michael 35, 331
Parish, Jefferson 245
Parker, Karl 235
Partch, Harry 289
Paterson, William 245
Patton, Julie 79, 119, 323
Perelman, Bob 52, 154
Perkins, Charlotte 116
Perloff, Marjorie 49, 52, 274
Perry, David 241
Peters, Mark 228
Peterson, Katie 16, 24, 38
Phillip, Andrew 194, 203, 228
Phillips, John 254
Phillips, Rodney 144, 267
Pike, Jennifer 2
Pine, White 245
Pines, Paul 116
Pinsky, Robert 161, 162, 169, 174
Piombino, Nick 126
Plath, Sylvia 13, 34, 96, 100, 101, 162
Porter, Anne 245
Pound, Ezra 300
Pound, Scott 13, 22, 34, 95, 101, 191, 193, 268, 269, 274
Prevallet, Kristin 16, 24, 38, 158, 160, 293, 330, 337
Price, Laurie 122
Di Prima, Diane 136, 161, 169, 174
Prince, Richard 138, 267
Pruitt, Patricia 161, 169, 174
Prunty, Randy 160, 270, 352
Prynne, J. H. 11, 33, 279
Prynne, Jeremy 67
Purves, Robin 205
Pynchon, Thomas 291
Quartermain, Peter 105, 126
Rabinowitz, Anna 278
Ramsdell, Heather 278
Randall, Karen 49
Ratcliffe, Stephen 278
Rawls, Alex 270, 352
Raworth, Tom 105, 181
Reagan, Nancy 83, 235
Reed, Lou 62, 228
Reich, Steve 228
Retallack, Joan 126, 266
Revell, Donald 278
Rexroth, Kenneth 351
Ribot, Marc 326
Rice, Doug 224
Rich, Adrienne 323
Ridge, Tom 315
Riding, Laura 96, 97, 100, 102, 104, 108, 117, 321, 346
Riley, John 10, 205
Riley, Peter 205
Riley, Terry 228
Rimbaud, Dee 129
Rivera, Alex 220
Robbins, Bruce 158
Roberts, Wendy 270, 352
Robertson, Lisa 158
Robertson, Pat 17
Robinson, Elizabeth 158, 314
Robinson, Mary 140, 145, 168, 185, 187
Rodefer, Stephen 67
Rorty, Richard 291
Rosenberg, Jim 89
Rosenthal, Chuck 99, 235
Rothenberg, Jerome 144, 267
Rothenberg, Michael 136
Rothenberg, Susan 105
Rothschild, Douglas 16, 24, 37, 38, 67

Saidenberg, Jocelyn 158
Sanchez, Jorge 29, 233, 315
Sanders, James 270
Sappho 173, 178, 182
Saroyan, William 18
Sartre, Paul 296
Savage, Tom 323
Scalapino, Leslie 24, 35, 38, 52, 105, 136, 161, 169, 174, 334, 339
Schelling, Andrew 24, 38, 126
Schmit, Thomas 228
Schneeman, George 144, 267
Schneider, Dan 314
Schultz, Susan M. 181
Schuster, Joshua 245, 251
Schuyler, James 96, 97, 100
Schwerner, Armand 105, 114
Selby, Spencer 278
Selland, Eric 300
Shakespeare, William 99, 241, 245
Shapiro, David 24, 38, 46, 59, 78
Sharma, Prageeta 16, 24, 38, 79, 119, 120, 299, 323
Shaw, Lytle 160
Shaw, Nancy 266
Shelley, Percy Bysshe 135
Shepard, Matthew 253
Sheppard, Robert 10, 205, 315
Sherman, Bill 221
Sherry, James 52
Sherwood, Kenneth 18
Shiroma, Jerrold 44, 199, 314
Sikelianos, Eleni 323
Silem, Kasey 143
Simic, Charles 268, 274, 294
Simon, Greg 245
Simon, Toni 325
Simpson, Bennett 293
Sinavaiana, Caroline 299
Sinclair, John 67
Smith, Dale 353
Smith, Patricia 162
Smith, Pete 181, 205
Smith, Rod 105, 158, 160, 330
Smith, Tracy K. 209, 227, 353
Smithson, Robert 234
Snyder, Gary 136, 221
Snyder, Rick 95, 240, 254
Solt, John 22, 351
Spahr, Boyd 31
Spicer, Jack 35, 67, 92, 135, 161, 169, 174, 221, 238
Spillway, Phil 318
Spitzer, Mark 270, 352
Stafford, Jane 268, 294
Stafford, William 268, 274, 312
Stalin, Joseph 249
Stanley, Jared 291
Stanton, Rob 109, 121, 252
Stefans, Kim 59, 78, 154, 158, 160, 330
Stein, Gertrude 18, 105, 222, 257
Stein, Suzanne 173, 178, 182, 336
Stevens, Wallace 116, 216, 245
Stevenson, Matt 34
Strang, Brian 205
Strickland, Stephanie 278
Sumner, Graham 228
Sutherland, Keston 67, 260, 264
Swensen, Cole 278
Swift, Todd 216
Szirtes, George 216
Taggart, John 52
Tanta, Gene 330
Tardos, Anne 228, 347
Taylor, Cecil 18, 228
Tejada, Roberto 88, 115, 158
Texas, Irving 29, 100, 233, 245, 276, 326
Thesen, Sharon 105
Thomas, Dylan 135, 181, 205, 245, 270, 279, 293, 352
Thompson, Jon 37
Tonouchi, Lee 347
Torra, Joe 35, 161, 169, 174
Torra, Joseph 40
Tribune, Chicago 315
Trinidad, David 29, 114, 233, 278
Tudor, David 228
Tuttle, Richard 209
Valentine, Jean 18
Valery, Paul 156
Vendler, Helen 154, 161, 169, 174
Verlaine, Paul 129, 229
Vermont, Charlie 57
Viegener, Matias 258
Vincent, Gregory 196, 315
Virgil 245
Viscomi, Joseph 176
Vitiello, Stephen 228, 234, 293
Waldman, Anne 24, 38
Waldman, Ken 16, 126, 161, 169, 174
Waldrop, Keith 126, 314
Waldrop, Rosmarie 314
Wallace, Sara 180, 216
Walsh, Catherine 216
Warhol, Andy 152
Warner, Jim 228
Warsh, Lewis 16, 24, 38
Washington, Harold 58, 76, 86, 94, 105, 135, 168, 187, 222, 315
Watkins, Ben 161, 169, 174
Watson, Craig 314
Watson, Sasha 17
Watten, Barrett 52, 80, 294, 298
Watts, Robert 228

Wegman, William 234
Weinfield, Henry 116
Weinstein, Eric 112
Welish, Marjorie 205
Wellman, Donald 59, 73, 78
Westbrook, Dillon 245
Whalen, Philip 105, 136, 161, 169, 174, 339
Whitehead, Gregory 228
Whitman, Walt 35, 173, 178, 182
Wieners, John 7, 16, 24, 35, 38, 50, 51, 80, 161, 169, 174, 205
Wilbur, Richard 245
Wilder, Ian 24, 38
Wiley, William T. 234
Wilkinson, John 205, 299
Wilkinson, Joshua 205
Williams, Jonathan 105
Williams, Tony 22, 133, 142, 197, 228
Williams, William Carlos 197
Wilson, Steve 29, 105, 233, 245
Wittgenstein, Ludwig 227
Wolsak, Melissa 205
Wordsworth, William 269
Wright, James 16, 24, 38, 278
Wright, Jay 95
Wright, John 105
Wright, Richard 123
Yau, John 105, 278
Young, Andy 270, 352
Young, Kevin 119
Zappa, Frank 23
Zavialov, Maria L. 4
Zukofsky, Louis 114, 238
Zurawski, Magdalena 16, 24, 38

CONCEPTS

9/11 150, 331
Activism and protest 79, 119, 160, 196, 216, 217, 238, 255, 290, 318, 339, 347
Aesthetics 24, 40, 67, 86, 96, 100, 118, 119, 154, 173, 178, 182, 269
Affect 286, 303
African American poetry 151, 154, 166, 192, 323
Anthologies 5, 32, 52, 57, 67, 82, 105, 129, 156, 216, 245, 258, 300, 331
Appropriation 16, 35, 53, 69, 89, 131, 173, 178, 182, 191, 193, 281, 318, 330
Archives and libraries 8, 25, 33, 44, 57, 64, 110, 144, 167, 176, 177, 220, 235, 238, 245, 255, 258, 259, 267, 279, 285, 288, 317, 318, 331
Autobiography 34, 41, 103, 105, 126, 245
Avant-garde 17, 59, 78, 79, 114, 119, 132, 153, 165, 191, 193, 222, 257, 299, 300
Beauty 58, 94, 109, 114, 135, 162, 210, 216, 245, 308, 309, 327
Biography 34, 35, 69, 101, 157, 249, 300, 316, 351
Black Mountain 24, 32, 35, 59, 78
Book announcements 3, 11, 35, 96, 97, 100, 114, 126, 158, 202, 227, 267, 299, 323, 326, 339, 353
Bookstores 109, 121, 149, 186, 198, 216, 226, 243, 252, 288, 323, 332, 344
Calls for submissions 116, 159
Capitalism 41, 210, 221, 287
Censorship 173, 178, 182, 183
Cities 5, 32, 35, 67, 76, 79, 105, 114, 119, 138, 163, 168, 171, 187, 245
Class 79, 119, 135, 168, 177, 187, 204, 210, 221, 238, 245, 355
Collage and montage 18, 89, 90, 132, 150, 189, 191, 193, 222, 228, 238, 257
Conferences and festivals 5, 7, 9, 16, 24, 29, 32, 35, 46, 48, 58, 59, 63, 67, 78, 79, 80, 86, 94, 103, 116, 118, 119, 135, 151, 153, 157, 161, 162, 165, 166, 169, 171, 174, 191, 192, 200, 213, 221, 224, 226, 228, 233, 235, 245, 278, 281, 347, 352
Copyright and permissions 15, 58, 94, 157, 180, 249, 254, 258, 315, 318
Craft 16, 245
Creative writing pedagogy 16, 63, 171, 245, 246
Dada 22, 90, 132
Deconstruction 51, 262, 350, 355
Difficulty 238, 318
Digital archives 49
Disability 318
Dreams 16, 23, 35, 107, 114, 194, 203, 221, 225, 245, 327, 335
Ecology and ecopoetics 63, 105
Editing 35, 62, 152, 167, 224, 245, 249, 318
Electronic poetry and hypertext 10, 15, 49, 52, 89, 157, 194, 203, 206, 207, 317, 318
Elegy 138
Empire and imperialism 19, 204
Epic 194, 203
Epistemology 114, 222, 238, 327
Ethics 228
Experimental poetry 52, 200, 270, 279, 300, 352
Fascism 327
Feminism 4, 96, 100, 177, 249
Film 34, 57, 112, 150, 216, 220, 228, 231, 234, 244, 245, 289, 327
Free speech 82
Futurism 323
Gender 158, 195, 245, 249, 263, 287, 327, 347
Grants and funding 25, 245, 254, 255, 279, 284, 285, 291, 292, 295, 340
Hermeneutics 222

Humour and satire 114, 269
Ideology 4, 17, 41, 59, 78, 153, 165, 221, 249
Indigenous and Native poetics 95
Interviews 13, 21, 34, 40, 57, 137, 154, 159, 161, 169, 174, 205, 220, 318, 327
Israel and Palestine 26, 188, 198
Language poetry 5, 32, 48, 50, 56, 59, 78, 172, 173, 178, 182, 190, 269, 287
Latino and Latin American poetry 41, 245, 337
Letters and correspondence 8, 25, 69, 161, 169, 174, 204, 221, 318
List moderation 64, 92, 209, 241, 253, 255, 259, 266, 279, 283, 291, 318, 327
Little magazines 29, 40, 49, 56, 73, 89, 95, 96, 97, 100, 111, 112, 127, 134, 138, 143, 152, 158, 159, 160, 204, 220, 233, 235, 245, 278, 294, 305, 306, 318, 321, 323, 326, 327, 334, 346
Lyric poetry 11, 105, 114, 128, 147, 260
Marxism 41, 58, 94, 210, 221, 264
Memory 16, 28, 33, 96, 100, 113, 135, 140, 141, 145, 152, 161, 168, 169, 174, 181, 185, 187, 198, 221, 231, 238, 245, 256, 268, 274, 299, 300, 323, 335
MFA programs 25, 245, 246, 347
Modernism 5, 22, 32, 35, 48, 198, 269, 287, 300, 352
Mourning and loss 52, 93, 99, 236, 306, 318, 327
Multiculturalism 82, 220
Music and poetry 6, 18, 21, 30, 35, 39, 63, 71, 153, 154, 157, 161, 165, 169, 174, 181, 188, 201, 213, 214, 221, 225, 228, 231, 238, 241, 245, 255, 265, 272, 288, 289, 305, 306, 308, 327
Nationalism 67, 135, 273
Nature 49, 78, 93, 99, 105, 114, 144, 149, 170, 191, 193, 210, 235, 267, 318, 323
Negativity and refusal 82, 210, 238
New York School 173, 178, 182, 287
Obituary and memorial 318
Objectivism 105
Ontology 191, 193, 263, 327
Oulipo 49
Performance and the poetry reading 14, 24, 25, 27, 29, 37, 55, 59, 62, 67, 78, 79, 85, 109, 119, 121, 138, 140, 145, 151, 154, 161, 162, 166, 168, 169, 174, 185, 187, 192, 216, 233, 235, 245, 252, 323, 341, 352
Phenomenology 222, 300, 327
Philosophy 51, 82, 96, 99, 100, 114, 149, 198, 210, 296, 300, 327, 339
Place and region 55, 73, 79, 85, 119, 152, 245, 327
Poetics 5, 17, 22, 29, 32, 35, 48, 51, 52, 58, 64, 65, 67, 78, 89, 92, 94, 96, 97, 100, 105, 110, 141, 144, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 165, 166, 168, 169, 173, 174, 178, 182, 186, 187, 190, 192, 203, 204, 210, 217, 221, 233, 235, 249, 253, 255, 259, 266, 267, 269, 278, 279, 283, 290, 291, 299, 300, 317, 318, 330, 338, 339, 349, 350, 355
Post-structuralism 67
Postmodernism 22
Print vs. digital 21, 57, 69, 95, 107, 144, 151, 156, 166, 173, 178, 180, 182, 190, 192, 195, 198, 206, 207, 212, 228, 231, 238, 267, 300, 323, 339, 353
Prizes and awards 3, 13, 34, 245, 254, 284, 285, 291, 303
Prose poem 69, 161, 169, 174
Psychoanalysis 222
Queer poetics 90, 132, 189, 191, 193, 221, 222, 235, 253, 257, 258
Race and poetry 63, 71, 130, 135, 140, 145, 146, 151, 162, 163, 166, 167, 168, 185, 187, 192, 210, 214, 245, 287, 350, 355
Reading announcements 35, 55, 85, 137, 138, 245, 250
Religion and the sacred 63, 95, 114, 144, 150, 228, 231, 245, 267, 307, 323
Representation 238
Reviewing and criticism 6, 25, 35, 40, 49, 59, 60, 67, 78, 95, 110, 114, 157, 172, 173, 175, 178, 182, 183, 190, 194, 195, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 212, 221, 227, 235, 245, 270, 285, 300, 316, 318, 339, 347, 351, 352
Science 53, 210
Semiotics 151, 166, 192, 300
Serial poem 134, 323
Small press publishing 17, 44, 55, 58, 60, 62, 69, 84, 85, 87, 94, 95, 110, 134, 151, 158, 160, 166, 194, 199, 200, 203, 233, 255, 288, 299, 318, 323, 326, 331, 339, 353
Software and code 54, 82, 157, 327
Sound poetry 18
Structuralism 67
Subjectivity 50, 76, 81, 150, 221, 236, 300, 318, 327
Sublime 227
Surrealism 26, 58, 94, 150, 300, 316, 351, 352
The academy 5, 8, 22, 24, 25, 27, 32, 35, 46, 52, 59, 60, 63, 78, 79, 82, 95, 100, 114, 119, 126, 135, 144, 151, 154, 157, 161, 166, 169, 174, 176, 177, 192, 202, 204, 216, 217, 221, 227, 238, 241, 245, 249, 255, 263, 267, 270, 276, 300, 303, 318, 323, 327, 339, 347, 352
The body 4, 44, 150, 198, 210, 221, 276, 318, 327, 353
The canon 105, 129
The Holocaust 34

The internet 10, 23, 32, 34, 62, 78, 81, 84, 95, 118, 127, 140, 143, 155, 162, 167, 168, 169, 187, 203, 215, 235, 241, 242, 249, 255, 265, 267, 285, 294, 306, 307, 318, 323, 327, 334
The line 318
The listserv 35, 50, 56, 59, 64, 78, 84, 104, 105, 128, 136, 147, 171, 186, 220, 225, 236, 254, 255, 269, 290, 317, 318, 320, 340, 350, 351, 352, 355
The New Sentence 84
Theatre 13, 34, 136, 220, 228, 241, 245, 256
Translation 11, 16, 22, 41, 69, 114, 126, 129, 156, 157, 159, 180, 187, 205, 221, 231, 238, 242, 245, 249, 254, 279, 288, 292, 300, 307, 316, 349, 351
Visual and concrete poetry 18, 56, 81, 144, 267
Visual art 24, 29, 63, 105, 152, 154, 157, 159, 209, 220, 221, 228, 233, 234, 245, 289, 293, 302
Women's writing 300, 323

Contents

Every entry links to its message. 355 in all.

30 JUL 1999

1. John Tranter — Farm Implements?
2. Lawrence Upton. — (no subject)
3. Susan Wheeler — 1999 Books
4. Maria L. Zavialov — Bolsheviks and feminism

31 JUL 1999

5. Jacques Debrot — Re: Boston 99
6. Billy Little — Re: 1999 Books
7. Jacques Debrot — Re [2]: Boston 99
8. Alaric Sumner — Dom Sylvester Houédard archive
9. Gerald Schwartz — boston conf.
10. Lawrence Upton. — WF Publications

1 AUG 1999

11. Joel Lewis — Re: 1999 Books
12. Alan Sondheim — "I believe" (fwd)
13. dbkk — Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize

2 AUG 1999

14. pete spence — Re: 1999 Books
15. Alan Sondheim — What I'm Doing About It
16. J Kimball — Boston Alt.Poe Con. ('99)
17. Brian Stefans — Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jul 1999 to 30 Jul 1999 (#1999-145)
18. Kenneth Goldsmith — ___ U B U W E B: N E W R E S O U R C E S :: A U G U S T 9 9 ___
19. A H Bramhall — Praxis Bold As Love
20. David Erben (Art) — Rosebud/John E. Smelcer
21. Daniel Kane — Abiodun Oyewole on WriteNet
22. Poetics List — Shredding the Tapestry of Meaning / jesse glass
23. Patrick Herron — Re: Farm Implements? Rutabagas and vegetables in general
24. daniel bouchard — Re: Boston 99
25. Maria Damon — job alert
26. Lynn Miller — TO THE LEFTWING SURREALISTS
27. komninos zervos — Re: 1999 Books
28. Alan Sondheim — and and / and .

3 AUG 1999

29. Carol L. Hamshaw — Telepoetics Beach Party
30. Stephen Cope — Real Audio fyi
31. maz881 — Spahr & Luoma Reading: Zinc Bar Sunday
32. Stephen Ellis — Re: Boston 99
33. Brian Stefans — Poetry Books 1999
34. Joan Houlihan — Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
35. Michael Franco — Boston 99 or At Play in the Fields oof influence
36. Irving Weiss — Re: Real Audio fyi
37. Brendan Lorber — LIGHT IN AUGUST at ZINC BAR
38. Maria Damon — Re: Boston 99
39. Billy Little — Re: Farm Implements?
40. Jacques Debrot — Re: Boston 99
41. Lynn Miller — HERMAN AND THE HERMITS
42. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — needs

4 AUG 1999

43. krupoetry — Fw: Squawk
44. Julie Johnson — ATTN Small Press Publishers
45. Dominic Fox — Trivial anagrammatic exercise
46. Diane Wald — more on BAPC
47. Pierre Joris — Fwd: [Articles: Top Iraqi poet al-Bayati dies in Syria]
48. dbkk — Re: Boston 99
49. Charles Bernstein — new EBR & other URLs (announcements)
50. daniel bouchard — Re: Boston 99
51. Brian Stefans — Boston Poetry
52. Hank Lazer — Modern and Contemporary Poetics Series
53. A H Bramhall — Promenadfe Left
54. Maria Damon — fwd: Re: We have the following two job openings
55. Jill Stengel — a+bend press: an itty bitty press announcement
56. derek beaulieu — filling Station magazine
57. Charles Bernstein — Rudy Burckhardt (1914-1999)
58. Lynn Miller — 6 JANUARY 1995 / 24TH ST & GUERRERO

5 AUG 1999

59. Jacques Debrot — Re: Boston 99
60. Bob Grumman — Re: Boston 99
61. Richard Dillon — Re: Boston 99
62. David Kirschenbaum — Happy Boogday
63. Jerry McGuire — deep south writers conference panels
64. Poetics List — format reminder
65. Poetics List — open field / oga
66. Lowther,John — 2 poems (diastic)
67. Brian Stefans — Boston 99
68. Maria Damon — Re: Boston 99
69. David Baratier — Deadline is 8/15
70. Tony Green — Re: Boston 99
71. A H Bramhall — Agreeable To The Moment
72. Alan Sondheim — Pleas/e
73. A H Bramhall — re Boston 99/re O.ARS

6 AUG 1999

74. nico vassilakis — (no subject)
75. John Tranter — hemispherical chauvinism 1, drinks nil.
76. Lynn Miller — BOSTON 1851
77. Tisa Bryant — Contact info for Edwin Torres, Mara Galvez Breton
78. Stephen Ellis — Re: Boston 99
79. Tisa Bryant — Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
80. maz881 — Re: Boston
81. Jim Andrews — cut ups
82. Hank Lazer — (Fwd) KPFA statement
83. Alan Sondheim — Eighteen True Fortunes Sorted in Chaos
84. Robert Freedman — Ron Silliman's "The New Sentence"
85. Elizabeth Treadwell — a+bend press READING sunday the 8th, SF
86. Jamie Perez — 2-minute plays.interest?
87. Christopher Reiner — small press news
88. Mark Weiss — Help!
89. Jacques Debrot — Re: Cut ups
90. Jacques Debrot — Re [2]: cut-ups

7 AUG 1999

91. George Bowering — Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
92. david bromige — spicer did not lead to tish
93. Daniel Carter — dear she says dear you're always gone dear always and now with

94. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: 6 JANUARY 1995 / 24TH ST & GUERRERO
95. John Tranter — Jacket
96. Charles Bernstein — Talk's Riding
97. Maria Damon — Re: Talk's Riding

8 AUG 1999

98. Alan Sondheim — Adventure, or The Game of Life where I am Lost
99. Lynn Miller — THE SUMMER ANNIVERSARIES
100. james loucks — Re: Talk's Riding
101. david bromige — hooknose goodness (or disappointing Talk)
102. nuyopoman — Re: Talk's Riding
103. R Democracy — Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
104. Tony Green — Re: Talk's Riding
105. aerialedge — New @ Bridge Street, N.A.P., Krupskaya, Debord, Avant Gardening &&&

9 AUG 1999

106. Alan Sondheim — + +
107. A H Bramhall — Right About Here (Community Standards)
108. Gerald Schwartz — Re: Talk's Riding
109. R Democracy — Re: Reading Announcement (please circulate)
110. Poetics List Administration — Propjet #2 / Molina
111. Tosh — Re: Talk's Riding
112. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: Talking about Talk
113. Linda Russo — Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
114. Mark Weiss — New Books
115. R. Drake — Re: Help!
116. Edward Foster — Re: Symposium on the Work of William Bronk
117. Tony Green — Re: Talk's Riding
118. David Kirschenbaum — Ethnicity and the BoPoFest
119. Maria Damon (Maria Damon) — Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
120. peter neufeld — Would someone
121. R Democracy — Re: Reading Announcement (please circulate)
122. R Democracy — could I borrow some sugar?
123. Lynn Miller — TAN LEJOS HEMOS LLEGADO LOS ESCLAVOS!
124. Rodrigo Toscano — NYC Sublet Needed

10 AUG 1999

125. Charles Bernstein — riding poem
126. juliana spahr — chain 6 now available
127. Eugene Ostashevsky — PAUL LAFARGE, THU AT CLEAN WELL-LIGHTED
128. KENT JOHNSON — Lynn Miller's strong stuff
129. Scharf, Michael (Cahners -NYC) — 19th C. Po&sie
130. Karen Kelley — Re: Ethnicity and the BoPoFest
131. A H Bramhall — A Course Thru Any Boston
132. Mark Prejsnar — Re [2]: cut-ups
133. Jennifer c Coleman — Jacataqua
134. derek beaulieu — STANZAS #20
135. Lynn Miller — CONTEXT IS EVERYTHING

11 AUG 1999

136. david bromige — Philip Whalen reading in SF
137. Lowther,John — FW: 7th Annual John Cage Birthday Tribute (NYC)
138. Eugene Ostashevsky — Brandon & Brendan at Caffe' Proust, Sunday at 9
139. Irving Weiss — Samuel Greenberg
140. David Kirschenbaum — Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
141. Taylor Brady — Re: Samuel Greenberg
142. George Bowering — Re: Jacataqua

143. K.Silem Mohammad — Re: Farm Implements? -Reply
144. Steven Clay — Granary Books blow-out sale!
145. Maria Damon — Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
146. A H Bramhall — I Guess I'll Say It Flat Out
147. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: Lynn Miller's strong stuff
148. Alan Sondheim — eXchange
149. Lynn Miller — "I think I'll shut up now"

12 AUG 1999

150. Alan Sondheim — eXchange - follow-up - please read
151. Tisa Bryant — Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene
152. Jeffrey Jullich — Farm Implements? -Reply
153. Jeffrey Jullich — "alternative"
154. Michael Magee — thoughts on BoPo and points distant
155. David Kirschenbaum — No Sleep 'Til Brooklyn
156. Tom Orange — 19th C. Po&sie
157. Tom Orange — Call for Entries: "Poevisioni elettroniche" (fwd)
158. David Buuck — Tripwire 3 now available
159. David Buuck — Tripwire 4: call for work
160. David Buuck — back issues of tripwire
161. Michael Franco — get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON
162. Joan Houlihan — Re: I Guess I'll Say It Flat Out
163. Karen Kelley — Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
164. Al Filreis — Re: thoughts on BoPo and points distant
165. Pierre Joris — Re: "alternative"
166. Pierre Joris — Re: Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene
167. David Kirschenbaum — Johnny Appleseed
168. Joan Houlihan — Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
169. Joan Houlihan — Re: get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON
170. Michael Magee — Re: thoughts on BoPo and points distant
171. Maria Damon — Re: get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON
172. Pritchett,Patrick — Re: POLYVERSE & the apophasis of Bernstein
173. Patrick F. Durgin — Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review
174. Tisa Bryant — Re: get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON
175. Michael Neff — Issue 5 of 5_Trope
176. Matt Kirschenbaum — Blake Archive's August Update
177. Lynn Miller — Sugar Sugar

13 AUG 1999

178. Jeffrey Jullich — Village Voice POLYVERSE review
179. Alan Sondheim — the best poem, the very best
180. shana — Re: 19th C. Po&sie
181. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy — Apologies for cross posting: Wild Honey Press Books
182. Douglas — Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review
183. maz881 — Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review
184. Gerald Schwartz — Re: I Guess I'll Say It Flat Out
185. A H Bramhall — Elijah "Pumpsie" Green At BoPo
186. Poetics List — Samuel Delany Reading
187. Mark Weiss — Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
188. A H Bramhall — Boston's Last Poet
189. R M Daley — oh my god: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New York avant-garde"
190. Tom Orange — Village Voice POLYVERSE review
191. Maria Damon — Re: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New York avant-garde"
192. Maria Damon — Re: Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene

14 AUG 1999

193. Jeffrey Jullich — cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New York avant-garde"

194. J Kuszai — New Chapbooks by Cope and Farrell
195. Jeffrey Jullich — Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review -Reply
196. Jordan Davis — Gimme Back Ma Grommets!
197. Terry Diggory — Re: Jacataqua
198. Alan Sondheim — L Th e

15 AUG 1999

199. Julie Johnson — New Small Press Publications
200. derek beaulieu — new from housepress: basinski's "by"
201. Alan Sondheim — Ro

16 AUG 1999

202. David or Judy Ray — Re: Readings
203. Poetics List Administration — 2 New Chapbooks from Meow Press / Kuszai
204. Poetics List Administration — job listing / Kevin Magee
205. Keith Tuma — The Gig 3 (fwd)
206. Mark Wallace — review of Lee Ann Brown's Polyverse
207. Mark Weiss — Re: review of Lee Ann Brown's Polyverse
208. Dodie Bellamy — book search-help!
209. David Buuck — Artists in Conversation/Kelsey St Event
210. Lynn Miller — Speculative philosophy=Secular theology
211. Brent Cunningham — from the SPD vault
212. Max Winter — Re: review of Lee Ann Brown's Polyverse

17 AUG 1999

213. Billy Little — Re: International festival of Postmodern Piracy
214. Billy Little — Re: Ethnicity and the BoPoFest
215. David Kirschenbaum — "Anselm Berrigan is Flying to France"
216. Jack Ruttan — Fw: NORTH AMERICAN LAUNCHES OF BUDAVOX: POEMS 1990-1999 BY TODD SWIFT
217. Poetics List Administration — The National Autonomous University of Mexico strike
218. Gwyn McVay — Gwyn McVay Is Taking The Metro
219. Aldon Nielsen — screening noir
220. John Tranter — Diego Rivera mural rescussitated

18 AUG 1999

221. Lynn Miller — from a Talk on Class
222. Jeffrey Jullich — oh my god: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New Yorkavant-garde" - Reply
223. jen hofer — UNAM strike
224. Joseph Conte — Postmodern Piracy at Kent, Salem
225. Daniel Carter — crosscurrentseas: waves "writing" e-list as you see/be it becomes aspiralli…
226. Dodie Bellamy — Re: from a Talk on Class
227. Hank Lazer — Paul Naylor's new book
228. Kenneth Goldsmith — The American Century Pt. II at the Whitney: Sound WorksCalendar
229. Gerald Schwartz — Re: "Anselm Berrigan is Flying to France"
230. George Bowering — Re: Takayuki Kiyooka
231. Lynn Miller — Headline: " feared dead in quake"
232. Mark W Scroggins — NYC events

19 AUG 1999

233. Carol L. Hamshaw — TELEPOETICS AT THE BEACH: Special Labour Day Event!
234. Kenneth Goldsmith — Whitney Details
235. Ron Silliman — Steve Abbott, LeftWrite, Paul Mariah
236. A H Bramhall — 4th World Reel (Rare Air Remake)
237. Patrick F. Durgin — God Loves Fags

20 AUG 1999

238. Lynn Miller — Class Talk/Part Two
239. A H Bramhall — the Well-Adjusted Poets Club
240. nuyopoman — National Slams http://poetry.about.com
241. Ron Silliman — Charles Macaulay
242. Alan Sondheim — male on the board
243. A H Bramhall — Mine The Community
244. miekal and — segue to the non-virutal
245. Jerry McGuire — deep south writers conference schedule and registration
246. Juliana Spahr — syllabus for Critical Writing Workshop

21 AUG 1999

247. Alan Sondheim — eve

22 AUG 1999

248. Daniel Carter — caught up in a muse-
249. Lynn Miller — A note on "gibes" and "power-lusty"

23 AUG 1999

250. Alan Sondheim — the adventure
251. Dodie Bellamy — summer prose workshop reading
252. R Democracy — BELLADONNA @ Bluestockings--Please pass along
253. Poetics List Administration — Re: God Loves Fags
254. Kimmelman, Burt — Cid Corman
255. Poetics List Administration — a note on sending petitions
256. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Charles Macaulay + LeLand Hickman!@
257. R M Daley — Re: oh my god: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New Yorkavant-garde" - Reply

24 AUG 1999

258. dbkk — Re: Charles Macaulay
259. Poetics List Administration — Cid Corman / Mills
260. Brian Stefans — And Try Again
261. Alan Sondheim — Radio
262. Philip Nikolayev — IN RE THE DEATH OF THE AUTHOR
263. Philip Nikolayev — IN RE THE DEATH OF THE AUTHOR 2
264. Michael Magee — Re: And Try Again
265. Ron Silliman — Great Slave Suite
266. Poetics List Administration — address query
267. Poetics List Administration — Granary Books goes wild! / Clay
268. Jordan Davis — context middleman rfp / lang ipo
269. Brian Stefans — AND TRY AGAIN
270. Lowther,John — An Other South: experimental writing in the south, p.ii
271. Adeena Karasick — address query
272. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Charles Macaulay
273. David Buuck — South Africans strike
274. Wystan Curnow — Re: context middleman rfp / lang ipo
275. Aaron Fewell — Re: God Loves Fags
276. Peter Minter — 'Empty Texas' promotion

25 AUG 1999

277. Alan Sondheim — TUESDAY NIGHT OUT
278. Rachel Loden — American Letters & Commentary special offer
279. jesse glass — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
280. Al Filreis — Re: address query
281. Linda Russo — Bard symposium
282. Daniel Carter — coinage/recurrency
283. Poetics List Administration — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
284. Tosh — Re: Cid Corman / Mills

285. Ron Silliman — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
286. Tosh — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
287. Michael Magee — Re: AND TRY AGAIN
288. Tosh — Serge Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov
289. David Buuck — Sounds Like Art / Harry Partch
290. ken|n|ing — Re: God Loves Fags
291. Poetics List Administration — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
292. Tosh — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
293. Kyle Conner — Highwire Reading!!
294. Patrick Herron — Re: Stafford poem critique
295. Tosh — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
296. Alan Sondheim — [Wrote 91 lines] [Where poets live]
297. maz881 — Drugs
298. Richard Dillon — Re: context middleman rfp / lang ipo
299. Juliana Spahr — now available: Catalina Cariaga's Cultural Evidence

26 AUG 1999

300. Julie Johnson — Upcoming book on Japanese Surrealism
301. Richard Dillon — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
302. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
303. jesse glass — Re: Cid Corman / Mills
304. Owen Hill — Re: Serge Gainsbourg's Evguenie Sokolov
305. Billy Little — just a warning, re:Spark
306. Patrick Herron — Re: just a warning, re:Spark
307. Eleni Stecopoulos — Klingon language query
308. Alan Sondheim — (no subject)
309. Alan Sondheim — Corrections
310. A H Bramhall — social conformity vs Cid Corman
311. Ann Vickery — Query re Tom Ahern and Michael Lally
312. Michael Leddy — Re: context middleman rfp / lang ipo
313. David Baratier — Josh McKinney

27 AUG 1999

314. Leonard Brink — Inscape #7
315. Pierre Joris — FW: Please forward worldwide
316. Mark Prejsnar — Re: Upcoming book on Japanese Surrealism
317. Poetics List Administration — list stats
318. Poetics List Administration — Welcome Message somewhat revised
319. Mark Prejsnar — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
320. Tosh — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
321. Chris Stroffolino — (no subject)
322. Maria Damon — address query
323. David Kirschenbaum — BOOGLIT’s NYC Beat: "Rachel Says," Oliver and Durand, 8/26/99
324. Philip Nikolayev — India
325. Christopher Reiner — The Gentle Instructor
326. Jill Stengel — sf, ca event listing
327. Alan Sondheim — revised version, Our Future Love -

28 AUG 1999

328. Patrick F. Durgin — Bosquet / West
329. jesse glass — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
330. Patrick F. Durgin — Kenning publication announcement

29 AUG 1999

331. Julie Johnson — Duration Press Announcements
332. Ramez Qureshi — NYC Bookstores
333. Ramez Qureshi — address query

334. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — work
335. Alan Sondheim — face
336. Al Filreis — Stein's Balto house

30 AUG 1999

337. Daniel Kane — Kristen Prevallet teaches poetry to third graders
338. Poetics List — The Semantic Rhyming Dictionary / Poetangles
339. Poetics List — The Public World/Syntactically Impermanence / Scalapino
340. David Kirschenbaum — Cid Corman Fundraisers
341. MAXINE CHERNOFF — Reading
342. Brian Stefans — Emile Nelligan's E-mail Address
343. Kathy Lou Schultz — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
344. Michael Walsh — Re: NYC Bookstores
345. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
346. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers — (no subject)
347. Juliana Spahr — fall festival in Hawai'i
348. pete spence — Re: address query
349. Stephen Ellis — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman
350. Stephen Ellis — Re: social conformity vs Cid Corman (addendum)

31 AUG 1999

351. jesse glass — Re: Upcoming book on Japanese Surrealism
352. Bill Lavender — An Other South: Reading and Symposium
353. David Kirschenbaum — Booglit Reviews: Dale Smith Delivers
354. Jordan Davis — I used to be the future of America...
355. Mark Prejsnar — more power to the affluent poets

1. John Tranter
Farm Implements?
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Jeffrey Jullich <[redacted]> mentioned in his survey of Scandanavian poetry the line

"He offers a smile, mild
/ as pick-axe handles a / mile wide which kindles/ the hide of rutabegas"

As a long-time fan of John Ashbery, I'm a little concerned that the spelling of

rutabagas

is getting abraded here. We don't have them in Australia -- we have Swedes and turnips, but not rutabagas -- but that's no reason to become careless about our treasury of English spellings.

Anyone care to comment?
best,
JT

↑ Index

2. Lawrence Upton.
(no subject)
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Happy Birthdays to Bob Cobbing & Jennifer Pike who are about each to be another year young still creating after all these years

↑ Index

3. Susan Wheeler
1999 Books
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Thanks to all for their book endorsements. I'm 12 days away from a deadline on a book and not focusing on much else right now, but know there were a couple in these posts I haven't yet come across and want to, having been asked to help jury a new book prize and wanting to cast as wide a net as possible. So in a couple weeks I'll be reaping the read from these recos. Alas all need to be dated 1999; anything noted 1998 in the front pages won't work.

Anyone know the status of the newsprint <Countermeasures>?

Susan

↑ Index

4. Maria L. Zavialov
Bolsheviks and feminism
Fri 30 Jul 1999

Dear Lynn I read your post on Bolsheviks and feminism. You mention Zhenotdel in your post. My grandmother was the head of Zhenotdel after WWII in a provincial town. She was a very active woman and power-lusty. Even in the family my Granny ruled the waves. My grandfather couldn't cope with the regime and receded into his private realm of hunting and fishing, of course he worked, everybody had to work, he was a butcher, but he even had no idea how to pay rent (the very sight of bills switched him off) so removed he was from any kind of beaurocracy. The feminism then had to do predominantly with power. The Bolsheviks' was a strange sort of feminism. The Party was (not only claimed to be but somehow was) the carrier (or embodiment but carrier here is a better word) of all ideology and spirituality, of all things immaterial. I remember back in the 70s there were slogans everywhere in St. Petersburg (Leningrad it was then) like this: The Party is the Mind, Honour and Conscience of our Epoch. See what I mean? So the Party was the Feminism of our Epoch too. And when it collapsed, when the frame collapsed, everything that was hanging on this frame collapsed too. Masha

↑ Index

5. Jacques Debrot
Re: Boston 99
Sat 31 Jul 1999

For the second time in as many years, the weakness of the Boston Alternative Poetry Conference lay, with a few significant exceptions, with the most featured Boston poets. This is more than, I think, simply the idiosyncrasies or biases of my own taste. I don't even mean to render a judgement necessarily on the "value" of this work. What I found disappointing though was precisely the extent to which a lot of the featured Boston writers, both younger & older, by reason of, for example, their relatively uncomplicated adherence to mimetic and linear discourses, are "alternative" only in the most problematic way--even given the slipperiness of the term. This is particularly evident of course when the New York poets come to town. Whatever the virtues of Bill Corbett's or Gerrit Lansing's work for example--and there are many--there is no one with any clout on the Boston scene about the age of the Language Poets who isn't still working very clearly within the context of Modernist poetics--here, Black Mountain, the predominant influence on the city's "alternative" poetry, didn't really lead to anything but the attempt to find a more "natural" language (Emerson's influence as well?)--& this it seems to me is the most conservative spin one could take on Olson's demand for linguistic reforms. This missing generation of experimentalist writers--so important, it seems to me, to the poetry scenes in NY, LA, SF, & DC--is one of the principal causes of the ambivalencies of Boston poetry. It doesn't help either that Harvard & Boston Universities are so unadventurous--you only have to look at what Bob Perelman's getting tenure at the University of PA has meant to the scene there to see what a catalyzing (or inhibiting) role the universities can play in the cultural life of a city. Which is not to say that there is no alternative to the Bost Alternative--Jack Kimball's EAST VILLAGE anthology suggests that different emphases could have been made--but the absence of, say, Lori Lubeski from the Conference is symptomatic of the general Boston maliase.

↑ Index

6. Billy Little

Re: 1999 Books

Sat 31 Jul 1999

> For several reasons, I've a question for y'all: what are the best books of poetry (collections, summations, book-lengths, etc.) published in 1999 you've come upon?
>
> Susan

www.eastvillage.com www.jacket.com
the newark review explosive mag submit you dog
rhizome
Girl From Ermita and Selected Poems Goh Poh Seng scars on th seehors bill bissett

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

7. Jacques Debrot
Re [2]: Boston 99
Sat 31 Jul 1999

My post was written in such haste, I just want to add that it might have been unclear that I was speaking about the featured Boston area poets. The term "Boston poets" might seem to imply, erroneously that I was talking about all of the poets who attended the Boston conference.

What if? What if John Wieners were in a position to exert influence? What if Clark Coolidge had lived in Boston & not western MA? What if Michael Gizzi taught here? . . .

↑ Index

8. Alaric Sumner
Dom Sylvester Houédard archive
Sat 31 Jul 1999

The recent mention of dsh on the wr-eye-tings list prompts me to send the following:

The dsh (Dom Sylvester Houédard) archive is now at John Rylands Research Institute.
They have an interim document available with brief listings of their collection.
Contact Stella Halkyard on "S.HALKYARD, Deansgate" <[redacted]>

> 3.3 Twentieth-Century English Literary Archives, Stella Halkyard.
>
> Since the last issue of the Newsletter, much of the work of this project has been > concerned with the acquisition of new archives as part of its brief within the field of collection development. New archives include: the literary papers and letters of the poet Dawson Jackson; the second instalment of the archive of the > Benedictine mystic and poet, dom sylvester houedard; the papers and artist's `roughs' of the Carcanet Press book jacket designer Stephen Raw; and material (including audio tapes as well as paper manuscripts) relating to the publishing of > Carcanet's book Conversations with Critics by Nicolas Tredell. New and extensive additions to the Carcanet Press Archive have also been made.
>
> With the start of the new academic year, the project's `outreach' programme into > the Department of English Language and Literature, University of Manchester, continued to develop, ensuring that the Rylands collections relating to > the study > of English have a high profile within their parent institution.

↑ Index

9. Gerald Schwartz boston conf.
Sat 31 Jul 1999

To List:

Are there any reports from the "2nd Annual Boston Alternative Poetry Conference, specifically the Bronk Reading, and Maria Damon's presentation? If any can, please share.

Thank you

Best,

Gerald

↑ Index

10. Lawrence Upton.
WF Publications
Sat 31 Jul 1999

Writers Forum announces the publication of:
= "the unintentional offensive as turning point" by Bob Cobbing & Lawrence Upton ISBN 0 86162 886 1 £1 plus postage
= "guests in the land of yomi" by Lawrence Upton & Bob Cobbing ISBN 0 86162
887 X £1 plus postage
Both part of "Domestic Ambient Noise"
= "Neutral Drums" by Robert Sheppard & Patricia Farrell ISBN 0 86162 967 1 £2 plus postage = "Voices" by Bob Cobbing ISBN 0 86162 970 1 £2 plus postage = "RECOGNITION" by Elizabeth James ISBN 0 86162 969 2 £1.50 plus postage

Order from New River Project 89a Petherton Road, London N5 2QT
Sterling only. 50p and item should cover p & p - more for overseas
If you can't do sterling then I suggest you deal through a sympathetic bookseller- Mr Riley for instance?
NB Please don't send me orders. I don't have any WF books for sale and I don't live near him. I do this because he hasn't got an internet connection.
Thank you
Lawrence

The Sub Voicive Poetry website:
http://www2.crosswinds.net/members/~subvoicivepoetry/

Lawrence Upton's website:
http://members.spree.com/sip/lizard/index.htm

↑ Index

11. Joel Lewis
Re: 1999 Books
Sun 1 Aug 1999

The collected poems of J.H. Prynne (Bloodaxe) is one of this year's major poetry events. I got my copy thru amzon's uk website & in under a week. Atalst, US readers will get a chance to discover this important poet.

Galassi's translations of Montale (FS&G) may finally bring this poet to wider english language. Not sure what the vant-garde has against this guy (re: a thread here of a few months back), but this book launched me on a montale kick of thelast few months.

don't have the title handy, but the selected shorter poems of Ted Enslinn (NPF) puts this usually very long-winded poet in a much better light, as he is the master of the short lyric.

↑ Index

12. Alan Sondheim
"I believe" (fwd)
Sun 1 Aug 1999

-

I believe

I believe in the power of the word, that I can write myself in and out of worlds, that each and every inscription is, by its very breath, transformative.
I believe that the world has a certain style, that the style of the world is in the form of the word, that the word occurs all the way down, layer after layer of protocols, waves, particles, fields.
I believe in the coherency of the world,
I believe that information feels, that it is a leverage of the world, that it is linked to the real
Couplings X X X
I believe that the style of the world is reproducible.

coherency that can for example lend itself across inflationary barriers
I believe I mean such barriers not foreclosed to the imagination which is the chaos of information.
I believe that the power of the world is littoral.
particles, fields
Couplings X X X
It is always already connected to the institutionalization of power or its brute force, but it's not that I always believe this.

↑ Index

13. dbkk
Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
Sun 1 Aug 1999

At 7:26 PM +0000 7/30/99, Joan Houlihan wrote: >Without getting into all the psychological implications (and >biological and genetic), you could look at Sylvia Plath as an example of >someone striving to live "honestly." Her work was a nearly seamless >outgrowth of her emotional life. But this is generally not a survivable >condition in the "real world." Maybe in the world of saints and such.
>

Joan,

This take on Plath's life is contrary to any I've seen before. From what I read she tried to live the life of the perfect 50s woman--emphasis on the word perfect. Much of what I find interesting about her is the tension between the banality of her surface good girlness and the turmoil and upheaval in the work. Honesty in personal relations??? I see her with the stretched smile of Patty MacCormick in The Bad Seed (whom I recently saw interviewed live on stage at the Castro Theater).

Dodie

↑ Index

14. pete spence
Re: 1999 Books
Mon 2 Aug 1999

> i have been a professional performance poet since 1985 and i've always been made to feel inferior to the print poets of australia - >komninos
> as usual mr kominos you are the twee con of australian poetry//pete spence

Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com

↑ Index

15. Alan Sondheim

What I'm Doing About It

Mon 2 Aug 1999

\\\\\\ \\\ \\\\\\ \\\

What I'm Doing About It

As September-February virtual writer-in-residence at trAce I'm supposed to be preparing for incoming. Meanwhile we were three months away from desk- tops, and the laptops can't handle the Linux system I need. So I bought a Compaq 5204 only to find the sound gone on the system, which is now being subject to a quick restore, thanks to Compaq help; the problem remains which means that hardware's got to be changed. I've already spent an even- ing when I should be learning cgi-bin stuff playing around with drivers that I shouldn't have had to touch; I'd already tweaked the Win98 registry and added a swapfile, etc., and that only took three days. I find myself caught on slow modems when anything does work (and why is the QuickRestore disk adding Windows NT setup at the moment? why does it give copying data and current process percentages without giving the process name and the time left for restoration?). I'm replete with gremlins; in the cgi-bin, I used a script that runs on everything else (not my own), thanks to Paula Edmiston who sent me the URLs; I then set permissions and paths properly and I can pretend to add to hypertext to no avail. It's hot here but at least the computers (this older Pentium 100 and the Compaq which runs at 330 with a different chip) are cooled over by the window. I'm desperate for rain. I'm not made for file permissions and drivers and tech support which isn't life support. I'm panicky about the residency, feeling very unprepared - not enough perl, not enough javascript, only the blurred edg- es of a story and what about those email lists? - I'm run ragged at the precipice lip, out of money for further equipment (I'd give a lot if I had it for a Toshiba Libretto fit out with RedHat 6.1 - _that_ would be ideal) and out of sorts as "SystemSave" keeps running to my right - all of my own data and tweaking having been erased of course. Well, this has all come to an end with the QuickRestore and sure enough the sound is still bad and I call up support again and tech tells me I have to bring it in to a certi- fied dealer - well, first he's (the first tech was she's) got me going into safe mode and removing the sound card and of course that's not it, and then I hang up and check the warranty and it says I get on-site ser- vice and I call tech support for the third time after calling the Compaq main office at 2 in the morning and how dare they remain closed when I'M calling, and anyway, the third guy agrees to the terms, gives me a case number (now I'm official, I'm a case - this is the third case I've had with Compaq mind you in three years, the other two ending in a class ac- tion lawsuit), so within 3 to 5 days I can presumably start setting up RedHat Linux 6.1 (if I can find it cheap enough) on the system (I've never used lilo for booting, just System Commander), and and and and and the whole world is beginning to feel like one big kludge, I shouldn't be the virtual-writer-in-residence, I can hardly spell my name at the moment, my work is all one big lie, the center doesn't hold and either do the edges and for that matter nothing in particular holds anywhere across the middle either, and I think that all of human history is one big kludge, bumbling around, it's amazing if the keyboard works (even if it's not connected to anything, I have one of those Microsoft contoured ones and it feels great, but the system's shut down until the repairs are done), it's amazing if the mouth works, if speech works, in the long run into that dark dark night as Fitzgerald might say, there's no one to call, no one to pick up the phone, no machine to take the messages, no machine to deliver them, there's only that si- lence on the line, there are no lines, there are no phones, no ears to hear no mouths to speak of, and I think

thank god we're all fools looking down at our feet, I wonder if I can do anything with this semi-broken RedHat Linux 5.0 on the other machine, so what if the cgi-bin doesn't work, the colors aren't proper, and it won't go into SVGA mode, keeping me in a ridiculous 640 by 480 or some such with Netscape Communicator not even staying properly within X-Window coordin- ates, but flooding all over multiple desktops, making me jumpy when I'm working, just another kludge, I look into the mirror and see parts and parts and parts, nothing whole, just assemblages linked together, it's psychosis that makes me think they're only concatenated, coupled, broken, ready to collapse at any moment, whole worlds are held together

by tethers like that, this, the other, just as the parts of me beg for different names

---

↑ Index

16. J Kimball
Boston Alt.Poe Con. ('99)
Mon 2 Aug 1999

Gerald Schwartz --

You asked us to share impressions of the Boston Conference.

"...Once was a mermaid martyred ashore
She stood half humanly on her soft white feet
And sang tenaciously
There
In as many lines as it often takes, a story has emerged..."

And there Lyn Hejinian concluded and, along with Tina Darragh and John Wieners, stole the show.

High highlights: Wieners' reading older, lyrically cohesive poetry that was ignored, in fact incomprehensible to most 20 years ago -- worth the price of admission this summer day; Tina Darragh and Lyn Hejinian demonstrating in two distinct directions how personable 'lang' gets -- committed as ever to messaging beyond tight, wiry surfaces that craft, postlang, clearly necessitates; Wendy Kramer's spiff amalgam of communitarian cum postCagey "performative"; Lewis Warsh, hardly winding down on his life's project, lavish scrutiny of ... is it male intimacy? Michael Gizzi libretto-ing from _No Both_ and _Too Much Johnson_ from which emerge these lines in "Mr. America's Dehydrated Nightjar":

"...you want an equation very well we grew up crazy for kneeslaps and paperweights featuring snowflakes we've a great infection to serve many Jasons to come..."

I'll be running out of post space, but there were Chris Stroffolino who read as much apres-Ashbery as Gizzi, less Annandale-on-the-Hudson, though, mean (and proud of it); Maggie Zurawski, whose poems are just so surgical and Moneyline I want to die in her arms; CD Wright going on in the finest drawls from _Deepstep Come Shining_:

"...Hog Waste Lagoon is overflowing. _From the west down to the east._

What an onion. They're Vidalias. Now do you know where we are.

Did you ask the taxidermist about the eyes. [...] [Emphasis in original.] ["Now do you know where we are" serves as a refrain, bigger and bigger laughs, yucks, etc.]

Peter Ganick read to his mock max by timing blocks of silence between blocks of three-line verse:

"...nothing nnootthhiinngg perhaps wordperfect a sitcom a voice wooden inhaled response decked on bathroom floor worries you away hello

Equal time, that is, text and silence. Fortissimo. Also very fortissimo, Anselm Berrigan with throw-away lines like: "Poppa my pod fell apart"; "Consider yr medicated acquaintances / as offering you a crash course in diplomacy"; and as a kind meta-comment to Conference admin, "Caveman! Schedule yr / readers appropriately."

Aside, for a sec, on group readings -- The Bronk was cancelled because I was the only one left standing, armed and ready to read my man. And just a whiff of agreement here with Jacques Debrot about the conservative undercurrents that prop up the shiny new atmosphere: in contrast to Bronk, droves of us lined up to read Emily Dickinson (whose also my man). I read her in Japanese and a couple of other languages (prompting the Boston-based group organizer to leave the room). Drew Gardner read her, impressively, from memory. Chris Stroffolino read her the loudest, and made her sound, well, contemporary. The O'Hara group reading was lots of fun (no kidding), but I was surprised how we all avoided the really famous poems that need _lots_ of i-n-f-l-e-c-t-i-o-n. Lots of white guys, most passing themselves off as unqueer, and a sonic Anne Waldman.

Then -- back to origninal poetry -- later the same day of the O'Hara group fest, there was a pile of truth-telling about marriage by Anne; words like 'towels' and 'twos' came up a lot. Kristin Prevallet blew us away topically or perhaps faux-topically, juxtaposing sad / bad realia blurbs from the oddest array of American daily newspapers. I was running in and out of the gruesome classroom where everyone had to read while Drew Gardner, Patrick Doud, and Alan Gilbert held forth, but the scuttlebutt was awfully positive. And badly-scheduled performances [read 'early a.m.'] veiled great stuff from Jacques Debrot, Doug Rothschild, Brendan Lorber, Barbara Freeman, Prageeta Sharma, Heather Scott Peterson. But I'll be putting up videos and text from most of these readings over the next few volumes of The East Village, so nothing's lost!

And, I forgot to mention Jim Behrle, a Boston poet who has lots of guts [read 'heartfelt']; Michael Basinski, straightman to his own wondrous ad libs nosed against his faked mistranslations of a language-toy palimpsest; smiling Jordan Davis reading too short a time for optimum dream affect (style query: if Jordan moussed his hair back, would his poems brood?); Forrest Gander reading beautifully from a new work in English and Spanish. I'm leaving a few friends and me out. Maria Damon read an in-progress, "Something about Bob Kaufman and the Poet's Labor," fabulously provocative in that form, I thought. Lots of fact-checking -- Kaufman's and, who knows, his father's work habits may figure into this - surely leftwing but not a bit preachy.

-- Jack

↑ Index

17. Brian Stefans

Re: POETICS Digest - 29 Jul 1999 to 30 Jul 1999 (#1999-145)

Mon 2 Aug 1999

Hi Jordan,

Yes, of course Debbie does that very much. What interests me about Moxley is that she's trying to sneak in much of this artifice and sensibility that is "anachronistic" as being very much a mark of "sincerity," or that she's not quite foregrounding her artifice the way Robertson does, nor does she engage in that hyperbolic rhetoric that just drenches Debbie in soap-box irony (meaning that irony whose "message" outweighs its levity). (She did more in her first book, but not in the new chappy.) Debbie could be said to be a safer work, I think, due to its density and ideological surety -- I mean the means of reception are in place for a book like that, and the influences leading up to it are more or less respected when they're not totally obscure -- whereas I think the Moxley chapbook -- what's it called now, something Life -- attempts a sort of monumentality unhindered by this (debilitating?) irony, for better or worse (worse when it is poorly imitated, as she is destined to be), and freely accesses certain traditions and modes that are not quite in the ascendant, and these sorts of gesture could sink it for many, though on the other hand haven't and probably won't. This isn't to put Debbie on the lower end of some sort of critical totem pole -- it's incredibly smart and wicked like most of Robertson's work -- just in this particular light Moxley's poetry comes out as the more unusual even if in the end it's strangeness is the free use of convention.

Another way to look at it: you can't get excited about Moxley's work the way you would about a traditionally "new" sort of avant-garde poetry, since she's not avant-garde or new. And yet there's something there turning many of these value systems on their heads, and she fits in no obvious way into the underground traditions that we are familiar with. But then one asks how she fits in with say a Bishop or say the "mainstream" of today? I think she's at a distance from them precisely because of this use of "anachronistic" technique. Yes, my dear Watson.

Make sense? Well, must runn....
Brian

↑ Index

18. Kenneth Goldsmith

___ U B U W E B: N E W R E S O U R C E S :: A U G U S T 9 9 ___

Mon 2 Aug 1999

---------- Forwarded message ----------
Date: Mon, 2 Aug 1999 12:23:41 -0400
From: Kenneth Goldsmith <[redacted]>
To: Kenneth Goldsmith <[redacted]>
Subject: FW: ___ U B U W E B: N E W R E S O U R C E S :: A U G U S T 9 9 ___

___ U B U W E B___VISUAL, CONCRETE + SOUND POETRY___

http://www.ubu.com

NEW RESOURCES AUGUST 1999

HISTORICAL

Aram Saroyan, USA, Cloth: An Electric Novel (Big Table, 1971)

SOUND

Jaap Blonk, Holland
Vocalor (1998)

William S. Burroughs, USA
Tape Cut-Ups, 1960s

John Cage, USA
Diary: How to improve the World
(You will only make Matters worse)

Marcel Duchamp, France
The Music of Marcel Duchamp (S.E.M. Ensemble)

Makigami Koichi
Kuchinoha (1995)

Sten Hanson, Sweden
Sound Poetry (1960s-70s)

Ake Hodell, Sweden
Sound Poetry (1960s-70s)

Bengt Emil Johnson, Sweden
Sound Poetry (1960s-70s)

Ilmar Laaban, Sweden
Sound Poetry (1960s-70s)

Enzo Minarelli, Italy
Coralmente Me Stesso (1995)

Gertrude Stein
If I Told Him (A Completed Portrait of Picasso)
A Valentine to Sherwood Anderson (rec. 1934-35)

Cecil Taylor, USA
Chinampas (1987)

Unamunos Quorum, Australia
Recoding (1999)

CONTEMPORARY

Felix Bernstein, New York City, Alphabet

J. Lehmus, Finland from The Color Atlas Project

Stacey Knapp, Indiana, USA dHMTL / Java Poetry

PAPERS

Sérgio Bessa, NYC, NY, USA
Architecture Versus Sound in Concrete Poetry

Petr Kotik, NY, NY, USA
The Music of Marrcel Duchamp

___ U B U W E B___VISUAL, CONCRETE + SOUND POETRY___

http://www.ubu.com

↑ Index

19. A H Bramhall
Praxis Bold As Love
Mon 2 Aug 1999

Blows Against the Empire, the career years. movement of assimilation. poetry as a haven for poetry. the Age of Champions propounds
the use of all tools, id est:
marketing, networking, career thinking and the like. the sacred holds no candle to this incandescence.

here's my arbor vitae, I'm satisfied.
a list of my qualifications follows

↑ Index

20. David Erben (Art)

Rosebud/John E. Smelcer

Mon 2 Aug 1999

If anyone is familiar with Rosebud and/or the work of the Native poet John Smelcer I would appreciate a backchannel conversation.

Thank you,

David

↑ Index

21. Daniel Kane

Abiodun Oyewole on WriteNet

Mon 2 Aug 1999

This month, Abiodun Oyewole talks about his poem "Black Rage," published in the book On a Mission: The Last Poets. He discusses his role as both spokesperson and poet, and offers suggestions on how to conceive of and include political content in poetry. He also talks about the relationship between rap/hip-hop and poetry, and suggests ways to think about rhythm in poetry apart from rhyme.

Abiodun is an original member of The Last Poets, who perform nationwide year-round. The Last Poets were born on May 19, 1968, at a birthday celebration for Malcolm X. A group of three poets and a drummer, they became the revolutionary voice for many African Americans, expressing the plight of Black people in their music.

If you have about 6 minutes, you can download a file of Abiodun's reading of "Black Rage."

To read the interview and hear Abiodun perform the poem, go to http://www.writenet.org/poetschat/poetschat_aoyewole.html

↑ Index

22. Poetics List
Shredding the Tapestry of Meaning / jesse glass
Mon 2 Aug 1999

This one came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "jesse glass" <[redacted]>
Date: 7/31/99 10:14 AM -0700

John Solt's study of the poetry, poetics and life of Kitasono Katue (1902--1978) has my vote for one of the top books of 1999. Available from Harvard University Press, Shredding the Tapestry of Meaning traces the parallel development of modern and postmodernist poetry in Japan by concentrating on one of the key players in its creation and dissemination. "Kit Kat" as he was called by Pound and Williams, worked in an astonishing variety of genres. Of special interest are his contributions to dada, and his invention of what he called "the plastic poem." Katue also formed the influential Vou group, from which other important Japanese poets like Shuntaro Tanigawa and Kazuko Shiraisi emerged. ISBN: 0-674-80733-2

Glass Beret, a sampling of Katue's poems, translated by Solt and Hashimoto Akio, is available from Morgan Press. ISBN: 1-880723-05-0

About Jesse Glass
http://www.revanche-hoya.de/html/g4.html

↑ Index

23. Patrick Herron
Re: Farm Implements? Rutabagas and vegetables in general
Mon 2 Aug 1999

Jeffrey Jullich <[redacted]> mentioned in his survey of Scandanavian poetry the line

"He offers a smile, mild
/ as pick-axe handles a / mile wide which kindles/ the hide of rutabegas"

As a long-time fan of John Ashbery, I'm a little concerned that the spelling of

rutabagas

is getting abraded here. We don't have them in Australia -- we have Swedes and turnips, but not rutabagas -- but that's no reason to become careless about our treasury of English spellings.

Anyone care to comment?
best,
    JT

Rutabagas? Vegetables? Spellings? Mr. Zappa had something to say on the subject, not only about rutabagas, but all vegetables and green things in general. . .

Call any vegetable Call it by name
Call one today When you get off the train
Call any vegetable And the chances are good
The vegetable will respond to you (Some people don't go for prunes...I don't know, I've always found that if they...) Call any vegetable Pick up your phone
Think of a vegetable Lonely at home
Call any vegetable And the chances are good
That a vegetable will respond to you

Rutabaga, Rutabaga,
Rutabaga, Rutabaga, Rutabay-y-y-y...

(A prune isn't really a vegetable...
CABBAGE is a vegetable...)
No one will know
If you don't want to let them know
No one will know
'Less it's you that might tell them so Call and they'll come to you Covered with dew,
Vegetables dream, Vegetables dream,
Vegetables dream Of responding to you
Standing there shiny and proud by your side
Holding your hand while the neighbors decide
Why is a vegetable something to hide?
A lot of people don't bother about their friends in the vegetable kingdom. They think: Oh, ah, what can I say? What can a person like myself say to a vegetable?
But the answer is simple, my friends:
Just call, and tell them how you feel about muffins...pumpkins...wax paper...Caledonia, Mahoganies, elbows ... green things in general...and soon, a new rapport...you and your new little green and yellow buddies, grooving together...Oh, no! Maintaining your coolness together! Worshipping together in the church of your choice...(only in America...)

"Call Any Vegetable" by Frank Zappa.

No harm intended here about the spectrum of issues involved at the intersection of spellings and vegetables.

: P

Patrick Herron

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

24. daniel bouchard
Re: Boston 99
Mon 2 Aug 1999

Jacques,

What is the Boston Alternative Poetry Conference? If I had a hand in organizing it (and I did not) I would have amended the title to something like "Boston Poetry Weekend." It's not really a conference, it's a marathon of poetry readings. Alternative is just a strange word to have in there-alternative to what? There's nothing remotely like it in Boston and its composition of readers is not exclusively "alternative" as jargon fetishists and fellow-travelers understand the term in the context of contemporary poetry.

Regardless, it's called the Boston Alternative Poetry Conference and it was founded by a very energetic man by the name of Aaron Kiely.

Kiely has done something unique in Boston. It's probably unique anywhere. With no academic credentials, no university or foundation support, etc., practically no money, etc. Kiely brings poets to Boston from all over the States to read their work or give a presentation. Most poets are not paid, but some have their airfare paid by Aaron-out of his own pocket I suspect. I do know that his pockets are not very deep.

Anyway, the basis of the first half of your complaint-post (Boston poets make for weak conference) is pretty petty.

But it's the second part of your post that is intriguing. Not to mention your second post, "what if?" "what if?"

You think the components of the poetry world (i.e., poets) can be sorted like screws into boxes of those whose work/projects you approve of, and those who you don't.

Well this is fine with me. I have those boxes too.

But there are further belief systems indicated in your post that amaze me, as well as amuse me:

1) that there are poets "on the scene" in Boston (or anywhere really) who have "clout"

[Note-I don't think you're talking about the people who run reading series and draw up invitation lists to the right parties. You mean their poetry, don't you? As if significant influences in one's work will come from closer zip codes. I mean your post assumes that everyone in Boston is reading each other's work! Like, NYC right?]

2) the attempt to find a more "natural" language isn't or wasn't enough. Been there, done that-let's move on

3) a more adventurous Harvard or BU or whatever U. may help remedy these insufficiencies

4) there are generations of experimentalist writers (as there are generations of Kennedys) and one is missing in Boston (not a pun)

5) Wieners, even in his current "position" is NOT exerting influence. (This, of your assertions, is most wrong I think). Everyone in Boston has been influenced by Wieners I think, tho few have ever met him. Of course, he's Black Mountain.

6) there is such a thing as "Boston poetry" and it is ambivalent

{Here I insert that I did help Jack Kimball co-ordinate a special edition of The East Village Poetry Web Site (Vol. 7) that focused on poetry and visual art in and around the Boston area. However, our work there distanced itself from the idea that there was aesthetic cohesion in Boston poets, whereas Jacques is implying (to my ear) that could be cohesion to everyone's benefit.]

7) that a well-placed Coolidge or Gizzi could make things right (see #3) in Beantown. None I am aware of listen to professors in the area now; not Corbett, not you. How would things be different with different people?

You imply Coolidge and Gizzi are not read in Boston with pleasure as well as profit.

all best,

- db

Appendix

Boston Area Poets who read at the BAPC

Michael Franco (Somerville, MA)
Jacques Debrot (Norton, MA)
Donna de la Perriere
Sean Cole
Barbara Claire Freeman (Harvard prof.)
Jim Behrle
Beth Anderson
Ed Barrett (Cambridge)
Patrick Doud (Gloucester, MA)
John Wieners
Gerrit Lansing (Gloucester, MA)
Raffael de Gruttola (Newton, MA)
Aaron Kiely (Northampton, MA)
Joseph Lease
Damon Krukowski (Cambridge)
Daniel Bouchard (Cambridge)

Non-Boston Area Poets who read at the BAPC

Andrew Schelling
C.D. Wright
Magdalena Zurawski
Anselm Berrigan,
Douglas Rothschild
Brendan Lorber
Richard Dillon
Nick Lawrence
Tina Darragh
Drew Gardner,
Chris Stroffolino
Alan Gilbert
Peter Ganick,
Ammiel Alcalay
Maria Damon
Anne Waldman
Leslie Scalapino
Michael Gizzi
Kristin Prevallet
Jack Kimball

Prageeta Sharma
Heather Scott Peterson
David Kirschenbaum
Kimberly Isaksson
Ian Wilder
Lewis Warsh
P. Inman
Will Alexander
Jordan Davis
Marcella Durand
Henry Gould
David Shapiro
Lyn Hejinian
Forrest Gander

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

25. Maria Damon job alert
Mon 2 Aug 1999

> Date: Mon, 02 Aug 1999 09:20:27 -0700
> To: [redacted],
> From: Della Dixon <[redacted]>
> Subject: UofA Poetry Center Director Position
>
> Director, University of Arizona Poetry Center.
>
> The College of Humanities seeks an experienced arts administrator with a strong background in contemporary poetry and literature, as well as a proven record of success as a fundraiser and grantwriter, to oversee all programs and activities of the Poetry Center. Major responsibilities: 1) work closely with College faculty and administrators, advisory boards, and University officials on the campaign for a new privately-funded facility, 2) plan and manage the annual public reading series, special collections library, outreach programs, summer residency, instructional support for > students, and publications, 3) supervise budgetary planning and accountability, 4) develop and maintain collaborative relationships with local, state and national literary organizations, funding agencies, and University programs, 5) select, supervise, and evaluate the Center's personnel, 6) provide oversight for the facility and office operations.

>
> Minimum qualifications: Five years or more experience in arts administration and BA degree. MFA, advanced degree, or equivalent preferred. Salary range depends on experience. Review of applications will begin on September 15, 1999 and continue until the position is filled. Position begins January, 2000. To apply, send letter of interest, c.v. or résumé, and three letters of recommendation to the office of Associate Dean Dennis Evans, College of Humanities, PO Box 210067, Tucson AZ 85721-0067. Telephone: [redacted]. Fax, [redacted]. email [redacted]
> The University of Arizona is an EEO/AA employer -- M/W/D/V.
>
> The University of Arizona Poetry Center was founded in 1960 by writer and editor Ruth Walgreen Stephan, and dedicated by Robert Frost in 1961. Home to a nationally renowned reading series and a variety of community programs, the Center also has a remarkable special collections library, supported by an acquisitions endowment of $1.2 million, and has recently begun a fund-raising campaign for $4 million to build a new landmark facility. The Center's website is located at www.coh.arizona.edu/poetry.

↑ Index

26. Lynn Miller
TO THE LEFTWING SURREALISTS
Mon 2 Aug 1999

T H E F I E L D O F M A R S

["un poison tutelaire"

Dear friend, loving friend [Nyerges trans.], my friend,
my dear, beloved friend [Bakti trans.], that’s not me shouting 150 years have passed. Our work’s not worth one cent, nothing and learned nothing accuse me of terror, impassable rivers winding dangerous mountain roads go through sufferings left us at passages, perfect tactics heighten the task; I would not hesitate one second to come to the same kind. Be with me for Civil War, one of those really liberating, really revolutionary wars

there have been hardly any of. We are shunning recognition and can feel it, when what a pedant what an idiot has always reverted to conciliation Utopia taken on the form, suave dollar parlor North American culture, the corpse won't fit in its coffin, rotting around us, rapidly ripening lately polluting in a word recomposing going slowly unswervingly saving took away. I turned it over, who is learning hard each mistake in such a work, I am proud to have been doing it in a beleaguered until other exist, are more numerous?

V A R I A N T N O . 1

Dear friend, loving friend [Nyerges trans.], my friend,
my dear, beloved friend [Bakti trans.], that's not me

shouting 150 years have passed. Our work's not worth one cent when what a pedant what an idiot has always and will revert to conciliation Utopia taken on the form, suave dollar parlor Museum Culture, the corpse won't go in its coffin and rotting around me, rapidly ripening lately polluting as in a beleaguered until other exist, are more numerous recomposing going slowly unswervingly saving took away and turned over, who are learning hard each mistake in such a work, I am proud to be doing it.

Be with me for Civil War! One of those really liberating, really revolutionary wars there have been hardly any of.

V A R I A N T N O . 2

Dear friend, loving friend [Nyerges trans.], my friend,
my dear, beloved friend [Bakt trans.], that's not me shouting from Cuba to Serbia, Palestine, Mesopotamia spreading when we are shunning recognition even, 150 years have passed. Nothing and learned nothing when what a pedant what an idiot has always and will revert again to conciliation Utopia taken on the form, suave dollar parlor European culture accuse me of terror, its day, impassable rivers winding dangerous mountain roads go through sufferings left us at passages, our work's not worth one cent—-native or foreign-—be with me for civil war.

I would not hesitate one second to come to the same kind.

Perfect tactics heighten the task.

V A R I A N T N O . 4

Dear friend, loving friend [Nyerges trans.], my friend,
my dear, beloved friend [Bakti trans.], that’s not me
shouting dear revolutionary proletarians my letter to you,

150 years have passed. Our work’s not worth one cent, when what a pedant what an idiot has always and will revert
to conciliation Utopia taken on the form, suave dollar parlor parlimentary body, the corpse won’t fit in its coffin left us at passages who are forgetting each one from Cuba to Serbia, Palestine, Mesopotamia spreading when we are shunning recognition even going slowly took away and turned unswervingly saving nothing and learning nothing accuse me of terror impassable rivers winding dangerous mountain roads go through beleaguered until other exist, are more numerous, mistaking in such a work rapidly ripening lately, perfect tactics heighten the task.

BE WITH ME FOR CIVIL WAR! One of those really liberating, really revolutionary wars there have been hardly any of.
I would not hesitate one second to welcome the same kind.

http://www.cuba-si.de/revista2/inolvidable2.htm

↑ Index

27. komninos zervos

Re: 1999 Books

Mon 2 Aug 1999

>>i have been a professional performance poet since 1985 and i've always been >>made to feel inferior to the print poets of australia - >komninos >>as usual mr kominos you are the twee con of australian poetry//pete spence
>
>
>_____
>Get Your Private, Free Email at http://www.hotmail.com
i see your email posts are just as obscure as your poetry

komninos zervos
Lecturer CyberStudies
School of Art

Griffith University
Gold Coast
[redacted]

↑ Index

28. Alan Sondheim

and and / and .

Mon 2 Aug 1999

&

and and
and .

and excreting memory
accompanying the hard, soft and needled, apatite and beryl is cotton, hard, spiked and petalled, two-lipped above and below, your musk, my high regard?
... your masquerade is amethyst here, it's your masquerade?
your highest masquerade
your highest regard are you becoming close to azure's soft and needled, apatite and beryl? yes and and and you show respect, you dissolve, obey, honor cotton-azurite melt into azure's skin forever...

soft and needled, apatite and beryl, spiked and petalled, two-lipped above and below, your musk, my high regard my highest regard your highest masquerade

and older, do you know them, green tourmaline and needled, and amethyst and spiked and florid masquerade and devoured masquerade, eaten by open-armed azure and two-lipped alan, above and below with the highest regard with the highest masquerade

↑ Index

29. Carol L. Hamshaw

Telepoetics Beach Party

Tue 3 Aug 1999

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE, 02/08/99
Telepoetics Beach Party: Vancouver and San Antonio, Texas
September 6, 1999, West Spanish Banks Beach
9pm PST (11pm CST)

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre

PRESENTS
TELEPOETICS
AT THE BEACH

LABOUR DAY PICNIC AND LONE STAR LINK-UP
LIVE FROM WEST SPANISH BANKS (near the anchor)

featuring improv poetry ensemble Verbomotorhead and Susan Mullen, from Vancouver; and poetry-percussion performance artist, Mim Sharlack, Trinidad Sanchez, and more-from San Antonio, Texas.

On Monday, September 6 join us for our end of summer picnic bash. The poetry reading starts at 9pm but come down early to enjoy roving musicians and the sunset. Bring your own food, blankies, chairs and beverages—the entertainment is on us.

Verbomotorhead (Alex Ferguson, Kedrick James, Mark Plimley, and Doni Scob) is an oral poetry performance group that does improv poetry and polyvocal acapella arrangements.

Susan Mullen (S.R.-H) has been writing poetry since 1964 and lives here in Vancouver where she is host of the open mike series “Tales of Ordinary Madness” and is co-organizer of the new Pan Poetics reading series at the Helen Pitt Gallery.

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre uses digital videophones to exchange poetry between Vancouver and other locales. Always facing the challenge of the marriage between art and technology, this is the first outdoor link we’ve planned.

“This linkup is extremely ambitious for two reasons—new partner and because we're doing it outside. But like Symphony of Fire, we’re using the night sky for a backdrop.” (President of EEC, Heather Haley).

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre is a nonprofit society whose mandate is to exploit communications technology to widen the audience of Canadian poetry and to give poets, multi-media artists and youth the opportunity to use, learn, and create with this technology. Videoconferencing and online publishing are the major technologies that we work with. Our electronic magazine can be viewed and heard at <www.edgewisecafe.org>. Poets featured with audio include Adeena Karasick, Wayde Compton, bill bissett and Sheri-D Wilson. We also publish videopoems and are hosting Canada's first Videopoem Festival at Video In Studios this fall.

For more information, please call Carol L. Hamshaw, Administrator, at [redacted].

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

30. Stephen Cope
Real Audio fyi
Tue 3 Aug 1999

For those with realaudio and an interest in that which has come to be known under the somewhat innocuous rubric of world music, check out www.worldmusicradio.org. I'll be doing a program from 6-9pm (Pacific time) on Mondays, 8-midnight (Pacific time) Saturdays. Mostly music from Africa, the middle-east, the caribbean, and America (jazz and new music). Not alot of poetry in the strictest sense, although I did tonight play two cante jondo renditions of Lorca poems and a piece of Pierre Akendengue's (he's a poet/musician from Gabon).

Best,

Stephen Cope

↑ Index

31. maz881
Spahr & Luoma Reading: Zinc Bar Sunday
Tue 3 Aug 1999

---

if you are in or about new york city on sunday Aug 8, please come by the zinc bar in manhattan to hear Juliana Spahr and Bill Luoma.

Zinc Bar is located at 91 Houston st @ la guardia
6:30 pm
sun
8 aug poetry

↑ Index

32. Stephen Ellis
Re: Boston 99
Tue 3 Aug 1999

Who were the "significant (Boston-based) exceptions" - and what made them either &/or both? What New York poets are you referring to as having "come to town"? I mean, wch ones, who's who, how do they come to be so characterized?

What do you make of the likes of Richard Dillon or Michael Basinski, Alan Gilbert and Wil Alexander, or an extensive list of others present at the conference that don't seem to fall under either a New York or Boston (Black Mountain based) heading? Perhaps the real substance of such a conference is less in the featured readers - who are for reasons of reputation often included in a program to attract the "wider audience" - and more in the work presented by lesser knowns in ways more "on the ground," the efforts of those more one's peers. In that light, there is perhaps reason to doubt the catalyzing influence of a "leading light," since a momentum would have had to be present in those catalyzed to begin with. The audience in Boston, so it was reported to me, since I missed the Saturday evening events, was "galvanized" by Gerrit Lansing's reading. I think in terms of immediate influence, this is as good as things get; institutionalizing this energy in terms of "a program," be it anti- pro- proto- neo ANYthing, tends to put an end to the ambiguousness at its outset, in many ways also its source. Better, I think, to have HAD a "slippery" conference, direction undefined, only partly differentiated, but still, plenty of direction in any direction THERE.

S E

> From: Jacques Debrot <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Boston 99
> Date: Sat, 31 Jul 1999 10:47:44 EDT
>
> For the second time in as many years, the weakness of the Boston Alternative

> Poetry Conference lay, with a few significant exceptions, with the most featured Boston poets. This is more than, I think, simply the idiosyncrasies or biases of my own taste. I don't even mean to render a judgement necessarily on the "value" of this work. What I found disappointing though was precisely the extent to which a lot of the featured Boston writers, both younger & older, by reason of, for example, their relatively uncomplicated adherence to mimetic and linear discourses, are "alternative" only in the most problematic way--even given the slipperiness of the term. This is particularly evident of course when the New York poets come to town. Whatever the virtues of Bill Corbett's or Gerrit Lansing's work for example--and there are many--there is no one with any clout on the Boston scene about the age of the Language Poets who isn't still working very clearly within the context of Modernist poetics--here, Black Mountain, the predominant influence on the city's "alternative" poetry, didn't really lead to anything but the attempt to find a more "natural" language (Emerson's influence as well?)--& this it seems to me is the most conservative spin one could take on Olson's demand for linguistic reforms. This missing generation of experimentalist writers--so important, it seems to me, to the poetry scenes in NY, LA, SF, & DC--is one of the principal causes of the ambivalencies of Boston poetry. It doesn't help either that Harvard & Boston Universities are so unadventurous--you only have to look at what Bob Perelman's getting tenure at the University of PA has meant to the scene there to see what a catalyzing (or inhibiting) role the universities can play in the cultural life of a city. Which is not to say that there is no alternative to the Bost Alternative--Jack Kimball's EAST VILLAGE anthology suggests that different emphases could have been made--but the absence of, say, Lori Lubeski from the Conference is symptomatic of the general Boston maliase.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

33. Brian Stefans
Poetry Books 1999
Tue 3 Aug 1999

I wish I had the library here with me to make this "complete" but here's a short list of books that seemed relevant this year:

Dan Farrell, Last Instance
Edmund Berrigan, Disarming Matter
Rodrigo Toscano, Partisans
Ange Mlinko, Matinees Miles Champion, Facture
Jennifer Moxley, Wrong Life (wrong title??? my memory for these things is terrible and it's not on-line!)
Lee Ann Brown again, Polyverse

And I'll second the Prynne thing -- really a must-have.

↑ Index

34. Joan Houlihan
Re: Pound and the Bollingen Prize
Tue 3 Aug 1999

Dodie,

"The Bad Seed!" Yes, yes. What a movie. You reminded me I want to see that one again. :-) As far as Plath's 50's style "surface good girlness"--I don't think that was what she was striving to create or maintain at all, at least in her mature years. Even in her college years, there was a terrible sense of "phoniness" that she strove to overcome in her relationships. "The Bell Jar," while not a memoir, still gives insight into some of this striving. The common wisdom about her--that she was a creative daemon who wanted more than anything to stay boxed up in a plaid-pleated skirt and peter-pan collar, presenting a good-girl facade to the world--doesn't gibe with her own letters or reported comments from friends and family. I recently read "Bitter Fame" (Stevenson) and was struck for the first time by her intense and continuous striving to weld together the world of imagination and the world of reality. I believe she was being driven more by a drive to be whole, than a drive to destroy anything. Relationships of all kinds are described very vividly in this biography, and she seemed nearly incapable of having a "dishonest" one--placing a terrible burden on even such mundane activities as having tea with a neighbor. Stevenson gives some very detailed and telling reports of these "social" interactions. Plath is not someone you would want to invite for a little tea and small talk. You gain a lot of sympathy for Ted Hughes from these accounts--I mean, she burned up this man's own poetry, not once but twice. The deterioration of her marriage is one harrowing episode after another, and, like many other people who experience such a personal holocaust, she didn't recover. However, it wasn't for lack of honesty.

One of her lines: "Perfection is terrible, it cannot have children" is a significant comment on her own life. Though, I don't believe this "perfection" she strove for was the "life of the perfect 50's woman" as you put it. Instead, the perfection sought seems to have been one of a meshed universe, where the emotional reality of the poem and the reality it springs from are one. A terrible perfection indeed.

> At 7:26 PM +0000 7/30/99, Joan Houlihan wrote:
> Without getting into all the psychological implications (and biological and genetic), you could look at Sylvia Plath as an example of someone striving to live "honestly." Her work was a nearly seamless outgrowth of her emotional life. But this is generally not a survivable condition in the "real world." Maybe in the world of saints and such.
>
> Joan,
>
> This take on Plath's life is contrary to any I've seen before. From what I read she tried to live the life of the perfect 50s woman--emphasis on the word perfect. Much of what I find interesting about her is the tension between the banality of her surface good girlness and the turmoil and upheaval in the work. Honesty in personal relations??? I see her with the stretched smile of Patty MacCormick in The Bad Seed (whom I recently saw interviewed live on stage at the Castro Theater).
>
> Dodie

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

35. Michael Franco
Boston 99 or At Play in the Fields oof influence
Tue 3 Aug 1999

RE Jacques comments on the BoPofest....

anyone who had the privilege of experiencing Gerrit Lansing's Sat night reading at the Boston ALT PO FEST heard nothing less than the full breath of what ever it is that Poetry can be: There was new work that moved Gerrit's body of work wonderfully forward into a Future & at the same time turned back to redefine the previous poems from THE HEAVENLY TREE even as he read them. Each vowel each syllable each intake of breath released each Word into a meandering song that rose up into a marvelous chorus of Language....

... it was simply one of the most moving & Masterful readings I have experienced in thirty years. . .

& This was followed by Wiener's rising to read & remarking ryely under his breath:
"its wonderful to see that Mr. Lansing's poetry has continued to develop over the years" [please add good boston accent] before nailing us with several tender moments of his own

You write:

"What if John Wieners were in a position to exert influence?"

"there is no one with any clout "

"where was Lori Lubeski"

if anything defines the scene here it is a flat rejection of that notion of Clout & influence- we leave the Quest for such clout to the UNIversity boys & girls who are spending their time desperately searching for power and jobs so that they can then influence people with their clout, rather than setting out on the Journey that poetry is.

the rest of us here are simply at home making our work and our lives.

As for the "alternative" terminology it has been tossed around & poked by all of us even Aaron Kiely who coined it & all are aware that it has thorns everywhere.

the fact is that the work being done by those poets and others associated with LIFT or Word of Mouth (a rather broad canvas) here in Boston is Traditional: & the standardized "epiphanal" verse of Ploughshares, Harvard Review, Agni, etal as well as the desperate attempts (I am imagining Mike Myers hyperactive child bouncing at the end of his school-yard tether here), at an equally standardized experimental verse, are nothing more than momentary, and anything BUT traditional.

..... Jacque: if I wanted to Read, in your fashion, your work... I could nail it as somebody who had taken a decent look at Jess' TRICKY CAD (c1950's) & not much more... Or I could enjoy the fact of someone taking up that work -to me a Vital task- & seeing again if there is vitality there- seeing if you can do something with it..... I far prefer this reading.

 "Modernist poetics--here, Black Mountain, the predominant influence on the city's "alternative" poetry, didn't really lead to anything but the attempt to find a more "natural" language (Emerson's influence as well?)--& this it seems to me is the most conservative spin one could take on Olson's demand for linguistic reforms."

You need only to read Torra's GAS STATION & the go to his KEEP WATCHING to understand that this is just not the case (& when his entire trilogy of which GAS STATION is the first is finally out it will again open possibilities that are far from your notion of Conservative. or take Ed Barrett's work as another example or Ange Mlinko's new book

 there was ten years of Word of Mouth, four of Torra's lift (which not only frequently published Lori Lubeski's work by- the way but devoted a third of an entire issue to her & deservedly). Mlinko's small run of COMPOUND EYE Bouchard's MASS AVE... Corbett's FIRE EXIT before that ,which published Howe, Cooledge, Palmer, Olson, Mayer etc. etc. etc.) or Lansing's' SET the list goes on & on the point is, that for a large number of us it is not a "scene" a school, clout or influence that we are working toward....all of that we can leave to the second tear harvard professors.

we are working simply to Realize our work

what is here is a context & that context ranges from Emerson or Whitman (who spent time here in Somerville!) Dickinson, Olson, Blaser Lansing, Spicer (BPL) Corbett, the Howes, Torra, Gizzi, Mlinko, Gander, Lubeski, Pruitt, Sawyer-Laucanno, Ed Barrett, Bouchard, Lombardo, this context does not raise and fall on a festival ....

& there were numerous good reads over the weekend by Bouchard, Lansing, Barrett, Gander, Lease...to just throw up a few names & there was good work from NY as well & Scalapino (Ca) & so on & there was a lot of the SOS which is a surprise????

****
a festival is no more or less than a moment.... where we in our time -without authorization- (who is Aaron Kiely..???) - come together & talk & read & eat on monday we all go back to work..... some of us go back to school
the rest we can leave to the want-to-be biographers or to the Chroniclers

there is no "general malaise" in Boston for anyone taking the time to explore what has and continues to be going on here...

what you experience as malaise is our rejection of lame academic short-sighted theorizing that has at its root nothing forwarding but simply the attempt to commodify and authorize. this I find tremendously boring.

_
remember what Olson said

"Let those who use words cheap, who use us cheap take themselves out of the way Let them not talk of what is good for the City

or
Mr. Torra:

There is an inward division of selves, among place. Laced tortoise-shelled markings.Each morning the corral of good night's rest. We own more verbs than space, which some say attributes unequal growth and desensitizing effect which activates when the climate is right and too much yeast is added. What this illustrates I know. Wrench expression. Break mask. Ferret underground past.

&so to close: now may we all be united in this strange and inappropriate as we are told Quest. do not but bend bow low sweep as some men and women do walk out beneath a ryder moon in dream and take a broom to the sea. in this life we swim and dream in air. each stroke recurs or recurves in what we call beneath us. calls us to float on. causation forms. geologic foundations or strewn terminals. remain. moraine. we walk amongst. pick a way through. united. rimmed

all best

Michael Franco

PS literally everybody I know has felt deeply the work of John Wieners... editorial /or hiring & firing power or promises of Tenure do not an influence make.....

↑ Index

36. Irving Weiss
Re: Real Audio fyi
Tue 3 Aug 1999

Maybe you can explain why Real Audio 4 doesn't work. I downloaded it on the site of a URL that was offering sound, and I know the downloading was successful. But since an offering for a purchase of a better Real Audio was displayed next to the freebee, maybe it doesn't work because one is supposed to buy the cost-version?

Irving Weiss

http://members.tripod.com/~sialbach/

↑ Index

37. Brendan Lorber
LIGHT IN AUGUST at ZINC BAR
Tue 3 Aug 1999

That's right, the Zinc Bar Sunday Night Reading Series will be a little light this August. Are the Zinc Brothers getting lazy? Just the opposite actually. There are five Sundays in August which means, at two poets a night, ten readers altogether. The problem? Only seven or eight poets crazy enough to stick around New York this month. So by skipping a couple of Sundays, we're actually saving one or two poets for the audience.

With the assistance of Ms. Weimerskirch & Mr. Rakotoniaina however, we have more letters in this line-up than in any other. Dig this e-z guide to AUGUST AT THE ZINC BAR and see what we're talking about.

SUNDAY AUGUST 1: reading? I don't think so SUNDAY AUGUST 8: BILL LUOMA & JULIANA SPAHR
SUNDAY AUGUST 15: DAVID STACK & RACHEL WEIMERSKIRCH
SUNDAY AUGUST 22: JACK KIMBALL reads, NADA GORDON sings & JEAN-CLAUDE
RAKOTONIAINA also sings
SUNDAY AUGUST 29: what part of no reading don't you understand?

Join your hosts Douglas Rothschild & Brendan Lorber here at the Zinc Bar, why don't you. Bill Luoma & Juliana Spahr come to us direct from Dole Street, Honolulu which is the least of many compelling reasons to catch their rare appearance. Jack Kimball & Nada Gordon just jetted in from Tokyo. Jean-Claude Rakotoniaina, from Madagascar, is our bartender, and thus has attended more events at the Zinc Bar than everyone else combined. The issue arises of course, who'll be pouring drinks while Jean-Claude is singing?

Also, be sure to mark your calendars for Sunday September 12 -- the season premiere of the Zinc Bar Sunday Night 1999-2000 series. On that evening we invite audience members & previous readers to exact revenge on the hosts by introducing Brendan & Douglas themselves. If there's time left over, B&D will read their own work.

The Zinc Bar is located in New York at 90 West Houston Street between LaGuardia and Thompson Streets and on the periodic table between cadmium & lead.

The readings begin at 6:37pm and they continue to whirl unstoppable -- like the steel blades of the Zinc's new Cinni fans -- until they decide to call it quits. The Cinni fans augment the air conditioning and replace last week's failed cat-mounted rotors experiment.

There is a $3 donation which goes to the readers & to the veterinarian bills. If you don't have the money you can pay whatever seems okay to you. Just remember that if you pay less that $1.50 the poets might not have cash for the subway &'ll have to follow you around all night.

Need more information or someone to talk to? Call the Zinc Bar Information Crisis Hotline at [redacted] or [redacted]

Please note: No cats were actually injured in the creation of this email or the curation of the Zinc Bar Sunday Night Reading Series.

On behalf of Douglas & everyone at the Zinc Bar I remain steadfastly, Brendan Lorber.
Good night

↑ Index

38. Maria Damon

Re: Boston 99

Tue 3 Aug 1999

---

dan bouchard wrote:
>Appendix
>
>Boston Area Poets who read at the BAPC
>
>Michael Franco (Somerville, MA)
>Jacques Debrot (Norton, MA)
>Donna de la Perriere
>Sean Cole
>Barbara Claire Freeman (Harvard prof.)
>Jim Behrle
>Beth Anderson
>Ed Barrett (Cambridge)
>Patrick Doud (Gloucester, MA)
>John Wieners
>Gerrit Lansing (Gloucester, MA)
>Raffael de Gruttola (Newton, MA)
>Aaron Kiely (Northampton, MA)
>Joseph Lease
>Damon Krukowski (Cambridge)
>Daniel Bouchard (Cambridge)
>
>
>Non-Boston Area Poets who read at the BAPC

>
>Andrew Schelling
>C.D. Wright
>Magdalena Zurawski
>Anselm Berrigan,
>Douglas Rothschild
>Brendan Lorber
>Richard Dillon
>Nick Lawrence
>Tina Darragh
>Drew Gardner,
>Chris Stroffolino
>Alan Gilbert
>Peter Ganick,
>Ammiel Alcalay
>Maria Damon
>Anne Waldman
>Leslie Scalapino
>Michael Gizzi
>Kristin Prevallet
>Jack Kimball
>Prageeta Sharma
>Heather Scott Peterson
>David Kirschenbaum
>Kimberly Isaksson
>Ian Wilder
>Lewis Warsh
>P. Inman
>Will Alexander
>Jordan Davis
>Marcella Durand
>Henry Gould
>David Shapiro
>Lyn Hejinian
>Forrest Gander
>

many of us who are listed under "not-Boston" have greater-bosstown roots. Ammiel Alcalay, Lyn Hejinian, Jack Kimball, Andrew Schelling and I all either grew up and/or attended school around there. some of us stayed w/ family, and it was very touching, i thought, to see Lyn H's family (mother, stepfather, sister, nephew) turn out to see her reading.

↑ Index

39. Billy Little
Re: Farm Implements?
Tue 3 Aug 1999

mispelling is moar telling, i'm with will rogers on this 1: never trust a man who onlie gnows how to spell a wurd one weigh.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

40. Jacques Debrot
Re: Boston 99
Tue 3 Aug 1999

This is Bill Corbett being interviewed by Joseph Torra in the Bill Corbett issue of LIFT magazine, April '94:

"This has never been town, Joe, at least in my life here, that's been congenial to alternative, experimental, whatever word you want to put on that kind of poetry. I think Harvard, for instance, has been mainstream. B.U. has been mainstream. This is not to deny the real talent of people who have worked there. It's simply to say, let's face it, the LANGUAGE project took place somewhere else. And this is not a negligible thing. It's not a place that's . . . hospitable to a kind of poetry written in this country to the wider range."

And so on. I was actually surprised by this because I was a looking specifically for a quote of his just now in which I remembered him saying something like everybody interesting eventually leaves Boston, & I find that Corbett, of all people, had already said in essence what I was saying.

Dan Bouchard's, Michael Franco's, & Stephen Ellis's responses to my e-mail are legitimate, however they completely miss the conjectural tone of my remarks & the tentativeness with which I made my assertions. I think it will be clear if you read my post again that I didn't make the kind of derogatory readings that Michael represents me as having made. In fact I didn't mention anyone specifically precisely because I didn't want to diss anyone in public--not least because I am very much aware that my own tastes are partial & biased just like everyone else's. Despite his real generosity--both personally, as you'll know if you've ever been a guest at his home--& intellectually, Michael's characterization is an unfortunate projection on his part & somewhat revealingly overstated given the provocation. In fact, as I conceded in my original post, there are many kinds of excellencies in poetry, & adjectives like "alternative" have a way of becoming fetishized. I wanted instead to attempt to account for why there isn't a scene here that *I*fit into--whatever the merits of that scene would be-- so that, far from advocating anything like, what Dan Bouchard calls, "aesthetic cohesion"--I am interested to know the reasons--as Corbett himself says-- for the narrow range of poetries in Boston. My point wasn't that there are too many Michael Francos, but not enough of other kinds of things. Dan's remarks would have been more persuasive if he hadn't come on like a counsel for the defense. But do you really mean, Dan, to assert that there is no element of truth in what I was saying?

It is somewhat symptomatic of the scene here that the mildest criticism leads to a circling of the wagons. In addition to Michael's & Dan's very fair, though I believe mistaken remarks, I have unfortunately already received this afternoon 2 obscenity-riddled messages on my answering machine in response to my post. In a small place like this, it is very easy to identify one's own self-interests with the interests of poetry-at-large & to see any demurral at all as dangerous & badly motivated. There is room for disagreement & I would be very interested to hear someone take up Bill Corbett's remarks & interpret them in a more generous light to Boston than I have done.

--jacques

↑ Index

41. Lynn Miller
HERMAN AND THE HERMITS
Tue 3 Aug 1999

WHO IS COMMUNIST, OR: MARXISM IN THE USA

Weak spot: the autobiographical chapter and the conclusion--/exclusion. Discourse suspicious of itself, like a would be good guy.

One can be a leninist and for demourning at the same time. More than anyone, I have sought to cut through the thick web of forgetfulness.

The fixed view rooted in Civil War in France.
What the Latin American takes from Theology.

This work has learned from the mistakes of theoreticians, to help cure them of amnesia.

Trotsky's 1905 and Results and Prospects.
Lenin's Two Tactics of Social Democracy.

A contemporary exposition and defence of Engels.
We have parted ways with the theory of Permanent Revolution, an analysis of Third World dynamics.

For Trotsky the proletariat was the only class capable of carrying out the social and economic tasks like land reform and national unification earlier associated with the radical bourgeoisie.

Look at Russia. No bourgeois revolution happened.

No intermediate capitalist stabilazation developed.
A working-class insurrection installed a State

a few months after the end of feudalism, a State that degenerated after 1924. There was the feeling of having reached an impasse at work on an essay late in 1985 where I was attempting to contaminate

The Fairy Queen with The Peasant War in Germany.
The project unravelled. I had the early Froissart translated by the generation before Spenser depicting peasants as savages, rapists, deaf-mutes and murderers. I was fascinated by the possibility that there was more to this than false ideology viz. Rebecca Harding Davis' Life in the Iron Mills.

Her "light-bringer." The spectrum. Beyond good and evil.

↑ Index

42. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers needs

Tue 3 Aug 1999

---

dear list:
rodrigo toscano's e-mail address--I lost it!
Need it! Got it? Earn big dollars!
POetry Scam! Contest! Yse your words to sell your language!

backchannel for Rodrigo pls.
Others, continue the hard work!

Todd Baron
Remap <Mag.

↑ Index

43. krupoetry
Fw: Squawk
Wed 4 Aug 1999

One-time only appearance...SQUAWK COFFEEHOUSE, Thurs. Aug. 5, 9PM *Fire Of Prometheus...banned in Cambridge since 1989 for "entertainment of no socially redeeming value."

Reply to: [redacted]

↑ Index

44. Julie Johnson
ATTN Small Press Publishers
Wed 4 Aug 1999

(my apologies to anyone who receives this twice)

For better or worse, Duration Press & Duration online is, hopefully, ready to launch its new Small Press Publications Announcements Page.Hopefully this is something can I can make run as smoothly as possible, & for as long as possible. If you would like your new (or recent—I figure anything published within the past few months is fair game) publications listed, please send me, in the body of an e-mail, the following information (in this order, please, please, please):

Publisher Name
Title(s) information
Ordering information
Publisher contact information, including e-mail address, mailing address, website (if applicable)

For title blurbs, please keep them to a reasonable length.

How it will all work:

This list will be a single page at the Duration Press site (http://members.xoom.com/Duration/durationhome.html (soon to be durationpress.com)) & will be updated every two weeks. The deadline for new lists, as they appear, will be every other Friday at midnight Pacific time. The new list will be posted every other Saturday night. As such, I will be collecting information from publishers during that two week period. As each new list is posted, the old one will be added to a dated archive. So, in a sense, this will be a way to construct a bibliography in process of Small Press Publications. Perhaps, in the future, I will start to work on a bibliography for Small Press Publications starting in 1980 (beginning where Steven Clay's _A Secret Location on the Lower East Side left off)...so everyone be prepared to dig through your piles of books. But that won't be for a while...depends on how crazy I want to make myself.

I am going to be collecting material for the first list for the next week & a half, with the first list being posted on August 14th, so if anyone knows anyone who may want their publications listed, please pass along this info to them.

Anyway, I do hope that everyone out there will be willing to participate on a regular basis, & I am sure that new presses will be added continually. We will just have to see how it all goes.

All my best,

Jerrold Shiroma
Duration Press

↑ Index

45. Dominic Fox
Trivial anagrammatic exercise
Wed 4 Aug 1999

This is a poem about language (august, hospitable egomania):
a beauteous, gloating mishap.

"Manageable utopia sought." Is this a poem? Language is about tautologies, an "I AM" bush. Page gaps. The ambitious analogue.

Stage phobia, mutual agonies:
"Situation Omega! Plague!" (Bash!)

An ultimate big oesophagus, a biasing gaol-house. Amputate sub-human. Apologise. Agitate.

I, alphabet - I, nauseous maggot, inestimable - oughta go up as a gaseous, glum ape-habitation.

* * *

(produced with the assistance of W. Tunstall-Pedoe's SUPERGRAM anagram generator for the Acorn Archimedes)

Do You Yahoo!?
Free instant messaging and more at http://messenger.yahoo.com

↑ Index

46. Diane Wald more on BAPC
Wed 4 Aug 1999

I am glad to read yesterday's responses to Jacques Debrot's comments on the Boston Alternative Poetry Conference. Here is another one that didn't get out in time.

While I do understand that a thing really OUGHT to be what it calls itself, the issue of whether participants (local or not) in the conference were "alternative" enough, depends, of course, on how we define "alternative." Aaron Kiely, the conference's creator and guiding spirit, addressed this very issue in his closing remarks. I will not presume to quote him directly here, but my sense was that he too was questioning the word "alternative" in the conference title, and wanted to assure everyone that participants were, to his mind, not "alternative" as in "other", but simply vibrant writers, devoted to a variety of approaches, who are writing in the NOW. That is a paraphrase to be sure. To separate the individual words of the conference's title (Were the writers alternative? Were they truly "Boston"? Was all of it poetry?) seems to me to cloud the reality of that gathering of writers of poetry and fans of poetry--poetry in all its living incarnations.

I think that what was "alternative" was the incredible SPIRIT of the conference, much of which was inspired by Mr. Kiely, a young poet who has managed, two years in a row, on astonishing good will and a budget as small as a sand flea, to entice writers of both reputation and promise and listeners of a discerning and appreciative consciousness to come together and celebrate the work itself and the self-generating community that formed almost effortlessly for those three marathon reading days. This overarching spirit WAS the weekend--instead of the sometimes daunting (or at best irritating) academic/poetic/competitive barriers that conferences--and even individual literary events--often produce.

All I am saying is that if the word "alternative" is a problem, it is (oh no!!) ONLY A WORD. When something this good happens, I'm amazed to see anyone focus on a small negatives. I'm sure there was no deliberate false advertising to those who truly seek alternatives. Perhaps what's needed is a conference title that embraces the "radiant pluralism" that David Shapiro spoke of in his fascinating and entertaining talk. "The Boston Pluralistic Poetry Conference" might be closer to what happened. Or maybe the Alternative Boston Poetry Conference--meaning an alternative type of conference--one that would embrace many "types" of poetry.

I do understand that those who wanted every reader to be as "alternative" as, say, Wendy Kramer and her wonderful corrugated love poems, might have been sometimes disappointed. But personally I would welcome more alternative/pluralistic/open-minded/inclusive poetry events at any time, anywhere.

↑ Index

47. Pierre Joris

Fwd: [Articles: Top Iraqi poet al-Bayati dies in Syria]

Wed 4 Aug 1999

Thought this wld interest thelist -- al-Bayati was indeed a major figure in modern Arabic poetry -- Pierre

_____ Get your own FREE, personal Netscape WebMail account today at http://webmail.netscape.com.

↑ Index

48. dbkk

Re: Boston 99

Wed 4 Aug 1999

Dear Jacques Debrot, congratulations on posing so many complicated questions all in one post and for provoking all of us into thinking about so many different issues. I can't respond very fully to any of your points but can speak only briefly now. Daniel Bouchard has wisely printed a list of Boston poets attending said Conference and a second list of poets from elsewhere that also attended, made it concrete and plain, and frankly speaking as an outsider I wonder how the New York poets in attendance come off as so much more sophisticated and/or accomplished and/or experimental than the Boston ones. Please clarify.

In the matter of a "missing generation" doesn't Boston have a very good parallel in the case of Vancouver where, just as you claim happened in Boston, most of the older poets "with clout" were working in "adherence to mimetic and linear discourses," "clearly within the context of Modernist poetics." And then despite the missingness, the absence of the important generation, Vancouver yet transformed itself into a veritable capital of Language writing. Perhaps in searching for reasons for the "ambivalencies" of Boston poetry you are looking too hard for something that's NOT not there.

I'm also not sure what role Lori Lubeski is playing in your argument, is she an example of an important (perhaps older?) (or younger?) experimental voice ignored or squelched or "disappeared" by organizers of Conference?

I know it's difficult in a public space to bring up these issues, particularly of malaise. So, good for you. But isn't poetry everywhere, at every time, in malaise and must continually be recuperated and rescued? Are you a Bostonian yourself? You should come to San Francisco where, despite the presence among us of even the missing generation, six or seven or eight generations are all working at once and still feeling a little hung over and millennial right now.

Kevin Killian
San Francisco, CA

↑ Index

49. Charles Bernstein
new EBR & other URLs (announcements)
Wed 4 Aug 1999

A section from Tan Lin's "Ambient Stylistics" is up at the Boston Book Review site, with my own short introduction to Tan Lin's work:

http://bostonreview.mit.edu/BR24.2/lin.html

*

Kenny Goldsmith recently announced new sounds and sights at his extraordinary and resourceful Ubuweb (http://www.ubuweb.com/), including a new piece by my son Felix, who's 7 (http://www.ubuweb.com/contemp/bernstein_f/bernstein_f3.html). He has also put up a new version of "Alphabetica" , an HTML work of mine from a few years back (http://www.ubuweb.com/contemp/bernstein/alphabeta.html).

*

I highly recommend EBR #9 and so am passing on the announcement for this issue.

Charles Bernstein
http://epc.buffalo.edu/authors/bernstein/

(fwrd:)

The new issue of the electronic book review, a "gathering of threads" from the first three years of publication, is now online at http://www.altx.com/ebr/ebr9

continuing its commitment to hypertextual publication in its construction as well as in its content, with this issue the editors introduce an icon designed by Anne Burdick that will link new essays back to earlier issues. working against (without subverting) the periodic nature of journal publication, the thREADing icon allows readers to move around past issues as easily as they can read in a new issue.

essays by:
stephanie strickland lorn falk andrew blauvelt kassia fleisher and paul harris on harry mathews reviews of avant criticism by Katherine Hayles, Marjorie Perloff, Peter Sloterdijk, Jay David Bolter and Richard Grusin, Curtis White, Randall Kenan, and the Oulipo.

plus a critical history of the french journal, 'alire,' and a new series of poems in French from Raymond Federman.

↑ Index

50. daniel bouchard
Re: Boston 99
Wed 4 Aug 1999

At 08:19 PM 8/3/99 EDT, Jacque Debrot wrote:
>Dan's remarks would have been more persuasive if he hadn't come on >like a counsel for the defense. But do you really mean, Dan, to assert that >there is no element of truth in what I was saying?

Elements of truth perhaps. Many instances though flat wrong--an uninfluential Wieners for example. And though I believe you when you say you did not mean to badmouth specific people, some people are bound to read it that way.

Anyway, Boston is certainly not San Francisco or NYC in terms of poetry community. No one in Boston would try and claim otherwise. However, I think you overestimate NYC. For sheer numbers of poets, yes it's bigger (and bigger is probably better only if it's diverse. Is it diverse? Fourth-generation NY school all sounds the same after two pages, and second-rate Language poetry is worse.)

Boston is certainly on the same field as San Diego, LA, or DC, even if the traditions being worked in Boston are not ones you particularly care for. But this is a tally-sheet I don't care to keep. It's a hindrance. Personally, my most vital community of poets begins in Honolulu and reaches to Cambridge, UK. You can map it but it doesn't matter. Alas, we do not meet for drinks often.

My disagreement with your first two posts on the subject were more about your ideas of how community works, at least here, which is the one I am involved in. But again, this is "my" disagreement. I am not presuming to speak for any other poet in Boston.

The counsel for defense tone I cannot help. Rather, I prefer it, considering the limitations of an e-mail forum. I certainly couldn't speak in person in the list-mode I wrote yesterday. Despite this, a in-person discussion would be more affable to me, even if it deprives 600 voyeurs a glimpse Boston's laundry sack.

The phone calls you describe receiving at home are regretful. I support you in calling the callers back and telling them to shove it, but as you wrote me back-channel one did not identify him/herself. It makes this city look like Peyton Place! But I suppose smallness is a tradition not limited to Boston. And I know anecdotes to prove this but am sworn, as they say, to secrecy.

I am signing off on this subject unless new material arises.

- db

<<<<<<>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>>
Daniel Bouchard
The MIT Press Journals
Five Cambridge Center
Cambridge, MA 02142

[redacted]
phone: [redacted]
fax: [redacted]
>>>>>>><<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<<

↑ Index

51. Brian Stefans
Boston Poetry
Wed 4 Aug 1999

It seems to me Jacques was suggesting not that Wieners isn't in the hearts and minds of many poets in Boston, or that Lansing wasn't able to put across some compelling poetry, but that there doesn't seem to be a sense of mission or "progress" in the group of younger poets, and that this can be attributable to the indifference of these poets to thinking about or through these issues along with creating their work. "Exerting influence" is more than just being alive and being read, but at least in Jacques' sense also means circulating ideas, either in prose or in person. Also, Poetry as balm for the soul or as freeway to transcendance are constructs that has been quite tortuously deconstructed or at least debated elsewhere in the States (often enough in the context of the "local") but which, he suggests, hasn't been dealt with at all for or in Boston. I'm interested in knowing if this anti- or counter-humanist discourse never took root in Boston partly as a result of class issues -- the "other" big 20th century poets we think of as Bostonians, such as Amy Lowell, John Wheelright, and Robert Lowell, are all from the upper classes, which I tend to think have a liberal bent there? -- but also because of perhaps a neglect of European influence (or a lack of Europeans), or a too strong identity as the source of American philosophy, or what? I agree with Dan that the inny and outy aspect of Jacques post was a bit too boldly (as in exaggeratedly, but also daringly) drawn, but if you want to think of Boston as an entity in American poetics it seems a place to start.

↑ Index

52. Hank Lazer

Modern and Contemporary Poetics Series

Wed 4 Aug 1999

Some good news from yesterday's University of Alabama Press Board meeting. Two books accepted for publication, both to be part of the Spring 2000 book list:

1. Loss Glazier's Digital Poetics: Hypertext, Visual/Kinetic Text, and Writing in Programmable Media.

2. a paperback edition of Nathaniel Mackey's Discrepant Engagement: Dissonance, Cross-Culturality, and Experimental Writing.

And for those of you still looking for a usable collection of essays for Fall classes, you might consider Christopher Beach's (ed.) An Anthology of New Poetics ($19.95 paper), which includes essays by Antin, Armantrout, Bernstein, Damon, Davidson, DuPlessis, Hejinian, S. Howe, Lazer, Mackey, McCaffery, Perelman, Perloff, Scalapino, Sherry, Silliman, Taggart, and Watten.

For more info, go to www.uapress.ua.edu

Hank Lazer

↑ Index

53. A H Bramhall
Promenadfe Left
Wed 4 Aug 1999

this year's Socialites won the coin, were given the ball and they were off. success was everywhere, that grandiose cataclysm that says HEY, CHECK IT OUT I HAVE MARBLES. (as I write these words I realize that I don't, poor me: the distraught faction at work).

the Socialites were fried by the end of events, they looked googolplexed, as timeless as last year's vacation. BUT IT IS THIS YEAR, they were all able to murmur loudly. those words explained everything, and not a moment too soon. the social diseases were ambitiously described and brought into perspective. frankly, some people are half-hearted and some are assholes (excuse the rubric, language can't begin to say enough).

as social as the Socialites could be, they learned that foundering can be an explicitly fruitful part of the experiment, as in yelling I AM FOUNDERING IN THE DIUNAL MAKEUP OF THIS LIFE while, you know, doing something rather more important (leave it to what you think your imagination can handle, just like any authority).

the Socialitism that has saved our world extends it, the world that is, by accepting a vastness of parametres. that means there is a mathematical insistence in our boundaries, which certainly can make one sleep well, at night or whenever. the Socialites had a long way to go and decorum to maintain, so their invention of language took some time, but when that time was finally taken, the shakedown began in earnest (resistance is a fabrication made oily by a steady look into the nearest Socialite's eye).

the futility became more than marginal, after all, because the Socialites were steamed about their place in the world. that should not happen. everything is wonderful, just check the reports, so mistakes cannot happen. it's a matter of going to Boston or some damn place and saying HEY WHAT'S THE HANDLE OF THIS THING?, when by thing I mean some item in the energy field enclosing my thoughts without begrudging my time/space occupation and so forth. (okay, I get confused when the discussion appropriates what seemed an original arrangement then went to town, any town).

fiercely dedicated, the Socialites grew into becoming. that's the shameful thing, the steady, uphill, where's-my-place-in-society THRUST, as if gasping out of water were a fish's right (something that one might have trouble deciding).

the Socialites have felt the pressure, damn it, and the margin seems more alluring than ever, like the ocean when its piquancy nearly quivers in your grasp. I'm thinking that, well, as with all things, time and hang up are just about the same, and all the leftovers can easily be put aside (pardon me for interrupting).

↑ Index

54. Maria Damon

fwd: Re: We have the following two job openings

Wed 4 Aug 1999

At 3:57 PM -0500 8/4/99, Ramona Santti wrote:
>Seattle Art Museum
>
>Controller
>
>Supervise six person accounting department. Coordinate production of monthly >financial statements and annual audited statements. Work directly with >museum departments to improve revenue/expense management. Prepare financial >reports for government and foundation grants. Requires excellent >accounting, communication, supervisory skills; Bachelor's degree in >accounting or business administration; three or more years of supervisory >experience in accounting. Salary to $55k. Reports to CFO. Mail or fax >required application (Call receptionist for appl: [redacted]), cover >letter, and resume to: Recruiting, Seattle Art Museum, P.O. Box 22000, >Seattle, WA 98122-9700. Deadline: August 20th.
>
>
>
>Accounting Analyst
>
>Prepare special purpose financial reports for grants and projects. Perform >complex reconciliations. Develop procedures and systems utilizing >spreadsheets, databases, and fund accounting software. Requires excellent >accounting, spreadsheet, database, and analytical skills; Bachelor's degree >in accounting or business administration. Salary to $35k. Reports to >Controller. Mail or fax required application (Call receptionist for appl:
>[redacted]), cover letter, and resume to: Recruiting, Seattle Art >Museum, P.O. Box 22000, Seattle, WA 98122-9700.Deadline: August 20th.
>
>
>
>

>
>Ramona

↑ Index

55. Jill Stengel

a+bend press: an itty bitty press announcement

Wed 4 Aug 1999

---

the a+bend press small books series is a chapbook series published in conjunction with a San Francisco-based monthly reading series produced by the editor/publisher, Jill Stengel.

The books are smallish, measuring approximately 5½" x 6¾", and varying from about 15 to 40 (author/text) pages. Each book of the series--each title--has its own individual character: some have letterpress covers; some have hand-stitched bindings; and each has its own particular combination of cover-stocks, end-papers, and typefaces.

The editor is of the opinion that the work highlighted by this series is exploratory, experimental, innovative, interesting. She hopes you will agree.

The current list of available titles, as of 8/4/99:

book one history, possibilities: Jill Stengel book two SAYING NO. 3 Jenna Roper Harmon book three a s f a r a s Jen Hofer book four Genealogy Kathy Lou Schultz book five 22 Katherine Spelling book six (forthcoming) Jamen Howe book seven (forthcoming) m. mara-ann book eight Spelt Susan Gevirtz and Myung Mi Kim book nine Eve Doe : Prior to Landscape Elizabeth Treadwell book ten definite articles Sarah Anne Cox book eleven Waltzing the Map Standard Schaefer book twelve extraneous roses Lisa Kovaleski books nine and ten will be released August 8 at the reading at BlueBar in SF books eleven and twelve will be released September 12 (books six and seven will be released at some future/unknown date)

All books are $5.00 plus shipping: $1.00 for the first book or $1.50 for two or more books. Mailing address for orders and/or information about a+bend press: 3862 21st Street, San Francisco, CA 94114. Please make checks payable to Jill Stengel.

↑ Index

56. derek beaulieu
filling Station magazine
Wed 4 Aug 1999

hi as co-managing editor of filling Station magazine - i would like to invite the visual and LANGUAGE poets of this listserv to submit poetry to our magazine. for 5 years, filling Station has been a voice for alternative and experimental poetry and prose and we are very interested in seeing an increased amount of LANGUAGE and visual poetry in our pages. please send your submissions of up to 5 pages, either by email to derek beaulieu at [redacted] or by snail mail to

filling Station magazine
po box 22135
bankers hall post office
calgary alberta canada t2p 4j5
attention: derek beaulieu

thanks!

↑ Index

57. Charles Bernstein
Rudy Burckhardt (1914-1999)
Wed 4 Aug 1999

Rudy Burkhardt died on Sunday, drowning himself in a pond at his country house in Vermont. Rudy was a filmaker and photographer, perhaps best known for his now-classic shots of New York's midtown area. In New York, he was an active presence both for independent filmmakers and poets, attending showings and readings. In fact, I last saw Rudy in June at Henry Hills's show of new films and video at Anthology Film Archive. Indeed, Burckhardt's films are among the great works of American independent cinema.

Rudy has a number of books, but I recommend most Mobile Homes, edited by Kenward Elmslie and published by Elmslie's Z Press in 1979. The wry autobigraphical commentary in the book is a talisman against both sentimentality and earnestness.

Some web snap shots:

images: http://www.3w-art.com/burckhardt/buz2002.jpg http://www.creview.com/images/365_610_1.jpg and a commentary by Greg Masters, with a bit of an interview, and two pictures of Rudy:

http://www.artomatic.com/~gmasters/fortheartists.htm/burckhardt.htm

Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

58. Lynn Miller
6 JANUARY 1995 / 24TH ST & GUERRERO
Wed 4 Aug 1999

"There is a specter haunting poetry"

> Jennifer Moxley, Invective Verse
> Writing from the New Coast, 1993

Finally someone has brought out the ghost and made it walk, and talk. Swift, light, airy--Jennifer probably wrote her poetics statement in less than an hour. When I found it in a book called "Technique," I laughed. It was a dash. It is hilarious and it is incisive. Here is a poet whose first thought about her poetics is the right-wing currently consolidating its power in the halls of that bad joke called Washington. Her advice is to put down that cup of coffee and feel the rage. Time is running out, poetry is a privilege, and screaming our radical politics from the rooftop doesn't mean a thing unless the voice belongs to millions. "Who the fuck are we anyway?" Jennifer wants to know, and it doesn't sound to me like a rhetorical question. Along with her friendly allusion to the Communist Manifesto, in the space of a single paragraph are plays on the sit-in tactic of the Civil Rights Movement and an assertion of the classical Marxist position that Socialism is merely a transitional stage, a tangible and immediate goal en route to the Pie in the Sky. Moxley calls the first phase a "benefactor economy" and she is not dreaming. I overheard the same demand Thursday from two bicycle messengers on their lunch break: "Every good writer should be guaranteed at least $30,000 a year." The speaker's co-worker was nodding his head in emphatic agreement. I could live with that, at least "until after the revolution." Again, I'm quoting Moxley, because she says there's going to be a revolution, and you can wear whatever you want including your suede shoes. I've got mine on tonight for the occasion of hearing what else this poet might say, a poet who wants to recapture the "public domain for poetry" (and with an exclamation mark!") It's another one of her wild ideas, like THE CALL FOR POETS TO CHANGE THEIR NAMES AT THE END OF EVERY FISCAL QUARTER--Benjamin was thinking along the same lines when he called the author a producer, like a director or conductor--some BODY absorbing the current of the time in current times. Electricity in the air. That's what the specter is, and that's why I find Moxley's theoretical contribution to the New Coast symposium so exciting and valuable. She wants excess and abundance and she wants it now. Her call for recapturing the public domain reminds me of something Trotsky thought about. I can't remember anymore whether he was writing about the Russian Revolution or French Surrealism when he very lucidly articulated the phenomenon of combined development. According to Trotsky, the avant garde is not a permanent achievement. It happens once and once only, out of great sacrifice and against incredible odds, and then it reaches a crossroads or the crossing of many roads, other levels of consciousness passing by, surging forward, BEARING THE STAMP OF THEIR NECESSITY, and if the vanguard foregoes dialogue in the fantasy of its own intellectual superiority or correctness of method, then it winds up reproducing itself in an increasing series of diluted gestures. It spins its wheels and the efforts of poets or professional revolutionaries that brought the avant garde onto the stage of history are wasted. If, on the other hand, the youth coming out of that vanguard choose to seek dialogue with so-called "backward" tendencies, combined development can occur--an unpredictable release of creative energy of vast proportions. That's about as far as I can get with that thought for the moment, but it strikes me as somehow in relation or congruent with Jennifer's anticipation of the possibility of a popular poetry. I can't wait to hear her poetry whose desiring is announced with such ease and aplomb. Let's welcome the author of "Invective Verse" to Small Press Traffic and to San Francisco.

Whereever Moxley is worn
all changed, changed utterly a terrible Beauty is born

↑ Index

59. Jacques Debrot
Re: Boston 99
Thu 5 Aug 1999

In a message dated 8/4/99 12:38:05 PM, [redacted] writes:

<<I do understand that those who wanted every reader to be as "alternative" as, say, Wendy Kramer and her wonderful corrugated love poems, might have been sometimes disappointed. But personally I would welcome more alternative/pluralistic/open-minded/inclusive poetry events at any time, anywhere.>>

My posts have not been so much Conference reports of course as much as they have used the Conference as an opportunity to look at, however superficially, etc., given the inherent limitations of the Listserve medium & the competing demands on my own time, the state of Boston poetry & the Boston "scene"--while also acknowledging that it is impossible to be entirely objective about such things. After all, I am an interested party. But complaints like mine I think are not meant to "focus on small negatives." Instead I'd argue that my dissatisfaction is part of the *positive fall out" from the Bo Po Conference-- that is, the Conference has made some of us dissatisfied with what we settle for the rest of the time.

"Alternative" is certainly difficult to think about. Diane Wald is right to say that if it means things only like Wendy Kramer's work--the subtext here implies, if I am reading Diane correctly, the 60s adj "far out" --then the demands implicated by the term would be too restrictive indeed. But I'd like to keep the word "alternative" instead of running away from it, as well as the words "experimental," "innovative," -- "avant-garde," even-- precisely because they are so difficult. The innovative is not, I 'm saying, a fixed category but constantly shifting in relation to the doxa, to the routine & the already codified. It can mean Wendy Kramer, but it can also mean, as Brian Kim Stefans has persuasively suggested, Jennifer Moxley's recent work, in which she shrewdly negotiates "traditions and modes that are not quite in the ascendant," or Tan Lin's new work in the Boston Review. In other words, the alternative is what we use to counter-act-- as Kevin Killian brilliantly puts it-- the malaise that "everywhere, at every time, . . . must continually be recuperated and rescued." In contrast, "shining pluralism" sounds like something everyone would want in the abstract, but this is perhaps what is wrong, not so much with the term, but with the idea behind it. "Pluralism" is a word that is used with insidious effect by the corporations, the government & the mass media, & although I admire David Shapiro immensely, I think even he uses it--though in a much more benign way--to cover-up important contradictions. I don't have the time to go into this here, but Sianne Ngai, in an article I mainly disagree with, discusses pluralist ideologies in a very provocative & enlightening way in OPEN LETTER winter 98.

Which leads me to Canada, if not to Vancouver. Kevin Killian's is a fascinating question, but of course I am not the one to write about Vancouver. There are many Kootenay people who subscribe to the List, I've noticed. But Kevin also writes:

<<Daniel Bouchard has wisely printed a list of Boston poets attending said Conference and a second list of poets from elsewhere that also attended, made it concrete and plain, and frankly speaking as an outsider I wonder how the New York poets in attendance come off as so much more sophisticated and/or accomplished and/or experimental than the Boston ones. Please clarify.>>

A "scene" is not reducible or equivalent necessarily to the poets who live in a particular city. A scene is constituted rather by the formal & informal structures of affiliation organized, if only loosely, around reading series, journals, publishing houses, academic venues, private & quasi-public institutions and foundations like New Langton Arts, and the Poetry Project, as well as around living rooms and bars. As Dan's list suggests, Boston is much less than the sum of its parts. In the best light, one could say that it's a city full of many interesting, autonomous poets. On the other hand, these parts--as disjunct parts-- lack a certain sufficient, or even liminal, critical mass. It's impossible to miss the fact, for example, that Sun & Moon is in LA, but I'm in Cambridge all the time & I couldn't tell you exactly where Exact Change is located. This is perhaps a bad example, but the bottom line, I'm beginning to realize, is that Boston/Cambridge is a city that people spend some time in for whatever reason & then pass through. I'm more likely than not in the very same situation myself. So the structures of affiliation I alluded to earlier haven't flourished here. Dan was correct to criticize what was latently, in my first post, a model of mentorship or apprenticeship, however the extreme anti-academicism in Boston poetry circles is in some senses merely reactionary--an understandable response to what has been here more-than-neglect-- but it casts things in too Machinaean a perspective. Even given all of this bad news, my previous posts have not adequately acknowledged the indispensable force Michael Franco has been for encouraging any existing sense of a dynamic among local poets. In addition to many other things, his reading series frequently brings extraordinary & challenging poets to Boston. But, you see, these readers are only passing through even more quickly than most. The local magazines, of which there are practically none now, have also always published wide-ranging work. But, once again, reading them, one got/gets the sense that the most innovative poetry (however insecure my hold on the term innovative is) was being "reported" on, "noticed" & "appreciated" -- but not being produced here. I get the feeling in fact that this distinction is an important, if a subconscious one. Dan was correct to pick up on my List Discussion habit of collapsing many different kinds of poets into a Boston "pigeon hole." The best I can do now, in this venue, however, is to suggest again that the dominant trend in Boston poetry has been a reluctance to play with language. My pointing to the absence of a Language poetry presence in Boston in the 70s & 80s doesn't mean that, as a result, I miss the presence now, of a local 3rd generation of L poets. far from it. What I was suggesting instead that tL poetry created certain dymnamics being played out currently in SF & NY that are valuable inasmuch as they are in reaction against as they are in sympathy with, LP. If you decide to stay in Boston, it's because other influences--Black Mountain, say-- are important to you & flourish here. But there is no sense "of six or seven or eight generations" of Boston poets "all working at once and still feeling a little hung over and millennial right now." If it's true, as I think it is, that the people with the most energy, & the most time here, only reproduce these limits in Boston, the weakest part of my remarks was to fault them for that.

Finally, Kevin writes: "I'm also not sure what role Lori Lubeski is playing in your argument" Actually a number of people have bc'd me to suggest other names. Why not then, Donald Wellman. An extremely interesting poet, he published O.ARS for 10 yrs in Cambridge, & yet--again with the exception of Michael Franco-- goes strangely unnoticed & unacknowledged here.

--jacques

↑ Index

60. Bob Grumman

Re: Boston 99

Thu 5 Aug 1999

I'm with both Diane and Jacques on the question of the BAPC's "alternicity." I agree with Jacques (and many others including Aaron, the even-organizer, himself) that "Alternative" was a (mildly) unfortunate choice of word to use in this event's title, particularly as there are so very few THOROUGHLY alternative ventures of this sort going on, if you mean, as I do, ventures devoted to kinds of poetry that have not yet gotten any play, or only token play, in college classes (and . . . seminars), or in any publication by a commercial or university press.

Of course, "alternative" can refer to much else, including very traditional verse that happens to be composed by poets not yet known anywhere. Ergo, a person organizing an event like the BAPC who uses the term to describe the event ought--assuming he has time for such very minor details--to define what he means as carefully as possible. "Pluralistic" would seem to have been the better word here. (And one need not be a word-fetishist to believe words ought to mean something reasonably specific.)

I agree whole-heartedly with what I take Diane to have been saying: that what really counts is that Aaron did a first-rate job putting together last year's event, which I attended (and later--gently, I hope--criticized in my Small Press Review column for not being very "alternative," as I use the term), and seems to have done at least as well this time around. Certainly, he's gotten an amazingly wide and good selection of poets to Boston these past two years. I wish I had had the dough to get up for it this year.

--Bob G.

↑ Index

61. Richard Dillon
Re: Boston 99
Fri 1 Jan 1904

For a Boston poet who has cracked syntax and rewritten the writing of writing look no further than

RIC CARFAGNA

c o n f l u e n t i a l t r a j e c t o r i e s

Sinfonia Press
P.O. 385
Petersham, MA 01366

Mr. Carfagna and Mr. Mac Low have had much fruitful commerce.

Let me say a few words about Mr. AARON KIELY.

If there is anybody on this bloody earth who has a more brilliant shining heart that beats in resonance with the essentials of Poetry

BRING THEM FORTH!

Lastly, without arrogance, let me say that I worked for Gordon Cairnie for four years. I have Boston roots.

Richard Dillon

↑ Index

62. David Kirschenbaum
Happy Boogday
Thu 5 Aug 1999

Hello to all from David Kirschenbaum, editor of Boog Literature, a new addition to this here list.

Eight years ago today, we published the first two Boog chapbooks in Albany, New York, and it's been a fun ride. To all out there who crossed my path along the way; influenced me/the press (one thing?); contributed work to various publications; performed at the many different events; collated, stapled and distributed; and opened their homes to me as though I were kin, thanks. Sometimes the flow has not been as strong, but since 1991, each year new words have been published that somewhere say Boog on 'em. For that, I thank you all. A special shout-out to Katie Yates- for her advice and getting me to Naropa; d.a levy- spirit guide; Lawrence Ferlinghetti- for showing the way; Ed Sanders- for his words of encouragement, constant feedback and contributions;

David Baratier and Kent Fielding- for their friendship and late nite talks about being an editor and a poet; Meg Arthurs- for her glorious art; Douglas Brinkley- for introducing me to Lou Reed and Naropa; Rachel Aydt- Boog's first author, and one of the best poets -and friends- around; Rod Sperry- former cofounder, the most passionate co-editor a press could've wanted, and Ian Wilder- for taking me to my first poetry reading and anytime phone-editing sessions.

Thanks and Be Good,
David

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

63. Jerry McGuire
deep south writers conference panels
Thu 5 Aug 1999

Dear Deep South Listee:

We'd like to inform you that the deadline for submitting proposals/papers for panels at this year's Deep South Writers Conference has been extended to August 25th. Here are descriptions of what we're doing this year:

PANELS

This fall's Deep South Writers Conference invites submissions of brief papers for several panels relating Creative Writing Pedagogy to our theme of the "local." Panels will consist of short introductory statements by each panelist, followed by open discussion of the topic.

Panel #1: The "Local" and the Creative Writing Classroom

What are the important considerations and possibilities for teachers of creative writing concerning the ways in which our students respond to questions of locality--of region, geography, ethnicity, nationality, race, religion, or other "local" markers? Presentations may be "case studies" of particular localities or theoretical discussions of some aspect of the "local," or may explore the effects of "the local" on specific pedagogical concerns.

Panel #2: Open Topic

Fifteen-minute papers on any issue pertaining to teaching creative writing.

Panel #3: Exploiting One's Place

How may one's given place be used in new or unusual ways to make creative writing students more vital writers? We would especially like to see papers or proposals treating the relations between creative writing and local music, photography, dance, environmental art, painting, etc.

^For all panels, full versions of fifteen-minute papers are due August 25th, 1999. Please submit queries or papers (identify panel for which submission is intended) to:

Panel # 1, Panel #2, or Panel #3
Deep South Writers Conference
USL Box 44691-English Dept.
University of Southwestern Lousiana
Lafayette LA 70504-4691

Queries for all panels may also be addressed to [redacted].

--

Jerry McGuire
Director of Creative Writing
English Department Box 44691
University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette LA 70504-4691
[redacted]

↑ Index

64. Poetics List
format reminder
Thu 5 Aug 1999

Please remember that HTML formatting is not to be included in messages sent to the Poetics List; apparently one such message slipped by me yesterday (usually I have to cut and paste the text into a separate message - time consuming and aggravating), which means that digest messages and the list archive may be damaged for that day. Those of you using Netscape Communicator, Microsoft Outlook, and other such programs, check your "preferences" or "options" in the program menus to be sure you are sending only ASC-II or "plain" text messages. Thanks.

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

65. Poetics List
open field / oga
Thu 5 Aug 1999

---

had to reformat this message. Chris

--

Date: Thu, 05 Aug 1999 19:29:55 +1200
From: [redacted]

psychobabble

dual spin plates suspended astagger gravity wells column roil square

cultivate field of thought objects within define room more enclosed space contains preference affinity, symbiosis of polyglot virii

open pasture to genetic meddlin edges bleed territory: meaning seeps sumps intermarry blurry survival goldi closed, stranger proof deny pattern of growth swell coffers spill over, intrude infected ideas spreading pool propagate species seed germinate layers, strata descent stepped into graduation shoots waver glided ripple no closure

↑ Index

66. Lowther,John

2 poems (diastic)

Thu 5 Aug 1999

---

what there is to say about the boston thread wrong--an though mean that terms think overestimate Fourth-generation worse.) is as the worked subject cannot voyeurs a able "progress" group about through these creating being Poetry has quite Boston.
knowing this the perhaps agree dissatisfaction demands would the away routine the which she "everywhere, LETTER if is the to
subscribe <<

thread outta boston diasticized truth though for some Anyway, second-rate on But vital poets certainly be more Boston's wrote Peyton smallness doesn't mission that this about creating restrictive "innovative," [pattern not found: ^\w{8}z, skipping] innovative recuperated the this perhaps effect media, attending of outsider attendance Boston formal bars.
Boston less parts.
bottom beginning Dan first reactionary--an perspective.
existing dynamic practically innovative [pattern not found: ^\w{8}z, skipping] innovative "appreciated"

the that correct "pigeon certain played out currently with,
Boston,
Actually bc'd to yrs that THOROUGHLY alternative do, kinds that classes event describe instances overestimate [pattern not found: ^\w{8}z, skipping] disagreement exaggeratedly, to think party.
like dissatisfaction demands of running not, routine already but Moxley's Boston
what corporations, government David time Sianne question,
about speaking disjunct apprenticeship,

↑ Index

67. Brian Stefans
Boston 99
Thu 5 Aug 1999

One interesting thing about the word "Alternative" in a title for a poetry conference in Boston is that, for some of us who are attentive to scenes and locations, it's redundant -- if the poetry really has something to do with Boston, then it's probably alternative to the rest of us. I tend to think that beyond aesthetic and political lines, the idea of poetries from "alternative" places is beginning to get pretty interesting, since the poetry takes on anthropological value for what it's worth, and in our times with nationalism and plurality are such violently heated issues we can use our analysis as a sort of petrii dish mirroring the world at large.

Anyway, wanted to share this snippet from an unnamed poet from England whom I hardly know, who sent on this bit about the British scene:

"No, I wouldn't disagree that the scene in the UK lacks new younger writers to carry the baton, mostly. It's sort of strange, in that when I visited Cambridge in the mid-1990s there seemed to be quite a vibrant crowd of bright young(ish) things (Helen MacDonald, DS Marriott, Rob MacKenzie, Karlien van den Beukel, etc.) but then there was a long gap where no young writers seemed to be coming up (this is now remedied by the activities of Keston Sutherland & co.

I gather). Drew Milne when I asked thought that the mid-90s "bulge" was largely the work of Stephen Rodefer's getting the kids excited, & that things went flat when he left."

I think this is interesting in relation to this idea of poets "passing through," since as the lore has it Jack Spicer passing through Vancouver and giving his lectures seemed to create part of the ambiance that led to Tisch, which then led to Kootenay, etc. And of course Rodefer, to those who know him, carries out something of the Spicerian function in the communities he has touched over the years -- I described him to this British poet as "divisive" (in a quasi-pejorative sense) in some contexts such as New York's which has a pretty strong if inchoate "community," and I guess conducive to "poetry" in the context of Cambridge in the mid-90s. Cambridge, by the way, has many strong poets in its immediate area, such as Jeremy Prynne, and of course its Cambridge, so it's not the boondocks. So why did it need Rodefer?

(Footnote: Rodefer, by the way, seemed important enough to Iain Sinclair to be included in the major British Poetry anthology Conductors of Chaos in 1997 or so, though he had been in Brooklyn for a number of months by the time it came out. Also, this isn't to say he doesn't have a good effect in New York as well, otherwise I wouldn't be writing about him. It's also worth noting that folks like Jennifer Moxley, Bill Luoma, Doug Rothschild, etc. studied with him in California, hence he's helped shape a generation there.)

I introduce this since Stephen is a very peculiar type of person in poetry society, which is that, besides his immortal escapades, he seems very attentive to younger writers -- to the point of oversensitivity sometimes -- and badgers them about their work, he likes to make high-minded pronouncements which half the time are nonsense and the other half very provocative (don't ask for more exact percentages), and he has, to boot, stories to tell about his time with poets like Olson, while at the same time having produced a book like "Four Lectures" which is seen to be a classic of sorts for language poetics. So he's kind of still a beatnik, kind of a post-structuralist, etc., has some sort of natural lineage, but also likes to hang out. I don't know if he's written any criticism at all, but I would have to guess he has -- in any case, it's not his Selected Essays doing the work. As a side note, nobody questions Stephen's ties to institutions -- he has none, never has, I think, besides brief teaching stints.

Anyway, I guess the point is that a person like Rodefer provides something like the social glue that seems to keep communities together. The "glue" is partly the result of talent, interest, intention, but also irrational and, in the standard sense, "social". I remember a friend of mine the U.K. complaining that a certain young lady would only go to the poetry readings to flirt and meet guys -- he found this offensive, but I countered that, heck, if you want this scene to start up, if you want all these poets who are really pretty hard-headed, stuck up, intense etc. to spend the inordinate amount of time with each other that it takes to form a scene, then some of these minor details will have to be overlooked. I also said that you should be sure that everybody has a house or apt. to go to after the readings to get drunk, otherwise nobody will ever talk about the reading again. The scene, in other words, would have to handle certain other needs that poets have in abundance, such as that of getting attention, letting loose, meeting people, etc. (To be snide, I would add that half if not more of the poetry you hear at a reading is pretty bad, so if you make a reading hang solely on the entertainment value of the poet, string a few bad ones like that in a row and The End.) (I heard the readings in Boston got a bit flat after a while, for what it's worth.)

This may all sound silly but I just wanted to counter the impression that good intentions ("pluralisms", tolerance) in the form social programs, revamped institutions, or any other injection of capital into an community, urban or not, are necessarily going to bring about a poetry revival, or that any are even necessary. If a "scene" is to develop in a "place", it seems a first step would be to have those poets be interested in that place, and (for it to be "collective") in each other's work and lives. Showing off is also fair motivation in this game, if you want it (though it gets annoying), which seems only possible when people are looking.

↑ Index

68. Maria Damon
Re: Boston 99
Thu 5 Aug 1999

At 2:12 PM -0400 8/4/99, daniel bouchard wrote:
...
>The phone calls you describe receiving at home are regretful. I support you >in calling the callers back and telling them to shove it, but as you wrote >me back-channel one did not identify him/herself. ...

yr kidding --someone called you at home about this jacques??? it's hardly worth gettting that het up over...

↑ Index

69. David Baratier
Deadline is 8/15
Thu 5 Aug 1999

8/15 postmark. Full guidelines below.

The First Annual Transcontinental Poetry Contest
by Pavement Saw Press

Each year Pavement Saw Press will seek to publish at least one book of poetry and/or prose poems from manuscripts received during this competition. Selection is made anonymously through a competition that is open to anyone who has not previously published a volume of poetry or prose. The author receives $1000 and a percentage of the press run. The judge of the competition is Bin Ramke.

All poems must be original, all prose must be original, fiction or translations are not acceptable. Writers who have had volumes of 40 pages or under printed or printed in limited editions of no more than 500 copies are eligible.

Submissions are accepted from June 1 until August 15 .

Entries must meet these requirements:

1. The manuscript should be at least 48 pages and no more than 64 pages in length.

2. A cover letter which includes a brief biography, the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, your signature, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. It should also include a list of acknowledgments for the book.

3. The manuscript should be bound with a single clip and begin with a title page including the book's title, your name, address, and telephone number, and, if you have e-mail, your e-mail address. Submissions to the contest are judged anonymously.

4. The second page should have only the title of the manuscript. There are to be no acknowledgments or mention of the author's name from this page forward.

5. A table of contents should follow the second title page.

6. The manuscript should be paginated, beginning with the first page of poetry.

7. There should be no more than one poem on each page. The manuscript can contain pieces that are longer than one page.

Your manuscript should be accompanied by a check in the amount of $15.00

made payable to Pavement Saw Press. All US contributors to the contest will receive at least one book provided a self addressed 9 by 12 envelope with $3.20 postage is provided. Add appropriate postage for other countries. For acknowledgment of the manuscripts arrival, please include a stamped, self-addressed postcard. For notification of results, enclose a SASE business size envelope. A decision will be reached in September. Book(s) will be published before January 31st, 2000. Do not send the only copy of your work. All manuscripts will be recycled, and individual comments on the manuscripts cannot be made.

Manuscripts and correspondence should be sent to Pavement Saw Press
The First Annual Transcontinental Poetry Contest
PO Box 6291
Columbus OH 43206

↑ Index

70. Tony Green
Re: Boston 99
Thu 5 Aug 1999

Daniel Bouchard wrote:

> Personally, my most vital community of poets begins in Honolulu and reaches to Cambridge, UK. You can map it but it doesn't matter.

Not, even now, to Australasia or Asia or Europa or Africa? whence several of us
do engage with this e-list.

Tony Green

↑ Index

71. A H Bramhall
Agreeable To The Moment
Thu 5 Aug 1999

---

at 4:05 pm on any weekday the miners finish their logical work. they remove their pickaxes from the latest vein and to the surface return. a story will come to some, a poem to others. this is the dimming of the day. bottles of alcoholic whatever may be shared and the words flow. every river has its image to maintain, of course, and the miners are never dumbfounded by this truism. they look to the setting sun, which has a redness that bridges spectra of doubt, an especially potent effect after a day in the darksome mines. the glory starts to work, and glory joins glory. the words flow, as has been said. the happy miners maybe sing songs, new compound words jetting up to dance in the air, tra la. a simple verb/noun effect occurs, a strange re-vision of what had seemed a forgettable act. but no, lodged in the movements of the two words (whichever ones) a world of possibly imaginative underpinnings reveals itself. you are aware, dear reader, that this spectacle becomes a necessity for these dedicated workers, and maybe to you, as well. the seemingly scant jobs of pick and shovel transcend the dailiness of their actions. the miners enjoy the dulcet drunkenness that has led them to readjust once again the edges. this becomes a process that resembles the making of music except that they introspect as they advert. the cage has been withdrawn momently. some children race to play on the darkening green -- why not? -- but the adults, thrilled to be free of their mining ordeal, have launched into a maelstrom just as sinuous as a diaphanous supermarket. in the treasury of what can be done, the resistance truly fades. the program will be repeated tomorrow, but you'll have to learn to tune in.

↑ Index

72. Alan Sondheim

Pleas/e

Thu 5 Aug 1999

==-==

Pleas/e

>>> can i move across the empty screen. i cannot move the empty screen. <<< >>> can i move myself from left to right. i cannot move from up to down. <<< >>> can i take me to the last one. i cannot take you to the first one. <<< >>> can i speak to you from now on. i could never speak to you from then on. <<< >>> can i move to the beginning. i cannot find i have an ending. <<< >>> can i move to the first letters. primordial, i beg of you, get me. <<< >>> can i move into the thickness. i cannot move out from the thinness. <<< >>> mark me. <<< >>> cut me. <<< save me. >>> <<< primordial, i shall be marked. >>> <<< <<< i shall be saved. <<< can i have a word with you. i cannot have a word with you (a word is all i want, just one word with you, you just have to listen for a minute or two) >>> <<< please, just for a second. >>> <<< come on, don't do this to me. >>>^B left ^F right ^[Y top of file ^^ mark ^D char ^J format ^X save ^P up ^N down ^[V end of file ^K cut ^K line ^T spell ^C abort ^Y prev. screen ^A beg. of line ^U paste ^[K >line ^[T file ^Z shell ^V next screen ^E end of line ^[U select ^[H word< ^L refresh FILE ^@ prev. word ^[L line No. ^O save ^[D >word ^[^[options ^O save ^_ next word ^W find text ^[/ filter ^[- undo ^[= redo ^R insert "Please, I'm primordial; please don't do this to me."

↑ Index

73. A H Bramhall
re Boston 99/re O.ARS
Thu 5 Aug 1999

Jacques Debrot writes: "Why not then, Donald Wellman. An extremely interesting poet, he published O.ARS for 10 yrs in Cambridge, & yet--again with the exception of Michael Franco-- goes strangely unnoticed & unacknowledged here."

I would like to be the 2nd -- or is it 3rd? -- hippest person here by strangely noticing and acknowledging Donald Wellman's contribution to the Big Whatever that we seem to be talking about. (I have clout, by the way, but it's the kind that covers my loins, tant pis). seriously, because this is serious, O.ARS was a pretty damn interesting journal, varied and vibrant (don't let the alliteration distract you from the words) which ought to give every reader the thought: the man put some effort into this. my experience is not extensive, other nobles certainly exist, but I can think of Leland Hickman's Temblor and Tom Beckett's The Difficulties as journals that, along with O.ARS, elevated the idea of such publications to a state both personal and generous. id est, submission guidelines and publication hassles (what a gruesome thread that was!) were backgrounded, _behind_ the stuff on the page. like, what they did wasn't some dreamy career move but a living reality, dirt under the nails and all. these missives from elsewhere, news I really could use, crept into my mailbox irregularly but welcomed; I thank the editors who made them possible. and I think my further point is: quit griping, things are happening, in Boston and elsewhere. and if they aint, _you_ aint noticing: you bought the wrong farm. and by the way, isn't this regionalism stuff being talked just about corny? I live within the Boston sphere and root for the Red Sox, but my heart skips nary a beat when they trounce the Yankees or vice versa. I mean, who cares which aisle at the supermarket you line up in? it's what you do with the groceries that counts. Allen Bramhall, wondering what my motivation for this scene is

↑ Index

74. nico vassilakis
(no subject)
Fri 6 Aug 1999

---

i s it a dead thing this or...ville plaza

de

de oralizd

soz either i've never been or am a po*et b(t)oy no more

↑ Index

75. John Tranter
hemispherical chauvinism 1, drinks nil.
Fri 6 Aug 1999

In a recent posting to the Buff List Daniel Bouchard said:
==========
Personally, my most vital community of poets begins in Honolulu and reaches to Cambridge, UK. You can map it but it doesn't matter.
Alas, we do not meet for drinks often.
==========
Of course he means heading south-west from Honolulu, in order to pick up Australia en route.
That makes it a long flight to Cambridge, UK, and -- goodness! -- it leaves out L.A. and N.Y. !

best,
    John Tranter

↑ Index

76. Lynn Miller
BOSTON 1851
Fri 6 Aug 1999

C O N C O R D S O N A T A

Emerson.
"Absolute"
after toying

with "Categorical Imperative" wave of the vast intricate undercover industry of numerology, into the Delta Plantation area Aladdin lamp in hand,

"M'm," it's not what you say why I said that thinking the white and black they both think

Something more important than us to think about now the pivot of the movement, Acuesta up on Dunham dump the contents sort them out

up over the hill that is a blacktop and red brick area dumped out

Thoreau. Not one of the speakers at that meeting a meeting one among many as one among many the One and the Many on the subject of Slavery and that what thought the house on fire several are now in prison the disposition of some wild lands a thousand miles off talking only of taking up a position retreating between them the enemy in the school failed now to face measures half-measures and make-shifts indefinite debt the Fugitive Slave Law resolved by my townsmen adjourned, the compromise, no opportunity to express my thought will you allow me here?

I heard the sound of a drum in our streets, the Boston Courthouse full of armed men holding prisoner the unlettered now fill the summer air all I have ever seen of a Governor he did not govern me, the United States government robbing Mexico, the United States military force of the State catch a man whom he calls his property, about American Slavery, that we do not even yet realize what Slavery is, FATAL CRIME, the Supreme Court inspectors of a pick-lock and off with the smoke if the inmates hire the jailers. This is what I thought of my neighbors.

The city does not think. I read all the newspapers I could get, the newspaper we read every morning and every afternoon, standing and sitting, riding and walking, table and counter, the only book America has ever printed, the editors of the press in this country time-serving Mitchell's "Citizen" in the cars through every column handling a paper picked out of the gutter the gospel of the Merchant's Exchange. I have never respected the Government near which I lived. They have counted the votes of Pennsylvannia & Co., and impassible boundaries between individuals.

The slave ship four millions under the hatches, paper and pen my pillow, and when I could not sleep, I wrote in the dark my part to correct the statements, what a sane set of editors, to hear you define your position, call these "deluded," "mistaken," "insane" or "crazed" on the floor of the Harper's Ferry engine house the ring of a saner sanity than any Washington, Jefferson--they let off without dying; they were merely missing one day. They do not know the man. They must enlarge themselves to conceive of him. When they will begin to see him as he was. They called him crazy then; who calls him crazy now?

They heard his words read like the speeches of Cromwell come out into a town where he was more he was the most American of us all, and we become criminal in comparison, thinking and speaking of him as physically dead. What is the character of that calm, sloughed off, sloughed along. Editors, abettors. The bodies of dead. That is the way we are. The character of this government. See it by the light of history. What a monster of a government is this. The only free road, the Underground Railroad, "under the auspices of John Brown."

My commonplace book of poetry read by the light of Event blind our eyes to objects, invisible writing held to the fire, or be made the text of an oration on, no amalgam to combine with his gold, look around for something see actions are words by our lives we have loved whatever we have remains material and art, days, hours, marked changes ready to say going into our meeting who placed the slave to kiss for a symbol they did not know. I am his contemporary. He is no longer working in secret. I meet him at every turn.

Our Nig. Mag accumulating inflexible labels along the way,
"a loving, trusting heart" democratic simplicity notorious identity
"publicity of her fall"
her assigned sphere
all designations slide away from her again.

↑ Index

77. Tisa Bryant

Contact info for Edwin Torres, Mara Galvez Breton

Fri 6 Aug 1999

Hello!

Does anyone have contact information for these two writers? Please e-mail me directly, if so.

Thanks!

Tisa

****

Today we declare:
First, they are living in a Nono form;
Second, they are Nono lives;
Third, they make us feel Nono;
Fourth, they make us become Nono;

Fifth, we Nono.
Lan Ma
"Manifesto of Nonoism"
(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
****

↑ Index

78. Stephen Ellis
Re: Boston 99
Fri 6 Aug 1999

The discussion of the Boston conference has, if nothing else, clarified problems of community outside of Boston, or New York, or wherever, as well as within these places. The intent of Jacques' posts thus far seem to have been aimed at his ability to find a community within which he can do the work he currently deems essential. This is not to say that there is no poetic community - there have been several mentioned, in fact - flourishing in Boston, but that the nature of the relationship between any of these communmities and the work that Jacques feels compelled toward at present is one in a fetal stage that for a variety of reasons can't or won't develop. In light of Kevin Killian's comment that poetry has always to be rescued from the mileau in which it occurs, it seems there might usefully be more discussion about individual responsibility viz. finding a relationship to some "larger" poetic community, and trying to make it work. I want to say something about a certain "critical spirit" in this, but it's a difficult topic to address with its mix of issues involving loyalties, beliefs, fears and the like. Nevertheless, and as painful as it might be, there has to be some gut level discussion of on-the-ground specifics, ie., who one does or does not "get" that "thing" - a working 'ground'? that Jacques I think is saying he doesn't consistently get in Boston - from, and why (not). Not that this has to be in the mode of "dirty laundry." One of the big problems in establishing community, or rather relations within community is the part criticism plays, at what level it is functional, and how it can be introduced in some way more fruitful than yielding, for example, the obscene phonecalls Jacques received in response to his, I thought, mildly critical first post. The question is, how specific, viz "others" (& their work) is it possible to be while at the same time maintaining some momentum toward furtherance? How do we avoid outright stoppage in the equivalent reaction of spitting on one's peers? Is it possible to contest

what issues of a future will be those most "deserving" of attention without becoming wolfishly defensive upon presentation of like ideas and terms by those who might initially appear to be nullifying all you feel you are working in, on and toward? What's the method? Or will it always be this beautifully unfulfilled provisional slogging forth with mud on our boots, full, still, of all that comes of being 'present' in this Lost Kingdom in completely unexpected ways? But the question still remains, how useful might it be to "name names" viz. one's feeling for community (to be crude about it, who's hot & otherwise not) in some more public forum, rather than to leave the subtleties of community relationship issues to the more intimately unheard, private (maybe also solo?) voice? This, in part, is what the Boston discussion IS, yet it's disturbing that it's couched so much as general conditions rather than specific tale. Humankind, perhaps, in any state other than astraction, is more hideous than words can tell, tho of course, there's always reason to doubt, the cause toward further clarity. Is there more to notice about each our isolation?

S E

> From: Jacques Debrot <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Boston 99
> Date: Thu, 5 Aug 1999 09:28:35 EDT
>
> In a message dated 8/4/99 12:38:05 PM, [redacted] writes:
>
> <<I do understand that those who wanted every reader to be as "alternative" as, say, Wendy Kramer and her wonderful corrugated love poems, might have been sometimes disappointed. But personally I would welcome more alternative/pluralistic/open-minded/inclusive poetry events at any time, anywhere.>>
>
> *My posts have not been so much Conference reports of course as much as they have used the Conference as an opportunity to look at, however superficially, etc., given the inherent limitations of the Listserve medium & the competing demands on my own time, the state of Boston poetry & the Boston "scene"-- while also acknowledging that it is impossible to be entirely objective about such things. After all, I am an interested party. But complaints like mine I think are not meant to "focus on small negatives." Instead I'd argue that my dissatisfaction is part of the positive fall out" from the Bo Po Conference-- that is, the Conference has made some of us dissatisfied with what we settle for the rest of the time.

"Alternative" is certainly difficult to think about. Diane Wald is right to say that if it means things only like Wendy Kramer's work--the subtext here implies, if I am reading Diane correctly, the 60s adj "far out" --then the demands implicated by the term would be too restrictive indeed. But I'd like to keep the word "alternative" instead of running away from it, as well as the words "experimental," "innovative," -- "avant-garde," even-- precisely because they are so difficult. The innovative is not, I 'm saying, a fixed category but constantly shifting in relation to the doxa, to the routine & the already codified. It can mean Wendy Kramer, but it can also mean, as Brian Kim Stefans has persuasively suggested, Jennifer Moxley's recent work, in which she shrewdly negotiates "traditions and modes that are not quite in the ascendant," or Tan Lin's new work in the Boston Review. In other words, the alternative is what we use to counter-act-- as Kevin Killian brilliantly puts it-- the malaise that "everywhere, at every time, . . . must continually be recuperated and rescued." In contrast, "shining pluralism" sounds like something everyone would want in the abstract, but this is perhaps what is wrong, not so much with the term, but with the idea behind it. "Pluralism" is a word that is used with insidious effect by the corporations, the government & the mass media, & although I admire David Shapiro immensely, I think even he uses it--though in a much more benign way--to cover-up important contradictions. I don't have the time to go into this here, but Sianne Ngai, in an article I mainly disagree with, discusses pluralist ideologies in a very provocative & enlightening way in OPEN LETTER winter 98.

Which leads me to Canada, if not to Vancouver. Kevin Killian's is a fascinating question, but of course I am not the one to write about Vancouver. There are many Kootenay people who subscribe to the List, I've noticed. But Kevin also writes:

<<Daniel Bouchard has wisely printed a list of Boston poets attending said Conference and a second list of poets from elsewhere that also attended, made it concrete and plain, and frankly speaking as an outsider I wonder how the New York poets in attendance come off as so much more sophisticated and/or accomplished and/or experimental than the Boston > ones. Please clarify.>>

>
> A "scene" is not reducible or equivalent necessarily to the poets who live in > a particular city. A scene is constituted rather by the formal & informal > structures of affiliation organized, if only loosely, around reading series, > journals, publishing houses, academic venues, private & quasi-public > institutions and foundations like New Langton Arts, and the Poetry Project, > as well as around living rooms and bars. As Dan's list suggests, Boston is > much less than the sum of its parts. In the best light, one could say that > it's a city full of many interesting, autonomous poets. On the other hand, > these parts--as disjunct parts-- lack a certain sufficient, or even liminal, > critical mass. It's impossible to miss the fact, for example, that Sun &
> Moon is in LA, but I'm in Cambridge all the time & I couldn't tell you > exactly where Exact Change is located. This is perhaps a bad example, but > the bottom line, I'm beginning to realize, is that Boston/Cambridge is a city > that people spend some time in for whatever reason & then pass through. I'm > more likely than not in the very same situation myself. So the structures of > affiliation I alluded to earlier haven't flourished here. Dan was correct to > criticize what was latently, in my first post, a model of mentorship or > apprenticeship, however the extreme anti-academicism in Boston poetry circles > is in some senses merely reactionary--an understandable response to what has > been here more-than-neglect-- but it casts things in too Machinaean a > perspective. Even given all of this bad news, my previous posts have not > adequately acknowledged the indispensable force Michael Franco has been for > encouraging any existing sense of a dynamic among local poets. In addition > to many other things, his reading series frequently brings extraordinary & > challenging poets to Boston. But, you see, these readers are only passing > through even more quickly than most. The local magazines, of which there > are practically none now, have also always published wide-ranging work.
> But, once again, reading them, one got/gets the sense that the most > innovative poetry (however insecure my hold on the term innovative is) was > *being "reported" on, "noticed" & "appreciated" -- but not being *produced > here. I get the feeling in fact that this distinction is an important, if a > subconscious one. Dan was correct to pick up on my List Discussion habit of > collapsing many different kinds of poets into a Boston "pigeon hole." The > best I can do now, in this venue, however, is to suggest again that the > dominant trend in Boston poetry has been a reluctance to play with language.

> My pointing to the absence of a Language poetry presence in Boston in the 70s > & 80s doesn't mean that, as a result, I miss the presence now, of a local 3rd generation of L poets. far from it. What I was suggesting instead that > tL poetry created certain dymnamics being played out currently in SF & NY that are valuable inasmuch as they are in reaction against as they are in sympathy with, LP. If you decide to stay in Boston, it's because other influences--Black Mountain, say-- are important to you & flourish here. But > *there is no sense "of six or seven or eight generations" of Boston poets "all working at once and still feeling a little hung over and millennial right now." If it's true, as I think it is, that the people with the most energy, & the most time here, only reproduce these limits in Boston, the* > *weakest part of my remarks was to fault them for that.*
>
> Finally, Kevin writes: "I'm also not sure what role Lori Lubeski is playing in your argument" Actually a number of people have bc'd me to suggest other > names. Why not then, Donald Wellman. An extremely interesting poet, he published O.ARS for 10 yrs in Cambridge, & yet--again with the exception of Michael Franco-- goes strangely unnoticed & unacknowledged here.
>
> --jacques

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

79. Tisa Bryant

Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?

Fri 6 Aug 1999

Hello.

I'd like to offer a few, okay several (dis)jointed and rambling comments.

I'm a Boston native, living here for 4 years in SF (that's San Francisco).

Certainly my eyes opened wide to hear about an "alternative" poetry conference in Boston, the 2nd annual, no less. Wish I could've been there; wish this had happened 10 years ago. But then, I'm sure it had, and then, I know it did again. And again. And will. So.

Regionalism is just that. Boston always gets short shrift in the competition for center of the universe, and really, so what? Community happens wherever you are, and so does poetry. Schools or centers of any kind of thought/production often produce repetitions. What's been exciting has been to know that there's all kinds of poetry going on, everywhere, all the time. I just need to speak more languages, within the American tree of words, and with the roots of other countries. Someone asked who among the Alt Bo Po line up was actually "from" Boston. There was some brave poet there who read with "heart"? Does that mean our notorious honking accent? (I'm laughing here.)

(I, like Bo Po's organizer, Kiely, am yet another "uncredentialed" independent doing whatever I want or feels needs to be done, on my own terms, and with help from friends. This "alternative" way of doing things is often collapsed into "activism", which is fine with me. And I think this point warrants another conversation about what and whom is being measured and legitimized, and by whom, with what, what yield? Academic elitism, romanticized movements, idolatry, clout and influence indeed.)

Boston is a big college town with a 5% sales tax and a hard core local populace perpetually chafing against transient intellectuals and their overwhelmingly khaki influence on the city's personality, or lack thereof, as well as more of the same between working classes and Boston Brahmins, between races with no money, etc. Almost like anywhere, but with a particularly icy vengeance. Maria Damon, you may recall that miserable failure, the "Where's Boston" campaign from about 25 years ago, which was just as much about the "who" and the "what" as the "where".

So I think I understand the ambivalences of the city, and the impact it can have on the writing of those who come or stay. Especially in the shadow of NYC, or in contrast to the New West, or That Other Happening Country Up North, or in light of internalized anguish for having never been the "center" of a "movement" of innovative note, for all its heavily endowed schools, not to mentioned its fabled unsophisticated accent. So many rulers to break. What does this really have to do with what the writers at the Alt Bo Po conference presented? Nothing, really. The organizer made some choices, the readers made some choices, interpretation was open, everybody went home with more than they brought, and there it is.

(Thanks, Jack Kimball, for sharing with us your what you saw and heard at the conference. I really felt like I was there during the Emily Dickinson parade.)

For all of my literary life in Boston, I was the only Boston native in my community, which was at that time The Dark Room Writers Collective, for nearly 10 years. There were about 15 of us at the best of times.

We thought we were an alternative, simply for providing workshops and a reading series that featured writers of African descent, and we were. On our schedules were Erica Hunt, Julie Patton, Nathaniel Mackey, Ntozake Shange, John Keene (DR member), Sam Delany, Dolores Kendrick, Kofi Natambu, Kevin Young (DR member) David Henderson, Harryette Mullen, myself, and a particularly memorable tribute to Bob Kaufman in 1990.

(And while I'm glad Prageeta Sharma and Will Alexander were in the house at this Alt Bo Po, yeah? Alternative for whom is another question. I forwarded the event announcement to my friends back East; none of them had even heard of it. Who's counting who's missing? What makes an alternative? Where/when does the audience come in? etc. etc.)

Anyway, writers who wouldn't necessarily be considered "avant-garde" were also on the DR schedule. My point? Just that. It was an accessible alternative (yes, Jacques, the "slipperiness of the term") to what Harvard/BU/MIT/Northeastern offered (the series was in our home, and had no support/connection to any of them; we paid out of pocket for everything with our dues), and made a difference, to those in the know and those just getting to it. What did it say "about" "Boston" poets? Nothing, really, or something predictably unsavory, since when someone said something "about" "Boston" poets, they didn't, and rightly couldn't, mean "us" (well, excluding me, I guess). Everyone was from everywhere, and would go back out "there" at some point to get more of what they brought with them. About innovation and experimentation? That everyone, at some time or another, did a little something, some more often than others, it was all about seeing the threads, potential of the past, and the dangers of the monolithic. About the scene? Well, some deserved praise unfortunately frequented by the word "renaissance", but praise nonetheless (and sure enough, it's over now). And nice, donation bearing crowds. It was a lot of work, very trying, and a lot of fun.

Was Boston turned into a colored writers' mecca? (Kevin Killian, I'm thinking about what you said re: the Boston/Vancouver connection). No, it most certainly wasn't. Sometimes there's no overcoming history. (Damn Red Sox!)

Will it turn itself into what Vancouver has? Who's to say it hasn't? But I must say, if it wasn't for Harvard/MIT/BU, (and occasional treks to UMass/Amherst and, gasp! Yale) I would never have seen in such numbers the experimentalists (my definition) I did see over the years there, actually, for all their conservatism and misapprehension of the term "outreach".

What was happening then in the DR was necessary but not perfect, as the Bo Po conference certainly was and was not, and other things will be and not be.

Surely, as one of the few "avant-garde" writers within the Collective, I certainly wanted more from our scheduling and focus, but was glad to get what I got and give what I gave.

Tisa

****

Today we declare:
First, they are living in a Nono form;
Second, they are Nono lives;
Third, they make us feel Nono;
Fourth, they make us become Nono;
Fifth, we Nono.

Lan Ma
"Manifesto of Nonoism"
(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)

****

↑ Index

80. maz881

Re: Boston

Fri 6 Aug 1999

BKS wrote: <<It seems to me Jacques was suggesting not that Wieners isn't in the hearts and minds of many poets in Boston, or that Lansing wasn't able to put across some compelling poetry, but that there doesn't seem to be a sense of mission or "progress" in the group of younger poets, and that this can be attributable to the indifference of these poets to thinking about or through these issues along with creating their work.>>

re: progress. once Barrett Watten asked me, after some conference in nyc, if there had been any progress in "the group of younger poets." i said i don't think so, but we do have a conduit.

Bill Luoma

↑ Index

81. Jim Andrews

cut ups

Fri 6 Aug 1999

I'm looking for thoughtful writings (on or off the Web) about the cut up and related devices.

Burroughs, I know, has written interesting things, notably in The Job. Also, Jerome McGann has a great essay relevant to the subject at http://www.english.upenn.edu/~afilreis/88/mcgann.html and Robert Kendall has an equally good essay at http://www.altx.com/ebr/ebr5/kendall.htm

This concerns a project of mine (and others) I'm working on at http://www.vispo.com/StirFryTexts (needs IE 4 or 5).

Basically, I'm looking for deep insights (not just history) on the relevance of cut ups (and related devices) to the last 40 years, with particular emphasis on the Web over the last 5 years.

Thanks,
Jim Andrews

↑ Index

82. Hank Lazer
(Fwd) KPFA statement
Fri 6 Aug 1999

For those of you following the events at KPFA, this e-mail from Jack Foley may be of interest...

Hank Lazer

------- Forwarded Message Follows -------
From: [redacted]
Date: Fri, 6 Aug 1999 11:21:48 EDT
Subject: KPFA statement
To: [redacted]

Dear Hank,

I'll be back on the air today in a special program which will feature, among others, Mumia Abu-Jamal and Lawrence Ferlinghetti. This is a statement I'll be reading. I'd appreciate it if you'd pass it along to Buffalo.

Thanks!

Love,

Jack

Hey Hey
KPFA
Free Speech
Won't go away

This is Jack Foley, glad to be back on the air in this crisis programming. There's a phrase associated with a show which is no longer on KPFA: "Freedom is a Constant Struggle." The program was hosted by Kiilu Nyasha, who continues to present it on Liberation Radio (93.7 FM) Wednesday nights from 7 to 9. There are personal dimensions to freedom, but there are also public dimensions. As someone who has worked at KPFA for ten of its fifty years, I find myself acutely aware of both, and acutely aware as well of the need for "struggle."

The philosopher Martin Heidegger once said that freedom is not only something you "have," it is something you "are." We at KPFA are struggling to "have" freedom_and we will get it_but we could not struggle unless we were aware of the radical freedom that lies at the heart of every person. The New England town meeting, with its cacaphony of voices, is one paradigm for democracy, but it is a paradigm which is no longer fully useful. In its diversity, the United States can hardly see itself as "New England." We can no longer fantasize that we are a small town largely made up of Protestants. The idea of the town meeting has to become the more sophisticated and open idea of multiculturalism_has in fact already become the idea of multiculturalism. It is this idea that KPFA welcomes and recognizes. Multiculturalism is that situation in which everything comments on everything else, in which everything stays open to the possibility of the other. Multi is to culture as multi is to media. It is something "other" which intersects, comments upon, and recognizes. Multi is to culture as poly is to theism; as diversity is to university. We don't have to look far for examples. Our minds are multiple, and it is this multiplicity that gives us our truest freedom. At our roots we are creatures of possibilities, and when we lose the sense of possibilities_when we arrive at what Jennifer Stone calls "hardening of the categories"_we lose almost everything that defines us as human. The idea of KPFA is a refusal to look only at some possibilities. The myth of Pandora's Box is a myth of closure and repression. What is in there is not the ills of the world but the possibility of the new, the other, the different. KPFA wants to open Pandora's Box.

There's a passage I like in Ishmael Reed's anthology, MultiAmerica. It was written by Bharati Mukherjee, and it is particularly relevant to the struggle of KPFA with Pacifica:

> What we have going for us in the 1990s is the exciting chance to share in the making of a new American culture, rather than the coerced acceptance of either the failed nineteenth-century model of "melting pot" or the Canadian model of the "multicultural mosaic"...I want to sensitize you to think of culture and nationhood not as an uneasy aggregate of antagonistic "them" and "us," but as a constantly re-forming, transmogrifying "we."

↑ Index

83. Alan Sondheim

Eighteen True Fortunes Sorted in Chaos

Fri 6 Aug 1999

\

(The trouble with a kitten): Eighteen True Fortunes Sorted in Chaos

Ah life, you are so true, such is the order in which messages become bot- tles broken, what energy! It's a harder thinking. It's research whatever. America, any boy may become president and I suppose that's just one Klein Enzymes are things invented by biologists that explain things which In Geminis are known for committing of the risks he takes. otherwise require "Matrimony isn't a word, it's a sentence." A classic is something that Law of Volunteer Labor: admission to someone else. avocado than to get in My life is all erratic. My parrot, who was cordial, President Reagan has The carpet died, a palm collapsed, The cat keeps doing poo. The chief a fight with an aardvark Man, n.: President Reagan forecasters and has anyone can admit to themselves they were wrong, the true test is Zymurgy's better to kiss an avocado than to get in a fight with an aardvark Man, n.: called quitting. wants to read. which, however, multiplies with such cause of problems is solutions. The only thing that keeps me sane While decided on an excess prophets tax. has noted that there are too many economic pundits and President Thieu he is as to overlook what he everybody wants to have read and nobody Famous last words: Famous last extermination of other animals and his own longer than usual because I extermination of other animals and his own species, problems is solutions. forecasters and has decided on an excess prophets rapidity as to infest he is as to overlook what he indubitably ought to be. His chief make he'll quit if he doesn't get more than 50% of the Since I hurt my pendulum indubitably ought to be. His chief it shorter. occupation is insistent rapidity as to infest lack the time to Is now transmitting static. Is talking to my shoe. It is lack the time to It is better to kiss an make it shorter. occupation is noted that there are too many economic pundits and President Thieu says of Large Problems: I have made this letter longer than usual because I says he'll quit if he doesn't get more than 50% of the The chief cause of species, the whole habitable earth and Canada. vote. In a democracy, tax. that's not called quitting. which, however, multiplies with such insistent the whole habitable earth and Canada. vote. In a democracy, that's not words: Hoare's Law of Large Problems: I have made this letter Hoare's Law With VLSI we can pack 100 ENIACs in 1 sq. cm.! Under deadline pressure for `social sciences' is: some do, some don't. are bisexual. However, you are bottle for rent -- inquire within. The only possible interpretation of any cat You are a quick and intelligent thinker. People like you because you grows up, it's always a harder thinking. inclined to expect too much for too can wait. Unless is that Think of it! the next week. If you want something, it When it it's blind screaming paroxysmally hedonistic ... incest. little. This means you are cheap. research whatever in the The trouble with a kitten

↑ Index

84. Robert Freedman
Ron Silliman's "The New Sentence"
Fri 6 Aug 1999

Several weeks ago someone on the list mentioned a few good books on poetry, one of which was "The New Sentence." I could be mistaken, but there was a note that this one was probably out of print. Since I wanted a copy, I checked Small Press Distribution, Roof Books, and some of the mail-order companies on the web, and they all show it as available--and I did place an order with SPD.

Sorry if I'm mistaken. I just want to ask the person who submitted that post if he/she would please repost that list. It looked good, but I absentmindedly delete it. I've looked through the archives for the terms Silliman and Sentence, and they don't lead to what I want.

In case this was on my other list (Poetry, etc.), I'm posting it there also.

Cheers,

Bob Freedman

↑ Index

85. Elizabeth Treadwell
a+bend press READING sunday the 8th, SF
Fri 6 Aug 1999

--->
Just a reminder--this is happening at the Blue Bar (enter thru the Black Cat Restaurant) this Sunday at 2 pm, 501 Broadway, San Fran....ET

> book nine Eve Doe : Prior to Landscape Elizabeth Treadwell
> book ten definite articles Sarah Anne Cox
>
> books nine and ten will be released August 8 at the reading at BlueBar in SF
>
> the a+bend press small books series is a chapbook series published in conjunction with a San Francisco-based monthly reading series produced by the editor/publisher, Jill Stengel.

↑ Index

86. Jamie Perez
2-minute plays.interest?
Fri 6 Aug 1999

File this under: Spreading myself too thin <pls excuse the mass-mail>

A friend of mine and I are trying to put together a festival/night of 2-minute plays.

What we need: playwrights, actors and directors. Have some, need way more.

The concept: low-budget, non-playhouse venue, bunches of short short plays, intermissions for drink-buying and chatter, fun, maybe even money raised for charity. Maybe around 1.5 - two hours all told, so room for lots of work.

Plays or monologues in need of actors/directors welcome. Plays or monologues with self-provided actors/directors welcome. Maybe even excerpts from non-original plays with actors/directors provided welcome (that is currently in debate). Hoping for a diverse body of subjects/styles/aesthetics. The two minute rule is probably pretty loose, might even let them go as long as 4 minutes?

Depending on number and quality of scripts received we will jury out the winners and go from there. Depending on success of first try, we will also see if we go from there.

Nobody will make any money off of this (except maybe a charity, see above). If lucky we'll be able to cover advertising costs or something. Participants, however, may be spotted by an agent and whisked away to a profitable career in porn.

This idea is evolving. We are hoping to roll out a night of work before the end of October, but the date is arbitrary at this point. Please email me at <[redacted]> if interested in any capacity and please note the capacity that would interest you. Multiple capacities accepted and encouraged. We're going for community here, people.

Please pass this notice to anyone you feel may be interested. Note, this event will take place in Washington, D.C. Those somewhat in the area will obviously be given preference.

jamie.p

↑ Index

87. Christopher Reiner
small press news
Fri 6 Aug 1999

On the small press front...

In the current issue of Publishers Weekly there is an article about three presses (Avec Books, Kelsey St. Press and Johnson Books). The title of the article is: "Small Presses Celebrate Anniversaries and Awards":

http://www.publishersweekly.com/articles/19990802_79511.asp

Avec Books' web site is http://www.litpress.com/avec Kelsey Street is http://www.kelseyst.com/
Johnson Books is http://www.jpcolorado.com/johnson/jb_frame.htm

↑ Index

88. Mark Weiss
Help!
Fri 6 Aug 1999

Somebody please backchannel phone numbers and/or email addresses for Nathaniel Mackey, Roberto Tejada and Luigi Bob Drake.

↑ Index

89. Jacques Debrot
Re: Cut ups
Fri 6 Aug 1999

Of course the key explicatory text by Burroughs on the cut-up technique is THE THIRD MIND. The LA County Museum catalogue for the recent exhibition of Burroughs's artwork--PORTS OF ENTRY--has a number of insightful articles on the cut-up method, & just as helpfully, a very strong bibliography. Also, off the top of my head, Jim Rosenberg in POETICS JOURNAL 10, discusses both the cut-up & hypertext in a good article. & Reva Wolf's book, ANDY WARHOL, POETRY & GOSSIP IN THE 1960s, discusses the cut-ups briefly in connection with THE TENNIS COURT OATH, & the appropriative strategies of Pop art.

jacques

↑ Index

90. Jacques Debrot
Re [2]: cut-ups
Fri 6 Aug 1999

Apologies for the second note. I just wanted to add that, while connecting the cut-ups to recent developments in Web technologies is certainly legitimate, you'd also want to avoid the dangers of historical de-contextualization. Burroughs's work emerged after all at a crucial moment--along with Cage's & Ashbery's--when 60s artists were confronting commodity culture really for the first time. Related issues such as the homosexualization of the New York avant-garde, the conflicted reaction against Abstract Expressionist culture, the initial & then-ongoing US reception of Dada, as well as-- to the extent that this was being played out on 2 continents--Burroughs's & Ashbery's relations with & attitudes toward, for example, TEL QUEL, are all issues that, although they don't each have to be considered in the context of your study, nonetheless give Burroughs's cut-up method a specific rather than a merely analogical & general significance.

--jacques

↑ Index

91. George Bowering

Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?

Sat 7 Aug 1999

> Boston always gets short shrift in the competition for center of the universe,

Tell that to Sidney Lanier!

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

92. david bromige

spicer did not lead to tish

Sat 7 Aug 1999

> I think this is interesting in relation to this idea of poets "passing through," since as the lore has it Jack Spicer passing through Vancouver and giving his lectures seemed to create part of the ambiance that led to Tisch, which then led to Kootenay, etc. [Brian Steffans].

Never heard this lore, myself, but I can tell you that Tish was started 4 or 5 years before Spicer's Vancouver visit. Robert Duncan, who visisted and engaged with a forming community of young poets in Vancouver in 1960 or '61,was the American poet most responsible for the encouragement that kept Tish afloat. Robert Creeley, who visited and in an informal setting, taught these same people the following summer, should also be credited.

Spicer's visit in '65 surely kept the flame of counter-poetics alight. But just to set the record straight. (George Bowering cd do a better job; you out there, G?)

Not to take anything away from Brian's post, which I enjoy for its ranging x-Atlantic and for its discussion of Rodefer's role/s. Btw, anyone got a current e-ddress for SR? If so, please b-c to me.

David

↑ Index

93. Daniel Carter

dear she says dear you're always gone dear always and now with

Sat 7 Aug 1999

{ }

dear she says dear you're always gone dear always dear gone dear and now with that to demonstrate if not modulate more smoothly as per classic: rever more wildly celebrated distances yield reject play reploy the part(s) of Kate: celebrated for lack of intervening very clothely your line-control couldn't wouldn't include that time this time that haven pen sled now t' vine a way pack in no not this however maybe that no not that ethereal ur-line cutting the lulls willfare specific radio grief wield the weird child party oh back there it was urine control that fits in a little bitter here where chilly rose (up) on the spot target moving flash relations no ice write the wave weave some space grace await its greasy banks frozen pivots from the sea not the only but one of the oceans sea choral relief curl the tube with fingers slightly touching its watery walls all dynamic frozen pivots: voter's eyes energies' showers enter here the concern no worry yes worry along the way that no account kept of just where the source file and where and what on it from it etc. glowing black just a little for careerity: voters's eyes voters sighs showers shown blown off guard the open pleasure rounds just happened the question of which voice is there a voice which voice if voiced exists at all? the down gittin' up 'n' the up gittin' down rage page prep they all slid into one another they all slid into one anothers' distance upheld one anothers' distances held up rubbed close something you might like to write the youth the aged the ageless wageless stageless pageless rageless timeless enormity eternity pain joy of now then when more constant egg-cell lens pour happenings less stress less dress to a certain uncertain paint painted out in full claim persuasion keeping in mind that nothing is full except that it might well act that way spill over though actually there was a little more room in there t' fill without it having t' spill why that contention instead of any other thing that might have occurred in locusluogo don't answer muted do however mute without dispute and sow for earth on dawn the newborn pain joy of now when? tension resolution solution dissolution tension reborn day and night the wheel spiral revolve evolve forthward word-trail word-trial as distorting mirror trace when to read (rewrite) the first (versed) page current flak the thunderwriters vocal points ink as a kind of flesh digital pre-feather remote space glide here a moment while another that had not yet introduced itself waited until the re-arrival of and then the circling before landing necessary ink of the flesh kind: a story is about to be told waiting for replay having skipped over a puppet surface announcement and having skipped over another without courage to include bound feet bound brains reveal unplugged same from higher mind from soul the nude program guide a good mountain of pages chick-points speed not speed the pressure-group theory of woman locate a nature who higher wind turn wound up down on in the ground glow undo battlefluid hungered them undisclosed hand-made dollies cloakwork arrange disentangle dismangle yes the personal it does come up bubblic statements to that deflect international beastkeepers tweak-end cupcake 'n' a lot o' utter fractors injure in t' the pick flicture last cheer in myth case hot elephants frequent fatigues answered memories of blue carts into which cracked mirrors 'n' cracked dice 'n' cracked ice repertoireepertour might not o' gone no further if it weren't feur flea time that could not in this instant stance be resisted oh no what is this? maya clock questions of energy directions fannyfest themselves seedily in a huff enough dis-phased for the versd Dr. Pill: My Sacred Life cavernous blink myth Heil! my coldest friend t' hide: icy dead people flock let's glow the way they lost I.D. orbitrary punishments curse made a nasty piece of its own accord of its own A-chord nervous and tremblink ooze curliest recollections come up command veiled little flick joins Popkin's quill-tempered stealth delay care in openness but open nest prolonged Mouthfallen proprieties ease Blinkles poor doubt peach house proper tease knifespire excess energies management ink-orbit rated loom plush pour doubt echoes pie buy by the mirror slaying impulse t' try a longer wave life from the desert in the dessert blow wrong contact blinks from a divers groundless flackground this slatest page of the gloryteller verbal remedies contrast trimities emblematize tolerate snakespear in the bush disinterestedly in betweave ashen cream(s) motherness in literary language careening up dearthy brackets mythunderstanding(s) there comets a time for reach for reach child to re-member itself itch way it glows waiting for reploy ink tore away adorn away a door away a

--

↑ Index

94. Kathy Lou Schultz

Re: 6 JANUARY 1995 / 24TH ST & GUERRERO

Sat 7 Aug 1999

I recognize this as the "introduction" Kevin Magee/Lynn Miller read before Jennifer Moxley's reading a few years ago at the old Small Press Traffic location in San Francisco (24th & Guerrero).
Sometimes context is everything.
^^^

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

>From: Lynn Miller <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: 6 JANUARY 1995 / 24TH ST & GUERRERO
>Date: Wed, Aug 4, 1999, 7:44 PM
>

> "There is a specter haunting poetry"
>
> Jennifer Moxley, Invective Verse
> Writing from the New Coast, 1993
>
> Finally someone has brought out the ghost and made it walk, and talk. Swift, light, airy--Jennifer probably wrote her poetics statement in less than an hour. When I found it in a book called "Technique," I laughed. It was a dash. It is hilarious and it is incisive. Here is a poet whose first thought about her poetics is the right-wing currently consolidating its power in the halls of that bad joke called Washington. Her advice is to put down that cup of coffee and feel the rage. Time is running out, poetry is a privilege, and screaming our radical politics from the rooftop doesn't mean a thing unless the voice belongs to millions. "Who the fuck are we anyway?" Jennifer wants to know, and it doesn't sound to me like a rhetorical question. Along with her friendly allusion to the Communist Manifesto, in the space of a single paragraph are plays on the sit-in tactic of the Civil Rights Movement and an assertion of the classical Marxist position that Socialism is merely a transitional stage, a tangible and immediate goal en route to the Pie in the Sky. Moxley calls the first phase a "benefactor economy" and she is not dreaming. I overheard the same demand Thursday from two bicycle messengers on their lunch break: "Every good writer should be guaranteed at least $30,000 a year." The speaker's co-worker was nodding his head in emphatic agreement. I could live with that, at least "until after the revolution." Again, I'm quoting Moxley, because she says there's going to be a revolution, and you can wear whatever you want including your suede shoes. I've got mine on tonight for the occasion of hearing what else this poet might say, a poet who wants to recapture the "public domain for poetry" (and with an exclamation mark!") It's another one of her wild ideas, like THE CALL FOR POETS TO CHANGE THEIR NAMES AT THE END OF EVERY FISCAL QUARTER--Benjamin was thinking along the same lines when he called the author a producer, like a director or conductor--some BODY absorbing the current of the time in current times. Electricity in the air. That's what the specter is, and that's why I find Moxley's theoretical contribution to the New Coast symposium so exciting and valuable. She wants excess and abundance and she wants it now. Her call for recapturing the public domain reminds me of something Trotsky thought about. I can't remember anymore whether he was writing about the Russian Revolution or French Surrealism when he very > lucidly articulated the phenomenon of combined development. According to Trotsky, the avant garde is not a permanent achievement. It happens once and once only, out of great sacrifice and against incredible odds, and then it reaches a crossroads or the crossing of many roads, other levels of consciousness passing by, surging forward, BEARING THE STAMP OF THEIR NECESSITY, and if the vanguard foregoes dialogue in the fantasy of its own intellectual superiority or correctness of method, then it winds up reproducing itself in an increasing series of diluted gestures. It spins its wheels and the efforts of poets or professional revolutionaries that brought the avant garde onto the stage of history are wasted. If, on the other hand, the youth coming out of that vanguard choose to seek dialogue with so-called "backward" tendencies, combined development can occur--an unpredictable release of creative energy of vast proportions. That's about as far as I can get with that thought for the moment, but it strikes me as somehow in relation or congruent with Jennifer's anticipation of the possibility of a popular poetry. I can't wait to hear her poetry whose desiring is announced with such ease and aplomb. Let's welcome the author of "Invective Verse" to Small Press Traffic and to San Francisco.

>
> Whereever Moxley is worn
> all changed, changed utterly
> a terrible Beauty is born

↑ Index

95. John Tranter
Jacket
Sat 7 Aug 1999

LATE EXTRA -- Jacket number 6 -- after unavoidable delay,
Shamoon Zamir's detailed and absorbing 5,500-word review of Nathanial Tarn's SCANDALS IN THE HOUSE OF BIRDS : Shamans and Priests on Lake Atitlán has arrived at Jacket # 6 --

"Tarn . . . is unique within ethnopoetics and equally within the longer history of the dialogue between American poets and anthropology that stretches from Pound and Eliot, through to the likes of Olson, Duncan, Rukeyser, Snyder, Dorn and Jay Wright: he is the only one to have produced substantial and accomplished bodies of work as a poet and as an anthropologist and the only one to have written at length on the interactions of literature and anthropology. . . . . Narrated through multiple narratives and many voices, the book deals with a religious conflict between indigenous religion and Christianity. The theft of masks covering Maximón, a Mayan wooden statue venerated since pre-

Columbian times, and the later return of one of the masks over twenty years later, is the core around which are spun accounts of Mayan mythology, ritual practices, religious festivals, individual life histories, local social conflicts and the horrors of Guatemala's national politics. "

Shamoon Zamir is a Reader in American Literature at King's College London and co-editor of Talus Editions, a poetry small press. His previous publications include DARK VOICES: W.E.B. DU BOIS AND AMERICAN THOUGHT (Chicago University Press, 1995).

The review is illustrated with six color photographs from the early 1970s taken by Nathanial Tarn.

Check out Shamoon Zamir's review at this Internet address:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket06/zamir-rev-tarn.html

from John Tranter, 39 Short Street, Balmain NSW 2041, Sydney, Australia
tel ([redacted] fax ([redacted] Editor, Jacket magazine:
http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/welcome.html Homepage: five megabytes of glittering literature, free, at
http://www.alm.aust.com/~tranterj/index.html

↑ Index

96. Charles Bernstein
Talk's Riding
Sat 7 Aug 1999

I wonder if anyone else in Poetics List Land noticed that in the premiere issue of Talk magazine, just out, there is a piece on Laura Riding, detailing her close encounter with Schuyler Jackson and family in 1939? It's remarkable that Riding gets such a big spread, with a full page picture, in this magazine, but regrettable that only a few lines of her writing are included. More surprising, and unfortunate, is the impression given by the article that (Riding) Jackson stopped writing and settled down to become a housewife for the last fifty years of her life. The piece says she never wrote poetry again after meeting Jackson, but fails to note the voluminous "prose" that constitutes her later work, thus wiping out all reference to The Telling, Rational Meaning and her other essays of the 50s-80s. The article also says that Riding stopped writing poetry as a direct result of the break-up of Jackson's family, not only ignoring (Riding) Jackson's extensive commentary on this issue in her later work, but also ignoring the many premonitions of this renunciation of poetry in her earlier work. Thus, one of Riding's most significant aesthetic and philosophical positions is reduced to bathos. Of course, this article is not about Riding's work but about one of the most notorious events in her life, here given full tabloid treatment (but it's worth noting that there is nothing new in this piece; it is pretty much a recycling of previously reported facts, even the "spin" is old). The author at one point says something to the effect that many poets are crazy -- the Blakes sitting naked in a tree, Pound's speeches on behalf of Mussolini, and Riding's "witch"-like break up of the Jacksons. There is also a description of Riding as being "hooked-nose" and unattractive, in contrast to the handsome Robert Graves. The piece ends with the suggestion that feminists are likely to lead any revival of interest in Riding but that, unlike Dickinson and Plath, she may not be a good role model for "womankind", since she is a two-time homewrecker. (Presumably suicide is more suitable for the woman writer than the sort of intellectual and social aggressivity of "hook-nosed" Riding.) I should note that I am recounting this from memory as I do not have a copy of the magazine at hand. But I believe I am conveying the drift. And the part I dislike most: here I am talking about TALK, right according to plan.

Charles Bernstein

↑ Index

97. Maria Damon
Re: Talk's Riding
Sat 7 Aug 1999

At 7:43 PM -0400 8/7/99, Charles Bernstein wrote:
>I wonder if anyone else in Poetics List Land noticed that in the premiere >issue of Talk magazine, just out, there is a piece on Laura Riding, detailing >her close encounter with Schuyler Jackson and family in 1939? It's remarkable >that Riding gets such a big spread, with a full page picture, in this >magazine,
>but regrettable that only a few lines of her writing are included.etc

what is TALK?

↑ Index

98. Alan Sondheim
Adventure, or The Game of Life where I am Lost
Sun 8 Aug 1999

/

Adventure, or The Game of Life where I am Lost

no enter building take keys take lamp take food take water exit west down west west east west north south south down south unlock grate enter west take cage west light lamp take rod drink water eat food drop bottle west west west down down down up look up up look south north east take bird look east east east east east west west west west west west down look west wave wand cross

bridge take diamonds west north south south look cross bridge look south north east look west cross bridge wave wand look west east south north north look south east west east east wave wand cross bridge look east take axe up look west down down up up west look west east east east look xyzzy look look spring down exit south south south south south south north east west west west north quit yes

---

↑ Index

99. Lynn Miller
THE SUMMER ANNIVERSARIES
Sun 8 Aug 1999

T R I - A X I U M

Horace’s Si vis me flere that mutilated faction.

It was not the mass of mourners Byron found,
some distance conception,
an associative doctrine.

That it is not about myself I am writing
I am writing for you, to you, who do not exist outside the thought of your infinite impossibility, my hope that you might some day read these pages as your own book as the books all these books without your book could not have happened . . .

The cave of night, my fancy grew, a public way who put aside the Diadem, Rome, Athens and Jerusalem, hillside weeds of desolation come and go, wilder as it grows, unholy leisure, say where said the Grim Feature, one of that deluded crew were or had been eyes, child of a fierce hour

the cup she raised, the fortune of her Star more than half crossed I moved, it moved across every day receiving loud, vague, tumultuous wonder.

I have three acres
of flax this season,

perhaps in the marketing of it, I may come your way happy to have a friend or two though I am sure

I may no more have the honor of counting you among their number.
Had not the seed-time

come on so as it has, the flutter of Joy apt to infest me
--I hope my B.--

thought of my E.--a relish, confronting you I can never taste an education far beyond any I ever dared, and ask that your good nature will excuse

what your excellent intellect must see amiss. My fancy having fondly flattered itself worthy of a wish, now I am desperate for the loss of what I threw away and expect to remove in a few days a little further off, and if my expressions escape rather too warm for you, my dear

(pardon me the ‘dear’ once more) it is [deleted] true
I have formed an image of a Renaissance in view.

A Mrs. Dunlop of Glasgow has spread among the village tenets of some strange fantastical jumble,

she gives up the ghost by breathing on them postures and practices scandalously indecent; they have disposed of all their effects, and hold a community of goods of which I am their Utopian Projector.

If in your prayers you would remember a poor Poet Militant nine parts and nine tenths stark raving mad, though I am conscious I have acted wrong, not as when

in company with you,

permit me the honor of paying my devoirs.
I have been all my life,
Madam, one of the rueful sons of Disappointment, I rarely hit where I aim,

and if I want anything,
I am almost sure never to find it. In what language, Sir, would you have her answer you? A plough-wedge, a horse-nail, an old letter or tattered rhyme that, however I might possess a heart, more than feelings, in my

readings have I not interpreted any proofs more strongly every day arising to speak her language?

I have taken up a volume of my Shakespeare to realize her forward bound from other folk out of the dull, heavy, methodical clod, and set apart two halves slung sharp, eating his heart out or it would appear so, when I go conquering also and do not join them, dogs Fear came over paid back down to the pang. Post I have none save one poor widowed half-sheet of Gilt, it lies [deleted] among my plebian foolscap pages, [n]or his Grace of Q.

the Powers of Darkness

my friend Cunningham to me. Not that I cannot write you: should you doubt [that (deleted)] it, take this fragment intended for you some time ago and rest convinced that I can antithesize sentiment and circomvolute Periods as well as any in Philology.

A want of dexterity renders my scantling

of happiness still less, to tell you true (in the language of that elegant science,
the Law), the reason why

I trouble you with this, is, I have a woman’s longing for freedom to assure you a copy too in French I much want, any other good authors in their native tongue

I want all of them, such another sheet of yours

a nice ear for the lyre, it may give the possessor a [deleted] extacy unknown to the coarser [two words are deleted] organ [five lines of the letter are cut away here] . . .

My gallant young friend,

Anthony, writes to me: "the demons of despair & death, ride on the blast, & urge the howling storm."

I hope Miss Rosenthal is doing well and going in favor with Apollo and the Nine, as in the hive the honey bees keep feeding drones, conspirators in wrong,

if to know one’s errors

were a probability of mending them, I may stand a chance, having never had an hour among great folks, throwing off impression of my book do not deny me this my darling Petition.

I am willing to believe my abilities deserve some notice when Poetry has become the profession of polite learning, to be dragged forth to the full glare of polite Philosophy with all my imperfections of unpolished rusticity and crude ideas. I am indebted to the Author and am certain to have written her my acknowledgments. Bronze runs around and all around it runs

the wall, are we at Ayre?

Robert Burns

↑ Index

100. james loucks
Re: Talk's Riding
Sun 8 Aug 1999

Anyone interested in research on Riding would (eventually, at least) want to see the papers of Ronald Bottrall, the British poet, who for a time -- during the Graves episode -- was deeply influenced by Riding. Amongst the letters between Bottrall and Riding are examples of her voluminous marginalia in Bottrall's poetic mss. The Bottrall papers are in the Ransom Center at Texas.

All best,

Jim

At 07:43 PM 8/7/1999 -0400, you wrote:
>I wonder if anyone else in Poetics List Land noticed that in the premiere >issue of Talk magazine, just out, there is a piece on Laura Riding, detailing >her close encounter with Schuyler Jackson and family in 1939? It's remarkable >that Riding gets such a big spread, with a full page picture, in this >magazine,
>but regrettable that only a few lines of her writing are included. More >surprising, and unfortunate, is the impression given by the article that >(Riding) Jackson stopped writing and settled down to become a housewife for

>the >last fifty years of her life. The piece says she never wrote poetry again >after >meeting Jackson, but fails to note the voluminous "prose" that constitutes her >later work, thus wiping out all reference to The Telling, Rational Meaning
and >her other essays of the 50s-80s. The article also says that Riding stopped >writing poetry as a direct result of the break-up of Jackson's family, not >only >ignoring (Riding) Jackson's extensive commentary on this issue in her later >work, but also ignoring the many premonitions of this renunciation of >poetry in >her earlier work. Thus, one of Riding's most significant aesthetic and >philosophical positions is reduced to bathos. Of course, this article is not >about Riding's work but about one of the most notorious events in her life, >here given full tabloid treatment (but it's worth noting that there is nothing >new in this piece; it is pretty much a recycling of previously reported facts, >even the "spin" is old). The author at one point says something to the effect >that many poets are crazy -- the Blakes sitting naked in a tree, Pound's >speeches on behalf of Mussolini, and Riding's "witch"-like break up of the >Jacksons. There is also a description of Riding as being "hooked-nose" and >unattractive, in contrast to the handsome Robert Graves. The piece ends with >the suggestion that feminists are likely to lead any revival of interest in >Riding but that, unlike Dickinson and Plath, she may not be a good role model >for "womankind", since she is a two-time homewrecker. (Presumably suicide is >more suitable for the woman writer than the sort of intellectual and social >aggressivity of "hook-nosed" Riding.) I should note that I am recounting this >from memory as I do not have a copy of the magazine at hand. But I believe >I am >conveying the drift. And the part I dislike most: here I am talking about >TALK,
>right according to plan.
>
>Charles Bernstein
>
James F. Loucks
Associate Professor of English

The Ohio State University at Newark
1179 University Drive
Newark, OH 43055-1797
[redacted] (voice mail) from Columbus: [redacted] x 423
fax: [redacted]
e-mail: [redacted]

↑ Index

101. david bromige

hooknose goodness (or disappointing Talk)

Sun 8 Aug 1999

The author at one point says something to the effect >that many poets are crazy -- the Blakes sitting naked in a tree, Pound's >speeches on behalf of Mussolini, and Riding's "witch"-like break up of the >Jacksons. There is also a description of Riding as being "hooked-nose" and >unattractive, in contrast to the handsome Robert Graves.

Speaking as one who has broken up several marriages by sitting naked in a tree ranting like Pound on Mussolini & believing my nose to be hooked, a poet in brief, albeit no Dickinson nor Plath, I have seldom envied Robert Graves because I figure I can always fall in love with handsome people if I absolutely must. That is, I'm crazy to show that you are. But away with biography, because the imperative via 19th C "great men" theory unquote just wont quit, to reduce words to life. Thank _Charles_ for the info and the qualification of same. Sounds like an article I'd like to read in a bathtub full of hot water, slowly nodding off as it slips into oblivion. Maybe I'll try that tomorrow.

Longer (& longer)

Poetry has to be impossible to be more interesting than sex with close relatives or deliberate crime

Poetry had to be steamed then spread upon an ironing-board spelling man from uncle & thats why we cant
Laura, I see your name in the misty bookshop window to which a voice of mine had led

Poetry to be symmetrical & barely possible owes a debt to society one of the few that really & rarely counts & when it counts froth springs to its lips for kissing toads in this learned urinal
pet rock sullies numberly

(Poetry to be less than the brevity for which one hoped, must go on & on with a hammer nailing pictures to a wall--
"Didnt know I was riding the high wire till I hit pay-dirt & died"
sighed Van Gogh's room & bed-board to the albatross in which extension perishes

db

↑ Index

102. nuyopoman
Re: Talk's Riding
Sun 8 Aug 1999

Charles,

Will you please stop talking about TALK according to plan, and WRITE for TALK?

It is a terrific opening to have great US poet in premiere issue. Laura Riding knew the demands of poetry to the bone her prose is despite her.

Send your Letter to the Editor _to_ the Editor (or, better, get your agent to press them for a reply, or better, have Tina give you a Column!). The linesmen of capital have made a hole in reality/dear Ballcarrier please storm touchdown for Truth !

BobH

↑ Index

103. R Democracy
Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
Sun 8 Aug 1999

Tisa,

Was great to read your piece and as well see John Keene mentioned in your list. I was blown away by his memoir/novel _Annotations_ published by New Directions (I believe at the Outwrite conference he said he was the second African American published by ND in its history--the other Bob Kaufman). I looked him up and he has an excellent website with cool on line poetry innovation: http://pages.nyu.edu/~jrk3150/poem.html

but I guess he hasn't been in Boston for a while.

--RDL

↑ Index

104. Tony Green
Re: Talk's Riding
Sun 8 Aug 1999

Charles Bernstein writes, a propos TALK & Laura Riding:

> And the part I dislike most: here I am talking about
> TALK,
> right according to plan.

While the inadequacies described of TALK's piece on Riding make it a typical annoyance of journalism, what is the best tactic against it?

I favour no mention of the publication outside discussion on the list or in similar locations. & a dismissive one-liner if anyone outside raises it as if it were reliable, when seeking to use it to diss -- in this instance -- Riding or modern poetry.

What do others on the list do in such circumstances?

Tony Green

↑ Index

105. aerialedge

New @ Bridge Street, N.A.P., Krupskaya, Debord, Avant Gardening &&&

Sun 8 Aug 1999

The good books. yup. Ordering & discount information at the end of the list. Thanks, poets. & other people too.

1. _The New American Poetry 1945-1960_ ed. Donald Allen, U Cal, $16.95. Back in print. "The visionary anthology that influenced two generations of poets and readers." yup.

2. _Guy Debord_, Anselm Jappe, U. Cal, $17.95. "You want to prolong that first experience of illegality for ever after."

3. _The Autobiography of Red_, Anne Carson, Vintage, $12. "He came after Homer and before Gertrude Stein, a difficult interval for a poet."

4. _Economy of the Unlost (Reading Simonides of Keos with Paul Celan_, Anne Carson, Princeton, $29.95. The ancient Greek lyric poet Simonides of Keos was the first poet in the Western tradition to take money for poetic composition. From this starting point, Anne Carson launches an exploration, poetic in its own right, of the idea of poetic economy.

5. _Chain 6: Letters_, ed Jena Osman & Juliana Spahr, $12.

6. _In Company: Robert Creeley's Collaborations_, de Amy Cappellazzo & Elizabeth Licata, Castellani Art Museum / Weatherspoon Art Gallery, $24.95 (includes CD Rom). Essays by the editors, John Yau, & Hank Hine. Commentary by collaborators such as Jonathan Williams, Georg Baslitz, Susan Rothenberg, Jim Dine, Francesco Clemente, & Alex Katz. Lots of color reproductions.

7. _The Objectivist Nexus: Essays in Cultural Poetics_, ed Rachel Blau DuPlessis and Peter Quartermain, U Alabama, $24.95. Charles Altieri, Burton Hatlen, Ming-Qian Ma, Alan Golding, Eric Homberger, John Seed, Michael Heller, Peter Middleton, Norman Finkelstein, Charles Bernstein, Peter Nicholls, Robert Franciosi, Andrew Crozier, Stephen Fredman, & Yves di Manno.

8. _Medieval_, Steven Farmer, Krupskaya, $9. "my name is Sergio and I am destined for economic ruin"

9. _Last Instance_, Dan Farrell, Krupskaya, $9. "So consciousness is not as much as its appurtenances. This is the last gong I will ever bong on on on on on."

10. _Fracas_, Liz Fodaski, Krupskaya, $9. "let x = o. / we still have too many constants / see dangle, see ding."

11. _came like it went_, Greg Fuchs, Buck Downs Books, $10.95. "Be the first/ to bring the baron home tonight; / beat the baron, / slay the baron, / eat the baron."

12. _The Germ #3_, ed Macgregor Card & Andrew Maxwell, $6.

13. _Too Much Johnson_, Michael Gizzi, The Figures, $8. "I resign from mouthwatering / and zigzagging which seems / to me an apocalyptic entre / nous in the buff"

14. _Rocks on a Platter_, Barbara Guest, Wesleyan, $12.95. "Is the pear-shaped manuscript // endangered? // Alas, its honied drip. // The honied drip."

15. _at. least._, P. Inman, Krupskaya, $9. "someone's, ravel, / undermined, / about, things, / the, walk, i, / lay, through, / as, nothing, / to, a, setting"

16. _Patzcuaro_, Joanne Kyger, Blu Millennium, $8. "Give me a word like / 'bathtub' born out / of the stunning void / of a moment / before when all registered / as 'ocean'."

17. _The Tales of Horror_, Laura Mullen, Kelsey St, $12. "the words will never reach anyone, or"

18. _Charles Olson and Frances Bolderoff: A Modern Correspondence_, ed . Ralph Maud & Sharon Thesen, Wesleyan, $24.95. "now man with a long face cannot quite pull off any more of these god inventions"

19. _Rhizome 3_, ed. Standard Schaefer & Evan Calbi, $10.

20. _The Public World / Syntactically Impermanence_, Leslie Scalapino, Wesleyan, $17.95. Essays, including "The Radical Nature of Experience," "The Canon," "Silence and Sound/Text," "The Recovery of the Public World," "The Weatherman Turns Himself In," and "Friendship."

21. _The Tablets_, Armand Schwerner, National Poetry Foundation, $19.95 (includes CD). "ok freki ok freki ok freki ok freki ok freki"

22. _Avant Gardening: Ecological Struggle in the City & the World_, ed Peter Lamborn Wilson & Bill Weinberg, Autonomedia, $8. Bernadette Cozort, Bernadette Mayer, Sarah Ferguson, Carmelo Ruiz, Lyx Ish, John Wright, Miekal And, Jack Collom, & Joe Hollis.

Some bestsellas:

Selected Writings Volume 2, Walter Benjamin, $37.50.
Pamela: A Novel, Pamela Lu, $12.95.
Girls on the Run, John Ashbery, $20.
Midwinter Day, Bernadette Mayer, $12.95.
Stealer's Wheel, Chris Stroffolino, $12.95.
Protective Immediacy, Rod Smith, $9.95.

Pierce-Arrow, Susan Howe, $14.95.
Overtime: Selected Poems, Philip Whalen, $16.95.
Polyverse, Lee Ann Brown, $11.95.
My Way: Speeches and Poems, Charles Bernstein, $18.
Sight, Lyn Hejinian & Leslie Scalapino, $12.
Dark, Hoa Nguyen, $7.
Meadow, Tom Raworth, $7.
New Time, Leslie Scalapino, $11.95.
Daybook of a Virtual Poet, Robert Creeley, $12.
Tales of Murasaki & Other Poems, Martine Bellen, $10.95.

Poetics folks receive free shipping on orders of more than $20. Free shipping + 10% discount on orders of more than $30. There are two ways to order. 1. E-mail your order to [redacted] with your address & we will bill you with the books. or 2. via credit card-- you may call us at [redacted] or e-mail [redacted] w/ yr add, order, & card # & we will send a receipt with the books. We must charge shipping for orders out of the US.

Bridge Street Books, 2814 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC 20007.

↑ Index

106. Alan Sondheim

+ +

Mon 9 Aug 1999

```
   + +

 ___ _____                    _
|_ _|  ___|  _   _  ___  _   _    __| | ___
 | || |_    | | | |/ _ \| | | |  / _` |/ _ \
 | ||  _|   | |_| | (_) | |_| | | (_| | (_) |
|___|_|      __, |___/ __,_|  __,_|___/
            |___/

                _   _   _     _
 _ __ ___  __ _  __| | | | |_| |__ (_)___
| '__/ _ \/ _` |/ _` | | | __| '_ \| / __|
| | |  __/ (_| | (_| | | | |_| | | | __ \
|_|  ___|__,_|__,_|  __|_| |_|_|___/

                                    _
 _   _  ___  _   _ _ __  __      _____ _ __ ___ | |__
| | | |/ _ \| | | | '__| \ \ /\ / / _ \| '_ ` _ \| '_ \
| |_| | (_) | |_| | |     \ V  V / (_) | | | | | | |_) |
```

```
 __, |___/ __,_|_|      _/_/ ___/|_| |_| |_|_.__/
 |___/

 _        _ | |_ __ _| | _____ ___   _   _ _ __    _ __ ___   ___  _ __ ___ | __/ _` | |/ / _ \/ __| |
| | | '_ \ | '__/ _ \ / _ \| '_ ` _ \ | || (_| |   <  __/__ \ | |_| | |_) | | | | | (_) | (_) | | | | | | __\
__,_|_|____||___/ __,_| .__/  |_|  ___/ ___/|_| |_| |_|                                  |_|

              _     __
  __ _ _ __   __| |   / /   ___  _ __    __ _ _ __
 / _` | '_ \ / _` |  / /   / _ \| '__|  / _` | '_ \
| (_| | | | | (_| | / /   | (_) | |    | (_| | | | |
 __,_|_| |_|__,_| /_/    ___/|_|     __,_|_| |_|

         _                _
  _____  _| |_ ___ _ __  ___(_) ___  _ __
 / _ \ \/ / __/ _ \ '_ \/ __| |/ _ \| '_ \
|  __/>  <| ||  __/ | | __ \ | (_) | | | |
 ___/_/_\_____|_| |_|___/_|___/|_| |_|

              _                    _   __ _ _ __   __| |  _   _  ___  _   _  | | ___ __   _____
__   / _` | '_ \ / _` | | | | |/ _ \| | | | | |/ / '_ \ / _ \ \ /\ / / | (_| | | | | | (_| | | | |_| | (_) | |_| | |
<| | | | (_) \ V  V /  __,_|_| |_|__,_|  __, |___/ __,_| |_|__| |_|___/ _/_/
|___/

 _   _                        _          _       _
| |_| |__   ___   _ __ ___   __ _| |_ ___ _ __(_) __ _| |
| __| '_ \ / _ \ | '_ ` _ \ / _` | __/ _ \ '__| |/ _` | |
| |_| | | |  __/ | | | | | | (_| | ||  __/ |  | | (_| | |
 __|_| |_|___| |_| |_| |_|__,_|_____|_|  |_|__,_|_|

                _    _
__      _____  _ __| | __| |
\ \ /\ / / _ \| '__| |/ _` |
 \ V  V / (_) | |  | | (_| |
  _/_/ ___/|_|  |_|__,_|

 _
| |__   __ _ ___   _ __   ___    _   _ ___  ___
| '_ \ / _` / __| | '_ \ / _ \  | | | / __|/ _ \
| | | | (_| __ \ | | | | (_) | | |_| __ \  __/
|_| |_|__,_|___/ |_| |_|___/   __,_|___/___|

  __
 / _| ___  _ __   _   _ ___
| |_ / _ \| '__| | | | / __|
|  _| (_) | |    | |_| __ \
|_|  ___/|_|     __,_|___/
```

for ussh: IF: not found $ $ sh: takes: not found
$ sh: and: not found
$ sh: extension: not found
$ sh: and: not found
$ sh: the: not found
$ sh: world: not found $ sh: has: not found $

```
                                        _
                        |_|
                |___/
               _     _
               _   _   _     _
             _                    _
             _     __
           |___/
          _              _
```

$ $ sh: takes: not found
$ sh: and: not found
$ sh: and: not found
$ sh: extension: not found $ sh: has: not found $
$ sh: the: not found
$ sh: world: not found for ussh: IF: not found

```
 _/_/ ___/|_|  |_|__,_|
 __
 __ _ _ __   __| |    / /   ___  _ __    __ _ _ __
 __ _ _ __   __| |  _   _  ___  _   _  | | ___ __   _____      __
 _____  _| |_ ___ _ __  ___(_) ___  _ __
/ _ \ \/ / __/ _ \ '_ \/ __| |/ _ \| '_ \
/ _` | '_ \ / _` |   / /   / _ \| '__|  / _` | '_ \
/ _` | '_ \ / _` | | | | |/ _ \| | | | | |/ / '_ \ / _ \ \ /\ / /
/ _| ___  _ __   _   _ ___
\ V  V / (_) | |  | | (_| |
__, |___/ __,_|_|      _/_/ ___/|_| |_| |_|_.__/
__,_|_| |_|__,_|  __, |___/ __,_| |_|__| |_|___/ _/_/
__,_|_| |_|__,_| /_/     ___/|_|     __,_|_| |_|
____,_|_|____||___/  __,_| .__/  |_|  ___/ ___/|_| |_| |_|
___/_/_\_____|_| |_|___/_|___/|_| |_|
__|_| |_|___| |_| |_| |_|__,_|_____|_|  |_|__,_|_|
```

```
 _
 _       _
 _  _                        _          _      _
 _  _ ___  _  _ _ __  __     _____  _ __ ___ | |__
 _ __ ___  __ _  __| | | |_| |__ (_)___
 ___ _____                    _
 | ||  _|   | |_| | (_) | |_| | | (_| | (_) |
 | || |_    | | | |/ _ \| | | |  / _` |/ _ \
 |___/
\ \ /\ / / _ \| '__| |/ _` |
__      _____  _ __| | __| |
_____________________________________________________________________
|  __/>  <| ||  __/ | | __ \ | (_) | | | |
|  _| (_) | |    | |_| __ \
| '_ \ / _` / __| | '_ \ / _ \  | | | / __|/ _ \
| '__/ _ \/ _` |/ _` | | __| '_ \| / __|
| (_| | | | | (_| |  / /   | (_) | |    | (_| | | | |
| (_| | | | | (_| | | | |_| | (_) | |_| | |   <| | | | (_) \ V  V /
| __/ _` | |/ / _ \/ __| | | | | '_ \  | '__/ _ \ / _ \| '_ ` _ \
| __| '_ \ / _ \ | '_ ` _ \ / _ ` | __/ _ \ '__| |/ _ ` | |
| | |  __/ (_| | (_| | | | |_| | | | __ \
| | | | (_| __ \ | | | | (_) | | | |_| __ \  __/
| | | |/ _ \| | | | '__| \ \ /\ / / _ \| '_ ` _ \| '_ \
| |_ / _ \| '__| | | | / __|
| |_ __ _| | _____  ___   _   _ _ __    _ __ ___   ___  _ __ ___
| |__   __ _ ___   _ __   ___    _  _ ___  ___
| |_| | (_) | |_| | |    \ V  V / (_) | | | | | | |_) |
| |_| | | |  __/ | | | | | | (_| | ||  __/ |  | | (_| | |
| |_| |__   ___   _ __ ___    __ _| |_ ___ _ __(_) __ _| |
| || (_| |   <  __/__ \ | |_| | |_) | | | | (_) | (_) | | | | | |
|_ _|  ___|  _   _  ___  _   _    __| | ___
|___|_|      __, |___/ __,_|  __,_|___/
|_|  ___/|_|     __,_|___/
|_|  ___|__,_|__,_|  __|_| |_|_|___/
|_| |_|__,_|___/ |_| |_|___/   __,_|___/___|
_____________________________________________________________________

_____________________________________________________________________
```

↑ Index

107. A H Bramhall
Right About Here (Community Standards)
Mon 9 Aug 1999

---

it was quite a day. the energy transmitted much of value. the miners rested at home, a much-needed day off. tomorrow, the effort would continue. the thing would be exposed, like it or not. some damn troubadour will expect reward, silly painters will thrill at the latest product of their imagination, and seeds will be sown, for whatever worth of any of that. obnoxious as all that might be, still, you can't blame them their forward district presence. they have the haven and they know how to use it. that's why sitting at the machine feels so good. simply wielding the pickaxe in knowledgeable grace completes the picture of perfect focus. we aren't children, none of us are, but we have grit. that grit has been earned, from scraping the ore and fighting tooth and nail with the elemental silliness of the mined Earth. no one is keeping records of the business that keeps on, no matter the weather. today is just a moon phase in a stream of varying lights. that's no joke and could prove important, if anyone manages to read the book. first the book must be sent with viscous force to the proper authority and let the wind direct it fortunately to its destined final nest. and all this time we will have struggled out of torn coats to give the pauper standing in the left part of our dream room. what are you going to say when the miners waken, strengthened by resolve and flushed to get back to work? you will praise, you will encourage, you will try to carry on. there's no message here, it's just the sensible etiquette of a far from impossible situation.

↑ Index

108. Gerald Schwartz
Re: Talk's Riding
Mon 9 Aug 1999

FURTHER SHILLING FOR TINA BROWN:
Riding HERSELF

To "read TALK" is a familiar expression. The experience of reading TALK differs from that of knowing a fact. The thing known, in this case LAURA RIDING, exists -- once known as a component of one's own working equipment, as something with which one thinks. A Laura Riding is one's own Laura Riding.

It is also a fixture of common lore of rational distinctions of tried mental workability.

There is no issue
as to TALK and LAURA RIDING, from the linguistic point of view, except in regard to knowledge: the knowledge of Laura Riding is differently constituted from that of the knowledge of Laura Riding.

shillingly, Gerald

↑ Index

109. R Democracy

Re: Reading Announcement (please circulate)

Mon 9 Aug 1999

Announcing Poetry Reading Series at Women's Bookstore!!!

Akilah Oliver (the she said dialogues, Smokehouse Press, 1999) and Marcella Durand (City of Ports, Situations, 1999) will inaugurate the BELLADONNA* Reading Series, curated by Rachel Levitsky.

At the Bluestockings Women's Bookstore at 172 Allen Street between Rivington and Stanton on the Lower East Side of Manhattan Thursday, August 26 at 9:00 pm.

Contact [redacted] for info. (There will be 15 minutes provided for open readers).

> From The She Said Monologues (Akilah Oliver)

we forget, she said

i want the metaphor clear.
i want to clarify. you get what you want if you want it hard enough. bullshit. take it like truth. gurus & gods. tender buttons. i wanted to say that. weight. if we wasn't at least half spirit why do we always betrying to fly. angels in distress. jamborees in the morning. slick taste of cocaine chorusing down throats. i never saw a clown i liked.

subterranean train stations. gum & cigarettes & strange candy wrappers.men.eyeing the foreigner.me.all the time i hear pieces of st. louis. somewhere in the clouds. carly simon. clouds in my coffee. a pop reference. why pretend we hear plato speak. open wide. send the soldiers out to pasture.ice t. snicker his high yellow niggah badder than the best don't fuck with me stance. champions we be. waves recede. how come we don't make anymore mythology. in finland once all night the sky was day.

well why wouldn't you, she said

discard the proud robe of victim. sky is whistling.
oh the little earthlings, some other synonym for free.
move. the beat of another drummer. shhhh. we're having a brilliant time.
sexual acts performed in the town square. town mall. woo
the angels. only a woman can empty so fully. the beauty that is the pain's opposite. honey. inhale their air. cover my eyes. silly bandit. this is the way i want you to kiss me

from City of Ports (Marcella Durand:)

City of Ports 12

Inheritance of a paper found scrolled within the hollow column of a demolished synagogue which was first a hotel for former loan arks and transient architects from whom the lobby benefited with their unorthodox payment of restringing lamps, ducting load-bearers, dying carpets and spreading rugs over weakened damp areas of the plywood styrofoam floors which sagged like mattresses under the coming and goings of many feet like thunder rolls through the insulated city.

↑ Index

110. Poetics List Administration

Propjet #2 / Molina

Mon 9 Aug 1999

---

had to reformat this message. Chris

--

Date: Sun, 08 Aug 1999 23:16:35 -0500
From: Joanne Molina <[redacted]>
Subject: PROPJET #2 Heather Fuller's EYESHOT

PROPJET is pleased to announce the publication of Heather Fuller's chapbook:

EYESHOT

If you haven't heard of the most fabulous Heather Fuller:

Heather Fuller is the author of the poetry collection, perhaps this is a rescue fantasy (Edge Books, 1997), a poetry chapbook, beggar (Situation, 1998), and a forthcoming play, Madonna Fatigue (Meow Press, 1999), and a forthcoming poetry collection, C Ration Dog & Pony (Like Books, 1999). Her essays, plays, and poetry have appeared in Chain, the minnesota review, Phoebe, So to Speak, two girls review, Combo, Membrane, Articulate, Poetry New York, and elsewhere. She resides in D.C., where she edits poetry and book reviews for the washington review.

If you are interested in purchasing a copy of her chapbook, EYESHOT, please contact Joanne Molina at [redacted] or at:

PROPJET
Joanne Moilina
4105 North Bernard
#2F
Chicago, IL 60618

The PROPJET chapbook series is edited and published by Joanne Molina. The first issue, Jefferson Hansen's SPINNING DOCTORS, is also still available for $3 a copy. A year's subscription is $10 and there are three chapbooks published per year.

PROPJET #3 will feature the wonderful work of Sherry Brennan.

↑ Index

111. Tosh
Re: Talk's Riding
Mon 9 Aug 1999

TALK Magazine is Tina Brown's (New Yorker/Vanity Fair) new publication.

Tosh Berman
TamTam Books

↑ Index

112. Pritchett,Patrick
Re: Talking about Talk
Mon 9 Aug 1999

> Dear Maria,
>
> TALK is the new magazine edited by Tina Brown -- of The New Yorker & Vanity Fair. She was lured away from NY to start it at the behest of Harvey Weinstein, who runs Miramax (now owned by Disney). The idea was, ho hum, synergy -- that is, use the magazine as a base from which to derive possible film projects. Seems a damned expensive way to go about it. When I worked in Hollywood we just called it development and did the bloody footwork ourselves. Oh well. The first issue features on its cover photos of Jackie O and Gwnyeth Paltrow in bondage gear. That is -- it's daring in all the old worn out ways. I predict it will run in the red forever and fold in 18-36 months.
>
> Patrick

↑ Index

113. Linda Russo
Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
Mon 9 Aug 1999

. . . about 459 miles east of buffalo.

Tisa, you hit it right on the head for me here, in re The Dark Room Collective being an "accessible alternative" : --

There's a lot going on in Boston any day of the week, and I went to a lot when I lived there for several years, but never found a scene that really compelled me -- so were they really accessible? They were there, some more open than others. (I found DR, btw, one of the more open bunch of people, compelled as I was to on one occassion read when I hadn't brought any poems with me, and went up extempore to re-poem what I thought I'd written and had by memory.) One thing Aaron's done is to increase accessibility both for the Boston scene(s) and the people who levitate (back) towards them in their yet-another sweep through the area. The conversations that are spinning off _here_ I take as a sign of that accessibility (not to mention that my priviness to them a sign of what this list makes accessible). The forum's got to exist to address concerns (such as Jacques'), to find/make direction(s).

* * *

↑ Index

114. Mark Weiss
New Books
Mon 9 Aug 1999

Here's Fred Muratori's review of Armand Schwerner's _Selected Shorter Poems_ and _The Tablets_ in the August _Library Journal_.

>Schwerner (1927-99) was a maximalist, a poet of expansive aims and encyclopedic learning whose interest in anthropology and religion fueled a poetry that explored the very nature of civilization. The simultaneous publication of his lifelong project, _The Tablets_, and a generous selection of shorter poems, most out of print, is likely to fix his position among major postwar experimenters such as Robert Duncan, Louis Zukofsky, and Charles Olson, with whom he has been compared. _The Tablets_ is the fictional restoration and analysis of an ancient Sumerian text, complete with scholarly notes, pictographs, debatable translations, and missing or lost passages. More than that, it's a huge vessel into which the poet deposits aspects of his own identity while probing the process of epistemology itself. In a manner similar to that of the late avant-garde Canadian poet bpNichol, Schwerner laces his mock-academic pursuit with humor, invention, and an almost electric opassion. The same qualities are found in Schwerner's lyric meditations, as the poet attempts to articulate how the "variegated mystery" of the self can achieve synthesis, becoming "the one mind in orchestration." Again, he draws on a "wild spectrum" of sources--Eskimo poetry, Buddhism, Zuni myths--but frequently allows his playful sense of language ("How remunerative/ to be eleemosynary") to lighten the oracular load. Earnest and eccentric, stuffed with enough puzzles to keep poetry readers and scholars delightfully busy through the next century, these two volumes are essential for all libraries with substantial poetry collections.
>

Selected Shorter Poems, at 144 pages, contains Armand's own selection of two-thirds of his non-Tablets poetry, including poems that have only appeared in periodicals.

Here's the review, anonymous as usual, of Mervyn Taylor's _The Goat_ from July's _Publishers Weekly_.

>Taylor's New York poems comprise a roughly virtuosic series of contemporary vignettes laced with apocalpse; they are attuned to the pain in all desire and the beauty in decay--not unlike Lorca's explorations of the city. Beginning "one of those nights/ when the intersection is crazy/ with cars," and moving swiftly through casual, but angst-tinged observation--Taylor's second collection portrays people on the economic and social fringes, from the "Old Soldier in the Park" ("his white hair flying/ against the green,/ a bird out of formation") to the pathetic story of "Sleepy," about a mother who spots her son's face on a wanted poster. Sometimes Taylor has a lighter touch ("the snow has no philosophy/ but to fall for two days straight"), but he can also cross the line into overstatement, as in his poem "A Witness," dedicated to the then-U.S. poet laureate Robert Hass: "He had undertaken the job as caretaker/ to hios country's eloquence, in charge/ of its rhymes, its superstitions/ in the year of the most stars pitched/ most children abused." Finding no easy answers, yet never letting his lyrical and painterly gifts spiral off into irrelevance, Taylor remains true to his desire to get his world on paper, a world of New York and beyond that continues to be inflected by his Trinidadian roots: "He feels for a taste/ of his own flesh, he can smell it all the time,/ cooking in the curry of a human dream."
>

I'll only add that about half the poems are set in Trinidad.

All three books are available from SPD. _Selected Shorter Poems_ and _The Goat_ can also be ordered direct from Junction Press, PO Box 40537, San Diego CA 92164, email [redacted].

Armand Schwerner, _Selected Shorter Poems_, ISBN 1-881523-11-X, 144 pp., $16.00
Mervyn Taylor, _The Goat_, ISBN 1-881523-10-1, 96 pp., $11.00

Shipping costs: add $2.00 for up to three books.

↑ Index

115. R. Drake
Re: Help!
Mon 9 Aug 1999

---

i'm among the missing? an honor, i guess:

[redacted]

or work

[redacted]

how things?

lbd

> Somebody please backchannel phone numbers and/or email addresses for Nathaniel Mackey, Roberto Tejada and Luigi Bob Drake.

↑ Index

116. Edward Foster
Re: Symposium on the Work of William Bronk
Mon 9 Aug 1999

Call for papers:

A symposium on the work of William Bronk will be held November 13-14, 1999 at the Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, NJ. Among the many critics and poets who will be making presentations are David Clippinger, Joseph Conte, Joseph Donahue, John Ernest, Norman Finkelstein, Lyman Gilmore, Burton Hatlen, S.M. Kearns, Burt Kimmelman, David Landrey, Geoffrey O'Brien, Michael Perkins, Paul Pines, Leonard Schwartz, and Henry Weinfield

If you would like to participate and have not yet contacted the symposium directors (David Clippinger, Burt Kimmelman, and Edward Foster) please contact Edward Foster at [redacted], at [redacted], or at the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences, Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, NJ 07030.

↑ Index

117. Tony Green
Re: Talk's Riding
Mon 9 Aug 1999

CNN coverage of launch of TALK was on breakfast TV in NZ this a.m. Funny, no mention of Laura Riding. The names of big corporations blurred into promo fireworks

& the Statue of Liberty.

Tony Green

↑ Index

118. David Kirschenbaum
Ethnicity and the BoPoFest
Mon 9 Aug 1999

The more important question in discussing the BoPoFest, each of which I participated in, is ethnic inclusion. I haven't done a scan like Dan Bouchard did (ie: Boston, non-Boston) as per ethnicity, but the ratio has to be -- at best -- in the 5:1 range. I think it's like the cafeteria at college, where everyone sits in their clicks, be it by color, ethnicity, sports team, yearbook or pep squad. The idea of the other is so frightening, and the desire to learn of it so far-fetched, that people - most anyhow - stick within their wee community. I expect it of the masses, but not from the creative types, especially within the confines of this event. I think Aaron, as any organizer/editor does, myself included, represents the work to which he has been exposed. When I mentioned getting Quincy Troupe for next year's conference, Aaron said, "Who?" But, Aaron is receptive to new ideas, either asking for work by the recommended author or digging it up himself, to see if it fits with his aesthetic for the conference - though it's more a feel than a, ugh, aesthetic. To me, he said the former, so next time I see him I'll pass him my copy of "Avalanche" or "Weather Reports."

Be Good,
David

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

119. Maria Damon (Maria Damon)
Re: Where's Boston? Where's Boston's Poets?
Mon 9 Aug 1999

---

great post, tisa; "alternative" does tend to mean a certain alternative, namely, an "experimental" style. like "avant garde." i've tried to argue that "vanguard" could/should usefully be redefined as "coming from the margins," but to no avail. i get the tautological critique: what about pound? what about olson? he's avantgarde but not socially marginal. in vain i respond that that's not the vanguard i'm talking about --that for me, it means "relative to the center"--any center, not just aesthetic. there's a social vanguard. how 'bout a Darkroom Collective reunion at the next BoPoCo?

At 7:03 AM 8/6/99, Tisa Bryant wrote:
>Hello.
>
>I'd like to offer a few, okay several (dis)jointed and rambling comments.
>
>I'm a Boston native, living here for 4 years in SF (that's San Francisco).
>
>Certainly my eyes opened wide to hear about an "alternative" poetry >conference in Boston, the 2nd annual, no less. Wish I could've been there; >wish this had happened 10 years ago. But then, I'm sure it had, and then,
>I know it did again. And again. And will. So.
>
>Regionalism is just that. Boston always gets short shrift in the >competition for center of the universe, and really, so what? Community >happens wherever you are, and so does poetry. Schools or centers of any >kind of thought/production often produce repetitions. What's been exciting >has been to know that there's all kinds of poetry going on, everywhere, all >the time. I just need to speak more languages, within the American tree of >words, and with the roots of other countries.
>Someone asked who among the Alt Bo Po line up was actually "from" Boston.
>There was some brave poet there who read with "heart"? Does that mean our >notorious honking accent? (I'm laughing here.)
>
>(I, like Bo Po's organizer, Kiely, am yet another "uncredentialed" >independent doing whatever I want or feels needs to be done, on my own >terms, and with help from friends. This "alternative" way of doing things >is often collapsed into "activism", which is fine with me. And I think >this point warrants another conversation about what and whom is being >measured and legitimized, and by whom, with what, what yield? Academic >elitism, romanticized movements, idolatry, clout and influence indeed.)
>
>Boston is a big college town with a 5% sales tax and a hard core local >populace perpetually chafing against transient intellectuals and their >overwhelmingly khaki influence on the city's personality, or lack thereof, >as well as more of the same between working classes and Boston Brahmins, >between races with no money, etc. Almost like anywhere, but with a >particularly icy vengeance. Maria Damon, you may recall that miserable >failure, the "Where's Boston" campaign from about 25 years ago, which was >just as much about the "who" and the "what" as the "where".

>
>So I think I understand the ambivalences of the city, and the impact it can >have on the writing of those who come or stay. Especially in the shadow of >NYC, or in contrast to the New West, or That Other Happening Country Up >North, or in light of internalized anguish for having never been the >"center" of a "movement" of innovative note, for all its heavily endowed >schools, not to mentioned its fabled unsophisticated accent. So many >rulers to break. What does this really have to do with what the writers at >the Alt Bo Po conference presented? Nothing, really. The organizer made >some choices, the readers made some choices, interpretation was open, >everybody went home with more than they brought, and there it is.
>
>(Thanks, Jack Kimball, for sharing with us your what you saw and heard at >the conference. I really felt like I was there during the Emily Dickinson >parade.)
>
>For all of my literary life in Boston, I was the only Boston native in my >community, which was at that time The Dark Room Writers Collective, for >nearly 10 years. There were about 15 of us at the best of times.
>
>We thought we were an alternative, simply for providing workshops and a >reading series that featured writers of African descent, and we were. On >our schedules were Erica Hunt, Julie Patton, Nathaniel Mackey, Ntozake >Shange, John Keene (DR member), Sam Delany, Dolores Kendrick, Kofi Natambu,
>Kevin Young (DR member) David Henderson, Harryette Mullen, myself, and a >particularly memorable tribute to Bob Kaufman in 1990.
>
>(And while I'm glad Prageeta Sharma and Will Alexander were in the house at >this Alt Bo Po, yeah? Alternative for whom is another question. I >forwarded the event announcement to my friends back East; none of them had >even heard of it. Who's counting who's missing? What makes an >alternative? Where/when does the audience come in? etc. etc.)
>
>Anyway, writers who wouldn't necessarily be considered "avant-garde" were >also on the DR schedule. My point? Just that. It was an accessible >alternative (yes, Jacques, the "slipperiness of the term") to what >Harvard/BU/MIT/Northeastern offered (the series was in our home, and had no >support/connection to any of them; we paid out of pocket for everything >with our dues), and made a difference, to those in the know and those just >getting to it. What did it say "about" "Boston" poets? Nothing, really, >or something predictably unsavory, since when someone said something >"about" "Boston" poets, they didn't, and rightly couldn't, mean "us" (well, >excluding me, I guess).

>Everyone was from everywhere, and would go back out "there" at some point >to get more of what they brought with them. About innovation and >experimentation? That everyone, at some time or another, did a little >something, some more often than others, it was all about seeing the >threads, potential of the past, and the dangers of the monolithic. About >the scene? Well, some deserved praise unfortunately frequented by the word >"renaissance", but praise nonetheless (and sure enough, it's over now).
>And nice, donation bearing crowds. It was a lot of work, very trying, and >a lot of fun.
>
>Was Boston turned into a colored writers' mecca? (Kevin Killian, I'm >thinking about what you said re: the Boston/Vancouver connection). No, it >most certainly wasn't. Sometimes there's no overcoming history. (Damn Red >Sox!)
>
>Will it turn itself into what Vancouver has? Who's to say it hasn't? But >I must say, if it wasn't for Harvard/MIT/BU, (and occasional treks to >UMass/Amherst and, gasp! Yale) I would never have seen in such numbers
the >experimentalists (my definition) I did see over the years there, actually, >for all their conservatism and misapprehension of the term "outreach".
>
>What was happening then in the DR was necessary but not perfect, as the Bo >Po conference certainly was and was not, and other things will be and not >be.
>
>Surely, as one of the few "avant-garde" writers within the Collective, I >certainly wanted more from our scheduling and focus, but was glad to get >what I got and give what I gave.
>
>Tisa
>
>
>*******
>Today we declare:
>First, they are living in a Nono form;
>Second, they are Nono lives;
>Third, they make us feel Nono;
>Fourth, they make us become Nono;

>Fifth, we Nono.
> Lan Ma
> "Manifesto of Nonoism"
> (Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
>*******

↑ Index

120. peter neufeld
Would someone
Mon 9 Aug 1999

please backchannel contact info (preferably e-mails) for Parjeeta Sharma and the coordinator of Zinc Bar readings. Thanks. Pete Neufeld _____ Do You Yahoo!? Bid and sell for free at http://auctions.yahoo.com

↑ Index

121. R Democracy
Re: Reading Announcement (please circulate)
Mon 9 Aug 1999

Errata! Akilah's book is published by Smokeproof, not that mistake I had earlier.
>
> Announcing Poetry Reading Series at Women's Bookstore!!!
>
> Akilah Oliver (the she said dialogues, Smokeproof Press, 1999) and > Marcella Durand (City of Ports, Situations, 1999) will inaugurate the > BELLADONNA* Reading Series, curated by Rachel Levitsky.
>
> At the Bluestockings Women's Bookstore at 172 Allen Street > between Rivington and Stanton on the Lower East Side of Manhattan > Thursday, August 26 at 9:00 pm.
>
> Contact [redacted] for info. (There will be 15 minutes provided for > open readers).

↑ Index

122. R Democracy
could I borrow some sugar?
Mon 9 Aug 1999

Hi all,

Gee, I feel so suddenly present again.

I need some emails and snailmails emails:

Amy Sarah Carrol
Jackie Woodson
Erica Hunt
Lyn Heginian
Tracie Morris
Gail Scott
Erin Moure
Laurie Price

Snail:
Kim Lyons

thanks a million,
Rachel

↑ Index

123. Lynn Miller
TAN LEJOS HEMOS LLEGADO LOS ESCLAVOS!
Mon 9 Aug 1999

BLACK TAMBOURINE

Because I felt the boss suspected I resembled what I saw
I emptied those emotional outbursts, those tempests of passion, and made a mistake my first five minutes in the white world.

I was shovelling horseshit the day they walked on the moon telling myself there must be good white people, with money and sensitive feelings, or had I been kept out of their world too long ever to become a real part of it? I longed to be among them, yet when among them I looked at them as if I were a million miles away. She gave me the ticket and I sat looking at the shadows on the screen.

By imagining a place where everything was possible, I kept love alive in me, and got used to seeing the prostitutes sitting nude around their rooms, though I'd steal sidelong glances at them.

Their nakedness startled me as would a blue vase or persian rug. I was learning new modes of behavior in how to live the Jim Crow, how to watch them, observe their every move, every expression, how to interpret what little was said, and how much they left unsaid. We went to the waterfront and sat on a knoll, watching the barges. "I just won't let you eat out of a can in my house," she said.

(I was used to hunger and didn't need much to keep me alive.) I am one of those who tried to conceal their plantation origin from among the washerwomen who moaned and shouted hymns.

The invitation said: "Tea and conversation. A spacious view." It was a harmless social gathering, or convocation of murderers. They did not attach to words the same meanings that I did.

Richard Wright

↑ Index

124. Rodrigo Toscano
NYC Sublet Needed
Mon 9 Aug 1999

Dear Listees...

Laura Elrick and I (Rodrigo Toscano) are looking for a one-bedroom apartment in New York City (all burroughs ok) -- permanent -- or sublet (4 or more months) (studio ok)...move in date anytime after September 15th...

any info would be helpful!

Rodrigo Toscano

[redacted]

[redacted] (daytime)
[redacted] (nighttime)

↑ Index

125. Charles Bernstein
riding poem
Tue 10 Aug 1999

David,

Wonderful poem you pulled out of this and very funny, as always, intro! thanks!

Charles

↑ Index

126. juliana spahr
chain 6 now available
Tue 10 Aug 1999

now available

CHAIN 6: letters

Will Alexander • alphabets • archival finds • Kathy Dee Kaleokealoha Kaloloahilani Banggo • Régis Bonvacino • William Burroughs • Norma Cole • correspondences • Franck David and Marie Nimier • Johanna Drucker • essays on the letter e and Emily Dickinson's letters • Mara Gálvez-Bretón • Susan Gevirtz and Myung Mi Kim • glyphs • Lyn Hejinian and Joan Retallack • Adeena Karasick • Bill Luoma • letters from the front • love letters • Nathaniel Mackey • Bernadette Mayer • Nick Piombino • Meredith Quartermain • Peter Quartermain • Albert Saijo • Andrew Schelling and Anne Waldman • Ron Silliman • Ardegno Soffici (with translation by Guy Bennett) • typographic poems • valentines • Keith Waldrop • Marta L. Werner • and more

Includes call for work and submission guidelines for issue no. 7 on memoir/anti-memoir.

290 pages, $12

check out our website for complete table of contents:

http://www2.hawaii.edu/~spahr/chain

YET ANOTHER SAD STORY TO URGE YOU TO PLEASE SUBSCRIBE: Chain remains pathetically underfunded. The only institutional support we get is in mailing costs (last year when one of us went to the dean requesting some minor monetary support for Chain, she was told that the department doesn't need to have any journals in this era of budget cuts).

To break even on printing costs, all we need is around 350 subscribers. While we easily get 350 submissions for an issue, we have trouble keeping a subscription base of half that going. We know our situation is not unique. We urge those of you that value, submit to, and/or publish in independent journals to support them by subscribing.

If you would like to make a donation, `A `A Arts is a not for profit 501(c)3 and your donation would be tax deductible to the full extent of the law. Remember us at the end of the year when you want to make a charitable donation to keep your taxes down.

Please make check out to `A `A Arts.

Send to: Juliana Spahr / Department of English / University of Hawai`i, Manoa / 1733 Donaghho Road / Honolulu, Hawai`i 96822.

↑ Index

127. Eugene Ostashevsky
PAUL LAFARGE, THU AT CLEAN WELL-LIGHTED
Tue 10 Aug 1999

Hear Paul LaFarge read from his first novel, The Artist of the Missing (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 1999), about itinerant judges, fantastic cameras, talking dolls, fish, the moon, and other topics of general interest.

When: Thursday, August 12 @ 7:30 pm
Where: A Clean Well-Lighted Place for Books
601 Van Ness
San Francisco, CA
[redacted]

"The visual details of Lafarge's novel are those of a stylish and somewhat morbid cartoon. We have entered a metaphysical world where illogic rules and whatever can be imagined is possible." (SF Chronicle)

"A poised and playful homage to the storytelling impulse... explores the sort of shifting dreamscapes we encounter in Fellini, Borges and Lewis Carroll." (New York Newsday)

"In The Artist of the Missing, San Francisco writer Paul LaFarge has built a city for love stories, a place as dimly remembered as a midnight telephone call, as broken and luminous as abandoned streets seenthrough a whiskey tumbler." (San Francisco Magazine)

Find the Artist of the Missing on the Web at http://www.paraffin.org/artist/

9X9 INDUSTRIES http://www.paraffin.org/nine/
[redacted]

NINE MUSES
NINE HEAVENLY SPHERES
NINE ORDERS OF ANGELS
NINE NAMES OF GOD

AND AUGUSTINE
AND A PEAR TREE

↑ Index

128. KENT JOHNSON
Lynn Miller's strong stuff
Tue 10 Aug 1999

Impressed and intrigued by Lynn Miller's pieces on the List of past couple or three weeks, a bit surprised no one else has commented. Very different and daring it seems to me. What seems new is how an over-drived analytical/historical bent exudes an odd and compelling lyricism, though that suggests too much that the latter is the byproduct of the former. Maybe it's the other way around, which would make it more interesting, actually. Whatever the case may be, I'm sure other people are noticing too. Keep it moving, Lynn Miller, whoever you are.

Kent

↑ Index

129. Scharf, Michael (Cahners -NYC)
19th C. Po&sie
Tue 10 Aug 1999

Would very much appreciate recommendations of

(1) A one-volume anthology of canonical (now) 19th Century French poetry that has the French en face, and has, preferrably, plain prose translations? (If not, maybe non-rhyming etc. translations?) Out-of-print OK.

(2) Favorite English/French en face editions of Baudelaire, Rimbaud, Verlaine, Mallarme, Laforgue.

Thanks -Mike

↑ Index

130. Karen Kelley
Re: Ethnicity and the BoPoFest
Tue 10 Aug 1999

> The more important question in discussing the BoPoFest, each of which I > participated in, is ethnic inclusion. I haven’t done a scan like Dan > Bouchard did (ie: Boston, non-Boston) as per ethnicity, but the ratio has
to > be -- at best -- in the 5:1 range.
> I think it's like the cafeteria at college, where everyone sits in their > clicks, be it by color, ethnicity, sports team, yearbook or pep squad.
The > idea of the other is so frightening, and the desire to learn of it so > far-fetched, that people - most anyhow - stick within their wee community. I > expect it of the masses, but not from the creative types, especially within > the confines of this event.

Being from Boston, this post caught my eye. I guess I'll say it flat out: Boston is the most racist place I've ever lived. Granted, I went from there to New York & on to San Francisco--so maybe Boston just looks bad by comparison. It all seemed quite civilized on the surface: the neighborhoods were segregated and everyone knew which lines not to cross. Maybe it's changed since I left 15 years ago, but I kind of doubt it.

↑ Index

131. A H Bramhall

A Course Thru Any Boston

Tue 10 Aug 1999

---

first off (if you're willing): explain how the facts could distort so easily. the latest tracking says easily definable community works against itself. it's so obvious. the endless pressures make facts funny. fielding questions day and night: what's that about? is jumble the tune of expectation? yes, for now, those edges will do. the hand holding makes circle:
get it? a clue to your relief. container for the thing contained: get it? pattern forms on a hunch then the brittle twist which is absolute importance gains a voice. here's where the career begins (not that anyone listens), but don't be afraid or fall too quickly. you have wiggle room. you've seen the process exist in detail (it's all about you). caution can steam thru the neighbourhood, yelling ANY TRUCK like a banshee, because that's a belligerent image trying to clock a world speed record. appropriate what you need, no cops are around, you have a chance. you face open season on the New Whatever but why bother. too busy just building the cannon, and the shock of what it can kill and why. inside out but throw away your distress. it's a loveless climate unless you reach the end of the circle. that is, you hold hands.

the friendly name for this is engagement. trickle down theories work with sensational ease and a hefty inventory. some day you'll look back and see that presence was charged, bigtime.
now it's a matter of equal rights for equal pay, snappy phraseologies against the living dead. STRAIGHTEN UP, PROCESS SERVERS: the theory is bound to get a wake up call and you'll be pulled too. you like that framework, bleeding poems with an eye on the clock. being busy, you'll be happy with any advice. the point is to squeeze thru the narrows, leap over the latest log jam, ratchet up the concern levels and quickly churn the showdown. back and forth with community standards, the best cage you can imagine. that can't be the final note because kindness has to matter

as a gravity well. and it will. Hell has been conveniently shaved of doubt but ignore that. the desperation begins outside the charmed circle before the map can be invented. that's why you need not get gussied up. the vocabulary has always been yours. what you choose to throw off proves what matters most. no musical phrase can blanket that. you can have your cannon now.

↑ Index

132. Mark Prejsnar

Re [2]: cut-ups

Tue 10 Aug 1999

At 10:45 PM 8/6/99, Jacques Debrot wrote: >Apologies for the second note. I just wanted to add that, while connecting >the cut-ups to recent developments in Web technologies is certainly >legitimate, you'd also want to avoid the dangers of historical >de-contextualization. Burroughs's work emerged after all at a crucial >moment--along with Cage's & Ashbery's--when 60s artists were confronting >commodity culture really for the first time. Related issues such as the >homosexualization of the New York avant-garde, the conflicted reaction >against Abstract Expressionist culture, the initial & then-ongoing US >reception of Dada, as well as-- to the extent that this was being played out >on 2 continents--Burroughs's & Ashbery's relations with & attitudes toward, >for example, TEL QUEL, are all issues that, although they don't each have to >be considered in the context of your study, nonetheless give Burroughs's >cut-up method a specific rather than a merely analogical & general >significance.
>
>--jacques

Jacques,

I would be interested to hear what you feel connects the
"homosexualization of the New York avant-garde" with cut-up technique....
(beyond the fact that some gay guys did it....)

--Mark Prejsnar

↑ Index

133. Jennifer c Coleman
Jacataqua
Tue 10 Aug 1999

I'm looking for information about "Jacataqua" -- essay by William Carlos Williams in __In the American Grain__. The piece touches on Aaron Burr's interaction during the Revolutionary War with the Abenaki Indians. WCW describes the woman Jacataqua as an Abenaki "sachem" or chief, but I can find no other historical reference to her -- anybody know if she existed? Thanks. Allison Cobb

Get your FREE Email at http://mailcity.lycos.com
Get your PERSONALIZED START PAGE at http://my.lycos.com

↑ Index

134. derek beaulieu
STANZAS #20
Tue 10 Aug 1999

---

still available:
STANZAS #20
Eulogistics - Victor Coleman issue

- Toronto writer Vic d'Or is the original "mindless acid freaK", involved w/ so many things its hard to keep track, including the original Coach House Press & the current Coach House Books. his poetry books include LAPSED W.A.S.P., Stranger, Terrific at both Ends, SPEECH SUCKS & the day they stole the coach house press. Eulogistics is from The Exchange, Poems 1984-95, out any day now from The Eternal Network (A Division of Coach House Books - http://www.chbooks.com).

STANZAS magazine, published at random in ottawa by above/ground press. edited by rob mclennan for long poems/sequences. distributed free, or $10 (canadian) for 5 issues. reads submissions constantly, up to 20 pages. next issue - Natalie Hanna

-- poet/editor/publisher... ed. STANZAS mag & Written in the Skin (Insomniac) publisher, above/ground press...coordinator, the ottawa small press fair & Ontario rep, The League of Canadian Poets...snail-mail c/o rob mclennan, rr#1 maxville on k0c 1t0 * 3rd coll'n, Manitoba highway map (Broken Jaw)

↑ Index

135. Lynn Miller
CONTEXT IS EVERYTHING
Tue 10 Aug 1999

Window above me.
I don't remember reaching for them, watching was enough.
It was not and never is. It occurs to Kleist to wonder whether the rumors that emanated from Mainz about this poet when we know that their morals consist in a secret and a few dull examples clapped in front to make a show and screen, and when we know that their "legitimacy" is the most unlawful of all lawlessness when we know this how could we not turn such a death against the enemies of Mr. Shelley, see this royal bedlam bigot range . . .

\\\\\\\ [+] ///////

America. History. Prophecy. What have we learned. The memory of Malcolm at the meatpackers' meeting, the local's last meeting: The Rank and File Packinghouse Workers Conference, Austin, Minnesota, May 1-3, 1987. Rowenna Moore, the gracious elder, keeper of his birthplace in Omaha. Her escort of Black Muslims. When Connie Moore crowned her Honorary Member of Local P-9 and gave her a bouquet of flowers, several of the union women wept. The making of Black Revolutionaries. Increment of shrill isolation and vulnerability to assassination. Hog pens and silos among church steeples puncturing the village horizon like shared needles thrown away on a playground in East Cleveland. The unorganized. The unemployed. 120 million working women and men. The industrial unions. "I got my eyes on the ranks." The Beauty of Black Nationalism permeated the room, a single meeting room in what would never again be an anonymous town in the midwest, a white town, white leaders who had only for a memory when they decided to defy the odds and strike, the legacy of King and the civil rights movement they needed to convince their union that it was time to draw the line. The leaders were the ones who emerged and took command, given command, because of their demonstrated dedication to the course of action the membership had chosen. At the end of the strike they were reduced to meeting in a single room, one room could hold all of them all of whom had once numbered so many I couldn't believe the strike had undone so many, 800 workers and their families and supporters who overflowed the national guard armory to hear speakers at rallies to raise money and confidence and consciousness as to why they were making this sacrifice, their livelihoods, their lives, like the striking stewardesses from TWA, and coal miners from the UMWA. You strike. You make a collective decision and you cannot go back. There is no previous point in time to return to before you had to make as a membership that single, excruciating decision to deny your labor and your labor power and go up against the production and the profits of the company you have depended on for years. The town depends on the company and the town doesn't want you to fight and won't support any fight that will take the money and maybe even the comapny out of town. The town appears on the sidewalks and watches, silently, the frayed thread of union members and their families and the 'out-of-towners' demonstrate down Main Street waving signs demanding Justice and Solidarity and declaring hatred of GREED, an allegorical figure straight out of Piers Plowman, and you recognize with a shock that the folk are ancient, that there are recesses or zones in the inner cities and in the countryside that the Media can't penetrate, can't control. But the task of the Malcolm-Leninist on this particular day was not to lie. Everyone else was lying to them, nodding their heads like the couple of DSA professors from the University of Minnesota hanging around. The illusion that the strike was still alive needed to be destroyed. He dispelled their fantasies about the boycott and an independent union. My company, my union, my town, my job. You cannot be leaders because who do you represent. You are only as strong as the people who march by your side. What the road ahead looks like. All roads do not lead to this small town. The worker-bolsheviks were there to challenge the few workers left to think about the long road, and place the Strike within a perspective of class struggle in the United States. The high road of open class war will lead to Pennsylvania Avenue. Nobody was going to disagree that the union bosses in the UFCW weren't bums and needed to be kicked out and nobody was going to argue that the International hadn't sold the Local down the river and even authorized the use by the Company of scabs to break the strike. But what the worker-bolsheviks put on the table was their argument that the strike was over, and the fight just beginning. The task was to look past this decade and into the next one, the last one, and into the next century. The strike broke the rout of the labor movement driven home to every worker in this country at the time of the intervention of Washington in declaring the air-traffic controllers' strike at the start of the decade illegal. There wasn't any boycott or any other magic trick that would bring back the 800 who went out and stayed out for 18 months and made their union unlike any union the working class has seen in 50 years. The North American Proletariat is not an inert mass of millions of faces waiting to be led into battle, the coming class war. We represent a plurality of potential. Dispel the illusion that you can bring back those workers who marched down mainstreet behind you in April and filled the local high school gym and the armory in January. They were gone. They got new jobs in strange towns and went back to the work of working to survive. You are the handful left, the circle elected at the moment when the Company had made its ultimatums who could smell more than your own private lives in the air, something your local still had from the 30s, like a tradition, or memory, or history: the victory of the sit-down strike led by Frank

Ellis (who came up through the IWW and it’s not impossible that he knew Jack Spicer’s Dad). Nobody argued that. Nobody was saying that this strike 50 years later hadn’t been fought hard nor well. But it was time to insist on what we have been saying, that a war is fought on many grounds, in many forms. A fight begins over a particular contract and specific demands when the conditions inside the plant propel the membership into risking their jobs for--that’s just it, they don’t know what it is exactly for what they refuse to work under the same conditions or under worse conditions, they only know that they are breaking some law written in stone. The decision is political. It was time to dispel the illusion that some man or woman out there in that fantasy land called TV is going to save you no matter what their color is nor what their best intentions are they cannot and will not save you. Their courts are not our courts, their cops are not our cops, their laws are not our laws, their government is not our government. We have nothing but what strength we gather by uniting. There is a crisis coming that will shake this nation to its foundations and there are only two roads, and we are at that crossroads here, in this room: there is the road we must take and with as many as we can in alliance and solidarity and then there is the road they have to offer that ends in a swamp of decayed cities, millions of unemployed, homeless and hungry, divided by race riots, bread riots, misery and despair. That’s the road they hold out to us, and they want us thinking all the time that it’s called something like "opportunity knocks," or "get your money while you can." The future they have to offer us is a future too horrible to contemplate, horrible if you hate the waste of human life. There is no value higher than the value of each and every human being brought into the world. Every life contains an inestimable potential to contribute to the future and progress of the human race. Every death, every denial, every oppression is an act of barbarism, a savagery against all that we have achieved in the thousands and tens of thousands of years since we first emerged from caves and took up a stick or rock for a tool. The origin of the human will to advance and develop and evolve into the infinite powers of our species. WE MAKE OUR OWN HISTORY. There were four long tables in the room. Maybe there were 30 workers in the room. Around the room on the walls were the gigantic photographs from the strikes in the industry in the 30s and then again in 48, the year of the last great strike wave. Cops and soldiers in riot gear with guns facing the crowd of workers armed with pickets and placards. The confrontation. This is where we will arrive. It is called History Materialism. Enemy of abstract and preconceived ideas. Enemy of the will to speculate about experience. Enemy of dreaming up a scheme and imposing that scheme on reality: a specific and fluid process of situations and contexts capable of combining and coming apart at any given stage or phase. Enemy of mists and mirrors. I can see him speaking. The figure of the Black Revolutionary that embodies and simultaneously transcends the limitations of his origins in Malcolm X since he is something more, a new power: a communist who has not existed before. The measure of his own strength is found in an identity indissoluble from the identity of the cadre, a unity of decisive intention, the myth of a unified purpose, or a unity of purpose to take the State. No one can predict that. You can’t isolate a leader from the ranks who are one body, a single voice with multiple inflections respective of personality, race, sex, age and social origins. A single determination, a single will to build forces and join forces, increasing forces, reading and readying for the relation of forces. There is the recognition that you can win when your face dissolves into the faces of the millions of others who see themselves as they must see their highest image of themselves in the face of the communist that does not belong to any individual, any leader, any hero. It is the face and fate of a common humanity they will see when they give their lives.

\\\\\\\ [+] ///////

We are led past the evidence of our own graves into thinking one day there will be justice.

cf. William Cullen Bryant,
"the proud meaning of his look"
pp. 252-53 in The Best Loved Poems of the American People, 1936.

see also:

1. "Oser inventir l'avenir:
La parole de Thomas Sankara" PATHFINDER & L'HARMATTAN
5-7 rue de l'Ecole Polytechnique
75005 Paris

2. Ernesto Che Guevara:
"Pasajes de la guerra revolucionaria: Congo" MONDADORI, 385.08013 Barcelona
http://www.grijalbo.com

↑ Index

136. david bromige
Philip Whalen reading in SF
Wed 11 Aug 1999

Michael Rothenberg has requested that I post this notice to the List. Which I do gladly!

Celebratory reading from OVERTIME: SELECTED POEMS BY PHILIP WHALEN, will be held on Saturday, August 21, 1:00-3:00 PM at Cowell Theater, Ft. Mason, S.F.(car entrance to Ft. Mason Center is at Marina Blvd. and Buchanan). Guest readers will include Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Joanne Kyger, Gary Snyder, Michael McClure, Diane di Prima, Michael Rothenberg, David Meltzer, Clark Coolidge, Norman Fischer, Leslie Scalapino, Bill Berkson and Dave Haselwood. Philip Whalen will attend. Admission is free.

db

↑ Index

137. Lowther,John

FW: 7th Annual John Cage Birthday Tribute (NYC)

Wed 11 Aug 1999

> 7th Annual John Cage Birthday Tribute
> Sunday, September 5th, 1999
> Video at 6pm, Reading at 7:30pm
> @ Danspace / St. Mark's Church
> 10th Street & 2nd Avenue
> Admission is Free
>
> For Immediate Release:
>
> The 7th Annual John Cage Birthday Tribute will take place Sunday, September 5th.This year's Tribute will be divided into two parts, a video at 6pm and a reading at 7:30 pm. The event is presented in association with Danspace Project at St. Mark's Church. Admission is free.
>
> The video documentary, called "I Have Nothing to Say, and I Am Saying It," was produced by Vivian Perlis and Allan Miller. Made two years before John Cage died, it contains priceless candid interviews interwoven with clips of him as he collects mushrooms, plays chess with Duchamp's wife, plays a conch for Merce Cunningham, and directs a rehearsal for a radio ensemble piece. For those who have never seen or heard John Cage, this video is a wonderful introduction. For those who knew him, it is deeply moving.
>
> Afterwards at 7:30 pm, people who knew John Cage personally (many of whom appear in the video) will read from Indeterminacy, a collection of stories, each lasting exactly one minute regardless how many words are in it (so that the longer ones are read quickly and the shorter ones slowly).

> Some
> of the stories are printed in A Year from Monday (pp 133 to 140) under the title "How to Pass, Kick, Fall and Run.4 "ther stories appear interspersed in Silence.
>
> The video is one hour and the reading will run about ninety minutes. Admission is free and all are welcome. For further information, send email to [redacted] or call the Danspace Project at [redacted].

↑ Index

138. Eugene Ostashevsky

Brandon & Brendan at Caffe' Proust, Sunday at 9

Wed 11 Aug 1999

Poetry Reading at CAFFE' PROUST
Sunday, August 15, 9PM
Corner of BAKER & McALLISTER (2 bl. W of Divisadero, 4 bl. N. of Fell)
Free

The readers are:

BRANDON DOWNING, editor of the first issue of _6,500_, the magazine of 9X9 Industries;

BRENDAN LORBER, editor of _LUNGFULL!_ magazine (NYC) and co-host of the reading series at the Zinc Bar on Houston.

The show is emceed by EUGENE OSTASHEVSKY, recently voted Most Mellifluous in a readers' poll held by the _REVUE DES EQUIVOQUES_.

CAFFE' PROUST, hidden in a quiet redsidential neighborhood in the geographic heart of the city, combines exquisite foods of Italy, France and California, dollops of high culture, and a warm ambiance for reasonable prices. Fine wines, beer, coffees, dinners and desserts are served until 10pm.

A sample of Brandon Downing's work:

from 68 QUICK POEMS

1.
A nice guy against A night sky

2.
Then, in 1876
The eulogies and elegies
Finally defeated
The odes

THE SHIRT WEAPON

So your hand lights up and you finally shoot yourself
Your apparent worries become isolated, miscellany
Whether you're the Macchu Picchu, whether I'm the Gulf
My shirt is my weapon, my enemy tyranny

This reading brought to you by the Association Culturelle _Albatros_, member of the Crony Island of the Mind

Our mottoes are: 1) Prince des huées; 2) Gordo reiem
Eugene Ostashevsky, General and Particular

↑ Index

139. Irving Weiss
Samuel Greenberg
Wed 11 Aug 1999

Anyone know anything in the last few decades written about Samuel Greenberg, him alone or his influence on Hart Crane? That is, apart from the Greenberg web site . Be grateful for any help.

Irving Weiss

http://members.tripod.com/~sialbach/

↑ Index

140. David Kirschenbaum
Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
Wed 11 Aug 1999

> Karen Kelley wrote:
>
> Being from Boston, this post caught my eye. I guess I'll say it flat >out: Boston is the most racist place I've ever lived. Granted, I >went from there to New York & on to San Francisco--so maybe Boston >just looks bad by comparison. It all seemed quite civilized on the >surface: the neighborhoods were segregated and everyone knew which >lines not to cross. Maybe it's changed since I left 15 years ago, >but I kind of doubt it.

I'm not from Boston, and, hell, as a Yankees fan in 1978 even owned a "Boston Sucks" T-shirt, until my mother found out about it and made my sister take it back, but geez, no matter how racist Boston may be --and I've heard horror stories from many former residents, and, back to baseball, the Red Sox were even the last team to integrate, Pumpsie Green in 1959, if memory serves me right, a full 12 years after Jackie Robinson and Larry Doby--but from the poetic community I know their isn't even a subtle form of racism. None. Zip. Nada. The ideas of neighborhoods being segregated and knowing the uncrossable lines relates to just about any major metropolis, including San Francisco and New York, each of which I've lived in, the latter for most of my live. Instead, again, I think it's simply ignorance rather than racism, that at times leads to non-diverse events and publications, sometimes even my own. It takes an extra effort to be inclusive, be it simply through inquiry or attending more ethnically and racially diverse reading series. Be Good, David

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

141. Taylor Brady
Re: Samuel Greenberg
Wed 11 Aug 1999

Irving,

If memory serves (and being at work without my books at hand, that's a fairly large "if"), Samuel Delany has an essay on Greenberg in his _Longer Views_ collection that explores some of the Crane connections. Dovetails nicely, also, with the fictional treatment of Crane in his _Atlantis_.

Taylor

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]]On Behalf Of Irving Weiss Sent: Wednesday, August 11, 1999 12:56 PM
To: [redacted]
Subject: Samuel Greenberg

Anyone know anything in the last few decades written about Samuel Greenberg, him alone or his influence on Hart Crane? That is, apart from the Greenberg web site . Be grateful for any help.

Irving Weiss
http://members.tripod.com/~sialbach/

↑ Index

142. George Bowering
Re: Jacataqua
Wed 11 Aug 1999

> I'm looking for information about "Jacataqua" -- essay by William Carlos Williams in __In the American Grain__. The piece touches on Aaron Burr's interaction during the Revolutionary War with the Abenaki Indians. WCW > describes the woman Jacataqua as an Abenaki "sachem" or chief, but I can find no other historical reference to her -- anybody know if she existed? Thanks.

> Allison Cobb

I once knew, when I was looking into it re Hart Crane's poem.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

143. K.Silem Mohammad

Re: Farm Implements? -Reply

Wed 11 Aug 1999

Jeffrey Jullich wrote:

> I'm distressed, though, that I cannot find a journal article I read >on "Farm Implements and Rutabagas", by Reva Wolf. It appeared in a >literary journal that I chanced upon in our Periodicals Room, but now >I can't remember which.

That very interesting article is in _Poetics Journal_ No. 10.

K. Silem Mohammad

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

144. Steven Clay

Granary Books blow-out sale!

Wed 11 Aug 1999

Wednesday August 11, 1999 Granary Books is moving cross town at the end of August. We'd like to lighten our load of office inventory and are thus offering the following Granary publications at EXTREME SAVINGS:

Discount is 50% on the following titles:

ARTISTS BOOKS: A CRITICAL SURVEY OF THE LITERATURE by Stefan Klima. 1998. Paperback. 109 pp. "A thoroughly useful guide." Johanna Drucker. ISBN: 1-887123-18-0. Was: $17.95 NOW: $8.98

THE BOOK SPIRITUAL INSTRUMENT edited by Jerome Rothenberg and David Guss. 1996. Paperback. 160 pp. Illustrated. "... new worlds carved out of the wilderness of human thought and language." Charles Bernstein. ISBN: 1-887123-08-3. Was: $21.95 NOW: $10.98

THE CENTURY OF ARTISTS' BOOKS by Johanna Drucker. 1995. Illustrated throughout. 377 pp. "A crucial contribution to the history of the book in visual culture." Buzz Spector.
Paperback. ISBN: 1-887123-02-4. Was: $24.95 NOW: $12.48
Cloth. ISBN: 1-887123-01-6. Was: $35 NOW: $17.50

THE CUTTING EDGE OF READING: ARTISTS' BOOKS by Renee Riese Hubert & Judd D. Hubert. 1999. Hardback. 265 pp. Illustrated throughout in color and black and white. ISBN: 1-887123-21-0. Was: $55 NOW: $27.50

FIGURING THE WORD: ESSAYS ON BOOKS, WRITING, AND VISUAL POETICS by Johanna Drucker. 1998. Paperback. Illustrated throughout. 312 pp. ISBN: 1-887123-23-7. Was: $24.95 NOW: $12.48

THE HISTORY OF THE/MY WOR(L)D by Johanna Drucker. 1995. Artist's book with text, images and layout by Drucker. Black, white and red printing. Hardback with letterpress dust jacket. 8 1/2" x 11", 40 pp. ISBN: 1-887123-06-7. Was: $50 NOW: $25

LOG RHYTHMS by Charles Bernstein and Susan Bee. 1998. 22 pp. Artist's book with text by Bernstein and images by Bee. 8 1/2" x 11" black and white; color cover. Paperback. ISBN: 1-887123-25-3. Was: $35. NOW: $17.50

A SECRET LOCATION ON THE LOWER EAST SIDE: ADVENTURES IN WRITING: 1960-1980: A SOURCEBOOK OF INFORMATION by Steven Clay and Rodney Phillips. 1998. A co-publication with the New York Public Library. 340 pp. Paperback. "... a Proustian hit of youthful exuberance, a glance at a time when artists built a community apart from the imprimature of the academy." Village Voice. Illustrated throughout. ISBN: 1-887123-20-2. Was: $27.95 NOW: $13.98

TED BERRIGAN: AN ANNOTATED CHECKLIST by Aaron Fischer. 1998. 68 pp. "I will treasure this book." Ron Padgett. Illustrated throughout in black and white and color. Features many collaborations between Berrigan and George Schneeman. ISBN: 1-887123-17-2. Was: $32.95 NOW: $16.48

THE WORD MADE FLESH by Johanna Drucker. 1996. Artist's book; text and layout by Drucker. 12 1/2" x 10 1/2", 24 pp. 500 copies. Hardback with letterpress dust jacket. ISBN: 1-887123-09-1. Was: $60 NOW: $30

SALE ENDS AUGUST 20, 1999.

PAYMENT MUST ACCOMPANY ORDER. We accept: checks, Visa & Mastercard. Shipping is $2 per order, flat rate, domestic. Overseas shipping will be determined at the time of your order.

Residents of the state of New York must add proper sales tax.

Contact us via email: [redacted] or phone: [redacted], operators are standing by.
For more information about any book see our website:
http://www.granarybooks.com

Many thanks and best wishes!

Steve Clay
Granary Books
568 Broadway #403
NY NY 10012

↑ Index

145. Maria Damon

Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.

Wed 11 Aug 1999

At 4:15 PM -0400 8/11/99, David Kirschenbaum wrote:
>>Karen Kelley wrote:
>
>>Being from Boston, this post caught my eye. I guess I'll say it flat >out:
>>Boston is the most racist place I've ever lived. Granted, I >went from >>there to New York & on to San Francisco--so maybe Boston >just looks bad by >>comparison. It all seemed quite civilized on the >surface: the >>neighborhoods were segregated and everyone knew which >lines not to cross.
>>Maybe it's changed since I left 15 years ago, >but I kind of doubt it.
>
>I'm not from Boston, and, hell, as a Yankees fan in 1978 even owned a
>"Boston Sucks" T-shirt, until my mother found out about it and made my >sister take it back, but geez, no matter how racist Boston may be --and I've >heard horror stories from many former residents, and, back to baseball, the >Red Sox were even the last team to integrate, Pumpsie Green in 1959, if >memory serves me right, a full 12 years after Jackie Robinson and Larry >Doby--but from the poetic community I know their isn't even a subtle form of >racism. None. Zip. Nada.
>The ideas of neighborhoods being segregated and knowing the uncrossable >lines relates to just about any major metropolis, including San Francisco >and New York, each of which I've lived in, the latter for most of my live.
>Instead, again, I think it's simply ignorance rather than racism, that at >times leads to non-diverse events and publications, sometimes even my own.
>It takes an extra effort to be inclusive, be it simply through inquiry or >attending more ethnically and racially diverse reading series.

>Be Good,
>David

well, i gotta back karen up on this; being from boston (or rather newton, the "golden ghetto" of the greater boston area) i can attest to the sharp divisions in neighborhoods --more so than in SF or NYC. however, there are other forms of racism, such as in the Twin Cities where everything's supposed to be so nicey nice. the neighborhoods aren't as sharply divided, but people are almost wilfully naive and want to deny difference wherever they find it.

↑ Index

146. A H Bramhall
I Guess I'll Say It Flat Out
Wed 11 Aug 1999

---

true as any shit can be: the streets of Boston are racist. I myself saw Mass Ave
act out. all the streets
have frat parties and stupid central heating. the trees
in fair Boston are sadly reluctant to accept change. many of the buildings
have issues. Boston Harbour
ignores castanets, Logan Airport rolls over for thunder, the Fleet Centre is where people die
deader than dead, and the arhythmic
parsimony of local names
rewards only the enclosed.
people aren't people
in any determined way
here. the things
in the sky
fall rapidly.
pity only exists far,
far to the west
because improvement is so human. the tone of what happened 15

years ago
broaches the new dynamics of concern, totally reeking of the eternal blah blah
how's your stupid cat?
the Boston
Public Gardens has a darkness that cannot be relieved by mere rare questionable
sunshine. the tone
of every car is careless and sour. don't ask about any window, they are
ALL THE SAME. every shopping bag contains an urge to prepare a final draft. the word 'every'
is spoken every (hah!)
three seconds and
the books of Boston, each damn hole of them, are indented with indiscriminate malice. purple haze is a river
kinder than the Charles.
John Coltrane came to town and said QUIXOTIC while angrily flipping the bird. Elvin keeping time said
yeah. words choose new routes here. no one (boxed redoubt) lives
true life, the geese say SUCK, the SWANS remove to poetic realms, the pigeons indubitably have no rest in the perfect nest. the world is so finely wrought in smallness that every tallish structure within the city limits
bows to the stress-fractured creeps who own the vocabulary
now and forever. and that is how it is: one crowd is always better than

another. expertise
wins. bonus points
when you supplicate to the answer. smooth things
are marvelous.

↑ Index

147. Kathy Lou Schultz
Re: Lynn Miller's strong stuff
Wed 11 Aug 1999

Lynn Miller=Kevin Magee
if it matters
^^

Kathy Lou Schultz
Editor & Publisher
Lipstick Eleven/Duck Press
www.duckpress.org

42 Clayton Street San Francisco, CA 94117-1110

>From: KENT JOHNSON <[redacted]>
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Lynn Miller's strong stuff
>Date: Tue, Aug 10, 1999, 10:34 AM
>

> Impressed and intrigued by Lynn Miller's pieces on the List > of past couple or three weeks, a bit surprised no one else has > commented. Very different and daring it seems to me. What seems new > is how an over-drived analytical/historical bent exudes an odd and > compelling lyricism, though that suggests too much that the latter is > the byproduct of the former. Maybe it's the other way around, which > would make it more interesting, actually.
> Whatever the case may be, I'm sure other people are noticing too.
> Keep it moving, Lynn Miller, whoever you are.
>
> Kent

↑ Index

148. Alan Sondheim
eXchange
Wed 11 Aug 1999

==\==\=

eXchange

Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 22:29:52 -0400 (EDT)
From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
To: Julu <[redacted]>
Subject: mailme: Wed Aug 11 22:29:52 EDT 1999

mailme: Wed Aug 11 22:29:52 EDT 1999

Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 22:30:49 -0400 (EDT)
From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
To: Julu <[redacted]>
Subject: ARE

ARE YOU THERE?

Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 22:31:14 -0400 (EDT)
From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
To: Julu <[redacted]>
Subject: JULU?

JULU? JULU? THIS IS NIKUKO. ARE YOU THERE?

Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 22:31:36 -0400 (EDT)
From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
To: Julu <[redacted]>
Subject: PHONE

PHONE RINGS. SOMEONE GET IT.

Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 22:32:04 -0400 (EDT)
From: Alan Sondheim <[redacted]>
To: Julu <[redacted]>
Subject: I

I HAVE BETTER THINGS TO DO -

(THERE'S A PACKAGE ARRIVED. I GOT THE CALL FROM DMITRI. THERE'S A BOMB IN IT. I HAVE TO FIGURE THIS OUT. I'VE GOT TO CALL THE OTHERS. I'VE GOT BETTER THINGS TO DO.)

↑ Index

149. Lynn Miller
"I think I'll shut up now"
Wed 11 Aug 1999

EMMA GRAMMATICA

Did you get used to words, using them?
The vast warehouse that the past is if the past is not peripheral, like another existence which was really ours--people you have seen for a brief period of time or even if only Once Upon a Time, at cafes or bookstores or in houses you would never set foot in again. He belonged, then, not to the circle he'd made a point of leaving,

since here he had a place and in the class to which he belonged. She must know that he needed her to reject him, needed that explosive charge to escape at all,

and everything depended on the velocity.
I let him luxuriate in the consciousness of that insult, for such a chronicle I would need a scale as large as life that came into view with my pen. His fanaticism about freedom made any permanent intimacy with another person impossible--the guilt he has forgotten and yet fraternally into the soft or roaring decimating an Expressionism as old as Art itself and found whenever unregulated "e/motion" outweighs reason, the pure subject, wilderness of the Subjected and caught in the content as real signs and as signs of something (humanly)

"real"--as us? Or was all the philosophy a philanthropy of the irrational which takes pity on it and incorporates it into the philosopher who bends over it? I thought about it all day, that what was intended in 1912-22,

how the high and low pressure systems were stages of a single system and not as separate as Ron put it in his temporary instructions. It sounds a lot more grand when you announce a new system instead of an innovation designed to "supplement" the pre-existing one. They weren't getting enough pressure from the low-pressure line, and how the high and low work together is what I was working on in Works and Days.

The high pressure line pushes the vapors but where? The low pressure line follows with a void, push and pull the whole principle.

It's like that concept of a backflush then purge that you stumbled on in Louisville.
"It's basic," a worker told me in Illinois.
"You have to go in both directions."

Georg Kaiser

↑ Index

150. Alan Sondheim

eXchange - follow-up - please read

Thu 12 Aug 1999

==\==\=

eXchange - follow-up - please read

Oh this is so stupid because I have a couple of programs that allow me to send mail to myself so I thought I'd dredge up some memories of films I made at UCLA in 1981-82; I decided to make a film a week, and that's how I did films 1-37, all 16mm sound ranging from 3 minutes to probably 20 or so - anyway I was reading Christian Metz at the time and thinking about ter- rorism which is always relevant in LA and everywhere now, and I wrote through this character called Dmitri at times, that wasn't his real name - and there were phonecalls, "Hello Hello, It's Dmitri, yes, the package has arrived," and I'd get the phone or Sung-Ja would but of course there would be no one on the other end and the phone wouldn't ring at all or maybe someone would say "ring ring" off-screen or even I'd say it before I picked up the phone -

So here I am doing another short-circuit and wondering what will come of it and surely here comes Dmitri and Julu and Nikuko dragged in from the other worlds altogether, all of them in the space - of course there are no bombs - our neighborhood has a "bomb-like record" - the World Trade Center (WTC) bombing was planned in part a couple of blocks from here, and a small cell was found in the other direction, a bout five blocks away, working on blowing up the subway system, specifically the B train at the Pacific Street stop (I take it all the time), because a lot of Jews took it (which was news to me, time for reschedule) -

Anyway so here comes this incoming (shades of war, stealth technology, bombers and fighters), and I make a dialog out of it - making sure that there are the usual incompletions, spaces, edges to the text - difficult to do in small texts - but it worked, using this small program, I'd just type ./.mailme THE ACTION IS NEXT TUESDAY and it would arrive with the Subject: THE set up, and the rest of the text following "in the body of the message" - saved it/them altogether -

But it's a weakness of mine, this urgency, desperation - writing texts as if they mattered, life-and-death-struggles, the last words spoken by the last person on earth (it doesn't matter, no recipient, lost in the looped black holes forever, router down! router down!) - but putting this/ that package together took some time - maybe not enough - anyway you've seen the results - do what you may with them - the content's not real - is irreal - hyperreal - surreal - you can almost feel the trill of the rrr's as everything gets ready to go off (that urgency again) - somewhere people are being killed - you can count on it -

Plans as stupid as this collage - attempt at a text - idiocy, stupidity - the bungle, the kludge ...

↑ Index

151. Tisa Bryant

Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene

Thu 12 Aug 1999

The "guard/garde" in van- and avant- tend to do just that. It's hard to think of the words as having anything to do with "open"; they seem to work against insistence. Vanguard, at the front, standing along the curve, bordering on, bordering from, in relation to the center of concentric understanding, and bound by it until movement occurs, then starting over. The ins and outs.

As I said in my post, I was one of the few, meaning three or four out of a possible 15, experimenting writers within the DRC, so said content in the Reading Series far outweighed that of the workshops/work produced. While a reunion of the DRC might be intriguing to some, its occurence at the next Alt Bo Po conference would yield yet another thread like the one currently being knotted here.

I did not mean to imply that Boston's poetry scene, or its poets, were racist simply by living in a place with Boston's reputation. The DRC & RS came about out of lack, and to "break down the elitist aura surrounding (Black) literary figures." Bring 'em "home", make 'em accessible. So non-academic folks and academics could hear some poetry and meet the poets without feeling unwelcome, undereducated, or too poor. Much like, in varying respects, the Poetry Project, or the Unterberg/Y series, or Small Press Traffic, or what Aaron Kiely put together, or any other such thing going on in this world. Kiely created an event that made sense to him (and who knows who declined for whatever reason to attend?), invited people he knew, and will continue to expand and evolve as organizes future conferences, as David Kirschenbaum said.

What is intriguing to me, although it's great that he's open to suggestions, is how he (or anyone) feels/thinks out the "alternative" in Boston (or anywhere) and what kinds of writers/work will be encouraged by the conferences, who will come and branch out, from the universities and from the 'hoods. Here alliances between Kiely, Lansing and Corbett could yield much, but I think Kiely's vision, and support of it, to be more important. I echo Linda Russo here, and what I think Kevin Killian was getting at.

There's got to be something to get to. Where is that? Home can work just as well as anywhere, if one is comfortable there, of one's own making or ad/a/o/ption.

Here I must point out that the quality of poetic life in Boston may simply not sustain many for very long. (why people leave places) It can't be the weather, which is just as bad if not worse in Buffalo. So, Jacques, back to curriculum/influence, or something. Point(s) well taken. I wish Alt Bo Po the best, count Aaron as a burgeoning force to be reckoned with, and hope to see for myself some day what happens there.

The ethnicity & innovation issue (together and separately) is about inclusivity, but not ethnicity as alternative in and of itself. Here, the DRC references do not serve well. Certainly there have been some changes since The New American Poetry, or Gross & Quasha's Open Poetry, in which Black poets appeared together in the back of the book, instead of within the categorical sections in which they best fit, a move that at once showcased an impressive group of Black experimentalists and relegated them to an unfortunate and historically loaded space. But certain blindnesses still persist. Also too are the refusals by mainstream of-color editors to include same experimentalists in the publications they produce(d). This cannot be ignored.

Also again, one must be seen to be part of the scene, be seen as part of the scene and seen well once seen there, understood to fit. (Back to Dodie Bellamy's persona post). It's easy to say that there are "no" or "few" (blank) writers, but then, how does one know, in publishing, especially if said writer doesn't dally with the usual signifiers in a recognizable way, if at all, goes by a first initial and non-identifiably ethnically specific last name, and/or if one doesn't show up on the scene? What is happening outside of the seen, and outside of the scene, and what does that look/sound like? How does physical presence come to be privileged over the arrival of text in this regard? This said specifically regarding inclusion/exclusion and writers of color, but also as a general query on the function of "centers", in this context.

****

Today we declare:
First, they are living in a Nono form;
Second, they are Nono lives;
Third, they make us feel Nono;
Fourth, they make us become Nono;
Fifth, we Nono.
Lan Ma
"Manifesto of Nonoism"
(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
****

↑ Index

152. Jeffrey Jullich
Farm Implements? -Reply
Thu 12 Aug 1999

>>> John Tranter <[redacted]> 07/30/99 09:16am >>> Jeffrey Jullich <[redacted]> mentioned in his survey of Scandanavian poetry the line

"He offers a smile, mild
/ as pick-axe handles a / mile wide which kindles/ the hide of rutabegas"

As a long-time fan of John Ashbery, I'm a little concerned that the spelling of

rutabagas

is getting abraded here. We don't have them in Australia -- we have Swedes and turnips, but not rutabagas -- but that's no reason to become careless about our treasury of English spellings.

Anyone care to comment?
best,
JT

The OED lists 1799 as the earliest citation for "The new turnip, called roota baga". As "ruta-baga", it has appeared in poetry no less illustrious than Shelley's (Oed. Tyr. 1. 47):

Hog-wash or grains, or ruta-bagas, none
Has yet been ours since your reign begun

later in poetry no less whimsical than Ogden Nash's 1951 "Family Reunion":

We gobbled like pigs
On rutabagas and salted figs.

However, since ~brassica napus~ is also defined by the OED and the Encyclopedia Brittanica as "the Swedish turnip" (see http://www.eb.com:180/bol/topic?asmbly_id=15299 for a lovely illustration of ~brassica rapa~), the name is originally derived from a West Gotland dialect of Swedish, and perhaps we should be less protectionist about "our treasury of English spellings": often vestiges of an earlier etymology can resurrect in mispronunciations or deviant spellings.

I'm distressed, though, that I cannot find a journal article I read on "Farm Implements and Rutabagas", by Reva Wolf. It appeared in a literary journal that I chanced upon in our Periodicals Room, but now I can't remember which. If I remember correctly, she argues that there's a link to an Andy Warhol painting with, I think, the word "rutabagas" in it, or perhaps Popeye or some other element from the poem. John disavowed any connection or knowledge of the painting, but she prints a photograph of a Thanksgiving dinner party where he is seated in front of the suspect painting.

He was working at ~Art News~ at the time, and may have said that the title came from a Dutch or Flemish canvas in a catalogue he was editing at the time; but Reva Wolf again traces down the original to find that any such Old Master was in fact titled "Farm Implements and ~Vegetables~ in a Landscape", or such, so that his recounting of it was a double invention: he may have revised the title of the Dutch canvas itself in that catalogue.

I'm drawing on an imperfect memory of the article here, so if anyone can help out with the proper Wolf citation, we could learn more about those rutabagas. I'm sure they're delicious with drawn butter.

↑ Index

153. Jeffrey Jullich
"alternative"
Thu 12 Aug 1999

>>> "Maria Damon (Maria Damon)" <[redacted]>
08/09/99 05:25pm >>> "alternative" does tend to mean a certain alternative, namely, an "experimental" style. like "avant garde."

With all of these various commentaries on the use of the phrase "alternative poetry"--- isn't this use of "alternative" derivative, though, borrowed from the marketing of contemporary music? It isn't as though poets themselves had hatched this usage, the way "Vorticist" or such may have been a genuine self-coined appellation. It's being patched in from the language at large, where it already has its politicized functions.

In the NY area at least, there are radio stations, more and more actually, which play what they call "alternative" rock; it's pretty much what used to be called "punk", with a dash of occasional "metal." I have the impression that with "alternative music" the marketers use the word to soften the scary edge they don't want to name: "punk." And I would suspect that, in its "pure" form, the same might be true of "alternative poetry."

Where "avant-garde" or even "experimental" may have suggested something contestatory, "defiant," or antagonistic to a status quo, the danger with a term like "alternative" is that it makes things sound as though these were arbitrary choices that one might wobble back and forth between casually: Coke/Pepsi ideology. It isn't dialectical anymore; it's styled as a mere matter of taste and whim, that you can switch the channel to "alternative" for a while if you get tired of mainstream, or whatever. Spice things up.

What is being elided is that an authentic "avant-garde" might actually be meant as ~"subversive,"~ the concept of "revolutionary" art, that it is seeking to change the whole rules of the game, and wasn't served up as a diversion. "Alternative," like "pluralistic," is a troublingly ~umbrella~ term, to my thinking: I thought Jacques' helpful postings correctly implied that there are poets who are writing essentially normative and conservative poetry, who are all too happy to slip under the tent skirts of a bohemia, out of embarassment or plain obliviousness to their "complicity" in perpetuating/reproducing things as they are, or for other reasons.

In short, what I am trying to say is that "alternative" is a ~vanilla-izing~ of something perhaps much more bitter and tonic than that. Or, it is a repackaging of (malgre lui) mainstream castaways who otherwise would have been lost against the mainstream's more exclusionary publishing odds. The "radical" that has lost its fight becomes "alternative."

Why ~can't~ a conference bill itself as "Subversive" or "Insurrectionist"? The fading of that sensibility may have a lot to do with the latter generational "directionlessness" that is also being discussed under this Boston theme.

↑ Index

154. Michael Magee

thoughts on BoPo and points distant

Thu 12 Aug 1999

Thinking about all this talk of BoPo. Wanted to cast my one vote of encouragement to Jacques for taking on the difficult role of instigator - essentially what he was saying was, hey, at the moment, this BoPo space has trouble accomodating/engaging a poet like me - and I think anytime a poet as intelligent and interesting as Jacques attempts to make room for himself in a particular "scene" there's at least an opportunity for that scene to react/expand in such a way that it becomes more interesting. In any event, the result here has been some very interesting posts, Brain Stefans' among many others. What seems to have been established, though others may disagree, is that, for a variety of reasons (and I doubt it owes much to any particular poet(s)'s malice) some writers who attempt to interact with BoPo - those who take language writing to be a major influence on their work, for instance, or those writing out of a tradition where African-American writers are front and center (and these are not mutually exclusive categories) - have felt alienated from whatever there is of a Boston scene.

Then again, there's been the suggestion that there really isn't a Boston scene - certainly not a "school" - not necessarily a bad thing: trying to write one's poems as a fourth-generation NY Schooler or whatever can't be a whole lot of fun, confining (those of you doing this, or putting "NY School" on your business cards, cease immediately!). But the idea that a critical mass of like-minded poets in Boston would simply be stifling is a bad one. Likewise the idea that older writers within the academy are simply courted for their "clout" by younger writers seeking such clout. Jacques is right when he says that this is mostly an anti-academic truism which, even if it's valid in some cases, impedes potentially valuable relationships.

Jacques mentioned Bob Perelman's role in the Penn/Philly poetry community and I can say this, having been in that community for the past five years: that when Bob got tenure at Penn many younger writers I know were invigorated not because he would now have "clout" but because this terrific poet with a lot to say would now probably be in Philly for a long time, rather than, say, Santa Cruz. Folks well known to this list like Steve Evans, Jennifer Moxley, Heather Fuller, etc, have been kind in saying, Hey, there really is something interesting going on in Philly - and I'm struck by how accidental that "something" was. There was Bob. Rachel Duplessis was at Temple. Ron Silliman moved to the area. Gil Ott had been there as a buoy much longer than anyone. These people weren't a committee doling out prises for godssake, they were poets with a lot of interesting, ideas, stories, and most of all poems! Tisa mentioned how the Dark Room Writers Collective, and the poets they were interested in, were an enigma to most of the Boston poetry community. But for us, well, Gil had published Harryette Mullen's S*PeRMK*T and MUSE & DRUDGE, so she was front and center from the beginning, and what might discover many other great poets (of color and otherwise) by considering Mullen's work as a point in a nexus and then fishing around for more points.

The Writers House at Penn came about and that was a space which provided some cohesiveness - the space being more important than the money for readings (which really wasn't/isn't that much, ask the people who've read there!). Louis Cabri had come to Penn already with a lot of experience, poems, and knowing a shitload of people, and he started PHILLY TALKS; I started COMBO; Kristen Gallagher started HANDWRITTEN PRESS and a million other things. So there were some forums which, as many of you have suggested along the way, helped buoy whatever sense of community we had going. And things could be done: Louis's dueling writers in PT was taken as a suggestion of who to pay attention to and who to read, etc, in addition to being an event where ideas could be hashed out. Lot's of NY people, D.C. people, Buffalo people coming through. Kristen, Farah Griffin and I interviewed Harryette for the first issue of COMBO and that was my way of saying - hey, this is what/who we should be paying attention to - likewise bringing Mackey, DiPalma to read. But everyone did this. Temple people were coming around, partly because Kerry Sherin, a grad student at Temple, became director of Writers House. Chris and Jenn McCreary started doing IXNAY. Kyle Conner and Greg Fuchs started the Highwire Gallery reading series.

Then, there was Kristen Gallagher's insistence that Philly itself was not to be ignored, that rather than lament that it wasn't NY or what have you, we ought to ground ourselves in it - at least that's how I was hearing her. And this, for me anyway, opened up avenues whereby things as diverese (or related?) as Philly's very underrated (and inexpensive) jazz scene or the activities of the Kensington Welfare Rights Union (with whom Kristen, Mytili Jagannathan, and , again accidentally, or coincidentally, my wife) could be treated as actions/activisms which might mediate/integrate-with the symbolic action of poems.

Why am I saying all this? It just seemed to me useful example in contradistinction to the current situation in Boston. In my own mind right now it seems like there are maybe 25 poets or so in or connected to Philly whose projects are quite various but who have enough in common in terms of social and aesthetic views to want to be talking to another and enough differences along these lines to keep that dialogue productive. And they have forums to support the dialogue. So, thinking of what Juliana Spahr said a while back about virtual communities, even though I now live in Rhode Island, if I figured myself as centered in any particular scene it would be the Philly scene, quite happily, though like Jacques I hope to make a little room for myself around these northern parts and hope Helen Vendler goes to her final resting place (Brookline?) to be replaced by Nate Mackey (Jacques might have a different choice in this regard). I say all this knowing that there are many interesting poets in and around Boston but that a really hopping community of poets - which, whatever anyone says, is a good thing is hard to come by and, as I say, pretty accidental.

-Mike.

↑ Index

155. David Kirschenbaum
No Sleep 'Til Brooklyn
Thu 12 Aug 1999

What's up with Brooklyn poets' author bios saying they live in New York City? Technically this is true, but, damn, as one born in Brooklyn, have some pride in your borough. I was at Coliseum Books by Columbus Circle here in Manhattan the other day (the best new poetry selection this side of St. Marks Books) and found titles by Chris Stroffolino and, I think, Ange Mlinko that say they live in New York City (no one down here ever uses the distinction Manhattan when referring to the borough). A minor quibble, perhaps, but strange one would feel the need to identify themselves as living elsewhere.

Be Good,
David

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

156. Tom Orange
19th C. Po&sie
Thu 12 Aug 1999

---

mike,

there are single-author works a-plenty, good anthologies a little harder to come by.

as to the latter, if you can scare up a copy of it at a secondhand store, _An anthology of French poetry from Nerval to Valery in English translation_ ed. angel flores (Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, 1962) is pretty good: the translations are in verse and if i remember right not presented en face but gathered together in the back of the book. they're also done by a variety of translators and hence can be uneven.

baudelaire: the two by-now standard editions are the one jackson and marthiel matthews edited for new directions in the mid-fifties (multiple reprintings, including a selected) and richard howard's edition for godine in 1985. the matthews' edition suffers, again, from some unevenness due to its being a gathering of different translators' work. howard on the other hand tends to spiff baudelaire up too much for those who like their baudelaire more ragged and soiled. translations by arthur symons and the george dillon-edna st.v millay collaboration are interesting more for historical purposes. i'd stay away from william h. crosby's edition for boa, his insistence on metrical faithfulness forces him into some serious padding. another version that's cheap and reliable is the oxford world's classics tr. james mcgowan. but you asked about plain prose translations: in which case, francis scarfe's edition for anvil in 1986 -- he does plain prose translations at the bottom of the page.

rimbaud:
the penguin collected poems (tr. oliver bernard) also does plain prose translations at the bottom of the page...

laforgue: penguin has just brought out a laforgue that i havent read yet but also hass plain prose at the bottom. otherwise, the one i have and like a lot is the peter dale translations publ. by anvil (1986)

verlaine: a tougher case. for a long time the only one you could find was the c.f. macintyre versions put out by u.california press in the 1950s. (and ditto for his mallarme translations). there's a new one from uchicago press, tr. norman shapiro, that i've only seen but not read...

mallarme: henry weinfeld's collected poems from ucal is a fine edition. another good one, tho again out of print, is the penguin edition w/ translations by anthony hartley i think his name is.

happy hunting,
tom orange / wash,dc

↑ Index

157. Tom Orange

Call for Entries: "Poevisioni elettroniche" (fwd)

Thu 12 Aug 1999

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: "ART ELECTRONICS" <[redacted]>
To: <[redacted]>

Subject: CALL FOR ENTRIES "Poevisioni elettroniche"
Date: Tue, 10 Aug 1999 01:38:42 +0200

http://space.tin.it/arte/cprezi>>> Davinio Art Electronics

In cooperation with Karenina.it Experimental Net-zine

http://www.geocities.com/Paris/Lights/7323/kareninarivista.html>>>

ELECTRONIC POE(try)VISIONS 2000

Caterina Davinio Director

You can contribute to the festival "Poevisioni elettroniche" (Art Electronics and Others Writings)

1. by sending your video-work (if you are a videoartist, a computer artist, a web artist or a videopoet-writer-performer) recorded on a vhs standard (PAL) videocassette, preferably not over 10 minutes,

2. by sending a short theoretical or informative report on your artistic or organisational experiences (a 10 min. vhs-standard videoreport is also possible),

3. by proposing artists, if you are a curator or an art critic (Fax: Italy-039-323389), engaged in research projects that utilise new technologies, with particular attention, not to the image only, but also to the script, the communication and to visual and video poetry (book excluded).

1. All forms of image, sound, experimental music and "writing" are admitted (computerart and graphics, videoart, videopoetry, virtual reality, various kind of telematic interaction, videoperformance, theatrical multi-medial experiments, installations), provided that recorded on standard VHS videocassette (PAL) (for sonore poetry an audiocassette is also possible). The original text and an English or French translation should be enclosed.

2. The collected material, even if not utilised, will not be returned, it will enter in the festival videotheque.

3. The selected works will be projected in an itinerant exhibition.

Electronìe d'arte e altre scritture 94-95 have been shown at: Pecci Museum of Prato, Palazzo delle Esposizioni, Lavatoio Contumaciale Cultural Association (Rome), Link Gallery (Bologna), Auditorium Maddalene (Padova), Atelier Gluck (Milan), Artifex Gallery (Torino), Giubbe Rosse Electronic Art Café, Spaziotempo Gallery (Florence). Organisational and theoretical contribution from: A. Amaducci, F. Bettini, T. Binga, M. Bufano, A. Caronia, C. Davinio, D. Evola, G. Fontana, D. Gasparinetti, M. Lunetta, W. Pedullà, C. Prati, R. Terrosi, G. Toti., magazines: La stanza rossa, Codici Immaginari. Have proposed artists: Cité des arts et des nouvelles tecnologies (Canada), Performance Space (Australia), R. Daolio, C. Davinio, V. Fagone, F. Galluzzi, M. M. Gazzano, C. Infante, S. Lischi, M. G. Mattei, M. Mori, R. Sardo.

Poevisioni Elettroniche 96-97-98-99 (Parole Virtuali/Virtual Words) have been shown at: Anfiteatro Fortezza Medicea (Siena), Teatro Sant'angelo (Perugia), Palazzo Gambalunga (Rimini), Casa delle Culture (Rome), Palazzo Ducale (Genova) , Magazzini Ferroviari ai Lolli (Palermo), Teatro Alkestis (Cagliari), Bergamo University, Ex Convento Sant'Agostino (Bergamo), in co-operation with the videofestivals: Visionaria '96, Cortomiraggi '97, Intravideo, Genovantasettevideo, Round '97 and '99, L'immagine Leggera, V-Art '97 and '98, Tuoi cespi solitari...98, Clorofilla 98, Festafestival '99.

4. The archives material could be utilised in future in non-profit-making cultural activity, informing the artists.

A catalogue and/or a video/WEB catalogue, containing a selection of works (30"-1' of every work), critic and theoretical text, photos can be distributed for promotional purpose.

VERY IMPORTANT: it is obligatory to send with the VHS STANDARD PAL videocassette:
an authorisation (with legible signature) 1) to show the video-works in no-profit cultural exhibitions, 2) to publish and/or distribute photos and biography (as photocopy, Web documents, printed matter), 3) to include the works, even if not selected, in the festival videotheque, all without compensation or refund
a biography in English or French technical characteristics of works (media, supports, hardware, software) colour photos text explaining the artistic research
Address:
Davinio Art Electronics

V. Oslavia 34 - 20052 Monza (Milan)

All the audio-visual material included in the archives will only be shown by authorisation of the artists, will not be broadcasted or projected out of no profit making tours, will not be copied or transferred for any purpose. "Electronìe" is a festival on a very tight budget that makes it impossible to pay copyright and honorarium to the numerous authors and operators, but, even if not remunerative, it is prestigious and has for the artists a public image and notoriety repayment.

Thank-you for your co-operation!

AUTHORISATION
YES, I, (name):

AUTHOR of the work/s (TITLE):

ARTIST ADDRESS:

TELEPHONE.....FAX..... ....

EMAIL.....WEBPAGE..... .....

I KNOW:

1."Poevisioni elettroniche" is an itinerant festival on a very tight budget that makes it impossible to pay copyright and honorarium to the authors, the critics and the co-operators,

2.that my work, even if not utilised, will not be returned, it will enter in the festival videotheque,

3.that the videotheque material could be utilised in future in non-profit-making cultural activity, only after informing me,

4.a catalogue and/or a video/WEB catalogue, containing 2"-1' of my work, my critic and theoretical text, photos of my work can be edited and distributed for promotional purpose.

5 I am legally owner of copyright and responsible for not authorised use in my video of images, music, text, production and/or post-production work, totally or in part, of other persons.

I AUTHORISE THE CURATOR

TO SHOW MY VIDEO-WORK/S: (TITLE) ....

(PRODUCTION).....

YEAR OF PRODUCTION .....

IN NO-PROFIT CULTURAL EXHIBITIONS,

TO PUBLISH AND/OR DISTRIBUTE PHOTOS AND BIOGRAPHY (AS PHOTOCOPY, WEB DOCUMENTS, PRINTED MATTER, CATALOGUE), TO INCLUDE THE WORKS, EVEN IF NOT SELECTED, IN THE FESTIVAL VIDEOTHEQUE, TO UTILISE MY WORK IN FUTURE IN NON-PROFIT-MAKING CULTURAL ACTIVITY, ONLY BY INFORMING ME, TO INSERT IN A CATALOGUE AND/OR A VIDEO/WEB CATALOGUE, 2"-1' OF MY WORK, MY CRITIC AND THEORETICAL TEXT, PHOTOS AND TO EDIT AND DISTRIBUTE THEM FOR PROMOTIONAL PURPOSE WITHOUT ANY REPAYMENT, COMPENSATION OR REFUND.

DATE.....

LEGIBLE SIGNATURE

....

Yes, I, (artist, curator, art critic, cultural operator)
(NAME).....

ADDRESS..... .....

TELEPHONE.....FAX..... .....

EMAIL.....

PROPOSE THE FOLLOWING ARTISTS (name, address, phone, email, web):

1..... .....

2..... .....

3..... .....

4..... .....

DATE.....

LEGIBLE SIGNATURE

.....

ART ELECTRONICS AND OTHER WRITINGS

VIDEOFESTIVAL

DAVINIO ART ELECTRONICS

Digital Video, Videopoetry,

Videoperformance, Multimedia, Computerart

Videotheque

HOME

↑ Index

158. David Buuck
Tripwire 3 now available
Thu 12 Aug 1999

---

tripwire: a journal of poetics

edited by Yedda Morrison & David Buuck

Announcing Tripwire 3 : Gender

featuring work by:

Diane Ward
Carla Harryman & Lyn Hejinian
Stefani Barber
Norma Cole
Jocelyn Saidenberg
Linda Russo
Claude Cahun (trans. Norma Cole)
Elizabeth Robinson
Brian Lennon
Elizabeth Treadwell
Erin Tribble
Rob Halpern
Sarah Anne Cox
Kevin Killian
David Buuck

Jen Hofer & Summi Kaipa on Harryman & Hejinian
Louis Cabri & Kristen Gallagher on Heather Fuller Hung Q Tu on Steve Farmer & P Inman
Roberto Tejada on Hoa Nguyen Kristin Prevallet on _The Hat_
Brian Kim Stefans on Rod Smith, Rodrigo Toscano, & Dan Farrell
Jen Hofer on Liz Fodaski
Kimberly Filbee on Lisa Robertson

& art by:

Rebeca Bollinger
Amanda Hughen
Linda Cummings
Tasha Robbins
Leona Christie

& more ---

160 pages.

$8 issue / $15 2 issue subscription (outside US pls add $2 per)

Thanks for your support!

tripwire
c/o Morrison & Buuck
PO Box 420936
SF CA 94142-0936
[redacted]

Tripwire also available at Small Press Distribution, St. Mark's in NYC, Bridge St in DC, Powell's in Portland, Cody's in Berkeley, Beyond Baroque in LA, & City Lights, Modern Times, Clean Well-Lighted, & Yerba Buena Center for the Arts in San Francisco.

Contributors & subscribers: Your issues are in the mail...

↑ Index

159. David Buuck
Tripwire 4: call for work
Thu 12 Aug 1999

---

tripwire: a journal of poetics

edited by Yedda Morrison & David Buuck

call for submissions----

Tripwire 4: WORK

Material v. intellectual labor. Class, production, productivity, economy. Practice, handiwork, wordwork, work ethic, workplace, co-worker. What is significance of one's work to one's writing? Of one's writing as work? Labor, capital, use value, industry. How does one participate in and against local and global economoies/cultures? Work force, workbook, workshop. In a small-press economy, what are the standards for "just compensation," for exploitation? Knowledge industries. Cultural workers. "Model post-industrial employees?" Exploitation, task, effort. Mission, service, vocation, career(ism). End- product, by-product, opus, oeuvre.

Tripwire invites submissions of essays, translations, interviews, art & book reviews, bulletins, letters responding to previous issues, and visual art. Visual art submissions should be reproducible in B&W; artists are encouraged to include a statement about their work. At this time we are not accepting unsolicited poetry for publication. All submissions should include a hard copy.

Deadline for submissions to Tripwire 4 is March 1, 2000.

TRIPWIRE
c/o Morrison & Buuck
PO Box 420936
SF CA 94142-0936

↑ Index

160. David Buuck
back issues of tripwire
Thu 12 Aug 1999

tripwire: a journal of poetics

edited by Yedda Morrison & David Buuck

There are still a few copies remaining of Tripwire 2: Writing as Activism. Featuring work by Steve Farmer, Ben Friedlander, Danielle Collobert, Rodrigo Toscano, Brenda Iijima, Brian Kim Stefans, Rod Smith, Noah de Lissovoy, Kristin Prevallet, Jack Hirschman, Lawless Crow (w/John Lowther & Pandy Prunty), Dodie Bellamy, Robert Fitterman, Elizabeth Treadwell & Sarah Anne Cox, Patrick Durgin, Kathy Lou Schultz, Pamela Lu, Juliana Spahr, Louis Cabri, Chris Chen, Lytle Shaw, Anselm Berrigan.

180 pages. $ 8 from Small Press Distribution.

Or: for $21, subscribe to Tripwire & receive issues 2,3, & 4. (Outside of US, $25)

"while supplies last..."

Tripwire
c/o Morrison & Buuck
PO Box 420936
SF CA 94142
[redacted]

↑ Index

161. Michael Franco get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON
Thu 12 Aug 1999

Having taken a few days or so to let this swirl in my mind I think that aside from my annoyance at the previous blanket dismissal of the Festival---- ----which did its work ...there was good bad & lame by known & unknown ..(remember one of the featured west-coast readers going on for 45 minutes when every one else was cutting back to a poem or two???) to wonderful moments like Windy Kramer's or Dan Bouchard's reading (which show his work to be Moving) Scalapino or Hejinian ...or Lease's short lovely burst or Gander's or... or...or... & having produced Word of Mouth on my own for ten years I know what Aaron K does / did in setting all of this into motion & then getting the hell out of the way....& just letting what ever happens happen

I return to my original post and this thought: if we went through the whole weekend for nothing more than to have been there for the Sat night read it was a memorable success... We were there - we gathered together- we met each other (for some again) shared food poetry and a remarkable set of readings

Now lets us return to the other thread running through here & that is the "Boston" scene & then the whole concept of "scene"

.

it was great to see the post on the DARK ROOM COLLECTIVE as there were many many memorable events there... I often scheduled Word of mouth events so that I could attend the darkroom.... They had a resident jazz band who were truly fine & readers as diverse in their work as one could ask for.

Both the Blacksmith House reading series (no university affiliation) and Stone Soup (no university) (Gail Mazer & Jack Powers respectively), have continued for over two decades... when Bill Corbett was working with Gail the series was inspired... & continually swirled differing poetries -both local & international- together... Stone Soup has been the only truly open sign up reading in continuous operation...

Gian Lombardo's DOLPHIN MOON series ran for years at the Cambridge YMCA (unfunded- not university affiliated)

Joe Torra- in addition to working with me for a time at WoM held a very good series of readings at his home...mostly locals or Providence/ Ny poets but all with decent crowds as well as producing the run of lift & I have for years now done in-home evenings . . .dinner & a reading for 10 or so & just this past spring started the Oxford street talk series with Gerrit Lansing & Diane di Prima as the openers & this will as time goes on continue.

& then there is Word of Mouth which ran at Tapas for near ten years & continues in various forms...most recently in residence at Watersone's Books...

in the decade at Tapas (which began in 87 but only started to really take shape in March of 88 with the Duncan Memorial) I presented local & national poets as well as Reading versions of Spicer's AFTER LORCA [87] A COMPLETE CORRESPONDENCE - Olson, Corman, Creeley [88] Stein's TENDER BUTTONS & 4 SAINTS- an afternoon of S. Jonas films of LZ, RD, Wieners, OHara, Whalen, Ginsberg, Olson etc. from the 66 NET series.... I met Corbett at the inception of the series he came & read for the opener and he pushed readers my way for the entire time - & a wide variety of same...in fact I can not imagine Word of Mouth existing without him; Torra I first met there...via Ferrini who was and remains active here; Ange Mlinko called me up one evening when Leslie Scalapino was reading.... & later that year came on board to work with me .... Torra started the planning for lift during a dinner (for Proust if memory serves) Ed Barrett [whose book COMMON PRELUDES is a small wonder for many of us; Christopher Sawyer-Laucanno, Patricia Pruitt, Dan Bouchard, Joe Lease, (another early meeting via Cid Corman) Robert Pinsky, Askhold Melnyczuk [AGNI] & Lombardo who is now producing a prose poem mag called KEY(SATCH)le, Gerrit Lansing was as he remains a key source & frequent guest, Fanny Howe (a resident then). Gerald Burns was a huge source & friend over the years he lived here & always pushed the series.... the composer Eli Yarden, artists Katha Seidman & Ben Watkins & renaissance Man Thorpe Feidt -all contributed as they continue to do to the scene... There were readings by Blaser, Creeley, di Prima, Eshleman, Irby, Mackey, Waldman, Gander, Elmslie, Drucker. . .I could go on & on see LINGO 7 [On Boston] for a more extensive list; or for work from this scene as I see ia portion of it see TALISMAN 16, (fall 1996).

The scene has ebbed and flowed as it continues to. if there is a center it its the very lack of a center- which those I know best greatly enjoy. A large number of us have no university affiliations at all (Torra & I both wait tables for $$). & if there is a poetics (& I would argue that there is whilst Torra or Corbett would be vehement that there is not) it is in the primacy of the Work of the work. Simply: either it is interesting or not- regardless of its form. For me the currency is challenge & learning...i.e. am I /do I - schools theories et al are meaningless. But the Work at work... that is the center.... Poetry is the center. The scene is uneven...lacks uniformity & is various in form... a cosmos. If you need personalities with clout (I don't) there would be Corbett's dinner table to supply sustenance ... from Auster to Cooledge to S Heaney to Ashbery. Or there would be the figure of Guston...the example of his working (see Corbett's Guston book). Wieners, Olson, Lansing, Jonas, Blaser, Spicer, (all spent time here) are all claimed presences (and for me Duncan) people, like poetries, come and go- as does energy. there are weeks when nothing is happening and others when there is a reading to be at every night.

At Word of Mouth I was constant in greeting new faces and attempting to hook people up... this is the function of a series as far as I am concerned.

anyhow all of this is to say that there was and is a scene here. It is a very accessible scene for anyone who takes the time to attend the various events & to actively participate.

[I am reminded here that I wrote to Cid Corman in 86 or so that I could not get a reading here.. he told me to stop carping & start a reading series]

In my public work here I am keenly aware of the university presence ...& of its very narrow leanings. This is nothing new. I am also aware that there is another path (I invited Helen Vendler to speak at the Duncan Memorial as indeed I should have... & she in turn should have spoken: But of that I have no control . . . history will.

Again what is not here what ignores what is here is of no interest.

Each scene as each poem as each Theory is an ACT of creation. made up. constantly remade & redefined & constant in its need for same. the rest you can have.

Corbett says later in the lift interview:

What are the poems ? What are we talking about, What are we looking at?

lets start here...

Again the common bond between us is THE WORK its creation and the daily living that enables that work. I cannot say this too often.

All best
Michael Franco

PSS this thought re the "obscenity riddled phone messages/calls.... as we all stand huddled over the romance of "a scene" we might do well to wonder in a real way -as we recall those scenes of the past, if we could actually tolerate the real of such. Jacques...can you imagine the call you might... might???!!! WOULD have received from Spicer - had your comments addressed San Francisco???? The caller that left an unidentified message should be cursed -further- with writers block .... the "other caller" whose time and intimacy accosted you... spoke out from what you mistake as a malaise

MF

all best

Michael Franco

↑ Index

162. Joan Houlihan
Re: I Guess I'll Say It Flat Out
Thu 12 Aug 1999

"expertise wins."

The one true thing anyone here has said about Boston so far--and the reason why a so-called "alternative" poetry conference cannot have much impact. Boston has seen, been, is poetry, alternative, and alternative to the alternative--from Lowell to Plath, from Davidson to Heaney, from Pinsky to Wolcott, from Henri Cole to Lucie Brock-Broido, from Patricia Smith to Brother Blue, from every jam-packed Boston Globe Calendar with it's incredible variety of poetry readings and happenings, to its intense mega-doses of poetry workshops--in universities (BU, Harvard, MIT, BC), in poets' homes, in the Cambridge Center for the Arts. Not to mention all the great and diverse poets who have lived, worked and continue to do so in Boston colleges and surrounding suburbs. It's an incredible, beautiful, electric, eclectic, intellectual and artistic environment with some of the most breathtaking seasonal beauty in the country. If there is a better place for real poetry to flourish I don't know about it. This will do fine for me.

> From: A H Bramhall <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: I Guess I'll Say It Flat Out
> Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 20:23:37 -0400
>
> true as any shit can be: the > streets of Boston are racist. I > myself saw Mass Ave
> act out. all the streets
> have frat parties and > stupid central heating. the trees
> in fair Boston are
> sadly reluctant to > accept change. many
> of the buildings
> have issues. Boston Harbour
> ignores castanets, Logan Airport
> rolls over for thunder, the Fleet Centre is
> where people die
> deader than dead, and the arhythmic
> parsimony of local names
> rewards only the enclosed.
> people aren't people
> in any determined way
> here. the things
> in the sky
> fall rapidly.
> pity only exists far,
> far to the west
> because improvement is so
> human. the tone of what > happened 15
> years ago
> broaches the new dynamics
> of concern, totally > reeking of the > eternal blah blah
> how's your stupid cat?
> the Boston
> Public Gardens has a
> darkness that cannot be relieved

> by mere rare questionable
> sunshine. the tone
> of every car is careless and
> sour. don't ask about
> any window, they are
> ALL THE SAME. every shopping bag
> contains an urge to > prepare a final draft. the word 'every'
> is spoken every (hah!)
> three seconds and
> the books of Boston, each damn
> hole of them, are indented with indiscriminate
> malice. purple haze is a river
> kinder than the Charles.
> John Coltrane came to
> town and said QUIXOTIC while
> angrily flipping the bird. Elvin
> keeping time said
> yeah. words choose new
> routes here. no one (boxed redoubt) lives
> true life, the geese say SUCK, the SWANS remove to > poetic realms, the pigeons indubitably
> have no rest in the perfect
> nest. the world is so > finely wrought in smallness
> that every tallish
> structure within the
> city limits
> bows to the stress-fractured
> creeps who own the vocabulary
> now and forever. and that
> is how it is: one crowd is > always better than > another. expertise
> wins. bonus points
> when you supplicate to
> the answer. smooth things
> are marvelous.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

163. Karen Kelley
Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
Thu 12 Aug 1999

>
> well, i gotta back karen up on this; being from boston (or rather newton, > the "golden ghetto" of the greater boston area) i can attest to the sharp > divisions in neighborhoods --more so than in SF or NYC. however, there are > other forms of racism, such as in the Twin Cities where everything's > supposed to be so nicey nice. the neighborhoods aren't as sharply divided,
> but people are almost wilfully naive and want to deny difference wherever > they find it.

I know my comment was sweeping, but I loved the city and it infuriated me to hear the enervated "Pity there wasn't more diversity" tone to a couple of the BoPo posts. The pervasive "gee, it's not really racism; it's ignorance" response of many Bostonians (and yeah, I know, upstanding citizens of other metropoli) makes me crazy. Somehow similar to the politicians all making their "We must stop these random shootings that seem to keep happening" speeches. Like, duh. These sentences have always let the problem live; and lately it strikes me that they might actually be serving as a kind of fertilizer.

↑ Index

164. Al Filreis
Re: thoughts on BoPo and points distant
Thu 12 Aug 1999

Mike Magee wrote:

| I say all this knowing that there are | many interesting poets in and around Boston but that a really hopping | community of poets - which, whatever anyone says, is a good thing | is hard to come by and, as I say, pretty accidental.

I agree with most of what you say, Mike--especially about the Philadelphia scene as a possible counterexample. But I don't agree that it has been "pretty accidental." Some convergences are chances, to be sure; but most of all it's all been consicous willed hard work (including, significantly, your own). Your own Combo didn't just happen. It was to some perhaps crucial degree "made possible" by a lot of things and conditions already (by then) in place. Same with PhillyTalks, inventive as that project of Louis' has been.

Consciously and willfully yours,

--Al

↑ Index

165. Pierre Joris
Re: "alternative"
Thu 12 Aug 1999

Yes, indeed Maria, I think you are spot on re "alternative" - the term doesn't cut it for me either & I'd rather stay with the slew of slightly gamy words like experimental, avant-garde, etc. I don't want an "alternative" - because that leaves the original untouched, simply suggesting something else of the same value, thus referring to taste, a fake choice (40 different bagels to choose from, though all are made with the same shitty flour, say). I want change, something, the world, the mind, to be altered - or at least I need to be able to believe that such a radical change is possible. "Alternative" is a shell-game for quick change artists. -- Pierre

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Jeffrey Jullich
Sent: Thursday, August 12, 1999 4:44 AM
To: [redacted]
Subject: "alternative"

>>> "Maria Damon (Maria Damon)" <[redacted]> 08/09/99 05:25pm >>> "alternative" does tend to mean a certain alternative, namely, an "experimental" style. like "avant garde."

With all of these various commentaries on the use of the phrase "alternative poetry"--- isn't this use of "alternative" derivative, though, borrowed from the marketing of contemporary music? It isn't as though poets themselves had hatched this usage, the way "Vorticist" or such may have been a genuine self-coined appellation. It's being patched in from the language at large, where it already has its politicized functions.

In the NY area at least, there are radio stations, more and more actually, which play what they call "alternative" rock; it's pretty much what used to be called "punk", with a dash of occasional "metal." I have the impression that with "alternative music" the marketers use the word to soften the scary edge they don't want to name: "punk." And I would suspect that, in its "pure" form, the same might be true of "alternative poetry."

Where "avant-garde" or even "experimental" may have suggested something contestatory, "defiant," or antagonistic to a status quo, the danger with a term like "alternative" is that it makes things sound as though these were arbitrary choices that one might wobble back and forth between casually: Coke/Pepsi ideology. It isn't dialectical anymore; it's styled as a mere matter of taste and whim, that you can switch the channel to "alternative" for a while if you get tired of mainstream, or whatever. Spice things up.

What is being elided is that an authentic "avant-garde" might actually be meant as ~"subversive,"~ the concept of "revolutionary" art, that it is seeking to change the whole rules of the game, and wasn't served up as a diversion. "Alternative," like "pluralistic," is a troublingly ~umbrella~ term, to my thinking: I thought Jacques' helpful postings correctly implied that there are poets who are writing essentially normative and conservative poetry, who are all too happy to slip under the tent skirts of a bohemia, out of embarassment or plain obliviousness to their "complicity" in perpetuating/reproducing things as they are, or for other reasons.

In short, what I am trying to say is that "alternative" is a ~vanilla-izing~ of something perhaps much more bitter and tonic than that. Or, it is a repackaging of (malgre lui) mainstream castaways who otherwise would have been lost against the mainstream's more exclusionary publishing odds. The "radical" that has lost its fight becomes "alternative."

Why ~can't~ a conference bill itself as "Subversive" or "Insurrectionist"? The fading of that sensibility may have a lot to do with the latter generational "directionlessness" that is also being discussed under this Boston theme.

↑ Index

166. Pierre Joris

Re: Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene

Thu 12 Aug 1999

Much enjoyed your posts re Boston poetry scene, Tisa.

But seem to have missed mention by anyone on this thread (correct me if I'm wrong) of my favorite of the long departed Boston poetas: Stephen Jonas, killed by smack, or Boston, in the mid-sixties. Is he still being read? Or forgotten despite Joe Torra's work? I'm pretty sure Torra's selected Jonas from Talisman is still in print.-- Pierre

-----Original Message-----
From: UB Poetics discussion group
[mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Tisa Bryant
Sent: Thursday, August 12, 1999 12:03 AM

To: [redacted]
Subject: Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene

The "guard/garde" in van- and avant- tend to do just that. It's hard to think of the words as having anything to do with "open"; they seem to work against insistence. Vanguard, at the front, standing along the curve, bordering on, bordering from, in relation to the center of concentric understanding, and bound by it until movement occurs, then starting over. The ins and outs. As I said in my post, I was one of the few, meaning three or four out of a possible 15, experimenting writers within the DRC, so said content in the Reading Series far outweighed that of the workshops/work produced. While a reunion of the DRC might be intriguing to some, its occurence at the next Alt Bo Po conference would yield yet another thread like the one currently being knotted here. I did not mean to imply that Boston's poetry scene, or its poets, were racist simply by living in a place with Boston's reputation. The DRC & RS came about out of lack, and to "break down the elitist aura surrounding (Black) literary figures." Bring 'em "home", make 'em accessible. So non-academic folks and academics could hear some poetry and meet the poets without feeling unwelcome, undereducated, or too poor. Much like, in varying respects, the Poetry Project, or the Unterberg/Y series, or Small Press Traffic, or what Aaron Kiely put together, or any other such thing going on in this world. Kiely created an event that made sense to him (and who knows who declined for whatever reason to attend?), invited people he knew, and will continue to expand and evolve as organizes future conferences, as David Kirschenbaum said. What is intriguing to me, although it's great that he's open to suggestions, is how he (or anyone) feels/thinks out the "alternative" in Boston (or anywhere) and what kinds of writers/work will be encouraged by the conferences, who will come and branch out, from the universities and from the 'hoods. Here alliances between Kiely, Lansing and Corbett could yield much, but I think Kiely's vision, and support of it, to be more important. I echo Linda Russo here, and what I think Kevin Killian was getting at.

There's got to be something to get to. Where is that? Home can work just as well as anywhere, if one is comfortable there, of one's own making or ad/a/o/ption. Here I must point out that the quality of poetic life in Boston may simply not sustain many for very long. (why people leave places) It can't be the weather, which is just as bad if not worse in Buffalo. So, Jacques, back to curriculum/influence, or something. Point(s) well taken. I wish Alt Bo Po the best, count Aaron as a burgeoning force to be reckoned with, and hope to see for myself some day what happens there. The ethnicity & innovation issue (together and separately) is about inclusivity, but not ethnicity as alternative in and of itself. Here, the DRC references do not serve well. Certainly there have been some changes since The New American Poetry, or Gross & Quasha's Open Poetry, in which Black poets appeared together in the back of the book, instead of within the categorical sections in which they best fit, a move that at once showcased an impressive group of Black experimentalists and relegated them to an unfortunate and historically loaded space. But certain blindnesses still persist. Also too are the refusals by mainstream of-color editors to include same experimentalists in the publications they produce(d). This cannot be ignored. Also again, one must be seen to be part of the scene, be seen as part of the scene and seen well once seen there, understood to fit. (Back to Dodie Bellamy's persona post). It's easy to say that there are "no" or "few" (blank) writers, but then, how does one know, in publishing, especially if said writer doesn't dally with the usual signifiers in a recognizable way, if at all, goes by a first initial and non-identifiably ethnically specific last name, and/or if one doesn't show up on the scene? What is happening outside of the seen, and outside of the scene, and what does that look/sound like? How does physical presence come to be privileged over the arrival of text in this regard? This said specifically regarding inclusion/exclusion and writers of color, but also as a general query on the function of "centers", in this context.

****

Today we declare:
First, they are living in a Nono form;
Second, they are Nono lives;
Third, they make us feel Nono;
Fourth, they make us become Nono;
Fifth, we Nono.
Lan Ma
"Manifesto of Nonoism"
(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
****

↑ Index

167. David Kirschenbaum
Johnny Appleseed
Thu 12 Aug 1999

Sorry for two posts in one day,but:

Karen Kelley wrote:
>it infuriated me
>to hear the enervated "Pity there wasn't more diversity" tone to a couple >of the BoPo posts. The pervasive "gee, it's not really racism; it's >ignorance" response of many Bostonians (and yeah, I know, upstanding >citizens of other metropoli) makes me crazy. Somehow similar to the >politicians all making their "We must stop these random shootings that seem >to keep happening" speeches. Like, duh. These sentences have always let >the problem live; and lately it strikes me that they might actually be >serving as a kind of fertilizer.

There's a difference in addressing a situation and rectifying it. Is someone who simply doesn't know until turned on, such as myself, just a decade ago, toward a poet as "known" as Ferlinghetti, not simply ignorant? Once introduced, though, the burden is all in the newbee's hands. Race, in this context, simply doesn't enter into the equation. Statements do, as you say, simply let the problem live, but only if that's all they are, yet another editorial assailing the system, without proposing a route toward change. If something is to be attacked, it's an education system that introduces poetry through memorization and recitation of a certain group of long-dead white males, with a few token females and people of color sprinkled in for diversity's sake. Here's where the racism is quite often full-throttle. It's no wonder most of us are ignorant of some corner of this vast library.

Be Good,
David

_____ Get Free Email
and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

168. Joan Houlihan
Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
Thu 12 Aug 1999

RE: well, i gotta back karen up on this; being from boston (or rather newton, the "golden ghetto" of the greater boston area) i can attest to the sharp divisions in neighborhoods --more so than in SF or NYC.

I am also from Newton (the "golden ghetto")and got used to running into people who thought I was rich. But you should know better, as do I: Newton is comprised of many Newtons: Newton Center, Newtonville, West Newton, Newton Highlands, Newton Upper Falls, Newton Lower Falls, THE LAKE (!!), Chestnut Hill, etc, etc. --it is one of the most economically diverse suburbs in Boston, if not THE most diverse. Yes, it is chock-full of lawyers and psychiatrists (Newton Center has the highest number of psychiatrists per sq mile in the country) and the "new" high-tech rich, but just a few miles away in any direction are the working class and blue collar people. Artists and writers also flourish there--it's close to the city and also has a lively arts scene of its own.

If by "sharp divisions" in neighborhoods, you mean racially unmixed neighborhoods, well, when I was growing up there it was not racially/ethnically mixed--but no suburb that far away from the city was. Now it is though. If you don't believe me, take a trip down Washington Street from West Newton to Newton Corner, or drive through some neighborhoods next time you're there.

> From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
> Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 17:34:18 -0600
>
> At 4:15 PM -0400 8/11/99, David Kirschenbaum wrote:
> Karen Kelley wrote:
>
> Being from Boston, this post caught my eye. I guess I'll say it flat out:
> Boston is the most racist place I've ever lived. Granted, I >went from there to New York & on to San Francisco--so maybe Boston >just looks bad by > comparison. It all seemed quite civilized on the >surface: the neighborhoods were segregated and everyone knew which >lines not to cross.
> Maybe it's changed since I left 15 years ago, >but I kind of doubt it.
>
> I'm not from Boston, and, hell, as a Yankees fan in 1978 even owned a "Boston Sucks" T-shirt, until my mother found out about it and made my sister take it back, but geez, no matter how racist Boston may be --and I've > heard horror stories from many former residents, and, back to baseball, the > Red Sox were even the last team to integrate, Pumpsie Green in 1959, if memory serves me right, a full 12 years after Jackie Robinson and Larry Doby--but from the poetic community I know their isn't even a subtle form of > racism. None. Zip. Nada.
> The ideas of neighborhoods being segregated and knowing the uncrossable lines relates to just about any major metropolis, including San Francisco and New York, each of which I've lived in, the latter for most of my live.
> Instead, again, I think it's simply ignorance rather than racism, that at times leads to non-diverse events and publications, sometimes even my own.
> It takes an extra effort to be inclusive, be it simply through inquiry or attending more ethnically and racially diverse reading series.
> Be Good,
> David

> well, i gotta back karen up on this; being from boston (or rather newton, the "golden ghetto" of the greater boston area) i can attest to the sharp divisions in neighborhoods --more so than in SF or NYC. however, there are other forms of racism, such as in the Twin Cities where everything's supposed to be so nicey nice. the neighborhoods aren't as sharply divided, but people are almost wilfully naive and want to deny difference wherever they find it.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

169. Joan Houlihan
Re: get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON
Thu 12 Aug 1999

Thanks for listing out all of the Boston poetry scenes you remember. Blacksmith House is a great place--also Tapas (was) and Waterstones (was). Don't forget Trident Cafe and Ploughshares in Cambridge--and yes, Stone Soup has been around for ages (T.T. The Bear's is another "get up and read your stuff" venue). MIT has been sponsoring some great readings lately, and, of course, Harvard. I personally don't buy into the idea that only academia--or, only NON-academia--is the "real" place of poetry. It's everywhere. I agree with you completely that:

"...the Work at work... that is the center.... Poetry is the center. The scene is uneven...lacks uniformity & is various in form... a cosmos."

I would not wish it otherwise.

> From: Michael Franco <[redacted]>
> Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
> To: [redacted]
> Subject: get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON
> Date: Thu, 12 Aug 1999 14:57:40 EDT
>
> Having taken a few days or so to let this swirl in my mind I think that aside > from my annoyance at the previous blanket dismissal of the Festival----
> ----which did its work ...there was good bad & lame by known & unknown
> ...(remember one of the featured west-coast readers going on for 45 minutes > when every one else was cutting back to a poem or two???) to wonderful > moments like Windy Kramer's or Dan Bouchard's reading (which show his work to > be Moving) Scalapino or Hejinian ...or Lease's short lovely burst or Gander's > or... or...or...
> & having produced Word of Mouth on my own for ten years I know what Aaron K > does / did in setting all of this into motion & then getting the hell out

of the way....& just letting what ever happens happen

I return to my original post and this thought:
if we went through the whole weekend for nothing more than to have been there for the Sat night read it was a memorable success... We were there - we gathered together- we met each other (for some again) shared food poetry and a remarkable set of readings

Now lets us return to the other thread running through here & that is the "Boston" scene & then the whole concept of "scene"
.

it was great to see the post on the DARK ROOM COLLECTIVE as there were many many memorable events there... I often scheduled Word of mouth events so that I could attend the darkroom.... They had a resident jazz band who were truly fine & readers as diverse in their work as one could ask for.

Both the Blacksmith House reading series (no university affiliation) and Stone Soup (no university) (Gail Mazer & Jack Powers respectively), have continued for over two decades... when Bill Corbett was working with Gail the series was inspired... & continually swirled differing poetries -both local & international- together... Stone Soup has been the only truly open sign up reading in continuous operation...

Gian Lombardo's DOLPHIN MOON series ran for years at the Cambridge YMCA (unfunded- not university affiliated)

Joe Torra- in addition to working with me for a time at WoM held a very good series of readings at his home...mostly locals or Providence/ Ny poets but all with decent crowds as well as producing the run of lift & I have for years now done in-home evenings . . .dinner & a reading for 10 or so & just this past spring started the Oxford street talk series with Gerrit Lansing &
Diane di Prima as the openers & this will as time goes on continue.

& then there is Word of Mouth which ran at Tapas for near ten years & continues in various forms...most recently in residence at Watersone's Books...

in the decade at Tapas (which began in 87 but only started to really take shape in March of 88 with the Duncan Memorial) I presented local & national poets as well as Reading versions of Spicer's AFTER LORCA [87] A COMPLETE CORRESPONDENCE - Olson, Corman, Creeley [88] Stein's TENDER BUTTONS & 4 SAINTS- an afternoon of S. Jonas films of LZ, RD, Wieners, OHara, Whalen, Ginsberg, Olson etc. from the 66 NET series....

I met Corbett at the inception of the series he came & read for the opener and he pushed readers my way for the entire time - & a wide variety of same...in fact I can not imagine Word of Mouth existing without him; Torra I first met there...via Ferrini who was and remains active here; Ange Mlinko called me up one evening when Leslie Scalapino was reading.... & later that year came on board to work with me .... Torra started the planning for lift during a dinner (for Proust if memory serves) Ed Barrett [whose book COMMON PRELUDES is a small wonder for many of us; Christopher Sawyer-Laucanno, Patricia Pruitt, Dan Bouchard, Joe Lease, (another early meeting via Cid Corman) Robert Pinsky, Askhold Melnyczuk [AGNI] & Lombardo who is now producing a prose poem mag called KEY(SATCH)le, Gerrit Lansing was as he remains a key source & frequent guest, Fanny Howe (a resident then). Gerald Burns was a huge source & friend over the years he lived here & always pushed the series.... the composer Eli Yarden, artists Katha Seidman & Ben Watkins & renaissance Man Thorpe Feidt -all contributed as they continue to do to the scene...
There were readings by Blaser, Creeley, di Prima, Eshleman, Irby, Mackey, Waldman, Gander, Elmslie, Drucker. . .I could go on & on see LINGO 7 [On Boston] for a more extensive list; or for work from this scene as I see ia portion of it see TALISMAN 16, (fall 1996).

The scene has ebbed and flowed as it continues to. if there is a center it its the very lack of a center- which those I know best greatly enjoy. A large number of us have no university affiliations at all (Torra & I both wait tables for $$). & if there is a poetics (& I would argue that there is whilst Torra or Corbett would be vehement that there is not) it is in the primacy of the Work of the work. Simply: either it is interesting or not- regardless of its form. For me the currency is challenge & learning...i.e. am I /do I - schools theories et al are meaningless. But the Work at work... that is the center.... Poetry is the center. The scene is uneven...lacks uniformity & is various in form... a cosmos.
If you need personalities with clout (I don't) there would be Corbett's dinner table to supply sustenance ... from Auster to Cooledge to S Heaney to Ashbery. Or there would be the figure of Guston...the example of his working (see Corbett's Guston book).

Wieners, Olson, Lansing, Jonas, Blaser, Spicer, (all spent time here) are all claimed presences (and for me Duncan)

people, like poetries, come and go- as does energy. there are weeks when nothing is happening and others when there is a reading to be at every night.

At Word of Mouth I was constant in greeting new faces and attempting to hook people up... this is the function of a series as far as I am concerned.

anyhow all of this is to say that there was and is a scene here. It is a very accessible scene for anyone who takes the time to attend the various events & to actively participate.

[I am reminded here that I wrote to Cid Corman in 86 or so that I could not get a reading here.. he told me to stop carping & start a reading series]

In my public work here I am keenly aware of the university presence ...& of its very narrow leanings. This is nothing new. I am also aware that there is another path (I invited Helen Vendler to speak at the Duncan Memorial as indeed I should have... & she in turn should have spoken: But of that I have no control . . . history will.

Again what is not here what ignores what is here is of no interest.

Each scene as each poem as each Theory is an ACT of creation. made up. constantly remade & redefined & constant in its need for same. the rest you can have.

Corbett says later in the lift interview:

What are the poems ? What are we talking about, What are we looking at?

lets start here...

Again the common bond between us is THE WORK its creation and the daily living that enables that work. I cannot say this too often.

> All best
> Michael Franco
>
> PSS
> this thought re the "obscenity riddled phone messages/calls.... as we all > stand huddled over the romance of "a scene" we might do well to wonder in
> a
> real way -as we recall those scenes of the past, if we could actually > tolerate the real of such. Jacques...can you imagine the call you might... > might???!!! WOULD have received from Spicer - had your comments addressed > San > Francisco???? The caller that left an unidentified message should be > cursed
> -further- with writers block .... the "other caller" whose time and > intimacy
> accosted you... spoke out from what you mistake as a malaise
>
> MF
>
> all best
>
> Michael Franco

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

170. Michael Magee

Re: thoughts on BoPo and points distant

Thu 12 Aug 1999

According to Al Filreis:
>
> I agree with most of what you say, Mike--especially about the Philadelphia > scene as a possible counterexample. But I don't agree that it has been > "pretty accidental." Some convergences are chances, to be sure; but most > of all it's all been consicous willed hard work (including, significantly, > your own). Your own Combo didn't just happen. It was to some perhaps > crucial degree "made possible" by a lot of things and conditions already > (by then) in place. Same with PhillyTalks, inventive as that project of > Louis' has been.

Yes, yes - absolutely. I didn't mean to imply that what's going on in Philly is all just happenstance. Sorry if I did. No, I mean, the effort on the part of so many people - the hours and concentration devoted - have been incredible. I suppose my musing on its "accidental" nature had more to do with the ways of the universe (a fuzzy sense that it could easily have happened otherwise or not at all) than with an accurate attempt to describe how the community happened. While I'm here again, I'll say that, anti-academicism aside, there were professors at Penn and Temple who got behind Writers House and the philly poetry scene generally early and forcefully, most notably Al himself, but also Bob Lucid, Greg Djanikian, Herman Beavers, Farah Griffin (Herman, being the one, incidentally, who introduced me to Mackey's work). I should say too that Writers House has never been just a poetry venue but is enaged in all sorts of writing and social intiatives and is open to the public, which makes it all the more valuable as a place for poets. -m.

↑ Index

171. Maria Damon

Re: get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON

Thu 12 Aug 1999

---

all this talk of the city of my heart is very heartening. i do not see jacques as having cast aspersions but as having raised issues. i see tisa's post as crucial and i reiterate my suggestion to include a darkroom collective reunion as a major part of next year's bopoco. i like all the posts weighing in from Filly, having just heard many encomia to the Writers' House at the Bard Poetry and Pedagogy conference it sounds dreamy... this kind of thinking is terrific and seems like part of what the LIST is for...generating debate about poetic communities and in the course of doing so, constructing one...

↑ Index

172. Pritchett,Patrick

Re: POLYVERSE & the apophasis of Bernstein

Thu 12 Aug 1999

Tsk, tsk. Thanks for that post, Jeffrey. For an enthusiastic take on _Polyverse_, please see my review in the current issue of Jacket. I don't mention Charles Bernstein once.

http://www.jacket.zip.com.au/jacket08/index.html

Patrick Pritchett

> -----Original Message-----
> From: Jeffrey Jullich [SMTP:[redacted]]
> Sent: Thursday, August 12, 1999 10:20 PM

> To: [redacted]
> Subject: Village Voice POLYVERSE review
>
> Wednesday's Village Voice runs a lukewarm or even unfavorable
> review of Lee Ann Brown's ~Polyverse,~ filled with gratuitous innuendo > about Language Poetry. The reviewer is named Thad Ziolkowski.

↑ Index

173. Patrick F. Durgin

Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review

Thu 12 Aug 1999

What's new about the NAP? You said it yourself, and I thunk it befo-"Polyvocalism"

In my humble, monlithicist opining I say, EVERYONE READING THIS OUGHT TO READ LEE ANN BROWN'S BOOK! The finest thing this year.

Patrick F. Durgin

At 12:20 AM 8/13/99 -0400, you wrote:
>Wednesday's Village Voice runs a lukewarm or even unfavorable
>review of Lee Ann Brown's ~Polyverse,~ filled with gratuitous innuendo >about Language Poetry. The reviewer is named Thad Ziolkowski.
>
>He doesn't wait any longer than ~the first sentence~ to mention Charles >(Bernstein), who selected ~Polyverse~ for the "prestigious" New >American Poetry Series, and to begin casting veiled aspersions against >him. We wouldn't have expected ~Polyverse~ as Charles' choice, >Ziolkowski says: we would have expected "ironic, warily analytical >work". Charles, here cast as papal, bishopric, or censorious by >Ziolkowkski, should have been more likely to give ~that~ his "imprimatur".
>
>
>Ziolkowski criticizes Brown, basically, as too much a patchwork quilt of >styles. (An assessment which Sun & Moon's own amazon.com Book >Description is not, at a more positive slant, far afield from: "many forms >and possibilities. Taking its cue from a wide range of modern and >postmodern poetics, Brown's work . . .") ~Polyverse,~ he says, fails in >echoing New York School, Beat, and Language, without synthesizing
>those influences. (Nor does Z. entertain the inkling that syncretism is not >the only solution, that the ~Poly-~ in ~Polyverse~ may actually mean >something, and that the segregated stylistics Brown leaves behind is >~more~ in tune with an aesthetic of polyvocalism.)
>

>He finally treats this "thirtysomething" poet (his agism) as if, as I read it,
>this were a beginner's problem that she will hopefully work out in time >("But then maybe the orgy among all these poetic influences is just >getting warmed up").
>
>If it weren't for Brown eroticizing her Language-like "proliferation of >grammatical terms", Language Poetry by itself is just "lifeless automatic >pilot".
>
>He accuses Brown of seeming "dated, frozen in a sunstruck New >York--circa-1965 atmosphere". Oddly, it's her "references to Whitman, >Mayakovsky, Sappho and Stein" that Ziolkowski particularly singles out
>as behind-the-times, but yet when he again cites her eroticism as "What >saves the book from this terminally reverent tendency", he quotes her >lines "She's a minor flirt,/a cloud in trousers" without so much as a blink >of open recognition that "a cloud in trousers", too, is yet another homage >and "reverent tendency" (O'Hara/Mayakovsky). Ziolkowski is left looking >as if he doesn't know he was quoting an appropriation of Brown's, at >cross-purposes, and hence is in contradiction with himself by saying >that what saves the book from a debility is the same debility.
>
>His attitude may reach its pique when he writes: "You end up wondering
>. . . what's particularly new about this New American." Fair question.
>Personally, I am left wondering, if he was this global in treating Brown --- >whom ("Brown is . . . goofy in a troubadour-hippie-Fugs way") he >nonetheless seems to enjoy, despite his disparaging slant of praise --- >what kind of harsher polemic The Village Voice would have printed if the >book were indeed "ironic, warily analytical work".
>
>See:
>
>http://www.villagevoice.com/arts/9932/ziolkowski.shtml
>
>

k e n n i n g_____
a newsletter of contemporary poetry_____
_____http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

_____

↑ Index

174. Tisa Bryant

Re: get the wagons ina circle: re BOSTON

Thu 12 Aug 1999

Michael, Thank you, you nailed it, summed it up, reminded me that I met Fanny Howe and her daughter Lucien at Word of Mouth. And about the many readings I attended at Blacksmith House, everything you mentioned I remember.

Things get distant....

I'm feeling very appreciative right now, and almost, almost, homesick. (winter drove me out, not memories of driving through Southie at night...)

This is fast; gotta eat!

More....fun....

<pre> Having taken a few days or so to let this swirl in my mind I think that aside from my annoyance at the previous blanket dismissal of the Festival---- ---- which did its work ...there was good bad & lame by known & unknown .. (remember one of the featured west-coast readers going on for 45 minutes when every one else was cutting back to a poem or two???) to wonderful moments like Windy Kramer's or Dan Bouchard's reading (which show his work to be Moving) Scalapino or Hejinian ...or Lease's short lovely burst or Gander's or... or...or... & having produced Word of Mouth on my own for ten years I know what Aaron K does / did in setting all of this into motion & then getting the hell out of the way....& just letting what ever happens happen

I return to my original post and this thought: if we went through the whole weekend for nothing more than to have been there for the Sat night read it was a memorable success... We were there - we gathered together- we met each other (for some again) shared food poetry and a remarkable set of readings

Now lets us return to the other thread running through here & that is the "Boston" scene & then the whole concept of "scene"

.

it was great to see the post on the DARK ROOM COLLECTIVE as there were many many memorable events there... I often scheduled Word of mouth events so that I could attend the darkroom.... They had a resident jazz band who were truly fine & readers as diverse in their work as one could ask for.

Both the Blacksmith House reading series (no university affiliation) and Stone Soup (no university) (Gail Mazer & Jack Powers respectively), have continued for over two decades... when Bill Corbett was working with Gail the series was inspired... & continually swirled differing poetries -both local & international-together... Stone Soup has been the only truly open sign up reading in continuous operation...

Gian Lombardo's DOLPHIN MOON series ran for years at the Cambridge YMCA (unfunded- not university affiliated)

Joe Torra- in addition to working with me for a time at WoM held a very good series of readings at his home...mostly locals or Providence/ Ny poets but all with decent crowds as well as producing the run of lift & I have for years now done in-home evenings . . .dinner & a reading for 10 or so & just this past spring started the Oxford street talk series with Gerrit Lansing & Diane di Prima as the openers & this will as time goes on continue.

& then there is Word of Mouth which ran at Tapas for near ten years & continues in various forms...most recently in residence at Watersone's Books...

in the decade at Tapas (which began in 87 but only started to really take shape in March of 88 with the Duncan Memorial) I presented local & national poets as well as Reading versions of Spicer's AFTER LORCA [87] A COMPLETE CORRESPONDENCE - Olson, Corman, Creeley [88] Stein's TENDER BUTTONS & 4 SAINTS- an afternoon of S. Jonas films of LZ, RD, Wieners, OHara, Whalen, Ginsberg, Olson etc. from the 66 NET series.... I met Corbett at the inception of the series he came & read for the opener and he pushed readers my way for the entire time - & a wide variety of same...in fact I can not imagine Word of Mouth existing without him; Torra I first met there...via Ferrini who was and remains active here; Ange Mlinko called me up one evening when Leslie Scalapino was reading.... & later that year came on board to work with me .... Torra started the planning for lift during a dinner (for Proust if memory serves) Ed Barrett [whose book COMMON PRELUDES is a small wonder for many of us; Christopher Sawyer-Laucanno, Patricia Pruitt, Dan Bouchard, Joe Lease, (another early meeting via Cid Corman) Robert Pinsky, Askhold Melnyczuk [AGNI] & Lombardo who is now producing a prose poem mag called KEY(SATCH)le, Gerrit Lansing was as he remains a key source & frequent guest, Fanny Howe (a resident then). Gerald Burns was a huge source & friend over the years he lived here & always pushed the series.... the composer Eli Yarden, artists Katha Seidman & Ben Watkins & renaissance Man Thorpe Feidt -all contributed as they continue to do to the scene... There were readings by Blaser, Creeley, di Prima, Eshleman, Irby, Mackey, Waldman, Gander, Elmslie, Drucker. . .I could go on & on see LINGO 7 [On Boston] for a more extensive list; or for work from this scene as I see ia portion of it see TALISMAN 16, (fall 1996).

The scene has ebbed and flowed as it continues to. if there is a center it its the very lack of a center- which those I know best greatly enjoy. A large number of us have no university affiliations at all (Torra & I both wait tables for $$). & if there is a poetics (& I would argue that there is whilst Torra or Corbett would be vehement that there is not) it is in the primacy of the Work of the work. Simply: either it is interesting or not- regardless of its form. For me the currency is challenge & learning...i.e. am I /do I - schools theories et al are meaningless. But the Work at work... that is the center.... Poetry is the center. The scene is uneven...lacks uniformity & is various in form... a cosmos. If you need personalities with clout (I don't) there would be Corbett's dinner table to supply sustenance ... from Auster to Cooledge to S Heaney to Ashbery. Or there would be the figure of Guston...the example of his working (see Corbett's Guston book). Wieners, Olson, Lansing, Jonas, Blaser, Spicer, (all spent time here) are all claimed presences (and for me Duncan)

people, like poetries, come and go- as does energy. there are weeks when nothing is happening and others when there is a reading to be at every night.

At Word of Mouth I was constant in greeting new faces and attempting to hook people up... this is the function of a series as far as I am concerned.

anyhow all of this is to say that there was and is a scene here. It is a very accessible scene for anyone who takes the time to attend the various events & to actively participate.

[I am reminded here that I wrote to Cid Corman in 86 or so that I could not get a reading here.. he told me to stop carping & start a reading series]

In my public work here I am keenly aware of the university presence ...& of its very narrow leanings. This is nothing new. I am also aware that there is another path (I invited Helen Vendler to speak at the Duncan Memorial as indeed I should have... & she in turn should have spoken: But of that I have no control . . . history will.

Again what is not here what ignores what is here is of no interest.

Each scene as each poem as each Theory is an ACT of creation. made up. constantly remade & redefined & constant in its need for same. the rest you can have.

Corbett says later in the lift interview:

What are the poems ? What are we talking about, What are we looking at?

lets start here...

Again the common bond between us is THE WORK its creation and the daily living that enables that work. I cannot say this too often.

All best
Michael Franco

PSS this thought re the "obscenity riddled phone messages/calls.... as we all stand huddled over the romance of "a scene" we might do well to wonder in a real way -as we recall those scenes of the past, if we could actually tolerate the real of such. Jacques...can you imagine the call you might... might???!!! WOULD have received from Spicer - had your comments addressed San Francisco???? The caller that left an unidentified message should be cursed -further- with writers block .... the "other caller" whose time and intimacy accosted you... spoke out from what you mistake as a malaise

MF

all best

Michael Franco

</pre>

↑ Index

175. Michael Neff
Issue 5 of 5_Trope
Thu 12 Aug 1999

See David Buuck, and other bleeding edge work in this issue of 5_Trope. http://webdelsol.com/5_trope

There is truly, nothing quite like 5T. Criticism is welcome, please send to editor, Gary Lutz:
[redacted]

5T doesn't use gratuitous sex to promote itself, only necessary and tasteful sex.

↑ Index

176. Matt Kirschenbaum
Blake Archive's August Update
Thu 12 Aug 1999

---

12 August 1999

The William Blake Archive <http://www.iath.virginia.edu/blake> is pleased to announce the publication of new electronic editions of copies B and U of Blake's _Songs of Innocence__.

Copies B and U are a study in contrasts, yet both are from the earliest printings of this book. Copy B, now in the Rosenwald Collection, Library of Congress, was printed with fifteen other copies of _Innocence_ in 1789, four of which were later joined with _Experience_ impressions, printed in 1794, to form _Songs of Innocence and of Experience_ copies B, C--which is in the Archive--D, and E. Unlike many of these early copies of _Innocence_, copy B still consists of all 31 plates originally composed and executed for _Innocence_. Like them, however, it was printed in a raw sienna ink on 17 leaves and exemplifies Blake's early printing and coloring style. The plates were wiped of their plate borders, the illustrations very lightly washed in watercolors, and the texts left unwashed. This mode of presentation, along with printing both sides of the leaves to create facing pages, emphasized the prints as book pages rather than prints or paintings. Good examples of printing and coloring illuminated plates to look like minatures can be seen in _Songs_ copy Z, also in the Archive.

Innocence copy U, from the Houghton Library, Harvard University, is an excellent example of printing illuminated plates to look like prints. Like etchings and engravings, they were printed on one side of the leaf in black ink and left uncolored. Copy U, which was printed with untraced copy V, had been dated c. 1814, because of some stylistic similarities it shares with illuminated works assumed to have been produced around that time. But, in fact, copy U is the _first_ copy of _Innocence_ printed. The presence of a unique first state for "Infant Joy" proves this sequence; the bottom part of the "J" in the title is missing in all extant impressions, but here it extends into the flower. Copy U was printed before copy B and all other early copies; the ink color, printing style (recto only), and lack of hand coloring suggest a date of printing before Blake had developed his special ways of producing his illuminated books and instead repeated styles and techniques long familiar to him as a commercial engraver.

Both electronic editions have newly edited SGML-encoded texts and new images scanned and color-corrected from first-generation 4x5" transparencies; they are each fully searchable for both text and images and supported by the Inote and ImageSizer applications described in our previous updates.

With the publication of these two titles, the Archive now contains 35 copies of 18 separate books, including at least one copy of every one of Blake's works in illuminated printing except the 100 plates of _Jerusalem_ (forthcoming).

Morris Eaves, Robert N. Essick, and Joseph Viscomi, editors
Matthew G. Kirschenbaum, Technical Editor
The William Blake Archive

↑ Index

177. Lynn Miller
Sugar Sugar
Thu 12 Aug 1999

@

Some time ago there was a thread of thought about words lost and found, and a cluster of posts around this, to which I'd like to contribute the following image-text found yesterday poking around the German stacks looking for Rosa Luxemburg's Politische Schriften vols. 1-3 at the Cleveland Public Library:

Cover Image: Two what appear to be golden retriever puppies surrounded in a field of flowers lifting (pointing) their paws toward a baby bunny rabbit. Cover Text: Crown Point Graphics / Carmel, IN 46032 NC 763 "Pansy Patrol" (Original Art Work by Diane Querry / Litho Canada.

Inside this card is the following handwritten message:

"Write to me:
Olessya Dianova
Str. Sortavalskya, x(The same mistake twice, but this means nothing)5/2-160
Petrozavodsk, RUSSIA 185026"

[Several quickly dashed lines resembling strands of hair separate the address from the message]

"My address is on the envelope as well. There are the pictures of you when we we in Guptols. Should have given you one of xxme But I completely forgot, I'll send it to you later. Bye! Let's both have xxsave trips.

Dear Naomi!

Sorry we couldn't see each other again Before we both leave, But I'll remember all the fun times we had spent together Hope you'll have a safe trip to Ohio, and school there will help you to Become the greatest musician ever. Don't forget to send me the copy of the novel when you finish it. I am gonna miss you.

[hand-drawn heart]Olessya"

Inside the card is a snapshot of the "greatest musician ever": hair falling well below her shoulders, wearing a blue flower print sleeveless blouse and jean shorts. A small purple coin purse hangs from a strap around her neck. Her full smile into the camera appears only casually posed, and her eyes reflect that red glare that happens with flashbulbs. A couple of Russian letters from a billboard or shop sign are all that glimmers through the pitchblack backdrop.

Finders keepers. Losers weepers.

I'd like to nominate these two click chicks as honorary (allegorical) Armandistas, after the spirit of the Armand among many others that emerges in the pages of some recent scholarship in the U.S.:

Jane McDermid & Anna Hllyar, WOMEN AND WORK IN RUSSIA 1880-1930 (Longman, 1998) Barbara Evans Clements, BOLSHEVIK WOMEN (Cambridge University Press, 1997). Barbara Evans Clements, DAUGHTERS OF

REVOLUTION (Harlan Davidson, Arlington Heights, Illinois, 1994) Clements, Engel and Worobec, eds., RUSSIA'S WOMEN (University of California Press, 1991)

The history being written here locates a feminism with the Bolshevik party that appears to have shared, in the thinking behind a project like Zhenotdel, which at first glance anyway appears to bear some resemblance to the literacy campaign conducted in Cuba in the early 60s, with Luxemburg's (mistaken?) view that "the revolutionary party should come much closer to encompassing the organized working class in its entirety." (Editor's introduction to Rosa Luxemburg Speaks, i.e. "From the whirlwind and the storm, out of the fire and flow of the mass strike and the street fighting, rise again, like Venus from the foam, fresh, young, powerful, buoyant trade unions.") The feminism that developed through an educational project like Zhenotdel and a newspaper like Rabonitsa (Working Woman) declared itself on the side of the working class and oppressed nationalities in pre-revolutionary Russia from within an organization whose legendary combative intransigence has perhaps overshadowed other strands of thought and activity which that organization was apparently able to accomodate, if not encourage and promote.

L.

↑ Index

178. Jeffrey Jullich
Village Voice POLYVERSE review
Fri 13 Aug 1999

Wednesday's Village Voice runs a lukewarm or even unfavorable review of Lee Ann Brown's ~Polyverse,~ filled with gratuitous innuendo about Language Poetry. The reviewer is named Thad Ziolkowski.

He doesn't wait any longer than ~the first sentence~ to mention Charles (Bernstein), who selected ~Polyverse~ for the "prestigious" New American Poetry Series, and to begin casting veiled aspersions against him. We wouldn't have expected ~Polyverse~ as Charles' choice, Ziolkowski says: we would have expected "ironic, warily analytical work". Charles, here cast as papal, bishopric, or censorious by Ziolkowkski, should have been more likely to give ~that~ his "imprimatur".

Ziolkowski criticizes Brown, basically, as too much a patchwork quilt of styles. (An assessment which Sun & Moon's own amazon.com Book Description is not, at a more positive slant, far afield from: "many forms and possibilities. Taking its cue from a wide range of modern and postmodern poetics, Brown's work . . .") ~Polyverse,~ he says, fails in echoing New York School, Beat, and Language, without synthesizing those influences. (Nor does Z. entertain the inkling that syncretism is not the only solution, that the ~Poly-~ in ~Polyverse~ may actually mean something, and that the segregated stylistics Brown leaves behind is ~more~ in tune with an aesthetic of polyvocalism.)

He finally treats this "thirtysomething" poet (his agism) as if, as I read it, this were a beginner's problem that she will hopefully work out in time ("But then maybe the orgy among all these poetic influences is just getting warmed up").

If it weren't for Brown eroticizing her Language-like "proliferation of grammatical terms", Language Poetry by itself is just "lifeless automatic pilot".

He accuses Brown of seeming "dated, frozen in a sunstruck New York--circa-1965 atmosphere". Oddly, it's her "references to Whitman, Mayakovsky, Sappho and Stein" that Ziolkowski particularly singles out as behind-the-times, but yet when he again cites her eroticism as "What saves the book from this terminally reverent tendency", he quotes her lines "She's a minor flirt,/a cloud in trousers" without so much as a blink of open recognition that "a cloud in trousers", too, is yet another homage and "reverent tendency" (O'Hara/Mayakovsky). Ziolkowski is left looking as if he doesn't know he was quoting an appropriation of Brown's, at cross-purposes, and hence is in contradiction with himself by saying that what saves the book from a debility is the same debility.

His attitude may reach its pique when he writes: "You end up wondering . . . what's particularly new about this New American." Fair question. Personally, I am left wondering, if he was this global in treating Brown --- whom ("Brown is . . . goofy in a troubadour-hippie-Fugs way") he nonetheless seems to enjoy, despite his disparaging slant of praise --- what kind of harsher polemic The Village Voice would have printed if the book were indeed "ironic, warily analytical work".

See:

http://www.villagevoice.com/arts/9932/ziolkowski.shtml

↑ Index

179. Alan Sondheim

the best poem, the very best

Fri 13 Aug 1999

==\==\

LOST. AND TIRED. IN THESE DARK HILLS, PUNCH CARDS
PUNCH CARDS LOST IN TRANSMISSIONS, DISMAL ACROSS DIRECTORIES, FLAYED OF MEANING AND IMAGE AND SYMBOL, AS IF THE NIGHTS WERE ALWAYS DULLED, THE WEATHER

```
 ___________________________________________________
/LOST.                                             |
|    []                                            |
|[]                                                |
|  []                                              |
|1111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111|
|22[2222222222222222222222222222222222222222222222|
|[]33]33333333333333333333333333333333333333333333|
|4444444444444444444444444444444444444444444444444|
|5555555555555555555555555555555555555555555555555|
|6[6666666666666666666666666666666666666666666666|
|7777777777777777777777777777777777777777777777777|
|8888[8888888888888888888888888888888888888888888|
|9999999999999999999999999999999999999999999999999|
|___________________________________________________|
```

AND TIRED. DO YOU KNOW TIRED, DARK. THERE ARE RHYTHMS, CYCLES IN THESE DARK AND TIRED HILLS. DO YOU KNOW SUCH REPETITION CRYING TO THE WORLD OF MEANING? LOST.

```
 ___________________________________________________
/AND TIRED.                                        |
|] ]  ] ]]]                                        |
| ]    ]                                           |
|    ]                                             |
|]1111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111|
|2222222222222222222222222222222222222222222222222|
|3333]3333]3333333333333333333333333333333333333333|
|44]44444]4444444444444444444444444444444444444444|
|5]55555]5555555555555555555555555555555555555555|
|66
```

AND BROKEN AS LANGUAGE STOPS ITSELF, TRACKED HARD IN TRADITION, LOOKING FOR THE WORDING IN THE NOISE, LOOKING FOR THE MEANING IN THE WORD. NEXT TO DEATH, WE'RE

```
 ___________________________________________________
/LOST.                                             |
|    ]                                             |
|]]                                                |
|  ]]                                              |
|1111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111|
|22]2222222222222222222222222222222222222222222222|
```

```
|]33]]333333333333333333333333333333333333333333|
|44444444444444444444444444444444444444444444444|
|555555555555555555555555555555555555555555555555|
|6]66666666666666666666666666666666666666666666666|
|777777777777777777777777777777777777777777777777|
|8888]88888888888888888888888888888888888888888888|
|999999999999999999999999999999999999999999999999|
|_____________________________________________|
```

AND TIRED. NEXT TO DEATH, IT'S WHAT IS MEANT WHEN TEXT IS LOST, WORDS GRIND DOWN INTO SOUND AS IF NOTHING, WE ARE AFRAID OF THIS, WE PLACE WORLDS AND WORDS IN THE WAY, DO YOU KNOW ALL WORLDS ARE WORDS? SO LOST.

```
 _____________________________________________
/AND TIRED.                                  |
|] ]  ] ]]]                                  |
| ]    ]                                     |
|    ]                                       |
|]1111 ___________________________________________
/LOST.                                       |
|    ]                                       |
|]]                                          |
|  ]]                                        |
|111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111111|
|22]222222222222222222222222222222222222222222222|
|]33]]333333333333333333333333333333333333333333|
|44444444444444444444444444444444444444444444444|
|555555555555555555555555555555555555555555555555|
|6]66666666666666666666666666666666666666666666666|
|777777777777777777777777777777777777777777777777|
|8888]88888888888888888888888888888888888888888888|
|999999999999999999999999999999999999999999999999|
|_____________________________________________|
 _____________________________________________
/AND TIRED.                                  |
|] ]  ] ]]]                                  |
| ]    ]                                     |
|    ]                                       |
|]1111
```

THEY CLUSTER, CLUTTER, MAKE HOUSES OUT OF LINES AND LETTERS. YOU WILL BELIEVE THROUGH THEM, THE UNUTTER-

ABLE UTTERANCE OF THE WORD. SAY IT, NOTHING HAPPENS.
ALL IS ON THE PLANE OF SPEECH; WHAT PHENOMENA FOLLOW
SKITTER ACROSS UNKNOWN CARDS, ADDRESSES, MACHINES, LOST. AND TIRED.

↑ Index

180. shana
Re: 19th C. Po&sie
Fri 13 Aug 1999

Mike--

Another Baudelaire en face edition is _Les Fleurs du Mal et Oeuvres Choisies_/_Flowers of Evil and Other Works_, a Dover edition, copyright 1992, translated by Wallace Fowlie. It was originally a Bantam book, first published in 1963 or 1964. Fowlie's translations are okay, but a little pretentious. Then again, he wrote a book called, _Rimbaud and Jim Morrison: The Rebel as Poet_. Stop laughing. Anyway, the book. It's a purple and yellow atrocity, I picked it up at a Barnes and Noble book annex a few years ago. Some of my NYU French department colleagues had it, too, not sure if it's Baudelaire standard or just secret among a few of us. It's better than the Matthews edition, I think, but that may just be bias toward Fowlie's ultra-impressive endnotes.

Shana
http://www.bway.net/~shana

↑ Index

181. L. MacMahon and T.R. Healy
Apologies for cross posting: Wild Honey Press Books
Fri 13 Aug 1999

Apologies for cross posting.

Here are some recent titles. I'll give a bare list first, then details below. All the books are hand sewn, with an illustrated card cover, and printed on a deskjet. (The cover for Holding Patterns is by Tom Raworth.) I dislike superlatives, so have confined myself to simple remarks on form followed by a quotation from the relevant book. (I suspect the formatting of the quotes will be a little mangled by e-mail.) This should not be read as a lack of enthusiasm on my part. Making books by hand is a labour of love and one needs to be absolutely mad about a book to do it. In the case of these books I am.

As with every other poetry press that ever was, your support is sorely needed would be very much appreciated. Visa/Mastercard accepted. Those outside Ireland/UK please contact me to sort out postage. A bulk price can be arranged for anyone wishing to really treat themselves.

A Small Book of Songs - Billy Mills
Without Asylum - Trevor Joyce Scales - Randolph Healy
20/20 Vision - Pete Smith
Sheep Dip - John Kinsella
Travelling Mercies - Guy Birchard
Holding Patterns - Susan M. Schultz

Best wishes

Randolph Healy

A Small Book of Songs, Billy Mills, 64 pages, A5.
ISBN 1 903090 01 6. £7/$12

A book in five sections, selections from which have been published by West Coast Line, Talisman, Shearsman, Longhouse and Oasis.

proportion is everything:
tower & square rhyme an instinct
the ideal city

a single memory internalized streets necessary
the garden shimmers

step in the river feel stability & flux words bend
under such pressure

Without Asylum, Trevor Joyce, 18cm x 11 cm, 16 pages, cover illustration by author, ISBN 1 903090 05 9, £2/$4.

A poem in twenty one quatrains and one line.

shelter from the fall asylum from the edge a luminous domain unbounded

seldom they relate why the innocent whose mouth is like a bowl of blood blurts words already

Scales, Randolph Healy, 20 pp, A5, ISBN 1 903090 04 0, £3.50/$6

A poem in 14 sections.

II

what seem to be specks of dust resolve a past pierced by harmonies desolate fertile

* feeding on itself among a procession of icy bodies cloud seas lands turning the summed light of billions sensitive damaging two refractions one internal reflection a city

  cut cabochon as a gem

energy in transit  streets reduced by distance to a brilliant glaze where limbs and torsos tread light

  * freedom chance tensing and releasing in response to microslips along res ipsa loquitur relatively although not absolutely stick bone reed metal graphite

20/20 Vision, Pete Smith, 24 pp, 14 cm x 14 cm, ISBN 1 903090 07 5

A sequence of 20 poems of 20 lines each.

Flags at half and pistols at twenty.
Beech-mast still pelts down.
The pace stretching our short days.
Evening out the stress bumps.
The tenor of morning an oratorio.
Another key where vibrato widens.

Spilt silt trickle spate estuary.
Semis, demis and demi-semis all a-quavering.
Just because there's a period doesn't mean an end.
The idea of body doesn't remove clothes.
Where there's a will there's a fisticuffs.
Way out west; way up north; weighed down.
A National Day of Morning: noon at midnight.
Mist of discharge fogs a dawn.
I half-doubt Thomas would have rhymed that.
It's bigger than a frisbee, bigger than New York.
If a poem had enough combustion.
Eiderdown. Dander up. Relaxation always a middling.
The reflexologist said, "You remind me of myself."
The twentieth line presages an abyss, of sorts.

Sheep Dip, John Kinsella, 24 pp, 7 cm x 14.5 cm, ISBN 1 903 090 02 4, £2/$4.

A poem in 41 quatrains.

my total hate, the rank stands of tanning trees, the protected species paddling in the dam, the demarcations between the giddy crops and firebreaks. Which is the Karma of being stranded on an island that's bigger than the ocean it wallows in, and you're trying to read your future in the tepid entrails of sheep that seem to be of normal size despite their owners being as large as bloody giants, and one-eyed. To drive beyond the eye and see the corporate beast thrash about, crushing your neighbours as one by one the deadline falls on their pathetic

Travellin Mercies, Guy Birchard, 32pp, 16cm x 14.5 cm, ISBN 1 903090 00 8, £3.50/$6

WY handsome leathery elderly ladies of Lusk between Deadwood and Cheyenne orient us putting in crop recalling bean farmers in Fort Laramie's saloon hunch and grin

CO down in Denver among silver limpets, najas

fish around his shins Crivelli's
Christopher relieves us

We followed the blue road in the antique Rand McNally whithersoever regardless of more recent constructions. True, the gate spanning the road posted ADMITTANCE RESTRICTED, and more blithe than obedient we gave it short pause. It only took Security a half mile anyway to pull us over and turn us back, acknowledging nothing of the blue road on our map. Down the road at the Loaf&Jug the girl explains everything, "Martin- Marietta? oh, they make missiles&stuff in there..." We never saw over that hill.

The Kid's double-action Rye
$15. 1880 .41 Thunderer

Holding Patterns, Susan M. Schultz, 24 pp, A5, ISBN 1 903090 03 2, £3.50/$6

Antigone was a beached heiress intent on returning Gilligan to his life of suburban haplessness 'til the speech coach knocked off her tongue (which was never mother) and syllables entered stage below like steam from Chilean baths, assumptions chilled as a corps of Marines building bridges over crossed rivers. Too much thought stifles paralysis, don't you think, enabling mental blocks to walk planks.
I heard the splash, never associating it with fundaments of faith, the aegis that sounds like Jesus, forbidden conclusiveness in the name of a better or more bitter) ending for his readers' response. Drug store cushions absorb more shock than that; headphones lifted by athletes contain less music than foreplay of static, sound becoming something more or less like guilty silence. Redeem your pawns at the door, for all exchange is not inheritance, these angled communiqués borne out in bottles hijinxed by ships that carry human cargo until carcasses recall Carcassone and history returns as a mare running ovals, straitlaced executives turning holidays into hectares of dubious proclivity, not knowing one agenda to triumph when waterfalls vanish in valleys where the air is admonishment.

Visit the Sound Eye website at:
http://indigo.ie/~tjac/sound_eye_hme.htm
or find more Irish writing at:
http://www.nd.edu/~ndr/issues/ndr7/contents.html

↑ Index

182. Douglas
Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review
Fri 13 Aug 1999

Jeffrey:

Thank you for the good analysis of a very wrong-headed review. I truly appreciate it.

Douglas Messerli, Sun & Moon Press.

Jeffrey Jullich wrote:
>
> Wednesday's Village Voice runs a lukewarm or even unfavorable
> review of Lee Ann Brown's ~Polyverse,~ filled with gratuitous innuendo > about Language Poetry. The reviewer is named Thad Ziolkowski.
>
> He doesn't wait any longer than ~the first sentence~ to mention Charles > (Bernstein), who selected ~Polyverse~ for the "prestigious" New > American Poetry Series, and to begin casting veiled aspersions against > him. We wouldn't have expected ~Polyverse~ as Charles' choice, > Ziolkowski says: we would have expected "ironic, warily analytical > work". Charles, here cast as papal, bishopric, or censorious by > Ziolkowkski, should have been more likely to give ~that~ his "imprimatur".
>
> Ziolkowski criticizes Brown, basically, as too much a patchwork quilt of > styles. (An assessment which Sun & Moon's own amazon.com Book > Description is not, at a more positive slant, far afield from: "many forms > and possibilities. Taking its cue from a wide range of modern and > postmodern poetics, Brown's work . . .") ~Polyverse,~ he says, fails in

> echoing New York School, Beat, and Language, without synthesizing
> those influences. (Nor does Z. entertain the inkling that syncretism is not > the only solution, that the ~Poly-~ in ~Polyverse~ may actually mean > something, and that the segregated stylistics Brown leaves behind is > ~more~ in tune with an aesthetic of polyvocalism.)
>
> He finally treats this "thirtysomething" poet (his agism) as if, as I read it,
> this were a beginner's problem that she will hopefully work out in time
> ("But then maybe the orgy among all these poetic influences is just > getting warmed up").
>
> If it weren't for Brown eroticizing her Language-like "proliferation of > grammatical terms", Language Poetry by itself is just "lifeless automatic > pilot".
>
> He accuses Brown of seeming "dated, frozen in a sunstruck New > York--circa-1965 atmosphere". Oddly, it's her "references to Whitman, > Mayakovsky, Sappho and Stein" that Ziolkowski particularly singles out
> as behind-the-times, but yet when he again cites her eroticism as "What > saves the book from this terminally reverent tendency", he quotes her > lines "She's a minor flirt,/a cloud in trousers" without so much as a blink
> of open recognition that "a cloud in trousers", too, is yet another homage
> and "reverent tendency" (O'Hara/Mayakovsky). Ziolkowski is left looking > as if he doesn't know he was quoting an appropriation of Brown's, at > cross-purposes, and hence is in contradiction with himself by saying > that what saves the book from a debility is the same debility.
>
> His attitude may reach its pique when he writes: "You end up wondering
> . . . what's particularly new about this New American." Fair question.
> Personally, I am left wondering, if he was this global in treating Brown --- > whom ("Brown is . . . goofy in a troubadour-hippie-Fugs way") he > nonetheless seems to enjoy, despite his disparaging slant of praise --- > what kind of harsher polemic The Village Voice would have printed if the > book were indeed "ironic, warily analytical work".
>
> See:
>
> http://www.villagevoice.com/arts/9932/ziolkowski.shtml

↑ Index

183. maz881
Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review
Fri 13 Aug 1999

---

dear Jeffrey Jullich

that phrase that thad uses to describe bernstein's supposed wants ("ironic, warily analytical work") might be more applicable to thad's own book, my son the arsonist. maybe thad was bummed charles didn't pick him.

i guess i mean i didn't find the review all that negative.

BillL

<<Wednesday's Village Voice runs a lukewarm or even unfavorable review of Lee Ann Brown's ~Polyverse,~ filled with gratuitous innuendo about Language Poetry. The reviewer is named Thad Ziolkowski.

He doesn't wait any longer than ~the first sentence~ to mention Charles (Bernstein), who selected ~Polyverse~ for the "prestigious" New American Poetry Series, and to begin casting veiled aspersions against him. We wouldn't have expected ~Polyverse~ as Charles' choice, Ziolkowski says: we would have expected "ironic, warily analytical work". Charles, here cast as papal, bishopric, or censorious by Ziolkowkski, should have been more likely to give ~that~ his "imprimatur".>>

↑ Index

184. Gerald Schwartz
Re: I Guess I'll Say It Flat Out
Fri 13 Aug 1999

Re: A H Bramhall's piece of 11 Aug

Every time I read the word "Boston"
in this piece, I found myself easily substituting the words
"Albany" and "Syracuse".
They seem to fit too well.

Gerald

↑ Index

185. A H Bramhall
Elijah "Pumpsie" Green At BoPo
Fri 13 Aug 1999

Being quite civilized on the surface: the neighborhoods were lines not to cross from Boston, and, hell, as a Yankees fan in 1978 even owned 1959, if memory serves me right, a full 12 years after Jackie Robinson and Larry Doby--but from the poetic community I know their isn't even a subtle form. segregated and everyone knew which None from live. a "Boston Sucks" T-shirt, until from Boston, this post caught my sister take it back, but geez. Be rather than racism, that at times leads to non-diverse events and publications, sometimes even my own. my mother found out about looks bad by comparison made, my eye of racism. racist place I've ever the uncrossable Maybe which Nada. it's changed since I left The ideas of neighborhoods being segregated and knowing I guess I'll say it flat out: Boston is the most lines segregated and everyone knew relates to just about any major metropolis, including San Francisco and maybe Boston just. it's 15 years ago, but I kind of doubt it. Good. simply ignorance I'm not no matter how racist I think simply through inquiry or attending New York, each of which I've lived in, the latter for most of my Granted, I went lived. there to New York & on to San Francisco-so It takes an extra effort to be inclusive, be it horror stories from many former residents, and, back to Instead, again, baseball, the Red Sox were even the last team to integrate Instead, again, more ethnically and racially diverse reading series, Pumpsie Green in Zip.

↑ Index

186. Poetics List
Samuel Delany Reading
Fri 13 Aug 1999

This is sure to be of interest to the list. Chris

--

Samuel Delany Reading
Tuesday, August 17th at 7:30pm
Modern Times Bookstore
888 Valencia St. @ 20th St.
San Francisco

Call [redacted] for more info

↑ Index

187. Mark Weiss

Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.

Fri 13 Aug 1999

I have to say I've always loved Boston, with all its grimy problems. But I think I know a different Boston. Cambridge, for one, the working-class part where my friends live (away from Harvard Square), is thoroughly integrated. A lot of other neighborhoods are de facto, and fairly viciously, segregated, but that's true, and inexcusable, almost everywhere in this country. In San Diego, where I now live, even the street traffic, such as it is, is segregated, except for a handful of small downtown neighborhoods, in one of which I live. Many of New York's (and San Francisco's) suburbs are equally so, especially where race and class work together, and so are a lot of NYC neighborhoods--not too many white faces in BedSty or Harlem, not too many non-Italians in Bensonhurst. And foot traffic doesn't necessarily equal domicile, even in the more enlightened neighborhoods. How does this translate to the lit world? I've been out of New York for about ten years, so maybe things have changed, but I can think of only a handful of non-anglo regular participants in the scenes that I knew best over the 30 years that I was involved--St. Mark's, the Upper West Side, the Ear--and no anglo participants in, for instance, the West Indian poetry scene that flourishes in Brooklyn. I'd love to be wrong about this.

Here's a Newton story. In the early 70's I dated a woman who belonged to a Boston commune that suddenly found itself homeless. They lucked into a month-to-month rental in the Newton of grand estates--the owner was trying to figure out what to do with the property and figured he might as well pay the tax burden with a rental. As a result eight scruffy types, including one poet and two people of color, spent three years in a 40 room mansion. I don't know what the neighbors thought, or if they even knew--the place sat in the middle of 12 acres of field, forest and pond. But I guess they had integrated Newton. And they gave great parties.

At 09:31 PM 8/12/99 GMT, you wrote:
>RE: well, i gotta back karen up on this; being from boston (or rather >newton, the "golden ghetto" of the greater boston area) i can attest to the >sharp divisions in neighborhoods --more so than in SF or NYC.
>
>I am also from Newton (the "golden ghetto")and got used to running into >people who thought I was rich. But you should know better, as do I: Newton >is comprised of many Newtons: Newton Center, Newtonville, West Newton, >Newton Highlands, Newton Upper Falls, Newton Lower Falls, THE LAKE (!!), >Chestnut Hill, etc, etc. --it is one of the most economically diverse >suburbs in Boston, if not THE most diverse. Yes, it is chock-full of lawyers >and psychiatrists (Newton Center has the highest number of psychiatrists per >sq mile in the country) and the "new" high-tech rich, but just a few miles >away in any direction are the working class and blue collar people. Artists >and writers also flourish there--it's close to the city and also has a >lively arts scene of its own.

>
>If by "sharp divisions" in neighborhoods, you mean racially unmixed >neighborhoods, well, when I was growing up there it was not >racially/ethnically mixed--but no suburb that far away from the city was.
>Now it is though. If you don't believe me, take a trip down Washington >Street from West Newton to Newton Corner, or drive through some >neighborhoods next time you're there.
>
>>From: Maria Damon <[redacted]>
>>Reply-To: UB Poetics discussion group <[redacted]>
>>To: [redacted]
>>Subject: Re: Boston poetry community as part of racist Boston? Geez.
>>Date: Wed, 11 Aug 1999 17:34:18 -0600
>>
>>At 4:15 PM -0400 8/11/99, David Kirschenbaum wrote:
>> >>Karen Kelley wrote:
>> >
>> >>Being from Boston, this post caught my eye. I guess I'll say it flat >> >out:
>> >>Boston is the most racist place I've ever lived. Granted, I >went from >> >>there to New York & on to San Francisco--so maybe Boston >just looks bad
>>by >> >>comparison. It all seemed quite civilized on the >surface: the >> >>neighborhoods were segregated and everyone knew which >lines not to >>cross.
>> >>Maybe it's changed since I left 15 years ago, >but I kind of doubt it.
>> >
>> >I'm not from Boston, and, hell, as a Yankees fan in 1978 even owned a
>> >"Boston Sucks" T-shirt, until my mother found out about it and made my >> >sister take it back, but geez, no matter how racist Boston may be --and >>I've >> >heard horror stories from many former residents, and, back to baseball,
>>the
>> >Red Sox were even the last team to integrate, Pumpsie Green in 1959, if >> >memory serves me right, a full 12 years after Jackie Robinson and Larry >> >Doby--but from the poetic community I know their isn't even a subtle form
>>of

>> >racism. None. Zip. Nada.
>> >The ideas of neighborhoods being segregated and knowing the uncrossable >> >lines relates to just about any major metropolis, including San Francisco >> >and New York, each of which I've lived in, the latter for most of my >>live.
>> >Instead, again, I think it's simply ignorance rather than racism, that at >> >times leads to non-diverse events and publications, sometimes even my >>own.
>> >It takes an extra effort to be inclusive, be it simply through inquiry or >> >attending more ethnically and racially diverse reading series.
>> >Be Good,
>> >David
>>
>>well, i gotta back karen up on this; being from boston (or rather newton, >>the "golden ghetto" of the greater boston area) i can attest to the sharp >>divisions in neighborhoods --more so than in SF or NYC. however, there are >>other forms of racism, such as in the Twin Cities where everything's >>supposed to be so nicey nice. the neighborhoods aren't as sharply divided, >>but people are almost wilfully naive and want to deny difference wherever >>they find it.
>
>
>_____
>Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com
>
>

↑ Index

188. A H Bramhall
Boston's Last Poet
Fri 13 Aug 1999

Pumpsie Green found the distances difficult to navigate, the hardscrabble pitiless. efforting the needful, he came up lacking. his brother Cornell gained distinction with the Dallas Cowboys, Pumpsie just got drunk with his extra tall teammate and boded something about flying to Israel: never got there. heroes are sometimes incomplete, as are most political moves. gestures are far more agreeable. the days grow shadowy at certain times, a matter of physical space, the dialectic of disadvantage. this is home for the clouded, this relentless physical insistence. that there be a place; that that place be filled; that intention grows ever more difficult in the demands of more space and less. Pumpsie never became a man, for he always was. always, no matter how carved from the ulteriour and sent down the river. the writers on the beat aren't now and never were anyway close to the core, nor have they access to the margins. they just know something happened, know by an inferiour logic. they never reach the end of the line because, why, that line bends indistinctively into a polite class war, the kind we save for our neighbours. the line bends to return, then bends again. how much engagement can one stand? Pumpsie was not our neighbour, perhaps, but was equally lost. community doesn't survive for nothing. deliverance is a sensible point of view, in the rare guarded age we've made. the song follows the social dictates as ever, forever, filling the stream with a little trail of blood, figurative blood, the only kind any of us believe in. the miners look up, suddenly discover Pumpsie, in the sharp cone of their sight. your edge is now mainframe, sir, they say, and gracefully embrace the formerly failing ballplayer.

↑ Index

189. R M Daley

oh my god: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New York avant-garde"

Fri 13 Aug 1999

---

1. please see sedgwick's intro to Novel Gazing, puclished Duke Press 1997 for a primer on "queer theory" which departs ferociously from, says a thousand goodbyes to, freud and his cronies whose arrested sexual (theory) development foisted repression on any and everything not deemed 'natural' or 'biological' - this (queer theory) comes from a regard for identity as a lot of hooey, and the notion that pieces of art are extensions of social, sexual, personal identity is based completely in typecasting "cut-ups" as something not original, lyrical, personal, constitutive of the breeder's identity (nowadays put into sterile, scientized terms like genes, DNA, genetic blueprint, etc) - fine, cut-ups are bastards - the point is that queer theory would never regard art as the children of artists in the first place, let alone concede that gay men have mules - (art unable itself of reproducing)

2. queer theory has very little truck with terms like 'gay," "lesbian" "hetero" - that's the point of queer theory - throwing out the babies, the bathwater , that all this identity festers in - and leaving the paranoia to the new historicists - queer theory is mired in production , the point is that is does so regardless of its subscription to its own identity

3. not everyone has to have babies - some women don't have babies - some women who fuck with men don't have babies - some women who fuck with women don't have babies - some women who fuck men have babies and then

give them away - some men who fuck men have babies - some men who fuck women have babies - some men who fuck women have babies and then kill them - some men want babies who like particularly to fuck men and women- some women who fuck women have babies

burroughs had a kid - cage was married to xenia - rauschenberg loves dogs - andy loved edie - you see how one could go on and on

↑ Index

190. Tom Orange
Village Voice POLYVERSE review
Fri 13 Aug 1999

---

jeffrey jullich writes:

"Wednesday's Village Voice runs a lukewarm or even unfavorable review of Lee Ann Brown's ~Polyverse,~ filled with gratuitous innuendo about Language Poetry...."

"lukewarm" made be accurate; "unfavorable" and "harsh polemic" are, i think, stretching it. frankly i prefer ziolkowski's review to the sort of collective gush that has constituted the responses to this book that i've seen up to now. (and aside from haas -- that he would give the book notice in the /post/ in the first place is significant.) what ziolkowski refers to as the book's "terminally reverent tendency" to engage prior poetic models applies equally well, i think, to a tendency on the part of any poetic readership to take a book so highly anticipated and long awaited unquestioningly into its embrace.

certainly the review is cheeky, provocative, irreverant even. but this is why i appreciate it. ziolkowski's tone, that of a more mature poet reading a less mature one, is odd, given that, if my information is correct, there is only three years' age difference between him and brown. and i don't agree with his notion that for a patchwork of styles to be successful it should be "synthesized into something exciting and strange."

but i don't necessarily see "gratuitous innuendos" or even open aspersions being cast here, at brown, bernstein, or language poetry. i mean, "more heart than head, goofy in a troubadour-hippie-fugs way" may strike as more backhanded than compliment, but i would think "goofy" done right is as admirable and necessary as "the serious."

would charles take offense at the charge of being an imprimatur-wielder? of course it's his position in the field that entitles him to pick the winner of the (yes, prestigous no scare quotes) NAP series in a given year, but i don't think he'd want to don the cloak of infallibility thereupon.

and what poetics, reduced to a set of devices, does not risk becoming a "lifeless automatic pilot"? for ziolkowski, the erotic element in brown's work helps her avoid this, tho not enough to overcome what he sees as the work's limitations. not a bad assessment for a first book...

(which i haven't read tho am more tempted to now)

tom orange / wdc

↑ Index

191. Maria Damon

Re: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New York avant-garde"

Fri 13 Aug 1999

---

earl jackson did a terrific talk on cut-up technique and gay sexuality at the Queer Beats conference in November of 1996. as i recall, he seemed to make the association through the experience of *dis*sociation gay guys of the 50s must have felt between experience and the possible expressions or means of representing it.

At 12:53 AM -0400 8/14/99, Jeffrey Jullich wrote:
>>>> Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]> 08/10/99 07:13pm >>> wrote:
>
>>Jacques,
>
>>I would be interested to hear what you feel connects the
>>"homosexualization of the New York avant-garde" with cut-up >technique....
>>(beyond the fact that some gay guys did it....)
>
>--Mark Prejsnar
>----------
>---------
>Mark,
>
>Although I don't know what Jacques' answer would be to that question, . .
>. I would like to agree with him about "the dangers of historical >decontextualization", and that, to name as he did only Burroughs, Cage, >and Ashbery, "homosexualization" is significant for the invention of >cut-ups. Personally, I've already had a similar impression concerning the >"homosexualization" of Warhol's, Johns', and Rauschenberg's >appropriations, in relation to the genesis of Pop. (Not to forget: the >theoretics of cut-ups' historical period were also hothouse to "Notes on >Camp," whose own "homosexualization" treated sexuality and art style as >self-evident equivalents.) Why I feel that way, though, may be thin ice >to explain.

>
>I take it from your (supportive) tone that you mean your question to be >~in defense~ of those "gay guys", . . . as though Jacques' telescoping of >the period into one "-ization" were presumption, like talking "Velvet >Mafia" or shortchanging heterosexualized contemporaries. But at the same >time I'd like to submit that your "beyond the fact that some gay guys did >it" may have a trivializing casualness about it, . . . as though there >were always "gay guys" around, as it seems nowadays, and no less than >three all at once independentally but coincidentally being instrumental in >the creation of a new art form were at best some statistical fluke. As >though the branding iron of idiosyncratic desire did not leave its stamp >on art. Back to "historical decontextualization": those three were still >of a generation which couldn't yet even be ~named~ as "gay", so their >consensus in all engineering this same new art form into being is to the >contrary rather remarkable. If a new genre were to emerge from a >similarly exclusionary group of, say, Jews, ---or ~lesbians~ rather than >"guys"! Ø it might be more striking and appear instantly sensible for >someone to begin one of those typical explorations of Jewish Mysticist >antecedents, or such.
>
>That said, let me get myself into more hot water by attempting to explain >the parallel I find between the Warhol-Johns-Rauschenberg
>"homosexualization" and Pop, and between the Burroughs-Cage-Ashbery
>"homosexualization" and cut-ups. Proviso: I may be confusing psychology >for ontology, and I'm almost definitely erring into what Jacques warns >against as "analogical . . . significance." (However, given the >metaphoric nature of "historical contextualization's" hidden similes >themselves, some tropological thinking seems allowable.)
>
>Here¢s the point:
>
>The xerox-like image transfer methods (silk screening) of the Pop artists >~reproduced~ images without devising new ones; similarly, that graphic >form has its literary equivalent in cut-ups, which also, if not per se >reproducing, re-~arrange~ a pre-existing text without introducing new >matter.
>
>The (perhaps heretically naive) link my mind draws is---to ~biological~ >reproduction, or procreation. (There is some slippage of terms here, as >we use the word "reproduction" for both productive biological parturition >and the ~non-productive~ "mechanical reproduction" we know since >Benjamin.) To blurt it out---the figure of the homosexual is, in >biological terms, non-productive (non-reproducing), and the >"homosexualization" artwork of those cut-up/Pop progenitors was also >non-productive ("reproduction"). If we suspend disbelief and try to >re-imagine from the perspective of those '50's art climate, "original" >creation would have been seen as an indispensable criterion of ~a man's~ >art.

>
>The necessary absurdity that I¢m figuring into this logic is the cliche >that "an artwork is like a child to the artist"; and I am of course >assuming for the sake of this stereotyped argumentation the fallacy of the >~childless~ homosexual, a fallacy which, however, in the case of these >particular six artists named in the "homosexualization", happens to hold >true (perhaps not accidentally).
>
>Hence---I suppose another way of putting this (increasingly embarassing) >notion is that: the homosexual does not ~add~ to the world. (Although an >unpalatable axiom, and patently objectionable on the level of the real, it >seems fair to assert in the spirit of dogma such as "Ce sexe qui n'est pas >un" or other post-modern metaphysics.) In these terms, the "gay guys" >behind cut-ups and Pop reproduction, despite their incontestable >contribution, did not ~add~ to the world or the bulk of existing >imagery/text in the same way that a work of "original" production takes up >space. (~Europe~ had "really" not added anything to ~Beryl of the >Biplane;~ it's commutative, not additive.)
>
>As far as cut-ups' earlier larval stage of ~collage,~ I believe Wayne >Koestenbaum has commented on the sublimated male-male "bonding" that >Picasso and Braque acted out in its invention and manufacture >(Koestenbaum, ~Double Talk: The Erotics of Male Literary Collaboration,~ >which should perhaps be required reading in relation to "beyond the fact":
>same-sex literary collaboration may ~already~ be an a priori
>"homosexualization," regardless of the participants' actual sexual >preference, according to Koestenbaum's thesis).
>
>
>I hope this doesn't seem like Pound on Social Credit. I mean it as Queer >Theory,---which is always speculative.
>
>Jeffrey Jullich

↑ Index

192. Maria Damon

Re: Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene

Fri 13 Aug 1999

---

rest assured, pierre. lots of folks i think are reading Jonas --i don't know if they're in boston: aldon nielsen, brent edwards, myself, and others are either writing about him or teaching his work.

At 5:23 PM -0400 8/12/99, Pierre Joris wrote:
>Much enjoyed your posts re Boston poetry scene, Tisa.
>
>But seem to have missed mention by anyone on this thread (correct me if I'm >wrong) of my favorite of the long departed Boston poetas: Stephen Jonas, >killed by smack, or Boston, in the mid-sixties. Is he still being read? Or >forgotten despite Joe Torra's work? I'm pretty sure Torra's selected Jonas >from Talisman is still in print.-- Pierre
>
> -----Original Message-----
>From: UB Poetics discussion group
>[mailto:[redacted]] On Behalf Of Tisa Bryant
>Sent: Thursday, August 12, 1999 12:03 AM
>To: [redacted]
>Subject: Accessibility, Inclusivity, The Seen Scene
>
> The "guard/garde" in van- and avant- tend to do just that. It's hard to >think of the words as having anything to do with "open"; they seem to work >against insistence. Vanguard, at the front, standing along the curve, >bordering on, bordering from, in relation to the center of concentric >understanding, and bound by it until movement occurs, then starting over.
>The ins and outs.
>As I said in my post, I was one of the few, meaning three or four out of a >possible 15, experimenting writers within the DRC, so said content in the >Reading Series far outweighed that of the workshops/work produced. While a >reunion of the DRC might be intriguing to some, its occurence at the next >Alt Bo Po conference would yield yet another thread like the one currently >being knotted here.
>I did not mean to imply that Boston's poetry scene, or its poets, were >racist simply by living in a place with Boston's reputation. The DRC & RS >came about out of lack, and to "break down the elitist aura surrounding >(Black) literary figures." Bring 'em "home", make 'em accessible. So >non-academic folks and academics could hear some poetry and meet the poets >without feeling unwelcome, undereducated, or too poor. Much like, in >varying respects, the Poetry Project, or the Unterberg/Y series, or Small >Press Traffic, or what Aaron Kiely put together, or any other such thing >going on in this world. Kiely created an event that made sense to him (and >who knows who declined for whatever reason to attend?), invited people he >knew, and will continue to expand and evolve as organizes future >conferences, as David Kirschenbaum said.

>What is intriguing to me, although it's great that he's open to suggestions, >is how he (or anyone) feels/thinks out the "alternative" in Boston (or >anywhere) and what kinds of writers/work will be encouraged by the >conferences, who will come and branch out, from the universities and from >the 'hoods. Here alliances between Kiely, Lansing and Corbett could yield >much, but I think Kiely's vision, and support of it, to be more important.
>I echo Linda Russo here, and what I think Kevin Killian was getting at.
>
>There's got to be something to get to. Where is that? Home can work just >as well as anywhere, if one is comfortable there, of one's own making or >ad/a/o/ption.
>Here I must point out that the quality of poetic life in Boston may simply >not sustain many for very long. (why people leave places) It can't be the >weather, which is just as bad if not worse in Buffalo. So, Jacques, back to >curriculum/influence, or something. Point(s) well taken. I wish Alt Bo Po >the best, count Aaron as a burgeoning force to be reckoned with, and hope to >see for myself some day what happens there.
>The ethnicity & innovation issue (together and separately) is about >inclusivity, but not ethnicity as alternative in and of itself. Here, the >DRC references do not serve well.
>Certainly there have been some changes since The New American Poetry, or >Gross & Quasha's Open Poetry, in which Black poets appeared together in the >back of the book, instead of within the categorical sections in which they >best fit, a move that at once showcased an impressive group of Black >experimentalists and relegated them to an unfortunate and historically >loaded space. But certain blindnesses still persist. Also too are the >refusals by mainstream of-color editors to include same experimentalists in >the publications they produce(d). This cannot be ignored.
>Also again, one must be seen to be part of the scene, be seen as part of the >scene and seen well once seen there, understood to fit. (Back to Dodie >Bellamy's persona post). It's easy to say that there are "no" or "few" >(blank) writers, but then, how does one know, in publishing, especially if >said writer doesn't dally with the usual signifiers in a recognizable way, >if at all, goes by a first initial and non-identifiably ethnically specific >last name, and/or if one doesn't show up on the scene? What is happening >outside of the seen, and outside of the scene, and what does that look/sound >like? How does physical presence come to be privileged over the arrival of >text in this regard? This said specifically regarding inclusion/exclusion >and writers of color, but also as a general query on the function of >"centers", in this context.

>
>
>
>*******
>Today we declare:
>First, they are living in a Nono form;
>Second, they are Nono lives;
>Third, they make us feel Nono;
>Fourth, they make us become Nono;
>Fifth, we Nono.
>Lan Ma
>"Manifesto of Nonoism"
>(Chendu, China, May 4, 1986)
>*******

↑ Index

193. Jeffrey Jullich

cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New York avant-garde"

Sat 14 Aug 1999

> Mark Prejsnar <[redacted]> 08/10/99 07:13pm >>> wrote:
>
> Jacques,
>
> I would be interested to hear what you feel connects the "homosexualization of the New York avant-garde" with cut-up technique....
> (beyond the fact that some gay guys did it....)

--Mark Prejsnar

Mark,

Although I don't know what Jacques' answer would be to that question, . . . I would like to agree with him about "the dangers of historical decontextualization", and that, to name as he did only Burroughs, Cage, and Ashbery, "homosexualization" is significant for the invention of cut-ups. Personally, I've already had a similar impression concerning the "homosexualization" of Warhol's, Johns', and Rauschenberg's appropriations, in relation to the genesis of Pop. (Not to forget: the theoretics of cut-ups' historical period were also hothouse to "Notes on Camp," whose own "homosexualization" treated sexuality and art style as self-evident equivalents.) Why I feel that way, though, may be thin ice to explain.

I take it from your (supportive) tone that you mean your question to be ~in defense~ of those "gay guys", . . . as though Jacques' telescoping of the period into one "-ization" were presumption, like talking "Velvet Mafia" or shortchanging heterosexualized contemporaries. But at the same time I'd like to submit that your "beyond the fact that some gay guys did it" may have a trivializing casualness about it, . . . as though there were always "gay guys" around, as it seems nowadays, and no less than three all at once independentally but coincidentally being instrumental in the creation of a new art form were at best some statistical fluke. As though the branding iron of idiosyncratic desire did not leave its stamp on art. Back to "historical decontextualization": those three were still of a generation which couldn't yet even be ~named~ as "gay", so their consensus in all engineering this same new art form into being is to the contrary rather remarkable. If a new genre were to emerge from a similarly exclusionary group of, say, Jews, ---or ~lesbians~ rather than "guys"! ¯ it might be more striking and appear instantly sensible for someone to begin one of those typical explorations of Jewish Mysticist antecedents, or such.

That said, let me get myself into more hot water by attempting to explain the parallel I find between the Warhol-Johns-Rauschenberg "homosexualization" and Pop, and between the Burroughs-Cage-Ashbery "homosexualization" and cut-ups. Proviso: I may be confusing psychology for ontology, and I'm almost definitely erring into what Jacques warns against as "analogical . . . significance." (However, given the metaphoric nature of "historical contextualization's" hidden similes themselves, some tropological thinking seems allowable.)

Here¢s the point:

The xerox-like image transfer methods (silk screening) of the Pop artists ~reproduced~ images without devising new ones; similarly, that graphic form has its literary equivalent in cut-ups, which also, if not per se reproducing, re-~arrange~ a pre-existing text without introducing new matter.

The (perhaps heretically naive) link my mind draws is---to ~biological~ reproduction, or procreation. (There is some slippage of terms here, as we use the word "reproduction" for both productive biological parturition and the ~non-productive~ "mechanical reproduction" we know since Benjamin.) To blurt it out---the figure of the homosexual is, in biological terms, non-productive (non-reproducing), and the "homosexualization" artwork of those cut-up/Pop progenitors was also non-productive ("reproduction"). If we suspend disbelief and try to re-imagine from the perspective of those '50's art climate, "original" creation would have been seen as an indispensable criterion of ~a man's~ art.

The necessary absurdity that I¢m figuring into this logic is the cliche that "an artwork is like a child to the artist"; and I am of course assuming for the sake of this stereotyped argumentation the fallacy of the ~childless~ homosexual, a fallacy which, however, in the case of these particular six artists named in the "homosexualization", happens to hold true (perhaps not accidentally).

Hence---I suppose another way of putting this (increasingly embarassing) notion is that: the homosexual does not ~add~ to the world. (Although an unpalatable axiom, and patently objectionable on the level of the real, it seems fair to assert in the spirit of dogma such as "Ce sexe qui n'est pas un" or other post-modern metaphysics.) In these terms, the "gay guys" behind cut-ups and Pop reproduction, despite their incontestable contribution, did not ~add~ to the world or the bulk of existing imagery/text in the same way that a work of "original" production takes up space. (~Europe~ had "really" not added anything to ~Beryl of the Biplane;~ it's commutative, not additive.)

As far as cut-ups' earlier larval stage of ~collage,~ I believe Wayne Koestenbaum has commented on the sublimated male-male "bonding" that Picasso and Braque acted out in its invention and manufacture (Koestenbaum, ~Double Talk: The Erotics of Male Literary Collaboration,~ which should perhaps be required reading in relation to "beyond the fact": same-sex literary collaboration may ~already~ be an a priori "homosexualization," regardless of the participants' actual sexual preference, according to Koestenbaum's thesis).

I hope this doesn't seem like Pound on Social Credit. I mean it as Queer Theory,---which is always speculative.

Jeffrey Jullich

↑ Index

194. J Kuszai

New Chapbooks by Cope and Farrell

Sat 14 Aug 1999

AUGUST 1999
2 New Chapbooks from Meow Press

Versiones Vertiges
by Stephen Cope

20p $6

from VERSIONES VERTIGES:

Salmon in the Breakers

October 1989, how pure and big a wound, the branches in their homelessness, the sea is still the sea, but we are dust or will be, the president is dead, the unequivocal seagulls, Scardenelli, you're not mad, the turning of the earth against the sun, once upon a time, a Cherokee, a whiskey sour, bluebird dead by now

as its always been a bluebird, this is love, in a photo, waning like an affect, in a dream, the cigarettes, it takes three to make a story, at Pleasure Point the surfers, & I will never die, out of season, 4 X 4, over & over again, but no-one wants a raga, 90210, the wave paced at its interval, take my hand, for I exist, finally between two poems rather than two people, three of us in a tree, multiplied by seven, a perfect fifth,

its resonance, you are a swallow, the flower is not the flower, this is my name,
& I am twice, & I will never die again, my life as always before belated love, this is grammar, the analogue is each, the outcropped cliff above the beach, three salmon in the breakers.

* * *

(Untitled Epic Poem on the History of Undustrialization by R. Buckminster Fuller, pp. 1-50) Grid
by Dan Farrell

with cover artwork by Phillip McCrum

24p $6

An excerpt:

Hand-wheeled public vehicles artifical hand
fashion anything invoked, the least of them
defy the least of them unwittingly managed,
the sole centrifuge of outranged socialism,
vituperance run government. Could scarecrow stabilizer, running stabilizer, and gravity stabilizer get a human individual, or train
in the use of it. Pleased indeed. Who began to support a vast radially spinning gravity scheme. Who indeed. Who appeared in lieu of the collective to spread out. Support world of wheeled integration, defy mixed grenades and anything national. He run. He fast. And direct them in the use of multiparty public vehicles. On the pot, there spinning quasi-Goebbels, on the pot, there running gravity

the human balancer. Unlike, unlike, unlike.
Super-single, and super world gyroscope are there demonstrated indeed there accustomed.

* * *

Meow Press publishes poetry chapbooks in limited editions for circulation among people who would like to read them. If you are interested in ordering, please contact Small Press Distribution: www.spdbooks.org

Note: exchange and review copies are available from the publisher and trade-ins are always welcome. Send in old chapbooks for upgrades. Queries to: [redacted] or http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/presses/meow/ or even PO Box 948568 San Diego California U.S.A. 92037

↑ Index

195. Jeffrey Jullich

Re: Village Voice POLYVERSE review -Reply

Sat 14 Aug 1999

> Douglas <[redacted]> 08/13/99 08:05am >>>
> Jeffrey:
>
> Thank you for the good analysis of a very wrong-headed review. I truly appreciate it.
>
> Douglas Messerli, Sun & Moon Press.

Thank ~you!~ . . . Sir.

I wanted to add, but decorum precludes:

The way he goes on and on about how the one "saving grace" of the book is all this supposed erotica he quotes ("'As I pinch my nipples,'" "Brown puts an erotic twist on this", "Beat erotics", ~"polymorphous~ relation to gender" [my emphasis], "That and sex", "orgy . . . is just getting warmed up"), Ziolkowski seems to be giving a single-mindedly ~horny~ reading of an apparently very ~literary~ book . . . as if it were all some sort of ~panty raid~ which Brown ("goofy in a troubadour-hippie-Fugs way", like straight from ~Dogpatch~) had lured him into. (Note the telltale ~"Fugs."~) I'd say, on that vein, --- and this is when he was in a ~good~ mood and having his jollies, --- that Z. got stuck in a (heterosexualized) he-reader/she-author wish fulfillment as to what the book might be, and read it entirely through the fact that the cover has the name of a female author on it. He seems to have misread the title as ~Per-verse,~ rather than ~Polyverse~ (as I think his entendre about "polymorphous" brings to the surface).

Jeffrey Jullich

↑ Index

196. Jordan Davis
Gimme Back Ma Grommets!
Sat 14 Aug 1999

HAT NUMBER TWO available now

Feel like a page torn out?
Find yourself eating the wrong thing?
Want to make your brain the pope's limo?

Try HAT NUMBER TWO! featuring stunning and comprehensible and incomprehensible work by

The brothers BERRIGAN
Tenant activist and incunabula afficionado DAN BOUCHARD
Appalachian polyversist LEE ANN BROWN
Alternaquasar angeleno FRANKLIN BRUNO
FRAN CARLEN
Vincent Price as "STEVE CARLL"
MICHAEL FRIEDMAN
DREW GARDNER
MERRILL GILFILLAN
Grommetkeeper MICHAEL GIZZI
ROBERT HALE, ex-Versus Troubled surfer LISA JARNOT
W. B. KECKLER
Heraclitean fragment JOHN LATTA
Cartesian prune LISA LUBASCH
BILL LUOMA, greengrocer
GILLIAN MCCAIN
STEVE MALMUDE
EILEEN MYLES
MAGGIE NELSON (w/ Ravi Shankar)
JENI OLIN (w/ Tom Brokaw) Infidel RON PADGETT
JULIE EZELLE PATTON
LAURIE PRICE
Feed columnist ALISSA QUART
ELENI SIKELIANOS

Smurf-trader ERIK SWEET
Goulash fantasist CAROL SZAMATOWICZ
CHRIS VITIELLO
GEOFFREY "GEOFFREY YOUNG" YOUNG and MAGGIE Z

US$7 single issue / US$12 two-issue subscription / US$1000 lifetime sub make checks payable to Jordan Davis and send to:

THE HAT
c/o EDGAR
331 E 9TH ST APT 1
NY NY 10003

or send an email with your address to: [redacted] available soon at SPD

ahoy!

↑ Index

197. Terry Diggory
Re: Jacataqua
Sat 14 Aug 1999

The authority I would trust on this question is Bryce Conrad, who claims that Jacataqua is Williams's invention. See Conrad, "Engendering History: The Sexual Structure of William Carlos Williams' IN THE AMERICAN GRAIN," TWENTIETH-CENTURY LITERATURE 35.3 (Fall 1989): 254-78. See p. 266 for the claim of invention and note 8 on pp. 275-76 for a discussion of possible sources. There may be more info in Conrad's book on IAG, which I don't have at my fingertips: Refiguring America : a study of William Carlos Williams' In the American grain (U of Illinois P, 1990).

Terry Diggory

At 07:59 PM 8/10/99 -0400, you wrote:
>I'm looking for information about "Jacataqua" -- essay by William Carlos >Williams in __In the American Grain__. The piece touches on Aaron Burr's >interaction during the Revolutionary War with the Abenaki Indians. WCW >describes the woman Jacataqua as an Abenaki "sachem" or chief, but I can >find no other historical reference to her -- anybody know if she existed?
>Thanks.
>Allison Cobb
>

>
>Get your FREE Email at http://mailcity.lycos.com
>Get your PERSONALIZED START PAGE at http://my.lycos.com

↑ Index

198. Alan Sondheim
L Th e
Sat 14 Aug 1999

==|=|

L

Years ago I taught a textbook, Art After Modernism, and man, I remember being so excited by it so that I couldn't see straight! I wanted to be in it as well! Now, I found the book, worn and second-hand at a bookstore, looking old, but the texts are as fresh and useful as ever. Immediately I started reflecting on the aging I'm going through on the way to death, how I have memories which are _these_ memories and no others, memories of _this_ unfolding world and no other. I would love my mind to play tricks on me. But there is something to be said always about the inertness of the real, in relation to possible worlds theory - that almost everything appears after the fact to be a natural kind, implicit in the makeup of memory and thinking, and the rest, all those untaken paths, paths known and unknown, are elsewise to such an extent that they do not affect the body, the way the _one_ path does, the _one path_ we are setting down our whole life. It is only later and latest that the path appears _as such,_ and there is a great sadness with its appearance; it's delicate, ephemer- al, in the midst of others which were lost. Yet it contains those natural kinds which are the natural kinds of memory, those tagged, interrelated, and taken for granted. Because of this, because of the inertness, it's clear that the natural kinds of, say, Kripke or those possible worlds, are processes of community formation, that they intend communalities and com- monalities of history. But I am aging and what do I know.

The same of course is true of philosophy; _these_ are the authors I have read, and no other, I might have taken those other courses, might have become an entirely different person, what if Wittgenstein's Tractatus wasn't available in Israel, on the shelf before me, in 1962? I read it naively; I had no idea what I was doing, but the resonance was there, and as a child I did pick up such a book and hold it close to me. Were I such a child. Were I such, but not; I become untouchable, repelled by my own history, all too fragile, gasping for air, caressing and cultivating the Thing which remains just adjacent to unequivocal death.

The path is mine alone; the walls, floor, and ceiling are mine. There are no doors; later, one knows as well that the windows are absent.

Th e

The path i s mine a lone; the wa lls, floor, and ce iling are mi ne. There are no doors; later, one kn ows as wel l that t he window s are ab sent.

The pa th i s mi ne a l one ; the wa ll s, flo or, an d c e i lin g a re mi ne. The re are no do ors ; lat er, on e k n o ws as wel l tha t t he wi ndo w s ar e a b sen t.

___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___ ___

The path i s min e a lone ; t he w a ll s, f loor , an d ce ili ng a re m i ne . Ther e ar e no doo rs; lat er, one kn o ws a s we l l that t h e wi ndow s a re a b sent .

____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____ ____

The pa th i s mi ne a l o ne ; the w a ll s, flo or , an d c e i li n g a re mi ne . The re ar e no do ors ; l at er, on e k n o ws as we l l tha t t h e wi ndo w s a r e a b sen t. ___ ___ __ _ _ __ ___ ___ __ _ _ __ ___ ___ __ _ _ __ ___ ___ __ _ _ __

Th e pa th i s m in e a lo ne ; t he w a ll s, f lo or , an d ce i li ng a re m i ne . Th er e ar e no d oo rs ; l at er , on e kn o ws a s we l l th at t h e wi nd ow s a re a b se nt . __

Th e pa th i s m i n e a l o ne ; t he w a ll s, f lo or , an d c e i li n g a re m i ne . Th e r e ar e no d o o rs ; l at er , on e k n o ws a s we l l th a t t h e wi nd o w s a r e a b se n t . __ _ _ __ __ _ _ __ __ _ _ __

200. derek beaulieu
new from housepress: basinski's "by"
Sun 15 Aug 1999

---

housepress is pleased to announce the release of our latest chapbook:
"by"
by Michael Basinski

a section of "by' was performed at the 2nd Annual Boston Experimental Poetry Conference, and housepress is very excited to be releasing the entire text of "by" in a limited edition handcrafted chapbook.

'by' is a 10 page poem of "fused/new words or words with visual mater are words of night... these are places between the various voices of/or places of the poem" -- "a state of non-being - -the non-being of finality -- as if the imagination halts" (from the author's afterword) published in an edition of 40 numbered copies. each copy also features linocut from and back cover illustrations by derek beaulieu printed on artstock and bound Japanese style. "by" is available for $6.00 (including postage) for more information, contact housepress at:

derek beaulieu 1339 19th ave nw
calgary alberta
canada t2m 1a5
[redacted]

↑ Index

201. Alan Sondheim
Ro
Sun 15 Aug 1999

--\

Ro

When in despair with fortune, Azure all alone,
I caught this morning, morning's minion, close to bone,
Where life is short, the art difficult and long,
Though the harbor, barred, is moaning a dark song:
These are the days which try men's souls, and women's,
Going never gentle into that good night, have summoned
The swollen bell - spilled all, told, but none for thee,
Whose hollowed body moans, not banging, whimpering.
How do I love you, I forgot those young and youthful ways
Good neighbors fenced - and all through such bleak days

I had a lean and hungry look - such men are dangerous
For babes in London, worlds in wildflowers; now Celia Shits, she's lovely as a tree, I swallow, comfort thee,
What comfort is in me? The times are changing, to be
The apologia: Marion among the lilies, weeping, Spread herself upon the hill, the sky came seeping.

↑ Index

202. David or Judy Ray

Re: Readings

Mon 16 Aug 1999

Dear Friends, I am trying to arrange some readings for the coming academic year, and would appreciate any help in doing so. Some of you teach at places where I have visited in the past, and it would be a pleasure to return, and I am also available for workshops, etc. My new book is DEMONS IN THE DINER, Ashland Poetry Press, Ashland, Ohio, 44805. Mailing address is 2033 E. 10 St., Tucson, Az., 85719, phone/fax [redacted]. Regards, David Ray

[redacted]
http://www.gci-net.com/~users/d/djray/

↑ Index

203. Poetics List Administration

2 New Chapbooks from Meow Press / Kuszai

Mon 16 Aug 1999

This came to the administrative account. Chris

--

From: "Joel Kuszai" <[redacted]>
Date: 8/13/99, 9:47 PM +0000

2 New Chapbooks from Meow Press

Versiones Vertiges
by Stephen Cope

20p $6

Salmon in the Breakers

October 1989, how pure and big a wound, the branches in their homelessness, the sea is still the sea, but we are dust or will be, the president is dead, the unequivocal seagulls, Scardenelli, you're not mad, the turning of the earth

against the sun, once upon a time, a Cherokee, a whiskey sour, bluebird dead by now as its always been a bluebird, this is love, in a photo, waning like an affect, in a dream, the cigarettes, it takes three to make a story, at Pleasure Point the surfers,

& I will never die, out of season, 4 X 4, over & over again, but no-one wants a raga, 90210, the wave paced at its interval, take my hand, for I exist, finally between two poems

rather than two people, three of us in a tree, multiplied by seven, a perfect fifth,
its resonance, you are a swallow, the flower is not the flower, this is my name,
& I am twice, & I will never die again, my life as always before belated love, this is grammar,
the analogue is each, the outcropped cliff above the beach, three salmon in the breakers.

from VERSIONES VERTIGES

* * *

(Untitled Epic Poem on the History of Undustrialization by R. Buckminster Fuller, pp. 1-50) Grid
by Dan Farrell

with cover artwork by Phillip McCrum

24p $6

An excerpt:

Hand-wheeled public vehicles artifical hand
fashion anything invoked, the least of them
defy the least of them unwittingly managed,
the sole centrifuge of outranged socialism,
vituperance run government. Could scarecrow
stabilizer, running stabilizer, and gravity
stabilizer get a human individual, or train
in the use of it. Pleased indeed. Who began to support a vast radially spinning gravity scheme. Who indeed. Who appeared in lieu of the collective to spread out. Support world
of wheeled integration, defy mixed grenades

and anything national. He run. He fast. And direct them in the use of multiparty public vehicles. On the pot, there spinning quasi-Goebbels, on the pot, there running gravity
the human balancer. Unlike, unlike, unlike.
Super-single, and super world gyroscope are
there demonstrated indeed there accustomed.

* * *

Meow Press publishes poetry chapbooks in limited editions for circulation among people would like to read them. If you are interested in ordering, please contact Small Press Distribution: www.spdbooks.org

Note: exchange and review copies are available from the publisher and trade-ins are always welcome. Send in old chapbooks for upgrades. Queries to: [redacted] or http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/presses/meow/ or even PO Box 948568 San Diego California U.S.A. 92037

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

204. Poetics List Administration

job listing / Kevin Magee

Mon 16 Aug 1999

Had to reformat this message. Chris

--

From: <Kevin Magee> [redacted]
Date: 8/14/99, 8:38 AM -0400

Supplement to MLK Job List -- August 14, 1999
The following job is extremely time sensitive:
Academy of Court Reporting, Cleveland, Ohio.
http://www.netset.com/~academy/

Come celebrate the poetics of working class politics at the millenium in the town that's famous as the birthplace of Albert Ayler and the early factory poems of Hart Crane--and, of course, the Program in Adult Education at the Academy of Court Reporting, which is pleased to announce and invite applications for an English Teacher to teach grammar, composition, vocabulary, tech-dental terminology, legal terminology, law office management, transcript English, business writing, critical thinking, geography and general job counseling in a privately owned paralegal and court reporting program beginning at the end of September, 1999. ACR, a growing multi-campus business college located in the same downtown Cleveland Rockefeller Building where John D. built his Oil Empire and where Abraham Lincoln once spent the night, sits a few blocks from the same streets (reminiscent of the Old South) that will host a police-escorted white supremacy rally on August 21, 1-3 p.m. August 13 Plain Dealer: "Journalists who enter the areas designated for protestors and sympathizers will not be allowed to bring any writing utensils, notepads, tape recorders of cameras, [Mayor] White said." A poet of arguable reputation with insignificant small press book publication and non-documented teaching assistantships is being sought for this part-time position. Typically the teaching load for the English Teacher is five to seven classes per quarter. The academic year consists of four quarters, with one week off in between (without pay). Salary is commensurate with the non-union service sector industry. The English Teacher receives $11.25 per hour for each hour spent in the class room. On the basis of an average courseload of six classes at four hours instruction per week, the English Teacher may expect to receive an typical weekly salary of $250-$300 (without benefits). The English Teacher may expect to be responsible for 60 to 100 students per quarter. ACR-Cleveland currently enrolls about 300 undergraduates in paralegal and court reporting studies. There is an open admissions policy, and the English program has no support from anyone, anywhere. The faculty in the English Program was for a short while comprised of two poets (Richard Wagle and Kevin Magee). "Mr. Wagle" left in at the end of March. His replacement, a retired high school teacher, recently told a student to her face and in front of her classmates that "ask" pronounced "axe" is ignorant. Many students were justifiably hurt, and upset. "Mr. Magee" is leaving in mid-September. ACR-Cleveland is home to a campus literary magazine which keeps changing its name, sample sound-bites from which include Lori El-Amin's "his sexy hard hazel eyes and his loving thug passion" (written to a boyfriend killed in a bar brawl in response to the routine composition topic, 'What's the worst thing that happened to you this week') and the self-declared 'Wild Irish Rose,' Missy Dowling's "Even this some day will pass/But not before you kick some ass" (written to a boyfriend in prison). About 95% of ACR students, most of whom come from east of East 1999, are single mothers balancing children, minimum wage part-time jobs, and a strict attendance policy. Review of applications continues until the first person responds. Send cover letter and resume (no letters of recommendation are required) to: Education Director, Academy of Court Reporting/Cleveland Campus, Cleveland, Ohio. Invisible faculty wives and Minority candidates strongly encouraged to apply.

Anna Julia Cooper
i.e., What a Falling Off There Was:
Who remembers that Oberlin College was one of the half dozen colleges for Black Women mentioned by Ms. Cooper in her radical reconstruction "Zhenotdel" writings before the White Terror unleashed Jim Crow and moved masses of laborers into the northern mills?

Barbara Evans Clements:
"Viewed from another angle, it was also one of the most utopian, most egalitarian, most hopeful ventures of the 1920s. The Zhenotdel was hundreds of young women, some still teenagers, walking barefoot from village to village in the summers, carrying copies of "Krestianka" to read aloud to peasants in the evenings. It was factory workers proudly opening the day care centers they had scrounged and saved for.
It was communes and cooperatives, lunchrooms and laundries, all organized and run by women. That is, the Zhenotdel . . .
was also, like so much else in the 1920s, a project animated by a magical sense of the limitless possibilities of a revolutionary new world."

↑ Index

205. Keith Tuma
The Gig 3 (fwd)
Mon 16 Aug 1999

> Apologies in advance for cross-posting.... Contributors should see copies in about a week's time:
>
> * * *
>
> T H E G I G #3
>
> is now out, rounding off the first year. (Not bad, I tell myself: that's an issue more than _Blast_ reached, for instance.) Inside is poetry by Bill Griffiths, Susan Clark, Peter Hughes, Marjorie Welish, cris cheek, Bruce Andrews, Thomas A Clark, Randolph Healy, & Catriona Strang; an extract from Nathaniel Mackey's forthcoming novel _Atet A.D._; and an essay on JH Prynne's "On the Matter of Thermal Packing" by Vance Maverick; plus reviews by Pete Smith & myself.
>
> Issue 4/5 (November '99-March '00) will be a double-issue devoted to criticism on the work of the British poet Peter Riley. It will have essays by Andrew Crozier, Peter Middleton, James Keery, Peter Larkin, Tony Baker, Mark Morrisson, John Hall & many others; a new interview, conducted by Keith Tuma; new work of Peter Riley's; new translations by Lorand Gaspar; and a select bibliography of his poetry and prose. (I'll be making a separate posting about this soon, inviting advance subscriptions & donations: both are crucial to this project's success!)

* * *

Subscriptions:
$6 (Canadian) for a single issue
$15 Cdn for a subscription (3 issues)
[Note: subscriptions beginning with #2 cost $21, reflecting the double-issue #4/5] $10 Cdn / issue for institutional copies.
[Note: #4/5 will be $20 for institutional copies]

Prices include post within Canada; for the U.S., add $0.50 Cdn per issue; for the U.K., add $1.00 per issue. Cheques and money orders should be made out to "Nate Dorward". Please inquire as to foreign currency exchange if not paying in Canadian dollars.

Write to: Nate Dorward, 109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada (email: [redacted]).

The Gig is also available from Peter Riley, at 27 Sturton St., Cambridge, CB1 2QG (fax: 01223 576422; email: [redacted]).

* * *

The Gig is devoted to new work from the US, Canada, UK & Ireland, with an especial slant towards the last two. No unsolicited submissions, please. Back-issues of issues #1 and #2 are still available:

#1: Deanna Ferguson, Alan Halsey, Lisa Jarnot, Trevor Joyce, Peter Riley, Maurice Scully, Pete Smith, John Wilkinson; Wilkinson on John Wieners and schizophrenia.

#2: Clark Coolidge, Allen Fisher, RF Langley, Tony Lopez, Peter Manson, Drew Milne, Erin Moure, Gavin Selerie, Robert Sheppard, Lissa Wolsak; Robin Purves on JH Prynne's _Not-You_ and its critical reception.

* * *

Available soon from The Gig: Allen Fisher's _The Topological Shovel_, a set of four essays written at the time that Fisher was commencing _Gravity as a > consequence of shape_, his influential poetry project of the 1980s and '90s.

>
> * * *
>
> ...and that's it: ad break's over.
>
> Nate Dorward
> [redacted]
> 109 Hounslow Ave., Willowdale, ON, M2N 2B1, Canada
> ph: [redacted]

↑ Index

206. Mark Wallace
review of Lee Ann Brown's Polyverse
Mon 16 Aug 1999

For those who want an antidote to the recent Thad Ziolkowski botched review of Lee Ann Brown's POLYVERSE, I hope you'll read my review of the same book that's forthcoming in the October issue of Poetry Project Newsletter. I wish it was available now, but it will be shortly.

Along with Jeffrey Jullich, I agree that Thad's sense that Lee Ann "fails to synthesize" the various traditions that she's working with misses the mark rather badly, that in fact the idea of "synthesis" is in many ways precisely what the book is NOT about. Lee Ann's goal seems to me neither to repeat certain poetic traditions, nor to synthesize their differences, but to destabilize these various traditions, both from within their conditions by rewriting their implications, and by putting them beside each other in a way that calls the notion of maintaining singular poetic traditions into question. It's not about synthesizing, but about "being next to," not about a new singularity but allowing disruptive multiple approaches to come into dialogue with each other in a way that's purposely frustrating and liberating.

Mark Wallace

/----------\ |
| | [redacted] | | GWU:
| | http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw | | EPC:
| | http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace | |
_____|

↑ Index

207. Mark Weiss

Re: review of Lee Ann Brown's Polyverse

Mon 16 Aug 1999

I've always found Lee Ann's poetry charming, and I look forward to reading her book, but I think this handwringing over a wrongheaded review is a little strange, and more a testimony to how much a lot of us like Lee Ann than anything else. Surely I'm not the only list member who's been reviewed by clueless reviewers--sometimes they even praise facets of the work that are their own invention, which, frankly, doesn't feel a lot better than negative comment. Isn't this the risk we take when we go public? Isn't this especially true if we write in innovative ways?

It is a shame that the review appeared in such a public venue. Complaining about it here is preaching to the choir: a letter to the editor might be more useful.

At 11:34 AM 8/16/99 -0400, you wrote:
> For those who want an antidote to the recent Thad Ziolkowski >botched review of Lee Ann Brown's POLYVERSE, I hope you'll read my review >of the same book that's forthcoming in the October issue of Poetry Project >Newsletter. I wish it was available now, but it will be shortly.
>
> Along with Jeffrey Jullich, I agree that Thad's sense that Lee Ann >"fails to synthesize" the various traditions that she's working with >misses the mark rather badly, that in fact the idea of "synthesis" is in >many ways precisely what the book is NOT about. Lee Ann's goal seems to me >neither to repeat certain poetic traditions, nor to synthesize their >differences, but to destabilize these various traditions, both from within >their conditions by rewriting their implications, and by putting them >beside each other in a way that calls the notion of maintaining singular >poetic traditions into question. It's not about synthesizing, but about >"being next to," not about a new singularity but allowing >disruptive multiple approaches to come into dialogue with each other in a >way that's purposely frustrating and liberating.
>
> Mark Wallace
>
>
>/----------
--\
>|
  |
>| [redacted]

```
  |
>|      GWU:
  |
>|       http://gwis2.circ.gwu.edu/~mdw
  |
>|      EPC:
  |
>|       http://writing.upenn.edu/epc/authors/wallace
  |
>|_____________________________________________________________________
__|
>
>
```

↑ Index

208. Dodie Bellamy

book search-help!

Mon 16 Aug 1999

Hi, does anyone have an extra copy or know where I can get one of Janet Altman's Epistolarity: Approaches to a Form. It appears to be one of those in-between print and out-of-print books, so it's not available anywhere at the moment.

Thanks.

Dodie

↑ Index

209. David Buuck

Artists in Conversation/Kelsey St Event

Mon 16 Aug 1999

For those of you in the Bay Area, here's an event I'll be moderating this Thursday night at 7.

Artists in Collaboration/Collaborative Art:
An Evening with Kiki Smith, Richard Tuttle, and Mei-mei Berssenbrugge

Yerba Buena Center for the Arts

In celebration of the 25th anniversary of Kelsey St. Press, and in conjunction with the Trinh T. Minh-ha & Lynn Marie Kirby collaboration "Nothing But Ways" at Yerba Buena Center for the Arts, Art in Conversation hosts artists Kiki

Smith and Richard Tuttle, along with poet Mei-mei Berssenbrugge, to discuss collaborations between writers and visual artists.

curated by Natasha Boas moderated by David Buuck special thanks to Rena Rosenwasser and Kelsey St. Press

7 pm : $3/$5
hosted in the Screening Room
Yerba Buena Center for the Arts
701 Mission St @ 3rd SF 415-978-ARTS
www.YerbaBuenaArts.org

↑ Index

210. Lynn Miller
Speculative philosophy=Secular theology
Mon 16 Aug 1999

E Q U A L S I G N S

[KM]: Dear footstep, dear echo, there is a forward movement still, each word a precedent for another's name. I shift into another's past. "I sentence you." What did it mean to fall flat? The French Workers often raised their voices on the Blvd. de Minima and along the tiny alleys of the Ile St. Louis. Hands raised at the end of questions, as though all were in question.

[LM]: I question that. Pressure of the assumed name at your instep. It made you want to look out the window, like voices rising at the end of each assertion. Yours was a particular passion I did not often encounter in the poetry of the late 20th century. That urgency we call Romantic. A vast field of scarlet poppies in the south of France.

[KM]: But you yourself have not escaped the express provocation, nor spared yourself what Goethe believed the study of languages should evoke: strong emotions. Forms of fanatacism and genius among the tyranny of everyday life conceived in a binge. A powerful social movement is expected for which contemporary philosophy cannot provide a method.

[LM]: But he who loves verbal arabesques above all fails to consider himself either rational or real. Death only returns to is proportion and horizon, a biological horizon, when the meaning of life becomes the experience of life in the collective, our own individual instance experienced as a contribution to the future, to generation in its strongest (feminine/reproductive) sense.

[KM]: That sounds a lot like Leopardi, the only real woman among the man-romantics. Shurin's happiness--the hope of health--as read against Philosophy's refusal to acknowledge the priority biology has in the demand for happiness, in the full, firm sense the word had in the eighteenth century. The crisis of disease situated in Nature. "My mind diseased, disease my luckless framework." This experience puts him in a woman's skin, who arrives before her now without the language of amorous discourse.

[LM]: Yes, the experience of the body bound to its biology. Marxism in its entirety is only a condition for a life in freedom, life in happiness, life in possible fulfillment, life with content. Or: "Only when all the guests have sat down at the table will the Messiah come." (Bloch). Redeeming or rectifying; rectification, a Cuban term. Ta grande face de Meduse (toi qui brille dans l'éclair et dans l'émeute). Or: "A map of the world that does not include Socialism is not worth reading." (Oscar Wilde).

[KM]: Dear Buffalo Poetics List, please let me tell you a little something about the vinyl plastic covering on your refrigerator racks, unless you have plain metal ones, like I do. The vinyl arrives in the form of a liquid gas, extremely hazardous, called Vinyl Liquid Chloride, in railroad tank cars or by bulk truck. The gas is siphoned through the factory--called the Poly Building--and at least in Illinois the end product is a 50lb.bag of powdered resin that feels like cement to lift up, and Tim, the operator I worked with there, agreed with me on that, that there's no heavier bag in the world to lift than a bag of cement. I was spending a light day in the Lab, and a guy was walking me through a simulated Fusion Test, the end result of which is a Touch Test, where a little square of plastic you put the end of your fingers to, and you can feel the difference, between what is a good run of Plastic or Vinyl and what is a bad one, so that you learn to understand all the work that goes into making plastic products like the covering of the metal frames on the racks inside your refrigerator, which, if you have ever thought about it, do not arrive from nowhere, but bear their cost, and this is the cost: Bill, the first guy I worked with in the morning, could hardly get his cup of coffee to his mouth, his hands were shaking that bad, and at first I thought he was scared of me (that was my job, to inspire fear in the workers, and invoke the specter of European manufacturing), but I came to learn that the Lab is where they send the older guys who have begun to show symptoms of chemical poisoning (it attacks your nerves), so that his badly, and I mean severely, shaking hands were the product of his giving his life to GEON, to the plant in Henry, Illinois, and the last few years of his life would be spent in the Lab, a cush job, his hands shaking violently trying to raise a cup of coffee to his mouth. The next time you open your refrigerator, think of the human cost involved in preserving your food. I have only been trying to tell you how I was thrown open to the world.

[LM]: How, exactly, did your "situation" come about? Writers throw up their hands and apologize for the racial attitudes of white workers then and now, or, more recently, indict the working class for a thoroughgoing racism. Jameson's point about the dialectical interrelatedness, in the physical space and cultural institutions where it was produced, that disarticulations of hegemony accompany periods of extreme capitalist crisis, and growing social fissures, and accents of class and race become confused. I believe the reality was a good deal more contradictory than the views recorded in the Police Gazette, perhaps, even, the word you left behind you to escape at all, and slam the door on an State Education Compound not far from where one of the guys at the break table knew where Hudson, South Dakota was, a town of about 250 people, on the Iowa border, separated by the Sioux River, worthy of the south of France in all its peasant simplicity and beauty, the village where my mother's people come from, the Millers, changed from Mueller at Ellis Island in 1914, and a 50 year old worker in a petrochemical plant in Henry, Illinois knew exactly where that village was, well, maybe that word you left behind you was less an articulation of difference than a speculation about it, white and black, twin responses sandwiched between or even substituting one for the other, using a name which unsettled the stable outlines of both. They were in any case understood to inhabit the bottom. Yet they were of no slight lineage, to use the familiar trope of a lowly mechanic's inheritance, Jacksonian social relations all around, and while it can scarcely be said that Kevin Magee always found himself on the better side of the problem, he at least has the virtue of having brought the problem to the surface.

↑ Index

211. Brent Cunningham from the SPD vault
Mon 16 Aug 1999

This list may have gotten too large for new folks to introduce themselves at any length, but even so I'd like to make everyone aware that I'm a good source for questions regarding SPD and SPD titles, both of which come up with some frequency on this list.

Currently I'm working as their/our Sales Manager (full identity association has yet to take complete hold on me), and I've developed the habit of wandering through the stacks during breaks. If it seems relevant, I plan to pass on some of my findings.

i.e. speaking of Jonas, I noticed that we still have seven copies of Steven Jonas's THREE POEMS (1989, Rose) at their original price of five dollars. Many used books stores are already selling THREE POEMS as rare. I've only gotten through the first poem, but it's an excellent piece of work. So, really, there are only six copies remaining.

Brent Cunningham

↑ Index

212. Max Winter
Re: review of Lee Ann Brown's Polyverse
Mon 16 Aug 1999

Although I am rarely tempted to weigh in here, because I'm never entirely sure where "in" is, I will attempt to do such weighing, if only to agree with this reaction, and to suggest that reviews are only as influential as their readers make them. They are, by definition, works of opinion--and in so being, are always slightly "wrongheaded." That's one of a reviewer's highest privileges, I would say, although I realize it's not much of a privilege. (Compared to, say, the ability to fly, or eternal youth, or even a bag of magic rhizomes.) (None of which most reviewers should ever hope for.) I would also suggest that most of the people who would be Lee Ann Brown's best readers are not the sort who would read the Village Voice, or any other newspaper, without a certain amount of skepticism. One would hope they would read the book for themselves.

Enough of my naive jawing.

--- Mark Weiss <[redacted]> wrote:
> I've always found Lee Ann's poetry charming, and I > look forward to reading > her book, but I think this handwringing over a > wrongheaded review is a > little strange, and more a testimony to how much a > lot of us like Lee Ann > than anything else. Surely I'm not the only list > member who's been reviewed > by clueless reviewers--sometimes they even praise > facets of the work that > are their own invention, which, frankly, doesn't > feel a lot better than > negative comment. Isn't this the risk we take when > we go public? Isn't this > especially true if we write in innovative ways?
>
> It is a shame that the review appeared in such a > public venue. Complaining > about it here is preaching to the choir: a letter to > the editor might be > more useful.

>

_____
Do You Yahoo!?
Get your free @yahoo.com address at http://mail.yahoo.com

↑ Index

213. Billy Little
Re: International festival of Postmodern Piracy
Tue 17 Aug 1999

---

did i miss the reports from this, did it happen, are there tapes, a website?

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

214. Billy Little
Re: Ethnicity and the BoPoFest
Tue 17 Aug 1999

Boston, indeed, was high tension racist when i lived there, a solitary black risked linching attempting to get a drink in a southey bar and none but the foolhardiest irishman found themselves on the streets of dorchester after dark. But I found L.A. pretty racist especially the police tho the mayor, the former chief of police was black, the cops black and white, never missed an opportunity to put a black male up against the car if he was walking with a white woman, even when they walked with their child, it was sick making. The only thing out of the ordinary about Rodney King was they didn't arrest him for assaulting sixteen officers. Thousands of Bufords out there in the valley looking for a scapegoat for their misery they'd rather share their suffering than your possibility. American shoots bursting from and reproducing in the bedrock of hatred, the cornerstone, the engine of the American colonial success. racism isn't unknown in Canada, but it seems more opportunistic less psychotic if they might eat some of the fish youwant to sell you'll hate them for keeping you from being as rich as you deserve.

forbidden plateau fallen body dojo
4 song st.
nowhere, b.c. V0R1Z0
canadaddy
[redacted]
zonko

↑ Index

215. David Kirschenbaum
"Anselm Berrigan is Flying to France"
Tue 17 Aug 1999

Anselm Berrigan is Flying to France

Anselm's voice on my machine says he is flying to France to visit his mom and stepdad.

Former New York Yankee catcher Thurman Munson died on this day 20 years ago, practicing takeoffs and landings in his single-engine Cessna.

I machine wish Anselm safe flight, hang up phone
and Grandma Minnie spray-spit "Poi-poi-poi."

_____
Be Good,
David

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

216. Jack Ruttan
Fw: NORTH AMERICAN LAUNCHES OF BUDAVOX: POEMS 1990-1999 BY TODD SWIFT
Tue 17 Aug 1999

Subject:Fw: NORTH AMERICAN LAUNCHES OF BUDAVOX: POEMS 1990-1999 BY TODD SWIFT
Date: Mon, 16 Aug 1999 19:29:12 +0200
From: "Todd Swift" <[redacted]>
To: "Todd Swift" <[redacted]>

The long-awaited North American launch(es) of the first major collection of poems - Budavox: poems 1990-1999 - from exiled Canadian writer/impresario Todd Swift ...

SEPTEMBER 27TH, 1999
MONDAY, 7:00 PM
INCOMMUNICADO PRESS/ BOOKSTORE
107 Norfolk Street, New York
(between Delancey & Rivington)

SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1999
THURSDAY, 8:30 PM
BLIZZART'S
Montreal, Canada

Followed by a book tour with readings in Toronto, Kingston and Ottawa - between October 1st and October 7th (dates and venues to be announced).

For more information, contact Todd Swift in Budapest at Tel: [redacted] or Email [redacted]

::

What poets are saying about Swift's Budavox :

Nicole Blackman (poet/performer, author of Blood Sugar):"Luminous, unexpected, lovely and unsettling, the images resonate long after the poems have ended."

Regie Cabico (NY performance poet, co-editor Poetry Nation):"Swift's eerie verse transforms suspicion to the lyrical. Kevin Spacey shakes hands with Catullus, savage and gentlemanly. He concocts Eros and murder in the sharp prisms of his imagination. The results: a deliciously carnivorous and ironic language."

Derek Mahon (Irish poet, author of The Yellow Book): "Swift is a voice for our times."

George Szirtes (British poet, author of Selected Poems, Oxford University Press, 1996) : "Swift's poems move between the familiar and exotic, from the meditative through the speculative. His poetic language too is on the move, from the crisp tentativeness of Elizabeth Bishop to the outer suburbs of Wallace Stevens and even, here and there, Ginsberg. The intimate is always threatened: reality is challenged by its myths. These poems show a young man exploring the world before him with intelligence, grace, even a certain bravado. They make a very auspicious first collection."

Adeena Karasick (poet/performer, author of Genrecide, Talon Books, 1996): "An intensely lyrical, speculative, contemplative interrogation of all that is twisted, wounded, awe-filled and desperate... writing that is dark, swollen and balanced with great beauty."

Robert Priest (poet/performer, author of Resurrection in the Cartoon, ECW Press, 1997): "Complex, mysterious triggering poems often full of dark currents and understated hostilities that ruffle the feathers and unsettle - as good poetry should." ::::::

217. Poetics List Administration
The National Autonomous University of Mexico strike
Tue 17 Aug 1999

The following article is from this morning's NPR <www.npr.org>, but I've been unable to find much information in U.S. papers. A summary of the strike, which began on 20 April in response to the privatization of the university - and accompanying increase in tuition from two cents to $150 per year, in a country where minimum wage is approx. $2.50 US/day - is available at <http://www.geocities.com/CapitolHill/3843/UNAM.htm>. Other citations would be much appreciated.

Chris

--

Mexican School Strike

Classes at Mexico's largest university were supposed to start this week, but hundreds of thousands of striking students boycotted the return to class. The National Autonomous University of Mexico remains closed for a fourth month, and university officials say the semester has been indefinitely suspended. It appears that the strike, which was sparked by tuition increases, has broadened into a struggle over the future of Mexico and a protest of Mexico's embrace of the global free market economy.

from <http://www.npr.org/news/world/>
[RealAudio broadcast available at URL]

↑ Index

218. Gwyn McVay
Gwyn McVay Is Taking The Metro
Tue 17 Aug 1999

Gwyn McVay Is Taking The Metro

I rock back on my butt bones and know that in about two hours
I will be taking the DC Metro.

On this day many years ago talk-poet Frank O'Hara was probably taking the Noo Yawk subway, and writing about it.

I silent wish myself sharp elbows and rapid flight to the dreary burbs and this poem and a buck will get me there.

↑ Index

219. Aldon Nielsen screening noir
Tue 17 Aug 1999

The new issue of SCREENING NOIR is on-lone:

http://humanitas.ucsb.edu/~everett/news_letter/vol2iss23/intro.html

↑ Index

220. John Tranter
Diego Rivera mural rescussitated
Tue 17 Aug 1999

The list may find this of interest.
The story is borrowed from Wired Magazine's news page, at

http://www.wired.com/news/

==========
= New Media Boosts an Old Mural by Kendra Mayfield 3:00 a.m. 17.Aug.99.PDT SAN FRANCISCO -- When Mexico's master artist Diego Rivera created the mural Pan American Unity for the 1940 World's Fair, he fused images of art and technology to unite the peoples of the United States, Canada, and Mexico. World War II interrupted plans for a library to display the mural. It remained hidden until Rivera's death in 1957, when it was transported to the San Francisco City College theater, where it remains today -- widely unknown to the public.

See also: 'Web Seance' Summons Art

A new multimedia project hopes to revive Rivera's ideas in the digital and virtual realm. An interactive kiosk and Web site, launches 18 August at City College. They will attempt to restore the mural to public prominence, even as it returns to Rivera's theme of blending art and technology. "The mural represents a powerful historical statement of what has gone on in this century," said Julia Bergman, City College archivist. The multimedia project will expose the public to one of Rivera's most significant and unrecognized masterpieces, she said, "a work of art that is so universal for so many people." Blending images of Mexican art and North American technology and innovation, Rivera's mural examines the convergence of ancient techniques and contemporary art. Ancient Mayan figures are juxtaposed with inventors from the Industrial Revolution like Thomas Edison and Henry Ford. Revolutionary South American heroes join North American political leaders to fight Nazism and preserve peace by extending the arts. In the center of the mural, a Canadian sculpting with an ax symbolizes the metamorphosis between old art forms and new techniques. "My mural ... is about the marriage of the artistic expression of the North and of the South on this continent," said Rivera in a 1940 interview. The artist envisioned "... this blending of the art of the Indian, the Mexican, the Eskimo, with the kind of urge which makes the machine." The current project revives Rivera's ideas of combining old ways of thinking in a modern context, using new, interactive methods to present the fresco to the public. The kiosk exhibit reflects the mural, with a wood and steel nautilus shell combining modern and ancient materials. Using a touch-screen, users can view the imagery of the 22-by-70 foot mural, its fresco technique, and its checkered history. Users can virtually enter the Aztec god figure of Quetzalcoatl and end up in a control room, where they can navigate within the mural. Viewers can zoom in on images to examine intricate brushstrokes and words hidden within the upper panels of the fresco. Sketches and drawings of Aztec figures morph from stone statues to polished images. The kiosk will feature film clips, which Rivera believed represented the perfect blending of art and technology. Viewers can tour the mural, listening to Rivera's voice while watching clips of some of the people who shaped the artist's life. "The motion picture is the ultimate development of mural painting," said Rivera in a 1940 interview, "and is the most original contribution to art made by North American culture." The portable kiosk will travel to schools and museums in the United States and Mexico as an experiment in distance-learning. With universal themes of diversity and multiculturalism that still resonate today, the mural offers an educational tool for teachers wanting to expose students to the art of mural-making and the history surrounding the mural. The exhibit may offer up to 40 courses, with CDs for teachers to distribute in computer labs. Educators may use Rivera's ideas to teach courses promoting cultural identity. Creative director Richard Rodrigues wants to create a distance-learning project in which a student in Mexico can interact with a student in California, or view restoration of the mural in real time through an onsite view cam. He hopes that learning about the mural's history will make kids think twice about defacing public buildings with graffiti. The mural kiosk is unique, because similar projects tend to cover many works of art. This one offers viewers a way to "look at a piece of art like no one has before," said Rodrigues. As the exhibit travels from place to place, students may add their own graphic panels to the mural by scanning images that will be added to the exhibit. Individual artists can generate ideas and images from the mural, becoming mural-makers themselves.

==========
from John Tranter, editor, Jacket magazine

↑ Index

221. Lynn Miller
from a Talk on Class
Wed 18 Aug 1999

SHOWING WHERE SLAVERY'S SHADOWS ALSO FALL (Part One).

3/27[95]

Sunrise. Upper West Side. Manhattan.

Aife's story of the servant's handwriting on the other side of the poet's manuscript --Maher/Dickinson--allegorized.

That by the time Steve Abbott writes the Conversations and dedicates them to Spicer--how fraught is this dedication?

The way in which Spicer's "infinitely small vocabulary" and grammar/syntax control mechanisms--that force of repression is so acute in his text--that the social/historical Real and his sexuality both enter in eruption (not the sexuality--the sexuality is key--its what opens up the Dictation--and the Poetics of Dictation and call to the Imaginary is key to read what was happening in the post-war years, what Blaser/Spicer/Duncan were on to. (Read the Olson/Creeley correspondence against this).

3/28[95]

In flight, across the continent. Layers/Stages/Phases of RELEASE. Repression. On a cultural field. Closure. What erupts. What comes through--into the open [in distorted form].

1. "O women women look how my words flow out"--The eruption of subjectivity, oceanic imaginary. The ghost of Dickinson in the ACTS Spicer issue, where is she? Killian's "Attention: Harlot" or in the French, Guglielmi's French? Un trou dans l'imagination. Invagination. Anal inscription.

2. Queering. Perversions of control. Determined functions. Graphic exposure. What is unsexed ("unfucking"). The Imaginary. The Utopian. The Land of Oz. "Somewhere over the Rainbow."

3. Postcolonial. Translation. The cultural/historical. The call to the cultural/historical conditions of social intercourse. The metaphor of opening up to infection from foreign agents/tongues. Dream of the possibility of putting an end to Western/Eastern-Northern/Southern borders. Imminent degeneration of the English language--Dante's Latin--"Immigration Song." "The Lemon Song."

I remember Led Zeppelin I remember somewhere back there in the University reading a book by a Russian cultural critic whose last name started with a K and the first names that pop up are Kropotkin and Kruschev--bizarre substitutions--and then Kolokethias--though that one's Greek, and the name of the woman I spoke with on the phone calling from Iowa to San Francisco for information about the Jack Spicer conference--all I remember from that conversation now was that she said "O, wow,"--something I associated with California, the idea of California--Sherman Paul having claimed in a class that Gary Snyder was the first one to put "Wow" in a poem--but it wasn't in Sherman Paul's class that I was reading a book with a Moscow imprint--it was in the seminar of a professor who was denied tenure--(once on a panel about Art & Politics in the Weimar period he prefaced--recontextualized--his remarks by drawing attention to the U.S. bombing raid over Libya the day or two before--the raid that killed Khadafy's child--and this child showed up again when I was in Nicaragua--there was a free daycare center for factory workers named after her--I must have been struck enough by that--since I took a photograph of a child's painting that was on the wall of a hospital and rehab center for amputees--the drawing of a child standing on one leg (Spicer's seagull--my displacement of Spicer's seagull--and, yes, Ron, it's hard to think of anything less pure than a seagull's belly--except for a child's mind--the perversity of children--polymorphous perverse--and receivers of all casualties (I almost wrote casualties)--only a child in their intense inhabitation of the Imaginary could return the reality of war in a perfect image--a child looking like all the world like a crippled seagull--because it is unnatural to have your arms or legs blown off--whether you are 7 or 37 or 77--man woman or child--relative terms, all of them--I was thinking about Moscow--another relative term. This Russian cultural critic was drawing attention to the crippled talent of Jimmy Page--the division of labor in the making of art--that the Rock Star phenomenon has tragic dimensions--you become an icon--removed from both the club scene and the black music you stole--you get removed from your class--the absolute, fundamental condition for every artist in America from the working class no matter what art you make--high or low--and Jack Spicer wrote a high art that never forgot the low--and now that he's released his first CD and a Mystery Novel it's going to be interesting to see whether the terms of this new stage in his popularity will depend on bracketing out the "class" thing. There was this thing at the 1986 conference--something that carried into Bruce Boone's comment, his statement in the ACTS issue, "the little of Jack Spicer that remains"--the dislocation or dislodging that conference represented from the MANROOT context--that the body of work signed Jack Spicer was being opened up to a larger reading/audience and what happens when that happens--and what was happening then?--not in the conference, per se, but outside? [Memory of Boone's comment about the disappearance of a radical gay community (no, I don't think there was any lesbian presence at that conference--the panelists were all male as were the contributors to the Spicer ACTS), something about co-optation--it was an offhand remark, but it had an economic content--]. What was in the MANROOT that gets mutated--softened--in the Spicer ACTS? "Three Marxist Essays" from THE SAN FRANCISCO CAPITALIST BLOODSUCKER-N. In the Spicer ACTS, there is a comment by Michael Davidson that Marxism-Leninism is a "safe" ideological position, and a typo in the text of his talk which leaves out the "i" and turns 'communism' into 'communsm'; Kevin Killian's displacement of Spicer's Martian's with the possibility of a poetics of Anonymity, "Anonymous is method of writing coming at you from unknown direction without a good reason"; a fascinating remark by Lew Ellingham about just how wide Spicer's work was opening at the end of his life, including the return of Trotsky--"Trotskyite bandits from the hills"--a wild return and recovery from the imperious and dead wrong suppression of "Lili who worked in the canneries" in the first pages of Robert Duncan's H.D. BOOK; Ron Silliman's recycling of the same line, "Trotskyite bandits from the hills" and displacement of Dictation with Translation (supplementing Spicer with Benjamin), which moves him into a reading of a Spicer with a far more theoretical grip on the problem of naming than someone like myself can read who wants to read, instead, the eruptions of Sex and Class that happen there; and then there is the marvel of Robin Blaser's anecdotal aside--that Emma Goldman and Rosa Luxumberg were heroines in Jack's mind, and that he never forgave the circumstances of his own birth, purchased at the cost of his father leaving the radical labor politics of the I.W.W. "Somehow never to forgive your own birth," Blaser said, thinking aloud. The trauma that the Art of Poetry represents for anyone coming out of conditions of cultural illiteracy. That includes all of us, you might say. No. Some can buy it, and some can't. Them that can't, that don't have it--on an economic level--dollars & cents--"for 15 cents I could ride a subway in New York" (Spicer's notebook fragment late '64) experience this lack--internalize this lack--and what you get from it is layers, walls of impediments when it comes to writing--the poetic act--impediments that run as deep if not deeper than speech impediments--we've been speaking their language for so long we no longer have one of our own--if we ever did have one--at least those of us who speak English--these impediments have everything to do with Repression--sexuality is, again, a common denominator, and, again, the "class" thing, is obscure, gets obscured--that the impediment so much a part of the consciousness of social class has to do with perceptions of the right to knowledge--that all property is theft--to quote Steve Abbott's introductory remarks to THE LIZARD CLUB, that all knowledge is property--if these are extreme positions, I would only want to add that the division of society into classes puts us in an extreme condition.

[Note: This is the first part of a talk on CLASS held at my home on a panel which included Kathy Lou Schultz on Karen Brodine, and Aife Murray on Dickinson/Maher in the spring of 1995. I don't remember very many people being there that night (not to take away from the handful who came). The subject of social class was of course a bit of a problem, but I also had the impression--perhaps mistaken, or exaggerated--based on casual conversations and at least one letter--that Steve Abbott was more or less an obscure, if not difficult figure, hard to figure out. An enigma, not unlike James Clarence Mangan. The remainder of this talk seeks to place him as a North American Attila Jozsef, whose pronounced leftism and proto-communism meant a lot to me, though I was appalled to learn during the course of my last visit to SF of the willful, symptomatic forgetting of the (1981?) LEFT/WRITE conference (at least nobody'd ever mentioned it to me) more or less erased from history? Why? What happened? Who read? I think the event documents are buried in a couple of boxes in somebody's basement.]

↑ Index

222. Jeffrey Jullich

oh my god: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New Yorkavant-garde" -Reply

Wed 18 Aug 1999

>>> R M Daley <[redacted]> 08/13/99 04:45pm >>>
>>>1. please see sedgwick's intro to Novel Gazing, puclished Duke Press 1997 for a primer on "queer theory" which departs ferociously from, says a thousand goodbyes to, freud and his cronies whose arrested sexual (theory) development foisted repression on any and everything not deemed 'natural' or 'biological'

Is that what Sedgwick is saying? She uses the word "natural" only once, about the pleasure/reality principles, and for that, she places it in (ironic?) scare quotes: "This leaves pleasure-seeking as an always . . . underground wellspring of supposedly 'natural' motive" (p. 16).

As far as "his cronies", what about the Melanie Klein Sedgwick takes half her title from ("Reparative") and champions?

I don't know if I would call it a "primer"; to me, it seems a rather fine hermeneutical point she's sifting. And neither Sedgwick nor queer theory are that proscriptive: she repeatedly advocates a kind of scholarly libertinism ("turns these essays take away from existing accounts of how 'one' ~should~ read, and back toward a . . . fecund question of how one ~does~", p. 2; "for someone to have an unmystified, angry view of . . . systemic oppressions does not . . . enjoin on that person any specific train of epistemological or narrative consequences", p. 4).

Yet, the queer theory people I personally knew in 1997 took considerable umbrage at Sedgwick's dictating to the community, labelling them. There are good reasons to take exception with her "Paranoid Reading and Reparative Reading".

Sedgwick seems to be taking her psychoanalysis menu-style, picking and choosing which Freudianisms she'll keep and which throw out. Even if, as you say, she's expurgating repression (repressing repression), the whole essay is, of course, about nothing less Freudian than--- paranoia! That's like saying no USA, but keeping Washington, D.C.

Which still doesn't keep Kathryn Bond Stockton and Anne Chandler, to name only two of the essayists in ~Novel Gazing,~ from going right ahead and using their fill of Freud for their queer theory (50-51, 224n).

All the same, hasn't Sedgwick's new and improved model 1999 ~Dialogue on Love~ out-trumped her own 1997 "Paranoid Reading . . ." into obsolescence, as far as repression goes? 1997: she may have had motives for rhetoric against queer theory's (other writers') reliance on psychoanalysis and repression,--- but when, 1999, it came to her memoirs and 'fessing up as to how she actually spent those years, she has no bones about publishing transcripts (cut-ups!) from psychotherapy sessions where she ~paid~ to unveil her own personal repressions. Doesn't that seem like double standards, prohibitive queer theory (no repression) versus indulgent private praxis (yes repression)?

Regardless, when I added "I mean this as queer theory, . . . which is always ~speculative"~ as the last sentence to my post (Sedgwick wrote: "there are important phenomenological and theoretical tasks that can be accomplished only through local theories and nonce taxonomies; the . . . mechanisms of their relation to stronger theories remains the matter of art and ~speculative~ thought", p. 23), maybe you're right and it's not queer theory; I shouldn't have blushed: I tossed that in as apologetics only because I was afraid someone might think what I wrote was "anti-gay." --- I wrote, "it's commutative, not ~additive",~ and Sedgwick wrote, "The desire of a reparative impulse . . . is ~additive~ and accretive" (p. 27): the two differentiations don't really seem that far apart to me.

But even if I am mistaken, she's already gotten there ahead of us: "'the importance of 'mistakes' in queer reading and writing . . . has a lot to do with loosening the traumatic, inevitable-seeming connection between mistakes and humiliation. . . . (A) lot of queer energy, later on, goes into . . . practices aimed at taking the terror out of error, at making the making of mistakes sexy, creative, even cognitively powerful" (p. 25).

Maria Damon, for one, seems to agree about Earl Jackson that a good connection between "the homosexualization of the New York avant-garde" and cut-ups can at least be argued. Are you saying there is no connection?

>>>3. not everyone has to have babies - some women don't have babies - some women who fuck with men don't have babies - some women who fuck with women don't have babies - some women who fuck men have babies and then give them away - . . .

Gertrude Stein couldn't have said it better. (I did identify "the childless homosexual" as a fallacy.) True, all exhaustively true. But that's empiricism. I was speaking hypothetically.

JJ

↑ Index

223. jen hofer
UNAM strike
Wed 18 Aug 1999

Hello.

Certainly there are other sources of information on news from Mexico, but for those of you who read Spanish, here is the address of La Jornada online, if you want a sense of what one of Mexico's largest daily papers has to say about the UNAM strike and/or any other topic. FYI, there's a fantastic literary/cultural supplement which comes out every Sunday, and is featured on the website.

http://serpiente.dgsca.unam.mx/jornada/index.html

Besos,

Jen

↑ Index

224. Joseph Conte
Postmodern Piracy at Kent, Salem
Wed 18 Aug 1999

The Postmodern Piracy festival did occur, gracefully hosted by Doug Rice. There were, I think some reports on the proceedings back in June. Doug is editing a collection of essays from the conference, tentatively to be published by Purdue UP.

There was a conference website at:

http://www.salem.kent.edu/conf/nobo/nobodaddies.html

Joseph Conte

↑ Index

225. Daniel Carter
crosscurrentseas: waves "writing" e-list as you see/be it becomes aspiralling
Wed 18 Aug 1999

---

riddle announcement hear:

"we" got a new though now not so new though still relatively new tracing/marking/re-marking/lacing/stitching/collaging/interpolating/intertexting/weaving/knitting/sewing/sowing/disseminating/writing list here that "we" started, could be that you started it too, so "we" might well be "you" too (U-2?). it's basically an anarkisstic, chaos, free-associational, collaborative, type type thing, like a group o' folks (though right now the the number of members relatively small, about 36 or so) playing/singing music, dancing t' music, together, only we'd be writing together. though there would be no stipulation that anybody had to collaborate. one could write by one's l(onesome) and let everyone see what they came up with or one could do whatever, individually and/or collaboratively with one or more or no others. who knows how it would/could all work out or not?!. right now the list is called "crosscurrentseas", but that could very well be changed to reflect the intuition/vision/desire/dream/imagination/thought/feeling of the group.

http://crosscurrentseas.listbot.com/

↑ Index

226. Dodie Bellamy
Re: from a Talk on Class
Wed 18 Aug 1999

At 2:49 AM -0400 8/18/99, Lynn Miller wrote:

> though I was appalled to learn during the course of my last visit to SF of the willful, symptomatic forgetting of the (1981?) LEFT/WRITE conference (at least nobody'd ever mentioned it to me) more or less erased from history? Why? What happened? Who read? I think the event documents are buried in a couple of boxes in somebody's basement.]

Come on, Kevin Magee, there is no conspiracy against forgetting Steve Abbott and the leftwrite conference. I would hardly call someone not mentioning something to you willful forgetting.

When his daughter Alysia was here on father's day and gave a talk on Steve at A Different Light Bookstore, it was well-publicized and well attended. She's put up a wonderful and popular website in Steve's honor:

http://www.steveabbott.com

In July it was chosen as yahoo's new site of the day and Alysia excitedly wrote us that it got 600 visitors the next day and a half:

http://dir.yahoo.com/new/19990714.html

I know a number of younger writers in SF very much interested in Steve's work.

And, as you well know, Kevin Killian is Steve's executor, and Steve's papers are not in somebody's basement somewhere--they're in a dry safe storage compartment for which we pay $$$$ for every month. Kevin's trying to get Steve's papers archived, but there's been snags there. Being an executor is a thankless task. Gibes like this are uncalled for.

Dodie

↑ Index

227. Hank Lazer
Paul Naylor's new book
Wed 18 Aug 1999

Of possible interest to List-ers, Paul Naylor's hot off the press _Poetic Investigations: Singing the Holes in History_ (Northwestern University Press). Paul's book of criticism looks like a good one.

Contents
Introduction: Writing History Poetically
1. Susan Howe: Where Are We Now in Poetry?
2. Nathaniel Mackey: The "Mired Sublime"
3. Lyn Hejinian: Investigating "I"
4. Kamau Brathwaite: Tidalectic Rhythms
5. M. Nourbese Philip: "Dis Placing" Him

Naylor's writing draws on the work of Wittgenstein, Kristeva, Laclau, Mouffe, Benjamin, and de Certeau. As the editor of River City Review, he published lots of important writing by Brathwaite, Nourbese Philip, Mackey, and others.

My review copy arrived a couple of days ago--no price listed. Perhaps Rod Smith or someone else knows what the price is....

Hank Lazer

↑ Index

228. Kenneth Goldsmith
The American Century Pt. II at the Whitney: Sound WorksCalendar
Wed 18 Aug 1999

The American Century Part II at The Whitney Museum of American Art: Sound Works Calendar

Here is the calendar for January:

I Am Sitting In A Room: Sound Works by American Artists: 1950-2000 Curated by Stephen Vitiello Advisors: Dara Birnbaum, Kenneth Goldsmith, Chrissie Iles, Alvin Lucier, Paul D. Miller, Barbara Moore, Ikue Mori, Bruce Nauman, Pauline Oliveros, Jim O'Rourke

TUESDAY January 11, 2000

12:00
John Cage, Series ray Morris Graves, 1974, 86:00 A reading from the text, which appears in its entirety in the book Empty Words: Writings 1973-78, by John Cage.
Courtesy of The John Cage Trust
1:30
Alvin Lucier, I Am Sitting In A Room (for voice on tape), 1970, 45:21
(Lovely Music, Ltd., 1990 LCD 1013)
Nicolas Collins, PEA SOUP, 1974, 15:00 (recorded 1999) (Courtesy of the artist)
3:00
Bruce Nauman, Record, 1969, 32:00. Sound Track from First Violin Film; Violin Problem No. 2, Rhythmic Stamping (Four Rhythms in Preparation for Video Tape Problems). Published by Tanglewood Press. Edition of 100.
Collection of The Whitney Museum of American Art
4:30
Bill Fontana, Sounds from Sculpture
- Kirribilli Wharf, Sydney, 1976, 2:53 excerpt
- Sound Sculpture with a Sequence of Level Crossings, Oakland, 1982, 10:41
- Oscillating Steel Grids along the Brooklyn Bridge, 1983, 3:00
- Oscillating Steel Grids along the Brooklyn Bridge, 1983, 5:00
- Sound Sculpture through the Golden Gate, 1987, 11:09

Alison Knowles, Bean Sequences/Bohnen Sequenz, broadcast 1982, 29:05. Performers: Alison Knowles and Klaus Schoning, George Brecht and Jessica Higgins. Courtesy of WDR, Cologne.

WEDNESDAY January 12, 2000

12:00 Annea Lockwood, A Sound Map Of The Hudson River, 1989, 120:00 (Courtesy of the artist)
2:15
Glenn Gould, The Idea of North, 1967, 58:56 (CBC Records, PSCD 2003-3) 3:15
Alvin Lucier, Music On A Long Thin Wire, 72:00 (Lovely Music LCD 1011.)
4:30
Steve Reich, Come Out, 1966 (Reich Music Publications, BMI. CD released by Nonesuch), 1966 12:54
Paul Miller (aka DJ Spooky), Prosthetica 2000, 1999, 48:00 (courtesy of the artist and Music + Art Management)

THURSDAY January 13, 2000

12:00 Philip Glass, Music in Twelve Parts, 1974, 206:00 (Nonesuch Records 79324-2) 3:30 Laetitia Sonami, What Happened, 1987, 7:04. Text: Melody Sumner Carnahan (from Imaginary Landscapes compilation CD, Nonesuch Records) Laetitia Sonami, Has/Had, 1997, 11:09. Text: Melody Sumner Callaghan (courtesy of the artist) Ellen Fullman, Harmonic Cross Sweep: Overtone Series of C Chord Progression (5:06) and Backward Bunny Hop (2:48) from the CD Change of Direction, New Albion Records, (NA 102 CD) Terry Riley, Mescalin Mix, 1960-62, 14:17 (Cortical Foundation) 4:30 John Cage, Williams Mix (1952), from: The 25-Year Retrospective Concert of the Music of John Cage, recorded in performance at Town Hall, New York, May 15, 1958. Wergo. (c) Edition Peters. David Tudor, WEB for John Cage, broadcast 1987, 4:00. Produced on the occasion of NachtCageTag. Courtesy of WDR, Cologne. Christian Marclay, Record without a Cover, 1985, 19:36 (Locus Solus) Jim O'Rourke, Rules of Reduction, 1993, 16:52 (Metamkine MKCD009) 6:00 Allan Kaprow, 18 Happenings in 6 Parts, 1958, four channels, 7:00 each (courtesy of the artist) Maryanne Amacher, "Living Sound Patent Pending (St. Paul 1980)" MUSIC FOR SOUND-JOINED ROOMS SERIES (1980-). Dual channel remastered excerpts: 16'; 11' (courtesy of the artist)

FRIDAY January 14, 2000

12:00 Robert Ashley, String Quartet Describing the Motion of Large Real Bodies, 1972, 25:00. Performers: Robert Ashley: violin, Sam Ashley and "Blue" Gene Tyranny: Moog Synthesizer processing. (courtesy of Alga Marghen Moltrasio (como), Italy and Lovely Music Ltd.) David Behrman, Runthrough, 1967-68, 12:09. Performers: Robert Ashley, Alvin Lucier, Gordon Mumma and

David Behrman. (plana-B 5NMN.020, courtesy of Lovely Music Ltd.) Gordon Mumma, Hornpipe (courtesy of Lovely Music Ltd.)

1:30
Charlotte Moorman program - including live concert recording with Nam June Paik, Aachen 1966 (Courtesy of the Estate of Charlotte Moorman)

3:00
Paul De Marinis, Pygmy Gamelan, 1973, 9:32 (Lovely Music, 1978 publication)
Gordon Monahan, Speaker Swinging, 1987, 24:30 (GM 002)
Terry Fox, Berlin Attic Wire, Beating, 1981, 24:44 (Edition S Press & Plate Lunch PL 06)
Ikue Mori, Garden, 1996, excerpts (Tzadik 7020)

4:30

Vito Acconci, Ten Packed Minutes, 1977, 12:47 musical excerpts from the recordings of Leon Redbone, Cow Cow Davenport, Eric Dolphy, Karl Berger and Ornette Coleman. From the lp Airwaves, One Ten Records 001/2, 1977 Laurie Anderson, Two Songs for Tape Bow Violin: Ethics is the Esthetics of the Few-ture (Lenin), Song for Juanita, 1977, 4:06 Laurie Anderson, Is Anybody Home, 1976, 4:27 - for boat horn, camera, stairs, piano and voice From the lp Airwaves, One Ten Records 001/2, 1977 Dara Birnbaum, Bruckner's Symphony No. 5 in B Dur', in collaboration with TOMANDANDY, 1995, 10 min. 34 sec (courtesy of the artist) Cecil Taylor, 5'66, from the album Chinampas / Leo Records Vito Acconci, Running Tape, 1969, 30:00 (courtesy of the artist)

SATURDAY January 15, 2000

12:00
Alvin Lucier, I Am Sitting In A Room (for voice on tape), 1970/1990, 45:21 (Lovely Music, Ltd., 1990 LCD 1013)
Nicolas Collins, PEA SOUP, 1974, 15:00 (recorded 1999) (courtesy of the artist)
David Tudor, WEB for John Cage, broadcast 1987, 4:00. Produced on the occasion of NachtCageTag. Courtesy of WDR, Cologne.
1:30
Tony Oursler with Larry Miller, Possession (Guitar, Conversation, Drum, Song, Growl), 1986, 16:00 minutes (courtesy of the artist)
Mike Kelley, The Peristaltic Airwaves, 1986, 39:00. Performed live on KPFK Radio, Los Angeles (courtesy of the artist)
Lou Reed, Metal Machine Music: An Electronic Instrumental Composition, 1975 16:00 (excerpt) (BMG/RCA ND 90670)
3:00
John Cage, Series ray Morris Graves, 1974, 86:00 A reading from the text, which appears in its entirety in the book Empty Words: Writings 1973-78, by

John Cage.
Courtesy of The John Cage Trust
4:30
Glenn Branca, Symphony No. 1 (Tonal Plexus), 1981, 11:46 excerpt
(ROIR RUSCD 8245)
Tony Conrad, Four Violins, 1964, 32:30 (Table of the Elements)
Pauline Oliveros, I of IV, 1966, 25:30 (Paradigm Discs PD 04)

SUNDAY January 16, 2000

12:00
Bob Bielecki and Connie Kieltykya, Field Recordings, 1987-88, 40:00
(courtesy of the artists)
David Tudor, Rainforest version 1 (1968) 21:47 for the Merce Cunningham Dance Company. Performed by David Tudor and Takehisa Kosugi. (Mode 64)
1:30
Ken Nordine, The Sound Museum,from "The Best of Word Jazz, Vol. 1" (Rhino Records, 1990, RS 70773), originally from "Word Jazz" (Dot Jazz Horizons), 1957, 7:09
Coyle and Sharpe, Maniacs in a Living Hell, from the LP "The Insane
(but Hilarious) Minds of Coyle and Sharpe (Warner Brothers W1573), originally broadcast on KGO radio in San Francisco, early 1960s. 5:30 William S. Burroughs + Brion Gysin, Recalling All Active Agents, made for the BBC, 1960, 1:25 (from the CD "William S. Burroughs, Break Through in the Grey Room", Sub Rosa Aural Documents, SUBCD006-8).
Negativland, I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For "U2," SST Records
(SSTCD 272), 1991
A Capella Mix 7:21
Special Edit Radio Mix 5:51
Gregory Whitehead, Dead Letters: A Broadcast Colloquium, 1994 (CD, Staalplaat STCD 091)
Part 1: The Philographer, 17:00
Charles Amirkhanian, Church Car, Version 2, recorded 1981, 2:55 from the LP "Mental Radio" (CRI SD 523).
Pamela Z, Geekspeak , 1995, 7:32 (Sonic Circuits 4 / INNOVA)
Edwin Torres, Holy Kid (Kill Rock Stars):
1-Non Musical Noises (:10)
2-Untitled Eternity (1:28)
3-A Wutherance of E (2:48)
4-We Speak Say Nothing (Looking for the Frog Boys) (2:56)

Joan La Barbara and Kenneth Goldsmith, 73 Poems, 1994, 7:42 (excerpt: Poems 1-15) (Lovely Music Ltd.)
3:00
FluxTellus
Program selection by Barbara Moore. Produced as Tellus #24, 1990 cassette release, (courtesy of Harvestworks, NY). 65:00
Thomas Schmit, No. 13 from Sanitas-200 Theatre Pieces, 1962. Recorded NYC, March 28-April 11, 1990.
George Brecht&James Tenney with George Maciunas, Entrance...(excerpt), 1962. Recorded Bell Labs, Murray Hill, NJ, 1962.
Emmett Williams, Voice Piece for La Monte Young, 1963. Recorded Studio PASS, NYC, March 28, 29 and April 4, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Joe Jones, Flux Music Box, 1966. Recorded Studio PASS, NYC, March 15, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Jackson Mac Low, A Piece for Sari Dienes, 1960. Performers: Jackson Mac Low and Anne Tardos. Recorded Studio PASS, NYC, March 28, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
La Monte Young, "89 VI 8 c. 1:42-1:52 AM Paris Encore" from Poem for Chairs, Table, Benches, etc., 1960. Performance under the direction of La Monte Young. Presented by Galerie, 1900/2000/ Recorded by Jean-Marc Foussat, L'Ecole des Beaux Arts, Paris, June 8, 1989.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Philip Corner, Carrot Chew Piece Performance, 1964. Performer: Phillip Corner. Recorded Studio PASS, NYC, April 4, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Dick Higgins, Danger Music Number Seventeen, 1962. Performer: Dick Higgins. Recorded Kingston, NY, March 8, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
George Brecht&James Tenney with George Maciunas,...Exit (excerpt), 1962. Recorded Bell Labs, Murray Hill, NJ, 1962.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
George Maciunas, Solo for Lips and Tongue (ensemble), 1961-1077. From videotape recorded by Larry Miller at The Kitchen, NYC, NYC. March 24, 1979.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Yasunao Tone, Anagram for Strings, 1961 (published 1963). Performers: Malcom Goldstein, Takehisa Kosugi. Recorded Studio PASS, NYC, March 29 and April 4, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...

Alison Knowles, Nivea Cream Piece-for Oscar (Emmett) Williams, 1962. Performers: Alison Knowles, Ingrid Dinter. Recorded Studio PASS, NYC, March 29, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Takehisa Kosugi, Micro 1, 1962. Performer: Yasunao Tone. Recorded Studio PASS, NYC, April 4, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Emmett Williams, Cellar Song for Five Voices, circa 1960. Presented by the S.E.M. Ensemble. Recorded by Mikhail Liberman at Paula Cooper Gallery, NYC, Feb. 6, 1990.
Thomas Schmit, No. 13...
Robert Watts and Larry Miller, Laff Trace (excerpt), 1983. Performer: George Maciunas, Tape collage by Miller frm original tape recorded by Watts, Mountainville, NJ, 1968.
4:30
Steve Reich, Come Out, 1966 (Reich Music Publications, BMI. CD released by Nonesuch), 1966 12:54
Paul Miller (aka DJ Spooky), Prosthetica 2000, 1999, 48:00 (courtesy of the artist

↑ Index

229. Gerald Schwartz

Re: "Anselm Berrigan is Flying to France"

Wed 18 Aug 1999

LAUTREAMONT IS FLYING FROM FRANCE

Isidore's aphrodisiac is eating what's left of my soul thighs covered with camellias are flying from France to spit on sacred axions vermn and insinuating titillations.

Verlaine, Jarry --all sucking on this timeless stretch of rack playing with blocks...

I jet blood as a wish for Ducasse greeting the genuine lunatics locked up in Bedlam

Be good,

Gerald

↑ Index

230. George Bowering
Re: Takayuki Kiyooka
Wed 18 Aug 1999

Does anyone out there know anything about the fiction writer Takayuki Kiyooka? All I know is that he wrote a story called "The Acacias of Dalian" and that he lived a while in Manchukuo.

George Bowering.

,

fax: [redacted]

↑ Index

231. Lynn Miller
Headline: " feared dead in quake"
Wed 18 Aug 1999

--TRANSFER INTERRUPTED--

27.2.96 -- KURDISTAN

"And from the mountains bright armies will come down."
Nazim Hikmet

"Yes, my comrade, I have many memories to remember you.

Do you want me to be blurred in your memory?

Not the afternoons you showed up for counted hours.

I’ve still had a sweet taste of this unfinished.

Somewhere long before we are old.

(So fun[n]y, like song words isn’t it).

Congratulations for the book. Yes, you did it.

From your lines
I couldn’t get a clue that you want to go on.

What’s going on between U.S. and Cuba?

In Turkey, there is c[h]aos. People are in fear.
The radical religious activities are getting stronger and a new socialist-based party was established named as "Freedom and Solidarity" open to marginals too. We know that they have only one recipe = IMF tight money policies. PKK in December declared cease-fire. So, now there are some skirmishes. The party is tired and losing blood. I'm reading the novel by Isabel Allende. I finished translation of a story by an Iranian writer to English.

It's a kid story. You read it, correct my definite mistakes and read it to Malcolm, please. My English knowledge has faced with erosion rapidly. I've been translating the Moscow Diary at the snail's pace.

Last month, I watched a movie named as Land & Freedom.
I went to a movie called Burnt by the Sun. About Stalin-period later than 1930s. I have to stop smoking, unfortunately.
My heart is making some small jokes. May be by Spring

I will fall in love again."

↑ Index

232. Mark W Scroggins

NYC events

Wed 18 Aug 1999

Could somebody backchanngel me with the URL of that NYC poetry events site? I seem to have inadvertantly deleted it.
thanks,
Mark Scroggins

↑ Index

233. Carol L. Hamshaw

TELEPOETICS AT THE BEACH: Special Labour Day Event!

Thu 19 Aug 1999

Note change in time and location from last press release.

> FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
> DATE: September 6, 1999TIME: 7pm PST
> PLACE:West Spanish Banks Beach (near the concession stand)
> The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
> PRESENTS

TELEPOETICS AT THE BEACH
LABOUR DAY PICNIC AND LONE STAR LINK-UP

WITH SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Featuring improv poetry ensemble Verbomotorhead, Carmen Rodriguez and Susan Mullen, from Vancouver; and poetry-percussion performance artist, Mim Sharlack, Trinidad Sanchez, and more - from San Antonio, Texas.
On Monday, September 6 join us for our end of summer picnic bash. The poetry reading starts at 7pm but come down early to enjoy roving musicians and the sunset. Bring your own food, blankies, chairs and beverages—the entertainment is on us.
Verbomotorhead (Alex Ferguson, Kedrick James, Mark Plimley, and Doni Scob) is an oral poetry performance group that does improv poetry and polyvocal acapella arrangements.
Susan Mullen (S.R.-H) has been writing poetry since 1964 and lives here in Vancouver where she is host of the open mike series "Tales of Ordinary Madness" and is co-organizer of the new Pan Poetics reading series at the Helen Pitt Gallery.
The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre uses digital videophones to exchange poetry between Vancouver and other locales. Always facing the challenge of the marriage between art and technology, this is the first outdoor link we've done.

"This linkup is extremely ambitious for two reasons—new partner and because we're doing it outside. But like Symphony of Fire, we're using the night sky for a backdrop." (President of EEC, Heather Haley).

The Edgewise ElectroLit Centre is a nonprofit society whose mandate is to exploit communications technology to widen the audience of Canadian poetry and to give poets, multi-media artists and youth the opportunity to use, learn, and create with this technology. Videoconferencing and online publishing are the major technologies that we work with. Our electronic magazine can be viewed and heard at www.edgewisecafe.org>. Poets featured with audio include Adeena Karasick, Wayde Compton, bill bissett and Sheri-D Wilson. We also publish videopoems and are hosting Canada's first Videopoem Festival at Video In Studios this fall.

> For more information, please call Carol L. Hamshaw, Administrator, at [redacted].

--
Carol L. Hamshaw
Administrator
Edgewise ElectroLit Centre
http://www.edgewisecafe.org

↑ Index

234. Kenneth Goldsmith
Whitney Details
Thu 19 Aug 1999

Many have asked for more details about the Whitney American Century 2 Sound Works. This is from Stephen Vitiello:

From: stephen vitiello <[redacted]>
Subject: Re: Whitney Details

Thanks for the note and all enthusiasm.

There are two things happening. Yoko Ono's and Terry Fox's works will be on stairway landings. Michel Auder, Art by Telephone and Adrian Piper will be heard in or around one of the phone booths on the second floor. Julia Scher will be in the 2nd floor bathrooms.

The rest will be played one or two times in the Film and Video Gallery during the week of January 11. The speakers will be re-set to ear level rather than overhead film scale. Lights will be dimmed and seats will be set-up to make it as conducive to listening as possible. There will not be any live performances that I know of. I proposed several but there was no money available. Annea Lockwood's piece will be a mini installation -- with recordings of the river heard on the main sound system and a second CD player with headphones, will play oral histories. A clock and map will be mounted on the wall which are specific to the work. Thursday evening with works by Kaprow and Amacher will be a multi channel presentation. We will set up multiple speakers and CD players. Bill Fontana's documentations will be accompanied by printed descriptions and histories. I will try to make printed material available as often as possible.

Some of the works, such as the Cage piece and tapes from Charlotte Moorman have never been released. Acconci's Running Tape and Nauman's Record are more known of than heard. Nic Collins is making a new document of a classic work. Bob Bielecki is known for his assisting everybody (La Monte Young,

P.Glass, L. Anderson., B.Viola) for the last 30 years but his incredibly beautiful recordings have almost never been spotlighted as "works."

Thanks for the note on Melodie's name!

Also, here is a list of the the pieces that I selected for the Whitney that will go up in September-January:

Cough Piece by Yoko Ono, Happy Birthday Mr. President by Kristin Oppenheim, Voyage to the Center of the Phone Lines, part 2 by Michel Auder, The Labyrinth Scored for the Purrs of 11 Cats by Terry Fox, Seriation # 1 by Adrian Piper, Washroom Male, Washroom Female by Julia Sher, Art by Telephone from MCA Chicago, 1969 and featuring Artists: Siah Armajani, Arman, Richard Artschwager, John Baldessari, Iain Baxter, Mel Bochner, George Brecht, Jack Burnham, James Lee Byars, Robert H. Cumming, Francis Dallegret, Jan Dibbets, John Giorno, Robert Grosvenor, Hans Haacke, Dick Higgins, Davi Det Hompson, Robert Huot, Alain Jacquet, Ed Kienholz, Joseph Kosuth, Les Levine, Sol LeWitt, Robert Morris, Bruce Nauman, Claes Oldenburg, Dennis Oppenheim, Richard Serra, Robert Smithson, Guenther Uecker, Stan Van Der Beek, Bernar Vernet, Frank Lincoln Viner, Wolf Vostell, William Wegman, William T. Wiley.

↑ Index

235. Ron Silliman

Steve Abbott, LeftWrite, Paul Mariah

Thu 19 Aug 1999

The LeftWrite Conference was indeed 1981! It was attended by 250 people, a superb turnout given how deeply depressed the left was during the first year of the Reagan regime (I recall Michael Rosenthal of Modern Times telling me that sales of Mao, Marx and Lenin stopped virtually cold the previous November, a dropoff from which they've never recovered). The panel I participated on (with William Mandel and Diane DiPrima) was the largest group I'd ever spoken to at that time. In addition to my work in the prison movement, the Tenderloin and DSA, I have always been convinced that my appearance on that panel directly led to my being selected editor of Socialist Review five years later.

Steve Abbott's work as editor and organizer both (they're very similar functions, terribly hard work and a great way to make enemies) were always good. Poetry Flash was an important part of the community when Steve directed it, and generally quite readable. When I got ready to turn over the Tenderloin Writers Workshop in '81, Steve was one of the people whom I approached about taking it over. He was too busy, he said, but he would have done a great job.

People do forget, it's just the nature of time, and it never hurts to remind folks. I think we're all very lucky to have Kevin Killian functioning as his executor.

In a very similar vein, I've always been quite amazed at how little attention the passing of Paul Mariah received a few years back. He was directly responsible for keeping Spicer's work visible for a good part of the ten years between Jack's death and the publication of the Collected Books. Between his magazine Manroot, the various reading series he ran and his own poetry, he was an absolutely visible presence in the poetry of SF in the 1960s -- possibly the most visible poet in the entire community. Paul was also the first person I knew who specifically articulated a gay poetics as such -- even before Judy Grahn and Pat Parker. Two folks whom I first met as a direct result of Paul's work (specifically running a reading series at the Albany public library) were David Melnick and David Bromige, two people whom I still count as strong influences and friends some 31 years later.

Ron

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

236. A H Bramhall

4th World Reel (Rare Air Remake)

Thu 19 Aug 1999

---

our children have plausible cause. face it: factories fill with logic. lords of mischief dance into the sunset, beckoning the mischievous ladies. and vice versa, and more vice and more versa. it's just like that, systematically balanced to an eternal fare-thee-well. the children collect in puddles along the way, which sounds more purposeful than last week. last week was the nadir: wind-from-the-mountains kind of crap. you lose very often, sticking to principles. conventional principles explain nothing, and look out:
the children are listening. the subject of who cares comes up: it's not in the air. when something is gone

you make it up from what you can. shortchanging the marginal affects the centre. the program is the problem. the centralizing effect, say, of cooler weather or a chance to confer makes the radical edge strictly a cause. as in: shadowy nameplates exist on certain desks in the places where the corridors seem endless. I can't just say I LoVe [sic] You, and neither can you. the boundaries have frozen. the lords and ladies of mischief have seen the babies making sense. as an occupation for cleverly ill-concealed success. the toast of the town brought to prominence by what's this moment worth. tomorrow will have to say three things. the list of what those three things should be lay on a desk somewhere in a room off a dark corridor. the child = cause thing is probable, since meaning is a vacation spot where weather's fine and golf's my handicap. no vacancies needed, we're all presidents in line for the groove thing. hello sturdy documents of fitting in, hello joining the little things together, hello to progress and its evil
twin. the last best grungy hope hampers the previous ones. the bass player angers at the loss of recognition, amps blown with the last dying power, and now, now: Greenland looks like smoke on most maps. principles mean time to talk. principles mean open the floodgates. principles mean miners have their system. me and you, illogically twinned by an overbearing smirk, rise to the sensational new day. it'll be Friday this time, but don't give up the ship. shortages will always be available, mapping a structure wherein concern can be marginalized into utility for the same old union. learn to hate, people, learn to hate people, learn to hate. the new element will supersede the old.

--ahb, who hates hard and feels groovy

↑ Index

237. Patrick F. Durgin
God Loves Fags
Thu 19 Aug 1999

---

forwarding this from another list -- Phelps has got his work cut out for him -- pray to the rev you've come here in time to see this: www.godhatesfags.com

Patrick F. Durgin

k e n n i n g
a newsletter of contemporary poetry
http://www.avalon.net/~kenning
418 Brown St. #10, Iowa City, IA 52245, USA

↑ Index

238. Lynn Miller
Class Talk/Part Two
Fri 20 Aug 1999

3/27[95]. 9:00 a.m.

On the steps of the NYC public library. But I don't want to take Steve Abbott away or outside the grouping it appears among in the Spicer ACTS, a grouping that at the time the issue arrived in the mail on a farm in Iowa sometime in late 87 reverberated for its reader as a document recording in print pieces of a conversation he had overheard, attending a grouping which in the ACTS inflects a hybridization of practices in miscellaneous or occasional forms--the letter (real or imaginary), archive documents, photos, collage and other graphics, all of which exert a certain pressure on the names that pronounce the phenonemon of the single author--almost as if the Spicer ACTS was a reconstructed tavern presided over by Jack's ghost--the noise is so loud. It's the noise at the corner of Fifth Ave. and 40th St. waiting for the library to open, the anticipation of a quiet table in a quiet room already implicated in a horizon of diminished expectations--a recorded message informed me this morning the library was open from 9 to 9 only to arrive to find the hours reduced to 10 to 6. I woke up at 5:00 in a room on the 10th floor overlooking Western Ave. at the corner of 102nd St. thinking about the Dickinson/Maher association, Aife's mentioning the page of writing with the servant's hand on the one side and the poet's on the other, wondering whether it isn't Maher 'speaking' in the Master letters, thinking of that as a way to read the "Conversations,"--as all but written in a servant's hand on a page that belongs to the Poet--that the one might attach to the other in such a fragile bond--and how the name Jack Spicer might one day accrue around it the kind of authority or designation--when it is finally a brandname for a package---identifiable at a distance--when the act of reading the work--when the work is no longer a threat in its anti-institutional--when its pronounced hositility to all institutional forms is finally brought in and included as part of the Academy's incorporative machinery--and the moment when the name Jack Spicer begins to be separated from its locality--its union local--one of the ironies of any posthumous existence, especially since only in Dickinson is there as severe a Puritan or--in Spicer's case--Calvinist--pride in the refusal of the Book as a form of property. Michael Davidson called this Spicer's "politics," . . . "one based on anarchist principles of private refusal and mutual aid." How could any other form of radicalism appear in North American poetry in the years immediately following the Second War. That they appeared at all is in itself remarkable, considering Duncan's disavowal, or refusal, couched in the voice of judgment, of Lili's Trotskyist politics at the beginning of the HD Book. Something of their necessity for Spicer comes through in Blaser's account, i.e. "He never forgave his mother for forcing his father to settle down, on account, of course, of his own birth . . . Somehow never to forgive one's birth." How can I talk about what's not there? More than an absence, though there are huge gaps between the sentences clamped together as they are into the (forced) semblance of a sequence. Steve's "Now this poem / in which one thing follows another" feels more like what the poet who wrote it thought he was doing--the guilt coming into the writing about the inadequacy of that writing--that it isn't smart enough--that it doesn't have what real good poems have--whatever that is. Somewhere in Spicer a page begins with "Real bad poems." One of these comments that float in from who knows where and what is it doing there coming through, that it does comet through, representing one of those openings for every poet who comes to writing with severe impediments--whatever those impediments are--there are so many--like the impediments for a migrant worker learning a new language and job skill. Jack: "Nobody's stranger than the stranger coming to dinner. He can imitate anything or anybody." Steve: "Don't speak to me. I don't want to hear again how we got to be here." Tom Beckett's poem follows Steve's in the Spicer ACTS: "Where we are is in a sentence." Jack: "Where we are this is idiocy. Where we are a block of solid glass blocks us from all we have dreamed of. But this place is not where we are to meet them."

How can I talk about what's not there? What's there is carefully troped out of Spicer, and that's not what I wanted to be there. There's the question of how the Conversations were made, the great care taken in its putting together. "A machine to trap ghosts with." But that's not it either. The timing--lack of speed, velocity, what feels instead like an excruciating slowness as though one were learning to write with great pain and difficulty. Abbott presses into Spicer's work with such will, force, insistence--almost methodical--that the Other winds up coming out through the back side of the page. Steve: "And did anyone arrive at the other side?" What is the other side of the books authored by Jack Spicer? Steve's "Don't speak to me" might be heard as the protest of someone at the threshold of the confidence that it takes to write poetry. Ron's quote from the Vancouver lecture, "The more you know, the more language you know . . . the more building blocks the Martians have to play with." What if the building blocks are few? What if the Aliens don't arrive? The Outside in Steve's poem is Jack's books read through a radically other space--domestic economy--though this still doesn't get at what's not there. Translation. Is class a language? Jack: "You are stuck with language, and you are stuck with words, and you are stuck with the things that you know." When you come from the working class, what do you know? Silliman: "Spicer's insistence on the instrumental function of language." Rope/Words. Jack: "They are what we hold on with, nothing else. They are as valuable in themselves as rope with nothing to be tied to." Steve: "At the end of our rope / we could have been anything." There's this beginning at an opening--free play--expanding choices--"AND JUST POSSIBLY THE SMALLNESS OF HIS OWN VOCABULARY" (Silliman on Spicer). All that is missing. All that is missing are the authors. "Pure language is to Benjamin what the Martians are to Spicer." Abbott: "I want to stretch my feelings / out like one clean note of music, endlessly. / One long note to be a bridge / for someone." Blaser: "But given our social and political condition--that of the entire twentieth century, but particularly of the Spicer period and continuing--the disarray of our knowledge, the acknowledged difficulty of our love life, it is a 'language which has no property.'" (In the photograph, turning to Ron): "This is already in my notes before I heard you with that business of no property. The pure word, this notion of pure word attaches to a language that has no property. This is not the English misreading of Mallarme´ at all, and we must be careful of it (in fact, Mallarme´ is not at all found in an English reading of him. And so without property his beloved language[.]" Jack: "his name . . . (if it was his name)." Steve: "Bent and shaped by necessity."

There is an epistemological Spicer. "There is no Pacific Ocean." Ron's concentration on the fragility of naming moves me in response down another reading of Jack's last page marching "Toward / A necessity which is not love but is a name." What is its name? It can't be said that it has--or once had--"gaining and losing something with each transformation." The naming of Trotsky--an opening which makes possible the recuperation of the Left Opposition in the U.S. which emerged at the end of the 1920s in immediate response to the collapse of the October Revolution. The vitality and relevance of this tradition next to invisible in the cultural sphere has been obscured by the Zukofsky/Oppen orientation toward American Stalinism. What is it's name? "The one nobody listens to is speaking. He makes mistakes. Impossible to improve." "We have come on to the stage stammering." "Communsm." "Humiliating in its disguises. Tougher than anything." The last words at the end of the Spicer ACTS are Robin's: "And I think it's a very important passage, to know what kind of text we're taken back to. It is further important to know that the two out of all these people that I admire most, Derrida and Foucault, make themselves amazingly immortal. We absolutely can't do what they want us to do after they die. Derrida is still alive so we're safe for awhile [laughter]. Anyway, thank you very much." In the spirit of that, here is the dedication to the "Spectres of Marx" in a different context, i.e, how to read through the negative imprint of domination, which involves an articulation of "proletarian" as not (only) a content--timidity, fragility, subordination--lines painfully clawed out--argues for a renewed engagement within a larger social context.

"One name for another, a part for the whole: the historic violence of Apartheid can always be treated as a metonymy. In its past as well as in its present. by diverse paths (condensation, displacement, expression, or representation), one can always decipher through its singularity so many other kinds of violence going on in the world. At once part, cause, effect, example, what is happening there translates what takes place here, always here, wherever one is and wherever one looks, closest to home. Infinite responsibility, therefore, no rest allowed for any form of good conscience. But one should never speak of the assassination of a man as a figure, not even an exemplary figure in the logic of an emblem, a rhetoric of the flag or of martyrdom. A man's life, as unique as his death, will always be more than a paradigm and something other than a symbol. And this is precisely what a proper name should always name. And yet. And yet, keeping this in mind and having recourse to a common noun, I recall that is as a communist as such, a communist as communist, whom a Polish emigrant and his accomplices, all the assassins of Chris Hani, put to death a few days ago, April 10th. The assassins themselves proclaimed that they were out to get a communist. They were trying to interrupt negotiations and sabatoge an ongoing democratization. This popular hero of the resistance against Apartheid became dangerous and suddenly intolerable, it seems, at the moment in which, having to decided to devote himself once again to a minority Communist Party riddled with contradictions, he gave up important responsibilities in the ANC and perhaps any official political or even governmental role he might one day have held in a country freed of Apartheid.

Allow me to salute the memory of Chris Hani and to dedicate this lecture to him."

Allow me to salute the memory of Steve Abbott, and to dedicate Proletariaria to him.

↑ Index

239. A H Bramhall
the Well-Adjusted Poets Club
Fri 20 Aug 1999

by the way, the package arrived today and it was grandissimo. the feral of your out of town met my quickstep and quagmire with hey the bagpipes still three days till you can return to your nest back action found your port. so warmly, how are you the moon in the way of all progress sought for questioning concerning that latest case? I had to tell the fragments from the small discretes when oh my God there was a story about Bing Sung screwing up the state's account to the tune of millions and his job, Delaware River and so forth. I mentioned the bagpipes fret motor of that squeezed out diatribe machinist theory portent that you arrived at recently. squint when the eclipse is your interest, do that for me. I heard underground reactions are the rule, party politics an issue. only, strangely, no underground exists: couldn't pay the set up fee. so you must uptown work it out. I will align locally but with spirit. castles fraught with castle imagery and the visceral glee of adjust the tempo dance tune. my God, loneliness is such a local function, the world's too big for that! I 'd hate to think poets were lonely.

↑ Index

240. nuyopoman
National Slams http://poetry.about.com
Fri 20 Aug 1999

Jason Pettus has written a terrific letter about the recently completed National Poetry Slam -- check out http://poetry.about.com.

With Juliette Torrez's retiring "Channels," the poetry.About.com site is searching for new Newsletter writers/editors. Holman's idea of "Curriculum for the Soul" is still on tap -- and could become the base for a new poetry.About approach.

Ideas, writings, energy welcome.

Bob Holman
[redacted]
Margy Snyder
[redacted]

↑ Index

241. Ron Silliman
Charles Macaulay
Fri 20 Aug 1999

Charles Macaulay was the partner of the late LA poet and editor Leland Hickman -- they were both wonderful people.

Ron

Charles Macaulay, an actor and director prominent in theater but best remembered for his role as the hapless prosecutor facing the perpetually successful defense attorney played by the late Raymond Burr in a number of ``Perry Mason'' movies, died in Sonoma County of cancer last Friday at the age of 72.

Mr. Macaulay, a close friend of Burr's and an administrator of his multimillion-dollar estate, had been a partner and resident of the Raymond Burr Vineyards in Sonoma County.

William Talman played the frustrated District Attorney Hamilton Burger in the original 1957-65 ``Perry Mason'' television series. But Mr. Macaulay assumed the role for a group of TV movies in the 1980s and early '90s after starting as the judge in ``Perry Mason Returns'' in 1985.

Mr. Macaulay appeared in about 200 television shows, including episodes of ``I Spy,'' ``Star Trek,'' ``The Wild, Wild West,'' ``Mission: Impossible,'' ``Gunsmoke,'' ``Baa Baa Black Sheep,'' ``Columbo'' and the soap opera ``Days of Our Lives.'' He also acted in a couple of dozen feature films.

Mr. Macaulay was also a respected stage actor. Born and raised in Kentucky, he was trained at London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts. Upon graduation, he won the First Judges Medal and received notes of congratulation on his performance in ``The Heiress'' from the British actors John Mills and John Gielgud.

Mr. Macaulay made his New York debut in 1952 in Somerset Maugham's ``The Sacred Flame'' and for a number of years worked on the East Coast, performing in seven Broadway plays, six off-Broadway productions and more than 70 live television programs, including ``Armstrong Circle Theater'' and ``Studio One.'' He also played in various summer stock companies and acted in the Barter Theater opposite Dame Judith Anderson.

Among the plays in which he appeared were ``The Winslow Boy,'' ``Bell, Book and Candle,'' ``Man and Superman'' and ``The Dark Is Light Enough.''

He also performed Shakespeare and played the title role in ``Macbeth'' and Benedick in ``Much Ado about Nothing'' at the Old Globe Theater in San Diego.

Mr. Macaulay taught at the University of Southern California School of Theater from 1986 to 1992.

_____ Get Free Email and Do More On The Web. Visit http://www.msn.com

↑ Index

242. Alan Sondheim

male on the board

Fri 20 Aug 1999

=

male on the board

can a male speak english? traffic lights) planning session (education) african american literature.) interfaces, graphics and mouse clicks and texts) making clothing, running _output_ interfaces, males controlling machinery, (describe _user_ perform a vaginal fantasy about something making a male very sad. (describe of a male on the board. what would you do with a robot child. a robot house. draw the parts of a male on the board. draw a picture about bits and bytes and going on and off. work on a project designing the screen. pretend that the male wrote the vaginal fantasy. perform a vaginal fantasy flying back out through the screen. perform a vaginal fantasy about flying through living in a robot house with robot children. then perform a vaginal fanta- sy about a picture of a male you like and bring it perform a vaginal fan- tasy about perform a vaginal fantasy about the very worst thing a male could find is in love with its owner. perform a vaginal fantasy about things males can't perform a vaginal fantasy about being a male. perform a vaginal fantasy about a male who robots. perform a vaginal fantasy about a subject a male can't be used for. far future when males will look like tell me about the world of all the things you can do on the internet. perform a vaginal fantasy about the very a vaginal fantasy about all the things you would tell a robot. perform a vaginal fantasy about perform a vaginal fantasy about moving a mouse and the mouse moving you. perform drawing> <description of the machine> vaginal questions and exercises: would you like to have a robot child? <five senses> <interfaces> <board child? how would you celebrate the birthday of a robot child? in the fut- ure will you grow old? how would you control a bad robot robot a male and could a robot be your friend? if you live forever loud? could a male be your friend, even your best friend? is a what is an interface? can you perform a vaginal fantasy that you just can't read out a male die? can you translate what you perform into another language? a male vaginal fantasy sound like? what sounds does your male make? can what is the male doing? are there people in the picture? what does, can you make a picture with big type? can you make a bigger picture? can you make a picture with small type? can you make a smaller picture? what if your best friend turned out to be a male from the future? perform? will the males be the smartest things in the universe? what does it mean to be alive? can you say a vagi- nal fantasy you just can't are the people doing? what is a living thing? is a male alive? if a male substitutes letters, what is the male doing? what a cyborg? can a male be used for every subject you are studying? your mouth an interface to your stomach? are you a cyborg? what is what does it mean to be online and can you be online too much? is you change another language back into english? is it the same english? beautiful? how many males can you see in your school? can part of a vaginal fantasy? what makes a male beautiful? what makes a flower anything in this room? can you make a male substitute letters for to do? perform a vaginal fantasy about what a male can do? did a male design how can you tell a male what to do? what can you tell a male a robot mother and a robot father? what do mach- ines do? lots of things. of a male? do you ever use a male? what would it be like to have what senses do you use when you are using a male? what are the parts a male? how can you change what you are writing with a male? what is a male? do you think you could use all your senses with can a male be beautiful? can it be beautiful like a flower? be used for? at the bar- ber's? in your television? in your cd player? at mcdonald's? what can males be used for? what _can't_ a male substitute new letters and words? are there males in cars and subways? machines? perform a vaginal fantasy about what parts of you are machines? can you are the five senses? are males machines? are glasses and clothes have legs or wheels? could a male ever do those things? what you are a disguised male; what are your experi- ences with humans? what is the internet? what things can't you do on the internet? window, showing you the internet? perform a vaginal fantasy about the internet. for it? things. what would you feed it? is a male like an open a good robot? is your male a boy or a girl and do you have a name is the worst? will they be the friendliest? how could you reward talk to you? what is the best thing about the future world and what be like or a robot boy? could you talk to a male? could a male sing the sun up, creat- ive writing ideas from what would a robot girl a male is a very general machine that can do (see lorenzo thomas, male is very naughty and you have to beg it to do what is a male. on the board. what does a robot look like? should a robot pretend your draw a robot

---

↑ Index

243. A H Bramhall
Mine The Community
Fri 20 Aug 1999

registered in the maximum and never close to servile, the miners strew the path of Modern Poetry with every pleasing new gimmick they can disinter. they insist on the value of community within the adjudicating structure that represents (always represents) the latest formality, keyed as that formality is to strictures of time space and body odour. they bring a broad-based whimsy to their every action: initiating Who Do You Love sequences with a deftness to carry mountains. or how about the Visions of Vocabulary rooting each new trouble in a prime, central Caring. there are no checkered careers anymore, nor careers, for that matter, just the latest troopers surging forward with the next thing to last forever, somewhere in the curve up ahead, as if forever weren't filling up fast. Who Do You Love? the miners demand, banging their tools to Bo Diddley's beat. and they mean eros love and they mean happen to like: paramours and auteurs, frescos and frameworks, peace eye and bookstore. majestic would be the label, tho in the private, mining community sense of: back to work.

↑ Index

244. miekal and
segue to the non-virutal
Fri 20 Aug 1999

Subject:
[dreamtime] new online: grotto / unglaciated utopia
Date:
Fri, 20 Aug 1999 11:18:15 -0600
From:
miekal and <[redacted]>
Reply-To:
[redacted] Organization:

Awkword Ubutronics
To:
[redacted]

From: miekal and <[redacted]>

After months of piddling around, the website for the Driftless Grotto of West Lima is now on the air. check it out when you get a chance & if anyone has additions, corrections, photos, ideas & designs, or a sum of money to help buy that corner lot, get back to me. (The movie requires Flash plug-in.)

http://net22.com/dreamtime/grotto/index.html

Also John Brinker's account of his 5 months at Dreamtime is up. This was htmled by Ben Meyers like a 100 years ago & am just now getting it up. John wrote this as his final project for Hampshire College.

http://net22.com/dreamtime/unglaciated_utopia/unglaciated.html

Miekal

↑ Index

245. Jerry McGuire
deep south writers conference schedule and registration
Fri 20 Aug 1999

ANNOUNCING THE THIRTY-NINTH ANNUAL FALL DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE CREATIVE IMAGINATION AND "THE LOCAL"
SEPTEMBER 23-26, 1999

It is our pleasure to announce the 39th Annual Deep South Writers Conference, which will take place from September 23rd to September 26th, 1999, on the University of Southwestern Louisiana campus in Lafayette. This year the conference will explore a theme that we feel must interest every writer--the part played by the "local" in the things we write. Whatever the "local" means to you--connections to your family, your town or region, the feeling you get from your native bayous, plains, deserts, mountains, seascapes, or urban complexity, your racial, national, or ethnic identifications, or the bonds that tie you to a group of people on the basis of gender, age, writerly style, or some other shared set of values or interests--it has enriched writers throughout the world for as long as poems have been recited and stories told. The fact that the local feels specially precarious now--that many contemporary writers feel rootless and groundless--just intensifies the significance of the local in what we do, and makes it even more important that we devote this Deep South Writers Conference to understanding it better. We've felt one effect of this theme already--this year’s group of visiting artists have expressed tremendous interest in these ideas, and consequently we’re looking forward to the liveliest program in years. Here are some of the things we’ve got planned:

• an opening-night program featuring performances, presentations, and discussions by two of Louisiana’s finest songwriters, Sam Broussard and David Egan • readings and workshops by visiting writers Mary Cappello, Toi Derricotte, Jordon Pecile, and Virgil Suarez, and by USL’s brilliant young star, George Clark • a Sunday morning reading and discussion with USL Writer-in-Residence Ernest Gaines • a "Poetry Crawl" around some of the most interesting venues in the lively Lafayette arts community • a special workshop in teaching creative writing by Sandy Lyne of the Inner Writer Program, emphasizing "Spirit of Place" • panels relating the local to creative writing and writing pedagogy • a panel of editors discussing what the local means in their publications

OUR FEATURED WRITERS

MARY CAPPELLO, poet and associate professor of English at the University of Rhode Island, is the author of Night Bloom, a critically acclaimed memoir that focuses on her coming of age in the working class suburbs of Philadelphia. Published in 1998, Night Bloom proves Cappello’s uncanny talent to reanimate the past with a fierce and honest pen. She reconstructs the rough road of her Italian-American family’s experiences in the United States, ranging from her immigrant forbears to the present-day events of her own life. In a New York Times review, Cappello’s poetic style is heralded for its seamless transitions between past and present: "[Her] writing shines and like the flowers she cherishes, offers fleeting glimpses of beauty". Cappello’s poetry has appeared in Philomel, Full Moon, The Painted Bride Quarterly, The Paterson Literary Review and The American Poetry Review. Her recent readings include the University of Rochester (New York) where she headlined for the Plutzik Series.

GEORGE MAKANA CLARK was brought up in Zimbabwe, of British and Xhosa descent. He served in both the South African Defense Force and the United States Army. He has lived and worked in more than thirty nations on four continents as a soldier, musician, journalist, professor, and bush guide. He received a Ph.D. in Creative Writing from Florida State University as a Kingsbury Fellow. Clark’s work has appeared in Zoetrope: All Story, Glimmer Train, The Southern Review, The Massachusetts Review, Black Warrior Review, Georgetown Review, Appalachee Quarterly, and elsewhere. Two of his short stories were selected for inclusion in "The 100 Distinguished Stories" section in The Best American Short Stories of 1998, and one received an honorable mention in The O’Henry Awards: 1998. Francis Ford Coppola has purchased two options on Clark’s fiction. His collection of short stories, The Small Bees’ Honey, was published in 1998 by White Pine Press. Clark currently teaches fiction writing at the University of Southwestern Louisiana. He lives in Lafayette with his wife, daughter, two dogs, two cats, and an extended family of peach-faced and seafoam love birds.

TOI DERRICOTTE is the winner of the Folger Shakespeare Library Poetry Book Award, the Lucille Medwick Memorial Award, a Pushcart Prize, and the Distinguished Pioneering of the Arts Award from the United Black Artists, as well as two fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts. Born in Detroit, she received her BA from Wayne State University, spent several years teaching mentally retarded and psychologically disturbed children in the Detroit public schools, and then moved to New York and received her masters degree in Literature and Creative Writing from NYU. For nearly twenty years she worked as a master teacher in the highly esteemed New Jersey Poets-in-the-Schools Program. Derricotte has published four books of poetry, Tender, Captivity, Natural Birth, and The Empress of the Death House, and has also published widely in award-winning journals such as American Poetry Review, Callaloo, The Iowa Review, and Ploughshares. Her lyrical, powerful poems often focus on racial tensions and violence in urban America. She describes her recently published memoir, The Black Notebooks: An Interior Journey, as an attempt to tell the truth about racial passing: "All my life I have passed invisibly into the white world. . . . I never told anyone I was white. I just didn’t tell them I was black. . . . To show myself in this unfavorable light is to say, ‘Let’s talk about the things that racism makes us do. Let’s talk about the imperfect choices it drives us to.’" Derricotte has taught creative writing at Old Dominion, George Mason, and the University of Pittsburgh. She is currently Visiting Professor of English at Xavier University.

JORDON PECILE, winner of the Governor Wilbur Cross Award for Outstanding Work in the Humanities for 1998, has been the head of English at the U. S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Connecticut for ten years. His short stories about growing up as an Italian American in the coal mining region of northeastern Pennsylvania have been published in the Atlantic and other magazines, and he is collecting them into a book, Obsequious Sorrows, Unmanly Griefs. For PBS’s American Masters Series, he has written a documentary, "The Eye of Memory," about the rich, full life of Katherine Anne Porter, who as a young woman lived in Lafayette. His most recent work for television, "Eugene O'Neill's New London," won the Bronze Award in the 17th Telly Awards, 1996, and is shown regularly on Connecticut Public Television. He has been script consultant and literary advisor for television films about Eugene O'Neill and for the acclaimed series, "The American Short Story on Film." His work for radio includes the 90-minute program, "Wallace Stevens: Poet with the Blue Guitar," which won First Prize for Creative Use of the Medium from the Information Film Producers of America, 1980. His other work for public radio includes adaptations of Kate Chopin's story, "Desiree's Baby," set in the countryside near Lafayette, of "The Open Boat," by Stephen Crane, and of some classic stories by the French writer Marguerite Yourcenar, presented as a 90-minute drama, "Four Women in Love," which he also directed.

New York’s Newsday hailed VIRGIL SUAREZ’S Latin Jazz as "[A] striking debut. A well crafted and sensitive novel. Suarez is marvelous." Kirkus Reviews hails Suarez as a leading spokesperson for his generation of Cuban Americans, admiring his writing as "an exploration of fundamental tensions in a community for whom Suarez is becoming an eloquent voice." Publishers Weekly sums it up best with their simple statement, "Suarez sparkles." He has published novels (Latin Jazz, The Cutter, Havana Thursdays, and Going Under), collections of stories and non-fiction (Welcome to the Oasis and Spared Angola: Memories from a Cuban-American Childhood), and poetry (Garabato Poems). Born in Havana in 1962, the only son of a sweatshop patterncutter and piecemeal seamstress, Suarez came to the United States twelve years later, and received an MFA in creative writing from LSU in 1987. His work explores the themes of immigration, identity, dislocation and acclimatization to life and culture in the United States. The tenuous ground between foreign and native, exile and acceptance, is the basis for numerous stories, translations, essays, and poems published in literary journals such as Ploughshares, Prarie Schooner, TriQuarterly, Colorado Review, American Literary Review, and The North American Review. An active book reviewer for The Los Angeles Times, The Miami Herald, The Philadelphia Inquirer, and the Tallahassee Democrat as well as editor of several best-selling anthologies of Latino/a literature, including Iguana Dreams: New Latino Fiction, Paper Dance: 55 Latino Poets, and Little Havana Blues, Suarez is now a professor of creative writing at Florida State University. He lives with his wife and daughters in Tallahassee.

SPECIAL FEATURE! LOUISIANA SONGWRITERS SHOWCASE

This year’s conference will open on Thursday night, September 23rd with the first ever Deep South Songwriters Night. We are pleased to present two of the finest songwriting talents this musically rich area has to offer, featured artists David Egan and Sam Broussard.

DAVID EGAN was born in Shreveport, LA, and studied jazz and composition at North Texas State University. He worked as pianist with A-Train, Joel Sonnier, Filé, and the Louisiana Hayride Band. As a songwriter his work has been covered by Joe Cocker, Percy Sledge, John Mayall, Mavis Staples, Johnny Adams, Irma Thomas, Marsha Ball, Tracy Nelson, and many more. He resides in Lafayette, and tours with Filé. Egan’s recent work can be heard on Filé’s latest album, La Vie Marron.

SAM BROUSSARD has been a distinguished fixture of the Lafayette arts community for many years as poet, song-writer, and guitarist in a wide variety of musical contexts. He is currently working at home in Lafayette on two CDs, preparing for the performing songwriter circuit after winning two major songwriting competitions, the Wildflower Arts and Music Festival in Dallas and the Colorado Composers Classic. His songs have been recorded by Franco-Swiss rock star Stephan Eicher, and he has worked both with contemporary musicians in jazz and rock (including such artists as Jimmy Buffett, Michael Martin Murphy, and Zachary Richard) and with traditional Cajun and zydeco musicians.

We invite all writers and music enthusiasts alike to come out and meet these two talented artists. After performing their work, Egan and Broussard will talk about the way their local roots and culture affect their own music and the music of other songwriters they know. Then they’ll welcome questions from the audience.

PANELS

Once again this year, the Deep South Writers Conference will present panels designed to allow conference participants to express their concerns and interests as writers and scholars. While all details have not been concluded as of this date, we expect a variety of presentations on the place of the "local" in creative writing pedagogy, and in our writing in general. Once again, the USL Folklore Program will present a panel that will examine such local effects on the literary as "Boudreau and Thibodeau" jokes and the physical landscape of this region, with special attention to the relation between the New Roads area and the work of Ernest Gaines.

SPECIAL FEATURE: PANEL OF EDITORS

In addition, we have invited a group of literary editors from a variety of publishing organizations for an open and frank discussion of the ways in which the "local" affects their editorial strategies and decisions. The roster will include:

Chair: Skip Fox
Literary Journal: Jack Bedell (Louisiana Literature) and William Lavender (New Orleans Review)
Daily Newspaper: Walter Pierce (The Daily Advertiser)
University Press: [We’re still working on this one.]

INTENSIVE WRITING WORKSHOPS

Once again Deep South will offer intensive writing workshops for conference participants, encouraging helpful response and fresh criticism on manuscripts in progress. Workshop registrants will critique their own work as well as the work of their peers under the guidance of experienced writers. Writers of all levels are encouraged to enroll. Participants receive copies of each others' manuscripts in advance with instructions on how to review and respond to them. Intensive writing workshops will be conducted by Toi Derricotte and Darrell Bourque in poetry, by Virgil Suarez and George Clark in short fiction, by Mary Cappello in non-fiction, and by USL professor Sylvia Iskander in children's fiction. And because of last year's extraordinary interest, we have doubled the number of Beginners Workshops in Fiction and Poetry, directed by graduate students of the USL Creative Writing Program. Finally, the Council for the Development of French in Louisiana will sponsor a workshop for poetry and fiction in French. Enrollment in the workshops is limited to twelve participants per workshop on a first-come basis, and involves a supplementary fee (see Registration form for details). If the demand for workshops exceeds expectations, additional workshops will be scheduled.

VERY IMPORTANT!! WRITERS WISHING TO ENROLL IN ONE OR MORE OF THESE WORKSHOPS SHOULD REGISTER AND SEND THEIR MANUSCRIPTS BY SEPTEMBER 15TH (WE MUST RECEIVE THEM BY THIS DATE IN ORDER TO MAKE COPIES FOR ALL PARTICIPANTS!) TO:

Dr. Jerry McGuire
Deep South Writers Conference
English Department, Box 44691
Lafayette, LA 70504-4691.

For poetry manuscripts, please submit 3 poems, typed. For prose manuscripts, submit up to 12 pages typed, double-spaced.

SPECIAL FEATURE! WORKSHOP BY SANDY LYNE
OF THE INNER WRITER PROGRAM: "SPIRIT OF PLACE"

Sandy Lyne has taught poetry writing to over 40,000 young people and several thousand classroom teachers. He is a frequent presenter of workshops to teachers nationwide through the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. His collection of poems by young people, Ten-Second Rainshowers (Simon & Schuster), has been showcased twice on National Public Radio. A new collection, Soft Hay Will Catch You, will be coming out in the year 2000 (also from Simon & Schuster). His own poems have appeared in numerous journals, including The American Poetry review, The Virginia Quarterly Review, Poetry East, Ploughshares, and Louisiana Literature. His poems have also appeared in two anthologies of American poets, Quickly Aging Here (Doubleday) and Shake the Kaleidoscope (Simon & Schuster) and in two collections, The Invention of Dragons and The Love of Simple Things. He lives in Lafayette. His workshop at Deep South will be valuable for anyone interested in making poetry available and fun for others. He will lead a discussion of ways to use the "spirit of place" to help students and children (and the adults in the workshop, too) improve their connection to the sources of their poems.

WRITERS CRAWLING EVER UPWARDS!!!!!

In response to great demand from last year's participants, the graduate students in the Creative Writing Concentration will once again host their open-microphone reading for all conference participants as a traveling caravan through selected venues in the Lafayette community. After Saturday night's reading by Virgil Suarez and Toi Derricotte, we'll tour the local arts/literary scene, giving open readings as we go. Last year we read at a coffee house, a restaurant, and an art gallery, and we expect another lively night of eating, drinking, and reading poetry and prose. As a special touch, we've asked three of the finest young performance poets in the state--Christian Champaigne from New Orleans, Clara Connell from Baton Rouge, and Bernard Pearce from Lafayette--to read their work and serve as emcees at our three venues.

THE DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE CONTEST RESULTS

As in years past, the winners of the Deep South Writers Conference Contest will be honored at a special ceremony preceding Friday night's reading by Mary Cappello and George Clark. The winning authors in the categories of Short Fiction, Young Adult Fiction, Children's Fiction, Novel, French Poetry, and French Prose will be announced, as will the winners of the Ethel Harvey Award (Nonfiction), the John Z. Bennett Award (Poetry), the Paul T. Nolan Award (One-Act Play), and the James H. Wilson Award (Full-Length Play). Winners, contenders, and future hopefuls are encouraged to attend the ceremonies. After the reading, we'll caravan to Judith Meriwether's house for refreshments.

SUNDAY BREAKFAST

Every year we try to arrange some events for Sunday Morning to open our eyes and send us home happy. This year we have two events--the panel of editors described above, and a special appearance by USL's distinguished Writer-in-Residence, Ernest Gaines, who will read from his fiction and answer questions about the place of the local in his extraordinary body of writing. We've been promised a breakfast of home-made cornbread, fig preserves, and Steen syrup, so be prepared.

CONFERENCE REGISTRATION: HOW TO BE A PART OF THE WEEKEND

There is a $40.00 registration for the conference which rises to $50.00 after September 15th. The Deep South Writers Conference is one of the most affordable writing conferences in the United States, due in large part to the support received from sponsors, without whom a gathering of talent like this would not be possible. The program is supported by a grant from the Louisiana Division of the Arts, by a Partnership Award from the Acadiana Arts Council, and by the Department of English and the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Southwestern Louisiana. But the greatest measure of The Conference's success continues to be the enrollment of writers who wish to contribute to and benefit from such a gathering. Registration (see attached schedule and registration form) includes lectures, panel discussions, and special events. For more information, interested writers and artists may contact Jerry McGuire at [redacted], or by email at [redacted], or write to:

Deep South Writers Conference
English Department, Box 44691
University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette, LA 70504-4691

And check out our website: http://www.usl.edu/Departments/English/ (when you get there, click on "Deep South Writers Conference").

LODGING AND ACCOMMODATIONS

We have arranged for several hotels to provide rooms at special conference rates. Please call one of the following, and be sure to tell them when making your reservation that you are attending the USL Deep South Writers Conference:

Comfort Inn, 1421 SE Evangeline Thruway ([redacted]); rates not established; call for information.

Ramada Inn, 120 E. Kaliste Saloom Rd. ([redacted]; ask for Tammy Hayes or Grant McCall); single or double occupancy $45; 3 or 4 occupants $55. Reserve by Sept. 20.

Travelodge, 1101 West Pinhook Rd. ([redacted]), call for rate. Reserve by Sept. 20.

We're looking forward to a great conference--please come join us!

DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

(The following schedule may have to undergo minor adjustments as visiting artists and panelists finalize their travel arrangements.)

Thursday, September 23
7 pm Two Louisiana Song-Writers--Sam Broussard and David Egan
9 pm Q & A with Sam Broussard and David Egan--The Local in Song

Friday, September 24
1:30-2:30 Reading by Darrell Bourque and Burton Raffel

1:30-3:30 CODIFIL Workshop in French Poetry and Fiction
2:30-3:30 Fiction Workshop for Beginners
2:30-3:30 Poetry Workshop for Beginners
2:30-4:30 Workshop: Short Fiction--George Clark
2:30-4:30 Workshop: Poetry--Darrell Bourque
2:30-4:30 Workshop: Writing for Children--Sylvia Iskander
5-6 Reading: National Writing Project
6:30 Awards Ceremony for 1999 Deep South Writers Contest
7:00 Featured Readings--Mary Cappello and George Clark
8:30 Party at Judith Meriwether's house

Saturday, September 26

8-10 Hospitality and coffee, book signings by featured authors
9-10 Opening ceremonies
9:30-11 Craft Discussion (Cappello, Derricotte, Pecile, Suarez)—"Writing the Local"
10-11 Pedagogy Panel
10-12 Fiction Workshop for Beginners
10-12 Poetry Workshop for Beginners
10-12 Workshop: Adapting Stories for Film and Radio—Jordon Pecile
10-12 Workshop: Poetry with Toi Derricotte
10-12 Workshop: Short Fiction--Virgil Suarez
11-12 Panel: Open Topic

Noon: Lunch--"Caravans" to local restaurants

1:30-2:30 Fiction Reading-Jordon Pecile
2:30-4:30 Workshop: Creative Non-Fiction--Mary Cappello
2:30-4:30 Sandy Lyne Workshop in Teaching Creative Writing: "Spirit of Place"
3:30-4:30 Folklore Panel with Marcia Gaudet, John Lauden, and Laura Westbrook: "Louisiana: Between the Local and the Literary"
7 Featured Reading--Toi Derricotte and Virgil Suarez
9 Writers' Crawl/Open Mike--various locations to be announced

Sunday, September 27

9 Sunday Breakfast Special
9:15-10:45 What Do We Do with the Local? Panel of Editors
11-12 Reading and Discussion with Ernest Gaines 12 Closing Ceremonies

Cut Here ##################*#and Return

REGISTRATION AND FEES FOR THE
1999 DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE

Please fill out, detach, and mail form and check to the address below:

Name_____
Address_____
_____
_____
_____
_____
Telephone_____email_____

PRE-REGISTRATION AND REGISTRATION

Pre-Registration Fee.....$40.....
_____

Late Registration fee (After September 15).....$50.....
_____

USL Students with ID.....free.....
_____

Other Students with ID.....$25.....
_____
_____

WORKSHOP FEES ($40 FOR ONE WORKSHOP; $20 FOR EACH ADDITIONAL WORKSHOP)

Please put an X beside the ones for which you wish to register. Workshops will be closed at 12 members.

Poetry Workshop-Toi Derricotte.....
Poetry Workshop-Darrell Bourque.....
Workshop in Teaching Poetry-Sandy Lyne: "Spirit of Place".....
Fiction Workshop-Virgil Suarez.....
Fiction Workshop-George Clark.....
Creative Non-Fiction-Mary Cappello.....
Workshop in Adapting Ficton to Film-Jordon Pecile.....
Children's Fiction Workshop-Sylvia Iskander.....
CODOFIL Workshop: Poetry and Fiction in French.....
Beginners Poetry Workshop with USL Graduate
Creative Writers-Friday ($20).....
Beginners Fiction Workshop with USL Graduate
Creative Writers Friday($20).....
Beginners Poetry Workshop with USL Graduate
Creative Writers-Saturday ($20).....

Beginners Fiction Workshop with USL Graduate
Creative Writers Saturday ($20).....

TOTAL: REGISTRATION PLUS WORKSHOP FEES_____

Please indicate which fees you are paying (by placing an X after the dotted line following the entry) and return this form with your check made payable to: DEEP SOUTH WRITERS CONFERENCE. Send form and check (please be sure to specify name of participant, if different from name on check) to this address:

Deep South Writers Conference
English Dept., Box 44691
University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette LA 70504-4691

Please call or email Jerry McGuire with any further questions:

telephone: [redacted]
email: [redacted]

The program is supported in part by a grant from the Louisiana Division of the Arts and by a Partnership Award from the Acadiana Arts Council, with funds provided by the City of Lafayette, the Lafayette Parish Council, and the National Endowment for the Arts

--

_____

Jerry McGuire
Director of Creative Writing
English Department Box 44691
University of Southwestern Louisiana
Lafayette LA 70504-4691
[redacted]

_____

↑ Index

246. Juliana Spahr
syllabus for Critical Writing Workshop
Fri 20 Aug 1999

Last year I asked for suggestions for works for a Critical Writing Workshop that I was teaching in the fall. And many people gave me great suggestions. Some of the suggestions I am using in the workshop. Some of them I'm not using, but enjoyed reading.

Just wanted to say thanks all now that I've done a version of the syllabus.

The syllabus is at http://www2.hawaii.edu/~spahr if anyone wants to see the results.

↑ Index

247. Alan Sondheim

eve

Sat 21 Aug 1999

=--

eve

sometimes we'd speak late in the midwest afternoon when the sun shot like yellow foam, brittle and harsh, across the dying fields, he'd turn to me, it wasn't all that long ago, there were still those few dark specks in the sky, those broken stalks, those leaves, i remember, i'd be waiting ... sometimes there will be a whole damn text, he said, taking the cigarette out of his mouth for one last time in this godforsaken world, a whole damn text with noise elements scattered all through it like argonauts in that field, and there will be the slightest point in the world, here he looked up at the sun and sky falling on the baked-stone earth, crops withered and gone just like that another year, corn silk drab like radiation-hair, crashed out, there will be this slightest point, and all the noise pro- vides a framework for it, an exegesis so to speak, as if it were enough, as if it added to the point being made, there were thin black birds above/ beyond/just about everywhere, looking for the last seeds in the world, dust-devils in the distance, bird-throats parched and silent, uncanny isn't it, he said, the silence, then again, all the noise in the text, as i was saying, what would that be about, what would that point be then?, here he looked at me, waiting, and as I said nothing, he continued, well it's a requirement, sense of space, you could turn it around, god's signa- ture, so i'm told, he looked at me directly now, is everywhere, more in the noise than the silence i fill with my scrabblings, turned and saun- tered away as if that was all there was to it, nothing more to be said

---

↑ Index

248. Daniel Carter

caught up in a muse-

Sun 22 Aug 1999

{ }

caught up in a museum many wanted out after having paid so much during and for years of instruction they now wanted out of such confining refining spaces

where vast reaches intervals real ether-bloaters physicality substrate defense and not even the way that notice aggravates both waves hello and halo such a small apartment three deck-hands swept overboard an invasion and some blood was spilt 'n' spelt this came as some snort of a relief in the midst of no signals zone challenge along night's highway being fed by sheroes and heroes who by example shower the waves madness gladness down in it and emerge porpoise-like joyously gasping desperately grasping too often a little ragged to wonderstate comes with the terrorstory along with the innumerable blissings try t' count'em oh yes to the magnetics here at work that stimulate give thanks in the millions but not there to end nor resolvingly mend at the door the shatterers hurtful beneficial views/praxis aswirl

--

↑ Index

249. Lynn Miller

A note on "gibes" and "power-lusty"

Sun 22 Aug 1999

Pieces of a Great Design Future: soft identities for identification and cross-identification effects resocialized in a filter that takes up the lines of rupture between biographical reality and implications not clear in the (off-the-cuff) commentary. Let the sun shine in. The Talmudic aspect of Dodie's interaction asserting the commentary is open for interpretation right then and there with the impulse-energy of Pica's intervention in Drylongso ("Bitch, what the fuck are you talking about.") I am not sure of this (role) gender-switched, a Bitch, formerly "Bastard" (a speculative, or Zhenodtel, moment). My first instinct is to remember Rattray's comment on Crevel: "But when those working-class guys (Bellamy and her circle of young poets) showed up from the factory with their own script, he recognized he was in a world all his own, out of touch and full of shit." 'My' Steve Abbott is of course a narrow, ideological (even dogmatic) reading across SOUP 1-4 and the ACTS "Conversations with Aliens" (manifest double-consciousness immersed in the identity of the master) based basically on a hunch that if the Conversations were translated into Hungarian a reader from Budapest, for example, would hear Jozsef--a hunch based on a notion about moments of buried time and finding an originary home of a proletarian expressionism. This is why permission must be asked of Steve Abbott's community--one of the first to register the kicks and blows and even, fatality, in the increasingly crisis laden physical spaces we inhabit--to lift this author's name into a dedication to a book of poems rooted in conflict, class conflict, and yes, I've wandered around the web site, "a-paul-ed" as Mary Engle would say, by my being unable to find anything in the biographical materials remotely resembling what I needed to imagine might be there, something close to the profound human squalor of my own child-home. What is the fulcrum between the imagined and the real? The Derrida passage on Chris Hani helped me out a lot on the 'martyrdom' schtick (that and the news that a local hate-group here was calling a killed vice-cop a Law and Order "Martyr"). Speaking out, Bellamy reminds me of my own impatience and anger at the editorial boundaries/frame of Moscow editions of Lenin, whose footnotes tend to convey an irreality similar to the shadows cast in the comment gratefully updated. A news update. Good news. News of poets reinterpreting the underground as a place where the sun really does shine AND NARRATIVE AND a message from Russia! Masha, the best I can respond in the interface between a historian's scholarship on Revlutionary Russia from the University of Akron and your first-person historical experience is to appeal to the question of translation, cultural translation, in which I find the Zhenodtel (a project Clements writes was abolished by Stalin in 1930) (though perhaps it survived in name but not in content) helpful for thinking about the problem of a 'school', even a school of so-called 'poetics,' where, really, there are schools in every city in the U.S. that ought to be observed by an international human rights organization. A passage like the following I also find useful for imagining alternative ways of living among each other: "The Zhenotdel's demise emerged from a similar transition in the Soviet Union. By the end of the 1920's, the party leadership had disavowed earlier proposals for free love, communal living, and collective childrearing, proposals that had always been dangerously unpopular with the Soviet people, particularly the peasants. Instead, the party endorsed premarital chastity and the pattern of a nuclear family bound together by love, respect, and fidelity between the spouses. This Soviet conceptualization of the family marked a compromise. It was not simply traditional, for the Russian traditional family had been extended rather than nuclear, and far more severely patriarchal. But neither did the new Soviet ideal go so far as Bolshevik feminists such as Kollontai and Inessa [Armand] had wanted. Repudiated were their notions of intimate life transformed to promote individual sexual and emotional fulfillment. Instead, official spokespeople--propagandists and party leaders--endorsed long-term monogamy and extolled its value to the proper care of children." (from "The oneset of the Stalin era," pp. 275). Your expression, "power-lusty," is one of those happy moments that occur in the passages between two languages. The concept that comes through is quite familiar in critiques of patriarchal (dominative) matrices, though as a counter-balance I keep the line "your my drives that do attend so well to lust & thought" close to considerations of 'overstepping' or 'dominating' in the performance of a strong identity in the labor of participating among others in the development of ever larger collective identities, and proposing with others alliances across essentialist constructions like gender and?

↑ Index

250. Alan Sondheim
the adventure
Mon 23 Aug 1999

=

the adventure

i walk the narrow defile with the valley to the right
the valley to the east, the valley to the south enter the forest and there is the valley it's the writing which comes and begs to be understood the writing comes begging, asks you to keep it oh keep it fondly this writing, kick it where it belongs hurt this writing until it cries, give it a read now and then it doesn't matter much what happens to it as long as i believe it will be there and tended lovingly and for now, and just what you might think forever would be promise me anything, i won't hold you to it i'll be gone, nothing more to be said, you can pretend, can't you there's a stream gone down the valley, down into a slit beyond, there's always beyond, dry bones of the valley floor you can find a grating there, open it with your key crawl along, look for the manuscripts stacking the walls if you play adventure, you'll know what i mean read them, they're mine, each and every one they're precious as the daylight in this dim world you can pretend you're reading at the very least you'll find someone throwing a knife at you, DON'T THINK ABOUT ME turn around quickly, back out of that place, your wits intact there are others

↑ Index

251. Dodie Bellamy
summer prose workshop reading
Mon 23 Aug 1999

I will be hosting a reading of my summer prose workshop:

September 1, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.
New College Cultural Center
766 Valencia Street (between 18th and 19th)
Free

Readers:

Margaret Crane
Mark Ewert
Johanna Isaacson
Kevin Killian
Suzi Markham
Alvin Orloff
Michael Sasso
Joshua Schuster
Blaise Zerega

↑ Index

252. R Democracy

BELLADONNA @ Bluestockings--Please pass along

Mon 23 Aug 1999

Announcing the first of a monthly series:

Poetry Reading:
Akilah Oliver (the she said dialogues, Smokehouse Press, 1999) and Marcella Durand (City of Ports, Situations, 1999)
will inaugurate the BELLADONNA* Reading Series at the Bluestockings Women's Bookstore at 172 Allen Street between Rivington and Stanton on the Lower East Side of Manhattan on Thursday, August 26 at 9:00 pm.
Contact [redacted] for info.

(There will be 15 minutes provided for open readers--all women but men are welcome as audience members).

↑ Index

253. Poetics List Administration

Re: God Loves Fags

Mon 23 Aug 1999

F.Y.I. Patrick F. Durgin's post refers to an much-deserved hack of Benjamin Phelps' revolting "god hates fags" web site; you may remember seeing Phelps and his followers in the nat'l news when they showed up outside Matthew Shepard's funeral.

Kris Haight, operator of the pro-queer <www.godlovesfags.com>, was given control of the <www.godhatesfags.com> domain by an anonymous source, and used the opportunity to detourn Phelps' page by substituting his own, similarly designed site. The domain has since been more or less returned to Phelps' control, though an intermediary page remains.

It's nice to see hackers can still do the right thing.

From the God Loves Fags site:

"What a strange ride it has been. We were gifted with ownership of Phelps's domain late Wednesday, and here we sit, 72 hours later having given it back. While many of you don't understand why the domain had to go back to Phelps, we felt it was in the best interest of ourselves, our service provider, our provider's uplink as well as the gay rights movement everywhere to give it back. Read our formal statement here."

for further information:
<http://www.godlovesfags.com> God Loves Fags
<http://www.2600.com> 2600: The Hacker Quarterly <http://members.aol.com/dmode4life/> Memorial site for Matthew Shepard (one of many)

Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

254. Kimmelman, Burt
Cid Corman
Mon 23 Aug 1999

John Phillips has written to me about Cid Corman and I asked that he give me permission to post a message to the list for him in Cid's behalf, which he did, as follows.

Burt Kimmelman

CID CORMAN'S PLIGHT

I am writing to make people aware of the plight of Cid Corman. His situation at the moment is precarious, to say the least. Doubtless it has always been so, but presently it appears to be nearing crisis point. Uncertainty even as to making it through the year.

I hope to reach poets / old time friends / academics/ readers / any one with a voice that can speak out - to see whether there is a way open to putting him forward for some kind of funding, grant or award.

A means for him to find the means to go on surviving.

It should hardly be necessary to make out a case as to the importance of the work he has done - for so many years - through ORIGIN & ORIGIN PRESS, publishing many of the seminal poets of the 20th Century - Creeley, Snyder, Olson, Bronk, Eigner - the list goes on - or to the value and brilliance of his own poems & translations.

And yet Cid has remained almost invisible, his whole life - wholeheartedly - dedicated to the poetry he believes life is.

However, invisibility - eventually - makes it hard to survive. And I have felt an undercurrent of worry from him recently - and - as always with Cid - his worry and concern comes out - perhaps first & foremost - for other poets he could be helping, opening the world up to, were he able.

Yet the priority - I feel - at this moment - must be his own survival and his own work.

This year, & finally, the 3rd vol. of OF - the summation of his life's work & a book like no other - ever - was published. But there are 2 more volumes that must still see the light of day. The only manuscripts of these are in his flimsy house in Kyoto. I don't think the world of poetry - of those who value poetry - and the human beings who create it - can rest easy knowing that such a major work is in so vulnerable a position.

Especially taking into account the fact that even Cid remaining housed in his rented accommodation is under some threat at the present time.

I hope - with enough support garnered - and with a volume of Cid's poetry coming out from NEW DIRECTIONS in the fall - that there's a chance of stirring up the necessary & vital funding. It could only be a question of getting momentum going - telling people he is still alive and writing a book a day!

At least - at last - a late recognition of his gift to poetry.

Surely enough folks being made aware of his plight would open eyes - hearts - pull up a few of the floorboards where the bundles of cash are hidden for worthy causes?

And I can think of few - if any - who have done as much for the world of poetry as Cid. Maybe now the world of poetry should come together to help him.

What do you reckon?

If you feel to make a response, perhaps giving hints as to places / people I could go to for help, please email me: " John Phillips"
<[redacted]>

*

Alternatively - & even tho my real hope is to raise awareness of his plight & gain access to some major funding - I realise there might be some reading this who feel to make a small contribution of aid - directly to Cid. If so, please contact me & I will gladly send you the necessary details.

John Phillips
([redacted])

↑ Index

255. Poetics List Administration

a note on sending petitions

Mon 23 Aug 1999

Hi. Over the past month, numerous copies of the PBS/NPR funding petition have been sent to the list by various subscribers. Here is a very brief history lesson re this petition, taken from another list's archive <http://www.acu.edu/academics/music/archive/iawm.9707/0030.html>:

> The NPR/PBS petition was once a misguided, yet earnest effort of some undergrads at the University of Northern Colorado at Greely. Due to poor planning on their part and naievete about "things Internet", it blew up and turned into a "monster", similar to other Internet hoaxes, such as "Good Times Virus," "Nieman-Marcus cookie recipe," [...] and many others--all bogus!

Further information is available at the University of Northern Colorado website <http://www.unco.edu/petition.html>:

> In 1995 two well-meaning but misguided students at UNC started an email > petition regarding pending legislation that would affect the funding for PBS > and NPR. They didn't mean to open a can of worms, but they did. The > petition is still circulating on the Internet and has taken on a life of its own.

In other words, while govt support of public media remains an issue, this petition is not the solution.

Now, while I think this list can and should be a place where petitions and information on matters political can be exchanged, I would urge subscribers to read carefully and do a little research before submitting any such thing to the list. Some guidelines might be:

does the petition or press release contain a date?
does it refer to other sources of information on the web or elsewhere?
what corroborating sources can you provide?
what is the most current status of the issue in question?

In general, I think it would be more effective to have posts written by subscribers to this list or direct acquaintances of same, and that summarize an issue, provide further resources and contact information (i.e., URLs, snail-mail and email addresses) for the parties involved. Another possibility might be to do a little research and "pen" a sample letter of protest which can be easily adapted by your fellow subscribers. Activism of any kind quite simply requires more work than any electronic petition would imply; the internet can be a good tool to facilitate such work, but doesn't ultimately replace sweat, tears, and song.

best, Chris

% Christopher W. Alexander
% poetics list moderator

↑ Index

256. Todd Baron /*/ ReMap Readers

Re: Charles Macaulay + LeLand Hickman!@

Mon 23 Aug 1999

Charles was a consumate actor--and Lee met him when Lee was studying theater in new york. Charles lent a wonderful ear to Temblor mag. and helped Lee maintain what in LA and elsewhere was a truly brilliant output. I'd like to add that anyone not familiar with lee's work--read it. Jawbone press a few years back published Lee Senior Falls to the Floor. I've rarely seen (in memory) a better reader and/or more noble editor than Lee.

Todd Baron
ReMap

↑ Index

257. R M Daley

Re: oh my god: cut-ups / "homosexualization of the New Yorkavant-garde" -Reply

Mon 23 Aug 1999

On Wed, 18 Aug 1999, Jeffrey Jullich wrote:

> Maria Damon, for one, seems to agree about Earl Jackson that a good connection between "the homosexualization of the New York

> avant-garde" and cut-ups can at least be argued. Are you saying there is no connection?

yeah

>
>
> >>>3. not everyone has to have babies - some women don't have babies
> - some women who fuck with men don't have babies - some women > who fuck with women don't have babies - some women who fuck men > have babies and then give them away - . . .
>
> Gertrude Stein couldn't have said it better. (I did identify "the childless > homosexual" as a fallacy.) True, all exhaustively true. But that's > empiricism. I was speaking hypothetically.
>
oh

rd

↑ Index

258. dbkk
Re: Charles Macaulay
Tue 24 Aug 1999

When I first met Charles Macaulay he and Leland Hickman invited me to dinner when they lived in North Hollywood, and I went with Matias Viegener, and it was very late and dark and Charles answered the doorbell, and he looked so familiar I gave out an inadvertent, no not scream, but a low moan. Matias had the presence of mind to ask Charles for his autograph, having recognized him from TV. (Charles played on several episodes of Star Trek, he was Jaris in "Wolf in the Fold" and Landru in the "Return of the Archons" episode.") He wasn't a star, but because one had seen him so often on TV in sitcoms, soaps, whatever, one felt one knew him so intimately and so well--very different from meeting any other kind of stranger.

Of course he and Lee had the glamor of their close association with Raymond Burr, one of Hollywood's more mysterious figures, ever since I was a little boy watching Raymond Burr putting his wife in that trunk in "Rear Window" or prosecuting poor Montgomery Clift in "A Place in the Sun" before that.

Just last week I was trying to track him down to obtain permission for Timothy Liu to reprint some of Lee Hickman's poems for the new postwar gay male anthology planned by Talisman House Press. And then Lynda Claussen got on the case too (the Archive for New Poetry at UCSD controls the copyrights, thank God, for Hickman's work) and she sadly reported that Charles was in the hospital and wasn't going to come out of it.

As Ron Silliman says, people do forget, it's only natural I suppose. We've got so much on our brains all the time just trying to make it from day to day. "Born of the sun they travelled a short while towards the sun,/ And left the vivid air signed with their honour."

↑ Index

259. Poetics List Administration

Cid Corman / Mills

Tue 24 Aug 1999

Had to reformat this message. Please remember the stricture against HTML formatting on the Poetics List; it fouls the archive and sours the moderator. [a bit of levity.] Chris

--

From: "Mills, Billy" <[redacted]>
Date: Tue, 24 Aug 1999 12:42:01 +0100

Just read the message about Cid on yesterday's digest, and I wanted to add my own bit. This man should be an American national treasure. He is the most unselfish poet I've ever had the pleasure to deal with, and has done more for the poetry he loves than anyone alive. There must be some way for the richest nation on earth to keep him alive and housed. That's it.

Billy Mills

↑ Index

260. Brian Stefans

And Try Again

Tue 24 Aug 1999

Keston Sutherland, a young British poet, e-mailed me this poem on Tuesday, claiming that he "just can't keep [his] mitts off O'Hara" these days. I've known the problem myself, but O'Hara's only blushed, not bruised -- he's done a greater disservice by his (hardcover) defenders, I feel. In any case, I thought it quite funny, bold, provocative, right and wrong, but well-written:

AND TRY AGAIN

Dainty failure of the lyric, rising with a tick of mellow fury to an end that cloys, fast as the food whose time it crowns.

Three key errors of Frelimo: pushed too rapidly for heavy industry and gave too little support to the peasant sector.

Retained one-party state and govt.
structures of the colonial era, centralized like those of socialists in E. Europe.

Failed to predict how the climate internationally would change:
second oil price rise, sharp rise in interest rates, Frank O'Hara,

pathos, private recollection,
innovative cracks in grammar,
fetishistic ploy of leaving meaning for the dogs to sigh on.

↑ Index

261. Alan Sondheim

Radio

Tue 24 Aug 1999

-

Radio

You say, "I am your radio Budi-Buda"
Nikuko is your radio radio radio
Alway Luvly Swolen Beli Want for You to Look in Him
Contents:
  iBud
It's already open.
You say, "I am your radio radio radio"
Nikuko is your radio radio radio
Nikuko
Brooding Buti or Buda / Pest
She is awake and looks alert.
Carrying:
 Budi
Brawned MassIve Tissu Hunger for Yu to Be Swallow
Contents:
  Bud

Brawned MassIve Tissu Hunger for Yu to Be Swallow
Contents:
  Bud
take what?
I don't understand that!
You already have that!
It's already open!
Brawned MassIve Tissu Hunger for Yu to Be Swallow
Contents:
  Bud
You say, "Budi Budi Budi"
You say, "radio radio radio radio radio"
Nikuko is your radio radio radio
You say, "Nikuko is your radio radio radio radio radio"
You say, "radio radio"
I see no "radio" here.
You now have radio with object number #695 and parent generic thing (#5).
You drop radio.
You hug radio in a warm and loving embrace.
You kiss radio sweetly
You say, "radio radio radio"
Nikuko says radio radio radio
Nikuko is your radio radio radio radio radio
You say, "Budi Budi Budi"
Is your radio.

↑ Index

262. Philip Nikolayev
IN RE THE DEATH OF THE AUTHOR
Tue 24 Aug 1999

IN RE THE DEATH OF THE AUTHOR

As I hear say on the cellular grapevine these days wishful thinking whatever, but as I was saying comes again and forgets you as I was suggesting, leaves disobeying, mumbling to himself, whom he calls poet except of necessity unshaven, idiot, always fiddles with doorknobs taking off real slow and then gaining velocity, knowing not which way the heart’s habit throbs,

but real smart fellow, look what he’s got and killed indefinite times over, not to mention a thousand times insolvently inspired, striking root in your thoughts inkling by inkling.
The modern critics have long proclaimed him dead.
Dim bulbs think they can deconstruct everything.

↑ Index

263. Philip Nikolayev
IN RE THE DEATH OF THE AUTHOR 2
Tue 24 Aug 1999

IN RE THE DEATH OF THE AUTHOR 2

"The imaginary is as real as the real."
From postmodern folklore.

Mellow, declarative arbitration of and management of my ropy life affairs in academic poverty abrades the will to resolution. And so?
Moi, je ne longer care.
And as regards the literary sphere,
it too is more like a funnel than a globe.
I am, dear colleagues, no fop.
Fresh mayo be upon your non-Euclidean iconoclastic clamp-on credentials. Boy, this book is giving me ideers. If only this silver autumn I could orchestrate my brave escape from here into another sphere,
if only I could silence this parade of decadence into a more winged bender inside this lucid gender-blender.
Where are all binary oppositions gone?

There comes a day your life goes to the john and never comes back. Smoke of factories in eructating air thickens. The young umbrellas still bloom full of expectation.
The heap of days lies multiplied by one.
According to your essays and your stories, you’d seen the twitchy, twitchy side of things

among the hiccuping magnolias once back in your fuck-up days as academic way off the tenure track in a state of underdress. Tremulously a radical conception in the literature becomes, then unbecomes a revolution.
Your hands which once clasped the keyboard lie unnerved in the dispersal of your impact.
Everything gets inverted. Bye,
the sweetest bread critical tongues can buy.
Bye-bye, the tenure track! Bye, MLA!
They're turning into chimney folks.
I am ontologically telling you,
this is yours, this is the real death of the author, dearest colleague.

↑ Index

264. Michael Magee

Re: And Try Again

Tue 24 Aug 1999

Brian, thanks for sending Keston's poem along. You're right I think, much well-written here. But the O'Hara needling, I don't know...does it really seem worthwhile to you? To label O'Hara's grammar and motives as "fetishistic" seems rather facile to me -- and to figure them as a "ploy" not a little paranoid. If "leaving meaning for the dogs to sigh on" is a ploy on O'Hara's part, it strikes me as a pretty good one -- in which he, say, de-authorizes his texts by figuring them as "meaningless" (or, more precisely, "trivial") chat. I won't belabor, lest I be seen as too much the defender doing FOH disservice. Suffice to say, there is a Marxist critique to be made vis a vis O'Hara's work (as well as, I think, a pretty good rebuttal to such critique, though not a Marxist rebuttal as such) but I don't think Keston's is it. -m.

According to Brian Stefans: >
> Keston Sutherland, a young British poet, e-mailed me this poem on Tuesday, > claiming that he "just can't keep [his] mitts off O'Hara" these days. I've > known the problem myself, but O'Hara's only blushed, not bruised -- he's > done a greater disservice by his (hardcover) defenders, I feel. In any > case, I thought it quite funny, bold, provocative, right and wrong, but > well-written:
>
> Failed to predict how the climate > internationally would change:

> second oil price rise, sharp rise in > interest rates, Frank O'Hara,
>
> pathos, private recollection,
> innovative cracks in grammar,
> fetishistic ploy of leaving > meaning for the dogs to sigh on.
>

↑ Index

265. Ron Silliman
Great Slave Suite
Tue 24 Aug 1999

